75th Rangers go to Kuwait

Soldiers participate in 'Iris Gold'

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Headquarters elements of the 75th Ranger Regiment were deployed to the Kuwaiti Theatre of Operations during a combined United States-Kuwaiti training exercise conducted in Kuwait beginning Dec. 8.

The exercise, known as Iris Gold 92-1, was conducted within the framework of the recently signed Defense Cooperation Agreement between the U.S. and Kuwait.

Officials at the 75th said that this will not be the last time parts of the regiment will be deployed for training in the Middle East. Iris Gold is an ongoing operation.

This phase of Iris Gold focused on combined general military combat training between the Kuwaiti armed forces and the U.S. Special Operation Command Central.

The five-day joint training exercise ended Dec. 12 and included 900 U.S. Army, Marine Corps, Navy and Air Force members.

Some highlights of the scheduled training included an airborne assault, and combined conventional training between U.S. Army and Navy special operations forces and Kuwaiti forces. Combined conventional training covered individual combat skills, small unit tactics and combined staff operations.

ACAP plans grand opening

The Army Career and Alumni Program will celebrate the grand opening of its new offices in Soldiers' Plaza Jan.17 at 3 p.m. according to post ACAP officials.

The new building, located in Building 2617, will house the two phases of the ACAP system, the Transition Assistance Program and the Job Assistance Center, now in Building 2634, said Pat Sneed, transition assistance specialist and one of the five counselors with the program.

The post's commanding general, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, is slated to attend, as well as officials from the Training and Doctrine Command and Department of the Army and Col. Gary Jones, director of the Directorate of Military Personnel will give a welcoming speech. A ribbon-cutting ceremony and a performance by The Infantry Band are also scheduled, said Sneed.

"With the voluntary early separation program in full swing, we're very busy these days," said Sneed. ACAP counseled 657 soldiers, civilians and family members separating from the military last month.

Christmas trees are being recycled on post as part of the Project Christmas Tree, which is conducted by the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission.

The trees will be collected, chipped and composted to make mulch.

Family housing residents can recycle their discarded trees by taking them to the U-DO-IT/Self-Help Store. The trees can be dropped off until Jan. 10 between the hours of 8:30 a.m.and 4:30 p.m. until Jan. 10.

Collection sites off post will be open on Saturday from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. The off-post collection sites include: Cooper Creek Park, Britt David Park, Weracoba Park and Golden Park.

Officials said this year's program is an expansion of previous year's program.

"We have doubled the number of trees collected every year," says Ken Ellison, commissioner. "Last year we chipped approximately 8,000 trees in Columbus. Throughout Georgia, over 275,000 trees were recycled."

What: Christmas tree recycling

When: Now through Jan. 10

Where: U-DO-IT/Self-Help Store, building 385, on Vibbert Avenue.

Callaway Gardens is donating 600 passes to be given to the first 120 families that bring trees to be recycled at each location on Saturday

Safety — a priority at Fort Benning

MESSAGE

As we begin the new year, one resolution we should all make is to resolve to reduce the number of accidents.

Last year, more than 800 soldiers and civilians were injured in job-related accidents.

My goal is to eliminate accidental injuries. The minimal acceptable objective is a 50 percent reduction.

We can exceed the objective if we all get involved.

All of us must work toward making Fort Benning a safe place to work.

We can do that by giving safety briefings to all new employees and by conducting periodic "terrain walks" through the workplace to identify and eliminate hazardous conditions and unsafe acts.

The health and welfare of our soldiers and civilians is too valuable to us to allow unsafe acts and conditions to exist.

We all must resolve to think and act safely in everything that we do. We must take immediate action to eliminate or correct any unsafe conditions or actions.

Safety is everyone's responsibility. Every effort must be made to make 1992 the safest year in Fort Benning's history.

To that end, I hold everyone accountable in attaining this objective.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Fort Benning commander

Register arms starting Jan. 15

Provost Marshal Office

Personal firearms must be registered on post beginning Jan. 15, according to officials at the Provost Marshal Office. Officials said all firearms stored on post must be registered whether they are kept in quarters or unit arms rooms.

The policy is designed to provide information on the location of weapons to both Military Police and unit commanders, in the event of a crisis or incident.

Knowledge of location and types of privately owned firearms on post will enhance the safety of all post residents, said Capt. Rebecca A. Rouse, Military Police project officer.

The Provost Marshal will initiate a staggered schedule of registration by sending copies of Forces Command/ Training and Doctrine Command Form 563-R, "Registration of Personal Firearms," to major commands and directorates. Supervisors will then distribute the forms, ensure they are filled out properly and return them to the Vehicle/Firearms Registration office for validation.

The forms will then be returned through the chain of command to the individual firearm owner.

All units will receive firearms registration forms no later than Jan. 15, and accompanying information letters will reflect a suspense for turn in, according to Rouse.

Personnel who arrive at Fort Benning after Jan. 15 while in-processing through the Vehicle/Firearms Registration Office will also be required to register their privately-owned firearms if they are going to reside on post. Persons camping at Uchee Creek Campground for more than 72 hours can register their firearms at the campground office.

Personnel temporarily bringing a weapon on post for the purpose of hunting are not required to register their firearms but must obtain and possess a valid Fort Benning hunter's permit.

Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club members who bring a firearm on post for target practice are exempt as long as they have a current Fort Benning Rifle and Pistol Club membership and carry their membership card with them, according to Rouse.

Owners of private firearms are reminded that the installation weapons policy states that the only persons authorized to carry concealed weapons on Fort Benning are federally-licensed law enforcement agents or police officers in the performance of their duty.

The changes to the installation weapons policy can be found in U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5. Anyone with questions may call Military Police operations at 545-4412.

Post to honor King

Leigh will speak about the life and times of King, according to Ellis Dandy, post Equal Employment Opportunity officer.

The public is invited.

What did we do last year?

COMMENTARY

Y'all know to run when you hear someone say, "Have I got a deal for you."

I'm no different. Especially when one of the editors is doing the speaking. This time she thought it'd be a good idea for me to do "a year in review" article for The Bayonet.

"I don't do windows, and I don't do 'year in review,' articles I told her as politely as I could, even though she was asking this three hours after I was supposed to have gotten off on Dec. 27.

"But it's traditional; all papers have 'year in review' articles," she persisted.

"Editor, ma'am," I said, "I can't even remember what happened to me last week, let alone remember what happened on post during the past year."

"That excuse won't wash," she said. "All you need to do is go sit in the library with a stack of our newspapers and pull out the significant events to write about."

"I'm allergic to newsprint," I said. "That stuff gets on my hands! I rub my nose and pretty soon I look like a clown in black face," I pointed out to her.

"We'll get someone to remind you to wash after you're done," she said. "Now get down to the library and start reviewing."

Lucky for me, when I got there, one of the other editors was already going through the papers.

"Whatcha doing?" I asked, just to be polite.

"What does it look like? I'm going through the papers counting the number of times we used 'infantry' in our stories and seeing if 'Southwest Asia' or 'Middle East" was the preferred term for the Persian Gulf region during Desert Shield and Desert Storm," she snarled.

"Oh, I see. What a clever idea," I said. "And what does it look like?

"Huh?" she grunted.

"How many times did we use 'infantry' during the year and what was the preferred term?" I asked.

"Snively, I was being sarcastic for God's sake. I'm actually doing a 'year in review' piece for The Bayonet," she said inkly.

I backed off, smart enough not to get too close, but even smarter, not to say any such bonehead thing as "Oh, I thought I was supposed to do the 'year in review' article."

I learned long ago never to volunteer and not to ask any questions where you didn't want to know the answer. I also was smart enough not to go back to the office where suspicious people might ask if I was already through with my research.

So, instead, I went to Briant Wells Field House for a late afternoon game of racquetball. Call it "fate" or call it "justice,"but I managed to lock my keys in the car.

But at least waiting for someone to pop the door for me beat sitting in The Bayonet office writing about the past year. I mean, like what happened anyway?

We went to war, kicked butt, came home, celebrated, and then many of us were asked if we wanted to get out of the best Army in the world because we were soooo baaad that there was no one left to mess with us.

Well, I guess we shouldn't feel like the Lone Ranger. Look at Gorbachev. He went and dismantled communism and now all he gets back home is blame for a screwed up economy.

See, so that's another thing that happened. The Soviet Union ceased to exist. Chalk up another one for our great nation.

Y'all have a happy and safe New Year. And remember, don't look back, just look ahead and keep on trucking.

SIDS means death — not life!

In reference to the article in the Oct. 18 issue of The Bayonet, "Sudden Infant Death strikes with no warning," a serious mis-statement was made that needs to be corrected.

The woman featured in the article, Cindy Dell, was quoted as having a living child diagnosed "with SIDS." This child does, in fact, have a breathing disorder problem known as apnea, and he is monitored by a machine that measures both heart rate and respirations. But, he is a living child and does not "have SIDS."

Sudden Infant Death Syndrome is the postmortem (after autopsy) diagnosis given to an infant who, though apparently healthy prior to death, died suddenly and unexpectedly and whose death remains unexplained after a thorough autopsy and police investigation are completed.

You cannot have a living child diagnosed with SIDS. SIDS means exactly what it says — an infant died suddenly.

SIDS is referred to as a syndrome because the medical field is not able to identify a cause for the death — only that the autopsies of these babies are very similar and that nothing can be found within the child that should have caused his or her death.

The article also referred to the term "near-miss SIDS." In 1989, the National Institute of Health in Washington, D.C., changed this term to "ALTE" or Apparent Life Threatening Event.

My involvement with SIDS began 6 1/2 years ago with the death of my own full-term, healthy, 9 1/2 pound child. Since the diagnosis of SIDS means, "we medically don't know why this baby died," a parent is often left with misplaced guilt from self-evaluation and extreme, intense grief.

Knowing the pain firsthand and realizing early on how uneducated the general public is on this subject, I became a SIDS activist within a few months after the death of my daughter. I have been involved extensively in parent support and public education and awareness, have served as president and founder of two SIDS chapters and as a committee member for the Board of Directors to the National SIDS Foundation.

I have also had a subsequent child, Jason, since my daughter died. Due to the increased risk for SIDS happening to subsequent siblings, he was put on an apnea monitor for almost a year. Jason is now almost 5.

As a new resident of the Fort Benning community, I am here to help. I offer support both to SIDS families and those monitoring a subsequent sibling and am interested in providing educational seminars to any group. My current affiliation is as an area contact for the National SIDS Alliance, formerly known as the National SIDS Foundation.

Kathy D'Elosua
National SIDS Alliance

Editors Note: Dr. Elaine A. Donoghue of Martin Army Community Hospital's Pediatric Service adds this:

As a pediatrician working at Martin Army Community Hospital, I have been involved with SIDS in many capacities, from medical evaluation to education.

I would like to emphasize the point made above — apnea and SIDS are not the same thing, although the two can be related. Apnea simply means not breathing and can occur for many reasons, some of which are totally unrelated to SIDS. A death from a known cause of apnea, like pneumonia or prematurity, is not a SIDS death.

I would also like to emphasize that SIDS, at present, cannot be predicted or prevented. A subsequent child born to a family that has experienced a SIDS death can be at higher risk and is often monitored to detect apnea in the first 6 to 12 months of life.

Both experiencing a SIDS death and having a child monitored for apnea are very stressful, and we would like to provide support for these families. It is very important to maintain contact with medical care in either case.

Cyclist wants fair treatment

My name is Keith C. Dawson and I have been here at Fort Benning for two years.

I will say that normally your paper is not one sided but this time I see a flaw.

You see, I ride a motorcycle and for some reason you folks don't think we deserve a fair shake.

First it was Clyde Snively who blasted motorcycles and said they should be removed from the road.

The next story to follow was that of a warning to the soldiers of Fort Benning about motorcycle clubs, or gangs as you referred to them, and the problems that could occur due to involvement with such groups.

A few weeks later you informed us of five soldiers who were involved in an incident in Dothan, Ala. that was believed to be motorcycle-gang-related.

These stories are all fine and well but here is my question. Where is the story about the 100 or so motorcyclists who braved the cold on Nov. 24 to raise food and supplies for The House of Mercy downtown to help with their needs for the holiday season?

On the same note I read nothing in your paper to highlight the 200 plus motorcyclists who filled four or five trucks with toys for the needy children who will be involved with The Valley Rescue Mission over the course of this season of joy.

I understand "freedom of the press" and put on a uniform everyday to help defend that, but I also believe that public information should cover both sides of a story.

Reporting like this is what causes people to cringe any time they see more than four motorcycles together. If the balance is not possible for some reason, then I would like to ask you, for the benefit of those who ride, to leave us out of your publication altogether.

Keith C. Dawson
Fort Benning

Thanks for season of peace

It gives me great pleasure in this holiday season to have this chance to say a word to you, America's soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines. More than ever, your service has given us cause to hope our world can fulfill the promise of this season of peace.

As we look at the last 12 months, it's obvious what a tremendous contribution you have made. Your professionalism and capability brought us a historic victory over aggression in the Persian Gulf.

Elsewhere around the world, you kept the watch that ensured our allies stayed strong and the free world was secure.

The West's decades-long defense against communist expansion, a defense you led, is bearing fruit. Even in Moscow, the head of the old Soviet empire, men and women came together to claim their share in democracy. The values the people called for were freedom, democracy and the rule of law. These are all principles you have steadily upheld.

Plenty of challenges remain. But America's service men and women can be proud of their achievements. Because of you, countless millions have a new chance for peace and freedom. And the treasure house of our liberty, our own republic, remains secure.

I know you and your families have sacrificed a great deal to bring us safely to this season. I speak for millions of Americans when I say how proud and grateful we are for what you have accomplished. May God grant you every blessing in the coming year.

Happy holidays to all of you.

Dick Cheney
Secretary of Defense

Museum acquires German uniforms

By W.D. Hobbs
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The National Infantry Museum has recently acquired two East German military uniforms.

The uniforms, a winter field and a walking-out (Class A) were donated on behalf of the German infantry.

"The uniforms of the former "Nationale Volksarmee" will never again be worn by German soldiers because they represent the unfree, undemocratic and inhuman part of my fatherland," Lt. Col. Joerg Bahr wrote in the letter that accompanied the uniforms. Bahr is the German army liaison officer.

On Oct. 3, 1990, the two Germanys became one again and the East German armed forces were dissolved. About 100,000 East German troops became part of the armed forces of the Federal Republic of Germany. They took off one uniform and put on another.

The dress uniform pattern is a carryover from the German Wehrmacht. However, the helmet deviates radically in design from those used by the Germans in both World War I and II. According to the book "Army Uniforms Since 1945," it was introduced into service in the East German armed forces about 1952.

"The uniforms are in mint condition," said Frank Hanner, the museum curator. "In the years to come, they will only become more valuable because the East German Army no longer exits."

SOA recognizes 1991 staff college graduates

By Daniel Maloney

The Command and General Staff College of the School of the Americas graduation ceremony for the students of the 1991 class was Dec. 13.

The ceremony commenced with an invocation by Chaplain (Maj.) Michael J. Travaglione, chaplain for SOA.

Following the invocation, the guest speaker retired Gen. Hector Gramajo from Guatemala, addressed the audience of graduate officers.

Gramajo voiced concern for the continued vigilance in the Americas against communism and drug trafficking.

Comparing the current state of communism to a dragon, Gramajo said the crumbling of the Berlin Wall signaled the beheading of the dragon, however, its tail is still poised to deliver a devastating blow to the countries of Latin America.

The continuing problem of drug trafficking in the Americas has, according to Gramajo, exploited freedom, the non-believers in military affairs and opportunistic politicians to meet its ends.

Gramajo called on the officers to maintain professionalism and defend liberty.

Awards were given following the address and then the entire class of 37 graduates came forward to accept their diplomas.

Honor graduate for the class was Maj. Michael R. Borders, United States Army.

The students represented a variety of countries in the Americas, to include Colombia, Venezuela and Mexico.

The course is 47 weeks long and in that time students are exposed to a curriculum designed to train them for duty as field grade commanders and as principal staff officers at brigade and division level.

Classes include strategic studies, military history and mandatory human rights awareness training.

Following the ceremony, a reception was at the Officers' Club.

CHAMPUS releases guidelines for non-availability statements

Martin Army Community Hospital

Some CHAMPUS-eligible persons now will need "non-availability statements" from nearby military medical facilities before the program will share the cost of certain kinds of outpatient treatment that they receive from civilian health care providers.

In the past, non-availability statements were needed only for non-emergency inpatient care from civilian sources for people who lived within the ZIP code service area of the nearest military hospital.

The statements are certifications from uniformed services hospitals that they can't provide a particular type of care. Now the statement must be entered electronically in the Defense Department's Defense Eligibility and Enrollment Reporting System computer data files by the service hospital or the program claim will be denied. Beneficiaries will no longer be required to attach a copy of the statement to the claim form.

There are 14 outpatient procedures for which the statements are required. They include:

* Certain hernia repairs;
* Breast mass or tumor removal;
* Nose repair (rhinoplasty—changing the shape of the nose);
* Removal of tonsils or adenoids;
* Cataract removal;
* Strabismus repair (surgery to lengthen or shorten muscles that help.the eyes functionr);
* Dilation and curettage (widening of the cervical canal and scraping of the uterine cavity);
* Upper gastro-intestinal endoscopy (visual examination of the interior of the upper gastrointestinal tract);
* Myringotomy or tympanostomy (incision of the tympanic membrane in the ear to relieve pressure and drain the middle ear. Includes placement of tubes in the ear to aid drainage);
* Ligation or transection of the fallopian tubes (cutting the fallopian tubes to prevent fertilization);
* Arthroscopy (use of an instrument to visually examine the interior of a joint);
* Gynecological laparoscopy (use of an instrument called a laparoscope to examine female reproductive organs in the abdomen);
* Cystoscopy (use of an instrument to examine the interior of the bladder);
* Neuroplasty (decompression or freeing of nerves from scar tissue).

Even in the case of the outpatient procedures listed above, a patient doesn't need a NAS to visit a physician to have the need for such a procedure diagnosed—the statement is only needed when the procedure is actually performed.

People whose home address ZIP code falls outside the local military hospital's service area don't need NASs before they seek civilian health care under the program.

A statement is not required for people who live within a service hospital's ZIP code service area, but who require emergency care (that meets the program's guidelines as an emergency) from a civilian hospital, or who have primary health insurance or a program that provides coverage for the needed treatment and that pays before the program.

A statement is not required for care at student infirmaries, residential treatment centers, skilled nursing facilities, specialized treatment facilities (such as alcohol rehabilitation facilities); or under the program's handicapped program, or under the Military-Civilian Health Services Partnership Program.

Statements for both inpatient and outpatient care are valid only for hospital admissions or selected outpatient procedures within 30 days of issuance of the statements—and, they're good only for the type of treatment for which they're issued.

For inpatient care, the statements s remain valid from the date of admission to the hospital until 15 days after discharge (with some exceptions) for any other required treatment that's directly related to the original admission.

In addition to military hospitals, several former Public Health Service hospitals—now designated as "Uniformed Services Treatment Facilities"—that have been issuing statements for inpatient care will also issue statements for the selected outpatient procedures described above.

The health benefits advisors at Martin Army Community Hospital can be reached at 544-3461, Monday through Friday.

The King of Huns' leadership secrets revealed

By W.D. Hobbs
USAIC Public Affairs Office

How the "Leadership Secrets of Attila the Hun" got printed is almost as interesting as the book.

Numerous attempts, over a period of years, were made by the author before it was suggested that he send a copy of the manuscript to H. Ross Perot, a modern day leader of some renown. Perot, captivated by the work, was instrumental in bringing it to the attention of Warner Books.

Shortly after publication it made the New York Times best seller list.

Attila's goal was to rule the world — quite an undertaking on horseback. His army eventually reached an estimated 700,000 warriors. They were well disciplined, single in purpose, and filled with esprit de corps.

They plundered, pillaged, and destroyed cities, villages and country dwellings of more civilized citizens. But with all their dastardly deeds, Roberts says, "Attila was less savage than the Romans and less cruel than Ivan the Terrible."

He believed that capable warriors should not be placed in positions of leadership that they don't have a desire to fill.

"We must appoint our chieftains from those qualified to lead, regardless of ancestry," he said.

On advice and counsel he had this to say, "A king with chieftains who always agree with him reaps the counsel of mediocrity."

"Attila" is a quick-paced, interesting and informative biography of the King of Huns. There is a section for easy reference to his leadership secrets which now, thanks to Wess Roberts, are no longer secret.

One that could have served soldiers well during the Vietnam war is — "When in a political war, a Hun must always keep an eye to the rear."

Pies pay off for children

By Aurelio Fellberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

All the pies in the face finally paid off, when the children's faces lit up with smiles as Santa handed out presents to them during 324th Support Battalion's children's Christmas party.

The children received gifts from Santa that were purchased with money raised through the battalion's pie-throwing fund-raiser, which raised $279, along with a battalion golf tournament, which raised $709 A variety of events were arranged for the children, such as painting their faces, making craft angels, extinguishing candles with squirt guns, pony rides, and a ride on the Fort Benning Express.

"The kids loved it" said Capt. Lisa Ornoski, 324th Support Battalion personnel officer. "More than 200 children showed up and each one received a free gift from Santa."

New Community Life Office opens at Bouton Heights

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Though waiting for the finishing touches, the new Community Life Office for Bouton Heights/Davis Hill on lst Cavalry Division Road is open for business, according to Darlene Perry of the post Community Life Office.

Built with non-appropriated funds, the structure houses offices for the community life non-commissioned officer there, Sgt. lst Class Kenneth Taylor, Mayor Sally Dover and will feature some facilities for Youth Services.

Perry noted that telephones have been installed, and they are still waiting on the pool and ping-pong tables, as well as several other games for youth.

In addition, there is a basketball court behind the new building.

Ground-breaking for the facility took place in June, and Perry said that the Community Life Office is proud of this new modular steel structure with its double-paned windows and security grates.

She noted that there had been another CLO office at the same site previously. In fact, a corner of the old foundation was used for the new building.

However, the old "Round House," as it was called, had been the subject of so much vandalism to its plate glass windows, etc. that the facility was condemned.

This one is built much more sturdy, but Perry said she also hopes the Bouton Heights/Davis Hill community will appreciate its presence and take care in its use.

When all of the finishing touches are complete, she said it will be open for use by the units for special gatherings for a rental fee that will serve to replace the non-appropriated funds with which it was built.

VOLUNTEER OF THE QUARTER

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Wilson is hospital chairwoman for volunteers, and was youth volunteers chairwoman during the summer months, when she provided guidance and counseling to 74 young people, who volunteered 6,800 hours for nealy three months.

Wilson, a retired Army sergeant first class, is a former Martin Army licensed practical nurse.

Young dancer sets goals for Broadway—but first it's the 1992 Super Bowl in Minnesota

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Her goal is to dance on Broadway one day, and dancing as a member of the American All Star Dance Team at the 1992 Super Bowl seems a step in that direction.

Fifteen-year-old Joanne Jordan has been dancing since her mother started her in lessons when she was 3 years old.

Numerous contests and awards later, she is now a sophomore at Smith Station High School in Smith Station, Ala., where she is a member of the Pantherettes Dance Team.

Earlier this year, the Pantherettes auditioned at an Auburn University camp for places on the American All Star Dance Team.

Jordan competed with more than 7,000 who tried out, and only 250 were selected for the team. Then, of the 250 on the team, only 50 were chosen to go to the Super Bowl in Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 26.

The 50 will be part of a pre-game show entitled, "Super Sounds," featuring excerpts from Broadway musicals, and to be televised by the local CBS affiliate.

She will be leaving Jan. 18 and returning Jan. 27. Her costumes, some of her transportation and a few of her meals will be paid for by the Super Bowl.

However, she is responsible for more than $1,100 in out-of-pocket expenses — airfare, hotel accommodations and the majority of her meals.

Therefore, Jordan has been busy selling candy, having bake sales and contacting businesses.

First Alabama Bank of Columbus is handling any donations made in her name.

She has to be in Minneapolis for the extended time because it is there that the team for "Super Sounds" will learn the routines and practice together from 4 to 10 p.m. every day.

An honor student and member of the National Honor Society, Jordan received school permission to be away for this time.

She is very focused on her priorities for a 15-year-old.

"It's hard sometimes," she said, "especially before I made the dance team, to balance all my other activities. It takes someone who really wants to pursue a career in dance. I want to go to Florida State University, and later someday it is my dream to dance on Broadway."

Michael Jordan

Joanne Jordan

Jordan several local dance companies. She performed in the Springer Ballet "Nutcracker" for three year, and did tap and jazz with Georgia's Dancin' Machine for five years and DancEffects for two years.

She has also served as assistant instructor for the Tumbling Bears Gymnastics Center and has participated in a variety of local talent competitions including Fort Benning's.

Jordan has performed in Association of the United States Army events such as Oktoberfest and Fourth of July celebrations since she was 7 years old. In 1988 at age 11, she was chosen the overall talent winner for Fort Benning's Youth Activities Center Talent Contest.

Her father, retired Master Sgt. C.E. (Gene) Jordan, is an instructor for the Maintenance and Instruction Team for the Directorate of Logistics.

She has also received other national recognition. In 1988, she took third place in the Joe Tremaine Dance Convention in Atlanta for the South East Regionals.

This won her a spot in the National Dance Finals in New York City, where she earned seventh place.

Modeling has been part of her achievements too. In 1990, she was a semi-finalist in the J.C. Penney/Seventeen Magazine Modeling Competition.

This past October, Jordan was crowned "Teen Miss Lee County" in Opelika, Ala., and in March she will be performing a Spanish point dance to "Carmen" for a Spanish Convention at the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa.

"Ever since I can remember, I've loved to dance and tried to achieve my goals," she said. "Instead of just taking a class and going through the motions, I put 100 percent into it. That's just me."

Dependables light first Christmas tree

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

"This tree symbolizes our battalion family. We're all part of a team that extends beyond the BDUs (battle dress uniforms) and includes our friends and family members. Every one of you here today belongs to the 324th Forward Support Battalion family."

These words by Lt. Col. Robert T. Dail, commander of the 324th, captured the holiday spirit felt by several hundred of the "Dependables" Battalion soldiers and family members Dec. 13 as they lighted the first outdoor Christmas tree on Kelley Hill.

It was an ecumenical occasion as well, with a scriptural reading by Sgt. Patricia Reynolds; prayer led by Chaplain (Capt). Orlando Fuller, the battalion's Catholic chaplain; remarks on the Jewish celebration of Hanukah by Chaplain (Capt.) Arthur Rutberg, Fort Benning's only rabbi; and Christmas carols sung by Sgt. Eric Imes, Sgt. Annette Toles and Sgt. Vantassel Huggins.

For some, like 10-month-old Joshua Anderson, it was also their first Christmas.

"Josh can't wait for Santa to stop by and give him his presents," said the boy's father, Sgt. Brian Anderson, of Company B, 324th FSB, who attended the unit gathering with his wife, Khristi, and older son, Corey, 3. "The tree lighting got the season off to a good start for us."

Single soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment enjoyed a Christmas party at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Dec. 13.

Prizes included T-shirts, sweatshirts, Columbus Indians memorabilia, cakes, pies, free golf balls and theater tickets. The grand prize was a trip to Florida. Other games and activities included chess tournaments, ping-pong and pool.

The children of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment celebrated a Christmas Party at Eiler Hall. Dec. 14.

Games, horse rides, arts and crafts, vehicle tours of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, the M-113 and the M-106 mortar carrier kept the children busy. Santa made an appearance at 1:30 p.m. and the children's eyes lighted up and smiles were wide as they told Santa what they wanted for Christmas.

The buffet table held candy, chips and dips, fruit, and what seemed like an endless supply of cookies in a variety of colors. Door prizes at the party included two tickets to the Springer Opera House, haircuts from the Officers' Club Salon and Cut Ups, T-shirts, sweatshirts, flight bags, Columbus Indian team pictures and 18 holes of golf.

ACS to sponsor workshop

Army Community Service

Army Community Service will sponsor a Family Support Group training workshop Jan. 16 in Building 2643 in Soldiers' Plaza from 9 a.m. to noon.

This training workshop will include the following topics: What is a family support group, regulations governing support groups, communication skills and volunteer management.

During Desert Storm, the groups were a source of strength and support to families of deployed and non-deployed soldiers.

Volunteer group leaders kept families abreast of events with correct and reliable information by providing a network of communication between the family members and the chain of command.

In a recent Department of the Army study, "Stress on Families during a Deployment," indicated that support groups reduced the stress associated with separation, shared common experiences, and kept rumors to a minimum.

These groups continue to provide information and referral and serve as a social network for families in peacetime and crisis situations.

This workshop is recommended for commanders, first sergeants and group members and will be limited to 50 participants.

Submit nominees for this training no later than Monday to Mary Allen, outreach coordinator, Army Community Service, 545-7517 or 545-4357.

Volunteer shares knowledge

Fort Benning Schools

A Faith Middle School student went to the media center looking for information on a particular railroad in Russia. The student just couldn't seem to find what she was looking for, so Faith School volunteer, Kathleen Meade, walked over to her and asked if she could help.

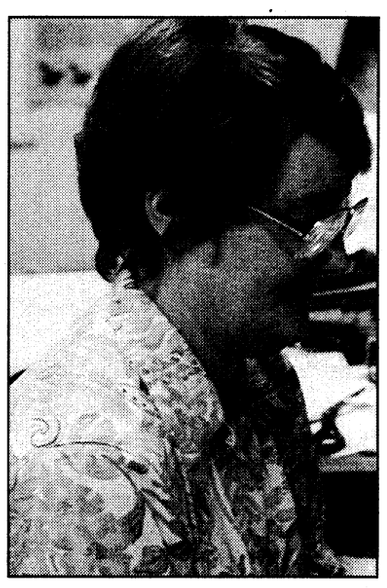
The Trans-Siberian Railroad was the one that the student had in mind. Meade knew it immediately for she had spent time in Russia herself. She was able to direct the student to sources where she could find additional information.

Meade, a volunteer in the Fort Benning Schools for three years and a member of the Fort Benning Schools' school board for 2 1/2 years, spends every Thursday volunteering in the Faith media center. Most of her time in the media center is spent assisting media specialist, Cindy Givens, in processing new materials.

Due to her efforts, many new sets of books have been quickly processed and made available for student and teacher use. In the media center, Meade files, types, signs passes, and goes to the aide of a student when she sees one in need of help.

"Mrs. Meade relieves me of many of the clerical duties that I have. She allows me to spend more of my time working directly with students and their teachers," said Cindy Givens. "She also jumps up and helps students find materials, she helps us with displays, she sees a need and steps right in and fills it."

For the last 2 1/2 years, Meade has served as the school board representative from Faith School. As a member of the board she has worked diligently to serve as an advocate for the needs of Fort Benning children, their families, and the Fort Benning schools' staff.



Mead

For the past year she has served as vice-president of the board.

Married to Lt. Col. Francis J. Meade for 20 years, she has lived in San Antonio, Fort Gordon, Ga., Korea, Germany, Washington, D.C., and Huntsville, Ala. She is a graduate of Georgetown University with a degree in French.

Meade brings a wealth of experience as a school volunteer to her work at Faith. She has spent 18 years as a school volunteer beginning in schools in Texas and continuing in Germany, in Huntsville, and then at Fort Benning where she has volunteered both at Faith and White schools.

The mother of three children, Andrew, 17, Kerry, 15, and Erin, 12, Meade says that she has always worked as a volunteer in schools because she appreciates what teachers are doing for her children. "I was brought up with the fact that you give back what you get," she said.

Meade not only is active as a Fort Benning Schools' volunteer, she is past president and former program chairwoman for the Officers' Wives Club, she is on the Home and School Association at Pacelli High School, she is a singer in the Benning Belles, she is a singer in her church choir, she is head of the Liturgy Committee at her church, St. Maurice's Parish, and she is Constitutional Revisions Chairperson for the Medical Department Activity-Dental Activity Auxiliary .

When asked how she feels about her volunteer work in the schools Meade stated, "I've been a volunteer for 20 years now. It's important to me to see that I make a difference, even a small one. I just want to continue to make a difference."

"There's no doubt that she makes a significant difference," said Givens.

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of Fort Benning's Schools, agrees. "Mrs. Meade has contributed greatly to the Fort Benning Schools through her service on the school board and as a volunteer in Faith and White schools," he said. "Her impact on the board and in the schools has been significant and positive."

Meade is one of the many volunteers who work in the Benning schools. Her efforts on behalf of Fort Benning children are indicative of the contribution made by these volunteers who come into the schools to join Benning educators in working toward providing the best possible educational opportunities for Fort Benning children.

ENERGY WATCH

By Jennie L. McRae
Energy Branch

Today more than ever before, energy has a big impact on our economy. From colonial times to the mid-1800s, the primary fuel used in the United States was wood.

From, the mid-1800s into the 20th century, coal was the primary fuel.

In the 20th century, improved technology led to the increased use of more convenient and clean-burning fuels, such as oil and gas, although coal is still the primary fuel used to generate electricity.

Today, we're a nation that relies heavily on manufacturing and food production to provide jobs and generate income.

Since manufacturing and food processing use energy of all kinds, it isn't surprising that our gross national product (the 'dollar equivalent of all goods and services produced over a period of time) has been closely tied to the amount of energy we use.

Future improvements in technology and efficiency may help us to increase the gross national product without using more energy.

About 70 percent of the energy we use today comes from oil and natural gas. Unfortunately, our own oil and gas supplies aren't enough to meet our needs.

The result: we must import oil and gas in order to meet our nation's energy needs.

The worldwide energy market is also subject to the laws of supply and demand, as well as to numerous political influences. These factors often lead to changes in the price of natural gas, gasoline and other petroleum products.

Whenever we pay out more money (for foreign oil and gas) than we take in (by selling U.S. goods overseas), the American dollar loses value.

This sets the stage for rising prices on all goods and service bought or sold in the Untied States.

At every level of the economy, energy works for everyone — in the home, on the job and everywhere in between: in the electric utility, transportation, industrial and commercial and residential sectors.

The energy industry itself is a source of jobs that help support our economy by providing jobs that are a source of personal income and public tax dollars.

In the electric utility industry people work in the generation, transmission, distribution and administration areas.

In the fossil fuels industry, people work in the exploration, refining, marketing, drilling, mining and recovery areas.

Today, the energy industry is committed to finding new ways to help us achieve energy independence while meeting our energy needs far into the future.

This means investigating new locations/sources of oil and gas and alternative sources of energy.

A strong future energy supply can help us build a stronger and more stable economy. Energy conservation is so important because energy is so valuable.

It will take time to balance our need for energy with usable supply of energy within the United States.

Hopefully research and development will yield more efficient ways to use energy.

We know this much: When it come to energy, it's wise to economize.

DENTAL FACTS

By Josie Swecker
U.S. Army Dental Activity

Myth — Calcium is taken from a women's teeth during pregnancy to give to the baby.

Fact — Calcium is taken from the women's diet. If the diet is inadequate, then the calcium may be taken from the bone structure, but not the teeth.

Myth — Children do not need regular dental examinations since they only have baby teeth.

Fact — Baby teeth are very important. They maintain the space for the adult teeth and they help the child eat and speak. If the baby teeth are not kept healthy, there is a chance that the adult teeth forming under them will be affected.

Myth — Frequent brushing is all one needs to keep teeth and gums healthy.

Fact — Brushing needs to be well as a healthy diet to maintain oral health.

Myth — It is normal to have gums bleed when you brush and floss.

Fact — Bleeding gums is usually one of the first signs of gum disease The best way to stop the bleeding is to brush at least twice per day and floss at least once per day.

Myth — A person only needs to go to the dentist when he has a toothache.

Fact — Routine dental appointments (a minimum of once a year) is one of the beat ways to prevent cavities and gum disease.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Evelyn Britt
Staff Judge Advocate Office

Q: Two years ago my wife and I sold our home to a couple who assumed our Veterans Affairs guaranteed loan. Yesterday we got a letter from the VA telling us that the bank was about to foreclose on the loan on this home and that we could be liable for the default. How can this be? If the buyers assumed our loan, why aren't they liable for their default? What can we do now? We can't possibly afford to pay this debt.

A: First of all, don't worry just yet. The letter you received from the VA is only a notification of possible default by the owners, your buyers. There may never actually be a default.

However, it is true that you could find yourself liable for your buyers' default of the loan they assumed from you.

While the buyers assumed your VA guaranteed loan, you apparently did not get a release of your liability on the loan from the VA prior to closing the sale of the home.

In other words, while the buyer assumed the payments of the loan, your name remains as the primary obligor on the mortgage note to the bank. An assumption of the loan does not release this obligation.

The VA guarantees the bank that the loan will be repaid, so when your buyer defaults, the bank, or mortgagee, collects their money from the VA.

The VA collects the money they had to pay the bank from the person whose loan was guaranteed, even though that person sold the home.

Your right of recourse is against your buyer. Of course, the buyer has no money, otherwise they would not have defaulted.

Since suing the buyer probably won't get you anywhere, what can you do now? VA regulations allow you to request to be relieved from your obligation on the loan if you apply for relief within one year of the default and the following conditions are met:

(1) The buyer is legally liable to the VA also under a valid assumption, (2) Your loan was current at the time you sold the home to the buyer, and (3) the buyer is found to have been a satisfactory credit risk at the time he acquired the property.

In other words, if you would have qualified for the release from liability at the time you sold your home, you can be relieved from liability if you apply within one year of the default.

You may also request a waiver of your liability because of financial hardship, but the guidelines for this waiver are much more difficult to meet.

Of course, the best thing to do is apply for the release before the closing on the home.

Realtors often will not inform you that an assumption doesn't release your liability to the VA.

You must tell your real estate agent that you will not approve any sale unless your loan is assumed and you get a release of liability.

Getting the release approved by the VA takes time and can delay the sale of your home. However, a little time taken before selling your home will save you a lot of grief and aggravation should the buyer default.

The Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, can assist you in requesting to be relieved from your obligation if you failed to get a release prior to the sale and assumption.

Ranger grads urged to live up to Ranger Tab

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Rangers go where others do not dare; and, because of this, the units that you are assigned to will have the utmost confidence in your ability."

Army Gen. Carl W. Stiner, commander in chief of the U.S. Special Operations Command headquartered at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., served as the featured speaker at the graduation of Ranger Class 1-92.

He noted that he received his Ranger Tab 33 years ago, and the leadership training taken from that experience has been important ever since.

"There is seldom a day that goes by that I do not use in some way the leadership skills that I learned and developed in Ranger School," he said.

"Your will go to your respective units wearing your Ranger Tabs, which show to everyone that you are a cut above the rest. You are prepared to lead men under the toughest of conditions."

Of the more than 150 in Class 1-92, 54 graduates came from Stiner's special operations forces.

He is responsible for a unified command of all special operations forces of the Army, Navy and Air Force based in the continental United States.

After he was commissioned, Stiner initially served with the 9th Infantry Regiment at Fort Benning.

He later came back to this post following graduation from the Army War College in 1975 and a tour in Saudi Arabia to command the 1st Infantry Training Brigade.

His awards and decorations include the Defense Distinguished Service Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, Distinguished Service Medal, Defense Superior Service Medal, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Purple Heart, Combat Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Ranger Tab, Army General Staff Identification Badge and Joint Chiefs of Staff Service Badge.

Unit pie toss raises money

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

"Hey Moe! Hey Moe! Whoop-Whoop-Whoop-Whoop-Whoop."

No, it's not a Three Stooges picture but there's enough pies being thrown on Kelley Hill to rival a real food fight.

The pies, ranging from a few berries and whipped cream to chocolate syrup, whipped cream and shaving cream went to the highest bidder with choice of who would receive the pie.

"We're hoping to raise some extra money for our battalion children's Christmas party," said Capt. Don Barlow, the adjutant for 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry. "We actually raised more than $600, auctioning 30 pies to the highest bidder."

"We only auctioned three pies and raised $300," said Capt. Lisa Ornoski, the adjutant for the 324th Forward Support Battalion.

"We made our pies out of whipped cream and chocolate syrup," said Staff Sgt. David Douglas, the training NCO for HHC Brigade, "but when I ran out of cream, I substituted shaving cream!"

"We raised $419 toward our soldiers' and family member's Christmas party. We're also putting together food baskets complete with turkeys for designated soldiers in the platoons."

"Hey somebody paid $52 to hit me with a pie," said Sgt. 1st Class Eddie Cosby, the MP platoon sergeant. "I didn't mind because it was for a worthy cause—to buy a present for every child who attends the company's annual Christmas party.

36th soldiers hone skills

36th Engineer Group

The Headquarters and Headquarters Company of the 36th Engineer Group as well as several of the group's subordinate units took to the field recently. The five-day field training exercise was designed to practice sustainment operations in a tactical environment and to exercise the units' command and control procedures.

Midway through the exercise, HHC, 36th ran approximately 20 soldiers through Fort Benning's Leaders' Reaction Course. As the non-commissioned officer in charge, Staff Sgt. Alton James said, "The LRC is a change of pace from everyday training."

The LRC is a series of 17 obstacles that groups of five to seven soldiers attempt to negotiate within 10 minutes. A different leader is selected for each obstacle and is given two minutes to brief his group before beginning the mission. A second group watches and attempts to distract the first group from completing the task. At the next obstacle, the groups switch and the other soldiers have a chance to harass.

Eleven of the obstacles are attempted over water increasing both the difficulty and the entertainment. Due to the cold weather, only the dry obstacles were used by the HHC.

"Very stimulating and very beneficial," were words used by Sgt. 1st Class Raleigh Cartrell to describe his day on the LRC. Many soldiers echoed his thoughts.

Capt. Steve E. Lambert, commander of the 533rd Transportation Company, set several objectives for his unit for the FTX. Establishing a defensive perimeter, a tactical motor pool, a field kitchen, and conducting tactical convoys were a sample of some of his objectives.

Upon reaching their field site, unit soldiers knew exactly what to do. Despite the cold rain that had been falling throughout the morning, they had their fighting positions dug and their platoon tents set up within hours of occupying the terrain. The field dining facility provided hot soup and coffee around the clock.

The company executed three tactical convoy missions, which included picking up captured enemy vehicles and shipping ammunition to friendly units. The 361st Trailer Transfer Detachment, a small unit that trains with the 533rd, worked hand in hand to ensure the completion of all missions.

As the new commander of the 608th Ordnance Company, Capt. Anthony R. Lewis found this FTX to be a good opportunity to assess his unit's training. After completing a qualification range on the second day of training, the soldiers returned to their bivouac site to find themselves in the midst of a "jump," that is, a unit relocation to a new training area. By the time bags and equipment were packed, the company found itself setting up its new perimeter in complete darkness. This condition provided an additional training opportunity. According to Lewis, "The 'Rock Steady' attitude of the 608th soldiers prevailed throughout the exercise. We received some excellent training this week. Now that we have the basics under our belt, we are ready to tackle ammunition tasks in future FTXs."

The engineers of the 586th Assault Float Bridge Company conducted some of its training during the week with the 72nd Engineer Company, the combat engineer company assigned to the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. Soldiers of both companies received some excellent cross training and familiarized each other with their military skills.

Soldiers of the 72nd presented some basic instruction on military demolitions to the "River Rats" of the 586th. Included in the training were classes on non-electric firing systems and employment of the mine clearing line charge.

The units switched positions the following day. Soldiers from the 2nd Platoon of the 586th showed 72nd Engineers some of the techniques involved in river crossing operations. Setting up an Engineer Regulating Point, and an Engineer Equipment Park were two tasks demonstrated. Further instructions showed the preparation of bridge bays for launch and retrieval, and boat and rafting operations.

54th names honorary commander

Program keeps unit's history alive, enhances esprit de corps

By Marilyn Balzarini
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

Retired Lt. Gen. Sidney Berry is the honorary commander of the 54th Infantry Regiment. He was invested during a ceremony at the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry, on Dec. 13.

The 54th had been without an honorary commander until Lt. Col. Patrick Casey, the commander of the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry, nominated Berry.

Lt. Gen. Carmen Cavezza, former Fort Benning commander and chief of infantry, signed the order appointing Berry on Sept. 16.

The 2nd Battalion is the only 54th unit still serving on active duty and the keeper of the regiment's history.

Casey said when he began his search for an honorary colonel, Berry was the obvious choice. Berry was the commander of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, in 1959 and 1960.

During his command, Berry made it a point to document the battalion's history.

"General Berry was very interested in preserving the unit's history," Casey said. "Enhancing morale and esprit de corps by understanding the unit's history and by identifying with soldiers who have served before is what the honorary colonel program is all about."

Berry said he and Casey will work together to preserve the 54th's history and to make its soldiers aware of their heritage.

Berry was the guest speaker at the graduation ceremony for Companies D and E, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry on Dec. 13.

His visit also included the Infantry Training Center's Christmas Formal on Dec. 14.

Some of his Army assignments include V Corps commander, 101st Airborne Division and Fort Campbell commander, commander of the U.S. Army Military Personnel Center, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, and 50th superintendent of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

He was an Army fellow with the Council on Foreign Relation in New York City and he was military assistant to Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara.

He holds a master's degree in international relations from Columbia University.

Some of his awards include two Distinguished Service Medals, four Silver Stars, four Legions of Merit, two Distinguished Flying Crosses, a Bronze Star with V device, and two Purple Hearts. Berry retired in 1980 after 32 years as an Army officer.

He was the commissioner of Public Safety for the state of Mississippi until 1984.

Berry lives in Alexandria, Va., with his wife, Anne.

Chaplain assistants celebrate 81 years

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The 81st anniversary of the chaplain assistant's Military Occupational Specialty was Dec. 28.

The specialty was established by General Orders No. 253, War Department, Dec. 28, 1909, which read: "One enlisted man will be detailed on special duty, by the commanding officer of any organization to which a chaplain is assigned for duty, for the purpose of assisting the chaplain in the performance of his official duties." That meant that the assistants generally cared for the official property, acted as the chaplain's clerk and helped with the educational, religious and entertainment programs.

However, it wasn't until World War II that chaplain assistants were authorized by regulation. The assistant was classified as a clerk-typist.

Finally, in 1965 during a major revision of Army Regulation 611-201, chaplain assistants were designated as 71M, given a definitive job description and specific skill requirements.

The chaplain and chaplain assistant form the unit ministry team and are responsible for providing a comprehensive religious support program.

Each participant, chaplain and chaplain's assistant, is responsible for the mission of the team, and must be responsive in such a way that individual tasks are accomplished in support of team functions.

The chaplain assistant responds to distressed individuals and is sensitive to the soldier's need for pastoral and priestly care. Furthermore, the chaplain assistant accompanies the chaplain throughout the area of operations, assembles and disassembles ecclesiastical equipment and assists the chaplain in providing ministry to soldiers. Although the tasks of one member differ from those of the other, together they fulfill the team's responsibility.

Elijah's cup represents hope

By Arthur Rutberg
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

This Sabbath (tonight through Saturday sundown), Jewish communities throughout the world will read from the sixth to the ninth chapter of the book of Exodus. Each week, a new portion of the Torah (the first five books of the Bible) is read as part of a ritual yearly cycle.

Last week, Exodus began with the stories of Moses and slavery. This week, it continues with the conversation between God and Moses at the burning bush.

In Exodus chapter 6, verses 6 through 8, God makes five promises of redemption: "I will free you from your labors;" I will... "deliver you from Egyptian bondage;" "I will save you with an outstretched arm;" "I will take you to be my people;" and "I will bring you into the land which I swore to give to your forefathers."

These five promises are recalled not only when the Torah portion is read in the synagogue, but on Passover as well.

Passover, one of the most important Jewish holidays, is all about redemption– past, present, and future. At the Seder, the festive ritual meal that starts the holiday, five cups of wine are poured, but only four are drank. The first four promises of freeing, delivering, saving and taking happened 3,000 years ago with Moses. But the great Jewish sages were not sure had the fifth fully happened yet.

Today, there is hope for the fifth promise to be fulfilled. That moment when all Jewish people are free to come home to Israel. There is rejoicing because the Jews of Ethiopia and the former Soviet Union are getting out but we can not drink until Jews like those captive in Syria and Iraq are free.

This fifth cup, Elijah's cup represents hope for the redemption of all humanity, when Elijah returns and all Jews return to the Land of Israel.

Then the day of the Messiah will have dawned and all humanity will know no more war, no more hunger and no more oppression. A day when every man and woman can sit under their vine and fig tree and no one can make them afraid.

Epiphany may curb post Christmas blues

By Jan W. Koczera
HHC, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry

Does it seem that the days after Christmas are such a letdown after the excitement?

Historically, festivities used to last from Christmas Eve until Epiphany, Sunday. As the ancient carol says, gifts were given on each of the 12 days of Christmas.

"Epiphany" literally means "appearing." In the West, it focused on the visit of the wise men, which is celebrated 12 days after Christmas.

Here is a tradition that perhaps your family could begin this year. Instead of the post Christmas letdown, look forward to this unique family celebration.

On Epiphany, plan a special family celebration. The plans could include dinner with a special dessert and an invited guest. Prior to the dinner all members of the family think of "gifts of experiences" that they can give to each other. The wise men gave very precious gifts to the Christ child. Examples of "gifts of experience" could be a parent taking a child to lunch or a child doing an extra job around the house. A spouse can give the other a "day off." Similar gifts are given to the guest by each member of the family.

Write these "gifts of experiences" on pieces of paper and seal them in envelopes. The envelopes are given to one member of the family who hides the gifts and creche (the manger scene with the Christ child). This member of the family also lays a path of paper stars to the hidden creche and gifts.

After dinner, the family follows the path just as the wise men followed the star to the Christ child. There the gifts of experiences are exchanged. Someone reads the story of the wise men from the Bible (Matthew 2:1-12) and the family prays together. If you try this idea, you might not only have a special time together as a family, but maybe also spread the joy.

Tae Kwon Do team heads for All-Army trials

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 1991 Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do team is training for the All-Army Trial Camp.

The team, chosen by Tae Kwon Do coach Edward Givans, includes Jon Richardson and Brian Kwong in the lightweight divisions, along with David Bauzo, Rachael Ridenour and David Laster in the middleweight classes. In the heavier divisions there will be Givans, Lorenzo Arredondo, Carl Burnett and Gilbert Stamps.

The team will leave for the trials at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., Jan. 14, and those good enough to claim one of the 30 slots on the All-Army team will stay for the Conseil International du Sport Militaire Championships from Jan. 31 to Feb. 4.

"Everyone on this team can make the All-Army team, I chose the biggest and the best from each weight class. It all depends on how prepared they are and how well they can control their nervousness during the trials," said Givans.

Rachael Ridenour should know about being nervous because she was at the trials last year along with Givans.

After the CISM Championships, the post team will travel to Fort Myers, Va., for the Army Tae Kwon Do Association Tournament March 15, then on to the Nationals at Norfolk, Va.

All the members on this year's team believe that there is a comraderie among them and that each of them belongs on the team. Even though most have different martial arts training, everyone is training in the Tae Kwon Do form of the martial arts. The look of determination on each of the team members faces during their workout seems to say that each member of the team wants to be a winner.

Bo knows money.

I don't want to be a spoilsport, but am I the only one who thinks an athlete playing two professional sports is not the greatest thing in the world? I've been asked a lot lately what I think of guys like Bo Jackson and "Neon" Deion Sanders and have been left shaking my head at how the desire for money has become confused with athletic greatness.

Let's get one thing straight right off: Jackson and Sanders are in it for the money, not because of a calling to be great at both football and baseball. The economics of professional sports today have created a market for these guys. As long as owners are willing to pay exorbitant salaries to athletes who only are available for partial seasons, we're going to see more guys playing two sports. New York Jets rookie quarterback Browning Nagle, for example, has announced that he'll play baseball for the California Angels next season.

I'm guessing that Nagle is going to have his hands full dealing with the National Football League. He was a pretty good college quarterback, but he'll need to concentrate on football if he plans to make a real go of it in the NFL.

As should Jackson and Sanders. Again, I'm not trying to be a spoilsport, but neither one of these guys is great at football or baseball. The camera is on when Jackson hits a couple of home runs or runs over a hapless Brian Bosworth on the way to a 40-yard gain. What the viewer doesn't see, however, are the mediocre plays an athlete who isn't concentrating on his sport makes.

I don't think there is any question that Bo Jackson is a superb athlete. I believe he could be a great running back if he devoted his time and effort to football alone. That's what it takes to succeed in professional sports — a year-round commitment. I can't help but think that Jackson's shift from baseball to football with no training camp contributed to his hip problems. Baseball shape is not football shape, and the body must adjust gradually to the shock of getting hit.

So what is it that makes a potentially great athlete stretch himself to the limits while not achieving greatness? Bo knows — it's the money.

When Sanders didn't report for the Atlanta Falcons' training camp on time this year, he was fined $40,000. It didn't even put a dent in his wallet. What does a fine that size mean to a guy who makes a couple of million dollars a year? I know what it means to most people. It's downright irresponsible and a slap in the face to both management and hard-working sports fans.

I love watching athletes perform to the top of their abilities. But let's separate hype and fantasy from reality. Bo would know football the NFL way if he would go about the game the right way.

Gale Sayers is a former Chicago Bear and a member of the National Football League's Hall of Fame.

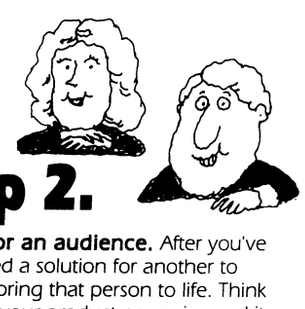
How to make money in three easy steps.

Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.



Step 2.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!

Step 3.

Van Dyke plays mystery-solving doc

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

Despite his own intentions, the enduring popularity of Dick Van Dyke could end up landing him in another series.

The Emmy and Tony Award-winning title star of one of TV's true comedy classics gave a considerable boost to another show last season, when his guest appearance in an episode of [redacted]

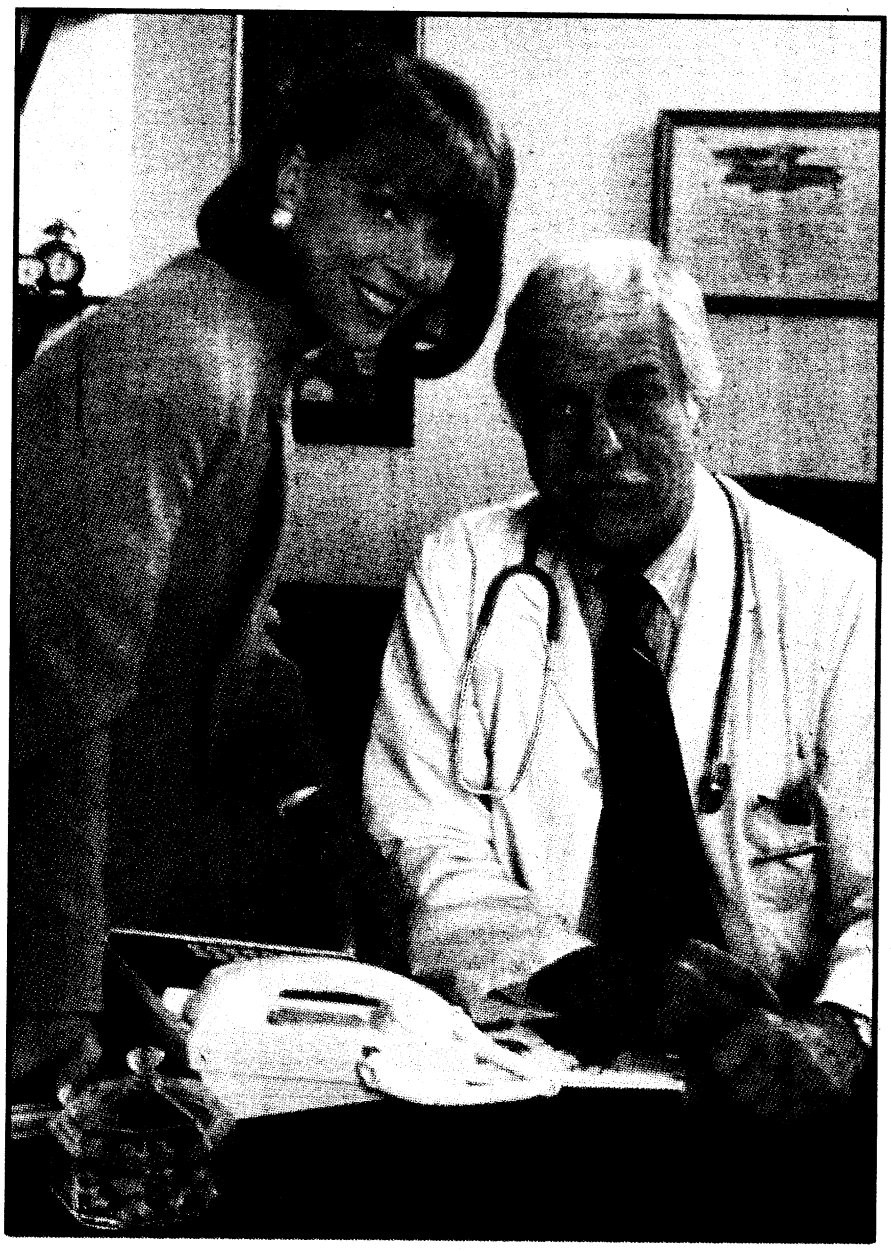
"Jake and the Fatman" lifted that CBS mystery to one of its highest ratings ever. Networks don't tend to ignore such occurrences, so Van Dyke then was signed by executive producers Fred Silverman and Dean Hargrove (the same team behind NBC's "Matlock" and recurring "Perry Mason" movies) to re-create the part of the offbeat Dr. Mark Sloan — who's given to roller-skating around the hospital, as well as tap-dancing — in at least two TV-movies, which might turn into a regular program. The first of those outings airs Sunday on CBS, as "Diagnosis of Murder" finds Sloan trying to clear a business-executive patient (played by Bill Bixby) of a homicide charge. Former "Dallas" regular Ken Kercheval and William ("Die Hard") Atherton are among other guests, but the cast also includes several performers who will be regulars in the Sloan stories: Van Dyke's own son Barry as his on-screen offspring, a police detective; Mariette Hartley as the administrative chief at Sloan's hospital; Stephen ("Tour of Duty") Caffrey as a helpful resident physician; and Cynthia ("Fame") Gibb as the latter's girlfriend, a pathologist herself.



Mariette Hartley and Dick Van Dyke are co-stars

The notion of a spinoff show reportedly was in Silverman and Hargrove's minds when they asked Van Dyke to do his "Fatman" stint, but at that point, he was reluctant to commit to another weekly role. "It's a little more work than I had bargained for," the friendly and cheerful actor still maintains, "but this guy has sort of taken on a life of his own, and I enjoy playing him. I had said, 'I don't think I can make another series,' and then the deal became two TV-movies. With my son Barry playing the detective, I get involved in criminal doings through him." Since the "Jake" episode had one acquaintance of Sloan as a murder victim and Sunday's movie makes another one the prime suspect, Van Dyke muses, "It might not pay to know me or Angela Lansbury (whose Jessica Fletcher character often has similar predicaments on CBS' 'Murder, She Wrote'). In the next one, it's a plastic-surgeon friend who gets knocked off; it looks like a suicide, but Sloan suspects it's a murder. I've never been involved with mysteries before, and I'm finding it interesting."

Van Dyke and his son previously were paired on CBS' short-lived "Van Dyke Show" in the fall of 1988, and he terms their new partnering "probably the most fun of all, besides the tap-dancing I get to do. When we were talking about who should play the part, I suggested Barry, and they thought it was a wonderful idea and went right with it. It's a great relationship, and I think it will really work over time if this becomes a series. If nothing else, it's a way to see your kid, because he has to show every morning up on the set." Van Dyke also appreciates the fact that the Sloan stories will allow him to work with peers such as Bixby, who's spending a lot of time behind the cameras these days, as a director of such ventures as CBS' recent "Baby of the Bride" film. "I've known him ever since he first started 'My Favorite Martian,' " Van Dyke reflects, "but I've never worked with him before."

Revealing that the inclusion of Sloan's light-footed tap moves was his own idea, Van Dyke recalls, "We were looking for eccentricities, and I said, 'How about if he was a closet tap-dancer?' We got Art Duncan, who used to dance on 'The Lawrence Welk Show,' to play a character; in (Sunday's) movie, I'm giving him free medical attention in return for tap lessons, and we end up doing a number in the halls." As for the roller-skating aspect, Van Dyke states, "I love it. There's a car chase in this one where I have to

Gofer Fun Park offers fun, relaxation, cure for 'There's nothing to do in Columbus blues'

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The newly opened Gofer Fun Park just might be your cure for the "there's nothing to do in Columbus blues."

The family-oriented park features go-karts, arcade games, kiddie rides, batting cages and a restaurant. An 18-hole miniature golf course and carnival rides are in the planning, said Jane P. Knight, corporate sales and communications director.

"Our goal," said Knight, "is to create memories and magic for all ages. The employees are customer and safety-oriented and the product affordable."

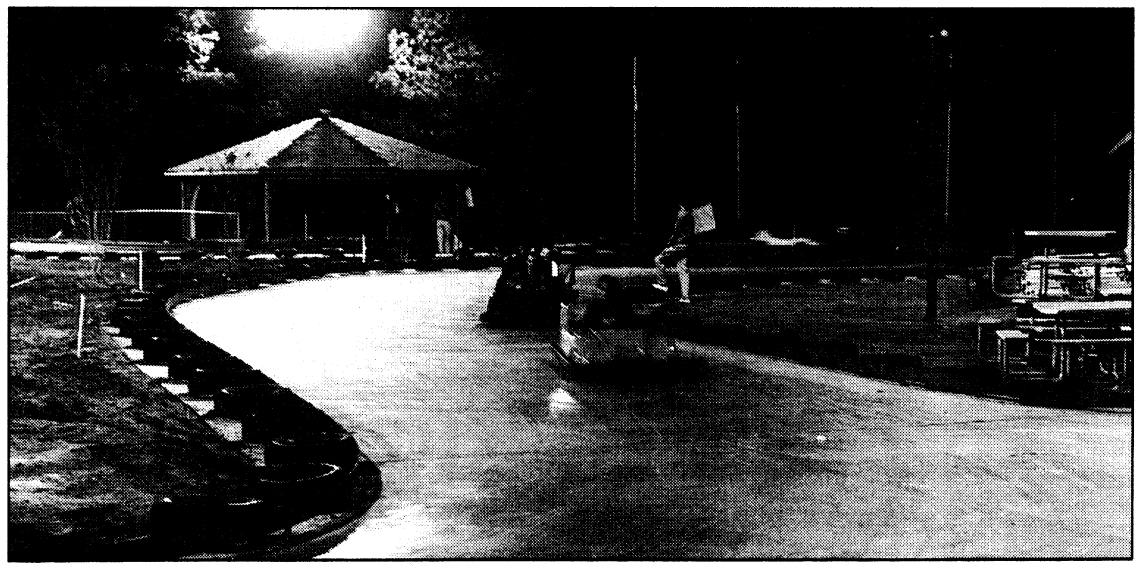
Gofer Fun Park has both indoor and outdoor attractions.

"The indoor Gofer Adventures area offers entertainment for children ages 2 to 11 featuring electric cars, ball crawls, tot play lot, the Gofer Rail, Bumper Boats, Clown Around, Flying Turtles and numerous arcade games," said Knight.

Outdoors you can find a one-quarter mile multiple go-cart track, which, according to Knight, is the largest in Georgia, a kiddie go-cart track, and batting cages.

Gofer Fun Park also has several private rooms that can be reserved for birthday parties and banquets. Both individual and group rates are available for the attractions.

According to Knight, tickets for attractions can be purchased individually or a wristband can be purchased that entitles the wearer to unlimited indoor activities and one kiddie go-cart ride for those under 4 feet tall and two go-cart rides, two batting tokens and eight arcade tokens for those over 4 feet tall. Members of the military, students, and senior citizens receive $1 off the purchase of any ticket and a 10 percent food discount.



Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

Patrons of Gofer Fun Park enjoy the fast-paced action of go-kart racing.

Gofer Fun Park is located at 6220 Milgen Road in Columbus and is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday from 10 a.m. to midnight, Saturday from 7 a.m. to midnight, and Sunday from 1 to 10 p.m.

"Gofer Fun Park will introduce magic, thrills, and excitement like Columbus has never seen before," Knight said.

Theatre to hold auditions

Next production needs variety of strong musical talent

Springer Opera House

The State Theatre of Georgia, will be wading into deep artistic waters when it begins auditions for Stephen Sondheim's mammoth musical melodramatic revenge play, Sweeney Todd.

"I must confess some trepidation mixed with my excitement", said springer Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce of the production. "It's certainly not your typical musical comedy. The score demands the very strongest, most flexible singers and the heightened dramatic action requires those singers to be actors with great humor, style and a flair for the offbeat theatrical choice. Sweeney Todd is not just an unusual musical. It's almost a powerful force of nature which flattens everything in its path. Somehow, we're going to harness that force and make it into a play."

Sweeney Todd is Sondheim's 1980 Tony Award winning musical about a gentle barber (Sweeney) who moves into the empty apartment above Mrs. Lovett's, peddler of the foulest meat pies in Victorian London. Together the two plot revenge upon the lecherous Judge Turpin and his evil cronies, who sent Sweeney to prison years before on a trumped-up charge.

The musical begins when Sweeney escapes and secretly slips back to his old neighborhood unrecognized. He immediately discovers that the old judge drove his wife to suicide and now plans to force Sweeney's beautiful young daughter, Joanna, to marry him. The barber is driven to madness, revenge and bloody murder and after the smoke clears, uncovers a tragic secret which brings the musical to its stunning surprise conclusion.

The Springer Opera House will be casting approximately 15 males and 15 females for the production, which will open Feb. 27. Performers are required to attend the singing portion of the audition on Sunday at 4:30 p.m. and to sing a prepared piece from any opera or musical which shows the best qualities of their voices. An accompanist will be provided. Absolutely no a capella singing will be permitted. All performers will then return Monday at 7 p.m. to read from the script.

skate down the street and hang onto the backs of trucks, but of course, they wouldn't allow me to do that and used a double instead. I don't think I would have tried it anyway, but the funny thing is that my pantomime experience has come in handy, because they needed some medium shots of me skating. I actually pantomimed those without skates on, and even though you'd think it would look phony, you cannot tell that I'm not skating ... so thank you, Marcel Marceau."

While making "Diagnosis of Murder" in Vancouver, Van Dyke became more familiar with actual medical dilemmas than he would have liked. "My back went out just before I went up to shoot this movie," he explains, "and I was in therapy all through the production."

Post CSM retires

Reflects on career

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's Command Sergeant Maj. Edward E. Garrett is retiring this month with 35 years of service.

During his last few days of duty, he took time to reflect on his career and answer these questions:

Q. What are some of the more pronounced differences between the soldiers you served with when you first came into the Army and today's soldiers?

A. While there was no difference between soldiers 30 to 35 years ago and today as far as their mission is concerned, there is a difference in the individual soldier. I'll use myself as an example. As a young soldier coming in the Army, I had three things I was concerned about learning — how to shoot the M-1 rifle correctly, how to be a member of a Browning automatic rifle crew and how to be a member of the .50- cal. crew, which didn't require a whole lot on the individual's part.

I sympathize with soldiers somewhat today because of the sophisticated nature of our Army and the weaponry and the monumental responsibility of today's leader. Today the requirements are greater and so is the responsibility.

As a young sergeant and squad leader, I could do my requirements with ease. I didn't have a family then. Today, nearly half the soldiers in the Army have families so in that light there also is a difference. The mission and dedication of the soldiers is the same, but I feel it takes more teamwork today.

Q. To what would you attribute the high quality of today's soldiers?

A. I'll give you the standard answer — education. There is a selfishness in soldiers now ... more so than in years past and that's probably good because it drives the quality. Individuals are more concerned about their well-being as soldiers and pursuing things that are available, like education.

I came in the Army without an education, I only finished the 9th grade, but I completed my education by going to college in the military. I think today's soldiers are more educated than in years past because society is more educated.

Q. Non-commissioned officers are often called the backbone of the Army. How do you feel about that statement?

A. I like the team effort. I don't think we should single out any one group. The NCO has progressed along the ranks to a level where he bridges the gap between subordinates and seniors based on his expertise. He has substantial knowledge that benefits both groups, so I guess that's where we came up with the terminology backbone of the Army. To put it in the proper prospective, he is the backbone of the Army if you really want to focus on the NCO in relation to other armies. In looking at other armies, we're the only army that I know of that has a substantial, quality, competent NCO corps.

To sum it up, everyone says the NCO is the backbone of the Army. It's as if you send your child through school and on to college, you expect them to have the scholastic ability to deal with whatever field they have pursued. It's the same thing in the Army. If you serve for a number of years, you become proficient at what you do.

Q. What will you miss most about the Army?

A. I've been thinking about that. There are a lot of things I'm going to miss. You just don't take a plug out of your life and not miss something about it.

Probably the main thing (I'll miss) will be the camaraderie and the commonness of direction for the group. I came from a relatively large family and oure family had a direction. We all pitched in to get us down the road to our objective. It's the same in the Army, and I guess that's the reason to some degree that I stayed as long as I did and fared as well as I did.

I'll miss the team and being part of what the Army has to offer in that respect. But, I'm going to pick up and go on from here with the rest of my life; there are teams in the retired community, too.

Q. What would you say was your most memorable moment at Fort Benning as the post sergeant major?

A. The busyness is what I'll really miss most of all because there are no dull moments here. I'll use Mrs. (Ann) Hill's protocol phraseology, 'Every day is an opportunity to excel.'

Q. Do you have any special memories of Desert Shield and Desert Storm?

A. Coupled with what I just said, we really had an opportunity to see our product within the Infantry. The training we provide here was really put to use.

When you work for something, you like to see it measure up to the effort you put into it. Here in the Infantry, we do a lot to ready soldiers to go off and defend this country in war if that's the case.

The most memorable thing was when we got our call to do our part to support the effort in the Middle East, to include our efforts at the port in Jacksonville. That was a monumental effort in itself — loading the ships, getting the materiel and equipment off in that direction. We had instructors who spent time in the Middle East training soldiers also. I felt good that our people at Fort Benning were major contributors to the well-being we experienced in the Middle East. Seeing it all come together in a short period of time was probably the most memorable thing.

Q. What do you plan to do when you retire?

A. I'm too young not to do anything else. I think I'll take some time off to do some personal things I haven't had the opportunity to do for a number of years. Although my children are all grown, I still have some things I've promised my wife I would do. We just built a home, and I've got some things to do there.

I don't have any specific plans other than I am planning to go to work. I'm not retiring — I'm just leaving this particular job and going on to something else.

Fort Benning pays tribute to Garretts

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Members of Fort Benning and the local communities gathered on York Field Wednesday for a retirement ceremony honoring Post Command Sergeant Maj. and Mrs. Edward E. Garrett.

Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White presented Garrett with an interim Legion of Merit, 2nd Oak Leaf Cluster, pending approval of the Distingished Service Medal. Mrs. Garrett received an Army Certificate of Achievement and the Commander's Award for Public Service.

In his remarks, Garrett thanked the thousands of soldiers he has served with in his 35 years of service and his wife for taking care of their family, working and volunteering her time to take care of soldiers and their families.

"I feel guilty about leaving when our Army is going through so many changes," Garrett said. "But, I know we'll make it through just as we have in the past because of you out there."

About his replacement, Command Sergeant Maj. William H. Acebes, Garrett said, "I have served with Bill before, and I know Fort Benning won't miss a beat with he and his wife, Brenda, here to take care of things."

The Garretts will remain in Columbus.

New year brings tax woes

By Clyde Snively

COMMENTARY

Like hundreds of millions of Americans, the mailman delivered my income tax paraphernalia from the Internal Revenue Service.

Only this year, instead of dropping off that lovely package the day after Christmas, Mr. Mailman didn't bring it until the last day of 1991. Someone said the IRS suddenly got a heart.

Normally, I'd refer to the IRS as the Infernal Revenue Service, but I made a mistake on a return three years ago. Or at least the IRS thinks I did. So I've been audited every year since. (I'm not talking in-person, bring all your receipts for the past three years audit, but a gentle reminder in the mail that "big brother" is watching.)

But the letter is unnerving enough. In fact, I'm thinking of changing my Social Security number to get from under their scrutiny, but I've been told that's not a good idea.

My mistake, I guess, was in not returning a 1099. Those are the forms you get one copy of and assume there is no reason to file it with your return.

So anyway, the IRS thinks I held out some self-employment income (I referee soccer) — I didn't. They graciously accepted my rebuttal to that; but, every year since, they're sending me some letter asking me about such things as my arithmetic.

Last year, I bought a computer program to help, but still got the much-dreaded letter.

We in the Army got it pretty easy when it comes to filing, especially if we are lower-ranking persons with no assets beyond what the Army provides us.

For instance, all we are taxed on is our active-duty pay, special pay for foreign or hazardous duty, lump-sum payments upon separation or release to inactive duty; re-enlistment bonuses and a few other things we young guys need not worry about .

Generally, we don't pay taxes on family separation pay; basic quarters allowance; variable housing allowance; other quarters cost-of-living allowances; forfeited pay, but not fines; uniform allowance moving and storage expenses and PCS reimbursements.

So just where could we mess up if it's all so simple?

IRS officials will tell you the most common mistakes made on returns are incorrect Social Security numbers; name incorrectly entered; status boxes incorrectly marked; duplicate return filed when not needed and math errors in computing taxes.

Those same IRS officials remind you to sign your return and get your spouse to sign it too if it's a joint return, also, date it and make sure your W-2 is included.

Oh yeah, you might be sending big bucks in it to Uncle Sam, but Uncle Sam ain't picking up the postage tab, so make sure you have the required number of stamps on the envelope.

My problem with taxes is the same one I have with life. I get fired up to do something, I'll do it. Just like when I get my tax forms, I'm ready to shoot, move, communicate and file.

Unfortunately, I'm missing one small but critical item — my W-2 form. You see, the Department of Defense is not as eager, it seems, as the IRS for you to fill out your tax return, because they don't get the W-2s to you until the end of the month, although they tell me I can still do the figuring using my December Leave and Earning Statement.

But since that's not official, I wait until the W-2 arrives at the end of January. By then, of course, I'm no longer in the mood, so I wait until — you guessed it — April 15.

Too bad someone hasn't come up with a way of combining last-minute Christmas shopping with last-minute tax filing.

Preparation important for retirees now

By William G. Fitzpatrick
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Have you really decided what you want to do when you grow up?

Many veterans leaving the service are trying to answer that important question for themselves and their families. It's not an easy question, and the answers are not always easily defined.

Many of the 200,000-plus people who leave the military each year have planned their future fairly well and make a smooth transition to the civilian work force. Others wind up wasting important time.

Planning for a smooth transition to civilian life and finding a great job requires serious goal-setting. It's important to develop a solid marketing plan to help find meaningful employment, but you can't develop a plan if you don't know where you are going. Goals are as important as the plan itself.

There really are only three professional goals — money, location and position.

That seems easy enough; you ought to be able to find just the job you are looking for at just the right amount of money, and you ought to be able to live anywhere you want. Unfortunately, it's not that easy. Early in the transition process, each goal has to be examined with a sense of reality.

Money. How much do you need? How much do you want? How much are you worth? Are you trying to build a nest egg for the future, or do you have four children to support and need specific income? Are you willing to work for commission-based compensation, or must you have a regular check every two weeks?

Two important points to remember: No one ever got rich in America working on salary, and workers are only worth what their skills are worth in a given market place.

Location. Many people in transition are headed for a specific city or town. This is generally driven by property ownership, spouse employment, family interests or simply a desire to live in that particular area. This can have an important impact on job opportunities and income.

Understand that cities like New York, Chicago, Atlanta or Dallas offer a lot more employment opportunities and much greater income possibilities than Small Town, USA.

Retirees often desire to settle in areas near military bases in order to take advantage of base facilities and medical treatment. This places them in direct competition with many others in the same career fields and skills, so job choices can become scarce; further, many employers in areas with a high density of military retirees sometime offer less money because retirees get a check from the government each month.

Position. Deciding what kind of job to look for can be a real challenge. Some important questions must be answered concerning the specific qualifications an individual has to offer.

— What is the market for different types of jobs in a given geographic area?

— What level of experience in a career field can be brought to the new company? Are you fully qualified for the job you want?

— What do you want to do? Although most people know exactly what they want to do, many have still not finalized that decision.

Determine your skills as early in the process as possible to decide what you are qualified to do. Remember, people just don't get hired for what they can do; they also get hired for what they have done. Professional career counseling may be helpful in answering these questions.

Each of these goals should be examined and discussed with the entire family long before undertaking the job search. Realistic decisions have to be made concerning the relative priority of each, and then a plan can be put together to go after the most important.

There is no use in looking for a job in San Francisco when you are really tied to Junction City, Kan., by your spouse's employment prospects or by the home you bought there in 1972.

There is an old saying: "He who only plans is a dreamer..." Perhaps it could best be finished by adding, "But he who only plans without knowing where he is going will never get anywhere."

Operation Holiday ends

Soldiers treated to area attractions, sporting events over the holidays

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

For soldiers who remained on Fort Benning during the yuletide season, Operation Holiday came to the rescue.

Sponsored by the Association of the United States Army, Operation Holiday consisted of free trips to area attractions and sporting events designed to give soldiers who were not able to leave post for the holidays something to do.

Operation Holiday kicked off on Dec. 20 with a ceremony at the Government Center that included proclamations by Columbus Mayor Frank Martin and Phenix City Mayor Sonny Coulter and remarks by Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

White said that he was impressed by the support given to Fort Benning by the civilian communities, whose donations made Operation Holiday possible.

"Of all my experience in the Army," White said, "I have never served in a community where there were such warm feelings and generous hospitality between the civilian community and the military."

"We all can sit back, relax, and enjoy the holiday season, but we ali know too well that many of our soldiers cannot enjoy a traditional holiday. That's simply not the case at Fort Benning, Ga. I've never seen a program like this anywhere else," he said.

Highlights of Operation Holiday included free tickets to college basketball and football games, including 200 tickets the Blue/Grey Game in Montgomery, Ala., that were donated by the U.S. Air Force Staff College, tours of Pratt and Whitney, Dolly Madison Bakeries, Andersonville National Cemetery, the Little White House and the studios of WTVM, Channel 9, and a bowling tournament at the Main Post Bowling Center. Soldiers got free admission and transportation to all the events.

The activities were paid for entirely through donations and fund-raisers, said Sgt. 1st Class Martin Boone of AUSA. This year there were 45 contributors, including three private citizens and 42 local businesses and organizations.

According to Jim Gallagher, executive vice president of AUSA, participation in Operation Holiday was slightly less than planned this year because fewer soldiers stayed on post than expected. Gallagher said there were between 650 to 700 participants, although that figure does not represent the actual number of individuals because soldiers who participated in more than one event may have been counted more than once.

"The soldiers, who were here, really enjoyed it," Gallagher said. "It helped break up what can be a long, dismal holiday period for soldiers who remain on post." This is the 12th year that Operation Holiday has been conducted, said Gallagher.

NIM receives rifles

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Two sporting rifles that once belonged to Nazi leader Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo and one of the key personnel of the Third Reich, are now part of the World War II artifacts on display at the National Infantry Museum.

The rifles were donated to the museum on Dec. 20 by Leroy E. Harvey III, a private collector from South Carolina.

In appreciation of the American soldiers who participated in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, Harvey donated the weapons in an informal ceremony attended by Chief of Staff Col. John Fuller, Museum Director Dick Grube, and Command Sgt. Maj. Edward Smith, who was command sergeant major of the U.S. Army Forces Central Command in Riyadh, Saudia Arabia during the Persian Gulf war.

The donation was accepted first by Edwards, clad in his desert battle dress uniform, and then by Fuller on behalf of the post commander.

Harvey said he felt that the rifles belonged in a museum where they could be seen by many people rather than kept in a private collection.

Museum Director Dick Grube was pleased that Harvey chose to donate the rifles to the National Infantry Museum.

"It's interesting that we received this gift during the 50th anniversary of the start of World War II," Grube said. "The museum has at least three other weapons of the same historical interest that have ties to Adolf Hitler and Herman Goerring. We plan to have all of the weapons on display in a special temporary exhibit about the second week of January."

Special exhibit cases will be built to permanently display and store the weapons, Grube said.

The weapons donated by Harvey include a Haenal .22-caliber block action rifle presented to Himmler in 1936 by General Karl Wolff and a combination rifle/shotgun built by Josef Hambrusch that features intricate engraving by Albin Obiltscnig.

Grube added that it is impossible to place a monetary value on the weapons because of their historical significance.

Insurance to be billed

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Several clinics at Martin Army Community Hospital will bill private insurance companies for the cost of outpatient care received at the hospital, effective Jan. 6, in the third party collection program. In time, all MACH clinics will participate in the program.

The program has been in effect since 1987 but only for inpatient care. Recent federal laws now require military medical treatment facilities to bill private insurance companies for both inpatient and outpatient care. Patients with health insurance will not be billed for care if their insurance does not pay for that care.

One benefit of the third party collection program is that care provided at the hospital paid for by a private insurance company, counts toward the insured's deductible amount. Another advantage is that inpatients with private insurance will not be billed for the per diem rate; this will be paid by the insurance company rather than the patient.

According to Maj. Charles Oliver, chief of the patient administration division, many people fear that using their health insurance will increase their rates. However, the cost of health insurance, unlike automobile insurance, does not increase based on the frequency of use.

The funds collected from health insurance companies will be used to increase health care services, said Oliver.

All patients will be asked t complete and sign a form statin whether or not they have private health insurance.

Patients with private insurance should bring their insurance card with themwhenever they visit the hospital.

McCaffrey lauds Redleg soldiers' performance during rotation

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

"The National Training Center is the best thing that ever happened to the U.S. Army in peacetime. I personally credit it with being the place where we learn to destroy large enemy forces."

That was the theme developed by Maj. Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) commander, in an end-of-the-year talk recently with the leaders of the division's 3rd Brigade at the Fort Benning Officers ' Club.

In a year highlighted by the allied victory in the Persian Gulf and Fort Benning's 197th Infantry Brigade becoming part of the division, McCaffrey termed the recent deployment of 1st Brigade to the National Training Center "the most successful brigade deployment ever to the NTC."

"The OPFOR (opposing forces) always used to slaughter the Blue Forces (friendly forces) at the NTC," McCaffrey declared. "This time, under the leadership of Col. John LeMoyne (1st Brigade commander), it was almost the reverse."

McCaffrey also credited Lt. Col. Donald C. Bell's 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, the 3rd Brigade's artillery battalion, with helping to ensure the 1st Brigade's exemplary performance during the rotation.

"This artillery battalion of yours is absolutely superb — a first-rate outfit that's as good as any I've ever seen," he told Bell.

McCaffrey encouraged the 3rd Brigade officers to become involved in shaping the Army's battlefield doctrine for the 1990s.

"What you do today will help to rewrite FM 100-5 ("Operations")," he said.

"I challenge you to take part in the debate (on battlefield doctrine), write articles, and help shape the doctrine of the future."

Nation's colors sometimes taken for granted

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A nation's colors may sometimes be taken for granted—even by those who love, respect, and have sworn to defend the nation those colors represent.

Most people remember to fly the colors on such holidays as Presidents Day, Armed Forces Day, Memorial Day, Flag Day, Independence Day, and Veterans Day.

Fewer Americans, however, may recall that they are also encouraged to fly the flag on New Year's Day, Inauguration Day, Labor Day and Constitution Day.

Fewer still may realize the U.S. code governing flying of the flag also encourages its display on Easter Sunday, Mother's Day, Navy Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

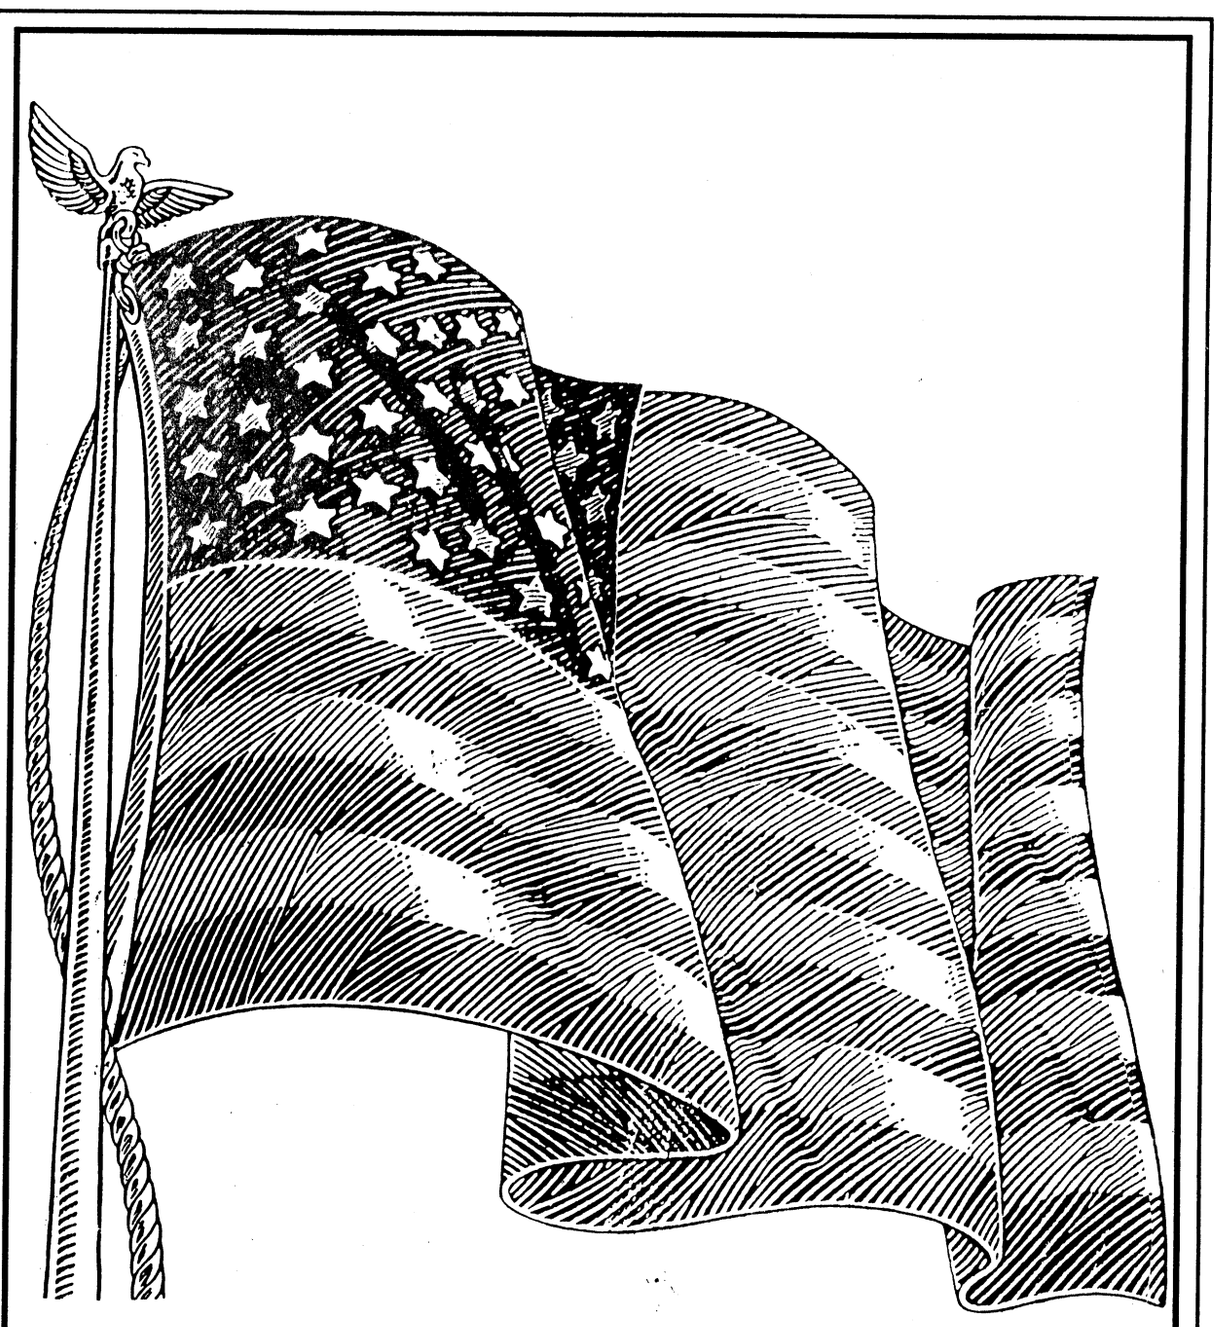
At the other end of the spectrum are those who enthusiastically and sincerely, but incorrectly fly the flag constantly—24 hours a day.

Some important points we all need to remind ourselves of are:

—the flag should not be displayed on days when the weather is inclement, such as rain, snow, sleet or unusually high wind, except when an all weather flag is displayed;

—the flag, when it is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning;

—it is universal custom to display the flag only from sunrise to sunset on a building and on stationary flagstaffs in the open. However, when a patriotic effect is desired, the flag may be displayed 24 hours a day if properly illuminated during the hours of darkness. However, lighting such as street lights or porch lights are not considered adequate.



How well do you know your Stars and Stripes?

1. The approved method of destroying a flag no longer suitable for display is:
   a. Send to flag depository in Washington, D.C.
   b. Turn in to a veterans cemetery for burial.
   c. Never destroy a flag.
   d. Burn it respectfully.

2. The U.S. Code governing display of the flag is:
   a. Title 4, U.S. Code.
   b. There is no such thing.
   c. New York Times v Sullivan.
   d. National anthem.

3. The flag should be displayed on:
   a. New Year's Day
   b. Inauguration Day
   c. Presidents Day
   d. Father's Day
   e. Easter
   f. Armed Forces Day
   g. Memorial Day
   h. Flag Day
   i. Independence Day
   j. Labor Day
   k. Columbus Day
   l. Navy Day
   m. Veterans Day
   n. Thanksgiving
   o. Christmas
   p. All of the above

4. A flag may be flown 24 hours a day:
   a. During summer in Alaska.
   b. Whenever a person feels like it.
   c. When it is properly illuminated (spotlight bathing the flag in light).
   d. When displayed in proximity of a porch light or street light.

5. Army Regulation 670-1 (Wear and Appearance of Army Uniforms and Insignia) states "when a U.S. flag replica is displayed on a moving object, such as a vehicle, aircraft, or a soldier's shoulder, the field of honor (stars) must always be moving forward. You must visualize the flag on a right or left shoulder sleeve as it would appear on a flag staff in motion—you could see the blue field moving forward regardless of which side of the staff you were positioned." This means:
   a. When viewing a soldier wearing the flag replica on his right sleeve the blue field would be on the viewer's right.
   b. This same standard holds true for federal fire fighters and police.
   c. Army regulation 670-1 does not address this issue.
   d. Since the U.S. code states the blue field should always be on the viewer's left, that takes precedence over the Army regulation.

6. Circle correct statements:
   a. Customary time to display the flag is from sunrise to sunset.
   b. The flag should not be displayed on days when the weather is inclement, except when an all weather flag is displayed.
   c. Never display a flag or pennant above or on the same level, to the right of the flag of the United States.
   d. When displayed in a window, the flag should be displayed either horizontally or vertically with the union uppermost and to the flag's own right, that is, to the observer in the street's left.

Answers:

1. d. Flags no longer suitable for display (tattered, frayed, and faded) should be respectfully burned.

2. a. Title 4, U. S. Code, chapter 1, section 1 and 2 and Executive Order 10834 governs proper display and respect for the U.S. flag.

3. p. Title 4 recommends the U.S. flag be flown on all those days.

4. c. If the U.S. flag is to be flow 24 hours a day for a patriotic effect, it should be properly illuminated by bathing it in light during the hours of darkness. Incidental light, such as that from a porch or street light is not appropriate.

5. a. Soldiers wearing the U.S. flag replica on their shoulders should wear them so the star field is facing forward no matter which shoulder it is on. Title 4 does not cover this and DoD firefighters and police are not covered by this regulation.

6. a.b.d. are correct. c. is not correct. The church pennant may be flown above the flag during church services for members of the Navy when the church services are conducted at sea.

Military retirement applications accepted by appointment only at Retirement Services Office

Adjutant General

The Retirement Services Office now processes military retirement applications by appointment only, according to officials. The policy went into effect Monday.

In the past, applications were accepted and processed on a walk-in basis, however, the increase in applications necessitates the appointment system, officials said.

The system will eliminate waiting time, delays in processing, and facilitates the plan of work generated by the downsizing of military personnel. To schedule an appointment, call 545-5369, 545-3019 or 545-2541

Hunting season to close, safety essential

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

With the 1991-92 deer season almost over, hunters will be putting in a lot of time in the woods, trying to get their venison before the season closes. Hunters should observe the rules laid out at the beginning of the season, so as not to endanger others or themselves.

According to the Infantry Branch Safety Office, the following ten commandments of hunting should be adhered to at all times while in the woods.

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.
2. Watch the muzzle.
3. Unload guns when not in use.
4. Be sure barrel and action are clear of obstructions.
5. Be certain of your target.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot.
7. Never climb a tree or fence, or jump a ditch with a loaded gun.
8. Never shoot a bullet at a flat hard surface.
9. Store guns and ammunition separately.
10. Avoid alcoholic beverages before and during hunting.

Deer kill cards must be turned in as soon as the deer season ends Wednesday. Failure to do so could cause you to lose hunting privileges on post for one year.

3rd Brigade Eagles soar in evaluation

MILES showdown tests skills

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th ID PAO

"Eagle 6, this is Eagle.36, three BMPs on hill ... destroyed two BMPs, over."

The Company E "Eagles" of the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry spent their weekend in the field fighting a soviet doctrinal foe.

Well, not really. The unit, which is equipped with the Improved TOW Vehicle a tracked optically wire-guided missile system, was undergoing platoon external evaluations.

"The TOW external evaluation is more of an assesment," said Lt. Col. E.W. Chamberlain III, the battalion commander. "It gives us a sense of where do we go next so we can train to our deficiencies."

The unit recently returned from the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., there they were the soviet doctrinal enemy.

"I think the NTC gave these soldiers more cohesion," said Chamberlain. "We really learned the effectiveness of this system out there."

The evaluation of the platoons was conducted in both day and night scenarios.

"We set it up to be a MILES targets and live vehicle force on force," said Capt. Rich Prout, the company commander. "The day phase was in support of a notional battalion task force attack, and the night phase was a hasty defense and withdrawal."

The platoons were evaluated in their conduct of occupying assembly areas, tactical road marches, how they controlled and supported their fires in battle both offensively and defensively, and how they reacted to a chemical threat. "These guys did really well," said Capt. Carl Pignato, the assistant brigade operations officer who evaluated the platoons as an observer / controller.

First Lt. Juan Dominguez, the 3rd platoon leader agreed. "However," he said, "we were pressed for time. This was my first time to actually train with my platoon. It was a great exercise because it allows me to see my leaders strengths and weaknesses, to evaluate them — as well as myself."

SURNOT brings NTC terrain to post

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The officers of the 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, recently visited SURNOT, the Surface Navigation and Orientation Trainer, on main post building 2868 to receive training in terrain association and land navigation.

SURNOT is a room-sized, cycloramic slide protection system that provides a reasonably low-cost means of bringing terrain to the training site, according to the U.S. Army Research Institute. Dr. Gene Fober, a member of the Institutes Fort Benning Field Unit, is the operator of the device.

"I've been here about six years," said Fober. "The system is primarily used in the Infantry Officer Advanced and Pre-command courses, but I'd like to see it used more often."

The officers conducted their training with the intent to train on the mission essential tasks required to succeed at the National Training Center, focusing on terrain association and land navigation. The group were introduced to the system and then conducted some terrain analysis using the pictures and a map as Fober instructed.

"These dark object areas will normally be difficult to travel," Fober pointed out, giving the group time to locate it on their maps. "You can see large features such as Tiefort Mountain for long distances, in actuality, you're really looking at about 10 kilometers."

Next, the group conducted a land navigation exercise using resections from known locations to determine their own location on the map — some were quicker than others, having had previous NTC experience.

"About 50 percent of my officers have never been to the NTC," said Lt. Col. Robert T. Dail, the battalion commander. "This really brings to life the old adage, a picture is worth a thousand words!"

It's a great way to get our officers to see what the NTC looks like," said Capt. Dan Shea, the battalion operations officer. "Eventually, I'd like to get additional pictures of the NTC and be able to show commanders exactly where to set up support area operations."

"This is an excellent facility," said Dail. "Having a feel for terrain is key, and part of the key to success is how well you have that feel!"

For additional information, contact Fober at 545-5589.

3rd Brigade detailed by magazine editors

Local soldiers in 'Desert Storm' book

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Desert Storm exploits of the former 197th Infantry Brigade, now re-designated as the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, are highlighted in a new book from the editors of "Military History" magazine.

Entitled simply, "Desert Storm," the book includes details of the 197th's role in the ground offensive and has the personal accounts of two of the unit's participants.

Capt. Stephen Sicinski, brigade operations officer, describes his unit's involvement as part of the U.S. VII Corps' advance on Feb. 24 over the Saudi Arabian border and deep into Iraq, traveling nearly 380 miles in only 51 hours.

"We were on the far left flank of the 24th Mechanized Brigade. We were the farthest west mechanized unit in the sweep," he recalled.

"We did our attack in two phases. First was Objective Brown, about midway between the border and the (Euphrates River) valley itself. The second phase was the actual assault on the valley."

Sicinski tells how on the second day of the advance they ran into an Iraqi Special Forces regiment.

"They were slightly larger than us, about 7,000 to 8,000 people. They were completely disorganized. They didn't know we were there. We really surprised them. The attack wasn't like anything you could imagine. It all happened at high speed. We dropped a lot of air and artillery on them. That's were most of the destruction came from."

Sicinski goes on to describe the unit's subsequent raid on Tallil airfield on Feb. 26, a quick, violent attack that saw enemy personnel, planes, helicopters, air defense weapons systems, and personnel carriers destroyed.

"We later learned that the raid into Tallil had more significance than we first realized. What it did was unhinge the entire Iraqi defense. They thought we were going to attack north along the Euphrates River valley to Baghdad. This triggered a lot of movement by the Republican Guard and their heavy armored units. It enabled the VII Corps and the Air Force to close in and hammer them with Warthogs. And that was our main objective-to have the Iraqis pull out of their revetments so we could destroy them on the move. And it worked well."

Sergeant Daniel Stice of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment is another 197th Brigade member who tells of his experiences in "Desert Storm."

Stice tells of the action he saw as the commander of an M-1 Abrams main battle tank as he and his crew rolled down Highway 8 in Iraq on Feb. 25.

"There were a lot of underpasses we had to secure, and hidden under them were many Iraqis. We began firing our main-gun rounds at enemy trucks. You could actually see the Iraqis being blown from the vehicles."

Stice also gives his perspective of the raid on Tallil.

"The tanks hit everything we aimed at- SA-60s, MiG-23s, MiG-29s, Hind-D helicopters, a civilian plane, and two radar discs. Plus we took out a lot of enemy soldiers there with our main gun as well as 7.62mm rounds from our machine guns. My tank alone fired 15 main-gun rounds and over 2,000 rounds of 7.62mm ammunition. We just leveled the place!"

Sicinski and Stice are just two of many (but the only ones from the 197th) who give their personal experiences in "Desert Storm."

The 176–page book gives detailed coverage of every aspect of the the conflict, including what happened in the air and on the land and sea, plus an overview of Middle Eastern history and 160 color photographs that help tell the story of the "100 hour" war.

Air Force Col. Ralph A. Cossa of the Institute for National Strategic Studies said the book is destined to be a bestseller.

"Desert Storm is the most authoratative, comprehensive accounting of the war that I have read to date and is a tribute to all the soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines involved in successfully accomplishing an operation of this magnitude.

This book makes a major and lasting contribution to our understanding of what really happened during the buildup and execution stages and also does a fine job of placing the crisis in historical perspective," he said.

75th tests 'intel' NCOs

11 rangers face tough challenges in field, compete for best 'intel' ranger quarterly title

By Robert Hardy
75th Ranger Regiment

The officers and senior non-commissioned officers of the regimental intelligence section, 75th Ranger Regiment conducted its second best "intel" ranger competition on Nov 26. This competition, like the previous one, evaluated each ranger's intelligence job proficiency as well as his physical endurance with ranger skills.

Ten rangers, staff sergeant and below, participated from the regiment's intelligence section and one from 2nd Ranger Battalion at Fort Lewis, Wash.

A total of six stations were set up in the field that consisted of a variety of tasks. They evaluate incoming reports, prepare and maintain the collection worksheet, draft the intelligence estimate, develop an event analysis matrix for each mobility corridor within a given avenue of approach, convert Universal Transverse Merenter grid coordinates to latitude, longittude and geographic coordinates and locate an unknown point on a map by resection. The course covered a 20 kilometer area with individual stations scattered throughout the cross-country course.

Each competitor had to complete the 20-kilometer land navigation course within six hours. In order to determine the best "intel" ranger, the results were evaluated to identify the individual with the most "gos" within the shortest amount of time on the course.

Out of 10 rangers, Sgt. Bruce Peters won the competition for the second time in a row by having only one "no go" and running the course in 4 hours and 20 minutes. Peters was given a certificate from the regimental commander, a plaque, a T-shirt, and a three-day pass.

The regimental intelligence section will continue to conduct its best "intel" ranger competition each quarter. During the next competition, the rangers in the intelligence sections from 1st, 2ndand 3rd Ranger battalions will be invited to compete.

The motto of the regimental intelligence section, like that of the military intelligence corps, is "always out front."

Preparatory School offers upward mobility

U.S. Army Recruiting Command

The United States Military Academy Preparatory School, which prepares young soldiers for the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, is currently accepting applications for admission in the fall of 1992.

For those enlisted men and women serving on active duty or in the Reserve Components who qualify, the training provides upward mobility to the commissioned officer ranks.

The Preparatory School is located at Fort Monmouth, N.J., about 50 miles south of New York City. There is no tuition charge for attending USMAPS, and pay, meals and living quarters are provided. Students do not incur any additional service obligation as a result of attendance.

Academic ability is an important factor in determining qualification for the U.S. Military Academy at West Point and the academic program at USMAPS receives primary emphasis.

Students attend classes from August through June, focusing on the math and English fundamentals needed to enter the U.S. Military Academy.

Applicants for the Preparatory School must be at least 17 years old, but not yet 21 by July 1 of the year entering the school. They also must be unmarried and have no legal obligation to support dependents, have a good high school academic record and be in good health and physical condition.

Soldiers interested in applying for the Preparatory School should act quickly to meet the requirements of a selection board scheduled to convene in May.

For more information about this program, call 1-800-223-3735, Ext. 7289.

Drawdown update to come

USAICS Public Affairs Office

Soldiers and family members who have been waiting for comprehensive information about the drawdown do not have much longer to wait.

The Army's goal is to have the entire force briefed on a "reshaping the Army" package by the end of January 1992. The package, titled "Drawing down the Army -- update I," was developed by a Total Army Personnel Command Team and blessed by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan. It will be presented by commanders down to company level.

At Fort Benning the program started with a briefing by post commander Maj. Gen Jerry White on Thursday. The commanders, command sergeants major, directors and other selected staff will continue the chain teaching program to successive levels to ensure every soldiers and civilian employee is fully informed.

"I want our soldiers and civilians to have the most accurate information as quickly as possible on how they will be affected personally," said Sullivan. "We are extremely sensitive to the anxieties of soldiers and civilians in the field who are receiving little or no information on the drawdown, or, worse yet, are receiving information that is not correct."

The "chain teaching program" is being used to get this information to every member of the Army. In effect, the information will flow from the Army Chief of Staff down through every commander worldwide to every soldier and civilian in the Army.

The package includes comments from Army Secretary Michael P.W. Stone and Sullivan on the overall drawdown plan, along with a script, slides and questions and answers. It also provides specific information on how the drawdown will affect soldiers in 1992 and on benefits available to those soldiers.

Army extends SERB deadline

Army News Service

Officers who may get a look by the fiscal 1992 selective early retirement board have an additional three weeks to request voluntary retirement and avoid consideration by the board.

Officials at the Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., say that Thursday is the day officers in the SERB zone must have their retirement requests in to ensure they are not considered by the board. Originally, the command announced Dec. 19 as the deadline for applications.

Personnel Command officials say requests arriving after the Thursday deadline will continue to be processed; however, there is no guarantee that late requests will be approved in time to exclude officers from board consideration.

The additional three weeks will help compensate for holiday mailing delays, ensuring affected officer' requests arrive at PERSCOM by the deadline, officials say.

Federal law allows the board to select a maximum of 30 percent of the considered officers for early retirement. Thirty percent of the considered officers will likely be selected by the board since drawdown plans require the service to maximize the number of retirements in the senior ranks, Army officials say.

They add that all requests for a retirement date before Feb. 1, 1993, from SERB-zone officers will be approved, barring rare and unusual circumstances.

Some senior officers may request a waiver of time-in -grade requirements in order to apply for retirement in lieu of board consideration. For example, retirement-eligible colonels and lieutenant colonels who would have at least two years' time-in-grade before Sept. 30, may request a waiver and retirement date not later than Sept. 30, under the provisions of the fiscal 1992 voluntary early release/retirement program. Officers selected by the board will retire at the grade held, regardless of their time-in-grade, say officials.

In addition, retirement-eligible lieutenant colonels who are not eligible for the voluntary early release/retirement but who will complete two years time-in-grade before Feb. 1, 1993, may request a waiver of the time-in-grade requirement. However, they must retire no later than Jan. 31, 1993, and have completed two years time-in-grade by the requested retirement date.

Officers with additional questions may call the command's hotline at DSN 221-9765 or 221-9766 or commercial (703) 325-9765 or 325-9766.

'Panther Challenge' tests 2/69

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor "Panthers" recently conducted Panther Challenge, a platoon-level exercise in Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System gunnery and combat operations.

"We designed it as a training event that would stress our platoons, get them to accomplish all their mission essential tasks list battle tasks under a stressful, challenging environment both day and night," said Lt. Col.Ricardo Sanchez, the battalion commander.

The platoons underwent four days of stress and strain to accomplish tasks of occupying assembly areas, precombat checklist inspections, night road marches, both day and night defenses of battle positions, a counter attack, and movement to contact, according to Maj. Nate Pullian, the battalion officer.

"We tried to put together a training package teaching some National Training Center lessons, MILES gunnery, a focus on Soviet tactics and overall warfighting capabilities," said Sanchez.

In the defense, the platoons dug their tanks in deep with the help of 72nd Engineer Armored Combat Earthmovers and waited for the attack.

Smoke and dust filled the air as a company-size tank element surged through the defender's position, leaving blinking MILES lights in their wake–not before leaving some of their own behind.

At the conclusion of the exercise, each platoon received an after-action review. "We're using external evaluators to observe and control the platoon," said Pullian. "There is a captain and a lieutenant with each platoon and Capt. Dave Stapleton, the battalion intelligence officer, is controlling the opposing force."

"Everybody got involved and that's great,"said Capt. Alonzo Upshur, the controller for 2nd platoon, Company D. "And you were the only ones to get a prisoner thus far." The evaluators conducted the reviews to teach the platoons to see and learn from their mistakes and to sustain their strengths. "Well, I learned, that I'm going to have to wargame my plans more," said Lt. Vaughn Spencer, the 2nd Platoon leader, Company D.

"You really have to practice what you preach," added Staff Sgt. William Nelson, a tank commander.

"What you guys really learned is teamwork," said Upshur. "That's part of the key, along with rehearsals and wargaming."

"I thought it was a refreshing course," said Sgt. 1st Class George Anderson, the platoon sergeant. "If you don't maintain what you learn, you lose your edge."

"This has been a great exercise for the platoons to understand their internal training deficiencies, and learn how they will operate under a stressful environment," said Sanchez.

World War II — A look back

By Brian E. Livill and Eric Holloway
Military History Division, USAIS

50 Years Ago Jan. 3 to 9, 1942.

* President Roosevelt submitted the 1943 budget to Congress, requesting a total of $ 59 billion. The budget provided for the purchase of 60,000 planes, 45,000 tanks, and 8 million tons of shipping in 1942. Roosevelt also planned to produce 125,000 planes, 75,000 tanks, and 11 million tons of shipping in 1943.

* The Arcadia Conference in Washington, D.C. appointed Chiang Kai-shek commander-in-chief of the Allied forces in China.

* The Japanese brought assault troops into the Malayan peninsula. Lacking ample sea and air support, General Percival's British forces were continuously forced back towards Singapore.

* In the Philippines, Japanese forces began assaulting the Bataan peninsula. MacArthur's Philippine and American troops had prepared defensive positions, but maintained little hope of outside reinforcement.

* The German retreat across Cyrenaica in northern Libya ended. Stretched to its logistical limits, British operation "Crusader" stopped in the face of Rommel's reinforced divisions.

* Against Soviet General Zhukov's wishes, Stalin ordered his troops to counterattack alone a broad front. Zhukov correctly feared that wide assaults would leave him without troops to exploit breakthroughs.

50 Years Ago January 10 to 17, 1942

* Japan invades the Dutch East Indies and declares war on the Netherlands. The Japanese begin daylight bombing the airfields of Singapore.

* U.S. shipping, still operating under peace-time conditions, is hit by a German submarine offensive off the Atlantic coast. U-boats sink 40 ships by the end of the month.

* Japanese threaten Bataan defenses with renewed attacks.

* Japanese submarine severely damages the carrier Saratoga near Hawaii.

* Rommel decides to prepare a surprise counteroffensive against the British. Neither the German or Italian High Commands are informed in order to preserve security.

* On the Eastern Front, Hitler removes Field Marshal Leeb from command of Army Group North. Hitler, annoyed by his general's constant requests to withdraw, has replaced all three Army Group commanders and two Panzer Group commanders in the East.

* British forces capture the isolated garrison at Halfaya Pass, Libya and capture 5500 German and Italian troops.

Tribute can be paid by keeping King's dream alive

By Jarvis E. Bailey
2nd Mobile Army Support Hospital

On Jan. 20, we celebrate the birth of Martin Luther King Jr. What better way to commemorate this great man than by living his dream — a dream for a better world; a dream of hope, or peace, and of love; a dream that included all of humankind; a dream to which he dedicated his life.

Be king for a day. Let your light so shine, as King's did, before men that they may see your good works and glorify your father in heaven. King's light still shines. The message that he brought, and the victories that he won continue to brighten our lives, to this very day.

Be king for a day. Try to love everybody, as King did. Not because of the color of their skin, or the content of their character, but because they are made in the image of God. King tried to love somebody. He realized that love was kind and rejoiced in the truth — that love bore all things, believed all things, hoped all things, and endured all things.

Be king for a day. Keep the dream alive. King gave his life for it, and it was not in vain. Let us show the world that we have not, and will not forget.

Keep the dream alive. Be king

Classes offer parents chance to share ideas

By Gabriele Sonneberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Many parents are sincere in trying to raise children in the "right way." But it is difficult to succeed since many are unsure and have not received a nurturing, uplifting and self-esteem building education.

What : Parenting class
When: Begins Tuesday
Where: Chaplains' Family Life Center
Who: Everyone isinvited
Cost: None

A driver's license is required to drive a car. Many years of education is neccessary to acquire a profession. However, neither a license nor special schooling is required to raise children.

Parenting equals many worries and problems, that are not easy to overcome. Many spouses and parents in the military face raising children alone without the help of grandparents or family. But there are agencies available to lend a helping hand. Parenting classes are offered at the Chaplains' Family Life Center.

Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia, chief Chaplains' Family Life Center, recognizes the need for parenting classes, especially in the transient, stressful military communities. Improving relationships between parents and children will be the focus of a workshop beginning Tuesday.

The workshop will be based on Systematic Training for Effective Parenting and will be presented every Tuesday from noon until 1:30 p.m. for seven weeks.

Some of the topics covered are:
- Understanding behavior and misbehavior
- Understanding your child and yourself
- Encouragement: building confidence
- Exploring alternatives and feelings
- Natural and logical consequences
- Discipline and the family meeting

The discussion group will provide an opportunity to share experiences, meet new people, and have an enjoyable time. The group will meet at the Chaplains' Family Life Center, building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza.

There is no registration fee. Nursery is not provided.

To register or for more information, call Roggia at 545-1760.

Values program promotes sharing between parents and adolescents

By Phil Reilly
Catholic Religious Education

For the fourth year, the Catholic Christian Doctrine religious education program will present the Valuing Values program on sexuality to seventh grade students on Fort Benning.

Valuing values is a video-assisted family life education curriculum for Catholic parents and teens.

It is a comprehensive catechesis in sexuality covering a wide range of topics in a holistic manner.

It presents basic information appropriate for adolescents and promotes the sharing of beliefs and values between parents and teens. Parents must attend parent sessions before a student is admitted to the class.

The AIDS virus has brought attention to the promiscuity prevalent in today's society.

The recent disclosure by basketball star Magic Johnson has heightened people's awareness regarding the disease.

Valuing Values is a program based on gospel values in which sex and sexuality is presented as something good and part of God's creation. The progam is designed for students to learn to respect their bodies as well as respect for the dignity of their neighbor's body.

It is also designed as a positive response to what is presented to the youth today through the media and the lifestyle of some of "the rich and famous," according to officials.

ENERGY WATCH

By Jennie L. McRae
Energy Branch

Per capita water consumption has tripled in the United States since 1900. In 1939, 20 gallons was was estimated to be the minimum daily amount needed by one person. Today, the daily consumption per person of the typical consumer is 50 to 75 gallons.

The increase of water consumption can be attributed to:

1. Higher standards of cleanliness and sanitation.
2. Increased use of labor-saving and convenience equipment.
3. Greater emphasis on outdoor living and landscape maintenance.

Summertime water use is often double the winter rate of use, due because of outdoor watering. However, other factors such as increased bathing, laundering and dishwashing also contribute to this increase. To survive a water shortage crisis, households must practice conservation measures both inside and outside the home. How can water be cut? Three simple ways are:

1. Locate and correct leaks.
2. Install water-saving devices.
3. Develop water-saving habits.

Some estimates indicate that 50 percent of households have plumbing leaks. Most of this leakage is due to worn-out faucet washers and faulty tank valves. Correcting these costly leaks is usually the easiest and least expensive way to reduce water consumption.

Check for toilets that run continuously or have a slow leak. A silent leak in a toilet can waste 300 gallons a day. Thats enough water to wash five machine loads of clothes.

You can test for leakage by adding food coloring to the water in the tank at night and looking for signs of the color showing up in the toilet bowl the next morning.

Look for faucets that drip. Constant drips waste many gallons of water each day. A leak as small as 1/6 inch can drip away 100 gallons a day.

You can install water-saving devices to provide an inexpensive, cost effective and lasting solution to water conservation.

Aerators with built-in flow limiters that restrict the flow of water are available for kitchen, laundry and bathroom faucets.

Shower heads with built-in flow control devices are available or flow control devices can be installed in the shower arm. A cut-off valve allows water to be stopped temporarily for shampooing.

The amount of water used in the bathroom exceeds all other household uses. You can reduce water used in the bathroom by significantly changing your water use habits.

* Take short showers instead of baths.
* Avoid running water in the shower while shampooing hair, soaping body or shaving legs.
* Keep the bathtub water level low. No more than five inches of water.
* Do not let water run in the lavatory while shaving, brushing teeth or lathering your face and hands.
* Turn faucets off tightly enough to avoid drips after each use.
* Launder full loads when possible. If you have less than a full load, use the water-level control on your washing machine.
* Use the permanent press cycle sparingly; it may add an additional fill with cold water that can use 10 to 20 gallons extra.
* Before going on a trip, turn the water supply to your washer off in case a hose leaks or breaks. Check the condition of hoses periodically.

Practice water conservation at home and teach it to children, too.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Anne Norfolk
Staff Judge Advocate

Q. I am a GS-3 civilian employee. At least three times a month, I am solicited by co-workers to contribute $3.00, $5.00, or even $8.00 for various matters.

I thought that this post was against soliciting. If I say that I can't afford to give this much on a regular basis, my supervisor harasses me by saying that I am not a "team player."

She told me that my performance appraisal is the time she can get even because I never participate in the collections.

I have been through my chain of command, to Equal Employment Opportunity and to the Directorate of Civilian Personnel. No one is able to help me. Is there any other action I can take to stop this?

A. Although federal law prohibits an employee from soliciting contributions from other employees, an exception to this rule allows truly voluntary gifts or contributions of minimal value on special occasions such as marriage, transfer out of the command, illness or retirement.

Any gift acquired with such contributions must be primarily of a sentimental nature and its retail value may not exceed $200.

The best way for your supervisor to comply with this exception is to announce that donations are being accepted for a certain matter and to whom the donations may be given.

This method ensures that all persons who wish to contribute have the opportunity and that pressure is not exerted on those who do not wish to or are unable to contribute.

Whether a gift is voluntary is determined on a case by case basis. Keeping lists of contributors or non-contributors for other than accounting purposes, making repeated requests for donations, or allocating amounts for each contribution all indicate that gifts are involuntary.

If you are being pressured into making involuntary gifts, you may contact the installation ethics counselor for appropriate guidance on the facts of your particular case.

The ethics counselor may be reached at 545-3285 or 1130.

Your performance appraisal must be based on your civilian performance plan and not on whether you have contributed to a collection. If you believe that you have been unjustly rated, contact your union representative.

PEOPLE

SECTION C

Infantry editor retires today

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"My career has given me the maturity I never had before. I discovered the more we learn to accept people as equals, the better off we'll all be."

These words sum up retired Lt. Col. Albert N. Garland's thoughts about his second military-related career — writing for Infantry magazine for 20 years.

Today he retired as editor of the publication. As yet, no successor has been named.

Garland noted high points in both of his careers, first as an Army officer and then as a writer.

He said that as an officer he is most proud of having commanded a rifle company in Europe during World War II including involvement in the Battle of the Bulge. "I was fortunate enough to come out of that experience alive. Many I worked with did not."

With regard to his writing, he said he is most honored at having been selected to co-author a volume in the Army's official World War II "Green Volumes" on "Sicily and the Surrender of Italy." This occurred while he was assigned to the Center for Military History in Washington , D.C.

Garland began his military career in 1943 when he was drafted as a private after four years in the Reserve Officer's Training Corps at Louisiana State University. He then went to Officer Candidate School and was sent to Europe.

After World War II, he left the Army and went back to LSU to expand on his bachelor's degree in history and English by acquiring his master's in history and education.

From 1947-48, Garland taught at Louisiana Tech until he was recalled by the Army just as he was contemplating working on his doctorate.

After numerous assignments, he received a position at the Center for Military History, which was followed by one at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and the Command and General Staff College.

It was there that after being a student, Garland was asked to stay on as a faculty member, and later he became deputy editor for their publication, Military Review.

In 1965, Garland spent part of the year in Korea, but his assignment was cut short when Fort Benning asked that he return to the states to become the military editor for Infantry magazine. He held this position until he retired from the Army in 1968.

Garland then taught full time for American University until he returned to Infantry magazine in 1974 as the civilian deputy editor.

What does he plan to do now?

"Nothing," Garland says. He noted that he has no driving ambition to do anything, he admits to having a number of pastimes, cooking Louisiana-style, gardening, reading and writing letters to the editor of the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

Garland has been the recipient of numerous honors including the Silver Star, the Bronze Star, the Army Commendation Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, the Combat Infantryman's Badge and he was inducted into the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame in 1989.

He and his wife, Adele, have four children, Susan of El Paso, Texas, Anne of Baton Rouge, La., Barbara of Atlanta, Ga., and Mark of Tallahassee, Fla.

Vet Services provides pet care

Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Are you looking for the perfect shampoo for your pooch? Worried that Rover may have heartworm?

Is Tabby feeling a bit under the weather? Do you suspect its something serious?

Are you feeling lonely and want a Tabby or Rover to share your quarters and your love?

Look no further than your post Veterinary Services.

Veterinary Services has an array of services available for post pets.

For puppies and adult dogs registered to post residents, vaccinations and heartworm tests are available, said Sgt. Ricky E. Allen, non-commissioned officer in charge of the Veterinary Treatment Facility.

"We provide routine medical care for dogs, but extras, such as grooming are not available," said Allen.

Treatment for diseases that are transmittable to humans is also available, said Allen.

For registered kittens and adult cats, feline leukemia check-ups will be made.

Services for cats and dogs include examinations for health certificates. These certificate are imperative for taking animals to overseas assignments and often for taking animals to another state, said Allen. Fecal examinations for worms are also available, said Allen.

For those who may want a pet, Veterinary Services have several puppies and kittens, as well as older animals ready for adoption, said Allen. For a fee of $35, the animal will receive its first set of shots, be dewormed and spayed or neutered. If required, the animal will also be dipped before leaving the facility. Potential pets can be seen on a daily basis, and inquiries about the animals can be made at the Veterinary Treatment Facility Monday through Friday from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m, said Allen.

The facility also performs humane euthanasia for ill and unwanted pets, said Allen.

Horses can receive Coggins testing from the facility. Horses are required to be quarantined for a period of 14 days before being released to the Fort Benning Hunt Club , said Allen.

The facility also sells limited supplies of pet shampoo, dip and leashes.

Veterinary Services does not provide emergency pet care, pet surgery nor pet x-rays, said Allen. Situations of that nature will be referred to an off-post facility.

For more information, contact Allen at 545-1127 or 3088.

LEAD course helps managers

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

Leadership, education and development became a fact of life for at least two weeks for Ricky Averitt, supervisor engineer technician, Directorate of Engineering and Housing and Emerson (J.R.) Addington, chief, Plans and Operations Division, Directorate of Logistics while attending the Leadership Education and Development Train-The-Trainer course at Leavenworth, Kansas.

The 14-day course Averitt and Addington completed qualifies them to conduct the one-week (40 hour) Level II supervisors course — LEAD.

This leadership skills course was designed as a companion to the current basic supervisors course which provides administrative supervisory skills. Attendance to the basic supervisor course is mandatory for new first time supervisors of civilian personnel and so will the LEAD class in the near future. LEAD is a 40-hour leadership course designed to develop and hone leadership and management skills of new supervisors. The course incorporates training on the personal characteristics and leadership competencies identified by the Army Professional Development of Supervisors Study. The course was developed by the Center for Army Leadership, U.S. Army Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, Kan., which was tasked with the mission of developing and fielding a progressive sequential leadership development system for civilian supervisors.

This mission was accomplished by developing three levels of leadership skills training in the Army Civilian Training and Education Development System. Training is conducted by certified facilitators using the Army leadership competencies. This leadership training is conducted in a logical order built on past experiences and training.

The course is designed for instruction in a practical application of leadership doctrine and competencies, theory, team building, motivation, problem solving and decision making.

A LEAD course is scheduled for Fort Benning's civilian supervisors Jan.13 to 17. Nominations for future courses should be made by submitting a DD Form 1556, Request for Training, to the Training and Development Division, Civilian Personnel Directorate, or by calling 545-5580 or 545-5656.

Support of this new program is vital to its success by both the new supervisor participant and his/her supervisor. LEAD trainers provide the resources to meet future responsibilities in developing civilian leaders. To be successful LEAD trainers require support in scheduling first-time supervisors for a future course.

Women share painful 'Last Wish'

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

Certain milestones may be inevitable, but that doesn't necessarily make the prospect of facing them any easier.

The death of a loved one ranks extremely high in that category, and for author-broadcaster Betty Rollin, the imminent loss of her mother posed dilemmas both personal and ethical.

SPOTLIGHT

Suffering from ovarian cancer diagnosed as terminal, Ida Rollin asked her daughter to help her find a means of ending her life in a dignified manner, a request that led their relationship to transcend past conflicts and result in exceptional closeness. That story is dramatized in Sunday's new ABC film "Last Wish," based on Rollin's factual book and bringing together two esteemed actresses: three-time Emmy-winner Patty Duke as Betty, and Emmy and Academy Award recipient Maureen Stapleton as Ida. Directed by fellow Emmy-owner Jeff Bleckner, and written for TV by Jerome Kass, who scripted Stapleton's acclaimed "Queen of the Stardust Ballroom," the movie also features Dwight Schultz as Betty's husband and Lee Wallace — the mayor of Gotham City in the 1989 "Batman" movie — as Ida's beau.

Though it could be deemed controversial in its own right, "Last Wish" might be seen even more that way now, given the plentiful discussion of Derek Humphry's recent book "Final Exit: The Practicalities of Self-Deliverance & Assisted Suicide for the Dying." As Rollin explains, "My mother had only a few months to live, and she had only torture ahead of her. She was definitely going to die, and she asked me to help her. I loved her, so I didn't want her to die ... but I loved her, so I wanted her to die when I was convinced that she really wanted this, which she did. It was clear. She never strayed from that wish, and what I did was research, mainly. I found out it's not so easy to die. It's not easy to die if you can't swallow, which she couldn't for a while; if you can hardly move; if you live in New York City; and if you're a nice, middle-aged woman and you don't own a gun. What my husband and I did was to figure out a way that she could die, that would work, and that's what this story is about."

In terms of the legalities involved, Rollin admits, "Assisted suicide is illegal, and I was not prosecuted. You'd really have to ask the district attorney in New York (about that), but part of the reason is that the help we gave was kind of indirect, more research. I didn't say, 'Here, Mother. Here's the gun. Go shoot yourself.' Also, when my mother died, it was not known that she was a suicide. Nobody knew what happened until I wrote a book about it, so I brought this evidence on myself, and it was tricky. What gives the film its body, and I guess what gave the book its body, is the question 'Is it right?' Does such a person have a right to get out (of life), and if she can't get out by herself, does she have a right to ask for help? And do I have a right, or am I morally right, in helping her? That's the question."

Co-executive producer Joan Barnett maintains that unlike "Final Exit," the television version of "Last Wish" doesn't provide specific instructions on ending a life. "It's not a treatise about committing suicide," she states. "To me, it truly is a story of a conspiracy of love between a mother and a daughter dealing with a problem that all of us, unfortunately, deal with at some point in our lives. It does not tell you how to commit suicide. What it does is explain the difficulties. It shows you how Betty and Ed researched it and what they had to go through, but it's not about, 'Then you do this, and then you do that.' For obvious reasons, it's not a blueprint, but I think what it speaks to is the fact that these were honest and good citizens who — because of the way death and dying are dealt with in this country — had to join together in a conspiracy, really, to break the law."

For actress Duke, talking about "Last Wish" is an emotional task, since her own mother became seriously ill shortly after she filmed it last

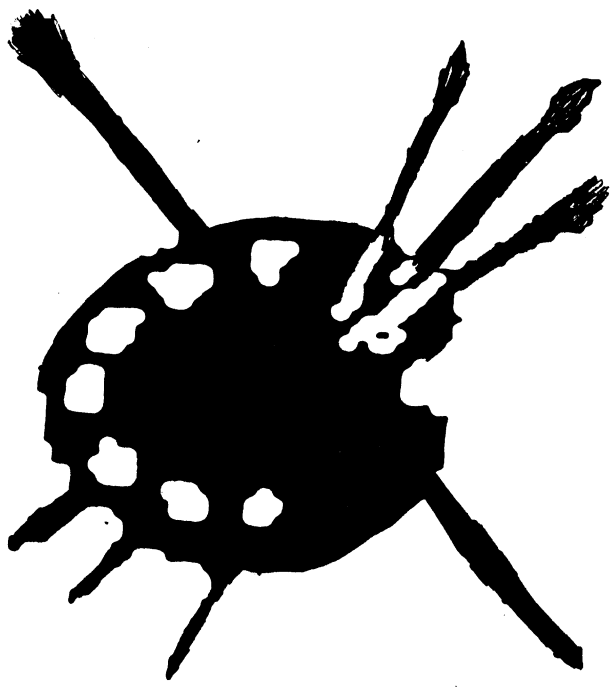
Celebrity cartoonist's work featured at Columbus College

Columbus College



An exhibition featuring the works of well-known cartoonist and social commentator David Levine will be on display at Columbus College now through Jan. 23 in the Fine Arts Hall gallery.

Highlighting the exhibition will be a program by the artist Tuesday at 12:30 p.m. in the gallery.

Levine is best known for his caricatures of prominent national and international celebrities, which appear in the "New Yorker" and "New York Times " His first professional caricature appeared in Esquire magazine in 1958, and since that time the artist has become famous for his drawings which exaggerate the features or mannerisms of his subjects.

His work has been exhibited in more than 50 one-person shows, beginning in 1953 at the Davis Gallery in New York, and most recently in a 1989 show at the Louis Newman Galleries in Beverly Hills, Calif. His numerous two-person and group exhibitions include the Galerie Claude Bernard and Centre George Pompidou in Paris, and New York's National Academy of Design, Society of Illustrators Exhibition and Brooklyn Museum.

His drawings are on display in the Forum Gallery in New York, and are included in many private collections, among them the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, the Library of Congress in Washington D.C., and the Fine Arts Museum of San Francisco. "The Arts of David Levine", published in 1978, is the most recent of six books that contain his works.

The exhibition is open to the public, and may be viewed Monday through Friday, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is free to the exhibit and the artist's program on Tuesday. For further information, contact Columbus College's Department of Art at 568-2047.

year. "She has since had a massive coronary and a number of heart-related diseases," reveals Duke, who speculates that upon seeing the movie, "My mother will cry her eyes out, and she will call me up if I'm not sitting with her and she'll say, 'I'm so proud of you.' That's my mother, and she has reached a point in her life where these issues are being dealt with on a very realistic and critical basis ... so as Betty points out in her book, and we do in the movie, we didn't invent this idea. It's out there. It exists." Duke hadn't read Rollin's book before agreeing to do the film, "because I was not ready to read 'Last Wish,' and it seemed to come at the right moment for me. It was very difficult to read. I put it down many, many times and thought, 'Well, I'll get through the script.' Then I plowed through, and I learned a lot from it."

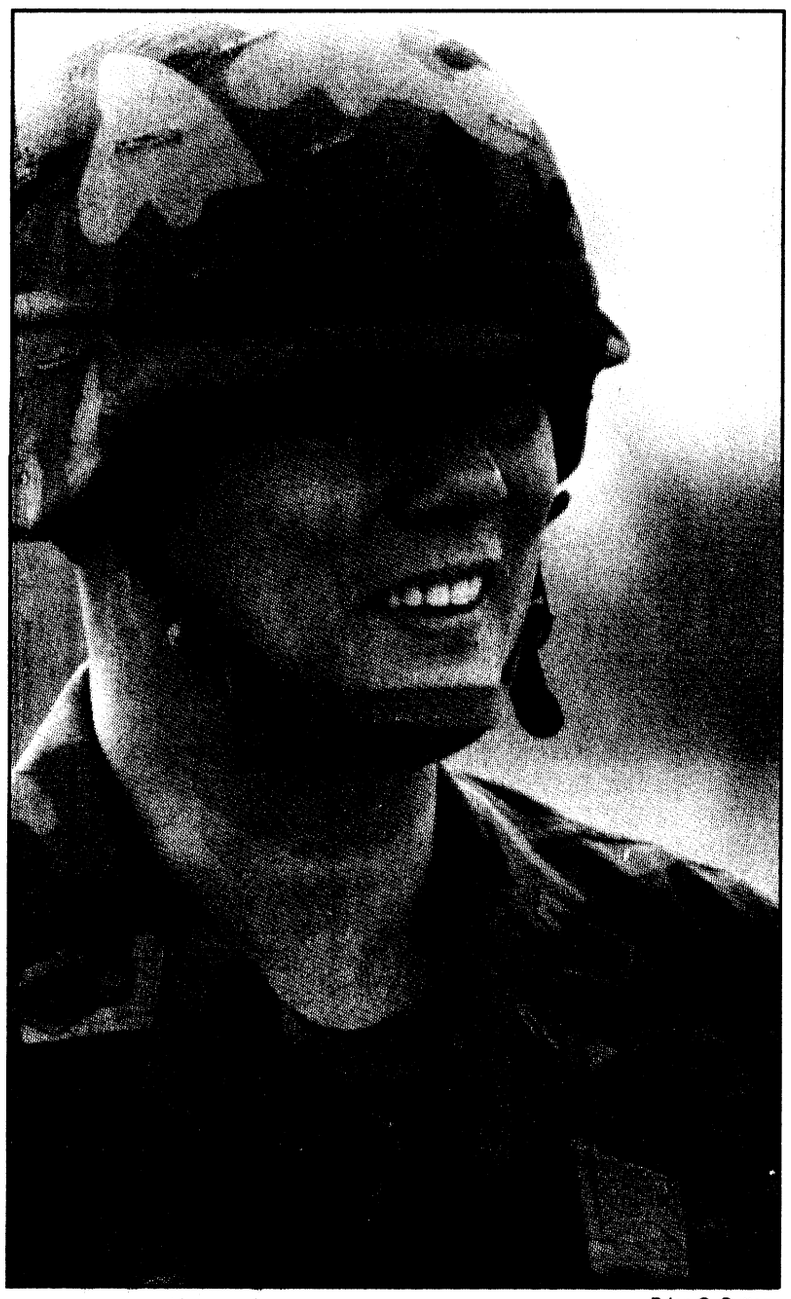
Fort Benning's CSM ready for duty

Acebes urges soldiers to maintain confidence in Army



Brian C. Sutton

Fort Benning's top non-commissioned officer, Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, comes from the Republic of Korea.

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes became Fort Benning 's top enlisted soldier Jan. 8.

Acebes and his wife, Brenda, came to Fort Benning from the Republic of Korea, where he served as command sergeant major of the 2nd Infantry Division.

The following questions were posed to Acebes earlier this week.

Q. Is there a particular message you want to give to the soldiers and family members here?

A. I'm glad to be here first of all; secondly I look forward to getting around and being with soldiers, with the student population and the permanent party population.

In my duties I'll learn from soldiers what I need to do to make this a better installation for them. Not only that, I may have some information they are interested in.

The same thing applies to family members. They are just as important as soldiers because they support the soldier in his or her mission.

If a soldier has a family problem and it affects his or her morale, then I don't have an effective soldier.

Q. What are your priorities as command sergeant major of Fort Benning?

A. I need to find out about the Infantry Center, Infantry School and Fort Benning. Once I've done that, I'll start getting out to visit the various locations soldiers go and where they train. Coupled with that, I'll get out and see the community and based on the commanding general's guidance and what needs I see, that's what I'll emphasize.

Q. What is your philosophy on leadership?

A. Soldiers need to be taught leadership and they need to have good leadership examples. For this, I look to the non-commissioned officers to set the example. They need to enforce and abide by the regulations that govern both conduct and duty performance. If it's a good example, soldiers will emulate it.

Q. What do you think are the challenges facing us during this period in the Army?

A. Of course we're (drawing) down, and we're mandated by Congress to do that. The biggest challenge is keeping up the confidence of the soldiers and ensuring they know the Army isn't just going to go headlong into a drawdown and not consider everything before releasing soldiers.

As you have probably already seen in the chain-teaching program, the first priority is letting soldiers leave voluntarily.

For those soldiers who are not really competitive, there are funds they can get so they aren't just cast out in the public with no means of support for their family. And the funds are pretty good, and that's something we never had before.

For the mid-grade soldiers who don't want to make the Army a career, there are still incentives to get out and be competitive. I feel they will be competitive in the civilian job market because of the environment in which they served.

Soldiers leaving the Army are better protected than the person who works in a private corporation because of their veterans rights and benefits. If soldiers take advantage of the Army Career and Alumni Program, they are more prepared to look for a civilian job.

The biggest thing soldiers need to know is that we will protect their rights, protect them and keep them informed.

Only 25 percent of the soldiers are going to leave, so hopefully we can do that through incentives and attrition.

Q. What do soldiers need to do to stay competitive in this period of downsizing?

A. Within their specific career fields to stay competitive, they need to take correspondence studies. This enhances their knowledge of their career field; and, by doing that, they are one step ahead of those who don't.

When soldiers go to leadership schools, they need to do their best to stay within range of the commandant's list because that shows they are competitive.

The commandant's list is made up of the top 10 percent; and, if I were looking at their records, that would tell me they are in the top 10 percent of their career field.

> "The biggest thing soldiers need to know is that we will protect their rights."
> — Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes

They also need a variety of assignments. Make all your assignments challenging. Not only is it fun, but you don't stagnate. I've tried everything. I may not have been good at all of them, but I've tried everything at least one time and that's what has made the Army interesting to me.

Some assignments will be hard and you're not always going to be perfect; but, later on as you progress in your military career, you'll be more experienced when you deal with others. You will also be more valuable to the commander and the Army.

Finally, don't get into trouble; and, if you do, learn from your mistakes. Don't willingly go out and violate rules and regulations.

That is the downfall of a lot of soldiers. If you make a mistake, don't stay down; you can bounce right back.

29th receives top awards

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's 29th Infantry Regiment has demonstrated once again it lives up to its regimental motto, "We Lead the Way."

Both 1st and 2nd Battalions have been awarded the Army Chief of Staff's Award for Maintenance Excellence for fiscal 1991 in different categories at the post and the Training and Doctrine Command levels, making it the fourth year in a row that 1st Battalion has won at the TRADOC level. This is the first time 2nd Battalion has won the TRADOC-level competition, and the battalion was named runner-up twice previously.

"It has become a 29th Infantry tradition," said Chief Warrant Officer Charlie Smith, battalion maintenance officer for 2nd Battalion.

The battalions will be judged next at the Department of the Army level, which 1st Battalion has won for the past three years, and then, finally, the Department of Defense level, which 1st Battalion won for fiscal 1989.

Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White presented the post level awards Jan. 9.

The 1st Battalion won in the heavy category while 2nd Battalion took the same honor in the intermediate category. Category determination is based on the number of pieces of equipment maintained by the unit, said Capt. Joseph Grebe, battalion maintenance officer for 1st Bn., 29th Inf.

The 1st Battalion maintains around 320 track and wheeled vehicles at its motor pool on Kelley Hill. The size of the motor pool and the amount of equipment make it the largest maintenance facility in the Army, Grebe said.

Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

Sgt. Daryl Russel (left) and Sgt. James Webb, both of Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, perform routine maintenance on a truck.

According to Smith, 2nd Battalion maintains around 90 track and wheeled vehicles.

Grebe credits his battalion's success to the excellent working relationship between the soldiers and the 31 civilians who work at the motor pool.

Smith said the same teamwork between military and civilian personnel was the key to 2nd Battalion's success as well.

"We have a good working relationship," Smith said. "The civilians really help make things happen for us. For example, they have devised and implemented a number of security and safety devices in our motor pool."

"We must have 200 years of military experience between the military and the civilians here," said Charles Hjort, 2nd Battalion's civilian foreman.

Both Grebe and Smith were quick to credit the work of the soldiers as well. Around 195 military personnel work at the 1st Battalion's motor pool daily and around 29 for 2nd Battalion.

"The soldiers here are great," Smith said. "From the motor sergeant to the lowest private, whatever the task, large or small, we always try to accomplish it."

Grebe also credited success to help from other post organizations like the Directorate of Logistics and the Logistics Assistance Office, which he said spend a lot of time supporting the 29th Infantry Regiment.

Smith said that new equipment additions this year will put 2nd Battalion in the heavy category, pitting the two battalions against each other in the next competition.

ACAP to celebrate grand opening today

The Army Career and Alumni Program will celebrate the grand opening of its new offices in Soldiers' Plaza today at 3 p.m.

The new offices, located in Building 2617, will house two parts of the program — the Transition Assistance Program and the Job Assistance Center.

ACAP was developed to provide a comprehensive system to assist personnel leaving the Army, according to Pat Sneed, transition assistance specialist and one of five counselors with the program.

The program is targeted to serve soldiers, civilians and family members, she said.

Fort Benning remembers Dr. Martin Luther King

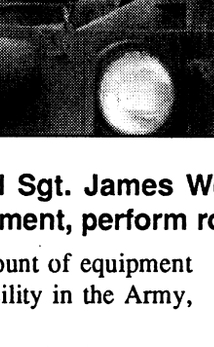
By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

A ceremony to commemorate the birthday of the Rev. Dr. Martin L. King Jr., late civil rights leader, was Monday at 11 a.m. in the Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Brig. Gen. Frederic H. Leigh, deputy director for operations at the National Military Command Center in Washington, D.C., was the guest speaker.

Leigh was joined by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander, Brig. Gen. Carl Ernst, deputy post commander, Col. John D. Fuller, post chief of staff, Chaplain (Col.) George W. Gudz, post chaplain and several other post and Columbus officials.

Musical entertainment was provided by the Robert Lewis Gospel Ensemble, featuring soloist Celeste Lee, and The Infantry Band.



Leigh

In his address, Leigh questioned if society was still trying to achieve the dream. "We can still see the dream, but can we hear the freedom ringing?" he asked.

Leigh also urged for a change and for each individual to make a difference. "To bring about change, you must give up the way it is to get what you want," said Leigh. "We need new leaders. Leaders make a difference. Regardless of age, rank or position, leaders are people who make a difference.

"The Army really does give soldiers of all races a chance to succeed and be all they can be," said Leigh.

VARIOUS VOICES

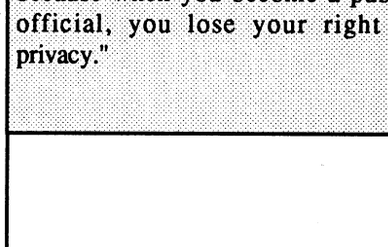
Do you think the media goes overboard reporting aspects of the president's personal life?

Terry K. Ray, family member — "I think things like the president's health should be reported thoroughly. Other than that, personal details about the president and his family are unnecessary."

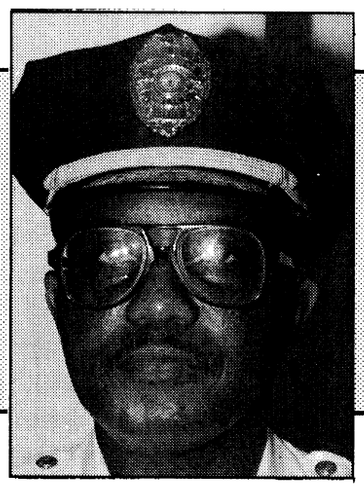
Staff Sgt. Yvette Moore, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "The media does not go overboard because the president is the country's leader; we have a right to know everything that is going on with him."

Patricia Ravenell, civilian employee— "I don't think the public should pry into his private life. The public only needs to know relevant information about his life."

Senior Officer Candidate Terry Wright, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "No, I don't think the media goes overboard because when you become a public official, you lose your right to privacy."



1st Lt. Richard Perry, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "Yes, the media goes overboard into personal details about the president and his family. Some things, like the dog and family vacations, aren't important."



Lt. Walter jackson, Department of Defense Police Department— "It's good to know information pertaining to the president and his position on things. I think it's beneficial that he doesn't conceal things."

Litterbugs are a nuisance

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The city of Columbus wants to get a handle on litter. I'd like to get my hands on the litterbugs.

The Army has long known how to deal with litter. It sends soldiers out to police the fields and bi-ways of America, picking up everything from cigarette butts to newspapers.

Yeah, we in the Army know how to deal with litter. Everyday we send out battalions of soldiers throughout the world to make our installations spotless. And everyday, no matter how good a job they do, the next day they go out and pick up the same amount of trash.

Like our civilian friends, we can't get a handle on litterbugs.

Why Americans can't keep their beer cans, Coke bottles, McDonald's wrappers and chicken buckets in their cars until they get to a trash receptacle is beyond me.

You'd think that with all the high-tech equipment we have in the Army, we'd figure out a way to take some "appropriate" action with them to use them as examples of why people shouldn't litter on post.

A piece of high-tech weaponry that comes immediately to mind is a sniper rifle with scope. Set up in a location where litter is particularly bad, such as near a snack bar, then pick off a few of these slothful human beings.

I kid of course. Shooting is too good for these vermin.

I say, move them to a landfill (if that's not where they came from). That way they can dump their mess anywhere they want.

We as soldiers and citizens can do our part to reduce litter. First we shouldn't litter. Driving a pickup, I certainly do my part for the anti-litter campaign.

People must think it's a litter receptacle because I find all sorts of things in the truck's bed— styro foam cups, candy wrappers, AAFES bags, etc.

This is fine as long as I see it before I take off, because if I don't, then I end up strewing litter along the by-pass — litter some soldier from the Infantry Training Center will have to pick up early the next morning.

Perhaps we can note the tag numbers of vehicles in front of us whose occupants heave things out the windows. Then we can call the numbers in to various law enforcement officials.

Perhaps our Military Police would then call commanders and let them know they have a litterbug in the unit.

I've been tempted to pick up the offenders' litter and follow them to their homes and dump the stuff in front of their houses.

There are a couple of drawbacks though. First, they may not be going home. Second, "home" might be a long ways away. And third, these miscreants may see you and shoot you or run you over.

You might, say, "settle down Snively, you're getting too worked up over this. What's the big deal?"

The big deal is litter costs this country millions of dollars a year in cleanup costs. And it deprives us of enjoying our communities and even our wilderness areas.

Ever been to a national park and seen litter strewn about under the giant Redwoods or floating down some otherwise pristine stream?

I play at golf (flog) because I enjoy the out-of-doors and the pretty green grass and woods.

I also spend a lot of time chasing balls where machetes would work better than 9-irons, having clothes ripped by thorns only to discover that the white ball I was pursuing was a cup or soda can tossed into the woods, although much of the litter is lying in the middle of the fairways or next to waste receptacles (they couldn't even bend over to pick up their trash after failing to "ring the bucket").

What's the matter with these people?

Why do so many people want to spoil our environment?

Am I overly emotional about this, or do others feel this way?

If you've got any good ideas, I'd like to hear from you.

Soldiers get help with civilian jobs

By Patrick Swan
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Joseph Neubauer is worried.

Speaking to a recent "business, the military and the new work force" forum at Fort Myer, Va., the chairman and president of ARA Services asked how today's businesses can stay competitive in a world of increasing diversity, unprecedented technological change and extraordinarily complex joint venture relationships.

Fortunately for Neubauer and other business leaders, Department of Defense officials are offering a little assistance. They're simply saying "hire separating soldiers: they've been successfully confronting those problems for years."

According to Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney, the people DoD is losing "are the same individuals who amazed the world with their competence in moving more than 3 million tons of cargo and 500,000 troops to Saudi Arabia in six months. And they are the same individuals who then impressed the world with their compassion by providing humanitarian relief to the refugees in northern Iraq and Bangladesh. They represent Americans at their finest: committed, skilled and hard working."

Under Secretary of the Army John Shannon put it like this: "The people you're getting are the best educated and the best disciplined you're going to find in the United States. They come to work on time. If you tell them to take an 18-wheeler from Tampa, Fla., to Des Moines, Iowa, it will be there when it's supposed to be."

Those soldiers have learned to solve tough problems because they are "bright and trainable," according to Lt. Gen William H. Reno, deputy chief of staff for personnel. "They understand the mission and the importance of high standards. They're exposed to sophisticated technology. They have a work ethic and an unbending perseverance to make things happen in the face of hardships.

Labor Secretary Lynn Martin said the challenge for the private sector is "to recapture the benefits of the excellent training received by people who are leaving military service."

The Army is the largest training establishment in the world. Spending $1.3 billion on more than 5,100 different courses annually. The result is a well-educated force.

As for civilian education, 52 percent of the Army's senior NCOs have at least one year of college. Thirty-five percent of the NCOs have an associate's degree and 17 percent hold bachelor's degrees.

But the Army's training program goes beyond formal education. G. Kim Wincup, assistant secretary of the Army for manpower and reserve affairs, explained the Army's success this way: "We look at every aspect of a soldier's life — physical conditioning, values and beliefs, leadership and even personal appearance."

"As industry, you can count on us as a source of great quality over time," he said.

Wincup went on to say that the Army is giving separating soldiers job assistance, helping them with resume writing, and teaching them interviewing and job negotiating skills.

The Army employer network and the Army Career and Alumni Program are two examples of the Army's aggressive separation assistance programs. A third is the Defense Outplacement Referral Service.

DOORS is a cooperative effort between DoD and the Office of Personnel Management designed to provide federal agencies and other employers rapid access to referral lists of current DoD military and civilian personnel and their spouses affected by the drawdown, base closings and budget cuts. An electronic network matches the applicant's skills with employer's needs. Applicants can register at family support centers or by calling (900) 990-9200; federal agencies can seek applicants by calling FTS 8-259-3730, private companies can call (703) 614-5322.

Cyclists have rules of road

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Bicyclists have "rules of the road" to follow, just like motorists. These rules include keeping to the right of the road, riding with traffic, and riding single file. All traffic signals, signs and devices must be obeyed. Bicycles should not be ridden in areas usually reserved for pedestrians (e.g., running tracks).

The following applies to all cyclists on Fort Benning roads with a speed limit of 35 miles per hour or greater:

• Cyclists must wear highly-visible, reflective vests or sashes and protective helmets that have been approved by either the Snell Memorial Foundation or the Standard Institute.

• Riders should ensure that their bicycles have good reflectors, front and rear. In addition, bicycles ridden at night will be equipped with headlights and tail lights which are visible from a distance of 300 feet.

CG sends message

Martin Luther King Jr. Day, celebrated on Monday, provides the first holiday weekend for 1992.

With the chance of bad weather at this time of year and increased traffic associated with any long weekend, the potential for traffic accidents is great.

To compensate for this risk, I ask everyone to:

•Stay under the speed limit. Slow down even more in fog, darkness, adverse weather and for curves.

•Stay alert and sober. Take a rest break at least every two hours on long trips.

•Fasten your seat belt every time you get in a car. Even the best driver cannot avoid an accident when another driver runs into him.

•Ensure that a window is slightly open to combat fatigue and avoid carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide is odorless and colorless, yet deadly.

•Keep in mind the hazards associated with travelling under adverse conditions. I encourage all soldiers and civilian employees to enjoy the holiday weekend, but do so safely.

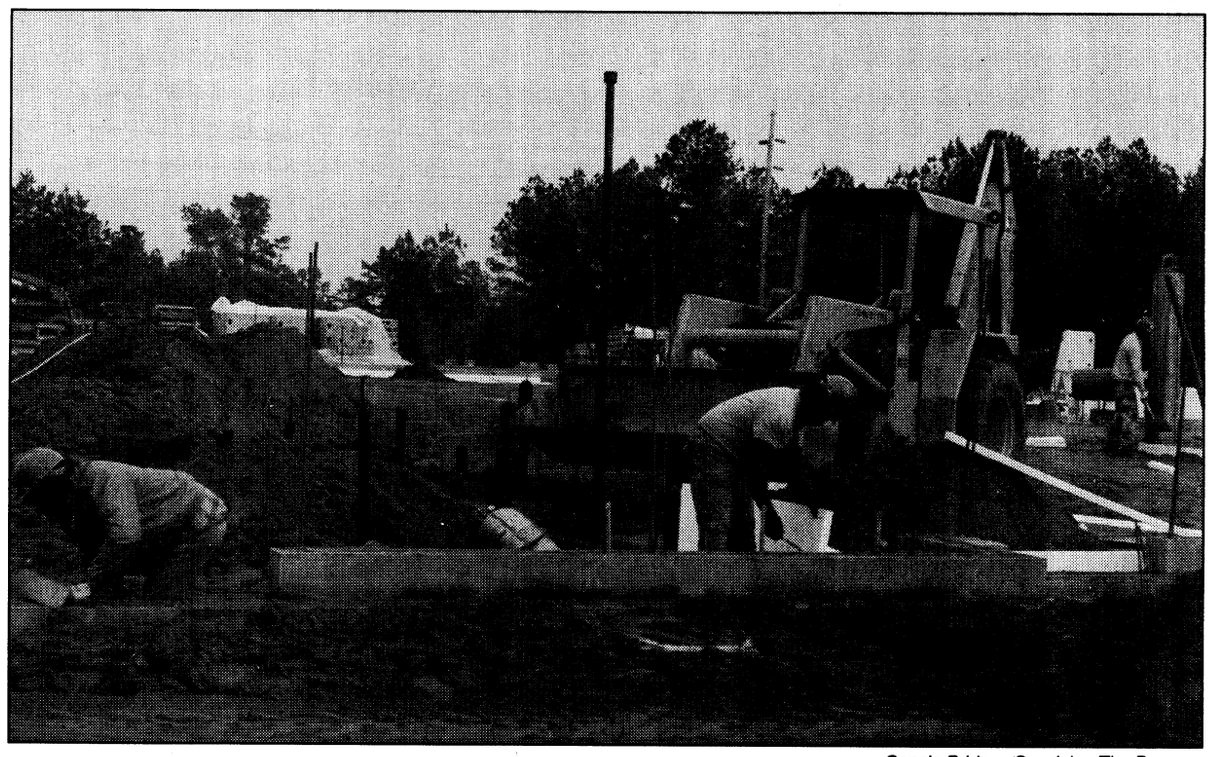
Child care projects started



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Workers prepare the construction site of a new child care center on Fort Benning.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A combined project involving the construction of two new facilities for Child Development Services is under way at Fort Benning with both slated to be completed in 1992, according to Jennifer Williams, coordinator for Child Development Services on post.

The first one expected to be completed this summer is across Ingersol Street from Faith Middle School. It will have a capacity for 99 children.

The other facility will be able to accommodate 198 and is being built next to Dental Clinic 1 on old Dixie Road. Its completion is planned for November or December of this year.

Williams said both will provide full-time day care for working parents and may offer preschool and special needs care. This will be determined as time draws closer to actually opening these child care centers.

Parents interested in taking advantage of these facilities should register at the Central Registration Office for Child Development Services in Building 11302 on Custer Road across from McBride School.

Both centers will care for children ages 6 weeks to 12 years with rates determined by Department of Defense policy based on total income.

According to Williams, the project began in 1985 when Child Development Services started looking at the long waiting lists on post for child care.

Currently about 300 are on waiting lists, and these facilities should help remedy the problem significantly, said Williams.

Post crime rates drop

Statistics reflect a 7 percent decrease

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Crimes occurring on Fort Benning are on the decline, according to statistics released in the quarterly Crime Prevention Council meeting.

Fort Benning's crimes overall have decreased 7 percent for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1991, compared to the reported crime rate for last quarter, said Janie Harris, crime intelligence assistant for the Military Police Activity .

Crimes that take place and are reported on post are broken down into the following categories -- crimes of violence, crimes against property, drug crimes, traffic accidents and drunk driving, said Capt. Richard Gregory, chief of Law Enforcement Services at MPA.

Statistics released in the quarterly meeting, as reported by Gregory and Harris, are as follows:

Crimes of violence, to include assault, aggravated assault, murder robbery, child abuse and domestic violence, decreased 16 percent over the previous quarter, according to Harris.

There were 83 offenses this quarter, compared to the 99 offenses last quarter.

There has been a 64 percent decrease in child abuse over the previous quarter, with 11 cases reported last quarter compared to the four that were reported this quarter.

Domestic disturbances remained stable, with 29 cases reported last quarter and 31 reported this quarter.

In post housing areas, Custer Terrace had the most reported crimes of violence with 13 reports, and seven of those were cases of domestic violence, said Harris.

McGraw Manor reported eight crimes of violence, five of those reported as domestic violence crimes. Indianhead Terrace reported two crimes of violence, both incidents of domestic violence; Davis Hill reported one assault; Bouton Heights reported five crimes of violence, three of them incidents of domestic violence; Battle Park reported one assault and one child abuse case; and Upatoi Terrace reported two domestic disputes, said Harris.

Crimes against property, including larcenies (i.e., auto theft and shoplifting), forgery, misappropriation of property, were down by 11 percent this quarter. There were 519 cases reported this quarter, compared to the 580 cases reported last quarter.

House break-ins have remained stable, but automobile thefts are up 45 percent, with 11 cases reported this quarter, as opposed to the six reported last quarter.

Shoplifting contributed to 25 percent of the 319 larcenies reported this quarter.

The number of reported drug crimes increased slightly this quarter, from 13 cases reported last quarter to 22 this quarter.

Drug crimes are broken down into two categories: drug possession, which include testing positive for drug use on a urinalysis test; and trafficking, which is the selling of illegal drugs, said Gregory.

A substantial number of these drug offenses are not reported.

"The provost marshal requests that all commanders comply with Army regulations concerning this matter," said Gregory. "It is a serious offense and must treated as such.

Anyone reported as possessing or trafficking drugs will appear on the military police blotter," said Gregory.

Drunk driving decreased 7 percent over the previous quarter. There were 121 citations for drunk driving issued last quarter, compared to 112 issued this quarter.

Traffic accidents increased 5 percent this quarter. There were 199 accidents last quarter, compared to the 210 accidents reporter this quarter.

"Compared to last quarter, crime has decreased on Fort Benning," said Harris.

"Based on the trends in crime as shown by these and other statistics, MPA constantly reallocates our patrol and manpower resources to better serve the post," said Gregory.

Employees awarded for suggestions

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Two Fort Benning civilian employees received awards for their Army Ideas for Excellence Suggestion Program proposals.

Dollie N. Stutson and Madge Prebish, both of the Adjutant General's office, were honored for their ideas Monday by Chief of Staff Col. John D. Fuller.

Prebish was awarded $5,280 for her suggestion proposing that a local area network be installed within the AG complex at Soldier's Plaza.

AG officials say implementation of this system has brought soldier personnel services at Fort Benning to a level that has not been attainable until now.

The annual savings to Fort Benning is $116,570.

Stutson was commended for a suggestion that proposed the accountability of identification cards be stored on diskettes to eliminate manual record keeping. Stutson's suggestion saved the post an annual $10,917.

A Fort Benning soldier assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, has recently been chosen as the Army's most outstanding athlete.

Martin Strmiska, a wrestler who is ranked second in the nation according to All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas, has won many titles in his chosen sport.

He was the 1991 Armed Forces Freestyle champion, Outstanding Wrestler at the Armed Forces Wrestling Championships and 1991 Armed Forces Greco-Roman champ.

Strmiska will have to go through the process again in the near future as he competes against some of the world's best amateur wrestlers at the All-Army Trial Camp in an effort to make the All-Army team.

Strmiska is a native of California and started wrestling when he was 6 years old. His goals are lofty ones — he hopes to someday win Olympic gold and a world championship.

Local team changes name

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Columbus Indians have been changed to the Columbus RedStixx, but the second-year South Atlantic League franchise will continue its affiliation with the parent club, the Cleveland Indians of the American League.

General Manager John Dittrich and Henry Gilbertie, club president, chose the name after consulting with Frank Schnell of the Columbus Museum.

"A faction of the Muscogee Indian nation was determined to preserve their heritage and homeland. They had deep faith in their own courage and invincibility and fought fiercely, because of this they became known as RedStixx Warriors," said Schnell.

The name met two criteria for the club. One, it maintained an Indian connotation, which the club wanted not only for the parent club but also for the strong Indian heritage in this region. Two, they wanted something unique to help with merchandising and to promote the ball club.

The RedStixx, home opener will be April 11.

Buffer zone off limits to hunters

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's buffer zone policy on hunting and training areas was addressed in a Dec. 18 meeting held by Chief of Staff Col. John D. Fuller with Fort Benning hunters.

During the meeting, Fuller addressed the issues surrounding the recent change to the existing buffer zone policy that were raised as a result of hunters entering active military training areas which were closed to hunters at the time.

Since that meeting, the commanding general has decided that Fort Benning's buffer zone policy would return to what is stated in paragraph 2, U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-2:

•The perimeter of the Fort Benning Military Reservation is marked by signs which read: "Military Reservation—Keep Out. Sportsmen must confine hunting and fishing to the Reservation, unless permission has been obtained from private property owners for hunting and fishing rights.

•Restricted areas are areas designated by the commanding general and are marked with appropriate warning signs. Additional areas are designated as exclusion areas. You cannot hunt or fish in exclusion areas as shown on the hunting and fishing maps.

•Fort Benning Military Reservation Map 1:50,000 is used to control hunting and fishing activities. All sportsmen are required to familiarize themselves with this map and the reservation prior to engaging in these activities on the reservation. All roadblocks, cables or gates will not be bypassed in vehicle or on foot for any reason

In areas open to hunting, the regulation states:

•At no time will anyone discharge firearms within 50 feet of named roads, buildings, or posted troop areas. No person within 200 yards of a named road, building, ammunition storage area, active airfield, or posted no hunting area will discharge a weapon in the direction thereof.

•The use of off-road vehicles of all types (two-wheel, three-wheel and four-wheel) is prohibited while hunting or fishing on the Fort Benning Military Reservation. Off-road vehicle is defined as any motorized vehicle designed primarily for, or capable of, cross-country travel on or immediately over land, water, marsh, swamp land or other natural terrain. Requests for exception to this policy are limited to those persons w i addressed in writing to the Director of Engineering and Housing. Requests for use of off-road vehicles for other than hunting or fishing activities will be addressed to Director of Community Activities (Refer to USAIC Supplement 1 to Army Regulation 210-9).

This is the first in a series of articles about hunting.

Deer season ends

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 1991-92 Fort Benning deer season closed Jan. 15. According to Tom Brooks, a wildlife biologist with the Department of Natural Resources, the number of deer brought to the deer check station during the season (more than 170 were turned in) represent about 10 percent of the deer harvested on post.

The deer kill cards that hunters turn in at the end of the season will help to determine the total number of deer harvested this year, Brooks said.

The information gathered at the check station will be sent to the Georgia Department of Natural Resources for further study and will help the department make their recommendations for the following hunting season.

Mission completed

1st Bn., 29th Cougars examine skills, strengths

By Scott Spanial
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The soldiers of the "Pioneer" 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment conducted "Pioneer Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System Course" from Dec. 9 to 13. The course tests each individual's skills and it tests each squad as it must integrate each soldier's skills, strengths and weaknesses to accomplish the mission.

Execution of the Pioneer MILES course fell to the Cougars of Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. They created a challenging training course for the battalion. According to Sgt. 1st Class Robert Ross, 2nd Platoon segeant, met the challenge with enthusiasm and ingenuity, excelling at the task.

"The exercise itself is a flexible framework into which any combination of battle drills can be applied," said Ross.

Ross said that the battalion issued a fragmentary order and each squad leader issued his order before coming to the site.

"Once at the sight, I reminded the squad of the tasks to be evaluated, the conditions they would perform in, and the standard they would be evaluated by" said Ross.

The opposing forces who provided the opponent expertise necessary for the practical exercise portion helped out. Ross said he also seized that opportunity to train the opposing forces as well.

Spc. Willi Maki was part of the opposing forces. "The soldiers in the battalion did fairly well across the board, " Maki said, "everyone in the battalion, mechanics and everyone, participated."

Pvt. 2 Brendt Jacobsen, 2nd platoon, Company C, said he viewed the exercise as a "great refresher."

"We used teamwork we don't really get to practice in the motor pool and on commitments," he said.

Staff Sgt. Gary Witherspoon, squad leader 2nd Platoon, Company C, said, "I enjoyed Pioneer MILES because it's one of the few opportunities we get to demonstrate our skills as a squad. We don't get to practice this type of teamwork on a day to day basis as a squad."

According to Capt. Frank Milinari, company commander, the day-to-day support mission of the Pioneer Battalion, for the U. S. Army Infantry Center, stresses maintenance training on their vast fleet of vehicles.

"The Pioneer Miles provides the soldiers and small unit leaders interesting, and challenging basic unit skills training," Milinari said. "It is a realistic, participation-

Rappelling part of 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment's duty

By Richard C. McInnis and Aurelio Feliberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, conducted a rappelling clinic recently. The troops were instructed in basic knot tying, making a Swiss seat harness and various rappelling techniques.

"The reason for this exercise was primarily to build the soldiers' confidence," said Capt. Steven McCorkle, company commander. "And you never know when you may need a skill like rappelling."

Each of the four platoons rotated through the towers, with the remaining three platoons practicing squad battle drills in the woodline nearby.

Each platoon spent an average of two hours learning to rappel. "On rappel? On belay?" yells Pvt. Eric Bean, radio-telephone operator, 3rd Platoon, Company D, as he prepares to go over the ledge of the 30-foot wall.

Initially, soldiers stepped off the 30-foot tower to give the basic experience; then they were given a chance to try a rappel from the 55-foot tower. After their training, each soldier carried a slightly larger ego and a sense of accomplishment.

"At first, I was not going to try it — it looked too high," said Bean. "But everyone else went off the 55-foot tower, so I felt I had to go. It wasn't so bad. I might even do it again — tomorrow."

50th anniversary commemoration relives Tarawa Atoll in miniature battle

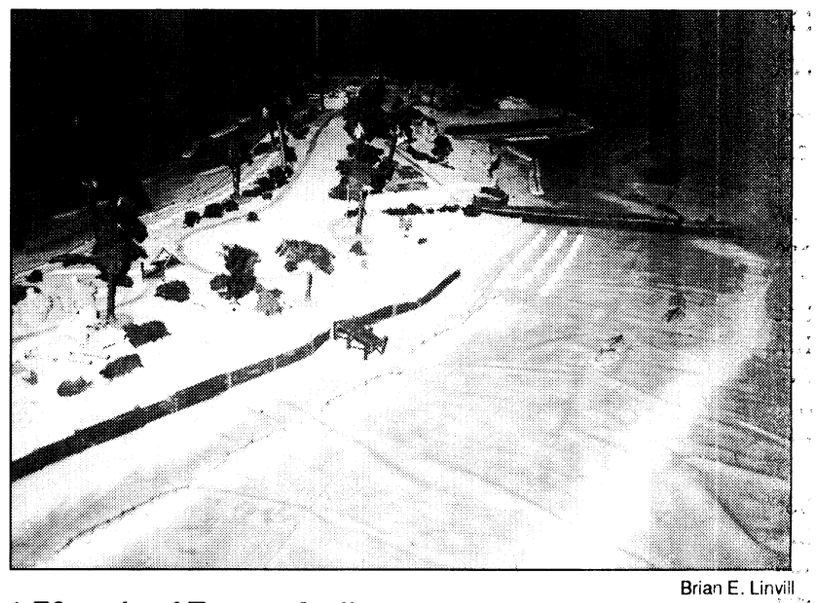
By Brian E. Linvill
Military History Division

"We hit the beaches at 3:30 p.m. and were immediately pinned down by heavy machine gun fire coming from hidden enemy positions in the pier to our left. As the bullets chewed up the sand around us we were able to observe the second wave as it established a toehold on the far end of the island. Japanese defenders poured from their bunkers to establish a defensive line, and the assault was stopped cold. By the time the third wave approached, the enemy defense was set, the guns crewed, and our comrades were cut down in the water."

This is the battle account as experienced by Maj. Bob Leonhard, from the Directorate of Combat Developments, during the invasion of the Tarawa Atoll. The date? Not 1943, but Dec. 7, 1991... in a miniature recreation of the battle during the Pearl Harbor 50th Anniversary Historical Commemoration held at the National Infantry Museum.

Leonhard commanded the operations of the U.S. invasion force during the simulation. The miniature Japanese defenders were commanded by Capt. Terry Ernest, a small group instructor for Infantry Officers Advanced Course.

The battle was hosted by the Historical Miniatures Gaming Society, an organization dedicated to the promotion and expansion of historical miniatures gaming.



Brian E. Linvill

1:76 scale of Tarawa Atoll.

"The battle was one of the bloodiest in the history of World War II, and the lessons learned there helped prepare for many operations yet to come," said Rick Nance who recreated the battle in miniature to learn more and teach others about this spectacular operation. Nance constructed the impressive 18 foot diorama of Tarawa, replete with miniature soldiers, tanks, landing craft, ships, and aircraft. He brought it all the way from Kansas for the commemoration. Also on Saturday, the group's mid-south representative retired Maj. Bill Harting provided a miniature naval refight of the Battle of Java Sea, an engagement fought between a Japanese fleet and a combined Allied fleet of American, British, and Dutch origin. "Historically an Allied defeat, the battle sealed the fate of the Dutch East Indies.", said Harting. In the simulation, the Allies fared better, fighting the Japanese warships to a draw. The participants of both battles were composed of Infantry School students, Fort Benning soldiers, and civilians. Nance and Harting were special guests of the Infantry School Military History Division.

Anyone interested in the group or miniature gaming in general may contact the group, c/o Maj. Bill Harting, Route 2, Box 1008, Estill Springs, Tenn. 37330, or in Columbus, call Mike Graziano at 324-1196.

World War II— a look back

By Eric Holloway
Military History Division

Fifty years ago Jan. 18 to 24 during World War II :

• A surprise German-Italian offensive in North Africa largely destroys the British Second Armored Brigade. The British will withdraw to positions in front of Tobruk by the end of the month.

• The last German strongholds near Moscow are giving way to both the Russian Army and the Russian winter. With temperatures often below minus 25, the devastated German forces are not a serious threat to the capital any longer.

• The U.S. Navy saw its first surface naval action since 1898 in the Battle of the Macassar Strait off the coast of Borneo. Four U.S. destroyers and U.S. submarines sink four transports and a destroyer from a Japanese invasion force.

• German officials outline the "final solution" to the Jewish question at the Wannsee Conference outside Berlin.

• A report by the Roberts Commission on Pearl Harbor fixes blame on the Army and Navy commanders there.

• Here at Fort Benning Maj. Gen. George Patton assumed command of the First Armored Corps.

• In a gesture of goodwill, a touring troupe of Russian Cossack dancers entertained 25 Fort Benning soldiers in the Lanett, Ga. theater.

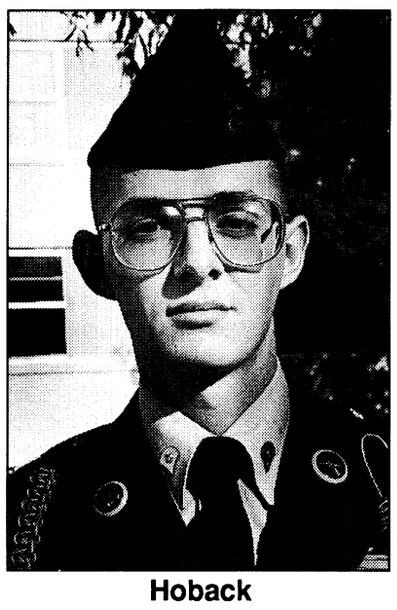
Pace recently returned to his hometown, Columbus, Ga., from his first overseas assignment in Berlin, Germany. "I'm glad to be stationed at Fort Benning because I can visit my family whenever I want," Pace said.

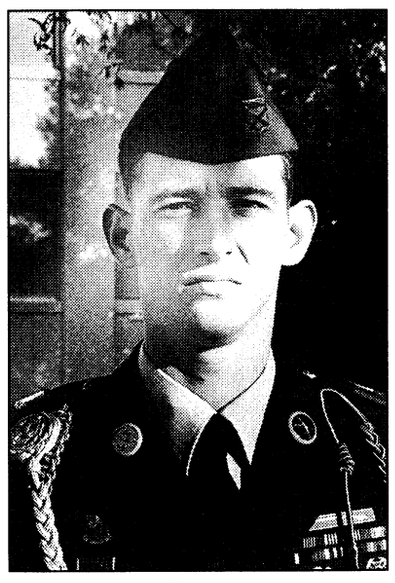
Having previously taken the Berlin Brigade's Soldier of the Year honors and placing second in the U.S. Army, Europe board, Pace continued his success in the 3rd Bde.

"I've only been in the brigade for about four months and with this present victory, I plan to attend and win the future post- and Forces Command-level NCO competitions this year," he said.

Unlike Pace, who has more experience with the way boards are conducted, Hoback's first board was his unit's E-5 promotion board.



Hoback



Pace

Hoback, a native of Springfield, Mo., enlisted in August 1988 and his present duty station is his first. He presently serves as a grenadier in his squad.

"I felt a little reluctant at first, but everyone seemed to back me up with the idea of competing in the soldier of the quarter board so I decided to give it a try," Hoback said.

"After I finished my promotion board the battalion sergeant major told me it would be a good idea to go for the board," said Hoback.

"My first sergeant gave me the regulations I needed and drilled me on likely board questions throughout the day. Where the first sergeant left off with study questions during the duty day, my wife, Kathy, would take over at night," he added.

Hoback's wife was not the only one helping her husband study for the board. "My wife, Sigrid, would quiz me also," said Pace.

"Soldiers desiring to go to the boards should become aware of all the major Army programs on post and just be ready for the unexpected question," Pace added.

For his part, Hoback advised other soldiers preparing for Army boards not to only use soldier guides, but also to study various field manuals and have someone quiz them "because it's easier to retain the information that way."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Yeah, I'll be the first to admit it. I'm absolutely stumped by all of these income tax forms. And they keep getting more complex every year. I'm thinking about going to a tax preparing service off post and paying to have my taxes done for me. Is there any help available on post?

A: Yes, there is help available on Fort Benning and it's free. The Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate provides tax assistance to soldiers and family members in many ways.

Unit Tax Advisors

An important component of the program is the soldiers designated from each unit to serve as Unit Tax Advisors. The UTA is the first source of information and assistance. UTAs receive extensive training for one week from the Internal Revenue Service and the Georgia Department of Revenue.

If the UTA is unable to resolve a particular tax problem, personnel will be available at the Tax Office for more in-depth assistance.

The Tax Office will be located in building 5, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, and will open Feb. 3. The office hours will be 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Some federal and state forms will be available at the Tax Office. However, if you are in need of any forms, particularly state income tax forms, you should stop by the Tax Office early in the tax season. Thus, if the Tax Office does not have the forms that you need, you will still have time to request them from the tax authorities.

Representatives from the Legal Assistance Division will be at the Main Post Exchange Feb. 8, March 7 and April 4 from 9:30 a.m.to 1 p.m. to prepare tax returns. Those seeking assistance must bring their own tax forms, W-2s and other necessary paperwork. Some federal forms will be available for pick-up. The same on-site tax assistance will be available April 15 from 6 p.m. to midnight at the Fort Benning Main Post Office, although it is recommended that you not wait until the last minute to file.

Electronic filing

The Tax Office will be filing tax returns electronically this year. The advantage to electronic filing is that, if the return is properly prepared and transmitted, any refund will reach the tax payer much faster than the conventional filing by mail process. Questions regarding electronic tax filing should first be directed to the soldier's UTA.

The current tax laws require every person in the United States, age 1 or older to have a social security number before that person can be claimed as a dependent on a tax return. Failure to include the number on the tax return may result in the deduction for that dependent being disallowed.

To assist in obtaining social security numbers for soldiers' dependents, the Legal Assistance Division has arranged for the Social Security Office to accept applications on post Feb. 10. Applications will be accepted between 10 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.. at the Main Post Chapel Center, building 101, located next to Doughboy Stadium, at the corner of Brockman and Lauber Streets. Applicants must bring a certified copy of the person's birth certificate and some other type of identification such as a driver's license, U.S. passport, voter-registration card, school records, or shot records of the person for whom you wish to obtain a number.

Call the Tax Office at 545-1506 for information.

Hot advice for cold weather preparation

Infantry Branch Safety Office

When a person gets so chilled that his or her body cannot warm up, it's called hypothermia. It's most common in cold temperatures, but some people (such as infants and the elderly) can suffer hypothermia when it's as warm as 70 F. Hypothermia can be fatal. But its risks can be avoided and its effects can be less serious if you take care and use first aid quickly.

People who are not prepared for a change in weather may not dress properly. They can be at risk in even relatively mild temperatures. Water cools your body temperature 25 to 30 times faster than air, so falling into a 40 F lake can result in death within minutes.

The body's temperature is usually about 98.6 F. As body temperature drops, symptoms go through stages. In this first stage, people may have a hard time doing things. Next, speech becomes blurred. Victims may stumble, seem confused, or deny that they are cold or need medical attention. They may seem weak or tired. At this point shivering may stop. Breathing may be shallow and the pulse is hard to find. As the body gets colder, muscles become stiff, the heartbeat becomes uneven and unconsciousness sets in.

The elderly may have additional symptoms such as difficulty walking. One side of the body may tremble, or movements may be stiff. Skin may look bloated, pale, or blotchy and pink.

Even if you only suspect hypothermia, call an ambulance or doctor right away. It may be a life-or-death call. Then, use first aid, which can save the victim's life. Bring the person into a warm place. If that's impossible, shelter from any wind, rain, or snow and keep the head covered. Remove all wet clothing and bundle with dry blankets or dress in dry clothing. Don't rub or massage the victim or place the victim in hot water. Give warm beverages, but no alcohol or caffeine. if the person is conscious.

Chaplain discusses church as one body

By Benjamin L. Morrow
U. S. Infantry Training Center

REFLECTIONS

Throughout the New Testament, the Bible uses metaphors to address the subject of Christian unity and speaks of the interdependence Christians should have among ourselves.

In the 15th Chapter of the Gospel of St. John, Jesus speaks of himself as the "True Vine." In this metaphor, his disciples are referred to as branches that cannot live apart from the Vine.

During this week when emphasis is placed upon Christian unity, the theme of this metaphor will be relevant in understanding the significance of Christian unity, which should exist among those who comprise the Church of Jesus, since all believers in Christ Jesus, belong together as do branches of the same vine. To understand this is to overcome the need to see any individual, who is a part of the family of God, as being more important than another.

In 1 Corinthians 12:12ff, the Apostle Paul speaks of the church as the body of Christ. Here he speaks of the church as being Jesus in the world. As members of the body of Christ, each member has a vital part to play and each is of equal value. It is important to remember that this body of believers represents individuals instead of denominations, and their diversity of functions work harmoniously together in the unity of one body, the church.

In Ephesians 2:19ff, the Apostle Paul uses another metaphor and refers to the church as the household of God. Christians, who are the members of the household of God are built upon the foundation of prophets and apostles, with Jesus as the chief corner stone. Once again the emphasis is on unity. The whole structure is joined together in Christ. You may be asking, with so much talk of unity among Christians, why are there so many denominations in Christendom? An adequate answer to this question would require a lot. But like others who have been involved in dialogue about unity, or ecumenicity as the 20th century church has come to talk about it, I am aware of problems presented in discussing why there are so many denominations in Christendom. Suffice it to say, I know well how these divisions are often used as weapons against the church.

Though theological and sociological difficulties are real, there does exist between churches today, a mutual tolerance and willingness to explore the possibilities of coming together. Various churches unite both for worship and for the purpose of social ameliorations. A church united would be a dynamic instrument of mission to bring others to Christ, which is why Jesus prayed that his disciples may be one, as he and the Father are one. I think Charles Wesley stated it well when he said:

"He bids us build each other up;
and, gather into one,
To our high calling's glorious hope
We hand in hand go on."

This hope for unity requires an obedience of the church to the leading of the Holy Spirit.

Jewish holiday celebrates the importance of trees

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

On the hills surrounding Jerusalem, amid the melting snow, almond trees are blooming. TU B'SHEVAT, the festival of trees, has arrived.

The 15th day of the Hebrew month SHEVAT, also called TU B'SHEVAT, decreed the New Year's Day for trees by Hillel, a rabbinic sage who lived almost 2,000 years ago, falls on Monday this year.

But what does it mean? How do we celebrate? By worshipping trees? Not quite.

TU B'SHEVAT, initially intended as the day to mark off the years of a tree's existence to determine the time to tithe the tree's produce, has taken on even greater significance. In medieval Europe, the Jews of Spain, believing themselves to be the furthest removed from the Holy Land of Israel, would celebrate TU B'SHEVAT by eating the native fruits of Israel mentioned in the Bible (Deuteronomy 8:8) with great ceremony.

Today, in Israel, the most common way to celebrate the holiday is by planting trees. From 1891 to 1947, Jewish settlers planted trees to anchor the soil, drain the swamps and provide shelter for their homes and fields. Trees are still planted in Israel to beautify the land, retain the topsoil and contribute to the health of the environment.

Not only is TU B'SHEVAT the Jewish Arbor Day, it is also the Jewish Earth Day. It is a day to be conscious of the Earth's needs. Trees provide so many of those needs; carbon dioxide elimination, production of oxygen, preservation of soil, homes for the birds and the bees and shelter and shade for humanity.

Plant a tree on TU B'SHEVAT. Plant a tree Monday and celebrate a Jewish holiday. Plant a tree and add immeasurably to the health and long life of planet Earth.

Education service funds, staff limited for '92

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

During the first seven days of this fiscal year, which began Oct. 1, Fort Benning's Army Education Program issued $106,000 in tuition assistance to more than 750 soldiers. That was about half of its $219,000 1992 tuition assistance budget.

According to Dennis Fritts, educational services officer, tuition assistance will probably be out of funds by January at the latest. In 1991, the budget for this was $476,000.

However, due to military cutbacks, the Army Education Program has suffered substantial budget and personnel cuts.

For example, in 1987 when Fritts came to the post, the total program budget was $2 million. Today after five years of inflation, it's $1.3 million, and the staff has been cut from 32 to 27 civilian employees.

Yet with the downsizing of the Army, more and more soldiers are concerned about measuring up and trying to go back to school.

Fritts said that in fiscal 1991, even though half the military personnel on post were deployed in Desert Storm, his 13 guidance counselors put in 45,633 sessions helping soldiers make educational decisions.

"This was a tremendous load on the guidance counselors, one of the biggest I've discovered in the Army," Fritts said.

"But it's the dedication of the people who work here and believe in what they're doing -- looking for every possible way to help support the soldier -- that makes the program work."

Though not one to speak in his own behalf, Fritts is one of those people.

When troops deployed last year, it was he who personally made sure that soldiers would not have to take "incompletes" or lose course credit, but rather complete the requirements following their return.

It may have been very frustrating for the Army Education Program staff when funding keeps getting reduced, but Fritts believes in keeping the momentum going. His son once told him that he must "use smoke and mirrors" like a magician to get as much done as he does.

It would appear his secret his persistence. In 21 years in the education field, Fritts has taken only three hours of sick leave. He also says he has a high tolerance for frustration.

Fritts

He entered his chosen field after serving as an Army officer in Vietnam.

After his return he discovered that the Army Education Program was the best place for soldiers to gett assistance for academic programs.

After resigning his commission, Fritts earned his master's degree and took a job as an educational services specialist at Fort Belvoir, Va. He then spent three years in Bremerhaven, Germany. He served at the Educational Service Office with the Training and Doctrine Command Educational Staff at Fort Monroe, Va., and then went to White Sands, N.M., before coming to Fort Benning.

"The Fort Benning Army Education Program has a basic mission to serve all active duty and assist Army Reserve and national Guard soldiers within a geographical area that includes 50 counties in Georgia, 24 in Florida and nine in Alabama," Fritts said

. "In addition, they have "space available" options for family members and the post civilian work force in regard to counseling services and the PLATO Program facilities.

PLATO is a a computer program that allows for the self-teaching of certain academic and military courses. There are now 30 terminals with another 20 expected sometime in the next fiscal year.

When Fritts came, this program was poorly utilized, about 30 hours per terminal. Now the average use is about 100 hours per terminal.

He also noted that Fort Benning is fortunate to have the Troy State program on post. Family members get their first course free, and the book can be rented so there's no large expense.

The Army Education Program has three branches, Soldier's Plaza, one on Kelley Hill and one for Sand Hill/Harmony Church, along with two Learning Centers and a Military Occupational Specialty library for researching and preparing for skill qualifications tests.

Fritts said the post is currently looking for more local funding to somehow continue the Basic Skills Education Programs, a math and English review that helps soldiers advance in the Army. Last year 1,486 enrolled.

Because there has been so much interest in all of these offerings, he believes the cutbacks are hurting this post more than most.

More emphasis is being placed on College Level Examination Program tests for testing out o courses, PLATO courses and Pel grants from the government t undergraduates based on lowe income requirements.

Artist visits school

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Edward A. White School is hosting Matthew Shelton as its artist-in-residence through Jan. 31. Shelton's residency is sponsored by the Georgia Council for the Arts and the Fort Benning Schools.

Shelton, a professional harmonica player, will be instructing White School students on the fundamentals of playing the harmonica by teaching them to play traditional and contemporary tunes. He will also conduct three harmonica sessions for Fort Benning adults.

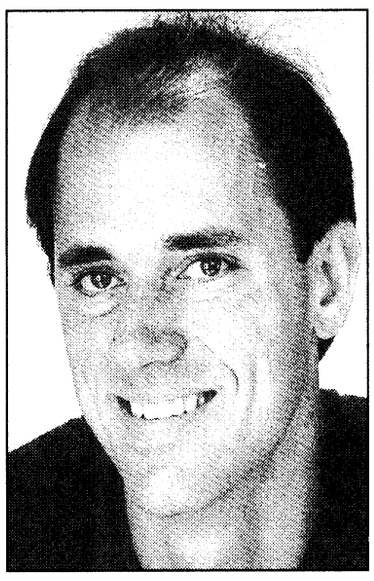
Shelton teaches harmonica using a system in which a color coded chart shows the notes that correspond with the 10 holes on the diatonic harmonica.

It is not necessary to have had prior musical training to learn to play the harmonica using this method.

Matthew Shelton has enjoyed teaching privately for six years. He has traveled as far as Tokyo to meet and learn from his favorite harmonica artists.

He has used harmonica as part of his original compositions for Theatre at Atlanta's Alliance, Academy, and Seven Stages Theatres. He has also played solo and in several bands.

He is also a twice-produced playwright, and currently is serving as an artist in residence in several schools in Georgia.



Shelton

White School students, staff, and parents are looking forward to the new and different musical opportunities that Shelton's three week residency will bring.

Harmonica lessons offered at White

Fort Benning Schools

Adult harmonica lessons will be taught, at no charge, on two Thursday evenings at White Elementary School.

The sessions will be open to all Fort Benning personnel. They will start at 7 p.m. on the Jan. 23 and 30. These two sessions are for anyone interested in learning to play the harmonica. Beginning or advanced students are welcome.

Prior musical training is not necessary to attend any of the lessons for adults. Harmonicas will be available at the museum for use or can be purchased at local music stores. All other instructional materials will be provided.

Although reservations for the sessions are not necessary, class space is limited. Those wishing to participate should phone White School at 545-4623 for registration and further information.

Use shops for repairs, not yard

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The auto craft shops and not the housing areas are the proper places to make car repairs, according to U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-50.

Although soldiers receive a copy of housing area regulations when they move on post, there always seems to be infractions.

Sgt. lst Class James Nelson of MPA said that USAIC Regulation 210-50 in Section 4 under General Housekeeping states that "Occupants are not permitted to perform major repairs and maintenance on motor vehicles within the housing areas."

This involves leaving "vehicles on jack stands, or to leave component parts apart from the vehicle."

The consequences are that any vehicle found dismantled or abandoned will be impounded by the Military Police with the report of action forwarded to the owner's commander.

Also, inoperable and unlicensed vehicles are not to be parked in th family housing areas.

Nelson said that this regulatio has been in effect since March 21 1983 and should not be news t anyone on post.

According to the regulation, n one should do maintenance on the cars in the housing areas.

There are two auto craft shop available for use by soldiers o post. One on Main Post on Wa Street just off Sightseeing Roa behind the 75th Ranger Regimer and the one on Kelley Hill c Marne Road.

The workshop for Fort Benning elementary teachers was part of the ongoing staff development activities that take place dring the school year.

Volunteering offers rewards

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Donna Ziegler says that volunteering at the Thrift Shop on Fort Benning has been a way for her to make some great friends and also served as her main break from family responsibilities during the difficult time of Desert Shield/Storm when her husband was overseas.

The Thrift Shop is run by the Officers' Wives Club, and Ziegler is impressed by its ability to give back to the community.

According to President Kathy Henderson, OWC currently has about 350 members, and of the Welfare Fund monies that it distributes annually, 80 percent come from Thrift Shop profits.

Last year more than $20,000 was distributed to such agencies as Army Community Services, the National Infantry Museum, Martin Army Community Hospital Family Advocacy Program, the Early Childhood Development Center, Santa's Castle, the First Steps Program, the Fort Benning Schools Fine Arts Program and scholarships.

Zeigler

Ziegler was a recipient of some of those OWC scholarship funds. She is working on her master's degree in human resource management at Troy State University.

The Zieglers moved to Fort Benning four years ago, and she became a first-time volunteer a few months later.

She found that taking advantage of the Child Care Program for volunteers gave her the opportunity for adult interaction with the opportunity to give something back to the community — a way of making a difference.

Her husband, Charles, is with Headquarters 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Division, and they have about a year left on post. Their children are: Angela, 11; Jason, 7; Megan, 5; Jacob, 4; and Alex, 22 months.

Ziegler said she plans to continue volunteering while the children are young. Then she wants to use her degree.

"Our goal is to have Charles retire from the Army, teach college part time and stay home with the kids. Then I get to go to work."

Matthau is drawn into another 'Incident'

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

For some performers, certain roles deserve repeating, as Walter Matthau evidently feels by reprising one this week.

The Academy Award and Tony Award-winning actor returns Sunday in his part from the Emmy-winning 1989 drama "The Incident" in the new CBS drama "Against Her Will: An Incident in Baltimore," written by fellow returnees Michael and James Norell, who earned Christopher and Writers Guild honors for their original script. Again set in the 1940s, it makes lawyer Harmon Cobb (Matthau) the defense attorney for a young woman (Bridgit Ryan) who has been committed to a state-operated mental institution in Maryland. Her boyfriend (Bruce Kirkpatrick) contends that she is being kept there wrongly, and despite the belief voiced by Cobb's longtime judicial acquaintance (Harry Morgan, also repeating his part from the first "Incident") that the state is immune legally from such matters under common law, the characteristically stubborn Cobb pursues a lawsuit anyway. Directed by Oscar-winner Delbert ("Marty") Mann, the story also features Susan Blakely — back again as Cobb's widowed daughter-in-law — and Brian ("Switched at Birth") Kerwin.

"After the first film," the droll but friendly Matthau recalls, "we talked it over and decided to do three more, provided each one gets good ratings. If they don't, we don't do any more, but I looked at the script (for 'Against Her Will') and thought it was fine. It's a good story, it's interesting, and we did the best we could with it. I generally don't like to do sequels, and once I do a character, I like to be done with it ... but this was such a pleasant situation, with good writers, directors and auspices (including executive producer Robert Halmi, who also made 'Lonesome Dove' and Matthau's last TV-movie, 1991's 'Mrs. Lambert Remembers Love'), it was hard to turn down. It was especially hard for a fellow like me, who is not getting all the Kevin Costner parts anymore." Actually, Matthau currently shares a scene with Costner by making a cameo appearance in director Oliver Stone's highly controversial film "JFK."

As for entertaining the notion of playing Cobb over a series of "Incident" projects, Matthau reasons, "It's a marriage on both sides. I'm comfortable with Harmon Cobb, and I'm sure he's comfortable with me." Claiming that "One two-hour show a year is (a matter of) hardly working," the actor chuckles that the return of so many of the original participants "just goes to show what a dearth of employment there is today." Stating that he doesn't know any details yet of the other two proposed "Incident" chapters, Matthau adds, "I think they're waiting to see how this one comes out (in the Nielsens). If it does all right, then they'll go ahead."

While he says he was pleased that the first "Incident" fared so well with viewers and critics alike, Matthau turns humorously cynical in discussing the various honors that it eventually won. "I never can figure out, for example, how a guy can win the award for 'Best Screenplay by a Turkish Writer Under Age 22'," he muses. "How do they come up with these categories? Also, how do all the actors and the producer win awards for a movie, but the director does not? I don't pay too much attention to awards, then, though I guess other people's jobs depend on that. I only hope and wish for the best, once I do something." Even when asked to be a presenter at a ceremony — as at the Kennedy Center Honors edition that saluted Billy Wilder, the director who guided him to an Oscar in 1966's "The Fortune Cookie" — Matthau maintains, "I always try to get out of those things, but they rope me into them. They tell me it's part of the business, that it's necessary and that you've gotta do 'em, but I always think it's a little bit embarrassing. There's no such thing as the 'best' anything, and as far as I can see, the only real competition is

Columbus Symphony Orchestra to feature guest violinist February 1

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The next Columbus Symphony Orchestra Masterpiece series concert will feature a guest violinist, Dylana Jenson, and will be conducted by CSO's assistant conductor and concertmaster, Patricio Cobos. The concert is scheduled for 8 p.m., Feb. 1, at the Three Arts Theatre. Cobos will give a free preconcert lecture on the evening's selections at 7 p.m.

Jenson will perform the popular Tchaikovsky Violin Concerto and the remainder of the program will be given over to Debussy's Prelude to Afternoon of a Faun and Symphony No. 3 (Rhenish) by Robert Schumann.

Jenson has received unparalleled critical acclaim since her debut at the age of 8 in California as soloist in the Mendelssohn Concerto with the Long Beach Symphony. At 11, she played the Tchaikovsky Concerto on tour with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, the Cincinnati Enquirer hailing her "uncompromising and deeply musical artistry."

As a child prodigy, she also appeared with the New York Philharmonic at Lincoln Center and traveled to Europe and Latin America for concerts, recitals and recordings. She substituted for Nathan Milstein at the Carinthian Summer Festival in Austria. When she substituted for Pinchas Zuckerman at 13 in West Germany, Ruhr-Nachrichten called her "one of the few extraordinary violin soloists of the world." At the Tchaikovsky Competition in Moscow, she won the Silver Medal at 17 (the youngest ever and first American woman violinist) and the USSR's Tass called her "the authentic discovery of the competition."

The New York Times proclaimed her "a mature master" after her Carnegie Hall debut at 19 in a performance of the Sibelius Concerto with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia Orchestra. She has since been soloist with major orchestras and conductors in the United States, Europe, Japan, Latin America, Australia and the Soviet Union.

Jenson and her cellist-conductor-composer husband, British-born David Lockington, reside in New York with their daughter, Eva.

Matthau

between whether you do good work or poor work."

A couple of years ago, playwright Neil Simon — whose works have yielded many acting vehicles for Matthau, including "Plaza Suite" and "I Ought to Be in Pictures" — was rumored to have been working on an "Odd Couple" movie sequel that would restore Matthau to his Tony-winning portrayal of sloppy sportswriter Oscar Madison, with Jack Lemmon also back as the latter's compulsively tidy counterpart Felix Unger. However, Matthau reveals, "I think it's in the ashcan. It sort of fell apart. I asked why, and someone told me that a head of a studio said, 'Look, we're really not interested in anything that has do with people over 25, or that will not interest an audience that's under 25.'" Matthau acknowledges that NBC has been developing an "Odd Couple" follow-up with the stars of the television version.

Post updates alcohol policy

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning may be a more amiable place to socialize soon because of the enforcement of a recent policy memorandum, according to Darlene Perry, community life officer.

A policy memo was issued in late October to clarify prohibitions against alcohol, loud music and profanity on Fort Benning.

Policy Memo 91-26, dated Oct. 29, set the guidelines for these topics, including the unit chain of command's responsibility for ensuring soldiers are adhering to the policy.

The memo is an update of the memo dated Dec. 19, 1990, and was released as a reminder to soldiers of their responsibilities for proper conduct.

"This policy has been in effect for many years," said Perry.

The following acts, unless authorized by the commander are prohibited:

•The consumption of alcoholic beverages in all public areas on Fort Benning. This neither applies to facilities authorized by law or regulation, nor does it apply to the post commander or his delegate to sell alcoholic beverages for on-premises consumption.

Such facilities include the post exchange snack bar, dining areas and non-appropriated fund activities such as the Officers' Club, Main NCO and Hidden Door clubs, golf course, bowling centers, Uchee Creek and the Destin recreation center.

Unit commanders may request, through the Directorate of Community Activities,from the post commander the authority to provide alcoholic beverages for unit parties, functions and picnics.

The authorized commander is responsible for the conduct of all individuals attending such functions.

43rd to go to Costa Rica

Engineers are heading out today to build roads, bridges

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion have packed their bags and are heading to Costa Rica today.

Around 111 soldiers from Headquarters Support Company and Company C were scheduled to leave Lawson Army Airfield this morning to participate in an exercise dubbed "Caminos de La Paz '92" or "Road of Peace."

According to Capt. Gilbert Kittrell, battalion communications officer, the 43rd will be involved in construction work.

"What the unit will be doing is building roads and bridges and working on schools," said Kittrell, who added that other U.S. military units including active Army, Army and Air Force Reserve, and Army and Air National Guard units will participate also.

The exercise, which will take place in the provinces of Limon and Heredia, was arranged by the U.S. Southern Command and will include engineer, logistics, aviation, medical and security personnel.

In addition to construction work, the 43rd will provide command and control and logistical support for the Reserve and National Guard units that will rotate on a two-week basis.

According to Kittrell, the 43rd is scheduled to return in early May.

An advance party of about 60 soldiers from the 43rd left Lawson Army Airfield Jan. 15 to establish a 350-man base camp in the town of Puerto Viejo for the units scheduled to deploy over the next four months.

Kittrell added that the equipment the unit is taking with it has already been loaded on railcars and sent to Mobile, Ala., to be placed on ships to Costa Rica.

ACAP celebrates grand opening

The new building that will house the Army Career and Alumni Program was officially opened in a ceremony Jan. 17 .

The ceremony took place at Building 2617, the new home for ACAP, in Soldiers' Plaza.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander, was on hand to give the official remarks at the ceremony.

"It's hard to transition out of the Army, voluntarily or otherwise," said White. "But, it's also good to know that the Army will take care of its own. This program, ACAP, will help people ... to leave the Army with the honor and dignity that they came and served in the Army with. This is a great day — a day to say that Fort Benning has a program to give the soldier the help he or she needs," said White.

43rd's dining facility wins award

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Members of the staff of the 43rd Combat Engineer Battalion (Heavy) dining facility received recognition for maintaining the post's best dining facility for 1991. The staff received an award at a brief ceremony Monday at 11 a.m at the dining facility.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander, awarded the former facility manager and non-commissioned officer in charge, Sgt. 1st Class Roderick Piggot, a plaque and certificate.

"The professionalism of my personnel and their dedication to perfection are the reasons we were able to win the award," said current facility manager and NCOIC Sgt. 1st Class Rogelio Snape.

"We became a real team when we served together in Saudi Arabia," said Piggot. "Although a lot of the old team players are moving on, the new team is sharp and they are dedicated to the mission. It's evident why we won this award."

The 43rd's dining facility won as the post's best large dining facility. The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment's dining facility has won the title of the post's best small dining facility. The 2nd Bn., 69th Armor Regt.'s dining facility will receive its award Feb. 5.

Expect W-2s by end of January

Soldiers will receive theirs with LES, civilians' to be distributed on the job

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Soldiers and civilians can expect to receive their Wage and Tax Statements for 1991, or W-2 forms, at least by the end of January, according to Finance and Accounting officials.

Soldiers should receive their W-2 forms with their January Leave and Earnings Statement, said Raymond Winderweedle, chief of military pay.

Civilian pay chief, Ouida Green, said that civilian personnel should receive their forms sometime before Jan. 31.

Civilian W-2 forms will be distributed in the work place for active employees, while inactive employees will have their forms mailed to them, Green said.

Winderweedle said the post Finance Office is awaiting shipment of the military forms, but it is not anticipating any delays.

He added that he doesn't expect any major changes in the forms.

On both the military and civilian forms, the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, or FICA, withholding information will be split this year to show separately the amounts withheld for Social Security and Medicare.

The forms will be printed on a laser printer and perforated for easy separation.

Winderweedle said that soldiers who have questions after they receive their W-2 forms should consult their unit Personnel Administrations Center for help.

If further assistance is needed the PAC will direct the soldier to the proper personnel in the post Finance Office, he said.

Green said that civilians with concerns about their W-2 forms should first consult their supervisors, who can direct them to the Civilian Pay Office if necessary.

Wrestling is a man's sport

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

Their names don't have the allure of Hulk Hogan, Sergeant Slaughter, Black Bart or Cactus Jack.

But then again, they ain't rasslers, they're wrestlers.

They're 43 soldiers here to train for the all-Army wrestling championship. They'll represent the Army in competition against the other services—an event won by the Army last year after a long reign by the Marines.

If you're looking for a real man's sport, wrestling is a good place to go.

It's one on one competition. It's your skills and strengths, agility and cunning against the other guy's. You beat your man, you get the glory. You lose—it's because the other guy was better than you on that particular day. Pure and simple.

You want pain? You want sweat? The wrestling mat's the place to be.

Two minutes on a mat with a guy trying to tear your limbs out, crush your nose into your face, pin your shoulders to the mat and you feel like your joints are on fire.

They scream at you, "No more. I can't take this. Quit."

But wrestlers don't quit. They keep on. Stoking those fires of pain until the match is over—which either ends in a pin (shoulders on the mat for a half-second, not a three-count) or until they've wrestled two, three-minute periods (a 12-point spread is also cause to stop a match).

The similarity between wrestling and rasslin' is about the same as between chess and checkers.

Wrestlers, be it freestyle or Greco-Roman, plot their moves, set up their opponent before moving in for the "kill."

Their combat zone is a small mat. Their tools of the trade, head and hip locks, gut wrench, souplesse (belly to belly) and salto (back arm throw), crotch lift and single and double leg tackles.

Greco-Roman wrestlers, by the way don't use the legs for offensive and defensive maneuvers, often making for more spectacular throws.

Rasslers on the other hand jump about a ring enclosed by canvass ropes, ricocheting off to bounce into an opponent, twist their opponent's joints (only in the direction they rightly bend) and after spinning them over their heads, slam their bodies onto the mat (making sure they stomp a foot at the same time for sound effects—just like they slap their tights with an open hand when they "hit" someone in the face), the smashee, of course, comes up, spitting goat blood onto the mat.

And naturally, only the villain would use any under-handed moves and throws.

While professional rasslers have to be in good condition to ply their trade, they're more like dancers as their moves are choreographed and the winner is decided well in advance with an eye toward pleasing the crowd and of course, profit.

For the professional, the prize is money — big money for those who pull in the fans and the television audience.

For the amateurs, the prize is self-satisfaction in knowing you did your best. It's also representing your team — All Army, or, the ultimate goal for all, representing your country at the next Olympics.

Given the proper coaching, competition and determination, some of the Army athletes trained at Fort Benning could make it to Barcelona this year.

We wish them well ... but first ... beat the Marines!

Civilian job search easy for soldiers

By William G. Firzpatrick
Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Leaving the service and finding a job sounds like an easy task. Typically, there is some apprehension about facing the unknown, but anyone who is successfully completing an Army career or even just one enlistment usually has great qualifications.

Most veterans have done some reading, talked to their buddies, and may even have some first-hand job search experience. You know the drill. Develop a list or prospects, send out some resumes, and go to the interview with a positive attitude. With your qualifications and self-confidence you will dazzle them with fancy footwork, and land the job. Right?

Not quite.

While some of the previous statements may be true, approaching the job search process as a mechanical exercise is not always the best way to proceed.

Success will come with understanding the entire process. The first step is to develop a marketing plan designed to get your resume in the hands of as many potential employers as possible. It's a numbers game. The more people who know that you are available for work, the better chance you have of getting that important interview.

The second step comes with knowing what you have to sell. What most job seekers fail to realize is that they are a product for sale just like any other product. Marketing means selling, so if you want to sell yourself to industry, you ought to understand the sales cycle. You should also learn something about why people buy certain products.

The sales cycle is based upon two words — features and benefits. People don't buy a product simply because of its features, or the way it looks; they buy a product for the benefit they will derive from it. For example, most people don't buy a candy bar because it has a pretty wrapper. They buy it because it tastes good. That's the difference between features and benefits.

You have certain features that make you attractive to employers. Your challenge is to identify what they are, and then show an employer how they will benefit from hiring you.

The primary "hot button" that will get the attention of most people in business today is money. Money drives the train, because if a company is not making money, they certainly won't stay in business for very long.

You have to be part of that process. In developing your features and in trying to identify your benefit to an employer, understand that money is often a company's primary motivation. The benefit that you bring to a company has to help that company make money.

Companies are not in the social welfare business; they are not interested in hiring you because of the rank you attained or the decorations you wear on your uniform. They are only interested in how your participation will positively impact on the profit picture of the company.

A key part of the planning process is to conduct an inventory of your assets to identify the skills, background, training and experience that will hit that "hot button."

As you begin the inventory, keep an eye on what types of experience will benefit the employer. The fact that you received any Army Commendation Medal is not really that important to an employer, but the fact that you submitted a suggestion that save the Army $10,000 per year is.

Finally, remember that employers are not generally interested in what your are trying to get out of the job. The fact that you are looking for a position in industry where you can "rise to your full potential" may seem like a great job objective to you, but employers just don't care.

Most would rather that you had an attitude that was based on what you wanted to contribute. The bottom line is, don't tell an employer what you hope to gain, tell them what you are going to do for them.

Success in any endeavor comes with knowing the rules. Understanding the motivational factors in why employers hire people will aid you in preparing an effective marketing package.

Look at yourself as a product and sell your skills based upon the positive impact you will have on the profit picture of the company. You are a product for sale.

Use caution with BB guns

Infantry Branch Safety Office

A tragedy recently occurred involving a BB gun. A 5-year-old child had received a .177 caliber BB gun for Christmas.

U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-5, Garrison Regulation, classifies BB guns/air rifles as weapons.

These weapons fire .177 and .22 caliber projectiles at speeds approaching 1,000 feet per second. The M-1911 .45 caliber service weapon fires a projectile at approximately 900 feet per second. The only significant difference between the two weapons is the size of the projectile; either is capable of killing or maiming.

USAIC Reg. 210-5 prohibits the firing of any weapon within the confines of the garrison/cantonment (housing) areas. This regulation also prohibits the handling or carrying of weapons by children unless they are supervised by an adult who is responsible for safety.

Soldiers are required to properly secure (lock up) privately-owned weapons when not in use.

Persons using weapons in violation of pertinent regulations, who reside in government quarters, may be subject to immediate eviction from housing at the soldier's expense.

DoD authorizes Desert Storm civilian medal

By Master Sgt. Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

DoD civilian employees who worked in the Persian Gulf area during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm will receive a newly authorized medal.

The medal, said Christopher Jehn, "symbolizes the importance that the Department of Defense attaches to civilian service and recognizes the value of the civil service in helping to accomplish our nation's objectives." Jehn is assistant secretary of defense for force management and personnel.

About 4,000 appropriated- and non-appropriated-fund civilian employees are eligible for the award. Jehn said civilian employees contributed substantially to the military effort and endured the same hazards and conditions that faced the military. They engaged in a wide variety of jobs ranging from engineering transportation and maintenance to operating exchange stores and morale, welfare and recreation activities, he remarked.

Certain non-DoD workers from organizations such as the Red Cross, United Service Organizations and Civil Reserve Air Fleet who provided support in theater will also receive the medal.

Civilians who served in support of the operation any time from Aug. 2, 1990, through April 11, 1991, and were physically located in an area designated a combat zone are eligible to receive the medal. Also eligible are those who began working in theater after April 11, 1991, and served 30 consecutive days or 60 non-consecutive days in those areas.

In addition, civilian employees stationed in Israel, Egypt, Turkey, Syria or Jordan at any time from Jan. 17 through April 11, 1991, will receive the medal. "Stations in" includes airspace and territorial waters.

The termination date for award eligibility will be the same as the one established for the Desert Storm campaign star for the militarys Southwest Asia Service Medal, said Jehn..

The new civilian medal, designed by the U.S. Army Institute of Heraldry, is the first of its kind since the Vietnam War, said Jehn. Similar to military designs, it is intended largely for display; recipients will also receive a lapel pin to wear.

The front of the medal depicts crossed swords, a shield and a torch. "Desert Shield/Desert Storm: is inscribed on the front. According to Jehn, the swords represent cooperation and strength, while the shield symbolizes military preparedness and a strong defense. The torch, adapted from the Statue of Liberty, brings to mind leadership, freedom and deliverance from oppression, he said.

Officials said the medal should be available for presentation within the next few months.

TRADOC writes new field manual

TRADOC News Service

Fort Monroe, Va. — Training and Doctrine Command is leading the Army into the future with the development of a new Field Manual 100-5.

Titled "Operations," the manual will describe the way the Army will operate — doctrine — in an international environment that has changed drastically in a very short time.

"Doctrine is the collective understanding of how the Army will fight, which drives the way that we think about our profession," said Maj. Gen. Wesley K. Clark, TRADOC deputy chief of staff for concepts, doctrine and developments.

The Army has been describing in writing the way it will fight since 1914, according to Lt. Col. Bobby McCarter, TRADOC project action officer.

"That s when the first field service regulations were written," he said. "Over the years, it has developed into FM 100-5 'Operations.' We update our doctrine about every five years now."

Army leadership feels that the basic doctrine in the 1986 version of the FM, titled "Air Land Battle," is still basically sound. They point out that it worked well in Operation Just Cause in Panama and in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

However, the doctrine was based on superpower confrontation with the Soviet Union.

"We're confronting a much different geo-strategic setting than we've ever had," Clark said. "How could we not relook our doctrine?"

The existing doctrine also did not take into account the humanitarian and civic actions operations required after victory in Panama and the Middle East.

"Our soldiers adapted and their efforts to provide assistance to the Kurds, for example, have been successful. But we should have guidelines for similar contingencies in the future," McCarter said.

The new FM will deal with the entire range of military requirements from peacetime assistance to allies, to crisis situations, through combat to post-conflict operations.

When forces are committed, they will be large enough, and with sufficient firepower, to achieve a quick, decisive victory.

That will require U.S forces to operate as a cohesive team.

"It would be best if we could get the other services involved in the development of the new FM 100-5 so we can include their concerns," McCarter said.

Allies will be brought into the picture through the various military cooperation programs and through the staff of liaison officers at TRADOC headquarters representing 13 different countries.

TRADOC officials are gathering input for the manual from various sources. They include "lessons learned" from Desert Shield and Desert Storm and other recent military actions. Army leaders at every level have also been encouraged to contribute their ideas, either through articles written for professional military journals or by direct submission to TRADOC.

A team of writers at the Combined Arms Command at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., will use the information to revise and broaden existing doctrine.

The first draft of the manual is due March 1992. It will be reviewed by commanders throughout the Army and its sister services. Scheduled publication date is August 1993.

TRADOC sets up hot line

By W. D. Hobbs
USAIC Public Affairs Office

In just about every organization—military or civilian—ideas for improvements are thought of at every level. Most of the time they are merely mentioned to co-workers, sometimes formally recommended, then misunderstood, forgotten, ignored, lost in the shuffle, or even stolen.

A 24-hour Soldiers' Hotline has been installed to help get recommendations to the night people and not be derailed on the way.

The program was instituted by Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commander of Training and Doctrine Command and is coordinated by Col. Dean Anderson, TRADOC Systems Manager-Soldier.

"We want to provide a vehicle for the soldier—or anyone for that matter—to recommend changes in doctrine, improvement in equipment, or other support to improve a soldier's battlefield capabilities," Anderson said. "We find that frequently we get the best ideas from the user of the equipment. "

Anderson adds that when a call comes in concerning the infantry, it will be forwarded to the commandant of the Infantry School. If it's about tanks, it goes to the Armor School. Matters that affect air crews will be sent to Fort Rucker. In other words, recommendations will be referred to the appropriate branch for study.

The TSM soldier will entertain any idea that will reduce the soldier's load and improve his quality of life in a tactical situation.

"Ideas need not be limited to materiel solutions but can include areas such as doctrine training, leader development, and organizational structure," said Lt. Col Ken Sutton, chief of Lethality. "However, if your first sergeant won't give you a pass or your wife beats you, we're not the ones to get that resolved. "

Whatever the outcome, the soldier will be advised of any actions taken. However, to get a response the individual must leave his or her mailing address and phone number on the answering machine.

One soldier recommended improvements in the design of the Army's desert boots. Within weeks the new boots were on their way to the troops in the Middle East. Even if your recommendation is adopted, don't expect it to be implemented that fast because the soldier who made the boot recommendation was named Schwarzkopf and it may have been more than just a recommendation!

"You may not be a four-star general but, rest assured, your recommendations will be heard and given serious consideration, Sutton adds.

When a recommendation is phoned in it should be stated in clear, concise language and should be free of terms or statements that might be misinterpreted. Writing it out first on a piece of paper would be a good idea.

To make a recommendation phone 545-1245 or DSN 835-1245 and the process will be set in motion.

> You may not be a four-star general, but your recommendation will be heard.

Primaries to begin in Feb.

Adjutant General

The election year officially begins with the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 18 and culminates with the general election on Nov. 3.

Members of the U.S. Armed Forces and their family members are eligible to register and request an absentee ballot by submitting a Federal Post Card Application. A FPCA and specific state requirements can be provided by your unit voting assistance officer.

The voting information center has recorded messages by governors, U.S. senators, U.S. House of Representative members, and other public officials for your state. These messages are available 60 days before an election. An individual may leave a message for their state public officials in order to have a say on current issues.

The voting information center operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Call the Voting Information Center on Defense Service Network 223-6500 or at 703-693-6500.

Alcohol:restrictions in effect

•The sale of alcoholic beverages in package stores and other outlets will not be made to soldiers in uniform before 4:30 p.m. on duty days. The only exception to this policy is when written authority has been given by the post commander.

•The use or consumption of alcoholic beverages in a boat or the passenger/driver compartment of a motor vehicle is prohibited. Transporting alcoholic beverages in a boat or the driver/passenger compartment of a motor vehicle when the manufacturer's seal has been broken is also prohibited.

•The playing of hand-carried radios or tape players in any post exchange facility, Army Commissary, post movie theater, or on military buses is prohibited.

•Playing a radio which emits a sound outside the passenger/driver compartment of a motor vehicle at a volume which is audible to a person with normal hearing at a distance of 15 feet from the vehicle on any public street, parking area or private driveway on Fort Benning is prohibited.

•The use of obscene, vulgar or profane language in any public area on Fort Benning is prohibited. Language is considered obscene, vulgar or profane when it would clearly offend a reasonable person's sense of decency.

Fort Benning officials say these policies are not intended to violate the liberties of soldiers and family members on Fort Benning. Rather, they will be enforced to ensure the individual dignity of every person is protected and individuals can move freely without fear of threatening situations.

"This policy was designed to make sure people don't disturb other people's enjoyment of the post," said Perry.

However, according to officials, violation of this policy can lead to prosecution under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

Soldiers must register weapons

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Weapons registration is currently being conducted on post, according to post officials.

The Military Police Activity asks that soldiers continue registering personal weapons through the unit chain of command.

As administrative procedures are still being worked out, soldiers are discouraged from going directly to the weapons registration office themselves.

The weapons office in Soldiers' Plaza can only accomodate those individuals inprocessing and unit chain of command representatives.

The office is expected to be up to full strength by mid-February.

Ad valorem tax exemption available

Georgia and Alabama levy ad valorem property tax on residents' vehicles, payable upon registration of that vehicle. Soldiers who are not legal residents of the state of Georgia or Alabama are exempt from this tax under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act.

Vehicle registration time is currently underway in Georgia. The tax commissioners of Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties prescribe the method for verification of the soldier's non-resident status for the purpose of granting the exemption. Soldiers must present a "Serviceman's Special Affidavit" signed by their commander or a Judge Advocate General officer as well as a current Leave and Earning Statement to register without paying the ad valorem tax.

Commanders are reminded that when they sign this affidavit they are swearing, as a commissioned officer, that the form is completely filled out and they have verified the soldier's legal residence, as declared by the soldier in block 25 of the LES.

Lecture series helps teachers

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Kindergarten" is the theme for the Fort Benning Schools guest lecture series currently under way, according to Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development.

As part of the Education 2000 goals for excellence, Fort Benning Schools are offering this series "in an effort to prepare for those who will be coming to us," Middlemiss said.

Featured speaker Jan. 14 in this the third in a five-part series was Dr. Dell Karr, assistant superintendent for instruction of Fort Benning Schools.

Also talking to parents, caregivers and educators interested in future kindergarten programs were five kindergarten teachers from the Fort Benning Schools. They included Barbara Hutchins, Peggy Gindville, Gwen Grubb, Carolyn Phillips and Marianne Smith.

The main focus was on reading serving as the best way to prepare a child for kindergarten. It was noted that reading to a child encourages language development.

Parents were encouraged to go to the library as a family because seeing others with an appreciation for literature leads to enjoying books independently later.

The last two sessions in the series will be Feb. 6 and March 5. Both will be at Dexter School from 7 to 8:30 p.m.

Participants may attend any or all lectures at no cost. However, phone reservations for each session at 545-2500 are required since space is limited. Children are not permitted to attend.

Parents attending the Fort Benning Schools guest lecture series on kindergarten Jan. 14 took advantage of handouts and materials used in basic kindergarten skills.

A legal specialist for the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was recently awarded an achievement medal for civilian service.

Nancy E. Owens received the award at the battalion motor pool. Owens has been working for the government for 15 years and four of those years she has been at 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry.

Col. Gregory Camp, the regimental commander, presented the award.

"I work indirectly with Miss Owens," Camp said. "Because she is the legal specialist at 1st Battalion, I see most of her work. This award is presented to her for timely dedication to duty and excellence," he said.

Faith holds DARE program

Students dare to be different

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The largest class of sixth-graders in the Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program at Faith Middle School — 203 — graduated as part of the seventh class to take part in the project on post.

Keynote speakers for the DARE graduation were Sheila Gale and James Porter, former drug users who told their personal stories and congratulated the graduates on their commitment to live drug-free lives.

Gale said, "Dare to be different. Dare to dream and stick with your principles." She noted she wished that she had and not lost about 17 years of her life to drugs.

Clean for the last four years, Porter pointed out how easy it is to start, but how difficult it is to stop, especially with peer pressure.

"Today's child is subject to many pressures and is faced with many decisions long before coping and decision-making skills have been developed," said Lt. Walter L. Jackson, DARE project officer and instructor, and an active duty uniformed police officer.

"Teaching children the necessary skills to say no to alcohol, and drugs and at the same time feel positive about their decision is the focus of DARE."

All of the graduates wrote essays as parts of the requirements of the program.

Those who were asked to read their personal commitments were Angela Lawson, Jason Robinson, Stephanie Gonzales, Joann Cross, Beth Phillips, Lakeesha Shepard, Mariquita McKnight and Patrick Newey.

DARE is a joint effort of the Military Police Activity and the Fort Benning Schools.

More than 1,300 students have graduated from the program in the past four years.

Matthew Shelton performs for students and parents at an evening harmonica class.

Harmonica instructor visits Fort Benning

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Students at Edward A. White School and their parents are learning the basics of playing a harmonica from artist-in-residence Matthew Shelton, who will be instructing at the school through Jan. 31.

According to Beth Middlemiss, Director of Staff Development for the Fort Benning Schools, Shelton is working with grades second through fifth using diatonic harmonicas. Those taking instruction do not have to be able to read music.

Then three evenings, he is also working with the parents at no charge. The final session for them will be Thursday at 7 p.m. at the school.

A professional harmonica player, Shelton uses a color-coded chart showing the notes that correspond with the ten holes on the harmonica.

He also entertains while teaching in a very relaxed manner.

This artist-in-residence has traveled as far as Tokyo, Japan, to meet and learn from his favorite harmonica artists, has played solo and in several bands and is a twice-produced playwright. In addition, he has used his harmonica as part of original compositions for theatre at Atlanta's Alliance, Academy and Seven Stages Theatres.

Sponsored by the Georgia Council for the Arts and White School, the program originated with the idea that last year some soldiers received harmonicas donated by a company during Desert Storm.

Middlemiss said it was thought that this would be a good way for them to learn how to use them.

Guest lecture series to continue Feb. 6

Fort Benning Schools

Talks About Young Children, Fort Benning Schools' series of lectures for Fort Benning parents, and educators continues. The fourth lecture in the series will take place Feb. 6 from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Dexter School.

This fourth session will be "From Cradle to comics: Instilling the Love of Reading in Your Child." Brenda Weitzber, an authority on early childhood, will focus on ways that parents can instil the love of reading in their children.

Weitzberg will explain and demonstrate several reading strategies that parents can use when reading to young children of different ages. Weitzberg is a training coordinator for Friends of the Family in Baltimore.

Participation in the session is free, and is open to all Fort Benning parents, care givers and educators. Since space in each session will be limited, a phone reservation for each session will be required.

The program is a series that is bringing recognized experts in the field of early childhood to Fort Benning on five different evenings. The fifth, and last session of the series will take place March 5. Its topic, "Being a Parent: How to Meet the Needs of Your Young Child While Meeting Your Own Needs, Too" will be presented by Dr. Patricia Nida, author of "KIds on the Move."

To register for the Feb. 6 session with Weitzberg, phone 545-2500 between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Reservations will be taken until close of business Feb. 3, or until the session is full.

Children will not be permitted to attend the sessions. Tot Town will be open from 6:15 p.m. until 9:15 p.m. on the evenings that the series is conducted. A reservation with Tot Town as well as payment of the fee at Tot Town will be the responsibility of the parent.

Tax tips for Desert Storm vets

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Veterans of Desert Storm and Provide Comfort are eligible for a number of federal tax benefits.

The most sweeping benefit applies to soldiers and warrant officers, who do not have to pay federal taxes on wages earned while serving in the Persian Gulf. For commissioned officers, the exemption applies to earnings up to $500 per month during service in the Gulf.

Other benefits include:

— Extended deadline. Desert Storm and Provide Comfort veterans have up to 180 days from the date they returned from the combat zone to file and pay their income taxes.

— Extended exemption for those hospitalized. Soldiers hospitalized due to service in the Persian Gulf combat zone retain these benefits until the end of the month they are released from the hospital.

— Tax forgiveness. For survivors of service members who died from injuries or illness while serving in the combat zone or in direct-support operations, the service members' federal income tax liabilities for the year in which they died and the previous year are forgiven.

The details that accompany these benefits are, in some cases, quite complicated. Consequently, the Internal Revenue Service prepared publication 945, "Tax Information for those Affected by Operation Desert Storm," which you can have mailed to you by calling (800) 829-3676.

However, there are a few key points to keep in mind when preparing your 1991 tax return:

— The tax exemption or reduction does not apply to social security taxes or to passive income such as interest and dividends.

— One day of appropriate duty qualifies you for these special tax benefits for the entire month.

— These benefits do not apply unless you served in the Persian Gulf area on or after Jan. 17, 1991, when the area was designated a combat zone. The designation has not been dropped, so the tax benefits remain in effect for those who are still serving there.

— The combat zone includes the following regions and countries: Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar, The United Arab Emirates, The Red Sea, The Gulf of Oman, The Gulf of Aden, and the Persian Gulf. Soldiers also qualify for these tax benefits if they were paid hazardous duty or imminent danger pay because of duties that were in direct support of operations in the combat zone.

— State tax authorities may or may not incorporate these benefits. Check with your state income tax division for guidance.

ACS offers support group training

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

No one truly thinks about family support groups' importance until it's time for soldiers to deploy.

Army Community Service is trying to change that by instituting Family Support Group training sessions on a regular basis.

According to Mary Allen, ACS Outreach Coordinator, training will be held on a quarterly basis, from 9 a.m. to noon , at Building 2643, in Soldier's Plaza, on April 16 and Sept. 17, and monthly sessions will begin in February on specific topics.

These will be held in the same place from 7 to 8 p.m.

They will be able to accommodate about 50 people for every class so space will be limited, and reservations will be made through the ACS office.

Topics for upcoming monthly sessions include:

Feb. 20 — Sharing Family Support Group Experiences and Basic Views/Ideas on Forming Family Support Groups, to be presented by Leadership Seminar staff.

Mar. 19 — Lines of Communication for Family Support Groups (telephone tree contact techniques), by JoAnn Bowles and Debra Gerner.

Apr. 16 — Duties of Family Support Group Officers/ Representatives, by Kathy Case, Installation Volunteer Coordinator.

May 21 — Changing Times in Family Support Groups, by Leadership Seminar staff.

The first quarterly session in January had about 56 participants.

Program material included ice breaker examples and tips from four professionals on how to make a family support group an effective working unit.

Patsy Chilcote of the Leadership Seminars speaks at the first workshop.

Patsy Chilcote of Leadership Seminars explained the importance of helping a member to help themselves, staying objective, keeping a record on everyone, inducements to attend meetings and the importance of being organized with agendas and surveys.

Chaplain Gil Richardson discussed communication and conflict management, keeping in mind that this is a volunteer activity.

"Everything a volunteer offers is a gift," he said. "So treat it with dignity."

He also noted the changing make-up of family support groups with working wives of soldiers having little time and husbands of female soldiers needing to be involved.

Karen Crowley, ACS officer, then went over the Army regulations,and Kathy Case talked about the management and motivation of volunteers.

CSM bids farewell to Sledgehammer

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

"If something happens in the Sledgehammer Brigade, it's because the non-commissioned officers make it happen."

"In my judgment, we would not have been successful in the Persian Gulf without the leadership of the non-commissioned officers in this brigade," Command Sgt. Maj. Jimmie G. Bowles recently told a group of NCOs from Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division assembled in the Kelley Hill Chapel on his last duty day as the brigade's top enlisted leader."

After 2 1/2 years with the brigade, Bowles has accepted a position as command sergeant major of Group Operations at the National Training Center, reporting Feb. 28 at Fort Irwin, Calif.

"To those of you who are staying in the brigade through the summer, I will see you again, surely in August," he said, referring to the brigade's next scheduled rotation to the NTC. "I won't be lonely where I'm going."

Bowles, who held similar talks with NCOs in all 3rd Bde. units, is tentatively scheduled to relinquish the brigade colors Feb. 14 at the Valentine's Day Ball to Command Sgt. Maj. Charles L. Jackson, whose last assignment was post command sergeant major of Fort Devens, Mass.

Bowles praised his designated successor, who reports in to the brigade on Feb. 5.

"He called me one day recently from Fort Devens to say he wanted to come down for a visit," Bowles said. The next day, he was sitting down for a talk in my office."

"Fort Devens isn't exactly next door, you know, so I would say he will bring the kind of initiative the brigade needs to maintain a quality force."

Bowles sought to assure the NCOs that the "best of the best" would have nothing to worry about as the Army draws down to about 535,000 soldiers in the 1990s.

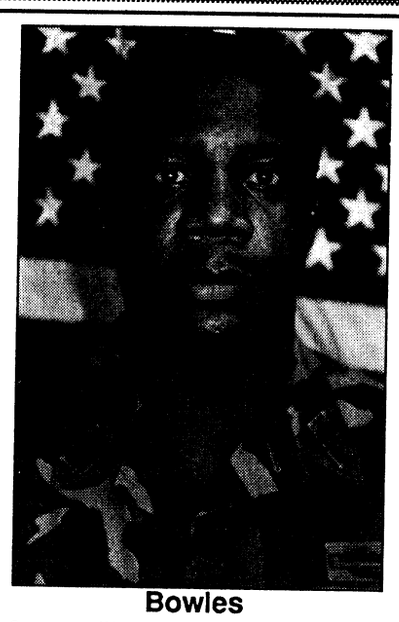
"The Army never does anything suddenly," he said, "so when the warning order went out about the drawdown, smart NCOs got the message that they would have to be competitive to survive the force reductions to come.

"We don't need a war to keep good soldiers in the Army," Bowles continued. "Only those people who don't apply themselves will have a problem staying in the Army."

However, Bowles said that past wars have taught the nation that mobilization without soldiers well trained in peacetime can lead to more deaths on the battlefield.

"The only solution is to maintain a quality force in peacetime that will always be ready if called to war.

"Leaders who can't manage their soldiers — or their own lives — will not be part of that quality force we'll strive for in the '90s," he added.



Bowles

On the other had, Bowles said he welcomes the recently announced program offering cash incentives to soldiers who elect to retire early or leave the service before the scheduled end of their enlistment.

"Throughout the years, there were always non-commissioned officers who got out early and didn't receive one dime for their years of service," he said. "Now, we've finally made some progress in taking care of those soldiers who decide to leave the military."

Bowles expressed his thanks to all the NCOs for their help and friendship during his tenure as their leader.

"I appreciate all you've done for me," he said. "Being command sergeant major of this brigade has been a challenging responsibility.

"I consider the Sledgehammer Brigade a division in itself, and it's been good to me in all aspects," he added. "I will never forget this brigade and the people in it."

Marine trains with 29th

29th Infantry Regiment

Chief Warrant Officer James D. Walls is the first Marine Corps warrant officer to attend the Master Gunner Course.

1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, is in charge of running this course at the Collins Training Center.

"The main emphasis of the Gunners Course is to instruct soldiers how to operate the turret systems and the 25mm main gun," said Staff Sgt. Brett Shafer, an instructor at the Bradley Master Gunner Course.

"The Marine Corps has a light armored vehicle with the same gun system, and they are trying to set up a Master Gunner Course in the Marine Corps," said Walls. "That's why I am here — to help the Marine Corps set up a program like this. If we could set up a course similar to this, we would be in good shape. The instructors bend over backwards here to help, and it is a pleasure working with the Army," said Walls.

Sgt. 1st Class Matt Toad, the chief master gunner said, "The 10-week course is broken down into two phases —a four-week phase of maintenance and a six-week phase of gunnery. Every week ends with a tough test that determines whether the soldier has what it takes to stay alive in the course."

USAREC names top new recruiter

By Alyanna B. Summers

The U.S. Army Recruiting Command recently selected a local soldier as the New Recruiter of the Year.

Sgt. 1st Class Angel L. Maldonado, currently a recruiter with the U.S. Army Recruiting Battalion (Atlanta), 2nd Recruiting Brigade was honored as the Army's top new recruiter for 1991.

Maldonado began his military career as a reservist in Puerto Rico July 29, 1977. Liking the Army, Maldonado then enlisted in the Regular Army Feb. 14, 1978, as an infantryman. During his 14-year career, Maldonado has held various positions, including a drill sergeant at the Infantry Training Center here and Latin-American Spanish-speaking instructor and operations non-commissioned officer for the Special Operations Department of the School of the Americas.

> A quality soldier makes for a quality Army I want to see that that happens.
> —Sgt. 1st Class Angel Maldonado

Now, as a hard-charging recruiter with an office at Peachtree Mall, Maldonado said he wants to offer the same opportunity to excel to today's young people.

"I am charged with the duty of recruiting the best applicants for the Army," said Maldonado. "A quality soldier makes for a quality Army. I want to see that that happens."

Maldonado has received several awards and decorations to include the Expert Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Pathfinder Badge, Air Assault Badge, Bolivian Master Parachutist Badge and the Recruiter Gold Badge (2nd Sapphire).

As far as the future is concerned, Maldonado sees himself serving the nation as a soldier " as long as I am able," with hopes to ultimately attain the rank of command sergeant major.

Maldonado in his spare time enjoys listening to and playing Latin music professionally, and he performs as a Latin music percussionist for several music groups in the Columbus and Atlanta areas.

He and his wife, Odette, have two children, Joel Alexis, 7, and Javiver Alexis, 10 months.

3rd Brigade gets new Bradleys

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

It looked like Christmas morning for the soldiers of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry as they unwrapped their basic issue items for their new Bradleys.

The Alpha "Bears" received 13 brand-new M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicles Jan. 13. The unit is the first company to begin Bradley new equipment training for the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

The "Vanguard" battalion held a ceremony the following morning to officially start the transition of the unit and the brigade to armored infantry.

"Now we are a full member of the combined arms team," said Lt. Col. Eric T. Olson, the battalion commander. "Today, we're taking a big step, and we now start to learn how to fight as armored infantrymen."

The period of instruction for the battalion will run through March 27, culminating with a gunnery.

"Each company has a team of instructors from the 29th Infantry Regiment Bradley Fielding Team," said Capt. Mike Ryan, force modernization officer for the brigade. "As the company goes through its 40 days of training, each vehicle has an instructor to deal with that crew."

Having turned in their M-113 armored personnel carriers, they now match the lethality, speed and firepower of their sister battalions in the 24th.

"There's a big difference between this machine and our old M-113s," said Olson. "It's big and heavily armored; it's faster, and the weapons systems allow us to do precision gunnery. It really is a combined arms weapon system."

The 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry will begin its transition Feb. 10, completing the transformation of the brigade to the Bradley armored infantry.

A case for professional journal writing

COMMENTARY

By Albert N. Garland
Special to The Bayonet

Writing is certainly not at the top of the list of things infantrymen like to do. And that's too bad, because the purpose of any writing, particularly writing for publication in a professional journal such as "Infantry," is to transmit what one person in a given field knows to others like him who may need that information—to share ideas, stimulate thinking, and establish a mutually beneficial dialogue.

Fortunately, there are a number of infantry leaders who are willing to write for publication. Perhaps the most outstanding example today is Gen. John Galvin, who has written for professional publications, including "Infantry," throughout his military career. In fact, copies of two of his articles on the company executive officer that were written for "Infantry" — "Man Without A Manual: The Executive Officer" (March-April 1965) written when he was a major, and "The Company XO" (November-December 1969) written when he was a lieutenant colonel—are still requested. And in each of his commands, he has strongly encouraged his people to write for publication.

Unfortunately, it is hard to convince most of our infantry leaders, senior as well as junior, that they should share their knowledge and experience with other infantrymen through the pages of their professional publication. There are a number of reasons for this reluctance, but I believe they can be boiled down to these:

First, many infantry leaders seem to think that writing, in any form, is an intellectual pursuit and they want no part of it. They didn't join the Army to write, they say, but to fight—or to train others to fight. Besides, they don't have the time, what with having to take care of the details of Army life. And they certainly have better things to do in the evenings and on weekends.

Many officers and non-commissioned officers don't care one way or the other. Writing doesn't particularly interest them. If they pass on their experience at all, it is to the soldiers nearest them. They're not really concerned with anyone else in the Army, at least not enough to sit down and try to share their ideas in writing.

Then there are some infantry leaders who especially admire their own writing so much they refuse to submit it to any publication because they don't want their manuscripts edited. They have a hard time believing that an editor's only aim is to make their writing clearer to his publication's audience.

And there is the fourth category of infantry leaders—those who would like to write for publication but who do not have any of the confidence of the former group. They worry about their ability to write and fear their efforts will be ridiculed by some editor sitting in final judgment in a book-lined office someplace far removed from everyday reality.

Why should an infantry leader write for publication in a professional military journal? To use an analogy, good ideas, like fresh fruits and vegetables, are perishable. Unless they are picked, packaged, and shipped expeditiously, their nutritional value is lost. The same can be said for the timely sharing of ideas between professionals. Sharing nourishes other minds and energizes creative adaptation while also saving others time and developmental effort.

Our infantry leaders and soldiers have a unique crop of lessons that they have learned over the years. These lessons have been nurtured at considerable cost, and we try to harvest them in every issue of "Infantry" that is published.

Other lessons will emerge as a result of our most recent experiences during Operations Just Cause, Desert Shield and Desert Storm. "Infantry" is the Infantry School's primary means of sharing with the entire infantry community the effective solutions and innovative training and support procedures that our infantrymen have learned the hard way.

Numerous doctrinal innovations that first appeared in "Infantry" have then been incorporated into our field manuals. The authors of these tactical concepts and training techniques were line soldiers and leaders for the most part, not staff writers at higher headquarters. They solved practical problems and then took the time to share their solutions. By doing so, they contributed immensely to the body of professional knowledge upon which all infantrymen draw.

Professional writing is a critical part of a soldier's education. Improved clarity of thought and communication are its immediate products. In short, professional writing is leadership training at its best. This has been so throughout history. We do not hesitate to quote Clausewitz, Maurice de Saxe, DuPicq, the Mahans, Emory Upton, J.F.C. Fuller, and Liddell Hart.

Why do we do this? Simply because those soldiers had the courage to study their profession, collect their thoughts, learn the art

World War II — A look back

By Matt Elzie
Military History Division

January 18 to 24 during World War II, Axis Forces gain ground in the desert and the islands

• Rommel begins his highly successful counteroffensive against the British 2nd Armored Brigade. The German attack gathers pace throughout the week. The Axis forces in the theater are officially renamed Panzer Army Africa.

• U.S. Forces begin withdrawing to secondary defense positions in the Philippines, while Allied forces in Malaya continue to take heavy losses against increasingly intense Japanese air raids.

• At the Wannsee Conference in Berlin, Hitler gives his approval for the 'Final solution'. This proposal outlines plans for the transportation of all of Europe's Jews to extermination camps. Eichmann's department of the SS is given responsibility for carrying out the plan.

• On the Eastern Front, Soviet Paratroop landings south of Moscow throughout the week organize local resistance to attack German rear areas.

• In the Battle of Macassar Strait off the coast of Borneo, four U.S destroyers and submarines sink four transports and a destroyer from a Japanese invasion force. This is the first surface naval action of the Pacific war and the first for the U.S Navy since 1898.

• British North Borneo formally surrenders to the Japanese.

Writing: a case for it

of writing, and then present their final products to editors and publishers of professional journals. Have these writers and others like them influenced our doctrine? You bet they have.

I don't want to sound like I fully accept the academic dictum of "publish or perish." I realize that not all military men are original thinkers or good writers. But there are many infantrymen who do have something to contribute to their profession, and it makes me sad when I cannot get them to exercise some self-discipline and write for Infantry.

One final point: If infantrymen do not think and do not write, there are others who will. Today, for example, two of the writers our senior leaders seem to follow almost slavishly are William Lind and Tom Clancy, neither of whom ever served a day in an active military unit.

They are invited to speak at our war colleges, service schools, and military academies. Lind has even conducted several seminars on maneuver warfare here at the Infantry School, even though his writings on the subject cannot begin to compare with those of the late Brigadier Richard Simpkin.

In my day, our doctrine writers surrendered the field to S.L.A. Marshall, who was not a military historian but a journalist. When we entered the nuclear age—and spent hours in Brown Hall studying the employment of tactical nuclear weapons—it was civilian writers such as Herman Kahn and Bernard Brodie who were our gurus.

Professionalism is earned, not awarded on a commander's whim. Infantrymen may scoff at readers and writers (and editors), but they would do well to remember that when they next go to war, they may be teaching and following someone else's doctrine. They may not like that doctrine, but it will be too late for them to do much about it.

Finally, there is a feeling of intense personal satisfaction in seeing one's name in print. In fact, there are not many other things that can afford so much personal satisfaction. It is nice for an author to know that his name will appear in card catalogs and indexes and bibliographical notes and that no one will ever be able to erase it.

As I move on, I encourage all young infantrymen to consider writing for publication. Visit Infantry's offices, talk with the editorial staff, and, above all else, subscribe to and read the publication. Tomorrow's infantry community is counting on you.

Some foods provide 'miracle' benefits

Garlic gets a positive shot in the arm from medical experts

By Dennis Blank
Academy of Health and Fitness

When doctors told Connie Simpson of Marysville, Ohio, she was suffering from a malignant melanoma, a deadly skin cancer, on her legs, she was shocked.

"I was devastated," she recalled. "I felt there wasn't anything they could do."

One radiation treatment left her sick and weak, and she did not want to try chemotherapy.

That was in 1987.

Today the 35-year-old mother of a 1-year-old boy is happy and healthy. How did it happen? She met a woman who convinced her to get rid of her junk foods, high-cholesterol diet and switch to a high-fiber, all vegetable program.

At the same time, she was also taking eight teaspoons daily of an aged liquid garlic extract called Kyolic.

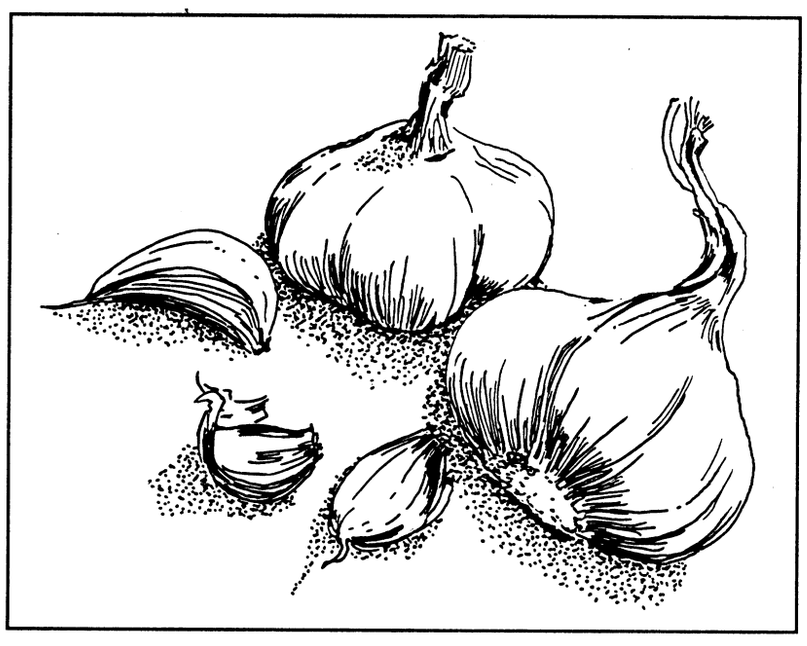
The product is known as the "sociable garlic" because it does not have the repelling garlic odor and can be obtained in most health food stores.

Today, scientists throughout the world are documenting hundreds of cases where garlic is becoming a successful cancer fighter.

A group of researchers at UCLA used the aged garlic extract to treat melanoma. They concluded that aged garlic extract suppressed the growth of cancerous cells. They, as well as other researchers, know that garlic can prevent cancer as well.

Because of those positive results, the National Cancer Institute has put garlic at the top of the list of several "designer" foods—along with cucumbers, citrus, broccoli and parsley—that are being looked at to stop or prevent cancer.

"Garlic is the best candidate as a cancer-fighting substance," said Dr. Herbert Pierson, the NCI toxologist who is directing the study.



The $20.5 million study of "designer" foods will last over a five-year period. According to Pierson, garlic has sulfur compounds that can block the action of certain carcinogens and encourage precancerous cells to return to normal..

Hundreds of food and herb product companies are anxious to get the results, he said.

In certain regions of China, he said, people who eat lots of garlic had a much smaller chance of getting cancer of the esophagus.

Recently, National Geographic said that researchers found that two neighboring counties in China had dramatically different rates of cancer. In one county, there was very little stomach cancer because onions and garlic were part of the daily diet. However, the incidence of stomach cancer was much higher in the next county because garlic and onions were not included in the diet.

Led by Dr. Noland Lamm, researchers at West Virginia University used an aged garlic extract to fight the deadly cancer cells.

"The highly beneficial reduction in tumor growth with aged-garlic extract immunotherapy," said Lamm, "suggests that it will prove to be a highly effective form of immunotherapy."

In his animal studies, the aged garlic extract has been shown to be effective. Lamm is now planning to use it to treat cancer patients.

Dr. Robert I. Lin, an Irvine, Calif., based garlic expert who was chairman of the First World Congress of the Health Significance of Garlic last year in Washington, D.C., said if cooked garlic or a garlic extract was included in a good, nutritious diet every day, better health would result.

"It can substantially reduce the risks of cancer and cardiovascular disease in our society," Lin said.

On new fronts of research, there is promising new work that is being done with breast cancer.

For example, Dr. John Milner, a nutritionist at Penn State University, discovered that the aged garlic extract Kyolic dramatically reduced the incidence of breast cancer in mice that were fed with a cancer-causing chemical.

"We had a 70 to 90 percent reduction in tumor incidence," Milner said. "That kind of reduction in cancer is pretty impressive."

Dr. Benjamin Lau, a researcher at Loma Linda University in Southern California, said garlic stimulates the body's immune system and encourages those cells that destroy cancer.

"We are understandably excited to see that a natural substance can have such impact on cancer prevention," Lau said.

ENERGY WATCH

You can make your home cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter without touching your thermostat, just by decorating carefully.

Things to do:

Well-dressed windows

•Use insulated shutters. While the initial cost of insulated shutters is high, they are effective thermal barriers.

•Use insulating shades and blinds to stop heat or cold infiltration.

•Use tightly-woven drapes with liners to add insulation value.

•Stop cold drafts between drapes and windows by encasing the top of the drapes with decorative cornices.

•Add weight to the bottom of the drapes so that they hang securely against the sill or the floor.

•Layer drapes and other window coverings with lighter-weight liners and sheers.

•Change colors seasonally. A dark liner will absorb heat in the winter; a light liner will reflect summer heat.

Well-lighted rooms

•Analyze your lighting needs and select the correct type of lighting.

•Put task lighting where you work. Put background or perimeter lighting where you relax.

•Use proper lighting in dressing areas. You need illumination that highlights your skin without creating glaring reflections from mirrors.

•In the kitchen, use a combination of general and task lighting.

Warm ideas

•Pull furniture into tight, intimate clusters and throw afghans over chairs and sofas.

•Arrange your furniture to focus on the fireplace or wood stove.

•Cover large expanses of bare floor with area rugs for insulation and to create a warming effect.

•Use rich, deep colors such as gold and rusts during the cold season.

•Move furniture away from windows and doors to avoid drafts.

Cool tips for hot weather

•More space and airiness make you feel cooler, so spread out furniture and pack away odds-and-ends for the summer.

•Use smooth-textured throw pillows with pastel prints.

•Use slipcovers—they are an old-fashioned but effective way to give your upholstered furniture a cool, summery look.

• Sheets tied at the legs and arms of the furniture can be an inexpensive substitute for slipcovers.

•Place outdoor items such as plants, fresh flowers and seashells around the room.

Safety on the job should be top priority

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Those of us whose jobs require material handling may already know about safe lifting techniques. But safe lifting is only one aspect of material handling; transporting the load safely is the other.

How you move or carry and put down the load is just as important as how you pick it up. The following tips can help you move the load safely and protect your back from stress, strain and potential injury.

Safe lifting

•Safe lifting means keeping your back aligned and balanced when lifting. Most standard loads under 25 pounds can be lifted and carried safely by following these steps.

•You begin by bending from the knees (not the waist), tucking your pelvis and tightening your stomach muscles. You then hug the load close to you and gradually lift yourself up using the strong muscles in your legs.

•When carrying the object, be sure not to twist or bend. Then, bend at the knees and slowly slide the load down your body until you can comfortably put the load down.

Mechanical aids

•Not all loads can (or should) be lifted by you or your coworkers.

•Carts, bins, hand trucks, dollies and fork lifts are all mechanical aids that can help transport a load without putting undue strain on your back.

•Carts and bins can be useful for light, awkward loads, while hand trucks and forklifts can help move heavier, stackable material.

•When using mechanical aids, be sure that the load is secured in place before moving, and be sure to push the device rather than pulling it.

Leaders seek guidance at post prayer breakfast

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Fort Benning annual National Prayer Breakfast will be at the Main NCO Club Feb. 4 at 6:30 a.m.

The prayer breakfast is held in conjunction with the yearly National Prayer Breakfast in Washington, D.C.

It is designed as a time of spiritual reflection for post leadership and is a reminder of our country's roots.

The National Prayer Breakfast, which is sponsored by the U.S. Senate and House prayer groups, was established with President Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1953.

The first National Prayer Breakfast, formerly known as the Presidential Prayer Breakfast, was designed to seek divine guidance for the nation's leadership and to declare their dependence on God and faith in him.

Every year thereafter, the prayer breakfast has gathered the president, members of the U. S. House and Senate, members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court and the military leadership of the armed forces.

The guest speaker for this year's post gathering will be Chaplain (Col.) Roy N. Mathis, staff chaplain, Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Monroe, Va., who was a former Fort Benning post chaplain.

Mathis is a native of South Carolina. He has served at installations throughout the United States, Vietnam, Turkey and Germany.

Mathis entered active duty as a chaplain in 1968 and brings a rich background and a wealth of experience from which to offer spiritual insight.

Tickets for the National Prayer Breakfast must be purchased in advance and cost $4 each.

For more information or tickets, contact your unit chaplain or Chaplain (Capt.) John Betlyon at the Chaplains' Office at 545-2288.

Communion set

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The date for the celebration of the First Holy Communion at the Main Post Catholic Chapel has been set for Mother's Day, May 10.

Each year Catholic children in the second grade and older are being prepared to receive First Communion.

The preparation is a step-by-step process, "a spiritual journey," according to the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults, which also includes guidelines for the initiation of children.

The communion program has already started with a meeting of the parents and teachers. The program encompasses nine themes and each of them is presented in four sessions.

The nine themes are belonging, celebrating, listening, caring, making peace, giving thanks for creation, giving thanks for new life, sharing a meal and going forth to make a better world. The life experience underlying each theme is introduced to the children by their catechist-teacher or the parent.

Following the reflection on the life experience, the children and their families discover the tradition of the Christian community's experience of the theme in a special celebration.

The parents are encouraged to be a part of the entire process by reinforcing what was taught during each session.

Each child receives a "golden book," titled "We Celebrate the Eucharist." After studying the book during preparation, it will be presented as a special gift to the Lord at the celebration of the First Communion Mass.

"Each session is taught separately to the children and to the parents," said Phil Reilly, religious education director. "The first theme is about belonging. The children are led from the experience of belonging to their families to their experience of belonging to the Christian family," Reilly said.

Controlled burning improves habitats

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles that will cover outdoor life on Fort Benning.

Controlled burning, considered a nuisance by some hunters, actually improves wildlife habitats, manages competing vegetation and enhances the appearance of the terrain, according to Chris Dunn, Natural Resource Branch chief.

Controlled burning, which happens to fall during the latter stages of the deer hunting season, is carried out during the dormant season of the year. "We try to postpone the start of burning because of the turkey nesting, which usually starts in the middle of March," said Dunn. "We don't want to destroy a lot of nests."

Fort Benning's overall burning plan is to control burning in certain areas on a three to five-year cycle from Dec. 1 to March 15. Out of 105 days, there only about 20 days of good burning weather.

Much of the controlled burning is carried out under stringent weather conditions, with both military training and smoke management considered. While some secondary smoke may remain in low lying areas early the next morning, it usually clears by midmorning.

According to Dunn, the benefits of prescribed burning have long been recognized for promoting a varied wildlife population. Deer, dove, quail and turkey are game species that benefit from controlled fire. The result of burning is improved fruit and seed production, increased numbers of flowering plants, and openings are created for feeding, dusting and travel. That means accessibility to areas otherwise impossible to travel.

The controlled burning also reduces the accumulation of combustible fuels that gather under groups of pine trees.

As of Dec. 23, Fort Benning's land managers have burned approximately 3,019 gross acres. Burning in selected areas will continue until March 15, Dunn said.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Madden comfy in Super Bowl booth

By JIM GAFFNEY
Tribune Media Services

To John Madden, life is simple: some guys, a big field, a ball. That about does it.

"Football is my game, football is my life, football is everything," the colorful analyst states. "You're not going to catch me at a golf tournament saying, 'Hi, this is John Madden ... HEY, LOOK AT THAT SHOT!' People would tell me to shut up and get out of there."

SPOTLIGHT

Ever since he joined CBS Sports 13 years ago, no one has had cause to tell Madden to keep quiet about much of anything, as the former head coach of the Oakland Raiders has become the best pro-football announcer in the business. On Sunday, beginning at 6 p.m. EST, he and partner Pat Summerall will call Super Bowl XXVI — matching the Buffalo Bills and Washington Redskins — live from the Metrodome in Minneapolis.

The AFC-champion Bills, led by the running of NFL MVP Thurman Thomas, make their second Super Bowl appearance in as many years (Buffalo lost to the New York Giants last year, 20-19). The Redskins, winners of the NFC behind the improved play of quarterback Mark Rypien, posted the league's best regular-season record (14-2) and are guided by the man many consider the NFL's finest head coach, Joe Gibbs.

Madden, whose home network televises NFC games during the season, admits he and Summerall do extra work preparing for a Super Bowl simply because they haven't seen much of the AFC representative — in this case, the Bills. "We try to balance out everything we do to prepare for the game," he says. "If we meet with one coach, we meet with the other. If we attend one team's practice, we attend the other.

Madden (standing) and Pat Summerall

"We need to work on the AFC team a little more," Madden concedes. "This year, we did see Buffalo play twice in the preseason, and while I know that isn't the same (as seeing a regular-season game), at least it gets you together with the players and coaches and gives you some background. We'll have to pay more attention to the Bills because fewer things will occur to us automatically, like they will with the Redskins."

With so many retired coaches heading to the broadcast booth, one might assume Madden had set his sights on just such a transition when his tenure with the Raiders ended on Jan. 4, 1979. However, Madden fires back a loud, "Heck, no!," and goes on to explain: "When CBS first offered me the position, they said I could try it for five games to see how things went, but I said it wasn't for me. Then, someone said if I didn't try it now — but in a few years changed my mind and wanted to do it — by then, I might not have the opportunity, so I gave it a try. The first game I did, I loved. Right then, I decided that's what I wanted to do."

What Madden also wanted to do was give up flying, and the same year he left the Raiders, he said goodbye to the friendly skies. By now, his trips around the country in his own bus are well-known and after so many years, he maintains it's still as nuch fun. "Yeah, it is," he claims. "When you do something as part of your job, it's not like taking a vacation or anything ... but if you don't fly, it really is the best way to go."

So many years on the road also have given Madden a few rules on where to go, who to see and — especially — where to eat. "I don't like truck stops," he declares. "The only flavor you get is truck-stop flavor, which is the same all over. What I like to do is to go into a small town, walk around a little bit and see what they have. One thing about having your own bus is that you have your own schedule; it's not like you don't have time to do what you want."

FRIDAY — ESPN will present a Clemson-Maryland basketball game at 12:30 p.m. and Georgia Tech at Louisville at 2:30 p.m.

SATURDAY — The Sports Channel will show the U.S. World Cup soccer team vs. the Commonwealth of Independent States at 5 p.m.

The UCLA basketball team will play at Stanford at 6 p.m. on SPORT.

SUNDAY — Super Bowl XXVI, the Buffalo Bills vs. the Washington Redskins will be on WRBL at 6 p.m.

'Victory News,' safety program scheduled

The United States Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel will air "Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division, along with a safety program on how drinking and driving can be quite a learning experience for military personnel.

If you are a subscriber to Alert Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on channel 32 to see the "Fort Benning Today" show Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. If you are a non-subscriber in Building 4, you can tune in channel 13.

'Bountiful' comes to Springer

Springer Opera House

When Ellen Conger left the Springer stage following the closing night performance of the theatre's held-over hit, "Driving Miss Daisy," last February, she told the director and other actors that it had been a "once-in-a - lifetime role." The veteran actress had performed to sellout crowds and standing ovations for weeks and knew that such plum roles for women her age were rare and precious. Little did she realize that precisely one year later "Miss Daisy" would be back on the Springer stage — sort of.

The role this time is "Miss Carrie" Watts and the play is Horton Foote's tender drama, "The Trip to Bountiful," which opened Thursday night at the Springer Opera House. "The Trip to Bountiful" garnered an Academy Award for Geraldine Page five years ago for the film version, for which Foote also wrote the screenplay.

"The Trip to The Bountiful" is the story of how Watts escapes the confines of a claustrophobic Houston apartment, where she lives with her nagging daughter-in law, Jessie Mae (played by Carol Sumner) and her financially incompetent son, Ludie, (Vic Prophet) and sets off alone on a bus trip to visit her girlhood home in Bountiful, Texas, once more before she dies — a town that ironically, does not even exist any longer.

Wearing a crumpled hat and rumpled dress, she steps aboard the bus with only her pension check (which she hid from Jessie Mae) and some small change.

Watts is simultaneouly hilarious and crafty. Having lived for years with her increasingly idealized memories of Bountiful, she does not hesitate to open the door to the unknown and plunge headlong toward her fate. She's no quaint little old lady, but a strong, shrewdly willful woman who just happess to be thoroughly decent and, in the end, thoroughly realistic.

The play opened 8 p.m. Thursday and will continue tonight, Saturday, Wednesday, Thursday and Feb. 1. A matinee performance will be Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for senior adults and $7 for students. For reservations call 327-3688.

Local photographer to have show

Columbus Museum

The Columbus Museum will exhibit a collection of underwater images by local photographer, Donald Tipton Feb. 2.

Aquamarine: Underwater Images by Donald Tipton, features images of many marine creatures, ranging from seven-foot bottlenose dolphins to one-inch feather blennies. Tipton traveled to Florida and the Bahamas to capture these underwater images.

Tipton acknowledges that while the subject matter is in no way unique, the concept and way of seeing the subject is.

"Underwater photography is too often seen as just a way to record marine species on film," says Tipton. "This collection of images tries to present the underwater environment in a way that has maybe never been seen before."

Tipton has worked in photography for 11 years. He has been in advertising photography for the past five years at the Adams Communications Group, a local advertising company. He also teaches scuba diving and underwater photography for Planet Ocean Scuba Center.

Aquamarine: Underwater Images will be on view at the Columbus Museum through May 31.

The museum is located at 1251 Wynnton Road, Columbus.

Army offers bonuses for early separation

Enlisted must apply by Feb. 29

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

In an Army that will see major strength reductions over the next three years, the simple truth is that some soldiers will have to get out whether they want to or not.

The Department of the Army's new Voluntary Incentive Program will give certain categories of soldiers facing involuntary separation the opportunity to leave the service on their own accord and receive more benefits than if they they stick it out and end up being forced to leave involuntarily, said Sina Evans of the Adjutant General Personnel Actions Branch.

The program offers two options, the Special Separation Benefit and the Voluntary Separation Incentive.

Under SSB, soldiers will receive a one-time, lump-sum payment equal to 15 percent of the soldier's annual base pay multiplied by the number of years of service.

For example, a sergeant with 14 years of service would be eligible to receive $38,042. A captain with six years would receive $29,746.

In addition, the soldier who applies for SSB will receive the same non-monetary benefits as those who are involuntarily separated, including commissary and exchange privileges for two years after the date of separation and medical benefits for four months after the date of separation, as well as other benefits, said Evans.

Enlisted, officer categories, page A-4

SSB participants will be required, however, to enter into a written agreement to serve in the Ready Reserve for a period of not less than three years.

Under VSI, the soldier will receive an annual payment equal to 2.5 percent of the soldier's annual base pay multiplied by the number of years in service. The payments will continue for twice the number of years served.

Soldiers approved for VSI will not receive the non-monetary benefits they would receive with SSB, however the total amount of money received will be larger.

In addition, soldiers under VSI must sign up for the Ready Reserve

Post to get new chief of staff

Colonel comes from 3rd ID

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's new chief of staff is Col. Burnet R. Quick.

Quick come to Fort Benning from Wurzburg, Germany, where he held the same position with the 3rd Infantry Division.

He is replacing Col. John D. Fuller, who is retiring from the Army after nearly 27 years of service.

Fuller will become manager of the Fort Benning branch of First Union Bank.

In addition to the usual schools for infantry officers—basic and advanced courses, airborne and ranger schools, Quick served here from September 1973 to July 1977.

One of those assignments was as aide de camp to the post commander, the late Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Tarpley. Quick was also the operations officer for the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, when it was part of The School Brigade.

The Louisiana native was commissioned from Marion Military Institute in 1965. His first assignment was as platoon leader in the Berlin Brigade, followed by combat assignments in Vietnam as a platoon leader and company commander.

After returning to the U.S. and serving as a company commander in the 5th Training Brigade at Fort Polk, La., he again deployed to Vietnam, serving as a company commander and intelligence officer in the 1st Infantry Division.

Quick commanded the 2nd Battalion, 30th Infantry, 3rd Infantry Division, and later commanded the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, while serving as the Aschaffenberg military community commander in the Federal Republic of Germany.

Quick has a bachelor's degree in marketing from Troy State University and a master's degree in psychology from the University of Georgia.

Other military schools he has completed include the National Was College and the British Higher Command and Staff College.

His awards and decorations include the Combat Infantryman Badge, two Silver Stars, two Legions of Merit, and six Bronze Stars.

He and his wife, Frances, formerly of Marion, Ala., have two children, Shannon and Jeffery.

Post's annual Prayer Breakfast is Tuesday

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Fort Benning's annual Prayer Breakfast will be at the Main NCO Club Tuesday at 6:30 a.m.

The guest speaker will be Chaplain (Col.) Roy N. Mathis, staff chaplain, Training and Doctrine Command, Fort Monroe, Va., who was a former Fort Benning post chaplain.

Mathis, who is a native of South Carolina, entered active duty as a chaplain in 1968.

The prayer breakfast is in conjunction with the yearly National Prayer Breakfast, formerly known as the Presidential Prayer, which is held in Washington, D.C.

It is designed as a time of spiritual reflection and provides an opportunity to pause and reflect on the moral and spiritual values upon which this nation was founded, according to post chaplain officials.

Tickets for the Prayer Breakfast must be purchased in advance and cost $4 each.

For more information or tickets, contact your unit chaplain or Chaplain (Capt.) John Betlyon at 545-2288.

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

From essay contests to fashion shows, Black History Month, designated Saturday to Feb. 29, will be celebrated on post with a variety of activities.

The post Equal Opportunity Office has planned the following displays and events, centered around the theme, "African Roots Explore New Worlds: Pre-Columbus to the Space Age."

Some of the activities are:

• Sayers Memorial Library will have book displays throughout the month of February.

• The Officers' Club will have a dinner musical on Feb. 21.

• A free ethnic food buffet will be featured at the Sand Hill NCO Club on Feb. 17.

A drawing contest for Fort Benning schoolchildren in kindergarten through second grade and essay contesst for third through fifth grade and sixth through eighth grade will be sponsored by the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Deadline for entries is Feb. 20. Artwork and essays should be based on the theme,"African Roots Explore New Worlds: Pre-Columbus to the Space Age."

For more information on any of these activities, contact the post Equal Opportunity Office at 545-2355.

Times and dates are tentative for many events so it is best to call the point of contact listed with each event for more information.

Post Equal Opportunity Officer Ellis Dandy emphasized that Black History Month is important for all ethnic groups.

"Most people misunderstand the importance of ethnic observances," he said. "They are not intended solely for that particular ethnic group, but for members of other groups as a way of educating and creating awareness. It gives people the opportunity to learn something about other peoples' cultures."

Dandy added that commanders and supervisors should allow their personnel, when time is available, the opportunity to attend the events.

"Overall, it gives the opportunity to learn something and just enjoy the fellowship of other members of the workplace," he said.

Super Bowl is 'boring bowl'

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The announcer's words Sunday morning were, "Unless you've been on Mars, you know today is Super Bowl Sunday."

Well, Emma , my better half, didn't quite make it to Mars, but she came pretty close.

As the Snively family settled in to watch the Boredom Bowl, she asked, "Who's playing?"

"Washington Dodgers and the New York Bills," I answered.

"Oh, is that Washington state?" she wanted to know. Then a thought hit her. "Bills? What kind of name is that?"

"They get their name from a dollar bill because that's all they're worth," I said.

That appeased her for a time. But then she asked her usual Sunday question, "I know I ask this every week, but is this pro or college? And you never did tell me if that was Washington state or not."

Clydette, who considers herself a football aficionado, couldn't stand it any longer. "Mom," she shrieked, "since when do college teams play on Sundays. And since when do they name their teams after states?"

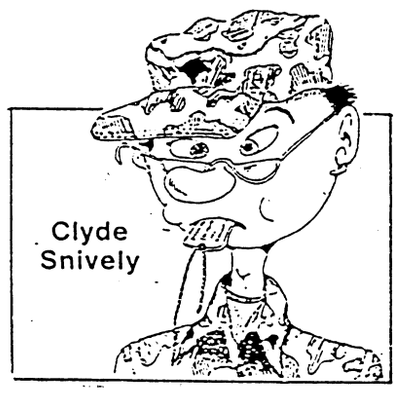
"Oh yeah, I forgot. Colleges play on Saturday. But aren't the pro teams named after states?"

"Sure they are, like the San Fransisco 49ers, the Los Angeles Rams, the Oakland Raiders, the Buffalo Bills, the other team you are now watching."

It was at that point that Emma heard the kitchen calling and decided to bake cookies. The smell of the rising dough must have cleared her mind, because she soon popped back in and said, "Washington Dodgers? Where's the sports page?"

Clydette saved her the search, pointing to the TV set as "Washington Redskins" flashed across the screen.

It was also about then I could see the NFL was about to exert its football supremacy yet another time in one more boring rout.



I even admit I slept through most of the game. And I think it even lulled Pat Summeral and John Madden as they had difficulty keeping track of downs and what plays were being reviewed.

In fact, for interest, they even had to resort to diagraming the way the tethered blimp in the Metrodome was filming the game.

The number of times the camera zoomed in on the ice castle clearly told everyone just how exciting the game inside was.

Buffalo, the city, has always been the butt of New Yorkers' jokes, much like Cleveland is for the rest of the nation.

This game didn't help that image. Thurman Thomas couldn"t find his helmet for the first two plays of the game. And it was too bad for Buffalo that Andre Reed did have his helmet, as he slammed into the turf because a zebra missed an interference call on a defender.

"Bush" is the nickname tacked on these actions.

The little demonstration of course cost Buffalo a three-point try and while it probably wasn't pivotal the way they played the rest of the game, we'll never know.

One good thing that came out of it is Jim Kelly should find ample off-season employment. He can be a spokesman for Sealy Posturepedic during the off season. All the time he spent on his back, he's definitely an expert on the supine position.

Another good thing is Bud won the Bud Bowl over Bud Light. I don't like Budweiser Beer, but I like light or lite beers even less.

Now for a prediction: it's going to be another long winter for the people of Buffalo.

America focuses on U.N.

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — For more than 40 years, United Nations' peacekeeping effort has been interwoven with the U.S. military.

Using the military to sustain or secure peace may seem a contradiction to same. It isn't if one wants to properly understand U.N. Day, which is celebrated each year.

In 1948, for instance, the United Nations truce supervision organization was established to supervise the cease fire between the newly created stage of Israel and its Arab neighbors. A Marine colonel serving as a U.N. military observer first tested the cease fire by walking the length of "no man's land," an area not under the legal jurisdiction or sovereignty of any nation, in Jerusalem. Later, U.N. peacekeeping forces in conjunction with their military observers and U.S. contingents also assisted in the supervision of cease fires in the Sinai, the Golan Height and in Lebanon.

Currently, 20 U.S. officers, including 10 from the Army, are charges with aiding the U.N. Iraq-Kuwait observation mission in reporting violations of the demilitarization zone along the Iraq-Kuwait border. Their rapid assumption of duties has enabled U.S. units to expeditiously redeploy from Southwest Asia.

The U.S. military also supports the United Nations by providing critical airlift and logistical support, and by assuring the U.N.'s ability to prevent violence in hostile areas around the globe.

With the end of the Cold War, the United States has focused more emphasis on the effectiveness and importance of U.N. peacekeeping.

The U.S. military anticipates participation in future U.N. peacekeeping missions, including El Salvador and Cambodia. But when the collective outrage of the world has been aroused like it was when Iraq invaded Kuwait, the United Nations as it has so many times before, the U.S. military is likely to be a main agent to enforce U.N. resolutions.

In 1950, the United States was the principle force carrying out United Nation Security Council resolutions to restore the Korean border at the 38th parallel. The United Nations command in Korea has since sustained the Armistice between North and South Korea by relying primarily on U.S. Forces.

By recognizing United Nations Day, we are recognizing America's indispensiblecontributions to, in President George Bush's phrase, "making gentler the face of the world." That our military, as much as our diplomats, has spearheaded this effort explains much about what kind of people Americans are and what kind of world we wish to live in

An ode to Martin L. King

Every time I hear a bell ring, I think of freedom and the late Dr. King.

He fought for freedom and our rights. He led our people through non-violent fights.

He stood his ground and demanded equality. He was a black man who kept his dignity.

His accomplishments helped you and me, and gave us all the will to be free.

If Dr. King were here today, would he be satisfied, what would he say?

Are there any leaders who can take his place, to continue the pace for our black race.

Different men, like Jessie, Louis, and Nelson, are all trying, yet our people are still dying.

Martin Luther King was a very special man, who God had sent when our life was bland.

We owe it to him and others who were involved, to love everyone, so our problems can be solved.

It's wrong to only think about Dr. King on his holiday. No, we should thank the Lord and think of him every day.

We all know that the world could be better, but King did his best. We should never forget him, even as he rests.

As individuals, your contributions to keep his dream alive, is to be black and proud, full of love for all and to walk with pride.

Coordinators integral part of post housing

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Area coordinators are an integral part of Fort Benning and help make post housing areas better places to live, according to Darlene Perry, post Community Life officer.

The coordinators are responsible for a specified area within their housing area, most having no more than 32 families, and they are usually the highest ranking military person within the area.

Coordinators are a conduit for getting problems solved, said Perry. Because they are in close contact with community leaders and attend town meetings, which are also attended by directorate chiefs, the chief of staff and the post command sergeant major, they have direct lines of communication to staff who can make things happen, she said.

Another important responsibility of the area coordinator is to pass along information, said Perry.

"Sometimes the Directorate of Engineering and Housing may have contractors coming in to do maintenance, repairs or construction work and it is easier to contact 115 area coordinators than it is to reach 4,000 residents," said Perry. It is also their duty to keep residents informed of changes to pertinent regulations and policies.

Other responsibilities include welcoming new families, referring disputes between occupants, making weekly inspections to monitor general police of their assigned areas to include letting the Community Life non-commissioned officer and DEH know when trash is not properly collected and notifying the housing division when grass of vacant quarters needs cutting.

In order to acquaint the newly assigned area coordinators with their duties, training sessions are held each month. At these sessions, the coordinator is given a copy of U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 210-1, which governs his or her duties and what is expected of them.

Within 15 days of appointment, the coordinator must contact the community life NCO, the sponsor unit point of contact and each resident of his assigned area. In this same time frame, the individual must identify and appoint in writing the next senior resident as his assistant. They must also appoint senior occupants of multi-family dwellings as building coordinators.

They are required to attend town meetings, assist housing mayors in promoting communications and assist the Community Life NCO in activities to support the community.

Sponsor units of the housing areas also hold meetings to get involved and coordinators are accountable to sponsor unit commanders.

"Everybody is proud of Fort Benning. It wouldn't be that way if the coordinators didn't remind people about the required standards of appearance for quarters areas," said Perry. "Some are very enthusiastic. They also help save Army dollars, by maintaining good quality of life standards," she added.

ARMY NEWS BRIEFS

Early outs stop

An early-out program for enlisted soldiers that began Oct. 1, has been temporarily suspended.

The voluntary early-out program was suspended Jan. 17 in order to assess its impact in light of the new voluntary separation programs and changes in the retention control point system, said Army personnel officials.

Applications for the fiscal 1992 enlisted voluntary early transition program not approved by Jan. 17 will be returned, according to a Total Army Personnel Command message.

Not to be confused with the voluntary separation incentive or selected separation benefit program, the voluntary early transition program allowed soldiers with at least three years of active service the option of leaving the Army. Some enlisted soldiers with six to 18 years service can still opt for VSI/SSB.

DoD accepts medal

Deputy Secretary of Defense Donald P. Atwood recently accepted an offer by the government of Saudi Arabia to award the Kuwait Liberation Medal to members of the U.S. military who directly participated in Operation Desert Storm.

More information will be published by the service secretaries.

If you are planning to attend Troy State University at Fort Benning as a beginning freshman who is under 21 years of age, who has never attended another college or who is transferring less than 30 quarter hours/20 semester hours of credit, you must submit an acceptable ACT/SAT test score. Soldier wins Girl Scout 5-miler

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

A Fort Benning soldier won the 5-mile event of the 12th annual Barnett Bank/Concharty Girl Scout Cookie Run at Lakebottom Park Saturday.

Charles Dent, assigned to 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, won the race with a time of 24:42.

He has also been selected for the Armed Forces Cross Country Team and is preparing himself for the Armed Forces Track Championships to be held in March in Lagos, Nigeria.

The run was a huge success, according to Lana Shealy, public relations coordinator for the Girl Scouts.

More than 1,000 people from 4 to 81 years old participated in the 5-mile run, 1.5-mile run and the 1.5-mile speedwalk.

Connie Robertson of Hapeville, Ga. came in first in the women's division of the 5-mile run with a time of 31:09.

Scott Teixeira of Columbus won the 1.5-mile run with a time of 7:42 and on the women's side Kelly Cook came across the finish line first with a time of 8:20.

In the 1.5 mile speedwalk, Samuel Padgett, won the men's division and Sherryl Rae Wollen took top honors in the women's division. Times were not available for the speedwalk due to a malfunction in the timer.

Clearcutting promotes healthy trees

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Editor's note: This is one of a series of articles that will cover outdoor life on Fort Benning.

Maintaining a healthy growing forest on Fort Benning's 182,000 acres requires time.

According to Directorate of Engineering and Housing officials, regeneration, or the planting and cutting of trees, is the end result of many years of tender loving care on trees from the time they start out at seed stage until they reach a point of maturity.

"Trees to a forester are just like a crop," DEH officials said. "They manage the crop during its lifetime, and when it's mature, it's harvested and replanted, and they start all over again."

Officials said that when a tree or stand of trees are ready to be reforested, there are several ways to accomplish this.

The first method is natural regeneration, where a number of trees are left as a source of seed and all the other trees are cut out. Then the soil is prepared to get a good seed catch.

The second method is removing all the trees and replanting the area. The area can now be planted with genetically improved trees which have been developed through research at the Georgia Forestry Commission and various other universities throughout the Southeast.

On sites where the vegetation grows better, it's hard to get a natural seed catch because of competing vegetation, officials said. If the trees grow better on the site, then all the other vegetation grows better on that site too, they said.

The infestation of the southern pine beetle is another reason for removing all the trees. When the beetle infects the area, the trees die and there is no longer a seed source to reforest the area.

According to the officials, sometimes there are just a few pine trees, but a very heavy undergrowth. In order to reforest, all that must be cleared.

"It's a lengthy process, requiring a lot of planning in order to maintain a healthy forest," said the officials. "And it benefits training, as well as wildlife."

ENERGY WATCH

By Jennie L. McRae
Energy Branch

If you are buying or building a new home, or just making improvements to the one where you now live, don't forget that proper landscaping can help you reduce your heating and cooling costs by 10 to 30 percent, according to the American Association of Nurserymen.

Landscaping plays this money-saving role by moderating the temperatures inside your house. Outside, your home will sport a more colorful and lively yard and garden.

To get started with your landscaping project, take stock of the features of your home and the way your house is situated on your land. Next, think about the places in your house that feel uncomfortably cold in winter and hot in summer.

Through well-planned landscaping, you can better regulate the internal temperatures of your home. For example, if rooms on the north side of your house are unpleasantly cold during the winter, you could block frigid winds with plants. Trees or shrubs could be used to shield the exterior wall of the room or they could be planted as part of a windbreak to channel cold winter winds away from your house.

Windbreaks are one way to force the wind to alternate routes to avoid your home. Windbreaks can be created with any series of barriers, such as channels of trees, hedges and fences. Generally, they should be located on the north and west sides of your home.

Trees used as windbreaks should be sturdy trees that resist the drying effects of strong winds. They should also be selected for their ability to survive severe storms and their capacity to withstand the stress of high winds. Coniferous plants and trees, or those that keep their leaves throughout the year, are always a good bet for windscreens. Check with the experts at your local garden center to find out which trees or shrubs work best for your climate and how to place trees and shrubs for an energy-saving landscape.

One effective way to look at landscaping is to determine how you can best use the sun in both winter and summer. The sun plays as large a role as the wind in affecting the temperatures inside your house. Trees, shrubs and other plants that are deciduous (lose their leaves in the winter) can be used to soak up the sun's rays and shade your home during the hot summer. During the winter, they allow the sun to strike your home's exterior walls and enter your home's windows and sliding glass doors.

To best capture the winter sun's warming rays, plant deciduous trees along the southern and western sides of your home. Since deciduous trees shed their leaves in the fall, they can shade your home during the summer and expose it to the sun during the winter.

Trees are a big part of an energy-saving landscape project, but vines, water, rocks, earth-berms, walls, fences and natural landforms can play an important role as well. Ask the professionals at your local garden center for advice on home landscaping. It may help if you hire a landscape professional to assure that you get the most for your money. Either way, you will reduce your heating and cooling bills if you keep these guidelines in mind.

Landscaping provides an alternative to consuming excessive amounts of energy to warm and cool your home. Do your part for the environment and live more comfortably year round—through careful landscaping.

HAPPY NEW YEAR, CHINESE STYLE

by Marilyn Dayton
Special to The Bayonet

There is no better place to celebrate the Chinese New Year -- the Year of the Monkey -- than at The Mandarin House Chinese Restaurant, 2461 Airport Thruway. This award-winning restaurant will offer an extra special menu on Tuesday, February 4th and Wednesday, February 5th, with items that are traditionally eaten to bring "good luck, good health and long life, wealth and prosperity in the new year".

Mrs. Kai Wang, owner and manager, has been pleased with the results of the New Year's celebration over the past eight years and made the decision to extend the celebration to two days this year due to the continued interest of her patrons.

This year is designated as "the Year of the Monkey" in accordance with the Chinese zodiac which consists of 12-year cycles, each represented by an animal. Those people born in the years 1992, 1980, 1968, 1956, 1944 and 1932 are represented by the Monkey, and are said to be very intelligent influencers of people and enthusiastic achievers. But, they can be easily discouraged and become confused. Mrs. Wang says, "If you were born in the Year of the Monkey 1932, you would be celebrating your 60th birthday this year, and it should be a very special birthday where your children should plan to honor you with a big celebration."

Traditionally, the Chinese New Year is a time for family and is celebrated for three days with feasts and activities. The first day is set aside for the immediate family; the second day takes the eldest son to the homes of friends, aunts and uncles where he pays special respect to elderly relatives; and the third day brings married daughters back home with their husbands and children.

At home, where red joyful decorations and messages abound in every room and doorway, tables of honor are prepared -- one for the ancestors, another of red candles and cloths for Mammon, the god of prosperity.

Children are instructed to use only "good" words during the holidays and, at midnight, they bow three times hands to forehead and three times forehead to floor to honor their ancestors. After this show of respect, they open red gift envelopes of money presented to them by their grandparents. It is also at midnight that the family shares a six or eight-dish meal, each holding a special meaning. Dumplings filled with coins (for wealth), nuts and sugar (for luck and happiness) are an especially important part of the meal.

The Mandarin House, which has banquet rooms for parties up to 100, is open for lunch Monday through Saturday from 11 AM to 2:30 PM. Dinners are served Monday through Thursday from 4:30 to 10PM, Friday and Saturday from 4:30 to 11PM, and Sunday (buffet-style) from 4:30 to 9:30 PM. A complete buffet is also available from 11:30 AM to 2:30 PM on Sundays. Both smoking and non-smoking sections are available, and the restaurant's bar is always open. For more information, to place take-out orders, or for reservations call 327-6044.

Have a Happy Chinese New Year!

Bible study offers children education about attitudes

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

A Bible study entitled "Personal Attitudes Relating to You" for children 4 years old through sixth grade will be from noon until 2 p.m. twice a month at the Religious Education Center.

The study will start Saturday and continue through June.

"The children will learn what the scriptures tell us about how to live," said La Tanja Wagstaff, teacher for the group.

Additionally, the topics on how to share your faith and how to give will be discussed. The basic idea for the program is to direct the children in the right kind of attitude based on biblical principles.

"The children will have fun; there will be games, stories, music and puzzles to make the Bible come alive," Wagstaff said.

When asked what prompted her to begin such a group, Wagstaff said she originally started a program in her home.

"The children would gather to hear of the scriptures and watch Christian videos. They seemed to enjoy this type of environment; and, for many, it is the only biblical education they experience, " she said.

"Eventually, my home was not adequate for the size of the group, and now we will meet at the Religious Education Center," said Wagstaff.

The program is interdenominational and will include refreshments. Registration will take place at the study.

For information call Wagstaff at 682-4083 or Shirley Lee at 689-7239.

Post needs volunteers

Drawdown, working spouses threaten future volunteerism

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

With the drawdown of the military, it is expected that there will be a corresponding drawdown in the number of people affiliated with the post who are available to donate their time to all the causes that volunteers support at Fort Benning according to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

This and the fact that there are so many working spouses have made volunteerism in the future a concern for Case.

Kathy Case

Estimates are also indicating that 25 percent of the civilian work force will be eliminated with the downsizing, and this will have a dramatic effect on the military community's quality of life standards, according to Case.

"Soldiers and their family members will need to take the initiative to ensure that there are continued services and programs," Case said. "This will mean volunteering."

Without volunteers, there would be no American Red Cross volunteers at Martin Army Hospital working in the clinics, setting up appointments, filing, doing distribution or staffing the "warm and fuzzy" cart.

There would not be 450 people helping to coach Youth Services sports, no Santa's Castle giving toys to the needy on post at Christmas and no Officers Wives Club or Enlisted Wives Club scholarships, just to name a few.

"Last year 2,000 people volunteered $3.8 million worth of time on this post," Case said. "That is a tremendous investment for the community. I can't imagine life on Fort Benning without volunteers. Services and programs would be radically changed."

What do volunteers gain from this experience?

Case noted that volunteering in some cases can be a stepping stone to a career, giving them work experience if they have been out of the job market for awhile, or training in something they always wanted to learn.

She added that one way all ranks are able to volunteer is through Combined Federal Campaign funding designated for volunteer child care. Most agencies have a budget that allows for this.

Those interested in volunteering on post or at least researching the possibilities should contact Case at 545-5602.

ACS, others sponsor new programs

Army Community Service

Army Community Service Outreach and the University of Georgia Extension Service will co-sponsor a series of programs at Custer Terrace Community Life Center.

Military families residing on and off post are encouraged to participate in these education programs to obtain information on how to keep their families healthy.

"Bring the whole family and join us for a morning of fun, and some tasty food samples on Feb. 7 from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Custer Terrace Community Life Center," stated Dana Pund, interim mayor, Custer Terrace.

Representatives from the Georgia Extension will provide information on nutrition, gardening, and low cost cooking.

Dates and times of the programs, to be held at Custer Terrace Community Life Center, building 10800, located behind the post office by Custer Terrace shoppette, will be listed in a future issue.

Guest lecture series continues Thursday

Fort Benning Schools

Talks About Young Children, Fort Benning Schools' series of lectures for Fort Benning parents, and educators continues. The fourth lecture in the series will take place Thursday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at Dexter School.

This fourth session will be "From Cradle to Comics: Instilling the Love of Reading in Your Child." Brenda Weitzber, an authority on early childhood, will focus on ways that parents can instill the love of reading in their children.

Weitzberg will explain and demonstrate several reading strategies that parents can use when reading to young children of different ages. Weitzberg is a training coordinator for Friends of the Family in Baltimore.

Participation in the session is free, and is open to all Fort Benning parents, care givers and educators. Since space in each session will be limited, a phone reservation for each session will be required.

The program is a series that is bringing recognized experts in the field of early childhood to Fort Benning on five different evenings. The fifth, and last session of the series will take place March 5. Its topic, "Being a Parent: How to Meet the Needs of Your Young Child While Meeting Your Own Needs, Too" will be presented by Dr. Patricia Nida, author of "Kids on the Move."

To register for the Thursday session with Weitzberg, phone 545-2500 between of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Reservations will be taken until close of business Monday, or until the session is full.

Children will not be permitted to attend the sessions. Tot Town will be open from 6:15 until 9:15 p.m. on the evenings that the series is conducted.

A reservation with Tot Town as well as payment of the fee at Tot Town will be the responsibility of the parent.

Volunteers now needed at OWC Thrift Shop

By Michelle Leonard
Officers' Wives' Club

Most military installations have some type of consignment sales shop where buyers pick up good deals on quality used items; but many don't realize just how profitable these stores are to everyone.

Last year, more than $16,000 of the OWC Thrift Shop profits helped support the community through the OWC Welfare Fund.

In 1991, the Welfare Fund donated $1,000 to Santa's Castle, a non-profit organization on Fort Benning that helps needy military families at Christmas.

Army Community Services received $2,300 from the OWCs Welfare Fund to support the ACS Food Locker and the Lending Basket program. ACS is a non-profit organization that assists soldiers during financial crisis by way of food, clothes, loans, and grants for school.

Profits from the Thrift Shop benefit the Fort Benning Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts. Last year, each organization were awarded $500 by OWC.

Local organizations including the Department of Family and Child Services, the First Steps program, Spencer High School's Athletic Booster Club, the National Infantry Museum's volunteer childcare fund, and the high risk nursery at the Medical Center are just a few of those helped by the patronage at the Thrift Shop on Fort Benning.

Scholarships for dependent high school seniors and EWC and OWC club members continuing education scholarships are awarded each spring by the Officers' Wives' Club.

If you have just arrived at Fort Benning, or plan to leave soon, the Thrift Shop will consign 100 items for you. Any other time, 10 items will be accepted per day per building. Thrift Shop hours are 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., Tuesdays, Thursdays and first and third Saturdays.

Consignments are taken from 10 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays and by appointment only on Saturday; priority is given to those going to new assignments.

For more information on the Thrift Shop, contact Donna Ziegler at 687-4830.

Child care is provided. Strong spouses are always welcome to assist in moving heavy items.

Post employee 'has come a long way'

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Shirley H. Merritt has come a long way in the 30 years that she has worked in civil service positions.

Currently a budget analyst intern in the Comptroller Career Program, Director of Resource Management, at Fort Benning, Merritt has a dedication to her goals that not everyone has.

A Columbus native, she began her first job at age 17 as a clerk/typist who assisted the ordering officer of the Quartermaster Division. She later became the key punch operator for the editing section of Quartermaster.

Upon getting married and moving to Athens, she served as a payroll clerk for the Soil Conservation Office for three years.

When her family made the move back to Columbus, Merritt came back to Fort Benning to do overseas orders for the Adjutant General Order Section. This position was followed by a job as assistant ordering officer for the Procurement Branch.

After the birth of her second son, she decided to try staying at home for awhile. It lasted 2-1/2 months.

When she went back to work, Merritt served as a civilian company clerk for the 72nd Company, 7th Battalion, U.S. Army Infantry School, a unit that trained non-commissioned officers going to Vietnam.

It was after this that she became a clerk/typist and then training technician in Academic Records for U.S. Army Infantry School. During this time Merritt made the decision to go college. It took her 10 years.

"That's a long time to go to school and stay motivated," she said, "and it was a big financial burden. But I wanted the education to break into the GS-5 level, get into another field and be able to retire at a higher rate. Also, by this time I was raising my two sons alone."

After her two-year degree in general studies from Columbus College, she became a budget assistant in the Maintenance Division under Directorate of Logistics, and then two years later took a position as a budget assistant for the Supply Division.

Merritt

Merritt earned her bachelor's degree in social science from Troy State, and she graduated cum laude in the the top 10 percent of her class.

When she was selected into the Comptroller Career Program in August 1990, after her four-year degree, it was another big decision for her.

It meant going back to a GS-5 for one year of the two-year program, and it involved willingness to sign a mobility statement that she would agree to move following her training if a job could not be found for her in the area.

However, she said yes to both because it was another goal she was committed to attaining.

"I wanted more challenge in my work and the chance to feel that I had something significant to contribute."

From Jan. 26 to Feb. 7, Merritt will be at her last on-site required training course at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., and in August of this year, she will have completed the program.

Her sons, Alan, 27, and David, 24, are now grown.

What advice would she give to others trying to do the same thing?

"Instead of looking at a tremendous amount of achievements looming ahead, break things down into increments -- this paper, this test, this course," she said.

"Look for scholarships through various organizations such as the Harris County American Business Women's Association where I am a member."

"Finally," she said, "never stop networking or learning. No job is so meaningless it doesn't increase your knowledge. And volunteer. It's just another way to help get experience."

Weapons make good showing

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Fort Benning conducted a combined arms live-fire exercise Jan. 24 at the Cactus training range.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment supported the exercise.

The M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle, AH-64A Apache helicopter, M-109A3 Self Propelled Howitzer, M-1A1 Abrams, M-548 Ammo Carrier, M-577A2 Command Vehicle, M-981 Fire Support Team Vehicle, M-106A2 Mortar Carrier, and four engineer vehicles, were a few of the vehicles on exhibit at the post CALFEX.

"This was an impressive display of joint fire power, and I think the entire team did a great job putting on the show," said Maj. Gary Kostick, a student at the Air Command School, Fort Rucker, Ala.

There was also a sniper team demonstration provided by the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

"1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's job is to provide command and control, a ground maneuver company and one support company," said Sgt. 1st Class Kevin Mejeske, tasking non-commissioned officer for 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "To coordinate these events, takes time and a lot of manpower," he said.

"From the man who pulls the trigger to the man who stands out on gate guard, everyone has their part," said Spc. Merle Schmidt, Company A, 1st Bn., 29th Infantry Regiment, who was in charge of movement and transportation for the exercise.

"I would love to be in one of those Bradleys shooting up the range, but everyone has a job to do," he said.

Other units at the CALFEX were 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment; 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry: 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery and the 1st Battalion, 111th Aviation, a Florida Air National Guard unit.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Winter Olympics coverage scheduled

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

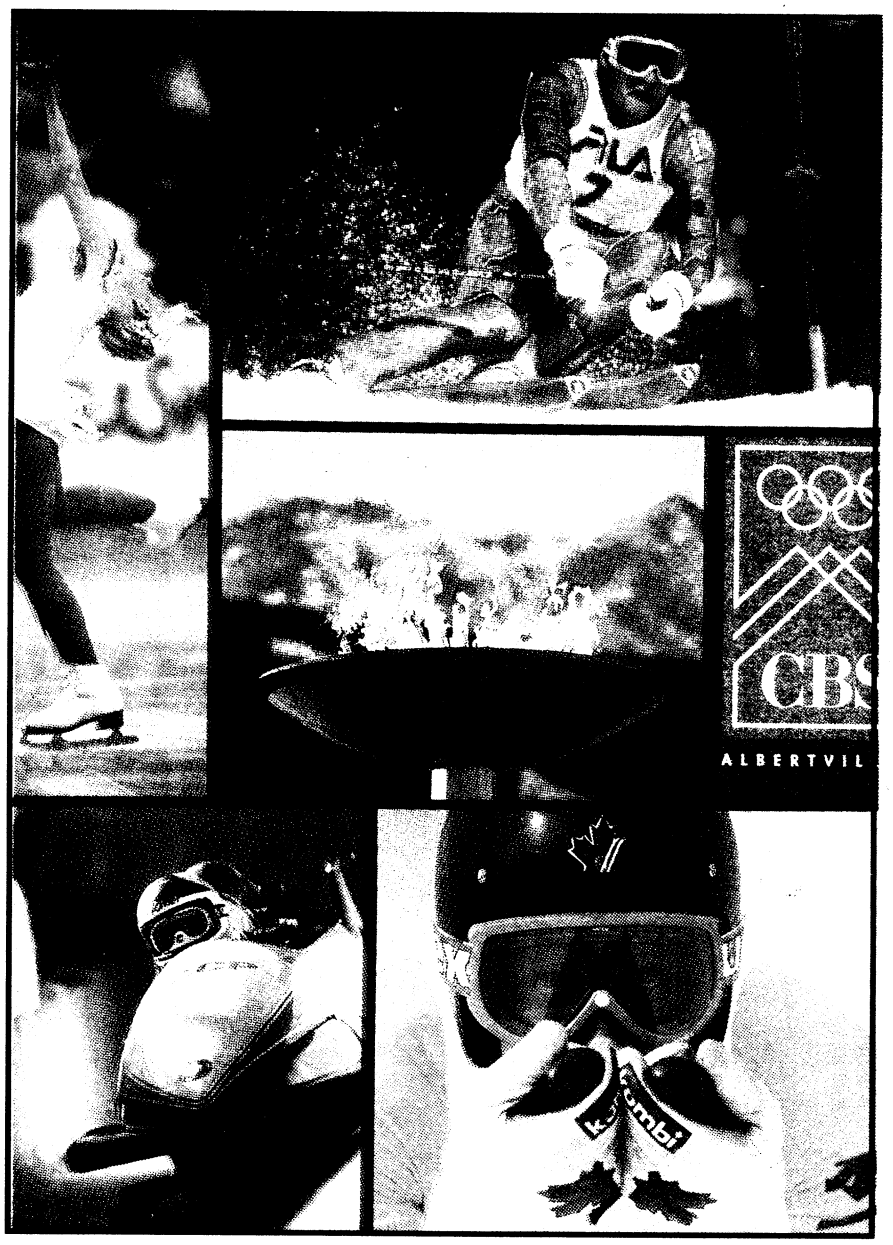
Though some people never may have heard of the French city of Albertville, an event about to draw the attention of the world will change that forever.

On Saturday, Feb. 8, the opening ceremonies of the 1992 Olympic Winter Games will be conducted there ... marking the start of approximately

SPOTLIGHT

116 hours of coverage being planned through the Sunday, Feb. 23 finale by CBS, which launches its prime-time Olympic telecasts with a two-hour preview special Thursday. "CBS This Morning" co-host Paula Zahn and baseball commentator Tim McCarver will anchor the evening programs, to be shown in the United States on a tape-delayed basis — because Albertville is six hours ahead of the Eastern time zone — though all of the morning offerings and some weekend-afternoon packages will include live presentations of certain events, particularly hockey, skiing and speed-skating competitions. Other correspondents serving as Olympic anchors include Greg Gumbel and Harry Smith (weekday morning), James Brown (weekday midday), Pat O'Brien (weekday late-nights), and Andrea Joyce and Jim Nantz (weekend daytime).

Additionally, CBS has recruited several past medalists as analysts in their respective areas of expertise. Scott Hamilton, Katarina Witt and Tracy Wilson will cover figure skating; Eric Heiden will size up the speed skaters; Christin Cooper and Hank Kashiwa will observe the skiing contests, along with former national downhill champion Andy Mill; and Mike Eruzione, the captain of the U.S. team that emerged victorious over their Russian counterparts in 1980's so-called "Miracle on Ice," will talk about the performances in that sport. "I will comment right when the skater is on," says consecutive two-time gold-medal-winner Witt, "and I will do more things before and after. I will analyze what is happening that day, and what we can expect." Currently touring professionally with fellow Olympic champ Brian Boitano, the German athlete plans to draw upon her own memories in her reporting approach. She reasons, "It's just very difficult when you sit there and you've just come off the ice, and you try to catch your breath, and you get questions. You don't even remember the questions."



Athletes will compete in 12 medal sports, beginning Feb. 8

ABC and NBC have had the American broadcast rights to the Olympics in recent years, but CBS' history with the Games dates back to 1960, when its coverage from Squaw Valley, Calif. made it the first U.S. network to report on the international winter contest extensively. That amounted to 15 hours of programming over 10 days, but another example of the changed times is demonstrated by the price that CBS paid for the 1992 edition, a reported $243 million. (Cable's TNT has the rights to 45 hours of afternoon coverage, arranged so as not to conflict with CBS.) The broadcast headquarters are situated in Moutiers, the gathering spot for reports that will be coming in from 10 different Olympic venues spread out over 618 square miles of the Savoy region of the French Alps.

Prime-time co-host Zahn recalls that she "really got a very special introduction" to that area when she first visited it last June, "since I was introduced to it through (Olympic organizing-committee president and skiing legend) Jean-Claude Killy's eyes ... and through his helicopter. He offered to show me each of the individual venues, and what it took me two hours to see, it took my crew — traveling the same route via car — seven days and 3200 miles." Athletically inclined herself, the personable Zahn claims her own history of swimming competition throughout her high-school and college years has come in handy for her latest job. "I've found that I speak a common language with many of these athletes," she reflects, "and I'm not only in awe of their drive, but also of what they force their bodies to do every day."

'The Party's Over' on this week's schedule

Local TV show helps nab suspects

WXTX-TV

After being on the air less than 30 days, "Valley's Most Wanted," a joint project between the Columbus Police Department and WXTX-TV, demonstrated the power of television and the long arm of the law.

Following the airing of a profile on Nathaniel E. Searcy, the Columbus Police Department received a tip. Searcy, who had been sought since April, was wanted for rape, aggravated assault, aggravated sodomy, burglary and attempted auto theft. A viewer called the "Valley's Most Wanted" hot line, (800) 226-WXTX and reported Searcy could be found in Erie, Pa. Searcy was apprehended there and returned to Columbus to face charges.

"We think that this program is a valuable tool, and we are thankful to WXTX for going to such great lengths to serve the community," said Maj. John Wood of the Columbus Police Department.

Wood also said that he felt the community should be thankful and proud of this public service and that he felt it is beneficial and expects it to continue being so.

Ed Groves, general manager of WXTX, who initiated the project said, "This is great. We view this area as an opportunity for us to serve our community and help our law enforcement friends. Capturing someone wanted for such brutal crimes makes all of us involved very proud."

"America's Most Wanted," which can be seen on Fox 54 Friday at 8 p.m., spawned the idea of local "Most Wanted" programs, which have been adopted by a number of affiliates around the country.

Captures to date include:

• Nathaniel Searcy — wanted for aggravated assault, aggravated sodomy, burglary, robbery and attempted auto theft. Searcy was apprehended in Pennsylvania. He was profiled Dec. 13 through 19.

• Ricky George Jr. — wanted for aggravated and disorderly conduct. He was profiled Jan. 1 through 9.

Army submits FY '93 budget

Fort Benning to see cutbacks

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The Army requested $63.6 billion in total obligation authority for fiscal 1993. This total is $4.2 billion less than the request submitted last year in the 1992 and 1993 biennial budget submission.

The budget continues the declining trend that started in 1986. The buying power of the Army for 1993 is 28 percent lower than in 1990.

Fort Benning will experience some of this budget crunch, but, with current hiring restrictions, will probably lose few employees, if current FY 93 guidance holds, according to David L. Flo, director of Resource Management.

Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, in a speech to civilian employees, said the post can expect a dip from the current 3,037 to 2,905 civilian employees, a decrease of 132 employees by 1995. We can expect to lose 1,500 soldiers in the cutbacks.

However, White said, as with the reduction in force carried out in 1991, many of the job losses can be buffered by early retirements, normal retirements and changes in duty stations for both military and civilian.

"I think we can expect very little change for Fort Benning for 1993," said Flo. "Unless something drastic happens with the budget, I think we can expect the continuing steady decline that everyone on Fort Benning has been briefed on."

The proposed budget must still be passed by congress.

Patterson award set

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Patterson Award, given to outstanding infantry graduates of the Officer Candidate School, will be presented in a 10 a.m. ceremony, Wednesday, at Wigle Hall, building 2769.

This year's recipient is 2nd. Lt. William J. Hoy, who attended OCS from Nov. 4, 1990 to Feb. 7, 1991.

Hoy was the distinguished leadership graduate and honor graduate of his class. He is currently assigned to the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

Named for Judge Robert P. Patterson, a World War I Army officer cited for gallantry who served as secretary of war under President Harry Truman, the award is presented on or around his Feb. 12 birthday to honor the most outstanding infantry graduate of OCS for the previous year, said Capt. Judy Scroggins, ceremony organizer.

Scroggins said the award is based on such qualities as leadership and academic ability, aptitude and character.

Medal of Honor recipient retired Col. Robert B. Nett will be the guest speaker for the ceremony.

Drinking is illegal for troops under age 21

By Corinna Todd
Directorate of Community Activities

Soldiers or other individuals who offer a drink to someone under the age of 21 are actually committing a misdemeanor and could be fined as much as $1,000 or sent to jail for up to one year or both.

Soldiers and their guests, even thoseunderage, are encouraged to frequent the clubs on post, but they are not allowed to be served alcoholic beverages, according to John Bush who oversees overall club operations as the chief of Community Operations Division.

While enjoying club facilities, soldiers may be tempted to buy drinks for underage guests. Doing so can spell trouble for them and those who serve them.

The following points were made in a memorandum prepared by Capt. Wilhelmenia DeVone-Harvey, from the Administrative and Civil Law Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, concerning the transfer of alcohol to minors.

"Under Georgia law, an individual may be charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor," (Georgia Code 16-12-1), said Devone-Harvey.

If an individual is found guilty of contributing to the delinquency of a minor, the penalties are:

- First offense — Guilty of a misdemeanor. Fined not less than $200 nor more than $500 or imprisoned for not less than one month nor more than five months, or both fined and imprisoned.
- Second offense — Guilty of a misdemeanor. Fined not less than $400 nor more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not less than three months nor more than one year, or both fined and imprisoned.
- Third offense or subsequent offense — Guilty of a felony. Fined not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000 or imprisoned for not less than one year nor more than three years, or both fined and imprisoned.

The individual may also be charged with furnishing or purchasing of alcoholic beverages for persons under age (Georgia Code 3-3-23).

Vietnam vet gets award

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A Columbus resident was honored Jan. 30 for wounds he received when his helicopter was shot down during the Vietnam War.

Retired Spec. 4 Kenneth McGarity was awarded the Purple Heart with one bronze oak leaf cluster, the Air Medal with numeral 2 and one "V" device for valor, the National Defense Service Medal, the Vietnam Service Medal and the Republic of Vietnam Campaign Ribbon in a ceremony in Infantry Hall, building 4.

Fort Benning Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White presented the awards to McGarity, who is now blind, has lost both of his legs and part of one hand as a result of the accident. He received all of his awards in a large display case that was donated by the Association of the United States Army and the Non-Commissioned Officers' Association.

McGarity received his first Purple Heart for wounds he said he received when he and a buddy were in a place they weren't supposed to be.

McGarity said that the truck he was driving in a danger zone was hit on the driver's side by an enemy rocket, destroying the vehicle and wounding him and his buddy.

McGarity waited for more than 20 years to receive these additional awards, which he failed to receive when he medically retired in late 1969.

PAs receive commission at MACH

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Four Martin Army Community Hospital physician assistants became commissioned officers Tuesday in the Baugh Conference Room at the hospital as part of ceremonies held simultaneously worlwide at 11 a.m. Eastern Standard Time.

Chief warrant officers promoted were Ronald E. Ellyson, Bruce G. McLennan, William L. Randall and Steven W. Salyer. Ellyson and Randall were commissioned captains, while Salyer and McLennan received second lieutentant commissions.

Gary S. Yon, another PA at the hospital, received his commission at the same time at Fort Rucker, Ala. About 320 active duty and 12 Reserve Component physician assistants were commissioned worldwide.

Physician assistants, commonly known as PAs, have always been warrant officers in the Army, according to the hospital's public affairs officer, Jean Dickerson.

Now the Army is following the footsteps of the other armed forces, who began commissioning their PAs more than four years ago.

The professional PA program started at Duke University in 1967 with graduation in 1969. The Army's first class graduated in 1971.

Most of the Army's first assistants were senior medical corpsmen with Vietnam combat experience.

The main role of the PA is providing care to the soldier in battalion aid stations. They also man troop medical clinics and clearing stations.

"There's no question about the role of the PA in today's hospital," said Hospital Commander Col. Vernon Spaulding. Spaulding said the PA is vitally important to the level of care in today's Army hospital.

Commissioned assistants will become part of the Army Medical Specialist Corps, which includes dieticians, occupational and physical therapists.

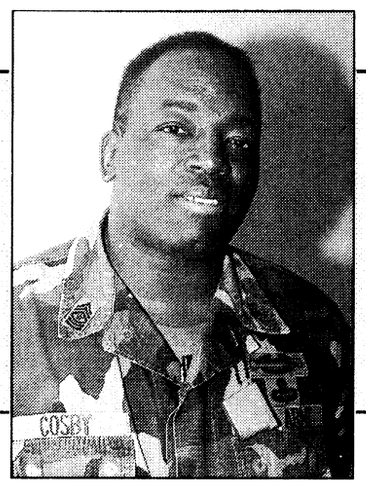
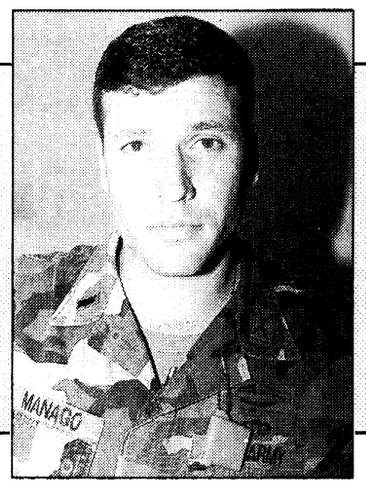
VARIOUS VOICES

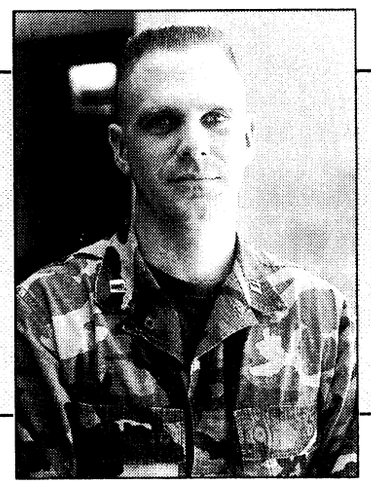
What do you think is the cause of the decline in American industry?



Sgt. Maj. George Cosby, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "There are several factors, but poor leadership management at the top, a lack of work ethics and allowing foreign industry to push American products off the market are several good reasons."

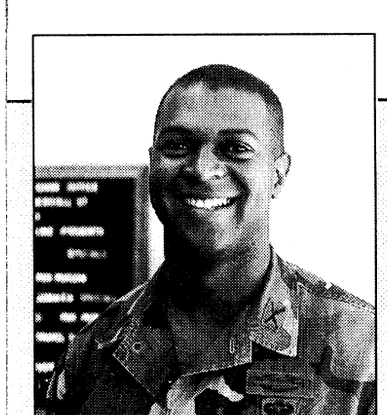


1st Lt. Rinaldo Manago, Infantry Officer Advanced Course 2-92— "The decline in American industry is caused by failure of the civilian community to provide innovative leadership to motivate the American populace. They should take example from the American military."

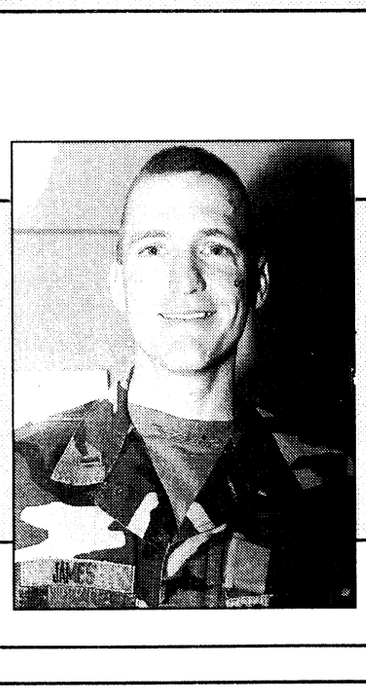


Capt. David High, Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "A mixture of overregulation by the government on private industry, inflated expectations of the American worker and unions is the cause for decline in American industry."

Pvt. 1 Robert Stull, Company B, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry, Infantry Training Center — "The decline in American industry is caused by the general laziness of American workers."



1st Lt. Darius Powell, Infantry Mortar Leader's Course 4-92— "Degradation of the American work ethic is the reason American industry has declined. People just aren't willing to work anymore."



2nd Lt. Bret James, Company E, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment— "American industry has declined as a result of reliance upon foreign innovation. We're used to having foreign goods to rely on. Corporate upper management doesn't reinvest enough capital into domestic research and development. "

Drawdown brings questions

COMMENTARY

As we downsize the Army, work at being the best post anywhere, and decide how to do more with less, I find it interesting some of the concerns that are being raised — at least to this lowly writer.

First, there's the matter of ear plugs.

A first sergeant from the training center called to say moving the ear plug container from dangling from the front pocket where it snared h-harnesses (LBE for you young soldiers) and even M-16s, was not a good idea.

He said the problem was that it made it difficult to remove the container to get the ear plugs out, and he predicted a rash of broken containers.

Not being smart enough to field a question of that magnitude, I turned to Sgt. 1st Class I.M. Strack, who, while not quite in the brown boot Army, did serve in the white name tag, black and gold U.S. Army tag Army.

He remembers the little clear cylinders ear plugs used to come in with the screw on cap.

"Now those were hard to get into," he said. "We, too, wore them from the button hole on the lapel.

The choice was to try and unfasten the small chain or unscrew the cap — neither was an easy solution.

"Eventually we resorted to field expedient means. We started using the small alligator snaps used to hold drapes on runners. We'd paint them black so they wouldn't shine, and fasten them to the button hole. Then when we needed the ear plugs, we merely unsnapped them from the button hole, unscrewed the cap, took out the ear plugs, then replaced the empty vial on the lapel.

"I remember how people used to paint them using camouflage designs. In some units, usually the Cav, they'd wrap them in colored tape to show what unit they belonged to."

I thanked Strack for this bit of historic wisdom and told him I'd pass it along for whatever good it might do.

Another caller who wouldn't identify herself, but must have been a secretary, wanted to know who was changing correspondence regs and why everyone was so fussy.

"It's like they're looking for upside down periods. They say we have to indent paragraphs four spaces instead of five. Is this a cost savings move — one less space on paragraphs is going to save us reams of paper?

"And some eagle-eyed person is checking signature blocks just to make sure the block is aligned perfectly on the center of the page."

"Don't they realize the person getting the letter won't know the difference?"

I told her I figured that was just part of doing it right the first time, every time. "We have our standards and we need to meet them."

She didn't want to hear that and hung up.

Next a person in charge of emptying the can recycle containers came by.

"Can't people read? Don't they know the difference between a trash can and a recycle container?"

"We're trying to save the government money, actually put money back into our soldier fund and these people dump trash into the recycle containers."

He was fuming. And I didn't blame him.

I told him what I thought he needed to do was to put recycle containers and trash containers side by side with a sign, "This is for trash and this is for cans."

"They're not reading the signs we've got now, why read another sign?"

"Maybe the print's too small. You've got too many words. You need to boil it down to the basics," I said.

"Why don't you try, 'Trash this container and I'll break your arms.'"

He liked the sentiment, but finally decided he'd see if he could get someone to draw a large can that he could post along with another drawing with a picture of trash inside a circle with a slash through it.

"No words. Even infantrymen might be able to understand that," he said, going off smiling to himself.

Shoplifters affect entire post

Army News Service

Make no mistake: Shoplifting is a crime and it affects all of us.

It's also on the rise: National crime statistics reveal that shoplifting is one of the fastest growing crimes in the United States.

Shoplifting poses a serious threat to the Army and Air Force Exchange Services earnings and prices. Last year, 13,548 shoplifters were caught in AAFES stores, stealing more than $732,046 worth of merchandise.

Dollars lost through shoplifting not only affect earnings and prices, but also the dividends distributed to Army and Air Force morale, welfare and recreation activities. More than half of AAFES' earnings are returned to soldiers and airmen through MWR contributions.

The earnings help to pay for swimming pools, gymnasiums, bowling alleys, recreation centers and other off-duty activities that benefit the military community. Earnings not distributed to MWR activities go to build new facilities and modernize others.

To help ensure that shoplifters are apprehended, AAFES exchanges employ regular security personnel, and in some cases augment their staffs with temporary store detectives. The temporary hires are usually off-duty military or security police who can spot and detain shoplifters. In addition, sales associates receive training in shoplifting detection, and in many exchanges, sophisticated electronic video surveillance systems aid in combating shoplifters.

Installation law enforcement officials are notified in all exchange shoplifting cases. Soldiers are subject to Uniform Code of Military Justice proceedings, which can result in an article 15, reduction in rank and pay, confinement, or a dishonorable discharge. Family members caught shoplifting are referred to the appropriate military law enforcement officials for criminal prosecution in a U.S. magistrate or district court. They face up to a $1,000 fine and a year in prison. They can also be returned to the continental United States if they are overseas.

For people caught shoplifting, exchange privileges are revoked for six months. In many cases, however, commanders go far beyond mandatory requirements and revoke other privileges as well, including access to government housing.

Aside from the legal aspects, an individual detained for shoplifting must deal with the long-term negative consequences that a criminal record has on future employment and military advancement.

Last year, 13,548 people thought no one was watching. These people were wrong and they got caught. For them, the consequences of their actions are only now becoming apparent. Many face humiliating ends to promising military careers.

Shoplifters should stop and think before they destroy the careers they and their families have worked so hard to build. They should stop and think before depriving others of precious, dwindling MWR funds.

Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Columbus say thanks to troops

The time, energy, and enthusiasm of the soldiers at Fort Benning is deeply appreciated by the children and families that participate in the Big Brothers/Big Sisters of Columbus program. The influence and impact that is made on children from single-parent families by the men and women that serve as Big Brothers and Big Sisters positively affects these children's lives.

Children learn by example, and who can teach them discipline better than a soldier.

We are very fortunate to have close to 20 Big Brothers and Big Sisters that are connected with Fort Benning. But more role models are needed to spend meaningful time with other children on a waiting list.

If you can spare just a few hours a week, you could be a potential Big Brother or Big Sister. Anyone that may be interested in this worthwhile community program is encouraged to call 327-3760 to find out how you can get involved.

Officer separations clarified

By James E. Brinson
Adjutant General's Office

As the Army began to implement its drawdown in fiscal 1992, a number of voluntary and involuntary separation programs were implemented. Several changes have occurred that affect these separation programs.

Enlisted Voluntary Early Transition Program— This program, which started in October, was suspended Jan. 17. All approved separations as of Jan. 17 remain in effect.

Officer Voluntary Early Release/Retirement Program— Officer and warrant officers in Army competitive categories, chaplain and judge advocate general may apply for early release or retirement during the second window for applications; Jan. 17 through April 1. All separations must occur before Sep. 29.

Applications go through the chain of command to AG Officer Management Branch, building 2622, 545-3768. The board convenes at Department of the Army Total Army Personnel Command April 13.

Selective Early Retirement Boards— The selective early retirement boards for officers and command sergeants major and sergeants major convened on Jan. 14. Results are expected no later than Feb. 29.

Voluntary Incentive Separation Programs— Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Bonus:

•Three officer categories will close to applications on Monday: one-time non-selects to major (category 2), captain (category 4) and warrant officer (regular Army—category 5).

•There are two changes to non-monetary separation benefits for those considering the special separation bonus option. Expanded transportation and travel benefits and opportunity to enroll in Montgomery GI Bill are not authorized benefits.

•Soldiers with 90 days or less remaining to their normal expiration of term of service cannot apply for either option in enlisted category 3 for overstrength military occupational specialty and grade. This is because they are outside the re-enlistment window and are not considered fully qualified for retention.

Reduction in Force Board— The officer Reduction in Force Board will convene on March 10 to consider majors in year group 78 and captains in year group 82 for involuntary elimination. Eligible officers must review their officer record brief, complete color official photographs, and complete Officer Evaluation Reports (if applicable) by March 3. These officers are eligible to apply for voluntary separation under the incentive separation programs in lieu of consideration by the reduction in force board.

RIF board to meet in March

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

A Reduction in Force board will meet March 10 to consider certain categories of majors and captains for separation from the Army.

According to Janie Seldon, chief of officer records, Adjutant General office, majors whose date of rank is July 2, 1989, to March 1, 1991, and captains whose date of rank is May 2, 1985, to Sept. 1, 1986 will be considered for separation. Only officers in these categories who will have at least one year of active duty in that grade as of March 1, and who will have less than 15 years of service by Sept. 30 will be considered by the board.

Seldon said that around 700 captains and 750 majors Armywide will be considered for separation, including 35 majors and 61 captains on Fort Benning.

Officers who are on promotion lists will not be considered, said Seldon.

She added that those officers eligible for separation by the board can avoid the board entirely by participating in the Voluntary Incentive Program. Officers who opt for voluntary separation will receive more benefits than if they end up being selected by the RIF board, said Seldon.

Under the Voluntary Incentive Program, soldiers can choose to receive either a lump sum equal to 15 percent of their annual base pay multiplied by the number of years in service, or yearly payments, equal to 2.5 percent of of their annual base pay multiplied by the number of years in service, that will continue for twice the number of years served.

However, noted Seldon, once an officer is selected by the RIF board, it will be too late to apply for voluntary separation. In addition, officers who apply for voluntary separation will not be allowed to withdraw their requests. Also, officers who come under consideration by the RIF board but are not selected for separation will not be able to apply for voluntary separation.

The deadline for applying for voluntary separation for those officers eligible for consideration by the RIF board is Feb. 29.

Officers who have questions concerning either the RIF or the Voluntary Incentive Program can contact Maj. Richard Polley or Georgia Standridge at 545-2712.

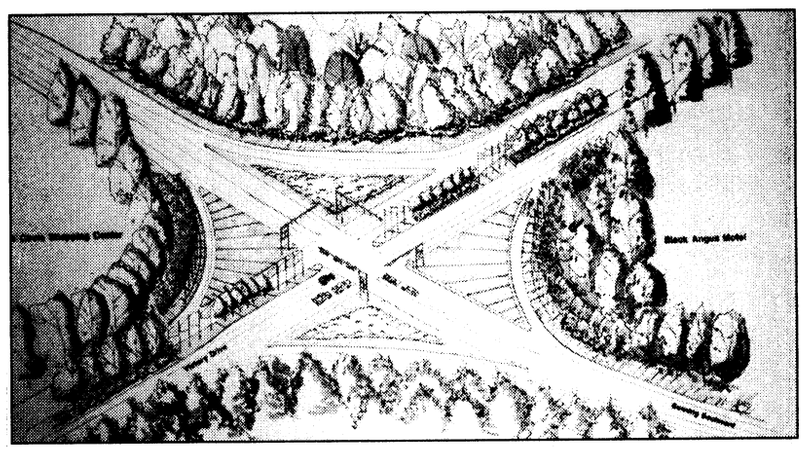
Gateways enhances city

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer



Bright waving flags. Crisp green grass. Rows and rows of colorful flowers.

This scene may sound like a dream to city dwellers, but a local organization will try to turn that dream into a reality for Columbus residents.

The organization is The Columbus Gateways Committee. The group has begun a major beautification and landscape enhancement program, which will incorporate 26 major gateways and arteries within the Columbus area. Initial estimates of the overall project are set at $4.2 million over a five-year period.

The ground-breaking for the first two major arterial highway interchanges began Dec. 18 with a completion date of these interchanges in March. The sites are the intersection of Traffic Circle Shopping Center and Victory Drive and the I-185 Airport Thruway exchange.

John Flournoy, chairman of the committee, announced the projects and unveiled drawings before a group of citizens, merchants and community leaders.

"These projects have required a great deal of negotiation and collaboration on the part of city government, the State Department of Transportation, community organizations, Columbus businesses and citizens," said Flournoy. "I was happy to assist in bringing everyone together for a common goal," said Flournoy.

For information about the project, call Keep Columbus Beautiful at 571-4937.

Drinking: Violators beware

If an individual is found guilty of furnishing or purchasing alcoholic beverages for persons under age, the penalties are:

• First offense - Guilty of misdemeanor. Fine not to exceed $1,000 or confinement in the county jail, county correctional institution not to exceed 12 months, or both; or confinement under the jurisdiction of the Board of Corrections in a state or county correctional institute or such other institution as the Department of Corrections may direct, for a term of months, which shall be more than six months but shall not exceed a total term of 12 months.

Either punishment, but not both, may be imposed at the discretion of the sentencing judge.

• Second or subsequent offense - Guilty of misdemeanor of a high and aggravated nature. Fine not to exceed $5,000 or confinement in the county or other jail, county correctional institution for a term not to exceed 12 months or both.

A soldier who commits either of these offenses may also be charged under Article 134 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice employing Title 18 US. Section 13, the Federal Assimilative Crimes Act. This act allows the installation to adopt the criminal laws of the state in which it is situated, provided federal criminal law, including the UCMJ, has not defined an applicable offense for the misconduct committed.

The criminal law of Georgia would be adopted for these particular offenses. The soldier would be subject to a like punishment under the Georgia law as outlined in the preceding paragraphs.

In addition to UCMJ action, a soldier is subject to the imposition of administrative actions by commanders. For example, a written reprimand, bar to re-enlistment, reduction and possible administrative separation upon a conviction by a civil court (sentence includes confinement for six months or more).

According to Master Sgt. Hubert Ijames, law enforcement operation sergeant with the Military Police Activity, when an incident of underage drinking occurs on post, the Military Police are contacted and they apprehend the individuals involved.

"We apprehend both the underage person and the person giving the alcohol to the underaged," Ijames said.

"A military report is then prepared and a copy is sent to the soldiers' commanders," Ijames continued. "A person is not helping a buddy when he says let's go have fun; he's setting them both up for trouble."

Bush said soldiers should think twice before risking their military career.

"It is foolish for a soldier to risk everything to give a younger friend a drink at the club and I don't think a real friend would ask if they knew the consequences," Bush said.

"We want all the soldiers to come out and enjoy the clubs; the clubs exist for the soldiers," he said. "However, we want to remind our customers about the negative consequences associated with passing alcohol to the underage."

Soldiers go extra mile for U.S.

Samuel Webster
Army News Service

GUANTANAMO BAY, Cuba — Army Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, viewed firsthand, Jan. 6, the humanitarian efforts to assist Haitian migrants temporarily staying here.

Powell received briefings on the progress of operation GTMO by Joint Task Force Commander Marine Brig. Gen. George H. Walls Jr., and other JTF staff officers. The chairman also spoke to several hundred members of the task force, who represented most of the units involved, saying that the contributions of the service members aren't going unrecognized.

Powell recalled the holiday seasons of 1989 and 1990. During both, he reminded the task force, U.S. service members were deployed in harm's way, first in Panama and then in Saudi Arabia.

During Christmas 1988, relief efforts were underway following hurricane Hugo's devastating trek through the Virgin Islands.

"One thing I'm glad for is this Christmas we weren't at war," Powell said. "We weren't getting ready to take on a tyrant. Nevertheless, we are deployed ... not for the purpose of war, but for bringing hope and peace," he said.

"We'll do whatever is asked. If (Americans) need us to go kick butt, we'll go kick butt. If (they need) us to stand watch in Korea or Germany, we'll do it. If (they need) us to still be in the sands of Saudi Arabia, we'll be there.

"And, if (they need) us to be away from our families during another holiday season and go to a place called Guantanamo Bay to help a bunch of people we've never heard of, we'll do it,"said Powell.

Fort Benning names top drill sergeant of year

Competition tests instructor skills

By Marilyn Balzarini
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

Staff Sgt. Ricky Franklin is Fort Benning's Drill Sergeant of the Year.

Franklin earned the title by winning a rigorous competition in December. He competed against three other drill sergeants in a three phase test.

The contest included an Army Physical Fitness Test. Phase two was a hands-on test where competitors were graded on their ability to instruct tasks like drill and ceremonies and basic rifle marksmanship.

Last, there was an appearance before a board of battalion command sergeants major from the U. S. Army Infantry Training Center. The board tested the individuals' knowledge of subjects like basic soldier skills, military leadership and current events.

Franklin will represent Fort Benning in the Army's Drill Sergeant of the Year competition in April. That competition will be held by the Training and Doctrine Command at Fort Monroe, Va.

Franklin is a drill sergeant leader at the Drill Sergeant School, a part of the Henry Caro Non-Commissioned Officers Academy. He has been instructing drill sergeant candidates since September.

"Working with drill sergeant candidates) is a unique opportunity to influence great numbers of new soldiers through the drill sergeants that I train," Franklin said.

After graduating from Drill Sergeant School in December 1990, Franklin was assigned to Company E, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry. Franklin believes his most significant achievement as a drill sergeant was made during this assignment.

"Training and motivating a platoon of nervous trainees who were convinced that upon graduation they would find themselves in the deserts of the Middle East fighting in Operation Desert Storm was a big accomplishment," Franklin said. "They were staking their lives on the training they had received from their drill sergeants and every one of them was willing to do that."

Franklin says that because today's entry-level soldiers are more educated, they have more career choices than soldiers in the past.

"The soldiers who enlist now are here because they really want to be in the Army," Franklin said. "So, they are motivated when they get here. The challenge is keeping them motivated throughout the 13 weeks of training."

According to Franklin, it takes a dedicated solder to be a drill sergeant. "The long hours alone would do a less-dedicated soldier in," Franklin said. "If you don't really love what you're doing, you're not drill sergeant material."

Being a drill sergeant is a big responsibility Franklin says. "Drill sergeants are the new soldiers' first impression of the Army," Franklin said. "Our example sets the tone for their careers. If our standards are high, theirs will be, too. So, we actually have a hand in determining the quality of the infantry corps and the Army of the future."

Franklin is from Orlando, Fla. He joined the Army in 1983. His military occupational specialty is 11C, indirect fire infantryman.

He has been awarded the Expert Infantryman Badge, two Army Commendation Medals, and two Army Achievement Medals.

He has attended Airborne School, Primary Leadership Development Course, Basic Non-commissioned Officers Course and the Infantry Mortar Platoon Course in addition to Drill Sergeant School.

He made the Commandant's List during PLDC. He had the highest academic average of all the 11Cs graduating from BNCOC, and he was the Distinguished Honor Graduate at IMPC.

He is married to the former Debbie Perry. They have two children: Kimberly, 10, and Brian, 8.

When he's not training drill sergeant candidates, he likes to spend time with his family. He enjoys woodworking, and he is currently pursuing a new hobby — civilian flight training.

His goals for 1992 are to get his pilot's license, to finish his associate's degree and to be the Army's top drill sergeant.

Bradleys take a swim

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

What weighs 23 tons and can swim?

How about a Bradley Fighting Vehicle?

The soldiers of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, got the chance Sunday to enhance their confidence in the Bradley Fighting Vehicle — a little swim across Victory Pond.

"This is probably the first time Fort Benning has ever swum this many M-2A2 model Bradleys," said Capt. Tyrone Turner, the comapny's senior new equipment team trainer.

The exercise went like clockwork as Bradleys followed one after another into the pond. Initially, each vehicle hooked up to a recovery vehicle, to check all seals for leaks before going into the water . After that, the crew members took turns driving across the pond.

"It was wild," said Capt. Scott Denney, the company commander. "It's really a soft ride."

The vehicle, which can top speeds of 35 mph on land, is limited to only 3 to 5 mph in the water.

"There's a big difference between driving on land and in the water," said Spc. Robert Wallace, the commander's gunner. "You can't see anything, so you really have to place a lot of confidence in your crew."

"It turns a lot slower and it's hard to tell that you're even moving," he said. "It's a lot of fun — a real experience,"said Wallace.

Victory focus to include 586th

By Alvin Williams
586th Engineer Company

The 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) has deployed to Fort Stewart, Ga., to participate in Operation Victory Focus.

Operation Victory Focus consists of the company supporting the 24th Infantry Division with Ribbon Bridge operations. This operation will be three weeks long and began on Thursday.

The exercise began when the company conducted a convoy from Fort Benning to Fort Stewart. The advance party departed Monday, with the main body departing Tuesday.

The first two days will be centered around defensive operations. The company performed wartime mission of assault river crossing using rafts and bridges constructed from ribbon bridge bays and MK-1 jet boats. The company will then provide its combat engineering skills to support the maneuver unit.

The exercise will conclude Feb. 26 with the company returning to Fort Benning.

24th Eng. Bde. inducted Jan. 24

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The 317th Engineer Battalion, "Sappers" went to Fort Stewart, Ga., on Jan. 24 to participate in a ceremony inducting the 24th Division Engineer Brigade.

Although the brigade was officially activated Dec. 19, this ceremony officially grouped the 3rd, 11th and 317th Battalions under the brigade.

All three battalions stood on Cotrell Field as a narrator introduced them through the unit history and accomplishments.

The 317th was formed in 1917 as part of the 92nd Infantry Division. In 1942, it was designated as the 317th Engineer Battalion, and is one of the only remaining units that was once an all black outfit. The unit served valiantly throughout World War I and II and Korea and most recently in Operation Desert Storm as part of Europe's VII Corps.

The history of the division engineer brigade began with the Chief of Staff of the Army, Gen. Carl E. Vouno, approving a plan called the Engineer Restructure Initiative. According to Department of the Army officials, this initiative gives each heavy division an engineer brigade to better support its combat effectiveness.

"In order to execute combat operations effectively, you need an engineer company for each battalion task force," said Capt. Mike Iverson, the Company C commander. "And in order to do that, you need a battalion of engineers for each brigade."

"The National Training Center is where the big lesson was learned." he added. "You just can't operate successfully without a company at the task force level."

For the Sapper Battalion, that means a new home with the 24th Infantry, the Victory Division.

Persian Gulf vets to receive Kuwaiti medal

Army News Service

Deputy Secretary of Defense Donald J. Atwood recently accepted an offer by the government of Saudi Arabia to award the Kuwait Liberation Medal to members of the U.S. Military who directly participated in Operation Desert Storm. The award was established by King Fahd Bin Abdul Aziz of Saudi Arabia.

To qualify, service members must have served or flown into the war zone between Jan. 17, 1991, the start of the air war, and Feb. 28, when offensive operations ended.

The war zone incorporates the total land area of Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Gatar and the United Army Emirates. At sea, the war zone is the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, the Gulf of Oman, the Gulf of Eden, and portions of the Arabian Sea.

Preliminary guidance on who would be eligible for the medal was released by the Department of Defense Jan. 8. According to DoD, service members qualify for the medal if they:

— were attached to or regularly serving for at least one day with organizations participating in ground or shore operations, or aboard ships directly supporting military operations; — participated as crewmembers in at least one aerial mission directly supporting military operations within the war zone;

— were on temporary duty and served for at least 30 consecutive days during the war.

Specific eligibility requirements and implementing instructions will be published soon.

The medal is suspended from a green ribbon, with red, black and white stripes representing the flags of Saudi Arabia and Kuwait. The medal depicts a palm tree with crossed sabers, the emblem of Saudi Arabia, superimposed on a sunburst, which symbolizes the light of freedom which once again shines over Kuwait. Inside the sun emblem is a globe with a map of the Arabian Peninsula.

Key leaders discuss lessons learned, plan for future deployments

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Seventeen months ago, the world was shocked by the invasion of Kuwait, and the 24th Infantry Division prepared to deploy.

On Jan. 23, the key officers of the 3rd Brigade went to Fort Stewart, Ga., to talk about lessons learned and conduct a terrain walk for future deployments with other division key leaders.

The day was planned to visit each site concerned with possible deployment: ammunition, rail loading, convoys, air and sea lift.

"We're going to walk through a good solid day of discussion, seminar, and recon to figure out how we rapidly upload this division," said Maj. Gen. Barry R. McCaffrey, the division commander.

The group received briefings on the deployable areas of concern with the intent to show the critical choke points in the process. The group travelled by bus through each area at Fort Stewart and then proceeded to Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah for the airlift portion and then completed the terrain walk at the seaport.

"We were a lot better organized leaving the port than when we arrived in Saudi Arabia," said McCaffrey. "There's something to be learned and much to be admired out of how we did it last time; it's very important business."

For the officers it was a perfect opportunity to look at the current systems, make notes among themselves, and be prepared to employ the lessons in the future if necessary.

"It was really worthwhile training," said Lt. Col. Bill Chamberlain, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry commander. "I intend to conduct a miniature version of this with my officers to review alert procedures."

"As I look back it was like a floodgate opened up when we deployed, because we received so much equipment," he added. "We are light-years ahead of that now."

When the brigade conducted its deployment, it was a hectic time for the soldiers as they worked day and night to accomplish the mission.

"The soldiers were absolutely incredible," said Maj. Dan Bourgoine, the brigade operations officer. "It was the soldiers who made the deployment happen."

"This exercise was a reminder of how to do it the right way," said Chamberlain.

For most of the officers, it was a look back to remember the lessons learned from 17 months ago; for others, it was a first real look at the complications of going to war; but, for all, it was a stark reminder of the uncertain world in which we live.

29th gets new chaplain

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Capt. Ruben D. Colon, has been appointed as 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's new chaplain. Colon, is coming from Italy where he served with the Southern European Task Force. He and his wife, Cary, have three children, Ezra, 10, Elisama, 8 and son Omar, 6.

"From the beginning the people at Fort Benning have been great," sai d Colon. "The post lives up to the pride of the leaders who have served here before," he said.

This is not Colon's first infantry unit. Before serving in Italy, he was stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C., where he served with the 82nd Airborne Division.

When asked if he could convey a message to the soldiers, he said "I want them to know that I am here for them. They can always guarantee that my ear is open. Nothing gratifies me more than reaching out a helping hand to soldier and his family in need," he said.

The Japanese Implement Unconventional Tactics

• Fritz Todt, the German minister of munitions and creator of the organization that planned and built elaborate German fortifications, is killed in an air accident. He is succeeded by Dr. Albert Speer who will prove to be brilliant at continuing and extending the process.

• In the Bataan peninsula, Japanese "suicide squads" make repeated raids on retreating Filipino forces throughout the week.

• The Japanese advance further in Singapore. Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita has leaflets dropped on the city which give terms for surrender. The British ignore them.

• Spain and Portugal publicly declare their neutrality.

• The Japanese drop parachutists on Palembang, Sumatra. The small Dutch garrison there is forced to surrender.

• Italian bombers attack naval and air installations at Alexandria, Egypt.

Chaplain reflects on Lincoln's life and faith

By Herbert Marbury
Clinical Pastoral Education Center

REFLECTIONS

In an autobiographical sketch composed in 1860, Abraham Lincoln wrote, "I was born on Feb. 12, 1809 in Hardin, County, Ky.

My parents were both born in Virginia. My father, at the death of his father, was about 6 years of age, and he grew up literally without education. He moved from Kentucky to what is now Spencer County, Ind., in my eighth year.

It was a wild region... There I grew up. There were some schools, so called; but no qualification was ever required of a teacher beyond 'reading, writing, and ciphering,' to the Rule of Three... Of course when I came of age I could read, write and cipher, but that was all."

Lincoln began his political career in 1834 and was a member of the Illinois legislature until 1842. In 1846, he finally won a seat in Congress. Although he lost the Senate race against Democrat Stephen Douglass, he had by 1858 established himself as a leader of the Republican Party. Three years later in March of 1861, Lincoln was inaugurated as president of the United States.

It was the crisis that engulfed the nation in 1861 that propelled Lincoln to heights of political achievement. At his inauguration, the country was embroiled in controversy and on the verge of civil war. Some of the Northerners wanted to let the Southern states depart in peace in order to end a war which was causing heavy losses for the Union. But Lincoln believed his sole challenge was to keep the nation unified at all costs. So the president dedicated himself to this task.

To this end, he issued an 1863 proclamation freeing all slaves in the Confederate states, in order that they might disrupt the Southern economy, join the Union fight, and hopefully turn the tide of a failing war. A hands on commander-in-chief, Lincoln and his secretary of war actually commanded the troops from Washington, D.C., until he appointed Ulysses S. Grant as commanding general in 1864. Although he took the nation to war, he believed that the United States was on the side of right and justice and that this was the only route to avoid separation.

Lincoln touched the hearts of millions of people convincing them that the war was not simply a Northern or a Southern cause, but a cause for all U.S. citizens to unify the whole nation.

Finally, at the end of the war, Lincoln again showed himself adept as political leader. Instead of adhering to popular sentiment and punishing the South as many Northerners had wished, his policies and personal attitudes reflected his desire for restoration of the South and reunification of the nation.

Throughout his life, Lincoln upheld his allegiance to The United States of America. He met challenges of separation and war as a result, his legacy is the United States of America, one nation under God. In terms of Lincoln's noble qualities, he was compassionate. He was forgiving. He was great. Time continues to support the greatness of his time and fame. He was pure and incorruptible.

He was a patriot. He loved his country; he poured out his soul unto death for it. He was human and thus touched the chord that makes the world akin.

His religious character was strong because he was a man of profound faith. He believed in God. He believed in Christ. He believed in the Bible and he believed in men. His faith made him great.

Banquet promotes romance

Harmony Church dinner includes newlywed games

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Harmony Church congregation is planning a Sweetheart Banquet Feb. 13.

"The idea for a Sweetheart Banquet is to ignite the flames of romance once again," Chaplain (Capt.) Ivery DeLaCruz, explains. "This will be a special event to enrich our marriages and to take time out of our busy schedule to spend quality time together."

During the banquet, there will be music and fun activities, like playing newlywed games. Furthermore, the couples will have the opportunity to renew their wedding vows.

Chaplain (Capt.) Don Wilson is invited as the guest speaker. His topic for the evening is "Building Your Mate's Self-esteem."

"One of the most troubling problems people face today is low self-esteem," Wilson said. "If left unchecked, it can be harmful to a marriage. It is important to help your mate increase his or her feelings of acceptance and adequacy."

Wilson will introduce four building blocks for building a mate's self-esteem. The building blocks are accepting unconditionally, planting positive words, giving the freedom to fail and pleasing your mate.

The special music will be provided by Jackie Smith, a singer known by the Harmony Church congregation.

For more information, contact DeLaCruz at 544-7317.

Registration is required by Tuesday.

Covenant Players to perform

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Covenant Players will be at various locations ministering Feb. 21 through 23.

The Covenant Players is a ministry which requires no elaborate sets or costumes or make-up. They are able to perform anywhere there is room for an audience to gather.

It is a non-endowed, non-profit corporation. Its only support comes from playdates. Many of the touring missionaries are committed to lifetime careers on that basis, and all have answered the call to this ministry.

In the early 1960s when Charles M. Tanner, director, founder and writer, talked about his dream of a touring ministry in drama, his friends smiled and told him the church would never accept it.

After more than one million performances later, Covenant Players continue to minister for the Lord and with the Lord's leadership.

The touring of this ministry covered all areas of the globe, on six continents, in 84 countries and in 16 languages.

For more information and registration, contact Chaplain (Capt.) Michael Tilus at 545-2169.

Parents need to protect baby teeth

U.S. Army Dental Activity

Many first-time parents are surprised to learn that their babies can develop cavities. The Fort Benning Dental Activity notes that decay can occur as soon as teeth appear in the mouth. One serious form of decay among young children is baby bottle tooth decay.

This condition can occur when an infant is allowed to nurse from a bottle of milk, formula, sugar water or fruit juice during naps or at bedtime. If these liquids pool around the child's teeth during sleep, the teeth will be attacked by acids for long periods. Serious decay can result. Infant tooth decay can also result from prolonged breastfeeding.

There are two things parents can do to avoid baby bottle tooth decay. If you must give your baby something before a nap or at bedtime, skip the juice or milk. Instead provide a bottle of water or a pacifier.

Next, clean the infant's mouth. Your baby depends totally on you for dental care. You should begin cleaning the baby's mouth during the first few days after birth. After every feeding, wipe the baby's gums with a clean damp washcloth or gauze pad to remove plaque. Plaque is a sticky, colorless film of bacteria that constantly forms in the mouth

Cleaning the baby's mouth in this manner establishes the importance of dental hygiene and the feeling of having clean teeth and gums To clean your baby's mouth, you can sit on the sofa or floor and place the child's head in your lap. Whatever position you use, be sure you can see into the child's mouth.

Parents should begin brushing the child's teeth as soon as the first tooth erupts. By age 4 or 5, the child may be able to brush while under your watchful eye; however, parents usually must continue to brush to insure adequate plaque removal.

Most children have a full set of 20 primary teeth by the time they are 3 years old. Primary teeth are just as important as permanent teeth. They help with chewing, speaking and appearance. In addition, primary teeth hold space in the jaws for permanent teeth.

The preschool years are an important time to help your child establish good eating habits. At this age, many children need to eat snacks. They cannot always eat enough food at mealtimes to obtain all the nutrients and energy they need. Parents should help their children choose sensible snacks (such as plain popcorn, raw vegetables, plain yogurt and sugarless gum), brush after eating and schedule regular dental checkups.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Steve Kaczkowski
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Due to the downsizing of the Army, I'm going to be involuntarily separated about two months from now. My lease runs for another half a year. When I notified my landlord that I have to get out of the lease early, he told me that I would still be liable for more money than I think is right. It wasn't my decision to leave the Army. Isn't there a "military clause" that allows me to get out of my lease if I have to break it solely due to military orders?

A: Landlord-tenant relations are governed by applicable state law. Since state laws vary, there is no such thing as a standard "military clause."

One example of this variance is the difference between the laws of Georgia and North Carolina, two of the small number of states that have passed legislation that specifically deals with the issue whether military orders should affect the landlord-tenant relationship.

Under Georgia law, an active duty service member who receives permanent change of station orders or temporary duty orders for a period in excess of three months has his liability for rent limited to (1) up to 30 days rent after written notice and proof of the assignment are furnished to the landlord; and (2) the cost of repairing any damage he may have caused to the dwelling unit. These are limits established under Georgia law, and are in effect even if your lease does not specifically give you these rights.

The analogous North Carolina law affords protection similar to that derived from Georgia's law, but extends that protection to soldiers who are prematurely involuntarily discharged, as well as to soldiers who receive PCS orders requiring them to transfer to a post at least 50 miles from their current dwelling.

Georgia's legislature could have drafted a law which gives the expanded protection offered by the North Carolina law, but it chose not to do so. Regardless of whether this came about through rational debate or mere lack of foresight, the fact is that Georgia law covers PCS and TDY orders, and those orders alone. Although this may seem to be unfair and inexplicable, that is the law in Georgia.

As a final note, remember that the law discussed above doesn't preclude you from discussing the subject with your next potential landlord. If he agrees to include early termination language in the lease, which will take effect should you be involuntary separated or otherwise leaves the service, he will be bound by the agreed upon terms.

Remember, a lease is no more than a contract between you and your landlord. Like any other contract, you have the right to bargain over the terms. Read your lease before you sign, discuss any terms you wish to include with the landlord, and ask for an explanation of the terms you do not understand.

The Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, is available to assist you with landlord-tenant and other personal legal matters. The office is located at the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos. Call 545-3281 for an appointment.

Bananas reduce hypertension, provide potassium

General Mills, Inc.

Everyone loves bananas. And why not? Bananas taste great.

As an added bonus, they're nutritious, providing complex carbohydrates, fiber, vitamins and minerals—including lots of potassium, an essential mineral for good health, says Mary Helen Gunkler, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal.

Potassium plays a vitally important role in helping to keep the body working properly. For example, it works with sodium to maintain healthy water balance in body cells. Recent scientific research indicates that a diet high in potassium and low in sodium may help to control hypertension, or high blood pressure.

Those taking some diuretics are at particular risk of potassium shortage. Diuretics may draw excess fluid out of the body, thus taking the essential potassium that is in the fluid.

Endurance athletes also have a special need for potassium because extreme physical exertion uses up the mineral.

A safe and adequate daily intake for potassium is 1,875 to 5,625 milligrams, according to the National Research Council. The best way to assure an adequate supply of potassium in the diet is to eat plenty of potassium-rich foods. These include fresh fruits and vegetables, especially tomatoes, bananas, oranges, grapefruit and all citrus juices.

Gunkler recommends seeking the advice of a physician or a registered dietitian to determine if additional potassium would be of value to you.

OWC needs volunteers

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Thrift Shop, Furniture Barn and Craft Cabin exist and operate through the goodness of volunteers.

According to Maria Fuller, manager, the number of volunteers vary from day to day. They never know exactly who will come, but there are about seven to eight regulars who come on Tuesdays and Thursdays, and about five regulars who donate time on Saturdays.

Donna Ziegler, Thrift Shop Committee representative to the Officers Wives Club, which runs the store, said that 43 percent of their volunteers are retirees, 34 percent are enlisted wives and 23 percent are officers' wives.

The three buildings house items that are sold on consignment. That means that people with military identification cards use these facilities to sell items of their own.

This includes homemade craft items from afghans to needlework in the Craft Cabin, to furniture, strollers and lawn mowers in the Furniture Barn, to clothing of all kinds in the Thrift Shop.

The Thrift Shop then takes 20 percent of the sale for its cut. Volunteers who work more than 12 hours per month, only have to give the Thrift Shop 10 percent.

Fuller noted that for some regular consigners, it is like a second income.

Of the funds generated by the Thrift Shop, all of the profits go to the OWC Welfare Fund. In that Welfare Fund, Ziegler said that 80 percent are Thrift Shop profits.

These are impressive figures when last year, the OWC Welfare Fund distributed more than $20,000 to a variety of agencies on post.

Fuller said that this is one of the reasons that volunteers donate their time. "It all goes back into the community, and it gives them a good feeling."

Fuller has been the Thrift Shop manager since October and has brought with her some managerial expertise.

She has eight years of management experience working for Casual Corner and Merry-Go-Round Enterprises Children's Division and will offer some continuity to the position since she and her husband plan to retire in the area.

"It's not just a lot of work," Fuller said. "We have a good time here too."

FBMA helps leaders

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Being exposed to speakers with expertise in management techniques and dealing effectively with people is one of the main benefits for members of the Fort Benning Management Association.

According to Col. Mayo Hadden, president, the organization has more than 135 members, but is always looking for more. They range from the post chief of staff to first-line supervisors.

Speakers include professionals from the Bradley Center, the Rader Institute, the Pastoral Institute and distinguished visitors in the area.

In addition to speakers, Hadden said that FBMA raises money for college scholarships that are given once a year.

Soldiers, dependents and civilians working on post may apply. A committee takes applications and awards about seven or eight scholarships every spring.

Funds are raised by operating ice cream booths with Kinnett Dairy at the Fourth of July and Armed Forces Day celebrations on post. FBMA also hosts a "Dress for Success" Fashion Show annually.

Membership dues are $7.50 per year, and meetings are the third Thrursday of every month at the Officers Club.

The organization is open to anyone on post, especially mid-level managers and supervisors, 20 years of age and over.

Anyone interested in joining can contact Kathy Corizzo at 545-4770.

Scouts have "day of thunder" at derby

Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet Staff Writer

The Fort Benning Cub Scout Pack 27 held its annual Pinewood Derby "Fort Benning 500" Saturday from 1:30 to 5 p.m. at the post Youth Activities Center.

More than 80 scouts participated in the event, according to Lt. Col. Vince Ogilvie of School of Americas, the Cubmaster of Pack 27.

The Pinewood Derby involves racing model cars constructed by the scouts themselves along a miniature track, said Oglivie.

"This event teaches the boys," said Ogilvie. "It teaches them good sportsmanship, as well as how to have fun."

The event was organized by Capt. Oscar Valdez, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, who serves as a den leader for the pack. Ogilvie directed the event.

The winners of the derby were:
First place: Nick Nelson
Second place: Victor Negron
Third place: Lance Chastain
Fourth place: Bradley Hutchinson

By winning first place, Nelson also qualifies to compete and represent Pack 27 in the Chattahoochee Council Pinewood Derby, said Ogilvie.

Train ad brings sympathy for soldiers in WWII

Army News Service

What began as a simple, one-shot newspaper advertisement aimed at a few disgruntled railway travelers early in World War II unexpectedly exploded into a phenomenon that touched the hearts of thousands of Americans.

Only 10 months after Pearl Harbor, as the casualty list grew, so did tension on the home front. Americans were worried, and many of them lashed out at the shortages and the rationing. Among the complainers were travelers on the New Haven Railroad, who griped about late schedules, the lack of space in the dining cars, no Pullman berths and having to stand in the aisles when the train did show up. They wrote nasty letters and confronted employees. The railroad turned to a small advertising firm in Boston for help.

The assignment was the first big job—seven columns in the New York Herald-Tribune—for 29-year-old Nelson Metcalf Jr., but he was sure he understood the problem. Behind the complaints, Metcalf believed, was the "gnawing fear of losing a friend or loved one in the war." He decided to pay tribute to the most important person in their lives, the man on his way to fight.

"The copy almost wrote itself," he said. The text focused on the thoughts of an 18-year-old in a Pullman berth leaving for overseas. It ended in a plea for passengers to accept discomfort willingly for the sake of servicemen. Except for the logo at the bottom of the page, the railroad was never mentioned. The ad ran one day.

Response was immediate. Elmer Davis, chief of the Office of War Information, saw the ad and requested that it be run nationally. The next day, other congratulatory telegrams and calls came in from grateful parents, servicemen and even from other railroads. Thousands of reprints were published. Life, Time and Newsweek among other magazines, ran the ad. A movie short was filmed at MGM, and a song was written about it. The Red Cross used Metcalf's creation to sell U.S. War Bonds, and the U.S. Army ordered some ads to build soldiers' morale.

Today, 50 years later, that advertisement, known as The Kid in Upper 4 is listed in the book, 100 Greatest Advertisements; it was called "the most famous single advertisement of the war and one of the most effective of all time," in Frank W. Fox's Madison Avenue Goes to War.

Fort Benning soldier bounces off to camp

Specialist attends 1992 All-Army trials

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

A Fort Benning soldier has been selected to attend the1992 Women's All-Army Basketball Trial Camp at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Sharon Girdner, a specialist with Company A, 43rd Engineers, is from Gaffney, S.C., and started playing basketball in the seventh grade. She won a state championship in her junior year at Gaffney Senior High School..

Girdner's one influence came from her cousin Marlene Jeeder who played for the University of Tennesee, she said. Girdner adopted some of her cousins' moves and incorporated them into her style of play.

During her Advanced Individual Training at Fort Jackson, S.C. Girdner played with Co. C, 277th Quartermaster Battalion, but was unable to attend any postseason play because she was sent to Saudi Arabia.

The trial camp is scheduled to begin Wednesday and will continue until March 14. If selected for the All-Army team, Girdner will stay on for the Armed Forces Championships to be held March 15 through 22; then the National Amateur Athletics Union Championships will be April 8 through 22.

Girdner said she hopes to be around to see a championship won by the Army with her as a participant.

She has only been able to play one game since coming to post in June. Her job in supply usually has her working nights, which keeps her from playing routinely.

"Hopefully I can make the team and help the team win. If I don't make the team, at least I know I tried," said Girdner. "I feel that I have the ability and confidence to compete with the other athletes at the trials."

Two soldiers from USAMU shoot for 1992 Olympics

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit has two soldiers vying for spots on the 1992 Olympic Running Target Team.

David Edmondson and Troy Lawton are in competition with seven other athletes for two slots in this year's Olympics.

The first of five trials began Jan. 22 through 25 at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The next match will be Feb. 15 through 23, at Chino, Calif. Five athletes with the top aggregate scores will advance to the last three trials, fired in conjunction with the Guatemala World Cup, March 24 through 28; World Cup USA April 5 through 11 and the Suhl World Cup May 19 through 24.

The two athletes with the top aggregate World Cup scores will represent the U. S. at the 1992 Olympic running target competition in Barcelona, Spain.

David Edmondson, a specialist with USAMU is from San Saba, Texas, and participated in five World Cups last year. He also has won titles in Georgia, Arizona and Texas. In the 1989 Championships of the Americas, Edmondson won three gold and a silver medal.

Edmondson began shooting in 1978 at the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club.

Troy Lawton, a sergeant with USAMU, is from Fort Worth, Texas, and has also competed in several World Cups since 1986.

Lawton placed fifth at the 1991 Zagreb World Cup, was a gold medalist at the 1991 U.S. Olympic Festival and was a triple silver medalist at the 1991 U.S. International Shooting Championships.

Lawton began shooting when he was 10 years old after watching his father and brother shoot competitively.

Army boxers pack extra punch

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — For the first time in its nearly 50-year history, corporate sponsorship will help the Army Boxing team pack extra power in its punch, according to Robin Donohoe, the Army's commercial sponsorship events manager.

The Brown-Forman beverage company's $15,000 sponsorship will fund travel, equipment and other training expenses for the Army boxing training camp, running through March 2. Brown-Forman also funded the recently concluded Army Boxing Championship.

More than 65 Army boxers, light flyweights to super heavyweights, from installations worldwide have converged on Fort Huachuca, Ariz., for the training camp and competition. As coaches, trainers and sports officials watch the ring performances, the slugging soldiers will be culled to 12 finalists for the 1992 Army Boxing team.

Keeping a eye on the soldiers as they hit the bags and jump rope is legendary boxing trainer Angelo Dundee, renowned for training such champions as Muhammad Ali and Sugar Ray Leonard.

"We all know the power of a few words of encouragement," Dundee said. "It's an honor for me to share some time with these rising stars."

"Mr. Dundee's presence here will be nothing short of inspirational for our athletes," said training camp manager James Coffman.

The inclusion of Dundee at the camp and competition is part of the Brown-Forman beverage company's sponsorship of Army Boxing.

The Army Boxing team will represent the Department of the Army at the Armed Forces Boxing Championship through Saturday, at Fort Huachuca and will box at the United States Amateur Boxing Federation Nationals slated for Feb. 24 through 29 in Colorado Springs, Colo. Winners of these events earn a berth at the Olympic trials, leading to the 1992 Olympics in Barcelona, Spain.

The Army boxing program, operated by the U.S. Army community and family support center in Alexandria, Va., has produced champions such as "merciless" Ray Mercer, former Army specialist who was once stationed at Fort Benning and 1988 Olympic heavyweight gold medalist who has gone on to professional boxing since leaving the Army.

"Our sports program is a vital part of Army life worldwide," said Brig. Gen. Raymond Roe, Community and Family Support Center Command. "With the help of Brown-Forman, we will be able to ensure that Army boxers continue their winning ways. We will also be able to raise the level of public awareness of our boxers' hard work, talent and dedication, so they receive the recognition they deserve."

Cougars scratch out post playoff berth

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Tuesday, the basketball team from Company C, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment ensured a spot in the post playoffs by knocking out the Headquarters Company of the battalion, 59-54.

Co. C and HQ Co. each finished their regular seasons with only one loss. During the playoff competition, Co. C went undefeated, while HQ Co. fell one game.

At half time, the score was tight at 29-28 in the Co. C's Cougars' favor. The Cougars stayed on top during the second half and finished the game on top.

John Curran of Co. C said, "We will win the post championship, I just know it."

The Cougar's starting five, Terence Thompson, Timothy Greene, James Reynolds, Kevin Alston and Jessie Gaddy received Pioneer caps for the victory from Lt. Col. Robert Leon, battalion commander.

The coach for the Cougars, Ronald Williams, said, "I feel like we are ready for the post playoffs and I have all the confidence in the world."

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry champions will now advance to the post playoffs scheduled for Feb. 18.

Outdoor Recreation fees offset renovation costs

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Outdoor Recreation fees help offset costs of maintenance and renovation of recreational facilities and rental leasing property.

"The charges for using the boat ramp at Uchee Creek help offset the expense to the Morale Welfare and Recreation Fund for maintenance and upkeep," said Tim Brown, Outdoor Recreation's rental leasing manager.

The Uchee Creek facility is not maintained by the Corps of Engineers as are most of the civilian off-post facilities. Instead, the MWR fund is responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of Uchee Creek, since it receives no money from non-appropriated funds.

In addition to a new boat ramp, renovations include new cabins, picnic tables and boat slips.

According to Brown, the prices for boat launching, slip fees, camping and many other outdoor recreation usages are comparable or lower than most non-military establishments.

Fees for hunting and fishing licenses are used to help pay administrative costs to handle permits and pay the salaries of the administrative staff.

NCO saves battalion money

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Sgt. 1st Class Gregory J. Newer, the executive officer of the Bradley Instructors Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was awarded an Army Achievement Medal for his reaction to an oil spill.

"There was an oil sludge about four inches thick in the grit tank of the wash rack, so I turned on the oil skinner to start removing it, and informed the company commander," said Newer.

Capt. Earl Gravette, the acting Bradley Instructors commander, called the Directorate of Engineering and Housing and the Fire Department to inform them of the spill.

Newer, not satisfied in just reporting the spill, conducted an informal investigation that dertermined that there had been an improper dumping by a civilian contractor.

"Sergeant First Class Newer's detective work saved the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment an embarrassment and approximately $3,000 in clean-up costs," said Lt. Col. Robert Leon, commander of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

"The manner in which Sergeant Newer handled the problem was a display of what to do in reporting and preventing future environmental damage. Sergeant Newer turned what could have been a calamity into a valuable learning tool for other soldiers to follow."

Turow's 'Proof' becomes miniseries

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

If author Scott Turow's first best-selling novel seemed like beginner's luck, his follow-up offered "Proof" that it was no fluke.

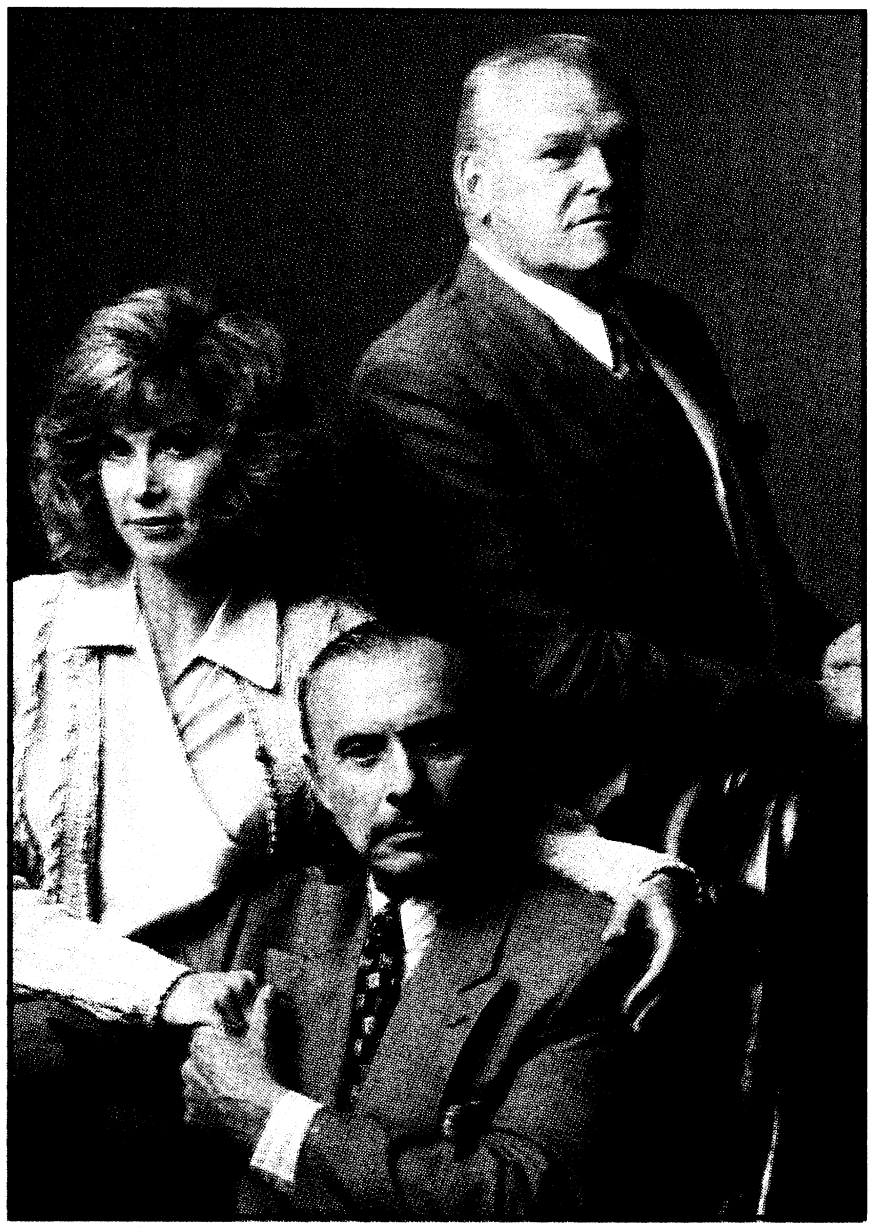
After striking paydirt by examining a fictional lawyer's private life in "Presumed Innocent," the Chicago attorney and writer took one of the figures from that story and built a new one around him ... and that tale follows its predecessor onto film this week, as ABC airs the new miniseries "The Burden of Proof" Sunday and Monday.

SPOTLIGHT

Hector Elizondo has the central role as Alejandro "Sandy" Stern, the defendant's lawyer in "Innocent" (played by Raul Julia in the movie version) who now finds his own personal dilemmas colliding with his courtroom duties. In the wake of his wife's inexplicable suicide, he is asked to help his brother-in-law (Brian Dennehy, who also appeared in "Presumed Innocent"), a commodities broker being investigated by federal attorneys. Stern then becomes involved with one of the latter, former "thirtysomething" co-star Mel Harris, and with two other ladies simultaneously — a family friend, Stefanie Powers and one of the suspected man's assistants, Victoria Principal. All of the roads eventually converge to pose a huge threat to Stern's career and personal well-being.

Adapted for television by John Gay, the drama also features Adrienne Barbeau, Anne Marie Bobby, Jeffrey Tambor, Gail Strickland, Concetta Tomei and Kerri Green.

"I knew by the time I finished 'Presumed Innocent' that I wanted to go on with Sandy Stern," says the boyish Turow, adding that he conceived that first book "in a funny kind of way. I wrote the beginning and then I wrote the end, then right before I finished the book, I wrote the middle of it. At that point, Sandy Stern became a major character, and I became intrigued with him." Though Warner Bros. had one of the certifiable box-office hits of 1990 with "Presumed Innocent," Turow sold the screen rights to "The Burden of Proof" to television instead, for one specific reason. "The basic answer is 'Time'," he reflects. "I was considering alternatives at the time 'Presumed Innocent' came out, and with no disrespect to the movie, which I liked a great deal, I came away from that experience realizing that this novel — which was 30 percent longer, with a plot that really didn't have any dispensable parts — could not be made in a 90-minute or two-hour film. I talked to my agents and lawyer, and we all decided that TV would be the best venue."



Elizondo (seated), Powers and Dennehy star in 'Burden of Proof'

At the outset, consideration was given to approaching "Innocent" actor Julia to reprise the role of Stern in "Burden," but according to the miniseries' executive producer and director Mike Robe, he "wasn't available during the period of time we were going to shoot, so it was a non-issue from the very beginning. We then proceeded to figure out who were the best actors on the planet to do this picture, and I can tell you that Hector was right at the top of the list. He was our very first choice."

The affable Elizondo says of portraying Stern, "He's a fellow who is somewhat myopic, and he's a workaholic ... and he's a much better person than I am. His values were very, very difficult to live with, because he is almost a righteous fellow. It was an interesting character, but I've come across folks like that, so the preparation was already there."

With "The Burden of Proof" marking his second opportunity to act out a Turow creation, "Cocoon" and "F/X" alumnus Dennehy deems his new role as the under-suspicion Dixon Hartnell "a great character, and Scott and I got very friendly during the shooting of 'Presumed Innocent.' Later on, I was doing a play in Chicago and we extended our relationship, so it just seemed an natural progression. I love the way Turow writes, and I guess Dixon was an extension of Horgan (the ambitious district attorney Dennehy played in 'Innocent'). Horgan is a different kind of animal, but from the same litter, so it was

CSO bids manager farewell

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will soon say farewell to longtime General Manager, Francis "Andy" Anderson.

Anderson, who has managed the Columbus Symphony since 1977 will retire on June 30 leaving behind a colorful history of development for one of the city's oldest cultural institutions.

Prior to his employment with the CSO, Anderson worked for Schwob Manufacturing in Columbus from 1948 to 1977. After serving on the CSO's Board of Directors for more than 10 years he was hired to manage the orchestra on a half-time basis. In a few years it became apparent that an increase to full-time status was essential.

Joyce Schwob says, "I have been associated with the CSO for many years through the Symphony Board, the Women's Association and the needs of the orchestra. It was my good fortune to be on board the first year Anderson became Business Manager. That was a wise decision for the CSO. There was some initial help from the American Symphony Orchestra League, the national organization for symphonies in this country...however, Anderson was a natural. He is never outwardly ruffled, is dependable, is a diplomat, has a genuine sensitivity and respect for the people he works with, knows the community, loves music, is creative yet a realist, and never measures the hours of his job which calls for superhuman dedication, ability and stamina. He is all of this plus possesses a cooperative spirit that spreads joy and accomplishment to those who work with him. It has been fun!"

The orchestra has changed a great deal since Anderson became the CSO's manager. The annual budget has grown from $43,000 to more than $450,000 this current season. Budgeting, marketing, fundraising, planning and concert production have always been a part of the job - but the demand of his position increased ten-fold over the years. Fortunately the staff has grown. After that first year as manager, Anderson added one part-time secretary. Today the CSO office employs five staff members.

Almeda Medlin, executive secretary in the CSO office states, "I have worked in the CSO office for nine years and working with Anderson has made it a real joy coming to work every day. Together we have seen the CSO office move from a former coat closet in the Three Arts Theatre to modern spacious offices and from manual typewriters, to computers! I admire the professional way he has managed the CSO office. The many accomplishments that have been made can be credited to his dedicated and skillful management."

Many rewarding opportunities have presented themselves to Anderson over the past 15 years. He has attended regional and national American Symphony Orchestra League Management Seminars. Anderson helped establish the Columbus Symphony Women's Association, one of the premier volunteer support groups in the city. His successful management strategies have helped the orchestra increase the number of concerts it performs annually, while maintaining a firm base of patrons.

Over the past two decades orchestras have become increasingly complex businesses needing qualified leadership. Anderson more than met that challenge.

"Orchestra management was not something I ever pictured myself doing, but I've thoroughly enjoyed my work here and will miss coming to the office ."

really interesting to do it again.

"Listen, I'm always playing one kind of a villain or another — especially if you talk to my accountants — but usually, they're more interesting. They have better lines, but I always try to play villains like they're good guys, and good guys like they're villains. I think that's what's interesting, just trying to play the contrast."

Continuing his writing while also maintaining his work as a lawyer requires a certain balance of priorities for Turow, though he clearly is comfortable with it.

"Generally speaking," he explains, "I get up in the morning, sort of conquer the children's breakfast with my wife, and try to write for a while. Around 10 a.m., the phone starts to ring, and it's usually my office or clients who know where to find me. If they're not court calls, I'll stay at home 'til around noon ...."

SOA to open new building

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A ribbon-cutting ceremony celebrating the grand reopening of the School of the Americas Headquarters, building 35, is scheduled for 11 a.m. today.

Rep. Richard Ray and Lt. Gen. Wilson Shoffner, commander of the Combined Arms Center at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., and deputy commander of U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command, will be guest speakers.

The former Infantry Center and School Headquarters building, constructed from 1934 to 1935, became the headquarters of the School of the Americas when it moved from Panama in 1984. The $6 million renovation project started in July 1989.

The ceremony will be followed by another ceremony to dedicate the school's library in honor of the late John B. Amos. Amos, founder of American Family Life Assurance Corporation and a long-time Columbus resident, was a major source of civilian support in the relocation of the School of the Americas from Panama to Fort Benning.

Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina, a close friend of the Amos family, will be the guest speaker at the library dedication.

Welcome

Col. Burnet R. Quick and his wife, Frances, greet visitors at a reception honoring their arrival. The event was held at the Officers' Club Feb. 7. Fort Benning's new chief of staff came from Wurzberg, Germany, where he held the same position with the 3rd Infantry Division. Quick is replacing Col. John D. Fuller, who is retiring from the Army after nearly 27 years of service.

Post honors top OCS graduate

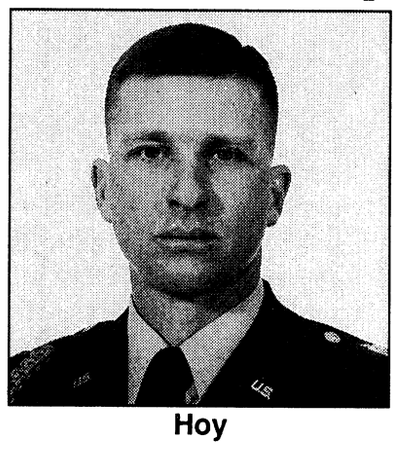
By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

"His deeds epitomize the qualities we want to imbue in the officer candidate: the warrior spirit," said Assistant Commandant Brig. Gen. Carl Ernst before presenting 1991's most outstanding graduate of Officer Candidate School with the Patterson Award, in a ceremony held Wednesday at Wigle Hall.

Established in 1952 to honor each year's most outstanding infantry graduate of the school, this year's recipient was 2nd Lt. James Hoy, who attended OCS from November 1990 to February 1991.

Capt. Judy Scroggins, ceremony organizer, said the award is based on leadership and academic ability, aptitude and character.

The award was named for Robert P. Patterson, a World War I captain who received the



Hoy

Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, and the Purple Heart during the conflict. Patterson later served as secretary of war under President Harry Truman.

After his death in 1952, friends established a trust fund for the award, which is given on or around Patterson's Feb. 12 birthday.

Guest Speaker retired Col. Robert P. Nett, who received the Medal of Honor for his actions in World War II, reminded those in attendance that the spirit behind the award lies in Patterson's own words: "Train your infantry lieutenants so they can be second to none. This has already been done, and with God's help we shall remain second to none."

Hoy received a check for $3,000 and an engraved 9mm Beretta pistol.

He said that he owed his success to God and to his wife, Susan.

Hoy is currently assigned to Company A, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), where he serves as a rifle platoon leader.

He joined the Army in October 1982, serving first as an enlisted member.

Hoy deployed to Grenada for Operation Urgent Fury, served with the Berlin Brigade in Germany, and was a drill sergeant at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

He graduated from OCS as the distinguished leader graduate and honor graduate of his class.

Hoy and his wife have three children, Heather, 7, Sean, 4, and Brennan, 2.

Hoy said that his goal is to someday be a battalion commander, but added that for now he is enjoying his present assignment.

"Being with the 24th is a great opportunity," Hoy said. "The unit recently received Bradley Fighting Vehicles, so I'm really learning a lot being on the mechanized side of the house. Right now I just want to learn from what I'm doing," he said.

2/69th Panthers 'cook' to win Connelly Award

By Aurelio Feliberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), has received the Phillip A. Connelly Award for "The Best Small Garrison Dining Facility of the Post."

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general, presented the award Feb. 5 to Sgt. 1st Class Alvin Glenn, dining facility manager.

The "Panther" Battalion dining facility won the installation-level award in the category of small small garrison dining facility, among those serving 200 or fewer dinners per meal.

The Panthers, along with the 43rd Combat Engineer Battalion (Heavy) dining facility in the large facility category, advance to the Training and Doctrine Command's competition in the annual Army-wide judging for food service.

"There were three major deciding factors—preparation of meals, the dining facility's appearance and the administrative portions of running a mess hall," said Staff Sgt. James Harris, the assistant dining facility manager.

"After being inspected for the past two months and finally winning the award, the men and women who work in the facility are elated and appreciative," said Spc. Thomas Greene, shift leader.

"My cooks weren't too surprised to win because they strive for excellence everyday," said Sgt. Tommy Benbow, another shift leader.

"I think our biggest assets are our service to the soldiers and the quality of the food we serve," Benbow added. "It's true that we can only draw the rations that are available from Troop Issue Subsistence Allowance, but we always try to offer something extra each month for our soldiers and their families. Some of our upcoming specials include our Black History Month lunch and Panthers Night Out dinner."

Skiing is a 'paradise found'

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

Paradise found!

Last week I discovered a little bit of heaven right here in the South. Or, I should say the northern part of the South.

I found it right outside Boone, N.C., on top of Beech Mountain.

I got to ski!

The last time I skied was when I was stationed at Fort Drum, N.Y. Up there you didn't need to go far to find snow. Step outside your barracks and you were in it.

It could come as early as September and as late as July. In fact the people in Watertown, N.Y., just outside of Fort Drum, decided to cash in on all the snow and declare itself the snow capital of the U.S. and hold a snow festival.

The first year they had to truck snow in for the snow sculptures because of a February thaw. The next year they had to postpone the festivities a week because there was too much of the white stuff.

To further show how fickle the weather up there was, the first year I was at Fort Drum, we got 28 inches the entire year—to include four inches on April 18.

The next year there was nine feet of the stuff in December.

But I digress.

The reason I mentioned Fort Drum is because just outside Watertown is a little hill called Dry Hill. That's where we skied.

We'd get off work, hit the chow hall and head for the slopes, night skiing started at 6 p.m. The best part of it, besides the fact that it only cost about four bucks, was there was a bar with a roaring fire to warm the toes and the innards.

You could also watch the locals and soldiers ski.

Many of the soldiers would come with their parkas and Mickey Mouse Boots and Army skis. More often than not, this was the first time on skis for these guys.

Give them credit, they had guts. And hard heads. And sturdy bones. They had to. They'd crash head first into trees, plow into the ski racks, ricochet off the corners of the lodge and generally break nearly everything but their zeal for more.

The people at Dry Hill in fact would often give them free lessons if they rented equipment to cut down on the amount of broken skis and poles.

This isn't to say all soldiers were reckless and inept when you strapped seven foot boards to their feet. Some actually were pretty good, but nothing to compare with the locals who skied in their blue jeans, turtle neck shirt, windbreakers and baseball caps worn backwards.

They'd build mounds to practice aerial acrobatics and they'd plow mounds into one of the slopes to do mogul skiing.

So that was my memory of skiing when I went up to Beech in my jeans, turtle neck shirt under a windbreaker and stocking cap.

I quickly learned that in that great ski mecca–the South–fashion is just as important as ability.

The skiers on Beech look and though they'd just stepped out of the pages of Ski Magazine.

While some of them had the bulky, padded, bib overalls under their ski jackets, most had the tight-fitting stretch pants with ski jacket fitting snugly around the waist.

And naturally it was all color-coordinated, even down to the books and skis.

Even first-timers had the right clothes on since the ski shops rented the stuff. This made it pretty difficult to determine who could and who could not ski—at least until they got off a lift and had to move.

Then it was real easy to tell. In fact just looking down from the lift you could predict within seconds when a person was going to crash and burn.

Skier watching aside, the real thrill of skiing is doing it. Zipping past floundering skiers, cutting clean cristies in the snow or shooting down a diamond trail, eyes bugging out of your head in sheer terror as you await the inevitable crash landing, praying it'll be soft and not too embarrassing.

For those of you who enjoy skiing, I heartily recommend that area of North Carolina. Some words of advice— bring lots of money.

A day on Beech cost more than a day at Killington—a collection of five mountains—or Lake Placid, a two-time Olympic games site.

Unless you get one of those sleep and ski deals, plan on staying about 30 miles out of town for a good deal on motel rooms. Definitely try and go on a weekday, and buy your ski passes at a ski rental shop in town—you'll save about six bucks.

And above all—call ahead.

Cuts won't affect readiness

Editor's note: The following statement was made by Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, Army chief of staff, concerning the fiscal 1993 budget.

In the Jan. 29, state of the union message, President George Bush reiterated his commitment to a strong defense of our nation in a changing world. Moreover, he presented a well thought-out resourcing plan supportive of his commitment.

I am confident that the president's budget will allow the total Army to fulfill its critical role in our new national military strategy. It will keep us on the right track as we evolve into a smaller, post-industrial fighting force tailored to deal with the challenges of the new strategic environment. It will break the mold of 'Armistice...followed by recklessness' and avoid the dangers implicit in a 'hollow Army.'

In fiscal 1993, our total budget authority will decrease to $63.6 billion, but America's Army will still be ready, practicing sound fiscal management, we will maintain our war winning edge. Specifically, we will cut the Air Defense Anti-tank System program and defer production on such major systems as the Comanche and Line of sight anti-tank. Yet other programs, like Armored Systems Modernization, will change in their focus. But I'm convinced we will still be able to preserve our strategic flexibility and to deliver a balanced, first-rate fighting force. Remember, under the proposed budget we will maintain our realistic, robust training programs which, as the Gulf War demonstrated, are keys to winning the first battle of the next war.

Today's 24-division total Army — on the way to a 20-division structure by fiscal 1995 — is not simply a smaller version of the force which gave our nation its Cold War victory. It is a dynamic institution, which, using the resources provided under the president's budget, will be trained and ready to fight and win serving American at home and abroad — a strategic force capable of delivering decisive victory. America's Army remains a total quality force Americans can count on.

LAAF aviators get Navy safety training

Editor's note: The aviators from Lawson Army Airfield go through monthly safety meetings. In December, they went to the Naval Air Station at Pensacola, Fla., for underwater emergency egress training.

The following personal account was provided by Chief Warrant Officer 3 John Lehmann, installation aviation safety officer, LAAF.

It was 6:30 a.m. when several aircrew members from Lawson Army Airfield climbed aboard the UH-60 helicopter and departed for some special training at NAS Pensacola. Arriving at 6:30 a.m. (there is an hour time difference) the aviators were picked up at the airfield and taken to the "dunker" building.

The dunker is the nickname given to the 9D5A device for training aircrew members in underwater egress and survival. It is a mock-up of a helicopter with seats and seat belts inside. After proving their abilities at swimming and treading water while wearing full flight gear (flight suit, survival vest, boots, and flight helmet) these volunteers were herded into the dunker.

Climbing up and strapping in is a breeze and it is reassuring to know that Navy divers are waiting underwater and watching your every move, but when this huge "thing" crashed into the water, descended 20 feet, and rotated upside down, this aviator forgot about onlookers and began considering real survival. There are seat belts to release and you must remember the reference points you've selected along your egress route, because the Navy has provided us with blacked out swimmers' goggles. One wrong step and you go through again.

There are four dunks required of everyone and each time we were assigned a different seat.

Looking back, the experience was super. I feel much better flying over water now. I try to avoid it altogether, and if I can't, I stay closer to the shore and even cross at narrow places. I don't want the opportunity to use my new skills. If you fly with us on Fort Benning you should feel better about our training too.

CG stresses holiday safety

We will have an extended weekend to celebrate Presidents' Day.

Long weekends increase the potential for serious injury or death in traffic accidents. However, my goal is for Fort Benning to be accident free.

I ask everyone to consider the following safety measures:

• Taking commercial transportation in lieu of driving.

• Checking your car for sufficient tire tread, operation lights, good windshield wipers, and non-leaking exhaust system.

• Not traveling long distances alone, and taking frequent breaks.

• Driving defensively, sober and alert.

• Wearing your seat belt.

I wish all personnel, military and civilian, a safe and enjoyable holiday.

Separation programs change requirements

By James E. Brinson
Adjutant General's Office

Several of the separation programs implemented for the fiscal 1992 Army drawdown have been changed recently.

The Enlisted Voluntary Early Transition Program has reopened for applications in certain selected military occupational specialities.

Soldiers with three years active service and holding the following MOSs are eligible: 13R, 15E, 16D, 16P, 19E, 21G, 29E, 29J, 31F, 31L, 31M, 31N, 33Y, 74C, 76Y, 82C, 98G, 98H and 98K.

Soldiers may apply now through April 30. The requested separation date must be Sept. 30 or sooner.

Applications must go through command channels for decision at Headquarters, Department of the Army.

Soldiers do not receive separation incentive benefits or severance pay under this voluntary program.

Soldiers can contact Linda Childress, Adjutant General Transition Center at 545-1324 for assistance.

Two additional MOSs have been added to the overstrength MOS list for sergeants who want to apply for the Voluntary Incentive Separation and Special Separation Bonus programs — 16J and 35U.

Enlisted soldiers who need assistance should call Sina Evans, AG Personnel Actions at 545-1917.

Officers and soldiers who apply for VSI or SSB and who are later selected for promotion may now apply for withdrawal of VSI or SSB separation if they desire.

HQDA will now accept applications for all active component officers and warrant officers who meet basic eligibility criteria (Category 3).

The application window is March 2 through Aug. 1.

Officers must submit their applications through command channels to the AG Officer Management Branch for processing to HQDA.

Officers should contact Maj. Richard Polley or Georgia Standridge at 545-2712 for assistance.

AG has received 1,300 booklets explaining VSI and SSB, which are being distributed to units.

Desert Storm W-2s may contain errors

Soldiers who served should check LESs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Department of the Army has announced that many soldiers who served in the combat zone in Southwest Asia during Operation Desert Storm have received incorrect W-2 forms, said a post finance official.

According to Raymond Winderweedle, chief of Military Pay, the first $500 of an officer's paycheck earned in the combat zone is tax exempt, while an enlisted member's or warrant officer's paycheck earned in the combat zone is entirely exempt from taxes. However, the officers paychecks were treated the same as enlisted members, with the result being that many officers may have been under-withheld.

Pay of enlisted soldiers was exempt even if the soldier only served one day of the month in the combat zone. Also, the tax exemption applied to bonuses earned in the combat zone, but not bonuses collected in the combat zone.

Winderweedle urged soldiers to check their W-2 forms using their Leave and Earnings Statements to ensure the amounts shown on the W-2 form are correct.

Personnel who have incorrect W-2 forms or who are unsure should notify their unit Personnel Administrations Center.

"The PAC can help the soldier fill out a Form W-2 Wage Recomputation Worksheet. If the W-2 is incorrect , the PAC will forward the worksheet, with proof that the W-2 was incorrect, to the Reconciliation Section, Military Pay Branch, building 85. This information will be transmitted to the Defense, Finance and Accounting Service in Indianapolis, Ind., for the issuance of a corrected W-2.."

To recompute their taxable income using the form, soldiers will need copies of all of their 1991 Leave and Earnings Statements. They will also need to know the dates they entered and departed the combat zone, the amount of any bonuses paid while in the combat zone, and the number of days of accrued leaved earned and cashed during the time they were eligible for combat zone tax exemption. Soldiers who traveled on temporary duty to the combat zone will need to have a copy of their travel orders and settlement voucher.

Winderweedle added that many mistakes were caught and corrected at the central finance office in Indianapolis.

"In fact, last Friday we got in approximately 8,000 corrected W-2 forms for Fort Benning that have been distributed through the unit PACs."

He said that soldiers who think that they have incorrect W-2 forms should wait to see if they receive one of these updated forms, dated Jan. 31, before going to their PAC.

Employee 'cashes in' on Suggestion Program

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A Department of the Army civilian was awarded $4,000 Monday for a suggestion in the Army Ideas for Excellence Suggestion Program.

David W. Orr was presented the award for a proposal that helmet liners and pads be washed and dried prior to serviceability inspections, and then reused, instead of replacing all liners and pads with new items. Orr was presented $2,850 last year for calculated savings at Fort Benning.

The additional award represents adoption of the idea DA-wide.

After a year's experience with the implementation of the suggestion in DA, an evaluation of the idea will be done on the Department of Defense level to determine possible savings at that level. That evaluation may justify an additional award, according to Suggestion Program coordinators.

The annual savings to Fort Benning is $38,952. Total savings to DA has not been determined.

Some civilian drivers may need new licenses

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Civilian employees on Fort Benning who drive certain classes of vehicles must have a commercial driver's license by April 1, according to post transportation and civilian employee officials.

Approximately 281 civilian drivers on Fort Benning fall into those categories, said Korin Mason, chief of the Transportation Division of the Directorate of Logistics.

According to Billy Tucker, chief of the drivers training section of the transporation division, DOL, drivers must apply directly to their state's Department of Public Safety for a commercial driver's license.

The department will then send the driver the necessary documents to qualify for being tested for their commercial license, said Tucker.

The test comes in two parts. There is a written test, which every driver must take, said Tucker.

Then, some drivers must perform an on-the-road test, which can now be administered at the driver testing section, Transportation Division, at no cost to the employee, said Mason.

Before the test can be administered here, Tucker said, drivers must submit a copy of their current driving record.

"The test is available for all Department of Defense civilian employee drivers who are residents of Georgia," said Mason.

Alabama residents who are civilian employee drivers cannot be tested at Fort Benning and need to call the Russell County Driver's License Department in Phenix City at 298-1953 or the Alabama Department of Public Safety in Montgomery at (205) 242-4235, said Mason.

Upon passing the test, the driver can receive the actual license from the local Department of Motor Vehicles in downtown Columbus, said Tucker. Drivers who qualify for grandfathering are not required to take the road test. Information concerning grandfathering can be obtained from the Department of Public Safety

A series of classes was recently given to prepare drivers for the test. This pre-test instruction proved successful for drivers about to take the test, said Tucker.

Drivers failing to be properly licensed by April 1 will not be allowed to drive their duty vehicles until they get the license, said Civilian Personnel officials.

For more information on the commercial driver's license, contact the driver testing section at 545-5043.

Cleaning requires planning

Diligence makes clearing quarters easy

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

In preparing to clear family housing at Fort Benning, cleaning is probably the most difficult task.

According to Bob Wilson, chief of quarters for the Family Housing Branch of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, there are certain standards for cleaning that if met, allow for clearing on a timely basis.

These include:

Floors, rugs and installed carpet — Stains, wax and dirt must be removed. Tile and wood floors will be waxed evenly without streaks. Installed carpeting will be cleaned to remove dirt and spots.

Walls and ceilings — Dust, smudges and other spots will be removed. All wallpaper will be removed.

Doors — Interior and exterior doors and frames will be cleaned and free of dirt and stains.

Cabinets, closets and shelves — All surfaces will be cleaned and free of dirt and stains. All shelf paper will be removed.

Light fixtures — All components, including incandescent bulbs will be cleaned of insects, dirt, lint, film and streaks. Globes and lampshades will be removed, cleaned and replaced.

Mirrors — Mirrors will be cleaned to a shine and be streak free.

Ranges — All areas will be cleaned inside and out to remove grease, dust, rust, food, tarnish and streaks. Move range and clean areas under, above, behind and on either side. Move range back after inspection.

Refrigerator — This must be cleaned thoroughly on the inside and out to include the doors, sides, top and areas around the coils in back. The drain pan will be cleaned and replaced. Door gaskets will be cleaned, and the doors left open. Surfaces beneath, above and behind the refrigerator will be cleaned. It should be moved away from the wall for cleaning and moved back after the inspection.

Windows — Inside and outside surfaces of windows, including the frames, should be cleaned and free of spots, streaks or film. Windowsills, curtain rods and blinds need to be cleaned. This also includes basement windows, frames and dry wells.

Dishwasher — The dishwasher must be cleaned thoroughly on the inside and out to include the door. Door gaskets should be cleaned, and the door left open.

Kitchen, bathroom and toilets — All equipment including bathtubs, wash basins, toilet bowls, showers, mirrors and mirror shelves, towel racks, kitchen sinks, counter tops and related hardware, including wall and floor tiles will be cleaned. All equipment and wall tiles will be polished to a streak-free shine.

Radiators and pipes — Radiators and pipes will be clean. Dirt, sediments and stains will be removed.

Ventilators and air vents — Grease, stains and dirt sediments will be completely removed inside and out. Permanent filters will be cleaned, and replaceable filters will be replaced. This includes ventilators and air vents in the basement.

Water heater — This must be wiped down.

Furnace — This must be wiped down.

Basement — Dust, dirt, trash, firewood, boxes and pallets must be removed.

Outside areas — Bushes and trees must be trimmed away from the house. The flower beds must be clean and free of weeds and trash. Grass must be mowed to a height of one to two inches. The lawn must be properly edged, but not with a trenching tool. The yard must be reseeded where necessary and free of all unauthorized fences and playground equipment, with all yard damage repaired. All trash must be removed from the area, oil/grease stains removed from driveways/carports, and cobwebs must be removed from carports, eaves, windows, storerooms and doorways.

Garden equipment — All U-DO-IT garden equipment must be clean, lightly oiled and left in the quarters/storage shed.

Trash cans — Trash cans must be removed from the premises.

Excess furniture — This must be cleaned to remove lint, dust and dirt. Spots and stains must be removed to the maximum extent possible. Doors and drawers will be free of dust, dirt or other foreign matter. Drawers should be completely removed so that frames and rollers can be cleaned of dust. Outside surfaces must be waxed and polished to a shine.

Self-Help — All Self-Help must be accomplished. The fact that the U-DO-IT Store is out of a certain item is no excuse. Plan early.

Preventative maintenance — All preventative maintenance must be accomplished. The fact that the PM Shop is out of the materials to make repairs is no excuse. Plan early.

Family Housing expects soldiers to follow easy steps for clearing quarters

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The procedure that residents in quarters on post at Fort Benning must take in order to outprocess easily includes the following:

• Schedule a pre-termination inspection with Family Housing, building 399, 545-3107, 30 to 45 days prior to the expected date of termination.

• Accomplish all self-help and preventative maintenance work before the final inspection. There is a charge for any damage "beyond fair wear and tear."

• Schedule the household goods movement with Transportation, Building 280, 545-3256, prior to the date they need to be picked up. Do not move anything until after checking with Transportation or there may not be any reimbursement.

• Turn in all government furniture to Building 1743, 545-5733, before clearing quarters. The resident must do this. The government will not pay to have it returned. Do not allow movers to load government furniture with personal household goods, or the soldier will have to pay for it, as well as pay to have it returned to Fort Benning. Keep furniture clearance slip to show the Family Housing inspector and Housing Referral.

•) Schedule a final inspection with Family Housing as soon as it is known when Transportation will pick up the household goods. Allow sufficient time to clean the quarters. Inspection times are not always available when wanted. Plan early. Reinspections are even more difficult to schedule.

• Be at the quarters at the appointed time. If the appointment is missed, rescheduling is necessary and may take several days.

• If the resident would like to hire a cleaning team for inside and out, a list of government-approved cleaning teams is available at Family Housing. The resident must come to the office to read the list, and no recommendations are allowed to be made to anyone.

• For those in Battle Park Homes, comply with the rental/lease agreement, and give the landlord proper written notice.

DEH feels pinch as downsizing begins

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The Family Housing Branch of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing has discovered that it is feeling the pinch with the downsizing of the military as larger numbers of people are trying to clear quarters on post.

Bob Wilson, chief of quarters for the Family Housing Branch, said that the turnover now in Fort Benning's 4,082 sets of quarters is "enormous."

There have been an extra 10 to 20 families leaving per week since November, he said.

This means a lot of extra work to get the quarters inspected and ready for the next occupants.

Another indicator in numbers is the total of those attending the transition assistance classes within six months prior to leaving the Army. Ted Craig, chief of the Army Career and Alumni Program, said that over the last quarter the number of persons attending these sessions has doubled. They now see about 400 to 500 here per month.

During the fall, Family Housing had more people than usual wanting quarters too with the arrival of the 317th Engineering Battalion and the 13th Service and Support Battalion from Europe. This year, they are anticipating the arrival of the 61st Engineering Battalion from Europe as well.

Wilson said the best advice he can give to make the quarters clearing as easy as possible is to schedule a pretermination inspection with Family Housing at 545-3107, 30 to 45 days prior to your expected termination date.

This will identify what cleaning and self-help projects the resident needs to complete and what work will have to be done by Preventative Maintenance before the resident can leave.

According to Sherman Callaham, chief of Preventative Maintenance, the biggest problem is that people live in the quarters for four to five years and do nothing to see that it is kept up. Then they expect everything to be put back in order in a few days.

"If the soldier would just call us at 545-2607 immediately after Family Housing's pretermination inspection at least 30 days out, Preventative Maintenance would have more than enough time to have the individual assigned to that housing area contact them and make arrangements for the work to be done," he said.

Kenneth Hankins, chief of the Housing Division, added that these policies have always been in effect.

"However, when soldiers fail to arrange for the mandatory preterminati n inspection, everything is taking longer — the re-inspections, over and over," he said. "We'd like to help everyone clear as fast as possible."

Wilson noted that all of this requires proper planning and cannot be done three days before the resident wants to leave.

"The cleaning itself usually takes about two to three days of solid work, outside and inside, after Transportation has picked up the household goods," he said.

"About 60 percent of those leaving contract with someone else to do the cleaning because they're in a hurry, and about 40 percent elect to do it themselves."

Either way, he pointed out it has to be done, and quarters must pass inspection or the soldier and his family will be held over.

"Timeliness is important," he said, "and negative attitudes don't help anyone."

IOBC, IOAC students 'fight' 1799 Helder campaign in Holland

By Brian Linville
Military History Division

"We fought to the drone of the pipes and shouts of Scotland Forever! Across the sand dunes we marched, into the face of the French army, their artillery a poundin' at us, and their cavalry runnin' all around us. We lost 200 Highlanders from the 92nd Regiment alone."

These were the words spoken by "Private Ian Maclachlan," played by Sterling Harris, a fort re-enactor from the Napoleonic Association, Feb. 2, at the National Infantry Museum. He was describing his experience in the Battle of Castricum, Holland, 1799.

Harris' presentation was part of a Napoleonic Warfare Seminar, sponsored by the Military History Division, and the Infantry Museum. The seminar focused on the Helder Campaign, a joint British and Russian invasion of Holland during the Napoleonic Era.

A panel discussion included several guest lecturers. James Birdseye of The Courier Magazine discussed the weapons and tactics of the period. Coleman Williams, Ph.D. from Wallace Community College presented a paper on the Russian-Anglo Coalition Warfare. Capt. John R. Surdu, author of Battles for Empire, discussed the Battle of Castricum in tactical detail.

Following the lecture, several Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Course students participated in a wargame refight of the Castricum Battle, hosted by the Historical Miniatures Gaming Society.

The students put to test their tactical and historical skills with 15mm miniatures, wargame rules, and a terrain board of the actual battlefield. The simulation was fought to a stalemate, much like the original 1799 battle.

The battle forced the Anglo-Russians to withdraw from Holland, accepting defeat in the overall campaign.

"The refight gave us significant insight into the history of the era," remarked Capt. Mike Repetski, an IOAC student. "We all learned much about warfare in general from this entire seminar."

"The Battle Analysis Seminar Series is both educational, and recreational," said Capt. Pete Panzeri, the seminar director. "The use of Living History Re-enactors, and Battle Simulations provides a participatory stimulation for students of history," he said. "That brings to life the academic presentations by our guest lecturers."

VA announces health scholarships

Department of Veterans Affairs

The Department of Veterans Affairs is announcing the availability of scholarships to nursing, nurse anesthesia, and occupational or physical therapy students for the 1992-93 school year.

Two scholarships — the Health Professional Scholarship Program and the Reserve Member Stipend Program — provide financial support to associate degree nursing students in their last year of study, and third and fourth-year students in baccalaureate or entry-level masters' degree programs in nursing, occupational therapy and physical therapy.

In the Reserve Member Stipend Program, reservists must be members of the Selected Ready Reserves and eligible for the Montgomery Reserve GI Bill.

VA Health Professional Scholarship recipients receive tuition, educational expenses and a monthly stipend of $621. Reserve stipend recipients receive $400 monthly while enrolled in full-time course work.

In exchange, participants in both programs agree to serve as a full-time registered nurse, or occupational or physical therapist in a VA medical center for a period of one year for each year of support. The maximum length of an award is two years.

3 local soldiers on Army Tae Kwon Do team

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Three Fort Benning soldiers who participated in the All-Army Tae Kwon Do Trial Camp at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., in January qualified for the All-Army team.

They are Rachael Ridenour, 988th Military Police Company; Edward Givans, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment; and Lorenzo Arredondo, Headquarters Company, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Ridenour, a sergeant, will participate on her second All-Army team; she was on last year's team.

Ridenour, from Double Oak, Texas, won two gold medals at this year's camp, one in fighting and another in forms. She also won a gold medal at the North American Counseil International du Sport Militaire Championships against Canada.

Ridenour, will now compete at the Nationals in May, and if she places in the top four she will qualify for the Olympic team trials later this year.

Ridenour's goals are to have the team win gold and then open a school and teach martial arts.

"I didn't do very well last year and I was disappointed," said Ridenour. "This feels real good. I would like to thank my command for the support that they have given me and for allowing me to take part in this endeavor."

Lorenzo Arredondo, a specialist, is from Oklahoma City, Okla. He started in the martial arts when he was 14 years old.

This is his first year at the trials and he said he was surprised he was selected. Arredondo placed first in fighting and second in forms at the trials and placed second at the CISM Championships.

His goals are to make the Olympic Team Trials from the Nationals and also win gold at the Olympics. Arredondo said, "I was surprised that I made it this far, but I'm glad I made it."

Edward E. Givans, a sergeant, is a team member and the Fort Benning coach. He started in the arts at the age of 10 while growing up in Oakland, Calif.

This is Givan's second year on the team. He placed second at the trials in 1991 and second at the CISM Championships.

This year he won gold at the trials and gold at the CISM Championships. He also has qualified for the Nationals to be held May 27 through 29 at Hampton, Va.

"We have a chance to win the Nationals if the commanders give us time to train," said Givans. "We would like to thank the chain of command for all of their support and encouragement."

David Laster, a sergeant first class with Company C, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, didn't make the All-Army team this year, but he was selected to represent Fort Benning at the Regionals to be held here in April.

If Laster qualifies for state and places in the top four he also will qualify himself for the Nationals.

Laster , who is from Chicago, Ill., had to go about making the Fort Benning team a little differently than the other members.

"Because of my Japanese style and background I had to go to Arlington, Va., and prove to the All Army Coach that I could make the switch to the Tae Kwon Do form," said Laster.

Laster's goals are to qualify for the Nationals and get certified first dan in Kuki Won Tae Kwon Do for further participation in next years All-Army Trials.

Charles Dent, an operating room technician with the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital has been selected for the Armed Forces Cross Country Team and will participate in the Armed Forces Cross Country Championships in Lagos, Nigeria, in March.

Dent, who started running in the ninth grade, grew up in Charleston, W. Va., and still holds the state record for the 800 meters, which he set in his junior year at Dupont High School.

During his days at Glenville State College, he set and still holds all the records from the 800 meters to the marathon.

In 1991, he placed third overall and first for the military in the Army 10-Miler held in Washington D.C.

Dent, will leave for Nigeri March 6 and will race March 13. H will run in the 12-kilometer race, also known as the long cross.

"Hopefully if I do well at the championships it will open other doors for me. This in turn will allow me to compete against the best runners in the world," said Dent.

"As long as I continue to train and race, there may be a chance that I can qualify for the Olympic Trials this summer, that's what I'm looking toward right now," he added.

Soldier going to All-Army basketball trial camp

Deidre Bailey, a bio-medical equipment repair specialist with the 34th Medical Battalion, has been selected to attend the 1992 Women's All-Army Basketball Trial Camp at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Bailey, who is from Philadelphia, Pa., started playing basketball at the age of 14 as a freshman at Germantown High School.

This is Bailey's sixth appearance at the All-Army Trials and she has made the team every other time. Bailey was on the Armed Forces Team for the 1988 - 89 season and '89 - '90. The team came in second both years.

Bailey attributes her style of play to two individuals — Arthur Jenkins, her old All-Army coach and Angela Armstrong whom she met at Fort Belvoir, Va. They taught her how to play under control and helped her fine tune her game.

Bailey

Bailey, who left for Pennsylvania, Wednesday after helping her team win an intramural post championship, said, "Competing for the All-Army team is no easy feat. The level of play at the camp is as close to pro as you can get. The women who come there have played college ball somewhere along the way and they play for keeps."

'Badgirls' are women's basketball champions

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Badgirls, led by Sheryl Brown's 15 points and Deidre Bailey's 14, defeated The Bandits 50-36 Tuesday night at Briant Wells Gym in the Women's Post Basketball Championship.

The Badgirls led 25-18 at the half.

They started the second half with an 11 to 4 point run that put them up 38-22 and they never looked back from there.

Also contributing to the Badgirls' victory were Niecy King with 7 points and Kaletha Smith and Thelma Taylor with 6 points each.

The Bandits were led by Geneva Hayes with 9 points and Karen Thornton and Lillian Common with 6 points each.

The Bandits stayed close in the first half with Hayes and Thornton doing most of the scoring, but at the start of the second half, The Bandit shots were not going in and The Badgirls' defense kept them off balance. The Badgirl defense kept up the pressure on the boards also, not allowing The Bandits to get to the offensive boards.

Bailey, an All-Army Basketball selectee, said, "This feels good. To know we can win without our big people shows how much we wanted to win."

Island Run comes to Jekyll Island

Jekyll Island Public Relations

JEKYLL ISLAND, Ga. — Recognized as a "Top 20 Event in the Southeast" for the fifth year, the 13th Annual Island Runs will be held here on Feb. 22. Approximately 400 athletes will gather at the 5K and 10K runs at the Beach Deck on Beachview Drive.

"We are hoping to attract a larger, more competitive field of runners by changing to a 10K run as opposed to the previous 15K," said Wright Tilley, Jekyll Island Authority manager of special events and recreation. "We believe many runners would prefer a 10K, which is 6.2 miles, and our Island Runs provide this excellent opportunity," he said.

The 5-kilometer run will be an "out and back" on the beach. The 10 kilometer run will also be "out and back," with the start and finish on the beach and the remainder of the course on a paved bicycle path. Water stations will be provided.

The 5K run will begin at 8 a.m. and the 10K run at 9 a.m. Eight women's divisions from ages 19 and under to 50 and over and 10 men's divisions from ages 19 and under to 60 and over will participate.

Trophies will be awarded to first, second and third place divisional winners and each participant will receive a T-shirt. The entry fee is $10 before Thursday and $12 afterward. Registration is available in advance and from 7 to 7:45 a.m. the morning of the event in the South End of the Convention Center.

For more information about the 5K and 10K Island Runs, call the Jekyll Island Recreation Department at (912) 635-2232. Entry forms are available at Athletic Attic's Glynn County locations, The Casino on St. Simons Island and by calling the Jekyll Island Recreation Department.

A Funny Thing Happens When People Put Down A Newspaper.
They Start Spending Money.
Nothing puts people in the mood to buy like newspaper. In fact, most people consider it almost a prerequisite to any spending spree. Because that's where they make their decisions on where to shop and what to buy. Not on tv. Not on radio. And not jammed in little envelopes that come uninvited in the mail.
71% say newspaper is the place they turn for shopping advice. The place where they actually look forward to seeing the ads. And set aside the time to read them. That message comes through in study after study. More importantly, it also comes through in sales. Of course, if you want further proof of newspaper's effectiveness, run an ad and you can see it firsthand.

3rd Brigade commissions physician assistants

By Tom Wilkinson
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Three warrant officers in the 3rd Brigade received commissions to captain and lieutenant Feb. 3.

The program, instituted by the Surgeon General and implemented by the Department of the Army, is designed to commission warrant officers who serve in medical service corps.

"The Navy and Air Force did it years ago," said Capt. Todd Dombroski, the brigade surgeon. "As health care providers, they deserve the equal pay of their counterparts."

The three who received commissions were Warrant Officer Randy Banks, the physician assistant for the 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, to 2nd lieutenant; Chief Warrant Officer 3 Willie French, the physician assistant for 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, to captain; and Chief Warrant Officer 2 John Nelson, the physician assistant in the 324th Forward Support Battalion, to second lieutenant.

"All the warrant officers who met the requirements were commissioned today," said Dombroski. "Basically, they pass the national certification board and possess a bachelor's degree."

The officers were commissioned in three separate ceremonies.

"Chief will always be 'Chief'," said Maj. Bobby Rayborn, the executive officer of 2nd Bn., 18th Inf.

as he spoke about French. "He was the first soldier I met when I came to this battalion, and in keeping with all physician assistants in the military, he has had a real impact on this battalion. You will find no better care for the soldiers than that provided by the 'Chief'."

"I'd like to thank you all for being here," said French. "I've looked forward to this day for a long time, and I'm glad it's finally come."

Nelson was commissioned by his identical twin brother, Air Force Maj. Charles Nelson, who is an instructor at the Air Command and Staff College at Maxwell Air Force Base, Montgomery, Ala.

"John is eight minutes older than me, but I'm much better looking," said the major. "They say that rank inherited is good luck, so I'm going to pin my lieutenant bars on my brother."

"I'd like to thank you for showing up and I really appreciate all the support you've given me in the past," said the older Nelson.

TRADOC establishes new mission task list

METL represents support needed to face challenges

Tradoc News Service

Fort Monroe, Va. — A new mission essential task list for the Training and Doctrine Command was published this month.

"The METL represents the Commanding General's (Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.) ideas on what is required to support TRADOC's mission," said Terumi Yamasaki, chief of plans in the chief of Staff Operations Directorate.

"The mission essential task list was revised to better direct the command as it faces the challenges of the future and changing international environments," Yamasaki said.

The TRADOC METL states that the command will: "Support the U.S. Army and Unified or Specified CINCs (Commanders in Chief) with —

• "Warfighting concepts and doctrine designed to achieve decisive victory with minimum casualties across the operational continuum."

• "Organizations structured and tailored to fight as combined arms teams and effectively accomplish joint and combined missions"

• "Modernized equipment, developed from operationally focused requirements, giving our soldiers and units the technology edge to deploy, fight, and win overwhelmingly and swiftly on the modern battlefield

• "Mission-focused and motivated soldiers trained in tough, realistic, tactically-competitive programs...led by adaptive, creative, competent officers and noncommissioned officers developed through progressive programs in Army institutions and units.

• "Soldier and family support systems within a command climate that fosters excellence in training, sustaining, caring for, mobilizing, and deploying a power-projection Army"

"Commanders of TRADOC centers, schools and installations will write their METLs to support TRADOC's," Yamasaki said. "However, in TRADOC, the lowest level from which a METL is required is installation."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Evelyn H. Britt
Office of the Staff Judge Advocate

Q: In May my wife and I had a permanent change of station from Alaska to Fort Benning. I kept receipts of all the expenses we incurred during this move. The travel settlement that I received from Finance didn't begin to cover what I actually had to pay for gas, hotels, and so forth. My family and I had to live in a hotel for one month after we arrived before we could buy a house. Finance only reimbursed me for 10 days of hotel expenses, and I didn't get anything for all the costs I incurred in buying the house. My buddy told me I can deduct all of these expenses from my 1991 federal tax return. Is this true?

A. Yes, you can deduct expenses that you incurred because of your PCS, as well as some expenses of purchasing your home, as a moving expense deduction. The moving expense deduction can only be claimed by filing a Form 1040 — The Form 1040A or 1040EZ cannot be used.

In addition, the Form 3903 must be used to actually report the moving expenses. The moving expense deduction is an "itemized deduction" that must be claimed on Form 3903 and transferred to Schedule A. There, your moving expenses will be added to your other itemized deductions, with the goal of trying to exceed the "standard deduction." Only if your total itemized deductions exceeds your standard deduction, will it be necessary to claim moving expense deductions.

For instance, if you and your wife file "married filing jointly," your total itemized deductions, including the moving expense deduction, must exceed your standard deduction of $5,700 before it becomes worthwhile for you to itemize using the Form 1040.

There is no limit on the amount of certain types of moving expenses that may be deducted. These include transportation and storage expenses for your household goods and personal effects; and travel, meal, and lodging expenses in moving from your old to your new residence.

Here's how it works. First, you'll need to separate the different kind of expenses you incurred. If you kept a log book and receipts, you're in good shape. For expenditures of $25 or more, you must have documentary evidence (e.g., a bill, receipt, or cancelled check) to substantiate the expense. For expenditures less than $25, you can use the logbook or similar record of all the money you've spent for items or services related to the move.

You are allowed to start compiling expenses for travel, meals, and lodging on the day after you could not live in your former home because your furniture had been moved.

Second, you stop figuring these expenses on the day you arrived at Fort Benning.

Third, once you arrive, you continue to compile these expenses, but as "temporary living expenses," which I'll discuss later.

Fourth, you are allowed to deduct the expense of taking only one trip to the new location.

Fifth, do not deduct expenses incurred while taking leave enroute.

Sixth, you may deduct only transportation expenses by the most direct route — if you take leave enroute or took a detour to visit friends, use only the costs you would have paid on a direct, point to point trip.

You can deduct only 80 percent of the cost of your meals. To put it another way, when you are determining what your loss is, when comparing your reimbursements with your costs of moving, you can only put in 80 percent of your meal expenses.

You cannot deduct expenses for reusable items, such as cages to transport your pets, a trailer to move some of your possessions, a shed to store your possessions on your property, etc. The costs of connecting and disconnecting utilities when moving household appliances, however, is deductible.

Unlike the moving expenses, dollar limitations apply to temporary living expenses and the cost of buying your new home and selling the old one. You may not deduct more than $3,000 for these expenses, combined. The expenses you incurred after you arrived at Fort Benning, but before you moved into your new home, are deductible as temporary living expenses. You can deduct only the meals (subject to the 80 percent limitation), and lodging. These expenses are figured for any 30 consecutive days (90 days if the move is outside of the United States). Remember, although Alaska is a tour outside the continental United States for military purposes, it is not outside the United States.

For married persons filing jointly, the cost of temporary living expenses may not exceed $1,500 of the $3,000 total. The cost of selling your old home includes closing costs such as state transfer taxes, title fees, real estate commissions, attorneys' fees, and points.

Deductible moving expenses do not include a loss on the sale of a main home or home improvements made to help sell the home. The cost of buying a new home includes attorneys' fees, escrow fees, appraisal fees, and points (loan placement charges not representing interest). Deductible moving expenses do not include the purchase price and home improvements.

Finally, while you can deduct expenses of buying or selling a home on Form 3903, you may wish to use the expenses to adjust the sale or purchase price instead. As a result of the new treatment of long term capital gain and moving expenses, the "standard deduction" you need to exceed may make these selling/buying expenses better used as an adjustment to the sales price.

For example, if your standard deduction is $5,700, and your itemized deductions only equal $5,900 ($2,000 of which are selling/buying expenses), you will only realize a deduction of $200 if you take your expenses as moving expenses.

On the other hand, you could reduce the basis in your home by $2,000 (and potentially your income by this amount if you ever report the gain you've realized on a future tax return) if you treat these expenses as adjustments to the sale/purchase price.

If you decide to use these expenses as moving expense deductions, and you find they exceed the $3,000 ceilings on the Form 3903, you can use what's left over to adjust the sale/purchase price.

Tax assistance is available in the Fort Benning Tax Office, located in building 5, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, at the corner of Vibbert and Sigerfoos Streets. Explorer visits post

Fort Benning Schools

An explorer and former Olympic athlete is visiting with Fort Benning school students this week.

Norman Vaughan, an 85-year old explorer, visited with fifth and eighth grade students Thursday and will visit with the entire Fort Benning professional staff today.

Vaughan was a member of Admiral Byrd's 1929 expedition to the South Pole. He participated in the expedition at the age of 23 as a dog handler.

In years since, he has competed in the Olympic Games, played semi-pro football for a team in Philadelphia, served with the U.S. military, and spearheaded an expedition to Greenland to recover eight military aircraft lost during World War II. He also competed in 12 Iditarods (the 1,150-mile sled dog race across Alaska)-including the 1991 race at age 84, and is currently planning an expedition to Antarctica in 1993 to climb a mountain, named for him, which stands more than 10,000 feet.

The 1993 expedition will have an education focus as Vaughan will have telecommunication hook-ups with schools around the country to track his progress and communicate with him.

Additionally, he hopes this expedition will serve to inspire and encourage senior citizens to live every moment to the fullest.

Vaughan is the second explorer to visit the Fort Benning Schools. Two years ago, Fort Benning students followed along as news came of the progress of the Trans-Antarctica expedition led by Will Steger.

Last year, when the schools began to focus even more on Antarctica, Geoff Sommers, the British representative of the five-member Trans-Antarctica team spent a day in the Fort Benning Schools and spoke with fourth, fifth and eighth graders and with many Fort Benning educators.

For additional information about the visit, call Beth Middlemiss at 545-2500.

Volunteering has many benefits

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Reasons for volunteering to work at the Officer's Wives' Club Thrift Shop vary with the needs of the persons offering their time, according to Maria Fuller, manager.

She said some people volunteer because the profits from the Thrift Shop go back into the Fort Benning community, and it gives them a good feeling.

Others enjoy taking advantage of the discount rates for consigners who want to sell something of their own in the shop. Volunteers who work more than 12 hours per month only have to pay ten percent of their asking price to the shop instead of 20 percent.

Volunteers can take advantage of the free child care offered by the Thrift Shop up to two children.

Volunteers can consign up to 20 times per building per day instead of 10, and they can work any hours. They don't even have to schedule for it, just show up.

For some retirees, it's a social experience to volunteer.

Fuller noted, "We don't just work. We have a good time, and snacks and drinks are provided."

For others, volunteering at the Thrift Shop has meant training in layaway, bookkeeping and posting.

There are three partitime paid positions -- manager, assistant manager and bookkeeper.

Cookie sale in full swing

Girl Scouts of America

The Girl Scout cookies have arrived. From now until Feb. 28, Girl Scouts will be delivering pre-ordered cookies. Booth sales will also be conducted at area shopping centers, department stores, and businesses for those who missed the pre-order sale or would simply like to buy more cookies.

Cookies cost $2.50 per box and come in seven different varieties: Lemon Pastry Cremes, Peanut Butter Sandwich, Peanut Butter Patties, Shortbread, Caramel Delites, Thin Mints, and the new Praline Royale. All cookies are packaged for freezing so that individuals may buy an entire year's supply.

Proceeds from the annual cookie sale supplement the cost of summer camp, maintenance of camp and Council vans, volunteer training, and program expenses. Individual girls earn Girl Scout incentives and the troop treasury benefits according to the amount of troop sales.

For more information, contact a local Girl Scout volunteer at 685-0363 or call the Girl Scout office in Columbus at 327-2646.

Fort Benning observes Dental Month

U.S. Army Dental Activity

February is National Children's Dental Health Month. Each year as part of the observance of that month, a dental health fair sponsored by the U.S. Army Dental Activity is conducted in each of the eight Fort Benning Schools and in the pre-school/day-care centers on post.

The Fort Benning DENTAC brings dentists, dental hygienists, dental therapy assistants and assistants to the schools to conduct these dental health fairs, which include information sessions for students on dental hygiene and a dental screening examination.

During the health fairs, students participate in a variety of activity stations. In one station, the students view a video designed for children of their age and grade level. Video topics include brushing teeth, flossing, good nutrition, regular visits to the dentist and smokeless tobacco.

In other stations students receive different sorts of specific information about dental hygiene including demonstration and practicing of using the toothbrush to brush teeth correctly.

In the final station, the student will receive a screening examination by a dentist. A form describing what the dentist found is sent home with each student.

For information regarding the schedule of dental fairs in the Fort Benning Schools call Beth Middlemiss at 545-2500.

Parents learn to help reading habit

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"The ability to read affects a child's total school performance."

This statement by Brenda Weitzberg, training coordinator for Friends of the Family in Baltimore, Md., summarized the value she put on reading in her talk as part of the Fort Benning Schools Lecture Series on getting children ready for kindergarten.

Entitled "From Cradle to Comics: Instilling the Love of Reading in Your Child," this session was attended by about 80 people.

Weitzberg pointed out that reading aloud to children promotes listening, speaking, complex sentences, better comprehension and reading being viewed as a valued activity.

The four things that have been found in homes where children spontaneously learn to read by themselves are parents who are readers, lots of books, magazine and newspapers, an availability of paper and pencil and an interest in doing activities like going to the library.

She noted the importance of matching the book to the child's developmental stage and encouraged the making of family books for the child out of photos, and cardboard in plastic bags.

The fifth and last session in the series will be March 5 on "Being a Parent: How to Meet the Needs of Your Young Child While Meeting Your Own Needs Too." It will be presented by Dr. Patricia Nida, author of "Kids on the Move."

The session is free and open to all Fort Benning parents, caregivers and educators. A phone reservation is required.

To register, phone 545-2500 between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Children are not permitted to attend. Tot Town will be open from 6:15 to 9:15 p.m. that evening.

MACH nurse retires

Martin Army Community Hospital

A nurse in the Martin Army Community Hospital emergency room is retiring after almost 25 years of federal service.

Lula Scott has worked as a nurse for various hospitals throughout her career, from the 33rd Field Hospital in Wurzburg, Germany, to the hospitals at Fort Riley, Kan., and Fort Hood, Texas.

Scott has spent her last 10 years as a emergency room nurse at Martin Army, after working on surgical wards when she began working at the hospital in 1973.

"I've learned a lot about nursing ang caring from Scottie. She's my mentor," said 1st Lt. Cynthia Batson.

"Scottie's been like a mother to me," said Maj. Earldine Cisco, head nurse of the hospital's emergency room.

"Scottie's always easy to talk to and always found time to listen if one of her co-workers needed her," said Gladys Cravens, a civilian emergency room nurse who has worked with Scott for almost 20 years.

Reflections on a man of faith

REFLECTIONS

Next Monday, we celebrate the birthday of George Washington. We remember his great ability as a military leader and statesman. His quality of honesty has been immortalized through the story of his telling his father the truth when he was asked about cutting down a cherry tree. I would like to take a moment and consider three other attributes of Washington.

Washington was a man of faith. Several times during his military career he took chances. The battles of Long Island, Trenton, Germantown, and even Yorktown were all filled with the possibility of defeat. When victory was achieved, Washington declined to suggest that it was simply luck, when what seemed impossible became success. He always acknowledged God's aid in the cause of liberty.

Many times Washington's plans failed. When they did he merely assumed that providence, for some unknown reason, had intervened. When failure came, he calmly accepted it and began to build again for success. He believed that God had his hand not only over his life, but over the destiny of our nation.

Washington was a man of prayer. For many of us, the painting that presents him kneeling in prayer in the snow at Valley Forge comes to mind. Prayer wasn't new to Washington when he kneeled at Valley Forge. When he was about 20, George Washington filled 24 pages of a little manuscript book with handwritten prayers.

The first entry contained these words: "Let my heart, therefore, gracious God, be so affected with the glory and majesty of thine honor that I may not do mine own works, but wait on thee, and discharge those weighty duties which thou requires of me.

Prayer was always an important part of his life, especially in the midst of the struggles in his life. Washington was a man of moral and religious convictions. He believed that it was the duty of all nations to acknowledge the providence of God, to obey his will, to be grateful for his benefits, and humbly request his protection and favor.

Washington often expressed his convictions through the expectations he had for those who served under him. He held high moral expectations of his men. At one point in 1776, Washington expressed his concern toward the practice of profane cursing and swearing that was becoming fashionable in the American Army. He hoped the officers by example, as well as influenceon a manwould endeavor to check this trend.

In his farewell address, Washington stated: "Morally is a necessary spring of popular government ... reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

There is no doubt, based on his words and his deeds, that Washington was a man with strong moral and religious convictions. He not only desired that his soldiers attend a place of worship, but he expected that officers, including himself, of all ranks would set the example for their men.

Our celebration of Washington's birthday isn't simply to remember the life of the "father of our nation." It is an opportunity to remember the qualities that made him great and to seek to develop those qualities in our own lives.

Don't just talk about love—show it

By Pat Hash
Ranger Training Brigade

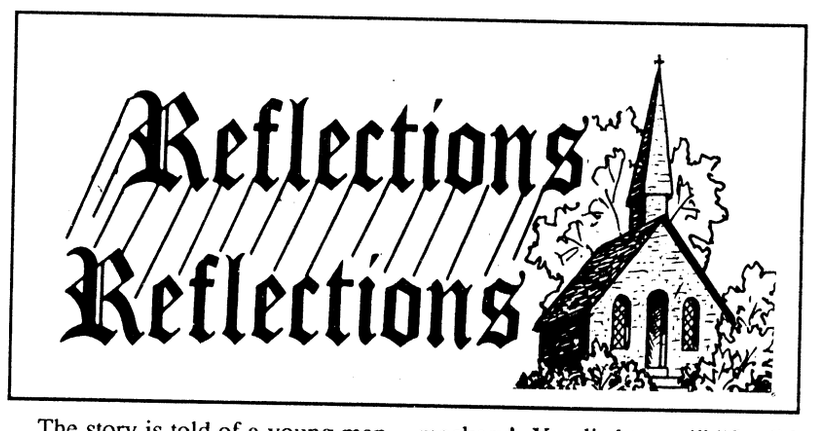
What is love? Someone has said, "If life is one crazy thing after another, love must be two crazy things after each other. A cartoonist depicted two people on a dogsled in Alaska. The man said to the woman, I'd drive my dog team one hundred miles to say 'I Love You'" to which the woman responded, "That's a lot of mush!"

Is that what love is? Two crazy things after each other or a lot of mush? What is love? One of the most beautiful biblical answers to that question is the Song of Solomon. It provides some insight into the key ingredients of genuine love.

In verse two the man, addressing the woman, declared, "Like a lily among the thorns is my darling among women." The first ingredient is appeal. Psychologists use the term "halo effect" to speak of this phenomenon. Your general feeling about someone else influences your evaluation of his or her specific abilities.

Judith Viorst, writing in Redbook, humorously illustrated this quality of love. She defined the difference between infatuation and love like this: "Infatuation is when you think he's as sexy as Robert Redford, as smart as Henry Kissinger, as noble as Ralph Nader, as funny as Woody Allen, and as athletic as Jimmy Conners. Love is when you realize he's as sexy as Woody Allen, as smart as Jimmy Conners, as funny as Ralph Nader, as athletic as Henry Kissinger, and nothing like Robert Redford-but you'll take him anyway. When you love someone you see the best in that person."

The woman in the Song of Solomon said of her sweetheart in verse 3: "Like an apple tree among the trees of the forest, so is my dearest compared to other men. I love to sit in its shadow." When you love someone you want to be with them and your thoughts are tuned into that person. That is the second ingredient.



The story is told of a young man who followed behind a beautiful young woman. After a mile the young lady wheeled around and demanded, "Why do you dog my footsteps?" With fervent emotion he replied, "Because you are the loveliest thing I have ever seen, and I have fallen madly in love with you at first sight." The young lady responded, "You only have to look behind you and you will see my younger sister who is 10 times more beautiful than I." He turned quickly to see as ugly a girl as he had ever seen, he replied. "What a mockery! You lied to me!" "So did you," she replied. "If you were so madly in love with me, why did you turn around?" When love is real, you won't turn around. You will enjoy sitting in the shadow of his or her presence.

On Valentine's Day, don't simply talk about love, show it. Verse four says, "He brought me to his banquet hall and raised the banner of love over me." Genuine love not only thinks about the other person. Love acts out that concern in providing for the person's needs. And that's no mush!

Marriage seminar set for old, new couples

Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

When I got married, I was in love. The expectations were high and I was certain nothing could and would come between my husband and me.

Nobody told me about the work involved in making it through the difficult times. And, sure enough, the ecstatic "high" soon waned and we were confronted with the work of marriage.

Does that sound like a familiar story?

Many married couples face this type of sobering reality after the "honeymoon" has passed.

Armed with the lessons of make-believe love, couples enter the real world of marriage and commitment with false hopes and unrealistic expectations.

The struggling to rekindle the fires of romance may seem like a losing battle. But there are agencies available to lend a helping hand.

A Bible study entitled "Husbands and Wives" will start on Feb. 23 from 9:30 until 10:30 a.m. at the Religious Education Center, building 229. The study will be taught by Chaplain (Capt.) Don Wilson and is based on a Navigator study book with guidelines for group discussions.

The study will explore biblical teaching on important topics for both marriage partners, including self image, communication, love and conflicts; the intimate relationship and the responsibilities of husbands and wives. The examination of these scriptural truths promises to help developing a fresh outlook on marriage and possibly a deeper commitment.

"This discussion group does not single out marriages in trouble but it is for good, solid marriages as well," Wilson comments. "The goal is to help couples in need and to assist the growth of intact marriages," he adds.

For information, contact Wilson at 545-1760 or 545-5301.

Covenant Players deliver ministery, message to others

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Covenant Players will be at various locations throughout the post ministering to anyone who may be interested Feb. 21 through 23.

The Covenant Players is a ministery that requires no elaborate sets or costumens or make-up. They are able to perform anywhere there is room for an audience to gather.

It is a non-endowed, non-profit organization. Its only support comes from playdates. Many of its touring missionaries are committed to lifetime careers on that basis, and all members of the play troupe have answered the call to this ministry.

In the early 1960s, when Charles M. Tanner, director, founder and writer of the Players, talked about his dream of a touring ministry in drama, his friends would smile and tell him the church would never accept it.

But more than 1 million performances later, Covenant Players continue to minister for the Lord with his divine guidance.

The touring of the ministery covered all areas of the globe, on six continents in 84 countries and in 16 languages.

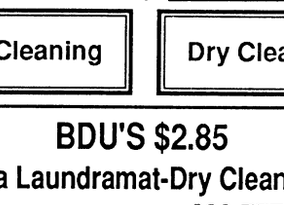
How to make money in three easy steps.

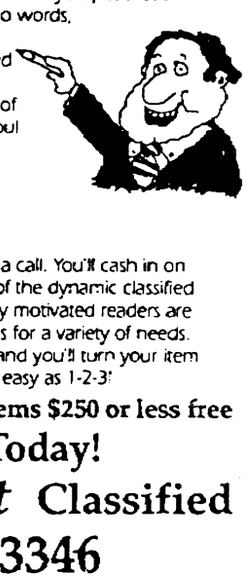
Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.



Step 2.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!



Step 3.

Contact classified. Give us a call. You'll cash in on the speed and effectiveness of the dynamic classified marketplace. Each day, highly motivated readers are seeking services and solutions for a variety of needs. Turn to the classified pages, and you'll turn your item to be sold into money! It's as easy as 1-2-3!

BAYONET TV

'Beverly Hills 90210' is popular address

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

In the world of TV, no combination of city and ZIP Code is hotter right now than the one that has become a true landmark for Fox Broadcasting.

When veteran producer Aaron Spelling's series "Beverly Hills, 90210" premiered in the fall of 1990, few observers gave it much chance for survival, since a show about teen-agers didn't seem like very potent ammunition against such well-established competition as NBC's long-entrenched comedy hit "Cheers."

As it turned out, the near-immediate popularity among young viewers of the newcomer's stars — particularly Jason Priestley and Shannen Doherty as Minnesota-raised twin siblings Brandon and Brenda Walsh, and Luke Perry as Brenda's still-waters-run-deep boyfriend Dylan McKay — in tandem with a savvy ratings ploy that put first-run episodes on the air last summer, when most other programs remained in repeats, resulted in a certified success that Fox already has renewed for the next two seasons. Mr. Priestley and Mr. Perry have feature-film deals, the "90210" marketing bonanza has extended to dolls of the main characters that will be in stores soon, and a proposed spinoff show about college-graduate friends of the gang (tentatively titled "Melrose Place") is being weighed by Fox.

In line with the Fox "Summer Games" concept intended to rival CBS' Winter Olympics coverage, two beach-oriented "90210" stories will be repeated this week, one in the normal Thursday time slot and another on Friday. In any season, though, the series clearly has taken hold ... and not just with the teen audience it primarily was designed for. "My grandmother always loved it," claims creator and co-producer Darren Star, "so that was a cue. I think that people can enjoy this show on a number of different levels. Since it's written with a certain degree of intelligence and deals with issues (a recent story focused on condom distribution in schools), I think that older viewers can enjoy it. I think they're curious about the fact that it reflects young people and what their world's about, and the show's not stupid, so they can watch it and be entertained. I think they're generally surprised that they like it. They're a little embarrassed, but they do."

While that aspect applies to many adults, their younger counterparts also seem to appreciate "90210's" consideration of such topics as date rape and alcoholism, but the "hunk" factor still cannot be discounted. A former regular on the daytime serials "Loving" and "Another World," co-star Perry didn't appear in the show's pilot, which recently was released on home video. Nevertheless, he became phenomenally popular upon being added to the cast, having to be smuggled out of shopping malls inside laundry carts to escape mobs of fans that showed up for a couple of his personal appearances.

"The pressure of being under a magnifying glass goes with the job," Perry reasons. "Television is not a medium that hides itself, and it's seen by millions of people all over the world. ('90210' also is a big hit in England, as several of the performers learned by traveling there last spring.) You know that a certain part of that means people are going to know who you are, and you're going to lose some privacy.

"In the particular case of our program," he continues, "after we'd done an entire season, no one really seemed to know about us. All of a sudden in the second year, everything has happened. It's been a little too fast, and hard to keep a grasp on it, but we all stick together and everybody keeps their heads together."

Though he had some minor movie roles pre-"90210," Perry expects to start work on his first major feature during the upcoming hiatus, a biography of a man named Lane Frost whom the actor describes as "a modern-day American hero. He was a world-champion bull rider who was killed at the age of 26, and a lot of things happened to him very quickly. We want to address what can happen to someone, and the relationships they have with the people around them, when they achieve a lot of success all of a sudden. Believe it or not, that's something I can relate to at this moment, so I'd like to capitalize on it while I can."

While Perry says his fame has gotten "out of control" at times, co-star Jennie Garth — alias "90210's" pampered Kelly Taylor — maintains that she doesn't feel celebrity status "on the magnitude that the guys do, but I'm kind of glad of that. I've been doing a lot of traveling on weekends, meeting a lot of the fans out there, and that's taking up most of my free time. I enjoy it, but I'm pretty tired. We work a hectic schedule, and when I'm not working, I just like to go home and hang out by myself." Since the series will reprise last year's plan by gearing up early to premiere its next season during the summer months, Garth is steeling herself for a fear that also plagued her previously: "For me, the scariest thing was being in a bathing suit in front of all those people, and I'm just worried about getting in shape in time."

Despite the show's large following, certain "90210" plots have stirred concerns among some viewers, and even among some of the actors. Doherty stated her unhappiness about Brenda engaging in physical intimacy with Dylan in the first year's season-ending story, and Perry stresses, "I think if there is any message that our show puts out about sexuality to teen-agers, it's that abstinence is the safest route. Whenever anybody on our show has had sex, it's had certain consequences."

School of Americas building reopens

By Daniel Maloney
U.S. Army School of the Americas

The School of the Americas officially reopened its headquarters, Building 35, Feb. 14, during a ribbon-cutting ceremony, after a two-year, $6 million renovation of the building.

The ceremony was hosted by Col. Jose R. Feliciano, the school's commandant. Guests included Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commander, Rep. Richard Ray and Lt. Gen. Wilson Shoffner, deputy commanding general, U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command.

In addition to the reopening of the headquarters building, the SOA Library was dedicated in honor of John B. Amos, who was influential in having the school transferred to Fort Benning, according to school officials. The guest speaker at the library dedication was Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony began with the entrance of the official party, honors to the nation, an invocation by Chap. (Maj.) Michael Travaglione, SOA chaplain, and a flag-raising ceremony.

In line with the school's mission of training and cooperation between the countries of the Americas, the flags of all 19 countries involved in this multinational institution, to include Brazil, Chile, Mexico and Peru, were raised.

The SOA colors were raised by Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos A. Legoas of SOA as The Infantry Band played Hymn of the Americas.

The official party of Feliciano, White, Shoffner and Ray stepped forward and cut the ribbon officially re-opening SOA headquarters.

Following the ribbon-cutting, ceremonies moved indoors where the John B. Amos Library was dedicated.

Thurmond, a friend of the Amos family, spoke about how Amos was a major source of civilian support in bringing SOA to Fort Benning.

Following his remarks, Thurmond was joined by Amos' widow, Elena, as a plaque was unveiled in

Commissary continues to serve customers despite power outage

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Commissary shoppers should be glad to know that the Commissary does all it can to accommodate its customers, even when the lights are out.

A good example happened last month when a power outage on the morning of Jan. 20 caused a blackout on Fort Benning for about 20 minutes.

It was business as usual at the Commissary, however, where emergency generators kicked in, allowing employees to continue checking out customers.

Store Manager Gary Whitmire said he was glad the store could continue to serve its customers.

"It's really great to have the backup so we can accommodate the people who are already in line."

He said that the generators only provide enough power to run the cash registers and the lights nearby, meaning that customers already in line can be waited on, but that other shoppers might have to wait through the outage before continuing their shopping.

"There are emergency lights that come on though, so the shoppers aren't in the dark."

Although it didn't happen this time, he said that during past outages, customers would leave their grocery carts, making extra work for Commissary employees who had to reshelve the items left behind by impatient shoppers.

Whitmire thanked the shoppers for their cooperation during the Jan. 20 outage.

"When you talk about the volume of customers we serve, if everyone leaves their shopping carts here, it's tough for us to get back into business."

Whitmire also said the large number of perishable items stocked by the Commissary is another reason the generators are a necessity.

"We carry over one-quarter to one-half million dollars worth of perishable items such as dairy products and meats, so an extended outage could be damaging."

COMMENTARY

The temperature around the breakfast table last Friday was extremely frigid.

The ice pierced my BDUs and went into my bones. Emma didn't say a word the entire time I was eating my bowl of Trix and was nowhere to be found as I left the house to get in the old hupmobile to come to work.

I was puzzled by her cold shoulder until delivery men started coming into Building 4, burdened down with flowers and balloons.

"What's going on?" I asked. "Did everyone get born on the same day or something?"

"Get a life, jerk," Allie said in her usual tactful manner, "It's Valentine's Day."

"Oops," I said, as it occurred to me what Emma's problem was.

I immediately set about rectifying the situation by calling florists, but they were all booked. I saw I'd have to pick something up on the way home.

Fortunately Winn-Dixie still had a box of those hearts with little sayings written on them, those roses you can get in individual containers for 97 cents and one of those "Roses are Red, Violets are Blue, won't you be my Valentine True," cards.

I dragged it all into the house and said, "Bet you thought I forgot." Since she couldn't prove I had, she relented, made supper after all and after it was over presented me my Valentine.

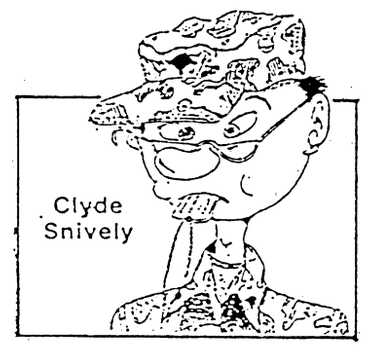
Okay, so I forgot one of the big money-making days for Hallmark Cards. Sue me.

But there are worse things a man can do and he can get sued for or lose his job for, or both or more.

And now we're talking about men folk who think Valentine's Day is everyday and have to include all women they come across.

I wonder if they realize women think they're jerks?

I wonder if they realize it ain't the women they're flirting with, but a possible lawsuit, bad efficiency report or performance appraisal, or loss of job.



Male officers who come up to female NCOs, put their arms around them and call them "honey," are treading in shark-infested waters.

Men who reach out and pat women supervisors on the knee and say, 'now, now, deary," as they're being counseled for doing just that, are eyeing a short career in government service.

Men who like to turn the air blue with their gross and obscene jokes also fall into this category. This may come as a surprise to them, but most women don't appreciate their ribald humor.

"Ho, ho, if they didn't like it, they'd say so or leave," they say.

Wrong'o, swamp breath, sometimes they can't leave and often times they're too embarrassed to say anything.

They know the way the cards are stacked and who rates them.

But beware, not all are wilting wall flowers.

There are women, both in and out of uniform, who clearly understand their rights and will set men straight in a minute.

And if the guy doesn't take the hint, they know what the next step to take is, all the way up the chain of command, military or civilian.

So I might have forgotten Valentine's Day, but I know that men need to keep their hands to themselves when it comes to dealing with co-workers and watch their mouths.

By the way, my sources are quick to point out that this ain't a one-way street.

That there are women supervisors who take advantage of male subordinates and women workers who "bother" male co-workers.

My warning to everyone: "Ya'll behave yourselves out there."

Proper protection stops STDs

By Todd C. Smith
313th Military Intelligence Battalion

The summer before my freshman year of high school, Don Juan, 16, approached me at a baseball diamond."You ever seen a rubber?" he asked. "You gotta have one of these," he said.

He pulled out a condom from its blue foil wrapper and dangled it in the wind.

"What's it for?" I asked. He just grinned, gave me a new condom and rode off on a 10-speed, calling back, "Keep it in your wallet!"

I did.

It stayed in my wallet all through high school. Sometimes I took it out in the locker room or on a date. My dates, as inexperienced as I was, giggled at the little square package. Then I put it safely back into my wallet.

No one ever knew it was the same condom somebody gave me years before on that baseball diamond.

That proud, "first condom" rite of passage probably still goes on, and that little square package probably stays in the wallet all too often.

That simple condom could save an awful lot of grief It could make a safe barrier against sexually transmitted diseases to include some life threatening illnesses.

People are learning. Condoms are selling better than ever. National sales increased more than 60 percent over the past two years. Women now purchase 50 percent of the condoms sold in the United States, a dramatic increase in just a few years. In fact, the Soviet Union recently placed an order for 1.4 billion condoms.

Condoms are an extremely effective way to prevent sexually transmitted diseases — including human immuno-deficiency virus.

Today, manufacturers market gimmicks to get people to buy their products.

Condoms are available in different sizes and textures and marketed in key chains and jewelry. It is important to know what to look for when selecting condoms.

Sometimes society sends conflicting messages. Authority figures tell us that we should abstain from sexual activity or that sex is bad; on the other hand, the media often presents sexual activity as attractive and acceptable. Oftentimes our bodies mature sexually before we are ready to deal with sex emotionally, intellectually and with the responsibility of pregnancy.

Anyone who is sexually active must be sexually accountable. Now it's a matter of life and death. Anyone who is sexually active must remember that condoms prevent sexually transmitted diseases and are 90 percent effective in preventing pregnancy.

Some people feel uncomfortable about using condoms because they are embarrassed or feel that any interruption for a contraceptive interferes with spontaneity.

But a 30-second interruption can save a life.

Using condoms

What you should know about contraceptives and some things to look for when choosing and using condoms:

• Opaque packaging: Make sure no light can pass through box or individual packages.

• Expiration date: Make sure condoms are fresh. Check the expiration date.

• Brands: Look for those that are airburst and water-tested (although FDA does not yet require these tests).

• Lubrication, treatment with a spermicide: A spermicide (for example, non-oxynol 9) can enhance effectiveness in preventing sexually transmitted diseases and the HIV virus.

• Reservoir tips: They allow space for fluids. If your condom does not have a reservoir tip, be sure to leave space at the end.

Other information

• Don't expose condoms to direct heat.

• Keeping condoms in a wallet for extended periods will cause the latex to break down.

• Lambskin condoms are less effective in preventing sexually transmitted diseases than latex because the porous nature of natural skin allows viruses to pass through.

Are traffic fatalities predictable?

By Regis Beighley
Infantry Branch Safety Office

COMMENTARY

If you are in the military service, between the ages of 17 and 25, have two to three years of service and are planning to drive somewhere this weekend — DON'T.

In fact, Wednesday is a bad day, as well. And, if the weekend falls in March or April, you are in worse shape.

Tree or bridge

The statistics show that if you fall into that general group, chances are that if you take to a roadway between 8 p.m. and 3 a.m. on weekends, your accident will most likely be because you were either drinking, driving too fast or driving while fatigued and that you will lose control of your car and pile up against a fixed object such as a tree or bridge abutment.

Seat belts

A very common factor in traffic fatalities is that seat belts were not worn.

Regional accident rate

The Army's highest rate of motor vehicle accidents occurs in the region that includes Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee.

The rate is 1.4 accidents per 100,000 man days. The national military rate of accidents is 1.01.

Enlisted personnel

Ninety-six percent of those fatally injured in non-government car accidents were enlisted personnel. About 64 percent were in the age group 17 to 25.

Saturdays and Sundays had the largest number of deaths in all years studied.

In all but one year, the hours from 1 to 4 in the morning on Saturday and Sunday were the most hazardous.

Officers

Among the officers, the second lieutenants have the highest number of injuries per 1,000 persons.

It's 3.78 per 1,000 second lieutenants and the rate declines through colonel where only .628 per 1,000 get banged up in car accidents.

Mechanical failures

It is interesting to note that most of the accidents were not caused by unsafe mechanical or physical conditions of the car.

In other words, it wasn't the car's fault that there was an accident; it was the result of either a hazardous road surface or was the fault of the driver.

Wednesdays?

The number of deaths per 100 motor vehicle injury admissions was highest on weekends and Wednesdays.

March and April appeared to be the most dangerous months.

Summary

All this might give the average reader the impression that military members are bent on committing suicide on our highways and are dangerous drivers.

Actually, the record of military personnel, although they drive more, is generally better than that of civilians of the same age.

For the past five years, an average of 80 out of every 100,000 civilians in the 20 to 24 age bracket have died as a result of car accidents.

The military rate is 78 out of every 100,000.

The Army accident rate is .77 per 100,000 milies of driving for its members. The national rate, according to the National Safety Council, is 1.3 per 100,000 miles of driving.

SOA: Building reopens, library dedicated

Amos' honor. Amos was founder of the American Family Life Assurance Corporation and a long-time Columbus resident.

Mrs. Amos said that she never expected her husband's name would be on any military installation since he only made the rank of corporal.

"School of the Americas now has one of the finest educational facilities in the U.S. Army Training and and Doctrine Command," said Ray in describing the completed $6 million interior renovation at the dedication.

Ray noted the quantity of American history that lies within the historic walls of this building that was the Infantry School from 1935 to 1964.

It became the headquarters for SOA when SOA moved to Fort Benning from Panama in 1984.

"Travel is fatal to prejudice," Ray said, "and this is the importance of the work of School of the Americas. Students arrive here as strangers and part as friends.

Schoffner told those attending, "What you see here is the reality of a vision."

Amos, a native of Enterprise, Ala., was born June 5, 1924. Following military service, Amos received a doctorate in jurisprudence from the University of Florida in Gainesville.

He practiced law in the Florida Panhandle from 1949 to 1954. In 1955, Amos founded the American Family Life Assurance Corporation.

In 1987, Amos was named "Georgian of the Year" by the Georgia Association of Broadcasters and was nationally honored by Forbes Magazine as the chief executive officer of America's Most Innovative Insurance Company.

Amos, along with his wife, was named honorary co-chairman of the American Cancer Society's First Annual Crystal Ball.

In March 1989, Amos was named the Bronze Medal Insurance Industry Chief Executive Officer of the Decade by Financial World Magazine.

He was also presented the Department of the Army Decoration for Distinguished Civilian Service. Amos died Aug. 13, 1990, in Columbus.

Amos was awarded posthumously the Order of the Sacred Treasure-Gold and Silver, Jan. 30.

The award is decreed by the Emperor of Japan upon the recommendation of the Japanese cabinet.

The award is given in recognition of an individual's significant service to the people of Japan. It is the highest honor that the Japanese government can bestow upon a non-Japanese.

Initial construction of the former Infantry School building was completed July 21, 1935.

Located across from the Officers' Club, Building 35 retained the original architectural style. However, the inside has been updated to accommodate the educational and operational demands of the school.

A reception followed the ceremonies in the newly-dedicated library and adjoining classroom.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Feb. 6 to 12. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

•A specialist reported that someone had taken four compact disks from within his barracks room located on Kelley Hill. A staff sergeant was later apprehended for the larceny, after it was learned that he had sold the disks to a local pawn shop.

•A private was apprehended for uttering worthless checks, after rendering two checks totaling $946 to a local taxi cab service.

•A staff sergeant was cited for being drunk on duty after his commander directed a command breathalyzer on the individual. The staff sergeant administered a medical blood alcohol test, which yielded a reading of .490, more than six times the legal level for operating a motor vehicle.

•The results of a command-directed urinalysis disclosed that a second lieutenant tested positive for the use of cocaine.

•A private reported that person(s) unknown had removed $142 from his wallet that was left unsecured within his room at Martin Army Hospital.

•A retired sergeant first class reported that someone had removed $45 from his wallet while he was being treated at the Emergency Room of Martin Army Hospital.

•A private first class reported that someone had broken the trunk lock of his vehicle and removed numerous pieces of stereo equipment valued at $2,141.

•Other activity on post included 10 traffic accidents, which resulted from other traffic violations. There were eight individuals cited for drunk driving, four from civil police. There were 11 reports of larceny of non-appropriated fund property, one that included the wrongful use of a military dependent identification card. There were six reports of assault, four stemming from domestic quarrels.

•Remember to help "Make our post the best - give crime arrest!" Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or to the "Crime in progress" line, 545-2222, if it is warranted.

Civilian wins cash for ideas

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A Department of the Army civilian was awarded a total of nearly $5,000 for three suggestions he made to save the post time and money.

Albert A. Algood, Training Support Center, Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization, was commended for a proposal to modify the repair of a claymore mine training aid by molding urethane plastic connectors with an aluminum tube inside that can be crimped onto a blasting cap wire. The connectors are electrically non-functional, which is adequate for training purposes.

Algood was also given a monetary award for a proposal to institute a new method of constructing training smoke grenades.

The method adopted consists of pouring urethane plastic into five molds with five cavities (gang molds), three times a day, for a total of 75 per day, instead of using one mold with one cavity three times a day, for a total of three per day.

The use of gang molds lowers labor costs by reducing redundant time-consuming molding steps.

Algood's third award was given for a proposal to develop a computer-generted urethane weight mix ratio table that would automatically calculate mix ratios for the urethane needed to build plastic training aids. As a result of using the computer generated table, less material is wasted and labor time to clean out the uncured mold is eliminated.

Algood's adopted suggestion will save the post an annual $91,000.

Teen sports require safety gear

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Today's young athlete can choose from a variety of sports safety equipment to protect life and limb.

Helmets, knee pads, safety goggles, face masks and mouthguards help prevent serious injury on the playing field. Mouthguards, also called mouth protectors are particularly important in protecting a teen's smile.

It is strongly recommended that anyone engaging in active sports wear a mouthguard.

Some active sports include football, basketball, soccer, hockey, skateboarding and volleyball.

There are many other sports that also have the potential to seriously harm the head, face or mouth as a result of head-to-head contact, falls, tooth clenching or from impact with equipment.

A well constructed mouthguard used during any of these sports can help prevent injury to the mouth, teeth, lips, cheeks and tongue.

There are three types of mouthguards: 1) Ready-made or stock mouthguards; 2) Mouth-formed guards; 3) Custom-made mouthguards.

The three types differ in comfort, fit and cost. The most effective mouthguards are resilient, tear-resistant, comfortable and thin enough for comfortable breathing.

Custom-made mouthguards, developed by the dentist, are shaped to closely fit a player's teeth.

The custom-made device can provide all the qualities found in the ideal mouthguard. No matter which mouthguard is chosen, only the upper teeth should be covered for the following reasons:

1) The upper teeth usually overlap and therefore protect the lower teeth;

2) The front teeth are the most frequently injured;

3) Covering the lower teeth may create additional bulk, diminishing comfort and fit while providing little extra protection.

Some special circumstances, such as a protruding jaw or the presence of orthodontic appliances (braces, for example) may require that the lower teeth also be covered. Your dentist can determine if such a condition might apply.

Parents are cautioned that orthodontic retainers should not be used when participating in contact sports.

Individuals wearing orthodontic "braces" should wear a mouthguard that has been custom made by their dentist.

Young athletes will find that wearing mouthguards during practice and while on the playing field makes good sporting sense.

Firearms can be deadly

Use caution, safety when using weapons; parents should keep guns, ammo locked up

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Firearms may serve many purposes.

Some are used for recreation, such as hunting or target and skeet shooting; others provide the hobbyist or collector with hours of enjoyment.

Regardless of their purpose, firearms by themselves are completely safe; it is only when they are in the hands of the unskilled, non-thinking or careless person that they become dangerous.

Accidents with firearms are needless and can be prevented through conscientious adherence to the following cardinal rules for firearms safety.

Teach children that guns are not toys and are not for play.

1. Treat every gun as if it were loaded.
2. Don't trust safety mechanisms.
3. Make sure the gun is empty before handling or cleaning.
4. Always keep a gun pointed in a safe direction.
5. Point guns only at targets you intend to shoot.
6. Keep guns unloaded when not in use.
7. Avoid horseplay.
8. Be sure the gun barrel is clean and free of obstructions.
9. Store guns and ammunition in separate areas. Never together.
10. Never leave firearms in any area that children can get into.

Guns and ammunition should always be locked up and use of firearms by older children should be thoroughly supervised.

Teach children that guns are not toys and are not for play.

Orienteering competition to be held March 21

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Do you like land navigation? Find no greater joy than taking your compass and protractor and finding that next point?

An orienteering competition is in the works for March 21. The event will be open to all post soldiers, spouses, family members and civilian employees. It will be held on Fort Benning at the Fort Mitchell Training Area from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Sponsored by 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, the competition is open to all individuals interested in orienteering, from the youngest novice to the most experienced, said Capt. James Brown, operations officer for the unit.

"There will be three individual competitions, the novice course for beginners, the intermediate and the master course for the experts," said Brown. There will also be a master team competition as well as a husband and wife team competition and a kiddie course. There will be something for everyone," Brown added.

Volleyball and horseshoes will also be available and refreshments will be served, said Brown.

"Orienteering is a great event," said Brown. "It not only promotes better land navigation skills, but orienteering also stresses the importance of physical fitness and all-around discipline. I urge everyone to come out and participate in the competition."

Participants may register the day of the event. For more information, contact Brown at 545-1043.

Put safety knowledge into practice

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Safety is not, necessarily, a seat belt. Safety is not assured with even a face shield to protect the shop wearer from hot sparks and intense light. Nor is it a pair of safety shoes. It's not perfect brakes and new rubber.

Safety is not a warning sign or 10 signs or even a thousand. Yellow lines, white lines, glow-in-the-dark lines aren't safety. It is definitely not a poster, a pamphlet, a film, a speech, a demonstration, or a newsletter.

Safety is learning, without experiencing, that a seat belt can keep one from sailing through the windshield.

Safety is realizing that eye protection saves sight. Safety is learning that safety shoes are fashionable when equipment can fall or be dropped. Safety is learning when following too close leads to eventual rear-end collision. Safety is knowing that speeding hastens the point of no return in an impending accident as well as adds, despite brakes and tires, to its severity since the energy of the force increases with speed. Impact at 70 miles per hour is not twice that of 35... it is four times as much.

Safety is the eagerness to know and to apply our knowledge and to read and absorb the message in signs — in the interest of accident prevention.

Safety is tolerance and it is intelligence enough to know that signs, scripts, stories, speeches and all of the caution and gear is for our benefit — our survival.

Safety is one thing more. Safety is a continuing education... it never stops. Safety is — as safety does.

Unit's 1st black marksman talks about his experiences

USAMU celebrates black history

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

"Let your actions speak for you in all of your endeavors. If they don't respect you, they have to respect what you do if you do it well."

This is the advice given by retired Staff Sgt. Robert L. Jones, the first black member of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, at the unit's Black History Month commemoration Feb. 7 at the Non-Commissioned Officer Academy.

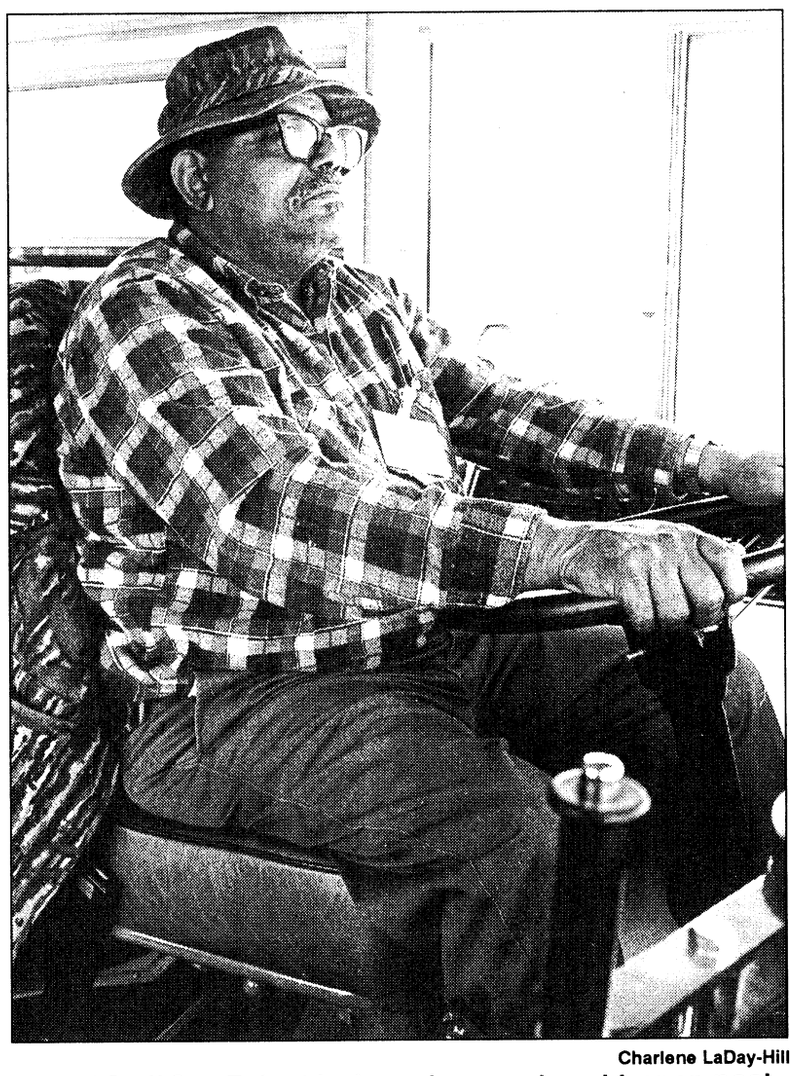
U.S. Marksmanship Unit Commander Col. Bill Vowell introduced Jones, who spoke about his days as an Army marksman as part of a program entitled, "Living the Dream, Let Freedom Ring."

Vowell said he wanted his unit to do something that was meaningful.

"Too many units just hang up a few posters and maybe have a speaker and that's it. We wanted to do something relevant and that had to do with the history of the unit," said Vowell.

The program also featured unit volunteers, both soldiers and family members, in music, dance, and the reading of a poem written in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.

Around 100 people attended the program.



Charlene LaDay-Hill

Retired Staff Sgt. Robert L. Jones is now a bus driver on post.

Jones, nicknamed "Hardball," after the the ammunition used by the .45 automatic, was the highlight of the afternoon.

He took the opportunity to recall his former days as a black marksman, and to tell how he often encountered prejudice along the way.

The 63-year-old native of Petersburg, Va., told how he started out at local pistol matches at Fort Knox, Ky., and worked his way up to being the first black member of the All-Army Shooting Team.

When he served at Fort Benning from September 1959 to December 1966, he set a national record with the .22 caliber rifle, scoring 299 out of 300 in a warm up match.

Jones said that being on the shooting team gave him source of pride because he was respected for his accomplishments.

"On the team, it didn't matter who you were. Performance was the thing that mattered," Jones said. "I never saw prejudice or neglect in the unit. I knew that when I was on the pistol range, I was equal, and that made me feel good."

Jones said that team spirit displayed by the marksmanship unit helped him deal with prejudice whenever he encountered it.

"The shooters were special people because we were able to laugh and joke about it, and it helped get me through. The team was so together. There is probably nowhere in the world today where integration was so complete as the team."

Jones retired with 24 years of service in 1970. He resides in Columbus and works on Fort Benning.

Vowell presented Jones with a Marksmanship Unit hat and a plaque displaying the seven types of ammunition used by the unit with an inscription thanking Jones for his service.

The program came to a close with those in attendance singing, "We Shall Overcome."

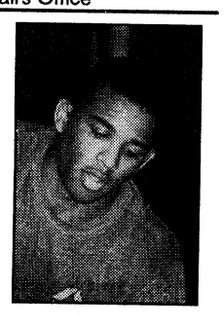
All-Army wrestler hopes for Olympics

By Wallace Dawkins
USAIC Public Affairs Office



Lewis

Fort Benning's All-Army wrestler Spc. Shon Lewis is making a bid for the 1992 Olympic wrestling team.

This is the second year that Lewis has made the All-Army wrestling team. In 1991, Lewis won Gold Medals in both the freestyle and Greco-Roman style wrestling at the Interservice Championships. He also got a Bronze Medal at the Senior Nationals, open division.

Lewis is one of the newest athletes on the World Class Athlete Program. This Army program lets an athlete practice, compete and train throughout the whole year.

To qualify for WCAP, an athlete has to be selected to an All-Army team, then place third or higher at an international competition, be a national champion, or beat a current national champion.

Lewis is also new to the sport of Greco-Roman wrestling. Last year was his first year to compete, but it didn't keep him from beating the 1988 Olympian, the national champion, and a previous world champion.

Lewis is from Oakland, Calif., and has three brothers and one sister.

He became interested in wrestling because his older brother, Kevin, seemed to have success in the sport, he said. His future goals are to make the Olympics in 1996 and 2000, but right now he is just shooting for the 1992 Olympics, he said.

Rifle club changes match rules

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will have its monthly pistol match 9:30 a.m. Saturday at Parks Range.

Entry fee for the match is $8 now and $10 after March 1. The match will be different than other matches in the past. Each shooter will participate in four categories.

Targets will be a combination of pepper poppers and conventional law enforcement training silhouettes.

On the pepper poppers, shooters can choose their shooting positions. The range will be 25 yards and as many rounds as it takes to knock over the target can be fired.

Standing position will be from three to 12 yards with three targets partially obscured. Shooters will have 12 rounds with a mandatory reload.

Kneeling positions will be from three to 12 yards with three targets partially obscured. Six rounds will be fired for this category.

The strong hand with flashlight event will be from three to 12 yards with three targets partially obscured. Six rounds will be fired in this category.

The weak hand only event will also be fired from three to 12 yards with three targets obscured and six rounds being fired.

> "This will test the shooter for not only accuracy, but also speed."
> — Jim Graham
> Safety coordinator

A flier that was circulated states right hand with flashlight when it should have said strong hand. The left hand should have read weak hand.

All other rules and regulations for this match will remain the same as other matches in the past.

"We wanted to try something a little different for this month's match," said Jim Graham, safety coordinator for the range. "This will test the shooter not only for accuracy, but also for speed."

Scoring will be done by counting five points inside the nine area of the target and three points outside the nine. Zero points are scored if shots are off the target.

The Pro Timer will be used to electronically time the shooter from last command to last shot fired.

For more information, contact the Rifle and Pistol Club at 689-3371.

Additional instructions will be given the day of the match.

"Gymnastics is a wonderful way to build coordination and balance skills during the preschool and preteen years," said Kelly Cargill, gymnastics instructor at the Officers' Wives' Club.

Girls' gymnastics classes are open each Wednesday and Friday afternoon for all ages at the OWC building.

According to Cargill, cost is minimal as no costumes or special shoes are required to participate. Students learn basic warm up exercises, beam, uneven-parallel bars, and floor routines as they advance.

2 soldiers head to camp

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Two soldiers from Fort Benning will participate in this year's men's All-Army Basketball Trial Camp.

The camp will be at the Presidio of San Francisco, Calif., from Tuesday through April 4.

Tony A. Moore, a personnel management specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), and Curtis F. Williams, a private with HHC, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, have been selected to attend this year's camp.

Moore said he is excited to be selected.

"It's an honor to be able to participate with the other athletes at this camp; it's like trying out for the Lakers," Moore said. "If I don't make the cut, at least I can say I was there. The level of competition is so high, my main concern is to just make the team."

Moore is from New Bern, N.C., where he started playing organized ball in high school. In his junior and senior years at Havelock High School, he was selected for All-Conference, All-East, and All-State.

Moore was inspired to try out for this year's team when he met and became friends with Ricky Boynton, who had played on the All-Army team in the past.

"I had thought about it, but Ricky told me I should go for it," he said. "I know I don't have too many playing years left now that I have a wife and family. My wife has put up with me being gone a lot and after this it's time to settle down."

Williams, a communication specialist from Chicago, started playing basketball in the sixth grade. He played at Thornridge High School in Chicago and transferred to Oliver Ames High School in Easton, Mass.

Williams also played college ball at Allegheny Community College in Cumberland, Md., and at the University of Virginia. While at UVA, he participated in the National Collegiate Athletic Association Tournament. The Cavaliers made it to the Great Eight before being defeated by eventual NCAA champions — Michigan.

Williams compares going to the trials to making it to the NCAA tournament.

"It's as much an honor to be chosen for the trial camp as it was to go to the tournament," he said. "I don't know what to expect at the camp, but I will go and play as hard as I can."

If Moore and Williams are selected for the team, they will stay on in California for the Armed Forces Championships to be at Camp Pendleton Marine Corps Station from April 5 through 10.

If selected they will move to Colorado Springs, Colo., for the United States of America Basketball Championship from April 28 through May 2.

Camp Merrill Officers' Association

For years they've hugged curbs and circled tracks. But this April 4, amateur and competitive runners will have the opportunity to face the greatest challenge of their racing careers — the Fifth Annual Mountain Ranger Run in Dahlonega, Ga.

586th deploys to Fort Stewart

Unit members get a chance to perform actual wartime mission with 24th Inf. Division soldiers

By Alvin R. Williams
586th Engineer Company

The 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), a separate company under the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) is halfway complete in its three-week field exercise devoted to sharpening up its warfighting skills.

The exercise, called Victory Focus, is being conducted with 2nd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized). The 586th, a company capable of supporting a division-sized element, will concentrate on junior leadership development.

The company deployed from Fort Benning to Fort Stewart, Ga., Feb. 4 to establish defensive operations, conduct river-crossing operations and to perform its mission essential task list.

The company was given the mission to construct a bridge to sustain the duration of the field problem for the bulk of the advancing forces of the 2nd Brigade during Victory Focus. The unit is now in the state of performing its primary wartime mission of assault river crossings using rafts and bridges constructed from ribbon bridge bays and bridge erection boats.

The unit will also conduct airlift operations using Hunter Army Airfield's CH-47 Chinook helicopters, which are capable of lifting float bridge equipment. Airlift operations are done when transporter trucks are unable to reach remote areas.

The unit will return to Fort Benning Feb. 28.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment has opened a motorcycle Defensive Driving Course. Soldiers of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment who wish to ride on motorcycles as an operator or passenger must now complete this course in order to ride, according to battalion policy.

"The purpose of this course is to improve motorcycle riding skills and reduce accidents and fatalities," said Staff Sgt. Patrick Ogden, the non-commissioned officer in charge of the course. According to the American Motorcycle Foundation, approximately 93 percent of all the people involved in motorcycle accidents have never had any instruction classes.

"There are two phases to this course — a classroom phase and a driving phase," said Ogden. "I feel like the most important phase is the driving phase, because it's where we can really do the hands-on testing, there is only so much we can do in a classroom." Ogden and the assistant non-commissioned officer, Staff Sgt. Bill Yardley, were both sent to Fort Rucker, Ala., for the Motorcycle Instructors Course by the battalion.

"Ultimately the goal is to run a minimum of one class per quarter" said Ogden.

Spc. Tim O'Brien, a student in the class, said, "This class is very beneficial to experienced riders."

"It is the hope of this battalion that we can instill in our soldiers the discipline that is required to practice safety and promote it to others," said Ogden.

This program has been named in honor of Spc. Bernard Jones, a soldier of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment who lost his life in a motorcycle accident.

Future commanders get training

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The Collins Training Center, home of the 29th Infantry Regiment, and training area for the Bradley Fighting Vehicle had some special guests this past week.

Future commanders for Bradley units were there to be refreshed on the new changes of the Bradley. "The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, has had the task of training the commanders since 1989," said Maj. David Lacombe, company commander of the Bradley Instructors Company.

"This is a five-day course in which the future commanders have the opportunity to focus on the fundamentals of the Bradley, specifically maintenance, the hull and turret areas, and the Bradley gunner skills. They also do a live fire on the last day of the course," said Lacombe.

Until recently there were no command sergeants major in the course, however, in the last two classes there have been three.

Command Sgt. Maj. Jerry Klein, a student at the course said, "I was glad to see the change of having sergeants major in the class, I think it will be very beneficial."

Sgt. 1st Class Stillman Maxwell, of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, is the non-commissioned officer in charge of the class.

"Basically, I am responsible for helping the students out any way I can," said Maxwell.

Lt. Col. David Huntoon, a student in the class said, "There have been a lot of changes to the Bradley, and it's very important for the new commanders to be brought up to date. Another advantage is that we're able to see first hand what kind of training the new soldiers, the master gunners, and the commanders course students are receiving. The non-commissioned officers who run this class and the manner that it was set up is all around first class."

Mayor speaks at NCOA luncheon

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning soldiers got some advice from Columbus Mayor Frank Martin recently.

Martin was the guest speaker at the February meeting of the Non-Commissioned Officers Association, Feb. 12 at the Main NCO Club.

Mayor Pro-Tem A.J. McClung and Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick were also in attendance.

Martin's theme was what he dubbed "followship."

"You cannot be a leader if you are not a follower," Martin said. "You cannot always be the leader. There are times you've got to follow. There are times you've got to take directions."

Martin said that good followship involves four things: Not compromising your ethics, understanding that you cannot always be in charge, contributing to the group effort, and caring about others.

He especially emphasized the importance of working as a team.

"You can't always have the 'big cheese' attitude. These people don't last long. They never ask the essential question, 'What can I do to help the team.'"

Martin also suggested trying to avoid being one of those people who are constantly trying to do everything themselves.

"Sometimes we're so busy telling other people how to do their jobs that we don't know how to do our own. You've got to meld into or blend into the team. It's just as good to make an assist as it is to score the points."

Martin closed his remarks with a reminder not to get bogged down by striving for absolute perfection, something which he said is not possible.

"Everything we're involved with and everything we do has the makings of imperfection. Nothing is perfect. You can do your job with shortcomings and still be a winner."

After his comments, Martin was presented with an honorary, lifetime membership in the NCOA, while McClung received the NCOA Sergeant Major's Award.

Quick thanked Martin for his presentation.

"All of us need to learn about fellowship and teamwork," Quick said. "The commanding general really stresses teamwork here on Fort Benning, and Columbus and Phenix City are a very important part of that teamwork."

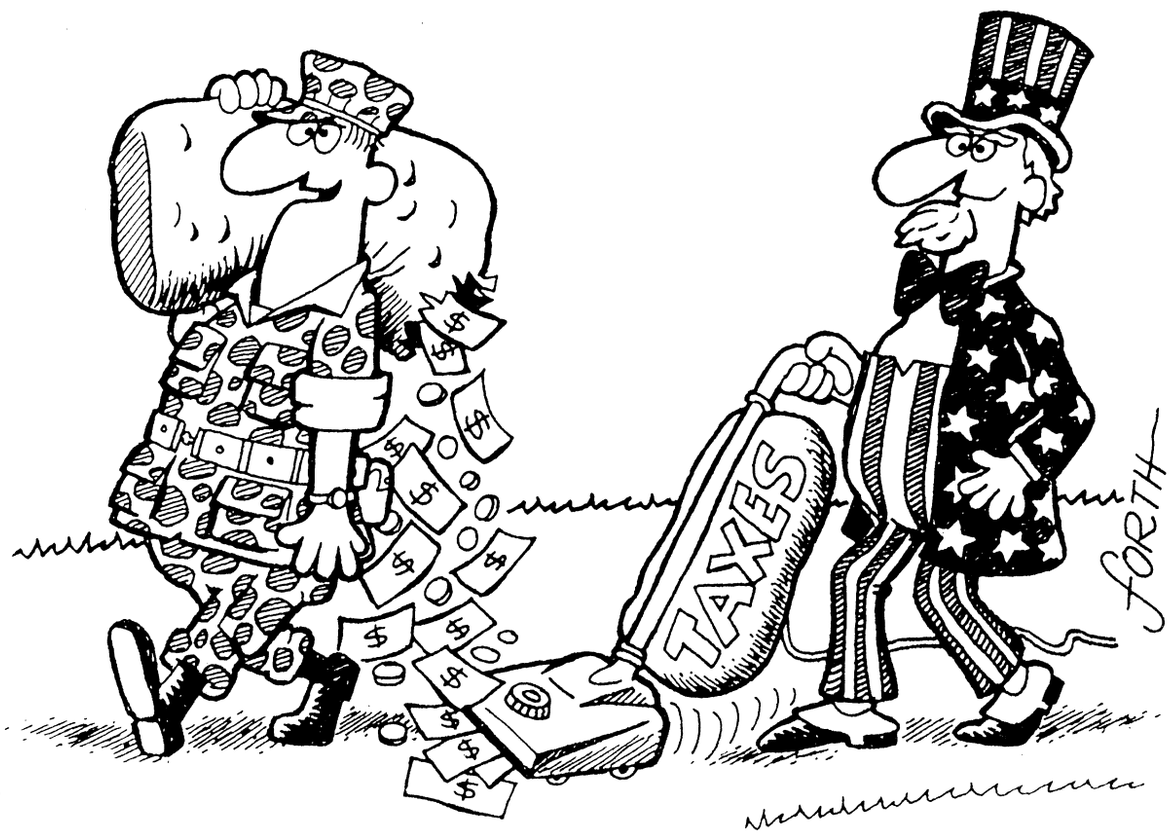
ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocate Office



Since it's tax season, it seems appropriate to mention a few areas that seem to be causing people trouble or confusion on their tax returns.

Q. What is the difference between "exemptions" and "deductions" and what do they do?

A. You are required to pay taxes on your taxable income, which, fortunately, is not the same as the total amount you make each year. A personal exemptions is an amount you are allowed to subtract from your total income each year as an allowance for your personal needs.

For 1991 taxes, the personal exemption is $2,150. You claim one for yourself and your spouse if you have one and you are filing a joint return, and one for each dependent you are supporting. Under the right circumstances, a dependent can include a parent or other relative. For a family of four, you can subtract $8,600 due to personal exemptions.

Certain expenses that you have during the year are allowed as deductions from your income, and the tax system is set up to allow either a standard deduction or the itemized deduction of these expenses.

Examples of these expenses are state and local taxes that you pay (both income and real estate), mortgage interest, charitable contributions, and medical expenses.

The standard deduction is a set amount that each taxpayer can subtract from income without having to say exactly what expenses he or she had and without having to have any proof of the expenses.

For a married couple filing a joint return, the standard deduction for 1991 is $5,700 — it is presumed that a married couple will spend at least that much on what would ordinarily qualify as deductible expenses under the tax law.

In order to qualify to itemize your deductions, you must have actual deductible expenses that are greater than the amount of the standard deduction (note that there is a special rule for people who file married but separate).

The single biggest deductible expense that normally qualifies a taxpayer to itemize is mortgage interest paid on the home during the year.

If you are going to itemize deductions, you should have documentary evidence to support every deduction. If you aren't sure if you qualify for itemizing, you should seek advice.

Q. How does the child and dependent care credit work?

A. Taxpayers who pay for the care of a child or dependent in order to be able to work are generally entitled to a credit for the expense of the care. A "credit" is an amount that can be directly subtracted from your tax bill and will reduce your tax liability on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

Certain qualifications must be met in order to get the child care credit. First, you must maintain a household that includes the child or dependent. Normally, your right to claim the credit for these expenses ends when the child reaches age 13. The exception is if you have a dependent who is mentally or physically incapable of caring for themselves (this can include a spouse).

Second, you must incur the expenses so that you are free to work. In the case of a married couple seeking to claim the credit for their child or children, each spouse must be either employed, a full-time student, or disabled.

The amount of the credit is a percentage of the qualifying expenses. Note that you cannot use the entire amount you paid for child care as the credit, only a percentage of it. The percentage will range anywhere from 20 to 30 percent depending on your adjusted gross income.

The form you use to claim the credit includes a chart on which you can find the percentage you are allowed based on your income.

The amount of child care expense to be applied to the percentage is either your actual expenses (up to a maximum of $2,400 for one child or $4,800 for two or more children) or the amount of your income, whichever is the less (on a joint return, you look to the smaller of the two incomes).

As an example, suppose you and your spouse both work, you have a combined income of $30,000 for the year, and you spend $3,000 for the care of one child. Your income for the year is $20,000 and your spouse's income is $10,000. Based on the chart, with a combined income of $30,000, you are entitled to a credit of 20 percent of your qualifying child care expenses. Although you spend $3,000, the maximum you are allowed for one child is $2,400. Therefore, your credit is 20 percent of $2,400, or $480. You can subtract this amount directly from the amount of taxes you owe on your taxable income.

Q. What about combat pay in Desert Storm?

A. The president declared areas in and around the Persian Gulf a combat zone on Jan. 17, 1991. For enlisted personnel serving in the zone, this means that your entire military pay is not taxable income for every month or part of a month you were in the combat zone. You didn't have to spend the entire month in the combat zone to exempt all your pay for that month.

Thus, if you arrived in Saudi Arabia on Jan. 31, 1991, your entire pay for January is exempt from tax. For the purposes of the exclusion, military pay includes your basic pay, re-enlistment bonuses if the extension for re-enlistment occured in a month in which you served in the zone, as well as some other types of pay. For officers, the exclusion is limited to the first $500 of your pay for each month during any part of which you served in the zone.

To say that this pay is not taxable or is excluded from taxable income means that you do not have to report this income to the IRS on your 1040, 1040A or 1040EZ (although you do have to take it into account in figuring entitlement to the Earned Income Credit).

Of course, what you report to the IRS on those forms should match what your employer reports to the IRS on your W-2 form. For the Desert Storm exclusion, this has been a problem in some cases, and before you use the W-2 you received for 1991, you should check the amount of wages reported carefully.

If you think there is an error, you should contact the Military Pay Section to request a recalculation of your W-2 before you file your taxes. The telephone number is 545-2668 or 545-3509.

29th soldier receives MSM

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Sgt. 1st Class Angel Miranda, of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal on Feb. 14 at the battalion motor pool.

Miranda has been at the battalion for eight years. His first job was working with the Bradley, then he moved on to be the non-commissioned officer in charge of S-2, and later in S-3. Miranda's final job was in charge of Operations for Company C.

Capt. Frank Molinari, commander of company C, said "Sergeant Miranda was an outstanding non-commissioned officer. Having him around was like having two first sergeants. I am losing a great leader, but that's all right, because someone will be gaining a great leader."

Miranda will be going to Fort Ord, Calif. on a permanent change of station. "It was tough, with some really long nights, but it was challenging and that's the way I like it. I look forward to joining the light infantry again," said Miranda.

SPACE TRAVELER

Army astronaut visits Fort Benning

By Barbara J. Ray
USAIC Public Affairs Office

An Army astronaut, who is an infantry officer stationed at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, Texas, made a visit to Fort Benning Tuesday.

Lt. Col James S. Voss presented the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School with a bayonet that he carried on his first flight into space aboard the Space Shuttle Atlantis, Nov. 24 to Dec. 1.

Voss presented the bayonet and authenticating plaque to Brig. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Ernst told Voss the plaque and the bayonet would be enshrined in the National Infantry Museum. Ernst then presented Voss with a photo of the Follow Me Statue and told him, "You have made the infantry proud."

Voss also presented a Ranger Tab and an authenticating plaque to Col. John Maher III, commander, Ranger Training Brigade.

During Voss' visit, he spoke with students attending the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced courses and with students at Faith Middle School, White, Loyd and Wilbur elementary schools.

Although he has never had a permanent party assignment to Fort Benning, he has been here for the Infantry Officer Basic Course, Advanced Infantry Officer Course and Ranger School.

In addition to his ties to the Home of the Infantry, Voss is a graduate of Opelika High School, Opelika, Ala., and Auburn University, Auburn, Ala.

He said he wanted to honor the Home of the Infantry on his first space shuttle flight and he felt a bayonet was the ideal way to do it.

The following are Voss' response to The Bayonet's questions about his first space shuttle flight.

Q. Was the flight what you expected?

A. It was what I expected and even more. It was a truly wonderful experience from the preflight training to the flight.

When you are around the astronaut office you hear people talking about it. You talk to your friends and you know what to expect, but there is no way to adequately describe the feelings, the sensations you have, and the strange things space travel does to your body. You know your body changes up there and you feel those changes, but you don't really know exactly what is happening.

The visual aspect of it is just tremendous. You can see so much better than you can capture things in a photograph. The view from space is truely spectacular and there is no way to bring back a picture that does it justice. It's a real shame we can't take everyone with us to share that.

Q. Can you describe how you felt going into space for the first time?

A. The shuttle launch is like an explosion all around you; try to imagine what you would feel like inside an explosion. You're hoping everything is going to go right and you are expecting it to and you're very busy thinking about the things you need to do as your part on the team.

> The shuttle launch is like an explosion all around you; try to imagine what you would feel like inside an explosion.
> — Lt. Col. James S. Voss
> Army astronaut

Your mind is staying busy, physically you're just lying there and feeling the sensation of the space shuttle launch. There is a great acceleration as you go up. It's a different feeling, the compression on your chest feels like two people are sitting on you.

When you finally get to space, it's a nice, relaxed feeling. The low gravity up there is a nice sensation, and I enjoyed it.

Q. Do you feel any differently now that you are back on the ground?

A. The flight is still very vivid in my memory; things haven't faded much. Little things that I probably didn't even notice up there are brought to mind when I observe something that is odd and different about life down here that is a normal activity in space.

Q. What was your best memory of the flight?

A. Most astronauts would say the launch because you'll never experience anything like it. I agree that it is the highlight of the flight, but there is so much more to space flight. I think that the experience of floating in space and learning to operate in an environment where everything you do is different from the way you do it down on earth is the most memorable experience. I would have to say that my training as a soldier and an infantryman really helped me to adapt.

Q. How did your family handle your space shuttle flight?

A. I think my family handled it real well. We don't really talk too much about potential problems with the space shuttle. We were in Houston when the Challenger accident happened.

In fact, the daughter of one of the astronauts on board used to babysit my daughter, Kristie, 12, so it was something that we had to talk about at that time.

I don't think anyone in my family was really worried, but my wife, Suzan, did tell me that Kristie acted differently until we had launched safely and then she was back to her normal self.

I think they were just glad that I finally got to do what I had been training and working hard for.

Q. How soon after your return were you able to see your family?

A. It was about an hour after we landed. After we leave the shuttle, we enter a special vehicle that takes us to the clinic for medical tests. Before we went into the clinic, we were able to give our family a hug and greet them.

Q. Do you plan to do anything differently to prepare for the next flight?

A. My next flight in October is a high inclination flight; that means we will be flying in much more northern and southern latitude. The last flight went from the Gulf Coast to the southern tip of Africa.

Because the next flight will cover so much more of the Earth's surface, I plan to be a better student of geography and Earth observations because there will be more to document and photograph.

Girl scouts to learn about earthlings on Thinking Day

By Janet Moore
Girl Scouts of America

Some of us are green and make food and oxygen from a process that uses sunlight. Some of us have fins and scales and take our oxygen from the water. Individuals within the species homo sapiens speak different languages, live in different cultures, believe in different gods. However, all of us have one thing in common. We are all Earthlings.

"We Are All Earthlings" is the theme for this year's Fort Benning Girl Scout Thinking Day program. Thinking Day, which is Saturday, is traditionally the day that Girl Scouts and Girl Guides worldwide celebrate the scouting movement. Funds are raised on this day each year to help establish new Girl Scout organizations in various countries and to help scouting continue in needy areas of the world.

For Thinking Day this year, the Fort Benning Girl Scouts will be putting on a program celebrating their unity with all beings as Earthlings together, and their wondrous diversity as individuals. Each troop participating has selected a country and will present an authentic song, dance, game, costume, skit, or factual presentation from that country. Each troop will also make a poster depicting an animal or plant from that country. Additionally, they will cook samples of food from that country to use to raise donations for the Thinking Day fund.

The program this year will be held in the Non-Commissioned Officer Academy Academy auditorium and cafeteria, Saturday, at 1 pm. Anyone with questions can call Moore at 685-1243 or Deborah Beane at 682-2019.

Agency: Community Life Office
How long at Fort Benning: 2 1/2 years
Reason for volunteering: "I volunteer because it gives me a feeling of belonging. I don't just live in McGraw Manor — it's my home. By being the mayor I feel I can contribute to the community to make others feel the same way.
Current volunteer organization: Community Life Mayors Council
Awards received: Certificate of Appreciation
Role Models: Karen Crowley and Darlene Perry
Spouses name/Unit: Sgt. Robert W. Wilson Jr., Company D, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry
Hobbies: reading, camping, sewing
Additional Comments: In the face of the current budget cuts, many services offered to the military family will be eliminated if we don't do our best to volunteer and support our fellow service families. I get great personal satisfaction knowing that I have helped to make positive changes in my community and to make it a better place for others to live.

Darlene Perry, Community Life officer comments: Susan is a the kind of person who sets aside her personal agenda to unselfishly work for the common good. She genuinely cares for other soldiers' families and her enthusiasm and captivating personality encourage others to care more. She tirelessly organizes activities for family members of all ages in her community. Her intelligence and graciousness belie her youth and have gained her the high regard of everyone on the installation who has worked with her.

She had educated her husband about "the other side of Army life" and, consequently, contributed to his being a more well-rounded professional. If you asked me for a definition of the "ideal Army wife" right now, my dictionary would say "Susan Wilson."

86-year old explorer shares experiences with Fort Benning school children

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

After listening to explorer Norman Vaughan, Fort Benning school children discovered that being 86-years-old doesn't mean sitting at home in a rocking chair.

A member of Admiral Richard E. Byrd's 1929 expedition to the South Pole and a participant in a number of Iditarod races, Vaughan spoke to fifth and eighth graders Feb. 13 and 14.

Though he underwent a knee joint replacement in April, he plans to participate in his 13th Iditarod race this year and has scheduled a seven-month 1993-94 Antarctic expedition to study the effects of pollution on depleting the ozone.

Students listened attentively at Faith Middle School as Vaughan spoke of quitting college and living off table scraps at a restaurant just to be able to be part of Byrd's expedition, saying goodbye to his mother thinking he may not see her again and living with a modicum of clean underwear.

A postscript he added was his loss, years later, of a penguin he had brought back with him to be stuffed. It was stolen.

He said he wanted to go with Byrd because "sometimes there's something inside your soul that makes you anxious to do something different."

In 1932, Vaughan won a dogsled race that was supposed to allow him to compete in the Olympics, but the wrong Olympic people were sent to make judgments and thus dog racing was once again not considered for an Olympic sport, he said.

It was after moving to Alaska that he and his wife, Carolyn, started participating in the 1,151-mile Iditarod races from Anchorage to Nome, crossing two mountain ranges, two rivers and a gorge.

"It is a tough race," he said, "and it can be dangerous."

He said he does it now not to compete, but to take part in the challenge.

Vaughan concluded by advising the students not to go through life aimlessly but always by making plans and then trying to bring them to successful conclusions. It makes everything worthwhile, he said.

Piano lessons to be offered at OWC building

By Michelle Leonard
Officer's Wives' Club

Piano lessons are available to all military families at the Officers' Wives' Club building Tuesday through Friday each week.

"I have students from 5 to 67 years old," said Diane Swiecicki, piano instructor for the OWC School of Music. "It's just never too late to learn to play the piano."

Swiecicki has 18 years experience teaching and said she has permanently settled in the Columbus area.

According to Swiecicki, students participate in two recitals each year. A Christmas program and a spring concert give students a chance to perform for parents and friends. For more information, call Swiecicki at 297-6524.

A Funny Thing Happens When People Put Down A Newspaper. They Start Spending Money.

Nothing puts people in the mood to buy like newspaper. In fact, most people consider it almost a prerequisite to any spending spree. Because that's where they make their decisions on where to shop and what to buy. Not on tv. Not on radio. And not jammed in little envelopes that come uninvited in the mail.

71% say newspaper is the place they turn for shopping advice. The place where they actually look forward to seeing the ads. And set aside the time to read them. That message comes through in study after study. More importantly, it also comes through in sales. Of course, if you want further proof of newspaper's effectiveness, run an ad and you can see it firsthand.

Bible comes 'alive' for children

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

A Bible study entitled "Personal Attitudes Relating to You" for children 4 years old through sixth grade will be from noon until 2 p.m. twice a month at the Religious Education Center. The study will on Saturday and continue through June.

"The children will learn what the Scriptures tell us about how to live," said LaTanya Wagstaff, teacher for the group.

Additionally, how to share your faith and how to give will be discussed. The basic idea for the program is to direct the children in the right kind of attitude based on biblical principles.

"The children will have fun; there will be games, stories, music and puzzles to make the Bible come alive," Wagstaff said.

When asked what prompted her to begin such a group, Wagstaff said she originally started a program in her home.

"The children would gather to hear of the scriptures and watch Christian videos. They seemed to enjoy this type of environment; and for many, it is the only biblical education they experience," she said. "Eventually, my home was not adequate for the size of the group, and now we will meet at the Religious Education Center," said Wagstaff.

The children are in groups depending on age and gender. Adult supervision is provided and each teacher is responsible for a group of children. The program is interdenominational and will include refreshments. Registration will take place at the study.

For information, call 682-4083 or Shirley Lee at 689-7239.

Washerwoman adds to history

By Benjamin L. Morrow
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

In the process of evolving as a people, black Americans are well aware that we have not come to where we are individually or as a race, by ourselves. Indeed we enjoy life, as it is, with its bitter and sweet, decline and progress, because someone before us was willing to pay the price in terms of their blood, their sweat, and their tears.

It is a truth that we are standing on the strong shoulders of many giants whose names we will never hear echoed through the halls of human history. Their heroic deeds of selfless sacrifice have nevertheless, played an invaluable role in getting us to where we are today.

In my attempt to help us understand the black family a little better, I have chosen to concentrate on a few now vanished from the American scene, yet whose contribution, I believe, has had the single most positive influence in maintaining the black family.

The "Negro Washerwoman" was the all but beast of burden of the aristocratic slaveholder, and in freedom, she continued at this hard labor as a bread winner of the family. Her contribution may be overlooked by the casual passer-by because she is a figure whose role no longer serves a useful purpose once necessitated by an antiquated system now "Gone with the Wind."

In 1920 the Bureau of the Census reported that there were 283,557 Negro washerwomen, according to U.S. Bureau of the Census, Negro Population in the United States; Fourteenth Census of the United States.

Whether a slave or a free woman of the ante-bellum period or a worker in the ranks of an emancipated people, her life, without exception, was one of unrelenting toil for those she loved. It is my personal contention that in the history of no other people has her example been paralleled, and certainly, among our race, none measure up to the level of her philanthropic spirit of selfless service.

"When a slave, she arose with the crowing of the fowl to sweat all but blood in the employ of a despotic mistress for whose household she had to toil often until late in the night," said Dr. Carter G. Woodson in "Free Negro Owners of Slaves in the United States in 1830. "On returning home she had to tax her body further to clean a neglected hut, to prepare meals and wash the clothes of her abandoned children."

As a slave, she was the head of the family. Her husband was sometimes an uncertain part of the family. Woodson further states, not being allowed to marry by law, couples learned that marriage meant living with another who had been chosen by the slave owners, many times to the dispicasure of the couple, states the "Journal of Negro History."

Just as the owner's will prevailed in the choice of who shared intimacies with whom, likewise, the slave holders determined when these relationships would end, sometimes this end was brought about by the sale of the male slave. To provide for her home she had to take in washing.

When freed during the ante-bellum period, her drudgery was not diminished. The earning power of her husband was not good since slave labor impoverished free labor. She was put in the position of having to supplement the minimal income of her unprofitable husband. In eking out an existence, the washerwoman was an important factor without whom the family could not have been maintained.

Local library helps trace family histories

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

"In all of us there is a hunger, bone-marrow deep, to know our heritage — to know who we are and where we have come from. Without this enriching knowledge, there is a hollow yearning. No matter what our attainments in life, there is still a vacuum, an emptiness, and the most disquieting loneliness."

Alex Haley, author of the book Roots, wrote these words more than a decade ago, but the power and truth of them still hold true. Facing this need for family history knowledge, a group of chaplains from Fort Benning visited a local research library Feb. 5.

The workshop was sponsored by the Chaplains' Family Life Center. Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Roggia, chief of Chaplains' Family Life, arranged for the group to visit the Family History Library on 4400 Reese Road in Columbus. The tour and workshop gave participants hands-on experience in the art of family historical study.

Don Wilson

Spc. Craig Richardson and Cpl. Michael Chestnut research family names at the Family History Library.

The group learned how to begin a search for their ancestors by teaching attendees ways to access more than 59 million names in the library, as well as how to use U.S. Census records.

Anyone interested in learning more about their family history may come to the library Tuesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday from 7 to 9 p.m. or Saturday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.. There is no admission charge.

Covenant Players minister on post through Sunday

USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Covenant Players will be at various locations ministering today through Sunday.

The Covenant Players is a ministry that requires no elaborate sets or costumes or make-up. They are able to perform anywhere there is room for an audience to gather. It is a non-endowed, non-profit corporation. Its only support comes from playdates. Many of the touring missionaries are committed to lifetime careers on that basis.

In the early 1960s when Charles M. Tanner, director, founder and writer, talked about his dream of a touring ministry in drama, his friends smiled and told him the church would never accept it. But more than one million performances later, Covenant Players continue to minister for the Lord and with the Lord's leadership.

The touring of this ministry covers all areas of the globe to include six continents, 84 countries and 16 languages.

The themes scheduled for the three-day seminar here include military leadership, drugs and alcohol, race relationships, single and marriage, military "human relations", faith and hope, lenten theme, transition and military.

Shoppers find bargains at thrift shop

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Ever buy a Rolex watch for $20?

Someone did at the Fort Benning's Officers' Wives' Club Thrift Shop.

Maria Fuller, Thrift Shop manager, said that the store's shoppers are looking for a bargain, and sometimes find one.

"Some people just bring in donation boxes of items they've acquired here and there because they know the profits go to a charitable cause," she said.

The three buildings that house the Thrift Shop, Furniture Barn and Craft Cabin offer a variety of items from new homemade craft pieces, to used furniture strollers and lawn mowers, to used clothing for all ages and sizes.

Fuller noted that not all of their buyers are having financial problems.

Some shoppers are newcomers to the area on a budget trying to pick up a few things they need, some are looking for antiques, and others are just bargain-hunters wanting a good deal.

Items sold here can also be on consignment. However, either way, through consignment fees or donations, Thrift Shop profits go into the OWC Welfare Fund.

Consigners set their own prices on items that they bring in, and workers won't make recommendations. However, they do suggest that people check the prices of similar items in the store.

The Thrift Shop does reserve the right to take on only articles that are in good shape and that have a probability of selling.

Last year 80 percent of that Welfare Fund was composed of Thrift Shop profits, and it distributed over $20,000 to a variety of agencies on post.

Jet makes 'Crash Landing' in drama

By JAY BOBBIN
Tribune Media Services

Movies about airplane disasters aren't exactly new, but the latest entry in that genre is steeped in realism.

Largely filmed where it actually happened, Monday's new ABC drama "Crash Landing: The Rescue of Flight 232" documents the July 1989 crisis involving a Denver-to-Chicago passenger jet, which suddenly lost an engine and its hydraulic braking systems while airborne. Capt. Al Haynes (portrayed by Charlton Heston, who also has "piloted" planes in "Skyjacked" and "Airport 1975") quickly sought the nearest airport, which turned out to be Gateway in Sioux City, Iowa.

As fate had it, that location had been preparing for such a matter under the guidance of Gary Brown, the director of the county's Disaster and Emergency Services department (played by Richard Thomas). Assisted by Jim Hathaway (James Coburn), an Air National Guard fire-station chief, he immediately put much-practiced measures into effect ... with local civilians managing to save 186 of the 296 passengers aboard the plane, which cracked into three parts on the runway, by getting them all to nearby hospitals in just 46 minutes. Directed by Emmy-winner Lamont Johnson from a script by veteran writer-producer Harve Bennett, the story was executive-produced by Dorothea Petrie, an Emmy-honored specialist in "Hall of Fame" ventures such as "Caroline?" and "Love Is Never Silent."

Reporting that the now-retired Haynes is the first real person he's played who still is alive, the ever-commanding Heston says "Crash Landing" focuses on "multiple heroism more than individual heroism, and individuals responding to the responsibilities of where they were and what they were doing. Here, we were examining what people under enormous stress were doing in the normal course of their daily routines, whatever their job was. From the black box (retrieved from the plane's cockpit, and detailing the events that led to the crash), I was familiar with the way (Haynes) handled the situation in command of the aircraft. There's no question of what was said, so you can't say (in dramatizing it), 'Well, somebody wouldn't say that here.' They did say it, and it was chilling to listen to that tape. Usually, you find yourself reading endless biographies and commentaries about a significant historical figure you're playing, but I approached this just as the man in that job in that place."

Though Heston chose not to meet Haynes during filming, still-boyish "Waltons" alumnus Thomas recalls that Gary Brown himself was "standing right over my shoulder, practically, most of the time. When I read the script, I thought, 'Oh, this is perfect. This is just right for me.' Then, I met Gary and I said, 'There's been a terrible mistake!' It was fascinating and extraordinary to play somebody who was right there. The set was just full of doppelgangers; for every actor, there was a real person (involved in the actual rescue) standing not more than a few yards away. That could be a daunting experience at first, but not only was it not an obstacle, it became an extraordinary support team. The people we were playing are all in the movie, in one capacity or another, and they really were holding us up and moving us forward in the most welcoming way. They sort of made the movie possible, (helping to re-create) the way it was."

The rugged Coburn — who has worked with Heston several other times ("Major Dundee," "The Last Hard Men," "Midway") — supports that opinion, citing "the kind of enormous cushion of genuine emotion that still existed in the community" during the production:

"These people had had a remarkable experience. There were many who were still quite rocked by it, still much affected by it emotionally. With that reservoir of emotion that had grown by (their) having had this trauma and having responded to it in one way or another, you saw a very human cross-pollination of people, very few of whom agreed with each other about what really happened. It was like 'Rashomon,' but the main thing was that the rescue took place. With all these disparate drives and ambitions in that community, this particular event galvanized it and cemented it in a way that was uncommon. As they talked about it with us, many people still had tears in their eyes, and that was something that kept us from wallowing in or exploiting the morbidity of the situation."

Normally quite capable of separating reality from acting, even Heston was affected by the fine line between them this time. "I'd been in Europe," he reflects, "and the first shot I did in the picture was the scene of Capt. Haynes departing after he got out of the hospital, and a lot of people in the town came to see him off. Actors are used to searching for real emotions appropriate to the scene, and a real

Savannah offers scenic spring beauty

Savannah Visitors Bureau

Spring comes early to Savannah and coastal Georgia. Often referred to as "the forest city" and "the walking city," it is well deserving of these nicknames. What better way to enjoy the beauty of spring than walking through a city lush with trees and foliage, virtually ablaze with every color of azalea, colors cooled by crisp, white dogwood and canopied by giant moss-draped live-oak trees.

March celebrates the 'greening' of Savannah, spring and the 168th Annual St. Patrick's Day Parade on March 17. Touted as second in size only to New York City, everyone is Irish for the day!

The First Saturday Festival on March 7 will kick-off the month's events with family fun along the Historic Waterfront featuring arts and crafts, clowns and music. The Irishfest on March 14 through 16 offers a blend of Irish heritage, cultural activities and musical entertainment and an 'all green' fireworks display on the March 15.

Savannah shows her true southern hospitality during the 57th Annual Tour of Homes and Gardens, March 26 through 29. The four day event features walking tours of private residences, churches and museums in Savannah's colonial, victorian and coastal districts.

April brings many outdoor events with food, gardens and art. Tempt your palate with fresh local seafood at the annual Seafood Festival on River Street, April 3 to 5; and with ethnic fare at A Night in Old Savannah at the Visitors Center, April 23 to 25. For the color palate peek into colorful private gardens during The Hidden Gardens of the Nogs Tour, North of Gaston Street, April 4 to 5 and the colorful works of students of the Savannah College of Art and Design during the Sidewalk Arts Festival, April 25.

On Confederate Memorial Day, April 26, you might want to have earplugs on hand for the 21-gun salute in Forsyth Park. If you happen to be in Savannah during Easter weekend, the interdenominational Easter Sunrise Service on the beach at Tybee Island could be an inspirational and beautiful way to start a spring day.

For more information on Savannah, contact Savannah Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, Department 9180, P.O. Box 1628, Savannah, Ga. 31402-1628, (912) 944-0456 or toll-free (800)444-2427, Ext. 311.

'Georgia' guide offers much for most travelers

Gerogia Department of Industry, Trade and Tourism

The 1992 edition of "Georgia on my Mind" offers a variety of informantion about travel in Georgia, and you don't have to be afraid to ask for it. This week alone, 5,000 Americans will open their mailboxes and find the 143-page Georgia travel guide filled with colorful images and special sections featuring bed and breakfast inns, fairs and festivals, a children's page and a pullout highway map.

The new guide introduces travelers to the state through descriptive editorial sections about each of Georgia's nine travel regions. Readers may then turn to coordinated color-coded directory sections in the back of the guide for specific information.

Cities and their attractions, dining choices, accommodations, historic homes, museums, parks and recreational facilities are all included, along with a map of the region's landmarks. Phone numbers for state and local welcome centers are included, as well as state patrol and road condition listings.

Before the year is out, a total of 500,000 copies of the 1992 edition of "Georgia on My Mind" will be distributed to those who respond to Georgia tourism advertising or who visit any of the state's 11 Visitor Information Centers.

Potential visitors to the state may also request a copy of "Georgia Days," the calendar of events for the first six months of 1992.

Interested travelers may call toll-free (800) VISIT-GA, or (404) 656-3590 in Atlanta, or write Georgia on My Mind, P. O. Box 1776, Atlanta, Ga., 30301.

location can help to create that for you. In this case, the same people who had been involved in the original crash often volunteered to come and be in the re-creation when we were shooting in Sioux City. There were maybe 50 or 100 people supposed to be there (at the hospital) on that day, and many of them were the same people. There were Richard and Jim playing their parts, but surrounded by people who had been in the real event, and I have to say that the real emotion from them was palpable."

The real-life Gary Brown says that "What separates this from a 'crash-and-burn' movie is why we moved forward as a community in support of the project. In the Midwest, it's a very caring, concerned group of people. Somewhere between 35,000 and 40,000 people participated in (the aftermath of) this accident, and I truly think this is a story about this place we call 'Siouxland.'"

215th Finance heads back to Middle East

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Approximately 12 members of the 215th Finance Support Unit left Fort Benning Thursday at 8:30 a.m. en route to Southwest Asia. The unit, which deployed during Operation Desert Storm, will be deployed for six months in two different locations — Kuwait City and Dhaharan.

According to Lt. Col. George Oak Smith, commander of the 215th, which is part of the 36th Engineer Group, the unit's mission will be to provide total finance support for all active duty U.S. armed forces members who are not rotational (stationed in Saudi Arabia and Kuwait on a formal short tour). Smith said he expects his soldiers to return in the early part of October.

The deploying troops are all volunteers and include both males and females.

"I've got many more volunteers than I can take," said Smith. He said the 215th was the first finance unit deployed to Southwest Asia and one of the last to return. The unit first deployed Aug. 14, 1990, and returned in June of 1991.

The mix of soldiers leaving includes those who participated in the first deployment.

"We're really looking forward to this," said Smith. "The opportunities for training are limitless when you get to participate in something like this. We get to practice our wartime mission in a setting we can't duplicate stateside."

Family support

"Family members, loved ones or other concerned soldiers wishing to send a message to a deployed soldier will have access to and use of our fax machine and computer mail links," said Smith. "They only need to call our family support group or anyone in the soldier's chain of command at Fort Benning to arrange for an electronic message to be sent."

Smith said family members should remember the mail restrictions for Saudi Arabia. "Any problem that arises that can't be resolved should be referred to the unit first sergeant or the family support group leaders."

The unit first sergeant is 1st Sgt. Garry Reier; his telephone number is 545-1583. The family support group leaders are Martha Reier who can be reached at 689-8193 and Nancy Smith who can be reached at 685-8544.

Dentists, hygienists and therapy assistants from Fort Benning's Dental Activity conducted the health fair as part of Dental Health Month. Students went through a variety of stations where they saw what decayed teeth look like, brushed their own teeth and had individual screenings.

Retiree open house set

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military retirees and their families from Alabama, Florida and Georgia are invited to the 11th annual Military Retiree Open House April 3 and 4 at Fort Benning.

Open House activities start at 1 p.m. April 3, with a golf tournament at the Follow Me Golf Course.

Post expands 'mystery' program

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Mystery Shopper Program is to many people a mystery in itself.

What exactly is it?

Marketing Chief Brian Smith of the Directorate of Community Activities said the purpose of the program is to help provide customers with the best possible service.

"Our soldiers, family members and Department of Defense civilians deserve the very best in customer service," said Smith. "The intent of the Mystery Shopper Program is both to reward and recognize excellent customer service and identify individuals who require additional customer service training."

Here is how the program works.

Unidentified, professionally-trained customer service evaluators, personnel who can legitimately use post services and facilities, will act as if they are normal shoppers.

These mystery shoppers will secretly rate the employee who helps them based on courtesy, helpfulness, knowledge, speed and quality of service, attentiveness, and interest in the customer.

An employee who receives a 100 percent rating by a mystery shopper will receive a small cash reward and recognition by the commanding general, Smith said, adding that directors can increase the award to $100 for exceptional cases.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, presented Virginia Acevedo, a post exchange sales associate, a check for $50, an Infantry Coin and a hug for her excellent customer service as part of the Mystery Shopper Program Feb. 21 at the main mall.

Smith said the Directorate of Community Activities has successfully used the program for the last seven months and that the program will expand to other post directorates including the Directorates of Engineering and Housing, Logistics, Military Personnel, Civilian Personnel and Resources Management beginning March 18.

Smith said the program recognizes outstanding employees and identifies areas that need improvement.

"The name of the game is service with a smile and prompt, helpful responsiveness to the customer," said Smith.

Emergency 911 coming

Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Plans are in the works for Fort Benning to implement an emergency system that will bring emergency components and the people who need them together more quickly, according to post officials.

The post is in the beginning stages of developing an emergency 911 system, much like the one in most civilian communities, to alert the post police, fire department and other emergency personnel of incidents that happen on post, according to Capt. Dwayne E. Adams, operations officer for the Directorate of Information Management and the originator of the idea.

"It started as an Army suggestion that I submitted," said Adams.

The emergency, or E911 as it's more commonly known, package has been approved by the Office of the Secretary of Defense for $2 million.

Currently, the calls for emergency help from post residents to post emergency components go through a process that takes almost five minutes, according to military police officials.

Calls go to the Columbus 911 center, where operators contact the Military Police operations desk, Martin Army Community Hospital or the post fire department, to alert them of an emergency situation on post.

With the new E911 system, Fort Benning emergency calls would be received at one central location, the Military Police Activity headquarters.

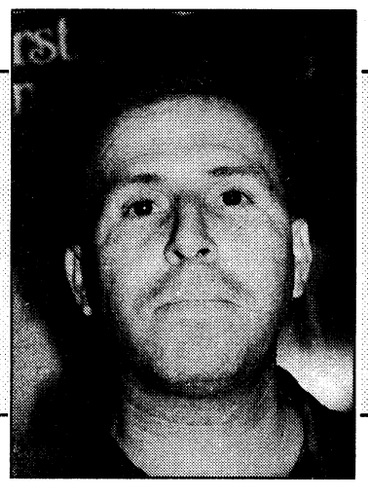
VARIOUS VOICES

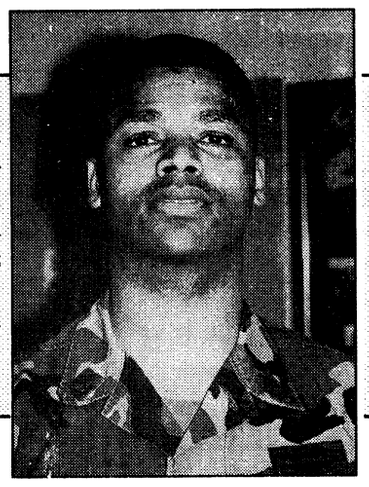
How have opportunities for black people in the military increased?

Sgt. 1st Class Rickey Gilbert, Equal Opportunity Office — "We have been allowed greater mobility and job satisfaction. It was bad back in the '70s; but now, knowing your job, means no limit for what a black man can do."

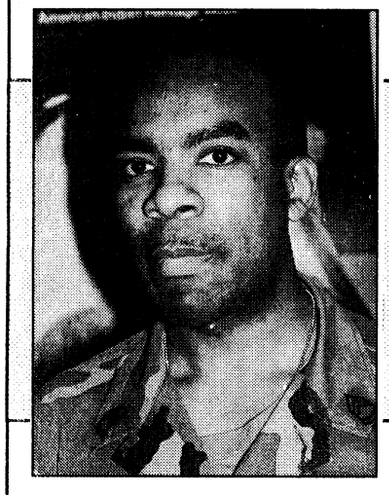
Sgt. 1st Class Hazel Hughes, Equal Opportunity Office — "As a black female, I've seen many fields open up to blacks. Blacks have reached some of the highest ranks in the Army. We're all soldiers now."



Sgt. 1st Class Richard Alltop, Equal Opportunity Office — "I've seen a tremendous opening in the career fields. A long time ago, blacks were found a lot in mess halls. Now they are found a lot in other career fields. There is still a lot of room for improvement. It's still not equal today"



Sgt. 1st Class Raymond Johnson, Equal Opportunity Office — Speaking from '78 until now, I feel blacks are looked upon and respected a lot better than in '78. Some examples are promotions and job opportunities. Blacks are now found in more authority positions."



Sgt. 1st Class Jim Davis, Equal Opportunity Office — "Communication among the races has improved. When I came in, a black man couldn't address himself to a white man the way he can now."

Constance Kemple, civilian employee— "Blacks are more educated now so they are branching out into other MOSs."

If you were one of the lucky ones to get a Bayonet readership newspaper survey, good for you.

If you lost it (or threw it away), pooh on you. But if it's still sitting in your hold box, stuffed inside your boot, or is lining the bottom of the trash can, please pull it out, fill it in and send it to us at The Bayonet office in Room 601, Building 4.

Failure to send in your survey form will get you reassigned to Fort Drum, N.Y. for winter snowplow duty. It will get you 1,000 days at the National Training Center, Calif. in charge of scorpion counting.

Actually, no evil will befall you. However, if you have any complaints, criticisms or witticisms regarding this newspaper, and you don't send in your survey, then we don't want to hear them later.

But we will certainly pay attention to anything you might have to say in the survey. We want to know how we can make this newspaper better, how we can make it meet your needs.

Besides, I enjoy reading the comments. In fact, the entire staff finds them enlightening.

We already have plans to incorporate some of the suggestions, and plan, once the survey is completed, to explain how we do things and why we do them and basically answer your questions.

We'll talk about deadlines, priorities and how we decide which events to give major coverage and which ones to turn into announcements.

I must say, so far, the respondents to our survey are proving to be a much kinder and gentler group of folks, than those that participated in the last survey.

We like to think it's because we're doing a better job than in the past even though civilians want to know why we spend so much time on military news and soldiers want to know why we feature so much civilian news, or why another unit gets more space than their unit. Others want more national news. While still others think we need to limit our coverage to what's going on at Fort Benning.

So far, no one has made the comment that the only thing The Bayonet was good for is wrapping garbage and lining bird cages.

I, too, have escaped unscathed.

During the last survey, a respondent said, "If I senior-rated Snively's supervisor, I'd mark him bottom box."

I took that to mean he didn't like my boss.

So even the bosses are in good shape.

This is not to say all of you think we're perfect. But if you want to see changes made to the newspaper, be advised, mind reading isn't one of our skills. You gotta put it in writing and send that survey in.

Again, for those of you who've responded, and that's nearly 700 so far, thanks for your support.

By the way, if you'd like to subscribe to The Bayonet and have it delivered to your home, call 682-3346.

Blacks' gains important to history

By Danny List
U.S. Army Medical Department Activity

This week ended Black History Month, which has been officially observed by the military for 15 years.

People marvel today at the advances in open-heart surgery and the developments that have led to a synthetic heart implant. But the roll call of cardiac surgeons would be incomplete without mentioning Dr. Daniel Hale Williams, who performed the first open-heart surgery in 1893.

In Chicago's Provident Hospital, Williams successfully opened the chest of a knifing victim and sewed up the heart without the aid of blood transfusions, heart-lung machines, X-rays or modern drugs. Advancements in open-heart surgery emanated from Williams scalpel in the city's integrated hospital.

American casualties during World War II might have been much greater had it not been for the contribution of Dr. Charles Richard Drew. Drew wrote a dissertation on "banked blood" while working on his doctor of science degree at Columbia University.

Later, he developed many of the present-day techniques and procedures for separating and preserving blood. He established the world's first blood bank at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York City in 1939. In 1941, he was put in charge of the American Red Cross project to establish donor stations for American servicemen. The success of this effort was due in large measure to the skill and experience Drew had acquired.

In April 1950, at the age of 46, Drew was injured in an automobile accident near Burlington, N.C. He was rushed to the nearest hospital, a "white" hospital that did not admit blacks. Before he could be taken to another hospital, Drew, desperately in need of the treatment that he had done so much to devise, bled to death.

Benjamin Franklin has been praised for his numerous contributions to American science during America's early days. But there has been little applause for the equally great American, one of Franklin's own peers, Benjamin Banneker. He was one of the principal surveyors who helped design our nation's capital. He developed the first American clock and published an almanac as widely accepted as Franklin's.

Every child in school has heard of men like Thomas Edison and Eli Whitney. But what about Garrett Morgan? In 1906, Morgan rescued more than a dozen men trapped after a tunnel explosion under Lake Erie by using his newly developed gas mask. All motorists should know that he is also credited with inventing the traffic light.

Granville Woods received 35 railroad patents during his 44 years. Railroad commuters owe a debt to his development of the automatic air brake and the warning signal that enables engineers to determine how close their trains are to other trains.

And then there were the members of the armed forces. Blacks have participated in every war and conflict that our country has been in.

Among the black soldiers at Bunker Hill was Minuteman Peter Salem. The all-black 54th Massachusetts assaulted Fort Wagner on July 18, 1863. Sgt. William Carney received the Medal of Honor in this action. In all, more than 200,000 blacks served during the Civil War. The 9th and 10th Cavalry, both all-black units whose members were known as "Buffalo Soldiers," fought the Apache, Comanche, Kiowa and Sioux Indians during our westward expansion. During the Spanish American War, the 9th and 10th Cavalry pierced Spanish lines for Teddy Roosevelt's Rough Riders at Las Guasimas, Cuba, June 24, 1898.

The 369th Infantry Regiment, the only black regiment to fight in World War I, was under fire 191 continuous days without relief, the longest of any American unit.

Pvt. Henry Johnson was the first American to receive the French Croix de Guerre. Johnson, who was later promoted to sergeant, was one of the 370,000 black Americans who served with the United States forces during World War I.

At Pearl Harbor, Messman Dorie Miller, received the Navy Cross for bravery. He was officially credited with downing two Japanese planes, and some witnesses insisted that he had disposed of as many as six. Miller was only one of many black non-combatants who deserted galleys and washrooms to engage the enemy during World War II. Although it finally cost him his life, Miller's courage won more than the Navy Cross. His example helped trigger a drive for greater opportunity in the military services for other blacks.

Segregation was officially ended in the armed forces by President Harry Truman's executive order on July 26, 1948.

Black Americans fought in Korea and Vietnam, and most recently in Southwest Asia, proving their worth as members of the armed forces.

The list of contributions made by blacks to this country could continue, but the point is that these developments are just as much a part of the history of America as they are of black Americans. Ignoring the contributions of one group does much to diminish the lives of everyone in America.

Seatbelt use: myths, fiction, facts

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Many states now have laws requiring drivers and passengers alike to wear seatbelts or pay a stiff price. Sadly, many people still resist using seat belts and pay an even stiffer price— their lives.

If you're still unconvinced that seat belts can mean the difference between life and death in an auto accident, take a moment to consider the following information.

The excuses

• "I can't move with those belts on - they're so uncomfortable!"

• "It's better to be thrown out of the car than be trapped in by a seatbelt."

• "I only drive around town; how can I get hurt going 25 miles per hour?"

• "I'm a good driver. I've never had an accident."

The answers

• The fact is, newer seatbelt design allows for total freedom of motion while driving. The latching device that secures the belt only goes into effect when the car jolts abruptly, as in an accident.

• People who are thrown from cars are 25 times more likely to be killed than if they had been held securely in their seats. Further, in the unlikely event your car catches fire or is submerged, seatbelts can keep you from getting "knocked out" and greatly improve your chance of escape.

• The majority of all car accidents occur within 25 miles of home and 80 percent of all serious injuries and fatalities occur in cars going 40 miles per hour or slower.

• You may be a good driver, but there are situations beyond your control such as weather and road conditions (not to mention other drivers) that can affect your safety. Drive preventively and use your seatbelt.

When all is said and done, it pays to remember that seatbelts were designed with your safety and security in mind. Seatbelts, like safety seats for children, can make a life and death difference if you or your loved ones are involved in an automobile accident.

Use your seatbelt. The life you save may be your own.

Council provides solutions

Misconduct causes problems for post families

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

A 16-year-old family member of a Fort Benning soldier was recently detained by Military Police for shoplifting a $12 item from the Post Exchange at the main mall, according to Community Life officials.

In addition to this family member losing PX privileges for six months, the youth will be required to perform 30 hours of community service on post and write a 1,000-word essay, said officials.

Cases of minor juvenile misconduct such as this are referred to the post Adolescent Advisory Council for disposition, said Sgt. 1st Class Audie Dame, non-commissioned officer in charge of the post Community Life Office.

The Adolescent Advisory Council has representatives from installation staff organizations, such as the Staff Judge Advocate, Social Work Serrvices, Military Police Activity, Army Family Advocacy Program and the Community Health Nurse, as well as representatives from the juvenile courts of both Muscogee and Chattahoochee counties, said Dame.

The Adolescent Advisory Council recommends sanctions for acts of juvenile misconduct to the command group for approval, said Dame. Once approved, execution of the required sanctions is arranged by the child's sponsor, who has been counseled by the Community Life Officer.

In addition to community service, sanctions may include referral of the case to the county juvenile courts for prosecution or even eviction of the family from government quarters. The family may also be referred to seek counseling, said Dame.

"The council is a real success story," said Dame. "Kids learn a lesson and get a second chance to conform to what society requires of them. The vast majority of the first-time offenders never get in trouble again after completing community service," said Dame.

Community service includes such activities as picking up trash in high-visibility areas around post schools and community facilities, cutting grass and raking leaves around installation chapels and removing waste from the horse stables at the Fort Benning Hunt Club, said Dame.

Normally, the sponsor of the family member or the sponsor's spouse, as well as Community Life non-commissioned officers must supervise the child while the service is being performed, said Dame.

In 1991, the Adolescent Advisory Council reviewed 428 cases of misconduct involving Fort Benning soldiers' children, said Dame. A majority of the cases involved children shoplifting items from the PX.

"We've had a slight decrease in juvenile cases of shoplifting since the beginning of this year," said Dame.

"The council is interested in the welfare of our soldiers' children," said Dame. "The council wants to provide solutions for preventing problems associated with unacceptable juvenile behavior."
