POST BRIEFS

Fort Benning receives seat belt safety award

The Georgia Governor's Office of Highway Safety has placed the U.S. Army Infantry Center on the "70 Percent Plus Driver Safety Belt Use Honor Roll."

Representatives awarded the plaque to Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza in a brief ceremony last week.

According to Minuard C. McGuire, director of the Governor's Office of Highway Safety, Fort Benning is the lead organization to initiate driver safety belt use "competition" among Georgia's military installations.

McGuire commended Fort Benning on the outstanding safety belt usage rates indicated in February (85 percent) and March (90 percent) surveys.

He noted the statewide safety belt usage rate is 41.2 percent, and the rates the post has achieved are more than twice that amount.

Stop Loss list revised; 28 specialties deleted

The Stop Loss military occupational specialty list has been reduced by 28 specialties, say officials at the Personnel Command.

Soldiers in those specialties may leave the Army on their normal expiration of term of service date, if their units aren't involved in Operation Desert Shield.

Stop Loss applies to all enlisted soldiers assigned to Health Services Command, Military Traffic Management Command and most of those assigned to U.S. Forces Command and Central Command.

It limits separations of enlisted soldiers possessing a primary MOS in 21 designated career management fields. The original Stop Loss message said soldiers with a secondary or additional MOS in those CMFs would be extended as well.

MOSs that have been taken off the Stop Loss list for non-Desert Shield units are: 13C, 63B, 63G, 63E, 63N, 63W, 15E, 76Y, 21G, 43E, 43M, 39B, 77L, 41C,91J, 91L, 91N, 44B, 44E, 93F, 45B, 45N, 96R, 52F, 52X, 97B, 55G and 98K.

PERSCOM's "Stop Loss Hot Line" — autovon 221-0928, remains active for this and related issues.

SF enlistment open to prior-service members

Former members of the armed services are being encouraged to join the Army's elite Special Forces.

A new enlistment option allows persons with prior service to apply for Special Forces, regardless of their previous branch of service or military occupational specialty.

DoD lists recommended donations for soldiers

As the U.S. military build-up in the Persian Gulf continues, Department of Defense officials are hearing from individuals and companies wanting to donate gifts to American troops involved in Desert Shield.

The Defense Logistics Agency has received calls from generous citizens offering everything from umbrellas to ice cream.

A hot line is available for those wishing to donate items. Proposed donations must first be cleared through the hot line at (703) 274-3561. Donors must pay for shipping accepted items.

The following types of items are recommended for donations: hand-held computer games, electronic portable games, board and table games.

Also suggested: writing materials, including stationery, pens, Christmas and other holiday cards, sports equipment, sun visors, insect repellant, sun block and fitness equipment.

People with a gift in mind should check with the hot line first, rather than assuming an item is needed. All gifts of money are acceptable, and checks should be payable to the U.S. Treasury, annotated for Operation Desert Shield.

Officials await word on possible furloughs

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Civilian Personnel officials are waiting to see if the Department of Defense will furlough any Fort Benning employees as a result of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act, according to the post Civilian Personnel Officer.

"Basically, it's a waiting game," said Theresa Gunter, chief of the post's Civilian Personnel Office. "However, if the Department of Defense does decide to furlough employees, it will affect Fort Benning down the line."

She added that it will affect civilian employees at every level. The government isn't just seeking out employees here, she said.

In a memorandum to civilians dated Sept. 21, Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone stated the budget will substantially exceed the amount allowed by the GRH Act, which is the reason for the possible furloughs.

If the federal government does not approve a deficit reduction plan, all federal agencies must execute the GRH-mandated reductions, Stone said.

Expenditures will be cut whenever possible, but the cuts can't be absorbed without furloughs if a reduction is necessary, he said.

According to the Office of Personnel Management, a furlough is defined as placing an employee on temporary non-duty, non-pay status because of lack of work or funds.

Tom Glennon a staffing specialist for OPM said a furlough of 22 workdays or less is covered under adverse action procedures. He added that employees do have certain rights under these procedures.

Furloughs longer than 22 workdays are covered under reduction-in-force procedures, Glennon said.

Meanwhile, Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza assured employees in a recent civilian call that every effort will be made to minimize the impact of budget restrictions on the work force here.

Gunter and Cavezza stated that more information will be provided as it becomes available.

Benning receives award as area's largest employer of handicapped

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

For the 10th consecutive year, Fort Benning was commended as the largest employer of handicapped persons in Columbus in 1990.

The commendation came Sept. 28 at an award ceremony at the Columbus Iron Works Trade and Convention Center.

Columbus Mayor James E. Jernigan presented the award.

The post's top three handicapped employees — Bartholomew Gardner, Larry Thornton and Margaret Kambitz also attended the ceremony. Gardner is from the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, Thornton is from the Finance and Accounting Division, Directorate of Resource Management and Kambitz is from the Infantry Training Center.

Gardner is Fort Benning's top handicapped employee of 1990. Kambitz was the post's top handicapped employee last year.

The ceremony was in conjunction with the local observance of National Disability Employment Awareness Month.

Officials explain separate rations

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Callers to the post's Desert Shield Hot Line are confused about an article that ran in the Sept. 28 Bayonet about basic allowance for subsistence or separation rations, officials report.

Basic allowance for subsistence is separate rations, hot line officials said.

Due to the deployment of thousands of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield, many family members have questions regarding the deployed soldiers' pay and entitlements, officials said.

Basic allowance for subsistence is paid either directly in cash every payday, or indirectly in the form of meals provided in-kind by a dining facility.

Most single soldiers receive this allowance-in-kind instead of cash payments.

Enlisted soldiers with rank of sergeant first class and above, and all married soldiers and officers, receive a cash allowance for subsistence.

Soldiers deployed in support of Operation Desert Shield receive field rations or receive meals through a field messing facility. Therefore, their

CFC kicks off

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The Combined Federal Campaign began Monday on post with a kickoff at the Follow Me Golf Course clubhouse. Almost 100 people attended.

Post Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza made remarks lending his support to the campaign, as well as Chief of Staff John D. Fuller, and Paul Sanders, area chairman for the United Way.

"The event really went smoothly," said Capt. Tyrone Kirk, Fort Benning's CFC project officer. "There was a nice turnout, and everyone was really motivated."

The campaign presents an opportunity for federal employees to give financial support to over 100 charity and support organizations, Kirk said.

"This year's goal of $500,00 is lower than last year's goal of $565,000. The drop is due to the post's involvement with Operation Desert Shield and the deployment of a significant number of troops from the post," he said.

Each unit has designated a project officer, who has the campaign materials and listings of the agencies eligible for contributions, Kirk said.

Where are the smart soldiers?

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Hang around generals and colonels, and you'll hear them telling people how we've got the best Army ever.

They'll tell anyone who'll listen that the equipment is better, the troops better trained, and above all, just how smart we troops are — "Smartest soldiers I've seen in my 30 years in the Army," they say.

The generals and colonels are obviously hanging out with a different crowd than I am. I know there are smart soldiers out there — 94 percent of our new soldiers have their high school degrees.

I mean you've got to be smart just to get through basic training nowadays. You've got to be smart to figure out the weapons systems. And if you're in one of those mechanical outfits, you've got to be smart to put things together and keep them running. You've got to be smarter than the average dad at Christmas time who's trying to figure out how to put together his kids' "easy-to-assemble, no tools needed" toys.

So I know the smart troops are out there. I just want to know where. I want to meet a few.

The smart soldiers I hang out with drag Army surplus parachutes up local television towers, then jump off. Just how smart can they be? So far no one's been hurt or killed, but they're living on borrowed time.

The smart soldiers I hang out with tool into town, hit a few local bars, get tanked up, try to pick up babes, get the cold shoulder because of the way they're acting, feel dumped on, then drive back to post with a blood alcohol of .15.

MPs who're a lot smarter snatch 'em up and stick 'em in the cooler to dry out and wait for some sergeant or officer to come spring their butts.

Smart soldiers I hang out with think the PX is a big give away. They go in there, stuff their pockets with cans of chewing tobacco, then try and walk out without paying.

They end up in the same place as the drunks and get out the same way, when a sergeant or officer comes to get them.

The smart soldiers I hang out with get a two- or three-day pass, spend it in some motel room on Macon Road drinking in their rooms, shouting to chicks from the balcony and then playing games like who can demonstrate the best primary landing fall from their balcony or who can hold his breath the longest in the motel pool.

One soldier is still holding his breath. Only now's he doing it from inside a wooden box.

The smart ones I hang out with — the macho outdoors types — get tanked up on some lake or in a deer stand. They prove drunks don't float any better than sober folks and shoot themselves falling out of their tree stands.

The smart soldiers I hang out with think it's cool to save some pyros from field exercises to use in their backyards ... you know, impress the neighborhood with star clusters and arty simulators.

This time the sergeant or officer has to go downtown and bail them out of the local cooler. Hopefully all these playful, smart soldiers did was impress the neighborhood, not burn it down or blow some kid's hand off.

Smart soldiers I hang out with dispatch military vehicles out to themselves, then go joy riding. They have so much fun being brave and daring, they usually end up flipping the thing or finding out that a three-foot diameter tree is stronger than their vehicle.

What I want to know is where are all the smart soldiers the generals and colonels talk about?

I guess if I were smart, I'd drop the gang I hang out with and go look for some of those smart soldiers the generals and colonels are talking about.

It'd probably save my butt. Probably be the smart thing to do.

Most employees guilty of waste, abuse

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Every person who works for the government has been guilty waste, fraud or abuse at some time or another.

You don't believe me? Go home and take inventory. I'm willing to bet that there are at least a couple of ink pens floating around. Heck, I'm guilty of that.

Or what about those government notepads your kids are taking to school or the personal phone call made to make reservations for vacation.

Yup, technically every one of those examples could be defined as waste, fraud and abuse.

Don't worry, charges aren't going to be brought against you.

The government wants the big guys — the frauds who are making substanial amounts of money off the government.

What's crazy about the whole thing is government employees get paid by and pay their taxes to the same source they are robbing.

Of the three — waste, fraud and abuse — fraud is the worst.

Wasters and abusers are bad, and when an offender is identified as such, the consequences are not as great as they would be if he were brought up on charges of fraud.

According to Ted Craig of the Internal Review and Audit Compliance Office, waste and abuse can be controlled through better management.

That's not to say that waste and abuse should take a back seat to fraud. It's just that the crimes usually can be detected and resolved at a lower level.

For instance, an example of abuse could be using government tools to repair your car, driving a government vehicle to run a personal errand or having your driver chaffeur you to a personal function not associated with your position.

If a manager discovers these descrepancies, he can tell you what you've done wrong and hopefully you won't do it again. Reprimands could include a bad efficiency report or lengthy counseling session. Those usually do the trick.

The fraud, however, is an entirely different animal. He's crafty like a fox. The sly devil thinks he's beaten the system and probably has a constant smirk on his face. His dirty deeds include transferring funds, fudging paperwork or rerouting new equipment so it can be sold on the open market.

Servicemembers vow to support and defend the Constitution. Nowhere in that contract does it say it's open season on Uncle Sam's reserves.

Nor are civilians blameless. Even though they don't raise their right hand to support and defend, they have the same obligation to supporting the Constitution as do soldiers.

But they needed to be reminded of that fact once in a while.

If they were, perhaps the current investigation of a post worker wouldn't be taking place.

This employee's wrong-doing might cost him his career. It's estimated that his use of a computer for private enterprise cost the government more than six thousand dollars.

None of us make monstrous salaries, but most of us are worth more than six thousand dollars in the span of a career. So is it worth it. I don't think so and there is a way to do something about it.

This wrongdoing and others have resulted in a Defense wide promotion of the hot line to report this type of indiscretion.

Those red and white posters aren't there for decoration, and the Fraud, Waste and Abuse monster hasn't been lurking around the Bayonet for nothing.

It's all for a reason folks, so you better heed the warning signals.

These tough times are going to make the auditors even hungrier for perpetrators.

You can do your part. Locally you can call 545-3067 or autovon 223-5080 or toll free 1-800-424-9098. Every call is confidential. However, if you wish further anonymity write Defense Hot Line: The Pentagon: Washington, D.C., 20301-1900.

Keep Desert Shield support coming

By Michael B. Abrams

They're everywhere. No matter where you look, you can see yellow or red-white-and-blue ribbons.

They signify an intangible national resource in the person of thousands of deploying soldiers — active Army troopers and mobilized Guard and Reserve servicemembers.

With the ribbons and U.S. flags waving in the breeze, active-duty and reserve component servicemembers wave goodbye to their families and their friends. They're off on a long trip.

The soldiers and other servicemembers mobilized for Operation Desert Shield have a definite mission but an uncertain future. At the direction of President Bush, they're projecting the will and might of the American people.

From those left behind, another, unstated mission has been taken up throughout the country – they're mobilizing support groups and programs. Some business leaders are working with their citizen-soldier employees to continue various job benefits.

Americans also can provide direct support to the Desert Shielders. Defense postal officials have lifted certain mail restrictions for the Middle East. Many persons now are buying and collecting items that can be packaged and shipped to Desert Shield locations.

Before shipping "care packages," first write to intended recipients and ask them what they'd like to have from the states. Thanksgiving is coming up, as well as the other holidays, affording you only a little time to plan for these special periods of gift-giving.

Addresses of deployed units are easy to obtain. You need not personally know a Desert Shielder to send mail.

Most people probably already know (through the news media) that strict laws and rules govern what may and may not be shipped to Saudi Arabia.

Arab customs officials will confiscate pornographic materials, for example.

Restrictions also apply to alcohol and pork products. Letters and packages will help many deployed on Desert Shield. Those on the receiving end will have tangible proof that they can count on support from the American public. And the senders will experience the personal satisfaction of knowing they're contributing to the operation's continued success.

MP Corps Regiment celebrates 49 years

Military Police Activity

Since its establishment as a separate branch of the Army in 1941, members of the Military Police Corps have served with honor and distinction.

In peace and in war, the Military Police Corps has established a record of which its members can be proud.

The Military Police Corps' official birth date is Sept. 26, 1941. This date marks the establishment of the military police as a permanent combat support element, operating during peace and war.

However, military police were intermittently part of the Army as far back as 1778 when a resolution of Congress established a "provost" in the Continental Army.

The Fort Benning Military Police Activity observed the Corps' 49th birthday by hosting its annual MP Anniversary Ball at the Officers' Club on Sept. 15.

The theme of this year's celebration was the "Military Police of the 1990's." Over 180 persons attended this year's event.

The guest of honor and speaker was Maj. Gen. Charles A. Hines, commanding general, U.S. Army Chemical and Military Police Centers and Fort McClellan, Ala.

LETTERS

Reader offended by letter from 'Proud NCO's Wife'

The tone of the letter from "A proud NCO's wife" (Sept. 28 Bayonet) was offensive to me. It felt like a kick in the stomach.

I'm glad that the writer is able to deal well with the extra challenges the separation from her husband in Korea presents. The fact that she is doing okay does not excuse her from having compassion for those who are not doing so well.

Perhaps this woman's family had the benefit of more than a 10-day notice to make plans for the long separation. Most Desert Shield families did not have that luxury.

I'm also glad that the "Proud NCO's wife" can deal with "tight" finances by buying Kool-Aid instead of soda. Some folks are not so lucky. They are choosing between bread and milk.

I know many Desert Shield wives who are "dealing with" the stress and worry and heartache of this deployment. None are having a "pity party."

The wives I know are keeping tabs on pregnant wives, planning fundraisers for a children's Christmas party and struggling with life's everyday problems.

They are doing the best they can to be sisters to each other and both father and mother to their children.

The last thing we need is to read a letter that minimizes what we are going through.

Spencer High parents want others to get involved

The school year has gotten off to a good start at Spencer High School. We are expecting this year to be our best ever. In order to continue our successes, we need parents' support.

Seventy percent of students enrolled at Spencer High School come from Fort Benning.

Last year, more than 600 letters were sent to Fort Benning parents asking them to join the Parent Teacher Student Association. Very few parents responded. The teacher membership outnumbered the parent membership.

It is frustrating to see the Spencer Auditorium half filled with parents when there is a program put on by our students.

It is essential in these times that we support our students in every way. Their school life should be the number one priority in our lives.

We need parents to visit classrooms and see the quality of teaching going on. We need volunteers in the library, main office and the guidance department.

We desperately need the parents of our athletes to support the athletic program whether we win or lose. We need equipment for our teams.

We should have the best athletic program in Muscogee County, but we are lagging far behind.

Last, but not least, we need every parent who has a student at Spencer High School to be a member of the PTSA. Your membership fee will go toward a gift to the school at the end of the year that will benefit all of our students.

The quality of life at Spencer High School can be the best in Muscogee County.

Muscogee County tends to forget about Spencer because they (school district personnel) feel that the military takes car of their own.

Fort Benning parents, we challenge you to help make Spencer High School the best that it can be.

Open House at Spencer High School will be Tuesday at 7 p.m.

For further information, call the school secretary at 682-1630 or the membership chairperson at 685-0694.

MESSAGES

Make your home safe from dangers of fire; look for hazards

The week beginning Sunday marks Fire Prevention Week.

It is sponsored every year by the National Fire Protection Association to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education.

Fire Prevention Week was proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871.

The Chicago Fire killed 250 people, left 100,000 homeless and destroyed more than 17,400 buildings.

I urge military and civilian personnel to help your fire department during Fire Prevention Week and all year long by keeping your homes and community as safe as possible from the dangers of fire by following this year's Fire Prevention Week theme "Make your place fire safe — Hunt for home hazards."

It is important that you and your family know how to detect and eliminate fire hazards in the home and to always be fire conscious.

The Fort Benning Fire Department has scheduled several events during this week to emphasize the importance of fire prevention to include displays at the Fort Benning Mall and Building 4, Puppet Shows at all post schools and "Open House" at all Post Fire Stations.

What can you do to protect yourself and your family from a home fire?

Plan a family walk-thru of your home, making sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire and what kind of dangers to look for.

You can take "positive action" to protect your family from suffering serious injury or death by locating fire hazards, eliminating the hazards and being prepared in case of fire.

Holiday weekend signals safety alert for soldiers

Columbus Day, Monday, will provide a three-day weekend. This signals a special need to alert all personnel to the ever present, real threat of traffic accidents.

Our most effective weapon against traffic accidents is our continual concern for the safety of every soldier. Pre-holiday orientations by commanders on personnel safety should stress these positive actions:

- Viewing vehicle operation as a hazardous activity.
- Ensuring soldiers do not drive too far for the three days.
- Concentrating on alert and sober driving.
- Traveling slower when weather impairs driving.
- Observing all traffic laws, including the posted speed limit.
- Requiring the use of seat belts.
- Yielding to the less proficient driver.

Have an enjoyable, relaxing holiday and a safe return.

Hospital's newly renovated emergency room opens today

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

The $800,000 renovation of the Emergency Room at Martin Army Community Hospital has been completed and a ribbon cutting ceremony will be today at 11:30 a.m. at the hospital.

Hospital officials say the Emergency Room is much more efficient, attractive and will offer patients more privacy. The changes are noticeable as soon as one enters the emergency entrance. There is a larger waiting area, much brighter than the old one due to new lighting, new furniture, and a more open floor plan.

The treatment area is restricted; patients stay in the waiting area until called to the back. The new nursing station is back to back with the reception desk so a nurse is immediately accessible for true emergencies.

The nursing station is larger than it was before and there is now a separate area for physicians to use the telephones and write in medical records. The enlarged, two bed trauma room is immediately inside the ambulance entrance and there is a separate cardiac room. In the old ER, one room doubled for both and had only one bed. There is also an obstetrics and gynecology room and a cast room.

Each treatment area has improved lighting that can be dimmed when patients are not being examined. There is also a "service column" in each room, a panel that contains connections for gases, air, vacuum, electricity, a nursing call system and a staff telephone. All areas are connected to an intercom system to reduce response time in emergency situations. A bathroom for handicapped persons has also been added.

All of these renovations add up to a larger, brighter, more efficient working area for the staff and will permit a smoother flow of patients, more privacy for patients, and increased patient satisfaction.

Maj. General Carmen J. Cavezza will conduct the ribbon cutting ceremony. The public is invited to tour the new facility.

Illegal computer use constitutes abuse

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Are Fort Benning computers being used as intended?

If not, it could be constituted as waste, fraud and abuse as in the case of a post civilian employee.

According to the office of the Provost Marshall, a post employee is currently under investigation for using a technical drafting computer which belonged to the government to draft reports for a privately owned business in Columbus, Ga.

Officials estimate a loss of $6,936 to the government.

Ted Craig, Internal Review and Audit, defines intentional or improper use of government resources as abuse.

Incidents such as the one recently discovered here is just what the Department of Defense is trying to prevent through the latest campaign promoting the Defense Hot Line.

The posters promoting the hot line are easy to spot because of the bright red and white design.

Listed on the poster is pertinent information for those wishing to report suspected fraud, waste or abuse.

In a recent memorandum, Secretary Of Defense Dick Cheney noted that this program is supported by the president.

Anyone wishing to use the hot line is reminded that their identity is fully protected.

To report waste, fraud and abuse, call toll free 1-800-424-9098, autovon 223-5080, locally 545-3894 or write Defense Hot Line, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C., 20301-1900.

Infantry chief updates to provide timely info

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Chief of Infantry Update will become a permanent section in the Infantry magazine to provide a more efficient and timely method to communicate with soldiers in the field.

Chuck Gantner of Unit and Training Branch, Training Division, Directorate of Training and Doctrine, suggested this action to save time and money.

According to Gantner, although a personal note to commanders from the chief of Infantry may be appropriate occasionally, it's not necessary when a professional Infantry journal is available as a vehicle to communicate with soldiers in the field.

"The Infantry magazine is the infantryman's professional journal and will gain further credibility, recognition and focus with the addition of the Chief of Infantry Update," he said.

Gantner added this collaboration comes at a time when budget cutters might want to make a case to eliminate the Infantry magazine.

When many of the post's major commanders were asked to comment on the idea, they decided that Gantner was on the right track.

"This shows that Total Quality Management ideas really do work," Gantner said.

U.S. Postal Service corrects problems

Benning soldiers in Saudi Arabia now receiving mail

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Problems with the mail have been alleviated for Fort Benning soldiers in Saudi Arabia, according to Army officials, in spite of the many rumors and questions that have surfaced in relation to the subject.

The route that the Fort Benning mail takes to get to Saudi Arabia is a fairly simple one, said Columbus Postmaster Jerry D. Brown.

"The mail from Fort Benning is sent here to the main Columbus post office. From here, it goes directly to New York, where the Military Postal Activity receives it. It is then distributed according to APO (Army Post Office) number," he said.

Officials from the Military Postal Service Activity in Washington, D.C., said they are confident that earlier problems with mail getting to the troops have been corrected and service members participating in Operation Desert Shield are now receiving their mail.

In regards to sending packages to soldiers in Saudi Arabia, there are certain articles that are restricted from being shipped or brought into the kingdom of Saudi Arabia.

These include: alcoholic beverages of any kind, narcotics, weapons or explosives (without proper permit), pork or pork products, pornography and material contrary to the Islamic religion.

All video tapes sent to Saudi Arabia are being reviewed by Saudi customs.

Educational services free to soldiers

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Many commercial educational services or products are available free to service members through their local library or education center, according to Fort Benning's Education Services officer.

Charles D. Fritts said several commercial companies actively market educational services or products on military installations. In many instances, services members already have access to the same, or similar, services or products free of charge through the library or education center, Fritts said.

"Some companies will offer educational services, such as evaluations of educational experience and military experience related to education–for a fee. What some soldiers and family members don't know is that those same services are offered at the education center free of charge. Members of the community need to be aware of such opportunists," said Fritts.

There are several on-going marketing efforts which give the false impression the company's representative is associated with the government, said Fritts.

BAS is stopped whenever a soldier deploys on field exercises or similar types of operations of greater than 14 days' duration where he receives meals through a field messing facility.

According to Lt. Col. Joe Zehnder, chief of the Compensation and Entitlements Branch in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, the Army did not make this policy; federal statute defines the circumstances when soldiers are eligible for BAS. Any change would require a mandatory legislation.

"There's a common misconception that BAS is part of a soldier's pay and should not be stopped. That's wrong. BAS is an allowance. It's meant only to defray the soldier's normal food costs; when meals are provided to the soldiers, they're not entitled to draw their BAS."

Quarters-cleaning policy updated

Army News Service

Soldiers and their families in the continental United States facing the prospect of complying with the Army's quarters-cleaning policy have some relief in store.

"The CONUS policy and standards have been revised to provide some relief to those persons vacating quarters," said Connie M. Lotfi. She works in based Engineering and Housing Center of the Office of the Chief of Engineers.

"Basically, white glove inspections no longer will be made. And families will not have to clean areas in and outside the quarters that are scheduled for maintenance or repair, she said.

"For example, if your quarters are scheduled for whole-house renovating, you'll have to clean or wipe down only accessible parts of appliances, and to police the outside areas."

Lotfi said that the updated minimum cleaning standards will require soldiers leaving quarters to perform the following tasks:

- Dust, sweep and vacuum interior areas.
- Remove excessive dirt, stains and calcium deposits from interior surfaces and fixtures.
- Clean accessible portions of appliances.
- Care for assigned grounds.
- Replace light bulbs, and do such simple preventive maintenance as replacing government-funded furnace and air-conditioning filters.
- Remove excess grease and oil on driveways, carports and garages.

Besides these basic requirements on the part of quarters occupants, the revised policy places some new responsibilities upon installation commanders.

"They'll have to assure that incoming occupants receive quarters in an excellent condition," Lotfi said.

"This level of acceptability would have to apply both to maintenance and cleanliness of the unit.

"The maintenance and follow-on cleaning necessary to make units ready for the next occupant will be done by the installation. This work will be determined during the pretermination inspection to relieve occupants of any unnecessary cleaning requirements."

She said that the new minimum standards reflect those upon which original occupancy was accepted — "but also consider fair wear and tear and scheduled change-of-occupancy maintenance and repair, depending on the amount of such work required."

Occupants, she said, should be guided by the principle that prevails in private housing of similar type and value: "The tenant shall be responsible for routine maintenance, minor repair, operation and housekeeping."

The start of the new fiscal year brings a congressionally mandated change in the "quarters cleaning initiative," Lotfi said. "As of Oct. 1, the initiative no longer will be authorized in the 48 CONUS states. Congress had found that no savings were being realized by CONUS application of the initiative — the savings being a condition for continuing the initiative.

"Even so, since savings from granting of temporary lodging allowance are being realized overseas, the QCI will continue at locations where the allowance is authorized," she said.

She defined the quarters cleaning initiative as "having government-contracted cleaners perform most of the cleaning chores previously expected of the occupants."

Soldiers to provide custody, control at corrections facility

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Corrections Company, which is part of the Military Police Activity, and the USAIC Regional Corrections Facility, were activated Tuesday in a ceremony at the facility.

Company soldiers will provide custody, control and correctional treatment of military prisoners at the facility for Department of Defense installations located in the entire southeastern United States, according to 1st Sgt. Roy L. Taylor, first sergeant of the newly-formed company.

"The facility's population capacity could range from 122 prisoners during standard conditions to 252 prisoners in emergency conditions," he said.

The facility maintains an interservice support agreement to confine Marine and Air Force prisoners as well.

The facility consists of five buildings located inside the compound. Included are a chapel, dining facility, work employment shop, library and medical dispensary.

A minimum security barracks to house temporary parolees is located outside the main compound.

The population consists of pretrial, post-trial and casual status prisoners. Post-trial prisoners may be confined at the facility for up to three years, under the new Department of Defense correctional plan, said Taylor.

"Our new company will continue to uphold the tradition to provide support and dedication to excellence," he added.

Legal Assistance reduces services

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Legal Assistance Division has reduced its range of services effective immediately, officials say.

Capt. Howard O. McGillin Jr, chief, Legal Assistance Division said Operation Desert Shield support has forced the Legal Assistance Office of the Staff Judge Advocate to reduce its range of services.

Effective immediately, the Division is implementing a series of changes to ensure full support for deploying soldiers and the maximum possible support for those remaining in the Fort Benning area, McGillin said.

The Georgia Bar Association has initiated a program that will take up some of the workload that the post Legal Assistance Office can no longer provide, he said. The association has gathered names of attorneys in the area who are willing to work for free to assist soldiers and family members who have simple legal problems.

Soldiers wishing to take advantage of this program should contact the Legal Assistance Office for further information. Legal Assistance personnel will contact the Bar Association to have a lawyer assigned to assist the soldier, he said.

McGillin added that effective immediately, the Legal Assistance Division will only provide advice on adoptions, guardianships, bankruptcy and probate. Matters requiring court representation in these areas will be referred to the Georgia Bar for assistance he said, and the Legal Assistance Division will only schedule appointments for a maximum of 10 working days in the future.

"If a soldier wishes to see an attorney sooner, he or she will also be referred to the Georgia Bar," McGillin said. "Services in divorce and separation will be limited to providing advice and providing separation agreements when the couple already agrees on property division and support obligations."

McGillin said one common problem that the division faces is a high no-show rate for appointments. "If a soldier or family member cannot make it to an appointment, he or she should call Legal Assistance at 545-3281 to cancel the appointment," he said. Currently about 20 percent of our clients miss their appointments without calling, he said.

If a soldier or family member needs to cancel an appointment, Legal Assistance can schedule someone else to fill that time slot. McGillin added that if a client is more than 10 minutes late for a scheduled appointment, he or she will be recorded as a no-show, and the time slot will be given to a walk-in client.

Those individuals who cannot make an appointment but desire to see an attorney may come to the office and be placed on a walk-in list. Generally, walk-ins should be for pressing legal problems, McGillin said. Priority for walk-in service will be given to soldiers preparing for deployment and family members of deployed soldiers, he said.

"As soon as the mission requirements allow, full service will be restored," McGillin said.

Nestled near the swamps of Florida's Eglin Air Force Base is a battalion from Fort Benning's Ranger Training Brigade.

Soldiers from the 6th Btn., RTB are stationed at Camp James E. Rudder to instruct and support the "Florida phase" or third phase of Ranger School.

During a recent class, ranger students spent about two weeks there learning about raids, ambushes, movement to combat at platoon level, amphibious operations and riverine operations, said Maj. Mike Fuller, brigade operations officer.

During the school, the students are under a tremendous amount of stress because of sleep and nutrition deprivation.

Ranger School, which is 62 days long, has four phases, he said. The first phase is taught at Fort Benning.

Phase two, or "mountain phase," is taught at Dahlonega, Ga., while the final or "desert" phase is at Dugway Proving Ground, Utah.

Soldiers gear up for race

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers for Fort Benning's Army 10-miler male and female teams have been selected and are preparing for the Oct. 14 race in Washington, D.C.

The team members were selected in a time trial race Sept. 29 according to Donald Plotner of the post Physical Activities Office.

"I was surprised at the turnout," he said. "In light of the present situation with the Far East, I anticipated fewer runners."

Plotner said this is the fourth year the men have participated in the race and the third time for the women.

"Last year, the women's team brought home the active duty team trophy," he said.

Plotner added that two of the runners from last year will again be representing the women's team — Ann McDonald and Susan Davis. The other runners have since changed duty stations.

"Two members of the men's team are also returning for a repeat performance," he said.

"Lloyd McDonald will be representing Fort Benning for the fourth time and Douglas Davis will be running for the third time.

Plotner said the team will arrive in Washington D.C. Oct. 13 and return Oct. 14 after the race.

Women's team members are: Ann McDonald, Susan Davis, Teci Thompson, Florencia Rogers and Kristian Alexander.

The men's team consists of: Michael Dolan, Lloyd McDonald, Sean Drake, Douglas Davis, Clemmie Jones and Gregory Charles (alternate).

Annual biathlon ends Saturday

Jekyll Island Authority

As the final event in a series of annual athletic competitions, the Fifth Annual Jekyll Island-Bud Light Biathlon will be Saturday. Beginning at 9 a.m. at the Beach Deck on Beachview Drive, the event will consist of a 5-kilometer run followed by a 40-kilometer bicycle race and another 5-kilometer run.

"The first leg of the event will be a beach run," said Martha Cox, Jekyll Island Authority race director. "That will be followed by a bicycle race, then a second run to the finish line on the bicycle path along the beach," she said.

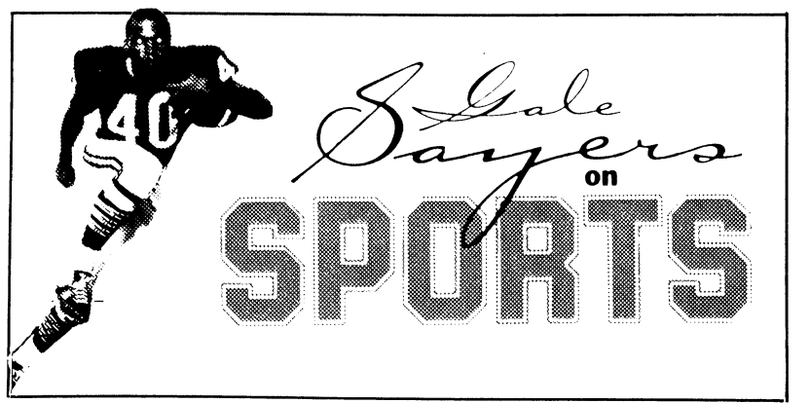
Ten men's divisions from age 19 and under to age 60 and over and eight women's divisions from age 19 and under to age 50 and over will participate. Helmets are required during the bicycling portion of the event.

Participants may register the morning of the event from 7:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. in the Jekyll Island Recreation Center lobby.

Men's and women's overall winners will receive plaques and the first three finishers in each age division will receive trophies. Each participant will receive a T-shirt.

The event is part of the Jekyll Island-Bud Light Triathlon/Biathlon series which included the Mini Triathlon in August and the Triathlon in September.

For more information, call the Jekyll Island Recreation Department at (912) 635-2232.



Coaching in the NFL

Who are the best head coaches in the NFL? It's a question that football fans love to debate and, honestly, it's one they don't know exactly how to answer.

Often people judge coaches by Super Bowl and playoff appearances and by how many games they won over the course of their coaching careers. I prefer to look at specific seasons or instances where I think a coach has done or is doing a great job.

Right now, I think the most innovative coach in the NFL is Sam Wyche of the Cincinnati Bengals. I'm not saying that he has a sharper mind than anyone else; it's just that he has thought of new ways to play the game. When Wyche came out with the no-huddle offense, it took everyone by surprise. As far as I can see, if you have the players to run it, it's an outstanding offense, and it's exciting to watch.

I also think that Wayne Fontes is doing a great job with the Detroit Lions, but his great talent so far has been hiring gifted assistant coaches. The Lions have become a real threat with their potent run-and-shoot offense, engineered by his assistant Mouse Davis. Fontes is a good example of the kind of coach who lets his assistants do about 85 percent of the work. They are the ones down in the trenches, so they are the ones who design the game plans. Fontes sees his job as that of a motivator and overseer of the assistant coaches' work. But it's because he is a good manager of his assistants that Fontes is developing a reputation as a talented coach.

There are several coaches still active in the NFL who are sure to be remembered as some of the game's greatest ever. Chuck Noll led the Pittsburgh Steelers to four Super Bowl victories in the 1970s. They had a lot of great players on those '70s teams, but I'm almost more impressed with the way Noll got his team into the playoffs last year with much less talent.

In Miami, Don Shula keeps the Dolphins going after years and years of success. The last few seasons have been mediocre for the Dolphins, but at the start of this season, Shula was just 41 wins away from being the "winningest" coach in NFL history. I'm sure he wants to break my old coach George Halas' record of 325 wins. I think Shula's big problem now is lack of quality players. Not to put down Minnesota's Jerry Burns, but if Shula had the players that the Vikings do, he'd be back in the Super Bowl in no time.

Out in San Francisco, George Seifert stepped right into Bill Walsh's shoes last year and guided the 49ers to another NFL championship. Is Seifert a great coach? I'm not sure yet, because when you think of San Francisco, you think of Montana, Rice and Craig — not the coach.

Not to be hard on Seifert. Coaches have never come into the game and made a great tackle or thrown a long touchdown pass. In my eyes, it's the personnel on the field who are going to make the difference in the final score.

Professional fishing isn't relaxing

By Earl Bentz & Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

If you think bass fishing is a quiet, contemplative, and relaxing way to spend a Saturday afternoon, you probably haven't fished any professional tournaments lately.

"Professional tournament bass fishing today is as physically and mentally demanding as anything I've done," said former world champion Charlie Reed, who with his wife, Voljai, travels as much as 45,000 miles annually to fishing tournaments.

"The sport has grown to the point now the competition is so keen you have to stay sharp or you'll get left far behind," continued the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member. "There are a number of anglers who are actually fulltime bass tournament pros, and the skills they've developed are remarkable.

"Tournament fishing has little resemblance to pleasure fishing today, even though that's how it started."

Reed, now in his early 50's, is one of the older pros who competes regularly, and to do so he follows a strict sleep and exercise schedule that helps both mentally and physically.

"I think proper rest is crucial," explained the Johnson pro. "If you don't get enough sleep, you can't fish efficiently, nor can you make clear decisions. You can go without food for a long time, but you can't go without sleep, regardless of what type of business you're in.

"I try to get at least eight hours of rest each night. That means sacrificing social time with other anglers in the evenings, but I just can't fish if I don't get enough sleep.

"When we fish a national tournament, we have three full practice days, followed by three full competition days. You can live on adrenalin and excitement for one or two of those days, but then you have to get some rest. I see a lot of inexperienced tournament anglers begin to lose concentration after a couple of days, simply because they're losing too much sleep."

Reed also exercises regularly, generally performing stretching exercises each morning and walking whenever possible. Occasionally he exercises with light weights, but he does not do long-distance jogging.

"Fishing the way we do provides quite a bit of exercise," explained Reed, "especially since we stand all day. I believe the best preparation for that type of activity is a regular schedule of calisthenics."

Reed also pays careful attention to his diet, and suggests others wanting to fish and long professional tournaments do the same.

"I enjoy a good breakfast," says Reed, "but I don't eat anything while I'm actually fishing. I drink a lot of water to keep from becoming dehydrated, and I eat a lot of salads at night, rather than a heavy meal.

"The hardest things, physically, about a tournament are the long hours out in the weather. You lose sleep, and then you stay out in the hot sun, the rain, or the cold for eight or 10 hours, and you do this day after day.

"It takes a toll on you and you have to prepare yourself if you plan to keep doing it."

Center offers parenting class

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

"Wanted: Parents Who Want to Learn How to be Better at Parenting"

The title of the brochure recommending an active parenting course may strike a cord or two with anyone who has children.

A free noon-time class dealing with this subject begins Oct. 17 at the Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza.

When people find themselves wondering, "why is parenting so hard," it may be time to search for a better understanding. Parents appreciate peace of mind when they know they are acting and reacting affectively to their children.

The most important reason for examining your role as a parent is for the sake of our children, our precious gifts.

Parenting is extremely difficult and often thoroughly frustrating, says the experts. Sometimes it seems that nothing "works."

Active Parenting facilitators believe that most parents have sufficient love and commitment to parent well, but they lack sufficient information and skills. Basically, they were never taught how to parent.

Striving to make parenting as rewarding as it is challenging, parents are urged not to give up.

The course was created to help parents teach children to give and take responsibility, act cooperatively, and face challenges with courage and confidence.

Active Parenting offers success where traditional authoritarian methods and more recent permissive methods have failed. Workshop supporters boast: "97 percent of parents completing an Active Parenting Course recommend it to other parents."

Some of the questions parents may find themselves searching for the answers to include:

- What is the difference between punishment and discipline?
- How can I communicate with my children?
- Why do I feel like such a failure as a parent?
- Why don't I get any respect?
- How does a good parent get better?

Thousands of parents have completed this course — parents who are sincerely searching for innovative ways to raise content and responsible children.

Active Parenting is from noon to 1:30 p.m. Oct. 17 through Nov. 21. To register, call the Family Life Center, 545-1760/5301.

Changing familiar perspectives can give fresh ideas, restore faith

By Chaplain Richard L. Pace
The School Brigade

A few days ago, I flew over Northeast Atlanta in a helicopter at a relatively low altitude for the first time. I am very familiar with that area of Atlanta because I have lived there for several years and had visited several times previously.

But, viewing from the air what was well known to me on the ground, gave me a totally different perspective of my old stomping ground.

As I was attempting to identify known landmarks, I was surprised to see something I had never known was there. Right in the heart of metropolitan Northeast Atlanta is a huge rock quarry. Since the quarry is dug into the ground, you would never notice it from ground level. But from 2,000 feet in the air, it stands out like a big dent in a new car.

So often we forget that as individuals we view life from a very limited perspective. Undoubtedly there are many things right under our noses that we never know are there simply because we don't see them. But if we could view this world from an elevated perspective, let's say, from God's viewpoint, I'm sure we would be surprised at what we could see.

For example, from our perspective we look at the crisis in the Persian Gulf with uncertainty. We don't know what is going to happen and we don't know how long our loved ones and friends are going to be there.

No amount of intelligence can tell us what is going on in the mind of Saddam Hussein. This uncertainty causes us to prepare for all possible contingencies while at the same time it produces a higher than normal level of anxiety in us while we wait.

From God's perspective, the situation looks completely different. He sees things we could never see except through divine revelation. He not only knows the thoughts of Saddam Hussein, He knows the very intent of his heart.

I am convinced that not only does God know about the situation, but that He is in control. God is sovereign. He has a plan for this world, and He will ensure that His plan is fulfilled.

We may not be able to see God's plan from our limited perspective, but we can see God. And when we focus on Him, our fear is supported by faith, and our confusion is replaced with confidence.

When we look to Him, we don't look for an emotional crutch, but we look to Him the way a soldier would look for courage in the face of a competent commander. To see Him in His power and wisdom assures me that I can trust Him with my life.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Chapel closed — The Kelley Hill Chapel is closed until further notice.

Christian Science Lecture — A lecture entitled "The Reason to Live: Finding the Divine Love that Heals" will be Oct. 27 at 2 p.m. at the Columbus Ironworks Trade and Convention Center. Anyone interested in attending should contact Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas Wheatly at 545-4787 or 545-2169.

PAPERS GO TO 197th

Through special arrangement with the Army, 160 copies of the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer are going to the troops of the 197th every day.

It's our way of keeping them informed about what's happening here, just as we keep their families informed about what's going on overseas.

You can bet these papers are among the best read we've ever printed!

If you or your company is interested in helping provide papers to the troops, please call Bill St. Clair at 324-5526, ext. 371.

Write the troops!
Mail for members of Army units now in Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield should be addressed:

Dogs, cats available

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Are you thinking about adopting a pet?

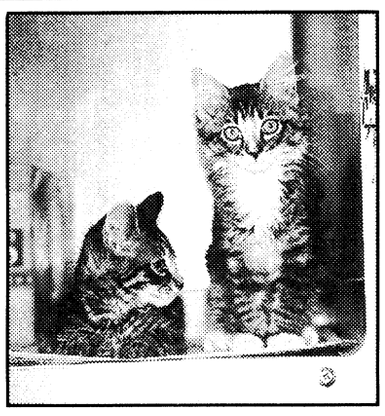
Don't look too far. Dogs and cats are available for adoption at Veterinary Services, building 264.

According to Sgt. Ricky Allen of Veterinary Services, about 10 animals per week are brought into the facility.

"They are brought in a variety of ways," he said. "Sometimes the owner drops them off, but most of the time the animals are brought in by animal patrol guys."

"After three working days the animals have to be put to sleep," he said. "That's not our policy. We have to do it according to the regulation."

Allen added that this doesn't apply to animals shown in the paper — they are kept until they are adopted.



Ann M. McDonald
Kittens await adoption.

"On the average, we have to put half the animals to sleep," he said. "There is no place else for these animals to go."

Allen said to adopt an animal all a prospective owner needs to do is pay to have the pet immunized at the clinic.

"On the average, the cost is about 12 to 15 dollars," he said.

The animals can be seen at Building 265, Monday through Friday. The hours are 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 2:30 p.m. For more information call 545-1127.

Students 'visit' Mideast

Fort Benning Schools

The A Team, a group of Faith Middle School seventh graders, recently took an imaginary trip to Saudi Arabia. The teachers of the A Team are: Ron Akerman, social studies teacher; Kim Cunningham and Anne Trawick, language arts and literature teachers; Bob Greenfield, math teacher; and Peggy Martin, science teacher.

For this trip to Saudi Arabia, the teachers and their students dressed in traditional Arabian outfits, including veils and abas. The A Team also had a chance to sample Arabian food.

Richard Goodson and his wife Peggy were the guest speakers for the day. Mr. and Mrs. Goodson, who lived in Saudi Arabia from 1982 to 1988, spoke to the students about life in Saudi Arabia. Through the speakers and the dress-up day, the seventh graders developed an increased awareness of the Middle East and the Arabian culture.

The students had many positive comments about the experience. Some learned that portions of Saudi Arabia were more modern than they had thought; some were interested in the role of women in the Arabian culture, and some were interested in the clothing and food.

The most prevalent comment was that the day had made the students much more aware of what Saudi Arabia is like. Students stated that they now have a better understanding of what life is probably like for U.S. soldiers who are in Saudi Arabia.

The A Team teachers also spoke positively about the imaginary trip. Not only was the day a time for students to learn about Saudi Arabia, it was also a time for students to see how their school subjects are related to each other. Their math, science, social studies, and language arts studies all focused on Saudi Arabia and the Arabian culture.

Extra precautions can reduce damage by fire

Fire Prevention

What would you do if a fire suddenly erupted in your home? The one thing you should never do is panic. Your best chance is to smother it while it's still small.

Fires can break out in any part of your home. Take the kitchen, for example. If a fire should erupt in a pan on the top of the stove, immediately turn off the heat. Try to smother the flames with a lid that completely covers the pan. If this should fail, use a fire extinguisher (dry chemical or carbon dioxide type).

If a fire breaks out in the oven, turn off the heat. Try to smother the fire by keeping the oven door closed for a few moments. If this doesn't work, open the oven door just far enough for use your fire extinguisher.

Never pour water on a grease fire. This will splatter and spread the flames. Even if you think the fire is out, call the fire department and let them make sure.

If your clothing should catch fire, never run or remain standing. Drop to the floor immediately. Roll yourself into a rug, blanket or heavy coat to smother the flames. Once the flames are out, take off the smothering clothing.

In case of an electrical fire, unplug the appliance or turn off the electricity. Never pour water on a connected appliance. You may get electrocuted.

In the event of a trash fire, water is the best means of smothering the flames. Make sure you soak the fire thoroughly.

Sometimes, no matter how careful you are, someone does get burned. When this happens, plunge the burned skin into ice water and keep it there until the pain stops. Also, you can apply towels that have been soaked in ice water. Never apply greasy ointments to burns.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My husband, who was on active duty in the Army, recently passed away. We were permanent residents of Columbus at the time of his death. I went to a civilian attorney for some help with his estate. I thought that I wouldn't have any problems because my husband had a will that left everything to me.

However, the attorney I spoke with was very concerned that my husband's will was signed in January 1978 and didn't have a self-proving clause with it. What is the big deal about a self-proving clause? Is the will any good?

A. The first thing you should be aware of is that as a dependent of a soldier, you may be entitled to legal assistance at the JAG Office to probate the will. This could save money because the JAG attorneys do not charge for services they render. Check with the Legal Assistance Office as to whether you are entitled to such assistance.

The civilian attorney you spoke with was justified in mentioning the lack of a self-proving clause because its absence could make the probate of your husband's estate much more time consuming and involved than it need be. In the early 1980 s, most state legislatures enacted provisions sanctioning the use of self-proving clauses. Thus, when an individual made a new will, another page was attached to the back of the will that attested to the fact that the testator signed the will and witnesses watched him sign it.

This additional document was then signed by a notary public, and the notary seal placed on the clause. The significance of this document is that it is no longer necessary to locate the witnesses to have them testify they watched the testator sign the will.

For those soldiers who had wills signed years ago at old duty stations using witnesses who happened to be present in the legal office at the time, big problems can arise when, years later, it is necessary to locate those witnesses.

Fortunately, Georgia law provides that Georgia residents' wills may still be probated, even if the original witnesses cannot be located and no self-proving clause was used. In this situation, two disinterested witnesses must come to the Probate Court and testify that they had watched the testator sign his signature on several occasions and, after examining the will, they can testify that the signature is not of the testator.

This process requires that two witnesses take their time to come to the court and that they be suitably qualified to testify as to the appearance of the testator's signature. It is so much simpler to present the self-proving clause with the will and have the probate procedure completed quickly.

The law of other states may not provide such an alternative method to probate wills if the original witnesses cannot be located. To be safe, it's best to review your will at least every four to five years to ensure that your estate will benefit not only for the specific distribution plans that you have provided, but also from any changes in the law, such as the provision for self-proving clauses.

POST BRIEFS

Air Force Thunderbirds performance cancelled

The U.S. Air Force Thunderbirds Show which was scheduled to be at Fort Benning Nov. 3, has been cancelled.

The precision Air Force team was slated to participate in the Military Retiree Open House 1990, but was cancelled due to a conflict in scheduling the use of Lawson Army Airfield.

Post's display to feature U.S. Postal mail drop

Fort Benning will provide a display during "Business Showcase '90" Oct. 18 to 21 at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

Business Showcase, formerly Expo, is for educational and informational purposes only, giving Columbus area firms a chance to showcase their goods and services. It highlights the impact business has on the Columbus economy and the world.

A United States Postal Service mail drop will be part of the Fort Benning display and various military APOs will be posted for those who wish to address cards and letters for mailing to Operation Desert Shield military personnel. Military clothing, equipment, weapons, food technology, and a Blackhawk helicopter will also be included in the display.

Members of Fort Benning's Ranger Training Brigade Rappeling Team, The Infantry Center Band, and officials from post will participate in opening ceremonies Oct. 19 at 12:30 p.m.

Benning libraries collect books for Desert Shield

Sayers Library and libraries at Infantry School, School of the Americas and Adjutant General Reception Battalion are collecting paperback books to send to Fort Benning units deployed for Operation Desert Shield.

Drop off books at any of the libraries mentioned or at the main Post Exchange. For more information, call Ann Pierce at 545-4911.

Local companies offer free videos, facsimiles

Several companies are helping deployed Operation Desert Shield soldiers and thier family members keep the lines of communication open. Montgomery Ward, with the help of other companies, is offering to spouses of deployed soldiers an opportunity to video a "letter" to soldiers in the Mideast.

Project "Better than a Letter" uses store equipment and is being offered to family members at no charge.

Families can tape a 30-minute "letter" at the store. The videos are then given to the families to send to their soldiers.

Also, Desert Shield soldiers will have an opportunity to make video messages to send to family members and friends at home.

For more information, or to make an appointment, call Montgomery Ward at 322-6761.

Family members and friends can also send facsimile greetings to soldiers in the Middle East through a service being offered by AT&T.

Messages up to three-fourths of one page will be faxed free to military personnel serving in the Middle East as part of Operation Desert Shield, provided it is written or typed on an AT&T special fax form and includes the soldier's name, rank, social, security number, unit and APO.

Drawings by small children and newspaper articles may be faxed also. A newspaper article must be taped on all four sides to the fax form.

Columbus' AT&T Phone Center is located at 2026-1/2 Auburn Avenue, On The Hill in Cross Country Plaza, off Macon Road. The center is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

For more information, call 563-1488.

Post parachute regiment activates rigger company

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

There's a new addition to the "airborne family," of 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

On Oct. 2, the unit activated Company E for the parachute riggers who were originally assigned to Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

According to battalion commander Lt. Col. Marcel Lettre, on Aug 31, the post commander, Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza decided to move the unit over to the 507th.

Lettre said the move was made to increase the efficiency of the logistical needs and support of all soldiers concerned.

"Before the commander of the detachment had to answer to several different people," he explained, "now the chain of command is more defined and the commander has more control."

Lettre added that the riggers will retain their mission of supporting the 75th Ranger Regiment and the Ranger Training Brigade.

Immigration Service relaxes policies on foreign-born spouses

Army News Service

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has relaxed its policies to ease hardships on foreign-born spouses of soldiers deployed on Desert Shield.

According to a message to the field from the Army's Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va., the revisions to INS policies allow foreign-born spouses to extend their conditional permanent resident status even though their soldier-spouses are unavailable to complete the processing.

Normally, foreign-born spouses and their husbands must jointly petition the INS to have the conditional status removed. To do this, they complete INS Form I-751, attached documents verifying their marriage is bonafide, and mail the package to an INS regional service center. Subsequently, the couple may be called to a local INS office for an interview.

However, soldiers who are deployed or in a "lock-down" status are generally unavailable to sign the necessary paperwork or be interviewed.

According to the CFSC message, foreign-born spouses of deployed or "locked-in" soldiers may now submit the INS petition without the soldier's signature if the package contains the required documentation and is accompanied by a copy of the soldier's orders or a letter from the soldier's commander, explaining the soldier's absence.

Petitions filed with the soldier's orders or command letter but lack proof of the bonafide nature of the marriage will be placed in an "overseas hold" status, pending the soldier's return, and scheduled for an interview. In this case, the spouse's current status will be extended in six-month increments until the soldier returns to complete the processing.

Local INS offices may request information from the soldier's unit to verify the need for these extensions.

Petitions filed without the soldier's signature or proof of the soldier's status — orders or a command letter — will be returned.

Under another revision, soldiers who expect to be deployed and whose foreign-born spouse is within 90 days of the filing deadline may submit their joint I-751 packages to a local office, rather than the INS regional office. The CFSC message saids local INS offices will expedite the requests if possible.

CFSC officials said information about the INS revisions has been distributed to installation Army Community Service officers, family assistance centers and family support groups.

Airlines make traveling easier for trainees

Army News Service

Basic training and advanced individual training students going home for Christmas during Operation Exodus can lock in their discount air fares now and not have to pay until December.

Normally, travelers who reserve super saver air fares must pay for them within 24 hours.

But that requirement is waived for the trainees under an agreement reached by the Army with seven national carriers.

For more information, call Scheduled Airline Ticket Office at 687-4900.

Hospital closer to returning to its full capability

Ribbon cutting ceremony opens newly renovated emergency room

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

With the arrival of additional U.S. Army Reserve physicians and nurses and the opening of its newly renovated emergency room, Martin Army Community Hospital has nearly returned to its full capability which continues to grow, according to a hospital official.

Col. H. Dale Brown Jr., MACH deputy commander for administration said in a press conference Oct. 5 that the only thing keeping the hospital from returning to full capability is the shortage of two orthopedic surgeons, critical care nurses and enlisted technicians who are devoted to medical support of the Infantry School.

This support, he said, was formerly performed by a deploying Desert Shield medical unit.

Brown said that some of MACH's physicians and nurses who were attached to a Fort Benning Forces Command medical unit will be returning to Martin Army Community Hospital for part-time patient care duty as they await orders to deploy to Operation Desert Shield.

Because of this, Brown said, surgical capabilities have been increased and appointment waiting times have been reduced. MACH will continue to work on reducing appointment waiting times.

Pregnant women who have been receiving care from civilian hospitals can continue to do so, he said. However, Brown said he encourages women who would prefer to be treated at MACH to return to the fully staffed obstetrics and gynecology clinic.

MACH opened it's newly renovated emergency room Oct. 5 with a ribbon cutting ceremony conducted by Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, and Col. Vernon C. Spaulding, hospital commander.

The $800,000 project began in November and represents one of many the upgrades planned and implemented to improve care at the hospital.

According to Brown, the emergency room will provide a smoother and faster flow of patients, increase patient privacy, improve its capacity to handle medical emergencies of all types — especially trauma and cardiac patients, provide state-of-the-art internal communications, and meet updated national fire protection and safety codes.

Patients will begin being seen in the new emergency room next week.

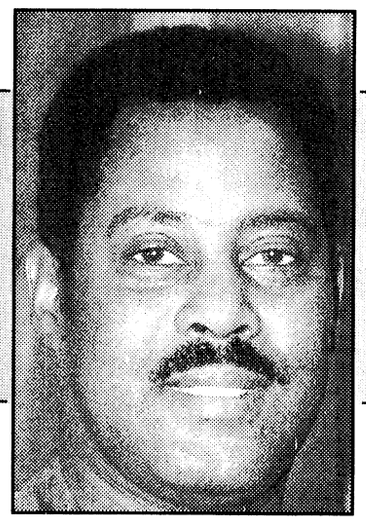
OPINION

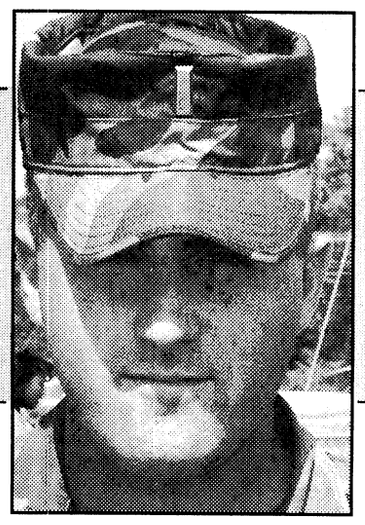
VARIOUS VOICES:

How do you think the reunification of Germany affects the Army?

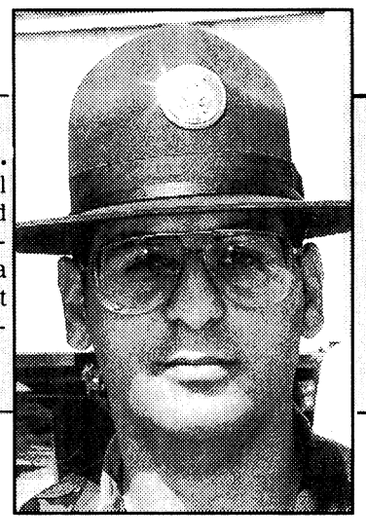


Command Sgt. Maj. Eddie Roberts, TSB — "It'll be good for the Army. Soldiers will get to come home and Germany will be as one."

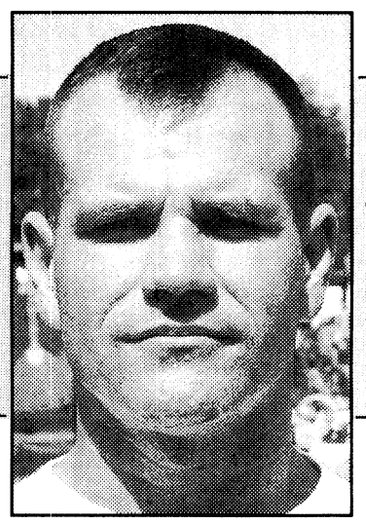
Spec. Toben Lybarger, Co. C, 1st Bn., 507th PIR — "I think it will make a lot of people wonder about their position in the Army. I'm sure a lot of soldiers will be wondering about where they will be assigned next and it probably means more cuts to the military."



1st Lt. Wallace Ward, Co. A, 4th Bn., 30th Inf. — "Hopefully it will bring a lot of the troops back home and force the Europeans to defend their own country with their own money. It will save the government money that is sorely needed elsewhere."



Staff Sgt. Robert DeRivera, Co. A, 4th Bn., 30th Inf. — "It will reduce the forces in Europe and the nuclear and chemical ammunition will be reduced to a very small level. East and West Germany will fend for themselves as a unit."

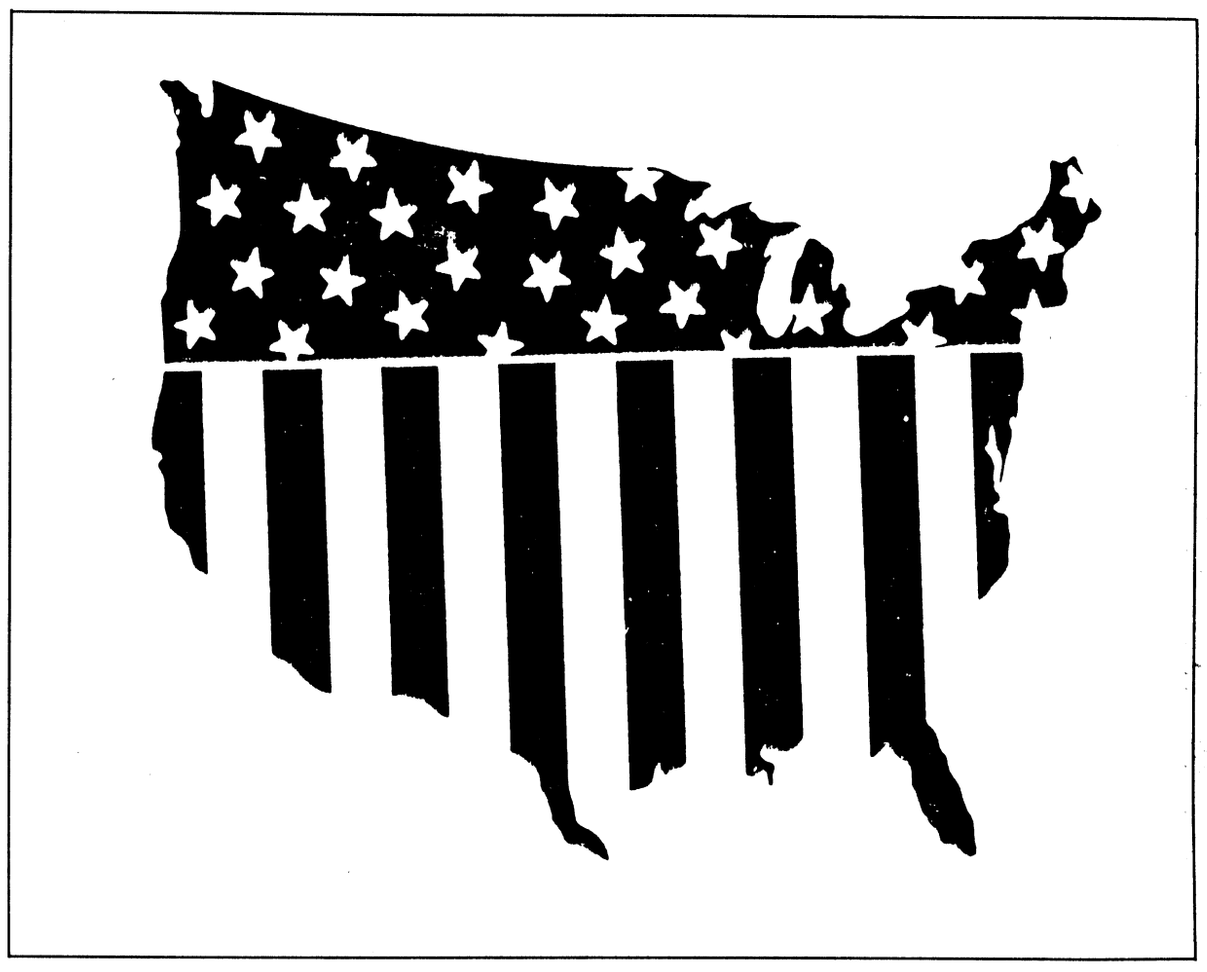


Maj. Mike Fuller, Ranger Training Brigade — "I think it reduces the threat in Europe, allowing us to shift U.S. combat power to other troubled areas in the world."

Pvt. Tammy King, Co. D, 1st Bn., 507th PIR — "I think a lot of people will be moved back from Europe especially since they are needed in Saudi Arabia."

Disrespect toward our flag is just as wrong as burning it

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office



Much is made about flag burners.

We hold them in disdain. Think they should be stripped of citizenship, thrown into jail and forgotten.

Lawmakers, jumping on the wave of patriotism washing over the country, raced each other to see who would be the first to sponsor an anti-flag burning amendment.

Locally, we heard from people who had their opinions about what we should do to flag burners. Bumper stickers quickly appeared and minced no words about what a great American the bumper sticker displayer was and what he or she would do if he or she ever came across one of those despicable cretins.

Yep, we all went around feeling proud of ourselves, knowing that as great Americans we'd never do such a thing and if someone tried to burn a flag in front of us, that person could bend right over and kiss his keister goodbye because his minutes in this great country of ours were numbered and the number didn't even make it to double digits.

One thing the flag burners did do, was open my eyes to how we great Americans were respecting our flag.

Americans were ready to crucify Roseanne Barr for her rendition of the National Anthem and for the way she scratched herself afterwards to mimic ball players.

But next time you go to a sporting event and stand during the playing of the National Anthem, look around. Count the number of men still wearing their hats, note the many knots of people still noisily carrying on a conversation.

If you can spot a handful standing at attention with their right hands over their hearts, you're in with an unusual group.

"Well, sure," you say, "people at sports events are rude and crude anyway and all they're interested in is for the game to start." That's true. So what's the excuse for this lack of respect at events here on post?

Here we are, defenders of the Constitution and we can't even get ourselves and friends into the proper mode during the National Anthem. I'll admit, the percentage of those duly showing respect is higher than it is downtown, but on post, you'd expect it to be perfect.

After all, it's such a simple matter. Stand up straight. Place your heels together, take your hat off if you're a man in civilian clothes, place your right hand over your heart. Stop talking or chewing gum and either sing the National Anthem or keep your mouth shut.

The guys in uniform do it right, but they need to remind their neighbors that while standing at the position of attention is part of the rite, they also need to render a civilian hand salute by placing their right hands over their hearts.

The same procedure is supposed to be followed when the colors pass. Stand at attention, render the proper salute.

We all agree flag burners are lower than piss ants and we'd never dream of defacing the National Colors.

But try driving around some of the neighborhoods on and off post some time. Look at the conditions of some of the flags. Some are in tatters. Others are so faded it's hard to believe they were really red, white and blue at one time.

And some are flown in all types of weather, day or night. All-weather flags are flown in bad weather. And unless the flag is illuminated, it's supposed to come down by sundown.

We all agree that flag burners don't respect our flag. Yet how many times have you seen people continue to walk to the parking lot or drive by the post headquarters during retreat?

That's not showing much respect. Or, even worse, check the entrance way shortly before retreat is to sound and see how many people are clustered there, waiting for "it to get over with," so they won't have to come to attention and render the proper salute.

Those people are certainly patriotic defenders of our nation. In fact they're probably the very ones with the patriotic "love it or leave it," type bumper stickers.

We may not be flag burners, but until we clean up our own act, we shouldn't be condemning others.

Crime Prevention gives tips to stay safe

Crime Prevention

October has been designated by the Training and Doctrine Command as National Crime Prevention month.

Crime is a disease which has dominated the social structures of our society. Crime has no prejudices, it attacks the young and old, the rich and poor. You and your neighbors can cure this disease, and in the process, build your community into a safe, friendly, and caring place to live.

Some things you can do where you live are:

- Join or start a Neighborhood Watch, Block Watch or Apartment Watch.
- If your neighbor is on vacation or late getting home, pick up the newspaper and mail.
- Keep each other alerted and informed, e.g., A neighbors garage door left open, keys left in the car, someone snooping around homes for no apparent reason. Remind your neighbor about the open garage door or keys left in the car, and call the MPs about the snooper.
- Make your neighborhood as "crime proof" as possible. Organize a campaign to clear out debris and brush from parks, wooded areas and clean up other things that attract crime, like litter, broken lights and windows.

To report a crime that has occurred, call the Military Police Desk Sergeant at 545-5223 or 545-5224. To report a crime in progress, call 545-5222.

To receive advice and assistance on actions you can take to combat crime, call the Fort Benning Military Police Crime Prevention Office at 545-1146.

Spouses share feelings on Desert Shield

Reminders of husband keeps spouse waiting

"Welcome to Fort Benning's Deployment Hotline," the now-familiar male voice says. The daily-changing message somehow brings me closer to my husband, who is somewhere in the Saudi Arabian desert.

The back door slams and brings me back to reality and a new day. School has started, the kids are busy with homework and friends.

As I look around our Army quarters I see him everywhere. An odd stripe on the washer, a green button in the sewing basket, an empty spot at the supper table.

Like most, it's easier during the day, waiting in the commissary line, smiling, engaged in small talk. It's easier that way, you never know when a single question could bring a flood of tears.

Friends call and write, but as weeks pass, this too slows down. Parents phone, but they too, like my husband, are untouchable. The days come and go and most are in slow motion. The news is on, supper cooked, kids fed, bathed, loved and put to bed.

Then it's your turn as you close your eyes and hear "Welcome to Fort Benning's Deployment Hotline, today all the soldiers are coming home safe and sound."

As a tear dries on your cheek, you say a little prayer and await a new day.

Family thanks store for generous support

I would like to thank Montgomery Ward for the support they are giving to the spouses and families of deployed soldiers. The free VCR offer is a precious way of storing memories for years to come.

I would also like to thank one employee, Michelle, who was most generous and attentive to our needs.

Again, thanks for your support.

Senate approves funds for two Benning schools

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Federal funds in fiscal year 1991 for two elementary schools at Fort Benning have been approved by the Senate, announced U.S. Senator Wyche Fowler Jr. Oct. 2.

The Senate approved $7.9 million for construction of a new Bouton Heights Elementary School and $1.5 million to make needed improvements at White Elementary School. No request was made for this funding by the Administration in its fiscal year 1991 budget.

"I am pleased that my Senate colleagues have deemed these projects worthy of support after such a long effort to get the Department of Defense to provide the needed funds," Senator Fowler said. "Our Fort Benning school children deserve up-to-date and well-maintained places to learn."

Bouton Heights Elementary is housed in the old Wilbur School building, which was built in 1951 and does not meet current federal requirements. Presently, five trailers provide makeshift classroom space.

"In addition to all the benefits it will provide students, the new Bouton Heights Elementary School also will save the Fort Benning school system significant energy costs," Senator Fowler said.

White Elementary School will get a new media center and other additions.

The House of Representatives has approved similar funding for Bouton Heights Elementary. A committee of Senate and House members will meet in the coming weeks to reconcile differences between the Senate and House versions of the Military Construction Appropriations Bill.

Senator Fowler is a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee and the Appropriations Subcommittee on Military Construction.

Commissary gives donation to AUSA

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Commissary is not only serving the most deserving but it's giving them money too.

One of the ways the commissary is able to do this is through promotional campaigns run by different product distributors, according to commissary officer Larry Bentley.

The latest campaign done through WEBCO U.S.A. Incorporated netted the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the U.S. Army a check for $4,000.

Roger Davidson, a broker representative for commissaries, said seven companies participated in a three-week display that offered both savings to the customer and 25 cents per case set aside for AUSA.

Davidson noted that the following companies were a part of the campaign: Beatrice-Hunt-Wesson, Kimberly Clark, T.J. Lipton, Hefty Bags, Tree-top Apple Juice, Ocean Spray Juice, and Revlon.

Bentley said many worthwhile causes benefit from promotions done through various companies.

"We'll certainly put the money to good use in our mission to help soldiers," said Ben Williams, AUSA president.

Send holiday mail early to soldiers in Mideast

Army News Service

Mail during the holiday season won't be sitting still for soldiers deployed to Operation Desert Shield – but neither should the sender of that mail.

As in years past, officials from the Military Postal Service Agency in Alexandria, Va., are encouraging senders to "mail early" — especially if cards and packages are meant to enter the deep river of mail flowing to Saudi Arabia.

Postal officials recently have published their annual holiday posting dates "for ensuring that Christmas mail enroute to other countries is available for shipment in the continental United States by the dates listed."

In the case of mail destined for the Middle East, this means that the "military mail" category (served by APO addresses) has a posting date of Nov. 3.

Air parcels and priority: Nov. 16; air letters and cards: Nov. 26; parcel airlift: Nov. 10; space-available mail: Nov. 3.

Guidance given for proper flag displaying

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Flags are displayed in an array of places on post — at Infantry Hall, on individual houses, flying from any number of flag poles. Displaying the flag in this manner is a show of patriotism, citizenship, and pride in one's country.

Yet some people, in their zeal to display this pride, often display the colors in an unacceptable manner.

To help individuals wishing to display the flag properly, here are a few rules for guidance in displaying the colors:

It is the universal custom to display the flag only from sunrise to sunset on buildings and stationery flagstaffs in the open.

However, when a patriotic effect is desired, the flag may be displayed 24 hours a day if properly illuminated.

The flag should not be displayed on days of inclement weather, except when an all-weather flag is displayed.

The flag should be displayed on all holidays, especially New Year's Day, Jan. 1; Washington's Birthday, the third Monday in January; Memorial Day, the last Monday in June; Independence Day, July 4; Columbus Day, the second Monday in October; Veterans Day, Nov. 11; Thanksgiving Day, the fourth Thursday in November; and Christmas Day, Dec. 25.

The flag should never touch anything beneath it, such as the ground, the floor, water, or merchandise.

The flag should never be carried flat or horizontally, but always aloft and free.

The flag should never be used as wearing apparel, bedding or drapery.

The flag should never be used for advertising purposes in any manner whatsoever.

The flag, when it is in such a condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably burning.

The ways to render respect to the colors are as follows:

During the ceremony of hoisting or lowering the flag or when the flag is passing in a parade or in review, all persons present except those in uniform should face the flag and stand at attention with their hands over their heart. All present in uniform should come to attention and render the military salute.

This procedure remains the same during the playing of the national anthem, whether the flag is displayed or not.

The only exception is during the Pledge of Allegiance, when military personnel would simply come to the position of attention and remain silent during the pledge.

Phone system is successful

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning's switch to the new phone system Sept. 17 was a successful one, according to the Sergeant Major of the Directorate of Information Management.

Sgt. Maj. Harry Scruggs said the biggest complaint he's received since the switch was the class of service.

"There were some telephones on post that had access to Autovon and Class A lines that weren't supposed to," he said. "When the switch was made, access was eliminated, so some people weren't too happy."

Scruggs said units that do have access to those lines will be able to dial out a lot faster.

Another complaint that should be quelled by the end of the month is calls intercepted by the operator when trying to use the WATTS line.

A new system which eliminates the need to cite control numbers when making the call is being worked into the system he said.

Although there have been some complaints have been made Scruggs deemed it successful because of the positive comments that have been passed to his office.

A few things Scruggs noted were the easy access to Fort Benning lines from off post, calls made on post reach the office intended and the wait to make Autovon telephone calls had decreased significantly.

"The installation of the fiber optics is the reason for success," he said.

The agency is not stopping and resting on it's success. The Directorate of Information Management has some ongoing projects that will make the system better.

These projects include the Outside Cable Rehabilitation Program and installation of a Remote Switch on Kelly Hill.

Scruggs said,"new telephones will be installed when the old instruments become inoperable."

Author pens book about late general

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

The author of the book "Hanging Sam," presented Fort Bennings' Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza with an autographed copy of the book on Oct. 4.

The author, retired Colonel Jack Meyer, presented the book in memory of Lt. Gen. Samuel T. Williams, the main character in his book.

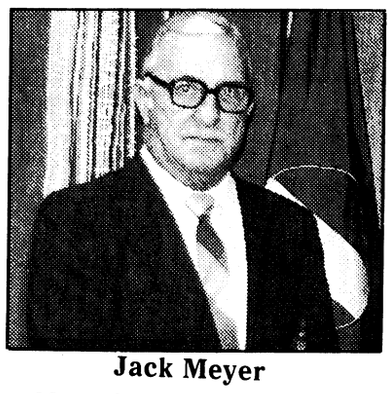
Meyer, a resident of Destin, Fla., was motivated to write the book after serving under Williams early in his own career.

The book chronicles the life of Williams, including his 44 years of Army service.

According to the author, he was called "Hanging Sam" because of his strict and sometimes cruel disciplinary techniques.

"Williams also holds the distinction of being the only brigadeer general demoted and then repromoted," Meyer said.

He said in order to write the book, he traveled everywhere the general had and did extensive research in many libraries including the Donovan Technical Library in Building 4.



Jack Meyer

Meyer has spent time here in a different capacity. He is a graduate of Officer Candidate School and an inductee into the Hall of Fame. He is currently a member of the OCS Alumni Association.

The author's next stop is at the hometown of his subject, Denton, Texas for an autograph session in the house "Hanging Sam" was born in.

Post schools have new boss

Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning School Board has a new president

Col. Joseph Trez was selected Sept. 24 to replace Col. Reginald Moore. Trez will assume his school board responsibilities at the November meeting.

Trez, who will assume command of the Infantry Training Center in December, is the father of three children, one of whom attends Faith Middle School.

Following his appointment Trez noted that he was "happy to have the opportunity to represent parents and students on the school board and look forward to working to insure a quality education for Fort Benning children."

The Fort Benning School Board is a 10-member board elected by parents of children attending the schools; it meets monthly to set school district policy and provide general direction to the system.

School board members are elected for two-years, with each of Fort Benning's schools having a representative on the board. In addition to the eight school representatives, the board includes a president and chaplain. Members' terms are staggered so that the board will include experienced board members each year.

Newborn health care policy changes

Army News Service

Soldiers may want to consider enrolling their newborn infants in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System soon after birth following the announcement of a policy change by officials at the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command here.

Beginning Oct. 1, said officials, all beneficiaries requiring 'non-availability statements' must be enrolled in DEERS before the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services will pay claims for care.

Non-availability statements are used to indicate that the particular treatment or service isn't available from on-post health care facilities.

By law, said Carol Galaty with the Defense Medical System Support Center, a NAS is required for all people who live within the 'catchment area,' a 40-mile radius from the treatment facility they use. Galaty said a NAS is only required for inpatient, non-emergency services.

PERSCOM officials say the only exception to the new policy is for dependents of sponsors assigned outside the United States.

To make things easier for Army families, personnel offices have been authorized to begin accepting certificates of live birth for newborn children, in lieu of a birth certificate, in order to enroll the infants in DEERS.

Reservists on active duty get full benefits

Army News Service

Reservists called to active duty for Operation Desert Shield are entitled to essentially the same benefits and privileges as full-time active duty soldiers, say Army personnel officials.

According to an information paper distributed by the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel at the Pentagon, soldiers in the Army Reserve and National Guard and their family members qualify for full benefits when they are called to active duty for more than 30 days.

Those benefits include unlimited access to commissary, exchange and recreation facilities. They also include family member medical care at military health care facilities on a space-available basis, medical care cost-sharing by the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, and no-cost treatments at Primary Care for the Uniformed Services clinics.

Only dental care for families of reserves is restricted. ODCSPER officials said families of reservists on active duty can get emergency dental treatments at military dental clinics on a space-available basis. However, they are not entitled to routine care or coverage under the Uniformed Services Active Duty Dependents Dental Plan, commonly known as the Delta Dental Program. A two-year active duty commitment is required for Delta Dental coverage.

ODCSPER officials add reserve families can obtain health benefits using their sponsors active duty orders, but should take steps to enroll in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System, or DEERS, and obtain active duty family member identification cards.

To claim other benefits, reserve family members must have a copy of their sponsor's orders to active duty, as well as a military family member ID card (active or reserve) or any photo identification.

Children without photo IDs must be accompanied by the sponsor, the sponsor's spouse or a legal guardian with command authorization.

Overpayment made to deployed soldiers

Army News Service

Soldiers may want to check the remarks section of September's leave-and-earnings statement to see if they were overpaid.

Many August and September pay packets included a Basic Allowance for Subsistence overpayment for soldiers and their families because of surprise deployments to Operation Desert Shield, explained Clay Lacy of the U. S. Army Finance and Accounting Center.

USAFAC officials had caught the error after revision deadlines and decided to send the overpayment rather than to delay everyone's August paychecks.

Instead of immediate pay deductions to recoup the overpayment, officials will prorate the BAS pay for those affected. The six-month incremental subtraction from paychecks won't start until next February.

"Basic allowance for subsistence" serves to defray costs of food for the soldier. When troops are provided meals, as in Operation Desert Shield, they're not entitled to draw BAS pay, Lacy said.

Battlefield transmissions modernized

Army News Service

Today, when some soldiers in the field take a lunch break to sample their MREs — meals, ready to eat — they may find that the lunch break was announced via their newly acquired MSEs — mobile subscriber equipment.

That big-ticket system amidst the Army's latest communications hardware has earned an in-depth story in the August issue of "Soldiers" magazine.

Comprised of networked radio-telephones patterned after the commercial variety of cellular phones, the mobile subscriber equipment promises to revolutionize the way troops communicate with one another in the field, explained Lt. Col. Don Munday.

His branch in the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations and Plans provides an integrating capability that affords the Army staff a single information management focal point within the ODCSOPS. "So far, reports from users have been quite positive," he said. In particular, he cited the success of the largest MSE deployment to date — its first outing during a live corps-level training exercise at Fort Hood, Texas, in May

Plans for further fielding in the next several months include such units of V Corps (in Germany) as the 8th Infantry Division and the 22d Signal Brigade. Also on the list for scheduled conversion to the MSE system: the 32d Army Air Defense Command in Germany; the Army National Guard's 50th Armored Division in New Jersey; XVIII Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Besides such expanded fielding of MSE items to active- and reserve-component units Army-wide, a spin-off, down-sized version of the equipment is making its way into the inventory of Army communications materiel. "It's called the Contingency Communications Package," Munday explained. "It provides an MSE capability similar to the standard MSE system's that can be moved in half the airlift sorties."

The MSE system gets its name from the ability of its truck-mounted node centers (eight trucks per node) to form a network for tactical communications. Unlike earlier commo equipment, the MSE network allows the subscribing user to keep the same phone number regardless of how much the user's position may change.

"Basically, MSE provides the same state-of-the-art voice and data systems found in many large civilian organizations," Munday concluded.

Republic of Ecuador

Area: 109,483 square miles, the size of Colorado
Population: 10,490,000, roughly equal to Ohio
Pop. density: 95 per sq. mi.
Ethnic groups: 55% Mestizo, 25% Indian, 10% Spanish, 10% African Religion: 95% Roman Catholic
Literacy rate: 90%
Life expectancy: 62 years
Languages: Spanish, Quechua and Jivaroa
Capital city: Quito
Industries: petroleum, textiles, food processing, wood products
Major exports: oil, shrimp, fish products, coffee, bananas (world leader)
Per capita income: $1,310

Named for the equator that passes just north of Quito, Ecuador occupies the northern reaches of the former Inca Empire. The Inca Empire maintained control over the territory until the arrival of Spanish conqueror Francisco Pizarro in 1532.

Liberation forces defeated the Spanish May 24, 1822, near Quito. Ecuador then became part of the Great Colombia Republic but seceded May 13, 1830.

Ecuador was ruled by civilian and military dictatorships until a peaceful transfer of power from the military junta to the democratic civilian government took place in 1979.

Since World War II, political stability within the country has had much to do with the state of the economy. The traditional reliance on cacao production was superseded in the 1950's by a "banana boom" and the discovery of large oil deposits by U.S. corporations in the 1960's which led to a shift toward reliance on oil revenues by the following decade. The opening of oil fields in the northeast and construction of a Trans-Andean pipeline to Esmeraldas in the early 1970's led to an economic boom, and Ecuador joined OPEC. A new refinery and offshore tanker terminal augment the billion-dollar-a-year production.

The Galapogos Islands, site of Charles Darwin's studies on evolution, draw tens of thousands of tourists annually and continue to attract study by naturalists. Mount Chimborazo, at 21,000 feet, has the distinction of being the tallest point on Earth as measured from the Earth's center, a consequence of equatorial bulge.

Republic of El Salvador

Area: 8,260 square miles, slightly smaller than Massachusetts
Population: 5,388,644, about the same as Massachusetts
Pop. density: 671 per sq. mi.
Ethnic groups: 89% Mestizo, 10% Indian, 1% White
Religion: 97% Roman Catholic
Literacy rate: 62% (urban areas, 40% (rural areas)
Life expectancy: 63 years
Languages: Spanish and Indian
Capital city: San Salvador
Industries: food processing, textiles, clothing
Major exports: coffee, cotton, sugar, shrimp
Per capita income: $670

Central America's smallest, most industrialized, and most densely-populated nation, El Salvador ("The Savior") also has the region's highest percentage of arable land (35%). A mild climate and varied topography would make the country a tourist's dream, but Marxist-inspired insurgents commenced a civil war toward the close of the 1970's that has taken an immense toll in lives and national resources.

A number of Indian tribes, of which the Pipil were dominant, originally inhabited the area now called El Salvador. The native population resisted the first attempt at Spanish colonization, begun in 1524, for almost 15 years. In 1821, El Salvador gained its independence from Spain, first as a jurisdiction under the Mexican empire and two years later as a member of the United Provinces of Central America. The Central American Federation collapsed in 1838 and El Salvador became an independent republic.

The Salvadoran economy came to be dominated by coffee production from the 1860's onward, and a series of laws in the 1880's allowed for concentration of both land ownership and political power in the hands of a coffee oligarchy. In 1980, a three-part agrarian reform program was initiated. Land redistribution has always been a central political issue in the country, which has a high poipulation of people involved in agriculture.

Elections for a constituent assembly took place in March 1982; a majority of seats went to the rightist ARENA coalition. In December 1983, a new constitution went into effect, and in 1984 Christian Democrat Jose Napoleon Duarte assumed the presidency, which he held until 1989. Christian Democrats achieved another victory in congressional and municipal elections in 1985. Although attempts at negotiations between the warring factions in the Salvadoran civil war began in 1986 and still continue, the fighting has not ceased, and the political stalemate between Left and Right continues.

SOA Dining Facility wins Connelly

by Keith F. Johnson

The U.S. Army School of the Americas' dining facility is the winner of the Twenty-third Annual Connelly Award as Best Garrison Small Dining Facility at Fort Benning.

The award, which recognizes excellence in Army food service, is named for Philip A. Connelly, a past president of the International Food Service Executives Association who for many years was a motivating factor in the conduct of food service awards programs in the Armed Forces.

The award is a continuation of the success of the SOA dining facility which has won three quarterly awards during the last two years.

"We serve, prepare and cook the best food we can," said SFC Lemesio R. Smith, dining facility manager.

"It is a lot of hard work but we have an outstanding staff that always tries to excel."

Smith added that planning and study sessions have helped to create a stronger team attitude, which he said was the key to their success.

The award was established to provide an added incentive for Army food service operations to excel thereby improving the professionalism of food service personnel and giving quality food service to supported soldier diners.

By winning the post award, the SOA dining facility qualifies for the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command's Army-wide competition for best garrison small dining facility. Evaluations will be made during the month of October before the winners are announced at the end of the year.

"I think our chances are great," Smith said. "It takes a total team effort to win and we work hard at that."

SOA dining facility personnel are Smith, Sgt. Robert E. Frarey, Sgt. Ernest O. Glover, Sgt. Adalberto L. Torres, Spec. Randy W. Clark, Spec. Jose S. Figueroa, Spec. Marcus A. Duprey, Spec. Latricia Washington and Spec. James D. Wilson.

Hall of Fame

Peru commanding general is newest member

by Keith F. Johnson

The U.S. Army School of the Americas inducted Gen. Jorge Zegarra Delgado into the School's Hall of Fame Sept. 28 in a 3 p.m. ceremony at Fort Benning's Field of Four Chaplains.

Zegarra, commanding general of the Peruvian Army, is the fourteenth member of the Hall of Fame since the first induction ceremony Oct. 4, 1988.

The Hall of Fame recognizes distinguished graduates and former staff and faculty of the School who have achieved the highest positions in their nation's armed forces or have held an equivalent position by rank or responsibility in a multi-national military organization, or have distinguished themselves in the highest manner as a civilian leader.

Zegarra was a student of the School's Counter-intelligence Course in 1962.

Distinguished guests at the ceremony were Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, commanding general of Fort Benning; Maj. Gen. Felix A. Santoni, deputy commander-in-chief of U.S. Southern Command in Panama; Lt. Col. Juan Yabar, SOA senior guest instructor from Peru and Col. William A. DePalo, Jr., SOA commandant, who gave the opening remarks.

"The Hall of Fame is a tangible means and a living symbol which allow us to recognize the meritorious achievements of a select group of international officers and leaders who have passed through the classrooms of this institution," DePalo said.

"It is a sign of the constant strengthening of the ties of friendship which join the nations of our hemisphere."

The orders were then read as DePalo presented Zegarra with his diploma.

During his visit to the School, Zegarra toured the Henry Caro Non-commissioned Officer Academy and had the opportunity to observe training and meet with soldiers. Zegarra was also a guest speaker of the School's Command and General Staff Course.

"The world is presently involved in conflicts which are a threat to the peace and development of countries," Zegarra said in his speech to the CGSC students.

"The many geographical areas possessing the resources vital to man are desired by all who wish to gain control of the economic sector of a great number of the nations of the world. Compounded to these circumstances are the social problems, such as: poverty, drug trafficking, terrorism and other calamities which deteriorate human communities, thus leading them into chaos and to a disregard for authority and law and order."

"The armed forces are the primary guarantors of national and continental security for the countries, the defense of democracies, and the peace and preservation of appropriate conditions for the development of our countries. We all aspire to a peaceful life. We all then must make every effort to contribute to that peaceful life, thus providing security to the growth required by our nations."

by Keith F. Johnson

The U.S. Army School of the Americas held its annual Hispanic Cultural Display and "Cena Tipica" Sept. 28-29 at the Fort Benning Officers Club.

More than 1,000 students, first grade to high school, from over 20 local schools filed through the Supper Club doors at the Officers Club to experience the customs and culture of Latin American countries represented from the School.

"This was a day when the hemisphere got together to share the heritage and culture of each nation," said Lt. Col. Richard J. Wright, SOA chief of staff.

As the kids entered the display they each received a booklet of information about each country. Bilingual personnel from the School served as translators as they guided groups of students from one display to the next. The students had many questions about clothing, language, coins, jewelry, food and more.

The questions were directed toward guest instructors from the school and their wives who put together the displays with posters and videos from their countries as well as artifacts, crafts and other items.

"It is a good time for them and for us to share both cultures and get to know each other better," said Ines Robles, wife of U.S. Army Maj. David Robles, who helped put together the U.S./Puerto Rico display.

Many of the schools were attending the display in conjunction with Hispanic month activities at each school.

"The children have been learning Spanish words and they made ponchos and sombreros with 'Mi nombre es' written across the front with their names," said Mrs. Miriam Aiken, a first grade teacher at Patch Elementary School.

"We didn't know there were so many Spanish speaking countries. This is something that we don't discuss in first grade but today we have had a chance to explore many things," Aiken said.

One of the kids summed up what he thought of the display as he and his classmates left the building and he shouted out "Caramba!".

The following evening the School held its annual "Cena Tipica", which literally translated means typical dinner. Each person brought a typical food from their country to share in a buffet. In addition, representatives from each country participated in a fashion show and gifts from each country were given away in a raffle. The night ended with dancing to the Latin sounds of Columbus band "Combo Latino".

OPERATION DESERT SHIELD

Planning reduces money problems during deployment

By Kevin Hudson
Army News Service

Be prepared! Those two words for years have been the slogan for the Boy Scouts of America. In the Persian Gulf, the slogan should be adopted by the military, and soldiers deploying here should take the words to heart.

"Especially with their finances," said Lt. Col. Morgan Denny, commander of the 215th Finance Support Unit.

"Some soldiers deployed here very quickly and didn't have time to properly take care of their financial situations," Denny said.

"Consequently, several have run into financial difficulties including limited access to their own money."

For example, although most soldiers now have the SurePay option, some soldiers have their money deposited into savings accounts. "Obviously, a savings account doesn't do the soldier any good here. In order to get money, the soldier must take a casual pay which is available only in limited quantities ($100 per payday)," he said.

Denny said also that some of the soldiers who have checking accounts came here without their checks.

These situations can be corrected, but Denny said that it would be easier for everyone involved if the problems were avoided at the onset.

"While some units did deploy rapidly, others have had and will have more time," Denny said. "So they should take more time to accurately complete their Preparation for Overseas Movement and pay particular attention to their finances.

"There are some things that soldiers, Reservists and National Guardsmen included, need to consider.

"We are finding that not all of their pay options have been updated, and eventually that will be something the finance office will have to work through."

Families potentially may be especially hard hit in the finance arena by the massive deployment to Saudi Arabia. Denny's advice to them is, "Talk to one another."

"Before deploying, each soldier should talk with his or her family regarding finances — entitlements, allotments, etc.," Denny said.

Another thing Denny suggests families think about is the monthly Leave and Earning Statement. "LES's should be made available to the spouse, but the Army finance corps cannot give it to them. We are required to give the LES to the soldier or the unit.

"If the soldier has given authority to finance or the unit to give the LES to the spouse, then naturally we will," he said. "But families need to communicate to make this happen."

Single soldiers, unlike married soldiers, do not have the luxury of having their spouse assume responsibility of the family finances during deployments. Therefore, Denny suggests that they take care of their bills ahead of time or make provisions to take care of their bills.

Denny suggests that soldiers paying their bills here pay the bills well in advance because of the time — between five and seven days — to mail the bills back to the states.

Preparation and planning are the keys to successful finances during deployments which, in the long run, Denny said, results in higher morale.

Bradley unit adapts to desert night shift

By M.H. Wilbur
Army News Service

As the sun falls, Bradleys knife through the sand. They pass within 1,000 meters of a Bedouin shepherd's camp. The 3rd Platoon of A Troop, 2nd Squadron, 4th Cavalry is going to work.

The sun doesn't set in Saudi Arabia. No long shadows on the desert floor. The sun only pauses for a moment before slamming below the horizon.

With the wave of his hand, 2nd Lt. David Holcomb gets his M-3 Cavalry Fighting Vehicles moving.

This is how the "night shift" works to the front of the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized). Tonight, the 3rd Platoon will conduct a night reconnaissance. Holcomb says little.

The Bradleys trade places on the desert floor. A whisper on the radio, the soft whir of the spinning turret, and the CFVs move again. The vehicles pause in place before forming a large circle. Noses pointing outward, the engines fall silent.

Again, a hand signal does the job. The 3rd Platoon is home for the night.

Home is somewhere in the Saudi Arabian desert. Visibility is in excess of 15 miles and not a man-made structure is in sight. Ramps drop and a security team walks away from the Bradley without fanfare.

In the dark, the platoon quickly settles down. Dinner and a place to sleep are not topics of discussion. Dinner is Meals, Ready-to-Eat, also known as "bliss in a bag" or "dehydrated dining."

Everyone knows where they sleep. A Bradley has very few spots. You can sleep under the gun, on the trimvane, on the ramp, or the floor inside.

As the first rays of light race across the desert floor, Sgt. 1st Class Walter Bell forms his platoon for physical training. The men gather in a circle around Bell and Holcomb.

The lieutenant has all the markings of a young officer eager to lead and learn. This day marks the end of his first year in the Army. He is 23 years old. He's been a husband for 5 weeks.

Whether it's PT or maneuvering his platoon through the dark, Holcomb said he's been tested by all events that have brought his platoon to this remote site.

"I've learned a lot about myself out here," he confessed. "The deployment has tested all of my leadership skills."

If he is tested, his men have also been tested. Holcomb said they've passed with flying colors.

"I have to trust all of them, the drivers, gunners and the NCOs. If I didn't have faith in them, I wouldn't send them out," he said of the sections that must often manuever out of the platoon leader's sight.

After calisthenics, the platoon moves a few yards farther from the Bradleys. A miniature football appears. The men form teams, and the game is on. With Holcomb serving as referee, a game of sunrise touch quickly turns to tackle. The game is played as though it were the Super Bowl.

Holcomb plays the role of mediator. He calls the shots. Final decisions are accepted without argument, usually.

By a narrow margin, one side wins. The lieutenant said, "Game's over." The troopers move back to their CFVs, and in less than five minutes, the Bradleys are again moving across the desert. At full speed they churn effortlessly through the powder-like dust.

Within 20 minutes, the men are at their other home — several camouflage nets dispersed in the sand. It is now 9 a.m. Without prodding, the troopers begin pulling maintenance on men and machines. The temperature has already passed 100 degrees. No complaints.

When the sun falls again, 3rd Platoon will go back to work.

Army converts salt water

By John R. Harris
Army News Services

The Army in Saudi Arabia has turned to alchemy to convert ordinary salt water into the most precious of substances in the desert — drinkable water.

The alchemists are called ROWPUs, or reverse osmosis water purification units, and they are helping the Army move from commercially procured bottled water toward self-sufficiency.

Saudi Arabia now provides about 90 percent of the water consumed by U.S. troops in the region.

According to Capt. Bob Stanley, XVIII Airborne Corps' petroleum and water officer, "the ROWPUs will lessen American units' dependence for water. This increases security for U.S. forces, as relying on outside sources for water gives civilians entry to potentially sensitive areas. Stanley said it also improves the logistical outlook.

"The theory (behind using ROWPUs) is to have the water close to where it is going to be used," he said.

Army National Guard units have been activated to assist the water conversion process: the 265th Quartermaster Detachment from South Carolina, the 120th Quartermaster Detachment from Utah, and the 1207th Quartermaster Detachment from Alabama.

The conversion process begins when water is drawn from its source, a lake or bay, for example. A booster pump propels the water through a series of filters that removes large and medium-sized mineral deposits. Then, a high-pressure pump drives the water into the reverse osmosis membrane. The heavier brine is diverted while the fresh water is stored for shipment.

A ROWPU can process about 150,000 gallons of water daily. However, as water in the region has a higher mineral content, the units are processing the water twice, reducing the output to 30,000 gallons daily.

A few soldiers in the area have complained of a rubbery taste in the water, but Stanley said its due to the bags used to store the water.

"The problem is more with the temperature of the water than the taste of the water," he said.

Chillers have been ordered for the water buffaloes in the area.

Dental Week theme highlights hygienists

By Paula Dansereay
Dental Activity

National Dental Hygiene Week, celebrated Oct. 14-20, is dedicated to increasing the public's awareness of the importance of preventive oral healthcare and the dental hygienist's role as the preventive professional. The theme selected for this year's observance is "Dental Hygienists: Committed to Care."

The dental hygiene profession began in 1913, and now has over 77,000 registered dental hygienists. Dental hygienists are licensed oral health care professionals whose preventive services limit the extent of cavities and periodontal (gum) diseases. Hygienists provide a wide variety of services including cleaning teeth, taking X-rays, providing flouride treatments, applying sealants, examining the condition of the mouth, teeth and gums; and educating patients on maintaining the highest level of oral health. Dental hygienists are especially knowledgeable about the preventive aspects of oral care and view prevention as their central focus.

A dental hygienist is eligible for licensure (which confers the RDH designation) after graduating from a nationally accredited educational program and after successfully completing both a written national board dental hygiene examination and a state or regional clinical examination. Licensed dental hygienists practice according to the requirements of individual state dental practice acts.

Fort Benning DENTAC employs eight dental hygienists and one community health dental hygienists. Col. Michael Scheidt, commander of the Fort Benning Dental Activity would like to express appreciation on behalf of the entire staff for the outstanding work and dedication to duty that the hygienists perform for the active duty, family members and retirees of the Fort Benning community.

Officers visit local battlefield

By Francis Doyle
HHC, 29th Infantry Regiment

The officers of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, had a chance to learn the lessons of war from history during a two-day staff ride to the Chickamauga and Chattanooga Civil War battlefields Sept. 19 and 20.

The group of officers, under the leadership of the battalion commander, Lt. Col. Paul S. Feyereisen, tried to see what application these fields of strife had for the practitioners of air-land battle.

"The officers were greatly assisted by the efforts of James H. Ogden, a historian in the National Park Service, under whose control Chickamauga and a good portion of Chattanooga fall," Feyereisen said. "The answers were numerous and revealing."

The first day of the staff ride was spent touring the Chickamauga Battlefield. The concept was for the officers, divided into three to four man teams, to give a detailed description of a portion of the battle. Ogden would then lend his expertise to expound on the salient points made. 1st Lt. Herb White of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regt. found this procedure worked the best.

"This is the third time I have been here on a staff ride, but it has been by far the best," White said. "Mister Ogden's expertise can provide so much more knowledge than we can receive in books, it's great."

White gave a description of the events leading up to the first day of battle, showing how Maj. Gen. William Starke Rosecrans, the Union Army Commander, repeatedly used maneuver and surprise to force Gen. Braxton Bragg, Confederate Commander, to retreat from Middle Tennessee to Northern Georgia. Gen. Bragg, being reinforced by other Confederate forces, then decided to attack and destroy the Union Army.

What can be achieved with a coordinated, powerful attack was demonstrated on the second day of the battle. 1st. Lt. Ed Hannaman, of D Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt., stated that "while the Confederate right continued to launch disjointed attacks on the second day of battle, the left, under newly arrived Lt. Gen. Longstreet, massed for an attack with 16,000 men. It just so happened that, in the mistaken impression that there was a hole in his line, Rosecrans shifted a division from the position where Longstreet was aiming his attack, therefore creating a real hole. The resulting breakthrough swept the Union center and right from the field."

Captain Jose Negron, Commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt., took up the story from there. "Maj. Gen. Thomas, Commander of the Union left, rallied all the Union soldiers left on the field. He then fought the Confederate Army to a standstill, allowing time for the rest of the Union Army to retreat to Chattanooga, retreating himself at dark." Mr. Ogden stated that "Gen. Thomas's stand at Chickamauga earned him the nickname 'The Rock of Chickamauga."

The second day of the staff ride was used to tour the Chattanooga battlefield. Ogden described this battle as one of pure leadership. "After Chickamauga, the Union Army was put under siege by the Confederate Army. Rosecrans had lost confidence in himself. His Army beaten, his men starving, Rosecrans did nothing constructive to life the siege. It was only when Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, relieved Rosecrans and replaced him by Maj. Gen. Thomas that steps were taken to relieve the situation."

Capt. Anthony Morales, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt., then took over. "Grant implemented a plan to lift the siege. Union reinforcements were being sent to Chattanooga by various Union armies. The siege was broken by establishing a short supply route through the mountains surrounding Chattanooga. Maj. Gen. Hooker, with 20,000 Union reinforcements, seized Lookout Mountain in a decisive action. Gen. Bragg persisted in trying to maintain his position on Missionary Ridge. His army, its morale shattered by watching the Union successes under its guns, was in no condition to repulse an attack. This is especially true considering the Confederate soldiers had lost confidence in Gen. Bragg. With the Union forces assaulted Missionary Ridge, the Confederate Army broke and ran. Leadership was the key to this battle."

The officers from 2nd Battalion, 29th Inf. Regt., learned a great deal on the staff ride. Not least was the bravery shown by both sides in those bloody battles of the Civil War. For that reason and the knowledge gained through the application of air-land battle doctrine, the officers of 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regt., knew the staff ride was well worth the time and effort involved.

New insurance plans available

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Two new voluntary insurance conversion plans became available to former service members and their family members under an agreement by the Department of Defense with Mutual of Omaha Insurance Company as of Sept. 1.

The plans, U.S. VIP Renewable and U.S. VIP Temporary (new), are separate from the pending legislation sponsored by DoD to extend medical benefits under transition assistance during a force reduction.

The renewable plan continues to be available to separating members and their families, which includes former spouses married for at least one year, children attaining the age of 21 or 23 if they are students, wards, dependent grandchildren, and preadoptive children of active duty or former service members or retirees.

The contract, coverage, and benefits for both plans are the same, except U.S. VIP Temporary is a non-renewable plan that provides coverage for 90 days only and doesn't have cost containment features. Only former service members and their family members may purchase U.S. VIP Temporary.

Suggestions net cash for DOL members

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A member of the Directorate of Logistics was awarded $5,000 for winning the Army Ideas for Excellence Program Suggestion Award Oct. 4.

Chief Warrant Officer Ray L. Snell of the Parachute Packing Branch received the award from Chief of Staff Col. John D. Fuller for his suggestion of the consolidation of air drop equipment.

This suggestion proposed that all parachute items be transferred from the United States Army Infantry School Tables of Distribution and Allowances to the Directorate of Logistics. This consolidation reduced the number of parachutes and equipment by 898. The Army also realized an annual savings of $416,838.

"I'm estatic about winning the award, it's really great," said Snell."This program is a way for soldiers to incorporate their ideas into the system. My winning shows that not only is a soldier's input taken seriously, but the soldier could also reap benefits. The system really works." he added.

Also recognized was Kenneth L. Tingle, also of the Parachute Packing Branch, Directorate of Logistics, for his suggestion of adding reefing rings to pack closing loops on parachutes. Adoption of this idea will result in a more efficient method of repairing parachute pack trays. The amount of savings realized by the Army is intangible at this time. Tingle received $375 for his suggestion.

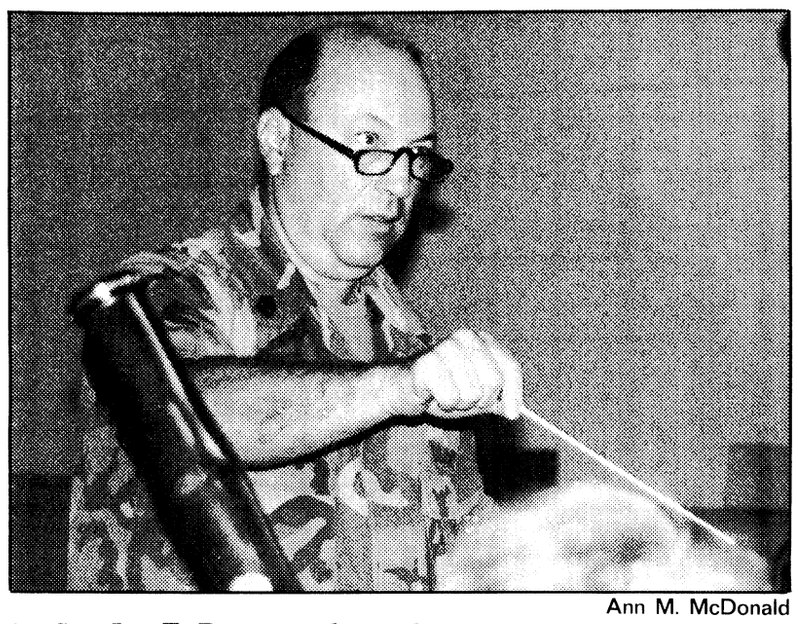
Army band conductor lets next parade pass him by



Ann M. McDonald

1st Sgt. Joe E. Bates conducts the post Army Band.

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

When most people retire, they throw in the towel, but for this first sergeant it's a little different — he's putting away his baton.

1st Sgt. Joe E. Bates of the 283rd Army Band has conducted his last concert, performed in his last parade.

Bates said the next parade, viewers will see him in is the next post retirement ceremony, where he along with the rest of the retirees will be a reviewer instead of a reviewee.

Bates entered the Army in 1966. He has been a member of seven bands during his military career, including two in Europe.

"I started my career playing the trombone, baritone and tuba," he said, "I've been a band director since I came here in 1986."

Being assigned here is also what Bates considers the highlight of his career.

"This is the best job I've ever had," he said. "At Fort Benning you know exactly what your position is."

"This post supports the band one hundred percent."

He said he sometimes misses playing in the band, but he realizes that in order to play he would have to practice and that is something he doesn't have much time for.

As a band director, he said, his duties increase ten-fold. Bates said the reason for this is because he is both a first sergeant and a band-director.

"It's a full time job," he said. "In order to have a good band you have to exercise good leadership and do everything you can to enhance the musical abilities of the soldiers in your control."

Seeing a soldier advance in that atmosphere is what he finds most satisfying about being a band director.

"It's great to see a new soldier come to a unit, settle down and then go to airborne school, win soldier of the quarter and attend PLDC (Primary Leadership Development Course)," Bates said. "Because, they are not only playing in the band but they are living the commercials."

Of course, he also looks back on his success stories. Those are the soldiers that have auditioned for the best band there is in the Army and made it.

There's also the times he's played for presidents and all sorts of dignitaries.

Those experiences, however, are not what stand out in his memory.

"I'll always remember the time we played for the 1250th anniversary of a little German town," Bates said, "It stands out because the U.S. was celebrating it's 200th anniversary."

"It made me realize how young and wonderful our country is."

That's why he said he was proud to serve in it. "Besides, the Army is the only place I know that allows you to retire young enough to start again."

He intends to work as a computer programmer.

Polka, Wurst und Bier

AUSA brings German tradition to American fest

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

When folks stepped through the gates of Fort Bennings' Bennett Field Oct. 5 and 6 they entered the land of lederhosen, beer, wurst and the polka.

Bennett Field was the site of the annual Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army Oktoberfest.

This was the first time the fest was conducted outdoors and on Fort Benning, according to AUSA representative Sgt. Wade Shell.

"In past years the association has set up the Oktoberfest at the Columbus Ironworks," he said, "The event was moved to post so it would more accessable to soldiers and their families."

Shell said attendence for the fest was good — especially for the first year at a different location.

Everything went very well," he said, "The weather was nice for both the fest and the Volkslauf and Volksmarch."

The lauf and march are the newest additions to the festivities and AUSA officials hope to keep the events a permanent part of the program.

Shell said the turnout for the race and walk didn't go as well as expected but a few diehard runners — including members of the Army 10 miler teams for both the post and the 75th Ranger Regiment showed up for the event.

Lloyd McDonald took home the gold for the men's category in the 10 kilometer race and area newcomer Deborah Baker took first place for the women.

Shell said the race wasn't the only form of exercise offered at the fest.

"I saw many couples getting a good workout on the dance floor in the Polka tent," he said. "Big John and the Atlanta Polka Band and the Mitternaechters have been a longtime favorite of people attending the festival."
He added that other forms of entertainment such as dancers, beauty queens and top forties bands were offered for the younger crowd.

"There were enough activities to keep the entire family happy," he said, "and if the looks on their faces as they were leaving the fest was an indication of how much fun they had, I'd say it was a success."

Browns Crossing celebrates with fair

Browns Crossing Craftsmen, Inc.

The Browns Crossing Craftsmen Fair, site of an extinct cotton ginning town dating back to the 1820s, will celebrate the 21st annual Craftsmen Fair on Oct. 20 and 21, near Milledgeville, Ga.

Displays and demonstrations of 150 quality artists and craftsmen works for the two day event will be shown. Few events recall the relaxed way of life that was once America. Crafts and skills thought to be lost art will appear from behind displays of unusual wares.

Other demonstrations of spinning, basket making, wood carving, painting, chair caning, quilting, bobbin lace making and broom making will be working continuously.

New this year will be tethered hot air balloon rides. Storytellers will be spinning and weaving tall tales for all who care to come and sit a spell. Dulcimer makers and players and the Back Porch Symphony, conducted by Sue Tomlin of Macon, will delight you with "toe tapping music." Something to entertain and delight all the senses.

Delicious homemade food will be provided by the Volunteer Fire Department and the Milledgeville Lions Club.

Browns Crossing is located between Milledgeville and Macon, Ga. It is nine miles west of Milledgeville, turn at the Browns Crossing sign on Georgia Highway 22. The Fiar is open from 9 a.m. til 6 p.m. Admission is $4 for persons over 12 years of age; $1 for ages 6-12; and free for children under six.

BOSS program lets single soldiers have voice in planning fun

Army News Service

Single soldiers who may have felt overlooked in the "Total Army Family" are getting increased attention through a program sponsored by the U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va.

Concerned that soldiers without families were feeling left out of installation leisure activities, the center developed Better Opportunities for Single and Unaccompanied Soldiers to help single soldiers aged 18 to 25 make their voices heard.

"The Army has not neglected single soldiers, but morale, welfare and recreation programs have not kept in tune with young soldiers coming into the Army," said Sgt. Maj. John Findley, the center's sergeant major.

"Music has changed. The way they want to do things has changed. The BOSS program brings these young soldiers in and gives them some responsibility and the opportunity to let the MWR folks know what they need and want."

Initially, a team from the center conducts a two-day BOSS workshop at Army installations worldwide to help local commands identify ways to improve the quality of life for their single soldiers.

According to Brian Smith, marketing manager for Directorate of Community Activities, Fort Benning had its workshop last summer with representatives from here and Department of Army meeting in Atlanta.

About 15 to 20 singles take part in the workshops, along with key MWR staff members and members of the installation command.

At Fort Benning, soldiers are chosen from each major unit on post to serve on the local BOSS committee are single or unaccompanied, ages 18 to 25, have at least one year remaining at that installation and are able to speak in public.

Wanda Kirkpatrick, Alexandria BOSS program manager, said the workshop staff seeks to involve soldiers who are the "cream of the crop." The soldiers must also be willing to volunteer their time to organize and keep the local BOSS program going permanently.

During a workshop, participating soldiers identify problems and concerns, discuss their needs, establish goals and agree on a plan to improve the local quality of life for singles. The soldiers also get training in leadership skills, presentation skills and group dynamics.

The intent, said officials, is to help these soldiers speak for the single-soldier population on post. At the end of the conference, the soldiers brief the installation command on the results of the workshop and their plans for continuing the program.

"This workshop is so important," said a soldier from Fort Knox, Ky. "We are now trained in how to speak for the whole single-soldier population, not just for ourselves."

Initially, the BOSS program at each installation receives $10,000 in seed money to fund activities.

Kirkpatrick said once the seed money is spent, the post BOSS committee is on its own to keep things going. During the workshop the soldiers are reminded of this and encouraged to take responsibility to generate funds for their program.

Fort Jackson, S.C., is one of 31 installations with an active BOSS program, said Kirkpatrick.

Soon after the soldiers on the BOSS committee there got organized, they sponsored a disc jockey contest. Contestants performed as DJs, scratching records and rapping before an audience for prizes. An admission charge at the door raised money for future activities. In this case, the money subsidized a trip for soldiers to a professional basketball game in Atlanta. For $20, soldiers got a game ticket, transportation to and from the game and a motel room for the night.

According to Smith, Fort Benning has similar events about six to seven times a year including trips to Destin, Fla.

Another event is planned for Oct. 20, said Smith. Local radio station FOXIE 105 FM will give a live remote broadcast from the main Noncommisioned Officers' Club.

Finger food, music, and dance competition will be attractions at the event. Prizes will be given away by Schedule Airline Ticket Office Travel Services, FOXIE 105 and other affiliated sponsors.

For more information, call 687-1232.

Kirkpatrick said with the support of Sergeant Major of the Army Julius W. Gates, installation commanders and single soldiers, the BOSS program is reviving single-soldier interest in installation-sponsored leisure activities.

Said one soldier from Baumholder, Germany, "This program gives the soldiers an opportunity to have a voice. BOSS has a bright future."

Army Marksmanship Unit shooters rise to top at state championships

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Like cream, the shooters of the Army International Rifle Team rose to the top in the Georgia State Prone Smallbore Rifle and the 300-Meter International championships.

Twenty-five shooters (eight Army, one Marine and 17 civilians) showed up in Dawsonville, Ga., for the Georgia State competition held Sept. 28 to 30.

Sgt. Bradley J. Carnes, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, was the overall winner of the event with 3,198 total points.

Other USAMU soldiers who placed overall in the top four were Capt. Glenn C. Park in second place and Pvt. 2 Richard R. Leach in fourth place.

In the "iron sight" event Park took first with 1,598, but Carnes was on his tail with 1,598.

Leach, the newest member of the team, got his first taste of competition with the smallbore rifle championships.

"I was a little nervous at first. But when I started shooting and saw that my scores were holding well with the others I began to relax," said Leach. "My main competition was my own teammates. Of course, not taking anything away from the civilians, they were giving us a run for our money."

In the 300-Meter International Championship held Sept. 14 to 17 at Hook Range, the USAMU soldiers shot through their Marine, Air Force, National Guard, and civilian competitors scores to place first in 95 percent of the events.

Thomas A. Tamas won both the standard rifle (1,151 points) and English match (1,790 points). Tamas was also a member of the first place teams for free rifle, standard rifle and English match. Other first place teammates were Carnes, Capt. David B. Erickson, Maj. Boyd D. Goldsby, and Capt. David E. Chesser.

Currently members of the Army International Rifle Team have gone to Chino, Calif., to compete in a selection match for the U.S. Marksmanship Team.

Hispanic month

Dan R. Wilson

Hispanic displays

Staff Sgt. Wayno Sanchez answers questions from students from Muscogee County school districts during the School of the Americas' Hispanic Cultural Display Sept. 28 at the Fort Benning Officer's Club. More than 1,000 students experienced the customs and culture of 19 Latin American countries.

Marge Brasfield

Peru heritage

Fiorelli Cerdena brought Peru, her native country, to Dexter School fourth graders as part of Dexter's celebration of Hispanic month.

The Hispanic Month celebration was observed in each of the eight Benning schools. There were Hispanic speakers, displays, food tasting parties, social studies lessons and a variety of writing activities designed to focus on Hispanic culture and the accomplishments of Hispanic people. Wilbur School's celebration even included a student parade.

SPIRITUAL

Healthy families avoid 'going bananas'

Seminar teaches couples to face problems head on, find solutions together

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Whatever you do, don't think about a banana.

Think about something you want, but not a banana.

Banana.

A group of more than 100 couples at the Sightseeing Road Chapel Oct. 4 tried not to think of a banana; not to picture in their minds or recall the taste or smell of the familiar fruit.

They tried to force the image from their minds, replacing it with any other image other than. . .a banana.

Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia, chief of the Chaplains' Family Life Center used this exercise to make a point about how peoples minds work when they try to force something out of it — like a problem.

Experts say the only way to face a problem is head on, and that is how healthy families function: facing problems and finding solutions.

Healthy families were the basis of the seminar given by Roggia and Chaplain (Capt.) Jonathan Smith, 43rd Engineer Battalion chaplain.

"It is terrific to have this many couples together at once for this type of seminar," said Roggia. "This is a rare opportunity for them to examine their own relationships and seek resources to solve problems or build on already healthy marriages."

Smith said he thought the seminar would be a strong supplement to the family support group and the family orientation program.

He said he believed that one of the most important benefits of the program is that it brings out couples who need counseling and would not otherwise seek it.

"Role playing is a vital part of our program," said Smith. "It helps couples see not only that others share their grievances and argue the way they may, but they can also see the process of negotiation. They can learn how to work through a disagreement as opposed to walking away mad."

Individuals are asked to participate from the audience:

"Honey, Johnny has been picked up for shoplifting again, what are you going to do about it?" a young mother asks her husband as he walks through the door at the end of the day.

"Don't bother me now! People tell me their problems all day long," he bellows in her general direction.

"Come in here, I want to talk to you!" she orders in a command voice.

"Leave me alone," he balks, thinking how unfair it is for her to tell him what to do, after his first sergeant has been eye-balling his every move for days.

The couple is not really married to one another, and Johnny is a name out of a hat, but the drama of family tension is all but make believe.

Designed to help couples be aware that their lives can improve and they can solve problems daily, the seminar addressed many subjects including communication and positive ways to interact with one another.

When asked what the most important thing individuals in the group learned from the seminar, some of the comments were:

"Many of my problems are like those of others."

"Statements are better than questions."

"All problems are solvable."

"When solving problems, you should handle it one problem at a time."

"If you know the solution, you can solve the problem."

According to experts, a look at how a healthy, happy home can function can guide couples in a positive direction. For more information on resources for a healthy relationship, contact unit chaplain or the Chaplains' Family Life Center at 545-1760 or 545-5301.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital has added an evening appointment clerk to its staff.

In the past, if patients had to cancel an appointment after duty hours, they called and left a message on an answering machine.

MACH's evening appointment clerk will reschedule when possible, and provide information about appointments. Patients should call 544-3862 or 544-4356.

There are times when something comes up, after the clinics at MACH are closed, that makes it impossible for patients to keep appointments already scheduled, the evening clerk will be able to help patients in cases like this.

It should be emphasized that this clerk will not replace the appointment clerks for all clinics. When possible, patients should call the clinic appointment clerk during regular clinic hours.

When there is an opening in the appointment computer, the evening appointment clerk can reschedule some appointments, but not all cancellations. When she is unable to do so, she will have the clinic appointment clerk call the patient back with a new appointment.

The evening appointment clerk will also be able to provide appointment information or verification.

The answering machine will still be used from 8 p.m. until 8 a.m. for late cancellations. Patients are asked to call 544-3862 during these hours and to leave a message on the recorder.

They should include their name, family member prefix, (sponsor is 20, spouse is 30, children start with the oldest as 01, second is 02, etc.) and social security number. They should also leave the date and time of the appointment they wish to cancel and the clinic in which they are scheduled.

For more information, call Sue Jones, supervisor of patient appointment system, at 544-3862.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Howard O. McGillin Jr.
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I recently moved here to take a six month course before shipping to Germany. I decided that I could not afford the insurance payments in Germany on my car, so I decided to get rid it. I had leased the car instead of buying it. I found out that I cannot just turn the car in. The dealer said something about a residual amount. It was over $2,000. What is going on here? I thought a lease was over when I wanted it to be.

A. You are learning the same hard lesson that many people who have leased automobiles have discovered in the past few years. Leasing an automobile does give you the opportunity to make smaller car payments than you would if you purchased. However, the lease is a valid contract. When you signed the lease, you agreed to a number of terms.

One of the terms is the method used to calculate early return of the automobile. When you leased the car, you agreed to make payments for a certain period of time. The contract spells out the details of how you may get out before the scheduled end. If you fail to follow these instructions, you will be in breach of the contract and could be sued.

Bring your lease to an attorney in the Legal Assistance Office, and have it explained to you in more detail.

Another problem that comes up in leases occurs when someone decides to allow another person to have the car and start making payments. Most leases have a provision that accelerated the lease if this happens. Acceleration means you have to pay the full balance of the lease amount, or be sued for breach of the contract.

You may wonder how the lease company would know that you did this. Rest assured, the lease companies are very careful about where their property is.

They will notice if payments start coming from a different account or address. They may also be notified by the Department of Motor Vehicles that the car is registered in someone else's name. We strongly advise against trying to transfer the vehicle if the lease does not allow it.

If you have any questions about leasing a car or any consumer item, come to the Legal Assistance Office and schedule an appointment to see an attorney.

It makes sense to try to have a lawyer look at your lease before you sign it. If you want an appointment, call 545-3281.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Army Energy Awareness Week will be recognized Monday to Oct. 20. The theme for this year is "Energy Conservation — People Make It Happen."

Each fall, the Army sets aside one week to focus on progress in energy conservation over the past year, and to make a renewed commitment to progress in the upcoming year.

Special attention is also placed on educating the Army community of the need to conserve energy and ways in which to do it.

At Fort Benning, special activities emphasizing the purpose of the energy program have become a tradition. This year's campaign is no exception.

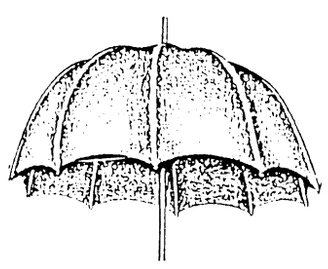
In the dependent schools, students will be giving coloring books and handouts and teachers will receive lesson plans filled with energy conservation information and projects for school and at home.

Energy Branch personnel will be visiting many facilities around post and rewarding those practicing good energy conservation habits.

Displays will be furnished on several interesting and informative energy sources which can be seen on display room in Infantry Hall, Martin Army Community Hospital and the Main Post Exchange.

Family housing occupants will receive a letter from the commanding general accompanied by a seal saver that promotes energy conservation.

For more information on Army Energy Awareness Week activities, call 545-SWAT (Save Watts and Therms).



For hourly forecast updates, call Weatherline® at 298-0000

Family Appreciation Day

2,700 spouses, children show up for festivities

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the Fort Benning community were treated to 5,000 slices of pizza Sunday during Desert Shield Family Member and Soldier Appreciation Day at Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

According to Debbi Klinner, manager of Pizza Hut on South Lumpkin Road, the restaurant chain wanted to show its gratitude and support for the sacrifices everyone from Fort Benning is making.

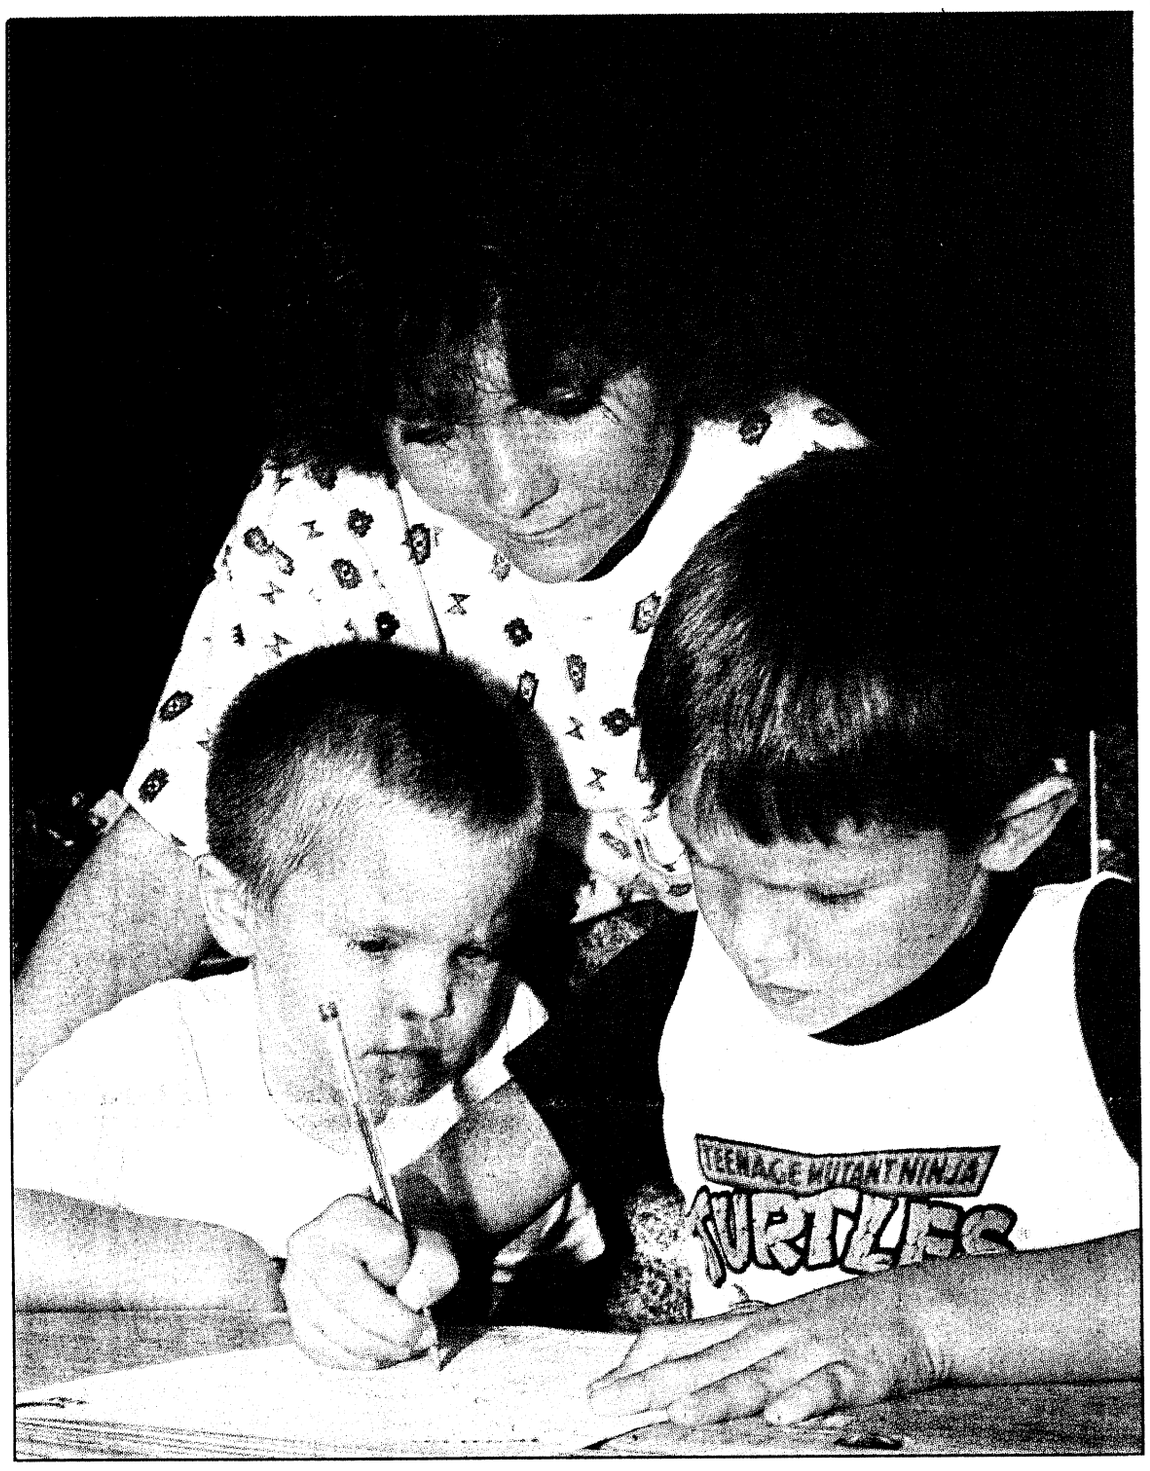
In conjunction with AT&T, Pepsi-Cola and WGSY-Sunny 100, the Pizza Hut appreciation day attracted about 2,700 hungry families, Klinner said.

Free pizza wasn't the only thing soldiers and families received at the event. Pepsi-Cola gave away drinks while children received balloons and the chance to get a free photo taken with "Big Hut," Pizza Hut's mascot.

The restaurant gave away "gold cards" to military identification card holders or Desert Shield card holders. The gold card is good at any Pizza Hut restaurant and is worth a 20 percent discount on purchases at the restaurant.

About 2,000 free AT&T facsimiles forms were given away to families to fax messages to soldiers involved in Operation Desert Shield.

During the appreciation day, the Adjutant General's office took the opportunity to issue more than 100 Desert Shield identification cards to family members.



Matthew Hetrick writes a facsimile message to his father who is stationed in the Middle East while his mother, Janet, and his brother, Ryan, look on.

Post team wins Army 10-Miler

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Running their way to victory, the Fort Benning "Doughboys" brought prestige and honor to this post by winning the Army 10-Miler in Washington, D.C., Oct. 14.

The five-man team won the military open division with a total time of 3:42:48. Each team member placed well overall out of 5,004 runners.

Staff Sgt. Lloyd McDonald Jr. of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit placed 14th overall. McDonald, who is the team's captain, ran the best place and time on the team.

2nd Lt. Michael G. Dolan, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry, came in 30th, while 2nd Lt. Sean D. Drake, Co. E, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf., placed 43rd.

Staff Sgt. Clemmie Jones Jr., Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Noncommissioned Officers Academy, ran 127th overall, and Spec. Douglas D. Daub, Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion, came in 419th overall.

"I received orders from Command Sergeant Major Edward E. Garrett (post sergeant major) to select runners for the team and win the 10-Miler," said McDonald. "I feel it's safe to say the mission has been accomplished."

"A lot of sergeant majors and first sergeants were very supportive," said McDonald. "Each unit supported us 100 percent."

The team will present the trophy to Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, Fort Benning's commanding general, Oct. 30. This will be the second time a 10-Miler trophy has been presented to the post.

Engineers, medics head to Middle East

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Several units from the 36th Engineer Group and the 34th Medical Battalion deployed to Saudi Arabia Friday to participate in Operation Desert Shield.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commanding general, and Col. Hank Miller, 36th Engineer Group commander, were on hand for the ceremony at Engineer Field.

Cavezza expressed his confidence in the units' soldiers and assured the troops that their family members would be well provided for.

Miller also gave the troops encouragement and urged them to do their best.

The 36th's Headquarters and Headquarters Company departed along with the 34th's Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment; 690th Medical Company, a ground ambulance unit; 498th Medical Company, an air ambulance unit; 74th Medical Detachment, a preventative medicine unit; and 5th Medical Detachment, an optical fabrication unit.

Their mission will be to provide medical support to troops in Saudi Arabia, according to battalion officials.

Thurman plans retirement

Gen. Maxwell R. Thurman, the commander of the U.S. Southern Command, has been nominated by the president for retirement.

Thurman, whose candor and hard-driving attitude earned him the nickname "Mad Max" throughout the Army, is being treated for acute leukemia at the Johns Hopkins Oncology Center in Baltimore.

Marksmanship unit seeks sharpshooter soldiers

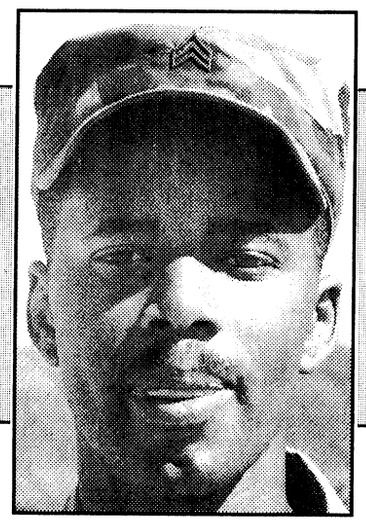
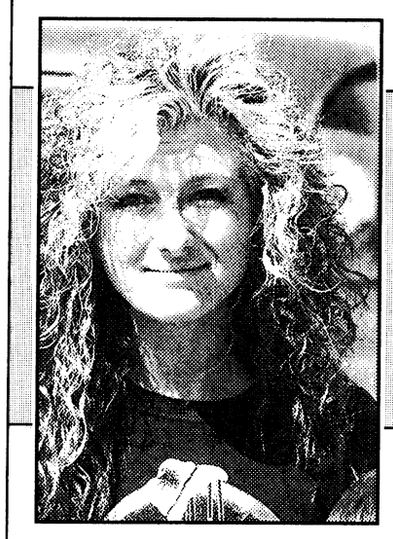
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

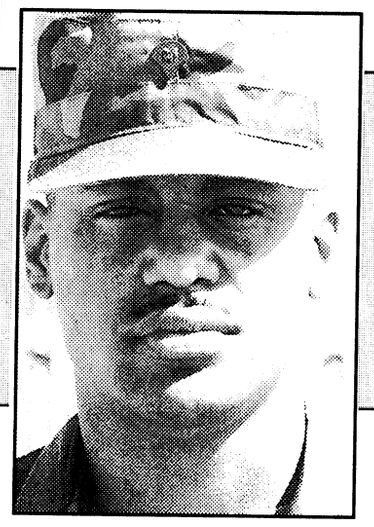
What living conditions should soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield expect?



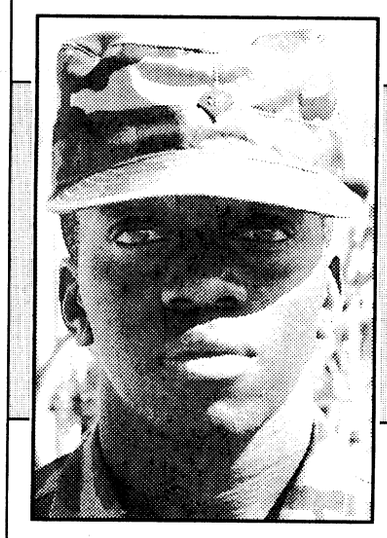
Sgt. Ricky E. Allen, Veterinary Services, U.S. Army MEDDAC — "In a situation like Operation Desert Shield, soldiers have to adjust and learn to make the best of it."



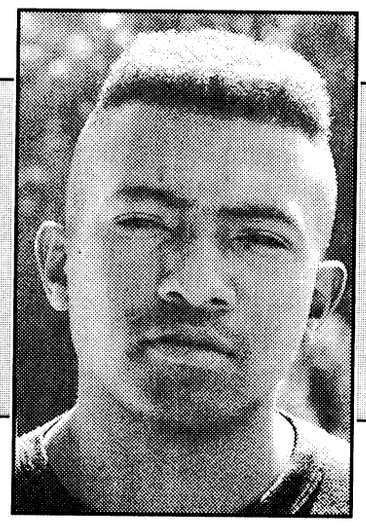
Denise M. Dennis, family member — "The conditions are probably the best that can be achieved under the circumstances right now."



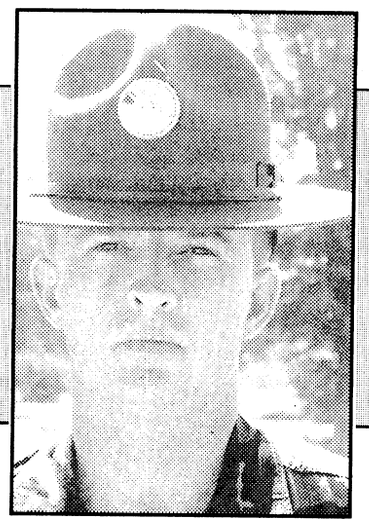
Spec. Stephen J. Caldwell, HHD, Aviation Training Brigade, Ft. Rucker, Ala.. — "The soldiers are in a bad situation, but as long as everyone is in the same boat, they just have to learn to deal with it. If rumors are true about some soldiers staying in air-conditioned areas, then that should be looked into."



Spec. Roderick O. Clark, HHC, 1st Bn., 10th Aviation Regt., Ft. Rucker, Ala. — "There are a lot of rumors floating around about what is really going on over there."



Sgt. Richard D. Hamm, Co. A, 1st Bn., 507th PIR — "Everyone there is subject to the same rough conditions — it's the nature of their mission. As long as everyone is treated the same way, there should be no complaints."



Staff Sgt. Kevin J. Gaughan, HHD, Drill Sergeant School, NCO Academy — "The troops are well trained and understand the situation. Except for a few individuals, the troops are dealing with it well."

Guest column draws fire

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Master Sgt. Hard Rock came growling into the office with tattered sheets of newspaper pages.

I silently breathed a sigh of relief when I saw the pages were from the local downtown newspaper and not the Bayonet.

But, I was soon to learn it wasn't the paper he was mad about.

"What's with this Army of ours?" he asked. "Seems like we got nothing but crybabies. Are our sergeants auditioning for roles as the Whiners on 'Saturday Night Live?'"

"Let me, guess," I said, "you're referring to a guest column in the local newspaper."

"You got that right," he said, "but that ain't all. I've been hearing a lot of crying and whimpering from family members, too. Do you realize the Red Cross processed nearly 10,000 emergency action requests so far. That's one every 38 seconds. And the bullets ain't even begun to fly."

"Lighten up man," I said. "I notice you're not there. You don't know what it's like. And your family isn't missing you just now.

"I might not be in Saudi," he said. "But first of all, I came into the Army with both eyes open. I knew I was signing up to go to combat if necessary, not because it gave me security and some college money.

"Second, my wife knew what to expect when she married me. I didn't keep no secrets from her. She knew there could be war and there'd certainly be separations.

"And third, Mr. Smart Specialist, I did my time in combat, so I know what it's like."

"Hey, I hear ya, sarge. You knew when the recruiters said 'be all you can be,' that meant prepared to train and to fight; that when they talked about college fund money, that meant a bonus you'd get after you did what Uncle asked you to do.

"But I agree. Some of 'em got suckered. They came in to learn a trade. Not go to war. They didn't sign up for family separations."

"Also, talking about separation to a young spouse is a lot different than actually doing it. They think in terms of hours, not days or weeks or months. Especially when there are infants around and bills that have be paid, and the spouse never told them about budgets or writing checks.

"Finally, when you went to Vietnam, you knew you'd be there a year unless you came back sooner. These guys don't know anything. And that makes it tough," I said.

"Well I'm sorry if the snake oil salesman did 'em in," Rock said with a snort. "And I'm sorry we've mollycoddled our family members by providing them everything under the sun and took away all their initiative. And I'm sorry that I knew I'd be back in a year from Vietnam.

"But tell me this, since when do you announce troop movements in advance. In Saudi you're talking unit rotation, not individual.

And explain how those guys made it through World War II and Korea.

"They sure never knew when they'd get home. Some of 'em were there for three and four years. They came back when the war was over.

"But I'll tell you what gripes me most. That's when an NCO complains in public, complains he don't know what's goin' on. Can you believe that. He's part of the chain. It's his job to find out. It's his job to hustle and get support for his troops. Not to sit around feelin' sorry for hisself."

I agreed that Rock had some valid points, but told him that lumping all soldiers in with a few, and all family members in with a few, was a disservice to the majority, that I personally knew several — soldiers and family members — who were out there, making the best of a bad situation.

I hope Rock gets a chance to meet some.

Negative remarks, innuendos upset officer's wife

This is in response to the recent letters and articles in the Ledger-Enquirer newspaper written by or about the wives of soldiers currently participating in Operation Desert Shield.

I am married to a major in the 197th Infantry Brigade, and I find the innuendos that have been printed that allude to officers somehow being treated better than the average soldier extremely distasteful. I resent the insinuations by "anonymous" wives whose husbands "are just NCOs" and are suffering unduly because officers are taking what little luxuries there may be.

To set the record straight, my husband is not sleeping in an air-conditioned billet, drinking ice-cooled drinks. He is in the sand with his soldiers. He eats MREs, waits in line to take a shower, and does not "call home whenever he wants."

I send him basic toiletry items, as these are unavailable to everyone, regardless of rank. My mail is just as unreliable and infrequent as anyone else's.

I am also bothered by the Ledger-Enquirer focusing on a very small, negative minority who complain about the inconveniences caused by our spouses being called to do their duty — and it is their duty, no matter what may occur.

Despite what the average reader of that newspaper may be led to believe, the majority of us are coping very well. We are doing so because we have had a lot of practice. Our husbands spend much of their time away, at places like Fort Irwin, training for situations like the one we find ourselves in today.

Being alone to cope with day-to-day events is nothing new to us — we are married to professional soldiers. The Ledger-Enquirer reporters have noted on numerous occasions that we are a closed-mouth group. This is not because we fear reprisals, as the newspaper might have its readers believe, but because we do not expect anyone else to be able to understand. Unless you've been here, you cannot.

I am not complaining. Let me emphasize that it is a life we freely choose to lead. It is not easy, but the rewards are many, and we know that our spouses have some of the most important jobs in the world today.

We also know that conditions will be, and are being, upgraded in Saudi Arabia as time and supply lines permit. We also know that rotation dates will be published as soon as it is feasible to do so.

Meanwhile we wait, missing our husbands and thinking of them daily, but going on with our lives. That is just as it should be.

Angele M. Propst

Unsung heroes of Operation Desert Shield go unnoticed

The unsung heroes of Operation Desert Shield are the ones who cry themselves to sleep at night because they are lonely and have no one to talk to.

They pray each time the phone rings, "Oh God let it be him. I just want to hear his voice and know that he is alright."

They handle all the problems of the home alone. The car breaks down, the kids get sick. The ones they are tending can range from a newborn to an aging in-law.

The unsung hero looks at four wall and cries, "Where is my release?" The weight of the world is suddenly upon her shoulders. The world suddenly becomes a world of making do without — without her partner, lover and best friend. (There is) no one to tell how she feels — no arms to crawl into to protect her. Her world is turned upside down, and all of a sudden she is all alone without her security. She must make ends meet trying to pay bills and feed the family and still have some money for gas and maybe some extras.

Sometimes she wants to stomp her feet and cry. She wants to yell and scream and run away. But, she stays and waits by the phone.

She deals with all that is thrown at her. She holds her head up high and counts the days until her loved one will come home.

She writes cherry letters and sends boxes of goodies. She waits for the mail everyday hoping for letters — some words of love and some words of encouragement. She holds her world together for the one who is away.

When this is over, there will be movies made and songs sung about the soldiers. But nothing will be said about the one who silently waits by the phone and cries at night — the one who deals with the day-to-day crisis at home.

We are the unsung heroes of Operation Desert Shield. We have the hardest job in the world. We are Army wives.

CG urges energy awareness

October 14 to 20 has been designated Army Energy Awareness Week. The week has been set aside as a time for all members of the Army and supporting agencies to re-evaluate our use of and dependence on energy resources.

It is a time for us to renew our commitment to energy conservation.

Energy conservation is important to our military effectiveness, economic security and standards of living.

Fort Benning's energy funds are budgeted based on goals set by higher headquarters. Energy used above that amount must be funded from other sources.

Our ability to provide services, maintenance and improvements may be hindered by energy waste and abuse.

On a larger scale, we as a nation face a serious dilemma in our dependence on oil from other nations. The current precarious situation in the Middle East illustrates this point.

Our reliance on a continuous, plentiful supply of imported energy makes us vulnerable.

I encourage you to eliminate energy waste and abuse. The success of the Army Energy Program cannot be attained by a few individuals.

Everyone living and working on Fort Benning is challenged to conserve energy.

Poem

By Tammie R. Wallace

You went to do a job that you were needed for
There really wasn't much time to prepare
But you were proud of what you were trained to do
You didn't want to leave the love ones
But you went anyway.
You left with a head held high, shoulders back and the look of Determination to do a job well done was on your face
It was hard on you as well as those that you had to leave behind
But you're a proud and mighty one
You'll do a job that's done with pride and with courage
And soon you'll return to those that you left behind and will be greeted with arms opened wide.
We're proud of the men and women in the U.S. Army. God bless you all.

Editor's note: Tammie Wallace's husband, Staff Sgt. James R. Wallace, of B Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, is stationed in Saudi Arabia.

History remembered

Soldiers admire "The Beginning," a 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment print, which symbolizes the 82nd Airborne Division's and the 505th PIR's first combat operation in World War II. The print depicts six paratroopers on a rocky hillside securing an objective and symbolizes courage, confidence and tenacity of paratroopers in combat. The print was presented to the 507th PIR by Col. Larry Mowery, a WWII veteran as a token of friendship. The 505th and the 507th spearheaded the 82nd's assault into Normandy on the eve of D-Day, June 6, 1944, at Sainte Mere Eglise.

Staff writer, post newspaper capture journalism awards

By Agatha Hudson James
Bayonet editor

The post newspaper and one of its staff writers have won awards in the 1990 Training and Doctrine Command's Print Journalism Competition.

The Bayonet captured second place in the civilian enterprise metro newspaper category while Sgt. Ann McDonald, a Bayonet staff writer, won first place in two categories.

McDonald came out on top in journalism and photojournalism and was voted TRADOC's military journalist and photojournalist of the year.

Judges for the competition rated newspapers from TRADOC installations worldwide.

The Bayonet and McDonald now advance to Department of Army competition.

Nation celebrates Eisenhower's birthday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The nation celebrated the birthday of Dwight David Eisenhower, who was born 100 years ago Oct. 14. "Ike," as he was called, was leader the victorious Allied forces in Europe in World War II.

Ceremonies were held at Gettysburg College, near where Eisenhower retired after his second term ended in 1961, and in Abilene, Kan.

Hundreds of World War II veterans were on hand to share in the festivities.

Eisenhower spent most of his childhood in Abilene and called it home. He died in March 1969 at Walter Reed Army Hospital in Bethesda, Md.

He was the 34th president of the United States and was elected to two full terms. He was named supreme commander of NATO forces in Europe in 1950 and directed the D-Day invasion in Europe on June 6, 1944. He had more than 30 years of military experience when he was elected chief executive in 1952.

Post begins fall cleanup

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning will begin Fall Cleanup Week Monday.

The purpose of the campaign is to improve the appearance of the post, according to Sgt. 1st Class Audie R. Dame, non-commissioned officer in charge of Community Life.

The housing areas on post affected are: Bouton Heights/Davis Hill, Custer Terrace (to include Battle Park Homes), Indianhead Terrace, McGraw Manor, North Main Post and South Main Post. Each community is sponsored by a major subordinate command.

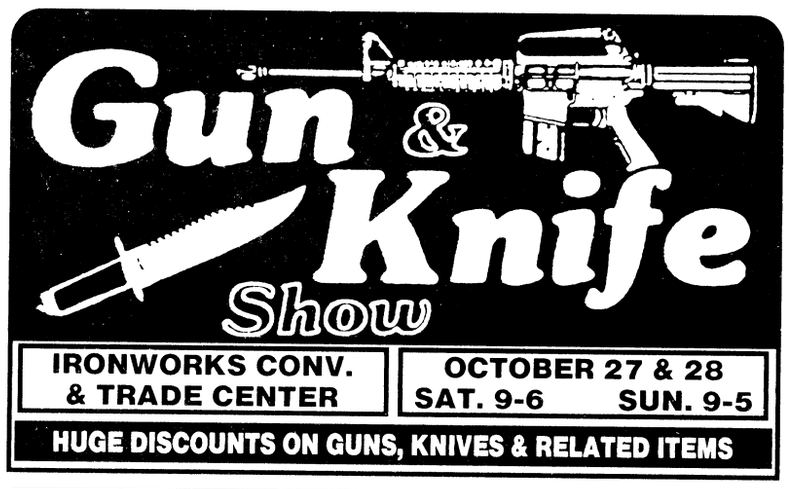
Commanders are responsible for providing assistance to the communities during fall cleanup, said Dame.

"Commanders have been asked to release soldiers residing in government housing for one-half day during Fall Cleanup Week to allow them to do their part in cleaning up their area," said Dame.

"Commanders are also asked to allow area coordinators to be released as required during the same period for the purpose of coordinating units during clean-up operations, as well as releasing them Oct. 30 to inspect their specific areas."

Occupants are responsible for cleanup of their quarters whether or not release from duties is feasible.

Efforts during off-duty hours and cooperation from family members is highly encouraged, Dame said.



Spouses record video messages to send overseas

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard

Several family members and friends of deployed soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield are communicating with their loved ones in a way that's "better than a letter."

Project Better Than a Letter," a campaign sponsored in part by the local Montgomery Ward, gives a new twist to sharing hometown news with those who are far away — absolutely free.

"This is a good opportunity to support the troops in Saudi Arabia, and keep their morale up," said Michelle Kaleugher, Montgomery Ward's project assistant.

"This is a no-pressure, no-cost deal, and we hope more people will come and take advantage of the program. I want everyone to participate, even if they don't have a family member or friend in Saudi Arabia," said Danielle Simmons, family member.

"You can make a tape and send it to any service member. It's free, so what can it hurt? It could really brighten up some lonely soldier's day." she added.

"It's really neat to be able to communicate with my husband this way," said Caryl Murdock, family member. "It seems a little strange holding a one-sided conversation with the camera. But, it's almost like he's really there."

For more information, contact Montgomery Ward at 322-6761.

Soldiers to get Saudi burgers, french fries

USAIC Public Affairs Office

American military commanders have signed a contract with a Saudi firm to populate a region in Saudi Arabia with fast-food stands selling U.S. combat troops hamburgers, french fries, pizza and other American specialties.

According to Saudi and American officials in the business agreement reached Monday, the first seven fast-food stands will be in operation by next week. Eventually more than 60 stands will serve 200,000 troops, even those in remote outposts.

DESERT SHIELD HOT LINE Q & A

● I heard a mail tent burned down and a lot of mail was lost. Is this true?

It is true that a 197th Infantry Brigade mail tent caught fire. However, it was a small fire and no packages or letters were destroyed. Some mail was slightly damaged but was delivered.

● I would like to receive copies of The Bayonet on a weekly basis while my son is deployed. How do I subscribe to it?

To subscribe to The Bayonet, call (404) 323-1234. Personnel will take your subscription over the phone. The subscription price is $12 per year. There is no charge for The Bayonet itself; the $12 charge is to cover the mailing cost.

● I heard that 65 tons of mail to the 197th Inf. Bde. was sitting in a warehouse in England. Why hasn't this mail been sent on to Saudi Arabia?

When the 12-ounce restriction was first lifted, the Army Postal Service was flooded with mail and a logjam was created. Some mail did get backed up in England, but that has been corrected.

● I have not received any mail from my son since he has been in Saudi Arabia. How can I find out if he is all right and if he has been writing and I just have not been receiving his mail?

You can call his rear detachment commander, and he will relay a message to your son's commander in Saudi Arabia to find out if he is writing. Also you can call the Fort Benning Desert Shield Hot Line at (404) 545-HOME (4663) and the information will be forwarded.

● We are tired of seeing the same thing over and over on channel 13. Can't something be done about this?

The Fort Benning Public Affairs Office, which controls the station, does not have the man power to run the station. We realize seeing the same thing over and over can be boring, but with the limited staffing available it's the best that can be done.

● I need my husband's pay voucher (leave and earnings statement). How do I get it?

Call your husband's rear detachment commander.

● Why are there are still numerous problems about the mail service to Saudi Arabia?

The Military Postal Activity in Washington is aware that some problems still remain, and they are working to correct them. Furthermore, commanders in Saudi Arabia are aware there are still problems with the postal service there and are working to correct them.

Family members should be aware that the command realizes the effect mail has on the morale of soldiers and, they have given it high priority.

But, getting all the problems corrected is no minor task. As of today, most problems have been corrected and those that still remain are being investigated.

Marksmanship unit trains trainers

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

As the Gulf crisis remains in limbo for Army soldiers, training is still the number one priority. Whether they're fresh out of basic training or a seasoned soldier, one must always be ready for the unexpected.

The Instructor Group of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit trains trainers in helping their soldiers be ready for the unexpected.

"We've been training a lot of the units that are deploying to Saudi Arabia," said Sgt. Carl Dooley, fire arms instructor.

The group's primary mission is to train non-commissioned officers, from various units, in marksmanship.

"We teach NCOs different marksmanship techniques so they can train the soldiers of their units better," said Dooley.

In order for leaders to receive this training, they have to submit a disposition form to the marksmanship unit's operations office stating the type of training they want and the dates available for them to be trained.

"If the unit calls us about scheduling training, we check the calendar to see if we can accommodate them," said 1st Lt. Jerrold J. Scharninghausen, instructor group officer.

The "train-the-trainer" course normally last three days. This includes classroom instruction and range firing time.

"Depending upon the unit's need, we can either extend or reduce the training time," Dooley said.

The first day of training is classroom instruction and dry fire (practice exercise). "This helps the students develop techniques that are being taught within the class," noted Dooley.

Day two consists of learning proper zero and grouping on a 25-meter range. "We also teach them quick-kill techniques during the second day of training," Dooley said.

On the third day, the students go to a known distance range. "This range allows them to zero at a known distance, rather than a battle site zero," added Dooley.

The group also trains drill sergeants in marksmanship.

"We're here to work with the NCOs, not against them," said Dooley. "My classes are conducted in an informal manner. I tell them all of the techniques I know that have helped soldiers become better shooters. Then if they have questions or comments that's their chance to have input."

The drill sergeants of Company B, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment (basic training unit) received training from the instructor group recently. They admit that the course helped them to teach their soldiers better marksmanship.

"This is good reinforcement training for us," said Staff Sgt. Tom A. Graves. "There were additional procedures we learned that will help us speed up our current process of training."

"I think the training we received was outstanding," added Sgt. 1st Class Cecilio R. Callender. "They brought out excellent points during the classroom instruction. We, as NCOs, need this type of refresher course before we get to BRM (basic rifle marksmanship)."

In any event, the instructor group is available to help units shoot a perfect score to keep them ready for the unexpected.

NCOES courses add marksmanship skills

TRADOC News Service

A new program in Non-commissioned Officer Education System courses will teach NCOs how to conduct and manage their units' marksmanship training.

The program, which began Oct. 1, will also require students in basic and advanced NCO courses to qualify on the weapons range in order to graduate from the courses.

"The intent of the new program is to train the trainer," said Capt. Todd Brown of Training and Doctrine Command's individual training directorate. "It will provide the expertise to the people most responsible for ensuring that training in the units is executed to standards — the NCOs."

According to Brown, instruction centers on "how to" train rather than "what to" train. Requiring NCOs to qualify with weapons adds to their credibility as trainers of their soldiers.

Instruction will be delivered in a progressive and sequential manner. In basic courses, NCOs will be taught how to apply marksmanship fundamentals, such as dry fire techniques, remedial training and coaching techniques. They will also be taught to assist soldiers on the range and enforce weapons and ammunition safety.

In the advanced courses, NCOs will be taught how to identify and correct problems in unit marksmanship programs. They are also involved in planning and supervising pre-range training and operations of the range.

The program was developed by the U.S. Army Infantry School, Fort Benning, in conjunction with the U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy and TRADOC headquarters.

Benning soldiers make U.S. Shooting Team

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Six soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit have been selected for the U.S. Shooting Team after competing in selection matches Oct. 5 through 9.

The selection matches were a second chance for the shooters to try out for the U.S. team. A previous selection match was in June in Los Angeles, Calif., for both rifle and pistol events. Those who didn't qualify or couldn't make that match received their opportunity this month.

For pistol events, final selection matches were held in Dallas, Texas. Five shooters from the Army International Pistol Team earned their spot at the national level — Sgt. 1st Class Jimmie W. McCoy, Sgt. 1st Class Rojello Arredondo, Staff Sgt. Jonathan P. Frazer, and Specialists Stanley and Audrey Hayes.

McCoy won the free pistol event; Arredondo won in air pistol; Audrey Hayes shot in women's air pistol; Stanley Hayes and Frazer competed in rapid fire pistol — Frazer won the event.

The rifle selection matches were held in Chino, Calif., where only one shooter from the Army International Rifle Team was chosen — Maj. James E. Meredith, who competed in small bore rifle.

Now that the shooters are on the U.S. team, they have a chance to try out for the Pan Am team next year.

Safety first when hunting

Safety Office

With the hunting season about to get into full swing, hunters are encouraged to make the 1990 hunting season accident-free. Each year tragedies and injuries occur in the woods from hunting accidents.

One cause of hunting accidents is the shooter failing to make certain of his target. A safe hunter never shoots at a flash of color, a sound, or a shape in a tree. Responsible shooters fire only at what they they want to hit. In many cases you must first identify the sex of the game before deciding to shoot. All responsible hunters are certain what is in the background to ensure that people, buildings, livestock, vehicles or equipment will not be hit.

There are no experts in firearm safety, just responsible firearm users who gain experience by following safe handling procedures. Human error is the most common cause of accidents. Knowing this, we should always think about why, and not just how, accidents happen. By obeying all safety rules you can have a safe and enjoyable hunting season.

Flag run comes to Benning

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1990 American Flag Run will begin Oct. 27 from the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington National Cemetery and arrive in Columbus Nov. 10 at 4:30 p.m.

Members of Fort Benning's Company E, 4th Battalion, Ranger Training Brigade and Commanding General Maj. Gen Carmen J. Cavezza will be among the many volunteers who will run the American flag for designated distances through the States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Alabama in this year's run.

Cavezza will run the last mile on Nov. 10 and the rangers will carry the banner from Columbus, passing through Fort Benning, on to Fort Mitchell National Cemetery in Alabama the morning of Nov. 11 for the concluding ceremonies.

A welcome ceremony will be held in Columbus Nov. 10 at 4:30 p.m., with the festivities to take place at the Columbus Promenade.

"It's like a wedding; everything is falling together," said Ann Garrison, Columbus' welcome committee chairperson. "This is the third year. We need more things like this to bring us together and be thankful for what we have."

The American Flag Run is an event held to enhance patriotism, to promote pride in the American flag, and in particular this year, to support an honor the members of the U.S. Armed Forces serving in the Middle East.

The public will also have a chance to run during the last mile. Anyone interested may meet at the First Alabama Bank in Phenix City at 4 p.m. on Nov. 10 and donate $1.

Any contributions which exceed expenses for the run will be used to support the military family members left behind who are in financial distress due to the deployment.

Pop teaches son the ropes

By Marilyn Balzarini
Bayonet editor

Most new soldiers who leave home to begin their Army careers must leave family and friends behind. Thirteen weeks of Infantry One Station Unit Training amounts to a long separation from loved ones.

Pvt. Michael Dinkens hasn't had much chance to get homesick, though. Calling home only costs him a quarter.

Sgt. 1st Class David Dinkens who is an instructor assigned to Company A, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry, has been teaching Infantry OSUT soldiers since coming to Fort Benning from Korea.

When Michael began his infantry training in August, he had a head start on his fellow soldiers. His father has been teaching him soldier skills ever since he can remember. "My dad taught me this class (land navigation) when I was still in high school," Michael said.

David said he first showed his son about land navigation when Michael studied geography in junior high school. "I always shared the things I learned in the Army with Mike," David said.

Michael is in the Indiana National Guard assigned to the 1st Battalion, 152nd Infantry, and attending Vincennes University. He is studing law enforcement and criminal investigation.

He said he chose the Infantry because he feels it is more exciting than some of the other Army corps. "The Infantry does most of the fighting," he said.

Michael said OSUT is pretty much what he expected. He said he is enjoying it so much that he is seriously thinking about leaving the National Guard to join the regular Army.

Discipline is the aspect of Infantry training Michael finds the most challenging.

The other soldiers in his platoon look to him for guidance. Pvt. David Cook said Michael sets the example. "We always ask him (Michael) a lot of questions because he already knows a lot of the things we are learning," Cook said.

After completing OSUT on the 2nd of November, Michael will attend Airborne School. The Dinkens said they considered trying to attend airborne training together, but David's knee problems will keep him from going.

Old 'Officers' Club' goes out in a blaze

By James Kearns
5th Ranger Training Battalion

Oct. 2 was the day of the demise of "The Snaplink," a famous structure at Camp Frank D. Merrill, home of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion and the mountain Phase of the U.S. Army's Ranger School.

Originally the farm house of the Black family, it remained when the farm was purchased by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on May 17, 1949 and incorporated into the Chattahoochee National Forest. It was the only existing building when the Mountain Ranger Camp moved from Camp Wahsega to its current location in 1960. Because it was the only permanent building at the time (everything else was housed in tents), it was officially designated as Building No. 1.

In the following thirty years, the Snaplink was used for many things. First used to house unmarried officers, it was most recently used as guest quarters for visiting dignitaries and temporary quarters for incoming and outgoing cadre families.

It was also home of Camp Merrill's version of an "officers' club," called the Marauder Room after Merrill's famous rangers of World War II. The camp itself grew from a temporary training site to become a permanent part of the Dahlonega/Lumpkin County community as well as a critical portion of the Army's most demanding leadership training and development school.

In August, Army engineers declared the building a fire hazard and uneconomical to repair. This was the kiss of death for the faithful Snaplink, which would have to be razed to make room for a future transient quarters building.

The most feasible method of disposing of the Snaplink was to burn it to the ground and clear the rubble.

Because the camp is on National Forest Service land, permission to burn the building had to be obtained from both the U.S. Forest Service and the Environmental Protection Agency. After permission was granted, a controlled burning was conducted Oct. 2.

The Camp Merrill Fire Station, a contingent from the Lumpkin County Volunteer Fire Department, and two volunteer soldiers from the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Pfc. Howard Diggs and Pvt. Robert Wheeler, were on hand to ensure the fire did not get out of control and spread to either the surrounding forest or nearby buildings. All made use of this rare opportunity to practice firefighting techniques on an actual burning building.

The fire was ignited at about 3 p.m. by Sgt. Reed Leisinger from Oklahoma City, Oklahoma , the instructor who has been at Camp Merrill the longest. It raged for almost three hours, consuming the frame building. The pile of ashes was still glowing and smoldering the next morning.

Editor's note: Kearns is a captain and the adjutant of the 5th RangerTraining Battalion. The story was reprinted with permission from The Dahlonega Nugget.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

With the departure of soldiers to Saudia Arabia, some family members may not have attended the self-help class when they arrived at Fort Benning and are unfamiliar with the procedures for taking care of the air conditioning and heating units in their quarters.

Although housing occupants are not authorized to make major repairs to their quarters or utilities systems, they are responsible for minor maintenance and making sure their quarters' air conditioning and heating systems are properly maintained and operate efficiently.

One of the tasks residents are responsible for is changing air conditioner and heater filters.

Neglect of air conditioning and heating systems is a growing problem in housing areas. Occupants who do not change the filters run the risk of causing severe damage to the units, in addition to wasting energy and reducing the quality of air in their homes.

Cleaning and repairing these neglected air conditioners can take many man-hours and may require replacement of the condenser unit. The occupants responsible can be charged for the full cost of the repair, including all parts and labor.

Also, the quality of the air circulated through the house is reduced. Dirt and dust is blown through the system and into the air instead of staying trapped in the filter.

Dirty filters cause energy waste. Because the air flow is obstructed, an air conditioner or heater must work harder and longer to force air through the filter.

Changing a filter in an air conditioner or heater is a simple and quick task. They should be checked often and changed at least once a month.

If you are interested in attending the self-help class, contact the Directorate of Engineering and Housing at 545-4207 for information.

New filters are issued at the Unit and Housing Support Branch, building 385 on Vibbert Avenue. Hours of operation are 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday. The telephone number is 545-4207 or 545-1121.

If you have questions, call the Energy Office at 545-SWAT (Save Watts and Therms).

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. When my husband and I were in Germany, we signed a contract to buy some land in Florida from a company called General Development Corporation. We had been making payments for four years, but we received a letter informing us that GDC is going bankrupt. What does this mean for us? Are we going to lose the land, and are we going to lose the money we have paid?

A. You are one of many Army families who entered into land purchase contracts with GDC, an arrangement where you agree to buy a lot for a specified price, paid over time, and where you do not receive a deed to the lot until the entire purchase price is paid. GDC has filed a Chapter 11 bankruptcy, otherwise known as a reorganization of a debtor engaged in business.

The Chapter 11 is a procedure available to financially troubled businesses, in which the company can find some breathing room while at attempts to get its business back on track. In a successful Chapter 11, a company is able to carry on its normal business activities. However, in some cases, the reorganization does not work and the company is liquidated.

In this case, GDC is still in the initial stages of the reorganization and is still in operation. Given the large number of consumers potentially affected in this case, particularly the number of people in your situation, the Bankruptcy Court has taken a special interest in seeing to it that the rights of lot purchasers are protected. We understand that the following steps have been taken:

1. GDC has transferred a significant amount of its land holdings into a trust. It will continue to be able to give lot purchasers deeds to their lots once the purchase price is fully paid in accordance with the lot purchaser's contract.

2. There is a possibility that GDC will not be able to complete development of some of its sites (i.e., finish roads, storm drains and the like). If you are contracting to purchase a lot in one of the undeveloped sites, we understand that GDC is offering a "lot trade" program in which it will offer to trade a lot in one of its developed sites for yours. We are still attempting to get information on this program.

In a situation such as this, there are no guarantees as to what will happen. If you feel insecure about GDC's ability to make good on its contract, you may cancel your land purchase contract without any further liability to GDC by simply ceasing your monthly payments. However, it is quite possible that if you do so, you may never see any of the money you paid in back. Although the contract provides a formula for refund in the event of cancellation, GDC's track record for making refunds is apparently not good. Before the bankruptcy was filed, GDC was sued in a class action by lot purchasers who claimed that GDC was not making refunds appropriately. Moreover, the bankruptcy itself protects GDC from refund claims to some extent.

Certainly, if you decide to cancel, you will want to submit the proof of claim form that you received in the mail along with the bankruptcy notice. In fact, we are advising all lot purchasers to submit the proof of claim, whether they are canceling or not.

The Legal Assistance Office is trying to obtain information about the GDC case as it develops. If you are a lot purchaser, we suggest that you make an appointment with us so that we can try to help you with any specific questions. You can contact the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281.

Santa begins work

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Santa's Castle opened officially Oct. 11 with a briefing for unit commanders.

The "castle" is actually a charity organization that collects and repairs toys for distribution among post families in need of financial assistance. Due to Fort Benning's active participation in Operation Desert Shield, the number of families requiring the services of Santa's Castle will be even greater, said Sue Eckhart, the organization's chairperson.

"The holidays can be a rough time for many families financially, but with the recent deployments of so many soldiers, it's going to be almost impossible to have a real Christmas in many households. We want to help alleviate the burdens on these families," said Eckhart.

Couple donates gifts to soldiers

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Due to the recent deployment of a significant number of troops from Fort Benning, a major interest in the welfare of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield has risensharply. In the community surrounding the post, the number of yellow, red, white and blue ribbons flying from car antennas and community group and projects cropping in recent weeks is indicative of this growing concern.

The major focus has been on married soldiers, single soldiers with dependents and their family members.

One Columbus couple has chosen another group to "adopt" as a pet project. This couple is concentrating on a group that has almost seemed to fade in the background — the single soldier deployed to Saudi Arabia with no family or ties back home.

Donald and Dana Marsolf collected donations from several local businesses to be distributed among the troops over in the Mideast.

"Dana and I wanted to contact those soldiers who really don't have anyone to connect with, sort of adopt a soldier, if you will. In doing some contracting work for Chief Warrant Officer Montgomery of the 36th Engineer Group, we were made aware of the great amount of items that the soldiers in the Mideast were lacking. It was then that we decided to collect items that the soldiers could really use over there. This is just a small way of showing our support," said Donald.

The couple managed to collect over six boxes of goodies for the troops — 20 lbs. of stationery, 6,000 envelopes, novels, candy, crossword puzzle books, personal hygiene items and a slew of pens and pencils make up the bulk of the care package.

The donation was received by the 36th Engineer Group on behalf of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"It's excellent when private citizens take the time and initiative to gather items that are desparately needed by soldiers in Saudi Arabia," said Chief Warrant Officer Rufus N. Montgomery, Sr., the unit's food advisor."If there were more people who were like the Marsolfs, we probably wouldn't have conflicts like the current one in Saudi Arabia," he added

Engineers construct playground

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the 36th Engineer Group and 43rd Engineer Battalion performed one last duty only hours before their deployment to Saudi Arabia to take part in Operation Desert Shield.

They constructed a playground.

The units began constrution on the new playground at the Youth Activities Services Center Friday. Several family members were on hand at the construction site, providing food and support for the troops.

"We've been promising to construct this playground for a while,"said Col. Hank Miller, commander of the 36th Engineer Grp. "We just wanted to deliver; make good on our promise before we leave."

"This is just one of the things we're capable of accomplishing on post," said Lt. Col. Philp Jones, commander of the 43rd Engineer Bn. "There are so many other projects that we would like to make happen here on post. We're a capable, hard-working unit. We just would like to put some of that energy to work for Fort Benning."

MEETINGS

West Point Society — The West Point Society of Fort Benning and Columbus will meet today at noon at the Fort Benning Officers Club in the Corregidor Room. Lunch will be first followed by the meeting at approximately 12:30 p.m. Cost is $4.50. Uniform for military members is duty.

The guest speaker will be Maj. Micky Sparrow, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. Sparrow recently spent four months in the Middle East with a mobile training team. He will discuss current operations in the Middle East.

Benning schools set 'fright nights'

Fort Benning Schools

On Oct. 26, four Fort Benning Schools will host their annual Halloween carnivals. Dexter, McBride, Patch, and Wilbur schools will be filled that evening with games, food and Halloween surprises.

There will be a wide range of traditional Halloween carnival activities to delight youngsters at all four schools. Two schools, McBride and Patch, will have a haunted house. There will be a train to ride to Patch School. McGruff will be a busy police dog that night; he's visiting both Dexter and McBride schools. Wilbur School is the place for the Great American Pumpkin Shootout as well as a Halloween costume contest.

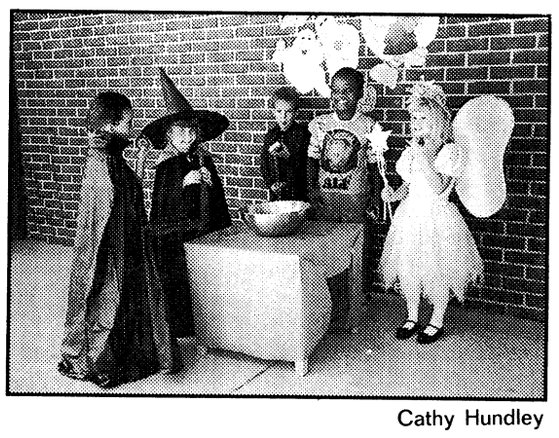
Hot dogs, popcorn, chips and soft drinks will be in abundance at the carnivals. There will be pizza and yogurt at Wilbur. For cotton candy, McBride School will be the place.

Costumes are optional attire for the evening. Most of the schools will have costume parades or fashion shows, so that youngsters can give this year's costume a try before Halloween actually arrives.

All of the schools will be starting and ending their carnivals at different times. Check below for information about those times as well as for information on ticket sales.

Dexter's Halloween Happening will be at the school from 6 to 8:30 p.m. Advance tickets can be purchased at the front door of the school beginning Tuesday through Thursday from 8 to 8:30 a.m. and from 3 to 3:30 p.m. Advance tickets are 10 for $1, and eight for $1 that evening.

McBride's Halloween Carnival will be outside from 4:30 to 7 p.m. Advance tickets will be on sale from 8:30 until 10 a.m. in front of the school office. Tickets will go on sale again from 1 to 3 p.m. in the cafeteria. Advance tickets will be on sale for 12 for $1. Tickets at the door will be 10 for $1.



Cathy Hundley

Patch's carnival starts at 4:30 and ends at 7 p.m. Advance tickets will be on sale in the office. Tickets are 10 for $1 in advance and eight for $1 that evening.

Wilbur's carnival will be from 5 to 8 p.m. There will be no advance ticket sales. Tickets will be five for $1 at the door.

Opera house showcases 'Love Letters'

Springer Opera House

The Springer Opera House will showcase two Southern celebrities when A.R. Gurney's "Love Letters" comes to Columbus for a one-night-only engagement Saturday.

In "Love Letters," A.R. Gurney has written an evocative account of two charter members of the privileged set. In less than two hours, we see Andrew Makepeace Ladd III and Melissa Gardner over a period of 50 years.

"Love Letters" will be performed Saturday at 8 p.m. on the Springer Opera House mainstage. Tickets are $12.50 for the general public and $10 for Springer season ticket holders and Springer Society members. Call 327-3688 for reservations.

197th sends news from desert

Brigade commander: troop morale remains high

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the 197th Infantry Brigade brought news from the desert in a noon teleconference Saturday at Building 4.

The brigade's commander and command sergeant major spoke with the media about conditions in Saudi Arabia and the morale of the soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield.

Representatives from WTVM Channel 9, the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer newspaper and post publications, as well as the 197th Infantry Brigade rear detachment commander, Maj. James Wails, and the rear detachment commander of the 197th Support Battalion, 1st Lt. Sheila Flowers, were present.

"We are currently occupying a brigade tactical area in the middle of the desert about 30 kilometers wide," Reid said.

"Morale remains high among the soldiers in spite of our bare bones existence. On a scale between one and 10...morale could be measured at seven."

Reid commented on the fact that the living conditions in Saudi Arabia were not as rough as the annual field exercise at the National Training Center at Ft. Irwin, Calif., in which the brigade participates.

"We have portable latrines (toilets) and showers on hand, so sanitation needs are met adequately. Conditions are really much better (here) than (at) the NTC," said Reid.

Hot meals are also served to the troops twice a day and these meals are similar to the ones available in the dining facilities, he said.

Meals, Ready to Eat are served once a day, usually as the midday meal, he added.

There have been no real heat injuries, and since the troops set up in the desert, only 42 soldiers in the entire brigade have had to go to sick call, he added.

Sgt. Maj. Jimmy Bowles, brigade command sergeant major, was also on hand to speak to the media.

"We're training hard and actually having fun. A range was constructed by 72nd Engineer Company recently, and Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment was the first unit to practice firing maneuvers on it," he said.

Sgt. Jeffrey Davies of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment said he was doing fine, and that the conditions in Saudi Arabia were not as bad as the rumors make them.

Soldiers make best of 'temporary' home

By Anthony Lanctot
197th Infantry Brigade

Since the deployment of the 197th Infantry Brigade to Saudi Arabia, many soldiers have found ways to adapt to their new desert surroundings.

One group of resourceful soldiers has shown a flair for making the desert their temporary home. 1st Squad, 2nd Platoon, Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, has transformed a camouflage net hooch into their living room. The area was dubbed "Hotel Gator," and each soldier in the squad contributed at least one idea.

A mailbox was constructed by Cpl. Patrick Patton. It resembles a scaled-down model of a little red barn.

"I'm doing anything I can to keep my mind off my wife and daughter," Patton said.

Cpl. Bernard Cook built a cardboard television set complete with working knobs, remote control and replaceable screens.

Sgt. Lee Flatt, squad leader, coordinated the effort on a four-foot-wide game board patterned after "Monopoly." The game is called "Desert Shield Monotony" and was constructed entirely by hand and features carved playing pieces and dice. "It keeps our morale up and adds a little touch of home to our living area," Flatt said.

The platoon has been training recently for the possibility of conflict. Each day, they conduct classes and practical exercises that relate directly to essential infantry tasks.

"The detailed drawings gave a realistic depiction for the class to identify and compare characteristics of the different vehicles," Fenzel said.

The squad's innovation is common to the "Gators" of Alpha Company and characteristic of American soldiers everywhere, Fenzel said. Their resourcefulness is rivaled only by their fighting spirit, he added.

DESERT SHIELD BRIEFS

No flags allowed on Desert Shield BDUs

Soldiers deployed for Operation Desert Shield are not authorized to wear the U.S. flag on their BDUs.

Some soldiers have been issued BDUs, with the United States flag already attached, from stocks used during Operation Just Cause in Panama last December.

Officials in the DCSPER Soldier Policy Branch at the Pentagon say that the flag may be authorized for wear on BDUs during joint or multi-national operations, at the discretion of the joint commander. For Operation Desert Shield, that authority rests with Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander in chief of U.S. Central Command.

Schwarzkopf has not authorized wear of the flag, and a Soldier Policy Branch spokeswoman said he isn't likely to make that authorization.

Desert troops to get transistor radios

The airwaves toward higher troop morale in the Middle East recently were tuned in by the World United Services Organization.

The Electronics Industries Association will be donating 11,300 portable AM/FM radios and 17,400 batteries to service members stationed in the Persian Gulf region, say USO officials.

The USO expects all the radios to arrive in Saudi Arabia by Nov. 19, thereafter to be distributed throughout the region.

As part of its efforts to bolster the morale of service members assigned to Operation Desert Shield, USO had asked the electronics industry to donate hardware.

Bad address equals delay for Mideast mail

According to the Military Postal Service Agency, individuals who don't know a specific service member's address are incorrectly using the "Any Service Member" APO 09848-0006 and FPO 09866-0006 in an attempt to locate the service member.

This incorrect address creates a delay in mail getting to the service member and also delays properly addressed mail for other service members.

The following address should be used by the general public to send mail not addressed to a specific service member of the Army, Air Force and Marine Corps in Saudi Arabia: Any Service Member, Operation Desert Shield, APO, NY 09848-0006.

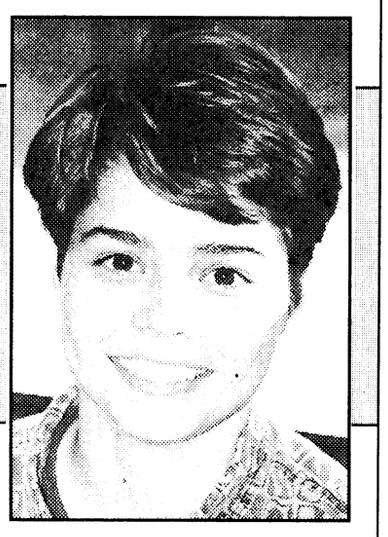
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

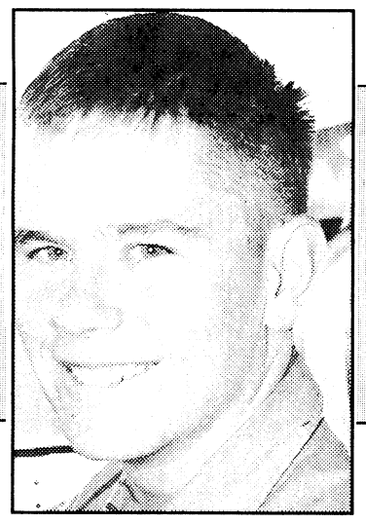
What impressed you most at the Association of the U.S. Army's national meeting in Washington, D.C.?

Sgt. 1st Class Richard Parks, Co. B, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regiment — "I was impressed by all the different products everyone was trying to sell. It gave me a chance to see the latest equipment pertaining to my job."

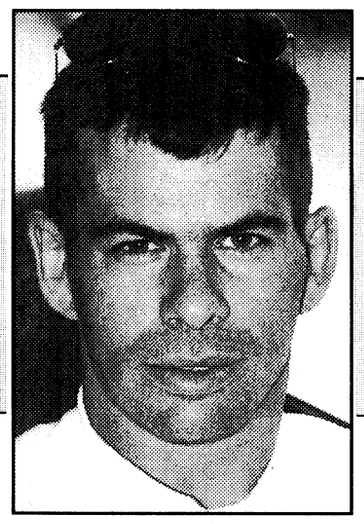
Sgt. Maj. James Williams, USAITC Operations — "I was impressed with the Marshall dinner — the last event of the meeting. Attending the dinner enables you to talk to people who are on top of issues concerning the Army."



Pfc. Heather Davis, HHC, 4th Bn., 36th Inf., USAITC — "All the different exhibits from the companies that build equipment for the military was quite impressive. I think it's nice how they all come from different places to display their wares in one location."



Spec. Jason Wheeler, 283rd Army Band, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "The displays for this type of event can be pretty boring. But everything I attended was very informative and interesting, especially the exhibits, which gave me a chance to see what equipment is used throughout the Army."

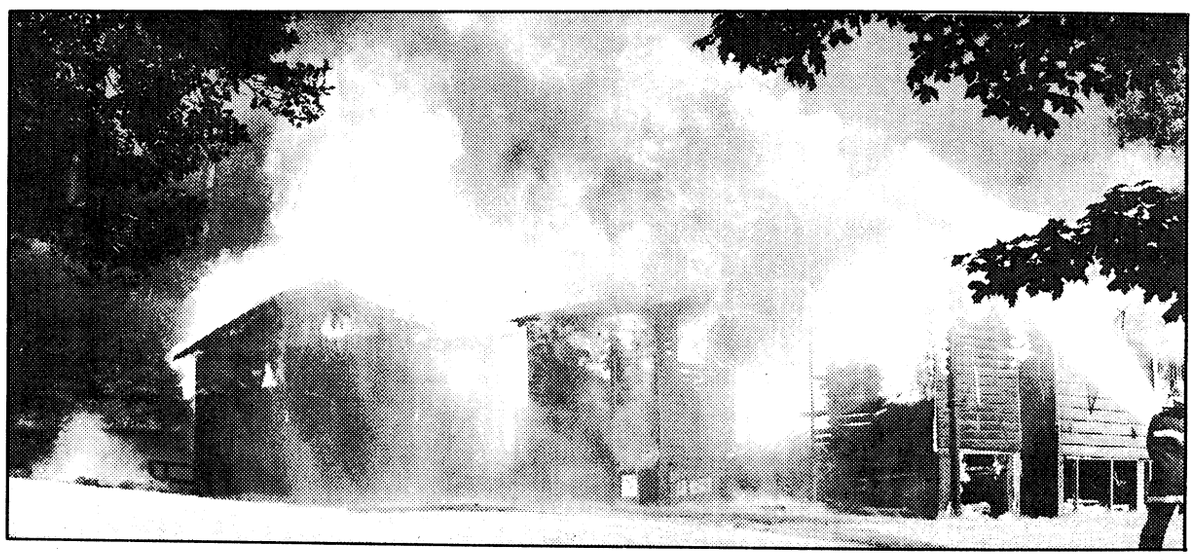


Staff Sgt. Barry Todd, Co. B, 4th Bn., RTB — "I liked having the opportunity to interact with senior leaders in the Army."

Sgt. Jennifer Pearson, HHC, RTB — "'Silent Heros,' the USAEUR presentation about the Army and its role in Europe since 1945 was informative and entertaining. I was able to meet the USAEUR commanding general, command sergeant major and the people responsible for putting the presentation together."

Snaplink's demise comes as surprise to some folk

USAIC Public Affairs Office



Dimitri Pavlov

Firefighter keeps flames under control on famous structure at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga.

The red eye stared at me unblinking. It sternly told me 2:04. That was two oh four in the morning and the telephone was shrilly jangling my brain into a mass of jello as I pawed for the receiver.

"Er-row," I groggily muttered into what I hoped was the mouth piece.

"Whash thish Army comin' to?" a voice thickly laced with liquor and tears came to me as though from some distant planet.

"I'm sorry, I don't philosophize at two in the morning," I said, beginning to hang up.

But a pitiful, pleading, pathetic voice made me pause.

"Whoosh ever did it should be strung up. Ish not right," the man blubbered into the phone.

"What in heaven are you talking about?" I asked before realizing what I'd just done.

"Doncha read the Bayonet?" he asked, seemingly surprised at my question.

I admitted I did, hoping he wasn't going to hold me responsible for misspelled words and misplaced modifiers.

I soon learned my midnight caller was a retired Army officer, a former ranger. One of his first assignments as a young officer had been as a lane instructor at the Mountain Ranger Camp.

He'd executed his lane walking duties in an exemplary manner and had been "awarded" the extra duty as Snaplink custodian. And now he'd just read in The Bayonet that it — the Ranger Department's first building — had been burned to the ground.

The Snaplink was the camp's officers' club. It was run on an honor system. The officers would help themselves to beer, sodas, fudge brownies, chips, pickled eggs, or hot sausages preserved in what can only be described as formaldehyde.

They'd enter their "purchases" in a book and in addition to keeping the club stocked, it was also the custodian's duty to collect what was owed. This proved no easy task since the rangers spent most of their time in the woods, cycle breaks being only a day and a half every three weeks.

Additionally, there was the matter of ping pong. When the officers weren't walking, working in the Tactical Operations Center or writing up evaluations, if they were in camp, they'd play ping pong — usually for a case of beer a game.

As a result, some officers had no bar bill while others had bills that equaled their monthly salaries.

The caller went on to talk about the beautiful oak bar, the paneled walls, and the pride of the camp —the large screen color TV. He remembered how the lounge is where the medevac pilots waited for their calls, sitting in front of the TV, drinking sodas — those who had any time off would be out trying to catch trout in the pristine streams of north Georgia.

The officer remembered the visits of the "Big Ranger in the Sky," the Ranger Department commander. He remembered that Col. I.A. Edwards drank Old Grand Dad and Col. Y.Y. Phillips Jr. was a scotch man.

My suspicion was this caller was drinking quarts of both in memory of these two as his words became more and more slurred and the sobbing more and more pronounced.

By now, the red eye on the clock radio was telling me it was after 3 and I could humor the man no longer, so I told him he was absolutely right, the Army had no business burning this historical structure to the ground. "Write a letter to the editor or, better yet, call the PAO," I said, and rang off, hoping he'd not be able to remember my name or look me up in the phone book.

"God is Great"

By Sarah R. Huffam

God grants us the courage to provide,
And He is always there by our side.
God's grace works wonders,
And He won't let us fall under.
Our service members have gone thus far,
Just in case there is a war.
To the Mideast where there is Saddam Hussein,
We will be talking in Jesus' name.
God give us the strength to accept,
Our men and women who are walking step by step.
To do their duties as they were told,
Just like in the days of old.
God help us to do our best,
And He will take care of all the rest.
God is the glory and the power,
He is with you in every hour.
My God is great, come what He may,
If you do right, you will join Him one day.

Trick or treat Wednesday

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Halloween trick or treating on post will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday.

Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old.

Preschool children must be accompanied by a person 14 years old or older.

Limit trick or treating only to the housing area in which the participants reside and approach only residences with lighted entry ways.

● Light-colored costumes, short enough to prevent tripping and non-flammable, should be worn by children.

Costumes can be marked with reflective tape or glow spray paint so they can be reflected by automobile headlights or other lights.

● Observe all basic safety precautions. Use sidewalks and crosswalks; don't cut through yards.

● Look in all directions before crossing the street.

● Wear masks or head coverings that do not restrict vision. Use colorful facial makeup as much as possible.

● Pet owners should take measures to prevent pets from being a nuisance or a menace to children.

● Also, parents should caution children about the wrongs of vandalism and causing damage to the property of others.

● Make sure children carry flashlights after dark. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lit with a battery device, not a candle.

● Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats.

● Give your child a full meal before he or she goes trick or treating.

● Inspect all treats with your child before he or she is allowed to eat any of the goodies.

● Advise your child to only go to homes that have a porch light on.

● Do not allow your child to eat any candy that is not wrapped.

Report any suspicious activity to the Fort Benning Military Police desk sergeant at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

Hostage's wife shares experience

I would like to share something with those of you whose spouses are in Saudi Arabia.

My family and I were in Kuwait when the Iraqi soldiers invaded. We had been there for less than two months.

My children and I were fortunate enough to be the first to get out of Kuwait. My husband, on the other hand, was not as lucky.

I would like to reach you all in the hopes you can gather a little more strength from your souls to deal with what is going on.

I thank each and every one of your spouses through you, for they are protecting my husband and all the other hostages in Kuwait and Baghdad, Iraq.

I realize it is hard on each and every one of you who have children or are pregnant and even those of you without children.

It's hard being on your own, worrying and being stressed out. I truly understand.

But, you know what? While my family and I were in Kuwait, we became one big family with the other 300 people who were in the same predicament.

We laughed, we cried, and fought just like any family would.

We needed each other and still do. And for me, these people will always be a big part of my family.

The military is supposed to be one big family and I think through experience, that if we would become one big family, our lives would become a lot easier.

We are all in the same boat.

A Hostage's Wife

Mudcats extend thanks to Benning

I wish to take this opportunity to personally thank the entire Fort Benning community for your loyal support of Mudcats baseball during our years in Columbus.

The patronage received from the soldiers and families became one of the cornerstones upon which we established our Southern League baseball franchise.

The Mudcats players and staff grew to rely upon the numerous military fans for inspiration and motivation, not just for their enthusiasm.

We all gained "something special" from their attitudes of professionalism and dedication as they willingly defend our nation.

All of the Mudcats offer our prayers to the men and women who are currently serving their country in the Persian Gulf.

We sincerely hope they return safely to their loved ones as soon as possible.

A special thanks to the members of the command's exhibition parachute team, "The Silver Wings." They never failed to bring out the patriotism and pride of our fans with their precision parachuting demonstrations.

Post chief of staff urges bike safety

In 1989, 62 soldiers were injured in bicycle accidents.

A 22-year-old corporal who was an infantryman was killed at another installation. The total injury cost including the fatality was $1,201,316.

Bicyclists must realize they have rules of the road to follow just as motorists do.

All traffic signals, signs and devices should be obeyed.

Bicycles should not be ridden on running tracks, sidewalks or other areas usually reserved for pedestrians.

Riders should also be aware that it is hard for motorists to see them, especially during darkness or inclement weather such as fog or rain.

Bicyclists should always wear highly visible clothing such as reflective vests worn by motorcyclists.

The more visible you are, the safer you are.

Riders should ensure that their bicycles have good reflectors, front and rear.

Bicycles ridden at night should be equipped with a headlight and taillight, which are visible from a distance of 300 feet.

Since head injuries are most common, helmets should also be worn.

You cannot rely on others for your safety.

Benning soldiers attend AUSA national meeting

By Ann M. McDonald
Bayonet staff writer

More than 30 soldiers representing various units on Fort Benning spent a week in Washington D.C. attending the Association of the U.S. Army National Meeting.

The meeting began Oct. 14 and ran until Oct. 17 at the Omni Shoreham and Washington Sheraton hotels in Washington, D.C.

Participation for Fort Benning began with the sixth Army Ten-Miler Oct. 14. A male and female team was sent to represent the post with the male team capturing the first-place trophy in the military male open division.

Lloyd McDonald, the captain of the male team, said this is the fourth time he's run for Fort Benning and was proud that he could represent the post in this manner.

The remainder of Fort Benning soldiers began participation at the meeting Oct. 15. Each representative attended the opening session Oct. 15.

Sgt. Wade Shell, an AUSA representative, said the session consisted of awards given to various AUSA chapters and a speech by Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone.

"After the opening session, soldiers were given tickets to attend various events," Shell said.

Events noted were luncheons that included guest speakers such as Army Chief of Staff Gen. Carl E. Vuono; Training and Doctrine Commander Gen. John W. Foss and Gen. William G. T. Tuttle Jr. of the U.S. Army Materiel Command.

Shell said soldiers also attended a reception where they met the secretary, chief of staff and sergeant major of the Army.

Troops were also able to attend a question and answer session with the sergeant major of the Army.

Many Fort Benning representatives were impressed with the U.S. Army European Command presentation, he said.

Cpl. Michelle Bagley, Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, said the presentation was unlike anything she had ever seen.

"They took a film presentation and made it into something special," she said. "It included smoke and a laser show."

"I think everyone in the Army should see it," she said.

Bagley's sentiments were echoed by several members of the Fort Benning entourage.

"The only thing that rivaled the presentation were the exhibits by corporations wishing to sell products to the military," said Spec. Jason Wheeler, 283rd Army Band, 1st Battalion, 11th Inf.

Wheeler explained that the exhibits were impressive because band members don't get a chance to see all the technology that exists in the Army.

"It gave me a whole new perspective," he said.

Shell, a veteran of three conventions, said most soldiers who attend the meeting come back with a different perspective.

The reason for the change is the opportunities the soldiers are given to meet people, Shell said.

"During the meeting every soldier is guaranteed to meet at least one high ranking military official," he said.

Sgt. Maj. James Williams of the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center said he believes that attending the convention is an opportunity a soldier should not miss.

"This is one event these soldiers will remember for a long time," Shell said.

Board selects 10 for Lt. Col.

By Agatha Hudson James
Bayonet assistant editor

Ten majors at Fort Benning have been recommended for promotion to lieutenant colonel by an Army Competitive Category selection board at the Total Army Personnel Command.

Those selected for promotion are:

- Maj. Harold D. Barnett, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade.
- Maj. Larry D. Moore, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 197th Combat Support Battalion.
- Maj. Fred D. Robinson Jr., HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., 197th Inf. Bde.
- Maj. Dorian T. Anderson, HHC, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.
- Maj. Bruce W. Condrey, HHC, 75th Rgr. Regt.
- Maj. Bruce D. Grant, HHC, 75th Rgr. Regt.
- Maj. Jeffrey L. Shafer, HHC, 75th Rgr. Regt.
- Maj. Marvin A. Chandler Jr., School of the Americas.
- Maj. Alfonso M. Gomez, SOA.
- Maj. Timothy T. Tanner, SOA.

The selection board considered 3,818 officers in three eligibility categories. The panel selected 1,146. The selection rate for officers in the primary zone was 60.5 percent — 1,636 considered, 991 selected. That is lower than the 1989 rate of 61.5 percent, and well below the rates in the 1980s when the selection rates were above 70 percent.

The selection rate for previously considered officers in the above-zone category was 2.8 percent — 1,441 considered, 41 selected.

POST BRIEFS

Surplus property to be auctioned

The Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office at Fort Benning will conduct an auction of government surplus property Thursday at 9 a.m. in building 470 on 10th Mountain Division Road on Main Post.

The auction is open to the public and will include clothing, household furniture, office machines, office furniture, vehicle times, vehicular parts, scrap material, and industrial equipment.

A three-day inspection period will begin Monday. Hours of viewing the property are 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. daily until 9 a.m. the day of the sale.

outage Saturday for the Steam, hot water outage Saturday

There will be a steam, air conditioning and hot water outage for the entire 2800 block so repairs can be made to the steam distribution system.

Also, there will be a power outage the same day from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in buildings 2835, 2836, 2837, 2838 and 2839.

Campaign reaches 12 percent of goal

Contributions for the Combined Federal Campaign at Fort Benning have reached $68,000 or 12 percent of this year's goal of $500,000, according to officials.

The campaign is an opportunity for federal employees to give financial support to more than 100 charity organizations, said the post's CFC project officer Capt. Tyrone Kirk.

Refuse containers for trash only

Refuse containers are furnished at various locations on Fort Benning for collection of trash only.

Bulk items such as furniture, appliances, wire, metal, cardboard, etc. should be hauled by the generating activity to the Defense Reutilization Marketing Office for recycling.

Other items such as trees, branches, stumps, lumber, wood crates, concrete rubble, etc. should be hauled to the Fort Benning Sanitary Landfill on First Division Road for proper disposal.

The refuse contractor for Fort Benning will not haul bulk items nor pick up garbage piled on the ground around trash bins.

Special leave OK'd for Desert Shield

Soldiers not deployed for Operation Desert Shield, but who were prevented from taking "use or lose" leave because of Desert Shield-related duty, may be able to save their leave above 60 days.

An Oct. 12 memo from the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Force Management and Personnel outlines the policy. DoD directive 1327.5, "Leave and liberty," allows "other duty" to be designated as a reason for special leave accrual.

"To ensure the policy is uniform, definition of 'other duty' should include duty deemed essential in support of Desert Shield," the memo says.

The policy includes soldiers assigned to staffs and headquarters supporting Desert Shield.

To qualify, soldiers must have been prohibited from taking leave because of involvement in Desert Shield, and they must have been unable to reduce their leave balance to 60 days or less before the end of fiscal 1990 — Sept. 30.

Only leave "that the member could possibly have taken" before Sept. 30 qualifies for the special accrual policy.

Battalion commanders and their equivalent, as well as Department of the Army and major Army command staff and field operating agency directors, can approve requests for the special leave accrual for non-deployed soldiers.

Road to close for training exercise

The access roads to Lawson Army Airfield and Alabama via Eddy Bridge will be closed from 8:45 p.m. to 2:30 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 2, 4, 5, 7, and 8, with Nov. 3, 6, and as alternate dates

Motorists should make plans accordingly and personnel working at LAAF should make arrangements for access during these times with Bud Schuman of Lawson Operations at 545-7001.

ACS to assess family needs

Army Community Service will survey Army families residing off post Thursday and Nov. 2 in an effort to assess outreach needs.

ACS Outreach Program will conduct the family member needs assessment survey at the main office of Park Properties, 1110 Farr Road in Columbus, from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Outreach is designed to link family support programs to soldiers and their family members.

The program's goal is to encourage families to take a positive approach to improve the quality of life in their communities.

Army shooters dominate top slots in trap meet

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Shooters from the Army International Trap Shoot Team dominated the top three slots of their final match of the year.

The Tall Pines International Trap Shoot held Oct. 12 through 14 at Hooks Range on Fort Benning had more than 30 shooters to participate — seven of the shooters were from the team, one was from the Air Force, and the rest were civilians.

Each member of the trap team competed individually, there were no team matches for this event.

Pfc. Daro D. Handy placed first with 186 out of 200. Handy also won the preliminary match with 92 out of 100. Spec. William J. Roberts trailed a close second place with 185. Pfc. Jay H. Waldron took third with 183.

"The team's scores were a little lower than they normally would be," said Coach Burle Branham. "Overall though, they each did well. The match went very smooth."

Handy, who got off to a good start at the preliminary, said he was surprised when he found out that he won.

"I've only been on the team a year. I was surprised at how much I've improved in such a short time," said Handy.

"Because of the Middle East crisis, we didn't get nearly the amount of military competition as we've had in the past," said Pvt. 2 Sean Waller who scored a 170 overall. "The civilian participation is normal. Most of these shooters we've competed against before at other matches."

Even though this was the last match of the season for the team, they're still going to keep their skills up to par during the off-season.

"The team will continue to practice until the season starts back up again," said Branham.

Post marksmen aim high in World Cup competition

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Two shooters from the Army International Pistol Team were invited recently to compete in the World Cup Finals in Munich, Germany.

Capt. John T. McNally and Master Sgt. Erich Buljung of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit returned to the states Oct. 15 after placing in the top five of their specific disciplines.

McNally placed second in the International Rapid Fire Pistol event with a 591. Buljung shot a 557 for fifth place in International Free Pistol.

"I felt real good about my performance," said McNally. "The shooter who took first place, Ralph Shoeman of Germany, has been unstoppable for five years. He's an outstanding competitor, but I'll get even during the 1992 Olympics."

Although the match placed a lot of pressure on the world's top shooters, the joy of being a part of it made up for that.

"It's an honor just to be invited to this event," said McNally. "This is a very prestigious competition because it pits the top eight shooters in each of the Olympic disciplines against each other."

Now that the World Cup is over, McNally and Buljung's next big competition will be a Friendship Match against the Soviet Union Nov. 1 through 10. The Soviet shooters are coming to Fort Benning for the match.

"Even though this is a friendly competition, our team still plans on trying to win," concluded McNally.

Retiree Open House begins Wed.

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Approximately 17,000 Army retirees and 18,000 other service retirees residing in Alabama, Florida and Georgia are invited to Fort Benning for the 10th Annual Military Retiree Open House, which will be Wednesday, Thursday and Nov. 2.

The purpose of the open house is to allow the retirees the opportunity to transact personal business related to their rights, benefits, privileges and entitlements, said Sgt. Maj. Theodore Sweet of Retirement Services. Also, retirees will be informed of the latest developments and concepts of the modern Army, he said.

The open house will kick off with a golf tournament to be held at the Follow Me Golf Course. Military activities will be the following day and will commence with opening remarks from post commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza and guest speaker retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Earl G. Peck, executive director of the Florida Department of Veterans Affairs.

A country/health fair at Harmony Church, a Rangers in Action demonstration, a U.S. Army Infantry Training Center graduation, a ribbon bridge demonstration by the 43rd Engineer Battalion, and a dance at the Fort Benning Officers' Club with music provided by the 283rd Army Band will highlight the three-day extravaganza.

"It is a nice way for all former members of the military to reunite and catch up on current events in today's armed forces," Sweet said. "It seems to be a perfect blending of old and new."

Smalser comes to the U.S. Army Infantry Center from Fort Sill, Ok.

TRADOC teleconference for commanders Nov. 6

TRADOC News Service

The first Training and Doctrine Command garrison commanders' video teleconference will be held Nov. 6 with all garrison commanders participating.

The two-hour teleconference will be sponsored by TRADOC's deputy chief of staff, base operations support. According to Dan Spruill, of DCSBOS' management and plans, the teleconference may become a quarterly event.

"Commanders are setting the agenda," Spruill said. "They are telling us the topics they are interested in. They also helped select the day of the week and the length of the conference."

Potential subjects commanders want information on include Desert Shield support, resource management, personnel cuts and furloughs, reductions in force we will share information and ideas, not just discuss problems," Spruill said.

"During the teleconferences and reductions in grades.

CHAMPUS NEWS

By Carolyn Bradley
Martin Army Community Hospital

October 1 marked the beginning of a new fiscal year. This translates into dollars for eligible beneficiaries of CHAMPUS (Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services).

A deductible of $50 per individual or $100 per family must be met before CHAMPUS will share in the cost of outpatient civilian medical care.

CHAMPUS shares the cost of covered civilian health care received by family members of the uniformed services and eligible retired military beneficiaries.

Before filing a CHAMPUS claim, it is the responsibility of the beneficiaries to make certain they are enrolled in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility System.

If a beneficiary is not enrolled in DEERS, the claim will not be processed by CHAMPUS.

Active duty service members are not eligible for CHAMPUS benefits. Their health care needs will be taken care of by a military treatment facility.

Families of reservists who have been called to active duty during the Middle East crisis may be eligible for CHAMPUS benefits during the sponsors' active duty service.

In order for family members to be CHAMPUS eligible, the reservist must possess orders to serve on active duty for more than 30 consecutive days.

CHAMPUS eligibility begins on the first day of active duty according to the service member's orders. The same restrictions/obligations apply for reserve family members.

A non-availability statement from the local military hospital is required when seeking non-emergency inpatient care from a civilian source.

A NAS should be applied for at least two weeks before a planned admission. If a non-availability statement is not obtained, CHAMPUS will reject the claim for reimbursement.

A non-availability statement is not required for outpatient care received from a civilian source.

For more information, call the MACH's health benefits advisers, Nancy Lance or Pat Wood, at 544-3461 or visit them in Room 740 the hospital.

Post Office announces Christmas mail deadlines

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The deadlines for Christmas mail from the continental U.S. to Europe are rapidly approaching.

To ensure greetings and gifts arrive on time for the holidays they should be mailed no later than the following dates:

- SAM or space available packages — Nov. 13.
- PAL or parcel airlift packages — Nov. 24
- Letters — Dec. 1
- Priority packages — Dec. 1

Middle East deadline

The mailing deadlines for Christmas correspondence to the Mideast is as follows:

- Space available packages — Nov. 3
- Parcel airlift packages — Nov. 10
- Letters — Nov. 26
- Priority packages — Nov. 16

Parcels to the Mideast must weigh no more than 70 pounds and measure no more than 108 inches (length plus girth).

It is recommended that packaging be of sturdy cardboard or fiberboard box. The use of glass containers for food is not recommended.

A sturdy container with crumpled paper to eliminate space for shifting is helpful to prevent cookies or other perishable items from breaking.

To minimize mail processing time, ensure that the proper customs labels are affixed to the parcels.

Adhere to mailing restrictions which prohibit entry of alcoholic beverages, narcotics, weapons, explosives, pork and pork by-products, pornography and material contrary to the Islamic religion.

"Pornography" includes photographs of the nude or semi-nude human body and sexually oriented materials and literature.

Material contrary to the Islamic religion includes religious material intended for public distribution as well as literature critical of Islam.

Problems are not anticipated with mailing small quantities of religious materials for the personal use of a service member. There is no objection to mailing greeting cards associated with religious holidays. On the other hand, attempts to mail bulk quantities of religious materials should not be made.

GIs to lose a real treat: Saudi water

Army says nice taste isn't worth the price

By Joseph Albright
Journal-Constitution correspondent

WITH THE U.S. 82ND WATER PURIFICATION DETACHMENT, Saudi Arabia - The Army disclosed Monday that it has decided to "wean" most troops from pleasant - tasting Saudi bottled water before Thanksgiving.

"There is an extreme cost involved with bottled water," said the Army's chief water expert, Capt. William Robert Stanley, 28, of St. Louis. "It cost about $4 a gallon. It is more expensive than gasoline in the states."

"The biggest complaint I've heard is that it (the American water) taste like pool water because of the chlorine," Captain Stanley said.

Saudi Arabian heat inspires art

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

Even the heat of the Saudi Arabian Desert can inspire art.

While his buddies were playing spades, writing letters or trying to catch an afternoon nap in the shade of their tent during the hottest part of the day, Pfc. Ken Brown, 22, from Fort Myers, Fla., sketched "This Jug's for You."

"That drawing pretty much tells the story of our week here," said Brown, a Stinger missile gunner with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade. "I'm from south Florida, but the heat here has been beyond my imagination.

"I used to drink bottled water at home, but it was ice cold. The water here is hot — like taking medicine, but it's good for you.

"Carrying a case of 12 bottles for 500 meters from the supply point to the tent is the real killer, but we can't survive without it," he added.

For Brown, military service is both a family tradition and a stepping stone to a career as a screen writer or a professional artist.

"My ancestor's name was Broud, and the Brouds were Scottish soldiers who fought on the losing side in the English Civil War in the 1600's," he said. "Since then, our name was anglicized to Brown, and there has been a long series of Browns in the military, including my dad, a lieutenant commander who served as a weapons officer on a submarine after the Vietnam War."

Both of Brown's parents practiced art as an avocation — his father drew cartoons and his late mother created greeting cards by etching into ink blocks.

"My mother was a biochemist, but she was the real artist in the family," Brown said. "I was 11 when she died, and I started cartooning shortly after that by copying pictures out of comic books."

He went on to show his work at Edison Community College in Fort Myers and later majored in fine arts at the University of Florida in Gainesville. In addition to ink sketches, he enjoys painting in oils and acrylics.

"My specialty is portraits, drawn either from models or photographs," Brown said. "I think most artists would prefer to work with models, but it's hard to get people to sit still for a portrait, and professional models can charge up to $2,000 an hour."

Ingenuity: key to survival

By Cpl. Scott Garrigus
197th Infantry Brigade

With the desert winds swirling, soldiers of Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry try to shield themselves from the blowing sands and the hardships of being away from home.

Walking from one of their M113 Armored Personnel Carriers to another, you'll see things that bring home closer for the Alpha Company "Gators": Tables made of plywood and engineer stakes, porches with canvas tarps as awnings, plywood used as a floor, and parachute cord used as a clothesline. The most amusing initiative thus far is a four feet by four feet sheet of plywood used as a game board, patterned after a "Monopoly" game board complete with community chest, chance and go to jail cards.

The most often used item is the Meals Ready to Eat box that contains the rations issued to the troops. It has been used as calendars, picture frames, mailboxes, trash cans, diagrams and charts, and even as paper for letters home. Anything that can be replicated from an MRE box is usually skillfully reproduced by industrious soldiers.

"The soldiers out here are very resourceful when it comes to making things a little bit more comfortable," said Pfc. Matt C. Tracey, an Armored Personnel Carrier driver with the company.

"This is just another example of how resourceful American soldiers are. Give them anything and they will improve and make it better," said Capt. Brian D. Jones, company commander.

"Every squad has their own little thing out here. Ours is home improvement hour," said Cpl. William Smith, whose squad dedicates their free time to improving their living area.

Another squad has a "word of the day," and when that word is said everyone lets out a loud yell. Yet, a third squad sings nothing but Elvis tunes. "These gadgets and things are pieces of home we would like to have but can't, so we pretend and that's healthy," said 1st Sgt. James T. Parham Jr. "It tells me that these soldiers have a strong sense of values related to their way of life in the States and have the will to live to see them again."

With the focus on individual, squad, and platoon training, and with the plan to build company and battalion level training, not all improvements are intended to bring home closer to the soldier.

According to Parham, these include: stabilizing the mounted .50 caliber machine gun with a transverse and elevation mechanism for better fire control on targets at long distances in the desert, modifying load plans to increase combat efficiency, experimenting with ways to make long distance target reference points, and making effective use of the desert camouflage screening nets.

"One advantage we have out here, is that we have 24 hours a day to know our skills," added Jones.

Each new day brings another challenge for the "Gators" to adapt to and improve their environment.

Deployed 197th units celebrate Labor Day

By William Harris
197th Infantry Brigade

Units of the 197th Infantry Brigade have established themselves in the assembly areas as part of the multi-national force sent to assist in the defense of Saudi Arabia.

When the alert was given by higher headquarters for movement of the Brigade to Saudi Arabia, the soldiers of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, had just completed a successful tank gunnery at Fort Benning.

According to Capt. John Salvetti, company commander, "We had taken and taken from the soldiers since gunnery started back at Fort Benning. The soldiers had given 100 percent and had not had a day off since July 31st. We felt it was time they had one day off from training, so the leaders could give a little back to the soldiers."

On this day, the soldiers were celebrating a belated Labor Day, complete with chicken cooked over an open barbecue grill, football, volleyball, and tug of war.

The idea was the brainchild of the unit's athletics and recreation officer, 2nd Lt. Bob Price. The company leadership pitched in to purchase the chicken and charcoal from a local merchant. The grill was fabricated with grills from an M88 Recovery Vehicle and tent pegs. The soldiers had all the makings of a Labor Day activity in a country far from home.

"Morale is high right now in the unit, but it is the little extra things that we do for soldiers that will maintain that morale," said 1st Sgt. Brook Clark. "In the days to come, leaders will have to be innovative to find ways to keep morale up."

Plans are already being drafted by the soldiers of the "Speed and Power" Battalion for unit activities to celebrate any future holidays that may be spent in the desert sands of Saudi Arabia

Soldier improves platform

By Aurelio Feliberty
197th Infantry Brigade

The military teaches soldiers to improvise in order to adapt and overcome through trying times.

This is what Staff Sgt. Jerry Waibel, maintenance team chief of Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, did.

With the help of his mechanics, Waibel designed and built a platform to mount a .50 caliber machine gun on an M113 personnel carrier.

"The project started out with the machine gun's tripod mounted on top of the M113," Waibel explained.

"This brought about problems in figuring out how to mount the tripod safely, so we set out to design a platform which would be placed in front of the gunner's hatch.

"We went through countless designs, trying to figure out which one would suit the battalion's needs. Finally, on the second day, we came up with our final product," Waibel said.

"We will install one of these platforms on each M113 throughout the batttalion while we're here in Saudi Arabia," he added.

NCO re-ups in desert sand

By Aurelio Feliberty
197th Infantry Brigade

Most soldiers look forward to their 20-year mark to retire, but not Sgt. 1st Class William G. Wade.

Wade, supply sergeant of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Support Battalion, recently raised his right hand for the fifth time.

In doing so, he became the first 197th Infantry Brigade soldier to re-enlist during the deployment to Saudi Arabia for Operation Desert shield.

Wade has been in the service for 19 years and five months and re-enlisted for four more years.

Born and raised in Alabama, Wade decided to enlist into the Army at the age of 18.

"I enlisted for three years and figured I'd get out when my time was up," he said. "But I soon changed my mind when I enjoyed what I was doing, so I re-enlisted and continued to re-enlist."

Benning lifters pull in two wins

By Dean Rose
Directorate of Training and Doctrine

Six Fort Benning powerlifters traveled to Donalsonville, Ga. on Oct. 20 to compete in the Harvest Festival Powerlifting Championship.

The 1/29th Infantry Regiment provided Carlos Valarezo, Steve Rainey, Willie Grider, Jose Sanchez, and Mat Loyd. Combined Arms and Tactics Division provided 16-year-old Tony Jenkins, son of instructor Sgt. 1st Class Buck Jenkins.

In very close team competition, the Benning lifters placed second to the home team, Muscles Elite. Jose Sanchez and Willie Grider pulled first place finishes in their weight classes. Steve Rainey and Mat Loyd placed second in their divisions.

Tony Jenkins won third place by five pounds in his first powerlifting meet. He did this with his last lift, by cutting away at a 15 pound lead in the fight for third place.

Carlos Valarezo suffered a lifting suit blowout in the squats and was unable to continue in the competition.

The Benning team will compete next in the Fort Benning Open on Dec. 15. They will face a stiff challenge from a Fort Gordon team they recently defeated at Fort Gordon's meet and the Muscles Elite team. Persons, male or female, that are interested in lifting for the Benning team in December can contact Capt. Franklin Roach at 544-6433, ext. 157.

Soldier rolls his way to cash

Directorate of Community Activities

One post soldier found a "pot-o-gold" — not at the end of a rainbow, but at the end of a bowling alley.

Staff Sgt. Richard Lesh won $5,000 Thursday while bowling in the Soldiers' Major League. Lesh is assigned to the 1/29th Infantry Regiment at Collins Training Center on Harmony Church as a master gunner instructor of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, .

In game one, Lesh had strikes in frames nine and ten. In game two, he had strikes in frames one, three and four. In game three, he had strikes in frames one, four, six and nine. His scores were 192, 267 and 192 respectively.

Lesh, who has an 154 average, thought the new lanes had improved his game considerably. Lesh said he actually started bowling at the Main Post Bowling Center in 1989. He used bowling as therapy for his knee.

Gene Riles, Main Post Bowling Center manager stated that 1½ years prior to the lanes renovation, approximately $3,000 was given away. During the six months following the centers' renovation, improved scores have raised the cash prizes given away to $12,000.

The Pot-O-Gold cash prize starts this week at $3,038. Riles said that he doesn't think that it will take very long before another winner takes the next prize. All active duty and retired military, Department of the Army and non-appropiated fund civilian employees and their immediate families are authorized to bowl at post bowling facilities.

SPIRITUAL

Chaplains can help calm panic

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplains Office

Panic.

A young wife with two small children felt the burdens crashing in around her as she wondered what to do next. The pay statement was not what she expected, bills were due and the refrigerator held only a bottle of ketchup and a half-full jar of sweet pickles.

As she reached for the phone in a daze, she called the chaplain's office. She had heard someone say once that the chaplains would help with food.

What she had heard was, in fact, true. The chaplains are there in dozens of ways to help those who find themselves in emergency need. What she didn't know was that in order to receive help in the best way possible, she needed to make another phone call first.

In the case of recent deployments, chaplains agree that when a family member needs help, the unit chaplain and the rear detachment commander should be contacted first to ensure that any other problems will also be recognized.

Army Community Services helps with food and budget counseling. The chaplains help them provide this service by making monetary donations.

"In the past two months, nearly $25,000 has been donated to services, including Red Cross, Salvation Army, CONTACT, Military Archdiocess, World Vision and ACS. This money is from the Chaplains' fund and has been collected at services on Post," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Donald Taylor, chief of administative operations.

Karen Crowley,acting ACS director, said the recent donation to them of more than $4,000 dollars was incredibly helpful to ACS. "When you think that this money has been donated by people on post, including our young soldiers, and it is used to help our families in times of need; it really makes you feel like the Army family concept works."

Noon class offers new approach

By Roger L. Armstead
Family Life Center Chaplain

Active Parenting is an innovative, creative approach to dealing with children or teens. Active Parenting will give you a better understanding of today's generation. It can also help you learn how to meet the challenge of raising today's generation.

The program is one of the first video-based programs on the market and appears to combine the latest and best information available on good child rearing practices with the most up-to-date educational know-how.

Our first session began last Wednesday. Some of the things one may learn during the sessions are:

- Why reward and punishment often backfire with today's child.
- How your own thoughts, feelings and behavior often payoff your child for misbehaving.
- Communication skills that win cooperation.
- The secret of having your childs respect.
- How to use your own parenting energy more efficiently. . .so that you have more left for other activities.

There is no doubt, parenting is extremely difficult and often thoroughly frustrating. Sometimes it seems that nothing "works." We have the love and commitment it takes, but we lack information and skills. None of us are born parents, we learn or acquire this knowledge as time goes by.

Because of this, we engage in frustrating struggles for power and our families become an energy drain. Don't give up when you can be victorious. Following are comments from past participants of Active Parenting:

"The most valuable gift for me was the reawakening of the feel of joy in our children."

"Active parenting not only has helped my parenting skills, it has also helped tremendously in all my interpersonal relationships."

An Active Parenting Group meets at noon to 1:30 p.m. at the Chaplains' Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza each Wednesday.

Bees visit Benning school

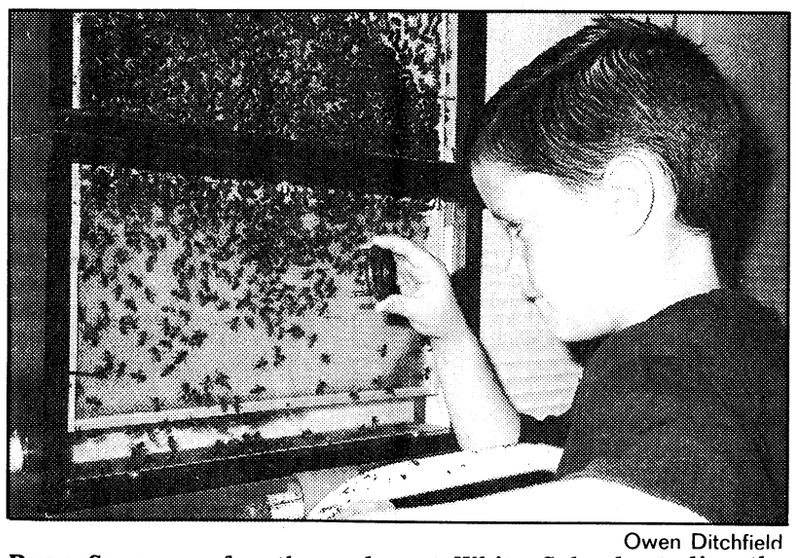
Fort Benning Schools

What does the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D.C. have in common with White School in Fort Benning, Georgia? This can be answered with a four letter word: bees.

White School media specialist Owen Ditchfield has found a novel way of teaching science to students in the library. He operates an active bee hive.

Ditchfield, who is a bee keeper, instructs fourth grade students on life in a hive. His instruction brings heightened awareness and interest to this topic in science and nature. Students learn about the types of bees, parts of a bee, and duties performed by bees in their short lifetime. The observation hive is constructed of glass, which allows students to observe the bees in action as they work to survive.

Perhaps the most interesting point about the White School observation hive is that it is not entirely a controlled population. The bees are not imprisoned, rather they may freely enter and exit the hive through a tube in a custom designed window pane. This is very similar to the operation at the Smithsonian Institute and is often compared by children who have visited the famous museum.



Owen Ditchfield

Ryan Spears, a fourth grader at White School, studies the activities of bees.

"I rarely have to check on the condition of the hive," commented Ditchfield. "There is always some students over there watching and reporting on what's happening." Fourth grade student Kristen Chandler commented, "I like to watch the bees do the dance they do to tell each other where the flowers are. I learned more from the class in the media center than I did from the chapter in our science book about bees."

Students are not the only group displaying enthusiasm about the hive. At a recent open house, parents and children were in line in the media center waiting to see the bees. Children were observed instructing their parents on what they would see.

White School principal Janet Wynn commented that she is thrilled over the enthusiasm of the students and parents. "Our bee hive is part of what makes our school unique," said Wynn.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Office

Last week, an Associated Press article quoted Energy Department officials as cautiously predicting adequate fuel oil supplies for this winter — but only if the weather is not too severe and there are no operating problems at refineries. Developments in the Middle East that further disrupt oil shipments would also have an impact on this prediction.

Some congressmen complained that the assessment was "rosy" and that the Energy Department tended to underestimate what could go wrong. House energy and power subcommittee members feel that there is a very small margin of safety as far as meeting all our fuel supply needs.

Calvin A. Kent, head of the department's Energy Information Administration, told subcommittees that the supply of refined petroleum products — gasoline, heating oil, and jet fuel — will be tight with refineries producing near their capacities. He also stated that United States petroleum stocks "appear adequate." The agency estimated that while the worldwide crude oil shortage is expected to still be about 1 million barrels a day during the last three months of the year, the shortage can be handled as higher prices dampen demand.

Kent made the following assessment of our supplies:

● Heating oil — Current stocks are well above normal and rising. Supplies in the Northeast, which rely heavily on oil to heat homes and factories, are 16 percent above last year. The stocks appear to be adequate barring any unusually cold weather or refinery breakdowns.

● Gasoline — Localized supply problems could develop. Inventories are at the lowest level since July 1988 — 5.9 million barrels above the operating inventory required to prevent shortages. But the stocks, while tight, should be adequate to see us through the fourth quarter. His assessment did not extend into 1991.

● Jet fuel — Supply is above last year's levels but still tight and problems could develop late in the winter. Demand from the military is 300,000 barrels a day greater than normal because of the Persian Gulf deployments.

With the unstable situation that surrounds us, it is imperative that we use our resources prudently. We all can do our share to keep fuel use to a minimum. Use common sense and good judgment. If you have any questions about this or any energy-related subject, contact the Energy Office at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocates Office

Q. We were told by an insurance representative that we should consider "living trusts" in our financial planning. The Legal Assistance Office says that they can preparer some limited types of "testamentary trusts," but not those living ones. What is a trust anyway? What is the difference between living and testamentary trusts? Why doesn't the Legal Assistance Office prepare these other trusts?

A. A trust is an arrangement in which one person, a trustee, holds legal title to an asset and manages it for the benefit of another, a beneficiary. The person who establishes the trust is generally known as a Settlor. A trust in some form can do almost anything that a Settlor could for for himself.

Perhaps most remarkable is its ability to bridge the gap between life and death to carry on the Settlor's wishes. By contrast, a power of attorney is effective only during the life of the giver of the power; a will is effective only after death.

Typically, a Settlor establishes a trust to allow a named person (trustee) to carry out some task that the Settlor feels that the beneficiary cannot perform, or to supply a qualification that is deemed lacking. Investment skill, physical capacity, metal competence, or maturity are some examples. The trust, whatever its purpose, will have two characteristics: it will be either "revocable" or "irrevocable" and it will be either "testamentary" or "living" (also known as "inter vivos," meaning during life).

Revocable and irrevocable are used in their commonly understood meanings; you can "revoke" or cancel a revocable trust, but not an irrevocable one. A testamentary trust is created by a person's will, while a living trust comes into effect during the Settlor's life.

The Legal Assistance Attorney will typically use a testamentary trust as a means for providing a parental substitute in financial matters, supplementing the role of the guardian. A common example would be a situation where the maker of the will feels that the likely legal guardian lacks skill in handling money. The guardian would take care of the minor child, but the trustee would handle finances for the child's benefit.

A common living trust using insurance, is the unfunded life insurance trust. During life, the Settlor pays insurance premiums on a policy of insurance which is payable to a trust. Until death, the trustee has no duties. At the death of the Settlor, the proceeds are paid to the trust, and the funds are managed by the trustee. This trust may be revocable or irrevocable, and may involve complex estate tax, income tax, probate, and insurance law issues.

Bank trust departments employ attorneys who are expert in the crafting of trust documents, while insurance attorneys design intricate variations of insurance policies. Financial planners may also offer trusts as a part of their service. The expense of setting up a trust can be substantial, and a trust may or may not be appropriate in a particular fact situation.

Whether a living trust is appropriate for your needs, is a personal decision to be made after a careful review of your own family plan with trust professionals. A Legal Assistance attorney can discuss living trusts generally with a client, but the policy of the Department of the Army does not permit the preparation of such documents. Call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 for an appointment if further personal discussion is required.

Information on candidates available

By Michelle Cox
Voting Assistance Program

A general election to elect all members of the U.S. House of Representatives, 35 senators and 38 governors along with numerous state and local officials will be Nov. 6.

The Department of Defense Voting Information Center, along with the Non-commissioned Officers Association, provides information on the candidates and issues via an automated phone system.

Callers can switch from one candidate to another if they have a push button phone and rotary phones users will be assisted by an operator to hear the candidates of their choice.

Even if the candidate has not submitted a personal message, callers will be able to hear the names and party affiliation of the candidates for the particular office. Additional information for other offices that are not programmed into the system may be requested.

The DoD Voting Information Center autovon number is 223-6500 and the commercial number is (703) 693-6500.

Reservists called to active duty, who did not request an absentee ballot prior to leaving their home state, still may do so.

Military personnel and their family members may recieve assistance by contacting their unit voting assistance officer of calling the Fort Benning Voting Assistance Program at 545-3881.

POST BRIEFS

Holiday meals available for Desert Shield families

Family members of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield are invited to a traditional holiday meal at selected Fort Benning dining facilities Nov. 22, according to Installation Food Services officials.

Robert P. Bollinger, chief of Supply and Services Division, Directorate of Logistics, said to make reservations, family members should call 545-3750, 545-7970 or 545-5303 before Nov. 13.

Ethel Ashe of Installation Food Services said the meals will be served from 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m. Thanksgiving Day, and family members will be told which dining facility to go to when they make reservations.

The telephone lines for reservations are open from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. each day until Nov. 13.

For more information, call 545-3750.

'Show your Colors Day' Saturday at main mall

"Show Your Colors Day" will be Saturday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the main mall to show support for Operation Desert Shield.

There will be a sidewalk/tent sale at the Commissary and Post Exchange and a Desert Shield supporters recognition ceremony at 1:30 p.m.

Live entertainment begins at 10 a.m. with the Jordan High School Band with additional performances by the 283rd U.S. Army Band and the Shaw High School Band.

Various organizations will have goodies and decorative items. Soldiers and their families are invited.

For more information, call Kathy Moloney at 545-5602.

Army regulations prohibit unauthorized child care

Numerous complaints have been made concerning unauthorized child care being provided in family quarters, according to Child Development Services officials.

Army regulations prohibit child care in family quarters totaling more than 10 hours per week without certification, officials said. Violators risk losing family quarters, according to AR 608-10. Child care may be provided in the child's home in excess of 10 hours weekly, officials said .

For information on how to become a certified child care provider, call 687-4038 or 544-1623.

Small arms competition set to begin Wednesday

The U.S. Army Infantry Center Small Arms Championship will be Wednesday through Nov. 16 on McAndrews and Phillips Ranges.

The matches will be preceded by a two-day preparation period Friday and Saturday. Required clinics begin Tuesday at 8 a.m.

Soldiers from all major commands on Fort Benning have been invited to compete in 9mm pistol, M-16 rifle and M-60 machine gun competition.

First, second and third-place winners will be selected in individual and team competition, and medals will be awarded.

The public is invited. For information, call Master Sgt. George Nichols or Sgt. 1st Class Israel Rodriguez at 545-2917 or 545-5242.

School Brigade to host retreat ceremony today

A retreat ceremony in honor of the 11th Infantry Regiment will be today at 4 p.m. on York Field.

The School Brigade is hosting the ceremony, which is an annual event the first week of November and is to honor the 11th Infantry Organization Day and to commemorate the 11th Infantry's crossing of the Meuse River in World War I.

This year's ceremony is included as a part of the Retiree Open House and the general public is invited.

Post receives $2,500 gift

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A check for $2,500 was presented to the post commander for the Army Community Service food locker on behalf of the Chattahoochee Valley Fair at an awards presentation Tuesday.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza received the check from Elaine DeMarco, general manager and corporate secretary of the organization.

"In a conversation with post public affairs officer Lt. Col. McDonald Plummer, the organization was made aware of the great amount of need being experienced at Fort Benning due to the large number of soldiers deployed to participate in Operation Desert Shield," said DeMarco.

"The organization had also been accused of not being community-oriented, and we desperately wanted to change this image. So, we decided to have a day to honor those men and women who have gone around the world to defend our country and its interests. Thus Desert Shield Day was born," she said.

Desert Shield Day was Oct. 7, the second day of the fair. A portion of the money received at the gate that day was donated to the ACS food locker.

"Coming from a military background, I can sympathize with family members who were left behind to fend for themselves. I certainly hope our contribution to the post helps out in some way," she said.

Program recognizes outstanding soldiers

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A new program to honor Benning soldiers began Tuesday as the first group of outstanding trainers and maintainers were recognized.

The post kicked off its "Trainer/Maintainer of the Month" program in a ceremony in Building 4.

Post commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza said the program was originated to honor those soldiers with the rank of staff sergeant and below whose exceptional contributions toward the successful completion of their unit's mission sets an outstanding example for all soldiers to emulate.

Each month, units will select an outstanding soldier who meets or exceeds standards or who trains others to meet or exceed standards, according to Susan Turner of the Secretary General Staff.

Thirteen soldiers from each unit on post received recognition Tuesday. They are:

- Staff Sgt. Marcus B. Anderson, Company C, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.
- Sgt. Jobie Adams, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment.
- Sgt. David P. Schwartz, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment.
- Sgt. Harold E. Elson, Company C, 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion.
- Staff Sgt. Kevin R. Benson, Company B, 4th Ranger Training Battalion.
- Staff Sgt. Thomas C. Pippett, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.
- Staff Sgt. Ruchard Rodriguez Jr., Company D, 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.
- Staff Sgt. Kimberly A. Green, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity.
- Sgt. Marion Bissett, U.S. Army Dental Activity.
- Spec. Thomas A. Tamas, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.
- Staff Sgt. Richard A. Johnson, U.S. Army Infantry Center Military Police Company, Military Police Activity.
- Staff Sgt. Wayno Sanchez, School of Americas.
- Staff Sgt. Rob M. Harms, 2nd MASH, 34th Med. Bn.

ACS Food Locker receives donations

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The Fort Benning Army Community Services food locker received donations from two organizations on post in an award ceremony Tuesday.

Chaplain (Col.) George W. Gudz, U.S. Army Infantry Center chaplain presented a check for $4,732.67 on behalf of the USAIC Chaplain's Fund, which receives donations from postwide chapel services.

"We recognize the value of other agencies on post," said Debra Galle, USAIC Chaplain's public affairs official. "We also realize that our contribution could do post families more good if spread to all the agencies here providing services that concentrate on helping families in several different areas, not just monetary," said Galle.

Larry J. Bentley, Commissary officer, presented a check for $4,503.10 to the food locker.

The money was raised from private vendors who put their products on special display at the Commissary, with an agreement to donate 25 cents from every case of the product on display that was sold. The proceeds were then collected by the Commissary.

"We wanted the money to be put to good use," said Gary D. Hensley, Commissary store manager. " We are a part of the Army and we felt a part of the Army family — the dependents — are in need of help. We are glad to be able to provide this contribution to the Fort Benning community," he said.

Congress reaches accord on civil service retirement

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

An agreement concerning retirement for civil service employees was reached by the House of Representatives and the Senate Budget Resolution conference committee.

The agreement suspends election of the lump-sum payout of the employee's contribution, also known as the alternative form of annuity or AFA, for five years except for certain retirements, said officials from the Office of Personnel Management.

Employees enrolled in either the Civil Service Retirement System or the Federal Employees Retirement System are affected by the resolution.

Employees who separate for retirement on or before Nov. 30 may still elect the AFA on a 50-50 percent payout over a two-year period.

For retirements on or after Dec. 1 the AFA benefit will be suspended for five years except for:

SQTs on way out

Army News Service

Skill Qualification Tests for privates through corporals will be eliminated after Nov. 30 for active duty soldiers and Oct. 1, 1991 for reserve soldiers.

Sergeants through sergeants first class in both components will instead get a new test known as the Self Development Test.

SQTs will continue for noncommissioned officers until the SDT is fielded for their military occupational specialties.

Units need to submit a Department of Army Form 12-99-R, Subscription Change Sheet, to the U.S. Army Publications Center in Baltimore, Md., to ensure they receive the correct type and number of soldier training publications.

The number of each publication ordered is based on the authorized military occupational strength strength of the unit's table of distribution and allowances, table of organization and equipment, and modification of table of organization and equipment.

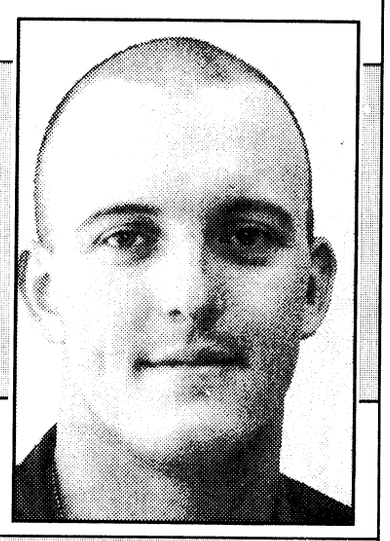
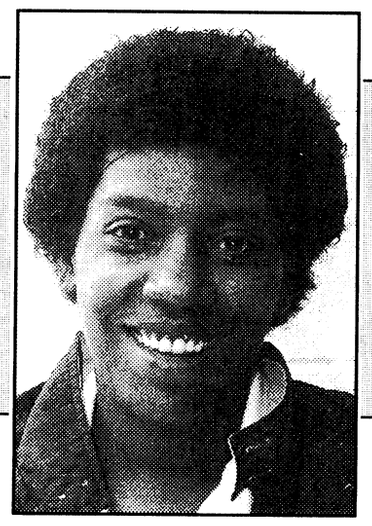
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

What do you think about the gifts and contributions that are being made by area businesses and private citizens for the soldiers deployed to Saudi Arabia?

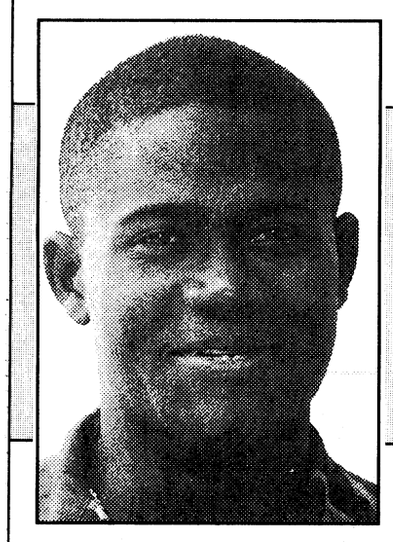


Pfc. J. David Wilburn, Co. C, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt. — "It's a positive action because it helps build troop morale and lets the soldiers know the American public is behind them."

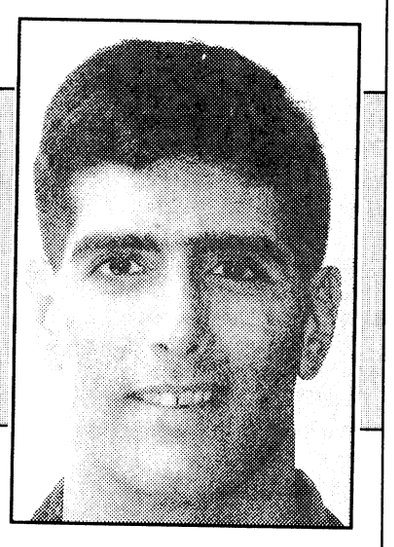


Barbara J. Nash, AAFES cashier — "The contributions and gifts are wonderful. It must definitely make our soldiers feel closer to home and make the conditions much more comfortable for them in the desert."

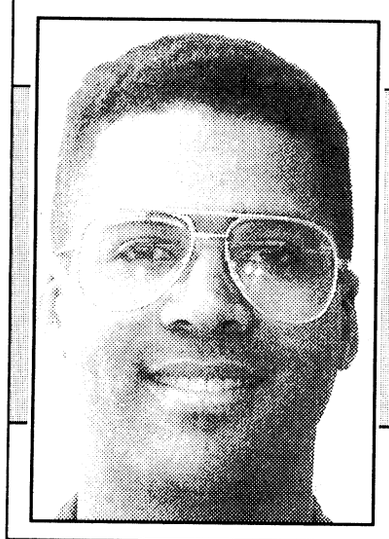
Pvt. Michael A. Beebe, Co C, 1st Bn., 50th Inf. Regt. — "It's good because every citizen should support our troops whether they believe in the cause the soldiers are defending or not. Those troops are suffering over there and need to know we are behind them."



1st Lt. Michael A. Mobley, Co. C, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "If the troops know we're behind them 100 percent, they will give 100 percent in the defense of our country and its interest. The contributions are a major part of expressing that support."



1st Lt. Richard J. Galbadon, Co. C, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "It's an outstanding gesture. It's wonderful how the businesses are supporting Desert Shield families. It's a great example of community and military interaction."



Capt. Oliver K. Lattimore, Supply, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "The military members and their families contribute so much to this community, it's great to see businesses and private citizens of the community are so willing to give it back. I just hope they continue to support our soldiers."

COMMENTARIES

Journalist bids farewell to Bayonet

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Airborne Annie, mainstay of the Bayonet, is now Officer Candidate Annie, or, as she'll probably be known in OC land, "Candidate Airborne."

It's going to seem strange not to have Airborne Annie around the Bayonet offices. She's been around for about as long as Methuselah. I think her first job for the Bayonet was that of tablet chipper. She held that military occupational specialty in the days before paper was invented and everything was literally etched in stone.

In fact that's where all the creative spellings for the Bayonet first developed — Annie making a slip of the chisel. And we've been repeating them ever since.

I can tell you one thing, the Bayonet office will be a lot quieter without Airborne Annie. She gave new meaning to the term, "temperamental." I'd always heard about the temperamental diva, the temperamental director, but never dreamed that lower ranking enlisted soldiers, to include buck sergeants, were authorized to be temperamental.

I learned soldiers were to be seen and not heard. To do first, question later (if ever).

Airborne Annie obviously didn't attend the same Army school of discipline as I did. Her mouth was about as fast as the lens on her camera. If something didn't make sense to her, she wanted to know why. She questioned it.

I think that's why she was such an outstanding journalist. That's why she was able to crank out the Various Voices column week after endless week. That's why she was the runner up as the Training and Doctrine Command journalist of the year last year and why she was TRADOC journalist and photo journalist of the year this year.

It was because she went out and sought answers. And wrote about the answers she found.

It was because she was inquisitive and had an unbridled desire to learn — to be the best. This is what drove her to the acme of her profession.

We often fondly, and sometimes not so fondly, called her the "mouth of the south," because of her habit of blowing off steam no matter who happened to be around.

Shy was not in her vocabulary. I've seen her counsel second lieutenants who were out of uniform or "tsk, tsk" captains who dared ride the elevator up to the second floor.

But, it was this same brashness that allowed her to maneuver general officers so she could get a better, more meaningful shot be it at a formal, indoor ceremony or in the field during a lull in a training exercise.

Airborne Annie's first love in the Army was the airborne.

As a new reporter she became enchanted with the airborne lore and resolved to earn her silver wings to better cover airborne events.

This she did, better than anyone I know, to include some self-described "voice of airborne" writers and editors of airborne publications. She was better because she wrote about soldiers. She wrote about the present. But she also was aware of the past.

They, on the other hand are too self-consumed about the past and won't even admit to the present.

Besides writing and jumping out of airplanes, Airborne Annie had several other talents, two of which we can mention in this newspaper.

She could run like a deer. Last year she captained the Fort Benning women's team to first place in the annual Washington, D.C., Army 10-Miler and was a member of the flag run team that ran the flag from Arlington to Columbus.

Finally, my advice to the OC company she'll be attending — give her kitchen privileges and provide her with an unlimited supply of brownie mix. You won't be disappointed.

Yep, Annie, we'll miss ye here at the paper. Give 'em hell, gal.

Desert Shield teaches us important lesson

Association of the U.S. Army

An important part of the message coming out of the Middle East is that we might well be looking at a worse-case example of the kind of situations our armed forces will be called upon to deal with in the future.

Yet, at the same time that many of our Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine units were en route to Saudi Arabia and adjacent waters, actions had begun in Congress to severely cut back troop strength and the very combat structure (heavy forces) needed for this type operation.

If some of these drastic proposals had run their course before Operation Desert Shield got rolling, our Army might well have found itself in a similar state of unpreparedness as when we were suddenly thrust into the Korean War in 1950.

As it happened, there were times — early in the deployment — when our troops were extremely vulnerable to attack by Saddam Hussein's 5,000 tanks, state-of-the-art aircraft, missiles and chemical weaponry.

Had the draconian cuts proposed in Congress been allowed to run their course over several years, Hussein could have been in a great position to take control of 54 percent of the world's known petroleum resources.

The changing nature of the threat and our serious federal budget problems make it clear that we will be required to protect our national interests with a smaller defense force. But we need to get there in a deliberate and intelligent way.

We won't be able to meet contingencies like Operation Desert Shield if we cut the heart and muscle out of America's finest Army or let it lose its fine edge through a free-fall approach to personnel reductions.

Our security interests demand that we maintain a ready, deployable, lethal land-power force, composed of a balance of heavy, light and special operations forces.

To realize such a trained and ready force, we need to reduce the size of our armed forces in a sensible way.

Near-total demobilization like that after World Wars I and II, after Korea and after Vietnam will only result in unnecessary casualties sometime in the future among the bright young people who serve in uniform.

Avoiding such a disaster is the duty of our Congress, which has the constitutional responsibility "to raise and support armies. . ."

Other units just as important as 197th

Please inform your readers that the 197th is not the only company that went to Saudi Arabia.

The total 215th Finance Unit has gone, Some MPs and other companies as well. Everything in the paper is always about the 197th.

Why is there never anything about any other company?

Whenever anyone is interviewed, it is the wives and families of the 197th. What about the rest of us wives? Why do our companies get treated as if we don't exist?

Our husbands, brothers, sons and boyfriends are just as important. They are in just as much danger as the 197th.

Please don't get me wrong, I know that the 197th is big and important, but the other companies are just as important. But they never get mentioned.

All signs in town support the 197th. Nothing for the other companies that have gone.

I just wanted to let everyone know that there are more companies than the 197th over there.

Thank you for letting me get this off my chest.

"Loving a Soldier"

By Valerie Niederriter

Loving a soldier is not always gay,
And loving him is a high price to pay.
It's mostly loving with nothing to hold,
It's being young, yet feeling old.

It's having him whisper his love to you.
It's whispering back that you love him too,
Then comes a kiss, a promise of love,
Knowing you're watched, approved from above.

Reluctantly, painfully, letting him go,
While you're dying inside from wanting him so.
Watching him leave when eyes full of tears,
Standing alone with hopes, dreams and fears.

It's sending a letter with stamp upside down,
To a far away love, in a far away town.
It's going to church to kneel and pray,
And really meaning the things that you say.

And though you know that he's far away,
You'll wait for some word to hear that he's well.
Then the letter arrives and you're given to joy,
You're like a small child with a new shiny toy.

With fingers a trembling and heart beating fast,
You tear open his letter and read it at last.
Yes, he is well, and misses you so,
And it's filled with the love that you wanted to know.

Weeks are a month, and months are a year,
You're awaiting the day you'll have no more fear.
Time passes slowly, yet it's gone every fast,
You're barely aware it is here till it's past.

Yes, loving a soldier brings bitterness and tears,
Loneliness, sadness and despondent years.
Loving a soldier really isn't much fun,
But it's well worth the price when the battle is won.

Remember, he's thinking of you every day,
He's sad and he's lonely for being away.
So, love him, miss him and try to be bolder,
And always be proud of "loving a soldier."

DoD hot line fights waste

TRADOC News Service

As the defense budget continues to be cut, Department of Defense officials are trying to ensure the money that is allocated is well spent. One way to enforce that is through use of the Defense Hot Line.

The Defense Hot Line is a method for military personnel and civilian employees to report suspected mismanagement of funds and instances of fraud, waste, and abuse.

Over the past four years, calls to the hot line have resulted in savings of more than $88 million. Reports involved cases of product substitution, falsified test records and defective material potentially dangerous to military personnel.

"It (the hot line) has been successful," Benjamin J. Simon, director,wrote to military leaders. "The continued success. . .is dependent upon ensuring the continued awareness of the. . .program by service members and DoD employees."

The hot line has been operational since 1979 under the direction of the DoD Inspector General. More than 75,000 calls have been received, resulting in more than 14,500 cases of corrective action.

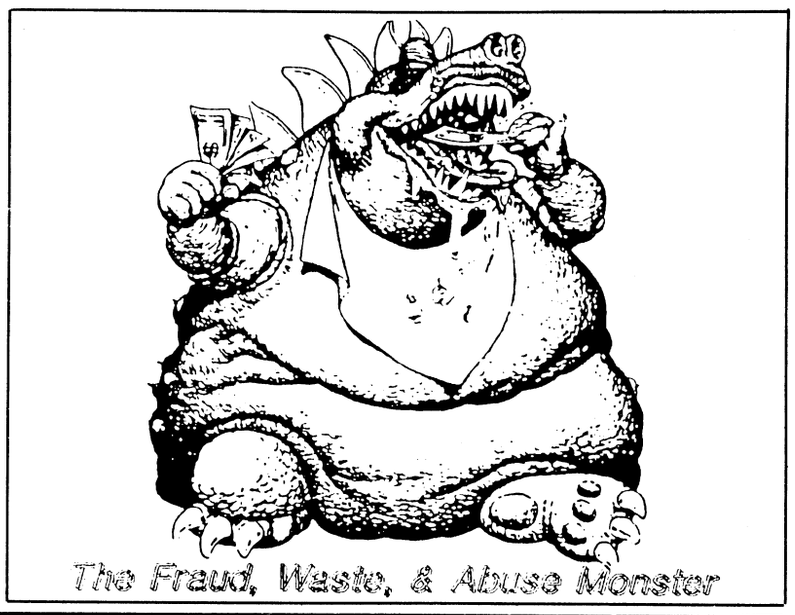
"Hot line calls made from, or concerning, Training and Doctrine command installations will most likely be looked into or investigated by the installation or activity inspector general," said Maj. Dean Seitz, of TRADOC IG. "However, if there appears to be a conflict of interest, we will inquire into or investigate the allegations ourselves."

Seitz feels any call to the hot line dealing with a local issue should have been made to the installation IG office. He realizes, though, that an individual may feel that he or she could suffer financially or professionally for making such allegations. That is one of the reasons the hot line was established.

Hot line callers do not have to identify themselves. If they do, they can request, and be guaranteed, anonymity.

"The protection of those personnel who call or write the hot line. . .is. . .a cornerstone of the program," said Dick Cheney, Secretary of Defense. "Reprisals will not be tolerated."

People who feel they have information to report to the hot line may call toll-free 1-800-424-9098 or AUTOVON 223-5080. They can also write to the Defense Hot Line, The Pentagon, Washington, D.C. 20301-1900.



The Fraud, Waste, & Abuse Monster

Army renames suggestion program

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Army Suggestion Program has a new name — Army Ideas for Excellence Program — according to a program official.

The name change is effective immediately, and the program continues to be a way soldiers and civilians can earn money for their ideas, the official said.

Beverly Howell, AIEP coordinator, said most improvements increase efficiency and save money for the government. She said an easy way to come up with an idea is to think about a present procedure, then think of an improvement and the benefits.

Howell explained how the program works: An employee has an idea on how to do his or her job better or safer, how to make the job more pleasant, or how to improve something somewhere else on the post. The employee should put the idea on either Fort Benning Form 50 or Department of Army Form 1045 (available at every organization) and turn it in to the AIEP office in Building 2604 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Ideas may be sent through message center or delivered by the suggester, she said.

In fiscal 1990, the Fort Benning Army Ideas for Excellence Program saved $1,229,076 for the government and paid out almost $27,000 in awards to employees, Howell said. "In FY (fiscal year) '91, we hope to save much more for Uncle Sam and pay you more," she said.

For more information or assistance in submitting ideas, call Howell at 545-IDEA.

Retirement

tary separation actions (but not for cause).

- Employees who elect optional (immediate) retirement and are deemed terminally ill.
- Employees called up as reservists for active military duty in support of Operation Desert Shield and retire by Nov. 30, 1991.
- Employees in certain positions certified as essential in support of Operation Desert Shield and who were eligible to retire on or before Nov. 30 and subsequently retire by Nov. 30, 1991.

The Office of Personnel Management believes this last exception will require approval at the Secretary of Defense level.

The conference committee report is part of the Budget and Deficit Resolution bill, which still must be voted on by both congressional houses and signed by the President.

Information on the Nov. 30 date and exceptions to the five-year AFA "closed door" will be provided upon notification by the Office of Personnel Management on the changes in the law.

For more information, call Patricia Beasley at 545-5562 or 545-7657.

FOR THE RECORD

The first Training and Doctrine Command garrison commanders' video teleconference will be Nov. 8 from 2:45 to 5 p.m. instead of Nov. 6 as reported in last week's Bayonet. All garrison commanders will participate.

Army expands nursing program

Army News Service

The Army needs nurses, and it's looking farther to find candidates. The Army Medical Department's enlisted commissioning program is now open to soldiers from all career fields.

Any active duty soldier who qualifies may receive a bachelor of science degree in nursing at the Army's expense.

Graduates — registered nurses — will be commissioned in the Army Nurse Corps.

After commissioning, they'll be required to serve two years on active duty for each year of Army-funded education.

Soldiers will continue to receive their full pay and allowances while they complete their degree.

However, soldiers who received an enlistment or re-enlistment bonus must refund the percentage of their bonus that equals the percentage of their remaining service obligation.

Bonuses terminate upon entry into the program.

Soldiers must be cleared by their career manager at the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command for release from their current primary military occupational specialty.

The Army's Health Professional Support Agency will make the request for clearance after receiving the soldier's application. Without the clearance, applications won't be forwarded to the Army Medical Department selection board.

Career management field 91 soldiers need a letter of recommendation from a military nurse or other Army Medical Department officer. Applicants from outside of career management field 91 need a letter of recommendation from any commissioned officer, commenting on their maturity, competence and judgement.

Interested soldiers may learn more about the program from their local medical treatment facility. Or, they may call Sgt. Maj. Zilka at AUTOVON 289-8275 or Master Sgt. Sulham at AUTOVON 289-8046 or commercial (703) 756- 8046.

Family support group sponsors outing

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the C Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, Desert Shield Family Support Group held a Halloween party Sunday at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

Family members of the deployed soldiers of that unit shared food and conversation as well as tricks and treats during the celebration.

Susan Carter, wife of the battery's commander and head of the "chain of concern," informed group members about upcoming events.

Maj. James Walls, 197th rear detachment commander, held an informal question-and-answer session.

"We are coming together to build each other up, not cry on each others' shoulders," said Monique Robinson, family support group member.

"And as for negative press about the 'waiting wives,' most of us are too busy to go running to the local media whining about what we don't have. We're trying to maintain the things here at home that we do have.

"That's what our soldiers would want us to do." she added.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Immunizations against the flu are now available at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Flu is a viral infection of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. It is usually accompanied by fever, chills, soreness and aching in the arms, legs and back.

Most people are ill for only a few days, while others may have a much more serious case and require hospitalization. Each year, thousands of people die from the flu or flu-related complications.

Flu vaccination is recommended for all adults even though the flu is not usually life threatening in otherwise healthy individuals.

Persons with other health problems can become seriously ill or even die from the flu or complications from flu.

Special high risk individuals who should be vaccinated include: adults over 65 years of age, persons with a history of lung, heart or kidney disease, or those who have a type of cancer or immunological disorder that lowers the body's normal resistance to infections.

The new flu vaccines are safe for all ages over six months and have fewer side effects than those used in the past.

Only those allergic to eggs or Merthiolate should not receive this vaccine.

Civil service employees who desire this immunization should bring their health records from Occupational Health Service in order to be immunized.

Patients may come to the Allergy/Immunization Clinic on the ninth floor of MACH without an appointment, but they should bring their health records with them.

Hours are 7:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call 544-2850 or 544-4710.

Healthy children are not routinely immunized. If a parent feels his or her child's other health problems might indicate a need for the flu shot, they should have the child evaluated by a pediatrician.

If the doctor feels it is necessary, children under 9 years of age will be given the immunization in the Pediatric Clinic.

To make an appointment for evaluation, call 544-1086 or 544-1087.

Family Practice patients who wish to be immunized may come to the clinic with their health records on Tuesday and Thursday from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

For more information, call 544-3081 or 544-3537.

Aviation Medicine patients may be immunized on Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. For information, call 545-2162.

Patients enrolled in the Winder Family Practice Clinic should call 544-9620 or 544-9855.

FOR THE RECORD

The outgoing commander of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry, Lt. Col. Jim Hitchcock, has been assigned as chief of the Material Logistics Systems Division, U.S. Army Infantry School, not the U.S. Army Information Systems Command as reported in last week's Bayonet. The battalion's new commander Lt. Col. Robert Smalser comes to the U.S Army Infantry Training Center.

Desert Shield soldiers to enjoy Army-style Thanksgiving meal

Army News Service

SAUDI ARABIA — "The Thanksgiving meal here is probably going to be better than the one in the states," said Chief Warrant Officer Wesley C. Wolf, theater food advisor for Army Central.

The plan is to ensure every soldier receives a hot turkey dinner for the holiday. The meal will be either A-rations or a holiday T-ration designed specifically for Operation Desert Shield participants.

"All units won't be able to have an A-ration meal, so we developed a holiday-pack T-ration," Wolf said.

The A-ration meal items are being shipped from Europe and the United States. Many items are being provided by the Saudi government. The menu includes roast turkey, shrimp cocktail, gravy, roast beef, bread and corn bread dressing, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, glazed sweet potatoes, corn, mixed vegetables, fruit and assorted pies.

"Thanksgiving decorations have also been ordered from the U.S.," Wolf said. "The holiday pack includes sliced turkey and gravy, mashed potatoes, bread dressing, cranberry sauce and a vegetable. The pack will be used for any unit without the capability or opportunity to receive, issue, prepare and serve the A-ration Thanksgiving meal."

A similar plan is being developed for the Christmas holiday meal, Wolf said.

DESERT SHIELD BRIEFS

Soldiers can fax absentee ballots

Soldiers involved in Operation Desert Shield may receive absentee ballots by fax.

Local election officials will be able to fax election materials to a central toll-free gateway where the transmission will be routed through AT&T's Desert Fax service to the Middle East.

The faxes will then be placed in specially-marked envelopes and delivered by military mail to the requestor.

Soldiers voting on faxed ballots must use the regular federal write-in absentee ballot security envelope and transmittal envelope to return the marked ballot by mail to their local election officials.

Officials estimate it will take five to seven days for the return mail to reach its destination.

Army ships M-1A1 to units in Mideast

Several hundred M-1A1 Abrams tanks soon will be shipped from storage in Europe to replace M-1s in U. S. units being deployed or already in Saudi Arabia.

A recent press release from the Defense Department notes that transfer of the newer models will be included in reductions of U. S. tank elements in Europe after the anticipated end-of-year signing of the Conventional Forces in Europe treaty.

The $4.8 million transfer will come from U. S. war reserves and prepositioned overseas storage sites in Europe and not from units currently based there. All the tanks are expected to arrive by the end of the year.

The larger 120mm gun and improved chemical warfare capabilities of the M1A1 are improvements over the earlier generation 105mm M-1 already deployed in Operation Desert Shield.

USO has free maps for family members

USO is providing specially designed Middle East Crisis maps to families with a military member involved in Operation Desert Shield.

The maps, developed by the Hammond Company, contain a recent history of the Middle East, topography features as well as a chronology of recent events.

"The map is intended to give family members an understanding of where their loved one is serving and, perhaps a better understanding of that part of the world," said Mary Lou Austin, USO director.

Families wishing maps should send a self-addressed, 9" x 12" envelope, stamped with 50 cents postage to USO.

Include the military member's name, rank and unit. Maps are limited to one per family.

Send request to:
USO of Georgia, Inc.
P.O. Box 20963
Atlanta, Ga. 30320

Toll-free numbers provide information

American Legion aids military families

Baby-sitting, buying groceries and mowing the lawn make up a small sampling of emergency assistance offered by the American Legion to families of soldiers deployed in Operation Desert Shield.

The Family Support Network of the American Legion operates a 24-hour, toll-free number — 1-800-786-0901 — to serve all military families seeking help.

Callers need only a touch-tone phone to tap in their area code, telephone number and ZIP code.

Legion members can help provide everything from household help to financial relief, said American Legion National Commander Robert S. Turner. "The only limit on the kind of help we can offer depends on the imagination and capabilities of the local Legion officials."

Officials say all requests will be handled confidentially, then categorized and put into priority before being sent on for follow-up action.

Within 48 hours, the family member should be contacted by volunteers from one of the Legions's 16,000 posts or 10,00 auxiliary units nationwide.

The American Legion stresses their support network is augmenting that of the Department of Defense, which has primary responsibility for providing assistance to these families.

Commissaries help soldiers in Mideast

The U.S. Army Troop Support Agency's commissaries, both overseas and in the continental United States, have responded with quick service to support soldiers involved in Operation Desert Shield.

Commissaries at Riyadh and Dhahran have expanded operating hours. At Riyadh, transactions have grown to 650 per day and sales totaled $9,000 a day since the deployment of Desert Shield troops. Before the deployment and during the second quarter of fiscal 1990, the commissary averaged about 72 transactions daily and a little more than $5,800 a day in sales.

Both commissaries have assumed the Troop Subsistence Issue Activity mission of providing food supplies to the two dining facilities. The dining facility at Dhahran is feeding more than 3,000 troops daily and the facility at Riyadh is feeding more than 2,500.

Commissaries on the home front as well have rallied in support of deploying troops.

The Fort Benning commissary provided 352,214 bottles of Gatorade to the post's TISA for deploying soldiers.

MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR ACTIVE ARMY TIME
AFTER THE ARMY.

GO ARMY RESERVE

Leaving the Active Army doesn't mean you have to leave behind the significant benefits the Army has to offer.

Consider the Army Reserve and you can make the most of your Active Army time by continuing to receive the benefits you've earned. Benefits like low-cost life insurance, PX and commissary privileges, and qualifying for money to continue your education.

The Army Reserve is a great way to earn an extra income and keep these benefits coming. You'll also form long-lasting friendships with people who share similar experiences. It can ease the transition from full-time soldier to civilian.

Americans in Middle East befriend deployed troops

By William Harris
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — A warm smile, a Texas accent, an ice-cold soda, a chocolate candy bar, and U.S. magazines. Those are the items soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade received recently from a group of American citizens living in Saudi Arabia.

During the early days of the Iraqi attack on Kuwait, many American citizens on contract with corporations in Saudi Arabia were concerned for their safety.

According to one American, they had their cars packed, extra fuel stocked, and emergency escape routes across the desert plotted on maps. As the U.S. military buildup expanded over the days and weeks to follow, the American citizens felt more assured of their safety.

"Our wives and children are back in the U.S. as a result of the invasion, but we're planning to bring them back within the next few weeks solely because of your presence," a chemical company executive wrote in a letter to the soldiers of the Sledgehammer Brigade.

"Right after the invasion, one of our carpenters called his mother to let her know he was safe, but she wouldn't stop crying and begging him to come home.

When he called her again several days later he said she told him she wasn't worried anymore because, as she put it, "the American soldiers are there now."

To show their appreciation, some of the American workers voluntarily began a two-phase operation for the soldiers.

The first phase consisted of loading up their vehicles, previously ready for escape across the desert, with chests of ice-cold sodas, candy bars, and a large assortment of magazines.

These items were delivered to the soldiers with a handshake, a smile and a sincere thank you. The first trip involved 10 vehicles and 1,000 sodas. The second time out, the Americans delivered more than 4,000 sodas in some 24 vehicles.

The second phase, still being planned, is a sponsorship program whereby soldiers get a day off to visit an American family, enjoy a home-cooked meal, and watch television or pursue other leisure activities.

Some 125 of the Sledgehammer Brigade soldiers were scheduled to link up with American families during the last week of September.

"I can't thank you enough for what you are doing over here," an American worker told the soldiers as he handed them cold sodas and candy bars.

"Just talking to you and knowing you're ready to perform the mission you were sent here to do gives me peace of mind."

The smiles being exchanged on both sides of the handshakes in the 110 degree heat made it apparent that the soldiers were as appreciative of their visitors as the civilians were of them.

"My morale was high to begin with, but this visit just kicked it up one more notch," said a soldier assigned to the 72nd Engineer Company.

Newlyweds deploy together

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — Newlyweds Spec. Albert And Pvt. 1 Araceli Vazquez are experiencing their first deployment together — for an undetermined amount of time in the desert of Saudi Arabia.

"We had to put everything we had into storage and give up our trailer home in Columbus," said Araceli, 19, from Laredo, Texas, a patient administration specialist with Company B, 197th Support Battalion. "My sister has a power of attorney to pay off our bills."

"Being here with my wife as a fellow soldier is a hassle, but I can handle it," said Albert, 21, from Miami, Fla., a multichannel equipment systems operator who also serves as an assistant armorer and a combat lifesaver with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade. "1st Sgt. Steven Akana, my first sergeant, understands and lets me spend some time each night with my wife when I'm not working.

The Vazquezes met about one year ago at Kelley Hill and got married in May. Araceli wants to study political science when her five-year enlistment ends, while Albert plans a military career.

"I re-enlisted for three years this spring," he said. "I don't regret anything the Army asks me to do. I chose to be a soldier, and that's what I'm here for."

"Being in Saudi Arabia is rough, but knowing that Albert is here, too, makes it easier for me," Araceli said.

Both of the Vazquezes expect to get plenty of medical experience during this brigade's deployment.

"I've been told I'll be doing anything a medical specialist would do," said Araceli, who normally handles medical records at Kelley Hill.

"I volunteered to become a combat lifesaver for my unit because I felt it was a skill that would come in handy in the desert environment whether or not we go into combat," Albert said.

Traffic breaks desert silence

By Kevin C. Stibich
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — Sunset is the prettiest time of the day in the desert. It harkens cooler temperatures and diminishing winds. Creatures of the night climb from their burrows and start the grim task of surviving in this harsh land.

The silence of the Saudi desert is broken by the high-pitched squeal of digital message traffic from a forward observer attached to the infantry company. The computer console operator hits the "acknowledge" button and his computer screen lights up. "Fire mission!" he bellows.

Another night of tactical fire or TACFIRE has begun for the "Cannoneers" of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, somewhere on the Abrabian Peninsula.

The TACFIRE computer system used by the "Redlegs" of the 197th Infantry Brigade is not just one computer in one location, but a whole chain of computers, message devices and terminals in different areas, all tied together.

"I'm talking digitally to Divarty (24th Infantry Division Artillery), 100 miles away," said Staff Sgt. James Lawson proudly.

Lawson is 4th Battalion's senior fire direction non-commissioned officer, whose job is to supervise the operation of the battalion's TACFIRE "shelter."

"My computer and the battalion fire direction officer are responsible for the tactical fire control of this battalion," he said. "We have to be able to talk to everyone — radar, fire support teams, Divarty, and the firing batteries."

"TACFIRE skills are highly perishable and not unlike a foreign language," said Capt. Patrick Floody, the battalion fire direction officer. It is for this reason that the Redlegs are conducting sustaining training, exercising the whole TACFIRE system starting with the FISTs, and finally ending at the gun line of the howitzers.

"We've integrated our computer-fire radar and our metro (weather) section into the training; everyone's getting a workout," Floody continued. "We usually start at 7 p.m. with rehearsals, then go into the execution phase, practicing various scenarios involving different types of ammunition and methods. We usually wrap it up at 11:30 at night, then we conduct an after-action review."

The Saudi desert has been hard on the equipment as well, but working in shifts and air conditioning prevent the Middle East weather from shutting down TACFIRE. "The shelter comes with A.C.," Lawson said. "I can't run the battalion system if it gets too hot, and this computer generates a lot of heat."

As the sun sets on this arid land far from Fort Benning, the Redlegs continue their pursuit of realistic training. Reality might not be far off and the need to be ready is apparent.

Nightly sustainment training in TACFIRE is part of this land now, as are the men of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery. Like the scorpion and snake, they, too, are creatures of the night.

2nd Battalion, 69th Armor soldiers practice decontamination skills

By Willie Hay
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — At 2 a.m. soldiers guarding the assembly area where the "Panthers" of 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, are sleeping hear incoming enemy artillery. Suddenly, a volley of artillery rounds explodes into the area. The guards immediately sound the alarm — Mask! A chemical attack has begun.

The Panthers recently played out this scenario, including moving out of the contaminated area and conducting both hasty and deliberate decontamination exercises, as part of their efforts to improve survivability in a chemical environment.

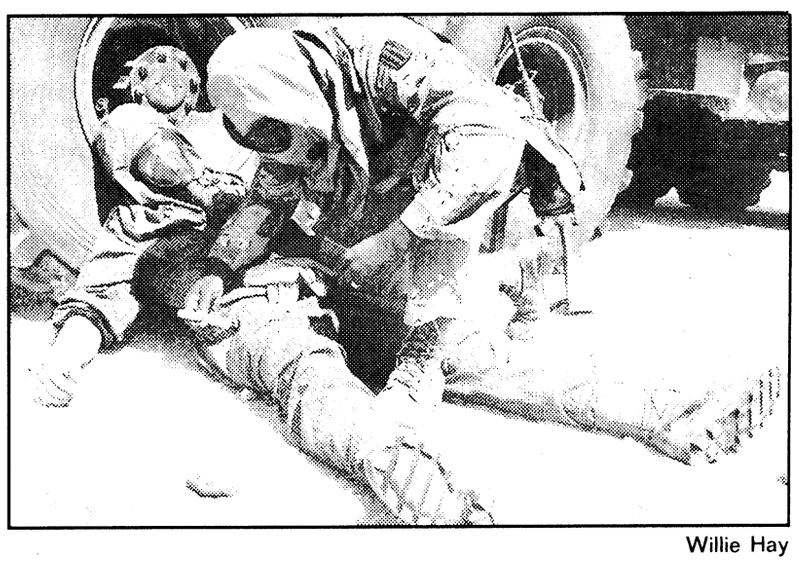
"The soldiers deployed on Operation Desert Shield face the highest threat of chemical or biological warfare the U.S. Army has ever encountered," said 1st Lt. Craig Beasley, platoon leader of the Decon Platoon, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Infantry Brigade, one of the chief trainers for chemical operations in the brigade.

"Because the enemy's chemical and biological agents are geared toward use in the desert, it's essential that we drill the soldiers daily on masking and decon procedures to ensure they can react properly and continue to perform their mission in the event of chemical attack," he continued.

According to Beasley, hasty decontamination is conducted after the soldiers' immediate actions when attacked by chemical agents. After donning protective masks, the soldiers employ chemical agent detection paper and other devices to identify contaminants on their skin, clothing and personal gear.

"Hasty decon involves a quick washdown of each crew's M-1 tank with hot, soapy water to remove gross contaminants — persistent liquid agents that would have a lingering, lethal impact on the soldiers if not neutralized and completely removed," he said.

"By contrast, deliberate decon is supervised by a team of chemical specialists," Beasley continued. "It involves the complete washdown of tanks and other vehicles, application of decontaminating solution to both the exterior and interior, a final rinse with water heated to 210 degrees Fahrenheit, and inspection by chemical personnel to ensure all contaminants have been removed."



Willie Hay

Spec. Rodrick Caldwell, a medic, masks Pfc. Carl Walsh Jr. during training.

According to Sgt. Charles Amburn, chemical non-commissioned officer for Company B, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, the soldiers proceed through various stations to decontaminate themselves, each other and their equipment. "These include removal of all contaminated clothing, checks on contaminated personnel by another soldier and a medic, and disassembly and thorough cleaning of the protective mask," Amburn explained. "Protective overgarments are discarded if contaminated, and a new set is issued to each soldier."

According to Beasley, the application of decontaminating solution — a highly concentrated detergent mixed with bleach — has proven effective in neutralizing all the chemical agents the Army has studied.

"Setting up decon sites throughout the brigade really improves the unit's survivability and builds the soldiers' confidence in their ability to fight in a chemical environment," Beasley said.

"If I knew battle was imminent, I would have the men don their protective overgarments immediately," said Lt. Col. Ricardo Sanchez, commander of the 2nd Bn., 69th Armor. "We feel proficient in our ability to fight in MOPP 4 (the highest level of mission oriented protective posture, with mask and all chemical clothing worn)."

"This is the first time I've done deliberate decontamination of a vehicle," said Spec. Michael Vice, an M-1 tank loader with Co. B. Throughout the exercise, soldiers wore their green-and-black night desert parkas to simulate the chemical protective shirt and trousers.

"The M-1 isn't as hard to decontaminate as some tanks because of its flat surfaces, but you still have to check around the skirt, road wheels and turret seal to make sure you've removed all the contaminants," Pvt. 1st Class William James, another M-1 crew member, pointed out.

"This exercise taught me that practice and teamwork are essential to the success of a decon operation," added Spec. Pete Striley, a third tanker.

"We will be doing more of these exercises," Capt. Eric Grasman, Co. B commander, assured his soldiers during an after action review. "Everything you do out here to decontaminate yourself and your equipment has to be done right, because mistakes can kill you."

Ranger runs 100 miles

By Shawn Lunsfordhodson
USADPG Public Affairs Office

Some people say they pull on inner strength to find the finish line at the end of a marathon, but Troy S. Glassman, a staff sergeant wasn't looking for the finish line at mile 75 of his marathon. He was looking for a Wendy's hamburger.

At checkpoint seven of the "World's Toughest 100-Miler," the eleventh annual Wasatch Front 100-Mile Endurance Race, Glassman's friend and motivator Staff Sgt. Michael Williams anxiously awaited with the special request.

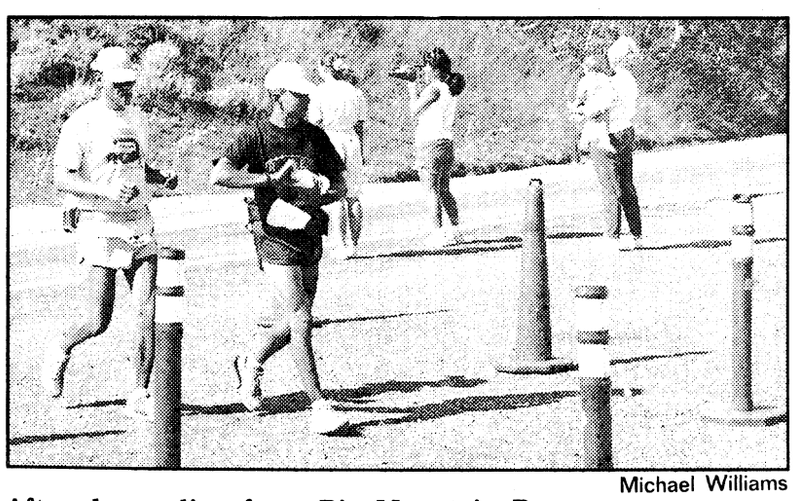
"He had chips, Slim Jims and candy bars with him on the run. All he wanted was a Wendy's hamburger," Williams said. "I didn't think he'd finish it, but he looked real good (at mile 75), then I knew he would."

Glassman soon ate his hamburger and headed off for the highest elevation of this race: 10,480 feet. That wasn't the toughest part Glassman said.

The toughest part came later, near mile 82, where he had to run nearly two miles straight down, then two miles back up.

Throughout the course that started in Layton, Utah at 5,000 feet and ended up in Midway, Utah at 5,600 feet he endured crawling up and down rocks and clay slides.

"I didn't know what to expect out there. I was running against experience," Glassman said. "Some people were falling asleep out there from calorie burn-out."



Michael Williams

After descending from Big Mountain Pass, Troy Glassman leads the way into a checkpoint.

The Orlando, Fla. native credits his ranger experience for completing the race.

He said that he looked at the race as a field problem and knew his experience road marching would pay off.

Glassman boasted, "A few of the competitors saw my T-shirt and shorts with the Ranger tab emblem and joked with me saying that my training prepared me mentally.

"I think that running a race like this is more mental than anything else," he added.

After watching the Western States 100-miler on television about five months ago, Glassman's interest grew and he was soon entering marathons.

In addition to his morning physical training with the 7th Ranger Battalion, he would run in the Cedar Mountains in the evenings.

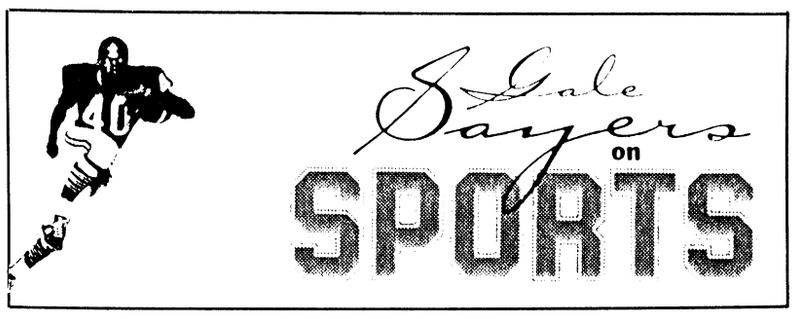
"I thought he was crazy," said Glassman's wife, Naomi. "I wasn't sure if he could run a hundred miles. I waited with the kids for the phone to ring and Michael called saying he was lost. But, I knew he was kidding.

I was happy for Troy, so I babied him for a few days because he was so sore. It was the least I could do."

Hoping to enter the next Western States, the new marathon runner wants to complete a "Grand Slam" (four 100 mile races in three months).

To qualify for the Western States, Glassman and Williams will travel to Sacramento for a 24-hour race on a track. To qualify, an entrant must complete 100 miles on the track within 24 hours. The names of those who do qualify are then pooled and 425 are selected to compete.

This qualifying race will be different though, this time Williams is going to compete with Glassman.



More Season, More Playoffs

Two important changes were made in National Football League schedules this year, but until the season is over, we will not be able to judge their effect on play. The most important change is that the NFL has expanded the playoffs by adding a second wild-card team to the mix. The league also has lengthened the season by one week, giving every team a week off, or a "bye," somewhere in its schedule.

My feeling is that we will see nothing but positive results from adding another wild-card team to the playoffs. I certainly don't think it will ruin the playoffs, as some have charged. Teams that have come on strong in the second half of the season after some early losses will now have a better chance of getting in on the post-season action. It will provide incentive for teams to keep playing hard for the entire season. Considering the number of teams that have just missed making the playoffs in recent years and the parity the NFL is shooting for, it looks like a smart move.

I do have mixed feelings about adding a bye to NFL schedules. On the positive side, I'm sure that the bye will benefit injury-plagued teams by giving players a chance to heal and get ready for the rest of the season. On the other hand, teams that are hot and suddenly have to take a week off from competition could be hurt by the bye.

There is one complaint I've heard against extending the season a week that gets no sympathy from me, and that's cold weather. Some people contend that football now should be played only when it's warm or in a domed stadium. I'm sorry, but I'm from the old school, and I remember some of the real classic games played in subzero temperatures. Cold weather is part of the game, something you train and condition for. In the last week of this regular season when Cleveland travels to Cincinnati and Green Bay goes to Denver to square off on frozen fields, people will see football the way it was meant to be played. Thank goodness that hasn't changed about the game.

Which brings us to the real reason the league added the extra playoff game and extended the season: television. Television has brought many changes to the NFL, and some concessions have to be made. Because football is a very expensive sport, especially with escalating salaries, television money is a necessity. I really have nothing against the fact that television has come to play such a big role in professional football.

My one hope is that football never goes the way of professional basketball and ice hockey, where practically every team makes the playoffs and the regular season almost doesn't matter. As the NFL moves toward expansion, it must devise a way to keep the number of playoff teams under control.

Autumn brings bass to lakes

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Autumn is the one time of year when bass fishermen don't mind being caught up a creek without a paddle.

That's because creeks are prime places to catch largemouths this time of year. The fish are moving shallow, they're feeding heavily, an they actively chase fast-moving lures.

"Fall is really my favorite time of year to fish," said angler David Wharton, a well-known tournament pro and former guide on Sam Rayburn Lake in Texas. "Bass are both easier to find and to catch because they're in predictable locations and usually feeding pretty aggressively."

Wharton suggests anglers begin looking for autumn bass in major lake tributaries, and concentrate first round shallow vegetation along the edges of channels.

"Begin your fishing in the mouth of a big creek," advises Wharton, "and gradually fish your way back. Bass will be located in a distinct area of the creek, depending upon how far they've moved into it. Once you locate this area, you'll usually find bass in the same area in other creeks, too."

Wharton looks first for vegetation like milfoil, lily pads, moss, or weeds that may grow along the shoreline and extend out into deeper water. In the absence of vegetation, Wharton concentrates on stumps, fallen logs or bushes.

"The availability of cover is extremely important in locating bass in these creeks," Wharton points out, "because the fish are feeding heavily on baitfish. The bait will invariably be in or near the cover.

"That's why vegetation is such a good place to look. The greenery attracts and holds small minnows because it provides both food and cover for them. At the same time, bass use the grass for their own hide-and-ambush tactics."

Spinnerbaits are the lure of choice for fishing autumn creeks, says Wharton, because they can be worked shallow or deep, fast or slow, and are basically weedless around thick, heavy cover.

"I will usually begin with a chartreuse and white spinnerbait with a single size 5 silver willowleaf blade," he explains, "and I'll ripple it just under the surface around the cover.

"Later in the day, or if bass hit and continually miss the lure, I'll fish it slower and deeper. I let the fish tell me how they want it."

Fall is also an excellent time to catch trophy bass, he added, because big bass, which are normally far less active than smaller bass, also begin feeding more heavily this time of year and become more susceptible for artificial lures.

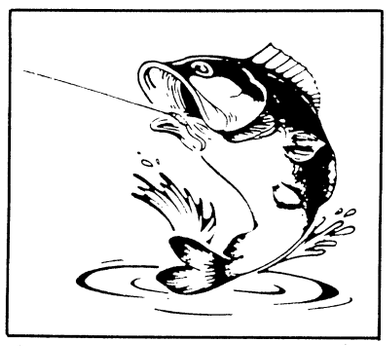
Bass club holds monthly tourney

By Jackie Marsh
Fort Benning Bass Club

The Fort Benning Bass Club's monthly tournament was Oct. 13 and 14 at Lake Sinclair outside of Milledgeville, Ga.

There were 83 fish caught with a total weight of 104 pounds, 12 ounces. The first place honors went to the team of Willie Goble and Tom Wilkerson with a total of 22 pounds, 13 ounces. Skip Ray and Jackie Marsh captured second place with 20 pounds, 3 ounces.

Third-place team members were Jim Stutts and Bob Billman with a total of 16 pounds, 1 ounce.



Brown took the big fish pot with a 3-pound, 4-ounce catch.

The club will hold its next tournament Nov. 17 at Lake Martin, Ala. Fort Benning Bass Club holds one points tournament each month of the year.

The Fort Benning Bass Club sponsors and participates in a number of civic functions throughout the year. Anyone interested in becoming a part of a fishing club which promotes conservation, good sportsmanship, community pride, as well as fishing, contact Brenda Carter at 689-7474 or Ben McGuire at 568-0699.

Prospective members are invited to attend one of the club's meetings held the second and fourth Tuesday each month in Building 2616 on the second floor at 7:30 p.m.

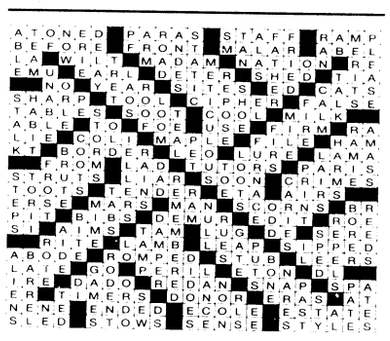
LAST WEEK



Cobb County hosts gem show

Cobb County Gem and Mineral Society

The 22nd annual Gem and Mineral Show sponsored by the Cobb County Gem and Mineral Society is Nov. 16, 17 and 18 at the Cobb Civic Center in Marietta.

It will feature an array of jewelry, minerals, gems and fossils, along with an hour-by-hour line-up of free demonstrations given by members of the society. The event will be from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Sunday. Admission and parking are free.

Dealers from throughout the United States will offer thousands of precious and semi-precious jewels and stones, exotic minerals and crystal specimens.

Free educational demonstrations will include gem tree making, wire wrapping, bead stringing, wax casting, and how to facet gem stones. Gene Harris will also present his award-winning display on silversmithing.

The demonstrations will be given hourly on the main floor of the Civic Center and the schedule will be posted at the entrance. Members of the society will also be available to help identify stones and answer questions. Grab bags will be offered for $1, and door prizes will be given daily.

The Cobb County Gem and Mineral Society is a non-profit organization for people interested in the study of minerals, geology, fossils, and in the practice of the lapidary arts. It is dedicated to teaching youth the jobs of the earth sciences.

Show proceeds go to the Society's scholarship fund and other educational programs. For more information, call (404) 434-1296.

BOSS holds party

Directorate of Community Activities

The Directorate of Community Activities, FOXIE 105 FM, and the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Group held a party Oct. 20 at the Main NCO Club for singles.

The event was co-sponsored by Cars Unlimited, Scheduled Airline Ticket Office, Wal-Mart on the Airport Thruway, and Modern TV and Appliances.

Prizes given away included free weekend trips, cash and more. The NCO Club provided free finger foods for participants.

FOXIE radio personalities Billy Dee, Ed Lewis, Terry Thomas, Arthur Thompson, Remoh Thompson, and the program director, Phillip David March, were on hand to do a live remote broadcast.

This was the first BOSS Group function at the Main NCO Club. Approximately 2,000 persons attended.

SPIRITUAL

Local library traces family histories

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

"In all of us there is a hunger, bone-marrow deep, to know our heritage — to know who we are and where we have come from. Without this enriching knowledge, there is a hollow yearning. No matter what our attainments in life, there is still a vacuum, an emptiness, and the most disquieting loneliness."

Alex Haley, author of the book Roots, wrote these words more than a decade ago, but the power and truth of them still hold true. Facing this need for family history knowledge, a group of chaplains and chaplain assistants from Fort Benning visited a local research library.

The tour was sponsored by the Chaplains' Family Life Center. Chaplain (Maj.) John Bjarnason, clinical pastoral education student, arranged for the group to visit the Family History Library on 4400 Reese Road in Columbus. The tour and workshop gave participants hands-on experience in the art of family historical study.

Emogene Walker, chief librarian, helped the group learn how to begin a search for their ancestors by teaching attendees ways to access over 98 million names in the library, plus how to use U.S. Census records.

In addition to using library resources, a video about geneology was shown, explaining how to obtain other records.

Anyone interested in learning more about their family history may come to the library Tuesday or Thursday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. or Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., 563-7216. There is no admission charge.

For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia at 545-1760 or Chaplain (Maj.) Jon Bjarnason at 544-3179.

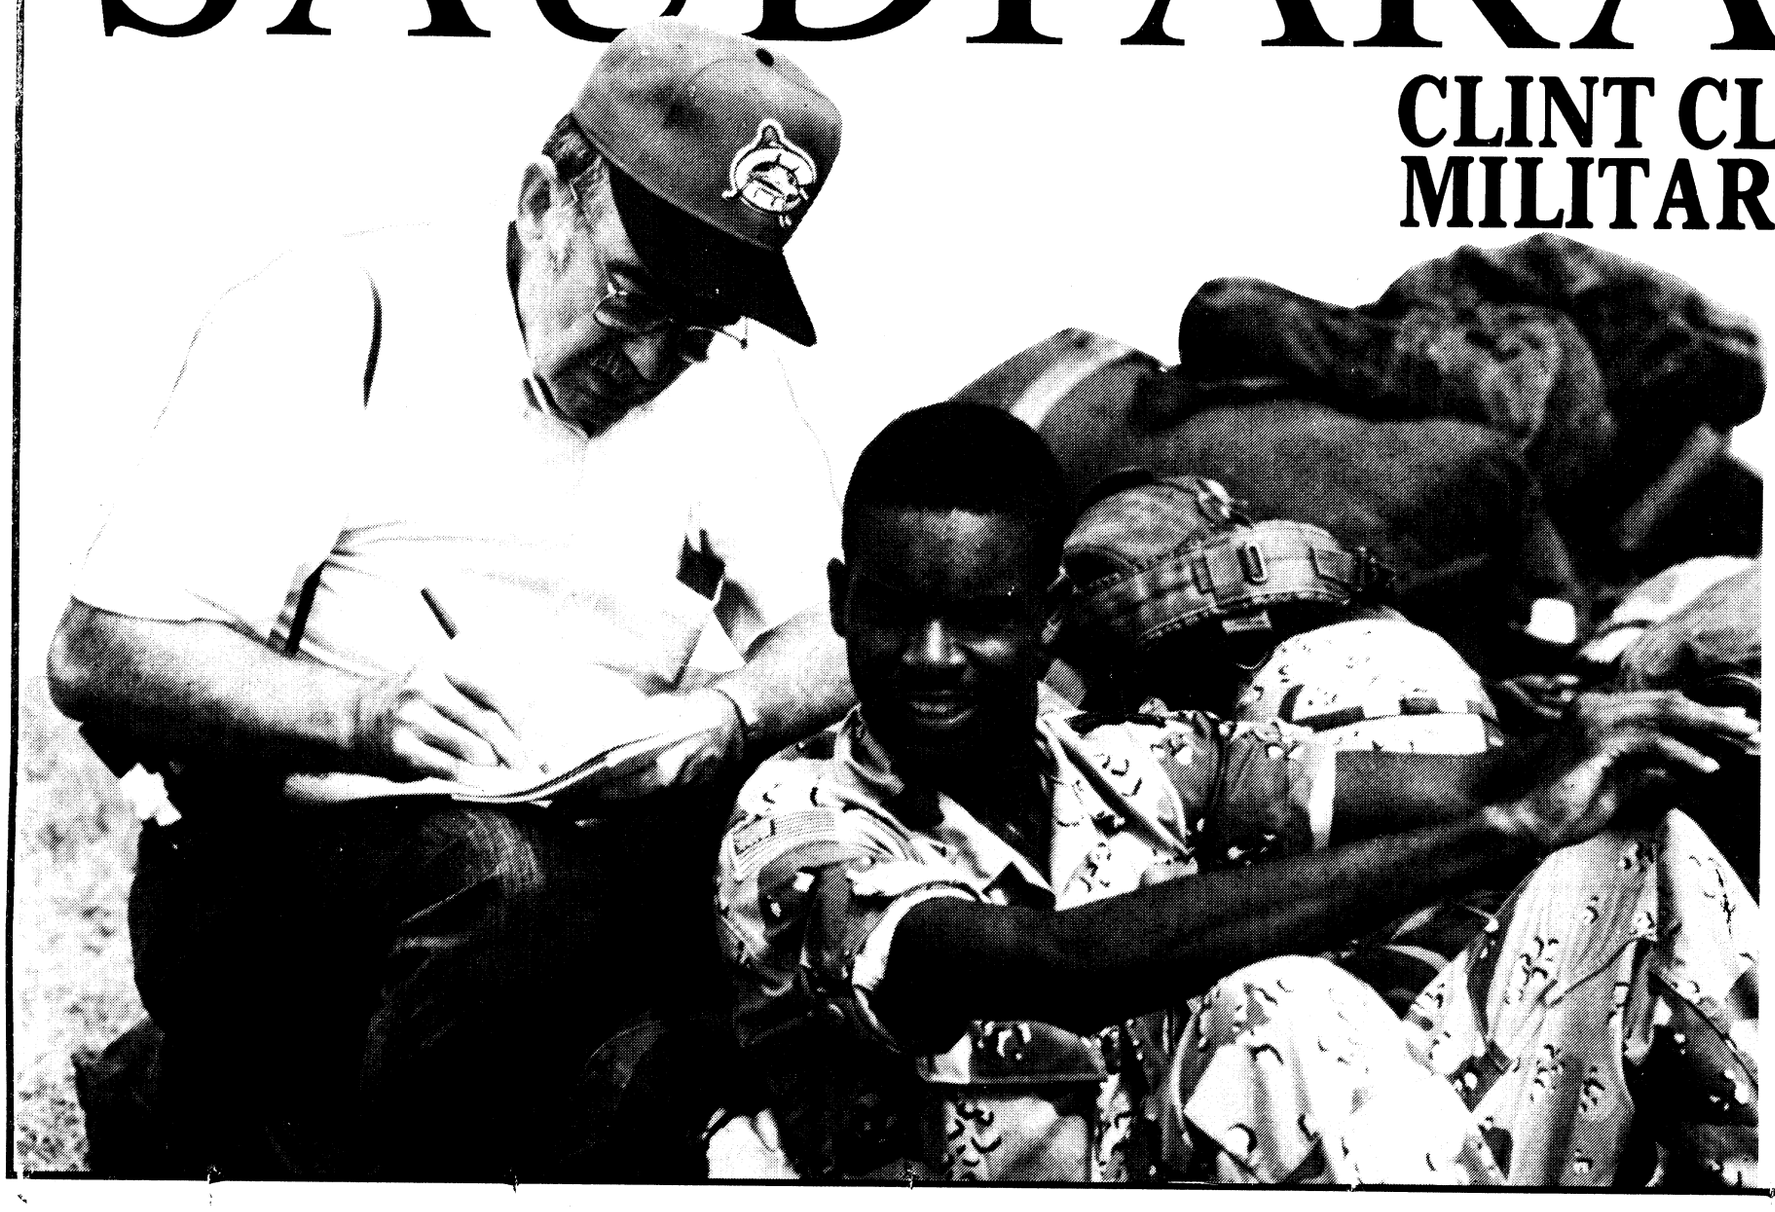
HOME FROM SAUDI ARABIA

CLINT CLAYBROOK
MILITARY WRITER



Veteran Ledger-Enquirer military writer Clint Claybrook was expected back in Columbus sometime Thursday night after almost a week of interviewing some of the men and women from Fort Benning stationed in Saudi Arabia.

During the past week he's told us about living conditions, how mail call is the most important time of the day and how soldiers kill time playing basketball. Then he told us that "If talk turns to action, a bunch of Fort Benning troops will hand out the bullets." He had just interviewed members of the 608th Ordinance Company, part of the 36th Engineers, who had begun work on the second ammunition point.

As it stands now, Clint plans to prepare a series of stories and, we hope, photos, from his time with the troops. Although we don't yet know what all he'll have to write about, we do know he'll include as many names and tell us as much as he can about what he saw and heard in the desert. If all goes well, his series will start Sunday.

Watch for his reports

DJ to send tapes to Mideast

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

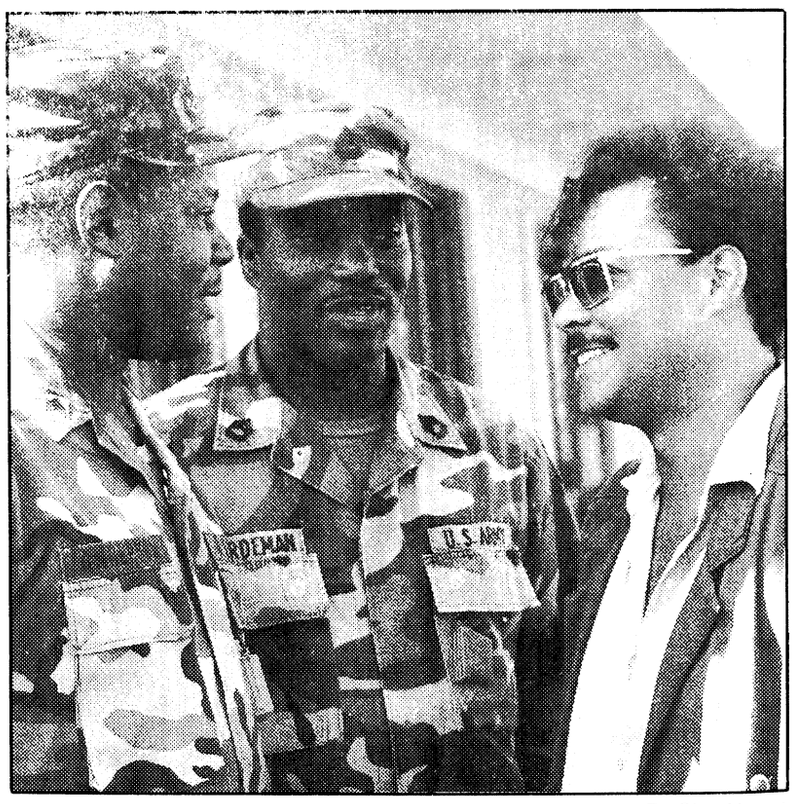
A disc jockey at a local radio station wishes to add the sound of music to the list of contributions in the "support Desert Shield" effort in the community.

Billy Dee, a disc jockey at WFXE 105 FM, is in the process of making audio tapes of current popular music to send to the soldiers in Saudi Arabia who are participating in Operation Desert Shield.

"I was in the Navy and when I was stationed overseas, it was hard to get a station that played the type of music that I liked to hear. I could imagine that soldiers in the Pesian Gulf are experiencing similar difficulties," said Dee.

"I discussed the possibility of organizing this project with the general manager of the radio station, Charles Richardson. He liked the idea, and gave me a green light.

"Now, all we need to do is coordinate with Fort Benning for further guidance about shipment and distribution of the tapes."



Alyanna B. Clay-Heard

Billy Dee, disc jockey at WFXE 105 FM, talks with Sgt. 1st Class Walter Hardeman and Staff Sgt. Alvin Anderson, both of Co. A, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Dentists detect eating disorders

Dental Activity

Dentists are often the first to detect eating disorders.

Five percent of adult women and 12 percent of adolescent girls have had symptoms of an eating disorder, according to the Academy of General Dentistry.

On college and high school campuses, purging — self-induced vomiting or use of laxatives, diet pills or diuretics as a means of weight control — is reaching epidemic proportions.

During vomiting, the most common means of purging, stomach acids wash over the teeth and erode tooth enamel.

The Academy of General Dentistry recommends that patients with eating disorders rinse their mouths with water, rather than brushing, after vomiting. The increase of acids in the mouth, along with the brushing motion, can further damage teeth.

"The dentist often has the first opportunity to notice an eating disorder," said Mark Simmons, Doctor of Dental Surgery, Academy of General Dentistry and consultant to the University of Minnesota's Eating Disorder Clinic.

"Bulimics or anorectics won't go to a physician or a psychiatrist because they usually want to hide their problem. But they often go to the dentist because they have tooth problems — chipped teeth, or sensitivity after erosion of tooth enamel," Dr. Simmons said.

Most patients with eating disorders will deny they have a problem. However, if dentists suspect an eating disorder they should be persistent in encouraging the patient to seek professional help.

As eating disorders are addictions and create many physical complications, immediate referral to a psychiatrist or eating disorder treatment center is necessary. According to the Academy of General Dentistry, the more time that passes between a developing eating disorder and seeking treatment, the more difficult the treatment.

Editor's note: The Academy of General Dentistry was the source of this information, which was taken from an article written in June of 1989.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I bought a new car in May 1990 and made each monthly payment on time until September when I came into the Army. My military paycheck is a lot smaller than my civilian paycheck and I'm having a hard time making the money stretch to meet my family's needs.

I missed the September and October car payments and the car dealer, who is also handling the financing, said that he is going to repossess the car. It is the only means of transportation that my family and I have.

My wife just started a new job, so I'll be able to make up the missed payments within the next 30 days. Is there anything that I can do to stop them?

A. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act will protect you in this situation. Any person who enters into an installment contract for the purchase of personal property, such as a car, and has paid a deposit or installment payment under the contract and then enters military service, is protected from an early termination of the contract and repossession of the property by the creditor.

The creditor may only terminate the contract or repossess the property if he first obtains a court order. Before the creditor may terminate the contract or repossess the property, the court may require the creditor to repay the prior installments and deposit to the purchaser.

Furthermore, the court has the power to temporarily suspend the creditor's right to repossess or terminate the contract if the court is satisfied that the purchaser's ability to make the installment payments has been materially affected because of military service.

Please remember that the contract must have been entered into before the soldier came on active duty and that the soldier must have made a deposit or one or more payments on the property before entering into the service.

The non-payment of additional installments may have occurred before or after the soldier came on active duty.

If a creditor knows that the purchaser is now on active duty and yet still repossesses the property or attempts to repossess without a court order, the creditor may be found guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by imprisonment or a fine.

It is important that you notify the creditor immediately of your entry into active duty military service.

You should do this in writing and deliver the letter either personally or by registered or certified mail to prove that the creditor received notice.

Please call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 and make an appointment to speak with an attorney to obtain more specific information regarding your particular case.

Dry storage for toothbrush essential

Academy of General Dentistry

The bathroom can be a moist haven for infectious disease, and the worst place to store your toothbrush, reports the Academy of General Dentistry. To lessen the transmission and life span of bacteria, the Academy suggests that toothbrushes should be stored uncovered in a bedroom, which is typically a drier storage space.

A recent University of Oklahoma study tested the effectiveness of new vs. used toothbrushes to help fight disease. Dogs were the subjects in the study because they have "profound immune systems and are very resistant to change," and, like humans are susceptible to gum disease.

Results showed that a toothbrush can transmit bacteria that causes cavities, gum disease, colds, flu, sinusitis, bronchitis and even upset stomach. These bacteria thrive in moist places like the bathroom.

The study also suggests that a toothbrush, even for a healthy person, should be replaced as often as every two weeks. "This will not only keep your mouth as healthy as possible, it will also help keep the rest of your body healthy, "said Fred Magaziner, Doctor of Dental Surgery with the Academy. "We're at a point where we should consider the toothbrush a disposable item."

For those who are sick, the Oklahoma researchers recommend the toothbrush should be replaced three times — at the beginning of the illness, when you're starting to feel better, and at the end of the illness.

Patients receiving chemotherapy should replace their toothbrushes as often as every three days, and patients recovering from major surgery, such as bypass or transplant surgery, should replace their toothbrush each day.

Local media visit Benning troops in desert

Reps get first-hand look at soldiers' living conditions

By Ron Allen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Four members of the local media traveled to Saudi Arabia Oct. 26 through 31 to visit troops from Fort Benning.

Local television personalities Sam Hall from WRBL-TV, Wayne Bennett of WTVM-TV and Richard Elliott with WLTZ-TV and Clint Claybrook, a writer for the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, visited the Fort Benning soldiers stationed in Saudi Arabia.

"I was quite impressed with the level of morale," said Hall. "It, along with living conditions, isn't anywhere near as bad as the rumors I've heard. I didn't know exactly what I expected to see when I arrived, but it certainly wasn't this."

Hall, Bennett, Elliott and Claybrook got a chance to see the soldiers' living conditions first hand. They spent all their time in Saudi Arabia in the desert with the soldiers, eating the same food, sleeping in the same tents and using the same facilities.

"We made this trip to bring the facts back to family members and love ones living in the Columbus, Phenix City, Fort Benning area," Hall said. "By seeing it on television, it will be much easier for them to decide between rumor and fact. If conditions are bad, we're going to say they're bad, if they aren't we're going to say that, too. We're happy we got the opportunity to do this for the community."

The reporters visited every unit in the 197th Infantry Brigade and the 36th Engineer Group, with the exception of the 34th Medical Battalion and 215th Finance, which were in the process of moving.

Soldiers were eager to talk with the group as they visited the different units. "Actually, it's not bad here," said Sgt. Jerry J. Aldridge, Headquarter, 197th Inf. Bde. "It's a lot better than I expected when I left Benning."

Ron Allen

Richard Elliott of WLTZ-TV videotapes the changing of the guards at Tiger Beach in Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

"We have shower stalls and can take a shower just about any time we want," Aldridge said. "We did have long lines at the shower tents before, but not any more. Things are continually getting better."

Most of the soldiers in the 197th Inf. Bde. and the 36th Engineer Group mirror Aldridge's assessment of the conditions there. "It's a big adjustment," said Spec. Sandra M. Chisholm, 608th Ordnance Company. "The dust is murder, but things are getting better all the time. The thing I miss most is being with my son and my husband."

The soldiers now have exchange tents in each battalion area where they can buy cold sodas and other snack items as well as personal hygiene items.

New recreation tents are being put up where soldiers can watch video tapes, read books or listen to music. Also, the soldiers get the opportunity to play sports such as basketball, football and soccer.

One ingenious group of soldiers with the 72nd Engineer Company even built a weight room using camouflage poles, plastic water bottles filled with sand and scrap wood.

"We're in the process of setting up rear areas here where the soldiers can come out of the desert and relax for short periods of time," said Col. Hank Miller, commander of the 36th.

"The most popular place here now is Tiger Beach," he said. Tiger Beach is an old labor camp built for German workers who came to Saudi Arabia to build a water purification plant in Dhahran. The camp is built right on the beach. Many of the soldiers swim at the beach.

"Tiger Beach will make a great place for the soldiers to come for a little down time," Miller said. "What surprised us was the condition of the buildings. When we got the electricity going, many of the air conditioners still worked."

Not all the soldiers are happy with conditions but many are adjusting. "I miss everything about being home," said Spec.

POST BRIEFS

Cable channel 13 to broadcast 'Snapshots from Saudi Arabia'

The videotape "Snapshots from Saudi Arabia," which was shown at the 197th Family Support meeting Thursday and will be shown at today's meeting, will be aired again Tuesday through Nov. 16 on Alert Cable Channel 13.

Channel 13 will also feature footage taken in Saudi Arabia of soldiers from units with the 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group, and 34th Medical Company provided by local stations WRBL-TV3, WLTZ-TV38, and WTVM-TV9.

Family Support meeting today

A Family Support Group meeting for 197th family members will be today in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Family members of the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, 2nd Battalion, 69th Infantry who missed Thursday's meeting may attend today's meeting along with family members of the 4th Battalion, 41st Infantry; 197th Support Battalion; Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Inf. Bde.; 72nd Engineers; and Troop D, 4th Cavalry.

The meeting will include videos of U.S. and Iraqi forces in Saudi Arabia and an opportunity for Fort Benning leaders in Saudi Arabia to answer questions via telephone.

Free baby-sitting will be provided.

29th Inf. Regt. sponsors CAPEX

The 29th Infantry Regiment is sponsoring a Capability Exercise to include a demonstration of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle Nov. 14 at 1:15 p.m. on Red Cloud Range on Dixie Road. A "Rangers In Action" demonstration will be immediately after at Victory Pond.

All government service employees are cordially invited. Supervisors and directors are encouraged to release their personnel as mission dictates to attend this event.

Bus transportation will be provided from selected areas to the CAPEX and demonstration and return. For more information, call Maj. Ron Bertha at 544-6411 or 544-6008.

Family support day Saturday

A family support day, sponsored by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, will be Saturday at Kelley Hill Recreation Center from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Family members of the 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion are invited.

Local radio stations will have live remote broadcasts and will tape dedications that will be sent to soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

Representatives from Army Community Service and the Judge Advocate General's office and rear detachment officers will be available to answer questions. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call 545-3438.

Veterans Day activities set

The Columbus-Phenix City-Fort Benning area's Veterans Day parade is Sunday beginning at 2 p.m. on Broad Street in Phenix City.

A veterans memorial service will be Sunday at Fort Mitchell National Cemetery at 11 a.m.

Atlanta's Veterans Day activities include a parade and a banquet Saturday. Former Benning commander, Gen. Edwin H. Burba Jr., who is commander-in-chief of the U.S. Forces Command, will speak at a 6:30 p.m. banquet at the Dunwoody Hotel and Conference Center.

Post rangers to join Flag Run

Fort Benning soldiers will participate in the 1990 American Flag Run, which began Oct. 27 at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery. Benning rangers will run from Shorter, Ala. Saturday to the "Run a mile for America" run, which begins at Phenix City's First Alabama Bank at 3:30 p.m. and ends at the Columbus Promenade, where a welcome ceremony will take place at 4:30 p.m.

The 1,000-mile Flag Run will end Sunday at Fort Mitchell National Cemetery when rangers from the Ranger Training Brigade will take up the flag and run it.

For a $1 donation, anyone may run in the "Run a mile for America" run.

"Run a mile for America" is an event sponsored by the American Flag Run Association to benefit the Army Community Services Food Locker.

For more information, call 324-7309 or 628-5915.

Marines celebrates birthday

The U.S. Marine Corps celebrates its 215th birthday Saturday, and Fort Benning's Marine Corps Representative's Office is hosting its annual Marine Corps Ball tonight at 6 at the post's Officers' Club. Columbus Mayor James Jernigan will be the guest of honor and Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, and Brig. Gen. William Steele, deputy post commander, will also attend.

Car care clinics scheduled

Car care clinics for family members of Operation Desert Shield are scheduled at the Main Post Auto Parts Store, in building 1624, on the following dates: Tuesday — 7 p.m.; Nov. 27 — 7 p.m.; and Dec. 11 — 7 p.m.

Interested persons may call 682-0261 for more information. Registration may be made through the Car Care Center.

Desert Shield soldiers report mail problems diminishing

By Ron Allen
USAIC Public Affairs Office

SAUDI ARABIA — When one thinks of complaints associated with Operation Desert Shield, mail problems immediately come to mind.

Stories of mail tents burning to the ground in the desert, letters being opened and censored, packages arriving with the contents removed and mail taking months to arrive are all horror stories making the rounds.

"At first there were some problems with moving the mail on a timely basis," said 1st Lt. Mark Kirchgessnea, 351st Adjutant General Postal Company. "Now, with the strong emphasis on mail, from the top on down, problems are diminishing."

Kirchgessnea is the 351st operations officer at the Dhahran airport where all mail destined for soldier in Saudi Arabia initially arrives. "We are handling approximately 45 tons of mail a day," he said. "We have 30 soldiers who break down the mail by APO and deliver it to the field. They are working in shifts of 12 hours each."

"We're hoping that another postal unit will be forthcoming," Kirchgessnea said. "We sure could use the help. As it is now, the moment we get one pallet of mail broken down, another is added to the line of pallets outside."

Even with the present shortage of mail handlers at Dhahran, the mail is now moving swiftly from the airport to the soldiers in the field.

Pfc. Michael C. Tschiggfrie, a loader with 1st Platoon, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, wanted his wife to know he was getting mail. "Margret, I love you and miss you. Keep writing, I'm getting lots of your letters now," he said.

"At first I thought maybe my wife wasn't writing; the mail just wasn't coming," Tschiggfrie said. "But now I'm getting lots of mail. It takes seven to 10 days for it to arrive from the states, but I can live with that."

The mail arrives in Dhahran airport, usually aboard Military Airlift Command aircraft. It is then unloaded by U.S. military personnel and taken to a large hanger at the airport. There, it is hurriedly broken down and moved out to the soldiers in the field.

As for the horror stories, "They're quietly going away as the soldiers begin getting mail on a regular basis," Kirchgessnea said. "And, as for the mail tent that burned, it's true we did have a mail tent catch fire out at the 197th, but no mail was destroyed. Some was damaged, but it was delivered."

"Keep the cards, letters and packages coming," said Spec. Alberta Russell, Headquarters and Headquarters Command, 197th Infantry Brigade. "It sure boosts my morale."

Tobacco firm offers 'voice' greeting card

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A national tobacco company has added their input into the growing wave of businesses providing support to the soldiers and family members involved in Operation Desert Shield.

Philip Morris is sponsoring the Marlboro Holiday Voice Card — a campaign that gives family members an opportunity to record a 10-second message on a voice chip, which will be inserted in a holiday greeting card and sent to a service member stationed in Saudi Arabia participating in Operation Desert Shield at no cost to the family member.

"We are proud of the service these men and women are providing our country," said Carl Cohen, brand manager for Marlboro. "Many of our troops have not heard the voices of loved ones for months," he continued, "and this is a great way to bring families and friends closer together during the holidays."

To participate, message senders need only show up at the designated area and bring the address of the service person receiving the card.

Technicians will be on hand to ensure that all messages are properly recorded.

"Recording sessions should only take about two minutes each, so lines and waiting times should be short," said Cohen.

Company representatives will be at the main Post Exchange today and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Mail Bayonets to troops in Mideast

When you finish reading this issue of The Bayonet, mail it to a soldier participating in Operation Desert Shield. If you don't have a relative or friend to send it to, address it to: Any Service Member, Operation Desert Shield, APO, NY 09848-0006.

APOs for Benning units are:

197th Infantry Brigade — 09315
HHC, 36th Eng. Group — 09315
608th Ordnance Co. — 09657

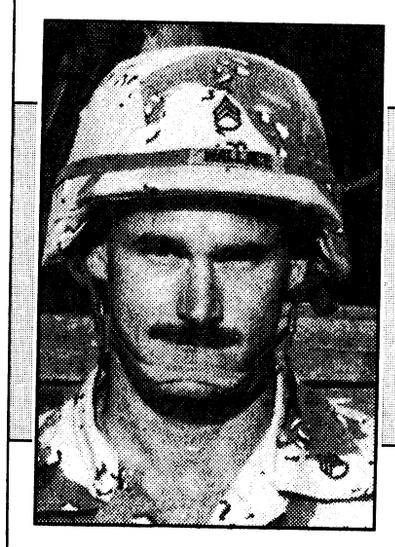
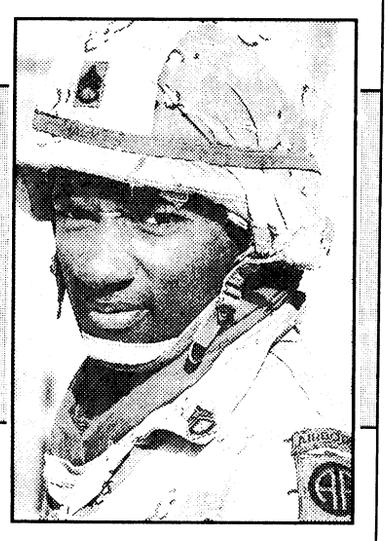
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:
What's it like being in Saudi Arabia?

Spec. Barbara Goffney, HHC, 197th Inf. Bde. — "This is a big change from what I'm use to, and it was hard to get accustomed to. The weather was tough at first, but it's cooled off some. I miss my family the most."



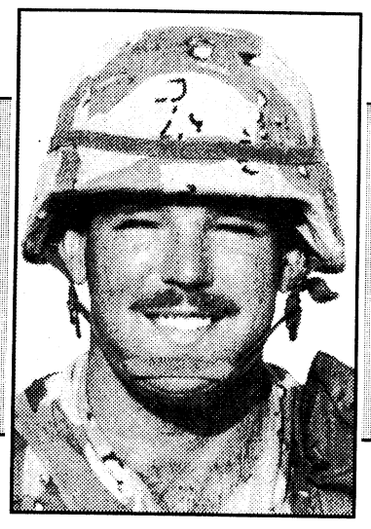
Staff Sgt. J.R. Wallace, Battery B, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery — "It's hard to navigate here when convoying because of limited visibility caused by dust stirred up. It's also hard to get use to drinking your water hot. The flies are murder, and the camels are curious."



Staff Sgt. Ulysses Harris, 307th Engineers, Fort Bragg — "It's a big adjustment, but living conditions are getting better all the time. New recreation centers and sports locations for basketball, football and soccer are being built. We even have a makeshift weight room."

Spec. Sandra M. Chisholm, 608th Ordnance Company — "It's okay here, but it is real dusty. I've adjusted, however. The thing I miss most is being with my son and my husband. My husband is over here with the 197th, and my son is with my mother."

Sgt. Jerry J. Aldridge, HQ, 197th Inf. Bde. — "It's not bad at all here. I believe it's a good experience. Living conditions are okay — a lot better than I expected. We have four shower stalls in each area so you can take a shower whenever you find time, and PX tents are located in every battalion area."



Spec. Terry A. Fetters, Battery B, 4th Bn., 41th FA — "I miss my wife, Tina. I hope we get this over soon so we can go home. It's no picnic over here, but we're surviving."

COMMENTARY

Confessions of an ex-smoker

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

I used to be a smoker.

In fact I used to be a smoker several times over. In school, I'd quit twice a year — for football season and track season.

In the Army,I continued the trend. I'd smoke a year, quit a year.

It was always the same cycle. One day I'd get up and vow not to smoke again. Then after about a year I'd see someone who was smoking MY brand — Pall Malls — and I'd bum one from him.

Before I knew it, I'd be bumming more and more from other people and the brand would be irrelevant. But I didn't really consider myself to be smoking since I wasn't paying for the smokes.

But before long I'd notice people whispering things like — "Here comes Snively, stash the smokes or you'll be sharing 'em."

So the next thing I knew, I'd be at the PX, buying my own cigarettes. The nice thing about MY brand was no one else liked them, so I didn't have to share them with anyone, although I did offer, knowing I'd be turned down.

All this comes to mind as I look at the calendar and note the Great American Smokeout is next Thursday.

The American Cancer Society says hundreds of thousands of smokers quit because of this one day of abstinence. I hope their "quit" is longer lasting than some of my past "quits."

I've talked to people who've been off cigarettes for 20 years and they say they still get cravings. "It's just like being on a diet," they say, "if you can over come that momentary urge to eat, or smoke, ya got it beat, at least for one more time."

Currently being in a "quit cycle" myself I can tell you I certainly appreciate the Army policy of designated smoking areas. I remember what it used to be like going home after spending a day with smokers.

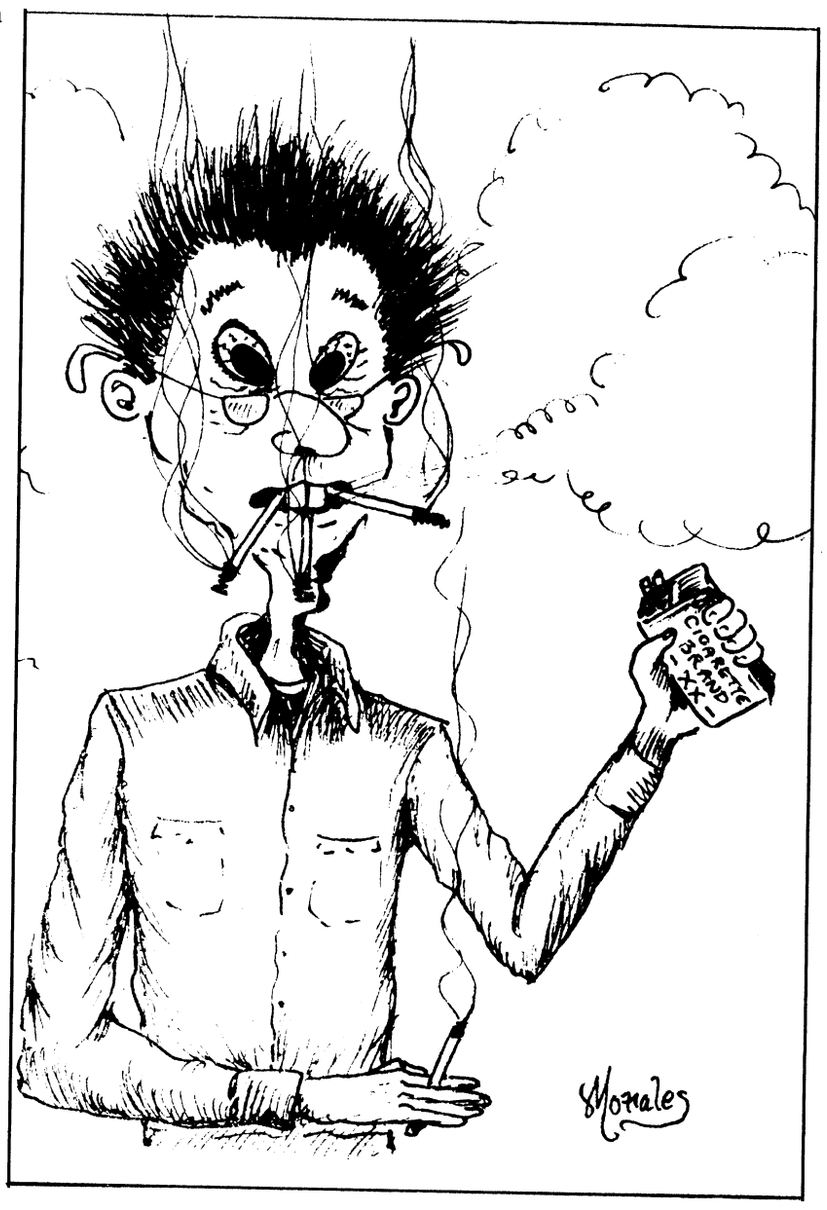
My clothes would stink, my hair would stink. As a smoker I never realized how bad I smelled or how bad I could make others smell with my second hand smoke.

Now when I drive down a street on a nice crisp fall day and look at other drivers smoking away with their windows rolled up, I want to gag. But when I notice a young child or infant in that coffin on wheels, I want to pull the driver over and thrash him or her to within an inch of that person's life, yelling things like, "don't you realize what you're doing to that kid's lungs."

Adults can always get up and leave or disassociate themselves with smokers. Kids can't. They're trapped in their environment, no matter how unhealthy it might be.

You smokers who're thinking about quitting, if only for a day, I urge you to seek out someone who kept puffing and give him the sniff test — don't get too close, you might get smacked. But just pass that person and you'll see what you smell like to non-smokers — horrid.

Nah, I'm not urging anyone to quit smoking just because you'll live longer. Heck, we've got enough people in the world now and we don't mind paying higher health insurance rates to absorb the cost of your hospitalization, be it for lung disease or cancer. After all, you're doing your good deed by paying beaucoup taxes on your weeds.



Nor do I care that you look so dreadful — yellow teeth, yellow fingers and those peculiar permanent wrinkles that develop in your lips from constantly puffing on cigarettes.

In fact I don't care if you don't quit at all. Just don't do it near me — at least until I get off the wagon and join your ranks — which I hope doesn't happen this time around. I'm feeling too good about myself right now.

Total Army inspiring concept, still unfilled

Association of the U.S. Army

The manner in which the mobilization of thousands of Reserves and National Guardsmen for duty in Operation Desert Shield was carried out has touched off some heated debate between Congress and the Pentagon.

The controversy concerns the decision not to call up certain Army National Guard "round out" units when their associated active duty divisions were deployed to the Persian Gulf. Specifically, the Army's 24th (Mechanized) Infantry and the 1st Cavalry Divisions are each composed of two active and one National Guard brigades.

But when ordered to ship out, each division was rounded out by adding a third active duty brigade, leaving the National Guard units at home.

The reasons for doing this are understandable. The law limits the call-up to 90 days with provision for another 90-day extension.

Barring the declaration of a national emergency, there simply wouldn't be time enough to execute the mobilization of a 2,500-man combat brigade; perform necessary training; load and ship their equipment (including two tank battalions each); and still have sufficient time in the Middle East before having to return home.

The short time in the operation area is a particular issue since soldiers of the active units who are deployed for at least six months would be there to see the Guardsmen arrive and still be there when they left.

The U.S. Army National Guard and Army Reserve now play a much more important role in the our nation's defense than they have at any other time in history — except perhaps in the earliest days when "the militia" was almost the sole line of defense.

Guard and Reserve units have performed magnificently in the deployment of Desert Shield and continue to be highly effective in performing many critical support functions.

Still, it doesn't seem to make much sense to call up major combat units knowing they would be of use for only about three months.

The solution, now being considered in Congress and supported by the Defense Department, is to double the period of the Reserve call-up to 180 days with a 180-day extension.

Passage of legislation to that effect would put teeth in the Total Force policy and would greatly enhance our national security structure.

Vuono, Stone send Veterans Day message

Seventy-one years ago, in the aftermath of one of the most brutal wars in human history, Woodrow Wilson proclaimed a national day of remembrance — a perpetual tribute to those veterans who had given their lives in the defense of freedom.

Since that time, generations of young men and women have joined the ranks of America's veterans, answering their country's call and serving the nation with courage and commitment in peacetime and in war.

Today, Americans throughout this great land pause to honor the veterans of our Armed Forces and to reflect on the blessings of liberty and peace that our veterans have protected with their sweat and sometimes with their blood.

As we enter a new decade, America's soldiers now carry the torch of liberty and man the ramparts of freedom throughout the world — in Korea, in Europe, in the jungles of Panama, and in the Arabian desert — everywhere that our nation's vital interests remain at risk.

The soldiers of today — America's veterans of tomorrow — serve with the same selfless dedication that has been the hallmark of the Armed Forces throughout the two centuries of our nation's history.

They are the heirs to a sacred and noble legacy, and they are adding new luster to the shining traditions of the American veteran.

To every veteran throughout our land and to the soldiers who serve in our ranks today, thank you for your commitment, dedication, and sacrifice. Your nation and your Army are proud of you.

Post Boy Scouts begin food drive

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The Boy Scouts of America will strike a blow against hunger Saturday as they undertake a massive food appeal from coast to coast, and Benning scouts will join in the effort.

Youth members from the Chattahoochee Council, which serves Fort Benning, will join millions of their fellow Cub Scouts, Boy Scouts, Varsity Scouts and Explorers in a door-to-door collection of canned food, which will then be donated to local food pantry for distribution to the needy.

Fort Benning Scouts will donate the food they collect to the Army Community Services Food Locker, said Master Sgt. David Wideman, post scouting coordinator.

"Scouts will distribute the plastic food bags door to door Saturday and return Nov. 17 to pick up the bags and food donations," said Wideman.

"We are asking that the donations be placed outside the front door of the home, so that the scouts do not disturb or inconvenience anyone during the pick-up," he added.

For more information concerning the food drive, call the Boy Scout center at 327-2634.

Donations can also be made directly to the Army Emergency Relief located in Building 2642 in Soldiers Plaza.

Radio station donates thirst squencher for Desert Shield soldiers

By Michelle Le Roy Harrison
Bayonet staff writer

A northern Mississippi radio station and its listeners wanted to do something special for service members deployed to the Middle East.

Ten days, 15 cities and 1,000 miles later, KZ-103 radio station's morning disc jockeys, Tom Campbell and Rex Holiday, had collected $18,500 from residents of an around Tupelo, Miss. during live remote broadcasts, and the money was still coming in.

With $20,000 in donations by the end of the week, the radio station purchased 13,000 pounds of powdered Gatorade, which was delivered to Fort Benning Oct. 30.

"I had heard reports that the water over there had a foul taste so I thought it would great to get the soldiers Gatorade," he said.

"We know that 13,000 pounds of Gatorade is just a drop in the bucket compared to all the soldiers over there, but we wanted them to know that the people of North Mississippi care."

Dubbed Operation Gatorade, the campaign proved to be more successful than the station imagined, Campbell said. "It was just inspiring to see such a turnout of listeners. The people here care about the military."

Eileen Reid, who is wife of 197th Infantry Brigade Commander Col. Ted Reid and was present during the delivery said, "We are very grateful for this. With this donation coming from an area that is not military is an indication that the country is supporting us."

An employee in the Patient Administration Division at Martin Army Community Hospital was honored as the hospital's outstanding handicapped employee Nov. 1.

Patricia T. Barnett, a medical clerk at the Information Desk at the hospital, received a certificate of achievement and several commendations from fellow employees, including hospital commander, Col. Vernon Spaulding, in a ceremony at the hospital.

"She sets an example for everyone to follow,"said Lt. Col. Charles Bottom, chief of the Patient Administration Division. "Pat is always helpful to patients and co-workers alike."

"She has the amazing ability to turn any stumbling blocks she may encounter into stepping stones," said Mary Braswell, Barnett's immediate supervisor.

"I had my reservations about Pat when she was first hired, but since then, I have no doubts whatsoever in her ability to achieve her goal," Braswell said.

CID seeks rape suspect

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Criminal Investigation Division is offering a $500 reward for information leading to the apprehension and conviction of the person responsible for a rape, which occurred Oct. 25 in the Sand Hill area, according to officials.

In a flyer distributed on post by CID, the suspect is decribed as a black male named "Doug" who is in his 20s, around 5 feet 9 inches tall, thin build, black hair and brown eyes. He picked up the victim in a Smoke Blue Escort or Corolla two-door sedan on Winston Road in Columbus around 7:30 p.m, then drove to the Race Trac service station on Victory Drive, then to Old Cusseta Road in the Sand Hill area on Fort Benning, where he allegedly raped the victim, according to information on the flyer. The suspect then drove the victim to the vicinity of Baker Village, the flyer states.

Individuals who wish to report information should call CID at 545-7950 or 545-5239 or the Fort Benning Military Police at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

Alberta Russell. "I miss my husband, my son and bathtub and I'll be glad to get home; but it is livable here."

Soldiers in the desert do have some unique problems to overcome. "Training is really different here," said J.R. Wallace, B Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery. "Just trying to navigate can be hard because of the limited visibility at night and also due to the dust during the day."

"Traveling in a convoy can be almost impossible," Wallace said. "The dust is so bad you can hardly see the vehicle in front of you."

Other gripes soldiers have, according to Wallace, is that the bottled water gets hot and is hard to get use to. The heat itself wasn't hard to get use to because of his training at the National Training Center, Wallace said.

"We're continually training and working our defense plan here," said Capt. Markus L. Galle, supply officer for the 197th Inf. Bde. "We keep ironing out the bugs and preparing for whatever will happen. It is tough here however, not knowing what's going to happen."

Many soldiers said they feel the same way. "Let's just do what we have to do and get out of here," said Sgt. Charles D. Horton, Headquarters, 197th Inf. Bde. "It's hot, dusty and insect-infested, and I'm ready to go home."

"The worst part is the waiting," said Spec. Anthony B. Reid, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Inf. Bde. "I'd like to know when we're going home."

Reports from the Saudi Arabian trip will continue to run on the three local television stations, in the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer and The Bayonet. Also, much of the raw video footage from the three stations will be shown at family support meetings and on Alert Cable channel 13.

Army grants SQT exemptions

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Army has granted a special Skill Qualification Test exemption for soldiers unable to comply with fiscal 1990 and 1991 testing requirements due to Operation Desert Shield, according to a message from officials.

Non-commissioned officers in the ranks of sergeant, staff sergeant, and sergeant first class may be granted a special exemption or deferment by commanders (colonel or above) for the fiscal 1990 and 1991 SQT based on their return from overseas deployment.

Major commands are reminded that SQT for privates, privates first class and specialists/corporals will be eliminated at the end of the fiscal 1990 test cycle — Nov. 30 for the active component and Aug. 31, 1990 for reserve components.

For sergeants, staff sergeants, and sergeants first class, the SQT will continue to be taken until the SQT is implemented by military occupational specialty.

DESERT REPORT

Editor's note: Sgt. 1st Class Ron Allen, non-commissioned officer in charge of the post's Public Affairs Office, recently escorted four members of the local media to Saudi Arabia. The Bayonet asked Allen about Benning soldiers' morale, living conditions, and about other conditions he saw while there.

Q. How is the soldiers' morale holding up?

A. Better than I expected. Most of the soldiers I spoke with were tackling their jobs with enthusiasm. The big thing for most of them is that they are now getting mail and that has really helped diminish any morale problems.

Q. What are the living accommodations like?

A. The soldiers have a variety of living accommodations. Some are in the desert in tents while others are in areas of Dhahran in buildings. The majority however are in the tents. Everyone has cots and there are showers readily available. The soldiers I spoke with said it was better than at NTC (National Training Center).

Q. What's the weather like?

A. The temperature rose to about 105 degrees each day. The soldiers said that was a considerable cooling over what they had experienced when they first arrived. The nights get down to about 75 to 80 degrees and that feels cold, but a light blanket takes the chill off. There has been no rain since their arrival, but soldiers saw their first clouds while I was there.

Q. How often do soldiers get to use the telephone?

A. For an emergency back home, a soldier can always be taken to a telephone. But, for other calls, some soldiers are lucky enough to be near a phone and some aren't. There are plans underway to make telephones more accessible to the soldiers. If a family member has a real emergency and needs to talk to a soldier, they can contact their rear detachment commander and send a message to Saudi Arabia and the soldier will be taken to a telephone.

Q. Is the sand as bad as they say?

A. Yes. The sand is not like what you would see on the beach here. Saudi Arabian sand is very fine and dusty and gets into everything. All it takes is a small breeze to create a cloud of dust in the air.

Q. How bad are the snakes and scorpions?

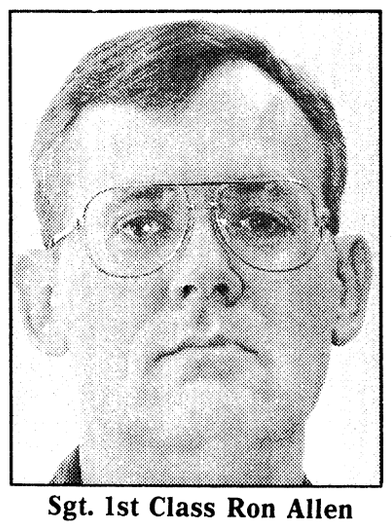
A. Surprisingly, I saw no snakes and only two scorpions while I was there. There have been reports of scorpion bites but not snake bites. The two scorpions I saw had been caught by soldiers and were kept in a can. I was told by a medic that their bite was similar to a bee sting. The only reason it would be life threatening is if the person bit was allergic to the sting.

Q. What is the biggest complaint you heard from the soldiers?

A. By far not knowing how long they were going to be there was the biggest complaint. But, since my visit, Defense Secretary Richard Cheney has announced a plan that would allow units to rotate out of the Persian Gulf every six to 12 months. That word will get around very quickly in Saudi Arabia.

Q. Were there any other complaints?

A. Soldiers said they miss their families. That's just a fact of deployment that cannot be helped. To help alleviate the problem, families should write often, send care packages and send video and audio tapes of the family. Every unit now has access to video and audio equipment in their recreation centers they have set up in tents.



Sgt. 1st Class Ron Allen

Q. Is the mail really straightened out now?

A. Approximately 45 tons of mail arrive daily at the Dhahran airport. The postal unit there gets it out to the field as quickly as possible. There is a man power problem at the airport right now. The postal unit only has 30 people breaking down that mail, and it does cause a

Teleconference lets families visit each other

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A new program has been originated to bring military families across the country together for the holidays.

The post's Information Systems Command Office is sponsoring the program for soldiers and their family members who wish to "visit" with their loved ones at other selected military installations across the nation in a different way.

The program, known as "Christmas Visit," will run from Dec. 17 through Jan. 4 and will provide military personnel and their dependents (to include the family members of deployed soldiers) with the opportunity to speak with friends and relatives stationed at 50 posts nationwide, according to Lt. Col. Glenn Link, acting director of U.S. Army Information Systems Command.

Participants will be able to see and talk to loved ones and friends through a video/telephonic hookup that will also be set up at other posts, said Link.

Reservations to participate in the program will be taken starting Nov. 13.

Special priority will be given to soldiers ranked private through sergeant as well as family members of soldiers deployed to participate in Operation Desert Shield.

This program is strictly designed for communication to posts in the continental United States and Hawaii only and will not extend to the Persian Gulf region, Link said.

Between Nov. 13 and Dec. 1, reservations will only be taken from persons with special priority. After Dec. 1, reservations will be open to all military personnel, family members, and Department of the Army civilians.

For more information, contact Spec. Larry Sams, Video Teleconference Center operator, at 545-5552.

72nd Engineers 'Sappers' train in desert

By Joseph G. Fridley
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — The "Sappers" of 72nd Engineer Company recently demonstrated what Col. Ted Reid, 197th Infantry Brigade commander, called the "key thing you can do to prepare for combat" — breaching obstacles on a simulated enemy minefield.

The company's 1st, 2nd, 3rd and Assault and Barrier platoons demonstrated four breaching techniques for the 197th's officer and non-commissioned officer professional development programs training.

In addition to officers of the Sledgehammer Brigade, Brig. Gen. James T. Scott, deputy commander of the 24th Infantry Division, witnessed the demonstration and commended the engineers for their proficiency.

The demonstration was conducted so that leaders will be prepared to practice breaching techniques with their units on a 10-kilometer long live fire training range the brigade is currently constructing.

Each platoon demonstrated a different technique for breaching enemy minefields. The soldiers of the 1st Plt. conducted a deliberate breach of a buried minefield; 2nd Plt. performed the mine clearing line charge method; 3rd Plt. used a hasty line main breach of a surface-laid minefield; and the A and B Plt. demonstrated a tank ditch and minefield breach with an armored vehicle launched bridge and a combat engineer vehicle.

Willie Hay

Spec. Justin Luci uses a mine detector to find obstacles.

"Prior to conducting any type of breach, the squad performs a reconnaissance of the site to determine which method would be most effective and least time consuming," said Capt. Mike Iverson, company commander.

According to 2nd Lt. Dean Moore, platoon leader of 2nd Plt., the MICLIC is a rocket with a linear charge that clears a path through a minefield desert terrain. "If any mine is not detonated by the explosion from the charge, it will usually be uncovered or blown out of the ground," he explained.

"This method can be used in various types of climates and weather conditions," Moore continued. "The rocket motor and linear charges can be remotely detonated from inside a towed armor vehicle or from a covered position 75 feet from the trailer."

MICLIC is the preferred method of breaching for Sgt. Robert Stroud, a team leader in 2nd Plt. "You don't have to put any soldiers on the ground, and it's a lot faster and safer to clear the minefield with this technique," he said.

Performing a hasty line mine breach of a surface-laid minefield, the men of 3rd Plt. moved forward to mark the lanes at the edge of the minefield.

"Two demo men lay out the dent cord line main, tying a Bangalore torpedo to the line main if any wire obstacles are present, said 2nd Lt. Todd Kennedy, platoon leader. "As they come back, they place charges next to the mines and tie them into the line main with breach line."

"After detonation, if they find any mine not detonated, they use the 'pop and drop' technique, placing a block of TNT on the mine to blow it in place before opening the lane to any vehicles," said Sgt. Roger Smith, a team leader in 3rd Plt.

"This breach usually takes 10 minutes, but with all the training my squad can do it in five minutes," said Spec. Willie Strickland.

The A and B Plt. demonstrated how to breach a tank ditch and minefield with the AVLB and CEV.

"Once the ditch and minefield have been reconned and marked," said Sgt. Ronald Kabat, an AVLB commander, "I determine whether the bridge can be launched either into the berm or over the top."

According to Staff Sgt. Ernest Farmer, platoon sergeant of the A and B Plt., launching the bridge into the berm enables tanks crossing it to be less visible to the enemy. "If you lay the bridge on top, there's no cover and the bridge could slide down into the ditch due to the weight of the tanks."

The 72nd previously demonstrated the four breaching techniques to the officers of 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, and several other demonstrations are planned in the weeks to come, according to Iverson.

"Hopefully, these techniques will not have to be used in combat, but if it comes to that, the Sledgehammer soldiers will be trained and ready," he said.

U.S., Swiss marksmen compete informally

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Although the Conseil International du Sports Militaire competition was canceled this year, that didn't stop the shooters of the Army International Rifle Team.

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers invited shooters from Switzerland to compete against them in an informal CISM match at Hooks Range.

"Basically this event was a friendship match," said Sgt. Bradley J. Carnes, who won the CISM championship with a 1,132 out of 1,200.

"We went to Switzerland in May for a similar match, so this was our chance to return the favor."

Trailing a close second to Carnes in the championship was Capt. Stephen C. Goff with 1,131. Placing third was Capt. David B. Erickson with 1,129.

Even though the United States emerged victorious on their own ground during the matches, there wasn't any bad blood between the teams.

"Inviting the Swiss down here really worked well for both sides, because both teams already knew each other from previous competition," said Carnes. "That's why there wasn't any tension for these matches."

All of the events were 300-meter. The USAMU also won the overall team competition, beating the Swiss 5,595 to 5,559.

Infantrymen come in all sizes

By Marilyn Balzarini
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

People who wear odd size clothes and shoes usually have to special order them or shop at specialty stores.

When they join the Army as infantrymen, the Clothing Initial Issue Point, attached to the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), faces the challenge of clothing them.

Recently, two soldiers who wear unusual sizes processed through the Reception Battalion. Pvt. 1 Jason Thimmes is 4 feet, 10 inches tall. He wears a size six shoe. Pvt. 1 Dwayne Taylor is six feet, seven inches tall. His shoe size is 18. Both soldiers arrived at the Reception Battalion the same week.

"This is one of the few times we have had two soldiers that require unusual size clothing process through the CIIP at the same time," said Phyllis Peacock, office manager of the CIIP.

The CIIP stocks a wide variety of sizes so that soldiers can be issued uniforms and begin their training right away. When unusual sizes are required the staff has to use the local purchase system. They also get post medical facilities to assist.

"When a soldier with an unusual foot size processes through, we send him to Martin Army Hospital's Orthopedic Clinic to be measured for custom made shoes," said Peacock. "Then we order the footwear for the soldier."

A size 18 foot is the largest the CIIP has had to fit since Peacock has been with the section. "We got Pvt. 1 Taylor a pair of running shoes through local purchase. He'll be able to begin his training in them until his boots get here," she said.

Unusual shoe sizes aren't the only obstacle the CIIP contends with when fitting new soldiers. Many times uniforms have to be modified by the seamstresses in the Alteration Shop.

"Sometimes we have to add extensions to make uniform sleeves longer or bigger around," Peacock said.

delay in delivery. But, a new unit will soon join them, and that should speed up the mail considerably. All the soldiers I talked to were getting mail, even the ones at the most remote sites.

Q. What do the soldiers do for recreation?

A. Soldiers have always been very ingenious when it comes to recreation. In Saudi Arabia they have built basketball courts using scrap lumber and airplane baggage pallets. They have also made complete weight rooms using plastic water jugs full of sand attached to camouflage poles. They also play football and volleyball and have fully equipped recreation rooms in tents.

Q. Do the soldiers have any contact with the civilian population?

A. Very little. Some of the Americans who work with the oil companies there do bring sodas, candy bars, fruit and other snacks out the soldiers in the field.

Q. What do the soldiers need?

A. Most of their needs are being met. Some of the things I heard requested were more mail, care packages and newspapers. Another request was for fake grass and golf clubs.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Howard O. McGillin Jr.
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I have a car that I am trying to sell. I still owe the bank about three years of payments. My friend wants to buy it, but cannot get financing.

I want him to just take over the payments. Can Legal Assistance help me with the paperwork?

A. This is not an unusual problem. Unfortunately, having your friend take over payments is not a very good solution to your problem.

It may be the beginning of a much bigger problem. Any attempt to take over payments is not recommended.

The first difficulty with your plan begins with your financing agreement with the bank.

Almost all financing agreements contain what are called "due on sale" clauses. This means that if you sell the car to anyone else, you must pay the bank the remaining balance of the loan immediately.

In this case, if the bank gets wind of your sale of your friend, they are going to come after you for the whole balance on the loan. The bank agreed to lend you the money, not your friend.

If you can't pay the full balance when the bank demands it, they will repossess the car.

After they repossess it, they will, most likely, sell it at an auto auction. The bank will then charge you the difference between the balance of the loan, and the price they received at the auction.

This could amount to several thousand dollars. If you do not pay them the difference, they will probably sue you to recover the money.

The repossession, and subsequent law suit will totally ruin your credit rating.

Another problem with your proposed arrangement is that your friend will not be able to register the car in his or her name.

When you purchased the car with bank financing, the bank placed a lien on the title.

The Department of Motor Vehicles will not allow you to change the owner's name on the registration without the bank's permission.

As pointed out above, the bank will want all of their money before they give permission to put your friend's name on the title and registration.

Since your friend will not be able to register the car, he or she may have trouble obtaining insurance.

Georgia and most other states require all automobiles to have some liability coverage. The bank probably requires collision and comprehensive coverage are part of the loan agreement. If the car is not insured, you may lose your license and the auto tags.

The bank will also charge you for insurance that it will purchase to protect its interest in the car.

Since your friend's name will not be on the registration or insurance, he or she will not be able to register the car on Fort Benning.

This is a U.S. Army Infantry Center requirement. In addition, if your friend is transferred overseas, he or she will be unable to ship the automobile.

The government will not allow someone to ship an automobile that is not registered by them.

Additionally, the loan contract with the bank may require the bank's permission to take the car out of the country. The bank will not give your friend this permission.

For these reasons, an assumption agreement is not recommended.

A Legal Assistance attorney will be glad to explain all of this to you in more detail, but they may not assist you in actually setting up an assumption agreement.

If you have any questions, please call Legal Assistance at 545-3281 and ask to make an appointment with an attorney.

Post rededicates field

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The athletic field at the intersection of Sightseeing Road and 1st Inafntry Brigade Loop, informally known as "Sergeants Major Field " was formally renamed in a dedication ceremony Friday at the field.

The field was renamed "Roberts Field" and dedicated to the memory of Capt. Marvin J. Roberts. Roberts was honored for his leadership as commander of Co. B, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. near Cam Lo, Vietnam in 1969. On March 27, Roberts, though critically wounded from enemy mortar fire, led his unit on an assault of an enemy position. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross posthumously for his actions.

Remarks were given by Brig. Gen. (ret.) Walter Bickson, honorary colonel for the 11th Inf. Regiment and Col. James M. Jones, Jr., commander of The School Brigade, gave his remarks on the event.

A sign bearing the name of the field was unveiled by Bickson and Roberts' wife, the current Ann Roberts Mitchell. Also in attendance at the ceremony were Roberts' son and grandson, James Michael Roberts and Christopher James Roberts.

'Show Your Colors Day'

The Fort Benning community gathered at the main mall Saturday to show support for Operation Desert Shield. There was a tent and sidewalk sale at the Commissary and Post Exchange. Various organization were on hand with goodies and decorative items. Live entertainment was provided by the 283rd U.S. Army Band and Columbus' Shaw and Jordan High Schools.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Although most people who live and work on Fort Benning are aware of the great emphasis that is placed on energy conservation, many aren't familiar with the reasons conservation is so important to the installation.

The most basic reason is that the Department of Defense realizes that the United States is dependent upon oil imported from other countries.

This makes the United States vulnerable to those who supply oil, and those who have the capability to sabotage supply lines.

Additionally, most of the energy resources which we use are limited in nature and are non-renewable.

Because oil reserves are being depleted at a much faster rate than they are discovered, the DoD realizes the importance of conserving existing supplies while developing new resources.

Emphasis is being placed on the exploration of other sources of energy, such as nuclear and solar, as well as the conversion of oil-fired plants to coal-fired.

The development of many of these methods of energy use of this generation, however, leads to a host of other concerns, such as transportation, pollution and environmental problems.

In the interim, awareness of the situation is necessary in order to decrease our dependence of oil and effectively use available resources.

In light of past and present energy situations, the Department of Defense has mandated a 15 percent reduction in our energy use by 1995.

The Training and Doctrine Command sets annual energy goals for Fort Benning. If we use more energy than the TRADOC allotment, funding comes from other accounts on Fort Benning.

This can conceivably have many and far-reaching implications for the entire installation. Inversely, using less energy than our allotment means that Fort Benning retains money that would have been spent on utilities.

In the past, for example, Fort Benning saved over a million dollars in utility costs. This money funded projects to improve the quality of life for everyone on the installation.

Conserving energy should become a way of life. If we remain aware of the need and the ways to conserve, we can play a vital part in increasing the quality of life for the Fort Benning community, and at the same time, contribute to the goals of DoD and TRADOC.

If you have any questions on this or any energy-related subject, please contact the Energy Office at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

MARTIN CARE

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital Operating Room Nurse Week will be Sunday through Nov. 17 and OR nurses have planned activities to demonstrate their role in surgical patient care.

The Martin Army Community Hospital Operating Room Nurses will have a display set-up in the loppy of the hospital Wednesday from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Heading the operating room nursing team is the registered nurse. When the patient arrives in surgery, the RN is there to greet him and provide emotional support as he is anesthetized. Then the RN manages the patient's nursing care during surgery, as the surgical team works closely over the incision. The OR nurse anticipates needs of the other team members to avoid any delays in the surgical procedure.

The OR nurse guards the sterile environment. The nurse knows the patient's health history and special needs. If the surgical procedure is being done with local anesthesia, the nurse may monitor vital signs — blood pressure, heart rate and breathing.

Surgery does not really begin and end in the operating room. Before surgery, patients may be fearful and distraught. Afterward, they need to know how to participate in their own recovery. Operating room nurses work with patients before and after their operations. They explain what the operations will be like and what to expect. After surgery, they assess patients to evaluate their progress.

Dental plan avoids delays

Dental Activity

The Fort Benning Dental Activity provides dental care to family members of military personnel. However, there is an 18-month waiting list for routine dental care for children 8 years and under.

To avoid delays in dental treatment, it is recommended that families enroll in the Delta Dental Insurance plan. Your Personnel Administration Center can provide the proper allotment forms.

For those spouses whose sponsors have been deployed, a "power of attorney" is all it takes to join the Delta Dental Insurance plan.

Each branch of the uniformed services provides a portion of the cost of the insurance which keeps the service member's premiums very low.

For one family member (child or spouse) the cost is $4.75 per month. For two or more family members it is $9.14 per month.

Eligibility is effective the first of the month following the Leave and Earnings deduction. It is a good idea to verify the deduction on the LES prior to making dental appointments.

Brochures listing covered services are available through the Community Health Dental Hygienist at Dental Clinic No. 1 (544-3955) or Soldier's Plaza at the Dental Section.

Information and a list of local participating dentists can be obtained at the CHAMPUS office, Martin Army Community Hospital, (544-3461).

Retirees visit Fort Benning

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning hosted the 10th Annual Military Retiree Open House from Oct. 31 to Nov. 2.

Retired members from all branches of services who reside in Alabama, Florida and Georgia came to participate in several activities and to familiarize themselves with "Today's Army."

The open house kicked off at the Follow Me Golf Course with a golf tournament Oct. 31. Military activities were in order the following day, where opening remarks were made by post commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza and guest speaker Air Force Maj. Gen. (ret.) Earl G. Peck, executive director of the Florida Department of Veteran Affairs.

A country health fair was held in Harmony Church, where many of the retirees had an opportunity to have blood pressure and cholesterol level checked, as well as enjoy lunch. A "Rangers in Action" demonstation was held at Victory Pond to conclude the first day.

The final day's events included the retirees observing a U.S. Army Infantry Training Center graduation. After the graduation, the retirees got a chance to speak with the brand-new soldiers in a luncheon at the starship at Sand Hill. A Ribbon Bridge demonstration was performed by members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion, and a retreat ceremony was held by The School Brigade, U.S. Army Infantry School.

Post soldier bowls perfect game, high series

By Reuben W. Warren
Directorate of Community Activities

A sergeant first class assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Non-commissioned Officers Academy as an instructor, bowled a perfect game Oct. 31 during league competition at the Mall Bowling Center.

Tony Szeluga bowled a 300 during Fort Benning Mixed Doubles Bowling League competition.

This was the first 300 game rolled on Fort Benning. Szeluga currently holds a 210 average in league competition.

During the competition, Szeluga rolled games of 226, 256 and 300, for a 782 series. This is the highest series bowled on Fort Benning during league play.

Since the new synthetic lanes were installed in August, bowlers have rolled numerous high games and series. The Bowling Centers Pot-O-Gold tournaments have paid over $16,000 in prize monies. Jim Cantrell, manager of Bowling Activities, said that with the installation of synthetic lanes and approaches, this is just the beginning of many more sanctioned high games and series by community bowlers.

All active duty and retired military and their family members, as well as Department of Defense and Non-appropriated Fund civilians are authorized and invited to experience the new lane conditions at the Fort Benning Bowling Centers.

Historical site celebrates Thanksgiving with antiques

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

The Little White House Historic Site will celebrate Thanksgiving with an antique car show and a fashion show of vintage era and modern fashions Nov. 17.

The cars will be on display from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. Fashion show times will be 2 to 2:30 p.m. for the Roosevelt era and 2:30 to 3 p.m. for contemporary attire furnished by Belk of LaGrange.

Thanksgiving is the only holiday that Franklin D. Roosevelt celebrated in Warm Springs. His first Thanksgiving here was in 1928 at the Warm Springs Foundation.

Roosevelt always tried to spend every Thanksgiving at Warm Springs with the polio patients. His last one was in 1944.

Even after Roosevelt's death, the tradition at the Foundation continued for several years, but it was just not the same without him. Finally, the celebration was discontinued to be replaced later by the observance of "Founders' Day" on his birthday, Jan. 30.

The Little White House staff invites the public to come and celebrate Thanksgiving in Warm Springs Saturday Nov. 17. A candlelight tour will be in the evening. All shops will be open 10 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The Little White House will be open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The site is on Georgia Highway 85 West in Warm Springs.

For more information or to schedule a group visit, call (404) 655-3511.

CSO gives free tickets

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

One hundred free tickets will be available to the Fort Benning community for the Columbus Symphony Chamber Orchestra's first concert of the 1990-91 "Tuesday at the Springer" series Tuesday at the Springer Opera House.

Tickets may be picked up at the Fort Benning Public Affairs Office, Building 4, room 604.

The concert, which begins at 8 p.m., will be conducted by the CSO music director George Del Gobbo, who will give a pre-concert lecture on the evening's music at 7 p.m. prior to the concert in the Springer saloon.

Corporate sponsors of the concert are Burnham Service Corporation, Mead Coated Board, Mutec, Radiology Associates of Columbus, and Rawls and Associates.

Titled "Classic Cinema", the evening's program comprises music by great composers which has been used in film scores. Composers represented include Rossini, Mozart, Beethoven, Pachelbel, Barber and De Falla, and the movies involved include Fantasia, Out of Africa, Platoon and Ordinary People.

Loyd students get support calls

Fort Benning Schools

The life of the military child has many advantages, but one disadvantage is that grandparents are often not close at hand.

Several years ago, Dot Jones, a Loyd School second grade teacher, saw a need to establish a relationship between her second graders and senior citizens.

She developed a Phone Pals program which has promoted these relationships, and some of her young charges have maintained those relationships for years after being in her class.

The Phone Pal program at Loyd School has begun its 11th year early this year. The reason — the deployment of many of the parents of Loyd School students to Saudi Arabia.

This year the Phone Pal program is devoted not just to Jones' second graders but to all students at Loyd who have a parent in Saudi Arabia.

Seventy students are participating in the program this year.

The NCO Wives' Club has made donations to the Phone Pal program for several years. Until this year the program lasted only two or three months.

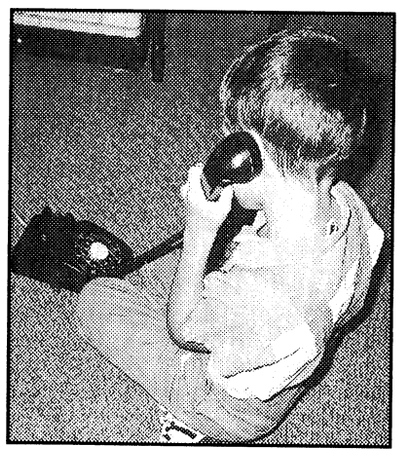
But this year the NCO Wives' Club donated $500 to pay for the extended time that the special telephone will be in use.

Involved as senior Phone Pal volunteers are 35 people who talk, listen, and provide support for the children of the soldiers sent to Saudi Arabia.

The classroom telephone is the real heartbeat of the program, assuring that each friendship is nurtured daily.

Two children at a time call the volunteers' homes at the same time every day. If the volunteers are not at home, the students call the next day.

With each conversation the relationship between student and senior volunteer seems to become stronger.



Dot Jones

A Loyd School student takes time from his studies to call his Phone Pal at Ralston Towers.

In a time when parents and educators are realizing more than ever that a strong, positive self concept is a necessity for youngsters, this Phone Pal program continues to bring additional opportunities for nurturance and positive reinforcement from senior citizens who have much to share with Benning children.

Minister wins free gas

Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet editor

The increase in the price of gas shouldn't bother one Fort Benning soldier — or at least not for a little while anyway.

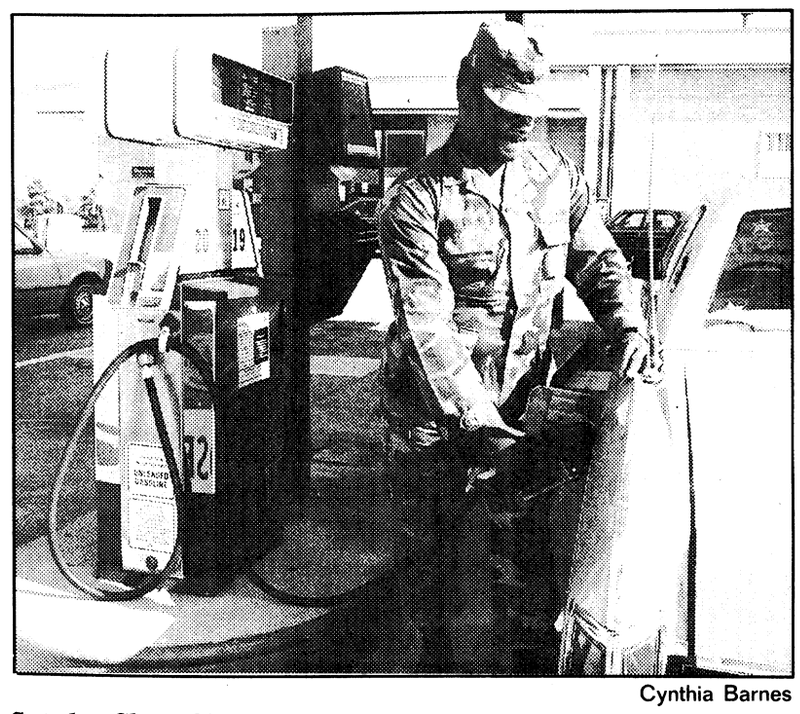
Sgt. 1st Class Charles Williams of Company D., 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment just won 100 gallons of free gas Oct. 31.

Williams won the free gas by entering his name in a drawing held by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service operated service stations on post.

Williams was surprised to find out that he had won.

"I put two tickets in the box. I meant to put more in later on, but I forgot ," said Williams. "I have never won anything in my life."

Williams said that the gas was a blessing. "I drive a Lincoln and that means I am putting in $25 (worth of gas) every time I get gas. I am also a pastor in Greenville, Ga. and this gas will come in handy when I am going back and forth," he said.



Cynthia Barnes

Sgt. 1st Class Charles Williams pumps his first gallon of free gas.

According to Gene Wheeler, Fort Benning Exchange manager, another drawing for gas will be held in December.

And as Williams said, " If I can win, anybody can win."

SPIRITUAL

War veterans share common memories

By J. Spencer Kinard
USAIC Chaplain's Office

America's war veterans come in a wide variety of sizes, shapes and ages. Their collective experience spans two world wars and several foreign conflicts.

They have followed war mules through the mud of Flanders Field, dropped from landing barges onto the beaches of Normandy, faced the icy cold of Porkchop Hill and trudged the rice paddies of the Mekong Delta.

But, regardless of differences in makeup and experience, all veterans share a common bond — a brotherhood of memory and hard-won wisdom which helps define their character.

A veteran is the first one up as the flag passes by on the 4th of July, and the last one down, for veterans were witness to the blood and tears which make this and all other parades possible.

A veteran is a person of peace, soft spoken, slow to anger, quick to realize that those who talk most abut the glory of war are those who know least about its' horror. Veterans never joke about war, they've been there, and still see on memory's vivid screen the wounded and the dying, the widows and orphans; they know first-hand that no war is good and that the only thing worse than war is slavery.

A veteran is friend to all races, begrudging none; carrying the knowledge that it is not the soldier who is the enemy but enslavement and false ideologies. Those whom he once faced across the hostile battle lines, he now esteems as his brothers.

A veteran is at once proud and humble; proud of the fact that in 200 years no foreign enemy has set foot on American soil; and humble in the realization that many of his comrades who helped him make this lofty aim a reality, never returned.

More than anything else, a veteran loves freedom. He can spend a whole afternoon doing nothing — just because it suits him, and just because he has paid the price to do what he wants with his time. he also takes a personal pride in the freedom of others — in men and women attending the church of their choice; in friends voting how they choose; and in children sleeping quietly, without fear to interrupt their slumber.

A veteran is every man grown up a little taller — a person who understand s the awesome price of life's intangibles of freedom, justice and democracy. His motto is to live and let live. But, if he had to, if he had to choose between servitude and conflict, the veteran would once again answer a call to duty.

Activity helps holiday blues

Separation does not have to bring about loneliness or despair

By Lyn Brannon
30th AG Battalion Chaplain

The nippiness in the air, as well as advertisements on the air waves, reminds us that the holiday season is approaching. As we anticipate the holidays we typically experience a mixture of feelings.

There generally are some warm memories of time with loved ones, of spicy aromas coming from cozy, bustling kitchens, of shopping and planning, baking and eating.

But along with the pleasant memories we usually have some painful memories of disappointments, hurt and pain, even grief, that occurred during previous holiday times.

Our anticipation may turn to dread — dread of rejection, loneliness, financial strain, overeating and more disappointment.

Particularly during times of separation from loved ones we may dread the homesickness of the holidays.

But take heart, separation by time and space does not have to mean loneliness or despair.

The bonds of love and home can transcend any distance or time segment.

Two human needs that seem heightened during holiday periods are: a sense of belonging and a sense of worth.

While in the past we may have had these needs met by being with loved ones, there are many ways to meet these needs besides being physically present with those whom we love.

Giving and receiving assurance of love helps to meet these needs. Certainly it is nice to exchange that assurance by hugs, kisses and handshakes, but exchanging letters, tapes, photos, poems, cards, scrapbooks and other communication media can accomplish the same purpose.

Just as I don't have to see my paycheck at the bank to know that I have been paid, I don't have to see a loved one to know that I am loved.

During times of homesickness it helps to engage in activity that we know would make our loved ones proud or happy.

Learn a new skill, befriend a needy individual, make something for those who are absent, allow your creativity to flow.

The end result will be pleasing to both you and the one for whom it is intended.

Lastly, be involved in making life better for someone else.

Rather than wallowing in homesickness and a self-pity party, volunteer to assist with a meal for the homeless or lend a hand in ringing bells for the Salvation Army.

Try repairing a toy that a child would enjoy or visit a nursing home and simply hold someone's hand or write a letter for them.

The holidays bring mixed feelings as we look forward both with anticipation and with dread.

Make plans now to creatively and productively handle the holiday homesickness that may approach.

By seizing the opportunity you may make this one of the richest holiday memories you will have to look back on in the years ahead.

Santa's Castle needs toys

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Due to Operation Desert Shield, the expected need of toys for Santa's Castle has doubled from last year, according to Cathy Blackwell, vice chairperson. There is an increased need in cleaning and repair supplies, i.e. laundry detergent, dish soap, thread, needles, ribbon, and yarn.

Donations of toys, as well as volunteers are also needed. Donations can be made at Santa's Castle drop box located at the Main Post Exchange or at Santa's Castle facility, which is located in Soldiers' Plaza, building 2639; hours, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.; Wednesday, 6 to 9 p.m.

Toys may be donated anytime at the Post Exchange, or bring toys and supplies directly to Santa's Castle.

Toys may also be dropped of at Basia Hair Salon in the Macon Road Shopping Center. In addition to having a collection box, the salon is donating $1 to Santa's Castle from each haircut or other hair care treatment performed.

Soldiers will begin shopping for their children at Santa's Castle Nov. 26. Toys will be provided free of charge to military families who meet a certain criteria for newborn children to age 18.

Santa's Castle is also collecting aluminum drink cans in building 2639. For more information, contact the staff of Santa's Castle at 545-1233 or call Susan Eckhart at 689-7831 or Cathy Blackwell at 687-4530.

More units called for Middle East

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Thousands more U.S. troops have been alerted for Operation Desert Shield, including the first Army National Guard combat units to be called up for duty in connection with the operation.

Defense secretary Dick Cheney said the following units will begin deploying to the Middle East from Germany:

- VII Corps Headquarters
- 1st Armored Division
- 3rd Armored Division
- 2nd Armored Division (Forward)
- 2nd Armored Cavalry Regiment
- 2nd Corps Support Command

The 1st Infantry Division (Mechanized) from Fort Riley, Kan., will also join U.S. forces already deployed in Saudi Arabia.

When the deployment is complete, more than one-third of the Army will be stationed in the Middle East.

Family members now living in Europe will be allowed to remain in government quarters and retain their full current privileges.

Army officials say that the heavy divisions are being brought from Europe rather than continental United States because "units in Europe are equipped and trained with the most modern equipment in our inventory."

Cheney further ordered to active duty the first Reserve Component combat units to be called up for possible deployment. They include:

- 48th Armored Brigade, Georgia Army National Guard
- 155th Armored Brigade, Mississippi Army National Guard
- 256th Infantry Brigade, Louisiana Army National Guard

The National Guard units will train for future operations before a decision is made about whether to deploy them to Saudi Arabia.

Flag run

Fort Benning rangers from the 75th Ranger Regiment and the Ranger Training Brigade carry a U.S. flag from Shorter, Ala. to Phenix City, Ala. as part of the 1,000-mile 1990 American Flag Run. The rangers turned over old glory to Fort Benning commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza who carried it to a welcome ceremony at the Columbus Ironworks and Trade Center. The run began Oct. 27 at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery in Washington, D.C. and ended Sunday at the Fort Mitchell National Cemetery in Alabama.

Army OKs desert leave policy

Army News Service

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The U.S. Total Army Personnel Command has received the Desert Shield field command authority to approve leave extensions of up to 120 hours while the Red Cross coordinates with the soldier's overseas command.

Soldiers returning to the United States on emergency leave from Operation Desert Shield have run into problems obtaining extensions from the overseas command.

Army personnel officials explain that interim extensions of 72 hours from personnel assistance points did not always provide enough time to process the extension request.

The new extension authority applies only to soldiers deployed in Desert Shield and will be granted only if unusual circumstances arise. For example, officials cite the case of additional hardship created on the soldier or family if the extension is not approved.

What's more, the American Red Cross must be working to obtain an extension from the overseas command before leave is extended.

POST BRIEFS

OCS selection begins April 2

The Personnel Command has announced that the next Officer Candidate School selection board is April 2 through 5, 1991, according to a recent message.

Applications must arrive at the Adjutant General, Personnel Plans and Actions Office, building 2619, no later than Jan. 18, 1991, to allow sufficient time for each applicant to appear before a local board.

For more information, call Marie Lee at 545-3341 or 545-4702.

Family support group Tuesday

The 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion will have a family support group meeting Tuesday at Marshall Auditorium at 7 p.m.

The meeting will include videos of 36th Eng. Grp. soldiers in Saudi Arabia and Fort Benning leaders in Saudi Arabia will be available to answer questions via telephone.

For information, call your rear detachment commander.

RTB celebrates anniversary

The Ranger Training Brigade will honor the 40th anniversary of the first ranger class graduation at 11 a.m. Tuesday on French Field.

The first ranger class graduation was Nov. 13, 1950, graduating the 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th Ranger Companies.

Retired Brig. Gen. Joseph R. Ulatoski, a veteran of the Korean War ranger companies, will be the guest speaker at the ceremony.

Reclamation sale today

A military clothing reclamation sale will be today from 7 a.m. until noon at building 224-A.

Fort Benning's Installation Supply and Services Division is conducting the sale.

Sales are limited to active duty military personnel only, however, military retirees can buy dress shoes. Proper identification is required. Items are priced at 25 percent of acquisition cost, rounded off to the nearest dollar.

Cash or personal checks may be used to buy items of clothing, with total purchase per customer being no more than $150.

For information, call 545-7650 or 545-4289.

Power outage Saturday

There will a power outage Saturday from 8 a.m. until 4 p.m. for Buildings 2835, 2836, 2837, 2838 and 2839. Reason for the outage is to make a primary connection for power transformer at Peden Field in the Way Street area.

Property auction Saturday

An auction of government property will be Saturday at 10 a.m. at the Equipment Check-out Center on Gillespie Street.

Sale items are listed in an auction catalog, which can be obtained today from 9 a.m. until noon.

Pre-registration may be accomplished today and one hour prior to the sale. Items for sale include: a 24-foot pontoon boat, computer equipment, lawn mowers, chairs, smoke eaters and miscellaneous furniture.

Terms are cash or check with current dated bank letter with a guarantee up to a specific amount. All purchases must be paid in full immediately after the sale.

For more information, call John Dorsey at 545-2348.

Post plans farewell ceremony for deputy commanding general

A farewell ceremony for the post's deputy commanding general will be Tuesday at 4 p.m. at the Follow Me Monument in front of Infantry Hall, building 4.

Brig. Gen. William M. Steele, the post's deputy commander, will bid farewell during the ceremony.

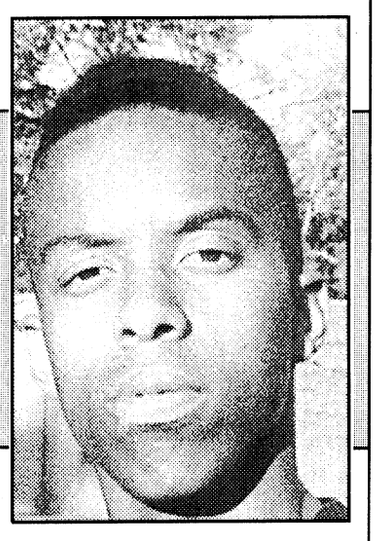
In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be in Marshall Auditorium located on the first floor of Building 4.

Steele is headed to the 8th Infantry Division (Mechanized), U.S. Army Europe to become assistant division commander.

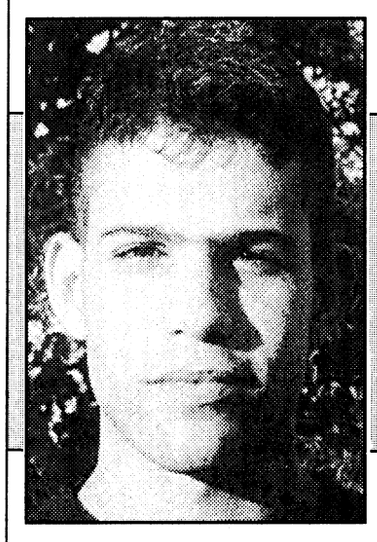
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

What did running in the 1990 American Flag Run mean to you?

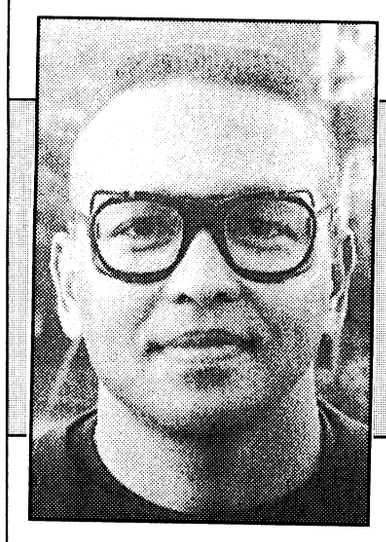


Pfc. Richard E. Phillips II, Headquarters, 75th Ranger Regt. — "It gave me a chance to represent the colors. People cheering along the way made me feel good; I felt they were proud that the flag was still there. God bless the soldiers in Saudi Arabia."

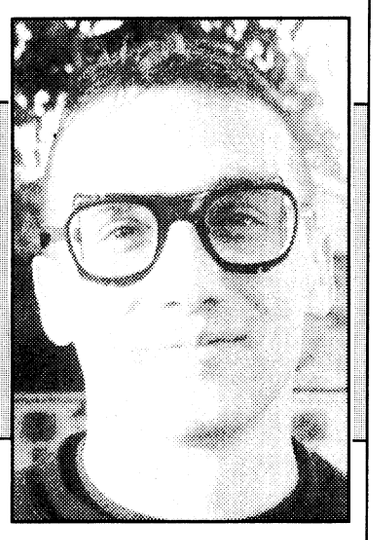


Pfc. Dennis J. Castellanos, Headquarters, 75th Ranger Regt. — "It gave me a chance to represent the colors and my unit. It was an honor to run for veterans and all the other armed forces. God bless the rangers."

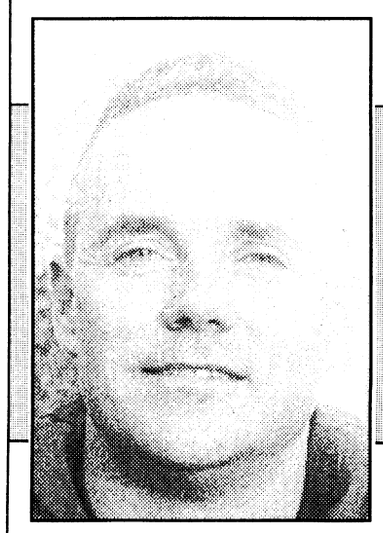
Staff Sgt. Ben Blackman, Co. B, 4th Ranger Bn. — "It felt good carrying the symbol of our country and all it represents. You wonder why some people want to burn it; more people should care about it."



Staff Sgt. Daniel Spottsville, Co. B, 4th Ranger Bn. — "It made me feel proud and gave me the opportunity to show my pride toward the flag and veterans."



Sgt. Michael Wiedholz, Headquarters, 75th Ranger Regt. — "It felt good. I would have liked to have run the entire 1,000 miles, but six was OK."



Sgt. 1st Class Mike Dempsey, Headquarters, 75th Ranger Regt. — "I was glad to be able to do it and not have to be some place where it is sandy. I feel like I was fortunate to be able to carry the flag."

COMMENTARY

Preparing for Desert Shield no easy matter

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

At specialist level, Desert Shield appears to be a fairly simple thing.

Your unit gets put on alert and you immediately go into a tail spin, rushing about taking care of everything you've been putting off for the last umpteen months since being assigned here or joining the Army.

If you're a married male, your wife probably goes into a high state of nag: fix the windows, install the burglar alarm system, get your will, get insurance, make a list of all the bills and when they need to get paid, who do I call in an emergency, how do I get in touch with you — all that stuff.

If you're a single male, you trot about town saying goodbye to all your girlfriends and try to con all your buddies into buying you one last beer before you go off to defend your country.

If you're a woman, you probably do the same thing if your single, and if married, hear the same nagging. Maybe not, women tend to be more organized and sensible.

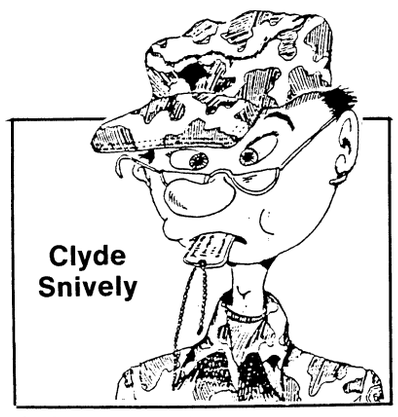
Then comes the next stage. "We're going guys and gals."

Still simple. You just follow the next guy in line. Follow him to the dentist (watch out for your wisdom teeth, rumor has it the dentists are pulling all wisdom teeth — this rumor started downtown and is completely unfounded), follow him through the records check, the shots, the uniform issue.

In between you pull maintenance on your weapon, your vehicle, whatever needs maintenance. You also do a lot of shooting, practicing nuclear-biological-chemical drills, and other training designed to extend your life in Saudi Arabia.

Finally the big day comes, the band plays, the general speaks, you wave goodbye and hop on an aircraft. A day later, you're in Southwest Asia (Pentagon spokesmen like to use that term instead of the Middle East or Saudi Arabia) and you think you've just stepped into an oven.

Last week I was looking at some figures and discovered it's not all that simple.



I mean I knew it wasn't simple before, what with everyone on post running around blurry-eyed and all. But, the real impact didn't hit home until I saw what kind of support we were coming up with for our soldiers.

For instance: .

The Army had to come up with more than 600,000 dispensers of lip balm — and this despite the fact the 24th Infantry Division got theirs from K-Mart.

Then there was nearly 300,000 atropine injectors; 300,000 bottles of sunscreen lotion; 115,000 cans of foot powder; 340,000 bottles of water purification tablets; 100,000 pairs of sunglasses; 115,000 bullet-proof vests; 400,000 battle dress uniforms (desert); 318,000 chemical protective suits; 200,000 pairs of hot-weather boots; 1,900 tons of coffee; 6.3 million pounds of meat; 4.9 million pounds of fish; and 2.8 million pounds of fruit and vegetables.

That was in the first month of Operation Desert Shield.

If that wasn't enough, little problems developed. Such as the 800,000 yards of cloth that was to be used for the desert BDUs. Turned out the stuff was just as heavy, if not heavier, than the woodland variety.

OK, take out the seat, elbow and knee patches. That saved 6.5 ounces apiece. Still not enough. So now the geniuses are working on a lighter weight fabric.

I don't know what they've come up with but soldiers who remember the tropical jungle fatigues are saying, "Hey, get that stuff, just dye it brown."

I don't know what the status is, except the Department of Defense is looking at a lighter, all-cotton uniform.

Hope it reaches the troops before it starts to heat up again. Actually, I hope the troops will get back before then, but that issue seems to be in Saddam Hussein's court right now.

LETTERS

Reader expresses thanks

I would like to say that although I seem to be reading a lot of negative letters in response to "our guys over there," this is not one of those letters.

I have to say I have never witnessed such support from a community as there is here.

I would like to say thank you to Pizza Hut and local radio stations for a wonderful day out at Kelley Hill. A big thanks would also go to Arcco for the tremendous help they have been to us.

Also, look at the big stores like Montgomery Wards and J.C. Penney's. They, too, have done a lot for us.

Although I have only been in Columbus since July and coming from England, I cannot imagine such support over there.

Yes, my husband is deployed, but it makes every wife proud to drive through Columbus seeing all the signs that say "Our thoughts are with you" and "God bless our troops."

The people in this community must be special, and I would like to say thank you to every one of them.

Employee sends thanks

I would like to thank all the generous employees at Fort Benning who donated their annual leave when I was in need of leave due to emergency surgery. I only had to borrow a minimum amount of sick leave because of your generosity.

May God richly bless each of you, and I sincerely appreciate your help during my time of need.

My greatest desire is that someday I can repay you for your generosity.

Soldier, parents grateful for public's generosity

We would like to share some good news from our son, Staff Sgt. Walter E. Haralson Jr. who is in Saudi Arabia. Below is an excerpt from one of his recent letters to us:

I am doing just fine. I am sitting here looking at another package that came in from people I don't know.

They saw my name in the Stars and Stripes...One (package) was from Janet and Jeff Kingdom from Merchants Bank in Frankfurt, Germany. They sent me envelopes and paper with Halloween cards.

The other one was from Master Sgt. Fred Rayworth from Spain.

He and his wife sent me a package with Halloween toilet paper, paper, crossword puzzles, soap, toothbrush, toothpaste, mouthwash, Babywipes, etc. I passed out most of it to the men in my squad.

I thought this was real nice of them to do.

I wrote the Kingdoms to thank them for the packages and as soon as I am through writing to you, I am going to write Master Sgt. Rayworth thanking him for his package.

It made us very happy to know there are still some nice people in this world, who will take the time to send a package to someone they don't know.

May God bless all the people who are doing nice things for our men and women in Saudi Arabia.

Mr. and Mrs.
Walter E. Haralson
Columbus

Editor's note: Staff Sgt. Walter Haralson Jr. is with Company C, 3rd Battalion, 502nd Infantry, 2nd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division of Fort Campbell, Ky.

10 commandments of shooting safety

Safety Office

Prevention is the solution to hunting casualties. Every hunting accident that has occurred could have been prevented. Most hunting accidents happen as a result of people ignoring safety rules. Prevention involves knowing and obeying basic safety rules.

- Control the direction of your firearm's muzzle. Carry your firearm safely, keeping the safety on until ready to shot. Keep your finger off the trigger until ready to shoot.
- Identify your target and what is beyond it.
- Treat every firearm with the same respect due a loaded firearm.
- Be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstructions.
- Unload firearms when not in use. Leave the actions open. Firearms should be carried empty in cases to and from shooting areas.
- Never point a firearm at anything you do not want to shoot. Avoid horseplay with a firearm.
- Never climb a fence or tree, or jump a ditch, with a loaded firearm, and never pull it toward you by the muzzle.
- Store firearms and ammunition separately beyond the reach of children and careless adults.
- Avoid alcoholic beverages or other mind-altering drugs before or while shooting.

"Soldier, You Are What You Are"

Soldier, you are what you are,
In my book you deserve a gold star.
You went away to fight,
My God, it must have been a terrible sight.
For you to go through so much pain,
At home, the strength and love you will remain.
When you go away,
Please just let me say,
Even though the snakes hissed,
Believe me, you'll be missed.
Soldier we want you to come home soon,
So you and yours can have happy dreams under the moon.
That which God has made,
The part that you played,
Was played very well.
Let's all join hands and give a big yell,
A yell for peace after that I can only say,
We want you back home, back home to stay.

Top handicapped employee named

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A civilian employee from the Directorate of Engineering and Housing has been selected as the post's top handicapped employee.

Bartholemew Gardner, a skilled laborer in DEH's Maintenance Division has grabbed the top spot.

Bartholomew Gardner

Gardner, 26, has worked on Fort Benning for five years and is totally deaf.

"I enjoy the work that I do," said Gardner through an interpreter, "and I am proud to receive the award. This means a lot to me."

A 20-year Columbus resident, Gardner resides with his mother and father and has three sisters.

Aside from working, Fort Benning's top handicapped worker enjoys outside interests such as basketball, cabinet-making and body-building, and he enjoys going to church with his family.

Although he has made it to the top on post, Gardner still has set high goals for himself.

"I hope to win the Trade Center Committee Award for 1990," he said.

Gardner also added that the Fort Benning award is good and that it inspires all handicapped people to set their goals high.

"Every employee is equal at Fort Benning," he said.

Open season begins for health benefits

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Open season for 1991 health insurance began Tuesday for federal civilian employees and retirees.

The annual open season, which ends Dec. 10, allows employees to compare plans and switch if they wish, said Office of Personnel Management officials. Under the Federal Employees Health Benefit Program, civilian employees pay about 25 percent of the biweekly premiums and the government pays the rest.

Retirees are also eligible for the health insurance coverage but pay their premiums monthly.

According to OPM officials, the average biweekly premium in 1991 will increase 6.6 percent — average premiums jumped 13 percent in 1990 and 20 percent in 1989. Of the more than 300 plans participating in the program, they said, 89 offer premium reductions for 1991.

The government, expecting to pay more than $9.8 billion in 1991 health benefits premiums, has instituted two changes in the plans to help cut costs: precertification and large-case management.

Under precertification, the employee or doctor contacts the health plan before the employee is admitted to a hospital for non-emergency care. Based on the information provided, the plan may certify the admission for a specified time period. If necessary, stays may be extended.

However, OPM officials said, the plan may deny admission if it determines alternative treatment exists. Individuals who disagree with their plan's decisions and obtain inpatient treatment without precertification may face a $500 penalty.

Five health plans won't be available next year, so the 45,000 individuals enrolled in them need to pick new plans. Dropped are the American Federation of Government Employees, National Federation of Federal Employees, National Association of Government Employees, Government Employees Benefit Association, and Postal Supervisors plans.

Some plans are open to federal employees in general; a few others may first require membership in a union or association. Most plans are health maintenance organization-type packages, which generally means they serve a limited geographical area and limit patients to participating doctors and facilities in exchange for covering a wide range of services at little or no extra cost above the premium.

Examples of non-geographical plans and biweekly 1991 premiums (retirees pay the same rates but on a monthly basis) are:

- Blue Cross and Blue Shield: high self, $95.80, up $9.12; high family, $199.93, up $19.02; standard self, $16.92, same; and standard family, $35.55, same;
- Alliance Health Benefit Plan: high self, $145.79, up $70.45; high family, $248.60, up $21.68; standard self, $16.94, up $1.64; and standard family, $40.83, up $3.94;
- American Postal Workers Union Plan: self, $18.85, up 71 cents; and family, $39.93, up $2.62;
- Foreign Service Benefit Plan: self, $18.69, down $3.74; and family, $55.96, down $13.26;
- GEHA Benefit Plan: self, $20.14, up 98 cents; and family, $41.38, up $3.43; and
- Mailhandlers Benefit Plan: high self, $14.66, up 57 cents; high family, $32.67, up $1.25; standard self, $11.95, up 68 cents.

Family members enjoy outing at Kelley Hill center

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Family members of deployed soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield from the 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group, and 34th Medical Battalion were invited to a Family Support Group Day at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Nov. 10.

Family members were given the opportunity to obtain their Fort Benning Desert Shield Family Association Member cards.

Representatives from the Army Emergency Relief, Outreach program, the Army Community Services and 36th Engineer Group set up tables and handed out literature about their organizations.

A television and videocassette recorder were set up for family members to view videotapes made by different units in the desert.

Family members were also offered a chance to record a video to send to their soldiers in the Middle East. Disc jockeys from WFXE-FM and WCGQ-FM held live remotes at the center and allowed the spouses to make on-the-air dedications to their soldiers.

The dedications were recorded and will be sent to the troops in the Middle East. Impromptu contests were also held and small prizes of music cassette tapes, T-shirts and compact discs were given away.

"This was a great idea," said Carla Camon, Troop D, 4th Armored Cavalry Division family support group member. "It's good to be able to come out and meet with all the other support group members in an informal relaxed atmosphere such as this."

The event was sponsored by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Soldiers from that unit volunteered their time and services to make hamburgers and hot dogs, help family members make videos and entertain the children.

"The soldiers that didn't participate in Operation Desert shield have an obligation and duty to keep things in the rear running smoothly," said Sgt. 1st Class Michael Clemons, Co. E, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"I don't mind volunteering my time to make sure that the families are taken care of. It's the least I can do for my friends in the desert."

"I'm giving my time here because our troops in Saudi are giving their all there," said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Hale, operations sergeant for the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

"Fort Benning has to stand together and support our men and women over there in any manner possible. I'm just glad 1st Bn., 29th Inf. is getting an opportunity to participate in such a fun project," he added.

Mark Ross, disc jockey from WCGQ-FM, gets dedications from family support group members to record and send to Fort Benning troops in Saudi Arabia.

Outpatient clinic returns to MACH

Martin Army Community Hospital

The completion of the Emergency Room renovation permits the return of the Outpatient Clinic to Martin Army Community Hospital.

Effective Monday, the Outpatient Clinic will be located on the first floor at the hospital instead of its present location on main post.

The clinic hours will be 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The new telephone numbers are 544-3760, 544-4354 or 544-1569. The commercial number is 682-0486.

Same day appointments will be available; however, if all appointments are filled, the clinic will gladly schedule an appointment for the following day.

Appointments will not be needed for prescription refills.

Refills can be obtained by calling the clinic and providing the receptionist with the required information.

The prescription can then be picked up from the clinic three days later. This is a time-saving process for the patient, and allows for additional clinic appointments.

The Outpatient Clinic enables beneficiaries to have immediate access to care, reducing waiting times, which may be encountered in an emergency room situation.

Non-emergency patients are strongly encouraged to use the Outpatient Clinic instead of the Emergency Room.

Patients with same day appointments should pick up their health records from Outpatient Records, located on the first floor adjacent to the pharmacy, before going to the clinic.

Patients with next-day appointments do not need to pick up their records.

Post sponsors teleconference for family members of 197th

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Teleconferences were Nov. 8 and 9 at Marshall Auditorium in Building 4 for family members of deployed soldiers from the 197th Infantry Brigade participating in Operation Desert Shield.

A briefing for family members was led by post chief of staff Col. John D. Fuller.

The briefing was given to help family members better understand the situation occurring in the Middle East. An overview of the Persian Gulf region, information on that region, as well as information on the troops was issued.

Family members were asked not to take notes on the briefing, nor to make any notations on the map included in the teleconference that was given, due to the sensitivity of the information.

Family members were then given the opportunity to speak with 197th Brigade commander Col. Theodore W. Reid, as well as commanders of the individual units in Saudi Arabia via telephonic hookup.

Maj. James Walls, brigade rear detachment commander, conducted a question-and-answer session, and family members were given a chance to express their concerns directly to Reid.

"I came out tonight simply to hear some information straight from someone with authority. There are so many rumors floating around here, I'm not sure what. . .is going on anymore," one family member commented.

"This was a necessary forum, if only so I could alleviate some of my fears," she said.

A similar teleconference will be Tuesday for family members of deployed soldiers of the 36th Engineer Group.

"I gotta register my car on base ASAP."

Army opens enlisted commissioning program

Army News Service

The Army Medical Department's Enlisted Commissioning Program is now open to all active duty enlisted soldiers regardless of their career management field.

AECP is an innovative means to resolve the current nurse shortage and provide soldiers a unique opportunity to advance their education and careers. The AECP provides eligible active duty soldiers the means to obtain a bachelor of science degree in nursing, become a registered nurse and be commissioned in the Army Nurse Corps.

Participants will continue to receive their current pay and allowances. The cost of tuition and books will be paid for by the program.

Soldiers must have Personnel Command clearance by their respective career branch for release from current primary military occupational specialty prior to the convening of the scheduled board.

The request for release will be accomplished by the U.S. Army Health Professional Support Agency after the soldier's application has been received.

Should the soldier's career branch not release the soldier, the application will not be boarded. Soldiers in critically short military occupational specialties may be denied the opportunity to participate.

Soldiers applying for the AECP and in receipt of an enlistment or reenlistment bonus must provide this documentation if selected for the program.

Entitlement to additional unpaid bonus is suspended upon entry into the program and will terminate upon commissioning. Recoupment of unearned bonus is not required.

Entitlement to additional unpaid bonus will be reinstated and paid on a pro rata basis if the soldier is not commissioned and returns to an enlisted status in the same bonus skill.

The requirement to include a letter or recommendation from a military nurse or other Army Medical Department officer with the application is not required from soldiers outside career management field 91.

However, individuals outside this career management field will submit a letter from a commissioned officer.

The letter will comment on the applicant's maturity, competence and judgment.

Further information on the program may be obtained from the local medical treatment facility (nursing education and staff development) or by calling AUTOVON 289-8275.

Holiday plans set

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Thanksgiving meal at Fort Benning dining facilities for family members of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield is part of an Armywide effort aimed at keeping tensions in the Middle East from spoiling soldiers' and their families' holiday seasons.

According to officials at the Army's Community and Family Support Center in Alexandria, Va., plans are being drawn up at many installations that range from holiday meals in dining facilities for family members to "Christmas kits" for units deployed for Desert Shield.

Installation Food Service officials report that about 150 family members and approximately 125 retirees plan to attend the special holiday meal planned at post dining facilities.

Ed Hilton, chief, Installation Food Service, said the dining facility surcharge has been waived for family members of active duty personnel expected to dine on post.

Meanwhile, numerous events designed to keep families active and during the holidays are already underway on post. "Show Your Colors Day" was Nov. 3 at the main mall. The 283rd U.S. Army Band participated as well as local high school bands.

A teleconference and family support group meeting for 197th family members was Nov. 2 in Marshall Auditorium. Also, a teleconference for 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion family members will be Tuesday. The meetings include videos of U.S. and Iraqi forces in Saudi Arabia, and family members have an opportunity to question Fort Benning leaders in Saudi Arabia via telephone.

The 29th Infantry Regiment sponsored a family support day Saturday at Kelley Hill Recreation Center for family members of deployed soldiers.

Youth Services is preparing a holiday banner to send to the soldiers of 197th Infantry Brigade and other members of Operation Desert Shield. Anyone can stop by Youth Services, building 1056, and autograph the banner, which will be sent to soldiers in time for Christmas.

Anyone interested in autographing the banner should call Rhonda L. Tillery at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Private organizations and businesses have also come through for soldiers and their families; in fact, the post recently received 13,000 pounds of Gatorade from a KZ-103, a Mississippi radio station.

Also, families can go to Montgomery Ward to make videotapes to send to loved ones in the Middle East.

IOBC students tackle Bayonet Assault Course

By Daniel R. Morris
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry

Infantry Officer Basic Course students tackled the Rifle Bayonet Assault Course on Oct. 19.

This was the final phase of their instruction in the Rifle Bayonet Fighting Technique of combatives training.

The training consisted of three student-led blocks of instruction.

The final block of instruction was conducted at the Bayonet Assault Course. Students first practiced their newly acquired skills on the practice targets and then on the assault course.

2nd Lt. David Merrill, formerly a drill sergeant with the 104th Infantry Division was the primary instructor. Merrill chose his assistant instructors from the students with prior military service.

"It's important that IOBC students are trained with these skills so they can properly supervise the training of their subordinates," Merrill said.

The Bayonet Assault Course consisted of eight obstacles and 10 targets. After safety briefing and an orientation walk, squads began to run down the course.

A typical run down the course was three and a half minutes of running and crawling through and over the obstacles and screaming, smashing, and slashing at the targets.

Reactions to the course ran the gamut from good to indifferent.

A second lieutenant from Syracuse, New York said, "It did not smoke me."

Another second lieutenant from 1st Battalion, 71st Infantry said, "Good workout, good training."

Most agreed with a soldier from 1st Battalion, 178th Infantry, who said, "It looked like a piece of cake, but it was tough."

In addition to students and cadre, some of the students wives attended. The wives saw the cause of many cold dinners.

Patty Mestan, wife of 2nd Lt. Mike Mestan, said, "This is something I've never seen before."

Elizabeth Gibbs said, "They (these soldiers) are completely different at home."

Student helps environment, attains rank of Eagle Scout

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A member of Boy Scout Troop 100 in Columbus came up with a way to help the environment , his community, and attained the rank of Eagle Scout, all in one fell swoop.

William S. Godwin, in his attempt to attain Eagle Scout, won the national "Keep America Beautiful" Recycling Award in the youth category for his Eagle project. Godwin's project was to build and establish a recycling donation center at St. Thomas Episcopal Chuch, where his scout troop is based, for the Wynnton neighborhood. With more than 200 households currently using the center on a regular basis, the center is recycling newsprint, glass and aluminum, and has recycled more than 45,000 lbs. All of the money generated by the center is given to local charities.

William S. Godwin

Godwin hopes to set up other recycling centers with other scout troops and has spoken to other local youth groups about starting their own recycling centers.

The 16-year-old Godwin is a junior at Shaw High School, where he is an honor student, president of the German Club, student council member, and is on the football and wrestling teams.

Godwin began his Eagle trail in 1983. He was awarded the rank of Eagle Scout Sept.26.

Godwin is the son of Maj. William S. and Cindy Godwin of Colombus, and has one sister, Meg.

OWC bazaar set for Saturday

By Ida Patykula
Officers' Wives' Club

The annual Officers' Wives' Club Benning Bazaar will be Saturday at Faith Middle School from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

A variety of vendors, specializing in crafts and artwork, from the military and civilian communities will be featured as well as specialty foods.

There will be Christmas decorations, wreaths, and baskets. Those looking for holiday gifts will be able to choose from stained glass, clocks, gift baskets, jewelry, hand painted sweatshirts, wood crafted items, flower arrangements, and pottery.

Admission to the bazaar is $1. With the price of admission comes a free door prize ticket. Door prizes have been donated by the bazaar vendors and area businesses. Door prize winners will be drawn every hour. Tickets for the grand prize, a beautiful handmade quilt are available at the OWC office or at the bazaar.

All proceeds from the bazaar go to the OWC welfare fund, which is used to support organizations in the community.

Infantry's November issue available

Infantry Magazine

Infantry Magazine's November-December 1990 issue contains two articles of particular relevance to Operation Desert Shield.

In "Armor in Desert Shield," Michael R. Jacobson describes the wide variety of armored vehicles operated by the Iraqi Army. Jacobson, also a U.S. Army Reserve major, is assigned to the Threat Division, Directorate of Intelligence and Security, U.S. Army Infantry Center.

The second article, reprinted from Infantry's November-December 1970 issue, is "The Middle East: A Traveler's Guide," by Charles L. Black. The article discusses the region in terms of maintenance, air support, artillery, use of mechanized infantry, and the like.

Black, in 1970, was associate editor and military reporter for the Columbus Enquirer and an eyewitness observer of the 1967 war in the Middle East.

The feature articles in the November-December 1990 issue are "The IPB Process in Low-Intensity Conflict," by Capt. Steven M. Galvagno and Lt. Col. Alan J. Rock; and "Island Warfare," by Maj. Robert L. Maginnis.

Capt. Galvagno and Col. Rock describes the unusual intelligence demands of a "show of force" or "actions short of war" mission such as their battalion faced in an August 1989 exercise in Panama. Both are assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 27th Infantry, 7th Infantry Division, as they were during the exercise and later during Operation Just Cause.

Maj. Maginnis, in his article, says that the Army has neglected its ground component's preparedness for island warfare in cold regions. He describes the difficulties of such operations, using as examples the U.S. experience in the Aleutians in World War II and the British experience in the Falklands in 1982 in terms of geography, weather, vegetation, and hydrology.

Other articles include "Water Resupply and Heat Casualty Prevention," by Lt. Col. Karl W. Eikenberry, who commands the 2nd Battalion, 87th Infantry, 10th Mountain Division; "Urban Combat Doctrine of the Salvadoran FMLN," by David E. Spencer, formerly a research fellow at the Council of Inter-American Security specializing in Central American military affairs; "LNOing," by Allen L. Tiffany, who recently left active service to attend graduate school; and "Aviation LNO," by Capt. William H. Morris, who commands a company in an Aviation task force in the 3rd Infantry Division.

Information about Infantry Magazine, including subscription rates and writers guidelines, is available from the Editor, P.O. Box 2005, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-0605; AUTOVON 835-2350 or commercial (404) 545-2350. The editorial offices are located in Building 1827 at the corner of Marchant and Ingersoll Streets.

OCS students take time to baby-sit

By Ann M. McDonald
3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt.

Soldiers taking care of soldiers takes many forms — among them baby-sitting.

While family members were talking to the commanders of the units from Fort Benning deployed to Saudi Arabia at th e Family Support Group Teleconference Nov. 8 and 9, Basic Officer Candidates from Co. A, 3rd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. were baby-sitting their children.

Classrooms in Building 4 were transformed into day-care centers, so their mothers could bring their children and drop them off in the same building.

According to battalion commander Lt. Col. Barrie Town, baby-sitting is a great way for future officers to learn the importance of volunteering.

"Being involved with the community is an important part of being an officer," he said. "This service we're providing for the Desert Shield families should show the students the importance of this."

Town added that although the people they were baby-sitting for would never be able to thank them, he knew the service was appreciated.

The service the students provided helped not only the families but the volunteers as well.

"We would have never been able to take care of all the children if it weren't for the officer candidates,"one of the volunteers said. "They have been a tremendous help and the kids really enjoy them," she added.

Basic Officer Candidate Bill Hoy said he really felt good about helping the spouses in this way.

"Many of the candidates have been in the service a while and have experienced something similar to this," he said.

Hoy, himself a father, added that he would really appreciate if he were deployed and his wife needed the support.

Although Basic Officer Candidate Glenn Nichols is single, he also understands the purpose of the service the candidates provided.

"I enjoy being around kids and this gives me a different perspective on the responsibilities of an officer," said Nichols. "I wouldn't hesistate to volunteer to do this again." he added.

Alabama thrashes LSU, 24-3

By Ron Allen
Bayonet staff writer

Alabama continued its march to the December game against Auburn by thrashing LSU 24-3 Saturday, while Auburn faltered against Southern Mississippi, 13-12.

Alabama was able to take a 7-3 lead at the half with a 30 yard run by Chris Anderson. In third quarter action it looked like it might be a close game with the score still at 7-3. But, in the fourth, Philip Doyle kicked a 22-yard field goal, Spencer Hammond ran in an interception from 12 yards out and Anderson ran in from 46 yards out.

In the upset of Auburn, the Southern Mississippi Tigers took an early lead with two field goals in the first quarter by Jim Von Wyl. He kicked two more in the second quarter to go up 12-0 at the half. Southern Mississippi battled back in the fourth quarter with a 10-yard pass from Brett Favre to Michael Jackson for the touchdown and another Favre pass to Anthony Harris for the go-ahead-score with 46 seconds remaining in the game. That's two losses in as many weeks; Auburn was crushed by Florida, 48-7, last week.

Both the Tide and Tigers are still in contention for the South Eastern Conference and postseason bowl bids.

The 'Iron Bowl', to be held Dec. 1 on Alabama turf, could turn out to be a battle for a bowl bid and possibly a fight for a share of the SEC title.

Alabama got off to a rocky start with an 0-3 record this year but have since battled back to a respectable 5-4 overall and 4-2 in the SEC. Auburn started out strong but has since fell to a 6-2-1 overall record and to 3-1-1 in the SEC. Alabama could go into the 'Iron Bowl' ahead of Auburn in the SEC, if Bama dumps Cincinatti Saturday and Auburn falls to Georgia. That would put Bama at 5-2, 6-4 overall, and Auburn at 3-2-1, 6-3-1 overall. If Bama then wins the Iron Bowl, they should get a higher bowl bid than Auburn.

If Auburn wins the next two, that scenario would be reversed.

If the Tigers beat Georgia and lose to Bama, they could wind up in the Peach Bowl with the Tide going to the Gator.

Auburn and Alabama's already clouded bowl possibilities becomes even more hazy as college football becomes involved in politics. That other possibility is the Fiesta Bowl. The SEC is expected to announce soon whether or not they would accept an invitation to attend the Fiesta Bowl if it is offered. The possibility of a invitation to the Fiesta Bowl arose when Virginia backed out of a commitment to play there after the voters of Arizona decided not to recognize the birthday of the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as a state holiday.

No matter how the chips fall, the Bama vs. Auburn game will be big in this neck of the woods.

Bass fishing unpredictable

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Professional angler Tom Mann Jr. once had four different bass hit his plug on a single cast, but missed them all. Fellow tournament pro Larry Mixon, on the other hand, once landed a two-pound largemouth without ever casting to it.

Zany experiences like these, said the two pros, are what keep them from ever taking anything for granted in fishing.

"Just when you think you have everything figured out, a bass will act totally different," said Mann, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff and a former guide. "That's why every fishing trip I make is a learning experience."

Nixon, also a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff and the winner of nearly $1 million in tournament prize money, agreed by saying, "Fortunately, bass continually keep us off-balance with their actions. That's what makes this sport so much fun."

Mann certainly wasn't thinking about fun after he missed four fish on one cast. It happened, he remembered, on Lake Lanier north of Atlanta, an impoundment famous for its temperamental bass.

"I cast a big topwater plug over one of the long, rocky bars," he said, "and I hadn't moved the lure a foot when a bass of about four pounds jumped on it and pulled it down. I played the fish about 15 feet, and then just lost it.

"The lure floated back to the surface as I just stood there upset and frustrated," continued the Evinrude pro, "and another bass almost as large as the first one hit it.

"I played that bass for several seconds, and then it came off. I don't know how, because the hooks were razor-sharp. Well, I stood there getting even more frustrated, and as my lure floated to the surface again, a third bass hit.

"I lost it, too, and yes, a fourth bass, as well. I think the bass were just playing with me, realizing they were in no danger of ever being boated."

Larry Nixon's experiences were a little different, for during a day on Toledo Bend Reservoir in Texas where he spent many years as a guide, he once landed a bass he never cast to.

"During the summer when bass would gather in large schools and feed on the surface periodically during the day, we'd always keep a second rod rigged with a topwater lure," said Nixon.

"We'd fish for bass along the bottom with a plastic worm, but when the fish started breaking the surface, we'd switch to the topwater lure.

"Because these plugs had two sets of treble hooks, we'd keep them dangling over the side of the boat so they wouldn't tangle in our other rods. The lures weren't in the water, but six or eight inches above it.

"On one cast, said the Evinrude pro, "I hooked a bass with the plastic worm, and as I played it and swung it over the gunwale, a following fish jumped out of the water, hit my dangling topwater plug, and started back for the bottom.

"I grabbed that rod with my left hand and managed to land the fish as I dropped the first one into the boat."

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

The Georgia Department of Natural Resources is seeking amateur photographers to display their work in the 1992 official state park and historic sites calendar.

This calendar will feature information on the state's abundant natural resources, interpretative programs, and "how to" tips on the outdoors. It will also highlight special events. Photographers selected for inclusion to the calendar will receive photo credit. The deadline to submit slides is Jan. 15, 1991.

Specific requirements for the photography contest are that all photographs must be original 35mm color slides and must be taken at a state park or historic site; the photographer must identify the location of the slide; and entrants must include name of photographer, address and phone number with all submissions.

Suggested photography subjects include: scenic or natural beauty, special events and outdoor recreational activities such as music fesitvals, camping, and hiking; or photographs of historical sites located in Georgia such as New Echota, or Traveler's Rest. All slides will be returned to each owner.

For more information, contact the Georgia Department of Natural Resources' Communications Office at (404)656-0772; or call toll-free 1-800-3GA-PARK. Send all slide submissions to Hope Ballew, 205 Butler Street, Suite 1352, Atlanta, Ga. 30334.

Rhymes help ESL students

Fort Benning Schools

You might not expect to hear a class in a middle school saying and singing nursery rhymes, but that is just what you would have heard in Faith School's English as a Second Language classroom lately. The ESL program is designed to assist students whose native language is not English, and learning rhymes is one of the creative ways that ESL teacher, Alice Martin, uses to make the learning process interesting and fun.

The advanced ESL class at Faith School has published a book of rhymes. While learning the English language themselves, the members of the middle school class learned common Mother Goose nursery rhymes and made the Big Book of Nursery Rhymes for the second and third grade ESL class at White Elementary School. These industrious students learned the rhymes by listening to them, repeating them, and then by reading them. They then typed the rhymes on the computer, printed them, and illustrated each one.

The students made a trip to White School to present the book and read it to the second and third grade class. The middle school students who participated in this creative project are: Maria Vernonica Torres from Ecuado, Sabrina Oliveira from Brazil, Daniel Vidaurre and Daniela Vasquez from Bolivia, Royma Blanco from Venezuela, Melanie Nolte from Germany.

VOLUNTEER

Big Brothers and Big Sisters — Big Brothers and Big Sisters program is now serving children whose fathers or mothers are stationed in the Middle East.

The Big Brothers and Big Sisters program serves children from single parent families by matching children ages 7 to 15 from single parent families to an adult big brother or big sister who is at least 18 years of age and can spend three to five hours each week with the child.

For families who fit this description and would like for their daughter or son to have a Big Brother or Big Sister, call 327-3760. Big Brothers and Big Sisters is a free community service and is a private, non-profit United Way agency.

Volunteer opportunities — The following volunteer opportunities have taken on a new urgency due to Operation Desert Shield. The jobs require only a couple of hours a week.

● The Girl Scouts have 94 registered scouts for the new year. Adult leaders are needed to mentor new scouts.

● The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club is looking for vendors and volunteers to work at the Folk Art Fair Saturday. For more information, call the OWC office at 687-3537 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

All private organizations and individuals are issued on-the-spot cash for aluminum at the Fort Benning Aluminum Recycle Program. The recycling program is located on Alenko Street (adjacent to building 2288) and the operating hours are Tuesday through Saturday.

For more information, call 545-5602.

● Due to Operation Desert Shield, the expected need of toys for Santa's Castle has doubled from last year. There is an increased need in cleaning and repair supplies, i.e. laundry detergent, dish soap, thread, needles, ribbon, and yarn. Toys may be donated anytime at the Post Exchange, or bring toys and supplies directly to Santa's Castle on Tuesday or Thursday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Volunteers are needed to help at Santa's Castle or to take a project home to clean.

● The Thrift Shop on Yeager Avenue also needs consignments and volunteers. Volunteers can work as little or as much as they need. To volunteer, stop by any Tuesday or Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

● First Steps needs volunteers to help new parents. Call the Volunteer Center if interested in giving some time.

For information on any of these positions, call the Volunteer Center at 545-5602 or 687-2641. Office hours are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

CHILD CARE

Tot Town extends hours — Tot Town Child Development Center will extend its Friday hours from 10 p.m. until 11 p.m. Saturday hours will remain the same. The center will make exceptions for group functions or holiday parties if there are enough requests. For more information, call 689-8772.

MEETINGS

Fort Benning Management Association — The Fort Benning Management Association will conduct its November meeting Tuesday at 11:30 a.m. at the Officers' Club. This will be a joint meeting with the American Society of Military Comptrollers. Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, Fort Benning commanding general, will be the guest speaker. The cost for the buffet luncheon will be $5.25. Call in reservations to Myrtle Chalkley at 545-4426 or Wynona Johnson at 545-4214 by today.

Sundowners Toastmasters — The Sundowners Toastmasters meet the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at the Southern Bell Office downtown at 13th Street and 13th Avenue at 6:30 p.m. Toastmasters International is a professional organization designed to develop and improve confidence, speaking and presentation skills.

For more information, call Maj. Greg Smith at 544-3954 or Mrs. Dee Dee Tinker at 545-7661.

Spouses send tree to soldiers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Wives of the soldiers in Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, "mortar" platoon got together and decorated a 5-foot felt Christmas tree with felt ornaments. Each wife decorated a ornament for her family and for those wives who couldn't participate. An ornament was also made for each single soldier.

The tree, along with homemade cookies, will be sent to the platoon which is serving in Saudi Arabia. The wives also made two Christmas stockings printed with "Home Sweet Home," and will stuff them with photo copies of airline boarding passes which read, destination: Fort Benning, Ga.

The wives thought the tree would help to keep the morale of the soldiers high and provide a little holiday cheer, said Norma Sims,one of the wives who participated.

"The boarding passes are a way of letting the guys know that we miss them and want them home," said Sims.

Besides Sims, Judy Ferrell, Sharon Vos, Lorie Ashcraft, Susan Sobieski and Jennifer Anderson also helped.

Nations of Latin America

Republic of Guatemala

Area: 42,042 square miles, slightly larger than Ohio
Population: 9,412,000, about the same as Michigan
Pop. density: 233 per sq. mi.
Ethnic groups: 56% Ladino (mestizo and westernized Indian), 44% Indian Religion: predominantly Roman Catholic, some Protestant and traditional Mayan
Literacy rate: 48%
Life expectancy: 60 years

Languages: Spanish, but over 40% of population speaks an Indian language as priomary tongue (18 Indian dialects, including Quiche, Cakchiquel, Kekchi)
Capital city: Guatemala City
Industries: sugar, furniture, prepared foods, tires, textiles and clothing
Exports: coffee, cotton, sugar, bananas, meat
Per capita income: $1200

The old Mayan Indian empire flourished in what is today Guatemala for over 1,000 years before the Spanish.

Guatemala was a Spanish colony 1524-1821; briefly a part of Mexico and then of the U.S. of Central America, the republic was established in 1839.

The people of this Central American nation are divided culturally between Indian - heir to the brilliant Maya civilization of the past - and ladino, westernized Guatemalan whether of Indian, mixed, or European ethnicity.

The Indians remain largely unassimilated into the national fabric, keeping their own languages and customs. Many live in poverty although they, and their poor ladino counterparts, contribute labor to a dynamic national economy based on rich agriculture and light industries.

A rising urban middle class backs increased industrialization but not land reform.

Five tectonic plates come together in Guatemala, giving impetus to volcanos and the earthquakes that periodically devastate the country.

Miguel Asturias was awarded the 1967 Nobel Prize for Literature.

The Mayan civilization extended south to the pre-Columbian city of Copan in what is now northwestern Honduras. The territory was also home to the Lenca Indians and the indigenous people of the Moskitia area.

Honduras was a province of the Spanish kingdom of Guatemala, a member of the United Provinces of Central America after independence from Spain and Mexico, and an independent republic after the 1838 collapse of the Central American Federation. Honduras alternated between civilian and military rule for many years. Since 1982 the country has had civilian elected leadership.

The government has backed farm cooperatives, labor unions, and the election of an assembly.

Largely agricultural, Honduras has some mineral and forest resources and attracts tourism to its Bay Islands and extensive pre-Columbian Maya ruins at Copan. A government corporation now oversees the banana industry, which is still largely owned by American companies.

Honduras is the hemisphere's most mountainous country and has great stands of oak, pine and hardwood forests. Banana-producing plantations stretch across the northern coast, marketed out of the nation's commercial heart in San Pedro Sula. Magnificent Maya ruins at Copan in the far west are a powerful tourist attraction.

Training and Military Education Conference delegates discuss future of Latin American, U.S. armed forces

by Keith F. Johnson

The U.S. Army Infantry Center, with the School of the Americas as the executive agent, hosted the Third Training and Military Education Conference Oct. 21 through 26.

Over 300 people participated in the conference, including senior military officers from 18 Latin American countries as well as the United States and Canada. Various U.S. Army schools and organizations with Latin American interests also sent representatives.

"TMEC was designed for all member armies of the Conference of American Armies to address issues dealing with training and military education of all armies in an organized way," said Col. Leo Vasquez, director of the permanent executive secretariat of the 19th Conference of American Armies.

Vasquez said the idea for TMEC was born at a commanders conference in 1985 during which SOA was recommended as a host "because the School has been the premiere training base for many years for the armies of Latin America."

The main topics of discussion during the committee meetings were the professional development and training of the noncommissioned officer and also the use of computer-simulated war games.

"We had some interesting discussions that led to a refinement, a better understanding of these topics," Vasquez said. "All the armies are different, they all have their own doctrinal base, they all have different resources and they all have different policies as far as where they are headed in the next five to ten years."

"Some of the armies are fighting insurgent groups or are conducting counter-narcotic operations, so each country will react differently to the conference. But the greatest advantage, outcome of this conference, is that they have had the opportunity to listen to each other's concerns and viewpoints. The delegates can return to their country's and analyze and consider the agreements made here and then base that on developing a program for the future that will take advantage of the type of discussions and findings of this conference."

HOLA program shows Latin American students North American way of life

by Ivy Rodriguez

Arriving in a foreign country with little or no knowledge of the customs, traditions and language can truly be a nightmare. This is the situation which the majority of Latin American guest instructors, students and their families at the U.S. Army School of the Americas encounter when they arrive in Columbus. Little do they know that Columbus has become a melting pot of different nationalities, customs and hospitable people who are more than willing to help ease their fears and make their stay a pleasant one.

People from all walks of life have volunteered their time and effort to host Latin American students and their families year after year. The experience can be rewarding for both our Latin American guests and the sponsors. Sponsors are members of the Hosts of Latin Americans Sponsorship Program. HOLA is the Spanish word for "hello".

The HOLA sponsor program is a hospitality program designed to provide Latin American guest instructors and students and their families at SOA an opportunity to become acquainted with North American family life in the broadest sense.

To do this, a family agrees to take a genuine interest in a Latin American guest and his family and help him understand the American way of life by giving him an opportunity to participate in home and community activities. The Latin American guest will interpret America to his countrymen in terms of your family. A friendly relationship can be far reaching in the effort toward international understanding and world peace.

For more information about how to become a sponsor, please contact Mrs. Ivy Rodriguez at the International Military Student Office at 545-3498.

SOA Christmas party Dec. 14

The U.S. Army School of the Americas' annual Children's Christmas Party will be Dec. 14 at Doughboy Stadium at 4 p.m.

The SOA Children's Christmas Party is for Latin American and U.S. civilian and military personnel and their families.

The party will include a lighting of the SOA Christmas tree, entertainment from the Officers' Wives' Club, and the appearance of Santa Claus via Fort Benning's "Silver Wings".

Keith F. Johnson

Cadets from Colombia practice hand signals that allow them to communicate with the helicopter pilot during an air-mobile operation.

DTAC is 'backbone' of SOA

During the year 1990, the School of the Americas will graduate over 1,500 students from 23 different courses. Approximately the same number of students and courses from the previous two years, but the comparison stops there. Just as the state of world affairs has changed during the past two years, so has the curriculum offered by the School to 15 Latin American countries and the United States.

In 1989, the School's Department of Special Operations/Low-Intensity Conflict began operations to "better meet the needs of Latin American armies" with courses such as Counter-Narcotics, Psychological Operations and Commando.

The School's Department of Joint and Combined Operations added computer-simulated war games to the curriculum of its courses that includes the Command and General Staff Course, which trains officers for field-grade assignments.

The third and final training department at the School is the Department of Tactics and Combined Arms, which, according to Capt. Brett E. Morris, chief of the weapons division of DTAC, "is not as glamorous as the other departments but it lays the foundation that the Latin American soldier can build on."

Morris said the Department is "like the 'backbone' of the School because it handles the majority of the students at the School and teaches them the basic skills that sets the foundation for the future development of the armies of Latin America."

According to Morris, the courses taught in the department are the equivalent of the courses taught at Fort Benning's Non-Commissioned Officers Academy and the U.S. Army Infantry Center, using the same doctrine but adapting it to meet the needs of each Latin American country.

An example of that adaption is the department's Cadet Artillery Orientation Course. The course was created for graduating cadets from Colombia's "Academia Militar", the equivalent of the United States' West Point.

For the first time this year the cadets received an Air-Assault Artillery class.

According to Capt. Jose M. Marrero, the principal instructor for the class, the cadets learned how to organize pick-up and landing zones for an artillery battery, more specifically, for a 101A1 Howitzer. They received instruction on the roles and responsibilities of the commanding officer, executive officer and the first sergeant including details such as the capability of the helicopter, radio procedures, analyzing the terrain, correct placement of artillery at the landing zone and more so the cadet would have a complete understanding of how to conduct an Air-mobile Operation. Then the students learned how to physically rig and hook-up the howitzer to the helicopter at Amfreville Oct. 13.

"In Colombia their primary artillery piece is the 101A1 Howitzer, and with this type of instruction their forces will be more combat ready," Marrero said. "They will be more mobile because they will be able to transport the howitzer to areas that currently aren't accessable. They have the Blackhawks and 101A1 Howitzers in Colombia but they don't have the practical experience, this will teach their cadets, future lieutenants, how to conduct these operations," Marrero said.

According to Marrero, the course combines several specialities into one course to include instruction in survey operations, fire support planning, fire support execution, ballistics and technical operations of the firing battery. This exposes the students to the full spectrum of artillery.

Morris added that the course in 1989 was 50 percent artillery and 50 percent land navigation and marksmanship. This year marksmanship was eliminated.

"Next year it will be purely an artillery course," Morris said. "We will add fire direction training so the students will understand how to actually calculate the data to fire the howitzer as well as training in fire support planning. These additions are based on what we've learned from the students, what their capabilities are when they arrive and what the needs are of the country as far as training."

Morris said that artillerymen have a lot of different jobs such as forward observer, fire support planner, executive officer or fire direction officer; a balanced and well-groomed field artillery man needs training in all of these areas.

Marrero added that the department has been able to upgrade the quality of its curriculum because of the importance placed on assigning above average non-commissioned officers to the School.

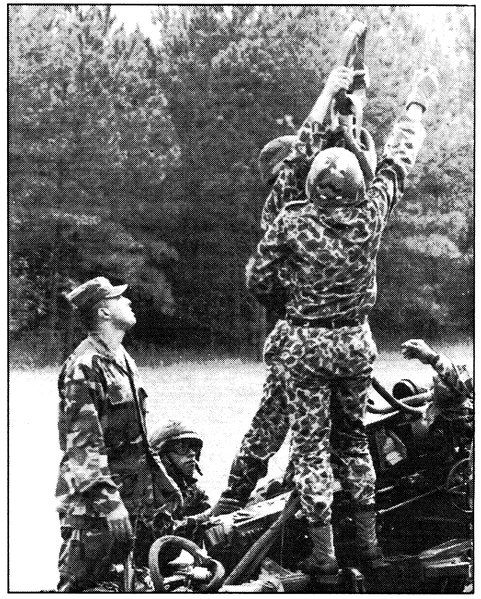
According to Marrero, the quality of instruction at the School has improved because Gen. Maxwell R. Thurman, as commander of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, placed more emphasis on the selection of NCO's to the School.

"Latin American sergeants are learning here in the basic NCO courses how to be a sergeant," Marrero said. "They don't get that kind of training in their countries. The U.S. has a different philosophy toward development of NCO's. What we are trying to do is implant that knowledge of the role of an NCO into the students that arrive here. The cadets are learning that NCO's can teach and give them quality instruction."

The role and development of the non-commissioned officer was one of the topics of discussion during this year's Third Training and Military Education Conference held at Fort Benning Oct. 21-26 as well as the conference here in 1988. TMEC is a forum where member countries of the Conference of American Armies, which includes Latin American countries represented at SOA, can send delegates to discuss issues of importance to their armies.

According to Marrero, SOA will continue to change and adapt the courses it offers the armies of Latin America to meet their needs.

"The Air-Assault training is a fine indication of the improvement of instruction going on at the School and the new and innovative training that we are trying to accomplish," Marrero said.



Cadets practice hooking the 101A1 Howitzer to the helicopter during a "dry" run.

A cadet signals to the helicopter pilot that he is clear to lift the Howitzer.

The helicopter transports the Howitzer from the pick-up zone to the landing zone.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Rather than answer a question this time around, I want to address some of the issues that we have seen in the past few weeks at the Legal Assistance Office, as well as some that I anticipate we might see.

Credit, ATM Card Abuse

With the Christmas shopping season coming on, some of you may find yourselves separated from your credit cards and ATM cards. If this occurs, you obviously want to alert your bank or credit card company immediately. What do you do if you find charges on your monthly statement that you didn't make? There are specific federal laws that apply to unauthorized charges on credit cards and unauthorized use of ATM cards. These laws generally require that you notify the creditor or bank, in writing, within a certain period of time, in order to avoid liability for unauthorized use.

Paying attention to the time limits is extremely important, as is the fact that your notification must be in writing. If you look on the back side of your monthly statement on your credit accounts, you will find (in fine print) a statement of your rights and how to assert them. On ATM transactions, you generally receive a statement of your rights when you get the card.

You can, however, obtain this statement from you bank upon request. The Legal Assistance Office will give you guidance on how to assert your rights under these laws.

No Payments Due in Dec.

With the Christmas season coming on, some credit card companies offer to allow you to slide by without making a payment on your account in December in order to let you have "extra cash" for Christmas.

While this sounds attractive, you need to be aware that the company will continue to charge interest on the account. This means that your "extra cash" is really a loan at whatever interest rate you pay on your account (19 percent to 21 percent a year in many cases).

Automobile Insurance

Recently, we have seen a number of cases of persons charged with a failure to have liability insurance on their cars. While most people know of this requirement, we emphasize that it is very important. Georgia requires you to have liability insurance on your vehicle any time you operate it.

The penalties in Georgia for failure to have the insurance are severe, and involve minimum fines of $200 and suspension of driver's license. In connection with this, we occasionally run into clients whose finance company or bank has purchased insurance on their car for them.

If you are in this situation, please be aware that this is not the liability insurance required by the state. It is only collision and theft insurance purchased by the bank or finance company to protect the interest it has in your car.

Buying a Car?

When you buy a car and you sign a purchase contract that says you are buying it "As Is," you are buying it without any warranty or guarantee.

This is still true even if the dealer or salesman makes verbal promises about the car. If it breaks down after you drive it off the lot, it is your problem. You do not have a right to demand that the dealer fix it or take it back, and you must still pay the purchase price.

We strongly suggest that, before you buy an "As Is" car, you request that the dealer allow you to have the vehicle checked out completely by a mechanic of your choice.

You may have to pay for such a check, but it would probably be worth the money. If the dealer refuses, insist on a written warranty or do not buy it.

Buying a New Car?

If you anticipate buying a new car soon, you may want to consider holding off until after the first of the year. Beginning Jan. 1, 1991, Georgia's new car lemon law goes into full swing. This law will give you certain rights in addition to your regular new car warranty.

The staff at the Legal Assistance Office is available to assist you. The office is located in Building 5, Main Post and the telephone number is 545-3281.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

According to reports by the Automotive Information Council, people who change their own motor oil, dump 20 times the amount of oil spilled by the tanker Exxon Valdez in Alaska into America's environment by failing to dispose of the used oil properly.

Approximately 350 million gallons of used motor oil is generated annually in the United States by do-it-yourselfers. An estimated 60 percent of all the used oil is then poured on the ground, buried in the backyard, poured down storm drains, or put in the trash that is headed for the landfill.

These actions result in about 240 million gallons of used oil being dumped into the environment each year — the equivalent in volume of five oil tankers spilling their entire load.

According to the American Petroleum Institute, used motor oil is considerably more toxic than unused oil. When used oil is disposed of improperly, it contaminates ground water or surface water and can be harmful to human health and the environment. For example:

- Used oil dumped into storm drains can impair and even shut down waste water treatment plant processes.
- Used oil dumped at landfills or on the ground, reduces the soil productivity and contaminates surface and ground water supplies.
- Used oil dumped in surface waters depletes oxygen for fish and becomes concentrated on the tissues of plants and animals that may eventually be eaten by people.

Besides polluting the environment, dumping used oil wastes energy. Used oil can be recycled or re-refined to produce high quality lubrications, or processed to produce a fuel oil substitute. One gallon of used motor oil can be processed to produce 2.5 quarts of high quality motor oil.

At Fort Benning all used oil, hydraulic fluids, motor oils, solvents, and some jet fuel is mixed with Number 6 oil, put in a boiler and burned during curtailments on natural gas.

If you need to get rid of used motor oil, there are two locations on Post that are equipped to take used motor oil and dispose of it properly. These locations are Building 9064 on Marne Road in the Kelley Hill area and Building 2843 on Way Street (Main Post area). Be sure to put the oil in a leakproof container to transport it.

If you have any questions about this or any energy-related subject, please contact the Energy Office at 545-4652 or 545-7928.

SPIRITUAL

Bible verse furnishes prescription for blues

By Wayne E. Harris
Custer Terrace Chaplain

As the holidays approach, they bring stress with them. Buying the right toys, trying to squeeze a few more dollars from the budget, and being disillusioned when the holiday you dreamed about is not like your dream are all things that can cause stress.

So how can you manage stress before stress manages you? I will share some wise words from the Bible with you. I turn to these words often because we live with stress daily. In these days of Operation Desert Shield, the high cost of living, and the pressure to have a nice holiday season, I especially find them encouraging and instructive in the management of my stress level.

Philippians 4:6-7 (NASV) says, "Be anxious for nothing, but in everything by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving, let your requests be made known to God. And the peace of God, which surpasses all comprehension, shall guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus."

I see three things in this passage that will help in stress management over the holidays. First, be anxious for nothing. Anxiety, worry, and "sweating the small stuff" can be resolved when we place the circumstances of the holidays in God's hands.

Pray and ask God for wisdom in planning holiday events. Plan worship and family activities into your celebrations. Good planning can reduce stress and leads to worshipful, meaningful holidays.

Second, allow your holidays to be a time of thanksgiving, not of greed. Too much emphasis on gifts and spending sprees can stress you out. Just as Paul admonishes us to pray, he encourages us to do so with thanksgiving. We have much to be thankful for and would be wise to make these days of giving thanks.

Third, ask for and receive the peace of God that surpasses all comprehension. God offers peace that goes beyond the thrill of a few special days.

Some people set themselves up for stress and disappointment because of their attitude toward the holidays. They want them to be perfect and for friends and relatives to fall in line with their visions. Such expectations can lead to disappointment. People are not perfect and things do not always go as desired on holidays. Peace with God and simply enjoying others is a better goal than to shoot for that elusive perfect holiday.

You can enjoy your holidays much better and get more out of them when you follow the simple, yet meaningful, words of Philippians 4:6-7. Use these holidays to pray for the soldiers in the desert, their families, and those less fortunate.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Sunday School classes — Teachers are needed for the remainder of the "Elective" Sunday School classes scheduled for the 1990-91 school year. The schedule is as follows:

NEW ARMY PRIMUS CENTER PROVIDES WALK-IN MEDICAL CARE

PRIMUS Walk-In centers are a new approach to providing military beneficiaries access to primary health care. PRIMUS Columbus will be open 365 days each year—from 0700 to 2000 weekdays and from 0900 to 1600 Saturdays, Sundays and holidays (Effective 10-1-88).

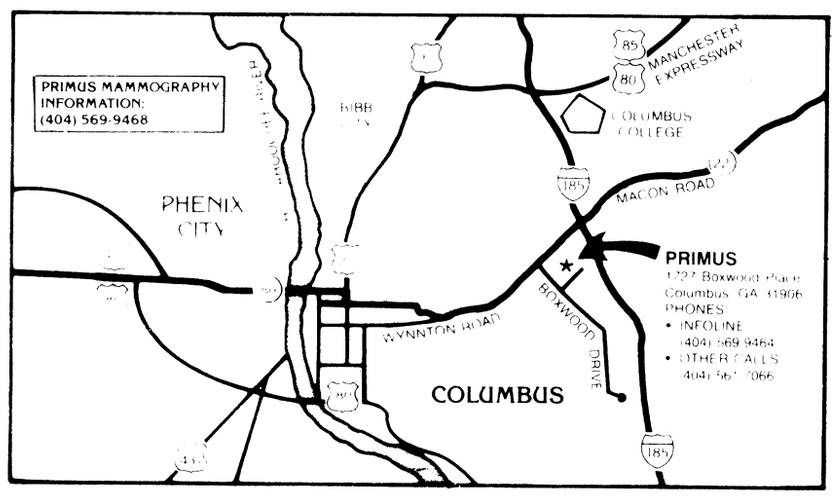
No appointment is necessary and there is no cost to patients for treatment and medication.

All military beneficiaries, including family members, entitled to care at military treatment facilities and enrolled in the DEERS are eligible for care. Basic laboratory and X-ray services are provided on site. Licensed and credentialed physicians and staff provide medical care.

PRIMUS Columbus is located at 1727 Boxwood Place Columbus, GA 31906

Infoline: (404) 569-9464
Other Calls: (404) 561-7066

PRIMUS Mammography Information: (404) 569-9468



Critically ill or seriously injured patients should go to a hospital emergency room.
Services are provided by PHP Healthcare Corporation, Alexandria, Virginia, under contract to the US Army Health Services Command.

How To Be Cleaned Out Of House And Home.

If you have merchandise to sell, use our classified ads. Here's how they work.

You can run a 3-line ad for 3 days for just $11.70 on a big-ticket item. Or, you can run a 3-line ad for 5 days for just $5 in some classifications.

Either way, when you have something to sell, spending a little can help you pick up a lot!

Buy it. Sell it.

Find it.

Youths to send banner to soldiers in Mideast

Youth Services is preparing a holiday banner to send to the soldiers of 197th Infantry Brigade and other members of Operation Desert Shield. Everyone is welcomed to stop by Youth Services, building 1056, during Family Week and autograph the banner. This banner will then be forwarded in time for the Christmas season.

For more information, call Rhonda L. Tillery, 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Permits needed to cut wood on post

Cutting of firewood on Fort Benning is allowed in designated areas by permit only. Permits are sold at the Department of Engineering and Housing Natural Resources Management Office, building 5884, Harmony Church. Permits are sold from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Thursday.

Cutting is allowed on Thursday through Saturday of each week and legal holidays as they occur. Cost of the permit is $10 per day, payable only by money order or bank draft. Maps of cutting areas are given when the permit is purchased.

For more information, call 544-6120.

Families to talk via TV for holiday season

Soldiers and family members can talk to their loved ones by way of live television during the Christmas and New Year holidays.

Fort Benning will participate in the "Video Teleconferencing Center Christmas Visit Program"along with other installations across the country.

For the system to work, participating parties must be at military installations with teleconferencing capabilities. Teleconference calls will not be made to the Persian Gulf area.

Scheduling for the teleconference began Nov. 13, for the Dec. 17 to Jan. 4 live event. Privates through sergeants (E-1 through E-5), and family members of Operation Desert Shield soldiers can make appointments until Dec. 1, at which time appointments will open to all military, family members, and Department of Defense civilians.

For a teleconferencing appointment, or information on participating installations, call Spec. Larry Sams at 545-5552, Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The program is supported by the United States Army Information Systems Command.

Job workshop planned for youth seeking work

The Family Member Employment Assistance Program will conduct a job seeking strategies workshop Nov. 29 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., especially for 16-and 17-year-olds who are interested in working part-time around school hours and weekends. The workshop is free of charge and will be held in the Youth Activities Center, building 1056. Reservations should be made by close of business Nov. 28 by calling 545-4043 or 545-4357.

Marksmanship match award ceremony set

The award ceremony for the post Marksmanship Championships will be Tuesday at 1:30 p.m. in Marshall Auditorium, Building 4. Col. John D. Fuller, chief of staff, will be the guest speaker. For more information call Greg Nichols at 545-4252.

Family Life Center begins womens' group

A support group for women in transition sponsored by Family Practice and the Family Life Center began Monday and will continue for eight to ten weeks. Women who have had a major change in their lives, such as recently moving or changing jobs, can meet at the Family Life Center, building 2606, each Monday at 7 p.m. For reservations call 545-1760 or 545-5301.

Post extends CFC deadline

Benning at 80 percent of goal Drive project officer optimistic

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The Combined Federal Campaign, scheduled to end Nov. 15, has been extended with no further end date, to allow the post to meet its $500,000 goal, according to CFC project officer Capt. Tyrone Kirk.

"Right now, the post is within 80 percent of the goal — about $400,000,"said Kirk."We will extend the deadline until the goal is met. There is no firm deadline set, but we expect to meet the goal and wrap the campaign up around Dec.1," he added,

In addition to meeting the goal, the extension was granted to allow time for returns from deployed units to arrive, said Kirk.

"Participation from our troops deployed in Saudi Arabia has been outstanding, very encouraging,"he said."The 197th Infantry Brigade has collected $83,000 for the campaign while in the desert. That's actually more than they collected last year when they were on post," he added.

Units here have also done a great job and participated in the program enthusiastically, said Kirk.

"I'm optimistic that we will reach our goal soon," said Kirk."We all can benefit from the programs that are helped through the CFC. I just want to encourage everyone to make an effort."

More soldiers leave Benning for Mideast

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard

A departure ceremony was held for a unit of the 34th Medical Battalion Monday morning at Lawson Army Airfield.

The 675th Medical Dispensary Detachment deployed Monday afternoon for Saudi Arabia to provide medical support to troops participating Operation Desert Shield.

The detachment, commanded by Maj. David A. McCann, is a 10-person medical dispensary unit. Their mission as a part of Operation Desert Shield will be to provide rountine sick-call capabilities to base-cluster units that have no organic medical support.

The unit also has some emergency capabilities to stabilize a seriously wounded patient for transport to further emergency care.

Hotline created to handle Desert Shield donations

American Forces Information Service

Defense Logistics Agency workers are manning a hotline to handle donations for Operation Desert Shield.

The hotline, 1-703-274-3461, is answered Monday through Friday, from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Eastern time. During non-duty hours, an answering machine takes messages.

Agency officials have compiled a list of items acceptable for donations, said Army Lt. Col. Henry Wyatt. "There's been a tremendous amount of interest from the general population concerning what they can send and how to send the items," said Wyatt, a reservist working at the agency who was called up to support Operation Desert Shield.

The list provides ideas of what the military services can use in the gulf. Officials hope the list will also prevent the shipment of perishable items and items that Saudi Arabian customs officials might seize.

The list includes items for:

- Sports: Softball equipment, soccer balls, basketballs;
- Fitness Equipment: Jump ropes, free weights;
- Reading Material: Comic books, paperback books;
- Writing Material: Stationery, pens, holiday cards;
- Games: Chess, checkers, backgammon, cards;
- Hobby: Macrame, needlecraft kits, paint and drawing supplies;
- Music and Audio: Blank and pre-recorded video and audio tapes, instruments, radios and batteries; and
- Miscellaneous: Wiffle balls, sun visors, sun block and insect repellent.

Wyatt explained that individuals who would like to send gifts to the troops in the Persian Gulf should send them to one of the "any service member" addresses. However, Wyatt recommended calling the hotline for additional information before sending the items.

The addresses are:

Any Serviceperson, Operation Desert Shield, APO New York 09848-0006 (for Army, Air Force and land-based Marines)

Any Serviceperson, Operation Desert Shield, FPO New York 09866-0006 (for Navy and shipboard Marines)

COMMENTARY

Being thankful can be difficult

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Being thankful this Thanksgiving is going to be a lot more difficult for some.

Desert Shield family members can certainly be thankful the bullets aren't flying in Saudi Arabia. But I know they'd be a lot more thankful if their loved ones were home with them.

Those of us still here might complain about the extra work load, but we can sure be thankful we aren't picking sand out of our turkey.

Desert Shield family members are certainly missing their soldiers this time of year, but they can be thankful they at least have loved ones to miss.

The other day I was at the Valley Rescue Mission watching men get geared up for the evening meal. I watched as they tried to look dignified going through the line, letting everyone else know this was just a temporary set back, that they weren't regulars and would soon be back out on their own.

I saw this and was thankful I had a job and a home.

Driving back to post, I reflected on some of the other things I had to be thankful for, you know in addition to living in a free country with all those freedoms we always take for granted, even as we put on the uniform to defend them.

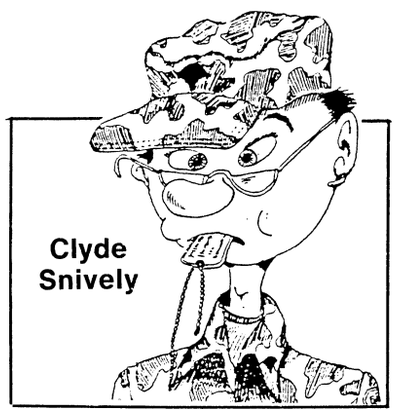
For instance, I'm thankful I had an excuse not to have a Thanksgiving meal with our great, white, woman hunter. She's figured out how to stuff minced deer meat into intestines, so she'll be serving deer sausage instead of turkey.

I'm thankful that I only heard four commercials for Christmas before Halloween and so far haven't seen one decorated tree in someone's living room (this was not the case last year).

I'm thankful the Army no longer serves C-rations which means canned turkey loaf is a thing of the past.

I'm thankful my favorite team won two games in November (any team playing Auburn).

I'm hoping to be thankful for the half-day schedule during the



Clyde Snively

Christmas period this year. We kind of missed out last year. I know, at least I wasn't the one being shot at then and not the one who could be shot at now. So let me have my half-days off.

I'm thankful to all the people downtown and out of town who are remembering our soldiers and their family members. A few things that come to mind are support of the Army Community Services food locker, nearly 2,000 tickets to Georgia Tech football games, 200 Columbus Symphony tickets, 1,000 fly swatters, and 13,000 pounds of gatorade.

We can also be thankful for such in-house support as the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry's picnic for Desert Shield families. Downtown companies like Royal Crown Cola and Tom's Foods donated their products, the commissary kicked in with hot dogs and hamburgers and the battalion, along with 197th, soldier volunteers provided the cooks and servers while local radio stations WFXE, WSTH and WCGQ recorded family member dedications to their soldiers.

One final note of Desert Shield support comes from Columbus College. The men and womens basketball teams will be wearing 197th and FORSCOM patches to help remember our soldiers. The patches were donated by ARCCO.

So, as depressing as holiday seasons can get when loved ones aren't home and especially when we don't know when to expect them, we still can be thankful for the people who remember the plight of these soldiers and family members.

I'm thankful for that.

MESSAGES

Commander talks about holiday blessings

Today we celebrate an honored American tradition which began 369 years ago in Plymouth, Mass., when Gov. William Bradford, proclaimed a day of public thanksgiving for the past year's blessings.

Traditionally, historically, and eventually by presidential decree, Americans continued to set aside a special day to thank God for the abundance of his blessings.

Therefore, on this fourth Thursday of November 1990, we again acknowledge with gratitude, that the Lord has looked with favor upon our people and our land.

As we observe this Thanksgiving Day, we give special thanks for another year of an abundance of blessings and prosperity. We enjoy greater freedoms, enhanced well-being, and more opportunities than any people in history — we celebrate the freedom to worship, speak and choose our direction in life.

Those freedoms and opportunities were achieved through rigorous training, attention to the mission, dedication to high and noble ideals, and the personal sacrifices by our generation and generations of Americans before us.

This year, especially, let us, the inheritors of these abundant blessings, take time to realize how fortunate we are to be free.

My prayer for you and your loved ones is for a safe, happy and blessed Thanksgiving.

Vuono, Stone send Thanksgiving message

As our nation celebrates the Thanksgiving season, we can be truly thankful for the many blessings we enjoy as Americans.

At the same time, we cannot forget that the peace and freedom that we so cherish have been sustained by the courage and commitment of American soldiers who have served this nation throughout our history.

On this, the first Thanksgiving of a new decade, many of you are away from family, friends and loved ones — called once again to defend the principles of this great nation.

Whether you are forming a bastion against aggression in Saudi Arabia, manning the ramparts of freedom in Korea, Central America or Europe, or serving our country here in the United States, your sacrifices and dedication are greatly appreciated by your fellow citizens.

Generations of Americans far into the future will give thanks for the contributions made by each of you during this tumultuous era.

To every soldier, civilian and family throughout the Army, thank you for your selfless service and your dedication to the principles that have made our country great.

Happy Thanksgiving

LETTERS

Post troop coverage seen as incomplete

You recently received a letter from Ruth Davis concerning the 197th.

She expressed her feelings about the 197th not being the only unit deployed to the Middle East. We have yet to see things change as far as articles being printed on the 197th.

I do not want to come across as a nagging female, but please cut the families of the other units deployed to the Middle East a little slack. Our families are just as important as the 197th.

My husband was part of the 34th Medical Battalion deployed on Oct. 13 for the Middle East. We have yet to hear mention of them in the Bayonet or any other newspaper. Our husbands, wives, sons and daughters are there to save lives in the event of a war and we would appreciate their acknowledgment in the Middle East.

Our families are very important to us and we would like to know their feelings and see their pictures in the newspaper concerning the Gulf crisis. We would appreciate the same kind of respect given to our families as is given to the 197th. After all, the 34th Medical Battalion and other units are just as important.

Janice Monette
Fort Benning

Editor's note: We on the Bayonet staff are most aware of the other units from Fort Benning that deployed to the Middle East. We've tried to contact as many units and commanders as possible to get them to send us information as to what their units are doing. Sgt. 1st Class Ronnie Allen personally made contact with nearly all the units when he was there escorting the media. He was told these units would provide us information. If any family members have information or photos (color slides or black and white prints) they'd like to share, this newspaper will certainly consider running them.

MREs are 'bland'- officials take note

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Bland. Routine. Words used to describe high school cafeteria lunches — not food in Operation Desert Shield, says the Army. But that's exactly how the soldiers in Saudi Arabia are describing food there.

Troop Support officials in the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics say they're doing everything they can to dispel soldiers' food-related complaints by testing, upgrading and fielding new food and support items for Desert Shield.

Logistics officials say the food has to pass strict quality-control checks to make sure it's sanitary before it reaches the soldier. For example, all food items for the Meal, Ready to Eat are inspected by the U. S. Department of Agriculture at the processing plant. The Army's Veterinary Corps inspects all food and handles all malnutrition allegations in-theatre.

'The quality is fine,' says Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin L. Powell to questions about food support "over there." "I can assure you they're being well fed."

Variety in the meals has increased lately with the addition of nine new MRE entrees, as well as an increase in serving size from five ounces to eight. What's more, the Saudis are supplying fresh vegetables and fruits for many of the meals, and units are getting a fresh steak dinner about once every two weeks.

New to soldiers in Saudi Arabia are a shelf-bread-like, two-ounce "pouch bread" enhancement to the MRE; a flameless, individual MRE heater run on a chemical reaction by adding water; and ration-supplement sundry packs that include enough writing paper, detergent, and toiletry items for 100 soldiers until PX facilities become available to the unit.

"I understand there is a certain boredom that sets in when you eat T- rations and MREs constantly," said Powell. "Now the variety gets a little old, and I have lived on rations for many months myself, so I know what they're going through."

The precooked T-rations come in two tubs resembling large TV dinners that are dropped in boiling water then dished to 36 soldiers. Along with the added enhancements of fresh bread, fruit and milk, this meal plan adds variety to the grind of MREs, but doesn't resemble home cooking.

"To the extent that fresh food is available and can be brought in, we're trying to do that," Powell said. 'But MREs and T-rations will remain the staple.'

Lt. Col. Mark Gerner speaks to the troops after taking command of the 4th Battalion, 36th Infantry Nov. 8. The unit's former commander, Lt. Col. John Greenwalt, has taken over as the Chief of Staff for Joint Task Force Bravo in Honduras. Gerner comes from the United States Army Military Academy.

CAC reps meet

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community reporter

The Commander's Advisory Council Meeting was Nov. 13 in Infantry Hall. The meeting, attended by chiefs of directorates, unit representatives, mayors, and agencies providing services to the community, provides a forum to discuss issues and concerns about the community in the same manner as a civilian city council meeting. Issues brought out by the attendants range from stuck windows to proposals for new services.

The Mayors Council brought forward a request for additional shuttle bus stops in Custer Terrace and McGraw Manor and work on playgrounds which is being completed.

Traffic and littering problems brought forward by unit representatives were not so easily managed. Issues concerning repairs to facilities in unit areas and telephone one on the ranges are making progress. To bring an issue to the attention of the council, contact the unit commanders of your community mayor.

Matthew Nahas, ninth grade son of Col. Albert Nahas, and Lee Bunyea, seventh grade son of Col. Walter Bunyea, attended the Commanders Advisory Council Meeting to complete the requirements for their Communications Merit Badge for Boy Scouts.

For Nahas, this is the last requirement needed to apply for his Eagle Award, the highest award in Boy Scouting. Both boys are members of Troop 27 at Fort Benning.

PTO holds breakfast

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community reporter

Last week the Parent Teacher Organization of Edward A. White hosted a breakfast for parents to kick off the activities in honor of National Education Week. Cristina Puglinani, President of the PTO, said more than 200 participants attended the morning activities which included a program by the 4th grade chorus. Other activities sponsored by the PTO included a Teacher Appreciation Reception on Wednesday, and the Book Week Slumber Party for 4-5th grade students on Friday.

In conjunction with the activities planned for the celebration of National Education Week, parents were invited to participate in a Book Fair to encourage reading.

Janet Wynn, principal, said she was glad so many had taken the opportunity to take time out as a family to get involved with the school. According to Wynn, studies say when parents help just 20 minutes each night the child's grades show improvement.

Puglinani invited parents to attend the PTO Board Meetings held at the school the first Thursday of each month at 1:30 p.m. She said, "Parents need to know the more they get involved with the school the better things will be. Their involvement makes children feel better about their school."

Wilbur faculty members teach college classes

Fort Benning Schools

Faculty members from Fort Benning's Wilbur School went to Columbus College recently not to attend classes but to teach the class themselves. They were invited by Dr. Rochelle Ripple to talk to her students who are studying about trends and issues in school administration.

The Wilbur School faculty has been involved in the Effective Schools process for over a year now. Through this process they are examining all facets of their school program emphasizing their belief in the ability of all children to learn. Joan Chandler, counselor; Sharon Del Gobbo, art teacher; Sue Ann Dixon, fifth grade teacher; Joy Forlines, kindergarten teacher; Felicia Hamilton, fourth grade teacher; Nancy Hammond, first grade teacher; Ann Justice, Assistant Principal; Gail Wilson, principal represented the Wilbur faculty as they presented their story of Wilbur School's implementation of the Effective School process. They spoke of how the process began, what they are currently working on, and their goals for Wilbur School's future.

"We were excited about the opportunity to present the Effective Schools process with a Wilbur slant to Dr. Ripple's class," said Ann Justice, Wilbur School Assistant Principal. "Our staff is proud of what we have accomplished so far, and we're excited about where we're going. We're moving into another important step in the process now that will give us additional information with which to plan for the future. Our mission statement at Wilbur is 'Insuring a better tomorrow for all. . .Through educational excellence today.' It was a pleasure to share with other educators our pursuit of that mission."

AIDS Day sparks citizens' concern

USAIC Public Affairs Office

World AIDS Day is a day to open channels of communication, strengthen the exchange of information and experience, and forge a spirit of social tolerance.

Each year, it is the only international day of coordinated action against AIDS around the globe.

Since 1988, Dec. 1 has been designated as a day of bringing messages of compassion, hope, solidarity and understanding about AIDS to all countries of the world.

A group of concerned citizens in the Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning area, are sponsoring a poster and creative writing contest to draw attention to the impact of AIDS and to educate the citizens of our community about the HIV virus and AIDS.

To enter the poster contest, poster size should not exceed 22 x 28". Any medium may be used (water color, crayon, charcoal, oil, acrylic, etc.).

Entering the creative writing contest may be in the format of a short story, poem, essay, song, etc. Entries may be written, printed, or typed and should not exceed 250 words.

All entries must have the entrant's name, age, address, and telephone number clearly printed on the back of entry.

Both contests will be divided into three age groups. Cash prizes will be awarded.

All entries must be submitted to the AIDS Education Office, 1915 7th Avenue, Columbus, Ga. 31901 no later than 5 p.m. Monday.

Entries will be on display at Peachtree Mall in Columbus from Nov. 30 through Dec. 2, 1990.

Entries may be picked up at the AIDS Education Office during January.

Reservists to get VHA

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Reserve soldiers activated for Operation Desert Shield may now receive Variable Housing Allowance.

The VHA payment was authorized by the Defense Authorization Act for fiscal 1991. It becomes effective upon the date of activation.

Reserve soldiers serving on active duty other than for training are entitled to VHA on the same basis as any other active duty soldier.

Troop Program Unit members activated for Desert Shield are considered to be permanently assigned to their monthly drill station and should receive the VHA rate for that location. The permanent duty station for IRR and IMA soldiers and recalled retirees is the location from which they are ordered to active duty.

First ladies have own style

PM Editorial Services

It has been said, "Behind every great man, there is a great woman." Such has been the case with most of our country's presidents. In assuming one of the most challenging, non-paying jobs in the country, our nation's first ladies have brought a dedication of their own to the White House.

And as times have changed, so has the role of first ladies, now standing firmly beside their "great" men.

The first "first lady," Martha Washington, set the precedent emulated by many in the years to follow. A plain yet dignified woman, she established the first lady's role in ceremonial functions of the presidency. Martha became known as a gracious hostess, helping to bring dignity to a young nation.

Dolly Madison, wife of our fourth president, was one of the most popular and revered first ladies for our country's early years. In fact, prior to her husband's election to the presidency, Dolly occasionally acted as hostess at functions for President Thomas Jefferson. Dolly became an American heroine during the War of 1812.

When the British invaded Washington and approached the Executive Mansion, Dolly courageously stayed behind until many valuables, including the Gilbert Stuart portrait of George Washington, were safely carted away.

But it is not all adoration. As public figures, first ladies have had to deal with their fair share of criticism.

One first lady who endured quite a bit was Mary Todd Lincoln. She was criticized for excessive spending, but when she curtailed expenses she was accused of shirking social responsibilities. A Kentucky native, she was called a traitor during the Civil War by Southerners, while Union loyalists suspected her of treason.

It seems the public has always scrutinized the influence wielded by our first ladies. Edith Wilson was labeled "secret president" and "first woman to run the government" when her husband Woodrow was stricken with a disabling illness while in office.

As first lady, Eleanor Roosevelt broke precedents on a number of occasions and set a few of her own. Her active commitment to causes independent of her husband, such as the underprivileged, civil rights and women's rights, set a new trend.

In addition, Eleanor was the first to hold press conferences, travel around the country and candidly speak and write her opinions. Eleanor, once shy and somewhat awkward, confidently laid the groundwork for a more active first lady.

Since that time, first ladies have remained more politically active and independent. Rosalynn Carter, for example, broke with tradition and attended cabinet meetings and high-level briefings while in the White House.

Publicly, the duties of first lady have evolved with time, and the changing role is representative of the progress of women in our country. Perhaps soon we will have our first "first gentleman" at the side of our president.

Post's MWR program successful

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Morale, Welfare and Recreation Fund (also known as the Single Fund) is a centrally administered organization of nonappropriated funds (not taxpayer supported) business activities run for soldiers and their families, retirees, and DOD civilians working on the installation.

Businesses range from self-supporting operations such as clubs, bowling centers, golf course, car washes, equipment rental, the guest house, DVQ, and VEQ to child development centers, youth services programs, gyms, two libraries, the Vet Activity and the Infantry Museum which receive somes tax support. Single Fund earnings are paid directly to the soldiers and authorized users in the form of new or improved facilities, services, programs, and rental equipment.

Fort Benning's MWR operation is one of the most successful in the Army, which has permitted the post to reduce the impact of budget cuts in the MWR area.

Facilities, services, and programs are established based on the feedback from soldiers, MWR users, and family members. This feedback comes in the form of surveys, direct input from unit commanders, and soldiers through their representatives on the Installation Morale Support Fund Advisory Council. During the past year more than 6.7 million dollars of locally generated non-appropriated funds have been spent on capital purchases or major construction projects for single soldiers and married soldiers and their families.

Some of the completed projects of Fiscal Year 1990 are:

BILLETING — Purchase and install furnishings, playground equipment, and decor packages for the guesthouse. Install ceiling fans, mini blinds, card activated door lock entry system for billeting rooms. Repair air conditioning system, and purchase outside park benches for VOQ and VEQ areas.

BOWLING CENTERS — Purchase and install state-of-the-art synthetic lanes and approaches to make our centers some of the most modern in the country.

UCHEE CREEK RECREATION AREA — Dredge channel and construct marina. Construct equipment check-out center and storage facility. Construct comfort station for campers. Purchase pontoon party barge for rental by the hour or by the day. Renovate lodge.

AUTO CRAFTS CENTERS — Renovate outside bays and improve vehicle holding lot.

GOLF COURSE — Purchase 35 replacement golf carts. Repair/rebuild dam. Purchase golf course maintenance equipment.

UNIT FUNDS — Purchase weight equipment. Construct asphalt walking trail at Camp Rudder. Upgrade satellite TV system at the Mountain Ranger Camp.

SPORTS/GYMS — Renovate racquetball courts and construct playing fields in 34th Med Bn area.

OPERATION DESERT SHIELD

36th Engineer Group tackles its desert mission

By Maj. Sid Vogel
36th Engineer Group

The 36th Engineer Group from Fort Benning has now completed its deployment into the desert and begun operations in support of units deployed.

The group is designed to command and control various types of engineer units on the battle field in support of combat operations. These units can include separate engineer teams and companies designed for specialized duties, as well as corps combat and combat heavy engineer battalions. It is not normally assigned to a division, but can be task organized and committed to support one division, or provide support to several divisions at the same time.

Currently, the group's key mission is to provide support in the area occupied primarily by the 24th Infantry Division from Fort Stewart, which of course includes the 197th Infantry Brigade. The group's task organization can and does change depending upon its mission, but has included engineer units from Fort Bragg, Sill, Stewart, and Leonard Wood.

"Roads — mobility and counter mobility — is our key mission right now, which is nothing new for the engineers. Here in the desert we are also involved in preparing facilities to perform maintenance, helicopter bed down, etc.," stated Lt. Col. Scott E. Pepler, group executive officer. The unit even has a fire fighting team from Fort Bragg assigned to it so they can keep forward landing strips open and operating.

The unit does physical training daily out in the desert in an effort to stay in condition and "fit to fight." PT is in the morning when it is often cool. Soldiers find that they are wearing their army issued sweats to stay warm during their morning runs.

Mail is coming through regularly, and is the highlight of any soldier's day. The group has warm showers in the morning.

Though always ready to return home to loved ones, the group's soldiers are ready to stay as long as it takes to accomplish their mission. "This is what we are trained for and what we joined the Army to do. We're ready to do our jobs, even if it comes to fighting," said one of the unit's draftsman.

The 36th Engineer Group at Fort Benning has several other units normally assigned to the group in peace time which deploy and work separately in time of conflict.

The 215th Finance Support Unit has been deployed to various locations in the desert and is doing its job of keeping the soldiers paid and supporting units with all types of financial operations. Money is sometimes needed to buy things on the local economy to supplement the Army's logistics system.

The 608th Ordnance Company was one of the very first Fort Benning units to deploy to Saudi Arabia. They were given only a few hours to round everyone up and board aircraft. They had to leave without their organic equipment because their logistics skills were critically needed to handle the tons of ammunition pouring into Saudi Arabia. When they arrived they were some of the first soldiers in the country and had to use borrowed and rented equipment to get the job done. Working 24 hours a day, 7 days a week in one of the most unpleasant environments found in Saudi Arabia, they received ammo from the ships at the port, inventoried it, stored it, and issued it, keeping the units arriving in country supplied and combat ready.

U.S. troops now in Saudi Arabia still start the day with a shower and shave.

The 533rd Transportation Company was also early to deploy. Despite the fact that Saudi Arabia has a large number of contractors and transportation companies, logistics haul has been critical. The drivers of the 533rd are constantly on the roads throughout the desert hauling everything from food to ammunition, to water. The soldiers of the 533rd are on the roads so much that they no longer need maps. They know the entire theater and road network better than almost any other soldiers or units in the country.

The 598th Maintenance Company has also deployed to Saudi Arabia. Currently living in a vast tent city on the banks of the Persian Gulf, their key mission so far has been to help units deploying out of the port into the deserts of the Saudi Kingdom. "Right now our key customers are here at the port, however we are prepared to deploy deep into the desert when needed to provide maintenance support to the most forward deployed units," said Capt. Charles L. Hawkins, company commander.

Despite the fact that all the subordinate units of the 36th group find themselves working for different bosses in widely separated locations, they stay in contact and help each other. The 608th was the first unit on the ground, and though it has worked for four different higher headquarters since its arrival, it has remained relatively close to the port and airport. Thus, they have been able to assist units as they arrived on the scene.

The 608th personnel have been there to help with vehicles, guidance and advice and have made the transition into the theater much easier for arriving units. The 533rd has also been able to help units deploying into the desert and out of the port with their substantial hauling capability. As units move forward they need to develop their logistics capabilities as soon as possible, and the 533rd has helped the Fort Benning units accomplish their logistics buildup in the critical early days of employment into the desert. while the 598th has been there with its maintenance abilities to help its sister units. Col. Hank Miller, Commander of the 36th Engineer Group in Saudi Arabia, recently commented, "I have been very pleased with the way in which our units have responded to this challenge. The deployment was executed very effectively by each of these units, and I can honestly say that Fort Benning can be justifiably proud of the way these units have hit the ground running, and are accomplishing their missions under very challenging conditions. That is a real tribute to the professionalism and competence of the Fort Benning community and staff.

BAD
BUSINESS AGAINST DRUGS

Business Against Drugs Workshop

Business Against Drugs (B.A.D.), is the wave of the future for Columbus, and if you don't jump on the "BAD" wagon now, you could be left behind.

This "BAD" workshop is the first in a series to be held throughout the year. It is designed to help businesses that have already taken a stand against illicit drug use in the workplace. But more importantly, this workshop will be an informational tool for local businesses who are interested in implementing their own drug policy.

Participants will be provided with information on how they can win the war against drugs and alcohol in the workplace. You can choose four sessions out of the six offered to meet your needs. The "BAD" workshop is a great way to gain information for your business and your managers.

GUEST SPEAKERS

Alvah H. Chapman, Jr.

Alvah H. Chapman, Jr., a native of Columbus, Georgia, serves on the President's Drug Advisory Council and also serves as the Vice Chairman of the Miami Coalition for a drug-free community.

A. McArthur Irvin is a partner with Clark, Paul, Hoover and Mallard, an Atlanta firm engaged exclusively in the practice of labor and employment law on behalf of management. He has counseled employers on developing and implementing policies dealing with current issues such as substance abuse, smoking in the workplace, AIDS and sexual harrassment. He has presented numerous seminars on the subject of drug screening and has argued the protesting position in public debates.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Prevention is the key word when it comes to ensuring unnecessary freeze damage to water pipes. With the onset of winter and predictions for much more severe weather ahead, it's important to take precautions to reduce the threat of freeze damage. In past years at Fort Benning, cold weather has caused many thousands of dollars in damage to all types of facilities, usually from broken water pipes. Cold air causes water inside the pipes to freeze and expand, bursting the pipe as it thaws. Water from broken pipes can cause serious structural damage. In a ceiling, for example, water released from a broken pipe can collect and cause the entire ceiling to collapse.

Fortunately, simple precautions can prevent burst pipes. Family housing residents should be alert to weather reports for hard freeze warnings. Pipes in unheated areas and those exposed to outside air should be insulated. Outside faucets are also susceptible to freezing, and should be insulated as well. Opening cabinet doors under sinks where pipes are near exterior walls allows the pipes to remain at near room temperature. During periods of extreme cold when water is not used regularly, allow a small amount of water to drip from faucets to prevent water from freezing in the pipes.

The Self Help Program offers foam insulation for pipes and freeze caps (insulating covers for outside faucets) to troop and family housing occupants. The Self Help office is located in building 385 on Vibbert Avenue and is open for troop issue from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15. Family housing issue hours are 9 a.m. to 4:15. For more information, call 545-3633.

If going away for vacation, leave a key with a neighbor and ask him or her to check the apartment for broken or frozen pipes if a hard freeze occurs. In addition to possibly preventing any freeze damage, repair personnel will be able to gain easy access to the quarters if a repair needs to be made. If a pipe does burst, try to locate the nearest cut-off valve and turn the water off. Then call the Work Order Section at 545-2135. Operators are on duty 24 hours a day. Customers should have the correct building number and be prepared to give the exact location of the break. This can save time. During extreme weather conditions the phone lines may be very busy, be patient if you are asked to hold.

Preventing frozen pipes takes little time and effort and could be an important investment when compared to the consequences of not being prepared.

If you have any questions on this or any energy-related problem, contact the Energy Office at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

Family conference set

University of Georgia

The University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service announces that Columbus has been selected as a site to participate in the 1991 Family Community Leadership Institute, a program funded through a Kellogg Grant.

Family Community Leadership (FCL) is an adult education program that has these goals:

1. Educational Improvements: to broaden participants' understanding of complex public issues and methods useful in their resolution.

2. Increased Participation in Public Affairs; to increase effective participation of family members in resolving important public issues affecting the quality of family life.

3. Organizational Development: to strengthen and further develop educational support systems for public affairs leaders and groups involved in resolving public issues.

According to Joanne Cavis, City Extension Agent for the Columbus Extension Service, "We are looking for potential or emerging leaders who have had little or no experience in leadership or public affairs to apply for the FCL Program.

The ideal volunteer is a positive, energetic committed person who has the ability to recognize the uniqueness of individuals and work as a team member to share the knowledge gained as a participant in the Family Community Leadership Institute."

"Too often the responsibility for dealing with complex social problems has fallen solely on local government officials. Citizens can make important contributions by becoming more involved in public policy decisions that affect their lives and those of their neighbors. There are many chances for individuals to be leaders in their communities, but sometimes they need help in getting started. That's where the Georgia Family Community Leadership program comes in," she continued.

Nominations for participation in the Family Community Leadership program are being sought.

Contact the Columbus office of The University of Georgia Extension Service for applications between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

The office is located in the Columbus Government Center, tower building on the ground floor. Call 571-4793 for more information. Deadline for completion of nomination and application form is Jan. 1.

Leadership and public policy decision-making skills are taught to participants who, in turn, team-teach other groups of citizens from their respective communities. The educational workshops help people become more knowledgeable and effective in influencing public policy decisions.

Participants commit to contribute 96 hours of time to train others after their 50-hour FCL Institute training to become Certified Family Community Leadership Trainers. Participants learn proven techniques for getting groups to work together. FCL has a multiplier effect.

While the ultimate aim is more informed participation in community and public affairs, the FCL educational program avoids advocacy on public issues. Only after completing their FCL training and commitment to teaching are participants expected to become actively involved in community and public issues.

When will the Columbus Family Community Leadership Institute Program take place?

The District FCL Trainers will conduct the Columbus FCL Institute during January, February and March, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. The Institute leaders plan to train 10 teams of six members. Then community leadership education programs will be held throughout Columbus during 1991. All groups are eligible for the programs without regard to race, color, national origin, sex, religion, or handicap status. The program empowers individuals, helps them get started in becoming involved in that community. . .to make a positive difference in bringing about solutions to complex problems that affect families.

The first public information meeting will be Nov. 29 from 7 to 8 p.m. It will be held in the Columbus Government Center in the University of Georgia Extension Service conference room (tower building, ground floor).

For more information and meeting reservations, call 571-4793.

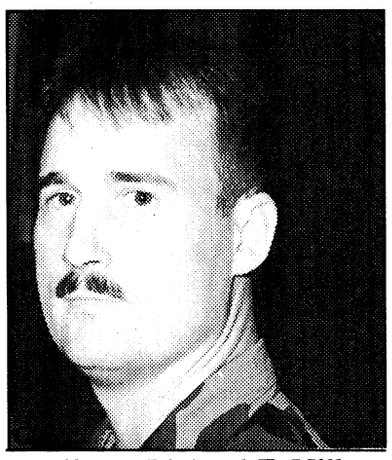
Post picks top instructor

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning has named an engineering instructor in the Combined Arms and Tactics Division the top instructor of the year.

Staff Sgt. Richard F. Miller, an engineer from Co. B, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., was selected for the top spot.

"I am truly happy to receive this honor," said Miller. "It's good to know that hard work and dedication still pay off," he added.



Staff Sgt. Richard F. Miller

Miller, an instructor of the demolition class, has been stationed at Fort Benning for the past two years.

"To be selected for the spot, you must go through a series of evaluations," explained Miller. "Interviews, boards, the works. There a lot of excellent instructors here, and to go up against and excel among your peers is a great achievement," he said.

"The toughest part of the evaluation is preparing and presenting a class for the evaluation board."Miller admitted.

"You have to make learning a fun experience for the students. Even if you have to present the most boring but necessary material in the world, you have to find that certain angle, that one route to making the class interesting as well as informative. I try to reach every student. I'm glad that I have been a vital part of a system that works."

Visiting the troops

Former Secretary of the Army John O. Marsh takes time out to greet the troops at the Airborne Walk. Marsh is visiting Fort Benning to address Officer Candidate School classes, visit Wigle Hall, view the Airborne Walk and attend an OCS reunion.

Holiday meal set for families

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The post dining facilities are offering a special Thanksgiving meal for members of the Fort Benning community and their guests.

The 150 family members and 125 retirees planning to attend the special holiday meal will be treated to the best of the traditional holiday fare, according to Ed Hilton, chief of the Installation Food Services.

"The menu consists of roast turkey, giblet gravy, cornbread dressing, mashed potatoes, glazed sweet potatoes, seasoned spinach, corn o'brien, garden vegetable salad, zero salad dressing, jellied spiced peach salad, cloverleaf rolls, pumpkin pie, margarine or butter, pecan pie, fruitcake, hard candy, mixed nuts, lowfat milk, tea, coffee and soft drinks," he said.

Family members are required only to pay the food cost of $2.45. Their guests are required to pay food cost plus the surcharge, totaling $5.60.

Safety first in choosing gifts

By Alfreda Gibson
Preventive Medicine Service

It's gift-giving time again! How do you decide which toys to purchase for your children? Do clever advertisements, or your own childhood needs provide the basis for your choices? What ever the reasons you have for buying toys for your children consider toy safety first. Don't buy the trauma and hysteria that occur with unsafe toys.

Here are a few helpful hints to protect your children from toy-inflicted injuries:

● Teach your children to play safely with their toys. Be sure they understand "you don't throw trucks."

● Have children pick up toys after play. This way you avoid a parent accident, too.

● Toys of brittle plastic or glass can be broken easily leaving dangerous sharp, cutting edges. Wooden, metal, and plastic toys sometimes have sharp edges due to poor construction. Inspect these items carefully.

● Tiny toys and toys with small removable parts can be swallowed or become lodged in a child's windpipe, ears or nose. The squeakers in some squeeze toys can be removed and swallowed. The seams of poorly constructed stuffed dolls or animals can break open and release small pellets that can be swallowed or inhaled.

Consider the child's age and maturity level before purchasing toys with small removable parts.

● Broken toys can expose dangerous prongs and knife-like sharp points. Pins and staples on dolls' clothes, hair accessories can easily puncture and unsuspecting child. Even a teddy bear or stuffed toy can have barbed eyes or wired limbs which can cut or stab. Once again thoroughly inspect the item.

● Toy caps and some noise-making guns and other toys can produce sounds at noise levels that can damage hearing. The Federal Hazardous Substances Act regulations require the following label on boxes of caps producing noises above a certain level: "WARNING DO NOT FIRE CLOSER THAN 1 FOOT TO THE EAR. DO NOT USE INDOORS."

● Projectile-guided missiles and similar flying toys can be turned into weapons and injure eyes in particular. Children should never be permitted to play with adult lawn darts or other hobby or sporting equipment that have sharp points. Arrows or darts used by children should have soft cork tips. rubber suction cups or other protective tips intended to prevent injury.

● Electrical toys that are improperly constructed, wired, or used can shock or burn. Electrical toys must meet mandatory Federal safety requirements for maximum surface temperatures, electrical construction and must feature prominent warning labels. Electrical toys with heating elements are only recommended for children over eight years old. Children should be taught to use electrical toys cautiously and under adult supervision.

● Toys that may be safe for older children like a chemistry or hobby set can be extremely dangerous in the hands of little ones. Make sure you purchase toys for children that match both the childs age and maturity level.

The average American parent will spend a sizable portion of the family budget for birthday and Christmas toys. Practice toy safety and you won't "get more than you pay for."

To further assist you in selecting age-appropriate and safe toys, please join Community Health Nursing for a Toy Safety Program, Nov. 28, and 30, and Dec. 1, 5, and 7 at the Main PX from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Turkey lovers hold cook-off for young, upcoming chefs

National Turkey Federation

The National Turkey Federation will have its second annual national "Turkey Lovers' Recipe Contest" designed for young chefs aged 12 to 18.

Contest entries will be accepted through April 1. Each entry will be judged on three parts: the recipe (60 percent), an essay describing the nutritional content of the recipe (20 percent) and an essay describing the food handling techniques to follow when preparing the recipe (20 percent).

Recipes, using at least one pound of fresh or fully-cooked turkey mean, will be judged by a panel of food professionals for taste, originality, appearance, appeal, simplicity and two written essays.

One essay should describe nutritional quality of the recipe and the other essay should describe proper food handling techniques to use when preparing and storing the recipe.

Essays, not to exceed 200 words, must be printed or typed on an 8½-x11-inch piece of paper and attached to the recipe.

The lucky teen-age winner will receive $2,000 for his/her original recipe. Other prizes to be awarded include: second place, $1,000; third place, $750; fourth place, $500; and fifth place, $250.

For more information, write to: Turkey Lovers' Recipe Contest, National Turkey Federation, 11319 Sunset Hills Road, Reston, Va. 22090, or call (703) 435-7209.

Scholarship available for arts camp; grant provided by Emerson Electric

Interlochen Arts Center

Through a grant provided by St. Louis-based Emerson Electric Co., high school students are eligible to apply for a Governor's Scholar Award to the world-famous Interlochen Arts Camp in northern Michigan.

The Governor's Scholar Award is a $2,790 scholarship, which provides full tuition, room and board for the eight-week summer program.

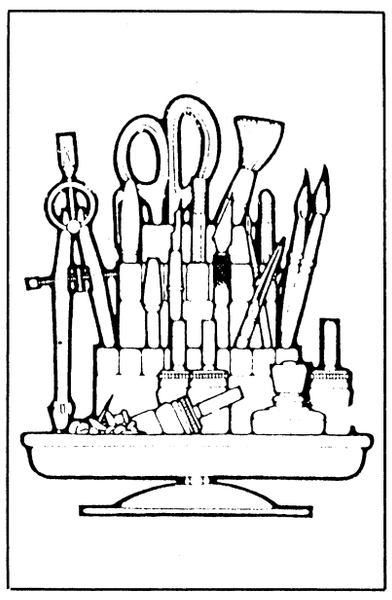
Applicants must be in grades nine through 12 and be proficient on violin, viola, cello, bass, wind or percussion instruments and harp. They must submit a taped solo performance with their application.

One student from each state, the District of Columbia, and Puerto Rico will receive one of 52 Governor's Scholar Awards. Winners will be determined solely on merit.

Applications must be postmarked by Jan. 21 and winners will be announced by March 1.

Established in 1985, the Governor's Scholar Award recognizes exceptional high school musicians and gives them an opportunity to home their talents in an environment that is recognized around the world as the premier training ground for young artists.

"Thanks to the generosity of Emerson Electric Co., we can provide some of this nation's top young artists with an experience unlike any other," said Interlochen President Dean Boal.



Charles Knight, chairman and chief executive officer of Emerson Electric Co., wholeheartedly supports Interlochen's commitment to youth and arts education.

"It's essential that the private sector encourages young artists to continue their training. To do that, we have to provide financial support, so they can pursue their commitment to music. The future of our great symphony orchestras depends on it," Knight said.

Interlochen Arts Camp (formerly the National Music Camp) was founded in 1927 by Dr. Joseph E. Maddy, a Kansas-born music educator who looked to Michigan's north woods for a permanent home for young musicians, actors, dancers, and visual artists.

Every year, more than 2,500 students from around the world attend the camp, which is often featured on network and cable television and in national publications.

Interlochen Arts Camp students, who range from 8 to 18-years-old, enjoy a student and faculty radio of 7 to 1. They meet and work with distinguished guest conductors and guest artists such as The Canadian Brass, Doc Severinsen, Lorin Maazel, Bob James, and the Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, and Cleveland symphony orchestras.

The camp along with Interlochen Arts Academy, this nation's premier fine arts high school, and WIAA-FM, a charter member of National Public Radio, compose Interlochen Centers for the Arts.

The 1,200-acre campus is recognized worldwide as a leading arts advocate; a model and innovative teaching center; and an outstanding presenter of artistic achievement.

For more information, or to obtain an application for the Governor's Scholar Award, write the Governor's Scholar Program, Interlochen Arts Camp, P.O. Box 199, Interlochen, Mich., 49643-0199, or call (616) 276-9221.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Virginia L. Carlton
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I rented an apartment which needed lots of repairs when I signed the lease. The landlord promised to make the repairs at that time, but did not put it in the written lease. The landlord now refuses to make the repairs. What can I do? Does my landlord have to make the repairs like he promised?

My landlord has not even made the repairs that he promised to make in the written lease. Can I quit paying rent until my landlord makes these repairs?

A. Georgia law states that while a landlord cannot transfer his duty to keep the rented premises in good repair to the tenant, the duty to repair applies only to latent defects, i.e. those unknown at the time the lease is signed.

If a tenant is aware of the need for certain repairs when the lease is executed, he rents subject to those defects and the landlord has no duty to make repairs unless the landlord expressly promises to do so. Most leases provide that the writing is the entire agreement and that there are no modifications unless in writing and signed by both parties.

The unfortunate tenant believes the landlord when the landlord says that he will make the necessary repairs.

However, the tenant soon finds himself without a remedy since that promise was not in writing, and of course, no one witnessed the landlord make the oral promise to repair.

When a landlord agrees in the lease to make certain repairs, a landlord's failure to complete these repairs will not usually justify a forfeiture of the rent. You must continue to pay unless the premises becomes untenantable and a constructive eviction results.

The landlord gets a reasonable opportunity to make the repairs. If the landlord fails to make the repairs, the tenant can make the repairs. The tenant may then demand reimbursement from the landlord or the tenant can occupy the premises without repair.

VA Q & A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q. I am an Army reservist facing possible deployment to the Middle East. I am concerned about recent news stories regarding insurance companies rejecting new life insurance applications from military personnel. It seems these companies want to limit their financial risks in view of the current situation in the Middle East. Does the Department of Veterans Affairs provide life insurance protection for military personnel?

A. Life insurance is available to all members of the military, regardless of where they serve, through the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance (SGLI) program. Military personnel receive up to $50,000 of life insurance protection under the SGLI program, supervised by the Department of Veterans Affairs. Coverage is automatically issued to all individuals who enter into active duty with the military. If a member of the uniformed services does not wish to be covered, declination must be in writing. Currently, 99.9 percent of all individuals serving on active duty with the military are covered by SGLI.

Q. I understand that the Department of Veterans Affairs is required by law to recover costs from health insurers for medical care provided to non-service-connected veterans covered by their policies and plans. What if I don't have medical insurance? Will I lose my eligibility to receive care at VA?

A. Absolutely not. Having insurance, or not having it, does not affect your eligibility for care. Having or not having insurance also does not affect your income level that determines your category of eligibility under the VA means test. VA does not consider insurance as income.

Q. Will the Department of Veterans Affairs billing my insurance company for medical care raise my insurance costs?

A. So far, there have been no reported instances of insurers raising premiums due to claims being filed by the government. Health insurance is intended to cover medical services listed in your policy and the premiums you, your spouse or employer pay are for those services. Since you are using your policy to allow VA to recover costs, the insurance is being used as intended.

Q. Is there a toll-free number for the Department of Veterans Affairs Insurance Center?

A. Yes. Please call the VA InsuranceServiceat 1-800-669-8477 if you have questions or need changes on your VA insurance policy.

Q. My spouse and I are veterans of the armed forces and plan to take advantage of our Montgomery GI Bill benefits to attend college. May we claim each other as dependents?

Yes. A veteran may claim his or her spouse as a dependent for education benefits, provided a certified copy of the marriage certificate appears in both VA files.

Q. What type of income should I report on my annual eligibility verification report to continue my VA pension benefits?

A. Income from all sources must be reported. VA will determine what sources and amounts will be counted and the amount of income to be excluded.

Q. Do veterans with compensable service-connected disabilities have to pay a funding fee for Department of Veterans Affairs home loan guarantees?

A. No.

Q. I am a reservist and have been called to active duty because of the situation in the Middle East. Will this active duty enable me to switch entitlements for education benefits under the Montgomery GI Bill?

A. It is unlikely a reservist would be eligible for the active-duty portion of the law. Activation by the President is initially for 90 days with an extension not to exceed 180 days. To be eligible for active-duty benefits, the veteran must have served 20 months of a two-year obligation or 30 months of a three-year-or-more obligation, unless discharged because of a service-connected disability, hardship or involuntary reduction in force.

Q. Why does the VA medical center ask if I have medical insurance when I go for treatment? I thought my VA care is free.

A. While VA's services may cost a veteran nothing, they are paid for a federal tax dollars. The law requires VA to recover those costs if they are covered by private insurance. This makes VA similar to other health-care providers.

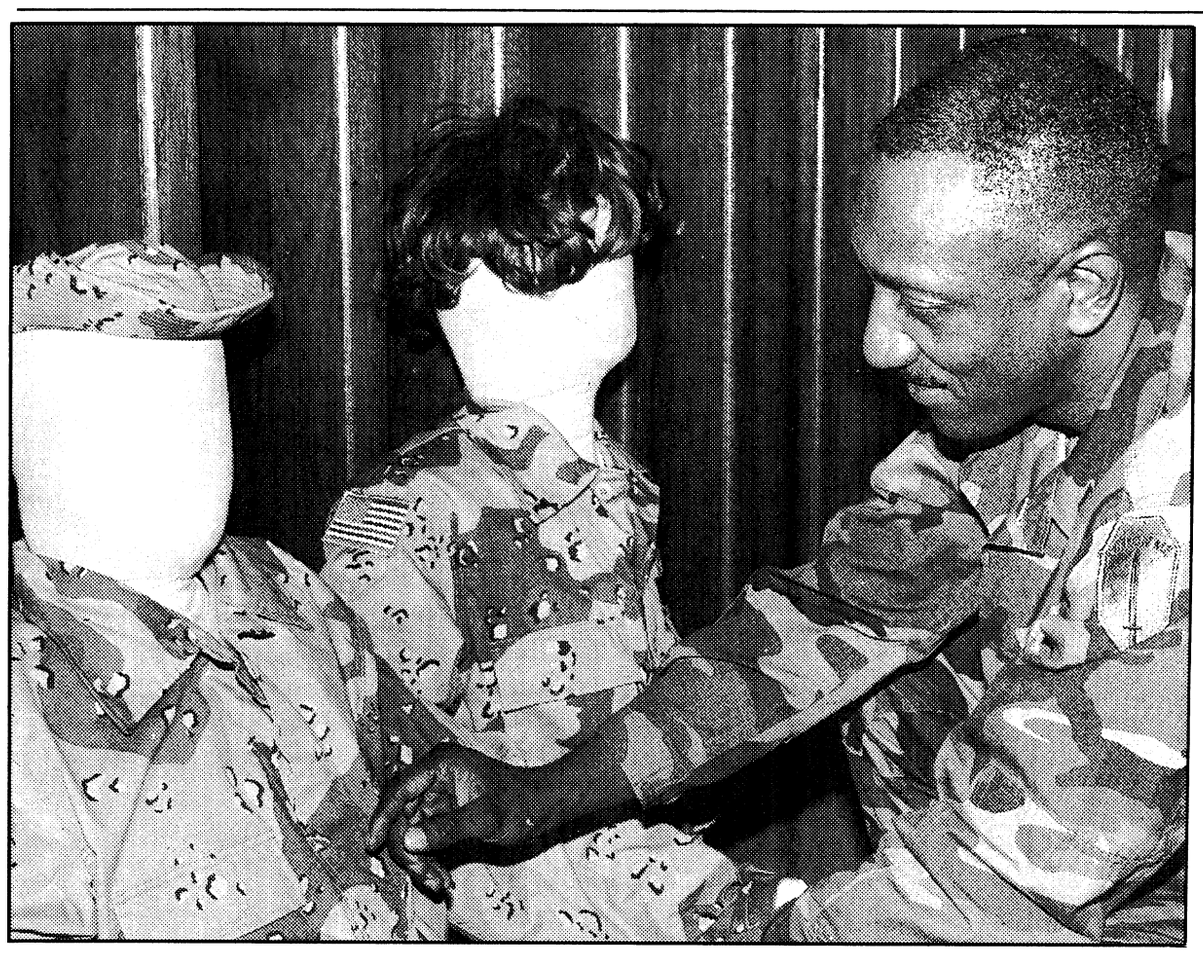
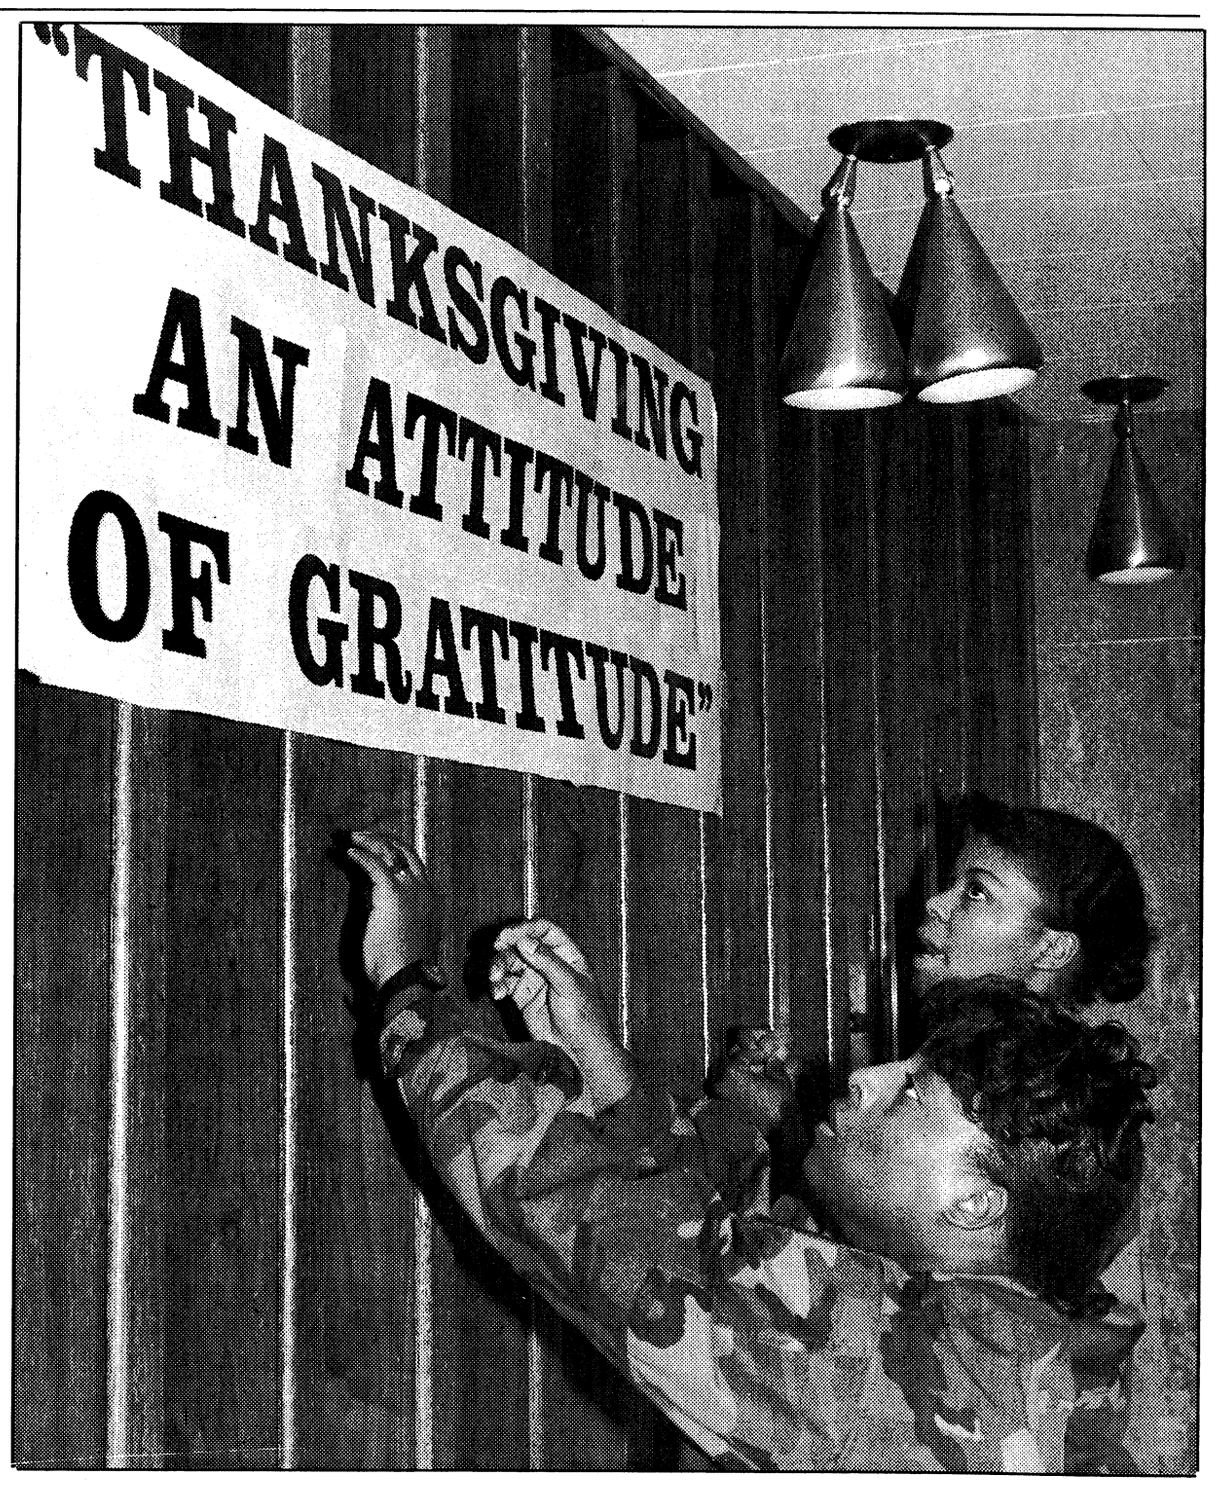
Rest assured that valuables are secure during deployments or temporary duty. Sizes range from 4'X4'X4' to 4'X4'X8' to 4'X8'X8'. Prices start at $13 per month. For more information, call 545-7978 or 545-3504.

SPIRITUAL



Debra Galle

Sgt. 1st Class Walter Holloway, a chaplain's assistant, sets up the Thanksgiving display.



Debra Galle

Sgt. Edwina Gwynn(r), and Sgt. Donna Perryman take on an "attitude of gratitude" while assisting Holloway in setting up the Thankgiving display in Building 4. The display depicts the stark differences between the holiday meals that will be enjoyed here and the ones for troops in Saudi Arabia this year.

Thanksgiving is time to grow

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

In the air like a light fog, a complicated mood seems to hover over everything and everyone at Fort Benning.

It's not getting any easier.

A woman buys dozens of snack food items - perfect for a package destined for a Saudi Arabian mail call.

Several "shield spouses" wait in line at the post office, laden with custom labeled boxes in all shapes and sizes.

"GOD BLESS OUR TROOPS" still adorns many signs on Victory Drive and other areas in Columbus. Many groups and individuals continue to let troops know they are supported and cared for.

Every single person has an opinion about the future of the crisis — the bank teller, the school teacher, the lady who works at Burger King, even the Girl Scout who is busy selling date planners door to door, will tell you their thoughts.

A tension and feeling of uncertainty and hurt is seen in the eyes of everyone. If the military member of the family is not yet in the desert, the family wonders when or if they will be. No one is safe from caring.

In the middle of feelings of grief and pain, the jolliest days of the year arrive whether we are ready for them or not. Christmas is within reach, in fact, packages are already en route to our soldiers.

Thanksgiving is the first of the holidays for many to survive, if not enjoy as much as possible. For most families, it is a new and difficult experience to celebrate without our soldiers. Those who have weathered other conflicts that entwined family holidays may have had experience behind them, but the pain is ahead.

Many think about how tough life can be sometimes. They have moments of feeling angry with the system, the Army, Saddam Hussein, our family, friends, and neighbors.

The empty chairs at the table are saved for the soldiers who are not forgotten.

"There is no such thing as a problem without a gift in its hands." An old saying like this seems to help face Operation Desert Shield, if people try and look for the gifts.

Believe it or not, the gifts are there. They are in a cherished letter written from thousands of miles away, words which may never have been said outside this situation.

They could be in the smiles of children who delight in making special packages, gifts and letters for the parent in the big sandbox. Children have a chance to learn the true meaning of giving with love.

Gifts may be found in the realization that others do care for us when the going is tough. Phone calls form far away family and friends, smiles and genuine friendship pouring from neighbors who may have otherwise kept to themselves.

These of course are not enough to take the pain away. The old cloud and silver lining stuff just doesn't help when tears are falling from loneliness.

Experts say that the tears must be allowed and experienced as part of the grieving process.

Thanksgiving could be approached without simply enduring the pain of separation. It could be a time instead to grow.

It is so easy to cry, "Why me", or "Why now, when everything was going so well?" If the sorrow can be set aside long enough to make a declaration of surviving and growing, the turkey may lay easier on our stomachs.

We shouldn't neglect our holiday at home, even though our soldiers are away.

Prayer of Thanksgiving

USAIC Chaplain's Office

Heavenly Father, we thank you for all the blessings that you have so graciously bestowed upon us during this past year.

We thank you for our Nation. Help us to preserve the heritage which was given to us by our forefathers. May we always be the defenders of freedom and the keepers of peace. Defend our land, we pray, against evil from within and without, and make us a blessing to all the world.

We thank you for our family and friends. Help us to be worthy of their trust and loyalty. And grant us, O Lord, the patience, love, and wisdom to place their needs before our own.

Bless the many peoples of the world today, especially those who lack adequate food, clothing, and shelter. May we, as individuals and as a Nation, make a greater effort this coming year to share our blessings with the less fortunate.

Thank you for the bounty of this table which is representative of all your many blessings to us. Amen.

Bi-City plans events for Christmas holiday

Cities' Parks and Recreation Department sponsors festivities

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Columbus and Phenix City Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring a Bi-City Christmas Parade on Dec. 8.

The parade will begin at 10 a.m. in Phenix City from the Broad Street Extension, located one block north of the Dillingham Street Bridge, and continue down 13th Street. The parade will cross the 14th Street Bridge into Columbus and proceed down Broad Street to Sixth Street.

In Phenix City, a special viewing stand will be located across from City Hall Annex for dignitaries and their wives. The 283rd Army Band and local Tri-County High School bands will perform.

The Phenix City Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring "Christmas on Moon Lake" at Idle Hour Park. Opening night festivities will begin on Dec. 13, at 6:30 p.m. with a special patriotic dedication to the men and women of Operation Desert Shield.

Entertainment will include a performance by the 283rd Army Band and a special musical presentation by Pat Nelson. Santa Claus will be there to listen to all the special wishes of the children.

This is the first year a nautical parade of decorations and lighted boats will be a part of the Christmas festivities. Moon Lake will be open to the public from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Dec. 13 through Dec. 25.

For more information, call 291-4719.

Any unit or support groups interested in entering a display scene at Moon Lake should call 291-4719 by Nov. 27.

The only criteria for entering, is that the scene must have a Christmas theme and be lighted. Phenix City Parks will provide an area for display and security will be provided 24 hours a day.

President visits 197th

Bush spends Thanksgiving with Sledgehammer soldiers

By Todd F. Tolson
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — "They don't call you 'Forever Forward' for nothing." That was the judgment made by President George Bush in a speech to 197th Infantry Brigade soldiers during his Thanksgiving visit to American troops in the Persian Gulf.

Out of all of the units in the Army, the commander in chief decided to eat Thanksgiving dinner with the men of the 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry.

The president arrived around noon Thanksgiving Day to a cheering crowd of soldiers.

Accompanying the president was his wife, Barbara, Senators George Mitchell and Bob Dole, Congressmen Tom Foley and Bob Micheal, and General H. Norman Schwarzkopf, commander in chief of the U.S. Central Command.

"Thank you for the warm welcome, and I mean really warm," Bush said, referring to the 95-degree temperature during his visit.

"To Colonel Ted Reid, thank you and just let me give a special salute to our host for this visit, the 2nd Bn., 18th Inf.," Bush said, evoking a chorus of cheers from the crowd.

"The XVIII Airborne Corps, with the strength of the 197th Infantry Brigade, has spearheaded what history will judge as one of the most important deployments of military power in the last half century."

The president spoke very highly of the brigade when referring to himself in 1944 during World War II spending Thanksgiving Day on a ship in the Philippines as a carrier pilot.

He said that during that time, "the predecessors of the 197th Infantry Brigade were on the front lines of the fight for Europe." Thank you for standing tall against aggression then and now.

"Now, almost 50 years later, there are still proud troops like you ready to stand in defense of peace and freedom. Believe me, the whole world thanks you," Bush said.

Many soldiers were inspired by the president's speech.

"It was a good motivator," said Staff Sgt. Alfred A. Posey, of 2nd Bn., 18th Inf.

"His coming here lets the soldiers know that he does care," Posey added.

"It was a good speech," said Sgt. Eric J. Kuyper of the 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, who was able to meet the president. "He stated his concerns about the Middle East situation and gave us a sense of purpose."

The president signed autographs and stood with soldiers for pictures before proceeding through the "chow line."

President and Mrs. Bush were served dinner in a mobile kitchen trailer the same way many brigade soldiers are served daily.

The menu for the Thanksgiving dinner was shrimp cocktail, roast turkey, ham, roast beef, mashed and sweet potatoes, mixed vegetables, salad, cranberry sauce, fresh fruit, eggnog, and soft drinks.

Several soldiers sat with the president, Mrs. Bush and congressional leaders for the Thanksgiving meal.

Spec. Lynette D. Dilbert of the 197th Support Battalion got a chance to talk with the President and Mrs. Bush.

"I know they have a lot on their minds," Dilbert said. "But, they took the time to visit us and talk. They are just people like the rest of us. We talked about Saudi Arabia, how they were doing and the weather," Dilbert said.

Command Sgt. Maj. Jimmie G. Bowles, brigade command sergeant major, presented Bush with a 197th Inf. Bde. baseball cap after the meal.

The president put on the cap and said, "I'd much rather wear this than that desert hat."

The visit ended with the president shaking soldiers' hands and wishing them happy Thanksgiving.

Facing enemy lines

Spec. Curtis Haag (kneeling) watches as two soldiers from Co. B, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., pass through the forward friendly lines during squad training exercises recently conducted by the battalion in Saudi Arabia. Haag, who acted as the forward friendly unit commander, gave squad and platoon members going through the course intelligence on the "enemy" force they would be facing. Story and more photos on B-1.

Army to halt separations

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — An expanded "Stop Loss" program that halts virtually all voluntary discharges from the Army is part of a package of Desert Shield support measures announced Nov. 23 at the Pentagon.

The revised Stop Loss, which Army officials say is expected to prevent normal separations and retirements for almost everyone in the service, accompanies a reassignments freeze for overseas soldiers and the cancellation of the traditional two-week holiday break at Army schools.

A statement released Nov. 23 at the Pentagon said the Army was given authority to expand the Stop Loss because of the deployment of additional forces to Saudi Arabia. "The Army requires additional manning for those forces deploying, support of those forces, and other forces required to maintain worldwide readiness," it said.

The authority was delegated to Army Secretary Michael P.W. Stone by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

Army officials say the new Stop Loss is expected to prevent:

- Voluntary end-of-service separations for officer and enlisted soldiers in all specialties.
- Voluntary retirements after Dec. 1 for soldiers with less than 30 years active federal service.
- The release of soldiers ineligible for retention because of local bars to re-enlistment, fitness test failures, failure to meet Army weight standards or declinations of continued service.

They add, however, that details on the revised Stop Loss will be sent to Army personnel offices worldwide as soon as possible.

Some exceptions are expected to apply: mandatory retirements; qualitative management program eliminations; soldiers with approved retirement dates who also begin terminal leave before Dec. 1; and hardship cases.

The original Stop Loss, which began Sept. 1, affected about 2,300 soldiers monthly in certain specialties only; it also did not prevent scheduled retirements.

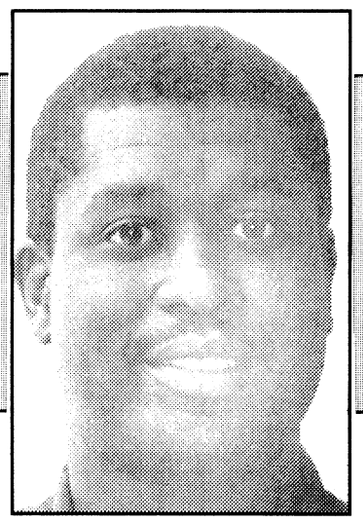
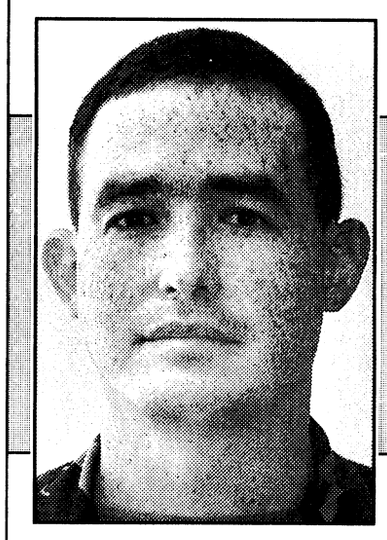
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

What do you think about the current trend in the Army to reduce smoking?

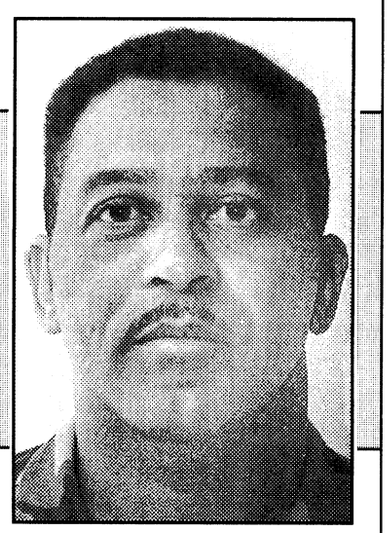


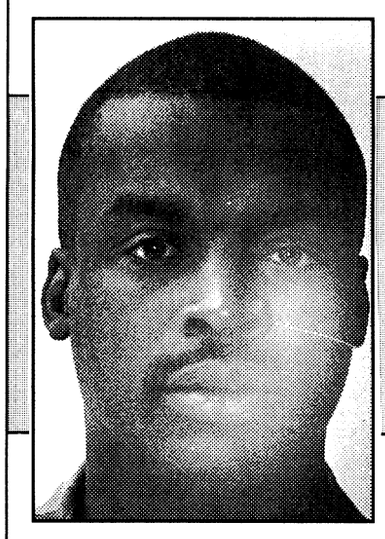
Staff Sgt. Quinton T. Harvey, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "A person should be allowed to smoke as long as they respect a non-smoker's right to clean air."



Sgt. 1st Class Israel C. Rodriguez, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think it's wonderful. If the Army makes 'no smoking' a regulation, soldiers would not smoke. The end result would be healthier soldiers, thus bringing about a stronger, more fit-to-win Army overall."

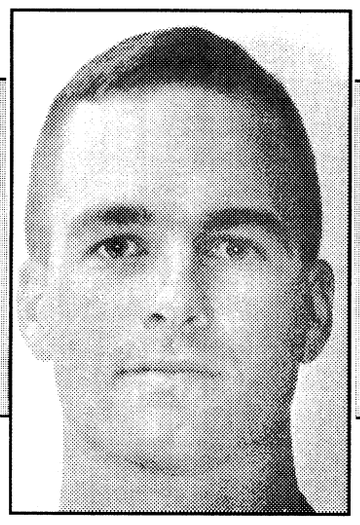
Master Sgt. James E. Jackson, Co. A, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I smoked for over 15 years. After I stopped smoking, my physical training became much better, and I feel healthier. Everyone in the Army should just quit."

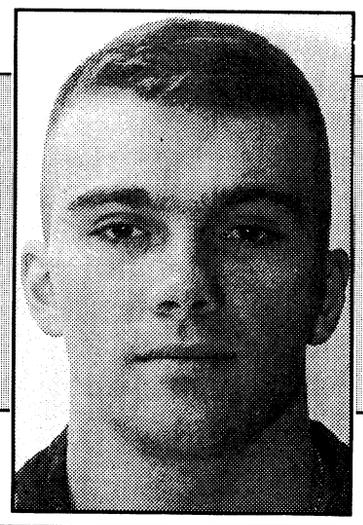




Sgt. 1st Class Marty D. Carson, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "Smoking should be restricted, but not cut out altogether. For those who wish to smoke, it should a matter of personal choice."

2nd Lt. William R. Kundinger Jr., Co. B, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I'm glad that the Army is staying current. Our society is shifting toward staying fit, and being tobacco-free is a major positive step to healthier living."





2nd Lt. Kurt A. Mosher, Co. D., 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. — "I think that the Army is moving in the right direction. It's really a good idea for all soldiers to stop smoking and to evaluate the negative effect that smoking has on them as well the people around them."

COMMENTARY

Some folk forget living on post is a privilege

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Once a quarter the post holds a "town meeting." Representatives from all the units, housing areas, hospital, post exchange, commissary and staff attend.

I attended the last one. I have some thoughts on the issues that were raised that I was afraid to voice in person.

● Issue one: Parents complained about kids fighting on the way to and from school. They want school officials or military police to control it.

Answer: Gimme a break. It's traditional for kids to fight after and before school. That's how they cement relationships. That's how sharp-eyed little guys get gum money. They pick it up out of the dirt after it falls from the fighters' pockets. Kids who don't want to fight can train for the Olympics by running.

● Issue two: Lines in commissaries and PXs. Non-commissioned officers complain because their soldiers in uniform don't have cutting rights; family members and retirees complain because soldiers cut in front of them.

Answer: Soldiers really don't care. If they aren't waiting in line there, they're probably waiting in line somewhere else, or they're doing something back at the company. I think soldiers in uniform have more time to spend in line than civilians (who by the way are also in their uniforms).

● Issue three: Single soldiers don't shop in the commissary; they feel like it's off limits to them.

Answer: The commissary should stock a row of shelves with a sign that reads, "single soldiers." There, soldiers who can never find what they want will be able to find their basic needs — stuff to go with their beer, shaving cream, etc.

● Issue four: PX prices for clothes. Some say they're too high. Others bemoan the cheap quality of men's clothing.

Answer: Hot news flash. Don't worry about the single soldier. He has more discretionary income than the commanding general. Plus, he'll take that income and buy his psychedelic clothes at one of the specialty shops. Go ahead and stock the sans-belt, stretch polyesters for the colonels and master sergeants — just put up a warning sign that entering that area can be hazardous to one's health. "Aaack, I'm having a polyester attack. I can't breathe."

● Issue five: Need a light for the trail leading to the scout hut.

Answer: This is another "gimme a break." I thought scouts were trained to find their way in the dark. Further, I thought basic issue for scouts was a flashlight. Mothers, what are we raising?

● Issue six: Street addresses. They're either non-existent or too small or worn to read.

Answer: Let's do away with rank and name signs (isn't that a security violation?). In their place, we'll hang the house number and each time there's a change in occupant, instead of picking up a new rank and name sign, he or she will get a new house number in case the old one got weathered and hard to see.

● Issue seven: Litter on the drop zone. The 507th picks up tons of garbage there daily. The MPs don't have the staff to patrol the place.

Answer: Having spent 60 percent of my career on police call, I would love to get issued a sniper rifle and be put on litter patrol. There's a $300 fine for anyone convicted of littering. Split the difference with citizens who catch these guys and the numbers will dwindle real fast. We'll get professional bounty hunters who earn their living looking for litterers. It beats sending out an AWACS or setting up anti-intrusion devices. Cheaper too.

● Issue eight: Screen doors. Some homes don't have them. Residents want them so they can open up the house for ventilation but still have security and be protected from bugs.

Answer: Good idea, but I don't think you'll get much security or protection from bugs from having a screen door. Buy a fan.

One message that came through loud and clear is the post is not going to put up with soldiers who can't control their family members. One issue was BB guns, the other thefts and vandalism.

I have to think if some family member is snatched up for keying a car, stealing a bike, shooting out windows, violating curfew, etc., his parents' days on post are numbered.

Folks tend to forget living on post is a privilege, not a right. It's a privilege that will become even more dear if the price of gas and electricity continue to rise.

My final thought on this very entertaining meeting. It sounds like too many parents want the Army to raise their children and take care of them.

Not the Army's job. Soldiers are paid. Soldiers are adults, hopefully married to adults and we all need to learn to take care of ourselves. The assistance the post provides is a bonus, not a guarantee.

LETTER

Reader wants to know about support groups

Where can Desert Shield family members whose sponsor's unit is located at another post find a support group?

My husband was stationed at Ft. Benning previously, then served 24 months in Germany, returned to the states on a permanent change of station to Ft. Hood, Texas, and was deployed within days of his arrival there.

That left my family behind in the Ft. Benning area with no unit affiliation support group.

I wonder if we are the only family so affected? I've had no response to my letters for information to Ft. Hood.

Can you help?

Karen Moody

"Saudi Sand"

By Douglas Nunan

Here we sit in the Saudi Sand,
Far away from our homeland.
Standing up for the rights of others,
Side by side with our own brothers.

Hear the prayer chant out loud,
Clear blue sky not even a cloud.
And as I sit here and write this ode,
Next to Tent City, our humble abode.
My thoughts are mixed on what to say.
Cause Saddam Hussein might make our day.
So as we wait for him, to show his hand,
Here we sit in the Saudi Sand.

Army to freeze reassignments, cancel two-week holiday break

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A reassignments freeze for overseas soldiers and cancellation of the tradition two-week holiday break at Army service schools are part of the expanded "Stop Loss" program announced Nov. 23 at the Pentagon.

The program halts virtually all voluntary discharges from the Army and is part of a package of Desert Shield support measures.

The overseas reassignment freeze will begin Saturday in Europe and Jan. 1 everywhere else, including Alaska and Hawaii. The extensions also apply to overseas soldiers who currently have orders reassigning them to the continental United States.

Exceptions to the freeze may be approved for soldiers:

- Awaiting involuntary separation or voluntary resignation in lieu of elimination or for the good of the service.
- For whom the extensions would pose an extreme hardship.
- On orders for a nominative assignment (unless deferred by Department of the Army).
- Awaiting medical discharges or mandatory retirements.
- Reclassifying from an intermediate nuclear forces specialty.
- Assigned to conventional forces in Europe units who are excess to U.S. Army Europe after cross-leveling.
- On orders for the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., or the Joint Readiness Training Center at Fort Chaffee, Ark.
- Slated to attend a leader development course en route to their new assignment (when practical). Army officials say these soldiers can be deleted or deferred, moved to a later class date or allowed to proceed.
- Other soldiers not affected by the Stop Loss returning from overseas for discharge.

Major Army commanders may grant exceptions to the involuntary extensions, such as in cases where a soldiers' household goods have already been shipped in preparation for reassignment. The authority may also be delegated to the first colonel in soldiers' chains of command.

In conjunction with the extensions, the Total Army Personnel Command is reviewing current orders reassigning stateside soldiers to overseas locations. Officials say some soldiers on orders for foreign service could be diverted to meet readiness requirements.

The cancellation of the traditional holiday break — commonly called "Exodus" — at formal Army schools will make more trained soldiers available ahead of schedule, officials say.

Included among Army schools that normally close during the Christmas-New Year's period are enlisted and officer initial-entry training and military occupational specialty-producing schools.

The revised Stop Loss is expected to prevent normal separations and retirements for almost everyone in the service, according to Army officials.

Training to continue through holidays

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning will continue to train soldiers during the Christmas and New Year holiday season, due to a recent decision announced by Army officials.

Secretary of the Army Michael P. W. Stone and Gen. Carl Vuono, Army chief of staff, announced the normal training break is being canceled to maintain Army readiness worldwide and to provide ongoing support for Operation Desert Shield.

At Fort Benning, that means about 4,000 soldiers undergoing initial entry training at the Infantry Training Center, and about 1,200 students at the Infantry School will continue to train during the holiday period.

The Infantry School conducts such courses as Officer Advanced Course, Infantry Officer Basic Course, Officer Candidate Course, Ranger School and instruction for non-commissioned officers.

Post officials are currently studying exactly which courses and which soldiers will be affected. They are also looking at ways to provide activities for soldiers to participate in on the traditional holidays.

In past years, the Association of the U.S. Army, through Operation Holiday, has provided tickets to various activities, to include athletic events for soldiers spending this time away from home.

Post officials are reviewing how the Army's decision to continue training during the Christmas holidays will impact on Operation Holiday.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

In attempting to warm their homes by using a fireplace, many people actually waste heat as it literally goes up in smoke. A fire on the hearth warms cool evenings and is a great way to save energy when a furnace is not used. However, if the furnace is operating, heat from the entire house can escape through the chimney.

One solution to the problem of wasted heat is to set the thermostat at a very low setting. Although some heat may still be lost, it will be limited if the thermostat is set at 50 degrees.

Closing off the room in which the fireplace is being used, also minimizes heat loss from the rest of the house. All doors and vents entering the room should be closed. Opening a nearby window about an inch will allow in enough air to feed the fire.

When the fireplace is not being used, close the damper. Eight percent of the heat in a house can escape up an open chimney.

Burning wood slowly saves fuel. Roaring fires waste fuel because most of the heat goes up the chimney.

Wood for fuel should be well-seasoned in order to burn most efficiently. Generally, it should be cut six to nine months prior to burning. If wood is cut during the summer, the leaves can be left on to pull more moisture from the wood. The percentage of moisture and weight of the wood determine its heat value as a fuel. Hickory and oak are excellent woods for use as fuel.

Firewood is being issued from 1 to 4:30 p.m. each Friday, directly across from the Main Post Service Station on Marchant Street. There is a 25 piece limit which is being strictly enforced. A military identification card and family self-help card are required. This will continue until the wood supply is depleted.

Chimneys should be checked often for creosote buildup. Creosote is caused by the condensation of unburned wood gases on the inside walls of the chimney. If allowed to remain too long, this can turn to carbon, creating a fire hazard. Although creosote can contain differing amounts of water, it is always dark brown and black, and has an acrid odor. Chimneys in need of cleaning should be reported to the DEH Work Order Section, 545-2135.

CFC exceeds goal

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The Combined Federal Campaign on post has reached and exceeded its $500,000 goal, according to Capt. Tyrone Kirk, post project officer for the campaign.

"We reached $562,000 at last count, and we have not tallied all of the returns yet," said Kirk.

The final figures will not be released until additional returns from Fort Benning units currently deployed to the Mideast have been counted, he said.

"There was a great amount of support from everyone on post, and that made the campaign a success," said Kirk.

"In spite of the absence of so many of our units now participating in Operation Desert Shield, we were still able to not only meet, but exceed our goal.

"Now, that's what I call outstanding," he said.

Military Police explain laws about crosswalks

Military Police Activity

Based on concerns expressed by the Fort Benning community, an explanation of the laws that govern the use of pedestrian crosswalks is provided for your use and personal safety.

The Georgia State Traffic Code defines a crosswalk as "any portion of a roadway at an intersection or elsewhere distinctly indicated for pedestrian crossing by lines or by other markings on the surface."

The Code further stipulates that the pedestrian has the right of way over vehicles in marked or unmarked crossings, except when they are controlled by either a traffic control device or traffic officer. Simply put, a motorist is required to yield to a pedestrian crossing the roadway in a crosswalk.

The Code also states that whenever any vehicle is stopped at a crosswalk to permit a pedestrian to cross the roadway, the driver of any other vehicle shall not overtake or pass the stopped vehicle.

Violators of these provisions can and will be cited by the Military Police. The typical fine for such offenses is $50.

Pedestrians also have a responsibility to cross roadways at intersections or marked crosswalks.

Though pedestrians at crosswalks have the right of way, they should ensure their intended path of travel is clear.

If a vehicle denies you the right of way while you are in a crosswalk, make a note of the type of vehicle, tag number and state, and report it in person to the Military Police Station.

Based upon your sworn witness statement, the Military Police will attempt to determine the operator of the vehicle and issue a citation.

The Military Police Activity is concerned with the welfare of each member of our community.

To prevent injury or loss of life, yield to pedestrians. For more information on Fort Benning's traffic laws, please call the Military Police Activity, Traffic Section, at 545-7241.

POST BRIEFS

Fort Benning to host TRADOC commanders

Fort Benning is the host site for two Training and Doctrine conferences next week.

The Training and Doctrine Commanders Conference, hosted by TRADOC Commander Gen. John W. Foss, will be Tuesday from 7:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. in Infantry Hall, Building 4. The Initial Entry Training Brigade Commanders Conference, hosted by Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, will be Wednesday and Thursday, also at Building 4.

The theme of the TRADOC Commanders Conference is TRADOC's Course in the 1990s. Conference attendees will focus on budget and manpower drawdowns and how they will approach and manage them in the future.

The conferences will be conducted in the East Wing of Infantry Hall.

OPERATION DESERT SHIELD

4th Cavalry soldiers adjust to desert life

By Todd F. Tolson
197th Infantry Brigade

Forward of all the other units from Fort Benning in Operation Desert Shield are the soldiers of Troop D, 4th Cavalry Regiment.

Even though they have a heavy training schedule and are apart from the Sledgehammer soldiers of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the Cav troop still finds time for rest and relaxation.

"Camped in Assembly Area Fort Apache, we are attached to the 2nd Battalion, 4th Cavalry Squadron, which is the divisional cavalry for the 24th Infantry Division," said Capt. Thomas DiMassimo Jr., Troop D, 4th Cavalry commander.

"One day a week, we make sure that the unit gets back here and we set up a program of recreation, worship and organized athletic activities."

Training is still paramount in the schedule. "For a while, we were conducting a mission for division, basically a screening operation," he said. "Contrary to reports, the unit was nowhere near the Kuwaiti border."

"Now, our scout platoons are going through a scout certification course. We are conducting improved TOW, or tube-launched, optically tracked, wire-guided (anti-tank missile) vehicle, TOW, and Dragon training.

In addition, tank crews are practicing for future tank live-fire." With training like that, soldiers appreciate time off.

With very limited resources, the cavalry soldiers are able to keep physically fit. One innovative soldier built a jungle gym out of scrap wood and metal.

"They want everybody to get in shape, and the best way to do it was to build something like this so we could slowly work out an exercise plan," said Spec. James Lamb, creator of the jungle gym. "It consists of an inclined sit up portion, .push-up stands, dip and pull-up bars."

The day recreation tent has playing cards and dominoes, radios, books, and video tapes. The bookshelf, television stand, tables and chairs were all built from spare wood.

The atmosphere is comfortable, and soldiers are usually laughing and joking.

"On their day off, the troops can take part in something if they want to or do nothing if they desire," said DiMassimo. "They can go to the tent, play volleyball or football, or just lie on their cots and write letters home, which many of them do."

As you look at Fort Apache, you will see a tire-lined dirt road, Arab tents and vehicles "dress right dress" as soldiers walk around in their gray physical training uniforms.

"Conditions are a lot better than I thought they would be," said Sgt. Craig Brooks, a medic with the troop.

"Everyone has tents, cots, showers and latrines. We get one down day as week and, if your vehicle is up and working, command maintenance day can be another half-day off.

"We have a laundry service available, but most of the guys prefer to do their own the old-fashioned way — with a bucket, soap and water," said Sgt. Broedwick Moore of the 3rd Tank Platoon. "We get Red Cross care packages and sundry packets of personal hygiene items."

In his spare time, Moore says, he enjoys reading the Bible and teaching Bible study. "Unlike other units, there are no telephones available in our sector except for emergency calls, so I'm sorry I can't call my wife," Moore said.

The soldiers have adjusted to their new desert home. "We're missing a lot of the creature comforts, but the soldiers are adapting pretty well," DiMassimo said.

"These soldiers have been trained to be able to live and fight off their primary vehicles in any environment." Their current living conditions with tents and cots are not bad at all.

As the sun sets on Fort Apache people are playing volleyball and baseball, cleaning laundry and weapons, and having a gospel sing.

The atmosphere is relaxed and soldiers are preparing to watch movies on the videocassette recorder. With a heavy training schedule approaching next week, the day off these soldiers get is well deserved.

Infantrymen keep PT high on priority list

By Billy R. Shepherd
Army Central Public Affairs Office

SAUDI ARABIA — At 5 a.m., the "eyes of the infantry" begin to open. Wrapped in an arctic sleeping bag, fighting the 60-degree chill in the morning air, Spec. Anthony Porter brushes away the flies beginning to dive-bomb his unprotected face. He burrows into his bag hiding both from the flies and the desert's cool breeze.

In less than two minutes, the sky's spreading pink fingers fade as the sun quickly climbs over the horizon. Like magic, the crisp, cool breeze dies. In its place, a warm breeze jolts the mercury to its first step of a 40-degree journey.

Porter unzips his bag.

"Let's go! PT (physical training) at 0600," a voice calls to the sleeping soldiers. Porter and his comrades, scouts with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, 197th Infantry Brigade, start most of their days in the desert this way.

"We can't even keep up with what day it is, and it really doesn't matter," explains Porter.

Today is either Monday, Wednesday or Friday. On these days, the scouts start their mornings with organized physical training. Today's activity is "American Ball," a cross between rugby and football.

"It's a lot of fun," says Staff Sgt. Robert J. Little, "but it can be pretty rough. It does help us build esprit de corps and morale though."

After PT, the scouts take their showers and prepare themselves and their track for today's mission.

"Our mission today isn't until this afternoon," explains Little. "So, we're going to have classes this morning."

Little says the scouts have classes on various subjects including first aid, vehicle identification and other common tasks skills.

At 9 a.m., the soldiers are assembled and ready for the class. Instruction starts with that dreaded word. . .''Gas!'' screamed by the platoon sergeant. The soldiers react instantly, but not quick enough.

"You're dead," screams the platoon sergeant to a couple of soldiers still grappling with their masks. "Where's your casualty feeder report forms?"

The platoon sergeant finally gives the "all clear" command. The scouts are ready to begin. This morning, the scouts train with poster board and magic marker. The task is called Win, Lose or Identify. A soldier from one of the tracks begins drawing a vehicle while the other soldiers from his track attempt to identify it. If they fail, members from the platoon get the chance to take a point for their own section.

With the game tied at three points each, the scout platoon leader interrupts the training with an announcement. "Operations order," he yells. The soldiers pull out paper and pencil and begin writing the lieutenant's words.

Within 30 minutes, and after wolfing down a quick lunch of meals, ready to eat, the scouts and their tracks are grinding across the desert. The tracks appear as harmless as ants in a giant sandbox as they cross the rough terrain in search of an "enemy camp."

At each ridge, Little stops his track and sends a scout forward to check the other side. Sgt. Michael Dailey dismounts from the track and low-crawls toward the summit of the ridge. He peers over the top with just his head and binoculars showing. "All clear," he yells over the track's idling engine.

"Our job isn't to engage in all-out battle," says Daily. "Our job is to find the enemy and let the infantry engage them. Of course, we're there if they need us."

The mission is completed with an after action review led by the "enemy commander," the scout platoon leader.

The hour-long return to the base camp isn't wasted. The scouts move out in Mission Oriented Protective Posture 4. "I've got a new driver and he needs to get practice driving like this," Little explains.

At 5 p.m., the scouts are "home."

"This is the best time of the day," Dailey claims. "It's starting to cool off and it seems peaceful."

The scouts eat dinner and take some personal time. Time to write letters to loved ones, or sit around the track talking. Tonight's discussion covers a variety of subjects.

"Our morale is really high," Little says. "One of the reasons is the support we've had from the states. Letters and poems from people we don't even know. It's been great."

The scouts day ends by 8 p.m. One by one, the scouts retreat to their sleeping bags as the cool breeze begins to make the night seem uncomfortable.

With a loud "zip," the sleeping bags closed.

Army introduces new uniform items

Army News Service

A new black all-weather coat tops a list of uniform items recently introduced in military clothing sales stores.

According to Army uniform policy officials in the Pentagon, the new, double-breasted, belted coat is currently available for men only and in limited sizes. The women's coat is expected to be in stores during fiscal 1992's first quarter.

The old design black all-weather coat may be worn through Sept. 30, 1997.

A new men's AG 415 green shirt is now available in stores. Both long- and short-sleeve versions of the shirt, which has pleated pockets, are on sale.

Also available in clothing sales stores are two other recently approved items — black shoulder marks for officers and the new version of the optional purchase black windbreaker. The new officers' shoulder marks, to be worn on the AG 415 shirt and the black pullover sweater, are already required for general officers. All other officers may purchase them in October 1991, and are required to have them by October 1992.

The officers' version of the new windbreaker has a knit collar; the enlisted version has a lay-down collar made of the same material.

DESERT SHIELD BRIEFS

Soldiers to get free underwear, socks

Soldiers deployed to the Middle East for Operation Desert Shield are authorized to receive free issue of underwear and socks.

Army logistics officials say initial issue of seven brown undershirts, brown drawers and socks is being made from stocks on hand in the Military Clothing Sales Store at Dhahran.

Once those stocks are exhausted, units may requisition underwear and socks directly from the Defense Personnel Support Center, in Philadelphia, Pa.

Women will receive a set of six replacement bras and underpants from the Army and Air Force Exchange Service. Special orders that are needed for sizes that become unavailable have an undetermined turnaround time.

USO plans holiday program for soldiers

The USO is inviting soldiers stationed in the Tokyo and Frankfurt areas to participate in the sixth annual USO-AT&T HolidayLink program.

On Dec. 19, 12 to 15 overseas military personnel and their families will be united with their families in the States via video teleconference provided by AT&T. Family members will be gathered in Washington for the conference calls.

Soldiers interested in signing up for HolidayLink should visit the nearest USO to fill out the required applicaton.

Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell will deliver personal holiday greetings to participating servicemembers.

Promotion and school selection boards won't penalize soldiers who aren't able to update their official photographs due to their involvement in Operation Desert Shield.

AR 640-30, Photographs for Military Personnel Files, allows soldiers assigned to areas where photo facilities aren't available to be exempt from requirements for periodic photo updates. Soldiers deployed to such areas are to be photographed either 90 days before deployment, or within 90 days after reassignment to an area where photo facilities are available.

Soldiers to receive lighter desert BDUs

A lighter version of the desert battle dress uniform is on the way to troops in the Middle East.

The shirt yoke and elbow, seat and knee patches have been removed to provide a measure of relief from the heat of the Saudi desert.

Soldiers still in the process of deploying will receive two sets before leaving the States. Soldiers in forward-deployed maneuver units will receive one set, and the remainder of the troops in-the-ater will get two.

Army logistics officials say that only administrative costs were incurred in making the changes.

Wear tests of lighter weight fabrics are scheduled for next summer and fall. Currently, desert BDUs are made of a blend of 50 percent cotton and 50 percent nylon.

Cool, clear water is big business in desert

By Billy R. Shepherd
Army Central Public Affairs Office

SAUDI ARABIA — Many years ago, the Sons of the Pioneers had a hit song about crossing the desert. A memorable phrase from that tune is being repeated often here — "cool, clear water."

And cool, clear water is the business of Maj. Scott T. Haas, chief of Army Central's water section.

"Our water requirements, based on the joint service plan, is to provide 20 gallons of water per soldier per day in an arid environment," said Haas.

"Our intent is to make sure each soldier has plenty of water."

The Army here is using two methods to provide water to Operation Desert Shield participants.

First, the Army has contracted with host nation suppliers for bottled water. Second, the Army is purifying its own water, provided or contracted from the host nation.

Saudi Arabia has water, and according to Haas, a lot more than you'd expect.

"We have the ability to provide all the water through our purification teams if we have to," Haas said. Right now, we are using 10 host-nation wells. The water purification teams are ensuring that they meet our drinking standards.

The wells are used by the host nation's citizens mostly for irrigation, not drinking.

"After we get host nation approval, it only takes us about two or three days to start producing potable water," Haas said. "As these systems go in, bottled water use will decline."

As the military takes over more of the water purification process, the tactical water distribution system will become more important.

Each water supply company has storage capabilities for 1.6 million gallons of water in 50,000 gallon containers that look and feel like giant water beds nearly six feet tall. They also have a six-inch, 20-mile hose that will deliver up to 600,000 gallons per day.

Researchers prepare dessert for desert

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — The care and feeding of soldiers in the sand has become the latest focus of the Army facility known for its adaptation of modern science and technology to the changing needs of America's combat troops.

Scientists and technicians at the U.S. Army Natick Research, Development and Engineering Center in Massachusetts are moving ahead with such Operation Desert Shield-pertinent items as —

- New "pouch bread" (mini-loaf or rolls), specially formulated to resist loss of quality while in storage — even at high temperatures.
- Hotdog meal; pancake and waffle breakfast; turkey dinner (with stuffing and cranberry sauce); pizza a la "meals, ready to eat,"; newly improved T-ration items; high-melting-point chocolate (won't melt at 125- 130 degrees).
- A new boot design being considered for the desert: grain side out, desert-tan, no drainage holes or steel plate.
- A micro-sized climate-clothing cooling system for use in tanks; a proposed portable backpack cooler for the foot soldier.
- A camouflage water-bottle cover (desert pattern) for plastic water bottles.
- A water-recycling technique for laundries — wherein rinse water from one wash may be used for the wash cycle in the next run.
- Additional tentage being specified for Desert Shield — for constructing soft-wall and hard-wall shelters in such use as hospitals, surgical and recovery wards and housing for communications, fire control, storage, etc.

The above list represents only some of the creations, refinements and adjustments in varying stages of development, testing and fielding that can support readiness and operations in Desert Shield, explained Natick public affairs specialist Art Reardon.

He noted that the most talked-about category on the list — the meal, ready to eat — has received, and is receiving, routine review and analysis toward its continued upgrading.

"Since the MRE advent in 1980-1981, the meal's menus remained unchanged for five years," he said. Field testing in 1986 centered on comparing a fully improved prototype against older versions. The resulting field data led to procurement of the fully improved "MRE VIII," starting in 1988.

Reardon added that field evaluations of the improved version continue to confirm the high level of acceptance by soldiers. For the coming months and years, some planned procurements include the following:

- Introduction of a flameless ration heater in bulk pack for MRE entrees.
- Addition of hot-pepper sauce and commercial candy to four more menus.
- Replacement of chicken a la king with a new smoky frankfurter.
- Addition of more wet-pack fruits instead of freeze-dehydrated fruits.

Redeeming coupons saves money

Troop Support Agency

When someone tells Christine A. Rightmyer that clipping coupons to use at the Army commissary is more trouble than it's worth, she just smiles — all the way to the bank — and then all the way to Hawaii, Paris, or wherever.

The wife of Lt. Col. Robert L. Rightmyer, director of Fort Lee's Personnel and Community Activities, has smiled quite a few times over the years. She and her husband and daughter, Tracey, have enjoyed numerous trips to such places as Hawaii, Paris, London, Prague, the French and Italian Rivieras and California from money saved through redeeming coupons — mainly at Army commissaries.

Rightmyer is committed to the idea of saving. "That dime you save is better off in your pocket than it is in the store's," she said. "Clipping and redeeming coupons is a great way to save money on your grocery bill. I don't understand why everybody doesn't do it — especially if they're on a tight budget."

The idea has certainly paid off for Rightmyer. She figures she saves between $60 to $90 each month.

Rightmyer said that she got the idea of clipping coupons from her family and has been doing it for most of her adult life. "My mother and I still work at it," she said.

When she and her husband were married more than 10 years ago, they continued the practice. "When we first got married, Bob and I would devote one weekend a month to coupons and refunds," Rightmyer said. Their efforts were rewarded.

"After the first year, we had enough money saved to travel from Detroit to Hawaii for eight days," she recounted. "That included air fare, hotels, meals and spending money."

Her family still takes an active part in clipping and saving coupons. "My husband and daughter help a lot," Rightmyer said. "One clips, one sorts, and I usually get to file. And my mother still sends me coupons with her letters."

Rightmyer explained that the secret to successful coupon clipping is organization. "I have a pretty elaborate system," she said.

She and her husband have a separate account in the bank just for savings realized through coupon savings and refunds. After going to the commissary, she tallies up the amount of coupon savings and deposits that amount of money into the account. The family uses the account as a travel account.

The coupons come from a variety of sources, said Rightmyer. "I get them from newspapers and magazines, but most of them are given to me by my mother and other relatives and friends," she explained. "I seldom write a letter that I don't send some coupons in, and I seldom get a letter that doesn't have some in it."

She noted that the post Army Community Services also maintains a coupon bank, where people can donate unused coupons or pick up ones they may need.

Once in hand, Rightmyer files the coupons in two large boxes, alphabetically, according to the type of product it is. She routinely rotates the coupons so that the oldest ones are always at the front of each product file.

When she prepares to do her commissary shopping, she pulls coupons for the products that she needs. She arranges the coupons to correspond with the shopping pattern according to a map that she obtained of the commissary. Upon reaching the checkout, she presents her coupons to the cashier and keeps her products orderly on the conveyor in case the cashier needs to verify a particular coupon.

Then comes the rewarding part of depositing the coupon savings into the bank. Rightmyer said that although she spends about 15 to 20 hours each month in working with the coupons, the realized savings are well worth the effort.

Flea, tick collars pose health hazard

Directorate of Information Mgmt.

Military personnel have been reported purchasing tick/flea collars for personal use in protecting against sand flies and other biting pests during military operations.

Use of such pesticide impregnated collars may pose a potential health hazard to people wearing them. These are designed primarily for animal use only. Toxic effects on humans can result from direct and prolonged exposure especially to skin and lungs.

Electronic repelling devices are reportedly not effective.

The most effective means of protection from biting flies, ticks and fleas is the use of the following personal protective measures:

- Blousing (tucking) pant legs into boots.
- Application of insect/arthropod repellent, NSN 6840-01-284-3982, to exposed skin surfaces and to clothing near openings to the skin.
- Using approved Permethrin arthropod repellent, insect repellent, clothing treating, NSN 6840-01-278-1336, or hot weather and temperate military field clothing in accordance with label instructions.

Nutritionists recommend long term sensible dieting

By Rayette Schafer
Martin Army Community Hospital

If you are trying to lose a few pounds, you are among more than 20 million Americans dieting during this year alone.

Unfortunately, fad diets rarely provide long term success and can be very costly. Successful long term weight loss can be achieved if the dieter:

- is willing to settle for a safe weight loss of one to three pounds per week;
- will incorporate four 20 minute sessions of simple aerobic exercise into his or her routine; and
- will practice learning how to eat a lower calorie, sensible diet.

If you would like to learn how to eat sensibly to keep weight off, the Nutrition Care Division at Martin Army Community Hospital may have the answer for you.

At the Outpatient Nutrition Clinic, a registered dietitian provides in-depth weight loss counseling through classes and individual follow-up appointments.

You may first attend a group class and receive an individualized calorie restricted diet, helpful diet handouts, guidelines for portion control, food preparation, exercise, and eating in restaurants.

Regular follow-up appointments are scheduled for those who require additional supportive counseling.

Other services offered by the Nutrition Clinic include dietary guidance for patients with high blood pressure, high cholesterol, diabetes, and for pregnant mothers or those planning a pregnancy.

Counseling on sports nutrition and on feeding children is also offered.

A dietitian is also available (by appointment) to provide nutrition related information to groups in the military community.

Referrals are not required for the Nutrition Clinic. Patients may call 544-1542 or 544-1674 for information or appointments.

Following proper procedures will eliminate postal delays

Information Systems Command

The mailing of Wives Support Group meeting letters to spouses of Desert Shield soldiers has created cause for concern, according to officials at the U.S. Army Information Systems Command.

In a talking paper, officials said the action is fully supported, however a number of problems have arisen in the mailing of these letters.

To avoid delays, officials recommend the following:

- Ensure mailing lists are updated. Of 1,800 letters recently mailed to 197th spouses for the commanding general's meeting, an estimated 300 letters were returned because of insufficient address, or they had moved with no forwarding address.
- Do not use over-sized envelopes. Envelopes measuring 16x12 inches costs 65 cents versus 25 cents for regular size, 9x4 inches.
- When other than the white letter-size envelope is used, each piece must be stamped with correct class of mail — first class or fourth class.
- Use a major command consolidated bulletin or letter rather than one for the major command and each subordinate command mailing their own.
- To save mail costs, include flyers only to those wives who do not attend meetings. All other could receive handouts at the meeting.

In a 2-1/2 week period, $1,544 was spent on mailing support letters to spouses of Desert Shield soldiers, the paper said. The postal dollars have not increased and no increase is expected, officials added. If mailed early enough, letters could be mailed at bulk rate (must be 200 pieces or more) for 16.5 cents versus 25 cents or more for each piece.

Officials said support is needed to ensure all mail is dispatched in the most cost effective manner.

Take time to heed tornado 'watch'

Infantry Branch Safety Office

When the National Weather Service issues a tornado watch, it means that conditions are such that a tornado might develop. The "watch" should be heeded by taking the following preliminary precautions:

- Keep the radio on. A battery-powered radio should be available in case electrical power is lost.
- Move loose objects indoors, or tie them down.
- Keep an eye out for a tornado. It's possible for a tornado to form and touch down at your location before the National Weather Service can identify it and broadcast the warning.
- When a tornado warning is issued, it means that an actual tornado has been spotted by the National Weather Service. It's time to take cover.
- If at home, go to the basement. If you have no basement, take shelter in the lowest level in the center of the home in a small room or closet or under heavy furniture.
- In schools or an office building, and there is no designated shelter area, go to an inside hallway on the lowest floor.
- When shopping, go to a solidly built building. Stay away from areas that are under a wide free-span roof. They usually collapse when a tornado strikes.
- If in open country, move away from the tornado's path at right angles. If this is not possible, lie down flat in a ditch, culvert, or ravine, or under a bridge. Do not stay in a car. They are tossed about at random by tornadoes.
- If in a mobile home, move to a sheltered area. Mobile homes are frequently destroyed by tornadoes or, if not tied down, can be picked up and hurled about with incredible force.
- Whatever you do, don't stay around to watch the excitement. True, a tornado is a spectacular sight, and chances are you may not ever see another one — because you probably won't be there to see the second one.

Each year tornadoes will kill more than 100 people in the United States. A little forethought and planning could have saved a lot of these lives.

Learn all you can about tornadoes, keep informed of daily weather conditions, and know where shelter areas are.

Chances are you will never be caught in a tornado, but just in case, be prepared!

Members of Co. C, 2nd Bn, 18th Infantry Regiment prepare a defensive position for a training mission.

Training in Mideast is serious

By Dan Hays and Billy R. Shepherd
Army Central Public Affairs

SAUDI ARADIA — "Once you're in the maximum range of a weapons system, there's nothing out here to stop the bullets. That makes training here even more important than normal," a platoon leader explained.

2nd Lt. Hal Hatchett, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade, helped train his platoon Nov. 1 in Squad Training Exercises. Nothing new, according to Hatchett, but they're taking it more seriously.

"They're running and diving into the sand," Hatchett said. "They want the training to be real hard and realistic. We're applying basic dismounted tactics in a desert environment."

The soldiers are training on a two-mile course that includes ambushes, chemical attacks and trench warfare.

"We feel more confident with all the training we're getting," said Spec. Curtis Haag. "We know our jobs better now."

In the exercise, Haag acted as the forward friendly unit commander, giving the squads and platoons going through the course intelligence on the "enemy" force they would be facing.

The soldiers weren't facing anything they hadn't seen before. "We've been practicing this same thing with the squads, but this is the first time we've done it at the company level," said Haag.

All nine squads from the company went through the training, according to Hatchett. "The training has helped us solve some of the challenges of this environment. For example, explained Hatchett, "navigation is dead reckoning. At the National Training Center (Fort Irwin, Calif.) there are terrain features to help you find your position. Here it's basically flat."

The squads were evaluated on 15 tasks, said Hatchett. "We evaluate them on reacting to a chemical attack, prisoner of war search procedures, working with friendly forward units, evacuation of casualties, breaching an obstacle, calling for indirect fire and others," he said.

The final objective is breaching a defensive position that includes trenches and a bunker.

The Co. B soldiers are attached to the brigade's 2nd Battalion 69th Armored Regiment, but working with the tankers doesn't change their mission.

"We are a task force along with the tanks," explained Staff Sgt. Johnny Fullmore, squad leader. "We are still the infantry. If they've got mine fields, we go in and clear them out. We support the tankers with light infantry."

Even in Operation Desert Shield, Infantry leads the way.

NBC training in desert high on unit's priority list

By Michael P. Mauer
Army Central Public Affairs

SAUDI ARABIA — The day after Halloween was no trick-or-treat for the soldiers of Co. D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade.

While folks stateside may have been counting their candy bars, the soldiers from Fort Benning spent Nov. 1 here learning to protect themselves from nuclear, biological and chemical threats.

A few years ago, the soldiers may have dressed in suits resembling ghosts and goblins.

Their costumes this past holiday, however, took on a more serious tone. Tall, pointed hats and devils' pitchforks gave way to M-17 protective masks and M-258 decontamination kits.

And the seriousness of Co. D's NBC training goes beyond putting on costumes. According to 1st Lt. Maurice D. Hammond, "Delta Dawg" NBC officer, Operation Desert Shield has increased the number of NBC drills.

"Nuclear, biological and chemical training has definitely taken a priority," said Hammond. "We integrate it into our training as much as possible."

Hammond added his troops have welcomed the extra emphasis.

"They know what the threat is," he said. "They are very pleased NBC is on the priority list. They are growing more confident with their equipment and training."

Having spent more than two months training in the Saudi Arabian desert, the "Dawgs" have had the chance to hone their NBC skills. According to Sgt. James O. Sullivan, Co. D NBC non-commissioned officer, the unit's NBC capabilities have improved.

"There were a few mix-ups at first," said Sullivan. "There were a few things the battalion wanted done differently, but we've since gotten them fixed. The next time we did training, it was much more successful."

And Nov. 1, the Dawgs got the chance to further their NBC training by conducting a mock hasty decontamination of their vehicles and equipment.

According to Sullivan, a hasty DECON permits a unit to control NBC contamination, resupply, and come back fighting.

"Hasty DECON for our company shouldn't take anymore than an hour to an hour and a half," said Sullivan. "That is what a hasty DECON is for — so you can roll out of battle, decontaminate, and roll back in."

Hammond said most of the knowledge used in a hasty DECON involves common task skills known by all soldiers. Some of these tasks include protective suit exchange, skin decontamination and detecting the presence of chemical agents.

According to Hammond, he and Sullivan have the responsibility of setting up the unit's NBC training to be as realistic as possible. He added that another duty is to act as evaluators.

Michael P. Mauer

Two Co. D, 2/18th Inf. Regt. soldiers prepare to use the buddy system to remove their chemical protective suits.

"We tell the commander of the high points and shortcomings," said Hammond. "That way training can be adjusted in the future to provide greater benefit for the soldiers."

Although tasked to provide realistic training, some innovations were made by Co. D to allow for Operation Desert Shield conditions. To save wear on their combat issues of chemical protective suits, the Dawgs substituted their night desert fighting gear.

The company may have been a little cooler in their desert fighting suits, but the troops still had plenty to sweat over. Starting with a briefing at 6 a.m., NBC training was an all-day event.

Following the briefing, the unit's squads conducted common task training. After a protective suit exchange and decontamination equipment demonstration by Sullivan, the Dawgs ate lunch, mounted their M-113 armored personnel carriers and rolled out.

After traveling approximately one kilometer, Co. D was hit with a mock NBC attack. Reacting quickly, the soldiers changed into their protective clothing, and decontaminated their vehicles and personal equipment using M-258 kits and M-13 decontamination apparatus.

Additionally, the Dawgs practiced sampling chemical agents using M-256 kits. Information obtained from the kits is used to help compile NBC reports.

While the line elements of the Dawgs were knee-deep in NBC training, the headquarters group wasn't idle.

Monitoring and coordinating communications kept Sgt. Donald W. Wichmann busy. Fellow Delta Dawg Staff Sgt. Tomas Roblis readied his section's two-and-a-half ton truck to carry supplies to the unit's hasty DECON site.

"We pick up chemical suits and everything they need for a chemical suit exchange," said Roblis of his section's job during a hasty DECON.

"Our job is just to drop what they need and move on. But because this is training, we are more involved."

Dropping off supplies was only half the section's job during training. After the last box was unloaded, Roblis and his crew acted quickly, helping set up the Hasty DECON station before the first of the Dawgs M-113s roared over the horizon.

Despite the NBC training making the Dawgs dusty, they did find a better way to peel off desert grime.

Although used primarily to heat water to help decontaminate vehicles, the unit's M-17 lightweight decontamination equipment was used in its secondary role — heating shower water.

"We use the M-17 to spray hot, soapy water on vehicles to decontaminate them," said Sullivan. "But the equipment also comes with hoses to give the soldiers hot showers.

"Since we have to train soldiers to operate the equipment before we use it, we have time to give them what they haven't had in a while — a hot shower."

FSG plays important role

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community reporter

Any time a unit is deployed, as in Operation Desert Shield, the Family Support Group plays a key role in providing information about services and sources of support available to the family members. The FSG, made up of caring volunteers, is basically available to answer questions, give information, solve problems, and act as a link between the unit and the family.

According to Eileen Reid, wife of Col. Theodore Reid, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the company commander's wife and first sergeant's wife are the ones who are the leaders. Reid said that the 197th groups are meeting mostly at the company level and some are meeting more often than others because the holidays will bring another wave of stress to deal with.

Sylvia Novier, wife of Lt. Col. Frank Novier, 34th Medical Battalion commander, said that "keeping in touch" is the primary goal of the 34th's FSG, but because the unit was filled with soldiers from all over the United States, they have the unique challenge of staying in touch with spouses who are in many different locations.

Mary Miller, wife of Col. Hank Miller, commander of 36th Engineer Group, said that the key leaders have come to recognize that they are not prepared to deal with some of the issues they need to be concerned with, so their group has arranged classes to help the spouses be better prepared to deal with this crisis.

Reid, Novier, and Miller all agree that the company leaders are just outstanding in what they do. These ladies are taking a lot of their time and giving it to the spouses in their companies, they agreed.

One activity that is common to all three units is the video taping of holiday messages to the soldiers in the desert. According to Novier, at one 34th Medical FSG meeting recently, the spouses boxed cookies for each soldier who is deployed. Dixie Hawkinson, a 36th Engineer Group spouse, said several FSG's are making stockings for each of the soldiers who are deployed from their units.

"The Army takes care of its own" is not just a slogan but a reality for the spouses of deployed soldiers involved in Operation Desert Shield.

Fights are topic of mayor meeting

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community reporter

At the Mayor's Council Meeting Nov. 20, the topic of discussion was the fighting and vandalism on the Custer Terrace paths leading to Wilbur School. According to Cindy Bishop, mayor of Custer Terrace, there have been several incidents which consisted of fighting between children and the breaking of windows in the Scout Hut along the paths leading from Gibson and South Valdez. She said that even when the guilty parties are known, little or no action is seen to be taken.

Col. Fred W. Liebe, Provost Marshal, said "there is all sorts of 'hooliganism' going on on post." According to Liebe, there have been cases when everyone knows who the bad guys are but no one is willing to make a documented complaint. Without documented complaints, there is no action that can be taken.

Gail Wilson, principal of Wilbur School, said that no incidents had been reported to the school officials but she was willing to work with anyone who had complaints.

Part of the problem, according to Liebe, is the fear of retaliation if complaints are signed, which is causing the police to get little cooperation from the parties involved.

The mayors suggested writing a proposal to the school board listing alternative methods of monitoring the situation and tabled the discussion until their next meeting. Meetings are held bi-weekly in the Community Life Office, Soldiers Plaza, building 2641.

Regiment enjoys dining out

By Daniel R. Morris
11th Infantry Regiment

The 11th Infantry Regiment conducted its annual Dining Out at the Fort Benning Officers' Club Nov. 3 as part of the unit's Organization Day. The host officer was Col. James M. Jones Jr., commander of The School Brigade.

After the posting of the colors, the punch bowl ceremony was performed. The punch bowl ceremony was conducted in memory of fallen comrades, and it commemorated the Regiment's past achievements. The ceremony was narrated by Capt. Mark Vaughn and performed by the battalion commanders of the regiment.

After dinner, the Benning Belles sang a selection of patriotic songs and Maj. Frank Harmon presented the unit history.

Spec. Jason Wheeler, Soldier of the Year, and Volunteer of the Year, Jeantte Gamble were recognized at the function.

The guest speaker was Brig. Gen. Walter Bickston (U.S. Army retired), the honorary regimental commander. Bickston spoke on the importance of being prepared for war. "We never know where the call to duty will be," Bickston said. The general also encouraged everyone to double their efforts to help family members of troops deployed over seas.

197th spouses sponsor trip

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Spouses of the 197th Infantry Brigade are sponsoring a shopping trip to the factory outlet stores in Commerce, Ga., Dec. 8, for spouses of soldiers deployed with Operation Desert Shield.

According to Vicki Olson, whose husband commands 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 197th Bde., buses will depart from the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 7 a.m., and return about 8 p.m. Cost of the trip is $15, which must be paid in cash and is non-refundable. Children won't be allowed on the trip.

Olson said spouses wanting to go on the shopping trip can sign-up at the Recreation Center today from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., and Saturday from noon to 2 p.m. Spouses need to have their Operation Desert Shield identification cards to go on the trip.

Personnel will be on hand at the Center to issue the identification cards to those spouses who qualify, according to Olson.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. My husband has deployed to the Persian Gulf in Operation Desert Shield. As you know, the waiting wives are left with many matters to take care of for the family.

My big problem is taxes for 1990. What if my husband is still in the Gulf on April 15, 1991? Can I file a return for both of us? Can I use an LES (Leave and Earnings Statement) to file before W-2 Forms arrive to speed up our refund? Do I have to file? HELP!

A. Help is available, and will continue to be available, for the families of Desert Shield. The Office of the Staff Judge Advocate is responsible for the installation tax program, which begins with an Internal Revenue Service tax school in early January. A full-time tax office will open on or about Feb. 1. to supply needed forms and to assist in tax preparation.

Each unit, including those involved in Desert Shield, will have someone designated to assist wives with questions. If they do not know, they will call the tax officer to find out the answer for you.

First, if your husband is still in the Gulf on April 15, there are a number of possible courses of action open to you:

- Your husband may file a return in the Gulf if you and he desire. There will be IRS forms available there.
- You may fill out the forms early and send them to your husband for his signature.
- You may prepare a joint return and sign both names to it, if you have a valid power of attorney.

For filing purposes only, the IRS will accept the General Power of Attorney which most husbands left for their wives. For all other purposes, such as audits or disputes with the IRS, the service requires a properly executed IRS Form 2848, "Power of Attorney and Declaration of Representative."

This form will be available both in Saudi Arabia and at the installation tax office.

Even if a person is outside the United States, he still must report his income to the IRS. However, you can delay filing in some cases. If you do not want to file on April 15, you may file a request for an extension using IRS Form 4868.

This grants an automatic four-month extension for filing the return, until Aug. 15. Any taxes owed must be paid with the return or a penalty may be assessed later.

The IRS does not want LESs to be filed in lieu of Form W-2s.

This is not an authorized procedure, and the Service Center is justified in holding up you return and requiring you to submit a current W-2 Form. The W-2 Forms are usually available to the soldier through his unit.

The best current information concerning distribution of W-2 forms for this year indicates that a spouse can pick up a W-2 for her spouse on or about Jan. 31 through the rear detachment commander, if she has a valid power of attorney from her husband.

Contact your legal assistance office for an appointment to discuss your problem in more detail. The Legal Assistance Office is located in Building 5. Hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and the telephone number is 545-3281.

Dancers bring jazz to post

Directorate of Community Activities

The Southwest Jazz Ballet Company will present two live performances at the Sand Hill Theater Tuesday and Wednesday. Tuesday's performance will be for U.S. Army Infantry Training Center personnel only and will begin at 7 p.m. Wednesday's performance will be for the general public and invited guests and will also begin at 7 p.m.

The Southwest Jazz Ballet Company is composed of 15 professional stage performers, who do song and dance routines. They meld jazz, tap, country and western, classical ballet and even aerobics into a distinct dance form. Because so many dance styles are incorporated, jazz ballet appeals to almost everyone. Admission is free.

Volunteers are needed

Volunteer Center

The following volunteer opportunities have taken on a new urgency due to Operation Desert Shield. The jobs require only a couple of hours a week.

- The Army Community Services Food Locker needs volunteers. During the rapidly approaching Christmas season extra hands are necessary to fill holiday food baskets.
- Red Cross has immediate openings for volunteer caseworkers, disaster volunteers, first aid and cardiopulmonary resuscitation instructors, and office assistants. Business at the Red Cross Office is helping people and at the present time business is very brisk.
- Chaperones are needed for the pre-teen and teen Dances sponsored by Youth Services. Dances are every first, third and fourth Friday night of the month from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m.
- Receptionist/interviewer and special projects volunteers are needed at the Volunteer Resource Center. These positions offer an opportunity to learn about the Fort Benning and Columbus communities and work with a wide variety of social service agencies.

For more information about these or any other volunteer positions, call 545-5602.

Co. B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment beat out Co. A, 1st, Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. for the post flag football championship, 18-12 in a game played at Doughboy Stadium Nov. 13.

The first touchdown came in the first minutes of the game, when Shanee Moses of Co. B ran up the middle to put the ball over the goal line. The 1/29th brought the ball right back at them with a long pass play, but the next pass was intercepted.

B Co. couldn't get a rally going After a punt by Co. B, the 29th attempted to move the ball downfield but was stopped just before halftime by a defensive play that caught the quarterback behind the line of scrimmage.

The second half began with the 1/29th facing Co. B's defense against the pass and soon had to punt. Moses ran the punt back, putting Co. B in good field position,but they had to punt after two penalties.

The 1/29th just missed running the punt back for a score when Co. B's defensive team made the play.

After Co. A punted and a pass play brought Co. B a first down, Moses, with 4:21 left in the game, ran the ball in for a second time, bringing the score to 12-0.

The 29th tried to get back in the game with 1:49 left, when Simpson Barton scored a touchdown to bring the score to 12-6. But Clifton Poole of the 11th came right back within 20 seconds to catch a touchdown pass and seemingly putting the game out of reach.

Co. A didn't give up however, and Robert Jenkins scored one more TD with 10 seconds left, but it just wasn't enough as B Co., 1/11th held on to win, 18-12.

Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garrison adds names to a list of soldiers deployed to Saudi Arabia.

Chapel to send cards

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

A big helping of cheer can be sent in a small package. With hopes of doing just that, those who attend services at the Infantry Center Chapel have begun what they call Project Encouragement.

Faces, names and addresses of loved ones who will spend Christmas in Saudi Arabia are posted at entrance of the chapel. Cards of encouragement are provided, with pens and envelopes handy for those who wish to participate.

"This is one way to offer encouragement to our soldiers," said Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garrison, Infantry Center Chaplain. "I believe people really do want to help in some way, and this gives them a convenient means through which they can."

Garrison said that encouragement is such a powerful thing, that even a letter or card from a stranger could make a tremendous difference in someone's life.

Cards will be sent each week to the soldiers. Anyone who would like to help with this project should call Garrison at 545-2050.

Advent brings hope

USAIC Chaplain's Office

Advent is a season of great tension. It is a time of preparation which expresses hope and expectation for both the first and second comings of Christ. The focus is upon our own personal preparation for the coming, arrival and return.

The First Sunday of Advent is called the beginning of the Christian Year. Yet it plunges us immediately into the tension between the "already" of Christ having come in the flesh and the "not yet" of the consummation of all things in Christ at the end of time.

Advent challenges us to rethink and confront, in word and sacraments, the revelation of Christ's time in the midst of our times. Thus, we begin the year reflecting and praying together about the end of all history.

Advent is both a time of thanks for the gift of Christ to us in past time and a time of anticipation of his second coming. It contains both threat and promise, and this characteristic is carried out in the lessons and in the hymns of the season. This is why you will find a particular emphasis upon the Advent hymns throughout the season in distinction from Christmas carols and hymns.

As this community begins the Advent season, the first candle will be lit in many homes, some with absent family members. It is our prayer that words of comfort and message of hope will be present on the 1st of Advent.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Parenting class — A new parenting class will begin at the Chaplain's Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza. The class will begin January 16 and continue each Wednesday from 12 to 1:30 p.m. through February 27.

Entitled, The Art of Sensitive Parenting, the course deals with the 10 keys of raising confident, competent and responsible children.

Secretary of Army visit

Secretary of the Army Michael P. W. Stone (center) speaks to 1st Bn., 507th PIR Command Sgt. Maj. Robert A. McCoy as Lt. Col. Marcel J. Lettre, 507th commander, and retirees Charles Wilson of the original Airborne Test Platoon and Carl Reeves of the 555th Parachute Inf. Bn. look on. Stone, who visited the post Nov. 30, attended an ITC field training exercise and an Airborne 5000 — a training demonstration. More photos appear on A-6.

Benning activates replacement center

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A center designed to process replacement troops for Operation Desert Shield was activated Wednesday at Fort Benning in a ceremony at Building 4040 in the Harmony Church area.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza and the post's Chief of Staff Col. John D. Fuller were among the officials present to formally open the CONUS (Continental United States) Replacement Center.

The center's mission is to process troops for overseas reassignment. According to Maj. Stephen Wiley, battalion executive officer, the center will process Forces Command soldiers slated to deploy to Saudi Arabia.

"After a soldier arrives at Fort Benning, we will verify his or her readiness for overseas reassignment; issue individual clothing, weapons, chemical defense equipment, and protective masks; and provide weapons qualification," Wiley said.

The CRC will process and ship Forces Command soldiers within 96 hours of their arrival at Fort Benning, Wiley added. The unit will house, feed, process and ship approximately 200 soldiers a week.

During the activation ceremony, Lt. Col. Thomas M. Brady, the unit's commander, expressed confidence in the center to succeed in its mission.

"We know and fully understand the mission," he said. "We have the job of ensuring that troops are at their highest state of readiness and arrive in the Middle East prepared to carry out their mission.

"That task is not only the CRC's job, but the entire post is involved in making sure troops are ready," he continued. "Almost every directorate on post is critical and contributes to this effort," he added.

Cavezza expressed similar sentiments and said, "If Fort Benning was asked to get any more involved with Operation Desert Shield, they would have to deploy the entire installation."

The CONUS Replacement Center will "ensure that every seat scheduled on a Military Airlift Command aircraft is filled with a deployable 'fit-to-fight' soldier," he said.

29th Inf. expands mission since Desert Shield

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The 29th Infantry Regiment's mission has increased dramatically as a result of the deployment of more than half the troops at Fort Benning for Operation Desert Shield, officials said.

Since the onset of Operation Desert Shield, unit personnel have been quietly going about their normal mission as well as picking up the extra duties the departing units left behind, regiment officials said.

Col. Richard St. John, 29th commander, said the regiment's mission is strictly training and support, however, sinee Desert Shield, their mission has increased.

"Our mission has expanded in every aspect," St. John said. "In preparing for the troops to deploy to the Middle East, the regiment was quite active.

"We helped train soldiers, moved equipment and provided mobile training teams to go to Fort Stewart for predeployment training of Fort Benning troops," he added. "We were quite heavily involved in the entire deployment," he said.

> "I don't foresee the unit making any plans to deploy in the near future; our training mission is too vital to overall combat readiness.
>
> — Col. Richard St. John

The unit has also picked up a lot of the slack in the way of extra taskings, said St. John. From providing soldiers for details to sponsoring the different housing areas designated to deployed units, the 29th has stepped in to take on several different taskings.

Due to the cancellation of Christmas exodus this year, the unit is committed through the holidays to a rigorous training schedule, he said. For example, the One-Station Unit Training 11M Bradley operator transition course has been doubled, according to St. John.

While a few soldiers from the unit have actually deployed to Saudi Arabia, most have stayed behind to support the unit's never-ending dedication to the training mission.

Along with the normal mission and the additional duties, the 29th has also found time and opportunity to hold charitable functions to help the family members of deployed soldiers. Recently, the 1st Bn., 29th Regiment, sponsored a "Family Member Support Day" for 197th Infantry Brigade, 36th Engineer Group and 34th Medical Battalion support groups. The unit also held a food drive to collect goods for Army Community Service's Food Locker.

Yet, with all these activities, there has been no decrease in the mission, said St. John.

"Morale is very high right now, all things considered," he said. "I don't foresee the unit making any plans to deploy in the near future.

"Our training mission is too vital to the overall combat readiness of soldiers that might be needed to support Operation Desert Shield," he added.

"The 29th has done a lion's share of work on Fort Benning lately, but it's nothing that we can't handle," he said. "We're soldiers and professionals, and we will do whatever it takes to accomplish our mission.

"We may be working longer hours and weekends, but at least we can go home every night and see our families. When I think of the troops that were called to the Middle East so far away from their homes and loved ones, it makes me more determined to show our support in any way possible."

POST BRIEFS

BOSS gives singles night out

The Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Group, the Directorate of Community Activities, and WCGQ-FM will sponsor a night out for singles from 9 until 11 p.m. at the Main NCO Club Saturday.

The event will be broadcast live on WCGQ. SATO Travel Services will give away weekend lodging for two in Atlanta and lodging for two for three days and two nights in Orlando, Fla. SATO will also give away other prizes, and co-sponsors will give prizes as well. Free finger food will be available. Single soldiers and their guests are welcomed.

Free color portraits available

Universal Art Photographic Services will offer a free 8x10 family color portrait for family members of Operation Desert Shield. The photos will be taken December 15 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. The pictures will be available for pick up December 22 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Desert Shield identification cards will be required, and forms will be available for those who need to register.

DEH issues construction warning

A construction project at the main mall is underway, and Directorate of Engineering and Housing officials are advising mall patrons to stay clear of the construction area. The project is to replace overhead fascia panels on the shopping mall facility.

Barricades are in place, however falling objects from construction can occur and cause injury, officials said.

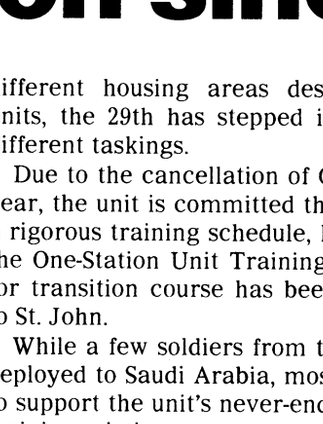
For more information, call Patrick Chauvey at 545-4749 or 545-3232.

Pharmacy to close temporarily

The Refill Pharmacy at the main Post Exchange at the mall will be closed effective Dec. 17 due to renovation in the mall. The pharmacy is expected to reopen Dec. 24.

Channel 13 airs news program

For all the latest Fort Benning news, tune in to "The Benning Report" seen Monday through Friday starting at noon and running periodically throughout the day on Channel 13 on the post cable system.



Spec. Richard Brill

The new program is anchored by Spec. Richard Brill of Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

Red Cross has gift certificates

The American Red Cross, located in Building 1699 at the corner of Ingersoll and Vibbert, has gift certificates donated by Spencer's Infant and Children's Wear for Desert Shield families who have had the birth of a child since Aug. 10.

The gift box has many layette items for a newborn baby.

To get one of the gift certificates, family members of soldiers deployed to Saudi Arabia must take a copy of the baby's birth certificate to the Red Cross office.

Santa Claus suits available

Santa suits are available for rent at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

The suits include drawstring trousers, shirt, jacket, belt, leggings, cap, belly, a large bag for gifts and candy, and a wig and beard set.

All requests must be submitted in writing.

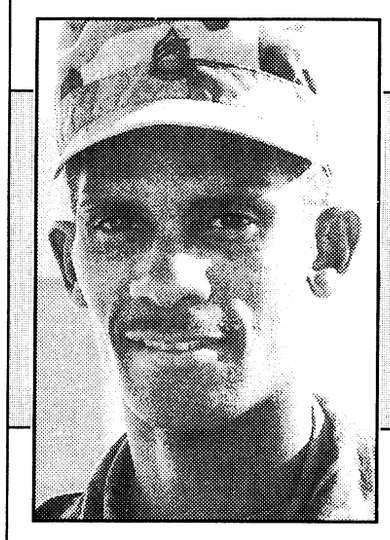
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES:

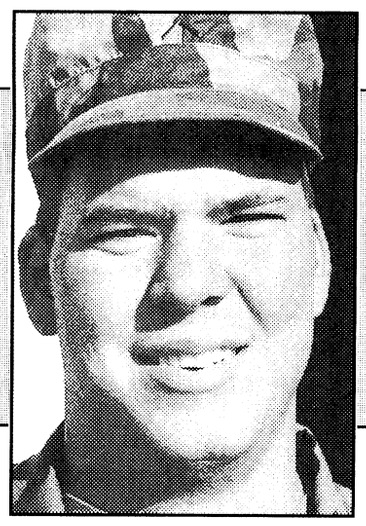
How has Fort Benning's participation in Operation Desert Shield added to your unit's basic mission?

Pfc. Velma Reaves, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "We've received a lot more commitments lately and have had more things to do. I am confident that we can make it, though."

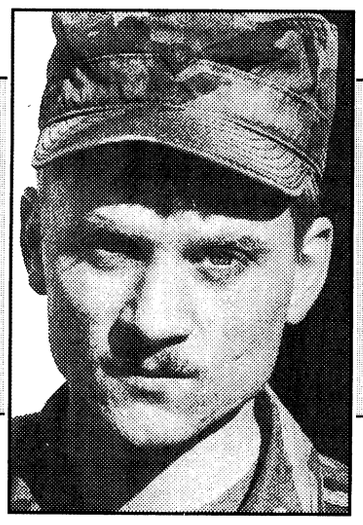


Sgt. 1st Class Dwayne D. Dikes, HHC, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "Our tasks have increased dramatically, and we have several more responsibilities. I don't mind because it gives me a chance to be the professional non-commissioned officer that I am and to help my soldiers with the work increase."

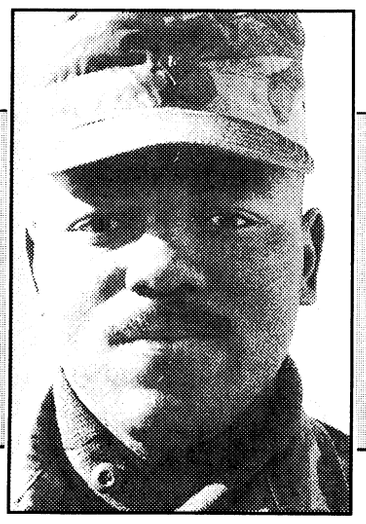
Sgt. Russell Pearson, Co. D, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "Fort Benning's participation in Operation Desert Shield has caused the unit to take the mission a lot more seriously. We realize that if we don't train our soldiers professionally, they stand a good chance of getting into a combat situation and getting hurt."



Pvt. 2 Scott Shevalier, Co. E, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "Our unit has definitely felt a difference since Operation Desert Shield started. It's in everything — attitudes and the quality of our work in the motor pool. We are taking things a bit more seriously now."



Spec. David Lawyer, B Co., 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "I don't think that much has changed. We do have a few more commitments, but it's nothing that the 29th can't handle."



Spec. Danny Fluker, Co. E, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. — "We have been working harder, and we are taking on a lot of the responsibilities left behind by the deployed units. I feel proud to do my part to support Operation Desert Shield in any way that I can."

COMMENTARY

Tales about getting out of the Army

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Limbo. The home of lost souls.

That's me. And that's where I'm writing from.

I was to have gotten out of the Army. I was nearly a civilian. My sign-out date was Dec. 3. But then it hit. The freeze. The extension of the "Stop Loss" program.

"What am I to do?" I asked my supervisor.

"Continue to march," she said. "Surely, they won't keep you in any longer than they need to."

I didn't know if I should be insulted, but continued to out-process — I can stand a lot of insults when I'm out-processing.

I moved the family. I cleared quarters. I sold the car. I sold my Class A uniforms. I burned my physical training uniform.

I was so close to being a civilian that I forgot the meaning of the simplest Army acronyms — "EDRE," "MRE," "ASAP," "FM," "AWOL."

I signed out of my unit, out of the dental clinic, medical clinic, cleared the bank, the library, the credit union.

I agreed to eat Mexican food with the office and be insulted at a going away party. I laughed along with the rest of them when they said things like, "So what if they keep Clyde in, ha, ha, we can still have a party. It just won't be a going away party, ha, ha."

I put with their evil little pranks, knowing full well that I'd soon be a civilian while they continued to grind out Bayonet after Bayonet, week after week.

Finally the day for clearing came. I dutifully reported to the goddess of clearing and presented my papers, all neatly arranged, all properly initialed.

"Sorry," the goddess said as the earth shook beneath my feet and my knees turned to Jello. "You can't get out. The cutoff was Dec. 1. Your date is Dec. 3."

"What does that mean?" I asked, not really wanting to know the answer.

"It means you're ours," she said, licking her chops.

"Well, like for how long," I bravely persisted, having gotten this far. Like what can they do to me now? Extend me?

"The message says seven years..." was the last thing I heard before I passed out.

After I was revived, I resigned myself to my new career.

"Ok," I said, "where do I sign in?"

"Don't know," she said."

"Do I need to sign in?"

"Don't know," she said.

"What unit do I report to; who do I work for," the words came in a rush as I looked around, half expecting to see Rod Serling standing in the corner saying, "and Mr. Snively is about to enter the Twilight Zone," knowing what the answer would be.

I decided to go back to the office. Take refuge in familiar surroundings, maybe get my supervisor to intercede for me. Perhaps a loan to finance a bribe.

But, the Bayonet office was dark when I got there. Everyone had left. "Maybe they're downtown putting out the paper," I thought. I called, but no one answered the phone.

Next, I moved to the far corner of the office to my desk. But my desk wasn't there.

I couldn't take it anymore. Is there no life after the Army or had I really entered the Twilight Zone? There was one way to find out. I screamed. I screamed as loud and long as I could. I screamed until I felt a sharp elbow in my ribs. It was Emma, my wife.

"Clyde, Clyde. Wake up. You're having your 'getting-out-of-the-Army nightmares again.'"

Writer questions whether all is fair in love, war

By James L. Kerrigan

All is fair in love and war, or is it? With the call up of this nation's civilian reserves, I am reminded of my experience as a reservist in the Korean war.

In 1950, as in 1990, neither the president nor the Congress declared war, still the movement of thousands of men, tanks and planes to Korea and Saudi Arabia looked a whole lot like a war.

The casualties in Korea — 153,500 killed or wounded — seemed to define a war, but the nation opted instead to call the Korean conflict a "Police Action".

The 1990 movement of men and supplies to Saudi Arabia has so far been called by the nation as a "Crisis in the Persian Gulf".

Whatever we call it, men and women are killed and wounded following the flag to faraway places with strange sounding names.

In 1950 when I was called as a reservist to put away my pen and pencil and bear arms against the nation's enemies, I had similar thoughts then as I do now about who makes the rules of a crisis a police action or a war.

In 1950, overnight I found myself in uniform being sent into harms way at compensation that was less than 20 percent of what I earned with a pen and pencil.

The patriotic music played, and I was reminded of what my duty was to God and country.

What bothered me then and bothers me now is who makes the rules covering the conduct of my fellow citizens who for one reason or another are asked to serve the nation in its time of trial and peril.

Why should those who risk and sacrifice the most receive the least compensation.

While those civilian reservists who answer the call immediately are squeezed by the less than minimum hourly wage orchestrated by law as compensation for the citizens that stay at home, the reservists and others who serve the nation in the military are paid a pittance.

Who makes the rules that those who are called upon to do the most will receive the least?

Recently, I read in the Wall Street Journal that over half the firms polled were refusing to continue medical benefits for employees called to military duty in the Middle East crisis.

While those serving in the military have no right to bargain or strike for higher wages, the daily diary of the American dream details accounts of those who stay home and keep the home fires burning as being on strike in all categories of the private and public sector.

Who makes the rules that require our modern day minutemen and women to answer the nation's call to arms and suffer financially?

I remember after serving in the Marines during the Korean war returning home and being somewhat embittered to find business as usual for my friends and neighbors who for one reason or another did not hold the line on the battlefield in Korea.

Isn't it time that those who make the rules give additional thought to the sacrifices and suffering of our nation's best citizens who man the modern day ramparts of war, crisis and police actions?

Shouldn't all those who answer the nation's call to arms be at least fairly compensated for their sacrifices?

All is fair in love and war, or is it?

Editor's note: James L. Kerrigan has served as chairman and chief executive officer of the two largest bus companies in the world, Greyhound (1970-1978) and Trailways (1979-1987). During the Korean War, he served in combat as a Marine infantryman.

"Soldiers in Saudi Arabia"

By Ernest Lamont Farmer

Every morning they wake up to the heat
If they have a war, they wonder if they will come out on top and beat
The sun beaming down on their heads
They wonder from day to day will they be alive or dead
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

They have no home cooked meals
Or McDonald's two for 99 cents deals
They have no good American brunch
All they have are "MREs" for lunch
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

They all are one big family away from home
They wish they were in a colder place like Alaska or Rome
The soldiers want to come home for the holidays
But the government doesn't have the money and the soldiers didn't get a raise
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

They have no houses, barracks or hotels
They camp out in the desert and ride on camels
They have no midnight snacks
Because they are guarding the forts from attacks
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

They are in a land, to them unknown
They all want to come home
All they see are sand dunes
And in the ancient city the old religious ruins
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

This whole thing started with money, greed, and power
Hussein gained more power hour after hour
Right now he is on the top and having a ball
Soon he will make a mistake and his power will fall
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

The Arabians have many riches such as gold and silver
As the soldiers think of war, they shake and quiver
The hostages are all alone
Asking what did we do, we want to go home
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

The soldiers all can't wait for mail call
That is the most suspenseful hour of all
If they don't get a letter or note,
They start to cry because they can't cope
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

The hot sun burning their backs
They wonder if there will be an attack
They live to defend America
And the people like John, Sue and Erica
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

They will come back safe and unharmed
There is no need for us to be alarmed
In the end we will win
Because our nation sticks together through thick and thin
The soldiers in Saudi Arabia.

Editor's note: Farmer is a 9th grader who attends Spencer High School. His father, Staff Sgt. Ernest Lee Farmer Jr., is with the 72nd Engineers, 197th Infantry Brigade, and is stationed in Saudi Arabia.

36th Engineers keep clean in desert

By Marie Pomilla
36th Engineer Group

SAUDI ARABIA — Soldiers want showers. Whether it be after a long dusty day working in the sun or early in the morning following an exerting physical training session.

Originally, the Army contracted for showers. They come in standard groups of three, each with a 30-gallon tank for water on the top.

The showers are similar to those you'd find at the beach — indoor/outdoor type with plywood on four sides, starting at one's shins, reaching approximately to the shoulders on the average height soldier.

So when the wind begins whistling, which it often does, it is cold.

Col. Hank Miller, 36th Engineer Group commander, expressed his discomfort. "That first morning, I got in the shower after physical training and between the chill of the water and the breeze, I was really cold," he said. "I knew we had to do something about it. We have both the assets and the talent to design an indoor shower facility for the comfort of our soldiers."

So that is exactly what the 36th Group Construction Section did.

Plans were drawn up by the Construction Section non-commissioned officer in charge. With the new design, soldiers went to work, building a floor, complete with rubber matting to avoid slips and splinters. Drains were also installed.

Next, walls on each side were erected with plexiglass covering the south side of the upper wall, allowing the sun to warm up the inside.

A canvas tent, nailed on wooden beams serves as a roof and partial wall. A wall with a big wooden door separates the male and female section.

Finally, to add the finishing touch to the indoor showers, the cold water is now being heated with a decontamination apparatus, commonly known as a sanator.

After the showers were completed, a buzz of excitement circulated throughout the base camp.

An indoor shower is a luxury in the desert and something that all soldiers look forward to daily. "We are one of the few units in the vicinity with these indoor showers," said Miller over dinner one night.

Spec. Ratt Johnson, rigg operator, said, "We sure do appreciate it."

The group has been asked to assist other units within the area in building showers. Presently, the 92nd Engineer Battalion is working on showers for the 24th Infantry Division.

Miller invites both commanders and first sergeants to stop by and take a look at the showers, therefore making it easier for others to build.

The plans for remodeling the showers are in the process of being distributed to first sergeants neighboring units.

"I designed the plans so that soldiers, other than engineers could follow them," said the Construction Section NCOIC. "Since we are all out here together, when one of us have a good idea, we need to spread the word. That way we all benefit," he said.

One soldier best summed up the results of the indoor shower facility when she said, "There is nothing like a warm shower at the end of a day, especially in the desert."

MPs on lookout for drunk drivers during holidays

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

As the holiday season descends upon Fort Benning area, so does a rash of holiday cheer and good spirits — especially the kind of spirits usually served at holiday parties.

As the wine flows and corks pop on champagne bottles to celebrate, the chances of a driver leaving one of these parties under the influence of an alcoholic substance increases — also increasing the chances of a soldier ruining his career, losing his life and threatening the lives of others.

A driver is considered to be driving under the influence when the blood alcohol content reaches .10. Under Georgia state law, a driver only has to have a BAC of .05.

According to Staff Sgt. Anthony W. Greer, Traffic Accident and Investigations Division, Military Police Activity, non-commissioned officer in charge, a Military Police patrol will look for driving infractions to select a potential drunk driver.

Some of the things policemen look for are: stopping without cause in a traffic lane, following too closely to another car, turning with wide radius, appearing to be drunk, driving on other than a designated roadway, straddling center or lane marker, almost striking object or vehicle, slow response to traffic signals, headlights off at night, signaling inconsistently with driving actions and weaving.

These test include hand-to-eye coordination exercises to test the mental sharpness of the suspect. If the officer at this point is not satisfied with the response of of the driver, they are then apprehended by the officers and brought to a confinement facility for a breath test.

If the suspect refuses to take the breath test willingly, their license is immediately suspended, and the test is administered. Upon failing the breath test, a suspect is then charged with driving under the influence.

For a soldier, this can be devastating and most definitely a career-breaker, said Greer.

The suspect must appear before the federal magistrate, and runs the risk of paying up to $400 in fines, having their license suspended for up to 12 months and losing their insurance. In any case, the suspect will lose all post driving privileges and must enroll into a drug and alcohol rehabilitation program.

For a soldier, the situation only gets worse. The soldier is held at the military police station until a senior non-commissioned officer, an officer, or at the very least, a soldier of a higher rank comes to identify them and be released into the identifier's custody. The soldier may be subject to action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, in accordance with the commander's discretion. The soldier is never able to re-enlist into any branch of service, and for most higher-ranking soldiers, it can be a great obstacle to their career. Once in the civilian sector, having a DUI on their military records will make it almost impossible for them to find a job.

As the holidays descend upon Fort Benning, take precautions against reckless and irresponsible behavior, such as drunk driving. Some tips:

- Select a designated driver among drinking buddies.
- Call a cab.
- Call a friend.
- Call your immediate NCO.
- Call a police officer.
- Walk and let the fresh, cool night air clear your head.

Members of the 1128th Trans. Co., 68th Trans. Bn. of the Alabama National Guard, pose during their recent deployment ceremony at Dickman Field as they prepare to participate in Operation Desert Shield. The company will provide transportation support for the combat troops currently stationed in Saudi Arabia.

Drunk driving is serious business

U.S. Army Safety Center

After a hard day, you stop by the local bar to have a couple of beers just to relax before going home. After all, a couple of beers won't hurt anything. This is a scene that happens daily across the country and, usually, with no adverse consequences.

Today, however, you finish your second beer, leave the bar, get in your car, and a block down the street, get hit by another car that ran a stop sign. The police arrive, and they smell alcohol on your breath.

The officer asks you to take a breath test and, since you feel there's no problem, you consent. Even if you didn't agree, most states now apply the legal principle of "implied consent."

If a law enforcement officer requests that you submit to either a blood alcohol or breath test and you refuse, you can, and usually will, be charged with drinking while intoxicated, and your license will automatically be suspended or revoked.

The results of the test show you have a blood alcohol concentration of .05, which is well below the intoxicated limit of .08 to .10 in most states. Before you can finish your sigh of relief, however, the officer advises you that you are under arrest for driving while impaired.

Most states now consider a motor vehicle operator to be impaired or under the influence with a BAC between .03 and .07.

Your rotten luck just begun.

After your arrest, you will be taken to the local jail and may be placed in a holding cell for several hours.

You may also be held for a preliminary hearing where a judge will decide if the police officer had enough evidence to arrest you for driving under the influence. The results of the breath test, or failure to submit to a breath test, are sufficient for the officer to make an arrest.

When probable cause is determined, the judge will set a date for you to be tried and set bond so you can be released. Bond can be from $1 to $10,000.

Once convicted of DUI you can be fined, go to jail, or both. In addition, you will probably have your license suspended for at least six months or revoked, and you can be required to attend a driving school for alcohol offenders.

The civil authorities will report your "indiscretion" to your commander, and then you an expect action under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

This could range from an Article 15 to a general court martial, depending on the severity of the case.

2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. changes command

Francis Doyle

The color guard presents the unit's colors to the reviewing party.

By Francis Doyle
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

A change of command ceremony for the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment was Nov. 1 on Dickman Field.

Lt. Col. Paul S. Feyereisen exchanged command with Lt. Col. Thomas P. Carraway.

Col. Richard L. St. John, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, in his remarks, thanked Feyereisen "for a job well done in every manner." He said, "The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment will continue to perform in the same outstanding manner under Lt. Col. Carraway." St. John charged Carraway "to uphold the standards of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment."

Feyereisen, in his remarks, told the assembled battalion he appreciated a job well done. "You are the best, absolutely the best, and let no one tell you different," he said.

Feyereisen ended his speech by telling the soldiers, "I am very proud of you and what you have accomplished."

Carraway promised the soldiers would uphold the high standards set by Feyereisen. "How proud I am to be here and I am looking forward to the next two years," he said.

During the ceremony, Feyereisen received a meritorious service medal, and his wife received a letter of appreciation from St. John for her performance in the wives' support group for the 29th Infantry Regiment.

CHAMPUS NEWS

Martin Army Community Hospital

CHAMPUS, the Civilian Health and Medical Program for Uniformed Services, now shares the cost of certain cardiac rehabilitation programs. The benefit is effective for inpatient or outpatient care received on or after Oct. 9, 1987.

Services and supplies are covered for cardiac rehabilitation programs provided by CHAMPUS-authorized hospitals and ordered by physicians as treatment for patients who have experienced the following conditions or events during the preceding 12 months:

- Myocardial infarction (heart attack);
- Coronary artery bypass graft;
- Coronary angioplasty (surgical reconstruction of coronary blood vessels);
- Percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty (use of a balloon catheter inserted into a coronary blood vessel to flatten plaque against the artery wall);
- Chronic stable angina (chest pain) — subject to certain limitations.

Outpatient cardiac rehabilitation treatment is limited to a maximum of 36 sessions per cardiac event (usually provided at the rate of three sessions per week for 12 weeks).

Patients who are diagnosed with chronic stable angina are further limited to one treatment episode (36 sessions) in a calendar year.

Initial evaluation and testing of a patient, and related professional services, may be cost-shared separately. They aren't included in the 36-session limit.

CHAMPUS will not share the cost of non-hospital-based cardiac rehabilitation programs; or programs designed primarily for lifetime maintenance, that are performed at home or in medically unsupervised settings.

Even though the CHAMPUS claims filing deadline has passed for medical care received in 1988 and earlier, the deadline will be waived for covered cardiac rehabilitation services that were provided from Oct. 9, 1987, through Dec. 31, 1988.

Claims for such services provided in 1989 should be filed in time to reach the appropriate CHAMPUS claims processor before Dec. 31.

Claims for now-covered cardiac rehabilitation services provided on or after the effective date that were previously denied may be resubmitted or brought to the attention of the CHAMPUS claims processor for the state in which the care was given. The claims will be reprocessed, following the new policies.

CHAMPUS contractors in the various regions will begin paying cardiac rehabilitation claims in the next few weeks, as their computer systems are modified to process claims for the new benefit.

For more details on CHAMPUS coverage of cardiac rehabilitation, contact the health benefits advisor at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The Springer Children's Theatre presented Charles Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" Nov. 28 at the Emily Woodruff Hall of the Springer Opera House. The performance was a special presentation for Fort Benning soldiers and family members in an effort to support Operation Desert Shield.

"We at the Springer have experienced an increased awareness of Fort Benning as a community resource," said Paul Pierce, managing artistic director of the company. "Because we have many members on our board of directors who are military personnel, and an increasing number of our actors and technicians are soldiers and family members. I also feel that as we have become more aware of Fort Benning, they have become aware of us as a cultural and entertainment outlet," Pierce added.

While several members of the Fort Benning community dotted the audience, a few were on the other side of the footlights as participants in the performance. Capt. Sherman J. Sumner, who played the lead role of Scrooge; his wife, Carol; Stephanie Huckestein, a Fort Benning employee; Shane Spears, a family member; and Mike Edmondson, a teacher at Spencer High School, were Fort Benning "stars" that shined on the Springer stage.

Even as the company is still performing "A Christmas Carol," rehearsals have already begun for their next production, "Driving Miss Daisy," set to open Jan. 24.

Performances of "A Christmas Carol" run through Saturday.

Fort Benning honors volunteer

By Wanda Campbell

The volunteer director of Leadership Seminars was recognized in a ceremony Monday at Infantry Hall as the Volunteer of the Quarter for Fort Benning.

Patsy Chilcote received that honor and has been a facilitator and trainer with Leadership Seminars since 1988. She has served as volunteer director since February 1990.

Cristina Pulignani, a co-worker from Leadership Seminars, said, "The amount of time Patsy puts into the program is awesome. She is the administrator of the program, so she schedules who will serve as facilitator."

Leadership Seminar is a growth enrichment course that helps future commanders' wives be better prepared to deal with their responsibilities. The course provides instruction in leadership skills, stress management, and group dynamics. Pulignani said information learned in the class can work in almost any situation.

Part of the course deals with having successful family support groups. Chilcote said that she believes the course makes a difference and is probably one of the most important volunteer jobs she has had.

According to Karen Crowley, Chief of Army Community Services, Chilcote has been involved in many things on Fort Benning. In 1989, Chilcote helped plan and execute the Army Family Action Plan workshop, she has served in several positions with the Officers' Wives Club, and she volunteers with Santa's Castle, Crowley said.

In the nomination statement, Eileen Reid, family support group leader from the 197th Infantry Brigade, said Chilcote is responsible for writing the constitution for the Leadership Seminar Association, and she participated in the preparation and execution of a three-day seminar for teens at Fort Benning.

Chilcote said her favorite thing to do to relax is shopping and she is the co-author of a shopping guide called "Milling Around", that was the result of many hours exploring area stores. The book is available at the post Thrift Shop and the Infantry Museum.

In addition to her busy volunteering schedule, Chilcote is currently in school working toward a master's degree in community counseling.

Crowley said, "Patsy is just the most caring person, always taking care of others. She is probably the most thoughtful person I've met."

White School reads its students to sleep; teachers, librarians help with slumber party

Fort Benning Schools

What do you do at a slumber party with 127 children? Tell them stories and read.

That was the agenda for students who attended Edward A. White School's annual Read-in Slumber Party. Fourth and fifth grade students at White brought books and sleeping bags and prepared for a night of reading, fun and a few surprises as well.

During the week of Nov. 11 through 17, Fort Benning Schools celebrated National Children's Book Week. White School's slumber party was one event which culminated those activities. Students in attendance kicked off the night with a sing-along and a surprise guest.

Windy Doody, a mime, entertained students with a pantomime entitled "The Zoo." This gave students an opportunity to participate in a type of story they had not planned on, a story without words.

Students were not the only group participating in the evening's activities. Ten storytellers were present. These storytellers included parents, librarians, and teachers. Students chose three storytelling sessions to attend.

Owen Ditchfield

Following an evening snack, everyone cuddled up with a book and participated in silent reading. Some students began to drift off to sleep around 10:30 p.m., while still others remained awake all night to continue reading in the library. Energetic students and brave chaperons did not end the activities until after breakfast the following morning.

Owen Ditchfield, White School media specialist, planned and coordinated the evening's activities with the help of dedicated parent volunteers. Ditchfield commented, "Each year our students look forward to spending a night at school reading." This is the third annual slumber party hosted by White School in honor of Children's Book Week.

A book fair was also held throughout the week. Ditchfield continued, "A similar event, a pajama party, is planned for second and third grade students in the spring. It will have the same purpose — to promote reading for the fun of it."

White School principal, Janet Wynn, commented, "I was pleased to see the number of students we had participating. We want to encourage our students to read and this event is a unique way of making our point." Chaperons and staff served as role models to students as they, too, read throughout the night.

White School recently offered parents a challenge to read with their children for 30 to 40 minutes per night. The school library is supporting the challenge by making books available for check-out by students and parents.

Eighth-grade student interviews general

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard

A student from a local school interviewed the post commander Tuesday for information to use as research for an essay project.

Melissa M. Roberts, 13, an eighth-grader at Faith Middle School on post, interviewed Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza for his opinion on the crisis in the Middle East. Roberts needed the information for research for a school project.

The students of Roberts' class are participating in the annual Young Columbus Essay Contest. The contest involves students of area schools submitting an essay discussing a topic concerning a current world event. Being a member of the Fort Benning community, Roberts' interest centered on Operation Desert Shield and the crisis in the Middle East, which Fort Benning units have supported heavily.

"I wanted to ask General Cavezza because he would be the most knowledgable person at Fort Benning about the Middle East crisis," said Roberts. "It really helps to have quotes and get further research for your essay. It makes it more interesting."

Roberts said she found Cavezza "nice and polite. He gave really good answers and he was easy to understand."

As for Roberts' opinion of the Middle East crisis, she said,"I'm not really too sure of the situation. We should try to stop Saddam Hussein, but I hope that we don't have to go to war."

Roberts is the daughter of Maj. Paul and Elizabeth Roberts.

Alabama beats Auburn, wins Fiesta Bowl spot

By Ron Allen
USAIC Public Affairs

The Auburn Tigers marched onto Legion Field in Birmingham Saturday ranked 20th, with the $2.5 million payout of the Fiesta Bowl and a share of the Southeastern Conference title in their sights. They shuffled off with the Peach Bowl's $900,000 payout, fourth in the SEC, and out of the top 25.

The Alabama Crimson Tide beat the War Eagles, 16-7, won the invitation to the Fiesta bowl, moved into the top 25 and placed second in the SEC; not a bad year for a team that started the season at 0-3.

The seniors at Alabama had never beaten Auburn. The War Eagles had dumped Alabama for four straight years, but finally the 'Tide' had turned. It was a understatement when first year head coach, Gene Stallings, said "This was a big win."

It was a perfect day for football with clear skies and a comfortable 63 degrees. The Tide won the toss and elected to defer to the second half. Philip Doyle kicked off to start the game on schedule at 2:13 p.m., however CBS had missed the start of the game so Doyle had to kick again. Auburn's Herbert Casey took the kick five yards deep in the end zone and the game was on.

During the first quarter, Auburn held the ball 9 minutes and 18 seconds but failed to score. Alabama's first score came after Efrum Thomas intercepted a Stan White pass and ran it back to the Auburn five yard line. Three plays and 1:23 later, Robert Jones ran in from one yard out to put the Tide up by six, Doyle made it seven with the extra point kick.

In the second quarter, it was Brian Stutson with the interception from White and a run back to the Auburn 23. That turnover netted three more points for Alabama off a Doyle field goal. With 49 seconds remaining in the half, Auburn's Lamar Rogers recovered a Alabama fumble on the Tide's 38. James Joseph ran a screen pass on third and eight, 28 yards to the eight-yard line to make it first and goal. Fred Baxter then took an eight-yard pass from White and Auburn was on the board. The Jim Von Wyl kick made it 10 - 7.

Two more Doyle field goals in the second half, one in the third and one in the fourth quarter, finished up the game's scoring and the Crimson Tide had beaten Auburn, 16-7, for the first time in five years.

Alabama will now prepare for the New Year's Day bash in the Fiesta Bowl in Tempe, Ariz. against Louisville, now ranked 18th in the nation at 9-1-1. Auburn won't have far to travel for their consolation game in Atlanta's Peach Bowl against 6-4-1 Indiana.

The Fiesta has the fifth largest payout of all the bowl games with its $2.5 million. There was talk that Alabama would not accept a bid to go to the Fiesta regardless of who won the Auburn game. But, the Tide players decided to stay out of politics and make the trip to Tempe. "We're not into politics," Alabama linebacker Spencer Hammond, a senior, said. "We're just going out there to play football."

The controversy began after Arizona voters decided not to recognize the birthday of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. as a holiday. Alabama president Dr. Roger Sayers, in an official statement released after Saturday's game, said, "In the end, I was persuaded by the wishes of our football players, a group of young men who have been as vitally concerned about the broader issues as any other group. . . and were united in the desire to consider all their bowl options, including the Fiesta Bowl.

"It was what the players wanted," said Stallings. "We're happy to be going."

Auburn meanwhile, will "lick their wounds and regroup," said head coach Pat Dye. "We need to make the Peach Bowl the best bowl of the season."

Holiday race successful

Fort Benning Schools

The weather was clear for the 12th running of the Faith Holiday Race. More than 500 people registered in the four races with 155 finishing the one-miler for 0-8 years old, 124 in the one-miler for 9-14 years old, 126 in the two-miler and 90 runners were clocked in the five-miler. There were two wheelchair finishers in the one-mile race and three in the five-mile race.

Loyd School's efforts were rewarded with the winning the Annual Participation Award given to the post school with the largest percentage of participation in the race.

The turnout was so large that a re-order of T-shirts is being made. Persons having a shirt on back order should pick it up at the office of Faith School on Friday, Dec. 7. Shirts for those persons living outside the Fort Benning and Columbus area will be mailed the following week.

The following course records were broken:

In the female division:

Arsher Smith broke her one-mile for 0-8 record by 46 seconds with a 7:14 mile run.

Angela Jones, from Salem, Ala., beat the previous two-mile course record of 12:44 with a 12:33.

In the male division:

The five-mile course record dropped from 26:22 to 25:35. It was run by Tracy Garrison.

In the wheelchair division:

one mile — Connie Fleener — 13:15

five miles — George Febry — 34:15

Members of the Faith School staff expressed their gratitude for the efforts of the volunteers who worked during the race to make it a safe and successful one.

Desert Shield families enjoy holiday parties

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

The Main Post Bowling Center is the site of nine Christmas parties for the family members of Operation Desert Shield.

The parties are being sponsored by the Association of the United States Army and Columbus Bank and Trust, and co-sponsor Pratt and Whitney. Family support groups will host the event for their units and nearly 2,000 family members are expected to attend. Desert Shield identification card forms will be available.

The dates for the remaining parties are:

Saturday — 3 to 5 p.m. for 1/18th Infantry, 197th Inf. Bde.

Sunday — noon to 2 p.m. for 533rd Transportation and 598th Maintenance

Sunday — 4 to 6 p.m. for 4/41st FA, 197th Inf. Bde.

Tuesday — 6 to 8 p.m. for 36th Engineer Group, 215th Finance Group, and 608th Ordnance

Dec. 16 — 3 to 5 p.m. for 2/18th Infantry, 197th.

Sylvia Novier, family support group leader from the 34th Medical Battalion, and Eileen Reid, family support group leader from the 197th, agreed the parties are a wonderful gift to the families in their units. Reid said, "The family support groups normally raise money for this event with bake sales in the motor pool area but, of course, now there is no one in the motor pool area.

Novier said, "Everyone is real excited about this opportunity; it will be such a stress reliever for those who normally plan the parties and those who will participate in them."

Each party will feature free bowling for children with special bumper pads installed for the very young bowlers. Tokens for video games and refreshments will also be available. Operation Oreo, sponsored by the Nabisco Company, is a cookie sampler given to participants.

Other give-aways for the event include bowling balls and bags, donated by the Brunswick Corporation and free bowling certificates, donated by Morale, Welfare and Recreation. The grand prize for a lucky participant will be a full-sized Ms. Pac Man video game donated by Southern Amusements.

Craft shops offer more

Directorate of Community Activity

The Main Post Arts and Crafts Center is located next to the TIC Credit Union and the Main NCO Club and is open to all active duty and retired military and their families as well as Department of the Army and non-appropriated fund civilians.

The center is open from 1 to 9 p.m. Wednesday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and holidays. A few of the activities offered include ceramic slip casting classes, pottery classes, stained glass classes, framing workshops, film development, and T-shirt silk screening. Supplies are available for all classes at a minimum cost.

The Arts and Crafts Center now has a trophy shop. Customers may construct their trophies at a reduced cost. The center has computerized machines for engraving wood and metal plaques.

Customers may also customize their own T-shirts. As many as 1,000 multi-colored copies may be made for T-shirts. These may be done by the customer or the staff can do it. A customer can use his or her own design on shirts, caps, hats or on paper. Unit crests may also be copied on T-shirts or caps.

Both the Kelley Hill Auto Crafts Shop and the Main Post Auto Crafts Shop have state-of-the-art engine analysers. These machines cost more than $20,000 each. There is only one other engine analyser of this type in the city of Columbus. For $25, you can get a computerized printout of your engine analysis, along with minor adjustments. There is a one dollar charge for each additional adjustment made at that time.

For more information, call 545-3677 or 545-1248 or stop by the center.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. I am in the Army Reserves and was just notified that I will be reporting for active duty next Friday. I signed a 12-month lease on my apartment two months ago and my landlord is saying that I will have to pay him a termination fee of three months' rent plus forfeit my security deposit.

I can't afford all that, especially since I'll be making a lot less on active duty then I was as a civilian. Do I have to shell out all that money?

A. The Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act will protect you in this situation. The Act provides that a soldier who signs a residential lease before entering military service may terminate the lease.

You must deliver the written termination to the landlord at any time following the date of the beginning of your military service. Although it would be best to deliver the notice in person, mailing the notice to the landlord is sufficient.

Registered or certified mail will provide you with proof that the notice was received by the landlord, but the law only requires you to put the notice in a properly addressed envelope with adequate postage and to deposit the envelope in the mail.

You should retain a copy of the termination notice for your own records. If your lease provides for the monthly payment of rent, the termination will not be effective until 30 days after the first date on which the next rent payment is due subsequent to the date when the notice is delivered or mailed.

If the lease does not provide for a monthly payment of rent, the termination shall be effective on the last day of the month following the month in which the notice is delivered or mailed.

Thus, in your case, you should deliver the notice of termination in writing to your landlord right after you enter active duty.

Since you will already be into the month of December, you will be responsible for the balance of the rent for December and all of the rent for January.

The landlord's threats concerning three months' of rent are contrary to the federal law. The refund of your security deposit will depend on the condition of the apartment when you vacate. If there is no damage and all of the fees and utility charges have been paid, the security deposit should be refunded to you.

You should be aware that the landlord may try to seize and hold some of your personal effects and furniture or keep you from moving such items out of the apartment because he feels that he has a claim for rent after the effective date of the termination.

To do so violates the federal law and could subject the landlord to a fine or imprisonment.

Call the Legal Assistance Office at 545-3281 or 545-3282 and make an appointment to speak with an attorney if you have any additional questions.

Poetry can bring cash

Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum

Poems are now being accepted for entry in Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum's new "Distinguished Poet Awards" poetry contest. Cash prizes totaling $1,000 will be awarded, including a $500 grand prize. The contest is free to enter.

Poets may enter one poem only, 20 lines or less, on any subject, in any style. Contest closes Jan. 31, but poets are encouraged to send their work as soon as possible, since poems entered in the contest also will be considered for publication in the fall 1991 edition of Treasured Poems of America, a hardcover anthology. Anthology purchase may be required to ensure publication, but is not required to enter or win the contest. Prize winners will be notified by March 31.

"If you are a new or emerging poet, we especially want to see your work," says William H. Trent, editor. "We are looking for sincerity and originality in a wide variety of styles and themes."

Poems should be sent to Sparrowgrass Poetry Forum Inc., Dept. N, 203 Diamond St., Sistersville, WV 26175.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Youth pet show — Youth Services will sponsor a pet show Saturday at 1 p.m. at Youth Services, building 1056. This is an opportunity for Fort Bennings' youth to exhibit their favorite pet. Sign-ups are required, and you must provide updated shot records at the time of registration. The show is open to children of active duty and retired military personnel, and DOD, NAF civilians.

For more information, call 545-3070.

- Family Counseling Center, 102 Seventh St., Columbus, 327-3238; Tuesday, 7 to 9 p.m.
- American Red Cross of Columbus, 3940 Rosemont Drive, Columbus, 323-5614; Monday, 7 to 9 p.m.

Trinity Methodist Church, 2600 Fifth Ave., Phenix City, Ala., 298-4140; Thursday, 10 a.m. to 12 noon.

Contact the Red Cross Office at 545-5194 for further information.

Patch Preschool — The Fort Benning Early Childhood Development Center has a few vacancies and a short waiting list for 3-year-olds. Children must have been 3 or 4 on or before Sept. 1, 1990 to be eligible. For more information, call 687-2404.

Boys Club Christmas parties — The Metro Boys Club of Columbus invites families of Operation Desert Shield to attend their annual Christmas parties. At these events, they provide fruit, stockings, food, drinks, movies, and Santa Claus for the children.

Six parties are scheduled as follows:

Dec. 17 — Wilson Ext. at 7 p.m.; 720 35th St., phone 327-1176.

*Dec. 18 — South Columbus Branch at 7 p.m.; 3200 Cusseta Road, phone 689-3645.

*Dec. 19 — East Columbus Branch at 7 p.m.; 1429 Morris Road, phone 561-0938.

*Dec. 20 — North Columbus Branch at 7 p.m.; 1309 29th St., phone 323-1743.

Dec. 21 — Baker Village Ext. at 6 and 7 p.m.; building 31, phone 689-4431.

Dec. 22 — Elizabeth Canty Ext. at 1 p.m.; Canty Homes Office, phone 571-2918.

Call to make reservations for club you wish to attend.

(*Recommended because of larger sized facility)

For more information, call Boys Club Central Office at 327-4268.

USO tickets — When USO receives tickets to events, such as plays, sporting events and other types of entertainment, these tickets are awarded free to military personnel by means of a random drawing.

To be eligible to receive free tickets, one must register by means of a postcard (Department of Defense postcards are illegal and only one postcard per person). Include your name, rank, duty station, duty and home phone numbers on the card. Then mail entries to: USO Tickets, c/o USO of Georgia Inc., P.O. Box 20963, Atlanta, Ga. 30320.

Winners are notified as soon as possible before the event but since USO does not receive the tickets until very shortly before the event, this is often short notice. Tickets must be picked up at location indicated by USO.

Youth Services craft workshop — Santa will visit Youth Services Wednesday and Dec. 14, with elves from 2 to 6 p.m.

A Christmas crafts workshop will be Dec. 15 from noon to 2 p.m., where children can make Yuletide treasures. Crafts to be made include hair ornaments, Christmas T-shirts, and wreaths. Supplies and materials will be provided with the exception of T-shirts or sweatshirts, which must be brought by each participant.

To sign up, stop by Youth Services, building 1056, or call 545-3070 for more information.

Weight reduction classes — The Nutrition Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital is offering special weight reduction classes.

Participants will receive instruction on a low calorie diet using the American Dietetic Association and American Heart Association exchange lists, tips for avoiding extra calorie consumption in social situations, exercise tips, and a two-week meal plan.

Participants will be encouraged to lose weight safely and healthfully. The program is staffed by registered dietitians.

The course is free for military beneficiaries. Interested persons should call 544-1542 from 8:15 a.m. to 4:15 p.m., Monday through Friday for class enrollment.

SPIRITUAL

Jewish festival of lights begins

By Barry R. Baron
Post Jewish Chaplain

Chanukah, the Jewish festival of lights, is a holiday which occurs the same time of year as Christmas. This year, it begins Thursday and continues through Dec. 19.

Chanukah is the Hebrew word for "dedication." The holiday commemorates the purification and rededication of the temple in Jerusalem in 163 B.C.E.

Antiochus, the Assyrian emperor, had demanded uniformity of religious practice among all his subjects as a sign of loyalty to him. For Jews, this meant a ban on circumcision and study of the five books of Moses, being forced to eat forbidden foods and seeing their holy temple desecrated by sacrifices to the Greek pagan Gods.

By 165 B.C.E., the Jews revolted. They were led in battle at first by a priest from the Judean village of Modin and later by his son.

In 163 B.C.E. fighting against a larger and better equipped enemy, the Judean forces ousted the Assyrians from Jerusalem. While it is this event and subsequent cleansing of the temple which Chanukah celebrates, the war itself lasted another two years. The Jews won, and as a result, gained their independence from Assyria.

In the temple in Jerusalem, there was a seven-branch oil lamp called a "Menorah." When the temple was in use, this lamp was kept lit with pure olive oil. When the Maccabees rededicated the temple, they needed to re-light the Menorah. According to Jewish tradition, the oil that was available was enough to keep the Menorah lit for only one day. Miraculously, however, the lights continued burning for eight days, until more oil could be obtained.

In memory of the miracle, Jews today light an eight-branch Menorah on Chanukah. One candle or oil wick is kindled on the first night of Chanukah. On each succeeding night, an additional lamp is lit.

Chanukah is a holiday with an important message not only for Jews, but for all of us, especially soldiers. Long ago, people fought and died for their freedom. They believed in themselves and in their cause, and they were triumphant. We, too, believe in freedom, we are sworn to fight and even die for it if necessary.

Religious freedom for which the Judeans fought is an especially precious kind of freedom. Antiochus, tried to impose one religion on his subjects. He reaped a bitter harvest of war and revolt. In our country, by contrast, people are free to worship as they choose. Because of this freedom, many different kinds of people can live together peacefully.

Religion can give great strength to people, just as it did to the Maccabees and their followers. Faith in God can help us to overcome many different types of enemies, whether within or outside ourselves. "Not by might and not by power, but by my spirit, says the Lord of Hosts." (Zechariah 4:6)

Determination to protect religious freedom should give us pride in ourselves as American soldiers. Protecting freedom is, indeed, a sacred calling. Responding to God's call, each of us in our own way, should strengthen ourselves to meet the challenges we face, just as it strengthened the Maccabees 2,200 years ago.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Parenting class — A new parenting class will begin at the Chaplain's Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza. The class will begin Jan. 16 and continue each Wednesday from noon to 1:30 p.m. through Feb. 27.

Entitled, The Art of Sensitive Parenting, the course deals with the 10 keys of raising confident, competent and responsible children.

There is no fee for this class. Registration begins immediately. Call 545-1760/5301 to register. No babysitting is available.

Chapel closed — The Kelley Hill Chapel is closed until further notice.

Sunday School classes — Teachers are needed for the remainder of the "Elective" Sunday School classes scheduled for the 1990-91 school year. The schedule is as follows:

Sunday to Dec. 9 or 16, 1990 (six or seven weeks)

Jan. 6, 1991 to Feb. 24, 1991 (eight weeks)

March 3, 1991 to April 7, 1991 (six weeks)

April 14, 1991 to May 19, 1991 (six weeks)

PROTESTANT

New Adult Sunday School Class — A new Adult Sunday School class has been organized at the Main Post Sunday School. The subject being studied is a book entitled "Be Encouraged." The class meets at 9:30 a.m. each Sunday in the Religious Education Center, building 229, and is particularly recommended to spouses of deployed soldiers. The class is dismissed at 10:30 so that members may attend the chapel worship service of their choice.

Bible study — The Protestant Women of the Chapel hold Bible study every Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, which is located on the corner of Dixie Road and Ingersoll Street. Babysitting is provided.

If you would like to share in this time of fellowship, but do not have transportation, call Jeanne Bastone at 682-3358. For more information, contact Diane Boucher at 689-6206 or Lilliet Garrison at 687-8012.

Sunday School — Custer Terrace Sunday School, located in the Custer Terrace Chapel, building 10800, begins at 10 a.m. while the Main Post Sunday School, located in the Religious Education Center, Crain Hall, building 229, begins at 9:30 a.m.

For more information, call 545-2366.

Transportation for Main Post Sunday School — Buses are available to pick up passengers in all housing areas on Fort Benning who are traveling to and from the Main Post Sunday School.

Sunday School is from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the Religious Education Center, building 229.

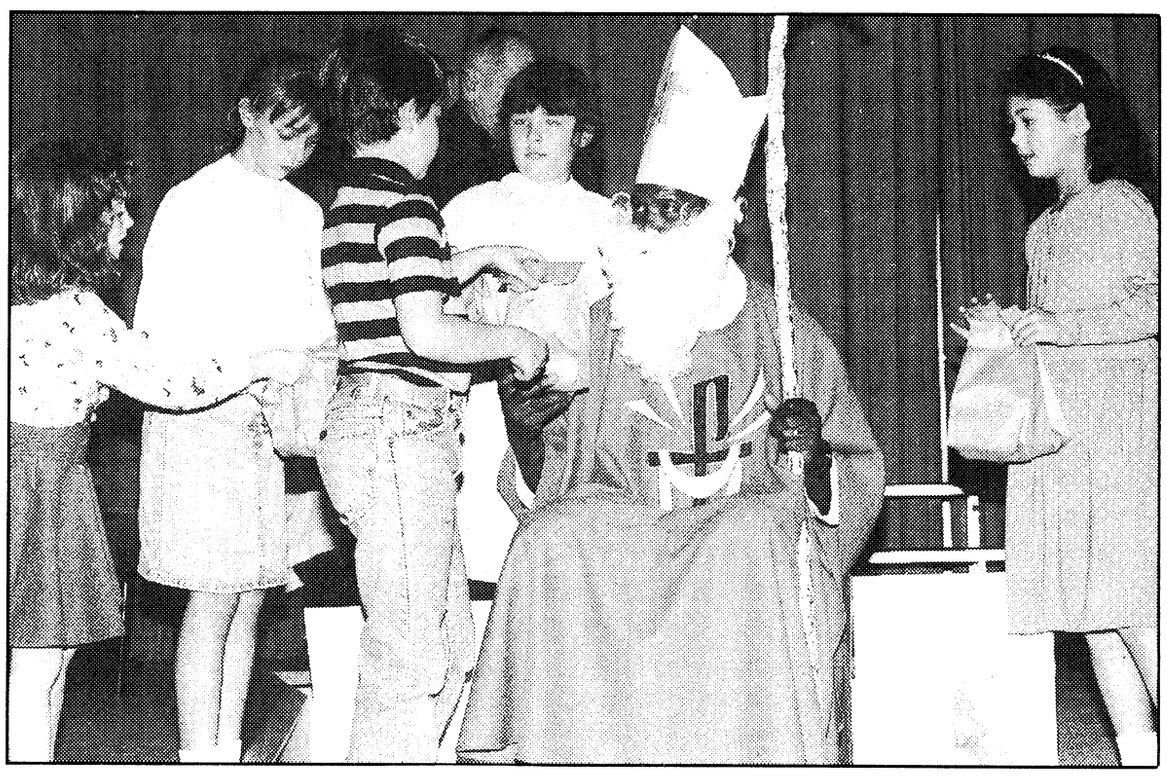
Anyone needing a ride to Sunday School should call the Religious Education Center at 545-2366 and 545-4715 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Bible study — There are six Officer Christian Fellowship Bible study groups that meet during the evening at various locations at Fort Benning.

Anyone who would like to become a part of one of the groups should call 545-2050.

Children's church — The Infantry Center Chapel has developed a "Children's Church" service for 4- to 6-year-olds.

The children meet in the chapel annex during the 11 a.m. service.



Debra Galle

Don Diggs makes an appearance as Saint Nicholaus.

Debra Galle

Felicia Valentin and Andy Walters portray Mary and Joseph in the Nativity scene.

Catholic Christmas Party

More than 300 guests from the Fort Benning's community attended the Catholic Christmas party held at Dexter School. A special program was presented, and attendees enjoyed a potluck dinner. Santa Claus was not on hand but the children were treated to a visit from Saint Nicholaus.

POST BRIEFS

Robberies occur on post

Two soldiers were victims of a robbery and attempted robbery recently at the telephone booths adjacent to Bernheim Dental Clinic, building 2828, according to Military Police officials.

Officials said the subjects are probably juveniles based upon information provided by the victims.

The incidents occurred during darkness, and officials said soldiers should be advised to use the buddy system and be alert to any unusual activity.

Information regarding these incidents and other suspicious activity should be reported to the MP desk sergeants at 545-5222.

Red Cross available for emergency contacts

The American Red Cross is available to contact loved ones in the Persian Gulf in case of emergency, officials say.

Several recent incidents show that some spouses or family members are using various means other than American Red Cross channels, and officials say this slows down the notification process to soldiers, causes undue delay and frustration.

The American Red Cross is the only official organization used by the armed services to relay or verify legitimate emergencies to service members, and the agency is expanding its operations as required to meet increasing demands, officials said.

Post dining facilities offer family Christmas dinners

Fort Benning's Installation Food Service Office is taking Christmas dinner reservations from family members of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield.

Those families wishing to eat Christmas dinner in an installation dining hall should make reservations from now until Wednesday by calling 545-3750, 545-7970 or 545-5303.

The Christmas meal will be served Dec. 25 from 11:30 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

Tree lighting Monday

The yuletide season officially comes to Fort Benning Dec. 17 with the lighting of the post's Christmas tree.

This year's lighting ceremony is at 6 p.m. on the Field of Four Chaplains, adjacent to building 101, The Infantry Center Chapel. A concert by the 283rd U.S. Army Band will begin at 5:30 p.m.

In addition to audience participation in singing Christmas carols, the story of Christmas will be told by scriptures and music. Sunday school children will perform in the nativity scene.

At the close of the tree lighting ceremony, refreshments will be served on the annex patio of the Infantry Center Chapel. Santa will arrive in a fire truck with gifts.

Baby-sitting will be provided, and the public is invited.

Hospital entrance to close

The main entrance to Martin Army Community Hospital will be closed Saturday and Sunday to allow assembly of a new Information Desk. Visitors and staff should use the clinic entrance of the hospital. Patients should use the emergency room entrance.

Lights authorized one week prior to Christmas

Directorate of Engineering and Housing officials are reminding post residents that exterior lighting in family housing areas is authorized one week prior to and one week after Christmas. Residents are requested not to turn on exterior lights prior to 6 p.m. and to turn them off by 11 p.m.

Family housing area residents are reminded to ensure appropriate safety practices are observed, officials said.

Operation Holiday kicks off

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The 11th annual "Operation Holiday" kicked off with a party at the Main Post Bowling Center Tuesday.

The party is just one of the many Operation Holiday events sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army and Columbus Bank and Trust Company, with Pratt and Whitney as co-sponsor.

Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza, post commander, Col. John D. Fuller, post chief of staff, Ben Williams, AUSA chapter president, and Sam Wellington, Columbus Bank and Trust president were among the officials present at the event.

Family members enjoyed free bowling games, refreshments, giveaways and prizes, and the children were treated to a visit from Santa.

Operation Holiday events are funded by AUSA and are designed to provide activities for the soldiers at Fort Benning who are away from their families during the holiday period.

Officials said that in view of the deployment of nearly 6,000 soldiers from Fort Benning to Saudi Arabia as part of Desert Shield, this year Operation Holiday has been expanded to include family members.

The program provides local businesses and citizens the opportunity to express appreciation for the contributions of the military to the community, officials said.

The events of Operation Holiday are:

- Atlanta Hawks vs. Utah Jazz, Dec. 20.
- Bowling tournament, Dec. 22 and 23.
- Atlanta Falcons vs. Los Angeles Rams, Dec. 23.
- Complimentary overnight stay, Dec. 24, Holiday Inn, Victory Drive and Holiday Inn, Airport.
- Blue and Gray Game, Dec. 25.
- Variety Show, Sand Hill Theater, Dec. 25, Directorate of Community Activities.
- Atlanta Hawks vs. Boston Celtics, Dec. 28
- Peach Bowl, Auburn vs. Indiana, Dec. 29.
- Atlanta Hawks vs. Golden State Warriors, Dec. 29.
- Miss Georgia Superstars Show, Jan. 1, Sand Hill Theater, AUSA.

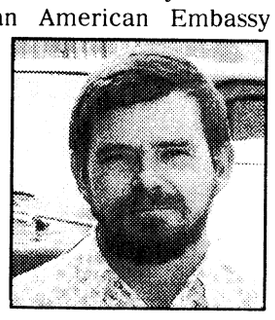
Former hostage joins family at Benning

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Christmas wishes were answered early for the family of Virgil Lord, an American Embassy employee who joined his family at Fort Benning Sunday after being released from Iraq last week.



Virgil Lord

Lord, 38, a member of the American Embassy staff, had been a "guest" in Baghdad since August.

"I know some people don't like me saying it, but I felt like a guest," he said. "I was able to go anywhere, anytime. I was never asked for a passport, but I also had diplomatic immunity. Even some people without diplomatic immunity went shopping everyday."

Lord, his wife, Carleen, and three children, aged 10, 9, and 7, were in Kuwait at the time of the Iraqi invasion Aug. 2. "We were called at 6 a.m. and told we were being invaded and to stay in our houses. We stayed home until Aug. 6 when the Embassy called us in. On Aug. 23, Saddam Hussein said he would not honor the Embassy status and we were told we were going to Turkey."

Lord said that once they arrived in Baghdad on Aug. 24, they were told the wives and children were leaving, but the men were not. From there, the family members went on to Turkey alone he said.

While awaiting Lord's release, his family moved to Fort Benning where they were sponsored by the 29th Infantry Regiment. Mrs. Lord said, "The sponsoring unit has been fabulous." She said unit wives have included her in various social events such as Hails and Farewells and much more.

Mrs. Lord said Chief Warrant Officer Frank Steel from the the 29th was very helpful. "He made arrangements for us to get quarters, furnishings (everything was left behind), and financial help," she said. "People from the unit gave us clothes. The day after we got quarters, they showed up

CID recovers stolen property

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

More than $20,000 worth of stolen property was confiscated by Criminal Investigation Division officials Nov. 6 and 7, according to the CID commander.

Seven youths from from the McGraw Manor housing area have been apprehended as suspects, officials said.

The youths, all military family members ranging in age from 15 to 18 years old, are accused of organizing a "theft ring" that is responsible for several thefts in post housing areas, according to CID officials.

"The juveniles are all military dependents from the McGraw Manor housing area, where they seemed to base their larceny activities," said Lt. Col. Sladen J. Mohl, CID commander.

There was no evidence indicating that the juveniles were in any way gang-related, said Mohl. "More than likely, the youths

Maintenance check

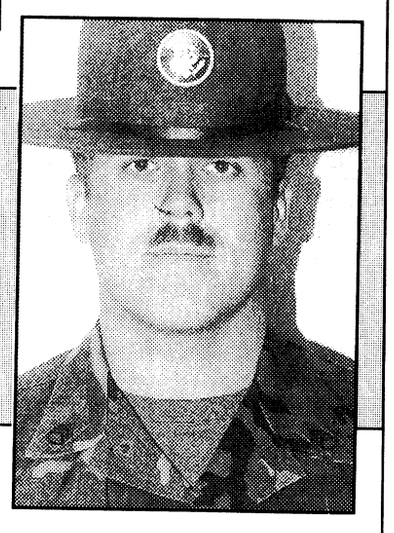
M-1 Abrams tank driver Stephen J. Nichols, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 197th Inf. Bde. checks the suspension on the vehicle. For the tankers in Nichols' company, putting the rounds on target is only half the challenge of Operation Desert Shield; they're fighting a battle with wrenches, screwdrivers and clipboards, since maintenance is high on the list of priorities. Story on page A-4.

OPINION

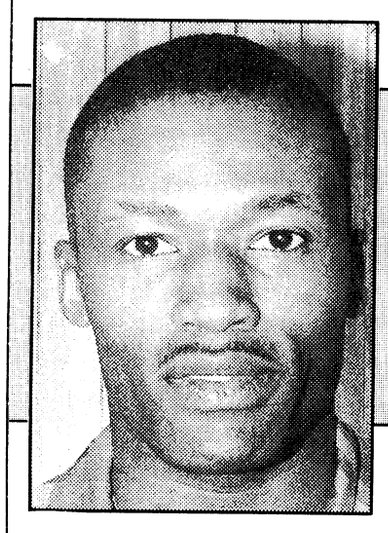
VARIOUS VOICES:

How has Operation Desert Shield changed your holiday plans?

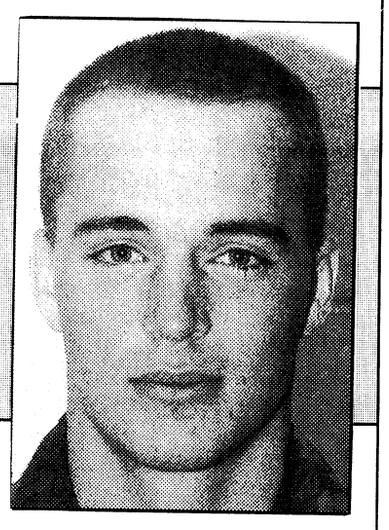
Sgt. 1st Class John L. Redding, Co. A, 1st Bn, 507th PIR — "Operation Desert Shield has completely interrupted my Christmas plans because this year my wife, who is in the 598th Maintenance Co., is in Saudi Arabia. I want to make Christmas as normal as I can for our daughter, but it's not the same."



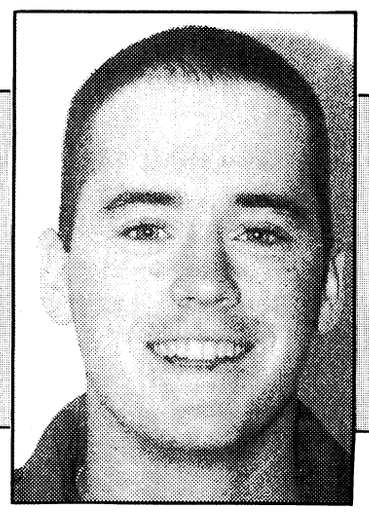
Staff Sgt. Curtis P. Bruce, Co. E, 4th Bn., 30th Inf. Regt. — "Christmas Exodus has been canceled so we will continue to work straight through the holiday season. I don't mind because I'm a soldier 24 hours a day. Holiday or no holiday, it's mission first."



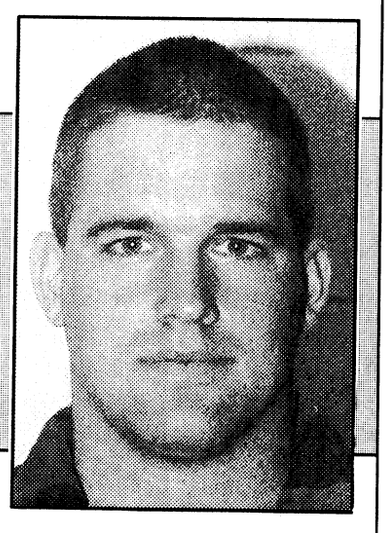
Pfc. Albert L. Cook, Headquarters and Service Co., ITC — "We'll be training straight through the holidays due to the cancellation of Christmas Exodus, but it's all toward a greater good — accomplishing the mission."



Pvt. Tracy S. Sorenson, Co. D, 4th Bn., 36th Inf. Regt. — "From what I understand, Christmas Exodus has been canceled, and that has created a lot of stress among the troops in my unit. At the same time, though, it's helped us to come together even stronger to get through this hard time."



Pvt. 2 Frank N. Hladik, Co. D, 4th Bn., 36th Inf. Regt. — "I hate not being able to go home to see family and friends for the holidays. On the other hand, we'll finish basic training faster, and we'll be better trained with our minds solely on the mission."



Pfc. Joseph P. Burrus, Co. D, 4th Bn., 36th Inf. Regt. — "I won't be able to see my wife who's pregnant with our first child because of the cancellation of Christmas Exodus. But, on the positive side, we'll continue to train through the holidays so we'll graduate from basic earlier."

COMMENTARY

History teaches many valuable lessons

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

"Uncle Clyde," was drafted into helping a student write a history paper. I'll be interested in seeing the student's grade because I got the distinct feeling we weren't operating off the same wavelength.

"Uncle Clyde, tell me again about the Boston Tea Party of December 16, 1773. Did those colonialist dudes dress up like Indians and throw tea away because they weren't invited to the party?"

"No, Bubba. Throwing the tea in the harbor was the party. It wasn't one of those fancy, dancy parties with tea and crumpets that proper Bostonians have today. It was colonialists sneaking on British ships and dumping the tea overboard."

"But why?"

"Because the tea was being taxed to support the British government and the colonialists didn't have any say in the matter. In other words they were being taxed without a chance to be heard."

"Is that like the gas tax we got now because of the Iraqis?"

"No. The gas tax is to help reduce the budget deficit. The similarity ends there, though, because our duly elected representatives voted for it."

"I didn't have a voice in who our duly elected representatives are."

"That's not the point; the American public did, even if only about 30 percent of the eligible voters exercised that right."

"So these Congress people went and decided to raise the tax on gas even while the price is going up because of some crazy man in Iraq?"

"You got that right, Bubba."

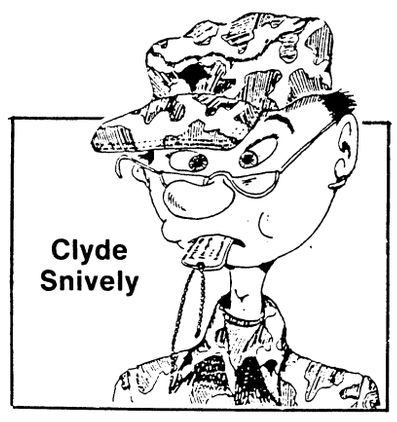
"Next thing you know they'll raise the tax on beer since the price of beer is supposed to go up."

"They did. And what makes you the expert on beer? You're far too young to drink."

"We try and keep abreast of world developments."

"I see."

"By the way, Uncle Clyde, what's this Pearl Harbor business? I saw some long article in the newspaper about what lessons did we learn?"



"Pearl Harbor was a surprise attack by the Japanese that got us into World War II..."

"Was that before or after Vietnam?"

"Way before. It was even before Korea and black and white TV."

"Korea? Black and white TV?"

"Yeah," I said, "two other unpleasantries our ancestors had to endure."

"So did we learn anything at Pearl Harbor?"

"Oh sure, lotsa things. Like a need for an intelligence clearinghouse, a need for dispersal when it comes to docking boats and parking planes. And above all, when you hear 'Tora, tora, tora,' over the radio, duck, you're about to have some more Toyotas dropped on your head."

"Is that, like, an attempt to be funny, Uncle Clyde?"

"I guess not."

"Uncle Clyde, are you going to help me with my report or not?"

"I'm not sure anymore what your report's supposed to be about."

"It's about history. I told you that from the beginning."

"History's a pretty broad subject, can't you narrow it down?"

"Oh, yeah, it's supposed to be about something that happened in American history before 1850. The report's due tomorrow. Six pages handwritten, three pages typed, a minimum of three sources," he said, reading off a crumpled sheet of paper.

"I gotcha, and one source is me, another your mother and a third your father," I said with an edge of sarcasm in my voice.

"Yeah, how did you know?"

"Just an educated guess," I muttered, realizing Bubba represented the next generation of soldiers who'd be defending our freedom.

Environmental ethic: Reduce, recycle, compost

By William Franklin

Garbage, trash, solid waste! No matter what you call it, we Americans discard 180 million tons of it annually.

That translates into 360 billion pounds a year, or about 1,500 pounds per year for every man, woman and child in America.

Only since 1988 have we as a nation really looked at the way we manage our trash and started to change for the better and permanently.

Solid waste and recycling have captured our attention in part because every day we see the symbols of our high standard of living tossed in the trash can or carelessly discarded at the beach, the park or along the roadside.

We know we can do something about our trash as individuals. That means you and I can make a difference.

If we participate in collecting newspapers, aluminum cans, glass bottles, plastic containers or steel cans, for recycling, we are conserving two important resources — natural resources and landfill space.

Five options are widely recognized today as the best ways to manage solid wastes. They are:

- Reduce the amount of natural resources used in products; and rescue, repair and extend the life of products.
- Recycle materials back into the same product, when possible, or into another useful product.
- Compost organic materials, especially yard and garden wastes, into a useful soil amendment.
- Burn, in an environmentally safe manner, the nonrecyclable materials and contaminated residues to recover useful energy in the form of steam or electricity.
- Landfill, in an environmentally safe manner, only those leftovers of economic activity that cannot be put to useful applications.

Advice for the consumer has come in a confusing array of forms, designed to appeal to people's emotions and guilt feelings.

My advice is more general, but has the same objectives as those of serious activities — better use of our resources and a better quality of life.

Here's how I would express it:

- Do a lifestyle checkup. Be sure of the consequences of your behavior, i.e., what you do with your trash and litter.
- Be a careful shopper and buyer. When you can, buy something durable, repairable, reusable or recyclable.
- Participate in "closing the loop" by keeping recyclables out of the trash, and into whatever local programs are available. The other end of that loop is to buy recycled or recyclable products whenever possible.
- After all efforts have been made to reduce recycle and compost, remember that we need safe final resting places for what cannot be used — and that amount is still going to significant until technology and recycling markets can catch up.

For the foreseeable future, mixed-waste composting, energy-recovery plants and sanitary landfills are crucial to sound solid-waste management.

- Be conscious that every strong movement — even environmentalism — has to have its symbols and villains. Manufacturers are working feverishly to be responsive to our new environmental ethic.

Products targeted because they supposedly are "symbols of wasteful society" have a place in society, too, whether they involve plastics, polystyrene foam, diapers or paper made from trees.

Finally, let's keep on pushing toward those goals — to reduce, recycle and compost — with patience, persistence and participation.

After all, living a good life and conserving our resources are goals we all share.

Editor's note: William Franklin is principal of Franklin Associates, a consulting firm in Prairie Village, Kan., which specializes in waste, recycling and environmental issues.

LETTER

Reader raps Snively's comments about town meeting

In response to the article in the Nov. 28 Bayonet by Clyde Snively on community issues, one question comes to mind: what planet is he living on?

For the record, I would like to remind Spec. Snively that the "Quality of Life" is something that should not be taken lightly. The mayors of each community volunteer their time to help improve the quality of life on Fort Benning.

If that means getting lights on a path to a Scout hut to ensure our children's safety or providing safe passage for children to walk to school, so be it.

Need we inform Snively that Scouting is about a lot of things, even safety. There is a time and place for everything.

In his article, Snively says give him a break, well give me one. How can anyone in their right mind condone kids fighting to get money for bubble gum.

The past should stay in the past. I would like to think our society is progressing not regressing.

However, Snively has proven that we've got a long way to go. Hopefully, he belongs to a minority group of people who hold such barbaric opinions.

For the record, town meetings are an open forum for residents to express their views or needs.

Everyone is entitled to their opinion. Each person will be heard out and given the proper respect.

If Snively can put it in print, why doesn't he voice it in person. At least then the people he's attacking would have had an equal and fair chance to support their issues.

In closing, the mayors would like to invite Snively to attend a Mayors Council meeting on any third Tuesday.

The Community Life Office at 545-2910 or 545-2830 has the date, time and place of our next meeting.

MARSGRAMS keep communication lines open

Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Communicating with soldiers in Saudi Arabia will be easier as a result of services available through the Military Affiliate Radio System.

MARS officials said soldiers and family members can send a MARSGRAM, which is a message that is similar to a telegram, or communicate via a phone patch — a telephonic hookup.

The MARSGRAM can be used to communicate with military personnel stationed in other places as long as that post has a MARS station, officials said, and anyone can send a MARSGRAM.

According to Staff Sgt. Carolyn Wilkinson, the station's non-commissioned officer in charge, individuals interested in sending a MARSGRAM should call the MARS station at 545-4703 or 545-5552 or stop by Building 84 and complete the necessary paperwork.

Cynthia Barnes

Staff Sgt. Carolyn Wilkinson tunes the MARSGRAM console for better reception.

Messages have to be 30 words or less, she said, and it usually takes about 72 hours for the message to reach the intended party.

Business is booming, according to Wilkinson, and there is about a three-week backlog. "In the last two weeks, we've sent more than 500 MARSGRAMS ," she said.

MARS personnel also handle phone patches, which is a telephonic hookup that is usually initiated by the soldier in the Middle East.

Wilkinson said the call should be initiated from overseas because the availability of a person in this country who will receive the call is more predictable.

Wilkinson explained how phone patching works: After a soldier overseas contacts a MARS station to make a phone patch, that station contacts another MARS station in the United States with good reception. The station then contacts a telephone operator who makes the call to the desired party.

The party contacted is usually responsible for the charges, but U.S. Sprint telephone company has agreed to pick up the long distance charges for calls originated by soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield, she said.

"The phone patches are good for morale," Wilkinson said. "A ten-minute phone call can be expensive, especially for lower enlisted soldiers and it can mean a lot.

"Even though the calls can only originate from there, family members can write their loved ones and ask them to call," she said.

Volunteers and additional staff play a big part in the MARS operation. According to Ed Willoughby, post support team manager and president of the Columbus Amatuer Radio Club, more than 300 volunteers and amatuer radio club members bought antennas and shipped them to 197th Infantry Brigade soldiers in Saudi Arabia so that they could get better reception.

The volunteers are also using their personal equipment and time to handle phone patches and MARSGRAMS, he added.

There are approximately 14 to 16 civilian amateur radio operators statewide who have been licensed as MARS members in order to help out the military, Willoughby said.

"It is an excellent opportunity for us to be able to give back to those soldiers who are over there protecting us," he added.

Military Pay

Financial assistance for spouses of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield is now available through the post's Finance and Accounting Office.

The Desert Shield Spouse Financial Assistance Office opened its doors the week before Thanksgiving and is located in Building 85, Room 16.

According to 1st Lt. Robert Sweigart, chief of the Pay and Examination Division, the new service is designed to "cut the red tape" normally associated with a spouse trying to get a correction made to a soldier's pay account.

"Current laws are very specific as to what we can and cannot do with a soldier's pay account without his being present," Sweigart said. "But, we do have some latitude, and often times its just a matter of taking the extra time to thoroughly research a problem and finding a way of solving it."

With the deployment of the 215th Finance Support Unit to Saudi Arabia, finding the extra time has been the problem, Sweigart said. With the establishing of the office, a full-time staff sees only Desert Shield spouses, he said.

Donna High, director of the program, has been working in Army finance offices since 1973 and prior to coming to Fort Benning was a financial counselor in Germany.

"Sometimes, the Finance and Accounting office can be a very lonely and impersonal place,"she said. "So we're trying to make military pay a little less impersonal and let the spouses know we really do care and are ready to help.

"Sometimes it's as simple as explaining a remark on an LES (leave and earnings statement); other times it's a lot more complicated. But, whatever the problem, it's big to the people involved," she said.

The Desert Shield Spouse Financial Assistance Office is open from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15, Monday through Friday. Office phone numbers are 545-2852 or 545-4419. Although it's best to call and make an appointment, walk-in customers are seen on a first-come, first-serve basis between regularly scheduled appointments, Sweigart said.

Free color portraits available

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Family members of soldiers participating in Operation Desert Shield may send their soldiers stationed overseas a free professional family portrait.

Universal Art Photographic Services in conjunction with Fort Benning is donating one free 8x10 color portrait to families with loved ones stationed in Saudi Arabia.

The photo sessions will be Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The offer is open to anyone with a close relative stationed overseas — either military or civilian.

Each family that takes part will receive a full-color portrait, along with mailing instructions for sending it overseas. There is no cost or obligation.

"We wanted to do our part to help boost morale for our fighting men," says Reggie Law, vice president of Universal Art Photographic Services. "Family portraits seemed a natural for us. There's no better gift than a professional portrait of the family at home."

Universal Art Photographic Services is donating all photographic and processing costs. Fort Benning is contributing space for the photo session.

"We hope as many families as possible will take part in this offer," said Brian Smith, marketing manager at the Directorate of Community Activities. "It's a great way to send a personal gift to loved ones overseas."

Families can schedule appointments for portraits by calling 1-800-537-8399.

The photos will be available for pick up Dec. 22 between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m.

OPERATION DESERT SHIELD

Tankers keep 'track' of equipment

By Michael P. Mauer
Army Central Public Affairs Office

SAUDI ARABIA — For the soldiers of Company A, 2nd Battalion 69th Armor Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade, putting rounds on target is only half the challenge of Operation Desert Shield. The M-1 Abrams tankers from Fort Benning are fighting a battle here with wrenches, screwdrivers and clipboards.

According to Staff Sgt. George Ivey, tank commander and 3rd platoon sergeant, crew level maintenance is given a high priority in the desert.

"It's the most important thing we do," said Ivey. "In a life or death situation, the vehicle has to be up at all times. That's why we do maintenance every day."

For Ivey's crew to keep their 60-ton tank named "Death Dealer II" rolling, they must daily perform 42 checks of the vehicle's equipment. According to Ivey, these primary maintenance, checks and services allow the crew to take better care of the tank, from the bottom of Death Dealer II's tracks to the top of its antenna.

As the tank commander, Ivey's main job during primary maintenance, checks and services is to supervise crew maintenance and report any deficiencies the crew cannot fix. According to him, the two-inch maintenance manual for the M-1 Abrams tank, the "dash 10," is the final word of deciding what his soldiers' PMCS duties are.

In combat, loader Pfc. Normal L. Maxwell's main job is to keep rounds in Death Dealer II's 105mm gun. When the vehicle stops rolling, however, Maxwell mans the tank's tool box.

"My general areas for maintenance are the turret and hull of the tank," said Maxwell. "The breech is my main priority. If it doesn't work, the gun can't fire."

Maxwell said during a normal PMCS, he checks the tank's breech operating handle, firing pin, arming arm and breech block. He said of these checks, the firing pin is the most important.

"When I check the firing pin, I check it for dents or cracks," he said. "If it has anything wrong with it, we replace it immediately.

"It's very important," he said of vehicle PMCS. "Without it, you don't know if your vehicle will do what you want it to do."

According to Maxwell, the crew's daily PMCS also helps keep the tank safe from its greatest enemy in the desert — sand.

"The sand and dust here are really bad," said Maxwell. "It can be really bad on the weapons and filter systems. Doing maintenance everyday lets us keep up with it. It keeps the equipment working when we need it."

Serving in Death Dealer II's turret with Maxwell is the gunner, Spec. Matthew Winston. In addition to supervising the PMCS duties of the loader and driver, Winston is responsible for making sure the tank's sighting equipment is on line.

"I check the hydraulic fluids and the data on the tank's computer," said Winston. "I'm responsible for putting updated weather information in the computer."

Winston added that his duties have been made easier by the Saudi Arabian weather, which he said hasn't changed much since he arrived two months ago.

"The crew works really well together," Winston said. "All of them read the dash 10 really well."

Where Death Dealer II's tracks meet the sand is driver Pfc. Stephen J. Nichol's responsibility.

"My part during a PMCS is mainly the hull — the bottom part of the tank," said Nichols. "I look at the engine fluid levels, the track tension and the road wheels."

Nichols said that the most important part of his PMCS is during Death Dealer II's operation.

"I have a panel that tells things that can go wrong," he said. "It shows the engine oil temperature, what's going on with the fuel filters, you name it. Basically, whatever can go wrong is right there in front of me when I'm driving."

With his maintenance manual in hand, Staff Sgt. George Ivey, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, supervises two soldiers as they perform a primary maintenance check surveillance on an M-1 Abrams tank.

29th selects Pioneer Leadership winners

Ann M. McDonald

Spec. John O. Noland works on an M-1 Abrams tank.

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The 1990 Pioneer Leadership competition for the 29th Infantry Regiment began October 8 and concluded with the announcement of its two winners October 25.

Spec. John O. Noland was named the enlisted winner and Staff Sgt. H.L. Davis received the award for the non-commissioned officers.

The soldiers competed in five different areas and were graded on a 100-point scale and an additional 120-point event.

Each segment was taken from the field of basic soldiering skills: a skills qualification test, a physical training event, a written autobiography, weapons qualification, drill and ceremony events and the 120-point testing board consisting of three sergeants major.

The soldier with the best composite score in the events was named the winner.

Noland, who also won Fort Benning's 1990 Soldier of the Year award, said that he attributes his success to motivation and that the support of his chain of command was a great help.

Davis, an 18-year Army veteran, noted that the contest was extremely close and that he felt confident in his abilities.

He said that such close competition is an extremely good reflection on the quality of NCOs in the Army today.

Davis said he hopes to prove to be a good example for junior enlisted soldiers to follow in the days ahead.

Wilbur School welcomes artist

Fort Benning Schools

Wilbur School will welcome blues guitarist, Scott Ainslie, as an artist in residence Jan. 2.

Ainslie will be working with Wilbur students for nine weeks.

His work there will focus on the African and American heritage of traditional blues through performance, creative exercises, singing, writing, and other classroom activities.

His visit at Wilbur is being sponsored by the Fort Benning School System, the Georgia Council for the Arts, and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Ainslie's visit to Wilbur follows other artists who have also worked with Wilbur students.

Sharon Kane and Richard Keeton, professional writers, have worked with Wilbur students on the writing process, and last year a group called Poetry Alive came in to work with Wilbur students on understanding and appreciation of poetry.

Ainslie will focus on African-American culture and heritage, but he hopes that his time with Wilbur students will serve to open the door to the exploration of other strong cultural traditions such as the Hispanic and various Oriental and Native American traditions.

A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Va., Ainslie worked with traditional musicians in the region while completing his degree in music theory and composition.

He has performed extensively in this country and in Europe and was in the original cast of Harry Chaplin's off-Broadway musical "Cotton Patch Gospel."

He comes to Georgia after four years as one of North Carolina Visiting Artists.

"Ainslie's visit is one more opportunity for our students to understand the relationship of music to all of their studies," said Phyllis MacMurphy, Wilbur School's music teacher. "We are looking forward to his visit."

conducted the crimes as a way to get money," he said.

Mohl said Special Agents Jay E. Garbus and William F. Price, the investigators responsible for breaking the case, received a tip about the theft ring Nov. 6 from housing area residents who noticed peculiar activities in the housing area.

"The case was actually developed through a combination of intelligence and a tip from the residents, and that made all the difference in our seizure of the stolen property and apprehension of the suspects," said Garbus.

Garbus and Price issued four search warrants at different locations within McGraw Manor housing area. Stolen property was found at all four locations, officials said.

"We found several of the stolen items at each location we searched," said Price. "We were not disappointed one time," he added.

The stolen items that were recovered included: electronic equipment, such as stereos, car stereos and radios, jewelry, video cassette recorders, televisions, wall clocks, bedding, and audio cassettes. A weapon and ammunition were also recovered.

Most of the stolen items were returned to the owners. Staff Sgt. Enrique Irizarry, a resident of the McGraw Manor housing area, had $3,600 worth of property, including electronic equipment, jewelry and bedding, stolen from his quarters while vacationing in Panama City during the Veterans Day holiday weekend. Since the breaking of the case, Irizarry has received some of the stolen items back, but some items have yet to be recovered.

"I think CID did an excellent job in breaking the case and finding my stolen items. My stereo was broken when I received it back, but I think the vandals did that. CID kept in touch with me during every step of the investigation, and kept me up to date with the progress of the case," said Irizarry.

The juveniles have been released into the custody of their military sponsors until it is decided what will be done to them, officials said

CID officials are also currently working with the Columbus Police Department on the possibility of civilian outside the post being involved in the robberies.

The investigation into the case continues.

MARTIN CARE

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

When patients first come to Martin Army Community Hospital, some are overwhelmed by the size of the facility and diversity of services available. Questions frequently asked by newcomers include which clinic would handle a particular medical problem and how to get into the system.

Initial entry would be through a primary care clinic. Examples of this are troop medical clinics for the soldier, family practice Clinics for those assigned to one, the outpatient clinic for retirees and family members of both active duty and retired soldiers, and the The Primary Care for the Uniformed Services or PRIMUS Clinic.

Troop medical clinics operate on a walk-in basis during sick call hours. Family practice clinics request that patients call for an appointment for routine care and call the number for acute care for more urgent problems. The outpatient clinic also requires appointments, but same-day or next-day appointments are usually available.

The PRIMUS Clinic, located at 1727 Boxwood Place, off Macon Road in Columbus, is an extension of the care provided by MACH. PRIMUS is set up as a walk-in clinic except for mammograms, which are done by appointment.

Care at the PRIMUS Clinic is provided for active duty personnel , retirees, and family members who are enrolled in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System.

Active duty personnel are expected to use their supporting troop medical clinic during normal duty hours unless they are on pass or leave status.

There is no cost to patients who use this clinic. Using PRIMUS after clinic hours at MACH and on weekends will relieve long waiting times that occur at the MACH Emergency Room when patients come in for treatment for non-urgent problems.

When a primary care provider sees a patient they treat most routine problems. There are times, however, when the physician or physicians assistant may want to have the patient evaluated by a specialist and will give the patient a referral to a specialty clinic. The patient will be given a consultation to take to the specialty clinic and will either be given an appointment or told that they will be contacted in the near future. If an appointment cannot be provided for non-active duty patients, they will be notified that they should seek care from a civilian source.

Specialty care includes services such as allergy, dermatology, cardiology, surgery, urology, gastroenterology, and many others. Availability of specialty care for active duty personnel, retirees and family members depends on the staffing in that specialty and on the demand for the service by the active duty soldiers, who have priority in receiving treatment. For more information, call 544-2788 or 544-4140.

with a washer and dryer.

"That was great," she continued. "I have three children who really go through clothes."

Lord said that he was very impressed with his family's treatment here. "I know of no other place that would have done as much."

Lord said he had no advance notice he was coming home. "I was playing cards about 12:30 p.m. and was told we had to be at the airport by 1 p.m.," he said. "When we got to the airport, they said we had to have visas so we had to go back to the embassy. We were back at the airport by 3 p.m. and the plane took off at 7:05 p.m."

The next thing for the Lord family is "debriefing" and moving to Huntsville, Ala. Mrs. Lord said, "Even if we have to move before Christmas, it will still be a good Christmas."

Refunds available

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Army personnel who purchased airline tickets prior to the cancellationof Christmas exodus may be able to receive a refund, offficials at Fort Benning Scheduled Airline Traffic Office have announced.

To receive a refund for the tickets, most of the airlines require a message from the soldier's commanding officer stating that their leave has indeed been cancelled.

Mike McFarland, a spokesperson for SATO, said that there is is no single policy given by all the airlines and refunds must be dealt with case by case.

For more information contact McFarland at the SATO office a 685-4030.

Future leaders tackle obstacle courses

By Ann M. McDonald
3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry

There are many tools used to instill leadership into the future officers of Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry. Among them are the obstacles the U.S. Army Infantry School throws at them.

On Nov. 16 and 17, the officer candidates encountered the Leadership Reaction Course, the Confidence Obstacle Course and the Conditioning Obstacle Course. Each course taught the candidates something about themselves and each other.

The LRC is a course designed to teach problem solving and teamwork using wet and dry obstacles. A cadre member briefs the designated leader of each station using a combat scenario. The team has 10 minutes to complete the mission.

When the candidates encountered the LRC, weather conditions enabled the students to use the water obstacles. The soldiers of Company A splashed into their stations head on.

"The LRC tests us under variables we wouldn't normally encounter," Basic Officer Candidate David Franz said. "It also showed us what we're lacking in leadership and what our limitations are."

Basic Officer Candidate Melissa Minke said she learned the importance of working together. Minke also admitted she had a fear of heights, an obstacle she had to overcome while going through the LRC.

"I was surprised at how I reacted," she said. "I knew I had to climb up over the high bar in one of the stations to help my team."

Her fears and the fears of many others quickly disappeared and teamwork and leadership surfaced.

This amazed some of the more experienced soldiers. Basic Officer Candidate Lincoln Leibner, an experienced Special Forces soldier, said, "Considering the time constraints per station, I was amazed how fast people came together as a team."

The teamwork demonstrated by the candidates at the LRC carried through to the next day at the dual confidence courses located on Sand Hill.

Although teamwork was an important factor, the primary focus of these courses are individual confidence and conditioning. This is accomplished as each soldier negotiates a series of wooden obstacles of many sizes and shapes.

Candidates or soldiers conduct conditioning drills on a course consisting of objects a soldier might encounter on the battlefield.

While competing against the clock, they negotiate ropes, inverted ladders, barbed wire, walls, and gullies.

Basic Officer Candidate David Crawford said he was impressed by how fast people negotiating the course overcame personal fears when they were urged on by the group.

Minke added that it also built trust. "I'm a self reliant person and it's really hard for me to trust someone when I'm in a dangerous situation," he said.

Because of her small size, Minke explained that she was unable to reach the tops of some obstacles and fellow soldiers had to pull her through.

"I had to do it because it is expected of me, and it will be expected of me as an officer," she said.

Basic Officer Candidate Carol Tolson said she also realized the importance of trust and confidence. "I realized there isn't always an ideal situation and even if you're not too thrilled about something you have to do it," she said.

"You must put the unpleasantries out of your mind. The mission is what is important," she continued. "I'm proud of myself. On one of the obstacles, I stopped and looked down on the ground. Having people coach me gave me the strength to go on."

Many of the Basic Officer Candidates said they overcame fear and strengthened their leadership capabilities. With that in mind, the U.S. Army Infantry School accomplished one of its many lessons of leadership.

Rangers form camaraderie, compete at Organization Day

By David T. Kramer
3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regt.

Rangers from the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment had a day of camaraderie and competition during their annual Organization Day Nov. 21 at Peden Field.

Lt. Col. James T. Jackson, battalion commander and Col. William F. Kernan, regimental commander, made remarks and began the day's activities.

Competition included a five-kilometer race; flag football, basketball, and volleyball tournaments; weapons assembly and guidon relays; strength events, and a tug-of-war.

Sgt. 1st Class Glenn L. Harris of Company B won the five-kilometer race. Top finishers in the strength events were Sgt. Sean C. Michael of Headquarters and Headquarters Company with 131 push-ups and Spec. David J. Lopez of Company B with 34 chin-ups.

The final event was a "Dizzy Bat Relay" with company commander-first sergeant teams racing 50 yards after spinning around a baseball bat a dozen times.

After a full day of fierce competition, Headquarters and Headquarters Company emerged as the overall winner. The struggle for top company was close with Companies A and B sharing second place, only one point behind the champions.

Plaques were awarded to captains of the first-, second-, and third-place company teams in each event, while Headquarters and Headquarters Company accepted the trophy as overall winner. Individual winners of the five-kilometer race received certificates of achievement.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

According to an article in The Energy Report, speculation has already started over whether Congress will change the tax laws again next year, and if so, what these changes might be.

In late October, Congress voted for a package of tax increases and spending cuts that would reduce the federal budget deficit by $492 billion over the next five years. Six of these tax changes affect the energy field.

● The package would extend an energy tax credit for solar and geothermal projects through 1991. The credit had expired in September.

● The act would also extend for another two years, a tax credit for gas produced from coal seams, landfills and other unconventional sources. Gas producers have until 1992 to drill wells, and until 2002 to sell gas from the wells to qualify for the credit.

● The act offers about $1.65 billion in tax subsidies over the next five years to oil and gas producers. Projects involved in tertiary recovery methods to reach oil that is hard to pump from the ground would also be allowed a special tax credit of about 15 percent of the cost of the project.

● Because of the increase in excise taxes, ground transportation will be a little more expensive.

Effective Dec. 1, the budget act added another 5 cents per gallon to the cost of gasoline and diesel fuel used in highway vehicles. Usually this gasoline tax would go into a trust for spending on roads. However, half of the increase in tax collections will go into the general revenues to reduce the deficit.

In addition, on Dec. 1, the government began collecting a tax of 2.5 cents per gallon on fuel used in railway transportation. This decision brought smiles to the trucking industry which wanted to "pay back" the railroads for opposing legislation to allow two-trailer trucks on federal highways.

● The act would also double a tax on "gas guzzler" automobiles. These are the cars that do not meet fuel economy standards of 22.5 miles a gallon. The tax will start at $1,000 and reach $7,700 for a vehicle that gets fewer than 12.5 miles per gallon on gasoline. The tax will be collected from the manufacturer or importer.

● Finally, the companies that produce ethanol for use in fuel will get an additional 10 cents per gallon in tax credits, but only if they are smaller producers with a capacity of up to 30 million gallons a year. An existing tax credit for larger producers was reduced to pay for the extra benefit for smaller producers.

If you have any questions on this or any energy-related subject, contact the Energy Office at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT (Save Watts and Therms).

ASK THE JUDGE

Howard O. McGillin Jr.
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Rather than answer a question this week, I will discuss a common consumer problem that we have seen recently in the Legal Assistance Office.

The problem surrounds so-called buying clubs that charge extremely high membership fees and provide little or no service to the customer.

Many of these clubs lure customers to their showrooms with promises of free gifts. Once in the showroom, the consumer is forced to sit through a sales pitch before he or she receives their gift. After the sales pitch, many consumers sign up for membership. In one local operation, the membership costs are approximately $900 for an 18- month membership.

What do you get for this fee? In our opinion, you get almost nothing. The contract you sign with the buying club states that they will purchase consumer items for you at a discount from "retail." The contract goes on to state, however, that the club does not promise that every item they provide will, in fact, be less expensive than a retail price you may find in a local store. Many of our clients are totally disgusted with the service by the time they come to Legal Assistance. Unfortunately, they all signed valid contracts and they may be very hard to defeat in court.

Another tactic of the buying clubs is employed in the hard sell cases. One of our clients asked if he could take the proposed contract to "JAG" for review. The club refused him, stating that the offer was good that day only. Unfortunately he signed the contract without our advice.

There are several points to remember. First, under federal law, if someone offers you a prize, just for coming to their establishment, you have the right to demand the prize before any sales pitch. If they fail to produce it, they are in violation of the law. Second, think about the contract before you sign it. Soldiers have the right to a number of discount shopping opportunities. The Post Exchange is a benefit to every soldier. While it may not always beat the "retail" price, I recommend using it as your military buying "club."

Finally, I have never found a deal that was so good, it could not wait for a simple review by Legal Assistance. I strongly recommend that you have one of the Legal Assistance attorneys review any contract for purchase of an item more than $500 in value.

If you have any questions, please call Legal Assistance at 545-3281 for an appointment. If you have an appointment and cannot make it, call to reschedule.

Drill sgt. pulls skeet win

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The Tall Pines International Skeet Match, held recently at Hooks Range, wasn't won by a member of the Army International Skeet Team. However, it was won by a former member.

Staff Sgt. Joseph M. Dickson, a drill sergeant with Company C, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry, won the competition shooting a 195 out of 200.

"This match was just a stepping stone for me," said the former U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldier. "My ultimate goal is to compete in the 1992 Olympics."

Dickson was with the skeet team for seven years. In 1988, he spent a year in Korea, then went on drill sergeant status in 1989. He has been a drill sergeant for seven months.

"I had no problem shooting against some of my former teammates," he said. "We both helped each other do our best. Because good shooters thrive on good competition, that's what makes us excel."

Dickson had a couple of opportunities to keep his skills up to par. In June he received three weeks permissive temporary duty to compete in the U.S. International Shooting Championships held in Los Angeles, Calif.

"I placed 15th overall out of 120 shooters," said the 34-year-old Fort Wayne, Inc., native. "I'm fortunate that my chain of command supports me in my shooting."

Due to his hectic drill sergeant schedule, Dickson doesn't get to compete as often as he'd like to. "But when I do compete I prepare myself both physically and mentally," he said.

As a drill sergeant, Dickson says that he realizes his primary commitment is to his soldiers. "My competitive background helps me to train my young soldiers in marksmanship," he concluded.

Post school runs track

Fort Benning Schools

McBride School's physical education teacher recently held two Saturday classes for McBride students.

McBride School serves students in kindergarten through third grade, and 208 students participated in the Saturday sessions.

Each session was made up of track and field meets. Events consisted of the 220-yard, 440-yard, 880-yard, and one-mile runs, the 50-yard dash, medicine ball throw, chin-ups, obstacle course and standing long jump.

The track and field meets were implemented to allow the children an opportunity to participate in a competition where everyone is a winner.

Winning efforts were defined as doing your best. Winners received blue ribbons and accolades for their outstanding performances.

There were many outstanding performers. School records were broken in four events. Jared Sabatasso (grade 3)wit a 5-foot-7- inch long jump; James Hall (grade 3) with a 7-minute-10 second-mile run; Wendell Taylor (grade 3) did 20 chin-ups; and Jessica Bohannon (grade 2) ran the mile run in 7:24.

Supporting, organizing, and implementing the track meets were the McBride School Physical Education Department, the 321st Medical Detachment and 1st Lt. Richard Liebl from the Infantry Officers Advanced Course.

"We have been delighted with the participation by both students and parents in our Saturday sessions," said Del Hicks, McBride principal. "Our children were very enthusiastic about participation in our own track and field meets, and we believe that this enthusiasm served as a catalyst for their strong participation in the Faith School race as well."

Future meets are planned in the spring and fall of each year. The meets are designed to provide additional opportunities for children to learn the job of participation in physical activities.

Youth Services hosts Christmas bowling

Youth Services will be sponsoring bowling outings during the Christmas holidays. The outings will will be Wednesday, Thursday, Dec. 21, 27, and 28 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Main Post Bowling Center. Bowling will be free of charge and youths may bowl on one of the dates. Pre-registration is required and will be done on a first come, first serve basis. This program is open to children 6 to 18 years old of active duty personnel. For more information call 545-3607 Wednesday through Saturday from noon to 8 p.m.

Youth rifle team plans turkey shoot

The Fort Benning Youth Activities Rifle Team will be conducting a turkey shoot Saturday and Sunday at the Main Post Exchange. Army Air Force Exchange Service is providing the turkeys. The money raised will go toward equipment and training for the junior rifle team.

The team is coached by members of the United States Army Marksmanship Unit with the goal of winning national team and individual titles. Those shooters who do well enough can earn invitations to Olympic training camps and the U.S. International Shooting Championships. Past members of the junior rifle team have earned college scholarships, become members of the U.S. Shooting team, and even competed in the Olympics.

The junior rifle team is always looking for new members who are serious about competitive shooting. Anyone between the ages of 14 and 19 are eligible. All equipment and coaching is provided. For more information about the program, contact Capt. Rhonda Barush at 545-2343/2614.

Wrestling Tourney scheduled in Dec.

Fort Benning will host the 1990 Post Wrestling Tournament at the Harmony Church Fieldhouse, building 4493, today and Saturday. The tournament will serve as a qualifier to nominate wrestlers to attend the All Army Wrestling Trial Camp, Jan. 15 through March 14. For additional information, contact Sgt. 1st Class Tony Thomas, All-Army wrestling coach at 544-7122, 544-6902 or 545-5777.

Cypress opens new area

Cypress Gardens

CYPRESS GARDENS, Fla. — Cypress Gardens has introduced a new tropically-themed children's play area called "Carousel Cove" which features "kiddie" rides and attractions the entire family can enjoy.

Carousel Cove children's rides — "kiddie sized" versions of theme park thrill rides — are designed for children up to 56 inches or 12 years of age. Each ride is operated under close supervision of park personnel.

New "kiddie" rides include The River Boat, Bull Dozer, Pony Cart, Red Baron, The Swings and Car Ride, which stimulate children's imaginations with colorful miniature replicas of cars, horses, bi-planes and more. These additions join the park's existing Delta Kite and Parachute rides for youngsters.

The "star" attraction of Carousel Cove is a beautifully ornate, antique replica carousel created by Chance, the world's premier carousel manufacturer. It features intricately carved horses and old-fashioned brass poles.

Carousel Cove is not for children only — in addition to the carousel, a section of popular Midway games entertains guests of all ages. Roller bowler, Knock-Me-Down, Skee Ball and Wack-A-Frog are fun tests of skill and dexterity.

"Carousel Cove further broadens the family appeal Cypress Gardens has established over the last 55 years with outstanding ski shows, gardens and other attractions that are so unique to our park," said Louise Murtaugh, park marketing director. "It offers more ways for children to participate and families to interact at Cypress Gardens."

Cypress Gardens, one of the Busch Entertainment parks, is open daily 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The park is located midway between Tampa and Orlando, 30 minutes southwest of Sea World, off U.S. 27 near Winter Haven. Adult admission is $18.95 plus tax; children (3-9) $12.95 plus tax; under three, admitted free. (Prices subject to change without notice.)

Busch Entertainment Corporation is the family entertainment subsidiary of Anheuser-Busch Companies, Inc. Other BEC parks include Busch Gardens in Tampa, Fla. and Williamsburg, Va.; Adventure Island in Tampa.

COMMUNITY

Students attain top Scout honor

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Boy Scout Troop 27 honored three of its members during a National Eagle Scout Court of Honor Wednesday at the Regimental Chapel in Sand Hill. David Blackman, Kevin Crow, and Albert Wiley were awarded the rank of Eagle Scout, an accomplishment reached by only 2 percent of the Boy Scouts.

David Blackman is in the upper 2 percent of his senior class at Spencer High School. His Eagle project was to redesign and rebuild the nature trail at Loyd School on Fort Benning. Blackman said "It has been fun. To quote Charles Dickens, 'It was the best of times, it was the worst of times.' The worst was doing KP in 30 degree weather."

In addition to his Scouting honors, Blackman was voted most likely to succeed in the class of 1991. After graduating he hopes to study aerospace or chemical engineering. His father is Col. William J. Blackman. Vicki Kytle accepted the mother's pin for his mother.

Kevin Crow is a sophomore attending Pacelli High School where he is an honor student. His Eagle project was landscaping the Sand Hill Soldiers Chapel which consisted of constructing seven flower beds, planting 1008 flowers, and relocating 33 shrubs. Crow said "It has taught me many things — once I set a goal, to stick with it to the end."

Crow plays varsity football as a quarterback for Pacelli High School. His parents are Lt. Col. Charles L. and Linda L. Crow.

Albert Wiley's Eagle project involved finger printing more than 100 Cub Scouts in Pack 27, and children at the Fort Benning Post Exchange Mall. The prints were given to parents to assist in locating missing children. Wiley said, "Scouting has played an important role at school and in sports. I tried to live by the Scout oath but it's hard. I took a long time to earn this — a long, long time — but, I did it."

Wiley attended Spencer High School where he competed on the wrestling and soccer teams before transferring to Hardaway High School. He continues to participate in wrestling and soccer. His parents are Albert and Carolyn Wiley.

Basket maker supports Desert Shield families

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

A former sales associate at a local department store has discovered a new talent — a talent that she now wishes to share with family members of soldiers deployed to the Middle East to help support Operation Desert Shield.

Cynthia C. Barry of Columbus, Ga., makes gift baskets, taking flowers, hard candies and different odds and ends to create her works of art.

Barry came upon the craft through a coincidental chain of events. Involved in a car accident that injured her spine a year ago, Barry was forced to resign her position as a sales associate at a local department store. Having made the baskets all along, as gifts for friends, she was encouraged to turn pastime into profit by creating the designer baskets and selling them.

"I've never had any formal training in floral arrangements, decorating or anything of that nature," said Barry. "I kind of bumped into crafting baskets by accident. In creating them, I simply put together arrangements that I think are attractive. In filling them, I add candies, decorative soaps or something I think the customer may especially like," she added. Barry has been selling her baskets for more than a year now.

With the onset of Operation Desert Shield, Barry began to get several requests from friends who were also family members of deployed soldiers, thus began Operation Desert Basket.

"I will make any kind of basket that family members wish to send to their loved ones in the Middle East for Christmas or any occasion," said Barry. "I will fill it with anything that the family member wants. I really want to support this crisis in anyway that I can and I hope that my baskets can perhaps bring a little joy to a soldier over there — make their Christmas a little more hopeful and cheerful. I also hope that every one of the service members will make it back home."

Barry's "assistant" and fiance, retired Sgt. 1st Class Joe B. Waller is in total support of Barry's project. "I support Cynthia's project 100 percent. We have to give total support to our service members in the Middle East, because they are doing a job for their country, and we, in turn, have to do a job for them. It's only right."

Barry's basket booth is located in the Columbus Flea Market on Benning Road. The flea market is open Thursday through Sunday from 12 p.m. to 8 p.m.

Referral service offered

Army Continuing Education System

A free professional referral service is being offered to soldiers preparing to leave active duty.

The Defense Activity for Non-Traditional Education Support (DANTES) has entered into an agreement with Peterson's Guides Publication Company that provides a free professional referral service for all active duty soldiers who will be leaving the military within six months. At the present time, family members and civilians are not eligible to participate.

The program is named CONNEXION, and offers the following features.

When a soldier is within six months of leaving military service, a registration form can be obtained from any local education center. The three-page form is then completed and mailed directly to Peterson's in Princeton, N.Y.

CONNEXION uses an international database system that allows organizations to locate and recruit individuals with particular skills and credentials for employment, research, consulting, teaching and graduate study. A soldier does not need a personal computer to participate, because the form can be completed without one. A neatly typed or hand-printed application is all that is required.

Nearly 200 corporations, foundations and graduate schools have signed up for access to CONNEXION, and an additional 200 college placement offices are subscribing to this service. Some of these participants are AT&T, NASA, Xerox, Duke University, Ohio State, University of Maryland and the University of Virginia.

If a soldier is not near a military education center, registration may be made by writing directly to Peterson's at 202 Carnegie Center, P.O. Box 2123, Princeton, N.J. 08543-2123, Attention: CONNEXION, or by calling 1-800-EDU-DATA.

OWC sponsors art series for Fort Benning children

Fort Benning Schools

Hundreds of children sit and listen attentively as a master musician performs classical and popular music selections and then teaches about the functioning and history of their musical instrument. This scene takes place several times each year in the Fort Benning Schools, thanks to a group of involved community members on post.

For the past several years, the Officers' Wives' Club of Fort Benning has sponsored the Fine Arts Series of musical performances in the Fort Benning Schools. Once again this year, the Officers' Wives' Club has supported the school system through the sponsorship of these very special programs.

Performers generally come from the Columbus area, however, most have performed with symphony orchestras throughout the country and, in some instances, around the world. In most programs, the artist will perform a variety of musical selections and then talk with the students about the composers, their cultures and the development of the instruments.

Katherine Newman performs a selection on the harp.

The most recent performer, Mrs. Katherine Newman of LaGrange, Ga., shared her talents as a harpist with the students.

"The fine arts programs provide our children exposure to cultural arts which might otherwise be a rare treat. Our schools are fortunate to have this opportunity to enrich our curriculum with the arts," said White School principal, Janet Wynn.

SPIRITUAL

Fishing, hobbies help families cope

By John R. Houser
Clinical Pastoral Education

Late one afternoon recently, I was fishing down by the boat ramp on the Chattahoochee River. While enjoying catching some pan-sized crappie, I overheard a conversation between two women who were fishing near me. It seems that one of the women's husband is deployed in the Middle East and fishing has filled a need in her and her two young children's lives while dad is deployed. This family has found one of the many positive ways to cope during separation.

Separation is hard on families. It can be twice as hard during the Christmas season and four times as hard in the face of an actual deployment. The family mentioned above discovered one way to handle separation, that of finding a sport or hobby to fill the lonely hours. There are many other ways to cope with separation.

Establishing or renewing spiritual faith with one's religious background or heritage can provide great comfort to those who are separated. Faith — belief in something greater than yourselves, hope — expectation for a better tomorrow, and love — care and concern for those around us, will help us through the storms of separation.

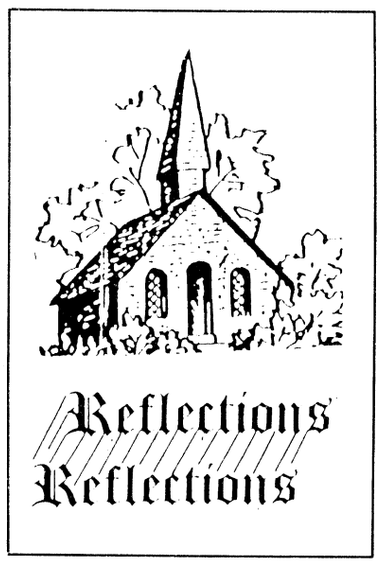
Support groups are an excellent resource to be used during times of separation. Sharing moments of joy and sadness, learning from the experiences of others, and caring for others going through a time of separation can help the time to pass quickly. In addition, the support group is a place to find a friend to help deal with the lonely nights when one needs a friendly voice to communicate with.

Volunteering one's time and talents to assist religious, civic and military organizations can also help one to learn new skills while filling in hours of boredom. I have yet to find a church that does not need a Sunday School teacher, a Red Cross program that has all the volunteers that it needs, or an Army Community Services program that has all of its volunteer positions filled.

Communication with loved ones can also keep ties strong and help the time to pass quickly. Letters and telephone calls (whenever possible) will aid the family in remaining a strong, viable unit. A Christmas gift, a birthday card, a little note expressing your support and love will help to keep the relationship strong.

The young woman fishing on the creek bank also demonstrated a final suggestion to help separated families cope during the holidays. I could sense a strong will or determination within this person to support her husband. She had decided once and for all to make it. She committed herself and her children to survive positively during the absence of the husband. This strong resolve and attitude came through loud and clear on the river bank of the Chattahoochee.

How about you? If your spouse is deployed in the Middle East this holiday season, what will you do the cope? Why not commit yourself right now to the concept that you are going to make it. Get involved. . .volunteer, renew your spiritual relationship, communicate and join me on the banks of the Chattahoochee. May God bless and assist you in making this a meaningful and blessed holiday season.



Prayer keeps 'light' shining bright

By Ronald C. Lawson
Clinical Pastoral Education

My first tour of duty with the Army took me to the memorable village of Oberammergau in Upper Bavaria to spend a year studying Polish and German. The Austrian Alps were not far off, and at Christmas time I spent the better part of a week with friends on a ski trip to Kitzbuehel in the Tirol.

One cold, blustery day I was walking down through the village and I came upon a door, which said in German: CHAPEL. Upon entering, I was immediately blinded by intense light; after I got used to the light, I realized that I was inside a chapel with hundreds of burning candles in front of as many names — and often, a small picture which had been affixed to the wall. It was a memorial chapel to the many young men of that particular Austrian village who had lost their lives during World War II. Especially poignant was the age of those dead; they were almost all in their late teens.

As I stood there mesmerized by the candle light, I came to realize that these young men were still very much in the thoughts of their loved ones, and served as "lights" to keep alive love and dedication to country and family unity. I instinctively walked over to an unlit candle, lit it, and knelt on the floor to ask God that I, too, become a "light." It was an intense moment of prayer communion, and I walked away from that experience not knowing that it was to be the first of many prayer moments on the path to the Roman Catholic priesthood.

During the ensuing years I have been called to prayer at happy times, at sad times, during joy, during suffering and sadness, confusion, and thanksgiving. During the times when God seemed farthest away, he called me to him through prayer, until I realized that the pilgrimage I was on would only be won if I kept open the prayer channels. God has always answered my prayers.

Isaac Beshevis Singer, the storyteller whose tales of Polish ghettos and immigrant Jews in America have charmed readers for three generations, once explained his belief in the importance of prayer: "Whenever I'm in trouble, I pray. And since I'm always in trouble, there is not a day when I don't pray. The belief that man can do what he wants, without God, is as far from me as the North Pole."

The Bible tells us that some situations and problems can only be corrected by fasting and by penance and by prayer. Frequent prayer is to be recommended — and not only when we're in trouble. We have to keep our priorities in order, to remind ourselves that life is bigger than we are and to gain a better grasp of our mission in life. We need to ask for what we need for ourselves and others, to adore the Absolute, to be thankful for our blessings and to say we're sorry.

Jesus is frequently shown praying. "He went up to the mountain to pray and passed the whole night in prayer to God" in St. Luke's description of one such occasion. For Jesus, prayer was not an escape or a shutting of his eyes to unpleasant events. Rather, he withdrew from intense service of others in order to regain contact with the source of his strength, the Father's will. Then he returned to his mission.

Pollution, war, terrorism, racial and political conflict, and how an emergency in the Middle East, that we firmly pray will end peacefully — these and other pressing issues have placed our entire planet in trouble. The solution will emerge more clearly as each of us enters into his heart to discover again his own reality and the loving Creator who sustains him in being. Renewed by this brief contact with the realm of the Spirit, we can bring more energy and insight to do the job that must be done, to find courage where there was none, to acquire strength of character and a simplicity and sweet love — in short, to become "light." A few minutes each day will create an effectiveness as an instrument of God's healing love.

CHAPEL BRIEFS

Parenting class — A new parenting class will begin at the Chaplain's Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza. The class will begin Jan. 16 and continue each Wednesday from noon to 1:30 p.m. through Feb. 27.

Entitled, The Art of Sensitive Parenting, the course deals with the 10 keys of raising confident, competent and responsible children.

There is no fee for this class. Registration begins immediately. Call 545-1760/5301 to register. No babysitting is available.

Chapel closed — The Kelley Hill Chapel is closed until further notice.

AG officials clarify Stop Loss revision

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

New provisions announced Nov. 29 under the revised Stop Loss program affect retirements and separations, according to Fort Benning's Adjutant General officials.

The original Stop Loss policy implemented Sept. 1 affected soldiers in critical skills and deployed units and did not include retirements or personnel who are ineligible for re-enlistment. However, under a revision announced Nov. 29 by Department of the Army officials, many enlisted separations and voluntary retirements are suspended.

In a Dec. 13 memorandum, Lt. Col. James W. Matthews Jr., the post's Adjutant General, issued these guidelines:

● All voluntary retirements are suspended. Sgt. Maj. Theodore Sweet, Retirement Services non-commissioned officer in charge, said the only exceptions are those soldiers, enlisted personnel and commissioned officers, reaching their mandatory retirement date for their grade (staff sergeant at 20 years, sergeant first class at 24 years, master sergeant and first sergeant at 27 years and sergeant major and command sergeant major at 30 years).

Retirement requests may still be submitted and are still being processed and approved with effective dates to be determined, said Sweet.

Enlisted soldiers desiring voluntary separations due to hardship/compassionate reasons or in the best interest of the Army may request an exception by writing to the Personnel Command. The address is: Commander, PERSCOM, ATTN: TAPC-PTD-S, Alexandria, Va. 22331-0479.

Commanders who believe exception to a suspended involuntary separation provision will serve in the best interest of the Army may write to the Personnel Command on a case-by-case basis, said Sweet.

● Many enlisted separations are also suspended. According to Brenda Mollett, chief of Transition Point, soldiers separating from the Army for the convenience of the government, hardship or dependency, defective enlistment, pregnancy, alcohol/drug failure, good of service, entry-level conduct, mandatory retirements, unsatisfactory performance, misconduct, homosexuality and change in service obligation will still be allowed to separate.

BAQ, VHA to increase

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Hikes in basic allowance for quarters and variable housing allowance will increase soldiers' total housing allowances by an average of 5.1 percent Jan. 1.

A 4.1 percent increase in BAQ and an average VHA raise of 10.3 percent add up to a smaller percentage of out-of-pocket housing expenses for most soldiers, said military pay officials in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

They add a cautionary note, though: out-of-pocket expenses are still higher than current military pay policy and Congressional law intend.

By law, total housing allowances are supposed to cover 85 percent of soldiers' median housing costs," said Maj. Rob Kissel of ODCSPER's compensation and entitlements policy branch. "However, because of legal and budgetary restraints and inadequate BAQ, they're now paying just under 80 percent."

BAQ rates are set according to pay grade, regardless of location. VHA rates are also based on pay grades, but are computed using the amount individual soldiers actually pay for housing at a particular location.

Kissel said BAQ raises are traditionally linked to basic pay raises, which generally do not keep pace with inflation. This, in turn, creates a gap between housing allowances and housing costs.

Kuwait invasion nothing more than armed robbery, former hostage says

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

The invasion of Kuwait was nothing more than armed robbery by Iraqi forces according to an Army major, who was a military adviser in Kuwait and who escaped from Baghdad in November after several weeks as a hostage.

Maj. Fred Hart

Maj. Fred L. Hart, who is an infantry officer attached to the U.S. Central Command at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla., is a native of Columbus and lived in Kuwait with his wife and two daughters for a year before the Iraqi invasion Aug. 2. He said his job was to advise the Kuwaiti forces on maintenance and logistics.

"United States military forces in Kuwait wore civilian clothes to work to down play the influence of foreigners and were scattered throughout the city so the locals did not realize they were military," Hart said. He said he believes this kept them from being picked up during the invasion by Iraqi troops.

Hart said that there was some fear that if the Ministry of Defense fell into Iraqi hands, the identities of the military advisers would be discovered so families were called into the embassy on Aug. 5.

"At the compound the families were housed in the Marine House, a barracks facility at the Embassy," Hart said. "We lived in a storage room and slept on the floor, but it was pretty quiet at the embassy."

After three weeks, an agreement was reached between the Iraqi government and the embassy to evacuate the military families through Baghdad to Turkey. "As we were leaving Kuwait, a lot of people were shocked by the condition of the city. There were wrecked cars and stores had been looted," he said.

The evacuation from Kuwait to Baghdad, a trip that normally took six to seven hours, took 21 hours because the cars were stopped at checkpoints several times, he added. "At one point, we spent three and a half hours in the sun with temperatures around 120 degrees waiting for approval to pass through," he said.

> "I never felt like a guest. I cannot believe anyone did. I felt trapped and restricted.
>
> — Maj. Fred L. Hart

"Once we arrived in Baghdad, the Iraqi government reneged on the agreement to allow us to evacuate to Turkey. But, on August 25th, they agreed to allow the women and children to leave but not the men.

"Twenty-six women (and children) were expected to drive out by themselves — without a map, without an escort, and without any real assurances from the government. Saying goodbye to my family in those circumstances was probably the hardest thing I have ever had to do," he continued. "It was three days before word reached us that the families had arrived safely."

While in Baghdad, after their evacuation from Kuwait, the maid who had worked for the Hart family in Kuwait told him that their house had been looted by Iraqi occupation forces and she had been forced to leave the country.

"I never felt like a guest," he said. "I cannot believe anyone did. I felt trapped and restricted. It was an absolute police state. We were kept under surveillance, followed by state police. The phones were monitored, and it was suspected that the diplomatic quarters were bugged. I did go around the city some, but one time some kids identified us as westerners and threw rocks at us," he said.

Hart escaped from Baghdad in early November and returned to Washington before joining his wife, Chris, in Columbus.

"I look forward to going back. The invasion of Kuwait was largely an armed robbery. The Kuwaiti people offered little resistance, and that is what we have to stop. We can't allow one country to just walk in and ruin people's lives, he said.

Hart is a graduate of Baker High School and spent his first duty assignment with the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment at Fort Benning. His wife, Chris, is also from Columbus. They have two girls, Natasha, 8, and Mary, 3.

Snively's Christmas shopping list

Sand, oil make great gifts for Saddam Hussein

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Friday prior to Christmas is when I get into the swing of Christmas. It's the time I make out my Christmas shopping list, checking it twice for those who've been naughty or nice.

Unfortunately, in checking the list, I see we need to pass out more coal and sticks than goodies.

● First there's the madman in the sand. I realize he doesn't recognize Christmas as anything but a decadent Western holiday, but he's sure spoiling it for the rest of us.

For him I wish him all the sand he can eat. Let him wash it down with oil.

● Right up there with Saddam are the insects who went through the barracks of our soldiers, systematically cutting locks and bands on wall lockers and walking out with at least $30,000 in personal items.

I think the people in the Middle East have an appropriate way of dealing with scum like this, and that's cutting off their hands.

Since we can't do that, maybe we could pack them up and ship them over to Saddam to be human shields to replace his recently departed guests.

● Next in line are the crud who went through a unit's parking lot and ripped off car stereos and other items. I say for Christmas, lash them to the roofs of Volvos and let Big Foot practice driving on them.

In ordinary times, barracks thieves are the lowest form of animal. But when they rip off our guys and gals who are in some far off land, that borders on treason.

What cesspool did these creatures escape from anyway?

● Other beetle-headed, flap-eared knaves infecting this post are the juvenile miscreants who think it's cool to steal from their neighbors or to "key" cars. For Christmas, I hope they find themselves living among their own kind off post.

Now that I got that out of my system, let's turn to more positive things.

● Like I hope Dean Rose gets his post power lifting team so he'll stop coming up here and bugging me. He's got plenty of muscle-bound captains to get for his team without having to bother with my puny body.

Clyde Snively

● I hope G.M. in the DEH Property Branch gets a radio-controlled cart for her golf bag. She's got one of those battery-powered ones you're supposed to walk along behind, but so far has managed to run over several of her friends, has trouble going in a straight line and worse of all, had it drag her across a parking lot, skinning up her knees, elbows, etc.

● Speaking of golf, I wish the golf club could convert all their smelly, polluting gas carts for quiet, non-polluting electric ones.

● For our Infantry Center Band, a well-deserved rest. Those guys have been playing so much lately that the horn blowers have all got a permanent pucker on their pusses. I also hope they get a decent "home" so they won't have to dodge falling ceiling tile while they're practicing.

● For our 29th Infantry soldiers who are training, training and training One Station Unit Training soldiers, officers, non-commissioned officers, reservists and guardsmen, I hope they spend a couple of days not having to teach someone how to do something, and especially, mothers, don't get the kiddies those "ready-to-assemble" toys.

● For our single soldiers left here for Christmas, I hope they get a chance to do something with a friend.

● For the family members whose spouses are away, I hope they can find peace and comfort among themselves and within their families and that they won't go wanting for anything.

● For our soldiers stationed at the outposts of freedom, I hope they'll soon find themselves safely on their way home.

● And for all those great Americans who are supporting our soldiers, I wish you a joyful and auspicious Christmas season and 1991.

Commander says let's join in celebrating faith, hope, love

The holiday season of Christmas is among the happiest and most cherished of the year. This festival is rich in meaning and tradition for all Christians.

Our precious heritage of freedom, love of family and homeland, and our commitment to peace are interwoven with this celebration. It is the blessing of the glorious light coming into a darkened world.

Let us all join together in celebrating hope, faith, love and dedication to world peace.

The Christmas season celebrates the birth of the Christ child at Bethlehem almost 2,000 years ago, but the message of Bethlehem rings as clearly throughout the world today as when heralded by the angels.

The first Christmas message, "Peace on Earth, goodwill toward men," remains a goal that people throughout this world can identify with, but none more than those of us who serve in the armed forces.

The spirit of Christmas reinforces the conviction that we will work continually toward the achievement of world peace and goodwill toward all people.

May each of you enjoy a safe and happy holiday season, and may God's richest blessing be upon you and your loved ones in the coming new year.

Carmen J. Cavezza
Major General, U.S. Army
Commanding

TRADOC commander wishes soldiers a happy holiday season

With the holiday season approaching, let me extend best wishes for a happy holiday to all of you.

As we prepare to celebrate the season, our thoughts are with our fellow soldiers deployed in South West Asia who will be separated from families and loved ones and will, instead, spend Christmas with their comrades in arms. TRADOC is standing shoulder to shoulder with these brave men and women.

The requirement for continued readiness has forced the Army to cancel the traditional Christmas break in military training so that more soldiers will be available sooner for follow-on assignment. I know that this decision, which was not made lightly, comes as a disappointment to those who cannot be with their own families over the holidays. I also know the people of TRADOC will continue to meet the challenge.

The Army leadership has recognized and praised this command's support to Operation Desert Shield, and I am very proud of your efforts and hard work in helping the Army respond to this important mission.

Season's greetings to the entire TRADOC community. May our collective efforts help bring a safer world for all in the New Year.

John W. Foss
General, U.S. Army
Commanding

This is time to give God thanks — Army chief of staff, secretary

In this, the first Christmas and Hanukkah of a new decade, we pause amidst a turbulent world to honor the message of hope these seasons represent.

This is also a time to give thanks to God — each in his own way — for the blessings of liberty and peace we hold so dear.

We can never take these blessings for granted; they must be protected by the self-less service of all those who wear the uniform of our great nation.

Your sacrifices are especially evident during this time of year when so many of you are so far away from home serving in the sands of Saudi Arabia or manning the ramparts of freedom elsewhere around the world.

Wherever you are, whatever your mission, you can serve proudly knowing that you are securing a bright future for your families and for generations of Americans.

On behalf of a grateful nation, we wish each of you a safe, happy holiday and prosperous new year.

Carl E. Vuono
General, U.S. Army
Chief of Staff

Michael P. W. Stone
Secretary of the Army

President Bush greets men, women of America's armed forces

On behalf of all Americans, I am pleased to wish you every happiness during the forthcoming holidays and in the new year.

Throughout this holy season of Christmas and Hanukkah, we are especially mindful of the many blessings we enjoy, as individuals and as a nation. While we follow our own traditions in celebrating this special time of year, we see our many gifts and their giver, our Heavenly Father, in a new light.

The blessing of freedom is among our most precious gifts.

This is a responsibility that all Americans share; but we look to you, our fellow citizens who wear the uniform of the United States, to serve as the front-line guardians of liberty.

Because we uphold the ideals of freedom and justice and because you stand ready to defend those ideals, oppressed people around the world have hope that they, too, can break the bonds of tyranny.

Some of you are able to enjoy this season with family and friends, while others are based in faraway lands or on distant shores.

Regardless of the assignment or the location, you remain in the hearts and prayers of your fellow Americans.

I speak for them when I tell you that we are deeply grateful for your service.

Barbara and I send you our best wishes. We pray that the Father of us all will grant you his favor, give you strength, and preserve your spirit.

George Bush
President

MPs to reroute traffic

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The incoming flow of traffic during morning rush hour at the Custer Road/Fort Benning Road/Lumpkin Road intersection will be changed Wednesday, according to Military Police Activity officials.

There will no longer be three inbound traffic lanes to main post in the morning, officials said.

The route is being revised to allow two lanes of inbound traffic onto post and two lanes of outbound traffic down Custer Road off post.

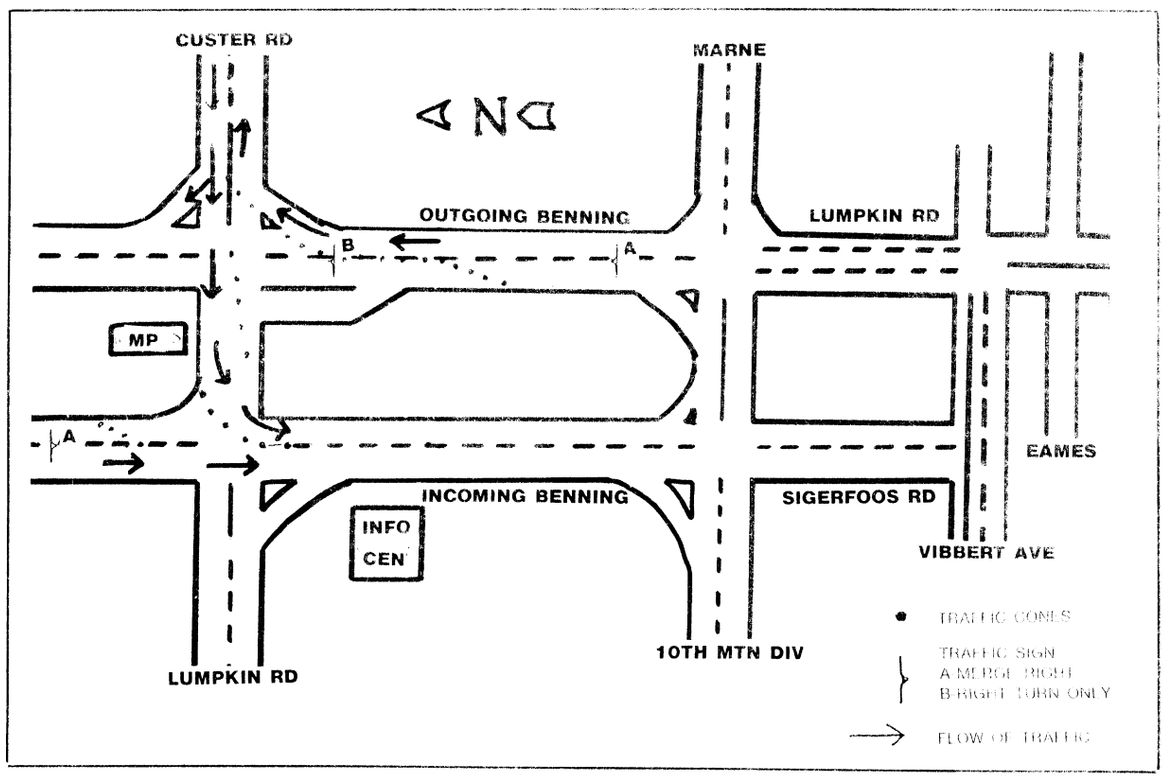
"During November, members of the Provost Marshal's Traffic Operations section surveyed and analyzed the rush hour traffic flow in the mornings," said Staff Sgt. Anthony W. Greer, Traffic Investigations non-commissioned officer in charge.

"The purpose of this was to determine if the current system of rerouting traffic during these peak hours was effective, necessary and could be improved," said Greer.

Based upon the results and analysis of raw data gathered, the changes were made to simplify the morning rush hour route, Greer continued.

The benefits resulting from the changes are: reduced confusion for motorists, near normal traffic flow, more route options from 10th Mountain Division Road inward, fewer military police assets to set up, manage and take down, thereby reducing traffic problems during transition times, he added.

"The only possible difficulty we foresee with the new system will be merging and lane changing between Custer Road and 10th Mountain Division Road on incoming Benning Boulevard. We will monitor this situation closely to prevent problems," Greer said.



Trial attorneys available to help soldiers needing legal assistance

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Should a soldier find himself in legal trouble he believes to be adverse, help is only a phone call away at the Trial Defense Service.

TDS attorneys represent active duty soldiers in court martials, formal Article 15s (summarized Article 15s are not authorized for counsel), Article 32b investigations, reduction in grade at both enlisted and officer levels, flight evaluation boards, U.S. Army Infantry School academic boards, Article 15-6 investigations and representation in Article 138 cases, according to Sgt. 1st class Danny J. Autrey, non-commissioned officer in charge at the TDS.

Autrey also said that the TDS staff handles cases of complaints and letters of reprimand, counsels cases of the Uniform Code of Military Justice and provides advice in medical boards and bars to re-enlistment.

They cannot, however, represent soldiers accused of criminal misconduct in civilian courts, according to Autrey.

The TDS is staffed by four military attorneys. Each attorney is a law school graduate, fully qualified and accredited by their respective state bar associations and licensed to practice law in the highest courts of the United States. In addition, the attorneys are qualified by the Judge Advocate General's Corps of the Army and qualified to go before the Courts of Military Review and Appeals, Autrey said.

The TDS at Fort Benning is a field office of the Region II TDS, which includes Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Florida, the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico, as well as Georgia. This region is commanded by Lt. Col. Harlan M. Heffelfinger.

"What we want people to know," said Autrey, "is that we're there and are able to help, but we do have casework and cannot see them at a moments notice." Appointments are required to see a trial defense attorney.

The TDS field office is located in Building 65 at the corner of Edwards Street and Wold Avenue, across from the Military Police Station and can be reached by phone at 545-2175 or 545-2176.

Company donates gift boxes to family members

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Nearly 3,900 family members of deployed soldiers are receiving special gift boxes from the Nabisco Biscuit Company throughout the holiday season.

Post Commander Major General Carmen Cavezza hosted a ceremony of appreciation at Santa's Castle, building 2639, Tuesday at 10:30 a.m.

Retired Col. David Strivers was on hand to represent Nabisco.

"Operation Oreo" packages, containing an assortment of Nabisco cookies and crackers, in addition to 300 Peter Pan video tapes were donated to families of deployed soldiers in the Middle East.

The gift boxes are being distributed at Santa's Castle, in addition to those already distributed to family members during holiday parties held from Dec. 1 through 16 at the Main Post Bowling Center.

More than 300 Nabisco employees volunteered their time to prepare the packs as part of the company's Operation Oreo program to assist soldiers and their families. Each red, white and blue box contains an assortment of Nabisco cookies and crackers.

The company donated 50,000 gift boxes to military families living near 10 major military installations in addition to Fort Benning, according to company officials.

Earlier in November, the company contributed more than 100,000 packages of Oreo cookies that were shipped to troops in the Persian Gulf.

"We wanted to do something to help the families of our service men and women," said Ellen Marram, president of Nabisco Biscuit. "This is a difficult time for them, and we hope that these cookies and crackers will bring some happiness during the holiday season."

VHA available for reservists on active duty

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Reserve soldiers activated for Operation Desert Shield may now receive Variable Housing Allowance.

The VHA payment was authorized by the Defense Authorization Act for fiscal 1991. It becomes effective upon the date of activation.

Reserve soldiers serving on active duty other than for training are entitled to VHA on the same basis as any other active-duty soldier.

Troop Program Unit members activated for Desert Shield are considered to be permanently assigned to their monthly drill station and should receive the VHA rate for that location. The permanent duty station for IRR and ING soldiers and recalled retirees is the location from which they are ordered to active duty.

Cadets blaze trails

By Yupine White
Fort Valley State College

The cadets and cadre of the Wildcat Army Reserve Officer Training Corps Brigade from Fort Valley State College and Albany State College paid a five-day visit to Fort Benning beginning Dec. 7 to conduct "Operation Trailblazer."

Operation Trailblazer is an annual training event designed primarily to prepare junior cadets for ROTC advanced camp.

The field training exercise concentrated on five major training events: land navigation, leadership reaction course, rappelling, Army physical fitness test and basic rifle marksmanship training.

Each day, selected cadets' leadership skills were evaluated while holding the various company leadership positions: commander, executive officer, platoon leader, sergeant, and squad leader.

Thirty-two cadets were trained. The cadet brigade staff of ten seniors from both schools, commanded by Cadet Col. John Chitwood of Albany State College planned and conducted all training.

Training began Dec. 8 with the cadets negotiating Yankee Road Land Navigation Course. After dinner, the seniors conducted marksmanship classes and briefed the Professor of Military Science Lt. Col. Charles P. Ervin Jr. Sunday morning began with a PT test followed by breakfast. Then, Capt. Armstead, Army chaplain, gave a military worship service.

Dec. 10 began with the Leadership Reaction Course, which tests the cadets' planning, organizing, and communication skills as well as their physical stamina and ability to influence their peers. That afternoon, the cadets relocated to Todd Field and rappelled off the 35 and 50-foot towers.

"It's good to be able to do this (rappel) and gain confidence in yourself by finding it so easy after thinking that it was so hard,' said freshman cadet Kenneth Daniels.

New commander takes reins at ITC

By Marilyn Balzarini
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

The Infantry Training Center has a new commander.

Col. Joseph Trez accepted the unit's colors Dec. 12 from outgoing commander Col. Charles Viale in a change of command ceremony on York Field.

Col. Joseph Trez

The ceremony marked the beginning of what Trez said he considers a choice assignment.

He said he wanted this command because it is an opportunity to influence the entire infantry force.

"The framework of the Army is made here (at the Infantry Training Center)," Trez said. "Infantry units are only as good as the soldiers in them."

Trez said he is committed to supplying the best trained infantry soldiers possible to units in the field.

He said he is also committed to maintaining high quality cadre soldiers, who will take fine tune infantry skills with them when they move on to other units.

"Our cadre soldiers must hone the skills needed for overall infantry readiness," Trez said.

The Infantry Training Center's role in reserve component readiness is a challenge that Trez said intrigues him.

It is also another reason for his belief in the magnitude of the Training Center's impact on the infantry force, he said.

"We are responsible for assisting eight reserve training divisions prepare for their mission," Trez said, "so the ITC's role in preparing the reserve force is tremendous."

Trez came to the Infantry Training Center from the Army War College. He is a 1969 graduate of The Citadel.

He is married to the former Carmela Pinelli of Jersey City, N.J. They have three children, James, 17; Cara, 14; and Joseph Jr., 11.

More deployments increase Desert Shield options

By F. Peter Wigginton
American Forces Information Service

The United States plans to deploy up to 240,000 troops beyond the more than 230,000 personnel already stationed in the Persian Gulf. A large share of the added active-duty forces are soldiers based in Germany.

The deployments do not represent a new Desert Shield military operations policy, said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney in comments following President George Bush's announcement of plans to increase the size of U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf.

"After Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait, we said or deployment would continue as long as necessary, and I am today announcing the next deployment in that flow," Cheney said.

Saying the new deployments aren't necessarily the last, he then identified the active Army, Navy and Marine Crops units to be deployed. There may be Air Force units deployed as well, he added.

Cheney also said the Army will activate three National Guard brigades. It had not been decided whether these units are to be deployed to the gulf or to serve stateside as replacements. He said he wants to be sure that combat units drawn from the Guard and Reserve have the opportunity for any added training they may need to prepare them for the environment to which they may be sent.

Cheney deflected questions on specific numbers of personnel and equipment being deployed. He said department policy since the beginning of gulf operations has been to announce numbers only after troops are in theater and operational.

"As troops arrive in theater, as they are deemed combat ready and become part of the force under the command of Gen. (H. Norman) Schwarzkopf, at that point we will announce that there's been a net increment to the total force levels there," said Cheney.

He said the buildup of U.S. forces "clearly gives us additional offensive capability, should it be needed," but reiterated that U.S. policy remains unchanged. It is to deter further aggression by Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, to defend should deterrence fail and to enforce U.N. sanctions.

Cheney said changes in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union have made the movement of U.S. troops possible. Withdrawal of forces from Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Germany and Poland, and the conventional force reduction agreement between the Warsaw Pact and NATO have eliminated the military risk of reassigning forces to support operations in Southwest Asia, he said.

The secretary speculated it would be after the first of the year, at least, before all the forces would arrive in theater.

"The additional forces being deployed to Saudi Arabia in the weeks and months ahead will provide the president a full range of options necessary to deal with the current situation in the Middle East," said Schwarzkopf, commander of U.S. Central Command. "My mission remains the same: to deter aggression against Saudi Arabia and to defend if necessary."

Christmas can be lonely time of year

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

Christmas — that season of seasons, when cheer and goodwill toward men run freely and "the blues" seem to disappear.

Sounds of carols fill the air as people rush from store to store and make the party rounds.

Friends and family come together in a way like at no other time of the year.

Yet, for many, the Christmas season is the loneliest and most depressing time of the year, experts say.

For many people, feelings of depression seems to magnify during this season when a major emphasis is placed on togetherness and mingling with others.

Feelings of being lonely and cut off from family and friends can trigger emotional distress and bring about feelings of hopelessness and helplessness, according to Yvonne Linsenbigler, coordinator of Fort Benning's Civilian Counseling Services, Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program.

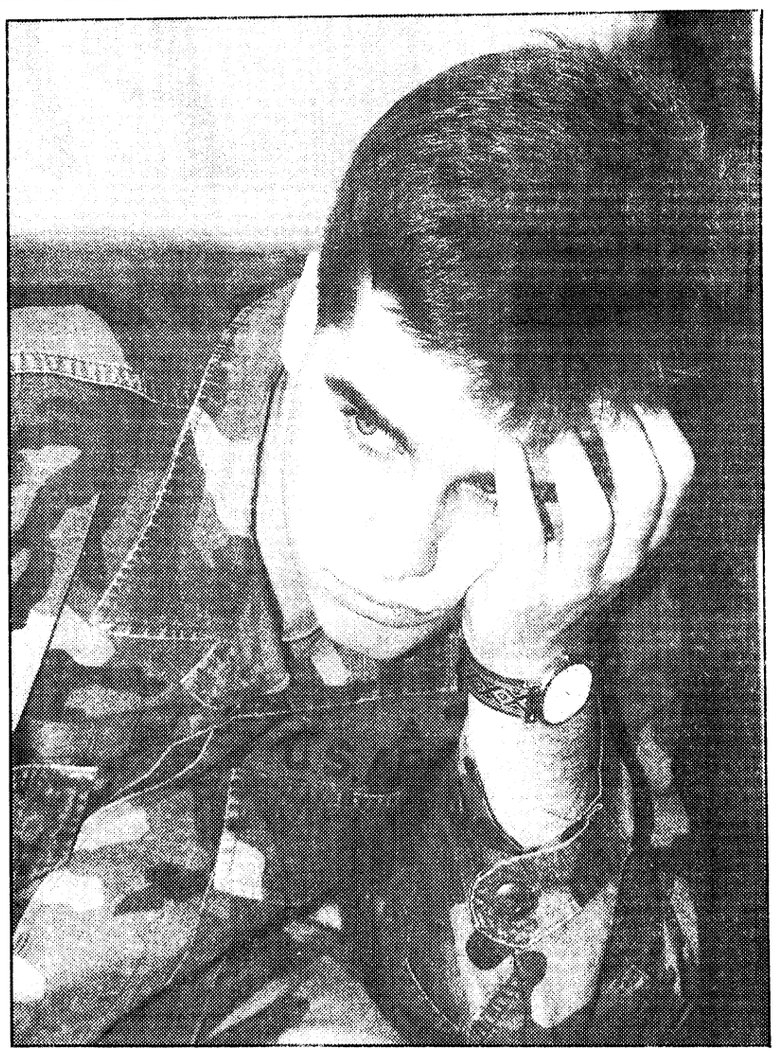
These in turn may lead to thoughts that the problems of life are too much to handle and that death might be a quick and easy solution, she said.

Some signs that a person may be emotionally distressed are: changes in eating and sleeping habits, withdrawal from family and friends, an unwillingness to participate in holiday functions, unusual neglect in appearance, giving of extravagant Christmas gifts or personal possessions for no apparent reason, unexplained, extreme personality change or thinking or talking about suicide.

If a person has suicidal tendencies, take all threats seriously and trust your suspicions, Linsenbigler said. Answer all "cries for help" whether they are verbal or shown through actions.

Confront the person directly and encourage that person to seek professional help, she said, and enlist the aid of someone who is in charge of the individual to take positive action.

The holidays are a happy time, but not for all. Being a true friend to those having problems could be the best present they receive this season.



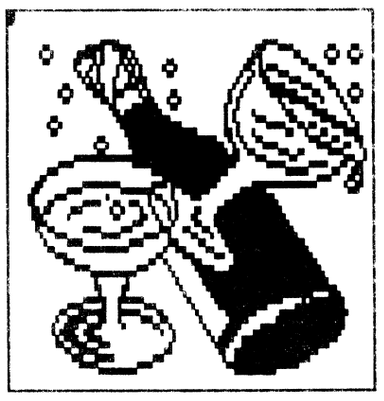
Alyanna B. Clay-Heard

The holiday season can be lonely and depressing for some soldiers.

Alcohol contributes to one-third of accidents

Impaired vision causes many traffic fatalities

Infantry Branch Safety Office



Alcohol is a contributing factor in about a third of all Army fatal personally owned vehicles traffic crashes.

As the concentration of alcohol in the blood increases, the likelihood of a driver being in a traffic accident increases dramatically.

Safe and efficient driving depends on constant attention and split-second decision making based on visual cues. Much has been written on the obvious physical impairment.

Yet 85 to 90 percent of the information we receive concerning traffic comes through the eyes. Without a clear picture, accident-free driving is next to impossible.

How does alcohol affect sight? Alcohol usually has a relaxing effect, resulting in less voluntary control over all general body muscles. The delicate control of the fine, discrete muscles that move and focus the eyes is particularly affected by alcohol.

Alcohol not only affects the eye's ability to focus, it reduces control over the amount of light entering the eye, and reduces visual sharpness.

When the eye muscles are relaxed by fatigue, drugs, or alcohol, both eyes may not be focused on the same point, resulting in double vision.

Alcohol affects other aspects of vision, such as peripheral vision, the ability to distinguish colors, and night vision.

Since seeing properly is a fundamental necessity for driving safely, drivers whose vision is impaired by alcohol are much more likely to be involved in serious traffic accidents.

Stop loss

Soldiers wishing to separate for expiration term of service, medical failure for flight training, early release of reserve component/national guard tours, voluntary retirement, early release of Headquarters, Department of the Army bars, reduction in authorized strength as directed by Department of the Army and holiday early transition will not be allowed to separate until further notice, she said.

Soldiers with a separation date after Dec. 5 and who have not departed on transition leave prior to Dec. 1 are subject to Stop Loss, she added.

Transition leave scheduled to start on or after Dec. 1 will be canceled or disapproved, she said. Soldiers who have already commenced transition leave prior to Dec. 1 will remain on leave and continue to separate.

Requests for separation for humanitarian reasons, personal hardships or special consideration may be submitted through command channels to Personnel Command.

Commanders are authorized to disapprove exception requests that they determine not to be fully justified, she said.

Questions pertaining specifically to retirement should be directed to Sweet at 545-5369. Separation questions should be directed to Mollett at 545-1324.

Scouting the desert terrain, seeking enemies to destroy

By Michael P. Mauer
Army Central Public Affairs Office

SAUDI ARABIA — In the desert here, there are many snakes considered deadly. Perhaps the most dangerous aren't reptiles, but the Co. E. "Cobras" of 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade.

Part of Operation Desert Shield from Fort Benning, the Cobras carry a "venom" in their M-901 improved TOW vehicles considered lethal to threat armor.

Their tube-launched, optically-guided weapons can ruin a tank's day at more than 3,000 meters.

As important as the Cobras strike is where they coil and wait. That was what the unit was practicing Nov. 2 in the desert.

"What I'm trying to do is give my task force an anti-armor capability," said Capt. Thomas E. Beron, Co. E commander. "Also, I'm trying to give the armor team a chance to maneuver against the enemy's flank."

Beron added that a key part of the exercise is to get his TOW gunners to practice tracking targets.

"We want to maneuver, take up fighting positions and track as much as possible," he said.

"Right now, we're tracking friendly vehicles, but we're trying to find anything new to get our gunners familiar with a variety of targets."

Although Co. D might not be completely familiar with vehicles, they are knowledgeable of Warsaw Pact-style tactics. According to Beron, the Cobras demonstrated their prowess in February at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif., scoring a nearly 90 percent kill ratio.

An M-901 improved TOW vehicle rolls across the Saudi Arabian Desert.

Beron said the performance at NTC and unit training here make him confident his Cobras are ready for the Desert Shield challenge.

"We spend a lot of time training, and the non-commissioned officers make sure the training is done right," the commander said. "The soldiers spend a lot of time on the sights. That's what it takes."

Doing what it takes for the Cobras is TOW gunner Spec. Belvin S. Gaines. According to Gaines, the Saudi desert isn't much different than what he experienced at NTC.

"The terrain feels and looks the same to me," said Gaines, who has been at TOW sights for more than two years.

"The sand and dried-out lake beds look the same. The only thing different here is the sand storms. They cause the sights to get dirty fast."

Gaines said he is able to keep one step ahead of the desert sand by cleaning his TOW two or three times daily.

He added that his daily maintenance routine keeps the TOW battle ready.

"Everything is holding up out here," said Gaines. "I think in the heat of battle, it would do fine."

Gaines also said he has a score to settle at Operation Desert Shield.

"Since I've been gunning, all the missiles I've fired have hit the target except one," he said.

"My friends and my loader never let me forget. I'll make sure I'll never miss again. When I'm behind that turret, I take all my training seriously."

> "If we go to war, we'll have enough answers for any problem."
>
> — Spec. Tracy Roby

Helping Gaines to meet his goal of 100 percent accuracy is his loader, Spec. Tracy Roby.

"My job is to reload the system as fast as possible," said Roby. "The faster I can load, the faster my gunner can fire."

Roby said once the M-901's tubes are dropped back into loading position, he can beat the Army standard time for getting the weapon ready to fire another two rounds.

He added that teamwork was the key to this success.

"The more we work together, the more problems we encounter, and the more answers we get. If we go to war, we'll have enough answers for any problem."

Editor's note: Mauer is a sergeant from Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., and is assigned to U.S. Army Central Command Public Affairs in support of Operation Desert Shield.

Sgt. Elias M. Gonzalez, Co. E, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Regt., 197th Inf. Bde., scans the terrain for the next spot to emplace his crew's TOW missiles.

Tips keep trees safe

Safety Office

Every Christmas, trees catch fire. The results usually. are death, serious burns, and property damage. Here are a few tips to give your family that added protection during the holidays, and still have a Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

- Cut a growing tree or purchase one which has not been allowed to dry out by prolonged storage. To check if the tree is fresh, bounce it down hard, and if the needles do not fall off, the tree is still fresh.
- Stand the tree in water until ready for use.
- Saw off the trunk at an angle at least one inch above the original cut.
- Provide strong support for the tree. Use a sturdy stand that has anchor clamps and a container which holds water. Check water supply at least once a day.
- Keep the tree away from sources of heat (fireplaces, radiators, etc.).
- Never use candles on a tree. Open flames may contact the tree, curtains, or combustible material piled beneath the tree.
- Use only electrical lighting sets that bear the UL (Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc.) label.
- Check lighting sets each year for frayed wires, loose connections, and broken sockets before using.
- Be sure the fuse of the electric circuit serving the tree is not over 15 amperes.

College teams wear unit patches

Columbus College

The Columbus College Lady Cougars are in their second year of intercollegiate basketball competition under head coach Jay Sparks, and the men's team is sporting a new, fast-paced style of play Coach Herbert Greene calls his free lance offense.

And both teams are sporting an addition to their uniforms to recognize and remember America's military men and women serving in the Middle East. Throughout the season, you will see two red, white, and blue patches representing the Fort Benning units which are taking part in Operation Desert Shield.

Junior wing player Wanda Jackson, the daughter of Chief Warrant Officer Vencife Jackson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, is wearing the unit patch of the 197th Infantry Brigade. Matt Bell, the son of Sgt. Maj. Euell T. Bell, U.S. Army Infantry School, Combined Arms and Tactics Division, is wearing the Forces Command patch.

"Coach Sparks' team and mine wanted to do something to recognize all our troops, but there is no single patch representing all the military units in the Middle East," said Coach Herbert Greene.

Wanda Jackson and Matt Bell sport Fort Benning unit patches.

"Since Fort Benning is such an important part of our community, we called the Public Affairs Office and decided on the patches of the 197th and Forces Command. The NCAA then authorized us to add them to our uniforms for the 1990-91 season."

Groups interested in attending Columbus College basketball games free of charge can call the Athletic Department at 568-2204.

Willie "G-Man" Grider lifts his way to a win.

Benning lifters take first

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Forty-seven lifters from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and Tennessee converged on the Briant Wells Field House Saturday for the second annual Fort Benning Open Power Lifting Championship.

The meet was conducted by the Directorate of Community Activities and collected $1,400 for the installation's Morale, Welfare, and Recreation fund.

The lifters, from three different teams; Fort Benning, Fort Gordon, and Muscles Elite from Donaldsville, Ga., competed for trophies in the teen, women's, open, novice, military and master's divisions. The competition was extremely close in most categories, the winner being decided in most cases by the final deadlift.

The Benning team came out on top in the final standings with Jose Sanchez, Tony Jenkins, Willie Grider, Roosevelt Gadsden, Clement Green, Mike Smith, Andy Christian, Michael Hales and Jess Gilmer hauling themselves past the Fort Gordon team by a slight two points. The Benning team did this even without the additional strength of some of their veteran lifters, who were unable to compete due to an unexpected shortage of assisting personnel.

Willie "G-man" Grider was named best lifter in the military division, with Michael Francis winning the award in the open division.

Ben and Nancy Parker, Carol Woodring, and Danny Thompson, along with Steve Williams and Marty McDowell, served as judges for the competition. Personnel from Companies C, D and E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry provided support as loaders and spotters for the day. Bob Bell of Directorate of Training and Doctrine served as the meet director and John R. Leonard performed duties for the day.

Match T-shirts were made by Mitchell Graphics and the meet was sponsored by Wendy's, Ranger Joe's, General Nutrition Center, and Names and Frames.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Bluegrass outing — There will be a bluegrass music get together Dec. 30 at 2 p.m. at Uchee Creek recreational area. All pickers, grinners and listeners are invited. Admission is a $1 voluntary donation. A covered-dish supper will be at 5 p.m. For more information, call 298-4870 after 5 p.m.

Self esteem workshop — A special lunchtime program on women and self esteem sponsored by Civilian Counseling Services, ADAPCP and the Fort Benning Management Association will be Jan. 17. Nationally known speaker will be Teresa Bernadez, M.D., Department of Psychiatry at Michigan State University. Registration is required. For more information, call Yvonne Linsenbigler, 545-2475 or 545-2742. For lunch reservations, call Wynonoa Johnson, 545-4180 or 545-1488.

College re-entry program — The Columbus College Adult Re-Entry Program will sponsor a free seminar called "Strategies for Success" Jan. 8 at the Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education. Times are 9:30 to noon or 7 to 9:30 p.m. This seminar helps the older than average student learn how to successfully juggle multiple roles. Open to potential and currently enrolled college students.

Storage lockers — Storage lockers are available for rent at the Post Lease and Rental Facility, which is located in building 1707 on Gillespie Street, behind the post laundromat. The storage lockers are constructed of high quality steel to ensure security of valuables.

This is the most convenient means of storing personal property such as furniture, motorcycles, skis, and other equipment not suitable for storing in your quarters or barracks. Rest assured that valuables are secure during deployments or temporary duty. Sizes range from 4'X4'X4' to 4'X4'X8' to 4'X8'X8'. Prices start at $13 per month. For more information, call 545-7978 or 545-3504.

Lodging — The Information, Ticket and Reservation Office books lodging facilities at military rates. ITR has a list of eligible hotels and amenities.

The discounts may be applied to rooms reserved for guests of service members such as parents, family members.

Call 545-7535 or 545-4155 for more information.

Teen fitness class — Teen Fitness, a program that will focus on the importance of exercise, self-esteem, self-image, fun, food, and fitness will be Jan. 2 through 25, Monday and Wednesday, 3:30 to 5 p.m. at Youth Services. All family members 23 to 19 years old of retired or active duty military and Department of Defense civilians are welcome. Preregistration is required and the deadline is today. Registration is at Youth Services in building 1056. For more information, contact Yvette Womack at 545-3070.

Tot Town holiday hours — Tot Town will be open New Years Eve from 6:30 p.m. until 3 a.m. Children will be accepted on a pre-paid, no refund, reservation only basis. The fee is $15 for one child, $10 for each additional child will cover any number of hours until closing. Refreshments and party favors are included. No meals will be served.

In the event the reservation cannot be kept, the following steps will be taken in order to transfer your reservation.

- Reservations are transferable only to eligible family with same aged children for which the reservation was originally made. Tot Town is not responsible for any money exchanged for reservation transfer.
- Tot Town will be notified of transfers and given name of replacements or the reservation will be rendered void.

Tot Town Child Development Center will be closed Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and will re-open Thursday at regular hours. Tot Town will be open Dec. 29 from 6 to 10 p.m. and will be closed Jan. 1 and re-open Jan. 2.

Improper cooking can be dangerous

Preventive Medicine Service

The hustle and bustle of the holiday season can cause anyone to take short cuts when preparing foods. These short cuts may make the food unsafe for eating and cause a foodborne illness.

Foodborne illness, more commonly known as "food poisoning" can certainly take the joy out of the season and may even cause confinement to bed for a few days.

Prevention of foodborne illness is easy if a few simple principles are followed:

- Cook meats thoroughly. Beef should be cooked to at least 145 F and pork should be cooked to an internal temperature of 150 F. If no thermometer is available, cook meat until it is done.
- Prepare poultry stuffing in a separate pan from the meat. Stuffings, especially those prepared inside meat, such as turkey and chicken, may not reach proper temperatures.
- Prepare foods as close as possible to serving time, preferably within four hours.
- When serving, remember to keep hot foods hot (140 F) and cold foods cold(45 F).
- Try to plan meals so that leftovers are kept to a minimum. If there are leftovers, put them into the refrigerator as soon as possible and use them in the next few days.

For more information, call Preventive Medicine Service at 545-4041 or 545-5431.

Tot Town raises rates

Child Development Services

Effective Jan. 1, Tot town fees for hourly care will increase by 25¢ per hour.

At the beginning of the fiscal year, the rates for all Child Development Services programs were increased per instructions by the Department of Defense.

The rate increase for hourly care did not occur at that time because certain factors had to be taken into consideration that did not affect the full-day programs. Now that the program has been evaluated, the rate adjustment for the hourly care program has been established.

The new rates will be $1.50 per hour for the first child and $1.25 for each additional child more than 6 months old. For infants less than 6 months old,the rates will be $1.80 per hour for the first child and $1.55 for each additonal infant less than 6 months old. If the additional child is more than 6 months old, the fee for that child will be $1.25 per hour.

Ida Barnes, Tot Town supervisor, said quality services and professional care will continue to be provided.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

The attorneys at the Legal Assistance Office have been seeing a number of clients recently who have had problems with car repairs.

These problems include the failure of the shop to complete the repairs promptly, repairs which don't fix the problem, and the performance of unauthorized repairs.

This week, we would like to give you a few tips on how to handle problems which arise in this area.

When you first take your car into the shop, you need to reach an understanding with the mechanic about your agreement to use his services. Your agreement to have him repair your car, and his agreement to do so, constitute a legal contract. It is essential that you and the mechanic understand the terms of the contract.

For example, suppose you bring your vehicle into the shop because the engine is running rough. Any number of problems could be present.

Unless the mechanic is absolutely certain of the cause of the problem (in which case, he can quote you a firm price and time period for accomplishing the repairs), your best bet is to have him agree to check the vehicle first and then inform you of his findings.

Make sure that you reach an understanding about whether or not there will be a charge for checking the car. In some cases, particularly where part of the engine has to be disassembled to check, a charge for doing so is proper and warranted.

Unless you know your mechanic well, it is best to have a written work order confirming that the mechanic will contact you before doing any further work and confirming any price for checking.

Having a written work order also applies where you and the mechanic have agreed that he is to perform specified repairs to the car.

In the example given above, it is possible that the mechanic will tell you that he must do a tune-up on the car before he can determine if any other problem is causing the engine to run poorly. Whether or not you should agree to this depends on when you last had a tune-up and how often your vehicle needs one.

If your last tune-up was fairly recent, you should tell the mechanic when you had it done. If he still insists that a tune-up is necessary, you may want to consider taking your vehicle to the shop where you had the last tune-up done.

If your last tune-up was not done recently, the mechanic's request is probably reasonable and prudent.

Ask your mechanic about guarantees and warranties on parts and labor before you let him work on the car. Make sure both you and the mechanic understand what such warranties cover. Again, it is best to have these understandings in writing to avoid any argument at a later date.

If you get a high estimate from a mechanic with whom you are not familiar, get a second and even a third opinion. Before you agree to allow an unfamiliar mechanic to perform serious work to your car, such as an engine rebuild, check out his reputation. You can check with the Better Business Bureau, with your friends, and you can ask the mechanic for names of customers for whom he has done similar work.

Be certain that the mechanic can indeed stand behind his work. It can be tempting to use a friend or acquaintance who is a "shade-tree" mechanic merely because the price is lower. However, we have seen numerous cases (most involving engine rebuilds) where the job is botched and the "shade-tree" mechanic either can't be found or can't afford to make it right. You should never pay a repair bill in advance of the work being done!

The Legal Assistance Office is available to assist and advise you on these and other consumer matters. The telephone number is 545-3281.

Wives offer their thanks

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

Wives from the Air Force Detachment 4 Family Support Group decided not to wait to say thanks to the members of the rear detachment who have supported them while their husbands are in Saudi Arabia. They held a surprise luncheon Dec. 14 in the company area to say thank you.

Michelle Salvatoriello, wife of Col. Stephen Salvatoriello, commander of Det. 4, said "the support they have given us is just fabulous. They have run a Car Care Day to help do the maintenance for our cars, some of them have mowed lawns, they have acted as role models for the boys who need father figures. They are so special."

Salvatoriello said, "the holidays are difficult to get through and we found our wives would like to give back something to these men."

"Our concern was not to forget the ones left behind. This is the season to give and we do not want to wait until our husbands come home to say thank you."

FBMA collects canned goods

By Wanda Campbell
Bayonet community writer

The monthly luncheon of the Fort Benning Management Association Dec. 13 spotlighted the need of the Army Community Services Food Locker during the holiday season and recognized individuals who had given support to the fund-raising and scholarship portions of the association.

Col. Rod Morris, president of FBMA, presented Karen Crowley, chief of Army Community Services, a check and cash totaling $248 that was collected from members in addition to canned goods.

Harry Hall, manager of military sales at Kinnett Dairy, received a certificate of appreciation for his support during fund-raising activities with FBMA.

Paul Stansel, director of Troy State, was recognized as the catalyst for the scholarship committee. He was presented with a plaque to honor his activities for the association.

Former Benning soldier dies

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A former Fort Benning soldier was one of three people killed last week in a two vehicle accident in Alaska.

Sgt. Frederick Donald Carl, 23, was assigned to the Northern Warfare Training Center at Fort Greely, near Fairbanks, Alaska.

While stationed at Fort Benning, Carl was assigned to Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Rangers and Co. A, 2nd Bn., 18th Infantry Regiment.

He participated in Operation "Just Cause" in December 1989.

His award and decorations includes an Army Achievement Medal with one oak leaf cluster, Good Conduct Medal, Army Occupational Medal, Armed Forces Expeditionary Medal with Brown Arrowhead, Non-commissioned Officer Professional Development Ribbon, Army Service Ribbon, Combat Infantry Badge, Expert Infantryman Badge, Parachutist Badge with Combat Jump Star, Ranger Tab, German Marksmanship Bade, and French Commando Badge.

Funeral services were 2 p.m. Saturday, at the Zion Baptist Church, Carion, Pa., with interment in Asbury Cemetery, Corsica, Pa.

The family requests that instead of flowers, contributions should be sent to the Zion Baptist Church Youth Group or Boy Scout Troop No. 49, Limestone Township, Clarion, Pa.

ENERGY WATCH

By Tina Cook
Energy Branch

Winter has finally arrived at Fort Benning, and with temperatures dropping, post workers and residents are probably more concerned with staying warm than with saving energy. The following tips can help you stay warm and save energy at the same time:

- Closing drapes, curtains and shades on cold nights keeps warm air inside and cold air out.
- Opening drapes and blinds on sunny days warms the indoors with sunshine.
- Installing weatherstripping and caulking around doors and windows can stop drafts. Weatherproofing materials are available at the Unit and Housing Support Center, building 385 on Vibbert Avenue.
- Covering window air conditioning units keeps cold air out.
- Checking heater filters often and replacing them when necessary keeps the heating unit running efficiently and cleanly. During heating season filters should generally be changed each month.
- Closing fireplace dampers can cut heat losses substantially. Open dampers in a chimney when the fireplace is not in use can cause a heat loss of up to eight percent for a 48" square fireplace.
- Closing vents in and sealing off unused rooms helps save heating energy. This is not recommended for houses with heat pumps, as it may damage the system.
- Keeping ducts, vents and registers clean help heating systems run efficiently.
- Using vent fans sends heated air outside. Kitchen and bathroom exhaust fans can expel an entire houseful of heated air in just one hour, so should be turned on only when needed.
- After baking or broiling, turn the oven off but leave the door open.
- Setting the thermostat as low as possible saves operating costs of up to six percent per degree.

Staying warm and comfortable and conserving energy don't have to be conflicting goals.

If you have any questions, contact the Energy Office at 545-4652 or 545-SWAT.

SPIRITUAL

God's 'gift' is the very best

By Richard B. Garrison
Infantry Center Chaplain

The success of any advertising campaign can be measured by how well the average person remembers the message. One phrase, often heard on television and radio, has been lingering in my mind this Christmas season. The phrase goes, "When you care enough to give the very best."

Giving is on our minds these days, and rightly so, for this is truly the season of giving. After searching tediously for just the right gift, be it the latest Nintendo challenge or a good book, a compact disc player or the ever-popular fruitcake, the next task is wrapping.

Wrapping can itself be a challenge, and it can be revealing. You can tell a lot about a Christmas gift by its wrapping. When I was a boy, I delighted in sitting near the Christmas tree, picking up one brightly wrapped gift at a time, observing it, and hoping it would give a clue to its contents. Though the wrapping never revealed the content, it did reveal intent. It told me something about the givers — that they cared enough to put careful effort into it. No brown paper bag, hastily taped at the top, ever found its way to the tree — only carefully crafted containers.

I wonder if any of us ever gives a second thought to the "wrapping" that God used when he presented the world with the ultimate gift of himself. God's gift came wrapped in human flesh — in the person of Jesus Christ. "When the fullness of time was come," wrote the Apostle Paul to the Galatian believers, "he sent forth his son, born of a woman." Christmas means a lot of things, but ultimately it means "Immanuel," God with us!

God's prophets foretold his promises and his preparations — "For unto us a child is born, to us a son is given," declared Isaiah. What God promised, he delivered.

I recall reading a story about a woman who had waited until the last minute to send Christmas cards. She rushed into a store and bought a package of 50 cards without really looking at them. Still in a big hurry, she addressed 49 of the 50 and signed them without reading the message inside.

On Christmas Day, when things had quieted down, she ran upon the leftover card and finally read the message she had sent to 49 of her friends. Much to her dismay, it read like this: "This card is just to say — A little gift is on the way." Suddenly she realized that 49 of her friends were expecting a gift from her — a gift that would never come.

God's gift was prophesied, prepared, and presented — it is our's to claim. Gift giving and gift wrapping take on a whole new significance if we view it in light of what our Heavenly Father did when he cared enough . . .and gave the very best!

A Christmas Prayer

Our Heavenly Father, we thank you for a love so great that you would give us your only son. In this gift, you have given us the supreme example that it is more blessed to give than to receive.

We rededicate ourselves at this most sacred and holy season to the spirit of giving, peace, and good will to people everywhere. May the spirit of the Christ be renewed in our hearts and souls this day and continue throughout the coming year.

As we partake of this food, we thank you again for your love and watchcare over us. In the name of Christ our Lord, amen.

PWOC Bible study — The Protestant Women of the Chapel (PWOC) holds Bible study every Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, located on the corner of Dixie Road and Ingersoll Street. Babysitting is provided.

If you do not have transportation, call Jeanne Bastone at 682-3358.

For more information, contact Diane Boucher at 689-6206 or Lilliet Gorrison at 687-8012.

New Adult Sunday School Class — A new Adult Sunday School class has been organized at the Main Post Sunday School. The subject being studied is a book entitled "Be Encouraged." The class meets at 9:30 a.m. each Sunday in the Religious Education Center, building 229, and is particularly recommended to spouses of deployed soldiers. The class is dismissed at 10:30 so that members may attend the chapel worship service of their choice.

Bible study — The Protestant Women of the Chapel hold Bible study every Thursday from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, which is located on the corner of Dixie Road and Ingersoll Street. Babysitting is provided.

If you would like to share in this time of fellowship, but do not have transportation, call Jeanne Bastone at 682-3358. For more information, contact Diane Boucher at 689-6206 or Lilliet Garrison at 687-8012.

Sunday School — Custer Terrace Sunday School, located in the Custer Terrace Chapel, building 10800, begins at 10 a.m. while the Main Post Sunday School, located in the Religious Education Center, Crain Hall, building 229, begins at 9:30 a.m.

For more information, call 545-2366.

Transportation for Main Post Sunday School — Buses are available to pick up passengers in all housing areas on Fort Benning who are traveling to and from the Main Post Sunday School.

Sunday School is from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. in the Religious Education Center, building 229.

Anyone needing a ride to Sunday School should call the Religious Education Center at 545-2366 and 545-4715 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Bible study — There are six Officer Christian Fellowship Bible study groups that meet during the evening at various locations at Fort Benning.

Anyone who would like to become a part of one of the groups should call 545-2050.

DA suspends some TDYs

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

All stabilization-based continental U.S. temporary duty have been suspended until further notice, according to Adjutant General officials.

Soldiers returning from overseas tours and who have been reassigned to a stateside assignment for six to 12 months stabilization or have the 12-month stabilization option written into their re-enlistment contract may have that option suspended and may return to overseas duty in the Middle East in support of Operation Desert Shield, said Sgt. 1st Class Kim S. Silcox, non-commissioned officer in charge of Personnel Reassignments, Fort Benning.

"Some soldiers are selected by name by the Department of the Army," Silcox continued. "In other situations, we are tasked by the Department of the Army to select soldiers to support Operatio Desert Shield, based on a need for a certain military occupational specialty or grade. In both of these situations, regardless of the soldier's status in relation to recent overseas duty or re-enlistment option, if they are needed, the stabilization option will be suspended — no exceptions."

Personnel who have had their stabilization time denied will have their time readjusted upon their return, said Silcox.

Reassignments will be giving the full consideration to the established procedures for the selection of soldiers with the earliest date of return from overseas service, Silcox added.

Army has safest year ever

By Steve J. Jackson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fiscal 1990 was the Army's safest year ever, since the service started collecting safety statistics, according to a Dec. 18 Department of the Army message.

The announcement came as a result of data collected in numerous categories ranging from aircraft accidents to private motor vehicle accidents.

Highlights of the year include a 13 percent reduction in total Army accidents and a 23 percent reduction in the three year average accident rate, according to the message.

The message goes on to say that military fatalities were at their lowest since 1975 and that this is particularly significant in light of the near-to-combat training the Army currently conducts.

The most dramatic reduction came in Army Combat Vehicle accidents which were 45 percent below FY 89 figures.

The Army has made significant progress over the last year in its efforts to reduce privately owned vehicle accidents, according to the message.

This category is the biggest killer of soldiers, officials said, however, at year's end, FY 90 POV accidents were down 13 percent and the three year average was reduced by 26 percent. Fatalities were down 7 percent from the three-year average.

Fort Benning had some major safety accomplishments in FY 90 according to Regis Beighley, the post's safety officer.

Beighley said the post reduced civilian injuries by over 20 percent compared to FY 86. "We achieved the lowest number (two) of privately owned vehicle fatalities in Fort Benning's history since 1950," Beighley said. "We achieved the lowest number (four) of accidental fatalities since 1950, and achieved the lowest number (nine) of Army motor vehicles in Fort Benning's history since 1950."

Beighley also said for the second year in Fort Benning's history, no soldier was killed in an army motor vehicle accident, the last time was in FY 86.

"We achieved the highest seat belt usage in Fort Benning's history, and we received an award from the Department of Transportation for Fort Benning's seat belt program," he said.

Beighley added that The National Safety Council recognized Fort Benning as the top military installation in their defensive driving program, Coaching the Experienced Driver.

The post also recorded only two lost time accidents during the deployment of Fort Benning Forces Command units, Beighley said.

More Benning units deploy to Middle East

By Douglas O. Bruk
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat) (Heavy) was bid farewell at a deployment ceremony Dec. 20 at Lawson Army Airfield.

The unit will be leaving this weekend for Saudi Arabia to join the several other Fort Benning units in supporting Operation Desert Shield.

The 216lst Medical Detachment, the 1093rd Transportation Bn.,an National Guard unit, the 986th Chemical Detachment,an Army Reserve, and the 317th Military History Detachment were also at the ceremony and will deploy to Saudi Arabia with the 43rd although they will not be assigned or attached to the 43rd, according to officials.

The 43rd Engr. Bn. has approximately 600 soldiers assigned who are very familiar with deployment exercises. The battalion has been through this once before, in the August deployment alert which ended with the unit standing down until now.

"The unit has been training for this mission for a long time," stated Maj. John Orosz, the battalion operations officer. He cited that, in recent years, the 43rd's companies have deployed to Cost Rica and Honduras in order to maintain unit readiness. One platoon from the Headquarters and Support Company has also been to Belize to construct a bridge.

The 43rd is a combat heavy engineer unit, specializing in horizontal and vertical construction. The unit has the capability to build roads, airstrips, bunkers, bridges, buildings, and can also be utilized to dig in positions for tanks and artillery pieces, although that is a task normally performed by light engineer units. While in Saudi Arabia, the 43rd's mission will be to upgrade already exsisting facilities aside from playing the 'waiting game' said Orosz.

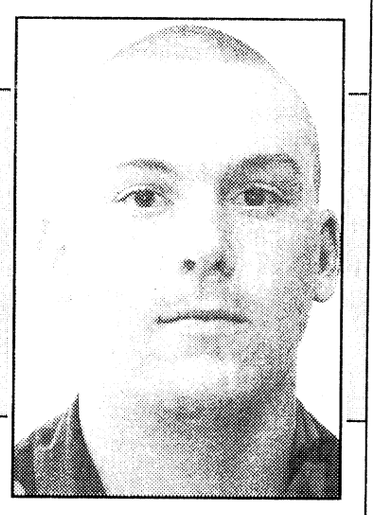
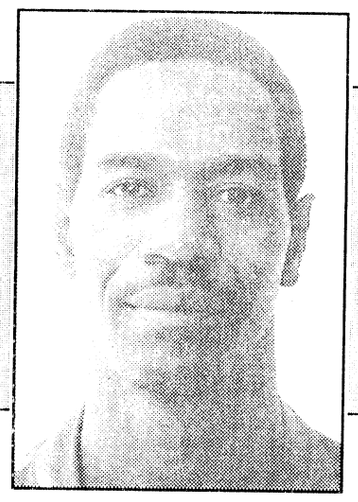
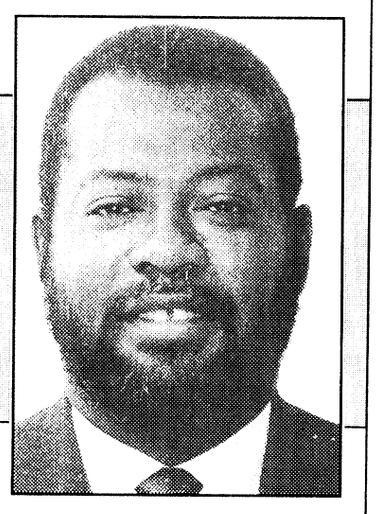
Sgt. 1st Class Robert L. Wiese, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. - "We should concentrate on decreasing the nation's deficit, bring our soldiers back from the Middle East and try to solve the problems with the Savings and Loans."



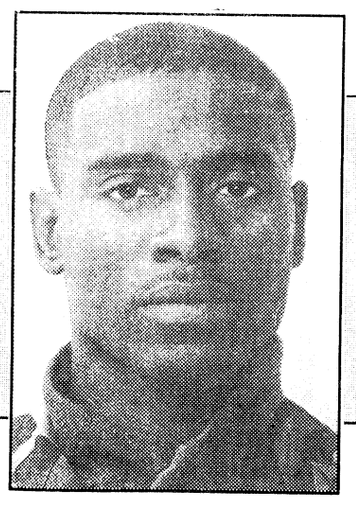
Pvt. Jonathan Frutchey, Co. E, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt. - "We have to solve the crisis in the Middle East by wiping out Saddam Hussein, and carefully observe the growing problem in the Soviet Union."



Staff Sgt. Willie C. Battle, HHC, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. - "We definitely have to curb the deficit and improve the nation's financial situation. We also have to resolve the Middle East crisis, whether it be peacefully or by force."



William R. Flewellen, Sales Associate, Jay Toyota of Columbus - "I think the first priority is our nation's economic situation, which is deplorable at this time. We need to make it possible for more people to find employment."



2nd Lt. Darryl W. Sharp, Co. A, 2nd Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. - "We ought to get our soldiers more prepared for a possible nuclear, biological or chemical attack; because if we go to war with Iraq, our greatest threat is nuclear weapons, which Hussein would enjoy using against us."

COMMENTARY

Snively tells of shooting match woes

By Clyde Snively
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Up until the time I came into the Army, the largest bore gun I'd ever fired was BB.

Not only that, but I was the worse shot in the neighborhood. While all the other delinquents were out shooting birds and cats, I couldn't even hit my sister. Probably a good thing too, because she'd more'n likely wrapped the durn thing around my scrawny neck.

This all changed once I got in the Army. First, my neck size increased and I learned enough hand to gland where I think I could at long last, handle my sister. And yes, after an eternity spent under the broiling sun of Fort Jackson, and the equally searing eye of my drill sergeant, I actually got to where I could hit targets with my Army-issue weapon.

But up until a couple of weeks ago, I'd never fired a pistol.

That's when the great, white, woman hunter from public information invited me to join the downtown media in a pistol shoot sponsored by the Army Marksmanship Training Unit.

My first reaction was total awe. Not of the media, but of the idea that I was actually going to meet and greet those guys I'd only read about — those guys who regularly cleaned the clocks of the world's best shooters.

But great, white, woman hunter told me to look on it as a chance to learn some pistol shooting techniques from the world's finest shooters and coaches.

When she reassured me they didn't wear Smokey Bear hats, I agreed to go. Perhaps they could tell me how to extend my arm and hold it out without shaking.

Unfortunately, because of another commitment, I missed that block of instruction. Even more unfortunate was I learned we were actually to be on teams and would actually be keeping score.

But worse of all, I was to be teamed with the great, white, woman hunter. Miss dead-eye. The person who took up deer hunting last year. The same person who got a deer with her first shot the first time she went out.

Around PAO she's known as "Miss one-shot, one-kill."

It went down hill from there.

While I rejoiced when 8 out of 10 shots hit the sheet the target was on, MOSOK was counting 7 out of 10 in the bulls eye. While I was adding up 2s and 3s, she was clocking in 9s and 10s.

Finally all the scores were in. MOSOK's coach was telling her she had one of the top scores, telling her that it was too bad her partner was so crummy, that with a partner who could've scored a teeny bit better, her team might have won.

Then came the awards ceremony. Fancy black, marksmanship unit hats to the winners. Fancy plaques to the winners, fancy coffee cups to the winners.

MOSOK's eyes teared up as she saw what she might have won with a partner who could shoot semi-straight. Even today, two week later, every time she gets a cup of coffee she says, "and to think I could be drinking coffee out of a one-shot, one-kill cup, if only I'd had a decent partner."

I have a feeling MOSOK will be there next year if they hold this competition. I have a feeling I won't be.

This story does have a happy ending.

As we prepared to go to press, Staff Sgt. Rand Albrecht came up with "One shot - one kill" cups for all the participants. Even me, although I noticed mine had a line running through the words "one kill," and MOSOK asked me if I really had the effrontery to drink coffee from a cup with the Marksmanship Unit seal on the front.

Well, at least she's talking to me again.

LETTER

Reader criticizes Snively's town meeting comments

This letter is in reference to Clyde Snively's Nov. 30 commentary regarding on-post living.

In issue one concerning children fighting to and from school and issue five, a need for a light leading to the scout hut, Snively twice exclaimed, "Gimme a break." It seems like someone gave him just that when he was given the job of writing commentaries.

I believe children's friendships are not bonded by "scrambling it out." to and from school. Maybe (this happened) in Snively's era of the wonder years, but this is the 90s where children know how to use a gun and knife better than their forefathers.

Snively stated that kids who don't want to fight can train for the Olympics by running. Is Snively that ignorant that this is the only alternative? Haven't we advanced to a higher level of intelligence rather than such a low level of behavior?

Evidently, Snively's opinion is that we haven't.

A very sensitive subject is that of a need for a light on the trail leading to the Scout hut. As one who would benefit as well as 48 other Cub Scouts, a light is truly essential. The main objective of a light on the trail is safety. Fort Benning is an open post and also open prey to whomever wishes to enter its boundaries. With so many fathers, husbands, and soldiers on the Desert Shield mission, housing areas are prime targets for crimes such as rape or robbery.

In reference to Snively's remark, "I thought scouts were trained to find their way in the dark," let me inform him that 7, 8 and 9-year-old Cub Scouts do not have the gift of being nocturnal creatures, but are young boys learning that safety comes first.

In closing, Snively asks the question, "Mothers, what are we raising?" As a mother, Cub Scout den leader, and assistant cubmaster of Pack 217 in Custer Terrace, we're raising fine, young, and decent boys with qualities and interests other than fighting and vandalism. Why doesn't Snively quit "sniveling" and realize what is going on in the world of post living before he takes the coward's way out in voicing his opinion in print rather than in person.

29th Inf. Regt. trains 48th Bde.

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

The 48th Brigade of the Georgia Army National Guard is ready.

The guardsmen tackled their last obstacle in their Bradley crew qualification course Dec. 19, just 10 days after beginning the trials.

The 48th has been training at Caramouche Range on Kelley Hill since the Dec. 9 under the supervision of the 29th Infantry Regiment.

According to Capt. Timothy Daniel, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., the training has been shortened from the six weeks of qualification time normally slated for other units in the rush to prepare them for their part in Operation Desert Shield.

Despite the shortened training time, Daniel said, "This unit is ready. They have fine tuned their gunnery skills, and after the training that they will undergo in Fort Irwin (the 48th will be headed to that California base Jan. 5), they will be a complete fighting unit. They have been living together, working together and that is really evident as they come together as a team."

Sgt. 1st Class David Mackie of the 48th reflected a positive attitude as well, saying that their training has been intense and that the attitude of the unit has been "great".

"The 29th has been super," Mackie said about their instructors. 'They've been real professionals, working real well with us. . . honing our skills, getting us ready to do the job."

Spec. Woodward Terry of the 48th said he also believed that the brigade was prepared. "After this training," he said, " we go to Fort Irwin. Then we'll be doing what we were trained to do."

James C. Rupp

VA Q&A

Department of Veterans Affairs

Q. I understand the Budget Reconciliation Act recently limited compensation payments to certain incompetent veterans. What are the limitations?

A. The Budget Reconciliation Act requires that payment of compensation to a non-hospitalized incompetent veteran, with no spouse, child or dependent parent, be suspended in any case where the value of the veteran's estate (not including the veteran's home) exceeds $25,000 until the value of the estate is reduced to less than $10,000. The Act further provides for payment of the total amount of compensation that has been withheld, should the veteran subsequently be rated competent for 90 days. This provision will be effective through Sept. 30, 1992.

Q. What percentage of disability do I need to quality for vocational rehabilitation?

A. Any veteran who has not filed an application for vocational rehabilitation before Nov. 1, 1990, must have a service-connected disability rating of 20 percent or more. Additionally, VA must decide that the disability is a handicap to gainful employment.

SOA inducts Hall of Famers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army's School of the Americas inducted three new members into its Hall of Fame on Dec. 14 in Building 4's Marshall Auditorium. The HOF induction followed an 11 a.m. graduation ceremony for the school's Command and General Staff College.

Those inducted were Lt. Gen. Carlos P. Pache Gelabert, commander-in-chief of the Uruguayan Air Force; Gen. de Division (Major General) Eumelio Bernal, chief of staff, Paraguayan Armed Forces; and Retired General de Division (Major General) Del Ejercito Jose Maria Troconis Peraza, commander of the Venezuelan Army.

Fourteen inductees have previously been inducted into the Hall of Fame, which recognizes alumni and former staff and faculty, who have achieved military and civilian prominence.

The concept of the Hall of Fame and the induction criteria mirror those of the United States Army's Command and General Staff College Allied Hall of Fame at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., with the exception that prominent civilians may be inducted. General Maxwell Thurman initiated the program, while commander of the Army's Training and Doctrine Command.

Retired Lt. Gen. Tom Weinstein, former deputy chief of staff for Intelligence, U.S. Army, Washington, D.C., was present for the ceremony, along with Fort Benning commander Maj. Gen. Carmen J. Cavezza. Weinstein spoke at graduation ceremonies for SOA's Command and General Staff College.

Benning to recycle Christmas trees Jan.5

By James C. Rupp
Bayonet staff writer

Benning residents will be able to recycle their Christmas trees Jan. 5, when the Georgia Clean and Beautiful Commission will hold their their annual Project Christmas Tree recycling from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.

At 130 sites across the state, old Christmas trees will be hacked to mulch and 130,000 red maple and dogwood seedlings will be given away.

The mulch will be later used to protect and to fertilize public parks statewide.

According to Jessica M. Barrick, spokesperson for the Keep Columbus Clean and Beautiful Commission, Fort Benning personnel can bring their trees to ARCCO Military Sales and Service or to Golden Park where recycling sites will be set up.

Anyone in the Fort Benning community wishing to volunteer their time and efforts are invited to call 571-4937. Volunteers can expect to be placed on a two hour shift directing traffic, handing out seedlings or collecting the old Christmas trees.

The Georgia Clean and Beautiful Commision is dedicated to the preservation of the state's beauty and increasing awareness of waste reduction, officials said.

Chip Dodd, director of GCBC, released figures that the program stopped more than 607 tons of trees from going to landfills in the Atlanta area alone, last year.

Commissary surcharge funds increase by almost $8 million

Customers benefit because it pays for new construction; improvements to existing facilities; and also utilities.

U.S. Army Troop Support Agency

FORT LEE, Va. — Surcharge fund collections in commissaries rose by approximately $7.8 million for a total of $101.0 million in fiscal 1990 report officials at the U.S. Army Troop Support Agency.

Leading the regions was TSA's Western Commissary Region which reported an increase of 15.9 percent in surcharge fund collections in the recently completed fiscal year. The increased collections in WCOR were attributed to the transfer of responsibility for commissary operations in Panama from the Midwest Commissary Region, easing of ration controls in the Far East which has encouraged more purchases in commissaries and opening of new commissaries at Fort Wainwright, Ala., and Presidio of San Francisco.

The European Commissary Region reported an increase of 10.1 percent when compared with fiscal year 1989, which was attributed to the opening of new facilities in Dexheim, Garlstedt and Erlangen, Germany. The Northeast and Southeast Commissary Regions reported increases of 9.5 percent and 8.6 percent, respectively, when compared with the previous fiscal year.

MWCOR had no increase from the previous year because the three commissaries in Panama became the responsibility of WCOR and the operational control of the Fitzsimons Army Medical Center, Colo., commissary transferred to the Air Force Commissary Service.

Surcharge is the 5-percent fee added to a customer's total purchase before coupon discounts have been deducted from the bill.

The surcharge a customer pays benefits all shoppers because it pays for new construction, improvements to existing facilities and utilities such as electricity, heat, refrigeration, air conditioning and telephones for commissaries in the United States.

Additionally, this money is used for the purchase of automated data processing equipment, electronic cash registers, scanning systems, forklifts, display cases, meat processing tables, shopping carts and other equipment; supplies such as shelf labels, cash register tape, safety glasses, cleaning materials, paper and plastic bags; and maintenance and services such as equipment maintenance and repair and laundry of uniforms. Surcharge also pays for damaged and stolen merchandise.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Virginia L. Carlton
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q. What is a power of attorney, and how do I know what kind to get?

A. A power of attorney authorizes another person to act as your agent or representative. You can grant either general power or some limited special power. A general power of attorney conveys authority to act for another in almost all affairs. The special is limited to particular actions, like cashing checks or buying real estate.

We have many different kinds of special powers of attorney available on a walk-in basis at the Legal Assistance Office. If you leave your children with a grandparent, neighbor, or other care provider, you may want to get a special power of attorney for medical care. This authorizes the agent to make medical decisions for your children in your absence. Other types of special powers of attorney available are powers of attorney to cash checks, to buy and sell real estate, to ship and accept household goods, and to care for your automobile. We also provide blank powers of attorney so that you can specify the particular situation and the particular authority covered by the power of attorney. For example, you may want to give someone the authority to authorize repairs only to the muffler of your car.

You may be interested in a durable power of attorney for medical care. The purpose of a durable power of attorney for health care is to give the person you designate broad powers to make health care decisions for you, including the power to consent to or withdraw any type of medical treatment for any physical or mental condition.

We have received a great many questions concerning whether a guardian can access the commissary or the post exchange on behalf of the children of soldiers. The answer of this question is yes, they may access installation facilities with an agent letter from the installation commander, which can be secured with the proper documentation. The guardian needs to have a power of attorney from the child's parent authorizing him or her to act as guardian of the child, and a notarized certificate of acceptance of the power of attorney from the guardian. The notarized certificate of acceptance acknowledges that the guardian did indeed accept the guardianship authority conveyed by the power of attorney. The guardian must also show the child's I.D. card. Therefore, guardians can enter the commissary on behalf of the child or children with an agent letter from the installation commander.

Media gets 'fired up' at pistol match

By Charlene L. LaDay-Hill
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

In the mad-cap world of journalism, there's always the pressure of getting the story in first. Recently 16 Columbus journalists and broadcasters experienced a new kind of pressure — not from behind a camera, desk, or microphone — but from behind a pistol.

The journalists competed in a friendly pistol shooting at Phillips Range Dec. 18. Each station was represented by a two-man team for the event. Prior to the competition, they received blocks of instructions on the 9mm beretta and 22 caliber pistols.

"This idea was in the making for about six months," said Bonnie D. Harmon, U.S. Army Service Pistol Team coach. "The main purpose of this event is to get the media acquainted with the 9mm and 22 caliber pistols. That way they have a better understanding of the modern weapons being used by soldiers today."

In addition, the event gave the local media a chance to mix business with pleasure.

"I think this is a great idea," said Jed L. Boal, WRBL TV 3. "This gives us journalists a chance to get the story and have fun while doing it. I love covering stories I can get involved in."

Also getting themselves involved with the swing of things were P.R. and Wayne from Rock 103 FM.

"This is going to be a lot of fun. We get to become more involved with the folks here on Fort Benning," said P.R.

"I love it! This reminds me of when I use to shoot back in high school and in the Air Force," said Wayne. "Also, not only do we get to promote the station, but the soldiers here as well."

Soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit were on hand to assist the journalists with scoring and firing techniques throughout the event.

Ironically, the top three winners represented each form of journalism. First place went to Channel 9 (TV), second to the Ledger-Enquirer (newspaper), and third to Rock 103 FM (radio).

"Although most of the journalists never fired a pistol before in their lives, they did very good," said Harmon.

All in all, the day went "pistol perfect" and everyone was a winner in the end. "Some of them are looking for a rematch next year," said Harmon.

OPERATION DESERT SHIELD

Engineers set new standards in staying fit

By Joseph G. Fridley
197th Infantry Brigade

With the strong emphasis on physical fitness, soldiers are always looking for ways to develop a fun and challenging physical training program.

The soldiers of the 72nd Engineer Company have done just that, building a gym, volleyball courts, a basketball court and horseshoe pits — all in Saudi Arabia. Physical fitness has become an integral part of the daily lives of these soldiers deployed for Operation Desert Shield.

The soldiers of 1st squad, 2nd platoon have built what they call "Gold's Bedouin Gym." According to Spec. Paul Izral, "We built all the equipment out of scrap lumber. So far we have a bench for bench presses, dumbbells, barbells of various weights, an incline bench, a tricep and lat machine, and a leg press machine."

"A lot of the wood used came from shipping pallets that we took apart," said Spec. Jason Johnson, who has also designed T-shirts for the gym.

"Other components used to build the equipment include camouflage screen support poles, ropes, sand bags and empty water bottles filled with sand," added Sgt. Jody Woods.

On an average evening, some 20 to 30 soldiers work out in the "gym." "We've even installed a bucket shower point to clean up after a good workout," Izral said. "So far we've had no accidents, and the equipment has held up very well."

Staff Sgt. Michael Swindle of 3rd plt. said, "I usually work out three or four times a week at home station. This gym helps me keep in shape and allows me to release stress."

For those who refer team sports to working out, the 72nd has its own version of an National Basketball Association basketball court. "We were determined to get this court built," said Staff Sgt. Ronald Tate of the Assault and Barrier platoon. "The unit purchased the hoops and nets, and we built the rest."

"Even though the court isn't up to NBA standards, we enjoy having it to pass the time," added Spec. Anthony Vaughters of 3rd plt."

The "Sappers" have four volleyball nets and are intent on repeating their 1990 Fort Benning Post Championship at the 24th Infantry Division competition being planned for the holiday season.

The next addition planned for the 72nd's sports program is a ping-pong table. Also, with the cooler temperatures and the arrival of British troops in Saudi Arabia, interest in rugby is picking up in the unit.

With the wide range and intensity of their desert training, most of the men of the 72nd are choosing physical fitness and team sports as their chief off-duty pastime. Others like to devote their spare time to personalizing their individual living areas, reading, or writing to the folks back home.

197th serves up volleyball Saudi-style

By Todd F. Tolson
197th Infantry Brigade

KERPOW! Was the predominant sound of the day as the spikes swarmed all over the nets at the 197th Infantry Brigade's "Sledgehammer" volleyball tournament.

The event was hosted by the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, who set up a series of volleyball courts around their recreation center for the competition.

"The reason for the tournament was to build soldiers' morale," said 1st Lt. Darnell Shaw, the tournament director. "It was a modified single elimination competition. All of the units and attachments of the 197th Inf. Bde. were afforded the opportunity to participate."

The competition started out with eight teams, all from different units. The participants had previously won their battalion championships in their respective organizations before advancing to the brigade championship. Each team can only have six soldiers playing at one time. Qualifying rounds allowed teams to sharpen their skills in preparation for actual tournament play.

In a series of arduous games players leaped, hammered spikes, and dove (called "digging") in windy conditions with over 90 degree heat on desert sand. Games were played to 15 points, and teams had to win two out of three games to win a match.

The highlight of the tournament was the championship game, which was played between Company E, 2nd Battalion, 18th Inf. and Co. B, 1st. Bn., 18th Inf. A team had to win three out of five games to win the tournament competition.

The championship games were close with scores of 15-9, 15-12, and 16-14. There was plenty of "digging," slamming and blocking, as many players chose to play barefoot. The victors of the tournament, winning three straight games, were the soldiers of Co. E, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf.; Co. B, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. was awarded 2nd place and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 197th Inf. Bde. came in third.

"It was a good game; we just came out on top," said Mario Gabriel of the victorious Co. E. "We played aggressively. That's all there is to it."

"I used to play in the church league," said Rico Cone, one of the primary spikers on the Co. E team. "The wind was kind of bad at first, but I adjusted to it. There's some good competition in the brigade."

"The team's performance was tremendous," said Wayne Krause, coach of the championship team. "Co. B, 1st Bn., 18th Inf. was the only unit to beat us in the qualifying rounds. Our team went 7-0 to win our battalion tournament. We had been out there five hours and had to play six games to get to the brigade championship. The heat got to me toward the end of the game."

"This is the best volleyball competition I've seen in a long time," Shaw said. "The teamwork, effort, and hussle these soldiers display on the court is the same motivation they use during training."

Other members of the winning team were Andraeous Arty, Thomas Beron, Douglas Yono, Ryan Robinson, and Corey Thompson.

There were many spectators at the tournament. "They have some good teams out here, and it's good for the soldiers' morale to cheer them on," said Capt. Cary Gum, observing the tournament play. "I love volleyball. I love to play and I love to watch good competition."

Vanguards get 'teed' off with Desert Golf

By Tom Wilkinson
197th Infantry Brigade

SAUDI ARABIA — The soldiers of 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry have constructed a nine-hole golf course complete with flags, Astro-turf, sand traps and water holes.

"It's kind of nutty," said 'Vanguard' Command Sgt. Maj. Dwight Hood, "but anything that reminds the soldiers of home breaks the monotony and is a great morale boost. Anybody can play, but clubs and golf balls are a shortage so play is kind of limited right now."

Sgt. 1st Class Robert Bailey, the battalion retention sergeant, and Sgt. Mark Mann, the track commander for the battalion commander, get the credit for designing and building the course, according to Hood.

> "It's kind of nutty, but. . . . a great morale boost."
>
> — Command Sgt. Maj. Dwight Hood

The course is named appropriately. . .the Vanguard Desert Country Club. It's complete with named holes and club.

"The holes themselves are cardboard box tops about 2 feet by 3 feet, filled with sand, and we used pickets for flagpoles," said Bailey. "You can use an Astro-turf pad to hit off of anywhere on the course. . .except in the water and sand traps, of course."

The course, which was designed by hitting golf balls and simply marking distances, follows the normal rules of the game.

"The water is marked by engineer tape, and the sand traps are actually dug into the ground," Bailey said. "Once the ball is near the hole, it's a matter of chipping it into the box. The hardest thing is trying to get it into the box. It looks easy, but it's not."

Cpl. Timothy Meador, the track commander for the battalion operations officer, was tasked with naming the holes, according to Hood.

"I just named them after things here in Saudi," said Meador. "Names like 'Camel,' 'Striker 1' (a reference to the battalion commander), and 'The Water Hole' readily came to mind."

The course even includes a tough hole, aptly named "Saddam's Nightmare."

"The par on the course is 36, and Sgt. Mann has done it," Bailey said. "No one has hit a hole-in-one yet."

The course includes par 3s, 4s, 5s and one par 6; scorecards are available nearby at the Tactical Operations Center.

"It's only nine holes, but that's about all you can take in one day," Bailey said. "Come on out and give it a try!"

SPIRITUAL

Holiday donations help families

By Debra Galle
USAIC Chaplain's Office

A special contribution from soldiers in Saudia Arabia for families at Fort Benning made the holiday season brighter for many.

Thousands of dollars in contributions have been given to the Fort Benning Consolidation Chaplain's Fund. This money is given to the crisis ministry, especially during the Christmas season.

A letter from Brig. Gen. Barry McCaffrey reads, "On behalf of the 197th Infantry Brigade, the enclosed check for $1,109 reflects the generous contributions of the brigade's soldiers and it is sent to you for deposit in your consolidation chaplain's fund. The men and women of this brigade donated this money for Toys for Tots, the Soldier Family Holiday Meal Program, and the equivalent at your installation.

Since we cannot be home to provide direct help, we are supporting our families with these voluntary gifts."

The chaplains were entrusted to distribute that money, as well as a $2,000 donation from the commissary.

Although time and miles separate these soldiers from their families, the determination to continue to show love and support to those at home is strong. The further determination of the chaplains to help those in need keeps the Christmas spirit alive.

Holidays bring home to the heart

By Richard Roggia
Family Life Center Chaplain

Even if your holiday plans don't include a trip home, there is still a way you can include the feelings of home in the holiday season.

The holidays mean many things to each of us - holly, tinsel and lighted trees, presents and feasts. It's a time of cheer, family and friends. For some, it means worship and holy thoughts.

The songs and traditions of the holidays come from many lands and cultures. Although they vary from country to country they bridge continents and centuries.

Behind the unique customs and traditions are universal feelings and meanings we all identify with this festive season.

Many of us love every aspect of the holidays, including the religious, sentimental, underplanned, overdone, commercial and sometimes confusing aspects of it.

We love the legends and the myths as well as the tender truth of its beginning as recorded in the word of God.

For Christmas, it's that wondrous time when Christ was born in Bethlehem. Anything that holds that much importance should be shared with loved ones.

The holidays are a time of family traditions. It's a time to deck the halls, decorate yule logs and sing carols. Many of us read the story of Christmas and decorate the tree.

According to some psychiatrists, people continue to celebrate certain holiday traditions simply because they have a subconscious craving for their own roots.

A person maintains a strong sense of personal identity when he maintains connections with his past.

The holiday season offers a chance to do just that. It is that continuity that's needed in a changing world. It is a way home.

The birth of Christ promises a way home and not merely in the ultimate sense.

Love for one another is an emblem of the love of Christ that can make us one.

There is no substitute for being home. But just as 'home is where the heart is,' the heart can take us home or nearly there.

Christ's love reaches across the time and distance of creation to call us home to our Father, so our love for one another can be a bridge between family members pulling us closer together.

Because of Jesus, because of his birth and ultimate sacrifice, no one is without home or a way to find it.

Bluegrass outing — There will be a bluegrass music get together Sunday at 2 p.m. at Uchee Creek recreational area. All pickers, grinners and listeners are invited. Admission is a $1 voluntary donation. A covered-dish supper will be at 5 p.m. For more information, call 298-4870 after 5 p.m.

Self esteem workshop — A special lunchtime program on women and self esteem sponsored by Civilian Counseling Services, ADAPCP and the Fort Benning Management Association will be Jan. 17. Nationally known speaker will be Teresa Bernadez, M.D., Department of Psychiatry at Michigan State University. Registration is required. For more information, call Yvonne Linsenbigler, 545-2475 or 545-2742. For lunch reservations, call Wynonoa Johnson, 545-4180 or 545-1488.

College re-entry program — The Columbus College Adult Re-Entry Program will sponsor a free seminar called "Strategies for Success" Jan. 8 at the Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center for Continuing Education. Times are 9:30 to noon or 7 to 9:30 p.m. This seminar helps the older than average student learn how to successfully juggle multiple roles. Open to potential and currently enrolled college students.

Tot Town holiday hours — Tot Town will be open New Year's Eve from 6:30 p.m. until 3 a.m. Children will be accepted on a pre-paid, no refund, reservation only basis. The fee is $15 for one child, $10 for each additional child and will cover any number of hours until closing. Refreshments and party favors are included. No meals will be served.

In the event the reservation cannot be kept, the following steps will be taken in order to transfer your reservation.

- Reservations are transferable only to eligible family with same aged children for which the reservation was originally made. Tot Town is not responsible for any money exchanged for reservation transfer.
- Tot Town will be notified of transfers and given name of replacements or the reservation will be rendered void.

Tot Town will be open Saturday from 6 to 10 p.m. and will be closed Tuesday and re-open Wednesday.

Museum gift shop — The Fort Benning Infantry Museum, located in building 396, now has a gift shop. The Regimental Quartermaster Sales Store is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. and on Saturday, Sunday and holidays from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m.

Items available for purchase include historical military prints, posters, books, statues, T-shirts, caps, and sweatshirts. For more information, call 687-3297.

Auto repair classes — Columbus College Continuing Education invites all military wives to attend free classes on "How to beat the high cost of auto repair." These classes will include topics on "How to talk to your car, how to buy a used car, and establishing a preventive maintenance plan." The classes will be Jan. 7, 9 and 10, from 9 a.m. to noon and 6 to 9 p.m. each day. There will be a limit of 25 students. For reservations, call David Basset at 682-1376.

Aluminum recycling point — A recycling facility is conveniently located on post. This is a way to raise extra money for unit funds.

All units, soldiers, dependents, DOD personnel, contractors and private organizations authorized to operate on post may use the facility. Help keep the post clean by recycling aluminum cans.

Payment will be made by cash or by a transfer for unit funds at the Community Operations Division, building 128. For military units or activities, unit funds will be credited with the amount of the sale.

The recycle facility is located adjacent to building 2288 on Alenko Street. Operating hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. 3:30 p.m. For more information, call 687-8000.

Airborne reunion — Airborne soldiers of the 101st Airborne Division will have their 46th annual "Gathering of the Eagles" of the 101st Airborne Division Association.

The reunion will be in Sparks (near Reno), Nevada, Aug. 15, 16 and 17, 1991. For more information, write to: Ivan Worrell, Executive Secretary, 101st Airborne Division Association, 101 East Morris St., Sweetwater, Tenn 37874 or phone (615) 337-4103.

Big Brothers and Big Sisters — Big Brothers and Big Sisters program is now serving children whose fathers or mothers are stationed in the Middle East.

The Big Brothers and Big Sisters program serves children from single parent families by matching children ages 7 to 15 from single parent families to an adult big brother or big sister who is at least 18 years of age and can spend three to five hours each week with the child.

For families who fit this description and would like for their daughter or son to have a Big Brother or Big Sister, or anyone who is intersted in becoming one, call 327-3760. Big Brothers and Big Sisters is a free community service and is a private, non-profit United Way agency.

All the Way!

Thomas L. Coleman

Outstanding employees named

Directorate of Logistics

Two outstanding employees in the Directorate of Logistics were recognized in recent ceremonies.

Thomas L. Coleman was selected as Manager of the Quarter for the quarter ending Sept. 30. As a supervisor of the Receiving and Issue Unit, Storage Section, Coleman's unwritten policy is that "a customer's problem is his (Coleman's) problem."

He consistently demonstrates his desire to resolve any and all customer problems, even though they may not involve his area. Coleman's demonstrated professionalism and desire to provide the best possible customer service and support have earned his respect throughout the installation.

Patricia Porter, Freight Section, Movements Branch, Transportation Division, was selected Employee of the Quarter for the quarter ending Sept. 30.

Porter spends many hours and much effort attending to customer requirements even when they seem impossible. Short notices and special services are only two of the obstacles Porter regularly faces — and overcomes. During Desert Shield, Porter assisted in establishing a workable organization at the port in Jacksonville to complete the mission.

Porter is ready and willing to put in the number of hours and amount of effort required in all cases to ensure that a customer is satisfied with services performed.

Annual Girl Scout run kicks off 'Cookie Shield'

By Alyanna B. Clay-Heard
Bayonet staff writer

The Concharty Council for Girl Scouts and Barnett Bank have organized an effort to send Girl Scout cookies to Fort Benning troops stationed in Saudi Arabia , called Operation "Cookie Shield."

Orders for Operation Cookie Shield will be taken from Jan. 26 until Feb. 20. Individuals may place orders for cookies at all Barnett Bank branches or stop by the Girl Scout office to place an order. Orders will also be accepted by mail, if accompanied by a check made payable to Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, Inc., 1344 13th Av. Columbus, GA 31905. Cookies must be paid for when ordered.

Person may not specify a particular type of cookie or an individual to receive cookies. Cookies will be sent to Saudi Arabia as Fort Benning has space on their transport vehicles to deliver them.

Operation Cookie Shield will kick off at the 11th Annual Barnett and Girl Scout Cookie Run.

The run will be held at Weracoba Park Jan. 26. at 9 a.m. Individuals may participate in the adult speed walk, handicapped participation events, 100-yard "Tot Trot," the 1.5-mile run and the 5-mile run. Prizes will include Speakeasy Pub pizza, trophies, medals and cookie samplers for age-level and overall winners. Each registered participant will also receive a "Cookie Run" T-shirt. On-site registration fee is $10. Pre-registration and "early bird" discounts are also available. For more information, contact the Concharty Council of Girl Scouts, Inc. at 327-2646 or call a local Girl Scout volunteer at 687-1914.

Toys galore

Students of the Greenwood School, a private high school in Phenix City, donated more than 750 toys to Santa's Castle. The students collected toys in their homerooms daily for needy families. Pictured are Justin Rudd (left), Keni Kinchen, Vicky Rudd, Wanda Greer, and Josh Weaver with Preston Russell and Brian Hightower in the back row.

Keeping good soldiers in the Army is part of every leader's job. Whether you're an NCO or an officer, your leadership can have a powerful influence on your soldiers, especially on their decisions to reenlist.

Nobody knows better than you that when soldiers are treated fairly, with respect, and with a true concern for their goals and accomplishments, they're more likely to find their Army experience a positive one. And more likely to want to continue that experience.

As you know, it takes a lot to develop a good soldier. Time, patience, and effort. But the end result is worth it. Not just for a proud soldier, or the Army, but as a credit to your ability as a leader.

Next time you stand in front of your troops, remember that they're not just in the Army, they are the Army. And they're yours to keep.

ARMY. BE ALL YOU CAN BE.
