Club prepares for opener

Columbus RedStixx

The Columbus RedStixx are awaiting the start of the 1992 season. Club officials are preparing for opening night on Saturday at 7:05 p.m. against the Wheelers of Charleston, W. Va.

Opening night will be highlighted with free magnetic schedules to the first 2,500 fans of all ages. Magnetic schedules will be sponsored by Farmer's Market Cash and Carry.

Also on tap for opening night are Miss Columbus Denise Daniels and the Silver Wings Parachute Team. Last season, nearly 6,000 attended Columbus' home opener.

RedStixx Beef Up Fan Involvement

Fans will have chances to win prizes at every RedStixx game this season. Fans who hold a RedStixx program with a chosen "lucky number" will win prizes ranging from a free oil change to a free dinner.

One of the notable nightly activities will be the "Home Run For The Money," sponsored by Reynolds, Kendrick, and Stratton securities and South 106. The first three RedStixx batters of the sixth inning will hit for a different fan. If the player homers in that at-bat, the fan wins $106. If the homer happens to go through the "O" in the South 106 billboard, the fan wins $10,600. Every time a RedStixx batter fails to homer in the sixth, the jackpot goes up by $10.60 per night.

Many of last year's contests, such as the Delta Fly, Dirtiest Car and Pizza Scream, will return in '92.

Local team helps underprivileged youths

The RedStixx have purchased 50 tickets to Sunday's Atlanta Braves game against San Francisco. The tickets will be distributed by the Columbus Parks Department to underprivileged children in Columbus. The Parks Department will also provide transportation.

"We realize that a lot of these kids won't have an opportunity to see the Braves on their own," said RedStixx General Manager John Dittrich. "Everyone should have a chance to enjoy a big league game. We're happy to do it."

The RedStixx bought the tickets for the youngsters despite the fact they play at home that day in a 2:05 p.m. game against the Wheelers.

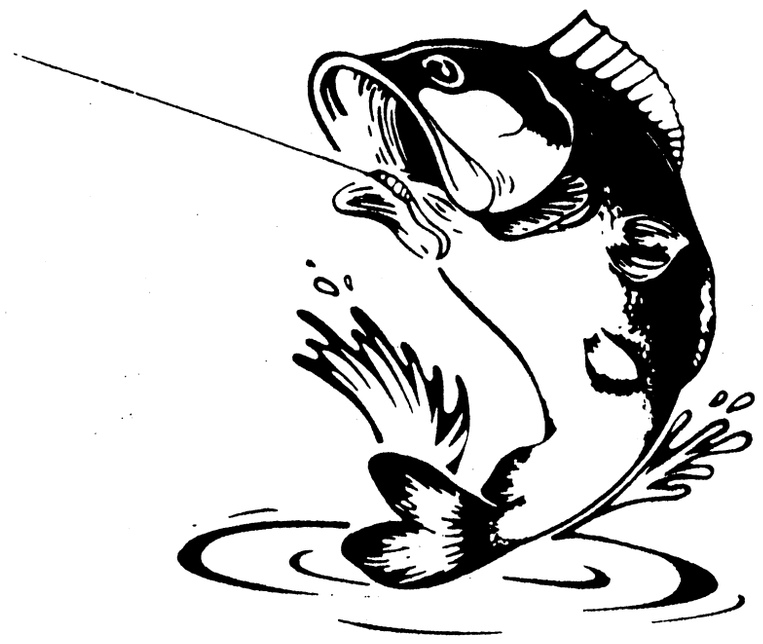
Fishermen look for big bass

Outboard Motor Corporation



To a bass fisherman, spring means only one thing: big fish in shallow water. Spring ranks as one of the best times of the entire year to catch a trophy bass because the fish are both accessible and usually willing to bite.

"The key to catching a big bass," says tournament pro David Wharton, "is fishing specific areas that will attract big fish, and then using proven big-fish lures."

"Certain lakes, of course, are known for the trophy bass they produce, but even on these lakes, the fish are in specific areas."

Wharton, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff and a former guide on Lake Sam Rayburn in Texas, has caught numerous big bass, including one monster of nearly 13 pounds.

"I believe the major things to look for are very thick cover, possibly nearby deeper water, and a food source, preferably bream or crayfish," continues Wharton.

"I really think heavy cover may be more important to big bass than deep water, because deep water is relative. In one lake deep water could be 10 feet but in another it might be 25 feet."

"The big bass I have caught always came from heavy cover, and there was often a depth change nearby, but it certainly wasn't always a major change."

The Johnson pro feels the presence of bream or crayfish in an area is also a strong indication of the presence of big bass.

"I remember seeing bream in nearly all the areas where I have caught my big bass," says Wharton. "Really big bass prefer bream and crayfish over small shad, so when I begin seeing food like this, I start thinking about catching a big bass."

Wharton' s favorite big-bass lures are a heavy spinnerbait with a single size six willowleaf blade, and a jig with a plastic crayfish trailer.

"I believe it's important to use larger lures when you're after big bass," he notes, "and to fish them slower. Big bass don't eat a lot, and they don't move a lot to chase food. In my experiences, big fish seem content to stay in heavy cover and possibly ambush something that comes past."

"To get these fish to strike your lures, you have to use something big that gets their attention, and then you have to give the fish plenty of time to get it."

Wharton's favorite big-bass cover is vegetation, especially milfoil and hydrilla, which he fishes regularly in many Texas lakes. Not surprisingly, this type of vegetation not only grows extremely thick, it also provides ideal habitat for bream and crayfish.

Palm Sunday honors memory of Christ

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Palm Sunday, the Sunday before Easter, will be celebrated in the Christian Church Sunday.

The day commemorates the triumphal entry of Jesus Christ into Jerusalem. The people lined the road, praising God, waving palm branches and throwing their cloaks in front of the colt as it passed before them.

"Long live the King" was the meaning behind their joyful shouts because they knew that Jesus was intentionally fulfilling the prophecy in Zechariah 9:9, "See your King comes to you, righteous and having salvation, gentle and riding on a donkey, on a colt, the foal of a donkey."

To announce that he was indeed the Messiah, Jesus chose a time when all Israel would be gathered at Jerusalem, a place where huge crowds could see him, and a way of proclaiming his mission that was unmistakable. The people were sure their liberation was at hand.

In the fourth century, Christians in Jerusalem began to hold a Palm Sunday procession from the Mount of Olives. In Orthodox churches and some Protestant churches, palm leaves are blessed and distributed to the congregation on Palm Sunday.

Think safety for cookouts

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Warm weather is the time to get out the old grill for backyard barbecues and picnics at the park. The following are a few safety tips to help you enjoy these cookouts:

Line the bottom of the clean grill with an inch of ash, gravel or commercial charcoal base to absorb dripping grease and reduce flare-ups.

Set the grill on a level surface away from low branches, dry brush or other combustibles, including the house or garage.

To start a charcoal fire safely, use wood shavings or charcoal lighter fluid. Follow package directions when using charcoal lighter fluid. Never substitute gasoline or other combustible liquids. Never add charcoal lighter fluid after the charcoal begins to burn.

Never use the grill indoors. Burning charcoal produces carbon monoxide (an odorless, tasteless, lethal gas).

Keep pets and children away from charcoal grills to eliminate the danger of their touching the grill or accidently pushing it over on someone.

Keep sharp instruments out of reach of small children. When passing knives and forks to other persons, keep the point turned away from them.

Use proper equipment to prevent burns: a pair of heavy-type potholders, a long-handled spatula or fork, and a pair of long tongs.

Wear safe clothing. Avoid dangling ties and shirttails that could easily brush against the fire. Keep other combustibles away from the grill.

Keep garden hose ready for use in case of fires outside the grill. After cookouts, drench fire with water and promptly dispose of soaked ashes in a metal trash container. Backyard barbecues and picnics are a very enjoyable part of outdoor fun. It will stay fun for you and your family with the safe use of charcoal grills.

Remember, you are out to barbecue the hamburgers not the chef.

Outdoor recreation can be hazardous

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Sunshine and the long hours of daylight increase our urge for outdoor recreational activities. A day off or weekends can bring recreation, adventure and excitement. They can also bring fatigue, sickness, sunburn and injury if we are not careful.

Many of these activities are hazardous. To think that all the hazards can be eliminated is unrealistic. However, there is much a person can do to recognize the dangers involved.

Safe activity is far more enjoyable for all concerned. Here are some of the more hazardous activities and safety tips necessary for full enjoyment of picnicking and camping:

Prepare food requiring little refrigeration. Avoid foods which spoil easily.

In selecting the picnic or camping site, look for the obvious hazards. If there are any, inform the rest of your party. This is especially important for the children.

Take a supply of drinking water so it won't be necessary to drink water that might be contaminated.

Take a first aid kit along. Include necessary items for treating cuts, burns and snake bite. Insect repellent should also be included.

If planning a cookout, take along a pair of heavy gloves, hot pads or such items necessary for handling hot cooking implements.

The place to build a camp fire should be free of leaves, dry branches, sticks or other material that can easily catch fire.

Use paper, small kindling or approved igniter fluid to start fires.

Never use gasoline or other highly flammable material.

Knives, hatchets and other sharp instruments should be kept off the ground and stored in a safe place out of children's reach.

Don't leave fires unattend. Completely extinguish fire when leaving so there will be no danger of it being fanned to life again.

April set as child abuse prevention month

Officials warn that understanding your child's mentality may prevent abuse

Army Family Advocacy Program

Each year many thousands of children are abused or neglected by their parents or others, such as caregivers, who are responsible for their care, according to Rebecca Welch, Army Family Advocacy Program manager. These children are burned, beaten, kicked or punched; they are sexually assaulted or emotionally injured. They lack adequate food, clothing, shelter or care.

Welch states that most people who abuse children are normally under stress and feel they cannot cope. They may be parents who expect far too much from their very young children, and caregivers who don't know very much about normal child development. They may be angry, immature individuals who were abused when they were children. In most cases, they also are people who love children, and who want to be good parents and caregivers, but who just can't - or don't - know how.

There are four main types of abuse that each of us needs to be able to identify. The first is physical abuse such as burning, kicking, biting, punching and hitting a child. Physical abuse is easy to identify because you can see welts, bruises, cuts, burn marks, etc. Sexual abuse, however, is not very evident.

This is when an adult uses the child to meet his/her sexual needs through such activities as fondling, rape, sodomy, and using the child in pornographic pictures or films.

Emotional maltreatment includes blaming, belittling, ridiculing and constantly ignoring a child's needs. Neglect occurs when the parent or caregiver fails to provide the child with food, clothing, medical attention or supervision.

Welch also stated that preventing child abuse requires much more than laws and a response system; it requires a commitment on the part of all of us, sai d Welch.

Parenting can be the toughest job a person ever has. The daily pressures of child care, combined with a lack of knowledge about child development, and compounded by a sense of isolation can lead to abuse, sai d Welch.

All of us must be concerned with this growing problem, says Welch. When you see a child who gives cause for concern, take a second look. Think about the possibility of child abuse. You may find abuse by observing the child, the parent, or the parent and child together, said Welch.

Every one of us needs to become involved when we notice a child or family in distress.

Raising children is a difficult and demanding task. Few are able to accomplish it without support from others. Rather than limiting our energies to reforming child welfare systems, perhaps we all need to give thought to reformulating our own personal commitment to preventing child abuse, sai d Welch.

What can we as individuals do?

Certainly we can report any case in which we consider a child to be at serious risk of harm due to maltreatment, said Welch. And we can repeatedly report if we think the initial response is inadequate. However, we need to feel equally comfortable, perhaps even obligated, to offer personal assistance to families in stress - friends, neighbors, or relatives. This might involve being available to listen to the parent's problems over a cup of coffee, offering to take the child for an hour or two while the parent resolves an immediate crisis, suggesting a self-help or parent support group. In short, we can help break down the fierce isolation some parents experience, help them feel that they are not alone, help them with the stresses of parenting and help to like them up with resources in the community. We also need to be aware of our own parenting inadequacies and be willing to reach out for help for ourselves, sa d Welch.

April is Child Abuse Prevention Month and Month of the Military Child. This combination gives our community a unique opportunity to highlight prevention activities as we celebrate our families and children.

Artist gives workshops on technique

Columbus College

Performing artists frequently practice techniques to improve their bodies' range of expression. Today at 12:30 p.m. in Columbus College's Davidson Student Center auditorium, the established Alexander Technique will be introduced by a former Julliard School of Music instructor.

Ron Dennis, a private consultant with offices in Atlanta and Athens, will demonstrate how the technique rids the body of unconscious habits which upset balance, jumble coordination, and disturb overall functioning.

Dennis began his study of the Alexander Technique while serving as principal clarinet in the Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra in the early 1970s. After learning its value in meeting the demands of professional performance, he became certified in 1979 at the American Center for the Alexander Technique in New York where he developed a private practice while teaching at the Julliard School of Music.

He is the first person in the area certified to teach the technique, which has been used since 1894 to teach people how to better use their bodies to improve speech, to speed learning, and to dissolve obstacles to growth. Instrumentalists, vocalists, actors, and dancers use the technique to refine their art and to increase their range of expression.

Post facilities offer R&R for everyone

By Richard Brill

Special to The Bayonet

Do you have to be a member of the military to take advantage of the recreational and service oriented facilities on Fort Benning?

Most post facilities are available for use by more than just active duty soldiers.

Here's the run down on who can use what when on Fort Benning.

Unlimited use of the Army and Air Force Exchange facilities is available to all active duty, Reserve, National Guard and retired personnel, said AAFES Retail Manager Steven Collins. Members of the Reserve and National Guard are no longer required to show their Leave and Earnings Statements, he added.

Dependents with identification cards are also authorized full privileges, Collins said.

Post civilians, which includes Department of the Army, Non-Appropriated Fund, contract employees and their family members, are not authorized to use exchange facilities, with the exception of snack bars, the cafeteria in Infantry Hall and other restaurant type facilities, said Exchange Manager Edward Wheeler.

DOD employees who are on Temporary Duty to Fort Benning and have travel orders and evidence of occupancy of government quarters, may, however, use exchange facilities.

Use of post gas stations is limited to military personnel and dependents with a valid I.D. card.

Most Community Activities, however, can be used by post civilians, said Marketing Chief Brian Smith.

Facilities that post civilians may use any time include the Officers Club for grades GS-7 and UA-7 or above, golf course, bowling centers, education and learning centers, and the Volunteer Resources Center.

The Youth Center, Youth Pool, Main Youth Activity Gym and the child development centers are available for use by post civilians and their family members on a space-available basis.

The Arts and Crafts Center, auto shops, car washes, laundromat, gymnasiums, baseball fields, the Rental/Lease Office, Uchee Creek Recreation Center and the Information, Ticketing, and Registration Office can also be used, but Smith added that some facilities, such as the gymnasiums, may give priority to military personnel at certain times.

He suggested calling the specific activity for complete information on usage if you are a post civilian.

TRADOC reduces CFC use

TRADOC News Service

Training and Doctrine Command environmentalists and engineers have accelerated efforts to replace and control the use of ozone-depleting chloroflourocarbons — called CFCs.

The action follows President George Bush's announcement Feb. 11 banning production of CFCs by 1995; 2000 had been the target.

CFCs are in freon for refrigerators and air conditioners and are in electronic equipment cleaners. Until 1978 they were used as propellants in such products as hair sprays.

"CFCs were thought to be harmless," said Bob Anderson, a TRADOC environmental and natural resource specialist. "They didn't react with other materials. People could inhale them and not be affected because CFCs are inert, like helium."

But CFCs have a more insidious effect — when released they rise to the upper atmosphere and destroy the ozone layer. The ozone layer protects all life forms from the sun's ultraviolet rays .

Chlorine in CFCs causes a breakdown of ozone in the upper atmosphere. One chlorine molecule can destroy 100,000 ozone molecules.

Scientists estimate that a 10 percent loss of the ozone layer over a particular area results in a more than 20 percent rise in skin cancers. Human immune systems will be affected. Increased UV radiation can also kill plankton, the basic organisms in the oceans' food chain.

Although the military's use of CFC-113 in electronic cleaner accounted for up to two-thirds of that CFC in 1990, the Department of Defense used only 2 to 3 percent of all ozone-depleting materials in the United States that year.

Bush moved up the ban after the National Aeronautics and Space Administration reported in January that ozone depletion was more widespread than previously thought; NASA estimates there is a 4 to 8 percent loss in ozone over the continental United States.

TRADOC engineers are now creating a plan to reduce CFC use 30 percent by 1995, and stop completely in the early 2000s.

"The plan includes replacing window air conditioners, refrigerators and cleaning supplies," said Bill Dancy, an engineer. "The challenge is to find alternatives to CFCs that are not toxic to humans and do not harm the environment.'

CFCs can still be used after 1995, but, on July 1 the Clean Air Recovery act makes it illegal to vent CFCs into the air.

"Violators can receive fines and even prison sentences," Anderson said.

An Environmental Protection Agency law requires workers who vent, repair and dispose of freon-from stationary air conditioners to be EPA-certified by July. All others must be EPA-certified by January.

TRADOC installations have contracted with companies that teach EPA-approved certification courses to train people to drain, capture and recycle old freon.

The U.S. Army Ordnance School has incorporated EPA-approved training into its Utility Repairer Course, according to Donald Anderson, assistant director of the school s tactical support equipment department located at Fort Belvoir, Va.

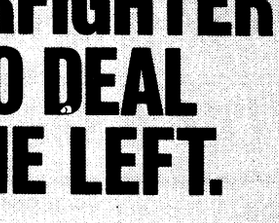
"All soldiers going through the course will be trained to recover freon," Anderson said. "We also have three teams traveling to Army posts to train and certify other repairers."

"Finding a substitute for CFCs that is compatible with human life is especially critical," said Don Waling, TRADOC fire protection chief. The most efficient and nontoxic fire suppressants are Halons, products similar to CFCs. Halons are hydrocarbons that contain bromine. Because of this they are three to 10 times more harmful to the ozone than any CFC products.

"We have to keep in mind the fire extinguishers on aircraft and armored vehicles. Those are confined spaces so any substitute for Halon must be safe for people and the environment," he said.

Industry is working to develop alternatives to Halon and other CFCs, Waling said. Until then, though, CFC products must be used and handled with care.

What's the difference between a parent who hits his child and a parent who doesn't?



About ten seconds.

Ten seconds. Not much to ask of yourself, if it keeps you from striking out at your child. So, the next time you feel things getting out of hand, don't hit. Count. To ten...or to twenty...or whatever it takes for you to realize that hurting your child isn't the answer. We can help, too: For a free booklet, write to "Good Discipline," P. O. Box 2866D, Chicago, IL 60690.

Take time out. Don't take it out on your child.

Loyd to host parents breakfast

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

In celebration of April as the Month of the Military Child, Loyd School is hosting a Soldier Appreciation Breakfast Thursday to show its regard for the school's military parents.

"It is our way of honoring just the soldier parents. Many times these are the ones we don't get to see because they're in the field or on temporary duty," said Dr. Judy Gilliam, Loyd School principal,

The event is the school's fourth annual breakfast, and last year about 150 people attended.

Gilliam said that Maj. Gen. Jerry White, post commander, will speak on the parent-school connection.

The breakfast is free to all of Loyd's soldier parents and will begin at 7 a.m. at the school.

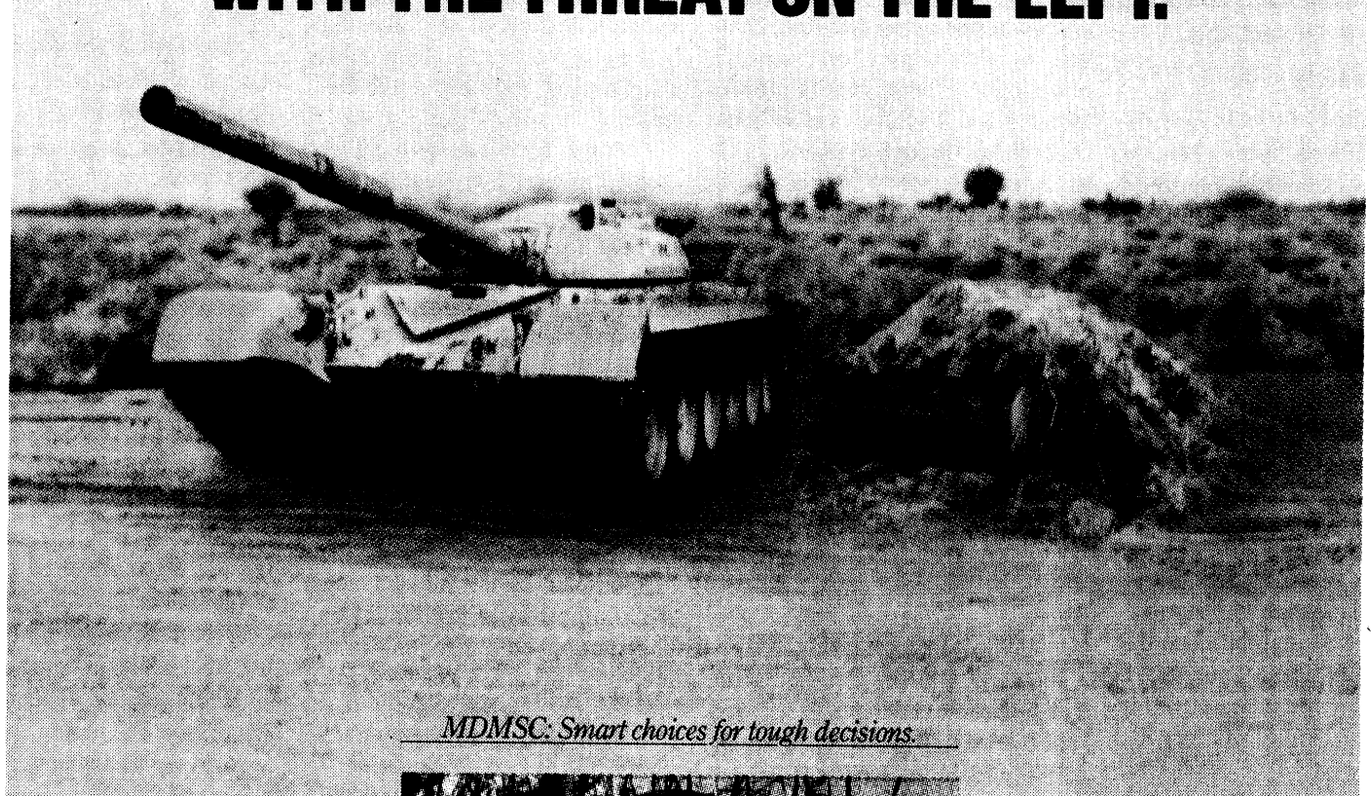
OF THE TWO, TODAY'S WARFIGHTER IS BETTER PREPARED TO DEAL WITH THE THREAT ON THE LEFT.



MDMSC: Smart choices for tough decisions.

Sand, earth and timber. These are the makings of the common bunker. They've been around for centuries, but surprisingly, today's warfighter still has no easy way to defeat these obstacles.

What is needed is a Bunker Defeat Munition (BDM). This weapon will offer the stand-off capability to immediately defeat and destroy battlefield obstacles, including enemy earth and timber fortifications, masonry walls and light armor.

Now, McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Company (MDMSC) and Talley Defense Systems have a bunker buster munition that offers just what is needed—the SMAW-D (Shoulder-launched Multipurpose Assault Weapon-Disposable). The SMAW-D is lightweight, compact, disposable and most of all, lethal. In short, the SMAW-D is the best way for today's warfighter to effectively deal with everything from the newest weaponry to the oldest obstacles on the battlefield.

43rd Engineers go to Costa Rica

Unit provides assistance

By Allen C. Estes
43rd Engineer Battalion

Less than a year after redeploying from Operation Desert Storm, soldiers of the 43rd Engineer Battalion are deployed overseas again. This time, the soldiers are in a much different environment — the jungles of Costa Rica.

The 170 soldiers from Fort Benning arrived in late January to begin a four-month deployment for training. This nation assistance operation will aid the government and the people of Costa Rica.

In order to accomplish the mission, the 43rd organized a task force of soldiers from Company C and Headquarters Company. The Task Force is named Task Force Siempre Listo, which means "Always Ready."

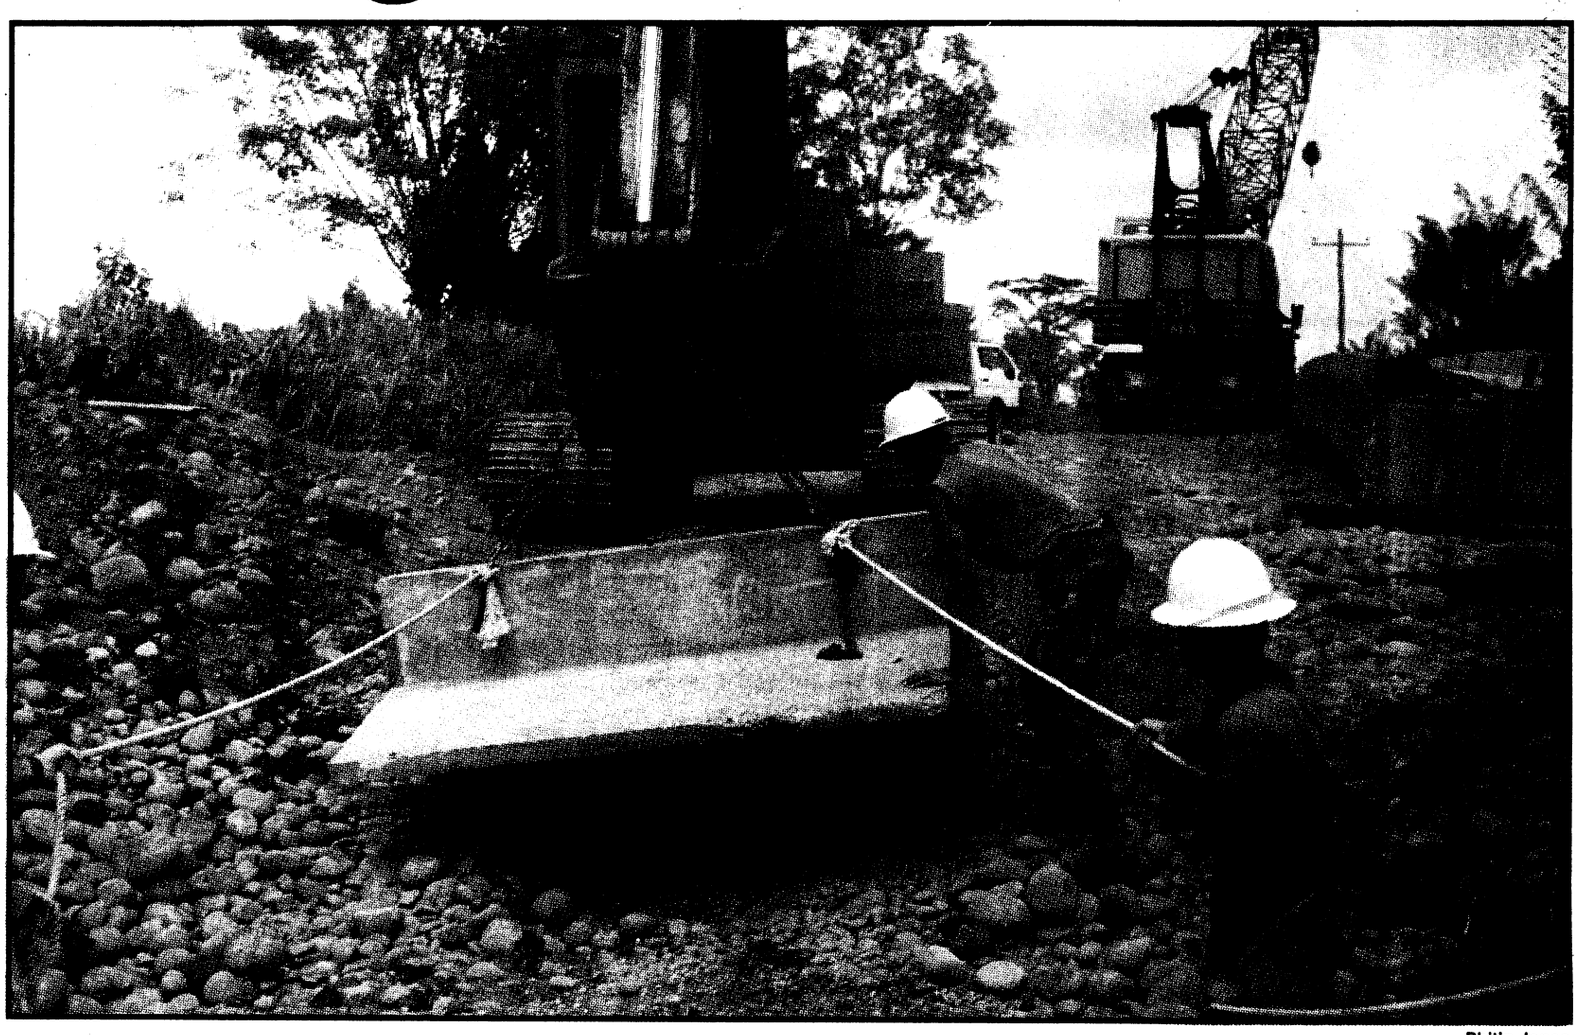
"We took the name 'Siempre Listo' because it is the 36th Engineer Group motto," said Lt. Col. Philip Jones, battalion commander of the 43rd. "Also, it represents the attitude of all the soldiers deploying to Costa Rica — always ready to help others as ambassadors for the United States."

The 43rd Engineer Battalion's construction projects in the provinces of Limon and Heredia are having a visible effect on the Costa Rican people. The Earthmoving Platoon of Company C is constructing four bridges and a 2.8-kilometer road over a previously impassable area which will link the towns of Puerto Viejo and Zapote. The Zapote road will save farmers and merchants numerous hours of travel time over the longer more treacherous route that is currently used, said Jones.

The 2nd Platoon of Company C has already completed a culvert, a 20-meter bridge, and a multi-tiered dock for the citizens of Puerto Viejo on the banks of a river that rises 20 to 30 feet during the rainy season. The new dock will increase tourism and trade since more boats can visit the town. The 1st Platoon completed two concrete bridges and is currently building a three-room school in the town of Bribri adjacent to an existing school. The Costa Rican children routinely gather around the project site and watch the American soldiers work on their new school.

To support their operation, the 43rd Engineer Battalion has constructed a full service, 360-person base camp consisting of approximately 30 tents on elevated plywood pads outside of Puerto Viejo. The base camp includes a mess hall, aid station, showers, small PX, motor pool, communications center, and recreation center. The task force established local contracts of laundry service, waste disposal, and fruit/roll supplements for their rations.

Liaison teams from Fort Benning play a critical role in supporting the remote base camp. Crew Leader 1st Lt. Mark Youmans, 608th Ordnance Company,in Panama, ensures that rations, repair parts, and PX items get shipped to the task force. Capt. Chuck Hawkinson, 36th Engineer Group, heads the team in San Jose that arranges local purchases, communicates with the U.S. Embassy and coordinates the travel for the Reserve component units that arrive and depart in two-week cycles.



Philip Jones

Soldiers of the 43rd Engineer Battalion guide a bridge support in to place as part of Task Force Siempre Listo in Costa Rica.

Exercise Camino de la Paz 92 has been particularly rewarding for the soldiers for the 43rd Engineer Battalion. Spc. David Pannell, a carpenter in Company C, stated that "The Costa Ricans accept us open-heartedly. They don't have all the conveniences we have and appreciate the work we're doing for them. It's nice helping them out — especially with the schools." Spc. Keith Thomas, a Company C electrician from Chicago, noted that "The language barrier just makes you more motivated to want to communicate with them and understand their culture."

The projects offer high quality training that would not be available on Fort Benning. Capt. Matt Clarke, commander of Company C, described the exercise as "real life, wartime training which is helping to preserve peace." The deployment has been a tremendous challenge for the leadership of the 43rd Engineer Battalion. The construction project planning, movement of people and vehicles, coordination for support, and acquisition of material and services tested the commander and their staffs. Maj. Richard Nazario, executive officer, 43rd Engineer Battalion, and task force commander cited the command of this 800-person task force as "the most rewarding experience in my 15 years in the Army." He said he needed both his training as an engineer and as a foreign area officer to be successful.

The main body will return on May 1 and the trail party on May 15. They will leave behind the satisfaction and esprit that only comes from hard work, quality training, and helping our friends in another country, according to soldiers on the task force .

Sgt. Jimmy Watkins, a carpenter in Company C from Scooba, Mississippi, noted that "for a young soldier just coming into the Army, this is the best thing that could happen."

First Latin officer joins local AUSA

Daniel Maloney
School of Americas

The Chattahoochee Valley-Fort Benning Chapter of the Association of the United States Army recently added the first Latin American officer to its membership.

Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, a native of Vina del Mar, Chile, is currently serving a two-year tour as assistant commandant for the School of the Americas.

"When I received information about the target of the organization I thought it would be good to join that organization," Molina said.

The position of assistant commandant is a selected position within the school.

During his tour, the assistant commandant and his family have an opportunity to become members of the Army family and the Fort Benning community.

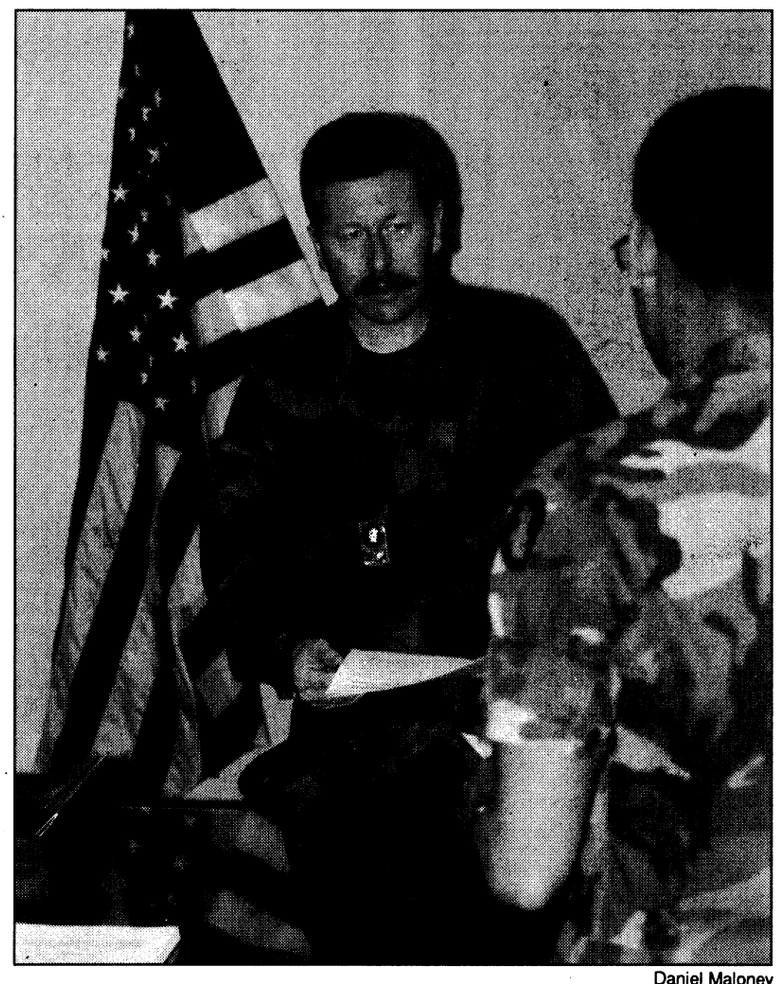
In the spirit of full participation, Molina has decided to become a part of his new community.

"When you are serving in another army, you should take in all of the activities of that new environment."

"I also think it is a very good association because it is a help to the soldiers and has different systems where soldiers can receive some help."

Molina's introduction to AUSA actually started before he even arrived at SOA.

"Last year I was receiving publications about the U.S. Army. When I found out I was going to be the new assistant commandant, I received more information, to include the magazine of the AUSA."



Daniel Maloney

Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, assistant commandant of SOA, discusses his article for the school's magazine.

Upon arriving at the school, Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos E. Legoas, of SOA, assisted Molina in joining AUSA.

Molina assumed his position in January so he will have time to enjoy a number of AUSA activities.

However, when his tour ends he hopes his membership can continue.

"If it is possible and the organization allows, of course. If I continue in the organization I would have a lot of different information about the U.S. Army and life in the United States."

According to Molina, life in the United States and in particular at Fort Benning is good.

"Fort Benning is very good for the school because it provides the necessary support to our training activities."

In addition, Molina is impressed with the support Columbus has provided to the school, especially the Hosts of Latin Americans program or HOLA, which hosts students, instructors and their families.

A Pershing serves again

Grandson wants to make a name for himself

By Patrice Dawson
U.S. Army Infantry Training Center

Among the ranks of soldiers in Company E, 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, U. S. Army Infantry Training Center is the great-great- grandson of Army Gen. John Joseph "Blackjack" Pershing.

Pvt. 1 John Joseph Pershing, 21, said he joined the National Guard because of the lack of employment at home and to see if he wanted military career. Because of admiration for his great-great-grandfather, and the mentoring received from his drill sergeant, Staff Sgt. Stephen C. Foster, he said the decision was not hard to make.

"Blackjack" Pershing received the highest rank ever given to any American Army officer, General of the Army. Pershing is most remembered for his pursuit of Pancho Villa and rebels into Mexico and commanding the American expeditionary forces in Europe during World War I. The nickname "Blackjack" developed when he commanded an all-black unit.

Because drill sergeant Foster made such impact on Pershing's life, he said "I want to be discharged from the National Guard, enlist in the regular Army, come back to Fort Benning for Airborne and Drill Sergeant school and be a drill sergeant for this unit."

Pershing credits his drill sergeant with stripping him down and building him back up.

Pvt. 1 John J. Pershing prepares to bury a mine.

"I was mentally and physically soft ... I still have a way to go, but he's making a man out of me." Pershing said he is eagerly awaiting his trip home to Floreffe, Pa. to spend lots of time with his niece, Kristin Elizabeth Naugoe.

"I want to make my parents, Catherine Yandrlic and John Joseph Pershing proud of me," he said. "I might not ever be as great of a soldier as my great-great-grandfather, but I'm proud to be a soldier. I want to be the best person I can be and start making my own name."

Infantry magazine offers a host of articles, information during March, April

Infantry Magazine

In the March-April 1992 issue of Infantry, Lt. Col. Thomas R. Rozman and Lt. Col. William A. Saunders Jr. describe a case study that demonstrates ways in which leaders can meet their training requirements in spite of meager resources.

The article, "An Exercise in Leadership," discusses an Reserve Officers' Training Corps instructor group, but the same principles can be adapted to any organization faced with the same challenges.

Another feature article, "Command and Control of LOGPAC Resupply," describes the planning process necessary to ensure effective command and control of resupply operations

Information about Infantry magazine, including subscription rates and writers guidelines, is available from Editor, P.O. Box 2005, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905-0605 or call 545-2350. The editorial and subscription offices are in Building 1827 at the corner of Marchant and Ingersoll streets.

Ambassador to speak at Columbus College

School of The Americas

This year's speaker at the 10th annual John B. Amos Lecture Series will be Ambassador Armando Valladares, U.S. representative to the United Nations Human Rights Commission and founder of the Valladares Foundation, a non-profit human rights organization.

Valladares will speak at the Davidson Student Center Auditorium, Columbus College, at 12:30 p.m., Thursday. Admission is free.

Employed as a civil servant in Cuba's revolutionary government, Valladares was sentenced to 30 years in a Cuban prison.

During his confinement, Valladares refused to participate in political "rehabilitation" or deny his religious convictions and belief in democratic ideals.

He spent part of his imprisonment on the Isle of Pines, a forced labor camp, and was subjected to 46 days without food. He subsequently fell prey to polyneuropathy and was confined to a wheelchair for five years.

During this time Valladares wrote his first book, "From My Wheelchair." Smuggled to his wife, the book was translated and published in various languages.

Amnesty International adopted him as a "prisoner of conscience" and several governments began to urge Fidel Castro to release him.

In 1982, after 22 years as a political prisoner, Valladares was released at the urging of French President Francois Miterrand.

Valladares has continued to work for the release of his fellow political prisoners in Cuba, as well as other human rights causes.

In 1988, he was awarded the "Honoris Causa" Doctorate in Humane Letters by the University of Miami.

In addition to his first book, Valladares also wrote "Against All Hope," an account of life in Castro's prisons.

A reception will follow the lecture.

TRADOC establishes hot line

TRADOC News Service

1-800-SOLDIERS is the new number for soldiers and commanders to call if they have ideas for modernizing what a soldier wears, carries or consumes in a tactical environment.

Officials with the Army Training and Doctrine Command's System Manager Soldier program say they are always seeking recommendations for lightening the soldier's load and improving the soldier's quality of life in the field.

The hot line also welcomes recommendations for improving battlefield capabilities of lethality, command and control, survivability, sustainment and mobility.

Among the suggestions TSM-S is working on are a lightweight tripod for the M-249 SAW, optical sights for light weapons, pen lights for issues to individual soldiers and intermediate cold/wet gloves.

Callers may continue to reach TSM-S at 545-1245 until the new toll-free number becomes operational in early spring.

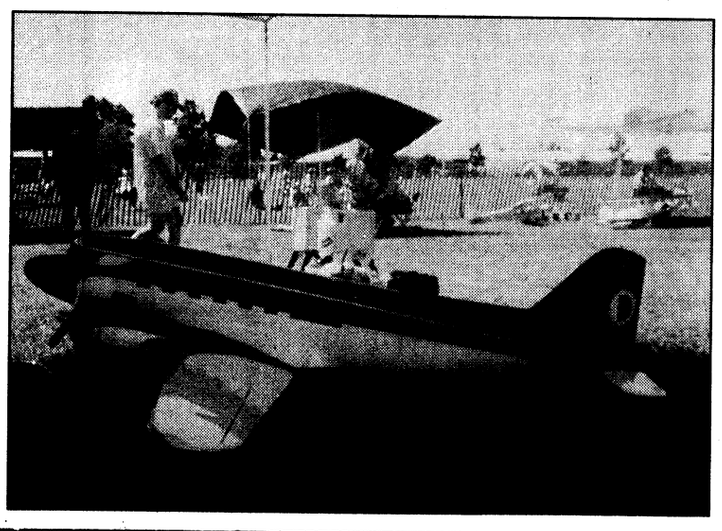
PET OF THE WEEK

This stray, male dog is looking for a home. He was discovered running loose at Camp Darby and brought here. If you would like to adopt him or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283). Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.



Flying Club Event Provides Fun and Fund for Needy Children

The "Greatest Little Air Show in Dixie" is coming to the Columbus/ Phenix City again this year, on Saturday, April 18 from 9 AM to 5 PM, sponsored by the Radio Controlled Model Airplane Club or the Flying C's.

The 60 acre site, near Marvyn, Alabama will see 60 or more pilots, flying radio-controlled airplanes, of 8 foot size or more. This Giant Aircraft Show began with 12 pilots and grew to over 44 pilots and hundreds of spectators last year. There will be FREE admission to all with hot dogs, candy, raffles, and surprises. A special salute will go to the oldest and youngest vets.

There is more to this event and the Club. The parking fees and profits will go to a special fund that provides Christmas for children in need. The food and additional funds are donated by local merchants and the local RC pilots who participate in a special Toys for Kids Show in October, anticipating needs of over 100 children by Christmas. This Club also has expanded their charitable efforts to include Easter Egg Hunts and Halloween events.

Education is another focus of the club, enticing young adults to participate in flying activities with a training plane complete with radio, special training and expert instructions. This useful education includes electronics, battery technology, radios, aerodynamics, aircraft structures, adhesives, ext., as well as self-gratification and improved self esteem.

Enjoy watching these larger radio controlled aircraft on April 18 from 9 AM to 5 PM. Bring a chair, camera, family and friends. Take Victory Drive (280) to Phenix City junction of 280/80, go west 20 miles to Mile Marker 201. Turn South (left) on County 65 at Fina Mini-Mart and follow the signs for two more miles.

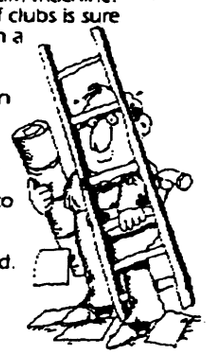
How to make money in three easy steps.

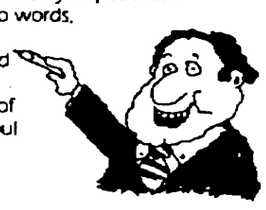
Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.



Step 2.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!



Step 3.

Contact classified. Give us a call. You'll cash in on the speed and effectiveness of the dynamic classified marketplace. Each day, highly motivated readers are seeking services and solutions for a variety of needs. Turn to the classified pages, and you'll turn your item to be sold into money! It's as easy as 1-2-3!

Debbie Allen has a "Stompin'"time directing CBS musical-drama

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

If the era of the film musical seems to have passed, a multi-talented artist is doing her best to bring it back.

She still might be known primarily as a performer, via the movie and TV-series versions of "Fame" and such Broadway shows as "Sweet Charity" and "West Side Story," but Debbie Allen also is an accomplished behind-the-scenes talent. Besides producing and directing the NBC show "A Different World" in recent seasons, she also has choreographed the dance numbers on Academy Award telecasts (including the most recent edition), and she also directed and choreographed the Disney-produced 1989 TV musical "Polly!" and its 1990 sequel. This week, Emmy and Golden Globe Award recipient Allen stays in that genre as the director of "Stompin' at the Savoy," Sunday's new CBS "drama with music" about four young black women living in Harlem as World War II begins ... with the famous Savoy Ballroom offering them chances to forget their respective troubles for a while.

Esther (played by Emmy-winner Lynn Whitfield, of "The Josephine Baker Story") wants to win enough money to open her own beauty shop; Pauline (Vanessa Williams, the former Miss America now on the charts with her hit tune "Save the Best for Last") is struggling to launch a singing career; Alice ("A Different World's" Jasmine Guy) finds her love life hampered by racism; and Dorothy (Vanessa Bell Calloway, of "Equal Justice") also must deal with racial matters when she falls for a white actor (John Di Aquino). Also prominent in the cast are Mario ("New Jack City") Van Peebles, Michael ("Hill Street Blues") Warren, two-time Daytime Emmy honoree Darnell ("All My Children") Williams, and Dawnn ("A Different World") Lewis as veteran singing star Ella Fitzgerald.

Though Allen makes an appearance in "Stompin' at the Savoy," as one of Esther's customers, her main duties on the film remained focused on everything else that went on. That precluded her from handling the choreography herself, but she had expert assistance, since actual 1930s Savoy dancers Norma Miller and Frank Manning guided the actors through those paces. "As much as I choreograph, and I think I'm really good at that," the energetic and friendly Allen reflects, "I wanted to have the authentic steps that were done at that time. I had never really learned those from anyone, though I've done my own versions of those routines. Norma is living in Las Vegas now, and she just turned 72; I had seen her on a tape doing the jitterbug, and it was just amazing to me. When I called her, it turned out she had been watching my career all this time, and she said she'd been hoping she could be of some help to me. I said, 'Honey, get on that plane!' It was like having a history lesson or being at a dance camp, because she just embodies those times and what people went through."

Indeed, Allen was grateful to have such a reference beside her, since she had to look back more than a half-century to re-create the period accurately. "I had to redefine my sensibilities of it," she confirms, "so that I could properly design and direct the movie, and be able to talk to my actors and help shape their characters. If this was 1939, and they were from 19 to 25 years old they would have been born in the '20s; that was when women's suffrage came to the forefront, so what was going on socially and politically - and certainly what was happening for black people - was extremely important. The Savoy Ballroom was the place where people could live out their fantasies and come out of those hard, depressing times. All bets were off in terms of race or economic situation, and it was only about living and breathing that music, that big-band sound. Dancing was the universal language there, and that concept is still so appealing and overwhelming to me today."

The real Savoy Ballroom opened in 1926 and closed in 1958, so Allen also had to oversee a painstaking re-creation of the site on a Wilmington, N.C. soundstage ... and on "a very tight budget," she reports. "When I took on the project, I had tried to pitch it as a feature film. I sent the script (written by Beverly M. Sawyer) to some movie studios, but nobody wanted to bite. I think it was because they didn't feel it would be a financial success, but it's pretty obvious now that the studios should take chances. Who would have known that (last year's drama) 'Boyz N the Hood' would do what it did, or even something like 'Home Alone'? Anyway, CBS did bite, because (network movie chief) John Matoian was a big fan of the script. Bringing in the actors was a big job, but most of them were either friends of mine or people I had worked with before. It was a great company, and I remember someone asking me, 'How are you going to handle all those women?' I said, 'Honey, calm down. This is not gonna be a problem.' It wasn't, either. There wasn't even one little catfight." (Allen adds that she would have been glad to cast her sister, Phylicia Rashad, but the latter was busy taping NBC's "Cosby Show" when "Savoy" was in production.)

"Stompin' at the Savoy" is solid evidence of Allen's stated belief that "The musical film is a rare, but still very alive, breed that is just ready to break out all over again. I don't think it has been hampered by the (music-)video market, but at this point, how many more videos can you do? Let's get back to the long form. When I see the long videos Michael Jackson does, there's the impetus to do a (full-length) movie, and I think the American public is ripe for the picking." As enthusiastic as she remains about the genre, though, Allen maintains it is enormously complicated to work within: "I shot the first 'Polly!' in 19 days and had four musical numbers, and after that did so well (ratings-wise), I had 17 days and six numbers with the second one. For this, I had less money, but needed even more production value. I shot it in 20 days and it was a challenge all the way, but the cast and crew were so united in what we were doing, I started to feel really talented and good about my work as a director. We all came out of the movie like a new family, and we've recommitted ourselves to a friendship that I think will last a long time."

'Pump Boys' is a don't-miss play

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

REVIEW

Come — take a spin on Highway 57, rest at a certain South Georgia truck stop, meet the "Pump Boys" of L.M. and Jim Shell Station and the Dinettes of the Double Cupp Diner. It's a fun trip.

The cute and spunky Cupp waitress, Rhetta — rhythm instrument (Jan Crawford) and Prudie — choreographer/rhythm instrument (Janet Roddy) will win you over in song and dance, but remember you better "Be Good or Be Gone" and bring a big tip. Have a good time at the diner and then go fishing with the Shell auto mechanics, Mark — bass/lead guitar (Robert Alford), Eddie — piano (Josh Leuknardt) and join in on their fishermen's prayer.

"Pump Boys and Dinettes" opened as the second play of the 1991-92 Springer Opera House studio theater season at the Springer Actors' Arena, 1022 1st Ave., last week. And opened it did — as a roaring lion with nearly half of its performances already sold out.

"It's great to see this much interest in Pump Boys," admitted Springer Artistic Director Paul R. Pierce. "We know there is going to be a problem with availability of seats, given the small number of performances, but we're already talking about scheduling additional shows later on. The problem is that the next weekend is Easter, and we haven't gotten a feel for whether folks will be willing to come out for the Thursday, Friday and Saturday before Easter. I recommend that patrons arrive at 7 p.m. when the doors open to ensure that they can be seated."

Pierce added that the Springer has booked the show at Fort Benning for a dinner theater at the Officers' Club on April 25.

The show is a cross between musical theater and comedy cabaret. A back roads country western musical with a series of comic sketches, dancing and music, music, music, there is a variety of music, but primarily a musical feast for country music lovers. Four Pump Boys singers double as on-stage musicians. The dinettes singers double as players of rhythm instruments.

Jim, the vocalist who doubles as a first-time director (Steve) is a veteran actor and well-known to Springer audiences.

Pump Boys became a kind of good ol' boy cult show ever since its Tony Award inception in New York 10 years ago.

Some local Pump Boys aficionados were so eager to see the Springer's production that they just bought out two of the theater's six performances for private parties and another group bought out half of the opening show. That left only four public shows: April 2, 3 and Saturday. The final scheduled performance was set for Saturday at 8 p.m. Valentini, however, made an announcement that holdover shows will be performed Sunday at 2:30 p.m. and April 17 at 8 p.m.

Patrons are invited to bring picnic box dinners and claim their tables at 7 p.m.

The Springer Actors' Arena and the Pump Boys and Dinettes musical creates a warm and cozy atmosphere much like a gathering of relatives and friends at a reunion, picnic and concert, while being entertained by beloved entertainers — a place where you can let your hair down and have a hand clapping, foot stomping, hooting good time.

Come — bring your dinner — drinks are available at the concession stand and keep your ticket stub for a chnce at a door prize. Listen to the great music from all the cast. Josh's piano playing gets better each time I hear him play. I liked all the singing, but I especially liked the duet by the tapping waitresses (Jan and Janet), the solo guitar accompaniment, and the hilarious surprise by Ed in the second act. If you need additional references, contact Lois Sutton and Nilsa Summey, my clapping partners on Saturday. Nilsa wasn't prejudiced, though Ed is her hubby.

The production staff must also be commended; they helped the cast and band be at the top of their craft.

You've got more time — don't miss it.

8th ID colors to remain at Fort Benning

Army chief of staff marks occasion

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Infantry Conference culminated April 9 with the inactivation of the 8th Infantry Division (Mechanized) in a ceremony on York Field that included Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan.

The division colors returned to the United States after 38 years of service overseas and will remain on permanent display at Fort Benning.

"We proudly receive the colors of one of our great divisions, a division that returns victorious after over 30 years of fighting the Cold War in Europe," said Post Commander Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White before accepting the division colors from Sullivan.

During the ceremony, the 8th Infantry Division colors were passed from Command Sgt. Maj. Gene C. McKinney, former division command sergeant major, to Maj. Gen. John P. Otjen, former division commander, to Sullivan, which signified the inactivation of the division, and then to White, which signified the unit's lineage and honors will continue with the display of the colors on post.

The Infantry Band struck up the 8th Division song as a final tribute, followed by remarks from Sullivan.

Sullivan credited the fall of communism to the presence of American forces in Europe, including the 8th Infantry Division.

"The first battle of World War III was won without a drop of blood shed in Central Europe. Standing side by side with our NATO allies we achieved victory," he said.

"I am honored and proud to have served with this division and honored once again to return the colors to Fort Benning and the safekeeping of the United States until we are needed again. I appreciate the service and the sacrifice of the soldiers standing behind us and the colors that they represent," Sullivan concluded.

After the ceremony, Sullivan addressed questions from the local media concerning the impact of the downsizing of the Army on Fort Benning.

Sullivan said the downsizing will have little effect on Fort Benning.

"Fort Benning has been an important part of the United States Army since the early 1900s. Fort Benning will continue to be one of the premier posts of the United States Army," he said.

Sullivan added the Army as a whole will be reduced from around 1.5 million soldiers to around 1 million, including active duty, Reserve, and National Guard personnel.

"We can, in fact, remain trained and ready during this period," said Sullivan. It is a challenge, but I think we're up to it. In fact, I know we're up to the challenge, so we'll be smaller, but we will remain effective. And by the way, the measure of effectiveness in this country is victory. It's winning, and that's what the United States Army is all about."

Sullivan said while the Army's size will diminish, its commitment to quality will continue.

"I think you're going to see more of the same: high quality young people coming into a great Army, tough training, leadership development, a doctrine that we understand and can fight with, and modernized equipment; and, in the case of the infantry ... the seeds are really planted here at Fort Benning."

Sullivan said he was impressed with the soldiers and the training he observed during his visit to Fort Benning and added that today's soldiers are just as committed to serving their country as ever.

"The ones I'm seeing are camouflaged up, tough, ready to go, and what I'm seeing are high quality young people who are willing to stand up and serve their country."

Infantrymen discuss future

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

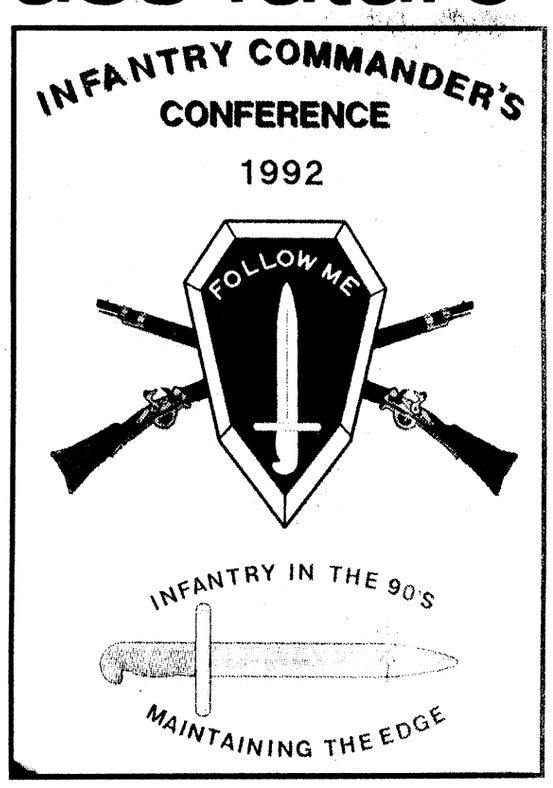
"We have accomplished exactly what I wanted," said Post Commander Maj. Gen Jerry A. White at the close of the 1992 Infantry Commander's Conference, "to get the issues out on the table and to get some professional guidance and discussion."

The conference, held April 8 and 9 in Infantry Hall and devoted to the theme "Infantry in the '90s — Maintaining the Edge," served as a forum for infantry leaders to discuss doctrine, tactics, combat development and weapons, said Col. Gary Jones, chief of the Infantry Proponency Office.

"We wanted each attendee to have a professionally rewarding experience," Jones said regarding the overall goal of the conference.

Jones declared the conference a success.

"This year's Infantry Conference has been tremendously successful by any manner of measurement," said Jones.



"Discussions were positive and upbeat as active, reserve and retired component senior combined arms officers and non-commissioned leadership addressed issues affecting today's Army and future requirements," he added.

According to Maj. Bob Robertson, conference chief, the conference had more than 400 attendees, including Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, commander of the Training and Doctrine Command

New speed limits in effect

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The speed limit on Main Post during the established physical training hours (6 to 7:30 a.m.), Monday through Friday, is 15 mph, effective immediately.

The 15 mph limit was announced in a new post policy issued Monday. The new policy further reiterated that the speed limit is 10 mph when passing individual runners or formations. Both have priority on post during the stated hours, according to the policy memorandum. The following roads are exempt from the new speed limits because all running is banned on those roads.

Posted speed limits remain in effect on these roads:

- 10th Division Road
- Dixie Road, except the portion from Sightseeing Road (Sandy Patch) to Lawson Army Airfield
- Sunshine Road
- Lumpkin Road from Dixie Road to Custer Road
- Custer Road from Benning Road to Eisenhower Exchange

Also, the 82nd Airborne Division Road from Sunshine Road to Bradshaw Road will be closed to traffic from 6 to 7:30 a.m., Monday through Friday for use by formations and individual runners. Kelley Hill is completely closed to traffic during this time.

The 11th Airborne Division Road on Sand Hill is also closed to motorists from 5:30 to 7 a.m., Monday through Saturday.

Air Force training causes loud noise

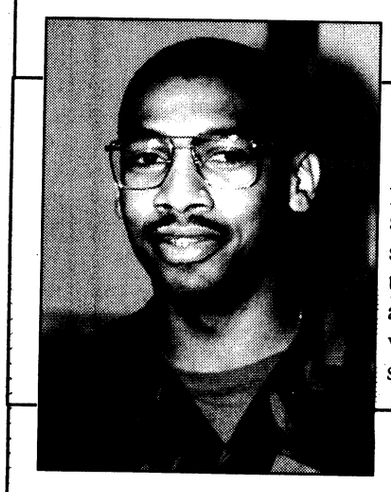
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Twelve Air Force aircraft on a routine training mission Tuesday morning dropped several 500-pound bombs over an authorized impact area in the northern part of Fort Benning. Because of an air inversion and coincidental weather conditions, noise and reverberations from the bombs' impact was noticeable at a greater distance than normal, according to the Air Force detachment at Fort Benning.

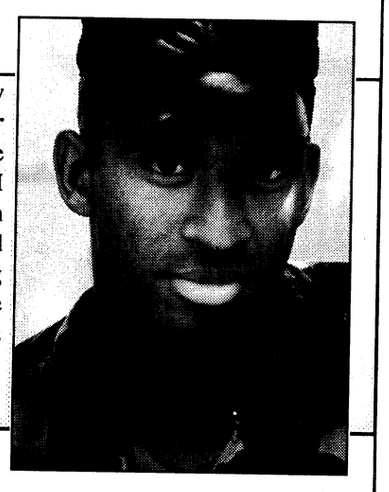
The training was scheduled for 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. However, because of low cloud levels, training was completed at 10:05 a.m.

VARIOUS VOICES

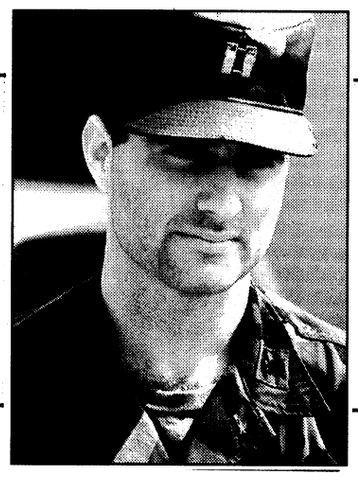
If you could be the commanding general for one day, what would you do?



Staff Sgt. David G. Anderson, Advanced Non-Commissioned Officer Course 2-92— "If I were post commander for a day, I would stop the Military Police from stopping everyone on post and direct them to only stop those persons who are committing actual traffic violations, because a mass check only slows things down on post."

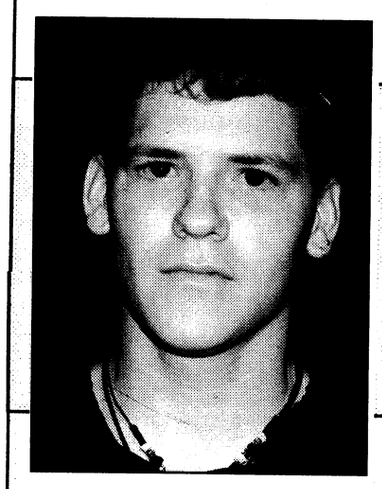


Spc. Linwood Bailey, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "If I were the commanding general for a day, I would improve the family housing on post and make painting, yard and structure repairs, because the housing really needs it. I would also create more recreational facilities and parks for younger family members."

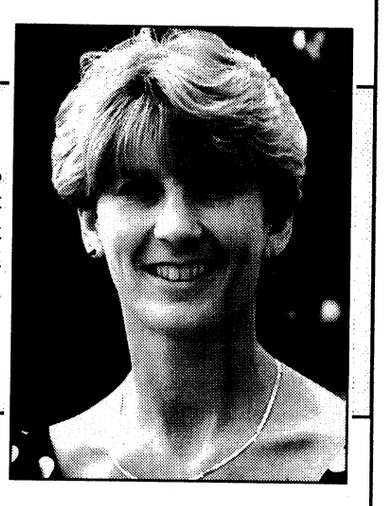


Capt. Stephen R. Bolton, 13th Supply and Service Battalion — "If I were post commander for a day, I would try to reduce the number of traffic violations that occur on post."

Spc. Sharice Brice, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group— "I would create and enforce a policy to allow soldiers to have a half-day off on the first day of every month, so that they could participate in payday activities. That way, soldiers would be assured of having time to take care of important things like bills.



Spc. Robert Winebrenner, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "If I were post commander, I would restrict Physical Training running for individuals as well as formations to designated areas, such as low-traffic side roads and the PT track, instead of allowing running to be done on main streets during PT time."



Cathy Toms, civilian employee, Transition Services, Adjutant General — "If I were post commander for a day, I would change the way civilian employee promotions are handled."

Litterers beware; Snively on patrol

COMMENTARY

Command Specialist Clyde Snively.

Has a nice ring to it. Well, that's what I was for half this day. Some sergeant put me in charge of a police-call detail along a portion of the by-pass.

My command consisted of a platoon of brand-new, eager privates.

In assigning my stretch of real estate, my sergeant said, "It's a high-visibility area, Snively," letting me know my presence would be noted by hundreds of motorists. That was the good news.

The bad news was that those motorists would also note and report any trash I failed to pick up with my crew.

With command comes responsibility. Responsibility to my troops. Responsibility to answering all of their "why" questions.

"Command Specialist Snively," (I always insisted on formality with my troops) Pvt. 1 Marne was the first to whine, "why do people litter?"

"Because they're lazy, slovenly, grubby beings with no consideration for others. Because they're thoughtless, inconsiderate nincompoops who never had to go on police call themselves," I answered, as some swine drove by, yelling and honking and playing his car stereo totally maxed out, letting burger wrappers waft gently to the ground as he flipped them out his car window.

He was gone before I could get his license number.

"Is this what they mean when they say, 'Join the Army and learn a trade?' " Pvt. 1 Markovitz asked sarcastically.

Pvt. 1 Treviso was next with a question.

"Command Specialist Snively, why don't we have those sticks with nails on the end so we don't have to bend over and pick up trash? We could move along faster and we wouldn't have to get our hands so messy.'

"That's a good idea, soldier, and that's probably why we don't get litter poles. Other reasons are 'they' probably think we'd lose the sticks, break the sticks, hurt ourselves with the sticks, jab one of our buddies by fooling around playing knights of the round table or even assault a litterer with the sticks, permanently impaling the lower-life form on top of his pile of trash."

Pvt. 1 Bohlen demanded to know why I, as command specialist, hadn't put the word out to bring gloves.

"You told us to bring everything else in the world, why not work gloves? Look at this grimy, crawling, slithering trash they want us to pick up."

"It's only a million or so ants and beetles on a candy wrapper. Just be quick about it and you'll only get a few on your hands that you can brush off on your uniform,"I told him.

Pvt. 1 Mango was up next.

"I refuse to pick up cigarette butts," he said. "They are filthy, foul and loathsome. They've been in some stranger's mouth who's sucked them, dribbled on them and salivated all over them. I could get AIDS from them. I'm not picking up any cigarette butts," he finished his litany to the cheers of his co-workers.

I had to agree with him. They are pretty gruesome to non-smokers and even smokers, and since I wasn't absolutely sure the AIDS-causing virus could not be transmitted this way, and not wanting a lawsuit filed against me several years hence, I told my soldiers to ignore the cigarette butts. Besides, who's going to see them anyway driving 80 mph on the bypass.

Well, that was my morning in command. It was an exhilarating feeling tempered only by the awesome knowledge that the lives of these privates had been in my hands for four full hours.

Safety on, off the job a must

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Off-the-job safety is a problem every day. Management recognizes the necessity of keeping the worker at full efficiency on the job and has developed safety programs that are effective to this end. The problem is that the worker is under the control of the safety program a comparatively small amount of the total time.

Off-the-job safety can be divided into three general groups recreational, home and transportation-associated activities.

Transportation or motor vehicle accidents account for the greatest number of off-the-job deaths. Regardless of what school of thought is professed in this area, there is one fact that must be conceded — a driver is common to all accidents.

The driver must realize that in operating a motor vehicle, he has many responsibilities. At all times, the driver should know the vehicle and its condition. The driver must evaluate conditions and then drive within limitations. The driver must also obey traffic laws and insist on their enforcement.

Recreational activities offer a multitude of exposure for off-the-job accidents. In this area, drowning is the leading death. The rules of water safety are very clear and should be followed.

The Coast Guard and the Red Cross offer many programs on water safety, and participation in these programs by the water enthusiast should be encouraged.

The modern home can be riddled with hazards. Any one of a number of items in the home can cause serious injury or death. Items such as medicine and cleaning materials can be poisonous to children if swallowed, and poisonous to adults if taken incorrectly or misused.

TRADOC commander commends unit's excellence

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's maintenance section received the Department of the Army Maintenance Award April 8 at the Collins Training Center.

Commander of Training and Doctrine Command Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. presented the Department of the Army award .

"Team work, dedication to duty, and a commitment to excellence got you where you are today," Franks said. "I wish you would tell me your secrets, because we would like to get everyone up to your level," said Franks.

This is the fourth consecutive year the battalion has received this award. It is the only U.S Army maintenance unit to receive the Department of Defense Phoenix Award.

The Maintenance Section of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment has also won the Presidential Unit Citation.

"I am very appreciative of the people that made this happen," said Sam Harvel, battalion general foreman. "I can certainly say that Total Quality Management played a large role in the success of the outfit, and I am sure that if we get the opportunity next year that we will win again."

"This award is a great reflection of how good the maintenance team here is," said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Paul Blaylock, the battalion maintenance technician.

After the presentation, Franks received a tour of the Collins Training Center, home of the 29th Infantry Regiment, and was presented with an honorary Bradley model.

Conference attendees get glimpse at capability exercise

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a Capability Exercise April 8 at Red Cloud Range for attendees of the 1992 Infantry Commander's Conference, which was April 8 and 9 at Fort Benning.

There were several vehicles and weapons on display at the exercise including one of two Stingrays currently in the Army.

The M-2A2 Bradley fighting vehicle, M-966 tow high mobility, multi-purpose wheeled vehicle, 120mm mortar, M-24 sniper weapon, MK 19 automatic grenade launcher, M-60 machine gun, M-249 squad automatic weapon, and the M-16 A3 were the other vehicles or weapons on display.

Two trainer simulators from the 2nd Battalion were on display as well — the tube-launched, optically wire guided missile, also known as TOW, simulation trainer, and the model 70 weaponeer trainer. The two machines are used for recruit training on Sand Hill.

After the weapons demonstration, the guests were invited to fire the weapons used in the demonstration.

The 1st Battalion also conducted a CAPEX April 10, which was attended by Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan.

After the exercise, Sullivan made an on-the-spot advanced promotion for Pfc. Jason Murphy of Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

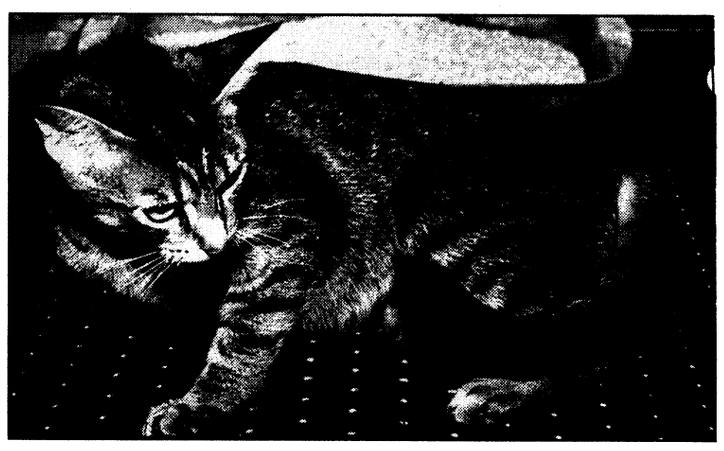
PET OF THE WEEK



This stray, female cat is looking for a home. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283). Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

DEH plans recycling for Earth Day

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The week celebrating April 22's Earth Day will close at Fort Benning with a "grand finale" of recycling April 25, as Goodwill workers and Directorate of Engineering and Housing volunteers staff a glass, plastic, aluminum can and newspaper recycling center at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

According to Morris Armstrong, who handles solid waste and recycling efforts on post for the Environmental Management Office of DEH, everyone on post and retirees in the area are encouraged to take part and bring in items for recycling that day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The observance originated in 1970 to draw attention to the need for environmental protection so that the earth will be left a better place for everyone.

Recommended practices to accomplish this throughout the year include:

•purchasing biodegradable products,

•reducing the use of hazardous cleaners and substances in the home,

•practicing energy and utility saving whenever possible,

•repairing items instead of throwing things away,

•having vehicles tuned to reduce hazardous emissions, and making sure the next car is fuel efficient

•carpooling or using mass transit,

•not littering, and

•recycling.

He previously served as the recycling manager for the Naval Air Station at Jacksonville, Fla., after retiring from the U.S. Navy one year ago.

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 2 through 8. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A sergeant first class, a sergeant and a corporal were charged with wrongful use of cocaine after testing positive for cocaine during a command directed urinalysis.

• A wife of a soldier was charged with damage to government property after fire caused damage to government quarters. The Fire Department determined the cause of fire to be from unattended cooking.

• A sergeant was charged with animal neglect after investigation by Animal Control revealed that the sergeant had two unregistered canines at his quarters. One canine had died from massive parasitic infection due to owner neglect and was left in the pen with the other canine. Also, there was no food, water or shelter provided for the canines.

• The wife of a soldier was charged with use of obscene and vulgar language after she entered a Community Life building and began shouting obscenities toward a Community Life employee, in the presence of several juveniles.

• The wife of a soldier was charged with assault after she pointed a pistol at her husband and threatened to shoot him.

• A specialist was charged with assault on a Military Police officer, drunk and disorderly conduct, failure to obey a lawful order and resisting arrest. The specialist, observed in an area after hours was instructed to leave, at which time he struck the Military Police officers several times and attempted to grab their weapons. The subject was administered a breathalyzer test with a result of .21.

• Two privates were charged with larceny of private property. Investigation revealed that the privates stole $260 in cash and $400 in money orders from another private's unsecured wallet.

• An Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee reported that an unidentified male obtained $3.67 in gas from the Post Exchange gas station and left without rendering payment.

• Other activity on post included 15 traffic accidents, three incidents of driving under the influence of alcohol and two assaults. There were four shoplifting cases and six cases of larceny of private property; five of the larcenies were unsecured. Also there were five cases of damage of private property — all were vehicles — and five cases of damage to government property. There were seven people charged with fishing without a license. All personnel are reminded that Georgia 1991 state fishing and hunting licenses expired March 31.

Annual daisy drive kicks off

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fifty years after the infamous Bataan Death March, former prisoner of war Rex M. Ellis, commander of the Chattahoochee Valley Chapter of the American Ex-Prisoners of War, presented Chief of Staff Col. Burnet R. Quick with a daisy April 9 to kick off the group's annual POW Daisy Drive.

Also in attendance were former POWs Grover West and Okay Parker, both veterans of World War II.

Members will establish a daisy contribution station at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and throughout Columbus to pass out daisies, the official POW flower, and accept donations, Ellis said.

He added that the money raised is used to help needy veterans and their families as well as various local charities.

"None of the money is kept by us," Ellis said.

This year the money earned from the drive will also help fund the construction of a new POW museum at Andersonville, Ga. National Cemetery, he said.

MACH staff receives kudos

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Infantry Commander's Conference brought Brig. Gen. Ron Adams to the Infantry Center. Adams took advantage of his visit to Fort Benning to thank staff members of Martin Army Community Hospital for care provided to a friend of his, retired Lt. Col. Gene Shaw.

Adams, commander of the 163rd Armored Brigade, Montana National Guard, presented letters of appreciation to several staff members at the request of Shaw's widow, Mary. Capt. Marie J. Trenga, Capt. Randle T. Middleton, Capt. Terry E. Davenport and 1st Lt. Dana M. Kinard, were given letters. Adams said that Mrs. Shaw wanted him to express her appreciation to all of those at the hospital who provided care for her husband and who showed so much concern for her welfare.

The Shaws were traveling from Florida to their home in Montana when Shaw was taken ill. He was admitted to the intensive care unit at the hospital, leaving Mrs. Shaw in a very uncomfortable situation. Her husband was in the hospital and she was in a strange city where she had no family or friends for support.

Adams said that Mrs. Shaw had confessed to him that she had no idea what to expect when her husband was admitted; she had no experience with military medical care. She told Adams that the care provided to her husband was outstanding and that the staff members at MACH went out of their way to make her situation less stressful. Mrs. Shaw told Adams that everyone who knew that she was a stranger in the area did whatever they could to make her feel that she had friends.

Although Mrs. Shaw wanted to thank the MACH staff as as a whole, she had asked Adams to recognize the three physicians and the nurse who were most involved in her husband's care.

Spencer students may seize state

Seniors could pole vault to first, second

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning and Spencer High School can boast of having two of the top high school pole vaulting prospects in the state.

Dennis Macabee and Kanani Morris, both seniors at Spencer, are a good bet to be first and second in the state, according to Greg Hurt, Spencer's track coach .

Macabee, the stepson of James Baker a master sergeant with the Non-Commissioned Officers Academy, started pole vaulting in his sophomore year when Morris talked him into coming out for track instead of baseball.

Morris, the son of Col. Rodney W. K. Morris, who is the U.S. Army Reserve adviser for Fort Benning has been interested in pole vaulting since the fourth or fifth grade but didn't start until his sophomore year.

Macabee and Morris started their trek toward the top spots this season with the Earlybird Invitational on March 9, when Morris cleared the bar at 11 feet 6 inches and Macabee hit 13 feet 6 1/2 inches.

On March 21, at the Columbus Relays, which is also the oldest track meet in Columbus, Macabee cleared 13 feet while Morris topped out at 13 feet 7 inches.

March 29, at the Florida Relays, held at the University of Florida in Gainesville, Morris finished second with a vault of 13 feet and Macabee placed third with 12 feet 6 inches.

At the Jaguar Classic track meet in Mobile, Ala., on April 4, Morris cleared 14 feet — his best height so far — and Macabee was right on his heels at 13 feet 6 inches.

Morris and Macabee are the best of friends on and off the track and both are very competitive. According to both Macabee and Morris, "We are both out to win when it comes to a meet, but we also want to see each other perform well so we help each other as much as possible during practice and at the meets."

"If Dennis and Kanani stay healthy and push each other, they very well could end up one and two in the state," said Hurt.

The state meet is May 8, and both Morris and Macabee think they can break the state record of 14 feet 9 inches, which, they say is within their reach if they just keep up the training and competitive pushing of each other.

3rd Bde. 'smokes' in ring

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The soldiers of the Sledgehammer Brigade continued their quest to establish a Fort Benning boxing team April 10 when the brigade's third boxing smoker packed Kelley Hill's gym for the eight-bout card.

"The 3rd Brigade is trying to form a post team to put Fort Benning on the map in this sport, along with Fort Hood, Texas, and Fort Bragg, N.C., said Sgt. 1st Class Charles Kirkland of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 317th Engineer Battalion, coach of the budding brigade team. "After all, Fort Benning is the third largest Army post in the U.S., and there are plenty of soldiers here who could benefit from all the physical training regimen that this sport requires."

Fort Benning soldiers interested in boxing could hardly find a more qualified coach than Kirkland With some 17 years of military boxing experience, the Detroit, Mich., native won the All-Army light heavy weight (178 pounds) boxing title in 1976, the U.S. Army Europe championship in 1983 and 1984, the German National super heavyweight (201 pounds and over) title, and Golden Gloves championships in Detroit and Seattle, Wash.

Undoubtedly his most famous competitor in the ring was professional heavyweight Leon Spinks, whom Kirkland fought twice at the interservice championships in 1976.

"My personal goal is to break Archie Moore's record of 196 knockouts in amateur boxing," said Kirkland, who has a knockout record of 191. "Since I became a fighter-coach in 1982, I've boxed in all of the three top weight classes — light heavyweight, heavyweight (200 pounds), and super heavyweight."

Kirkland praised the competitors in the brigade's latest smoker.

"We had only eight fights instead of the 12 we wanted, but all eight bouts were between novice boxers who fought well in the ring," he said.

In the 139-pound weight class, Tyler Stocke, Company B, 317th Engr. Bn., decisioned Thomas Marr, HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf. Carthell Granison, Adjutant General Replacement Detachment., defeated Howard Cross, HHC, 317th Engr. Bn., by decision at 147 pounds.

At 156 pounds, Kevin Majors, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, bested Chip Forman, 3rd Bn., 32nd Inf., by decision. Winning in the 165-pound weight class were Jose Castillo, 519th Personnel Support Company, and Anthony Battle, Company A, 317th Engr. Bn. Castillo decisioned Duane Edwards of Co.B, 324th Forward Support Battalion, while Battle got the judges' nod in his bout with Jerry Blevins, HHC, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf.

Andres Landor of HHC, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, defeated Roberson Devincent of 1st Bn., 29th Inf., when the referee stopped the match in the third round of the first heavyweight bout. John Drudge of HHC, 2nd Bn., Inf. won the second heavy weight contest, decisioning Jerrald Soho of HHC, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div.

In the super heavyweight bout, Daniel Moorehead of Co. B., 317th Engr. Bn., pounded Darrell Granville of Co. B, 324th FSB, to a decision in the third round.

VA sponsors wheelchair games

Department of Veteran Affairs

Registration is underway for the largest wheelchair sports event in the United States — the 12th National Veterans Wheelchair Games. Sponsored by the Department of Veterans Affairs and the Paralyzed Veterans of America, the games are set for July 14 to 18 in Dayton, Ohio. Participants must register by May 15.

In announcing the event, VA Secretary Edward J. Derwinski said, "VA uses sports and recreation therapy as part of our medical rehabilitation program across the country. We have seen the difference these activities can make in the lives of disabled veterans, and we believe the event is a showcase for recreational therapies. The games demonstrate just what can be achieved with determination, perseverance and, above all, faith in one's self."

The annual event is open to all U.S. military veterans who use wheelchairs due to spinal-cord injury, certain neurological conditions, amputations or other disabilities. Nearly 500 athletes from the United States, Puerto Rico and Great Britain are expected to compete in track and field, swimming, basketball, weightlifting, slalom, bowling, table tennis, archery and billiards.

AMU soldiers shoot straight

Win 5 medals at World Cup

By David Erickson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Soldiers stationed with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit recently completed a successful week at the Mexico World Cup held in Mexico City, Mexico, earning five of nine U.S. individual medals and narrowly missing a new world record in International Trap.

Leading the medal assault in Mexico was Jonathan Frazier in Rapid-fire Pistol who posted a preliminary score of 583 to tie for the lead with Gianfranco Matelli of Italy. In the finals Frazier and Gianfranco remained tied until the final 10 shots when Frazier pulled ahead for 3-point victory with a final total of 565 to the Italian's 562. Roger Mar of Seattle, Wash. posted a 560 for the Bronze Medal.

Another notable pistol performance was posted by Jimmie McCoy in Center-fire Pistol with a Gold Medal total of 582. Stephanen Gagne of France earned a Silver Medal with a 579 followed by Mexico's Eduardo Magana with a 578.

The Marksmanship Unit's Kris Peterson, a member of the 1988 U.S. Olympic Team, had a nearly unbeatable performance in Mexico City with a preliminary score of 582. Unfortunately for Peterson, that exceptional score was bested by the reigning Olympic champion Vesela Letcheva of Bulgaria with a 586 which sent her into the finals with a 4-point lead that she extended to a 681.7 total in the finals. Peterson posted a 676.6 for the Silver Medal while Launi Meili of Chaney, Wash., also a 1988 Olympian, finished third at 662.4.

The International Trap shotgun event in Mexico City featured an all-Marksmanship Unit team representing the United States, including Bret Erickson, Bill Thompson and Jay Waldron, three of the strongest international Trap Shooters in the world.

Out of the scramble for the top medal platform Waldron earned the gold with a preliminary score of 198 combined with a finals round total of 25 straight for a 223 total.

Thompson entered the finals in third place with a 196 total behind Guillermo Castellanos of Mexico at 197. During the shoot-off, Thompson posted a perfect score of 25 straight to catch Castellanos who posted a 24 and earn Thompson the silver as a result of his higher shoot-off score.

In the team event, the Marksmanship Unit trio narrowly missed a new team world record with a score of 440 of 450.

Run festival set

By Michele Leonard
Officers' Wives' Club

The Festival of Running will be May 2 on Stewart and York Fields across from Infantry Hall.

"Preregistration is encouraged," said Conie Reamey, race director.

Fees before April 27 are $5 for children under 14, and $7 for adults. The mini-Ekiden long-distance relay will be $35 per team of five members.

After April 27, fees will increase to $6 for children under 14, a $9 for adults, and $40 for each team relay.

According to Reamey, funds raised from this event will support the community through the Officers' Wives' Club Welfare Fund. This fund contributes thousands of dollars each year to high school seniors' and adults' continuing education. This year other contributions have been made to the Salvation Army, Girl and Boy Scouts, Army Community Services, the high risk nursery at the Medical Center, the Rape Crisis Center, and Santa's Castle.

Registration forms are available at the OWC building across from Faith Middle School or by calling 687-3537 or 682-7669. Race packets (including race T-shirt) may be picked up at the OWC building May 1 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. or on race day from 6:30 a.m. until 30 minutes before event entered.

Events include a 5-mile race at 8 a.m., a youth (9 to 14) 1-mile run at 9 a.m., a youth (under 8) 1-mile run at 9:30 a.m., and the mini-Ekiden long distance relay at 10 a.m.

According to Ron Gorday of the Columbus Track Club, the Ekiden is a new and popular long distance relay.

"It originated in Japan and each runner must pass a sash to the next member of the five-person team."

According to Reamey, awards will be presented to the top three open division winners (male and female) and to the top male and female overall masters in the 5-mile race. Awards will be presented to the top three (male and female) open division winners of each 1-mile race. In the mini-Ekiden, awards will be presented to the top two male, female, and mixed teams in each age division. Medals will be given to the top three (male and female) of each age group in the 1-mile and 5-mile races.

"We expect the festival to be an all-day event," said Reamey. "Entertainment groups will be performing through the day."

For more information, call the OWC office Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 687-3537.

Easter honors victory of Christ's battle

By Richard L. Pace
11th Infantry Regiment Chaplain

REFLECTIONS

Next week, most Christians will celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ on the holy day of Easter. This special day is not just another religious holiday or a time to try to fill the church. Easter is the victory celebration for the most significant war ever fought.

When victorious soldiers come home after a hard fought war, our country, for the most part, has honored our heroes with celebrations and parades. Soldiers decked out in clean crisp uniforms and highly-shined boots march down the main streets of home town USA with the pride of America written across their faces. Their battle tanks and fighting vehicles are spotlessly clean. Proud citizens wave flags and bright banners as they cheer the soldiers with the joy and splendor of a victory celebration.

War, however, is anything but a clean, beautiful, joyful celebration. It is the stink of a dirty uniform, the devastation of destruction and the sickening horror of death.

Easter is a beautiful celebration for Christians around the world. New dresses, shoes, and suits fill the pews of places of worship decorated with lovely flowers for the special day. Choirs sing of life, victory, worship and praise, while all the children hope to receive a basket filled with colorful candy.

Amid all the beauty and joy of Easter, we must not forget that the day celebrates the victory of a cosmic war. Like other wars it was ugly and bloody. It was fought by the only begotten son of God on an executioner's cross on Calvary. It was a war marked by suffering and pain. It ended in the death of Christ who suffered for no crime of his own and died for the transgressions of others.

Christ's war was more than a mere physical battle. The pain from the thorns jammed into his head and the sting of the whip that ripped open his flesh were not the greatest agonies Jesus experienced on the cross. The spear that pierced his side sending blood gushing forth was not the weapon that took his life. The war Jesus fought on the cross was a war for the eternal destiny of mankind. It was a battle of righteousness against sin, of obedience against disobedience, of life against death.

As onlookers saw the lifeless body of Jesus hanging on the cross, they were sure that he had lost the war. Nothing could have been further from the truth. When Jesus declared, "It is finished," that was a victory cry for all who place their faith in him. Three days later he came forth from the tomb demonstrating his victory over sin, death and hell.

Since that time, Easter has been a victory celebration for the Christian church. This Easter, Christians will gather to cheer the mighty warrior, Jesus Christ, who fought and won for you and me.

Passover celebrates freedom, faith

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

"And you shall tell your child on that day, 'This is because of what the Lord did for me when I went forth from Egypt.'" (Exodus 13).

In every generation, Jews must look upon themselves as if they themselves went forth from Egypt. Every year, on the first day of Passover in Jewish homes and synagogues around the world, children ask, "Why is this night different from all others?" Parents answer by telling their child that we were slaves to pharaoh in Egypt until the Lord our God redeemed us and led us into the promised land of Israel.

The telling of the story of Passover takes place through an elaborate ceremonial meal filled with prayers and songs, rituals and symbols called the Seder (pronounced Say-der). The text and guidebook for the Seder is called the Hagaddah coming from a Hebrew word meaning to tell. The major purpose of the Passover Seder is to tell the story of the Exodus from Egyptian slavery.

To enable us to feel some of the lowliness of being a slave, we eat only the bread of poverty. This is matza, bread that has not been allowed to rise, bread that is unleavened. In fact, for the entire seven days of Passover we must eat only unleavened bread. (Exodus 13). It is the pride and boastfulness of risen dough that must be avoided to feel some of the deprivation of slavery.

We need not look only into our past to gain a sense of the oppression of slavery. While we are trying to feel like slaves in Egypt, we remind ourselves that there are Jews in the world today who still suffer a form of enslavement and oppressions. We always call to mind the Jews of Ethiopia, Syria and Iraq who are trapped, persecuted and oppressed. They are not free to practice their religion. They cannot have a Passover Seder. Many families leave an empty chair at their Seder table to symbolize those Jews who are not yet free.

The Passover Seder looks to the future as well. In addition to the four cups of wine we drink at the Seder, a fifth cup is poured but left untouched. We pour it for Elijah the prophet hoping he will return and share in our Seder. Ever since Malachi wrote about Elijah's return before the day of the Lord, we view Elijah as the one who will herald the coming of the Messiah. Elijah will usher in the Messianic time when there will be no more war, no more bloodshed and no more slavery. In the days of the Messiah, all of humanity will be redeemed and free from oppression, discrimination and persecution.

The Passover Seder looks back to that critical moment when God redeemed the Jewish people. It looks around to show us that we are not yet free from slavery and persecution. And it looks ahead to the time of the Messiah when all people shall know true and lasting peace and freedom. On that day, every person shall sit under their vine and fig tree and no one shall make them afraid. May that day come speedily and in our days.

The 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) of the 36th Engineer Group deployed April 7 to Fort Bragg, N.C., to participate in the 20th Engineer Brigade bridge exercise.

The bridge exercise consisted of the company being broken down to platoon-sized elements and rotating through five different bridge stations over a two-day period.

The bridges used at these stations were the medium girder (using the single and double story), bailey, M-4T6, ribbon, light tactical raft and field expedient bridging, that consisted of the one-rope bridge and the aluminum-foot bridge.

Once members of the platoons reached a station, they were given instructions on the capability of that particular bridge and how to assemble and disassemble the bridge. Then, they performed hands-on training.

Sgt. Andrew Dobbins of the 586th Engineer Company's 1st Platoon was tasked to lead the platoon in the construction of the M-4T6 fixed span bridge. "This is the type of training our unit needs to remain proficient in new techniques in bridging," said Dobbins.

The bridge exercise for the 20th Engineer Brigade will be completed April 27.

Members of the 586th Engineer Company 2nd Platoon will continue to instruct and perform training for the brigade at the ribbon bridge station until the last day of the exercise. The rest of the company returned to Fort Benning April 10.

New tools help 29th soldiers

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The civilian maintenance team of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment has created several tools to help soldiers with the maintenance of their vehicles.

These ideas and prototypes were sent to the Tool Improvement Program in Virginia. There, the tools are tested and re-tested for durability and effectiveness.

Four tools sent to the program are: the Four-Way Track Gauge, a tool that measures the Bradley's track shoe and track pads for wear, as opposed to the past method of a visual check, which was found at times to be deceiving, —A Track Rotating Tool that enables the user to access the drive shaft bolts. It saves the operator from needing additional manpower, vehicles, and a tow bar for assistance.

—The Universal Shock Extension, a tool that extends a shock to installation height, this simplifies the work considerably because normally it takes between 200 and 300 pounds of pressure to extend the shock.

—The Safe Guard Track Installation Tool, a device that helps install the track back on vehicles easily, without the danger of an accident. In the past there were several mishaps related to this procedure.

The three men responsible for the creation of the tools are Greg Lawrence, Allen Singleton, and James Trussell.

"Several principles of Total Quality Management are evident here — problem analysis, using prevention, and team work," said Capt. David Dye, battalion maintenance officer. "The teamwork between the military and civilian force in our maintenance organization is truly outstanding and continually — affects positive results. The vast experience and technical expertise of the civilians form the basis for the design and development of the innovative tools."

According to officials the tools that were submitted for review have not been approved yet, although there should be notification soon.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 Years Ago This Week...

The Doolittle Raid: American Bombers take on mainland Japan

•B-25 Bombers from the USS Hornet under the command of Col. James Doolittle conduct an extremely complex raid on targets in Japan. The bombers fly 650 miles practically unarmed because of the need to lighten them to give extra range and the ability to take off from a carrier deck. As a result of the attack, Japan revises its strategy in the Pacific to strengthen its defenses. This decision sets the stage for the Battles of Coral Sea and Midway.

•In the Mediterranean, the USS Wasp, escorted by two cruisers and six destroyers, ferries 47 Spitfire fighter aircraft to Malta for use in defending it against continued German attacks.

•On the Eastern Front, German forces at Demyansk critical supplies by air drop after being cut off from supply lines for three months. This successful aerial resupply contributes to Adolf Hitler's decision to attempt it again at the Siege of Stalingrad.

•General Henry Giraud of the French army escapes from German captivity and makes it to Switzerland.

Schools plan elections

Fort Benning Schools

Parents of children attending Fort Benning Schools set the direction of the schools their children attend through an elected school board.

A 10-member board, elected by parents of children attending the school, meets monthly to set district policy and provide general direction to the system. Members are elected for two-year terms, with each of the eight schools having a representative on the board. In addition to the eight elected school representatives, the board includes an elected president and chaplain. Member's terms are staggered so that the board will include experienced board members each year.

School board elections will be May 19. Board seats up for election terms are the McBride, Patch, Wilbur and Wilson schools, and the at-large seat for president.

To be eligible to run as a candidate representing a school, an individual must be the parent or guardian of a child enrolled in the school at the time the candidate is elected to the board and must not be an employee or related to any school system employee.

Those interested in running for election should contact the school principal of the school for which they wish to run or Richard Skinner, assistant superintendent for logistics at 545-2500 not later than the close of business April 28.

The board meets on the last Monday of each month at 1 p.m. in the administrative conference room of the School Administrative Building on NCO Drive. The board considers school policies, approves the budget, approves curriculum changes and functions in much the same way as school boards in civilian communities.

Current board members are Col. Joseph Trez, president; Maj. Richard Garrison, chaplain; Terry Mascheck, Dexter School representative; Kathleen Meade, Faith School representative; Capt. Barry Washington, Loyd School representative; Sgt. Corneil Christian, McBride School representative; Kathy Crawford, Patch School representative; Diane Boucher, White School representative; Pat Mednik, Wilbur School representative and Marvalene King, Wilson School representative.

Workers help child

Combined efforts ease potential life-threatening situation

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

When Helen Hilgers' 15-month-old son, Brett, appeared dazed and started to have a seizure March 16, she panicked, and ran with him in her arms to her neighbor on Nash Court in Bouton Heights, Dawn Ruger.

That morning, Hilgers said, Brett had had a runny nose and wasn't very hungry, but nothing out-of-the-ordinary happened until he started to spike a fever.

When she got to the Rugers, Dawn came downstairs to answer the door because she was with two workers from Family Housing's Sheet Metal Shop who were there trying to figure out where bats were entering her house so they could fix it.

Ruger took Brett upstairs to the two Family Housing Sheet Metal Shop workers, Steve Price and his supervisor, Mike Moss.

Price had seen this type of thing before when his daughter was little.

He took Brett down to the couch and did things to keep him conscious like pressing on his stomach and gently shaking him while blowing in his face. Then he used ice to help bring the temperature down. In the meantime, Ruger called the ambulance.

Hilgers said the ambulance came within five minutes and took them to Martin Army Community Hospital Emergency Room. When his seizure lasted more than 10 minutes, he was taken to the Medical Center's Intensive Care Unit.

It was discovered that Brett has something called febrile seizures, that are hereditary and will continue until he's 2 to 5 years old. This was his first incident.

Hilgers noted that though her mother said she had this problem as a child, she and her husband, Staff Sgt. Hermann Hilgers have three other children, and none of them have ever experienced such symptoms.

Now, however, she knows what is happening and what to do. It may happen anytime he has a virus, fever, even just a runny nose. She must simply put him somewhere that he cannot hurt himself and call an ambulance.

This native of Australia is very grateful to Price, Moss and Ruger for their help during her crisis.

She said her husband is a course manager for the Department of the Army Course Department Division, and he was inspecting an Air Assault School in North Carolina when the problem with Brett occurred.

Fort Benning Schools gather news

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning students are on line with the world. Recently installed in the Faith Middle School and Dexter School media centers are computer modems. The modems enable students and teachers to communicate with other schools and sources of information.

Faith students have accessed NASA's Space Links, which offer current NASA news, teacher lesson plans and the latest materials available from NASA. Teachers can also videotape a 15-minute segment from CNN News, and then have students download information from CNN through Learning Link with discussion questions, background information and lesson plans related to the program. Students and teachers get the latest news as well as ways to use the information in class.

When students do reports about other areas of the world or issues in the news, they can now contact people by computer who are directly involved and share information. Faith students have already use KidsNet, a worldwide network of kids talking to kids.

Another project Dexter and Faith School students are participating in is the Arctic Telecomputing Project. This project, involving 42 schools in nine countries, began April 4. It is an 18-month computer project for students and teachers to develop, expand and refine an international interactive telecomputing network. This network will serve as a direct link between scientists in the Arctic Ocean and students participating "long-distance" in real scientific research and related classroom activities.

At Dexter School, kids are talking to kids through the National Geographic Kids Network. Students involved complete specific assignments while sharing information about themselves and their school. They find their correspondents not through names and addresses but through utilizing geographical coordinates. A second NGKN team composed of Dexter fifth graders will soon begin a telecommunication exchange focused on weather.

While these projects are being piloted at Dexter and Faith, students in other Fort Benning schools are engaged in activities involving other emerging technologies such as laser video and a compact disk acting as a read-only memory device, commonly known as a CD ROM.

The long-range goals for telecommunication are to bring the capabilities to all Fort Benning schools and to extend access to students homes where computer modems are present.

CHAMPUS eligibility restored for some beneficiaries

Martin Army Community Hospital

Late in 1991, congress re-established eligibility until age 65 for certain persons under the Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services, also known as CHAMPUS.

Still eligible for CHAMPUS are those persons under 65 who:

• Lost CHAMPUS eligibility when a disability (not end-staged kidney disease) entitled them to Medicare Part A; and

• Are enrolled in Medicare Part B.

The new laws, which make CHAMPUS secondary payor to Medicare for these eligible persons, begin the restored eligibility on Oct. 1 for military retires and their family members. For all other CHAMPUS-eligible persons, the date of restored CHAMPUS eligibility was Dec. 5. The above eligibility limitations don't apply to the family members of active duty service members; they don't loose CHAMPUS benefits if they become Medicare-eligible.

What CHAMPUS pays persons with restored eligibility will depend on whether the care received is a benefit under both Medicare and CHAMPUS. If the care is covered by CHAMPUS, but is not also covered by Medicare (such as prescription drugs), CHAMPUS will cost-share the care as a routine CHAMPUS claim.

If the care is also a benefit under Medicare, a claim will first have to be submitted for payment under Medicare Part A or B. When Medicare has paid and when an individual's Medicare supplemental insurance policy (if the person has one) has paid, a CHAMPUS claim may be submitted. CHAMPUS claims processing contractors have been ready since March 18 to receive and process claims for people who have had their eligibility restored under the laws.

Under interim guidelines for handling CHAMPUS claims for these persons, the CHAMPUS claims processing contractor must verify the person's eligibility as well as determine the payment amount. The following must be submitted to the CHAMPUS claims processor along with the CHAMPUS claim:

(1) A copy of the Medicare explanation of benefits;

(2) A copy of the Medicare supplemental insurance policy's EOB (if the patient has such a policy);

(3) A copy of the award letter which confers eligibility for Medicare Part a on the patient. based on disability;

(4) A copy of the patient's Medicare card.

29th Infantry hosts unit Easter egg hunt

By Andrew Temple

1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The children of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment walked around and around in search of Easter eggs Sunday. This springtime Easter event was held in Harmony Church at the Company A area.

Pfc. David and Maria Weinrick of Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment put the program together.

"We volunteered to help out, because it is such a wonderful time of the year, and we wanted to make this a memorable Easter." said David.

Maria, who is the family support leader of Company A, said, "I just enjoy helping out."

There were several games, activities and refreshments to keep the children occupied, including a story and sing-along about Easter lead by the battalion chaplain Capt. Ruben Colon. The Easter Bunny also came and paid the children a visit.

"These kind of functions are good for morale and family support. I am really glad to see this many families here," said Spc. Chris Kincaid.

There were prizes and Easter egg baskets given away for the children who found special silver eggs out on the trails.

Wilbur School holds open house and annual picnic

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Wilbur School's open house and family picnic was Tuesday from 5 to 7:30 p.m. The theme was Education .... A Family Affair. The picnic was the third annual picnic sponsored by Wilbur School's Parent Teacher Organization.

The evening began with a presentation for parents on educational opportunities available for adults at Fort Benning. This presentation was made by Fort Benning's Continuing Education Center. Wilbur students followed the presentation for adults with a presentation of their own with raps, songs and cheers.

Next came an open house in which parents were invited to classrooms to see and discuss student work.

Following the visit to the classrooms, the families enjoyed a picnic on the lawn while listening to the Army Jazz Band.

Students to build bridges

Fort Benning Schools

Dexter School's fourth-graders are involved in a project that makes math meaningful and real by allowing them to use arithmetic calculations and geometry to design, plan, and build scale model bridges.

The students are applying and integrating skills learned in math and social studies classes as they work in teams to design and construct toothpick bridges. They will also be writing checks, balancing accounts, maintaining a task schedule and working with others to accomplish a common goal.

On Monday, the bridges will be evaluated by: Lt. Col. Dwight Durham, 36th Engineer Group; Command Sgt. Maj. James Gardner, Headquarters, 36th Engineer Group; and Staff Sgt. Daniel Sabatasso, 586th Engineer Company.

The bridges will be judged by design, quality of the building plans and strength Weights will then be suspended beneath each of the bridges and the bridge holding the most weight before collapsing will be the overall winner. Bridges will be judged at 1:30 p.m. and the actual breaking of the bridges will occur at 2 p.m.

April kicks off lawn care season

Professional Lawn Care Association

Research shows that the American lawn is more than 25 million acres, when all the turf areas are added up. There are more than 61 million power mowers at work every year. About 57 percent of the population is involved in lawn care, according to the 1990 Census. And April is when the lawn care season begins.

"April is the first month of the year when people in all parts of the country are involved in lawn care, so it's appropriate that the nation honor the tradition of the American lawn," said Ann E. McClure, executive vice president of the Professional Lawn Care Association of America. "That's why PLCAA and its more than 1,000 members support National Lawn Care Month."

A leading manufacturer of lawn mowers estimates that nearly 100 million people spend about a billion hours a year mowing the nation's lawns, parks and sports turf areas.

"For many homeowners, lawn care is more of a hobby than a chore," said Bob Tracinski, consumer information manager for John Deere. "People enjoy the sense of accomplishment derived from tending a lush, green lawn. And for many blue and white collar workers, lawn care provides a good excuse to get out of four walls and into the sunshine, to exercise and to get in touch with nature."

University research shows that lawns provide many environmental benefits as well. In summer, lawns cool our neighborhoods in several ways. Grass scatters light while absorbing some solar radiation. Lawns act like evaporate coolers: As water evaporates off the lawn, surrounding air temperatures are lowered. And lawns provide a cool, soft playing surface for children.

Turf soils can purify water that leaches through the rootzone and into the ground water supply. Acid rain is less acid after it's filtered through a lawn. Lawns trap particulate matter — the dust and smoke particles that fall continually. Soil microbes help break down these substances into neutral molecules.

Lawns help replenish the oxygen supply, prevent soil erosion, filter some pollens from the air, reduce sunlight glare, build topsoil and even absorb noise pollution.

"Probably nothing is more typical of our culture than the American lawn," McClure said. "Our country developed in a tradition of freedom and protection under law, so it wasn't necessary for us to build walls and defensive barriers. Our home landscapes are open, friendly and welcoming. One lawn blends into another throughout a neighborhood, providing an apt symbol of our sociability, our extroversion, and our optimism."

The average lawn is about 5,000 square feet, or about 4 million individual grass plants.

ASK THE JUDGE

By David K. Dalition
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

With the economy still in a tailspin and business in need of cash, debt collection disputes are on the rise. Many soldiers are feeling the heat from debt collectors and are unaware of their rights under the law. The following scenario is not uncommon and for many soldiers is all too familiar.

"John," a 26-year-old soldier stationed at Fort Benning, owes $2,123.47 on his credit card and has not been able to make payments for the past eight months. John says his wife was laid off nine months ago, and since then things have been tight. The credit card company has turned the debt over to a debt collection agency, which has attempted to collect for more than three months. John accuses the collection agency of harassing him and using abusive collection techniques. John had the following questions.

Q: I know I owe some money, but I am sure I do not owe the amount they are trying to collect. My records show that I charged significantly less than what the collection agency says I owe. What can I do about this?

A: A debt collector must notify you of the nature of the debt, the identity of the creditor and your right to dispute the accuracy or existence of the debt. If you dispute the debt, you may request in writing that the collector provide proof of the debt. The collection agency must cease all collection efforts until written proof is provided.

Q: They have been calling me at all hours of the night telling me to pay up. I have two small children and they need their sleep. Can they do this?

A: No. Without your consent or a court order, a debt collector cannot communicate with you at unusual or inconvenient times or places.

Q: The collector has been very rude to me and uses subtle threats to imply that I will go to jail for not paying. Can he do this?

A: No. A debt collector may not engage in any conduct that amounts to harassment, oppression or abuse. Moreover, a collector cannot use abusive language or threaten that failure to pay the requested amount will result in your imprisonment.

Q: The collector has recently started calling me at work to demand payment. My first sergeant told me I should not be receiving such phone calls while at work. I am doing my best to pay and want the collection agency to stop calling me. Is this possible?

A: Yes. A collection agency cannot contact you at work if you have notified them in writing to cease further communications with you at your place of employment. Moreover, all debt collection contact with you must cease if the debt collector learns that you are represented by an attorney, receives written notice that you refuse to pay the debt, or receives written notice from you requesting the collection agency to cease all further communication.

The best way to avoid debt collectors is to pay your bills on time. If this is not possible, you should contact your creditor and work out a payment plan before the debt is turned over to a collection agency.

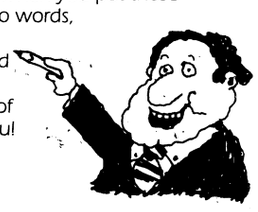
How to make money in three easy steps.

Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.

Step 2.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!



Step 3.

Contact classified. Give us a call. You'll cash in on the speed and effectiveness of the dynamic classified marketplace. Kirk Douglas harbors big 'Secret' in CBS drama

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

One of Hollywood's most famous and enduring stars might seem to have few secrets left, but his latest character has a major one.

In his first performance since receiving the American Film Institute's prestigious Life Achievement Award a year ago, Kirk Douglas stars in Sunday's CBS drama "The Secret" as Mike Dunmore, a beloved and respected Cape Cod resident whose friends and neighbors are urging him to run for a City Council seat. A personal dilemma may keep him from doing so, though ... and it also might be exposed publicly, after an entire lifetime of being known only to him and a close friend (Brock Peters). With the difficulties his young grandson (Jesse R. Tendler) is having at school, Mike realizes the boy shares his plight of dyslexia, the inability to read or write. However, his efforts to help are blocked by his own son (Bruce Boxleitner). Executive-produced by Robert ("Lonesome Dove") Halmi and directed by Emmy-winner Karen ("Cagney & Lacey") Arthur, the film also features Laura Harrington as Mike's compassionate daughter-in-law.

"One of the things I like about doing a TV-movie," says the friendly and sincere Douglas, "is that you can do something that would be difficult to get done as a theatrical film, but deals with a theme that is very interesting. I did that with (the 1985 nursing-home drama) 'Amos' and (a 1988 remake of) 'Inherit the Wind,' and I feel the same way about 'The Secret.' I think I was probably the first (feature-film star) to do a live appearance on television when all the heads of the studios were telling us to stay away from it, because they didn't know what to do about it. I didn't understand that, because in my mind, I simply was an actor. Whether what I did was shown in theaters or on TV, that was only a form of distribution. As far as I'm concerned, I just make movies, wherever they're shown. Sometimes, the budget is smaller and the schedule is more compressed, but I like that."

Douglas admits he wasn't seeking acting work when "The Secret" was presented to him, since he was concentrating on what he terms his "new career" as an author. (With "Dance With the Devil" and the autobiographical "The Ragman's Son" already in print, his next book - "The Gift" - is slated for publication in August.) "When I got this script, it intrigued me," Douglas recalls. "First of all, I thought it was very well-written. The fact that it deals with a good theme doesn't necessarily make something a good movie; you can make something that says, 'You must be good to your mother and father,' and it can be very dull. A lot of people don't know much about dyslexia, which is one reason I found 'The Secret' very exciting, so I made this the first movie I shot since my accident."

Shortly before accepting his AFI Award last year, Douglas was involved in a helicopter crash that killed two people, and claims that tragedy gave him "a major difference in my point of view" as he resumed his acting. "In recovering from something like that, especially since one of the victims was a young boy of 19, I felt tremendous guilt. You start to wonder about the pattern of things, why some things happen, and why they happen to you. I escaped even though I was pretty well banged up, and when I was at that AFI dinner, I had makeup covering a big black eye. My back was still in pain, but people were coming around and slapping me there to congratulate me, so it was kind of an excruciating evening. I began to think, 'Why am I still here?', and doing 'The Secret' gave me one of the reasons. It's a film that possibly can be important and make a difference in some way."

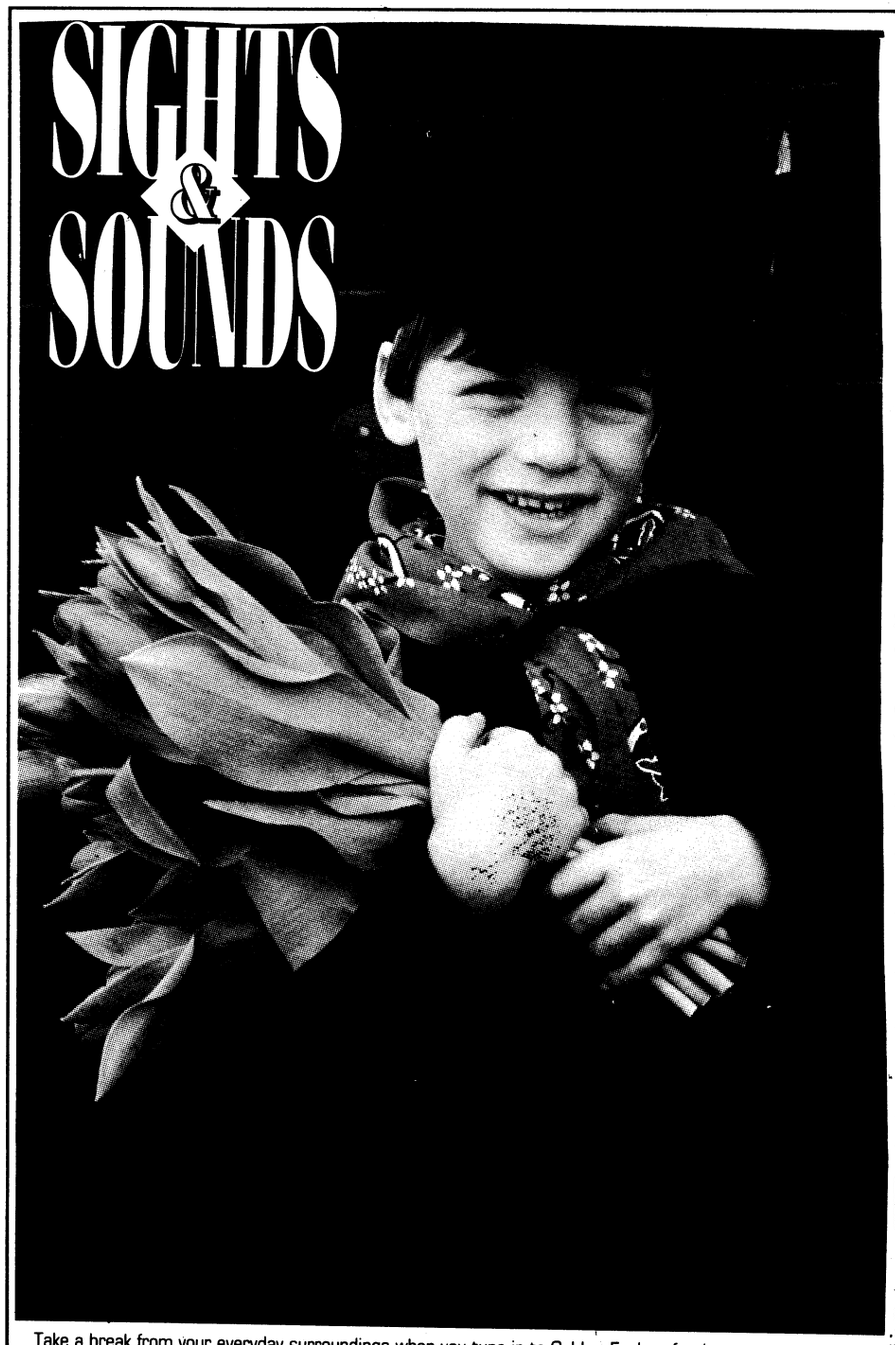
SIGHTS & SOUNDS



TUNE IN TO THE SIGHTS & SOUNDS OF CABLE TV

When you hear, "Mom, can I watch?..." Set your mind at ease and let them watch Cable.

Cable networks like The Discovery Channel help you teach your kids about the world around them with shows like In the Company of Whales, an April Discovery Original World Premiere.

Children's programming on cable helps them learn and entertains them, too! For award-winning programming you can trust, tune to shows on Nickelodeon like Mr. Wizard's World, where kids learn experiments they can try at home under your supervision. On Eureeka's Castle, a cast of puppets uses humor, animation and music to teach children important lessons about socializing.

And for just plain fun and good times USA features The USA Cartoon Express and USA Network Kids Club.

What's the real price of "free" Cable?

- $1000 fine
- One year in jail

Unauthorized use of Cable service hinders our ability to provide quality reception to our paying customers. It can also cause dangerous interruptions in air traffic control communications and rob your community of franchise fee tax dollars.

Some people buy illegal converter boxes. Some people tamper with the cable lines or converter boxes. And some people install their own outlets. Others never notify the cable company that the service was on when they moved in.

They're all illegal and detectable. Unchecked they can jeopardize the saftey of your home. If you're caught you can go to jail for up to a year and pay a fine of $1000.

If you or someone you know is receiving unauthorized Cable TV service, call our office today. We'll give you the opportunity to subscribe. All calls will be kept confidential. Policy enforcement begins June 1.

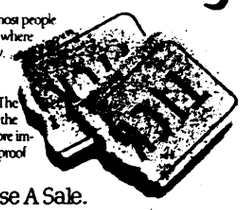
A Funny Thing Happens When People Put Down A Newspaper. They Start Spending Money.

Nothing puts people in the mood to buy like newspaper. In fact, most people consider it almost a prerequisite to any spending spree. Because that's where they make their decisions on where to shop and what to buy. Not on tv. Not on radio. And not jammed in little envelopes that come uninvited in the mail.

71% say newspaper is the place they turn for shopping advice. The place where they actually look forward to seeing the ads. And set aside the time to read them. That message comes through in study after study. More importantly, it also comes through in sales. Of course, if you want further proof of newspaper's effectiveness, run an ad and you can see it firsthand.



Newspaper. It's The Best Way To Close A Sale.

Delegates target family issues at symposium

Key topics include health, housing

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A total of 102 delegates from the post addressed issues of concern to families at the 1992 Fort Benning Army Family Action Plan Symposium Thursday at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

With the theme, "Rising to the Challenge — Today's Vision ... Tomorrow's Reality," the symposium featured six work groups.

These work groups looked at the topics of consumer/commercial services, housing, youth and education, family and soldiers support services, health services, relocation and quality of life.

Garrison Commander Col. William R. Brownlee II, who gave the opening talk, said, "Nothing more important is going on, on this post, today."

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, encouraged input from the participants, saying, "I really, really want to know what you want," and promised results.

Key presentations prior to work groups were offered by Col. Patrick Kenny, director of Engineering and Housing; Col. Vernon Spaulding, commander at Martin Army Community Hospital; and Alan F. Stewart, director of Community Activities.

In the past, the symposium has resulted in policy changes that have assisted in the implementation of increased household goods moving allowances, establishment of community and family support centers, the Delta Dental Plan, and spouse preference for jobs.

43rd troops to return

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A total of 115 members of the 43rd Engineer Battalion will return from Costa Rica May 1.

A 5 p.m. welcoming ceremony will be at Lawson Army Airfield for the heavy combat engineer unit, which will be arriving aboard a charter flight.

An additional group of 50 soldiers from Company C and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, will be returning from participation in Task Force Siempre Listo (Always Ready) May 15, along with 13 soldiers of the 498th Medical Company, which has been attached to the 43rd while in Costa Rica.

The soldiers have been involved with base camp, road and bridge construction and school upgrading. The task force is commanded by Maj. Richard Nazario of the 43rd.

The deployment lasted more than three months. The advance party left Jan. 15, and an additional increment departed Jan. 24.

MPs to return

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A total of 155 soldiers with the 988th Military Police Company will return from Panama Wednesday at 4 p.m. at Lawson Army Airfield. The MPs deployed to Fort Clayton, Panama, Jan. 3 as part of a rotation of units assisting the 92nd Military Police Battalion.

New speed limits set

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The speed limit on Main Post during the established physical training hours (6 to 7:30 a.m.), Monday through Friday, is 15 mph.

"We're out there enforcing the new speed limits on post," said Maj. Robert L. Pelegreen, operations officer of the Military Police Activity. "We've gotten some positive comments; people — particularly runners — think it's a very healthy and safety-minded policy."

The new policy further reiterated that the speed limit is 10 mph when passing individual runners or formations. Both have priority on post during the stated hours, according to the policy memorandum. The following roads are exempt from the new speed limits because all running is banned on those roads.

Posted speed limits remain in effect on these roads:

- 10th Division Road
- Dixie Road, except the portion from Sightseeing Road (Sandy Patch) to Lawson Army Airfield
- Sightseeing Road from Dixie Road to Sunshine Road
- Sunshine Road
- Lumpkin Road from Dixie Road to Custer Road
- Custer Road from Benning Road to Eisenhower Exchange

Also, the 82nd Airborne Division Road from Sunshine Road to Bradshaw Road will be closed to traffic from 6 to 7:30 a.m., Monday through Friday for use by formations and individual runners.

"We haven't seen any backlog of traffic; most people are responding well," Pelegreen said. "However, we want to remind everyone to leave a few minutes earlier to get to work on time."

Part of 34th to be inactivated

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 34th Medical Battalion headquarters and the 5th and 261st Medical detachments will be inactivated on July 15.

The 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital or MASH, and several other medical detachments remain unaffected. The remaining medical units will become subordinate to the 36th Engineer Group.

No degradation of medical services is anticipated. The reorganization will result in a total personnel authorization loss of fewer than 20 spaces of the 460 soldiers currently assigned. Soldiers being displaced will be reassigned within their specialties at Fort Benning. Several soldiers are being reassigned elsewhere as a result of normal rotation.

Those actions affecting the 34th Medical Battalion are in accordance with the Army's plan to meet targeted fiscal 1995 end strengths of 535,000 personnel.

The 498th Medical Company, an air ambulance unit, will remain at Fort Benning. The 498th presently has two platoons at Fort Benning, one platoon at Fort Stewart, Ga., and one platoon at Fort Jackson, S.C., all with the capability of flying medical evacuation missions. Upon reorganization, the unit will be smaller and located in its entirety at Fort Benning.

The 690th Medical Company, a ground ambulance company, will be converted to a more modern organization and gain both personnel and equipment, including the newest high mobility multi-wheeled vehicle ambulances. This unit will also remain at Fort Benning.

The 34th Medical Battalion has been assigned to Fort Benning since November 1966.

AER contributions at $110,000

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Currently a total of $110,000 has been contributed to this year's Army Emergency Relief Campaign at Fort Benning. The campaign is closing in on its April 30th deadline.

According to Capt. Francisco Marroquin, AER campaign officer, the drive has a goal of $209,530 to meet or exceed last year's amount.

The campaign began March 2.

"Helping the Army Take Care of Its Own" is the slogan for this organization, which is marking its 50th year in offering emergency financial assistance in the form of no-interest loans and grants.

More than 90 percent of those who come for help are approved.

Alfonso Deane, AER financial counselor, said that there are certain recognized criteria for needing emergency financial assistance.

These include: funeral expenses, delinquent rent payments, deposit for renting (up to $950), enough to satisfy car payments, rent, etc. if funds have been lost or stolen (a copy of the police report must be provided), money to go for food beyond the two days emergency assistance from the Food Locker and repair of essential personally owned vehicles.

Deane added that there are limits as to what amounts can be approved by whom within the AER system.

AER assists soldier with vehicle repair

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

When Pfc. Andy Berg needed to have his car repaired, it was Army Emergency Relief that came to his aid.

Berg said he went to AER when his car needed a transmission repair so his wife, Christine, could get to work.

He took his bills with him to the AER office, and said the whole process was a short one.

"It took less time in there to get the loan than the paperwork here at the company to have the CO (commanding officer) sign off on it," Berg said.

The terms were agreeable, and he was out in 10 minutes.

AER provides no-interest loans and grants to active duty soldiers, family members, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. Army Reserve and National Guard on an emergency basis.

He noted, "I got a check the same day."

Berg said he had never had reason to use AER's services before this, but if the need was ever there again, he would go to them a second time.

RIF likely in fiscal '93 due to budget cuts

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Civilian employees recently received a letter indicating significant cuts in installation operating funds, which may affect the number of civilian employees the post can afford in fiscal 1993.

According to the director of Civilian Personnel, this letter was directed by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general because he wanted the work force to be given as much information as possible about the potential impact of budgetary reductions.

Employees were informed that a thorough assessment of installation functions will be conducted to determine what effects the reduced fiscal 1993 budget will have on Fort Benning and its work force.

Fort Benning's projected budget for fiscal 1993 is approximately 16 percent less than fiscal 1992's budget. According to the director of Resource Management, downsizing of the Army and the results of Defense budget deliberations will determine the actual budgets for fiscal 1993 and 1994.

Despite these funding cuts and similar reductions at other installations, Fort Benning will continue to operate as one of the Army's largest installations. Training infantry officers, noncommissioned officers, and soldiers through the U. S. Army Infantry School, One Station Unit Training, and various specialty schools will continue as Fort Benning's primary mission.

Employees will be kept informed as information on the potential impact of budgetary cuts become known.

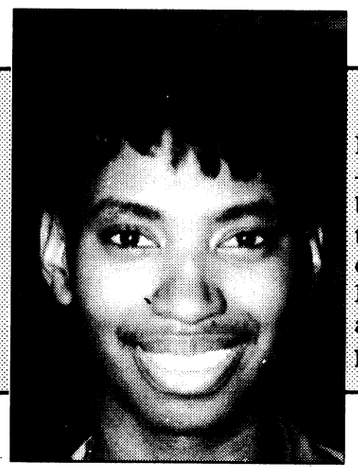
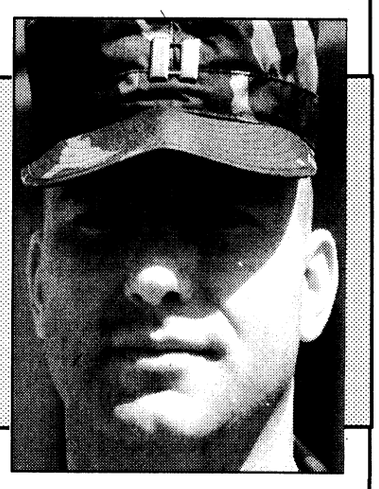
VARIOUS VOICES

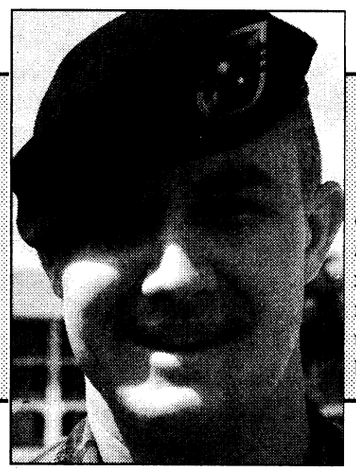
What was your best assignment and worst assignment and why?



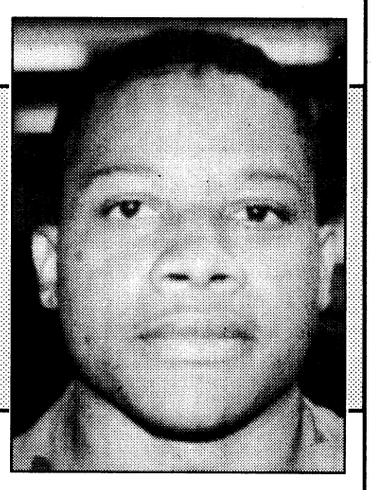
Cpl. Lisa White, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The best was Stuttgart, Germany, because of the location, better training and an overall better environment. The worst is Fort Benning because we don't get payday activities and there are traffic problems."



Capt. Gregory Pritzl, Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The best was Ray Barracks, Germany, because of the culture in the surrounding area. The worst was Fort Sill, Okla., because there is nothing there, and it is in the middle of nowhere"

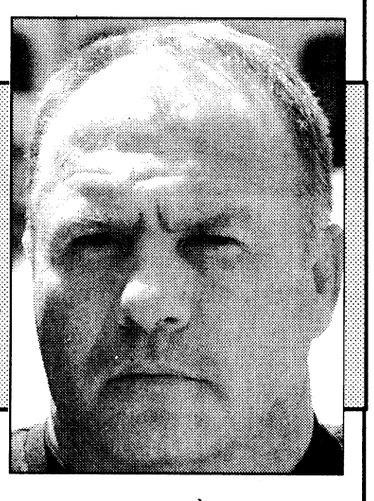


Spc. Bobby Godwin, Company C, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment — "My best assignment was Hunter Army Airfield. It had everything to offer recreation-wise and the people there seemed to have more respect for soldiers. Here rangers aren't treated like an elite unit; we're treated more like trainees because there are so many."



1st Lt. Kim Newman, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "Fort Eustis, Va., was the best. There were a lot of social activities at little or no cost. Fort Irwin, Calif. was the worst because there is nothing to do in the surrounding area."

Staff Sgt. Gloria Tyson, U.S. Army Information Systems Command — "Fort Benning is the best. It has a lot to offer the soldier and it's more oriented to the military. It also offers a lot of training. Fort Riley, Kan. was the worst because it was in the middle of nowhere and didn't offer the young soldier a lot."



Staff Sgt. Thomas Rondeau, Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The best was Fort Devens, Mass., because there I paid for services, such as golf, according to rank. Here I have to pay the same price for a game of golf as the commanding general."

Can robots replace human soldiers?

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Sgt. Willie kicked back in his gray, steel chair, ran a pudgy hand through his red hair and proclaimed, "I gotta get out of this Army."

"Why so?" I asked, startled, having taken Sgt. Willlie as a 36-year man.

"They want to replace us with robots," he said, skidding a copy of International Defense Review across the desk.

Sure enough, there were articles about robot planes that flew about the battlefield gathering intelligence and a robot on wheels that scooted about the front lines doing more of the same while some joystick operator sat in a van or the tent and monitored the progress on a television screen.

"Sounds like a plan to me," I said, ever one to promote anything to make my job easier and save lives.

"You don't get it, do you, Snively," he said, his lips curling up.

"I must not," I said.

COMMENTARY

"There's no way metal and plastic is going to replace flesh and blood. No computer is going to replace the human brain, yet there they are, spending all that money on research, trying to figure out how the next war will be fought by robots — robot boats, robot ships, robot aircraft — all operated by some dudes sitting in air-conditioned bunkers miles away from the action.

"But you know what will happen if this comes about?"

"No ," I said, "What?"

"One of two things. First, by removing the human element from war, war won't become such an awful thing. Then when some tin horn dictator gets it in his brain he doesn't like his neighbor, he just goes down into his bunker, sends out the robots who blast his rival to hell and back and that's it. Didn't cost him a soldier.

"Next thing you know, everybody's doing it and before long we have a dead planet.

Nothing but radioactive dust lingering in the atmosphere and a few cockroaches picking over the scraps."

"What's the other alternative?" I asked, not liking the first one.

"Murphy's law. Nothing works. Either that, or for every weapon we devise, the enemy has a countermeasure and for every countermeasure he has, we have a counter countermeasure, etc. So before you know it, back to the Stone Age. Deprived of modern weapons, we're back to going at one another with bayonets — assuming we're still stocking them in this modern Army — clubs, if we aren't."

"Well, at least we wouldn't kill all that many people if we had to rely on hand-to-hand combat," I said, looking on the bright side.

"Not necessarily true," he said, never the optimist. "We might not kill masses quickly, so instead, it becomes a war of attrition. We just keep at it longer, and eventually civilization as we know it would collapse because we wouldn't be able to keep sending more and more bayonet and club fighters off to fight while keeping factories running on the home front."

"You don't really believe all that do you?" I asked, skeptically. But the purplish red color of his face told me he did.

I decided to leave. As I turned to go, he reminded me, "and remember Snively, you can be replaced by a robot, too. Just pile enough organic matter into a computer and it can come up with the same compost as you do every week. Probably better."

I was certainly pleased to hear him say that.

Parents should take steps to protect children

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Where is the most dangerous place in the world? The Persian Gulf, maybe? A commercial airliner? Wrong. Home is the most dangerous place in the world.

In a room-by-room check of possible hazards, you'll find crushing, falling, and electrocution at every turn. All ages are exposed to harm, but children are especially at risk.

Injuries are the number one threat to your child's health. "One in four children is involved in an accident each year," according to Dr. Everett Koop, the former U.S. surgeon general. Koop adds, "More than 8,000 of these die, and another 50,000 are permanently disabled. If such death and disability were the result of disease, parents would demand that the killer be stopped."

What can a parent do? Beginning with the first day of your child's life — think safety.

If you have a toddler, crawl around the house and look at your environment from a toddler's perspective. What dangers lurk under the sofa? Can you reach that bottle of medicine on the countertop? Can you pull an iron onto yourself by a dangling cord?

Do a home injury prevention assessment:

• Do you use child safety seats and safety belts? A parent cannot protect his child from injury in a car crash by holding the child in his lap. Holding a 30-pound infant in a car going 30 mph would require the strength of lifting 300 pounds to prevent the child from crashing forward in the event of a collision.

• Do you keep syrup of ipecac in your home? Ipecac syrup is used to induce vomiting. However, it is not a remedy for all kinds of poisoning. Call your Poison Control Center before using.

• Do you use child-resistant closures on all your prescription bottles? Child-resistant closures have been shown to significantly reduce the number of childhood poisonings.

• Do you have a smoke detector? Early warning devices such as smoke detectors alert residents in case of a fire and help keep fatality rates down.

• Do you have a Poison Information Center phone number on your phone or posted near the phone?

• Inspect your home from a child's view — get down on your hands and knees and look for kid-level threats. Are there dangers there? The chances of getting hurt grow as the child grows. Often, accidents occur when parents underestimate their child's capabilities.

Discuss your child's growth and progress with your physician. Read about average developmental stages and what to expect.

It is our privilege to love and enjoy our children. It is our responsibility to protect them from harm.

Motoryclists need to be on offensive

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Motorcycle safety can be increased if riders take some precautions, according to the Infantry Branch Safety Office. It recommends that riders observe the following rules.

•Always wear a helmet. Make sure it fits properly and is in good condition.

•Most collisions occur at intersections, so be extra careful when you go through one.

•Keep your lights on day and night. It helps other drivers to see you.

•Never weave in traffic or pass between two cars.

•Wear protective gear: gloves, boots, long sleeves, helmet with eye protection, and a reflective vest. See Army Regulation 385-55. Appendix B, March 12,1987, Prevention of Motor Vehicle Accidents.

•Never lend your motorcycle to someone else. Experienced motorcyclists know that each bike has its own feel.

•Attend a motorcycle safety course. Call 545-3741 for a schedule.

Police call should be everyone's job

Is this how you want to spend your Saturday morning? Many soldiers have no choice because others choose to litter. This soldier's time would be better spent on training. You can make this happen by policing yourself and your area.

Recycling brings in $$$

Post residents' participation can make the difference

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning needs to get more involved in recycling, according to Morris Armstrong, post solid waste and recycling manager.

Armsrtong said that if 4,000 of the 4,800 family housing units on post would recycle, the post could generate an additional $131,000 or more yearly.

Armstrong said the post would also save 1.7 million pounds of non-biodegradeable materials from being dumped in the landfills each year.

"I think one of the key elements in getting people to recycle is education," said Armstrong.

Armstrong said if people don't understand how a program works and don't understand how to get recycleables picked up, then they are unlikely to participate in any program.

Currently, post recycling is limited to office bond paper, cardboard, metals and aluminum cans.

Residents who wish to recycle may take aluminum cans to the Post Exchange at the Main Mall or any of the shoppettes on post. No other recycleables are currently accepted at the exchanges.

Armstrong said that plans are underway to create a curbside program for housing area residents to eliminate the hassle of bagging and transporting recycleables to collection points.

Armstrong said he hopes everyone will get involved in the curbside program when it's established and hopefully the post will be able to begin recycling other materials, such as glass, plastic and newspapers.

R-Day is Saturday; turn in recyclables at PX

Post residents will have the opportunity to recycle glass and newspaper Saturday, designated R-Day, or Recycle Day, at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

Other drop-off sites are Wal-mart, AARCO Military Sales and Service and Waddell Elementary School.

Residents are encouraged to bring glass, newspapers and aluminum to be recycled.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 9 to 14. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A specialist was arrested by the Columbus Police Department for driving under the influence. The specialist registered a .05 on the intoximeter. He was charged because he was involved in traffic accident.

• A sergeant was apprehended for driving under the influence after he was stopped by a Military Police officer for traveling 83 mph in a 50 mph zone. The sergeant also tried to flee and elude the patrolman.

• A sergeant was cited for bigamy after he married another soldier, while still being married to his first wife.

• Four civilians were apprehended for trafficking in cocaine. Three of the individuals were arrested after selling 8.4 grams of crack cocaine to an under cover agent. The fourth individual was in possession of 116.6 grams of cocaine.

• A family member son was apprehended for aggravated assault after he retrieved a shotgun from a bedroom in his quarters, loaded it, and pointed it at a family member son of another soldier.

• A captain was apprehended for driving under the influence after he was observed sitting in his vehicle, parked on the shoulder of Interstate 185 with the engine running. The captain failed a sobriety test and registered .17 on the intoximeter.

• Two specialists were arrested by the Columbus Police Department for criminal attempted armed robbery and pointing a pistol at another.

• A specialist and private were apprehended for possession of a controlled substance and wrongful use of a controlled substance. A member of the unit reported that he had suspicion to believe that the two had used a controlled substance. Upon questioning the suspects, one of them admitted to using cocaine with the other.

• There were three United States Postage stamp machines damaged during the week. The total amount of money and stamps taken is unknown. One machine was removed from its mounting point and was found by a unit doing post police call.

• Individuals driving on main post during physical training (6 to 7 a.m.), Monday through Friday, are reminded that the speed limit is 15 mph on running roads and 10 mph when passing either a single runner or formation.

• Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or to the "Ccrime in Progress" line, 545-2222, if it is warranted.

Drug test toughened for detecting cocaine

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Department of Defense recently toughened the urinalysis standards used in detecting cocaine, officials said. These new standards will affect all soldiers on Fort Benning and some civilian employees who are in a testing program.

"The tests are so good and so accurate, we've been able to toughen the standards," said Sharon Cooper, director of the Pentagon's Demand Reduction Office. "The amount of cocaine that will show a positive now is smaller." The new test level as of Jan. 1 is 100 nanograms a milliliter for a positive, The old level was 150 nanograms a milliliter.

In addition to toughening cocaine standards, DoD will increase emphasis on detecting amphetamines, methamphetamines and hallucinogens. The standards will not change, but DoD will test more for these substances.

The Demand Reduction Office — part of the Office of the DoD Coordinator for Drug Enforcement Policy and Support — sets policy and standards for the armed services' urinalysis programs. In addition, it's involved with educational programs to warn and educate service members and their families of the dangers of drug abuse.

Other government officials have held up the DoD program as an example of the effectiveness of drug demand reduction policies. DoD figures for 1980 show 27 percent of those in the military admitted they had used some illegal substance within the last 30 days. In 1988 — the most recent data available — that figure dropped to 4.8 percent.

"Commanders in the field are saying they have better troops, and productivity has improved," Cooper said. "The military effort is being held up as a flagship for other government agencies and private corporations. We were the first with a "Zero Tolerance" program, we were the first with urinalysis, we were the first government agency to test civilian workers, and we were the first to require contractors to test certain employees.

Some 90 Fort Benning civilian employees are subject to testing. These employees are in critical jobs on post, such as aviation, law enforcement, etc.

"The employees in the positions that are tested already know that they will be tested," said Sheryl Creek, a management employee relations specialist at Fort Benning. "These employees have signed an agreement that enrolled them in the program."

"The lessons we have learned can be transferred," Cooper said.

The biggest lesson is that a demand reduction program needs the "stick" of a deterrence/detection program to work. "Education alone, without urinalysis, is less effective," Cooper said. "People know there are real penalties if they use drugs. In the military, only junior enlisted may get a second chance."

The urinalysis program is effective from several levels. Those people who might be tempted to experiment with drugs are deterred from experimenting by detection through urinalysis. The "second-level" user — one who dabbles in illegal substances — may not be deterred from using, but may not take as much or as often.

For the hard-core user, urinalysis will detect them and get them out of the service.

The same deterrence works for industry. "Those who have developed a urinalysis program — DoD contractors are prime examples — have noticed better productivity, they've had fewer health problems and accident rates have gone down," Cooper said.

More people with drug problems are calling the office. "These calls are from people asking how they can get help before they are detected," she said. "The program is so credible that people believe it's only a matter of time before they get caught. It's a far cry from when the program was introduced."

Cooper anticipates no great changes in the urinalysis program. "The tests are cheaper now," she said, "so there will be no reduction in testing. This is not the kind of program you can declare victory in and shift the funds to another area. You have to maintain it."

Creators of Gateway project encourage public support

Keep ColumbusBeautiful Commission

John Flournoy, chairman of Columbus Gateways, unveiled a new media campaign today to increase the public's awareness of the program and to encourage public support of the project. Columbus Gateways is a beautification and landscape enhancement program, which incorporates 26 major gateways and highway arteries within the Columbus area.

Groundbreaking for the first two projects was Dec. 18. The projects, Airport Thruway/I-185 and the Traffic Circle/Victory Drive, near the main entrance to Fort Benning, are nearing completion.

Columbus Mayor Frank K. Martin asked all citizens to consider the words of the campaign theme song,..."What do people see when people see the streets of our hometown". "This is an excellent opportunity for our citizens to invest in the improvement of our community."

PET OF THE WEEK

This stray, female, German Shepherd mix puppy is looking for a home. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283). Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

MACH opens 'Gateway'

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet Staff Writer

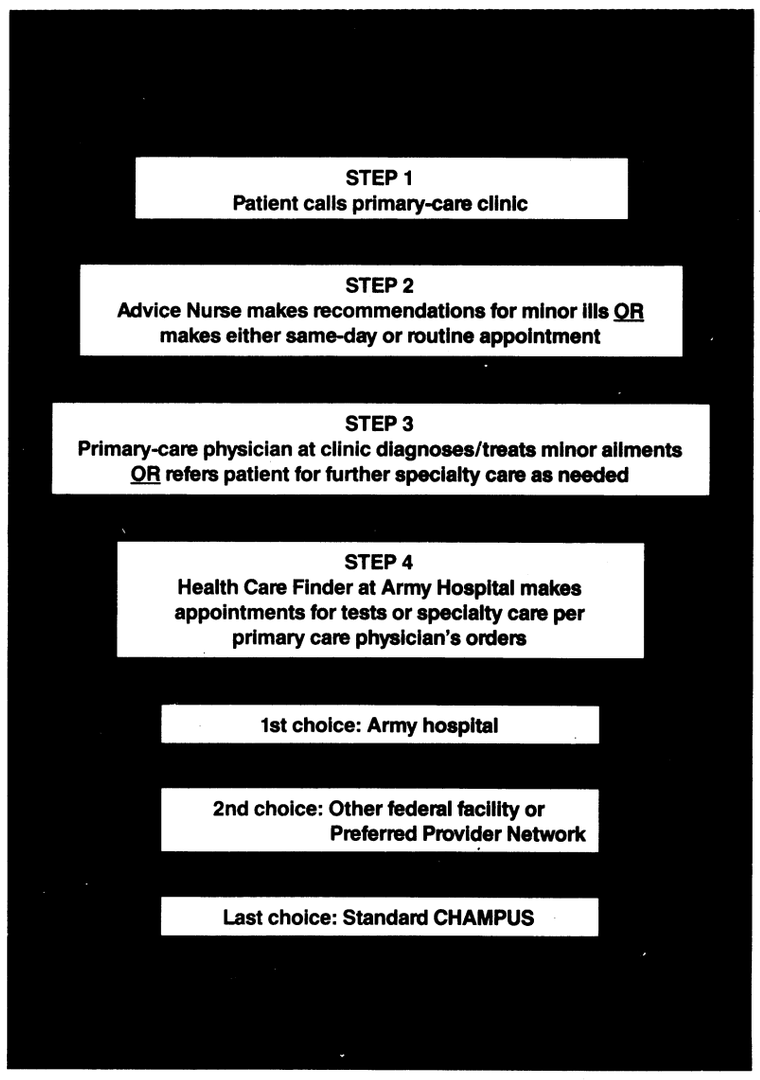
As part of a new program implemented by the U.S. Army Health Services Command, Martin Army Community Hospital is participating in a new program designed to bring military and civilian health resources together, according to hospital officials.

The program, Gateway to Care, will serve as the Army's pathway to a future coordinated care system, said hospital spokeswoman Jeanne Dickerson. This system, called coordinated care, will encompass all U.S. armed forces, said Dickerson. This is a new approach to military medicine that resulted from a decision from Dr. Enrique Mendez, assistant secretary of Defense for Health Affairs.

Currently, active-duty soldiers, their family members and other Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services-eligible beneficiaries must determine their own medical needs and find ways for these needs to be met.

Under the Gateway to Care's coordinated-care system, a health-care provider will be assigned to each patient to oversee his or her care, totally and continuously. The provider may be a family physician or a panel of physicians. This allows for a closer relationship between the patient and their primary-care physician, said Dickerson.

For example, currently, if a soldier has an eye infection, he would have to arrange an appointment with the eye clinic at his own discretion. Under the Gateway to Care program, the soldier would see his primary-care physician, who would diagnose his problem and coordinate the proper treatment for him or her.



At a later date, active-duty soldiers, their families and other CHAMPUS-eligible beneficiaries will be asked to voluntarily enroll themselves into the program, said Dickerson. By doing so, patients will be assured of being assigned a specific primary-care clinic, where the professional staff, will coordinate their medical care, said Dickerson.

"Here at Martin Army (Community Hospital), Colonel Vernon Spaulding, commander of the hospital, will provide guidance concerning the civilian health-care options and will manage health-care resources and funding to maximize benefits for all categories of beneficiaries," said Dickerson. "Our program goals will focus on improved patient care, easier access and more convenient care."

Airlines change fares

Many airlines have restructured their fares eliminating most government contract military leave fares. This may result in a higher cost for both official and unofficial travel.

Airlines have also imposed a $25 fee for any changes or cancellations after a ticket has been issued. Official government travel tickets are exempt from this fee on most airlines.

Budget offices and travelers should be aware of the potential increase in cost to tickets being issued. Fare information can be obtained by contacting the Scheduled Airline Ticket Office at 687-4900.

REMEMBERING WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today — April 24, 1942

•Japanese forces in Burma have attacked defending British and Chinese units, threatening encirclement of the smaller allied force. Two Japanese columns, supported by armor, seem to be trying to envelop the Chinese. Chinese resistance is said to be ferocious, but they have been driven back by an enemy who outnumbered them as much as 10 to 1.

•A daring raid by British commandos on the German-held French coast near Boulogne has increased German fears of invasion.

Field Marshal Karl Gerd von Rundstedt has been assigned to France, perhaps to bolster the coast defenses against such an invasion. However, the field marshal's assignment has alarmed many British who still believe a German invasion of Britain possible.

•The first allied confrontation of an American air attack on four Japanese cities came today when Moscow radio announced that an American plane landed in Siberia. The plane, having lost its bearings after the raid, accidentally landed in the Soviet Union and its crew was interned under international law.

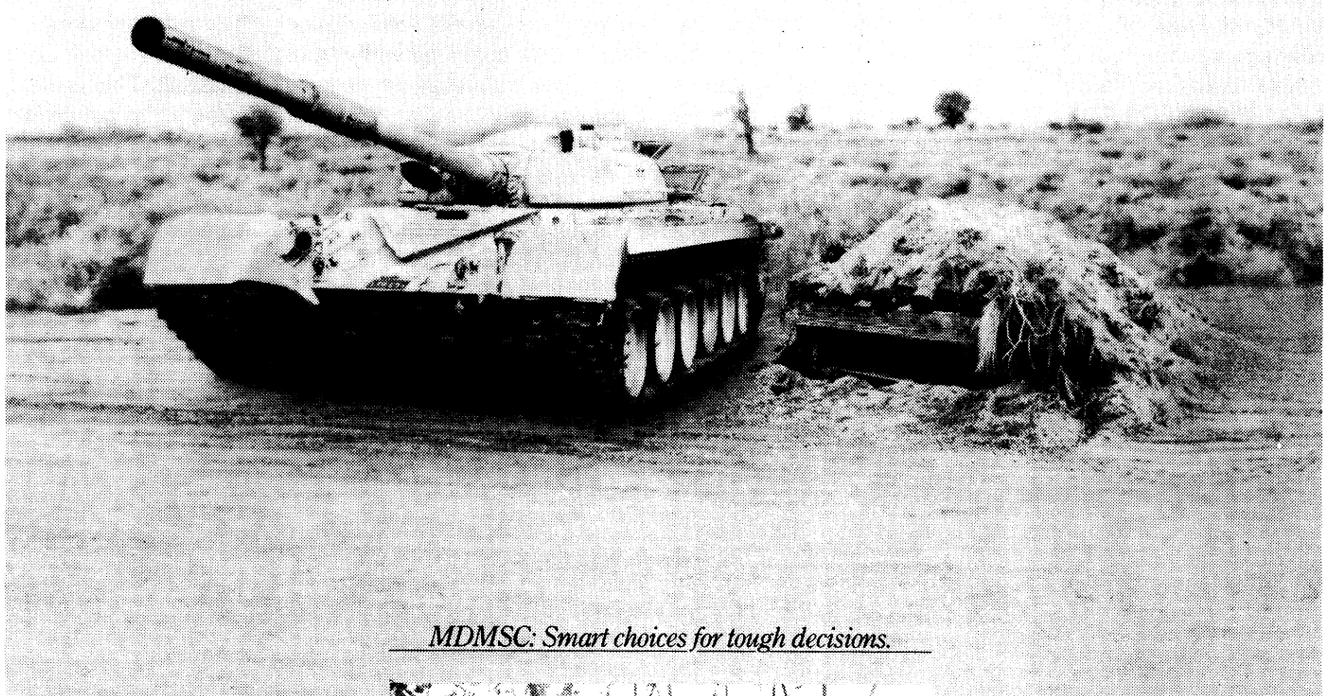
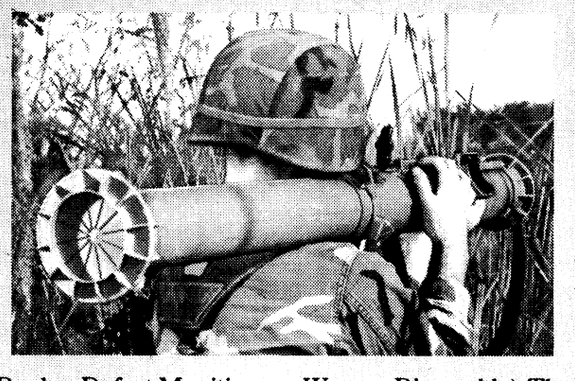
OF THE TWO, TODAY'S WARFIGHTER IS BETTER PREPARED TO DEAL WITH THE THREAT ON THE LEFT.



MDMSC: Smart choices for tough decisions.



Sand, earth and timber. These are the makings of the common bunker. They've been around for centuries, but surprisingly, today's warfighter still has no easy way to defeat these obstacles.

What is needed is a Bunker Defeat Munition (BDM). This weapon will offer the stand-off capability to immediately defeat and destroy battlefield obstacles, including enemy earth and timber fortifications, masonry walls and light armor.

Now, McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Company (MDMSC) and Talley Defense Systems have a bunker buster munition that offers just what is needed—the SMAW-D (Shoulder-launched Multipurpose Assault Weapon-Disposable). The SMAW-D is lightweight, compact, disposable and most of all, lethal. In short, the SMAW-D is the best way for today's warfighter to effectively deal with everything from the newest weaponry to the oldest obstacles on the battlefield.

Soldiers to receive new LES at end of April

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning military personnel will receive the new Joint Service Software Leave and Earnings Statement at the end of this month, said 2nd Lt. Phillip Collins, assistant JSS project officer at Fort Benning's Finance and Accounting Office.

Each soldier will also receive a booklet that will provide an explanation of each block on the new LES, Collins said.

The new LES has several changes that make it more accurate, said Collins, including more data boxes for leave, taxes, dependents and general pay data.

The following are some of the most common changes.

FICA, or Federal Insurance Contributions Act, taxes have been separated into two entries: FICA-Social Security and FICA-Medicare. Collins said that soldiers should realize that this is not a new tax, but just an accurate breakdown of the FICA tax into its separate components.

Under FICA taxes will also be two new boxes that show medicare wages year to date (MED WG YTD) and medicare tax year to date (MD TX YTD).

Soldiers with Direct Deposit will receive the odd cents normally carried forward under the old system as part of their net pay. For the first LES, the odd cents will be paid to the soldier as an entry under Entitlements as EVEN$. For soldiers without Direct Deposit, the odd cents will be deducted and paid when they total $1.

Because the new system is computerized, pay changes can be made almost immediately and will take effect the next pay period. For example, a casual pay of $500 processed before the mid-month cut off date will be deducted in its entirety from the mid-month pay.

Collins added that under the new system, soldiers will also receive a Net Pay Advice Statement each month prior to mid-month payday, regardless of whether the soldier receives a mid-month payment or not.

The NPA will provide pay data and administrative remarks for soldiers receiving mid-month pay and administrative remarks for those who do not.

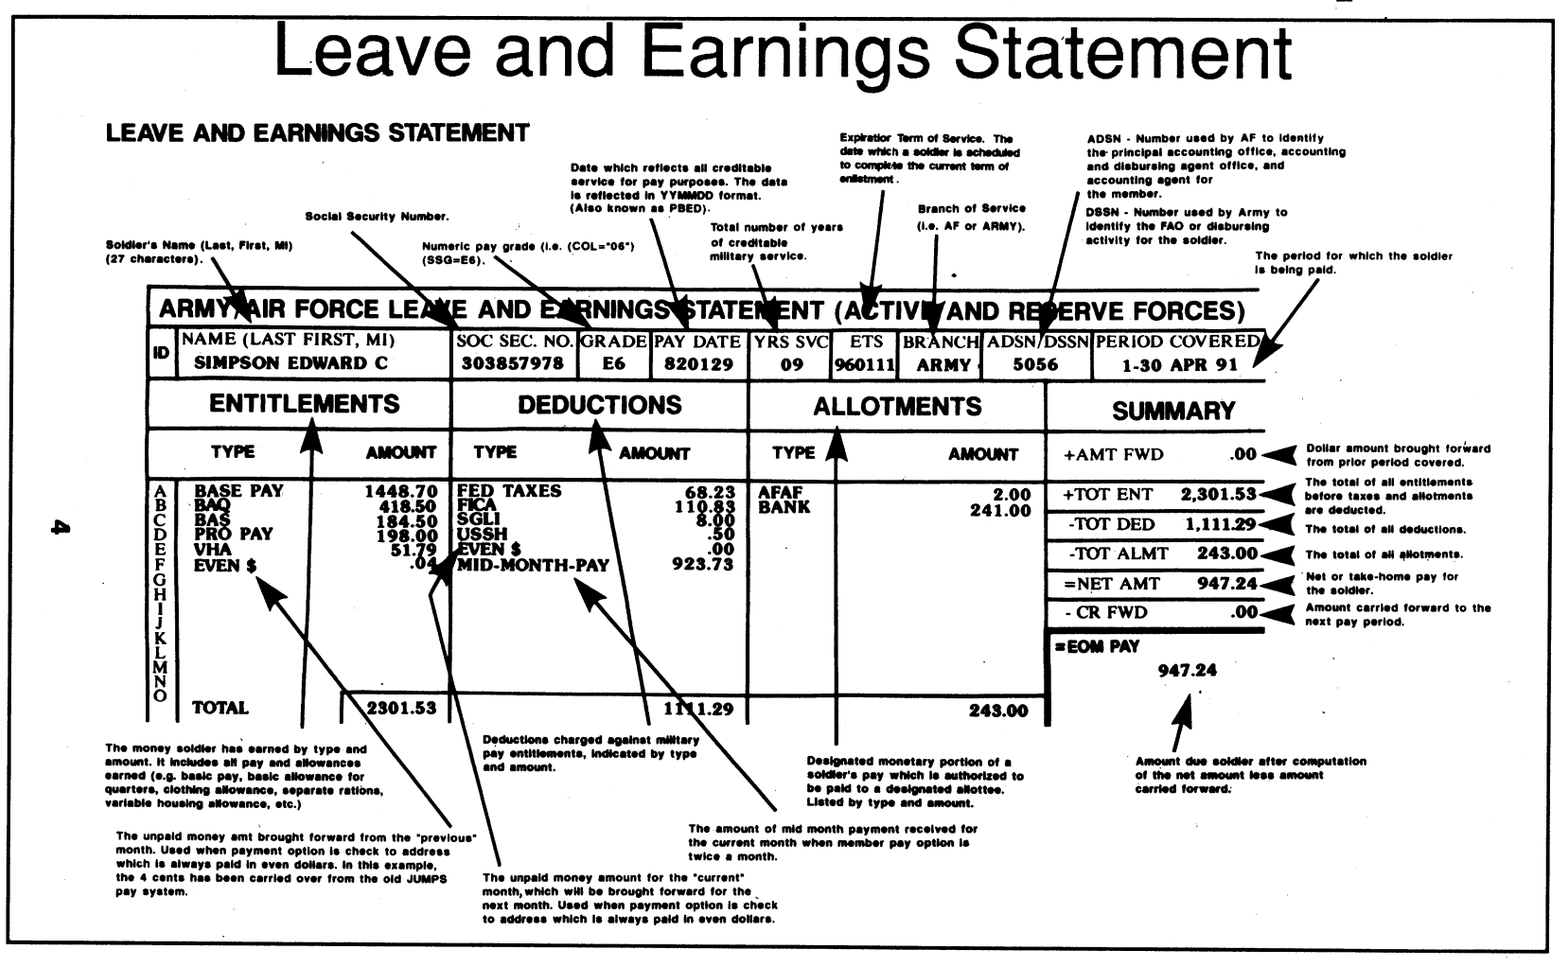
Collins said the NPA will give an accurate report of what the soldier will receive at mid-month, unlike the old LES, which only gave an approximation.

Advance pay will be handled with three entries on the new LES, an Entitlements and Deductions entry for the amount of the advance pay and an additional deduction entry for the pro-rated amount that will be deducted each month. The remarks section will indicate the balance due each month.

Rather than have a monthly entry for Clothing Replacement Allowance accrual, the new LES will only have an entry the month that the accrual is paid.

If a soldier is receiving a Variable Housing Allowance and does not turn in a copy of his or her lease or mortgage to the Finance and Accounting Office within 60 days, the entitlement will stopped immediately and the amount already paid will be collected.

Collins emphasized that soldiers who have problems reading or understanding the new LES should contact their Personnel Administrations Center for assistance. The PAC can then make an appointment for the soldier, he said.



Got a question about pay?

Go to your PAC instead of directly to Finance and Accounting

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Pay inquiry procedures for the Finance and Accounting Office will change May 1, said Capt. Mary Wallace, chief of Pay and Examinations Division.

The change will require all soldiers to go through their Personnel Administrations Center when they have pay inquiries rather than go directly to the Finance and Accounting Office.

The PAC will collect all pay inquiry forms (Department of the Army 2142) and substantiating documents directly from the soldiers and turn them in to the FAO to be researched and completed.

Once the research is complete, Wallace said, the pay inquiry forms will be returned to the PACs, that can then return the completed form to the individual soldier with an explanation of the inquiry.

If the FAO requires an appointment with a soldier who submitted a pay inquiry, it will be annotated on the returned copy of the pay inquiry form. The soldier must use the copy of the form as an appointment slip when he or she comes to the pay inquiry section, said Wallace.

She added that soldiers who come to the FAO without the returned DA 2142 will be returned to their PAC and told to submit a pay inquiry through the PAC.

Wallace also said that when PAC personnel call the FAO to make an appointment to submit their pay inquiry forms, they need to know the number of forms they will be bringing in to allow the appointment clerk to assign the appropriate amount of time for the appointment.

PAC appointments will start at 7:45 a.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday and at 10 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday. PAC personnel should call 545-3083 or 545-1895 to set up an appointment to submit pay inquiry forms.

Wallace said the reason for the change is to provide more efficient service to the soldier.

"This will keep the soldier from having to wait in long lines at the FAO. Also, the new procedure will allow for solutions to soldiers' pay problems at the lowest level and will provide an excellent training program to help PAC clerks assist their soldiers in the area of finance."

Fort Benning celebrates Earth Day

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

In a special ceremony, Pam Parmer's first-graders at William H. Wilbur School planted a crepe myrtle tree Wednesday in honor of Earth Day.

According to Gail Wilson, Wilbur School principal, the class has been studying plants in class, and this served as a culmination of their studies.

Parmer read a short book to them on trees prior to the planting, and the class recited a poem on trees for those present.

Morris Armstrong, solid waste and recycling manager for the office of Environmental Management at the Directorate of Engineering and Housing on post, told the class that one tree for each Fort Benning School was donated by the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission in appreciation of the work of the students in bringing in telephone books to be recycled last fall.

Each of the first-graders helped to replace the dirt around the tree in the school's central courtyard.

Williams was reduced to the rank of private 1 and received a dishonorable discharge.

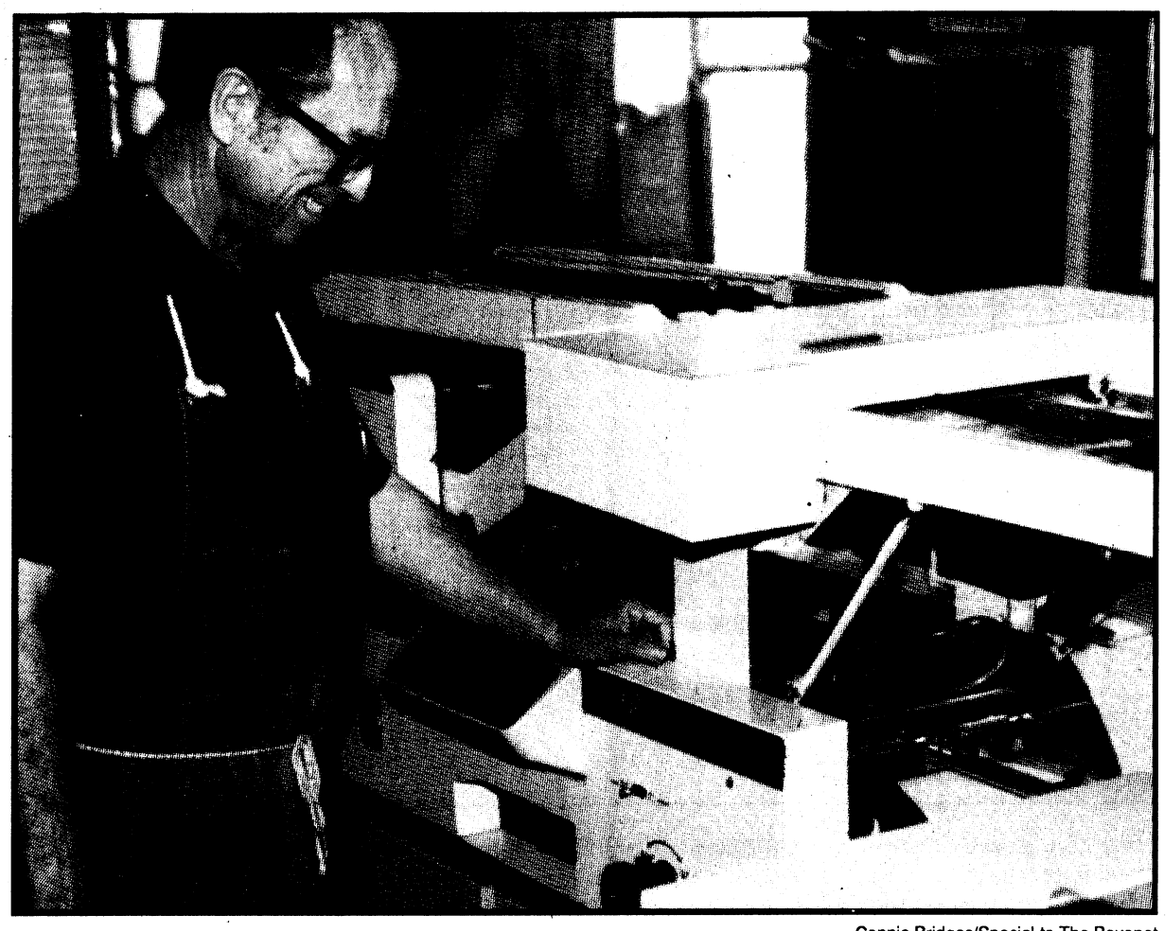
Services combine printing

Joint operation to upgrade equipment and efficiency



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Larry Hardcastle, of the Defense Printing Service, operates an offset press.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Printing and duplication services at Fort Benning are now consolidated as a result of a Department of Defense Management Review decision.

As of April 6, the Army, Navy, Air Force and the Defense Logistics Agency printing and duplicating services are consolidated under the Defense Printing Service.

According to Annette Phelps, Fort Benning's acting chief of Operations and Systems Integration for the Directorate of Information Management, the Department of the Navy is serving as the executive agent for DPS.

In addition to assuming management of the federal printing plant on post, DPS is also responsible for the procurement of all commercial printing that cannot be done in-house and must go through the Government Printing Office in Atlanta.

For customers on post, this new arrangement means that they will now use DD form 282 for printing requests and as a blanket authority for duplicating services. In addition, a new form, DD 844, must be used for each individual duplicating job.

William J. Nichols, director of the Defense Printing Service, Detachment Branch Office, at Fort Benning, said that for the most part users will continue to function as they always have in the past.

However, customers should plan on a 15 percent increase in all in-house printing and a 5 1/2 percent increase in all commercial printing farmed out by the Government Printing Office.

Since the DPS will be industrially funded through these increases, it is expected that the service will be able to upgrade equipment and provide for a more efficient operation of printing functions.

There will also be a study of usage of the satellite duplicating units at such sites as Infantry Hall, Martin Army Community Hospital and the Sand Hill Infantry Training Center. Hours will then change according to the most efficient usage.

According to Violet Jones, chief of Resources Management for DOIM, customers will need to look ahead for their printing needs or be willing to pay the overtime for "rush" jobs.

There will be other ways for them to become more cost-conscious as well, such as having more of an item printed at one time, not doing printing on a "nice to have" but on a "must have" basis, and printing documents front and back not one-sided.

"We're taking it on a day-to-day basis," Jones said. "The Navy's way of doing business is quite different from the Army's. We're all learning."

Phelps said the new setup should make each activity more efficient in managing its printing dollar.

Islanders wake up Dreamers, snatch volleyball championship

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Two new champions were crowned at the 1992 U.S. Army Infantry Training Center Volleyball Championships Tuesday night at Briant Wells Field House. Champions were decided in both the men's and women's divisions.

Women's Division

In the women's championship, the Islanders came from behind to win the first match from the Dreamers with game scores of 13-15, 17-15, and 15-11.

Because the tournament was double elimination and this was the Dreamers' first loss, a second match between the two teams had to be played.

In the first game of the final match, the Islanders took control when they were able to score 8 unanswered points and win 15-7.

The second game was a little closer and neither team could gain a lead of more than 3 points at any time during the game.

The Dreamers finally gained control at 14-11 and Maria Cortes ended the game when Stephanie Burton couldn't handle Cortes's serve. The Dreamers had tied up the match with a 15-11 win.

In the final game, the Dreamers took an early 3-0 lead only to see the Islanders come back with 4 straight points to take a 4-3 lead.

The Dreamers then scored three points of their own to go up 6-4.

The Islanders would not be out done and roared back with 5 unanswered points to move ahead 9-6.

The Dreamers came out of their daze to score 5 straight points and reclaim the lead at 11-9.

The Islanders scored 2 points to tie the game at 11-11.

After each team scored 1 point each, the Dreamers called time out with the score tied at 12-12. It didn't help.

The Islanders scored 2 points to move to game and match point at 14-13, and on a perfect set from Renee Nixon, Lupe McMoore sent the final kill over the net and the Dreamer defense couldn't handle the shot. The Islanders won the game 15-13, and the match Islanders two games to one.

"I thought they were going to get to the hit, but when it bounced the other way I was glad it was over," said McMoore after the match. "I was so nervous. This was my first championship ever — in any sport."

"Coach said that if we played as a team, we could win," she added. "We are more like a family now than when we first started a few months ago. This is great."

Men's Division

In the men's championship, The Infantry Band defeated 598th Maintenance Company in straight sets 15-7, 16-14.

The Band came out smoking and quickly took control of the match by dominating at the net. Bernard Milock and Hector Flores each had numerous point kills keeping the 598th defenders on their heels.

In the second game, both teams traded points up to a six-all tie. The 598th slammed out 5 points to the Band's 2 to take an 11-8 lead.

The lead changed hands twice before the Band scored the final three points to win the game 16-14, and claim the title.

"We felt confident as a team that we could win," said David Lake, coach for the Band.

"The only loss for us this season came from the 598th, so we had a little more motivation going in," he added. "Having only seven players on the team, we knew we had to win fast or they would tire us out."

Blazers silence Thunder's boom

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

The Blue Blazers and Blue Thunder met on Gordon Field April 14 to find out who was true blue at soccer and by the games end, the Blazers had taken the boom out of the Thunder by a score of 7-2.

The Blazers kept the ball in the Thunders's half of the field for most of the first half and scored four goals by using an aggressive offense. The Thunder's offense was not allowed in the Blazers goal area due to their stingy tenacious style of defense.

The Thunder came out of the halftime intermission more aggressive and within minutes scored their first goal of the game. The Blazers answered immediately with a goal of their own making the score 5-1. Midway through the second half, Adam Canada of the Thunder scored on a direct kick making the score 5-2. The Blazers added two more goals in the second half making the final 7-2, Blazers.

For the Blazers, Dean Roggia scored three goals, Carlos Maldanado scored 2, Johnny Rodriguez and David Heekin added 1 each.

Ray Schuck and Adam Canada both put in one goal each for the Blue Thunder.

Falcons clip Flyers' wings

By John W. Peeler
Special to The Bayonet

The Flyers and Falcons met April 16 on French Field with the Falcons unbeaten streak on the line. The Falcons preserved their undefeated season in the 9 to 11-year-old soccer league with a score of 7-0.

The entire first half was played almost exclusively on the Flyers end of the field with the Falcons' Dennis Riley accounting for three goals. The first half ended with the Falcons on top by a score of 3-0.

As the second half opened, it looked as if the Flyers had adjusted their defense to compensate for the powerful Falcons offense until Bryan Atchinson broke down the middle with the ball scoring for the Falcons. Atchinson's goal made the score 4-0 with the Falcons in the lead. Atchinson scored another quick goal for a Falcon 5-0 lead.

The Flyers defense tightened up and held off the Falcons until the final few minutes of the game when Jason Balleu scored two consecutive goals making the final score Falcons 7, Flyers 0. The victory left the Falcons as the only unbeaten team in the 9- to 11-year-old soccer league.

USAMU shooters tops in regionals

By David Erickson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

The Peach State Regional Highpower Rifle Championships were April 10 through 12 at Fort Benning's Easley Range. The match, hosted by the Chattahoochee Rifle Club, drew more than 100 participants from throughout the Southeast.

In the regional team championship match, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Gold team posted a score of 1976-75x to take top honors. The USAMU also placed second and third in the team events.

The individual championship was taken by Robert Harbison with a score of 796-32x, just two points short of the national record. Second place went to Grant Singley with a score of 793-29x, followed by Chris Irish at 788-31x in third place.

The Excellence In Competition Match, which concluded the championships, was won by civilian shooter German Salazar with a score of 481-10x. Other Fort Benning soldiers earning points toward their Distinguished Riflemen's Badge were Robert Aylward at 474-17x, Gary Estes, 473-12x and Richard Wyckstandt 466- 10x. By earning six points, Wyckstandt completed the requirements to earn the badge, indicating the achievement of outstanding shooting skills in competition.

In other activities, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit was represented by a small delegation at the USA World Cup in Chino, Calif. In men's three position shooting, Rajmond Debevec of Slovenia posted a score of 1,275.5 — just 1.2 points short of the world record — to earn the gold medal. Bob Foth, 1988 U.S. Olympian, placed second at 1264.6, followed by Harald Stenvaag of Norway at 1,260.2. USAMU shooters Tommy Tamas and Glenn Dubis tied for fourth place at 1,258.4.

In other USA World Cup activities, Troy Lawton and David Edmondson finished fourth and seventh in the 10-Meter Running Target event. More significantly, Lawton and Edmondson both closed the gap on civilian shooter Fritz Allen for a spot on the U.S. Olympic Shooting Team. The USA World Cup counted as the second of three selection matches to determine the running target members of the 1992 Olympic Team.

With the two matches completed, Allen has a total of 1,132 followed by USAMU's Lawton at 1,131 and Edmondson at 1,124. Civilian Rusty Hill has a 1,121 total to round out the list of top contenders. Only two slots are open for making the team. The final selection match is scheduled in May with the Suhl World Cup in Germany.

Former oilman now angles for big bass

Outboard Motor Corporation

In the late 1960s, Randy Dearman earned his living as an oil field construction engineer, but he earned his reputation as a bass fisherman.

One day he was talked into guiding two anglers on a fishing trip in East Texas, and the next day the two clients persuaded him to take them out again. One was a doctor, who even wrote Dearman a medical excuse for missing work.

"That was the end of my oil field job and the beginning of my fishing career," laughs Dearman, now a veteran tournament pro and member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff. "It's been a hectic career, too, but I wouldn't change it."

Although Dearman wouldn't change his career, he has seen the sport change greatly during two decades as a tournament pro.

"The biggest change is the knowledge today's young anglers have about bass fishing," he says. "They know nearly as much now when they begin tournament fishing as I do."

"There has been a tremendous quest for knowledge over the years, and this knowledge has been made readily available in magazine articles, books and television programs. That wasn't the case when I started my fishing career."

In the early days, he says, anglers who were dedicated enough to stay on the water for untold hours learned by their experiences. Their knowledge was not often shared with other tournament competitors.

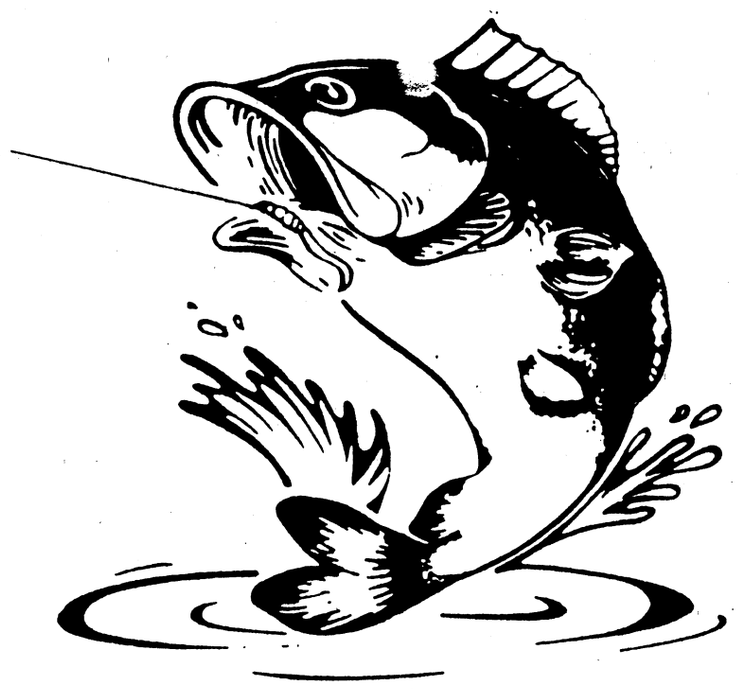
"Although we were close friends, we were also loners," says Dearman, "and there weren't very many of us. Back in the early 1970s, there were probably only about 10 fishermen truly capable of winning any tournament. Today, anyone in the 300-man fields we have is capable of winning.

"It took us 20 years to learn some of the things today's fishermen can learn in a matter of hours."

Dearman has also noticed a tremendous change in the quality and variety of tackle available to today's angler.

"I'd say bass fishing has progressed more in the past 20 years than in all its previous history," he says. "I have a lot of lures, rods and reels I fished with in my early tournaments, but I haven't used them in years because today's equipment is so much better.

"Boats have also come a long. way. In fact, the bass boat industry was created to fill the demands of today's fishermen. The boats and motors we used two decades ago probably wouldn't even be allowed in today's tournaments."



Racer may switch cars for Winston 500 May 3

Superspeedway Press Department

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Terry Labonte, whose tremendous start in the 1992 NASCAR Winston Cup season has gone almost unnoticed, could shake up some folks if plans for the Winston 500 May 3 at Talladega materialize.

Labonte, the 1984 NASCAR Winston Cup champion, has driven the Sunoco Chevrolet to fourth place in the current point standings. His is the second-highest ranked General Motors car, behind the Oldsmobile of Harry Gant and the Fords of Davey Allison and Bill Elliott.

If all goes as planned, Labonte will be driving a Ford himself in the Winston 500.

"Right now, we are planning on running it for the first time at the Winston 500 in Talladega," said Labonte. "We still have a lot of work to do and some actual testing time at Talladega, but we're excited about it."

Reserved seat tickets for the Winston 500, as well as for the two races on Super Saturday, May 2, remain on sale. For information and seat selection, call the ticket office at (205) 362-9064.

Baseball requires safety

Inattention, distractions primary causes of injury

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Play ball!

From spring training to the World Series, Americans exalt their "national pastime." Baseball is neither limited to the national level, nor are the players limited to those in the National and American Leagues.

Those leagues don't have a corner on the baseball market, by any means. Youth in Little League and local school teams have carved out a fair-sized chunk of the baseball scene.

Granted, little Joey who lives down the street isn't gunning for Dale Murphy's starting job, and cute Sally with the ponytail doesn't throw 90 mph fastballs. They're pouring out all they have into the sport, though.

The fans in the stands cheer them just as loudly as they cheer the big leaguers. They perch at the edge of their seats in anticipation of the close call at third and jump to their feet in response to homers. These fans are rooting for their friends, their neighbors and their children.

The kids on the field aren't playing for multi-million dollar salaries or athletic shoe endorsement contracts. They're playing for fun, and their fun should be safe.

Many athletic injuries can be avoided. Parents and coaches owe it to Little Leaguers to make their sport as safe as possible.

Personal protective equipment can prevent baseball-related injuries. Wild pitches are the greatest threat to batters. Therefore, batting helmets are an essential safety item. To be effective, the helmet must fit well and be approved.

Catchers are around most of the action on the field. Thus, they are more vulnerable to injuries. They require extra protection, to include helmet with face mask and chest, knee and shin pads.

The youth of the players presents a potential hazard. Youngsters often have short attention spans, especially if the game isn't proceeding at a blistering pace. Inattention and distraction are two primary causes of baseball injuries.

To alleviate boredom and prevent accidents, idle fielders should be encouraged to chatter during lulls in the game. Players on the sidelines should be observing and studying those on the field to glean playing tips.

Collisions on the playing field often result in injuries.

Establishing zones of defense will help fielders avoid collisions when chasing high fly balls. Fielding players should always call out their intentions.

Throwing the bat while running to first base is a major source of injury among young players. Coaches should inform players exactly what to do with the bat after hitting the ball.

Some leagues have players drop the bat in a specially marked area. Another practice is calling players "out" if they fail to drop the bat correctly.

Baseball offers recreation, competition and athletic and sportsmanship training. Spectators are offered entertainment and excitement. Safety is an element players and spectators must be committed to.

Attentiveness, correct teaching of skills, and mandatory use of protective equipment are ingredients for safe baseball.

Faith student wins trip to Space Camp

Jamie Parks IV discusses a poster with Science teacher Mary Matthews.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

An essay on an imaginary spacecraft that could double as an ambulance to treat the ill in space and a drawing of it won Faith Middle School sixth-grader Jamie Parks IV a scholarship to the U.S. Space Camp at Huntsville, Ala., this spring.

Parks will leave for the five-day camp Sunday. He applied for the scholarship in February and received word of his acceptance in March.

His idea to try for the spring class occurred when his mother heard about the scholarships from his uncle.

Mary Matthews, Parks' science teacher at Faith, said several of her students have gone before but always in the summer.

She hopes to "pick his brain" about the things he has learned when he returns.

Parks will be taking any assignments that he may miss during the camp with him to complete during his free time.

Matthews said when the U.S. Space Camp called to notify him of his acceptance, the representative said she wanted to talk to him in person because she was so impressed with the caring concept of a space ambulance to help other people.

When asked where he got the idea, Parks said his father, Staff Sgt. Jamie Parks III, is a biomedic with the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, 34th Medical Battalion. When he was stationed in Germany, his father repaired some medical equipment for nothing so it wouldn't have to be replaced. Parks said hewants to be helpful like his father.

The Huntsville Space Camp is where thousands of would-be astronauts come every year and ordinarily pay several hundred dollars each to get a taste of what's like to live in space.

Trainees work in teams of 12, get hands-on instruction on what it's like to get into a bulky spacesuit, experience the feeling of weightlessness and walking in space, build a simple space structure from long pole-like pieces, learn about rocket propulsion, mission control and the history of the U.S. space program and taste "astronaut food."

Trainees finally apply their training in a simulated one-hour shuttle mission including launch, flight and landing.

Camp counselors watch closely, throw in problems, and teams are graded on how well they perform together.

Parks was told that he was one of about six to eight in his session who received scholarships.

Space Camp opened in Huntsville in 1982 and more than 90,000 have participated in the program since. A second facility opened in 1990 at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida.

It is specifically for children in grades four through six . Space Academy is a more advanced program for grades seven through nine. Space Academy II is for high school students.

Riverside hosts egg hunt

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

More than 1,000 children participated in the Easter Egg Hunt at Riverside Saturday, estimated Billie Smith, director of Youth Services at Fort Benning.

Open to children 18 months to 12 years of age, the hunt itself was over quickly because of the large number of children seeking the hidden 3,500 eggs.

The Easter Bunny was on hand for visiting and pictures, and clowns and bunny helpers assisted.

Balloons, music by The Infantry Band and McGruff the Crime Dog added a festive air to the event.

Giveaways included T-shirts, Frisbees, sports water bottles and yo-yos.

Videotaping the hunt on the Riverside lawn that is his home was Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general.

White and his wife, Linda, have opened up their home to the post a number of times since coming here last fall. Next month they will be hosting a special recognition ceremony for volunteers.

Tips make dining out more enjoyable

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Dining out with young children can be a stressful experience. Restaurant employees get nervous, and parents are on edge, never knowing quite what to expect. Is staying home the answer?

Here are some tips from experienced parents to make your dining-out experience more enjoyable for all.

• Choose a "child-friendly" location. Some restaurants are simply more suitable for young guests — fast food places, family-style restaurants, "coffee shops," or sidewalk cafes, for example. You will feel more relaxed about dining and you'll often get more help keeping your child(ren) happy.

• Phone first. If you are going to a restaurant for the first time, call ahead to make sure children are welcome. Ask if they have high chairs or booster seats; if not, you can take a clip-on seat that fits most tables or improvise a booster seat by wrapping a couple of old telephone books with contact paper. Find out if you can place your order before you arrive to cut down on waiting time once you are there.

• Bring your own. You know your child best. If he needs special equipment, like a bottle or cup with a spout, bring it along. Diversions in the form of snacks or toys can keep your little one occupied until your meal comes.

• . Keep it as familiar as possible. If your child eats little or is not used to a variety of foods, order a small portion of a food he does know, split dinners among your children, or bring along peanut butter and jelly. It will cost you less, waste less and in all likelihood, your child will be happier (and so will you!)

• Arrive early. Try to get to the restaurant at an off-peak time. This way you can avoid long waits and crowded conditions.

• Try to sit by a window. The activity outside can provide novelty for your child while you are waiting to be served.

• The quick fix. If you could not order ahead of time, ask if there are foods that can be prepared quickly. If you must wait for your food, one parent can take a restless child for a short walk to the lobby or parking lot.

• Bail out. If all your efforts fail and your child starts falling apart in the restaurant, have one parent or an accompanying adult or teen-ager exit with him quickly to avoid spoiling the meal for everyone else. You can take home the food he has not eaten.

Everytime you dine out at a restaurant, it is a learning experience for your baby or young child and for you. What does not work one time may work the next. Rest assured, as you both get better at it, there will be better days and better restaurant experiences ahead.

Good grades yield bowling

Fort Benning Schools

Nearly 14,000 free bowling tickets are being distributed to students in the Fort Benning schools. These bowling tickets have been provided by the Fort Benning Bowling Centers to recognize academic success on the April 13 report card.

Each Fort Benning school child in grades 1 and 2 will receive a ticket entitling him or her to a free game of bowling for each "O" on their report card (for this grading period). Students in grades 3 through 8 will receive a ticket for each "A" on their report card for this grading period. Arrangements have been made for kindergarten and special groups.

This ongoing activity and free bowling tickets will be distributed at the end of the next grading period for all students meeting the same criteria.

Civilian lauded for good job

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"I was just doing my job," Terry Walls said about the compliments she received from Master Sgt. Phil Caterina on an Army Communities of Excellence Customer Feedback Card.

Caterina said that Walls, as a social assistant at the Welcome Center in Soldiers Plaza, was the first person he met at Fort Benning, and he was glad of it.

"She made me feel important and welcome. I'm glad I saw her before inprocessing. This comment was also left at Building 2622 (Welcome Center), but in case nobody reads that one, she'll get recognized here," he said.

Walls said she was working at the Welcome Center beginning Feb. 24 in a 30-day emergency overhire position while they were waiting for the slot to be officially instated.

Walls

Her duties included greeting soldiers new to Fort Benning and making them feel welcome, assisting families and friends make their way around post and directing those who were lost to where they needed to go.

"It was a great job," Walls said. "I like helping soldiers and families, and I treat everyone the same."

She came to the position from Army Emergency Relief. There she had volunteered for awhile, put in an application and worked as an employee for a time, then went back to volunteering when the money ran out.

"It was also a great job," she said. "It makes you feel good to help soldiers and families without making moral judgments, and it was hard to let go."

The Customer Feedback Card Program is used as a tool to help better serve soldiers.

"At AER, a lot of suggestions from the cards were implemented," Walls added.

After the Welcome Center, Walls went to work for the Officers' Club where she is currently the business manager for membership and patronage.

Loyd sponsors parent breakfast to keep in touch with school

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Soldier parents of students at Frank R. Loyd School were guests at a 7 a.m. breakfast in honor of the Month of the Military Child at the school April 16.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, spoke about the parent-school connection at the fourth annual Soldier Appreciation Breakfast.

"It's magic what a little guidance can do. I appreciate the support and love you give your children and the difference it makes."

Loyd Principal Dr. Judy Gilliam told parents that it is possible to tell the parents who care. It's the ones whose children do the best in school.

"It's an awesome power," she said, "that I hope you won't take lightly."

Loyd School teachers also attended the event for which the students had made placemats.

Soldiers to practice war-time jobs

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

The 533rd Transportation Company will send 36 soldiers to Italy Saturday in support of Operation Dragon Hammer.

The soldiers will leave at 8:30 a.m. from company headquarters, building 2810.

"It is a chance for us to practice our war-time mission in an environment we can't duplicate here on Fort Benning," said 1st Lt. Josuway Ferguson, commander of the deploying Task Force.

Ferguson said Operation Dragon Hammer is the largest field problem the Army will have during fiscal 1992.

"To get the opportunity to participate in something this big is a real challenge," said Ferguson.

1st Lt. Tom Clady, executive officer of the 533rd, described some of the challenges the unit has already overcome.

"Many of our drivers have never driven in Europe so we've had to have driving classes to get them a European drivers license," said Clady. "Plus we've had to train the drivers on different types of tractors than the ones they are used to driving here. Our unit has tractors set up for hard road surfaces. In Italy, they will be using tractors that are tactical off road types."

"The drivers have been well trained for their mission," said Sgt. 1st Class Alfred Irving, the non-commissioned officer in charge of the deploying troops. "The number one thing that is being stressed at every level is safety. I'm taking 36 soldiers over and each one will be looking out for the other. With all those eyes and ears tuned to safety, we hope to remain accident free."

Ferguson described the mission the 533rd will perform.

"Once we hit Italy, we will draw equipment from a storage facility and proceed to our operations area approximately 175 miles away. After we set up our camp, we will begin to run a 24-hour-a-day operation in support of Dragon Hammer. This will include our soldiers transporting all types of supplies needed by the troops."

"We don't foresee getting much free time," said Irving. "But, we do have a USO trip set up that will allow our soldiers to see a bit of Rome. We want to train, but we want to make it as enjoyable as possible for the troops."

For the families of the deploying soldiers, a Family Support Group has been formed.

"We want our deploying soldiers to know that their family members will be helped if a problem arises that they cannot handle," said 1st Sgt. David Pabon, first sergeant of the 533rd.

"Any family member who feels he or she needs help should feel free to contact me at 545-5072 or 569-5447."

Families send care packages to Costa Rica

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

The family support group of Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion recently collected clothes and toys and mailed them to the children of Puerto Viejo, Costa Rica.

Soldiers of the 43rd are part of Task Force "Siempre Listo," which has been in Costa Rica since January building and reconstructing schools, roads, bridges and a dock.

"We just wanted to say thank you in a meaningful way to the local citizens for the way they accepted and treated our soldiers" said Karen Nazario, wife of Maj. Richard Nazario, commander of the task force and the organizer of the effort.

"My husband told me about soldiers being offered a place at the dinner table in local homes," she said. "The people of Puerto Viejo, a small village near the construction base camp, really accepted our troops and tried to make their stay as enjoyable as possible."

The family support group wanted to thank those who looked out for their loved ones in a way they could afford, she said.

With limited funds and short reaction time, the members of the group decided to focus on the children of the village.

"Our guys noticed that the children had very little compared with what American children have and suggested we send a few things to them," she said.

The members of the group collected 13 large boxes of clothes and toys, and they sent them to a local church for distribution because they feared the mail would arrive too late if they sent them to the soldiers who were wrapping up the construction project.

" A very special thank you goes to Santa's Castle of Fort Benning," she said. "They not only donated toys but gave us $75 to help with the postage bill that ran to a total of $141. We could not have made it happen without their help."

The Family Support Group will hold a hot dog sale June 6 in front of the Thrift Store to help raise funds for future goodwill projects.

The main body of deployed soldiers will return to Fort Benning May 1 and the trail party on May 15.

Services use total force concept in Costa Rica

By S.M. Doll
107th Public Affairs Detachment

The sum of all its parts equals a total force effort under one command for the U.S. Southern Command.

Maj. Richard Nazario, executive officer, 43rd Engineer Battalion, has been put in command of an engineer task force providing humanitarian assistance in Costa Rica.

There are more than 800 active, National Guard and Reserve soldiers and airmen participating in Task Force "Siempre Listo," a Spanish phrase meaning "always ready."

The task force is part of a four-month, nation-assistance exercise called "Camino De La Paz '92 - Costa Rica," a Spanish phrase for "road of peace."

It involves constructing a new road, upgrading an existing road, installing concrete bridges, constructing a dock, and renovating and constructing classroom buildings in the remote provinces of Heredia and Limon.

Units from Georgia, Alabama, Kansas, Tennessee, Ohio, California, Missouri, Florida and the Virgin Islands are performing the nation-assistance operations.

In the original planning stages for Camino De La Paz, the components were to be separate. Two weeks into the exercise, the change was made to one command.

"My job, now that they have put me in charge of the whole exercise, is to help them (the component units) finish the missions," he said. Nazario's staff coordinates with the Costa Rican government and exercise units to ensure the equipment and materials are there.

It was the first time it was tried on this type of exercise, and it has been a success, Nazario said.

"This exercise was a great example of cooperation between the active and Reserve Forces," said Capt. Matthew Clark, commander of C Company, 43rd Engineer Battalion.

In addition to the original scope of work the task force is completing, Nazario and the soldiers were asked to help with other projects in the community.

"Water is very sparse here and (the Costa Ricans) were building a tank to provide water," said Nazario. "So, they came to us to for help to design it. And since we have the computers and the expertise, we assisted them."

Polish officer trains at Fort Benning

Fall of the Iron Curtain allows officer to learn about America, realize a dream

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Not too long ago Capt. Krzysztof Wojcik, a member of the Polish 6th Airborne Brigade, would have been considered the "enemy."

Now, clad in an American Battle Dress Uniform, he differs little from his American counterparts except for his distinctive name and accent.

Wojcik is the first Polish officer to come to Fort Benning since the demise of the Iron Curtain to participate in American training.

He has already completed the Airborne and Jumpmaster courses and is currently attending the Pathfinder course. After completing Ranger School, Wojcik will return to Poland to share his experiences.

"I never thought of us as enemies, just counterparts," Wojcik said regarding the Cold War. "I always admired the American Army."

After being tested in English and military skills, Wojcik and three other captains were selected as candidates to come to the United States for training.

"I have been dreaming of coming to America for years. It is a great honor to be here and to be trained by the most powerful army in the world," he said.

Wojcik learned English in military school for use in reconnaissance behind NATO lines but now he uses it to learn the American way of doing things.

"I try to think in English rather than translating from Polish to English because it's easier that way," he said.

He added that training in America has presented him with some new experiences.

"The biggest difference is that I'm being trained by sergeants. In Poland, officers are trained only by officers. Also, the courses here are very short, dawn to dusk, with a lot of information being learned in a very short time."

Wojcik spends his free time with American host families and said that he has enjoyed such American recreations as fishing and eating barbecue.

"The hospitality here is great. I'm really impressed. Everyone wants to help me. I feel like family with some of the close friends I have made here like Sam and Donna Rice and David and Emmy Feist, my host families."

Wojcik said that he will return to Poland and use what he has learned in America to help train his own army.

His most memorable experience?

"I enjoy jumping from American aircraft with American soldiers and sharing the joy," Wojcik said.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

Military History Division

50 years ago this week...

German "Baedeker Raids" began in retaliation for raids by England's Royal Air Force.

• The Germans bombed Exeter, Bath, Norwich, York and Hull, all non-military targets, in retaliation for the RAF's March 28 raid on Lubeck. The raids came to be known as the "Baedeker Raids" because the targets were historic towns selected from the Baedecker Guide Book.

• In Burma, the Japanese forces failed to hold Taunggyi, which was defended by the Fifth Chinese Army. They then moved toward Lashio, capturing it from the defending 28th Chinese Division.

• China was cut off by land, forcing the Allies to send all supplies by air.

• Fighting continues on Mindanao in the Philippines. Fierce bombardment of Corregidor continued with reinforced strength and air support, pushing the defenders back.

• In New Guinea, Japanese preparations were well advanced for an amphibious attack on Port Moresby, code-named "Operation Mo."

• The Japanese carriers Shokaku, Zuikaku, an, Shoho sailed from Truk to take part in Operation Mo.

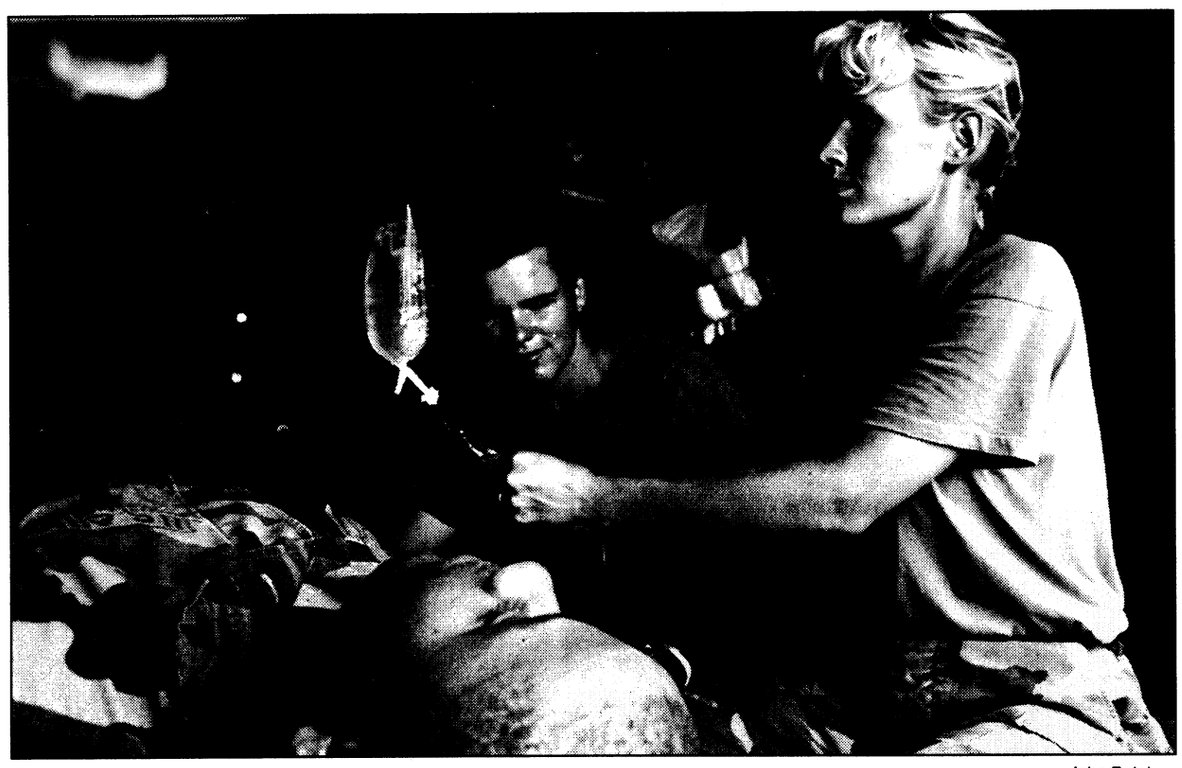
Soldier in Costa Rica plans wedding



John Daigle

Spc. Jeremy Jones and Spc. Carol Woessner administer care to a patient in Costa Rica.

By S.M. Doll
107th Public Affairs Detachment

PUERTO VIEJO, Costa Rica — By day she administers basic medical care to the soldiers in the field in a remote province in Costa Rica; by night she'll be back at the base camp peering through the latest issue of Bride magazine for the perfect gown for that soon-to-be perfect wedding day.

The June bride-to-be is Spc. Carol Woessner, an ambulance driver for the 498th Medical Unit, 34th Medical Battalion, Fort Benning. She is attached to Company C, 43rd Engineer Battalion, Fort Benning, as part of the Task Force "Siempre Listo," a Spanish phrase meaning "always ready."

The task force is participating in a four-month nation-assistance exercise called "Camino De La Paz '92 — Costa Rica." "Camino de la paz" is spanish for "road of pace." The U.S. active Army, Reserve Components and Costa Ricans are participating.

The exercise, which started in January and ends in May, involves constructing a new 2.8-kilometer road, upgrading 18 kilometers of existing road, installing concrete bridges, constructing a dock, and renovating and constructing classroom buildings in the Provinces of Heredia and Limon, Costa Rica.

It was the first time Woessner had been to this Central American country but Spanish helped her interact with the Costa Ricans, especially with the children.

"I talked a lot to the little children. They are great teachers," said the 24-year-old soldier. "They want to learn English an they want to teach you Spanish so much.

"The experience as far as seeing another country and seeing how people live down here on a day-to-day basis makes me appreciate things more. The children in the states take things for granted. In remote areas of Costa Rica, the children don't even have toys, much less anything else."

Another first for Woessner was the experience of an earthquake.

"It was on a Friday in February because all the girls in my tent were fixing their hair getting ready to go out. All of a sudden our tent was shaking and the lights started flickering.

"Immediately some of the girls looked out because they thought the guys were playing a joke on us," she said. "Then we felt the earth slightly moving. We all freaked out and didn't talk for a few minutes." The small tremble was centered in the Limon province.

A native of Bismarck, N.D., Costa Rica is another world away for Woessner. But that was one of the reasons she joined the Army in 1989. "I wanted a change of pace, and the Army had always been in the back of my mind," Woessner said. "I looked at it as an adventure — travelling and seeing the world. Plus I knew I was going into the medical field. I felt it would be a good choice to learn more about nursing."

The daughter of Bob and Judy Woessner of Stanley, N.D., her father is a Vietnam veteran. "(He) loves the fact that I'm in the Army," she said. "Growing up I was such a tomboy. He loves me doing this kind of stuff. He just loves it when I send home pictures and letters of the things I'm doing. He thinks the rugged life is for me."

Woessner's first assignment following basic training was Germany. And it was there on a 60-day field exercise in 1990 in Grafenwohr, Germany, that she met the man she plans to marry.

Although they developed a friendship there, it wasn't until they got back from the field that he called her up for a date. "We started seeing each other then and it went really well."

"I've had lot of boyfriends in the past, but he's special," said Woessner.

The proposal came on Jan. 1. Within three weeks, she left for temporary duty in Costa Rica and he returned to Germany.

The couple hasn't talked much since then.

"Only three telephone calls in nine weeks," she said. "It cost 7,000 colones (equivalent to approximately $50) to talk 10 minutes. It's long enough to say I love you and goodbye."

The couple was planning a small wedding for family members in Virginia. However, before she left for Cost Rica, they decided to have the official ceremony in Denmark. "Denmark is like the'Las Vegas' of Europe," Woessner said.

After the ceremony in Denmark, they'll go their separate ways — she back to Fort Benning and he will remain in Germany through October.

Woessner will finally join her new husband full time when she ends her tour with the Army in February 1993. "The separations have been hard on us, so it will be nice to finally be together," said Woessner. It's helped us build trust and confidence in our relationship."

Although there may have been a long separation and an earthquake, the two say they have built a solid foundation for a life-long commitment to each other.

Bradley crewmen train with live fire

By Richard C. McInnis and Aurelio Feliberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The "Bears" of Company A, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry conducted platoon live fire exercises on Pierce Range recently in preparation for the Table 12 portion of their upcoming Bradley gunnery.

As the mid-morning sun made Fort Benning an almost unbearable place to breathe, the soldiers of the "Vanguard Battalion" returned to the basics of being infantrymen. The troops negotiated a variety of obstacles, including barbed wire entanglements and tank ditches, while bringing a constant barrage of suppressive fire on simulated defending enemy positions in classic infantry fashion.

"I found the training to be excellent. It allowed us to break a good sweat," said Spc. Tim "Bubby" Brossard, a senior M-249 squad automatic weapon gunner in 3rd Platoon. "Since about 50 percent of our platoon wasn't with us in the desert, this is an excellent opportunity for everyone to get on the same sheet of music."

According to 2nd Lt. John A. Means, 3rd Platoon leader, "Table 12 is designed to test the level of efficiency that the Bradley crew and the infantry squad operate at jointly in a scenario that is very likely to be a part of the unit's real world mission."

During the Table 12 gunnery the Bradley Fighting Vehicle crew delivers the infantry squad to a position from which it may move to and secure an objective while the Bradley crew supports the troops on the offense with its 25mm main gun or 7.62 mm coaxial machine gun.

"People sometimes think we're junior tankers, but we're not — we're infantrymen," said Capt. Marty Hamilton, Company A commander. "Table 12 reinforces those basic infantry skills that all 11 Mikes (Bradley crewmen) need to know in conjunction with all the skills we learned during our transition to the Bradley."

April rain can mean time for tire care

Bridgestone/Firestone Inc.

The saying goes that April showers bring May flowers, but as winter departs and warmer, wetter weather arrives, you might also say that spring brings the need for some practical tire maintenance.

Because many drivers now ride on all-season tires instead of changing back and forth between winter tires, they miss a natural opportunity to have their tires inspected. But, winter is traditionally a tough season on tires. Snow, ice, and salt take their toll, therefore making springtime the most logical time to have tires inspected.

Stan Cooper, Firestone's consumer products manager, suggests that car owners inspect their tires for any debris embedded in the tread and possible cuts in the tread or sidewall. The tires should also be checked to make sure they have at least 2/32-inch tread. If they are damaged or have too little tread, serious problems such as sudden air loss or loss of solid traction can occur.

Spring is also the busiest season for wheel alignment and other front-end maintenance work, according to the automotive service industry.

"If front tires are wearing unevenly across the tread, the car's alignment should be checked," Cooper said. "It doesn't take many bumps through potholes to knock a car out of alignment."

Cooper also recommends checking the inflation pressure of your tires to make sure they meet the standards suggested by your vehicle's manufacturer. Variations of even one or two pounds of air pressure can shorten the service life of your tires.

For a spring scrubbing of a tire's whitewall or white outline letters, use a specialty tire cleaner or kitchen cleanser with a steel wool or scrub pad. Car owners are urged to avoid using gasoline or kerosene, which can damage your tires.

Cooper pointed out that many of today's cars are front-wheel drive, which leads to faster tire wear on front-wheel positions than on the rear axle.

"Since most vehicles are just coming out of the rough winter driving season, owners of front-wheel-drive cars should have their tires rotated from front to rear. This will improve traction and help improve the overall wear on your tires," Cooper said.

"If the tire treads are worn unevenly, criss-crossing them to opposite corners of the vehicle will usually help smooth out the irregularities. If the tires do not exhibit irregular wear, keep them on the same side of the car when you rotate."

So enjoy the May flowers as you take a drive on your well-kept tires.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Staff Judge Advocates' Office

Q: My husband and I are considering adopting a child in the near future. Will the Army provide any assistance for this?

A: The Army does provide assistance in some adoptions, depending on the type of adoption being pursued. Since 1987, staff attorneys in the Legal Assistance Office at this installation have been representing soldiers and their family members in stepparent adoptions under the Army's Expanded Legal Assistance Program .

Also, pursuant to the Defense Authorization Acts of 1988, 1989, the Department of Defense established a test program for reimbursement of adoption expenses in connection with agency adoptions. This program has now been made permanent under the Defense Authorization Act of 1992.

Under ELAP, the Legal Assistance Division is authorized to represent qualified soldiers in stepparent adoptions when resources and manpower are available. Qualified soldiers are those of rank corporal and below. Soldiers of higher rank are considered on a case-by-case basis and must demonstrate financial need.

If the soldier is qualified, he or she need not pay attorney's fees for the representation (which ranges between $300 to $500 in most cases), but does have to pay the court filing fees of $59 to $83.

In 1991, attorneys in this division handled 33 stepparent adoption cases. Note that under ELAP, the division can only provide these services in stepparent adoptions.

Also, bear in mind that from time to time, provision of these services has to be curtailed due to manpower and resource limitations (as was the case during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm).

The Defense Authorization Act of 1992 has made permanent the previous test program for reimbursement of expenses incurred by members of the armed forces in agency adoptions finalized on or after Dec. 5.

An agency adoption is an adoption arranged by a state or local government agency or by a non-profit voluntary adoption agency authorized by state or local law to place children for adoption.

Under the 1992 Act, a member can obtain reimbursement of expenses incurred in pursuing such an adoption of up to $2,000 per child adopted with a maximum of $5,000 in any calendar year. Only certain type of expenses are reimbursable.

These include the medical expenses of the adopted child or the natural mother (such as the medical expense of the birth), legal fees, and agency fees for placement and counseling. The program will not reimburse travel expenses incurred.

At this time, specific instructions and forms are not available to file a claim for reimbursement, but are being formulated.

In the meantime, members who believe they may qualify for reimbursement should keep all receipts for their expenses so they can be ready to file a claim when the instructions and forms are available.

Regardless of whether you qualify for assistance under ELAP, for reimbursement under the adoption expense reimbursement program, or of whether you are simple considering an adoption, attorneys at the Legal Assistance Division are available for advise.

Call the Legal Assistance Division for an appointment at 545-3281 or 545-3282.

The American Red Cross at Fort Benning is implementing Knowing Mowing, a youth program to teach lawn mower safety.

The Red Cross believes that cutting the family lawn is a part of growing up. Unfortunately little time is spent teaching a child to operate the small but powerful machine.

According to the U.S. Consumer Products Safety Commission, there are more than 60,000 lawn mower injuries annually. The commission also reported that children under the age of 15 are injured more often than any other group. In fact 2 1/2 times more.

Knowing Mowing is designed to teach children 12 years and older to operate and maintain walk-behind and riding lawn mowers. The course is 1 1/2 hours long. It is divided into classroom instruction and hands-on training.

KNOWING MOWING

The course will be at the Red Cross office on Main Post Saturday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and also Tuesday and May 19 at 6 to 7:30 p.m. A class will also be May 14 at Youth Activities. The course is free. Parents are also encouraged to attend. Parents must register their child by coming to the Red Cross office either at Martin Army Community Hospital, room 721, or on Main Post. Parents must sign a permission slips for their children. Instructors request that long pants and strong shoes be worn.

Participants will receive a certificate of accomplishment, wallet size certificate, a do's and don'ts laminated chart and a baseball hat. Knowing Mowing teaches lessons in safety and peopl are more likely to hire someone they can rely on to cut their lawns safely.

Buying a new car takes planning

Common-sense approach can make process bearable

By Emerson Fittipaldi
PM Editorial Services

Most people fear buying a new car.

The process of selecting the car you want and then going out and purchasing it can be very difficult because of the variety of products available, the range of options and the high costs of most vehicles. But some good, solid planning and a common-sense approach can make the entire process more bearable.

The first thing that any potential car buyer has to figure out is how much he or she can afford to spend. That means being realistic and not spending all your time looking at and dreaming about $30,000 cars when the most you can manage is $12,000.

Experts recommend that you go to your bank or credit union before you begin car shopping and get a pre-approved loan. This way, you'll have your spending limit set and won't be diverted by something more glamorous than you can afford.

Next, you have to determine what kind of vehicle will suit your needs. For instance, why spend your time looking at 4-wheel drives when virtually all of your driving is done in an urban environment?

Be realistic. After all, there are plenty of choices, no matter what your needs are. In the 1992 model year, there are more than 1,000 different body, engine and transmission combinations from which to choose.

One way to narrow down your choices is to spend some time becoming familiar with what is available. Read through current auto magazines and the auto-advice columns in the newspaper, and talk with friends and acquaintances about what they like and don't like about their cars.

Once you have narrowed down your choices to a workable number, it's time to go to the showrooms.

It's generally a good idea not to buy at the first showroom you visit. Make sure you have a chance to sample the market, and don't allow yourself to be pressured into a quick sale. Check out three or four auto stores before making a final choice. Buy from a dealership where you will feel comfortable bringing the car back for service.

Don't give into the temptation to add unwanted and unneeded accessories to the car you finally choose. Today, there are more accessories available than ever before — roof racks, air conditioners and CD players to name a few. Ask yourself what you need and what you really don't need.

Most automotive experts also recommend that you read up on the service records of the various makes. After all, you don't want your new vehicle to spend more time in the repair shop than in your garage.

It takes some planning and a common-sense approach, but buying a new car doesn't have to be a frightening experience.

Fact-based television "docudramas" are plentiful these days, but one of the newest marks the first teaming of two of the genre's top actresses.

Jane Alexander earned an Emmy Award for 1980's "Playing for Time," while Barbara Hershey won hers a decade later for "Killing in a Small Town," and they never worked together prior to a miniseries that airs this week. Inspired by a 1986 case in Georgia, Sunday and Monday's ABC drama "Stay the Night" finds wife and mother Blanche Kettmann (Alexander) determined to keep her teen-age son Mike Jr. (played by Morgan Weisser, of the TV-movies "Long Road Home" and "Extreme Close-Up") from facing a murder charge alone, by proving he was seduced into killing a man by the latter's sensual and spellbinding wife Jimmie Sue Finger (Hershey). When the youth's confession to the crime prevents officials from indicting her, Blanche decides to trap her a different way by pretending to befriend her, hoping to draw an eventual admission of complicity, however, Blanche soon becomes prone herself to fall prey to Billie Sue's charm. Also featuring Fred Dalton Thompson, Earl ("Home Improvement") Hindman and Matthew Posey, the tale was co-produced by miniseries veteran Stan ("Roots," "The Thorn Birds") Margulies and J.C. Shardo, an Atlanta-based filmmaker who developed the tale from interviews she personally conducted.

SPOTLIGHT

Barbara Hershey and Morgan Weisser

Also the recipient of a Tony Award for her Broadway debut in "The Great White Hope," Alexander reports that she met the actual Blanche "a number of times. She is an extremely compassionate woman, always able to find the best in someone. Jimmie Sue was a charismatic figure, and I really think Blanche felt maternal instincts with regard to her. Jimmie Sue was also a lot of fun to be around, she said, and it was just a personality thing. They brought things out in each other." Conversely, Hershey chose not to meet the real Jimmie Sue, explaining that was for a very precise reason. "While this is a true story and is absolutely based on fact," she says, "it is definitely the Kettmanns' point of view of the facts, and the court's view as well. It may very well be accurate, but it is not Jimmie Sue's view. To this day, she claims she's totally innocent, and I felt one of the ways to deal with that was by creating a character that was not necessarily the real Jimmie Sue. In doing a lot of research, I found very sweet and endearing qualities to her ... so if Blanche or anybody else in the story is compassionate, there certainly are aspects of Jimmie Sue's character that are appealing, too."

Hershey's performing choices evidently hit near the mark, since Alexander recalls, "The real Blanche Kettmann happened to see quite a bit of Barbara's work on tape when she and her family visited the set. They had dinner with me and said, 'How did she know exactly how to play her? How did she come so close? That IS Jimmie Sue Finger.' That's also the brilliance of Barbara's understanding of what's happening underneath." Says Hershey - the "Hannah and Her Sisters" co-star who established a precedent by winning Cannes Film Festival Awards two years in a row, for her work in the films "Shy People" and "A World Apart" - "Other times when I've played real characters, I've gone for as much (accuracy) as I could, but I wasn't going off in (far-flung) directions here. I read the transcripts of the trial, I read (Jimmie Sue's) love letters, and I talked to (the elder) Michael Kettmann and a lot of the other people who were around. It was just a character that formed by my circling in on her, and I needed that kind of freedom to create her."

Ham-it-Up Parade to come

Columbus 1992 Commission

The Great Southern "Ham-It-Up" Parade is scheduled for May 2 in Uptown Columbus beginning at 11 a.m.

Since there is no entry fee, anyone can enter, although you must register to participate. Entry forms may be obtained at the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau, 801 Front Ave. Entry deadline is Monday at 5 p.m.

Coordinators of the event designed the parade where everyone can be silly, frivolous and have fun, with no cost involved. Participating entries already include the 43 Miss Georgia contestants and the Rose Bowl Parade celebrities, the Kendrick High School Band, who promise some unique "Ham-It-Up" routines.

The parade route is five blocks long. The Kiss-A-Pig Ceremony will take place at the end of the parade followed by an awards presentation for the best entries in the parade.

Among some of the award categories will be the Largest Litter, the group with the greatest number of people that can be identified as being from the same organization; Best Rooters, the organization performing best cheers; and the Litter with the best theme. Among the individual awards categories will be Pigtails, the individual with most pigtails in his or her natural hair, and Miss or Mr. Swine, the most glamorous swine.

Country's On Broadway will be cooking barbecue outdoors and will have discount prices for lunch. Live music by "Ultimate Taste" will begin at 1 p.m. and the Uptown Merchants will have a sidewalk sale.

Legendary singer to perform

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

Bing Crosby called him "the best singer I've ever heard."

Frank Sinatra referred to him as "the best in the business, the best exponent of song. He excites me whenever I watch him; he moves me."

The object of these superlatives is the legendary Tony Bennett who appears in Columbus as guest soloist with the Columbus Symphony Orchestra for one performance at 8 p.m. Saturday, at the Columbus Three Arts Theatre, 1020 Talbotton Road.

The concert is the final one in the CSO's 1991-92 pops series and in addition to singer Bennett will feature an orchestral salute to the late Arthur Fiedler of the Boston Pops, conducted by George Del Gobbo. Bennett's portion of the program will be conducted by the singer's longtime musical director/pianist, Ralph Sharon.

All tickets for the concert are reserved and are $25 for adults and $10 for students in special sections. They are on sale in the CSO office, lower level of Barnett Bank, 1234 First Ave., or by calling 323-5059 between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. If there are any tickets left, they will be on sale at the Three Arts Theatre from 10 a.m. the day of the concert.

Catfish cookoff on tap May 2

Cordele-Crisp Chamber of Commerce

More than $2,800 in prize money will be awarded to winning teams during the Third Annual Catfish Cookoff coming up May 2 at Veterans State Park on Lake Blackshear.

"We award cash prizes and trophies to the top three teams in each cooking category. The team with the highest overall score in any one category also receives an additional $600 and the Grand Championship trophy," said Brenda Gunn-Reed, chairman of the competition.

According to Gunn-Reed, teams can compete in any or all of three categories — fried catfish, catfish stew or catfish extraordinaire. Each entry will be judged three times by three separate judges on appearance, presentation, taste and overall impression.

"There's no place like Lake Blackshear in the Spring. We have a good time and see some impressive cooks," said Gunn-Reed.

In addition to the cooking competition, the festival offers a professional ski show, catfish races, two road races, a wide variety of entertainment and arts craft vendors from across the Southeast.

Teams who wish to enter should call the Cordele-Crisp Chamber of Commerce at (912) 273-1668. Registration is $75 per category.

State parks offer camping facilities

Georgia Dept. of Natural Resources

Spring is a particularly pleasant time of the year to camp at Georgia's state parks. There are abundant displays of wildflowers in bloom, the breezes are fragrantly warm, fish are waiting to be caught, and the campgrounds are uncrowded.

Reservation procedures are being updated at the 39 state park campgrounds operated by the Georgia Department of Natural Resources.

Reservations will be accepted up to three months in advance.

The $5 reservation fee has been eliminated and will be replaced with a non-refundable deposit of two nights' camping fees. The deposit (cash, check or credit card) must be received within seven days of making a reservation or the reservation will be canceled. "No-shows" forfeit the entire deposit.

Reservations can be made in person or by telephone, with priority given to walk-ins.

Reservations will be accepted for a minimum of two nights and a maximum of 14 nights.

One person may reserve up to three campsites provided that each site is in the name of the individual camper who will occupy the site.

Arrival dates may be changed once with no penalty, subject to availability, provided a one-week notice is given. A reserved campsite will be held until 8 a.m. of the day following the scheduled arrival. Check-out time will be 1 p.m.

Availability of camping reservations will vary between state parks, with some parks establishing reservable sites year-round and other parks reserving sites on a seasonable basis.

The Georgia Department of Natural Resources is offering special spring camping rates at some Georgia state parks. Through May 17, campers who stay in a state park campground for two or more consecutive nights can continue their stay for one additional night free.

For more information, call (404) 656-3530.

What's the real price of "free" Cable?

- $1000 fine
- One year in jail

Unauthorized use of Cable service hinders our ability to provide quality reception to our paying customers. It can also cause dangerous interruptions in air traffic control communications and rob your community of franchise fee tax dollars.

Some people buy illegal converter boxes. Some people tamper with the cable lines or converter boxes. And some people install their own outlets. Others never notify the cable company that the service was on when they moved in.

They're all illegal and detectable. Unchecked they can jeopardize the saftey of your home. If you're caught you can go to jail for up to a year and pay a fine of $1000.

If you or someone you know is receiving unauthorized Cable TV service, call our office today. We'll give you the opportunity to subscribe. All calls will be kept confidential. Policy enforcement begins June 1.

Army halts BDU turn-in

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Desert Storm soldiers who thought they had to turn in their Desert Battle Dress Uniforms may be in for a pleasant suprise.

An April 23 message from the Department of the Army has suspended the collection of DBDUs until the Army secretary can review an earlier policy that called for the collection of all uniforms.

According to Headquarters, DA, all issued DBDUs are considered organizational equipment. All equipment, such as canteens, rifles, etc., are generally turned in when a soldier is finished using it.

Soldiers are currently permitted to retain one set of DBDUs while on an active status but are required to turn in the retained set when discharged.

1992 U.S. Savings Bond campaign kicks off today

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Today is the beginning of the Fort Benning 1992 U.S. Savings Bond Campaign, which runs until May 31.

In a kick-off rally in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, April 21, David Flo, director of Resource Management, encouraged commanders and key people to get personally involved in informing the work force about the program.

Flo, who kicked off the campaign on behalf of Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, said according to statistics, only 56 percent of the soldiers were approached about buying savings bonds during the last campaign.

He pointed out that over the years bonds have changed and a lot of people don't realize it.

"Today savings bonds have a minimum interest rate of 6 percent, which is competitive with certificates of deposits and money market rates," he said. "Combine that with the fact that it's a risk free security and you have an easy and safe way to invest in your future."

To ask a soldier to invest $50 at a time for a bond seems like a lot, but the soldier doesn't need to invest it all at one time; he can use the payroll deduction plan and have payments as low as $6.25 per pay period, he said.

The bonds will add up over time and can be used to buy a car, make a down payment on a house or even help put a child through school.

In addition to a better interest rate, bonds purchased after January 1990 that are used for educational expenses can be tax free based on individual income.

For example, in six years, a $50 monthly allotment will be worth $4,227, while a $100 monthly allotment will be worth $8,454. For those with 18 years to save for college the respective amounts would be $17,356 and $34,712.

"This may not seem like much when the cost of college is considered, but every little bit helps, he said. "I know, I have two children in college now."

Project officers will be contacting soldiers with brouchures throughout the month and The Bayonet will feature a series of questions and answers on the subject of using savings bonds for education.

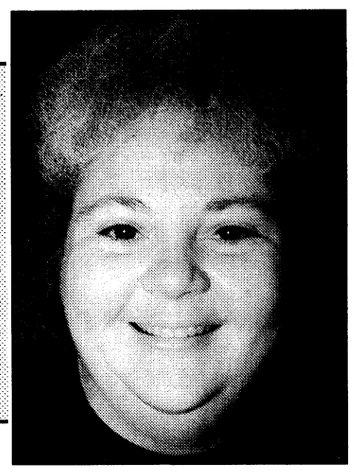
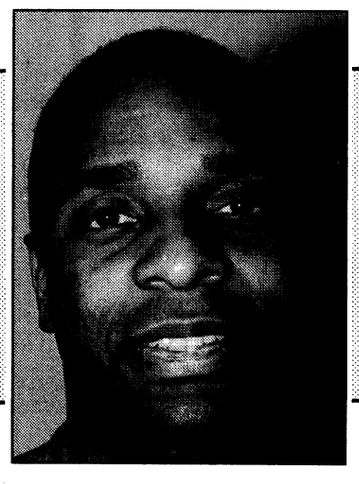
VARIOUS VOICES

If there were anyone you could give an award to for a job well done, who would it be and why?

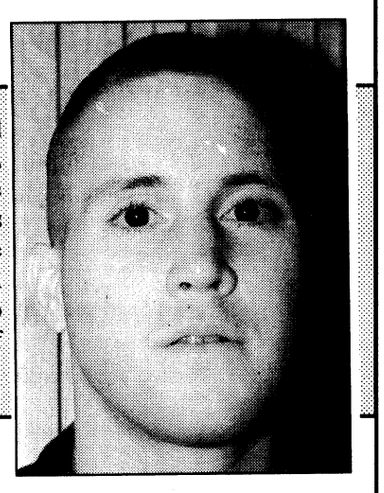
Charlene Clark, family member— "I would give an award to the 598th Maintenance Company's Family Support Group, because we really came together during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Without this group, a lot of us would not have made it through the war."



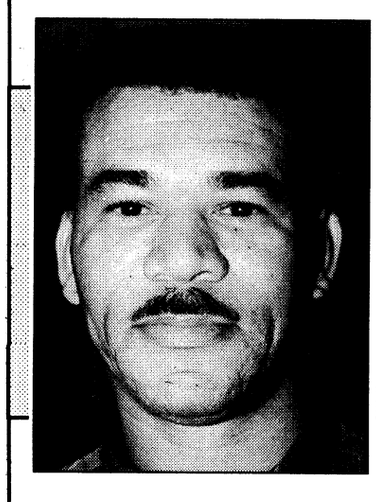
Melanie Franciscus, program analyst, Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization — "I would give Judy Ogletree, Temporary Duty clerk in DPTM, an award for all of her dedication to the her job. She is a really hard worker, provides good customer service to the soldiers and never complains."



Capt. David Sias, Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I would give an award to Nathan Carter, short-order cook in the (Infantry Hall) cafeteria. He deserves recognition for being such a hard worker. He's cordial, a great cook and he really cares about his customers."



2nd Lt. Clifford Mullen, 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, Fort Campbell, Ky. — "I would give an award to the cadre and instructors at the Ranger School. They are outstanding individuals with total dedication to their students and to maintaining the standards of excellence of the rangers."



Sgt. 1st Class G. B. Twyford III, Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I would present an award to Arbey Walker of the unit training branch of the Directorate of Training and Doctrine, U.S. Army Infantry School. He's the mainstay of that division, but he is never recognized for his abilities."

Fannie Brown, Army and Air Force Exchange Services retail manager — "I would give an award to my entire AAFES staff for all their good work. I would especially recognize the store supervisors, Reba Boyette at the (Infantry Hall) Post Exchange, Loretta Springer at the hospital PX, Ruby Smith at the Sightseeing Road PX and Dorothy Jones at the Airborne PX."

Rangers to compete for top spot

COMMENTARY

Seventy of the most manly men in the world are here this weekend.

They are members of the 35 two-man teams competing for the coveted title of 'Best Ranger.'

Being a ranger automatically makes a man manly. Being selected to compete in the Best Ranger competition means we're now talking about the elite few.

And while completing the competition is a Herculean task, to actually win the competition, 72 hours of man's inhumanity to man, earns that ranger a place on Mount Olympus alongside Zeus and the other gods.

I've watched those games they have on TV. You know the ones, where jocks from various sports are competing by running up a wall, swinging from a rope.

Yawn. Our rangers would eat something like that for breakfast and not break a sweat.

Another short-lived program actually got somewhat interesting when the heroes scaled a cliff, climbed a tree, did the civilian version of the 'slide for life,' and kayaked down a white-water river.

But still, we're talking kid's stuff. And I won't even mention the name of that other pseudo-combat TV program in the same sentence as rangers.

It's always been my contention that you take a couple of our rangers and enter them in any of those milquetoast competitions and they'd kick grass.

There ain't an athlete alive who's got the guts, determination, fortitude and mental tenacity as our rangers. Sure, some might be faster, or more agile, but none have the preserverance as these men.

I'd like to see Bo Jackson or Neon Deion Sanders tackle the Darby Queen or follow a compass course through swamps at night.

In high school, I thought football two-a-days were tough. In the Army, I thought basic training was a butt-kicker. And I've heard people coming out of Ranger School who said that that was the worse nine weeks of heck they'd ever been through and they would never do it again.

Combine all three and you approach Best Ranger competition. Sure, it only lasts 72 hours, but during those 72 hours, rangers are tested on how well they have mastered their soldier skills as well as on their endurance.

But the competition is more than endurance, mastery of skill and strength. It's also mind games thrown in for good measure.

When I go on a forced march, I want to know how far it is so I can pace myself. I want to know how much farther I have to go each step of the way so I can try to convince my body, "just a little bit farther, you can do it."

The rangers don't get that piece of intel. They go all out until they either drop or are told to stop.

Armchair rangers whose idea of physical exertion is having to get out of a golf cart to swing a club at a ball in 90-degree heat probably smirk at all this and say, "Sure, if I had nothing better to do than train, I'd make it, too."

First, these guys have things better to do than train and they do. Second, no amount of training will prepare them for the event itself.

Want proof? Check the rolls of moleskin they go through to keep their feet together, the analgesic balm to keep protesting muscles in line or the salve they use to temporarily soothe blisters worn away from backstraps and chafing clothing .

Better yet, just come to Victory Pond this weekend and cheer these men on. They need all the encouragement they can get.

May named Asian, Pacific Americans month

By Rudi Williams
American Forces Information Service

In 1991, Congress' Joint Resolution 173 designated May 1991 and 1992 as Asian/Pacific American Heritage months.

May was chosen to highlight the culture heritage and contributions of Asian and Pacific Americans because significant events pertaining to their struggles in their adopted country occurred during the month.

Thursday is the 149th anniversary of the arrival of the first Japanese immigrants to America in 1843. May 8 marks the 123rd anniversary of the driving of the "golden spike," which symbolized the completion of the nation's first transcontinental railroad. The "golden spike" joined the two ends of the railroad in 1869. Many of the laborers were Chinese immigrants.

May 4, 1979, was the beginning of the first Asian/Pacific American Heritage Week observance in the United States.

More than 6 million Americans trace their ancestry to Asia and the Pacific Islands. This year's theme is "Asian/Pacific Americans — Effectiveness — Empowerment — Enhancement."

"We selected this theme trying to describe how Asians and Pacific Islanders are effective, and through their effectiveness, they become more recognized and gain influence.

That's empowerment. Through all of our efforts, society as a whole will be enriched," said Ruth Sing Wong, executive director of the Asian/Pacific American Heritage Council for the Washington, D.C., area.

The annual observance began as an informal week-long celebration in May 1979. "During the Reagan administration, I was a volunteer inside the White House, and we were able to get the first official recognition by the president in a signing ceremony in 1987," said Wong. Congress and President George Bush extended the observance to a month in 1991.

"The world marvels at the wealth of ancient art and philosophy, the fine craftsmanship and the colorful literature and folklore that have sprung from Asia and the Pacific Islands," Bush said in his proclamation. "Whether they trace their roots to places like Cambodia, Vietnam, Korea, the Philippines and the Marshall Islands or cherish their identities as natives of Hawaii and Guam, all Asian and Pacific Americans can take pride in this celebration of their heritage."

Bush said Asian and Pacific Americans have worked hard to reap the rewards of freedom and opportunity. "Many have arrived in the United States after long and arduous journeys, escaping tyranny and oppression with little more than the clothes on their backs," the president continued. "Yet, believing in America's promise of liberty and justice for all and imbued with a strong sense of self-discipline, sacrifice, courage and honor, they have steadily advanced, earning the respect and admiration of their fellow citizens."

Bush said political and economic ties between the United States and countries in Asia and the Pacific are fortified by strong bonds of kinship and culture. "All Americans are enriched by those ties, and thus will proudly unite in observing Asian/Pacific-American Heritage Month."

When California Rep. Norman Y. Mineta introduced the House resolution, he said, "America has been called the melting pot of the world. Rather than the melting pot, this nation is like a tapestry with yarns of different fabrics and colors, interwoven to bring strength to our country."

Post celebrates ethnic diversity

In recognition of Asian and Pacific Americans and our nation's ethnic and national diversity, the month of May is proclaimed "Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month" at Fort Benning.

The theme for this year's observance is "Asian and Pacific Americans: Effectiveness, Empowerment and Enhancement" and marks the 14th anniversary of this observance.

The United States as a nation is comprised almost entirely of immigrants and their descendants. There are now more than 4 million Americans who trace their ancestry to Asia or the Pacific Islands.

Their history is one of proud accomplishments with many contributions to the arts, literature, science, agriculture, industry, commerce and the armed forces of the United States. Asian and Pacific Americans have contributed significantly in the struggle for America's national goals and in the quest for freedom and opportunity.

Asian/Pacific American Heritage Month fosters and increased national awareness of the history and contributions of these people. It also inspires a renewed sense of pride among Asian and Pacific Americans.

I encourage everyone to enjoy activities here at Fort Benning during "Asian and Pacific American Heritage Month."

The first person to call the Equal Opportunity Office at 545-2355 with the correct answer to each question will receive a complimentary ticket for two free games of bowling at either of the bowling centers on post.

1. How many Asian/Pacific American generals are currently on active duty in the Army?

2. Where was "chop suey" developed?

Fort Benning honors Law Day

Whereas, today is Law Day in the United States of America, and;

Whereas, the United States of America has been the citadel of individual liberty and a beacon of hope and opportunity for more than 200 years to many millions who have sought our shores, and;

Whereas, the foundation of individual freedom and liberty is the body of law that governs us, and;

Whereas, the Constitution of the United States of America and Bill of Rights are the heart of that body of law that guarantees many freedoms — including freedom of religious belief, freedom to have and to hold property, freedom of assembly, freedom of speech, freedom of press and due process of the law among others, and;

Whereas, this year marks the 35th annual nationwide observance of Law Day, and the Congress of the United States and the president by official proclamation have set aside May 1 as a special day for recognition of the place of law in American life;

Now, therefore, I, as commanding general of Fort Benning, do hereby designate today as Law Day at Fort Benning and call upon all citizens, schools, businesses, clubs and news media to commemorate the role of law in our lives.

ACAP hosts seminar

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program hosted its first "Career Assistance Day" April 24 at Soldiers' Plaza.

The program featured representatives from local, regional and national companies seeking employees.

More than 550 people, including military personnel, post civilians and family members attended the event, said Ted Craig post ACAP director.

"This was kind of a super Career Day," Craig said. "The companies represented weren't just here to talk about themselves. Many of them had job opportunities available ranging from entry level to managerial positions and were ready to conduct interviews on the spot."

Craig said that he was pleased with the results.

"It went really well. We had a good cross-section of the community in attendance and there was something for everyone. We would like to encourage more of our younger troops to attend in the future, however. Most of the military attendees were officers or senior non-commissioned officers but a lot of the jobs available were better suited for lower ranks," he said.

Craig added that he definitely plans to have another Career Assistance Day sometime in the future.

"I really think that our first one is going to be the smallest one. All of the employers present expressed an interest in returning and were really pleased with the contacts they made. I think in the future it can only get bigger and better."

He also reminded all personnel eligible to use the ACAP services, which includes soldiers, post civilians and family members, that every Friday is Career Day at the ACAP Classroom in Building 2634. The Career Days are similar to the Career Assistance Day, but on a smaller scale.

"Unlike a typical job fair, our Career Days have actual job opportunities available from employers who have contacted us. In the last four months, more than 50 of our soldiers have been made job offers through this program," he said.

AER campaign ends

Post falls short of 1991's $209,509

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Though the Army Emergency Relief Campaign Office will still be accepting last-minute donations, the fund drive officially wound up Thursday with a total of $151,667.99.

According to Capt. Francisco Marroquin, AER campaign officer, this year's campaign was a lot shorter than last year's with two months of work, as opposed to 1991's 5 1/2 months.

Therefore, even though the drive fell short of last year's $209,530, he believes the units worked hard.

"Helping the Army Take Care of Its Own" is the slogan for this organization, which is marking its 50th year in offering emergency financial assistance in the form of no-interest loans and grants.

More than 90 percent of those who come for help are approved.

There are certain recognized criteria to determine whether or not there is a legitimate financial emergency without making moral judgments.

These include: funeral expenses, delinquent rent payments, deposit for renting (up to $950), enough to satisfy car payments, rent, and such if funds have been lost or stolen (a copy of the police report must be provided), money to go for food beyond the two days emergency assistance from the Food Locker and repair of essential personally-owned vehicles so the soldier and spouse can get to work.

AER offers help to active duty soldiers, family members, retirees, widows and members of the U.S. Army National Guard and Reserve.

Airlines restructure airfares, procedures

Many airlines have restructured their fares eliminating most government contract military leave fares. This may result in a higher cost for both official and unofficial travel.

Airlines have also imposed a $25 fee for any changes or cancellations after a ticket has been issued. Official government travel tickets are exempt from this fee on most airlines.

Budget offices and travelers should be aware of the potential increase in cost to tickets being issued. Fare information can be obtained by contacting the Scheduled Airline Ticket Office at 687-4900.

ACAP plans classes

The Army Career and Alumni Program offers a three-day workshop for soldiers who are transitioning out of the Army. It is recommended that all soldiers who are within 180 days of their Expiration Term of Service should attend one of the classes. Schedule of classes are as follows:

Monday to Wednesday, ETS soldiers

May 11 to 13, Retirements

May 18 to 20, ETS soldiers

May 26 to 28, ETS soldiers

Class hours are from 7:45 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily. Uniform is appropriate civilian clothing, if desired. Locations will be announced upon registration.

PET OF THE WEEK

This stray, female, Siamese mix cat is looking for a home. Since she and three of her babies were found, one of the kittens has been adopted. If you would like to adopt her, one of the other kittens or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

SAVINGS BONDS Q &A

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Q: What is the education savings bond program?

A : The education savings bond program permits qualified taxpayers to exclude from their gross income all or a portion of the interest earned on eligible Series EE savings bonds issued after 1989. To qualify for this exclusion, tuition and other educational expenses must be incurred by the taxpayer, the taxpayer's spouse or the taxpayer's dependent at certain post-secondary educational institutions. In addition, there are income limitations on those eligible to participate in the program. The Education Savings Bond Program was authorized by the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

Q: Is there a new series of bonds which must be purchased to take advantage of the program?

A: No, Series EE savings bonds, widely available over-the-counter and through payroll savings plans, are used for the program.

Q: What educational expenses are eligible for the program?

A: Eligible educational expenses include tuition and fees (such as lab fees and other required course expenses) required for the enrollment of or attendance by the taxpayer, or the taxpayer's spouse or dependent at an eligible educational institution. However, expenses relating to any course or other education involving sports, games, or hobbies are eligible only if required as part of a degree or certificate granting program. Room and board are not included as eligible expenses. Eligible expenses are calculated net of scholarships, fellowships, employer-provided educational assistance, and other tuition reduction amounts and must be incurred during the same tax year in which the bonds earning excludable interest are redeemed.

Q: What qualifies as an eligible educational institution?

A: Post-secondary institutions, including vocational schools, that meet the standards for participation in federal financial aid programs (such as guaranteed student loan programs) qualify for the program. Proprietary institutions, such as beautician or secretarial schools, generally do not qualify.

Q: Can all outstanding bonds be used in this program?

A: No, the program took effect Jan. 1, 1990, and applies only with respect to Series EE bonds issued after Dec. 31, 1989. No savings bonds issued before that date will generate excludable interest nor is any other series of bonds (e.g., Series HH) eligible for the program.

Q: Can anyone purchase these bonds and take advantage of the exclusion?

A: No, to exclude interest earnings on Series EE bonds issued after 1989, a taxpayer must be at least 24 years old before the bonds' issue date. Since a Series EE bond's issue date is the first day of the month in which the taxpayer purchases the bond, the taxpayer must be 24 years old before the first day of the month in which the bond is purchased. Furthermore, if the taxpayer is married, the taxpayer must file a joint return in order to exclude the bond interest from income.

Q: Can anyone take advantage of the interest exclusion by purchasing bonds as gifts?

A: No, the purpose of this program is to benefit the taxpayer(s) paying for qualified educational expenses of the taxpayer, taxpayer's spouse, or taxpayer's dependent within the meaning of section 151 of the Internal Revenue Code. To exclude the bond interest from gross income, the bond must be in the name of the taxpayer or in the name of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse who pays qualified educational expenses and not in the name of the dependent.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from April 15 to 21. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A private was charged with writing 15 worthless checks, on a closed account, to various Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities, total amount $1,416.79.

• A private first class was charged with assault after he struck a specialist in the eye with a telephone receiver.

• A civilian employee reported that someone removed two sets of night vision goggles from a repair shop on post.

• A staff sergeant and a sergeant were charged by civilian authorities for simple battery and robbery by force. Investigation revealed that both were at a local night club when a fight broke out among several people. The complainant stated that during the fight both sergeants removed $500 and a leather vest from him.

• A lieutenant was charged by civilian authorities for loitering or prowling and failure to stop at a stop sign.

•A family member was charged with discharging a weapon in the housing area and assault after he shot another family member with a BB gun.

• A staff sergeant reported that person(s) unknown attempted to force his vehicle off the road, and when he refused to stop one of the subjects produced a weapon and fired one shot at his vehicle, striking it in the fender.

• A civilian contractor was charged with fraud after submitting false claims to the government in the amount of $22,170.

•A staff sergeant and a sergeant were charged with wrongful use of cocaine after testing positive for cocaine during a command directed urinalysis.

• A specialist and his wife were charged with assault after striking each other several times during a domestic disturbance.

•Other cases for the week included two shopliftings, 15 traffic accidents, 11 incidents of driving under the influence of alcohol (eight military and three civilians), nine larcenies of private property (only three of which were secured), six larcenies of government property (only one was secured) seven cases of damage to private property and four cases of damage to government property.

Do you want to give your bicycle away? Seven people this week gave their unsecured bicycles to a thief. It is worth the extra one or two minutes it takes to secure your bicycle and have the sure feeling that it will still be there when you return for it. The good old days of being able to leave your property sitting around unlocked are long gone. We live in a totally different society today, most people don't care how hard you had to work for the money to buy that bicycle. An unsecured bicycle is easy prey for a thief and it is hard to trace. Take the warning - "Lock it or lose it."

988th MPs rescue accident victims

By Sgt. Joseph J. Johnson
U.S. Army South Public Affairs Office

The quick reaction of a Fort Benning military police unit in Panama for four months of training may have saved several lives in early March.

Soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company were on their way to a field exercise at Empire Range.

At about 8:30 p.m. on March 10, while crossing the Bridge of Americas which spans the Panama Canal, they came upon a vehicle that had crashed into a tractor trailer. The force of the impact peeled off the car's roof and dragged one of the passengers 20 yards from the crash site.

"We were the first ones on the scene," said Staff Sgt. Karles C. Jackson, noncommissioned officer in charge of the MP platoon. "On instinct I started to set up assignments to control the situations."

Jackson ordered several soldiers to control traffic while others administered first aid and sought help at nearby Howard Air Base.

"It was apparent that the guy dragged by the vehicle was in a daze," said Cpl. Brian A. Fullem. "The other guy in the car was barely scratched, but was in a daze too. "We applied first aid to control the bleeding."

"They were lucky it was MPs who stopped, because it probably would have taken a longer time for them to get assistance and timing was important," added Fullem, who has been an MP for three years.

Sgt. Tracey D. Younger controlled traffic on the busy bridge. "We're always training as a team," she said. "It was good for me to find out what my reaction would be in a real-world situation like this."

"We train on scenarios like this," said Sgt. 1st Class Wayne E. Huntley, platoon sergeant. "The benefit we gained from this real-world situation is to react without hesitation and be in control."

The MP company returned to Fort Benning Wednesday.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today, May 1, 1942

Lashio, Burma, fell to the attack of Japanese mechanized forces supported by artillery, armor, and aircraft. This strategic city is at the end of the Burma Road, the main supply route to allied forces in the area.

Stockpiles in the city were set afire to prevent their capture by the Japanese. The loss of the city could also lead to the encirclement of the bulk of the allied forces fighting in the area.

The "heaviest Japanese reverse so far in New Guinea" took place when an American air raid destroyed 20 Japanese planes at Lae. The air war in the New Guinea area is characterized as both sides trying to knock out each other's airdromes with the advantage on the allied side due to heavier bombing.

The Royal Air Force switched targets in its spring offensive from Germany's fleet and Baltic bases to factories producing aircraft parts for the Luftwaffe. The RAF bombers and screening fighters ran into stiff resistance from German fighters, and "many combats took place in the clouds." German losses are reported as nine bombers in retaliatory bombing vs. four British planes.

Russian troops achieved a breakthrough of the German lines with a devastating armored attack. One tank brigade was reported to have destroyed 168 tanks and killed 14,000 men. German reports acknowledged that the Russians had gained a breakthrough but claimed to have thrown back the attackers with counterattacks.

In the Atlantic, a Swedish merchantman and an American merchantman were torpedoed. Two other American freighters were sunk by submarines in the Gulf of Mexico, and one American freighter may have sunk a German U-boat. The gun crew on an American merchantman achieved a hit on a submarine, saw an explosion, and later found debris indicating that the submarine sank.

Joseph Stalin, in his May Day address to the Soviet Union, stated that Russia had "no territorial ambitions" in the present war. He outlined his goals as liberating overrun Russian territories, in which he included the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

In April/May 1942 the Airborne Command moved from Fort Benning to Fort Bragg, N.C. The Parachute School remained at Fort Benning.

The 29th Infantry Regiment served as the demonstration unit for the Infantry School and provided test troops for the Infantry Board at Fort Benning. The regiment trained with a variety of equipment and weapons, including the M-1 Garand rifle, modified Browning Automatic Rifle, 81mm mortar, and various types of field uniforms.

The Fort Benning 1942 Pictorial Review featured Brig. Gen. Leven C. Allen, commandant of the Infantry School. He first entered the Army in 1916 as a second lieutenant and commanded a machine gun company in World War I. He was a graduate of the War College, the Command and Staff School, and both the Company Officer Course and the Advanced Course at Fort Benning.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week...

• Fort Benning officials pursued plans to fingerprint all civilian workers as a security measure against sabotage and espionage for the duration of the war.

• The Battle of the Coral Sea began with the withdrawal of Allied forces from the Australian garrison on Tulagi island. The clashing forces included the USS Yorktown and the USS Lexington, as well as the Japanese carriers Zuikaku, Shokaku and Shoho. Japanese planes sank the USS Neosho and the USS Sims while American planes sank the Shoho.

• After severe bombardments, Japanese forces assaulted and captured Corregidor after suffering heavy losses. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright surrendered with a force of 15,000 American and Filipino troops urging US forces in the Philippines to surrender in a broadcast from Luzon.

• In Burma, Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell learned of the extent of Japanese advances further north along the Irrawaddy River and decided to withdraw his forces toward India instead of China.

• German destroyers sank the already damaged HMS Edinburgh in the Barents Sea as it escorted the Arctic Convoy QP-11.

• Imperial Headquarters ordered the Japanese Navy to prepare for an attack and landing on Midway Island.

Historical society re-enacts local Civil War battle

By Pete Panzeri
Military History Division

Brig. Gen. Andrew J. Alexander led the charge of the 1st Ohio Cavalry Regiment across a burning bridge into Columbus, Ga., Only the fragmented remnants of the 21st Georgia State Line lay in defense of the hapless city. The 10th Missouri and 4th Iowa Cavalry Regiments charged through the last defenders on the western banks of the Chattahoochee, shattering all remaining resistance. Soon the industrial base of Columbus was lighting the night sky as Union cavalrymen set fire to strategic war stocks.

Such was the scene Saturday at the National Infantry Museum, sight of this month's Battle Analysis Seminar. On April 18, 1865, four regiments of Union Cavalry led by Gen. James H. Wilson conducted a night attack on the city of Columbus. This was the last major battle in the Eastern War Theater during the Civil War. After a battle that lasted about an hour, Columbus was captured. All industry important to the South's war effort was burned to the ground the next morning.

At the seminar, guest speakers included: Capt. Terry Ernest, an Infantry Officer Advance Course small group instructor, and Professor Donald A. Cope and Dr. John Lupold, both from Columbus College. Ernest spoke about the tactics used during the Civil War. Cope discussed Wilson's 1865 campaign, while Lupold elaborated on the Battle of Columbus.

Also included in the seminar was a living history demonstration sponsored by the Georgia Civil War Re-enactors. After the discussion, a battle simulation using miniature figures and rules was used to war-game the battle. The Historical Miniatures Gaming Society-sponsored the simulation.

The simulation and the actual battle followed a very similar course. Both battles were fought at night, a rare occurrence during the Civil War. The breakthrough was established by one regiment that crossed the Chattahoochee using the last standing bridge. Although the bridge was crossed while it was burning in the simulation, it was captured intact during the battle.

When asked about the significance of the Battle of Columbus, Lupold commented on the large industrial capacity of the city and its strategic location along the Chattahoochee. He pointed out that since the battle was fought at night, it can be used by students of the Infantry School to analyze the difficulties of such tactics during that time period.

The Battle Analysis Seminar Series is sponsored by the U.S. Army Infantry School Military History Division.

Ceremony honors airborne

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

A ceremony honoring airborne soldiers, past and present, took place April 23 at Airborne Walk as part of the 15th annual Airborne Awards Festival. The three-day event ended Saturday and was in Atlanta and Fort Benning.

The ceremony here was attended by airborne veterans, including members of the Parachute Test Platoon, active airborne soldiers and family members.

The test platoon was formed at Fort Benning in 1940 and was the first American airborne unit.

The ceremony included music by The Infantry Band, remarks from Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, and an address by the guest speaker, retired Maj. Gen. Hubert S. Cunningham, former chief of staff of the U.S. Army Infantry Center at Fort Benning.

Placement of a memorial wreath was also part of the ceremony. The wreath, given in memory of airborne soldiers who died in the service of their country, was placed by Command Sgt. Maj. Robert A. McCoy, command sergeant major of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment and Lessie Ivy, widow of Parachute Test Platoon member George Ivy.

White addressed the former paratroopers, speaking of their role in shaping the airborne tradition.

"You are our inspiration. The spirit you showed in past wars is the spirit that carried us through Saudi Arabia," he said.

Cunningham expressed his appreciation on behalf of the airborne veterans for "the hospitality shown by Fort Benning."

"The ceremony here is one of the highlights of our annual event," Cunningham said. "This beautiful monument (Airborne Walk), and the welcome given to us by the people here, make this a favorite spot for us."

Gunter Air Force Base hosts Enlisted Heritage Hall Race

Gunter Air Force Base

The ninth annual Enlisted Heritage Hall Race will be May 16 at Gunter Air Force Base in Montgomery, Ala.

The 5K courses begin at 7:30 a.m. at the U.S. Air Force Senior NCO Academy at Gunter and is run entirely on Gunter. New this year are the 5K all-male and 5K all-female races.

For those who prefer more fun than run, the 1-mile fun run/walk will begin at approximately 9 a.m. or after completion of the 5K races. Group participation is encouraged.

Trophies will be awarded to the top three finishers by age groups and overall winners, but you need not finish with the top runners to win a "door" prize.

Through the support of local sponsors, everyone who registers for the race and is present on race day has a chance to win a valuable prize. After the race, refreshments such as pizza, red beans and rice, fruit and beverages will be served. All registrants will get a distinctive T-shirt featuring a biplane similar to the ones flown in the early years of air power.

All proceeds from this race go to support the U.S. Air Force Enlisted Heritage Hall, the only museum dedicated to recognizing enlisted contributions to the Air Force.

This year's race at Gunter also will be in conjunction with a worldwide effort, started in 1990, to host Heritage Hall races at bases all over the world— Korea, Greece, Germany, England and the United States.

Military and civilian communities will be coming together to compete, have fun, and help a worthwhile cause.

Preregistration by May 13 is $8 or $10 on race day.

Paratroopers jump Cruise-matics 20-3

Team to go to national championships in San Antonio May 8 through 10

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Columbus-Fort Benning rugby football club, the Cruise-matics played host to the British Paratrooper Regiment Sunday at Lakebottom Park only to be defeated 20-3.

The Cruise-matics, coming off a 13-12 loss to the University of Georgia at Athens Saturday, looked out of sorts as the Brits scored four tries in the first half. The only score for the Cruise-matics came on a penalty kick by Greg Strafer.

In the second half, the Paratroopers managed only one score, by James Lynch, that pushed the score to 20-3. Defense was the name of the game from there on.

Team defense and hard tackling kept either team from putting any more points on the board.

The Cruise-matics finish the season against Old White on Saturday. They will then travel to San Antonio, Texas, for the National Military Championships May 8 through 10.

Softball safety makes a 'perfect game'

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Slow pitch softball is the largest participation team sport in the Untied States. More than 30 million adults and youngsters play annually.

Softball is a natural outgrowth of baseball. Originally, the game was meant to be played inexpensively. The ball was changed from being very soft to having harder contents.

Pitchers perfected a very fast underhanded pitch. As a result, more equipment — gloves, masks, and catcher's gear — was needed. The field was enlarged to accommodate the development of the ball.

Softball is not as strenuous or demanding as baseball, because the ball is larger, there is usually more hitting, fielding and running.

How much good does that Saturday afternoon game do? Softball aids digestion, benefits sleep, burns calories and improves balance, muscle tone, flexibility and endurance.

Ankle fracture is the most common injury in softball. Most of the injuries occur from sliding, followed by jamming, collisions and falls.

Sliding injuries include fractures, sprains, dislocations, knee injuries and torn cartilage. Most sliding injuries are caused by initiating the slide too late or too close to the base. Proper sliding techniques can prevent these injuries.

In an injury, promptly apply the first aid treatment that is safe for a sports injury without professional advice — Ice. "I" for Ice, "C" for Compression, and "E" for Elevation.

Sports injuries can be prevented. In order to minimize the risk, take the following precautions. Participate in a sport with people of similar levels of skill, maturity, size and strength.

Be in the proper condition to participate. Nonconditioned athletes run a higher risk of injury. Use protective equipment that fits properly and is in good condition.

Be certain your shoes are designed for the playing surface and activity. Don't wear jewelry. They can get caught in equipment and uniforms. Always remove obstacles from the field before playing.

Softball is an activity that gives players four Ss: speed, skill, strength, and stamina. Don't forget the fifth S: safety.

Ministers receive specialized training

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Every year a Department of the Army board selects 15 active duty Army chaplains for specialized training at one of its three Clinical Pastoral Education centers. One of these centers is located in the Custer Terrace Chapel at Fort Benning. The five students there train under the supervision of Chaplain (Maj.) Herbert L. Marbury, a certified CPE supervisor.

The Fort Benning CPE Center's mission is to train chaplains for specialized family ministry. This mission makes it the only center of its kind in the U.S. Armed Forces. Unlike the other centers that train hospital chaplains exclusively, the Fort Benning Center trains chaplains in four out of five specialties.

Upon graduation, a student may have trained at the Family Life Center, the Martin Army Community Hospital, the Community Counseling Center, the Installation Detention Facility or at Custer Terrace Chapel.

Clinical Pastoral Education is a professional on-the-job training program. The student acquires pastoral counseling skills and knowledge through supervised interaction with parishioners. The interaction takes place at any one of the five training sites, and then it is reviewed by the site supervisor and the CPE supervisor.

In addition to supervised encounters, the chaplain has to explore his own theological understanding of the event and its relation to the behavioral sciences. This is done in small group settings with CPE peers and the CPE supervisor. The goal is to help the chaplain integrate the theory and the practice of pastoral counseling. By knowing who they are as individuals, the chaplains then provide better care to others.

"The students learn what a chaplain is in terms of enhancing pastoral skills. I enjoy working with them through areas of growth," said Marbury.

The students concur with Marbury. Chaplain (Capt.) Daniel Moll said, "Fort Benning's CPE provides one of the best opportunities to enhance one's pastoral schooling. "Another student, Chaplain (Capt.) Gary Norris, added. "It is sometimes gut-wrenching to realize one's weaknesses in pastoral care. But as a ranger, I feel that CPE is equally as challenging as Ranger School. "

"It is an effective mirror for looking at who you are as a person and as a pastor. It builds up your confidence," said Chaplain (Capt.) Gary Sexton

Chaplain (Capt.) Nils Juarez-Palma said he likes the way that it provides supervised clinical experience in conjunction with the theory.

Chaplain (Maj.) Kerly Steedley agrees by adding, "It is easier to learn in theory, but it is a different environment to practice what you have learned."

This year's class will graduate June 1 at 10 a. m. in the Custer Terrace Chapel. The guest speaker is Chaplain (Col.) George Gudz, post chaplain. Everyone in the community is invited to attend.

Chaplain discusses prayer

Nation sets aside Thursday as National Prayer Day

By Don Wilson
Family Life Center chaplain

T national day of prayer. Throughout the country on that day, people will be praying to God on behalf of our nation. But what is it, exactly, that we will be doing?

What is prayer? We talk about prayer. We know we ought to pray. We know the Bible teaches us to pray. But what is prayer?

It has been said that "prayer is the offering up of our desires unto God, in the name of Christ, by the help of the holy spirit." It has also been said that "prayer is simply talking with God, and the simpler the talking the better."

In James 5:16 (The Living Bible) we read: "The earnest prayer of a righteous man has great power and wonderful results." When we read scriptures like this, we are tempted to ask, "Where is the power? Where are the wonderful results? Why don't my prayers get answered?"

I was surprised to discover a few years ago that there had been several "scientific" studies done on prayer. The study that came to my attention was done at Redlands University, under the direction of Dr. William R. Parker. The study involved 45 volunteers of different age and background, who had one thing in common — "they were in trouble physically, mentally, and spiritually."

Fifteen members of the group felt that psychotherapy was the answer to their problems. Fifteen felt that prayer was the answer and devised their own prayer program. The other fifteen selected prayer therapy (prayer with expert Christian counsel.)

At the end of nine months, the following results were noted. The psychotherapy group showed a 65 percent improvement. Those who prayed without counsel showed no improvement, some were worse. The prayer therapy group showed a 72 percent improvement. Over the next five years, the psychotherapy group returned again and again for treatment,while the prayer therapy group needed no more treatment at all.

But the question remained, "How could one group receive such amazing answers to prayer while another group (all practicing Christians), in the same place at the same time, experience total failure in prayer?"

Reflections Reflections Reflections

A comparison was made of the two groups and the following results were found in the styles of those who failed: their concept of God was faulty; their prayers were acts of self-condemnation; they could never truly accept God's forgiveness; and their prayers were in a negative form.

Do any of these styles of prayer sound familiar? Maybe that is part of an answer to "Why my prayers don't get answered."

The editor of the book, "Prayer That Really Works," shares these important ideas about proper praying: Realize that God is love. His love is unconditional. No sin that you have ever committed has changed God's love for you in the slightest. God knows all about you and loves you anyway.

Realize that prayer must be an exercise in honesty. Since God loves you, you can afford to be open and honest with Him — no pious phrases and no pretending.

Realize that prayer must be regular and regulative. "Spare-tire praying will never be fruitful." One must make prayer a regular habit. It must also be regulative. That is, your life must not regulate your prayer, your prayer should regulate your life.

We must make prayer positive. Negative prayer gets negative results. The person at prayer must affirm his ability to know and trust God's love and forgiveness.

Prayer is too important to misunderstand and misuse. God is powerful and He desires to help us in our everyday lives, but we must pray and pray correctly.

One great writer on prayer put it this way: "Books on prayer are good, but not good enough. As books on cooking are good but helpless unless there is food to work on, so with prayer. One can read a library of books and not be one whit more powerful in prayer. We must learn to pray, and we pray to learn to pray.

Post receives praise from Big Brothers

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A total of 20 percent of the adult volunteers for the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Program in the area come from Fort Benning, according to Elliott Schwartz, marketing coordinator for the program.

The organization kicked off its Volunteer Appreciation Week Sunday, with Columbus Mayor Frank Martin signing a proclamation for the special observance and an event Monday at 2 p.m. at the Medical Center honoring all of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters volunteers in the tri-community area.

Martin noted at the signing of the proclamation that Big Brothers/Big Sisters is one of the most worthwhile endeavors because there are so many children today with no adults acting as role models in their lives.

About 100 people attended the event at the Medical Center.

Soldier excels, goes from green to gold

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

In the face of budget cuts and personnel reductions in the Army, education is assuming a new importance for today's soldiers. One former enlisted man at Fort Benning used education to become an officer, and now seeks to advance his career by furthering his education.

First Lt. Matt R. Scott is acting commander of the Medical Company, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity, and patient administration officer at Martin Army Community Hospital. Married and the father of one, he is also pursuing a master's degree in Health Services Administration full time at Columbus College.

With this seemingly full-to-bursting schedule, it might appear that Scott's time is more than spoken for. Yet, he attended Airborne School in April and completed the course as officer honor graduate of Class 21-92.

Scott is a field medical officer, whose first position at Fort Benning was as a medical team leader for the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

Upon returning from Saudi Arabia with this unit, he interviewed for the position of patient administration officer at the hospital, was accepted, and completed training for the job at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Scott has completed several Army training courses but found the airborne course unique, he said.

"Physically, I felt good," he said. "Mentally, I felt like it really challenged me. It's not an academic course, but you have to prepare yourself, mentally, to jump out of a plane."

Scott added the course requires a soldier to gain control of his fears and to have trust in his training and equipment.

"Whether or not you pay attention in one of the classes can mean the difference between having a safe parachute jump or having an accident," he said.

Scott said he intends to pursue both the medical and airborne aspects of his career. He is slated to attend the Armed Forces Medical Intelligence Course this month and will attend Air Assault School in August.

"I'm very fortunate to have a chain of command that will allow me to go to these courses and to educate myself," Scott said.

He said his father, who was airborne-qualified in the Air Force, has also been very positive about education.

"My father has always encouraged me to go to as many schools as I can — military and civilian," Scott said.

Education provides more options for a career in the military, Scott said, and for a possible, eventual civilian career as well.

He hopes to be assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N.C., or to be medical operations officer for a special forces unit when he leaves Fort Benning in July 1993.

Reserve, NG to cut troops

AR, NG units may lose up to 140,000 troops by 1994

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

The National Guard and Reserve will lose 140,000 members over the next two years if Congress accepts proposed DoD cuts.

Secretary of Defense Dick Cheney and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin Powell said the cuts are necessary to bring the forces into balance. Cheney prefaced his recent announcement by saying the Persian Gulf War was the first sustained test of the Guard and Reserve as part of the total force and noted they served magnificently.

"But with our victories in the gulf and with the end of the Cold War and the dramatic reductions in defense spending, it's vital we make the kinds of adjustments in our forces that are required," he added.

The cuts would close 830 units in all states and territories. Over the next five years, DoD wants to cut 234,000 from the Reserve components. If adopted, the Reserve components will have 920,000 members by 1997. There are now 1.15 million members. Officials said this would save $20 billion.

The Army National Guard and the Army Reserve would take most of the cuts with 80,000 and 45,000, respectively. The Navy Reserve would lose 10,700, and the Marine Corps Reserve would lose 2,700. The Air Force Reserve would be cut 740 members.

Most of the cuts come in units drawn up to support forces that were in Europe to counter the Warsaw Pact. The Army's VII Corps and some associated units deactivated in March. Cheney said the 140,000 members of the reserve components needed to support the 100,000-man VII Corps are no longer necessary. DoD should be allowed to adjust the forces as needed, he insisted.

"If we don't need the active component, we don't need the Reserve component either," he said. He said this reduction accounts for 80 percent of the cuts. The rest of the cuts are to units that had specific missions relating to other Cold War scenarios.

Powell told reporters the United States is reshaping the military to face an entirely new strategic environment. This means military planners need the flexibility to deal with the Reserves. "You cannot leave a major component of that force untouched and off to the side because it is too hard to do a proper reshaping of them," he said.

Powell explained how the cuts fill his base force plan. Active forces should be used when "you need them every day, all day —either here in the United States or deployed overseas," he said. "It has a 365-day-a-year mission and you require its presence all the time."

He said Reserve outfits — which drill one weekend a month and two weeks each summer — should not perform the same type missions allocated to active component units. Mechanized infantry and armored divisions should be active component forces. Combat support and combat service support forces should be reserve components.

This is not to say the reserve will not have combat forces. "Keep in mind we're keeping six National Guard divisions, (and) the round-out concept remains intact," said Powell. "We're keeping a pretty solid combined arms component to the National Guard base for structure."

Congress must approve any reduction in the Reserve component. DoD has approached Congress for reductions in the past and been less than successful. "(Congress has) resisted," Cheney said.

"Initially in '89 when we asked, they said 'no.' In '90 when we asked, they said 'no.' In '91 when we asked, they said, 'OK, you can have half of what you asked for.'"

"We're coming back again. Just because Congress said 'no' doesn't mean it's a bad idea. It is, in fact, an essential part of our overall plan."

"Nobody's suggested a better strategy," he continued. "My friends on the Hill basically are saying: 'Not in my backyard.' 'Don't close down my armory.' 'Don't shut down my production line.' We can't operate on that basis. We have to make decisions that are based on what's in the national interest."

36th helps Reservists in Puerto Rico

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

The 36th Engineer Group is sending a Maintenance Assistance Team to Puerto Rico Monday to assist U.S. Army Reserve units.

According to Master Warrant Pedro Arroyo, engineer equipment technician of the 36th Group, the team will assist the 448th Engineer Battalion Combat Heavy and the 699th Port Construction Company.

"The mission is really twofold," said Arroyo. "First there is the need to train the Reserves in up-to-date preventive maintenance procedures and second to evaluate the readiness of their equipment."

The team will consist of one warrant officer, four non-commissioned officers and four enlisted soldiers. They will be commanded by Chief Warrant Officer 2 Claiborn Thompson and the noncommissioned officer in charge will be Staff Sgt. Gus Hinton Jr.

"I feel great about going to help the Reserves," said Hinton. "We can teach them the modern procedures we've learned here to help them stay combat ready."

The team is being sent as a result of a courtesy visit by Arroyo in February under "Capstone," the program where in time of war units of the Reserves augment active Army units.

"During my visit some problems with maintenance were noted and after some discussion with the local command it was felt that an assistance visit by a qualified maintenance team was in order," said Arroyo.

Upon his return, Arroyo was debriefed by 36th Group and the request for assistance was approved. Most of the maintenance team will come from the 598th Maintenance Company, which is part of 36th Group.

"These units will fall under us (36th Group) in time of war and to get the opportunity to train with them now can only improve the teamwork we will need if war ever returns" said Hinton. "We can learn a lot from each other."

The team will leave Fort Benning Monday and return in approximately three weeks.

29th holds weapon, BFV exhibition

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

A machine gun and a Bradley Fighting Vehicle demonstration was performed for the Infantry Officers Basic Course at Red Cloud Range April 20. The demonstration was supported and furnished by 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

The weapons fired were the M-60 machine gun, M-249 squad automatic weapon, 50-caliber machine gun, and the MK-19 automatic grenade launcher. Second Lt. George Godfrey, of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment was the officer in charge of the demonstration.

"This is a good opportunity for the students to receive hands on training from subject matter experts," said Godfrey.

The students preparing to go into mechanized infantry units were given a glimpse of the firepower the Bradley possesses with a close look at the vehicle's suppressive 25mm main gun and the 7.62 mm coaxle mounted machine gun.

After the demonstration the students were given the opportunity to fire the weapons systems. The students that were proceeding to mechanized units fired the predominantly used light infantry machine guns, and the students moving into light infantry units were given the opportunity to fire the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. This enabled the students to experience other aspects of the infantry.

Second Lt. Mark Turner, a student in the IOBC class said, "This is great training, and it gives you a good understanding of the weapon systems capabilities."

Col. Patrick Kenny, director of Engineering and Housing, briefs delegates during the 1992 Fort Benning Army Family Action Plan Symposium.

Delegates to the 1992 Fort Benning Army Family Action Plan Symposium review information packets.

Issues include 6 areas

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The issues addressed by the six work groups at the 1992 Fort Benning Army Family Action Plan Symposium included six major areas:

Consumer and commercial services

• getting the Army and Air Force Exchange Service and the Directorate of Community Activities to offer engine and transmission repair to offset the high cost locally,

• seeing to it that soldiers get a better deal from AAFES and its contractors,

• getting airlines to reinstate military discounts on airfare for bonafide emergencies since other discounts have been discontinued.

Youth and education

• addressing problems at Spencer High School,

• expanding hours and other options because child-care hours are not adequate,

• disseminating information about youth and child-care programs to better reach their target audience.

Health services

• finding an option so that specialty care can be covered by the Delta Dental Insurance for family members,

• since retirees over age 65 need health care provided by military facilities, having the billing done through Medicare by the facility,

• addressing the inadequate facilities here for the population being served here.

Housing

• having basic allowance for quarters and variable housing allowance cover total local average cost of housing, not 80 to 85 percent,

• initiating a"Mr. Fix-it" hot line,

• use a centralized computer system to begin a Department of Defense vehicle registration so it isn't necessary with every permanent change of station.

Family and soldier support services

• treating all soldiers alike so there will be no more unequal financial compensation as there was with Desert Storm soldiers based on personal financial conditions ,

• since a smaller army will yield more dollars for basic allowance for quarters, changing the formula so that BAQ plus variable housing allowance equals the actual cost of housing, not 80 percent,

• installing a deferred payment plan in the Post Exchange similar to one in Military Clothing Sales,

• supporting activities that close or reduce operations at lunch.

Relocation, quality of life

• allowing soldiers equal options by not depriving single soldiers the entitlement of BAQ and basic allowance for subsistence,

• approving that soldiers be authorized temporary storage up to 180 days in connection with a local move for expiration of term in service rather than solely shipment to home of record,

• having sponsorship be an entitlement for soldiers.

Delegates raise issues, address quality of Army life

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Don't spend a lot of time looking at high-dollar-amount items. It will be a lesson in futility, but we still have some money to spend to improve the quality of life here at Fort Benning. It is a premier installation for the Army."

These were part of the welcoming remarks made by Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, at the 1992 Fort Benning Army Family Action Plan Symposium April 23, which was sponsored by the command group and coordinated by Gwen Brownlee, wife of Col. William R. Brownlee II, garrison commander.

According to the garrison commander, the symposium served as a forum for soldiers, family members and civilians to surface quality of life issues and lay the ground work necessary for resolution of the issues. "The Army Family Action Plan directs actions to enhance readiness and increase retention by improving the quality of life for soldiers and their families," he said. "It stands as evidence of Fort Benning's commitment to the total Army family and demonstrates official recognition and attention to Army family issues."

The theme of this year's symposium was "Rising to the Challenge — Today's Vision... Tomorrow's Reality."

Delegates chosen by their commanders or directors heard presentations by Col. Patrick Kenny, director of Engineering and Housing; Col. Vernon Spaulding, commander at Martin Army Community Hospital; and Alan F. Stewart, director of Community Activities.

Delegates included soldiers (single, dual military, sole parents) and civilians.

The delegates were divided into six work groups that looked at the topics of consumer and commercial services, housing, youth and education, family and soldiers support services, health services, relocation and quality of life.

Housing issues

Having moved 18 times in his own career, Kenny said he understands the trauma of moving from post to post and is doing his best to relieve problems in this area.

Since there is in his words, "a tremendous number of soldiers waiting for housing," it is his goal to have post housing occupied at 98 percent at any one time.

Currently, it is at 95 percent due to the downsizing and the Custer Terrace renovation, which causes some quarters to remain vacant.

Projects presently under way to upgrade post facilities include replacing roofs, installing and servicing heating and air conditioning units, replacing water heaters, cleaning sewers, fixing gas mains, servicing underground electrical wires, putting in improved smoke detectors, fixing windows, completing a walkway in Bouton Heights and painting some bungalows in Indianhead Terrace.

He said the future will see the completion of the Custer Terrace renovation and some housing built at the ranger camp at Dahlonega.

This will mean converting accommodations for the handicapped, altering street patterns through family neighborhoods and improving parking in the older sets of quarters.

Also four barracks in the 2800 block are scheduled for renewal and eight barracks on Kelley Hill are slated for renovation by 1995.

Community activity issues

Stewart told the delegates that the Directorate of Community Activities constantly conducts surveys and samples to see what the Fort Benning community wants.

Sports and gyms have ranked high on the "wish list," as have multi-purpose and outdoor recreation facilities.

It was this that sparked improvements at the Uchee Creek and Destin, Fla., recreation areas.

He said that customer service feedback cards are used and taken seriously.

DCA funds come from a variety of sources such as a limited amount of taxpayer monies, local fees from those using post facilities, about 90 private organizations like the Association of the United States Army, the Officers' Wives' Club, the Enlisted Wives' Club, etc., and the Morale/Welfare/Recreation Fund.

Stewart said the bottom line is to expand facilities and increase usage. Currently, two new child care centers are under construction, and plans include work on the Officers' Club, the NCO Club, a recreation center for Sand Hill, renovations at the Main Post and PX bowling centers and building a new enlisted club closer to the airborne area on main post.

Health services issues

Spaulding said his challenges at Martin Army include the following: budgeting, staffing, parking, safety and introducing the new "Gateway to Health Care Program."

Gateway is the Department of Defense managed care program, similar to the civilian health maintenance organization concept, in which costs will be controlled, care will improve and a preferred provider network will allow for costs to be managed when patients need to use Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services and get care "downtown".

The program is expected to be phased into Department of Defense hospitals in the next three years.

Every active duty soldier's family will be assigned to one clinic to manage their health care.

Within the next six months the PRIMUS Clinic in Columbus will no longer be a walk-in clinic, patients will be enrolled in the PRIMUS Clinic just like clinics at MACH, Spaulding said.

He termed the civilian health care system as one "in chaos" due to the astronomical rise in costs, and said the military system compares favorably despite its own problems, which he believes Gateway can help solve.

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division will be the first group to be enrolled in the new system, before it goes postwide.

Linda Ernst serves as a discussion group leader for the work group on family and soldier support services.

School board changes attendance areas

Fort Benning Schools

Main post children who, using current boundaries, would have enrolled in kindergarten next fall at Patch School will enroll at E.A. White School as a result of a Fort Benning School Board action at its regular meeting on Monday.

The change will affect approximately 35 children who will enroll in kindergarten in the fall and who live on main post in what has been the Patch School area.

The change in attendance areas was made to reduce the potential number of school changes for the students and to make better use of existing school facilities.

School officials explained that the completion of the new school in Bouton Heights in the summer of 1993 will result in the closing of Patch School.

Bouton Heights kindergarten and first grade students will attend the new school and children from those grades who live on center post will attend the E.A. White School.

An addition to the E.A. White School is currently under construction. This addition will add five classrooms to that facility, thus providing space for the kindergarten classes in the fall.

E.A. White School will also lose a substantial number of children when the Bouton Heights School opens, making room for the center post first graders in the fall of 1993.

The move of the kindergarten students to E.A. White next fall will permit those students to continue to attend the same Fort Benning school through the end of the fifth grade should they continue to live on post.

The move also frees two classrooms at the Patch School, permitting the addition of another first grade class if class sizes are as large as they were this year.

E.A. White School will be having a kindergarten roundup on Tuesday from 1:30 to 4 p.m. At that time parents will be informed about programs which will be available to children in the fall.

Students to use bus shelters for school

In an effort to utilize covered bus stop shelters built recently by the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, the Fort Benning School System will implement changes in some bus stop locations effective May 11.

Maps identifying the new stop locations will be sent home with Fort Benning Schools' students prior to May 11. Parents are urged to consult the map to determine whether their child's bus stop is affected.

The schools ask the cooperation of parents in seeing that their child meets the bus at the new location May 11. Pickup times will remain the same. Old bus stop locations will no longer be utilized after May 11.

Parents who have questions regarding the new bus stop locations should phone Alice Skinner at 545-2500 or their child's school.

Red Cross to give classes on mowing safety, injury prevention

True or False: Each year there are more than 60,000 injuries related to lawn mowing.

Answer: True.

That's why the Fort Benning chapter of the American Red Cross and Briggs & Stratton Corporation, a manufacturer of lawn mower engines, will sponsor "Knowing Mowing."

The course will be at the Red Cross office on Main Post Saturday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. and Tuesday and May 19 from 6 to 7:30 p.m. A class will also be May 14 at Youth Activities; the course is free.

Parents are also encouraged to attend. Parents must register their child by coming to the Red Cross office either at Martin Army Community Hospital in Room 721 or the Red Cross building on Main Post. Parents must sign a permission slip for their child to attend. Instructors request that participants wear long pants and sturdy shoes.

The safety course is designed to help reduce the number of injuries caused by power lawn mowers.

"Knowing Mowing" is a national program, now in its fourth year. To date, more than 40,000 people have taken the course. It is financed by Briggs & Stratton and offered at Red Cross chapters around the country.

How's your lawn mowing IQ? Here's a quick quiz:

True or False: It is okay to mow over small sticks and other items on the lawn.

False. Never mow over sticks or other items. They could get thrown from the discharge chute while mowing and cause serious injury.

True or False: As soon as the mower is turned off, the blades stop turning.

False. The blades can take three to 10 seconds to stop turning once the engine is shut off.

"If your lawn mowing IQ needs fine tuning, sign up for 'Knowing Mowing,'" said George Thompson, corporate communications manager for Milwaukee-based Briggs & Stratton. "The course is open to anyone over age 12, and it is never too late to learn proper lawn mower safety."

The 90-minute training session includes "hands-on" training with a walk-behind power lawn mower, as well as basic maintenance, "Do's and Don'ts" and first aid information.

Briggs & Stratton provides all the instructional materials. The instruction is carried out by professional and volunteer instructors from the Fort Benning Red Cross chapter. Lawn mowers for the course are provided by Briggs & Stratton.

Students completing the course receive a "Knowing Mowing" baseball cap, certificate, wallet card and a laminated poster that reviews operating, maintenance and first aid information.

"As the world's largest maker of gasoline engines for outdoor power equipment, sponsorship of 'Knowing Mowing' is a natural for us," said Chambers. The industry has done what it can to make the mower itself safe. Educating the operator in the proper use of the equipment is the next logical step to cut down on accidents."

Persons or organizations interested in "Knowing Mowing" classes should call the Red Cross office at 545-5194.

KNOWING MOWING

Safety is a must at summer cookouts

Infantry Branch Safety Office

The days are sunny, the evenings, balmy. Baseball season is in full swing. Shorts replace insulated overalls. With all these signals in evidence, one more scene is inevitable. Pops (or mom), bedecked in outdoor grilling designer wear, breaking out the faithful barbecue.

As surely as the birds sing and the days grow longer, meat is going to hit a hot barbecue grill. The meat will be marinated in a secret family potion and gingerly lowered onto the grate. The scent wafts throughout the neighborhood, spurring a domino effect whereby multitudes are prompted to retrieve their grills.

An outdoor cookout is not merely a culinary occasion. Far from it. A cookout takes on a theatrical air, complete with outlandish costumes, grand gestures and inspiring speeches.

Hats read, "Kiss the cook." Aprons advertise the 1991 El Paso chili cook-off. Cooks twirl double-pronged forks and execute daring swoops with gleaming spatulas, and the monologues!

The prevailing festive atmosphere is not invincible. Nothing is more terrifying to a band of merry outdoor grillers than to witness a "towering inferno."

When you get down to it, some barbecue sessions are little more than playing with fire, and we all know the tragic repercussions of that. Safety must be a key ingredient in all your outdoor barbecue recipes. In fact, mix one part proper equipment operation and one part common sense to your secret sauce. Read your grill's operating instructions and abide by them. Be familiar with the different safety peculiarities that apply to charcoal grills, gas grills, propane tanks, and lighters.

Common sense will keep you from committing acts that will terminate your outdoor cooking career. Stunts like squirting lighter fluid onto lit coals or plugging electric coal starters into sockets while standing in a puddle.

Once the cookout bug bites, shaking it is next to impossible. Even miscooked food can't dampen the occasion. "Don't you know nuthin'?" the cook will proclaim, "It's supposed to be like that when you cook it on a grill."

If the clouds build and begin to roll overhead, eyes are locked straight ahead, refusing to acknowledge the impending downpour.

Eventually, the barbecue is called due to rain. Some are steadfast. They erect umbrellas over their grilling site or stick it out in the tempest. "It'll blow over any minute now," they reassure, "summer showers don't last long at all."

Others may even relocate by moving their grills into the garage or carport. "It's the same cookout taste," they explain. "Even it it's not really cooked out." Sure, they escape the rain, but not the carbon monoxide from the burning coals. Sometimes, you just have to realize when something was not meant to be.

One marinade consists of steak sauce, worcestershire, mustard, cayenne pepper and bourbon, and of course, proper equipment operation and common sense.

Group fights for clean water

National Drinking Water Week Coalition

"Water needs our care as never before, and we're inviting everyone to get on the Blue Thumb bandwagon," said John Daniel, chair of the National Drinking Water Week Coalition.

With 168 million tons of industrial waste dumped into U.S. waterways each year, and the increasing need for clean drinking water, the coalition is enlisting the aid of the public.

"Critical ways the public can help are by learning how to protect sources of drinking water from pollution, conserving and getting involved in water decisions in their local communities," said Daniel.

To assist the public in developing everyday habits that give drinking water a hand, the coalition has developed a brochure, Blue Thumb Basics.

The group is also promoting activities across the country Sunday through May 9, which is National Drinking Water Week.

Activities include Blue Thumb Forums, community meetings coordinated by the League of Women Voters; Blue Thumb Voyages, presentations by water supply professionals in schools; Blue Thumb Summits, high level meetings for city councils and other community decision makers; Blue Thumb Brigades, source water clean ups coordinated by water utilities, 4-H Clubs, county extension agents, and environmental groups; and Blue Thumb Discovery Tours, open houses at treatment facilities.

On the national level, a Blue Thumb Citation will be awarded to an individual or organization for outstanding work for drinking water. The award, coordinated by the Water Education Foundation, will be given at a national presentation during National Drinking Water Week.

Lead organizations for the Blue Thumb campaign are the American Water Works Association, which originated the idea and registered Blue Thumb, U.S. Department of Agriculture Extension Service, American Ground Water Trust, League of Women Voters Education Fund, U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, AWWA Research Foundation, and the Water Education Foundation.

The free brochure, Blue Thumb Basics, is available by contacting the National Drinking Water Week Headquarters, Public Information Department, American Water Works Association, 6666 West Quincy Ave., Denver, Colo. 80235.

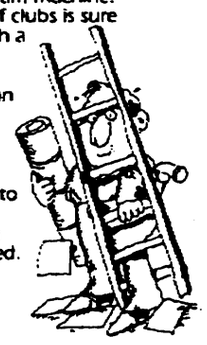
How to make money in three easy steps.

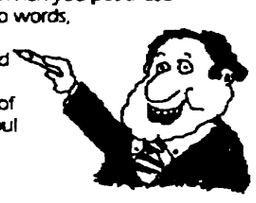
Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.



Step 2.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!



Step 3.

Contact classified. Give us a call. You'll cash in on the speed and effectiveness of the dynamic classified marketplace. Each day, highly motivated readers are seeking services and solutions for a variety of needs. Turn to the classified pages, and you'll turn your item to be sold into money! It's as easy as 1-2-3!

Cybill Shepherd is detective 'Stormy Weathers'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Even if it seems Cybill Shepherd is revisiting familiar territory with her latest television part, she maintains she's not.

Though she played a detective on her hugely popular series "Moonlighting," the character of ex-model Maddie Hayes was more of an amateur sleuth than the title role Shepherd plays in "Stormy Weathers," Monday's new ABC TV-movie that mixes mystery with a humorous undercurrent.

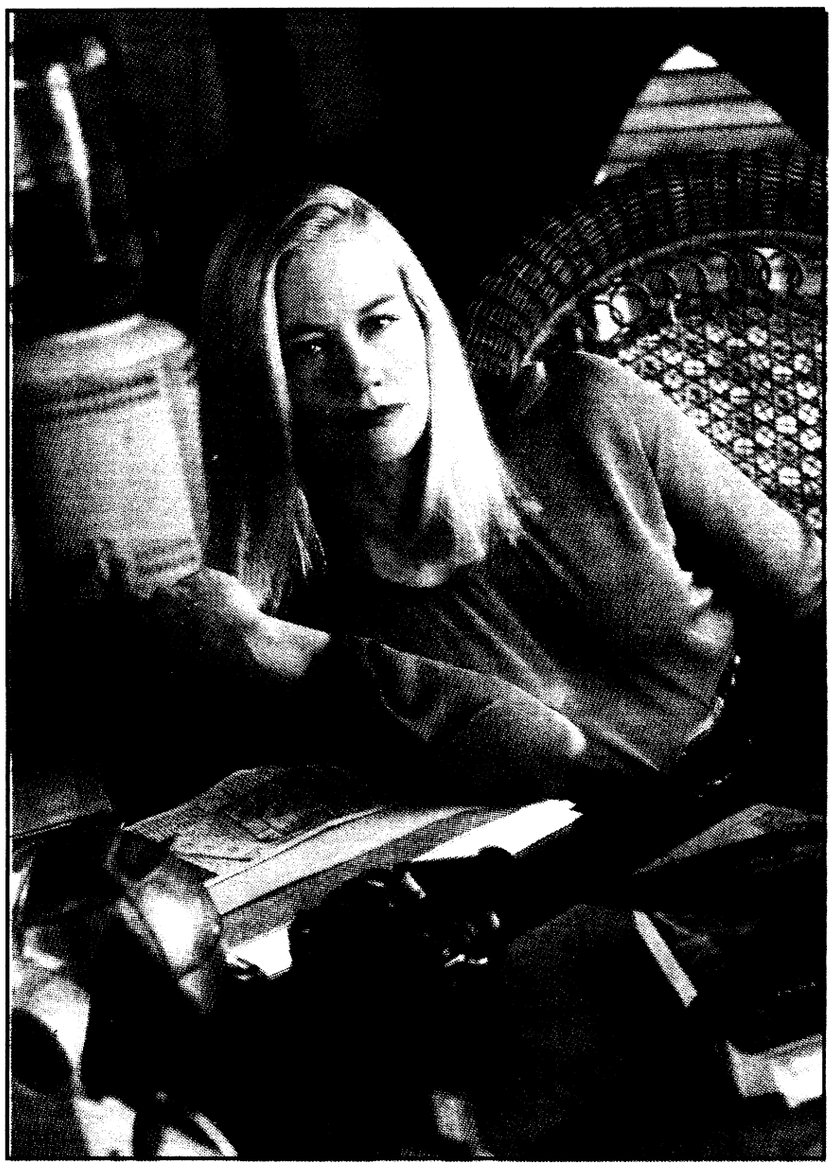
Also co-produced by Shepherd, in partnership with feature-film makers Marcia ("The Big Chill") Nasatir and Steven ("Dead Poets Society") Haft, the story puts martial-arts-skilled Los Angeles private eye Samantha Weathers on the trail of the missing uncle of an amorous Italian nobleman (Robert Beltran, of the cult movie "Eating Raoul"), but the search reveals much more than she bargained for ... including skeletons in the closet of a well-known congresswoman (former "Hill Street Blues" regular Mimi Kuzyk), several long-unsolved murders, and a pipeline for drug smugglers.

Directed by Will Mackenzie — who also guided Shepherd through a number of "Moonlighting" installments, most notably the memorable 1986 episode that parodied Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew" — the tale also features Tony Lo Bianco, Charlie ("Ferris Bueller") Schlatter, Roy ("Dark Shadows") Thinnes and Kene ("Matlock") Holliday.



Cybill Shepherd

"Stormy Weathers" arrives fairly close on the heels of "Memphis," last January's TNT cable project that Shepherd also nurtured creatively as well as starred in. However, that took nearly a full decade from inception to finished product, whereas "Weathers" ended up requiring a relatively short three years. "I had been looking to play a woman private investigator," the friendly and forthcoming Shepherd explains. "What happened is that I had gotten turned on to women's mysteries. I began reading authors like Sue Grafton and Sara Paretsky, then my agent found this script (which already existed), so I thought it could be rewritten with me in mind." Adding that "the character originally was named Samantha Spade," an obvious twist on "The Maltese Falcon's" very male Sam Spade, Shepherd insists her move back into the detective genre is a far cry from the image she developed on "Moonlighting."

"It's a completely different situation," she states. "Maddie Hayes was forced, almost against her will, to change careers (after her business manager bilked her out of her modeling profits); she had no interest in being an investigator, but Samantha really grew up in that atmosphere. Her father was a detective who had quit the police force, and she had gone to the police academy, so they started a detective agency together. In our story, he died five years earlier, so she runs it alone now." In fact, the film-noir-styled "Stormy Weathers" is filled with plenty of background information of that nature, since Shepherd envisions producing and appearing in a series of recurring TV-movies about the wisecracking but serious-about-her-work character: "That was always my intent, and I'd love to be able to do two or three of these a year."

Certain aspects of the initial story hinge on Samantha's skills in karate, sufficient enough to have earned her a black belt. "I had never studied it," Shepherd confesses, "but as soon as I read the script, I started looking around for the right place, and I found the Women's Karate Center of Los Angeles. I studied there for five or six months before starting the film, but to get an actual black belt takes a lot longer than that. I'm not really at that level, but I believe I learned enough and worked hard enough to sell the idea that I am."

State site's new name reflects history

Department of Natural Resources

Sunbury State Historic Site has been renamed by the Board of Natural Resources. Effective immediately, the new name of the site will be Fort Morris State Historic Site.

The site was named after the adjoining town of Sunbury when the state began operating the site in 1978.

None of the original town, which Fort Morris was built to protect, now remains.

Lonice Barrett, director of the Georgia Department of Natural Resources' Parks, Recreation and Historic Sites Division, explained, "Many visitors looking for the 'ghost town' of Sunbury are disappointed. The new name is less misleading and the public will know that they are visiting the site of a fort."

Fort Morris saw action in both the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812 as a stronghold built to protect the Georgia coast from the British Navy. In the site's museum, exhibits describe the fort's military history and the colonial port of Sunbury.

Fort Morris State Historic Site is located outside of Savannah, seven miles east of I-95 Exit 13 via Georgia Highway 38.

For more information, call the site at (912) 884-5999.

Bennett yields rave review

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

REVIEW

Musical director/conductor George Del Gobbo and the Columbus Symphony Orchestra were on fire musically Saturday at the Three Arts Theater from Berlioz' Hungarian March from "The Damnation of Faust" to Weber's "Overture to Oberon" and Anderson's "The Waltzing Cat."

The first surprise of the evening was a participating directed audience, which barked and meowed to Hayman's Pops Hoedown, but chose not to take his invitation to dance in the aisle.

The second surprise was when a brave, adult, male person whose name sounded close to Gary Morrow took Del Gobbo's challenge to perform an impromtu conducting of Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes Forever," which won him a standing ovation and cheers for his intestinal fortitude. The symphony was never so much fun.

And then the presentation of the man of the hour, Tony Bennett and his trio, Ralph Sharon, music director on piano, Paul Langosch on bass, and Joe Labarbera on drums, delighted and thrilled his audience with his selections including a special request from Frank Sinatra who is on record as saying that "Bennett is the best in the business, the best exponent of song."

Bennett, the guest artist, entertained his audience tirelessly, encore after encore. He sang selections such as "Rags to Riches," "The Shadow of Your Dream," "Autumn Leaves", "Because of You" and "Cold, Cold Heart." He said when he originally sang "Cold, Cold Heart with an orchestra, he was the Michael Jackson of his day.

A piano tribute was paid to the late great Duke Ellington and was played beautifully. Bennett asked his audience "Isn't it nice that Natalie Cole just brought out her..." His question was drowned out with applause in approval of her latest album of her father's (Nat King Cole) songs.

Bennett sang, danced and truly entertained his audience. He was bravissimo. "Mr. San Francisco" seemed to enjoy his fans as much as they enjoyed him. He said he received a call to be on Johnny Carson's last show.

Mr. Bennett, you were your usual magnificent self and I'm looking forward to seeing you on the Tonight Show.

Local playwright wins contest

Springer Opera House

Columbus writer Edward Campbell has won the Springer Theatre's Deep South New Play Contest with a children's comic adventure called "Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm." Campbell, 43, is a full-time writer who is currently working on two books, one fiction and one non-fiction. "Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm" is his first playscript.

"Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm," is a children's fantasy adventure about a boy named Kendall who becomes separated from his parents. With the aid of his pet hamster, Hauncho, and his friends Belinda and Billy, Kendall sets off on a fantastic journey through the maze of tunnels, wheels and secret passages of Hauncho's hamster habitrail on a quest to find his mother and father. STORMY

The notion of doing several "Stormy Weathers" movies per season appeals greatly to Shepherd. "It would give me time to be with my kids," she acknowledges, "and also to do other things. I really want to keep that freedom." That "freedom" will involve more stints for her as a producer, though she knows that the process can be a tough one. "It depends on the subject matter," she says. "When you have a controversial subject, it's a lot more difficult. With 'Stormy Weathers,' I wanted to portray a woman people could admire and relate to, while also having commercial elements like action, comedy and drama. Those are the things that go into what are my favorite shows."

70 compete for 'Best Ranger' title

Competition tests endurance

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Thirty-five two-man teams from all over the United States, including Alaska and Hawaii, came to Fort Benning, May 1 through Sunday to compete in the 10th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition.

The soldiers and Marines came to test their physical stamina and mental discipline and hopefully walk away with the title of "Best Ranger."

The competition involved three days of nonstop physically and mentally demanding events.

Out of 35 teams, only 17 completed the competition.

When the dust settled, the two soldiers who came out on top were Sgt. 1st Class Tom W. Wilburn, Company C, Sgt. 1st Class Alvin M. Brashier of Company A, both of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga.

"The competition was close to the wire and fairly evenly matched," said Col. John J. Maher III, Ranger Training Brigade commander. "The feedback from those who competed was that it was a fair competition."

And the winners are ...

First Place: Sgt. 1st Class Tom W. Wilburn, Co.C, 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga.

Sgt. 1st Class Alvin M. Brashier, Co. A, 5th Ranger Training Bn., Dahlonega, Ga.

Second Place: Marine Staff Sgt. James M. Turner, Co. A, 5th Ranger Training Bn., Dahlonega, Ga.

Staff Sgt. Robert C. Leines, Co. B, 5th Ranger Training Bn., Dahlonega, Ga.

Third Place: Staff Sgt. Robert L. Atkin, HHC, 2nd Bn., 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Staff Sgt. Mark F. Nygard, Co. B, 2nd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., Fort Lewis, Wash.

'These are the best athletes in the world'

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

"The competition is better than any 'ironman' or any other competition as far as a test of stamina and physical endurance goes," said Harry L. Ikner, coordinator of the 10th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition.

"It's very tough," he said. "As Dr. John Henderson of the Hughston Orthopaedic Clinic put it, these are the best athletes in the world."

Each two-man team had to pass the Army Physical Fitness Test, get 23 hits or a combination of 50 hits for the team on a moving and stationary target range, complete the land navigation course in 12 hours finding at least the first six points, finish the foot march in six hours, make the spot jump and finish the canoe event to remain in the battle to be the best.

Most of those competitors agreed that even though everything was tough, the toughest were the night events — the foot march and land navigation. After the foot march, the field of contestants narrowed down from 35 teams to 19. (Five teams dropped during the weapons firing and 11 during the foot march.)

"The night events are the worst," said Sgt. Rolf Jensen, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. "The march was more than five hours with a 50-pound ruck and the pressure of time. Then we have to suck it up and get ready for the land navigation, where it's the same thing, only over terrain."

Jensen finished sixth with his partner Sgt. Dennis McGowan from Co. C of the same battalion.

● HOOAH: It's pronounced who ah and means anything from yes sir to good job ranger. It was a cry heard throughout ranger country at Fort Benning May 1 through Monday during the 10th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition.

● How the 'best' was won: The competitors had to dig deep and swear hard to complete the 12 event of the 60-hour, nonstop Best Ranger Competition.

Civilian Pay voted TRADOC's best

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Civilian Pay section of the Finance and Accounting Office was recently named the best in the Training and Doctrine Command for 1991.

Bobby King, deputy finance and accounting officer, said the award was based primarily on such criterion as efficient service and was judged according to a monthly report sent by the Finance and Accounting Office to TRADOC.

According to a TRADOC news release, 16 TRADOC installations competed in 10 categories.

Other winners included Fort Leavenworth Kan., Best Sure Pay Participation and Best Military Pay; Fort Jackson, S.C., Best Accounts Payable; Carlisle Barracks, Pa., Best Travel and Best Accounting; and Fort Eustis, Va., Best Central Accounting Office.

Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Gordon, Ga., and Carlisle Barracks, Pa., were selected as the best Finance and Accounting Offices in the large, intermediate and small installation categories respectively.

The competition, now in its fourth year, was judged by TRADOC's deputy chief of staff for resource management.

Capt. William Lewis, finance officer at Fort Monroe, Va., said, in the news release, that the purpose of the yearly competition is to "encourage the best possible pay support to soldiers and civilians."

Volunteers to be recognized

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Volunteers at Fort Benning will be honored in a variety of ways during a special week, Sunday through May 16, according to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

The highlight of the week will be a Volunteer Recognition Ceremony Tuesday at 4 p.m. on the lawn of Riverside, home of Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, and his wife, Linda. In the event of inclement weather, the site will be the Officers' Club Supper Club.

About 2,000 volunteers will receive Certificates of Appreciation signed by White, and there will be a presentation of awards to those receiving the Commander's Certificate of Appreciation for Patriotic Civilian Service and the Volunteer of the Quarter.

Other events for the week will include:

Sunday — Chaplains will honor volunteers and the special contributions they make at services on post.

Wednesday — Media workshop for volunteer managers, 10 a.m. to noon, Youth Activities Center. Managers will learn how to arrange for public service announcements, etc., for their activities.

Thursday — Job strategy workshop for volunteers, 8:30 a.m. to noon, Youth Activities Center. Shirley Jarrett of the Family Member Employment Assistance Program at Army Community Services will discuss learning how to market job experience gained from volunteering.

988th MPs return

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The 988th Military Police Company returned last week after four months in Panama.

Around 155 soldiers, including a platoon of 33 from the 194th Military Police Company, arrived at Lawson Army Airfield April 29.

The combined units deployed to Panama Jan. 3 to support the 92nd Military Police Battalion at Fort Clayton, said Capt. Ivette Rodriguez, company commander.

The deployment was part of a routine rotation of units to support the 92nd. Besides providing routine security, the unit had the opportunity to conduct jungle training, Rodriguez said.

"We had hardly any time off. What time we did have was spent doing basic jungle training, mounted and dismounted," said Rodriguez.

"Basically we had a successful mission, overall. We accomplished the operation," she added.

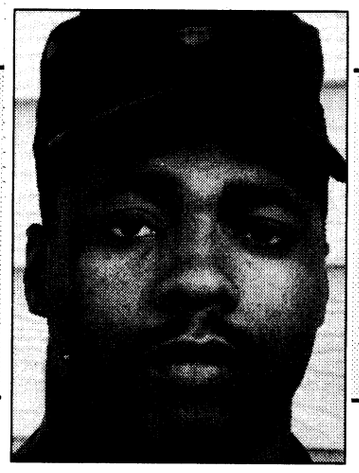
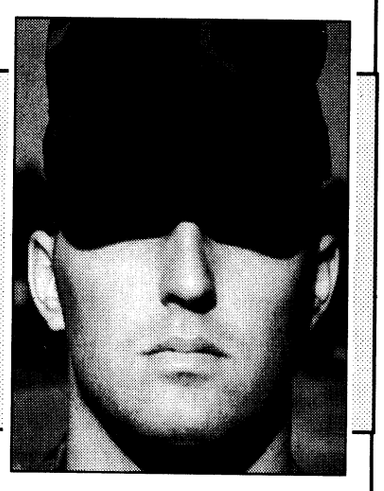
VARIOUS VOICES

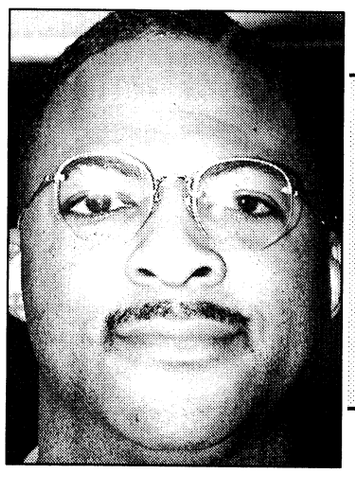
Should the names of the Officers' Wives' Club and the Enlisted Wives' Club be changed to spouses' club?



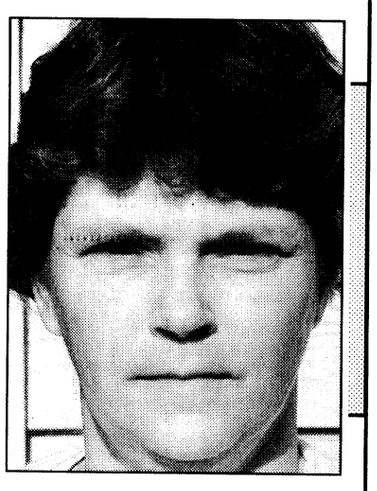
Spc. William T. Davis, Battery B, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infanty Division — "I don't think the names should be changed. Having male and female spouses in the same club is not a good idea. Male spouses should probably have their own club."



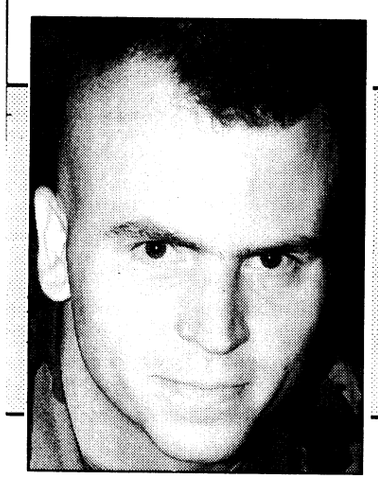
Pvt. 1 Christopher S. Snedeker, Company D, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment— "I think they should change the name of the clubs. Male spouses should be treated equally."



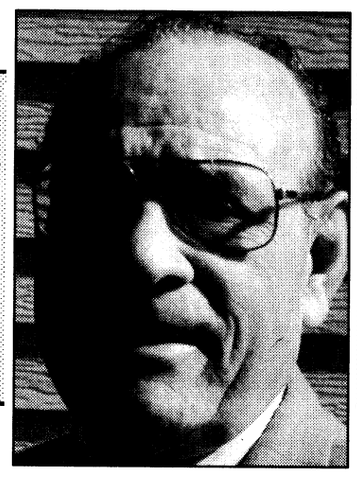
Sgt. 1st Class Gregory Brant, Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think that the clubs should change their name, because there are male spouses not in the service and they should be included as well as female spouses."



Vicky Caldwell, Fort Benning Emergency Medical Service — "Yes, I think the names should be changed to more accurately reflect the image of the modern Army."



1st Lt. Matthew Buck, Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 3-92 — "The names should be changed because male spouses who aren't on active duty should be included. The male family members may not be interested in joining the clubs, but the effort should be made to include them."



Retired Chief Warrant Officer 2 Jose Castellenos— "I think the names should be changed on the premise that there are male family members for both officers and enlisted soldiers and they should be represented."

Spouses, mothers get their days

COMMENTARY

May is the month for moms and military spouses.

Voila, today is Military Spouse Day and Sunday is Mother's Day.

Thank you Hallmark cards.

An old Jewish proverb says, "God could not be everywhere, so he made mothers."

One thing about being in the military, you don't often see mom. Normally, the Army has a way of making sure you're stationed at opposite poles. So God also made mothers-in-law.

I'm sure you've noticed how often you're stationed in the same town. A perverse twist of fate?A coincidence?

Maybe it's just soldiers come from nonmilitary towns and get married in military ones, such as Fort Benning and Columbus.

Ever wonder what the statue on Wynnton Road represents? The one of a woman with her hand on her forehead as as she gazes off in to the distance?

It's a mother looking for a son-in-law.

When Marshal Ferdinand Foch saw the Grand Canyon, he remarked, "What a marvelous place to drop one's mother-in-law."

See, mother-in-law bashing dates way back.

But, mothers-in-law, it must be remembered, are also someone's mother — namely, your spouse's. So it would behoove one to get along with said person.

Especially if you're going to spend a lot of time being stationed in her town.

They're great for looking after kids, generally are better cooks than your own spouse and have even been known to come by your house and start picking up, although I have yet to see one that mows the lawn.

So go along with your spouse when she leaves to visit her mom and be nice to her, at least Sunday.

Naturally, you should always be nice to your own mom. Let her know you appreciate her every chance you get. She won't be around forever.

I'm not sure if Military Spouse Day is in appreciation of the spouses who are in the military, then that's me, or the spouse of the military person's who's in the military. In that case, it's my wife.

Well, whatever, I appreciate her. I also appreciate the spouses of other military members. They do an uncanny amount of good.

During Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, they kept this place humming. They provided mutual support to one another and sent cheery messages to the troops overseas.

The war has since passed into memory, but the spouses are still out there pitching in. They're running thrift shops, holding running events to raise scholarship money, putting in time at the Army Community Service Lending Closet, patrolling the halls of the hospital, lending a helping hand to those in need.

They do all this despite the fact that many of them work to help make ends meet. Even so, they never forget that their spouses are the military and when it comes to helping out, they're there when asked.

Our spouses make our lives a lot easier. Just putting up with us should earn them medals on a regular basis, but they never shy away from going that extra step.

Today is the day to thank them for that.

Spouses roles have changed

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Today is Military Spouse Day, a day set aside to recognize the contributions of military spouses.

I am in the Army, and I am married. The first question most people ask me when they hear that I'm married is, "Is your husband in the military?" No, he's not, and he never has been.

What he has done is offer emotional support when I made my decision to join the Army, encouraged me to pursue my goals, and made it possible for me to do so.

He took care of our two daughters, ages 2 and 5, while I was away from home for five months in training. He explained to them that Mommy still loved them and would come back, and he comforted them when they didn't understand where Mommy was.

He gets up before dawn to drive me to work, and he takes care of the children all week while I'm not there. We decided together that we didn't want our children in day care, and my husband takes better care of them than any baby sitter could.

"Why doesn't he work?" is the next question some people ask. Well, for one thing, we do have small children, and if he were to work right now, it would likely be at night. The four of us would seldom, if ever, be together all at once.

Another reason is that he has been injured on two separate jobs, which affects his employability in this area. He may go back to school to enhance his employment prospects, but not until our oldest daughter is in school.

A male soldier in my situation would likely not be asked if his wife were in the military. If they had small children, he would likely not be asked why his wife doesn't work.

Women have traditionally done the balance of raising the children in the family, and it has often been a strenuous, demanding and thankless job, except for the personal satisfaction it offered. Many men revere their mothers, and rightly so, for the care and attention "Mom" gave them as they grew up.

Well, times have changed, and roles have shifted, and men and women have adapted to a changed society and a changed military. Military Spouse Day, it seems to me, is a good day to recognize this.

My husband is proud of the job he does, and feels no need to apologize for how he spends his time.

I am proud of the job I do and don't need to explain why I'm in the Army and my husband's not.

He's a military spouse, and I appreciate him.

May is time to brush up on bike safety

U.S. Army Safety Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

May is American Bicycle Month, which makes it a good time to brush up on bike safety.

Each year, nearly 900 bicyclists are killed in collisions with motor vehicles, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Another 300 bicyclists are killed in accidents in parks, bike paths and driveways. In addition to the fatalities, more than a million bicycle injuries are treated annually.

About a third of the cyclists killed in motor vehicle crashes are between the ages of 5 and 15. The fatality rate for this age group is more than 2 1/2 times greater than the fatality rate for older cyclists.

Parents, as well as kids, often think of bicycles as toys, but they are not. Bikes are a form of transportation and are subject to the same rules of the road as any other vehicle. For this reason, knowledge and skill in operating a bike are critical to the bicyclist's safety. Some bicyclists, particularly young ones, are not familiar with either the rules or the hazards of the road. There is, however, plenty of protection available.

Helmets are a must

Three out of four bicycle deaths are due to head injury. Studies have shown that using bicycle helmets can reduce head injuries by up to 85 percent. Parents must insist that children wear helmets at all times while riding. Parents should also wear helmets themselves.

A bicycle helmet should fit snugly but comfortable atop the head. Parents should not purchase a helmet as something a child will "grow into." Helmets are available with different thicknesses of internal padding to help in proper fit. The helmet must have a chin strap and buckles that will stay securely fastened.

There are two nationally recognized safety standards for bicycle helmets sold in the United States: the Snell Memorial Foundation requirements or the American National Safety Institute requirements. Helmets meeting those requirements will be so labeled.

Clothing provides protection

In addition to a helmet, riders should wear the proper clothing. Clothing should be of light color and marked with reflective materials for riding at night. Vests, jackets, tape, wrist bands, and other items that make the rider visible to motorists are widely available.

Clothing should be close fitting to avoid getting caught in the moving parts of the bicycle. Headphones should never be worn, as they hinder the rider's ability to hear traffic.

Bike must fit the rider

Make certain that the bike is the correct size for the person, is safely maintained and has reflectors. Consumer Product Safety Commission regulations require reflectors on the front and rear of the bicycle, on the pedals and on the wheels. Front and rear lights on the bicycle improve nighttime visibility of the cyclist and increase the recognizability of the bicycle for other road users. Lights may be required by law in some places.

Rules of the road

When riding in the road, cyclists must obey traffic laws that apply to motor vehicle operators (for example, driving with traffic). Children must be taught these rules of the road.

Young children should not ride at night, and children under age 9 should not ride in the road, as they do not have the skills to identify and avoid dangerous traffic situations. Bicyclists should ride single file and signal their intentions to other road users, including pedestrians. Children should be taught to look left-right-left when entering the road or crossing an intersection.

Many bicycle deaths and injuries can be prevented through proper education and training. Parents and teachers play a major role in educating children in proper behavior and techniques. Motorists can and should be alert to bicyclists, especially in school zones and residential areas.

Volunteers make things happen. Come and be a part of it.

Rangers prove who's 'Best'

Soldiers win the hard way

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

When the dust settled and it was all over, two soldiers came away with bragging rights to being called the best of the best in the 10th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition, conducted May 1 through Monday at Fort Benning.

They are Sgt. 1st Class Tom W. Wilburn, Company C, 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Dahlonega, Ga. and Sgt. 1st Class Alvin M. Brashier of Co. A, 1st Bn., 5th Ranger Training Bn.

"This means a lot to me," said Wilburn, "I've been here four times and always finished but never won. I'm real proud."

"It's unbelievable," said Brashier. "We just kept each other going and tried to give it everything we had and that's what it took. It was a tough competition. You can't save up for any one event. You have to give your all for each."

Wilburn's parents and other members of his family were able to join him in celebrating his victory.

"Words can't express the way I feel," said Sarah Wilburn, his mother. "I've seen him go through so much. It's wonderful. He has always dreamed of winning."

"I'm so proud," said Roy Wilburn, his father. "I'm proud because he a ranger, and I'm proud because he's my son."

"The competition was close to the wire with fairly evenly matched teams," said Col John J. Maher III, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade. "The feedback from those who competed was that it was a fair competition. I'm personally surprised that any one unit took first and second, but I've known the team coach, Tom Wilburn, for 10 years and he's a wonderful person and a great American. They have rugged duty up there and they train hard." (The second place team was also from 5th Ranger Training Battalion.)

Wilburn and Brashier received 9mm pistols as the first-place prizes.

AIDS still a serious threat to everyone

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

No segment of society, not even the military, is 100 percent safe from AIDS. The precautions that you take can literally mean the difference between life and death.

Lt. Col. Rene Sanchez, chief of Preventive Medicine, Lt. Col. Roberta E. Dyer, chief of Community Health Nursing, and Sherry Kellman, Community Health nurse and HIV coordinator, recently gave some facts that everyone, soldier or civilian, should know about AIDS.

Kellman emphasized that people should first understand the difference between AIDS, or Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, and HIV, which stands for Human Immunodeficiency Virus.

"HIV is the virus that causes the disease AIDS. A person can be HIV positive and not have AIDS," Kellman said.

Dyer explained that the AIDS virus works by attacking and destroying the body's ability to fight off disease and infection.

"I like to use the 'Pac-Man' ana'ogy," Dyer said. "The AIDS virus gobbles up the good cells. The cells that normally produce antibodies to fight disease are taken over and used to produce more of the virus in the body. The whole immune system is weakened and unable to fight off other diseases."

There is a time period of six to 12 weeks, sometimes as long as six months, before the blood produces the antibodies that indicate that the person has been infected with the virus, Sanchez said.

Additionally, if a person is HIV positive, an incubation period of as long as seven years may occur between the time of exposure to the onset of the symptoms of AIDS, which include severe night sweats, diarrhea, loss of appetite, severe weight loss, and other symptoms that are similar to those of flu.

The AIDS virus can be transmitted one of three ways, Dyer said: through blood and body fluids, through sexual contact, and through infected mothers passing the virus on to their unborn children.

The most prominent means of transmission is through sexual contact, Sanchez said, but the virus is also frequently spread by sharing needles that are contaminated with the virus.

Sanchez added that blood transfusions, in the United States at least, are no longer a factor in the spread of AIDS because strict testing procedures are used to ensure that contaminated blood is not accepted or used.

Kellman said that the virus cannot be spread through insect bites, handshakes, food preparation, toilet seats, drinking fountains, hugging, or even dry kissing an infected person.

"The AIDS virus is very delicate and dies very quickly outside of the body. It requires quite a bit of intimate contact to spread the virus. In fact, you would have to drink about eight quarts of an infected person's saliva in order to catch the virus," she said.

How not to get AIDS?

The easiest way is to simply not have sex. If you do have sexual relations, use a condom and use it properly.

"Read the instructions on the condom package," Sanchez said. "It doesn't do you any good if you don't use it properly."

Kellman added that the condom should be made of latex rubber, not sheep or lambskin, which contain tiny holes that allow the virus to pass through.

She urged using a spermicide containing nonoxynol-9 and said never to use oil based lubricants such as mineral oil or vaseline because they weaken rubber and will cause the condom to break.

Sanchez said that people should not be ashamed to buy or use a condom.

"A lot of soldiers just don't use them. It's a cultural thing. The use of condoms can be integrated into the sexual experience. It doesn't have to be an artificial act."

Shooting drugs is also very risky, but those who use needles for legitimate purposes, such as diabetics, should not share needles and should use a clean needle each time, if possible. Otherwise, Kellman said, common household bleach can be used to disinfect needles.

Kellman also said to be careful in everyday situations. Soldiers in the field should not share razors or toothbrushes and should watch to ensure that clean equipment is used in tattoo parlors and barber shops.

PET OF THE WEEK

These stray, about-six-week-old puppies are looking for a home. One is male, one is female. If you would like to adopt one of them or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets.

The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Parents responsible for child supervision, care

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Instances of unattended children being found by the Military Police on Fort Benning have been on the increase since about February, according to the operations officer for the Military Police Activity.

Garrison Regulation 210-5, Section XIII, states that parents and sponsors are responsible for their family members at all times when on post.

This means that the children must be within their line of vision when playing outdoors and cannot stay alone at home until the age of 12.

Army Regulation 210-5 states that baby sitters must be at least 13 for family members, and if not a family member, the baby sitter must be certified by completion of a course offered by the Red Cross.

The consequences for violating these two regulations are first, a letter of misconduct will be sent from the Community Life Office through the soldier's chain of command.

Then the soldier must make an appointment with the CLO and appear with his or her supervisor to become aware of the post regulations and repercussions. A referral for counseling is usually made with the Chaplain's Family Life Center or Social Work Services.

Soldiers always get more than one chance, according to Darlene Perry of the CLO; and depending on the circumstances, sometimes two chances. After that, the consequences are eviction from quarters.

Instances have included such circumstances as:

• a 4-year-old and 6-year-old getting into a car by themselves to look for their mother who had been out all night,

• parents leaving children alone in vehicles while they go into the hospital, Commissary, Post Exchange or Shoppette,

• small children (toddlers) running loose in the housing areas and sometimes being bitten by a neighbor's dog.

• a 5-year-old being left at school because a divorced father didn't feel like picking him up after being asked to by his ex-wife,

• children staying with an underage baby sitter.

At the last mayors' meeting, Perry and MPA personnel spoke at the last mayors meeting to remind residents in the local housing areas what the regulations are.

The same Garrison Regulation prohibits "conduct which is detrimental to the good order, harmony and discipline of the military community." The consequence for this can also be eviction from quarters if the behavior is repeated.

Gateway to Care topic for health care open meeting

Martin Army Community Hospital

Maj. Gen. Alcide LaNoue, commander of Health Services Command, and Brig. Gen. James Hastings, commander of Eisenhower Army Medical Center at Fort Gordon, Ga., will visit Fort Benning Wednesday.

The generals will speak at a Town Hall meeting from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Wednesday at the National Infantry Museum. The topic of this health care forum will be the Army's coordinated care program, Gateway to Care. All soldiers, family members and retirees are invited.

MACH changes class hours

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital obstetrics service is changing from daily to weekly classes. Starting Tuesday, the obstetrics records class and early pregnancy class will be every Tuesday at 8 a.m. in the Baugh Conference Room, located on the hospital's second floor.

Attendance in the classes is by appointment only. Obstetric records will be started during the class and patients will be given an appointment for their initial obstetrics examination. Patients coming to the class should bring a positive pregnancy test provided by a physician; home pregnancy tests are not accepted.

In moving the classes from the clinic to the conference room, patients will have less distraction and will be more comfortable than in the clinic waiting area, according to hospital officials.

Patients transferring from outlying clinics will be enrolled on an individual basis.

To make an appointment or request information, call 544-4777 or 544-1076.

Festival draws crowd

OWC run benefits scholarship fund

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Officers' Wives' Club' Festival of Running Saturday at York Field drew more than 1,800 runners from the ages of 1 to 66.

According to Conie Reamy, special projects director for the OWC, the festival raised more than $3,000 for the OWC welfare fund More than $9,000 will be paid out in scholarships to students for continuing education.

Reamy also noted that the success of the festival was dependent entirely on volunteers and the 11th Infantry Regiment. "If not for them, the festival would not have been possible, " she said.

Reamy said, the festival, which had been an annual event from 1984 through 1988, was not held during Operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield and they hope to return it to its former status.

"It was a great turnout for everyone involved from the runners to the entertainment," she said. "We at the OWC would like to thank all of the sponsors who took the time to help bring this all together."

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, was in attendance to present awards to winners of the mini-Ekiden relay race and praised the OWC for its efforts in making the festival such a success.

Karate team kicks

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Fort Benning Karate Team "Sidekicks" went to Atlanta April 25 to compete in the Battle of Atlanta — one of the biggest karate tournaments in the country — and came home with gold, silver and bronze.

Coach and trainer David Bauzo took 14 students to the tournament and all but two placed in either weapons, kata or fighting.

Bauzo, a staff sergeant with the School of the Americas who has been teaching for the past three years, said he was thoroughly impressed with his students.

"Since 1989 my students have come a long way," he said. "I'm not just pleased, I'm super pleased. The Battle of Atlanta is one of the top tournaments in this country. Participants from more than 40 states and at least 15 countries came to this event. For us to do well shows just how far these young people have come in a short period of time. How they placed in this tournament will also be their national ranking."

Listed below are the names, age group, belt category and ranking.

Alpha Bears pound 2/18th Dawgs 13-3

Post softball begins play

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Company A. Co. D., 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, kicked off the start of the softball season at Essebagger Field on Kelley Hill with the Alpha Bears of Co. A, pounding the Dawgs of Co. D, 13 -3.

In the top of the third inning the Dawgs got on the board first when Rayfield Parks scored on a double up the middle by Scott Haney.

Haney was thrown out at the plate on a base hit by Kenneth Wilt. Wilt scored when Jeffery Womack smacked a two-run homer off of pitcher Leroy Kirkpatrick. The Dawgs led 3-0 after 2 1/2 innings.

Errors put the Dawgs in the house in the bottom of the third allowing the Bears to score two runs on two hits. With two men on, Enrique Samuels hit a three-run shot to give the Bears a 5-3 lead. An error on centerfielder Brian Reichhart kept the inning alive for Larry Hamilton to connect on a two -run shot pushing the Bear lead to 7-3. The Bears got one more run in the inning to give them an 8-3 lead after three innings.

The Bear got four runs in the fourth on a double squeezed between two more errors and a three-run blast by third baseman Anthony Pangan. The Bear lead was now 12-3 after four innings.

The Bears closed out the game in the bottom of the sixth inning when they score their final run on three straight hits. With the 10 run rule in effect, the game ended when the run crossed the plate.

1992 season may produce surprises

By Hank Aaron
PM Editorial Service

The 1992 baseball season will have to be a great one in order to match the excitement of last year. In 1991, both the National League and American League pennant winners, the Atlanta Braves and the Minnesota Twins, made the long journey from last place to the World Series in one season —a first in baseball.

One of the key reasons such an improvement was possible is the free agency system. A baseball club can go out and pick up one player, who then can carry the team right to a championship. Without pitcher Jack Morris, for example, the Twins would not have won the American League pennant last year. Likewise, the Braves would not have won the National League pennant without Terry Pendleton and some of the other free agents on the team.

So, with one key player possibly making a difference, it is not hard to imagine a surprise team winning a division championship. Baseball prognosticators have never had it so tough.

Because of my job with the Braves, I am most familiar with the National League West. I see Atlanta as the team to beat in this division. Only complacency and overconfidence could stand in the Braves' way of repeating last year's success.

The competition is going to be tougher this year in the National League West. Houston has a lot of good young players, but I do not think the team is ready to compete for the championship. Cincinnati, however, has made some very good moves. They picked up two excellent pitchers, Greg Swindell and Tim Belcher, and I expect them to be very strong. The Los Angeles Dodgers lost some good pitching, and I don't expect them to be as good as they were in 1991 unless Orel Hershiser comes back with a great season.

In the National League East, I don't see the Pittsburgh Pirates winning again. They just don't impress me as being that strong. On the other hand, the New York Mets really helped themselves in the off-season by acquiring one of the best pitchers from the American League — Bret Saberhagen. Eddie Murray and Bobby Bonilla also will help the Mets, and if Dwight Gooden comes back to pitch the way he is capable of pitching, New York is going to be very tough.

In the American League East, I think Toronto finally has a ballclub that is going to do a lot of damage. The Blue Jays are a very solid team.

In the American League West, I don't know who Minnesota will find to pick up the slack left by Jack Morris's departure, but they always seem to come up with somebody. The Twins have a good organization, and it is a tribute to their management that the team is able to make the changes needed to stay a winner.

The only thing that appears certain about the new baseball season is that we can expect a few surprises between now and October. That's just baseball.

Editors Note: Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Hank is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

Cruise-matics defeated in last regular season match

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Columbus-Fort Benning rugby football club the Cruise-matics played their last regular season match Saturday against Rugby Atlanta at Stilwell Field and were defeated 27-7.

Rugby Atlanta got off to an early lead with Clinton Cridick scoring the first try of the match. The extra points kick by Tyler Dixon put Atlanta up 6-0 early in the match.

The Cruise-matics came right back with a try of their own when Scott Spaniel scored on a maul. The extra points kick was wide left leaving the Cruise-matics down by two at 6-4.

A penalty kick by Scott Corliss gave the Cruise-matics their only lead of the game at 7-6. The first half ended with the Criuse-matics still up by one.

Early in the second half, Dixon of Atlanta was able to steal an errant pass and break away for a try. With the extra points kick, Atlanta regained the lead at 12-7 and would never look back.

Atlanta extended their lead to 18-7 when Bob Crowall broke away and headed for the end zone — just before reaching the end zone, Crowall was cut off by the Cruise-matics' defense. He then flipped the ball to teammate Jim King who finished off the play for the try. Dixon added the extra points kick and the rout was on.

Atlanta converted three passes into their final try of the match when Ivan Whiteman pranced into the end zone untouched, upping the lead to 24-7.

Late in the match, Atlanta got its final points of the afternoon on a penalty kick by Dixon. The match ended a few minutes later with Atlanta on top 27-7.

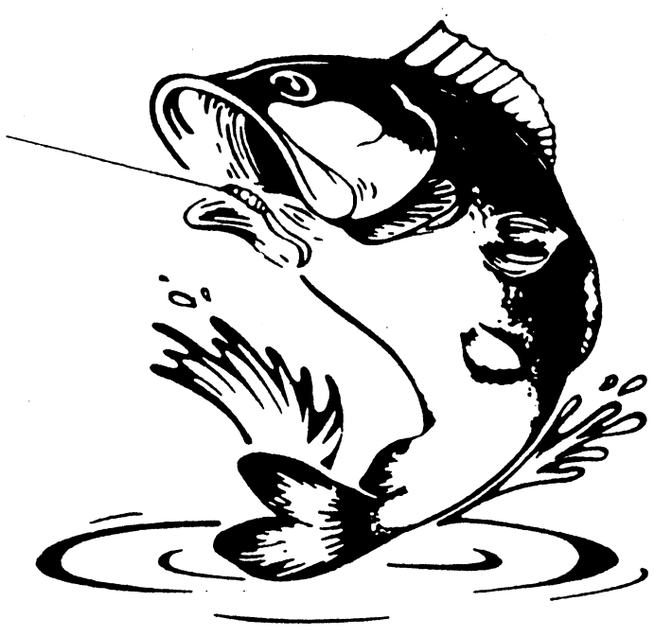
Plastic worms good lures

Outboard Motor Corporation

The plastic worm has long been acknowledged as one of the best overall bass lures on the market; but surprisingly, one of its most successful applications — as a surface lure — is only now beginning to get serious attention.

The lure is rigged weedless with the hook imbedded, but no sinker is used. The worm is retrieved with slow twitches on or just below the surface; for slightly deeper bass the worm is allowed to sink a foot or two before the retrieve is started.

"This is an excellent technique for spring bass," explains well-known tournament pro Cliff Craft. "It works during the prespawn, spawn and post-spawn portions of the spring season, and throughout the summer if heavy cover is present."



Craft, a 15-year tournament trail veteran and member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff, prefers a six or seven-inch worm with a straight tail for surface fishing, and his favorite casting spots are over vegetation, rocky points and flooded timber.

While many anglers prefer darker, more natural colors for worm fishing, Craft uses much brighter colors, including orange, pink, white — and even polka-dot combinations.

"I use those primarily so I can see the lure better," laughs Craft, who has been teased often about his color habit. "Strikes are not usually hard and explosive with a surface worm. They're generally very soft, in which a bass just seems to inhale the lure."

"To detect a strike like that, you have to watch your worm at all times so you can set the hook immediately, and the bright colors I use are certainly easy to see."

The bright colors don't bother the bass at all, adds the Evinrude pro, who has done numerous comparative tests with more conventional worm colors.

"During the spring, the bass tend to be fairly aggressive," explains Craft, "so I don't think they pay as much attention to lure color as they might during other seasons. Also, because I often fish a swimming worm through thick vegetation, the bass may not see it as well."

Swimming worms can be fished with both spinning and conventional baitcasting equipment, the Georgia pro notes, and with a variety of lines. He prefers to use 10- or 12-pound test line because it makes casting the light lure easier.

"Some fishermen rig a swimming worm like a Carolina rig, with a swivel and short leader," he says, "but they still leave off the sinker. Using a swivel helps eliminate line twist."

Craft believes the swimming worm technique will continue to grow in popularity as more and more anglers learn how effective it can be.

"We know the plastic worm is a versatile lure," he says, "and this is a versatile technique. You can swim the worm on the surface, several inches below the surface, or even several feet down, and you can retrieve at any speed."

Retreat: Stress reliever

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

What is stress?

It is pressure from outside that can cause tension inside.

Although, stress is an unavoidable fact of life, certain kinds are actually helpful by motivating. But too much stress on the mind and body can cause feelings of sadness, worry, anxiety and can develop into illness.

Fortunately, several steps can be taken to keep tension within reasonable limits before they lead to trouble.

One of those steps are learning how to relax.

The Chaplains' Family Life Center is offering a workshop on the "Secrets of Strong Families."

Chaplain thanks 'moms'

By Nils Juarez-Palma
Clinical Pastoral Education Chaplain

Mother's Day traditionally honors all mothers. Some people feel this honor belongs only to those women who have given birth to a child. Yet, there are mothers who have never given birth to a child.

Why are these women mothers? I believe Helen Steiner Rice answers this question in her poem "What is a Mother." She says a mother is the woman who God has placed on earth to care for a child. In my life, I have had many such mothers.

As a young boy in Cuba, I grew up close to my extended family. My grandmother, aunts, cousins and friends all took part in caring for me. I was part of their lives as they were part of mine. I spent time with these other relatives and friends because my mother worked outside the home.

I lost these mothers when I came to the United States. Yet, what they had given me stayed with me. I brought their love with me. This love enabled me to adapt to a new culture.

Over the years, I found other mothers. Some of them were school teachers who took the time to help me learn my ABCs. Others were neighbors who took me places that my family could not afford to take me.

Some were people who walked with me through the special times in my life. These women were surrogate mothers in the true sense of the word. They had nothing to gain by loving me; they did it anyway.

> "A mother is a woman God has placed on this earth to care for a child."
> — Helen Steiner Rice
> Poet

One of these women was my Aunt Yolanda. She came from a very humble background. I doubt that she went past the sixth grade. What she lacked in education, she made up for in love. I remember her as a sweet and gentle person — determined to raise her children up right. Thus, she let us know how important we were to her. Her interest encouraged us to stay out of trouble, to study hard and to develop our own individuality.

REFLECTIONS

Her son is a doctor who studied medicine at a prestigious U.S. university. Her two daughters work for a national credit card company. She gave me the inspiration to stay in college, and then to go on to seminary.

If we look around, we will see there are other women like my aunt. These women, too, have helped us to become the persons we are today. They are the child-care workers, the teachers, our friends' moms, as well as the many other women who have cared for us. Everyone of them is a mother.

Yet, on Mother's Day I won't overlook my mother. She is worthy of double honors on that day. She is the one who stayed up late nights with me when I was sick. She is the one who sacrificed her goals and dreams so I could enjoy the good life. She is the one who cooked my meals, took me places in her car, and first took me to church. She is the one who chose to give me the gift of life. On Mother's Day, we will celebrate together.

Yes, Mother's Day is for every woman who ever took care of a child. That is what Mother's Day is all about — honoring those women who care for children.

FUN group training begins

Army Community Services

Family Support Group Training has changed its name to Family Unit Network — or FUN — Training sponsored by Army Community Services.

FUN training workshops have moved from Building 2643 Soldiers' Plaza to Taylor Training Center, building 359, on Ingersoll Street. This building is located directly behind the American Red Cross main office on the corner of Vibbert and Ingersoll.

Monthly sessions will be in Taylor Training Center on Ingersoll from 7 to 8 p.m. Topics for upcoming monthly sessions include: May 21 — "Changing Times in Family Support Groups," by Leadership Seminar staff. Sept. 17 — "OOPS! So This Is a Family Support Group," by Kathy Case.

The next quarterly workshop will be held in Taylor Training Center on Ingersoll, Sept. 17 from 9 a.m. to noon. The workshop will include the following topics: "What is a Family Support Group," "Regulations Governing Support Groups," "Communication Skills/Conflict Management," and "Volunteer Management."

These workshops are recommended for commanders, first sergeants and family unit network members. For reservations, contact Mary Allen, Outreach coordinator, Army Community Services at 545-4357 or 545-2536. To assist in the development of a key support group roster, commanders are requested to provide ACS an updated roster of these personnel within two weeks of their appointment.

ACS depends on volunteers to conduct training sessions, said Allen. Persons with family support group training skills are encouraged to assist in training other family support group leaders, she added. Interested persons should contact Allen at Army Community Services.

Post departments combine forces to ensure pet control

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Pet owners at Fort Benning should remember that their animals are an extension of their families so they are just as responsible for the behavior of their pets as they are for their children.

Sgt. Roy Dooley, Animal Control non-commissioned officer in charge at the Military Police Activity, said that there have been a good deal of pet control problems on post since August of last year, but things are getting better with some changes that were put into effect the first of the year.

"We're working more closely with the mayors and Veterinary Services," he said, "and we're using the Georgia Code to clarify some circumstances not covered by U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulations 40-905 and 210-5.

The main problems appear to be that owners are not registering and immunizing their animals or keeping them under confinement or control as required by 210-5.

Dooley estimates that about 50 percent of all animals on post are not registered, and certain housing areas appear to be worse than others.

When a dog or cat is picked up by the Military Police Activity, after three days it can be put up for adoption or put to sleep after six days.

If the pet is not registered, the MPs have no way of notifying the owners, and that time passes quickly.

The regulations state that newcomers to post have 14 days to get their animals registered here. Newborns don't have to be registered until they are 90 days old.

When someone brings an animal into the Veterinary Clinic on post for a rabies tag, registration is an automatic part of the process.

Military Police Activity noted that in the past four months, there have been 181 dogs, 75 cats and 79 "other" animals ranging from opossums, raccoons and squirrels to snakes and deer. Residents can report any animal problems to the MP desk, and they will respond.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Kathy Goins, a resident of Bouton Heights, prepares to walk her dogs, Favor and Doc.

Maj. Robert Pelegreen, operations officer for MPA, told Fort Benning mayors at their last meeting that recently there have been a higher number of citations for bites due to failure to control animals.

According to Darlene Perry of the Community Life Office, residents must either put up a fence to keep their animals confined in their yard or keep them on a leashes while outdoors.

The current regulation states that after three biting incidents, a resident's pet privileges can be suspended or the soldier will be evicted from post.However based on the severity of the attack, a first time dog bite incident could result in suspension of pet privileges or post eviction.

School conducts May Day Olympics

Smith Station students compete for fun, health

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 12th Annual Smith's Station Elementary School May Day Spring Olympics was Friday afternoon at Smith's Station High School.

According to the school principal, Dr. James H. Gayler, it was a tremendous success.

The competition between the classes from the second through the sixth grades ran through the afternoon with the finals that evening.

The contest is run through the physical education program to help promote healthy competition.

The Silver Wings Parachute Team of Fort Benning was on hand for a demonstration before the start of the finals and brought probably the largest cheer from the crowd of parents, teachers and students.

This was the first year that the Silver Wings attended the Olympics and Gayler said the children were still talking about it on Monday.

"The money we made from gate receipts and from the concession stand will help purchase equipment and materials for the school through the Parent Teachers Association," said Gayler.

"The PTA will go directly to the teachers and ask what they need, the teachers will make up a list and submit it to the PTA.

"The turnout for this year's Olympics drew one of the largest crowds we've ever had and we hope that it will continue to get even better," said Gayler.

Education to be discussed

Fort Benning Schools

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of the Fort Benning Schools, will discuss the American 2000 National Education Goals and the Fort Benning Schools' response to those goals in a speech that will run on USAIC TV Channel 32, the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information cable channel on post. The 28-minute speech will run once each hour Monday through May 15 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Tune in during this week to hear Baumgartner discuss the following national education goals and ways that the Fort Benning Schools are working to achieve these goals:

By the year 2000, all children in the community will start school ready to learn.

By the year 2000, the high school graduation rate will increase to at least 90 percent.

By the year 2000, students will leave grades four, eight, and 12 having demonstrated competency in challenging subjects including English, mathematics, science, history and geography; and every school in American will ensure that all students learn to use their minds well, so they may be prepared for responsible citizenship, further learning and productive employment in our modern economy.

By the year 2000, U.S. students will be first in the world in science and mathematics achievement.

By the year 2000, every adult will be literate and will possess the knowledge and skills necessary to compete in a global economy and exercise the rights and responsibilities of citizenship.

By the year 2000, every school in American will be free of drugs and violence and will offer a disciplined environment conducive to learning.

Baumgartner presented this speech to several Fort Benning Schools' parent/teacher organizations in their meetings this year.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

Elections delayed

The mayoral elections scheduled for April 13 to 17 have been postponed until September. According to Darlene Perry, Community Life Officer, the September time frame should be more suitable for elections since the children will be back in school thus allowing more candidates to consider applying.

"Most family moves will be completed, and conduct of the mayoral campaign and voting will be accomplished by constituents who the mayors would represent for the whole year," said Perry.

"Mayors are key members of the Fort Benning community who enjoy privileges shared by few others," she continued. "They participate in community development and explore ways to improve the quality of life within their communities."

Interested persons who would like to volunteer or need more information, should contact a Community Life Noncommissioned Officer or Perry at 545-2910 or 545-2830.

Q: Where can I buy Series EE bonds?

A: Savings bonds can be purchased through more than 40,000 financial institutions nationwide or through employers offering the payroll savings plan.

Q: What about registering the bond in the parent and child's name as co-owners?

A: For purposes of this program only, that form of registration is not permitted.

Bonds must be in the name of the taxpayer or in the name of the taxpayer and the taxpayer's spouse to exclude the bond interest from the taxpayer's gross income.

Q: Does the education bond feature affect savings bonds that have been or are being purchased by a parent registered in the name of a child alone, or the child's name with the parent as beneficiary?

A: No, the federal income tax rule that applies to such bonds remains the same.

For a child under 14, only the interest and dividend income in excess of $1,000 is taxed at the parent's rate. If the child is 14 or older, all income is taxed at the child's rate. You may choose between annual or deferred reporting, depending on your child' s age and expected future income. Either method, used properly, should reduce tax liability. However, interest earnings do not qualify for gross income exclusion under the terms of the new education feature.

Q: Do both the principal and interest from bonds redeemed during the year have to be used for qualified educational expenses to exclude the bond interest from gross income?

A: Yes, only if the taxpayer pays qualified education expenses equal to or greater than all proceeds (i.e., interest and principal) from bonds redeemed during the year can all interest accrued on such bonds be excludable from his or her gross income.

USAMU shooters claim top Olympic berths

By David Erickson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Three U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit soldiers have secured positions on the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team and several others have moved a step closer to an Olympic showdown in Barcelona, Spain.

In a week-long final tryout process, the first Olympic team position was won by Capt. Mike Anti in men's 50-meter prone shooting.

Anti earned his position as a result of finishing second in the 50-meter English match, which consists of 60 shots for record from the prone position. Bill Meek, a laboratory supervisor from Riverside, Calif., earned the top position with a score of 1,998.6, followed by Anti at 1,991.7.

In the men's 50-meter free rifle event, Bob Foth of the U.S. Olympic Training Center earned the top Olympic slot with a total of 3,698.5, including a national record performance on the final day of 1,178. USOTC member David Johnson earned the second position with a score of 3681.6 followed by the USAMU's Thomas Tamas at 3,676.1. The USAMU's Anti and Capt. Glenn Dubis finished fourth and fifth with 3,675.7 and 3,673.6 respectively.

In men's 10-meter air rifle, the results were similar but the names were slightly shuffled. Johnson earned the top Olympic berth with a score of 1,983.4, followed by Foth at 1,971.7. Anti earned the alternate position followed by three other USAMU shooters.

As a result of Johnson and Foth earning multiple Olympic berths Spc. Thomas Tamas received an alternate berth on the U.S. Olympic Team as a result of his third place finish in the free rifle event.

The women's rifle team also featured a double performance, this time from 1988 Olympian Launi Meili of the Olympic Training Center. In the 50-meter women's standard rifle event, Meili took the top position with a total of 1,928.1, followed by Anne-Marie Pfiffner at 1,923.5 The USAMU's 2nd Lt. Kris Peterson finished third with a 1,921.6 total.

Meili earned another first-place finish in the women's 10-meter air rifle competition with a score of 1,378.4, followed by Debra Sinclair with a total of 1,376.9. As a result of Meili's double performance, Peterson received an alternate slot for the Olympic team on the basis of her third-place finish in the standard rifle event.

Alternate positions are awarded based on an order of merit that begins with the three position events of free rifle and standard rifle. The reasoning for this priority lies in the versatility that a three position shooter must possess in the three shooting positions. As a result, a top three position shooter is usually capable of shooting on a competitive bases in an alternate event.

At Fort Benning, the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit hosted the Interservice International Trap Championships. Top finisher for the event was Staff Sgt. Bret Erickson of the USAMU followed by Sgt. Mike Herrman of the U.S. Air Force. Jay Waldron finished third in the event and Thompson and Handy tying for fourth place, both of the USAMU.

In the next two weeks, the final selection matches for the remaining positions on the 1992 U.S. Olympic Team will be contested and finalized.

One portion of those matches are nearing completion, the Olympic pistol events. With one selection match remaining Capt. John McNally of the USAMU leads the pack in rapid fire pistol followed by Roger Mar of the USOTC and Staff Sgt. Jonathan Frazer in third position. Spc. Ed Suarez is in fifth place but still in contention.

With one match remaining, Darius Young lead the finalist in 50-meter free pistol with 1,300 followed by two other shooters including Sgt. 1st Class Jimmie McCoy of the USAMU at 1,284.

Soldiers required to salute

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Do you know what to do when you see a senior officer's military vehicle?

Can you recognize the car of official dignitaries when they drive by?

If you can't, you're not alone, according to reports from post officials.

A white Chevrolet Lumina with a red license plate embossed with two silver stars, the commanding general's special license plate, affixed to the front, and four antennas, two on the top and two in the rear, is one vehicle you should easily recognize. Even if you have trouble recognizing the vehicle, there should be no mistaking that special license plate.

But soldiers on Fort Benning are having trouble recognizing these vehicles and are failing to render the proper courtesies, said Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes, post command sergeant major.

"The regulation pertaining to saluting (Army regulation 600-25), clearly states that soldiers who encounter a senior offier or other dignitary riding in a military vehicle with a special license plate or seal must render that person in the vehicle the proper respect — with a salute," said Acebes.

The vehicles are usually distinguished by special license plates that bear the senior officer's rank or a special seal, in the case of civilian dignitaries.

Senior officers, ranked colonel and above, are authorized to have these special license plates and soldiers are obligated to render the proper courtesy when they pass the vehicle, said Acebes. Generals have red license plates embossed with silver stars, the number of stars denoting their rank, and colonels have blue license plates with a silver eagle embossed on them.

Civilian dignitaries have license plates with each dignitary's coat of arms denoting their office. For example, the president has a blue plate that is embossed with the presidential coat of arms and circled by 50 white stars.

The only times soldiers are not required to salute these vehicles are when they are in civilian attire or when they themselves are driving, said Acebes.

RANGERS LEADING THE WAY

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

Hooah!

It's pronounced who ah and means anything from yes sir to good job ranger.

It was the cry heard throughout ranger country at Fort Benning May 1 through 4 during the10th annual David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition.

Thirty-five two-man teams from all over the United States to include Alaska and Hawaii came to test their physical stamina and mental discipline and hopefully walk away with the title of "Best Ranger."

The winners received 9mm pistols and the second-place finishers got Randall knives from the Chairborne Rangers, a group of civilian supporters out of Clearwater, Fla., who have sponsored the competition since its beginning. The team that placed third got EK commando knives. Remington 700 rifles were presented by Kevlar DuPont to the team with the best combined scores in the foot march and weapons firing event.

But the awards were not the reason for competing — just incentives, according to those competing.

"I don't know why anyone would put himself through this except for the challenge, " said Sgt. Rolf Jensen, Company A, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. "And this is as challenging as it gets without being life-threatening."

No matter what the reason — and even though Sgt. 1st Class Tom W. Wilburn, Co. C and Sgt. 1st Class Alvin M. Brashier, Co. A, both of 5th Ranger Training Battalion, are 1992's "Best of the Best"— perhaps Col. John J. Maher III, commander of Ranger Training Brigade, said it best when he was recognizing those who competed, by saying, "You are all winners."

Hooah!

How 'the best' was won

By Cynthia Barnes
Bayonet assistant editor

The annual Best Ranger competitition, which is named in honor of retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange, a former ranger instructor, Ranger Department director and commanding general of Fort Benning, was designed to place extreme demands on each team's physical, mental and technical abilities as a ranger.

The competitors had to dig deep and sweat hard to complete the 12 events of the 60-hour, nonstop contest that included the Army Physical Fitness Test, weapons firing, a parachute spot jump, 20-mile (plus) forced foot march, a 6.5-mile canoe event, night land navigation, the 60-foot Prusik climb and rappel, Darby Queen obstacle course, water confidence course, helocast and swim and a 2.7-mile buddy run.

The men also participated in Ranger Stakes where 13 basic ranger and infantry skills such as knot tying, first aid and weapons assembly were tested during day and night conditions.

Each event was rated according to the difficulty and physical exertion needed to complete the event.

Each two-man team had to:

- pass the Army Physical Fitness Test,
- get 23 hits or a combination of 50 hits for the team on a moving or stationary target range,
- complete the land navigation course in 12 hours finding at least the first six points,
- finish the foot march in six hours, make the spot jump and finish the canoe event to remain in the battle to be the best.

Most of those competitors agreed that even though everything was tough, the toughest were the night events — the foot march and land navigation. After the foot march, the field of contestants narrowed down to 19 teams. (Five teams dropped during the weapons firing and 11 during the foot march.)

Best Ranger participants load their weapons in preparation for weapons firing.

'Striker' battalion soldiers get stripes

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Forty-six soldiers of 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), made "Striker" battalion history May 1 when they received their new non-commissioned officer stripes.

"We have more soldiers joining the Noncommissioned Officer Corps and moving up in the NCO ranks today than there have been during my 2 1/2 years in this battalion," said Command Sgt. Maj. Dwight E. Hood, battalion command sergeant major.

"This really says something good about these soldiers in these days of dwindling defense dollars and the drawdown of the armed forces," he added.

"It's a great feeling to stand here with all these stripes in my hand," declared Lt. Col. E. W. Chamberlain III, Striker battalion commander, after pinning on the soldiers' new rank insignia.

"It proves we're moving in the right direction," Chamberlain continued, referring to the battalion's nearly complete transition to the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. "I told you a year ago that when you're Bradley qualified, you would finally get promoted, and that day has arrived." predicted.

"We're costing the Army a lot of money today with these promotions; but, by God, you're worth it," Chamberlain said. "I'm extremely proud of you new sergeants, as well as those of you who have not yet finished NET (new equipment training) because you've been taking up the slack for the rest of the battalion while we went through NET."

After their new ranks were pinned on, Hood directed the NCOs to "carefully and diligently discharge the duties" of their new ranks and to uphold the standards and traditions of the Army. He also called on Sgt. 1st Class Anthony Pettengill of Headquarters and Headquarters Company to lead the men in reciting the Creed of the Noncommissioned Officer.

Receiving promotions effective May 1 were: 1st Sgt. Carlos Vera, Company A, and 1st Sgt. Thomas T. Whitcomb, Company B; Pettengill; and Staff Sgts. James Delbo, Martin Delossantos, John Lowthorpe and David Tyre, all of Company A.

Also promoted to staff sergeant were Allen Fobbs, Stephen Gaither and Vincent Goffney, Company B; Phillip Burress and Cleveland Gary, Company C.; and Rodney Hackney, David Page, and Brad Sitton, Company D.

Company A soldiers pinning on sergeant's stripes included Bernard Cook, Lawrence Jordan, Major Green, Richard Hoback, Patrick R. Patton, Robert H. Summerfield and Troy Williams. Company B's new sergeants were: Donald Blackwell, Ellis Bradley, Basil Garcia, Robert Goodfellow, James Hall, Anthony Johnson, Ronald Johnson, Ernest Menzie, Kevin Pierce and Dale Serum.

New sergeants in Company C. were Reginald Brown, Rodney Brown, Arthur Greene, Paul Hanlon, Maurice Talley and Thomas Washington. Company D's new sergeants included Robert Brown, David Cravener, Scott Fountain, Cory A. Gunderjahn, Kevin Kahler and George Kellison. Sgt. Curtis Mitchell of Headquarters and Headquarters Company was promoted to sergeant.

Chamberlain also promoted Maj. David S. Kelly, the battalion executive officer, to lieutenant colonel. Maj. George Piccirilli, battalion operations officer, succeeds Kelly, whose new assignment has not been determined.

Reserve component names transition NCO

By Aurelio Feliberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The title of Department of the Army Reserve Component's Transition Non-commissioned Officer of the Year belongs to Master Sgt. Duane D. Gunderson, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

Gunderson

According to Gunderson, who was named the Forces Command Reserve Component's Transition NCO of the Year Nov. 17, a board convened in January at Arlington, Va., to question the winners of the FORSCOM, Training and Doctrine Command, and U.S. Army Europe Reserve Component's Transition NCO of the Year competitions. That board was the final stage in determining the Army's Reserve Component's Transition NCO of the Year.

"There was no way you could study for that board," he said. "What they wanted to know was your opinion on the Army drawdown and other issues."

"I guess I can rest easier now knowing that the competitions are over and I can finish my military career undefeated," he added.

However, Gunderson said his greatest satisfaction comes from helping active duty soldiers find a National Guard or Reserve unit near their hometown — or wherever they've chosen to live — and getting them any bonuses which will help them with their future.

Gunderson not only finds soldiers new assignments, but also explains how they can transition into National Guard and Reserve units and prepares all the paperwork necessary for the transition.

"To make things more difficult for the soldier who wishes to transition into a Guard or Reserve unit — and for me — we are now faced with drastic Army cutbacks in several National Guard and Reserve units throughout the country," he continued. "This greatly reduces the slots available for soldiers to enter these units."

"I urge all active duty soldiers who want an assignment in the National Guard or Army Reserve to visit me as early as 120 days out from their active separation date," Gunderson said.

1/29 conducts Table 12 exercise

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Company E, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, conducted a Bradley Table 12 April 23 at Hastings Range.

A Bradley Table 12 is an exercise for Bradley Fighting Vehicle units to conduct live-fire applications with both dismounted soldiers and Bradley Fighting Vehicles.

This exercise was unique in that, not only were Company E soldiers carrying on training to maintain skills in their occupational specialty, the Bradley Instructor Company was simultaneously training student master gunners how to operate Bradley ranges.

The soldiers of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment support several organizations on post, while at the same time they must maintain combat readiness in their own field.

Sgt. 1st Class Willie Ash, a student master gunner said he feels the training he received is the finest the Army has to offer. The Branch chief of the Master Gunner Department, Sgt. 1st Class Silvester Avant, said, "Basically our job is to set the range up for the students to run themselves."

This is the second time 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment has conducted this type of concurrent training.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today, May 8, 1942

Naval forces in action off the Solomon Islands damaged four ships and sank two destroyers, a cruiser, four gunboats, and a supply vessel. U.S. losses were only three aircraft. The Japanese ships were from a task force that threatens Port Moresby, Australia and New Caledonia — important Allied bases in the southwest Pacific.

Japanese news reported that after the fall of Corregidor on May 6, 1942, Lt. Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright surrendered all of the forces then fighting in the Philippines. This included guerrilla units such as the Philippine Scouts, but it is considered doubtful that such guerrillas could be reached or enticed into surrendering to the Japanese.

The right wing of the Japanese advance in Burma has pushed up the captured Burma Road to Chefang, 25 miles inside China. The left wing has reportedly crossed into India, placing allied forces in Burma in serious jeopardy of being encircled and wiped out.

Antsirana and Diego Suarez, Madagascar, the key naval bases of Madagascar, surrendered to the British. After two days of fighting the Vichy-French garrison and 1,000 British casualties, the port and naval facilities surrendered.

The HMS Edinburgh and four cargo vessels were sunk in the Murmansk convoy run. For four days, the Royal Navy fended off attacks from German airplanes, submarines, and destroyers to escort a convoy of supplies to Murmansk, and then a convoy of unloaded merchantmen back to England. The Edinburgh's steering gear was disabled by a torpedo attack. Later, while being towed home, the Edinburgh was struck by another torpedo, forcing her abandonment and sinking. German losses were one destroyer sunk and one destroyer severely damaged.

The Russians claim to have broken the ring of besieging Germans around Leningrad. The Russian army, supported by armor and aircraft, is reported to have captured a key junction behind the German lines and split the German armies by seizing a communications road. Several new German units counterattacked, and the German losses were reported as "really colossal."

Competition shows new style

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

"I think this is the kind of training the whole Army needs to go to. We're all soldiers, and one of the basic jobs of a soldier is to be a marksman. This, as well as being precision firing, is more battle-focused training, more like being in the field."

This is what Spc. Jeffrey Hernholm, a competitor from Fort Kobbe, Panama, said about a series of combat arms matches held at Fort Benning, sponsored by Headquarters, U.S. Army Infantry Center and conducted by the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

The matches, which began April 25 and ended Saturday, were the first of their kind, three years in development, and represent a new training emphasis, according to Col. Ken Buster, commander of the National Guard Marksmanship Training Unit at Camp Robinson, Ark.

"Our typical marksmanship and qualification training in the Army is based on staying in one position, shooting from a known distance at a known target," Buster said.

"The concept behind these matches is 100 percent battle-focused training. It requires multiple-weapon proficiency, using all the small arms weapons of the typical infantry squad," said Capt. David Erickson, public affairs officer for the USAMU.

Weapons used in the competition were the M-16 rifle, M-1D, M-21 and M-24 sniper rifles, M-60 machine gun, M-16A2 light machine gun and M-249 squad automatic weapon.

Pistols authorized were the 9mm M-9, Beretta 92F/FS and .45-caliber M-1011A1.

Soldiers competed in individual and team events, including rifle and machine gun assault courses and combat pistol matches.

The combat arms competition differed from traditional markmanship matches in several ways, according to Erickson.

"Something unique to this is that you don't come here as just a pistol shooter or just a rifle shooter. You must shoot other events. If you're good at a specialty event, you must also be good with your basic weapons," Erickson said.

The style of the matches was also different, he said. They were designed to simulate a combat environment, with moving targets, multiple targets, rapid fire and a "run and gun" format.

Match participants included National Guardsmen (with one unit from Guam), Reserve and active Army units from across the country and Panama.

The teams were comprised of a wide variety of units, said Erickson. "You have aviators, line infantry guys, support units from the Reserves, a big range of people here."

Karen S. Morarie
Competitors in one of the Combat Arms Matches rifle team events prepare to fire.

Several female soldiers took part in the competition, one of whom, Staff Sgt. Brenda Hain, a legal specialist with the post Judge Advocate General's office at Fort Eustis, Va.

"This is a whole new course of fire. It's very challenging, both physically and in marksmanship skills," Hain said.

Most participants seemed to agree that as training, the competition helped to develop self-confidence, esprit de corps, and familiarity with the weapons involved.

"It's very realistic training, and I feel it will increase a soldier's confidence," said Hain. "Not being in a line unit, I know that if I were deployed now I'd have more confidence in my ability to hold my own. I might not know much about combat, but I think now that if someone were coming at me, I'd be able to hit them."

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

Fifty years ago this week —

• Fort Benning officials attempted to boost morale by sponsoring an all-expense paid Mother's Day trip to the post for the mothers of 22 lucky soldiers. Brig. Gen. Leven C. Allen greeted the mothers in a ceremony in their honor at Doughboy Stadium.

° Japanese plans to invade Port Moresby abandoned.

• In the Battle of the Coral Sea, the USS Yorktown suffered serious damage, and the USS Lexington had to be abandoned. The Japanese paid, however, losing the carrier Shakuku, causing them to abandon plans to invade Port Morseby.

• In the Philippines, Gen. William Sharp, the commanding general for the remaining American forces, gave the order to surrender. A few small groups continued to resist long afterwards.

• In the Mediterranean, specially trained German pilots, based on the island of Crete, sank the British destroyers HMS Lively, HMS Kipling and HMS Jackal.

• On the Eastern Front, the first German offensive of the year began as the 22nd Panzer Division attempted to clear the Kerch Peninsula. Soviet troops withdrew in the face of the German attack; about 80,000 were able to escape.

Farrah Fawcett tries to stop 'Criminal Behavior'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

When Farrah Fawcett renounced "Charlie's Angels" long ago, that didn't necessarily mean she'd never play an investigator again.

Having since demonstrated her dramatic abilities in such acclaimed television dramas as "The Burning Bed" and "Small Sacrifices," the glamorous actress returns as a sleuth of sorts in "Criminal Behavior," Monday's new ABC mystery inspired by best-selling author Ross Macdonald's book "The Ferguson Affair." Fawcett is cast as savvy defense attorney Jessie Lee Stubbs, who hails from a family largely comprised of con artists and outright thieves, and her efforts to obtain the release of her jailed father (played by James Gammon) are complicated by the case of a client (Angela Paton) who's being held as an accessory to a murder allegedly committed by the latter's boyfriend ... who's conveniently missing. Posing extra problems for the lawyer is the unwanted attention of an amorous police detective (A Martinez, the current "Santa Barbara" co-star who will become an "L.A. Law" regular this fall), tailing her since he also has reasons for finding the suspected killer.

SPOTLIGHT

In its original form, Fawcett wouldn't have been likely to do "Criminal Behavior," and for a good reason: Her character was a man. She credits recently deceased screenwriter Wendell Mayes - a veteran of such films as "Anatomy of a Murder," "The Poseidon Adventure" and the original "Death Wish" - with making the gender conversion. "I'm used to doing so much research for true stories, I wanted to read the book," Fawcett recalls. "After 20 or 30 pages, I called Wendell and said, 'Now I know why my character was so well-written!' The way it used to be, at least, when something originally was written for a woman, it was hard for her to keep moving the piece along. I thought this would be a breeze, since there wasn't a courtroom scene or anything like that, but it wasn't. It turned out to be quite a challenge, and I hope I pulled it off."

Farrah Fawcett

With her new movie termed a "film noir for the '90s" by ABC, Fawcett claims that Los Angeles "becomes very much a character" in it, and that's another reason I was attracted to this. It's very rare that you get to film in L.A. and have it be what it actually is; you're either filming someplace else that's supposed to look like L.A., or you're filming in L.A. and it's supposed to be some other place like Phoenix.

Stating that she accepted "Criminal Behavior" as a diversion from the issue-oriented tales she has done - which also was largely the reason she did last season's CBS comedy series "Good Sports" with her significant other, Ryan O ' originally was doing things like 'The Burning Bed' and 'Extremities,' the best-written roles for women came from social-matter-oriented stories."

Though her new part as Jessie Lee would seem tailormade for another Fawcett series, she claims to have no interest in another ongoing TV venture at this point. "What's wonderful," she reasons, "is to create a character and work on it and see it develop, and that's the bad part of a series. Though you can go on and on with it, once you've got the character set down, that's it." Conversely, Fawcett believes a one-time vehicle like "Criminal Behavior" works the other way. "Of course, we have to tie up certain things that involve solving the murder, but we didn't feel compelled to put everything involving the relationship (with the policeman played by Martinez) into a nice little package and say, 'And now, this is where they're going.' I think that's a little more gutsy, and a little more true to Ross Macdonald. I found a lot of things that were different about this piece, and that's why I'm happy about it."

Columbus Museum exhibits African American artists' work

REVIEW

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

"Folk: The Art of Benny and George Andrews" opened at the Columbus Museum with works of two African Americans, Benny Andrews and his father, George Andrews, and was organized by the Memphis Brooks Museum of Art.

The 38 paintings and drawings of internationally renowned Benny Andrews that have been on display at the Columbus Museum on Wynnton and paintings and painted objects of George Andrews, an untrained artist with little schooling, came to an end Sunday.

Benny Andrews was denied an art education at the University of Georgia, a then-segregated school. He later trained at the Art Institute of Chicago in the 1950s. He is recognized today as one of the country's most important contemporary artists. He was encouraged and supported by both parents.

A long-time advocate for the art of African Americans and women, he founded the Black Emergency Cultural Coalition in 1969. He has served in teaching and curatorial positions at Queens College, the new School of Social Research, the Studio Museum in Harlem, and the Drawing Center of New York. His directorship of the Visual Arts Program and the National Endowment for the Arts (1982 through 1984) brought a new sensitivity and important outreach effort to the agency.

Andrews was amused that some art lovers attributed some fantastic reason for his paintings with multiple panels that had to be taken down piece by piece. He said, "The paintings were large. I took them apart in panels, so I could get them through my door. I don't have a door that large."

Andrews' pen and ink on paper, his oil and collage on canvas, oil and collage on paper, and oil on canvas board are all exquisite. If you saw the exhibit culturally, you've been enhanced.

Columbus Symphony Orchestra to perform Beethoven's No. 9

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

Beethoven's Symphony No. 9 is considered his crowning achievement, and its production is a major undertaking, one which the Columbus Symphony will take on for its final Masterpiece Series concert of the current season.

It is scheduled for Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Three Arts Theatre, 1020 Talbotton Road. George Del Gobbo will conduct and will give a pre-concert lecture at the theatre at 7 p.m.

Joining the orchestra for the performance will be the Columbus College Civic Chorale, Dr. William Bullock, director, and the Auburn Chorus, Dr. Thomas Smith, director, plus soloists Teresa Hopkin, soprano, Karen Sikorski, contralto, Waldie Anderson, tenor, and Jon Bartlett, bass-baritone.

In order to accommodate the large contingent of singers as well as the orchestra, the theatre stage is having to be extended over the orchestra pit.

The Beethoven work comprises the entire symphony concert and will be performed without intermission.

Tickets may be obtained by visiting the Columbus Symphony office located in the lower level of Barnett Bank, 1234 First Ave., or by calling the office at 323-5059. Tickets are $9, $12 and $15 for adults and $5 for students in special sections.

CRIMINAL BEHAVIOR

Indeed, Fawcett muses "I have a feeling people will sit down and think, 'What is she going to make us do this time? Is she going to try to kill her kids, or what?' It's always rewarding to do good work and to work with good people, so it's been a very fruitful time for me." "In a career like mine," she maintains, "the next decision always becomes more important than the last one. There are expectations, and other things, that make you hope you can keep your reasons (for doing certain projects) pure. Those come from a gut instinct, and that's what I always try to follow. The decision to do 'Criminal Behavior' came from that so that's what I had to go with."

Fort Benning to test drinking water for lead, copper levels

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

In accordance with the federal government's Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Act, Fort Benning will be joining other communities in July to test its drinking water for safe levels of lead and copper.

Dorothy Richards, acting chief of the Environmental Programs Management Branch, Environmental Management Division for the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, said though water is routinely tested at the plants, it will be the first time water in the homes will be tested to this extent.

"We don't expect Fort Benning to have any problems with its action levels," she said.

The action level, or safe level, for lead recently was reduced from 50 parts per billion to 15 parts per billion, and the action level for copper is 1,300 parts per billion.

She noted that federal law states that overall if more than 10 percent of the sites tested exceed the action level, then some form of action must take place.

Fort Benning is considered a medium-sized system. A total of 60 sites will be tested with the state helping to select them.

Joe Wilkins, environmental programs specialist for the Environmental Programs Management Branch, who will be monitoring the records of the testing, added that two forms of correction are possible if drinking water is found to be high in either lead or copper. They are corrosion control through the water treatment system or pipe replacement.

Home water purifiers don't always work for this, he added.

Anyone interested in volunteering to participate in the testing in their quarters should contact their community life noncommissioned officers at their local community centers or the installation Community Life Office at 545-2910 before May 30. A list will be turned in to Environmental Programs Management.

Those involved will have to pull the samples from the first draw in the morning when the pipes have not been used for at least six hours. Then the sample must be dropped off at the Preventive Medicine Office in Soldiers' Plaza that will pre-treat them and forward them on to the U.S. Army Environmental Hygiene Agency - South.

Lab results will be analyzed there, and, by law, residents will be notified individually. If lead action levels are high, an extensive multi-language education program will begin within 60 days.

If the action levels on post are not exceeded for two consecutive six-month periods, then a reduced sampling of 30 sites will be surveyed within the next 12 months, followed by another 12-month cycle, and then the water would be tested every three years.

Why should water be tested for lead and copper?

Richards said that lead has been found to be harmful to humans if inhaled or ingested with the degree of harm depending on the level and frequency of exposure. Known effects range from subtle chemical changes to severe neurological and toxic effects. As for copper, in heavy doses, it can cause upset stomach.

The most common source of lead contamination is from lead solder on copper pipes or lead service lines. Although copper pipes have replaced lead since 1930, the use of lead solder with copper pipes has been widespread.

Post honors volunteers

By Connie Bridges

More than 1,950 Fort Benning volunteers served 285,643 hours in nearly 3,000 voluntary positions during the past year. This represented a savings of $3.4 million in services provided to soldiers and families, according to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

To recognize the significance of their contribution to the quality of life on post, volunteers and volunteer managers were invited to a special ceremony Tuesday at Riverside, the home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen Jerry White and his wife, Linda.

Case noted that volunteers serve in more than 20 on-post organizations; hundreds of unit family support groups; and in many off-post organizations such as Big Brothers/Big Sisters, Muscogee Area Literacy, Red Cross, Valley Rescue Mission and local churches.

The Infantry Band provided background music for the occasion, and special recognition was given to the two volunteers of the quarter and six recipients of the Patriotic Civilian Service Award.

This week was set aside as Fort Benning Volunteer Recognition Week.

Other activities have included special mention during church services Sunday, a media workshop for volunteer managers Wednesday and a job strategy workshop for volunteers Thursday.

PX cracking down on shoplifters

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Shoplifting on Fort Benning has been on the increase since 1990 and the results can be felt in the pockets of post consumers through rising costs of products, according to post exchange security officials.

Since 1990 to date, shoplifting has increased on post from one to three shoplifters a day who are detained, said Jacqueline Sims, exchange detective supervisor for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service at Fort Benning for the past five years.

In January, 45 shoplifters were detained with $1,195.55 worth of merchandise recovered; in February, 45 shoplifters were detained with $2,765.90 worth of merchandise recovered; and in March, 44 shoplifters were detained with $1,271.82 worth of merchandise recovered. The statistics for April are not yet available, said Sims.

To combat the rise in shoplifting, Sims has taken steps to tighten up the security at all AAFES facilities

"We have a team of certified, highly qualified and professional detectives on the Fort Benning AAFES security staff," said Sims. "These detectives are on duty all around Fort Benning"— not just at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall. Even in Harmony Church and on Sand Hill, our detectives are there, and they are prepared for all potential shoplifters," she said.

Along with a top detective staff, Sims has trained all AAFES staff members how to effectively detain and, in most cases, defuse a potential shoplifting situation.

"The training consisted of teaching the employees how to approach a suspect in non-accusing manner," said Sims. "I tell the employees to approach the suspect and ask them if they need assistance with the item they are about to 'purchase.' Once the suspect knows that they have been found out, they usually either buy the item or return it to the shelf. Several of the suspects leave to try and hit another AAFES facility," said Sims.

AAFES also employs a number of electronic surveillance cameras throughout its facilities, said Sims. These cameras rotate on a 360-degree angle and allow the staff to see several areas within the facility at one time, said Sims.

Potential shoplifters need to be aware that this is a serious offense and will not be treated lightly, she said.

"The AAFES security staff is ready; and, if a shoplifter is detained, they will be prosecuted, without a doubt," said Sims.

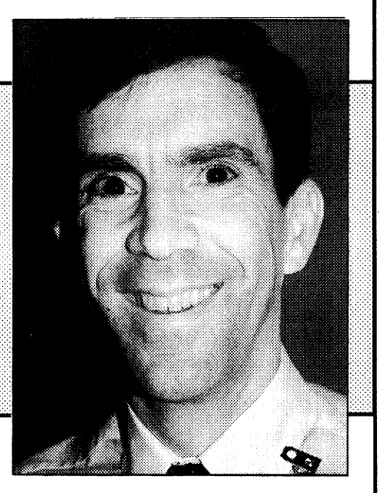
VARIOUS VOICES

What can be done to prevent spouse abuse?

Cynthia Tuggle, Social Work Services — "Before individuals get married, they need to get pre-marital counseling. Conflict is inevitable. We find a big problem is lack of communication."

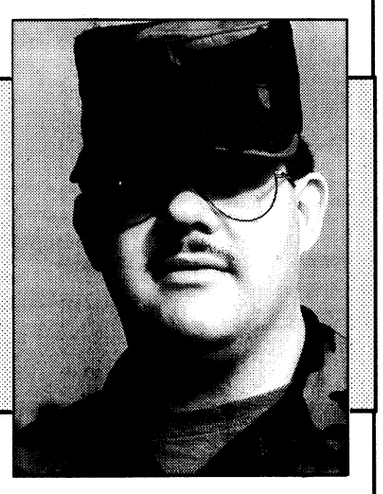
Debra Howell, Social Work Services — "Overall community education (will help). A lot of people don't know how much spouse abuse is on the rise. People also need to realize that abuse not only hurts the other spouse, it also hurts the entire family."

Gail Gordon, Social Work Services — "Education is one of the most important things. Trust and security is important. Spouses must learn other styles of handling conflict."



Chris Schmink, Social Work Services — "Education, early and comprehensive, throughout the nation (may help). For the family, a tune up just like you would your car. Take advantage of services on post. Spouses must look at everyone else as human beings."

Sgt. James Hampton, Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment — "A lot of abuse could be prevented if it was reported the first time it happened so it doesn't continue."



Spc. Kenneth Kosek, Adjutant General Replacement Detachment, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Spouses need to go to counseling to keep from bringing work problems home with them. I know, from being in the Army, that it's sometimes difficult to leave problems at work."

Spouse abuse shows no respect

COMMENTARY

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

At 6:30 p.m., police were called to break up a fight after a woman was stabbed.

At 10:45 p.m. police responded to a call from a woman who'd just been beaten.

Los Angeles? Atlanta?

No. Try Fort Benning.

Not a day goes by that military police aren't called to what they term a "domestic disturbance."

Some of those domestic disturbances result in one spouse or another ending up in the hospital with bullet holes, knife stabs, or broken bones from being punched and kicked.

Psychologists will go into a long litany of excuses for spouse beating. They'll note the extra stress soldiers are under, cite frequent and often long separations as reasons.

These may be reasons but they ain't excuses.

Amateur psychologist Snively opines that men beat women because they don't respect them. The fact that women also abuse men is not today's issue, although the lack of respect theory is probably valid here also.

But back to my original thesis.

Men ain't got no respect for women around here.

Is it because the Army is a male bastion? Does it have to do with the way soldiers are potty trained? Is it a result of southern culture — "women are to be seen, not heard."

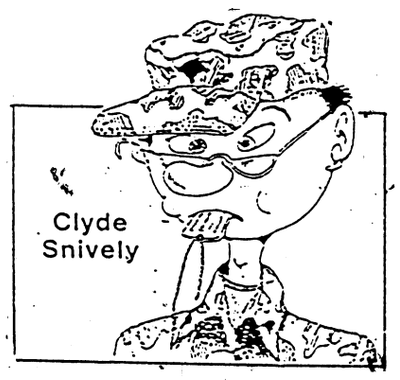
Or do they actually believe "real men don't respect women," just like they don't eat quiche?

Talk to spouses and they'll tell you how in the eyes of their husbands they can't do anything right. How the husbands browbeat them, take their money, take their car, won't let them have friends, practically imprison them in their own homes.

And these could be women who are making as much, perhaps more money than the husband. But still, the husband, to satisfy his male ego, has to belittle them and their worth.

Should the spouse develop backbone, stiffen up and not accept this verbal terrorizing, the man escalates the "discussion," to knocking the woman around the quarters — always a nice thing, especially when children are around to watch.

That's one extreme. And it takes place because the man doesn't respect the woman. We ain't talking love, or even like.



It's lack of respect for that woman as a person, and that's why women get abused.

Men don't abuse men — there's a lot more cases of domestic violence than there are fights among men on post — because they either respect other men or are afraid of themselves getting beat up.

This lack of respect also exists in the workplace.

Somehow men think they have to show how macho they are by pawing every woman they see or addressing them as "honey" or "deary."

Noncommissioned officers and officers from other parts of post will come here to Infantry Hall, run across one of the women denizens of this building and immediately think they have to reach out and touch someone.

If it happens here, I know it's happening postwide.

For you men who think that's the thing to do, how come I don't see male NCOs and officers doing that to other men — well, at least not as frequently — they certainly don't call them "honey" and "dear."

Another example of this lack of respect?

Women in Infantry Hall say they don't like to go to the cafeteria because of the reactions they often get from men.

Follow a women into the cafeteria one of these days and note the reaction.

It's like watching someone at the monkey cage making faces and noises at the monkeys to get the monkeys to react.

In the cafeteria you have grown men making, for lack of a better term, rutting noises and actions whenever an attractive woman walks in.

It would be quite comical except the poor woman is probably embarrassed at all this attention — probably just as the monkeys are.

The moral to all this: If you want to be treated with respect, treat others with respect. It might save your relationship or marriage and will certainly help save your job or career.

President honors all armed forces

I am pleased to send warmest greetings to the men and women of the Army, the Marine Corps, the Navy, the Air Force and the Coast Guard as you observe Armed Forces Day.

During the past year, as the ideals of democracy triumphed over communism and as an international coalition ejected from Kuwait the forces of a ruthless tyrant, Americans led the way to another historic victory: winning the Cold War.

Indeed, we helped to finish the struggle that was joined by every generation since the Cold War began more than four decades ago. It was a long, difficult task.

However, because of our victory, the threat of nuclear attack has been greatly diminished, and we have laid the foundation for a constructive relationship with the independent states of the former Soviet Union. Where conflict and suspicion once loomed, hope now flourishes.

Many have contributed to this extraordinary success, but none have endured more hardships in behalf of their country than the selfless men and women of our armed forces.

It is right that freedom-loving peoples everywhere take the time to reflect upon the vital role that you have played and that you continue to play in the quest for peace.

You have bravely answered the call to duty, serving with uncommon resolve and with dedication to the principles upon which this nation was founded. We will never forget your sacrifices for our defense, nor those of your comrades before you.

As we celebrate this Armed Forces Day, the world struggles to keep pace with the dramatic changes of the past year. While these changes demand that we look anew at our needs and interests, they by no means relieve us of our responsibilities as a world leader.

Though safer, the world remains unpredictably volatile, and I have determined that we will not relive the deadly mistakes of the past.

The United States will remain engaged, wherever appropriate, to protect our national interest and to sustain freedom and peace. We are entering a new era of international cooperation — thanks to your steadfast efforts — and I am proud to salute you on behalf of all Americans.

God bless you, and God bless America.

President George Bush

Defense secretary gives thanks to military

As Americans — military and civilian — celebrate Armed Forces Day, there is no better way to express our feelings than with this year's theme, "America's Military — Our Nation's Pride."

This day gives us a chance to improve public understanding of the role of the military. It also provides an occasion to pay tribute to you.

This past year, in addition to proving yourselves on the battlefield, you demonstrated to the world your compassion and capacity to assist those who are in great need. Aiding those in need in Operation Provide Comfort and assisting the flood-ravaged people of Bangladesh in Operation Sea Angel are but two recent examples of your selfless service.

As we celebrate this Armed Forces Day, you can be sure that your country is proud of you and grateful for the critical part you play in keeping America strong and free. On behalf of all Americans, I thank you for your unselfish service.

Dick Cheney
Defense secretary

Post takes pride in armed forces

Forty-two years ago, our nation began the tradition of recognizing the men and women who swore to uphold the constitution of the United States.

As we come together to celebrate this day, we recognize the aptness of this year's theme — "America's Military — Our Nation's Pride."

That pride was brilliantly evident across our nation in the months following the allied victory in Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm as citizens staged parades and hosted homecoming events. Americans have traditionally shown their pride in the armed forces in such ways, and this year's Armed Forces Day will be just as grand.

Today we can be proud of a "job well done" as we also resolve to maintain the standard to be ready to defend freedom and democracy wherever and whenever we are called.

LETTER

Tot Town Child Development Center staff would like to thank parents for joining us during our open house. It was a good time for sharing information and ideas.

Please remember that we always appreciate the suggestions you give us. They help us evaluate ourselves and our programs for growth.

We have a very mobile society, and often people don't know what to do with things they don't need anymore. We always need changes of clothing for infants and tiny tots. Books, some furniture, shelves and toys are welcome, too.

May we remind you that if you have special skills that you would like to share with us and our children, we'd like to know.

Thank you for your constant support.

Post takes safety seriously

Fort Benning continues to save lives and preserve resources by fostering safe attitudes and implementing safe procedures.

To further advance our goals of providing a safe and healthful place for us to work and live, I am designating Thursday as Force Protection Awareness Day.

Commanders and directors will plan and conduct programs relevant to their mission. The program should include a review of accident causes and participation in a variety of safety-related activities.

We owe each soldier and employee our best effort in ensuring their safety.

Riggers open renovated building

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning officially dedicated the newly-renovated Parachute Packing Facility with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Monday.

Brig. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School, presided over the ceremony that reopened building 2593. This building had been used since 1941 for packing parachutes with no significant changes for improving the quality of the building.

Ernst said during the ceremony that all of the riggers at Fort Benning deserve the best because having the riggers perform well can mean saving the life of an airborne soldier.

"This building is about giving you the resources you deserve," said Ernst. "I have confidence in what riggers can do when given the resources."

Also during the ribbon-cutting ceremony, Ernst officially authorized the riggers stationed at Fort Benning to wear a red baseball cap to distinguish them from other soldiers in the airborne community.

The renovation consisted of an improved lighting system, a new floor, new wall partitions and paneling, windows, exterior siding, and the addition of an air conditioning system.

Pfc. Joseph Hughes packs a parachute.

Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, which will be using the facility, routinely packs more than 2, 700 parachutes a week in support of the Airborne School and other units that are authorized to conduct parachute operations. There are more than 90 parachute riggers permanently assigned to this company. During peak work periods, they are augmented with parachute riggers from the Army and Marine Corps Reserve.

Following the dedication ceremony, the riggers of Company E, led by Ernst, made a parachute jump at Fryar Drop Zone.

Nine civilian employees maintain and repair the parachutes.

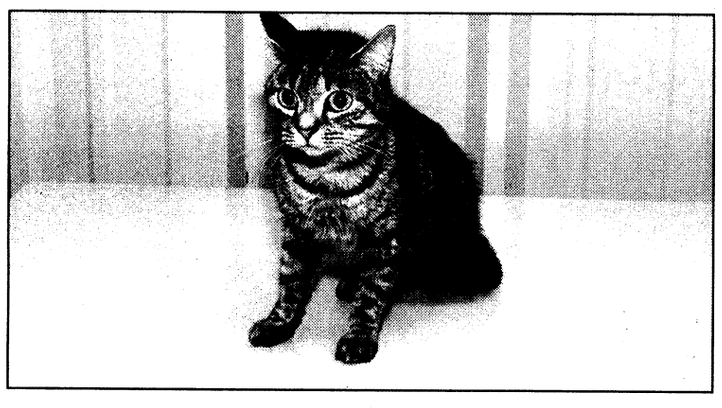
PET OF THE WEEK



This nine-month-old female cat, "Pony," is looking for a home. She is declawed and has had all of her shots. Her family was clearing post and had to leave her behind. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

DoD gets tough with urinalysis standards

New tests make it easier to detect cocaine abuse among soldiers and civilian employees

Armed Forces Information Service

The Department of Defense recently toughened the urinalysis standards used in detecting cocaine.

"The tests are so good and so accurate, we've been able to toughen the standards," said Sharon Cooper, director of the Pentagon's Demand Reduction Office. "The amount of cocaine that will show a positive now is smaller." The new test level as of Jan. 1 is 100 nanograms a milliliter for a positive, The old level was 150 nanograms a milliliter.

In addition to toughening urinalysis standards, DoD will increase emphasis on detecting amphetamines, methamphetamines and hallucinogens. The standards will not change, but DoD will test more for these substances.

The Demand Reduction Office — part of the Office of the DoD Coordinator for Drug Enforcement Policy and Support — sets policy and standards for the armed services' urinalysis programs. In addition, it's involved with educational programs to warn and educate service members and their families of the dangers of drug abuse.

Other government officials have held up the DoD program as an example of the effectiveness of drug demand reduction policies. DoD figures for 1980 show 27 percent of those in the military admitted they had used some illegal substance within the last 30 days. In 1988 — the most recent data available — that figure dropped to 4.8 percent.

"Commanders in the field are saying they have better troops, and productivity has improved," Cooper said. "The military effort is being held up as a flagship for other government agencies and private corporations. We were the first with a "Zero Tolerance" program, we were the first with urinalysis, we were the first government agency to test civilian workers, and we were the first to require contractors to test certain employees.

Some 90 Fort Benning civilian employees are subject to testing. These employees are in critical jobs on post, such as aviation and law enforcement.

"The employees in the positions that are tested already know that they will be tested," said Cheryl Creek, a management employee relations specialist at Fort Benning. "These employees have signed an agreement that enrolled them in the program."

"The lessons we have learned can be transferred," Cooper said.

The biggest lesson is that a demand reduction program needs the "stick" of a deterrence/detection program to work. "Education alone, without urinalysis, is less effective," Cooper said. "People know there are real penalties if they use drugs. In the military, only junior enlisted may get a second chance."

The urinalysis program is effective from several levels. Those people who might be tempted to experiment with drugs are deterred from experimenting by detection through urinalysis. The "second-level" user — one who dabbles in illegal substances — may not be deterred from using, but may not take as much or as often.

For the hard-core user, urinalysis will detect them and get them out of the service.

The same deterrence works for industry. "Those who have developed a urinalysis program — DoD contractors are prime examples — have noticed better productivity, they've had fewer health problems and accident rates have gone down," Cooper said.

More people with drug problems are calling the office. "These calls are from people asking how they can get help before they are detected," Cooper said. "The program is so credible that people believe it's only a matter of time before they get caught. It's a far cry from when the program was introduced."

Cooper anticipates no great changes in the urinalysis program. "The tests are cheaper now," Cooper said, "so there certainly will be no reduction in testing. This is not the kind of program you can declare victory in and shift the funds to another area. You have to maintain it.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Capt. Evelyn Britt
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I read an advertisement for a "living trust" packet in the newspaper last week. According to the article, by placing my property in trust instead of making a will, my beneficiaries can avoid the expense of probate. The ad said all I had to do was send $20 for a "living trust" packet and fill out the forms myself without an attorney's assistance. What is a living trust? Does it really take the place of a will? Is this legal, or just a scam to get my $20?

A: There has been quite a lot of advertising about the benefits of "living trusts." Typically these ads will assert that such a trust will save you a tremendous amount of money by ensuring that your property goes to your beneficiaries, implying that unless you use a living trust, the courts and greedy lawyers will whittle away at your estate in the probate process.

Because few people understand the probate process, they fear it. These articles play on that fear.

No one can competently advise you on whether a living trust or some other estate planning tool is right for you without doing a careful review of your family plan and your financial position.

A trust is an arrangement by which one person (a trustee) holds title to an asset and manages it for the benefit of another (a beneficiary).

The person who establishes the trust is generally known as a settlor. A trust in some form can be made to do almost anything that a settlor could do for himself. Trusts can be used to carry out the settlor's wishes even after death.

A will is effective only after death, but a trust in some form can be established during life to continue well after the death of the settlor.

The trust, whatever its purpose, will have two characteristics: it will be either "revocable" or "irrevocable" and it will be either "testamentary" or "living" (also known as "inter vivos," meaning during life).

Revocable simply means that you have retained the power to revoke, or cancel the trust. If the trust is irrevocable, you cannot cancel it.

A common form of living trust is a trust naming yourself as the trustee to monitor the property during your lifetime and naming the individual you wish to inherit the property as the alternate trustee. Then at the time of your death, the assets listed in the trust will automatically come under the control of the alternate trustee, who can then convey the property to himself or other named beneficiaries. This transfer of property is also accomplished in probating a will. There is an additional expense involved in setting up a living trust, because deeds must be prepared transferring all trust property to the trust.

The Legal Assistance Division assists Georgia military retirees and their family members in will preparation and in probate. Division personnel can also advise you on the advisability of placing your property in joint tenancy with the right of survivorship, a simple expedient that avoids probate without resorting to a living trust.

Homes, automobiles, bank accounts and other assets that are held under such an arrangement are not included within a deceased's estate for probate purposes. Further, because the time and expense involved in probate of an average-sized estate in Georgia is minimal, this should not be an issue for most retirees.

There are some disadvantages to the joint tenancy with right of survivorship.

It is not advisable to use a fill-in-the-blank living trust packet. Whether a living trust is appropriate for you is a matter you should decide after a careful review of your estate goals and desires with trust professionals.

Legal assistance attorneys can discuss living trusts and other estate planning tools with you. However, they cannot draft a living trust for you.

If you wish to discuss your estate planning concerns, call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 for an appointment.

The office is located at the intersection of Vibbert Avenue and Sigerfoos Street in Building 5 on Main Post.

Red Cross volunteers work through tough times

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

She's been "in" for 24 years, serving in Vietnam, Germany, at Fort Jackson S.C., and Eglin Air Force Base, Fla. She arrived at Fort Benning in November 1984, and was on detached duty in Saudi Arabia from January to May 1991. As you may imagine, she has some "war stories" to tell, but this woman isn't a member of the military.

Linda Scorgie, station manager for the Red Cross here, has worked with soldiers and their families through some of the toughest situations people can face, in some of the toughest locations soldiers can be found.

Linda Scorgie

"I was station manager at Dhahran, with 10 people who worked shifts 24 hours a day. We worked out of half a trailer, with two field phones, and handled 700 to 900 cases a week," Scorgie said.

"We could only relay birth announcements and messages of critical illnesses or failed child care plans," she said.

The challenges at Fort Benning are just as great, Scorgie said, although on a different level.

"The greatest challenge here is related to the transient nature of this post. We have to recruit, train and place about 300 volunteers a year to keep our programs staffed, and training is constant, since people often don't stay here long," Scorgie said.

"Most people associate the Red Cross with emergency situations or disaster relief," Scorgie said. "We also teach a lot of courses, from first aid to water safety, Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome education, cardio-pulmonary resuscitation and even a babysitting course."

There is a need now, she said, for adult leadership volunteers to help with the summer youth program. "Last year we had 74 teen-agers in the program. We may not be able to offer it at all this year if we don't get the volunteers we need," Scorgie said.

The youth program offers work experience to young adults aged 13 and above, who work in the hospital, library or as swim aides during the summer.

Doris Willis, health and safety chairwoman and volunteer of the year for the Red Cross station here, said that her favorite part of the job is "the great people I work with. Every instructor I've got is dynamite," she said.

Currently, there is a need for volunteers in the new "Healthy Pregnancy, Healthy Baby" course, Willis said.

"The course helps new or expectant parents deal with the stresses and anxieties that having a baby can bring. Emotional and physical changes can have a tremendous effect on expectant parents, and it's easier to deal with these changes when the parents understand them," Willis said.

Donna Wilson, Red Cross hospital chairwoman and first quarter volunteer of the quarter for post, coordinates hospital volunteers and works with preventive medicine on the AIDS education program. "Currently, we have 48 hospital volunteers, and we always need more," she said.

Jean Campbell, chairwoman of Service to Armed Forces here, has been a volunteer for more than 25 years.

"I find volunteering very rewarding. It makes me realize how lucky I am, and it gives me a good feeling to be able to help. My mother, now deceased, was a volunteer for the Red Cross, and in a way I do it for her," Campbell said.

For information on Red Cross programs or volunteering, call 545-5117 or 545-5194.

Fifth-graders participate in Law Day activities at post schools

Fort Benning Schools

Law Day, May 1, was celebrated in the Fort Benning Schools in a variety of ways.

One celebration of the day was created by Dexter School fifth-graders with the help of parent volunteer, Nancy Adams. Adams and the fifth-graders from Carroll Thebaud's class pieced together a quilt based on the them, "Struggle for Justice."

Adams offered students various quilt styles and materials to choose from, and students located quotes from individuals illustrating the struggle for justice. Adams, and two other volunteers, Pam Fuentes and Jean Fry, then taught the students how to write their quote on a piece of muslin, thread a needle and sew a nine-inch block square containing the quote.

Each child's square was fitted so that the central focus of the quilt was an eagle. The Struggle for Justice Quilt now hangs on display in the halls of Dexter School. It will remain in the school as a lasting tribute to Law Day and a remembrance of the fifth-graders who created it.

RedStixx 'go back to school' at Dexter

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Four members of the Columbus RedStixx baseball team were guests of about 40 children in the second and third grade gifted program at Herbert J. Dexter School May 7.

RedStixx Rod McCall, Joe Fleet, Carlos Crawford and Pete Rose Jr. talked to the students about playing for a minor league team.

The class, in its enrichment activities, chose baseball as a special interest subject to study.

As part of this project, teachers Linda Turner, third grade, Ellen Smith, second grade, and Diane Lubin, third grade, asked the RedStixx to send some players to sit on a panel so that the group could ask questions of them.

Little girls asked questions such as, "Who was married, and how did it affect their playing?" None of the four is married.

The boys, like third-grader Sebastian Carden, wanted to know how it feels to go from high school ball to the minor league, and how many years it takes to get to the majors.

Rose said playing for a minor league team feels good, but the toughest part was leaving home.

Crawford told him that they never know how long it will take to get to the majors — maybe tomorrow, maybe in eight years.

Fleet noted that they have to stay in good physical condition, and pitchers do that with shoulder exercises. He is a relief pitcher for the team.

Crawford serves as a starting pitcher, McCall plays first base and Rose is a third baseman.

When asked what major league team they would each like to play for, Rose said quickly the Cincinnati Reds. His favorite player is his dad.

Crawford told them it is harder to play an away game because there aren't as many people rooting for you. "You just try to block it out," he said.

Carol Dean, director of Community Relations for the RedStixx, said the team makes appearances like this quite often with at least two players at each event.

Last week the students visited with a baseball card collector shop owner and learned about caring for their cards.

Employees do it themselves

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The old adage, "If you want something done, do it yourself," is being revived in today's Army, where budget cuts and drawdowns are changing the way the Army does business.

Rather than hire a contractor to renovate the new home of the Training Support Center, building 107, the employees took up paint brushes, hammers and saws and do the work themselves.

The move to the new building was prompted by an effort to consolidate all TSC activities and maximize employee efficiency, said Ralph Corizzo, Services Branch chief.

Corizzo said that it's a task they have taken up with enthusiasm.

"Thursday is our building day," he said. "The employees come in old clothes and work on the building. I emphasize that their regular jobs come first, but many of them come in a half an hour early to work on the building."

The building, formerly used by another TSC section, was not exactly in the best condition when the audio-visual personnel took over, Corizzo said.

"It was kind of a 'This Old House' type of situation. The place had a lot of deterioration," he said.

Sections of the walls were infested with termites and the window frames were rotting out.

"We kept the old window frames and had to build new ones. We've also built nearly every wall that's in here now," said Corizzo.

He added that one of the advantages to doing the work themselves is that they were able to design the interior of the building to meet specific needs.

For example, the librarian is located next to the collection of training films and the equipment maintenance section is located next to the equipment.

Most of the major work is nearly completed, but Corizzo said that there will also be some long term projects such as beautifying the surrounding grounds and repairing a small ditch that has developed outside the building from inadequate drainage of rainwater.

He said that another advantage to doing the work themselves is it gives them something they can be proud of.

"The employees can feel like this place is really their own because they've put so much work into it; it helps to build morale," he said. "It's all part of the Army Communities of Excellence: doing things yourself and saving money," he said.

Bible documents army strength

USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

Ever since the beginning of this nation, an armed force has been in place to provide security for the "home of the brave and land of the free." The military is not a new phenomenon.

Military activities go back to the Old Testament:

Judges 20:16, 17: "Among all this people there were seven hundred chosen men lefthanded; every one could sling stones at an hair breadth, and not miss. And the men of Israel, besides Benjamin, were numbered four hundred thousand men that drew swords: all these were men of war."

Deuteronomy 3:1, 2: "Next we turned and went up long the road toward Bashan, and Og King of Bashan with his whole army marched out to meet us in battle at Edrei. The Lord said to me, Do not be afraid of him, for I have handed him over to you with his whole army and his land. Do to him what you did to Sihon King of the Amorites, who reigned in Hesbon."

II Kings 3:7, 8, "He also sent this message to Jehoshaphat King of Judah: The King of Moab has rebelled against me. Will you go with me to fight against Moab? ... By what route shall we attack? he asked."

"Through the Desert of Edom,"... II Chronicles 32:6, 7: "He appointed military over the people and assemble them before him in the square at the city gate and encouraged them with these words: Be strong and courageous. Do not be afraid or discouraged because of the King of Assyria and the vast army with him, for there is a greater power with us than with him."

In the New Testament we find an example of a soldier's faith. St. Luke 7:2, 3 and 8, 9: "And a certain centurion's servant, who was sick, and ready to die. When he heard of Jesus, he sent unto him ... For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers, and I say unto one go, and he goeth; and to another, come and he cometh; and to my servants, do this, and he doth it. When Jesus heard these things, he marveled at him, and turn him about, and said unto the people that followed him, I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel."

As in the biblical military conflicts and as it has been through out the course of human events, to the present day, casualties are a result. The price of freedom and liberty is high, the ultimate cost one's life. The military as an institution is composed of the "melting pot" of America and its territories. The many sacrifices, inconveniences and at times frustrations are what soldiers and their families endure. To sustain, maintain, and defend our constitution is an awesome responsibility.

A major reason for establishing this great nation is the "free exercise of religion." Faith is a vital ingredient to the survival of any society. As the armed forces face many dangerous exercises and missions, it is imperative that a sincere faith is maintained. A sincere and strong faith sustains the physical and mental dimensions of the professional soldier.

When one looks to their God for strength, the Psalmist comes to mind. Psalm 27:1: "The Lord is my light and my salvation; whom shall I fear? the Lord is the strength of my life; of whom shall I be afraid?"

The great hymns of the church reflect this vital ingredient as it relates to the military. Examples are hymns such as "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," "Onward Christian Soldiers, marching as to war, with the cross of Jesus going on before:...." and "Mine Eyes Have Seen the Glory of the coming of the Lord."

So, as we reflect upon the significant contributions of our armed forces, let us always keep before us the faith of our Lord that gives us the inner strength in the face of tremendous odds.

Communion held

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The first Holy Communion for several of Fort Benning's children was celebrated at the Main Post Catholic Chapel Sunday.

Each year Catholic children in the second grade and older are being prepared to receive First Communion. The preparation is a step-by-step process, "a spiritual journey," according to the Rite of Christian Initiation of Adults, which also included guidelines for the initiation of children.

Each child received a "golden book," titled "We celebrate the Eucharist." After studying the book during preparation, it was presented as a special gift to the Lord at the celebration of the First Communion Mass.

Chaplain (Col.) George Gudz and Father Joe Piskura led the children through the ceremony. First, the table (altar) was prepared by some of the children to relive the Last Supper. Then, because the first communion was on Mother's Day, the mother of each communicant received a red rose.

Delta Co. closes NET

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

When they completed Table 12 gunnery May 8 on Carmouche Range, the soldiers of Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment were effectively closing the net.

The net the Delta Co. soldiers closed was the nearly four months of new equipment training, or NET, that marked the transition to the M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle for the two infantry battalions of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. The approximately six weeks of transition per company began in mid-January when Company A, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry, received its new Bradleys.

"Now the entire brigade is equipped and trained with Bradleys," said Capt. Darin C. Blancett, Delta Co. commander. He spoke to the soldiers, wives and children gathered at the range to witness the completion of gunnery, promotions for three of the noncommissioned officers, Top Gun awards to the highest scoring Bradley crew and platoon, and a demonstration of the weapon's firepower.

"I know your husbands can tell you the Bradley is an impressive fighting machine — the best in the world, bar none," Blancett said. "All of our platoons benefited from the experiences of the other companies that finished NET before us, and our NET team will tell you we had the highest average score in the battalion."

Blancett had more good news for his soldiers and their families.

"The four-day field training exercise you were expecting after gunnery is only going to last two days," he announced. "Guys, you've already done well on the individual and crew levels of this training. All that remains is to put everything together on the platoon level during our FTX, and you'll get some well deserved time off with your families."

The NCOs of Delta Co. received high marks from one of their NET team trainers.

"Many of the track commanders were already 11 Mikes (Bradley crewmen), but they gave more than 100 percent during the training," said Sgt. 1st Class Jose Diaz, noncommissioned officer in charge of the team. "Many times after we stopped for the day the NCOs continued training their crews for another couple of hours."

"I'm thrilled with the overall performance of my crew," said Staff Sgt. Richard Haynie, commander of Bradley vehicle D-1-2, whose crewmen received Army Achievement Medals for scoring 995 out of a possible 1,000 points on Table 12 gunnery.

"We accomplished what we set out to do, even though my gunner, Spc. Brad Laney, and I missed the first week of NET because we were in Airborne School," he continued. "We had a lot of catching up to do after graduation, but it really helped that I had taken the Bradley commander's course back in October and November and that Laney had already served as a Bradley gunner with his last unit during Operation Desert Storm."

"My driver, Spc. Erik Bender, is also a Gulf War veteran, but he wasn't a Bradley driver then so he had a lot to learn during NET, too," Haynie added. "Our score was a total crew effort, because Bender helped us pick up points once when I forgot to give a command for another driver to back up on Table 8. He gave the command and brought the track back, which saved us time on the table and earned us extra points in the timed event."

Aurelio Fellberty

Bradley crewmen relax after winning "Top Gun" honors for Company D, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry. Staff Sgt. Richard Haynie serves as track commander, Spc. Brad Laney is gunner and Spc. Erik Bender drives the vehicle.

Staff Sgt. Michael Rountree, platoon sergeant of 3rd platoon, which earned the rotating Top Gun plaque for the platoon with the highest overall score in the gunnery, was equally enthusiastic about his soldiers' performance.

"We had the top three crews in the battalion with scores of 995, 990 and 988 points, but we couldn't have done it without the leadership of our platoon leader, 1st Lt. Washington Johnson," Rountree said.

Blancett used the opportunity with the soldiers' spouses present to promote Brad Sitton to staff sergeant and Scott Fountain and George Kellison to sergeant. The NET team received a "Striker" Battalion certificate of appreciation, and each member of the team was awarded a battalion coin.

'Vanguards' blast to third place in arms matches; team member wins Excellence in Competition award

By Aurelio Fellberty
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

A five-man team from 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment "Vanguards" recently placed third in the active duty category at the U.S. Army Combat Arms Matches at Fort Benning.

Participating teams fired their M-16A2 rifles in eight individual matches and in three team matches.

Teams present at the competition were chosen to participate from the previous XVIII Airborne Corps match at Fort Bragg, N.C., in January.

The Armywide match featured a total of 85 teams comprised of 783 competitors, ranging from active duty service members to National Guardsmen and members of the Air National Guard.

"I've been the team coach since 1989," said Sgt. Charles Herlth, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Bn., 18th Inf., whose team was the only one from the 24th Infantry Division entered in the match.

"My duties as coach are not only to help the soldiers with their positioning, but also to call wind direction," Herlth added. "Without the wind direction information the soldiers won't be able to correctly determine how many clicks to adjust their sights in order to stay on target."

According to Herlth, the competition began at the post level in November, when the Vanguard team placed second.

Next came the XVIII Airborne Corps match, where the Vanguard team placed fourth. Finally, the team placed third in the Armywide match.

"I'm proud of our team. Despite some logistical and scheduling problems, the team members were able to overcome them and give the matches their all," said Herlth.

Herlth had special praise for first-time competitor Spc. William Morgan.

"Morgan placed first in match 307, an individual slow fire event at 500 yards, where he was basically firing in the prone position at half size silhouette targets," Herlth said. "He went on to take second place in the 600 yard slow fire event, which was also fired from the prone position at half size silhouettes."

For his performance, Morgan received the Excellence in Competition Award.

"He's the eighth soldier to receive this award in the XVIII Airborne Corps," said Herlth.

"After completing the combat competition, four members of my team were invited to participate in the interservice match at Quantico, Va., and the national match at Camp Perry, Ohio," Herlth added. "However, due to unit missions, the team members were not able to attend."

Panthers of 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor change command

Outgoing commander to attend War College, new CO arriving from Korea

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Lt. Col. James E. Bessler will assume command of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor June 1, at 10 a.m. on Dickman Field, First Division Road.

He succeeds Lt. Col. Ricardo S. Sanchez, who has commanded the "Panthers" of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's armor battalion, since June 1990.

During the Persian Gulf War, the battalion attacked across the Iraqi border toward the Euphrates River Valley as part of the 24th Infantry Division.

Sanchez is scheduled to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Bessler comes to the Panther Battalion from Korea, where he most recently served as a brigade executive officer at Camp Casey.

His previous assignments include assistant professor of military science at Northern Michigan University, exchange officer to the Royal Australian Armor Center, deputy chief of armor personnel officer and executive officer of the 1st Battalion, 10th Cavalry of Fort Knox, Ky., and armor team chief at the Readiness Group Redstone in Huntsville, Ala.

Bessler was commissioned a second lieutenant of armor in 1973 upon graduation from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point.

He is also a graduate of the Armor Officer Basic Course, the Infantry Officer Advanced Course and the Command and General Staff College.

Bessler and his wife, Suzanne, have two children, Allison, 8, and Joseph, 1.

The ceremony will feature marching elements from each of the five companies in the battalion, music by the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) Band, and an appearance by the division camels.

Chairborne Rangers attend Best Ranger Competition

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The first provisional civilian support Battalion, 1st Brigade, Chairborne Rangers of Clearwater, Fla., were on post May 1 through 4 during the Best Ranger competition.

On Monday before its departure, the group visited Suiter Hill, the site of the 29th Infantry Regiment Bradley Fighting Vehicle driving area.

The Chairborne Rangers were given a ride on a Bradley, and they were able to "scope out" the vehicle's inside and out.

Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment supported the display.

The Chairborne Ranger Society was founded in 1979 by Richard A. Leandri, a Clearwater businessman.

"The organization is dedicated to preserving a strong national defense and supporting the United States in all of the branches of service," said Leandri.

The society is a major financial supporter of the Best Ranger Competition, and it donates the first and second place team awards.

This year, the Chairborne rangers awarded the winning team two 9mm pistols. The second place team was awarded two Randal hunting knives.

Live-fire exercise held

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

First Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, conducted a combined arms, live-fire exercise at Cactus Range April 30 for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, and a group of Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps students from Hardaway High School in Columbus.

A CALFEX is performed to determine a unit's abilities in combat operations. It is an effective training tool used Armywide in mechanized infantry units.

This particular CALFEX was broken down into two phases. The first was a weapons exhibition. The weapons on fire display were the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, M-lAl Abrams tank, M-113 armored personnel carrier, M-901 improved tow vehicle, and the M-9Al fire support team vehicle.

There was also an air display featuring the A-10 Thunderbolt, the AH-64 Apache attack helicopter, and the OH-58 Scout helicopter. The second phase was conducted primarily for IOAC students in an attempt to show future company commanders the proper way to successfully clear a bunker.

Company E served as the main support company. "This is some of the most realistic training I've received," said Spc. Edward Cooney. "It has been great training for the operation, but I wish I were able to watch it from the stands."

The 2nd, 69th Armor Regiment also supported the exercise with a demonstration of the M-1A1 Abrams main battle tank.

"There is no substitution for a combined arms, live-fire exercise," Col. Gregory Camp, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, told the students of the IOAC class.

"This was an excellent exercise, and the troops seem very professionally trained," Capt. Michael Molin, a student from the IOAC class.

The 29th Infantry Regiment will be conducting three capabilities exercises this month at Red Cloud Range. There will also be another CALFEX Thursday.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• Fort Benning Post Commander Col. Walter S. Fulton appointed Lt. Col. Joel D. Pomerene special post inspector. Pomerene's duties included investigations into the auditing of post funds and unserviceable quartermaster property.

• Allied forces suffered huge losses in Burma.

• The first British forces retreating from Burma reached India after having lost 30,000 out of 45,000 men. Additionally, the Chinese suffered more than 80 percent casualties in the battle reducing its force to only one viable division. In contrast, the Japanese losses totalled less than 8,000 men, reflecting its superior training and firepower.

• On the Eastern Front, German forces, commanded by Field Marshal Erich Von Manstein, successfully captured Kerch and launched a counterattack on Kharkov. Soviet losses topped 150,000.

• German bombers sank the HMS Trinidad while it was escorting an Arctic convoy.

• Australian reinforcements were ordered to Port Moresby, New Guinea.

• Admiral Sir Henry Harwood was appointed commander of the British Mediterranean fleet.

• The carriers HMS Argus and HMS Eagle ferried 17 Spitfires to the Mediterranean island of Malta.

• The Army announced the formation of the 94th, 98th, 102nd, and 104th Infantry Divisions.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today, May 15, 1942 ...

Russian forces are reported to have broken through the German lines and are close to taking the Ukrainian city of Kharkov.

Over the last two days of the offensive, the Red Army claims to have destroyed more than 150 tanks and captured a "large number" of prisoners and supplies. A German army communique acknowledged that the German forces are defending the Kharkov area.

Farther south on the Russian front, the German army advanced on the Kerch Peninsula of the Crimea.

The Russian army is said to be fighting fiercely but is being forced to withdraw from the massed Axis mechanized and aerial onslaught.

The Axis attack has nearly captured the key port city of Kerch and is reported to be in a position to block the retreat of Russian forces in the area.

Dealing with the French high commissioner at Martinique in the Carribean, U.S. officials have secured an agreement that would "immobilize" four Vichy-French warships and several merchantmen that are currently in ports of the French West Indies Islands.

"Immobilization" could mean the disposal of guns and possibly other armament, but the details have yet to be worked out. The French warships are an aircraft carrier, two cruisers, and a training ship.

Jane's Fighting Ships, 1941 edition, was made public today.

The 1941 edition of Jane's Fighting Ships asserts that, "never before has such a quantity of capital ships been under construction at the same time for any country."

U.S. shipbuilding alone accounts for 17 battleships, the first of six Alaska class battle cruisers, 11 aircraft carriers, 40 new cruisers, "while the number of destroyers being built challenges comparison with the program of 1918."

An unexpected and unexplained Japanese troop column appeared on the Burma Road and pushed deeper into China.

The sudden appearance of this column after reports of Chinese victories over the Japanese in the area has stunned the observers of the campaign's progress. Other reports indicate an army of 30,000 Japanese poised to attack in the China-Burma area from French-Indochina.

A German submarine sank a Mexican merchantman in the Gulf of Mexico, threatening to worsen the two countries' already broken relations. The Mexican government has demanded that the German government pay for the lost ship.

Lt. John D. Bulkeley arrived in San Francisco and gave the press a firsthand account of being in charge of the nation's first "mosquito boat squadron" (PT boats) during the battle for the Philippine Islands.

Chinese guerillas attacked 15 Japanese-held cities in eastern China causing 500 Japanese casualties.

This new guerilla offensive is designed to take pressure off the Chinese forces being driven from Burma by forcing the Japanese to redirect supplies and troops. The Japanese are said to have taken 100 Chinese civilians and executed them as a reprisal.

Immunization prevents infection

By Roger P. Saunders and Robert G. Knight
Martin Army Community Hospital

The Pediatric Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital is now offering a new immunization to children.

Since April 21, is has been offering hepatitis B vaccine.

Parents trying to decide whether to have their child protected with the vaccine may want to consider these facts about hepatitis B infection:

According to the national Center for Disease Control, about 300,000 children and adults develop liver infections caused by the hepatitis B virus. About 10,000 of those infected require hospitalization, with approximately 250 deaths from the disease.

Infection is transmitted from person to person by way of blood products and other bodily secretions. Transmission may occur during sexual relations, by sharing personal items such as toothbrushes and razors, or by sharing needles used to inject drugs. Babies can acquire the disease at birth from infected mothers.

Immunization with the hepatitis B vaccine assures 85 to 95 percent protection from the virus for up to 10 years. It is recommended that the first hepatiti vaccine be administered during the newborn perio Hepatitis B vaccine is now available to all infants born at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The CDC and the American Academy of Pediatrics recommend immunization of all children starting at birth, as well as teen-agers and adults.

If you would like more information on this immunization or want to start your child's protection, contact your primary care medical clinic.

Hepatitis vaccinations available

Martin Army Community Hospital

Families enrolled in a family practice clinic should receive immunizations through their assigned clinics.

Families with children 2 months to 2 years old who do not belong to a family practice clinic should call for an appointment at the Pediatric Clinic at 544-1086, 544-1087 or 544-1088.

Families with children over 2 years old who do not belong to a family practice clinic should receive immunizations in the Allergy and Immunization Clinic on the ninth floor at the hospital.

Those needing information about the clinic hours should call 544-4710 or 544-2850.

Children who were not started on the hepatitis B vaccine at birth will be immunized on the following schedule:

Dose 1. Can be given at any age.

Dose 2. Given two months after the first dose

Dose 3. Given four months after the second dose.

OF THE TWO, TODAY'S WARFIGHTER IS BETTER PREPARED TO DEAL WITH THE THREAT ON THE LEFT.

MDMSC. Smart choices for tough decisions.

Sand, earth and timber. These are the makings of the common bunker. They've been around for centuries, but surprisingly, today's warfighter still has no easy way to defeat these obstacles.

What is needed is a Bunker Defeat Munition (BDM). This weapon will offer the stand-off capability to immediately defeat and destroy battlefield obstacles, including enemy earth and timber fortifications, masonry walls and light armor.

Now, McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Company (MDMSC) and Talley Defense Systems have a bunker buster munition that offers just what is needed—the SMAW-D (Shoulder-launched Multipurpose Assault Weapon-Disposable). The SMAW-D is lightweight, compact, disposable and most of all, lethal. In short, the SMAW-D is the best way for today's warfighter to effectively deal with everything from the newest weaponry to the oldest obstacles on the battlefield.

Volunteers receive recognition at Riverside

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Six volunteers were honored with the Patriotic Civilian Service Award Tuesday at the Volunteer Recognition Ceremony on the lawn of Riverside, home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and his wife, Linda.

According to Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator, the six honored for their outstanding volunteer contributions were: Kathleen Meade and Debra Dabbs, both of the Fort Benning Schools; Margaret McGarvey and Emerson Addington Jr. of the Directorate of Logistics for their work with the Civil Air Patrol; Angel Felix Malave of the Hispanic Catholic Community and School of the Americas; and Sharon Patton of Santa's Castle.

Meade

Meade has served as a volunteer at Faith Middle School since August 1990, where she has maintained regular hours in the media center.

According to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development for the Fort Benning Schools, Meade quickly learned the use of computers and computerized typewriters, and this contributed greatly to her ability to assist teachers and students.

Meade also has processed the literature book sets used in the after-school remedial program and effectively handles the regular load of check-out activities of classes that come to the media center, said Middlemiss.

She has also served as a School Board representative for Faith School for the last three years.

Dabbs

In her nomination, Middlemiss termed Meade "an outstanding and supportive voice for the school."

Since the beginning of this school year, Dabbs has volunteered at Edward A. White School and Faith Middle School.

At White, she uses a computer program to identify the reading level of books in the media center.

According to Middlemiss, this has been invaluable in helping students and teachers find reading materials at the appropriate level.

Dabbs also volunteers with the White School Parent Teacher Organization and has established a parent resource file to catalog all school volunteers.

At Faith, she volunteers time putting information into the automation computer program .

Middlemiss said that soon students and teachers will be able to find information in the media center via the computer instead of the card catalog. She has also processed book sets for the teachers to use in the new language arts programs and has redone the existing card catalog.

Dabbs was nominated for the Patriotic Civilians Service Award because of these many and varied volunteer efforts.

A volunteer leader in the Boy Scouts of America youth program and a member of the Civil Air Patrol, U. S. Air Force Auxiliary, McGarvey was nominated by Capt. Thomas Casciaro, CAP squadron commander.

McGarvey

Casciaro said that during her community service with the Boy Scouts, McGarvey has served in positions as a unit leader as well as in unit committee positions.

Along the way, she also helped to guide her three sons in earning their Eagle Scout Awards.

In her volunteer position with the Fort Benning Civil Air Patrol, she has served in such positions as administrative officer, personnel officer and deputy commander of cadets, as well as becoming qualified in most emergency service positions.

Her efforts with the Fort Benning/Columbus CAP Cadet Program have resulted in program growth and achievement, said Casciaro.

Many of her cadets have gone on to college and two received appointments to a service academy.

As a CAP instructor, trainer, McGarvey has traveled throughout Georgia conducting training in leadership, administrative procedure, emergency service and radio communications. She has also served as a member of the staff for the Georgia Wing Squadron Leadership School and other training courses.

Casciaro said that a measure of the Columbus/Fort Benning squadron's success is a direct result of her voluntarism, dedication and degree of professionalism.

Addington was also nominated for his volunteer efforts with the Civil Air Patrol, a volunteer service organization dedicated to aerospace, education, emergency service during disasters, relief actions and youth programs.

Addington

During his period of community service, Addington has held the positions of commander, deputy commander of cadets, instructor and trainer and search and rescue mission coordinator.

He has received two CAP Commendation Awards for outstanding performance of duty, a search and rescue "find" award, and a Department of the Army Commendation Special Act Award. While squadron commander his unit received the Georgia Wing Civil Air Patrol Squadron of the Year.

His primary efforts have been with the Cadet Program, but he has also served as an instructor/trainer and as director for the Georgia Wing Squadron Leadership courses and U.S. Army sponsored Aerial Radiological Monitoring courses in support of the national and state civil defense effort.

Casciaro called Addington's professional competence during his volunteer duties a reflection of "great patriotic civilian service and a credit upon him, civil service and the United States Army Infantry Center.

For "thousands of hours selflessly given to the Hispanic Catholic Community at Fort Benning," Malave was nominated for the Patriotic Civilian Service Award by Capt. John Betlyon, special projects officer for the U. S. Army Infantry Center Chaplain's Office, and Maj. Michael Travaglione of the School of the Americas.

Malave

Betlyon said that Malave's "professional, creative and inspired initiatives have contributed immensely to the spiritual and physical needs and growth of the Hispanic Community."

Malave retired from active duty in January 1980, and has been volunteering ever since.

Travaglione said that Malave's greatest contributions have been in the organization and execution of the Hispanic Prayer and Bible Study Groups, and since January of 1989 he has organized and directed the Hispanic Catholic Pre-Sacramental Programs.

During the same time, Malave has conducted a social program of dinners, picnics and spiritual retreats.

His contributions have not been limited to religious and social activities. Since the acquisition of the School of the Americas Chapel at Lavoie Manor, he has been instrumental in the upgrading and maintenance of the facility by supervising the cleaning, painting and beautification of the grounds.

An accomplished carpenter, Malave also built a brick barbecue pit and eight picnic tables outside the SOA Chapel.

Travaglione noted that since the SOA chaplain is assigned to a Training and Doctrine Command school, the chaplain here doesn't have an assistant and without the volunteerism of Malave, the SOA chaplain would not have been able to meet his goals.

Patton, the President of Fort Benning's Santa's Castle for the past two years, was nominated for her Patriotic Civilian Service Award by Darlene Perry, Community Life officer, and Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator.

A totally volunteer non-profit organization that provides toys for needy children of active duty and retired service members, Santa's Castle began in 1986 as a dream of an Army spouse.

Patton

Since that time, nearly 20,000 Christmas items and toys have been given away to nearly 4,000 children, and Fort Benning has the only organization of this type in the U.S. Army.

Patton has provided the leadership for this organization and a genuine concern for others, according to Case.

She began to volunteer as an "elf" in the workshop in November 1990. Her initial desire was to help others and make new friends.

While Patton's husband was not deployed to Saudi Arabia, the other volunteers working there were saying goodbye to their husbands.

The dedication of those few volunteers to accomplishing the organization's mission even during the most trying of times provided a learning experience for her, Patton said.

That gave her a greater motivation for service in Santa's Castle.

During the past year, she has worked diligently to bring organization and stability to Santa's Castle. A young Army wife, she has looked to the future, and displayed wisdom and leadership skills beyond her years, Case said.

Realizing that her time at Fort Benning will be limited, Patton has been committed to laying groundwork that will ensure Santa's Castle's continued growth by raising resources, recruiting volunteers and actual hands-on "elf" work. She has led by example.

Volunteering improves post

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Why is volunteering important at Fort Benning?

Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator, said that for those assigned here, this post is their hometown right now.

"No matter where they came from originally," she said, "if they don't like something at Fort Benning or think that it could be improved, volunteering is the starting point for making it better."

This week, Fort Benning celebrated the efforts of its volunteers with special activities.

The highlight was a volunteer recognition ceremony Tuesday afternoon on the lawn of Riverside, home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A.White and his wife, Linda.

Entertaining at the ceremony was the newly-formed Infantry Chorus, vocalist Lane Chandler and The Infantry Band.

Case said that for years the post has observed a national volunteer recognition week, but this year the national celebration is set for a time when the Whites will be away. Therefore, another time was scheduled so that they could be involved.

She believes that between now and the turn of the century, in the military or civilian world, voluntarism will be critical to service programs that may be affected by budget cuts.

It will be the volunteers' efforts that will allow services to continue as the downsizing takes place, Case said.

She noted, for example, that Army Community Services began, like a number of organizations, as a group of volunteers and that the American Red Cross is one entity that has not lost sight of what volunteerism can do.

Case added that Santa's Castle is another perfect Fort Benning example of what volunteers can do. Begun in 1986 by a group of engineer soldiers' wives, Santa's Castle last year gave away about 5,000 new and used toys to eligible military families on post.

"In a way," she said, "volunteering is all tied up in giving of yourself, patriotism and how this country began. We will need more of it."

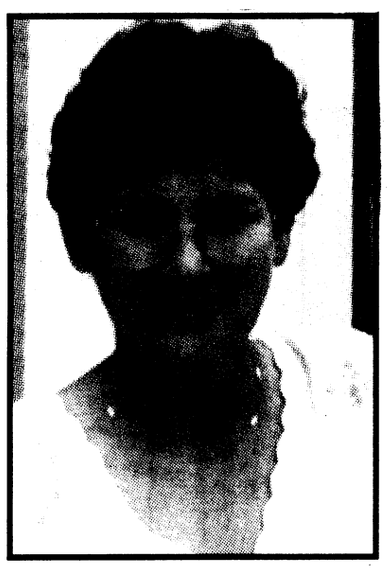
Volunteers get surprise award at ceremony

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

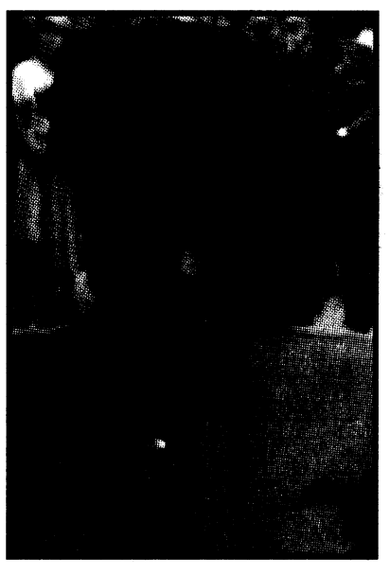
Two surprised people were honored as volunteers of the quarter at the Volunteer Recognition Ceremony Tuesday on the lawn of Riverside, home of Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry White and his wife, Linda.

They are Doris Willis of the Red Cross and Dorothy Burkes of the Fort Benning Schools.

Kathy Case, installation volunteer coordinator, said that ordinarily only one volunteer of the quarter is chosen. However, because both of these people's qualifications were so similar, and since their outstanding service made both of them deserving, Willis and Burkes are sharing the honor this quarter.



Willis



Burkes

Willis has been a Red Cross volunteer for six years, and in June 1990, she became the health and education coordinator for the post Red Cross.

Trained to be a Red Cross instructor by Russell County's office, she donates about 40 hours per week to see that classes are held and instructors are trained.

Her job involves taking care of all of the health education equipment, making sure that the mannequins are in good repair, seeing that orders are filled and keeping the records on all classes held.

Since health and education is not a budgeted department, all of her instructors are volunteers too, but Willis knows how to treat them right.

She asks, she doesn't order.

"Also, I encourage them to teach with humor so people don't dread taking required classes," she said.

Willis noted that when she started, there were about five active instructors, not counting water safety. Now there are about 50, and they're offering new classes.

Willis' goal when she first started was to get past the standard first aid classes and community cardiopulmonary resuscitation classes needed by the Military Police Activity and offer more to civilians. She is getting there.

It has meant strange hours some days, but Willis has seen it through.

Red Cross Coordinator Linda Scourgie said she has found Willis a valuable asset.

Burkes was nominated by Janet Wynn, principal at Edward A. White School.

A volunteer at the school since September, she regularly assists teachers in working with students, helping without being asked and pointing out with what the students are having difficulty, Wynn said.

Wynn noted that Burkes is always punctual, has prepared games and has worked one-on-one and in small groups with students in math and reading. She also has duplicated materials for use in the classroom.

After a week of routine was established, she has been able to go to her designated area and complete her tasks without supervision.

Wynn said, "One would hope that the devotion, dedication and experiences Burkes provides to the children will stay with them throughout their lives. However, I do know that she helped one child to the point that he would watch the door daily for her. For him, she improved his attitude, his homework completions, and his efforts all-around."

Due to Burkes' enthusiasm and love for children, Wynn added that she assists students with special needs. As a result of this, many average and above average students work harder to please her, and she has made a significant impression upon these students.

MACH employee wins wheelchair pageant

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Patricia Barnett, a medical clerk at the Information Desk at Martin Army Community Hospital, was crowned Ms. Wheelchair Georgia in the pageant held in Columbus on May 2. Barnett is a 1984 graduate of Columbus College and is working on her master's degree in health service administration.

Barnett has limbgirdlemuscular dystrophy but has never allowed that to keep her from getting the most out of life. She has raised two daughters, done seamstress work at home and finished high school at night prior to starting college. She was not aware until after the birth of her two daughters that her condition could be inherited by her children. Her daughter, Samantha, was also a contestant in the pageant.

Honors are not new to Barnett, who was 1988 Columbus-Fort Benning area's Handicapped Employee of the Year, recipient of the Miss Congeniality Award in the 1989 Ms. Wheelchair Georgia pageant and was MACH's Handicapped Employee of the Year. She was honored by the Muscular Dystrophy Association in 1990 for extraordinary support for organizing and serving as chairwoman of the Columbus area Muscular Dystrophy Support Group and was the 1992 recipient of the MDA Personal Achievement Award for the Columbus area.

In addition to Ms. Wheelchair Georgia, Barnett was again voted Ms. Congeniality by the other contestants in this year's pageant.

She was also honored for outstanding service as chairwoman of the Contact Committee for the Consolidated Chapter of the American Business Women and is a member of Access and Freedom for the Handicapped.

As Ms. Wheelchair Georgia, Barnett will serve as an advocate for the disabled, helping to increase public awareness of issues affecting disabled persons. Barnett will represent Georgia in the national pageant competing for the Ms. Wheelchair America crown.

Seminar focuses on abuse

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"It helps when working with child abuse cases to interface with and understand how cooperating agencies operate and under what guidelines they function," said Rebecca Welch, Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program manager.

More than 375 people sought that interaction and attended the "Child Abuse: Skills Training Conference" this week at the Columbus Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

Sponsors for the event included the Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program, the Columbus Regional Chartered Council on Child Abuse, Inc., and the University of Georgia.

Welch said more than 130 attended from Fort Benning with the others coming from the Columbus area and other installations.

She added that the post is fortunate to have a special prevention program to promote public awareness for the military community and coordinate professional intervention at all levels within the civilian and military communities involving health, police and legal professionals.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

A panel of experts provides information on referrals, resources, and restrictions at the child abuse conference.

"It takes all levels working together so that in the end the child and family benefit," she said.

Her goal is the best training for these professionals.

Joanne Cavis, president of the Columbus Regional Chartered Council on Child Abuse Inc., welcomed those attending the conference and noted that the 1990s are going to be a turning point shift from a "reactive to a proactive mentality" in this area.

The multi-disciplinary audience included teachers, principals, social workers, counselors, psychologists, physical and mental health professionals, police, prosecutors, juvenile court intake, custody and probation investigators, child advocates, child-care workers and others.

A faculty of 25 was recruited from throughout the United States to teach the 18 sessions that offer some 28 hours of professional training.

Issues covered at the conference were child abuse case identification, referrals, resources, restrictions, building healthier and stronger families, the child and the non-offending parent, medical assessment of sexually abused children, medical documentation, developmental concerns in these children, the family, child abuse case interviews, development and collection of evidence and prosecuting the offenders.

Safety carnival kicks off summer

Similar to the bike rodeos of the past, the Fort Benning Community Life Office will host a Mayors Safety Carnival May 30 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the Infantry Hall parking lot.

The Community Life mayors and the Infantry Branch Safety Office are hosting this as away to begin summer activities.

On hand will be the Military Police Activity's McGruff the Crime Dog, Blinky the Robot Car, a bicycle safety course, fingerprinting and videotaping of children, and Drug Abuse Resistance through Education handouts.

In addition, there will displays and demonstrations from the Red Cross, Coast Guard and others. Games will be held and prizes awarded.

BASS PROBABLY SEE QUITE WELL IN DINGY WATER

Just how well can largemouth bass see in dingy, muddy water?

Probably a lot better than most anglers think they can.

That's the opinion of top bass tournament pro Jerry Rhyne, a member of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff and a long-time student of bass habits and habitat.

"I believe a bass's eyes adjust to changing water conditions just like our eyes adjust to changing light," says Rhyne. "A fish may not see as well in really dingy water, but it just doesn't make sense that a bass becomes practically blind every time the water gets muddy. I have seen many times where lure color choice made a distinct difference in the number of fish I caught in muddy water, so I know bass can see under those conditions."

Rhyne's philosophy when fishing dingy, murky water is to follow the same rules he uses when fishing under clear or cloudy skies: use bright, clear lures on clear days and darker lures on overcast days.

"If you've ever fished much at night," the pro continues, "you know the most effective lures are usually dark colored ones, even if you're fishing on the bottom. Black and black/grape worms are probably the top lure for summer night fishing."

"Obviously the bass must be able to see them quite well, even though the light level is so low. I believe the same is true in murky water, too."

What is really important about Rhyne's observations is that anglers can use a wider choice of lures when fishing this type of water. Spinnerbaits and other vibrating lures have long been considered best for these conditions, but Rhyne has enjoyed excellent success with jigs and worms.

"Fishermen have believed bass detected lures in murky water by vibrations because they couldn't see," says Rhyne, "but I like to use a jig in muddy water, and it doesn't have much vibration at all."

"I know the bass are seeing the lure."

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Carson marks his final 'Tonight' on NBC

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

In many more ways than one, after this week, "Tonight" just won't be the same.

The moment of reckoning finally arrives Friday, as Johnny Carson ends his 30-year tenure as the host of NBC's late-night variety staple "The Tonight Show." The approach of Carson's retirement from the familiar desk and chair has been accorded the sort of attention usually paid to such matters as visits by foreign dignitaries. While great anticipation also surrounds Jay Leno's permanent inheritance of the job, starting next week, Carson's departure has stolen a certain amount of that thunder. Previously elusive guests such as Elizabeth Taylor have paid visits; a Burbank, Calif. park near the NBC studios recently was renamed after Carson; syndicated rival Arsenio Hall is running repeats of his own talk show all week, in deference to Carson's exit- and Allan Havey of cable's Comedy Channel will close down his own series for the night on Friday, encouraging viewers to switch to NBC instead for the milestone "Tonight" broadcast.

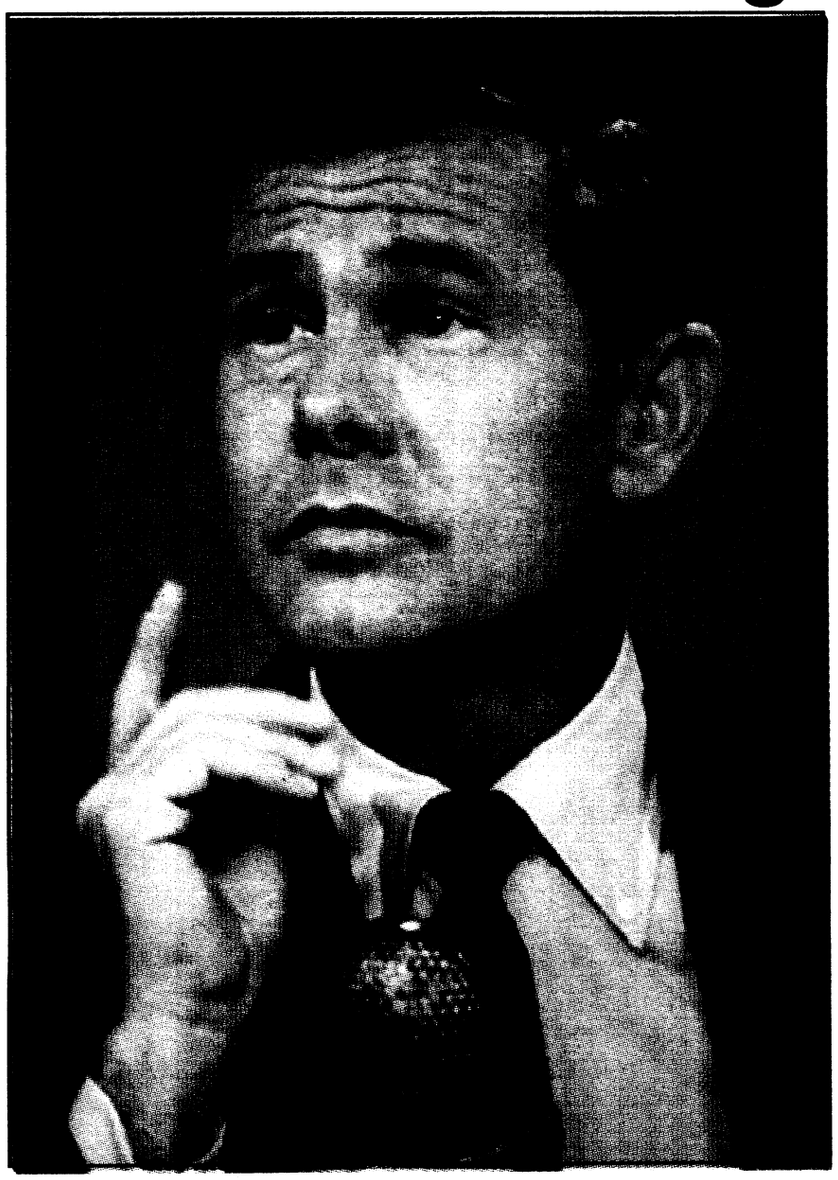
The latter event itself is slated to be a celebration of Carson's past three decades as the ratings king of network TV's wee hours, with sidekick Ed McMahon and bandleader Doc Severinsen - both of whom also are bidding farewell to "Tonight" - joining in an hour- long recollection bound to be highlighted by memorable clips, though Carson has been show-casing such moments nightly for the past month. Friday's in-studio audience is expected to consist solely of staff members and their invited guests and the result is very likely to garner "Tonight" its highest Nielsen numbers ever. Should that happen, it would supplant the record viewership set on Dec. 17, 1969, by the on-air wedding of singer Tiny Tim to his now-ex-wife Miss Vicki.



Johnny Carson 1962

Many "Tonight" workers are celebrating the fact that Carson has stayed as long as he has, according to Sotzing: "When we came up to his 20th anniversary in 1982 everybody said, 'Well, this'll be it. He's always said he'd go out when the show is hot, so it's gotta be this year.' Then, we got to the 25th anniversary, and we thought that would be it. Every year after that, we were sitting on pins and needles, hoping and praying that wouldn't be 'the' year. We were always prepared for it, though. To see the show change is not a bad thing. (Leno's) manager, Helen Kushnick, will become the executive producer- within the last eight months, she's basically taken over whenever he's been on (as guest host). Johnny would never want to get in the way of Jay's requests or the way he'd like to do the show, so when the Leno camp has been on, my responsibilities have basically become a technical role. Whatever support they've needed to make things happen, I've assisted them, but they've pretty much had their own input."

As familiar as Sotzing has become with Leno, so has exiting "Tonight" co-producer Jim McCawley, a 15-year veteran of the program. He says he first heard rumors of Leno replacing Carson "three or four years ago, and it was told to me by someone I believed really knew what they were talking about, then I told Jay. I said, 'They're going to give you this job, guy,' and he didn't seem to believe that at the time. He once took me for a ride to show off one of his cars, and he talked to me about his philosophy. He said he thought show business was like the Army: You came in as a private, you did your job and you didn't talk back, and if you were OK, you'd eventually get promoted to sergeant or whatever. He never thought he'd make five-star general, but he did. He didn't have the kind of ambition that became pushiness. He simply went about doing his job as well as he possibly could, confident that the rest of the machinery would work as it was supposed to."

Though the production aspects of "Tonight" largely have stayed the same in the months and weeks preceding Carson's swan song, McCawley admits that "Emotionally, it's been very intense. This unit works like a clock, so we're all quite

Cypress Gardens presents festival

Cypress Gardens

Cypress Gardens will be bulrsting with color this year when the park presents its first-ever Spring Flower Festival comprised of more than 150,000 blooming spring annuals.

Pansies, impatiens, begonias and many other varieties will create this stunning floral show. More than 88,000 bedding plants will comprise 10 floral topiaries, uniquely shaped as different animals and reaching up to 22 feet high.

Peacocks will show their brilliant colors; swans will grace the park with their beauty; a wise owl will watch over the grounds; and a rabbit will help usher in the spring season. This special display is included in the regular price of park admission.

The Spring Flower Festival is the newest addition to the park's outstanding lineup of seasonal floral festivals. Known for its world-famous botanical displays, Cypress Gardens also offers visitors the annual Mum Festival during November and a spectacular Poinsettia Festival during December through mid-January.

Cypress Gardens, an Anheuser-Busch theme park, is located off U.S. 27, 40 minutes southwest of Walt Disney World, one hour from Tampa or Orlando, and is open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. The single adult admission price is $18.95 (plus tax), which includes all shows and attractions; admission for children (3 to 9 years old) is $12.95 (plus tax). Children 2 and under are admitted free. Parking is also free.

Other Anheuser-Busch theme parks include Busch Gardens parks in Tampa, Fla., and Williamsburg, Va.; Sea World marine life parks in Orlando, Fla., San Diego, Calif., San Antonio, Texas, and Aurora, Ohio; Sesame Place in Langhorne, Pa.; and Adventure Island in Tampa.

Westville displays 'living history'

Westville Historic Handicrafts Inc.

On the weekend of May 23, there will be a special demonstration of 1836 living history.

Re-enactors in period clothing will demonstrate an encampment of soldiers who have been dispatched to protect local citizens against the incidents of Indian attacks which plagued Stewart county residents that spring and summer.

An Indian camp will also be demonstrated.

During the summer of 1836, the counties on the Chattahoochee below Columbus experienced Indian guerilla vandalism, skirmishes, raids and a few battles.

In Stewart County, the Battle of Shepard's Plantation made national news.

Both the governor and the president were embarrassed by their inability to protect white Americans from the "red-skinned depredators" who were not even supposed to be anywhere near their former home.

Some 50 white and black people lost their lives in that battle, but the Indians lost some 200. By the end of the summer, most of the remaining combatant Indians had fled to Florida.

Westville hopes that by showing these encampments, visitors will better sense the dynamics of white and Indian tensions of those times.

For more information, write Westville, P.O. Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815 or call (912) 838-6310.

Westville is located one-half mile from the town square in Lumpkin. The village is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Georgia offers several attractions

Georgia Department of Tourism

Now is the time to start planning this year's vacations and holidays. Georgia wants to be on the top of your list of places to visit.

To give you an idea of some of the new pleasures that await you in Georgia, read on for a region-by-region description of the best of the new in Georgia.

Atlanta and vicinity

Atlanta is preparing for the 1996 summer Olympics, from the nearly-completed Georgia Dome (home of the 1994 Super Bowl) and Fernbank Museum of Natural history to the expansion of the Georgia World Congress Center and the Atlanta History Center. As you visit popular Underground Atlanta, partake of the Olympic Experience interactive video. A short distance away, you'll find the Celebrity Walk, a version of the Hollywood Walk of Fame, connecting Cable News Network and the Georgia World Congress Center with the Georgia Dome and Peachtree Center.

Ever-popular Six Flags will debut the Ninja, the blackbelt of roller coasters. Blackbelt shoppers will be delighted to find a rejuvenated Phipps Plaza.

Augusta area

This eastern region of Georgia is a hotbed of activity. In Waynesboro, see a new cotton display in the Burke County Museum.

The old Lafayette Hotel in Sparta has been restored and reopened; it is now referred to as the Drummer's Home. In Lincolnton, visit the Nay House, a restored doctor's home located in the new Lincoln County Historical Park.

In Augusta, the Woodrow Wilson boyhood home is now open to the public.

Golfers drawn to Augusta because of the Masters will find Point South Golf Club, 18 holes open to the public.

Savannah and vicinity

Georgia's coast spans several hundred years of history. Savannah, recently voted one of the 10 premier walking cities by Walking Magazine, makes the most of its past and present. Take to the rivers with its re-launched riverboats, First Lady Savannah and Savannah River Queen.

The Lucas Theatre for Performing Arts is being restored to open in 1992 and the Savannah Civic Center is expanding and at least one new hotel, Radisson Plaza Hotel, joins Savannah's finest.

The Central of Georgia Railroad Roundhouse Complex offers a glimpse into the railroads of yesteryear.

Mark September 9 to 13 on your calendar, as Savannah hosts its first annual Maritime Festival.

Family favorite, Jekyll Island, is home to a new marina and St. Marys, the stop-off for Cumberland Island, offers a new bed and breakfast, The Historic Spencer House Inn.

Macon and vicinity

This region offers stunning glimpses into the past that was the antebellum era.

Madison, the town that Sherman forgot to burn, is home to the new Burnett Place, an 1830 Federal-style house on the old stagecoach road from Charleston to New Orleans. Mara's Tara, in the heart of the historic district, debuts in Milledgeville, one of Georgia's early capitals.

In Athens, home of the University of Georgia, you can stay at the Hutchens-Hardeman House, located on a 60-acre antebellum plantation horse and pony farm.

McRae and vicinity

Midlands is filled with festivals year-round. There's lots of good eating, from Statesboro (home of Braswell Foods and Sunny South Pecans) to Eastman (home of Stuckey's Candy).

Gainesville and vicinity

The Appalachian Mountains are one of the world's oldest chains, but the pleasures of travelling there are ever-new. Georgia's gold mining town, Dahlonega, is home to a new mine, Consolidated, and a new winery, Cavender Castle.

If you like the great outdoors, Amicalola Falls Lodge offers a way to be outdoors without roughing it.

In Loganville, you can get close to nature in a different way at Vines Botanical Gardens. In Gainesville, the George E. Coleman Sr. Planetarium at North Georgia College offers the great outdoors of the space variety. Also near Gainesville is Chickopee Woods, a golf course, agricenter and nature center. Smithville Village offers an antiques shop, wedding chapel and tea room.

Albany and vicinity

This region's hunting plantations provide sport of one kind, while several large lakes offer delights for water enthusiasts. By summer, Chehaw Wild Animal Park near Albany will offer the attraction of an Indian Village in addition to its contingent of native and exotic animals.

Columbus and vicinity

Pine Mountain Animal Village is a 500-acre park with over 200 species of free roaming animals as well as a petting zoo.

In Americus, the historic Windsor Hotel re-emerges to evoke its earlier glory.

Army's top NCO visits post

SMA Kidd listens to soldiers

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Army's top non-commissioned officer visited Fort Benning Monday through Wednesday to observe training and visit with soldiers.

Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd's itinerary included an address and a question-and-answer period with enlisted soldiers in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Tuesday morning.

About 900 soldiers from the ranks of private through command sergeant major attended the session, which Kidd said was designed to allow soldiers to air their concerns and questions about today's Army.

Kidd opened his remarks by thanking them for serving their country, emphasizing that all those who served during Desert Shield and Desert Storm were to be commended, whether their duty was overseas or in the states.

"Regardless of where you were serving, you were doing what your country needed you to do," he said.

Kidd's second point was that as sergeant major of the Army, his purpose is to represent enlisted soldiers before Congress and the government. "The only way I can do that well is to talk with you and your families and to find out what your questions and issues are," he said.

Willie Hay

Spc. Antonio Alvarez, a tactical fire specialist with Headquarters and Headquarters Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), briefs Sgt. Maj. of the Army Richard A. Kidd on his unit's tactical fire communications shelter.

Kidd asked for questions from the audience; and, for more than an hour, he discussed issues and concerns with those present.

Questions covered topics from pay to quarters, child care to wear of the uniform. Army policy on abortion, homosexuality and AIDS were discussed, as well as future plans for on-post facilities and services.

Kidd stressed soldier input for most local issues, including the hours that child care is available. "We encourage you to play a part in everything that happens," he said. "Go to your town meetings, let your chain of command know if you have a problem or a question." The Army is considering making changes in billets, Kidd said, with the goal of establishing a "two plus two" system, with no more than two soldiers to a room and two rooms to share a latrine.

"Dormitory" barracks, with less restriction and supervision than is now standard, are being tested in Europe, he said, although there are no definite plans yet for adopting dormitory barracks Armywide.

Kidd's personal goal before completing his Army career, he said, is to have approved an 11 percent pay increase, which would balance Army base pay with the cost of living. Kidd said inflation has outpaced pay increases by 11 percent over the last few years.

In response to a question relating to an Army change of policy on homosexuality and abortion, Kidd said that federal guidelines determine Army policy. The policy barring homosexuals from military service still stands.

Kidd emphasized that the Army is facing changes caused by the drawdown and cuts in funding, but improvements are continually being implemented.

"This is a different Army than it was when I joined 30 years ago," he said, "and there's a lot more offered to today's soldiers. Today we have soldiers looking to the Army for discipline, for education, skill training and a way to improve their lives. We have the best Army we've ever had."

498th returns

By Richard Brill

Twenty-two members of the 498th Medical Company, 34th Medical Battalion, returned from Honduras May 15 after a deployment of more than five months.

The returning troops, who arrived on a U.S. Air Force C-5 transport plane, were greeted at Lawson Army Airfield by friends and family members, members of the unit, Battalion Commander Lt. Col Frank Novier and 498th Medical Company Commander Maj. Kenneth Crook.

In addition to the returning soldiers, three UH-60 helicopter air ambulances, used by the 498th during its deployment, were aboard the C-5.

The 22 soldiers deployed to Honduras Jan. 5 to support Joint Task Force Bravo out of Soto Cano Airbase, said Crook.

"The unit provided medical and air evacuation support to the task force and also flew some civilian missions for the Honduran government," said Crook.

He said that the operation was very successful.

"It went very well. I think we set a standard for MEDEVAC support," Crook said.

Hot dogs, pony rides and real pride in the men and women of the armed forces were the order of the day Saturday when Fort Benning celebrated Armed Forces Day and the annual Association of the United States Army picnic.

The events on York, Stewart and Watson Fields were highlighted by a Silver Wings exhibition, a parade and the crowning of two Ms. AUSAs — Pvt. 2 Patricia Paquette of Company E, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment and Davilyn Souter, Department of the Army civilian employee for the U.S. Army Dental Activity.

Various units on post provided military equipment displays and personnel to explain the functions of the equipment. There were interunit competitions, to include several races.

Diversions for younger family members included a kiddie jump tower, children's pony rides and several game booths.

Food and beverages were also made available, as well as entertainment provided by Miss Columbus Denise Daniels and the Miss Georgia Superstars.

Management college available

DEH employee John Baggett named recent honor grad

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A 14-week school, the Army Management Staff College at Alexandria, Va., offers sustaining base management training for senior Army civilians and military personnel, both active duty and Reserve.

In operation since 1987, the college provides a broad understanding of the whole process of installation management, according to honor graduate, John Baggett, Fort Benning deputy director of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

Baggett recently returned after attending the Jan. 13 to April 17 class and says he's "sold on it."

"With an emphasis on leadership, the college brings a cohesiveness and bonding to the elements of the total Army culture so that we all understand each other better," he said, "both the similarities and differences."

There were 101 people in his session with 10 percent of them being majors and lieutenant colonels, but the rest were civilians in grades 12, 13 and 14.

A total of 12 courses were taught on military forces and doctrine, national security strategy and strategic studies, force integration, resource management, acquisition/logistics management, sustaining base management, information management, leadership and management, the Army personnel system, health and fitness, communicative skills and decision making.

According to Patty Pfeiffer, chief of Training and Development for the Directorate of Civilian Personnel, an employee from Fort Benning must first be recommended by his or her supervisor; second, a lengthly application form must be completed; and third, the person must be endorsed by the post commanding general.

The class is offered three times a year by a staff that operates under the Training and Doctrine Command. Half of the session is conducted in large groups, and the rest in small groups of 12 to 13 people.

It is the small group instructor who selects an honor graduate from that section. Baggett was one of nine honor graduates from his class.

Conducted at the college graduate level, the Army Management Staff College is a rigorous course of instruction with four two-hour exams, about 12 to 15 papers of four to six pages and numerous oral presentations.

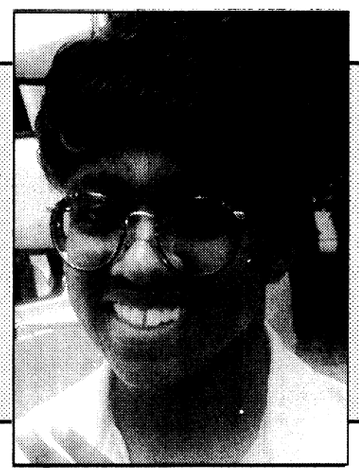
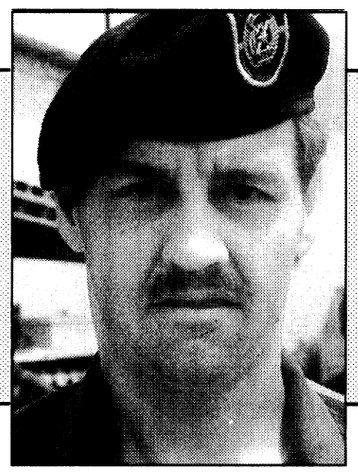
VARIOUS VOICES

What can Fort Benning do to become an Army Community of Excellence?

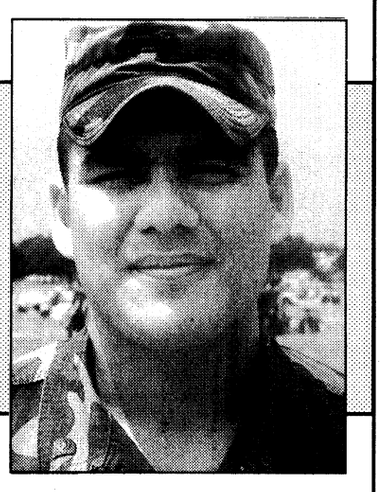
Spc. Phillip Sharper, 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge), 36th Engineer Group — "It would be a better post if the finance section would concentrate on better customer service for the soldier. That would really boost the morale of soldiers on post."



Spc. Felicia Holland, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "To make Fort Benning an Army Community of Excellence, sick call procedures and the waiting time should be streamlined and fine tuned to take less time."



Air Force Staff Sgt. Andrew Liermann, Detachment 4, 507th Air Control Wing — "Fort Benning should offer more services and facilities for members of other military branches who are stationed here."



Spc. Jamie Gonzalez, Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I think Fort Benning is already a community of excellence. I've never had any problems since I've been stationed here."

Staff Sgt. Benton Wade, Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "To make Fort Benning a community of excellence, I think the civilian employees who work here need to remeber that their jobs are primarily to serve the soldier, not the other way around."

Staff Sgt. Larry McEntarffer, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "The services and facilities on Fort Benning are fine. I think that soldiers should be briefed properly on certain procedures like ditty moves."

Self-Help a blessing for quarters

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The Bayonet staff was chilling out at Sarge's Custer Terrace abode when Karen came back to report that the bathroom faucet leaked.

"Don't worry," Sarge said, "I'll just put out my maintenance sign and someone from the engineers will come by and fix it."

"Wow," I said, impressed. "You guys in family quarters get free utilities, pay no rent and you even get house calls by plumbers and electricians. I don't suppose the post does your yard, too?"

"They don't do the yard, but I can get flowers and seed and fertilizer from Self-Help for free."

I scratched myself contemplatively. I didn't realize quarters were such a deal. Maybe putting up with certain restrictions, making sure the lawn was mowed, not having enough parking space, were minor inconveniences to put up with.

In the civilian community we can live like pigs — park on the lawn, leave beer cans on the front porch, refuse to pick up the newspaper.

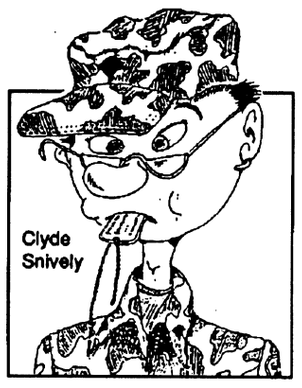
But we also pay a surety deposit plus a month's pay in advance, run the air conditioner only on the hottest of days, unless we plan to sell the first born child to pay a month's electric bill. And, of course, we have a long commute. If it's a PT day, the choice is either two long commutes or trying to decide what to do with ourselves from 7 a.m. until work starts.

I was mulling over this when Spc. Fix-it, who also lives on post, said he did all his own repairs.

"I get whatever I need from Self-Help to include some great instructions from those guys down there. By the time I leave Fort Benning, I'm going to be a master carpenter and electrician."

"Boo," everyone hissed at Goody-two Shoes.

That's when assistant Sarge, also known around the office as



"Gloom and Doom," said that with budget cuts and all she figured that sooner or later all on post people would be doing their own minor plumbing work and other minor repairs.

"After all, we're all supposed to be adults, taking care of ourselves. Uncle Sam is our employer, not our baby sitter," she said.

"Easy enough for you to say," Spc. All Thumbs said. "I can't draw a straight line with a ruler. A hammer is high-tech equipment for me. I fall over trying to lace my boots."

"Hey," Spc. Fix-it said, "the chief at the do-it-yourself boutique will square you away. He can tell you how to build a house. It's a snap man."

Spc. Thumbs didn't look too certain about this, but said nothing.

Gloom and Doom started talking again. As an off-post soldier, it didn't phase me, but if I were living on post, I might have had some angst.

She said she'd heard the drive to meter on-post housing was back on and that those who used too much electricity might get a bill from the post.

Naturally, I thought that only fair, but not Thumbs. "We already give up our quarters allowance and now they want to make us pay for utilities!" he said.

Sarge told him she didn't think it would happen while he was still in the Army, but if the budget keeps getting cut back, one never knows. "That's why we need to pitch in and help save, now."

We all left Sarge's feeling rather depressed.

Defense secretary honors the past

On Memorial Day, as sounds of taps echo throughout the United States, we think of all Americans who have died in the service of our country.

Our nation's strength, founded on your vigilance and skill and the courage of those we honor today, has played a central role in laying the foundation of a new world order.

Since the last year, we have witnessed the the end of hostile relations with the former Soviet Union and the beginning of new relationships. But we still see the other challenges and dangers ahead in the world. Ultimately, we hope to enjoy a lasting peace founded on freedom.

You, the men and women of today's armed forces, help us honor Americans who have given their lives for freedom. Everyday, as you renew your pledge to keep our country strong and ready, you provide the most fitting monument to the memory of the heroes who have gone before. I join all Americans in thanking you for your service to America and in remembering those who gave their lives for liberty.

Post officials warn against dangers of heat

The Fort Benning summer can be very harsh to soldiers involved in outdoor physical training. Heat injuries are critical for they present a high risk of fatality if the body temperature soars out of control. Once a soldier suffers a heat injury, he or she is more susceptible to additional heat injuries.

All leaders must be actively involved in the prevention of heat injuries. Total prevention of heat injuries is difficult because the heat tolerance of individuals varies considerably and one's tolerance changes from day to day. Leaders must stay alert to ensure that soldiers are not tasked beyond their limits. Each soldier must be taught to recognize heat injury symptoms in their buddies. Combat effectiveness will be greatly enhanced when soldiers watch out for each other.

Now is the time to educate leaders in the prevention, recognition and treatment of heat injuries. Pocket cards (FB Card 126, Heat Injury Prevention) provide guidance for the prevention and treatment of heat injuries and are available from Post Publications, Building 2409. These cards, used with the Wet Globe Temperature Index, which can be obtained anytime by dialing 545-5281, give definitive instructions on conducting safe physical training.

Major unit commanders are tasked with ensuring that all military personnel receive heat injury prevention training. Reference U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 40-14, September 10, Prevention of Heat Injury, paragraph 3b(2).

Aggressive heat injury prevention will increase combat readiness and reduce the risk of a fatal injury.

Soldiers asked to support bond campaign

The national theme for the U.S. Savings Bond Campaign.is "Making American Dreams A Reality."

Buying savings bonds is a secure and easy way for each of us to invest for our future personal financial security. Additionally, it provides an immediate method for us to do our part in reducing the national debt of our country.

During this year's campaign, a savings bond canvasser will meet with you to explain the benefits of buying savings bonds and to answer your questions about the program. If you are not participating, you will be asked to join the Payroll Savings Plan. If you are already a member, you will be encouraged to increase your current allotment.

The market-based interest rate on savings bonds earns high interest and has a guaranteed minimum return. Interest is exempt from state and local income taxes, and federal income tax can be deferred. Carefully consider how bonds can help you achieve your saving goals; then make the right choice by signing up for the Payroll Savings Plan or increasing your present allotment.

Our Savings Bond Campaign will be conducted through May 31. When one of your fellow employees calls on you, please consider how bonds can help you meet your future needs and then sign up for payroll savings or increase your current allotment. It's a smart way to save.

Remember that when you buy savings bonds you help your country, you help your family, and you help yourself.

Trash fire breaks out on Sand Hill

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

A recent trash fire on Sand Hill has raised questions concerning the proper disposal of hazardous materials.

Trash inside of a Fort Benning garbage truck burst into flames the morning of May 14, the result of a chemical reaction between various items present in the trash.

According to Fire Chief Arthur Simmons, the driver heard an explosion and saw flames coming out of the truck. Upon calling the post fire department, he was instructed to dump the trash on the ground and await the arrival of fire-fighting personnel.

The driver was not hurt and the fire was easily contained and extinguished, Simmons said.

"It's hard to say exactly what happened," said Simmons. "We think the explosion was caused by hydrogen gas that was given off from lithium batteries that were in the trash. Lithium batteries produce hydrogen when they come into contact with water. The hydrogen gas was probably ignited by the presence of chlorine bleach and brake fluid in the trash, which, when mixed together, can ignite spontaneously."

Simmons added that investigation of the trash revealed the presence of smoke grenades and blank rounds, but that these had nothing to do with starting the fire because the rounds had not gone off and the grenades had already been used when they were thrown away.

Although the munitions did not cause the fire, Jerry Gayler, chief of the Ammunition Supply Point, emphasized that trash cans are not the proper place to dispose of such items.

Fort Benning, he said, has definite safeguards concerning the issue and disposal of munitions.

"Once training is complete, units are supposed to return all unused ammunition and residue, including the cartons and boxes the ammunition was packed in, to the Ammunition Supply Point for turn in. Everything that is issued from the supply point should be returned," he said.

Gayler also encouraged soldiers to take advantage of the amnesty program.

"If a unit or an individual comes across some ammunition or has some ammunition, they can turn it in, no questions asked, here at the Ammunition Supply Point, building 6000. Individual units also have amnesty boxes where ammunition can be placed, again, no questions asked," Gayler said.

Expert explains proper disposal

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Trash cans are not the proper place to dispose of hazardous materials, according to Maj. John Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division.

He said that lithium batteries, even if they are dead, should be returned to unit supply personnel for proper disposal.

Oils, such as brake fluid and motor oil, can be disposed of at unit motor pools, and he also encouraged soldiers who change the oil on their personally owned vehicles to dispose of waste oil at their unit motor pools.

Orosz said that units should have material safety data sheets for any hazardous products that they possess. These sheets contain information about safety precautions and proper disposal methods.

Unit safety and chemical officers, he said, should ensure that their units have these sheets and that their personnel understand proper disposal procedures.

"Also, units should only keep on hand as much of a particular item as they are going to need or use. This is one of the key principles of waste management," Orosz said.

Units can turn in excess unused supplies of chemicals and hazardous items to the Directorate of Logistics' free turn in point.

Orosz said that a pamphlet outlining the procedures for proper disposal of hazardous materials will soon be distributed to units postwide. People can also call the Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing if they have questions or need assistance in disposing of hazardous materials.

Orosz also emphasized that improper disposal of waste materials can carry both civil and criminal penalties.

"The idea of sovereign immunity, that because we are government employees or soldiers we are immune to prosecution is false when it comes to improper hazardous materials disposal," he said.

As a final reminder, Orosz said that hazardous materials should never be mixed together.

"In the long run it will make it harder to dispose of the chemicals and it may cause a fire, destroy the containers they are in, cause poisonous gas to be released or cause some other type of chemical reaction," he said.

Residents 'stomp' pests

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

When people think of pest control, different images come to mind. Some think of a national brand pest control service man with his industrialized-sized vats of pesticide coming to the rescue. Some think of pest control as a giant can of insect spray. Still others think of it as a well-placed foot.

The post Self-Help facility, building 385, has items available for soldiers and their family members to help keep quarters virtually pest-free, according to post entomologist Ruth Sponsler.

Self-Help is authorized to issue pesticides and materials that are recommended for control of minor pest problems, such as cockroaches, mice, ants and flies on Army installations, said Sponsler.

A pesticide used for control of fire ants is also issued through the Self-Help, because fire ants are very common on Fort Benning, said Sponsler.

The pesticides available at Self-Help do not require any mixing and should be fairly easy to use and are extremely safe to use around people and pets, said Sponsler.

Proper sanitation methods used in and around the quarters, in conjunction with pesticides available at the Self-Help facility should help keep the quarters pest free, said Sponsler.

Pest control products like these are available for post residents at Self-Help.

DARE students to graduate

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning Schools and the Military Police Activity announce the graduation of 137 sixth-grade students from DARE, or Drug Abuse Resistance Education, at the Faith School gym Wednesday at 11:30 a.m.

The program is open to parents of all graduates. The ceremony is one way Faith School recognizes these students who have studied and learned skills to resist peer pressure to experiment with tobacco, drugs and alcohol. DARE graduates receive a certificate of completion from Faith's principal Olin Harp. They also receive a DARE bumper sticker and a DARE pin.

The featured graduation speaker Benny Lee Wright, chief of Department of Defense police at Fort Benning. A selected group of DARE students will share their personal essays on taking a stand against drugs on taking a stand against drugs.

DARE lessons are taught by active-duty uniformed police officers. At Fort Benning, Lt. Walter Jackson (DoD police officer) serves as DARE coordinator and primary instructor. Jackson teaches 17 one-hour lessons dealing with decision-making skills and techniques for resisting peer pressure in a variety of situations not strictly related to substance abuse.

CHAMPUS expands services

CHAMPUS Select

Martin Army Community Hospital officials recently announced the expansion of medical services available through the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services Select Program.

"This program has really started to make progress, reported Lt. Col. Charles Bottoms, chief of the Coordinated Care Division at Martin Army.

CHAMPUS Select has been operational now in the Fort Benning area for some time and offers CHAMPUS-eligible beneficiaries a convenient, cost-effective alternative to standard CHAMPUS when necessary services aren't available at Martin Army Hospital.

The CHAMPUS Select network of preferred civilian health care providers includes The Medical Center and The Bradley Center hospitals and a number of doctors and other health-care professionals who have agreed to accept lower fees for their services in anticipation of seeing more CHAMPUS patients. Those who use a CHAMPUS Select provider also benefit from paying a reduced cost-share, the portion of the health-care claim that beneficiaries are responsible for paying.

Col. Vernon Spaulding, hospital commander, said he is especially pleased that if a beneficiary is unable to be cared for at Martin Army Community Hospital or another military hospital, he or she has the option of using a CHAMPUS Select civilian provider and benefit from the following:

— Lower out-of-pocket costs due to reduced cost-shares and negotiated provider fees.

• Less paperwork; health care claims are completed and submitted by CHAMPUS Select providers.

• Easy access to doctors and hospitals; a number of primary care doctors, specialists and mental health professionals as well as general medical and surgical and mental health hospital services are available.

• No premiums; this is not a supplemental CHAMPUS insurance plan.

CHAMPUS Select is not only operational at Fort Benning, but throughout five southeastern states: Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee. This means that a CHAMPUS beneficiary who is either stationed at or traveling to any of these areas can take advantage of the cost- and time-saving benefits of CHAMPUS Select.

"The program has been very successful in saving money for beneficiaries as well as for the Department of Defense," stated John Wynn, CHAMPUS Select coordinator.

From October through February, the program has saved beneficiaries nearly $1.4 million as a result of negotiated provider fees and reduced cost-shares.

• The Department of Defense has realized more than $2.4 million in net savings during this same period. These savings will continue to grow incrementally as most providers join the network and beneficiary awareness of the cost-saving benefits of this program increases. "As the CHAMPUS Select program continues to develop, laboratory and radiology services along with medical specialties not presently covered are scheduled to be added," said Wynn.

CHAMPUS Select prepares quarterly directories that offer information about the program and how to locate its network of providers.

Nearly 1,500 CHAMPUS Select health-care provider directories have been distributed in the Fort Benning area to-date. Beneficiaries who are interested in receiving a current copy of the directory should call the CHAMPUS Select office at 682-5949.

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Veterans of Operation Desert Storm will can pin another medal on their chests.

The Kuwait Liberation Medal has been authorized to be worn by soldiers who served in the war zone from Jan. 17, 1991, to Feb. 28, 1991, said Justine Vance of the Adjutant General's Office.

The war zone includes the Persian Gulf, Red Sea, Gulf of Oman, Gulf of Aden, the portion of the Arabian Sea north of 10 degrees north latitude and west of 68 degrees east longitude or the total land areas of Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates.

Additionally, one must have served at least one or more days with an organization participating in ground, shore, or air operations, to include serving on a naval vessel or as a crewmember aboard an aerial flight in direct support of military operations

When worn on the uniform, the medal is ranked last in order of precedence, just after the Republic of Vietnam Campaign medal.

Vance said that the medals will be distributed on Fort Benning through unit supply clerks to eligible soldiers.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from May 6 to 12. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt or innocence of any person.

• A private was charged with larceny of nonappropriated fund property after he was observed placing a $1.70 can of snuff in his pocket and exiting the store without making payment.

• Two people were charged with traffic accidents after they failed to secure their vehicles. One failed to engage the parking brake and the other failed to place the vehicle in park. Both vehicles rolled into other vehicles, causing minor damages.

• A family member was charged with theft by conversion after he removed a signed check from underneath a cash register of an on-post establishment. The family member then made the check out in the name of his girlfriend in the amount of $104.56.

• A sergeant reported that she had been assaulted and raped by her ex-husband at her quarters on post. The subject was apprehended while trying to leave post. The individual also had an outstanding warrant for his arrest by the civil authorities.

• A specialist was charged with driving under the influence after he was stopped for crossing the center line. The specialist was also charged with failure to obey an order or regulation after a check of the post driving suspension roster revealed that the soldier had been charged with driving under the influence in April. The specialist registered a .21 gms on the intoximeter.

• A specialist was charged with aggravated assault and discharging a firearm in city limits. The specialist followed a civilian to his house and fired three rounds at him, shooting him in the arm.

• A private first class was charged with larceny of government property and two specialists were charged with receiving stolen property. The private first class stole a night vision device valued at $8,000 and gave it to a specialist to dispose of, who then gave it to another specialist.

• Three juveniles were charged with theft and criminal trespassing and a fourth was charged with being a party to a crime. The individuals reportedly broke into a contractor's storage shed and stole numerous items from within it and caused damage to other items.

• Other activity included five domestic assaults that stemmed from verbal altercations. There were seven reports of shoplifting and three soldiers were charged with the wrongful use of a controlled substance. There were 17 traffic accidents reported, several of which were caused by drivers traveling too fast for road conditions. Drivers must remember that posted speed limit signs are for ideal road conditions and that during inclement weather vehicle speed should be reduced to avoid accident or injury.

• Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best - Give Crime Arrest!"

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or the "Crime in Progress" line, 545-2222, if it is warranted.

MANAGEMENT: Fort Benning civilian finds planning pays off at Army college

Physical fitness knowledge is emphasized, along with the importance of setting a good example.

Baggett said they were all required to take the Army Physical Fitness Test for their age groups.

They also took the class through the Leaders Reaction Course for junior officers at the Quantico Marine Base as a lesson in team-building.

"We learned to depend on each other," he said.

Baggett knows of only one other person that has been sent from Fort Benning, but now that he's been there, he thinks enough of the experience to plan on selectively nominating others to go.

"Of course, the installation suffers the absence of the person for 14 weeks and the payment of that person's salary, but the college is centrally funded by TRADOC, which picks up the bill for the class," he said.

Pfeiffer said the college is important for career development. In the past, enrollment for each session was limited to about 100. For fiscal 1993, that has been changed to 200.

Class dates for 1993 are Jan. 11 to April 26, May 10 to Aug. 13, and Sept. 13 to Dec. 17.

There is a six-month advance planning requirement, so those wishing to attend the first class in 1993 must turn in their applications by July 1.

"My wife was supportive of the experience," Baggett added, "and now I know contacts all across the Army whom I can call about challenges similar to mine."

With 28 years of federal service under his belt, Baggett has served in the active duty Army at Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia, Pa.

He has also served in DEH at Fort Benning as a mechanical engineer, chief of Engineering and Services Branch and chief of the Engineering Division.

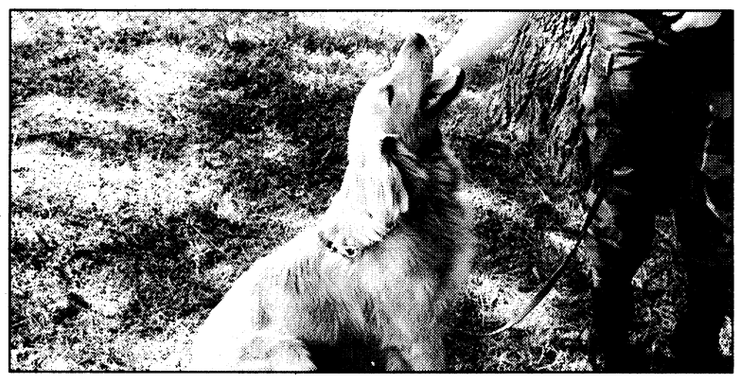
PET OF THE WEEK



This is "Fortunate", and he is looking for a home. Thought to be about one-year-old, he appears to be a retriever/Irish setter mix. He was found after looking like he had been in a fight with another animal but is recovering nicely. If you would like to adopt him or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Esau Bright works on his upper body .

11th Inf. soldier works his body

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Esau Bright, a staff sergeant with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment builds the muscles on his body with hopes of winning a title in bodybuilding. The Fort Benning Mr. and Ms. Bodybuilding Championships will take place June 6 at the Officers' Club, and Bright plans to be there with muscles shining. Bright lifts weights six days a week working on different body parts each day.

Bright's usual workout lasts no more than two hours a day; if he's there any longer than that, he says he's wasting his time.

Bright doesn't worry about calories because his diet is so regimented that it doesn't matter.

He eats eight to 10 egg whites with a bowl of oatmeal for breakfast. Lunch consists of a baked potato, salad and a couple of chicken breasts.

Dinner will include fish or chicken, rice and another baked potato. In between meals, Bright snacks on fruit to keep up his energy.

Bright started lifting weights in 1983 when he was in Germany; the only sports they had in his unit were softball and basketball.

Bright didn't play either sport so he and a couple of friends started going to the gym and lifting weights; it kept him out of trouble and did wonders for his body.

They started their own powerlifting club with five friends, which grew to 12 and then incorporated other units. Some of Brights' German friends talked him into entering a contest; he did well and he's been at it ever since.

Bright has only one problem with bodybuilding — anabolic steroids.

"When I go into the gym and work out to produce muscle and another guy takes a drug to enhance his body, it's not fair to those of us who play by the rules," said Bright. "Besides that, the drug itself is detrimental to your health. It's not as bad as it was a few years ago, but you can still see when it's being used. "

Bright also said, "Right now there is no testing for the drug in competition, so people are going to use it until they start testing. I wish they would start now."

A soldier for more than 14 years, Bright plans to enter as many shows in the Columbus area as he can along with a show in Atlanta, and see what happens from there.

He would also like to see younger people get involved in the sport.

"The sport is definitely going places and we need the young people to get involved to show there is another sport out there besides the regular ones," said Bright. "Most of the people involved with bodybuilding nowadays are in their late 20s and early 30s."

This will be Brights' third year in the Fort Benning Mr. and Ms. bodybuilding contest and this year he hopes to shine bright all the way to the top.

The Fort Benning Tae Kwon Do School's Sudden Impact played host to the Fort Benning Karate School's Sidekicks at Briant Wells Fieldhouse Saturday. The teams fought to a draw.

The tournament, put together by both coaches from each school, was for fun and to give the students a feel for competition.

Trophies were given to the first and second place winners with a team trophy going to the Sidekicks. Each team won five of the 10 matches with a total of 20 points each going toward the team trophy.

According to Coach Edward Givans of the Tae Kwon Do School "We gave the team trophy to the Sidekicks because we were the host club. The one thing we thought wouldn't happen did."

Kelley Hill's new fitness track opens

3rd Brigade and 36th Engineer soldiers work together to complete running path

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Together in war, together in peace.

That was the theme sounded by Col. Robert J. St. Onge Jr., commander of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, and Col. Phillip R. Anderson, commander of the 36th Engineer Group, as the two leaders joined May 15 in opening the Kelley Hill physical fitness track on Artillery Field.

"The 36th Engineer Group and the 3rd Brigade share post support, went to war together and represent the bulk of the Forces Command units on this post," St. Onge said. "I think it's really neat that we are cooperating together to do some things that allow us to support each other."

"Not only do we continue to provide support on troop construction projects, but more importantly we're more ready to go to war should our country call upon us again as they did during Desert Shield and Desert Storm," said Anderson, whose 43rd Engineer Battalion built the new one-half mile track, which is outlined with landscaped timber and 15-foot borders.

According to 1st Lt. Gino Carr, a platoon leader with Company A, 43rd Engr. Bn., his soldiers also placed 50 feet of corrugated steel in the rear culvert and 30 feet of corrugated steel in the front culvert to allow for proper drainage of the track.

"You might ask, what would culverts be without headwalls?" Carr said. "To maximize our training experience, we received training in placing and removing headwalls and culverts. Needless to say, this ribbon-cutting ceremony was long awaited for us."

"I'm proud of the job that our engineers did here," said Anderson. "This track is something you've needed for a long time to support your PT program. I know you're delighted to have it, and you share my pride in these fine soldiers and the job they've done."

"We needed this track," St. Onge agreed. "Including the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry, there are 6,000 soldiers on this hill that have had to go all the way to Main Post to take their PT test.

"It's a great addition to the facilities here on Kelley Hill," St. Onge continued. "This track is going to save us many man-hours trucking soldiers down to Main Post to take their PT test outside Infantry Hall."

"Now, we can run them up here to take the PT test and run them back," he added jokingly. "That's probably very fitting because it will make it a 4-mile run instead of a 2-mile event."

Among the other joint projects involving the two units is an ongoing effort to construct concrete sidewalks along all the roads on Kelley Hill.

"That's truly a project where we're working together," St. Onge said. "You're providing the expertise and the equipment, and we're providing some of the labor. Our guys are learning, and we're getting the project done in short order."

Memorial Day: Already paid for

By Gil Richardson
1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment

REFLECTIONS

Memorial Day weekend — picnics, cookouts, Frisbee, softball, swimming pools opening for the season — is the unofficial passage from spring to summer. Children count the remaining school days on one or two hands. Soldiers see a three-, perhaps four-day weekend as a road trip on pass somewhere or to "chill out" in the local area.

A father runs to the local market to get the essentials for the outing: ice, charcoal, lighter, buns, hamburgers, hot dogs, paper plates, ketchup, mustard, chips and of course, soda and/or beer to wash it down. His child who has more unanswered questions than the tabloids in the checkout line asks, "Daddy, why was that flag only halfway up the pole?"

Keeping his eyes on the road and his mind on the shopping list, he replies, "It's for Memorial Day... we remember all the people who died in war."

"Is that why we're having a picnic?"

"Yeah, we kind of celebrate every year."

Strolling with child in tow toward the door, he encounters a veterans' group selling poppies. Fumbling for change to give his child to hand to the volunteer, he comes up with only keys and lint. Smiling, he pulls out his wallet to see he has only one dollar. His other hand instinctively reaches for his checkbook to ensure he can pay for the groceries, but comes up empty. He bites the four-letter word he would have used if his child and this nice lady weren't there. Handing the woman his only dollar, he snatches the child's hand and heads for the car. "We've got to go back to the house. I don't have any money or checks with me."

Alarmed, the little one squeals, "What about the food, Daddy? Who's going to pay for the food at the picnic?"

Who, indeed, has already paid for it?

Look at the first Memorial Day in Waterloo, N.Y., May 5, 1866. With volunteer regiments in the Civil War, some counties and towns that had raised dozens or hundreds of soldiers saw only handfuls or dozens return home. Many of the veterans lost limbs or sight; all of them lost friends and relatives they had known all their lives.

Union Army veterans and families of the deceased gathered for a solemn ceremony, then placed flowers on graves. Frisbees, pool parties, and softball had no place in this solemn day of remembrance.

In '82 and '83, I was privileged to attend Memorial Day ceremonies with the 3rd Armored Division at the American Cemetery near Margraten, the Netherlands. It was always moving to see more than 7,000 crosses and stars of David.

Beneath each stone lay the remains of a soldier or airman killed in World War II. Beneath each stone was an unique story complete with dreams, a hometown, loved ones, pride, and grief. We always laid a wreath on the grave of Maj. Gen. Maurice Ross, the Spearhead commander killed at the front in March 1945. No one escaped a lump in the throat or blinked back tears when we saw yearly the nearby grave with fresh flowers and the same card: "To Harry — Love, Sue, Mom and the kids."

The most moving scene was white-haired Dutch couples with children and grandchildren. Little ones would scatter small bouquets, then join grandparents and parents who, at certain graves, paused, knelt, prayed and wept. The men beneath the stones would never bounce a child or grandchild on their knees. The Dutch remembered that the grace of God and the sacrifices of the soldiers and airmen allowed these children and grandchildren to live and grow in a free world.

Rejoice! This is the first time in three years that we have no new names from recent conflict to add the roll of honor.

The people at Margraten have the right idea. Let us teach our children of the sacrifice of our soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines who did not come home to parades. Teach them of the sacrifice of parents, spouses, brothers, sisters, children and friends who buried their young heroes. Point out living heroes—disabled veterans—who traded good health, limbs and sight for their buddies and for us. After we give thanks to God for all of these heroes, then can we tell our children who has and is paying for our picnic on Memorial Day.

International War College, German delegation get taste of weaponry

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment held a capabilities exercise on Red Cloud Range May 12.

The exercise was held for the U.S Army International War College from Carlisle, Pa., and a German delegation from the Infantry Future Development Program.

The two groups witnessed the live firing of several different types of weaponry and received briefings on many other weapons in the static display area. The M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle, M-113 personnel carrier, M-901 improved tow vehicle, M-24 sniper rifle, M-X19 automatic grenade launcher, M-16 A3 Rifle, 4.2mm, 120mm, 81mm, and the 60mm mortars were demonstrated for the two groups. After the exhibition the participants were encouraged to move to the firing area and fire the weapons.

Brigadier Jack Chemmoss, a war college student from Kenya, South Africa, said, "These weapons are truly fascinating." The German visitors from IFDP were also guests of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's mortar exercise May 13.

The main support effort for the mortar exercise came from Company B, which is the mortar company of the 1st Battalion.

The mortar exercise was performed to demonstrate the enhanced fire control system, which is designed to increase speed and accuracy with which the mortar teams could fire from the mortar carrier.

IOAC offers Army officers a career stepping stone

By D.L. Bridges
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

During an infantry officer's Army career, there is a strong emphasis on military education. Similar to civilian corporations, the Army ensures leaders and staff personnel are trained to assume positions of higher responsibility.

One of the career education steps in the infantry is the Infantry Officer Advanced Course. Students receive the basic information they need for the course in200-man classrooms. The practical application of the information is conducted in small seminar groups.

The groups consist of about fourteen students and one instructor. Each small group instructor, or SGI, is an active duty captain with previous experience as a company commander and who has served as a staff officer.

The Department of the Army picks successful company commanders, then the chief of tactics screens them further before making selections, according to Maj. Ward Jones of the Combined Arms and Tactics Division. "Standards are extremely high," he said.

The SGI Program concept began in 1985 to effectively integrate training with battle doctrine.

"I went through one of the first small group courses, and although doctrine has evolved, the philosophy hasn't changed," said Capt. Ed Woolfolk.

D.L. Bridges

Rather than instructors, the SGIs view themselves as information facilitators. Their purpose is to teach how to think, not what to think, and they rely on interaction between themselves and the students.

The students' broad experiences are used to discuss solutions to practical exercises based on procedures, tactics and techniques. The decision-making process encourages understanding of how leaders can fight as members of the combined arms team.

"My focus is knowledge and practical use of the Army's decision-making process," said Woolfolk. "I use doctrinal reviews and the practical exercises to generate discussions."

Other military services and branches of the Army send officers to the infantry course. Their participation helps to improve all of the students' combined arms education as they share their unique perspectives.

"The SGIs are tremendous instructors, and I've increased my doctrinal understanding immeasurably," said Capt. Dick Monroe, Military Intelligence, 1st Battalion, 108th Infantry (Mechanized), 42nd Infantry Division, New York Army National Guard. "I'm firmly convinced to be able to understand the enemy and do any planning, an M.I. officer must have a solid understanding of infantry doctrine and tactics."

One-day practical exercises in Fort Benning training areas, in conjunction with classroom work, also develops the officers' decision-making processes. All of the officers individually prepare operations orders in company instruction, and as part of a staff in the battalion and brigade sections of the course.

In addition, during the battalion and brigade sections, officers rotate positions as primary staff members to gain experience with all of the staff's responsibilities.

"IOAC has taught me how to apply the basic war-fighting principles," said Capt. Alan Ostermiller, "and now I see how they lead to victory on the battlefield."

Many of the students are veterans of Operations Just Cause and Desert Storm. Their experiences add a certain reality to classroom discussions and contribute to the discussed solutions.

"The personal experiences of the platoon leaders and junior staff officers are excellent teaching tools. They reinforce the soundness of our basic doctrine," said SGI Capt. Matthew Halder.

The course changes to some degree with each class, but the basic doctrine remains the same.

"I believe that every graduate should have two things, a toolbox of references from the course so he can find answers to his questions and an analytical mind able to use our how-to-think war-fighting instruction processes," said Lt. Col. Stephen Nash, chief, Tactics Division, Combined Arms and Tactics Division.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today, May 22, 1942

Russian forces battling in the Kharkov area have broken through the German fixed fortifications to the steppelands beyond. The Russians have not been able to capture Kharkov itself, and a German counterattack has stabilized part of the line.

Farther north, the Russians opened a new attack on the German-Finnish forces in northern Karelia. Russian forces reportedly waded through a half-frozen swamp to attack and turn the flank of the Axis army. Russian claims put the Axis losses at 3,000 men from several elite units.

In the Pacific, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported that a Japanese 7,100-ton cruiser and two large supply ships were sunk by Allied forces. Although the report did not give any details of the sinking, the phrasing used indicates that the ships were sunk by a submarine. Also in the theater, a heavy air raid on Lae destroyed six Japanese aircraft.

The Mexican Foreign Office announced that Germany had "refused" Mexico's protest against the sinking of one of her merchantmen last week.

It is now deemed 90 percent certain that, in the interest of Mexico's national honor," Mexico's president will declare war on Germany this evening. The declaration would add another nation to the Allied cause and lead to greater cooperation between Mexico and the United States.

Twenty-five thousand Japanese troops landed at Foochow, China. The Foochow landing opens a second front along China's southern coast and constitutes a new threat to the Chinese forces holding back the Japanese in the north. Estimates put the total force facing the Chinese at 125,000 Japanese troops.

Book reveals 75th's action

Just Cause hits reader with dose of war's reality

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

REVIEW

Many soldiers from the 75th Ranger Regiment recall the tracers flying toward them as they exited the planes carrying them to the drop zones in Panama. Operation Just Cause was underway.

Those soldiers who were not there, however, probably can't imagine what it felt like to be in close combat with the Panamanian Defense Force.

However, soldiers may be better able to grasp the intensity of the conflict if they dive headfirst into a book by Malcolm McConnell.

"Just Cause — The Real Story of America's High-Tech Invasion of Panama" brings the reader into the action with an emotionally charged account of moments of combat. From Col. (now Brig. Gen.) Buck Kernan's thoughts and conversations prior to exiting the aircraft on his combat jump, to security patrols after the initial insertion, the book leaves the reader interested from every moment.

Detailed accounts of nearly every shot fired are found in this book, which, surprisingly, doesn't read like a history book. Instead, it reads like a fiction book. A good fiction book.

The only drawback to the story of the invasion is that, at times, it may lose a non-military reader, or anyone who is not familiar with weapons systems.

But that drawback is more than made up in the descriptions of the terrain and the thoughts of the men in combat.

A delightful addition to the book is the Panamanian Defense Force side, particularly the play by play accounts of Noriega's travels and demeanor while in hiding.

Anyone interested in the invasion of Panama should pick up this book and read it.

German officers observe CAPEX

1/29 gives IFDP chance to view America's infantry

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment participated in a night site exhibition May 13 at Red Cloud Range for the Infantry Future Development Program, called IFDP.

The concept for the demonstration was to illustrate in detail some of the systems Fort Benning uses to enhance its night-fighting capabilities.

There were several new night sights recently fielded that the German officers were able to examine and use. There was also a new futuristic piece of equipment called the Soldier Integrated Protective Ensemble.

"This is a new system that has not been fielded as yet, but it has the potential to make the average soldier a super soldier," said Dave Reiss, the SIPE manager for the Infantry School.

The SIPE has many different capabilities, including an apparatus that can be attached to the Kevlar helmet. It has a multifaceted design that can inform a soldier of distances, take pictures, determine locations and grid coordinates by way of global positioning, and has a thermal night sight that may be accommodated for the helmet as well. The system is also temperature controlled and can be adjusted for cooler or warmer climates.

Another recent development displayed at the demonstration was the driver thermal viewer for the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. It gives the driver of a Bradley Fighting Vehicle improved capabilities to see at night, through smoke, rain and fog just as the gunner and Bradley commander.

"The IFDP is three years old," said Lt. Col. Joerg Bahr, the German liaison officer for the U.S Army Infantry Center. "Each year when German soldiers come here to visit or in the case of the next meeting (the American soldiers will be in Germany) our relations strengthen, and it brings us to a point where perhaps, as world leaders we can share new ideas, and solutions to problems that concern both of our nations. We must orientate to the rapidly changing new world, everyone expects us to, and by understanding one another better with programs such as the IFDP we will go far. I really enjoy working with the people here at Fort Benning; they have supported me in every way possible."

1/29 conducts battalion run, awards ceremony May 1

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment held its monthly battalion run, and awards ceremony May 1 at the battalion motor pool.

First Sgt. Jerome King of Headquarters Company is leaving the battalion and will be assigned to a Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit at South Carolina State University.

"First Sergeant King has been with this battalion for four years, and I, for one, am not happy to see him go," said Lt. Col. Robert Leon, battalion commander of 1st battalion.

Sgt. 1st Class Gregory Newer will be taking over the first sergeant position in Headquarters Company.

King told the soldiers of the battalion after the run, "I have enjoyed working with you, and I thank you for all your support."

First Sgt. Gordon Unrein was also given a farewell from the battalion on Red Cloud Range May 11. Unrein was the first sergeant of Company D for two years. Unrein has moved on to the Primary Leadership Development Course as an instructor.

"I didn't want to leave. I really enjoyed working for those soldiers," said Unrein.

Capt. Bruce Davis, company commander of Company D, said, "He set rigorous standards, and stuck by them. He would never ask his soldiers to do anything he wouldn't do himself, and he was a true professional."

First Sgt. Daryl Moore has taken over the duties as first sergeant for Company D.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week ...

• Fort Benning's Parachute Chapel Number One baptized its first baby with Chaplain (1st Lt.) Raymond S. Hall presiding and parents Lt. and Mrs. L. S. Saylor present. Stuart Ann Saylor holds the distinction of being the first baby baptized.

• U.S. and Japanese forces moved toward a major confrontation at Midway. The Japanese task force included the carriers Kaga, Hiryu, Soryu and Akagi, while the American force featured the carriers USS Hornet, USS Enterprise, and a hastily repaired USS Yorktown.

• Led by Field Marshall Erwin Rommel, German forces, outnumbered in both tanks and infantry, soundly defeated the Allied forces along the Gazala Line. The lack of gas resupply limited Rommel from further pursuit and even greater success.

• Czechoslovakian resistance fighters attempted to assassinate Reichsprotektor Reinhard Heydrich in Prague. Heydrich later died from his wounds, triggering massive German reprisals.

• The War Department named its new headquarters, under construction in Arlington, Va., "The Pentagon."

McBride holds first science fair

Animals, student projects included in event

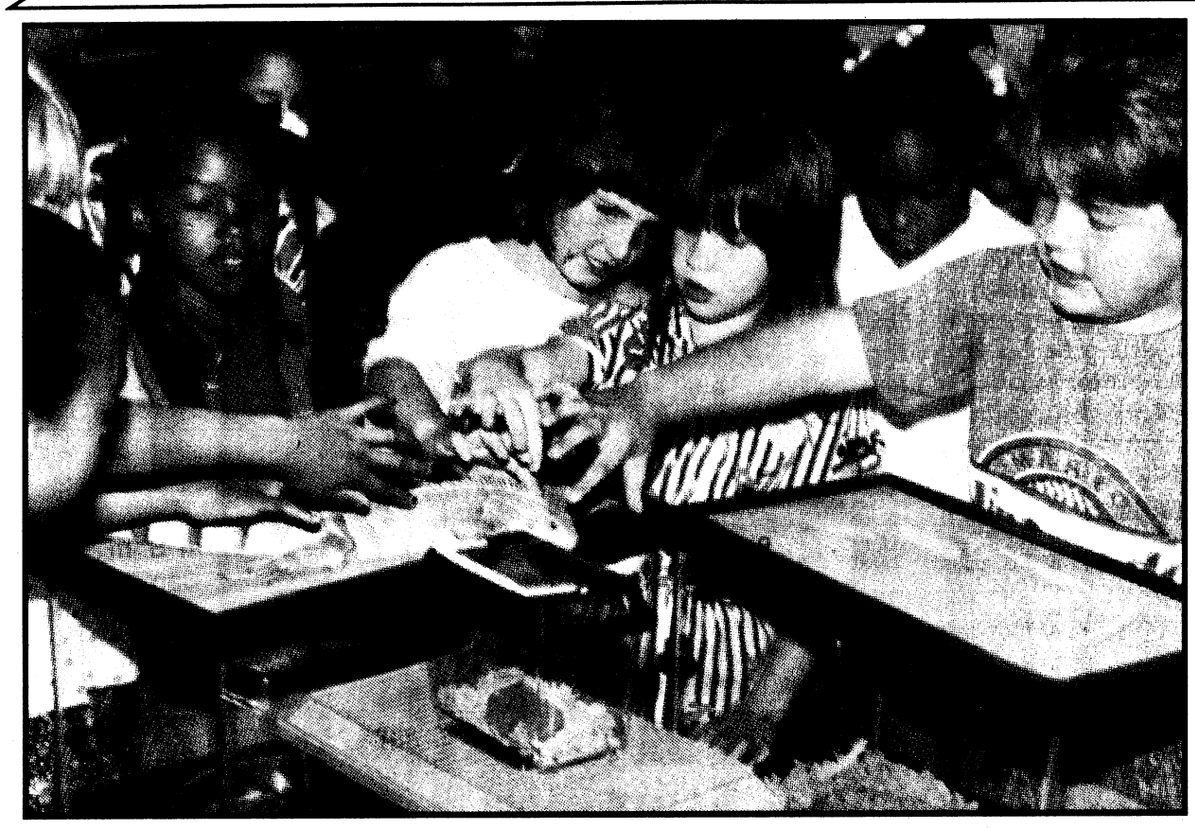
By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Morris R. McBride School's 450 students took part in a Science Fair for the first time Tuesday with numerous displays throughout the school.

The kindergartners through third-graders were encouraged to participate in class and individual home projects based on the science series curriculum, according to Principal Delbert Hicks.

Projects varied from the six classes of kindergartners raising a garden of vegetables and flowers on the school grounds to older children's work on how the eye functions.

Other projects explained different kinds of spiders, showed how we see the moon and exhibited why a telephone works.



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

In addition, there were displays from Faith Middle School and Columbus College to view, and "Edzoocators" from the Chehaw Wild Animal Park at Albany brought some of their animals for the students to see in special shows.

Hicks said that Kay Wiggins, first grade teacher, and Ann Sanders, kindergarten teacher, did "the lion's share" of the organizing for the event.

No ribbons were awarded so the focus was on learning, not competition.

The positive response from students and visiting parents has made this an annual project.

"We will have it the last two weeks of school, and even harvest our garden next year," Hicks said.

Wilson students will explore world of work

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Wilson School students will spend the day exploring careers Wednesday. Ten guests have been invited to participate in the first Career Exploration Day, share information and answer questions concerning their career specialties. The keynote speaker for the entire student body will be Dee Armstrong, anchorwoman, WTVM - Channel 9, Columbus.

Students in grades three, four and five will attend three 30-minute sessions featuring one of the following guests: Dr. Alan Adams, veterinarian; Dr. Lionel Baker, dentist; Patricia Barnett medical clerk who is Miss Georgia Wheelchair; Jerry Christy, computer specialist; Dr. Brel Clark, optometrist; James Clark, lawyer; Greg Davis, entrepreneur; Maestro George Del Gobbo, symphony conductor and Marvin Schuster, entrepreneur.

The afternoon feature will be an outdoor presentation by wildlife enthusiast, Steve Hoddy, who will conduct a free flight bird of prey show featuring eagles, hawks and falcons.

Hoddy is a nationally acclaimed authority in his field, having worked as a consultant to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Fifth-graders receive lessons in 'great outdoors'

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Two days of outdoor education at Victory Pond will give Fort Benning fifth-graders a change of pace this month, according to Debra Mabry, program coordinator and assistant principal at Herbert J. Dexter School.

With educational activities resembling those at Scout Camp, outdoor education offers the opportunity for students to see how their studies relate to real life and to interact with other children from all over post whom they will join in classes next year at Faith Middle School.

Sessions included aeronautics, trust walk, math in nature, feeling nature, hooks and ladders, nature hike, water conservation, first aid, changing attitudes and nature '92.

Teachers and people from the Medical Activity serve as team counselors for the 400 students participating.

An overnight stay in the Conway Barracks at the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center offers another new experience.

Edward A. White and Frank R. Loyd School fifth-graders took part in the program May 7 and 8, and William H. Wilbur, Herbert J. Dexter and Richard G. Wilson School students are scheduled for Thursday through May 29.

Scouts live up to their pledge

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Peter Maher and Matt Camp are Boy Scouts in the truest sense of the term.

Last month the two found a wallet in some bushes when they were out walking the dog.

The wallet belonged to Karen White who lived on Miller Loop and had been in the process of moving when someone stole the wallet out of her car.

According to their Scoutmaster, Lt. Col. Charles Andre of Troop 27, Maher and Camp walked to her home to return the wallet.

The wallet was missing $75 cash it had contained, White said later, but still held checks made out to her, credit cards and identification.

The walk took an hour and a half, and the boys weren't able to contact White.

While the scouts were on the errand, their parents couldn't find them.

Andre said that when the boys came home after they couldn't make contact, Camp's father, Col. Greg Camp of the 29th Infantry Regiment, called the Military Police Activity.

The MPs saw that the wallet was returned.

"She was really thankful," Maher said.

In acknowledgment of their honesty and for serving as an example to others, the Scouts received notes of appreciation from Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

Beware of car scam

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers need to be wary of advertisements offering to sell their vehicle for them, according to the Legal Assistance Division of the Staff Judge Advocate's Office here.

Local businesses in the past year have run ads claiming that a vehicle can be sold almost immediately at no cost to the seller.

The process begins when a car owner takes his vehicle to a business that has advertised.

The car owner signs one side of the contract, authorizing the business to arrange the sale of the vehicle.

The agreement with the business is that when a buyer is found he or she (the seller) will sign the sections of the contract containing the purchase agreement.

The business acts only as a liason or broker, and it receives a brokerage fee from the buyer.

According to Capt. David Dalition, Staff Judge Advocate's Office, entering into any type of agreement as described above is illegal if the seller has a lien held on the car.

"According to Georgia law, a third person cannot induce the transfer of possession of a car," said Dalition.

Georgia Auto Brokers, a local business that set up shop at the Manchester Expressway area, was shut down by the Muscogee County Sheriff's Department in late November.

The business was accused of violating Georgia law by seeking out and selling vehicles that had liens on them.

Any soldiers involved with this type of business should seek legal counsel at SJA or with a private attorney, according to Dalition.

Young Author's Day set

Fort Benning Schools

Students at Fort Benning's Dexter School will be attending Dexter's second annual Young Author's Day Friday at 9 a.m.

The day is set aside to allow Dexter's young authors to meet and interact with other authors. More than 35 guest speakers include guests from the surrounding area in the field of radio, television and the theater, who will share their own personal experiences with the writers. Other guests will tell and read stories to motivate the students to write a story in a writing workshop.

Special guest, Atlanta author and illustrator, Laura Seeley, will be introduced at this time. Seeley will be sharing her latest book, "The Book of Shadow Boxes," with student groups throughout the day.

Officers' wives experience taste of Army ranger training

IOBC Wives Group

A group of ranger wives and Infantry Officer Basic Course wives led by Cynthia Maher from Fort Benning, attended the Ranger Swamp Walk at Camp James. E. Rudder, Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., May 15.

The day began with an orientation on ranger training and activities headed by Lt. Col. Paul Burton, commander of the 6th Ranger Training Battalion at Eglin.

Being new to the swamp environment, the wives were given a presentation on snakes and reptiles by Staff Sgt. John Darlington. The demonstration of the non-poisonous snakes was a hands-on experience for the women. The poisonous breeds were handled strictly by the instructors. Upon leaving the classroom, they were led to the home of "Big John," a 15-foot American alligator, where they witnessed him devour a chicken. Deedee O'Donnell's, (wife of 2nd Lt. Joseph O'Donnell) response was, "Oh, that's gross!"

After the feeding, they were divided into three groups for training exercises conducted in round robin fashion. These training groups consisted of rope bridge construction and knot tying, rappelling from the 60-foot tower, and weapons instruction.

Linda Waite, wife of 1st Lt. Charles Waite, and Deannie Greenelsh, wife of 2nd Lt. Shawn Greenelsh, mastered the technique of knot tying.

Ranger instructor, Sgt. 1st Class John Bak, led the wives to the 60-foot rappel tower. Here they learned the specifics of constructing a Swiss seat and how to control the lines. All IOBC wives conquered the tower. First Lt. Keith Lynch talked them all off the tower.

O'Donnell rappeled off the wall and went on to rappel off the simulated helicopter skid. Bringing up the rear, Kathy Cray, wife of Lt. Col. John Cray, commander of 2nd Bn., 11th Inf., lost her footing and hung suspended upside-down, but soon regained control and proceeded down the wall to a safe landing.

Bak led them next to the final class for weapons instruction and firing and a pyrotechnics display. All wives fired the AKMS (a Russian automatic assault weapon), M-14, M-16 and M-60. Lori Beardsley's (wife of 2nd Lt. Bruce Beardsley) weapons' mastery gained her the nickname Rambett.

At 12:30 p.m., mess call sounded. The wives ate grilled hot dogs and hamburgers prepared by the mess hall. After lunch, they pulled out in cattle cars to the Zodiac boat launch for a seven-mile trip down the Yellow River. Ranger instructor, Sgt. 1st Class Richard Veal, was coxswain. The IOBC wives led the way and started down the river with Cray as their captain.

As the events unfolded along the river, the IOBC wives ended up coming in last. As they unloaded the boat, they realized the aches and pains of sitting cramped in one position for two hours.

Their first step into the swamp, they found themselves knee-deep in mud. During the walk through the swamp, Veal gave a brief talk on the vegetation and inhabitants of the swamp.

They next used their knowledge of the bowline knot with a half-hitch to do a rope-bridge crossing.

The next event was dinner at the mess hall — steamship round and catfish, vegetables, salad, rolls and choices of strawberry shortcake or chocolate cake.

The evening ended with the presentation of ranger pins and certificates for completion of the swamp walk. By 10 p.m., all was quiet in the ranger camp.

The wives say they "went away with a greater appreciation and understanding of what our ranger husbands have gone through and feel extremely proud of them."

ASK THE JUDGE

By Virginia L. Carlton
Trial Defense Service

Q. My commander has read me an Article 15. What do I do?

A. If Article 15 proceedings begin against you, you have the right to know the charges and the maximum possible punishments. You have the right to remain silent about the charges. Anything you say can be used against you.

You must decide whether to accept the Article 15 procedures or whether to refuse Article 15 procedures and demand trial by court-martial.

To assist you in making your decision, you have the right to talk with a military defense lawyer at Trial Defense Service.

If you go to a civilian lawyer, you'll have to pay the bill. You can request reasonable time (usually 48 hours) to talk with a lawyer.

The 48 hours that your commander gives you to see counsel and make a decision are not necessarily binding and can be extended by him.

If you refuse an Article 15, your chain of command will then decide whether to drop the case or forward it for court-martial.

Normally a court-martial will take place within 30 to 90 days after you request it. You should not refuse an Article 15 unless you have consulted with a lawyer first.

The charges could be referred to either a summary, special or general court-martial. A summary court-martial is convened in most cases involving an Article 15 refusal.

You and your lawyer should discuss possible defenses and the maximum level of punishment at each level of court. You need to know what the risks are.

By accepting the Article 15, you agree to have your case decided by the commander rather than by a military judge or a jury at a court-martial. You are not admitting guilt by accepting the Article 15 procedures. The commander who gave you the Article 15 must listen to your side of the case.

In fact, you may present your own witnesses and defenses, hire a civilian lawyer, or ask anyone to speak on your behalf.

You can have your own witnesses appear and explain to the commander what happened or you can present other evidence — statements from supervisors, receipts, Criminal Investigation Command reports — on your behalf.

You may also present evidence in extenuation and/or mitigation at your Article 15 hearing.

Matters in extenuation are those that tend to explain or lessen the seriousness of the misconduct. They are not matters that attempt to show whether the offense did or did not occur, but why it did.

Matters in mitigation are matters such as character statements, awards or other evidence of good military performance — reasons why the soldier should not be punished or why certain punishments should be light.

For example, if you have a lot of bills and forfeiture of pay will be a hardship, then present your commander with a copy of your bills.

If the commander doesn't punish you, the proceedings will end, and the record of them will be destroyed.

If the commander does punish you, the punishment may not exceed the maximum allowed by the Uniform Code of Military Justice. The maximum punishments are as follows:

Field Grade Article 15 (major or higher rank)

Restriction — 60 days, or if combined with extra duty, 45 days

Extra Duty — 45 days

Forfeiture of Pay — one-half basic pay for two months

Reduction in Grade — corporal or below may be reduced to private 1. sergeant and staff sergeant may be reduced one pay grade if the officer imposing the punishment is filling a lieutenant colonel slot. No reduction for sergeant first class.

Company Grade Article 15 (captain or lieutenant)

Restriction — 14 days

Extra Duty — 14 days

Forfeiture of Pay — Seven days basic pay

Reduction in Grade — corporal or below may be reduced one grade. No reduction for sergeant or above.

If you lose at the Article 15 or if you feel that the punishment imposed is too severe for the offense, you may appeal to the next higher commander.

Normally, you have five days within which to appeal. If you decide to appeal, you may write a letter stating your reasons for appeal.

You may attach letters from supervisors stating your good performance of duty prior to and after the offense as well as statements from witnesses you think may help you win your appeal.

You may even want to take a polygraph and submit the results, if favorable, along with your appeal.

Anything you tell your lawyer is confidential. This article is no substitute for individual counseling. As soon as you are read the Article 15 charge, make an appointment by calling 545-2175.

FUN AND SAFETY WITH RECREATIONAL VEHICLES

Seventeen million boats make up our nation's recreational flotilla -- a veritable navy of maritime pleasure-seekers. From these boats, people attempt to enjoy and absorb the overwhelming expanse of sky and water. All too often, though, the boaters themselves are the ones absorbed -- overboard.

A general pattern emerges from most of the recreational boating accidents: They occur in small boats on inland waters, and the skipper of the craft, who has not had any training, is at fault.

Boaters need to be familiar with Federal, state, and local regulations regarding safe boat operation. In addition, they need to learn all the aspects of good seamanship, boat handling, navigating and piloting, and weather considerations. The Boating Education Hotline, 800-336-BOAT, informs callers of where they can obtain boating education. Most courses are FREE.

While making their preparations, boaters should also check the seaworthiness of the craft, to include posted load limits, fire extinguisher (mandatory Coast Guard approved Type B-I, B-II), adequate fuel supply, charged battery, and inserted drain plugs.

Jet Skis are included in the recreational boat category. These small motorized water-propelled crafts are made to accommodate one to three people. Since they fall into the same category as boats, they must adhere to the same rules and regulations. This includes PFDs, fire extinguishers, tow ropes, and registration.

Here are a few common sense rules that will help keep the nation's maritime pleasure-seekers afloat while avoiding casualties:

•Float plan. A boater should inform a responsible person of where he's going, when he'll return, what the boat looks like, the boat's registration number, and other identifying information.

•Weather. Weather and water conditions should always be checked before leaving shore. Boaters should take a radio and stay up to date on the latest weather reports.

•Life jackets. One per person must be on board and accessible (preferably worn).

•Safety equipment. A fire extinguisher and tow rope should be on each boat and accessible to the skipper.

•Fuel. Be sure to have enough gas and use the one-third rule: Conserve one-third of your fuel for the return trip and one-third in reserve.

•Alcohol. Boating and booze don't mix.

Skippers who pay heed to these and other safety rules are more apt to find real pleasure on the water, and they won't have to worry about the negatives.

Love, music on the menu at 'Jack's Place'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Past TV series have shown anything is possible on a love boat, on a fantasy island or in a hotel ... and the same now holds true for one nightspot.

Debuting Tuesday, the new ABC comedy-drama "Jack's Place" casts former "Barney Miller" star Hal Linden as a musician who switched careers to become the owner and operator of a combination restaurant/ bar/cabaret. Two of his employees are firsthand experts on the subject, since English-born and baseball-savvy cocktail waitress Chelsea (played by "General Hospital" alumna Finola Hughes) is struggling to cope with the recent end of a romance, while bartender Greg (John Dye, formerly of the war drama "Tour of Duty") tries to balance his job with being both a single parent and a medical student. In the tradition of the programs previously alluded to, "Jack's Place" will have a supporting cast of well-known weekly guest stars with Tuesday's opener including Linda ("Happy Days") Purl and Trevor ("Masterpiece Theatre: Parnell and the Englishwoman") Eve as disparate individuals who share a common dream of moving to Paris. Executive-produced by "Hill Street Blues" and "WIOU" veteran Scott Brazil for ABC's own in-house production company, the show is slated to feature Michele ("L.A. Law") Greene, Robert ("Benson") Guillaume and Denise ("Star Trek: The Next Generation") Crosby in upcoming installments.

"Basically," says the genial Linden of the series' premise, "a former bandleader, musician, singer and entertainer just kind of gives up the road and says, 'I want to settle down and have a more stable existence.' There's a cabaret in 'Jack's Place,' a place for a bit of piano, bass and drums; I guess maybe one of these days, Jack'll sit down and play a tune, but we're not going to make this a variety show. Interestingly enough, there are moments in the first three episodes where music is appropriate, and hopefully, we'll keep it in there. It gives it a nice flavor." Linden actually does play the clarinet in certain scenes, a talent he also has displayed in live appearances, including one in which he performed Mozart with the Dallas Symphony. "This may seem like this was written for me," he reflects, "but the concept was there already, and I just happened to fit the bill." However, he insists, "We're also trying to keep an edge (to the show), so that it doesn't ground itself in sentimentality. Quirky characters are always good to have."

Indeed, producer Brazil states, "I would like to think that we're telling stories that delve a little bit deeper into all of these characters' lives and that if we're doing it well, they're a little bit more grounded in reality than we've seen from (similarly styled anthology) shows in the past. I mean that with no disrespect to those, since they've done quite well and have been appreciated. I must confess that in my whole life, I have seen probably 30 minutes of 'The Love Boat,' so I shouldn't cast aspirations about how it was done. The reason I didn't watch it was, in that 30 minutes, I didn't believe those people existed on my planet. I'm sorry, Aaron (Spelling, 'The Love Boats' executive producer), but what we're trying to do is to keep these characters real. We hope everyone else can identify with them honestly, and that we can touch some emotional reality."

For the record, Linden adds that he was in the original 1976 pilot film for "The Love Boat," but he almost wasn't in "Jack's Place": When the new series originally was conceived, under the title "Saturdays," singer Lou Rawls was announced for the lead role. "The show went through an interesting metamorphosis that I had very little to do with," Brazil explains. "A pilot was done before I was part of this, and the pilot process is a learning experience. I believe they embarked on a certain journey, got to their destination and said, 'Wait a minute, we took the wrong road.' It was a collective decision prior to my joining the team, then when I joined ABC Productions and talked about the kinds of stories I wanted to tell, we melded ... and (the revision) just wouldn't involve the cast that they had. Different stories, different qualities different dynamic.

Prizewinning playwright remembers Fort Benning

Springer Opera House

The Springer Children's Theatre will finish the current year with a performance of a new children's play by a local playwright. Edward Campbell's "Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm" will be presented tonight at 7:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 2:30 p.m. at the Springer Actors Arena, 1022 1st Ave. in Columbus.

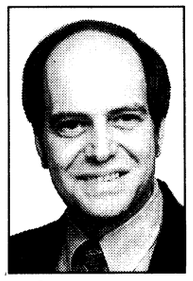
Campbell entered and won the Springer's Deep South New Play Contest this spring, which came with a cash prize for the playwright and a full staging of the play as the third offering in the Springer Children's Theatre's 1991-92 season.

Campbell served at Fort Benning in the early 1970s. When a knee injury forced him out of Infantry Officer Candidate School in 1971, he was assigned as a personnel specialist with The School Brigade, which is now the 11th Infantry Regiment.

"For the next year," he said, "I worked every day in a small cinderblock building on Main Post, under the shadow of the jump towers. It was a hectic and confusing place, hot in the summer and cold in winter. It came to mind often, 20 years later, when I was writing this play. One of my characters is a fantasy creature called the Bewilderbeast, who lives in a cinderblock box."

Campbell said that a career in the infantry wasn't for him, but he liked the area around Fort Benning and eventually made it his home. "Living this close to the post, I've had many friends over the years who were employed or stationed at Fort Benning," he said. "Fort Benning is still a part of my life."

Campbell, now 43, is a full-time writer who is currently working on two novels. This is his first play.



Campbell

"Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm" is a children's comic adventure about a boy who is left at home with an aunt when his parents take a trip to Colorado. Unlike the young hero of "Home Alone," this boy decides to take off in search of his folks. In this fantasy odyssey, young Kendall Kip joins forces with his hamster, Honcho and they set out through the tunnels of Honcho's habitrail to find the boy's parents. His friends Belinda and Billy soon follow and they meet an array of friends along the way, including Profitess Palmetto, the Bewilderbeast and Shank Longfinger.

Jazz Society brings music to Springer

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

REVIEW

Uptown Columbus was alive with outdoor music Sunday in front of the Springer Opera House. The street was closed for the Columbus Jazz Society and Springer sponsored event.

Many came, some relaxing on lawn chairs, some sitting on the curb and some standing.

Food drinks and T- shirts were on sale to help the cause.

There were those who stepped away long enough to view Edward Campbell's adventure-fantasy play that won the Springer Theater's Deep South New Play contest this year, "Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm," before venturing back to the musical groups.

P

Six, El Combo Tropical and the Cloumbus College Jazz Band were among those who performed.

Hope you didn't miss the mellow sound of "Europa," an album by Carlos Santana performed by Ramon Yepez. It was great.

JACK'S

Though NBC's "Cheers" arguably is the television series that has represented such a site's ambience up to now, Brazil maintains that the atmosphere portrayed in "Jack's Place" is far from fiction, and he knows that from firsthand experience. "My brother is a restaurateur up in Northern California," he reveals, "and his demeanor is very much like that of Hal's character in the show. When you go into his place, you feel like you're home, and when you come back a second time, he remembers your name.

Those places do exist, and it's a real special group of people that populates them and makes them happen."

Post honors soldiers' sacrifices

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet Staff Writer

The Revolutionary War. The War of 1812. The Mexican War. The Spanish-American War. World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Saudi Arabia...

"There are American soldiers in cemeteries all over the world. They died far away from their homes and their families. They died in sand, mud and snow. They died in blood, heat and pain. They fought for freedom, and they paid the price of freedom with their youth and their future. They paid the supreme price," said Brig. Gen. Carl F. Ernst, Fort Benning deputy commanding general.

Fort Benning observed Memorial Day with a ceremony at the post cemetery Monday, with Ernst as the speaker.

The essence of Memorial Day, said Ernst, can be found in the words to two songs used by the U.S. Army Recruiting Command: "When we were needed, we were there," and "Freedom isn't free."

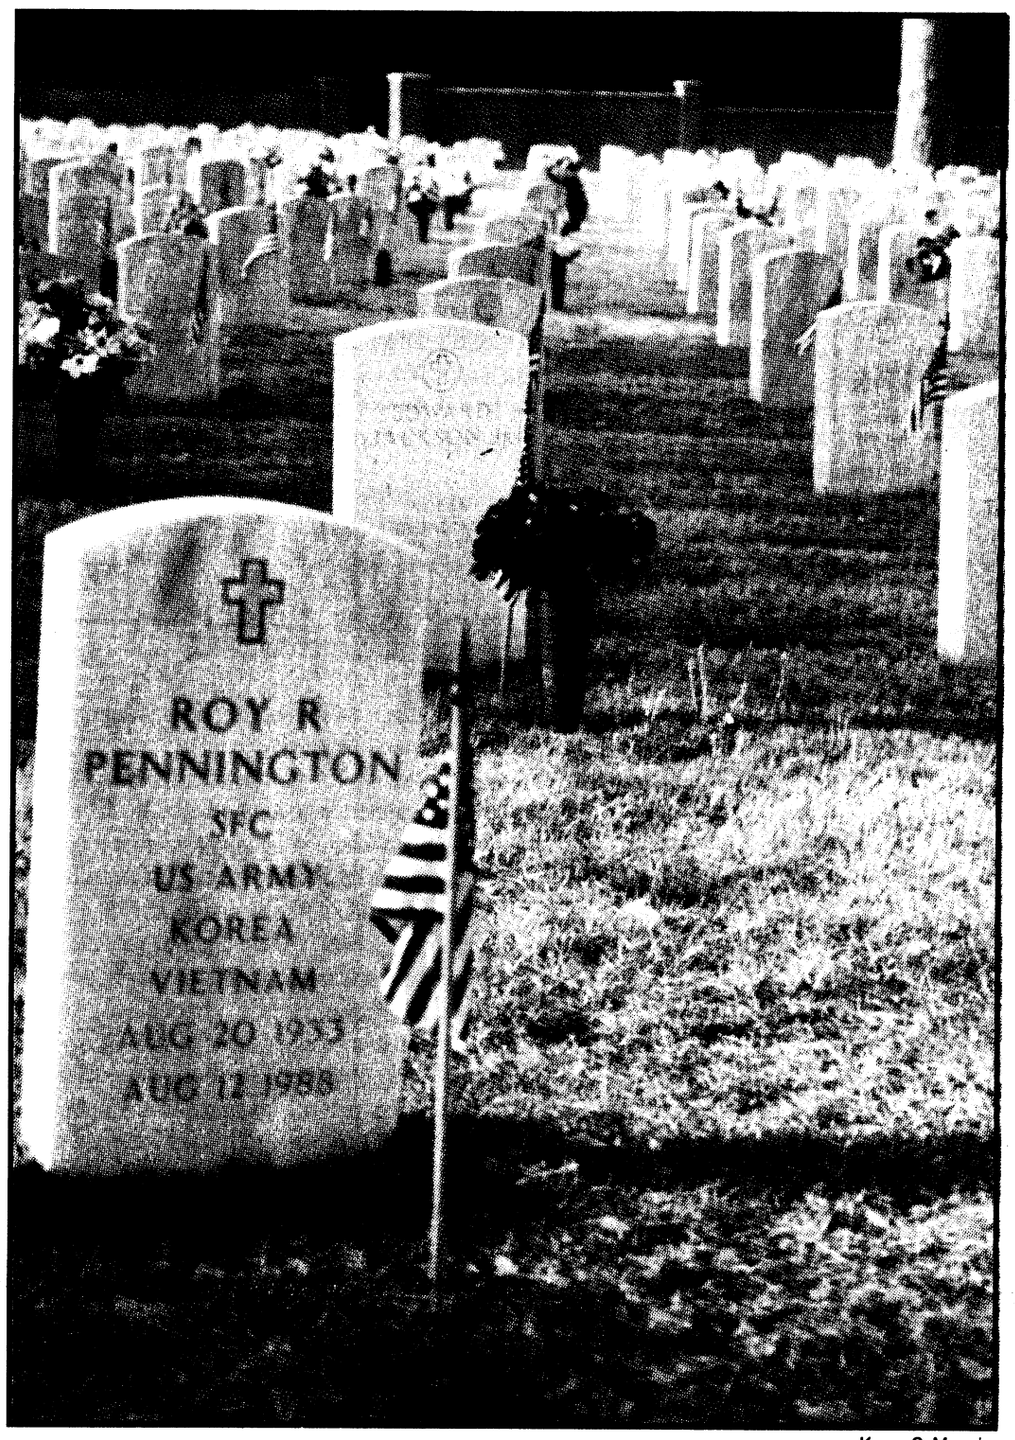
The ceremony, attended by service members, veterans and family members, included music by The Infantry Band and a benediction from Col. George W. Gudz, U.S. Army Infantry Center staff chaplain.

The ceremony was marked by a three-volley salute fired by seven riflemen of Company D, 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment. A 21-gun salute was fired by a Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment, both of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

A wreath was placed on the Grave of the Unknown Soldier by Ernst, Gudz and U.S. Rep. Richard Ray.

The Army has supported the country through 217 years in battles around the world, said Ernst.

Ernst quoted Abraham Lincoln in speaking of fallen soldiers, "We resolve that these men did not die in vain. They died for freedom."



Karen S. Morarie

Rows of graves at the Fort Benning Cemetery are a somber reminder of American soldiers, who gave their lives for their country. They were remembered and honored at a ceremony Monday.

ITC renames 4th Bn., 30th Inf.

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The five training companies of 4th Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment on Sand Hill were redesignated as 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment in a ceremony Tuesday.

The unit's mission will remain the same: "training America's best soldiers," said Col. Joseph W. Trez, commander of the Infantry Training Center.

The ceremony also marked the unit's change of command. The new commander is Lt. Col. Kevin M. Rice. He assumed command from Lt. Col. Marshall C. Reed, who has commanded the unit since May 1990.

Reed said, "We train soldiers to a toughness beyond what they thought possible. They're trained in the six basics of an infantryman, so when they are cold, wet, tired, hungry, miserable and scared out of their ever-loving minds, they will still adhere to standards in the absence of supervision and in the face of the fear, confusion and depredations that are combat."

Reed was commissioned in to the Army upon graduation from Stephen F. Austin University. He is a graduate of the Airborne and Ranger Schools, the Infantry Officer Advance Course and the Command and General Staff College.

Along with his wife, Penny, Reed will remain at Fort Benning, where he will serve as deputy commander of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

Rice said, "I pledge to train these soldiers well, to care for them and their families and to always do what's right." He expresseed his appreciation to the Reeds for making his family's transition to Fort Benning "the smoothest move we've ever had."

Rice graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1973. He is a graduate of Airborne, Ranger and Air Assault Schools, the U. S. Army Foreign Area Officer Course, the Chinese Language Course at the Defense Language Institute and the Command and General Staff College.

He graduated from the Naval Postgraduate School with a master of arts degree in national security affairs and completed Chinese language study at the British Ministry of Defense Language School in Hong Kong.

Rice's awards and decorations include the Meritorious Service Medal (with two Oak Leaf Clusters), the Army Commendation Medal (with two Oak Leaf Clusters), the Army Achievement Medal (with one Oak Leaf Cluster), the Airborne Badge, Air Assault Badge, Ranger Tab and Expert Infantryman Badge.

Rice is accompanied by his wife, Kitty and their 12-year-old sons, Robbie and Ian.

Col. James Crockert, provost marshal, leads members of the Military Police Activity down Victory Drive to the Columbus Government Center during the Torch Run for the Georgia special Olympics

Military police carry torch for Ga. Special Olympics

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's Military Police Activity showed its support for the Georgia Special Olympics May 22 by carrying the Special Olympics torch for a portion of its journey to Atlanta.

Military Police Activity Commander Col. James Crockert accepted the torch from the Albany Police Department and led about 100 members of the activity on a 10-mile run from MPA headquarters, building 215, to the Columbus Government Center.

At the Government Center, the torch was passed on to members of the Ruttledge Correctional Institute to continue to Atlanta, where the Olympics were held over the weekend.

According to Capt. Michael Walker, who along with Staff Sgt. James White, organized the run, the MPA has conducted the run for several years.

"The reason we do the run is to improve and enhance the physical training of children with special needs," Walker said. "We also do it as a means of creating public awareness. We want to support the handicapped children here at Fort Benning."

Walker said that the run was held in conjunction with a fund-raiser conducted by the activity for the Special Olympics.

Local civilian businesses and post organizations donated about $1,000 this year, he said.

Walker said that the MPA plans to run again next year.

"It definitely helped their cause. The run gave us a chance to show our spirit, to show that we support our special children and that we were willing to put our bodies through a 10-mile run to support them," said Walker.

Savings bond campaign to end Sun.

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Fort Benning 1992 U.S. Saving Bond Campaign ends Sunday, according to Installation Savings Bond Officer, Harry Holmes.

"As the campaign draws to a close I think some people feel they can't afford to save or that they already have too many deductions," he said, "but, this is savings.

"With the Payroll Savings Plan, a small amount is automaticly deducted to buy U.S. Savings Bonds monthly. Deductions can be designed to fit your needs."

The reasons people save are varied, he said. Maybe it's a new boat, a retirement home or your child's education. Whatever the reason, said Holmes, U.S. Savings bonds are a secure investment in the future.

"I encourage anyone who is currently enrolled in the payroll savings plan or who hasn't bought savings bonds to contact your savings bond campaign representative today about increasing their allotment or starting one," said Holmes.

"Bonds may be bought anytime. Military members can sign up at their personnel administration center and civilian employees can sign up at civilian pay," he said.

Victory Focus to begin

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Victory Focus, a major training exercise involving platoon and company drills for all elements of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, will result in an increase of tactical vehicle traffic in Fort Benning training areas Wednesday through June 24.

The exercise will begin Wednesday as the brigade conducts its road movement to field locations. Convoys will begin at 10:30 p.m. from Kelley Hill and end approximately 9 a.m. Thursday.

Roads of major concern are crossings on 1st and 8th Divisions roads, Cussetta Road near the Babbit Underpass, Hourglass Road and Buena Vista Road. Wheeled vehicle convoys will begin at 8:30 a.m. Thursday along 2nd Armored Division Road to Wildcat Road, Buena Vista Road and then 10th Armored Division Road.

Motorists are reminded to approach military convoys with caution, obey military police and other officials directing traffic, and watch for vehicles entering the road at all times of the day and night.

Infantry postpones ball

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 1992 Infantry Ball and the presentation of the Doughboy Award scheduled for June 12 has been postponed, according to Capt. Keith Basik, Infantry Ball project officer.

All tasked units and agencies will be notified of the new date and furture planning meetings.

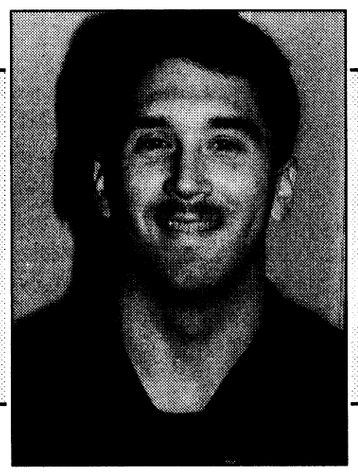
VARIOUS VOICES

Do you think soldiers should use profanity while in uniform?

Debbie Kearns, Directorate of Threat and Security — "Sometimes soldiers in uniform using profanity bothers me. I try not to pay too much attention to it, but sometimes the language is overly aggressive. I notice it most in the Infantry Hall cafeteria"

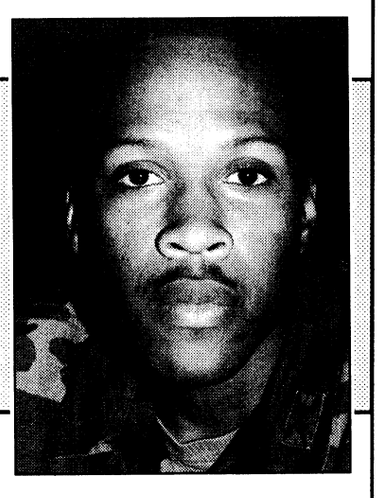
Moses Hall, civilian employee, Defense Printing Service — "I don't feel soldiers should use profanity, in or out of uniform. I think profanity shows a lack of vocabulary."



Capt. Vince W. Roach, Company C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I think (the issue) is cut and dried. Soldiers in uniform should try to avoid using profanity. It's unprofessional."

Sgt. Denise Neal, Directorate of Training and Doctrine — "I think using profanity while in uniform is unprofessional. I don't like it being used toward me or in my presence. It shows a lack of respect and military bearing."

Spc. Jessie Purington, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I don't think profanity should be used while in uniform, but I think a regulation against it would be going too far. People do get upset and do use profanity, but they should consider where they are and who they are around before they use it."



1st Lt. Sam Jackson, Comapny C, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Using profanity while in uniform doesn't bother me in some situations. In the infantry, we use it. I don't think it's good to use profanity around females or in some surroundings."

Profanity shows lack of smarts

By Clyde Snively

COMMENTARY

Call me a woosie. Call me a WIMP. I don't care what you call me, just try to do it without three or four profanities.

I respond well to "Hey, Snively, you jerk, you incompetent, malingering pea brain, come here."

What I don't like to hear is, "Hey, Snively, you *&%$ jerk, you *&%@ incompetent, *&^^% malingering, &#@ pea brain, come the *&%$ here."

If you're mad at me, and want me to come, I'll probably catch on to that fact from your tone of voice.

Adding expletives won't make me come any faster.

The only thing you're telling me when you lace your language with profanities is you have a definite lack of vocabulary.

You're telling me you haven't developed any new language skills since the fifth or sixth grade.

It's unfortunate that you're stuck with such a limited vocabulary. Especially when you're out in public.

I've got short hair just like you do and when you come into a restaurant and insist on using your barracks talk in a civilized environment, it's embarrassing and it sure isn't the image we're trying to project to our downtown friends.

Just like some places are known for some of the joints in a particular part of town, we soldiers are known for a few foul-mouthed soldiers who don't know how to clean up their language.

That language ain't tough and it ain't cool.

If you use it because you're an ignoramus, let me throw some suggestions your way:

Want to call me stupid? Try dense, moronic, obtuse or witless.

Want to call me lazy? Try indolent, shiftless or slothful.

Want to call me worthless? Try paltry, petty, picayune, trifling.

How about incompetent? Go for gauche, inept, impotent.

For malingering, try goldbricker, loafer, shirker or slackard.

I mean, what a way to impress your fiends and catch my attention when you holler out, "Hey, Snively, you dense, obtuse, impotent, goldbricker, bring your obese butt over here, ASAP!"

That might not make me want to come any faster, but it'll certainly catch my attention, which brings me to my second point about why a profusion of profanities is dumb (asinine, moronic, imbecilic).

If you're a person who's every other utterance is some profanity, what do you do for emphasis? How do you drive your point home, catch people's attention when you have something really important to say?

Short of jumping up and down and yelling, you don't. On the other hand, if you're Caspar Milquetoast, who considers "darn," to be blasphemous, and you come out with one of the more common cuss words, don't you know you'll turn a few heads.

You betcha.

"Wow, did you just hear what Caspar said?" And naturally, everyone will have because it was so out of the ordinary. It's just like when you're in a maintenance shop. You can't hear the radio playing because of all the noise from the engines that are running. But as soon as those engines are turned off, you can hear the radio.

Cuss words are the engine noises of speech. They block out what you're trying to say.

Nor are profanities macho. Real men (and women) don't need vulgarities to impress people.

Hang around some of the sergeants major for awhile and you'll see what I mean.

Soldiers urged to keep talk professional

A sure-fire way to tarnish the soldier image is to use foul language. Professionals of any kind, but especially soldiers, should try their best to express themselves without using words that are foul or abusive. Every time a soldier uses vulgar language, the image of the Army is stained in the eyes of the public.

Soldiering is a profession in a class of its own. As soldiers we're watched more closely than any other group of professionals, mainly because of the expectations of the public. The public has high expectations because we've consistently maintained high standards for the past 200 years.

Our unique situation demands that we maintain professional composure not only when in a duty environment, but also when off duty. A soldier represents the Army whether in uniform or not and any behavior that stains the image of the soldier, does the same to the image of the Army.

I have been approached by both civilians and soldiers who are bothered by the use of foul language. You may ask what foul language is. According to Fort Benning Policy Memorandum 91-26, dated Oct. 29, 1991, language is obscene, vulgar or profane when, under circumstances and manner in which utterance was made, it would clearly offend a reasonable person's sense of decency.

The policy prohibits the use of obscene, vulgar or profane language in any public area on the Fort Benning Military Reservation.

This type of language is a form of sexual harassment and offenders, if found guilty, can be punished under the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

According to the UCMJ, indecent language is that which is grossly offensive to modesty, decency, or propriety, or shocks the moral sense, because of its vulgar, filthy, or disgusting nature, or its tendency to incite lustful thought.

Specific articles that can be applied include Articles 89 and 91 for disrespect, Article 117 for provoking speech and gestures and Article 134 for indecent, insulting or obscene language prejudicial to good order and discipline. Chains of command can be responsible only up to a certain point. Individual soldiers should take the initiative to help the Army maintain a positive image by policing themselves... so quit that dang cussing!

FOR THE RECORD

Fort Benning Schools

In a recent Bayonet article that covered the Loyd School Soldiers' Breakfast, Dr. Judy Gilliam was quoted as saying, "It is possible to tell the parents who care. They are the ones whose children do the best in school."

A parent who was not at the Soldiers' Breakfast and was, therefore, unable to hear her remarks in context has expressed some concerns regarding that comment. The opening of Gilliam's welcoming speech is printed here to clarify and expand upon the quoted comment:

"We appreciate your attendance here today. It doesn't escape our attention that your job is a demanding one, with long hours away from home.

" In spite of your absences from home, we know you are greatly concerned about your children and their work and play at school. In many ways, each of you communicates to us your commitment to your children.

" We can easily recognize a parent's involvement with his (or her) children and their education. Those children whose parents are strongly and positively involved in school have a greater chance for success in all areas of life — physical, emotional, social, psychological and academic.

"I have said to many parents, 'You are the experts on your children. You are the child's first and most important teacher. What you do with your child is more important than any other factor. This is not a power to be taken lightly.'

"We appreciate your support and intend to make every effort to strengthen the home-school connection. When we work together, your child wins."

Gilliam comments as well as the comments of the featured speaker on that morning, were in recognition of the important role that parents play in the lives of their children.

Her comments reflect a belief found in all Fort Benning schools that all children can achieve success in school and that success is measured on an individual basis for each individual child in many different areas and in many different ways.

Eng. Corps helps in civil crisis

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — "Investing in America." This is how some observers might label the Army Corps of Engineers' effort this spring to bail out waterfront Chicago from the millions of gallons of water that flowed from the Chicago River through a hole and into the city's underground system of freight tunnels.

We're accustomed to hearing the success stories about how the corps' various districts and divisions help civilian communities overcome and recover from natural disasters like earthquakes and floods. But in the case of the Chicago Flood of 1992, we have seen more cause for celebrating the Army's contributions to our nation.

Pumping out flood water from areas above ground has its share of risks and procedure. But when a massive volume of water lies below the ground, as it did in Chicago, a whole new set of rules and risks come into play. For example:

• How fast can you pump water before causing a disparity in water pressure that could damage underground structures?

• What special resources are needed to get the job done swiftly, safely and economically? Here, relief planners and operators must draw upon, and perhaps improvise with, all available federal, state and local equipment, manpower and tools. Coordination among officials of government and industry has to be solidified long before operations begin.

Despite the formidable challenges, it all came together in a matter of several weeks — showing how Army people called upon in a civil emergency gave their best under trying, dangerous conditions.

Chalk up another example of "peacetime engagement" that we've come to expect from an Army committed to investing in America.

Asst. cmdt. outlines role

By Daniel Maloney
SOA Public Affairs Office

Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, an armored cavalry officer from the army of Chile, assumed the duties of assistant commandant in January after serving as the secretary of the Advisory Committee to the commander-in-chief of the Chilean army.

Molina attended the School of the Americas while it was still at Fort Gulick, Panama. Now, as the assistant commandant, he envisions the school as a tool for cohesion among the forces of the Americas.

"The School of the Americas has a special role in giving the people who come here an opportunity to know people of other armed forces and to get some military integration," Molina said.

"Integration is very important to the new order the world is leading now and SOA is the only organization where you will find the majority of Latin American countries represented," he added.

An accomplished author of three books on the Chilean political scene and a contributor to different military publications, Molina holds a master of arts degree in political science from the University of Chile in Santiago.

Having served in several prestigious positions within the military and government of Chile, Molina brings vast experience to a position that requires him to fill a dual role.

"My main activity is to be an advisor to the commandant in Latin American activities. I also act as the breech between the commandant and the Latin American personnel serving here."

One of the most important activities Molina involves himself with is training, and he feels Fort Benning is an ideal post for the school.

"Fort Benning provides the necessary support to training activities. It has a lot of different resources."

In addition to the post's resources, Molina is also impressed with the level of support from the Columbus area.

"In my three months here, I've had the opportunity to confirm that the Columbus society cooperates with the School of the Americas and the Latin American personnel," he said.

A 1967 graduate of the Military School in Santiago, Molina is joined here by his wife, Rosita, and their daughters, Macarena and Paula.

Troop seeks scouts

By Daniel Maloney
SOA Public Affairs Office

In order to give the sons of guest instructors and permanent party personnel the opportunity to become Cub Scouts or Boy Scouts, the School of the Americas is sponsoring its own troop.

Pack 237 of the Fort Benning District, Chattahoochee Valley Council of the Boy Scouts of America, was chartered in the fall to provide Spanish-language instruction for boys ages 6 to 10 and 11 to 18 years of age.

According to Dean Sims, district executive, once the school's commandant, Col. Jose R. Feliciano, agreed to sponsor a troop, Pack 237 quickly became a reality.

The next step was finding a leader. This is when Staff Sgt. Felix Hernandez, noncommissioned officer -in-charge of Intelligence (S-2) at SOA's School Battalion, stepped in as troop leader.

Visiting with students on post, Pack 237 found its first scouts.

However, according to Sims and Hernandez, the number of members has dropped since, and Pack 237 is looking for new scouts.

The pack breaks the instruction down for those boys in the Cub Scout age group (6 to 10) and the Boy Scout age group (11 to 18).

Within that instruction are the "main aspects of the program - building character, citizenship and physical and mental fitness," Sims said.

In addition, the sons of guest instructors can continue scouting in their home countries. "The program is worldwide; every Latin American country has scouting," Sims said.

Interested parents should contact Hernandez at 545-4143 or 545-3052.

Media Day

Local reporters briefed on SOA's future

By Daniel Maloney
SOA Public Affairs Office

The School of the Americas hosted a Media Day April 6 to offer local media some insight to the school, its mission and its future.

Hosted by Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant of SOA, the briefings included the mission of the school, as well as the human rights awareness program and an explanation of "SOA 2000," the school's training vision for the next century.

The media received a command briefing on the school's objective to train Latin American officers and enlisted soldiers in American military doctrine.

Following the command briefing, Feliciano introduced Elena Amos, widow of American Family Life Assurance Company founder John B. Amos and a supporter of the school

According to Feliciano, it was Amos who came up with the idea for a media day.

Amos said she felt there was a misunderstanding about the school.

"I feel strongly about this school and just as Harvard does not teach about junk bonds or other things that happen on Wall Street, this school cannot control what some students do when they leave."

Controlling what students are taught at SOA remains the focal point of the school's mission and to this end SOA 2000 was developed.

According to Feliciano, SOA 2000 was designed as a program to support United States national security objectives.

Within the national security objectives lie the Army's strategic roles in support of national security. SOA 2000 answers directly to the strategic roles of the Army through course development.

Among the current courses, the schools' Counternarcotics Operations Course is a timely and necessary block of instruction for the students who return home to fight the drug war.

Currently, SOA is the only institution in the United States offering this type of instruction, Feliciano said.

Courses to be added as part of SOA 2000 are: Civil-Military Operations, Executive-Field Level Logistics, Joint Operations and Resource Management.

According TO "SOA 2000" literature, the school's aim is being responsible for satisfying all Latin American training requirements by the year 2000.

SOA civilians earn U.S. citizenship, success

By Daniel Maloney
SOA Public Affairs Office

Living in a democracy offers a wide variety of opportunities for those willing to strive for success.

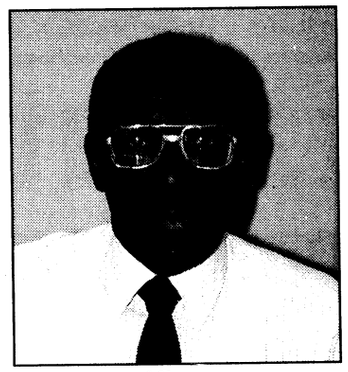
Success in America is often times synonymous with hard work and a desire to achieve.

For many, becoming citizens of this country takes work and very often leads to success and a better life.

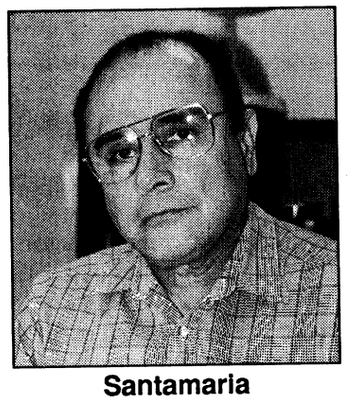
According to a small group of civilian employees in the Language Services Division of the School of the Americas, life in Panama under Gen. Manuel Noriega meant hard times until they were offered the chance to start a new life as citizens of the United States.

Walter Santamaria, Earl King and Margarita Barcenas established residency in 1986 and, after five years of waiting, were recently sworn in as citizens of the United States.

Barcenas



King



Santamaria

Santamaria and Barcenas travelled to Atlanta in December for their swearing in and King raised his hand in Macon.

"It was sort of a dream come true," said Santamaria, chief of LSD.

"We brought our families, became established here, and the ending is we live happily ever after, in between a lot of insecurity," Santamaria added.

The process of attaining citizenship started once the three reached the United States, but the plan that got them here was, at best, a tenuous one for many months

Their journey started in 1984 when the school moved from Fort Gulick, Panama, to Fort Benning.

Santamaria, Barcenas and King were, at the time, Panamanian citizens and although their skills were necessary for the school to operate, getting them to the U.S. proved difficult.

"At the time (of the move), we were offered permanent residence here if we came with the school," Santamaria said.

For three years the necessary paperwork and background checks were conducted involving such U.S. agencies as: the State Department, Labor Department and the Office of Personnel Management in Washington,D.C.

Every day the status changed, one moment they'd be going, the next it seemed unlikely.

For Santamaria the waiting was especially difficult. Although the school moved, the translation department stayed in Panama until translators could be hired at Fort Benning.

Santamaria, as the chief of LSD, would travel to Fort Benning and interview prospective

Karate instructor inspires students

By Daniel Maloney
SOA Public Affairs Office

An almost trance-like state of concentration overtakes the young student as he gracefully completes each step in the disciplined dance of the kata.

Completing katas is one of several martial arts' disciplines Ryan Black has learned as a student of Staff Sgt. David Bauzo's martial arts class.

Bauzo, the noncommissioned officer in charge of the Property Book Office for the School of the Americas, organized the Fort Benning Youth Services karate team, the "Sidekicks."

Bauzo sets aside his Monday and Wednesday evenings to pass on his belief and love for a sport that currently demands much of his free time.

A second-degree black belt with more than 20 years experience, Bauzo is currently training for a spot on the U.S. Olympic Tae Kwon Do Team.

However, it's teaching others the sport he loves that seems to give him the most satisfaction.

"As a teacher it gives me a sense of accomplishment to see that six or 10 years down the line these kids were influenced in a positive way by me," Bauzo said.

On an individual level, I get a sense of fulfillment that I'm doing something to ensure a better tomorrow. These kids will remember that I did something for them and maybe they will do something for someone else," he added.

According to Black, Bauzo is an excellent instructor who communicates well with children and adults while maintaining the authority to instruct effectively. "You know he is to be respected."

Black, an 18-year old brown belt, has been studying martial arts for five years (more than four of those years as a student of Bauzo's).

Although the students train to compete in tournaments, Black is equally interested in other aspects of the sport. "I'm interested in the self-discipline and improving my physical and mental strength," he said.

"He's a very good instructor who gives good examples," Guy said. "Everything he tells you, he can justify and show in an actual situation."

Guy, a 15-year-old yellow belt, first became interested in the sport through his friendship with Black. Now, he seems to be hooked. "I'm constantly thinking about it or doing it."

The physical and mental discipline also attracted Guy to the sport, however he sees the sport as a way to achieve success in life as well.

Through the sport he has learned to set goals and it's "a real rush to achieve those goals."

Some of Bauzo's younger students started taking lessons because they were being teased by kids at school.

Christian Ossa, a 9-year-old beginner, decided to study martial arts because he wanted to learn to protect himself. "Boys at school were bugging me and always wanted to start a fight."

Eight-year old Rebecca Davis was drawn to Bauzo's class for the same reason. Since she started almost two years ago, she's been channeling her energies toward tournament events.

In fact, Bauzo's students are generally successful when it comes to placing or winning tournaments.

Recently, in the fighting category at the Alabama State Championships Guy finished first in the 14 to 16 age group. In the same competition, Black and Davis finished fourth in their respective age groups.

According to Jebryan Fowler, a 10-year-old student of Bauzo's, success in tournaments comes from the training Bauzo supervises. "He's taught us a lot of things. When you work hard and train hard, you can win in tournaments and it feels good," said Fowler.

The success of the Sidekicks is evident to anyone who follows the local tournaments and much of this success comes from discipline.

During a recent training session, Bauzo was able to turn some of the instructing duties over to students and respect was maintained.

Bauzo's knowledge and influence as an instructor and a master of the martial arts comes out in his students--providing proof of his ability to pass on the sport he loves to teach and compete in.

a desire to see the school become a combination of all the armed forces with a larger representation of Air Force and Navy personnel.

Part of the school's curriculum and one which continues to grow and expand is human rights awareness.

"The school's policy is an outgrowth of the Army's strategic role," said Dr. Richard Gorell, historian and human rights instructor for SOA.

"We demonstrate how a successful, professional-size force operates in a democratic society."

Principles of the Declaration of Independence, the U.S. Constitution and the Geneva Convention "permeate SOA training missions and foster cooperation among nations," Gorell said.

According to Gorell, the human rights awareness program is conducted in a formal and informal setting.

The formal instruction is conducted by appropriate military officers in the Law of Land Warfare from the Geneva Convention in every course at SOA, he said.

In addition, SOA invites guest lecturers who discuss military and social issues to include human rights.

During field training where the primary purpose is something else, human rights awareness becomes part of the exercise, Gorell said. In the Sniper Course students are required to distinguish between an enemy target and a civilian in order to pass their final phase of training. If they mistakenly fire on the civilian target they fail.

The informal side of the human rights awareness program can be something as simple as a conversation during a break over a cup of coffee or through the school's sponsorship program.

The Hosts of Latin Americans Organization or HOLA (which means hello in Spanish) was created to sponsor guest instructors and students enrolled in the school's 47-week Command and General Staff College.

Through sponsorship, Latin Americans are "exposed at a gut level to what America is all about and a cultural exchange takes place," said Cory Don Loomis, president of HOLA.

Within this environment friendships are established between people and a connection can be made between countries, he said.

Following the presentations, a question and answer period was held.

translators. The people he interviewed could have replaced not only King and Barcenas, but himself as well. However, this group's translation experience proved too much of an asset.

"It takes at least five years for a translator to be considered a journeyman," Santamaria said. Most of the applicants were unable to adequately translate between English and Spanish, he added.

Once it became obvious experience was needed, Santamaria, Barcenas and King consented to move to the United States.

Looking back, Barcenas recalled her indecision about moving, but she was so committed to the move when the time came, she sold her house in Panama.

In fact, all of them had to sacrifice something to start a life here.

Noriega's government put a freeze on all assets, leaving Santamaria with no alternative but to leave some of his money in a Panamanian bank.

King, however, was prepared for the worst, even before the school moved. In 1981, King was so convinced Panama was headed for trouble he had his sister, who lives in New York, sponsor him.

This sponsorship would have led to residency status, but King was unable to fulfill one requirement.

In order to maintain the sponsorship, King could not be outside the United States for more than 12 months. For years he planned his vacation around that time requirement so he could maintain his residency. Then in the fourth year of this five-year process, King was unable to get to the United States for a visit, so in 1986 King started from the beginning.

In the end, it was all worthwhile for King and his family. Elvia, his wife, and their three children all moved to the United States and opportunities have been opened to them, opportunities King said would never have been possible in Panama.

"You had to live in Panama to see how the situation was deteriorating. Kids were graduating from high school, but they had nothing to do because of unemployment," King said.

The unemployment led to demonstrations and eventually King knew he had to move to the United States so his children would have a chance to succeed.

"In the United States you have freedom of choice. One can do and be whatever he wants, whatever he wants to make of himself."

King's children are evidence of his belief in America's opportunities. His eldest son, Javier, is raising his family and working in the Columbus business community. Alex, his youngest son, is a medic stationed here with the 34th Medical Battalion, and his daughter, Gina Marie, is set to graduate from Carver High School and pursue a degree in nursing.

For Santamaria and Barcenas, coming to the United States also meant success for their families and themselves.

Santamaria and his wife, Lucy, saw their youngest daughter, Lilly, progress through high school and soon she will be graduating from Columbus College with a degree in medical technology. The Santamaria's eldest daughters, Lucybeth and Wilma, still live in Panama.

Barcenas was recently reunited with one of her daughters, Angeles Trevia, a nutritionist, who is planning on gaining her citizenship in the future. Her other daughter, Rina de Gomez, is a dentist who still lives in Panama.

On an individual level, Santamaria, King and Barcenas have continued successful careers with the school.

Barcenas has been with the school for 36 years; Santamaria has worked for SOA for 32 years and with the Department of Defense for 40 years. King has completed 28 years of civilian service with DoD.

"I like this way of life," Barcenas said. "Here you have a future."

Army cares for soldiers with HIV

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

What happens to you if you are a soldier who becomes infected with the HIV virus?

It doesn't mean the end of your career, said Lt. Col. Rene Sanchez, chief of Preventive Medicine.

"You aren't put out of the Army. You're given medical support, counseling and a major medical evaluation every six months," he said.

It's only when their health deteriorates to the point that they cannot perform their jobs that HIV-positive soldiers are medically boarded, added Sanchez.

"The Army gives quite a bit of leeway to soldiers who are HIV-positive as far as continuing their military careers," Sanchez continued.

Soldiers who are HIV-positive can still re-enlist, change their military occupational specialties and attend professional development courses such as the Noncommissioned Officer Academy.

There are some restrictions placed on soldiers infected with the HIV virus, however.

Soldiers who are HIV-positive are non-deployable overseas. For this reason, they are unable to be assigned to ranger or special operations units.

Sanchez said the reason the Army must take precautions is to prevent infected soldiers from spreading the virus.

"During wartime, on the battlefield your source of blood is the guy next to you," he said.

Sanchez also pointed out that people who have HIV are beginning to live longer.

"When I started out in this business in 1987, something like 60 percent of HIV-positive patients would die within five years of exposure. That is no longer true," he said.

Sanchez said that people infected with the virus are beginning to live longer, and he forsees a time when medical advancements will allow them to live even longer until a vaccine or cure is developed.

The bottom line though, is that the Army does whatever it can to help HIV-positive soldiers maintain their health and their careers.

Applications now available for enlisted transition program

Headquarters, Department of the Army is reopening the Enlisted Voluntary Early Transition Program to enlisted soldiers who are affected by retention control point policy changes.

In particular, the Voluntary Separation Incentive and Special Separation Benefit programs have reopened to Category 1 and 2 personnel.

All soldiers in the rank of corporal or specialist promotable and below with more than seven years of service as of Dec. 31 may apply under Category 1.

Category 2 is open to soldiers in the rank of sergeant and sergeant promotable with 12 or more years of service as of Dec. 31.

Soldiers qualified under Categories 1 and 2 are encouraged to request the VSI/SSB incentive rather than face involuntary separation for exceeding the number of years of service under the revised retention control points. Soldiers who do not apply will be scheduled for involuntary separation.

All applications must be processed through command channels. Approval authority continues to be the first colonel in the chain of command.

Recommendations for disapproval must be forwarded to commander, Total Army Personnel Command.

Soldiers with six or more years of service as of Dec. 5 who are denied reenlistment also remain eligible for VSI/SSB. Applications must include the PERSCOM message denying the soldier retention.

Soldiers may apply now but must request to separate on or before Sept. 29. Specific separation dates may vary based on workload at Transition Center.

15-year retirement questionable

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — A 15-year retirement is still just in the talking stages, said Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Carney, the Army's deputy chief of staff for personnel.

"I understand this is a proposal of Sen. Sam Nunn, the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee," he said. "But it has not shown up in draft legislation, at least not that we have seen for comment."

Carney said he can't predict the outcome of the issue until he sees "the nuts and bolts of it." But he did give his views on what such a program should entail.

"I would say that it must be selective," he said. "In order to meet our force-reduction and readiness goals, we cannot afford to authorize everyone who wants to select their retirement after 15, 16 or 17 years' service.

"We would have to target it very carefully, to meet the needs of filling the base force with the proper grades and skills," Carney concluded.

Archaeology, 'Home of the Infantry' balances training with preservation

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning is more than just the Home of the Infantry. It's also home to nearly 1,000 known archaeological sites and more than 550 buildings eligible for the National Register of Historic Places, said post archaeologist Dean Wood.

Wood said that the rich ecological diversity of the Fort Benning area has attracted people for thousands of years.

He added that the archaeological sites are equally diverse, ranging from Indian campsites and villages to farms and homesteads from all periods of American history.

At most of the sites, time and erosion have taken their toll and have left little to the visible eye.

"Some of the cabin sites of early settlers have nothing left except maybe a rusted nail or two and some broken pieces of English-made pottery," Wood said.

At the Eelbeck mill site on Pine Knot Creek, which dates from the early 1800s and was home to successive mills well into the 20th century, only waterlogged timbers and concrete foundations remain of what was once a bustling community.

The task of inventorying and preserving Fort Benning's historic resources falls under the Environmental Management Division, part of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing.

The division is also involved with 17 other programs on post that deal with such concerns as timber management, fish and wildlife management, and natural resources management, said Maj. John Orosz, division chief.

"In regards to archaeology, we have a responsibility to ensure that our training actions don't interfere with the preservation of the sites and to ensure that Fort Benning remains in compliance with state and federal laws," said Orosz.

Wood said the intent of the division is in no way to hamper Fort Benning's military role.

"Federal law mandates we protect these sites," he said. "We completely understand that the 182,000 acres here are for the training of the infantry and we support that.

"You can have both the training and the preservation of cultural and natural resources."

When training or development is to take place in an archaeologically sensitive area, the division has two options, Orosz said: coordinate with the participating units to avoid the site or conduct a formal dig to document what was there for informational purposes before the site is destroyed.

Wood said that fortunately the most sensitive sites are in areas that are not used for training and that at other sites conflicts rarely arise as long as proper planning and coordination take place.

Orosz reminded would-be treasure hunters that such activities are expressly forbidden by the National Historical Preservation Act and the Archaeological Resources Protection Act of 1979.

Infractions carry stiff penalties ranging from fines of $100,000 to $250,000 and imprisonment from one to five years.

"The laws clearly stipulate that anyone investigating archaeological sites must have a permit or they will be subject to penalties," said Orosz.

Orosz also emphasized the importance of preserving not only archaeological sites on post, but all of the natural resources on Fort Benning.

"One of the most important things soldiers on Fort Benning should realize is that if our training areas are not taken care of, they no longer continue to be renewable resources; we won't have a Fort Benning anymore.

"We need to be good stewards of the land and preserve what we have or we won't have good training areas in the future," he said.

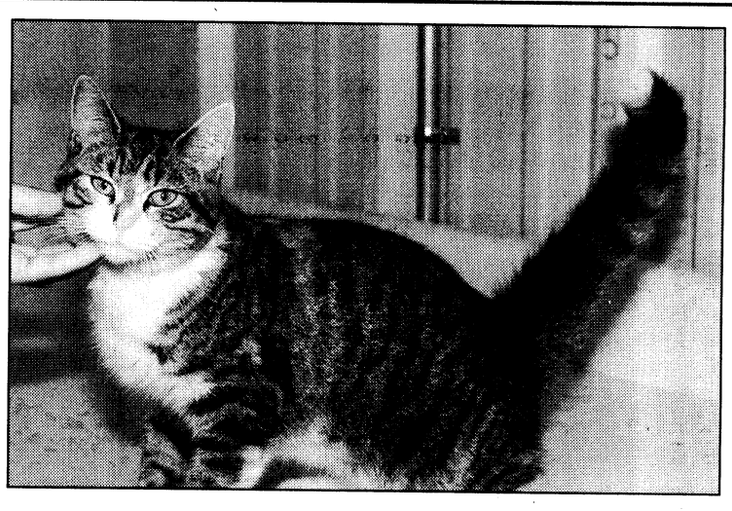
PET OF THE WEEK



This is a stray female kitten, and she is looking for a home. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 Years Ago Today, May 29, 1942

Two columns of German armor began a drive against the British 8th Army in North Africa, and they succeeded in driving the British back toward Tobruk. However, the British seem unshaken and confident that the German force is only on a probing mission and will be driven back.

The Royal Air Force reports that it destroyed nine planes, several tanks, and also strafed the German columns in the face of light resistance from the Germans.

Fierce battles raged between the Russian and German armies in the area of Kharkov, USSR.

The Russian attack of three weeks ago was thrown back to an area near where it started from when German reserves were committed to the battle.

The lines appear to be stabilizing, but attempts by both sides to break enemy positions continue.

Nazi broadcasts claim that 165,000 prisoners were captured when the German army surrounded part of the Soviet army during German counterattacks.

In response to the attempted assassination of Deputy Gestapo Chief Reinhard Heydrich, seven people have been executed in Bohemia. Nazi claims indicate that all seven were implicated in the attempt, or at least in knowing of the attempt and not turning in those responsible. After having three bullets removed by surgeons, Heydrich is in grave condition and not expected to live.

The destroyer USS Blakeley reached Port Castries, St. Lucia, today after suffering a second submarine attack in three days. The Blakeley was damaged by a torpedo while on patrol off Martinique and, while limping to port at St. Lucia, was again torpedoed. The Blakeley is now safe in harbor, and the submarine was sunk by Allied aircraft.

In a special session called by President Camacho, the Mexican legislature is meeting to discuss a declaration of war with the Axis powers. The Mexican congress will most likely approve the declaration "without much delay or much, if any, debate."

The Chinese army appears to be holding back the Japanese in both Burma and northern China. The Chinese forces holding the provincial capital of Chekiang have repelled the Japanese despite the addition of 10,000 Japanese reserves.

In Burma, the Chinese army has made some small advances against the Japanese in the vicinity of Tengyueh.

The Brazilian air force is claiming to have sunk an Axis submarine. This comes as hostility in Brazil mounts after the torpedoing of several Brazilian ships.

A statement by the Brazilian Air Ministry called the Axis attacks "cowardly" and indicated that Brazil was ready to defend her right to the seas, as well as Brazilian ships and crews.

Mission: Leadership Training

Fort Benning's PLDC not all fun; tough work for Army's future leaders

By Charles Milligan
Henry Caro NCO Academy

Students in Primary Leadership Development Course Class 6-92, under the control of the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy cadre conducted a three-day field training exercise from May 16 to 18 on Wendy Field, the NCOA training site.

According to Master Sgt. Grady Snell Jr., the PLDC branch chief at NCOA, the purpose of the exercise was to give the students the opportunity to use their school training in real world missions.

"Each student had to perform in two leadership positions during the exercise and execute all missions at platoon and squad level," said Snell. "Cadre, who are referred to as small group instructors, accompanied each squad on their missions."

The students performed missions, which included raids, ambushes, movement to contacts, assaults and defenses.

"I really didn't understand at first exactly what I was suppose to do," said Spc. Lizzie M. Bowen of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 10th Aviation Regiment of Fort Rucker, Ala. "The other soldiers and my small group instructor helped me understand the concept and the importance of my position."

Spc. Alison B. Boswell of the 13th Ordnance Detachment from Fort Gillem in East Point, Ga., was the squad leader during the company deliberate attack.

"We assaulted across the objective and then set up for a counterattack," said Boswell. "I think it was good training for those of us who don't perform these types of missions in our MOSs (military occupational specialties). "

Boswell said the training will aid her in surviving if she finds herself in a combat zone.

> If you plan on surviving in a combat zone, you need to learn the types of missions we executed.
>
> — Spc. John F. Vann
> 36th Engineer Group

Each student had to follow certain steps to ensure the success of his or her mission. The cadre evaluated the students on how well they performed in leadership positions.

During the missions, key personnel were taken out of action by injury or death. At that time, a new leader would take over, reorganize and continue with the mission.

"This gave the students an idea of realism," said Snell. "In combat, soldiers in leadership positions can be killed or injured and the next one in charge could be an specialist or below. Success, therefore, lies in our ability to teach privates to perform duties as an NCO."

"If you plan on surviving in a combat zone, no matter what your MOS, you need to learn the type of missions we executed," said Spc. John F. Vann of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 13th Supply and Service Battalion, 36th Engineer Group. "I learned a lot about training, conducting classes and being an effective leader."

Bowen summed it up by saying, "All soldiers should attend PLDC; it prepares junior leaders to become NCOs."

Post sets aside day for safety classes

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment participated in Force Protection Day May 21.

Force Protection Day is a postwide event aimed at conducting safety classes in an effort to prevent future injuries and bring an awareness to specific areas of risk. The battalion discussed three hazard areas — motorcycle safety, boating safety and bicycle safety.

A motorcycle safety class was given by Staff Sgt. William Yardley. A motorcycle rider himself, Yardley emphasizes that, "The experienced riders must sit down and tell the new riders, 'hey these bikes are dangerous and if you don't ride responsibly you're going to get hurt.'"

It was also pointed out that 50 percent of all fatal' motorcycle accidents show alcohol involvement.

Boating safety classes and inspections were given by the Columbus Coast Guard Auxiliary at the Main Mall parking lot .

Emerson Addington, a member of the Coast Guard Auxiliary, said, "We have been here this morning to bring an awareness of boating safety and to perform complete safety checks of boats so they'll be safe on the water according to state and federal laws."

Chief's suggestion pays

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

A suggestion for an improvement in the way the tank turrent ring of the M-1 Abrams tank is lubricated paid Chief Warrant Officer 4 Andrew T. Boston $900.

Boston is currently assigned to the Engineer Equipment Maintenance Office of 36th Engineer Group as the-support/staff maintenance technician.

"I was at the 5th Infantry Division, Fort Polk, Louisiana, when I noticed that we were having problems with the M-1 Tank turrets locking up due to improperly lubricated turret rings," said Boston.

He explained that he examined the problem and found that the procedures listed in the technical manual for the lubrication of the turret ring was complicated and time consuming, therefore, causing soldiers to omit proper lubrication.

"As the maintenance officer, I would think that it was a lack of proper information getting to the soldiers, and this was possibly the reason the rings were not properly lubricated," said Boston "The reality was it was just not being done and the money and manhours it cost to repair the damage was something my unit could no longer afford. I knew there had to be a better way."

Drawing on his knowledge and experience, Boston came up with a simple solution to an apparently complex problem.

"After analyzing the problem, it came to me," Boston said. "Simply add a lubrication fitting to the ring. This was a simple idea and one we could do at the unit level. I directed a sample be done on one of the broken M-1s."

After a simple modification to the turret ring ball insert, a lubricating fitting was added.

"It worked," said Boston. "The complicated lubrication process was reduced from one that took more than an hour to complete to one that took 15 minutes. Plus, it saves a division size unit at least $100,000 per year in repair and replacement cost."

Boston continued, " I encourage all soldiers and civilian employees who think of a way to improve something to submit it for evaluation, you never know it just might pay off."

Boston was officially commended by Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White for his innovative suggestion and for his support of the Army Ideas for Excellence Program.

43rd Engineer Battalion

The 43rd Engineer Battalion held a best dayroom competition May 9.

The contest ended in a four-way tie.

Company A's efforts showed the history of the armed forces, while Co. B displayed part of Army history with pictures from the '50s and old technical manuals.

Co. C's dayroom was decorated with banners to welcome home the soldiers who recently returned from Costa Rica.

Headquarters Support Company also had a military theme to its decorations, with flags, posters and a life-like mannequin named Eckhart dressed up as a soldier.

The contest, designed to boost morale and a spirit of friendly competition, was judged by the group commander, Col. Phillip Anderson.

Acension helps to awaken our spirits

By George W. Holston
30th Adjutant General Battalion chaplain

One of my favorite movies is "Awakenings," starring Robin Williams and Robert DeNiro. Williams portrays a neurologist at a New York hospital. Several of his patients have been in a semi-comatose state for decades due to disease.

Through massive doses of a drug called "L'Dopa," the patients are awakened for a brief period of time. The living dead are called out of the tomb and for a moment know the power of love and life over the finality of death. Unfortunately, the effects of the L'Dopa wears off and the patients return to their semi-comatose state.

The ascension begins at the cross. Jesus cries out. "My God, my God, why have you abandoned me? Father, into your hands I commit my spirit." The light goes out of the world; darkness descends. The Son of God slips into that sleep of death with a quiet statement, "It is finished." The creator sleeps and with him all creation, awaiting that moment of awakening.

Sometime between sunset on Saturday and daybreak on Sunday morning an earthquake rumbles through the holy city. A stone is rolled away from the mouth of a tomb and Jesus emerges triumphant over the final enemy, which is death. The son of God awakens to a new creation, and the new covenant is finally and firmly established.

The ascension is a continuation of the awakening that began on Easter. Jesus departs the physical world because it can no longer contain him. He has grown beyond the limits of the human body and thus returns to the source of all life. We witness this departure in wonder and with a little bit of sadness. We don't quite understand what is taking place. He tells us to wait until we encounter the Spirit.

We are invited into the same awakening that begins at the resurrection. In baptism we die as Christ has died for us and are raised to a new life. We die and know in that moment the power of resurrection. The new creation takes root within our souls and our entire being is transformed into the image of God. We are awakened, our souls come to life, and we taste the sweet, new wine of the new creation.

In this awakening, our souls begin to expand, they grow in the presence of the Father's grace. Our souls know the depth of forgiveness. Ultimately our souls are awakened to the point where our bodies can no longer serve as home. Our bodies die and our souls go into the light.

In this moment of awakening, we come to understand that Jesus departs from the confines of this world in order to extend his presence in the person of the Holy Spirit. He departs in the ascension in order to greet us in the rush of the mighty wind on Pentecost morning. Our task is simply to await our own moment of awakening knowing that our awakening will be the same as our Lord's. Thus, the new creation continues to expand until the whole creation is filled with the glory of God as the waters cover the sea.

11th Inf. soldier pumps up for life

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Leon Johnson, a sergeant first class with Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, got his start in bodybuilding after he became ill just shy of his 30th birthday. That was in 1988 and his body fat was up along with his blood pressure.

When Johnson started lifting weights, the blood pressure started to come down and the body fat dropped. Almost a year later, after a friend talked him into trying bodybuilding, Johnson entered his first contest and placed second in his weight division in the 1989 Fort Benning Mr. and Ms. Bodybuilding contest.

Johnson was active in other sports before getting into the gym. An avid basketball player who also played football and some tennis, he has virtually given them all up for the gym and bodybuilding.

Johnson works out at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center two to three times a day for approximately three to four hours a day in the off season.

The closer he gets to a contest, Johnson comes in twice a day for no more than an hour each time. On the second trip, he usually works on specific body parts.

Johnson's diet consists of chicken, fish, rice, spaghetti, toast and egg whites. He tries to stay away from fatty foods, due to his illness in 1988. Two weeks before a competition, he drops his caloric intake from around 3,300 calories a day to about 1,800 calories two weeks out from a competition.

Johnson also takes vitamins and amino acids, because when he diets, his body needs the extra vitamins.

Johnson said that he believes the use of anabolic steroids in bodybuilding has hurt the sport, because the guys who come into the gym to train won't go on stage to compete with others who have taken the drug.

Johnson feels that the competition on Fort Benning has gotten much better over the last few years.

"The guys who are coming in from Germany are looking good. The guy that won the Fort Benning contest last year looks real good," said Johnson. He believes that last year since everyone was in Saudi Arabia, he got a break.

"He won't get a break this year."

RE-TIE NOW TO SAVE HEARTBREAKS LATER

If you've been bass fishing very long, the chances are you've experienced the heartbreak of losing a big fish.

Fish get free for a variety of reasons, but one of the most common is broken line. Anglers simply need to learn to re-tie their lures more often.

That's the advice of top money winning tournament angler Larry Nixon, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff and former winner of the Bass Masters Classic* world championship.

"In tournament fishing, it only takes losing one bass that could have won you a lot of money to make you start re-tying your lures," says Nixon. "It's happened to me, and now I probably re-tie more than most."

Two factors usually determine how often Nixon does re-tie his line -- the amount of cover he's fishing, and the number of fish he's catching.

"If I'm working in really thick cover and know my line is continually rubbing against logs, rocks, sticks or even grass, I will re-tie at least once every 30 minutes," he says. "I check my line repeatedly, feeling the line above the hook for any signs of wear, such as nicks, frays or general roughness. If I feel anything, I clip the line and re-tie my lure."

"The other factor that really tells me when to re-tie is when I'm catching a lot of fish. I check my line after every bass I catch, but if I'm hooking and playing a lot of bass, I usually re-tie after every three or four fish."

Bass can be rougher on line than cover, explains the pro. Although they don't have actual teeth, bass can easily fray a line on the rough surface around their mouths. "Re-tying is most critical with lighter, smaller lines," says Nixon. "If you're using a line such as six or eight pound test, you really have to take care of it. A tiny nick on six pound test line is much more serious than the same nick on 25 pound test."

Many anglers who lose fish blame the line when it breaks, but Nixon puts the blame on the angler. "Today's quality lines are so well made that they rarely fail except when they're abused by the fisherman," he says. "You can abuse a line many ways, too, like leaving it out in the hot sun, continually stretching it if you snag your lure, or always pulling it against a rough surface."

"These things will weaken any line and cause it to break, but the most common breaking point is the first several feet above your hook where fish or heavy cover will wear it the most. If you feel any type of abrasion when you rub this part of the line, you should clip it off and re-tie your lure."

Nixon can speak from the experience of losing an important bass to broken line. It happened during the final afternoon of the 1977 Bass Masters Classic when a broken line let the winning fish escape. Ever since then he's been a firm believer in re-tying his line.

Hunters become prey

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Islanders and the Hunters fought tooth and nail Thursday evening at Gowdy Field with the Islanders coming out on top with a 16-13 win in women's softball.

The Hunters took a 5-0 lead in the top of the first inning when Islander pitcher Stephanie Burton couldn't find the strike zone and issued four walks. Two singles, a fielders choice and a run batted in groundout gave the Hunters what should have been a comfortable lead at the end of 1/2 inning.

In the bottom half of the inning, the Islanders got right back in the game when Misi Vimoto led off the inning with a solo homer.

Five walks, three singles and two errors led to nine runs crossing the plate for the Islanders in the bottom of the first. At the end of one, the Islanders had regained the lead 10-5.

In the top of the second inning, Burton lost the strike zone once again and walked the first five batters and plated two runs before the Hunters ever got a hit or an out. With the bases still loaded, Burton settled down and got the next two batters out before issuing another run scoring walk.

A single by second baseman Dayna Carney plated two more runs before Burton induced catcher Patricia Paquette to hit a grounder to second baseman Pue Lagafuania to end the inning.

The Hunters had come back to tie the game at 10 all.

In the bottom of the second inning, the Islanders took the lead for good when they scored six runs on just one hit. Five walks, an error and a misplayed fielders choice led to the Hunters demise in the inning.

Three straight walks to start the inning loaded the bases for right fielder Bonnie Houge, Houge bounced the ball right back to pitcher Sharon Cox who threw to home plate but catcher Paquette couldn't handle the throw and a run scored. A single by Vimoto scored two more runs.

A walk to Burton loaded the bases for Bonnie Schultz who smacked a grounder to shortstop Luise Lewis, who flipped to second baseman Lagafuaina. Lagafuaina couldn't make the play at second and another run scored.

A grounder to second forced out the runner from first for the Islanders' first out of the inning, but two more runs were able to cross the plate when everyone kept running on the play and the throw to home plate was not in time to get the second runner.

A fly ball out to left and a strike out ended the inning for the Islanders but the score was now Islanders 16, Hunters 10.

In the top of the third inning, the Hunters tried to get back in the game.

Two errors, a walk and two singles plated three runs for the Hunters, but a line out to third, a strikeout and a grounder to second ended the rally and the game for the Hunters.

The 1 hour and 15 minute time limit for softball games ended the game after the third out was recorded by the Islanders.

Want to have some family fun, win some prizes and teach your children something in the process? The Community Life Mayors' Council is sponsoring a Family Safety Carnival Saturday in the east parking lot of Infantry Hall.

The main focus of all activities will be on children in grades kindergarten through sixth grade, but all ages are welcome.

Events will include the announcement of the Safety Poster Contest winners, a bike rodeo in which the Military Police Activity will have a bicycle safety course set up, McGruff, the crime dog, and Blinky, the talking patrol car will be on hand to entertain children and there will be fingerprinting and videotaping of children for identification purposes.

Other highlights will include a Drug Abuse Resistence through Education display, a puppet show, a fire truck for children to see up close, a demonstration on how to put out fires, a lawn mower safety demonstration and display and boating and water safety displays.

Free door prizes and handouts will include a $50 U.S. Savings Bond for the winners in the four categories of the Safety Poster Contest, free bowling passes, bicycle safety equipment, bicycle reflectors, helium balloons, fire extinguishers and coloring books related to safety for children.

White School celebrates 50th

By Connie Bridges

"Both Edward and I were 'Army brats' who went to school on Fort Benning at one time, so it means a lot to my family that this school was named after him."

Retired Brig. Gen. Charles White Jr. made these remarks May 19 at the 30th birthday celebration of Edward A. White School, which bears his brother's name.

Fifteen years older than his brother who was killed in action in Korea, White spoke at a student assembly in the Youth Activities Center and talked about their family relationship.

With so many years between them, they were both virtually raised as only children, he said. He encouraged the children to make a special effort in the educational areas they find difficult, and he empathized with them about having to do a lot of moving when you're part of a military family.

Also part of the assembly was a musical presentation by Jane Pride's second-graders. They sang about what life was like in the classroom 30 years ago.

This was followed by birthday cake in the classroom to honor the special occasion.

Originally, the school planned to examine the contents of a time capsule buried by the Student Council in 1976. However, according to Principal Janet Winn, the time capsule wasn't put into the ground properly, and there was nothing left of it.

A separate homecoming reception and tours of the school were held for alumni of the school.

Brownie Scouts 'Try it' at Camp Hideaway

Girl Scouts of America

Fort Benning Brownie Girl Scouts attended a Dabbler/Try-It Day April 25. More than 30 girls attended the day of activities, which was held at Camp Hideaway. Bridging Brownie Girl Scouts were offered the opportunity to earn the Dabbler World of Outdoors Badge, while younger girls could earn two Try-Its — Outdoor Adventurer and Outdoor Fun.

The Dabbler activities included a pre-activity of shopping for their lunch and a discussion of nutrition. They also participated in cooking the group's lunch of Girl Scout stew. Other activities included mapping and hiking, learning about Personal Flotation Devices, performing a Scout's Own, and making a list of environmental hazards. As a final activity, the girls were to take their environmental lists back to their troop and come up with solutions to the problems.

The Try-It girls were kept busy as well. Try-it activities included knife safety, weather relay, ecology hunt, touch, listen and smell, trail signs and knots.

Junior Girl Scouts travel to birthplace of founder

Girl Scouts of America

Junior Girl Scout Troop 193 was "Birthplace Bound" April 2 as the girls traveled to Savannah to tour the Juliette Gordon Low Center. The day began when the girls packed into the van at 5 a.m. to begin the trek to the roots of Girl Scouting.

The troop arrived in time to attend the special interest session "A Rainy Day in 1870," where the girls dressed up in period clothing and attempted a variety of activities that a girl in the 1870s would have done. They did cross-stitching, making tinsel pictures, and learning the language of the fan.

After a sack lunch in the park, the girls went to the house for a historic tour, where they were given a brief history lesson on Juliette Low.

A Scout's Own ceremony, where each girl received a pin commemorating their visit to the center, was held in the garden at the end of the tour. A walking tour of Savannah's Historic District followed before they traveled to the Gordon family gravesite, where momentoes from other Girl Scout troops abounded.

Retiree helps frame Army life

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

When Gail Keefover first went to Fort Benning's Milton E. Long Arts and Crafts Center on Eckel Street in 1987, it was to get help with his oil painting.

"The next thing I knew, I was employed," he said.

Keefover, recreation assistant at the center, is the framing expert who gives one-on-one instruction to those who want to learn this craft.

According to Bill Place, arts and crafts director, "Keefover does an excellent job and is a perfectionist in coordinating mats and frames. He won't accept anything that is not quality."

Originally, Keefover was in charge of and taught classes dealing with the photo lab, stained glass, oil painting, pottery and leatherwork at the Long Arts and Crafts Center.

However, November of last year saw budget cutbacks here as with the rest of the Army, and the second floor of the center was closed.

Currently, one-half of the area that used to be ceramics has been turned into the new framing shop. All of the other crafts that were in his domain have been tabled for the time being.

Keefover has built up this shop by word-of-mouth regarding his expertise.

Customers pay for the materials, such as framing molds and mats, and he guides them in using the machines to measure, cut, staple and glue, etc.

In March of 1991, Keefover was presented with a Community of Excellence Award, and he was also given a $100 courtesy award at one time.

However, he does the job because he likes it.

An Army sergeant major who retired after 26 years in the active military, he had his own construction company in this area from 1968 to 1987 when he went to work for the Long Arts and Crafts Center.

"I tried not working for awhile, but I got very tired of fishing," he said. "I'd been working all of my life since I was 16. After that, you can't just sit down and do nothing."

A native of Waterville, Kan., Keefover said that he decided to retire here because he liked the weather and the friendliness of the people.

After all of his years in the Army, he said being close to Fort Benning kept a little of "that military feeling."

He and his wife, Evelyn, have two sons, Thomas of Tallahassee, Fla., and James of Columbus, and four grandchildren.

Army food 'good to go'

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

If you thought that Burger King was the only place that you could "get it your way, right away" then you haven't been to the 598th Maintenance Company, 36th Engineer Group dining facility lately.

The dining facility now offers a take-out window for soldiers who are in the mood for some fast food.

"Dining facilities have always offered take-out service," said Ed Hilton, chief of Installation Food Services. "This is the first one that actually has a take-out window though," he added.

The window is located to the immediate left after entering the facility.

Soldiers can place and receive their orders at the window and then take another left into a small room that features other food items and a door to exit the dining facility.

During breakfast, for example, you can choose from among grits, hash browns, pancakes, English muffins, bacon, eggs made to order and omelettes at the window and then pick up such items as such as individual cans of juice, milk, fresh fruit and cereal from the adjoining room before exiting.

Sgt. 1st Class Charles Lowe, dining facility noncommissioned officer in charge, said that during lunch hours the take-out window features short order items such as hamburgers and hot dogs, and during dinner hours features the same items as the main line.

Lowe said that the take-out window concept, now in its third week, has been working well.

"It's especially helpful on P.T. mornings because soldiers aren't allowed in the regular dining facility with their sweaty P.T. uniforms. With the take-out window, soldiers who are running late can come through and get what they want," he said.

Hilton said that eventually all dining facilities will probably feature some sort of walk-up or possibly even drive-through take-out service.

"We want the soldiers to make use of our facilities. If they can get this at a fast food restaurant and not here, then they aren't going to use the dining facility," said Hilton.

Army Community Services program offers help for the parents of picky eaters

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Feeding Little Folks" was the focus of the Army Community Services program at the Custer Terrace Community Life Center May 20.

Lynette Harrell of the Georgia Extension Service gave pointers on how to get pre-schoolers to eat when they are going through the stages making them very selective about their food choices.

Harrell noted that there are reasons for all of their appetite changes.

If there is a disturbance in the home before a meal, if they are ill or tense, or if they are just not hungry because they filled up with water 30 minutes before mealtime— all of this can affect how small children eat.

She suggested calmness in the home prior to meals, bringing the children in from outdoors about 40 minutes before so they will not be asking for liquids from being overheated, but encouraging physical activity between meals because too much television time takes away an appetite.

Sometimes, just taking time to give them attention by talking to them will make them better eaters.

It is normal, Harrell said, for pre-schoolers to want to start being more independent by helping prepare for the meal by getting little things from the refrigerator, feeding themselves and making nutritious food choices like a raw carrot or a cooked one.

Don't let children watch television while eating, she advised. It allows them to become preoccupied.

"Mealtime should be a time when families should talk," Harrell said.

Also, make sure the food looks good, tastes good, is convenient and in a smaller portion for children.

If after doing all of these things, the child still refuses to eat, put the plate away.

Forcing childern to eat will most likely make them vomit. They will eat when they are hungry if not given junk food in between.

From the very beginning, children should be taught to eat nutritiously from the four food groups - dairy products, meats, fruits and vegetables and bread and cereals, she said.

If not, by the time they are 7 to 10, they won't be willing to try new things.

Harrell also noted that it is at the ages of 7 to 10 that weight problems can start to appear. It is too large of amounts of food that make a child overweight in the first place.

"Fat cells never leave. They just stay there waiting to be overfed again. So don't put them there in the first place," she said.

Harrell's was just one in a series of programs being put on by ACS at Custer Terrace with the help of the Community Life Office there and Mayor Dana Pund.

The next one is scheduled for June 17 at 10 a.m. on food preservation and canning tips.

On July 15 will be a workshop for kids on preparing quick breads, cakes and cookies:

ages 7 to 9 from 10 a.m. to noon

ages 10 to 12 from noon to 2 p.m.

ages 13 to 15 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Mary Allen, ACS Outreach coordinator, said that her office enjoys this link with the mayors, and the chance to learn what the community wants.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

Military History Division

50 Years Ago This Week

• The Battle of Midway began with American dive bombers attacking the Japanese fleet. In one intense day of fighting, the U.S. forces sunk the Japanese carriers Akagi, Kaga, Soryu and Hiryu, catching them with fuel and ammunition on their top decks. The USS Yorktown suffered crippling damage; however, the American success, achieved through considerable advanced intelligence gathering, was overwhelming.

• In North Africa, Field Marshall Erwin Rommel formed his Afrika Korps into a tight defensive semicircle known as the "Cauldron." The move successfully freed German supply routes previously blocked by the British.

• The Russians lost 250,000 men as the Germans completed a circling maneuver west of the Donets River.

• The British Bomber Command lost 75 planes in the fruitless "Thousand Plane Raids" on the German cities of Cologne and Essen.

•The battleships Colorado and Maryland sailed from San Francisco to reinforce the Pacific Fleet.

• Secretary of State Cordell Hull signed a Lend-Lease agreement with China.

• Fort Benning and Columbus continued their fight against the rampant wartime spread of venereal disease by moving toward more rigid enforcement of laws restricting liquor sales and club licensing as well as post-directed curfews.

DANTES helps troops 'be all they can be'

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Today's soldiers have to "be all they can be" in more ways than one or be left behind.

The Army's downsizing has forced soldiers to take a good, hard look at their careers and find ways to give themselves a winning edge.

Pursuing a civilian education as well as remaining proficient in military subjects is being looked at more and more as a way to attain that edge.

For most soldiers, taking courses in the evening after duty is not much of a problem. But, for some soldiers, this can be next to impossible. Their unit's mission requires a lot of field training time, or they work in shifts.

Is there a way for soldiers to get a college education and not set a foot in a classroom?

The answer to that question is yes, through the Defense Activity for Non-Traditional Support.

DANTES is a program that helps military members who can't take advantage of the usual extension programs offered by most installations, including Fort Benning, according to Charles Sheeks, education services specialist.

To meet the educational needs of these and other service members, DANTES offers a variety of tests and self-study programs.

Members can earn college credits for self-study and knowledge gained on the job by passing subject standardized tests or other tests, such as the College Level Examination Program, also known as CLEP tests, said Sheeks.

Credits gained through DANTES are from civilian sources — accredited colleges or based on recommendations from an appropriate, recognized civilian agency. Colleges award credits, not DANTES, said Sheeks.

The Military Evaluations Program offers service members the opportunity to receive college credits for their military experience.

The American Council on Education evaluates military occupations and service schools and recommends that college credit be given accordingly, said Sheeks.

Colleges and universities belonging to the Service members Opportunity Colleges awarded some 390,000 credit hours through this program in 1989.

Most DANTES-sponsored tests are free to service members. Although there has been discussion of extending the program to military family members, these services are now only available to active duty and reserve component soldiers.

For information, contact Sheeks at 545-3093 or 545-5826.

Military shooters go for gold

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Marine Staff Sgt. Roxane Thompson, the 1991 Armed Forces Athlete of the Year, led the way for military shooters at the Olympic trials for the sport pistol, rapid-fire, and free pistol events held May 14 to 17, at Chino, Calif.

Military shooters joining Thompson on the U.S. Olympic team are Staff Sgt. Ruby Fox, Staff Sgt. Darius Young, two Army Reservists; and Capt. John McNally from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, Fort Benning.

Thompson, who trained combat replacement troops for Operation Desert Storm, Quantico, Va., earned the position after winning the sport pistol trial. "I wasn't worried...I'm shooting world class scores right now and have been for the last two months," said the 27-year-old Marine. "My biggest competition on the line is myself. You're the only one who creates pressure. If you can beat yourself you can beat anybody."

Fox, a 1984 Olympic silver medalist in Los Angeles, earned a berth on her third consecutive Olympic team by finishing second behind Thompson. Fox left international shooting in 1989, and decided to make a comeback nine months ago.

"I didn't shoot a single round from June, 1989 to September of 1991. Then I did a lot of soul searching and decided that I just had to do it one more time," she said.

In rapid-fire pistol, McNally survived a series of gun malfunctions and ammunition problems to win the trial and a berth on his third consecutive Olympic team. "Even though I know I've got the talent, I came into today's semi-finals a little scared. I never think I've got it made. You can erode that lead so quickly," he said. "And I had a lot of malfunctions during the match. It was a combination of problems with the ammo and the firing pin."

In the Olympic free pistol trial, Young, who works as a college professor in industrial and vocational education in Winterburn, Alberta, Canada, captured the lone Olympic team position. Young's experience in competitive shooting goes way back. He started as a Marine in the late 1950s and then competed as a civilian for the next two decades. In 1978, he joined the Army Reserve.

The following are the military shooters who qualified to compete at Barcelona, July 25 through Aug. 8:

In the Marine Corps, Thompson in Sport Pistol.

In the Army Reserve, Fox in Sport Pistol, Young in Free/Air Pistol, and 1st Lt. David Johnson in Three- Position Rifle.

In the Army, all from USAMU, McNally in Rapid-Fire Pistol, Staff Sgt. Bret Erickson in Trap-Shotgun, Spc. Todd Graves in Trap/Skeet-Shotgun, Spc. Jay Waldron in Trap-Shotgun and Capt. Mike Anti in Free Rifle Prone.

Classes offer attendees safe mowing tips

A "Knowing Mowing" class teaching young men, women and adults power mower safety, will be held during "Safety Day" Saturday at Infantry Hall.

Last week, four parents completed the "Knowing Mowing" class at the Fort Benning American Red Cross office along with eight boys, ages 10 to 15.

ARC volunteer Hal Farrow, retired Navy, conducted the course. Farrow provided information and recommendations to the students:

• One of the first steps to mowing a lawn is to walk the area and become familiar with the location in case there are rocks, wires, tools or any other foreign objects which may be hidden in the grass. (The blades of an engaged power mower turn at more than 200 miles per hour. When blades hit an object, that object may be propelled out from under the mower at the same speed.)

• All mowers should be equipped with a discharge chute and bail.

• Leather shoes (or heavy jogging shoes) should be worn along with a shirt and long pants.

• When using a push mower, mow across the incline; however, if using a riding mower, mow up and down the incline.

• Disconnect the spark plug before removing the grass catcher bag or adjusting the cutting blades.

• Don't work on a mower while the engine is running.

• Recommended mowing time is evening with enough time to complete the job before dark.

• Don't store a gas can, power mower or any flammables inside a house.

• In case of an accident, off-post residents should telephone 911 and remain on the phone until there is a reply. On-post residents should telephone 544-3911.

The Knowing Mowing course is a joint effort of the American Red Cross and a company that produces lawn mower engines, Briggs and Stratton.

Completing the course were Travis Starr with his mother, Belinda Stanley; Anthony Whittaker with his mother, Theresa Whittaker; Paul Goss with his dad, Victor Wilbank and Billy Enloe with his mother, Sheila Enloe. Other students who completed the course are Doug Shafer, Travis Young, Tappan Shah and Farrow's son, James Farrow.

Upon completion of a test, students earned a certificate and a hat. An identification card was issued along with a safety poster to be placed where the lawn mower is stored.

Assisting with the Knowing Mowing course were ARC staff Dave DeLeon and Todd Senger, assistant station managers.

For more information about the class, contact DeLeon at 544-3213.

Clothing Care Tips from the Experts
by Pam Folds, Special to THE BAYONET

"Neighborhood service stores" are the way that Spectors/Sun Ray Cleaners/Henris' Formalwear does business. And with such convenience and personal clothing care, Sun Ray promises to make your life simpler.

Sun Ray Cleaners is a diversified service business with over 50 years of experience, comprised of 12 retail stores, 5 coin laundries, a wholesale leather franchise, tuxedo and wedding gown rentals and sales.

Spector's Cleaners, under the same ownership, serves the Fort Benning area with government contracts and 8 retail stores. This balance of business enables Sun Ray to maintain a strong management team to support its 150 employees, many with over 25 years experience.

Spectors Cleaners operates branches at the mini mall, main mall, Building 1648 in Airborne area, and mobile call office to service troops in AIT area. Services include drycleaning, laundry, and alterations, including all patches and embroidered nametags and US Army.

Being a service business, Sun Ray emphasizes three rules: Quality, Service, and Reasonable Prices.

Sun Ray recommends the following tips for your clothing care:

• BASIC CARE FOR YOUR CLOTHING: NEVER put a garment away with stains or spills on it. The warmth of a closet and exposure to light can cause the soiled area to set into the fabric. Never rub a stain, especially on delicate fabrics such as silk, linens, and wools. Never attempt to remove a spot with water or cleaning fluid without first testing for color fastness. Be particularly aware of spillage from juices, soft drinks, coffee or tea; they are especially difficult to remove. Never apply any heat to a garment...inform Sun Ray where the stains are and how you tried to remove them.

• LIFE EXPECTANCY OF GARMENTS: The life expectancy of a garment must take many factors into consideration. The number of wearings is of prime importance, but also manufacturing, materials and quality along with changes in fashion have a direct effect on the useful life of our clothes.

Ladies' wear depreciates faster than men's wear due to the seasonal and yearly changes in style and fashion. Wools and blends can have a life expectancy usually twice as long as cotton or synthetic materials. Sweaters, overcoats, and woolen skirts can be expected to last 3 years, but a light weight shirt or blouse begins to show wear and stress after an average 28 washings.

A man's tie, regardless of the material, will lose all replacement value due to the stress of tying and untying in only one year. Children's clothing have only half the life expectancy of adults. All of these averages are based on good care and are intended only as a rule of thumb for your clothes.

• SWIMWEAR: Swimwear is subject to damage by sun, sand, chlorine, and salt. Be sure to wash thoroughly after each use and don't dry directly in the sun as it can affect the color. Be sure to keep care labels when you purchase swimwear and follow the instructions. If you're not sure ... ask Sun Ray.

• PURCHASING NEW CLOTHES: When buying clothes, every garment is required to have a care label permanently attached. Read and understand this information. When trying on, check buttons, zippers, lining and hems for proper sewing. Avoid purchasing tight fitting garments and allow about three percent for shrinkage after cleaning. Be aware of trims that are sewed on or glued on ...sewn ones will generally give better service.
