POST BRIEFS

Band from Soviet Union to perform at Building 4

One of the premier bands of the Soviet Union will perform a concert in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall Jan. 21 at 3 p.m. as part of a two-year program of U.S.-Soviet military contact activities.

The activities were agreed to and publicly announced in July 1988 by the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Admiral William J. Crowe Jr., USN, and the Marshal of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics Sergei F. Akhromeyev.

The visit, which provides an opportunity for better understanding between the two nations, is one of a number of similar contacts between U.S. Armed Forces and the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Band will be on its first-ever tour of the United States. It was formed in 1935 and plays regularly at events in Red Square, on Soviet radio and television and at Bolshoi Theater in Moscow.

The concert is free, and limited public seating is available. To receive free tickets for this event, call the Concert Information Line, 545-1440.

Units to get P.O. Box numbers

The U.S. Postal Service began delivering mail to units at Fort Benning in accordance with the DoD Postal Manual and the DoD/Postal Agreement Jan. 2.

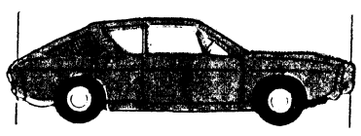
To facilitate delivery and in cooperation with USPS, units have been assigned P.O. Box numbers, which must be used in the address.

The P.O. Box number is comprised of the four-digit zip code add-on, preceded by the number five. (i.e., P.O. Box 55000).

The P.O. Box numbers will be used by USPS in mail-sorting devices for automated sorting, and, in the near future, will be assigned to other on-post activities.

Auction slated Thursday

The Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office at Fort Benning will conduct an auction of government surplus property at 9 a.m., Thursday, in Building 326 on 10th Mountain Division Road.



The auction is open to the public and will include such items as military clothing, household furniture, appliances, office machines, vehicular parts and vehicles.

A three-day inspection period will begin Monday. Hours of viewing the property are 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily until 9 a.m. the day of the sale.

Individuals wishing to purchase property must be 18 years old or older. For more information, call 545-7214/3497.

Siren system test Saturday

The installation siren system will be tested at noon Saturday. This test will be done the first Saturday of each month.

The testing is necessary to ensure all personnel are warned of severe weather conditions.

988th MPs spend Christmas in Panama

Normal rotation turns into combat

By Shawn Lorimer
Bayonet staff writer

The 988th Military Police Company spent a warm and green Christmas in Panama during "Operation Just Cause".

The 988th was sent to Panama as part of a normal troop rotation.

Initially, its primary mission was, "security enhancement of U.S. military installations and personnel in the Panama Canal area," according to Company Commander Capt. Linda L. Bray.

That mission was changed on the evening of Dec. 16, when U.S. forces in Panama were put on combat alert because of the shooting death of a U.S. Navy officer at Amador Naval Base.

Within two hours, 988th had its vehicles loaded and the unit was ready to move.

In the early hours of the following morning, the order "unload and resume regular duty activities" was given, but a high state of readiness was maintained because the situation could have changed at any time.

In the days preceding Operation Just Cause the political and military situation in Panama had become much worse.

While Gen. Manuel Noriega struggled to maintain control of Panama City, U.S. forces had established secure areas on the major military installations and the main supply routes that connect them.

Noriega had issued a warrant for the arrest of the new Panama Canal commissioner.

The MPs and canal security personnel had chased away several Panamanian Defense Force soldiers who had tried to harass the new canal commissioner.

According to soldiers from the 534th MP Company at Fort Clayton, the new commissioner was not under Noriega's control and was therefore costing him valuable revenue generated by the canal.

Before the attack, Bray and three platoon leaders had been briefed on the combat mission of the company. The command post was to be set up at Fort Clayton Elementary School.

At H-hour, Dec. 19, 1st and 2nd platoons of the 988th moved out to provide security at Quarry Heights where Gen. Maxwell Thurman's quarters are located.

Meanwhile, other elements of the 988th attacked the Panamanian Defense Force's Canine Corps.

"The gate to the building was locked, so the first sergeant told me to drive my vehicle through and break down the gate," said Sgt. Joe A. Hamblin of the 988th MP Co.

Pfc. Christina M. Proctor, 4th Plt., 988th MP Co. inspects an M-60 machine gun after returning to the company area at the Balboa Police Station in Panama.

"We fired at the building and saw several enemy soldiers run out the back," he said.

During the attack on the Canine Corps, there were no American casualties, but more than 100 enemy weapons were captured along with a large box of intelligence information and a computer terminal.

On Dec. 20, 3rd and 4th platoons moved out to secure the area immediately surrounding the Cuban Embassy in Panama City.

As the unit moved into the city, escorted by two platoons of mechanized infantry, people lined the streets to greet the first Americans in that part of the city.

The Panamanian civilians clapped and cheered and some even waved small American flags.

For 48 hours, MPs stopped vehicles, searched cars and gathered intelligence information from Panamanians.

Several times, 4th Platoon, under the leadership of 2nd Lt. Kimberly Thompson, received sniper fire from nearby buildings.

"We repositioned our people just in time," Thompson said.

Earlier, the platoon was stopping traffic on a busy street, but Thompson and the platoon sergeant decided the soldiers were too exposed and moved the MPs to covered positions.

Only 15 minutes after the troops were assigned to new positions, an enemy sniper began firing.

However, the enemy's small arms fire was ineffective because of the new defensive position of the platoon.

Later that evening, a speeding van attempted to run an MP roadblock.

Staff Sgt. Ricky N. Mcgowan, who was supervising the checkpoint, said an M-60 machine gunner spotted the vehicle coming and shouted warnings several times before firing his weapon.

It was later discovered that the van, which was stolen the day before, contained members of the Panamanian Dignity Battalion.

On Dec. 23, the platoons of the 988th MP Company were relocated temporarily to the Balboa Police Station.

Although many of the buildings were burned and falling apart, there were a few places untouched by the fighting.

These buildings provided shelter for the MPs while they recovered from their combat mission and began to assume the mission of security enhancement once again.

The 988th sustained no casualties and didn't lose any vehicles or equipment.

They were also able to use voice commands and roadblocks to stop most of the vehicles in the area.

When a driver refused to stop, the 988th MPs would fire low to disable the vehicle, thus avoiding the use of deadly force.

When most of the fighting had stopped and more people ventured into the streets, the Panamanians began to show their appreciation of the 988th.

"Anyone who thinks we shouldn't be here should come and see this," Mcgowan remarked.

"People are waving and honking their horns as they drive by, and one guy even came up and shook my hand and thanked me for being here," he said.

Thompson said, "I'm glad it's over. I think we did really well, but the best part is I didn't lose any MPs."

8 charged with DUI during holiday

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Eight Fort Benning soldiers were apprehended over the New Year's holiday weekend for driving under the influence of alcohol.

Three were charged with DUI off post Dec. 29.

One soldier was arrested in Columbus, and two were picked up at Fort Benning Dec. 30.

Dec. 31 and Jan. 1 each had one soldier being picked up on-post.

According to Staff Sgt. Walden Wagner, a desk sergeant with the USAIC Military Police Company, military police officers "were vigilant" over the holiday weekend.

"We can't be everywhere, but the ones who get caught are adjudicated," Wagner said.

The penalties can be very stiff, even for first offenses, both on and off post.

If apprehended by civil authorities, a soldier faces a $300 court fine, a suspended license and a night in jail. The penalties for a second offense can be even worse.

If caught by military police, a soldier's on-post driving privileges are suspended for one year.

A second offense can bring the suspension up to five years.

In addition to a suspended license, the accused must appear before the U.S. Magistrate Court, a federal court, where the fine will be in the vicinity of $300, and the license will be further suspended to include driving off post.

In most cases, a soldier cannot be additionally charged with an Article 15 by his parent unit for the same offense.

This rule was established by the Judge Advocate General's office to eliminate a "double-jeopardy" that would result in even more money being taken from the accused for the same offense.

Soldiers are still subject to administrative actions from their unit, which could include letters of reprimand, extra duty, restriction and other punishments that the commander sees fit to bestow short of taking money.

Although the MPs do not routinely conduct roadblocks in an effort to catch drunk drivers, they do establish what Wagner described as "safety checkpoints."

In a safety checkpoint, normal traffic is funneled into one lane where officers check for license, registration and proof of insurance.

Such a check assists the officers in determining compliance with seat belt laws and in spotting open alcohol containers.

According to Maj. David Buzzell, the deputy provost marshall, the much-talked-about "open-container law" is a Columbus city ordinance and is not enforceable at Fort Benning, a federal installation.

However, "as a practice, an open container would be considered probable cause to check the person for evidence of intoxication. This would be accomplished with a field sobriety test," Buzzell said.

Wagner said that although the open-container law can not be enforced on-post, he "strongly advised" persons that the end results of driving with an open container would be the same.

Wagner also pointed out that there is little difference in being caught off-post versus on-post.

"You get the same results, only in different courts," he said.

Snively rediscovers lieutenants

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

When I was growing up in the Army, (basic, advanced individual training, grunt in a line platoon, on-the-job training as a journalist) I learned about lieutenants.

The first thing I learned was that they are most dangerous when armed with a map and compass.

Our lieutenant never got us too lost — we only missed one meal because we couldn't find the company Command Post one night.

He did suffer some embarrassment at the hands of the C.O., however, when he tried to answer a call on a TA-312 that wasn't hooked up.

Another lieutenant suffered a touch of red-face when he tried to check the air in his M-113's road wheels.

I also learned that lieutenants take saluting very seriously.

Normally, flicking a fly off your temple will pass for a salute with captains and above, and if they see your hands are full or you are otherwise engaged, they normally let it pass when you don't salute.

Not second looies.

I got jumped by two of them one night at Fort Jackson. They were in a car and since it was dark, I couldn't see them inside the vehicle or the officer tag on the bumper.

But that didn't matter. They took their officer duties so seriously that they stopped the car, got out and let me know my powers of observation were sorely lacking; and if I expected to get anywhere in this man's Army, I'd better straighten up and start treating officers with the respect they deserve.

Another time, a lieutenant didn't like the way I saluted — "It's a two-count motion, private, straight up and straight down, thumb pressed firmly along the top of the index finger, wrist locked straight as the hand is brought to the brim of the hat and held until I, or any other officer, returns your salute. Understand!"

"Yes sir."

"Good. There's a full-length mirror in the orderly room. Go in there and practice for half an hour. And don't forget the proper greeting, which, in this case is, "good morning, sir."

"Yes sir, thank you sir, I will sir," I said as I headed for the orderly room's mirror, only to be halted in my tracks with a "didn't you forget something soldier?"

Sure enough, I'd forgotten the parting salute, so had to endure another lecture. I remembered to salute after that one.

So anyway, with this background in dealing with lieutenants, I wasn't what you'd call overjoyed when our NCOIC informed us that we, in the Bayonet office, were getting our very own lieutenant for a couple of months.

Since then, I've since seen a different side of lieutenants. First, I learned they're a lot smarter than I gave them credit for.

I guess inexperience always got in the way of their demonstrating that before. But most of all they are definitely enthusiastic and energetic.

Since our lieutenant showed up, we reporters have had it a lot easier since he's always volunteering for the holiday and after-hours assignments.

And talk about initiative, while most people sit around talking about why they can't do something, the lieutenant goes out and does it.

Like when the PAO mentioned it'd be nice if we could get someone to Panama to do some articles on the MPs for the Christmas holidays.

That's his most outstanding accomplishment to date, for what was to be a one-week stay, turned into a two-week stay and his earning the Combat Infantryman's Badge.

Here's a guy who had to drop out of IOBC because of a bad back, and he volunteers to go to Panama with our MPs.

Two days after he gets there, we invade Panama. So he's now probably the only person in the history of the Infantry School who's worn the "Follow Me" patch into combat.

Being a gung ho lieutenant, he immediately had the "Follow Me" patch sewn on his right shoulder.

I didn't have the heart to tell him that wasn't authorized, but, naturally, some officer did.

Spoil sport. Oh well, when he goes off to Signal Officers' Basic Course with a "Follow Me" patch on his right shoulder and a Combat Infantryman's Badge over his heart, he'll be the envy of all the lieutenants, and, I would imagine, many senior officers, too.

January NCO promotions continue stable year

Army News Service

It'll be a happy new year for 3,760 newly promoted NCOs, according to January promotion figures released Dec. 12 by Army personnel officials.

The January promotion total continues what has so far been a relatively stable year of promotions at just below fiscal year 1989 levels.

By grade, January promotions are:

GRADE	NO. PROMOTED	REMAINING ON LIST
E-9	82 (through seq. no.515)	340
E-8	344	3,332
E-7	674	1,716

Monthly totals have been relatively consistent, from a high of 3,878 in December to 3,760 during January and November.

Fiscal year 1989 NCO promotions averaged about 4,500 monthly but included 1,700 promotions originally planned for fiscal year 1990.

36th Engs. active in 'Just Cause'

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

"Our soldiers won't be able to tell the 'war stories' the rangers will, but they will have the satifaction of knowing they had an active role in Operation Just Cause," said the executive officer of the 36th Engineer Group.

According to Lt. Col. Scott Peppler, part of the mission of the group is to provide a support element for 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

The Ranger Support Element is comprised of a primary group of 125 soldiers who can be deployed and additional 125 who are non-deployable.

The troops involved are from 43rd Engr. Plt., 533rd Trans. Co., 598th Maint. and 608th Ord.

"They're responsible for getting the rangers out of Fort Benning in whatever means of transportation they are using," Peppler said.

This includes requisitioning and loading ammunition, providing rations and palletizing all other equipment necessary for their deployment.

He said once all the coordination for the equipment is finished, it's put in a hangar at Lawson Army Airfield so it can be accounted for before loading.

Although working with the battalion was not new to the unit, they did have an additional mission of supporting 2nd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt.

This is where they encountered the most unusual problem of the deployment — where to house the soldiers.

To solve this problem, the engineers built a tent city.

Staff Sgt. Richard St. Cyr, Co. C, 43rd Eng. Bn., along with soldiers within his platoon constructed the city.

"We set up more than 50 tents complete with cots and stoves to make the rangers as comfortable as possible," he said.

Members of his platoon also participated in loading and unloacng aircraft.

"hey were excited about doing everything," St. Cyr said, "beause they felt as if they were doin something useful."

H said he personally gained mor knowledge about loading supies and situating them on the ircraft.

Poper said despite the additiont requirements, the deploymen went off without a hitch.

Alrted at the same time as the angers but through different chanels, they got the job done.

"Ve had to," he said. "We had to rake sure they had everythin when they left."

Local restauranteur shows support

Members of the community sign a banner wishing the soldiers in Panama a safe return.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A local restaurant demonstrated its support of Operation Just Cause in a very unique way.

A banner was hung in the establishment for a week so patrons could sign it with the purpose of sending it to the rangers.

It was presented to Marianne Kernan, wife of the commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment, Col. Buck Kernan, last week

According to the owner, Joe Richards, he and his wife did this because a lot of rangers frequent his place, and he wanted to show he truly cares.

"Soldiers who went to Vietnam weren't really appreciated. We want to let them know that it's different now," he said.

Kernan expressed her gratitude for his thoughtfulness but said she would keep the banner here instead of sending it to Panama.

Ann M. McDonald

Joe Richards, owner of The Press Box Cafe, and Marianne Kernan, ıife of the 75th Rgr. Rgt. Commander Col. Buck Kernan, hold up a banner of appreciation fo the rangers.

She explained that if it is placed in a prominent location here, more soldiers would be able to see it. She also said she didn't want to take the chance of it getting lost.

Some of the sentiments expressed on the banner were, "Keep your heads down and come back soon."

"Wish I were with you, you guys are great."

"Vetnam was my Christmas in 191, Panama is yours in 1989. Com back safe, and we'll swap war tories."

"Tanks for serving our country a this time, it's appreciated."

Vehicle registration has begun for 1990

By Dennis E. Brower
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Chattahoochee and Muscogee counties have already begun selling 1990 license tags and re-registering vehicles.

Soldiers and family members registering their vehicles in Georgia must take special care to ensure that they do so properly and in a timely manner.

Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties are using the staggered system again this year.

Those with last names beginning with A through D should register in January, E through K in February, L through R in March and S through Z in April.

If registration is not done during these periods, a late fee of $15 can be added to the $8 fee required for each vehicle.

It is suggested that you bring cash as it may be difficult to get approval for checks.

If a vehicle was already registered in one of these counties, then the owner should receive the preprinted registration form in the mail.

The form can be mailed to the registrar with an additional $1 for mailing fees.

If you registered by mail in the past, but do not receive the forms in the mail, do not wait beyond your registration month.

You must make an effort to find out why you have not received the forms in the mail, or you may end up paying late charges. If mail-in procedures are used, ensure the directions are followed.

If you are not a resident of Georgia and have orders assigning you to Fort Benning, enclose a Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act Affidavit.

This form may be obtained from the Legal Assistance Office and must be signed by the soldier's commanding officer or an officer assigned to the Staff Judge Advocate's Office.

The authenticity of the residency may be shown by presenting a Leave and Earnings Statement or other equivalent military record.

Make sure the affidavit is fully filled out and signed by the appropriate individual.

Both counties have reported several problems with soldiers not properly completing this form.

If not properly signed or completed, the soldier will be turned away and will have to make a retun trip.

If ıe vehicle is in the spouse's nam or if it is leased, the exemption cannot be applied.

If ou are a Georgia resident, you an expect to pay ad valorem ax based upon the value of the vhicle.

Soliers must register in the propr county.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Richard Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I am married to an enlisted man. We have two children.

We have been having problems, and, about a month ago, my husband and I separated.

He hasn't paid me any support since we separated, and I'm having trouble paying rent on our apartment.

He says he doesn't have to pay me anything until we agree on an amount, and he says the most he will agree to pay is $100 per month.

Doesn't the law require him to pay child support? Will the Army make him pay. How much should he be paying?

A: There is not a state in the United States that does not have a law requiring each parent of a child to support that child.

Moreover, the Army, as well as every other branch of the military, has a regulation concerning a soldier's duty to provide support to his dependents.

The question here is really one of how to use the laws and regulations that exist as to the obligation of support.

Army Regulation 608-99 generally requires a soldier to provide adequate continuous support for his dependents and sets out exactly how much a soldier is expected to pay depending on the situation.

For instance, where the husband and wife have entered into an agreement or where the husband and wife have gone to court and the court has entered an order for a specific amount of support, the regulation requires the soldier to pay the amount stated in the agreement or in the court order.

Where there is no court order or agreement, the amount the soldier is required to pay depends on the facts, but generally the regulation requires the following:

- Where the soldier has no other dependents, (such as children of a former marriage in the custody of the ex-spouse) and his present spouse and children are not living in government quarters, the soldier must pay an amount equal to his BAQ at the with-dependents rate each month.

- Where the soldier has no other dependents and his present spouse and children are living in government quarters, the soldier must pay an amount equal to the difference between the BAQ at the with-dependents rate and BAQ at the without-dependents rate each month.

- Where the soldier has other dependents he is already supporting, each supported family member is to receive a pro-rata share of the BAQ at the with-dependents rate.

This is subject to some modification where there is a court order in effect as to some of the dependents or where some of the dependents live in government quarters.

Note that in all cases, the soldier must pay the amount required whether he receives BAQ or not.

The regulation provides a complaint procedure to use when a soldier is not providing the required support and gives a soldier's commander the option of taking administrative or punitive action against him if the soldier does not provide the required support.

This is a very general description of the regulation and each case must be handled according to its particular facts.

You would be best advised to consult your Legal Assistance Office for advice in your case, as wellas for assistance in taking advantage of Army Regulation 608-9.

Stte laws concerning child supprt work differently from the egulation just described.

Fist, to use state law, you generally must start a court actin or lawsuit against the spoue.

InGeorgia, you would have to file ither a divorce or an action for eparate maintenance and request the court to order your spoue to pay support.

Many states, Georgia included, havenow adopted guidelines for detemining the amount of support,which are generally based on income.

In Georgia, for instance, the guidline suggests that the supporting spouse pay a percentage of hs gross income, and the percntage goes up as the number f children increases.

Fr anyone in your situation, the best action to take is to obtan the advice of an attorney as son as possible.

The Legal Assistance Office can assist you and advise you. The telephone number is 545-281.

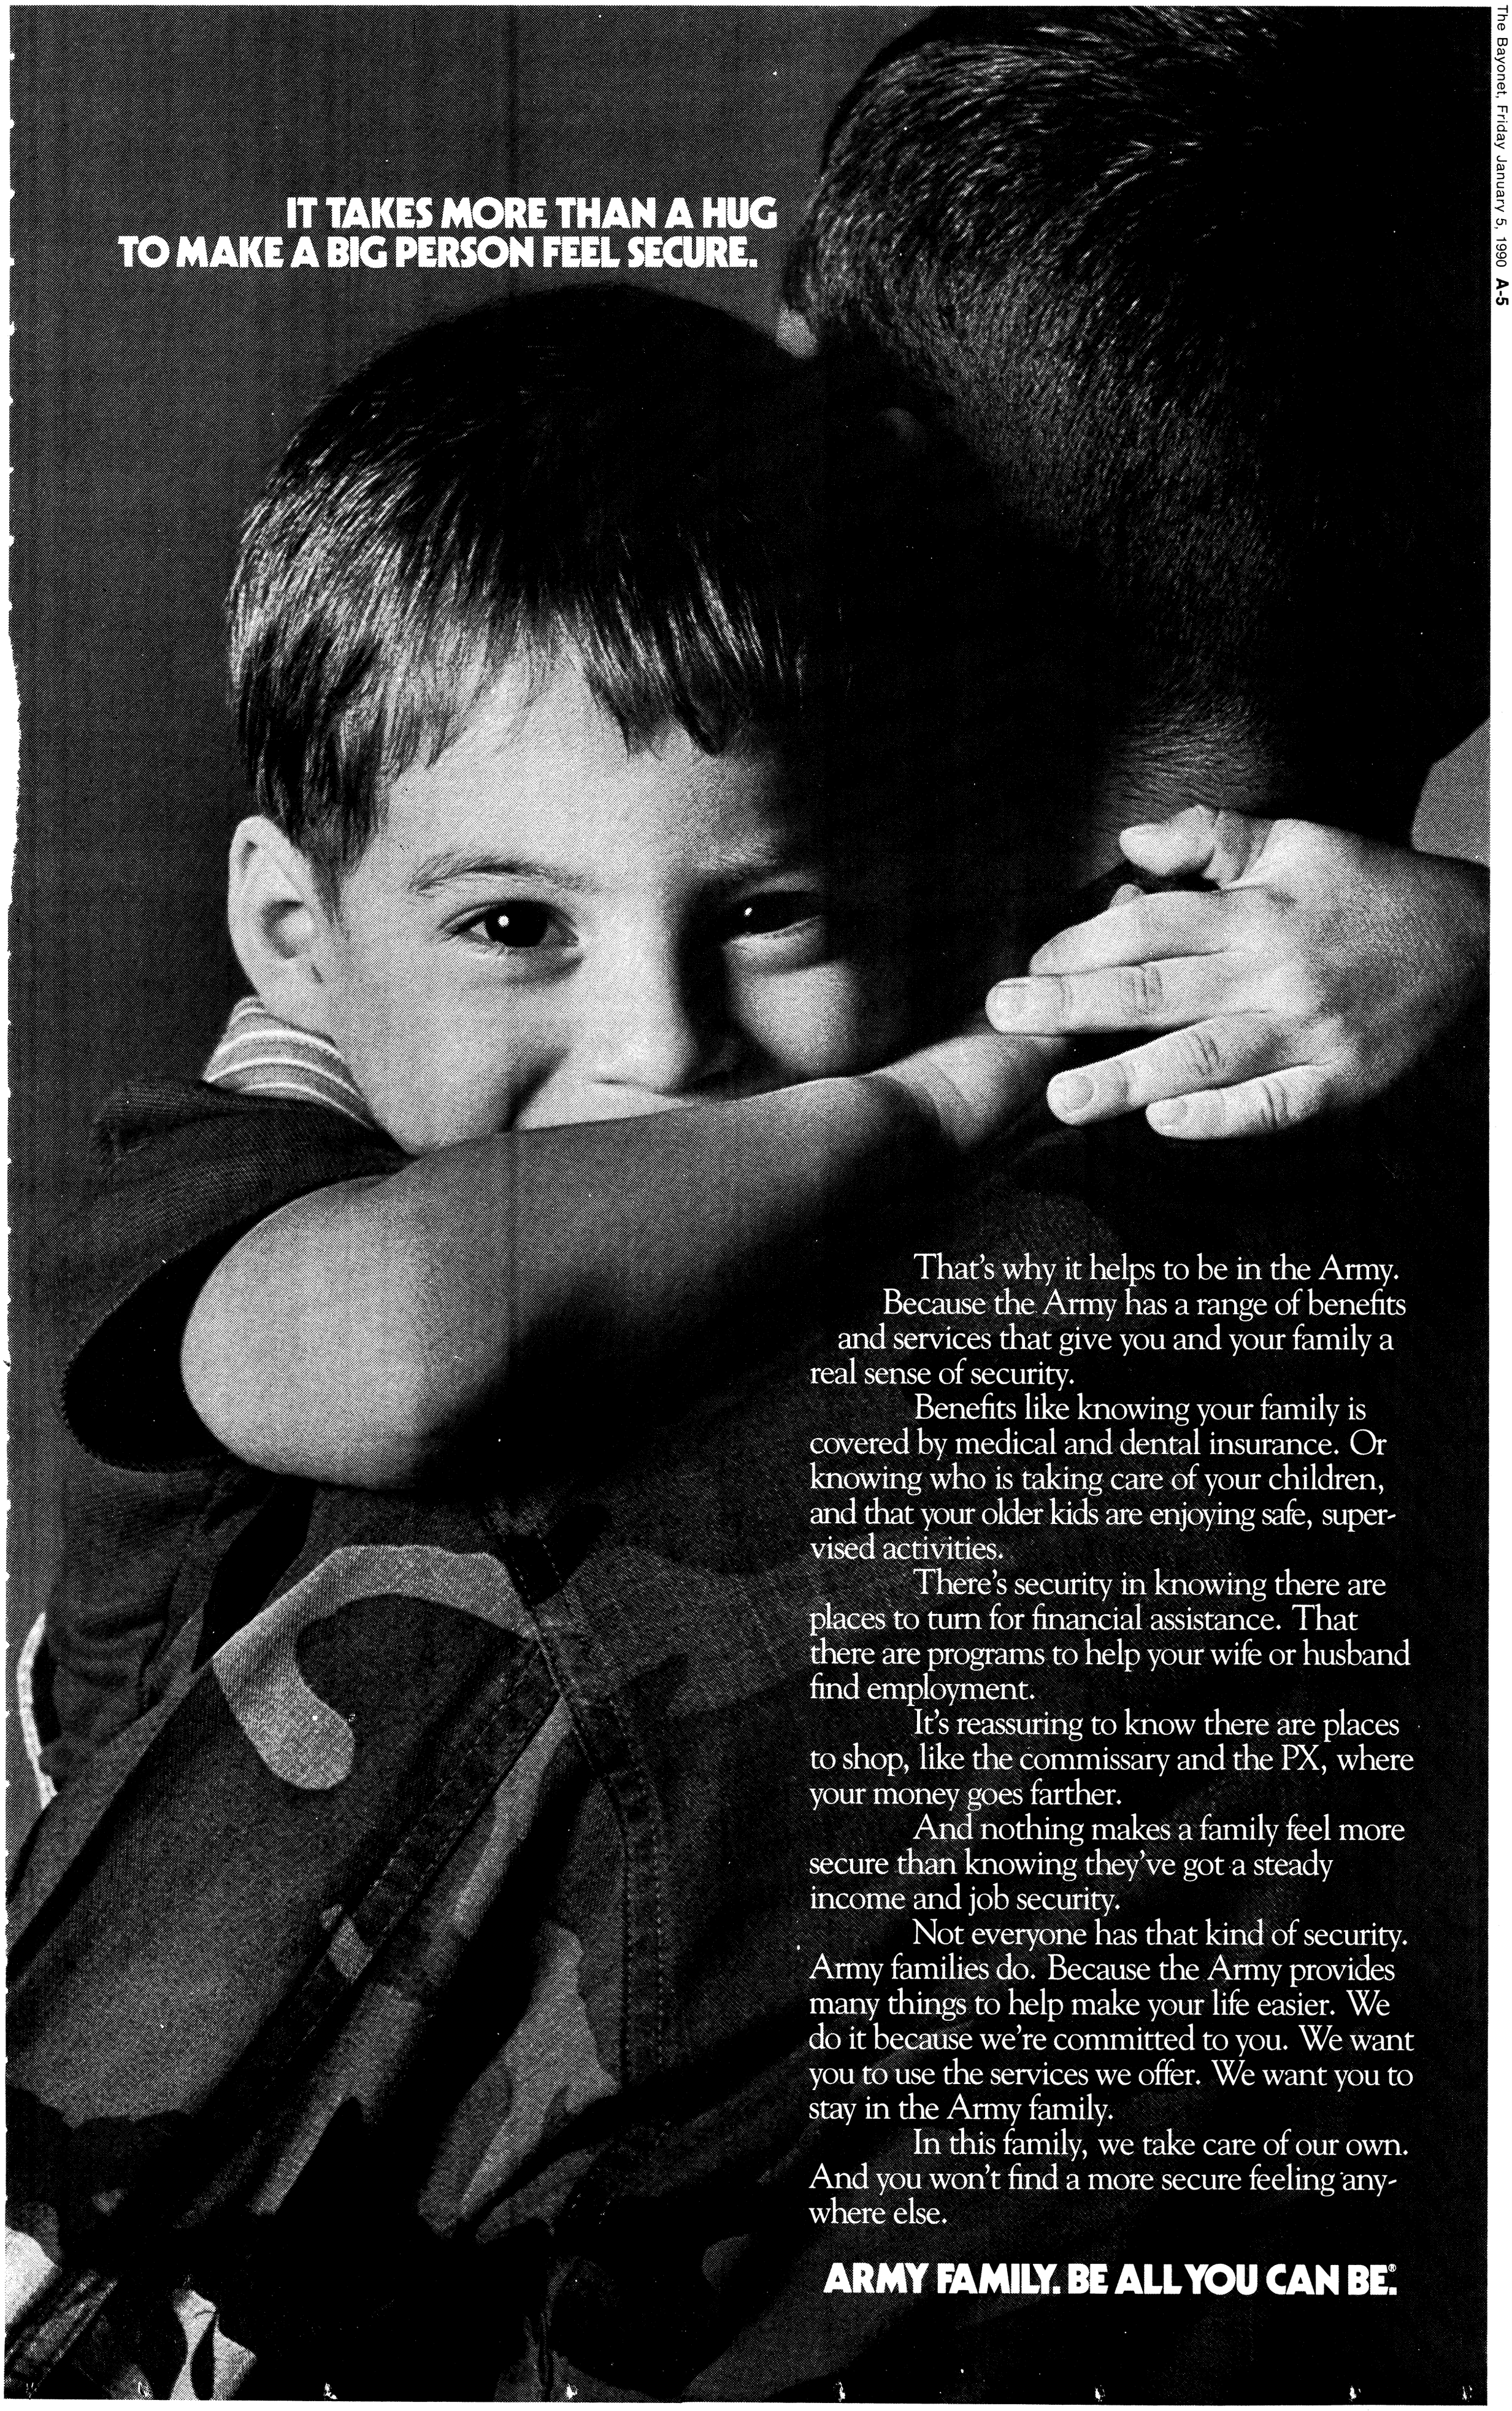
ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.® REENLIST.



That's why it helps to be in the Army.

Because the Army has a range of benefits and services that give you and your family a real sense of security.

Benefits like knowing your family is covered by medical and dental insurance. Or knowing who is taking care of your children, and that your older kids are enjoying safe, supervised activities.

There's security in knowing there are places to turn for financial assistance. That there are programs to help your wife or husband find employment.

It's reassuring to know there are places to shop, like the commissary and the PX, where your money goes farther.

And nothing makes a family feel more secure than knowing they've got a steady income and job security.

Not everyone has that kind of security. Army families do. Because the Army provides many things to help make your life easier. We do it because we're committed to you. We want you to use the services we offer. We want you to stay in the Army family.

In this family, we take care of our own. And you won't find a more secure feeling anywhere else.

1/29th switches from support to tactical training

Support soldiers overcome the weighty problem of getting support vehicles across the Chattahoochee River.

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

"No impasse is too great," was the motto Dec. 6, as Companies A and E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, set out to cross the Chattahoochee River in eight Bradley Fighting Vehicles and an M-88A1.

The mission, supervised by Battalion Commander Lt. Col. John Spears, was one of the rare opportunities 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., has taken in the past year for actual tactical training rather than support for The School Brigade and Infantry Training Center.

ITC soldiers were involved in the exercise, nevertheless. With Bradleys involved, it was the perfect chance for some hands-on training for One Station Unit Training soldiers.

Capt. Jim Beinkemper, commander of Co. A, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., said, "It was an exercise in movement and bridging. The objective was to secure a crossing point, set bridges and cross the river."

According to the plan, the Bradleys would pontoon across at Cody Landing and then ribbon bridge back.

The pontoon rafts and the MK-1 combat support boats that towed them were provided by the 586th Engineer Group.

Each raft normally holds two Bradleys or one M-88A1. The M-88A1 is also known as the Recovery Full Tracked Armored M-88A1 and is used for towing both tanks and Bradleys.

Not normally involved in waterborne operations and river crossings, the M-88A1 often poses a problem when being transported across bodies of water.

This is mainly due to the fact that the vehicle is considered a support vehicle and support vehicles often do not get the same amount of attention when considering a mission as do fighting vehicles.

Unmanned, one Bradley weighs about 28 tons. It takes two Bradleys to equal the weight of one M-88A1, which, unmanned, weighs about 56 tons.

Although the operation went through without a hitch, Spears said he felt that one hour, the projected time for all nine vehicles to cross the water, was too long.

"What would we do in wartime? What if we needed to cross a whole battalion?" he questioned.

"Eventually things will move along more smoothly, it just takes practice," Beinkemper said.

Model tank isn't children's toy

By Joseph Peake
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Two instructors for the M-1 Abrams and Bradley turret systems examined the tank, pointed out several shortcomings and decided it just wouldn't do.

They picked the tank up and turned it over. "It doesn't have any details at all," said Staff Sgt. Kenneth Olandese, one of the experts.

The tank they criticized was a scaled model of an M-1 Abrams used by tankers as a training aid.

Olandese, then assigned to the 3rd Infantry Division in Kitzingen, Germany, devised the beginnings of a plan to build his own M-1 Abrams model.

That weekend he went to the craft shop and began a project that would take him six months to complete.

In less than two weeks, Olandese had the beginnings of a 16-inch M-1 Abrams tank.

He used a light-weight but strong wood, somba, to form a rough body. Then he honed the wood with belt and disc sanders.

Each day he would add another touch to make the tank look more like the real one. He added a hatch opening and a cross wind indicator that raises and folds down just as on the real tank.

He said he used anything he could find — wire, aluminum, plastic, paper clips — to make the model look authentic.

Being a self-proclaimed perfectionist, Olandese wasn't completely happy with the tank when it was finished.

So three months before his rotation back to the States, he began work on another tank.

This one would be even more detailed and 150 percent larger than the first.

He said he searched far and wide for bits and pieces for tank details.

Most people think it's made of plastic or metal or that it's a model I bought and put together, he said.

It's not. Many things on the tank were created from basically junk. Makeup mirrors became periscopes in the commander's weapons station, he said, and pieces of door screen became the basket in the turret base.

"I used several kinds of wood — somba, walnut, oak, lime, hobby craft plywood and mahogany," Olandese said.

He even created a detailed .50 caliber machine gun, using the technical manual to get the major details.

Describing the machine gun, Olandese said the main receiver group is made of oak. The sights and ammo box were once a cola can, and the barrel is made from aluminum stock.

The machine gun is complete with ammunition box and ammo.

He said the ammunition was made from Q-Tips, and a rubber band is the belt that takes the ammo to the receiver.

"I like to watch people's reactions when they see the tank," Olandese said. "It always strikes up a conversation, and I like that."

A feature that never fails to get oohs and aahs when he shows off the tank is the instrument panel, which lights up.

"I used beads for the different colored lights in the panel," he said. "Brass tubing was used to make the dome lights above the driver's panel, the tachometer, fuel gage and speedometer."

Olandese makes adjustments in an M-1 IP Abrams.

Olandese has been working on his second tank for about two years now and said he has about another year to go.

"I only work on it when I'm TDY. It sits on the TV when I'm home," he said.

Olandese, a turret repairman, is TDY at Fort Benning with the Fort Polk Material Fielding Team, and, true to his word, he's continuing work on his model.

He said he visited the local Training Support Center here and got several new ideas on how to make the tracks.

Once he finishes the M-1 Abrams, Olandese said he won't stop. He said he's already thinking of making a scale model of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

Medical soldiers wanted for nursing program

By Beverly A. Grant
Department of the Army

Active duty enlisted medical soldiers have a unique opportunity to earn a bachelor's degree in nursing and a commission as a 2nd lieutenant in the Army Nurse Corps.

Tuskegee University's Division of Nursing is a four-year program that leads to a Bachelor of Science degree in nursing.

Licensed practical nurses, hospital and field medics, as well as other medical specialists who meet program requirements are being sought for this program.

Tuskegee's nursing curriculum consists of the following basic prerequisites: chemistry, anatomy and physiology.

Clinics, which offer hands-on experience in patient care, are available in Montgomery, Ala., Fort Benning, Ga., Auburn, Ala., and Tuskegee's Veteran's Administration Medical Center.

During the junior year, students must spend one semester in Atlanta, Ga., for clinical experience in one of the city's largest public hospitals, Grady Memorial.

Students applying as freshmen in the division of nursing must have a minimum Scholastic Achievement Test Score of 700 or an ACT score of 15 (applicants with 650 to 699 may be considered on an individual basis).

Additionally, individuals must possess a high school grade point average of 2.5 or above on a 4.0 scale, submit recommendations from school officials and must have taken high school courses in the general sciences such as biology and chemistry.

Nurses already in practice are required to submit a copy of their most recent transcript from each college, university, technical or vocational school attended and a copy of their license.

The Tuskegee Army ROTC program offers two-, three- and four-year nursing scholarships.

The scholarships pay tuition, laboratory fees, a fixed fee for textbooks, (currently $180 per semester), other required expenses and a $100 monthly stipend.

In some instances, if the cadet meets certain requirements, Tuskegee University will pay for their room and board.

AROTC scholarship applicants must also undergo a personal interview, pass a physical aptitude examination and score 850 on the SAT and 17 on the ACT.

Upon receiving the AROTC scholarship, these students are required to attend Military Science courses that begin at the basic level and lead up the advanced program courses, (MSIII) and MSIV), which usually correspond to the student's junior and senior years.

Scholarship cadets must attend physical training, and, during the Military Science II year, cadets become involved in field training that prepares them for Summer Advanced Camp.

3rd Bn., 32nd Inf. wins post championships

By Scott Garrigus
Bayonet staff writer

3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry out scored Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 52-43, to win the post basketball championship.

The 16-team post basketball tournament ended Dec. 19 with the championship game at Bryant Wells Fieldhouse.

As the score seesawed back and forth the 3rd Bn., 32nd Inf., team wasn't worried.

"We really didn't change our game plan for this game. It just took a while to get warmed up," Paul Bedard, 3rd Bn. coach said.

Co. A took the lead in early minutes of the first half, but 3rd Bn. came on strong to take the lead, 27-14, going into the half.

"We had a good feeling going into the half with the big lead," Bedard said.

Co. A battled back to gain a 39-38 lead with eight minutes left when Bedard called time out to get his team on the right track.

"With eight minutes to go, the team showed a lot of effort to regain the lead," he said.

The icing was put on the cake with three minutes left on the clock as 3rd Bn., 32nd Inf., slowed the pace of the game, and Co. A players started to foul out.

"The starters made key shots and rebounds with six minutes left to give us control of the game," Bedard said.

From then on, it was smooth sailing for the team, which posted a 12-1 record in the first half of a split season.

"This whole season has been a result of a total team effort. There isn't just one single MVP, they all are," Bedard said.

Although they lost, Co. A has high hopes for the second half, its 8-1 record was good enough to earn the battalion championship.

"We will have the same team in the second season and hopefully more practice time," said Bruce Hardy, a starter for Co. A. Co. A had very little practice time going into the post tournament.

"We have been out on three battalion field problems, which limited our practice time," said Frank McCleary, first year coach.

Anglers reel in embarassing situations

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
1988 Outboard Marine Corp.

Well-known bass pro Jerry Rhyne remembered six consecutive casts he made during a national tournament that he would rather forget.

On his first two casts, Rhyne brought in sticks and brush.

His next cast reeled in a sardine can. He caught two catfish on his next two casts, and finally, he hooked a huge turtle.

"I was afraid to cast again," said the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff angler. If you think only casual, weekend fishermen make mistakes and have embarrassing moments, don't despair.

Even America's best professional bass fishermen have days they'd rather not remember. Other times they have experiences that are just plain funny.

Ricky Green, another member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff, said he remembered an April tournament in Arkansas when the three practice days were filled with snow and the fishing slowed dramatically.

On the first day of competition, Green tied on his favorite spinnerbait and began fishing not far from the launch ramp.

"On the first cast, a five-pound bass hit," Green said. "Minutes later I caught another five-pounder, then I caught a nine-pounder.

"All this time, my partner had been casting a crankbait right beside me without getting a strike.

"Finally, he made me reel in so he could see my lure.

"He had one spinnerbait just like mine. He kissed it for good luck and made a cast.

"The lure sailed out across the water, then sank like a rock.

"He'd been so excited about the lure, he'd forgotten to tie it on properly," Green said.

Denny Brauer, another top tournament pro, had an experience that is funny only in retrospect.

Brauer said he didn't think it was at all funny as it occurred.

"I had hired a pilot to fly me over a big lake out in Arizona," said the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff member.

"Over-flying a lake is a good way to learn about water color and cover, as well as get an overall picture of the lake.

"There was nothing but desert around us, and I was totally lost once we took off.

"Half an hour later, something broke in the engine, and oil spewed all over the plane's windshield. We couldn't see anything.

"The pilot never stopped chewing his gum. He looked out through the side window, found a deserted road down below and landed.

"Then he simply pulled out a dirty rag from his pocket, cleaned the windshield, and we took off again.

"To this day I haven't the slightest idea where we landed, or what state we were in. I don't think the pilot does, either."

Jack Chancellor said he wished he'd been flying instead of fishing one particular day down on Alabama's Lake Eufaula.

When the Johnson Outboards Pro Staffer and his partner came to the dock late that afternoon, Chancellor handed his partner his keys so he could back down the trailer.

"I waited and waited," Chancellor recalled, "but he never backed my truck down the ramp. Finally, I saw him walking back toward me. He said, 'Jack, I found your trailer, but the truck's gone.'

"Thieves had carefully unhooked the trailer and had stolen only my truck. I never did get it back."

King's dream lives

By Chap. Herbert Marbury
Custer Terrace Chapel

Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was born Jan. 15, 1929, in Atlanta, Ga.

King rose to national prominence in 1956, while serving as clergyman in Montgomery, Ala. He led a non-violent economic protest against segregation.

He was a Baptist preacher who integrated the Christian gospel and non-violent principles of Gandhi to lead this nation's civil rights movement.

He encouraged people to use non-violence rather than violence to secure their civil rights.

King was an average man called by God in whom he had an unwavering faith to perform extraordinary deeds.

He used non-violent protest to fight the philosophy of segregation, ideology, philosophy and social system that treated blacks less than human.

To change the system that practiced and allowed dehumanization, he said we must follow God's proclamation "To love your enemies, do good to those who hate you, bless those who abuse you."

He used protests, boycotts, marches and demonstrations as peaceful means to achieve equality and justice for the underprivileged.

He met with kings and presidents but marched with common and uneducated people. His identity was with the unsophisticated and down trodden folks in our society.

For 10 years, King led Black Americans in an accelerated struggle against prejudice and racial discrimination. In spite of threats against himself and his family, he continued to urge his followers to use non-violent methods in the quest for equality.

Being arrested several times did not discourage him in his campaign.

In 1963, the son of a Baptist minister led some 250,000 people of all backgrounds in what became known as the march on Washington. There he delivered his noted "I Have a Dream" speech.

On April 4, 1968, in Memphis, Tenn., the 39-year-old preacher was assassinated. An escaped convict, James Earl Ray, was convicted of the crime.

King is dead, but his dream lives on. We have a responsibility to be committed to fight injustice, racial prejudice and poverty.

When we assist others in obtaining freedom, justice and equality, we keep his dream alive.

Columbus Orchestra presents Tian Ying

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

For the second concert in its "Tuesday at the Springer" series, the Columbus Symphony Chamber Orchestra will present Tian Ying, fifth-place winner in the 1989 Van Cliburn International Piano Competition, Tuesday, at the Springer Opera House.

In addition to his win at the Van Cliburn Competition, Ying has won the grand prize at the 1986 and 1987 Young Keyboard Artists Association International Piano Competition and third prize at the 1985 Stravinsky Awards International Piano Competition.

The 20-year-old pianist was born in Shanghai and moved to the United States at age 14 to study.

He made his first public appearance with the Shanghai Symphony at age 11 and has since appeared with a number of symphony orchestras.

The young artist has been praised for his interpretation of Chopin and will perform the Piano Concerto No. 2 of that composer with the orchestra under music director George Del Gobbo.

The concert starts at 8 p.m. with pre-concert lecture in the Springer saloon at 7 p.m.

Tickets are available at the symphony office, 1445 Second Ave. or by calling 323-5059.

"STUNNING. A FILM OF ENORMOUS VISCERAL POWER with a performance by Tom Cruise that defines everything that is best about the movie. Watching the evolution of his Ron Kovic is both harrowing and inspiring. 'Born on the Fourth of July' connects the war of arms abroad with the war of conscience at home."
– Vincent Canby, NEW YORK TIMES

★★★★ (HIGHEST RATING)
"ONE OF THE BEST MOVIES OF THE YEAR.
'Born on the Fourth of July' is one of those films that steps correctly in the opening moments and then never steps wrongly. Nothing Tom Cruise has done will prepare you for what he does in 'Born on the Fourth of July.'"
– Roger Ebert, CHICAGO SUN-TIMES

POST BRIEFS

Post commander's holiday message

Today, Fort Benning will celebrate the anniversary of the birthday of the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.

This day is set aside to commemorate not only the memory of a great American, but also to remind us of the lasting influence that Dr. King has had on American society. It is a time to reflect on the past and to rededicate ourselves to the future, to the principles for which Dr. King lived and died. . . a dream of dignity for all.

In recognition of Dr. King's many lasting contributions to our great country, a commemorative service will be held in Marshall Auditorium, at 10 a.m. today. All members of Fort Benning and the surrounding community are encouraged to participate in this service.

Michael F. Spigelmire
Major General, USA
Commanding

Band from Soviet Union to perform at Building 4

One of the premier bands of the Soviet Union will perform a concert in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Jan. 21 at 3 p.m. as part of a two-year program of U.S.-Soviet military contact activities.

The activities were agreed to and publicly announced in July 1988 by the former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Admiral William J. Crowe Jr., USN, and the Marshal of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics Sergei F. Akhromeyev.

The visit, which provides an opportunity for better understanding between the two nations, is one of a number of similar contacts between U.S. Armed Forces and the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Band will be on its first-ever tour of the United States. It was formed in 1935 and plays regularly at events in Red Square, on Soviet radio and television and at Bolshoi Theater in Moscow.

The concert is free, and limited public seating is available. To receive free tickets for this event, call the Concert Information Line, 545-1440.

Symphony dedicates concert

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra's second concert of the 1989-90 pops series will be Jan. 20, at 8 p.m. at the Three Arts Theatre, 1020 Talbotton Road.

The concert, sponsored by Rawls and Associates, is titled, "From Sea to Shining Sea—a Celebration of America," and is dedicated to Fort Benning.

Because of the concert's dedication to the post, Army personnel are being offered tickets at $5 each. The regular ticket price is $15 for adults and $5 for students. For information and reservations, call the Public Affairs Office at 545-2211.

New shuttle service

Effective Jan. 19, C&M Shuttle Service will operate a weekend bus service to various locations in Columbus.

This will include malls, restaurants, hotels and movie theatres. Shuttle bus fare is $2.50 one way and $5 round trip. The service is available to both Sand Hill and Main Post. The Sand Hill service will begin on Jan. 20.

Rangers lauded for performance in Panama

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

As the first of four C-141 Starlifters carrying rangers home from Panama, touched down on Lawson Army Airfield, Sunday, a spark of electricity charged through families and friends waiting for their return.

That spark kept growing as the crowd waited for the soldiers from the 75th Ranger Regiment and 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment to disembark the aircrafts and clear customs.

Twenty days after they spearheaded the assault in "Operation Just Cause," the men marched to their final objective — a hangar

Former Benning soldier recalls combat in Panama

By J.C. Mathews
Army News Service

Editor"s note: Sgt. 1st. Class James Almeida was stationed at Fort Benning until August 1989. He was an airborne instructor with Company B, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

It's New Year's Eve, and Sgt. 1st Class James Almeida wants a beer.

A patient at Brooke Army Medical Center, he isn't likely to get one. He probably couldn't hold one in his bandaged hands. He might not be able to drink it, painfully perched on his side. He certainly couldn't walk to a refrigerator and get one for himself, but he looks as if he'd give it a try.

Almeida, 36, is a platoon sergeant in Company B, 1st Battalion, 508th Airborne Infantry at Fort Kobbe, Panama. Eleven days before, in a building outside Manuel Noriega's headquarters at the Commandancia, he watched a grenade explode about three feet in front of him. He ran outside, flaming and torn.

And that's the last time he saw anyone in his unit. Now, leadership and comradeship are weighing heavily on him. He wants -- needs -- to know what happened to his troops.

"They were very nervous, cautious," he said. "They listened, did what they were told, and for a bunch of fresh privates, first time in combat, they did very well. But, by the time it really hit on us, I got hit.

"Later, I heard they had gotten into the Commandancia. But I don't know what happened, what casualties we took -- anything. I'm in the dark."

Almeida's platoon was in on some of the heaviest fighting during the first stages of Operation Just Cause. Under fire from the Commandancia, they were pinned down and separated from the other platoons for about five hours. For cover, Almeida and his platoon began to move through the labyrinth of small alleyways in the area, ducking into buildings for cover. There, Almeida met with his wounds.

"I think what happened was, they came in over the rooftops and lobbed a grenade right into the room I was in," he said. "It blew up right in front of me."

Fragments tore at most of Almeida's body, most severely his hands, legs and abdomen. The same grenade killed his radiotelephone operator immediately and fatally wounded the platoon leader's RTO. In addition, the heavy firing slowed Almeida's evacuation -- sometimes to a standstill.

"It seems like it took forever to get to the hospital," he said.

"Once, they had to transfer us from a mechanized vehicle to a HMMWV.

"They couldn't get us into the HMMWV because of the gunfire coming in, so we hunkered down beside it. That took about 15 or 20 minutes."

The platoon leader's RTO -- 25-year-old Sgt. Michael Deblois -- died during the evacuation; he had led the company in prayer before the operation.

"He was right above me (in the evacuation vehicle)," Almeida said. "They didn't want to tell me he had died. I didn't find out for sure until the secretary of the Army (Michael P.W. Stone) visited the hospital here and I asked about him."

But he had to know, just like he has to know about the rest of the unit. But, so far, nothing. The frustration is almost unbearable.

"I need to know," Almeida said. "I'm not just a fresh-faced private; I'm a platoon sergeant. I know they're (my unit) busy; they're probably out on patrol. Then again, they may be on pass and at the beach. I just don't know."

Not knowing, he paid his men the highest compliment a combat vet can offer: "I wouldn't want another platoon to go back in there with; I'd want to go back in with the same platoon."

Meanwhile, his family is in from Georgia, and they wait to ring in the new year. Hoping against hope, Almeida keeps an eye out for any sign of the improbable midnight beer.

And an ear out for the inevitable phone call from the unit.

(Part 1 of the series, "A day with the wounded.")

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What do you feel made the Panama operation a success?

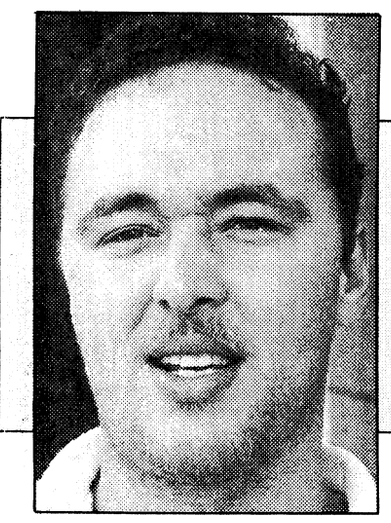
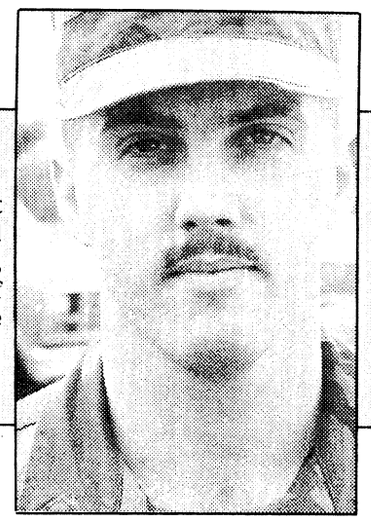
Staff Sgt. Ernest Moss, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. — "The will of the American people made it a success. They didn't protest."

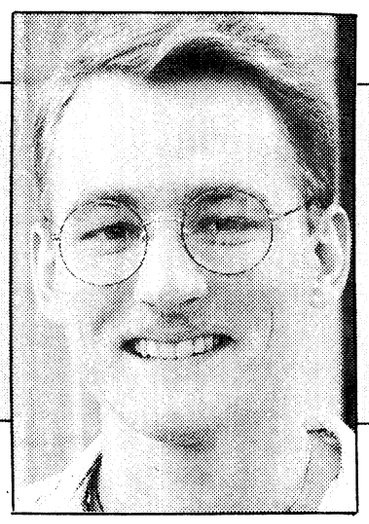
Dara Morgan, family member — "The soldiers contributed themselves. I believe they were well trained."



Gregory Murphy, former soldier — "They accomplished the mission that they were sent for."



Sgt. Jefferey Revis, Co. A, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "Good reconnaissance, intelligence, motivation and the support of the Panamanian people were important to make it a sucess."



Spec. Thomas Jackson, Btry. A, 2nd Bn., 82nd Fld. Arty., Frieburg, Germany — "The motivation of the troops to earn their Combat Infantry Badge was the key."

2nd Lt. Michael Esquivel, Co. E, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 197th Inf. Bde. — "It was a good combined arms effort. They were going for a good cause. They accomplished all four major objectives.

Warning:
The Army could be hazardous to your health

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Our rangers are back.

They returned to stirring martial music and a thunderous ovation from family and friends that shook the metal walls of Lawson Army Airfield's fixed wing hangar.

They were further greeted by the post commanding general, the Special Operations Command commanding general and the chief of staff of the Army.

We have since learned of their combat jumps from C-141s and C-130s at altitudes of 500 feet or lower and their combat with Gen. Manuel Noriega's forces. We learned of how they captured 16,000 arms of various types along with 810 enemy soldiers.

All in a day's work for Army rangers. If these guys aren't off somewhere training, then they're on alert to go somewhere. Being called into combat came as no shock to them.

Nor did the wives, who live with the constant coming and going, seem to be overly traumatized by the whole thing. The same, however, can't be said for the rangers' parents.

From the moment the first news of soldiers in combat hit the TV, we, in public affairs, thought we were the ones under attack. The phones didn't stop ringing until the day after the rangers were safely back at Benning.

The parents wanted to know if their sons were in combat. We couldn't tell them for certain, but said if they were members of the 75th Ranger Regiment, chances are they were.

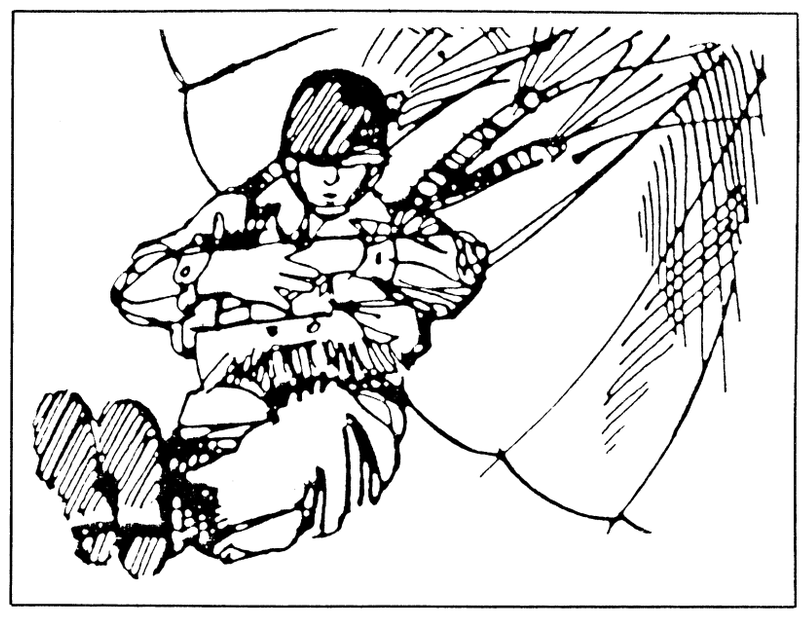
Most of them took the news pretty well. But there were some who must have thought their sons had joined the U.S. Postal Service instead of the U.S. Army. They couldn't believe their sons might actually be dodging bullets.

One woman was so distraught she asked for the phone number of the Secretary of the Army to find out why he dared to send her son off to war.

Parents tend to forget that joining the Army means signing up for combat, if the situation should arise. They sit in front of their TVs and see Army commercials with soldiers jumping out of airplanes, climbing mountains, working on computers, or rappeling from helicopters. No hint of bullets anywhere.

So they tell Johnny to join the Army to learn a trade, to save money for college, or to get him out of the house, all the time forgetting why we have an Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard.

We may be a peace-keeping force, but we have no guarantee of peace. War could break out anywhere, anytime. There's just too many crazies in this world to let our guard down. Then it's the luck of the draw.



If you're assigned to a ranger or airborne unit, you stand a better chance of going, but one can never tell.

In Panama, there were troops sent from Fort Polk and Fort Ord in addition to the rangers and parts of the 82nd Airborne Division. And of course there were the 988th Military Police Company. They went down on a normal rotational basis and a week later they were securing buildings, setting up road blocks and taking prisoners.

Maybe our ad agency needs to remind parents that joining the Army could lead to combat. Otherwise the Advertising Council might make the Army run a warning at the bottom of the screen stating, "Warning, joining the Army could lead to combat," or "Warning, joining the Army could be hazardous to your health."

I think that would lead to an increase in recruits. There's a lot of young men and women out there looking for adventure. Dodging bullets could be the ultimate adventure for them.

Look for an increase in Army TV commercials featuring rangers during the next few days. And don't be surprised to see a new, high-speed ranger commercial debut during the Super Bowl.

Those ad guys know what's hot. After all, what bigger adventure is there than combat?

Routine assignment turns into combat; reporter finds himself in heat of battle

By Shawn Lorimer
Bayonet staff writer

"This is not really happening. I'm not really in Panama," I kept telling myself.

When I asked to go to Panama to write a story on the 988th Military Police Company, I never dreamed that I would be involved in a combat situation.

"If something happens, they won't even let you off the plane," predicted one skeptic.

Not only did I get off the plane but, I got much more than just a story for The Bayonet.

The day before the attack, I was attached to the fourth platoon, 511th Military Police Company from Fort Drum, N.Y. Fourth platoon's mission was to capture an impound yard guarded by the Panamanian Defense Force and use it for an enemy prisoner of war compound.

The night of Dec. 19 was the first time it had rained in Panama since I had been there. As the rain continued to fall lightly, I searched for a dry place in the back of the vehicle for my camera.

"Who is there," a voice challenged.

I identified myself to a specialist who said he was the the platoon leader's driver.

"Will you be riding with us, sir," the driver asked.

I told him that I would be, then asked him where our M-60 gunner was.

He explained that he was originally supposed to be the M-60 gunner, but the platoon sergeant made him the driver when he discovered his wife was due to give birth to their first child on Christmas.

At H-hour, which was 1 a.m., 2nd Lt. Steven Green, fourth platoon leader, gave the order to move out.

"But, we don't have a gunner," the driver pointed out.

"He can do it", Green said, pointing at me, "after all, he is infantry".

"I'm a public affairs officer," was what I wanted to say but, "sure, I can do it," is what I said.

It was at that moment I recalled something I said to a worried friend before I left, "Don't worry, I'm just a journalist for this mission. If it were dangerous, they wouldn't send me."

After the vehicles had gotten in a column, I tapped the driver on the shoulder and asked where the point vehicle was.

"We're it, sir," he answered.

I felt my heart skip a beat as I remembered that I was the only one in the company that hadn't been issued a flack vest. There weren't any extras in the arms room.

The joke a friend had told me about being assigned the duties of a pop-up target wasn't quite so funny anymore.

As we left through the side gate of Fort Clayton the seriousness of the situation struck me. The MPs that normally were posted in the guardhouse weren't there. They were covered and concealed in defensive fighting positions.

On the road to the objective, two Panamanian Defense Force police officers were captured. A third enemy soldier fired a shot from his pistol and then fled on foot when several M-60s returned his fire.

It took us fifteen minutes to reach the impound yard and capture a Panamanian guard and his watchdog.

Dawn finally came, but the sun was masked by the giant plume of smoke rising from Noriega's headquarters on the other side of Quarry Heights.

I felt a sense of security with the daylight. That feeling was soon disrupted.

I was standing inside the compound, talking to some NCOs, when small rocks began to fly. At first, I thought one of the prisoners was throwing stones at us.

Suddenly, everyone dove for cover as a bullet passed over our heads with a loud cracking noise.

"I think it's over," remarked the soldier crouched next to me.

> "We were escorted by armored personnel carriers into the city. The streets of Panama City were lined with cheering throngs of people who were overjoyed to see Americans.
>
> — Shawn Lorimer

The shooting had stopped so I slowly stood up to see if the coast was clear. The sniper soon let me know that it wasn't, as another round went flying over my head.

The sniper fire stopped just as suddenly as it started. Small arms fire continued close to our location. There wasn't any way to tell if it was friendly or hostile fire, since it wasn't directed at us.

Later that morning I was re-attached to the 988th MP Company from Fort Benning.

At 7 a.m. the following morning, I woke up in the radio room to the sound of excited voices.

"We've got a mission and you're coming along," said 2nd Lt. Kimberly Thompson, platoon leader.

About an hour later, we linked up with elements of the 193rd Infantry. Our mission was to surround the Cuban Embassy. Again, I found myself behind an M-60.

Armored personnel carriers escorted us into Panama City. Cheering throngs of people overjoyed to see Americans lined the streets.

"Thank you for coming," said one man. "For two years, I have had no job because of Noriega, but now that will change," he exclaimed as he shook my hand.

For the next four days, the MP's searched vehicles and pedestrians in an effort to capture Noriega. They helped capture two armored vehicles and twelve prisoners without suffering a single casualty.

We received sniper fire several times and inflicted three enemy casualties.

When we returned to command post, Company Commander Capt. Linda L. Bray said to me, "You certainly got more of a story than you bargained for."

"Yes ma'am, it was quite and experience. Thanks for having me along," was all I could reply. What I was really thinking was, "I still can't believe this."

It felt wonderful to be there and was the opportunity of a lifetime. And I got my story.

Soldier performs combat service with a smile

By J.C. Mathews
Army News Service

As you approach Sgt. Roy E. Burgess Jr.'s bed at Brooke Army Medical Center, you don't wonder how he managed to wind up in a hospital during the holidays. You don't even wonder how he's doing, or if his part in Operation Just Cause was worth his wound.

Instead, you wonder, "Why is this man smiling?"

Burgess is a 34-year-old squad leader in the 4th Battalion, 325th Infantry, 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C. He was hit in the upper left thigh by gunfire while guiding a resupply convoy through Panama City, and he seems tickled pink about it.

"Sure, it was worth it," he said, grinning wider than seems possible in a hospital bed. "I wish I was still there."

Burgess has more than just a passing interest in Panama. Prior to his assignment at Bragg, he was with the 508th Infantry in Panama for three years. During that time, he met and married his wife, Violeta, a native Panamanian; her family lives in Panama City, which Burgess, from La Belle, Fla., now considers his second home.

That's why he was guiding the convoy. It's also why he's just plain glad to have been a part of it all.

"I was continually volunteering to go to Panama if anything ever happened there," he said. "I wasn't supposed to go (on Just Cause), but they bumped somebody else so I could go. I wish I was still there."

Sitting almost upright in the hospital bed, Burgess drawls his story with a smile that gets bigger and smaller, but never disappears.

He was on back of the lead HMMWV, trailing a Sheridan tank through the city, when the convoy reached the seaside and a group of Spanish ruins. The convoy had come under fire from the windows of a nearby caretaker's building when he felt a jolt in the leg.

"I looked down, thinking an M-203 round had been lobbed at me but didn't explode," he said. "I didn't see anything so I started firing again.

"I hadn't seen any blood, so it never dawned on me that I'd been hit. I thought maybe the 50-caliber gunner on the HMMWV with me had kicked me."

It wasn't until he tried to jump out of the HMMWV that he discovered his wound through what he called a "blown-out" BDU leg.

And it wasn't until the medics relieved him of his weapon, an M-16 with grenade launcher, that he got upset.

> "That's the worst thing in the world you can do to an infantry soldier in combat -- take his weapon in the middle of battle."
>
> — Sgt. Roy E. Burgess Jr.

"I was angry, and I was fighting with them to get it back," he said. "That's the worst thing in the world you can do to an infantry soldier in combat – take his weapon in the middle of battle. I was here, in the states, before I finally calmed down."

Since then, he's had lots to smile about. His family had joined him, and President George Bush and his wife Barbara had visited.

"He's a wonderful human being," Burgess says, his grin getting even wider; he means it. "I could have talked to that man all day long. My wife thanked him for liberating her country, and he spoke to her in Spanish.

"I felt like I'd known him all my life; they're just as nice as they can be."

He's also had lots to worry about, in particular his in-laws in Panama City. But he says he called them from the international airport where his unit parachuted in at the beginning of the operation.

"I managed to get by a phone at the airport and called my mother-in-law, told her to stay in the house and keep all the kids in the house," he said. "She said she would and for me to keep my head down.

"But it turns out, my eight-year-old brother-in-law sneaked away from the house. When the Americans came to take a (Panama Defense Force) station a block away from the house, he took off running and jumped off an six-foot embankment. We heard he got a compound fracture in his left leg and is in the children's hospital, waiting for medicine from the U.S."

Burgess said he and Violeta will try to call to find out how he is. The smile finally wavers a bit, but makes a quick reappearance as he remembers what he and his fellow soldiers have done. He beams, obviously proud of his part in the operation, obviously the president's man from here on in.

"I owe him a lot," he said. "Hey – we've got a great commander in chief. I'm proud of him, and I was proud to go. Go back? In a heartbeat."

Fort Benning has own version of open container law

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Last week, The Bayonet reported that the Columbus open container law was actually a city ordinance and not enforceable on Fort Benning, a federal installation.

However, Maj. David Buzzell, deputy provost marshal, had said "An open container (in a vehicle) would be considered probable cause to check the person for evidence of intoxication. This would be accomplished with a field sobriety test."

Since that time, new evidence has come to light. The installation does have it's own version of the local statute.

USAIC Command Memorandum, number 10, dated Oct. 20, 1988, specifies "It is prohibited to transport or possess any alcoholic bottle, can or keg in a boat or the passenger/driver compartment of any motor vehicle when the manufacturer's seal has been broken, or the bottle, can or keg has otherwise been opened."

Violation of this policy by military personnel constitutes failure to obey a lawful order, a violation of Article 92, UCMJ.

Soldiers violating this article can be court-martialed. Punishment could include a dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances, confinement for two years and reduction to the lowest enlisted grade.

The memorandum is enforceable by the Military Police and able to be adjudicated by the commander.

Commanders, can punish soldiers in their command who violate this command memorandum, by counseling and/or non-judicial punishment under Article 15.

Actions taken by the commander would depend on such things as the soldier's service record with the unit.

Civilian violaters may have their on-post driving privileges suspended and have points assessed against their driving record.

Repeat violations also provide the MPs probable cause to investigate further to determine whether the violator is intoxicated.

According to Col. Fred W. Liebe, provost marshal, if the only violation committed in a given instance was the USAIC regulation, and no DUI was involved, the punishment would be handled by the soldier's unit commander, either at the company or battalion level. The U.S. Magistrate's Court would not be involved as it would in the case of a DUI.

However, the fine for open containers in the city of Columbus remains firm.

A first offender who does not wish to appeal the case in court, must pay $112 in recorder's court.

UNITED STATES ARMY

THE ARMY OFFERS MORE OPTIONS THAN YOU'RE AWARE OF.

When planning for the future, it's always best to know what your options are. This is especially true if your present enlistment time is growing short.

The Army, like any large organization, wants to keep its good people. To do this, we offer a variety of opportunities that make continued service a serious consideration.

Here are some options to think about.

If qualified, you could:

- train for a new MOS—anything from Construction to High-Tech Electronic Equipment Repair.
- stay in your present MOS.
- stay at your present duty station.
- change to a new duty station.
- be eligible for a reenlistment bonus.

It is worthwhile to investigate your reenlistment options. Come talk to us. And bring your spouse, too.

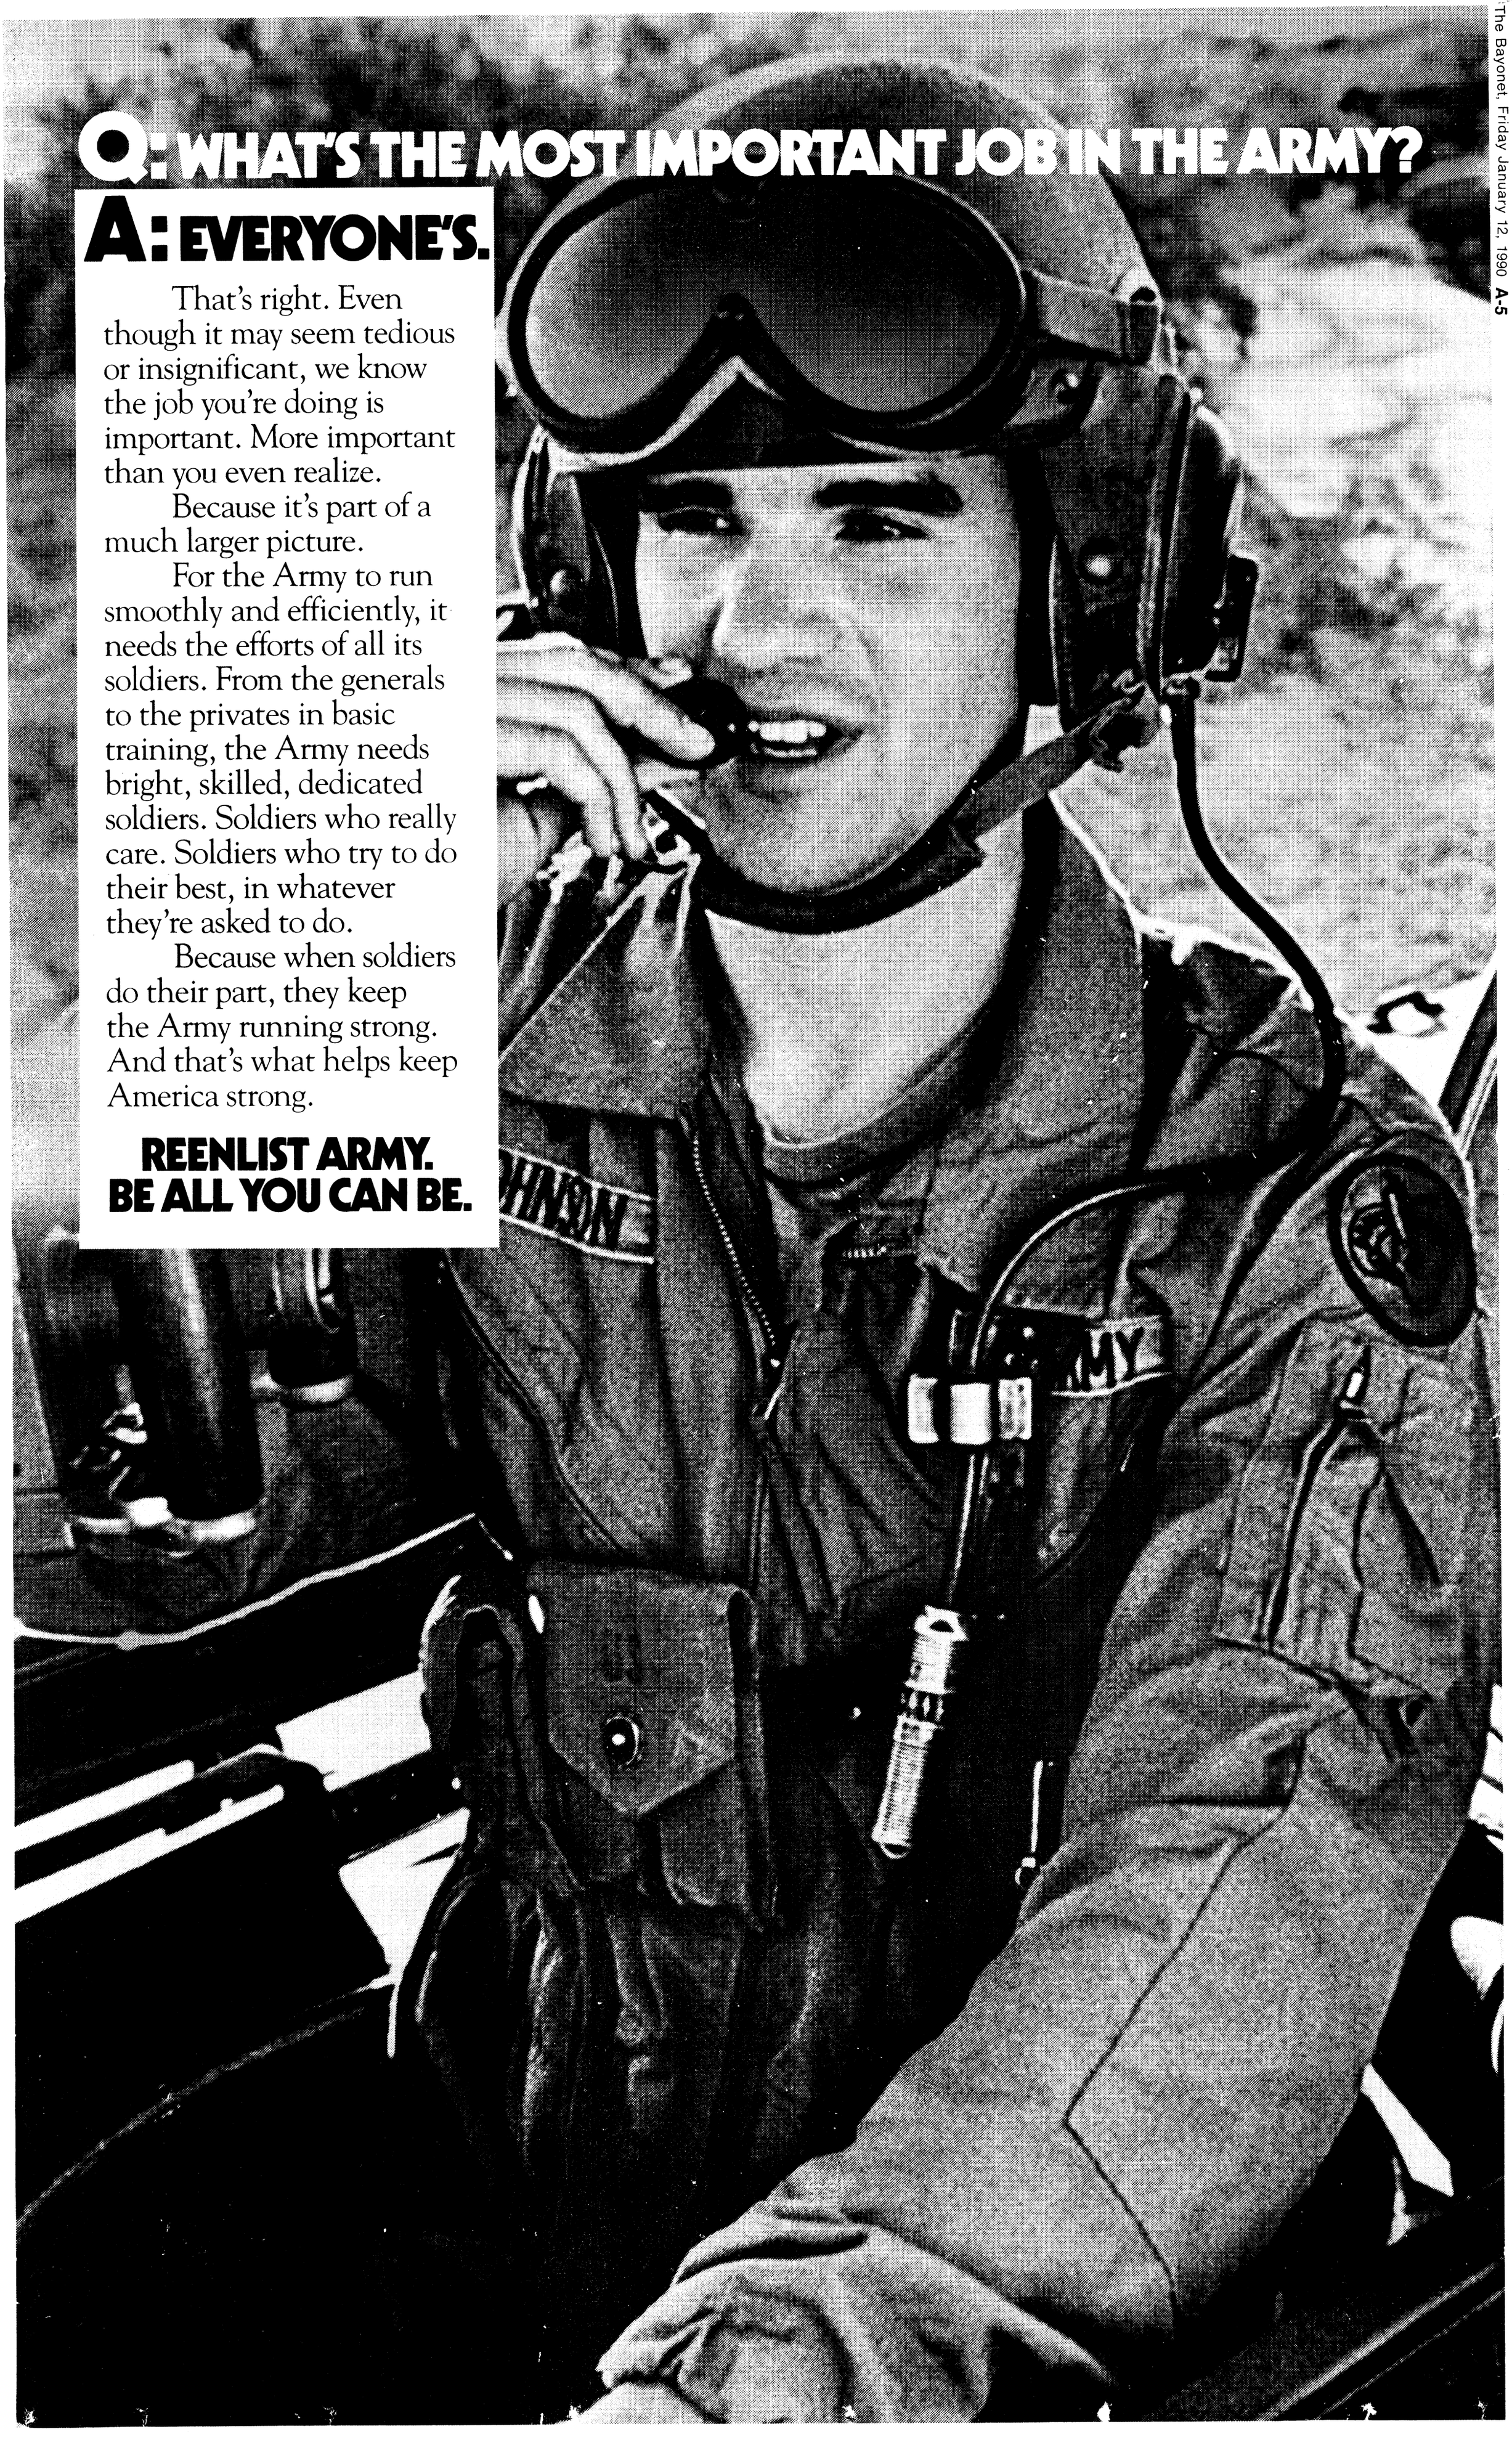
ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.® REENLIST.



Q: WHAT'S THE MOST IMPORTANT JOB IN THE ARMY?
A: EVERYONE'S.
That's right. Even though it may seem tedious or insignificant, we know the job you're doing is important. More important than you even realize.
Because it's part of a much larger picture.
For the Army to run smoothly and efficiently, it needs the efforts of all its soldiers. From the generals to the privates in basic training, the Army needs bright, skilled, dedicated soldiers. Soldiers who really care. Soldiers who try to do their best, in whatever they're asked to do.
Because when soldiers do their part, they keep the Army running strong. And that's what helps keep America strong.

Rangers

housing a roaring crowd anxious to see its special warriors.

After respects were rendered to the nation's colors and words of praise were given from the Army chief of staff, the Special Operations Command commander and Fort Benning's commander, the men were released to their loved ones.

"The sounds of those cheers coming from the hangar was the best reward yet," said Pfc. William Kelley, Co. C, 3rd Bn. 75th Rgr. Regt.

He said it was rewarding, because while he was in Panama, he had heard that the soldiers were being protested.

Protest, however, didn't seem to be in the vocabulary of anyone at Benning. Just moments before the rangers arrived, Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl E. Vuono conducted a press conference at the airfield headquarters.

"Today, we are welcoming back some tremendously brave and confident soldiers," he said. "The operation was carried out in a flawless manner."

"They acted in the true tradition of rangers. They did a great job and held casualties down to a minimum, which I might add, is a classic example of achieving the objective."

Although casualties were kept to a minimum, Kelley saw his team leader get shot and had to take out a Panamanian Defense Force soldier during the operation.

It happened when Kelley's company, along with 1st Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt., spearheaded the assault on Torrijos International Airport. He and other members of his squad were clearing a portion of the airport.

Kelley said he took two rounds in his helmet before he shot the PDF soldier.

"I gave him every opportunity to surrender but when it came down to him or me, I had to do it," he said.

Vuono attributed the restraint Kelley and the rest of the rangers used to their training.

"These men were trained to a razor's edge and this is what happens when you have a trained and ready force," he said.

Kelley said the training he received in the battalion prepared him for the operation, but now he feels even more confident knowing that they proved they have the ability to do it.

Women smokers: high risk for lung cancer

American Cancer Society

For more than 50 years, breast cancer was the number one cause of cancer deaths among women. In recent years, lung cancer has surpassed breast cancer.

In 1989, it was estimated that 49,000 women died from lung cancer. In 1950, women accounted for less than one in five deaths from lung cancer. Now one in three die from it.

If a woman smokes, her chances of developing lung cancer are two to three times greater than that of a nonsmoking woman. The cancer death rate for female smokers is 67 percent higher than for nonsmokers, and 28 percent of female smokers die prematurely.

After a woman stops smoking, her risk of developing lung and laryngeal cancer begins to drop and continues to do so steadily. In ten years, her risk is then the same as a nonsmoker's.

Though declining among white men, the incidence of lung cancer among women continues to rise. Among high school seniors, the prevalence of daily smoking has been higher among females than among males each year since 1970.

Even though more men smoke than women, fewer women than men are quitting smoking. Between 1976 and 1987, the number of adult male smokers dropped by 9 percent while female smokers decreased by only 4 percent.

For a woman between the ages of 35 and 44 who smokes more than two packs a day, the average cigarette-related medical bills and time lost from work will average $20,152 over her lifetime.

Women who smoke heavily contract respiratory and digestive ailments more often than those who do not smoke.

Smoking women who use oral contraceptives have a much higher overall death rate than their nonsmoking counterparts.

Women who smoke and use oral contraceptives are at a much higher risk of having strokes, heart attacks, and blood clots in their legs.

Babies born to smoking mothers generally are smaller in size and weigh less than babies born to nonsmoking women. If a woman gives up smoking early during pregnancy, her risk of delivering a low birth weight baby is reduced to nearly that of a nonsmoker.

Babies who have low birth weights are 20 times more likely to die than normal weight babies. They are more likely to suffer from learning disabilities, epilepsy, and hearing or vision problems.

If you are interested in quitting smoking, "Quit to Win" Smoking Cessation classes will be offered Jan. 16, 18, 23 and 25, from noon to 1 p.m., at Martin Army Community Hospital.

A second class will be offered beginning Jan. 30, from noon to 1 p.m., at MACH

L-E Advertising Really Pays!

ASK THE JUDGE

By 1st. Lt. Mark A. Gomez
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. Several days ago I found a leaflet on my apartment door. The leaflet was an advertisement for a photo club. The ad said that if I went to the local office to hear their sales pitch, I would receive either a 35mm camera or a new VCR. I went to the office and received a camera and ended up signing a contract. I don't want the services. Isn't there a three-day rule or something?

A. There are several companies in Columbus that operate in the same manner as the one you described. These companies lure customers into their local offices with flashy complimentary gifts such as 35mm cameras, VCRs, and even Visa and Mastercards.

Once there, the customer is given a high pressure sales pitch by "friendly" employees. Even the most prudent people usually give in after a half hour and sign a contract just to get out of the place. When you get home and actually read the contract, you discover that you owe approximately $1,500 at a high annual interest rate on a revolving charge account. To add insult to injury, the camera or VCR is usually of very poor quality.

When you signed the contract you committed yourself to a legally binding document. Many people think that they have three days in which to cancel a contract. This is not true. The three-day rule is a very limited legal loophole. It only works in situations where a door-to-door salesman comes to your house and sells you a product.

In the above situation, you went to the photo company's place of business; therefore, you have no right to cancel the contract. If you don't pay the monthly minimum payment, the photo company can sue you and ruin your credit rating. A bad credit rating can keep you from financing a car, a house and may even prevent you from getting telephone service from the phone company.

Another little trick these photo companies use is to issue you a Mastercard or Visa. Sounds great! You can get a credit card and buy some of those luxury items you've been wanting. Wrong! The photo company sells your contract to a bank. The bank then issues you a credit card with the same limit as the cost of the club and credits your account with the amount of the photo club contract.

Although your minimum payments may be low, the cost of the club and interest is so high it will take you many years to pay off the balance, with a total cost of thousands of dollars over the actual cost of the photo club.

Most of these contracts are perfectly valid and even the best lawyers may not be able to get you out.

Your best defense against these high pressure salespeople is to avoid contact with them. However, if you do go to their office, be sure to read every document, no matter how innocent looking, before you sign. You should even get a lawyer to review it before you sign. If the photo company won't let you take the contract to the JAG office for review, they probably have something to hide.

Remember the old rule, "you don't get something for nothing," so be careful.

If you have a photo club or any other contractual problem, contact the JAG office at 545-3281/3282.

Take precautions to detect cancer early

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

The American Cancer Society predicts that one woman out of 10 will be diagnosed as having breast cancer.

While the number of deaths from breast cancer is among the highest of all cancers, it is promising to note that the survival rate increases with early detection.

The best method of early detection is a screening mammogram.

This is a routine exam, ordered for patients who have no symptoms, felt no lump or experienced no pain.

Studies have shown that screening mammograms in women without symptoms can actually reduce mortality from breast cancer by 30 percent.

The American Cancer Society has developed guidelines for screening mammograms in women with no symptoms.

They are:

- Initial baseline mammogram between ages 35 to 40.
- Mammograms at one- to two-year intervals for ages 40 to 49
- Annual mammograms for ages 50 and over.

Unlike other X-rays, these films are kept on file at the Martin Army Community Hospital for comparison when new ones are made.

This allows the radiologist to see any changes that may have taken place since the earlier films were done.

Many women choose not to have mammograms because they have heard that the radiation involved increases the risk of cancer.

This may have been true years ago, but MACH has a state-of-the-art machine that has been found by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to provide good quality films with a very low dose of radiation, according to Anna Gilson, the mammogram technologist at MACH.

Another reason given by women who avoid this procedure is that "friends" have told them it is painful. This is not the case.

There is minimal discomfort from the compression required to get a high quality film, but tolerating this discomfort can save a woman's life.

Gilson, a technologist with eight years experience in mammography, says "too many" women in their 50s and 60s are coming in for their first mammogram; they should have had a baseline film years ago.

They are under the impression that if they feel no lump or pain, they need not worry about mammograms.

These films show early cancer before the patient could find it with routine self-examination.

Gilson, who does 14 to 15 mammograms daily, said women should call their doctor if they have not received mammogram results in three weeks.

She also said, if patients have had mammograms done elsewhere, they should tell the clerk when they make the appointment so she can instruct them on how to order these films for comparison with the current ones.

Appointments are made by taking the mammogram request from a doctor to the Radiology Department.

Cold weather causes damage

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Recently, cold weather has caused thousands of dollars in damage to all types of facilities at Fort Benning. The damages were the result of broken water pipes.

While the cold weather continues, it is necessary to reduce the threat of future freeze damage.

Cold air causes water inside pipes to freeze and expand, and the pipe to burst.

Water from broken pipes can cause serious structural and property damage. In a ceiling, for example, water released from a broken pipe can collect and cause the entire ceiling to collapse.

If you have installed carpeting or floor tile, water will ruin carpet and cause floor tiles to come up.

Take the following preventive measures now, to protect your investments:

- Family housing residents should heed weather reports calling for hard freeze warnings.
- Pipes in unheated areas and those exposed to outside air should be insulated.

Outside faucets are also susceptible to freezing and should be insulated, as well.

- Opening cabinet doors under sinks where pipes are near exterior walls allow the pipes to remain at near room temperature.
- During periods of extreme cold, (temperatures 20 degrees Fahrenheit and below) when water is not used regularly, allow a small amount of water to drip from the faucets. This will prevent water from freezing in the pipes.
- If you plan on going away for a vacation or an extended period of time, set your thermostat at 55 degrees farhenheit, or the lowest possible setting.
- Leave a key with a neighbor and ask him to check for broken or frozen pipes should a hard freeze occur.

This will also allow maintenance personnel access should repairs need to be made.

If a pipe does burst, try to locate the nearest cut-off valve and turn the water off. If you live in military housing, call the Work Order Section at 545-2135. There is an operator on duty 24 hours-a-day.

Make sure you have the correct building number or address, and the exact location of the break. This will save time and possibly lessen property damage.

The phone lines may be busy, so be patient if you are asked to hold.

Family housing residents can get insulation materials from the Self Help Store, building 385, on Vibbert Avenue.

Self Help offers foam insulation for pipes and freeze caps (insulating covers for outside faucets) to troop and family housing residents as well.

If you have any questions on this or any energy-related subject, contact the Energy Branch at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

Little effort is involved in preventing pipes from freezing. It is well worth the time when you consider the consequences.

Whether you lead a squad or command a battalion, your ability to help keep good soldiers in the Army is a strong reflection of your effectiveness as a leader.

From the day a young person begins Basic Training, to the last day of his or her enlistment, you make a critical difference. Because the way you lead your soldiers has a lot to do with their decision to reenlist.

Aside from teaching and training, as well as instilling in your people Army values to make them better soldiers, one of the most important things you do is to be a good listener. It lets your soldiers know you care. You make them feel needed. Respected. Appreciated. And, in turn, more likely to want to continue their Army experience.

You can give your soldiers dozens of great reasons to stay in the Army. But the greatest reason of all is the one staring back at you in the mirror: your soldiers are yours to keep.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

Dental residents brighten smiles

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

If Fort Benning soldiers and their family members have brighter smiles, it's because their dental care is provided by some of the Army's best.

Eight dental residents are enrolled in a one-year dental residency program at the U.S. Army Dental Activity here.

"We turn over nearly every stone in dentistry," said Col. (Dr.) Charles W. Wakefield, program director and member of the teaching staff. "The residents get a full range of experience in every speciality."

Upon completion of the program, the residents will be stationed overseas to work in small clinics or at remote assignments where dental specialists are not readily available.

However, while they are here gaining experience, the community is benefiting, too.

According to Wakefield, the residents spend about 80 percent of their time on patient care under supervised training. Their schedules rotate every week to allow them to spend half of a day in each speciality.

This allows more patients to be seen and treated. The residents provide a variety of treatments, such as oral surgery, root canals, crown and bridge care, part and full dentures, orthodontics, periodontics and pediatrics dentistry.

When treating patients, the residents are always supervised by a member of the teaching staff, or mentor.

The mentor provides one-on-one training in his speciality area. They are either board-eligible or board-certified specialists in every area of dental practice.

Col. (Dr.) Ralph Bellizzi, clinic chief, graduated from the program in 1964 and is now a mentor.

"This is the finest program I've ever been associated with," said Bellizzi, who is the consultant to the Surgeon General in endodontics. "We are very selective in choosing (who comes here). It's very demanding."

A special board selects eight top graduates from civilian dental schools for the 12-month program. The graduates have received doctorate degrees and have passed state licensing board exams prior to coming to the program.

"We take only the best," Wakefield said.

According to him, the additional training will develop the residents into versatile general practitioners who will be able to treat all of their patients' oral health care needs.

Rather than having to refer a patient with a specific dental problem to a specialist, the program graduates will have enough knowledge about all the major speciality areas to, in most cases, treat the patient themselves.

"This program is advanced training that allows the residents to be highly qualified early in their careers," Wakefield said.

Normally, an Army dentist will spend about five years practicing in general dentistry before attending a residency for training in a specific speciality.

The program, which is accredited by the American Dental Association, is one of six Army one-year general dentistry residency programs.

"One of the advantages of Fort Benning's program is that all of the specialities are taught under one roof with the exception of oral surgery and anesthesiology (at Martin Army Community Hospital) and orthodontics (at Bernheim Dental Clinic)," Wakefield said.

"This is a very intense course," Wakefield said, "but a year goes by fast. Every minute is already mapped out for the resident."

"This program trains far and beyond what dental school does. The residents would never get this type of experience in private practice."

Savannah Area Convention & Visitors Bureau

Martin Luther King Jr. commemorative events on Jan. 15 in Savannah will initiate two months of black heritage activities designed to interest visitors from throughout the southeast.

The Martin Luther King Jr. Observance Day Association has festivities beginning at 9 a.m. on the 15th with the annual Observance Day Parade through Downtown Savannah.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m., and the annual Freedom Dance at 7:30 p.m. at the DeSoto Hilton will end the day.

In February, The Savannah Symphony will present a Black Heritage Concert, sponsored by the City of Savannah with free admission, Jan. 10 at 8:30 p.m. at the Civic Center.

Andre R. Smith will be conducting, with special guest soloist Dr. Joyce Johnson of Spelman College, Tschaikovsky's Piano Concerto in B flat minor.

Jomandi Productions, Inc., a Georgia-based nonprofit professional theatre company, will perform "Sisters" Feb. 11 at 4 p.m. in the Fine Arts Auditorium of Armstrong College.

Marsha Jackson is playwright, co-director and co-star of the production about two black women, one an advertising accountant and the other a cleaning woman, who are stranded together during a snowstorm. Also sponsored by the City of Savannah, the production is free.

The King-Tisdell Cottage serves as a cornerstone to black heritage in Savannah and is a primary visitor destination.

Operated by the Savannah Yamacraw Chapter of the Association for the Study of Afro-American Life and History, it is dedicated to preserving black history and culture.

Built in 1896, its unique, intricate gingerbread ornamentation of the porch and dormers inspired its restoration in 1980.

The two main floors of the house are used as art galleries, with documents and furniture displaying coastal black heritage.

A meeting room in the basement makes it a community spot, and black heritage artists may display their works in the galleries.

Exhibitors Dr. Walker O. Evens and Akokunde Odeleye will be displaying works in February and October, respectively, and storyteller Janice Hunter will be visiting the Cottage in February also.

Jordan High graduates gather at Benning for 30 year reunion

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

When Jordan Vocational High School alumni gathered for their 30-year reunion, some discovered they had more in common than just graduating from the same school.

It turns out that 16 women from that class have a Fort Benning connection.

They all have, or have had, government service positions and still are in some way connected to the post.

According to Bernice Simpson, of Secretary General Staff Office, the average length of time each of the women spent in the civil service was 22 years.

She said the reason why there were so many alumni here at Benning is because there was a teacher who was pro-civil service. She encouraged all the women to take the examination that is required to enter civil service.

When Simpson discovered the connection, she decided the women should have a smaller reunion of their own.

The reunion was at the house of alumni Diane Spigelmire, wife of the post commanding general, on Dec. 15, 1989.

HOUSING

Family Housing List
as of Jan. 8

By using the following procedure, soldiers on the Family Housing Waiting List can use this chart to estimate when they can expect quarters:

- Locate your category of housing.
- Note eligibility date located on same line as your category.
- Calculate the time difference between eligibility date listed and your eligibility date. The difference is the approximate time you still have to wait for housing.

EXAMPLE: If the latest eligibility date (eligibility date of the person who last received housing in your category) was May 15, 1988, and your date is Sept. 15, 1988, you can expect housing approximately four months. If you do not know your eligibility, contact the Family Housing Office at Building 399 or telephone 545-3107.

Museum presents film festival

The Columbus Museum

Film enthusiasts will enjoy two evenings of award-winning independent films, Jan. 18 and 19 when the Columbus Museum presents the Sinking Creek Film Celebration.

The program is sponsored by the Columbus Contemporaries, a support group of younger Museum members.

Drawn from a collection of over 300 films, the evenings will include six to ten films totaling approximately 100 minutes in length.

The Jan. 18 program will include dramatic and animated films. Experimental and documentary works will be shown Jan. 19.

Sinking Creek films represent the best examples of independent, personal film production in the U.S.

All of the films are personal works over which the maker has retained complete artistic and technical control. Sinking Creek films are unique because they are strong in creativity and technique in spite of low production costs.

Sinking Creek films have been presented to a wide variety of audiences throughout the U.S. and in foreign countries.

For more information, call Becky Williams at 322-0400.

Airlines offer refunds for unused tickets

Soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines holding non-refundable airline tickets they expected to use during the holidays but who instead found themselves being deployed to Panama may qualify for refunds, thanks to an agreement reached between the Military Traffic Management Command and the U.S. flag air carrier industry.

"In all, 13 air carriers and five travel service companies joined together to react favorably to our request," said Air Force Col. R. Craig Thompson, director of passenger traffic for the command.

"Servicemembers and their families will receive waivers to restricted fares on a case-by-case basis. They should contact either their travel agent or the airlines — whichever they made the original reservation with."

Because each airline has its own policy on time limitations, Thompson said servicemembers should act quickly.

"U.S. air carriers recognized the problem and immediately joined as an industry to help servicemembers who may have lost money because of a situation beyond their control.

"Also, the Department of Defense commercial travel offices deserve thanks for their gallant efforts in serving American servicemembers and their families this holiday season," Thompson said. (ArNews)

Fort Benning rangers honor fallen comrades

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

A memorial service was held Jan. 11, in Marshall Auditorium, for two Fort Benning rangers killed during Operation Just Cause.

Staff Sgt. Larry R. Barnard and Pfc. Roy D. Brown Jr. were remembered by members of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment and the 75th Ranger Regimental Headquarters.

Presided over by Chap. (Capt.) Glen L. Bloomstrom, of 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt., the hour-long service included words of spiritual praise and guidance, a scripture reading by the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Joseph F. Hunt, a stirring rendition of "O Beautiful For Spacious Skies," a recitation of the Ranger Creed and the customary "roll call of the deceased," conducted by 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. Command Sgt. Maj. Gerald E. Klein.

The symbolic roll call dates back to the Revolutionary War era.

According to tradition, the sergeant major calls off existing unit personnel who reply in turn.

At the end, the names of the deceased are called off with no reply.

From this point, the soldiers names are taken from the rolls and transfixed into the hearts of the men who had once served with them.

Barnard is survived by his wife Tammy, his son Benjamin, 10, and daughters, Melissa, 6 and Emily Ann, 4.

His awards and decorations include the Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Army Commendation Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Army Achievement Medal with three oak leaf clusters, 2nd Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal with Arrow Head, Humanitarian Award, Multinational Force and Observers Medal, Good Conduct Medal (2nd award), Army Service Ribbon, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Expert Infantryman's Badge, Master Parachutist's Badge with Combat Star, Air Assault and Ranger tabs.

Brown is survived by his parents, Julianna Otto and Roy Brown Sr.

His awards and decorations include the Bronze Star, Purple Heart, 2nd Armed Force Expeditionary Medal with Arrow Head, Army Service Ribbon, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Expert Infantryman's Badge and the Parachutist's Badge with Combat Star.

The soldiers, both from 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt., were killed Dec. 20 at Panama's Rio Hato Airfield.

War hero offers wisdom to Infantry course officers

A Medal of Honor winner talks to Infantry Officer Advanced Course students about his experiences during the Korean War and in Vietnam.

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The Guest Speaker Program of the Infantry Officer's Advanced Course featured one of America's most colorful and highly decorated war heroes Jan. 9, in Marshall Auditorium, as part of its focus on battlefield leadership.

Retired Gen. Raymond G. Davis, a Medal of Honor winner and former assistant commandant of the Marine Corps, spoke at length about his harrowing experiences in the Korean War.

Davis, a one-time reservist, had high praise for both the Marine reservists under his command and those of present-day.

He illustrated the type of men who went from the warm and dry environment of their home states to the rough, barren terrain of the Korean mountains.

He emphasized that the troops, at times, faced 75 degrees below zero temperatures with the brutal high altitude wind-chill factor.

Davis also tried to put into perspective the reputation he received in Vietnam as a "tough guy."

This was brought about after he had relieved five battalion commanders in five months.

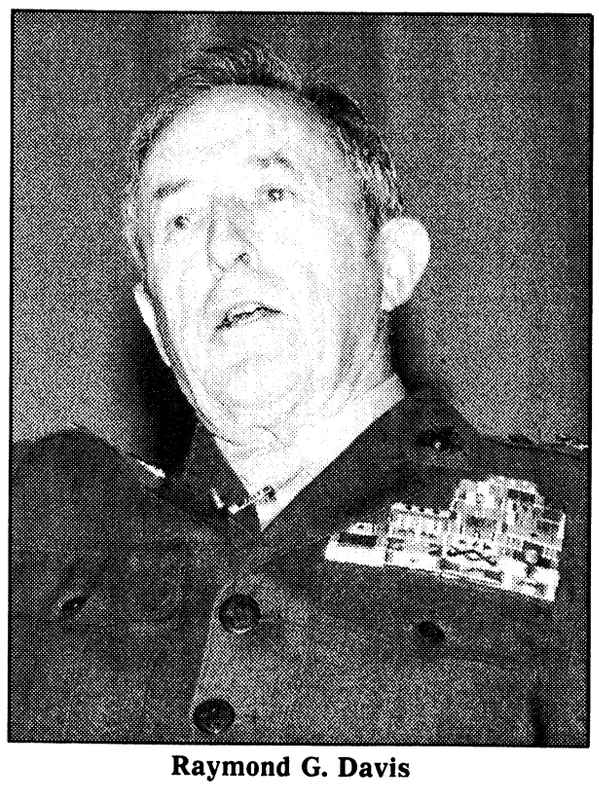
"When you get a lot of Marines killed . . . you're out," he said. "So after five (Marines killed per commander) that's it."

The focus of the discussion turned from himself to the Infantry Officer Advanced Course students as he invited the young captains and first lieutenants to ask questions.

Women in combat, a popular topic in today's military circles, was immediately posed to the general for his consideration.

"You've got to permit women to do what they can do," said Davis, "but I'm not ready yet to integrate them boy/girl into the rifle squad. I don't think the country is ready yet, either."

He added "We should do all we can to bring women forward in the war picture."



Raymond G. Davis

Speaking with regard to the current Panama situation, he voiced his difference in style with current military policies.

"I'm an 'overwhelming' kind of guy so I would have sent divisions rather than battalions. We need to let the world know that when we undertake an operation like this, we mean business."

He said he had expressed concern over current force-cutback proposals with regard to the Marine Corps specifically.

"By law, Marines are authorized three divisions and three airwings. What you would see would be skeleton cuts, but they would be felt," he said.

Davis earned the Medal of Honor in Korea in 1950. He retired from active duty March 31, 1972, after more than 33 years of active duty.

In addition to winning the country's highest award for heroism, he has also won every medal for valor given by the military.

Currently, he serves his state and his community as executive vice president of the Georgia Chamber of Commerce.

King's fight must be remembered

By Shawn Lorimer
Bayonet staff writer

It was standing room only Jan. 12 when Judge John D. Allen spoke during a ceremony commemorating the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Allen, a graduate of Tuskegee Institute and currently a State Court Judge, talked about the importantance of remembering King.

He described the civil rights movement of the 50s and 60s saying, "In many conflicts overseas, blacks soldiers fought injustices, only to return to the same human rights injustices at home."

According to Allen, King and his followers advocated a policy of nonviolent civil disobedience.

He said King felt that if he could make progress in Montgomery, Ala., he could win the fight against segregation everywhere.

"These people dared to stand up against the vicious attacks of police dogs and fire hoses," he said.

Finally, Allen talked about his personal feelings on the death of King. "I was a pilot assigned to Vietnam, and I can remember the absolute hate and frustration that filled me when I learned of his death."

He ended the 45-minute address by reminding everyone of the need to continue to maintain King's ideals.

After Allen's address, the audience was again entertained by the St. Benedict Catholic Choir, which had opened the ceremony and received a standing ovation.

The U.S. Army Infantry School Band also provided music for the event.

In honor of King's memory, a presentation was set up in the display case outside the auditorium.

The display included memorabilia of King's work and a video tape of the civil rights movement.

King's birthday and the memorial ceremony at Fort Benning and the surrounding area were a timely prelude to the celebration of Black History Month to be observed in February.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What do think was Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.'s greatest contribution?

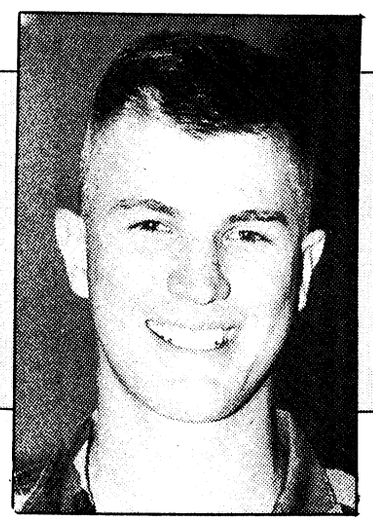
Sgt. 1st Class Charles Wiley, Co. D, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "He made it possible for people to take on challenges instead of struggling as they did in the 60s."

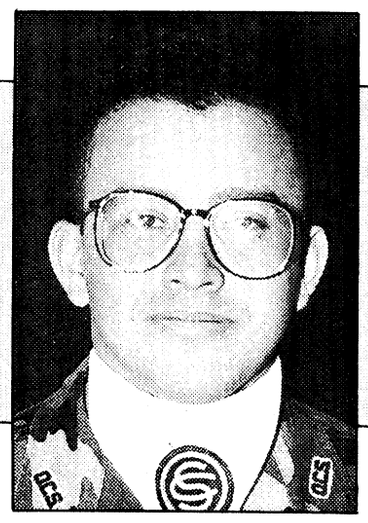
Sgt. Tracy Alexander, MEDDAC — "He got Blacks to believe in his nonviolence philosophy. He accomplished a lot without resorting to violence."

Staff Sgt. James Bailey, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "He improved equal rights for everyone and made people realize that color doesn't matter."

Sgt. 1st Class Angel Huerta, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. — "He brought people together and resolved a lot of racial problems."



2nd Lt. Andrew Johnson, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "He opened the eyes of a lot of people in this country. He made Black people realize they were a lot more capable than they thought."



Officer Candidate Daniel Graves, Co. A, 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "Basically, he helped gain equality for everyone. He stood up for what he believed, which, unfortunately, cost him his life."

CIB belongs to the 'Infantry Club'

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

I'd like to say a few things about media coverage of our war in Panama.

First, while there was serious fighting taking place, the coverage was good. It was objective, fairly accurate and complete.

In fact, it was the only way we had of following the war since DA appeared loathe to share information with us.

But once things started to settle down, the media went looking for other stories.

Capt. Linda Bray, the commanding officer of our 988th MP Company was turned into a household word.

She became a "cause celebre" for woman activists, the latter who think women should be allowed to join the infantry, field artillery and armor branches in order to go to combat.

I dare say you probably won't find their sons in combat MOSs, certainly not their daughters and definitely not them.

But they are willing to let others further their cause while they sit back in easy chairs and sip Perrier.

Personally, my hat's off to all the MPs who went down on a support mission, found themselves in combat, did their job and are still there and will continue to be there for a few more months. Just how much more combat do you want?

When a bullet's flying in your direction, it makes you just as dead, whether you are an 11 Bush or 95 Bravo. So why worry?

If combat's what you want, stick around, and, if we go to war, chances are you'll see it.

Back to the media.

Once they'd beaten the Bray story to death, interviewing everyone with an opinion, they went looking for other incidents to turn into news.

Some of these included soldiers' boom boxes at the Papal Nuncio, soldiers proving to be pests at the Nicaraguan and Cuban embassies and, finally, dissecting the personality of the Southern Command commander.

What I've saved for last is the Combat Infantry Badge issue. And this goes back to the 'l'affaire' "women in combat" question.

We green suiters have always known that we're an enigma to civilians. But when it came to the CIB, the civilian media acted downright stupid.

The fact that no woman were being awarded CIBs was proof for them that the Army is biased against women. You couldn't talk to them about men also being excluded if they weren't in the infantry. That didn't matter.

As one local journalist, trying to sort it out, said, "What you've got here is an exclusive male's club."

We tried to explain that what we've got is an exclusive infantry club. It's the CIB, and the "I" in CIB stands for "Infantryman."

But this reporter kept insisting we were biased against women. After all, saying cannon cockers, tankers, signal senders and military police are excluded from the CIB is not nearly as newsworthy as saying the Army is barring women from getting the CIB.

Suddenly, for want of anything else to write about, the CIB is a rallying point for feminists — an award that was worn proudly by infantrymen, and no one else since World War II without any comment.

But now, the media and the feminists are saying that the way to get ahead in the Army is to earn a CIB.

Without one, they say, women don't stand the same chance for promotion as men.

That's poppycock. What happens when there is no war?

Do promotions freeze? The Army is a meritocracy. It promotes those who excel in their jobs and who demonstrate potential for higher ranks.

Wearing a CIB won't get you promoted any faster.

I know infantry lieutenant colonels on the promotion list who don't have CIBs because they haven't been to combat in any way, shape or form.

I also know infantry lieutenant colonels with CIBs and all sorts of medals for valor who aren't on the promotion list.

You may find more higher ranking officers and noncommissioned officers who are infantry than other branches. But that's because there are more people in the infantry.

By the same token, you find more in the lower ranks. Percentage wise, one year, you might stand a better chance of being promoted if your branch is finance. Another year, it might be ordnance or combat engineers.

But see, civilians don't understand this, and the media refuses to because then they're out a good story.

More good stories have crashed on the rocks of facts than I'd care to recall.

As for women in infantry — I sure wouldn't want to be in the infantry if I were a woman.

Communal slit trenches and fox holes are not my idea of a good time.

Snively's note to the world: As are all columns, the words read here represent the view of the writer and no one else. I'm a simple journalist who Mme. Editor has bestowed this space in order for me to sound off. My thoughts are not to be misconstrued as representing The Bayonet, Fort Benning or Department of the Army.

Color didn't matter to Martin Luther King

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

"The kids were all laughing at my poster, mommy, I really had a bad day today." My son, home from a hard day in the first-grade, obviously needed a dose of positive reinforcement.

"O.K. Peter, what was your poster about?"

"Dr. Martin Luther King, except he isn't around any more. Somebody killed him."

"That's right, but what was wrong with your picture?" As usual, I knew the bottom line of this story would be obtained only after due process.

"I drew a picture of Dr. King. He was wearing a suit and tie, but my friends said I made it a dumb color."

"Well, how do your friends know what color suit Dr. King would have worn?" Surely the kids in first grade weren't fashion conscious already.

"I made his suit pink and his tie orange. I guess it looks pretty funny, but I think Dr. King would like the picture I drew of him."

Between cookie crumbs and a hastened exit out the door, he added, "Colors weren't important to Dr. King anyway, he was just that kind of guy."

As he and his friends began a rousing game of football, I noted for the first time that his friends are black, white, Hispanic and one is handicapped.

None of the kids seem to talk about the typical categories or descriptions. They just do a lot of worrying over who can catch the ball and who has a needle to keep it blown up.

Brown, tossled hair and grass-stained knees aside, my 7-year-old philosopher gave me a pretty big chuck of food for thought.

Orange and pink go pretty well together, after all.

Writer predicts more productive future for forces because of world changes

By Joseph L. Allred
Army News Service

Events in Eastern Europe during the past several weeks have astounded both the political savants and the common man of America.

Who would have ever thought that totalitarian governments — such as Poland, East Germany, Hungary and Czechoslovakia — would experience the uprising of the masses to such an extent that it would literally transform their and our way of life?

For those of us in the military who have experienced the grim reality of Checkpoint Charlie, the gold, gray cement wall separating East and West Berlin, with jagged pieces of glass embedded along the top row of the wall, and the expressionless faces of the East German people — it is marvelous to see the opening of the gates and free passage from East to West, and West to East.

One of the most formidable political, and physical, barriers has now been cracked, and man's indomitable spirit has taken flight.

Now we are on the leading edge of a new era for both American and world political restructuring.

We are seeing swift changes and developments that are likely to continue to open the doors between the East and the West — expanding knowledge, technology, cultural understanding and trade.

Yet even in this euphoric state of excitement there is one element that has yet to be fully considered and examined. This is the American military in general and the Army specifically.

Of course, there have been some discussions as to the role the military will play in the new order of things, their emphasis being placed on solving cultural, social and trade problems over concerns about national security.

But these discussions usually stop where the budget is concerned.

Basically, since the threat is considered subsided, there appears to be no greater need for the large expenditure that is required by the Department of Defense; consequently, a reduced budget and reduced manpower strengths are realities for the future of the Army.

But where does that leave us?

Are there some bright spots that arise on the future horizon?

One, with a reduced budget and reduced manpower need, the Army of the future may develop greater quality control over its budget planning and execution and manpower selection.

Two, with fewer positions to fill in the Army, the quality of selection and retention may bring the cream of the crop to the surface more rapidly.

Three, when quality is identified as being part of the Army's future, this may attract other quality people to the officer and enlisted ranks of the Army.

Four, a reduction in forces may affect both overseas and stateside assignments, creating a considerable savings for the Army in reduced movements and longer, stabilized tours.

Additional benefits may be fewer unaccompanied tours and less demand for overseas assignments.

Five, as stabilization occurs, there will be opportunities for better and more effective unit training, using better and more effective equipment.

And six, as stabilization occurs with a reduced manpower force, the Army's resources may be better spent on developing facilities and programs to enhance the quality of life for the soldier and family member.

Improved recreation, education and health care will be some of the immediate benefits of a smaller force.

Yet, with all the benefits derived from a smaller Army, the mission will not have changed at all.

It will still be the mission of the Army to deter war and defend this nation if called upon to do so.

The Army still must have the ability to control land, people and resources to end conflict as rapidly as possible.

The Army remains America's premiere land force capable of defending and winning across the entire spectrum of armed conflict.

From terrorism to conventional warfare, even in times of peace, the Army must be continually prepared to fight and win the first battle of the next war.

Operation Holiday a success

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The holidays are over, and it's back to work for post soldiers.

Many soldiers went home to visit family and friends, but some didn't have that opportunity.

That's where "Operation Holiday," came it to play.

The program, designed for single soldiers and geographic bachelors who remained at Fort Benning for the holidays, included tours of local businesses, trips to local attractions and sporting events.

The program is organized by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army and is funded by people in the local area.

According to Spec. Cheryl Stall, AUSA spokeswoman, all of the contributors were more than generous and each should feel proud that they had a hand in making the event a success.

Many thankful for Scouts' hard work

Fort Benning-Pataula Boy Scouts

One hundred and ninety three Fort Benning families had a special reason to celebrate the Thanksgiving and Christmas seasons for they were the beneficiaries of the hard work of the Fort Benning-Pataula Boy Scouts and the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, "Pioneers."

Between Nov. 11 and 18, Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts distributed bags and collected food from families residing at Fort Benning and in the south Columbus area.

Between Nov. 18 and 22, soldiers from the "Pioneer" battalion received, separated, inspected and prepared the food for distribution by Army Community Services.

All total, 6,712 items of food were donated for Fort Benning families.

This total exceeded last year's Fort Benning collections by about 1,600 food items.

Organizers and sponsors have set their goals at 10,000 food items for 1990.

The Scout troops involved in the collection were Cub Scout pack 27, 51, 54, 127, 217, 227 and 238 and Boy Scout troops 27, 41, 51 and 227.

The success of the food drive was evidenced by the looks of joy on the faces of the Scouts as they brought in their collections.

The soldiers of the "Pioneer" battalion reflected the enthusiasm of the Scouts as more and more food arrived.

For many of the "Pioneers," this was a rekindling of previous "scouting" ties, and comments went back and forth between the soldiers and scouts concerning "scouting in the good old days."

The Scouts and soldiers said the time went fast as it was fueled by the spirit of giving and the worthiness of the cause.

The final tribute, however, comes from the parents and children of those who received the food collected and prepared by the scouts and pioneers, and that tribute is — thank you.

TRADOC announces Excellence winners, plans '90 inspections

By Kyle Davis
Management Division, DRM

Fort Benning is to be the first installation to be evaluated during fiscal year 1990's Training and Doctrine Command's Communities of Excellence evaluation.

The team is scheduled to visit June 5 through 7.

Fourteen areas will be evaluated. They include: barracks, U-Do-It projects, classrooms, outdoor training areas, medical facilities, Finance and Accounting Office, Directorate of Community Activities, education centers, Military Personnel Office, transient quarters, youth activity centers, snack bars/vending areas, commissary and the post's overall appearance.

A major change from the 1989 evaluation is that the 1990 evaluation will also include the evaluation of services.

This change will bring TRADOC's program into line with the Department of the Army's Communities of Excellence evaluation.

Many of the 14 areas listed above will also be evaluated on site for their services.

Headquarters, TRADOC, will also evaluate an additional group of services that will be added to the installation's overall score.

The additional areas are: law enforcement, child care, transportation, Army Community Service, food/laundry services, Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, civilian training, health program services, maintenance and community operations/recreation services.

The winners of this year's Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence evaluation were announced during the TRADOC Commander's Conference held in November.

Fort Jackson, S.C., won the large category for the second year in a row; Fort McClellan, Ala., won the medium category; and Fort Leavenworth, Kan., won the small category.

Each of these installations received the TRADOC Commander's Trophy.

Fort Benning received a plaque for the best U-Do-It project on a large installation in TRADOC.

TRADOC Communities of Excellence is the first step in the Army Communities of Excellence program.

Six TRADOC installations are nominated to compete in the evaluation and can win up to $1.5 million and receive the Commander-in-Chief's trophy or the Chief of Staff of the Army's trophy.

One Commander-in-Chief's award is given to each of the four armed services. The awards are presented at a Pentagon awards ceremony.

Points of contact for the specific facilities and services evaluation criteria are available at the Management Analysis Division, DRM, office in building 2604, phone 545-5382/2557.

Capt. Kyle Davis worked with the Management Division, Directorate of Resource Management for a week while awaiting entry into a ranger training course.

Military pay: some taxed, some not

American Forces Information Service

Because certain military payments are not taxable, service members are sometimes confused as to what is and isn't taxed.

Taxable income generally includes:

- Active duty pay
- Reserve training pay
- Reenlistment bonuses
- Service academy pay
- Amounts received by retired personnel serving as instructors in Junior ROTC programs
- Lump-sum payments upon separation or release to inactive duty
- Military retirement pay based on age or length of service.

The following items are not taxable:

- Basic quarters allowance
- Variable housing allowance
- Basic subsistence allowance
- Uniform allowance
- Family separation pay
- Other quarters cost-of-living allowances
- Moving and storage expenses provided in kind or reimbursements for actual expenses for permanent-change-of-station moves
- Benefits under Servicemen's Group Life Insurance
- Death gratuity pay (not more than $3,000)
- Forfeited pay, but not fines
- Certain disability retirement pensions
- Department of Veterans Affairs benefits, including VA insurance dividends

For more information, obtain Internal Revenue Service Publication 3, Tax Information for Military Personnel, by calling (800) 424-3676.

Mortgage interest deductible

American Forces Information Service

A home mortgage secured by a taxpayer's main or second home and taken out on or before Oct. 13, 1987, is acquisition debt, and the loan interest is fully deductible.

The Internal Revenue Service reminds taxpayers, however, there are limits on interest deductions for mortgages taken out after Oct. 13, 1987.

A mortgage taken out after Oct. 13, 1987, secured by a taxpayer's main or second home used to buy, build or substantively improve that home is also considered an acquisition debt.

Interest is fully deductible on loans up to $1 million for couples filing jointly and singles and $500,000 for married filing separately.

A loan secured by a main or second home is home equity debt if used for purposes other than buying, building or substantially improving that home.

Interest is deductible on loans of up to $100,000 for couples filing jointly and singles or $50,000 for married filing separately.

The interest is not deductible at all if the loan was used to make investments resulting in tax-free income.

More detailed information is available in IRS Publication 545, Interest Expense. Call toll-free (800) 424-3676 for a free copy.

VA Q&A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q. How much will the Department of Veterans Affairs lend to a veteran for the purchase of a home under the GI Bill?

A. VA does not provide loans under the program. Instead, it provides a guaranty of up to $36,000 to cover losses to the lender in the event the veteran defaults on the loan.

The amount of the loan to an eligible veteran is not limited to $36,000, but is based on the reasonable value of the property and the veteran's ability to repay the mortgage.

Q. Are family members of veterans eligible for education assistance from the VA?

A. Educational assistance for family members is available to the spouse or children of a veteran with a permanent and total service-connected disability; a veteran who died while permanently and totally service-connected disabled; or a veteran who died during military service or as a result of a service-connected disability.

Generally, the spouse must use the benefit within 10 years of the date the veteran was found to have a qualifying disability or the date VA determines the death was service connected.

With some exceptions, a child must use the benefits between ages 18 and 26.

Q. I receive compensation for a service-connected disability and would like to know if the Department of Veterans Affairs will be sending me a W-2 form.

A. No. VA compensation payments are not taxable.

Q. Will my National Service Life Insurance policy lapse for nonpayment of premiums even if the dividends held under the Deposit Option are more than enough to cover the premiums due?

A. Yes. The Department of Veterans Affairs can't automatically make a withdrawal from the Deposit Option account to prevent lapse. However, dividends held under the Dividend Credit Option, can be used to pay premiums.

Q. My daughter receives educational assistance from VA as a result of her father's service-connected death. Can she continue to get her benefits after she marries?

A. Yes. Marriage is not a bar to educational assistance for eligible children.

Q. What is a Presidential Memorial Certificate?

A. A Presidential Memorial Certificate expresses the country's grateful recognition of an individual's service in the armed forces and bears the signature of the president.

These certificates are available to the next of kin of deceased veterans or persons who are on active duty at time of death.

Next of kin need not apply for a certificate. Relatives or friends may apply at any VA regional office.

Q. When I purchase a home using a Department of Veterans Affairs home loan guaranty, will the income of my spouse be considered?

A. Yes. The veteran's and the spouse's income are considered in determining ability to repay the loan.

International Student Detachment undergoes change of command

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The International Student Training Detachment underwent a change of command Jan. 5, in a brief ceremony at Infantry Hall.

The outgoing commander, Maj. Richard N. Hawkins, relinquished command to Maj. Richard B. Driver.

Handing over the colors on behalf of ISTD's parent unit, the Office of Infantry Proponency, was its director, Col. Gary A. Jones.

Presiding over the ceremony on behalf of the Infantry School was Brig. Gen. William M. Steele, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Hawkins assumed command of ISTD on Dec. 12, 1988, and is being assigned to Heidelberg, Germany, on the U.S. Army Europe and 7th Army staff.

He is joined by his wife, Melissa and their three children: Brian, Katie and Laura.

Driver recently completed a tour as a Foreign Area Officer in Honduras and has just finished his master's degree in Latin American Studies at the University of New Mexico.

He is joined by his wife, Zeddra, and their two daughters, Tiffany and Starsha.

The International Student Program at Fort Benning started in 1921 when the first group of international officers came to train at the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Since that time, about 20,000 international students, representing 108 countries, have attended the Infantry School.

IOBC students start new year with improved training program

By Robert T. Solomon
Infantry Officer Basic Course

One hundred and ninety seven infantry lieutenants of Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry, started the new year Jan. 7 in the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

In addition to being the first class of the new year, Class Three will be the first IOBC class to train under the new program of instruction.

The new Co. B lieutenants are a diverse group. There are 88 National Guardsmen, 48 members of the U.S. Army Reserve, and 61 students are assigned to the active component.

Class Three also has four allied officers representing Jordan, Saudi Arabia and Toga.

The IOBC program of instruction has been undergoing review for several months.

Suggestions for improvement from students, along with those from trainers, were incorporated in this review.

The resulting changes in the course should make it both more challenging and professionally rewarding.

The lieutenants of Class Three will be given an early opportunity to demonstrate their infantry skills.

During this first week, the students have been undergoing certification testing to determine how much of their precommissioning training they have retained.

Refresher training was provided on Monday and Tuesday evenings and the testing was conducted Thursday and Friday.

Validating the students' knowledge level will allow IOBC trainers to use a more advanced starting point in their instruction.

There will be little repetition of the training the students received at OCS, ROTC or USMA.

This will contribute to making the course more demanding.

Another major change to the program of instruction involves the amount of training time spent in the field.

Class Three will have its first field exercise during the third week and will spend considerably more time in the field than previous IOBC classes.

Previous IOBC classes spent little time in the field prior to week eight of the 16-week course.

The increased number of field exercises will provide more leadership opportunities for the students to prepare for their future role as platoon leaders.

Toward the end of the course, the IOBC students will be given the opportunity to demonstrate their mastery of individual infantry skills by testing for the Expert Infantryman's Badge.

Life-saving skills stressed in course

By Gary F. Alderson II
1st Battalion, 18th Infantry

"It's the best course at Kelley Hill," said Pfc. Bill Roberts, of Company E, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry."

"The training was hard, but I learned a lot," said Spec. Vicente O. Vigil, of the battalion's Scout Platoon.

"The skills I learned in this course need to be taught to the leaders, as well as the rest of the platoon," said Sgt. William Andrews, of Co. D.

That's what soldiers of 1st Bn., 18th Inf., are saying about the Combat Lifesaver Course, a 40-hour block of instruction given at HHC.

Under the guidance of Chief Warrant Officer Ed Wightman, a physician's assistant with the Medical Platoon, nonmedical personnel in the company received four days of classroom instruction and one day of hands-on field training in basic life-saving skills.

According to Wightman, graduates of the course are trained to render medical treatment to soldiers wounded on the battlefield until a combat medic takes over or until they are evacuated to the hospital.

The goal of the program is to have at least one combat lifesaver per squad, section or vehicle at all times, Wightman said.

Course topics include: general medical subjects, management of the victim's airway, application of special dressings, management of skeletal dysfunctions, initiation and maintenance of intravenous infusion, environmental injuries, management of nerve agent casualties/combat stress reaction and transportation of a casualty.

During the classroom instruction, the students learn how to begin and maintain an intravenous infusion, practicing on each other under the guidance of Wightman and the Medical Platoon noncommissioned officers.

"Establishing an adequate airway and initiating fluid resuscitation are the cornerstones of early stabilization of a trauma victim," Wightman said. "The combat lifesaver stabilizes the condition of his injured buddy within the first, critical hour after injury.

"This probably represents the most significant advance in battlefield medical care since helicopter evacuation," Wightman said.

"Soldiers can no longer rely on instant evacuation from the battlefield," said Sgt. Samuel Brooks, one of the primary instructors for the course. "The combat lifesaver provides an edge to our troops — an edge that saves lives and helps preserve the combat power of the unit."

"The students really seem to enjoy the course," added Sgt. Anthony Gibbs, another primary instructor. "They learn new skills that could help them save their buddy's life someday."

For the final day of instruction, the students went to the field to practice their skills in a combat environment.

According to Wightman, field testing requires the soldiers to treat and evacuate casualties under direct and indirect fire and in a chemical environment.

"The field problem is unique to our combat lifesaver course," Gibbs said. "It's not a required part of the curriculum, but we think it's beneficial."

Realism was achieved through the use of aggressors, smoke and other pyrotechnics and moulage.

"The course is high speed," said Pfc. Jamie Gonzales, of the Scout Platoon.

"Now, if one of my buddies ever went down in combat, I know I could help him stay alive."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I have a black 1989 Camaro, and I had a local merchant put a dark tint on my windows.

It really looks good, but I'm worried about the new Georgia law concerning tinted windows.

The car is registered in Georgia. How can I be sure that I won't be stopped by the police for this?

A. The new Georgia law on tinted windows provides that Georgia residents may not operate a car on Georgia roads after Jan. 1, 1990, if that car either 1.) has any materials or glazing that reduces light transmission through the windshield or 2.) has any material or glazing on the rear windshield or side or door windows that reduces light transmission to less than 32 percent or increases light reflection to more than 20 percent.

To avoid possible contact with the police, you should have the light transmission through your windows checked by one of several businesses off post.

If your car windows pass this test, the business may provide you a sticker for $3 that indicates that your windows meet the Georgia standard.

If the test indicates your windows are not in compliance with the law, you must have your windows modified to meet the standard or run the risk of being stopped and cited.

The new tinting law is a bit confusing as it applies to non-Georgia residents.

The law states that any motor vehicle not registered in Georgia is exempt from meeting the tinting requirements.

Therefore, all of the cars that have out of state license tags won't be stopped for possible violations of the tinting law.

However, it is possible that a non-Georgia resident may have his vehicle registered in Georgia.

A strict interpretation of the new law may exempt such non-Georgia residents from complying with this law.

However, the policeman who pulls you over may not be convinced that you are not a resident of Georgia.

The policeman will look to see what state has issued you a driver's license.

He may ask you if you own a house in Georgia or whether your children attend school in Georgia.

If the policeman is still not certain that you are not a Georgia resident, he may issue you a citation and let the judge sort it all out.

Consequently, the best advice is if your vehicle is registered in Georgia, have the windows on the vehicle comply with the law or register your vehicle in another state.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Patients who are seen in primary care clinics such as Outpatient Clinic, Family Practice Clinic or PRIMUS, are often given a referral or consultation, to a specialty clinic.

In the past, patients would take this "consult" to the specialty clinic, leave it with the clinic staff and wait to hear from the clinic, sometimes for several weeks.

However, with Martin Care, things have changed.

Patients will be given appointments, if they are available. When they cannot be given an appointment, they will leave the consult, as in the past, with the important difference being the new consultation tracking procedures instituted by Col. Herbert E. Segal, commander, Martin Army Community Hospital.

Segal has stressed MACH's commitment to informing patients, in a reasonable amount of time, whether or not they can be seen at MACH or should seek care in a civilian community.

To achieve this goal, he had Capt. John Wynn, chief, Specialty Care Support Branch and Sue Jones, supervisor, Patient Appointment System, develop this tracking process and added a full time clerk, Gevonie Brown, to manage the program.

Her function is to track these consults and ensure that patients are kept informed.

This program ensures that, when consults are left in specialty clinics, they are reviewed by a health care provider and a decision is made within two days as to whether the patient can be seen in the clinic, should be referred to another clinic or informed that they must find a provider outside of the military system.

Patients who can be seen will be given an appointment either by telephone or by postcard.

The consults of patients being referred elsewhere will be returned to the consult clerk, who either refers to another clinic or informs patients to use their CHAMPUS benefits.

Patients who are being referred to other military treatment facilities or to CHAMPUS will be notified by a Consult Acknowledgment Card of the status of their consult. The HCP who requested the consultation will also be notified of the outcome.

The consult clerk also receives all completed consults on patients who have been seen in the speciality clinics to ensure that the referring physician is informed of the outcome and to ensure the clinic's compliance with the commander's program.

Brown processes about 500 such consults each month.

Segal's program was printed in the September/October issue of Physician Executive Journal as an innovative approach to continuity of care.

The change has been well received by patients and Wynn said that six other military medical facilities have contacted MACH in an attempt to introduce a similar system in their hospitals.

If you have turned in a consultation to one of the speciality clinics, whether from MACH or from PRIMUS, and wish to know the status of that consult, call Brown at 544-4356.

Pfc. William Kelly (r) and Spec. Michael Eubank visit with their team leader, Sgt. David Reeves, at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Wounded ranger returns to Benning

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

After 24 hours in Panama and three weeks in the hospital at San Antonio, Texas, a team leader from Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, finally made it home.

Sgt. David Reeves was flown here last week, and, although he missed the welcome home ceremony, his platoon didn't forget him.

Members of the platoon conducted their own ceremony by holding a formation at Lawson Army Airfield.

"It was a big surprise to see them waiting for me at the airfield," Reeves said. "I really didn't expect them to be there, but I'm sure glad they were."

The welcome didn't stop there. There's been a steady stream of visitors flowing through his room at Martin Army Community Hospital since his return.

Reeves is there to continue his recovery from wounds received during Operation Just Cause.

He was shot in the shoulder and chest when he and members of his team were clearing rooms in the Torrijos International Airport.

Pfc. William Kelley and Spec. Michael Eubank, members of his team, were with Reeves when he was shot.

Kelley and Eubank said they weren't going to let him die in Panama.

They retrieved him from the room where he was shot. Kelley gave first aid before the medics relieved him.

"I remember clearing the area around the wounds and going through the sequence in my mind at the same time," Kelley said. "I wanted to make sure I did everything right."

That was the last time the men saw their team leader before he arrived at Benning Jan. 11.

However, it wasn't the last time the men stopped wondering about each other.

"I was worried about them, but I was confident of their abilities," Reeves said. "As their team leader, I'm sure it would have been best if I was there, but I knew they could handle themselves."

> "I sensed they were okay then, but I still didn't know for sure until they called me. Just hearing their voices made me feel so much better.
>
> — Sgt. David Reeves

Reeves said he did receive a scare when he was in intensive care, shortly after his arrival in Texas.

"My mother told me that someone else in my company was in intensive care, which made me wonder what they had gotten into after I was carried out," he said. "There was really no way for me to find out."

The only answers he received were from visitors, and, he said, those were pretty sketchy.

Relief came when he found out Noriega was in the Vatican's Embassy.

"I sensed they were okay then, but I still didn't know for sure until they called me when they got back to Benning," he said.

He said that was the happiest moment of his stay in Texas.

"Just hearing their voices made me feel so much better," he said.

One of Reeve's visitors while in Texas was President George Bush.

Coming back to Benning, however, has been his best medicine.

Not only is he with his soldiers, but the Woodstock, Ga., native is really home.

Woman commander recalls action in Panama

By Don Dees
Army News Service

For Capt. Linda Bray, commander of the 988th Military Police Company, Operation Just Cause started Dec. 19.

That's when she and commanders of other MP companies attached to the 519th MP Battalion from Fort Meade, Md., learned of their involvement in the strike, which led to the collapse of Manuel Noriega's regime.

Bray was given her objective by Lt. Col. Michael Shanahan, commander of the 519th.

The objective of the 988th MP Company was to neutralize the Panamanian Defense Forces' canine unit's barracks in Panama City.

Bray turned to her top noncommissioned officer for support.

1st Sgt. Hubert Ijames is a Vietnam veteran whose combat experience Bray said "had a calming effect on me and all of my soldiers."

After meeting for a second time that day with the battalion commander, Bray briefed first her platoon leaders, then her soldiers, and then set about executing the plan.

Assault units of Bray's company rolled from their base camp at Harvest Bare and into the Curundu Elementary School area.

From the school, the MP Company moved into position to prepare for the 1 a.m. "H-hour" strike.

When the time was right Pfc. Paul Badillo, a Spanish-speaking MP from Bray's company, told the occupants of the canine unit's barracks they had 30 seconds to surrender.

Bray said lights in the building came on and went off.

She was told of the response over her radio, which she was manning from the tactical operations center.

From there, she ordered that a warning shot be fired. The response to the single round was the same as to the verbal warning.

> "I don't think (armed conflict) is something that people want. I know I don't want it, but in defending yourself you'll do whatever it takes."
>
> — Capt. Linda Bray

Then Bray ordered M-60 fire to the side of the building, away from any personnel inside the complex.

That was it for the PDF inside, she said. According to Bray, her company then was fired upon.

As the barrage continued, the same Spanish-speaking soldier who had warned the buildings' occupants to surrender was now running a bluff.

He shouted to his adversaries, "We have artillery!"

Now the PDF, which had moments before confidently fired upon the MPs, were retreating to the wood line.

Bray heard reports over the radio that some PDF were escaping the compound.

Bray recalled, "It was really dark, and I knew my people wouldn't be able to spot them running into the woods at night."

Bray said she was frustrated that the PDF were getting away and decided to take the situation under control herself.

She had her driver take her closer to the building. Then she used the cover of the existing vehicles to make her way even closer.

The vehicles did not provide cover all the way up, so she used cover provided by a ditch to get closer to the building.

Bray used the illumination flares she had brought from the tactical operations center to provide enough light to find the fleeing PDF.

The light didn't reveal the PDF positions, but Bray did realize the fire now was coming from the wood line, not the building.

She sent teams to clear areas at the rear of the building and sent a team in to secure the front of the building.

When the building had been secured, Bray and her company found several weapons and many useful intelligence items.

At daylight, Bray and her soldiers were told they could pull back a little bit as the area was fairly secure.

Just as Bray was working that out, one of her soldiers, Pfc. Christina Cabido (Proctor) captured a PDF who attempted to return to check on the dogs.

"I'll probably never know how many people were in that building." But she did have a pretty good idea of where they had gone.

"The whole next day," Bray said, "We were getting some sniper fire from a hilltop near the kennels." Bray said she knew they were up there.

Her suspicions as to who those snipers were did not receive confirmation until several days later when she returned to the site.

"I talked to an MP dog handler who said the first sergeant from the unit in the building that night was around; he introduced us."

"At first," she said, "he was surprised there were women involved."

Bray said that through an interpreter, the first sergeant asked her if she had really been there.

Bray's response: "I'm the one who gave them the order to open fire."

The former PDF first sergeant was processed as a detainee after the operation and has since been repatriated and is serving in the newly-formed Panama Security Force.

He wished Bray the best of luck, and she said she extended her wishes for his success.

Regarding armed conflict, Bray said, "I don't think it's something that people want. I know I don't want it, but in defending yourself you'll do whatever it takes."

From her recent experiences in Panama, Bray said she has learned the value of the training she has received and administered.

She admitted that if it were ever to happen again that if she would lead troops into a similar situation, she would feel more confident.

That's important, she said, because in a hot situation, "you don't have time to think; it has to be a natural reaction."

Dees is one of a pool of journalists covering Operation Just Cause for U.S. Army, South, headquartered in Panama.

Artist-in-residence visits Patch School

Fort Benning Schools

Visual Artist Gregor Turk will spend three weeks as an artist-in-residence at Patch Elementary School.

The program is sponsored by the Fort Benning School District, Georgia Council for the Arts' Artist-in-Education Program and the National Endowment for the Arts.

In residence from Jan. 22 to Feb. 9, Turk will introduce the students to ceramics.

"Clay is just a medium," he said. "It can be manipulated into a broad range of things — from functional pottery to sculpture."

Turk said he looks forward to his residency at Patch, adding that "kindergarten students and first-graders are an exciting group with which to work.

"They are prone to be more on their own and less concerned with what others in the group are doing. This results in diverse and creative work."

Turk received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Rhodes College in Memphis, Tenn., and his Master's of Fine Arts from Boston University.

Between degrees, Turk served as a Peace Corps volunteer for two years in Liberia, West Africa.

He brings a wide range of teaching experience to the students at Patch, having instructed on the kindergarten through fifth-grade levels, as well as the collegiate level.

Turk has exhibited his work in New England and Georgia and has completed several commissions throughout the South.

Exchange program seeks families to host foreign high school students

International Education Forum

The International Education Forum, a U.S. Information Agency Department-designated high school exchange program, is seeking families in Fort Benning and Muscogee County to host foreign high school students for the 1990-91 school year.

IEF brings qualified exchange students from Europe and Asia, for a 10-month school year. We also have a few European students for three-month or five-month high school programs.

A unique feature of the IEF program is that host families can choose from different nationalities and ages from 14 to 18, boy or girl.

Upon registering, students complete a detailed application from which a profile is drawn.

This is available to aid in selecting a student whose lifestyle and interests are compatible with the host family.

All students have been thoroughly screened and tested during the application process and all have good academic skills and sufficient English to function in an English-speaking family, community and high school setting.

All students bring ample spending money for personal needs and have full medical coverage.

Host families are asked only to provide room, board and the enthusiasm to share their lifestyle with a teen-age visitor from abroad.

American families with small children, grown children, teenagers, as well as those with no children at all, and single parents are welcome to participate in the program.

An IEF coordinator will assist in the matching process of the host family and student. He matches the family's and student's interests, hobbies and activities and act as a local contact during the year for any problems or questions.

The organization also has state, regional and national coordinators available to work with the local coordinator, family and students.

IEF has a one-month summer program to France or Spain, available for 13- to 18-year-old American high school students, leaving the United States in July 1990.

The IEF is a non-profit Educational Foundation, operating under the auspices of the U.S. Information Agency, with its headquarters in Danville, Calif.

For more information, write to Steven Morris, 1913 18th Ave., Columbus, Ga., 31901 or call (404) 327-7967.

Blood is a year-round need

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

January is National Volunteer Blood Donor Month. The Armed Services Blood Program is joining forces with the American Blood Commission, the American Red Cross and other civilian blood agencies to remind everyone that blood is a year-round need.

"In peacetime, the armed forces need more than 300,000 units of blood a year to provide quality blood products to more than 200 military treatment facilities worldwide. In a war, we'll need more than 10,000 units a day," said Army Col. Anthony Polk, director of the Armed Services Blood Program Office.

That office coordinates the military blood program.

This year, Polk said, the need is especially great because the military is collecting about 250,000 extra units over the next five years for frozen blood storage.

That means they'll need 45,000 units above the normal 200,000 units required for military hospitals.

The frozen blood will be prepositioned for use in case of war or civilian emergency, adding greatly to medical readiness.

For instance, Polk said, prepositioned frozen blood was used in relief efforts following the recent San Francisco earthquake disaster.

He said frozen blood is usable up to 21 years later, an advantage over the 35-day shelf life of normally stored red blood cells.

According to figures given to Polk by the American Blood Commission, only five percent of the American people give blood regularly.

The 12 million units of blood collected in the United States every year come from the same people.

It is medically safe to do that — as President George Bush pointed out in a message urging the American people to give blood, "Most adults can give blood as frequently as every eight weeks."

Bush said that if you give blood, "You will have the great satisfaction of knowing that you have chosen one of the most selfless ways to help another human being — someone whose very life may depend on your decision."

According to Polk, anyone can give blood who is in good health, weighs at least 100 pounds and is over 17 years old.

There is no risk of getting AIDS or any other disease from being a donor.

Blood is drawn using sterile, disposable needles and connecting tubes.

To ensure the safety of blood donors, the Food and Drug Administration regulates the manufacture of blood-collecting materials as well as the operation of all blood donation centers.

Each unit of blood is tested for HIV (the virus that causes AIDS), HTLV-I (another virus), hepatitis non A, hepatitis B and some sexually-transmitted diseases such as syphilis.

Reasons for not giving blood include: pregnancy, colds, use of self-injected drugs, malaria, diabetes, epilepsy, heart trouble, extremely low blood pressure, cancer, hepatitis and major dental work within the last 72 hours.

The Navy Blood Program provided the following "lousy" reasons for not giving blood:

● "I don't have any blood to spare." If you are reasonably healthy, you've got 10 to 12 pints in your body, enough to give every eight weeks.

● "My blood isn't the right type." Every type of blood is needed.

● "They'll take too much and I'll feel weak." The amount taken is less than one pint. Your blood volume will be replaced in a few hours. Most people continue their normal activities after donating.

● "I'm too busy." Positively the lousiest excuse ever invented.

If you are interested in giving blood, there will be a blood drive Wednesday, at Building 3105 in classroom 22 from 8 a.m. to noon.

Another blood drive is scheduled for Jan. 31, at HQ, 29th Infantry Regiment, building 5500, from 8 a.m. to noon.

Dentist explains crowns

By John Heimke
Fort Benning Dentac

"Doctor, I want my teeth capped; I want a Hollywood smile."

These are common requests dentists receive from patients. But, what is a cap?

In dentistry it's called a crown. A crown is an artificial covering that replaces the structure, function and shape of the old tooth or improves its look. The crown acts to protect the remaining tooth.

However, crowning is the last resort for a tooth. To have a crown, the tooth structure must be reduced, and this is permanent.

The replacement materials are either porcelain, porcelain bonded to metal or all metal, usually a type of dental gold.

Treatment time is usually two to three appointments, each lasting as long as two hours.

The average life span of a crown is from five to 15 years, but this is directly proportional to three basic things: fracture or breakage of the crown, gum tissue problems (Periodontal disease) or tooth decay.

The success of the crown depends not only on the skill of the dentist but, just as importantly, on the patient keeping the tooth healthy through brushing, flossing and getting regular dental checkups.

In the end, the crown is only as good as the tooth underneath it.

Crowns can be single, covering one tooth, or made in multiples as in fixed bridge work, in which case they replace missing teeth.

They can cover stained teeth, close gaps between teeth, be shaped to improve the look of tilted teeth and improve the bite. Crowns have the longest life of any dental restoration.

If you are interested in crowns, or if your dentists recommends them, feel free to ask questions.

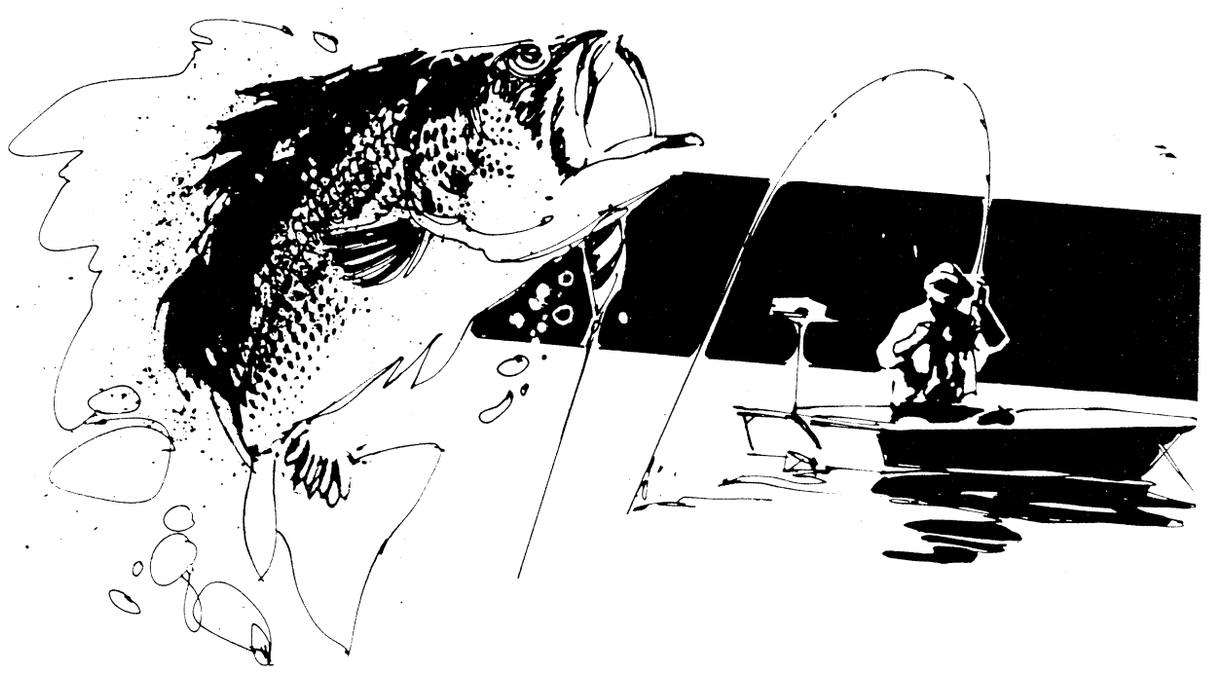
Spinnerbaits will catch winter bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
1988 Outboard Marine Corp.



Everyone thinks of spinnerbaits as warm-water lures for bass in shallow water, but they'll catch bass in deep, cold water, too.

"All you need to do is use a heavier model with a single, large blade," explained bass tournament pro David Wharton, "and work the lure very slowly in deep water."

Wharton, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff and a former guide on Lake Sam Rayburn, Texas, used the lure often when he took clients out for winter largemouths.

Anglers like spinnerbaits in winter because they have faith and confidence in them.

"A big spinnerbait, particularly one that weighs about three-quarters of an ounce and has a single, size seven blade, is a big bass lure, too," Wharton explained. "I know of a number of 10-pound bass caught on spinnerbaits in winter."

Blade size is really important in spinnerbaits, said Wharton, because the blade is what produces the lure's vibration and flash.

The larger the blade, the harder the vibration and brighter the flash.

"I like to try to match blade size to the approximate size of baitfish in the water," Wharton said. "In fall and winter, I like larger blades because the bait is larger. In summer, I use smaller blades because the bait is smaller."

Blade sizes for spinnerbaits range from size one, which is about the size of a small fingernail, to size eight, which is as big as a half dollar.

"Flash is important, too," said the Texas angler, "because it is what gives the lure its baitfish-like appearance as it moves through the water.

"I use silver blades in clear water, gold blades in stained water and copper blades in muddy water.

"Years ago, many of the spinnerbait manufacturers offered painted blades for spinnerbaits.

"I caught a lot of fish on blades painted chartreuse or white, but not many anglers use painted blades anymore.

"I think it was more like a fad that we've just grown away from, but they did catch fish."

Wintertime spinnerbaiting should be along channel drops, deep riprap or the edges of heavy cover, said Wharton.

It's important to move the lure very slowly because the fish won't chase the lure very far.

"You can even crawl the spinnerbait along the bottom the way you fish a worm or jig," said Wharton.

"Make certain the lure you use has its blade attached to a ball bearing swivel so it spins easily. Whenever you feel the blade stop spinning, you can probably set the hook."

Wharton knows of instances where winter bass picked up spinnerbaits lying motionless on the bottom.

"A client may have made a cast and had a backlash or turned to get a cup of coffee," said Wharton. "By the time he started to reel again, a bass had taken the lure."

SPIRITUAL

Chaplain reflects upon power of faith, heaven

By Chap. Glenn Bloomstrom
3rd Ranger Battalion Chaplain

Somehow, the ponderance of heaven is not a great concern to young, vigorous and physically-fit rangers.

Many of us experienced in our youth the struggle to achieve all of the goals we set for ourselves.

Young people often see themselves as indestructible. Even I didn't take much time out to confront the possibility of war or death in combat.

Only a few days prior to Operation Just Cause, I told a new ranger "Peace is breaking out all over, it seems."

I told him, "Stick it out in the rangers. You will learn many things about yourself."

I then found myself giving communion to shivering, blanket-draped rangers at Lawson Army Airfield before the planes took off.

There was a special sort of reverence and reflection of faith in their faces as they passed by me. They were rain-drenched and presented themselves humbly.

I read the 46th Psalm as part of the service.

Verse 10 stuck in my mind with intensity: "Be still and know that I am God; I will be exalted among the nations, I will be exalted in the earth."

"Be still . . . be still . . . be still." The words continued to echo in my thoughts.

I remembered the first time an old saint taught me to repeat those words three times — each time a little slower and with more emphasis.

His name was Dr. Widen, a steady man who often spoke joyfully of heaven. He told me that the bottom line was that God is God.

He is in control. We should be still and simply depend on him.

Widen gave me this simple advice as he lay on a hospital bed with leukemia.

I thought of him as they closed the doors of the C-130, and I thought about the reality of heaven.

Things got quieter after the doors of the aircraft were closed. The hum and rumble of the engines became the background noise as I looked around at the mass of men jammed together.

Only the faces of the rangers stood out from the uniforms, equipment and parachutes.

Our eyes would meet; and I would smile, put my hands together in symbolic prayer and then give them thumbs up.

I would always get two or three thumbs in return, along with smiles.

"Lord, you love these rangers. Cover them with your wings and be their shield," I prayed.

Fear gripped me, as well. What if I died? I didn't want to leave my family now . . .

"Lord, I know you could take care of them," I whispered to myself.

Our families are close-knit and would provide the love they needed.

"What would it be like to die?" I pondered. A scream — a stunning blow and then. . . ?

According to the Bible, Jesus said to the thief on the cross, "Today you will be with me in paradise."

"Be still . . . be still . . . be still."

Paul described heaven in 1st Corinthians as "inexpressible." Heaven is so wonderful that it defies description.

For the first time in my life, my belief in the reality of heaven gave me a deep source of hope and peace, even joy.

As we rolled down the runway in the mighty C-130s, I felt that all the power, youth and families of our nation were now represented in their sons.

Some of us would experience heaven that day, but most of us would live to tell others about the reality and power of faith.

"Be still . . . be still . . . be still and know that I am God."

Book offers courage

By Penny Barfield
Religious Education Center Library

The Religious Education Center Library has received a new book entitled "More Than You Dare To Ask, The First Year of Living with Cancer." It is co-authored by Mac N. and Anne Shaw Turnage.

Turnage underwent surgery for removal of a malignant tumor in January 1973. This is the story of their first year of living and dealing with her cancer.

For cancer patients and those who minister to them, this book is a strikingly honest record of courage, inspiration and faith.

Historic celebration takes timely steps

By Chap. Ben Morrow
USAIC Chaplain's Office

The late Dr. Carter Godwin Woodson, director of the Association for the Study of Negro Life and History, launched the celebration of what was then known as Negro History Week in 1926.

This was a week devoted to public exercise emphasizing the facts of history influenced by Blacks.

This was a timely step and the public responded warmly to the proclamation of this observance.

The effort was widely supported by schools, churches and clubs among Blacks, and the movement gradually found support among institutions and other races in America and abroad.

In 1976, the association expanded the week's celebration to include the entire month to provide more time for programs, observances and celebrations for America's Bicentennial Celebration.

January is Black History Month, and in it we celebrate the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

The many efforts of Woodson and many other men and women in history are brought to our attention for study, reflection and inspiration.

Chaplain gives service in MOPP gear

By Chap. Dennis Krumlauf
2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry

Services at Fort Benning are held in many places, under many circumstances.

Soldiers are busy with training in all sorts of environments — including chemical.

As chaplain of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, I was with the soldiers of Company E, 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry recently.

Chaplains must be prepared to provide worship services anywhere, at anytime.

I had never experienced giving a service with my face covered with a protective mask.

The service was held while soldiers were in full MOPP gear.

Although I knew I needed to project my voice more loudly than usual for the sermon, I was surprised at how the soldiers seemed to hear and understand me.

It is always stressed to us that we must train physically and mentally for our jobs as soldiers, but this service provided something very special for me as I learned a little more about spiritual training.

Songs were muffled but carried the same familiar melodies that many of the soldiers had grown up with.

Our prayers for peace were humble and spoken through thick masks, yet we were sure they were heard best of all.

Deaf actors sought

Springer Opera House

Springer Guest Director Mary Wooten MacMillan will be looking for a very special cast for the Springer Children's Theatre's upcoming production of "Mother Hicks," scheduled to open March 2.

The play, written by Susan Zeder, calls for a young boy or man who communicates in American sign language.

The boy, Tuc, is a deaf-mute who has a unique relationship with Mother Hicks, a mysterious recluse accused by the nearby residents of Ware, Ill., of being a witch.

The young actor who plays Tuc should be proficient in sign language and MacMillan will consider both hearing and non-hearing actors.

"I would love to have a deaf actor in the role of Tuc, if at all possible," MacMillan said. "That would provide us with an insight into the character that I believe will be valuable to us."

The director also noted the actress who plays Mother Hicks will also need to know sign language or be able to learn it.

In addition, MacMillan will be looking for six other males and females, age 12 to adult, to play the other characters in "Mother Hicks."

Auditions for "Mother Hicks" will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Monday at 7:30 p.m., in the Springer Studio Theatre.

For more information on auditions, call Production Coordinator Rick Todd at (404) 324-1100.

POST BRIEFS

Texas, Illinois residents must register to vote

Texans will go to the polls March 13 for their state primary election with a general election following Nov. 6.

Members of the U.S. Armed Forces may register temporarily and apply for ballots for all elections in a calendar year by submitting a completed Federal Post Card Application any time during the calendar year.

Illinois will have its state primary election March 20.

Illinois waives registration for U.S. service member (defined as U.S. Armed Forces or Merchant Marine Members, their spouses and family members).

Illinois residents temporarily residing outside the U.S. must register absentee to vote a full ballot.

A completed Federal Post Card Application must be submitted to the local election authority no later than 30 days before the election.

Voters may call Autovon 223-6500 or Commercial (202) 693-6500 for more information.

The Voting Information Center can receive calls and questions 24 hours a day.

The voting point of contact at Fort Benning is your unit's voting assistance officer or Capt. Robin Jones, AG Personnel Plans and Actions, 545-3881.

Military voting information available by phone

Military voters can use the Voting Information Center by phoning Autovon 223-6500 or Commercial (202) 693-6500.

They will hear news and information concerning the next scheduled election, or they may talk with their Service Voting Action Officer. The Center is open 24 hours a day.

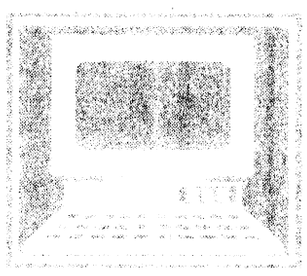
Within the next 30 days, the Voting Information Center will carry messages by U.S. congressmen, U.S. senators and governors and callers may leave messages for these officeholders. The Center will provide an audio newsletter service for congressmen, senators, and governors. About 60 days before scheduled elections, the incumbent's messages will be replaced with candidate messages.

Primary elections begin in March '90. For more information or to leave a message for your congressman, senator or governor, call the Voting Information Center.

The point of contact at Fort Benning is your Unit Voting Assistance Officer or Capt. Robin Jones, AG Personnel Plans and Actions, 545-3881.

Auction slated Thursday

The Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office will conduct an auction of government surplus property Thursday at 9 a.m., in Building 326 on 10th Mountain Division Road.



The auction is open to the public and will include such items as military clothing, household furniture, appliances, office machines, vehicular parts and ammo boxes.

Premier Soviet band performs at Benning

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The premier band from the Soviet Union played before a capacity audience in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium, Jan. 21.

The First Independent Orchestra of the Ministry of Defense of the U.S.S.R., on a brief, two-week tour of the east coast, performed at Fort Benning as part of a two-year program of U.S.-Soviet military contact activities.

Rushed and behind schedule, the band still managed to put on a show that drew numerous standing ovations from the crowd.

"They (the Soviet band) were impressed with the reaction of the audience and appreciated the overall response," said 1st Sgt. Joe Bates, NCOIC for Fort Benning's own 283rd Army Band.

Bates provided his own expert insight on the inner workings of the visit and the show. He gave them high marks in virtually every area.

"The show itself was excellent. The balance of the band was such that it didn't matter where you sat, although Marshall Auditorium is acoustically sound, anyway," he said.

"They were technically superior, par with our own U.S. Army Field Band in Washington, or the Marine Band," Bates said.

"It was noteworthy that they played American jazz very much the way we would, far better than most European bands," he said.

"The female soloist (Marina Yanisova) was of outstanding opera quality, definitely a superior voice. She did very well in holding the audience," he said.

Bates had similar praise for the male vocalist featured during the show, Vladislav Konnov.

The vocalists and a female harpist were the only three members of the group that were contracted rather than being actual military bandsmen.

As far as the performance quality of the group, Bates left no doubt that they met the highest standards.

"From talking with many of the players, I found that most of them have extensive conservatory training, which is comparable to performance degrees from our own universities.

On a personal note, Bates and his bandsmen were escorts for the Soviet band members throughout their stay on post, including all meals. They formed many personal friendships, as well, Bates said.

> "They were technically superior, par with our own U.S. Army Field Band in Washington, or the Marine Band."
>
> — 1st Sgt. Joe Bates

"They were very, very friendly. There were many personal invitations extended to my men whenever they should chance to be in Moscow," said Bates.

Before the band left Jan. 22, there was the standard trading of native military paraphernalia and garb.

"Uniform items were being traded right and left," said Bates, "everything from ribbons and marksmanship badges right down to a couple of Soviet Army military caps.

The band went on to Fort McPherson for a show on the same day.

The Fort Benning show and others like it were agreed to and publicly announced on July 1988, by the former chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Admiral William J. Crowe Jr., U.S. Navy, and the Marshall of the U.S.S.R., Sergei F. Akhromeyev.

School of Americas

A guest instructor from Colombia assigned to the U.S. Army School of the Americas was awarded the School's Distinguished Instructor award for the first quarter of fiscal year 1990 for his outstanding work in the classroom.

Sgt. Maj. Campo E. Cachaya, a veteran with 22 years of service, has served as an instructor for the School's Department of Tactics since January 1989.

"It gives me great personal satisfaction to win the award," Cachaya said, "especially since the competition is among my peers, all of whom are very professional."

Cachaya uses his experience and knowledge of both Colombian and U.S. doctrine to instruct soldiers in infantry and air mobile operations.

"I teach U.S. doctrine to the soldiers of the different Latin American armies," Cachaya said.

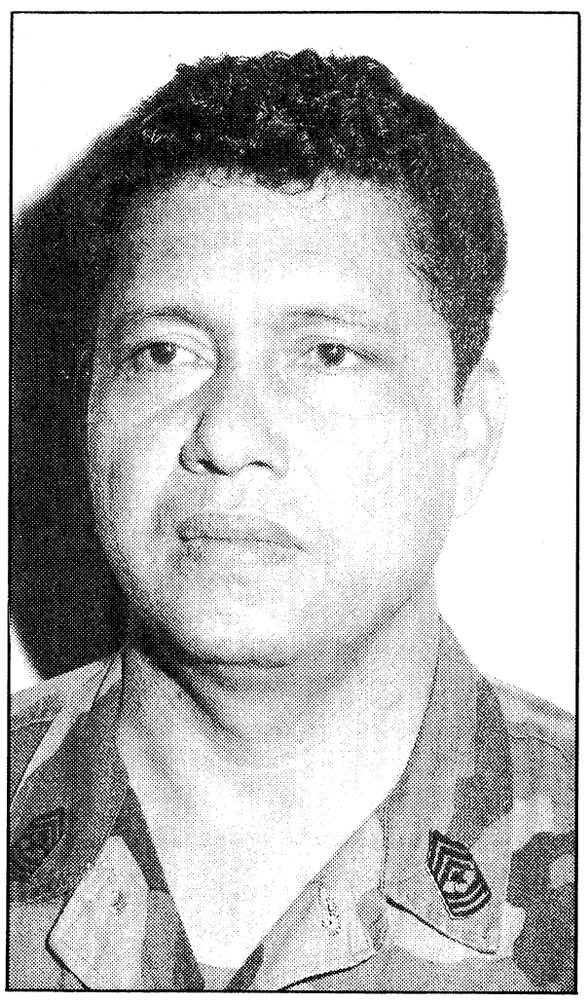
"Because of this type of training, the U.S. and Latin American armies could be combined to a multi-national task force that has a better understanding of how each Army works."

Cachaya, who will be leaving this month to return to Colombia, said he is proud to be returning with such a "prestigious award in hand."

"Everything I learned and experienced, while at the school, I will pass on to my peers in Colombia," Cachaya said.

The Distinguished Instructor award program, which began in fiscal year 1988, recognizes an instructor for his outstanding work each quarter.

During the fourth quarter, the Instructor of the Year is chosen from among the year's quarterly winners.



Sgt. Maj. Campo E. Cachaya

The winner is then eligible to compete for the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command's National Instructor of the Year award.

Short-term test done; DEH says levels low

By Alice Howard
Environmental Management Branch

The short-term results of radon testing done in Fort Benning's schools, medical, dental and day care facilities are in.

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing said the results are low, and the detectors placed in family housing, barracks and billets will be left in place until May.

This will provide an accurate long-term average concentration of structures tested.

The Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, Environmental Office have recommended the longer test period for other structures due to the low concentrations found at Fort Benning in the initial survey.

Radon is a radioactive gas, which occurs in nature as a decay product of uranium.

The radon survey at Fort Benning used the alpha track monitors to measure this gas, which cannot be seen, smelled or tasted.

The detectors were placed by Fire Department personnel coordinated with the DEH, Environmental Management Branch and Preventive Medicine.

If your detector in family housing or the barracks has fallen from the wall, please tape it back up in the approximate original location.

If you have any questions concerning the radon survey, contact the DEH, Environmental Management Branch at 545-4766/4957 or Preventive Medicine at 545-3577/3518.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What do you think of the Soviet Union, United States band exchange program?

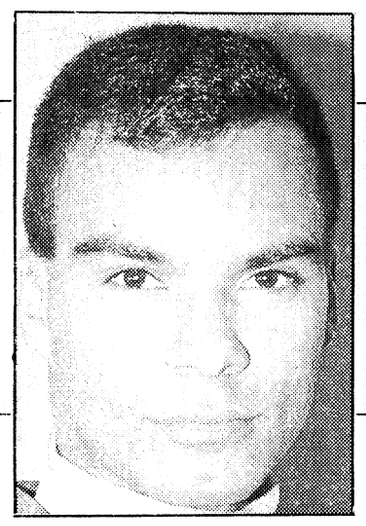
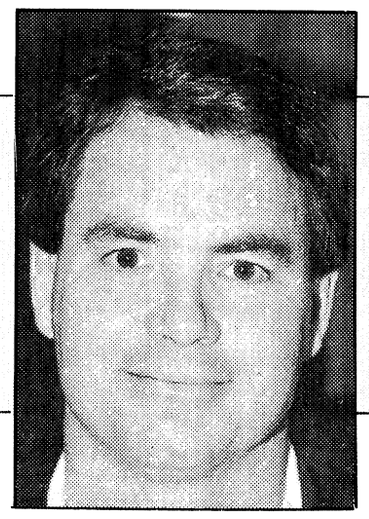
2nd Lt. Ken Pinkela, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think the exchange program is great. It's a very basic way for the two countries to share something with each other."

Sgt. Wade Shell, HQ Co., 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think it's good, however, I think we need to always remember who we're dealing with."



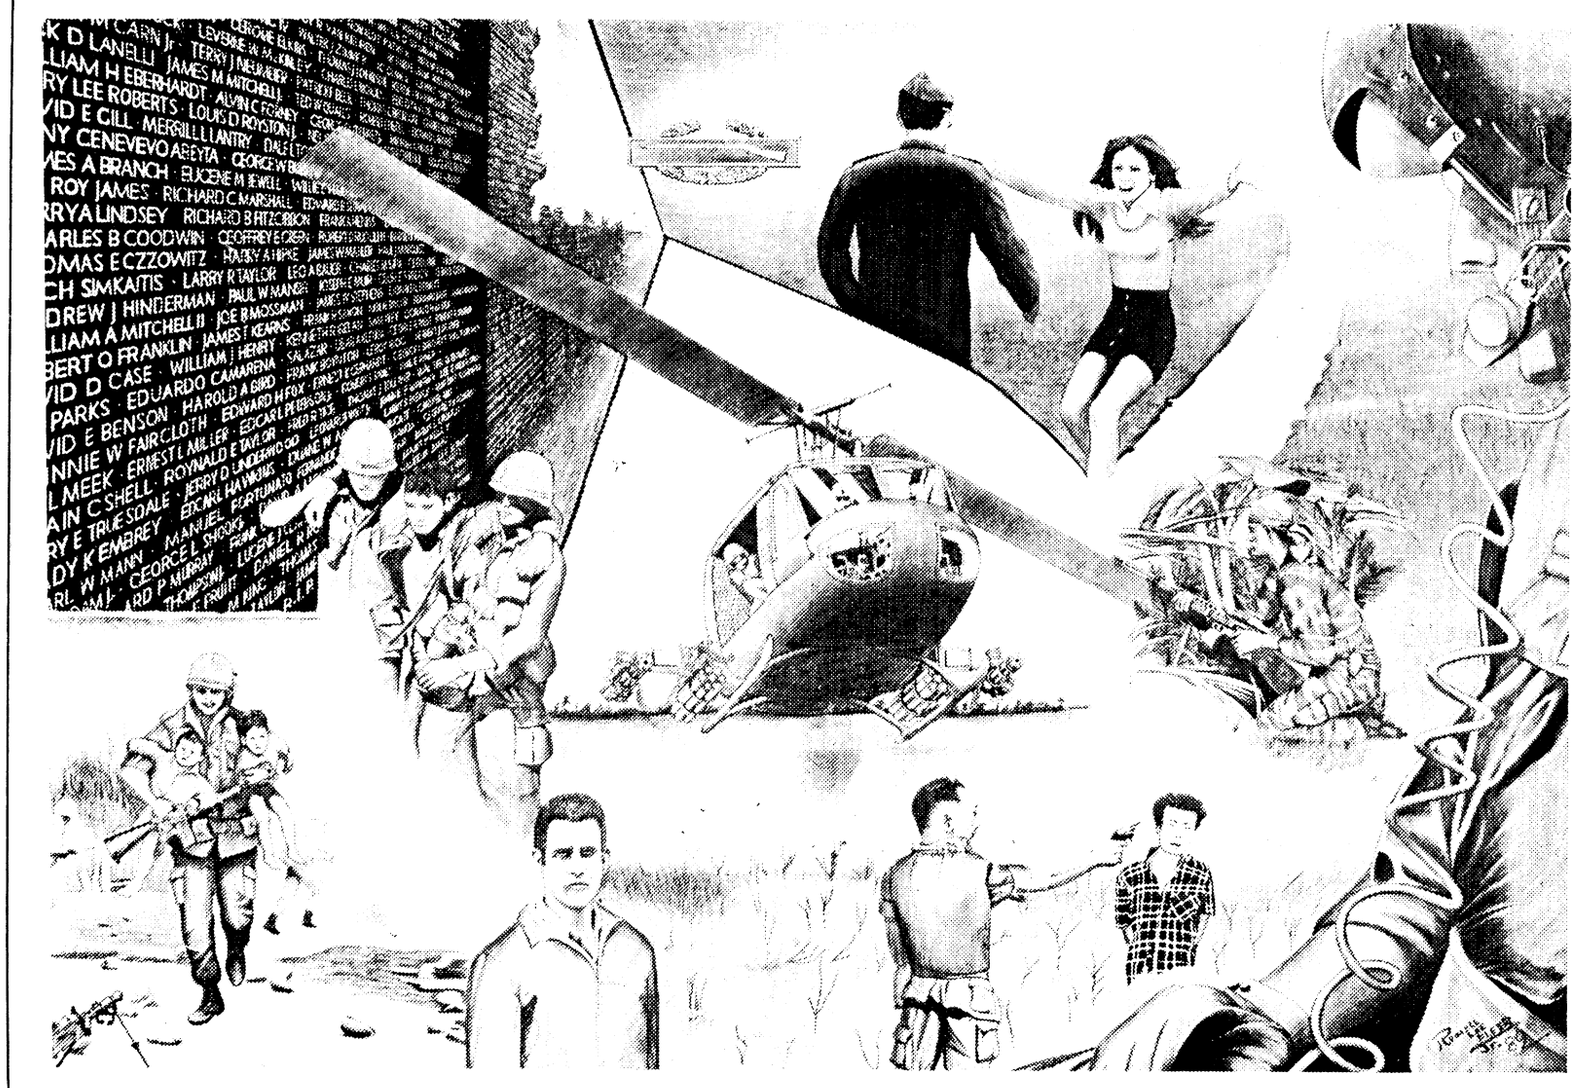
Pvt. John Padilla, HHC, 1st Bn., 507th PIR — "I think it's a great program. I think both bands will benefit from it."



Mike Brazile, Columbus resident — "I think it's very significant, especially in light of what is happening in the Eastern Block countries. I think it's great for relations between the two countries."

Chap. (Capt.) Ed Bowen, HQ Co., 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "This shows that music has no boundaries. I think that's great."

Trish Stanley, family member — "I think it's fantastic. It allows each of the countries to learn something about the other, and it promotes peace."



Artist puts his all into emotional subject

When I started this drawing I didn't expect to end up with the piece of work that I now have.

It was as if the picture was already finished, all I had to do was fill in the blanks.

I've never had that, or felt that, from anything else I've ever done. Many times I tried to put it away, to do it at a more opportune time, but couldn't. For whatever reasons, it became an obsession.

I believe in this work. More so than anything else that I have ever done, or will do.

I don't think any other print will ever again pull my emotions into it like this one did.

I hope the feeling and emotion I put into this work is returned through it in the same way.

In the five months, 650 plus hours I worked, I sacrificed a lot, but the true sacrifice wasn't mine.

The real sacrifice was by the men and women who fought and died in Vietnam, and those who were left behind.

One of my primary concerns is that I portrayed Vietnam in a compassionate and considerate way to the men and women who fought.

To a select group of people, I know the images are probably still very painful. For those people, I hope I have portrayed those images in a positive way.

From the start, that has been my primary concern. I hope that I have done at least that.

Snively tackles Soviet assignment

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Snively, what are you writing about this week?" Ms. Editor asked bright and early Monday while I was still taking coffee intravenously through a tube connected to the pot.

Caught unaware and with cobwebs still lining my brain, the only thing I could tell her was the truth — "I don't know."

"Great," she said. "You can write about the Soviet Band concert."

"I'd like to," I said, "but I'm not the man for the job.

"I know nothing about bands or music. Why I couldn't tell the difference between an oboe and an obelisk.

"I wouldn't know a tuba if I was sitting in one. I couldn't recognize a trombone if one hit me in the ear."

"Snively," she said. "Did you go to the concert?"

"Yes," I said.

"Then you can write about it."

"But Airborne Annie, Ranger John and Combat Shawn were all there, too. In fact, it looked like The Bayonet squad in the attack as they kept darting forward and firing off flashes with their cameras," I said, trying one last ditch effort.

"Read my lips, Clyde," Ms. Editor said between very tight lips, "the job is yours."

I got the message.

Left with no options but to write, I decided I'd better talk to someone who knew a little about music.

Wade came instantly to mind since his wife is one of those who actually pays money to attend concerts — concerts where they have violins, and the musicians wear tuxedos.

So I called him. "Wade," I said. "You gotta help me. I have to write about the band concert. Considering who you're married to, I know you know a lot about music."

"Hey, Clyde," he said, "Not true. You gotta study that stuff for years. I only know what I like."

"But what can I do?" I asked, getting desperate. "Well, you could write about the reactions. For instance, write about the way the audience greeted the band members when they first came on stage.

"I mean that was overwhelming. It was like the audience wanted to tell them, 'We love you. We want peace just like you do,'" he said.

"Deep," I said. "Tell me more."

"Hey, man, I can't write your column for you," he said, always cooperative.

"I know, but tell me something about music,'" I said.

About then I could hear a woman's voice in the background, saying things like "mention the American Jazz influence on Russian Folk arrangements," and "the Dyonesian cult with its freedom, individuality, emotional expression subjectivity and noncomformity," to which Wade muttered, "I can't tell him that."

"Sorry, Clyde," he said, resuming speaking into the phone, "but that's the extent of my help."

I was really desperate, so I turned to Large Sarge, a music aficionado if I ever met one. He still has the complete collection of Frankie Lane albums, to include one about a goose. So I called him.

"Why don't you just do comparisons," he said.

"Whadda ya mean?" I wanted to know. "Well, fer instance, you could write about how the band sounded like the big bands I used to hear as I drove across country in the middle of the night and the announcer would say, 'Direct from the Blue Room of the Roosevelt Hotel here in downtown New Orleans is Pete Fountain...'

"Or you could mention how the Soviet baritone reminded you of Vic Damone, you know, the way he played to the audience and how the woman soprano, who won the hearts and minds of the audience, was not only good, but loud, too and could sing for anyone's opera.

"By the way, Clyde, did you catch what language she was singing in?"

"Probably Operetic," I muttered, sorry I'd called him.

"You might even let the readers know how sophisticated you are by comparing the band to the Lawrence Welk band, in that sections would all stand up together to tootle off a few notes," he rushed on without a pause.

"Plus, you could mention the alto sax, trombone duet, noting how, while they put out great music, they also reminded people of the McKenzie Brothers — Canada's answer to Vern.

"You could write about the way the trumpet players would wave their instruments over their heads so we in the audience would know they were there, and how the trombone players would add some pizzaz by tilting back and firing their slides into the air on some of the jazzier pieces like the "Saber Dance."

"It might even be appropriate to mention that even though the band had a General Major and a couple of colonels in charge, they probably didn't need any of them. They proved that with their second-to-the-last piece, which they played without a conductor.

"And of course, there was the finale. Somehow I knew they would play "Be Kind to Your Web-footed Friends for a Duck may be Somebody's Mother."

(Note: Even I know the real name of that piece is 'Stars and Stripes Forever.')

I was finally able to cut him off, by agreeing that the finale was absolutely superb, that I still get goose bumps when I think about it, although I was concerned that with all the audience clapping, I might not be able to hear the triangle tinkle, or the piping of the piccolo, but fortunately, the clapping diminished just in time.

As Wade noted when I talked to him, it was a love affair.

The band members seemed to be enjoying themselves and their reception from the audience as they joined in the applause at the end, either waving their instruments overhead or clapping with one hand on the instrument.

As our Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire said afterward, they were true musical ambassadors.

Quick credit can cost more in the long run

By Shawn Lorimer
Bayonet staff writer

"Military Discount" and "Instant Credit" are just a few of the enticing offers that line sidewalks along Victory Drive.

All over town, especially in south Columbus, signs boast business practices that target military customers.

One billboard even uses military jargon. "Anything less would be a tactical error," claims the ad.

Often, businesses that sell televisions, stereos, appliances and furniture will offer quick credit with small down payments.

However, according to retired Col. David White of First Union Bank, such places can be very costly in the long run.

"The soldier should first check with the bank with which they have an account. If they have trouble with their bank, they may (be in danger of) going to a loan company with really high rates," said White.

He also said that although the prime lending rate is currently at 10 percent, many businesses in Columbus offer loans with extremely high rates.

"When you add in all the extras, the annual percentage rate in some of these places can be as high as 28 percent," said White.

With so many establishments trying to capture the attention of potential military customers, there are a lot of offers, both good and bad, from which the soldier may choose.

There are several places that offer free advice for soldiers and family members on where to spend their money.

The Better Business Bureau of West Georgia and East Alabama provides pre-purchase reports and information on local businesses.

According to the BBB, someone about to make a large purchase, such as a house, a car or furniture, may wish to consult them to see which retailers have not had reliability complaints from customers.

When a customer has a problem with a business, the best way to reach a solution is through direct communication between the customer and the merchant, according to the BBB.

The BBB also offers mediation and arbitration to resolve consumer complaints if a solution cannot be reached through direct communication.

Besides advice on where to make purchases, soldiers can also get information on how to manage their money.

Budget management and checkbook maintenance are reasons that most people go to budget counseling.

However, according to Ann Pratcher, who works in consumer affairs and financial assistance counseling, many soldiers are afraid to go to budget counseling.

Some people think they will be forced stick to a budget that's too tight, Pratcher said.

"A lot of people have the idea that they're living in a straight jacket," Pratcher said.

She pointed out that budgets are made to fit people and not the other way around. "The budget needs to be flexible," she said.

"This means that if someone sets a low spending limit but actually needs more and goes over their budget, then it (the budget) is not doing them any good."

People in debt are not the only ones who need free financial advice. Soldiers often come to Fort Benning as a first assignment or for their initial active duty training.

"Those are the soldiers we would really love to see," Pratcher said.

She explained that budget counseling, offered by the Army Community Services, is most effective when debt can be avoided.

Anyone interested in budget counseling can call Army Community Services at 545-5516.

The Better Business Bureau can be reached at 324-0707.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Sue McKeeman
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My roommate and I were in the parking lot, arguing over dating the same girl. He got so angry, he kicked in the side of my car door and broke the window.

He refuses to pay for repairs, saying my car's a heap of junk anyway. I can't afford to sue him. Is there any way to make him pay for what he did?

A. Your situation appears to fall under Article 139, UCMJ and Chapter 9, Army Regulation 27-20.

These provisions allow the Finance Office to withhold the pay of soldiers who commit certain acts and pay it directly to their victims.

You may file an Article 139 claim against a soldier who has "willfully damaged or wrongfully taken" your property.

"Willfully damage" means to intentionally — including by violent or disorderly conduct — vandalize an object.

"Wrongfully take" invoves theft, whether by larcency, forgery, embezzlement, or fraud.

You cannot file an Article 139 claim for things lost or damaged by accident, or because the soldier acted or failed to act within the scope of his job.

Visit the Claims Office, in the JAGC Office, building 5 (next to the Main Post Chapel).

Ask the receptionist for a Chapter 9 form. Fill it out carefully, and remember, you must demand a dollar figure.

If the item was damaged, use a repair estimate or bill. If it was taken, use a purchase receipt or store estimate for the same or a very similar item.

You can only claim direct costs. In your case, you could claim the price for a new door, but not the bill for renting a car until the repairs were finished. The rental car is an indirect cost.

Attach the estimates, receipts and Military Police reports to the form, and give the claim to your executive officer or commander.

You must file the claim within 90 days of the incident. Do not wait.

The only exceptions are for "good cause" — you were in the hospital for 100 days or you didn't know who the offender was until the investigation ended.

That you didn't know about Article 139 claims may not be "good cause," depending on your training, what other actions you took and the length of delay.

The Special Courts Martial Convening Authority acting on your claim determines whether you have good cause.

He will also appoint an investigating officer, who interviews the people involved, reviews the facts and recommends approval or disapproval of your claim.

If approved, Finance will send you a separate check after the offender's next pay period.

If you have other questions, contact the Claims Office at 545-2285, or the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3282.

Correction

In last week's edition of The Bayonet, 2nd Lt. Andrew Johnson, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. was quoted in "Various Voices" as saying, "He (Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.) made black people realize they were a lot more capable than they thought."

Johnson said his quote should have read, "He opened the eyes of black people to the fact they didn't have to take the oppression put on them."

Tax season begins

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The Legal Assistance Office, in charge of the Fort Benning Tax Program, has arranged for each unit to have a tax advisor.

Soldiers are required to go through their Unit Tax Advisors first with questions about filing income taxes.

The Legal Assistance Office has established a separate Tax Assistance Office located in building 5, at the corner of Sigerfoos and Vibbert.

This office opens Monday and will be open each week day from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

If a Unit Tax Advisor is not available, this office may be contacted at 545-7026 for help in simple tax matters.

Help is also available through the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

Tax advisors will be at the Main Post Mall Feb. 3, March 3 and 31, from 9:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Only Federal, Georgia and Alabama forms will be available at the Mall on those dates.

Soldiers are reminded that every person in the United States, age two or older by the end of 1989, must have a Social Security Number before that person can be claimed as a dependent on a tax return.

The Legal Assistance Office has arranged for the Social Security Office to accept applications Feb. 8 between 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. at the Main Post Chapel Annex, building 101, next to Doughboy Stadium.

The Legal Assistance Office has information and applications for those who wish to prepare the application in advance.

REENLIST
UNITED STATES ARMY

FORT BENNING

MAKE A CAREER DECISION.

This is your chance to become part of an elite team of soldiers who collect and analyze a variety of electronic transmissions as well as voice communications.

It also could afford you the opportunity to study a foreign language such as Russian, German, Korean, Arabic, Spanish or Czech.

If you're completing your tour of duty, it may be worth considering reenlistment for training in this vital area.

In conjunction with your duties, you'll be using some of the most high-tech electronic equipment available as well as employing sophisticated analysis techniques.

This field features assignments throughout the United States, and also overseas.

Interested? Come talk to me, and we'll review your qualifications. And, if you wish, bring your spouse along.

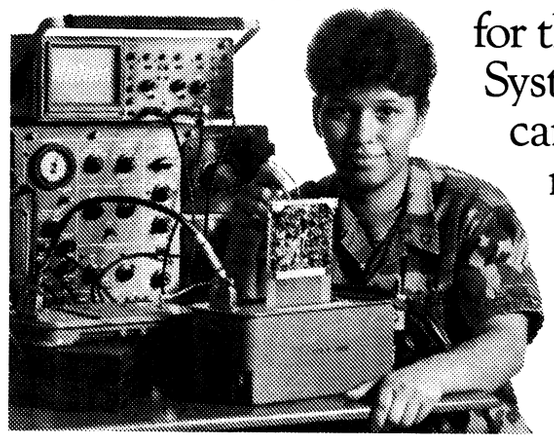
ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.® REENLIST.

NOW'S YOUR CHANCE TO LET THE ARMY KNOW WHAT YOU WANT TO DO.

1 YOU CAN CHANGE YOUR MOS. There are hundreds of new MOS's to choose from under the Army Training Reenlistment Option. Or, you may be able to reenlist with the same MOS, for airborne training.

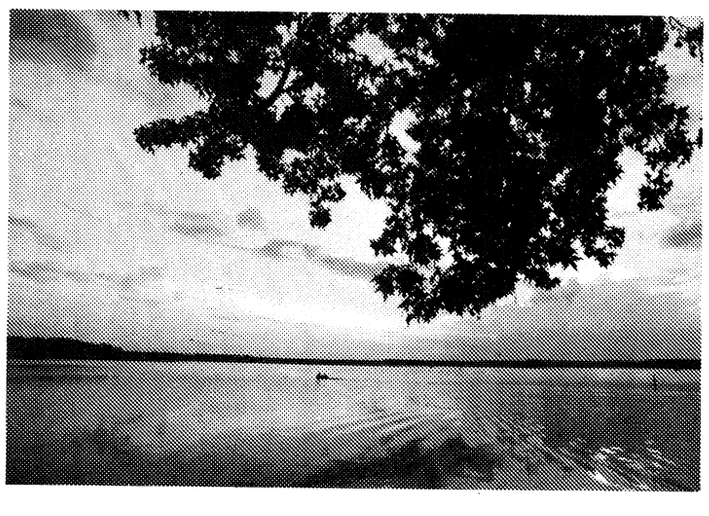


2 YOU CAN STAY WITH YOUR PRESENT REGIMENT. Under the Regiment of Choice Option, you can reenlist and stay with your present regiment, or try a different one. If you're not presently in a regiment, you may be able to get into one. This option lets you make long-range plans, because you'll know where your regiment will be located.

3 YOU CAN GO TO BERLIN. If you want to be on the front line of freedom, you may be able to reenlist under the Berlin Brigade Option. It isn't an easy duty, but it is an important one. The Berlin Brigade symbolizes our country's commitment to peace in Europe.

4 YOU CAN JOIN THE "BIG RED ONE." Under the Combat Arms Unit of Choice Option, you could reenlist to become part of the "Big Red One," or any one of a number of the Army's best units. You don't have to be in a combat unit now, and most of these units have vacancies in almost every MOS.

5 YOU CAN SEE MORE OF AMERICA. With the CONUS to CONUS Option, you can reenlist to relocate in a different part of the United States. Naturally, it all depends on whether your MOS is needed at your desired location.

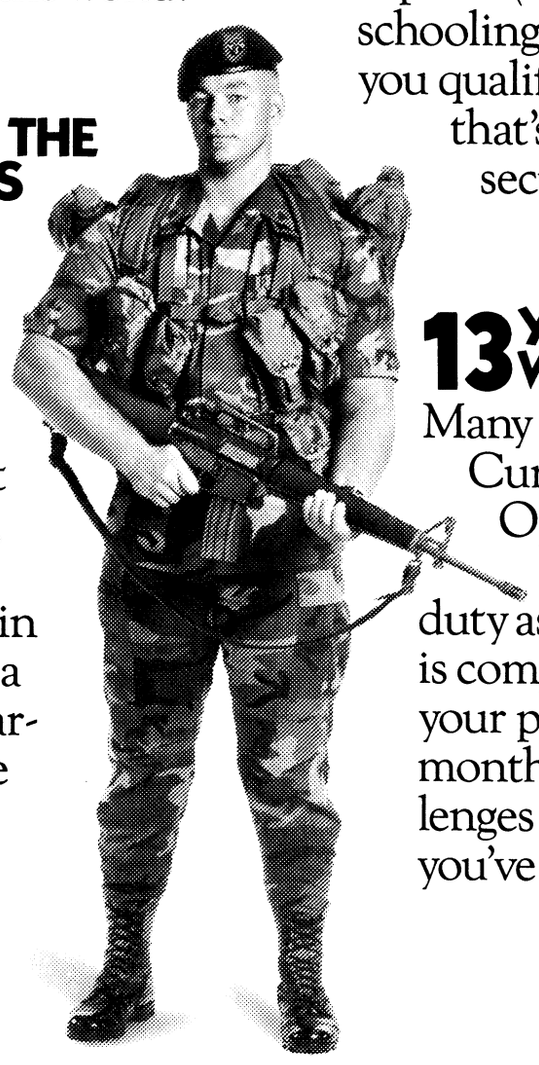


6 YOU CAN LEARN A HIGH-TECH SKILL. Under the USAISC Option, you may qualify for the U.S. Army Information Systems Command. There, you can learn high-tech skills like radio teletype operation or satellite communications repair. There are over 140 MOS's, and you can serve in CONUS or overseas.

7 YOU CAN COME BACK TO THE STATES. If you're overseas and want to come home, the CONUS Station Option can make it happen. Of course, a lot depends on what your MOS is, and where you want to go, but the Army will make every effort to relocate you, upon completion of your overseas tour, at a location of your choice.

8 YOU CAN GO OVERSEAS. The Overseas Reenlistment Option makes it possible for you to spend a minimum of 12 months in Germany, Korea, or some other exciting part of the world.

9 YOU CAN JOIN THE SPECIAL FORCES OR RANGERS. If you're special, the Special Forces or Ranger Regiment Option may be just right for you. You must be Airborne qualified, have an MOS that's needed (or agree to train in one) and qualify for a SECRET Security clearance. The demands are great, but so are the rewards.



10 YOU CAN JOIN THE OLD GUARD. If you'd like to march with one of the Army's oldest and most prestigious outfits, then reenlist for the Old Guard Option. If you make it, you're guaranteed assignment in Washington, D.C., for up to 3 years.

11 YOU CAN LEARN A NEW LANGUAGE. Under the Language School Option, you could learn a second language of your own choosing, provided the Army's need matches your choice. Once you've completed your training, you could serve in a foreign country. And, of course, there's great satisfaction in being bilingual.

12 YOU CAN JOIN AN INSCOM UNIT. Under the Intelligence and Security Command and Electronic Warfare/Cryptologic Units and Training Option (INSCOM/EW), your schooling will be intensive. But if you qualify, you'll be part of a group that's essential to our nation's security efforts.

13 YOU CAN STAY RIGHT WHERE YOU ARE. Many soldiers do. Under the Current Station Stabilization Option, you can reenlist to stay at your present duty assignment after your tour is completed. You're guaranteed your present duty for 12 to 14 months. You can find new challenges and rewards at a place you've come to know.

As you can see, reenlisting opens up a world of opportunities for you. Of course, qualifications are different for each option. But if you qualify, you'll be well on your way to expanding your Army, and your life, experience.

To find out more details about each reenlistment option, talk to your Retention NCO. They are there to make sure you know what your choices are, and to help you chart the best course for your future.

Culinary artists give food for thought

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

Most people have experienced a tinge of regret — as well as pleasure — at biting off the ear of a chocolate Easter bunny or carving up a particularly handsome Christmas turkey.

Visitors to Fort Benning's 15th annual culinary arts show Jan. 17 at the Main NCO Club perhaps felt a sense of deja vu about food that looked too good to eat.

But no one had to worry. Not only were the items for display only — some were even non-edible.

Nevertheless, the mouth-watering exhibits of six food service specialists from the 197th Infantry Brigade and contestants from other units left little doubt that there's plenty of talent in Fort Benning dining facilities.

The competition was held to select the post's top cooks to advance to the Army's annual culinary arts show in March at Fort Lee, Va.

Contestants from the 197th walked away with four gold and four silver medals, in the post competition. The six soldiers vied for medals and certificates in both novice and master's divisions.

"Novices are first-time competitors, while food service specialists who have won a gold, silver or bronze medal in a previous show compete in the master's division," said Chief Warrant Officer James Richardson, brigade food service officer

Two 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., soldiers received more than one award: Spec. Scott Richardson won two golds in the master's division for hors d'oeuvre and cold meat buffet entries, while Sgt. Garrett White picked up a gold for his non-edible decorated cake and silvers for his pulled sugar and sculpture in tallow creations.

White designed his non-edible cake around a Styrofoam core, but says the technique also works with a cardboard core. "An MRE box works fine," he said. "All you have to do is frost and decorate the box."

On the other hand, pulled sugar is a more specialized technique. White — a five-time Army-wide culinary arts competitor — says he learned it from a chef who works at a Columbus restaurant.

"I cook regular, granulated white sugar in water until it turns a golden brown," White said. "Next, mix it with salad oil on a marble slab, working the sugar until it hardens into a ball. Then, pick it up and pull it by hand until it gets shiny and hardens into shape. Place it under a heat lamp to soften it, and then I can pull off small pieces to shape into the objects of my choice."

Spec. James Smith, another master from 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., won a gold medal for his colorful cold buffet dessert, consisting of raspberry, lemon lime and orange gelatins, along with a collection of puddings layered with different flavors.

A trio of novice competitors from other 197th units picked up silver and bronze medals for their artistry.

Sgt. Randy Lott, of 1st Bn., 18th Inf., received a bronze for his cold buffet platter, featuring an assortment of ham and pork rolls and oven-roasted beef, complemented with cheese, potato pudding dip and coconut balls.

Spec. John L. Kelly, of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, made an edible decorated cake in the form of his unit crest.

"I wanted to make something my unit would be proud of, even if I didn't win a prize," said Kelly, who topped his yellow cake with white icing, yellow trim, unit name and crest in "Redleg" red, and the unit motto, "Mission Accomplished," in blue letters. "I starting mixing at 7:30 in the morning and put on the finishing touches around 3:30 the next morning."

Heeding the Army's dietary guidelines for fit-to-fight soldiers, Sgt. Lisa M. Satchell, of HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., won a silver medal for her low-calorie dinner for two.

"I baked a rock Cornish hen, glazed with honey and topped with walnuts," she said. "That's a much lighter entree than spare ribs, for instance, for soldiers watching their weight.

"I also chose rice pilaf with asparagus tips, sushi hors d'oeuvre, light cloverleaf rolls and a bottle of white wine to enhance the meal."

According to food service officials, soldiers shouldn't expect to find such culinary treats every day in their unit dining facility but can look forward to special holiday meals for themselves and their family members.

"All the food service specialists in my battalion are interested in the culinary arts, but they can't always get their special dishes ready for a show," said Lott. "I just happened to be the lucky one this time, while most of the people in my dining facility were busy feeding our soldiers in the field."

White, Satchell and Kelly are scheduled to advance to the Army-wide competition, according to Chief Richardson.

Sgt. Tommy Benbow, of 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, has also been selected for the post's team, while bronze medalist Lott has been named an alternate.

Spec. Richardson is scheduled to leave the service, and Smith will be unable to attend due to military schooling.

Benning schools observe Martin Luther King Day

Fort Benning Schools

Observation of Martin Luther King Day was marked by a variety of activities and programs in the Fort Benning Schools.

Students participated in numerous projects and programs to recognize the significance of the man and his dream.

The various activities helped students gain a better insight into the events that shaped the life of King and the social changes he helped to bring about.

Many schools featured visual displays, writing projects, discussions and audio-visual presentations, which highlighted events in his life.

At Faith Middle School, the students were involved in the writing of a poem about King, composing a "dream" for America, and writing a letter to King explaining how the world has changed since 1968.

In the artistic realm, a mural and a quilt depicting major events of his life were created.

Students at Dexter School presented a choral reading of "The King Story," and wrote comparisons of Martin Luther King and Desmond Tutu.

At Loyd School second-through fifth-grade students wrote essays entitled, "What the Dream Means to Me."

Fifth-grade pupils at Loyd developed a time-line of King's life.

This chronology reached from the floor to the ceiling of the hallway outside their classroom.

Patch students created posters, which were displayed by each classroom.

Sgt. Anthony Johnson of the Equal Opportunity Office spoke to the students about King, and each student sampled a piece of a large MLK birthday cake.

Students at Wilbur School heard a speech by Johnson and viewed various displays in the media center.

At McBride School, students created a King collage and viewed the filmstrip, "A Peaceful Warrior."

Students at White School joined with the principal in a rap session on how students can learn from the ideas King represented.

Students at various grade levels learned about King's family life as a boy in Atlanta.

Wilson students created a reenactment of the Montgomery bus boycott and other significant events in King's life for the student body.

"We believe it is important to observe King's birthday," Faith School assistant principal, Phyllis Parker said.

"If his dream is to ever become a reality, we as a people must continue to teach his beliefs, and, more importantly, we must practice those beliefs."

Car safety seats protect children

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Child safety seats are special restraints that protect babies and small children in a moving vehicle.

They are equipped with a harness or shield to hold a child firmly in place, fastened to the seat of a vehicle with the car's seatbelt and padded for safety and comfort.

Most injuries to children are the result of being thrown into a windshield or dashboard, crushed by an adult or thrown from the car.

A child safety seat is designed for many reasons. The following is an example of how it keeps children safe:

- Holds the child securely in the car and in the seat
- Protects the child from hitting something in the car or from being thrown out of the car
- Absorbs the force of a sudden stop or swerve
- Spreads the force of the car's impact over the whole body — safely
- Prevents the child from being crushed by other passengers

A car can be a dangerous place for children. Every year, thousands of children of all ages die in automobile accidents, and tens of thousands of children are injured.

Children are especially vulnerable to injury. Compared to adults, children have softer bones, weaker neck muscles, larger and heavier heads (in proportion to their bodies) and more fragile bodies.

Child safety seats help prevent death and injury. Accidents can happen anywhere, anytime but most occur close to home or on short trips.

Child safety seats are designed to meet young passengers' special need for protection.

Proper child safety should begin with the first ride home from the hospital.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

When thinking of energy conservation, we most often think in terms of heating, air conditioning and electricity. However, another area of concern to conservationists is water waste.

Harry Mulford, foreman of the Water Treatment Facility at Fort Benning, said Fort Benning is self-sufficient when it comes to treating and providing water for both residents and the people who are employed here.

Fort Benning uses an enormous amount of treated water.

In 1988, usage was estimated at 6.511 million gallons per day. This water was produced at a cost of 95 cents per thousand gallons.

This cost includes capital investments, overhead costs and the cost of the tremendous amount of electrical energy needed to produce the water.

In total, Fort Benning spent about $2,389,485 for water treatment in 1988.

For some time now, state and federal regulatory agencies insisted that all water treatment facilities develop conservation programs to promote the effective and efficient use of our water.

In 1989, operational changes and cooperation from post residents brought usage down to about 5.711 million gallons per day.

Still, we need to concentrate on reducing our water consumption even further.

Everyone can cooperate by making small contributions toward conservation, such as turning taps off while brushing teeth or shaving, and washing vehicles less often.

Washing machines and dishwashers should be operated only with full loads.

One of the most common ways in which large amounts of water are wasted is in the excessive watering of lawns.

The length and frequency of waterings should be kept to the minimum required to maintain the lawn.

Waterings should be restricted to twice weekly for no more than four hours.

The authorized watering times are posted during the appropriate months that are crucial to lawn care.

The cooperation of all individual users is needed to effect a successful water conservation program.

Savings will be realized not only in terms of the amount of water used but in electrical consumption and operational costs, as well.

For more information on this call the Energy Branch, 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

HOUSING

Family Housing List
as of Jan. 22

By using the following procedure, soldiers on the Family Housing Waiting List can use this chart to estimate when they can expect quarters:

- Locate your category of housing.
- Note eligibility date located on same line as your category.
- Calculate the time difference between eligibility date listed and your eligibility date. The difference is the approximate time you still have to wait for housing.

EXAMPLE: If the latest eligibility date (eligibility date of the person who last received housing in your category) was May 15, 1988, and your date is Sept. 15, 1988, you can expect housing approximately four months. If you do not know your eligibility, contact the Family Housing Office at Building 399 or telephone 545-3107.

Brownies and Daisies from Troop 148, Talbolton, psyche themselves up before the relay races at the Girl Scout Cookie Run.

Enthusiasts participate in Cookie Run

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Daisies, Brownies and Girl Scouts filled the streets of Weracoba Park at Lakebottom Saturday during the 10th annual Girl Scout Cookie Run.

The Cookie Run, which features a 1.5-mile walk and run, a tot trot and a five-mile run caters to all ages and skill levels.

Lloyd McDonald, a Fort Benning runner with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit demonstrated his skill by capturing first place with a blazing 26:10 in the five-mile race.

McDonald, a two-time winner of the race, said the conditions were ideal for the run.

"It was cool, but not cold," he said. "During the last two years, it's been extremely cold."

McDonald added that the course itself helped keep his run time down.

"It's a nice flat course, and, when the weather's right, you can rip out some pretty fast times," he said.

Although not stationed here, there was another runner familiar to the Fort Benning community.

Molly Sinclair, a commissioned cadet from Columbus College and a member of the Fort Benning Women's Ten-Miler team, won the overall title for women in the five-mile race.

Sinclair smoked the course turning in a 31:35.

"I felt really good," she said. "I'm running strong now and looking forward to my next race.

As for the rest of the competitors, not all came home winners, but there's always next year.

SPIRITUAL

Reflections Reflections

By Chap. Reinaldo Velez
36th Engineer Group Chaplain

"You have sown much, but harvested little; you eat, but you never have enough; you drink, but never have your fill; you clothe yourselves, but no one is warm; and he who earns wages to put them into a bag with holes." Haggai 1:6.

The prophecy of Haggai is a call to the rulers and the people to resume the building of the temple after 16 years of interruption and delay.

The prophet exposes the false but prevalent view that God's work is secondary and must wait the solution of economic problems and shows them that the latter are a judgment upon neglect of the former.

This is not unlike many of our situations.

For most of us, there is often something we must accomplish, one more goal to attain, one more project to complete, one more whatever before we can really give God first priority.

We struggle with a shortness of faith to place God first. What the prophet was telling his people may very well speak to us today.

I was recently reminded by a friend, how our priorities can be easily misplaced. He is a talented and ambitious businessman.

I greatly enjoy chatting with him about future plans and the possibilities for future investments.

He had great plans and aspirations working methodically toward those goals, but this was not what I most greatly admired in him.

My greatest admiration was for the value he placed in people and the satisfaction he found helping them and his deep concern to provide for a solid future for his family.

His diligence and commitment to his work drove him through long hours at work and community endeavors, leaving less and less time to spend with those who needed him most.

An accident put him in bed for a few weeks and provided ample time for reflection. it seemed that the tomorrow he was building for was slipping through his fingers unnoticed.

He is still a talented and ambitious businessman, but he has changed some things around. "I want to make sure that my family and the people I serve are truly before the business," he said, "and for that to happen, business will have to wait."

We can so easily become slaves to the very chains we want to break, but not so with God.

To give God our first priority is to receive life at its fullest, to experience the abundance of His blessings, to receive the just rewards of our labors. To seek Him and His righteousness is to gain it all.

Army Chief of Chaplains to speak at Fort Benning prayer breakfast

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

The Fort Benning annual Prayer Breakfast will be at the Main NCO Club Feb. 6 at 6:30 a.m.

The guest speaker will be the Army Chief of Chaplains Maj. Gen. Norris Einertson.

The Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast is held in conjunction with the yearly National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C.

It is designed as a time of spiritual reflection for post leadership and is a reminder of our country's roots.

The National Prayer Breakfast, established with President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1953, is sponsored by the U.S. Senate and House Prayer Groups.

The first Presidential Prayer Breakfast was meant to formally seek divine guidance for the national leadership and to proclaim their dependence on God and faith in Him.

Every year since then, the Prayer Breakfast has drawn together the president, members of the House and Senate, members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court and the military leadership of the Armed Forces.

In addition, hundreds of similar events are conducted through federal and state governments, as well as military installations throughout the world.

Einertson became chief of chaplains in 1986 and was the guest speaker at the 1987 Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast.

He once wrote that the prayer breakfast "is a time to give thanks for our great heritage as we acknowledge God's place in our history and future and ask for his continued blessings on the country.

"On the occasion of the National Prayer Breakfast, whether in attendance or in private reflection and prayer, let us look to God as the one who is ultimately in control of our nation and the affairs of the world."

The program is designed for post leaders (officers, noncommissioned officers and civilians).

However, everyone is welcome as long as tickets are available. Seating is limited to 500.

Tickets for the USAIC Prayer Breakfast must be purchased in advance and cost $3.

For more information or tickets, contact your unit chaplain or call Chap. (Maj.) Donald Taylor, post project officer at the USAIC Chaplain's Office, 545-2288/2608.

Soldier ponders on Just Cause

By Loren E. Ramos
Co. A, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt.

It was an unusually cold morning at Fort Benning. The air echoed with troop movement and the snap of ammo being loaded into magazines.

Typically hard rangers covered themselves with blankets to break the chill as well as cover their uncertainty of what was to come.

Upon our departure, the fate of those who would dare to participate was as cloudy as the eyes of those who stayed behind.

Amazingly, the seven-hour flight seemed as calm as a summer morning. We'd done everything to prepare and so we waited.

Your relationship with your Father in Heaven repeatedly crosses your mind.

Everything you've ever done is questionable. You become your own jury.

Suddenly, the relationship you have with your eternal companion is the most important.

The thought of missing out in your children's lives is more painful than the possibility of a strike of an enemy bullet.

As the jumpmaster delivered his commands, it never occured to me that the 500 feet from the aircraft to the ground would seem more like a mile.

The link up with a fellow ranger on the ground was as joyous to the soul as the love of God.

During the first exchange of fire with the enemy, you couldn't help but feel your heart accelerate more than it already had.

Ironically, it was similar to the first time you were kissed by the girl next door, because when it was over, you knew that you would remember it for the rest of your life.

As the sun began to rise over the horizon that morning, feelings of admiration for my fellow rangers, my country and president, filled my heart with joy.

Rangers receive combat awards

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Members of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, were awarded Combat Infantryman's Badges and Parachutist Wings with combat stars Jan. 25 for their participation in Operation Just Cause.

During the ceremony, conducted in Marshall Auditorium, 441 CIBs, 21 Combat Medical Badges and 450 bronze stars to the Parachutist's Badge, denoting a combat jump, were awarded. Nine of the 450 bronze stars were second awards.

Before pinning on the awards, the 75th Rgr. Regt. Commander Col. Buck Kernan and Assistant Commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School Brig. Gen. William F. Steele, took turns at the podium.

Kernan told the men he knew they didn't expect the kind of Christmas they had in Panama.

"It was unfortunate that we were away from our families during that time, but the ranger blood runs deep in our veins," he said.

"Although we weren't with our families, we were giving a gift to someone else — the Panamanians. We gave them the gift of freedom."

Kernan closed with words of praise for the soldiers and said he didn't think he could be more proud of any other individuals.

Steele followed, saying Operation Just Cause was a very special exploit by a very special unit of men.

"The post is proud of you. The Army is proud of you, and the Army is proud to have men like you leading the way," he said.

He told the men they now have stories to tell their grandchildren, but, more importantly, they've learned things they can teach other soldiers — soldiers who have not seen combat.

"During this operation, you led the way. Two died, and 13 were wounded," Steele said.

"Pause for a moment and think about those two fellow rangers who will never get to wear combat wings or the CIB on their uniforms.

"But, if you think about them each time you pin those awards on your uniform, they'll be able to wear them through you."

Ann M. McDonald

Staff Sgt. Bobby Bouma, Co. B, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt., pins a Combat Infantryman's Badge on Pvt. 2 Michael Davis.

He said the rangers are the leaders of the '90s and the next century.

"Thank God, we have rangers and the motto for which they live — Rangers, lead the way. Well done," he said.

After the speeches, the men were given their awards. An officer, a noncommissioned officer and an enlisted man were on the stage to represent each soldier who will now wear the awards in the battalion.

Nine rangers who were awarded a second combat star on their parachutist wings were also on stage.

After those awards were presented, combat veterans in the audience were pinned with awards.

In October 1943, Gen. George C. Marshall signed orders recognizing and authorizing the CIB.

During the same month and year, the 75th Ranger Regiment was organized.

Emergency Room to undergo renovation

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Emergency Room at Martin Army Community Hospital will undergo a major renovation in the very near future.

To make room for a temporary Emergency Room, the Outpatient Clinic will move to building 392, behind the Infantry Museum, which will be renovated for that purpose.

This will cause some temporary inconvenience for Outpatient Clinic patients.

Once the renovation is complete, the Outpatient Clinic will be moved from its present location to building 392.

The present Outpatient Clinic area will then be renovated for use as a temporary ER.

The Outpatient Clinic move will be done over a weekend to avoid interruption of service to beneficiaries.

To keep the inconvenience to a minimum, plans are being made to transport records, lab work and patients, if needed. These plans will be announced when they are finalized.

The last phase of the renovation will affect the present ER.

The present obsolete layout will be replaced by a modern, state-of-the-art ER. The projected time of completion is spring 1990.

You may call AIR. at 649-6000 and use MACH (6224) for updated information as the work progresses.

Benning honors NCO Academy's first enlisted commandant

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Family and friends of the late Command Sgt. Maj. Henry Caro gathered Jan. 24 at Fort Benning's Main Post Cemetery to honor the man for whom the post's Noncommissioned Officers Academy was named.

In what post officials hope will become an annual event, the congregation, made up of Caro's wife and daughters, a color guard from the academy, representatives from the Noncommissioned Officers Association and various distinguished guests from around post bestowed a wreath in Caro's honor and bowed their heads in a moment of prayer led by The School Brigade's Chap. (Maj.) Steven D. Paschall.

Caro was the first enlisted commandant of the NCO Academy at Fort Benning when the school was still the Noncommissioned Officer School of the Infantry.

He was assigned to the 101st Airborne Division and the 82nd Abn. Div., holding leadership positions from team leader to 1st sergeant. He was also an instructor at the Ranger and Pathfinder schools.

He saw three tours of combat in Vietnam, twice as an advisor with the 6th Vietnamese Abn. Bn., and the other with Co. N, 75th Rgr. Inf., 173rd Abn. Bde.

Caro's awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, five awards of the Bronze Star with V device for valor, two awards of the Purple Heart, Meritorious Service Medal, Air Medal, four awards of the Army Commendation Medal with V Device, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Pathfinder Badge, Ranger Tab and numerous service and foreign awards.

John Robinson

Ed Horton (l) NCOA, Frankie Caro, widow of Command Sgt. Maj. Henry Caro and Command Sgt. Maj. James W. Fowler, commandant of the Henry Caro NCO Academy, pay their respects.

His career was cut short when he died of injuries sustained on Nov. 6, 1976, during a parachute drop on Taylor Creek Drop Zone, Fort Stewart, Ga., during redeployment from an exercise in Panama.

He was the battalion command sergeant major of the 1st Rgr. Bn.

Caro was represented at the ceremony by his widow, Frankie, his two daughters, Rita and Lisa, and Ed Horton of the Noncommissioned Officers Association.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What was your most memorable experience during "Operation Just Cause"?

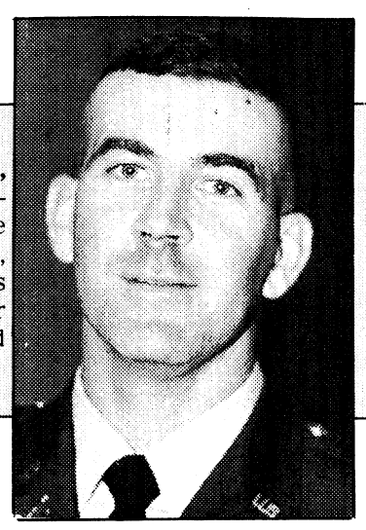
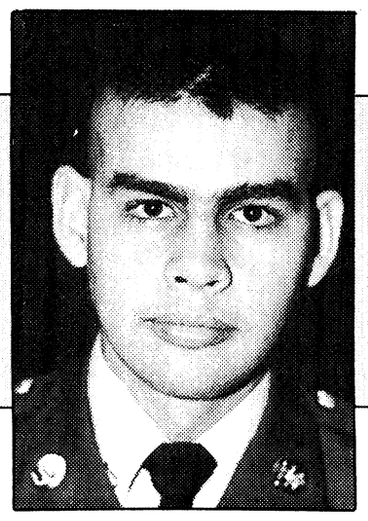
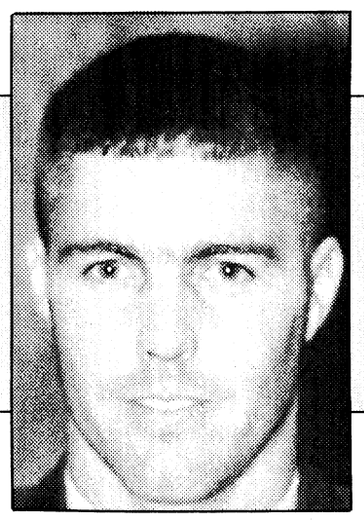
Pfc. Larry Harvey, HHC, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. — "Jumping into Panama was my most memorable experience. The drop zone was hot, and it was pretty scary. My adrenaline was really pumping."



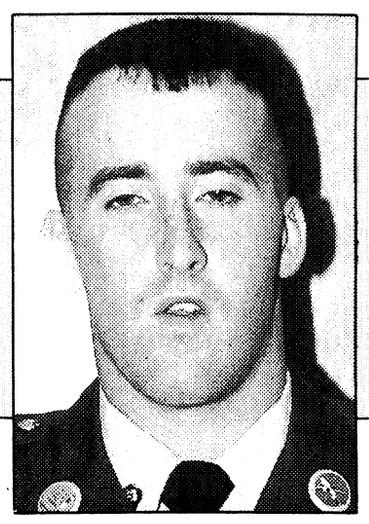
1st Lt. Robert Caufield, Co. C, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. — "During one of our missions, we were going through a village, and all these kids came up to us and started playing with our helmets. They were really glad that we were there."



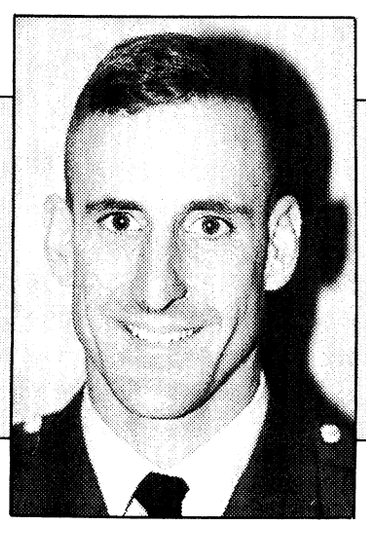
Pfc. Jimmy Weller, HHC, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. — "Sitting on the aircraft on our way down to Panama was most memorable. All kinds of thoughts were going through my mind."



Sgt. Brad Beauchamp, Co. C, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. — "I found two American hostages. I was trying to get them out and was getting shot at. The bullets were coming from behind the hostages, so they couldn't shoot back. We did finally get them out."



Spec. Douglas Simcox, Co. C, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. — "When they were giving jump commands in the aircraft, it was really quiet. Then the doors were opened, and everybody started yelling. Then we jumped, and tracers were flying everywhere as we exited the aircraft."



Capt. Derek Monell, HHC, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. — "The morning of the 20th was my most memorable experience. The sun had just risen, and I saw an American Flag flapping in the breeze. That really made me feel good."

Snively: leave the budget alone

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The budget has been making big news lately.

Because of peace breaking out all over, folks think they can balance the budget and reduce the national debt by slashing away at Defense Department funds.

I'm sure there's room for improvement, especially in the Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps (whose job everyone now knows can be done by the Army), but the Army's budget should be left alone.

We know that won't happen. We're already taking mega-buck hits, and there's no end in sight. To help save dollars, I surveyed soldiers and civilians for ways to cut costs.

Staff Sgt. Crash out at the 197th said his solution was to take the M-113s and M-60 tanks that are being replaced by Bradleys and M-1s down to Victory Drive and set up a used track lot.

"We could make bundles. The money we get can be used to buy spare parts for the new equipment," he said. "And just think what all those APCs and tanks will do for the traffic congestion on Victory Drive and Macon Road."

Over in Building 4, Ms. Janice said the people there should be put on a four-day work week. That way they could turn the heat and air off for three days at a time.

Mr. Mac said he didn't think that would fly, but that he'd be willing to come to work at 6 a.m., take just a half-hour lunch, then leave at 1:30 p.m. during summer months. That way they wouldn't have to turn the air on at all.

Large Sarge, said he'd heard the craft shops might close.

His solution was to use the craft shops to make furniture. "Like our colonel," he said,"he colonel wants another bookcase. Let him go to the craft shop and make one."

He said when that person leaves, he takes his homemade furniture with him, and the next person makes his own.

I told him I thought he really had something for a change.

Brad noted how the public likes to come out and watch our airborne and ranger demos and the CAPEXs and CALFEXs.

"We need to start charging for those," he said.

"We can offer to bring them here by bus and charge them $5 each, including transportation, for the airborne and ranger demos, $7.50 for CAPEXs and $12.50 for CALFEXs.

Charging will probably get us more customers, too. That way people will recognize how important and exciting these demonstrations are.

"We can also make the controlled-descent towers available in afternoons and on weekends for $2.50 a crack.

All this money could be used to buy fuel, bullets and spare parts for our vehicles, climbing ropes, snap links and new parachutes for our ranger and airborne soldiers.

"We might even do like at Disneyland and have an "E" ticket that gets people in for a demonstration, a climb on some obstacles, a chance to rappel, a helicopter ride and an MRE meal, all for $30."

I could see Ranger John getting agitated. He finally got a chance to talk.

"Hey, I like those ideas. But let's go a step further. Why not set up one of those outward bound schools, and put civilians through a mini-ranger course.

Man we could charge $1,000 or so for a two-week course. And we could offer leadership and managership seminars, run by our leadership department. More big bucks.

The civilian community would be falling all over itself to get to these. In fact, I bet we'd have people coming from all over the world to attend."

Over at the Marksmanship Unit, Sgt. Deadeye said he thought we could charge civilians to use our ranges on weekends to fire their own weapons and, for a little extra money, fire a few of the Army's.

The clothing sales store people were all excited, too. "Civilians drool over the stuff we've got here. We could really move some merchandise if civilians could shop here.

And, hee, hee, I didn't say this, but maybe for those without an ID card, we could charge a value-added tax or something."

One high-ranking denizen of Building 4 said he thought we coddled our soldiers too much. "You know, we give them all these things that civilians have to pay dearly for."

"Like what?" I dared to ask.

"Like gyms and weight rooms. Have you ever priced the cost of joining the Court House of Oates Gym?" We need a user's fee."

A budget clerk was looking through a catalog when I approached her desk to ask how to save money.

"Hey, we have a program called how to manage the civilian work force to budget. What we need is another program called how to manage the self-service supply account to budget.

You give me the bucks kido, and I'll save you some dollars by getting things on sale with these catalogs. Do away with SSSC. All I need are my catalogs."

I told her I figured GAO would never stand for that. They'd lose too many jobs.

In the men's room, I ran across Larry who was complaining about people not turning off lights and the fact there were too many.

"One bulb's all we need. What do guys need lights for anyway? Turn the lights out, and they won't sit around reading Army Regs and Bayonets."

Shirley, who I didn't run into in the men's room (or woman's room) said she thought we should stop supplying toilet paper — "BYOTP," she said.

"Don't cringe," she went on. "AAFES in Germany during the paper crisis had a toilet paper control officer who issued sheets of paper to those who needed it.

People in dire straits had to check the stuff out before they headed for the head."

"I'll bet there were a lot of constipated workers," I said.

Now I've got to sit down and put all these ideas on a suggestion form and see if I can win some bucks by helping Fort Benning save dollars.

Commentator commends soldiers for their performance in Panama

By Dan Rather
Army News Service

"The men and women of the United States Armed Forces have done a superb job.

They have performed bravely, efficiently and professionally.

They deserve the thanks and respect of a grateful nation and our prayers as they continue their service and their sacrifice.

This is true. And it needs to be said, to be marked and thought about before the moment passes.

As a nation and as individuals, we should note it and discuss it before the trail grows cold.

Discuss what? Excellence, for one thing.

Excellence, unfortunately, is getting to be rare in any endeavor in this country.

Along with greed, mediocrity has become trendy in American life and work.

For another, the role of the warrior in a peace-loving, peace-intending country such as ours.

No matter how much of the world sees us, no matter how some among us see us, ours is, at base and in its heart a peace-loving, peace-intending nation.

But in the land of the American dream, someone must protect the dreamers.

There must be an arsenal of democracy, and there must be among us those who know how to use it.

Ours is a citizen Army . . . and Navy . . . and Air Force . . . and Marine Corps.

With thanks to God and the constitution, civilian control and with a strong system of checks and balances, ours is, in the best sense of the phrase — a people's Army.

But I digress.

Listen, patriotic and honest citizens can and should debate whether this president in this situation made the right decision at the right time for the right reasons to send our sons and daughters to war.

> "Wars are real mud, real blood . . . real death."
>
> — Dan Rather

There are important questions not to be ducked about the Panama invasion, such as: can, should a president — any president be able to carry out a war such as this without approval from the people's elected representatives in Congress?

There is an important constitutional question to be thoughtfully considered in all of this.

But that is not the point of this piece. The point is this: the men and women of the Armed Forces of the United States were given a mission by their commander and chief.

They had their orders. They were given a job to do, and they did it — well!

In the words of Tennyson's poetry, ". . . theirs was not to reason why, theirs was but to do or die." They did and some of them died.

Ours is to reason why, while honoring and thanking those who served and sacrificed.

Any person, in uniform or out, who ever actually sees another person die in combat is not likely to forget, ever, what the reality was and is.

Wars are real mud, real blood . . .real dread, real death.

It is easy to blow bugles, have the band play marches and wave flags.

It is hard to storm the beaches, hit the silk and blow the barracks — very hard and very dangerous.

Before the smoke clears in Panama, before the politicians and the propagandists complete weaving their self-serving spells, it would be well for the rest of us to note and ponder the brave, efficient, professional service our citizen warriors have given our country in the streets and jungles of Panama."

'Infantry' features high altitude deployment

Infantry Magazine

The January-February 1990 issue of "Infantry" features "High Altitude Deployment: The Medical Implications," by Col. David E. Johnson.

Johnson, a former enlisted medic who served in combat, discusses the disabilities that soldiers experience when operating at high altitudes and some measures that can be taken to reduce the effects of such illnesses.

Johnson is commander of the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity in Alaska.

That issue also features "Thoughts on Being a Battalion S-3," by Capt. Walter F. Ulmer III, and "The 8th Infantry Detraining," by Col. Rolfe L. Hillman Jr.

Ulmer, formerly a battalion S-3 in the 3rd Armor Division, offers what he calls a current "grass roots" perspective to supplement the formal sources of "how to" information on an S-3's job.

He is now assigned to the Total Army Personnel Command.

Hillman, using a 1937 photograph of 8th Infantry soldiers detraining at Fort Benning, discusses "several lines of history" that intersect — "the histories of Fort Benning, of a railroad, of an infantry regiment and of the largely forgotten state-of-the-Army."

Hillman, now retired, began researching Fort Benning's rail operation while serving on the faculty of the Infantry School between 1959 and 1962.

Other articles in that issue include "The Soldier's Load: Planning Smart," by Lt. Col. John S. O'Connor and Michael S. Bahrke of the Army Physical Fitness School (the first in a series of three articles); "The Soviet Army: Coming to Terms with Its Afghan Experience," by Capt. Paul H. Vivian; and "The Infantry Spectrum: Crossing from Light to Mech," by Capt. Thomas E. Fish.

Protecting tooth enamel

American Academy of Pedodontics

Tooth enamel is one of the hardest natural substances there is.

This little known fact comes from specialists in children's dentistry — "pedodontists."

Pedodontists stress that proper brushing and flossing of teeth are crucial to protecting tooth enamel.

They are finding that some areas of the mouth are more prone to decay than others.

Pediatric dentists recommend that extra attention be given to the back teeth and the chewing surfaces.

In the office, pediatric dentists now coat back teeth with a clear plastic material.

This covers the enamel surface and prevents food from coming into contact with the tooth.

They also recommend extra brushing time for the back teeth.

Only a limited amount of time is devoted to formal military training after the start of academics.

All students are on active duty and draw full pay and allowances for their respective grade.

In addition, students are eligible for promotions in accordance with current Department of the Army policies.

BAD helps area businesses achieve drug-free environments

By Michael Dunbar
Columbus Chamber of Commerce

Business Against Drugs known as BAD, kicked off Jan. 17 at the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

The program is designed to help businesses develop a drug-free work environment.

"BAD is good in this case," said Salvadore Diaz-Verson, 1989 Chairman of the Board of Directors. "This new program is the outcome of many hours of committee meetings and development.

"We wanted to develop a program that would help the Columbus area business community fight the war on drugs."

The program asks businesses to make a committee to a drug-free environment by signing up for the program. To support these businesses, the Chamber has produced a handbook "Drug Free Workplace Program and Supporting Policies."

The handbook spells out step by step how to initiate a program with models the business can follow such as: Substance Abuse Policy, Active Employee Substance Abuse Testing Policy, Pre-Employment Drug Testing Policy, Certificate of Agreement and Employee Assistance Program Policy.

"This is a commitment by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce to help the local business community fight drugs in the workplace," said F. Michael Gaymon, president of the Chamber.

"We will make this program available to all businesses at no cost. It is a great way for businesses to make a commitment to a safe work environment for their employees.

Seventy percent of all drug abusers are in the workplace, and of those who are entering the workplace for the first time, 65 percent have used illegal drugs according to national statistics.

It is time for the business community to stand up and be counted. Drugs will not be tolerated in Columbus businesses.

According to U.S. Chamber of Commerce statistics, drug abusers are a major liability."

Employees who abuse drugs are:

- 2.5 times more likely to be absent eight or more days annually,
- 3.6 times more likely to injure themselves or others,
- five times more likely to be involved in an accident and,
- one-third less productive.

"This burden lowers businesses ability to compete, while endangering the lives of the employees. It is a cost our business world can do without," Gaymon said.

One asset of the program is an option of an affordable Employee Assistance Program to help employees who have a problem with drugs.

These programs are designed to help drug abusers in a confidential manner.

"We are asking businesses to end the drug abuse in the workplace by implementing this program," said Salvador Diaz-Verson.

"The business world holds an effective weapon in this war. It holds the paycheck.

197th readies for NTC deployment

Sledgehammer IV, a week-long training exercise, prepares infantrymen for rotation

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

Soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade wound up half a year of preparation for their February/March rotation to the National Training Center with a week-long training exercise, Sledgehammer IV.

The exercise, conducted Jan. 22 through 27 at Fort Benning, brought together some 3,000 soldiers from the "Sledgehammer" brigade and hundreds of others from four other posts who will join the 197th for the deployment to Fort Irwin, Calif.

"The advantage of having the other units training with us is that we can understand their personalities, strengths and weaknesses and where more training is needed before NTC," said 1st Lt. Paul C. Harris, military intelligence officer for 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry.

"Also, because we're able to interface with the people we will be going through the rotation with, there's more camaraderie and a sense of team spirit within the task forces set up for NTC," he said.

According to Harris, the task force concept is the culmination of the 197th's "train-up" phase that began last September with live-fire lane training and squad- and platoon-level preparation with multiple-integrated, laser engagement system equipment.

Predeployment preparations intensified in December with a brigade command post exercise, a logistics reconnaissance at the NTC for key leaders and a training exercise without troops just before Christmas.

In January, the 197th held a series of brigade-centralized, company team lanes to certify soldiers with their weapons in such tasks as deliberate attack and breaching, defense, operations in an NBC environment and use of MILES equipment.

"During Sledgehammer, as we will do at NTC, the brigade organized two task forces for the battle," Harris said. "Brigade headquarters serves as the task force control for one maneuver unit, the 1st Bn., 18th Inf., while 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, controls the second task force, composed of the 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., and its attachments."

The two task forces conducted four tactical missions during the FTX — deliberate attack, defense in sector, movement to contact, and relief in place.

An after-action review was held after each mission, and the entire exercise was designed to mirror NTC live-fire relationships as closely as possible.

"We began Sledgehammer IV with a movement to contact," Harris said.

"The two forces, each with two mechanized and two armor companies, came into contact around Buena Vista Road and Upatoi Creek and had a small battle, which 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., won.

"Both task forces withdrew 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., to the south and 1st Bn., 18th Inf., to the north," he continued.

"The following day, my task force, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., went on the attack in coordination with our attached units from Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort Knox, Ky., and aviation assets.

"On the third day, we took up the defense after having beaten 1st Bn., 18th Inf., in our attack.

"They attacked us as we were set up in a series of battle positions, in depth, but I think we stood our ground pretty well.

"The final mission — relief in place — is fairly uncommon during a training exercise, but in actual combat, you would expect units to reach a point where they can no longer sustain combat operations without replacements," Harris said.

"For Sledgehammer, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., was the relieving unit for 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., with their staff replacing ours in the tactical operations center and their soldiers occupying the same foxholes our soldiers dug to defend our position."

In Harris' view, conducting Sledgehammer IV less than a month before the rotation to NTC benefits the entire brigade.

"Soldiers tend to remember the last thing they did, right or wrong," he said. "We corrected deficiencies as they occurred during this FTX, and the commander directed us not to leave the field until we had met the standard.

"We didn't train to time, but to the standards of our training objectives. I think our efforts will really pay off when we get to NTC."

1st Lt. Charles Ziegler, support platoon leader with HHC, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., agreed.

"We provided separate logistical packages forward and behind the maneuver elements to supply food, water, fuel and bullets to both offensive and defensive players," he said. "Training together with our attached units gave us the opportunity to work out all the logistical reports we will need to succeed at NTC."

"Everything we did was geared toward training up, offensively and defensively, for our missions at NTC," said Sgt. John Morris, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf.'s tactical operations center security sergeant.

"We've been going downrange for the last several months, and now we're ready to go out and win at NTC."

'Killer teams' prevent enemy infiltration

By Aurelio Feliberty
197th Infantry Brigade

Troop D, 4th Cavalry, team leader, 2nd Lt. Jon Segars, waited patiently in his M-60 tank, conducting a not-so-practiced screen line operation, as team members in two forward vehicles, an M-901 Improved TOW Vehicle and an M-113 Armored Personnel Carrier, watched for enemy troops.

"These three vehicles combined are a so-called "Killer Team," Segars said.

The 197th Infantry Brigade commander, Col. Theodore W. Reid, wants to use this combination technique.

The idea is to have the ITV and APC kill the enemy, after radioing the M-60 of the enemy's advance.

If the opposing force advances into the sector, the M-60 will have already advanced into position where it could engage the enemy."

"The purpose of the screen line is to prevent the enemy scouts from collecting any intelligence on the friendly position," said Capt. Thomas DiMassimo, the Trp. D, 4th Cav., commander.

Practicing this technique on Fort Benning's terrain created some problems with visibility. The enemy had plenty of cover to maneuver around.

However, this is not the case for the use of this technique at the National Training Center.

"The plan for NTC is to control the ground we have while holding onto it.

This will be achieved by the Killer Teams, since they are small, allowing more visibility throughout the sector, while gaining greater speed and maneuverability.

"This technique is a modification of the older version, where the screen line is made up of the scouts in M-113s and a tank platoon in the rear.

This allowed the enemy more mobility through the large gaps left in the front and a greater area to move and elude the tank platoon," DiMassimo said.

Support troops fix equipment near front lines

By Vickie L. Johnson
197th Infantry Brigade

The troops of Company D, 197th Support Battalion, took advantage of an opportunity during Sledgehammer IV, Jan. 22 through 27, to put predeployment training to work in preparation for the 197th Infantry Brigade's February/March rotation to the National Training Center.

According to 1st Lt. Jack Judy, executive officer of "Delta Support," his soldiers provide direct support for repairs and supply class nine repair parts for the entire brigade.

Additionally. they support other units that augment the 197th during its rotation, such as 1st Battalion, 10th Cavalry (Armor) Battalion, from Fort Knox, Ky.; and 519th Military Intelligence Battalion from Fort Bragg, N.C.

"This is an extra challenge for the soldiers involved in an exercise of this magnitude because they need more people to be in the contract teams near the front lines," Judy said.

"They also have combat trains and field trains operating further back from the front line action to offer direct support.

"Where the equipment actually gets fixed depends on how quickly it is needed back on the battlefield," Judy said.

He added that Co. D repairs "anything from 9mm pistols to engines for M-1 tanks, as well as radios and generators on wheel and track vehicles."

Judy explained that his unit repairs equipment deadlined because it cannot be fixed at the operator or organizational levels.

Equipment submitted for repair is inspected, and replacement parts are often found on the authorized stockage list at the brigade's warehouse.

"Sometimes we get a request for a part we don't have on hand, in which case we go to the Brigade Material Management Center to requisition it by national stock number.

"When the part comes in, we repair the equipment," he explained.

In addition to training for repair and resupply missions, Co. D soldiers also trained for survival on the battlefield during Sledgehammer IV, according to Judy.

"Since our mission is two-fold, we have to carefully manage our training time to balance the normal mission of repairing equipment and supplying repair parts with the mission of survivability.

"Sledgehammer IV allows us to train for the same things we will be doing at the National Training Center," he said.

Judy expressed confidence that his soldiers would live up to their motto, "Fix Forward," whenever called upon for direct support to the front lines.

3rd Bn., 32nd ITB soldiers build training course at Eagle's Nest

By Marilyn Balzarini and Ann Hull
Infantry Training Center

Grunts. Mention this word and certain images come to mind.

The fighting man garbed in green and brown, highly trained, prepared for battle, ready to go at a moment's notice . . .

True — but today's modern troop encounters sophisticated technological training devices fairly early in his career.

Progressing in rank and knowledge, his involvement with computers and complex weaponry systems becomes even greater. The idea is not just to fight bravely and well, but to fight "smart."

Several infantrymen of Fort Benning's 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Training Battalion, have taken this to heart.

They designed two innovative programs that will actually save money and impact at both post and Army level.

First, Company B members built from scratch a new Individual Tactical Training Course at Eagle's Nest training area, the old bayonet course location.

Battalion Commander Lt. Col. Robert Pilnacek said, "About $30,000 of Army money has been saved through this venture."

ITT comprises primary infantry skills required of the 11B soldier, such as learning to low crawl, practicing teamwork and cover and concealment and firing basic weapons.

Senior drill sergeant, Timothy Childs, responsible for supervision of the majority of the construction, said, "Our crew worked very hard during off duty time for about 45 days to complete the site."

They used all discarded materials in their work, except from some engineer support in the form of a bucket loader and dump truck with operator.

Another savings of the new ITT course is in time and transportation costs because instructors no longer have to travel as far to get to work.

Co. B company commander, Capt. Patrick Strothers, said that another positive aspect of the new ITT course is that it is large enough to accommodate a whole platoon.

"Also, the entire cadre is involved. My drills and I all get dirty. Also, they get to see their captain take the same test.

Yet another instance of brain at work as well as brawn occured in the same battalion, when 1st Lts. Lynn Hinman and Earl Barthel, company executive officers, created a new computer program that has the potential to benefit all TRADOC installations.

It's a user-friendly D BASE III program that converts RECBASS data.

The value of this system is that units can have all necessary information on soldiers immediately, instead of two days later when the ITC, 30th AG Battalion (Reception), sends out its revised roster.

"We spent many long hours pouring over D BASE program manuals, because neither of us has a degree in computer science or studied much of it while in college," said Hinman.

Another thing this system can do is to prepare the weapons test scores and PT scores and so forth that become part of a soldier's MILPO records in 15 minutes instead of several hours, said Sgt. 1st Class Carl Davis, Co. E.

Davis, who had never used a computer before, was the first to try.

"It's such a big time saver. Even a guy like me can understand it," Davis said.

Strothers, summed it all up saying, "Here's another instance of savings to the government.

"Each unit's job will become much easier as we eliminate some of the stubby-pencil, voluminous-files aspect of Army personnel management."

Computers brighten finance unit's deployment

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Careful planning made the 215th Finance Support Unit's deployment to Egypt for Bright Star '90 a complete success, according to the unit's commander.

Capt. Rolan Small, 1st Detachment commander, 215th Finance Support Unit, and a four-man finance support team finished a 54-day deployment to Egypt where they set up and advised Reserve and National Guard units on finance operations.

According to Small, the unit sent mobile training teams to train those units so each was fully prepared to take charge of the operation during their two-week rotations.

He said this training is important because those units don't practice finance on a regular basis, and, while they were in Egypt, they needed to function as they would in a wartime operation.

"The training that prepared the units for the deployment was broken down into four parts," Small said. "They are pay cashier operations, deputy training, independent finance operation procedures and a command post exercise."

Sgt. 1st Class Leroy Dunlap of the 215th FSU instituted the entire program, Small said.

Because they were prepared, the deployment went off without a hitch, and, while helping another unit, the FSU did something new themselves.

They deployed with one desk top and two lap top computers, which are designed for communication over regular phone and autovon lines.

Small said, although they have taken the computers on-post field exercises, this was the first time the unit deployed off post with the equipment.

He said during the rotation, the units served an average of 150 soldiers daily, and weekly disbursements exceeded $70,000.

IOBC's Company C soldiers tackle infantry training

By Gil Petruska
Infantry Officers Basic Course

Company C, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry, Infantry Officer Basic Course recently went to the field for a week of light infantry training.

Light Week gives student an overview of the tactics and methods of employment unique to the light infantry.

Some of the missions performed were air assault, movement to contact, conducting area ambushes, an assault on McKenna Military Operations on Urban Terrain site, a 12-mile road march and a live-fire exercise.

These missions were selected for their levels of difficulty, necessity for teamwork and leadership at all levels.

The training was considered to be some of the best the company has had, according to IOBC student, Lt. Larry Norred.

The students of Class 1-90 said they thought the MOUT training, road march and live-fire exercise were the most challenging.

2nd Lt. Eric Phillipson said that fighting in urban terrain is the most stressful and costly kind of warfare soldiers might encounter.

Recent experiences in Panama highlighted the need for continuous training in this sort of scenario.

Some of the lessons learned were brought out during an after-action review led by Lt. Felix Santiago.

There was the need for constant and reliable communication to avoid friendly fire casualties, according to 2nd Lt. Chris Porter.

The next major undertaking was the 12-mile tactical road march.

The exercise was designed to do several things for the platoons. The physical challenge was the most obvious demand placed on the students.

"It was a test of endurance, plain and simple," said 2nd Lt. Jim Purrenhage.

Camaraderie helped push the platoons to compete for the best time on the march, according to 2nd Lt. Mario Pargas.

4th Plt. finished the road march first with a time of three hours and 10 minutes.

The final exercise was life-fire at platoon level. The use of live ammunition made reliance on teamwork, planning and confidence in the abilities of yourself and others a necessity.

Additionally, 2nd Lt. Leonard Rickerman thought the need for positive control of your people was absolutely essential to help achieve success in these types of exercises.

Perhaps the most important lesson of Light Week is the requirement for high-quality training at small-unit levels and positive leadership that will motivate soldiers to accomplish the difficult tasks they will encounter someday in battle.

ASK THE JUDGE

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. While in the process of securing financing for my automobile, I was asked if I would like to purchase credit life and credit disability insurance.

Since I wasn't familiar with those terms, I decided not to purchase the insurance.

Please explain the terms. Was it a good idea not to purchase the insurance?

A. Credit Life Insurance is insurance on the life of the borrower of money or the purchaser of property in connection with a specific loan or other credit transaction.

In the event you die before paying off the debt, the money from the insurance policy is used to pay the balance.

Credit Disability Insurance ensures that the purchaser's payments are paid as they become due while the debtor is disabled as defined by the policy.

Since you were unfamiliar with the terms, it was a good idea not to get the insurance.

Now that you are familiar with the terms you need to determine whether the insurance is needed.

Even though you die, your debts still have to be paid. If you purchased credit life insurance in connection with the purchase or loan, the money from the policy would be used to pay the balance owed at your death.

If you didn't purchase the insurance and your family or other beneficiary is unable at your death to make the payments, the creditor may repossess the property or file a claim against your estate.

If you have enough individual life insurance that is payable to your family members or your estate at your death, then your family members could use that money to pay off the remaining balance if they choose.

If this is the case, then you probably don't need credit life insurance.

Though no one anticipates a disabling disease, it could occur. If the disease is one that is covered under the policy then the payments that the debtor was required to make will be paid as they become due.

If your spouse or family member is able to provide substantial support when you cannot, you may not need this insurance.

If you are an active duty soldier, you would continue to be paid even if you were sick or hurt, and this insurance would not be necessary.

Though credit life and credit disability might be the choice of an older individual who does not have individual life insurance, they are not always offered the chance to purchase the insurance.

Whatever your individual circumstances, you cannot be required to purchase the insurance.

Also, your loan cannot be denied because you refuse to purchase the insurance.

Before you agree to purchase the credit life or disability insurance, carefully consider whether you actually need it and whether your family will be able to continue to make payments if you don't.

Both types of insurance are usually greatly overpriced and not worth the money. You can obtain the same type of protection at a much lower cost, through private insurance.

These two forms of insurance are generally considered as big money makers for the lending institutions, and they want to sell them to you to make more money for themselves. Be very careful.

If you do decide to purchase credit life or credit disability insurance, make sure you receive a certificate of insurance from the insurance company.

If you need further assistance in this matter, contact the legal assistance office at 545-3282.

'Keep beneficiaries current,' Wheeler advises vets

Department of Veterans Affairs

Georgia Commissioner of Veterans Affairs Pete Wheeler says that many Georgia veterans could be running the risk of having unintended beneficiaries collect on their insurance because they have failed to keep their beneficiary designations updated.

Citing several examples of such neglect, Wheeler said, "If a veteran marries after taking out his GI insurance and doesn't remember to name his bride as beneficiary, the veteran's parents most likely would still be listed as beneficiaries.

"Then there's the all-too-frequent instance where a veteran gets a divorce, then remarries but forgets to update his insurance by naming his new wife as beneficiary. Consequently, the veteran's first wife remains the legal beneficiary.

"Another unfortunate situation develops," Wheeler said, "when a veteran has additional children born since he last made a beneficiary designation, and he fails to add their names as beneficiaries.

Upon the death of the veteran, these later children do not share in the veteran's insurance benefits."

Wheeler said, "It is vitally important that veterans keep VA advised of any changes in their family status, because insurance policy beneficiaries cannot be changed by a 'last will and testament.'"

He added that veterans can help their families avoid a lot of confusion and unpleasantness by periodically reviewing their insurance policies and making any necessary changes to keep designated beneficiaries current.

Any office of the Georgia Department of Veterans Service will assist veterans in updating beneficiary designations on their insurance policies.

Students volunteer for combat duty

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

When two Ranger School students from 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, were released for leave during Christmas Exodus, instead of going home they got on the first thing smoking to Panama to fight with their companies.

Pfc. Mark Crowson, Co. B, and Pfc. Jesse Cate, Co. A, 3rd Bn. 75th Rgr. Regt., were released for leave Dec. 20, and they immediately went to their unit headquarters.

Crowson said he and Cate learned there was a plane of reinforcements leaving Dec. 21 and convinced officials to allow them to go.

Upon their arrival in Panama, they linked up with their respective companies and performed missions with them until they had to report back to Ranger School.

They completed Ranger School and graduated last Tuesday. Not only were they awarded the distinctive Ranger Tab but also the Combat Infantry Badge.

Their battalion commander, Lt. Col. Joseph F. Hunt, was present at the ceremony to pin on the awards.

Because of the unique situation the two rangers got themselves into during the holidays, they were also asked to speak at the graduation.

Crowson said he felt his Ranger School training prepared him for the situation in Panama.

"Soon after I touched down at Howard Air Force Base, Panama, I was placed in charge of 11 other rangers. My job was to ensure each ranger was linked up with his respective company." Crowson said.

"Everything I learned and practiced at Ranger School became guidelines for the decisions and choices I had to make."

Pfc. Mark Crowson speaks at an ranger graduation, while Pfc. Jesse Cate looks on.

He said the course taught him to be decisive and persistent while under tremendous stress and yet have enough confidence to stand by his decision. He said he knew the training he received would lead him to make the right decisions.

Crowson and Cate said it was their confidence that sent them seeking transportation to Panama when they were supposed to be on leave.

They said they wouldn't have felt right if they had gone on leave. They added they felt their hearts were with their unit and that's where they belonged.

According to Crowson and Cate, the other rangers in their companies did not understand their actions.

"The first thing they asked was if I dropped out of Ranger School," Cate said.

"That's something that's not taken lightly in the battalion," he said.

He said once they were assured that he was going back to school, they were really happy to see him.

Some of the members of Crowson's company told him theyweren't sure they would do the same thing he did.

However, both Crowson and Cate said they would do it again.

"Because, rangers lead the way," Crowson said.

Wives train for military life

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The Infantry Officers Advanced Course Wives Leadership Seminar rounded out its week of lectures and group discussions with a Family Support Group exercise at The School Brigade Chapel.

The exercise, led by Patsy Chilcote, wife of Col. Ted Chilcote, director of the Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization, was a combination of lecture and small-group discussion.

According to program director, Capt. Michael W. O'Neil, the primary focus of the exercise was to "instruct the ladies on aspects of being a company commander's wife and how to set up a family support group."

Such groups are mandated by the commander at battalion level or higher and eventually, but not always, fall into the hands of the company commander's wife.

Since the groups are required by unit regulations, the funding comes from the unit, as well, but as Chilcote said, "With the budget cuts, don't expect much."

She pointed out that military wives realize they have subliminal influence over their husbands, but sometimes they can exert even more power through agencies such as the National Military Families Association.

The NMFA is comprised mainly of military wives and is often called upon in congressional hearings to furnish expert testimony.

They have lobbied for better survivors' benefits, increased pay for Permanent Change of Station moves and increased dental care benefits.

This organization can be very helpful for budding support groups, according to Chilcote. She added that Army Community Service would also be a source of information.

She stressed the importance of establishing contact with young wives in a company, many of whom may not have spoken to anyone since their arrival in an oftentimes foreign environment. Such a "chain of concern" is essential, said Chilcote, especially in a ready-deployable unit.

By the end of the exercise, the women had participated in small-group discussion on the topics raised during Chilcote's lecture.

"Now they have the background. If they choose to get involved, they're prepared," O'Neil said.

DARE teaches students to say no

Fort Benning Schools

Drug Abuse Resistance Education or DARE, learning how to say "no" and resist peer pressure is a semester-long course of study that culminated Jan. 12 at Faith School with graduation ceremonies for 148 sixth-graders.

These students were instructed by Department of Defense Lt. Walter Jackson and Spec. Danny Burton, specially trained police officers sponsored by the Provost Marshall, who were on hand at the graduation to present awards and hand out graduation certificates.

The featured speaker was Col. James I. Daily, chief of staff, who congratulated the students on their accomplishments and urged them to take the skills they learned and go forward promoting a drug-free America.

The group that graduated Jan. 12 was the third class of sixth-graders to complete the DARE program at Faith.

The officers are expanding the program into the Fort Benning elementary schools to help younger children learn the skills to resist pressures to experiment with drugs.

Take extra precautions when driving near motorcyclists

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Motorists are more numerous on the nation's streets and highways with each passing year.

With that increase comes an added responsibility on the part of the automobile motorist.

They have to be observant and remember that motorcyclists have the same rights on the road as they do.

Here are some tips to remember regarding motorcyclists:

● Share the road. Many motorists think motorcycles require less space on the road than do other vehicles, just because the cycle is smaller.

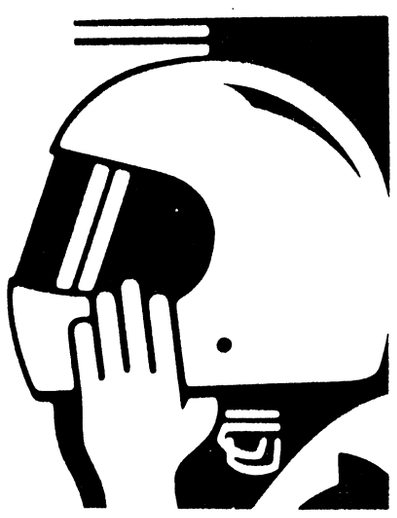
This is not true. Cyclists are entitled to a full lane, as is a four-wheeled vehicle.

● Do not try to crowd them in any way, or try to force them to the edge of the road.

● Respect them as fellow drivers.

● Retrain your eyes. Most cycle-auto accidents occur because the motorist simply doesn't see the cyclist. Often a cycle is hidden in the car's blind spot.

Outside rear view mirrors are not always enough. When changing lanes, it is a good idea to take a quick glance over your shoulder.



● Be alert for the presence of a cyclist on the outer edge of your traffic lane, especially on turns.

A cycle often is screened by another car. Be aware of its low visibility.

The safety-conscious cyclist should keep his headlight on to warn others of their presence.

● Army personnel at Fort Benning who ride motorcycles must wear a reflective vest.

● Consider the cyclist as being less protected than you are and watch his driving.

They must contend with many more hazards than an automobile driver.

● Be especially cautious when passing cyclists. The buffeting created by your wind stream may cause them to wobble and lose control.

● An inexperienced cyclist should be given a wide berth. You can recognize them if their cycle jerks when making gear changes or if they are hesitant in making decisions in traffic.

Always give them plenty of room and be prepared to stop if something goes wrong.

● Judge distance. Because a cycle is smaller, it may seem to be moving slower.

● Always judge your following distance. It is a good idea to add an extra second to the two-second rule of defensive driving: count to "one thousand and three."

The three-second interval is only for ideal conditions. Add seconds for adverse conditions.

● Watch for cycle hazards. Hazards for the cyclist can entrap the auto driver, too. A cyclists ahead can lose control of the motorcycle when sand, gravel, wet leaves or water are on the pavement.

● Always be aware of conditions that may cause them to have an accident. Give them plenty of room and slow down.

Benning hosts this year's All-Army wrestling camp

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Wrestling hopefuls from units assigned all over the world broke bread with Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire, post commanding general, at a breakfast in their honor recently, to officially kick-off the 1990 All-Army Wrestling Trial Camp.

Members of the All-Army wrestling team will be selected during a two-month training camp hosted by Fort Benning.

The welcome breakfast at the Main Post NCO Club saw 39 young honorees clad in bright yellow "All-Army" sweatsuits, and a variety of guest officers and command sergeants major.

William D. Hambay, physical activity manager and emcee for the morning gathering, recognized Col. Richard St. John, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment and regimental Command Sgt. Maj. Gary L. Cupit, for volunteering their unit to host the camp.

Sgt. 1st Class Tony T. Thomas, the All-Army wrestling coach, is well known to most of the competitors.

Thomas, whose career spans 17 years, was the All-Army coach in 1989.

He led the team to a third-place finish in the interservice championships, runner-up in the U.S. Open Greco-Roman Championship and five place winners, the most ever, in the U.S. Olympic Festival.

Thomas is now working his young charges three times a day. Many are finding the practices more than they bargained for.

"It's different from what I thought it was going to be," said 1st Lt. Stephen Roberts.

Roberts is the only representative from Fort Polk, La. He is a member of Company B, 1st Battalion, 70th Armor.

He said he was concerned about the competition at the trials. Specifically, he described Spec. Clifton Woods as being "tough."

Woods is a Fort Benning resident from Co. B, 43rd Eng. Bn.

Speaking on behalf of the Fort Benning community, Spigelmire, a self-professed "great supporter of the Army sports program," told the wrestlers, "You're the best, and I'm proud to associate with the best in the Army."

Quoting Maj. Gen. Frank Taylor, with whom he served as a lieutenant in Germany as part of the 24th Infantry Division, Spigelmire said, "To hell with second place," and offered that as the theme of this year's competition.

The All-Army Wrestle-Off will be held at the Harmony Church Field House Feb. 25 to 28.

Soldier wins Big Deer contest

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Big Deer Contest winner found his quarry in his own back yard. Well, sort of, he found it behind a Motor Pool at Kelley Hill, 197th Infantry Brigade, where he is assigned.

David E. Page, Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, won the contest with 129-pound, nine-point buck.

He was awarded a Browning Bar 30-06 Rifle with scope.

Sowa, a family member, took second with 10-point buck that weighed in at 109-pounds.

He received a Remington 12-gauge shotgun for his second-place finish.

James J. Welch, a Directorate of Engineering and Housing brought in a 96-pound, 13-point buck for third prize.

Welch was awarded a Warren and Sweat tree stand.

The contest was conducted from Sept. 16 through Jan. 15.

Two hundred eighty-six, people entered the contest. The entry fee was $2 for sergeants and below and $3 for all others.

The scores were calculated using total of weight divided by 10, main beam length in inches, beam diameter in millimeters, inside spread in inches and antler points over one inch.

SPIRITUAL

Chief of Chaplains to speak at post prayer breakfast

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Leaders from varied backgrounds will gather in a time of prayer for America, its leaders and one another during the Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast Tuesday, 6:30 a.m., at the Main NCO Club.

The guest speaker will be Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Norris L. Einertson, Chief of Chaplains.

Special music will be provided by Brenda Pace.

Einertson has been the Chief of Chaplains since 1986 and was the guest speaker at the 1987 Fort Benning National Prayer Breakfast.

His message centered on the challenge of providing quality ministry with limited resources.

He focused on the job of the peacemaker. "We soldiers have to think hard about our profession and our mission of preserving peace and defending justice in the world.

"Although civilians often misunderstand our role, we must never do so."

He quoted Maj. Gen. Frank Sampson, a former Chief of Chaplains, who said, "In civilian life, many people misunderstand the military mission.

Norris L. Einertson

"I have been asked how I can wear a uniform that symbolizes war and also wear a cross upon it symbolizing peace.

"It's very easy for me to tell them that, by law and by statute, the mission of the military of the United States is to preserve peace, to provide for the security of our country, its borders and internal security and to implement national policy as it pertains to peace treaties with friendly nations which of themselves cannot repel the aggression of avaricious neighbors.

"I see nothing in his mission that does not appeal to the highest ideals of any man — regardless of his religion."

Einertson also referred to Gen. Douglas MacArthur who said, "The soldier above all other people, prays for peace, for he must suffer and bear the deepest wounds and scars of war."

Einertson has supported the ministry at Fort Benning in many ways, one of which was the building of the 600-seat chapel Infantry Training Center Chapel, Sand Hill.

He also approved the Clinical Pastoral Education Center and program, which began in the summer of 1987 and continues successfully today.

Tickets for the USAIC Prayer Breakfast must be purchased in advance and cost $3.

For more information or to purchase tickets, contact your unit chaplain or call Chap. (Maj.) Donald Taylor, post project officer at the USAIC Chaplain's Office, 545-2288/2608.

Black man makes significant contributions to Methodism

By James A. Spigner Jr.
29th Infantry Regiment

The life of Richard Allen was one of turmoil, achievement and dedication.

When most blacks in that era were held in slavery, Allen was their advocate for freedom.

Allen was the co-founder of the Free African Society, the pioneer bishop of the African Society, the pioneer bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church and the first president of a national black convention.

The slave of a quaker master, Allen was born in Philadelphia Feb. 14, 1760.

At the age of 17, he converted to Methodism and soon earned enough money to purchase his freedom.

After hard work and dedication to the church and community, he was later ordained by Bishop Francis Asbury on 1799.

In 1816 he became the first bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church — the first national organization created by blacks.

After many years of struggle against whites, he took an active part in promoting the welfare of blacks in Philadelphia.

Many key black figures of his time stated that his house was never closed to the friendless, homeless or penniless fugitives from the house of bondage.

The dedication he demonstrated earned him great respect.

Allen made significant contributions as a pioneer in the church and his community.

His example set the stage for future blacks. He achieved all of this during a time when slavery was rife.

Allen was so dynamic that author Veron Loggin nominated him for the title of "Father of the Negroes".

Test your black history knowledge

Black Employment Program Committee

Black men and women have made significant day-to-day contributions to the social, cultural and economic progress of the nation, yet, standard references have largely ignored their historical roles.

In an attempt to increase the awareness of some of these contributions, the Black Employment Program Committee has developed a series of quizzes for Black History Month.

Test your knowledge of African Americans in history. Match the name of the African American to the description.

1. He was the first black general officer in the U.S. military. He began a 50-year distinguished military career in 1898 during the Spanish American War.

Born in Washington, D.C., in 1877, he graduated from Howard University and was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in 1901, made colonel in 1930 and brigadier general in 1940.

In addition to his military commands, he was a professor of Military Science and Tactics at Wilberforce and Tuskegee.

2. First black officer to graduate from West Point (1877) and the first to be assigned to a command position in a black unit after the Civil War.

Born in 1856 he was the victim of a controversial court-martial proceeding, which cut short the career of one of the most promising black military men to wear the uniform of an American soldier.

He was not defeated by the debacle, however.

He went on, as a civilian, to become a notable figure on the frontier — as a mining engineer and consultant and later as a translator of Spanish Land Grants.

3. He was a philanthropist and one of the leading skin specialists in the United States.

He was born in 1892. From 1924 to 1941, he did special research in Vienna, Freiberg and Paris where he made valuable contributions to the scientific treatment of syphilis and leprosy.

The dermatology clinic at Beilinsen Hospital Center for Israel bears his name as does a chapel at Dillard University in New Orleans.

Program to improve business quality

By Monica Manganaro
USAIC Public Affairs Office

About 2,000 Army managers and employees packed Marshall Auditorium for the introduction to a pilot management program, Jan. 31.

Post commander, Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire and guest speaker, Col. Edward L. Hubbard, safety officer at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., addressed those on hand for the kickoff of Fort Benning's Total Quality Management Program.

The post commander said the TQM program would accelerate change and improve the quality of business on post, but it would take commitment.

He said while Fort Benning workers are already doing part of this, quality improvement called for a long-term commitment by everyone.

Eventually, all employees will be exposed to the Quality Education System.

The initial phase is already underway with 1,200 managers and supervisors attending 10 weekly, two-hour training sessions.

During the course, employees learn to prevent errors and improve the quality of their work.

Sharing his feelings about the program, Hubbard drew on his experience as a former POW. He said we never really know our potential until we try.

He explained it was during his many years in captivity that he made a personal commitment to do his best every day.

As a manager familiar with TQM, Hubbard said the program combines leadership and common sense.

He said, "It's a matter of always looking for better ways to do things."

Fort Benning, local EMS representatives compare notes

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Emergency Medical Service representatives from east Alabama and west Georgia met with staff members of the 498th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion, Jan. 30, at the Officers' Club, to discuss future projects.

Topping the agenda was the Military Assistance to Safety and Traffic program spearheaded by Capt. Kenneth Quaglio, operations officer for 498th Med. Co.

The MAST program supplements existing EMS systems by providing military helicopters configured as air ambulances, crew members, medical equipment and supplies.

In addition to responding to serious civilian medical emergencies, MAST participates in interhospital transfers of patients.

For example, high-risk newborn infants, heart attack victims and poisoning cases are some possibilities of service recipients.

MAST participates in the pickup and delivery of blood, medicine, special equipment, donor organs and transport of medical personnel for emergency reasons.

> MAST assistance is normally provided within a 100-nautical-mile or a 116-statute-mile radius of Fort Benning.

The evacuation of noncritical patients from remote or inaccessible areas where ground transportation is not feasible may also be accomplished.

MAST aircraft are equipped with a hoist for rescue missions to assist in the safe extraction of personnel on the ground.

However, the hoist "in our minds constitutes a special situation," said Quaglio.

He said such operations are "risky" and vowed to "look at all alternatives. We certainly want to be safe," he said.

"We are the largest Blackhawk medevac unit in the continental United States," Quaglio said.

The 498th Med. Co. uses the latest UH-60 Blackhawk helicopters exclusively.

Since the unit is prohibited from competing with civilian agencies, they must first secure a letter of agreement from local governments whose jurisdiction they may affect.

This letter must specify that there will be no infringement on local air or ground medevac companies.

Competition with civilian medical transport enterprises is something strictly forbidden, according to the MAST doctrine.

MAST assistance is normally provided within a 100-nautical-mile or a 116-statute-mile radius of Fort Benning.

Quaglio said they would exceed the limit on a case-by-case basis.

Assistant Secretary of Defense visits Benning

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The Assistant Secretary of Defense for Special Operations and Low Intensity Conflict visited Fort Benning Feb. 5.

James R. Locher III, who recently filled the position, addressed the graduation of the Infantry Officers Advanced Course Class 5-89, visited the 75th Ranger Regimental Headquarters and held an impromptu press conference with local news media.

Locher's job calls for overall supervision (including policy and resources) of the special operations and low intensity conflict activities of the Department of Defense.

"(Special operations) is going to become a more important priority," said Locher.

"There's been a slow shift of emphasis, and we're looking for more funding."

The main units receiving attention under his administration are the Rangers, Navy SEALS, certain special aviation groups, civil affairs, psychological operations and Special Forces.

Locher said the role of the "Green Berets" may increase, but the numbers of both the Special Forces and the SEALS would definitely be expanded.

As far as any increase in the current size of the 75th Ranger Regiment, he said "I am not aware of" any moves to create a fourth Ranger battalion.

Locher said he felt that Fort Benning is a vital cog in the training process for low intensity conflict situations, citing the necessity of the Ranger, Airborne and Pathfinder schools, officer training and the School of Americas.

He also dicussed the role of Special Forces and other U.S. military advisors in Latin American countries. "Part of the role (of that military presence) is to professionalize host nations' military systems," he said.

"Narco-terrorism" often seen in some countries falls into Locher's definition of low intensity conflict.

However, he said direct involvement of U.S. military is "a last resort."

Locher is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy. He also earned his Master's Degree concentrating in managerial economics from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Before being appointed by the president to his current post, Locher spent more than 20 years in either a staff or advisor capacity involved with some aspect of defense issues.

Bayonet staff told to shape up or else

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

There were some pretty grumpy people around The Bayonet office this week.

Everything we tried turned into yucky, slimy, red clay.

We were criticized for what we did and criticized for what we didn't do.

Some people complained that we didn't run their stories. Others complained that we did, but put them in the wrong section, or spelled a name wrong or got our facts turned around.

It's weeks like last week when you wish the phone system wouldn't work.

Unfortunately, last week it worked just fine.

Hazardous duty pay was in order. Even our colonel was beating up on us.

Not even, "being stupid" worked as an excuse.

So Friday, I reported to Ranger John's desk to share misery by comparing battle scars and licking my wounds when the L.T. walked in whistling another of his inane tunes.

One thing about the L.T., he's always in an agreeable mood (makes me sick just thinking about his happy disposition).

It didn't take him long to figure out that he had a mutinous crew on his hands. So he called us together to see what the problems were.

That's something else I hate. I hate to work out my problems before their time. I like to let them simmer and stew for a while and feel sorry for myself.

But the L.T. was having none of that.

"What seems to be the trouble," he asked with a smile, leaning back in his chair.

"The world's against us," John said, getting to the point.

"What do you mean?" the L.T. asked.

"We're overworked, underpaid and constantly picked on," I said, trying to be more specific.

"Give me some examples," the L.T. said, refusing to let us return to our private complaint session.

"Okay," John said. "Last week we worked hard on the paper. We turned out what we thought was a good product. We had it all going nicely when all these bosses suddenly materialized and criticized us for a few minor headline problems. Nit-picky stuff."

"Yeah," I said. "Look at the local media. They're always making mistakes. Why in one story alone last week, the three TV stations and three radio stations all had different versions. They messed up on dates and ages.

Only the newspaper had it right — and that's a rarity. But I bet no one complained to them."

"So tell me this, Clyde," the L.T. began in one of his Solomonic tones, "because others make mistakes, is that justification for your mistakes?"

"I didn't say that," I sputtered. "I said I didn't think folks should come down so hard on us when we do make mistakes. After all, to err is human."

"Wrong mind set, Snively," the L.T. remonstrated me. "We need to do things right the first time. 'Everyone makes mistakes,' is an excuse of the lazy, the indolent and the unprofessional."

"Well, what about all those people like me who learn by our mistakes?" I asked.

"Wouldn't it be better to learn first and avoid the mistake?" the lieutenant retorted. "It would save a lot of time and effort. I mean, why do we never have time to do it right the first time, but always have time to do it again when we mess up?"

I could see I was getting nowhere. I looked to John for support. I knew I could count on him for some smart remark. But nothing.

He just sat there, shaking his head in agreement with what the L.T. was saying.

And if John didn't have anything to say, then the L.T. must be making sense. I told the L.T. I'd clean up my act, take criticism in the vein it was intended — as a means to improve — and get things right the first time, even if it meant using a dictionary when I wrote stories, and double checking my facts.

Now, if we can just get the gremlins in the computer to accept this, we'll be set.

Setting the record straight — women in combat

The Army's position on women in the Army is that women are a viable and valuable asset to the successful completion of any unit's mission.

By Joseph L. Allred
Army News Service

Now that the violent confrontation in Panama has subsided, and voices from both sides of the political spectrum have been sounded, maybe we can set the record straight as to the Army's position on the important issue of women in combat.

Women in the Army are a viable and valuable asset to the successful completion of any unit's mission. This is the same for men in the Army. Neither group is more, or less, important in the fulfillment of mission responsibility.

Those who assume that women are incapable of keeping up with men fail to understand the reality of American military society.

Women can, and do, meet every challenge placed in front of them, even at times accepting challenges that were not specifically given them.

These challenges further their professional abilities to meet the needs of the unit to which they are assigned.

As for Panama, many people seemed to be surprised that the women, when faced with adversity, succeeded.

Why would anyone expect any less than that success?

Those soldiers were trained to perform a mission, and they did; just as admirably and proficiently as their male counterpart officers, noncommissioned officers and enlisted soldiers.

By entering the military service, all soldiers accept the basic premise that when duty calls — whether it be as a nurse, truck driver, intelligence analyst, military policeman or parachute rigger — they will perform it, even at the sacrifice of life and limb.

Life and death options on the battlefield are available to all soldiers, be they men or women. Bullets and shrapnel recognize neither color nor gender.

Women always have been a part of the American military heritage, either by supporting fathers, husbands, sons or brothers or by serving alongside them in times of conflict.

Today, we have a less regimented society that allows women to enter the service and find success in a career that appeals to them.

In fact, in many cases we have men who are now supporting mothers, wives, daughters and sisters who are serving in the Army.

Women in the Army have become an important asset; they have important jobs to perform, and they do their jobs well.

As we have seen in the recent operation in Panama, women can encounter the same violent conflict that once was held more exclusively for the men of society.

As a general officer once put it, "The battlefield is a very lethal place." Today this is even a greater reality because of the multiple types of battlefields where modern war is waged.

In a recent letter, a retired officer from the Arizona Army National Guard wrote, "No matter what military specialty a woman is assigned, the enemy has the unique ability to change that specialty to infantry."

That is what happened in Panama.

The military police force that exchanged fire with members of the Panamanian Defense Force did not become infantry troops — they remained military police.

In that role, they conducted an operation similar to a violent crime situation often faced by civilian police officers — men, and women — in an American city.

They were expected to exchange gunfire at the appropriate time, and be successful in their police role — not as fire and maneuver teams of infantry, but as military police.

Exclusion from the combat arms branches is based on Army adherence to a long-standing policy derived from public law.

This is not to say that women are incapable of performing a combat role, but the American Congress has determined that women will not fill those roles.

It has nothing to do with ability, but with political, emotional and social sensitivities to the wishes of American society.

Until the law is changed — reflecting a change in society's sensitivities — the Army will do nothing to push women into combat units.

But should that day come, the Army has already acknowledged the fact that women casualties will be in direct proportion to the numbers in which they serve.

Operation Just Cause was not designed to test the ability of Army women in combat; but those who did become involved in firefights acquitted themselves well — and were expected to do just that.

Women in the Army represent a key element of the total force fully capable of accomplishing every mission assigned to them, and performing in an exemplary manner true to the ideals of the American Army.

Would America want anything less?

(Allred heads the print media branch in the Office of the Chief of Public Affairs.)

Nurses celebrate 89th birthday of corps

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning nurses celebrated the 89th birthday of the Army Nurse Corps in a retreat ceremony Feb. 2 at York Field.

A formation of two platoons, the band and a color guard bearing the nation's colors stood before Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire and Martin Army Community Hospital Department of Nursing chief, Col. Susie M. Sherrod, in the event marking the official birthday Feb. 5.

Although the nurses have only been officially recognized for 89 years. Nurses have been serving the Armed Services for 218 years.

It has been noted that women served in the Revolutionary, Civil and Spanish-American wars.

During the Revolutionary War, women tended sick and wounded soldiers. Many of their duties included: cleaning, washing, feeding and otherwise caring for the general needs of their charges.

These women weren't nurses in the professional sense, but they laid the groundwork for future military nurses.

With the outbreak of World War I, 10,000 nurses were serving overseas, and in July 1918, the Nurse Corps was redesignated the Army Nurse Corps.

Since then, nurses have served in World War II, Korea and Vietnam.

During a span of 89 years, more than 67,000 nurses have seen duty in this nation's armed conflicts; 410 have died, 17 from hostile fire; and 66 were taken prisoner.

Today, more than 4,000 men and women uphold the tradition of the corps and the motto that says it all, "Nurses are proud to care."

Keeping good soldiers in the Army is part of every leader's job. Whether you're an NCO or an officer, your leadership can have a powerful influence on your soldiers, especially on their decisions to reenlist.

Nobody knows better than you that when soldiers are treated fairly, with respect, and with a true concern for their goals and accomplishments, they're more likely to find their Army experience a positive one. And more likely to want to continue that experience.

As you know, it takes a lot to develop a good soldier. Time, patience, and effort. But the end result is worth it. Not just for a proud soldier, or the Army, but as a credit to your ability as a leader.

Next time you stand in front of your troops, remember that they're not just in the Army, they are the Army. And they're yours to keep.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

THEY'RE YOURS TO KEEP.

IOBC lieutenants sharpen techniques, navigation skills

By William B. Ostland
Infantry Officers Basic Course

The Company B "Warriors" of Infantry Officers Basic Course, Class 3-90, spent week three of the cycle sharpening and testing land navigation skills and individual tactical techniques.

One hundred and ninety-six lieutenants practiced land navigation Monday afternoon and evening. More practice was conducted Tuesday morning.

By 11:30 p.m. Tuesday, 100 lieutenants had passed the day and night land navigation requirement.

Wednesday and Thursday were spent learning and practicing individual tactical techniques, to include digging individual fighting positions.

Thursday's rain, however, turned many of the fighting positions into swimming pools.

The lieutenants learned that preparing fighting positions correctly the first time would save time and energy.

The tactical training culminated in a 13-kilometer road march, by squad, to Pierce Range.

Here, the students immediately conducted a squad live fire to "aggressively take and hold the hill."

Friday brought land navigation retraining and retesting for 96 of the lieutenants.

After assurances and tips from members of the Land Navigation Committee, the students aggressively attacked the day and night courses.

By 11:30 p.m. Friday, most of Co. B's lieutenants had satisfactorily demonstrated their ability to negotiate the day and night land navigation courses.

In addition, 4th Platoon participated in a test conducted by the Army Research Institute.

Half of the platoon served as a control group, while the other half received about four hours of additional land navigation training.

This training focused on terrain analysis and route planning to teach soldiers to navigate more accurately and tactically.

Fourth Platoon conducted another navigation exercise Saturday to provide additional data for the ARI.

In all, the "Warriors" moved by foot 70 to 120 kilometers last week, depending on their navigational abilities and their assigned platoon.

This week will be spent mastering the bayonet and M-60, along with many classes in Building 4.

Infantry School equipped with latest technology in radios

By Charles Showers and Calvin Ledbetter
Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry

The age of technology is here.

The Fort Benning Infantry School is now equipped with the new Single Channel Ground and Airborne Radio System.

The Sincgars will replace the current VHF-FM family of radios being used by today's forces.

The new radio offers a wide frequency spectrum, which is less susceptible to enemy jamming and more compatible with today's technical electronic equipment.

Students receiving the communication phase of their training will continue to receive training on the old VRC-12 family of radios in addition to the new Sincgars radio.

IOBC class braves elements in defense training

By Laurence Hopper
Infantry Officers Basic Course

Company C, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Officers Basic Course, received training in defense recently.

While some of the lieutenants tried to skirt the knee-deep creeks, others plowed through with loud gurgling noises.

Yet, no matter how hard they tried, the soldiers got their feet wet.

IOBC Class 1-90, 3rd Platoon left their night positions to perform a night ambush.

The lieutenants successfully completed the ambush and returned to their defensive positions for the night.

Capt. I. Salamin, who is from Jordan, said the ambush rehearsals were well done, but the execution did not go so well.

The next day the officers performed a Training Exercise Without Troops. Lieutenants performed a reconnaissance of the defensive position for which they had written an operations order.

"The TEWT was good training for me because I was put in position as platoon leader and had to brief and implement my operations order.

It was a great confidence builder, as well as a learning experience for my peers, said 2nd Lt. Jeremy Irvin.

That night, under cover of darkness, another ambush was rehearsed and executed. This time the ambush was professionally executed.

"The platoon ambush was a real improvement on the first ambush. Mistakes made in the first ambush were smoothed out.

This brought the platoon together into a more workable unit," said 2nd Lt. Kevin Sari.

On the final day of the field training exercise, the lieutenants performed a live-fire exercise from bunkers at Ferguson range.

2nd Lt. Arnold Gordus said, "I think it was the most beneficial day we spent while on the defense," referring to the live-fire exercise.

While cleaning his weapon at the end of the defense week, 2nd Lt. Sean Wells shared his thoughts about the week.

He said, "I learned how to conduct the different preparatory stages leading up to an ambush and how to set up a defensive position. This is the training I will be taking with me to my first assignment."

Officers branched into aviation

Officer Candidate School

Three Officer Candidate School graduates were commissioned into Army Aviation at ceremonies here Jan. 25.

The officers are: 2nd Lts. Michael Condon, William J. Kennedy and Michael A. Sparks.

Lt. Col. Michael S. Byington, assistant chief of staff for Garrison Operations, U.S. Army Aviation Center, spoke to and presented Aviation brass, courtesy of the USAAVNC Chapter, Army Aviation Association of America, to the officers during a special branching ceremony prior to their graduation.

Each officer received an Aviation Branch letter of welcome from Maj. Gen. Rudolph Ostovich III, the commanding general of the Aviation Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

The officers will continue their training at Fort Rucker where they will attend the Aviation Officer Basic Course.

They will then attend the Initial Entry Rotary Wing Course, with the exception of Sparks who is a flight school graduate.

First Walls Award presented to OCS candidate

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The first Jess Walls Distinguished Officer Candidate Award was given Jan. 25 to a graduate of Class 1-90.

2nd Lt. Edward Howell received the first award.

Walls was a graduate of the first Infantry Officer Candidate class on Sept. 27, 1941.

He distinguished himself in numerous assignments while in the Army, including being the first candidate to command the Student Brigade, U. S. Army Infantry School.

After retiring in 1966, Walls assisted in organizing the OCS Alumni Association and was elected its first treasurer.

In honor of Wall's achievements, an award in his name will be given to an outstanding graduate in each OCS class.

1/29th Inf. demonstrates Bradley capabilities

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A capabilities exercise could be compared to almost any other full-scale live production.

1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, conducted a Bradley capabilities exercise at Red Cloud Range Jan. 31, and to make the dress rehearsal complete, they even invited an audience.

Association of the U.S. Army Corporate members, School of Americas students, family members and soldiers from various units made up the audience.

Lt. Col. John Spears, commander, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., said family members were invited so they could see exactly what the soldiers do.

Spears said the spouses are picked up at a central point and bused to the battalion area.

"I give a short briefing, and my wife gives a group activity briefing," he said.

Next, is a trip to a dining facility, a tour of Fort Benning and then on to the CAPEX.

February: Children's Dental Health Month

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

February is National Children's Dental Health Month, and this year's slogan is "Smile America: There's magic in your smile."

The American Dental Association has sponsored the observance every year since 1948 to encourage good dental habits in children.

The military services have been strong supporters from the start, said Air Force Col. Ed Herbold, special assistant for dental affairs to the assistant secretary of defense for health affairs.

Preventive dentistry is not limited to February but is a year-round concern for military dentists, Herbold said.

Specialists in preventive dentistry have encouraged other military health care providers such as pediatricians to inform parents of the importance of dental health right from the beginning of life.

Parents are warned, for example, to avoid "baby bottle syndrome." This happens when an infant is given a bottle of formula, milk or juice before going to bed.

Sugars in the liquid interact with bacteria in the mouth to form acids that attack tooth enamel.

When the child is awake, saliva helps wash the acid away. During sleep, saliva flow decreases, and the liquids pool around the teeth, washing them in acid and resulting in tooth decay.

If the child needs a bottle for comfort, Herbold suggests using plain water.

Herbold also encourages parents to take their children to the dentist at an early age.

"The child who is introduced to the dentist as early as possible has a positive experience — a ride in the chair, a little tooth cleaning, a free toothbrush and a tube of children's toothpaste.

"This is much better than if the first experience is delayed until the child has an emergency condition," he said.

"Fluoride continues to be the greatest preventive measure against tooth decay," Herbold said.

"Fluoridated water, professional application of fluoride at the time of tooth cleaning and daily use of fluoride toothpaste all contribute to improved oral health.

"In addition, your dentist may recommend sealants to prevent decay. These are applied to the chewing surfaces of teeth that have pits and fissures, or rough places that can trap plaque.

Studies have shown that correctly applied sealants are extremely effective," Herbold said.

Local dentists explain dental health

By Joe Marde and Charles Wakefield
USA DENTAC

Dental health care providers view dental emergencies as problems involving the facial and oral structures.

Most emergencies fall within one of three categories: trauma, infection and pain.

Trauma is any action that damages body parts or injury to tissue. When trauma occurs to the oral or facial area, the dentist is first concerned with bleeding.

Sutures may be required to close traumatized tissue inside the mouth or on the face, even if bleeding has stopped, so healing can occur quickly and properly.

Inside the mouth, tissue injury may be larger than it first appears (especially the tongue) and should be evaluated by a dentist.

If bleeding occurs after tooth extraction, it is usually controlled by biting on gauze.

Another concern of the dental officer is fractured bones and teeth. Teeth that have been knocked out should be placed in milk and brought to the office.

Do not clean or wipe them off as important tissue on the tooth may be destroyed.

Fractured teeth can often be repaired, and fractured bones can heal with proper treatment.

A good sign that a broken bone is present is when the teeth do not bite together properly or there is great pain on biting.

There may be facial deformity — the jaw is displaced to one side and the right and left sides of the face appear different.

Infections almost always involve a tooth; and cause swelling, pain and difficulty moving the jaw.

These infections are called dental abscesses and are caused by bacteria that have caused decay in the teeth or infections in the gums.

All dental infections must be treated as soon as possible so that they do not spread throughout the body.

Since a decayed tooth is the most frequent cause of infection, this condition can usually be avoided by periodic visits to the dentist to treat problems when they are routine and simple.

Pain is also the major reason for seeking treatment for a dental emergency.

Through the use of medications and local anesthetics, patients can be made comfortable so the problem may be treated.

Emergency dental treatment can be provided by your regular dental clinic between 7:30 to 11 a.m. and 12:30 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Treatment of emergencies during duty hours is best as definite treatment can be rendered.

After duty hours (after 4 p.m. weekends and holidays), a dental officer is on call at Martin Army Community Hospital for true emergencies only.

Treatment during these hours is limited to stabilizing the patient's condition so he can function comfortably until regular duty hours, when definitive treatment will be provided in the patient's regular dental clinic.

Serious fractures or infections may require immediate treatment and admission to the hospital.

The best treatment for dental emergencies is prevention, so see your dentist regularly for checkups.

Eat a sensible diet and practice proper oral hygiene with toothbrush and floss, and many problems will be avoided.

No one likes to experience emergencies of any kind.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Optometry Clinic and Ophthalmology Clinic are two separate specialties, each performing different functions.

An optometrist examines eyes for corrections with glasses. If, in the course of the examination, the provider finds eye disease, he makes a referral to an ophthalmologist, who treats diseases of the eye either medically or surgically.

Martin Army Community Hospital is critically short of optometrists and has had to limit this service to active duty only.

This is not true in Ophthalmology, where services have actually increased.

In addition to two military specialists, Maj. Robert A. Mazzoli and Maj. Elizabeth Hansen, there is also a Partnership Provider, Dr. Steven L. Henslee, who works in the clinic one day each week.

Mazzoli said MACH has the best equipped Ophthalmology Clinic he has ever seen in a community hospital.

He said MACH has more state-of-the-art ophthalmic equipment than most medical centers.

The MACH Ophthalmology Service has the capability of laser surgery, as well as conventional surgery.

The staff performs surgery for cataracts when the patient's vision decreases to a degree that it interferes with his normal lifestyle.

Other services provided are: corneal transplants, medical and surgical treatment for glaucoma, pediatric ophthalmology, routine diabetic evaluation, diabetic laser treatments and plastic surgery, when medically indicated.

The clinic has a YAG/Argon laser, a combination of the two most frequently used lasers.

With this equipment, patients can have some procedures done on an outpatient basis.

Laser surgery is used to treat diabetes and glaucoma, as well as decreased vision after cataract surgery. Most patients are able to go home hours after having surgery.

All of these ophthalmology services are available to all categories of beneficiaries; active duty, retired and family members of both.

In addition to Mazzoli and Hansen, patients who are eligible for CHAMPUS may be given appointments with Henslee under the CHAMPUS Partnership Program.

This program offers care at MACH by a civilian provider, at no cost to the beneficiary and also results in savings to the government.

In other words, Henslee, as a Partnership provider, agrees to see patients at MACH and to accept what CHAMPUS pays as full payment.

This Partnership agreement was specifically initiated to increase access to care for our beneficiaries who are not on active duty.

To be given an Ophthalmology Clinic appointment, patients need a referral from a primary care clinic such as Outpatient Clinic, Family Practice, Pediatric Clinic, Troop Medical Clinic or PRIMUS.

Very Informed Parent Line; info available day or night

Fort Benning Schools

The abbreviation "VIP" has taken on new meaning in the Fort Benning School system this year.

Each school office at Fort Benning now has an informational phone recording, which can be dialed from 5 p.m. to 7 a.m. daily.

This access has been named Very Informed Parent Line.

The weekly service, which has been in place since early December, provides current information on activities in the particular school that is phoned.

It provides the school principal with another way of updating parents on events, important dates and special programs, which are taking place in the schools.

"Research tells us that the most important factor in a child's success is the involvement of his parents.

"Because we want our children to succeed, a strong positive home-school participation is critically important in an effective school.

"The VIP Line is another of the many efforts that the Fort Benning Schools make to reach out to our parents," said Loyd School principal, Dell Karr.

Other ways in which the Fort Benning schools communicate with their parents include a monthly newsletter from each school, as well as notes sent home from the classroom teacher.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My wife and I just received form letters from the Internal Revenue Service about our 1987 tax return.

They asked us to explain why I did not report income from my part-time job, where I made $600, why my wife did not report credit union dividends of $75 and why we did not claim the earned income credit.

We have an appointment to discuss specifics, but we are wondering why the IRS decided to audit us. Our income doesn't seem high enough to justify this. Any comments?

A. Like the Army, the Internal Revenue Service has eagerly embraced computerization.

All tax returns, whether filed electronically or mailed in the usual way, are subject to certain preliminary computer reviews that automatically look for errors or omissions on the return.

Using your Social Security Number, which is now required for all taxpayers and dependents over two years of age, the IRS computer checks arithmetic, W-2 Forms, interest reported by banks, the number of dependents claimed, brokerage and real estate transactions and can even check divorced parents to be sure that both do not claim the same child as a dependent.

However, the computer check may benefit you in some instances.

In your case, the IRS computer has isolated two items of apparent income not reported on your return, but about which reports were sent to IRS.

If you did not report part-time income, and if there was unreported interest income, then you will probably owe back taxes and penalties.

The third questioned item, the earned income credit, involves the possibility that you and your wife failed to claim a credit that could mean a refund of tax money to you.

When you compute the earned income credit, be sure to carefully complete the work sheet in your 1040 or 1040A instruction booklet before trying to claim the credit.

There are two particularly tricky areas of computing earned income credit for military personnel:

1. A soldier must report the value of his quarters and subsistence allowances as listed for his pay grade as income for purposes of computing the credit.

Because of the addition of these amounts, few soldiers will be able to claim the credit.

Failure to use the allowances in your computations could trigger the computer-generated questions.

2. A soldier who is otherwise eligible for the earned income credit, but who was stationed overseas for part or all of last year, may still qualify if his family members were in the U.S.

It must be emphasized that the letter you received is not an audit, but merely a computer-assisted check of your return.

An audit involves examination of your tax return by an individual, not a computer and is a much more involved process.

If you are selected for an audit, be sure to seek tax assistance.

For more information, you may wish to order a free copy of IRS Publication 3, "Tax Information for Military Personnel" by using the order blank in your tax package or by calling toll-free number 1-800-424-3676.

Your Legal Assistance Office maintains copies of most federal and many state tax forms from 1985 to date.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Energy consumption in Georgia has increased significantly over the past 25 years. In 1984, Georgia's energy use included:

- 28.1 million short-tons of coal
- 307 billion cubic-feet of natural gas
- 139.8 million barrels of oil
- 54.7 billion kilowatt-hours of electricity.

SAVE ARMY ENERGY

Between 1960 and 1985, Georgia's energy consumption nearly tripled.

In 1960, Georgia's energy consumption accounted for 1.4 percent of total U.S. energy consumption.

By 1984, Georgia's energy consumption accounted for 3.1 percent of total consumption, placing Georgia 12th among all states in terms of energy use and second only to Florida among the southeastern states.

Georgia's energy consumption in 1984 was 47 percent greater than in 1970.

Yet, during the same period, the state's population increased by only 27 percent.

Although use of all fuels increased, one of the most significant increases occurred with coal consumption.

Between 1960 and 1984, coal consumption increased almost 800 percent.

During this time period, coal became an important fuel for electricity production in Georgia, increasing almost four-fold during this same period.

Natural gas consumption in Georgia increased steadily throughout the 1960s, peaking in 1973.

Natural gas became an important heating fuel during this period and was relied upon increasingly for electricity production.

However, the oil embargo of 1973 resulted in the Federal government placing significant curbs on the use of oil in generating electricity.

Subsequently, natural gas use declined in 1976 but slowly increased throughout the 1970s and early 1980s.

Natural gas consumption was about 307 billion cubic feet in 1984. In 1989, that figure went up slightly.

Due to the large increase in population and changing transportation needs of the region, Georgia's petroleum consumption has tripled in the last 20 years.

Between 1960 and 1984, transportation fuel consumption increased five times.

These fuels include gasoline and diesel, used primarily in automobiles and trucks and also jet fuel used by the airline industry.

For many years, wood was the principal energy fuel used in Georgia and was replaced only recently by the fossil fuels of oil, coal and natural gas.

However, the energy crisis and the concurrent development of the tree chipping machine have resulted in renewed interest in wood as a fuel.

In 1981, Georgians consumed over 13 million tons of wood fuel.

As you can see, our use of energy seems to be continuously growing.

Energy conservation is important because it prolongs the amount of time our non-renewable energy resources will last.

In addition, conservation gives us a chance to "buy time." While we are conserving, we can work on developing new energy technologies that will ensure we have energy for the future.

For information regarding this article or any energy-related subject, contact the Energy Branch, 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

SOA selects 2nd quarter's top soldier, NCO

By Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of Americas

Two food service specialists from the U.S. Army School of the Americas' dining facility were named the School's Soldier and NCO of the Second Quarter.

According to Sgt. Robert E. Frarey and Spec. Marcos A. Duprey, they won the awards because of their "military bearing and knowledge."

"It sets us apart," Frarey said. "It's that little extra it takes to win."

Frarey, who has served in the Army for more than five years and recently reenlisted for three years, said he felt very confident appearing before the board members.

"I've been preparing for these kinds of things since I joined the Army," Frarey explained.

Duprey, who has served for more than four years, confessed to a little uneasiness during the board.

"You have a tendency to clam up and start to mumble," Duprey said, "but you have to stay calm and present yourself in a military way."

According to Frarey and Duprey, the ability to correct yourself and perform well under pressure is something they learned while serving in the Army.

"The number one pressure a cook has is preparing the meal properly and on time," Frarey said. "The clock is our biggest enemy.

"Three times a day, we have to hit that clock. One minute late and we're going to have some hungry, mad people outside the door. And it has to be fresh, hot food they're going to eat and enjoy."

"Being a cook is a lot harder than people think, if you do it right, and that's how a good cook does it — he does it right."

Both Frarey and Duprey acknowledged the efforts of their fellow cooks at the school as an inspiration and an aid to their success.

"We all feel we're good and can see the flaws in the other guy's work," Frarey said. "By winning, we can inspire the other guys to go for it."

Frarey, Duprey and the other cooks at the school were recently awarded Army Achievement Medals for their outstanding efforts during 1989.

Those cooks were Sgt. Derrick W. Johnson, Sgt. Ernest O. Glover Jr., Spec. Jose Figueroa and Spec. Steven M. Ward.

Also receiving an Army Achievement Medal was Sgt. 1st Class Lemesio R. Smith. Smith is the noncommissioned officer in charge of the dining facility who nominated Frarey and Duprey for the boards.

"They do their jobs to the best of their abilities and always try to seek self-improvement," Smith said. "That is why they won."

School of Americas names Bolivian officer assistant commandant

By Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of Americas

The School of the Americas has a new assistant commandant, a cavalry officer, who served in the Bolivian Army for 24 years.

Col. Alfredo Lara, whose last position was chief of planning for the Bolivian Army General Staff Operations, was named by the commanding general of the Bolivian army to succeed Col. Paulo C. Pavan of Brazil.

Pavan served as the school's assistant commandant since July 11, 1989.

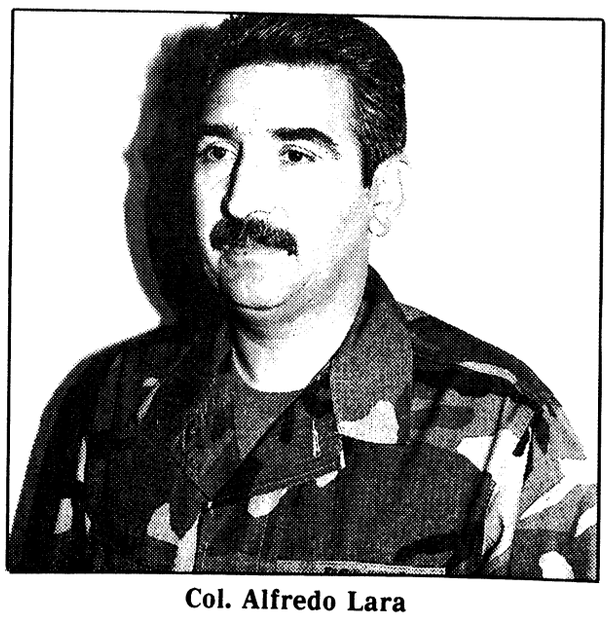
Lara, who won the Republic of Argentina War College Best Student Award at the Marshal Andres de Santa Cruz Command and Staff School, becomes the 10th assistant commandant at the school, a position always filled by a Latin American officer.

"I am very proud to represent my country at such a high level," Lara said. "The assistant commandant position is a job of enormous responsibility."

Lara, whose badges and titles include Jungle Expert, Counterinsurgency and Paratrooper badges, is a Military Professor in the first, second and third categories.

He said he plans to use his knowledge of low intensity conflict to broaden the scope of the school's doctrine.

Lara has been decorated for his part against guerrillas using counterinsurgency tactics.



Col. Alfredo Lara

"My knowledge of counterinsurgency will help the school's mission by informing students that liberty is of the utmost," Lara said.

In addition, Lara has an ultimate goal for helping to bring together the U.S. and Latin American armies into one, unified Armed Force.

"I want to look for an integration of all Latin American nations and the United States," Lara said. "To create what we've all been looking for, which is one American state, not a bunch of countries divided. That is something the school helps to foster."

Lara is scheduled to serve as assistant commandant at the school until January 1992.

Rep. Ray, local citizens host Black Observance

Office of Congressman Richard Ray

Congressman Richard Ray has announced that he and a committee of local citizens will host the third annual Black History Observance at the Columbus Iron Works Conventions and Trade Center Monday at 8 a.m.

The event is scheduled to last about one hour. Breakfast will be served.

Ray will be joined by Eunice Thomas, acting assistant secretary for Family Services of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, and Under Secretary of the Army John W. Shannon.

The event commemorates Black History Month and is dedicated to the recognition of individuals, organizations and communities for a better America.

Proceeds from the event will go to the House of Mercy in Columbus, a shelter for the homeless that was founded by Ocie Harris in 1976.

The House of Mercy offers a home to less fortunate people by providing them with meals, clothing, shelter, medical services, aid in finding employment and drug and alcohol recovery programs.

It relies solely on private donations for funding.

Pro says marabou jig is magic lure for bass

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

What weighs an eighth of an ounce, is made from the fluffy feathers of an ostrich and catches bass like magic?

The answer is the marabou jig; and, according to top professional bass tournament angler, Larry Nixon, this little piece of lead and feathers comes as close to being bass fishing's "magic lure" as anything on the market.

"You can nearly always catch bass with a marabou jig, because it just seems to float through the water," says the pro fisherman.

"It isn't a fish-finding lure because you can't cast it fast and cover a lot of water, but in depths 10 feet deep or less where there is submerged cover, or where there is heavy fishing pressure, marabou jigs will catch bass when nothing else will."

Marabou is the light, down-like hair that grows underneath an ostrich's wing. In water, it billows and floats with a life-like action that rubber and plastic jigs lack.

It has been used for many years not only for bass jigs but also for trout flies.

> "The lures are easy to fish and will get bites from just about any size bass."
>
> — Larry Nixon

"I especially like to use marabou jigs in the winter and early spring when bass aren't very active," Nixon explained.

"I prefer the 1/8- or 1/16-ounce sizes, and I usually attach a two-inch piece of plastic worm behind it.

"I fish it on four or six-pound test line, and try to swim it over deep cover, such as grass beds or around pier pilings."

To swim a marabou jig, Nixon uses a lift-and-fall rod tip action that brings the jig up above the cover and then lets it float softly back down. He does not fish the lure on the bottom.

"My favorite place to use marabou jigs is over deep, early spring grass beds," says the Evinrude pro. "I nearly won a national tournament on Sam Rayburn Reservoir swimming marabou jigs over deep grass, and I'll admit the lures also saved a lot of trips for me while I was a guide on Toledo Bend.

"The lures are easy to fish and will get bites from just about any size bass.

I've caught large mouth bass as heavy as seven pounds with marabou."

Nixon said he feels the little jigs are especially effective on lakes that receive heavy fishing pressure.

"If you are limited to weekends for your fishing," he says, "or have to fish where the bass are constantly bombarded with lures, marabou jigs will usually catch fish others have missed.

"Although these types of jigs have been available many years, bass fishermen today overlook them because they don't get much publicity and also because they require the use of light line.

"I was introduced to them one February years ago on Toledo Bend by a guide who consistently brought in limits of bass."

Golfers compete in pay day tourney

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

What's does a duffer do on a military pay day?

On Feb. 1, many area duffers played in the Commanding General's Pay Day Golf Tournament.

That tournament was the first of what is to be a monthly event at the Follow Me Golf Course.

According to the course marshal, William Webb, members of the local and military community got together for a four-ball scramble tournament.

A four-ball scramble is a game in which each of the players tees off and then hits the best shot of each of the four shots thereafter.

Webb said it was a good tournament and that he was pleased with the turnout.

"This is great community relations," he said. "There are some people who only come to Fort Benning for tournaments."

Webb said not only did they get support for the tournament from the community but several local businesses donated prizes and refreshments, as well.

Major contributors were Dixie Beer Company, Buffalo Rock Pepsi and Dick Meriaus of USPA and IRA.

Ranger students worship at Camp Darby

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Cold morning air surrounds the metal buildings and uniformed figures. The door to the hut opens, allowing stark white light to escape into the darkness.

Dirty woolen caps cover shaved heads as Ranger candidates filter into the Quonset hut at Camp Darby.

It is here that candidates go through the first two-week phase of U.S. Army Ranger training.

Weapons at their sides, boots covered with mud, the men methodically arrange themselves on the cold, gray, folding chairs.

It is 6 a.m. Sunday — a day most of them were raised to recognize as a day of worship and rest.

Knowing that the spiritual needs of soldiers are extremely important, two leaders decided to arrange Sunday Catholic and Protestant services.

Prior to this, services were given at random based upon the training schedule and availability of chaplains.

Lt. Col. Michael Pearce, helps arrange a time for Catholic Mass each Sunday.

Pearce is a Lay Eucharistic Minister, so if a priest is unavailable, he can distribute the holy sacrament.

This Sunday morning, however, Chap. (Col.) George Gudz is there to celebrate Mass.

Father Gudz greeted the tired and dirty soldiers as cheerfully as a pre-dawn disposition would allow.

These men have only a few winks of sleep, if any, behind them.

About 50 yards away, Chap. (Maj.) Steve Paschall similarly greets trainees who wish to attend a general Protestant service. They gather at picnic tables under a shelter in the darkness.

Maj. James Duhaime, 4th Ranger Training Brigade executive officer, assists the chaplain and delivers the sermon to the group of physically drained men.

About 90 percent of the Ranger candidates attend either service. Those who chose to decline the invitation to worship wait quietly between the two services. Many stand around burn barrels to warm themselves.

Once again inside the Quonset hut, against a background of maps, bare glaring light bulbs and a smell I can most clearly define as "soldiers in the field," Father Gudz celebrates Mass.

The congregation is unusually sleepy but seems willing to listen. A volunteer comes forward to do the readings, and after Mass, tracked the photographer down to ask for a copy of his photograph. (Photographer assumes it is for "Mom").

Before his sermon, Father Gudz studied the faces around the room and seemed aware of the needs of this unusual congregation. The scriptures that day discussed Saint John the Baptist, and for this group, it was a fitting subject.

"According to what we know about John the Baptist from the Bible," Father Gudz began in his usual, comfortable manner, "I think Saint John would have made a pretty good Ranger." He paused, awaiting a reaction, but the group at this point probably would have allowed anybody to join them — even a guy who wore sandals and ate locusts.

Father Gudz continued to relate and compare the readings so the men could somehow associate with the scriptures.

His intent was clearly to inspire and comfort them in an obvious time of need.

As they were leaving, many rustled up a smile and "morning'" in response to the photographer's greeting.

It may have been only in the imagination of an observer, but the men seemed to walk a little taller as they left the hut than they did before Mass.

Duhaime said earlier how important the spirituality of the soldier is. Perhaps this is what he meant.

The sun began to pitch light across the huts, paths and clearings of the deep Georgia woods. The Ranger candidates once again moved out and quickly blended into the surroundings.

Chap. Paschall once said that this was the best service he does all month. Father Gudz manages to add this early morning Mass to his schedule, which already often places him in two engagements at the same time.

The "hooah" and Rambo Ranger descriptions aside, the men today were filled with more than heroic gestures and circumstance.

A Ranger chaplain once recounted how men looked to him as they received communion hours before air-dropping into hostilities in Panama. "They were totally humble before the Lord," he said.

On this Sunday morning, these men took the opportunity to salvage one part of normality in their lives.

Their career goals were important enough to attend Ranger school, and their spiritual strength important enough to replenish or build anew — even in a cold Quonset hut or amidst the early morning darkness.

And they knew today was Sunday.

Pioneer began 1st independent black church movement in U.S.

By Herbert White
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

There were many laborers and Protestants who pioneered the emergence of Black America.

Their contributions have disappeared over time, but the fruits of their labor still exist. George Liele was one of these men.

Liele was born in Virginia around 1750. Before the onset of the Revolutionary War, Liele moved to Georgia with his master, Henry Sharpe, a Baptist deacon.

Around 1772, Liele was converted by Matthew Moore, a white Baptist minister.

Because of his aptitude and extreme commitment to preaching, Liele was given his freedom. In 1775, he was ordained.

His preaching converted many slaves on plantations across South Carolina and Georgia.

One of his converts and companion, David George, established the Silver Bluff Church in Aiken County, S.C., in 1774.

In 1774, Liele founded a black congregation at Lama Craw, Ga., where he served until 1782.

A member of that congregation, Andrew Bryan, later went on to establish the first African Church in Savannah in 1788.

By looking at the success of Liele's converts, it can honestly be said that Liele caused the independent black church movement in America.

In 1782, Liele and his family left with the British and settled in Jamaica, West Indies.

Here, Liele established the first Baptist church on the island in 1784. By 1791, there were 350 members, including white people.

Liele was one of the earliest Baptist missionaries to go to a foreign field to preach the gospel, antedating William Carey's trip to India by a decade.

Liele was one who accepted the challenge of the mission, which Jesus entrusted to his apostles. He believed every word of it with his heart and soul, and he staked his life on it.

Busch Garden's Animal Tales create awareness of wildlife

Busch Gardens

Fun, fantasy and animal encounters await young conservationists in the new "Animal Tales" area at Tampa's Busch Gardens.

"Animal Tales" uses the art of story-telling together with live animals and puppets to help youngsters learn about their relationship with wildlife and the environment.

"Animal Tales" was created to provide a fun and memorable experience for our very young visitors," said Maureen Royal, Busch Gardens' conservation information coordinator.

"We wanted children in the preschool and primary age groups to have a fascinating place to learn about animals."

"Animal Tales" features a fairy tale setting where kids sit on rows of "toadstools" in a little country courtyard sure to kindle the young imagination.

Busch Gardens

Zoo keepers David Shelby (left) and David Seager examine a newborn Thompson's gazelle used as part of "Animal Tales."

But the magic ingredients are creative stories and hands-on, close-up encounters.

A live vulture, parrots, a rabbit, a turtle, a snake and even a tarantula spider together with an array of puppets take the stage to make carefully adapted stories come alive.

Chances to see or touch animals often helps to dispel misconceptions youngsters may have about certain species.

BLACK HISTORY QUIZ

Black Employment Program Committee

African American men and women have made significant day-to-day contributions to the social, cultural and economic progress of the nation; yet, standard references have largely ignored their historical roles.

To increase the awareness of some of these contributions, the Black Employment Program Committee has developed a series of four quizzes to be published each Friday during Black History Month.

Test your knowledge of African Americans in history.

★ ★ ★

● 1. First black Congressional Medal of Honor winner. Civil War Hero assigned to Company C, 54th Massachusetts Colored Infantry.

In 1863, he was cited for valor during the Battle of Fort Wagner, S.C., where he carried the colors and led the charge to the parapet after the standard bearer had been hit by rifle fire.

During this battle, he was severely wounded twice. For his actions, he was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor.

★ ★ ★

● 2. He devoted his life to research projects connected primarily with southern agriculture.

The products he derived from soybeans and peanuts revolutionized the economy of the South.

He was born a slave in Diamond Grove, Mo., in 1864. While working as a farm hand, he managed to obtain his high school education; he was the first black student at Simpson College, Indianola, Iowa, and graduated from Iowa Agricultural College where he also obtained his Masters.

He spent most of his life at Tuskegee Institute where he was buried in 1943.

★ ★ ★

● 3. Pioneer in open heart surgery. First to perform "open heart surgery" in the United States in 1893.

Born in 1856, he was orphaned and abandoned as a child. He worked as a roustabout on Great Lakes steamers and as a barber to put himself through Chicago Medical School where he graduated in 1883.

He founded Provident Hospital in 1893, and while working in the emergency ward, performed a procedure, which successfully re-attached an artery severed a fraction of an inch from the patient's heart.

★ ★ ★

● 4. Founder of the Black Freemasonry and one of America's first civil rights leaders.

Born in the British West Indies in 1735, he migrated to Boston as a young man and became an influential member of the black community there.

Self educated, he had a high regard for schooling and lobbied for schools for black children in Boston.

After serving in the Revolutionary War, he obtained a charter from Masons in England for African Lodge Number 459, which is the oldest black fraternal organization in America.

Many Masonic lodges celebrate Sept. 7 in honor of him.

★ ★ ★

● 5. One of the most prominent black journalists involved in the flourishing black press of the post civil war era.

He was born in 1856, the son of a reconstruction politician in Florida. He attended Howard University for two years and moved to New York City in 1878.

In 1883, he founded the "New York Age" newspaper, which became the leading black journal of opinion in the United States.

He crusaded against segregated schools and was responsible for coining the term "Afro-American" as a substitute for Negro in New York newspapers.

He joined Booker T. Washington in helping organize the National Negro Business League and later set up the Afro-American Council, which he regarded as the forerunner of the "Niagara Movement." He died in 1928.

43rd Engrs assist community, clear debris

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs

Armed with chain saws, about 30 soldiers from Companies B and C of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (combat heavy) helped clear debris left behind by tornado winds in downtown Columbus Saturday .

The task force, commanded by Capt. James Morrison, cut and removed fallen trees to clear the way for traffic in the Lake Bottom Park area.

In another area of Columbus, a team, headed by Staff Sgt. Richard St. Cry, assisted the Georgia Power Company in efforts to clear the area near the corner of 13th Street and 16th Avenue of downed power lines.

Spec. Nelson Ojeda, an electrician, was on the scene to assist the team with electrical problems resulting from the storm.

On post, another team of about nine engineers, lead by 2nd Lt. Adrienne Ruggles, cleared deadfall from roads.

Complaints can be expected when soldiers are called to duty unexpectedly on a weekend, but gripes from the engineers were minimal.

"I didn't hear a lot of complaints in our area," said Ruggles. She said that was because the teams knew what to do and went right to work.

Safety was the key to this mission. According to Ruggles, when the engineers encountered two fallen trees that were precariously entangled, they took extra precautions to ensure that no one was in danger of having the trees fall on them.

Although the mission of combat engineers is mainly construction, the 43rd Engineer Battalion had experience in storm relief.

Last fall, after Hurricane Hugo struck the Carolina coast, the engineers were called in to help with relief efforts.

The engineers were prepared to improvise, employing equipment that would normally be used for construction to clear fallen trees and other debris.

According to 1st Lt. Patricia Bedard, the engineers had been well prepared by their training and by deployment after Hurricane Hugo.

Bedard said the first units were ready to move just two hours after the request for assistance was received.

Dynamic qualities net Patterson for Fort Benning infantry officer

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

In gaining a commission, a Fort Benning lieutenant accomplished something that only 37 others have done.

2nd Lt. Douglas J. Morse is the 38th recipient of the Robert P. Patterson Award.

This award goes to the outstanding infantry graduate of Officer Candidate School during the previous year.

It is based on the qualities of leadership, academic achievements, aptitude and character.

Patterson, served as a captain in the Army in World War I and glorified his soldiering career by earning the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star and Purple Heart.

He later served as judge of the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and as Secretary of War in the Truman Administration.

Morse, whose father is a retired Air Force officer, joined the Army for adventure. When he enlisted, Special Forces was an option offered to new recruits.

He qualified for Special Forces in 1980 and stayed with that elite group as a medic until entering OCS in 1989.

Of the 18 military schools he's attended, he has been recognized as being one of the top in his class in half of them.

Schools such as the SF Qualification Course, SF Aidman Course, SF Medical Laboratory, The Command Language School, OCS and the Infantry Officers Basic Course are a few of the ones in which he did exceptionally well.

Morse is the first to say he wasn't trying to win honors, he just went to the school and did his best.

"I wasn't trying for the Patterson Award. As a matter of fact, I was stunned," he said. "There were many other super people in my class who were equally deserving."

He said he went to OCS to learn more about being a soldier and to become an officer.

"I didn't join the Army to become an officer, but I do think it's part of the natural progression of a soldier," he said.

"Education is the key to success," Morse said. "Everything you can learn, whether it be military or civilian, is important because the Army is becoming increasingly competitive. Education is a big part."

He said correspondence courses are an option if a soldier can't go to school.

Physical fitness is also very important to a soldier.

"You can't lead the troops from behind," Morse said. "You have to be up front, and a soldier can't do that if he's not physically fit."

As an officer, he'll have more responsibilities as a leader and a trainer, and he said he's ready for that.

"I want to be a good platoon leader and then a company commander," Morse said.

I'm going to do everything I can," he said. "But, I'm going to be realistic. I'm also going to give something back to my family for everything they've done for me."

Morse is married to the former Deborah M. Bexley. They have three children, Steven, Stuart and Sean.

Setting the record straight — awards, decorations and badges

By Maj. Joseph L. Allred
Army News Service

Badges of honor and distinction often are misunderstood by those who never wear them.

Since Vietnam, the American soldier's ribbons of honor have been ridiculed, misunderstood, scoffed at and generally berated by a large number of fellow citizens — the same citizens the soldier vows to protect and defend with life itself.

Never was the clamour louder, the public ridicule swifter than after the Grenada operation in 1983.

At that time, some members of the news media, along with certain political activists, appeared to be incensed over the number of awards presented to veterans of the operation.

Worthiness of an award is left to the subjective view of the soldier's peers and superiors, not the media.

Soldiers endure the pain, agony and deprivation of mortal combat; they also deserve the accolades and praise afforded to the victor — in life or death.

Military awards are designed to provide tangible recognition for specific acts of valor, exceptional service or achievement, special skills or qualifications and even non-combat acts of heroism.

According to Army Regulation 672-5-1, awards are designated by categories: decorations, service medals, service ribbons, badges, tabs, certificates and letters.

Each award is ranked in an order of precedence that identifies how and when the award may be worn or displayed.

This order of precedence indicates the relative priority that some hold over other awards and decorations.

While each award is distinguished individually for exceptional service, some connote greater valor, sacrifice and achievement than others. But all awards and decorations are equally important to the recipient.

Operation Just Cause, in Panama, will be no exception to the rule. Deserving soldiers will be honored by their peers and commanders for service rendered in a time of grave danger.

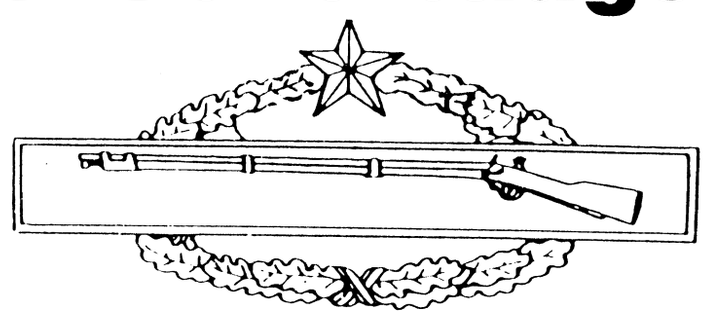
Awards, decorations and citations will be recommended, approved and presented to the most deserving soldiers and families of deceased soldiers, who sacrificed for the cause of freedom.

Much has been said about awarding the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantryman Badge. These will be two of the many awards presented to qualified soldiers.

They are not just awards of merit, they recognize combat duty and endangerment to life.

The Purple Heart may be awarded only to a soldier who suffers wounds or injuries received as a direct result of enemy actions.

It dates back to the earliest formal recognition for service to our nation. First awarded in 1783 by George Washington, it remains a testament to the total sacrifice and danger associated with the profession of arms.



Likewise is the Combat Infantryman Badge, a badge of distinction given to a select few — infantrymen.

This badge is awarded for performance of duties under hazardous conditions and circumstances of extraordinary hardship when in contact with enemy forces.

It goes only to infantry soldiers in the rank of colonel and below who serve in infantry units of brigade, regimental or smaller size during any time the unit is engaged in combat.

Although some non-infantry soldiers have received the badge, they were serving as detailed infantry at the time.

So select are its recipients that not even all infantrymen become eligible, only those in direct contact with enemy forces.

Let's say an infantry battalion becomes involved in battle with enemy forces, but only two companies come into contact with the enemy; only those who made contact would be eligible to receive the badge.

The Combat Medical Badge, is also restricted to those medical soldiers who accompany infantry troops in combat.

These badges stand out because of the extraordinary hazards faced by infantry soldiers and medics.

Of course, there are soldiers from other branches who serve with infantry, besides medics, such as artillery, air defense and engineers.

But they are not eligible for the award because of the award's unique nature. Many soldiers would like to wear the badge, as they feel they earned it as much as infantry troops, but they acknowledge the fact that this is an infantry-only badge of recognition.

In all conflicts, badges of honor will be earned and presented to soldiers deserving of them. Rarely will you find the soldier who sought first the award. Rather, you find those who sacrificed first with little or no thought of personal reward.

To these soldiers go the victory, honor and recognition of the awards and decorations they proudly wear.

SF 65-B presents a 'form-al' complaint

By Standard Form 65-B
Guest writer

Editor's note: Snively took the week off to honor our past Presidents, saying, as he lashed his ski rack to his hupmobile, that he didn't think one day was enough for these esteemed people. We therefore, have a guest column written by Standard Form 65-B.

I'm probably one of the most popular forms in your office. I'm handled by more people than any other form. Anyone can use me — for official business only of course — even supervisors who have few if any marketable skills beyond supervising.

Furthermore, if it weren't for me, your office would cease to operate. I have a smaller brother, Standard Form 65-A and a bigger brother, Standard Form 65-C.

But if you ask for me by those numbers, you'll probably get a big, "What the heck is that?"

I'm more commonly known as a shotgun envelope, or, as Snively would say, buckshot envelope, because of my holes. Refined people refer to me as a routing envelope.

We 65-Bs have a routing life span of 20. Or so I thought. When I landed in the PAO office (for the third time) I looked forward to a leisurely retirement, or maybe I'd get a part-time job as a note pad at the golf course.

But no, some tight-wad went and put a label on me and was getting ready to send me out on another mission when I was pulled off line to do this column.

That person, Missy Em, told me that since I'd been around the block a few times, I probably had some great tales to share.

I will admit, I've learned a few things. The foremost of which is don't pull us out of retirement. Why my sides have just about split, and my string has been missing for some time now.

So those of you who insist on getting a few more laps out of us in the interest of saving a few pennies, beware, you stand the chance of losing your distribution, as it will literally slip through the cracks.

One thing I can say, at least for Fort Benning, since we aren't authorized TDY funds to go to other posts, is that it's interesting. We see a lot of sights, hear a lot of things.

Boy, the stories I could tell. But I don't want to end up in the burn barrel, so I'll take them to the grave.

Something else too, is those guys and gals who deliver us . . . why they're great. I think to qualify for a job has mailman, you have to be part mind reader and part handwriting analyst. You certainly need to know everyone on post plus all the various codes people concoct.

Look at my past.

First there are the people who think initials will suffice. My first assignment was to go to P.M.

What is P.M.? Preventive Medicine, Preventive Maintenance or maybe Provost Marshal. What's your guess?

As it turned out, it was Preventive Medicine.

Many of my address boxes have just names. Nothing else, except maybe a Mrs. or a Mr. And what the heck is CIRCA? I always thought CIRCA stood for "about."

Another one had budget office. Which budget office? I mean, doesn't nearly every agency on post have a budget office?

Other times people just write in the major directorates like DCA, DCP and DOL. I guess they aren't anxious for the right person to get their distribution.

At the other extreme are those who get into the minutiae. For instance, "Mr. Roger Johns, DPTM, Building xxxx, 2nd floor, third desk from the door, right side of building."

These people write very small. I've noticed that some of our mail handlers are starting to carry magnifying glasses. Also, all that tiny writing tickles my ribs.

Another extreme is the person who's afraid his addressee will get confused with another, earlier one. So he takes a heavy black marker and marks through all the other addresses. Next he whips out a red marker and writes in the address.

Three things happen. First, the ink bleeds through the envelope onto the correspondence, leaving paper work with black and red smudges. Next, because he's written it so large, with such a broad stroke, no one can make it out. The final outcome is it gets lost. So who cares anyway since the smudged correspondence is no good.

I said even supervisors could use us. This is true, but I wish they would either read the directions over each of our routing columns, where it says name (or title) of addressee, agency, organization unit, address and room.

It'd make everyone's job much easier and help speed the on-campus mail.

February to honor blacks

In recognition of the numerous contributions of Black Americans to America's diverse ethnic, racial, social, political and religious history, the month of February is proclaimed "Black History Month" at Fort Benning.

This year's theme is "The Father of Black History, Carter G. Woodson, A Living Legacy."

Woodson devoted his life to promoting the contributions of black Americans. "Black History Month" is a means to help increase awareness and improve understanding between all Americans.

I encourage all personnel at this installation and in surrounding communities to join with fellow soldiers and citizens in enjoying activities at Fort Benning during "Black History Month 1990."

Two Fort Benning soldiers added to OCS Hall of Fame

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Officers Candidate School Hall of Fame gained 46 new members, including two Fort Benning soldiers, in an induction ceremony Feb. 9 in Marshall Auditorium.

The School Brigade Commander Col. James Jones and Deputy Post Commander Col. Barry Mahek were the two post soldiers inducted.

Guest speaker and member of the Hall of Fame, Chief, Readiness Command and Special Operations Command Gen. James J. Lindsay presented the certificates to the inductees.

Before presenting the certificates, Lindsay had his turn at the podium and recounted the first time he came to Benning and the circumstances that brought him here.

He was a college student and decided to come into the Army to serve in the Korean War. His plans were to get the GI Bill and get out.

He said he had no intention of staying in the Army and aspired to become a lawyer.

"I was not a particularly good candidate, I was 20 years old, wasn't very mature and something of a free spirit," he said. "When I was getting ready to take command of the Infantry Center, I almost started laughing when I thought about my commander and TAC officer seeing me taking over as commander."

Lindsay said he was number 110 out of a class of 120 and remarked, that piece of information was classified until now.

His first assignment after OCS was with the 82nd. It was there Lindsay realized he had learned a lot at OCS. It was also there he decided he didn't want to be a lawyer.

His topic then switched to the state of the Army.

"It's a smaller but efficient Army and a good Army," Lindsay said. "You have to be tactically and technically proficient and know your soldiers and your missions."

"Most importantly, you have to be yourself because there's nothing a soldier will spot faster. Take the things you've learned, apply them.

"Apply them to look after soldiers and accomplish the mission, and you will do well."

It's up to customers to follow banks' policies

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

A soldier wrote a check to pay for some groceries one Saturday evening. The next day, he realized he didn't have enough money in his account to cover the check.

Monday, he went to the automatic teller machine and deposited a check from his wife's out-of-state bank account into his account, thinking the deposit would clear before his check made it to the bank.

It didn't. The check bounced.

The soldier was not aware of his bank's funds availability policy. He learned the hard way.

Although, most banks' policies are similiar, not all are the same.

Ultimately, it is the customer's resonsibility to understand and follow his bank's policy.

Georgia financial instituations are required to support the standards of the Expedited Funds Availability Act.

The regulation "establishes specific periods of time after which financial institutions must make funds from deposited checks available to customers."

Financial instituations' general policies are to allow customers to withdraw funds deposited to their account on the next business day after a deposit is made.

In some cases, however, funds from a deposited check may not be immediately available.

Depending on the type of check deposited, the bank can put up to a seven-day hold on the check.

The first $100 of the deposit is made available on the first business day.

If a check must be held for any reason, R. Wayne Andrews, vice president CB&T's Fort Benning branch, said a notice will be issued to the customer notifying him of the hold and indicating when funds will be available.

Although Georgia banks are required to follow the standards of the availability act, the banks have the option to waiver the standards in accordance to their policies.

According to retired Col. David White, branch manager of Fort Benning's First Union Bank, customers with good banking records will have deposits credited to their accounts immediately.

CB&T, Andrews said, will make an exception to policy on a case-by-case basis and make every effort to help the customers.

At First Union, White said, special rules apply for customers with new accounts. During the first 30 days the account is open, certain checks will be held for seven business days. Again, the first $100 of the deposit will be available on the first business day after the deposit is made.

Another problem customers run into is deposits made to automatic teller machines.

For instance, Mary Dove, general manager of The Infantry Center Federal Credit Union explained, a customer can't deposit cash or checks into an ATM and expect to draw on the money immediately.

"Until the deposit is verified, the funds are not supposed to be withdrawn," she said.

If a customer writes a check or withdraws cash from an ATM before the deposit has been verified, he runs the risk of overdrawing his account.

Andrews, White and Dove said their respective banks post funds availability statements throughout the banks' lobbies and explain polices when a customer opens an account.

The availability act is also stated in the contract customers sign when opening an account.

The bottom line is customers are responsible for knowing their bank's policies.

This knowledge will prevent unneccessary problems.

Women's rights spelled out in Public Law 101-6 (1988)

Whereas American women of every race, class and ethnic background have made historic contributions to the growth and strength of our nation in countless recorded and unrecorded ways;

Whereas American women have played and continue to play a critical economic, cultural and social role in every sphere of the life of the nation by constituting a significant portion of the labor force working inside and outside of the home;

Whereas American women have played a unique role throughout the history of the nation by providing the majority of the volunteer labor force of the nation;

Whereas American women were particularly important in the establishment of early charitable, philanthropic and cultural institutions in our nation;

Whereas American women of every race, class and ethnic background served as early leaders in the forefront of every major progressive social change movement;

Whereas American women have been leaders, not only in securing their own rights of suffrage and equal opportunity but also in the abolitionist movement, the emancipation movement, the industrial labor movement, the civil rights movement and other movements, especially the peace movement, which created a more fair and just society for all; and

Whereas despite these contributions, the role of American women in history has been consistently overlooked and undervalued, in the literature, teaching and study of American history;

Now, therefore, be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representative of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that March 1989 and March 1990 are both designated as "Women's History Month."

The President is authorized and requested to issue a proclamation for each of these months calling upon the people of the United States to observe those months with appropriate programs, ceremonies and activities.

197th vehicles loaded for trip to NTC

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

Empty motor pools at Kelley Hill attest to the fact that the 197th Infantry Brigade's rotation to the National Training Center will get under way next week.

For the bulk of the brigade's soldiers, that means their flight out to California's Mojave Dessert is less than a week away.

However, most of the mechanized brigade's track and wheel vehicles have already begun their journey, by rail, to the NTC.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Frederick Thomas, brigade transportation noncommissioned officer, the empty motor pools are the result of a nearly round-the-clock operation by a brigade team Feb. 5 through 9 at the Sand Hill Rail Head.

"The brigade command sergeant major organized a brigade team for this year's rail-loading operation," Thomas said.

"Instead of having each unit concerned only with its own equipment, soldiers from every element of the brigade were part of a team effort to ensure that the operation ran smoothly and safely throughout the five-day period.

"Actually, there were two teams, one in the morning and one in the afternoon, so that no one got stressed out by having to work too long," he added.

According to Thomas, the railhead operation was a culmination of several months of effort.

"It took about three to four months to put together our load plans, along with designating the rail-load teams to make this operation successful," he said.

"We tested the plan back in December when we held a training exercise without troops, or TEWT, sending commanders and other leaders out to the NTC in preparation for the rotation."

Rail-loading the brigade's vehicles starts with the combined efforts of the brigade training staff, the transportation section of the post's Directorate of Logistics and a civilian railroad company, according to Capt. Rich Ellis, brigade transportation officer.

"We received a list of vehicle requirements from the brigade S-3, prepared rail-load plans specifying the number and kinds of railcars we needed and submitted our plans to the Directorate of Logistics. They contracted with the railroad to have the cars brought to Sand Hill on the dates we needed them," Ellis said.

"After the railcars were in place, loading them was primarily a military operation, with spotters from the different units directing the drivers as they moved their vehicles onto the cars," he continued.

"Then, the drivers and track commanders were responsible for tying down their vehicles. Rail-load teams tightened everything down, and a railroad inspector performed a final check before the cars were allowed to roll out of Sand Hill."

According to Ellis, the brigade loaded about 60 cars per day, starting as early as 6 a.m. and finishing as late as after midnight.

"Vehicles from all major elements of the 197th, except for those companies of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, that are going through transition to the M-1 tank, are being transported to the NTC," he said.

"Training at the NTC is organized into task forces from the 1st and 2nd battalions, 18th Infantry, with attached elements from other posts who also rail-loaded their equipment here."

Ellis and Thomas agreed that safety was the top priority throughout the operation.

"Before the soldiers started working on any of the railcars, they received a safety briefing to ensure they were in the proper uniform — Kevlar helmet and leather gloves — and knew what their jobs were," Ellis said.

"A representative from the post safety office was on the scene to give us safety tips and monitor the operations," Thomas added.

"We will have priority starting Feb. 19 at the Yermo Rail Head and will begin off-loading our equipment as soon as we arrive," Thomas said.

Soldiers who participated in Operation Just Cause are eligible to receive the Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal, Army officials announced Feb. 9.

In addition, Army units that were involved in the operation will be able to add campaign streamers to their organizational colors.

Army officials say Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone approved the issue of campaign streamers to units involved in Just Cause Feb. 8, after the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff approved issuing the AFEM to servicemembers who participated.

Soldiers who may receive the AFEM are those who were in the area of operations, which is defined as the total land area of Panama, its internal waters, territorial seas and the airspace above, between Dec. 20, 1989, and Jan. 31.

In addition, soldiers who were not located in the area described above but who were outside the continental United States in support of Just Cause may also receive the medal — members of aircrews involved in refueling, for example.

Army Chief of Staff Carl E. Vuono presented the first Just Cause campaign streamer to elements of the 160th Special Operations Aviation Group at Fort Campbell, Ky., Feb. 8.

Units and soldiers who were part of an assault landing during Just Cause will be authorized to display a bronze arrowhead on AFEM ribbons and streamers, as well as a bronze star on their parachute badges. A complete list of units is being compiled and will be released soon.

Partial listing of awards, decorations given during war, conflict

Army News Service

The following partial listing briefly describes individual military awards and decorations given in time of war or conflict for valor, such as occurred recently in Panama.

For a full explanation of what it takes to earn each honor, see Army Regulation 672-5-1.

Medal of Honor — Only the president of the United States presents this award for distinguished service to those who perform with gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of their lives above and beyond the call of duty.

Distinguished Service Cross — Awarded for showing extraordinary heroism that doesn't justify the award of a Medal of Honor.

Silver Star — This award distinguishes those who show gallantry in action against an enemy of the U.S. during military operations involving conflict with an opposing force.

Distinguished Flying Cross — Heroism or extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight represent the key criteria for this honor.

Soldiers Medal — When personal injury or danger and the voluntary risk of life under conditions not involving conflict with an armed enemy occurs, this medal may be awarded.

Bronze Star Medal — Awarded for distinguished acts of heroism or meritorious service or achievement not involving participation in aerial flight.

Purple Heart — Awarded to both military and civilians who are wounded or killed or those who die after being wounded during combat.

Combat Infantryman Badge — Awarded to Infantry soldiers who perform the duty satisfactorily while assigned or attached to a unit engaged in active ground combat. Only one award is authorized for service in Vietnam, Laos, the Dominican Republic, Korea and Grenada.

Combat Medical Badge — Awarded to medical personnel performing their duties while attached or assigned to an Infantry unit during active ground combat.

As with the Combat Infantryman Badge, only one award is authorized for service in Vietnam, Laos, the Dominican Republic, Korea and Grenada.

Combat Parachutist Badge — Awarded to servicemembers who participate in at least one combat parachute jump. A bronze service star is worm on the parachutist badge denoting a combat parachute jump.

In addition to individuals, units also may receive streamers and other collective awards.

For example, when 65 percent of the members of a unit receive the Combat Infantry Badge, the unit will be awarded a Combat Infantry Streamer.

When a medical unit authorized a color, distinguishing flag or guidon sees 65 percent of its members awarded the Combat Medical Badge, the unit will be awarded the Combat Medical Streamer.

Army personnel officials explain that decorations are awarded mainly to soldiers for services rendered while on active duty.

However, certain criteria apply to establishing awards for personnel in other categories. For detailed information, check AR 672-5-1.

Unit patches indicating former wartime service are not considered awards. They are authorized when four criteria are met:

- The unit is assigned to an area of operations declared hostile by the Secretary of the Army or higher or a declaration of war has been passed by Congress.
- The units must have actively participated in or supported ground combat operations against hostile forces in which they were exposed to the threat of enemy action or fire either directly or indirectly.
- The operation normally must have lasted for more than 30 days (waivers may be requested for this).
- Authorization to wear the patch must be approved by the Army chief of staff.

'Pioneers' go all out for Spouses' Day

By Beau P. Springer
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, "Pioneers" went all out for their second quarterly Spouse Orientation Day Jan. 31.

Spouse Orientation Day is a day-long affair that provides "Pioneer" spouses with an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the work environment, equipment capabilities, other spouses, chain of command and 1st Bn., 29th's mission and magnitude.

1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., has 850 permanent party soldiers servicing more than 100 wheeled vehicles, 120 M-113s and 160 Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicles.

These support nearly all courses of the Infantry School from One Station Unit Training to the Infantry Officer's courses).

After the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., Commander Lt. Col. John A. Spears' briefing, Mrs. Spears discussed the facilities available on post for family members, the successes the "Pioneer" spouses have enjoyed recently (including two bake sales, a battalion picnic and the battalion Christmas party) and the family support networks of the battalion.

The spouses were grouped into their respective companies for further discussions of company issues by some of the veteran wives of the company.

They then adjourned to lunch at 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.'s Dining Facility and were later given a bus tour of Fort Benning's facilities.

The "Pioneer" Spouse Orientation Day concluded with a bang — the Capabilities Exercise at Red Cloud Range, which was supported, hosted and performed by the "Pioneer" soldiers of 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Martin Army to begin screening for cataracts

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Optometry and Ophthalmology Services, in the Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital, will soon provide a new service.

There are plans to begin conducting cataract screening clinics.

The first clinics will be March 2 and 9 and will be limited to 25 patients on each date.

All authorized beneficiaries are eligible for this service.

The first 50 patients who call for an appointment will be seen.

Future cataract screening clinics will be scheduled as the need arises.

The purpose of this clinic is to offer screening for the presence of cataracts to those individuals who have poor vision.

It is an opportunity for patients with failing vision, who do not know if they have cataracts or those who have been told they have cataracts and would like a second opinion to be screened.

This is the only service offered in this special clinic. It will not include examinations for prescriptions for glasses, glaucoma checks or dilated examinations.

This is only for patients who have no known ocular disease and are not already under the care of an ophthlmologist.

If necessary, patients will be given an appointment, at a later date, for a complete examination.

To make appointments for this special clinic, call 544-3041/3042/3043 and request a cataract screening appointment.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Oil prices are surging, domestic production is falling and the United States is relying more on imported petroleum than at any time since the eve of the 1973 OPEC oil embargo.

Several factors contributed to the jolt upward in home heating oil prices.

Four mild winters followed by the coldest December in a century, refinery accidents and freeze-related production problems rocketed prices 60 cents or more in December.

Gasoline pump prices have been spurting by as much as 3 to 6 cents a gallon in the past week.

While usually stockpiling gasoline in preparation of the spring driving season, reports of shrinking gasoline stocks scared the market.

The problem would appear to be the same overtaxed refineries and recent efforts to extract more heating fuel and therefore less gasoline from every barrel of crude.

Milder weather and repairs will help ease the gasoline shortage a great deal.

Prices for crude oil will depend mostly on the balance of worldwide demand and supply.

World demand, which has been growing at a two- to three-percent clip since 1985, will probably expand more slowly.

Although Japan and the Pacific Rim are booming, the United States and Europe are shifting into a lower gear.

On the supply side, there is good news and bad.

Although the output has slowed by the world's number one producer, the USSR, Norway and the United Kingdom have started to pump more oil again.

Even though OPEC holds more power than it has since the early '80s, its ability to push through big price hikes remains limited.

This is due to consumer countries, particularly the United States, holding huge strategic stockpiles. These were absent during the last two oil crises.

Further, billions of dollars are being spent on new oil-drilling rigs, which add to the gap between OPEC's capacity and current demand.

OPEC's most immediate problem is preventing a price slump after the peak winter demand fades.

As consumers, we may feel the impact in several areas. Airlines have abruptly added a surcharge to their fares to help cover spiraling jet-fuel costs.

Trucking companies have begun to pass along the rising cost of diesel oil, which in just one month shot up 30 percent to $1.35 a gallon, and as motorists, we will all be affected with higher gasoline prices.

No one, however, will feel the pinch more than heating oil customers.

During the cold snap in December, demand was so great that some distributors ran dry.

The clamor for supply pushed prices up as high as $1.50 a gallon, a 50-percent increase in one month.

While the energy squeeze is far less severe than the shocks of the '70s, the days of cheap and abundant oil are probably gone.

We need to lessen our demand. That is where conservation enters the picture. It is up to us to ensure the prudent use of our resources.

For more information on this or any other energy-related subject, contact the Energy Branch, 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I have been trying to figure out my income taxes for 1989, and I believe my wife and I will be getting a refund of about $1,000.

I want to be absolutely sure about my return, so I'm going to get help in preparing it.

I saw an advertisement by a furniture store that said store personnel would prepare the tax return and file it for me.

The advertisement also said I could get an "instant tax refund."

I wouldn't mind having the money right now, but wondered if there are any problems with this sort of thing.

A. The "instant tax refund" to which you refer is actually a loan that must be repaid.

Obviously, the company that offers this service expects to be repaid out of your actual refund check.

While this may seem like an ideal way to get hold of your $1,000 quickly, there are a couple of potential problems.

First, your question does not mention the fee the company charges for this service, but be assured there is one.

For the sake of simplicity, let's assume the fee is $35.

Under certain circumstances, you may be shocked at the rate of interest you will be paying on your instant refund.

Instant refunds are made possible by electronic filing of tax returns, where the tax preparer actually sends your return into the IRS by computer.

Where a refund is due, electronic filing makes it possible to receive the refund from the IRS within 18 days (this is an average — it can take longer).

Thus, if you take an instant refund or loan on your tax refund of $1,000 for a free of $35, and the loan is repaid 18 days later, you have just paid interest on the loan at an annual rate of 71 percent!

Even if the tax return is not filed electronically, most refunds are mailed back within six to eight weeks. The annual percentage rate on the same loan for six weeks is 30.4 percent.

Second potential problem: What happens if you don't get the refund you thought you would? This can happen.

The same technology that allows instant filing of returns also allows government agencies easier methods of collecting money on past-due student loans and child support — by taking tax refunds.

A recent estimate suggested that 2.6 million potential refunds will be seized this year to satisfy child support obligations.

A computer audit of your return by the IRS for this year or prior years could result in a reduction of your anticipated refund.

If any of these things happen to you, there is still an obligation by you to repay the instant tax refund, just like any other loan.

This is also true where you have used the instant tax refund as all or part of a cash payment for the purchase of furniture, a car, or other merchandise.

Finally, if you expect to get a refund of $1,000, you need to think about changing the amount of tax being withheld from your pay during the year.

While it seems nice to get that big check from the government, you should realize that the tax refund is simply the government's way of repaying money it borrowed from you without having to pay any interest.

Given a $1,000 refund, that is $83 per month more you could have had in your paycheck, money you probably could have used during the year.

Don't forget that the Legal Assistance Office has its annual Tax Assistance Program up and running.

All units have tax advisors appointed and ready to help you, and the Tax Assistance Office, located in building 5, is open Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

If you don't know who your unit tax advisor is, call the Tax Office at 545-7026, or Legal Assistance at 545-3282.

ITC's top Drill Sgt. sets winning example

By Marilyn Balzarini
Infantry Training Center

Winning — it's a great feeling. It's the pay off for hard work and dedication.

Along with winning comes the self-satisfaction of knowing you're the best.

That's why winning a contest designed to measure professional excellence is a source of pride for motivated soldiers.

Staff Sgt. George Harrington is especially proud of winning the Infantry Training Center's Drill Sergeant of the Year competition.

"Being selected over professional soldiers like the ones in the competition was a great feeling," Harrington said.

He competed against five battalion Drill Sergeants of the Quarter in three categories: Physical training, the hands-on test of drill sergeant skills and a selection board, which tests the candidates' knowledge of military subjects and current events.

Harrington was inspired by the award ceremony for last year's winner, Staff Sgt. Louis Tinsley.

"I went to the ceremony for Sergeant Tinsley when I first became a drill sergeant," Harrington said. "That's what (made) me interested in competing."

"Sergeant Harrington was selected as our candidate for the Drill Sergeant of the Year competition because he always sets the example," said Capt. Bill Tarantino, Harrington's commander, Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry. "He's a soldier who takes his job seriously and who produces results."

Winning isn't a new experience for Harrington. He won Leadership Awards as the Primary Leadership Development and Basic Noncommissioned Officers courses, and he was the Honor Graduate at Drill Sergeant School.

During his year as a drill sergeant, Harrington trained two honor platoons and was named Drill Sergeant of the Cycle. His platoon regularly won streamers for accomplishments in infantry skills.

Harrington joined the Army in 1983. In six years he completed Airborne and Ranger schools, in addition to PLDC and BNCOC. He is jumpmaster qualified and has graduated from the Military Free-fall Parachuting School.

"I hope I can return to a Ranger unit after finishing my tour as a drill sergeant," Harrington said.

He was assigned to 1st Battalion, 75th Rangers, at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Ga., before coming to Fort Benning.

Retiring at 20 years as a command sergeant major is Harrington's long-range goal.

Since his selection as Drill Sergeant of the Year, Harrington has left Co. A and has joined Tinsley as an instructor of the Drill Sergeant School Orientation Course. DSSOC is designed to help soldiers prepare for Drill Sergeant School.

Along with instructing DSSOC, Harrington is preparing for the TRADOC Drill Sergeant of the Year competition slated for mid-April.

Drill Sergeants of the Year from every installation in TRADOC will compete in areas similar to the ones in ITC's contest.

"I've started a rigorous PT program, and I'm studying everything I can get my hands on in the way of drill sergeant skills," Harrington said.

When the TRADOC competition is over, Harrington says he'd like to take a little time off to spend with his wife Traci and their two-year-old son George.

Faith School to sponsor drug education program especially for parents

Fort Benning Schools

Faith Middle School is sponsoring a Parent Evening Thursday from 7 to 8:15 p.m. to further introduce Drug Abuse Resistance Education.

The prevention of substance use among school-aged children is a concern in every community in our nation today.

To address this problem, the Military Police Activity and the Fort Benning Schools are presenting DARE.

DARE is a substance use prevention program introduced to the Fort Benning Schools in 1987.

Lt. Walter Jackson, a Department of Defense Police Officer who is the instructor and the curriculum coordinator for the program, urges all parents to learn of DARE and to become a part of the triangle of care (School-Police-Parent).

Parents of students in the Fort Benning Schools are invited to this Parent Evening during which the goals of DARE will be explained.

Jackson will present a message that may be helpful to parents as they work to provide positive influences on their children's lives.

Students have whale of a time studying

Fort Benning Schools

Students at Edward A. White School are having a whale of a time learning about endangered animals.

Actually, whales are the animals being studied by Mary Moreland's second-grade students.

After learning about types of whales, their diets, means of communication and migration habits, the students learned the reasons why the whales are endangered.

Not content to learn about the whales being endangered, the class decided to do something about it.

Working through the International Wildlife Coalition, the class adopted a whale named Half Moon, a humpback seen off the coast of Massachusetts.

Additional activities included making bumper stickers with messages about protecting whales, writing letters to fishing companies asking them to use fishing methods safe for whales, carving whale models from soap and making T-shirts with slogans.

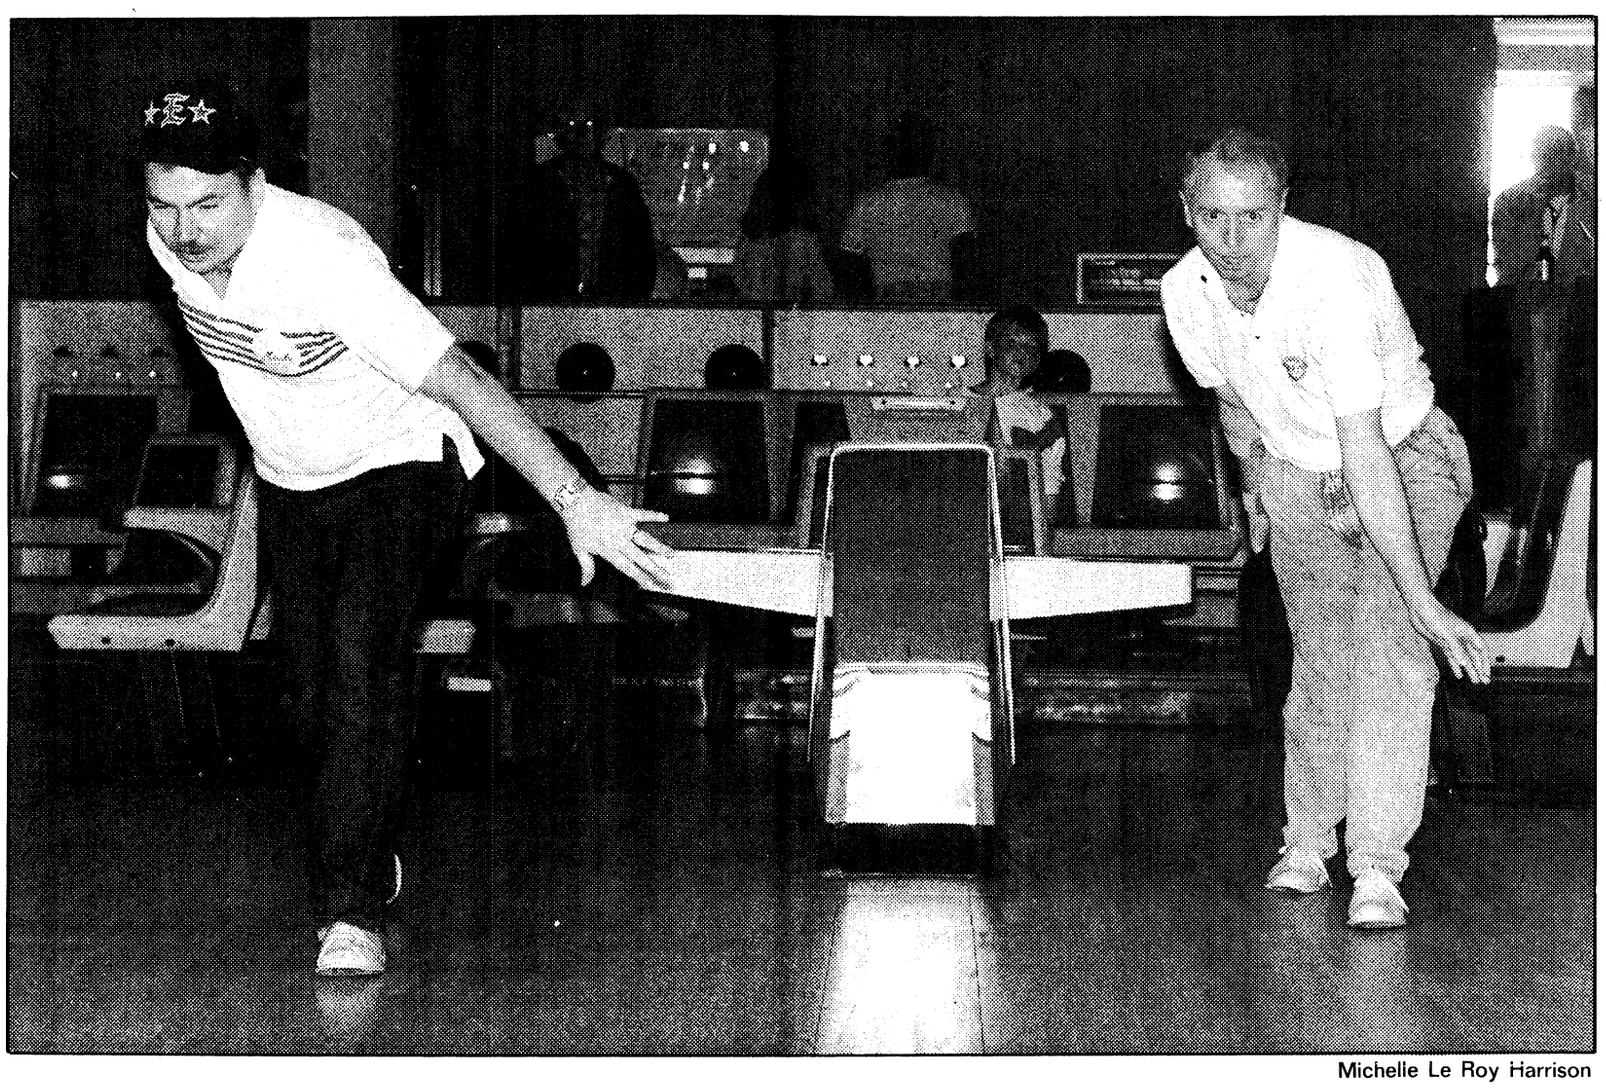
Bowlers spare nothing to win tourney



Michelle Le Roy Harrison

Mark Munro (left) and Rickey Smith display their winning forms, which helped them win first and second place, respectively, in the Columbus All-Star bowling tournament Sunday.

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

A Fort Benning soldier spared nothing to win the 12th annual Columbus All-Star bowling tournament at the Main Post Bowling Center Saturday and Sunday.

Mark Munro, Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, led the tournament throughout the finals, taking first place with an over-all score of 2,730.

The Columbus Men's Association, Coors Lite beer company and four local bowling centers sponsored the four-day tournament.

This is the first time Fort Benning has hosted the finals.

Sixty-eight participants began the tournament with elimination games Feb. 3 and 4 at Victory, Russell, Peachbowl and Main Post bowling centers.

Twelve bowlers with the highest total scores from 12 games went on to play in the finals.

Three Fort Benning soldiers made it into the finals: Munro, Tony Szeluga and Henry Baker.

Munro said Ricky Smith, a customer service manager for Sunshine Biscuits, Inc., was his biggest competition throughout the tournament. Although Smith out-bowled Munro in the last game by one point, he came in second with an over-all score of 2,671.

"You can't throw dough balls against mortars," Smith said of Munro who works at the mortar proponency office.

Munro said he wasn't sure he would win the tournament because he hadn't bowled lately.

The last time he bowled was during the Association of the U.S. Army's Operation Holiday bowling tournament where his team took first place.

He said he felt confident he would do well in this year's all-star tournament, though, because he did well in last year's tournament

Cash prizes were awarded to the 12 participants and trophies to the first- and second-place winners. The top five winners will go on to play in the state tournament.

The top 12 finishers and their scores:

1. Mark Munro 2,730
2. Ricky Smith 2,671
3. Tony Szeluga 2,608
4. Mike McNabb 2,575
5. Reno Cook 2,572
6. Mike Mormile 2,569
7. Steve Adams 2,517
8. Johnny Travis 2,474

Spencer wrestlers Area 1 champs

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Four wrestlers from Spencer High School discovered that a match is never over until the final scores are posted.

In the Area One Wrestling Championships Feb. 6, the Spencer Wrestling Team did well; several wins by Fort Benning family members came as a surprise.

Fred Barber, a senior at Spencer and son of Sgt. 1st Class Charles Barber, took nothing for granted during the tournament.

He said he was confident about his wrestling ability and had beaten his opponent three times earlier in the season.

However, "I took it one step at a time," he said.

In the end, Barber pinned his opponent from Hardaway High School for a victory by a nine-point margin and a regional title in the 145-pound weight class.

Other matches were not so easy.

Patrick Harkins won the 117-pound weight class but modestly said he didn't think he would win.

"I was behind," he said. "I got the lead with about 30 seconds left (using) a three point near-fall."

Patrick, a 17-year-old junior at Spencer, is the son of Col. Gerald Harkins.

Jacob Manso, son of Capt. Alfred Manso, said that his victory was also unexpected.

Manso had lost two earlier matches to his opponent from Shaw High School.

The match went the full time limit before Manso defeated his opponent for the first time in the season for a third-place win in the 103-pound weight class.

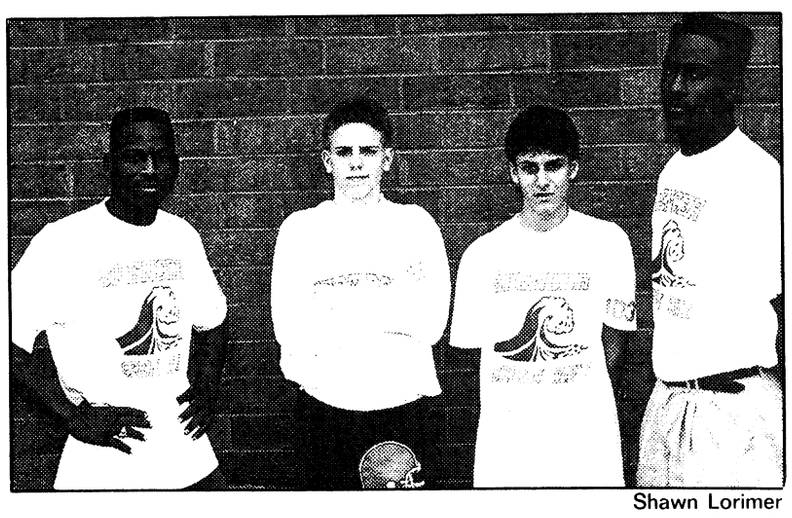
George Henderson Jr. had made up his mind beforehand that he would not lose.

"I had decided to win before I went out there," he said.

Henderson, son of Staff Sgt. George Henderson, said he knew by the third quarter of the match that he would defeat his opponent from Kendrick High School to take third in the 189-pound weight class.

There seems to be no clear explanation for the high success rate of Shaw wrestlers this year.

Although coach Mark Turner was reluctant to take credit for the wins, he did admit that three regional titles were unusual for a team of only eight wrestlers.



Shawn Lorimer

Spencer wrestlers Fred Barber (left), Patrick Harkins, Jacob Manso and George Henderson Jr. won regional matches.

However, some of the competitors were more anxious to credit Turner.

"This many wins are very unusual unless you have a coach like Mark Turner," explained one Spencer wrestler.

Turner, who was quite modest about his contributions to the team, explained that he was born and raised at Fort Benning, and being a military family member has helped him work with other military family members.

"We've been able to set goals and keep our best kids in the program," Turner said.

Although wrestlers compete as individuals, "Our wrestlers support one another," he said.

SPIRITUAL

Reflections Reflections

By Chap. Johnathan M. Smith
Infantry Training Center

The story of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs has entertained viewers young and old alike.

Many have listened with sharpened ears to the poetic words of the vain queen: "Mirror, mirror on the wall, who's the fairest of them all?"

She could not accept the fact that someone could be more beautiful than she.

Like the vain queen, we also cannot accept what we see in the mirror.

The truth about ourselves quite often hurts. We do not like to take an honest look at ourselves. We prefer to forget what we have seen.

God's word is compared to a mirror by St. James: "Anyone who listens to the word but does not do what it says is like a man who looks at his face in a mirror and, after looking at himself, goes away and immediately forgets what he looks like."

God's Word, like the queen's magic mirror, shows the truth. Part of that truth is that we are sinful.

Sometimes we look into God's word to prove ourselves right.

We look into it and say, "See, I have not killed anyone. I don't get drunk. I don't steal. I don't cheat on my spouse. See how good I am!"

But we cannot use God's word like make-up to cover up the moral blemishes all over our faces.

The truth is we kill when we hate. We steal when we do not work hard for our pay. We get drunk whenever we over-indulge ourselves with pleasure.

We cheat on the heavenly bridegroom when we are not faithful to his word.

Sometimes we turn the mirror of God's Word on others to make ourselves appear better by comparison.

But shaking a 20-pound chain reference Bible in someone else's face does not improve our own reflection in the eyes of God.

It only makes us all the more ugly.

We must work with people where they are and accept them for who they are unless we make judges of ourselves.

The other part of the truth is that God's word, like the magic mirror, shows us who is the fairest of them all — Jesus Christ.

Fairer than sunshine, fairer than the moonlight or all the stars in the sky, he is the very reflection in our lives that makes us acceptable in the eyes of God.

When we look into the mirror of God's word, we see the perfect life of Jesus Christ.

We see him being tempted by Satan but not sinning.

We see his holy, innocent suffering and death of the cross. There he took our sin upon himself and gave us his righteousness in return. And now he sits in glory at the right hand of God.

"Mirror, mirror on the wall, whose the fairest of them all?" Jesus Christ! O Heavenly father, I pray, let his life of love be reflected in my own for all the world to see.

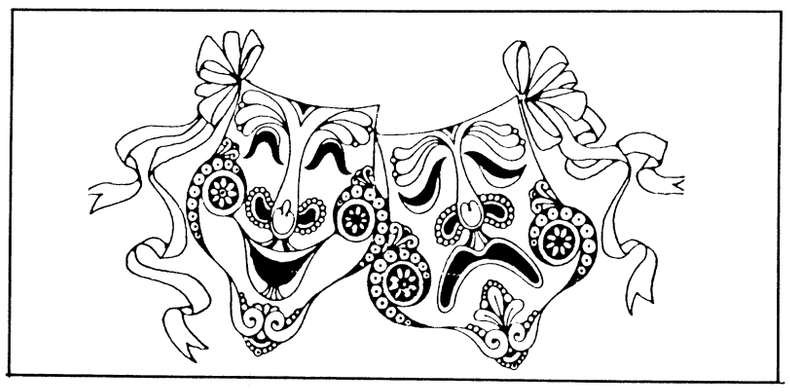
'Glory' is long overdue

REVIEW

By Darrell Cochran
Army News Service



"Glory" is not a "black" film, nor is it a "white" film. It is an American film every American should see — maybe more than once.

I say that not just because of my own deep feelings about the Civil War, although they are a definite motivator.

I say that because "Glory" tells a story with which every American should have been made familiar long before now and tells it in gripping, powerful fashion.

The film centers around Col. Robert Gould Shaw and four members of the regiment of black troops, which he raised and led, the 54th Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry.

The 54th was the first regularly constituted black regiment raised in the North, the first of the more than 180,000 blacks who fought for the Union — not counting the thousands of others who served as teamsters, cooks, bakers, blacksmiths and in other support roles.

The regiment earned its glory (from which the film's title is derived) in the ill-fated assault on Fort Wagner, S.C., on July 18, 1863.

Shaw, played by Mathew Broderick in his first departure from smart-aleck roles, was the son of Boston abolitionists who firmly believed that blacks should be recruited to help restore the Union and wipe out slavery.

Broderick brings the kind of wide-eyed enthusiasm — tempered by doubts of his own ability to lead — that the 24-year-old Shaw must have felt as he embarked on the most socially revolutionary enterprise of the period.

The four soldiers selected for the focus of the story are former grave digger Rawlins (Morgan Freeman); Trip, a bitter runaway slave (Denzel Washington, who already has a Golden Globe for his performance and will almost certainly be nominated for an Oscar); Sharts, a stuttering field hand played by Jhimi Kennedy; and Thomas Searles, a free man and boyhood friend of Shaw.

While these four are fictional characters, they are composites of members of the 54th and a fair cross-section of the kind of men who formed the regiment — both free blacks and former slaves, not just from Massachusetts but from all over the nation.

"Glory" presents its story of the 54th on two levels, which is another reason it should be seen more than once.

At its highest level, it is a powerful story of black Americans battling racism for a chance at their rightful place — and of some white Americans learning to put their bigotry aside and treat blacks as equals.

It should come as no surprise to any soldier of today that this acceptance first manifested itself among other soldiers, but even for them, it was far from automatic.

Indeed, in one of the film's most emotional scenes, (for me, at least) as the 54th marches out for its fatal assault on Fort Wagner, a white soldier exhorts them to "give 'em hell" to the cheers of his comrades — an expression symbolizing that in battle there are no racial bounds.

That message is further reinforced as a Confederate burial party drops Shaw's body in a common grave with those of his slain troops as the movie fades to black.

On its other level, "Glory" is a close-up, no-holds-barred look at America's last great face-to-face war, a war whose technology had outrun tactics and men blew each other apart from distances often close enough to literally "see the whites of their eyes" — with weapons whose effective range was nearly as great as ours today.

Parts of the movie's battle scenes — which in fact are only a minor part of the movie — aren't for the queasy.

James Horner's oratorio-like score, featuring the Boys Choir of Harlem, adds sweeping drama to the scenes on the screen.

To re-create the tactical rigidity of the Civil War battlefield, producer Freddy Fields rounded up thousands of Civil War re-enactors — men for whom the Civil War has become almost a second profession.

The results are the most realistic battle scenes filmed since D.W. Griffith called on Civil War veterans to help create "Birth of a Nation" in 1912.

This is not to say that 'Glory' is without flaws, which could have easily destroyed a weaker film.

For instance, Shaw never had to bully and threaten the quartermaster for uniforms and shoes; the men were issued everything they needed when they reached their camp of instruction.

The regimental sergeant major (Morgan Freeman in the film) was in fact one of two sons of abolitionist leader Frederick Douglass to serve with the 54th.

And Shaw never had to blackmail his brigade commander, Brig. Gen. George Strong (also fatally wounded at Fort Wagner) for the right to lead the attack in which he and more than 40 percent of his men would be killed or wounded.

But perhaps the film's greatest shortcoming lies not in what was written in, but what was left out.

Omitted from the story are the facts that the first black soldier to win the Medal of Honor, Sgt. Thomas Carney, was a member of the 54th, and he earned that medal as a private in the assault on Fort Wagner.

I believe it would have been just as easy to exchange the role of the freeman, Searles, for Carney and to depict his acts of heroism.

Despite these shortcomings, "Glory" is a film for all Americans, telling an American story too long left on the shelf.

No one should allow their preconceptions to keep them from seeing it — maybe more than once.

Editor's note: ("Glory," already playing on the West Coast and in the New York, Washington and Philadelphia areas, is scheduled for general release this month. It is rated "R" for graphic violence.)

Sgt. Wayne Emineth, a medical NCO with HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., demonstrates proper positioning of the hands for CPR.

197th medics teach CPR at local schools

By Troy Pearson
197th Infantry Brigade

The noncommissioned officers of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, recently expanded their role as trainers of future leaders when they taught cardiopulmonary resuscitation at two local high schools.

Sgt. Wayne Emineth and Sgt. Marc Tempalski gave the classes to about 60 Junior Reserve Officer Training Corps students at the Columbus and Shaw high schools.

According to retired Sgt. Maj. Talmage Glover, ROTC instructor for the two schools, Army medics have been called in to teach the students life-saving techniques for the last two years.

"The American Red Cross had been doing it for years, but we wanted to get service members involved so that the students could see a little of what they will be exposed to if they enter the Army," Glover said.

"It's good to get the students exposed to and interested in life-saving techniques as early as possible to enable them to become proficient in CPR," Tempalski said.

The two-day, four-hour class includes instruction in recognizing symptoms of heart attack and performing mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and the pressure-to-chest method.

Tempalski and Emineth said they enjoyed the opportunity to teach the potential soldiers and welcomed the opportunity to do so again.

"All of the students benefited from classes that the 197th Infantry Brigade medics provided," Glover said. "They are the experts in the medical field, and we appreciate all the support they've given to our Junior ROTC programs."

BLACK HISTORY QUIZ

Black Employment Program Committee

African American men and women have made significant day-to-day contributions to the social, cultural, and economic progress of the nation; yet, standard references have largely ignored their historical roles.

Test your knowledge of some of these contributions.

● 1. America's first black woman artist and also the first of her race and sex to be recognized as a sculptor.

Born in 1845 in upstate New York, she was the daughter of a Chippewa Indian mother and a free black father.

She was educated at Oberlin College, the first to admit women on a nonsegregated basis.

She lived her adult life in Boston and Rome, Italy.

Some of her many notable works include: Hiawatha, the Marriage, Hagar in the Wilderness, Forever Free, The Death of Cleopatra.

★ ★ ★

● 2. First black Catholic Bishop in the U.S. For 25 years, he presided over a dioceses covering Maine and New Hampshire.

He was born in Macon, Ga., in 1830, educated in New York and later, Holy Cross University, Mass.

As a pastor in primarily Irish congregations, he performed his priestly duties with devotion and eventually won the respect and admiration of his parishioners.

He was named Bishop of Portsmouth, Maine, in 1875. His brother Patrick, a Jesuit priest was President of Georgetown University from 1873-1882.

★ ★ ★

● 3. He invented the Shoe Lasting Machine, which revolutionized the shoe industry, cut shoe prices in half and doubled wages in the shoe manufacturing industry.

He was born in Dutch Guiana in 1852, he moved to Philadelphia and then to New England.

His invention made Lynn, Mass., the shoe manufacturing center of the world.

He died at age 37, before he had a chance to realize a share of the enormous profits derived from his invention.

★ ★ ★

● 4. In 1935, he was the first person to successfully apply mechanical refrigeration techniques to railroad cars and trucks, enabling them to ship perishable food products over long distances.

This new method inaugurated a change in the eating habits and patterns of the entire nation and allowed the development of food production facilities.

He first obtained notoriety in the 1920s when he developed a series of devices to adapt silent movie projectors to talkies.

He also developed an air conditioner for military field hospitals, a portable X-ray machine and a refrigerator for military field kitchens. He died in 1961 at the age of 70.

● 5. He was in charge of developing and producing the control rocket systems that guide lunar modules during moon landings.

He was the first black person to be hired By republic Aviation, Inc., as an aeronautical engineer.

Later he joined Greer Hydraulics, Inc., where he became a group project engineer and helped develop the first airborne radar beacon for locating crashed aircraft.

As a specialist in small rocket engine design, he was with Thiokol Chemical Corp.

★ JOBS ★
U.S. POSTAL SERVICE

OFFICIAL ANNOUNCEMENT . . . COLUMBUS AREA POST OFFICES HAVE RECEIVED AUTHORIZATION TO OPEN THE RURAL CARRIER EXAM TO ALL VETERANS AND SOON TO BE DISCHARGED PERSONNEL IN MARCH.

The area will accept applications for the Rural Carrier Exam from the general public soon.
An issue of last months Newsweek magazine noted that the average Postal worker earns $27,500 in salary and benefits. Military time counts toward these benefits. Workshops to help you prepare for the above exams will be offered by Postal Exam Courses. Instructors Jeanne Anderson and Bill Harold are considered to be the foremost qualified on how to gain employment with the Postal Service. These exams do not test general knowledge. Proper preparation is the key to getting hired, because people are hired for these positions based on their exam score. Veterans are given up to an extra 10 points on the exam and can claim veteran preference. The easy-to-learn techniques taught in these courses were designed by Mr. Harold. He is a former Postal employee, the author of 3 Postal Exam Guides, and has repeatedly scored 100% on Postal tests.

3 HOUR WORKSHOP: SCORE 95-100%

GUARANTEE: The time saving and accuracy-increasing methods taught in this course are so powerful that we will enter into a written agreement.
* You will score 95% or higher or your money will be refunded
* If you do not receive a job application-interview within 90 days of your score, or after discharge, your money will be refunded.

WORKSHOP TUITION is $40 and includes the guaranteed workshop, workbook, interview hints, study guide with 25 complete take-home exams, follow-up consultation privileges with free information phone number, home study program kit, personal notification of future application dates, and more.....
WANT TO RELOCATE? Upon discharge, for a period of 120 days, an ex-service person can take the exam in any city he or she wants. We also offer the Postal Alert Bulletin giving you postal exam dates nationwide. You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal review.

New Video Teleconference Center to increase productivity, cut TDY

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Video Teleconference Center is almost ready to go "on line."

In what has been described by experts as "the telephone of the 21st century," a fully-operational teleconference center is undergoing the final stages of installation, testing and acceptance.

The operational date has been tentatively set for Feb. 26.

Located in Infantry Hall, Room W207, the facility is described by Acting Director Lt. Col. Glenn J. Link as "state of the art; the best they can do in 1990."

The center permits face-to-face discussions, between two or more geographically dispersed locations, in the effort to increase productivity while decreasing temporary duty requirements often reserved for many high-level conferences.

The facility operates within the Department of the Army Headquarters/Training and Doctrine Command community of interest, which consists of similar conference room facilities at 21 different locations.

Conferences may be set up with about 60 different locations within FORSCOM, AMC and Air Force networks.

Funded by TRADOC, all equipment in the room, including the transmission net, is leased from American Telegraph & Telephone Company. Actual money for the funding will come from a reduction in TDY budgets.

The total cost of the room is almost $300,000.

The cost of operating on the net, known as a "TI Circuit," will run about $20,000 a month. This is opposed to the estimated $40,000 spent every month on this post for TDY expenses.

Link said that the cost of the facility and technology had "come down considerably," while the prices of travel have "continued to escalate."

"Initially, we have to spend money to save money," said Public Affairs Officer Lt. Col. McDonald Plummer.

The center is open to all government personnel on post at no cost to the individual. Link asked that coordinated requests be made at least a day in advance, including notifying the other parties involved.

The facility is equipped with five cameras; four voice-activated microphones; two 35-inch, color monitors; a video tape recorder and a Databeam.

According to room operator, Spec. Larry Sams, the Databeam is a sort of "video fax machine." It is capable of scanning materials in either color or black and white and transmitting those materials to other locations.

Hypothetically, in a meeting between post officials and the Pentagon, a proposal could be sent via Databeam, read here on screen, signed on screen and returned immediately via Databeam as a binding document.

In such cases, Sams said the TI Circuit is capable of "going secure" with Army COMSEC equipment with which AT&T is not involved. He said the net could process materials up through "secret" classification with "everything encrypted" in complete security.

The conference room has provisions for 20 participants. Six may sit at a conference table, with the remaining 14 in an adjacent gallery.

Link said the facility may be used in the near future for the signing of the post budget by Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire.

Soldiers dine with Miss Ga.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Most soldiers will never get a chance to have breakfast with a Miss America competitor.

Yet, several did just that at the Association of the U.S. Army Breakfast at the Harmony Church Field House Feb. 15 when Miss Georgia, Jamie Price, dined with the soldiers and sang for them, as well.

Price, however, was not the only source of entertainment, or the only item on the agenda of events at the breakfast.

Door prizes from AUSA corporate sponsors were given out, outstanding soldiers and civilians were recognized and the events of Panama were capsulized by 75th Ranger Regimental Commander, Col. Buck Kernan.

Kernan, summed it up by saying that some soldiers did some phenomenal things in Panama.

He pointed out that the training the Rangers do every day was validated during Operation Just Cause.

"I'm proud of the Rangers," he said. "I'm equally as proud of the Army because everyone was part of the mission."

To the leaders in the audience, Kernan explained the importance of training at squad and platoon levels.

"It's essential because you never know when you're going to be called out. A unit always has to be ready."

Two soldiers who fought in Panama were recognized for their actions there. Pfc. William Kelley, Co. C, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. and Spec. Dennis Harbison, Co. A, 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt., each received a plaque commending them.

Other soldiers recognized are:

Sgt. Henry D. McEachern, Co. D, 1st Bn., 507th PIR, NCO of the 1st Quarter, TSB.

Jamie Price, Miss Georgia

Spec. Lisa D. Patrick, HQ, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., Soldier of the 1st Quarter, TSB.

Cpl. John E. Wolf, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., NCO of 2nd Quarter.

Spec. Scott S. Bone, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., Soldier of the Quarter.

Staff Sgt. Michael Butolthh, Co. A, 4th Bn., 36th Inf., ITC, NCO of the 2nd Quarter.

Spec. Michael Barber, HHC, 1st Bn., 50th Inf., ITC, Soldier of the 2nd Quarter.

Staff Sgt. James K. Secoy, Co. D, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., NCO of the 2nd Quarter.

Robert Anderson, Chuck McClure, Sgt. Wade Shell and Spec. Cheryl Stall, AUSA.

Retired Maj. Gen. Robert Sullivan, AUSA.

Patriotic Civilian Service Awards were presented to Lonnie Jackson and retired Col. Jack Harron.

Officials say chemical agents pose no threat

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

Ninety-nine vials containing chemical agents, discovered during a routine investigation here, were flown by military aircraft Thursday to Pine Bluff Arsenal, Ark.

Crews from the U.S. Army Technical Escort Unit collected the vials in an area near Harmony Church and packed them in specially-sealed containers.

Pine Bluff Arsenal is capable of handling proper storage of these types of materials, said Carl Divinyi, chief of the environmental management branch.

According to Jim Arnold of the U.S. Army Toxic and Hazardous Materials Agency at Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., the chemicals "pose practically no threat at all."

According to Arnold, the vials were used in chemical agents identification training sets that are "basically no longer in existence."

Of the seven types of sets found, two have been identified. The vials contained carbonyl chloride and diluted solutions of mustard agent, lewisite and chloropicrin.

The concentrated materials in the sets are similar to chlorine gas, Arnold said.

In the form they were found, the chemicals are not offensive agents, said Lt. Col. McDonald Plummer Jr., post public affairs officer.

The chemicals, in liquid form, were hermetically sealed in glass vials about the size of test tubes, Arnold said.

He said the sets were used many years ago to train Army personnel in "the use and detection of military chemicals."

The vials were found after engineers doing surveys found a 1945 map with markings indicating there might be some chemicals stored in that area, Plummer said.

Arnold said he assumed that during the 30s, 40s and 50s, the accepted way of disposing of these chemicals was to bury them.

However, he said, by current standards, this is no longer accepted.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What motivated you to represent your service through wrestling?

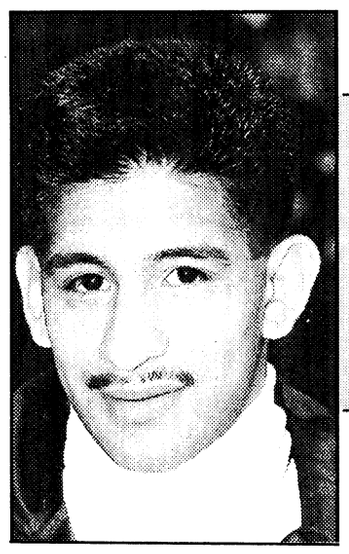
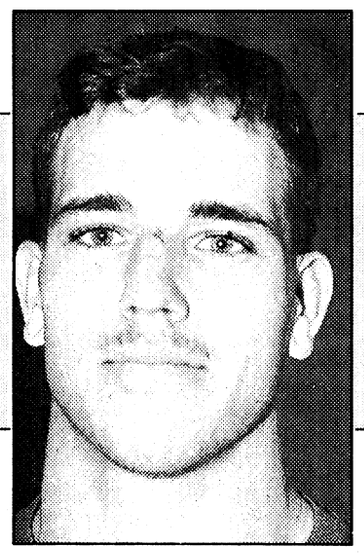
Sgt. Darryl Williams, Fort Bragg, N.C. — "I came into the Army to wrestle. The Army has a good program. Had I wrestled in college, I would not have the discipline I have now."

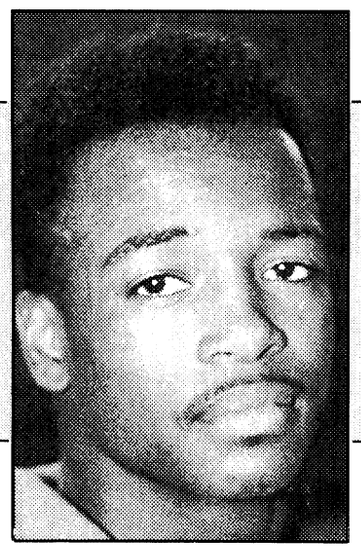


Spec. Tony Demos, Bremerhaven, Germany — "I am training for the Olympics in 1992 and 1996. The Army has a good program. Some people think we do it to get over, but some of our training is harder than any field duty I've done."

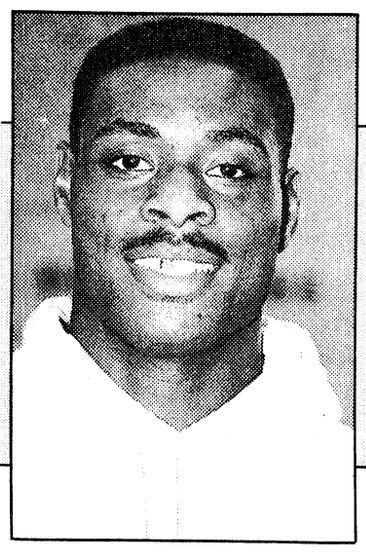
Spec. Martin Strmiska, Fort Campbell, Ky. — "I came into the service to wrestle. I joined the Army because I liked the team and the way things were run."



Ensign Todd Suko, Pensacola, Fla. — "I wrestled in college. The Navy Wrestling Camp is right where I'm stationed so I couldn't pass it up. I think if the opportunity is there and you have the ability, you shouldn't pass it up."



UT3 Reuben Killinger, Pensacola, Fla. — "It's the sport that I love. I've been in the Navy for five years, and I've been trying to get on the team ever since. I finally made it this year."



Seaman Jarvis Wyatt, San Diego, Calif. — "I've wrestled since high school, and I knew I was good. I wanted to wrestle for the Navy to show the service in a good light and to demonstrate my athletic prowess."

Spare tire flattens Snively's mood

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

It's tough to win around here.

I took a week off to help celebrate Presidents' Day. I went north where I hear there's supposed to be snow — hard to have Presidents' Day without snow. It's tradition.

I got there, and the ski resort was closed. So what do you do? Hang around and eat.

So I return, my stomach well-stocked with blubber and what's the first thing I hear from Large Sarge: "Hey Snive, guess what, I lost 11 pounds. I'm off the fat man's program."

Okay, no big deal. I'm happy for him. Or was, until he says, while narrowly eying a small bulge I'm trying to hide under my chest by wearing super baggy BDUs, "Looks like you may have put on a few extra pounds this past week."

"No problemo," I say. "I'll be down to my fighting weight prior to my annual weigh-in in April."

"It's not going to be that easy," Large Sarge says. "The company is weighing everyone by the end of the month. You've got a week."

"Well, then I guess it's time I broke out my 'border line weigh-in uniform,'" I say, thinking of the well-worn BDUs without buttons and the combat boots with very little sole.

Altogether it weighs in at about two pounds and since we're allotted eight pounds, that uniform buys me an extra six pounds, easy.

"The weigh-in uniform is PT gear," he said, deflating my ego with one quick jab.

I couldn't believe this was happening to me. Nothing was going right. And I'm really not fat. Okay, I have a few extra rolls around the gut, evidence of the good life that even a specialist can afford, but fat, never.

Well, yeah, according to the height-weight chart, I could stand to lose a couple of pounds, but that doesn't really prove anything, only that I'm too short for my weight.

As I schemed how I could beat the system . . . be sick for the rest of the month, take some more leave . . . Large Sarge said, "Guess you're going to have to lose some weight," his grasp of the obvious once more overwhelming me.

"I know that," I snapped back. "I'm just plotting my strategy."

"Seems to me the answer's simple. Don't eat so much."

"But I like to eat," I wailed.

"Then you'll need to exercise more," he said.

"But I don't like to exercise. PT in the morning is enough."

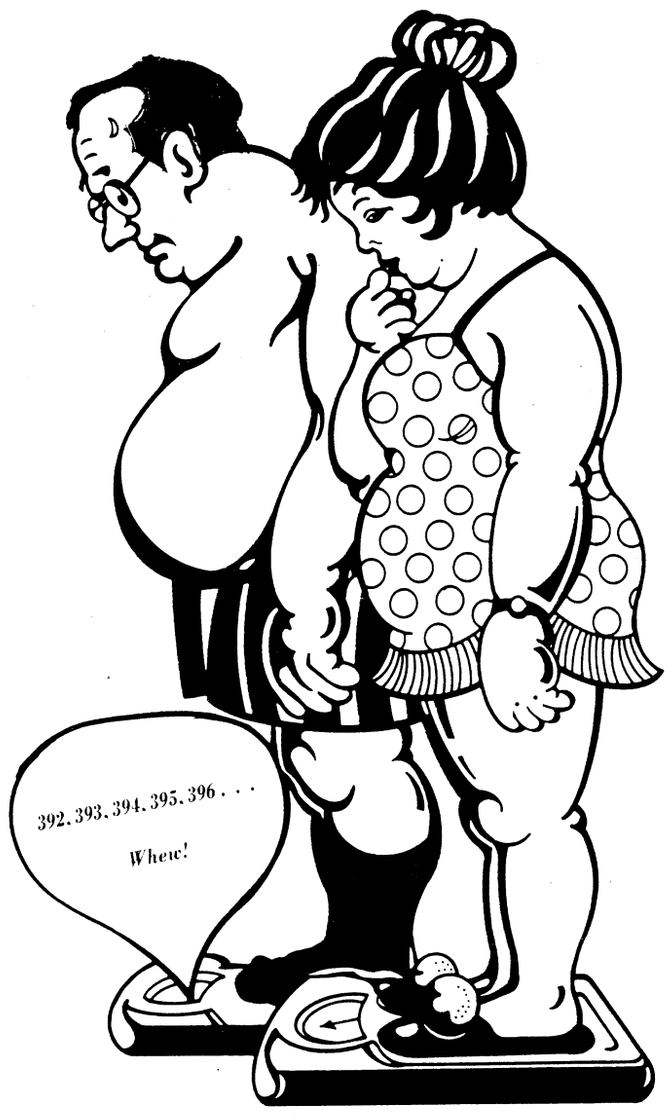
I was mulling all this over when it occurred to me what Large Sarge had first said to me, that he, the man with the original fallen chest, had actually gotten off the fat man's program.

If he could do it, I surely could. I mean if there was ever an eatin' machine invented, he was it.

"Tell me Sarge," I said. "How did you lose all that weight?"

"I went on a liquid diet for breakfast and lunch and worked out five times a week," he said, smiling proudly.

"You mean you only drank your breakfast and lunch?" I asked, incredulously. "What did you chew?"



"Nothing," he said.

"I can't believe that," I said. "You have to have something to chew. How else will your stomach know when you've had enough to eat?"

"Willpower," he said.

I wasn't sure about this willpower business, and I certainly didn't want to go on a liquid diet.

And I didn't want to prance around in a rubber suit or sit in a sauna like I'd seen a lot of people doing to knock off a few pounds.

Neither of those ideas appealed to me.

I finally decided to follow the Lt.'s advice and go see a dietitian at the hospital. My appointment's Monday.

I hope they have a pill I can take to lose six pounds real fast.

Former Professor of Military Science explains Tuskegee's black history

Tuskegee is one of the nation's most prestigious historically black colleges with an equally proud military heritage.

As a white officer, I had the unique honor to briefly occupy the Professor of Military Science position, which was once held throughout the 1920s and 30s by the Army's first black general officer, Brig. Gen. Benjamin O. Davis Sr.

Davis played an instrumental role in laying the groundwork for President Truman's Executive Order in 1948, which desegregated the Armed Forces.

This opened the doors to the many career opportunities that exist for black soldiers in the Army today.

Many more black soldiers have gone on to become generals since Davis' day.

Most of them have been graduates of the Army Reserve Officer Training Corps including the country's ranking military officer, Gen. Colin Powell, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The major contributors of the Army's black generals have been historically black colleges, which have contributed more black Army generals than the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

Tuskegee University alone has contributed many distinguished generals to include the late Gen. Chappies James, the first black American to hold four star rank.

Current Tuskegee graduates serving as general officers include Maj. Gen. Earnest Harrel and Brig. Gen. John Walters.

Lt. Col. Arthur L. Holmes Jr., the current commander and professor of military science of Tuskegee University's Army ROTC Battalion commented, "Ever since the establishment of the Senior ROTC program at Tuskegee by Davis, the numbers of high quality officers produced by the Army ROTC program has continued to grow.

An even more significant growth has been in the number of cadets who are attending the university under the Army ROTC Scholarship Program.

Tuskegee presently has more than 56 percent of its cadet corps on scholarship.

More than three-fourths of these cadets are majoring in engineering or high-tech fields.

The recent active duty accession rate of 61 percent of its graduates shows that the lieutenants produced by Tuskegee University are highly competitive with their peers from other colleges."

Opportunities abound today for black soldiers to earn both an Army officer's commission and a college degree through the Army ROTC "Green to Gold" scholarship program.

A soldier who wins one of these scholarships is released from active duty in the fall to attend the college of his choice as an Army ROTC cadet.

Upon graduation in his chosen field of study, the ROTC graduate is commissioned as a 2nd lieutenant in the regular Army, Army Reserve or Army National Guard.

Scholarship cadets normally incur a four-year, active duty obligation. Although some graduates request and receive reserve forces duty and perform their military obligations on a part-time basis.

Opportunities for black soldiers are much greater today than those of Davis' era at Tuskegee.

Today, Tuskegee boasts a school of aerospace engineering, nursing, business, as well as more than 100 other major fields of undergraduate study.

In addition to its proud military history, Tuskegee University was the center for the scientific research conducted by the renowned American scientist Dr. George Washington Carver.

Soldiers interested in attending Tuskegee University under the "Green to Gold" program, should contact Lt. Col. Arthur L. Holmes Jr., Professor of Military Science, Army ROTC Dept., Tuskegee University, P.O. Box AAA, Tuskegee Institute, Ala. 36088-1346 or call (205) 727-8379/8789.

Families extend gratitude for Just Cause support

To the Fort Benning and surrounding communities:

This is a thank you note I intended to write weeks ago, and I apologize to all of you for its tardy arrival.

On behalf of the wives and families of the 75th Ranger Regiment, I want you to know how much we appreciate the generous support given to us during "Operation Just Cause."

We truly appreciate and wish to acknowledge all the moral support and assistance given by the entire staff and all service agencies of Fort Benning, AAFES, the Commissary and various civilian enterprises.

I hesitate to mention by name all those who were so generous for fear I might inadvertently miss one; but please know we will be forever in the debt of all who individually or collectively showed their concern for our welfare.

In closing, our wish is that you know the families of those involved in "Operation Just Cause" will remember you all with a deep and lasting sense of gratitude.

Wife of Col. W.F. Kernan, Commander, 75th Ranger Regiment

Project SPIRIT winners lauded for money-saving ideas

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The Project SPIRIT winners for first quarter, fiscal year 1990, were recognized by Fort Benning Chief of Staff Col. James I. Daily, Feb. 14, in Infantry Hall.

Both group and individual winners were awarded commemorative plaques for the jobs they had done.

SPIRIT, or Systematic Productivity Improvement Review In Training and Doctrine Command, is a program to encourage new ideas in areas of management or equipment that will save the post or the Army money.

The Infantry School won the award for the Command/Major Unit competition with the implementation of one suggestion and two management improvements, which will save the post $29,706 annually.

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing won the Directorate Staff competition with the implementation of one suggestion and 23 management improvements.

DEH documented productivity savings in excess of one million dollars for the first quarter.

The Equal Employment Opportunity Office won the Personal and Special Staff competition for the third straight quarter. With two management improvements, they documented savings of $16,833.

Although that figure may seem small, there are only five people who make up EEO.

In the individual award category, the Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization was represented by two personnel, Holly N. Holmes and Alastaire J. Smith.

The combined savings of their two projects totaled more than $8,500 annually.

The Directorate of Engineering and Housing had four winners whose total annual savings to the Army was $270,481.

They are: James Upshaw, Diane Benton, Douglas Anderson and Arthur E. Simmons.

Daily commended all parties involved for their "resourcefulness and initiative." He said the actions showed certain concern for the economy "in light of continued budget cuts."

The TRADOC post with the most documented savings actions in a fiscal year wins an additional one million dollars for the annual budget.

Fort Benning took those honors for both 1987 and 1988.

Combat Lifesaver Course offered to training units for first time

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

For the first time at Fort Benning, the Combat Lifesaver course was offered to soldiers from training units.

The 40-hour course was taught by medics from Martin Army Community Hospital to members of The School Brigade, the 29th Infantry Regiment and drill sergeants from the Infantry Training Center.

Capt. Bill Addison from MACH said, "The purpose of the combat lifesaver is to be a bridge between a wounded soldier and the medics."

Besides being trained in basic first aid, combat lifesavers are certified in cardiopulmonary resuscitation and may also administer intravenous fluids to casualties.

Although the course is designed for immediate first-aid for combat casualties, the skills taught here are useful in a training situation, as well.

"The main concern is to get combat lifesavers to units who may have high-risk training situations," said Addison.

He said the Ranger Training Brigade, basic training and The School Brigade all conduct training, which could require a combat lifesaver.

Fort Benning has quick access to MACH via ground transportation or medivac and therefore certified medics are not required on all the training ranges.

When a real emergency does arise the combat lifesaver can help when there is no medic available.

Among the combat lifesavers resources is the aid bag. "The bag has a dual purpose," said Addison.

The combat lifesaver can use his medical supplies for refresher training once he compietes the course, as well as using it to save lives.

Army offers free training for prospective nurses

Army News Service

Prospective nurses offered free training

Amid a current nationwide nurse shortage, the Army now offers some soldiers the chance to earn a bachelor's degree in nursing, become a registered nurse, receive a commission in the Army Nurse Corps and get pay and allowances all the while.

"Under the Army Medical Department's Enlisted Commissioning Program, soldiers in career management field 91 may apply for the program that will also pay for the cost of the degree," said Sgt. Maj. Daniel J. Bullis, enlisted advisor to the Army surgeon general in Falls Church, Va. "The deadline for the first board is April 15. The deadline for future boards is Dec. 15, with the selection board meeting sometime between January and February of the following year. The selection board will consider the cost of tuition and other fees."

To qualify, soldiers must be on active duty and have had a minimum of three years' active federal service. Applicants must be within two years or less of obtaining a bachelor of science degree in nursing.

"Along with their applications, soldiers must forward letters of acceptance from two educational programs that prepare them for licensure as a registered nurse," Bullis added. Accreditation for the baccalaureate and basic nursing programs must be in effect for the date on which the degree is granted. Applicants currently matriculated in an accredited program where they have accumulated credits toward their baccalaureate degree are not required to apply to a second school.

"Also," he said, "the letters must certify that the applicant has been accepted as a full-time student for the fall semester, and, based on a review of the applicant's academic record, will complete a bachelor's degree within two years or less. The letter must include an expected date of graduation."

Applicants must be qualified for appointment as commissioned officers in the U.S. Army Reserve under Army Regulations 135-100 and 135-101. The applicant also must have enough time remaining on active duty to complete the degree.

Soldiers will retain their rank and pay grade until graduation when they will take the nursing examination, receive commissions and complete the officer basic course. Soldiers taking part in the program may be promoted when their promotion sequence number or cutoff score is reached.

Applicants are required to meet prescribed physical fitness standards and must have passed the standard Army physical fitness test within six months of the date of application.

"While there's no upper limit to the time in service, those applicants who will have completed 10 or more years active federal service at the time they are commissioned will state in writing that they understand and accept that they may not be able to complete 10 years of commissioned service and may be retired at their enlisted grade.

"This doesn't mean that these soldiers will be screened out; rather, for their protection, they must be aware of this fact," Bullis emphasized.

The minimum payback for participation in the program is two years for any part of the first year of training and two-for-one service obligation for any additional training.

Enlisted soldiers who wish to apply to the program should do so through their servicing military personnel office. More information may be obtained by calling Master Sgt. Grant Sulham at autovon 289-9046 or commercial (202) 756-8046.

197th's rifle team shoots its way to All-Army

Troy A. Pearson

Members of the 197th Inf. Bde.'s rifle and pistol teams from 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., include: (kneeling) Spec. James Gallagher, Cpl. Carl Sandy, Pfc. Chris Piaquadio, Spec. Paul Hopwood, Cpl. Allen Hale and Spec. Steve Elliott; (standing, second row) Sgt. Darrell Jackson, Spec. Elliott Ingram, Pfc. Tracy Roby, Spec. Ernest D. Courtney Jr. and Sgt. Kenneth Boykin; (standing, third row) Pvt. 2 Lance May, Staff Sgt. Daniel Hoffman, Spec. Wayne Kubica, Pfc. Scott Decker, Cpl. Edmond Sealey and Spec. Dean Avery.

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

Shooting is 99 percent mental and one percent physical.

That's what gave 197th Infantry Brigade's rifle team the winning edge in the XVIII Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg, N.C., Rifle, Pistol, Light Machine Gun and Sniper Championships, according to Staff Sgt. Daniel Hoffman, coach of 197th's team.

"Actual firing causes a lot more mental than physical stress," Hoffman said. "But if you can gain a mental advantage over your opponents, you stand a good chance of winning."

Hoffman found out about mental stress when, as the team's senior man, he was put in charge of preparing the 25 soldiers on the brigade's team — 20 from his own unit, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry; four from 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, who competed in the M-60 machine gun matches; and one from 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, who fired the M-16A1 rifle in individual competition — for the competition, Feb. 7 to 15.

"It's highly unusual for the 197th to compete with — and beat — division-level teams, with all of their training time, transportation and ammunition assets," Hoffman said.

"Most of the division teams have up to a year to get ready for the corps competition, but my rifle team had only four half-days on the range, which we shared with the M-60 team."

Despite their limited training opportunities as most of the brigade, including many of the soldiers who competed in the marksmanship competition, prepared for the 197th's rotation to the National Training Center, Hoffman's team took first place in team precision firing, second place in the combat rifle team match and first place overall in the XVIII Airborne Corps Combat Rifle Team Championship based overall points scored.

Individual trophies also went to Spec. Ronald Jacobson, Co. D, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., in the individual pistol competition; Spec. Timothy Brumbaugh, Co. E, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., in individual rifle competition; and Spec. Wayne Kubica, Co. C, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., who placed third firing from the 400-yard line in the precision rifle team match.

Hoffman said, the 197th team is eligible to represent the corps in the All-Army championships here in May.

Jackson, Elliott, Gallagher and May, pictured left, and Cpl. Ruben Stoltje and Pvt. 2 Chao Binsfield from 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., comprised the pistol team.

Soldiers from 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, who formed the M-60 team were Sgt. Tony M. Meade, Sgt. Antonio Sanchez, Spec. Darvis D. Dlugoss, and Pfc. Christopher D. Franks.

Spec. Curtis Hagg, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., competed in the individual machine gun match, and Spec. Dean Avery, HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., fired in the individual rifle competition.

Co. A, 43rd Engr. Bn. constructs PT complex for Ranger Battalion

By Jerry L. Schafer
43rd Engineer Battalion

Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion, (Combat) (Heavy), is constructing a physical training complex for the 4th Ranger Training Battalion at Edwards Field, Harmony Church.

The complex, which combines three training sites into one facility, will replace the badly worn existing facilities and make the training site more accessible.

One part of the mission is a circular hand-to-hand pit. An obstacle course surrounded by a quarter-mile running track is also under construction.

The obstacle course will include pull-up bars, a wire low climb/descend and a low crawl pit.

In addition to the construction of the physical training part of the facility, Co. A will construct gravel walkways and a helicopter landing pad.

Soldiers from Co. A said they are eager to deliver a quality product for the Rangers.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Mark A. Gomez
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. Six months ago I divorced my wife. Most of the credit cards were in both of our names.

The divorce decree specified that I was to pay certain creditors and she was to pay others.

She has refused to pay her designated accounts.

The credit card companies are sending me notices saying they are holding both me and my wife responsible.

I thought the divorce decree relieved me of these debts.

What are my rights?

A. If both you and your wife signed the credit card applications, then each of you can be held responsible for transactions charged to these accounts.

The divorce decree does not affect contracts that you and your ex-wife entered with a third party.

You and your ex-wife's contract with the credit card company remains intact.

Since the credit cards are in both of your names, it is likely that both of you signed the application, and, therefore, you both are responsible for the debt.

You may even be liable for purchases your wife makes on the credit card after you are divorced if you have not removed her name.

Sometimes a credit card company will demand payment from an ex-spouse even though he did not apply for the card.

It is common for credit card holders to authorize family members to use their credit cards.

Even though the family member did not apply for the credit card, her name gets linked to the account in the credit company's computer files.

An authorized user is not responsible for paying the debts charged to the account.

When you determine that separation or a divorce is your only alternative in a marriage, you should protect yourself from further liability on jointly-held credit cards by closing the accounts.

Write a letter to the credit card company explaining the situation and demanding they close the account. Deny further use of the card.

Once the company is given this notice, you cannot be held responsible for further use of the card.

However, you remain liable for the previous balance.

To protect your credit rating, you must ensure that monthly payments are made to the credit card company.

If your ex-spouse refuses to make these payments, you must make them.

After you have completely paid off these accounts, you may consider going back into court and suing your ex-spouse for the amount of the debt.

If your credit rating is lowered because of your ex-spouse's negligence, you may file a 100 word, or less, statement with the local credit bureau explaining the situation.

The Columbus Credit Bureau is very helpful and understanding in these situations.

A DOG'S LIFE

By Roy A. Carroll
Veterinary Services

Martina, an Australian Shepherd mix puppy, is MEDDAC's official mascot.

Martina has acquired the rank of Pfc. and has been dutifully sworn in as the Human/Animal bond dog for Martin Army Community Hospital.

She has been undergoing rigorous training "PAW-CAMP" (Obedience and housebreaking) to fulfill her duties as MEDDAC Mascot.

Martina is being raised at the Veterinary Clinic on post where she interacts regularly with staff, clients and animal patients.

Her handler and trainer, Spec. Karen Thorn, Veterinary Technician, said, "Martina is progressing very well and will soon be visiting patients at the hospital."

In the future, look for Martina's column, which will deal with Martina's visits to the hospital, as well as animal health topics.

"Martina's suggestion for this week is to have your dog tested for heartworms once a year."

Heartworm disease is a potentially deadly threat to your dog, particularly in the southeastern portion of the United States.

Heartworms are transmitted to dogs by mosquitoes, which are quite prevalent in this part of the country.

A brief picture of how your pet may acquire heartworms follows:

Mosquitoes bite an infected dog and then carry the larvae, which is passed to an uninfected dog when the mosquito bites it.

These larvae travel to the right side of the dog's heart where they mature to adult worms in about six months.

Adult females reproduce in the pet's bloodstream, where the cycle is repeated.

At this stage, the veterinarian can detect the disease in the dog's blood.

Adult heartworms grow to their mature size (approximately six inches) and number from one to 200.

Symptoms depend on the number of heartworms and the size of the dog.

The heartworms occupy space in the heart and produce inflammation. This reduces cardiac function and causes a buildup of blood in both the lungs and the abdomen.

This causes the dog to tolerate exercise poorly; he might also suffer from depression, lethargy, coughing episodes and might have an enlarged abdomen.

Of course, we have heard the adage, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." This certainly holds true in the case of heartworm disease.

Pets should be tested once a year for heartworms and be started on prevention medication at 4 to 6 months of age and kept on it throughout the year to spare them from this potentially deadly disease.

The Veterinary Service at Fort Benning is located on 10th Mountain Division Road in building 265. The clinic provides service to the pets of active duty and retired servicemembers and family members of either.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Two years ago, Congress placed a limit, or "cap," on the total amount of expense CHAMPUS patients and families must pay for care covered under CHAMPUS in any one fiscal year.

This cap on how much a family has to pay for care under CHAMPUS in fiscal year '90 is $1,000 for active duty families and $10,000 for all other families eligible for either CHAMPUS or CHAMPVA.

The cap applies only to the total of the actual amount the family pays to meet the deductible plus their cost shares.

This is based on charges considered "customary and reasonable" by CHAMPUS in the fiscal year.

Charges above what CHAMPUS allows, or care not covered by CHAMPUS, will not count toward the cap, and the beneficiary is responsible for these. The cap does not include cost shares paid under the CHAMPUS program for the handicapped.

The CHAMPUS explanation of benefits that you receive when a claim is processed tells you how much has been applied toward your cap during the fiscal year.

When your covered expenses meet the cap, CHAMPUS will then pay the full amount allowed during the remainder of the fiscal year.

Many families using CHAMPUS have other insurance, in addition to CHAMPUS, that pays the deductible and the cost share otherwise paid by the patient.

The amount that would be paid by the patient, whether paid by them or another insurance policy, will count toward the cap.

The CHAMPUS "catastrophic cap" is not in any way related to the Medicare "catastrophic insurance." CHAMPUS and Medicare are two completely different programs.

The Health Benefits Advisor in the CHAMPUS Office, Room 742, at Martin Army Community Hospital has a list of supplemental insurance plans with a cost comparison.

Call 544-3461 for further information concerning CHAMPUS.

Tax tips for servicemembers

Legal Assistance Office

Should you send in your tax return using your Leave and Earnings Statement?

No! The Internal Revenue Service views the W-2 as the official statement of how much you earned and how much was paid to the government as taxes during the year.

Your LES is not an acceptable substitute for your W-2. (Legal Assistance, 545-3281).

If your move to a new assignment began in 1989 and ended in 1990, when do you file your moving expenses?

You have two choices — file them all on your 1990 tax return or file your 1989 expenses on your 1989 return and your 1990 expenses on your 1990 return.

The Tax Reform Act of 1986 has made moving expenses an itemized deduction, which requires the use of Schedule A (as well as IRS Form 3903 or 3903F).

Assistance is available at the Fort Benning Tax Office located in Building 5 (SJA).

All unit tax advisors and soldiers filling out tax returns for military members must note that, for purposes of calculating the earned income credit, quarters allowance and subsistence allowances must be included as earned income, even though these forms of income are otherwise nontaxable.

For help with your taxes, call Legal Assistance at 545-3281.

Take close look at employment agencies

Provost Marshall's Office

Choosing a career and finding the right job are among the most important decisions you will make.

To assist the public in finding the right employer, the field of personnel placement continues to grow.

Employment agencies are a major part of that field and should be considered as an aid when searching for a job.

They can provide numerous valuable services. Most agencies are reliable, reputable and serve a vital function.

A few, however, use questionable business tactics and have tainted the public's attitude toward employment agencies.

Take a close look at the service agreement. A well-written service contact will explain what happens and what service charges are due in the case of several commonly occurring situations.

Before you sign, be sure you know what would be your financial responsibilities if:

- You take a position through an agency and then lose the job.
- You accept a position but change your mind before reporting to work.
- You are referred to a company by an agency. Either you don't see that firm or you see it, but don't get the position. At a later time, however, you do accept a job with that same company.
- You are registered with two different agencies and they refer you to the same position, which you accept.

An employment agency or service can be a great help in pursuing a new job.

However, be sure to read the "fine print" of any contract.

Ask questions as to the agency's code of ethics and be realistic in your expectations.

These hints can make your job search more successful.

BLACK HISTORY QUIZ

Black Employment Program Committee

African American men and women have made significant day-to-day contributions to the social, cultural, and economic progress of the nation; yet, standard references have largely ignored their historical roles. In an attempt to increase the awareness of some of these contributions, the Black Employment Program Committee has developed a series of four quizzes to be published each Friday in Black History Month.

Test your knowledge of African Americans in history. Match the name of the African American to the description.

●1. A prolific inventor born in 1856, he obtained some 50 patents over his lifetime.

His inventions include an incubator, the forerunner of present machines capable of hatching 50,000 eggs at a time, and the Synchronous Multiplex Railway Telegraph designed to avert accidents by keeping each train informed of the location of the train immediately ahead and behind of it.

He died in New York City in 1910.

●2. He developed techniques for separating and preserving blood. His advanced research in the field of blood plasma helped save countless lives in World War II.

Born in Washington, D.C., in 1904, he graduated from Amherst College in Massachusetts where he was an outstanding scholar.

He received his medical degree from McGill University in 1933. During World War II, he set up the first Blood Bank in England and was appointed director of the American Red Cross blood donor project.

He died in an automobile crash in 1950.

●3. Selected as an astronaut by NASA in 1980, he completed his one year training and evaluation period in 1981, making him eligible for assignments as a pilot on future space shuttle flight crews.

Born 1946, he received his degree from the U.S. Naval Academy in 1968, was commissioned a 2nd lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps and became a Naval Aviator.

He earned his Masters' Degree in Systems Management from the University of Southern California in 1978.

●4. He was an international leader in transplant surgery who performed more than 500 kidney transplants.

He was responsible for finding out that large doses of the drug methylprednisolone could help reverse the acute rejection of a transplanted kidney.

He made history in 1964 by transplanting a kidney from a mother to a daughter — the first transplant between humans who were not identical twins.

Born in 1930, he was the first black to enroll at the University of Arkansas Medical School at Little Rock.

His brilliant career was brought to an end in 1977 when he contracted an undiagnosed illness on a trip to South Africa. He remained brain damaged until his death in 1981.

●5. Perhaps the most famous black man in colonial America; he was a mathematician, astronomer, inventor, and gazetteer; and he helped lay out the city of Washington, D.C.

He was born free in Maryland in 1731 and was educated to eighth-grade level in an integrated private school.

In 1754, at age 22, he built the first clock made in North America though he had never seen one; it chimed the hour unfailingly and kept accurate time for more than 20 years.

His aptitude in mathematics and astronomy enabled him to predict the solar eclipse of 1789 and he published an almanac.

In 1791, on the recommendation of Thomas Jefferson, he was appointed to serve as one of six members of the commission charged with surveying and laying out a blueprint for the city of Washington, D.C.

When the Chairman of the Planning Committee, Major L'Enfant, abruptly returned to France taking the plans to the city with him, this black man's precise memory enabled him to reproduce the plans in their entirety.

He died in 1806.

Beware of work at home programs

Provost Marshall's Office

"Earn money at home" opportunities are sometimes schemes that take advantage of people.

In most cases, you must buy something before you can begin work.

If you answer an ad offering huge profits for a work-at-home project for which there is great demand but which requires no experience, chances are you will end up losing money.

Investigate before you invest.

Consider it a warning sign if you must buy something to start the program.

For a reliability report on a specific work-at-home company, check first with your local Better Business Bureau.

Remember also that any company operating on the installation must have prior approval of the Director, Community Activities.

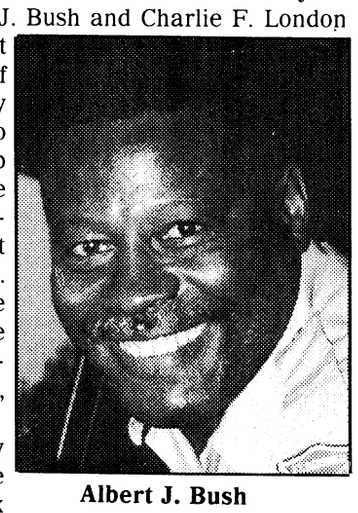
Columbus' first black firefighters faced racism, other challenges

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

When two local men joined the Columbus fire department on Oct. 16, 1967, they left a mark in local history.

Albert J. Bush and Charlie F. London were just two of many men who made up the fire department team. There was one difference, though.



Albert J. Bush

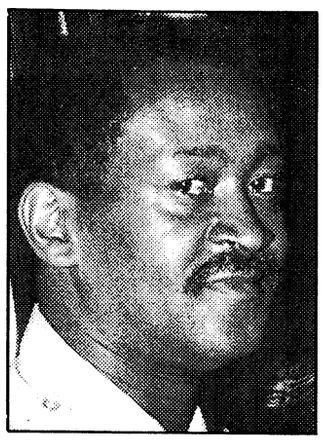
They were the first black men to be hired at the fire department.

Their hiring soon opened doors for other local blacks.

Because of their efforts, Bush and London were recognized at the Mayor's Commission on Women and Minorities, Feb. 11 for "outstanding pioneer effort in the growth and development of the community."

It wasn't an easy road for them, however.

The public had a hard time accepting them as firefighters, and they weren't readily accepted by their peers, said London, who was also a firefighter in the Air Force.



Charlie F. London

They worked on opposite shifts, one relieving the other. They had to share a locker and bed, although the white firefighters had their own, Bush said.

"When we would leave, they would throw our plates in the trash," London said.

According to Bush, they weren't allowed to wear mustaches while the white firefighters could.

> "Our hiring gave blacks a chance to become firefighters when they didn't have that chance before.
>
> — Charlie London

Despite the racial remarks and unfair treatment, they were determined to stick it out.

"We were the first. And I was determined I was going to be a firefighter," London said.

"We did open some doors, as far as the fire department is concerned. Our hiring gave blacks a chance to become firefighters when they didn't have that chance before," he said.

Years later, both left the department because they felt the promotion system was unfair to blacks. They said it was difficult to be promoted to lieutenant.

"There were no black lieutenants at the time. We were told (by the promotion board) to be eligible for promotion to lieutenant, we had to have one year of experience. When we got our one year, we were told we needed five. I got disgusted and left." London said.

London went to work for a while in Altanta and then returned to Columbus. He got a job on the rescue squad (now called the emergency medical service) and opened another door by becoming the first black to do so.

Bush and London then began working at the Fort Benning Fire Department, Station 32. They've been there for 11 and 16 years, respectively, as engineers.

They agree that a lot of progress has been made since they first became firefighters.

According to London, black firefighters in the local area are more accepted now, and the promotion system is more fair. Blacks now hold positions of battalion chiefs, fire chiefs, captains, lieutenants and drivers.

Qualified blacks are getting the top management positions, London said.

"We don't want the job because we're black," Bush said. "We want it because we are qualified."

Bush said that blacks shouldn't get the jobs or the positions based on race but on qualifications.

Post recognizes black firefighters

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

When the first two black men were hired at the Columbus Fire Department in 1967, it was the beginning of new opportunities for blacks.

Albert J. Bush and Charlie F. London, engineers at Fort Benning's fire station 32, opened up many doors for future black firefighters.

Because of their efforts, other local black firefighters found that they too, would open doors and leave their mark in local history.

The following Fort Benning firemen are recognized for their achievements.

Capt. Paul Leonard Jr., Station 32, was the first black training officer and the first black pump operator at Columbus Fire Department.

Lt. Eddie C. Alexander, Station 33, was the first black from Columbus and Fort Benning to be recognized in Firehouse Magazine in 1989 for the firefighters' heroism and bravery awards program.

He rescued and revived an unconscious smoke inhalation victim.

Deputy Fire Chief Eddie L. Willis, Station 32, was the first black to be promoted through all the ranks at Fort Benning.

He was the first black driver, one of the first black lieutenants, the first black captain and deputy chief.

Management Analysis Div. wins DRM's safety contest

Directorate of Resource Management

The Management Analysis Division was the winner of the first quarter fiscal year '90 Directorate of Resource Management Safety Contest.

The division scored the most points in a safety inspection, the number of safety articles submitted from magazines and posters and other activities conducted to promote the safety program.

Personnel in the division made the winning poster. Each individual was given a piece of construction paper, instructed to make it into a particular part of the human body and asked to describe how it was involved in safety.

The idea for the poster came from Beverly Howell, the Management Analysis Division Safety Committee Representative.

The division received the DRM quarterly safety award at a luncheon Feb. 9.

Army wrestles Navy

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The best grapplers from two services took to the mats at Briant Wells Gym Feb. 17 to hone their skills before upcoming championship matches.

The All-Army team was pitted against the All-Navy team in Greco-Roman and freestyle wrestling.

According to Nate Jackson, a Navy team member, the meet was designed for the newer team members to have five minutes on the mat and to get them familiarized with the scoring system used in military matches.

He explained that the Navy team has only been working together for two weeks.

Although the Navy team has been together for a short time, they put up a quite a fight, but it wasn't enough to win.

The Army team won nine of the 11 Greco-Roman matches conducted. The freestyle portion was for exhibition.

All-Army Coach Tony Thomas said his team did very well in the meet.

He lauded one player in particular, Shane Palmer.

"Even though Palmer lost his match, he did very well for his first time wrestling Greco-Roman," Thomas said.

He noted that Palmer's specialty is freestyle wrestling and is very hard to beat in that category.

The All-Army camp is located at Fort Benning. Wrestle-offs will be conducted Feb. 25 through 28 for a spot on the All-Army team to be sent to the inter-service championships in Quantico.

The inter-service championships are slated for the middle of March.

197th outpaces ITC, 53-49

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

In a fast-paced, low-scoring contest, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, nipped the Infantry Training Center's 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, 53-49, in the second-season post basketball championship Feb. 16 at Briant Wells Gymnasium.

Jumping to an early lead in the first half, Brigade led at halftime by a comfortable 29-18.

Not to be outdone, the soldiers from the Infantry Training Center, led by the play of Curtis "Big Will" Williams, outscored Brigade in the second half, 31-24, but could not overcome the earlier 11-point deficit.

The game was not only a myriad of fast-breaks and slam-dunks but featured more than 200 ITC soldiers, bused in from training to cheer on their team.

The players gave everyone plenty to shout about as three-point shots, most of them made by 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., rained in from all over the court in the hopes of cutting the lead.

At one point late in the second half, the lead was cut to two points, but careless fouls made late in the game proved to be the untimely end for the ITC team.

"This is a good example of what competitive championship basketball is all about," said Deputy Post Commander Col. Barry Mahek.

Seventy-three teams started the second season, with 17 going on to post-season play.

During the regular season, 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., was 9-1, while HHC, 197th Inf. Bde., went undefeated at 10-0.

Marathoners try Birmingham circuit

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

They made up their minds and not even a tornado could sway two 29th Infantry Regiment soldiers from running their first ultra marathon race Feb. 10.

Billy Howerton and George Perez of Co. A, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., completed the 50-mile race despite an hour-and-forty-five-minute delay and a last-minute change in the race course.

The race, conducted in Birmingham, Ala., by the Birmingham Track Club, was run on a golf course because the tornado caused so much damage to the original route.

"The hardest part of it was the anxiety caused by waiting," Howerton said.

"I could barely sleep the night before, and the delays only compounded it."

He said he made a couple of discoveries during his first ultra-distance race.

"You have to start slow and stay slow. Also ultra-marathoners are friendlier than marathon runners," he said.

A veteran marathoner, Howerton said he's hooked. He plans to do one or two more 50-mile races and than move on to 100-kilometer.

Although he did all the running, Howerton said that there is one other factor that made him successful in his endeavor.

"I couldn't have done it without my wife," he said. "She helped me on training runs and drove me to and from the race."

It looks as though there will be another ultra-marathoner on the circuit.

According to veteran ultra-marathoner Rick Schick, both men did pretty good for their first 50-mile race.

SPIRITUAL

Learning English helps families adjust to U.S.

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

A friendly smile, a caring glance, a moment of patience — these are the most important prerequisites for volunteer English teachers at the Religious Education Center.

February marks the 20th year of the class designed for those for whom English is a second language.

The class is a rich blend of culture, customs and language, yet students are bonded by circumstance and a desire to learn.

This helps them make the most of their stay in the United States — whether it's for a few months or for a lifetime.

They come from Korea, Panama, Central and South America, Mexico, Germany and hosts of other nations. They explore English and the American way of life, from traditions and history to everyday colloquialisms.

"Each student receives a workbook appropriate to his level and is encouraged to study between classes at home," said Bill Putnam, director of Protestant Religious Education.

Groups average about five students each, but when more teachers are available, it is not unusual to see individual instruction.

Volunteer teachers do not need English or teaching degrees or experience. Also it isn't necessary for them to speak another language fluently.

Debra Galle

Victoria Maldonado converses in English to MiWon McClellan (left) and Dignova Labiosa.

The program is designed to accommodate any level of need, as well as teaching ability.

"I really enjoy teaching, I remember how hard it was for me when I first came to the United States," said Frances Bergschneider, a volunteer originally from Mexico.

She explained how the weekly class seems to enhance the lives of the students. It helps them accept their surroundings better and develop more self confidence, she said.

This alone enables their military spouses to concentrate more on their jobs and less on the vulnerability of their families.

With contagious enthusiasm, the students and teachers alike continue to meet and learn together.

Two decades of special interest in those for whom English is a second language has blended cultures and communicated the international language of caring.

Slaves started black church out of necessity

By Jarvis E. Bailey
2nd MASH, 34th Med. Bn. Chaplain

The black church represents the unique experiences, concerns and exigencies of the human condition of African Americans.

Through the black church, African Americans express and experience their ethnicity, their identity and their nationalism.

If there were no black church at present, it may be necessary to invent one.

The idea of the necessity of a black church is rooted in the fact that the black church owes its existence — at least in part — to the racial nature of the country that gave birth to it.

Under a cruel, inhumane slavery system, Africans were deported, detribalized, denamed and subjected to one of the most sustained, systematic deculturalization in modern history.

The slaves were taken from their traditions. Family and kinship ties were broken. Linguistic groups were separated, and religious beliefs and practices of African culture were forbidden.

All essential elements of African society were systematically excluded. Without these things, religion for the slave seemed unlikely to continue.

Yet, the Africans showed tremendous staying power. Even with all of their treasures snatched away, their humanity would not be denied.

In time, many slaves accepted their oppressors' Judeo-Christian religion. However, the slaves seldom, if ever, interpreted or expressed it in the same manner as the master.

The slaves, in an attempt to find spiritual value, created a viable, independent institution. They created a religion that transcended their hopeless plight and gave their lives relevance. They transformed a system of oppression into one that inspired freedom. They changed an institution that disregarded their humanity into one that recognized them as created in God's image.

The enslaved Africans converted the white man's religion into slave religion, which gave birth to the black church movement.

Had there been no racism, no oppression, no slavery, perhaps there would be no black church. And if mainstream Christian churches continue only to ratify the current reemerging sentiments of racism rather than upholding the true tenants of the gospel, the black church remains necessary.

Relief efforts net $5,000

USAIC Chaplains Office

The Fort Benning community contributed more than $5,000 recently for humanitarian relief to assist homeless Panamanian refugees and others, according to Chap. (Maj.) Donald Taylor, U.S. Army Infantry Center Chaplain's office.

"An outpouring of humanitarian assistance from the worldwide Army family to needy Panamanian families would be a very fitting expression of compassion and love.

"The Chief of Chaplains Fund is providing a grant of $10,000 for this purpose," wrote Chap. (Maj. Gen.) Norris L. Einertson, Chief of Chaplains, in a recent message to Army Chaplains.

Designated offerings were collected from all services at Fort Benning.

Visit Busch Gardens for rides, attractions

Busch Gardens

Spring at Busch Gardens offers something for everyone.

All Busch Gardens' rides, regularly scheduled shows and attractions are included in the single-ticket admission rate.

By visiting in the spring, visitors can take advantage of pleasant temperatures, shorter lines throughout the park and the park's blooming flowers and foliage.

As an added bonus, the fifth annual Busch Gardens Storytelling Festival will be featured May 20 through 26.

Some of the country's best yarn spinners, such as Kathryn Windham, Don Davis and Bill Harley, as well as this year's featured storyteller, Pete Seeger, will entertain audiences with ghost stories, traditional tales, songs and modern-day monologues in daily afternoon performances.

The Old Country celebrates its 15th anniversary this year with a season full of activities.

Along with the special events planned throughout the year, The Old Country's popular favorites will also be available for guests.

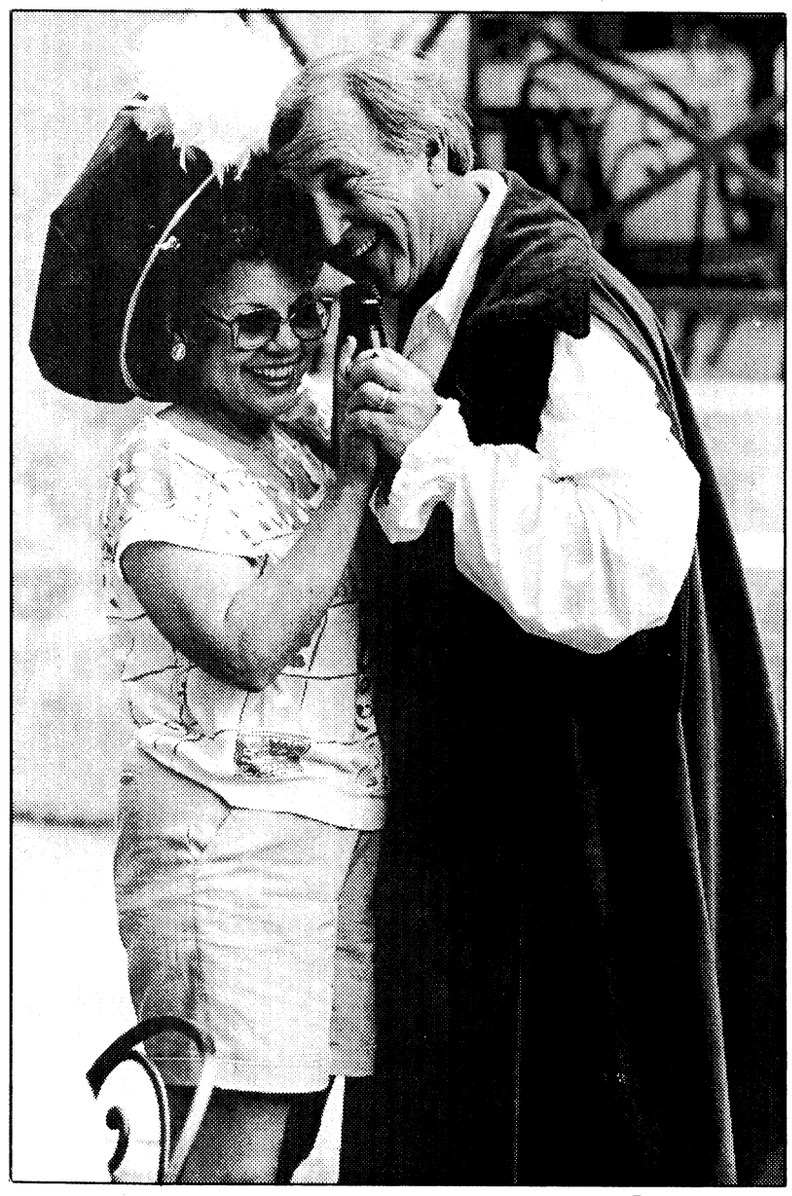
"Stage Struck," a Broadway-style musical revue, will dazzle audiences as cast members pay tribute to the wonderful world of entertainment.

European favorites such as German bratwurst, Italian cannelloni and French pastries will tempt hungry visitors' taste buds.

In addition to the exciting thrill rides, guests can also take a leisurely cruise down the Rhine River to enjoy the beautiful surrounding scenery.

In honor of grandparents and grandchildren, Busch Gardens is pleased to offer "Grandparents Are Special Days" during the month of April.

Busch Gardens will begin its weekends-only hours March 31.



Busch Gardens

Visitor enjoys a special serenade from the Mayor of San Marco at Busch Garden's The Old Country.

The park will also be be open from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Easter and 10 a.m. to midnight on Memorial Day.

Busch Gardens' The Old Country is a 360-acre family entertainment park featuring eight authentic European hamlets.

State Reps vow to fight base closures

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In a press conference at Fort Benning Feb. 23, two members of the House Armed Services Committee discussed strategies for dealing with proposed budget cuts and base closures.

"We cannot emphasize enough that this is only a proposed list of closures," said Rep. Glen Browder, D-Ala.

Among those bases being considered for closure are Anniston Army Depot and Fort McClellan, both in Browder's third congressional district of Alabama.

Fort McClellan will be closely studied before any decisions are made, Browder said.

Fort McClellan is the training area for military police and the Chemical Corps.

According to Browder, the fact that military police were used extensively in Operation Just Cause in Panama will be used as an argument for keeping the installation open.

"I don't intend to see it close," said Rep. Richard Ray, D-Ga., when asked if Fort Benning would replace Fort McClellan as the training center for military police.

Ray had earlier expressed an interest in having the MPs train here if, in fact, Fort McClellan does close.

Although Fort Benning is not among the installations being considered for closure, it may feel the effects of the budget cut in other ways.

Such changes, "won't be devastating," Ray said, but there will be cuts. "If it is not running at the capacity it is now, there will be other things that make use of these facilities," Ray said, referring to the Infantry School.

Both Ray and Browder emphasized that a strong defense was still essential despite recent changes in western Europe.

"We need to be very cautious and go about this very slowly," Browder said.

Benning to test weather sirens

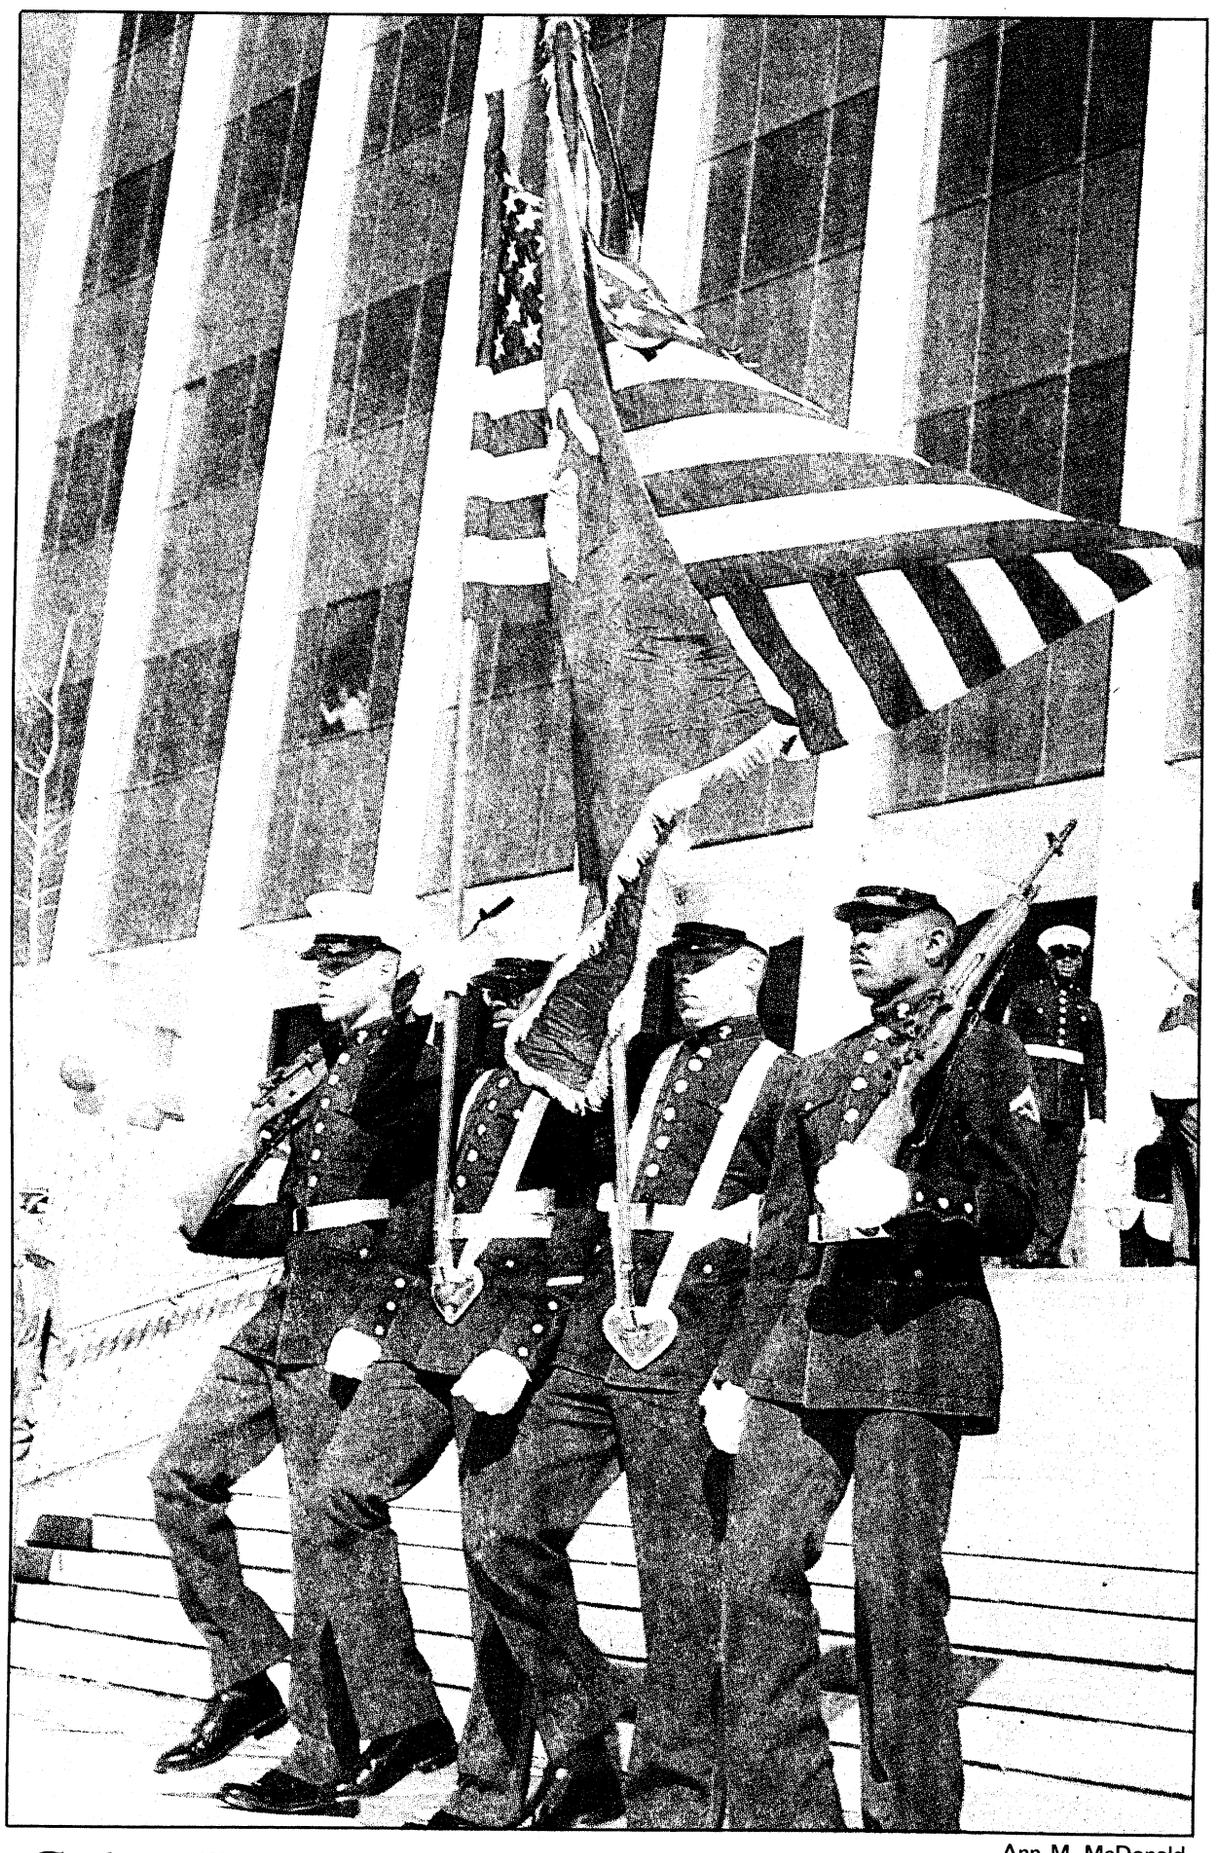
DPTM

Fort Benning will test its sirens Saturday at noon. If there is a threat of severe weather Saturday, the test will be canceled.

Fort Benning has instituted a new definition for tornado warning color code black.

"Color code black is a condition existing for the probable formation of a tornado, a tornado has been sighted or when high winds are within 20 minutes of affecting Fort Benning."

During this condition, personnel should seek shelter immediately.



Ann M. McDonald

Color Guard

A color guard from the Marine and Logistics Base, Albany, Ga., posts on the steps of the Government Center, downtown Columbus. The Marines were part of the many contingents that marched in a parade honoring the 3rd Bn., 75th Rgr. Regt. and the 75th Ranger Regiment for their participation in Operation Just Cause. After the parade, which ended at the Government Center the Rangers were saluted by various members of the community.

Nationwide emergency number doesn't work here

Calling 911 in an emergency situation at Fort Benning will only get you a recording — not help.

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

In a medical emergency, most people's reaction would be to dial 911 — the nationwide emergency number.

Katharina Cunningham, services supervisor for the Army and Air Force Exchange Services recently dealt with two medical emergencies in one day and found that dialing 911 is not the solution at Fort Benning.

That morning, a vendor in the Main Mall became ill and needed emergency medical care.

While Cunningham looked after the man, a woman from the beauty shop attempted to call 911 from a military phone.

She got a recording telling her to call the operator for assistance.

She finally located the number to Martin Army Community Hospital and called the ambulance service.

An ambulance arrived within three minutes, Cunningham said.

Later that day, a woman who works for Cunningham experienced a similar incident, although with a different ending.

She called 911 from a military phone when the manager of the telephone center at Sand Hill passed out. She, too, got a recording.

During the panic, valuable time was lost trying to locate the MACH emergency phone number. An ambulance finally arrived, but the woman was dead.

"I didn't know you couldn't dial 911 on post," Cunningham said. "I just assumed you could."

Cunningham said she is concerned that others aren't aware of the different emergency numbers.

She has posted Fort Benning emergency medical numbers by phones in AAFES facilities.

According to James Comer, chief of MACH emergency medical service ambulance section, because the telephone system is antiquated, it is unable to handle the 911 system.

Fort Benning, however, has its own emergency system.

"From a 'Class A' line at Fort Benning, you must dial 544-3911 to reach the MACH ambulance service," he said. "You won't get through, otherwise."

For people living in post housing, with phones on the Southern Bell exchange, it is possible to dial 911 and the call will be referred to MACH.

However, Comer said, response time is faster if calls are made directly to 544-3911.

Anyone living off-post must dial 911.

Although the system may be a bit confusing and perhaps tedious, Fort Benning residents can expect a solution to the problem possibly this year.

Tentatively scheduled for October, a new 911 system will be introduced to allow Fort Benning callers to receive emergency medical service by dialing 911.

Callers will immediately be connected with MACH ambulance service.

For people living in post housing, calls to 911 will also be automatically switched to MACH.

Comer said that when the new system is operational, callers will also be able to contact the military police and fire department by dialing 911.

However, until officially notified of the change, medical emergencies should be directed to 544-3911.

Comer said he recommends posting emergency numbers by the telephone so they are available at all times.

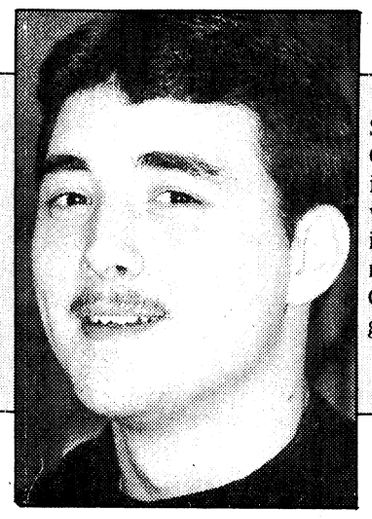
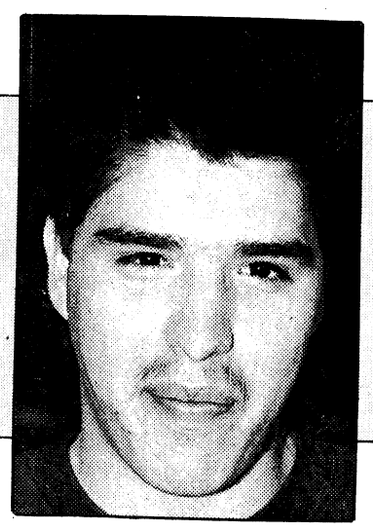
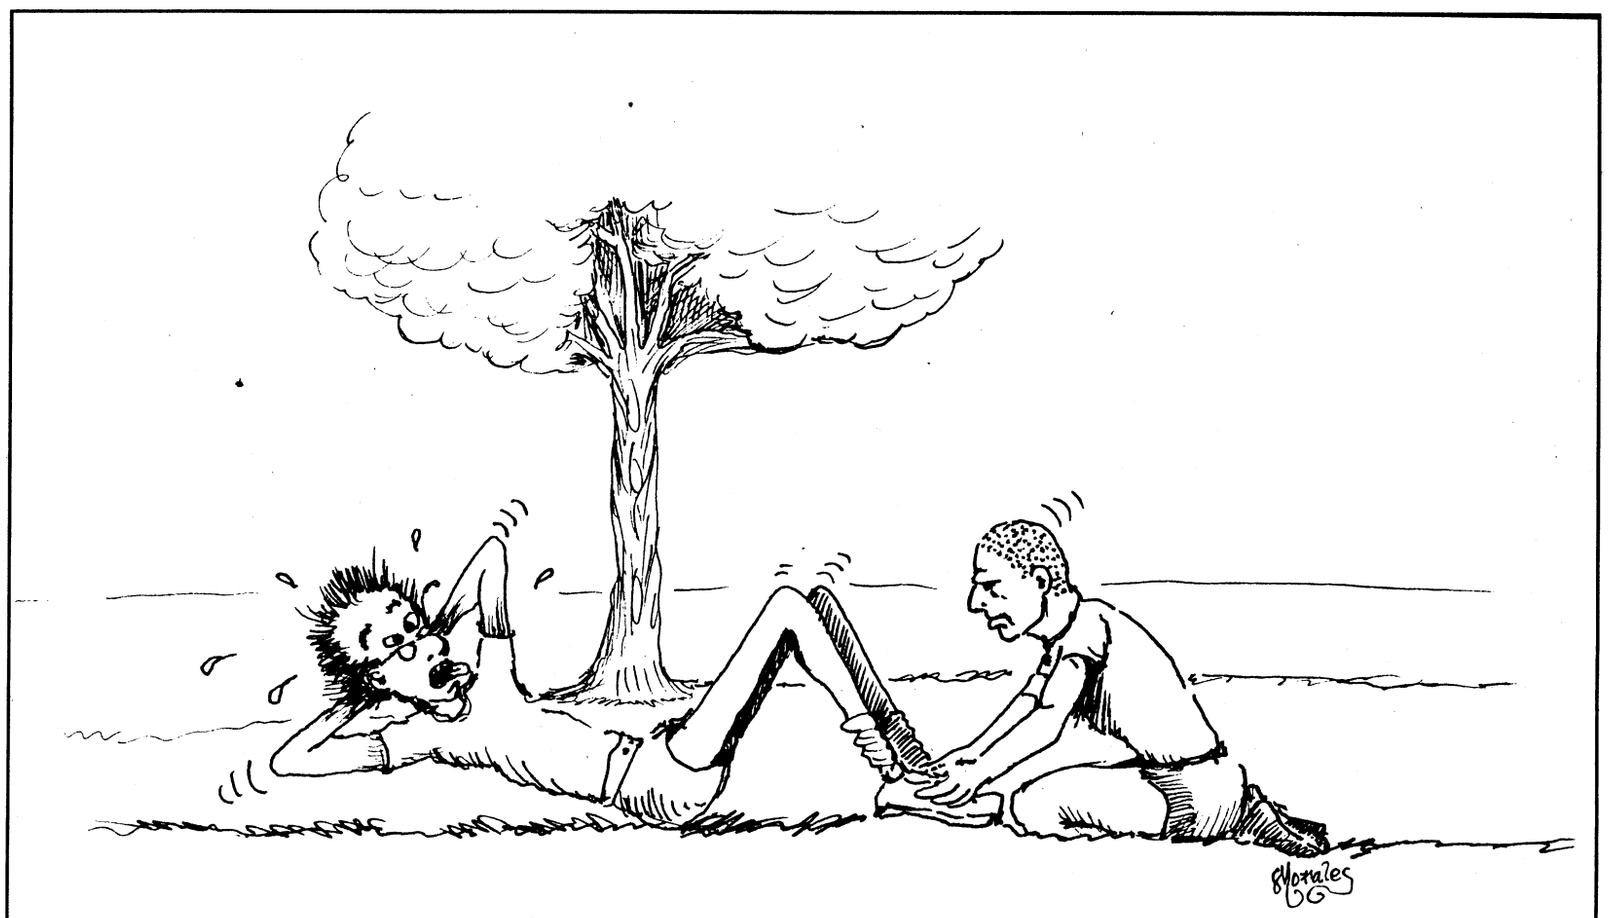
Spec. Alex White, 598th Maint. Co., 36th Engr. Grp. — "It was interesting going into the different towns, blending in with Germans and talking to them. It was also pretty neat driving down the Autobahn."



Spec. Steve Adams, 598th Maint. Co., 36th Engr. Grp. — "It was interesting trying communicate with the Germans. Also, it was interesting that although we had never met the 1015th Reserve Group, we performed well together.



Spec. Reyes Hernandez, 598th Maint. Co., 36th Engr. Grp. — "The most interesting thing about Reforger was going out on a night mission, regardless of the conditions. Sometimes, it was so cold you could hardly hold your tools. However, we knew the unit we were supporting really appreciated it."



Does fitness mean readiness?

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

If you want to know what the burning issues affecting the Army are, you need only spend a few moments in the Infantry Hall cafeteria.

But don't hang around the 1st lieutenants and captains, their concern is Air/Land Battle.

Also don't hang around the Officer Candidates or 2nd lieutenants who are mainly interested in comparing war stories about who had the worse weather on the most recent field training exercise.

The ones you want to listen to are the civilians, the retired officers and noncommissioned officers.

You can usually recognize them by their large bellys — they're used to throwing their weight around.

Last week they were buzzing about a proposal to raise the standards on the Army physical fitness test by increasing the number of pushups and situps and reducing the allowable time for the two-mile run.

But what really had them all in a dither was the fact that some medico popped off that before raising the standards, more study should be put into the possible effect these new standards might have on the participants, especially the older ones, like those in their 40s.

The doc was afraid that trying to pump out one more pushup for some 44-year-old might kill him on the spot.

I can tell you, these retirees were outraged.

They saw this interference as evidence that the Army is getting soft.

"I can see it now," a retired first sergeant said. "Some old geezer commander raising the white flag in the midst of a battle so he can take a break because his doctor told him not to overdo stress and physical exertion."

"Yeah," a retired major interjected, "they'll want to add 15-minute breaks during combat to the Geneva Convention."

A retired sergeant major who looked like he could walk through walls, got teary-eyed and began to reminisce about some of the great PT tests he'd known — all done, of course, in combat boots and starched fatigues.

Those were the days of the five-event PT test.

That was the test that changed so rapidly because the Army couldn't decide how to determine if soldiers were combat ready — does 72 rungs on the horizontal ladder mean combat ready?

How about the ability to do the crabwalk or low crawl?

I guess the Army just gave up and finally decided to have everyone do three simple events twice a year to prove they could still breathe.

As one of the civilians noted, "Why should we worry if a guy or gal can do 30 pushups or 40.

"It doesn't matter because pushups or situps don't compute to being battle ready.

"It's just another of the Army's many tests, so let's humor them and not worry about it."

One of the sergeants major wrapped it up by noting the physical fitness test is just another indicator, another way for a commander to see if his troops are staying somewhat fit.

"But if he wants to know if they're ready for combat, all he needs to do is take them on a four-day FTX with little or no sleep, enemy all around and combat boots the sole means of transportation as they hump their 60-pound rucks.

That'll tell the commander real quick who's up to combat and who's not," he said.

As usual, no one had anything else to add.

March proclaimed Women's History Month

In recognition of the numerous contributions of women to every aspect of our nation, the month of March is proclaimed "Women's History Month."

Public Law 101-5, enacted in 1988, designated March as National Women's History Month.

This year's theme, "Courageous Voices Echoing in our Lives," highlights women's influence on American culture and the U.S. military service.

Women's strength to endure the hardships of establishing a new country, the stresses of war and the struggle for equal rights, pay and recognition stands as a monument for all to admire.

Their vision to see what America can be, a land where all can rise to their highest potential, certainly justifies this year's theme, "Courageous Voices Echoing in our Lives."

I encourage all personnel at this installation and in surrounding communities to join with fellow soldiers and citizens in enjoying the activities at Fort Benning during "Women's History Month 1990."

Vindictive driver plays deadly game

To the woman who drives a red GEO with North Carolina license plates:

I'm sure you remember me.

We met on South Lumpkin Road Wednesday morning around 5:15 a.m.

Our meeting wasn't pleasant, and it could have had a fatal ending.

When I began my turn onto South Lumpkin, it looked as if I had enough time to make the turn safely and accelerate to a speed to match that of the other traffic.

Either I didn't accelerate fast enough or you were going faster than the 45 mph posted because the distance between us quickly closed up.

You flew by me, honking the horn to announce your displeasure and annoyance.

I answered with a honk of my own to indicate that I was aware of your displeasure and annoyance.

But, hey, let's be fair.

Let's say that I did misjudge the distance between us.

And let's say that my slow speed was a great inconvenience to you because you had to decelerate.

If that was the case, I certainly understand your annoyance and would like to be the first to apologize.

Yet, our meeting did not end there.

Because of your annoyance with me, the rest of the drive to post was not only dangerous, it was illegal.

I don't think that slowing down to 25 mph, forcing me to pass and then waiting until I was in the left lane before speeding up to 50 or 55 mph is either safe or sane.

You played that game for awhile and then must have realized that I was going to be a spoil-sport and not play your deadly game.

Then you chose another tactic.

You slowed down, waited for me to close the gap between us and then slammed on the brakes.

This went on until we were forced to go our separate ways.

Had there been other cars on the road at the time or if the driving conditions had been any more unfavorable (it was pitch dark), one of us could have gotten into an accident.

I was under the impression that is what you were intending to accomplish anyway.

I'm sure there are people on the road who are crazier than you are.

I just hope that you don't try any of those stunts with them — it might be your last.

Week devoted to good vision

The President of the United States has proclaimed Saturday through March 10 Save Your Vision Week.

This event is observed each year to heighten public awareness of the importance of good vision.

Since good vision and eye health contribute to the quality of life, I urge all the soldiers and civilians of Fort Benning to take steps to maintain their vision and assure the health of their eyes with regular professional eye care.

Funds restored to Alcohol, Drug Abuse Prevention program here

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

After a funding cut for the Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program, Director Dr. Tom H. Tennent Jr. said the funds have been restored through a personal effort from Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire.

Normally funded by the Training and Doctrine Command, monies were cut in such a manner that units could only test 10 percent of their soldiers for drug use each month, rather than the usual 20 percent.

A crackdown on drug use Army-wide coupled with Spigelmire's own personal emphasis resulted in renewed funding for the project after outcries from commanders at Fort Benning.

Tennent said soldiers within Forces Command units on post have been caught more for drug-related offenses than anyone else. He said 50 percent of any drug related statistic would normally be from the larger FORSCOM units on post.

However, overall the numbers of personnel across post identified as being positive for THC, the active ingredient in marijuana, or cocaine, are extremely low and, in some cases, continuing to drop.

Out of almost 12,000 specimens tested every quarter, there are less than 35 positive for cocaine and about 25 positive for THC.

The number found positive for THC dropped from 65the previous year. Tennent said the drop is, in part, attributed to heightened awareness.

"People are no longer doubting the validity of the test," he said.

The decrease is also attributable to fear of losing job security in a force facing ominous across-the-board cutbacks.

Noncommissioned officers are subject to Chapter 14, which specifies separation proceedings must be initiated against any NCO who comes up positive.

Officers tested positive are usually not permanently assigned to this post.

"Ninety percent of the time, the officer is only a student here," Tennent said.

Driving under the influence was also hot on the ADAPCP hit-list.

Tennent said there was a 30 percent increase in DUIs at Fort Benning in 1989 over 1988.

He said DUI would be a factor "in making the Army smaller" in the near future.

He said the Department of the Army had "knocked around a proposal for separation for DUI."

Currently, persons caught for DUI can expect suspension of license, fines and a defensive driving class sponsored by ADAPCP.

Persons caught in Columbus can expect additional classes, fines and possibly a night in the city jail.

Tennent said a DUI would be considered a heavy "strike" against a soldier when evaluated for advancement to sergeant major.

He said that although cocaine use appears to be going down at Fort Benning, TRADOC has reported an increase in cocaine use at other posts.

He said that's because many other posts don't test as often as Benning.

There is no Army regulation requiring a monthly 20-percent check.

The Alcohol and Drug Intervention Council, required by regulation, has now been established at Benning.

Chaired by Deputy Post Commander Col. Barry Mahek, the ADIC serves as "an advisory board to the commanding general," according to Tennent.

The board is made up of top department and unit chiefs from across post and meets quarterly to discuss policies and future courses of action.

One topic of discussion at the last meeting concerned a shift in testing to check for amphetamines and methamphetamines.

Tennent said there have been problems in California and Hawaii with those drugs among the services and expects the Army to begin testing for them in the near future.

Methamphetamines, or "ice," is described by Tennent as being "like 'crack,' except worse."

Quarters cleaning initiative to end this year

Family Housing Office

Headquarters, Department of the Army has directed all CONUS installations to phase out Quarters Cleaning Initiative as cleaning contracts expire or as funds are depleted but not later than the end of fiscal year '90.

Fort Benning received $295,000 at the beginning of fiscal year '90 for QCI and is spending an average of $33,000 per month for quarters cleaning.

At the current rate of spending, we expect to run out of funds and discontinue quarters cleaning June 1.

The $295,000 is a statutory limit and can not be exceeded by transferring other funds into this account.

When funds run out, residents will be responsible for cleaning their own quarters.

Residents who elect to hire an approved cleaning team will be cleared from quarters upon presenting the Housing Division a copy of a signed cleaning contract, a certified check or money order and completion of a damage inspection.

Prior to the damage inspection, residents must ensure that all preventive maintenance, self-help, yard work and furniture turn-in has been completed.

The Family Housing Office will maintain a list of approved cleaning teams.

Residents may pick up a copy of this list and contact as many of the cleaning teams as they desire in order to obtain the best price.

The resident should contact the cleaning team early enough that there will be no delay in out-processing.

All residents (self cleaned or contract cleaned) should schedule a pre-termination inspection at least 45 days prior to their planned departure.

This is needed so the inspector can tell the resident what needs to be repaired and what needs to be cleaned.

It also gives the shops lead time to order any needed parts or materials.

Residents will not be cleared until all preventive maintenance and self-help has been accomplished.

Anyone interested in becoming an "Approved Quarters Cleaning Team" should contact Terri Cook, Family Housing Office, building 399, 545-3107.

Ray announces participants in sixth annual Academy Day

Office of Congressman Richard Ray

Congressman Richard Ray announced the participants in the Academy Day program he is hosting for students of the Third Congressional District.

The event will take place Saturday at 10 a.m. in Building 4, Classroom 6.

This is Congressman Ray's sixth annual Academy Day, and this year it will be in conjunction with Fort Benning to provide information to high school students who are interested in attending one of the nation's service academies, enrolling in an Reserve Officers Training Corps or participating in a scholarship program funded by one of the branches.

Ray designed Academy Day to provide Third District high school students the opportunity to meet representatives of the nation's service academies and ROTC branches.

"This is an excellent chance for the young people of the Third District to become better acquainted with the nomination process," Ray said.

"I want to make sure all students realize that these academies offer an excellent collegiate experience for free.

"Additionally, the skills and leadership abilities taught in these programs will be very useful in any career."

Representatives from all five service academies and all three ROTC branches will be speaking at the meeting and will be on hand to answer individual questions.

The Air Force Academy will be represented by Lt. Col. David E. Mize, the Naval Academy will be represented by Commander Frank Pease, the Military Academy at West Point will be represented by Lt. William E. Ward, the Merchant Marine Academy will be represented by Capt. Emmanuel Jenkins, the Coast Guard Academy will be represented by Lt. Junior Grande Ron Magoon.

The Air Force ROTC will be represented by Capt. Stephen B. Cichocki, the Navy ROTC will be represented by Commander Ray K. Waddell, and the Army ROTC will be represented by Capt. Brian Stapleton.

"These representatives demonstrate the quality of people currently in our nation's Armed Services," Ray said.

"The young people who attend this year's Academy Day will have the opportunity to speak with the representatives of the various academies and programs.

"This contact will be beneficial to the students and will aid them in their application process."

Students of any age, and their parents, are invited to attend Academy Day.

For more information regarding this event, call Ray's office at his toll-free number, 1-800-282-5007 or 404-324-0292.

36th Engrs prepare for ACOE inspection

36th Engineer Group

The 36th Engineer Group's barracks were inspected in preparation for the post Army Communities of Excellence competition Feb. 20.

All units have been improving their barracks throughout the year for this competition.

Each company within the group spends one day a month performing maintenance and repairs to its working and living areas.

"The ACOE program is a wonderful method for improving our barracks and standards to the point that we all would be proud to live at Fort Benning," said Col. Henry S. Miller Jr., commander, 36th Engineer Group.

Building 2809 was selected as the best within the group.

Companies A and C of the 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat) (Heavy) had clearly dedicated themselves to making this building a comfortable place to live and work.

Building 2810, home of Company B, 43rd and the 533rd Transportation Company came in a close second.

Units were evaluated based on the ACOE standards of maintenance and presentation.

A major "plus" to the winning organizations was the recent painting of all rooms and common areas in the building.

The TRADOC ACOE Inspection Team is presently scheduled to inspect Fort Benning in June.

Several facilities are currently being evaluated to see which will represent the installation in this year's competition.

36th Engr Grp participates in 'Task Force Capstone

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

36th Engineer Group's 598th Maintenance Company is keeping busy.

Lately it provided aid after Hurricane Hugo, support for Operation Just Cause and most recently 60 soldiers deployed to Germany for 45-days as part of "Task Force Capstone," a support element for Reforger.

According to Staff Sgt. Terry Barnes, 598th Maint. Co., 36th Eng. Grp., the 598th, along with the 1015th Reserve Unit from Atlanta linked up with a tenant unit at Ludenoff Kaserne right outside Stuttgart in Germany.

The mission of the combined units, "Task Force Capstone," was to provide support for 10th Mountain soldiers from of Fort Drum, N.Y.

"We were on call day and night to help them with any maintenance problems they encountered," Barnes said. "Those problems ran the gamut from repairing vehicles to generators.

Chief Warrant Officer Thomas Pintar, also of the 598th, said the unit did 480 jobs while they were there. Also, during the last two weeks it supported another unit for recovery and redeployment.

"Additionally, we were assigned a sector," he said. "If another unit passing through that sector needed help, then we provided assistance until their own support unit arrived."

Another 598th soldier, Spec. Reyes Hernandez, described some of the rescue missions in which he participated.

"Tenth Mountain had a habit of setting up way out in the boonies," he said. "Luckily, we were given good maps and directions."

"As it was, there were times we just stumbled upon them," Hernandez added.

Some of that stumbling was because the majority of the assistance was rendered at night.

"They always broke down at odd hours," he said.

All the hard work paid off in the end. After the exercise was over, the unit was given the use of a bus to tour the surrounding area.

According to Barnes, they visited several towns and toured some factories.

Hernandez said most of them had a good time in Germany but were glad to get home.

The soldiers weren't the only ones happy they were back.

The unit's first sergeant, Robert Rathburn, said 60 soldiers gone from the unit at one time cuts productivity by quite a bit.

"We're definitely glad to see them back," he said.

TEXCOM receives CG's safety award

Infantry Board

Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire presented the U.S. Army Infantry Center Commanding General's Safety Award to Col. Albert J. Nahas, President of the TEXCOM Infantry Board, at an awards ceremony recently at Infantry Hall. The award covered the period from Jan. 13, 1989, to Jan 14, 1990.

Spigelmire said, "The TEXCOM Infantry Board is the first and only organization at Fort Benning to maintain an entire accident-free year and receive this prestigious safety award.

"I recognize that it is only through the attention to detail and conscious efforts of all Infantry Board personnel that you have earned this distinction."

During this time, the TEXCOM Infantry Board conducted 14 operational tests involving state-of-the-art equipment and weapon systems such as Advanced Combat Rifle, Carrier Battalion Mortar System BMS 120, M-72E4 Light Antiarmor Sub Caliber Device, M-72E4 Light Antiarmor Weapon, Soldier's Ground Insulator, Field Feeding in Cold Environment, Lightweight Chemical Biological Protection Garment, Communications Aural Protection System, Hand-Held Signal Flares, Night Vision Goggles, Security and Force Protection Enhancement Resources, Single Channel Ground and Airborne Radio System, Modified Lightweight Chemical Biological Protection Garment and Lightweight Personnel Armor System for Ground Troops.

These tests were conducted at Fort Benning, Ga.; Fort Wainwright and Fort Richardson, Alaska; Fort Hunter-Ligget, Calif.; and Fort Drum, N.Y. The tests involved soldiers from various Army and Air Force units.

The TEXCOM Infantry Board motto is, "Only the Best for the Finest." Safety is a Combat Multiplier.

The first drizzle of rain tends to loosen a greasy film of oil, gasoline and rubber on roads, turning them into a skid trap for the unwary.

Drivers may need four times the usual distance to stop their cars when the roads are wet.

To avoid skidding, keep speed down, accelerate gradually, corner carefully and pump brakes gently.

Test brake action now and again to check traction, and avoid tailgating.

Strong winds, heavy rains damage parts of Benning

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Strong winds and heavy rains hit Fort Benning Feb. 22 causing property damage and power outages.

Shortly after 9 a.m. that day, maintenance crews from the Directorate of Engineering and Housing began receiving calls for assistance.

Several areas on south Main Post had major storm-related problems.

Fallen trees and pieces of debris that littered roads were quickly cleaned up, but other problems took longer to resolve.

A scoreboard and bleachers on McAndrews Range were destroyed. Also, a range shack there was blown onto a chain link fence and across Dixie Road where it hit a parked van in the adjacent housing area.

The privately-owned van was damaged severely, and the shack was destroyed.

Elsewhere, two power lines were down leaving the housing area north of Dixie Road and south of CB&T on Ingersoll Street without power.

A traffic light was left precariously dangling over Dixie Road near Soldier's Plaza and caused traffic to back up while crews made emergency repairs.

At the same time, other crews worked to fasten down a corrugated iron roof on a range maintenance building also on Dixie Road.

Despite the continuing rain, DEH electricians worked to restore power to those areas affected by the outage.

"Our main concern was to restore electricity," said Charles Orr of DEH.

Although wet weather can be cause for concern when working with high voltage, "We do it all the time, and it's not unusual," Orr said.

Orr also said that the DEH crews are qualified to perform such work, and extra precautions are taken to ensure safety of the workers.

Other areas on post were also affected by Feb. 22's storm, but damage was less severe.

According to Orr, flooding was reported in other areas of post, but this is a problem that DEH is constantly working to improve.

He said drainage systems are being enlarged to handle the large volume of water thus preventing future floods.

In spite of gusting winds and heavy rains, no storm-related injuries were treated at Martin Army Community Hospital Feb. 22.

With spring comes dangers of tornadoes, lightning, floods

Infantry Branch Safety Office

The arrival of spring promises rising temperatures, budding trees and flowers in bloom, but it also brings the threat of tornadoes.

When a tornado strikes, buildings are reduced to rubble and the air is filled with flying debris.

Survival for persons caught in a tornado is largely a matter of chance unless they know the characteristics of a tornado and have the opportunity to seek refuge.

Tornadoes normally occur in conjunction with thunderstorms and are accompanied by dark, heavy clouds, precipitation in the form of hail and rain, and a loud roaring noise such as that of a speeding train.

However, the most noticeable characteristic of a tornado is the pendent, usually funnel-shaped cloud nearly always evident.

Remember also that tornadoes can be concealed by rain, dust or darkness.

If a Tornado Watch is issued, it means a tornado is expected to develop, and everyone should keep a local radio or television station tuned in for weather bulletins.

However, if a Tornado Warning is issued, it means a tornado has been sighted or indicated by weather radar.

In this event, everyone should seek shelter immediately and keep a battery-operated radio nearby for further weather advisories.

Immediate action is essential to survival; therefore it is a good idea to plan in advance where you will go if a tornado warning is issued.

Proper preparation and knowledge of the following will be helpful in knowing what to look for and do:

- In office buildings, go to an interior hallway on the lowest floor or to the designated shelter area.
- In homes, the basement offers the greatest safety. Seek shelter under sturdy furniture if possible.
- In homes without basements, take cover in the center part of the house, on the lowest floor, in a small room such as a closet or bathroom or under sturdy furniture.
- Keep some windows open, but stay away from them.
- In shopping centers, go to a designated shelter area (not to your car).
- In schools, follow advance plans to an interior hallway on the closest floor.
- If the building you're in is not of reinforced construction, go to a nearby one that is, or take cover outside on low, protected ground.
- Stay out of auditoriums, gymnasiums and other structures with wide, free-span roofs.
- In open country, move away from the tornado's path at right angles. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in the nearest ditch or ravine.
- Mobile homes are particularly vulnerable to overturning during strong winds and should be evacuated when strong winds are forecast.
- Damage can be minimized by securing trailers with cables anchored in concrete footings.

Remember, a tornado is only one of a thunderstorm's killers. Lightning is the worst killer.

Stay indoors and away from electrical appliances while the storm is overhead.

If you are caught outside, stay away from, and lower than, conductive objects.

Thunderstorm rains also cause flash floods. Be careful where you take shelter to avoid being trapped.

New types of materials available for tooth restoration

By Richard Brown, DDS and Charles Wakefield DDS
Dental Activity

The science of dental materials has advanced at an extremely rapid rate in recent years.

Many new types of materials are available for fillings.

The most versatile and popular restorations today are those using tooth-colored, or "composite" materials, which adhere to the tooth by a process called "bonding."

This has allowed dentists the ability to create the coveted "Hollywood smile" in patients concerned with aesthetics, while avoiding the loss of large amounts of tooth structure required for preparations for crowns.

Composites have an excellent ability to match or nearly match one's own tooth color.

A properly placed and maintained composite restoration can last for many years.

The main problem with composites is lack of strength, and they cannot be placed on biting surfaces of the back teeth, or molars, because they show rapid wear and new decay around the borders of the restorations.

Another essential requirement of composites is they must be placed in the mouth with precise attention to detail, or they will fail rapidly.

When a tooth-colored restoration is required and the defect is too large for composites, porcelain can be used in much the same manner and has good resistance to forces of function.

For the routine restorations on molars, the best material is still the silver filling, or "amalgam."

This material has been successfully used in dentistry since 1826 and has a long history of positive attributes.

Its strength and durability have contributed to its wide range of uses. Many advances have been made in amalgam materials recently, so it sets faster, is much harder and will not break down over many years as did older amalgams.

A properly placed and maintained amalgam restoration can last for many years and will show no significant wear from chewing.

Amalgam will normally far outlast any tooth-colored restorations.

Its main disadvantage is its color, which some patients find objectionable.

Thus, the composites and porcelain are used in the front teeth and amalgam in the back teeth, where strength is required.

Some claims have been made by a few that the mercury used in amalgam is toxic and that all silver fillings should be removed so that composites can be placed in molars.

While it is true that mercury has always been part of the composition of amalgam, it is present in a non-toxic form.

The most recent statement concerning amalgam from the Journal of the American Dental Association, July 1989, states "There is insufficient evidence to justify claims that mercury from amalgam restorations has an adverse effect on the health of patients."

Based on much modern research in addition to its outstanding track record, the ADA supports and encourages the use of amalgam as a state-of-the-art restorative material.

From an appearance standpoint, there might one day be a tooth-colored material for use in all teeth that is strong and durable enough for any punishment.

Until then, however, silver amalgam is still the choice for restorations in the back teeth.

Proper oral hygiene, including brushing and flossing, coupled with a sensible diet can not only help many restorations last for decades, but will prevent the need for most restorations, as well as help prevent periodontal (gum) disease.

By seeking regular dental examinations, most restorations required will be small, conserving important tooth structure.

Basic 4 groups can be found in fast food restaurants

By Barbara B. McCarty
Division Nutritionist

Fast Food is not necessarily junk food.

In fact, you can find all the basic four food groups represented at most of the popular restaurants.

Besides the meat group, daily group, bread/cereal group and vegetable/fruit group, however, you will also find a generous portion from the other group.

This fifth group, which includes fats, sweets and alcohol, offers little protein, vitamins and minerals and is high in calories, sugar and fats.

There is a reason the system is known as the basic four.

A quick stop for a jumbo burger, french fries and a chocolate shake, can gain you almost 1,200 calories, much of it in fat.

However, as is so often true, if you practice moderation and variety, you can enjoy fast food and have nutrition, too.

Begin by making sure you eat a wide variety of foods.

There is not one perfect food to supply all the nutrients you require.

So, mix it up: hamburgers sometimes, chicken as a change, pizza or a hoagie for more variety, and so on.

Eat at various places. Because fast food is, for the most part, high in calories, fat, sugar and salt, eat frequently in places where you can choose lower alternatives (such as the dining facility or at home).

A heart-healthy suggestion for fast food restaurants is to limit consumption of a jumbo hamburgers with all the fixings, fried fish, fried chicken and french fries.

Instead select the smaller size sandwich without the sauces, have a plain baked potato, try chili or the salad bar.

Oil and vinegar salad dressings are much lower in fat than creamy dressings (such as 1000 Island, Sour Cream, and Bleu Cheese). Try lower calorie "diet" dressings.

Watch out for other high calorie items on the salad bar: croutons, bacon bits, olives, sweet pickles, seeds and nuts.

Peeling the crust and skin off chicken will remove much of the fat. When ordering pizza, get green peppers, mushrooms and other vegetables and limit the sausage and other fatty meats.

Many fast food restaurants have responded to the public's interest in nutrition.

Not only do they have nutrition pamphlets you can get for the asking, they are offering more nutritious menu items.

Some restaurants have changed the oils they cook with to increase polyunsaturates (good) and decrease saturates (bad).

Salads and salad bars are frequently available, as are whole-grain buns. Low fat milk and broiled or baked meet items are becoming more popular, too.

Non-caloric beverages such as diet pop and unsweetened tea are also offered.

The choice is really yours. When you select your meals, remember to choose the basic four and to limit the "fifth group" (fats, sweets, alcohol).

If you practice moderation and variety at the fast food restaurants, you will be able to eat what's right.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

When something goes wrong within a person's vision system, the eyes do not always complain with pain. Instead, they try to compensate and keep vision sharp and clear.

However, there may be clues that something is wrong; squinting, tilting the head, tenseness, awkward body movements, reduced productivity and more errors on the job.

Eventually, the problem will reach the point where the attempts to compensate will not work, and symptoms such as blurred vision will persist, a nagging reminder that an eye examination is needed.

In the meantime, though, efforts to compensate for vision problems sap energy that could be put to good use on the job.

They also contribute to stress, which often leads to frequent headaches, body aches and pains, an irritable disposition, carelessness and lower productivity.

Scheduling a thorough eye examination every year is the best way to keep up with subtle vision changes that may be affecting on-the-job performance.

A thorough eye examination includes an eye and general health history, eye health examinations, tests for clarity of vision, tests of the eyes' ability to change focus quickly when looking from near to far or vice versa and a check of eye coordination and eye muscle function to be certain the eyes are working together as a team.

To be certain their vision is geared to their job, however, people need to tell their optometrist how they use their eyes at work. Sometimes, special prescription glasses may be needed to meet specific on-the-job seeing tasks.

Or a person may need vision therapy to sharpen a vision skill used in his or her work.

Helpful information to tell the optometrist includes the types of seeing tasks performed (reading, using a VDT, etc.) their frequency and any symptoms noted.

Such symptoms include frequent headaches; tired, burning or red eyes, blurred vision and double vision.

With knowledge of a person's job, optometrists can also advise about eye safety equipment, sunglasses with ultraviolet protection, prescription lens designs, frames and contact lenses.

End the lose/gain game.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Dennis E. Brower
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My command told me that the unit may be deployed and that I have to get a will.

They also told me that I should get my personal affairs in order and that it might be a good idea to give my spouse a Power of Attorney.

My spouse and I don't own any property, and everything else that we have is in our names jointly.

I don't see why I need a will or a Power of Attorney.

Can the unit make me get one? What are they talking about when they said my personal affairs should be in order?

A. No commander can order you to get a will. However, I would strongly suggest that all married couples obtain a will.

A will is a written document that ensures that property, of whatever kind and wherever located, is properly distributed at your death.

If all of your property is jointly owned, with right of survivorship, you might be able to have all the property transferred to the surviving spouse without the use of a will.

However, that is a chance that you should not take.

Not all kinds of property automatically transfer to a surviving spouse upon death, and you never know what will happen to you, your spouse or your property in the future.

Why would you not have a will and risk that something might happen?

The will is free, and it is excellent "insurance" for unforeseen events and circumstances. With it you protect your family and your property.

Families with children are strongly encouraged to obtain wills.

If you have children, and you do not believe that you and your spouse need a will, ask yourselves the following questions:

Does it matter to me if my children do not receive all of my property?

Does it matter to me who would raise my children if my spouse and I should die?

If you answered no, that it doesn't matter to you, then you don't need a will.

However, if it does matter, then you and your spouse should make an appointment and obtain a will.

Although some single soldiers may not have as much need for wills as married soldiers, it is still advisable that they obtain one.

This way there can be no doubt as to who will receive their property. It can be good protection.

Ask a Legal Assistance Attorney whether your circumstances require a will or not.

A Power of Attorney allows someone to sign your name on documents. It legally binds you as if you signed the document yourself.

Although you might say "why do I need this?", Powers of Attorney can be an excellent safeguard to be used in case of an emergency.

Most families will never need to use a Power of Attorney. However, you never know when that deployment or emergency might happen.

After the deployment of emergency, it might be too late.

Powers of Attorney are powerful legal documents and should be given only to those you fully trust. If you are unsure, you should discuss this with an attorney.

Keeping your personal affairs in order relates to having all of your important papers, correctly filled out, certified and in a place where both spouses can find them. These might include your birth certificates, marriage certificates, divorce documents, adoption certificates, insurance papers, bank account and credit card numbers, to name just a few.

Preparing yourself for any emergency is good preventive care for you and your family.

All soldiers and their families should practice it.

Be prepared; call Legal Assistance at 545-3281/3282 for your will appointment.

We can normally prepare and have your wills signed within one hour. No appointments are necessary for Powers of Attorney or notarizations.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

If you haven't been to the appliance store lately, new energy-efficient appliances that can help you cook better — with more enjoyment — await your next visit.

Today's electrical appliances range from cooktops that will cook your dinner, but not burn your hand, to microwave ovens that can bake cakes, roast meats, broil burgers, brown rolls or toast bagels.

Today's electric appliances will serve you faster, more conveniently and more energy efficiently than ever before.

Here are some of the recent innovations designed to give you more freedom in your cooking and lifestyle.

COOKTOPS

Whether you're a gourmet cook or a re-heater, you will appreciate this appliance category.

With rapid technological advancements, the once bland electric cooktop — whether a unit with four heating elements only or as part of a free-standing range — is at the forefront of culinary innovation.

The latest and hottest news in cooking is induction cooking. Already fast becoming the number one choice for kitchens in new home construction, induction cooking offers responsiveness and precise temperature control, without the heat or clean-up problems or ordinary cooktops.

Underneath a smooth glass-like cooktop surface, induction heating works by using a powerful magnetic current to directly heat cookware made of iron or steel.

In this manner, the pan becomes the source of heat and because only the pan gets hot, you and your kitchen stay cool.

Induction cooking also saves you money because the size of the pan determines precisely how much energy is used.

Cleaning up spills is easier too, because the food can't burn on the cooktop surface, or hide in a drip-pan underneath the heating element.

For instance, if you're cooking bacon, it won't ripple as it does when cooked on some equipment.

To eliminate a greasy mess, you can put paper towels around and underneath the pan, where all the splatters end up.

The towels won't burn, and when the bacon's ready, you can simply throw the towels away.

Improved cooking performance is also available in new cooktops with heating elements of solid cast-iron, called "disks."

Originating from the European-styling trend, these disks radiate heat evenly across the pan's bottom — no more hot or cool spots.

The disks are raised slightly above the cooktop surface, but they're sealed to it, eliminating spills and drips underneath.

Some disks even offer thermostatic control for maintaining a set temperature in the pan.

For performance and convenience with added versatility there are other options. You could choose a new modular cooktop.

This consists of a split cooktop. One side would be a regular coil-heat cooker, and the other side can be a deep-fat fryer, charbroil grill, griddle, rotisserie, wok or even a canner.

The cooktop's down-draft ventilating system creates a smoke and noise-free atmosphere.

OVENS

New electric ovens are making news, as well. By using a fan to constantly recirculate the hot air around the inside of the oven, convention ovens only use half the heat, and one-third the cooking time of conventional radiant-heating ovens.

Convection cooking leaves meats juicier and allows baking throughout the oven.

Ovens featuring the new electronic food probe take the guesswork out of cooking meat.

These probes monitor the internal temperature, turning off the oven and signaling you when dinner is ready.

Some ovens also offer a slow-cook feature that allows food to cook in the oven at a very low temperature for several hours, like a crock pot.

For old-fashioned, outdoor barbecue taste, new infra-red broilers sear the meat, sealing juices inside.

MICROWAVE OVENS

We've discussed microwave ovens before, but constant ungrading and increased capabilities occur daily.

Microwaves now turn themselves on and off, defrost food according to its weight, and automatically set the correct power level.

A new recipe function will recall your often-used power and time settings.

Bi-level cooking racks allow you to cook more food at the same time.

With the addition of convection and radiant-cooking features, it's now possible to bake, roast, broil, brown and toast in a microwave.

As you can see, appliances for the future are clearly geared toward energy-efficiency.

We need to consider every possible avenue for saving energy whenever the opportunity exists.

Conservation efforts are a rising concern for many big corporations.

For specifics on particular electric appliances, contact a reliable dealer to see how the new generation of electric appliances can add convenience and luxury to your home while saving energy and money.

For questions concerning this or any energy-related subject, contact the Energy Branch, 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

283rd Army Band vocalist selected for Soldier Show

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A vocalist from the 283rd Army Band has been selected to be part of the Army's Soldier Show.

Spec. Gregory Baron will join the variety show and travel the country performing in various cities.

Baron, whose Military Occupational Specialty is 13B, tried out for the band in May 1987.

At the time, he was assigned to the 197th Infantry Brigade where he was placed after an injury in Airborne School.

He had enlisted in the Army for Airborne School and a coinciding assignment to Fort Bragg, N.C.

"I wanted to do that because I heard they had a great chorus, and I wanted to be a part of it," he said.

"That was the main reason I joined the Army."

Baron explained that he had been singing in bands and choruses since grade school and pursued music while attending California State University, North Ridge, where he was a member of one of the choirs.

Along with his injury at Airborne School went the chances of singing with the 82nd Choir.

In fact, he thought his chances of singing at all were out of the question because he didn't get stationed where he planned.

However, his dream of singing prompted him to give the 283rd Army Band a recording he'd made.

He was given an audition and selected to be a member.

Since then Baron has been fine tuning his skills.

He has been chosen to sing the National Anthem at Atlanta Hawks and Braves games.

He has also appeared at several functions in the local area.

It is at one of those appearances that he was noticed and was prompted to try out for the soldier's show.

"Mrs. Spigelmire attended a showing of the event and thought that it what be an excellent opportunity for me," he said.

"Mr. Hyatt, the band leader agreed, and we sent a recording to audition for it."

Soon afterward a list came down, and Baron discovered he'd been selected.

On March 9 he leaves for Fort Belvoir, Va., where he will rehearse until mid-May when the tour begins.

In all he will be absent from the 283rd Army Band's ranks for six months.

He said he's been told that he'll be rehearsing for 16 hours-a-day.

But before rehearsals begin he has to requalify upon his arrival at Belvoir.

"We have to take a PT test, and in my case, I'll have to sing again," Baron said.

"If you're not what was presented to them for the auditions, they'll send you back. They're not fooling around," he added.

Neither was he when he sent in the original audition.

"I knew my chances were slim," he said, "but, I knew deep down that I was going to make it. Sometimes you get that feeling and that's how I felt about the Soldier Show."

Being accepted has been a big bolster to his self esteem, he said.

It has given him an extra bit of confidence, and he's going to need that confidence when competing for a part in the production.

Chief Warrant Officer Larry Hyatt said he doesn't think Baron's going to have a problem.

"Specialist Baron is a very good singer," he said. "In addition to being a good singer, he is also very good with the audience."

Hyatt said he wouldn't be surprised if Baron got one of the lead parts.

That's what Baron's going for.

He said, "I'm going to give them 100 percent."

International students gather for food, fun

By Shawn Lorimer
Bayonet staff writer

The International Student Training Detachment had its first picnic Sunday in front of Olson Hall.

Seventy-six students from the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses, Airborne School and Jumpmaster School attended the gathering along with some of their sponsors.

The sponsors, which include a civilian and military volunteer for each student, are a critical part of the program, according to Maj. Richard B. Driver of ISTD.

The civilian sponsors are a very special part of the international student's support.

"The civilians exchange not only cultural differences but, make the students feel (like) a part of an American Family," Driver said.

"Students learn about (American) food, customs and traditions and can go back to their country and tell others what America is all about," he said.

Driver is not the only proponent of the sponsorship program.

A spokesman from the office of Brig. Gen. William Steele said the command group strongly supports the civilian sponsorship of international students.

According to Driver, a key part of being a sponsor is participating in events like the ISTD picnic, which will now be a monthly activity.

He said the picnic is a new thing for ISTD and all primary military commanders are invited to attend.

With more than 122 countries represented, ISTD is comprised of both officers and enlisted soldiers of various grades.

Not to be confused with the School of the Americas, ISTD sends foreign military students to many of the schools on post.

According to Driver, many of these students are young junior officers who have the opportunity to "see America from a military, professional and civilian standpoint."

Volunteers of Quarter recognized for efforts

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Volunteers of the Quarter for the third and fourth quarters of 1989 were given awards by Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire at the Red Cross Center Feb. 20.

Spigelmire presented citations to Becky Watts and Wanda Campbell for their volunteer efforts within the Fort Benning community.

Watts, Volunteer for the third quarter, was on Disaster Relief duty in Puerto Rico at the time of the last presentation.

She is chairwoman of the Martin Army Community Hospital Red Cross Volunteers, chair of the Youth Volunteers, a full-time student, Army wife and mother.

Campbell was selected for her extensive work with the Fort Benning Girl Scout program.

In addition to being a Service Unit Director, she has also been a troop leader.

Spigelmire pledged support for such "worthwhile causes."

Stormy weather slows Girl Scouts cookie sales

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc.

The rainy weather and the storms that damaged Fort Benning recently have also damaged the Girl Scouts' annual cookie program sales.

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, Inc. needs to sell at least 3,000 more cases, and they're requesting community support.

In the 1989-90 school year, Girl Scouts have been developing leadership skills, self worth and a sound value system.

Girl Scouts believe these attributes will be effective weapons for withstanding the pressures of adolescence and adulthood, such as unwanted pregnancy and drug addiction.

Proceeds from the cookie program benefit the girls both directly through troop profit and indirectly by meeting the cost of programs.

Because 50 percent of the girls Concharty serves are at or below the poverty level, "cookie funds" are needed to offset costs.

Contact your local cookie representative at 682-2843 or the Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, Inc. at 327-2646 to find out where to buy Girl Scout cookies.

All-Army wrestlers head to interservice

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The All-Army Wrestling Team roster was finally decided upon Feb. 25 after what head coach Tony Thomas described as a long and tiring process.

"These guys have wrestled at least 14 times in the past two days," said Thomas of his weary charges.

Now, the final selectees must prepare for three separate competitions.

First, the team will go to the Interservice Championships, March 13 through 20, in Quantico, Va.

From there, select competitors will go on to the U.S. Nationals, April 18 through 21, in Las Vegas, Nev.

Those who place in the top six at the Nationals will qualify for the World Team Trials, July 14 through 18, in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Thomas said at least three of the team members should make it to that stage of the competition.

"Martin Strmiska can go a long way. He won in the Granma Cup competition in Camheuay, Cuba, just this month.

"That is one of the top international tournaments in which the U.S. team competes," Thomas said.

Derek Waldroup is a two-time national champion and a silver medalist in the 1987 Pan-American Games.

Both he and teammate Philip Lanzatella are expected to make the World Team Trials again this year.

The final 1990 All-Army roster is as follows:

- 105-pound — Burt Mease, Peter Gomez
- 114-pound — Martin Strmiska, James Dolan
- 125.5-pound — Michael Madry, Eric Wiedenhous
- 136.5-pound — David Shareef, John Shelley
- 149.5-pound — Rodney Smith, Samuel Pruitt
- 163-pound — Lester Watson, Peter Uhlik
- 180-pound — Keith Williams, Michael Palmer
- 198-pound — Derek Waldroup, Daryl Williams, Douglas Meridieth
- 220-pound — Philip Lanzatella, Jerry Jackson
- Heavyweight — James Demos, James Novack

Fair weather, warm water improve bass anglers catch

Fort Benning Bass Club

The Fort Benning Bass Club's latest tournament was Feb. 17 at Lakepoint Marina on the Chattahoochee River.

Although the river was muddy, the weather was fairly pleasant, and the water had warmed enough to make the fish more active.

First-place honors went to Will Marsh with a total catch of 8 pounds, 5 ounces.

Marsh also took the Big Fish Award with a 6-pound, 2-ounce bass. George Mendez took second place with 8 pounds, 3 ounces.

Lloyd Crowe came in third place with 7 pounds, 11 ounces.

There were 43 fish caught by 29 members fishing.

The Fort Benning Bass Club has a points tournament every month of the year.

The next tournament will be a two-day tournament at Lake Seminole, Ga., March 10 through 11.

Many active duty soldiers are members and fish regularly with the club.

Some of the organizations represented by the club's members are the U.S. Army Infantry School, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, School of the Americas, 197th Infantry Brigade and the 29th Infantry Regiment.

The Fort Benning Bass Club sponsors and/or participates in a number of civic functions throughout the year.

Anyone interested in becoming a part of a fishing club that promotes conservation, good sportsmanship, community pride and catching fish should contact Porter Angel at 569-9100, Otis Carter at 689-7474 or attend one of the meetings.

SPIRITUAL

Chaplains plan Lenten services

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplains Office

Deep purple cloths cover the familiar life-size crucifix behind the altar.

The joyous blends of harmony proclaiming "Hallelujah" will be silent for the next 40 days. A time of introspection has begun.

Catholics refer to Lent as a special season of Grace, emphasizing the importance of prayer, penance and charitable works.

Ash Wednesday and Good Friday are the most important penitential days of the liturgical year. They are days of both fasting and abstinence.

Ashes placed on the foreheads on Ash Wednesday are an annual reminder of the passage of time and the constant need for repentance.

The ashes are made from palms, which are blessed on the previous year's Palm Sunday.

The Fort Benning Catholic community announces several special programs, observances and activities for the season of Lent and Holy Week.

A traditional Lenten Devotion on Fridays is the Stations of the Cross, 5:15 p.m., in the Main Post Catholic Chapel.

The Stations of the Cross, which can be traced to a Franciscan tradition, is a Biblical meditation of the Lord's journey to Calvary.

Following this observance, the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, a Eucharistic Devotion, will be given.

Services in Spanish will be each Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Sightseeing Road Chapel during Lent.

These services will include a Mass, followed by the Stations of the Cross and the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

Special Lutheran services will be at 5 p.m. each Wednesday during Lent at the Warrior Chapel, building 3802, Sand Hill.

Lent is a season of sacrifice and penance. In observation of this, the women of the local chapter of Military Council of Catholic Women will meet at MPCC April 12 after the noon Mass to clean the church.

Everyone is welcome to participate.

For more information on Lenten observances and services, call Main Post Catholic Chapel, 545-1452, Sightseeing Road Chapel, 545-1926, or the Warrior Chapel, 545-2169.

Reflections Reflections

USAIC Chaplains Office

Ash Wednesday is a day of penitence to mark the beginning of Lent — the 40 days of preparation for the paschal celebrations of Easter.

Ash Wednesday is a particular time for new beginnings in the faith, a time for returning to the Lord.

On this day we recall our mortality and wait upon the Lord for a renewing Spirit.

This is a time for putting aside the sins and failures of the past in the light of who we are yet to become by the grace of God.

These resources and services are part of a larger environment of repentance and growth in grace.

We are to be tested by the Spirit so that our participation in the meaning of the Easter faith may be authentic and a true dying and rising with Christ to a new life in God.

According to Chap. (Col.) Herman Keizer Jr., the deputy director, U.S. Army Chaplaincy Support Agency, "Lent and the festival of Easter celebrate the dramatic dimensions of God's love for us and for the world — the life, the teaching, the suffering, death, resurrection and ascension of Jesus the Christ.

"This season lifts us to a high pinnacle of celebration of the Christian Way.

"The 40 days and 40 nights of Lent, as well as the great 50 days of Easter, are for the contemplation of God's great love and sacrifice for us and the great victory he won for us by the dying and raising up of Jesus.

"But Lent/Easter, like spring time, is a time for birth and growth.

"Seeds die in the soils which can transform them into new life. So we through repentance, the fellowship of the believing community and the power of prayer, join the paradoxical journey through death to life.

Old covenants are renewed, and new covenants are made through recommitments and the Baptism of new believers.

Palm ashes have significant meaning

USAIC Chaplains Office

Centuries ago it was the custom at the beginning of Lent to sprinkle ashes on public sinners as they came to church in repentance.

Ashes on believers' foreheads indicate the willingness to do penance for sins.

The traditional words used as the ashes are placed provide a timely reflection, "Remember man, that you are dust and to dust you will return."

The alternative verse used in many churches focuses our attention on the deep meaning of the Lenten observance to turn away from sin and be faithful to the gospel.

Ashes placed on the foreheads on Ash Wednesday are an annual reminder of the passages of time and the constant need for repentance.

The ashes are made from palms, blessed on the previous year's Palm Sunday.

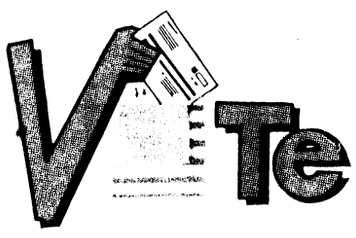
POST BRIEFS

New York schedules special elections March 20



New York will hold two special congressional primary elections March 20 to fill vacancies in the 14th Congressional District and 18th Congressional District caused by resignations.

The 14th Congressional District is located in the South Bronx Section of New York City.

The 18th Congressional District is also located in New York City, including Staten Island and part of Brooklyn.

If your New York voting residence is in either of these areas, submit a Federal Post Card Application to request an absentee ballot.

A single FPCA is valid for all elections in a calendar year, however, if you desire to use this FPCA to also apply for the Sept. 11 Primary Election Absentee Ballot, you must provide your party affiliation on the FPCA.

Museum to open gift shop

The National Infantry Museum will open the "Regimental Quartermaster Sales Store," a gift shop, March 16.

The shop will feature a line of gifts and collectibles, as well as souvenirs.

The actual inventory is still being developed. Soon, mail orders will be accepted. The shop will be open to the public.

Hours are:

Monday through Friday — 8 a.m.- 4:30 p.m.

Saturday and Sunday — 12:30-4:30 p.m.

The gift shop and museum will be closed on all Monday holidays, Christmas Day and New Year's Day.

The shop is a nonappropriated fund activity. Profits are paid into the One Fund to benefit the Fort Benning community.

The sales staff will be augmented by volunteers.

A private preview opening will be hosted by Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Michael F. Spigelmire Thursday, 5:30 to 7 p.m. for the commanders and staff of the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

The soiree will include "ribbon cutting," remarks by the commanding general, tours of the museum, an opportunity to buy, and refreshments.

AER campaign begins

There is a source of support for soldiers and their families at Fort Benning that many do not know exists. It can provide food when children are hungry. It can transport family members home in time of crisis. It can pay initial electric bills and rent. It can tide you over when your pay comes up short. This source is interest free. It is Army Emergency Relief.

Since 1942, whenever Army families were in need, AER has responded. AER assisted more than 1,300 Fort Benning active duty and retired military families last year, totaling $511,835.

From Monday to July 2, Fort Benning will conduct its AER Campaign. It has two main purposes — first, to replenish the fund for grants, scholarships and unpaid loans for 1990 and second, to increase awareness of this immediate source of financial support.

Last year we contributed $202,105. We should be able to do as well or better for our soldiers and their families this year.

We need your help in this most worthy cause. This is one way the Army truly takes care of its own.

Decennial Census Day is April 1

USAIC Public Affairs Office

All Fort Benning soldiers will be counted for the 1990 Decennial Census, April 1.

A Military Census Report will be completed on all soldiers assigned to Fort Benning. There are no exceptions.

As in the past, the Secretary of Defense has pledged full cooperation with the Bureau of the Census and agreed that the Army will participate in the enumeration of soldiers.

Department of the Army has provided instructions for conducting the 1990 Census.

Command involvement is paramount in ensuring that all personnel are made aware of the importance of the census.

A representative from the Macon, Ga., Census Office has been assigned to assist Fort Benning's Project Officer in coordinating, planning and executing the 1990 Decennial Census.

Maj. James R. Meucci, deputy adjutant general, and Capt. Robin D. Jones, chief, Personnel, Plans and Actions, have been appointed the Census Project Officers for Fort Benning.

March 27 the Census Representative will train and administer the census oath of office to all personnel assisting in the census. She will also provide all equipment required to complete the enumeration.

The Census representative will collect all census materials April 12.

The information collected in the Decennial Census reflects the status of people and housing as of April 1.

The Decennial Census is required by Article I, Section 2 of the Constitution of the United States for the purpose of apportioning Congressional representation according to each state's population.

Child care center nears completion

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Congressman Richard Ray cut the ribbon in a ceremony dedicating the new McGraw Child Development Center March 2.

The Child Development Center, located near McBride School on Custer Road, will serve up to 104 children when it opens.

The McGraw facility is scheduled to open in May and will provide full-day, pre-school and after-school services for children from 1 to 12 years of age.

According to Kaye Elliott, director of the McGraw Child Development Center, the facility cost $500,000 and is outfitted with the latest equipment to provide quality child care.

Included in the conveniences at the McGraw Center are video cameras, which safeguard parents and child care providers, and vision panels for observing children at play.

In February of 1986, Child Development Services began operating two Child Development Centers. One at Marne Road serves 66 children and another at Custer Terrace can handle 82 children.

Despite the two existing facilities, more than 200 children could not be served.

Ashley Berry assists Congressman Richard Ray in cutting the ribbon dedicating the new McGraw Child Development Center.

Child Care Coordinator Becky Carroll said that Ray was instrumental in getting congressional support and funds for the facility.

Ray appealed to the House Armed Services Committee's Panel on Morale, Welfare, and Recreation.

The result was that $500,000 in non-appropriated funds were authorized although child care is normally a legitimate appropriated fund obligation.

School of Americas renovation begins

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

An extensive, two-year renovation of the School of Americas building is getting underway.

Maj. Wilfredo Ortiz, Directorate of Training and Doctrine, said the project is part of $25-million construction and renovation plan.

"The point of the move is to build a state-of-the-art facility for SOA," Ortiz said.

The new facility will house all the school's administrative offices and is expected to take about two years to be completed.

Maj. Jack Rail, SOA, said, "We have no problem in accomplishing our mission. The only bad part is the inconvenience."

He also said that none of the training units have been displaced, and only the school's administrative offices were affected.

Those offices were moved to empty Building 35 so that work could begin on an extensive renovation project.

Also moved into new buildings because of the construction were offices of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, the Civilian Personnel Office, the Directorate of Contracting and the Directorate of Logistics.

However, "The School of the Americas will be the sole occupants of the new facility," Ortiz said.

Also part of the construction and renovation project is the refurbishing of the unaccompanied officers' quarters located near the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

The five buildings, which were constructed between 1955 and 1957, will receive a complete face-lift inside and out.

When finished, the new quarters will include 104 rooms for junior and warrant officers and 30 rooms for senior officers.

Each room will include a kitchenette, bathroom, living room and bedroom.

Junior officers' quarters will be outfitted with balcony-style entrances while the senior officers' quarters will have hallway entrances.

According to DEH, that project should be complete sometime next year.

The three-day, non-stop event begins at 6:30 a.m. April 27 with a physical training test and concludes nearly 60 hours later, at about 5 p.m., April 29 with a 2.7-mile buddy run from Victory Pond to the Ranger Training Brigade headquarters.

Other events testing the mettle of the two-man teams include: marksmanship, parachute spot jump, forced road march, the 60-foot prusik climb/rappel, canoe course, night land navigation, Darby Queen obstacle course, water confidence test and the helocast/swim.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What impact do you think you have on soldiers as Bradley New Equipment Training Team Instructors? See related story and photo on A-4.

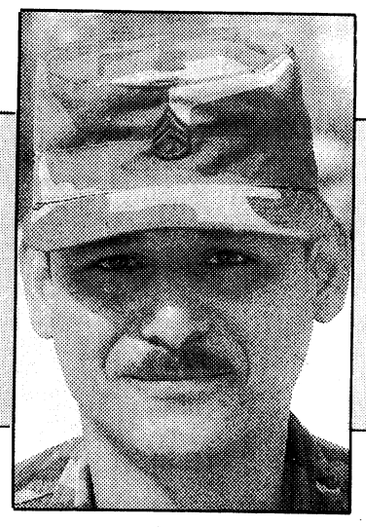
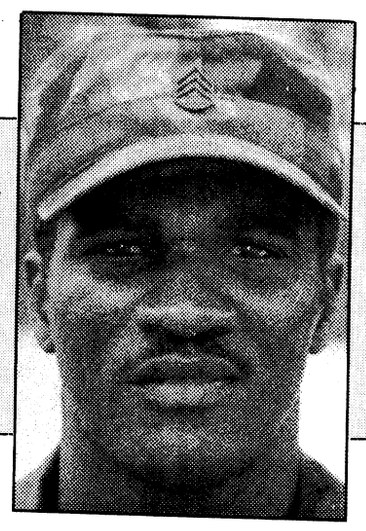
Staff Sgt. Michael Cooley, Bradley NETT — "I think I have a big impact on soldiers. When we go to a new unit, they want to know everything about the Bradley. I'm one of the people who has that information so they have to listen, and I have to be accurate."

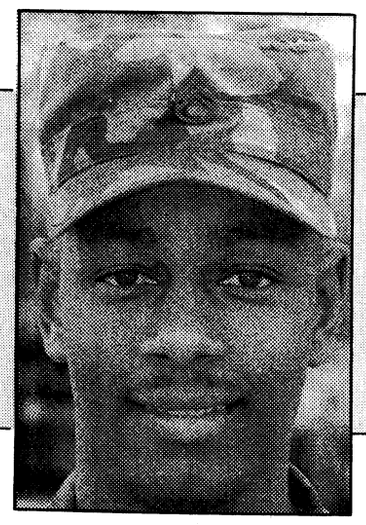
Staff Sgt. Forrest Blue Horse, Bradley NETT — "I have a big impact on soldiers. This job has a lot of visibility because we train soldiers all over the United States. We give soldiers their first impression of the Bradley. Because of this I have to be squared away, or they won't be squared away."



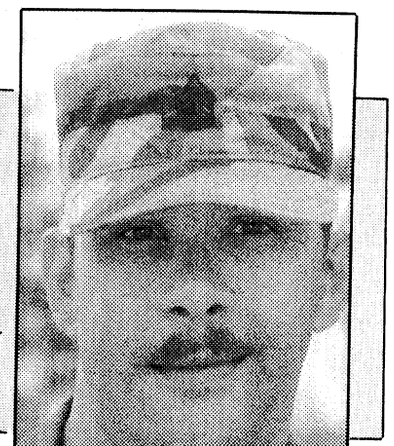
Staff Sgt. David Marquez, Bradley NETT — "I have a dramatic impact on soldiers. What they learn from me is what they'll use on the battlefield. It's a thin line between survival and death."



Staff Sgt. William Lewis, Bradley NETT — "I have a positive impact on soldiers. What I teach soldiers is what they will teach others. If I make a good impression and do it professionally, they'll do the same. The first impression is a lasting one."



Staff Sgt. Jeffrey Young, Bradley NETT — "We have a very big impact on soldiers. We are the difference between making them feel good and confident about the Bradley or causing them to have a bad impression of it."



Sgt. 1st Class John Enos, Bradley NETT — "We have a big impact on soldiers. The Bradley is the finest vehicle in the Army today. Our job is to make people proficient in the operation of it so they can employ it properly on the battlefield."

Snively: Old phone system had several good points

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Seen on a bumper sticker: "Communications dominate war; broadly considered, they are the most important single element in strategy, political or military . . . Alfred Thayer Mahan, naval historian."

The car, painted orange, belongs to one of Building 4's signal officers.

Heard nearly everywhere on post: "We'd be up the creek without a paddle if war ever came to Fort Benning, and we had to rely on these telephones."

That's been the sentiment around here since 1944.

But, it's about to change.

New lines and switches are being installed; and, if all goes well, come May, or June, or July, when you dial a number, you stand a better than even chance of actually reaching the office you want.

Unfortunately, it's a two-way street.

If you can reach others, then they can reach you — both those on and off post.

I personally like the Fort Benning phone system the way it is.

It provides so many great excuses for covering up mistakes, "That's not what I heard you say on the phone," or for not returning calls, "I tried and tried but could never get through."

In addition to the new lines and switches, many offices will be getting high-speed, state of the art equipment.

For instance, there's the "gotcha" device. That's a system that allows a caller who finds the number he wants to be busy, to tap in a code so that as soon as you hang up, "ring," you're caught.

Another gizmo is "call forwarding," so if you're going to be at some other location and a call comes into your number, zap, it's automatically transferred to the other number.

Not all organizations on post will have that system, but enough will, to make erstwhile telephone call avoiders nervous.

Which brings me to the real purpose of this piece. These diabolical devices and more, already exist in the civilian community — at an extra charge for each, of course.

Perhaps the most irritating one of all is "call-waiting."

I absolutely despise "call-waiting." When I make that rare call to a person, or, even he to me, I want to know I have that person's undivided attention.

I do not want to be interrupted by beeps and a "Just a minute, I have another call coming in," then be put on hold forever.

Eventually Ma Bell or one of her ding-a-ling offspring is going to provide Musak services for those who have call waiting.

I know, I know, some people consider themselves so busy and so important they think they have to be able to monitor the world 36 hours a day.

Give me a break; nothing's so important you can't miss a call once in a while.

And the excuse "I have teenagers in the house," won't cut it either.

I know I wouldn't want to be an answering service for a teenager. And if I were expecting an important call, then the teenager could just wait until the call came in before tying up the phone.

If the teenager couldn't accept that, then the teenager could invest a couple of hundred dollars to install an additional phone line to the house.

Another status symbol I can do without is a car phone.

Hey, people can get me at home and work. Let me at least drive in peace without being interrupted by phone calls — did you know they now have backpacking phones so you can be reached while out supposedly enjoying the solitude of nature?

I even remember seeing a person on top of Mauna Kea, 13,796 feet above sea level, open up a brief case and make a phone call.

What chutzpah.

Sorry, telephone people, communications might be important in war, but peace and quiet and a little privacy are necessary, too.

Speaking of privacy, the latest device is a system that will let you know where a call is coming from.

I think it's great, but people who use phones to sell things hate it and claim it violates some God-given right to infringe on one's home.

Along those lines, I think an answering machine could be most helpful.

I don't have one because I hate to talk to them and don't want to subject my friends to one, but if I did, I think my message would be: "Hi, you've reached the Snively home. I may or may not be in. I may or may not be monitoring this call. So leave your message. If you're a friend and I'm home, I'll pickup. If you're not, I won't. If I'm not home and you're a friend, then I'll call you when I get back. If you're a pest I won't, so don't even bother leaving a message at the sound of the beep . . ."

Standards tougher as Army gets smaller

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

There's a quiet trend overtaking the Army once again.

It's called "professionalism," and it's definitely on the upswing.

More and more, we're seeing commanders and senior NCOs alike reverting to the rigid disciplinary standards that once made this Army the most feared and revered fighting force on the face of the planet.

To what can we attribute this sudden motivation?

Are we producing better trained soldiers?

No, I think training standards are not as big a factor as some would think.

Are tougher regulations being written?

No, I haven't seen any boost in the output of "ARs" recently.

Why then do soldiers seem to be towing the line just a bit more tightly?

The answer is plain, it's fear.

Fear has always been a strong motivating factor.

What are the men and women of today's Army afraid of?

Losing job security is the answer.

Commanders will probably agree that anything that will help keep troop discipline problems to a minimum will leave more time for the important stuff, such as planning and training.

Fear of losing job security may be just the boost needed to reaffirm the primary mission.

That mission is to protect and defend the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic.

That mission is not to harbor the dregs of society.

The Department of the Army is under a lot of fire to "reduce the force."

This means letting people go. It means fire them if need be.

I don't think the Army is going to arbitrarily get rid of good soldiers.

Performance is the key. "Maintain the standards."

Take a look around. DA is talking about tighter adherence to physical standards, including possibly raising the Physical Readiness Test standards.

One or two more pushups won't kill anyone who has been maintaining good physical training all along.

There's also a lot of "weighing in" going on lately.

There is no better reason to "RIF" someone than for blatantly disregarding the weight standards. So long to those of you who are overweight, you've skated long enough.

Young soldiers now joining the Army, hoping to make it a career, beware. You had better be on your best behavior because only the creme de la creme will make it to the top.

Officers, you know the deal. "Field grade means points made," should become your motto.

I know there were quite a few captains passed over for major on the last promotion list.

If you need a little inspiration, take a walk over to the Airborne School and watch those young hopefuls in action.

You'll see respect, pride and a willingness to do whatever it takes to go the extra mile.

Pass by 3rd Ranger Battalion sometime. Nowhere will you see stricter adherence to military courtesy and customs.

They may not always rub everybody the right way, but they are one sharp set of GIs.

Don't leave it to chance that you won't get noticed for that DUI or those bad checks.

Rest assured it's been noticed and noted.

Look alive, everyone. A new Army's on the move.

Only those who display a willingness to belong will weather the storm headed our way.

Soldiers welcomed back at Burger King party

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning Burger King and Army and Air Force Exchange Service had a welcome-back party Feb. 26 to honor the 75th Ranger Regiment and 36th Engineer Group for their participation in Operation Just Cause.

According to Paulette Payne, Burger King manager, the Burger King Corporation and AAFES saluted Operation Just Cause soldiers worldwide.

Soldiers and family members were given coupons entitling them to a free dinner at Burger King. Free coffee and 18 large cakes were given out to customers. Seventeen other cakes were given to the separate companies.

Payne said 1,836 soldiers and family members attended the welcome-back party.

Capt. Al Dochnal, commander of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, said his company marched to Burger King for their free meal and then marched to a range where they spent a few days.

"I think it's great that they would take the time to do this for us," Dochnal said. "Everyone has been so generous and nice."

1st Sgt. Robert Pounds, Co. C, expressed his thanks to Payne on behalf of the company.

"We really appreciate this," he said. "I've been in the Army 16 years, and this is the first time something like this has happened."

"This is hooah," said Pfc. Steve Huff, Co. C. "Burger King will have my business from now on."

Black history observance concludes with luncheon

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Information Systems Command concluded its observance of Black History Month with a luncheon at the Main NCO Club Feb. 28.

Before the meal was served, there was a brief program in keeping with the theme of the month.

Linda Davis, accompanied by Sandra Wansley on the keyboard, performed two vocal solos.

Tammie Hammons, a sophomore from Carver High School, performed an African dance to the visible delight of the guests.

The featured guest speaker was Edward E. Cox, a graduate of Fisk University and this year's recipient of the Greot Award.

The Greot Organization, a group devoted to African affairs, accepted applications throughout the southeast in what has been a traditionally stiff competition among the categories of music, literature and art.

Cox won this year's award for literature with his composition on the life of Sister Julian Griffin. According to Cox, "Griffin was the only black Roman Catholic nun in the area."

Post finance office recognized as best in TRADOC

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Finance and Accounting Office was recognized as the "Best in the Training and Doctrine Command" by Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire in an award presentation Feb. 27 at the Finance and Accounting Office.

The award is given annually by the TRADOC Deputy Chief of Staff for resource management.

Each installation is rated against its peers in the areas of military pay, travel support, civilian pay and accounting support.

The award is then given to the best small, medium and large installation finance and accounting office. Fort Benning has been selected as the best F&AO in fiscal year 1989 in the large installation category.

Spigelmire described the award as a "significant achievement" and challenged the office "to continue to set the example in TRADOC."

High school students gather at Fort Benning for annual Academy Day

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

High school students and their families from a 21-county area turned out for the sixth annual Academy Day here Saturday.

The event was sponsored by Congressman Richard Ray for high school students of the Third Congressional District.

Information was provided to students interested in attending one of the nation's service academies, enrolling in a Reserve Officers Training Corps or participating in a scholarship program funded by one of the branches.

Representatives from the Military Academy at West Point, Air Force, Naval, Merchant Marine and Coast Guard academies and the Army, Air Force and Navy ROTC were on hand to speak about their services and answer questions.

Renaldo Dickson, a junior from Pike County, said he wants to join the military service to get "fulfillment out of life."

"I'm also thinking about joining because my father and some of my relatives were in the military," Dickson said.

Jay Hickey, a sophomore, said he was interested in attending one of the academies because of the education benefits offered.

He said he was looking at applying to West Point or the Air Force Academy.

"My dad was in the Army, and my grandfather was in the Air Force," Hickey said.

According to Lt. William E. Ward from the Military Academy, the students interested in the military service don't necessarily have military backgrounds — many come from civilian families.

"The armed forces are becoming more popular. Advertising has increased so more people are hearing about them," Ward said.

Benning teams travel all over training Bradley users

Ann M. McDonald

Sgt. Robert Cagle, Co. D, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., does an oil check on a Bradley while working with the NETT team.

Trainers teach everything from vehicle's top to bottom

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

They're the ghosts of Fort Benning.

Technically, they are assigned to the 29th Infantry Regiment here, but as part of the Bradley Infantry Fighting Vehicle New Equipment Training Team, they're always traveling to other posts.

This select group of noncommissioned and commissioned officers travel all over the United States training units on the use of the Bradley.

There are 10 NETTs in all, and they are divided between Benning and Fort Knox, Ky., according to Sgt. 1st Class Jim Hicks, NCO in charge of team four.

Of the 10 teams, five are at Fort Knox. The teams are broken down into scout, infantry and maintenance teams.

The teams labeled scout or infantry are fully capable of training both, Hicks said. However, the maintenance teams are strictly that.

They are all identified by a special badge worn by the NETT instructors.

During a mission the maintenance teams are the first to go.

"They go and teach soldiers in motor pools how to repair Bradleys before the other teams arrive to train the unit how to use them," Hicks said.

"This is done so that when the unit starts actively using the vehicle, the troops know how to fix it if it breaks."

The men are labeled as instructors, but they are actually more like guides.

Armed with manuals and combat vehicle communications helmets, the team members take their respective spots within the unit they are to train.

There is a NETT member at every level — from the squad leader to battalion.
commander.

"That trainer teaches the unit's soldiers everything about the Bradley," Hicks said. "He goes over it inside and out, backward and forward until the unit can fully engage the vehicle without assistance."

This is done in such a manner that the unit being trained does not lose its integrity.

"We're there to show them how to effectively use the Bradley," he said. "The unit still has control over everything else."

It has to be that way because once the NETT leaves, the Bradley's will still be there, and the unit has to know how to use them.

On the average, NETT is with a unit for two months. During that time the trainers are an extension of that unit.

Staff Sgt. Michael Cooley, a NETT instructor, is on his second tour as a trainer. His initial tour was when the team formed in 1982.

Since then he's educated many soldiers in the use of the Bradley.

It's a job he said he enjoys, but it has its drawbacks.

"We don't have the opportunity to spend that much time with our families or go to schools," he said.

"It isn't bad for a marriage; if a marriage is strong enough, it will survive anything."

If it appears as if it is hurting a marriage, that instructor will be immediately pulled from the team, said Regimental Command Sgt. Maj. Gary Cupit.

"We're not here to wreck marriages," he said. "If being a member of NETT is detrimental, then we'll fix it no questions asked."

NETT Chief Lt. Col. William Hand said he insists soldiers spend as much time as possible with their families while they are on station.

There are many requirements that have to be met before a soldier can be a NETT member.

Hicks said each man must have served in a Bradley unit, be a staff sergeant or sergeant first class, have either attended Basic or Advanced Noncommissioned Officers courses respectively and be interviewed by the regimental sergeant major.

That's not all, before they are allowed to instruct, each member has to be certified on every portion of Bradley instruction.

"Because of the time we spend away from Benning, we have to be very selective," Hicks said. "Only the elite of the 11 mikes are chosen because they have a lot of training behind them."

Rangers upgrade buildings in search of excellence

By Sarah McLaney
DRM, Management Analysis Division

"The Rangers lead the way, not only in Panama but at Fort Benning, too."

ACOE represents excellence in everything done at Fort Benning — the Army, the community and the services and facilities that support soldiers.

When excellent services and facilities are provided, the soldier's sense of well-being and his ability to fight are enhanced.

This is exactly what Lt. Col. Michael J. Pearce, commander, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, and his men have done.

An old unattractive gymnasium was gutted and renovated into five administrative offices and one large conference room.

Staff Sgt. Herman L. Sutton, the "main contractor" and Capt. Ronald J. Rose, former Battalion S-4, with a crew of six men per day during off duty hours or while awaiting orders, completed this project in two to three months.

From a building that consisted of plywood walls and concrete floors, the Rangers created an attractive headquarters building.

The building now has a pleasant decor of oak paneling and textured wallpaper, divided by a chair rail.

The bare, concrete floors were replaced with a tile flooring.

The drop ceiling with recessed lighting adds to the aesthetic quality and design of the office.

Draperies have been added to the windows, and each room has pictures depicting the history of Rangers dating back to the Revolutionary War.

Decorating the walls of the conference room are various unique stained glass emblems/logos representing Ranger units dating from World War II to Vietnam.

These emblems/logos were purchased with funds donated by The Ranger Associations.

At one end of the conference room, mounted on the wall, is a projection screen used for slide presentations.

Particularly noteworthy is the office for the CSM's alternate Command Post primarily used for NCO conferences.

This room is well equipped with comfortable furniture, as well as television and VCR, which enables training to be conducted.

Azaleas, junipers and liriope were used in the landscaping around the building.

The Ranger student billets have also been renovated.

In this area, four buildings, which had stationary walls throughout, were gutted by the Rangers to created an "open bay" effect.

Ceilings and walls were scraped clean and repainted, and lighting was reworked.

According to a well designed plan developed by the NCOs, bunks and wall lockers were installed to achieve maximum occupancy of the buildings.

As a result of this plan, 106 students can now be housed as opposed to 88.

This project was completed in three weeks per building.

The 4th Ranger Battalion is not finished yet.

They are currently looking at renovating a fifth building

This time the interior walls will remain to house interim transient Ranger personnel from Ranger Camps in Dugway, Utah; Dahlonega, Ga.; and Eglin AFB, Fla.

This project will save Fort Benning thousands of dollars in TDY funds.

Not only are budget dollars for the installation saved with these types of projects, but the intangible benefits far outweigh the monetary.

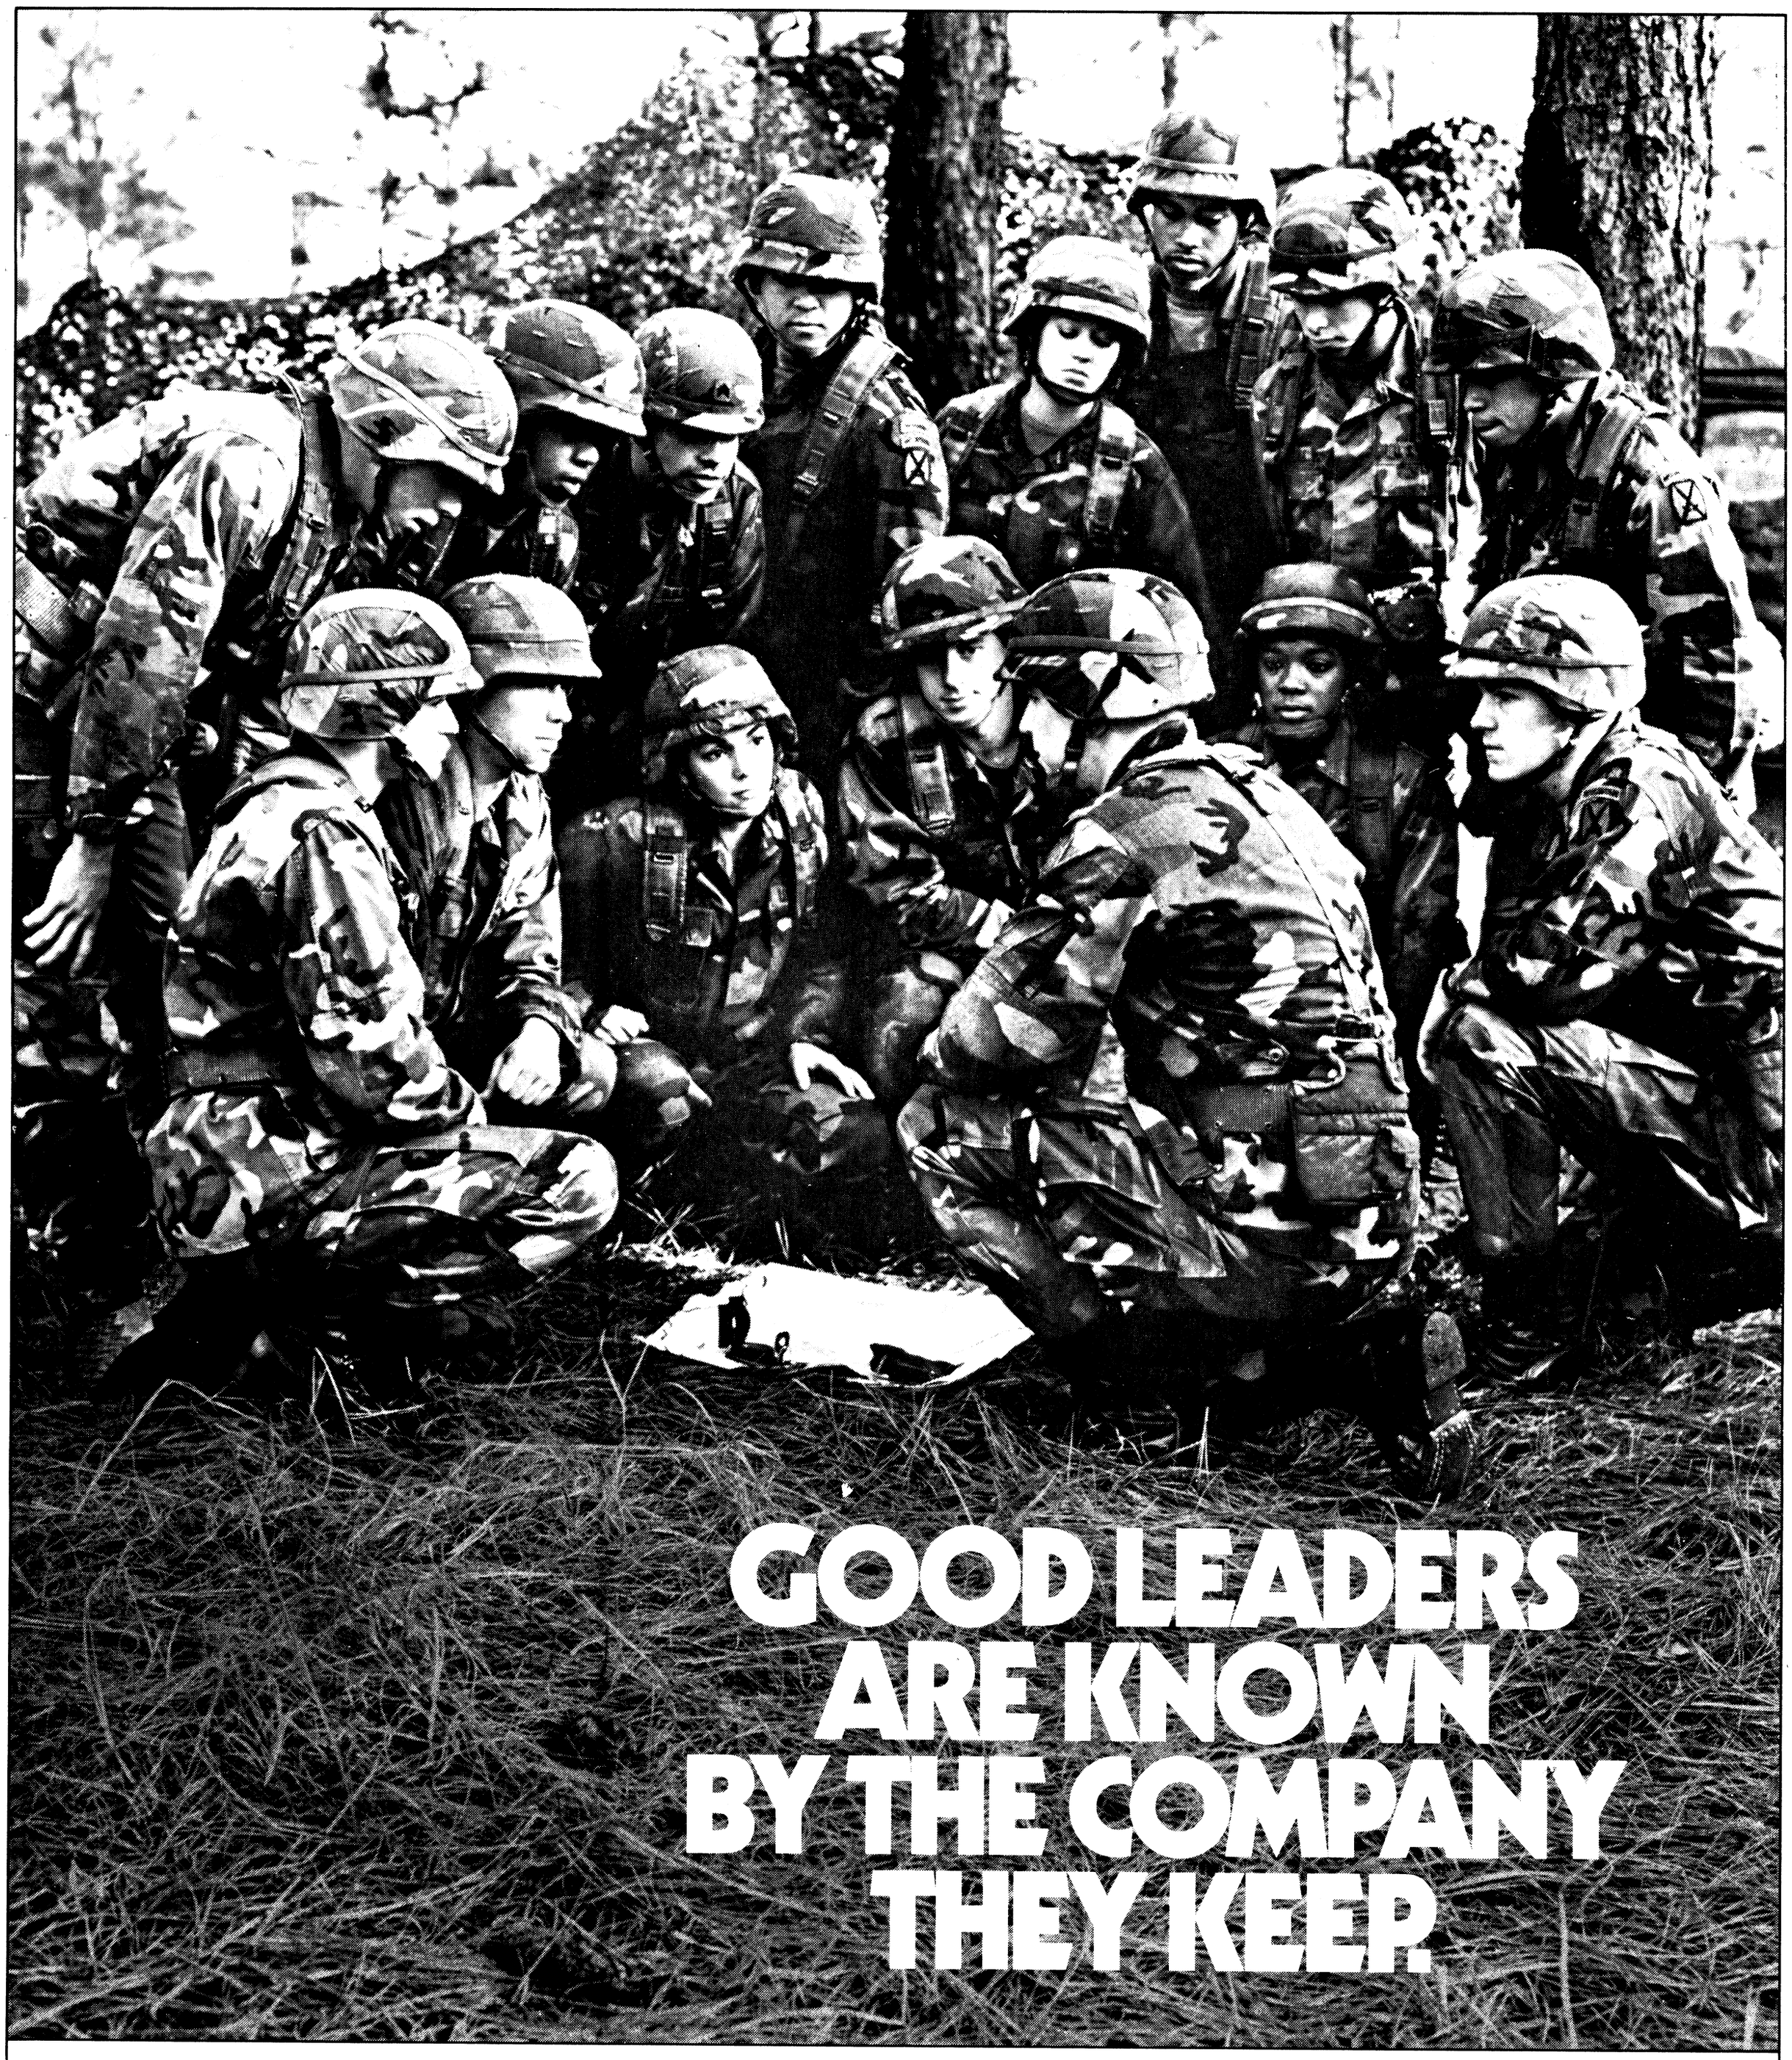
Critically ill or seriously injured patients should go to a hospital emergency room.
Services are provided by PHP Healthcare Corporation, Alexandria, Virginia, under contract to the US Army Health Services Command.



Whether you lead a squad or command a battalion, your ability to help keep good soldiers in the Army is a strong reflection of your effectiveness as a leader.

From the day a young person begins Basic Training, to the last day of his or her enlistment, you make a critical difference. Because the way you lead your soldiers has a lot to do with their decision to reenlist.

Aside from teaching and training, as well as instilling in your people Army values to make them better soldiers, one of the most important things you do is to be a good listener. It lets your soldiers know you care. You make them feel needed. Respected. Appreciated. And, in turn, more likely to want to continue their Army experience.

You can give your soldiers dozens of great reasons to stay in the Army. But the greatest reason of all is the one staring back at you in the mirror: your soldiers are yours to keep.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.

March dedicated to women's contributions

Equal Opportunity

The purpose of "Women's History Week" is to recognize contributions of women from all backgrounds to America.

This year's theme, "Courageous Voices Echoing in our Lives," helps the Department of Defense focus on the significant contributions of women in the lives of all of us.

"Women's History Week" was established in 1981 by Public Law 97-28 as a national observance.

In 1987, Public Law 100-9 extended the celebration to the entire month of March.

Below are some key historical events and highlights women's influence on American culture and the U.S. military service.

Colonial times

Life in colonial America was filled with relentless hard work and great physical danger.

Many women worked alongside men to clear the forests, plow, plant and defend their homesteads.

During the Revolutionary War, women, such as Margaret Corbin, Deborah Simpson and Mary Lugwig Hays (also known as "Molly Pitcher"), assumed many "men's" jobs.

Hays carried pitchers of drinking water to American artillerymen.

When her husband fell wounded, she replaced him at his cannon.

The 19th Century

Early in the 19th Century, Emma Hart Willard was refused admission to Middlebury College in Vermont (because she was a woman).

She decided to pursue her objective of advancing women's education without obtaining a college degree of her own.

With the help of the New York state Governor, in 1821 she was able to establish the first high school for women.

Dorothea Dix was a prominent leader in America's social welfare movement during the first half of the 19th century.

She helped to improve conditions in Massachusetts jails and brought many reforms to prisons, poor houses and mental institutions.

During the civil war, she served as a nurse and later founded the Army Nurse Corps.

During the Civil War, many women served both sides in "aide societies," as nurses and as spies or guides.

Clara Barton (founder of the American Red Cross), Louisa May Alcott (Author of Little Women), Harriet Tubman (Abolitionist), Mary Tepe and Anna Etheridge (Recipients of the Kearny Cross for Bravery at the Battle of Chancellorsville) were prominent Civil War nurses, Belle Boyd and Pauline Cusleman served as spies and Dr. Mary Walker, the first female surgeon in the Army, received the Medal of Honor in 1865.

The 20th Century

During World War I, women joined civilian work force as replacements for men who entered the military.

Often entering fields in which they had never worked before, they proved to be very capable.

The contributions of American women during World War I increased their political power and in 1920, on Aug. 18, Tennessee cast the final state vote needed to pass the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, giving women the right to vote.

The second World War created major changes in the female work force, similar to those in World War I, but in greater degree.

Many women entered the military services and civilian support jobs.

Some women were hired as civilian contractors, and nearly 70,000 served as nurses.

The military formed many branches in which women could serve.

Some of these were the Women's Army Corps, Women Accepted for Voluntary Emergency Service, Marine Corps Women's Reserve and Coast Guard SPARS were formed.

During the Korean War, nearly 50,000 women reservists were called to duty in 1952.

However, other than nurses few actually served in Korea (four nurses were killed), most were stationed in Japan, Okinawa and the Philippines.

About 7,500 women served in Vietnam, mostly as Army, Air Force and Navy nurses; many were decorated for valor.

In 1967, Congress repealed the ceiling on women in the Armed Forces and allowed women to become general and flag officers.

Anna Mae Hayes, who headed the Army Nurse Corps, was promoted to brigadier general on June 11, 1970.

During the 1970s, women became fully integrated into the Armed Services, and the last of the separate women's branches, the Women's Army Corps, was retired.

In 1976, the first women entered the military academies.

Other changes were taking place and Katherine Graham became the first chief executive officer of a Fortune 500 company.

Connecticut elected the first female governor who did not follow her husband into office.

In 1980, the Defense Officer Personnel Management Act helped equalize treatment of male and female commissioned officers; there were no longer separate provisions for appointment, promotion, accountability, separation and retirement of women officers.

However, combat exclusion polities for women remained in effect.

DoD-wide, as of September 1987, there were 10 women at general or flag officer rank, all of whom were rear admirals or brigadier generals.

In 1989, 10.8 percent of all DoD armed forces were women, and they now serve in all capacities including C-141 transport pilots, captains of coast guard vessels, missile crew members and as commanders and soldiers in many units functioning close to combat.

As of the end of fiscal year '89, seven women were serving as general or flag officers.

During December 1989, women were joining men in battle as commanders and soldiers in Panama.

Future

Futurists from the Hudson Institute (Work Force 2000) predict a growing influence of women on American society between 1990 and 2000.

Almost two-thirds of new entrants to the labor force will be women.

Employer-sponsored day care, pregnancy leave, work at home, part-time jobs and flexible-hour jobs will be much more common.

By the year 2000, 61 percent of the eligible women will be in the work force and more than 47 percent of the total work force will be female.

Women's strength to endure the hardships of establishing a new country, the stresses of war and the struggle for equal rights, pay and recognition, stands as a monument for us all to admire.

Their progress despite many obstacles certainly justifies the 1990 Women's History Month theme and emphasizes that women certainly are: "Courageous Voices Echoing in our Lives."

NCOA announces next Job Seekers Workshop is Wednesday

Noncommissioned Officers Association

The Noncommissioned Officers' Association announced that Fort Benning will be the site of the next Job Seekers Workshop.

The workshop will be from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday at the Infantry Museum. It will be conducted by Blaine Souerwine, an NCOA career transition expert.

Job Seekers Workshops are designed to assist military personnel who plan to enter the civilian job market after separating or retiring from the Armed Forces.

They are held near military installations worldwide as part of the NCOA's Veterans Employment Assistance Program.

The purpose of Job Seekers Workshops is to focus on all aspects of the job search for the separating or retiring servicemember, beginning with goal setting and ending with salary negotiation.

Also included in the seminar are tips on resume writing and preparation, interview techniques and other advise.

In addition, participants will be assisted in completing an NCOA "Mini Resume," a summary of an individual's professional qualifications.

The information provided on the Mini Resume will be entered into a data base of job seekers maintained by Employment Transition Services, an NCOA-sponsored service, and made available to companies looking for separating military personnel.

NCOA's Veterans Employment Assistance Program was started 15 years ago after the federal government stopped funding outplacement programs for military personnel.

Since that time, the NCOA estimates that close to one million people have used the VEA Program.

Today, the program has become especially important to the impending reductions in the number of military personnel.

The VEA Program sponsors Job Seekers Workshops on most major military installations throughout the United States.

They are offered free to both NCOA members and non-members. Military personnel of all ranks, officers and enlisted, who have decided to leave active service and retired veterans are invited to attend.

In addition, workshops are open to family members of the above groups.

The NCOA is a federally chartered, non-profit, fraternal organization founded in 1960 to promote and protect the rights and benefits of active duty and veteran noncommissioned and petty officers in all five branches of the Armed Forces, the Reserves and National Guard.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Civilian Attorney

Q. Last year, while I was stationed in California, I went shopping for some furniture.

The salesman wrote up a contract for the sale of a couch and a chair in hopes that I would buy both.

I decided just to buy the couch and the salesman changed the contract to indicate that I was buying only the couch.

Something must have gotten messed up somewhere because last month, I got a nasty letter from a collection agency saying that I still owe $400 for the chair.

The collection agency has been calling my home and my commanding officer. What can I do?

A. The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act can help you.

This Act requires debt collectors to avoid misrepresentation and other abusive debt collection practices.

It applies to all persons or agencies that regularly collect or attempt to collect debts owed or asserted to be owed by another and includes any creditor who, in the process of collecting his own debts, uses any name other than his own, which would indicate that a third person is collecting or attempting to collect the debt.

Once the debt collector is aware that the consumer is represented by an attorney, such as if a Legal Assistance attorney were to write the debt collector a letter, the debt collector is forbidden from further contacting the consumer or any other person except the attorney.

If the debt collector is not aware that the consumer has an attorney, the debt collector can contact the consumer directly, but only at reasonable times and places.

The act states that it is permissible to contact the consumer between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m., but not at the consumer's place of work if the consumer's employer has made it known to the debt collector that the employer prohibits the receipt by the consumer of such communication at the work place.

Some of the forms of harassment that the Act prohibits are the use or threat of use of violence, the use of obscene or abusive language, publication of a list of consumers who allegedly refuse to pay debts (except to consumer reporting agencies) and causing the consumer's telephone to ring continuously with the intent to annoy.

False or misleading representations are also forbidden.

Examples are communicating or threatening to communicate to any person credit information, which is known or should be known to be false, including the failure to report that a disputed debt is disputed, or representing or imply that nonpayment of any debt will result in the arrest or imprisonment of the consumer or the seizure or garnishment of any property or wages unless such action is lawful and the debt collector or creditor intends to take such action.

In your situation, the Act would be most helpful because it also requires debt collectors to verify the debt with the creditor if the consumer notifies the debt collector in writing within 30 days of receiving notice of the debt.

The debt collector, in your case, may be very surprised to learn that there is no contract or other agreement stating you bought the chair.

There are many more protections under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Successful interior lighting is a combination of equal parts — art and science.

Good lighting creates a positive mood, brightens your household tasks and increases your sense of security.

Poor lighting can increase fatigue, ruin your mood, decrease performance and bring on headaches and eye strain.

By using basic principles of lighting design, you can analyze what's wrong with the lighting you have and create a lighting scheme that's relaxing to the eye and beneficial to health.

First, create a lighting scheme, not just buy a light.

Analyze the lighting in your home, room by room. Decide what you do and do not like about it and how it can be improved.

Needless to say, all rooms should have enough lighting so you can move about without stumbling.

Focus your attention on the areas needing task lighting so you can work without straining your eyes.

For household lighting, you have four basic choices when it comes to selecting light bulbs — incandescent, florescent, halogen (a new, whiter incandescent) and full spectrum.

Although incandescent bulbs are the predominant choice for interior lighting, florescent bulbs are picking up popularity for a variety of reasons.

They provide excellent task lighting for high-activity areas such as kitchens, bathrooms, family rooms, laundry rooms and workshops, and they are without a doubt, more energy-efficient.

The most flattering light from florescents comes from soft-white or deluxe warm-white tubes.

Halogen bulbs are the newest addition to the home-lighting scene.

The bright white light they produce is closer to daylight than that from any other source. They are, however, much more expensive to buy and use.

Perhaps the healthiest lights for home use is the full-spectrum bulb, which is a color-corrected florescent bulb designed to provide the full spectrum of daylight, while providing a bright, efficient, diffuse light.

Full-spectrum bulbs fit into normal florescent sockets and are sold in hardware stores and lighting centers.

Though expensive (one bulb costs about $12), full spectrum bulbs can have desirable health effects.

Studies show that the "winter blahs," seasonal affective disorders can be relieved by full-spectrum lights.

If you don't mind paying the price for the bulb, you might try using them over a desk, kitchen or anywhere you spend a lot of time.

Here are a few tips to remember when choosing a lighting source:

- Each room should have uniform background lighting with a switch right inside the door.
- A room with dark walls and floors will absorb light; one with light colors will reflect light. A darker room requires more light to achieve the same level of illumination.
- High-light levels create a sense of activity; low-light levels encourage relaxation.
- When mixing artificial light with daylighting, use bulbs that produce light resembling the spectrum of daylight.
- Avoid large fixtures in small spaces and small fixtures in large spaces.
- All lampshades in a room should be at the same height, if possible.
- For writing, righthanded people should have light coming from over their left shoulder; lefthanders should have light coming over their right shoulders.
- Never place lights where they can get splashed by water. In potentially wet areas — bathrooms, garages, kitchens and outdoors — install a ground fault interrupter to protect against electrical shock.
- Always light stairs. Two-way switches are essential, with one at the top and one at the bottom of the stairs.
- Lighting requirements change with age. Thirty to 40-year old people need 17 percent more contrast to see an object as clearly as 20 to 30-year olds.

Those in the 60 to 70-year old age bracket need 2-½ times as much contrast to see as well as the younger group.

The quality of light is a factor, too. Older people benefit from soft, diffused light that minimizes shadows.

With all the tips provided for you to select the right light, common sense still tops the list. Don't use more wattage than necessary.

Energy conservation is an urgent necessity. Much can be done to conserve energy in lighting without reverting to the dark ages.

Adequate lighting is important, but it should be attained by using energy-efficient light sources.

More important, though, is elimination of waste; especially the waste of using energy for what is unneeded light. This has to start with you.

If you have any questions concerning this or any other energy-related subject, contact the Energy Branch, 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

Nutrition is where it's at

By Cheryl Thieschafer
MACH Dietitian

The military community has a great opportunity to join all Americans in celebrating National Nutrition Month in March.

The American Dietetic Association has selected as its theme, "Enjoy the Taste of Eating Right."

The Army has selected an additional theme for the second year in a row, "Controlling Fat — That's Where It's At."

This theme reinforces the efforts by Army dietitians to focus on the reduction of dietary fat and cholesterol consumption by the soldier.

Many dietitians, food advisors, food service sergeants and local eating establishments will sponsor special promotional events throughout the month.

Some of the events include a Health Fair in the Post Exchange Mall Area March 17 from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. and distribution of nutrition literature to post dining facilities.

Remember, the nutritional habits you develop now will determine your health for years to come.

Help yourself be all you can be nutritionally by Controlling Fat — That's Where It's At.

Sample fitness pattern menu

Fort Benning Dining Facilities

Compare the following lunch and dinner menus for Sunday. Note the difference in calories.

Lunch — Short Order

High Fat/Cholesterol/Calorie		Fitness Menu
Selection	Calories	Selection	Calories
Cheeseburger	795	Roast Turkey Sandwich	315
w/catsup	68	Tossed Green Salad	06
French Fries	350	w/no dressing	07
Angel Food Cake	139	Chilled Peaches	66
Soft Drink	145	2-percent Milk (8 oz.)	129
Total	1,497		523

The burger lunch lacks fiber and is very high in saturated fat.

This one meal provides all the calories recommended daily for a weight loss diet.

In contrast, the Fitness Menu provides about one-third of calories needed for the day and represents each of the Four Basic Food Groups: meat/poultry, milk, bread and fruit/vegetable.

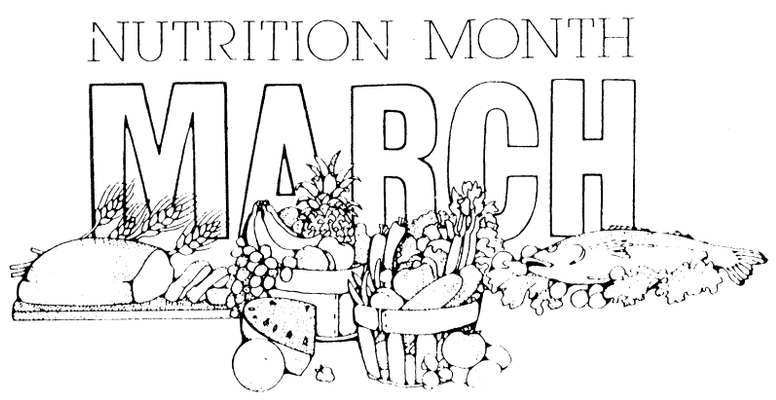
Dinner

High Fat/Cholesterol	Calorie	Fitness Menu
Selection	Calories	Selection	Calories
Onion Soup	116	Baked Fish	138
Beef Brogul	543	Lyonnaise Potatoes	165
Lyonnaise Potatoes	165	Seasoned Succotash	76
Waldorf Salad	90	House Salad w/lo-cal
Toasted Herb Bread	301	Thousand Island	37
Cherry Pie	464	Fruit Cocktail	70
2-percent Milk (8 oz.)	129	2-percent Milk (8 oz.)	129

The beef dinner presents some good choices, however, contains too many calories; eliminating the bread, soup and dessert would reduce the total calorie count to 927 (still too high if you are trying to lose weight).

Fish is always the better choice, especially if baked, broiled or steamed.

Watch next week for another sample menu.



MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Outpatient Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital will move to building 392, behind the Infantry Museum Monday.

This move is necessary to permit MACH to use the space now occupied by the Outpatient Clinic as a temporary Emergency Room during major renovation of the present Emergency Room.

The Outpatient Clinic will be closed this afternoon to permit the staff to move the needed equipment to building 392.

The move will continue Saturday and Sunday to keep interruption of service to a minimum.

The newly refurbished building will open as the outlying Outpatient Clinic Monday.

Appointments will be made for the same day or for the following day. Patients who call after 11 a.m. for same day appointments will have to stop at MACH to pick up their records before coming to the clinic.

There will be a special window in the Outpatient Records Section marked for this purpose to avoid long lines.

Patients who call for appointments for the next day, or who call before 11 a.m. for a same day appointment, need not pick up their records. Their records will be ordered and sent to the clinic in advance.

There will be a staff member in the clinic to draw blood for lab work and to give injections. X-rays will still be done at MACH.

Although many prescriptions will have to be filled at the Main Outpatient Pharmacy in MACH, the Outpatient Clinic will be stocked with some medications for the convenience of patients.

There will be a shuttle between the hospital and the Outpatient Clinic to transport patients, records and lab specimens.

The clinic is located on Bergen Street near Baltzell Avenue and behind the Infantry Museum.

After the Outpatient Clinic moves, the space they now occupy will be remodeled to function as the temporary Emergency Room.

When this remodeling is complete, the Emergency Room will be moved to this area and the actual renovation of the current Emergency Room will begin.

The proposed time for the completion of this project is this fall.

The plans for the new Emergency Room will be shown Channel 54, WXTX-TV's Fort Benning Digest at 7:30 a.m. Saturday.

Starting today, appointments may be made by calling 545-5564 or 689-0184.

This soldier has music in his blood

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

When music is your life, you don't give it up easily, not even for the Army.

That's how Spec. Glenn Poland from Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, feels these days.

The Plymouth, Mass. native has music in his blood and so far, just can't quit the habit.

"Even in Advanced Individual Training, I used to go to the recreation center on the weekend and play in the little band we had there; I knew I was going to hold onto it wherever I went."

Poland went from basic and AIT at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., where he was an honor graduate as an interior electrician, straight to Camp Humphreys, Korea.

There he spent 12 months with Co. C, 802nd Engr. Bn.

"The first thing I did when I got to Korea was to look for a place where there were musical instruments. I found a music theatre, and I became a big part of that place.

I played in a band there, and we did all the major functions and played at the officer and NCO clubs. Everybody in that band was in the Army, our lead singer was a chief warrant officer."

"Camp Humphreys sponsored me for the Soldier Show as a vocalist and musician, but I changed duty stations before I could do it."

The move landed Poland with Co. A, 43rd Engr. Bn., and just in time for a deployment to Costa Rica, where he carried on his never-ending search for musical opportunity.

"I won a talent contest there playing guitar. I also went into the nearby town, played guitar and sang on stage with one of the local groups. It seems everywhere I go, I always look for it."

Upon his return from Costa Rica, Poland decided to buckle down and get serious. He formed the group he's now with, known as "Sixty-Nine."

Made up of himself and Randy Posey on lead and rhythm guitars, Kenny Wessner on vocals, David Fussel on base guitar and Randy May on drums, the band lives by the motto, "A Mouthful of Rock and Roll."

Everyone sings background vocals. Everyone is also civilian, except Poland.

The name finds some of its roots in the type of music the band has been influenced by.

"It was the year some of us were born. It was a highlight in music. A lot of our influences came from that era; Cream, Pink Floyd, Led Zeppelin, like that," said Poland.

Their styles can be anything but common, however, and personal tastes range from hard rock, rockabilly, blues and country.

They usually play as a cover band and find that a lot of their songs were the most popular of their time and easily remembered by any listener as being hits of the era.

Poland said he feels that "doing the song that did it for them (a popular band) is something the listeners can relate to."

The band does have its share of its own originals. "There's only one we're really serious about, but four or five total," Poland said.

"When looking at our own songs we usually say 'could I hear this on the radio or back-to-back with Cinderella or Skid Row?' If the answer is 'no,' then it's out the door."

Not formally trained, with the exception of a "music theory class in high school," Poland cannot read sheet music. Yet, he knows the guitar as if it were his own child and has even dabbled with the keyboard on occasion.

Although the band is just budding now, willing to play at extremely reasonable rates and hauling the majority of their equipment in two pickup trucks, they are poised for the future and willing to go to any length to further their career. At an average age of 20 or 21 years old, they certainly still have the time.

Poland is as free as any soldier to travel to such places as Auburn University for the right gig.

As a Columbus-based band, they hope to make the local scene as soon as they can. They're looking toward places such as "The Little Rock & Roll" and "Shakkers" to give them a break.

Poland said local radio station "Rock 103" has agreed it "would definitely play them," if the band sent in a demo tape.

"We also wanted to see if we could get into the AUSA tour at Fort Benning, or either of the clubs there, for sure."

The band members get as crazy and hyped up for a show as other musicians do; but, according to them, they don't rely on drugs to get the job done.

"You can either play this like a kid, or you can play this like an adult," says Poland. You can do this and be professional and serious, or you can dilly-dally around. I don't think we're at the level where we can start partying and going crazy."

"Drugs are going out of style, period. That's part of the '90s."

The band feels they, too, are a product of the '90s and believes they will stay together.

"I possibly will reenlist, (but) it depends on what my options are, possibly the Army Band

Captain receives German Army award

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

It's one thing to be lauded for your military performance by your own country, but when another country recognizes your achievements, you've got to be good.

Capt. Peter Simon

The Fort Benning German Liaison Sgt. Maj. Uwe Wiegand echoed that sentiment in regard to an award given to Capt. Peter Simon, Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, for his performance while serving in Germany.

"He must have done something really super to get this award," Wiegand said. "It is the highest award a German soldier can get. "

Simon was recognized while serving with 2nd Battalion, 4th Infantry, in New-Ulm and later with Company C of the same battalion at Heilbronn, West Germany.

According to Simon, he was given the award for the relationship he forged between his unit and the German Army's 273rd Parachute Infantry Battalion.

He said he chose to do this because he realized what could be gained by training with a foreign unit that might be fighting alongside his unit in war.

Noting that soldiers in a new country are always a little timid, Simon felt that the relationship helped lessen that.

"I refused to let them become barracks rats," he said. "Their perception of Germans changed, and they made many friends."

Simon said the soldiers thought the training they did together was fun.

"It was fun, but it was also hard," he said. "We did 20-kilometer road marches, and joint live-fire missions together."

During my tour, I tried to get each of my soldiers a foreign marksmanship badge and jump wings he said.

They gained something for their uniforms, and they learned different doctrine and techniques.

As a result of Simon's effort, a formal partnership was formed with the unit.

"The soldiers in my command gained a lot from the relationship with the unit," he said. "That's what's important to me not the award."

Wiegand explained that this particular award comes in bronze, silver and gold and coincides with the number of year a soldier has served on active duty.

Simon was given the bronze award because he has less than 15 years in service.

Reserve cadets may turn down commissions, apply for release

Army News Service

Non-scholarship senior ROTC cadets scheduled to serve in the reserve components now have the option to turn down their commissions, according to Army personnel officials.

Non-scholarship cadets may apply for release from the service obligation incurred when they signed their advanced-course contracts.

"The program is being implemented because of personnel reductions in the active and the reserve components which are overstrength," said Lt. Col. John Buckley of the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

"As a result, many of this year's ROTC commissioning class selected for duty in the reserve forces will face considerable delays in being able to serve in the Army National Guard or an Army Reserve Troop Program Unit."

Buckley says newly-commissioned ROTC lieutenants assigned to the Individual Ready Reserve can expect delays in attending a branch officer basic course.

"Funding constraints in the reserve personnel pay accounts will significantly reduce training opportunities for new reserve lieutenants in the IRR," he said.

"Professors of military science will brief their eligible cadets," Buckley explained.

"Cadet Command will provide sample letters which cadets may use to request release. A Cadet Command board will consider the requests."

Buckley says Cadet Command will provide implementing guidance to ROTC battalion commanders.

Cadets requesting release will apply through their ROTC battalion commanders to Cadet Command.

Released cadets in the ROTC/Reserve Component Simultaneous Membership Program will complete their service obligation as members of their National Guard or Army Reserve units.

Prior service cadets with a service obligation who are not in the SMP will complete their obligation in the IRR.

American Business Women's Association

A former Benning executive secretary and retired civil service worker has been selected 1990 Woman of the Year by the Chattahoochee Chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

Edna Peacock, who was personal secretary to many of Fort Benning's commanding generals, received the honor. Peacock worked civil service for more than 20 years on post.

The honor is awarded to a member who is outstanding in promoting the personal and professional growth of women by involvement in community and chapter activities and raising funds to provide educational scholarships for women.

In a special ceremony attended by her husband and Chapter members, Peacock was given an engraved statuette and a dozen red roses.

Since joining ABWA more than 15 years ago, Peacock has been a very supportive and enthusiastic member, serving as chairwoman of several committees and projects and holding several board positions such as recording secretary, corresponding secretary, vice-president and president.

She presently serves as chairwoman of the bulletin committee producing a monthly newsletter for the chapter, which includes local and national news of interest to women in business.

Regarding her involvement with ABWA over the years, she said, "The friendship and fellowship you enjoy are one of the main aspects of belonging to ABWA, and the contributions you make in promoting the educational aspect of women through chapter scholarship programs is very satisfying and rewarding."

After retiring from civil service, Peacock became actively involved with the auxiliary at The Medical Center where she presently volunteers and serves on the Auxiliary Board.

Edna Peacock

Her community involvement also includes being an active member of First Baptist Church.

In addition to her many volunteer activities, Peacock manages to find time for her husband, two children and two grandchildren.

As Woman of the Year, she will represent the Chattahoochee Chapter at ABWA meetings and functions.

She will attend the 1990 ABWA National Convention and will have the opportunity to take advantage of educational workshops and outstanding speakers.

Students examine environmental issues

Fort Benning Schools

Wilbur School's fifth-graders have spent more than a month concentrating on environmental issues.

In a unit of study called "Cleaning Up the Earth," students have heard speakers, taken trips to agencies on post, communicated with the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission, done research on a variety of environmental issues and written plays and raps about what they've learned.

The unit spread through all of Wilbur School as the fifth-graders and their teachers presented productions to all Wilbur School classes and sponsored Wilbur School Recycling Day.

Students, along with many parents, brought in aluminum cans, glass, plastics and newsprint for recycling.

Proceeds from their recycling project will be used by Wilbur's fifth-graders to beautify Wilbur's school grounds.

Feast of Purim begins Saturday

By Barry R. Baron
USAIC Jewish Chaplain

The Jewish feast of Purim begins Saturday.

Purim celebrates the Jewish people's deliverance from destruction as recorded in the Biblical book of Esther.

When Mordecai, Queen Esther's uncle, offended Haman, the king's Chief Minister, by failing to bow when Haman passed, Haman was told by King Ahasuerus's to exterminate Mordecai's people, the Jews of Persia.

When Queen Esther discovered Haman's plot, she intervened with her husband the King to save her people.

Haman was hung on the gallows, Mordecai was appointed Chief Minister in his place and the safety and prosperity of the Jews was assured.

Joy is the keynote of Purim.

In the evening and morning of the holiday, the Book of Esther is read.

Each time Haman's name is mentioned, the audience drowns out the reader with boos and hisses and noisemakers.

Dressing up in costume and feasting on special triangular pastries add to the fun.

Traditionally, Jews add to each others' merriment by exchanging gifts of food.

The message of Purim is two-fold.

First, we should rejoice in our deliverances since all too often we are required to confront memories of pain.

Second, we should remind ourselves about the Hamans of the past so that we are better able to guard against tyrants who may arise in the future.

Fort Benning's Purim festivities will begin Saturday at 8 p.m., at the Infantry Training Center Chapel, building 3220, Sand Hill.

For more information, contact Rabbi Baron at 544-3269/3458.

BOSS Bash draws crowd

BOSS Program

The year's first BOSS (Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers) bash was Tuesday at the Hidden Door Enlisted Club.

WCGQ 107-FM Radio, The BOSS Group and the Directorate of Community Activities sponsored the event.

SATO Travel Services, in conjunction with American Airlines, gave away two round-trip airline tickets to anywhere in the continental United States or Caribbean.

The winners are Pvt. 2 Jon C. Leon of Company C, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, and Spec. Ronald Dabdoub of Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Both winners chose California as their destinations.

Army leaders have expressed concern about the perception that there is a lack of activities designed to meet the needs of the single soldier, according to BOSS officials. Fort Benning was selected as a test site for the Program.

Many programs have been created to serve Army families over the past few years and have received wide publicity.

Officials say that because of this publicity, many single soldiers feel left out and this concerns the Army Morale, Welfare and Recreation activities.

Army leaders have made a commitment to target single soldiers with innovative recreational programs.

Springer's 'Cotton Patch' moves to mainstage

Springer Opera House

The Springer Opera House production of the bluegrass musical "Cotton Patch Gospel," originally scheduled for a pre-Easter run in the intimate Studio Theatre, will be moved to the mainstage in April for a project to benefit Columbus Area Habitat for Humanity.

"This is a natural co-producer arrangement for the Springer," explains Managing Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce, "The original 'Cotton Patch' stories were written by Clarence Jordan of Americus, Ga., who founded a multi-racial, multi-denominational community there called Koinonia Farm.

"Habitat for Humanity, also based in Americus, was founded by Millard Fuller and grew out of work that he and Clarence Jordan did in a project called Partnership Housing.

This project will spotlight both Cotton Patch Gospel and the growing work of Habitat for Humanity in the Columbus area."

Pierce notes that proceeds from Cotton Patch Gospel will go toward Habitat's newest Columbus construction projects slated to begin in June.

Cotton Patch Gospel is an exuberant bluegrass musical that tells the story of the life of Jesus, but set in modern-day, rural Georgia.

Jesus is born in Gainesville, meets "John the Baptizer" on the banks of the Chattahoochee and delivers the Sermon on the Mount at Stone Mountain Park.

The music is the last work by the late Harry Chapin, the songwriter best known for his hits, "Cat's in the Cradle," "Wold" and "Taxi."

Atlanta actor/playwright Tom Key wrote the stage adaptation of Clarence Jordan's "Cotton Patch Version of Mathew and John" and starred in the original production, which played Off-Broadway for two years and then toured extensively for several more years.

Cotton Patch Gospel set records in both Atlanta and Dallas as the longest-running play in the history of either city's theatre community.

The concept of Cotton Patch Gospel and its stage realization are marked by a feeling of childlike belief, joy and simple reverence.

A sense of wonder co-mingles with an uninhibited sense of humor.

The Jesus figure is a spiritually-endowed young teacher and preacher who faces circumstances, temptations, triumphs and church-state trials patterned on the New Testament accounts.

The Lord is born in an abandoned trailer because there is no room at the motel.

The Holy Family flees to Mexico to escape Herod. Jerusalem becomes Atlanta, "the Big Peach," scene of the great big Bible meeting.

The Springer production of Cotton Patch Gospel will be staged by guest director Elaine Denny, Drama professor at Auburn University.

Denny most recently directed Auburn's lavish production of Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

The orchestra for Cotton Patch Gospel will play in the pit. A bluegrass band performs right on stage amidst the action and participates in numerous scenes as characters.

The show runs April 5 through 8 and 12 through 14. Performances are at 8 p.m. with one 2:30 matinee April 8.

Tickets are $10, $8 for seniors/students and $7 for groups of 25 or more.

The Springer box office opens April 26, and reservations may be made by calling (404) 327-3688.

Tickets may also be purchased from any Habitat for Humanity board director.

Boy Scouts recognize outstanding members

Boy Scouts of America

It was Mardi Gras at Fort Benning Feb. 24 as members and guests of Boy Scout Pack 227 from Indianhead Terrace met at the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy to celebrate the birthday of scouting with Blue and Gold ceremonies.

As part of the theme, boys and leaders dressed in costume to lead parents and guests through display tables showing the decorations and crafts that had been made during the past month.

Each of five dens participated in a portion of the ceremony that was highlighted by the presentation of advancements and recognitions earned by the boys during February. Fourteen boys earned 29 awards.

Also recognized were winners of the Pine Wood Derby, which took place Feb. 3. The overall pack winners will represent the pack at the Scout-a-rama Boy Scout show Saturday at the Municipal Auditorium.

First place in each grade category were Gean Cosper, second grade; Ben Bachman, third grade; Brian Jones, fourth grade and Jimmy Billings, fifth grade.

Recognized for best design for cars were Billings, Brandon Collins and Cosper.

The top three places from each den were captured by Cosper, Dustin Bussey and Alfredo Lopez from Den 1; Danny Backer, Joey Huerta and George Foster from Den 2; Bachman, Brad Koch and Kimo Griggs from Den 3; Billings, Armin Schevey and Chris Doyle from Webelos 1 and Jones, John Bailey and Schevey from Webelos 2.

"When our boys become Cub Scouts, they begin to work to earn four badges to form a diamond to be worn on their left pockets. First they must earn the Bobcat Badge, then, the Wolf, then, the Bear Badge. The final part of the Cub Scout diamond is the Webelos Badge," Cub Master Johanna Denny told parents as they prepared to award the rank of Bobcat to Nicholas McKee, Brian Velazquez and Jose Morales-Gonzales.

Alex Serrano, Bussey and Griggs were presented the rank of Wolf. John Denny and James Billings were allotted the Webelos Badge.

Also presented were Arrow Points, an award that represents the completion of 10 elective requirements. The first arrow point is gold, while all additional points are silver. Busseyearned Gold and Silver Arrow Points; Griggs gained a Gold and two Silver Arrow Points and Ben Campbell secured a Silver Arrow Point.

Earning activities badges in the Webelos den were Denny, Sam Lingo, Schevey, Billings, Doyle, Armin Schevey and James Rudolph. Doyle was presented a Compass Point, which marks the completion of requirements toward the Webelos Badge.

Joseph Anthony and Collins were given the two-year pin for membership; Campbell and Rex Martinez were given one-year pins.

Leaders and parents who were acknowledged included Mary Schevey, Daisy Bussey, Mary Garza, Peggy Huerta, Linda Collins, Debbie TenHarmsel, Ed Schevey, Danny Barker, Alicia Muniz, Matt Todd, Wanda Campbell and Evelyn Lopez.

Adam McKee and Lori Collins were recognized for their help as Den Aides.

Johanna Denny was recognized for her contributions as a Cub Master this past year.

197th soldiers return from NTC

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Welcome home daddy," was the message of one of several signs at Lawson Army Airfield where family members welcomed more than 300 soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade home Thursday.

The soldiers had been training for three weeks at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.

This is the first NTC deployment in which 197th used its new M-1 Abrams tanks.

This is also the first deployment to NTC for Brigade Commander Col. Theodore Reid who took command last year.

More than 50 family members awaited the return of husbands, wives and parents at Lawson's main hangar.

One soldier said that when they left the desert, the air temperature was 30 degrees.

Most of the soldiers were wearing some type of cold-weather clothing.

Dry skin, dusty uniforms and equipment and tired looks were mixed with the smiles of family members welcoming their soldiers home.

Soldiers are not the only ones who make sacrifices to complete a mission. Family members have to endure what can sometimes be a long wait.

"I know he's leaving so I try not to think about it," said the daughter of one of the soldiers, "but I really miss just talking to him."

Recycling pays for post improvements

Environmental Management Branch

Fort Benning personnel who recycle items such as fired brass or office paper can thank themselves for the new seats at Doughboy Stadium.

The Fort Benning Recycle Fund generated $661,000 in fiscal year '89.

These funds are returned to Fort Benning for projects involving safety, energy conservation, pollution abatement and Morale Support after operational expenses are deducted.

Projects recently funded are: emergency lights for exits at the National Infantry Museum, handicap ramps at various buildings, a ventilation system for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, replacement of all the seats at Doughboy Stadium, improvements at the auto craft shops, renovation of a child care facility, upgrade of lights to meet safety standards, rewiring of obsolete electrical panels in a DOL Maintenance facility, installment of a quick-drench shower for the camera room at the Federal printing plant and a softball field.

Recycle funds are derived from the sales through the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office of office paper, mixed paper, cardboard, fired brass, rags, scrap metal, items from renovation projects and other scrap items turned in to DRMO.

The items such as toilets, light metal, wiring, pipe and sinks salvaged from the World War II barracks have totaled 233,200 pounds to date and are generating monies for the Recycle fund.

If you are interested in more information about the Fort Benning Recycle program, call the Environmental Management Branch, Directorate of Engineering and Housing at 545-4766.

U.S. Army Dental Corps celebrates 79th birthday

By Paula Dansereau
Dental Activity

The U.S. Army Dental Corps celebrated its 79th birthday March 3.

The Fort Benning Dental Activity celebrated the event with a Dental Corps Birthday Dinner March 9.

The guest of honor for the occasion was Brig. Gen. Robert E. Brady, D.M.D., deputy commanding general, U.S. Army Health Services Command, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Brady, a welcome visitor to Fort Benning DENTAC and a gifted speaker, spoke about the future of the Army Dental Corps, ". . . we will get smaller, but we will continue to march along," he said.

"The Army Dental Corps will always provide care at the same high quality," Brady said.

Brady expounded on the beginnings of the Dental Corps, when the number of dental officers was limited to 60 and were given the rank of 1st lieutenant.

In 1917, the highest rank obtainable was major, and only 17 dental officers could hold that rank.

Retirement had to occur after 40 years of service or age 64, whichever came first.

Today about 1,625 dental officers serve on active duty.

Brady is a diplomate of the American Board of Prosthodontics, a fellow of the American College of Prosthodontics and a recipient of the Surgeon General's "A" professional designator, which is the highest award of proficiency in a particular speciality.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: What woman in history impresses you most and why?

Sigrid Osman, DENTAC — "Amelia Earhart is the most impressive. She was the first woman aviatrix who took a great step forward in a male-dominated era attempting to fly across the Pacific Ocean. Although her attempt was a failure, her courage will remain an inspiration to all women."

Sgt. Pamela Johnson, 108th Reserve Unit, Greensboro, N.C. — "Jane Pittman stands out most in my mind. She was about doing things and getting things done."

Spec. Joni Morrison, 108th Reserve Unit, Greensboro, N.C. — "Winnie Mandela impressed me most. She fought for her husband for all these years and stood behind him through everything."

Retired Chief Warrant Officer Joseph Adams — "I am impressed by Joan of Arc and the philosophy of what she worked toward. She sacrificed herself for her ideals."

Capt. Melvin Miller, MEDDAC — "Mary, the mother of Jesus is the one who stands out most in my mind. She was the mother of the savior. That's quite an honor."

Julie Collison, family member — "I am impressed by Nancy Reagan. She did a lot for all of us through her drug programs."

March is just an extension of Feb. that lasts 31 days

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

March is a strange month.

Many people deplore February and thank the powers that be for it being only 28 days in duration.

The problem is, March is an extension of February and lasts 31 days.

March is also a month void of federal holidays. So it's 31 days of gloomy weather.

Well, maybe not necessarily in the South, but in the rest of the nation it is.

It's the time of year when all the snow begins to melt and turn black.

Well, maybe not necessarily in the South, but the rest of the nation has got melting snow (no, that doesn't mean the end to snow season).

In the South we have a different set of problems.

It's the time of year the insects wake up from their winter sleep, angry and hungry.

It's also the time of year the sky turns green as the slightest puff of breeze blows the pollen out of the pine trees, and all cars, no matter what color they were to begin with, match.

I wonder if airborne pollen is the reason St. Patrick was born on March 17.

Isn't he, after all, the saint of green people?

Maybe they knew that when people got around to honoring him, they could turn green.

By the way, St. Patrick's Day revelers, now you know where green beer comes from.

March also is the month of another great saint, St. Founder.

The official day is March 16 when St. Founder conceived the idea of an academy for the Army in 1802.

Finding an old fort along the Hudson River that wasn't needed anymore, he set up the U.S. Military Academy there.

Because of its location, it became known as West Point.

Now, Army officers who are graduates of the academy, meet once a year in March to recount the glorious days they knew as plebes and bemoan the loss of such time-honored traditions as more hazing and an all-male corps.

I'm not sure what the women officers talk about. Perhaps, the year a woman became Captain of the Corps.

These officers, retired and active, do all this reminiscing by toasting St. Founder, the Point and one another to the extent they are feeling no pain by the time some invited dignitary gets up to give a resounding, but usually boring, speech about the state of the nation and the state of the Corps.

By the way, I'm not sure of the connection, but the Corps of Engineers was also founded on the same day as the Military Academy.

Since the academy is known as an engineering school, I'd have to guess that St. Founder was an engineer, too.

For those of you who might think, "What can March do to top that?" hold on to your BDU hats.

March 19, 1918, Congress came up with a couple of brainstorms.

The first was to establish standard time zones throughout the United States.

I'm not sure what took them so long to decide we needed standard time zones. Can you imagine living in a country where you weren't sure what the time was from one state to the next?

Yeah, I know, many people still can't figure it out, but at least it's standard.

The other act was to establish daylight-savings time.

It was brought in as a fuel-economy measure during the war.

Enough people liked it to where we still have it, and it keeps expanding.

One of these days Daylight Savings Time will become Standard Time, and we won't have to worry about "springing ahead" and "falling back" every year.

Somehow I'm always a little bit more tired from April to October, but if they made it permanent, perhaps I could get over it eventually.

Speaking of tired, Congress did do a good deed for federal workers on March 31, 1840. That was the day they set up the 10-hour workday.

Some federal workers I know want to go back to the 10-hour workday but only work four days a week.

I wonder if they did that for the Army, if the 6:30 PT formation would be considered part of the 10-hour day.

Yeah I know, I've heard the brass talk about wishing they could have a 12-hour day.

What they're saying is they're putting in 14, 16, 18-hour days and want to cut back to 12.

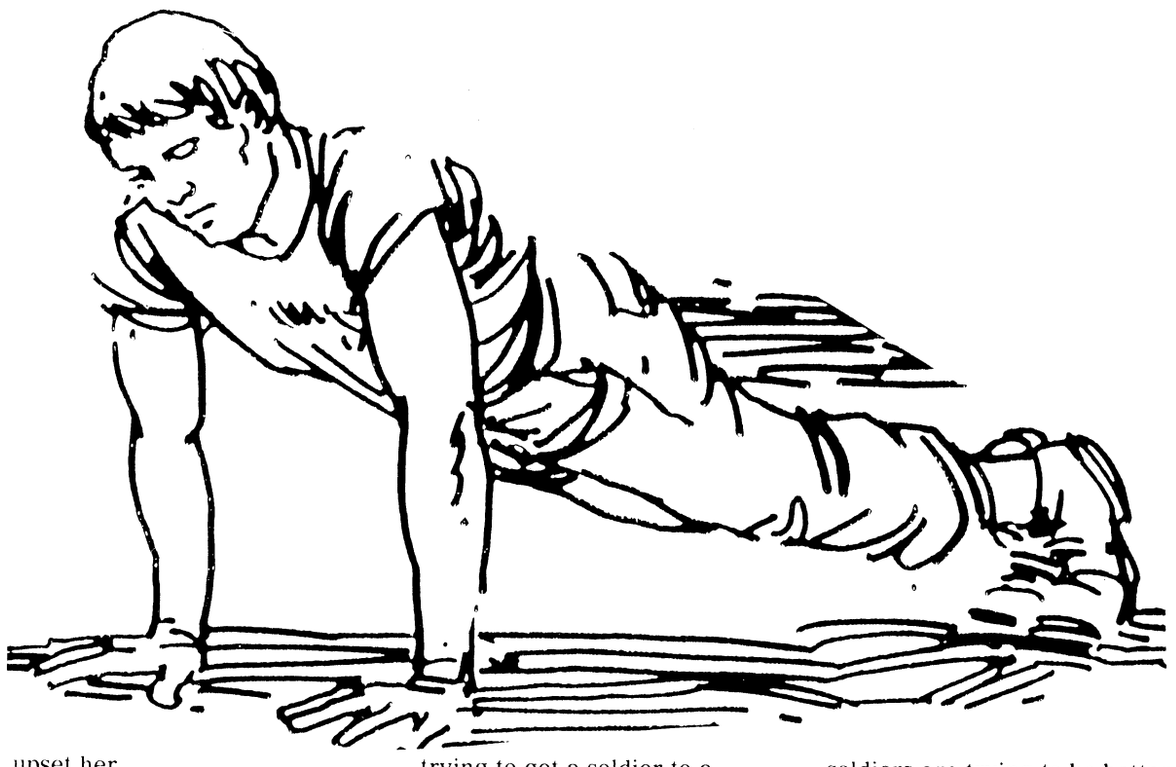
Heck, I can't help it if they aren't organized and can't get their work done in an eight- or 10-hour day.

Then there are people who have trouble fitting four hours of work into an eight-hour day.

Enjoy the rest of March.

Writer debates editorial that claimed soldiers trying harder because of cuts

By Shawn Lorimer
USAIC Public Affairs Office



Last week's Bayonet contained an article in which the author predicted troop reductions would result in only the best soldiers being left in the Army.

The article also said that today's soldiers are taking more pride in their personal appearance, physical readiness and professional development to remain in the Army.

It is entirely untrue that professionalism is a new trend in the Army, resulting from troop cuts as the defense budget continues to be slashed.

This is certainly not true of the soldiers with whom I work.

During the few short months I have worked with these people, they have, without a single exception, worked endlessly to improve themselves.

I don't think the budget cuts have anything to do with it.

I believe what I have seen these past few months is true professionalism; the desire to be the best and knowing that even the best can become better.

Recently I have seen an even bigger change, at least in my soldiers.

When I first began working here, the office was filled with heated arguments and long debates, which could often turn sour.

However, now, when it comes to a personal or professional problem, even the two most conflicting personalities put their differences aside to help the individual with the problem.

They will even spend personal time and resources to help each other.

For example, I have a sergeant who has worked hard to develop the ability to counsel a soldier with objectivity even after that soldier has really upset her.

"You just have to cool off and calm down so you don't blow up at the soldier," she said.

Two specialists in my section are constantly challenging each other to be better soldiers. They are constantly at each other's throats about getting uniforms squared away or improving physical fitness.

Their comments to each other are usually in jest, but the end result is that these two spend a lot of time trying to improve themselves and become better soldiers.

I have also seen a staff sergeant strive to improve her physical readiness.

Since her physical fitness certainly exceeds Army standards, I don't believe she is seeking self-improvement simply to keep her job.

My noncommissioned officer in charge puts great effort into improving his soldiers. He spends a large part of his day on job performance counseling, trying to get a soldier to a promotion board or explaining to a dissatisfied soldier why things are done the way they are done.

Then there are the two privates first class next door. One has sought out a new MOS because an injury prevents her from performing her original specialty.

The other keeps asking me for advice on how to be a better soldier. He often asks me questions about experiences I have had.

These soldiers are not trying to simply survive the budget cuts.

Also across the hall is a sergeant first class who has lost several pounds of excess weight by dieting and doing physical training five days a week.

Although he may retire soon, he continues to strive to be better.

Is this someone who stays in shape because he fears troop reductions?

I really don't think these soldiers are trying to be better soldiers because they fear being put out on the streets without a job.

Most of them seem to enjoy what they do, and many of them take pride in their accomplishments.

It was pointed out two weeks ago in The Bayonet by Clyde Snively (this is my chance to get him back since I have been the victim of his wit more than once) that fitness does not necessarily mean readiness.

I believe in that sentiment.

Also, I don't believe my soldiers are seeking to improve themselves and each other because of anything I say or do.

I am leaving soon, and I have no doubt that they will continue to try to be the best.

So why do these soldiers work so hard for what often seems to be very little in return?

It certainly has nothing to do with the budget.

This is the magic we call "professionalism!"

Crime Stoppers seeks rape suspect

Columbus Police Department

Crime Stoppers and the Columbus Police Department are looking for a white man who is responsible for a rape on South Lumpkin Road about one mile south of Walker Street.

The suspect is described as about 6 feet tall, 200 pounds, having very short, light-colored hair, blue eyes and wearing a white pullover Polo shirt and blue jeans. He was armed with a large pocket knife and a .38 caliber revolver (silver) with brown handles.

The victim was walking on Benning Drive near the Jet Station Feb. 16 when she noticed a small white vehicle, possibly a Ford, which she said made a U-turn on Benning Road and pulled up to her. She said the man ask if she would like a ride.

When she said no, he pulled out a .38 revolver and demanded she get inside the car.

After stopping at a store, the suspect drove south on Benning Road through Fort Benning to the point where South Lumpkin Road intersects.

The suspect drove to the South Lumpkin Motor Park located on South Lumpkin Road about one mile south of Walker Street.

Once inside the park, the suspect told the victim to get out and lay in the back as he opened the hatchback.

The victim said she noticed another vehicle in the park, so she ran over to the parked vehicle and the suspect started to leave.

There was no one in the parked vehicle, so she ran into the woods, north toward Walker Street and then up to the roadway where the suspect saw her.

He stopped his vehicle, got out with the .38 revolver and pointed it at her head.

After pulling her into the edge of the woods and striking her several times with the barrel of the gun, the suspect raped the victim.

The victim was able to get away at one point and to get someone to call for help.

However, the suspect grabbed her again and pulled her into the woods and assaulted her again. At this point she passed out.

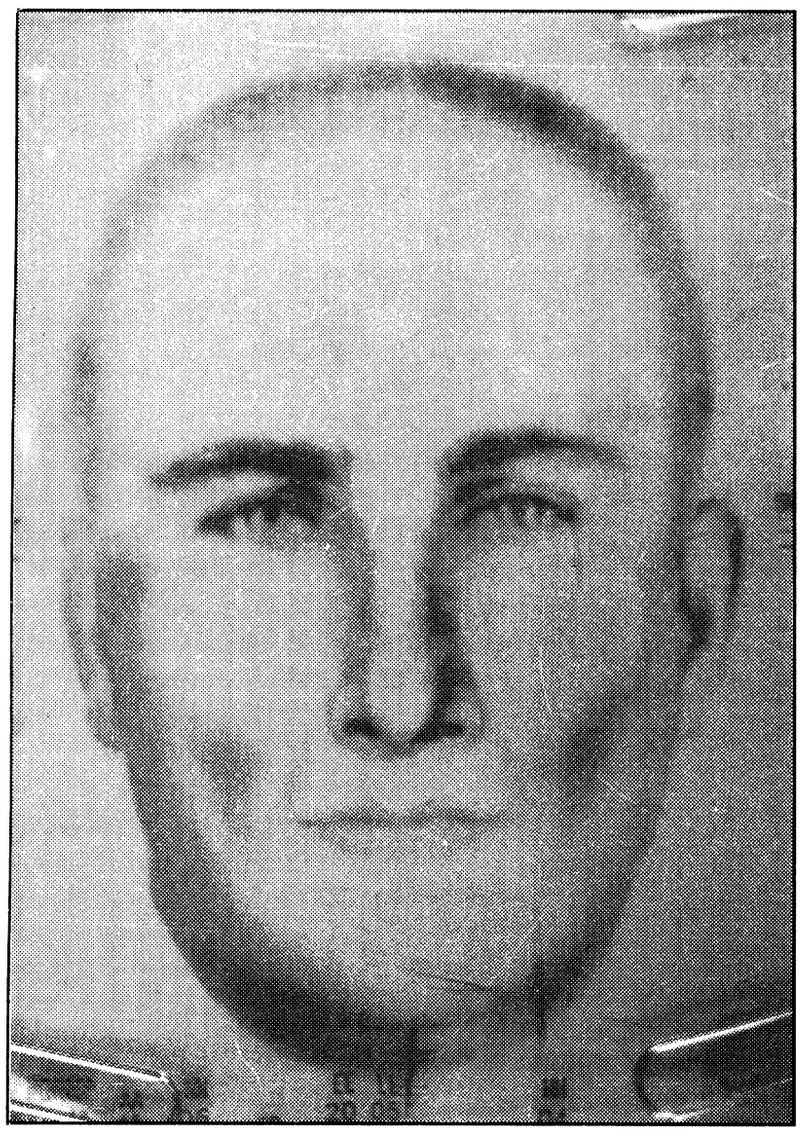
When the police arrived, the victim was found unconscious about one-half mile south of Walker Street.

Later, the victim said that while they were riding, the suspect told her his name was Chris and that he was an E-6 in the Army. He said he was leaving for Germany Feb. 20, 1990.

If you have any information concerning this rape, call Crime Stoppers at 571-5858.

If the information leads to the arrest and indictment of the person responsible for this incident, you could receive as much as $1,000 in reward money.

Crime Stoppers pays for information on other criminal activities, wanted persons and stolen property.



The Crime Stoppers phone lines are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Crime Stoppers serves the Columbus, Fort Benning, Phenix City and Russell County area.

Families asked to leave radon detectors in place

Directorate of Engineering and Housing

The Environmental Management Branch, Directorate of Engineering and Housing, has received inquiries concerning the retrieval of radon detectors placed in family housing and barracks.

Due to the low levels detected in the initial tests of medical, day care, dental and school facilities, the detectors will be left in place until April or May.

The longer testing period will give more meaningful average measure of exposure.

It is important to leave the radon detectors in place to get accurate results.

If your detector has fallen from the wall, please tape it back up in the approximate original location.

For more information, call the DEH, Environmental Management Branch at 545-4766 or Preventive Medicine at 545-3577.

STUDENT LOAN REPAYMENT FOR PART-TIME EMPLOYMENT.
GO ARMY RESERVE
If you're leaving the Active Army service and plan to continue your education, the Army Reserve has some good news for you. Besides earning a steady extra income, the Army Reserve can help you pay off any qualifying student loan (Guaranteed Student Loan, National Direct Student Loan, or Federally Insured Student Loan) which you may incur after you enter the Army Reserve.
For each year of duty, 15% of your loan, or $500, whichever is greater, may be repaid, up to a total of $10,000. For some specialties, the total increases to $20,000. That can go a long way toward easing the financal burden of going to college.
The Student Loan Repayment Program is another reason why it pays to join the Army Reserve. For details, call your Reserve Component Transition NCO.

Local boys display skills at Scout-a-rama

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers from the local area gathered at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium Saturday for the annual Scout-a-rama.

The public joined hundreds of scouts and their families from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City for the event, despite the 83-degree temperature.

According to Sgt. 1st. Class Calvin Ledbetter, Troop 227 committee member, the Scout-a-rama gives boys and their parents who are interested in scouting, the opportunity to see what it's all about.

Each troop or pack set up stations, booths or displays to show the different skills and knowledge gained from scouting.

Stations included a demonstration of solar-energy cooking, survival training and nature conservation.

Fort Bennings' Boy Scout Troop 227 set up a tower to teach scouts to rappel.

Troop 227 was awarded first place for proficiency for its display.

Cub Scout Pack 227 put together a potato printing booth and helped participants make designs using ink and paper.

Pack 217 had a variety of games such as bowl-a-rama and target shooting. The Cub Scouts took turns running the booths for participants.

DENTAC adds new twist to history

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's Dental Activity added a new twist to their celebration of Black History Month through a drawing for prizes just for children.

Maj. Sylvester Robinson, a General Dentist with Dental Clinic #1 and project officer for the event, said he conducted the drawing for the children because he felt the children wouldn't get anything out of the other displays.

According to Robinson, he set up a drawing box at the Pediatric Department in Dental Clinic #1 and the Orthodontist Clinic at Bernheim Dental Clinic.

He said he also targeted the children because he thought they were the ones who need to know about history most.

The winners of the drawing — Jesse Soto and Eaphfrom Rice each received a collection of books on black history.

OCS grads commissioned into MP Corps

Military Police Activity

Five Officer Candidate School graduates were commissioned into the Military Police Corps Regiment at a ceremony Feb. 28, at the Military Police Activity Headquarters.

The officers are 2nd Lts. Michael A. Call, Anthony C. Creecy, William R. Hagan, Kent E. Parent and Sean Strittmatter.

Col. Fred W. Liebe, the Fort Benning Provost Marshal and commander of the Military Police Activity presided over the ceremony.

The officers will continue their training at Fort McClellan, Ala., where they will attend the Military Police Officer Basic Course.

Contact users urged to limit wearing time

Last May, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration urged people to limit their continuous wearing of extended wear contact lenses, including disposable ones, to seven days.

People who wear extended wear or disposable contact lenses should follow the rules. Otherwise, they could be in for trouble.

To avoid problems, contact lens wearers should:

- Start off with full-service care to ensure the proper prescription, lenses and fit. This includes the eye exam, lenses, care kits, instructions for wear and care and follow-up office visits.
- Pay close attention to contact lens care instructions. Practice in the optometrist's office.
- Follow lens care instructions to the letter. Don't change brands of solutions without checking with the optometrist.
- Follow wearing instructions to the letter.
- Keep office appointments during the adaptation period. Using special instruments, the optometrist can find lens fitting problems that may not be noticeable to the wearer and make minor adjustments for a correct fit.
- After adaptation, return to the office as recommended by the optometrist. Long-term care is essential for replacing dirty or scratched lenses and determining changes in prescription or lens fit.
- See an optometrist if problems develop.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Not all heat pumps are created equal. In addition to differences in cost and capacity, the efficiency of competing units also should be examined.

Manufacturers rate the cooling efficiency of air conditioners and heat pumps with the Seasonal Energy Efficiency Ratio.

This method of efficiency comparison is similar to the miles per gallon rating for automobiles in that it lets you calculate how much it will cost to operate an appliance for a specific period of time.

The SEER scale ranges from a rating of five for older air conditioners to greater than 12 for high-efficiency heat pumps.

A SEER of nine or higher is considered to be a high-efficiency model.

In the past, the Energy Efficiency Ratio was used to rate equipment performance.

This ratio is based on specific design criteria and is still commonly used for room air conditioners.

In comparison, SEERs relate to central air conditioners and heat pumps and rate performance over a range of temperatures throughout the cooling season.

While the efficiency of the air conditioning side of the heat pump is measured by its SEER, the heating side is measured by the Heating Seasonal Performance Factor and the Coefficient of Performance.

A high HSPF and COP are desired because the higher ratings mean more efficient units and more savings for home owners.

In addition to being an important design feature in new construction, heating and cooling systems are increasingly being replaced in existing homes for greater energy savings.

For homes with an old heating system and no central air conditioning, or for homeowners ready to replace an air conditioner, high efficiency heat pumps can provide both heating and cooling at significant savings.

When selecting a high-efficiency heat pump, particular attention should be paid to the unit to ensure comfort and economy.

When properly sized and installed, the homeowner should not experience the hot and cold temperature swings a less efficient system produces.

The heat pump also controls humidity levels in the home in summer and winter.

Efficiency and proper sizing are important, but customer satisfaction often hinges on the selection of a qualified person to install the new system.

Most electrical utilities have specialists available to make recommendations on the selection and proper installation of heat pumps.

A call to your local electric supplier to find out what services are offered is an important first step.

Hopefully this information will be helpful in a future purchase. Armed with knowledge, an informed consumer can make the right choice by selecting a high-efficiency heat pump.

Heat pumps are obviously not a heating and cooling cure-all. But where both heating and cooling are required and winters are not too severe, they offer a reliable and convenient energy conservation alternative with good pay back.

For more information, contact the Energy Branch at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

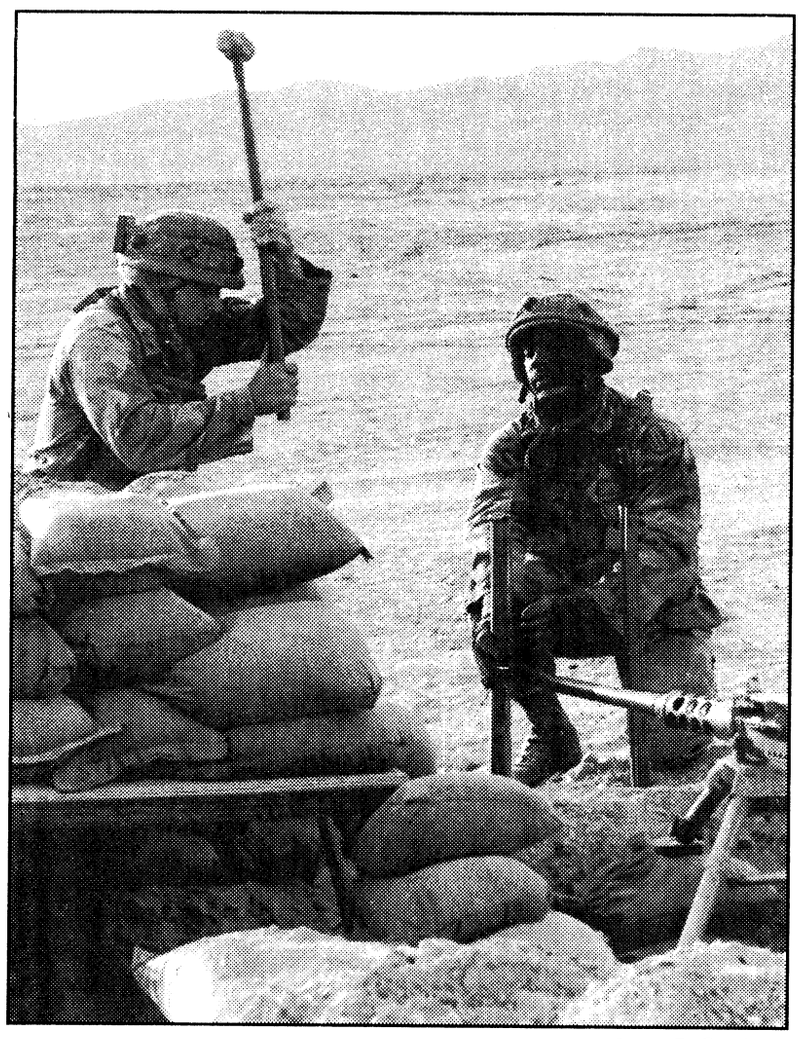
Desert warfare at National Training Center



Scott F. Garrigus

Two soldiers from Co. D, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., prepare their .50 caliber machine gun positions for live-fire.

1-18th shows expertise at NTC live-fire exercise

By Scott F. Garrigus
197th Infantry Brigade

The combined arms of the Infantry, Artillery, Armor, Engineers and the Air Force allowed the Task Force of 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, to come out smelling like a desert rose during the live-fire portion of the National Training Center rotation.

In preparation for the battle, the 37th Engineers, from Fort Bragg, N.C., set up mine fields and obstacles and dug positions for the tanks, while the rest of the task force dug fighting positions.

With Troop D, 4th Cavalry, spotting the enemy as far as 20 kilometers away, the Redlegs of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, were able to slow the progress of the 30th Motorized Rifle Regiment opposing force with barrages of fire from their self-propelled 155-millimeter howitzers.

While 4th Bn., 41st Fld. Arty., considerably cut the Soviet force, close-air support provided by Air Force A-10 Thunderbolts and Army AH-1 Cobra attack helicopters knocked out enemy targets, greatly increasing the effectiveness of Task Force 1st Bn., 18th Inf.

As the enemy got closer, nerve gas was dropped on the task force's defensive positions.

The Panthers of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, were next to engage the enemy.

Even though they were hampered by MOPP-4 and inoperable vehicles, several target hits were recorded.

As the enemy closed in on the rest of Task Force 1st Bn., 18th Inf., — Co. B, D and E, 1st Bn., 18th Inf.; and Co. C, 1st Bn., 10th Cav., from Fort Knox, Ky., — their combined arms fire brought the enemy's forward movement to a standstill.

"Everybody worked together and did a super job," said Capt. Stefan Banach, company commander of Co. B, 1st Bn., 18th Inf., after the mission.

"The live-fire tested us to a higher level than home station does because all the different areas — Forts Benning, Bragg and Stewart — get to come together and work as a unit," said Maj. Murray Williams, executive officer for 1st Bn., 18th Inf. "It was a great success. They did exceptionally well."

Sniper Team sets standards

By Troy A. Pearson
197th Infantry Brigade

The "Sniper Team" of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, has set high standards for the other tank crews in the brigade to achieve at the National Training Center.

An actual "Sniper Team" they're not, but on target they are.

With four consecutive first-round hits from 3,500 meters, Co. A's 2-4 tank crew is getting off on the right foot with its recently acquired improved M-1 Abrams tanks.

According to tank commander, Sgt. 1st Class Willie Jones, his crew killed 11 out of a possible 12 tanks in their first force-on-force battle.

"We were hoping to do well while we were here," Jones said, "but doing this well really has built confidence in every one of my men."

"We got lucky, spotted the enemy targets first and fired them up," said Jones' gunner, Spec. Patrick Garrett, who has been with the crew only nine months, the last two of which were during the company's M-1 transition.

Spec. Thomas Watson, who drove the M-60A3 tank during the brigade's last rotation, said, "With the Abrams lock-on target system, it's easier to get more first-hit kills."

Pvt. 2 Samuel James, who loads the rounds for the crew, cited another advantage the improved Abrams has over its predecessor. "The Abrams takes less time to load, which in turn gives you the opportunity to make more hits."

Staff Sgt. Carl Hedgins, a master gunner with Co. A, said, "The entire company has scored well overall, especially taking into consideration the men have only been training on the improved M-1 for a few months."

Hedgins explained that out of a possible 1,000 points on the live-fire defense position, all the crews in Co. A scored at least 800 points, with the highest total, 983, scored by Jones' crew. The observer-controllers dubbed Jones' crew the "Sniper Team."

Hedgins added that this is an outstanding showing, considering the diversity of direct and indirect fire required on the desert range.

Co. A's 1st Sgt. Kenneth Washington said, "It is very rewarding for the guys of the company to do this well at NTC. Sergeant Jones demands that his men do their best, and he has earned their respect."

"There's no magic trick to doing well on the live-fire range," Jones said.

"I tell my men that the key is to read, know and follow the field manual on their prepare-fire checks and make sure they get a good bore sight."

Defense tough for Support Area

By Aurelio Feliberty
197th Infantry Brigade

Being part of the Brigade Support Area is certainly no easy task when it comes to defending the perimeter, your fellow soldiers and yourself.

This is due to the limited firepower capabilities alloted to the BSA.

"The 197th Support Battalion BSA has only one organic crew-served weapon available to it, the M-2 .50-caliber machine gun. Presently, the battalion has four .50-caliber and four M-60 machine gun teams," said Capt. Michael R. Chambers, Support Battalion S-3.

"To overcome this weakness, we have to incorporate any and all resources available to us.

"This includes using any operational weapon on vehicles that have been brought to the rear for maintenance," he said.

"For example," he said, "if a tank has sustained major damage and could not be fixed at the front line, it would be towed to the BSA.

"If the damage does not affect the tank's guns, it would then be towed to a likely avenue of enemy approach.

"This would increase the BSAs survivability because the BSA could use the tank's firepower while repairing it."

According to Chambers, the military police also play a major role in protecting the BSA and the Main Supply Route.

"There are only two MP squads currently available to the BSA; however, they are not under the BSA's direct control," he said. "This means if the brigade needed the MP squads at another location, the MPs would move and the BSA would have no say in it."

According to Chambers, the BSA operates under three threat levels to help distinguish what type of firepower and support it would need to receive during certain situations.

Level I: Dismounted infantry squad or platoon-sized element.

Level II: Dismounted infantry company.

Level III: Armored mounted platoon or larger element. (This is the highest threat level.)

At Level III, the BSA will call the brigade for assistance.

"The BSA will also have one of the companies as a 'Reactionary Force' to go to the sector being overrun to hold the enemy back until the brigade sends help," Chambers said.

In response to these threat levels, the BSA conducts a daily stand-to.

"This is when the battalion is brought to 100 percent strength in MOPP-2, 30 minutes before sunrise and 30 minutes after, since these are the times the enemy would be most likely to strike," he said.

Defense of the BSA is no easy task, but the Support Battalion soldiers say it's worth the effort.

"We all do our share to accomplish the mission," said Spec. Bridget Lassus, of HHC, who was pulling guard duty in a foxhole in defense of the battalion's tactical operations center.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Deborah B. Montgomery
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. A salesman came to my home last month selling new "energy efficient" windows.

I didn't want to buy any, but he made it so easy and really convinced me it was a quality product.

He said I would save a lot of money on heating and cooling bills.

I signed some finance papers, and the windows were installed.

The installers did a terrible job, the air just pours through.

Further, the loan company says I now have a second mortgage on my house, and if I don't pay, they will foreclose on the loan and sell my house.

What can I do?

A. There have been several complaints about window salesmen and installers in this area lately.

Homeowners are often encouraged to purchase windows that are overpriced.

It has been discovered that certain homeowners sign blank documents, which are later filled in by the seller.

Too late, they discover that a mortgage has been placed on their homes.

Sometimes the homeowner is actually told the document he is signing is a security deed, but does not realize that this means a mortgage has been placed on the home.

The affect of the mortgage on the home is that if the homeowner is delinquent with his payments, his home may be sold to pay the debt.

This sounds like what happened to you.

Window installment contracts have had a history of consumer problems. Apparently, it may still be a problem.

Be very careful. Don't be pushed into signing anything right away.

If you have questions make sure you call the Better Business Bureau and the Legal Assistance Office before you sign.

Since there have been a lot of complaints in this area, a lawsuit has been filed in Alabama.

As in your case, some of the consumers complained that mortgages were placed on their homes without their knowledge.

For some, the primary reason for purchasing the windows was to reduce their utility bills.

Apparently, some of the homeowners have not seen the reduction in the utility bills as promised and are wondering why they spent so much money for ordinary windows.

The status of the proceeding is not yet known.

The Consumer Protection Division of the Attorney General's Office of Alabama has a questionnaire that all interested persons are asked to fill out.

Whether or not you will actually be included in that lawsuit will be determined by the agency. You should contact the Consumer Protection Agency in your area.

If you are unsure as to whether you should contact the agency or want to discuss your alternatives, schedule an appointment to see a legal assistance attorney. The numbers are 545-3281/3282.

MARTIN CARE

Are you one of the five million people in the United States who has diabetes and doesn't know it?

"Take the test, know the score" is the new American Diabetes Association slogan, and it will be used during the "ADA Alert" this month.

A short written test can identify those who are at risk for having diabetes.

The "Alert" tests will be distributed throughout Georgia Tuesday, the 50th anniversary of the ADA.

The ADA is celebrating its anniversary by stressing the importance of diabetes to the community.

Martin Army Community Hospital will also celebrate the 50th anniversary of the ADA by providing the "ADA Alert" tests in the Pharmacy Lobby Tuesday between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m.

Additionally, MACH will offer blood sugar screening, as well as other medical screening and health information, at the annual Health Fair Saturday at the Main Post Exchange.

Diabetes is a disease that affects the way the body uses food.

Normally, when you eat, the body changes the food into a form of sugar called glucose.

This glucose is carried in the bloodstream and is used for fuel (energy) by the body's cells.

Insulin, which is a hormone made by the pancreas, allows the glucose to enter the cell from the bloodstream so it can be used for energy.

When a person has diabetes, there is a problem with this system.

Either not enough insulin is produced by the body, or it is not being used correctly.

The glucose remains in the bloodstream because it cannot enter the cell. High blood sugar levels are the result.

About 11 million people in the United States have diabetes. It is estimated that one-half of these are not aware that they are diabetic.

Patients with diabetes are offered the opportunity to participate in the diabetes management program in the Life Style Center at MACH.

This program teaches patients and their family members how to manage and live with diabetes.

To find out more about diabetes, contact the American Diabetes Association at 1-800-ADA-DISC or call Maj. Jose Rivera in the MACH Life Style Center at 544-1797.

Youths, senior citizens establish ties through Phone Pal program

Fort Benning Schools

For two months each year, a special bond is formed between second-graders and senior citizens.

The life of the military child has many advantages, but one disadvantage is that grandparents are not often close at hand.

Several years ago, Dot Jones, a Loyd School second-grade teacher, saw a need to establish a relationship between her second-graders and senior citizens.

She developed a Phone Pals program, which has promoted these relationships, and some of her young charges have maintained relationships for years after being in her class.

For two months each year, a very special bond is formed between the Loyd second-graders in Jones' class and several of the senior citizens who reside at Ralston Towers.

With the sponsorship of the NCO Wives' Club, a telephone is installed in the classroom.

At various times during the day, students are able to phone their pals at Ralston Towers to discuss the events of the day.

The program begins each year as the Ralston Towers pals visit Loyd School to spend time in Jones' classroom.

They find eager children waiting with stories, poems, secrets and hugs as they meet their phone pals.

Telephone numbers are exchanged along with promises to keep in touch from old and young alike.

The class holiday party is at Ralston Towers, where the seniors host their song-singing young visitors.

Hearing stories of holidays past often gives the children new insights about the holidays.

For the next month, each senior receives a phone call from his friend during the school day.

The classroom telephone is the real heartbeat of the program, assuring that each friendship is nurtured daily.

In a time when parents and educators are realizing more than ever that a strong, positive self concept is a necessity for youngsters, the Phone Pal program continues to bring additional opportunities for nurturance and positive reinforcement from senior citizens who have much to share.

Benning soldiers win local races

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

A Fort Benning runner led the pack in the 10-kilometer race in Saturday's "Heart Run," out-distancing local competitors by 100 meters.

Lloyd McDonald of the Army Marksmanship Unit accomplished that feat, and Gaye Milling of the Infantry Training Center won the female division.

There were three races featured during the run: a one-mile fun run, a 10-kilometer run and a combination military and corporate relay.

According to race director Jim Accordino, the event was handled differently this year.

He said the biggest difference was that fun run participants received ribbons.

Usually trophies are awarded to the top three finishers, and runners are broken down into age groups.

"Overall, the race turned out great," he said. "There was a good turnout, but the times were a little slow because of the heat."

Accordino said more than 450 people turned out for the race even though the weather was unseasonably warm.

SPIRITUAL

Course teaches adults how to be better parents

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Parents who want to learn how to be better at parenting may attend the Active Parenting Course March 29 from noon to 1:30 p.m. at the Family Life Center.

When people find themselves wondering why parenting is difficult, it may be time for them to search for a better understanding.

Parents appreciate peace of mind when they know they are acting and reacting effectively to their children.

The most important reason for examining roles as parents is for the sake of the precious gift of children.

Parenting is extremely difficult and often thoroughly frustrating, according to the experts. Sometimes it seems that nothing "works."

Active Parenting facilitators believe that most parents have sufficient love and commitment to parent well, but they lack sufficient information and skills. Basically, they were never taught to parent.

Striving to make parenting as rewarding as it is challenging, parents are urged not to give up.

Active Parenting was created to help parents teach children to give and take responsibility, act cooperatively and face challenges with courage and confidence.

Active Parenting offers success where traditional authoritarian methods and more recent permissive methods have failed.

The course boasts: "97 percent of parents completing an Active Parenting Course recommend it to other parents."

Some of the questions parents may find themselves searching to answer include:

What is the difference between punishment and discipline?

How can I communicate with my children?

Why do I feel like such a failure as a parent?

Why don't I get any respect?

How does a good parent get better?

Thousands of parents have completed this course — parents who are sincerely searching for innovative ways to raise content and responsible children.

Active Parenting classes are March 29, April 5, 12, 19, 26 and May 3. To register, call the Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza, 545-1760/5301.

Some things you'll learn at Active Parenting

- Why reward and punishment often backfire with today's children.
- How your own thoughts, feelings and behavior often reward your child for misbehaving.
- Proven methods of discipline that not only work, but teach your child responsibility at the same time.
- Six important ways to enrich your family life.
- Three keys to self-esteem and how you and your child can use them to survive and thrive.
- Communication skills that win cooperation.
- Why courage is the most important gift a parent can give a child and a dozen concrete ways for you to instill courage in your child.
- How to use Mother Nature to help your child grow into a successful adult.
- The secret to having your child's respect.
- How to use your own parenting energy more efficiently . . . so that you have more left for other activities.

Workshop set for couples

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

WHAT: Workshop for Couples
WHEN: April 3, 10, 17 and 24 from noon to 1 p.m.
WHERE: Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza

Let's talk.

That's a simple statement, yet, there is a widespread notion most people do not communicate well or effectively with others, especially with spouses.

The Family Life Center presents a workshop for couples, which focuses on the ability to communicate.

The workshop will be a time for individuals to learn to focus on the strengths they bring into the relationship.

Chap. (Maj.) Richard Roggia, chief of Family Life, said he realizes the need for strong communication.

"It has been said that no success can compensate for failure in the home." He further explained that this is a way for couples to balance their lives.

How often are you frustrated in your attempts to communicate to those who are closest to you?

Do you want to learn how to reach the heart?

Workshop dates are April 3, 10, 17 and 24 from noon to 1:30 p.m. at the Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza.

To register, call the Family Life Center at 545-1760/5301.

Springer Opera House stages '40s Radio Hour

Springer Opera House

The 1940s Radio Hour cannot be found on your AM or FM dial. It can only be found onstage at the Springer Opera House today and Saturday at 8 p.m., Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and Wednesday through March 24.

The musical comedy is an unusual show in which the orchestra appears onstage with the actors, and the audience actually plays the part of the WOV-Radio studio audience responding occasionally to the flashing "applaud" sign.

1940s Radio Hour is set in Dec. 21, 1942, at the WOV studios of the Mutual Manhattan Variety Hour, live from the Hotel Astor.

This Broadway hit captures the spirit of that by-gone era when the world was at war, television was something from science fiction and pop music was "Chattanooga Choo-choo" and "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy of Company B" — both of which are among the many memorable songs in the show.

Guest director John Sharpe stages the show, returning as guest director after mounting previous Springer productions of Sweet Charity and Man of La-mancha.

Sharpe is a veteran of Broadway and regional theatre, having worked as assistant choreographer to dance legend Bob Fosse on several films and musicals. Sharpe also produced the national tours of Chicago for three seasons.

Dr. Paul VanderGheynst, chairman of the Department of Arts and Letters at Columbus College, is the musical director for the production and plays the role of Zoot Doubleman, the leader of the onstage swing band.

Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for seniors and $6 for students. Group rates are also available by calling the Box Office at 327-3688.

'Brighton Beach Memoirs' auditions set

Columbus College

Auditions for the Columbus College Theatre's Spring production, "Brighton Beach Memoirs," are scheduled Monday and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Springer Rehearsal Hall, 1022 First Ave.

The play, which is being produced in collaboration with the Springer Production Company, will be presented at the Springer Opera House May 3 through 6 and 8 through 12.

Casting will be for four female roles, ranging in age from 13 to 40 and three male roles, ages 15 to 40. Dr. Hazel Hall, chair, Department of Speech and Theatre, will direct.

Military and civilian personnel and their families are invited to audition.

For further information, call 568-2048.

By using the following procedure, soldiers on the Family Housing Waiting List can use this chart to estimate when they can expect quarters:

Locate your category of housing.

Note eligibility date located on the same line as your category.

Calculate the time difference between the eligibility date listed and your eligibility date. The difference is the approximate time you still have to wait for housing.

EXAMPLE: If the latest eligibility date of the person who last received housing in your category was May 15, 1988, and your date of eligibility is Sept. 15, 1988, you can expect housing in about four months. If you do not know your eligibility date, contact the Family Housing Office at building 399, 545-3107.

Federal benefits handbook is updated, available

One of the government's perennial best sellers, "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents," has been updated for 1990 and is available from the U.S. Government Printing Office.

Published by the Department of Veterans Affairs, the 82-page handbook describes such VA benefits as medical care, education, compensation, pension, life insurance, home loan guaranty, vocational rehabilitation and burial assistance.

Special sections contain information on medical benefits for veterans who were exposed to Agent Orange and radiation and services for post-traumatic stress disorder.

Employment assistance and other Department of Labor benefits for veterans are also described along with programs administered by the Department of Defense, Small Business Administration and other federal agencies.

The new handbook contains sections on eligibility, benefits for former prisoners of war, women veterans, merchant seamen and information on the new U.S. Court of Veterans Appeals.

Addresses and local phone numbers of all VA offices, medical centers, national cemeteries, Vietnam veteran counseling centers and other VA facilities are also listed.

"Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents" is available for $2.50 from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, D.C. 20402.

Tough training pays off

An Expert Infantry Badge hopeful aims a LAW.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Twenty-eight soldiers were awarded the Expert Infantryman's Badge in a ceremony at the Collins Training Center March 23.

"It's not the badge that's important; it's the training," said the president of the 29th Infantry Regiment's EIB testing board.

The 29th Infantry Regiment's Command Sgt. Maj. Gary L. Cupit, was president of the board that conducted the training and testing of 566 EIB hopefuls.

Normally, personnel from each unit trains and tests their own soldiers for the EIB.

The 29th, however, opted to invite other units to participate in its training and testing.

Five-hundred, sixty-six candidates from the 29th Infantry Regiment, The School Brigade, the Ranger Training Brigade and the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center started the training, which would allow them the chance to test for the EIB.

Two-hundred, thirty-three qualified for the actual testing, and 28 earned the EIB, according to testing board officials.

"The badge is a visual statement of Infantry skills honed to perfection," Cupit said. "However, I must again emphasize that it's the training that's important."

Included in the training are tests ranging from the Army Physical Fitness Test, map reading, marksmanship and many skills from the basic skills manual.

Testing board officials said to earn the badge, the soldiers have to qualify expert with their weapons and successfully complete testing in such areas as operating communications equipment, calling for indirect fire, performing first aid and disassembling and reassembling a variety of weapons.

One of the soldiers who earned the EIB, Staff Sgt. Jeffrey Gaines, Company A, 4th Battalion, Rgr. Trng. Bde., said it was interesting to train with troops from such a variety of units.

"Rangers don't normally get a chance to train with drill sergeants and vice versa," he said.

Another EIB recipient, Staff Sgt. James Pearson, also from Co. A, 4th Bn., Rgr. Trng. Bde., said the 29th "set tough standards."

The EIB represents the highest caliber of standards for Infantry training. The badge was established to recognize soldiers such as Gaines and Pearson who have met those standards.

During the ceremony, Col. Richard St. John, the 29th's regimental commander, challenged the newest recipients of the EIB to live up to the standards.

"Live up to the standards of the EIB wearer," he said. "Share your knowledge and experience with fellow soldiers, and train them to your level.

"Build in them the confidence and the skills you have. Make them the heroes of the next battlefield," St. John said.

Chief Warrant Officer Steve Payne, a pilot with the 498th Aeromed. Evac. Co., 34th Med. Bn., makes a preflight check wearing night vision goggles.

Night vision goggles enhance pilots' abilities, aid in flying in darkness

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Imagine trying to land a helicopter in a combat zone at night.

Until fairly recently, this feat either required searchlights that almost invariably gave away the helicopter's position, or the pilot went in blind.

That was before night vision goggles were modified for pilots' use.

Night vision goggles allow pilots to operate in the dark. The goggles take whatever light is available, although invisible to the naked eye, and intensifies it 1,000 times.

The 498th Aeromedical Evacuation Company, 34th Medical Battalion, is the only unit at Fort Benning currently using NVGs for flying, according to Chief Warrant Officer Dennis Dial, a pilot with the unit.

Although the goggles aren't necessary for most peacetime missions, combat missions are a different story, according to Chief Warrant Officer Danny Amberson.

To train for combat during peacetime, pilots are required to log a specified number of flight hours wearing the goggles, Amberson said.

During peacetime, pilots evacuate soldiers to local hospitals, support the local community and carry critically ill family members to various facilities.

In a combat situation, the 498th would evacuate casualties from the battlefield and deliver supplies through all types of weather, over any type terrain, 24 hours a day.

Amberson said in a combat situation, pilots fly nap of the earth to avoid enemy detection.

He explained helicopters aren't as easily detected when flying low because trees provide cover.

"We could do that without goggles," he said, "but we wouldn't be able to go nearly as fast."

Amberson recounted a few of the missions he flew before goggles were used.

"We used to do what they call "nighthawk missions," in which we would fly in formation without the aid of searchlights or NVGs," he said.

"When I think back, those missions

Have snacks really changed or is Snively's memory going?

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

First, reference last week's column, the calls started coming in as soon as the phones were fixed.

"How dare you name our new advanced anti-tank weapons system 'vindicator,'" one lieutenant colonel blustered. "That's no name for an anti-tank weapon. 'Terminator' is the name we want."

"Sounds good to me, sir," I said demurely.

So, surprise, surprise, henceforth, the AAWSM will be known as the "Terminator," at least until someone of higher rank than lieutenant colonel comes along and changes it.

Training at the Fort Benning ranges changes as the weapons change.

There's always been one constant here — the food vendors.

Their all-terrain, all-purpose food delivery vehicles may have been upgraded to the M-3A90 model by now, but everything else is the same.

Well, not quite. Apparently the names have changed along with the delivery systems.

No more are they pogey trucks, or roach coaches, they're now called gut trucks.

Apparently the pinky-dinky trucks are no more since no one seems to heard of them.

But, as I said, most things about the food business remain the same.

The vendors always seem to know when to hit a range and how many will be there.

They usually time their arrival to an hour before mealtime.

The selection of food remains the same although the prices haven't.

However, just because the selection has remained constant doesn't necessarily mean the food is still the same.

Let me say from the start that my favorites were the Honeybun and cherry pie. The sweeter, stickier and messier, the better.

What brings this to mind is the other day I stopped downstairs in Building 4 at the gastro-intestinal disease line and, just for old time sake, bought a cherry pie. It was ghastly.

I can't believe I once lived for the day when the Drill Sergeants would relent and let us savor the cuisine of the mobile snack bars.

Then I tried a Honeybun. It was like biting into sugared cardboard.

Did I really like this stuff or have these items changed? Was I merely starving for sugar, or was it the lure of the forbidden fruit?

Left to my own devices, I could have devoured three Honeybuns and four cherry pies on one 15-minute break.

But now, one bite of a Honeybun and I wonder how anyone could be so crass as to eat such a culinary abortion.

The cherry pies look and feel the same. They're still messy, still sweet, still sticky and still fall apart so you'll drip cherry juice down your chin and onto your BDUs.

But no longer are they the epicurean delights I remember.

Now I look on these so-called pastries as a direct assault on my digestive system.

I think it's a sub rosa effort on part of nutritionists to turn soldiers into connoisseurs of MREs and vocal supporters of Army chow.

But it's not working. Go out to any field training site, to any range and what do you see, lines of soldiers, reaching deep into their BDU pockets for money to spend on some tantalizing tidbit.

I've got to think it's the atmosphere. You have to be pushed by 150 other smelly bodies, holding out hope to get to the front of the line and buy your snack before being called back to class.

Buying food from the snack mobiles is a GI's way of self-expression, his way of saying "I don't need you Army chow," while letting loose with his he-man, Arnold Schwarzenegger, belch to show his disdain for civilization.

Alcohol abuse affects unit readiness

Alcohol is our nation's number one drug problem, killing 16 times as many people as cocaine and heroin combined.

Americans use alcohol more than any other drug, including tobacco.

An estimated 10.5 million adults in the United States are dependent on alcohol.

Alcohol abuse is incompatible with military service.

Any drug abuse has detrimental effects on combat readiness and a healthy lifestyle.

The Army's leadership has begun to reevaluate their attitudes about alcohol and put this legal drug into proper perspective.

Only then can we expect to make progress in treating the epidemic of addiction now destroying lives.

April is Alcohol Awareness Month, a time designated to examine the impact alcohol consumption has on this country and to enhance understanding of the disease of alcoholism.

I encourage you to use this observance to examine your personal relationship with alcohol and to participate in an Alcohol Free Weekend by abstaining April 6, 7 and 8.

The theme for this observance is "I'm Free for the Weekend."

Join with the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Dependence in its mission to reduce the incidence and prevalence of drug addiction diseases.

Husband's info not always needed; female soldiers can be sponsors, too

I'm a soldier — not a family member.

That's what I want to say to the people who insist on asking for information about my husband when they really need information about me.

Almost daily, I have to explain to some appointment maker that being a woman doesn't necessarily make me a family member, too.

After being in the Army more than 11 years, I should have grown callous to requests for my husband's Social Security Number, unit and such when making appointments on post.

Yet, each time I'm asked for this needless information, I have to hold my breath to keep from being rude.

I realize it would be just as wrong to assume that everyone, male and female, is in the military just because they're on post.

There is a simple way to avoid offending anyone, and many wonderful appointment makers are doing it already.

They ask for "the sponsor's Social Security Number and unit."

I hope they realize what a great impression they make on the many women soldiers who face this small but pesky problem so often.

Just this morning I was making an appointment, and the voice on the other end of the line asked "What's your husband's Social Security Number?"

I used to say, "He's not in the Army," or "I don't have a husband."

Then a friend of mine gave me the perfect answer for those folks who insist on asking for the husband's information.

She said, "Go ahead and give them his Social Security Number. Then when they ask for his unit, tell them he's not in the military."

"That'll fix 'em," I replied.

Engineers leave for Honduras

Co. A, 43rd Engr. Bn., 36th Engr. Grp.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

More than 70 soldiers from Company A, 43rd Engineer Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, are leaving for a two-month tour of duty in Juticalpa, Honduras, South America, Saturday.

According to the unit commander, Capt. David Smisek, his company is the first of three companies from the battalion slated to participate in the rotation of troops to Honduras.

"Bravo and Charlie companies will also do a two-month rotation," he said.

The rotations are part of a continuous requirement for engineers in Honduras.

Smisek said the primary mission of his unit is to build a base camp for future use by the United States.

"It will consist of five wooden structures, as well as latrine and shower facilities," he said.

Other missions include playgrounds, a basketball court, kitchen and school.

Co. A soldiers have been preparing for this since December, according to Smisek.

In February, a crew from Co. A traveled to Honduras for a site survey.

"We had to determine what kind of equipment was needed and finalize coordination," he said.

As the lead unit, Co. A will take all the equipment needed for the six-month rotation. "Co. C will bring it back," Smisek said.

Preparations include a series of classes with topics ranging from hot weather to tropical diseases.

The troops have also been trained in convoy procedures and rules of engagement.

Although the threat of attack is minimal, it is a consideration and concessions have been made, Smisek said.

The families of the soldiers have also been prepared. They've been briefed on every aspect of the mission.

"The troops are very excited about the mission," he said, "It's going to be a great construction experience. It's also a chance to help the Honduran people."

"Use it or lose it!"

Official Announcement of the BATTLE OF BRITAIN
$5 COMMEMORATIVE COIN

... a piece of history you can hold in your hand — a tribute to the courage of those who first turned the tide for freedom — available at the face value of only $5.00.

Fifty years ago, most of Europe had fallen to the German forces, and the fate of the western world hung in the balance. As Adolf Hitler maneuvered his mighty war machine towards Europe's last bastion of freedom, so began the epic Battle of Britain. In the end, the heroes of Britain's small but determined Royal Air Force stopped Hitler's formidable Luftwaffe cold.

To honor these heroes who fought to preserve freedom and liberty, the Republic of the Marshall Islands — a key World War II battleground in the Allied fight for liberty — is issuing a legal tender coin ... the Battle of Britain $5 Commemorative Coin.

The coin dramatically depicts a valiant British pilot and his legendary Spitfire — the swift and graceful fighter plane which symbolizes Britain's dogged spirit in the face of insurmountable odds. About the same diameter as a U.S. Silver Dollar, the coin is even thicker — and painstakingly minted in a brilliant uncirculated finish. Each coin is protectively encased, after passing exacting minting standards, and is accompanied by an authoritative narrative.

This historic coin will be minted only in 1990 — the 50th anniversary year — and is offered without any premium over its face value of $5.00, plus $1.00 per coin for shipping, handling, and insurance. To assure fair distribution, there is a strict limit of five coins per order.

NCO Education System to undergo changes

TRADOC News Service

The NCO Education System is being changed to ensure that combat support and combat service support soldiers become as "battle proficient" as those in combat arms.

"Battlefields of the future will not have set front and rear areas. Administrative NCOs must know how to lead and perform in combat situations," said Maj. Bob Hickok, enlisted training staff officer in Training and Doctrine Command's deputy chief of staff for training.

Including combat leadership skills is just one change in store for NCOES.

According to Hickok, the primary leadership development, basic NCO and advanced NCO courses for each military occupational specialty soon will contain elements that reflect a new approach to training NCOs.

The changes to the NCOES were initiated in early 1989 by Gen. Maxwell Thurman, former TRADOC commander, after a review of basic NCO courses.

He felt that NCOs were not being trained in all the skills and knowledges they required.

When TRADOC officials began looking into BNCOC, they realized that improvements were also needed in PLDC and ANCOC.

"We realized that training has to be administered in a progressive and sequential approach. A soldier must learn the basics of any task before he can lead others," Hickok said.

"Take marksmanship as an example. At skill level one, a soldier is trained to fire his weapon and to handle it safely.

At skill level two, he is trained to coach the use of the weapon and weapons safety.

At skill level three, the soldier trains and supervises coaches, conducts marksmanship training and oversees range safety.

At skill level four, he plans and supervises marksmanship training and conducts and supervises range operations," he said.

Marksmanship training will become part of every NCOES course.

BNCOC and ANCOC students will have to shoot qualifying scores to graduate because "if you can't do it, you can't teach it."

Training the skills NCOs need to conduct unit physical training will also be included in every NCOES course.

Small group instruction will become standard in all courses. A small group consists of eight to 16 students and a leader.

In addition, students will be given teaching assignments during the course.

Shared field training exercises will become a fixture in BNCOC and advanced individual training courses.

During exercises, BNCOC students will supervise Advanced Individual Training students in a realistic field scenario.

TRADOC NCOES includes standardizing the content of the officer basic course (and ANCOC for each MOS.

"These courses produce the platoon leaders and platoon sergeants," Hickok said.

"The lieutenant and the sergeant need to know how to work together to run a platoon effectively, and ANCOC and OBC will teach them how."

A key part of the NCOES model is train-the-trainer instruction.

"The objective of NCOES is to produce NCOs who will support and help develop the unit's training plan based on its mission essential task list," Hickok said. "But if a unit does not continue an NCO's training by assigning him duties and responsibilities the school has prepared for him, those skills and knowledges will soon be lost."

Hickok said many of the changes in NCOES will be included in fiscal year 1990, while others will be phased in later.

Weapon systems information to be put on database

Standard Army Management Informations Systems

Fort Benning was one of many sites visited by the U.S. Army Computer-aided Acquisition and Logistic Support teams to gather data recently.

Col. Edward L. Wills, project manager, U.S. Army CALS, announced the successful completion of the CALS Phase I Site Survey Visits, conducted during November, December and January.

Encompassing Fort Benning and 50 other sites in the continental U.S., Alaska, Hawaii, Europe and Asia, these visits are the bedrock for the data collection and analysis that is critical to the success of the Army's CALS program.

CALS is a major DoD-level program begun in 1985 to provide transition from the current paper-intensive support of weapon systems to an integrated weapon systems database, in which all life-cycle information about a weapon system resides in digital form, easily accessed by many users.

Four companies — Xerox Corporation, TRW Incorporated, Computer Sciences Corporation, and BDM Corporation — who hold contracts to competitively design the Army's CALS architecture, led the site survey teams.

Each team included one or more government representatives and up to eight contractor personnel selected for their expertise in facilities engineering, systems engineering, design, communications, computer science and logistics.

The four contractors each visited a quarter of the sites and, at completion of the visits, must share the collected data with each other via a published report.

Depending on the complexity of the site, the teams spent up to a week amassing in-depth information on the functions being performed at the site, the number and location on potential Army CALS users, the distance between users, their access to existing terminals, hardware/software/communications availability, computer room layouts and any existing automation/communication links.

The extensive information gathered during these visits will enable all four contractors to further develop and refine their designs for the Army CALS architecture, as well as revise their cost estimates to the government for development and fielding.

These refinements are essential to the success of CALS, which, once implemented, will enable the Army to provide new weapon systems to the soldier in the field — with improved accuracy, in less time and at a lower cost to the taxpayer.

Former POWs begins annual Daisy Drive

American Prisoners of War

Seven members of the Columbus Valley Chapter of American Prisoners of War organization will present daisies to Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire and Columbus Mayor James Jernigan Thursday formally opening their annual POW/MIA Daisy drive.

Presentation of "first daisies" to Spigelmire will be in his office at 8:30 a.m. and to Jernigan at an outdoor ceremony on the south side of the Government Center adjacent to the Two Freedom Trees at 10:30 a.m..

The trees were planted in 1973 in a joint military-civilian service honoring MIAs and former POWs.

Columbus' Valley chapter is one of more than 100 chapters in the national organization of former Prisoners of War.

The goal of the Daisy Drive is to add emphasis to the April 9 "Recognition Day for Former POW/MIAs" and collect funds for those prisoners and families who are in need today.

The daisy, representing the former Prisoner of War fund drive, was selected by the organization from the quote, "daisies won't tell."

This typifies the limited information (name, rank and serial number) given the enemy captors by the former prisoners.

Daisy booths for the fund drive will be set up April 6 and 7 at the Main Post Exchange, Mini-Mall, Columbus Square Mall and K-Mart and County Market and Family Market on Airport Thruway.

Grace York gazes at the plaque dedicated to her husband, the late Lt. Gen. Robert H. York. The plaque will hang in the Infantry Museum.

"Just a common ordinary cuss
Just like the run of us
no better and no wus."
--Lt. Gen. Robert H. York

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

These words, as the story goes, were first seen by Lt. Gen. Robert H. York, when he was in high school, on a tombstone.

He was so impressed by the words that he decided that was what he wanted his own tombstone to read someday.

He felt that the words best described himself.

However, according to his friends and relatives, York was no "common ordinary cuss."

To show this, former members of the 331st Infantry Regiment presented Fort Benning a plaque in York's honor during an emotional dedication ceremony March 23 at the Infantry Museum.

York's wife, Grace, and grandson, 1st Lt. Bill Craven, unveiled the plaque while Col. James I. Daily, chief of staff, accepted the plaque on behalf of Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire, commanding general.

Walter G. Ashmore, former member of 331st Inf. Regt., held back tears as he read letters from York's old friends and peers.

York, born in Birmingham, Ala., April 23, 1913, began his enlistment in 1933 with the Alabama National Guard.

After receiving a Bachelor of Science in Engineering, he was commissioned in the regular Army as a second lieutenant in the Infantry.

In September 1942, York was serving as a battalion executive officer with the 18th Infantry Regiment, 1st Infantry Division.

As a 29-year-old major, York went overseas with the 18th Infantry and fought with the unit throughout all of his campaigns in Africa and Sicily and in the Normandy Invasion.

In July 1944, York was transferred to the 83rd Infantry Division in Normandy and assigned as regimental commander of the 331st Inf. Regt., a position he held until the division was inactivated in April 1946.

York was assigned to the Infantry Center at Fort Benning in August 1956.

Here he served as director, Tactical Department, The Infantry School; Assistant Chief of Staff G-3, The Infantry Center; Director of Instruction and Deputy to the Assistant Commandant, The Infantry School; and Chief of Staff, The Infantry Center.

After a variety of assignments, York returned to Fort Benning in 1965 to assume command of the post and The Infantry School.

He then became commanding general of XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N.C.

York retired in August 1968 in Hartsell, Ala. He died April 15, 1988.

were really scary," Amberson said. "It's much easier with the goggles because you can see the ground, which allows you to fly faster."

Warrant Officer William P. Gordon Jr. is the designated NVG trainer for the crewmembers.

He said the biggest drawback is the lack of depth perception.

"You can see everything, but your mind can't perceive exactly how far the ground is away from you," Gordon said.

To lessen that problem, each pilot using the goggles is certified through a series of classes.

"The crew members go through 20-hours of classroom time and many more in flight time before they are certified," he said.

The pilots said there are limitations when using the goggles and they are cumbersome, but they're glad they have them.

A special feature on night vision goggles will air on CBS' 60 Minutes Sunday at 7 p.m.

Warm days bring dangers of sunburn

Infantry Branch Safety Office

With warm and sunny days now upon us, it is important for individuals to recognize the dangers of overexposure to the sun.

The pleasant weather associated with spring and summer prompts activities involving exposure and can be spoiled by the painful effects of sunburn.

Sunburn, caused by the sun's ultraviolet rays, can be prevented by limiting the amount of exposure at the beginning of warm weather.

A daily dose of no more than 15 minutes, with gradual increases of five to 10 minutes, is usually sufficient to protect the skin from burning.

Once a protective tan has developed, exposure can be increased, but should be limited during the mid-morning to mid-afternoon period when the sun's ultraviolet rays are strongest.

During this period, persons engaged in outdoor work or sports should wear protective clothing and persons with light complexions should protect themselves with a sun-screening preparation.

Care should also be exercised when working or playing during cloudy days.

The ultraviolet rays are not at all screened out by the cloud cover and can result in radiation burns.

Consideration should be given to the kind of sun-screen that an individual selects.

Some preparations will not screen out the sun's ultraviolet rays very effectively, and some of can be very costly.

Shop around for a preparation that will provide the needed protection at a reasonable cost.

Individuals may want to consult a physician before selecting a particular brand, since some may cause an allergic reaction.

To be most effective, these preparations should be applied according to the manufacturer's directions.

In addition to the effects of the sun on the skin, pay attention to the effects of overexposure on the eyes. The effects of sunlight and glare can irritate the eyes and can be prevented by the use of sunglasses.

Activities in the sun can be fun, but they can be dampened by the effects of overexposure to the sun and glare.

Proper skin and eye protection measures can make your summer both safe and enjoyable.

Don't be the one who is overdone by fun in the sun.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Three nurses from Martin Army Community Hospital are newly certified Critical Care Nurses.

1st Lt. Judith A. Bock, Maj. Janet R. Eagan and Maj. Connie J. Kotefka, passed the four-hour examination given in February at Emory University.

Bock, Eagan and Kotefka left Columbus early on the morning of Feb. 10 to drive to Emory University in Atlanta.

While on the road, they were caught in a severe storm.

They agree that it took determination just to get to the exam in Atlanta.

They had to change routes five times after reaching Atlanta because of tornado-downed trees blocking the roads.

They didn't know if the examination would, or could, be given but refused to give up without reaching Emory in case it had not been postponed.

The didn't give up and now they are Critical Care Nurses.

To qualify to take the examination, a nurse must have worked 1,750 hours in critical care nursing within the last three years.

It was the first time the nurses had taken the examination.

The percentage of nurses passing the examination on the initial attempt is only 33 percent.

The examination is sponsored by the American Association of Critical Care Nurses.

Officials explain laws governing crosswalks; pedestrians usually have the right of way

Military Police Activity

Based on concerns of the Fort Benning community, an explanation of the laws that govern the use of pedestrian crosswalks is provided for your use and personal safety.

The Georgia State Traffic Code defines a crosswalk as "any portion of a roadway at an intersection or elsewhere distinctly indicated for pedestrian crossing by lines or other markings on the surface."

The code further stipulates that the pedestrian has the right of way except when they are controlled by either a traffic control device or a traffic officer.

Simply put, a motorist is required to yield to a pedestrian crossing the roadway in a crosswalk.

The code also states whenever any vehicle is stopped at a crosswalk to permit a pedestrian to cross the roadway, the driver of any other vehicle shall not overtake or pass the stopped vehicle.

Violators of these provisions will be cited by the Military Police.

The typical fine for such offenses is $50.

Pedestrians have a responsibility to cross the roadways at intersections or marked crosswalks.

Though pedestrians at crosswalks have the right of way, they should ensure their intended path of travel is clear.

Personnel at the Military Police Activity said they are concerned with the welfare of each member of our community.

To prevent injury or loss of life, yield to pedestrians.

For more information on Fort Benning's traffic laws, call the Military Police Activity, Traffic Section, 545-7241/2338.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Adjusting to warmer temperatures requires a certain amount of preparation.

Just as we prepare ourselves for the summer weather, we must also prepare our homes and offices.

Since your air-conditioning system may soom be working around the clock, it is imperative that you check the filter to make sure it's clean.

Remove any dust that may have accumulated from vents and air intakes.

According to Buddy Bussey, foreman of Directorate of Engineering and Housing's, Heating, Ventilation and Air-Conditioning Shop, dirty filters are the most common cause of air-conditioning problems.

Although they continue to run, air conditioners with dirty filters don't work efficiently.

The unit will stay on longer than it would with a clean filter, but can't deliver as much cool air to the space.

Since the air conditioner has to work harder, and longer, maintenance problems are more likely to occur. It also wastes energy.

The quality of air is lessened when blown through dirty filters.

Dirt, dust and pollen are blown through the house along with the cooled air, rather than remaining trapped in the filter.

Even worse than allowing an air conditioner to operate with a dirty filter is using the unit with no filter at all.

Particles that would normally be trapped in the filter are blown out with the cooled air.

This collects on walls, furniture and in your lungs.

Failure to replace dirty filters often results in extensive, costly and time-consuming repairs.

Air-conditioning filters should be checked often and changed at least once a month or more often if needed.

Replacement filters are issued at the Self Help Center, building 385, on Vibbert Avenue.

Filters come in many sizes, so it's important to know the correct size for your unit.

Copy the dimensions from the side of the old filter, or bring the old filter in for exchange.

Some family housing units have heat pumps with permanent filters.

These should be washed gently by hand in warm water and a mild detergent and then rinsed with clean water.

Allow the filter to air-dry and blot excess moisture with a clean towel.

Keeping a clean filter in your air-conditioning system is probably the single most important maintenance measure you can take to keep the unit operating properly and at maximum efficiency.

The few minutes taken to check and change the filter can eliminate major problems and inconvenience in the future.

If you have any questions about this or any energy-related subject, call the Energy Branch at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

Uncontrolled pets cause problems on post

By Karles C. Jackson
Military Police Activity

The capture of uncontrolled pets has increased at Fort Benning in the past two months, according to Spec. Donald Smith, the Military Police Animal Control specialist.

Smith is charged with responding to complaints about animals, picking these animals up and investigating all animal-related incidents at Fort Benning.

"One of the primary problems here is uncontrolled animals. In February, I captured 70 dogs and 16 cats."

If the Military Police Animal Control specialist is notified about a loose animal, the animal is picked up and taken to the Veterinarian Clinic where the animal is kept for three working days.

During this time, the Veterinarian Clinic staff attempts to contact the original owner.

If the owner cannot be identified, the Veterinarian Clinic will adopt the animal out to a new owner.

When animals are left uncontrolled, animal bites and scratches are inevitable.

In February, seven animal bites were reported to the Military Police.

If you are bitten or scratched by an animal, report to the emergency room at Martin Army Community Hospital for treatment.

Report to the attending physician as much information as possible concerning the circumstances of the bite and assist him in completing an animal bite/scratch report.

Anyone knowing his pet has bitten or scratched any human, or upon notification, is required to present the animal (with immunization record, if available) for examination and quarantine at the Veterinarian Clinic.

Failure to do so will necessitate immediate intervention by the Provost Marshal Animal Control Section.

If an on-post resident is cited three times for nuisance acts (bites/scratches by pets, failure to control pets), the owner will be required to remove the animal permanently from post and will be prohibited from future ownership of pets at Fort Benning.

Families should also remember that only three pets per family will be allowed in family housing areas, except for small caged animals and nursing litters.

Animals will be kept indoors or secured outdoors on the owner's premises.

Smith stressed that post residents should leave all wild animals alone.

For more information on pet control at Fort Benning, refer to USAIC Regulation 40-905, which can be obtained at the Veterinarian Clinic.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

I recently took my VCR to a local repair shop to be fixed.

They told me it would be finished in about a week, but when I called to see if it was ready, I got a recording saying that the number had been disconnected.

I drove to the shop and found the place locked and vacant.

A sign said they had gone out of business but didn't provide any other information.

What can I do to get my VCR?

A. Your first, and most important, step is to find the owner of the business.

You should do this as quickly as possible. As more time passes the less likely it is you will recover your property.

There are several steps you can take to locate the owner:

- If you know the owner's, manager's or any other employee's names, look them up in the telephone directory, and try to establish contact by telephone.
- If the shop was rented space, contact the landlord to see if he has information as to the whereabouts of the owner.
- Send a letter to the business at its last mailing address.

There may be a forwarding address, and you can also ask the postmaster to advise you of the forwarding address by agreeing to pay return postage.

- Check with competitors of the shop. Often, people in the same line of business know each other and have information about their competitors.
- If the business was incorporated, you can obtain information about its officers and its registered agent through the Georgia Secretary of state's Office of Corporate Information in Atlanta at telephone number (404) 656-2817.

Georgia corporations are required to file yearly reports with that office in which they list names and addresses of corporate officers.

The name and address of the registered agent for the corporation is also good information to have.

If you eventually have to file a lawsuit against the corporation to recover your property, you will need to know the name and address of the agent.

Another source of information is the latest VA Regional Office.

Also, the registered agent is frequently the attorney for the corporation.

- Check with the city or county business license office.

The application the business owner filed to obtain the license will frequently include information which may assist you in locating the owner.

- Check with the Better Business Bureau in your area.

Although it will not trace the owners for you, it may already have information as to the owner's whereabouts.

Assuming you have been able to find the owner, the next step is to find out what his intentions are regarding your property.

There is no question that you are entitled to your property, and he may not keep it unless he has already performed the required service and you have not paid.

If that is not the case, you may find that the owner is more than willing to return the property and will make appropriate arrangements to do so.

If not, you may find yourself in a position of having to file suit against him to get your property back.

The only complication is if the business has filed bankruptcy. In that case, you may have to pursue the recovery of your property through the Bankruptcy Court, a process that will probably require an attorney's assistance.

Remember — you must act quickly if you want to have a reasonable chance of getting your property back.

The Legal Assistance Office may be able to assist you in this process. The telephone number is 545-3281.

VA Q&A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q. I receive VA compensation, and I wish to claim an adopted child as a dependent. What type of documentation does the VA require?

A. You should provide VA with a certified copy of the final decree of adoption or the adoptive placement agreement. In areas where court records of adoption are not readily available, a certified copy of the revised birth certificate showing the name of the veteran as parent may be acceptable.

Q. I have a fairly high interest rate on my VA-guaranteed loan. Is it possible to refinance this loan?

A. The Department of Veterans Affairs encourages veterans to refinance loans with interest rates that are two points or more higher than the current market rate.

The potential individual and collective savings to veterans are substantial.

Veterans considering financing should contact a private lending agency.

If there are questions concerning eligibility for a VA-guarantee of the refinanced loan, the veteran should contact the near-

Teens, parents discuss drugs

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Participants of Teen-age Treatment Issues II, a workshop for parents, may have gotten more than they bargained for March 22, as many sat in stunned silence while parents and teens recounted the sordid details of a drug-influenced environment.

"I was strongly in denial about drugs being involved in his life," said "Jan," whose son "Bobby" is currently enrolled in the Straight Program of Atlanta. "But, it's kind of hard to deny with a police officer at your door waving a bag of marijuana in your face and your son standing beside him in handcuffs."

"Jan" was one of two participants from the substance abuse program, the other, a teen-ager.

Both were on hand to discuss their personal experiences for the teen-help forum sponsored by Fort Bennings' Civilian Counseling Services and conducted in the Youth Activities Center.

The workshop, which was free of charge and open to the public, featured a variety of guest speakers from teen treatment and rehabilitation centers around Georgia.

"Jan" described the Straight Program as "very structured, very disciplined."

"Tracy," an 18-year-old client of the program, said he started smoking pot in the sixth grade. "I found it brought popularity and a cool image," he said.

Self-described as an "angry" young man, he said he was introduced to cocaine at the age of 15 and was an addict by the age of 15-and-a-half.

He said he had gone to great lengths to get money to support his habits, often selling his own and even his parent's belongings.

"Once I kicked in my sister's door and sold her things, too," he said.

"It got to the point where I didn't care anymore," he said. "But, despite all the trouble I got into, I still thought I had everything under control."

"I've learned so much about myself through this program, it's unbelievable," said Tracy. He said drugs almost destroyed his life, and he's grateful they didn't.

Speaking on behalf of Teen Challenge of Georgia was Director Claude Mooneyhan.

"We treat women addicted to drugs, alcohol and those involved with prostitution. We have a capacity of 12 persons," he said.

Mooneyhan described the program as a "Christian home environment" that encompasses rehabilitation, group meetings and individual study time.

"We try to deal with their emotional problems," he said. "We try to deal with what led them to drugs."

Representing Benning's Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program was Angelo Dart, who spoke on eating disorders among teen-agers.

Wrapping up the morning's activities was Dr. Leigh Conver, of the Bradley Center. Conver is co-author of the book "Self Defeating Lifestyles," and spoke on that topic.

Diabetes alert educates public

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

According to The American Diabetes Association, more than 12 million Americans have diabetes — about one in every 20 people.

While 11 million of these people are non-insulin-dependent, the remaining one million people must take insulin injections every day.

The ADA estimates that there are an additional five million people who are non-insulin-dependent diabetics and don't even know it.

In an effort to make these five-million people aware of their diabetes, hospitals, pharmacies and drug stores throughout the country observed the AMA American Diabetes Alert in conjunction with the AMA's 50th anniversary March 20.

According to Linda Lavigne, Martin Army Community Hospital patient representative, the alert is designed to help people recognize the symptoms of diabetes and give them information on how to deal with the condition.

A pamphlet by Pfizer Pharmaceuticals explains diabetes as being "a malfunction in the way the body uses the sugars, starches, proteins, and fats in a person's diet, which is due to an

Benning's Drill Sgt. of Year to be honored

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year will be honored at a ceremony April 6 at 3 p.m. at Sand Hill Theatre No. 3.

Staff Sgt. George D. Harrington won the distinction after competing against five other battalion Drill Sergeants of the Quarter.

The ceremony is sponsored by the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center in conjunction with the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter, Association of the U.S. Army.

Competition for the Fort Benning title consisted of physical training, hands-on testing of drill sergeants' skills and an appearance before a selection board testing for knowledge of military subjects and current events.

Harrington, a drill sergeant with Company A, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, will receive a 9-millimeter Beretta pistol, an engraved case and plaque, a set of dress blues, a warm-up jacket and a wristwatch from AUSA.

He will compete at Fort Monroe, Va., the week of April 16 for the prestigious Army Drill Sergeant of the Year title.

Harrington, a LaGrange, Ga., native, entered the Army in 1983 and has been a drill sergeant for more than a year.

He is a graduate of Airborne, Jumpmaster, Ranger and Military Free-Fall Parachuting schools.

His awards are not limited to that of Drill Sergeant. In 1987, he received the Leadership Award after completing the Primary Leadership Development Course, was Honor Graduate of his Drill Sergeant Class in 1988 and in 1989 received the Henry Caro Leadership Award on finishing the Basis Noncommissioned Officers' Course.

Harrington previously served with the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Hunter Army Airfield, Savannah, Ga.

Among his awards and decorations are the Army Commendation, Army Achievement and Good Conduct medals, Master Parachutist and Expert Infantryman badges and the Ranger Tab.

He and his wife, Traci, have a two-year-old son, George.

Army wrestlers win

Team captures Armed Forces title, 1st time in 12 years

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The All-Army Wrestling Team succeeded in doing what no other team has done in 12 years when they captured the Freestyle wrestling competition and the overall wrestling team title at the 1990 Armed Forces Wrestling Championships at Quantico MCB, Va., March 16 through 19.

This marked the first time since 1977 that a team other than the Marine Corps has won the Armed Forces Wrestling Championships.

"It (Quantico) was their (Marines) back yard, and that's what was great about it," said All-Army Head Coach Sgt. 1st Class Tony Thomas.

The All-Army Team has been based at Fort Benning and was hosted by the 29th Infantry Regiment for this year's trials.

Thomas said the camp will be here again next year and said plans are to have the Armed Forces Championships here in 1992.

This can present a special treat for wrestling fans. Because of the year (1992), those placing in the top three spots in those championships will be granted an automatic berth to the U.S. Olympic Trials.

For now, the Army team is just looking ahead to its next meet, the U.S. Wrestling National Championships, in Las Vegas, Nev., April 18 through 21.

"The whole team is going to Vegas," said Thomas. "All the colleges and clubs will be there because this is for national individual rankings."

The Army squad placed second in the Division II portion of last year's championships with only eight members. This year they return with 20 and said they hope to win the division.

Thomas said Fort Benning natives, Pete Gomez, Rodney Smith and Derrick Waldroup, who all fared extremely well at the Armed Forces Championships, are also expected to go all the way to the World Team Trials, later this year.

"This has been good experience for the guys," said Thomas, "and everybody is coming back next year except for one who will ETS. We have a good chance to repeat."

SOA defeats 29th Inf. Regt.

By Keith F. Johnson
U.S. Army School of Americas

The School of the Americas' soccer team defeated the 29th Infantry Regiment, 2-1, March 15 at Doughboy Stadium to open the 1990 Fort Benning Soccer League season.

The School's soccer team, league champions from 1985-88, finished second last year while suffering its only loss 2-1 to the 197th Infantry Brigade in the league championship game.

The SOA team defeated 2nd Battalion, 69th Artillery Regiment 5-0 Tuesday and then played the 197th Inf. Bde. Thursday in a rematch of last year's final game. The 197th team again prevailed 2-1 over SOA.

"We have played well this year, but we didn't put it together against the 197th," said Rafael Garcia, SOA team representative.

"The next time we play them, we should be more consistent."

The two teams will meet again April 10 at 8 p.m. at Doughboy Stadium.

Only two players returned from last year's team, Jorge R. Frias and Garcia, who, along with Humberto Oviedo, serve as team representatives.

Garcia says the potential is there for a return to the championship game, due in part to the type of players on the team.

Of the 16 new players on the team, 11 are guest instructors representing different Latin American countries at the school, and three are students from Guatemala.

"The new players come together fast as a team because the Latin players tend to slow the pace of the game and control the ball as opposed to the rougher and faster style of play in Europe and the United States," Garcia said.

"This has led to the success of the school in the league over the past few years."

This year six teams will compete for top honors in the league.

Those teams are the 197th Inf. Bde.; 34th Med.; 75th Rgr. Regt.; 29th Inf. Regt.; 2nd Bn., 69th Fld. Arty.; and SOA.

Each team plays 15 games during the season, which ends May 3, on Tuesday and Thursday nights at Doughboy Stadium.

Games begin at 6, 7 and 8 p.m.

Following the season, a single-elimination tournament will determine the league champion.

The other members of the SOA team are Laureano Gomez, Otto G. Noack, Edgar R. Bustamante, Javier L. Torres, Edgar R. Rueda, Antonio J. Sanchez, Alberto J. Mejia, Wilbert Mora, David J. Galvez, Julio C. Gomez, Cesar Castro, Cesar A. Pareja, Felix L. Davila, Wilson C. Semanate and Mark I. Hutt.

SPIRITUAL

Reflections Reflections

Chaplain Family Life Center

There is never enough time or at least that's what we may tell ourselves.

One thing is for sure, we all live in a very busy world with many time-consuming responsibilities that compete for our attention.

As our lives become increasingly complex and detailed, some of the most important aspects of our lives receive less attention or are neglected.

For instance, how many times have we justified the amount of time spent away from our families because of careers or other demands?

"I'm doing these things for you," neglected families are often told. Even though this may be true, it does not make the neglect any less real.

Many of us may in some way relate to the story of a father who told his young son that he just didn't have time to play ball with him.

"The trouble, Dad, is that I'm not in your book."

"Book?" the father asked, "What book?"

"You know," the boy replied, "the book you write your appointments in, the one where you keep track of meetings with important people. I'm not in there."

If this man were asked who the most important people in his life were, he would most likely say his family. When it comes right down to it, however, his family was indeed not in his book.

How about the parent who is cleaning the kitchen when the youngest in the family asks for help putting on her shoes?

Even though the parent knows the child can do this for herself, maybe this is a time for a little extra attention — a slot on the daily calendar for someone "important."

Life's details are important — someone does need to do the dishes and take out the trash.

Yet, sometimes we need to realize that the details can wait so the words of God may be heard.

Maybe then we can find openings in our books for the people who mean most to us, such as the little fellow who wanted to play baseball or the tiny voice asking for one favor, but really needing a hug and a smile.

School board to be elected May 15

Members set policy, provide direction

By Beth Middlemiss
Fort Benning Schools

Parents of the children attending Fort Benning Schools set the direction for the schools through an elected school board.

A 10-member board, elected by parents of children attending the schools, meets monthly to set district policy and provide general direction to the system.

Members are elected for two-year terms, with each of the eight schools having a representative.

The board includes an elected president and chaplain.

Members' terms are staggered so that the board will include experienced board members each year.

School board elections will be May 15.

Board seats up for election for two-year terms are the representatives from McBride, Wilson, Patch and Wilbur schools.

The "at large" seats for president and chaplain representatives are also up for election; these "at large" positions are for two-year terms.

To be eligible to run as a candidate representing a school, an individual must be the parent or guardian of a child enrolled in the school at the time the candidate is elected and must not be an employee or related to any school system employee.

Anyone interested in running for election should contact the principal of the school for which they wish to run or the assistant superintendent for Logistics Richard Skinner at 545-2500.

The board meets the last Monday of each month at noon in the administrative conference room of the School Administrative Building on NCO Drive.

The board considers school policies, approves the budget, approves curriculum changes and functions in much the same way as do school boards in civilian communities.

Current elected board members are: Col. Herbert Segal, president; Lt. Col. Donald McSwain, chaplain; Elizabeth Orloff, Dexter School representative; Kathleen Meade, Faith School representative; Joan Cole, Loyd School representative; Staff Sgt. Patrick Reed, McBride School representative; Claudia Moore, Patch School representative; Gerhea Chuber, White School representative; and TSgt. Randy W. Childers, Wilbur School representative; and Sgt. 1st Class Ethel Thomas, Wilson School representative.

abnormality associated with a hormone called insulin."

MACH participated in the alert by showing videos, handing out pamphlets and literature, passing out self-tests and answering questions in the pharmacy lobby.

According to Lavigne, patient representative, most of the people who stopped by the display were interested because either they were in a high-risk category, knew someone who had the condition or were just interested in their health.

"I think the public is more in tune (to their health) now than they were years ago," Lavigne said.

"They are more inclined to learn about these types of things," she said.

MACH doctors can refer patients with diabetes to the diabetes treatment program at the Life Style Center.

The program is designed to help patients take charge of their condition.

The three-day hospitalization program is taught by a team of health care professionals.

The team includes an internal medicine doctor, dietitian, physical therapist and a social work counselor.

The program offers extensive classes that cover topics such as coping with diabetes, planning meals and self-monitoring of blood sugar.

For more information on the program, call 544-1275.

Busch Gardens announces additions to collection

Two blue-streaked lories recently hatched at Tampa's Busch Gardens.

The two birds are just one of 19 species of lories that are part of a large breeding program for parrots numbering 120 species for a total collection of 750 birds.

Busch Gardens' parrot breeding program has enjoyed breeding successes such as the first-ever captive hatching of the highly endangered Lear's macaw.

Lories are distributed over a large part of the tropics, including Australia, New Guinea and Indonesia.

Lories are tree-dwellers and feed, roost and breed in trees and rarely descend to the ground.

Lories are liquid eaters and in the wild eat pollen, nectar, fruits, buds, small insects and drink water trapped in palm fronds.

Busch Gardens' lories eat a sweet vegetable and fruit mixture, which approximates their natural diet.

In the wild, lories play an important ecological role in pollinating the trees on which they feed. They tend to nest almost exclusively in holes in trees.

At Busch Gardens', specially designed nesting boxes are created with the lories' unique needs in mind.

As with many of the world's animals species, lories live in areas of rapid deforestation, which may eventually pose a threat to their future survival.

Busch Gardens reports more than 130 births and hatchings since Jan 1.

These newcomers are the latest additions to the park's collection of more than 3,300 animals.

Other newborns include an exotic variety of hoofed stock, including one tiny black-backed duiker, two roan antelope, two dorcas gazelle, three nyala, an addra gazelle and a Grant's zebra.

Other new babies include a Solomon Island skink, a common marmoset and four Abyssinian blue-winged geese.

Nursery attendant Nancy Biggins feeds a just days-old blue-streaked lory a special liquid diet.

By using the following procedure, soldiers on the Family Housing Waiting List can use this chart to estimate when they can expect quarters:

Locate your category of housing.

Note eligibility date located on the same line as your category.

Calculate the time difference between the eligibility date listed and your eligibility date. The difference is the approximate time you still have to wait for housing.

EXAMPLE: If the latest eligibility date of the person who last received housing in your category was May 15, 1988, and your date of eligibility is Sept. 15, 1988, you can expect housing in about four months. If you do not know your eligibility date, contact the Family Housing Office at building 399, 545-3107.

Motorist asked not to use Custer Road bridge, ramps

The construction of the Custer Road overpass into Sand Hill includes installation of lighting on the bridge and associated on and off ramps plus a traffic signal at the main intersection.

The bridge and associated ramps, though appearing to be passable, will not be open to motorist until completion of this work.

Some motorists, however, are going through or around the contractor's barricades, ignoring warning signs and using the bridge as a "shortcut" into and out of Sand Hill.

As a matter of safety, it is requested that all personnel refrain from using the bridge and ramps until construction is completed.

Drill Team thrills, chills Benning

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

The high school gym was filled with impatient teen-agers fidgeting uncomfortably.

They snickered and whispered to each other when soldiers carrying rifles marched sharply onto the basketball court.

When the rifles flew into the air, spun elegantly and landed back into the soldiers' hands, the laughing was replaced with sounds of astonishment and a burst of applause.

"That's what it's all about," said Sgt. Gregory Moore, a member of the U.S. Army Drill Team, after a performance at Spencer High School.

If impressing people with intricate and dangerous drill maneuvers is what it's all about, then the drill team has got it made.

In addition to the Spencer High School performance, the drill team thrilled crowds at Fort Benning's Main Post Exchange, York Field, Infantry Training Center, 30th AG Reception Battalion and various post schools last week, performing complex routines with bayonet-tipped 1903 Springfield rifles at various locations and events.

The team is one of 3rd U.S. Infantry's speciality units, which travels all over, supporting Army recruiting, acting as goodwill ambassadors for the Army, participating in military and civic functions and performing for the president, visiting dignitaries and heads of state.

"I think the best thing about the drill team is the professionalism and quality of the soldiers, but I love the crowds and the touring," Moore said.

"I never get tired of it," he said. "How can you

Post has special plans for Month of Military Child

Child Development Services

April is set aside yearly to bring into focus our nation's most valuable resources . . . children. The theme is "Good Beginnings Never End."

The Month of the Military Child is especially important at Fort Benning, Home of the Infantry.

The time parents have to establish and maintain bonding with their children is often limited.

Mission readiness preparations often take parents away from home. Therefore, good beginnings and stability during periods of absence is very important.

Child Development Services and Youth Services strive to offer quality child care options during times of parental absence.

To assure our most precious resource is professionally cared for, the staff is continually trained in the most current educational advances.

Quality child care options are available through center-based facilities, before- and after-school latchkey services, Youth Services and certified family child care homes.

Child Development Services, in conjunction with other Family Support activities, have planned many enriching events for the entire family during April.

The following is the focus of various agencies during April.

Child Abuse Awareness (ACS)
Heart Disease (AHA)
Birth Defects (March of Dimes)
Physical Fitness (Fitness Coordinator)
Quality Child Care Interactions
Family Bonding

Child Development, Youth Services, Army Community Service and Fort Benning Schools are planning the following:

Today, 7-9 p.m. — Preteen dance contest (6 to 12 years old) (The Electric Slide) (YS)

Monday-April 13 — Easter Coloring Contest (Prizes awarded) (YS)

April 14 — Easter Egg Hunt at Russ Pond at 10 a.m. includes train rides, clowns, face painting, astro jump, fishing rodeo, games and prizes, finger painting.

April 16-20 — Age-appropriate Curriculum activities/Special projects for center-based facilities (YS)

April 17, 7-9 p.m. — Lecture and slide presentation by Dr. S. Levine, Normandy Room-Officers' Club (ACS)

April 20, 11:30 a.m. — Playground picnic (Marne Road CDC)

April 23-27 — Age-appropriate curriculum activities/special projects for FCC homes (YS)

April 27, 7-9 p.m. — Teen dance contest (13-18 years old) (YS)

Dental X-rays required for mission readiness

By Paula Dansereau
Dental Activity

Today's Infantry soldiers are better prepared for their mission because of dental fitness.

Since the tragedy at Gander in 1985, every soldier is required to have a duplicate panoramic X-ray on file at the Central Storage Facility in California.

The CSF houses duplicate X-rays for U.S. military personnel: active, reserve and National Guard.

Although the Army is the leader in completion of these records with 98 percent, there are about 1,500 soldiers whose panoramic films are not on file.

Army Regulation 600-8-101 outlines the commander's responsibility for the dental readiness of his soldiers.

The dental readiness goal of the Army is to have all soldiers in dental classification I or II, free of dental disease or defect that is likely to cause an emergency within 12 months.

Soldiers who are in dental classification III or IV are considered nondeployable.

Class III signifies a dental condition, which is likely to result in a dental emergency within 12 months.

Class IV signifies that the soldier's dental fitness is unknown, or there is no record of a duplicate X-ray on file at the CSF.

Currently the worldwide figures on Army personnel show three to four percent in Class III and 10 to 12 percent in Class IV.

The Department of Defense is in the process of dispatching a revision to the dental classification standards, which will likely mean an increase in the number of soldiers requiring dental treatment.

The impact of this will likely be felt by family members and retirees desiring dental care.

Junior enlisted soldiers eligible for post quarters

Directorate of Engineering and Housing

The Family Housing offices in building 2622, Soldiers' Plaza, and building 399, Olson Hall, will begin accepting applications from soldiers in ranks private to private first class or their spouses for military family housing May 1.

The date of eligibility will be the date of application. The first assignment will be made June 1.

Applicants must provide Family Housing with copies of orders assigning them to Fort Benning.

Applications made after June 1 will be handled in accordance with Army Regulation 210-50.

Junior enlisted soldiers who are promoted to junior noncommissioned officers while on the waiting list may elect to remain on the list and be housed in junior enlisted quarters.

Those who elect to transfer to the junior NCO waiting list will go on the new waiting list with a date of eligibility as of the date the change was made.

Once housed, junior enlisted soldiers who were promoted to junior NCO while on the waiting list but elected to accept junior enlisted housing may apply for junior NCO housing.

They will be permitted to move at their own expense when quarters become available.

Junior enlisted soldiers promoted to junior NCO after being housed may also apply for junior NCO quarters.

They, too, will be permitted to move at their own expense when quarters become available.

For more information, contact the family housing office, building 399, 545-3107.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES: Why did you want to join the U.S. Army Drill Team?

Staff Sgt. Gary Eppich, U.S. Army Drill Team — "I wanted to join because I felt it would be more challenging than the Old Guard. I think the Drill Team is the creme de la creme of the Army."

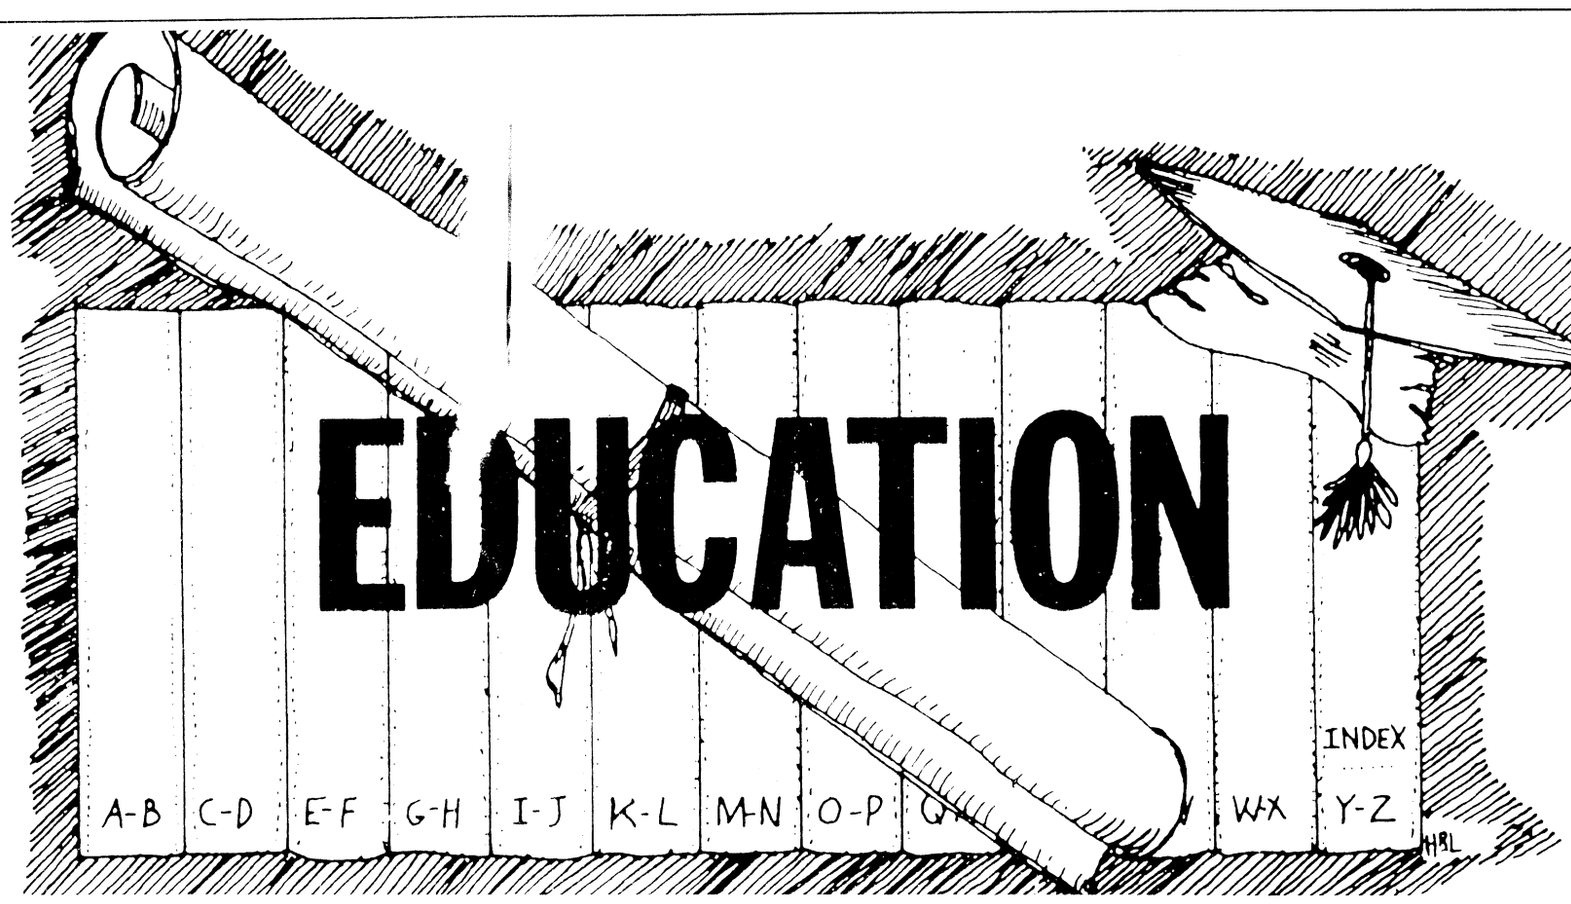
Spec. Robert Abernethy, U.S. Army Drill Team — "I was really impressed with the Drill Team while I was with the Old Guard."

Spec. Kevin Leary, U.S. Army Drill Team — "I wanted to join because I love the Drill Team."

Sgt. Anthony Neal, U.S. Army Drill Team — "I saw the Drill Team perform when I was in high school. I was really impressed, so I made it one of my goals to join."

Spec. Eric Cover, U.S. Army Drill Team — "I wanted to succeed at something else. The Drill Team was another challenge for me."

Spec. Anthony Chacon, U.S. Army Drill Team — "I saw the Old Guard while I was in basic training and decided that was what I wanted to do. The Drill Team is elite in itself."



Army should place scholars where their skills can be used

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

According to a recent estimate by the Fort Benning Education Center, there are 360 Bachelor's degrees possessed by soldiers in the enlisted ranks, pay grades E-1 through E-9, including trainees.

Although the post is large, this is still a significant number.

How are these degrees or persons possessing them being used?

Since this is the "Home of the Infantry," I can safely assume that the predominate Military Occupational Specialty on this post is the 11 series.

Can anybody think of any college major that even remotely relates to the Infantry skills?

Yet, amazingly, it still surprises me to see a 22-year-old with a Bachelor's in Business Administration dug into a fighting position alongside his buddy, last year's high school graduate from Anytown, USA.

It seems like such a waste.

I've been reminded, however, that many of these young men and women have voluntarily opted for such specialties, and there is no shame in being an Infantryman.

I couldn't agree more. It was only after I arrived at Fort Benning that I realized what talented fighting machines the 11 Bravos truly are.

If you need proof for yourself, take a look at their MOS handbook.

I've never seen a thicker volume for any other MOS.

But does one need to possess a college degree to accomplish the Infantryman's tasks? Is a degree required for any of the other MOS tasks for that matter?

As far as I know, with one exception, there is not one MOS or position that requires anything more than a high school diploma or GED.

The only exception I know of is MOS 95D, Criminal Investigative Agent, which requires a minimum of 60 semester hours.

Soldiers must apply for this MOS, they cannot enlist or reenlist for it.

This information comes from a letter in the April 2 edition of Army Times entitled "Use educated NCOs."

The letter, whose author's name was unfortunately withheld, speaks of the fact that those with college degrees, which the Army goes through such great pains to help them achieve, are not used to their potential.

The possibilities are limitless.

Education majors could teach BSEP classes, for which we now hire civilians to teach, to say nothing of what they could do for the post school system.

Business majors could fill any number of staff office positions also currently held by civilian employees.

Criminal Justice majors would be much better suited for the Military Police branch and the list goes on and on.

Some units I have been in have sought to use their "college corps" to the units' best advantage.

The scholars have been made training NCOs, budget analysts and placed other responsible positions.

The problem with this practice is that there are no MOSs for such jobs.

We all know how promotions pass you by when you haven't been officially working in your MOS.

As far as promotions go, if you closely examine the Promotion Point Worksheet, DA Form 3355, page 5, you'll see how soldiers with Bachelor's degrees are rewarded for their achievements.

The maximum points allowed for civilian education is 100.

A soldier is awarded one point for each semester hour, or one-and-a-half quarter hours earned in an accredited institution.

One hundred semester hours is not even enough to earn a B.S. or B.A.

So, anything above 100 semester hours, including a degree, is overkill.

Promotions aside, recent directives may have also hurt enlistment.

According to Army Regulation 601-210, Table 2-3, Rule E, a soldier may enter the Army at the grade of E-3 and be promoted to E-4 after four months time in service, with the commander's approval.

This is providing the soldier has 120 semester hours or more of college and a Bachelor's degree.

However, AG Enlisted Promotions said due to a directive that came out in October 1988, "that regulation is no longer in effect."

All of this is not to say don't go out and earn your degree. Just don't expect tangible rewards for it, save your own personal satisfaction.

The soldier who wrote in to Army Times suggested that NCOs with degrees be assigned an identifier to their MOS and then detailed out accordingly, much in the same manner as are drill sergeants and recruiters.

This way, the Army could reduce its strength without reducing its efficiency and all the money spent on education while the soldiers are still in the service would go toward a more productive use, the betterment of the Total Army.

Snively salutes drill sergeants

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Staff Sgt. George D. Harrington is being honored as Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year.

I'm sure Sgt. Harrington is a very fine drill sergeant and deserving of this honor. In fact I think all drill sergeants should be honored at least several times a day.

I remember me in basic training. I would have hated to have been my drill sergeant.

"Your military right, Snively," or, "Snively, until you get a shot group you can cover with a quarter, there's no way we can adjust your weapon (we finally settled on the palm of his large hand), or, "What did you polish you boots with, a Hershey Bar?" and "Didn't your momma teach you to make a bed? You call those corners?"

No drill sergeant will ever compare to my drill sergeant.

My drill sergeant, Sgt. 1st Class Burrell (for me and the rest of the soldiers in the platoon, Sgt. 1st Class was his first name) was the best.

I can still remember him as we fell out of the backs of the deuce-and-a-halfs, which had brought us from the reception station to our new home of World War II barracks at the base of Tank Hill.

He quickly let us know who was in charge of that organization and that we were lower than scum.

Towering over us, (I think he had eight inches on Kareem Abdul-Jabbar) he bellowed at us in a voice that sounded like a freight train roaring through a mountain tunnel: "For the next nine weeks you belong to me. You're gonna hate me, but you're gonna learn to be sojers. Cuz I want you to survive if you're called upon to fight."

During the next nine, hot, steamy weeks at Fort Jackson, I learned to clean my weapon, eat sand on the infiltration course, assemble and disassemble every small arms weapon in the inventory, clean my weapon, march, make a bed that'd make my mother proud, and clean my weapon.

I also had my brains knocked in during pugil stick training ("you're not being mean enough Snively, this is how it's done," — one swipe upside the head, and I was down for the mandatory eight count).

I had them fried during our 20-mile road march ("why ain't cha drinking yoah water like I tole you. You trying to get me court-martialed boy").

I also had the snot kicked out of me in the hand-to-gland pit.

Another thing, I learned what it meant to walk fast. I don't think I ever saw anyone march as fast a Sgt. 1st Class Burrell.

I do believe there were times we passed vehicles in the 15 mph zones.

He'd speed march us when the Wet Bulb said it was too hot to run (it was too hot to do anything but sit still under a South Carolina pine, but we'd be out speed marching.

"Stop y'alls runnin.' You trying to get me in trouble with the old man?" he'd admonish us as we double-timed to keep up with his 56-inch strides.

But I survived and if I didn't leave a professional killer, I was at least a top seed.

I'll never forget Sgt. 1st Class Burrell, just as I'm sure there isn't a soldier or former soldier alive who's forgotten one of the most influential people in their lives — their drill sergeants.

Staff Sgt. Harrington and all drill sergeants, on behalf of all soldiers who've completed basic and advanced training, I salute you.

Child abuse prevention: be a hugger not a slugger

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

"Be a hugger not a slugger" is the slogan for April's Child Abuse Prevention Month.

"Sometimes it is very hard to get the public to realize that child maltreatment is one of our most pressing family, health and social problems in the nation today," said Army Family Advocacy Program Manager Becky Welch.

A nationwide study conducted by Dr. Deborah Daro, director of research for the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse, indicates an average of three children a day are reported as fatal victims of maltreatment.

Further research revealed the vast majority of these children are under one year old.

Children killed as a result of parental abuse or neglect never have the opportunity to contribute to society.

In 1986 and 1987 alone, deaths because of abuse cost more than $1.2 billion in lost future productivity.

To help prevent child abuse, know what to look for.

Some physical indicators of abused children can include unexplained bruises, burns, fractures, lacerations or abrasions.

Speech disorders, a lack in physical development or drive can also be tell-tale signs.

Behavioral extremes such as aggression or withdrawal can be indicative of abuse, as can visible fear of parents or other adults.

Parents often abuse their children in reaction to past or present problems or stresses with which they can't cope.

According to the NCPCA, child abuse victims are six times more likely to become abusive parents than non-abused children.

Welch said that reported abuse cases in the Fort Benning area often center around younger enlisted soldiers, usually in grades E-4 and below.

She attributed this to a number of factors such as youth of the parents, stresses of Army life and number of children.

Also the spouses of these young soldiers often face undue stresses.

Many are uprooted from their homes, have no one to turn to on a new post and must meet the daily necessities of child care on what is often a very tight budget.

Welch said it is this target group that her organization seeks to help.

"We try to help newcomers before it becomes a problem," she said.

As far as day-care facilities are concerned, Welch said she feels more than prepared for the job at hand.

"We have some of the best day care centers there are, and all our workers are trained by us," she said.

"I feel we have a really good program here, and a lot of it has to do with the support we get from the post command and Maj. Gen. (Michael F.) Spigelmire," she said.

Welch encouraged all parents and educators to participate in Child Abuse Prevention Month and the Month of the Military Child program April 14, from 10 a.m. to noon at Fort Benning's Russ Pond.

The Family Advocacy Program, Child Development Services, Youth Services and other organizations are sponsoring a "Fun Day" for children and their parents.

Attractions will include an Easter Egg Hunt, a fire truck, clowns, McGruff the Crime Dog, free T-shirts, pens, pencils, Frisbees and literature on child abuse.

NCO Academy welcomes new commandant

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy has a new leader at the helm.

Command Sgt. Maj. James W. Fowler handed over the reigns to Command Sgt. Maj. Wayne L. Gibney in a ceremony at the NCOA auditorium Mar. 27.

The Academy is the only unit on Fort Benning with an enlisted commander.

Falling under the umbrella of the commander is the Primary Leadership Development, Basic and Advanced Noncommissioned Officer courses, the First Sergeant Orientation Course and the Drill Sergeant School.

Many of the courses presently in the curriculum were added during Fowler's tenure.

Other changes include the relocation of the academy to its present site and the dedication of the school to its first commandant, Command Sgt. Maj. Henry Caro.

Fowler's next assignment is the U.S. Army Infantry School Sergeant Major.

Gibney comes to this position from 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.

He becomes the 13th man to take command of the school.

get tired of people enjoying what you are doing? Making people happy is our business."

According to Drill Master Sgt. 1st Class William Smith, Infantrymen who want to try out for the drill team must first be selected to serve with the 3rd U.S. Inf., traditionally known as the "Old Guard."

The Old Guard is the Army's oldest active-duty Infantry unit.

After serving with the Old Guard, soldiers undergo six months of rigorous and competitive drill practice before they are selected for the team.

And, said Smith, the drill team maintains high standards.

"Soldiers who don't meet criteria set forth by the drill team standards of operation can be terminated. And several times, they have," he said.

Military bearing, strength and dexterity are qualifications required of the soldiers.

"It takes a special person to be a driller," Moore said. "It takes a lot of concentration, too."

Concentration is extremely important because many of the team's routines can be dangerous.

The "daring, front-to-rear overhead rifle toss," is one of the team's more risky routines and is performed exactly as it sounds.

Soldiers toss 10-pound rifles 15 feet in the air to soldiers in the rear of the formation.

With stunts like this, injuries are bound to occur.

"It's a very dangerous job," said Moore, who has been with the team for a year and a half.

"I was knocked out in front of the White House during the overhead toss. It (a rifle) hit me on the head. I bled like a stuck pig."

In another accident, Moore's hand was stabbed with a bayonet, but he maintains it is all part of the job.

"Everyone has to trust each other," he said.

Smith, who has been on the team for eight months, has received his share of injuries, too.

He's been knocked on the head and stabbed in the back with a bayonet.

During one speciality drill, he stands in the center of a formation while four soldiers toss their bayoneted weapons over and around his head.

"I trust them explicitly," he said. "The moment I don't is the moment I have to leave the team."

According to Moore, that's what it's all about.

Post leaders gather to pay tribute to women

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

National Women's History Month was observed at a luncheon in the Main Noncommissioned Officers' Club March 29.

Sponsored by the Federal Women's Program, the luncheon was "to pay tribute to the many achievements of women in the United States," according to program Chairwoman Winnie Torain.

Representing Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire was Deputy Post Commander Col. Barry Mahek.

He pointed out the Army's past resolve to overcome a two-percent ceiling on the allowable number of women in the service and being limited to one colonel.

He cited Congress' 1967 repeal of that ceiling, which allowed women to be appointed to the general officer ranks.

"Today, military women contribute in all capacities except those prohibited by legislation or service policies," said Mahek.

"I encourage you to make others aware of the unique contributions we can make, no matter which sex, as we strive to become gender blind and make this a better place to live and work," he said.

The keynote speaker for the luncheon was City of Columbus Equal Opportunity Advisor Gwendolyn Ruff.

She said the role of women has been overlooked and undervalued throughout the pages of history.

"We need new ideas to be competitive in the world market. We can do this through diversity in hiring," said Ruff.

"I challenge you today," she said, "to leave a legacy for our young citizens."

Fort Benning's Chief of Staff retired March 30

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

Family, friends, honored guests and units from Fort Benning gathered in front of Infantry Hall to honor Chief of Staff Col. James I. Daily, who retired March 30.

After words of praise and endearment from Commanding General Maj. Gen. Michael F. Spigelmire, Congressman Richard Ray bestowed his own praise upon the 26-year veteran.

"Col. Daily has excelled at being the best soldier in the best Army in the world," Ray said.

Daily, who praised his wife, Hilda, for her support, said he was leaving the Army on a high note. He described Fort Benning as "the most important post in the free world."

A Vietnam combat veteran, who served with the 1st Cavalry Division, Daily said, "Regardless of the outcome, I am proud to have served my country."

He said the position he occupied as post chief of staff was the most challenging and rewarding job of his career.

Daily said he is proud of the small part he played in the operation of the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy.

"It's the finest NCO academy in the Army," he said.

He expressed regret at having never fulfilled his dream of a tour in Alaska.

He said his wife, a Mississippi native, had volunteered to let him go.

"She said, 'If you want to hunt bear, get on a plane, go shoot a bear, come back, and I'll be here,'" Daily explained.

Daily has served two tours in Vietnam, one in Saudi Arabia and was the first commandant of the Air Assault School at Fort Campbell, Ky.

He is a graduate of the Infantry Officers Advanced Course, U.S. Army Command and General Staff College and the U.S. Army War College.

He also has Bachelor's and Master's degrees in Education.

His awards and decorations include the Bronze Star with V Device and oak leaf cluster, Meritorious Service Medal with oak leaf cluster, Air Medal with V Device, Purple Heart, Army Commendation Medal with oak leaf cluster, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Air Assault Badge and Ranger Tab.

Daily served as the Chief of Staff of the U.S. Army Infantry Center since April 30, 1987.

Public drinking, open containers violate local laws

By Karles C. Jackson
Military Police Activity

Several soldiers have been apprehended by the Columbus Police Department for drinking in public and violation of the open container law.

One recent excuse given to the arresting police officer was "I didn't know Columbus had public drinking or open container laws."

Columbus City Ordinance 14-5.1 prohibits the consumption of alcohol in a variety of public areas in the Columbus city limits.

The areas include parking lots of both public buildings and private businesses; sidewalks and streets; public property, inside or out; and public parks, playgrounds and other recreation areas.

Additionally, City Ordinance 89-113 prohibits consuming alcoholic beverages or having in one's possession any open container or package of alcoholic beverages while aboard any motor vehicle operated or parked on any public street or property.

This ordinance is not to arrest everyone in the vehicle, but to arrest only the person who has possession of the open container or the person who has control of the vehicle if the person having possession of the open container cannot be identified.

Individuals apprehended for drinking in public could incur a fine of $350 and/or 60 days in jail.

Individuals apprehended for violation of the open container law could incur a fine of $600 and/or 10 days in jail.

Violation of these ordinances are misdemeanors and may require a court appearance.

Soldiers, family members and government employees may be accustomed to different laws and procedures in their home states and cities, but while assigned to Fort Benning, local laws apply.

These offenses are reportable through the Military Police and military command channels.

The Columbus Police Department will continue to enforce this city ordinance.

Advise your friends, soldiers and family members about drinking in public and the open container law. The penalties are too high for a drink, and ignorance of the law is no excuse.

Family-oriented programs strive for excellence

Army Community Service

The way the community takes care of the soldier and his family will help move the Army toward readiness and a greater mission accomplishment.

To better care for Fort Benning families Army Community Service, Family Support Division, Directorate of Community Activities, is "rolling out the red carpet," with several family-oriented programs.

Carla Cary, chief of ACS, has developed and implemented a program to provide relocation services to military members and their families by integrating and augmenting existing military relocation services. This project is the result of a year of hard work and dedication.

Cary said her dream is to have a place where soldiers and their families can go for assistance in relocating to or from Fort Benning — a one-stop location where all needs are met.

The Relocation Assistance Center provides an automated information system containing current data on housing, schools (public and private), child care, spouse employment, cost of living and general community information.

It is geared for pre- and post-move briefings, overseas orientations, accurate and timely information about the present and gaining installation, unit sponsorship training and family sponsorship in coordination with other ACSs.

Information is collected and maintained on at least 40 military installations.

Some of the specific services available prior to departure are: moving checklists, information on temporary quarters availability, marketing strategies for buying or selling a home, property management and financial planning for relocation.

The Consumer Affairs Financial Assistance Planning Program manager is Ann Pratcher. She provides pre- and post-move financial planning for service members and their families as part of the relocation process.

The program offers special counseling and assistance in consumer education and family budget matters.

Budget counselors are available to assist families in setting realistic financial goals and encouraging them to plan ahead and use their money wisely.

Pratcher is the coordinator for the second annual Financial Counseling Training Seminar for ACS financial counselors worldwide.

The seminar will be at Fort Benning July 30 to Aug. 3.

The ACS Relocation Assistance Center is the main center for information and referral.

It is the entry and exit point for all incoming and outgoing personnel for assessing relocation needs, providing comprehensive relocation information and learning how to manage the relocating process.

The modern, one-stop service-oriented center is designed to provide assistance, counseling and training in the areas of consumer awareness and money management.

As part of the newcomers inprocessing, Marsha Collins, program manager for relocation assistance, has developed a videotape to familiarize incoming families with the tri-community area.

The tape has information on schools, churches, cultural events, shopping, entertainment and housing.

This provides the kind of information needed to make the right decisions at an early date.

Counseling is provided for those seeking jobs, and help in writing resumes and completing application forms is offered.

Information is available on job vacancies, including Nonappropriated Fund and civil service jobs and community employment.

Other ACS services include welcome packets and a Military Installation Resource Library.

Questions regarding services for the handicapped, marital, juvenile or family problems, baby-sitters and such can be answered at one location.

Family Members With Special Needs Program, directed by Marcia O'Connor, provides cultural and recreational services for the handicapped.

Fort Benning is fortunate to be the only installation in the Army with a dedicated handicapped recreational program specialist.

Another way ACS welcomes those relocating was designed by Outreach Coordinator Debra Howell. Newcomers in the rank of specialist or below are welcomed to Fort Benning with a small plant as a token saying "We are glad you are here, and we want to make your move as pleasant as possible."

Other services provided by ACS include a worldwide information file linked to other ACS centers, newcomers' orientation, financial counseling, Family Member Employment Assistance Program, Family Advocacy Program, workshops on buying smart/selling smart, checkbook management, using credit wisely, planning PCS moves and assistance in employment opportunities.

Family Member Employment Assistance Program Manager Pat Sneed has negotiated with no-fee employment agencies in the tri-community area to initiate a program whereby family members could be tested on-site at the relocation center.

As a result, employment for family members is handled in a much more efficient and expeditious manner; in some cases, immediately after being tested.

ACS also has a comprehensive program for spouse and child abuse.

The program includes visual aids, handouts, instruction, workshops and training required at unit level to identify those families who have special needs.

The program focuses on awareness of all military families with social, psychological or environmental problems that result in increased stress and dysfunctional living.

The program not only provides an awareness of problems that exist, but prevention, identification, reporting, investigation and treatment of child and spouse abuse and other forms of domestic violence.

It protects victims and treats all family members affected by or involved in the abuse.

Army Family Advocacy Program Manager Becky Welch said she is excited about receiving $100,000 for fiscal year 1990 in Office of Secretary of Defense funds for the operation of the Spouse and Child Abuse Prevention Program.

In previous years, Fort Benning received about $35,000 for the operation of this program.

This money can only be used on the child and spouse abuse program. Plans are well underway for the use of this money.

Training will be provided to all units on post, section six schools, child development services, youth programs and all newcomers.

Assessments will be made to reach everyone at Fort Benning and make sure they understand all resources available to them.

"My philosophy is to make sure we take care of the soldier and his family," Welsh said. "We want everyone to know right up front what an excellent care program we have at Fort Benning."

Another program at ACS is designed to alert family members on the signs of depression and where to seek additional help if needed.

The theme this year is "Partners for Prevention." Fort Benning was the first in TRADOC to develop a family member suicide prevention program.

The goal of the Family Advocacy Program is to connect support programs and services to the individuals who need them most, to foster a sense of believing in the military community and to enhance readiness and retention.

During fiscal year '89, 24,113 personnel were trained; 20,749 at the unit level, 236 commanders and 3,128 family members.

Warmer weather brings hazards of being overdone by sun

Infantry Branch Safety Office

With warm and sunny days now upon us, it is important for individuals to recognize the dangers of overexposure to the sun.

The pleasant weather associated with spring and summer prompts activities involving exposure and can be spoiled by the painful effects of sunburn.

Sunburn, caused by the sun's ultraviolet rays, can be prevented by limiting the amount of exposure at the beginning of warm weather.

A daily dose of no more than 15 minutes, with gradual increases of five to 10 minutes, is usually sufficient to protect the skin from burning.

Once a protective tan has developed, exposure can be increased, but should be limited during the mid-morning to mid-afternoon period when the sun's ultraviolet rays are strongest.

During this period, persons engaged in outdoor work or sports should wear protective clothing and persons with light complexions should protect themselves with a sun-screening preparation.

Care should also be exercised when working or playing during cloudy days.

The ultraviolet rays are not at all screened out by the cloud cover and can result in radiation burns.

Consideration should be given to the kind of sun-screen that an individual selects.

Some preparations will not screen out the sun's ultraviolet rays very effectively, and some can be very costly.

Shop around for a preparation that will provide the needed protection at a reasonable cost.

Individuals may want to consult a physician before selecting a particular brand, since some may cause an allergic reaction.

To be most effective, these preparations should be applied according to the manufacturer's directions.

In addition to the effects of the sun on the skin, pay attention to the effects of overexposure on the eyes.

The effects of sunlight and glare can irritate the eyes and can be prevented by using sunglasses.

Activities in the sun can be fun, but they can be dampened by the effects of overexposure to the sun and glare.

Proper skin and eye protection can make your summer both safe and enjoyable.

Don't be the one who is overdone by fun in the sun.

DoD proposes separation pay for enlisted careerists

By Mary A. Peterson
American Forces Information Service

Should the services of enlisted careerists no longer be needed, Department of Defense wants to include thank you checks with the pink slips.

DoD is proposing a separation pay for enlisted personnel who are involuntarily separated after seven, but before 20, years of service.

The proposal offers active duty enlisted members what active duty officers in peacetime have been eligible for since 1947 and what Reservists have been afforded since the 1950s.

The concept could become policy on Oct. 1 if Congress approves it.

Severance pay would be only for those who are involuntarily separate. "If the individual chooses to voluntarily separate, there would be no money," said Army Lt. Col. Bill Carr, DoD's enlisted policy manager.

Also ineligible in the current proposal are service members who are denied reenlistment as a matter of policy, such as bars to reenlistment, or who are separated for substandard performance, misconduct or moral or professional dereliction of duty.

The secretary of defense and service secretaries determine entitlement in those cases, Carr said. As allowed in current separation pay policies, the secretaries can award the full amount, half or none, based on the individual's situation.

The proposed amount of severance pay for enlisted service members parallels the formula used for officers: 10 percent of the annual base pay times years of service.

If the plan is accepted as currently written, severance pay for an E-5 with nine years of service, for example, could be about $13,700, based on the 1990 pay table.

Separation pay for all ranks is not a new idea. During large force demobilizations, as happened after World War I and II and the Korean War, "mustering-out pay," "severance pay" and "readjustment pay" were available to service members leaving the ranks.

While DoD may not be facing as large a drawdown as occurred following those wars, the department is looking at some big strength reductions over the next few years.

Today, the enlisted separation pay issue is basically a matter of equity, Carr said.

"At issue is whether enlisted and officers gain a career expectation at similar points in time," he said. "In the all-volunteer force, the individual could gain a career expectation after about two enlistment periods — the seventh or eighth year of service.

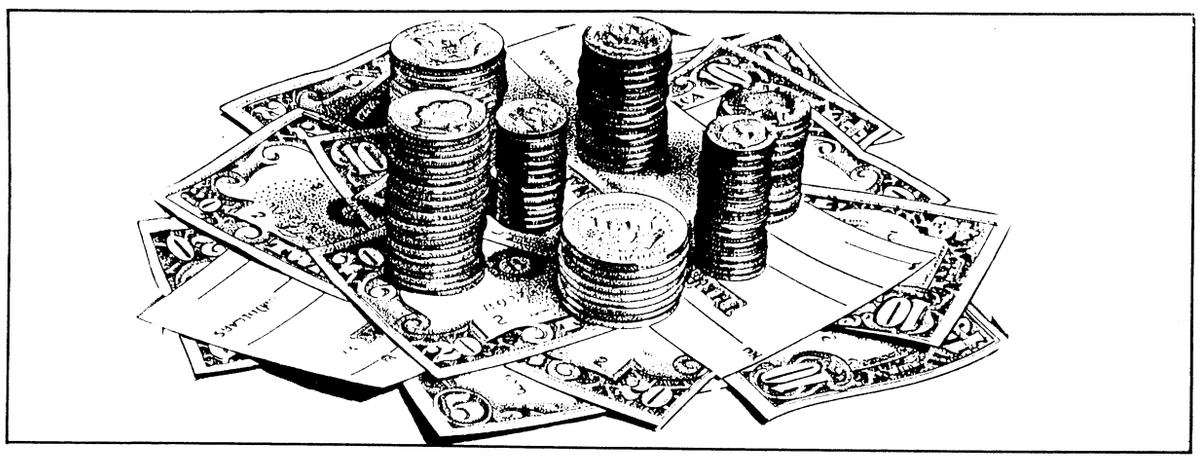
Separation pay is a contingency payment for an individual who is career-committed but denied a full military career."

Active duty officers serve until their career obligations are met and continue to serve until they choose to leave or are involuntarily separated.

Enlisted personnel serve for specific periods of time, reenlist, leave the military or are involuntarily separated.

Whether officer or enlisted, "each develops an expectation of a career and future. Therefore, our approach to compensation should be similar when those people advanced in their careers are not retained." Carr said.

"Currently, most officers leave active duty by their own choice — fewer than one-sixth are involuntarily separated; of those, two-thirds draw separation day."



Planners estimate that right now separation pay will affect relatively few enlisted careerists.

If a greater personnel reduction is required in a compressed period of time, numbers may rise.

The services are trying to reach their personnel reductions through early release programs and reduced recruiting objectives.

"In the future, the services may be asked to take a sizable reduction," Carr said.

If voluntary separations or fewer recruits can't achieve reduction objectives, the services may require involuntary separations.

Detailed plans have not been developed to implement involuntary separation programs.

The focus of the separation pay is on the "solid performer with a substantial career investment," Carr said.

"Those people should continue to work hard and perform well."

"Should they be asked to leave. . .they will be recognized for their sacrifices and those of their families."

Several states announce dates for primary elections

The following states have announced dates for their primary elections.

The Voting Information Center will provide recorded messages from candidates and other information concerning the states' elections.

Voters may call AUTOVON 223-6500 or commercial (202) 693-6500 to hear these messages 24 hours a day.

Voting assistance counselors may contact service voting action officers through the Voting Information Center.

Questions that cannot be answered locally may be referred to the Voting Information Center, Room 18457, Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301.

Nebraska

Nebraska voters will go to the polls May 15.

Soldiers and their family members may register and request ballots for the primary and general elections by submitting a completed Federal Post Card Application to the county clerk or election commissioner no later than the Friday before the election.

Ballots are mailed 35 days before the election and must be received by 10 a.m. the second day after the election.

Applicants must give party preference for the primary.

New Mexico

New Mexico will have its primary election June 5.

Soldiers and their family members need not register and may request a ballot by submitting a completed FPCA to the local county clerk no later than the Thursday before the election.

Ballots are mailed 40 days before the primary and 49 days before the general election.

Voted ballots must be received before the close of polls on election day.

FPCA's and ballot return envelopes must be witnessed and sworn to before a person authorized to administer oaths. The witness must include name and address on the FPCA.

Maine

Maine will have its primary election June 12.

Soldiers and their family members may register and vote by submitting an FPCA to the local registration official any time before the election.

Those requesting a ballot must list party preference.

Ballots are mailed about 30 days before the election.

Maine provides a special write-in absentee ballot 90 days before the election for military citizens and their family members who believe 30 days will not be sufficient time to receive and return the regular ballot.

Use special write-in labels found in the voting assistance guide or write in block 5 "remarks" of the FPCA, "I will be unable to vote by regular absentee ballot. I request a special write-in ballot."

Mississippi

Mississippi will go to the polls June 5.

Soldiers and their family members may register and request ballots by submitting a completed FPCA to the county registrar no later than 30 days before the election.

Those requesting ballots must list party preference or will be unable to vote in the primary.

The FPCA and affidavit on the ballot return envelope must be sworn to before a commissioned officer or person authorized to administer oaths.

New Jersey

New Jersey's primary is scheduled for June 5.

Soldiers and their family members may submit a completed FPCA to the county clerk to receive a full ballot. Mail early to receive a timely ballot.

A separate FPCA must be submitted for each election and party preference must be listed to vote in the primary election.

Ohio

Ohio voters will go to the polls May 8.

Ohio waives registration for soldiers and their family members. They may request ballots for all elections by submitting an FPCA to the county clerk no later than three days before the election.

Those requesting primary election ballots must provide party affiliation.

Ballots will be mailed about 35 days before the election and must be received by the close of polls on election day.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Mark A. Gomez
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I am going out of town, my wife suggested I get all my spending cash converted into traveler's checks.

Do you think this is necessary?

Your spouse obviously wants you to protect your spending money from theft while on your trip.

Purchasing traveler's checks is a good way to "insure" your money against theft.

Traveler's checks are easy to purchase. Most banks carry at least one brand or type of traveler's checks.

The companies that issue these checks guarantee their replacement if they are lost or stolen.

There are, however, several disadvantages to these checks.

The first drawback is that you must pay a small percentage of the total purchase price for these checks.

Sometimes you can get around the fee by belonging to organizations that get the checks free for their members.

Another disadvantage is if you try to cash the traveler's checks in a bank in another town, you may be charged an additional service fee.

The seemingly small fee suddenly becomes significant if you get charged twice (when purchasing the checks and when cashing them), especially if you are converting large amounts of money.

Lastly, not all merchants and businesses accept traveler's checks, whereas, cash is accepted almost everywhere.

Another alternative to cash is a credit card. There are several major credit cards accepted by most businesses, hotels and restaurants.

Most credit card companies provide immediate replacement if lost or stolen. Further, credit cards are regulated by federal law.

The Fair Credit Billing Act requires credit card companies to investigate all reported unauthorized transactions.

Credit card companies sometimes will voluntarily provide extra services that protect the consumer.

Many credit card companies will delete the purchase price of a defective item if you are dissatisfied with its quality or workmanship.

If you use your credit card to pay for a rental car, you may receive automatic life insurance while driving the car.

As you can see, credit cards have several advantages over cash and traveler's checks.

However, there is one big disadvantage to credit cards. Credit cards provide the consumer with easy purchasing power and undisciplined consumers may find themselves in financial difficulty.

If you substitute your credit card for cash when buying everyday goods, then you won't be able to take advantage of its protections when traveling.

Each of the above described forms of money has advantages and disadvantages, and seasoned traveler's use all three (cash, traveler's checks and credit cards).

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital will celebrate Medical Laboratory Week, Sunday through April 14, by showing videos and with posters and brochures.

"We want to demonstrate that the medical laboratory professional plays an important role in diagnosing and treating illness," said Capt. William H. Karge, the Laboratory manager at MACH.

The theme for this year is "Discover the Laboratory Professional — Advancing Health Care in the '90s."

This theme was chosen to increase public awareness of the significant contributions made by laboratory professionals to patient care and research.

Physicians depend upon laboratory test results to confirm diagnoses and to prescribe appropriate treatment.

"Many health problems begin slowly, without visible symptoms," said Dr. Dennis Hayden, chief, Department of Pathology.

"However, changes in blood, urine and body cells detected by laboratory tests, may identify a problem in time to take preventive action."

The MACH Laboratory will show video tapes during the week that will include a "behind-the-scenes" look at the world of laboratory professionals.

Visitors will see the sophisticated testing instruments used and learn more about the role of the laboratory staff in health care.

Mudcats open season tonight

By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

The smells of freshly cut grass, steaming hot dogs and popcorn fill the air.

There's the roar of the crowd, the boom of the public address system and the crack of the bat.

The smells, sights and sounds are unmistakable. It's opening day at the ballpark!

Today, with a scheduled 7:35 p.m. start, the Columbus Mudcats baseball team will open its 1990 Southern League season against the Greenville Braves at Columbus' Golden Park.

And it's CB&T Magnetic Schedule Night, which means every fan who passes through the turnstiles receives a free team schedule.

If you're in the military person or the spouse of someone who is, here's a chance for an inexpensive night out.

A box seat is $4, a general admission seat is $3 and senior citizens get in for $2.

Additionally, all military persons and children under the age of 12 can knock $1 off their ticket prices on non-promotional nights. Don't forget your military identification card!

Group prices are even cheaper. Groups of 25 to 99 pay $2 each and groups of 100 or more pay only $1.50 each.

The management said it will throw in all kinds of extras, too, such as announcing the group name over the public address system and offering the chance to throw out the first ball.

The promotional nights won't stop after this weekend, according to Mudcats General Manager Joe Kremer.

He said he discovered last year his highest attendance records came on promo nights, so he's scheduled many more this year.

Of course there will be bat, helmet and ball nights, but Kremer said he will be adding a few special ones, too,

Son's training brings memories for CSM

By Stephanie Delgardo
3rd Bn., 333rd Regt., 70th Div.

While at Benning, Command Sgt. Maj. McPhillips has had the privilege of seeing his son transformed from a civilian to a soldier — something few parents ever see.

During Basic Training, young men and women often face numerous changes in a very short period of time.

For some, the transition from civilian to military life is an uphill climb.

Constant changes and physical and mental strain are only some of the obstacles that need to be overcome.

For a few lucky individuals, there is the benefit of having a parent or close friend who has been through the tough cycle of becoming a professional soldier near to offer advice.

That was the case with Mathew McPhillips, a young private now attending training at the 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment here.

Not only was McPhillips raised in a military environment, but his father, Gerald McPhillips, is the command sergeant major of 3rd Battalion, 333rd Regiment, 70th Division (Training), from Flint, Mich.

With nearly 28 years service, Command Sgt. Maj. McPhillips was definitely qualified when he spoke to his son about becoming an Infantryman.

Since March 16, Command Sgt. Maj. McPhillips has been at Fort Benning for annual training with his unit at the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment.

While here, Command Sgt. Maj. McPhillips has had the privilege of seeing his son transformed from a civilian to a soldier — something few parents ever see or truly understand.

He admits that seeing his son in training brought back memories of his 1962.

"Today, One Station Unit Training, is professional, physical and mental," said Command Sgt. Maj. McPhillips. Over the years he has seen the evolution of the training environment, and he is confident Fort Benning will turn his son into a motivated Infantryman.

The senior McPhillips said he is very proud of his son and his decision to join the Army. Jokingly, he said, "In the past 27 years, I have never seen the same name tape as mine."

While in the Army, Pvt. McPhillips will be preparing for college and said he someday hopes to become a law enforcement officer.

Even though his father has had a long, successful military career, Pvt. McPhillips said he intends to take the path of Airborne Infantry.

"My motivation for the Airborne Infantry path is directly attributable to my Dad's guidance," he said with enthusiasm.

Retired LTC's 'pre-OCS' course gives students extra education

By Marilyn Balzarini
Infantry Training Center

More than 1,500 Officer Candidate School graduates who were assigned to the Infantry Training Center are grateful to Jack Damewood for the extra education that helped them complete the course.

These soldiers, known as "Damewood's Disciples," owe a great deal to the retired lieutenant colonel.

They have had the benefit of Damewood's years of experience, including two combat tours, one with the Fifth Special Forces and one as an Infantry company commander.

They have also had the advantage of his teaching experience. He spent four years as the Assistant Professor of Military Science at Auburn University from 1969 to 1973.

He is currently a teacher with the Hampton City School District in Virginia.

His willingness to share his knowledge and his genuine concern for soldiers are what make his "Pre-OCS Course" such a valuable tool for prospective officer candidates.

The week-long course includes map reading, land navigation and other skills that are sometimes tough for young soldiers.

"I'll definitely have an advantage over the other OCS students after attending Colonel Damewood's class," said Cpl. Jeff Pixler, a candidate who will attend OCS in September.

"He is a great teacher. In a week, he taught me to land navigate with confidence," Pixler said.

Damewood started the project in 1982 when he was the battalion commander of 8th Battalion, 2nd Infantry Training Brigade.

"When I first took command of 8th Bn., my driver was OCS bound." Damewood said, "I started working with him, and it just grew from there."

After leaving command, Damewood became the executive officer of the Infantry Training Center and subsequently retired in 1985, but he has continued to give his classes two or three times a year.

"I like soldiers," Damewood said. "I believe that professional junior leadership is important, and I want the OCS candidates from the ITC to do well because they represent the unit."

Traveling from Virginia is taking its toll. So has making arrangements to leave his civilian job.

While there is no replacing Damewood, a local volunteer would be a welcome addition to the program.

Retired Infantry officers who are interested in teaching soldiers, should contact the Infantry Training Center S-3, Maj. Esplin or Maj. Fagnon at 544-3021/3022.

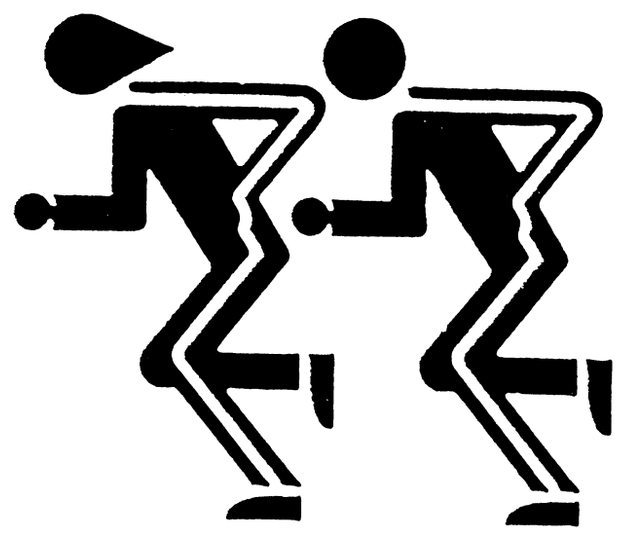
Museum run attracts 1,800



By John Robinson
Bayonet staff writer

More than 1,800 runners participated in the National Infantry Museum Run March 31.

The five-mile run, sponsored by Columbus Bank & Trust, Miller Lite, Diet Pepsi and Wendy's, threaded through main post, starting and finishing near Infantry Hall.

The race highlight came at the finish line as Lloyd McDonald, of Benning's Army Marksmanship Unit, set a new course record of 25:13, beating the previous record set by himself by one second.

According to Bill Hambay, of the Physical Activities Branch, the turnout was nearly 1,100 less than the last race in September 1988.

He attributed the low turnout to "poor lead time."

This is the time necessary to inform the public of the race, gain sponsorship, print t-shirts and the like.

"People were expecting the race in the fall and were geared up for a marathon. When one wasn't offered, they were very disappointed," said Hambay.

"The advertisements for the race were not out soon enough, and we'd only been taking applications six weeks prior to the race," he said.

He also said a shortage of personnel limited his ability to contact units on post.

Despite the last-minute preparations, Hambay described the event as "almost problem free."

"There were almost no complaints over the results, which is unusual. We usually get a lot of protests over the results," he said.

Hambay said he already has a meeting scheduled May 1 to prepare for next year's race.

"I think next year's race is going to be a big event," he said.

Biathlon, five-mile run April 21

Medical Department Activity and Dental Activity

A five-mile run and biathlon, sponsored by the Medical Department and Dental activities, will be at Fort Benning April 21.

Starting time for the biathlon is 8 a.m. and for the five-mile run, 8:30 a.m.

The biathlon consists of a five-mile run followed by a 30-mile bicycle ride.

The biathlon may be run individually, by a relay team or by a three-person team, in which all members complete both the run and the bicycle event.

The biathlon and the five-mile run are open to persons of all ages.

The course will be on paved roads and over scenic rolling hills throughout Fort Benning.

The five-mile run and the biathlon will start at Building 4 with the five-mile run starting 30 minutes later at the same location.

Shroud of Turin — real or fake?

Noted lecturer to give evidence

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

An ancient cloth believed by many to be the burial cloth of Jesus Christ, The Shroud of Turin, will be the subject of a presentation Good Friday at the TIC Chapel at 7 p.m.

The Shroud of Turin presentation will be given by Russell A. Breault, noted authority and researcher of the Shroud.

The presentation is a comprehensive and fully documented investigation comprised of a slide show, special stage lighting and dramatic narration.

Breault has personally researched the Shroud since 1978 and has conducted more than 200 lectures since 1980.

He has written a number of articles and has been featured on several television talk shows.

Breault will appear on the 700 Club on the CBN Family Channel at 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. Monday to discuss the Shroud.

Immediately following the 700 Club will be another documentary, The Mystery of the Sacred Shroud, which will be narrated by the late actor Richard Burton.

Some of the absolute conclusions of the Shroud of Turin Research Project and other research, according to program information, include that the man pictured on the Shroud was crucified in a manner consistent in every detail with the crucifixion of Jesus Christ as recorded in the Gospels.

The apparent blood stains on the Shroud are real human blood and the image is clearly that of a human being.

Another significant finding is the lack of body decomposition stains on the Shroud. Every other burial cloth in existence is covered with decomposition stains. (The gospels record that Jesus arose from death on the third day.)

This presentation is an annual event at Fort Benning. For more information, contact the Infantry Center Chapel at 545-2050.

Passover celebrates Israel's freedom

By Barry R. Baron
USAIC Jewish Chaplain

Passover, the Jewish festival of freedom, begins Monday evening.

Passover celebrates God's miraculous deliverance of Israel from slavery in Egypt.

The beginning of the festival is marked by the Passover Seder.

Seder combines a meal, history lesson and worship experience.

Special symbolic foods are used as visual highlights to retell the story each year at this time to fulfill the Biblical commandment.

"You shall tell your child in that day, saying: It is because of what the Lord did for me when I went out of Egypt (Exodus 13:8)."

Passover is an eight-day festival. During this period, Jews throughout the world reflect on the experience of suffering and the miracle of freedom.

As an aid to this reflection, Jews refrain from eating bread and other leavened products. Instead, they eat Matzah, unleavened bread — the bread of poverty and suffering.

By contrast, at the Seder, they feast lavishly in the style of nobility to remind themselves that freedom is a wonderful luxury.

Passover as a symbol of freedom, deliverance and defiance of oppression has always captured the American imagination.

The story of Passover inspired Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams when they proposed "Rebellion against tyrants is obedience to God" as the motto for the seal of the United States.

Almost a century later, a refrain of the spiritual calling for freedom from slavery began with "Go down, Moses," and ended with "Let my people go."

The Jewish community at Fort Benning will begin the Passover festival with a community Seder at 7 p.m. Monday in the Regimental Chapel, building 3220, at Sand Hill.

For more information, call the USAIC Chaplain's Office at 545-2608 or Rabbi Baron at 544-3269.

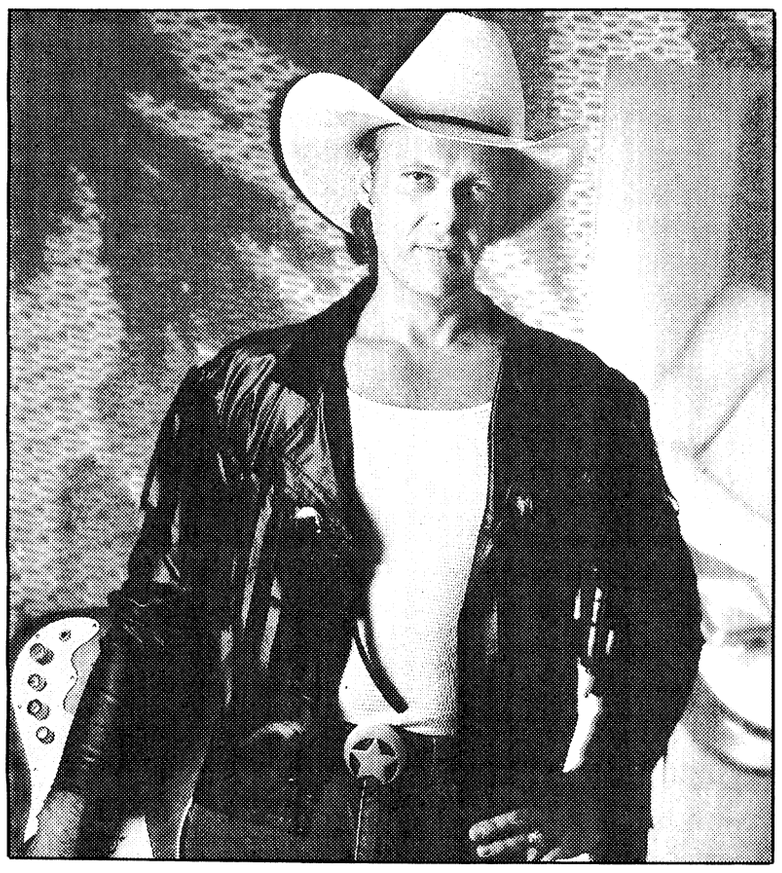
Country artist Ricky Van Shelton performs in Columbus April 14



Ricky Van Shelton

Evelyn Shriver Public Relations

Ricky Van Shelton, the Country Music Association's 1989 Male Vocalist of the Year, will perform at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium April 14 at 8 p.m.

Van Shelton, who is a platinum-selling recording artist, was the 1988 CMA Horizon Award winner and the 1988 Academy of Country Music's Best New Male Vocalist.

Wild-Eyed Dream, Van Shelton's debut album for CBS Records, was in the top 10 of Billboard's country charts for almost a year and produced three consecutive number-one singles — "Somebody Lied," "Life Turned Her That Way," and "Don't We All Have The Right."

Van Shelton's follow-up album for CBS Records, Loving Proof, spawned three hits — "I'll Leave This World Loving You," "From A Jack To A King," and "Loving Proof" — and the Top Five single, "Hoie In My Pocket."

Van Shelton has been acclaimed as one of the fastest-rising stars in country music.

Since April 1988, Van Shelton has garnered the following awards: Favorite Male Vocalist, Favorite Video, and Favorite Song.

From the TNN Viewer's Choice Awards, he won Top Male Vocalist, Best Album ("Loving Proof"), Best Single ("Ill Leave This World Loving You") and Best Video ("I'll Leave This World Loving You") from the Music City News Awards.

In 1987, Van Shelton was voted Best New Male Vocalist by the Academy of Country Music; Star of Tomorrow by the Music City News Awards and Favorite Newcomer by the TNN Viewer's Choice Awards.

His third album entitled RVS III has been certified gold and the first single, "Statue Of A Fool," shot straight to the top of the charts.

Tickets are $14.50 and are available at the door.

'Cotton Patch Gospel' opens tonight at Springer

Springer Opera House

The bluegrass musical "Cotton Patch Gospel," opens tonight at the Springer Opera House and will be presented on the main stage.

"Cotton Patch Gospel" is a musical that has broken attendance records across the country and is the longest-running play in the history of both Atlanta and Dallas theatres.

It tells the story of the life of Jesus, but set in modern-day, rural Georgia.

In the musical, Jesus is born the son of a carpenter in Gainesville, meets a country preacher named "John the Baptizer" on the banks of the Chattahoochee and delivers the Sermon on the Mount at Stone Mountain Park.

The Jesus figure is a spiritually endowed young teacher and preacher from Valdosta who faces circumstances, temptations, triumphs and church-state trials patterned on the New Testament accounts.

The music for the show is the last work of the late Harry Chaplin, the song-writer best known for his hits, "Cat's in the Cradle," "Wold" and "Taxi."

"Cotton Patch Gospel" runs today through Sunday and Thursday through April 14. Performances are at 8 p.m. with one 2:30 p.m. matinee Sunday.

Tickets are $10, $8 for seniors and students and $7 for groups of 25 or more. Reservations may be made by calling the Springer Box Office at (404) 327-3688.

TRAVEL

Dogwood trails highlight historic home tour

Americus-Sumter County Chamber of Commerce

"Dogwood Trails: A Tour of Historic Homes," Saturday and Sunday, will feature historic homes, century-old churches and southern gardens in Americus and Leslie, Ga.

Featured on both days of the tour will be the majestic Windsor Hotel, currently undergoing a massive renovation effort to return the structure to its turn-of-the-century splendor.

This showpiece of downtown Americus was completed in 1892 by the American Manufacturing and Improvement Company.

The Saturday tour will showcase seven historic homes and buildings in Americus, as well as five structures in Leslie.

Leslie is located 12 miles southeast of Americus.

Visitors can expect to find all of the best qualities of souther small-town life in Leslie, from quiet tree-lined streets to the true charm and southern hospitality of the residents.

Sunday's tour will feature a different group of eight structures in Americus, often called the "Gingerbread Town" because of its wealth of restored Victorian homes.

Downtown Americus, a Main Street City, has been recognized with numerous state-level awards for its historic preservation efforts.

Call Wendy Stokes, tour coordinator, at (912) 924-2646 for more information.

Tickets may be purchased on the day of the tour at the Lee Council House, 318 East Church Street in Americus.

Cost for a one-day ticket is $12.

Two-day, combination tickets cost $20.

Mudcats

such as the Silver Wings Parachute Demonstration Team, the 'Cats own "Muddy Nose" Night and two separate appearances by the "Famous Chicken," whose well known antics as the former San Diego (Padres) Chicken entertained major league fans everywhere.

In all, the 'Cats will feature 26 promo nights sponsored by local businesses. With 71 home games this year, that's more than one out of every three as a promo night.

Although the team is affiliated with the Houston Astros of the National Leagues' West Division, their opponents in the Southern League are affiliated with teams from the American and National Leagues, literally spanning the United States.

Last year's Mudcats sensation Eric Anthony finished the season with a .300 batting average and boasted 28 home runs and nearly 100 runs batted in.

It's a little known fact that the 'Cats set a new Southern League record last year. Their pitching staff went 44 and two-thirds innings without allowing a single earned run. With the minors limited to seven-inning games, that's more than six complete games without allowing an earned run.

The Mudcats Booster Club organizer Bob Wanninger and other area fans have vowed to help support the team in any way they can in an effort to keep the team in Columbus.

The Boosters, who plan to follow the team on the road, have already gotten part of their wish since current reports from North Carolina indicate the 'Cats could very well stay in Columbus through the 1991 season.

So come on out to Golden Park, down on Victory Drive beside the Municipal Auditorium, and enjoy a hot dog, a cold drink and some pro baseball action.

MPs return from Panama

The 988th Military Police Company returned to Fort Benning April 3, after completing a 120-day rotation in Panama, which was marked by unexpected involvement in Operation Just Cause.

The combat-tested soldiers, led by Commander Capt. Linda Bray, joined those who had arrived March 30 and stood in formation before family, friends and the post's command at Lawson Army Airfield.

Sporting the unit patch of the 193rd Infantry Brigade, to which they were attached for the operation, the MPs beamed with pride as words of praise were bestowed upon them by Deputy Commanding General and Assistant Commandant of the Infantry School Brig. Gen. William M. Steele.

"As American soldiers, you fought for democracy when your country called," he said.

Steele also read a letter from Chief of Military Police Maj. Gen. Charles A. Hines, which was addressed to the members of the 988th MP Co.

Hines congratulated the soldiers on a job well done and said they had "certainly earned the respect and admiration" of their fellow soldiers.

Fort Benning Provost Marshal Col. Fred Liebe also congratulated the MPs on accomplishing tasks with less than authorized strength despite having to adjust for constant mission changes and working at remote locations.

Steele and Liebe also thanked the spouses of the soldiers for their support during the deployment and the members of the U.S. Army Infantry Center MP Co. for the extra weight they pulled during the period.

In addition to picking up the slack for the absent 988th MP Co., the USAIC MPs also covered for the 197th MP Platoon, which was away much of the time with its parent unit, the 197th Infantry Brigade, at the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif.

The 988th MPs were not aware of impending military actions when they deployed in December. However, they were immediately thrust into a combat situation when Operation Just Cause kicked off just a few days after their arrival in Panama.

They guarded entrances and exits to the Cuban Embassy, within which many feared deposed dictator Gen. Manuel Noriega would seek refuge.

They provided security for Southern Command Commanding General Gen. Maxwell Thurman.

They also guarded prisoner of war and refugee camps and safeguarded ambulances and various VIPs who visited the combat zone.

In addition, in what Steele described as "one of the most famous and certainly most publicized combat operations in Panama," a platoon under the command of Bray secured the Panamanian Defense Force K-9 Headquarters.

All operations were carried out without 988th casualties, no serious injuries and a minimum of equipment damage.

After a 13-day block leave, the company will resume its police duties at Fort Benning.

Fort Benning selected to host pilot program

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison

Fort Benning is one of six installations selected for a Department of Labor pilot program to help members separating from the military prepare for civilian life.

Barbara A. Youngs, career assistance program manager at Retirement Services, said the first workshop here will begin May 15.

Although the program will be available to all military persons who are retiring or separating under normal circumstances, "The DOL transition program will be particularly helpful to military personnel who have to leave the service because of budgetary cutbacks," said Warrant Officer Jan Detker, assistant chief, Soldier Support Division for TRADOC's Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Administration and Logistics.
