Glenn Close: Host and nominee of Tony Awards

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Well-known for her "Fatal Attraction" on film, a top actress now is wowing Broadway audiences ... and Broadway might be about to wow her right back.

The versatile Glenn Close has been nominated for a Tony Award for her performance in the American production of the England-originated "Death and the Maiden," but even if she doesn't win she'll still be very much in evidence as the honors are handed out. She's also the host of the 46th annual ceremony, which CBS will televise Sunday from New York City's Gershwin Theatre. Presented by the American Theatre Wing and The League of American Theatres and Producers, the proceedings often are dominated by artists not known widely beyond the Big Apple's stage community, but that isn't the case this year.

Even if she wasn't both host and contender at Sunday's edition of the Tonys, which were initiated in 1947 and named for Antoinette Perry, the American Theatre Wing's chairwoman during World War II, Close still could claim a personal history with the award. She earned the 1984 statue for Best Performance by a Leading Actress in a Play for "The Real Thing" and she also was a nominee for "Benefactors" and "Barnum," the latter show being the one that largely brought her to the attention of Hollywood, leading to her big screen debut in 1982's "The World According to Garp."

Glenn Close

That film earned her the first of her five Oscar nominations to date, and paved the way for her subsequent successes in such movies as "The Big Chill," "The Natural," "Jagged Edge," "Dangerous Liaisons," "Reversal of Fortune" and "Hamlet." However, for all the acclaim she has attained via her motion pictures, Close maintains that her stage roots have remained just as important to her.

"I worked in theater for 10 years before I even got my first movie," she reflects, "and I've returned to it periodically, so I don't feel I'm a stranger to the neighborhood. I'm a child of the theater, and that's where I learned my craft, so I get a little resentful of all the talk about 'Hollywood stars coming to Broadway.' I've always lived on the East Coast, and I've always kept my ties to the theater, and I don't think (a movie career) should be something that's held against somebody. I wish we had more of the English (acting) sensibility in this country, where everybody does everything, and it doesn't matter whether it's on film or on stage."

Lately, Close has extended her creative efforts into television, having earned wide praise as well as huge ratings for last year's "Hall of Fame" offering "Sarah, Plain and Tall," for which she received double Emmy nominations as both star and executive producer. "We're developing a sequel to 'Sarah'," she reports, "and we're also developing a possible series. I think it was CBS' idea, but it's also quite exciting because it would be the first weekly series that Hallmark would do. There's also another piece of writing by ('Sarah' author) Patty MacLachlan that I'll hopefully be producing."

As for being in the running for a Tony herself this week while introducing presenters and other nominees, Close reasons, "I think I'd much rather be up and doing something than just sitting there waiting. I've been in that position numerous times, and I'd rather be contributing in some way. I'll be very happy to have something to do during the evening."

Following is a list of 1992 Tony Award nominees in several major categories:

Best Play: "Dancing at Lughnasa," "Four Baboons Adoring the Sun," "Two Shakespearian Actors," "Two Trains Running."

Best Musical: "Crazy for You," "Falsettos," "Five Guys Named Moe," "Jelly's Last Jam."

Best Revival of a Play or Musical: "Guys and Dolls," "The Most Happy Fella," "On Borrowed Time," "The Visit."

To get lawn smart — watch 'Knowing Mowing'

Want to raise your lawn mowing IQ? Next week, the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel will air "Knowing Mowing," an educational video produced by the American Red Cross and the Briggs and Stratton Corporation.

Gen. Gordon Sullivan, Army chief of staff, talks about downsizing, training and readiness, and maintaining the edge on next week's "Victory News," the news show of the 24th Infantry Division.

Reports from Soldiers Radio and Television in Washington D.C., include prison guard training, standing up for safety, and interviews with Sullivan and Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on channel 32 Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call the Public Affairs Office at 545-2201.

Animal park one of Georgia's attractions

Presidential Pathways Travel Assoc.

Attracting wide attention is the Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park featuring nearly 300 different species of wild animals from all over the world.

The animals roam freely in a natural habitat. Visitors are allowed to drive their own cars through this unique 500-acre park, or may board a weekend Zebra Bus for a guided tour.

Special features also include a one-of-a-kind Pet Store, a Petting Zoo, the Old MacDonald Farm, Gift Shop and Concession Stand. The park is located off U. S. Highway 27 on Oak Grove Road, seven miles north of Pine Mountain.

For information, call (706) 327-4878 or write the Pine Mountain Wild Animal Park. P.O. Box 1437, Columbus, Ga. 31902.

The Presidential Pathways Travel Association is a non-profit association dedicated to the promotion of travel and tourism in the 21-county West Georgia area known as Presidential Pathways.

The area is named for the two United States presidents who called it home, Franklin D. Roosevelt at Warm Springs and Jimmy Carter at Plains.

Membership in the Association is open to any organization or individual with an interest or stake in tourism, Georgia's second largest industry. Regular luncheon meetings are normally held on the fourth Thursday of each month beginning at 11 a.m. Meetings alternate between Columbus and other points in the 21 counties. Dues are $40 annually.

For additional information, write President Mellody Reaves, Troup County Chamber of Commerce, P. O. Box 636, La Grange, Ga. 30241, or telephone (706) 884-8671.

Westville to write cookbook to raise money for conservation

Westville Chamber of Commerce

Well-wishers and friends of Westville are asked to collect recipes for a new Westville cookbook. Funds raised by the sale will be applied to conservation and maintenance needs in the museum.

The following recipes are needed: appetizers, beverages, pickles, breads, salads, soups, sauces, sandwiches, meats, game, eggs, poultry, seafood, vegetables, cakes, cookies, desserts and international recipes. If fat and calorie content are known or can be estimated, it will be helpful to list them in view of recent interest in such food content.

Include recipe name, list of ingredients, instructions for preparations, number of servings yielded and name and address of person submitting recipes. A special comment on the recipe adds interest. In case of duplications, the first received will be used for publication.

Bring your recipes to Westville or send them to:

Westville

Lumpkin, Ga. 31815.

Springer tries to maintain strength during tough times

Springer Opera House

During the past two years, Georgia's official State Theatre has been leading a double life.

On the one hand, Columbus' 121-year-old non-profit Springer Theatre has never had it so good. Five of the theatre's all-time top 10 box office successes have been produced in this period and subscriptions have risen by 40 percent.

On the other hand, nearly two years of recession has taken its toll on contributions, unrenewed memberships and income loss for some of the theatre's less commercial artistic ventures.

Paul R. Pierce, Springer artistic director, announced the Springer's 1992-93 season Thursday with a trunkload of new initiatives designed, not only to recover what was lost during the economic slump, but to position the theatre for regional influence and unprecedented growth.

The director revealed a special campaign called "Happy Days are Here Again" with a "New Deal" for economically-pinched audiences. He explained that the theatre had been forced to develop innovative strategies to survive amid the lingering recessionary conditions.

Regular season tickets are $52.50, including sales tax.

Faith Middle School takes 1st in Odyssey of the Mind contest

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Faith Middle School came home Sunday as world champions in the Omument Division II in the World Finals of the Odyssey of the Mind competition. The competition took place at Boulder, Colo., at the University of Colorado May 28 through 30.

The Faith School team scored first in the Omument Division II competition. Fifty-seven teams representing 57 states or countries competed in this division.

The Faith School team also received the Ranatra Fusca Award for outstanding creativity in their long-term problem. In this problem called "Omument" team members had to create and perform an original skit that included an original monument. Faith team members created a monument to an imaginary bird and called their skit "Spotted Sara Suda Sodder." During the performance the team had to find a way to explain what the monument was and why it was developed.

Faith School team members are Karen Adams, Rachael Novier, Jay Parker, Aaron Roggia, Amita Shah, Aaron Smalser and Stacy Uselton. The team is coached by Cindy Givens and Libbie Kurinec. Team members and their coaches brought back a large trophy to the school for the first-place win as well as a plaque for the Renatra Fusca Award. Team members each received two individual medals — one was for the first-place win and the other was for the Ranatra Fusca Award.

Odyssey of the Mind is problem-solving competition that was developed by Dr. Sam Miklus, a New Jersey College professor. It is a program that provides a mental challenge through problem-solving. Students have several months to find a solution to a long-term problem. They also participate in a short-term problem solving in which students must find a solution during the competition.

This is the sixth year that Faith School students have competed in the Odyssey of the Mind competition. It is also the sixth year that they have represented Georgia by competing in World Finals.

This first-place win at the World Finals is not the first for a Faith School team. A Faith School team won first place in 1988, and for the past two years Faith teams have scored third place wins the World Finals of the Odyssey of the Mind competitions.

Post wrestler makes 1992 Olympic team

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

For Rodney Smith, a longtime dream of competing in the Olympics is about to be fulfilled.

Smith, a generator mechanic with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, earned a spot on the 1992 Olympic Wrestling Team when he defeated Andy Seras, the 1988 Olympian, at the Greco-Roman Olympic trials Saturday in Concord, Calif.

Smith

"From grade school to college to where I'm at now, there are an awful lot of people who have helped me in one way or another; now is my chance to say thank you," said Smith. "I have one more step to take and it's in Barcelona, Spain."

A specialist with 3 1/2 years of service in the Army, Smith started his odyssey to the top at Kennedy Junior High School in Springfield, Mass., when the wrestling coach asked if he wanted to try wrestling for fun. Smith did and kept coming back until the season started.

He attributes his talent for wrestling to his gymnastics training in the fifth grade. The agility and balance meshed perfectly with wrestling, he said.

The son of Arlene and Archie Smith, he credits his success to his mother's strictness for academic success.

"My mother told me that if my grades suffered, wrestling would have to go," Smith said. "I worked very hard to keep my grade point average up just so I could keep wrestling."

In the ninth grade, Smith attended Putnam Vocational High School and wrestled under the tutelage of wrestling coach Bill Borecki. He won the city championship in the 112-pound weight class in his first year of high school wrestling.

In the next three years, Smith would win not only the city championships, but also the Western Massachusetts Championship in his last year of high school.

"For a high school wrestler in Massachusetts, this championship was the ultimate goal," said Smith. After graduating from high school, Smith applied to and was accepted to Western New England College.

During his four years at Western, coached by Bob Skelton, Smith had a shaky fresh-man year wrestling, but he started to improve his sophomore year. Smith went undefeated that year and won the New England Conference Championships.

Smith also went to the National Collegiate Athletic Association's wrestling championships for the first time and placed fourth. He was selected for the U.S. All-Star Wrestling Team in 1986, but the European tour was cancelled because of terrorism.

In 1987, he won the New England championships and was selected to the All-Star team again, and he went to the Great Britain Challenge Cup in Manchester, England. Smith was the highest rated American wrestler in the tournament to place; he brought home a silver medal.

A fractured wrist in the summer of his senior year kept Smith out of wrestling for most of the season. With a week left in the season, he wrestled in a couple of dual meets and won. He went to the New England Championships for the third straight year and won. He was also voted the most outstanding wrestler for the tournament.

At the nationals, Smith was seeded second but finished fifth. Smith said he blamed this on his inability to train for the whole season.

At this point, Smith realized that his chance to qualify for the 1988

The anniversary commemorates the activation of the 1st Ranger Battalion in June 1942 at Carrickfergus, North Ireland, under the command of Col. William O. Darby.

The three-day celebration, hosted by the ranger community, will include dedication ceremonies for a Ranger Hall of Fame, Ranger

Post postpones building dedication

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The dedication of Meloy Hall, building 6, the new administration facility just completed next to Infantry Hall, has been postponed. The dedication was scheduled for Monday at 2:30 p.m. in front of the building.

According to Louis H. Smith, mobilization planning specialist for the Directorate of Engineering and Housing, the building is named for Gen. Guy Stanley Meloy Jr., a Korean Conflict veteran who received the Distinguished Service Cross and a Purple Heart for heroism.

The new facility was built at a cost of $7,416,000 with four floors and 100,433 square feet. It will house 467 general administrative personnel in the Directorates of Logistics, Engineering and Housing, Civilian Personnel and Contracting. Smith said that furniture is being moved in now, and agency personnel will begin moving into their offices.

Meloy Hall will honor the civilian work force with the naming of a vestibule after George Heberling, who retired as the director of Resource Management in 1983 after 34 years of government service, and the naming of a landing after Ray Miller, who retired as chief of Ordnance at Fort Benning in 1961 after 43 years of service.

Briefings makes moving easy

By Clyde Snively

COMMENTARY

Our man Rocky is going to Korea.

That is, if he ever gets there.

First, I think he must have slept through his levy briefing. But, then again, knowing Rocky, he could have been wide awake, but just not present for duty, for he's all of a sudden discovering things he should have known.

For instance, he wants to leave in three days. He's already gotten his leave approved.

But guess what. First, he didn't know about the HIV blood test. So finally he went in for that. And well golleeeeee, "They said I had to wait 10 days to get the results back.

"What am I supposed to do for that week? I can't go nowhere."

"That's not holding you back," said Sgt. 1st Class I. M. Strack. "Near as I can tell, you don't have your finance appointment yet. You need to do that two weeks in advance."

"I sure wish someone had told me that," Rocky whined.

"You were told at the levy briefing just like everyone else," she said.

"I don't remember," he said.

Watching from a safe distance, I could see Strack's hair beginning to curl. "Don't move, specialist," she said.

She then picked up the phone, called the levy section to find out if Rocky had showed for the briefing (he had) and what he'd been told.

The lady on the other end of the line said she covered all those points and also passed out checklists telling soldiers what they needed to do.

"Sometimes I wonder why I spend two hours going over all that. Your soldier is no exception. It's like they're in a daze. I guess they figure they'll go back to their units and their first sergeants will walk them through it.

"Sooner or later, they have to take responsibility for themselves."

Strack thanked the lady and turned on Rocky. She let him have it with both barrels.

When she finished, he merely mumbled, "Well, I guess it doesn't matter anyway. You see, I owe all this money to the Post Exchange at the Main Mall and Commissary. They probably won't let me check out anyway," he said.

She half came out of her seat at that. But Rocky wasn't finished.

"I do get 10 days to clear, don't I?" he asked.

That's when Strack's curls locked and her eyes turned red.

"Ten days!" she shouted. "Ten days for what! You're a single soldier living in the barracks. Five days is what you're authorized and that's four days too many. You get your tail in gear and you'll have no trouble out-processing in the time they give you."

"What about the money I owe?" he said.

I think Strack was on the verge of murder. Even Rocky could see that. He left.

I haven't seen him in a couple of days. I think he's hanging out at the Broken Cue, shooting pool, trying to win enough money to pay off his debts.

I do know Strack's curls are back to normal.

PLDC graduate remembers experiences

By Martha L. Flores
USAIC Public Affairs Office

The origin of the noncommissioned officer can be traced back to the Roman legions. The Romans' success was due to march formation, camp preparation and response to orders in battle .

The Roman commanders found that the tactical and administrative duties of drilling and fielding a successful army absorbed all their time. The commanders turned to the ranks for assistance.

Exceptional soldiers, hand-picked by the commanders were the first "noncommissioned officers" called principalis, according to the Duties, Responsibilities and Authority of NCOs pamphlet.

I think the downsizing will affect the role of the NCO tremendously. The role the NCO plays will be considered more important and appreciated.

The Primary Leadership Development Course offers training to prospective sergeants at skill level 2, with emphasis on leadership training , duties, responsibilities and authority of a noncommissioned officer.

I recently attended PLDC and found the cadre to be well qualified and caring instructors who came in once in a while on off days to check up on soldiers .

The course is four weeks long, which means I was a four-week resident. Each day I was awakened by the charge of quarters assistant between 4 and 4:30 a.m. and bed checks were at 11 p.m.

Every day was physically and mentally demanding, with training 14 hours a day, six days a week. Motivation and cooperation were a definite part of accomplishing each mission, no matter how simple.

There were several problems I encountered in the training environment as well as in every day life. Lack of communication or the failure to exchange information, was one of them. For example, signal communication was important during a raid or ambush out in the field, and verbal communication was needed when reaching others through radio for any information. Another problem I encountered was when the leader did not know his or her job as well as his soldiers' jobs. This barrier resulted in an incomplete mission.

Sometimes one of the hardest things for someone in a group to do is to find a way of dealing with others tactfully.

The course helped me in several ways and taught me a lot. Drill and Ceremony is one thing I improved in; even in Basic Training I had problems with it, but now I feel more than confident about my D and C ability.

The physical training program was great, and I improved, especially in the run.

The field training exercise was an experience I'll never forget. I fell in the swamp and got soaked, but I also learned how people change and act toward others when undergoing stress, especially in a leadership position.

Throughout history, the backbone of armies have been the noncommissioned officers. They are the foremen in the armed forces of our nation, executing the plans and policies of the officers, conducting daily business, training soldiers and reinforcing the standards for enlisted personnel, according to the History of the Noncommissioned Officer pamphlet, U.S. Army Sergeants Major Academy.

It is toward this end that a total Army effort must be directed.

Rangers celebrate 50th

Congratulations on the 50th anniversary of dedicated ranger service to our nation. Rangers past and present can take great pride in the five decades of selfless contributions they have made in the defense of freedom.

History demonstrates that rangers have consistently stood in the front rank of America's defense. Ceremony will start memorial construction

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

A highlight of the upcoming Rangers' 50th Anniversary celebration will be the ground-breaking ceremony for the Ranger Memorial.

Participants in the ceremony include Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone, Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry White and the oldest and youngest rangers present for the anniversary commemoration.

"The Ranger Memorial is intended as a tribute to all rangers, past, present and future," said Maj. Patrick Carpenter of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

The memorial will be located on Ranger Field next to Infantry Hall, and it will be in the form of spear-shaped walkway that may be as large as 300 feet long and 100 feet wide.

"The spear symbolizes the famous spearhead operations conducted by the rangers," Carpenter said.

A walkway and bridge will form the shaft of the spear, while the spearhead itself will contain a 20-foot tall commando knife and small monuments for each ranger combat operation throughout history.

Carpenter said that the funding and design of the memorial is being done by the Ranger Memorial Foundation in conjunction with various ranger associations.

He added that the memorial will be a fitting tribute to one of America's most elite fighting forces.

"It's going to be a tremendous honor to all rangers. One of the goals is that the memorial will serve as an inspiration to all soldiers who train and serve here at Fort Benning," he said.

SOA learns how to defend against AIDS

By Daniel Maloney
School of theAmericas

"We don't have a vaccine, the only way we can protect ourselves is through knowledge."

With these words Dr. Rebecca Gilad, director of the American Red Cross's Hispanic HIV and AIDS Program, summed up the focus of her presentation given May 27, to soldiers assigned to the School of the Americas.

Gilad's lecture was part of SOA's annual training on the Human Immunodeficiency Virus and the Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome required by the Department of the Army to help soldiers understand and reduce their risk to this deadly disease.

In addition to Gilad's lecture, Lt. Col. Rene J. Sanchez, chief of Preventive Medicine at Martin Army Community Hospital, spoke to soldiers about the impact of HIV and AIDS on the Hispanic community.

Gilad's interest in SOA stems from the School's mission of training Latin American soldiers and her desire to stop the spread of HIV and AIDS in Latin America through education.

As a native of Mexico City, Gilad is reaching out to a region and a people close to her heart, which desperately need the resources to battle this disease.

According to Gilad, the entire health-care budget for one year in Honduras does not cover the cost of a complete AZT treatment for one patient.

In light of this fact Gilad simply stated, "What else can we do, we must educate."

Presented entirely in Spanish, the session commenced with an invocation by Chap. (Maj.) Michael J. Travaglione, followed by a briefing from Elena Bracero, coordinator for HIV and AIDS education at Fort Benning.

Following Bracero's remarks, Sanchez detailed the impact of HIV/AIDS on the Hispanic community.

Sanchez also emphasized the importance of being tested for the HIV virus. Testing, he added, should be conducted six weeks to six months after someone has engaged in a high-risk behavior.

Gilad carried the presentation further with a detailed account of the disease's impact in Latin America. By bringing her message to SOA Gilad hopes to double her efforts. "After this presentation I hope SOA will take this program as part of their curriculum and become a multiplier of knowledge."

Units interested in scheduling HIV/AIDS education through ARC should call 545-5194.

PET OF THE WEEK

This is a stray four-month-old female puppy, and she is looking for a home. She is thought to be a Black Labrador mix. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• Fort Benning's 2nd Armored Division completed 17 1/2 weeks of maneuvers, which included training in Tennessee and Louisiana, as well as a road march to Panama City, Fla. Maj. Gen. Willis D. Crittenberger commanded this unit, having replaced Maj. Gen. George S. Patton in January 1942.

• Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps repelled a British attack with crushing efficiency from a defensive position known as "The Cauldron." To date, Rommel's expertise, coupled with superior German tanks, had successfully overcome and eliminated Britain's former tank superiority.

•The Battle of Midway concluded with the Japanese retreating in defeat. Despite the USS Yorktown, the U.S. achieved major strategic victory by sinking four Japanese carriers and effectively turning the tide of the war in the Pacific.

• In the Crimea, nine divisions of German and Rumanian troops launched attacks against the badly undermanned Soviet garrison at Sevastopol.

• The Japanese took the islands of Attu and and Kiska off of Alaska.

• The Germans obliterated the Czechoslovokian village of Lidice as part of the reprisals prompted by the assassination of Reichprotecktor Reinhard Heydrich. Direct reprisals prompted by the assasinations of Reichsprotektor Reinhard Heyrich. Direct reprisals resulted in the murders of more than 1,000 people.

• Fort Benning and Columbus acted as a test market site for a new candy product. The Mars Company hoped that the product would be well received in the South because of its candy coating, which protected its milk chocolate center from melting. Mars named the new candy "M&Ms."

• The 88th Airborne Battalion, activated during 1941 and composed entirely of volunteers, continued to test and develop airborne doctrine and equipment at Fort Benning. The first airborne unit in the United States, it was later placed under an Airborne Command and ceased to be a separate unit. The troops were equipped with bicycles and motorcycles to foster speed during the attack. Their motto was, "Ride the Storm."

Moving ahead

Post honors its federal workers

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The annual Federal Employees' Week begins today with a kickoff luncheon at the Fort Benning Officers' Club at noon.

Tina Stanford, Recorder's Court judge will be the guest speaker.

The theme for this year is "Moving Ahead Through Tough Times."

Several workshops and seminars on work-related topics, sponsored by the Federal Woman's Program, will be Monday through June 12 in Infantry Hall, Classroom 9.

"We are using Federal Employees Week as an opportunity to provide additional no-cost training for employees on the installation," said Ellis Dandy, Equal Employment Opportunity manager.

"Training is often costly and employees are sometimes unable to attend the sessions due to time conflicts," he continued. "This is another way of providing meaningful and beneficial training to post employees. The employees benefit from the training and the installation benefits from the contributions of its employees. It's part of an effort to provide Fort Benning with a well-trained employee work force," he said.

Your Fishing Boat: More Than Just Transportation

Too many anglers think their boat is just a means to get from point A to point B. Those who suffer from this misconception are missing out on many hours of exciting and productive fishing.

The fishing experts offer the following advice to help you catch more fish.

Your boat is a fishing tool – a portion of your tackle, as essential as rods, reels and lures. Wise anglers bring their boats into play as an integral part of their overall fishing strategy and technique. These are the fishermen who consistently catch fish, no matter what the weather patterns or the season. And you can too – if you learn to think of your boat as a fishing aid, rather than just a means of transportation.

The next time you head for the lake or fish along our beautiful coastline, remember there are four time-proven methods of improving your catch. And each involves the skillful use of your boat as a fishing tool.

Few angling methods can match trolling for overall effectiveness. Trolling – towing a lure at a prescribed depth behind your boat at very slow speeds – allows anglers to cover more fish-producing water than casting from a stationary craft. The only time your lure is out of the water is when you're unhooking a fish, and your boat sets the tempo and controls the action.

Saltwater anglers have long recognized that chumming is a deadly way to increase their catch. You just cruise the area you've chosen to fish, tossing out a few handfuls of bait. Next you cruise back over the area, presenting the same bait, this time with a hook enclosed. Striped bass, bluefish and flounder are often quick to fall for the temptations of chumming.

Chasing schooling fish in late summer and fall may just be the ultimate fishing/boating experience. Watch for diving gulls, leaping forage fish and the surface water eruptions that signal schooling sport-fish rushing up to feed.

When you've got the action pinpointed, run it down, and toss a lure right into the frenzied middle of the pack. These wild surface explosions will ebb and flow throughout the day, and good, safe boating skills will always give you the competitive edge.

Drift fishermen are among the most successful anglers we know, and their technique is deceptively simple. Once they've found good fish habitat like bars, edges or other structure, these anglers drift both boat and bait over the cover. The results can be staggering – if you're willing to use your boat and boating skills as a fishing tool.

So remember what the experts say: Your boat is both transportation and tackle. Learn to use it safely and wisely, and the results just may be dramatic.

Warning system saves lives in severe weather

By Richard Brill

Special to The Bayonet

Although you might never be caught in a tornado, knowing what to do if you are could save your life.

"Tornadoes kill over 100 people annually in the United States," said Regis Beighley, post safety officer.

Tornadoes usually occur in conjunction with thunderstorms and include such tell-tale signs as dark, heavy clouds, hail, a loud roaring noise and a funnel shaped cloud called the pendent.

"If a tornado watch is issued, it means that tornadoes are expected to develop and everyone should keep a local radio or television station tuned in for weather bulletins," said Beighley.

If a tornado warning is issued, it means that a tornado has been sighted, a condition known as Code Black.

Fort Benning has 10 weather sirens that emit a steady sound for five minutes in duration during a Code Black situation, said Capt. James Walker, commander of Detachment 10, 5th Weather Squadron.

Walker said that the sirens are sounded 20 minutes before the weather is supposed to hit the post.

He added that a Code Black situation also applies to severe windstorms in excess of 50 knots, so it doesn't necessarily always signal a tornado.

Once the weather has completely passed over Fort Benning the "all clear" signal is sounded, a series of three steady two-minute sounds interrupted by two silent periods of one minute each.

Col. Ted Chilcote of the Directorate of Plans, Training and Mobilization said the sirens are tested every Monday at noon to ensure they are operational. If the possibility of severe weather exists at the time, the test is not conducted.

In the event of an actual tornado, Beighley said to take shelter immediately.

"If you are in an office building, go to an interior hallway on the lowest floor." he said.

"If you are at home, go to the basement if you have one or take cover in the center part of the house on the lowest floor in a small room or under sturdy furniture," he added.

If you are caught in the open and a tornado is near, move away from the tornado's path at right angles. If there is no time to escape, lie flat in a ditch or ravine or under a bridge.

• A sergeant was charged with failure to control a pet after his canine bit a child outside his quarters. Another canine belonging to a sergeant first class bit a child when she rode her bicycle into the fence around the dog. Investigation revealed that the canine didn't have a rabies tag. Both canines were transported to the post vet.

• A specialist was charged with disorderly conduct and possession of an illegal firearm. The soldier was wanted by civil authorities for an off-post incident. When the Military Police found the soldiers vehicle on post, they observed a sawed off shotgun protruding from underneath the passenger seat.

• A family member was charged with driving under the influence and failing to have her child in a proper child restraint. The vehicle was initially stopped for speeding and driving in an erratic manner.

• A sergeant first class was charged with simple battery after he struck a woman in the mouth with his fist. The two had been involved in verbal altercation before it turned physical.

• Two civilians were charged with trespassing without permission and conspiracy to commit a crime. The two men entered Fort Benning and solicited a soldier to purchase beer for them at the Sand Hill Shoppette. The soldier refused and notified the Military Police.

• A private first class was charged with larceny of government and private property. The soldier stole four checks from another soldier and negotiated them at several facilities after forging them. The total amount of the checks was $1,350.

• A family member is charged with larceny of a privately-owned vehicle. The individual took his wife's car, more than a month ago, without her permission, and hasn't returned.

• Other activity included three individuals being charged with fish and game violations. There were nine reports of driving under the influence of alcohol, four that involved excessive speed. There were 18 traffic accidents reported and there were four reports of disorderly conduct.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Jane M. Winand
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I own a house in Columbus that I plan on keeping as my retirement home. I financed its purchase two years ago through a local bank and have been making my monthly payments faithfully.

However, I received a notice in the mail yesterday that my mortgage has been sold to a company in Las Vegas, Nev., and I'm supposed to make my payments to that company effective immediately. It's sort of funny because I just took my payment to the local bank last week and they didn't say anything about sale of my mortgage. Is this the way mortgages work?

A: It is a common practice for a lender to sell a mortgage or the right to service a mortgage to another lender. To serve a mortgage means that the lender will perform such ministerial functions as accepting the monthly payments, holding monies in escrow for insurance and taxes, and issuing periodic statements.

Some mortgage companies are in the business of financing home sales merely to make funds available to a prospective purchaser. These companies then immediately sell the mortgage or the servicing rights to another company after closing has taken place. Other lenders prefer to keep and service their own loans.

Most mortgage documents, such as security deeds and notes, will permit the lender to sell the obligation at its convenience without providing the borrower with a right to question or object to such a sale.

Although the sale of a mortgage or the mortgage servicing rights is not necessarily a cause for alarm, a borrower must be wary of notices regarding such sale. Innocent borrowers have been duped by scams involving false sales. The borrower may receive a notice to send the monthly payments to a new company at a new address.

However, after sending several payments to the new company, the borrower is notified that the original mortgage company still holds the note and never received the payments. The new company was just a fiction created to rip off the borrowers and has since disappeared.

To protect yourself from such scams, you should do the following:

1. Call your current lender to verify the validity of any notice of sale.

2. Look for a "goodbye" letter from your current lender, on its stationary, at least five to 15 days before your next payment is due.

3. Examine the letter from the new company. It should contain a full company name and phone number and your mortgage account number.

4. Compare your mortgage account number in the letter to the number listed on the mortgage documents to make sure they match.

5. If you make payments to the new lender and then receive a delinquency notice from your former company, don't ignore it. Call and investigate the alleged delinquency.

If you have any further questions, you may call the Legal Assistance Division at 545-3281 or 545-3282 and make an appointment to speak with an attorney.

SECTION B

SFC does his body good

20-year vet watches diet

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

For Stanley Cobb, a sergeant first class with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, the 1992 Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning bodybuilding contest will be his first and last as a soldier.

Cobb will retire at the end of June, after serving 20 years in the Army.

Cobb started bodybuilding off and on in 1984. He would go to the gym and workout for awhile and then stop. Now he is devoting all his time and effort to the sport.

Cobb will continue to participate in the sport after he retires, but he said he will not go into it full time. At the age of 39 and affectionately known as "the old man" by his younger peers, he is one of the oldest competitors. He will compete in the masters category, and he said he can hold his own against the other contestants.

"When I was stationed at other posts a long time ago, I would tease some of my friends because they were bodybuilders," said Cobb. "I always prided myself for being slim and trim. We would joke around and they would ask me to come to the gym and work out with them. I went and enjoyed it."

Cobb works out six days a week. On Monday, Wednesday and Friday, he is at the Infantry Hall Fitness Center twice a day. On Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday he works out once a day.

Cobb covers three sections of his body on workout days. A workout usually lasts about 2 1/2 hours.

"Now that I'm on terminal leave I can get a head start on the other guys while they're still at work.," he said. "The only the thing I worry about right now is getting hurt. I try to workout and be careful at the same time."

Cobb, who is an administrative assistant for the Inspector General, follows a strict diet to limit his caloric intake to about a ,1000 calories a day. Baked or broiled chicken, fresh vegetables, baked potatoes, rice and steamed vegetables make up his diet.

He eats three to four small meals a day with a lot of fruit in between.

Cobb said he feels that the use of anabolic steroids in the sport of bodybuilding is unfair to the people who try to build their bodies by natural means.

"I feel that in the sport of bodybuilding you use what God gave you and try to improve on that with hard work in the gym," he said. "Using muscle enhancing drugs is totally unfair to the men and women who are building their bodies naturally. All competitors should be tested for drug use before a competition."

Cobb said he knows about the effects of steroid use; he had a friend who used the drug and that friend is now dead. Cobb believes it was complications from using the drug that killed his friend.

"It's just not worth the risk of dying to use these drugs," he said. "I have done a good job of building and shaping my body without the use of anabolic steroids."

Cobb knows where his strengths are. "You can't see my strengths, but you can see the muscle," he said. "The muscle comes from bodybuilding and bodybuilding is my strength."

Olympic team was shot, so he figured he would go to work after graduating with a degree in criminal justice.

While Smith was working for the Department of Social Services in Springfield, he got a call from Floyd Peters who at that time was the U.S. Olympic wrestling coach

"Peters wanted to know if I wanted to join the Army," said Smith. "About a week after Peters called, I called him back and said 'get the paperwork started.' My feelings for wrestling were so strong I had to get back into it as soon as I could."

Smith enlisted in November of 1989 and wanted to come in as an officer. However, he was more concerned about his wrestling career than going to Officer Candidate School.

"I think back now and I feel that I made a mistake by not going to school to become an officer, but I wanted to get back into wrestling as quickly as possible," he said.

Smith went to basic training, then straight to All-Army wrestling camp. He made the team and wrestled in the Armed Forces championships and placed fourth.

Smith placed sixth at the U.S. Nationals and at the end of the season he still wanted to become an officer. Smith at that time had not completed his Advanced Individual Training, he went to Fort Belvoir, Va., for AIT and while he was there, a packet was sent up for him to go to OCS at Fort Benning.

"I was all set to head for Fort Benning when the All-Army wrestling was moved here," said Smith. "I started wrestling as soon as I got here and I have never looked back since. ."

In 1990, Smith made the All-Army team once again . He won at the Armed Forces Championships, placed fourth at nationals and won the regionals in Michigan and in North Carolina. At the World Team trials, Smith injured his shoulder and didn't compete.

In 1991, Smith's performance fell off and no one knew what was wrong. He had a virus that he caught while in Germany for a tournament. He placed third in Greco and freestyle at the Armed Forces Championships.

According to Smith, All-Army coach Tony Thomas was ready to throw in the towel. To make matters worse, Smith found out that he had a clot in his ear that was causing his imbalance. Once that was cleared up, Smith was once again back to normal.

Smith felt that he had something to prove to himself and his teammates.

"1991, was a very important learning experience for me," he said. " I wasn't able to participate with my teammates at the Armed Forces Championships, so I did what I could to help my teammates win; if nothing else I was there for them.

This year, Smith, Derrick Waldroup, Martin Strimiska, Tony Demos and Shon Lewis made a pact. They were on a mission to make the Olympics. If any one of us was slacking off, one of us or all of us would be behind the other pushing one another to continue to take steps toward that goal.

"With that, everything just broke loose, we won another Armed Forces Championship, Martin won double gold, Derrick won double gold, I won double gold and Shon won a gold," said Smith. "That set the tone for me and prepared me for what was to come in the nationals and the Olympic trials."

Smith won his first national championship in Greco-Roman, then proceeded to defeat Michael Mann of the Marines at the first Olympic trial in Albany, N.Y., May 16.

Smith went to Concord, with the specific goal of defeating Andy Seras.

"Seras has dominated the 149- pound weight class for the last four years and I'm the only person to defeat him in that span of time. So I went to work on polishing my technique," said Smith. "I also watched tapes of Seras and looked for his weaknesses. I have never watched tapes of one of my opponents before then. It paid off."

Smith defeated Seras 1-0, 0-0, and 3-0, to claim a spot on this year's Olympic team. Now he will be coached by Olympic coach Tom Minkle of Michigan State and Dan Chandler of the University of Minnesota.

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The local chapter of the Association of the United States Army will have Army Appreciation Night at Golden Park Wednesday when the Columbus Red Stixx meet the Savannah Cardinals at 7:05 p.m.

Military personnel, family members, Department of the Army civilians and AUSA corporate members will receive a discount. Also, a special family ticket is available for military families.

Pre-game activities include Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, throwing out the first pitch, the Silver Wings command parachute exhibition team and music by the Infantry Band.

According to Jack Harron of AUSA, a night with the Redstixx's will provide military and corporate members some time off to enjoy a ball game with their family and friends.

Door prizes will be awarded between innings. Discount tickets must be purchased from unit first sergeants before the game. Discount tickets will not be on sale at the gate.

"All contributions will go towards the Institute of Land Warfare, which conducts research and writes position papers for AUSA representatives," said Harron.

Renegades pocket Easy Money

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Company C, 43rd Engineers' "Renegades" defeated 215th Finance Company's "Easy Money" at Engineer Field No. 2 Monday evening, 14-7.

The Renegades opened the scoring in the top of the third inning. After a strikeout to start the inning, shortstop Michael McGilton singled and moved to second on a single by pitcher Murray White. McGilton advanced to third on a force play at second, then scored the Renegades first run of the game on a single by second baseman Matt Dobberke. Dan McCarey grounded to short to end the inning. The Renegades had a 1-0 lead and would never look back from there.

After a one, two, three bottom of the third for Easy Money, the Renegades unleashed a torrent of doubles in the top of the fourth.

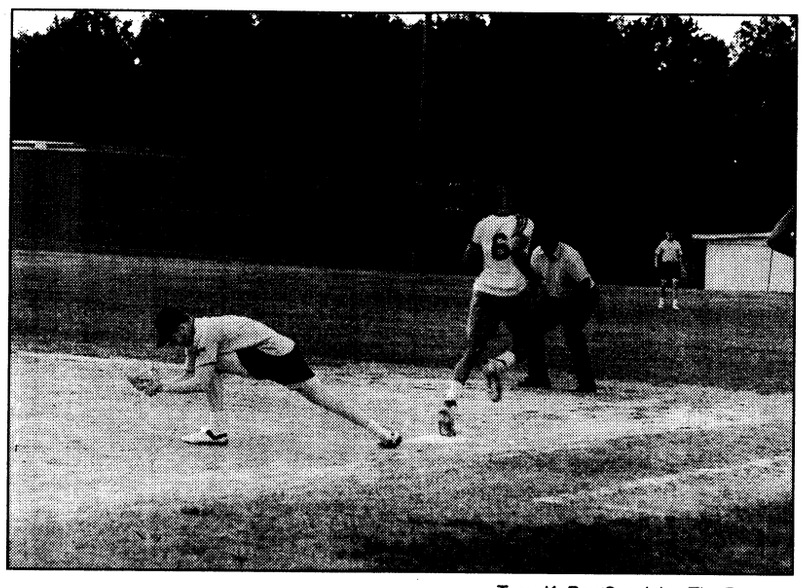
First baseman Bryan Reese led off the inning with a solo homer to left field to put the Renegades up 2-0. A single by catcher Gerald Padel and a double by right fielder Terrence Jackson put men on second and third; then center fielder Anthony Banaszak promptly doubled up the middle, plating two more runs.

A single by designated hitter Gary Isbell scored Banaszak from second, pushing the lead to 5-0. Two force plays at second cooled the Renegades for just a moment, then a single by White scored McGilton from first.

A double by third baseman Keith Thomas plated White. Dobberke scored Thomas from second with his second hit of the game — this time a double to left field.

McCarey finished off the scoring for the Renegades with a single to score Dobberke from second. Reese, who started the inning, ended it with a third strike foul ball. The Renegades had scored eight runs to take a 9-0 lead after 3 1/2 innings.

Easy Money got on the board in the bottom of the fifth inning with singles from catcher Gregory Williams and first baseman Garry Reier. A force play at third cut down Williams. A fly out by third baseman Tim Lupold failed to move the runner at second.



Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

Renegade first baseman Bryan Reese comes off the bag after putting out Dewey Samples. The Renegades went on to win 14- 7, led by pitcher Murray White.

Second baseman Dewey Samples got the run in with a single to right for Easy Money's first run of the evening. With men on second and third, a single by short fielder Ira Manns scored both men.

Sonya Aponte grounded to second for the third out of the inning, but Easy Money had trimmed the lead to 9-3 after five innings.

In the top of the sixth inning, Isbell led off with a shot to the right field gap for a solo homer. Two outs later, White singled up the middle and Thomas singled to right.

An error on Easy Money shortstop David Kerr on a grounder by Dobberke allowed White to score from third. A single by McCarey scored Thomas; the Renegade lead had bloomed to 12-3.

In the bottom of the sixth inning, Easy Money could have had a big inning except for one costly running mistake.

With one out, pitcher Tina Norris singled to right. She was forced at second on a grounder by Kerr.

A single by Wilkerson put runners on first and second for Williams.

Williams smacked a triple down the left field line scoring Kerr and Williams. Wilkerson scored on an over throw from the outfield.

Reier was safe at first when first baseman Rideau, who had replaced Reese in the top of the inning, couldn't handle the throw from shortstop McGilton.

A single by left fielder Daniel Jordan put men on first and second. Lupold slammed a triple to left to score Reier. When Jordan came around third and headed for home, he accidently touched the third base coach, ending the inning right there at 12-7.

The Renegades got their final runs of the evening when Banaszak laced a line drive into left center for a solo homer, upping their lead to 14-7, after 6 1/2 innings.

Easy Money had one more shot to make something happen and almost did.

A single by Samples and a walk to Manns puts men on first and second with no one out.

A grounder back to the pitcher by Aponte moved the runners to second and third.

New pitcher Robert Lightfoot walked Gordon to load the bases.

A line shot to second baseman Rene Figeredo by Norris doubled off Gordon at first to end the game and Easy Money's rally.

The Renegades had held off a late charge by Easy Money to bank the win 14-7.

WE ALSO HONOR:

Holy Spirit brings comfort

By Ivery De La Cruz
29th Infantry Regiment Chaplain

There are many lonely Christians in today's world. They are searching for fellowship, comfort and love. Those who love the Lord with their soul, mind and strength enjoy his presence and reassurance. Just as Jesus promised his followers a comforter, Christians today have that same comforter.

In the Gospel of John 14:15-16, Jesus said, "If you love me, you will obey what I command, and I will ask the Father and he will give you another comforter to be with you forever."

The comforter Jesus promised is the Holy Spirit who came at Pentecost. The Holy Spirit gives comfort and power to all who believe.

Some people may find it difficult to understand the work of the Holy Spirit. The Christian Herald tells the story of Estella Myers, a missionary working among the Karre people of French Equatorial Africa, who had tried hard to explain to native helpers the meaning of the "comforter."

In order to find something fitting, she had explained the ministry of the Holy Spirit as he encourages, exhorts, admonishes, protects, comforts and guides the Christian. Finally they exclaimed, "Oh, if anyone would do all that for us, we would say, 'He's the one who falls down besides us.'"

Then they proceeded to explain the meaning of this expression. When porters, carrying heavy loads on their heads, go on long journeys, they may become sick and straggle to the end of the line of carriers. Finally, they may collapse and be killed and eaten by wild animals during the night. If someone passing sees them lying there and stoops to pick them up and help them to safety, then that person is spoken of as "the one who falls down beside us." It was this expression that the missionary translator took as the translation of "comforter." For this is the one who sustains, protects and keeps the children of God on their journey toward their heavenly home.

Reflections
Reflections

This 'one who falls down beside us' also gives us power to do God's work. Before he was taken up to heaven, Jesus told his disciples, "You will receive power when the Holy Spirit comes on you; and you will be my witnesses in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and to the ends of the Earth" (Acts 1:8).

Those who do not possess the fullness of the Holy Spirit are limited in their view of what God can do in their lives. They often fail to work for God as they should. The Holy Spirit brings courage and power to those who are totally committed to him.

John 15:5 tells us that through the power of the Holy Spirit, the yielded Christian is enabled to bring forth fruit by sharing Christ and witnessing to the lost.

Christians are promised the comfort and power of the Holy Spirit, but what does it cost? It costs self-surrender — the yielding up of the most precious things to God. It also costs perseverance and faith.

We know the Holy Spirit is in us when we find this difference in our lives; that whereas, before it was hard for us to do the easiest things, now it is easy for us to do the hardest things.

This is the evidence of the Holy Spirit at work in our lives. The day of Pentecost will be celebrated in the churches on Sunday.

Sacred holiday begins Sunday

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplain's Office

REFLECTIONS

"...And from the day after the Sabbath, you shall count off seven complete weeks. You must count until the day after the seventh week - 50 days. Then you shall bring an offering of new grain to the Lord. On that same day, you shall hold a sacred celebration. This is a law for all time in all your settlements, throughout the ages," Lev. 12.

The Hebrew word for weeks is "shavuot" (pronounced Sha-voo-oat) and that is the name for the sacred celebration decreed by God for the 50th day after the Sabbath. There was some dispute about 2,000 years ago whether "the Sabbath" referred to was the Saturday with Passover or the first day of Passover, which being a holy day and a day of rest could be called a Sabbath as well.

The latter group won the argument and so the Jewish community celebrates Shavuot seven weeks and one day after the first day of Passover. This year it starts on Sunday beginning, as usual, on the previous evening.

On the Hebrew calendar, Shavuot falls on the sixth day of Sivan, which is also commemorated as the day when the Ten Commandments were given by God to the Israelites on Mount Sinai as it is recorded in Exodus 19 and 20.

This revelation of God's desires for us after having freed us from slavery was a momentous, unequaled event. The selection of Israel comes from this event. We were chosen not to be better than any other people or superior to any people. Our chosenness is in the responsibility we bear to follow God's instruction and teach these commandments to the other nations of the world — to be a light to the nations, as the prophet Isaiah said.

Some say that Christianity which as we all know began within Judaism, helped to spread the message of the Ten Commandments. To a lesser degree Islam has also spread the teachings— at least the belief that there is only one God.

Through Christianity's Jewish beginnings and the influence of Jewish communities in Arabia or early Islam, much of Judaism's ethical monotheism has been inculcated in these religions. Consequently a large measure of the task chosen for the Jewish people more than 3,000 years ago is being fulfilled by Christians and Muslims.

We Jews, Christians and Muslims, still have a long way to go before we teach all people about the oneness of God, God's caring for all humanity and God's moral guidelines and ethical demands on all people.

Yet, if we work side by side in an atmosphere of tolerance, acceptance and mutual respect, then we can do it. We can spread the work together.

In the words of the prophet Zechariah, "On that day, the Lord shall be one and his name shall be one." Amen.

Mortar company takes on many roles for 29th

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment plays a large role in the applications of the 29th Infantry.

Company B is the largest mortar company in the Army, and consequently it takes on numerous roles.

Should any new mortar equipment be developed, Company B's mission is to become subject matter experts on the new system and train other mortar men how to operate it.

"Being the only mortar company in the 29th Infantry with several missions to accomplish makes things a little hectic at times, but we always seem to come together with class," said Sgt. 1st Class Alberto Diaz, Company B, operations noncommissioned officer in charge.

"The soldiers of this company continually sacrifice, and are always professional," said First Sgt. Callaway Barnes.

There are three platoons in the company all with different missions — unlike a table of organization and equipment unit, where everyone works together on a specific mission.

Members of 1st and 2nd Platoons are all instructors at various schools on post to include the One Unit Station Training soldiers in Basic Combat Training, Infantry Mortar Leadership Course, Infantry Officer Advanced Course, Infantry Precommand Course, Infantry Officer Basic Course and all other mortar commitments attached to the 29th.

While 2nd Platoon is schooling mortar men, 3rd Platoon continues to train for capability exercises and combined armed live fire exercises, which the battalion performs frequently.

"At one time during this month we had seven different commitments on the same day," said Capt. Timothy Loudermilk, commander of Company B. "There are days like that for us, but I feel like the esprit de corps here pulls everyone through."

Soldiers in this company are exposed to four different mortar systems — the 4.2mm, 60mm, 80mm, and the 120mm mortars, whereas in a table of organization and equipment unit they would only be dealing with one, according to Sgt. 1st Class Russ Thomas, platoon sergeant of third platoon who's motto is "No Slack, we do the job required of two platoons."

Throughout the month of May, Company B performed several diverse missions. One included drawing up a new video for mortar trainees that portrays manual training mortar techniques. Company B additionally supported and trained two separate Reserve units, performed three mortar exercises, and exhibited a new system called enhanced mortar fire control system.

Spc. Michael Ziemer of Company B said he believes that things are getting tight as the Army draws down, but "that's when you just have to pull your belt a little tighter and drive on." Company B is in the process of organizing a new training tool called the MORTAREX, which is a mortar exercise that demonstrates the abilities of a mortar squad to engage enemy targets. This demonstration has been performed twice this month and future demonstration are being planned.

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
"Family tradition, adventure and travel opportunities."

Define your style of leadership:
"Positive thinking and common sense; I always look for the good, regardless of the predicament or situation."

What person has most influenced your military career?
"My great uncle who was a member of the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment during the Normandy invasion. He was a distinguished paratrooper and veteran of numerous World War II campaigns."

If you were the sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
"I would modify the physical training program to mandate job-related PT, such as road marches for the infantry. Different military occupational specialties require different physical attributes."

What was your reason for choosing your MOS?
"I love the outdoor environment and the physical aspects of my MOS are tremendous."

Describe a memorable moment in your military career:
"Being given the special trust and confidence by the Army in promoting me to sergeant first class."

What are your future careerplans?
"The First Sergeant's Course and promotion to E-8 are my short-term plans. Promotion to command sergeant major and being the senior enlisted member of an infantry battalion are my long-term goals."

Mechanic, engineer prove they have desire to excel

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

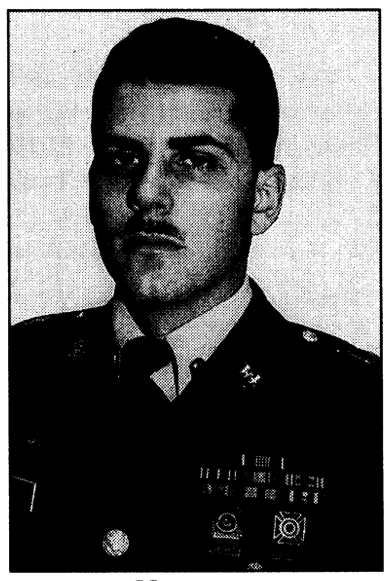
A heavy-wheeled vehicle mechanic and a combat engineer recently proved they have the initiative and desire to excel necessary to win the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's Noncommissioned Officer and Soldier of the Quarter competitions.

"Many soldiers act like they're allergic to boards, but I think the competition is an easy way to motivate yourself to increase your military knowledge," said Sgt. Guy. W. Bogner, a mechanic with Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, NCO of the Quarter.

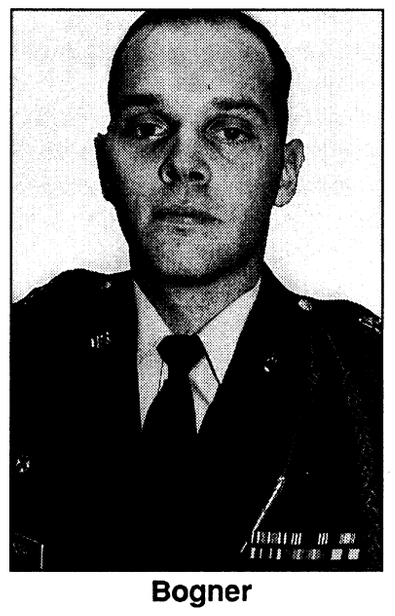
"You work so hard to win the board that you don't realize how much information you're storing in your head," he continued. " But taking the initiative and spending the time to prepare yourself earn you the respect of the NCOs on the board, and it's an excellent way to prepare yourself for a promotion board."

Spc. Kenneth M. Morton, a combat engineer and track driver with Company A, 317th Engineer Battalion, agrees that soldiers should strive to excel.

"I would encourage anyone to take the opportunity to appear before a board, even if you don't plan to stay in the Army," said the Soldier of the Quarter. "Always try to do your best, and the rewards will follow."



Morton



Bogner

"I think my winning the board shows an engineer can do anything an infantryman can do." Morton added. "If an engineer puts his mind to it, he goes all out to win."

Bogner, a six-year veteran whose goal is to become a motor sergeant some day, said he strives to instill excellence in the soldiers he supervises without trying to appear "hard core."

"I always try to make whatever mission we have fun for the soldiers by keeping a light-hearted, positive attitude," he said. "But, whenever we have to prepare for an inspection, I always try to exceed the standards I expect the first sergeant and the command sergeant major will look for during their inspections."

Although the 317th is Morton's first assignment, he said his service in the Persian Gulf gave him confidence in handling the explosives engineers sometimes use to breach obstacles and clear minefields.

"During the war, I drove a squad of engineers behind the front lines, conducting search and destroy missions and blowing up enemy ammunition, vehicles, supplies and bunkers," he said. "I know I personally blew up hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of enemy small arms and air defense guns. My squad destroyed everything from armored personnel carriers to jeeps to water trucks."

"Our training with Bangalore torpedoes in Germany before the war made me basically comfortable about working with explosives," Morton continued. "But, you never want to become overconfident with explosives. You always have to put safety first."

Although Morton is engaged to marry a military policewoman he met while they were both stationed in Germany, he said he is keeping his career options open.

"It's hard to get promoted in my military occupational specialty, but I will probably try to get into another MOS if I have the opportunity to re-enlist," said.

"On the other hand, I've been saving to study architecture in case I can't re-enlist when the time comes," he added. "With the Montgomery GI Bill and the Army College Fund, I figure I can save more than $25,000 toward a college education."

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today, June 5, 1942

First reports of a battle raging around the small Pacific island of Midway since Thursday indicate U.S. forces have damaged several Japanese ships and taken a "heavy toll" on raiding planes. Apparently, a large Japanese naval task force sent waves of carrier-based planes against the Marine Corps fighters based on the island. Adm. Chester Williams Nimitz stated that American casualties are to be "light" and "our attacks on the enemy are continuing!"

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters officially credited an Allied submarine for sinking three Japanese ships and damaging another. The submarine sank two supply ships, damaged a third supply ship, and sank a transport with possibly as many as 12,000 Japanese soldiers on board.

Reinhard Heydrich, deputy Gestapo chief, died from wounds received in an assassination attempt. In response, 24 more people were condemned today, meaning a total of 178 people have been executed in Czechoslovakia since Wednesday. The unfortunate victims' main offense was usually "approving of the attack on the Gestapo chief," or "lying to the police or not telling all they know."

In Libya, the German offensive ground to a halt when severe sandstorms covered the area. Both the Royal Air Force and the German Air Force were active during any breaks in the weather. An Axis attack, using Italian infantry and German tanks, was destroyed while trying to seize Tobruk. Despite this success, the British have not been able to drive Rommel's Afrika Corps back through the breached British mine fields outside Tobruk.

There has been serious fighting between the Japanese and Chinese around the city of Chuhsien. The Japanese have massed 60,000 to 80,000 troops in an attempt to take the city.

Elements of the Chinese 49th Army and 88th Army are now defending the city from attack on three sides. Other Chinese forces have taken Showchang from the Japanese and now threaten the rear of the Japanese Chuhsien offensive. Japanese radio, however, reports the fall of Chuhsien as "imminent." The RAF, continuing the pressure on Nazi Germany, staged a raid on Bremmen to destroy key arms plants. Losses are fixed by the RAF at 10 bombers and two fighters. Also, in what is stated to be "the largest force yet used in daylight attacks," more than 1,000 British fighters combed northern France looking for targets.

29th gives IOBC students small arms demonstration May 26

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a capabilities exercise at Red Cloud Range May 26

The CAPEX was for the students in the Infantry Officer Basic Course.

The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment demonstrated several small arms weapons currently found in infantry units.

The small arms weapons shown were the M-249 squad automatic weapon, M-60 machine gun, M-2 .50-caliber machine gun, and the MK19 automatic grenade launcher.

Instruction was also provided to the future platoon leaders on employment of these weapons during field tactical training.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment provided Bradley Fighting Vehicles for the demonstration, which included showing the capabilities of the 24mm cannon and the 7.62mm coaxial mounted machine gun.

After the demonstration, the officers were encouraged to fire the small arms weapons and the weapons systems of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

The future platoon leaders were also provided the opportunity to discuss the abilities of these weapons systems with subject matter experts from the 29th Infantry Regiment.

Battalion receives Desert Shield, Storm campaign streamers

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The "Panthers" of 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment assembled Monday on Dickman Field to close what Lt. Col. Ricardo S. Sanchez, their commander for the last two years, called "a marvelous chapter in the history of the most combat experienced armored regiment in our Army."

The ceremony marked the presentation of campaign streamers for Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm and the passing of command to Lt. Col. James E. Bessler.

"Although the spotlight turns for a moment toward the old and new battalion commanders, the purpose of this formation is to assure you soldiers that the time honored tradition of the orderly transition of command allows no lapse or gap in the responsibility of caring for you and your families," said Col. Robert J. St. Onge Jr., commander of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division.

St. Onge commended the Panthers for continually demonstrating excellence as members of the brigade's combined arms team. "You have always represented your corps extremely well — in maneuver, training, post support and everything we have asked you to do," he said.

Sanchez, who has been selected to attend the Army War College at Carlisle Barracks, Pa., termed his soldiers "the epitome of the American soldier and the guardians of the standards of excellence that have been the hallmark of this regiment."

"To have led you in battle will always be the highlight of my military career," he continued. "As you move forward in preparation for the challenges that lie ahead, there is no doubt in my mind that the Panthers will focus on our primary mission — that of being prepared to deploy and fight again in defense of our country."

"Never forget the lessons we have learned together, and both individually and collectively you must now focus on applying them to your training as you sustain your war-fighting skills, Sanchez said.

Bessler, who most recently served as a brigade executive officer at Camp Casey, Korea, confessed to feeling "humble gratitude" for the opportunity to take command of the "Speed and Power" battalion.

"Without doubt there have been commanders more intelligent, perhaps more experienced and otherwise talented, but never has there been a commander any more committed to caring for these magnificent soldiers than Jim Bessler here today," he said.

"I pledge to do all in my power to carry on the intrepid combat-ready traditions of this battalion task force," Bessler added.

The ceremony also marked Maj. Gen. Paul E. Blackwell's first visit to the brigade since assuming command of the 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) May 27.

Retired Maj. Gen. R. J. Fairfield, honorary colonel of the 69th Armor Regiment, presided over the presentation of the new battle streamers to the regimental colors.

586th soldiers aid recovery operation

By Alvin Williams
586th Engineer Company

Some 586th Engineer Company soldiers recently assisted in the recovery of the bodies of nine plane crash victims at Blewett Falls Lake, N.C.

The nine Pope Air Force Base crewmen were killed in the crash of a military C-130 cargo plane.

The 586th Engineer Company soldiers were alerted April 29 while participating in a bridge exercise at Fort Bragg, N.C., with the 20th Engineer Brigade.

The 586th soldiers provided portions of the floating ribbon bridge to retrieve the plane and span the muddy river for the lost crewmen. The last crewmen's bodies were recovered May 10.

Students observe 29th CALFEX

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment held a combined arms live-fire exercise May 21 at Cactus Range for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course students, Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps students from Jordan High School, and some School of the Americas soldiers.

The CALFEX was performed by Company A of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. Support was provided by 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment and 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery; the 690th Medical Company of the 34th Medical Battalion; and the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

The purpose of the exercise was to demonstrate the complexities of the multiple systems existing on the battlefield today.

Prior to the CALFEX, a capabilities exercise showed the evolution of the mechanized infantry vehicle. From the M-113 personnel carrier to the most modern M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle. The M-1 Abrams Main Battle Tank was also exhibited along with the M-109 improved tow vehicle during the CAPEX.

After the demonstration the JROTC students were given the opportunity to become acquainted with weapons systems on static display.

While the JROTC students were becoming more familiar with the weapon systems, the IOAC students viewed a tactics demonstration performed by a combination Bradley, Abrams live-fire team.

There were 17 different weapon systems displayed and demonstrated: The armored combat earthmover; combat engineer vehicle; the armored launched bridge; M-106 mortar carrier; the 120mm, I-81mm, and 60mm mortars; MK 19 automatic grenade launcher; M-901 improved tow vehicle; M-981 fire support team vehicle; M-24 sniper weapon; M-113 armored personnel carrier; M-577 A2 carrier command post, M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle, M-109 A2 self-propelled howitzer, and the M-1A1 Abrams Main Battle Tank.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Author and illustrator of children's books, Laura Seeley taught Herbert J. Dexter School students how she goes about her work at the school's second annual Young Authors' Day May 22.

Seeley was the featured guest out of 35 presenters at the event in which the students are treated like young writers at a conference.

Each is given a folder packet, nametag and program. The kindergarten through second grade have the presenter come to their classroom. However, the third through fifth graders are divided into multi-grade level teams.

The presenters included actresses, radio disc jockeys, television anchors and teachers from the community and across the state, according to Dexter Principal Vicki Rogers.

Coordinators for the Young Authors' Day were Lynn Harp, media specialist, and Margaret Koger, fifth grade teacher.

Seeley came to Dexter when the school made a request through her publishing company.

A native of Andover, Mass., she lives in Atlanta and earned her bachelor of fine arts degree from the Rochester Institute of Technology.

It took her three years to complete her work on "Book of Shadowboxes," and she did free-lance illustrating for Tom T. Hall's "Christmas and The Old House" and Carmen Agra Deedy's "Agatha's Featherbed."

Other presenters who shared their personal writing experiences or read stories to motivate the students to write a story were:

Alice Anderson on "Dramatic Play," Judy Archer on "My Memory Map," Sonya Boyd on "Family Stories," Dan Brennan on "Sunny Side-up," Betty Britto on "Live Action," Jerry Christy on "Post-It Writing," Ramona Claridy on "Cut Out Stories," Cy Dietrich on "I Write the Songs," Doris Eakes on "Storytelling-Springboard to Writing," Sarah Garrett on "'Rocking' with Uncle Remus," Pat Gay on "Storytelling - A Bridge to Reading," Bari Geeslin on "From the LMC to You," Judy Gilliam on "Writing Historical Fiction," Sam Hall on "3," Mary Hamby on "It Looked Like Spilled Milk," Marie Hand on "Simply Puzzling," Jacque Hornsby on "Barn Dance," Richard Hyatt on "Newspaper Writing," Annita Jackson on "Happy to be Back!," Evelyn Jordan on "Days That Make Us Feel Horrible," Dell Karr on "Colors," Libbie Kurinec on "Crazy Creativity," Nora Lester on "Writing Recovery," Danny Lomax on "Mr. Brown Can Moo! Can You?," Peggy Luker on "Clouds," Dick McMichael on "Writing a TV News Story," Melody Murray on "Take me out to the Ball Game," Cathy Orosz on "Participate in Reading," Francis Rodgers on "Storytelling: Animal Style," Sara Rowe on "Children as Authors and Illustrators," Sarah Singer on "Ladybugs," Smith Harris on "5W Poems," Bruce Snyder on "Sports Writing," Anne Trawick on "Mother Goose Gazette," Harold Whitman on "Words, Words, Words," Suzanne Williams on "The Jolly Postman" and Joyce Windham on "Adventsres with Fairy Tales."

Post to welcome soldier show

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A performance of the ninth annual U.S. Army Soldier Show will take place June 13 at 8 p.m. at Sand Hill Theater.

The 70-minute show, featuring a 35-member cast and crew chosen from soldiers Armywide, features dancing, singing, skits and a laser light show.

The performance at Sand Hill Theater is free of charge. Of the nearly 1,000 seats available, 500 will be reserved for soldiers of the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, 100 for VIPs, and the remainder for family members and the public. No tickets will be distributed and the seats are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Cast members were chosen in December from more than 1,500 applicants. The soldiers, who normally work as radio operators, mechanics, medics, helicopter pilots and a number of other jobs, completed six weeks of rehearsals at Fort Belvoir, Va.

This year's cast will travel more than 50,000 miles, performing 100-plus shows at more than 50 Army installations. In September and October the show will travel to Korea and Hawaii.

Capping off the tour will be the traditional performance at the Association of the U.S. Army Association convention in Washington, D.C.

The AUSA 1984 convention was the birthplace of the show, which went on to perform at the National Theater for President Ronald Reagan's second inauguration.

The show has since become an international, Armywide tradition of entertainment "of the soldier, by the soldier," according to lighting designer Sgt. Timothy Higdon, of Fort Knox, Ky.

The theme of this year's show is "Celebrate America." The program will include music that covers the range of rock, pop, rhythm and blues, country and western, rap, gospel and patriotic.

The show will also feature a few World War II vintage numbers, by soldiers wearing uniforms of the era.

OWC awards scholarships

Officers' Wives' Club

More than $10,000 in scholarships was awarded May 20 at the Officers' Club by the Officers' Wives' Club Scholarship Committee to high school seniors and adults continuing their education.

The following graduating seniors received $1,500 scholarships: Tori Amador, Lauren Jones, Andrew Meade and Christian Nahas. Two seniors who received $500 scholarships are Kristen Everett and Amy Town. Also, the committee selected Lauren Jones to receive a $1,000 scholarship from the financial service firm of USPA/IRA.

A $1,000 scholarship for continuing education was awarded to Jeanne Brown and Lisa Compton. The Columbus College $500 award went to Sonja Boyd. A full one-year scholarship from Troy State was given to Margie Ferriter.

According to Betty-Sue Kearney, Scholarship Committee chairwoman, the continuing education award winners are all military wives who, in addition to raising families, volunteer many hours to the Fort Benning and Columbus communities.

According to Kearney, the funds for these annual scholarships are from the OWC Welfare Fund. Throughout the year, the OWC sponsors numerous fund-raisers such as the Arts and Crafts Bazaar and the Festival of Running to build up its Welfare Fund, according to Kearney.

According to Kearney, applications are available to all active club members and their children of both the OWC and the EWC during the spring each year.

Faith takes state title

History Day competition puts school's history club on top

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Don C. Faith Middle School's History Club placed first in the State History Day competition at DeKalb College May 23.

The team, consisting of Lesmarie Velez, Andrew Hash, Andrea Jordan, April Mims and Jessica Valle, produced a 10-minute video tape on the experience of Norman Vaughan during the 1928 to 1930 expedition with Adm. Richard E. Byrd to the South Pole.

Competing against the first-, second-, and third-place winners from each of seven districts throughout Georgia, Faith's team received a perfect score from the judges in the junior groups media category.

The video was limited to 10 minutes and had to adhere to this year's national theme of "Discoveries, Encounters and Exchanges: The See of Change."

The team will now represent Georgia at the National Competition to be at the University of Maryland from June 14 to 18.

The final video product has been a year-long endeavor highlighted by a two day visit from Vaughan to the Fort Benning Schools in February.

History Club coaches are Mary Barnette and David Bunt.

It was Dexter's first experience with such an event, and 10 guests shared their career experiences and answered questions.

Serving as keynote speaker was Columbus WTVM television anchor Dee Armstrong.

The third-, fourth- and fifth-graders then took part in 30-minute sessions with three of their guests.

Young authors at White School learn value of writing

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The importance of writing in everyone's everyday life was the focus of the first Young Authors Festival at Edward A. White School May 29.

According to fifth-grade teacher Melody Vaillant, chairwoman of the Writing Committee who coordinated the event, Ann Dorer served as the featured guest.

Dorer is a children's author whose work includes "Mother Makes a Mistake," a book she wrote about her daughter.

She explained to the students about her process in writing a book, from digging into her "idea bank" and going to the library finding out how to go about this, to showing them her rough draft and talking about waiting for an illustrator.

Dorer said she learned she had a one in 1,000 chance of being chosen for publication but she tried anyway. She also explained the importance of making her envelope and cover letter attractive.

A culminating activity for the year's writing, the festival allowed the school's second through fifth graders to hear the experiences of two of the 19 presenters who visited the school during the day.

Included in the guests were Douglas Pullen, district attorney, and Sandra Okamoto, newspaper journalist and Spc. Alyanna B. Summers, a journalist with The Bayonet.

Pullen pointed out that even a football player needs to know how to read and write plays and understand his contract.

Parents provided a covered dish luncheon for the Young Authors Festival presenters.

Spouses get assistance

Army News Service

Army spouses seeking to further their education could get an economic boost soon, thanks to the Army Family Action Plan.

Education officials at the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command say they hope to establish a tuition assistance plan for Army spouses, patterned after an Air Force program that grants up to $1,100 annually to eligible students. Loretta Tucker, the Army's education program administrator, said she's "optimistic" that an Army spouse tuition assistance endowment program will be available by next spring.

Tucker said the Air Force Aid Society provides tuition assistance for spouses at remote sites to give family members a chance to qualify for better-paying jobs upon their return to the United States. She said her office is searching for an organization to sponsor a similar program for Army spouses.

AFAP program manager Carol Potter said, "Army leaders were made aware of the desire of many spouses for tuition assistance through the AFAP process," which starts with ideas and suggestions at the installation level. "When it became an AFAP issue, the Army leadership made a commitment to pursue it."

Tucker said that while Congress authorizes funds for the education of soldiers, the Army is not obligated by law to do the same for spouses. "All education benefits available to Army spouses -- and they are considerable -- result from caring Army policy and creative programming."

Some of the education benefits that were initiated by AFAP and are now available to spouses are:

•DA Pamphlet 352-2, "Educational Assistance and Opportunities Information for Army Family Members." The pamphlet outlines procedures and programs for obtaining financial assistance.

•AER-sponsored educational loans.

• Computerized estimation of grant and loan eligibility by Army education centers.

•The active recruiting of spouses as well as servicemembers by overseas universities.

Other benefits include:

•Installation women's club scholarships and school grants.

• Testing and guidance service at Army education centers worldwide.

•Work-study, free classes and scholarship programs at some schools.

•In-state tuition rates for most family members enrolled at state universities that serve military installations.

Tucker urged Army spouses to tap the resources available at their installation Army education center. Information can also be found in:

• DA Pamphlet 352-2. To get a copy, write to: Family Action Management Division, ATTN: CFSC-FSM, Hoffman I, Room 1408, 2461 Eisenhower Ave., Alexandria, Va., 22331-0521;

•"Need a Lift? - Educational Opportunities, Careers, Loans, Scholarships, Employment." The book is published by the American Legion and can be obtained for $2 by writing to: The American Legion, National Emblem Sales, P.O. Box 1050, Indianapolis, Ind., 46206.

Further information about AFAP can be obtained from your post library or personnel and community activities directorate.

QMP ousts poor soldiers

PERSCOM officials say good soldiers should have no fear of QMP boards.

Army News Service

The drawdown may eventually snag some good soldiers, but the QMP board never will, say Army personnel officials.

But, they say, convincing good soldiers that they have nothing to fear from the annual Qualitative Management Program boards has not been easy.

"In view of the Army's reshaping and force structure reductions, some misunderstanding has arisen concerning the Qualitative Management Program," said Lt. Col. Tim Decker of the Office of the deputy chief of staff for Personnel. "This program always has been and is today a qualitative, not quantitative program."

So, personnel officials say, if you're not substandard, you're not QMP material. Period.

To be selected for non-retention by a QMP board, officials say a soldier must have:

•Not met minimum standards;

•Exhibited moral and ethical misconduct incompatible with the values of the NCO Corps and the Army ethic; and

Since 1971, Army personnel officials have reviewed the records of all noncommissioned officers to determine whether they qualify for QMP. Decker insists that QMP is a "tool to identify soldiers whose performance, conduct, attitude and potential for advancement" do not meet Army standards.

"There are no quotas established for selection boards, and the number of soldiers selected for QMP varies from board to board,"

Decker said. "QMP is not used as a method to reduce the size of the Army during the drawdown."

During the records review, board members look for a continuing decline in efficiency and performance, or recent or continuing disciplinary problems, Decker said.

Last year, four separate centralized enlisted boards reviewed the records of more than 171,800 soldiers. Of those, 4,500 sodliers, or 2.6 percent, were selected for non-retention. Decker said that, historically, about 3 percent of eligible soldiers are selected each year by the QMP board.

The Master Sergeant Promotion Board is now reviewing the records of about 51,000 sergeants and 41,000 sergeants first class for QMP. Soldiers selected by the board will be notified in June.

Lyme Disease threatens some areas

Outdoorsmen warned to protect selves against infectious ticks

By Karen Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Ticks, fleas and mosquitoes are some of the traditional torments of the spring and summer months. They can cause extreme discomfort to humans and animals, and in some cases carry diseases or viruses.

Lyme disease is one such malady that has received a great deal of attention in recent years. According to the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta, the vast majority of cases occur in the northeastern states, including the New England states, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

"It's not a disease we worry about much here," said a CDC spokesman. "There has been one case reported in Georgia this year, out of 1,547 cases nationwide."

Dwayne Johnson, of the environmental health division of the Columbus Health Department, said that one confirmed case of Lyme disease has been reported in Russell County, Ala., this year, but that's the only incidence he knows of in the area.

Ticks, including the nymphal deer tick that carries Lyme disease, are most common in wooded areas. According to Charles Ford of the Fish and Wildlife Section of the Environmental Management Division on Fort Benning, deer ticks do not occur in this area.

The ticks have been identified in some regions of the South, however, and cases of Lyme disease have been reported in 46 of the 48 continental states.

According to Don Teig, a Training and Doctrine Command entomologist, there are some precautions that can minimize chances of contact with the ticks.

"Many people think that ticks will jump on you from trees, but that's not true," Teig said. "You have to come in contact with a tick."

• If you go into the woods, wear long pants and long-sleeved shirts. Tuck the pants into boots and button shirt sleeves.

• Avoid brushing against high weeds.

• Use insect repellants. Repellants containing the chemicals permethrin and DEET are particularly effective, said Teig, and are available in sporting goods stores.

• Homeowners who live near the woods should mow their grass at least once a week, said Teig, as nymphal ticks prefer high grass in or near woods.

Health practitioners throughout the Army advise summer travellers, particularly those who will be in the northeastern states and/or in wooded areas, to protect themselves from insects, including the deer ticks that carry Lyme disease.

U.S. Lyme disease incidence today.

The Fort Benning American Red Cross Station needs a chairman or chairmen for its summer youth program.

This program, which had 72 youths participating last year, may have to be cancelled because of a lack of adult volunteers to supervise youth ages 12 to 18, according to Dave DeLeon, assistant station manager.

Volunteers are needed in various locations during regular working hours Monday through Friday (depending on the location).

Youth who sign up for the program first attend an orientation program where they learn how to be professional on the job. Dependability, punctuality and responsibility are emphasized, DeLeon said.

Red Cross adult volunteers are presently located in various offices and departments across Fort Benning, such as Martin Army Community Hospital, dental clinics, libraries, the Veterinary Clinic, Santa's Castle and the main Red Cross office. Youths may be requested to work in one of these areas or other areas that request youth volunteers.

For more information or to enroll as an adult volunteer, contact DeLeon at 544-3213.

Woman discovers shopping mall in her front yard

Finds hundreds of businesses on doorstep.

Local resident, Gladys White, revealed on Monday that the city's largest shopping mall is right at her front door. "Every business in town, every bargain in town, is right here," she proudly proclaimed while holding a copy of THE BAYONET.

"I don't have to get in my car to go shopping anymore," Mrs White remarked. "Without THE BAYONET, I couldn't know where to get the best buy. I can't imagine shopping anywhere else." She said all her neighbors did the same and considered the newspaper the best shopping mall in town. The Newspaper Advertising Bureau indicates that people agree with Mrs. White, confirming 8 out of 10 people find it easier to compare prices in the newspaper.

Mrs. White was later heard to comment, "Without the paper, I wouldn't know where to get the best buy." A recent Consumer Data Service report disclaimed that the White woman was typical, with 10 times more people reading the newspaper over listening to the radio or watching television. The report also revealed that almost 60% of shoppers decide where to shop from the newspaper and 82% say newspapers allow them the best comparison of goods and prices.

"It's the smartest thing to do," White said. "Why even my boss shops the paper. And he's wealthy!"

When confronted by the fact that newspaper readership increases as income increases, Mrs. White replied, "About all my boss does is read THE BAYONET. That must be why the rich get richer." Mrs. White's boss was unavailable for comment.

"I found I could save time, and even more money, by making my shopping decisions at home with my BAYONET."

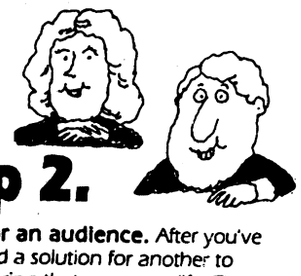
How to make money in three easy steps.

Step 1.

Sell a solution! Your old rattle trap is a teen's dream machine. That old set of golf clubs is sure to be a big hit with a beginner. Here's the point: Your former treasure can bring another pleasure. And if you've got a skill to market or service you'd like to provide—there's someone looking for you in classified.



Step 2.

Aim for an audience. After you've selected a solution for another to seize, bring that person to life. Think about your product or service and its original value to you, then detail its features and benefits to another individual. When you put those benefits into words, others like you will find value too. And that's of value to you!

Step 3.

Contact classified. Give us a call. You'll cash in on the speed and effectiveness of the dynamic classified marketplace. Each day, highly motivated readers are seeking services and solutions for a variety of needs. Turn to the classified pages, and you'll turn your item to be sold into money! It's as easy as 1-2-3!

'Rescue 911': A hit show ... and a literal lifesaver

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Though some complain that prime-time network TV offers little that's truly meaningful, consider a series that literally has helped to save lives.

Now an hour-long staple of CBS' Tuesday-night lineup - and also used in varying lengths elsewhere on the network's schedule, as with a 15-minute edition that followed the April telecast of the movie "Batman" - the reality show "Rescue 911" which originated as recurring and highly rated specials before landing its weekly berth, has been credited with inspiring additional real-life rescues by depicting the efforts of those who place and respond to emergency telephone calls. In its early stages, the program was subject to criticism (as was its executive producer, documentary veteran Arnold Shapiro) from those who questioned the merits of dramatizing sometimes-frightening cases at an hour when children likely would be watching ... but youngsters often have been the very people it has sparked to make use of the "911" number during actual crises. For proof, one only needs to ask its host: William Shatner, for whom it is his third solid series success, following the legendary "Star Trek" and the police drama "T.J. Hooker."

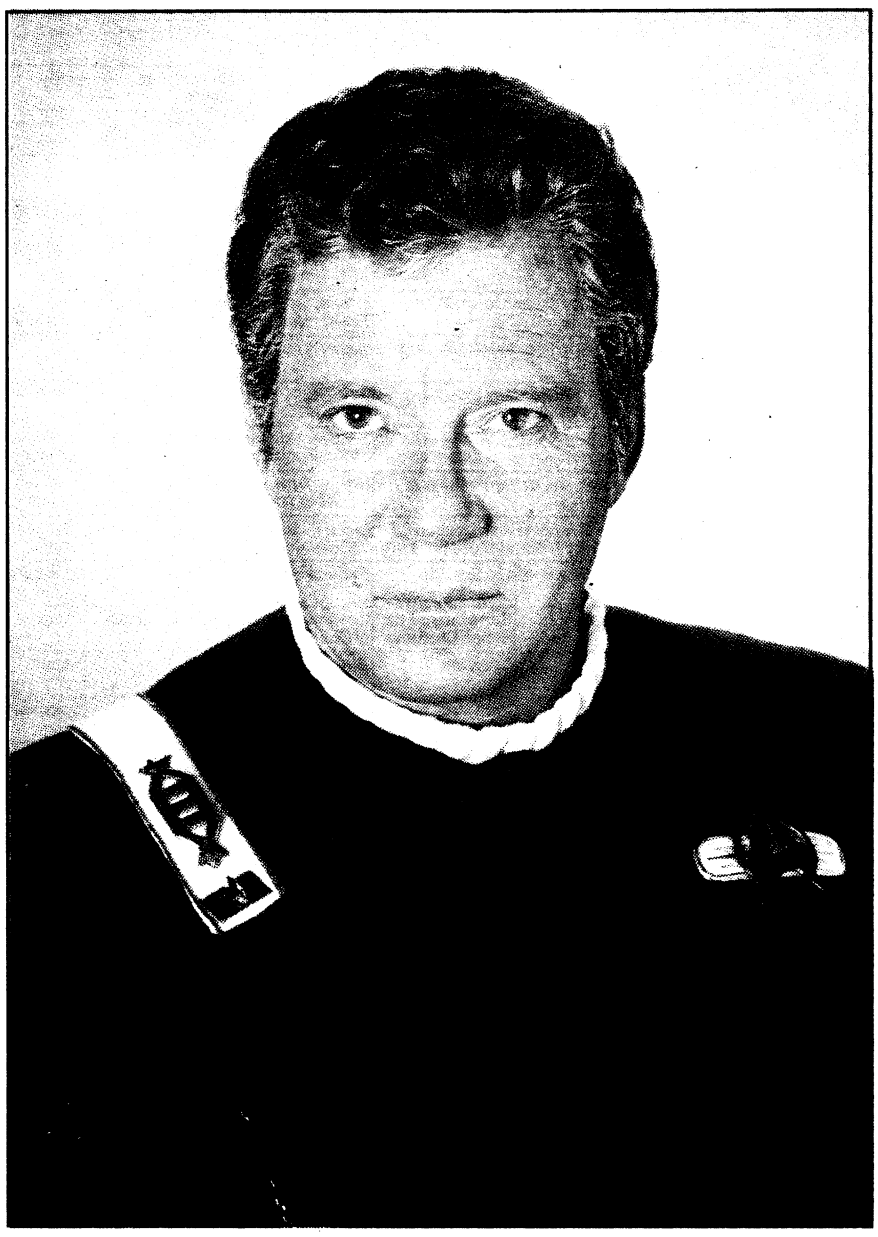
"I think it's close to 90 lives that have been saved as a result of people watching the show," says Shatner, "and I feel emphatically that it amounts to even more lives than that, just based on the personal experience of people coming up to me and saying, 'If it weren't for the show you're on, so-and-so would have died.' Of course people also write in about (such rescues), and it's those letters we use as our statistics. A man approached me at a horse show, with a little girl in his arms and tears rolling out of his eyes. He said, 'If it hadn't been for your show, my little girl would be dead.'



William Shatner

I don't remember exactly what he did, but something he learned from the program resulted in that life being saved. Of course, there are people being educated all over the country to dial '911' wherever that emergency number exists."

In a certain sense, Shatner always is working on "Rescue 911," even when he's not actually taping it on location or in the studio. "Frequently," he reports, "I'll see something on the TV news or read something in the newspaper, then call the office to see if they're working on it. If they're not, they'll take a look at it. I'm very proud to be part of the show, because not only does it do wonderful things, but it's really well done. I'll often see just a rough cut as I'm doing my voice-overs and wrap-arounds (introductions and endings), then I'll watch the completed show on Tuesday nights, just like everybody else. I laugh and cry more than any other show has ever made me do. On the other hand, I saw that 'Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country' was the seventh most-popular film released in 1991, and I also wrote a book (one entry in his science-fiction series 'TrekWars') that was on the best-seller list not long ago. A lot of things have been happening for me, but 'Rescue 911' has been a very big and valid part of that."

Now that Shatner has become a more prominent TV authority figure than ever - by appearing as himself, moreover - it would be understandable if he scrutinized acting offers even more carefully, for worry that they might not match his "911" image. However, he maintains, "I just like to tell a good story. All this ('reality' identification) might get in the way, and I don't suppose you can help it, unless you're one of a select handful who can leap from one incredible vehicle to another. The industry tends to put you in a niche, and you might twist and turn to get out of that niche. In my case, I've sometimes been identified (with one project) so much that it interferes, while it brings other offers of work at other times. For example, an option is being taken on my books for a series of TV-movies, and a comic-book version is coming out. As a result of the popularity that 'Star Trek' and 'Rescue 911' have brought me, I'm busy with those things. What I would have done otherwise, of course, is only speculation."

Anyone who might have speculated that "Star Trek VI" (which is due for home-video release on July 1) would

Springer adds new June play

Springer Theatre

He's the second most-produced American playwright after Tennessee Williams, and yet, the Springer Studio Theatre production of "True West" is the first time a full-length play by Pulitzer Prize-winner Sam Shepard has been produced in Columbus.

If you haven't seen any of his plays in other cities, you're more likely to know him as the rugged, handsome star of such films as "Days of Heaven" or "The Right Stuff," in which he played test pilot Chuck Yeager.

But Shepard is an American original. He fuses myth and reality so vividly and effortlessly that his plays conjure images as varied as the Old West, B-movies, Indian ritual and revolution.

"True West," directed by Mark Grant, is Shepard's exploration of sibling rivalry between two strange brothers. Austin (Christopher Mulloney) is a successful, college educated writer working on a contemporary Western love story. He is distracted from his work by the sudden arrival of his older brother, Lee (Mike Ufford), a compulsive cat burglar and drifter.

Locked in their common yet irreconcilable natures, each with a radically different vision of the true West, both are portrayed as victims of a new kind of western freedom and brutality.

The play will be performed today, Saturday, Thursday and June 12 and 13 at 8 p.m. in the Springer Actors Arena.

Tickets are $8, $7 for Springer Society members. Audiences are encouraged to bring a box dinner when the doors open at 7 p.m. Table seating is available in the Actors Arena and beverages are sold to diners in the theatre. For more information, call the Springer at 324-5714.

Columbus honors Africa Week

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

In Africa, "Africa Week," is designed as a celebration of the freedom from colonization. African nations gather for a week-long ceremony: African Cultural Week — a week of unity.

REVIEW

Columbus had its first celebration Sunday at the Sheraton Airport Hotel.

The program started at 6 p.m. and lasted well into the night with Columbusites and Africans appreciating the beauty of the models of color and the fashion show featuring authentic African dresses that were beautifully made to accommodate all sizes and shapes.

Both native Africans and African-Americans enjoyed the African dancing, the traditional African food and the singing by the Freeman Sisters and Sound Doctrine, both gospel singing groups.

Major pro-tem A.J. Mc Clung served as master of ceremonies and seemed to enjoy keeping his audience laughing.

Dennis V. Oso was instrumental in bringing the Africa week cultural experience to Columbus, and hopes to continue the event in coming years. Oso said, "I'm more than delighted with this celebration. History has been made today."

From the applause ... his audience agreed.

Water park ready to make a splash

Jekyll Island Authority

Another season of splashing good times has begun; Summer Waves water theme park is open for its fifth summer of operation.

"This year we are offering new food selections — breakfast items and juices for our early arriving guests and piping-hot pizza — from the food outlet," said Tom Manning, Summer Waves general manager. "We have also added two more huge Funbrella' providing added shade near the wave pool and children's area."

Attractions at Summer Waves include the five-story "Big Bounce" speed slides, the "Force 3" with an inner tube flume and two enclosed body flumes," two new serpentine slides, the "Frantic Atlantic" wave pool and the supervised "PeeWee Puddle" children's water playground.

The park will be open through Labor Day and operating hours are Sunday through Friday 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. (10 a.m. to 9 p.m. in July.)

All-day admission is $9.95 adult; $7.50 ages 4 to 8; free for ages 3 and under. Senior Splash admission (60 and over) and Night Splash admission (Sunday through Friday after 4 p.m., Saturday after 5 p.m.) are $5 each. Season passes and group rates are also available.

Busch Gardens offers new chimp, gorilla habitat

Busch Gardens, Tampa

Guests at Busch Gardens Tampa become totally immersed in a tropical forest environment for gorillas and chimpanzees when they visit Myombe Reserve: The Great Ape Domain.

The magnificent new habitat enables visitors to take a self-guided tour through shrouds of mist and fog.

The lush setting simulates the primates' natural habitat and encourages their natural behavior.

Myombe Reserve will be home for six lowland gorillas and nine chimpanzees, both of which are listed as endangered species.

The new habitat, which features conservation-oriented displays and life-size bronze sculptures of the primates, also will support a gorilla breeding program by Busch Gardens to help propagate the species and increase its chances of preservation.

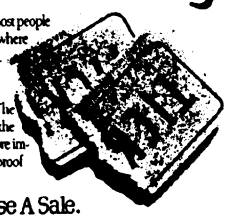
A Funny Thing Happens When People Put Down A Newspaper. They Start Spending Money.



Nothing puts people in the mood to buy like newspaper. In fact, most people consider it almost a prerequisite to any spending spree. Because that's where they make their decisions on where to shop and what to buy. Not on tv. Not on radio. And not jammed in little envelopes that come uninvited in the mail.

71% say newspaper is the place they turn for shopping advice. The place where they actually look forward to seeing the ads. And set aside the time to read them. That message comes through in study after study. More importantly, it also comes through in sales. Of course, if you want further proof of newspaper's effectiveness, run an ad and you can see it firsthand.

Newspaper. It's The Best Way To Close A Sale.

mark the end of Shatner's active participation in that film series might be proven wrong ... and that includes Shatner himself, who originally expressed doubts that he would continue. "When you see that the grosses are $70-million plus (for that last film), that's really good," he reasons, "so I don't know. I love the 'Star Trek' movies and the part of Kirk is usually written very well, something I would do even if the names were changed." Therefore, Shatner confirms that if a "Star Trek VII" was desired by Paramount Pictures and the original crew of the starship Enterprise was wanted back again, he would consider the prospect very seriously.

Welcome rangers!

Rangers to visit post for 50th anniversary

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Veterans and active duty members of ranger units from across the country will descend on Fort Benning Wednesday through Saturday to celebrate the Rangers' 50th Anniversary.

The anniversary commemorates the activation of the 1st Ranger Battalion in June 1942 at Carrickfergus, Northern Ireland.

The four-day celebration will include ceremonies for a Ranger Hall of Fame and groundbreaking for the Ranger Memorial. Other activities include open house and tactical operations.

Activities begin at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday with a mass parachute assault onto Fryar Drop Zone by the three battalions of the 75th Ranger Regiment, followe ' by an air-drop of heavy equipment on Lae Drop Zone.

At 6 p.m., the regiment's battalions will begin competition to determine the top machine gun teams, mortar crews, sniper teams and anti-tank teams. The competition will be conducted on selected ranges.

An endurathon, beginning at 6 a.m. Thursday includes road-running, swimming, biking and other events. Other competition includes rubber boat races, obstacle course races, a 20-kilometer cross-country rucksack run and a 10-kilometer litter relay race. The weapon crew competition will also continue.

A Rangers-in-Action demonstration at Malvesti Field at 9:30 a.m. Thursday will be followed by the initial Ranger Hall of Fame induction ceremony at 10:30 a.m. hosted by the Ranger Training Brigade. The Ranger Training Brigade is also celebrating the 40th anniversary of the first ranger class. There will be a picnic and open house adjacent to the brigade's headquarters.

National Infantry Museum tours of the ranger display area will be conducted at 1 p.m. A ranger awards banquet to honor the winners of the competitions will be hosted by the 75th Rangers Thursday evening for officers, senior non-commissioned officers and invited guests.

Activities on June 19 include members of the 75th Rangers participating in physical training and a formation run at 6 a.m., a ground-breaking ceremony for the Ranger Memorial and a pass-in-review of ranger veterans and active duty members.

Other activities include weapons firing and airborne refresher training for veterans, a ranger wives luncheon, a dedication and signing of the print "Rangers Lead the Way" by artist Jim Dietz, and a World War II Ranger Battalion Association dinner at the Columbus Ironworks Trade and Convention Center.

On June 20, re-enactment of the World War II battle for Vierville, France, will be recreated at the McKenna Military Operation Urban Terrain Site. Also a 10 a.m. commemoration for fallen comrades will be at the Main Post Cemetery.

Army battles AIDS

By Richard Brill

Special to The Bayonet

In the war against AIDS, the Army takes care of its own.

One of the ways the Army does this is by testing all soldiers for the presence of the AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome, virus.

"One of the advantages that the military has," said Lt. Col. Roberta Dyer, commander of Community Health Nursing, "is that we find and treat people who are infected earlier than in the civilian population because of the testing procedures the Army has."

Army regulations require that soldiers be tested at least once every two years for HIV, Dyer said.

Soldiers who are going overseas must be tested six months prior to deployment, she added.

Fort Benning to test new processing system

By Richard Brill

Special to The Bayonet

There probably isn't a soldier around who hasn't been told, "Hurry up and wait!" In an Army that's striving to be more efficient, however, that old adage may become obsolete someday.

Fort Benning has been chosen by Training and Doctrine Command as one of the test sites for a new system that is expected to drastically reduce the amount of time soldiers spend being inprocessed and outprocessed.

The system, known as Enhanced In/Outprocessing, or EIP, will use computers to link the Welcome Center in Soldiers' Plaza, where soldiers report for inprocessing and outprocessing, with other agencies on post, said Madge Prebish, chief of Personnel Automation.

"This will be a system that will help reduce red tape and soldiers won't have to waste time being shuffled from building to building," Prebish said.

Implementation of the new inprocessing procedures, including training of the personnel who will be operating under the system, will begin around the middle of this month. The outprocessing part of the program is still under development.

Here is how the new system will work.

Soldiers who are inprocessing or outprocessing will report to the Welcome Center and be asked a series of questions, the answers to which will determine which places on post the soldier must go to during the in/outprocessing procedure.

A printed schedule will then be made for the soldiers, telling them exactly where and when they need to be and what paperwork they need to bring with them.

If needed, an appointment can be made on the spot at the Welcome Center rather than the soldiers having to set up the appointment themselves.

Prebish said that with the current system, soldiers sometime go places they don't need to, such as soldiers who are outprocessing having to get their paperwork stamped by banks where they don't have accounts.

Another hassle with the present system, she added, is that soldiers are required to give personal data, such as Social Security numbers, over and over again.

With the new system, such data will already be in the computer system and can be called up by anyone using the system. Additionally, the system will be linked with the Defense Eligibility Enrollment Reporting System, which contains data on soldiers' families.

See PROCESS, A-3

NEW IN/OUT PROCESSING SYSTEM AT A GLANCE

Here is how the new system will work.

- Soldiers who are in or out processing will report to the Welcome Center and be asked a series of questions.
- A printed schedule will be made telling soldiers exactly when and where they need to be along with what paperwork to bring.
- If an appointment is needed, it can be made on the spot.

Infantry Chorus seeks singers

Group increases songs, performances

By Richard Brill

Special to The Bayonet

After its debut at the Infantry Conference in April, the Infantry Chorus is being heard all over post.

The chorus has expanded both the number of members and the amount and type of music that it sings, said 1st Lt. Lorraine Ferrell, chorus director.

"We have really improved since our debut," Ferrell said. "We have a bigger repertoire of music now. We're still not where I'd like to be, but we have really come a long way."

At the Infantry Conference, the chorus sang a medley of patriotic and Army songs. Ferrell said the chorus is currently learning a number of popular and gospel songs, such as "Imagine," "What A Wonderful World," "Somewhere Out There," "Home" and "The Rainbow Connection."

The chorus has performed at various functions all over post including awards and hail and farewell ceremonies and will participate in the Army Birthday celebration tonight and at the Fourth of July commemoration next month.

The chorus went public on Wednesday, singing "God Bless the U.S.A." and "We Were There" at a Columbus RedStixx game.

Ferrell said that the chorus is still seeking additional members.

Rehearsals are held during the week, she said, the amount of rehearsal time depending on the number of performances the chorus is scheduled for. She added that this month is particularly busy because they will be performing every week.

For information on how to audition for the chorus, contact Ferrell at 545-3797 or 545-1936.

Man learns new way of life — purely by accident

By Kenneth Y. Lee
Army News Service

TRIPLER ARMY MEDICAL CENTER, Hawaii — As I launched myself from the UH-1 Huey, I didn't realize that this would be my last skydive. At 14,000 feet, the helicopter's rotor blade made hollow sucking sounds in the thin air. "Stand-by! Ready, Set, Go!"

Ten minutes later, I was writhing in pain on the grassy field that served as the drop zone—a victim of a low "hook turn."

Medical staff at the emergency room confirmed my worst fears. I had suffered a burst fracture of three vertebrae in my lower back. Bone fragments were pressing against my spinal column.

Surgery

I needed immediate surgery. There was a 50-50 chance I would be paralyzed from the waist down and never walk again.

As a medical social worker, I had spent more than 20 years helping people survive the emotional trauma of catastrophic illness and accidents. I had been trained to understand how medical disasters affect people emotionally. But I had never fully appreciated the emotional devastation of such an event until now.

Along with my physical injuries, my emotional state was battered by fear, The road to recovery would have to be traveled on two tracks — physical and emotional. Like a railroad line, both tracks were tied together and had to be traveled together to complete the journey to recovery.

The first questions I struggled with were: Can I adjust to life in a wheelchair? What would be the impact of personal disability on me, my wife and my children? Would I still be able to work? Could I accept myself in this condition?

Uncertainty

I found out much later that my wife, Kathy, was asking herself many of the same questions plus some others. Would we have to sell the house to move to a wheelchair-accessible one? Could our marriage weather the changes?

Assessing the reality of serious illness and disability is a hurdle that must be crossed on the road to recovery.

Dealing with fears or losing my independence, my roles at work and home, and my active lifestyle were almost too much to handle. I felt overwhelmed.

Part of me wanted to just ignore those potential horrors and hope for the best. A stronger part urged me to confront reality by sharing these fears with the people closest to me.

As soon as I was able to talk about my feelings, I turned a psychological corner.

I began to feel that I wasn't alone, and a sense of calm and strength was restored. I would continue to hope for the best; and, at the same time, prepare for the worst.

Outcome

I knew that whatever the outcome of the surgery, I could go on with my life. By communicating my most dreadful fears, I had opened the door to getting support from my family and friends.

I remember being wheeled into the operating room but not much else. When I awoke, it took several seconds before I remembered who and where I was.

My first thought was, "I've got to move my legs!" I tried and, to my total relief, they moved!

During the three-hour effort bone fragments had been moved. Bone from my hip was grafted to the three shattered vertebrae. Two pencil-sized, stainless-steel rods were wired on either side of my spine to keep the job together.

I spent the next 10 days in a gradually clearing fog of drugs and pain. Throughout this period, the only thing I saw with any clarity was the enormous importance of family and friends.

Kathy, was there whenever she could be. My mother seemed to be there when Kathy wasn't. I was humbled by this kind of attention, but I needed and appreciated it.

Helpless

At first I couldn't even turn from side to side without help. No matter how good a nursing staff is, it doesn't compare to a "private-duty" family member at bedside.

The cups of chipped ice, the immediate help from someone who really knew me, and most of all the feelings of caring gave me more relief than the morphine.

Visits from friends and the crew at work lifted my spirits. Unless you've been there, it's hard to understand the isolation and loneliness you feel when you are completely bedridden.

My support system made me feel I was still worth something and was still part of the world beyond the hospital. I especially valued the friends who visited for short periods of time on a regular basis.

Recovery

I spent three months at home before returning to work. For six months, I wore a body brace when I wasn't in bed. As my back got stronger, I told myself I could return to all my activities, including skydiving.

I had challenged myself to make another jump the day the brace came off with or without medical permission. I saw this as proof that I was fully recovered.

"I can't stop you," my doctor casually replied when I shared my intention. "If you trip or come down hard, the steel rods may break loose, poke through your skin or spinal column, and you'll be going through all of this again ... if you're not permanently paralyzed. I'll keep my beeper on this Saturday."

That got my attention. I decided to wait six months until the rods were removed before resuming my skydiving career.

Well, that was a year ago. I stored the rods in a plastic bag, along with photos of my back. I keep these mementoes next to my unused parachute.

Acceptance

I've concluded that skydiving is hazardous to my health. As much as I miss the friends and lifestyle that went with it, I realized I could adjust and live very well without it.

Now I can see that this was the final part of my journey.

Making a real, lasting adjustment in lifestyle is often the last stop on the road to recovering from major illness or disability.

I found that I could not get to this destination without confronting reality, being supported by my family and friends and being very aware that I needed to travel on both "tracks."

Challenge

Recovery is not only a physical process. It is an emotional challenge that we must all recognize and meet if we wish to be successful in the many goals in life we pursue.

Columnist advises the loveIorn

COMMENTARY

Being the resident columnist for this newspaper has its drawbacks.

Somehow, people think you know more than you really do. Like Sally. After she met me, she turned to her co-worker and said, "That was Clyde Snively."

"Oh," the co-worker responded.

I have that effect on people.

But until people get to know me, or meet me, they do call me for advice.

Like the other day, I got a call from some guy who said he'd been in the doghouse and couldn't understand why.

Having zero training in this field, I asked him if it might have been something he'd done.

"No, I can't think of anything," he said.

"Well, when did you first realize you were in the doghouse?" I asked suavely.

"When I came home from work and a pillow and sheets were stacked on the living room couch," he said lumpily.

"Ah, now we're getting somewhere. Think back. What happened leading up to that day?"

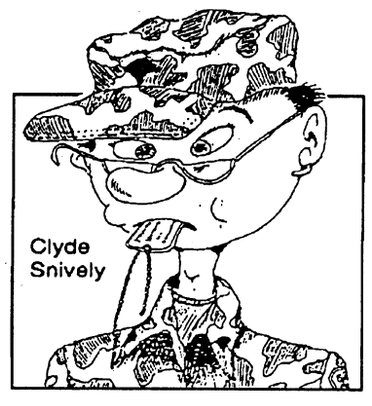
"Well, let's see. My daughter got sick and we had to take her to the hospital. She was there a couple of days. In the meantime, my relatives from Florida were supposed to come.

"Lorna, my wife, said we should tell them to cancel, but, since it'd been so long since we'd seen them, I told her, no sweat, Brucella will be OK by the time they get here."

"And," I urged him on. "Well, my daughter stayed sick until they got here. And then I got sick and stayed sick until after they left. I guess my wife was mad at me for that. But hey, it wasn't my fault."

"Well, your wife may see it differently," I said. "Is that why you were moved out onto the couch?"

"No," he said. "Actually, it was the night of her birthday."



"Ah," I said. "You forgot her birthday!"

"Oh, no, not at all. In fact, I got her a really nice present," he said, brightening up.

"And just what was that?" I asked, expecting him to mention jewelry or lingerie.

"Oh, it's a real beauty. A honey. Smooth as silk. It's something any woman would kill for," he said.

"Wow," I said, thinking he'd bought her a car. "What is it?"

"An electric weedeater!" he exclaimed proudly.

"Uhm," I said, "I'm afraid to tell you this, but that might just be your problem."

"What?" he asked, mystified.

"The weedeater," I said. "Women don't want practical gifts for birthdays. They want personal items. Buy them steak knives, the vacuum cleaner, the drain board on other occasions, but not on anniversaries, Mother's Day or birthdays," I counseled him.

His jaw went slack. He couldn't believe it.

"What's wrong with practical?" he asked. "I'd love to get a new chain saw or tuneup kit for a gift. What's wrong with women?"

"I'm not sure," I said. "They're built differently and they don't think like men. You just have to humor them."

"Maybe that's why she hasn't taken the weedeater out of the box," he muttered to himself. "So what should I do?" he asked me.

"Take some flowers home with an invitation to dinner — not to a fast-food place — and while she's having a glass of wine, give her a small gift, like something slinky or shiny to wear, and tell her you love her."

"Whew, that's a lot," he said.

"The alternative is another week on the couch," I answered.

Army celebrates 217 years of freedom

June 14, 1775. A time of unrest and turmoil. That is the world the Army was born into 217 years ago. Farmers stood ready to respond to threats to their communities in minutes; hence the term "minutemen." Today, the world is no less a place of unrest and turmoil. The fall of communism in Eastern Europe and the unprovoked aggression of Iraq against Kuwait are two obvious examples. And like the sentinels of old, our Army continues to respond quickly to threats against America and its allies.

Although our victories and achievements in the past few years have truly been monumental, the ongoing reshaping of our military is undoubtedly foremost in all our minds. Just as we did after the Civil War and the two world wars, the Army is downsizing to meet a decreased threat. We are now leaner than at any time since the outbreak of hostilities in Korea more than 40 years ago. But there is one point that today's Army leaders want you to remember — we will accomplish any necessary reductions with readiness in mind and with fairness and equity as our watchwords.

To meet the changing global situation we are restructuring our strategic organization. We are maintaining a continental United States-based force representative of the Total Army. And as Desert Storm proved, our Total Army efforts have produced stunning success.

The Army's 217th year will also be remembered as the one that saw some of our most decorated units, including the 3rd Armored Division, the 8th Infantry Division and the VII Corps, case their colors.

It should surprise few people as we commemorate the 50th anniversary of our participation in World War II, that today's Army enjoys the same public esteem as it did during the 1940s. Why? Because Americans understand that their Army consists of sons and daughters, boyfriends and girlfriends, husbands and wives, and even grandmothers and grandfathers not unlike themselves.

Sunday, we also celebrate the birthday of our national flag. In the hearts and minds of many, the flag and the Army are synonymous; they both represent the values of liberty and freedom and the will to defend them. Like the minutemen of old, both the Army and the flag stand as proud symbols of our common American ideals.

As we celebrate this day commemorating both the Army and flag, we know they will retain into the future the superb reputation both have gained around the world.

RIFs prove hard for soldiers, civilians, families

By Joe H. Hall
Army News Service

The term RIF, reduction in force, became a part of my life in 1957, when my father, an Army captain, was given a choice: leave the Army or continue on active duty as a staff sergeant.

After a few months of thought, my father chose to enlist as a staff sergeant, retiring five years later. Little did I know that nearly two decades later, during my annual Reserve training, I would be involved in screening personnel files for several of the post-Vietnam RIFs.

Based on this experience, I understand the pain involved in a RIF. But let me assure you, the current RIF policy is different. And the difference needs to be acknowledged.

When my father was RIFed, he received only 30 days notice; and the choices were quite simple: leave the service or enlist at a precommissioning enlisted grade. Imagine the emotions this created in my father and in others who were combat veterans of both World War II and Korea.

The post-Vietnam RIF, in which I briefly participated, was slightly different. Officers got a few more months' notice, but few other accommodations were made.

Many of the RIFed officers had more than 15 years' service or were Vietnam veterans. What's more, in the early '70s, families were given short notice to vacate government quarters and schools. And continued medical coverage was not provided to the separating soldier, a situation that forced 104 officers to seek service extensions to ensure proper medical care for their pregnant wives. Finally, to make matters worse, these officers faced an American public that was not sympathetic to Vietnam veterans.

Today, the RIF is equally painful for those affected. However, it has started from a far more humane perspective. Officers with 15 years' service or more are not subject to the RIF, and regular and Reserve officers are treated equally. Families with children are not forced to leave government quarters and schools with only 30 days notice.

The emotional impact of the post-Korean and Vietnam RIFs has at last been recognized by the Army. A professional army is built on volunteers, and their treatment may very well affect the force's future ability to maintain quality. As a result of this changed picture, the Army is offering post-RIF job counseling, medical care, and an understanding of the emotional stress a RIF creates.

A RIF is not an easy experience for either the military or the affected person. What differs from the standard of the past is the attempt both to understand and mitigate the emotional and financial impact.

A conscript Army allowed a more impersonal approach to personnel management. The volunteer Army no longer allows a RIF to be approached with a survival-of-the-fittest mentality.

GENERAL ORDER

Issued by General George Washington in New York, July 1776

"The General is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American army, is growing into fashion. He hopes the officers will, by example as well as influence, endeavor to check it, and that both they and the men will reflect, that we can have little hope of the blessing of Heaven on our arms, if we insult it by our impiety and folly. Added to this, it is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it."

During a soldier's birth month his or her medical records are screened. If the records show that the last HIV test was done more than a year ago, then unit commanders are notified that the soldier must be tested.

The Army uses the ELISA (enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay) test, which detects the presence of antibodies in the blood. Antibodies are produced by the body in response to viruses that enter the body.

Dyer noted, however, that the AIDS virus has a window period of six to 12 weeks or even longer before antibodies are produced.

If you are infected, initial testing may come out negative, so if you have any reason to believe you were exposed to the virus or you engaged in risky behavior within six weeks before you are tested then you might want to be retested after allowing enough time for your body to develop antibodies.

"The ELISA test is done initially as a screening test. The test is fine for detecting negative results, but sometimes there is the possibility of getting a false positive result with the ELISA test," said Dyer.

If the results of the ELISA test come back positive, then a Western blot test, which is far more accurate, is done to confirm the results.

Military personnel can get free AIDS tests, as well as free condoms and information about AIDS, at Community Health Nursing, building 2631 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Dyer said the turnaround for test results averages one to two weeks, the same as civilian clinics. Soldiers who test positive are notified immediately, while those who test negative receive notification by mail.

Testing is conducted Monday from 8 to 10 a.m. and Tuesday, Thursday and Friday from 12:30 to 4 p.m.

Federal workers celebrate, learn at luncheon

Awards, advice presented to post civilian employees

Members of Fort Benning's civilian and military work force came out to kick off Federal Employees Week with a luncheon sponsored by the Fort Benning Federal Women's Program Committee at the Fort Benning Officers' Club in the Supper Club June 5.

The Infantry Chorus sang "God Bless the U.S.A" and "Follow Me," the Infantry song.

Opening remarks were made by Col. Burnet R. Quick, post chief of staff. Quick told attendees that Fort Benning was gearing up for the Army Community of Excellence campaign and how Total Army Quality can make a difference.

The keynote speaker for the event was the Honorable Tina Stanford, recorder's court judge. Standford told attendees that the best way to make it through tough times was to be "legally correct," and take responsibility for life.

Program taps best yards

Housing area winners named monthly, quarterly

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Sponsored by the Community Life Office, "Yard of the Month" and "Yard of the Quarter" programs run from March through November every year at Fort Benning.

Darlene Perry of the Community Life Office said that certain neighborhoods on post have residents who truly try to outdo each other and selecting thembecomes very difficult.

It all begins with the spring clean up in March when the Directorate of Engineering and Housing's Self-Help Shop has free flats of flowers, seed, topsoil, etc., for the post residents to use in sprucing up their yards.

At the end of March, the mayors of the six communities and their noncommissioned officers, who in the past have been assigned to the CLO and now will be part of the community's sponsoring unit, begin rating residents' yards that are in contention for the award.

Residents or mayors may nominate quarters for "Yard of the Month" award.

Using checklists for housing standards, the mayors and NCOs, who are ineligible to win, make eight unannounced checks and rate on a one through 10 system.

"Yard of the Month" winners from each area are re-checked for "Yard of the Quarter." Perry said that the post command sergeant major makes spot checks to see that there is no padding of scores.

Beginning the end of June, there will be another award instituted for the "Housing Area of the Quarter."

Perry said it will be given for the housing area with the best overall appearance. The award will be presented to the commander of that area's sponsoring unit.

She said the sponsoring units make a significant contribution by keeping the common areas clean, notifying authorities with problems about empty quarters and in general making the whole area look good.

1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. soldiers take initiative

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Soldiers at Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment have something to be proud of.

Through the Department of Engineering and Housing's Self-Help/U-Do-It program, a group of soldiers renovated the company's dayroom.

Sgt. James Hamilton headed up the crew of soldiers, while Staff Sgt. Thomas Rondeau helped to coordinate the effort as well as joining in the work.

Hamilton said DEH was very helpful with suggestions as the work progressed and helped to head off some possible mistakes.

"It took everybody pulling together to get everything done," said Hamilton. "This was definitely a team effort."

Rondeau said the work took about three weeks, although the project started four months ago when the supplies were ordered. It was an involved job, he said, including putting up drywall, panelling, wallpaper and new molding, as well as rebuilding the cabinets.

Rondeau said the soldiers used their own tools and did much of the planning themselves. "We wanted something better for the soldiers," he said. "The dayroom has been reopened for them to use, and we hope they'll enjoy it."

Soldiers involved in the dayroom project include Rondeau and Hamilton, Pfc. Tammi Griffin, Pfc. Carmen Aldana, Spc. Kenneth Trout, Spc. Scott Lee and Staff Sgt. Pete Merino.

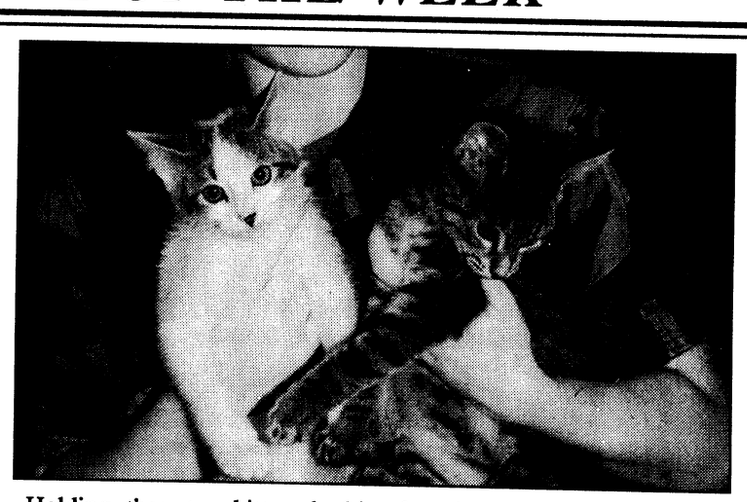
PET OF THE WEEK



Holding these two kittens looking for a home is Spc. Leslee Treat of Veterinary Services. The Siamese mix is a 12-week-old male, and the white is a 10-week-old female. If you would like to adopt either of them or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

PROCESSING: Test site

"It used to take an average of four to five days to inprocess a soldier," Prebish said. "Using the principles of Total Quality Management we've been able to reduce that time to two or three days; and, with the new TRADOC system, we should be able to reduce it even further. With outprocessing, though, we will be able to do really phenomenal things."

The bottom line, Prebish said, is that the new system will save valuable time and paperwork, set up safeguards to assist in detecting any waste, fraud or abuse and allow for better utilization of manpower.

Rangers tell stories of heroic deeds, fierce battles

By Richard J. McDowell
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Rangers will step from the history books and onto the green parade fields of Fort Benning next week.

Rangers who personally knew Maj. William O. Darby and Maj. gen. Frank B. Merrill will be here to exchange stories.

Rangers who fought the maniacal charges of the North Koreans and Chinese will be here along with those who slipped silently among the North Vietnamese to collect intelligence.

They will join our present-day rangers, the ones who jumped into Grenada and Panama and slipped into Southwest Asia, and the ones who walk the lanes with the ranger students, those who'll be charged with carrying out the tradition of Maj. Robert Rogers, John Mosby, Francis Marion, Darby and Merrill.

Two of the rangers who will be visiting during the week are Col. Frank O. Dawson and Phil Piazzi.

Dawson was a platoon leader in the 3rd Armored Division in Warminster, England, when he answered the call for volunteers.

"I was an old country boy who'd seen what the rangers did in a magazine article. That's when I became interested. So when they asked for volunteers, I signed up.

Dawson says he was interviewed by a string of officers, the first being "a big guy named Massey," who wanted to know why he wanted to be a ranger.

"Told him I thought I knew about the infantry, so I'd fit right in with the rangers."

He was accepted and assigned to the 5th Ranger Battalion and training began immediately.

There were three weeks of explosive training, rappeling, running and hand-to-hand combat. During that time, someone burned his great coat by tossing a smoke grenade in his tent.

He pulled his bayonet and gave chase, only to be stopped by an officer who asked if he planned to kill the man. Dawson replied in the affirmative. "I wasn't bothered after that."

After the initial three weeks, his unit went to the Scottish Highlands.

There, his group was greeted by the battalion commander, a Lt. Col. Carter with, "You men don't know what ranger training is or what rangers are. But if you stick around, we'll teach you about rangers."

The colonel was relieved the next day. "Guess he made someone mad," Dawson chuckled. Their new commander was Maj. Max Schneider.

Dawson recalls running up and down sheep trails, scaling mountains, attacking pill boxes with live rounds being fired by the machine guns supporting the attack and the amphibious training.

He said the unit took casualties from friendly fire. In fact, once when he complained about an 81mm round going off near his head, he was "chewed out."

Finally, D-Day came. After reaching the coast around 4 a.m., his unit loaded into the assault craft.

Water came in over the sides, over the front. "We spent three hours in those boats going in circles, waiting for H-hour to come at 0700."

Because they didn't get the word to assault the primary objective of Pointe Du Hoc along with the Col. James E. Rudder's 2nd Battalion. they went to their alternate objective of Omaha Beach.

Dawson remembers passing through the infantry who were hanging on to obstacles in the water and huddled under the cliff.

Dawson was there with his platoon sergeant and had just sent his runner to gather the rest of the troops when Maj. Gen. Norman Cota, commanding general of the 29th Infantry Division asked Schneider, "What unit is this?"

After Schneider replied, "Rangers," Cota pinned the ranger motto on them by saying, "Lead the way, Rangers,"

Dawson was the first through the wire, breaking through where a bangalore torpedo had been placed. "Some fool yelled 'fire in the hole,' and scared the hell out of us. I never looked back because I knew the rest of the rangers would follow."

However, he did get several hundred meters ahead of his unit and was alone when he came upon the first Germans on a ridgeline.

"They were big."

He dispatched the first with hand-to-hand combat, shot the rest as they tried to come out of their holes. Then he was off again up the hill, leading his battalion to finally link up with the 2nd Battalion, which had a precarious toehold on the cliffs of Pointe Du Hoc.

World War II wasn't to be be his last duty with the rangers.

He was called back to active duty in 1950 and was stationed at the Ranger Training Command here.

In 1953, Dawson was selected to command the Army Search and Rescue Unit, whose mission was to conduct covert special operations into North Korea.

He was one of two Americans in the unit using locally procured and specially modified boats to insert agents in the North.

His last tour of combat was with special forces as an adviser to the Vietnamese Special Forces High Command in the early 1960s.

Dawson retired in 1968 with a Distinguished Service Cross, Silver Star, three Bronze Stars and a Purple Heart.

While Dawson was fighting the Germans on one side of the world, on the other side of the world Phil Piazza was trying to seize the only all-weather airstrip in northern Burma.

Piazza's days with the rangers began as a jungle warfare instructor in Trinidad before joining Merrill's Marauders in Indo-China.

Piazza talks about the training and discipline of elite units (he's the one who convinced Gen. Creighton Abrams of the need to reinstate ranger units).

"Only an elite unit could have done what we did in Burma. We operated 100 to 150 miles behind enemy lines, walking more than a thousand miles through jungles, up and down mountains, avoiding all trails with no replacements and no relief until we accomplished our mission six months later.

"By the time it was over, we'd suffered 90 percent casualties, mostly for health reasons. But, we never left a man behind."

Sergeants, known as "angels," flying piper cubs provided the needed medevac support after the rangers hacked out small landing zones.

Resupply came from the C47s, the rangers calling in resupply points three days in advance.

"Our biggest disappointment would be to see our resupplies floating down by parachute as we fled in the opposite direction, away from Japanese attackers."

The Merrill's Marauders (they got their name from a war correspondent) were engaged in 31 battles, five of which they considered major.

One of those five major battles was also the last one for Piazza.

He was a heavy weapons commander at the time. His unit had repelled 17 banzai attacks. "There were so many dead Japanese stacked up in front of our positions, I had to kick some out of the way to get my fields of fire back," he said.

As he turned his head to call in on the radio for support to take out a machine-gun position 20 yards away, he was hit in the back of the head by two rounds.

He said that if the helmet had been strapped, it would have broken his neck. As he was crawling out of the way, another round shattered his ankle.

Piazza was medevaced on one of the piper cubs.

From there it was a series of hospitals, one operation to remove a bone splinter from his brain.

In 1980, using a CAT scan, Piazza learned the rounds that hit him had actually passed through his brain and lodged in his skull.

Dawson and Piazza are just two rangers who'll be here next week to swap stories and check out the "new rangers."

Cedric Dixon, Mr. Fort Benning.

Special to The Bayonet

The ninth annual Mr. and Ms. Fort Benning Bodybuilding Contest was Saturday evening at the Officers' Club.

According to Otis Sistrunk event coordinator, the turnout was better than anticipated.

Esau Bright, one of the competitors, said, "This is the biggest turnout for the contest that I have ever seen and this is my third contest."

For the prejudging, more than 60 people turned out for the show. For the finals, more than 190 tickets were sold.

The crowd seemed to get into the show more and more with each new contestant coming out for his or her posing routine. By the time the final vote had been taken, everyone in the audience seemed to have made its choice for winners.

The contest crowned two new champions.

Middleweight Cedric Dixon won the men's title when he was voted a unanimous winner over lightweight Jose Sanchez and heavyweight Jimmy Watkins, in a pose down of the three winners of each weight class.

Judge Cindy Jones, a bodybuilder for the past seven years, shared some insight into what she looks for when judging a contest.

"With the criteria for bodybuilding broken down into three parts, 45 percent for muscularity, 45 percent for symmetry and 10 percent for presentation, I also look for the competitor who looks to be the most confident," Jones said. "If a competitor comes on stage with a presence that says I'm going to win, he usually does. But you have to have the body to go with that confidence.

Listed below are the first and second place winner from each category.

Sporting festival comes to Georgia

Georgia State Games

You don't have to wait until 1996 to experience Olympic-style competition. Athletes from all over Southwest Georgia are already training for the second annual Southwest District Sports Festival to be hosted by the Albany Recreation Department on June 13 to 28.

The Southwest District Sports Festival, a multi-sport event patterned after the Summer Olympics, leads up to the Georgia Games Championships, which will be July 16 to 20 in Atlanta. As a U.S. Olympic Committee endorsed program, the Georgia Games and the statewide District Sports Festivals adhere to many of the same sport requirements as the Olympic Games but are for all Georgia residents regardless of age or skill level.

Eric Allman, Albany Recreation Department, was appointed the Southwest District director for this year's competition.

Competition is open to athletes from East Georgia and will include twelve different sporting events.

"While providing competition for amateur athletes of all ages and skills, the district events also help develop and train volunteers for the official Georgia State Games in July and for the 1996 Olympics", says Abit Massey, chairman of the Georgia State Games Commission. "The Southwest Georgia Sports Festival and its participants help 'Light the Torch for Tomorrow'."

Olympic art

Many of the top competitors of the district competition will advance to the Georgia Games Championships to vie for the gold, silver or bronze Olympic-style medals. The district festival will serve as a qualifying event for Georgia Games competition in bowling, swimming and youth track and field.

Entry forms are available by calling Eric Allman, Southwest District Director at (912) 430-5222.

3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division takes to the field for brigade-level training

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

The Sledgehammer Brigade rolled out to the field June 3 and 4 in 58 Abrams tanks, more than 100 M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicles and a fleet of combat support and combat service support vehicles for its first Victory Focus exercise since becoming the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized).

According to Capt. Marshall B. Harper, Victory Focus project officer, more than 5,000 soldiers from the brigade and units attached to the brigade for the exercise from Forts Stewart, Ga., Drum, N.Y., and Campbell, Ky., are undergoing 21 days of individual skill validation, squad and crew proficiency drills, range live-fire exercises and combined arms training to enhance the brigade's combat readiness.

"Victory Focus is the culmination of six months of planning," said Harper, who also serves as the brigade air operations officer. "Both of our infantry battalions recently completed their new equipment training with the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. The 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor conducted its first Abrams tank gunnery at Fort Stewart earlier this year, and 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery most recently held its gunnery exercise."

"For this exercise, every soldier is wearing MILES (multiple integrated laser engagement system) equipment, which heightens combat realism because it allows 'friendly' and 'opposing forces' to register 'kills' by setting off an alarm when they score a hit on the enemy," he continued.

> Victory Focus isn't cheap, but it's a relatively cost-effective way to train, using the round robin concept 24 hours a day.
>
> — Capt. Marshall B. Harper
> Victory Focus project officer

Victory Focus kicked off with three days of assembly area procedures and common task training, followed by platoon and company level live-fire exercises, culminating combined arms exercises involving infantry, armor, field artillery, combat support and air defense artillery elements of the brigade and its attached units.

"Certainly one of the highlights will be when the Air Force drops 500-pound bombs during our Quick Victory exercise Monday through Wednesday," Harper said. "Quick Victory is a combined arms exercise that will also involve artillery, mortars and attack helicopters provided by our 101st Airborne Division exercise participants,"

According to Harper, other highlights of the training are expected to include:

- Situational training exercises in which infantry and tank companies perform offensive or defensive operations.
- A defensive live-fire on Fergusson Range, where soldiers of the 324th Forward Support Battalion conduct their own live-fire exercise.
- Tank platoon defensive and Bradley platoon offensive live-fire exercises.
- A medical evacuation exercise and aerial resupply operation conducted by the medics of Company C, 324th Forward Support Battalion.
- Combat operations with Vulcan, Avenger and Stinger air defense artillery missiles.

"Victory Focus isn't cheap, but it's a relatively cost-effective way to train, using the round-robin concept 24 hours a day," Harper continued. "Soldiers will be continuously busy doing the kinds of things they would do in actual combat, and we expect the stress level to be pretty high throughout the three weeks of training."

Family support and environmental considerations have been key elements of the planning for Victory Focus, Harper said.

"Every unit conducted a series of family support group briefings in which spouses were introduced to the members of the spousal chain of concern — commander's and first sergeant's wives they can contact in case of an emergency — and received a family support book detailing all kinds of services available at no cost," he said.

"We also conducted environmental impact studies in conjunction with the post's Directorate of Engineering and Housing to minimize damage to natural resources, control pollution and protect endangered wildlife," Harper added.

The brigade has scheduled a Media Day Wednesday for local newspapers, television and radio stations, and each battalion has set a Family Day Saturday and Sunday and June 20 and 21 during which family members will receive transportation to their soldiers' field sites for a morning or afternoon visit.

95th's female drill maintains the standards

By Melissa Beeson
95th Division (Training) Public Affairs

New soldiers arriving at Fort Benning for training from May 30 through Saturday will be given an opportunity their counterparts will miss.

They will be "pushed through" by the 95th Division's one-of-a-kind drill sergeant.

Staff Sgt. Sherian August is the only female drill sergeant in the 95th Division, an Army Reserve training division headquartered in Oklahoma City, Okla.

When the 4073rd Reception Battalion of the 95th division in Lafayette, La., replaced the 30th Adjutant General Reception Battalion for its two-week training, August came into an all-male drill sergeant reception battalion.

"After the 4073rd leaves, any troops coming in will not have the opportunity to work with a female drill sergeant," said August, "because the 30th AG has no female drill sergeants and all the troops processed are infantry MOSs.

"I feel it is a good opportunity for these men to learn to take orders from a woman," said August. "I get a lot of macho guys, and it takes some of them a little getting used to taking orders from me. In the end, I feel they become better soldiers.

"Most of the women drill sergeants in the 95th had to give up their hats because of the MOS requirements," said August, "but we are a reception station with 71 Lima (administrative specialist) slots, so I could stay."

August finds nothing hard about being the only female. "I maintain the standards and find I have no problem," she said. "The only thing I cannot do is go into the barracks without announcing myself."

The barracks do create interesting situations for August.

> I get a lot of 'macho' guys and it takes some of them a little getting used to taking orders from me. In the end, I feel they become better soldiers.
>
> — Staff Sgt. Sherian August
> Drill sergeant, 95th Division

"One night at a Lone Ironman mission in Fort Polk, La., a fireguard hit the fire alarm," said August. "The soldiers had been taught how to react. They all came running out — some in towels and some half-dressed. I happened to be the drill sergeant on duty that night. I had them formed up and at the position of attention. Then towels starting shifting and slipping; some of the soldiers started to move. I yelled, 'I said position of attention and don't you move.' They didn't move then, but I had a group of 50 embarrassed soldiers."

Although August can reflect back on the light times, she knows her job is serious.

"We are responsible for accountability, we have to have a good ear to hear, and good eye to see, because you never know what could happen."

A lot of recognizing potential problems August feels comes with experience.

August has been in the Army Reserve for 16 years, seven of those as a drill sergeant. It took her a year to complete the 95th's leadership academy drill sergeant program.

She received her hat at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., after completing her training there.

Reserve Staff Sgt. Sherian August shows new soldiers the proper way to salute.

"I never wanted to be a drill sergeant," said August. "After basic training I was like most people — I really didn't like my drill sergeant.

"I got recommended for the job; I guess they saw something in me I didn't. I decided to do it and quit pushing the pencil.

"I plan on staying a drill sergeant as long as I can," said August. "I really enjoy it."

29th Inf. Regt. wishes CSM fond farewell

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment celebrated its annual Pioneer Ball June 5. This annual event was also the setting for a retirement salute to Command Sgt. Maj. Samuel Lawrence, outgoing regimental command sergeant major.

The ball was at the Columbus Ironworks. Cocktail hour began at 6 p.m., followed by the call to mess and the posting of the colors. The customary punch bowl ceremony was held in honor of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's distinguished service to the Army.

The guest speaker for the evening was Col. Gregory Camp, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment. Camp addressed the battalion about the strength of family support in the Army versus civilian family support and how they differ.

Lawrence received mementoes from each company in the battalion. He served in the Army for 29 years.

Lawrence's awards include the Meritorious Service Medal, the Army Commendation Medal with three oak leaf clusters, the Army Achievement Medal, the Good Conduct Medal (ninth award), and the National Defense Medal.

29th Inf. displays weapons

By Andrew Temple
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a small arms weapons display for the Infantry Precommand Course at Red Cloud Range June 4.

The 9mm pistol, M-24 sniper weapon, M-60 machine gun, M-249 squad automatic weapon, MK-19 automatic grenade launcher, M-16A2 rifle, .50-caliber machine gun, and a M1-36 AT-4 light antitank weapon were the small arms weapons on site.

Sgt. 1st Class Wilbur Simmons, senior noncommissioned officer master trainer of the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, operated the range.

"Our intent is to refamiliarize the commanders with the weapon systems and let them fire some rounds down range," said Simmons.

The 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a capabilities exercise on Thursday at Red Cloud Range showing the readiness capabilities of the modern infantry units.

Painting depicts heroism

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

One of the most famous events in ranger history has been depicted by military artist James Dietz in a painting commissioned by the Ranger Regiment Association.

Entitled "Rangers Lead the Way," the painting shows a scene during the assault of Omaha Beach on June 6, 1942, by the 5th Ranger Battalion during D-Day.

Depicted in the painting is the point in the battle when Brig. Gen. Norman Cota commanded, "Rangers, lead the way off the beach!"

The invasion force, until this point pinned down on the beach by enemy artillery and machine gun fire, breached the wire obstacles barring its path and successfully charged to its objective, securing the beach for the Allied advance.

"Rangers Lead the Way," was commissioned by the Ranger Regiment Association, a civilian organization of veteran rangers, said Maj. Patrick Carpenter of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

"Rangers Lead The Way" depicts the heroism of rangers.

"Dietz is one of the foremost military artists," Carpenter said. "He's known for his realistic portrayals of military scenes, and he has won several awards."

Carpenter said that a painstaking process was undertaken to ensure that the painting was historically accurate. Initial drafts were scrutinized by a review board of ranger historians and actual veterans of the assault.

"This is not just a piece of art," said Carpenter. "Everything about the painting — the stones on the beach, the weapons, the uniforms, the equipment — is just like it was during the battle. Dietz is not only a great artist, he's a real historian."The painting now hangs in the 75th Ranger Regiment Headquarters but will be officially dedicated in a ceremony June 19 at the Officers' Club as part of the upcoming 50th Ranger Anniversary Commemoration.

The re-enactment will take place at 11 a.m. June 20 at the McKenna Military Operations in Urban Terrain, or MOUT, Site. A discussion and demonstration will take place at 12:30 p.m. June 21 at the National Infantry Museum

What were your reasons for joining the Army?
"After being in the nonlucrative civilian job market, I felt the Army provided a more stable environment for me and my family. It also provides for a challenging career."

Define your style of leadership:
"I feel I am an authoritarian type leader, though I will take input and advice from others."

What person has most influenced your military career?
"Sergeant First Class Leroy Dunlap, because he has set the premier example of an effective NCO and has advised me in many of my decisions in the Army, none of which have been bad."

If you were sergeant major of the Army for a day, what improvements would you make?
"I would try to come up with a quick way to remove those in the Army who are here just for a paycheck and are not seeking self-improvement. The Army is no place to ride the 'gravy train.' "

What were your reasons for choosing your MOS?
"I like to be challenged physically, and my MOS provides not only physical challenges, but also mental ones."

Describe a memorable moment in your military career:
"The most memorable was graduating from the Ranger Indoctrination Program and putting on the black beret for the first time. I was originally assigned to 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment."

What are your future plans?
"Short-term goals are to go to special forces training and go onto a special forces group. Long-term goals are to finish my master's degree and move up the enlisted ranks as far as possible."

REMEMBERING WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today
June 12, 1942

Near Kharkov on the Russian central front, strong German tank and infantry forces have launched an attack, while overhead "mass aerial combat" denied the skies to both sides. Farther south, the German army besieging Sevastopol is still being frustrated in its attempts to take the fortress-port. Russian estimates put German losses at 15,000 men over the last three days of attacks around Sevastopol.

In the Libyan desert, the Free French Forces fighting with the British 8th Army have been forced to withdraw from Bir Hacheim. For 16 days, the French held off German armor, supported by infantry, artillery, and aircraft, broke the French line. The withdrawal places the Germans on the 8th Army's left flank and in good position to advance on Tobruk.

Reprisals continue in Czechoslovakia where 34 more people were executed in response to the assassination of Deputy Gestapo Chief Heydrich. The official number of executions to date is now 326, but this number does not include the men of Lidice who were executed when their town was razed in retaliation. The exiled Czechoslovakian government vowed revenge for the "barbarous acts."

The Japanese have renewed their threat to the Chinese armies facing them by establishing three columns with their army and moving 80 miles in two days. The rapid movement along the Nanchang-Hanchow railroad could lead to a linkup with a Japanese force that has been delayed by fighting around Chuhsien. If this linkup were to occur, Chuhsien would be overpowered and the Japanese would possess a railway into central China on which to move troops and supplies.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Connie Laika
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: Recently I was involved in what I thought was a minor automobile accident and I was taken from the scene of the accident to Martin Army Hospital Emergency Room by a military ambulance and admitted for observation for one day.

Shortly after being released, I received a letter from the Claims Office at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate notifying me that I should fill out a questionnaire for its office. Why? I am a soldier and my medical care is free, isn't it?

A: Of course you are entitled to medical care at the expense of the government. However, when a military member is involved in a motor vehicle accident, the U.S. Government may be entitled to recover the reasonable value of medical care furnished to you as a result of your injury. That recovery is against the automobile insurance of the party who, by negligence or misconduct, was responsible for your injury.

The Affirmative Claims Section of the Claims Division is responsible for recovering money on behalf of the United States. The Affirmative Claims Section requires a report of injury to determine if a claim can be made for the reasonable cost of hospital care provided to the injured active duty soldier, family member, or retired military personnel. This includes the cost of the military ambulance that transported you to the hospital.

If you pursue personal injury litigation, you must report the name and address of the attorney representing you. Funds collected from automobile liability insurance policies are deposited directly to the medical facility that provided the care.

This "income" for Martin Army Community Hospital directly enhances the quality of the medical care provided to our military community. The money collected is used to purchase additional equipment, increase staff or provide additional services.

If you are involved in a motor vehicle accident and you are treated at any hospital or medical facility, either locally or out of town, you should call the Fort Benning Claims Division, Affirmative Claims Section to report the accident. More than likely the office will already know about your accident if it happened in the local area; but, to make certain that the accident is reported, call 545-2285.

Doctor addresses family issues

Workshop topic: child-rearing

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Everyone must put something into the emotional "family bank account," said Dr. Charlesetta Slater-Shelton, one of the speakers for the 1992 Federal Employees Week workshops offered this past week by the Federal Women's Program Committee.

As part of this year's theme "Moving Forward Through Tough Times," Slater-Shelton spoke on "Preparing Society's Future Leaders." She is the chief of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry for Northridge Hospital in Columbus.

Slater-Shelton noted that our children ought to be trained that they must put something into anything that they want to get something back from. Therefore, children should be expected to invest their own time, services and support in times of hardship to their family in return for their family's love and help to them in growing up.

For military families, she said it is the consistency in family expectations that help get them through the tough transition times of moving. "They learn that we as a family are tight no matter what the military does to us. Home is our fortification even if we can't control the outside."

Admitting that parenting is a difficult responsibility in these times of teen pregnancy, substance abuse, and school drop-outs, Slater-Shelton said that it is still the family that is the primary agent, the foundation, in getting past these problems.

For it is individual caring efforts that will do the most to go beyond the teens' defiance, peer pressures at school or disparities at home over what is acceptable behavior.

She said the main strategies adults should practice with their children are: 1) finding a way to keep the lines of communication open, 2) making sure there is a balance of work, play and love in the home, 3) knowing that love and displaying it are the keystone of healing rifts and 4) coming up with a contract of guidelines reasonable to both sides.

Slater-Shelton pointed out that growing up for adolescents is a time of a changing relationship for parent and child, from dictatorship to separation.

The parent must learn to give leeway sometimes saying, "I don't agree with your decision, but if you do it, take the consequences." She noted that a stop must always be made to anything that is life-threatening.

However, she believes it is this sort of loving boundaries and consistencies that help children to make it through school and to adulthood without the early feelings of failure and depression that can lead to experimenting with drugs, sex and alcohol.

Slater-Shelton earned her medical degree from Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., where she also did her residency in adult psychiatry.

After a fellowship at Yale University Medical Center and Yale Child Study Center, she served as the medical director on the Children's Unit at Charter Lake Psychiatric Hospital in Macon before coming to Northridge.

She is a member of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry and serves on the faculty at Mercer Medical School in Macon.

Winnie Torain, Federal Women's Program manager, said that workshops such as this for federal employees have been held for the past 14 years, and supervisors on post have been very cooperative in letting their employees attend.

Others topics this week included: "Ethics in Government," "Building Self-Esteem," "Stress Management," "Effective Communication Skills," "Careers - What's in the Future," "Fort Benning's Service Organizations" and "Equal Employment Opportunity for Civilian Personnel."

Loyd School students experiment with bubbles during discovery Day activities June 5. The event was attended by kindergarten through fifth grade students, and included displays by Columbus College and Fort Benning Energy Branch.

Students blow bubbles, hear snakes

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Frank R. Loyd School hosted its Discovery Day for kindergarten through fifth grade students June 5. Kicking off the event were the Silver Wings parachuting in and a helicopter landing. Then students visited a variety of displays and demonstrations.

On hand were teachers showing how to make bubbles and explaining how solar panels work. There was a salamander to be petted, a rattlesnake to be heard, firefighters talking about what their equipment is used for, and a bookmobile to visit.

Drs. Dutchie and Ernest Riggsby from Columbus College featured a display on rocks, and Fort Benning's Energy Branch gave children rides in its lift truck, and also offered students a chance to see how they might create energy with a bicycle that could generate power for a fan, radio and television.

Fort Benning soldiers brought tanks for the children to experience touching and seeing how things are used.

Award honors leadership

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Rebecca Welch, Fort Benning Family Advocacy Program manager, was honored June 1 with an award for her "visionary leadership" in initiating the "Child Abuse: Skills Training Conference" held recently for civilian and military professionals in the area.

The award was presented by the Columbus Regional Chartered Council on Child Abuse at the organization's fifth anniversary board meeting.

More than 375 persons attended the conference, the speakers for which were coordinated with the University of Georgia so that participants could receive professional credit for attending as well.

Welch has been on staff at Fort Benning for four years. In that time, she has also been instrumental in seeing to the signing of a memorandum of agreement as to how child abuse cases on post will be handled with regard to the involvement of local civilian authorities and Fort Benning.

Attending the award presentation were Children's Court Judge Aaron Cohn, Columbus Police Chief Jim Wetherington, Rep. Tom Buck, and some of the council board members.

Board members in attendance included Juanita Booker, Muscogee County School District; Joanne Cavis, Cooperative Extension Service; Chuck Foster, Rutledge Correctional Institute; Charlie Golden, Columbus Police Department; Wanda Grogan, University of Georgia for Continuing Education; and Santo Triolo, Adult and Child Psychological Services.

Soldier Show scheduled

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A performance of the ninth annual U.S. Army Soldier Show will take place at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Sand Hill Theater.

The performance at Sand Hill Theater is free of charge. Of the nearly 1,000 seats available, 500 will be reserved for soldiers of the U.S. Army Infantry Training Center, 100 for VIPs, and the remainder for family members and the public. No tickets will be distributed and the seats are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Ed Hensley, administration officer of the Community Administration Division, said, "From all indications, the show is being received very well on other installations. I've spoken to the director, and he said things are going great and they can't wait to get here."

Cast members for the Army Soldier Show were chosen in December from more than 1,500 applicants.

The soldiers, who normally work as radio operators, mechanics, medics, helicopter pilots and a number of other jobs, completed six weeks of rehearsals at Fort Belvoir, Va.

This year's cast will travel more than 50,000 miles, performing 100-plus shows at more than 50 Army installations. In September and October the show will travel to Korea and Hawaii.

The show has become an international, Armywide tradition of entertainment "of the soldier, by the soldier," according to lighting designer Sgt. Timothy Higdon, of Fort Knox, Ky.

The theme of this year's show is "Celebrate America."

The program will include music that covers the range of rock, pop, rhythm and blues, country and western, rap, gospel and patriotic.

The show will also feature a few World War II vintage numbers, with soldiers wearing uniforms of the era.

Entertainment with Pacific Islands' flavor coming to post

Directorate of Community Activities

The "Pearls of the Pacific"is coming to Fort Benning sponsored by Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers.

It is a group of musicians, dancers and singers. The performance includes the flaming knife dance of Samoa, the Aparima of Papette, the travelling dances of the Maori of New Zealand, the comic Hula of the Princess of Pupule and the traditional Hulas of Hawaii.

Many changes of costume throughout the show highlight the clothing customs of the Pacific islands where the dances originated.

This attraction comes out of the Hawaiian Islands and for 25 years has been performed for audiences. Featuring singing, dancing and comedy, the show includes a presentation of "how to dance the hula."

"The Pearls of the Pacific" will appear June 28 at the Sand Hill Theater at 2 p.m. and at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 6:30 p.m.

For information, call 544-3079.

MACH mammogram techs trained to high standards

By Tom Greaner
Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital's mammography technicians in the Department of Radiology conform to the highest standards of care, according to Maj. Marsha Armstrong-Miller, chief of the Department of Radiology.

"Safety and quality assurance is vitally important," said Staff Sgt. Susan Serching, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Imaging Department. "One of the ways we monitor equipment is daily phantom checks. A phantom is a Plexiglas mold that is X-rayed with the mammography camera. This mold is filled with various materials including a simulated breast mass. This daily test determines whether the camera is functioning properly before each day's patient examinations are done."

While federal civil service regulations do not require the hospital's technicians to be certified by the American Registry of Radiological Technicians, they are registered either with the ARRT or other recognized professional agencies.

The registry examination specifically for mammography technicians is given three times each year, and the hospital's technicians are scheduled to take the test in July, even though it is not required.

"We also welcome the opportunity to add ARRT certification to our credentials," Staff Sgt. Rhonda V. Hobday, quality assurance noncommissioned officer for the department and a mammography technician.

The enlisted technicians are military occupational specialty 91P, or X-ray specialist. They undergo a general medical orientation and the 91P course under the direction of the U.S. Army Academy of Health Sciences, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Civilian mammography technicians must be graduates of a program approved by the American Medical Association's Committee of Allied Health Education and Administration or other accepted equivalent.

If not, they must be certified by the ARRT, The American Registry of Clinical Radiologic Technologists or a state credentialing agency.

The civilian mammography technician at MACH is certified by the state of North Carolina and meets all requirements of the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

Both military and civilian technicians are supervised and given continuous additional training by the radiologists at the hospital to keep them current as technology changes.

"Our patients can be assured that the standards of care are not only met; they are exceeded when they have mammograms done at Martin Army," Serching said.

WORLD WAR II

50 years ago this week

• Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin D. Roosevelt met to discuss the opening of a second front. As it was becoming obvious that the planned Operation Sledgehammer, calling for the attack of France, would be impossible at that time, Churchill suggested French North Africa as an alternative. This concept evolved into Operation Torch.

• Churchill and Roosevelt also agreed that the United States and Great Britain would continue to share knowledge pertaining to atomic research. The bulk of the developmental work, however, would be done by the United States-based staff, which had shown the most progress.

• In North Africa, badly directed British counter attacks against Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps failed miserably. The British suffered heavy casualties at Knightsbridge, Libya, losing 100 tanks, further reducing their number to 70 in the theater. As a result, Rommel enjoyed a two-to-one advantage in operational tanks. Soon after, the Allies abandoned Knightsbridge, the Gazala Line and El Adem.

Fort Benning Post Commander Col. Walter S. Fulton rounded out his staff, appointing Maj. James R. Johnson and Lt. Col. George A. Sossaman to the positions of post inspector and prison officer, respectively.

• At Fort Benning, Col. Albert H. Whitcomb was recognized for nine years of service as the commander of the 151st Infantry Regiment. Whitcomb had a degree from Indiana University and had previously held the position of sales manager of the Polar Ice and Fuel Company while serving in the Indiana National Guard.

• At Fort Benning, airborne training included six weeks of chute rigging, tumbling, calisthenics, and parachute jumping. Airborne candidates had to have four months of previous service and had to be between 21 and 35 years old, and enlisted men had to be unmarried and between the ages of 18 and 30.

Recycling reduces garbage

TRADOC News Service

The following are short items concerning recycling various products:

• Some glass bottles and jars can be reused as storage containers. Nearly all types are recycled into new bottles and jars, fiberglass and road bed aggregate.

• Recycling options for glossy magazines and catalogues are few. Those that are recycled are used to make tissue, cardboard and newsprint. So share them — donate them to offices or libraries to maximize their use.

• Newspapers can be reused by sharing them with others or using them as packing material. When they're recycled, they're used to make more newsprint, packaging paper and construction board.

• Plastic soft drink bottles can be reused by refilling them from larger bottles. After you turn them in for recycling, they're made into carpeting, shower curtains and fiber fill.

• Plastic detergent and milk bottles and soft drink cups can be used to store nonfood items. After recycling, the plastic is used to make more bottles. storage bins and flower pots.

• Aluminum cans are probably the most widely recycled materials. They are used to make more aluminum cans, window frames and rain gutters.

• Clothing textiles have virtually no recycling value. You can donate your old clothes to charities or shelters. If they're really old or worn, make rags and cloths out of them.

• Wood used in furniture, crates and pallets is rarely recycled. Keep them out of the trash cycle by refinishing or giving them to people who have a use for them.

CBS broadcasts made-for-cable drama

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

An old adage suggests "The family that plays together stays together," and it's true in the case of an esteemed acting clan.

Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy are among the most celebrated husband and wife teams in the performing arts, and their professional passion has been inherited by their children. Son Christopher is a production manager for such movies as "Fatal Attraction" and the recent "Thunderheart," while the couple's daughter — whom they christened Tandy Cronyn — is an actress, frequently employed in repertory and regional theater, who has mirrored her relationship with each of her parents on film. She appeared as her mother's daughter in last December's NBC movie "The Story Lady," and she also played her father's grown child in the 1989 drama "Age Old Friends." Originally made for pay-cable's HBO, the latter will debut Friday on CBS, with the elder Cronyn and Vincent ("Moonstruck") Gardenia cast as close acquaintances.

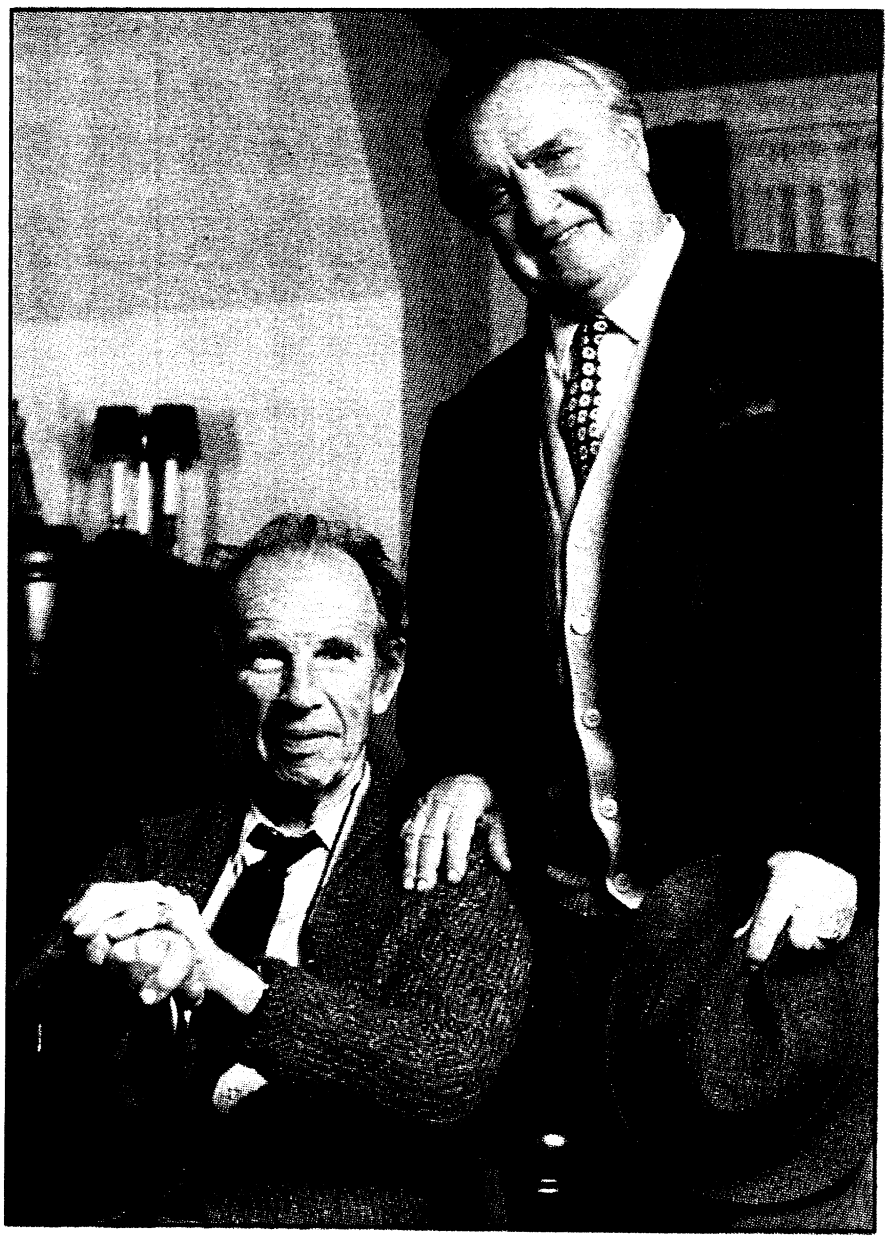
Both stars earned honors for their performances in "Age Old Friends", but Tandy Cronyn's character also plays a pivotal part in the story, which was adapted for television by England-based Bob Larbey from his play "A Month of Sundays." She appears as the estranged daughter who visits the senior Cronyn and offers to take him into her household, meaning that he would have to abandon his efforts to aid his friend. Co-produced by actor Wayne Rogers, the story also features Michele Scarabelli as a compassionate nurse and Esther Rolle as the boisterous cleaning woman at the Twin Pines retirement facility.

Some might deem it logical to find Tandy Cronyn cast opposite one of her parents, particularly since CBS has scheduled "Age-Old Friends" to coincide specifically with next Sunday's celebration of Father's Day, but she readily separates the personal and professional aspects of such occurrences. "I have nothing in common with that woman," she says of her role in "Age-Old Friends," which includes abrasive moments between the fictional father and daughter. "That's the kind of part I like to play, though, since I generally consider myself a character actress. I think these people don't get along largely because she's an only child and her father wishes she had been a boy, and she's just not his kind of person. She's very conventional, and her primary concerns are with suburban life with her husband and raising their child. That's not really of great interest to (her father), and she's very hurt by that. He's a very self-centered man, but actually, their relationship was much more fractious in the original (stage) material. I found the producers asking me to soften it but I'm always finding that in film work. I had a few moments in which I was more caustic, but that made them uncomfortable."



Hume Cronyn (seated) and Vincent Gardenia

Cronyn claims that such discomfort didn't carry over to her and her father, since she maintains that she doesn't find working with either of her parents "really any different from working with anybody else. There are times when I'll go off to do a play, and half of the cast members are friends I've worked with before, and there are other times when I won't have any previous familiarity with the people I'm working with. As long as everybody gets along and communicates well, it doesn't make any difference."

Still, Cronyn accepts the fame and reputation of her Kennedy Center Honors earning mother and father, while also assessing those as they pertain to her own career. "Sometimes, it's a problem," she concedes. "If I go to an audition and the people talk to me about my parents, I never get the job, no exceptions. I've been around for a while and my work is known, so very often, the subject doesn't come up because it's got nothing to do with what we're doing there."

Recently, Cronyn appeared in Buffalo, N.Y., opposite John Schuck in a production of the popular A.R. Gurney play "Love Letters." She mostly works on the East Coast, explaining that "There was a time, about 10 years ago, when I packed my bags and went to do the inaugural season with the Denver Center Theatre Company. They were drawing

Women in combat, drafting women being studied by military

Should women be required to register for the draft and the role of women in combat are just two of the issues being studied by the Commission on Women in the Military to be shown on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel next week.

Other highlights from the Army Information Television Service will include an update on VSI/SSB, a quality of life survey, debt forgiveness for active duty Desert Shield/Storm veterans, ironing out pay problems, safety of the military blood supply, and after eight years of testing new weapons, the Army will keep the M-16A2 rifle.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on channel 32 Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call the Public Affairs Office at 545-2201.

actors from all over, and after about four months of that, I decided to drive to L.A. and see what was going on. I got a small part in a movie and was hanging around, waiting to do that, when the Old Globe Theater picked me up for six months. I then went back to Denver for the winter season, then back to the Old Globe and the Mark Taper Forum (in Los Angeles) ... and the next thing I knew, 2 1/2 years had gone by and I had done 11 plays, all of them in Colorado and California. I said to myself, 'What am I doing out here? If I'm just going to do theatre, I may as well go back East.' I did, and I've been able to do some really interesting stuff."

Susan Lucci is host, nominee at Daytime Emmys

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

After 12 straight daytime emmy nominations - and 12 straight losses - will the 13th time finally be the charm for Susan Lucci?

More than with virtually any other aspect of morning and afternoon TV's annual ceremony, suspense has engulfed the now-traditional inclusion of the star of ABC's "All My Children" in the category of Outstanding Lead Actress in a Drama Series. She's gotten her baker's dozen nod this year for her portrayal of the indomitable Erica, but even if she goes home without a win again, she'll be in evidence more than ever on the telecast: Serving in the capacity of host for the first time, Lucci will join Phil Donahue to preside over the 19th staging of the event, as it gets its second consecutive airing in prime-time Tuesday on NBC. Presented live (to the Eastern half of the country) from New York City's Sheraton Hotel & Towers, and executive produced by television veteran Dick Clark, the special again will feature numerous stars of serials, game shows and information programs as presenters. Of the contenders, CBS' "Guiding Light" is the most-nominated series with a total of 16 nods, followed by CBS"'The Young and the Restless" (15), NBC's "Another World" (10), and CBS"'As the World Turns" and PBS' "Sesame Street" (nine each). (A special prime-time edition of "Another World" will precede the Daytime Emmys.)

Susan Lucci

"All My Children" has a total of eight nominations, but without any doubt, most of the attention in that drama's case will be focused on the glamorous and pleasant Lucci's latest shot at a victory. Given that situation, she says she'll be glad to have something else to occupy her mind that evening: "It's the first time I've ever been asked to host, and my first reaction was to feel very honored. My next thought was, 'Oh, what fun,' because I really like to work. I thought it would be especially enjoyable to work with Phil Donahue, since I was interviewed by him several years ago, and I see him every year at the Emmys. It seemed like a great idea." Deeming the occasion "a celebration of daytime," Lucci is the first representative of afternoon drama to serve as a daytime emmy host, since game-show staples such as Bob Barker and talk-show veterans including Donahue and Oprah Winfrey usually have performed that duty before.

The fact that the ceremony gathers participants in so many different areas of daytime TV appeals greatly to Lucci, who reasons, "That's part of the fun, to have everybody together in one room. I really enjoy that." She probably would enjoy winning, too, particularly with the buildup that always accompanies her nominations. Nevertheless, she maintains she has "no idea" how the moment might feel if her name is called. "I have no experience (of getting an Emmy) to draw on," she explains, "so I really do regard this just as a very happy event that I'm looking forward to." (It certainly isn't improbable that an award-show host also could be a winner that night, since it happened to Glenn Close three weeks ago at the Tony Awards, and to Burt Reynolds at last year's People's Choice Awards.)

Lucci insists that if a Daytime Emmy eludes her yet again, she'll have no complaints. "It's been a very exciting time for me, especially the last few years," she says of such additional activities as her guest stint during the final season of "Dallas" and her many TV-movies (the most recent being the CBS venture "Double Edge" last March). "The past year on 'All My Children' has been spectacular, too. The range of material has been wonderful, and I've had wonderful acting partners as always, but the sheer doing of it has been enjoyable." Interestingly, Lucci reports that it sometimes takes a while for word of award nominations to reach the actual nominees, as was the case on the "All My Children" set after the 1992 Daytime Emmy possibilities were announced. "I think a lot of people are never sure when the nominations are coming out," she muses, "then the news somehow filters down and everybody jumps around, very excited. Of course, it's great that our show itself is nominated (for Outstanding Drama Series)."

While she's never overseen an awards presentation before, Lucci had a somewhat similar experience when she

Innsbruck Theater serves 'Tuna'

Innsbruck Theater

What do Arles Struvie, Thurston Wheelis, Aunt Pear, Petey Fisk, Phineas Blye and Rev. Sikes all have in common? They are some of the fine, upstanding citizens of Tuna, Texas — and they are all played by two actors.

Cliff Bolton and J. David Johnson star in one of the most inventive tour-de-farce comedies of the season. Directed by Sam Peabody of Atlanta, "Greater Tuna" opened the Innsbruck season in Pine Mountain, Ga.

Dinner service begins at 8 p.m. with the show immediately following. Tickets for dinner and show are $25 per person. Subscriptions are available until June 27, if purchased in advance.

Second on the bill is the musical "Swingtime Serenade" by Winston Clark. It stars Richard Berube, Diane Bolton, Josephine Peper, Chris Yates, Cliff Bolton and Chris Hyde. Join them as they travel back in time to a new 1940s club, about to open — it's a story of young performers, trying to make it in the big time.

For reservations, call (706) 663-2211.

Concert message: SAY NO!

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

REVIEW

In the first Say No To Drugs Stay-In-School Concert, an event sponsored by the NAACP at Lanett High School Stadium in Lanett, Ala., MC Lyte and Damian Dame were scheduled headliners.

MC Lyte was unable to appear, but Damian Dame and a group of other performers "rocked the house."

The audience roared when the Ophelia Devore Performing Company presented its acts. Among them were A.D.C., a young male dance group, who had excited an older audience at the Media Blitz at the Ritz Cultural Center in Albany, Ga., in May.

The group members are Wesley Crawford, Michael Culp, Lamarcus Davis, Ronrica Edge, Terrod Lilly and Demetrius Powell.

LaDay, a pretty-faced female rapper who is becoming known for her rapping and unique hats, was well received, as were the Ophelia Devore models.

Guess Who, a male dance group of high school students, featured acrobatics in their dance routine, which pleased the crowd greatly. The members are Donny Hartman, Johnny Hartman, Gary Magel, Anthony Williams, Kelvin Williams, Stephen Smith and Vincent Stephens.

Damian Dame's musical performance was the highlight of the event. The crowd screamed and tried to touch their hero, seeming thrilled to be in his presence.

The program included a talk by a young man, Anthony Ramsey, who spoke of the perils of drugs and the "immorality" that results from drug use.

Ramsey spoke of the strength he draws from his relationship with God, saying, "The love of God is the greatest pleasure. What God does, he does out of love."

If the children and teens listened to the message presented in speech and song, the concert was a glowing success. The concert is projected to be an annual event.

Springer plays around

Springer Opera House

The Springer Studio Series used to be called "the best-kept secret in Columbus." Now the secret is out. Columbus has discovered the intimate, informal "special something " that typifies the studio productions at the State Theater of Georgia.

There are some folks in town who never darken the doors of the celebrated mainstage theater but never, ever miss a show in the studio.

Patrons can come early with a box dinner, claim a table, order beer, wine or soft drinks from the concession stand and enjoy a casual meal with your friends before the show starts.

With only 100 or so seats, everyone is near the stage, and some folks are practically on it.

The studio series is different from the mainstage season. While the mainstage is a venue for popular or commercial theater, you're more likely to see something off-beat or adventuresome in the studio.

The first show of the 1992-93 studio series season is a remounting of a recent mainstage favorite.

The Springer's 1991-92 mega-hit, Alfred Uhry's Pulitzer Prize-winning "Driving Miss Daisy" will be restaged in the reach-out-and-touch intimacy of the actors arena Oct. 15 through 24 and will then proceed on a tour of the Southeastern states.

For the second show in the Studio Series, the atmosphere will be cozy but the location will be different.

With the audience sitting on the Springer Mainstage and facing the house, this production will be a musical revue called "Stage Door Cabaret," playing March 4 through 13. The audience sit at tables with the opera house's Victorian decor as a backdrop.

To conclude the studio series for 1992 and 1993, the Springer will present a world premiere play. The winning play of the Springer's Deep South New Play Contest will be produced June 10 through 19 in the Actors' Arena.

Contestants will submit their plays this fall, and the winner will be announced in March.

was a guest host on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" in the fall of 1990. "There's almost no live television anymore," she reflects, "so that adds a little extra dimension and an extra excitement. The adrenaline is always there before we tape a scene on 'All My Children,' but doing something live heightens that even more." Lucci has been a presenter on other shows supervised by Dick Clark, and she considers his production team "first-rate. He's so hands-on and into everything and so good at what he does, that I feel I'm in the best of hands. This should be a lot of fun for me to try ... but it's also very scary. It's a new challenge."

Defense officials talk debt

Persian Gulf payments confuse some soldiers

American Forces Information Service

Persian Gulf debts, overpayments, pay adjustments.

There are many questions in the minds of service :mbers about these topics. Does the Defense .nance and Accounting Service consider the overpayment a debt or routine pay adjustment: Is it one the service member has to pay back, or does it fall under the defense secretary's debt cancellation policy?

The answers affect almost 250,000 Reservists and active duty members and more than $100 million in overpayments and advanced pays.

Service members have expressed confusion about what the Defense Finance and Accounting Service considers a legitimate debt or a routine pay adjustment from the Persian Gulf War. In some cases, earlier announcements of Defense Secretary Dick Cheney's decision to cancel indebtedness were misinterpreted. Some individuals believed the government would cancel all overpayments of $2,500 or less.

Not so, said officials. The agency is reviewing each case to see if it qualifies for debt cancellation. The review will determine if individual cases merit cancellation and refunds of money already collected or demands for repayment.

Routine pay adjustments are a different story, said officials. For example, if the service member receives partial pay, the finance centers have two months to adjust a member's pay account for the partial payment before it becomes a debt.

In deciding to cancel a debt or to collect payment, the agency looks at a number of factors.

Here are some guidelines the agency is using for cancellation of debts:

•Debts existing prior to the Persian Gulf conflict do not qualify.

•Cases involving fraud, dishonored checks, loss of government property, fines, forfeitures, bonus recoupment and dual pay do not qualify.

•Active duty members must have collected combat zone-related imminent danger pay or must have been entitled to the combat zone tax exclusion to qualify.

•Mobilization or recall to active duty satisfies the requirement for reserve component and retired members to qualify.

Service members who disagree with the decision should consult their local finance and accounting office.

2nd U.S. Army academy's staff trains National Guard, Reservists

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Sometimes the hardest workers get the least credit.

Take the 2nd U.S. Army Noncommissioned Officer Academy for example, which, in the words of Sgt. Maj. Larry Martin, the academy's director of instruction, "is one of Fort Benning's best kept secrets."

Academy Commandant Sgt. Maj. Thomas Jackson echoed Martin's sentiments.

"A lot of people on post don't even know we exist. I've had soldiers report here who took three or four hours just to find the place," he said.

Hidden away in Harmony Church, the academy is almost a miniature post within a post. There are 30 buildings, including classrooms, barracks, living quarters for the cadre, administrative offices, a motor pool and an arms room, dining facility, auditorium, day room and troop medical clinic. The academy also uses a large section of land near Victory Pond for field training.

Originally located at Fort Bragg, N.C., the academy moved to Fort Benning in January of 1989 because of growing pains and an expanded mission, Jackson said.

The academy's year-round mission is to provide Noncommissioned Officer Education System instruction, such as the Primary Leadership Development Course and the Basic and Advanced Noncommissioned Officers Courses, to noncommissioned officers of the U.S. Army Reserves and National Guard.

Reservists generally come to the academy to attend classes during their two weeks annual training or on the weekends for monthly drills. For 1992, around 2,500 soldiers are projected to attend, said Jackson.

"We have soldiers who come here every month who drive as many as 50 to 250 miles. That shows the kind of dedication and incentive that they have," said Jackson.

To accomplish its mission, the academy has around 20 full-time Reservists employed as everything from instructors to administrative personnel.

Jackson said the training is fast and furious. PLDC, for example is 15 days of non-stop training.

To facilitate the training of soldiers, the academy has come up with several innovations, Martin said, such as combining the barracks and classrooms into one building. Soldiers who are going through PLDC live on the bottom floor and conduct their classroom activities upstairs. This arrangement, Martin said, "allows each squad to maintain its integrity."

Since 1979, the academy's facilities have undergone continuous upgrading. Most of its buildings have been renovated, and the academy now sports a large, lighted sign out front to let the rest of the post know who they are.

"Our goal is to continuously upgrade the quality of life for soldiers and the instructors," Jackson said.

In fact, he said, giving soldiers the chance to receive high quality training is the basic reason the academy exists.

"One of the greatest satisfactions that an NCO can get is training soldiers ... laying the foundation for them to become effective soldiers and for them to effectively train soldiers of the future as well. How we train our soldiers affects not only our future soldiers but our effectiveness in combat," Jackson said.

"I saw a sign at Fort Jackson that said something like 'the Army's most valuable asset is a trained soldier.' That's our belief at the 2nd Army NCO Academy in a nutshell," he said.

Rangers gather

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Veterans and active duty members of ranger units from across the country are here to celebrate the Rangers' 50th Anniversary.

The anniversary commemorates the activation of the 1st Ranger Battalion on June 19, 1942 at Carrickfergus, Northern Ireland.

Activities were set to begin Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. with a mass parachute assault onto Fryar Drop Zone, however low clouds caused the event to be cancelled.

Today's activities include members of the 75th participating in physical training and a formation run at 6 a.m., a memorial ground-breaking ceremony for the Ranger Memorial followed by a pass-in-review of ranger veterans and active duty members.

Saturday, a re-enactment of the World War II battle for Vierville, France, will be recreated at the McKenna Military Operation Urban Terrain Site. A 10 a.m. commemoration for fallen comrades will be at the Main Post Cemetery.

School of the Americas gives flags to Columbus

Presentation honors Flag Day, expresses hope for integration

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas participated in a flag-raising ceremony June 12 as part of the Columbus Gateways Project.

In commemoration of Flag Day, SOA presented the city of Columbus 18 flags from countries in Central and South America, which annually send enlisted, noncommissioned and commissioned soldiers to SOA for military training.

Columbus Gateways is a beautification project targeting 26 entries or intersections in Columbus for landscaping and overall design enhancement.

Among the dignitaries present at the ceremony were: Mayor Frank K. Martin; Wayne Shackelford, Georgia transportation commissioner; John Flournoy, chairman for Columbus Gateways; Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general; Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant of SOA; and Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, assistant commandant for SOA, who presented the flags.

"Our banners, together with the flags of the United States and of Georgia, will give silent testimony of the yearnings for a greater integration of our countries to confront the demands of the next century," Molina said, during the presentation at the intersection of Victory Drive and Fort Benning Road.

"These colors become the solid expression of an important group of countries called to assume a more significant role as the continent of the future, based on natural resources, economic potential, geopolictical position and the outstanding attributes of their heroes and burdened by the inevitable feeling of duty to create a better world for the generations of tomorrow," Molina said.

Following Molina's remarks, officers representing countries such as Argentina and Venezuela stepped forward and raised their nation's flags.

The Columbus Gateways Project sought SOA's assistance because, according to Virginia Ann Holman, marketing chairwoman for Columbus Gateways, the Columbus community is proud of the school, especially having it relocated to Fort Benning at a time when several other posts were being considered.

"We're proud to have the school, and we wanted their participation to make them feel a real part of the community," Holman said.

"The school (in donating the flags) is turning around and giving something back to the community," she added.

The design for the Victory Drive and Fort Benning Road intersection was developed to add a "regal, patriotic entry" to Fort Benning, Holman added.

The center median on Victory Drive holds American flags that lead to four quadrants at the intersection; within the four quadrants are the flags from SOA.

Started more than a year ago, the first two sites being developed by Columbus Gateways are being developed through private funds, with the other 24 to be completed with federal and state granting programs, Holman said.

It will take approximately three to five years to complete the county-wide project at a cost of $4.2 million.

Spc. Trevor Garrett, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — I think a soldier is a soldier — no matter what his or her sex is. Female soldiers are not treated differently in the workplace."

Rangers have heroic history

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet Columnist

COMMENTARY

For those of you who just arrived at Fort Benning from the planet Pluto, today is the last day of "Hooah Week."

And I mean the originators of Hooah — the Rangers, those who fought in World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Grenada, Panama and even Desert Storm. They're here to commemorate the 50th anniversary of their founding.

I know you'll find this difficult to believe, but the Snively family has a very close connection to the rangers. I realize the official linkage of the 75th Rangers goes back only to World War II and Maj. William O. Darby. He's the dude who organized the 1st Ranger Battalion in early June 1942 in Northern Ireland, the official day of activation being June 19.

At the time he was given the mission of forming the rangers, he was an artillery captain serving as aide-de-camp to Gen. Russell Hartle.

Darby lead his rangers in the Dieppe Raid; his rangers spearheaded the Allied invasion of North Africa, the 7th Army's landings at Sicily; the landing at the Salerno beachhead in Italy and the landing at Anzio beachhead.

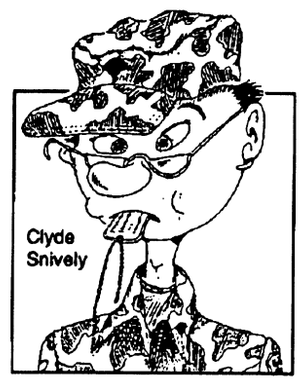
What Darby and his rangers were doing was carrying on a tradition that reaches back to the 1300s and to my grandfather (to the 35th power) Clausterene Sniffly who used to roam the English forests and countryside, cutting trees and guarding borders.

Grandfather (to the 15th power) Crestaheu Sniffling was a member of an irregular and glamorous military organization in the 1600s, known as "Border Rangers." He was charged with guarding England's frontier with Scotland.

His son, Callifophe Sniffling, came to this country around 1675 and fought in the Indian Wars as part of "Church's Rangers" until about 1715 when he settled down and got married.

But his grandson, Chester Sniffling, followed in his footsteps, joining up with his fellow hunters, frontiersmen, mixed-bloods and Indians to scout and conduct raids against the French for the British.

He was in Gorham's Ranger Company, one of six independent companies of Rangers.



From there, he joined Capt. Robert Rogers' company and served with Rogers' Rangers as they expanded to nine companies. By then, Rogers was a major and his rangers conducted many daring operations, including deep penetrations of enemy-held territory.

After those companies were disbanded at the end of the war in 1763, the Sniffling family was out of the ranger business, somehow never linking up with Francis Marion or John Mosby.

And as the name evolved into Snively, I guess the adventurous character of the men must have changed too, since none of them volunteered for any modern-day ranger units.

But that didn't stop me from going down to listen to modern-day rangers and their predecessors swap war stories.

I came across rangers who'd survived malaria, typhoid, malnutrition and other ailments to fight gallantly against the Japanese in Burma as part of Merrill's Marauders.

I came across rangers who grabbed the first toehold on Omaha Beach, rangers who suffered 90 percent casualties in human wave attacks from Chinese soldiers during Korea and rangers who slithered and crept behind enemy forces in Vietnam, getting trapped and fighting their way out again.

They were joined by rangers who serve today, who made low-level jumps into Grenada and spearheaded the attack in Panama.

There was a common bond among these men. They exuded discipline and self-confidence. You could see the fire in their eyes as they talked of "never leaving a comrade behind," of having the intestinal fortitude to fight on to the Ranger objective and complete the mission, even as a lone survivor.

These are our rangers. Happy 50th birthday.

Infantry branch receives congratulations

On behalf of the men and women of the U.S. Army, I send greeetings to the members of the infantry branch as you celebrate your 217th anniversary.

The infantry branch has established and continued a proud tradition of excellence since its formal establishment on June 14, 1775. Throughout your long history of proud dedication and true professionalism — in both peace and war — you have served with distinction. The soldiers of the infantry branch may be justly proud of countless outstanding achievements.

I am confident that the hallmark of the infantry branch will continue to be that of selfless service. Best wishes as you start your 218th year of service to the American people.

Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan
U.S. Army chief of staff

Infantry celebrates 217 years of freedom, pride

Congratulations on the 217th anniversary of dedicated infantry service to our nation. The Queen of Battle can take great pride in the selfless contributions made in the defense of freedom.

Proud young soldiers have worn the crossed rifles insignia worn from 1775 through today. From the Revolutionary War through Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, infantrymen have proven themselves to be the best America has to offer.

Congratulations, and I challenge you to continue your proud tradition.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks
TRADOC commander

Safety a training must

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Summer is here and with it comes high temperatures and humidity, making heat injuries a real possibility during training.

Heat injuries are preventable with a liberal policy treatment at the first symptoms.

The best way to train for combat in hot climates is to teach soldiers how to protect themselves from heat injuries and how to treat heat injuries.

Whether a soldier is a combat casualty or heat injury casualty, our combat force is reduced.

The following can reduce heat injuries:

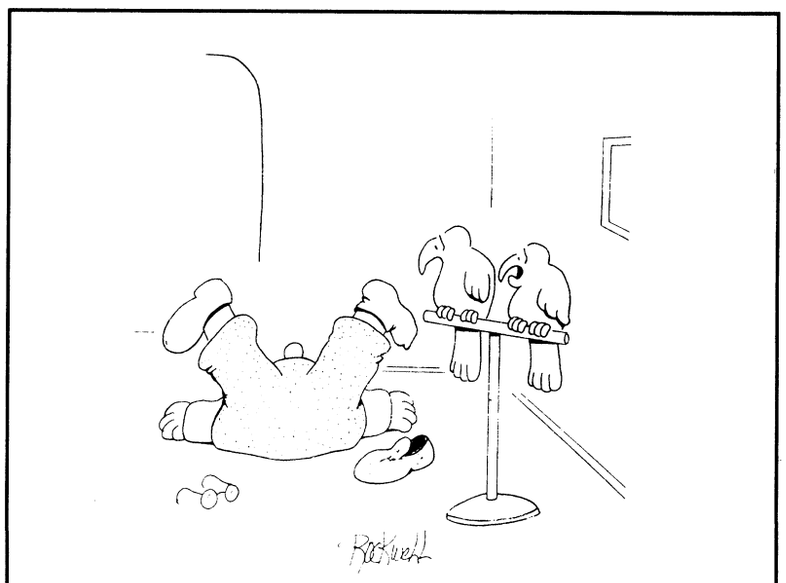
Allow two weeks acclimatization of recently arrived soldiers in training.

Identify soldiers with previous heat injuries. A special marking on helmet or the hat may be helpful to leaders.

Ensure wet bulb globe temperature is monitored at training sites and that training is modified as the mission allows. Call 545-5281 for current reading.

Monitor soldiers closely. The buddy system should also be used. Fort Benning Card 126 is a pocket guide for prevention and treatment.

Advise soldiers to eat normal meals lightly salted. Forced drinking at water breaks may be necessary.



"Let's face it! He's gone, and it's up to us to flush him down the toilet."

Education key factor in safe environment

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Engineering and Housing is stepping up its efforts to educate soldiers about the importance of protecting the post's natural resources.

Its message is "Army training and environmental awareness and protection go hand in hand."

As part of its Environmental Awareness Program, the division has put together a package of educational tools that will be distributed to all of the major units on post, said Maj. Joe Orosz, division chief. The package contains posters, "The Environmental Leader's Handbook," laminated field guides and wallet-sized cards containing environmental information that affects the conduct of soldiers in the field and a 13-minute tape entitled "Training and the Environment."

"Our goal," said Orosz, "is to eventually distribute these items to every company on post. For example, 5,000 of the laminated cards were recently distributed to the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division in preparation of Operation Victory Focus."

Orosz emphasized that protecting the environment and training soldiers are not mutually exclusive. In fact doing the former will ensure that the latter can continue, he said.

"Everyone must recognize that our installation is a resource that if treated right can continue to be a renewable resource. If we don't protect our training lands, they will degrade to the point where we can no longer use them to train leaders and infantrymen," said Orosz.

Orosz also noted that the protection of natural resources on Fort Benning, in addition to being a good thing in itself, is mandated by state and federal law.

"The bottom line is the general public and the federal government have mandated certain requirements that we must comply with, such as the National Environmental Protection Act of 1986. So really what we are doing has been in effect for a long time," he said.

Orosz also said the Environmental Awareness Program is designed to add the environmental factor to the soldier's decision-making process.

A lot of soldiers, he said, do things in the field without thinking about the consequences of their actions, such as destroying vegetation, leaving trash behind, or driving tracked vehicles through fields or wooded areas.

Such behavior not only affects the plant and animal life of the area, but it is often not very tactical. A soldier who leaves the trash from a Meal Ready to Eat on the ground is forgetting that in combat he would be leaving telltale clues behind for enemy scouts.

Orosz said in the Army of the future, environmental protection will be a major concern. He added that Fort Benning will soon include environmental awareness training in many of its schools and leadership development courses.

"The Army is recognizing that our training lands need to be guaranteed as renewable resources and that it needs to be environmentally sensitive," he said.

"I'd like to think that taking care of our training areas will be seen as a combat effectiveness multiplier. The more we take care of these areas to ensure they exist for future soldiers to train on, the more effective we will be as a fighting force," he added.

Gateway brings better service

Martin Army Community Hospital

The Gateway To Care program, which was recently implemented at Martin Army Community Hospital, is designed with two goals in mind, according to Jeanne Dickerson, Martin Army Community Hospital spokeswoman.

Dickerson said those goals are:

•To increase access to health care for military beneficiaries.

•To reduce the cost of that care, for both the patients and taxpayers.

Retirees who use military medical treatment facilities have expressed concern that they will be "squeezed out" of the military care and be forced to rely more on civilian sources, she said.

Others, who have been seeing civilian providers through CHAMPUS, are concerned that they may not be able to continue with the doctor they've seen for several years, she said.

Patients using MACH may continue to do so, if the needed care is available, she continued. Meeting the goal of cutting medical costs means that more, rather than less, care will be available in order to lower the CHAMPUS bill.

"The law says that retirees and families can be treated in a military medical treatment facility only on a space-available basis," said Col. Henry C. Beumler, chief of the U.S. Army Health Services Command Coordinated Care Division. "Gateway to Care says, yes, but let's make more space available for them."

Gateway to Care stresses providing primary care inside the medical treatment facility. Most who will be referred to CHAMPUS will be those who would have used CHAMPUS anyway or who would have gone without care before Gateway to Care existed.

"Many patients who now use CHAMPUS providers will continue to see the provider they prefer, because Health Service Command expects most well-qualified CHAMPUS providers to join Preferred Provider Networks," Dickerson said.

Martin Army Community Hospital officially expects physicians who now have a large number of CHAMPUS patients to join the Preferred Provider Networks rather than lose these patients to other physicians. Preferred Provider Networks physicians sign agreements to accept negotiated fees for their services, making it less expensive for the patient, as well as the government.

Also, Preferred Provider Networks providers will file CHAMPUS paperwork, which relieves patients of the need to do so.

Preferred Provider Networks physicians also must accept Medicare as well as CHAMPUS, so coverage is continued, without interruption, when patients reach 65 years of age, Dickerson said.

Once patients reach 65 years, the cost-share rules for Medicare apply, she said, and patients nearing this age should shop around for medicare "gap insurance" in order to protect themselves against the possibility of higher cost shares.

Happy 217th

Fort Benning's Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White (left) and Post Command Sergeant Major Command Sgt. Maj. William Acebes share the honor of cutting the birthday cake at a celebration marking the 217th year of the Army. The event was June 12 at the Fort Benning Officers' Club in the Regimental Room.

Environment book helps field leaders

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

"The Environmental Leader's Handbook" laminated field guide will eventually be distributed to all of the units on post, said Maj. Joe Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division.

In case you haven't seen them yet, here's a brief summary of the important points soldiers need to know in regards to protecting the environment.

Remember, it's not a question of choice, Orosz said. Post regulations mandate that the following rules be observed in the field.

Endangered species

•Fort Benning is home to two endangered species: the red-cockaded woodpecker and the gopher tortoise. Disturbances to their habitats may result in fines of up to $25,000 and/or a prison term of five years.

•The gopher tortoise can be found in areas of well drained, sandy soils in open woods and fields and has a large, easily recognizable burrow.

Movement in these areas is restricted to transient foot traffic and no excavation is permitted.

•Trees that are part of red-cockaded woodpecker cavity trees are marked with a 12- to 15-inch band of white paint, while a 200-foot buffer zone around the colony trees is marked by a band of yellow paint and a sign denoting the area as restricted.

Training in red-cockaded woodpecker colonies is limited to transient foot movement and transient movement of vehicles on established roads and trails.

Vehicle movement

•Obey posted speed limits. The speed limit for tracked vehicles is 15 mph.

•Keep vehicles out of restricted areas, including red-cockaded woodpecker and gopher tortoise colonies, wetlands, tree plantations, cemeteries and cultural and historical sites.

Fire prevention:

•Open fires are prohibited. Cooking and warming fires are permitted in burn barrels and must be policed prior to departure.

•Use caution when using pyrotechnics, tracers and incendiary rounds.

•Report all range fires to Range Radio Control or Natural Resources Management Branch immediately, noting location and size.

If the fire cannot be extinguished by the responsible unit, Range Control will notify the Fire Department for assistance.

Training areas:

•Check all training areas for litter, commo wire, concertina wire, trip wires and booby traps before and after using a training area.

•All excavations, such as foxholes, trenches and latrines, must be refilled before units can be cleared off of a training range.

•Do not cut live trees for camouflage; use camouflage nets.

Knowing customs rules makes for easier traveling

American Forces Information Service

If you're planning to travel outside the United States, the Customs Service has a few tips to make your business trip or vacation a little less taxing.

Know Before You Go, a free Customs Service booklet, offers information on travel laws. The booklet also includes do's and don'ts about declaring goods and household-use items. Customs officials recommend reading it before beginning your travel to avoid any trouble when you return to the United States.

Customs Service officials said a few things to keep in mind include:

•The dollar amount for merchandise that can be exempted varies and is determined by your port of departure to the United States; departure port also affects the duty rate that you pay for anything over the personal exemption limit.

•The amount of perfume, cigarettes and alcohol that you can bring into the United States varies and is limited depending on where the items were purchased.

•You must inform Customs if you have $10,000 in cash or some other type of negotiable instrument with you on arrival or departure from the United States.

•Before leaving the United States, register foreign-made items with serial numbers, such as cameras and tape recorders, with the nearest Customs Office.

•Put your purchases with the sales slips in one bag, if you can.

•Things that you can't bring into the United Staes include meats, plants and other agricultural items; pornographic articles and publications; illegal drugs; and hazardous materials like toxic substances and switchblade knives

Customs information is available through the nearest customs office. For a copy of Know Before You Go, send a postcard with your name and address to:

New limit clarified

Military Police Activity

After nearly two months of Operation Slowdown, physical training safety patrols, efforts of the Military Police Activity have dramatically decreased the number of potentially dangerous incidents involving troops and vehicles, according to officials.

However, clarification is needed on some of the speed limits on certain streets.

The following roads will remain "as posted" speed limits:

• 10th Division Road
• Dixie Road except the portion from Sightseeing Road (Sandy Patch) to Lawson Airfield.
• Sightseeing Road, Dixie Road to Sunshine Road.
• Sunshine Road
• Lumpkin Road from Benning Road to Custer Road.
• Custer Road from Benning Road to Eisenhower Exchange.

Speed limit on the Main Post area will be 15 mph during normal physical training hour (Monday through Friday 6 a.m to 7:30 a.m.).

Motorists are also reminded that when passing individual or troop formations running, the speed limit is 10 mph.

For more information, call Staff Sgt. Karl Yeldell, traffic noncommissioned officer in charge, at 545-7241.

PET OF THE WEEK

This Border Collie is looking for a home. He is about one-year-old, well-cared for and appears to have been deserted by his family when they cleared post. If you would like to adopt him or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

EXCELLENCE & QUALITY

GARRISON FOCUS

Garrison Commander's Office

As part of the ongoing commitment by Fort Benning and the commanding general to improve the quality of life on post, a number of Army Family Action Plan Quality of life issues raised at the Army Family Action Symposium April 23 have been resolved or elevated to the Department of the Army with resolution recommendations.

Symposium issues receiving recommended solutions during the week of June 1 to 8 include: centralized vehicle registration, health care in military facilities for retirees over age 65, civilian television programming in post medical facilities and inadequate medical facilities for family practice on Kelley Hill.

Centralized vehicle registration within the Department of Defense is one of the issues being considered. Currently, the policy is being reviewed by the Department of the Army with consideration for standardizing vehicle registration with other military services.

Another issue under consideration as part of the symposium is billing Medicare for health care in military facilities received by retirees over age 65. If approved, the military health care provider would bill Medicare directly. Both the Department of the Army and the Department of Defense currently are reviewing this issue.

Another symposium issue being considered is civilian television programming in Fort Benning medical facilities. Complaints have arisen due to the current programming. Televisions within the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity facilities will be tuned in to Cable News Network for a 30-day trial period beginning July 1. At the end of the trial period, complaints and requests for channel changes will be reviewed. Programming will be revised based on viewers' input.

The Kelley Hill medical facility has come under fire as part of the symposium — specifically, the inadequacy of the facilities. The Kelley Hill Family Practice clinic will be relocated to Sand Hill upon completion of the on-going addition to Winder Health Clinic. Construction is scheduled for completion this fall.

As issues are resolved, they will be published in future editions of The Bayonet.

DoD looks at families

Survey will pinpoint, assess family needs

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

What family programs DoD keeps over the next few years may depend on how you answer an upcoming survey.

"As the military shrinks and budgets get tighter, it's very important to know that the dollars we spend target the needs of our military families," said Gail McGinn, director of DoD's Family Policy, Support and Services office. "To put the money to best use, DoD needs to know what works and what doesn't."

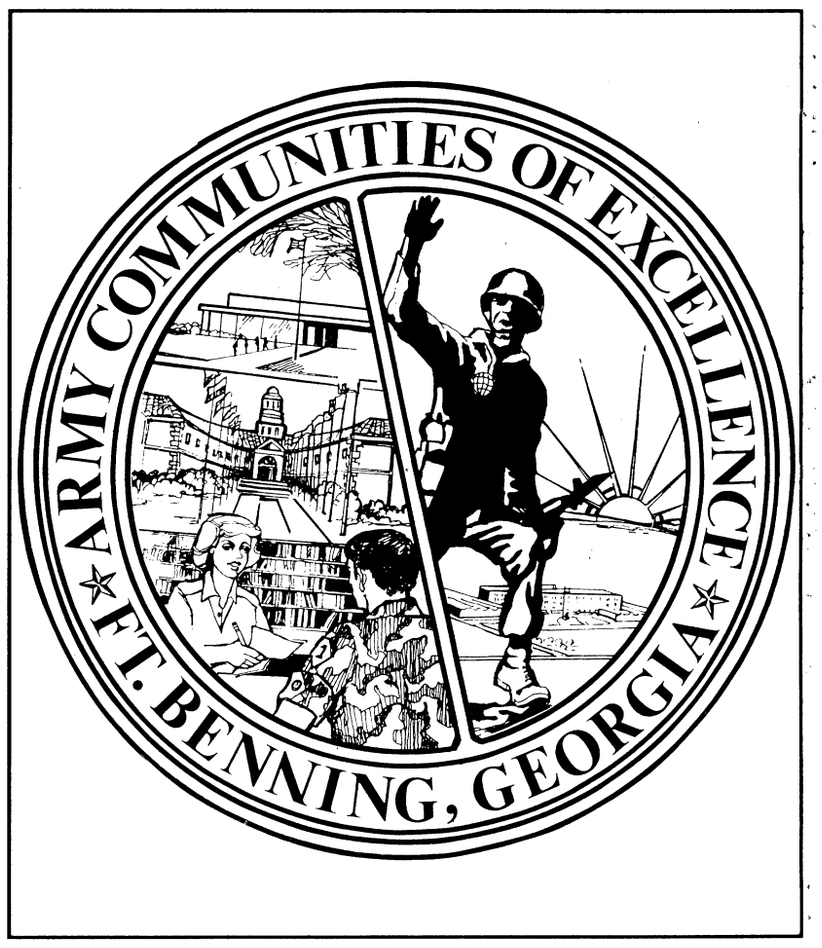
The 1992 DoD surveys of officer and enlisted personnel and their spouses deal with issues of military life and specific family services and programs. McGinn said some of the questions ask what programs and services you use and how important they are to you. In addition, questions ask about overall quality of military life. Other questions deal with specifics like moving and job availability for spouses.

"This is really everybody's opportunity to tell us what they like," she said. "The survey results are the voice of the people in the field. What they say will be used to drive changes and expand or adjust services."

Specific surveys were developed for officers, enlisted service members and spouses, said McGinn. Some questions are the same on each survey, while others lean heavily toward the targeted audience. "The spouse survey, for example, has more questions on family services and programs than the one being mailed to enlisted people," she said.

McGinn said more than 100,000 surveys for military members will be sent to units during the next month. The National Guard and Reserve components will also be surveyed. About 55,000 surveys for spouses will be mailed to their homes. A prepaid return addressed envelope is enclosed, she added.

This survey is the first since 1985. The sixth such survey for military members, McGinn said this is only the second time that spouses will also be asked what they think.



The 1985 survey indicated growing concern about child care programs, spouse employment, frequent moves and availability of housing, said McGinn.

"We're hoping people answer the questions honestly. The survey is confidential; no one in DoD will know who said what," McGinn said. "These programs are influenced by budgets. With less to work with, we want to keep those that actually help you and your family. "It is really important to complete the surveys so that we can make decisions."

Ranger Hall inducts first members

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A total of 23 people were inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame at its first induction ceremony June 18 at Malvesti Field.

According to 1st Lt. Ron Clark, recorder for the Selection Board, the Hall of Fame was established because there was no standing tribute to individual rangers who have made extraordinary contributions to our nation or ranger history.

It is located in the Ranger Training Brigade Headquarters building.

He noted that the number of inductees was larger this year because of it being the first time. It is expected that there will be fewer in subsequent years.

There will be a phasing process to recognize substantial, yet equal, number of inductees from each era in ranger history, followed by a transition era to tailored numbers of inductees and a gradual reduction in focus on specific eras.

To be eligible for nomination, a person must be deceased, separated or retired from active military service for at least three years and must have served in a ranger unit in combat or be a successful graduate of the U.S. Army Ranger School.

The Selection Board will seek nominations from June 30 to Jan. 1 of each calendar year with the basis for nomination being valor, extraordinary achievement and/or service.

For this inaugural year, nominations were accepted only from active Army Ranger units, Ranger Battalions Association of World War II, Merrill's Marauders Association, Inc., the Ranger Infantry Companies (Airborne) of the Korean War, the 75th Ranger Regiment Association Inc., and the United States Army Ranger Association, Inc.

Eras of ranger history will be represented by these groups.

Beginning with the transition phase, a major command/unified command category will be added to the units that may submit nominations. These units will nominate in the at-large category.

Once a nomination packet is submitted, the packet will remain active for board consideration for 10 years, unless sooner selected for induction.

This year's selection board included commanders and their command sergeants major from both the active Army 75th Ranger Regiment and the Ranger Training Brigade, President Col. John J. Maher III, Col. David L. Grange, Command Sgt. Maj. Joe Heckard, Command Sgt. Maj. Mariano R.C. Leon-Guerrero; Clark, recorder; Maj. Gen. Jerry White, senior ranger-qualified general officer on post; and Maj. Patrick Carpenter, observer.

Inductees come from all eras

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Initial inductees into the Ranger Hall of Fame Thursday were divided into eras of ranger history. They included:

Pre-World War II

-Capt. Benjamin Church for outstanding service to colonial America as a ranger-type leader. He commanded an independent Ranger company during King Philip's War (1675 to 1678) on the New England frontier against hostile Indians. Church's notes on tactics and operations were published and are methods used by the rangers to this day.

-Maj. Robert Rogers for outstanding service to colonial America as a ranger-type leader during the French and Indian War (1754 to 1763). His ranger tactics for use by light Infantry officers and many of his "Standing Orders" are applicable today.

-Col. John S. Mosby for outstanding service to the Confederate Army commanding the 43rd Battalion Virginia Cavalry Partisan Ranger during the Civil War. His rapport with civilians, discipline within his command, knowledge of ranger tactics and dedication contributed to his unit's success. He gave valuable post-war service as a U.S. government employee.

World War II - Europe

-Brig. Gen. William O. Darby for gallant and heroic service to the nation and U.S. Army as a ranger leader. He was selected to organize and command the 1st U.S. Army Ranger Battalion in 1942 in Northern Ireland. The 1st, 3rd and 4th Ranger Battalions are famous for their endeavors in the Sicilian and Italian campaigns.

-Maj. Gen. James E. Rudder for outstanding service as a soldier, statesman, educator and ranger leader. He organized, trained and led the 2nd Ranger Battalion, successful on D-Day and throughout World War II. Upon retiring, he served as president of Texas A & M University.

-Col. Max Schneider for tactical brilliance and outstanding gallantry as a ranger leader. During the Normandy invasion using quick thinking and calmness, he brought his rangers on the beach intact, ready to fight, allowing U.S. forces to move farther inland.

World War II - Pacific

-Maj. Gen. Frank D. Merrill for extraordinary valor and outstanding leadership as commander of Merrill's Marauders, the 5307th Composite Unit. He led the Marauders into the Burma jungles behind Japanese lines to cut off enemy communications and supplies. In 1947, he became the deputy chief of the American Military Advisory Mission to the Philippines.

-Col. George A. McGee for extraordinary valor and outstanding service with Merrill's Marauders commanding a battalion-sized unit of volunteers from the 33rd Infantry Regiment.

-Col. Logan E. Weston for extraordinary gallantry and service to the nation with Merrill's Marauders during World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War as an infantryman. He also served as a unit chaplain and earned the title, "Fighting Parson."

Korean War

-Cpl. Glenn M. Hall for extraordinary heroism and valor as a ranger while assigned to the 1st Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne), 2nd Infantry Division during the Korean War. His determination and remarkable bravery in the face of seemingly insurmountable odds exemplify the rangers' resolve to complete the mission though he be the lone survivor.

-Col. Ralph Puckett for extraordinary valor and distinguished service as a qualified Ranger leader during the Korean War with the 8th Ranger Company, for serving as a ranger adviser and helping to establish the Colombian Army Ranger School and for his service in Vietnam.

-Sgt. Martin E. Watson for extraordinary valor and unyielding determination as a ranger with the 1st Ranger Battalion during World War II in Northern Africa, Sicily and Central Europe and remaining a prisoner of war for 15 months. He volunteered for the 4th Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne) during the Korean War, during which term of service he was captured and tortured for repeated escape attempts. His iron will and unshakable resolve illustrate that surrender is not a ranger word.

Vietnam

-Spec. 4 Robert D. Law for extraordinary courage and gallantry in action as a ranger-qualified leader . He was with Company I, (Ranger) 75th Infantry, when he threw himself on a grenade to save his teammates illustrating the many sacrifices rangers have made for their country, their unit and their fellow rangers.

-Staff Sgt. Robert J. Pruden for extraordinary courage and gallantry in action as a ranger-qualified leader. He is the second ranger assigned to a U.S. ranger company in ground combat to be awarded a Medal of Honor while serving in a ranger unit. Pruden served with Company G, (Ranger) 75th Infantry.

-Staff Sgt. Laszlo Rabel for conspicuous gallantry and indomitable courage as a ranger leader with Team Delta, 74th Infantry Detachment Long Range Patrol in Vietnam. While preparing for a counterreconnaissance mission, he threw himself on a grenade and saved his team, illustrating that no matter what the consequences a ranger never fails his comrades.

At Large

-Col. Francis (Bull) Dawson for extraordinary valor while serving as platoon leader with Company D, 5th Ranger Battalion on Omaha Beach during World War II. He also was chosen to command the 8112 Army Unit during the Korean War and served as an early adviser to the South Vietnamese Special Forces.

-Maj. Gen. Kenneth C. Leuer for numerous achievements and 26 years as a ranger. He was given the Abrams Charter for the formation of the modern ranger battalions. As a "Modern Day Darby," he activated, organized and trained the 1st ranger battalion into the Army's premier fighting force and co-authored "The Ranger Creed."

-Col. Arthur D. Simons for extraordinary valor while serving during World War II. He participated in all three campaigns of the 6th Ranger Battalion, led the covert White Star Mobile Training Team into Laos in 1961, led and trained ground forces to free American prisoners-of-war outside of Hanoi in 1970.

--Gen. Richard E. Cavazos for distinguished service to the U.S. Army in positions of great responsibility and his contributions as a ranger-qualified leader during Korea and Vietnam. In 1983, he directly influenced the formation of the 3rd Ranger Battalion and the Ranger Regimental Headquarters.

-Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. for dedication to duty and contributions as a ranger-qualified leader. He served in World War II, Korea and three tours in Vietnam, as well as director of the Ranger Department.

- Col. Elliott P. Sydnor for outstanding service as a ranger-qualified leader. He served in World War II, Korea and in Vietnam was the ground force commander during the daring raid on the prisoner-of-war camp at Son Tay, North Vietnam.

Honorary inductees

Gen. Creighton W. Abrams Jr. in honor of 38 years of foresight, valor and service to his country during World War II and Korea. Abrams commanded the U.S. Army Military Assistance Command in Vietnam from 1968 to 1972 and was appointed chief of staff of the Army in 1972 guiding the rebuilding of the Army after its bitter experience and rapid decrease.

-Richard A. Leandri for his dedicated support to the U.S. Army Rangers. In 1980, he established the "Chairborne Rangers," a group of concerned business and professional men who support the military and sponsor the prestigious "David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition" annually at Fort Benning. He also established the "Shuffstall Award," which honors the Drill Sergeant of the Year at Fort Benning.

Going back in time

Lance Jones (left) and Paul Crawley, portraying two German Falschirmjagers, find themselves surrendering to U.S. paratrooper Pete Panzeri and Ranger Greg Gerometta during a practice re-enactment of World War II, given by the National Military Historical Association. The actual event will take place at the McKenna Military Operations in Urban Terrain site Saturday at 11 a.m.

Congratulations to all Rangers— past, present and future — for 50 years of "Leading the Way."

Storms, lightning jeopardize lives

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Recently, a Fort Benning soldier was struck by lighting. He was standing near a chain-link fence on Red Cloud Range during a late afternoon thunderstorm. He was treated and released from Martin Army Community Hospital the same day.

Last year, another Fort Benning soldier was not so lucky; he was killed by a lightning strike while standing in the entrance to a tent.

If you are caught outside as a thunderstorm approaches, remember that lightning always takes the easiest path to the ground. Make sure you are not it. The following is a list of shelters in descending order of safety:

• A building protected by an approved lightning-protection system.

•A large unprotected building offers a degree of safety if you stay away from plumbing, wiring and appliances.

•A ditch or a depression if caught in the open, stay low. Stay alert to any flash flooding. Avoid metal objects, such as towers, metal fences and metal bleachers.

•A small tree among several large ones provides shelter if caught in the woods. Stay at least six feet away from the tree trunk so you won't be hit by a side-strike. Never stand under an isolated tree.

•If caught in the water, get back on dry land as soon as possible.

If you are at home during a thunderstorm:

•Avoid using the telephone. Unplug electrical appliances. Keep clear of all metal objects, such as pipes, refrigerators, stoves and air conditioners.

•Stay away from open doors and windows.

•Postpone taking a bath or washing dishes until the storm passes.

If you are part of a field training exercises, in addition to generally accepted precautions, the following apply:

•Place weapons on the ground and take cover several meters away from the weapon.

•Kneel down if adequate cover is not available. Do not lie flat on the ground.

Thunderstorms move quickly in this area, and the most likely time for lightning strikes is at the beginning of the storm. In some cases, people struck by lightning are killed outright, while others are only temporarily stunned and paralyzed, which stops their breathing.

Prompt application of cardiovascular pulmonary resuscitation may restore breathing in such cases and save their lives. A person who has been struck is safe to touch (no electrical hazard exists). It is important the individual receives prompt medical attention.

Mostly Software computes a win

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

John Nicholson of Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, stands ready for the pitch.

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Mostly Software from Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, defeated the School of the Americas Tuesday evening at Glenn Field No. 1, 13-3. The game ended after only five innings because of the ten- run rule.

Mostly Software sent 13 batters to the plate in the first inning and scored eight times to take a lead they would never relinquish.

SOA was able to score a run in the bottom of the first inning when left fielder Pablo Rodriguez doubled and moved to third on a single by Phillip Durant. A force play at second allowed Rodriguez to score SOA's first run. A fly-ball out by short fielder Carlos Ortiz ended the inning for SOA. At the end of one inning, the score was 8-1.

In the second inning, Mostly Software increased their lead to 9-1, on singles by Jimmy Armstrong, Larry Pallotta, and Ken Duncan. Software could have scored more, but Pallotta was thrown out at second trying to advance on the single by Duncan. Duncan was thrown out at home after a single by John Nicholson to end the inning for Mostly Software.

In the top of the third, Mostly Software scored two more runs. A walk to right center fielder Steve Aviels, a single by catcher Jim Cline and a walk to designated hitter Anthony Hill loaded the bases for shortstop John McDaniel, who promptly slapped a single off of pitcher Adaberto Torres to score Aviels and Cline. McDaniel's was caught trying to stretch his single into a double to end the inning for Mostly Software.

SOA had a chance to get back into the game in the bottom of the third inning when they were able to load the bases with nobody out, but two force plays at home by Software pitcher Art Porter and a soft fly ball to shortstop McDaniel killed any hopes for SOA in the inning.

Mostly Software got their final runs of the evening in the top of the fourth inning. A single by Armstrong to lead off the inning, a walk to right fielder Aaron Buelow and then a ground-rule double by Pallotta scored Armstrong. A ground-ball out by Duncan scored Buelow from third. Two fly-ball outs ended the inning for Mostly Software with the score 13-1.

SOA scored their final two runs in the fifth inning when designated hitter Angel Solano got on board with a single. An error on second baseman Bennett Reid allowed Solano to reach second on Torres' ground ball. A stinging shot down the third base line by Blas Ruedas scored Solano, and Torres moved to third. Torres scored on a deep fly ball out to give SOA their final run of the game. A grounder to shortstop McDaniel ended the inning and the game for SOA in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Small town ballplayer makes big hit in Col.

Columbus RedStixx

Having been born and raised in Tunkhannock, Pa., a town whose population ("about 3,000") is equivalent to a good crowd at Golden Park, Marc Marini is accustomed to a small atmosphere, but he's ready to break out.

High school baseball was a walk in the park for Marini, as he batted .637 and was a four-year letterman. He followed other "snowbirds" from the north down to Florida, where he honed his skills on the field and in the classroom at Jacksonville University.

After three years in the Sun Belt Conference, Marini was among the leaders in many batting categories. In May 1991, his college career ended with a .376 batting average, and his sights were aimed on a pro career. The June draft came and went, and Marini never heard the phone ring. His expectations of going in the top ten rounds were shattered, but not his dream to play professionally.

The 6-foot, 1-inch, 185-pound lefthanded outfielder packed his bags and headed north, past Tunkhannock and on to the Cape Cod League, where he continued to produce. Many teams took notice, but it was Mickey White, director of Scouting for the Cleveland Indians, who finally convinced Marini to sign. Marini said he chose the Cleveland organization because he would "have a better chance to move up," as they are on a youth movement.

Marini has begun his climb to the majors with the Columbus RedStixx, but he realizes the road will be rough. "Since I wasn't a top pick, I know I may get overlooked for a younger player out of high school who was a high draft pick, even though he may have less experience. I don't feel any extra pressure, but I do feel like I have to prove myself more."

Through 35 games with the RedStixx, Marini is hovering near the top in several offensive categories for the team, including a .305 average, good for second place.

Marini, 22, compares his preparation for the grueling everyday baseball season to that of everyone else in the workforce.

"It's your job and you gotta stay focused like in a real job, because it is a real job and if you don't produce, you're out the door, " he said. "I've seen it happen. "

What if baseball doesn't work out for Marini? Well, he's thought about that and plans to finish his college education soon, in Education, because "I'm not wasting what I worked three hard years for." Marini said he plans to live in Florida and become a teacher; and, if he stills yearn to be in the game, he'll consider coaching, but it's not a priority.

It seems Marini's decision to attend college first was smart, for it gave him the experience to play in the pros, but it also gave him the knowledge to survive in life should the experience fade away.

Parks play role in game

By Hank Aaron
PM Editorial Services

COMMENTARY

What makes a good ballpark or stadium for baseball depends on who is doing the judging. But one thing is certain — the park can play a big role in the outcome of a game.

Look at the World Series in recent years. No team seems to be able to win a game away from its home park, leading some people to believe that the world championship is decided on the basis of which league has home-field advantage in a particular year.

The 1991 World Series between the Atlanta Braves and the Minnesota Twins is a good example. The Metrodome in Minneapolis is a unique situation. No other park, not even among the ones with domes, presents the same challenge as the Metrodome, where all of the stadium's noise is centered on home plate. If a player isn't used to it, he is going to have problems, since it is imperative that teams get their signals just right.

Don't get me wrong. The Braves really can't blame their loss on the Metrodome, anymore than one play or mistake can be singled out. The Braves lost that series as a team, and fans shouldn't point to one baserunning error or home-run ball as the killer. One key hit for either team could have broken that series wide open. Sure the Twins got a boost from being in their home park, but that's been true for most teams since the beginning of baseball.

Domes do present unique problems, however. I remember when the first domed stadium — the Astrodome in Houston, Texas — became the home for the Houston Astros. The ceiling was light colored, and when the ball got up in the air, it was hard to follow. If you took your eye off the ball for a second, you lost it. I recall at least one no-hitter that was lost when a Houston pitcher had trouble following a ball due to the ceiling.

But, no matter what your opinion is of domes, there is no question that they have been a lifesaver for fans. Whether you are watching a game in cold northern cities like Montreal and Toronto or in hot and humid Houston, domes allow fans to view their teams in comfort and avoid the problems of cancellations due to weather. And fans, after all, are what baseball is all about.

Hank Aaron is the top home-bun hitter of all time with 775 hits. Aaron is a member of baseball's Hall of Fame.

Booze and boating don't mix

Mark E. Thomas
Editorial Services

COMMENTARY

Responsible boaters are sick and :d of drunks endangering nselves and others on the water. And for good reason. Did you ow that 55 percent of boating alities are a direct result of ohol abuse?

The boating experts at MonArk its offer the following advice for fer boating season.

Good citizens are getting mad r statistics such as this one, and e urged state authorities to end the water against drunk ers to drunk boat operators as l.

There's no excuse for imbibing xcess and then operating any of water craft. Unfortunately, ve tolerated such behavior far long, allowing drunk boaters much license in the name of a d time.

Yet the good times quickly ppear for those who experience erious injury resulting from ohol abuse. This has grown increasingly common as the number of recreational boaters escalate all across the nation.

Now for the good news. State lawmakers are giving their approval to statutes aimed at reducing the number of drunken boaters. These laws provide stiff penalties for operating a boat while under the influence.

In addition, the U.S. Coast Guard has make it a priority to attack drunken boating. Officers say their men are constantly watching for any erratic behavior. And they have orders to immediately stop any boat that arouses suspicion.

The Coast Guard retains the authority to board boats and administer breathalizer tests to the operators. Those who fail the test are quickly turned over to state officials for prosecution.

Of course the best way to avoid jail time or the tragic consequences of an alcohol-related accident is to leave the booze at home or back at the tent, trailer or cabin.

The folks at the MonArk Boats remind you that if you can't stay sober and still have a good time, then the rest of us who operate our boats responsible don't want you on the water. It's just that simple.

Father's Day marks changing traditions

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplain's Office

Sunday, America will celebrate Father's Day. Ever since Father's Day originated in 1910, it has been celebrated yearly on the third Sunday in June.

According to the National Center for Fathering, fathers are expected to do more in the 1990s than ever before.

Nowadays, it seems, a father must be more than a good financial provider or disciplinarian. Bringing home the paycheck is no longer the only measure of successful fathering, says the center.

Today's father is expected to be involved in his children's lives and to take a nurturing role in their development.

The National Center for Fathering believes that a great deal of the new pressure on fathers comes from their wives, particularly those who work.

As more women join the work force, fewer are able to take full responsibility for care of the children. Increasingly, fathers are expected to take a more active part in parenting.

The role of fathers is evolving, perhaps offering new opportunities along with the challenges.

Today's father may have more responsibility than ever before, but that may result in a closer father-child relationship than fathers of the past enjoyed.

Soldiers need a lifeline

3/24's water purification specialists keep water coming to Victory Focus, keep operation running

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Ask any Victory Focus soldier to name the number one commodity his body needs for survival in the field, and chances are the answer will be drinking water.

All of the potable water for the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's Victory Focus participants comes from a water point operated by six enlisted soldiers from the 226th Supply and Service Company, 87th Maintenance Battalion — a Forces Command unit based at Fort Stewart, Ga., and two of the brigades own water purification specialists from Company A, 324th Forward Support Battalion.

According to Sgt. Victor Davis, a squad leader from the 226th, the water point purifies and stores up to 29,000 gallons of water a day.

"We pump water from Randall Creek with a device called the reverse osmosis water purification unit, mounted on a five-ton flatbed trailer," Davis explained

"The ROWPU purifies water through three stages of filtration before pumping it into 3,000-gallon onion tanks and 20-kilogram rubber bags for storage.

"Potable water is either picked up by Victory Focus units in their water trailers, or we deliver 10,000 to 15,000 gallons a day in water tankers to the Brigade Support Area," he continued.

According to Pfc. Thomas Williams, one of the brigade's water purification specialists, all water drawn from the creek passes through an initial filter to remove gross particles.

A second filter catches minute particles, and a final reverse osmosis filter consisting of semipermeable membranes through which it passes at high pressure and is separated into brine (non-potable water) and potable water.

"Following reverse osmosis, chlorine is continuously added to the potable water at a rate of one drop per second to maintain a mixture of five to seven parts chlorine per one million parts water," Williams said.

"That's the Army standard for all potable water. All water that meets this standard tastes fine, and we know, it's safe to drink."

According to Davis, water at the site is tested every 30 minutes to monitor the levels of both active chlorine and pH balance.

"The pH level refers to the alkalinity of acidity of the water," Davis explained.

"The Army standard for the ROWPU is six to eight parts active chlorine per million parts water," he continued. "Water at the six level tastes slightly acidic, and water at the eight level is slightly alkaline. Seven is the most desirable level because acidity and alkalinity are balanced."

According to Pfc. Horace Washington, the other brigade water purification specialist at the site, soldiers at the water point are alternating between water purification and site security duties throughout the duration of Victory Focus, which runs through Wednesday.

Collins Training Center hosts Kentucky generals rig. Gens. Julius L. Bertold and Lindsay Freeman are welcomed to the 29th Infantry egiment by Col. Gregory Camp, commander of the 29th.

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment welcomed Brig. Gen. Lindsay M. Freeman, commanding general of the 100th Division (Training) based in Louisville, Ky., and Brig. Gen. Julius L. Bertold, deputy adjutant general for Kentucky based in Frankfort, Ky., to Collins Training Center on June 2.

Also attending, were chairmen from the Kentucky Committee for Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, which is an office of the assistant secretary of Defense. Invited by the chairmen were businessmen from Kentucky who employ Army Reserve and National Guard soldiers.

"Over 4,000 Reserve and Guard soldiers from Kentucky were used during Operation Desert Storm, most of whom were employed by these businessmen," commented Maj. Samuel Ausband, a Department of Defense representative for community businesses for the Kentucky Area.

They were greeted by Col. Gregory Camp who gave them a brief history of the training center and its mission. During the briefing, both generals asked the differences between the Infantry Fighting Vehicle and the Cavalry version, which their units just recently began fielding.

After discussions were completed the visitors were escorted to a classroom where they viewed a videotaped demonstration of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle. The video showed the various changes in the vehicle starting with the Basic Bradley and working up to today's most modern upgrade. The demonstration also displayed the vehicles' performance during Operation Desert Storm.

The visitors were then divided into two groups, one group getting information from Staff Sgt. David R. James through use of the static displays at the training center. The other group was given the opportunity to view and use the Unit Conduct of Fire Trainers. Technical assistance was given by Henry Avila, a civilian instructor.

During this instruction Edward F. Hessel Jr., a state chairman from Kentucky, said, "This demonstration gives the businessmen an opportunity to see what their employees do in the Army Reserve and National Guard." Gary Dodd, a general manager of Corporation Services for Toyota in Georgetown, Ky., remarked, "Today's Army is vastly different, and we get to see the changes first hand."

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower was appointed to command the U.S. ground forces in Europe.

In North Africa, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel used fierce dive bomber and ground attacks to force the Allied surrender of Tobruk. In the attack, the Afrika Korps captured 30,000 prisoners, 3 million rations, and 400,000 gallons of badly needed fuel.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill accepted President Franklin D. Roosevelt's offer of American reinforcement in North Africa. Consequently, the United States sent 300 Sherman tanks and 100 self-propelled guns, which proved to be so vital in later Allied victories.

In North Africa, Field Marshal Sir Claude Auchinleck assumed command of Britain's Eighth Army.

On the Eastern Front, the Germans continued their offensive, taking Sevastopol Harbor and forcing the Soviets to retreat from Kupyank on the Oskol River east of Kharkov.

Firestone Tire and Rubber Co., Goodrich Tire and Rubber Co., and the United States Tire and Rubber Co. gained permission to produce synthetic rubber tires for testing by various Army units. This was due, in part, to the Japanese occupation of the rubber producing areas of Southeast Asia.

At Fort Benning, the Infantry Board designated the 11 weapons of the infantry as the Colt .45-caliber pistol, the M-1 Gerand rifle, the M-2 bayonet, the hand grenade, the Browning Automatic Rifle, the .30-caliber heavy machine gun, the 60mm mortar, the .30-caliber light machine gun, the 81mm mortar, the .50-caliber machine gun, and the 37mm anti-tank gun.

The 503rd Parachute Infantry Regiment sent its 2nd Battalion overseas under the command of Lt. Col. Edson D. Ralf, making it the first deployed airborne unit.

Army releases results of majors RIF board

WASHINGTON — The majors reduction-in-force board for fiscal 1992, which met March 10 at the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., has acted on the latest round of officer RIF proposals.

After the board considered about 2,000 officers, the secretary of the Army approved 244 majors for involuntary separation.

Army personnel officials say that the number of officers opting for this year's voluntary separation programs — Voluntary Separation Incentive/Special Separation Benefit — served to reduce, by nearly 600, the number of majors who had to be selected for involuntary separation.

Soldiers eligible for ACAP after separation

WASHINGTON — Some soldiers unable to participate fully in the Army Career and Alumni Program while on active duty will be granted a 60-day reprieve after separation.

The special reprieve will be for soldiers stationed at remote locations or who separated with short notice, said James T. Hoffman, acting ACAP director.

"As a civilian, they may be closer to an ACAP office wherever they settle than they were at their last military base," Hoffman said. "Former soldiers may obtain transition benefit counseling and job assistance training."

Soldiers with questions about eligibility should call toll free (800) 445-2049.

82nd Airborne gets woman commander

FORT BRAGG, N.C. -- The 82nd Airborne Division inducted its first woman battalion commander into its ranks, June 2.

Lt. Col. Ann E. Dunwoody will made division history when she took command of 407th Supply and Transport Battalion at Fort Bragg. The battalion is responsible for the supply and transportation of the division's combat units.

Dunwoody previously served as the 82nd's deputy assistant chief of staff for logistics. She was commissioned in 1975 after earning a bachelor's degree in physical education. She has a master's degree in logistics management, and has graduated from the U.S. Army's Command and General Staff College.

Manual focuses on battlefield intelligence

WASHINGTON -- Soldiers who plan and execute the intelligence effort to support operations will soon have access to a new field manual designed to help them along.

The draft of FM 34-8, "Commander's Handbook on Intelligence," is undergoing field review. In it, the combined-arms commander "will find his intelligence support role explained by an example of the command estimate process," say Army intelligence officials.

Produced by the U.S. Army Intelligence Center at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., the manual "describes capabilities and limitations of the Intelligence Battlefield Operating System, and tells how that system synchronizes with other systems," said Shirley Hackworth, of the Army's Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Intelligence. Hackworth said the manual will be distributed to the field this summer.

AAFES starts quality control program

DALLAS -- The Army and Air Force Exchange System has begun a new program for improving the quality of merchandise from its suppliers.

With the Supplier Quality Assistance Program, AAFES specialists will work with the suppliers before merchandise is shipped to exchanges and warehouses to ensure product quality.

The advantages of this system are that fewer shipments are delayed because of quality assurance failures. That means merchandise is on the shelves when customers need it. The suppliers also benefit from the new program. It allows them to offer better quality and reduces their operating costs, according to Joseph Werres, deputy chief of the AAFES Quality Assurance Division.

Sledgehammer relies on 608th

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Whenever a Sledgehammer Brigade soldier on Victory Focus fires a round down range, it's thanks in part to the efforts of the 608th Ordnance Company.

The 608th, part of the 36th Engineer Group, is providing all the ammunition for Victory Focus at the largest field ammunition supply point, or ASP, ever built on Fort Benning.

"Unlike the other brigades in the 24th Infantry Division, the 3rd Brigade doesn't have its own organic ordnance company to support an exercise of this magnitude," said Chief Warrant Officer 2 Aderion Barney. Brigade operations tasked the 608th to support our ammunition requirement — the same role they will play when we go to the National Training Center in August."

According to 1st Lt. Mark Youmans, the 608th's officer in charge of the site, the ASP was ready to open for business within seven days of leveling ground for the ammunition pads and building berms to separate the different types of munitions.

We started operating with slightly more than 245 short tons of all types of ammunition stored in a 1,500 square meter area, stocked at three field storage units according to the type of ammunition," he continued.

We can issue ammunition around the clock to Victory Focus units," said Staff Sgt. Charles Hicks, a quality assurance inspector with the 608th. "Vehicles and ammunition are inspected the same way both day and night — it just takes a little longer during the night.'

Environmental concerns were a top priority in selecting and preparing the ASP and will remain so at the end of Victory Focus, according to Youmans, Hicks and Barney.

"We run police calls twice a day to pick up as we go, and after the exercise is over we will pick up every fiber container, safety pin for grenades, all the brass, bandoleers and boxes for ammunition," Hicks said.

"When we leave, there will be no accountable ammunition or residue left, Barney said. "We've also improved the roads for our units to train here in the future; and, after we level the built-up ground, we intend to seed the area to help make it even better for wildlife than it was when we arrived.

Army eases pain for separating soldiers

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Programs tailored for separating soldiers have greatly lessened the pain and difficulty of the drawdown, said Lt. Gen. Thomas P. Carney.

Without separation incentives, 'we would have a much harder time getting down to the 536,000 base force," said the deputy chief of staff for personnel. "There would've been the full impacts of reductions in force; much of that has been reduced, because of the voluntary incentives."

As of early May, 20,900 enlisted soldiers had applied for the Special Separation Benefit; 20,800 have been approved, with the rest still being processed. Enlisted applicants for the Voluntary Separation Incentive total 1,500 with 1,400 having been approved.

Out of 90,000 eligibles, the Army expects nearly 26,000 enlisted troops to accept VSI of SSB. The numbers of May 13 reflect 86 percent of the projected takers.

Among officers, 42,000 are eligible for the two programs. SSB applicants total 2,800; and 2,300 have been accepted so far. There have been 2,000 officer applications for VSI, with 1,700 having been approved.

The total of nearly 4,000 approved officer VSI/SSB applications represents about 85 percent of the 4,700 projected takers. No applications for VSI/SSB — officer of enlisted — have been disapproved.

Carney said he expects the two programs to continue though 1995, because they are part of the leadership's and Congress' "commitment to those who have so selflessly served" the nation.

"Our overarching goal during the drawdown is to maintain readiness, while taking care of our people," he explained. "Our plan is designed to protect those who have the most time invested, with financial incentives such as the VSI and SSB.

"While we endure this difficult period, we must maintain the morale and quality of the force. Although some soldiers will have to separate early, we will assist their transition through VSI, SSB, retirement and the Army Career and Alumni Program."

ACAP has been set up for nearly a year at 62 sites, and has "received very high marks by the soldiers, civilians and family members who are using it," Carney said.

He admitted the ACAP sites are often overcrowded, because of so many people separating. But, he said temporary personnel have been authorized to augment staffing at selected sites, so that there can be enough ACAP personnel to serve their customers.

"We feel the obligation to assist departing soldiers," Carney said. "They've served the Army extraordinarily well, and they deserve our help. So I would encourage commanders of departing soldiers to offer every opportunity for those soldiers to attend their ACAP appointments, because it's a program that we put in at great expense for that reason — to ease this transition."

While Carney said the Army intends to take care of its separating troops, he pointed out that the central commitment is still for a "trained and ready Army."

"Our message to the remaining force and to America is that the Army is still a great place to serve," he said. "Great opportunities exist, and a reasonable promotion flow will be maintained."

2/54 celebrates 75th anniversary

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment celebrated its 75th anniversary with a diamond jubilee ceremony at its Headquarters Building on Sand Hill Tuesday.

Retired Lt. Gen. Sidney B. Berry, who served as commander of the 1st Armored Rifle Battalion of the regiment in Helbronn, Germany, was the guest speaker. Berry was also invested as honorary regimental colonel in a ceremony last year.

Berry addressed the gathering of regimental soldiers and family members at Tuesday's ceremony, speaking of the regiment's history and mission.

The regiment was formed in 1917, said Berry, and first fought in Alsace, France, during World War I.

Its mission has evolved from infantry fighting to infantry training, but Berry said that the feeling of regimental pride and identity has remained strong throughout its 75-year history.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today, June 19, 1942

•Russian forces still hold the fortress of Sevastopol. The Red Army has reportedly held the fortress with Russian marines destroying Nazi tanks with grenades and Molotov cocktails. The Russians claim to have recaptured some previously overrun trench lines and caused severe tank and aircraft losses.

•The British 8th Army in Libya has been split in two. Part of the British Army is being forced east into Egypt while the second half of the army has fallen back to defensive positions in surrounded Tobruk.

The Axis success is credited to the sill of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel and to the superiority of the German Mark IV tank, the 88mm all-purpose gun, and the Stoka dive-bomber. The American-made "General Grant" tank is said to have performed well, but they are needed in greater numbers.

•In China, there is confused but ferocious fighting. The three eastbound Japanese columns trying to secure the Nanchang-Hanchow railroad, and affect a linkup with westbound Japanese forces, seems to have been stalled only 50 miles away from the westbound forces. Farther down the railroad, Chinese counterattacks in Nanchang have secured the terminus of the railroad.

•All over China, Japanese troops garrisoning cities and occupying territory have been engaged by Chinese forces.

Gestapo sources in Prague claim to have caught and executed the assassins of Deputy Reich Protector Reinhard Heydrich. The two men accused were apprehended in a Prague church just after the expiration of the "last chance" for the Czech population to turn in those involved in Heydrich's killing. At least 388 people have been executed in Gestapo reprisals for Heydrich's death.

It is expected that the opening of a second front in Europe by British and American forces will be discussed.

A member of the Special Forces Recruiting team here recently received the U.S. Army Recruiting Command's highest achievement award — the recruiter ring.

Sgt. 1st Class James M. Corder received the ring from Maj. Gen. Jack C. Wheeler, commander of the U. S. Army Recruiting Command, during a ceremony at the Columbus Recruiting Station.

"People like you have made the volunteer Army work," Wheeler said when presenting the ring.

According to recruiting command officials, the quest to earn the recruiter ring begins the day a recruiter graduates from recruiting school.

An Army recruiter must pass eight levels of proficiency that test and prove his ability and skill as a recruiter. Only a small percentage of recruiters are able to qualify for the award; but, when they do, they join an elite group, officials say.

Corders' quest for the ring began in July 1986 when he was assigned to the Minneapolis Recruiting Battalion. Six years later, his efforts have been rewarded.

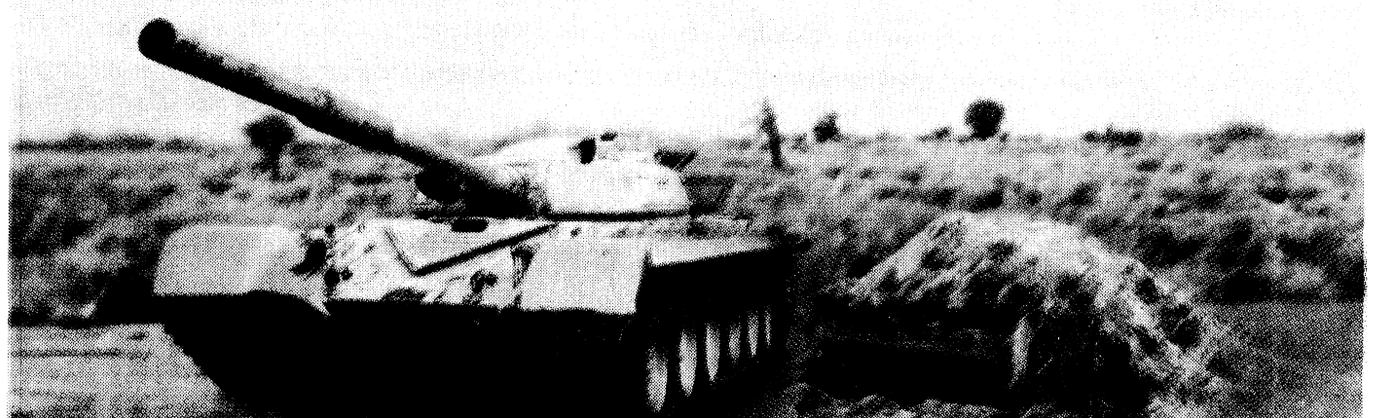
OF THE TWO, TODAY'S WARFIGHTER IS BETTER PREPARED TO DEAL WITH THE THREAT ON THE LEFT.



MDMSC: Smart choices for tough decisions.

Sand, earth and timber. These are the makings of the common bunker. They've been around for centuries, but surprisingly, today's warfighter still has no easy way to defeat these obstacles.

What is needed is a Bunker Defeat Munition (BDM). This weapon will offer the stand-off capability to immediately defeat and destroy battlefield obstacles, including enemy earth and timber fortifications, masonry walls and light armor.

Now, McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Company (MDMSC) and Talley Defense Systems have a bunker buster munition that offers just what is needed—the SMAW-D (Shoulder-launched Multipurpose Assault Weapon-Disposable). The SMAW-D is lightweight, compact, disposable and most of all, lethal. In short, the SMAW-D is the best way for today's warfighter to effectively deal with everything from the newest weaponry to the oldest obstacles on the battlefield.

Meloy Hall gets first occupants

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"This is how the rest of the federal government gets housed and should be the standard that we are shooting for at Fort Benning."

Lewis Smith of the Master Planning Branch with the Directorate of Engineering and Housing made these remarks praising his new office space in the recently-completed Meloy Hall, building 6 on post.

The DEH offices of Director, Operations, Management/Budget/ Administration Division, Environmental Management Division, Master Planning Branch, Construction Inspection Branch and Real Estate Branch moved into the new facility June 12 to Sunday.

Earlier this week, the phone system was still not in operation, but Smith said that they don't anticipate any problems and expect they will be functioning by the end of the week.

He added that the telephone numbers will not change, though the system will be expanded with some employees getting their own numbers in addition to the alternates for the agencies involved.

"The building will be well-utilized with enough room for everyone," Smith said. "All the remarks I have heard so far have been positive. Its closeness to Infantry Hall, as well as dining facilities are other pluses."

For those who have been around Fort Benning for several years, Smith noted that the move into Meloy Hall will include everyone displaced by the School of the Americas taking over all of Building 35.

The schedule for moving is as follows:

•Directorate of Contracting - today through Monday.

•Directorate of Logistics -July 10 to 13.

•Directorate of Civilian Personnel - July 17 to 20, and the remaining DEH personnel from the Engineering and Services Branch - July 24 to 26.

Around July 20, Meloy Hall will see the opening of the post's first concession stand operated by visually-impaired personnel.

Soldiers become performers, technicians to bring Fort Benning one of best soldier shows in Army

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

REVIEW

Soldiers of the U. S. Army have performed their duties in many theaters of operations. Due to intense training, discipline and heart, they have been successful at winning battles and defending freedom.

Saturday night, some soldiers performed in a different sort of theater, but their training and professionalism combined to contribute to the Army's record of mission accomplishment.

Thirty-five soldiers pooled their talents as performers and technicians in the Army Soldier Show, transforming Sand Hill Theater to a miniature Carnegie Hall.

Moving confidently through the revue-style show, the performers covered a wide range of moods and musical styles. Romantic ballad gave way to rock 'n' roll, country music was snappily followed by rap.

Stage sets, lighting and costumes changed rapidly and without apparent effort, as long weeks of rehearsal paid off in a performance that went without a hitch.

The audience responded eagerly and enthusiastically to the various performers, who sang, danced and assumed various character roles. The soldiers onstage added enthusiasm and intensity to their undeniable talent, to produce entertainment that was irresistible.

The Soldier Show continues to tour Army installations at home and overseas, as it has done for several years. The audiences can expect some great entertainment — and some of us at Fort Benning are already looking forward to next year's show.

Coast Guard accepts applications for cadets

U.S. Coast Guard Academy

The U.S. Coast Guard Academy is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as cadet, U.S. Coast Guard, class of 1997.

Applications are being accepted for both men and women. Appointments as Coast Guard cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition with no congressional nominations or geographical quotas.

Applications must be submitted to the director of admissions prior to Dec. 15.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test or American College Testing Assessment prior to or including the December 1992 ACT and SAT test administrations.

Appointments as cadet are tendered based on the candidate's high school record, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment.

Most successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and have demonstrated proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

Candidates must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage, and must have reached the age of 17 but not 22 by July 1, 1993.

All candidates must be assured of high school graduation by June 30, 1993. All candidates must have completed a minimum of three years of English, and three in mathematics to include algebra and plane or coordinate geometry or their equivalents, and must fulfill basic physical requirements.

Coast Guard cadets obtain an excellent undergraduate education at no personal expense. In addition, they receive pay and allowances fully adequate to fulfill their ordinary living expenses.

The constantly updated academy curriculum leads to a bachelor of science degree with a strong academic emphasis on engineering and science.

The selected major studies, when combined with varied elective courses, establish a solid foundation for a challenging career. Graduates of the academy are commissioned as ensigns in the U.S. Coast Guard.

Selected officers may pursue further postgraduate education and specialized training at many leading civilian and military graduate or professional schools, in such fields as aviation, business administration, electronics, engineering, law and oceanography.

The young academy graduate can look forward to a varied, exciting, and demanding career as a regular Coast Guard officer.

Under the Department of Transportation, the Coast Guard performs a variety of missions.

These include search and rescue operations by ship and plane, maintenance of advanced electronic and other aids to navigation around the globe, operation of icebreakers, which clear the way for all polar expeditions, and enforcement of marine law and all aspects of merchant marine safety. In addition, the Coast Guard has responsibility for boating safety and marine environmental protection.

ACS to conduct family needs assessment

Army Community Service

A family member needs assessment survey will be conducted June 30 through July 2 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. by the Army Community Service Outreach Program. The survey will be done at the main office of Park Properties, 1110 Farr Road, Columbus.

Outreach is designed to link family support programs to soldiers and their family members, according to Mary Allen, Outreach coordinator. A sense of belonging and responsibility can be developed by focusing on the involvement of the total Army family, she said.

"Our goal is to contact families residing off the installaion, inform them of services available and encourage them to participate in activities that improve their quality of life," Allen said.

Families residing at Park Properties are encouraged to participate in the survey, which will give them an opportunity to identify to the command their areas of concern, Allen said.

Highway of honor

Medal of Honor recipient, retired Col. Robert B. Nett, rips the last pieces of tape from a highway marker designating a section of U.S. 27, the "Colonel Robert B. Nett Medal of Honor Highway." The sign is located near the I-185 off ramp for U.S. 27 just before the Eisenhower Overpass. In his remarks, Nett urged military police to go easy on family members who might be speeding to visit their soldiers at Sand Hill. The dedication is part of a statewide program to honor Georgia Medal of Honor recipients.

Safety Office: Stay cool — your life depends on it

First aid, knowledge, prevention help stop heat casualties

Infantry Branch Safety Office

The heat of the Georgia sun takes itself felt. Everyone must know the dangers of excessive heat and the first aid to be given for heat injuries.

Factors that affect ability to withstand heat:

Physical condition: Conditions that weaken the ability to withstand heat include acute and chronic infections, recuperation from illness or injury, reaction to immunization, fever, sunburn, severe heat rash, and overweight, very large persons are particularly susceptible to heat injury.

Acclimatization: Soldiers who are not accustomed to high temperature and humidity should be gradually acclimatized to work in hot weather. During this period, usually 14 days, the workload should be gradually increased.

Cause

Heat injuries result directly from the loss of body fluid. Heat stroke occurs in persons who are so depleted of body fluids that they can no longer control (reduce) their body temperature by perspiration. The temperature of their body rises out of control, with derangement of the temperature control center in the brain. Heat stroke often results in death.

Prevention

The prevention of heat injuries is not easy, but the following can greatly reduce the number and severity of heat injuries.

Water: Water lost in perspiration must be replaced while it is being lost. The minimum water that should be consumed during strenuous activity in hot weather is one quart per hour.

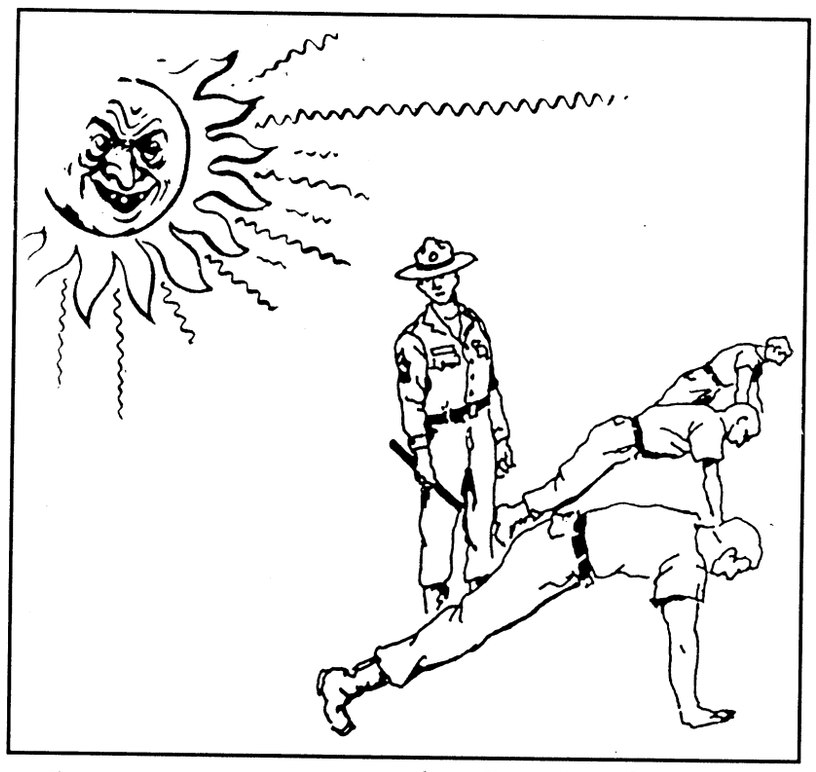
Clothing: Clothing should be worn loosely allowing circulation of air, which assists cooling by evaporation of perspiration. Proper headgear should be worn to protect against sunburn. Exposing large areas of the upper torso to the sun can accelerate heat injuries.

Diet: The human body reconstitutes itself with normal food and drink, which contain water and adequate amount of minerals including salt. These are selectively retained by the kidney according to the body's needs. This vital kidney process, like perspiration, depends on an adequate supply of ingested water. Salt tablets or other salt supplements are not needed except as directed by a doctor.

Observation: Leaders at all levels must observe their personnel for symptoms of heat injury. Every soldier must be familiar with the symptoms of heat injury. The buddy system of mutual observation can assist leaders in recognizing heat injuries. Fort Benning Card 126 should be carried by every soldier.

Wet Bulb Globe Temperature: Activity should be strictly monitored by this index whenever the dry bulb temperature is predicted to reach or exceed 80 degrees Fahrenheit.

Call 545-5281 for current reading.



Sunburn

Each year, many soldiers receive hospitalization for severe sunburn. This condition can put a strain on the kidneys, cause acute illness, burn eyes beyond recovery, or even cause death. The prevention for sunburn is limiting the amount of exposure or using a sun block lotion on exposed areas. Doctors have found more evidence linking skin cancer to sun exposure.

Special training

Training, such as, ranger, airborne, firing ranges, or retreat parades, requires extra attention because of the great physical stress involved in such training in the summer heat. Curtailment of work and scheduling strenuous training activities for the cooler parts of the day yields greater efficiency, and less disruption of training than ignoring the weather in attempts to complete a heavy training schedule. Strict adherence to curtailments of activity according to the the WBGT reading will prevent most heat injuries.

Rules of heat injury prevention, control

- Ensure that all personnel drink enough water, hour by hour, to replace body fluid loss. Thirst alone will not call for sufficient water consumption.
- Personnel must continue a full, normal diet to maintain resistance to heat injury.
- Loose clothing should be worn to protect soldiers from the sun.
- Treat the first signs of a heat injury immediately.
- Train all personnel to recognize and treat heat injuries.

Safety Office gives tips on keeping cool in summer heat

Infantry Branch safety Office

Keeping cool in the heat

The unique combination of temperature and humidity of the Chattahoochee River valley during the summer puts abnormal stress on your body.

When your body temperature rises even a few degrees above normal (which is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit), you can experience muscle cramps, become weak, disoriented, and dangerously ill unless you can help your body cool down.

If your body temperature rises above 105 degrees Fahrenheit, your condition can be fatal. The following guidelines can help you keep your cool in the heat and avoid the dangerous consequences of heat stress.

Adapt to the heat

Acclimatization takes two weeks of gradually increasing the amount of exertion expended outside. The first day should be restricted to less than one hour of strenuous exercise or work for nonacclimatizated individuals.

Drink water frequently

Sweating is one of the ways your body cools itself down. Sweating results in water loss, and the only way to replace the loss (and help your body continue to cool itself) is to drink water frequently.

Ideally, you should drink 8 ounces of water every 20 to 30 minutes while working or exercising in hot environments. Avoid anything that contains caffeine, alcohol or nicotine.

Wear appropriate clothing.

Wear light colored clothing made of "breathable" fabrics. While T-shirts are effective while in the shade, loose fitting clothing that covers much of your body will protect you from the harmful effects of the sun.

Get some sleep.

At least seven hours of sleep daily strengthens your body to withstand heat stress.

Eat well

Well balanced regular meals are recommended to increase your stamina.

Use engineering controls.

Take advantage of any fans, ventilation systems, or air conditioning systems available.

Look for early symptoms

Be familiar with first aid techniques for heat stress. If you or someone you know suffers from heat exhaustion, cramps or other signs of heat stress, get medical attention immediately.

Keep your cool — Heat stress is dangerous, but it's also preventable.

Fatigue may signal deeper problem

By Dennis Blank
International Academy of Health

Almost overnight, men and women who were once very healthy become fatigued easily, turn irritable, and suffer from one or all of a dozen different ailments.

For women, a vaginal infection and intense outward genital itching are two of the most obvious signs of a what is commonly known as a "yeast infection." But doctors are now learning that it can cause dozens of other ailments such as acne, allergies, scaly skin, blurred vision, forgetfulness, bleeding gums, throbbing headaches and muscle pains.

That's why it is sometimes hard to diagnose, because there are a number of common ailments associated with it. Experts call it a syndrome because there is a collection of related health problems.

"The yeast syndrome is sweeping our industrialized world, but most people don't even know they have got it," says Dr. J.P. Trowbridge, author of "The Yeast Syndrome."

It is estimated that three out of four women will have a "yeast infection" at least once in their lives.

Doctors now believe that yeast infection, known as Candida albicans infection, can be caused from taking too much antibiotics and birth control pills. As the good bacteria is killed off, the yeast cells overgrow in the gut and begin spreading throughout the body.

Another source of antibiotics may come from the pork, beef and poultry we eat.

Men also are victims of Candida and common ailments include fatigue, rectal itching and depression.

Some women have reported suffering from yeast infection for a dozen years or more before they found a doctor who realized what was causing their problems.

One of the most acute cases is that of Vicki Glassburn, a Marysville, Ohio homemaker, who is the author of the newly released book, "Who Killed Candida?" For her, it started with a dull, pulsating pounding in her head.

She developed a number of allergies that were so acute, many of the items in her home had to be removed.

She lost weight, became a recluse, and suffered from memory loss and depression. What had happened with Glassburn was so severe and the pain so excruciating, that most doctors were baffled by the cause. She was determined to find a doctor who could help her, and finally overcame it.

To achieve good health again requires a combination of many things, including a complete lifestyle change in what you eat and how you exercise.

But they alone cannot help.

One of the natural remedies that has proven effective is an aged garlic extract known as Kyolic, which can be obtained in health food stores. Dr. Benjamin Lau, a researcher at Loma Linda University in Southern California, found that using the aged garlic extract on laboratory animals cleared up the Candida infection in the blood stream.

Lau said there was increased germ killing activity in the immune cells that suppressed the growth of the Candida.

Dr. M.A. Channourn at UCLA-Harbor General Hospital discovered that garlic compounds can attack these yeast cells, destroying them and making them non-infectious.

Another product that doctors who have treated Candida like is acido-philus. It produces naturally-occurring antibiotics that help you by inhibiting disease.

One product, Kyo-Dophilus, which also can be bought in health food stores, does not have to be refrigerated. According to medical research, Kyo-Dophilus aids nutrition, synthesizes B-complex vitamins, produces valuable enzymes to help absorb food, and at the same time reduces intestinal yeast overgrowth.

Dr. William Crook, author of "The Yeast Connection," said there has been success in using grapefruit seed extract especially with female patients suffering from vaginitis.

Doctors also recommend radical changes in your diet. Anything that has yeast in it, such as bread or beer — or which encourages yeast growth, such as candy, soda pop, and pastry — should be eliminated from the diet.

In his book, "The Yeast Syndrome," Trowbridge outlines a specific list of recommended whole grains, vegetables, and a limited number of fruits that should be eaten.

Also in her book, Glassburn in her "Three Cs" program advocates a morning exercise workout and a very strict whole grain and vegetable diet. Meats and poultry should be avoided until the yeast infection is eliminated.

In addition, there are dozens of people who have started Candida support groups to help people get through the emotional struggles caused by this disease.

Along with Glassburn, there is another woman, Ann Fisk, a registered nurse, who can be reached at (303) 232-5324.

Pay tips on the money

TIC Federal Credit Union

Although relief has been promised for some taxpayers, the recession is likely to continue for at least a few more months.

With that in mind, Janet Davis, manager of TIC Federal Credit Union, offers these tips to make your dollars go further in this recessionary period.

• Keep a detailed record of your spending for a month. Then review your record and look for non-essential costs that can be trimmed.

• Set up a monthly budget and adjust it as experience grows. Make sure you budget for upcoming expenditures such as taxes and insurance premiums, and set aside money each month for long-term savings.

• Compare financial institutions to find the best interest rate on your savings accounts. If you need a loan, do the same thing.

• When possible, refinance debts to obtain lower interest rates and thus reduce your monthly payments. But be wary of paying large application fees up front. Sometimes they subsidize a seemingly low interest rate.

• Borrow for productive purposes, not luxury items. Ideally, installment debt should take less than 20 percent of your take-home pay.

If you use a credit card, shop around for the best combination of interest rate, fees and grace period. If you keep an unpaid balance running from month to month, you've actually taken out an unsecured personal loan.

The problem with that is you're paying a very high interest rate on that loan.

If your debts exceed your ability to pay, don't let payments slide. Overdue debt can cause you stress and ruin your credit rating. Sit down with your creditors and arrange to stretch out your payments. And if you're in that position, don't borrow more.

Finally, look for a knowledgeable financial adviser you can trust to monitor and advise you on your finances. Your credit union is a good place to start.

Many credit unions provide free financial counseling for members, or can refer members to outside non-profit financial counselors.

For a free brochure on managing your finances, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to "Budget Blueprint," Georgia Credit Union Affiliates, 2400 Pleasant Hill Road, Suite 300, Duluth, Ga. 30136.

Fleas are a nuisance

Terminix

Fleas can be a major threat this time of year, according to Delmus Woolard, manager of the Columbus, Georgia Service Center of Terminix International.

"For the past week or so, our office has been flooded with telephone calls from homeowners concerned about flea infestation," says Woolard.

It is not a concern Woolard takes lightly. He says, "Fleas can infest any home. They can bite a child, live on a pet, make you sick and transmit tapeworm to your dog. Many people are allergic to flea bites, and almost everyone experiences severe itching and painful irritation when bitten."

Fleas are vicious. According to Woolard, adult fleas feed on blood. They usually attack your cat or dog, but they will also bite any member of your family. And they are one of the hardest pests to control.

"Fleas are survivors. They can survive months without food, and they can remain frozen for a year and then revive to jump on a dog or a child," says Woolard.

"Fleas have been around for millions of years, and they breed at an astonishing rate. They can jump 150 times their own length, which is equivalent to a human jumping nearly 1,000 feet."

Fleas are hard to control. Woolard says adult fleas can live in your home, on your pet, and outside in your yard or kennel. Flea larvae can live in your pet's bed, in carpets and rugs, or in cracks in the floor. Once you get fleas, they are extremely hard to get rid of. Fleas keep coming back. They hatch from eggs already laid and they are brought back into the house on pets.

Tips For Controlling Fleas

Woolard says there are several things homeowners can do to help control fleas:

• Follow your veterinarian's advice about bathing your pet with "flea" soap.

• Wash all pet bedding in hot soapy water on a regular basis.

• Thoroughly vacuum your home to remove flea eggs, larvae, and potential food sources.

• Pay particular attention to cracks and crevices, under furniture, and underneath sofa cushions, especially in areas frequented by the pet.

• Discard vacuum cleaner bag or sweepings in an outside container immediately.

Heavy Flea infestation

Heavy flea infestation may require professional help. Controlling fleas is a tough job that may require the services of a professional pest control company, and sometimes even they may have difficulty getting rid of all the fleas with one treatment.

If you do seek professional help, Woolard recommends that you follow these simple guidelines when choosing a pest control company:

• Be sure the company you contact is reputable and reliable. (If you have doubts, call the Better Business Bureau.)

• Many firms offer free inspections. Ask about this service when you call.

• Get more than one estimate and compare services.

HANDYMAN'S HOME IMPROVEMENT

By Joe Zorc
PM Editorial Services

Q. We have an old house with radiators that are covered with wood frames with metal screen. Is there an alternative to these covers?

A. Depending on a radiator's condition, you may want to uncover it altogether. In fact, depending upon the construction of the cover, you may find that it constricts the heat. Take the cover off and notice the difference in the warmth.

The benefit you lose from not having a cover on a radiator is the shelf or book space. But, as radiators generally get quite warm, you already are limited as to what you can put on the cover if it is used as a shelf.

In addition, some of the older bronze radiators are quite beautiful, and after laborious scraping, sanding and two coats of high-temperature paint, you may have a work of art to show for your effort.

Q. The grout in my bathroom is stained in several areas. Is there a way to clean or replace it?

A. Generally, heavy stains like rust cannot be cleaned. If they do not bleach out after a good scrubbing with a grout cleaner, I suggest a partial repair.

There are grout-removing tools available from tile stores for around $20. They come with several bits for different joints, normally made of a carbide material.

This is a manual tool, and the process does take sweat equity. You will want to remove at least one eighth of an inch of grout.

When selecting new grout, remember that different colors are available to either accent or match your tile. Of course, darker colors will show less dirt and are less prone to show future stains.

Ready-mixed grout also is available and can be applied directly. Remember to pick up a rubber trowel to work the grout into the joints and be prepared to wipe the excess grout off, which may take several cleanings with a sponge. Sealants and protectants are available, and may protect your new grout from stains and extend the life of your work.

For hot-weather survival, keep cool and chill out

University of Georgia

With the hot weather continuing full force, use fans to keep the air moving in your house, to be as comfortably cool as possible.

To keep the sun out, close draperies, shades or shutters during the day on the east side in the morning and the west side during the afternoon.

Use your kitchen fan to exhaust the heat to the outside. In the bathroom, remove heat and moisture by operating the exhaust fan or opening a window.

Heat will quickly disappear without adding to the air conditioner load.

Summer sun precautions

Prolonged exposure to the sun and heat leads to dehydration. Drink plenty of water or fruit juices to replace body fluids.

Frozen fruit juice popsicles make cooling treats for young and old alike and help to keep the body temperature normal.

Refresh yourself several times a day with a cool bath. A light cologne placed in the refrigerator and splashed on will be delightfully tingling. A dusting of baby powder will also assist in reducing prickly heat and increasing body comfort.

Work in the garden early in the morning or late in the evening. Stay in the shade as much as possible. If you must be out of doors, wear a hat to keep the sun off your head.

Heat injury treatment

For heat cramps, apply warm, wet towels and firm hand pressure to the affected muscle. Drink small amounts of liquid.

For heat exhaustion remove the victim to a cool room and allow him or her to lie down. give cool liquids to drink.

Heat stroke requires immediate medical help, but until help arrives the victim should be cooled off rapidly. Clothing may be removed or loosened, and cold towels or wet icepacks may be applied. A wet sheet may be used to wrap up the victim in a cool room.

Tips for pet owners

Every year about 200 dogs suffer heat stroke in Georgia. Most of them die, and many suffer because their owners left them unattended in the car.

Dogs and cats begin to suffer in 90 degree temperatures. Animals can't "sweat away the heat" like people do.

Animals with heat stroke may show symptoms of rapid breathing, vomiting, or a starving expression in the eyes. Immediate therapy is necessary for the animal to survive. Immerse the animal in cold water ant take it to the veterinarian immediately.

To prevent heat injuries in animals, provide plenty of shade and fresh water when traveling. Never leave a pet in a parked car — after an hour in the sun, an automobile interior can reach 150 degrees.

Rangers celebrate 50 years

Parades, other ceremonies honor veterans from all eras

• Ranger Hall of Fame, A-4
• WW II Ranger Assault, A-4

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

"The only word I can think to express my feelings is hooah," said Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White after the commemoration parade of ranger veterans June 19 during the Rangers' 50th Anniversary celebration, which was June 17 through Saturday on post.

The parade was the kick-off event for a larger ceremony that included remarks by Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone and the ceremonial ground-breaking for the Ranger Memorial.

Several ranger veterans, including survivors of some of the fiercest battles of World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Grenada and Panama, formed ranks to parade in front of Ranger Field, next to Infantry Hall, as the three battalions of 75th Ranger Regiment stood at attention and White, Stone, Lt. Gen. Wayne A. Downing, commander of the U.S. Army Special Operations Command, Fort Bragg, N.C., and retired Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr. and a crowd of hundreds of cheering spectators looked on.

The parade was led by the surviving members of the 1st Ranger Battalion, organized during World War II by Brig. Gen. William O. Darby.

Music was provided by The Infantry Band and the Atlanta Pipers, an authentically clad band of bagpipers who recalled the heritage of the original 1st Ranger Battalion, which was organized in northern Ireland.

Stone, who was the distinguished guest speaker, said that he was particularly moved by the proud display of the parade's participants.

Stone continued, "Just as those who served earlier passed it to us, rangers must always lead the way."

Hospital receives credit

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Martin Army Community Hospital recently received a full three-year accreditation with commendation by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organization.

During a survey by commission representatives, the hospital scored 95.4 percent, which is in the top 1 percent of 5,400 hospitals (military and civilian) surveyed, according to Col. Vernon Spaulding, hospital commander. The survey was completed May 1.

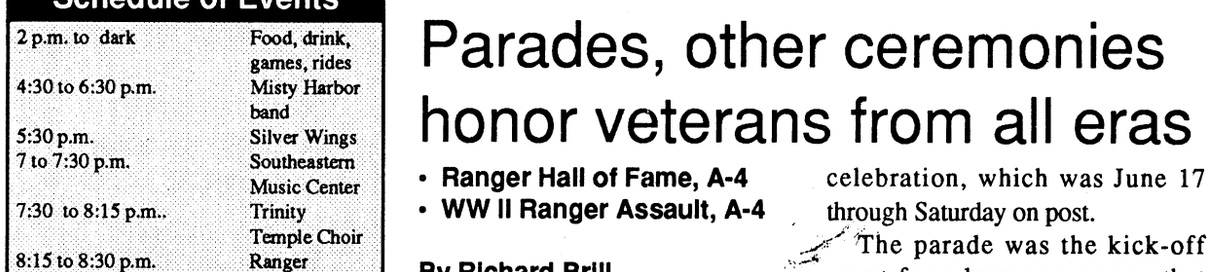
"This accreditation is good for three years and signifies our commitment to quality patient care and quality improvement," Spaulding said.

Accreditation with commendation is a new category in the scoring guidelines, according to Jeanne Dickerson, hospital spokeswoman.

"The commission awards this category only to organizations that demonstrate exemplary performance," she said. "Until recently, these organizations received letters of commendation from the commission president. This new accreditation category is intended to give recognition to exceptional organizations."

"A large number of staff members at MACH worked long hours, over an extended period of time, in preparation for the survey," Dickerson continued. "There was a spirit of teamwork evident at all levels of staff that crossed departmental lines. Accreditation with commendation is a result of the cooperation and dedication of the staff of Martin Army."

"I am very proud of my staff and their arduous efforts to achieve this standard," Spaulding said.



Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Don C. Faith Middle School's History Club placed second in the National History Day competition at the University of Maryland.

Faith's team consisted of Lesmarie Velez, Andrew Hash, Andrea Jordan, April Mims and Jessica Valle.

The team produced a 10-minute videotape about Norman Vaughan as he recalled his experiences during the 1928 to 1930 expedition of Adm. Richard E. Byrd to the South Pole.

Vaughan, the subject of the videotape, and his wife were at the awards ceremony when the Faith team received its award.

Team coaches were Mary Barnette and David Bunt, both eighth-grade teachers at Faith.

Engineers repair bridge erosion

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District

Two landmarks on Fort Benning are getting structural face-lifts in a construction project that has been awarded to local contractors.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District awarded a construction contract for $258,439 to Phenix Mechanical Contractors Inc. to repair erosion damage under the two bridges on Fort Benning Drive where it crosses Upatoi Creek, according to U.S. Army Corps of Engineers officials.

The contractor began work May 4 and is expected to finish by the end of July. Motorist are alerted to large trucks entering and leaving the median at this time, said Capt. William T. McKay, project engineer.

"Phenix Mechanical will have to place and compact up to 1,500 cubic yards of soil under each bridge. This will replace the soil that the creek has eroded over the years," said McKay.

To prevent the soil from eroding again, the contractor will have to cover the new soil with gabions, which are wire baskets filled with stones, said McKay. These particular gabions will be 3 feet wide by 3 feet tall and from 6 to 12 feet long.

The stones inside the gabion will be 4 to 8 inches in diameter. The gabions, wired together and staked to the ground, will form a continuous blanket of stone that will slow down the energy of the water and keep the soil from washing away, said McKay.

"Phenix Mechanical is also required to place 106 cubic yards of concrete under the north pier's footing on the northbound bridge," said McKay. "This will fill the void under the footing created by the water scouring the soil away from the steel piles.

"This work will help preserve the structural integrity of the bridges and ensure that they provide many more years of safe, reliable service," said McKay.

Post gears up for TCOE visit

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Fort Benning is in a full-court press getting ready for the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence team visit July 14 to 17.

If you stand still too long, you're liable to get painted brown or mowed, depending upon who gets to you first.

The concept behind the program is to make Army posts look good, figuring people will like working, living and playing in a place that is aesthetically pleasing.

It's also a service program. The TCOE people will be talking to soldiers, family members, civilians, asking them what they think of the service around Fort Benning.

Team members will also visit various places to see us in action.

We in The Bayonet office are going to be visited.

I'm looking forward to it because I want to show them how great we are.

COMMENTARY

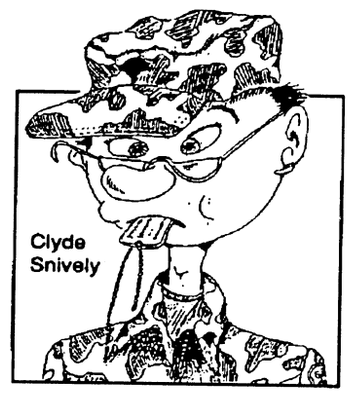
Not only do we on the newspaper staff think we've got a pretty darn good newspaper, but the people at Department of the Army and TRADOC agree, sending us all sorts of accolades.

We're pretty proud of the recently completed newspaper survey, which showed that a large majority of you read our newspaper every week, that you read most of it and you believe what you read.

Naturally we also liked all the positive comments. We are also taking steps to incorporate many of the great ideas you readers had.

Unfortunately, for you crossword puzzle aficionados, we're stumped. We're checking to see if we can find one a little more challenging, but we can't make any promises.

In the meantime, I recommend you try to complete the puzzle by working only the"across' or "down" side without doing both. That'll put a little challenge back into it.



We're also excited about all the great equipment we have to assemble the newspaper. In fact, we reporters actually get to put together pages, using the computers.

But what really gives our newspaper a boost are all the great stringers we have out there. These are folks who give us the unit news.

I'm talking about guys and gals like Staff Sgt. David Greer of the 36th Engineer Group; Sgt. 1st Class Willie Hay of 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division; Gabrielle Sonnenberg of the Chaplains' Office; Michelle Leonard of the Officers' Wives' Club; Jeanne Dickerson of Martin Army Community Hospital; Va Ebron on the entertainment beat; 1st Lt. Alvin Williams of 586th Engineer Company; Sgt. Daniel Maloney and Spc. Dan Wilson of the School of the Americas; Capt. Evelyn Britt of the Staff Judge Advocate's office; Paula Dansereau of U.S. Army Dental Activity; Capt. Pete Panzeri of the Military History Division; Regis Beighley of the Infantry Branch Safety Office and Spcs. Andrew Temple and Greg Carlson of the 29th Infantry Regiment.

Also, the Advertiser Company, which prints our paper, provides three part-timers who crank out a lot of great stories and pictures. They are Terry Ray who does sports, Connie Bridges who seems to do everything, and Richard Brill who does a lot of military news.

Anyway, we're fired up for the TCOE team to come here to see how we operate, how we take care of you, our customers, by giving you the best product possible.

Now, if I can just find a giant box to stash all my research material (Ms. Editor calls it trash). in until the visit is over.)

President Bush salutes troops on July 4

I am delighted to send special greetings to the men and women of the U.S. armed forces as we celebrate the 216th anniversary of America's independence.

"What we obtain too cheap, we esteem too lightly; it is dearness only that gives everything its value. Heaven knows how to put a proper price upon its goods, and it would be strange indeed if so celestial an article as freedom should not be highly rated."

With these stirring words, the great patriot Thomas Paine helped to rally the soldiers of the Continental Army as they fought to win our nation's freedom from Great Britain. For more than two centuries, the spirit of our Revolutionary War heroes has lived on in the hearts of our dedicated service members, who know that, although its preservation requires courage and eternal vigilance, the cause of liberty is both worthy and just.

Today, our nation and people around the globe rejoice in one of freedom's most historic victories—the end of the Cold War. The ideals of democracy have triumphed over imperial communism, and the world now stands poised for peace. On this day that we celebrate our cherished independence, it is fitting that we pay tribute to you — our men and women in uniform — who have sacrificed so much to protect our national interests and to promote peace and freedom everywhere. On behalf of all Americans, I salute you.

Barbara joins me in sending best wishes to you and to your families for a safe and enjoyable holiday. God bless you, and God bless the United States of America.

George Bush
President

Defense secretary sends holiday wishes

On a hot day in Philadelphia 216 years ago, the members of the Continental Congress pledged their lives, fortunes and sacred honor to the cause of liberty. Those patriots approved the Declaration of Independence with confidence that brave Americans would step forward to fight for freedom and independence.

Today, those of you in uniform serving your country preserve that precious legacy our forefathers fought and died to secure for us. The long honor roll of American men and women who have offered their lives in the defense of freedom is a lasting testimony that the preservation of liberty is neither easy nor without cost.

On this Independence Day, wherever you serve, let me assure you that your efforts are deeply appreciated. You are the guardians of that intangible gift of freedom entrusted to us by the patriots of 1776. And I can assure that you have the trust and confidence of the American people.

Dick Cheney
Defense secretary

Swimming can be dangerous; take precautions

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Swimming can be fun but also dangerous. In fact, 5,600 Americans drowned in 1986. These deaths can be prevented by following sensible safety precautions.

One basic precaution is to realize your limitations as a swimmer, not exceed them, and develop your swimming skills.

Don't handicap yourself, either. Your body needs the chance to devote its energies to digesting a recent meal, so don't overload your body by swimming shortly after eating.

As far as swimming is concerned, alcohol and water don't mix. Alcohol can impair your balance, judgment, and reflexes. Don't stack the deck against yourself by drinking and swimming. You also need to know the characteristics of your swimming area. Never dive into unfamiliar waters and be prepared for currents, tides, deep holes, stumps and rocks. Beach, lake and swimming pool regulations are established for your safety. Abide by them.

Swim with a buddy. Companionship is a basic safe swimming practice. Even the most experienced swimmer can be struck by a muscle cramp and need assistance. If you're set on swimming across a lake and can't get someone to swim with you, have a boater follow you.

Panic will kill a swimmer. No matter how desperate the situation seems, never panic or lose control. If you encounter a dangerous situation, such as a severe cramp or irresistible current, stay calm.

You should have a buddy or a lifeguard nearby to help or advise you. Otherwise, depend on previous training. If that's not applicable, use common sense to arrive at a solution.

Always stay calm. Realize that it takes very little effort to float. As long as you stay afloat, you won't drown. That will give you a chance to massage a cramp or calmly decide on a course of action.

EXCELLENCE & QUALITY

Safety office posts signs, reminders to drive carefully

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Fort Benning Safety Office's latest reminder of the importance of safety comes in the form of two signs.

Bearing the motto, "Follow Me Safely," the signs show the number of casualties sustained by Fort Benning military personnel both on and off post including training and off-duty accidents.

The totals for this year so far:

- Accidents this year: 120.
- Accidents this time last year: 111.
- Fatalities this year: six.
- Fatalities same time last year: three.

Post Safety Officer Regis Beighley said that five of the fatalities involved personally owned vehicles, including one motorcycle. The other fatality was a training fatality, he said.

The signs are located at the intersections of Dixie Road and I-185 and Custer Road and Benning Road in order to serve as drive-by reminders, said Beighley.

"The signs are a daily reminder as you leave post that if you aren't careful you might become one of those numbers," he said.

Beighley added that accidents catch people by surprise because they don't think about the possibility of having one.

"The more you think about safety, the more your chances of having an accident will be decreased," he added.

Beighley also noted that summer is generally the time of the year when the most accidents occur.

Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

Regis Beighley, post safety manager, puts the last number on one of the post's new safety signs.

Off-limit areas set

In a recent post Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board meeting, the names of off-post establishments and areas that are restricted for military personnel were released.

These areas are off limits to all military personnel assigned to Fort Benning, Warner Robins Air Logistics Center and the U.S. Naval Reserve Center in Columbus.

The restricted areas and establishments are as follows:

AFAP UPDATE

Garrison Commander's Office

In an effort to continuously improve the quality of life on Fort Benning, a number of issues surfaced at the Family Action Plan Symposium April 23.

The symposium was sponsored by the commanding general and the garrison commander. Recently many of the addressed issues were resolved.

Issues receiving review by post staff agencies during June 8 to 18 include: post recreation facilities, airfare prices for soldiers and dependents, teen activities, post day care facilities and fees, and post library facilities.

How to keep young adults occupied on post was one of the issues raised during the symposium. A new enlisted club is scheduled to open in September 1993.

The club will provide two video walls, a television room, a game room with pool tables and video games and a small bar.

In addition to the new club, the post already offers two recreation centers at Kelley Hill and Sand Hill. To establish a club-like atmosphere, the Kelley Hill Recreation Center now provides a snack bar and serves alcoholic beverages.

Another issue that surfaced during the symposium concerned airfare discounts for personnel going on emergency leave.

Currently, Delta and Continental Airlines are the only commercial carriers to offer discounts for emergency leaves. Both carriers discount fares 50 percent.

To receive the discount from Delta, the passenger must pay the full coach fare; and, upon completion of the trip with proper documentation, the difference will be refunded.

Continental Airlines will discount airfares with verification. At the time of booking, the soldier must have the hospital or funeral home name and telephone number; doctors name, address and telephone number; and traveler's relationship to patient.

Trans World Airlines has no set discount, however they will waive the advance purchase requirements on discounted fares. At the time of booking, travelers must have the same information as listed above.

Soldiers and family members are reminded that of the three airlines offering discounts, Delta is the only airline that serves the Columbus Metro Airport. Connections can be made in Atlanta for those wishing to travel on Continental and Trans World Airlines.

More information is available from the Scheduled Airlines Ticket Office, Building 247, Ingersoll Street., or telephone 682-0361.

Teen activities was another concern questioned during the symposium. Recommendations included opening youth centers in housing areas and expanding Youth Services.

A teen center was opened in July for teens 15 to 18 years of age; but, due to a lack of use, the center was closed four months later.

A Youth Outreach Center was opened in the Bouton Heights Community in January. An average of 110 teens use the facility each day, along with 70 children 6 to 12 years of age.

Additional facilities are being constructed in the McGraw community, scheduled to open in 1993 and in Indianhead community in 1994. These facilities will be open to teens as well as other eligible youths in these communities.

Currently tennis, horseback riding, and golf lessons are available this summer. Swimming lessons, tours to Six Flags and to local points of interest are planned.

Part-day summer camp for youths was another issue during the symposium. Youth Services implemented weekly tours and craft activities as an alternative to summer camp this year. Forty-five slots are available for each activity. Free transportation is available to support field trips.

For more information on youth activities, contact Youth Services at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

The number of hours a child can remain in a day care center was another topic discussed. Army policy now authorizes 12 hours per day in a child-care facility. Family child-care providers are recommended for extended care. A request will be made to the Department of the Army for review of the current policy.

Day care operating hours was another issue under fire. Effective July 1, all child care centers on post, with the exception of Patch Preschool, will open at 5:30 a.m. Tot Town will continue to require advance reservations.

Community child care co-op's are another idea being considered by Child Development Services. CDS will assist interested parents in setting up co-op's.

The issue of fees paid to family child care providers was highlighted at the symposium. Family child-care providers are not government employees but are independent businesses; thus, they determine their own fees.

Parents are free to negotiate with providers for services, hours and rates.

The Department of the Army currently is exploring the use of subsidies to family child-care center providers as a way of lowering costs to soldiers.

More information will be provided as it becomes available. Parents can contact Child Development Services at 545-5246.

Copying facilities at the post library was addressed in response to questions raised during the symposium. A $50 change fund is now available at the library.

The quality of life for soldiers and their families is a major concern for leaders, soldiers, and their dependents. As more issues are addressed and resolved they will be featured in Family Action Plan updates in upcoming issues.

Board helps troops

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet Staff Writer

The Armed Forces Disciplinary Control Board is a good way to file grievances against businesses that treat soldiers unfairly, according to AFDCB official.s

An example of the type of problem the board would handle is if a soldier has a problem with a car and takes it to a dealer or repair shop and is charged an unreasonable rate or the car still doesn't work. If the soldier has tried in good faith to personally settle the dispute, the soldier has a valid reason to file a grievance with the AFDCB.

To file a grievance, write a letter to the board explaining the circumstances surrounding your situation and the actions that have already been taken to settle. Also, write a letter of complaint to the Better Business Bureau explaining the situation to them.

The board's primary legal function is to decide whether of not service members should be prohibited from doing business with these establishments. A list is published by the board periodically showing the off-limits businesses .

GARRISON HIGHLIGHTS

Pool PT survey — A survey will be conducted through July 3 at the indoor pool at Briant Wells Field House about swimming for physical training. According to officials, some soldiers have expressed concern about swimming laps for physical training . The pool will be open from 6 to 8 a.m. Monday through Friday for lap swimming for physical training.

Self-Help to close July 4 for holiday — The Unit and Housing Support Branch Self-Help Store and Loan Equipment Section will be open for normal operating hours July 3. The store will be closed on July 4 for the holiday.

Job opportunities — About 2,000 job openings with the State of Georgia, Department of Corrections (prison system) are available through the Army Career and Alumni Program . All types of positions are available, including medical, automation, food service, maintenance, electricians, business managers, security forces, etc.

Bob Coleman with the State of Georgia is visiting Fort Benning today and will be available from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to discuss these openings with military personnel who are transitioning out of the Army. Coleman will return July 10.

ACAP officials say soldiers should bring their resumes and sign up to see Coleman at the Job Assistance Center, building 2634, in Soldiers' Plaza.

Jobs available — A Department of Defense vacancy listing has been received in the Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

You may review the list at the One-Stop Employment Information Office, building 2521, first floor.

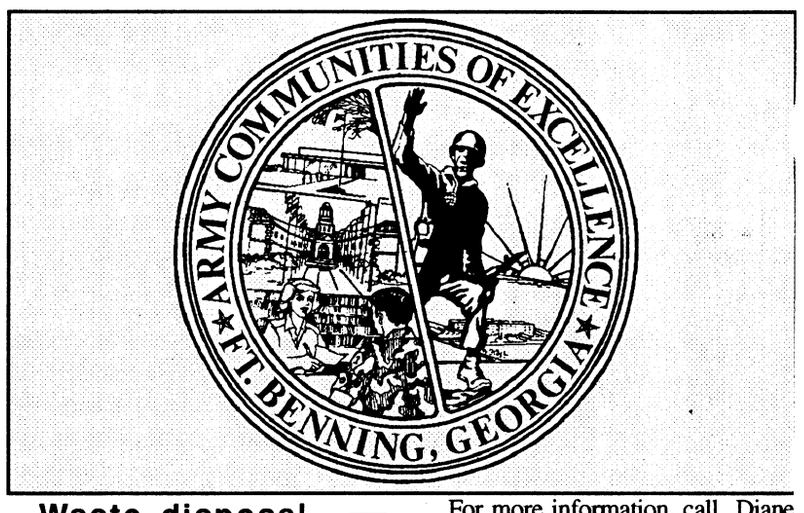
A new Department of Defense Positive Recruiting List has also been received and is available for viewing.

Also, the following federal announcements are open for applications:

Family advocacy program coordinator/social worker, GS-185/101-11, Fort Wainwright, Alaska.

Supervisory budget analyst, GS-560-12, Seoul, Korea, July 20.

Financial administrator, GS-501-11, Tongouchon, Korea, July 22.



Waste disposal — Hazardous materials and wastes cannot be disposed of at the Fort Benning Sanitary Landfill. To do so is a violation of numerous environmental statutes that could result in civil and criminal liability for non-compliance. Therefore, these hazardous materials and wastes shall not be thrown into dumpsters and must be properly disposed of in a permitted disposal facility.

Hazardous wastes include, but are not limited to: oil, hydraulic fluid, antifreeze, explosives, chemicals, flammables, paint, batteries, etc.

For more information, call Diane Benton, Construction Inspection Branch, Department of Engineering and Housing, 545-4749. If you have any hazardous materials for disposal or any related questions, call the Environmental Management Division, DEH, 545-4766.

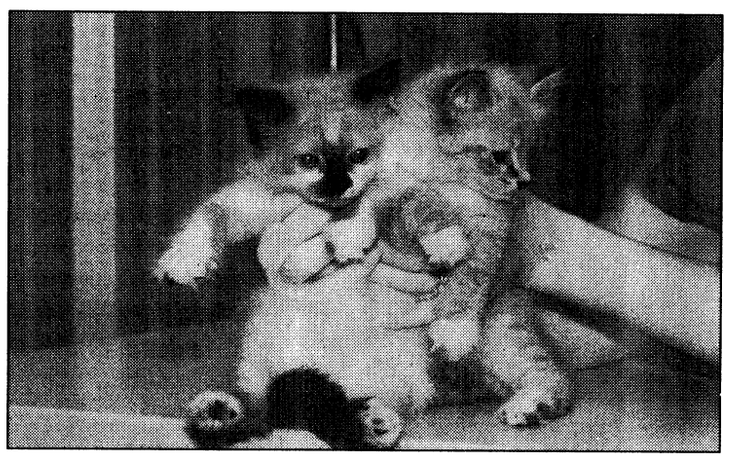
Monday through Friday morning 7:30 a.m. to noon

Monday through Thursday afternoon, 1 to 3:30 p.m.

The clinic will be closed on Friday afternoons.

PET OF THE WEEK



These seven-week-old Siamese/Persian mix kittens are looking for a home. If you would like to adopt them or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:45 a.m. and 1 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 283. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

23 soldiers inducted into Hall of Fame

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"I'm so proud it's almost sinful," said Col. Elliott P. Sydnor upon his induction into the Ranger Hall of Fame June 18 at Malvesti Field.

When Col. Francis Dawson was presented with his medal of induction, he noted, "It's hard to believe this would happen to an old country boy from South Carolina."

Lt. Gen. David E. Grange Jr., termed rangers "truly the most precious asset of this country" upon his induction, while Col. Logan E. Weston said he had only done what any other red-blooded ranger would do.

Called the "Fighting Parson," Weston accepted his induction into the Hall of Fame on behalf of those he commanded. "They deserve it, not I."

All of these comments summed up the feelings of the 23 inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame in an initial ceremony.

According to Col. John J. Maher III, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade, the hall will remain at brigade headquarters for about two more inductions, after which time it will be moved to main post.

In his opening remarks, Maher said that 55,000 rangers have graduated since the school began in 1952, mostly Army soldiers, though some have been from other services as well.

"The school has had enormous impact," he added.

Prior to the induction ceremony, the original Ranger Training Brigade cadre and the first class of 47 from January 1952 were recognized.

Demonstrations of rangers in action and the Infantry Chorus entertained guests.

Rangers: celebrating 50 years of pride bout my own emotions, but if a ew of you saw me reaching for a andkerchief as the parade went by, ou'll know why I did," Stone said.

He added that the legacy of ourage and sacrifice that is a part f ranger history is an example for ll.

"As we watched the pass in eview a moment ago, my thoughts ent back to World War II. Two ears ago, almost to the day, I stood t Pointe Du Hoc on top of those earsome cliffs. I could not ersonally comprehend the courage nd perseverance of the rangers ho climbed those cliffs," Stone aid.

"We must pass ... that bold adition to those who follow us," e continued, "just as those who erved earlier passed it to us, and rangers must always lead the way."

White also expressed his admiration for the veterans during his welcoming remarks following the parade.

"I've followed in my brief time in the Army some great speakers and some great activities and events," White said, "but I don't remember any time that I've witnessed or had to follow such a heartwarming, emotional event as the one we just witnessed. God bless you great Americans."

He also acknowledged the influence that the ranger's legacy of courage and excellence has had on the rest of the Army.

"Although the people and the units we are honoring here represent less than 1 percent of the total force both past and present, they are in a large measure the heart, the spirit, the resolve and the cutting edge of our combat power," White said.

"Because of their exceptional and demonstrated ability in the most challenging and demanding of history's challenges, rangers are universally recognized as the toughest tactically and the most technically proficient individuals within our military forces," he added.

The ceremony's centerpiece was the groundbreaking ceremony that marked the beginning of the construction of the Ranger Memorial, which will be located on Ranger Field as a tribute to all rangers, past, present and future.

White, Stone, and the oldest and youngest rangers present each scooped a shovel of earth from the ground where the memorial will be located.

The memorial will be a walkway in the shape of a spear. At the spearhead will be a giant commando knife and individual markers for every ranger combat action.

As the ceremony continued, a streamer for each conflict ranger units have participated in was attached to the 75th Ranger Regimental colors by veterans of the respective conflicts.

The ceremony also included the laying of a red white and blue wreath in honor of fallen rangers, and the "roll call of honor," in which the names of randomly selected ranger veterans, current rangers and rangers killed in action were called.

The playing of taps by a solitary trumpet brought the ceremony to a close.

Rangers of the past come to life during re-enactment

By John C. Pomory
Military History Division

"Lead the way, ranger!" ordered the infantry ommander and with a shout, the rangers of the 5th anger Battalion surged forward, overwhelming the erman defenders at Omaha Beach. The rangers drove land and helped the 29th Infantry Division capture ierville, the first French village liberated at Omaha each during the Allied invasion of Normandy. eanwhile, elements of the 2nd and 5th Ranger attalions scaled the treacherous 15- foot cliffs at ointe du Hoc to destroy German Artillery mplacements.

Though the original assault took place on D-Day, une 6, 1944, the day's events unfolded once more as e-enactors from the National Military Historical ssociation restaged the battle Saturday and Sunday as art of the Rangers' 50th Anniversary. More than 100 pectators, including many ranger veterans of the actual nvasion, watched, alternately cheering and voicing everent silence, as the re-enactors fought building-to- uilding in the streets of the McKenna combat village.

REVIEW

The preparation of the participants, who have dedicated themselves to pursuing authenticity to the last detail in each of their "Living History" demonstrations, added realism to the re-enactment.

"We strive to recreate the combat situation by using the same weapons, uniforms, tactics, camp life and battlefield scenarios," said John Powers, commander of the NMHA's German 134th Infantry Regiment (Historical).

Todd Guthrie, who led "K Company" of the U.S. Infantry (NMHA), also cited personal appearance standards in reference to haircuts and eyeglasses, further explaining that "this (degree of) authenticity provides an experience of soldier life both in field and garrison settings."

As such, members of the NMHA accurately represented several groups including British and U.S. airborne, German and American infantry, and even French resistance forces.

After the battle ended, re-enactors entertained questions concerning Allied and Axis uniforms, weapons, equipment and tactics. The interaction with the spectators also benefited the re-enactors as several former rangers provided first-hand answers of their own. As Guthrie said, "Our conversations with the World War II veterans . . . revealed a gold mine of historical information."

The atmosphere of mutual respect carried over into Sunday's events, highlighted by a historical seminar at the National Infantry Museum moderated by Capt. Pete Panzeri of the Military History Division, who also directed Saturday's re-enactment.

Guest speakers at the seminar included Capt. Brian Barham and Capt. Richard Dixon, both of the Tactics Division of the Infantry School, who delivered presentations highlighting "The Rangers of World War II" and "The Rangers of Pointe du Hoc," respectively. Alan Landau, author of the book, "Rangers Lead the Way," also contributed, providing analysis in his discussion of "The Rangers at Cisterna, Italy."

The audience once again appreciated the efforts of the participants in the seminar, applauding the excellent battle re-creations and the historical perspectives presented. As one of several World War II veterans present, Anthony Brindis of the 2nd Ranger Battalion offered his opinion that the speakers, "... told it like it was," adding, "I was wounded at Pointe du Hoc after I scaled the cliffs ... (and I) couldn't advance forward, couldn't climb back down, so I just had a cliffside seat ... (to view) the whole operation."

The seminar served as the capstone for the two-day event sponsored by the Infantry Center's Military History Division in honor of the 50th anniversary of the rangers. While it is impossible to fully recognize the vast accomplishments of the rangers, Martin O'Toole, the president of the NMHA, summarized the shared purpose of the individuals involved in the weekend's events when speaking of Saturday's re-enactment., "While this type of experience does not duplicate the horrors of the war, it does educate us ... and give great historical insight."

'Roughing it' can go smoothly

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Roughing it — the essence of the spirit that built this great country. Conquerors of the unknown, adventurers of history, explorers of the great outdoors — they all camped out. People like Daniel Boone, Jeremiah Johnson and Lewis and Clark.

One on one with nature. To coexist peacefully or to scrap against the elements and terrain. All these features inspire the camper.

People camp to escape to peaceful seclusion or to challenge themselves. Often, camping coincides with other activities, such as hiking, fishing and hunting.

Of all the reasons and rewards associated with camping, one ingredient is essential for enjoyment or even survival — preparation. Preparation depends on common sense, experience and foresight.

The basics of camping are shelter, food and safe water. Shelter will protect you from the elements, whether heat, cold, wind, precipitation, vegetation or insects. Shelter ranges from sunscreen, bug spray or rain gear to a cave, tent or Winnebago.

Food is another basic consideration. If you plan to hunt or fish for food, don't depend on your skill or luck to sustain you. Bring food with you in case the fish aren't biting or the game is scarce. Prepare for cooking needs as well.

The ability to build a fire is important for warmth and cooking. Be responsible about your fire. Never build a fire larger than necessary, and don't leave it unattended. Keep all fires and glowing coals in a clearing. Build your fire downwind from your camp area. When leaving, thoroughly extinguish it and wait until the ashes are cold.

The easiest way to ensure a safe water supply is to bring your own. You can contract an intestinal disorder by drinking untreated water. If you have to drinking untreated water, boil it thoroughly. Boiling destroys the organisms that cause waterborne disease. Chemical disinfectants such as iodine or chlorine tablets are not considered as reliable as heat in killing giardia, although those products work well against most other waterborne bacteria that cause disease.

Check the weather before camping. If the weather is less than ideal, consider delaying your trip. Otherwise, prepare for the forecasted weather conditions. Regardless of forecasts, always prepare for unexpected weather changes. Bring a change of clothes, rain gear, garments for unseasonably cold weather, and matches.

Navigation is also important when camping. Getting lost is a terrifying experience. Don't stray from familiar territory and don't exceed your navigational capabilities. A wise precaution is informing someone where you will be, how long you will be there and the route you'll take.

Always bring a survival kit camping. It should include a pocketknife, matches in a waterproof case, water, a blanket, compass and first aid items. Bring snakebite treatment, bandages and aspirin.

Rugby draws 10 Southern teams

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The ninth annual Columbus Fort Benning Sevens Classic Rugby Tournament Saturday at Blue Field brought teams from as far away as Florida, Alabama, North Carolina and South Carolina, with players also coming from other areas in Georgia.

The University of Georgia at Athens won the championship defeating the Fort Rucker, Ala., team 26-10.

The Columbus Fort Benning Cruise-matics, who hosted the tournament, captured third place by defeating High Country of Atlanta, 28-4.

Tim Butterfield scored three tries and Steve Jackman added two to lead the scoring for the Cruise-matics.

"The tournament fielded 10 teams, which allowed each team to play at least four games each," said Ray Davis, tournament director.

"With the hot and humid weather, the tents and the water tank provided by Headquarters Support Company, 43rd Engineers provided some shade and refreshments for the players between matches.

"It was a great tournament and everyone seemed to have a good time," he continued. "We got a late start because we weren't sure about some teams that were supposed to be coming, so we waited to see if they were going to make it."

But, overall, everything turned out OK, Davis said.

Language camp crashes barriers

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Becoming an active member of any community requires a working knowledge of the language, customs and culture of that community.

In an effort to make School of the Americas guest instructors, students and their family members feel more a part of the Columbus community, a special summer camp is planning to open its doors for a third year.

The English as a Second Language Summer Camp is currently registering students of all ages for the two-week course scheduled to begin July 13 from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday.

Co-sponsored by the SOA Support Group, an outreach committee of SOA supporters in the Columbus community, the camp will be at the Elizabeth Bradley

Turner Continuing Education Center on the campus of Columbus College.

According to Rosamaria Smith, executive director of the SOA Support Group, the camp not only enhances learning the English language, it "develops friendships among participants and their families."

The camp also "accomplishes one of our goals, which is to develop and open channels of opportunity between SOA and the Columbus community," Smith added.

Several aspects of the camp make it an ideal situation for bringing family members from SOA into the mainstream Columbus community.

In addition to the variety of ethnic backgrounds (in past classes students from Japan, Korea and European countries have attended), tours of local businesses have exposed students to Columbus and the English language, said David Mott, program coordinator for the office of Continuing Education, Columbus College.

This year a tour of Kinnett Dairies is planned, with a possible tour of downtown Columbus still being planned.

The camp's unique approach to teaching the English language stems from its curriculum designed for fun, summer activities.

But having fun is all part of the plan, according to Tammy Edwards, an ESL instructor and director of the camp.

The camp is "more conducive for learning, because language happens naturally. As children we learned language in the home, here we take ESL students and put them in a natural setting," Edwards said.

Although the camp is geared toward children, adults have attended in the past and the camp separates students according to age.

The camp costs $50 with 35 scholarships of $20 apiece available for those who would otherwise not be able, financially, to attend the camp, Mott said.

Anyone interested in attending should contact the Office of Continuing Education, Elizabeth Bradley Turner Center, Columbus College at 568-2023 or register in person at the center.

Survey measures stress

Army Community Service

The Family Advocacy Program will be conducting a stress survey to determine levels of stress in the family and work place.

The survey will be administered to 2,500 permanent party soldiers. Selection will be random sample.

"The aim of this survey is not to identify specific individual needs; rather, we want to learn which kinds of stress people encounter daily so that we can identify broad trends among our population, " said Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

"Once we identify these trends, experts will be able to provide programs to deal with the associated causes of stress," she said. "The end result will be a more effective Family Advocacy Program responsive to the soldiers needs and to the needs of their family members."

Soldiers who are randomly selected to take the survey will not be asked to identify themselves.

"We don't need to know who they are but rather how they feel," Welch said. "Admitting to stress or being stressed is not a weakness. To be effective, we must take an honest measure of ourselves and then deal with our own strengths and weaknesses realistically."

The survey has just gotten underway and Welch said they expect to have it completed by mid-July. Welch said she is anxious to get the results because it will determine which family difficulties are most stressful to soldiers and it will give her program areas on which to focus.

The mission of Family Advocacy is to develop prevention programs that contribute to a healthy life for the soldiers and their families.

JROTC students get taste of life in Army

By Robert L. Akers
U.S. Army JROTC

A total of 198 high school cadets from Alabama, Florida and Georgia took part in the annual Junior Reserve Officers' Training Corps Cadet Leadership Camp June 10 through Saturday at Fort Benning.

The majority of cadets came from Atlanta and Fulton County Schools with others from Mobile, Ala., and from Tate High School in Florida.

The cadets started each day at 5:30 a.m. with a full schedule of activities, including visits to airborne and ranger demonstrations and a chance to participate in hands-on training, such as jumping from the 34-foot airborne towers, running the confidence, obstacle and leadership reaction courses and a day on the M-16 rifle range shooting for qualification.

The overall mission of the Army's JROTC program is to motivate young people to be better Americans. To accomplish this mission, the curriculum courses on citizenship, leadership and self-discipline and presents a variety of complementary courses designed to enhance the cadet's potential for success both in school and in post secondary pursuits. The program requires cadets to achieve a level of physical fitness commensurate with the accepted norms for teen-agers. Also included in the training schedule is orientation on drug abuse awareness.

During opening ceremonies in the Harmony Church area, the camp commander, Col. B.L. Moore (also the director of Army instruction for Atlanta) challenged the cadets to work as a team in their endeavors for the good of all while pursuing the day-to-day goals of the camp.

"We're going to challenge you mentally and physically. It's OK to try and fail, but to not try is a mark of unworthiness. By just being here, I know you are all worthy," he said.

"JROTC is an outstanding program for any student. It not only teaches the practices and art of leadership, responsibility and self-discipline, it also contains virtually all the core values required by the Georgia State Board of Education that are to be taught to all students," said Moore. "The JROTC staff is dedicated to keeping our students in school, seeing that they graduate and to preparing them for college or the working world. We are convinced that all students, regardless of who they are, or what their future plans may be, can benefit from Army JROTC."

Saturday, the cadets and staff held graduation and closing ceremonies where it all started, at the Harmony Church theater. They left Fort Benning at noon.

Leadership students visit Fort Benning

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Students in the Department of Defense's Executive Leadership Development Program visited the 586th Engineer Company (Assault Float Bridge) June 8.

According to Rosemary Howard, the program's executive director, the program also known as "Fast Track," was created six years ago for mid-level government service employees.

"Our program has all types (of employees) — from computer programmers and weapons systems designers to purchasing agents and executive decision makers," Howard said.

"The reason this cross section (of workers) is attending is simple," said Howard. "The majority of the future leadership has no military experience to rely on. So, this class was designed to give them a 'hands on' look at the most important factor in any decision they may make — the soldier in the field.

"Our students spend a week with each service — Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines. They train with them, live with them and eat with them. This creates a learning experience that cannot be taught in a classroom.

David Greer

Members of the 586th bring Bradleys off a bridge.

"Many of the students have told me that this program has become a turning point in their lives," Howard said. "An example of this was a couple of years ago when I had a ship designer come through. He was a man that had never been aboard a ship to see how his designs affected the troops. When he got on a ship and had to sleep in the short bunks, he said 'Never again will I allow myself to forget that it's the troops on the line I really serve. He is the one I need to design for and in the future I will fight any design revision that is not in his favor,' he said. This man was almost 6 feet 5 inches tall, and the bunks aboard ships are only 6 feet in length," she continued.

The 586th demonstrated its capabilities and put the students on board boats and rafts and instructed them in the fine art of being a "River Rat."

"The 586th really has put on a demonstration for us," Howard said. They were able to construct a five-section float bridge and take two Bradleys across the river in under 15 minutes. One of the students here is involved in water crossing theory and design, but her experiences have been limited to computer simulation and formal schooling. For her, it's been a real learning experience.

43rd trains in New Mexico

By Allen C. Estes
43rd Engineer Battalion

Just as one company in the 43rd Engineer Battalion returns from Costa Rica, another has deployed to the southwest corner of New Mexico.

Soldiers of Company B, 43rd Engineer Battalion departed Fort Benning May 18 for the Boot Heel section of New Mexico to construct roads along the U.S.-Mexico border. The advanced party left two weeks earlier to construct a base camp in this remote desert region.

The project consists of 38 miles of a combination of new and improved roads, two concrete helipads and a masonry block listening post/observation post in support of Joint Task Force Six and the U.S. Border Patrol. The purpose of the 43rd's efforts is to help the border patrol curtail the movement of drugs across the border.

"I'm for anything that will stop the flow of drugs," 1st Sgt. Jerry Gilley of Company B said. "Our project will give the border patrol greater visibility and mobility, which will make their job easier."

The road project is being completed using both the unit's organic heavy equipment that was hauled in by truck from Fort Benning. The long road, which does not have the strict grade requirements and demanding specifications of a city street, is an opportunity to cross train operators on different pieces of equipment.

"It's a good mission," said Spc. Keith Hedger, a Company B heavy equipment operator. "We're getting lots of stick time, working hard, and we're enjoying ourselves."

Spc. Gary Bickford, another heavy equipment operator who has been driving a rented civilian water scraper, added, "It's a good cause for the drug enforcement. It's a great chance to drive civilian equipment that we don't usually get to use."

While the style of construction is not sophisticated, there are unique building challenges. The listening post and observation post and the helipad are simple designs but are located on top of a mountain for which there is currently no access road. Using ingenuity and a determination to accomplish the mission, Company B sling-loaded construction materials to a helicopter and delivered them to the inaccessible site.

According to 2nd Lt. Earl Lawson, much of the challenge and realism of the project comes from "the challenge of building on top of a mountain where you can see Mexico on three sides."

Logistics provide a challenge for the project as the soldiers sustain themselves in the barren desert environment. Most of the support comes from Fort Bliss, which is four hours away and the closest military installation to the project.

Despite the challenges, Company B is continuing to construct roads at better than a mile per day. The company is scheduled to return to Fort Benning July 15.

"We've had some setbacks, but the whole point of the training is to overcome setbacks in an area even more remote than Saudi," said 1st Lt. Todd Kennedy, Company B executive officer. The commander of the operation, Capt. Marshall Anderson, said he is proud of the efforts and progress made by his soldiers in this barren area of the country.

70th Division drills gain experience at Fort Benning

By Kevin Logwood
70th Division (Training)

Army Reserve drill sergeants are training recruits to be combat-ready infantry soldiers as part of their annual training.

The drill sergeants are assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 70th Regiment, 4th Brigade (Infantry), 70th Division (Training), and are based in Bloomington, Ind. From June 6 to 20, they spent two weeks training rosy-cheeked, wet-behind-the-ears privates in the heat and humidity of Georgia.

The 22 drill sergeants are part of a brigade-wide training rotation that involves the cycling of four battalions through Fort Benning's 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.

Lt. Col. Robert H. Hass, battalion commander, is serving his last annual training, but still remains focused on the mission.

"I want the soldiers we've received to be fully trained in all skills they should've obtained after two weeks of Split Option One" Hass said.

"Company B began training June 10 with the arrival of 177 recruits. Most of them were 17 to 18 years old and had never been exposed to the shock of drill instructors demanding their utmost attention," Hass said.

The following day, Company D received 170 recruits, which now had the Reservists responsible for the training of 347 of the battalion's privates. Senior Field Leader Sgt. 1st Class William Mulryan noted this group preferred to conduct a low-stress induction.

"You don't have to always yell at "Joe" (the trainee) in order to get him to do what you want," said Sgt. 1st Class Chris Carlisle, Company B's first platoon sergeant.

The Bloomington-based unit brought 58 soldiers for this mission. In addition to the drill sergeants, unit members worked in training, administrative and logistical areas to support the training being conducted.

One of the first problems encountered by the training companies was the heat. Within the first few days of training, temperatures near 90 degrees were common. In order to acclimate, trainees were ordered to drink large doses of water and at least two full cups of water at meals.

According to Hass, he was handed a mid-cycle assessment of his drill sergeants' progress, and safety specifics on trainees and enforcement of their safety was a major positive factor.

"The trainees are very motivated," said Sgt. Mike Anderson. "They're so motivated that they sometimes think they're super-beings, and sometimes it actually takes seeing one of their counterparts falling out in order for them to realize it can happen to them also."

The heat wasn't the only problem the drill sergeants were faced with.

The many different rules and regulations concerning handling trainees was a major concern they were briefed on.

Trainee abuse is out, according to Hass.

"Things that were once permissible are now considered trainee abuse," he said.

The battalion was turned over to the 1st Battalion, 70th Regiment Saturday.

Hass said he felt that the transition went well at every level. He was especially concerned about the transition at the drill sergeant level.

"If we can't make a smooth transition at the drill sergeant level, it doesn't do any good," he said.

Hass' battalion, being the first of four to train here, ensured their mission was dealt with in the highest form of professionalism. They had to handle and find solutions for the initial problems that the remaining units will or might encounter.

Hass said he was enormously proud of his drill sergeants and the professionalism they exhibited as citizen soldiers.

"They have managed the training schedules well and are getting soldiers to the right places at the right times," said Hass.

"I want my people to keep working toward that higher degree of professionalism," said Hass. "We (not only) have focused on our two weeks at hand but also on the entire eight-week cycle. We have taken care of our troops."

Sgt. 1st Class Robert Hillenburg of Headquarters and Headquarters and headquarters company, 1st Battsalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, treats his daughter, Katie, 4, to a pony ride.

3/24 conducts family day

By Willie Hay
3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division

Family support groups of five battalions of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division sponsored Family Days for their soldiers June 13 and 14, midpoint in the brigade's Victory Focus training exercise.

Buses from Kelley Hill brought spouses and children of the Sledgehammer Brigade soldiers to each battalion's field site or prearranged area for the get-together.

After the families were reunited, many of the family members toured the soldiers' work sites, climbed aboard their vehicles, or witnessed demonstrations of their unit's combat power.

The "Redlegs" of 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery conducted a demonstration of the howitzer's firepower for the family members. The "Dependables' of 324th Forward Support Battalion demonstrated how supplies can be sling-loaded to the field from the Chinook helicopter.

The "Strikers" of 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry opted for more of a picnic atmosphere, with a dunking booth, volleyball, fishing and pony rides for the children.

After several hours of relaxing with the soldiers, the family members said their goodbyes before boarding the buses, hoping the 10 days of training would pass quickly.

The 317th Engineer Battalion Family Day was Sunday.

REMEMBER WORLD WAR II

50 years ago today
June 26, 1942

After the fall of Tobruk, Axis forces again pressed eastward against the remnants of the British 8th Army. British forces are conducting a fighting withdrawal toward Matruh against everything the Axis can bring to bear on them, including at least three elite armored divisions. Allied air forces in the area are attempting to ease the pressure on the beleaguered defenders by strafing German columns and bombing Axis supply facilities.

On the Russian front, the German Army took the city of Kupyansk, 60 miles to the east of Kharkov, where they began their offensive after repelling a major Soviet attack earlier this year. German news reports the Red Army in general retreat in the whole Kharkov area. In the Soviet Crimea, the fortress of Sevastopol is still in Russian hands despite three days of Axis attacks. A russian statement declares that several Rumanian and German divisions have suffered heavy casualties while trying to storm the Russian defenses.

The U.S. government created a European theater of operations for U.S. forces and named Maj. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as its commander. This action is believed to be the first step toward the opening of a second front in Europe by the British and Americans.

Japanese forces trying to secure the Nanchang railway to central China have been pushed back 12 miles by Chinese forces. The Chinese have been aided by bombers employed for the first time in the area. Other smaller Japanese forces are reported to be encircled by the Chinese army.

Claiming to have information that the Czechoslovakian town of Levzsaky had "sheltered parachutists" that had participated in the killing of a gestapo deputy chief, the entire adult population was executed. The village was then razed and the children were taken to "education centers." This comes amid reports of German atrocities in Poland. These atrocities include the execution of 1,200 Poles and the destruction of at least three villages.

The Royal Air Force kept pressure on Germany by launching an air raid with almost 1,000 planes. It's target was the German war production sites in Bremen.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

•In North Africa, The Afrika Korps pushed the British back to Alamein. The British forces regrouped there and halted the German advance through Egypt by concentrating their attacks on weaker Italian units, forcing Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to reinforce the Italians rather than to press the attack.

•In the Atlantic, the Allies extended their convoy system south from Florida. This change proved to be effective as Allied losses to German U-Boat forces slowed to only 39 for the remainder of 1942.

•In the Arctic, the Allied convoy PQ-17 left Reykjavik for Archangel with 36 freighters as QP-13 began its return voyage from Archangel with 35 ships.

•On the Eastern Front, the Germans launched their main summer offensive to drive the Russians to Moscow.

•In the Crimea, the Russian High Command ordered the evacuation of Sevastopol after seven months of resistance to the German siege.

•The United States finalized arrangements with various South American countries to get raw rubber supplies to replace those captured by the Japanese.

•The British House of Commons debated a motion to redefine the prime minister's role in directing the war effort while juggling ordinary political business. Prime Minister Winston Churchill's supporters defeated the motion 476 to 25, largely due to his speech in which he said, "Parliament shall either change the government or support it, but not meddle with its composition."

Band mixes rock, spiritual message

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

In Saturday's Christian rock concert, an outdoor event held between Burger King and Sayers Memorial Library on Main Post and sponsored by the U.S. Army Infantry Center Chaplain's Office, Flashback performed its music ministry, taking the audience back in time through rock 'n' roll flashbacks.

The band sang songs dating back to the '60s, the selection flavored with funk and country influences. Flashback performed hits ranging from "Wayward Son" to "Desperado," and spoke to the audience about God, illustrating their message through song.

Band members said, "We can know God. We can accept God's payment. We are each faced with a decision — we can answer yes or no. And if we say yes, I accept, we need to follow the path."

Their message continued, "God will never leave you. God is saying to you, 'I love you. I love you so much, I died for you.' "

The band's message was that all people face a choice – to accept God's love and to follow his path.

Band members invited the audience to make that choice, and after the concert many in the audience came to speak to band members and the chaplains to discuss their decision — to say "Yes!"

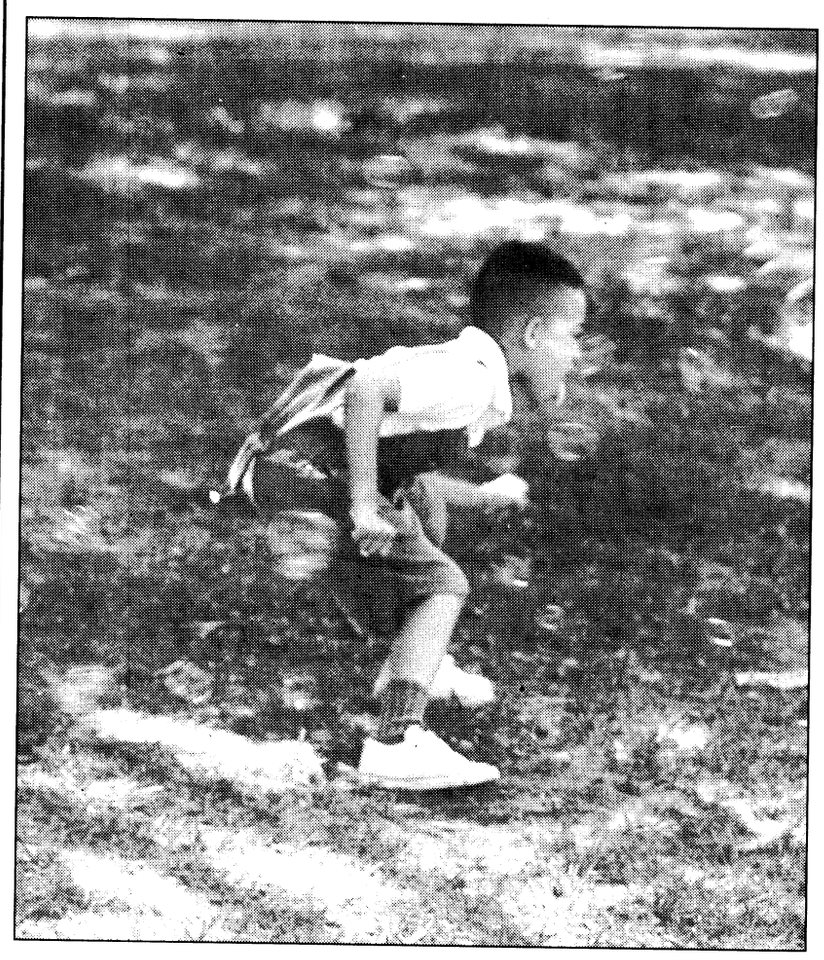
Students 'team up with Jesus'



Karen S. Morarie

A student from Teresa Fritts' "completed kindergarten" Vacation Bible School class takes a bubble-chasing break June 19, the final day of the week-long school.

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Vacation Bible School, for kindergarten through junior high students, was June 15 through 19 at Herbert J. Dexter School. Marti Mass and Dollie Kappel of the Protestant Women of the Chapel were coordinators.

The theme for Vacation Bible School this year was "Team Up With Jesus." The theme was reflected in the class names – for instance, one "completed Kindergarten" class was called the "Tennis Shoes." Class names determined the shape of the children's nametags.

The school theme was carried out in activities involving cheerleading, football and so on, and shaped the essence of Bible instruction at the school. "We emphasized that (Christianity) reflects team spirit — we all work together, and God is like the coach," Kappel said.

Along with the sports theme, the children engaged in serious bible study. Linda Bradley's fourth grade class had a class verse — "Thanks be to God, who gives us our victory, to honor Jesus Christ." The class also spent time throughout the week learning the beatitudes. one student in the class said his favorite verses were from Psalms 100: "I will sing a joyful noise unto the Lord."

Bradley said that she enjoyed teaching the fourth grade class, and enjoyed the contrast with her fall-through-spring job of teaching younger children. "These children are excited to be here, and they really love the Lord," Bradley said.

Mass and Kappel both felt the school was very successful and the children enjoyed it. Activities were varied to keep the children's interest, and included outdoor activities, crafts and Bible study.

According to Kappel, a big part of the success of Vacation Bible School involved the number and enthusiasm of the volunteers. "Their spirit and love really made it all work," she said.

Volunteers will be honored by the post chaplains with a volunteer dinner in late August.

Dental premiums change

DoD raises premiums for active duty family members basic dental plan

American Forces Information Service

Premiums for the Basic Dependents Dental Plan will increase July 1.

A military sponsor with one dependent will pay $5.20 per month, up from $4.57, said Air Force Lt. Col. Roger T. Miller, dental partnership project officer at the Office of Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Family coverage will cost $10 per month, up from $9.14.

To avoid violating the congressionally imposed cap of $10 for the sponsor's share of family coverage, the government will pay a higher share of the premium.

The current government share is 60 percent. It will rise to 61.54 percent.

The plan provides basic dental services through participating dentists. Services include dental X-rays, oral exams and cleanings, preventive sealants on permanent molars for patients under 14 and fluoride treatments.

It also pays 80 percent of the charges for fillings, stainless steel crowns for baby teeth and repairs to dentures.

It does not cover root canals, crowns for permanent teeth or orthodontic work such as braces.

Miller said the Department of Defense is working on expanding the benefits available through the plan.

Connie Bridges

ial to The Bayonet

With the theme "Indians," Cub ut Day Camp at Fort Benning week saw about 170 boys ng advantage of the cooler ther in outdoor nature activities, ts, songs, games, ksmanship, archery and mming.

According to Inge Wills, camp ector, the Cub Scouts divided o tribes found in the Southeastern nited States, such as the Creeks and Seminoles.

The Webelos, or older Cub Scouts, divided into patrols similar to Boy Scouts.

Day Camp was at the Ranger Recreation Center in the Harmony Church area.

Other organizers of this year's camp were Inge Mason, program director and Dean Sims, Fort Benning District director. Serving as Indian story lady was Nancy Welch.

An annual event, the dinner honors those girls and adults who have achieved specific levels of excellence in Girl Scouting.

Many Fort Benning Girl Scouts received awards and service pins.

Sue Daniels, Cindi Floyd, Dana Gaylor and Stephanie Mason of Troop 69 received the Senior Girl Scout Leadership Award.

Recognizing at least 30 hours of volunteer work in leadership positions, the Senior Girl Scout Leadership Award is a prerequisite for achieving Girl Scouting's highest award, the Gold Award. Mason was also presented her God and Life Award.

Awards were also presented to a variety of volunteers from Fort Benning. Membership Numeral Pins were awarded to Pat Corning, Cindy Mason, Janet Moore and Cathy Storey for 10 years of combined membership as a girl and adult.

Michaela Coleson received a 15-year Membership Numeral Pin. Years of Service pins were presented to Clare Holder, Russell Mason, Beverly Steffy and David Steffy for 10 years of service as adult volunteers.

An Outstanding Leader Award was presented to Susan Prestidge of Brownie Troop 23.

Recognized as outstanding volunteers were Chris Godwin of Brownie Troop 20 and Janet Moore of Cadette Troops 135/136.

In addition, Corning was recognized for her efforts as the former Fort Benning volunteer area director of the Girl Scout program.

Jeanette Stone received an appreciation pin for outstanding service above and beyond the volunteer position held. Stone serves as an area coordinator and the troop leader of Brownie Troop 34.

In addition, she has contributed many hours to special Girl Scout projects.

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts Inc. serves 6,000 girls in a 12-county region of West Georgia and East Alabama. Persons interested in the Girl Scout program may contact the council office at (706) 327-2646.

A mock 1950s variety show is 'On the Air'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Back in the 1950s, the kings of live television included Milton Berle Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis, Steve Allen and

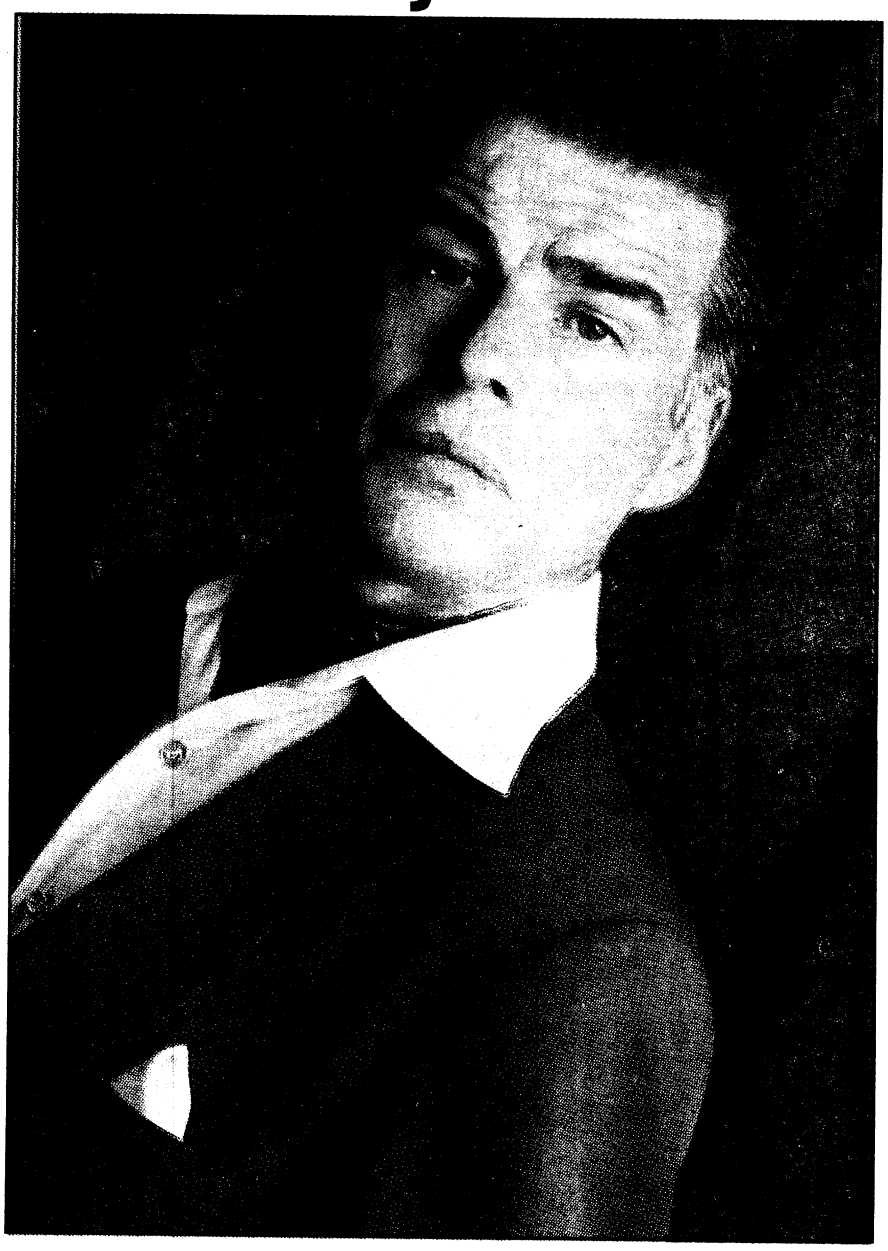
... Lester Guy.

The latter name might not be all that familiar, but giving him that sort of professional reputation is one of the fictional conceits of "On the Air," a new ABC comedy series from "Twin Peaks" creator-producers David Lynch and Mark Frost that currently is airing on Saturdays. "Peaks" alumnus Ian Buchanan stars as Lester Guy, a well-known personality whose career is on the line in 1957 with a weekly variety show, and the antics of those who surround him place a definite pall over his hopes for lasting success. His director (David L. Lander, formerly Squiggy on "Laverne and Shirley") speaks in a forked tongue that virtually no one can make out; Lester's on-air sidekick (Gary Grossman) aspires to do more-meaningful work; the program's producer (actual 1950s-TV veteran Marvin Kaplan), who has been around since TV's inception still has no idea what he's doing; and the Zoblotnick Broadcasting Corporation executive in charge (Miguel Ferrer, another "Peaks" veteran) is forever ready to pull the plug on the show at a moment's notice. Cast regulars also include Marla Jeanette Rubinoff as Guy's female foil, and Mel Johnson Jr. and Tracey Walter as the show's sound engineers, while co-executive producer Robert Engels and composer Angelo Badalamenti are notable behind-the-scenes holdovers from the "Twin Peaks" team.

Engels claims he and his production partners went into their new venture braced for the "inevitable comparisons" between the two programs, given the cult following and unusual nature of "Twin Peaks." However, he stresses, This has nothing to do with that (previous series). It's just an idea we all thought was funny and wanted to try. It was a cool era, when the United States really had it (over all other countries). I kept trying to find a way to get a 'Made in Japan' joke in, because it WAS a joke back then. The clothes were kind of cool, so it's very nostalgic. At the same time, it was a more-naive period, and that's what a lot of the humor is based on. Obviously, we've brought to it our own sort of zaniness, but I think it's a lot easier to follow than 'Twin Peaks.' You can miss an episode and still get it, and still know who these people are. I wouldn't apologize for the ongoing story of 'Twin Peaks' since that's how it was always designed, but I also don't want people to think we're doing that (with every project)." Still, Engels' association with "Peaks" hasn't ended, since he and Lynch co-wrote the screenplay for the much-anticipated August theatrical release "Twin Peaks: Fire Walk With Me."



Ian Buchanan as Lester Guy

Nevertheless, Engels concedes that the presence of so many "Peaks" contributors might make "On the Air" seem more of a direct descendant than it is. "We're 'family,' to use that phrase, though we have kind of a dysfunctional family," he muses. "I think it's just natural to consider using some of the same people, and it's also why 'Twin Peaks' was loaded with people from Minnesota, because Mark (Frost) and I are from there. I've known him forever, since I was 18 and he was 16." Though he's older now, Engels still isn't old enough to have watched 1950s variety shows steadily when they originally aired live. "I have my idea of what they were like," he reflects, "and I think 'The Lester Guy Show' is probably like what 'The Garry Moore Show' was. They would do very dramatic skits all of a sudden, such as a scene from 'Hamlet.' I f remember that, but the look of the show is completely real. We researched that to death, so there's nothing there that isn't authentic."

Recently seen in the NBC miniseries "Cruel Doubt" Miguel Ferrer is enjoying a big year, and not only because of that venture and "On the Air": He's also a newlywed, having married actress Leilani Sarelle, who played Sharon Stone's close companion in "Basic Instinct." The son of the late Academy Award-winning actor Jose ("Cyrano de Bergerac") Ferrer, he made an earlier stab at weekly work in CBS' very short-lived police saga "Broken Badges" ... but even with major

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

The Fourth of July will be celebrated with many events throughout the area.

In addition to the activities on York Field, post events will include a pool-side party at the Officers' Club featuring a barbecue buffet. The fee is $4.50 for adults and $1.99 for children.

Phenix City will celebrate the Fourth with a "Fourth of July Extravaganza" at Idle Hour Park. The free program includes a country and western show featuring several bands, beginning at 1 p.m. Food booths will be available, and a fireworks display will round out the day's events.

Callaway Gardens is hosting a program including performances by the Bill Miller Band at 2:30, 4:30 and 6 p.m., the Flying High Circus at 3:30 p.m., and a water ski spectacular at 5 p.m.

The Swingingdallion band will play from 8 to 9:30 p.m., followed by a fireworks display. All events will take place at the beach at Callaway Gardens, and admission will be $10 for adults, $3 for children aged 6 to 11.

Stone Mountain Park will be the site of a "Fantastic Fourth" July 3 through 5, beginning with a "Peach Ice Cream Churn-off" in the Coliseum Meadow from noon to 3 p.m. on July 3.

The afternoon will also include cloggers and a concert by the country and western group Rumble Road.

Main lawn events on July 3 will include concerts by David Rockett and the Boosters and Wet Willie, and a laser and fireworks show.

These events will be repeated July 4 on the main lawn from 6 to 9:30 p.m. Events on the 4th will also include a main lawn concert by the Serendipity Singers, who will perform from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

The highlight July 5 will be a 4:30 p.m. concert by the Marshall Tucker Band.

Other performances scheduled July 5th will include David Rockett and the Boosters and the John Berry Band. The fireworks and laser light show will also be repeated.

Fort Benning offers much to do

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Do you have to be a member of the military to take advantage of the recreational and service oriented facilities on Fort Benning?

Most post facilities are available for use by more than just active duty soldiers.

Here's the run down on who can use what and when on Fort Benning.

Unlimited use of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities is available to all active duty, Reserve, National Guard and retired personnel, said AAFES Retail Manager Steven Collins.

Members of the Reserve and National Guard are no longer required to show their Leave and Earnings Statements, he added.

Family members with identification cards are also authorized full privileges, Collins said.

Post civilians, which includes Department of the Army, nonappropriated fund, contract employees and their family members, are not authorized to use exchange facilities, with the exception of snack bars, the cafeteria in Infantry Hall and other restaurant type facilities, said Exchange Manager Edward Wheeler.

DOD employees who are on Temporary Duty to Fort Benning and have travel orders and evidence of occupancy of government quarters, may, however, use exchange facilities.

Use of post gas stations is limited to military members, retirees and family members with a valid I.D. card.

Most Community Activities, however can be used by post civilians, said Marketing Chief Brian Smith.

Facilities that post civilians may use any time include the Officers Club for grades GS-7 and UA-7 or above, golf course, bowling centers, education and learning centers, and the Volunteer Resources Center.

The Youth Center, Youth Pool, Main Youth Activity Gym and the child development centers are available for use by post civilians and their family members on a space-available basis.

The Arts and Crafts Center, auto shops, car washes, laundromat, gymnasiums, baseball fields, the Rental Lease Office, Uchee Creek Recreation Center and the Information, Ticketing, and Registration Office can also be used, but Smith added that some facilities, such as the gymnasiums, may give priority to military members at certain times.

He suggested calling the specific activity for complete information on usage if you are a post civilian.

Infantry Museum displays history of infantryman

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Many soldiers and family members pass by a well-known historical point every day without a second glance.

A second look at a three-story stone structure, with its white face and green skirt of grass before it, would show the passerby that there is more to this seemingly common building that makes it tremendously uncommon.

When approaching the building, one might observe an array of cannons, trains, and tanks. Some of these items date back to the early 1900s, some as recent as Operation Desert Storm.

A stroll toward the largest tank on display will reveal a Soviet-made T-72 Main Battle Tank, used by the Iraqi army against the allied forces during Operation Desert Storm. This tank, along with many other items captured or donated by the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized) after Operation Desert Storm can be found here.

From the most recent conflict, to times when people didn't know how to make and fight with sophisticated weapons, the museum shows what being an infantryman was like.

Up the impressive steps outside the building and just above the front door is the emblem of a combat-experienced infantryman — the Combat Infantryman Badge. this symbol is the gateway into the museum that was noted by Georgia Gov. Zell Miller with the Governor's Award in the Humanities last year.

Inside, a visitor is immediately encompassed by semi-darkness and greeted by museum staff. The darkness, however, adds to the dramatization the pieces of history portray during the visit.

Through the center of the museum, a winding staircase gives the visitor a view that is ever-changing, with a gigantic American flag as part of the view.

Lying among the displays for the Civil War, both world wars, Korea, and Vietnam, in a small room near the airborne display, the Congressional Medal of Honor recipients.

This discreet display may very well be the most impressive part of the museum. The modest description of each winner, accompanied by a picture, represents these men and their accomplishments during a conflict.

For the infantry enthusiast, the National Infantry Museum here is a must to see.

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

If you're looking for family entertainment that's low in cost and high in thrills, then Gofer Fun Park just might be your cure for the "there's nothing to do in Columbus blues."

The family-oriented park features go-karts, arcade games, kiddie rides, batting cages, an 18-hole miniature golf course and a restaurant.

"Our goal," said Jane P. Knight, corporate sales and communications director, "is to create memories and magic for all ages. The employees are customer and safety-oriented and the product affordable."

Gofer Fun Park has both indoor and outdoor attractions.

"The indoor Gofer Adventures area offers entertainment for children ages 2 to 11 featuring electric cars, ball crawls, tot play lot, the Gofer Rail, Bumper Boats, Clown Around, Flying Turtles, and numerous arcade games," said Knight.

Outdoors you can find a one quarter multiple go-cart track, which, according to Knight, is the largest in Georgia, a kiddie go-cart track, batting cages and miniature golf.

Gofer Fun park also has several private rooms that can be reserved for birthday parties and banquets. Both individual and group rates are available for the attractions.

Tickets can be purchased individually or a wristband can be purchased that entitles the wearer to unlimited indoor activities and one kiddie go-cart ride for those under 4 feet tall or two regular go-cart rides, two batting tokens and eight arcade tokens for those over 4 feet tall. Members of the military, students and senior citizens receive $1 off the purchase of any ticket and a 10 percent food discount.

Columbus cures 'blues'

Paula J. Randall
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Don't let those "nothing-to-do blues" get you this summer. There's plenty to do and see right here in Columbus.

Georgia's "West Coast" located on the banks of the Chattahoochee River, was planned in the early 1800s and much of its history has been protected and preserved

The following are just some of the city's attractions, many of which are free of charge.

Historic District

You'll enjoy strolls or guided tours of Columbus' 26-block National Register Historic District. The Historic Columbus Foundation conducts guided tours seven days a week of several 19th century homes.

The Columbus Historic District is home to many resurrected and reclaimed homes, some of which are listed in The National Registry of Historic Homes.

Also located in the Historic District, is the home of Dr. John S. Pemberton, the originator of Coca-Cola, and the Center of the Sunbelt South marker.

Uptown Columbus

In Uptown Columbus, jog or take a leisurely stroll on the promenade along the banks of the Chattahoochee River. A Riverfront/Riverwalk project, with restaurants, retail outlets and attractions, is underway.

On Front Avenue is the Columbus Ironworks, which was a Confederate manufacturer of cannons that has been restored as a convention facility. Its South Hall has a display of early equipment and products.

While in the Uptown area, take the Columbus Black Heritage Tour, a self-guided tour of the development of the city's African American community

Trio of museums

The National Infantry Museum, right here on Baltzell Avenue, traces the evolution of the infantry from the French and Indian War through Desert Storm

Or visit the nation's only Confederate Naval Museum The museum has artifacts the remains of two Confederate gunboats — the ironclad Jackson and gunboat Chattahoochee.

You can also plan an afternoon at the Columbus Museum, one of the newest and largest in the state The museum has fine art, sculpture, historical displays, the Chattahoochee Legacy exhibit, and Transformations, a youth-oriented discovery gallery.

ITR saves soldiers money

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Want to plan your dream vacation or just buy an airline ticket but don't know where to go?

You can find a full-service travel agency right on post.

"SATO (Scheduled Airline Ticket Office) has been serving military soldiers and family members at Fort Benning since 1953," said SATO Leisure Travel office Director Linda Guerrero.

SATO offers a full range of travel services, Guerrero said, but at special rates that other agencies cannot get.

Due to the large volume of service, SATO guarantees the lowest applicable airfare at the time of booking and can offer discounts of 50 to 75 percent off of air and cruise tickets depending on the rate structure at the time, she said.

Besides offering individual tickets, SATO can arrange complete vacation packages, including hotel reservations and rental cars, at discount rates.

SATO can also arrange conferences and conventions and offers group travel packages and rates.

Travel Agent Elsie Kindon said that SATO offers a great deal of flexibility to meet your vacation plans.

"We'll work with you to get what you want," she said. "Our number one commitment is quality, personal service."

Kindon recommended making your vacation plans in advance to ensure that you get the best deal. She suggested booking flights at least 14 to 21 days in advance.

Guerrero added that SATO offers some additional benefits to the post by contributing a percentage of each leisure or unofficial travel sale to the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund.

In 1992 more than $132,000 was donated by SATO to MWR, Guerrero said.

The money helps fund and equip the post's recreational facilities such as pools and gyms.

SATO has three separate offices on post.

The Leisure Travel Office, building 247, is located on Ingersoll Street and is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The phone number is 682-0361.

The Airline Ticketing Office, building 2628, is located in Soldiers' Plaza and is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Call 685-4030 for more information.

The Sand Hill Reservation Office, primarily for use basic trainees, is open Monday-Friday from 8 a.m. to 4.30 p.m and can be reached at 687-4900.

Hunt Club keeps good stock

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Perhaps some people at Fort Benning remember when horses were still employed by the post as regular members of the U.S. Army. Today, horses are available to serve soldiers in a different capacity.

With more than 20 miles of winding, wooded trails, the Fort Benning Hunt Club offers rental horses to ride and enjoy.

The club also offers English riding instruction to club members and non-members, with members of the club receiving reduced rates.

According to Debra Rogers, a Hunt Club member and former riding instructor in Colorado, the horses at Fort Benning are some of the best she has ever seen, that are regularly available for rent.

Typically, she said, rental horses are mistreated by their owners and are not of the highest quality.

Diane Page, stable manager, explained that Hunt Club horses are different because "They're treated like they are supposed to be, with tender, loving care."

For horse owners, stable facilities are available for approximately $100 per month.

Non-member riders are charged $10 per hour. Club members are charged $5 per hour.

The Hunt Club is open from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily.

For more information, call 689-3945.

Adventure Island boasts new rides for summer

Adventure Island

Visitors to Tampa's Adventure Island can choose from a wide variety of water attractions, designed to attract thrill seekers and "beach potatoes" alike.

The 22-acre water play park, located only one-quarter mile from Tampa's Busch Gardens, is a destination for both high-speed thrill seekers and those in search of a tranquil float down a meandering river. Amid a tropical backdrop, Adventure Island offers giant speed slides, body flumes, diving platforms, inner tube slides, a wave pool, water games, white sand, beach volleyball courts and more.

Debuting this season is "Fabian's Funport," a children's play area featuring a variety of kid-sized water attractions. Designed for Adventure Island's youngest visitors.

Another recently added attraction is "Calypso Coaster," a high-speed, spiraling adventure down an open flume. Riders in single inner tubes or rafts made for two race down a snake-like 450-foot course before splashing into a pool below.

After the heart-pounding thrills of "Calypso Coaster," riders can relax as they glide leisurely into the gentle "Rambling Bayou." Remaining on their rafts, travelers float slowly down a 1,700-foot river through lush landscaping; encountering a man-made rain forest complete with lush foliage, a waterfall, fog, mist and monsoon rain. "Rambling Bayou" may be perfect for families to enjoy together with their children.

"Caribbean Corkscrew" is a high-speed thrill ride offering a new twist on water fun. Starting atop a four-story tower, riders enter one of two 230-foot-long, fully enclosed translucent tubes and twist through seven corkscrew turns before splashing down in a 47-foot "decelerator" lane.

Adventure Island features a wide variety of speed slides as well. A reported favorite with guests is the "Water Moccasin," a triple-tube slide that propels riders downward through a spiral before splashing them into a pool. Other popular slides are the "Tampa Typhoon," an exhilarating free-fall body slide which drops riders from a seven-story tower, and the "Gulf Scream," which hurls guests down a 210-foot fiberglass slide into a splash pool below.

The sensation of a white water adventure can be found on the "Barratuba," where riders on inner tubes twist and turn down a slick, curvy 450-foot course.

A single admission price of $15.95 plus tax for adults and $13.95 plus tax for children ages 3 to 9 entitles visitors to use all of the park's attractions. Children 2 years and under are admitted free and children 8 years and under must have adult supervision. In addition, a skilled staff of lifeguards supervises the park at all times.

The park is open daily through Sept. 7, and weekends only from Sept. 12 through Oct. 25.

Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, with hours extended during summer and selected holiday periods. The park is closed for the winter season.

Located at 4500 Bougainvillea Ave., eight miles northeast of downtown Tampa, Adventure Island can be reached by taking Busch Boulevard to 40th Street and McKinley Drive, turning north on McKinley to Bougainvillea and east on Bougainvillea to the Adventure Island entrance. Parking is free.

THE FUTURE OF TIME

Firestone stresses car maintenance for safety

Simple, inexpensive safety checks promote safe family traveling, fun

Bridgestone/Firestone, Inc.

While most would-be vacationers might spend the majority of their time planning for rest and relaxation, they might also want to spend time getting their car ready for the drive.

When it comes to vacation time, good automotive and tire maintenance practices often take a backseat to the attention given to securing such items as bathing suits, hiking shoes and travel maps.

Would be vacationers should realize, however, that those travel maps could be useless if you and your family become stranded on some desolate highway. Good tire and automotive maintenance could prevent turning rest and relaxation into real trouble.

Stan Cooper, Firestone's consumer products manager, said a series of simple automotive and tire checks can save a lot of potential worry and unexpected expense for vacationers.

"It's a good idea to have your brakes checked if you haven't done so during the last 15,000 miles," said Cooper. "The brake pads and shoes should be inspected for wear, and the hydraulic system should be checked for leaks."

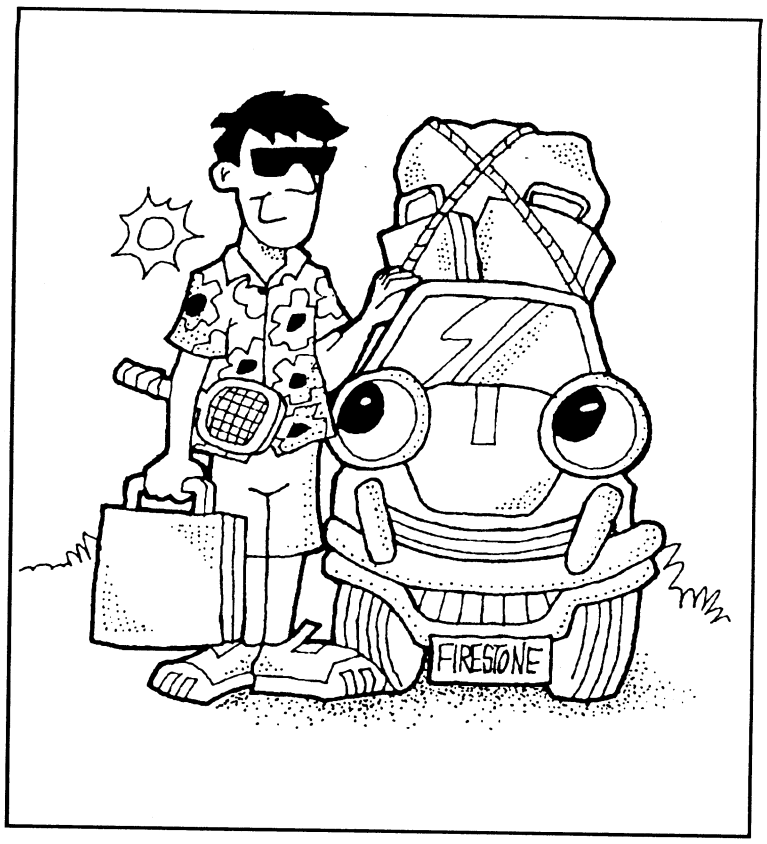
Cooper also recommended that car owners should have the car's suspension checked. This means having the undercarriage looked at for proper wheel alignment and worn parts. If you notice uneven wear on your tires, your suspension is most likely the culprit.

As for tires, it's vitally important to have a safe amount of tread depth for extended trips, Cooper said. According to cooper, a simple test to check adequate tread depth is to insert a penny, with Abraham Lincoln's head downward, into the tire treads. If the top of Lincoln's head is visible, the tire should be replaced.

For those hot temperatures that accompany summer, car owners should also have the antifreeze checked, according to Firestone. Firestone officials said that if the antifreeze is rusty or discolored, it should be replaced. Excessive rust in the cooling system inhibits the engine's ability to cool itself, which can cause your engine to overheat.

The cooling system should also be inspected for potential leaks. Special attention should be given to the radiator and all cooling system hoses. Engine drive belts should be checked for proper tension and possible deterioration. If they slip or break, a driver can be facing a breakdown, according to Firestone.

Fuel economy may be a concern. A properly tuned engine can save up to 20 percent in fuel on a trip. Firestone officials said that changing the oil may also significantly affect an engine's performance.



Officials said that tires must be checked for proper inflation and damage to the tread and sidewall.

Officials said that just a little time devoted to taking care of a car before a trip can leave vacationers with a lot more time to take care of themselves.

Safety takes priority while grilling — use precaution

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Warm weather is the time to get out the old grill for backyard barbecues and picnics at the park.

The following are a few safety tips to help you enjoy these cookouts:

Line the bottom of the clean grill with an inch of ash, gravel or commercial charcoal base to absorb dripping grease and reduce flareups.

Set the grill on a level surface away from low branches, dry brush or other combustibles, including the house or garage.

To start a charcoal fire safely, use wood shavings or charcoal lighter fluid. Follow package directions when using charcoal lighter fluid.

Never substitute gasoline or other combustible liquids. Never add charcoal lighter fluid after The charcoal begins to burn.

Never use the grill indoors. Burning charcoal produces carbon monoxide (an odorless, tasteless, lethal gas).

Keep pets and children away from charcoal grills to eliminate the danger of their touching the grill or accidently pushing it over on someone.

Keep sharp instruments out of reach of small children. When passing knives and forks to other persons, keep the point turned away from them. Use proper equipment to prevent burns such as a pair of heavy-type potholders, a long-handled spatula or fork, and a pair of long tongs.

Wear safe clothing. Avoid dangling ties and shirttails that could easily brush against the fire. Keep other combustibles away from the grill. Keep a garden hose ready for use in case of fires outside the grill. After cookouts, drench fire with water and promptly dispose of soaked ashes in a metal trash container.

Backyard barbecues and picnics can be a very enjoyable part of outdoor fun. It will stay fun for you and your family with the safe use of charcoal grills. Remember, you are out to barbecue the hamburgers not the chef.

Outdoor safety makes summertime more fun

Safety precautions make recreation fun more secure, enjoyable

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Sunshine and the long hours of daylight increase our urge for outdoor recreational activities. A day off or weekends can bring recreation, adventure and excitement. They can also bring fatigue, sickness, sunburn and injury if we are not careful.

Many of these activities are hazardous. To think that all the hazards can be eliminated is unrealistic. However, there is much a person can do to recognize the dangers involved.

Safe activity is far more enjoyable for all concerned. Here are some of the more hazardous activities and safety tips necessary for full enjoyment of picnicking and camping:

Prepare food requiring little refrigeration. Avoid foods which spoil easily.

In selecting the picnic or camping site, look for the obvious hazards. If there are any, inform the rest of your party. This is especially important for the children .

Take a supply of drinking water so it won't be necessary to drink water that might be contaminated.

Take a first aid kit along. Include necessary items for treating cuts, burns and snake bite. Insect repellent should also be included.

If planning a cookout, take along a pair of heavy gloves, hot pads or such items necessary for handling hot cooking implements.

The place to build a camp fire should be free of leaves, dry branches, sticks or other material that can easily catch fire.

Use paper, small kindling or approved igniter fluid to start fires.

Never use gasoline or other highly flammable material.

Knives, hatchets and other sharp instruments should be kept off the ground and stored in a safe place out of children's reach.

Don't leave fires unattended. Completely extinguish fire when leaving so there will be no danger of it being fanned to life again.

Army officials: wear proper gear

U.S. Army Safety Center, Fort Rucker, Ala.

According to Army safety officials, it is a good time to brush up on bike safety.

Each year, nearly 900 bicyclists are killed in collisions with motor vehicles, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. Another 300 cyclists are killed in accidents in parks, on bike paths and in driveways. In addition to the fatalities, more than a million bicycle injuries are treated annually.

About a third of the cyclists killed in motor vehicle crashes are between the ages of 5 and 15. The fatality rate for this age group is more than 2 1/2 times greater than the fatality rate for older cyclists.

Parents, as well as children, often think of bicycles as toys, but they are not. Bikes are a form of transportation and are subject to the same rules of the road as any other vehicle. For this reason, knowledge and skill in operating a bike are critical to the bicyclist's safety. Some bicyclists, particularly young ones, are not familiar with either the rules or the hazards of the road. There is, however, plenty of protection available.

Helmets are a must

Three out of four bicycle deaths are due to head injury. Studies have shown that using bicycle helmets can reduce head injuries by up to 85 percent. Parents must insist that children wear helmets at all times while riding. Parents should also wear helmets.

A bicycle helmet should fit snugly but comfortably atop the head. Parents should not purchase a helmet as something a child will "grow into." Helmets are available with different thicknesses of internal padding to help in proper fit. The helmet must have a chin strap and buckles that will stay securely fastened.

There are two nationally recognized safety standards for bicycle helmets sold in the United States: the Snell Memorial Foundation requirements or the American National Safety Institute requirements. Helmets meeting those requirements will be so labeled.

Clothing provides riding protection

In addition to a helmet, riders should wear the proper clothing. Clothing should be of light color and marked with reflective materials for riding at night. Vests, jackets, tape, wrist bands, and other items that make the rider visible to motorists are widely available.

Clothing should be close fitting to avoid getting caught in the moving parts of the bicycle. Headphones should never be worn, as they hinder the rider's ability to hear traffic.

Bike, equipment must fit the rider

Make certain that the bike is the correct size for the person, is safely maintained and has reflectors. Consumer Product Safety Commission regulations require reflectors on the front and rear of the bicycle, on the pedals and on the wheels. Front and rear lights on the bicycle improve nighttime visibility of the cyclist and increase the bicycle's visibility for other road users. Lights may be required by law in some places.

Rules of the road

When riding in the road, cyclists must obey traffic laws that apply to motor vehicle operators (for example, driving with traffic). Children must be taught these rules of the road.

Young children should not ride at night, and children under age 9 should not ride in the road, as they do not have the skills to identify and avoid dangerous traffic situations. Bicyclists should ride single file and signal their intentions to other road users, including pedestrians. Children should be taught to look left-right-left when entering the road or crossing an intersection.

Many bicycle deaths and injuries can be prevented through proper education and training. Parents and teachers play a major role in educating children in proper behavior and techniques. Motorists can and should be alert to bicyclists, especially in school zones and residential areas.

Boaters stay aware of summer storms — and live

By Mark E. Thomas
Outdoor Notebook

Even experienced boaters sometimes get caught by sudden summer storms. The high winds that result can provide a truly treacherous situation. The difference between getting home safely and becoming another tragic statistic can be summed up in two short words—staying aware.

The boating experts at the Brunswick Marine Group offer the following advice to help you do just that.

The most frightening aspect of summer storms is their ability to mobilize energy in a great big hurry. At one moment you may be fishing under turquoise blue skies. And then, before you realize what's happening, those tranquil horizons have turned black and you're in trouble.

And it's not just beginners who taste this unpredictable wrath. Several years ago a freak storm struck a Texas lake hosting a professional bass tournament. Hundreds of seasoned boaters were caught unaware. Frantic tournament officials were forced to wait until the following morning to discover that all the participants had survived.

The deception is caused by afternoon heating. Boaters know that hot weather produces cloud buildup over large bodies of water. If we ran for the ramp every time a big dark thunder head arose, prime fishing hours would be sacrificed.

So it's necessary to learn the difference between storms and summer showers. Usually, major storms move against the wind. If you see a wall of turbulence rumbling upwind, head for cover.

Unfortunately storms are tricky. Some move faster than others, and sometimes prevailing conditions allow a real whopper to form right over your head.

If you're surprised by a summer storm, seek shelter immediately. Anchor behind an island, bridge or beach your boat wherever possible.

And if you're forced to run through high winds, try to quarter your boat into those big waves that result. Most of all, keep cool. Panic will always be your biggest enemy.

And one other thing. Choose a boat that is seaworthy, and one that includes the latest safety options as a part of the total purchase package.

Next, consider enrolling in a Coast Guard Auxiliary boating course. Auxiliary volunteers will help you equip your boat for maximum safety, and they'll pass along tips and techniques that focus on survival.

Most of all remember that a well designed and responsibly manufactured boat, can be a friend for life . . . and may just save your life when those freak summer storms howl across the horizon.

Callaway makes dreams come true

Callaway Gardens

Cason J. Callaway said he believed the most interesting ideas are "conceived in superlatives, big in scope, impressive in appearance and in some way connected with the improvement of mankind." He and his wife Virginia had many dreams, according to Callaway Gardens officials, and on May 21, 1952, when the gates of Callaway Gardens opened to the public, one of their dreams came true.

Now, at the 40th anniversary of Callaway Gardens, Cason and Virginia Callaway are still making dreams come true — the dreams of visitors.

Set on 12,000 acres, Callaway Gardens includes outstanding horticultural displays accompanied by world-class golf, tennis, fishing, water sports, fine dining and lodging. More than 750,000 people from all over the United States visit this Mobil Four-Star resort annually.

Continuously developed over the last 40 years, Callaway Gardens is now a year-round recreational haven and gardener's delight, with 2,500 acres of cultivated foliage. The John A. Sibley Horticultural Center is one of the most advanced indoor-outdoor garden and greenhouse complexes in the world. Callaway Gardens' walking trails and roadways showcase the world largest display of hollies, more than 700 varieties of azaleas and endless varieties of wildflowers. An Mr. Cason's Vegetable Garden produces more than 400 varieties of vegetables, fruits and herbs, and also serves as the setting of the PBS television show, the Victory Garden South. The Cecil B. Day Butterfly Center, the largest glass-enclosed butterfly conservatory in North America, is the newest addition to Callaway Gardens.

Callaway Gardens' five-star tennis center has been ranked by Tennis Magazine as one of the top 50 tennis resorts in the nation. Racquetball, a lake-side jogging trail and a state-of the art fitness center are also available.

Robin Lake Beach, 65 acres of refreshing water and white sand, is the site for exciting activities such as the Florida State University's "Flying High" Circus, the Masters Water Ski Tournament and Callaway Gardens' Summer Recreation Program. And if hunting is what visitors are looking forward to, the 1,000-acre hunting preserve and Gun Club rounds out the list of sporting adventures at Callaway Gardens.

The Education Department, staffed by professional horticulturists, naturalists and many volunteers, help to further Virginia and Cason Callaway's vision of having their garden "provide better understanding of the living world."

With a full schedule of courses, workshops and demonstrations, the Education Department is the outreach arm of Callaway Gardens and hold hundreds of programs each year to which visitors return again and again.

Accommodations at the resort range from simple rooms at the Callaway Gardens Inn to secluded Country Cottages and deluxe lodgings in the Mountain Creek Villas. Dining is delicious at one of seven unique restaurants, with menus ranging from Southern buffets to Continental cuisine. And full-service meeting facilities and services attract hundreds of groups of all sizes to Callaway Gardens for conferences and corporate retreats.

All profits from Callaway Gardens Resort, Inc., which operates the recreational, lodging and retail facilities, go to support the Ida Cason Callaway Foundation.

Although the Callaways might not recognize their beloved garden, they would be proud of its impact on more than 20 million visitors in 40 years. Cason Callaway once said, "Every child ought to see something beautiful before he's six years old — something he will remember all his life."

Callaway Gardens has provided that first glimpse of beauty to an endless parade of people of all ages.

Meloy Hall honors hero

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center in 1953, Gen. Guy S. Meloy, was acknowledged for his military accomplishments Sept. 28 when Fort Benning's Building 6 was dedicated in his memory.

Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White termed Meloy Hall "a beautiful structure to honor a hero."

Meloy graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1927, retired from the Army in 1963 and died in 1968. For his services during World War II, he was awarded the Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with one oak leaf cluster and an Army Commendation Medal. While serving in Korea, he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and the Purple Heart for heroism in action near Taejon.

Col. Patrick Kenny, director of Public Works, said the completion of the building is the finalization of the project that brought the School of the Americas to Fort Benning.

Also honored in dedication ceremonies were two members of the civilian work force, George Heberling and Ray Miller.

David Flo, director of Resource Management, said Heberling, for whom a vestibule was named, was the first civilian to serve as comptroller of a military post.

Heberling retired as the Fort Benning director of Resource Management in 1983 after 34 years of government service. He died in 1987.

Flo noted that one of Heberling's greatest desires was to have a building such as Meloy Hall dedicated to the civilian work force on post.

"It is fitting, therefore, to dedicate a part of a building at Fort Benning to someone who gave so much to it," said Flo.

Dale Ellis, director of Logistics, told of Ray Miller's accomplishments. Miller, for whom the second floor landing was named, retired as cheif of Ordnance at Fort Benning in 1961 ater 43 years of service. He died in 1978.

It was Miller who redesigned a tank for better vision when Gen. George S. Patton came to him with a request.

Ellis added that Miller had also been credited with the development of some 200 other major items that included the modification of the M-1 rifle to a grenade launcher.

Attending the event were numerous members of the Meloy family including Meloy's sons, Maj. Gen. Sandy Meloy and Col. John Meloy, both retired.

Also on hand was Heberling's wife, Kathryn.

CFC drive begins

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

With a gross payroll in excess of $60 million a month, Fort Benning should be capable of meeting the challenge to reach the Combined Federal Campaign goal of $500,000, said Brig. Gen. John Hendrix, deputy commanding general, at the CFC kickoff Monday at the Follow Me Golf Course.

Hendrix also told commanders, directors, their sergeants major and project officers that the best time to work on this is the first few weeks following the kickoff when awareness is high.

"We are all morally committed to this campaign," he said, and noted that a combined effort on post will continue a tradition of support to the tri-community area of Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City.

Governed by an independent board to provide support equitably, the Fort Benning Soldier and Family Support Association allots funds to such causes as the Post Red Cross, the Lending Closet, the Supplemental Food Locker, Volunteer Services, Youth and Handicapped Programs, Chaplains' Enlisted Outreach, Post Community Improvement, Child Care Provider Certification, Dental Health and the Family Unit Network Center.

Sal Diaz-Verson, the 1992 local United Way Campaign chairman, noted that the mission of his office is to give any support Fort Benning might need during this drive.

"You have a realistic goal of $500,000 with a good team to help you get there," he said. "I look forward to seeing you at the end and meeting that goal."

Col. Burnet R. Quick, chief of staff, concluded the remarks saying, "Let's get out there and get to work."

National Fire Prevention Week starts Sunday

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"Test Your Detector — It's Sound Advice" is the theme designated by the National Fire Protection Association for Fire Prevention Week, Sunday through Oct. 10, and the Fort Benning Fire Prevention and Protection Division will be celebrating with a variety of activities.

According to Raymond Xuereb, assistant chief of Fire Prevention, puppet shows will be presented at all of the elementary schools on post Monday to Oct. 9, featuring such topics as how to cool a burn, knowing where the fire exits are, fire escape plans, microwave safety, etc.

Aimed at the kindergartners through third-graders, the fire prevention programs will also include a hands-on look at a fire truck, a demonstration on how firefighters dress out to go to a fire and handouts with fire safety information.

In addition to the schools, there will be a static display on fire prevention in Infantry Hall and open houses with equipment displays at all fire stations on post during daytime business hours.

Xuereb said the most deadly fires occur when people are sleeping, thus the focus of this year's theme. That's why it is important to have smoke detectors, which are in all of the office buildings, barracks and quarters on post, and why each family should have a home fire escape plan, he said.

> Knowing what to do may mean the difference between life and death.
>
> —Raymond Xuereb
> Fire Prevention

For occupants to find out how to test the particular kind of smoke detectors in their quarters, they should contact the Fire Prevention office on post at 544-1220 and ask for one of the fire inspectors.

"Also, knowing what to do in case a fire does break out may mean the difference between life and death because speed is of utmost importance in escaping fire," he said.

Unfortunately, not everyone has the instinct to run from a burning home. Sometimes children panic and hide under beds or in closets or try to look for other family members in the house, he said.

Every family member should know not to try these actions, but rather make noise that will sound an alarm to the rest of the house, then use a planned escape route or an alternate one, and meet at a pre-arranged location outdoors, he added.

Xuereb noted that time should not be wasted getting dressed or collecting prized possessions.

Also, every family member should know how to test a door. If panels or the knob are warm, the door should be kept closed and the alternate route used. If not, a foot and hip should be braced against the door, and it should be opened cautiously to prevent super-heated air from blowing it open. If no hot air or smoke enters, it is probably safe to pass through.

If it is necessary to stay in a room, place towels or clothes in the door cracks and stay near a slightly-opened window. To reach the other side of a smoke-filled room, crawl with your head about 18 inches above the floor. Hang a sheet outside the window to signal for help.

Once outside, no one should go back in, he said.

Xuereb recommended holding practice drills periodically.

"These drills are well worth the effort to know that you and your family have a better than average chance of surviving a home fire," he said.

Film reminds us to think safety first

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Just finished watching my favorite SAEDA film, "The Partnership." For those of you who don't know, SAEDA stands for Subversion and Espionage directed against the Army.

The film was a rerun, but hey, don't I watch reruns almost every night of the year on television?

I like "The Partnership' because it starts off with the good guys eating pizza and the bad guy playing the role of a journalist.

I mean isn't pizza THE food for spy-busters? "Okay Mac, as soon as we finish off our sausage and pepperoni, we'll bust that commie spy."

Then there's the spy, playing the part of a journalist. But not too realistically, I hasten to add. This one drives cadillacs, drinks Chivas Regal and, get this, gives away money. A real journalist never gives away money. I don't care how helpful someone is with an article.

First, real journalists don't have money to give away. Second, it's against their basic nature to give it away.

Art Buchwald might drive a cadillac, but he's not a real journalist.

COMMENTARY

William Buckley might drink Chivas Regal, but he's not a real journalist.

Real journalists drive cars like 1976 Pontiac clunkers. The frame has more bondo than sheet metal, the muffler's hanging by a wire coat hanger and at least one headlight is out.

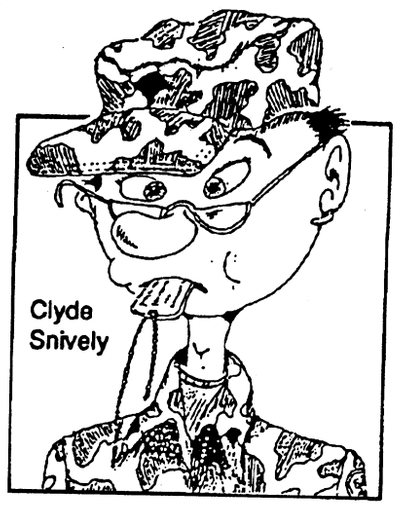
Real journalists drink beer.

Another clue is, real journalists don't wear $200 suits. Their men's wear comes from J.C. Penney and have shiny spots where the fabric's worn thin.

Real journalists, in fact, are probably worse off, financially, than an Army specialist with four years' service.

So if you ever get offered money by a supposed journalist, sound the alarm, get the security manager, dial toll free (800) CALL-SPY (you aren't calling spies at this number, but calling to report them).

Some of you are probably saying things like "Hey, Clyde, give me a break. Spies? Haven't you heard, there ain't no more Soviet Union, no more Communist menace; all is right with the world."



Guess again, oatmeal brain.

Ever hear of industrial espionage? The folks in the Eastern Block would love to know what we're up to. And don't forget the French, the Israelis, the Germans and the Japanese, our supposed allies and friends.

It's safe to assume that every country in the world has spies in the United States with the possible exception of Britain and Canada.

So we're not out of the woods yet.

If you're ever approached by a journalist (with or without an accent, with or without a cadillac, be he a beer drinker or a Chivas Regal drinker) and who starts talking about items that have anything to do with sensitive information, your antennae should immediately start tingling, your sensors should tell you that "something's not right."

I can assure you, you won't meet anyone from The Bayonet staff asking questions about anything sensitive and if someone from the downtown media does, give the Public Affairs Office a jingle at 545-3438.

You might think we at Fort Benning don't have anything worth bothering a spy over, but one can never tell.

Some seemingly innocent piece of information might be a small part in a much bigger puzzle, something that might unlock the puzzle that provides key information to some agent.

And oh, by the way, spies come in other shapes and forms besides journalists.

Journalists are a good cover because everyone knows how snoopy and nosy they are but your local computer repairer could be an agent, so could your plumber, local drug dealer, insurance agent and even the guy in the baggy clothes or your lover (even if the film said these last two categories are on the way out).

I do know spies are a lot smarter than me and it's much better to be safe than sorry.

LETTERS

I have stood my ground for more than 100 years. I have shaded thousands of soldiers through two world wars, Korean Conflict, Vietnam and Desert Storm.

I have survived wind, storm, hail, snow and extreme drought. During droughts, I have been endowed by my creator a means of survival by watering part of my limbs and allowing others to die.

These dead limbs were recently trimmed, but I was very much alive and capable of fulfilling my place of beauty and history.

However, I have been declared unsightly and must be destroyed. By whom, School of the Americas?

Where is the voice of my protectors? Where were the Americans when they came with the axes and saws? These I could not fight against.

The Old Oak Tree at Building 35 (Deceased)

It's sad that we lose our beautiful old trees just because a few people don't like them. What right do they have to demand destruction of what belongs to us?

Jean Miller
Range, Roads and Grounds
Directorate of Public Works

While we don't like to cut down trees, sometimes it is necessary.

In some cases, the trees are in danger of falling and causing damage to property or to people. In other cases the trees are dead or diseased.

Others have lost their beauty and the area is better served by removing the tree; that was the situation with the tree at the School of the Americas.

We always try to use good judgment when removing trees, particularly the stately oaks.

CG asks post to enforce fire safety

Sunday through Oct. 10 marks this year's Fire Prevention Week.

Fire Prevention Week is sponsored every year by the National Fire Protection Association to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education. Fire Prevention Week was proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, which killed 250 people, left 100,000 homeless and destroyed more than 17,400 buildings.

The greatest number of fatal home fires occur between midnight and 4 a.m. when most of us are asleep. Fires that occur during this time are most deadly because they can go undetected. While fire prevention is of paramount importance, it is just as vital to know how to escape safely if fire strikes. In a fire situation, having a smoke detector in good working order can mean the difference between life or death.

I urge all military and civilian personnel to support your Fire Department during Fire Prevention Week and all year long by following this year's theme "Test Your Detector — It's Sound Advice."

What can you do to protect yourself and your family in case fire strikes? Plan a family walk through of your home making sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire and what kind of dangers to look for. You can take positive action to protect your family by testing your smoke detector weekly, locating and eliminating fire hazards and being prepared in case of fire.

The Fort Benning Fire Department has scheduled several events during this week to emphasize the importance of fire prevention to include a fire safety display at Infantry Hall, puppet shows at all post schools and open house at all post fire stations.

For complete home fire safety information, call the post Fire Department at 545-2883, 545-1967, 544-1220 or 545-3964.

Drunk drivers a danger on road

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Each year as many as 24,000 people die in alcohol-related accidents, including drivers, passengers and pedestrians.

To avoid becoming a victim, watch for drivers who:

- Drift or weave.
- Speed or drive too slowly.
- Give inconsistent signals.
- Brake erratically.
- Stop without apparent cause.
- Accelerate or slow down rapidly.
- Drive with his or her head out the window or with the window down in winter.
- Drive into opposing or crossing traffic.
- Drive with tires on lane markers.
- Respond slowly to traffic signals.
- Almost strike an object, pedestrian or other vehicle.
- Make unusually wide turns.
- Drive on the shoulder or the roadside.
- Tailgate.
- Turn abruptly or illegally.
- Drive with the headlights off in the dark.

If you see a driver under the influence, take these precautions to protect yourself and your passengers:

If the driver is ahead of you, follow at a safe distance. If the driver is behind you, turn right at the nearest intersection and let the driver pass before resuming your trip.

If the driver approaches you, quickly slow down as you move to the right and stop. This will help you avoid a head-on collision. If possible, sound your horn or flash your lights.

When you approach an intersection, slow down and be ready for the unexpected. Look both ways and be prepared to take evasive action, especially at night.

Above all, make sure you and your passengers are buckled up, small children are in approved safety seats and your doors are locked.

Post kicks off CFC

The 1992 Combined Federal Campaign will be conducted at Fort Benning and in other federal government activities in the area through Nov. 20.

This campaign solicits monetary support for more than 900 humanitarian agencies through a single appeal. This combined effort affords each of us a chance to assist local, state, national and international activities that support both our military and civilian communities.

Every year, through the Soldier and Family Support Association, this campaign provides thousands of dollars for Fort Benning's health, welfare and youth activities.

The goal for this year's campaign is $500,000. This goal can be attained by the whole-hearted participation of all federal employees through a fair share system of giving.

Generosity and concern for others have always symbolized those who serve in the U.S. government. Let us continue this tradition.

All personnel are urged to support these deserving agencies by giving generously to the 1992 Combined Federal Campaign.

What is the 'Gateway to Care' program?

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital is one of the original 11 Army hospitals participating in a new coordinated care program designed to "work smarter," to give beneficiaries improved access and better health care despite declining resources.

The program is called Gateway To Care. Gateway To Care is an interim program as the Army and the Department of Defense establish a coordinated-care system.

"Coordinated care" means that beneficiaries — instead of determining their own health-care needs and making their own arrangements, as they largely had to do in the past — will have expert "guardian angels" to guide them and oversee their care.

Martin Army Community Hospital has begun improving patient access and specialty care referral sources. It has negotiated with the CHAMPUS Select Preferred Provider Network, a group of approximately 65 local civilian practitioners. CHAMPUS stands for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services.

Preferred Provider Networks will make it easier and cheaper for patients to "go downtown" for care when need be.

These improvements will enable the hospital to provide:

•Better care. Each family participating in Gateway to Care is assigned to a small group of primary-care providers. Each family member will always see one of these people for primary care, so patients and providers get to know each other.

The primary-care giver is the "guardian angel," following patients' care fully and continuously. He or she personally approves all tests and procedures. This ensures that patients get the quality care they need ... and no tests or procedures they don't need. To ensure that patients receive quality care, Preferred Provider Network members must prove they meet the same high standards as Army providers.

•More convenience for patients. Phone consultations with physicians or nurses reduce the need for clinic visits. If a clinic visit is needed, a phone consultant determines what kind (routine or same-day appointment or emergency room).

Most retirees and their families have not been able to use the Family Practice Clinic, but have been receiving care at the Outpatient or PRIMUS clinics, which do not provide on-going treatment.

To help rectify this situation, the PRIMUS clinic will be converted into a family practice clinic after Feb. 1, when a new contract comes into effect. Most retirees will be assigned to the new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic.

Some retirees already assigned to family practice at the hospital may be asked to transfer to the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. This will be determined on a case-by-case basis, and patients will have an opportunity to appeal any decisions.

Approximately 16,000 patients will be assigned to the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic, which will include retiree and active duty families.

Additionally, new health care finders will work with patients on a one-to-one basis to coordinate medical appointments when care is not available at the hospital. This may involve getting an appointment at another military treatment facility or at one of the local preferred providers. The health care finders will work with patients to identify the most cost effective source of health care for the patient and the government.

•Less costly care. Gateway to Care patients will save money several ways. First, primary care is given in hospital clinics and the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic, where it is less costly than using CHAMPUS. Second, because a primary-care giver must approve all treatment, patients may avoid CHAMPUS deductibles and copayments for unnecessary services. Third, CHAMPUS copayments are lower than standard CHAMPUS when beneficiaries utilize the Preferred Provider Network.

According to Lt. Col. Charles Bottoms, chief of Coordinated Care at the hospital, there is neither a penalty for choosing not to participate in the program nor is there a penalty for leaving the program.

However, non-participants will not be eligible for the benefits of the program. For example, they will not be eligible for continuity of care through one of the family practice clinics.

During October, the hospital will hold briefings to explain Gateway to Care and answer questions from retirees and their families. The retiree briefings will be in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, Building 4, from 6 to 7:30 p.m. Oct. 13, 15, 20, 22, 27 and 29.

Retirees may attend the briefing of their choice. They will be asked to make a decision about joining the program at that time. Briefings are being set up through the military units on post for active duty soldiers and their families.

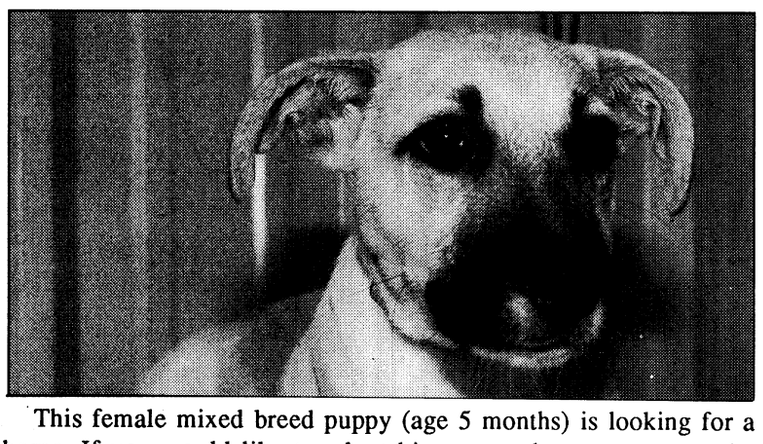
PET OF THE WEEK



This female mixed breed puppy (age 5 months) is looking for a home. If you would like to adopt him or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Army Career and Alumni Program expands

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

The Army Career and Alumni Program is offering a new service.

Funded by the U.S. Department of Education through a grant awarded to Fort Valley College, the Educational Opportunity Center is now open to soldiers 19 and older who are getting out of the military and need some guidance on colleges, majors and financial assistance anywhere in the United States.

According to Ted Craig, ACAP Transition Services manager for the Southeast Region, this service is designed to help the 15 percent that ACAP surveys show leave the Army wanting to go to school full time right away.

David Sutcliffe and Jean Oliver are the community service specialists providing this service to Fort Benning every Wednesday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Building 2634 in Soldiers' Plaza.

Sutcliffe said the objective of the Educational Opportunity Center is to offer counseling on such subjects as how to acquire a general education diploma, preparation for the Scholastic Aptitude Test for college and occupational information on what jobs to get with what degrees. Also available are financial assistance data and forms on scholarships, grants and loans available, and statistics on majors offered at 1,723 two-year, 1,709 four-year, and 1,816 graduate and professional schools throughout the United States.

Craig said that through this service, ACAP hopes to have soldiers who plan to pursue schooling registered and ready to begin classes by the time they leave the military.

Set up as a test site at Fort Benning, the Educational Opportunity Center concept will be repeated throughout the Southeast Region if it is successful here, he said.

This region includes Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida and Puerto Rico.

Craig stressed the importance of schooling for making soldiers more marketable in the civilian world.

"A soldier is drug-free, knows how to be a team member and is capable of taking orders — all valuable skills," he said. "However, there is no replacement for education."

Sutcliffe said there are about 64 EOCs across the nation, and four counselors (two in Columbus, one in Americus and one in Fort Valley) serve a 14-county area out of the Fort Valley College office.

He and Oliver travel throughout Muscogee, Chattahoochee, Schley, Webster and Marion counties in Georgia.

The grant administered by Fort Valley College, which funds the local program, is a three-year one, but it may be extended, he said.

Putting together a soldier with the right school and major, in the location of choice for an affordable cost, is the challenge taken on by these specialists, he said.

3rd Brigade teams bring out big guns

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's football program is in full force.

Here is a wrap-up of three games played Sept. 25 at Essebagger Field No. 2.

Company B, 324th Forward Support Battalion, (Badgers) vs. 519th Personnel Services Company.

Badger quarterback Kevin Williams threw three touchdown passes to Malcolm McEwen, Lorenzo Busby and Jason Fink to lead the Badgers to a 24-12 win over the 519th. Fink also returned the second-half kickoff for a 50-yard touchdown.

The 519th, playing shorthanded, watched replacement quarterback Roderick Fairchild throw one touchdown pass to wide receiver Clifford Smith and return a kick 79 yards for six points to keep the game close.

Battery A, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, (Gigolos) vs. Battery C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, (Charlie Dogs).

The Gigolos ran their record to 4-0 with a close 7-0 win over the Charlie Dogs.

Quarterback Joel Clobert hit wide receiver Arthur Gaines III with the only score of the game on a long bomb late in the second half. The extra-point try catch was caught by Vernon Walker. Safety Kevin Baines had an interception late in the game for the Charlie Dogs.

The Gigolos, in running their unbeaten record to 4-0, have kept all opponents scoreless.

Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, (Red Dawgs) vs. Battery B, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, (Bravo Bulls).

The Red Dawgs upped their record to 3-1 with a 12-2 victory over the Bravo Bulls.

Red Dawg running back Kevin Sidbury scored one touchdown on an option play and Phillip Norman caught a touchdown pass on a flea flicker pass play from wide receiver Larry Hart off a lateral from quarterback Curtis Taylor.

The Bulls got their only points of the game on a bad snap in the end zone by the Red Dawgs resulting in a safety and two points.

The Red Dawg defense kept the Bulls off the scoreboard the rest of the way with interceptions by Taylor, cornerback Sheldon Hughes and safety Ronnie Ellington.

In the "B" flight, first place went to Terry Eisminger, Ben Franklin, Steve Lewis and Mark Arispe with a score of 71.

Don't cross that bridge

Outboard Marine Corporation

If you're searching for the one spot on any lake that nearly always holds some bass, look no farther than the nearest bridge. Somewhere along one or more of the pilings, you'll find fish.

That has been the experience of Cliff Craft, a Georgia-based bass tournament pro and a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff. A former guide on Lake Lanier, Craft often took his clients to the various bridges crossing the lake to catch bass.

"From late spring until early autumn, bass will suspend around bridge pilings," said Craft. "The bridges provide shade and cooler temperatures, and there are usually plenty of baitfish around, too.

"There is also a depth change at most bridges where it crosses a creek or river channel," Craft continued. "Bass everywhere relate to depth changes, but it seems to be especially critical in the summer."

There is no set rule on which pilings are the most likely to hold bass, so Craft suggested starting at the piling closest to the edge of the channel and working from there toward the shoreline.

"One of the best lures to find and catch bridge bass is a one-eighth-ounce leadhead jig hook with a two or three-inch plastic worm," said Craft.

"Just cast it right beside a piling and count it down to a certain depth, then slowly swim it back to the boat," he said.

"Start by counting the jig down to about 10 feet. Then, if nothing hits, count it down to 15 feet and continue exploring different depths until you start getting hits. Remember the depth, because you could find an entire school of bass around one piling."

The Georgia pro suggested concentrating along the edges and back of the pilings rather than in front.

The reason is that logs, limbs and other debris are often lodged on the upstream side of each piling and lures cast into such a mess are seldom retrieved.

"Early in the morning, bass may often be found closer to the shoreline around the rock riprap, but as the sun gets brighter the bass gradually move farther and farther out on the different pilings," he explained.

"When they're shallow, these fish may hit a crankbait, spinnerbait, or even a topwater buzz bait; but, when they're deeper, the easiest and fastest way to catch them is with a light jig. Just count it down and then swim it slowly back to you."

Craft usually fishes the jigs with light spinning tackle and six or eight-pound test line.

Honduran cadets get a kick from sport

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The Honduran Cadet Course at the School of the Americas left its mark on the school and the Columbus area by their feats of athletic prowess.

From soccer to volleyball and even long-distance running, the cadets showed that ability and a lot of practice can produce results.

According to Capt. Paul A. Rudesheim, company commander for Company A, School Battalion, School of the Americas, the Hondurans were all between the ages of 18 and 21, and their success came as a result of working as a team.

This was especially evident during their many soccer matches.

The school hosted a soccer tournament from July 16 to 19 and the Hondurans won the championship at Doughboy Stadium beating the students from El Salvador 6-0.

Then the Honduran students decided to up the ante by taking on some local talent.

The Columbus United Soccer Team, an all-star team of players from the Columbus Youth Soccer Association, visited Doughboy stadium Aug. 17 to play the cadets.

The Hondurans found themselves having to adjust their game to make up for the aggressive style of their opponents and eventually lost the game 4-2.

According to Rudesheim, the cadets displayed more teamwork the second time they met their Columbus opponents.

The second match found the cadets playing their own brand of soccer, which Rudesheim called "technicaly proficient," and won 3-2.

As a result of their games against Columbus United, Rudesheim has been trying to get the school a slot in the Georgia Soccer Association (overall league for teams throughout Georgia) for an all-star team or teams from countries that send students to SOA during the soccer season.

The Hondurans also beat a team of visiting Chilean cadets 3-1 in a soccer match at Doughboy Stadium.

Soccer, however, wasn't the only sport the cadets tried.

Four Honduran cadets also showed their ability to run long distance during the Country's Barbecue Midnight Run in August.

Ulises Monida Pineda, Rony Reyes Torres, Fabricio Rubi Pineda and Miguel Maldonado all finished in the top 20, out of a field of hundreds who took part in the race.

Using their competitive spirit and teamwork, the Honduran cadets were successful not only in their training, but in their time off as well.

'Minors' are now a major deal

By Hank Aaron
PM Editorial Services

A few years ago, you couldn't give minor-league franchises away. Games were poorly attended and teams lost money year after year. Many of the stadiums were old, run-down and considered eyesores in their towns.

That has all changed. Attendance at minor-league games is setting records. Franchises are selling for unheard-of prices and there are a lot more would-be team owners than teams available for purchase.

All of this has happened despite the number of games on television. In fact, I think television has indirectly helped the popularity of minor league games. The increased exposure of baseball has helped create a new generation of fans around the country.

People in cities that don't have major-league ballclubs can go out and support the local team in addition to watching their favorite major-league team on television.

In some instances, owners can make more money in the minor leagues than they do by owning a major-league club. Minor-league teams don't have million-dollar players, and they don't have to fill 50,000-seat stadiums. It's a good deal for the fans too, in that they can take the family to see a baseball game for a very reasonable price.

The major leagues also are using their minor-league affiliates in new ways. It is now common, for example, for injured players to be sent to the minors as a part of their rehabilitation.

This is good for everyone. A major-league ballclub benefits because the player will be getting himself back in shape and will return to the big leagues ready to contribute. For the minor-league team, having a real major-leaguer in the lineup helps attendance.

Twenty years ago, proven major league players would have balked at going to the minors, even following an injury. Now there is so much money involved in sports that a player would be foolish to resist a team's suggestion that he continue his rehabilitation in the minors. Nowadays, players have multi-year contracts with guaranteed payments, so there is no cause to worry that a brief trip to the minors will result in a pay cut.

My team, the Atlanta Braves, has eight minor-league teams, three of which play only a 60-game schedule. The others have a full season of more than 100 games.

Many minor-league teams are independently owned and have a player development contract with a big-league club. The Braves are rare in that they own most of their minor-league teams.

There is no better sign of how healthy baseball is these days than the thriving minor leagues, with cities competing for franchises and new stadiums being built.

Editor's Note: Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, he is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

1/29th Inf. conducts CALFEX

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment hosted a Combined Arms Live Fire Exercise at Cactus Observation Post Sept. 17.

The CALFEX was conducted by soldiers from both the 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 29th Infantry Regiment; 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division; and the 34th Medical Battalion.

Opening remarks were made by Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, assistant commandant of the U.S. Army Infantry School.

Attendees were students from the Infantry Officers Advanced Course, the Air War College and members of the Pioneer Subchapter of the Association of the United States Army. The members represented Hooters, J.C. Pennys, Club 2000, Weathers Brothers, Chick-Fil-A, Chapman's and Olympic Health Spa.

The exercise was divided into two parts. The first part was a capabilities exercise that demonstrated the accuracy and firepower of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle; M-1 Abrams main battle tank; M-901 improved tube-launched, optically-tracked, wire-guided vehicle; M-106 mortar carrier and the U.S. Army Sniper Team.

The second part of the exercise was designed for the Infantry Officers Advanced Course students. At that point, the soldiers demonstrated the effects that combined arms weapons systems have against the enemy.

"The exercise offers some good training," said Spc. Bruno Browning of Company D, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, "and a chance for people to see us train."

Following the CALFEX, the guests viewed a static display consisting of the weapons systems used during the exercise. Non-commissioned officer subject matter experts were on hand to brief the guests on their particular weapons systems technical characteristics.

80th Div. trains for future

By Kimberly A. Darling
80th Division (Training)

Reservists training initial entry soldiers for Infantry One Station Unit Training at Fort Benning is nothing new. Reservists from the 12 training Reserve component division regularly displace active duty battalions for a few weeks during the 13-week cycle.

But, for the first time in Fort Benning's history, Reservists from one division are displacing a battalion to conduct the training for the entire Infantry One Station Unit Training cycle, under the Training Base Expansion concept.

Members from the 80th Division (Training), which is headquartered in Richmond, Va., arrived in July to conduct the infantry OSUT instruction for three companies of initial-entry soldiers.

"This training has been challenging for the drill sergeants from the active and Reserve component as well as for the soldiers," said Lt. Col. Gary Dacey, commander of the 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry.

In addition to the four Reserve drill sergeants, each platoon has one active component drill sergeant to provide continuity and another to provide someone to assess training.

While the 80th Division drill sergeants do the planning and training, their active duty counterparts, including platoon sergeants, first sergeants and company commanders, are responsible for the safety of the assessing their Reserve counterparts and helping them improve.

"All of that increases their responsibility," said Capt. Angel DeSantiago, Company B commander.

The transition does occur, Dacey said.

"The Reserve drills have demonstrated civilian leadership skills and techniques that have added variety and flavor," he said. "I sat in on one class where a drill sergeant taught the soldiers by playing a game similar to to Simon says. Another taught a class as if he was preaching in a revival. He had the soldiers shouting and learning all at the same time. In both cases the soldiers had a little fun and learned something as well. I think a few of the active duty drills may have been a little impressed."

While the Reserve soldiers have practiced the Fort Benning program of instruction all year long, they have not had some of the vital training aids and other resources necessary to get hands-on training on the equipment they are supposed to teach.

"We have had to get our hands-on training on the Automated Information Management System since we got here," said Capt. Phil Showers, the Reserve commander of Company B. The Reserve units had received instruction, but did not have access to the system.

"We also don't have access to the Marksmanship Arcade Computer System, the computer program that helps soldiers improve their basic rifle marksmanship. Our first exposure to these systems was when we were training soldiers how to use them, or had to use them ourselves."

Other challenges the active battalion has had to contend with is having a whole new group of Reservists to work with every two weeks.

"I will have worked with eight company commanders, 16 drill sergeants, eight battalion commanders, and several other staff members from the 80th Division by the time this training is over with," said Capt. Jim Petro, Company A commander. "That often means answering the same questions, for every group that comes through. Sometimes I feel like saying, 'Haven't I already answered that question?'"

Petro said one way he and his drill sergeants cope is to maintain a sense of humor and not get wrapped around the axle. "That is a little easier for some of the more seasoned drill sergeants," Petro said. "But for some of the newer ones, it is frustrating."

Another challenge for the Reserve division members has been learning the non-program-of-instruction ways of doing things at Fort Benning.

"There are lots of things we have to do to conduct this cycle that are not in the program of instruction," said commander of the 1st Battalion, 318th Regiment, 1st Brigade, Lt. Col. William W. Taney. "Those kind of things have given us the most problems. We have to learn a new way of doing things with every installation we go to."

Like the future of many active component units, the fate of some Reserve component units is in question, Taney said.

"But if being trained to standard is the deciding factor in who survives and who doesn't, this battalion is going to do what ever it takes to be trained, disciplined, and ready," Taney said.

"If and when we're mobilized, members of the 80th Division, with the assistance of its Fort Benning counterparts, whoever that may be at the time, are training to be ready."

As challenging and even as difficult as rotating members of the Reserve in and out of an active duty battalion may be, members of both the active and Reserve component staffs agree that this training is a critical part of the overall readiness of the Reserve force.

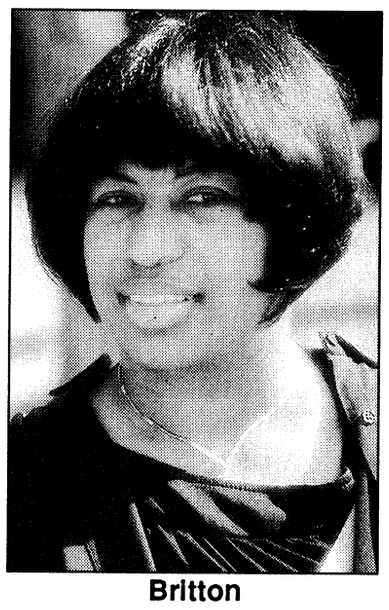
Ft. Benning employee covers the spectrum

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer



Britton

Her reviews of entertainment and cultural events appear under the name Va Ebron; her paychecks are issued to Clara V. Britton; but her name for herself is Virginia Britton.

Multiple names seem appropriate for this woman of multiple talents. Britton, recently awarded a certificate of appreciation for her 25 years as a dental assistant for Dental Clinic No.1, has also won awards for her artistic renderings in pastels and watercolor paints.

Britton attributes her success to God. "He gave me some talent for things that I also enjoy," Britton said. "I'm lucky to enjoy the things that I'm good at, but the credit is his."

Britton, who since childhood has been interested in writing, acting, painting and drawing, draws inspiration from daily life, she said, and her work depicts subjects from nature to fantasy.

Her interests in the arts range from paintings in various mediums to poetry and theater, which she participates in locally.

Of her years of working with the Army, Britton said, "For the most part, I've enjoyed it. I really like the people — the thing about the military is you know there will always be new and interesting people coming along."

It takes one to know one.

This child's a winner

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Seven-year-old Cheryl Cray, a second-grade student at White Elementary School and the daughter of Lt. Col. John C. and Kathy Cray, is one of the top 10 winners of the Just Kid 'in jingle.

She received a $50 Columbus Square Mall Gift Certificate and will appear in a Just Kid'in television commercial.

A videotape was made of her singing and dancing to the Just Kid'in jingle along with her 4-year-old brother, John. Both were called back for the finals Sunday.

Cheryl's father is commander of the 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

OF THE TWO, TODAY'S WARFIGHTER IS BETTER PREPARED TO DEAL WITH THE THREAT ON THE LEFT.

MDMSC: Smart choices for tough decisions.

Sand, earth and timber. These are the makings of the common bunker. They've been around for centuries, but surprisingly, today's warfighter still has no easy way to defeat these obstacles.

What is needed is a Bunker Defeat Munition (BDM). This weapon will offer the stand-off capability to immediately defeat and destroy battlefield obstacles, including enemy earth and timber fortifications, masonry walls and light armor.

Now, McDonnell Douglas Missile Systems Company (MDMSC) and Talley Defense Systems have a bunker buster munition that offers just what is needed—the SMAW-D (Shoulder-launched Multipurpose Assault Weapon-Disposable). The SMAW-D is lightweight, compact, disposable and most of all, lethal. In short, the SMAW-D is the best way for today's warfighter to effectively deal with everything from the newest weaponry to the oldest obstacles on the battlefield.

Lecture explores forms of discipline

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Parenting is difficult; and, while adults worry they won't always respond perfectly, if they have thought things out ahead of time and don't act impulsively, their responses won't be harmful.

This sums up remarks made by Dr. Barbara Howard, the first of five speakers in a lecture series on "Talks About Young Children" sponsored by the Fort Benning Schools.

Howard spoke Sept. 23 at Herbert J. Dexter School to Fort Benning parents, child-care givers and educators about the "Emotional Development of Young Children and Discipline for Them."

"There is nothing we care about more than the health and development of our children," she said. "Helping them to become productive citizens is a major root of their being happy."

Dr. Howard said she believes that promoting a child's sense of being lovable and capable is done through discipline.

She noted that early on discipline is the structure that one sets up for a child's life to help them fit in happily and effectively. Children detect what those rules are by "banging up against them" here and there in their family life.

It is usually the mother who takes the major impact of children experimenting with those rules. She said that statistics say that children up to age 5 are three times more aggressive with their mothers because she is someone they trust not to lose easily.

The components of discipline include:

• establishing routines in which a child finds security,

• acting as a model for your child in the things that you do,

• giving instruction as to what the rules are,

• knowing that you should have progressive expectations of your child learning little by little from doing things over and over,

• providing choices for a child that are within reason to you,

• offering rewards for compliant behavior,

• establishing a relationship with your children so that they want to please you, because by age 5, they have incorporated your values,

• using role-taking opportunities to teach the social impact of certain behavior.

Howard

Howard believes that discipline does not have to include physical punishment. She said it is negative reinforcement that lacks instruction, comes off as a form of revenge to the child and oftentimes is merely a way for adults to relieve their own tension.

The only advantage to it is that it usually stops undesirable behavior immediately.

If it is going to be used, parents should be in agreement ahead of time as to its use. Then one spank on the hand or buttocks should be sufficient.

She also recommends logical consequence punishment:

• something that is meaningfully related to the offense,

• keeping in mind that shorter consequences are better for shorter attention spans with this age group,

• prompt action after the undesirable behavior,

• conducted in private manner respectful of the child's self-esteem.

• and mean it emotionally because you can't just be a friend when a child needs a parent to show the way.

To feel lovable, Howard said, the child must be paid attention to when the need is there. It is a safety mechanism for them to know that someone is always watching out for them.

They also want to be listened to, thanked and apologized to, like anyone else.

Finally, parents must be willing to follow up with their body language to get children to do what they're told if there is no action after the first request.

"We're trying to be more democratic than authoritarian as was the last generation by allowing our kids to be more capable and not as afraid of us," she said. "It's a tricky balance, but our children will be better off for it in the end."

Howard is a behavioral and developmental pediatrician at Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.

In addition to teaching, she has had a private practice doing family counseling for 13 years.

She completed her undergraduate work at Cornell University, earned her medical degree from Johns Hopkins University and served her residency and fellowship at Harvard University, where she trained with Dr. T. Barry Brazelton.

The next speaker in the lecture series will be Dr. John Piper of Bowling Green State University on "Self Esteem: Parental Actions to Help Build Positive Self-Esteem in Young Children."

Scout supports Santa's Castle as part of Eagle Scout project

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Santa's Castle may not receive funds from such places as the Combined Federal Campaign, but it has the support of a variety of units on post — and Brian Morgan.

Morgan, 14, is a Boy Scout from Fort Benning's Troop 27, who chose helping Santa's Castle acquire toys for this Christmas as his Eagle Scout project.

First, he asked X-press Printers at Main Street Village in Columbus to print flyers explaining his efforts to collect toys.

Then he, 15 other scouts and six adults went door to door, covering 578 sets of officers' quarters in the Main Post housing areas, distributing the fliers and heart-shaped stickers, which donors were to put on their doors if they had something to give.

The following weekend, the scouts went back and collected some 500 toys, the entire project involving about 100 volunteer hours.

Monday, Morgan and other scouts presented the toys from the effort to Santa's Castle. About 100 were new; the rest were used toys in very good condition, said Sharon Patton, chairwoman for Santa's Castle.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Brian Morgan (center) and other Troop 27 members deliver to Santa's Castle some of the toys collected.

DARE teaches parents

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Faith Middle School is sponsoring a Drug Abuse Resistance Education Parents' Evening Thursday at 7 p.m. in the school's cafeteria.

The special DARE meeting will give sixth grade students an opportunity to meet the instructor, Lt. Col. W.L. Jackson, and hear some of the Faith students talk about what they have learned in their classes.

DARE is sponsored by the Military Police Activity and Benning schools.

This is the fifth year for the program that has been used in the elementary and middle schools. DARE emphasizes developing the student skills to recognize and resist the social pressures to experiment with alcohol, tobacco and drugs.

Classes include lectures, videos and role-playing in which students express their views on peer pressure and substance use. The purpose of the program is to get students to help and support each other with the difficult decisions they face every day.

DARE parents' evening is an important part of the program, according to school officials. Students learn they can depend on the "Triangle of Care," which is school, police and parents.

Parent support can make all the difference in helping students resist experimenting with substances that can harm them, and the DARE parents' evening is a good chance to get involved with your child's education, school officials said.

COMMISSARY CORNER

Fort Benning Commissary

The Fort Benning Commissary is celebrating the first anniversary of being under the Defense Commissary Agency umbrella with a special sale during October.

The sale will feature more than 800 different items at discounts of 20 percent to 60 percent below the normal Commissary price. A full range of products, including health and beauty aids, beverages, cereals, frozen foods, pet foods, candies and other products, will be available.

Customers who need help in locating an item or have a question, suggestion or comment can contact a Customer Service Support Team member on the sales floor.

The Commissary is continuing its "Hurricane Relief" drive for the victims of Hurricane Andrew. Place nonperishable items in the containers located near the exit doors at the front of the store.

Halloween treats are available now and a candy display is near the entrance.

In addition to the annual worldwide sales, DeCA regions conduct their own monthly sales that feature discounts for customers on many items throughout the store.

DeCA officially assumed responsibility for the Department of Defense Commissary System Thursday. During its first year of operation, the agency made a commitment to enhance the Commissary by providing products at the lowest possible prices for shoppers, officials said.

The agency gave customers longer store hours through a reinvestment of nearly $15 million of savings realized from consolidation of overhead functions above the Commissary store level, according to officials.

Benning schools celebrate Hispanic Month

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning Schools concluded their Hispanic Month celebration with two final events.

A class of fourth-graders, along with a buddy class of kindergarten students, held a fiesta at Dexter School Wednesday at 1 p.m.

The fourth-grade students researched native customs and foods from South American countries and had planned activities and a menu for the fiesta.

Two Dexter School parents visited a fifth-grade class in native costumes with displays, artifacts and a presentation for fourth- and fifth-graders.

Displays, murals, research, and a variety of special programs throughout the school system made Hispanic Month a part of the instruction for Fort Benning students in social studies, language arts and mathematics.

Parents are VIPs at Wilbur

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Wilbur Elementary School has a new program, the VIP, or Very Involved Parent Program. The program, which meets each Wednesday between 9:10 and 10:10 a.m., brings Wilbur School parents into classrooms on a weekly basis to work side by side on classroom assignments and activities with their children.

The VIP Program is designed to actively involve parents, increase communication between the home and school, enhance the self-concept of students and parents, and increase student achievement. The year-long program continues to gain momentum as more and more parents take advantage of the opportunity to become active participants in the education of their children.

Wilbur's VIP program began two weeks ago. The first two sessions were information sessions for parents: topics were student learning styles, student self-concept and student achievement.

The third session will provide parents with an overview of the program and will furnish demonstrations of strategies that parents can use in the classroom and at home when they work with their children.

While most VIP sessions will be spent entirely in student classrooms, additional parent information sessions will also be scheduled sporadically throughout the year during the VIP time.

Units must monitor oil levels of collection tanks

Units are reminded that oil collection tanks, from oil/water separators that are part of vehicle wash racks, must be monitored daily to determine oil levels.

When tanks are three-quarters full, units must contact Charles Sanders at 545-4749 or 545-4232 to have waste oil pumped. Monitoring is a manual process requiring the units to verify the level of the oil either visually or by stick measure.

If the oil tanks are filled too much, an oil spill could result, which is a direct violation of the Clean Water Act. Units will be held responsible for the subsequent cleanup and disposal costs. The cost for disposal is $1.85 per pound. For more information, call 545-4749 or 545-4232.

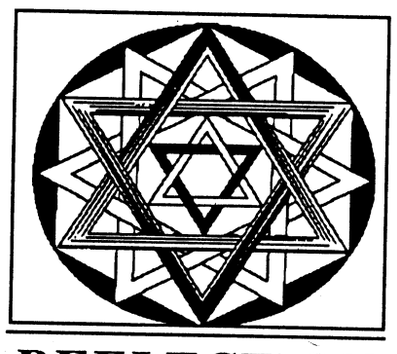
Yom Kippur, 'the holiest day,' approaches

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

On Rosh Hashanah, it is written; on Yom Kippur, it is sealed.

So says the Jewish liturgy in the special prayer book called mahzor used on the high holy days. The 10-day period of repentance begun with Rosh Hashanah Sept. 27 culminates in Yom Kippur, the most holy and solemn day of the entire Jewish year.

This year, it begins on the evening of Oct. 6 with a service called Kol Nidre. The melody of Kol Nidre, a prayer composed in the days of the Spanish Inquisition and made famous by Al Jolson and



REFLECTION

Neil Diamond, captures the heart of the people in synagogue. They feel the awesome power of the day and the frightening nearness of God. This is the moment of truth. This is the day of reckoning.

Today your fate is being sealed in the Book of Life. Today judgment is being made — who shall live and who shall die, who shall know peace and who shall be troubled, who shall prosper and who shall be needy.

On Yom Kippur, Jews are forbidden from doing a number of things. They are not allowed to work as on the Sabbath. Plus, they are forbidden from eating, drinking, wearing perfumes or leather, swimming and sex.

In short, anything that is a joy and a pleasure, anything that elevates our status and sense of well-being is denied on Yom Kippur for a full 24 hours.

This further reinforces the importance of the day, and it allows us to concentrate fully on the need for prayer and repentance.

By being denied pleasurable things, we are reduced to an humble lowly position acknowledging the supreme power of God and our own relative insignificance.

Yom Kippur is a tough day, but it is not a day without hope. For at the close of the day, when everyone cannot wait for a sip of juice or a taste of bread, when emotions are drained and patience is worn thin, the shofar (ram's horn) is blown one last time.

At the end of the day, we have a service called Neilah meaning the locking. We imagine the gates of heaven being closed and locked, the Book of Life being sealed with our fates inside. And at the last possible minute when the sun has almost totally set, we blow the shofar one more time to push our prayers through the gate.

When we blow the shofar, we remind God of Abraham who demonstrated his complete faith in God and was about to sacrifice Isaac and sacrificed a ram instead. We also remind God that we were the people that God brought out of Egypt to reveal his commandments on Mount Sinai. The shofar was blown loud, long and strong when the Ten Commandments were given.

The Jewish people today, being the descendants of Abraham and Isaac and the Israelites who stood at Mount Sinai, remind God of this through the shofar blast with the hope of a similar judgment. With fasting and prayer, confession and repentance, we hope to avert a stern decree and gain a judgment of life for this year and years to come. And we pray that all will have a year of health, happiness, prosperity and most of all, peace.

Gabriele Sonnenberg

Prayer meeting

Chaplain (Capt.) Paul Buck and his wife, Jane, attend the monthly charismatic prayer meeting at the Infantry Center Chapel. The next service, open to all who are interested, will be Sunday from 6 to 7:30 p.m.

Service to unite Christians

By Ruben Colon
USAIC Chaplains' Office

World Communion will be celebrated Sunday. It is a tradition in which Christians are invited to live outside of themselves and join the family of God. Its purpose is to bring together, for a sacred moment, the community of Christendom.

The idea of World Communion Sunday first originated in 1936 by the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America. It was planned so that other denominations could use it to express a bond of fellowship with Christians around the world.

In 1967, the National Council of Churches accepted responsibility for World Communion Sunday. From this beginning, it was planned that any denomination could participate. Intercommunion was not contemplated and joint services were never encouraged. However, Holy Communion was celebrated in each church according to its own practice. It was suggested that congregations try to have all of their members present at the Lord's table on this day.

Today in churches where it is observed, World Communion Sunday has become an important event. Often, attendance is as great as on Easter or Christmas. The first Sunday in October is used simply because most congregations initiate their church activities and programs for the year.

Through the observance of this special day, there is a heightened sense of congregational fellowship and a strong emphasis on each congregation being part of a world-wide fellowship. The Holy Communion table stretches out 25,000 miles, and millions of members from different denominations gathered at the Lord's table as one, to recall Christ's request — "Do this in remembrance of me," (Luke 22:19).

The vast multitude of Christian believers represent many different races, customs, languages and nations. But in spite of such differences, their common loyalty to Jesus Christ as the saviour gives Christians a sense of belonging to a larger community of brothers and sisters as people united under God.

In the words of the psalmist, "Behold, how good and pleasant it is when brothers and sisters dwell in unity." Psalm 133.

Dragon Lady likes role in 'Reasonable Doubts'

By Kate O'Hare
Tribune Media Services

Kay Lenz really likes her character on NBC's "Reasonable Doubts." "She's pretty ruthless. I love it."

SPOTLIGHT

After years of being the sympathetic victim in many TV movies and series episodes, Lenz gets to strut her stuff as sharp defense lawyer Maggie Zombro, described in network materials as a "high-priced dragon lady." "I don't know if I should take it personally," she says, "but as I'm getting older I'm getting these tough roles. I wonder if that's because ... people think I'm getting tougher as I get older."

Fans of Lenz's earlier work may be surprised by Zombro, a definite switch for an actress who was a mainstay of television films and one-hour dramas during the '70s and '80s. Even as recently as a few years ago, Lenz won an Emmy for her portrayal of a woman with AIDS on "Midnight Caller." "I started working in movies of the week, which are, most of the time, (about) somebody in a sympathetic situation, a victim of some kind. Also, episodic television at the time was predominantly doctor/lawyer/cop shows, and if you were a guest on them, you had to be in jeopardy. You had to be in a place where you had to be defended, rescued or cured. So for the bulk of my work in the beginning, I was pregnant, dying of cancer or had been raped."

Although Lenz has won two Emmys and had five nominations, she has never appeared regularly in a TV series until now. "For years I wouldn't even consider one ... One of the problems for me in doing a series is that they hand you one script, 70 pages, 60 pages. They say to you, 'Read this script, and based on this 60 pages, tell us whether you will give us the next 5 1/2 years of your life.' My analogy is like deciding over the phone whether you will marry somebody. It's very difficult to make a decision based on so little information. I was never comfortable doing that. You're really at their mercy, whatever they write for you. You can complain about it, you can do it under protest, but you have to do it."

In the case of "Reasonable Doubts," Lenz knew executive producer Bob Singer and had worked with him on other projects, including "Midnight Caller." She trusted his taste and his commitment to quality, and she got to ease into "Reasonable Doubts" an episode at a time. "When this show came on, I knew I'd guest on it at some point. I did a two-part series last November, then the producer left a note for me to meet him in the editing bay. I went in and he said, 'We're bringing you back in January.' Then in January, I stayed back. I did seven more episodes. It's not like they said, 'We'd like you for the next seven episodes.' Every week the writers would come on the set and say, 'Oh God, I've written a great scene for you in the next episode.' I'd go home, call my agent and say, 'I'm working in the next episode.' "

After so long as a full-time free-lancer, Lenz is enjoying the strange sensation of having a steady job. "Since 20 years ago this August, I've been working and paying my bills. I've never done a television series in all this time. This is the first one, so, yes, indeed it is very odd to know that for the next nine months I have a place to go. More importantly, for the next nine months I have a paycheck. That's unbelievable to me. I am so grateful to be working, it doesn't feel restrictive at all."

Little has been revealed on the show about Maggie Zombro's background, except that her mother was a victim of spouse abuse, and that young Maggie had defended herself against attempted abuse. Because she is now a regular on the show, Lenz is avoiding trying to fill in Maggie's blank spaces, but admits, 'I did tell the writers, maybe she listens to heavy metal, or maybe her apartment is all done up in stuffed animals, just the antithesis of what we see. But we are going to see her apartment this year." Are there going to be any romances? "Not yet, but is one coming. Either she was burned in the past, or she shut down very early because of the situation with her father and never let anyone come in."

Museum traces military history

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Indian arrowheads, 400-year-old Spanish armor and a Confederate sword manufactured in Columbus are just some of the many items featured in a special exhibit by the National Infantry Museum.

Titled "Military Heritage of the Chattahoochee Valley: 1492 to 1992," the exhibit was officially opened with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Wednesday .

Museum Curator Frank Hanner said that it is the museum's contribution to Columbus' quincentennial celebration of Christopher Columbus' discovery of the new world.

"I want to extend my thanks to all of the individuals and institutions that took the time to help me put the display together," he said. "It was a long and arduous process that involved a tremendous amount of research and talent."

The exhibit features original art work, weapons, uniforms and photographs that trace the military history of the Chattahoochee Valley.

Hanner said he hopes those who view the exhibit will walk away with a sense of what a rich and diverse military heritage the Chattahoochee Valley area has — a heritage that dates from hundreds of years before the establishment of Camp Benning in 1918.

"Indians here battled each other long before the Europeans came," he said.

Hanner added that the military legacy continues.

"Soldiers from this area continue to serve and make important contributions. The fact that three Medal of Honor winners are from this area is evidence of that. It shows that this area is well endowed with history, and this gives those who live here a sense of pride and accomplishment."

"Military Heritage of the Chattahoochee Valley" is located on the museum's first floor and will continue through March 15.

Museum hours are Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m and on weekends from 12:30 to 4:30 p.m. The museum is closed on federal holidays that fall on Monday, which includes Columbus Day, Oct. 12.

Columbus prepares to toot its horn for quincentennial

Uptown Business Association

Columbus will get a chance to toot is own horn and maybe even make the Guinness Book of World Records all at the same time.

"Toot Your Horn Columbus," an official Quincentennial event will be Oct. 12. The Kazoo Band Parade will be an opportunity for anyone to be a part of what officials hope will be the largest kazoo band ever! Ten thousand kazoos will be on sale by area merchants.

Not only will people from all over the area be playing kazoos, they will be accompanied by all the Columbus high school bands. People of all ages are encouraged to participate, officials said. This is an event for everyone: businesses, including family members; churches; organizations; and individuals of all ages.

The parade participants will meet at Golden Park at 5 p.m. During this time, the Infantry Band will be entertaining during formation of the parade.

The parade will begin when the command exhibition parachute team, The Silver Wings, land in Golden Park and hand the lead kazoo to the grand marshal of the parade.

From the Oglethorpe Bridge, the parade will proceed up Broadway to the riverfront area where it will join the many other festivities for this 500th birthday.

There will be three performance stages — The Nina, The Pinta and the Santa Maria. Two stages will be located on Broadway and one at the riverfront.

Music will include jazz, country and western, and rock 'n' roll.

There will also be dance groups performing clogging and square dancing. Mr. Magic, Mel Chaffee, and his magical friends from the Fountain City Magic Club will be at the Children's Corner on Broadway.

Later in the evening, Up With People will be in concert from 7:30 to 8:30. The Bob Barr Community Band will assist in the dedication of the riverfront.

From that vantage point, all will see a fireworks display co-sponsored by the Phenix City/Russell County Chamber of Commerce. The site of the fireworks will be the Dillingham Street Bridge.

The festivities will culminate with a street dance from 9 p.m. to midnight on Broadway.

There will be free parking at the Municipal Auditorium, and shuttle buses will carry people to the activities.

For more information, contact Bobbie Schladensky at 571-6096.

Test your TV trivia with this quiz

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

In some cases, rival networks have developed TV movies on the same subjects and shown them rather close to each other.

The latest topic to get such treatment is the "fatal-attraction" homicide case that fueled last month's ABC drama "A Murderous Affair: The Carolyn Warmus Story" and also is the focus of Sunday's new CBS version, "Danger of Love."

Here's a quiz on some similar situations of the past:

QUESTIONS

1) Instant-recall question: Name the actress who played Carolyn Warmus in last month's ABC film.

2) In 1988, Andrew Robinson and Victor Garber portrayed the same entertainer in respective ABC and CBS biographies that aired within a week of each other. Exactly who did they play?

3) The love story of Prince Charles and Lady Diana was dramatized in two 1982 films, but "The Royal Romance of Charles and Diana" was the only one to yield a true star, since the female lead went on to TV-series fame. Name her.

4) The siege by Israeli commandos to free hostages at Uganda's Entebbe Airport was the subject of two mid-1970's projects. What feature-film star made his TV-movie debut as the commander of the soldiers in 1977's "Raid on Entebbe"?

5) Name the two actresses who both played the same woman, who couldn't believe her son was involved in a murder plot against her, in CBS' "Honor Thy Mother" and NBC's "Cruel Doubt" last season.

6) "At Mother's Request" told the same story as "Nutcracker: Money, Madness and Murder" in 1987. In each case, who played the woman who tried to convince her sons to kill her wealthy father?

New video releases hit the stores

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

(Ratings for each film begin with a "star" rating — one star meaning "poor," four meaning "excellent" — followed by the Motion Picture Association of America rating, and then by a family-viewing guide, the key for which appears below.)

Starting this week (new movie releases):

"Gladiator" (Columbia/Tri-Star, $94.95): Grueling action in the boxing ring drives this action drama, which features James ("Twin Peaks") Marshall and Cuba ("Boyz N the Hood") Gooding Jr. as very athletic friends who suddenly find themselves opposing each other, via the machinations of a crafty fight ptomoter (a notably slimmed-down Brian Dennehy). Robert Loggia and Ossie Davis also star.  (R: AS, P, V)

"Straight Talk" (Hollywood, $94.95): The irrepressible Dolly Parton gets a big showcase for her persona in this comedy, playing a backwoods lady who lucks into a job as a Chicago radio advice-show host. Pretending to be the psychology expert who was expected, she finds her ruse threatened by a curious reporter (James Woods); Griffin Dunne and Jay ("Love and War") Thomas also are featured.  (PG: AS, P)

"The Graduate: 25th Anniversary Edition" (New Line, $19.95): Dustin Hoffman soared to stardom in Oscar-winning director Mike Nichols' brilliant 1967 satire — now letterbox-formatted, with a "making-of" featurette — that finds a college grad seduced by one of his parents' best friends (Anne Bancroft), then enamored of her daughter (Katharine Ross). The Simon and Garfunkel score is great. * (PG: AS, P, V)

"Afterburn" (HBO, $89.99): Laura Dern was a recent Emmy nominee for her performance in this well-done drama, originally shown during the summer on pay-cable's HBO and based on the true story of Janet Harduvel, who campaigned to prove that the death of her Air Force pilot husband (played by Vincent Spano) was not caused by any error of his during a flight. Robert Loggia portrays her lawyer.  (R: AS, P)

"Children of the Night" (Columbia/Tri-Star, $89.95): Those "children" actually are vampires in the case of this thriller, but they're not the only ones ... since Karen Black, who's appeared in a number of horror outings in recent years, plays another blood-drinker linked with her daughter (Ami Dolenz, daughter of Micky of The Monkees) as they seek fresh prey. Peter DeLuise co-stars.  (R: AS, P, V)

"Christmas in Connecticut" (Turner, $89.98): Arnold Schwarzenegger directed this remake of the 1945 classic, originally shown earlier this year on cable's TNT, and featuring Dyan Cannon as a TV personality who offers household tips ... though she really has no background in them herself. Her cover could be blown when she falls for a holiday guest (Kris Kristofferson); Tony Curtis also stars.  (Not rated: P)

"Cold Heaven" (Hemdale, $92.95): In a largely psychological melodrama that was directed by her husband, Nicolas ("The Man Who Fell to Earth") Roeg, Theresa Russell stars as a woman whose life is stuck in a limbo of sorts when her husband (Mark Harmon) keeps appearing — even though he supposedly drowned — and prevents her from becoming newly involved with others. Talia Shire and James Russo co-star.  (R: AS, P, V)

"High Heels" (Paramount, $89.95): Spanish director Pedro ("Tie Me Up! Tie Me Down!") Almodovar reunited with an actress he employs a lot, Victoria Abril, for this English-subtitled comedy about a rather unusual romantic triangle ... between a woman (Abril), her long-estranged mother (Marisa Paredes) and the daughter's husband (Miguel Bose), who just happens to be one of Mom's former lovers.  (R: AS, P, V)

beat TV's "Going to Extremes" by filming on location in Jamaica first. Julie T. Wallace — who starred in the acclaimed British production "The Lives and Loves of a She-Devil" — plays a lusty tourist who stumbles into a reclusive islander's (Paul Campbell) self-styled atmosphere.  (R: AS, P, V)

"Snakeeater III ... his law" (Paramount, $89.95): Now starring in the syndicated TV series "Renegade," Lorenzo Lamas has had a good deal of video success with this adventure saga about a law-enforcer who lives by his own credo, thereby inspiring this third edition. Here, he's after the ruthless gang of bikers responsible for the savage beating of a young lady, with fists and bullets flying.  (R: AS, P, V)

Held over (recent movie releases):

"The Double Life of Veronique" (Miramax, $89.95): Actress Irene Jacob truly does lead dual lives in Polish director Krzysztof Kieslowski's acclaimed drama — which earned the star a Cannes Film Festival award — about two very similar women, right down to the same birthdate, who have an innate knowledge of one another ... even though they've never met. The film is presented with English subtitles.  (R: AS, P)

"One False Move" (Columbia/Tri-Star, $89.95): The object of much critical acclaim very recently, actor-turned-director Carl Franklin's melodrama follows the trail of drug dealers who become the targets of Arizona policemen after they ambush a family. Made on the proverbial shoestring budget — but packing plenty of power — the film features Bill Paxton, Cynda Williams and Billy Bob Thornton.  (R: AS, P, V)

"A Woman Under the Influence" (Touchstone, $94.99): Long overdue for its video debut, this much-praised 1974 drama launches a series of releases directed by the late actor-filmmaker John Cassavetes. His wife Gena Rowlands plays the "woman" of the title, a lady having severe personal troubles and unable to discuss them with her husband (Peter Falk), who loves her but cannot deal with her problems.  (R: AS, P)

"Hard Promises" (Columbia/ Tri-Star, $92.86): Sissy Spacek stars in director Martin Davidson's comedy-drama as a woman who has a big surprise for her husband (played by William Petersen, who also co-produced the film): She's divorced him, and she's about to marry another man (Brian Kerwin), a move that her first spouse does everything in his power to thwart. Mare Winningham also is featured.  (PG: AS, P)

"Leaving Normal" (MCA/ Universal, $94.98): "Glory" director and "thirtysomething" mentor Edward Zwick's ladies-on-the-road comedy-drama is a kinder and gentler "Thelma & Louise," with Christine Lahti and Meg ("The Big Chill") Tilly as dissimilar women with a common goal ... to get as far away from their established lives as possible. Filmmaker Sydney Pollack served as executive producer.  (R: AS, P, V)

"Omen IV: The Awakening" (Fox, $89.98): A full decade after the last theatrical-film chapter ("The Final Conflict"), the horror saga was revived by this TV-movie originally broadcast by Fox. It changes the gender of the youngster who's at the heart of the chills, since this time, it's a girl (Asia Vieira) who acts like a devil; Faye Grant and Michael Woods play her adoptive parents.  (Not rated: AS, P, V)

Family Viewing Guide Key: AS, adult situations; N, nudity; P, profanity; V, violence; GV, particularly graphic violence.

Isiah Thomas helps youths stay in school

By Matt Meachem
Tribune Media Services

"I think for too long now in the inner city, people have told the kids that athletics is their only escape from the ghetto ... when that's not true."

So says Detroit Pistons basketball star Isiah Thomas, who insists, "You should be able to go to school and escape from the ghetto." To illustrate that point, Thomas has a featured role in "Higher Goals," a PBS special airing this month. (Check local listings for exact time and date.) The 30-minute special offers young people, who dream of a career in professional sports, a new perspective on the importance of getting an education.

Having left Indiana University after his sophomore season to join the NBA in 1981, Thomas received his degree from Indiana in 1987. "I didn't have a choice, it was (the insistence of) my mother," recalls Thomas. "I was coerced, so I went back and finished school and got my degree in criminal justice. I took extension courses and correspondence courses. I went to summer school every year until I finally finished."

"Higher Goals" profiles the true-life struggles of two young basketball players, William Gates and Kim Williams, as they attempt to balance their basketball dreams with the realities of graduating from high school and going on to college. Through their stories, the program shows that the skills of practice and discipline — which stimulate success in sports and other activities — can also be applied to academics.

The program also profiles former DePaul star Skip Dillard, who played for the nationally-ranked Blue Demons from 1980-82. Dillard recently was paroled from Stateville Correctional Center in Joliet, Ill., where he served time after being convicted of armed robbery.

"I knew that basketball was going to be my life," says Dillard. "I was going to be a professional athlete in the NBA." Dillard was, in fact, drafted by the Chicago Bulls in 1982 but cut by the team in rookie camp. "That's when my adventure with drugs started," he recalls, "because I had an 'I don't care' attitude. I had not been successful in my dream, so I really started using drugs heavily. I quit all the jobs I got because I couldn't maintain no job. All I wanted to do was use drugs."

Looking back, Dillard regrets the chance he wasted at DePaul: "It hurts today when I reflect back on it, that I didn't take advantage of my education. It really hurts me."

That is precisely the point Thomas wants to get across to today's young athletes. "The chances of anyone making it to the pros," he explains, "are like walking through the jungle and not getting bit by a mosquito. Talent definitely helps you get noticed and get seen, but talent can only take you so far."

According to Sports Illustrated, 500,000 boys play high-school basketball each year. Of the 14,000 who go on to play intercollegiate ball, fewer than 60 ever play even one season in the NBA. Despite those bleak odds, thousands of youths cherish the dream of making a fast break out of the inner city ... not through an education, but through the elusive dream of an NBA career.

"Sports and education go hand in hand," says Thomas, the Pistons' all-time career scoring leader. "With basketball, you get out on the court and you play and play and play. Then all of a sudden, you get a little good at it, get a little fancier and start doing a few more things. People say, 'Wow! He's really confident,' and you say, 'No, I just know what I'm doing.' School is no different. You just have to take the time to sit down and study."

Dillard has come to that realization. "I would definitely like to go back to school," he says, "and get my 20 hours so I can have my B.A. in physical education. I've come a long way to this point. I know I have a long way to go, but I feel good today. I feel that I have another chance in life."

"Education can open a door of opportunity for everyone," concludes Thomas. "The more I've gotten involved in business dealings, I've come to find that you've basically got a basketball game going on without the ball. It's really identical to being a point guard in business. You've got to know everybody's position. You have to know what they can and can't do. You've got the same factors as in an NBA game ... you're just not putting the ball in the hoop."

Television viewers' questions answered

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Q: I simply love the NBC show "Law & Order." Could you please tell me if Michael Moriarty and Chris Noth are married, when their birthdays are, and where I can write to them?

A: Moriarty is married and Noth isn't, though the latter has been linked in gossip columns with model Beverly Johnson in recent months. Moriarty's birthday ia Apr. 5, and Noth's is Nov. 13 ... so you'll want to get that last card in the mail soon. Though the show is produced by the California-based Universal Television, it's filmed on location in New York, so it makes more sense to send your mail to the actors in care of the network's Manhattan base: NBC, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York, NY 10112. Watch for a new cast regular in the coming weeks, since Paul Sorvino (Noth's current police partner on the series) is departing, to be replaced soon by Jerry ("Dirty Dancing," "The Law and Harry McGraw") Orbach.

Q: What can you tell me about NBC News correspondent Margaret Larson, who recently gave birth to a son? Is she married or divorced? Where is she from?

A: The news anchor on the weekday editions of "Today" since last May, Larson is married to Tim Larson, a free-lance TV producer. Hailing from Lubbock, TX, Larson actually got her first broadcasting job there in the late '70s as a producer and news writer at a local television station. She then went to Shreveport, LA and on to Sacramento, CA ... which provided her a direct path to NBC in 1990, since she worked for the network's affiliate in the latter city as a morning talk-show host and later as an evening newscast anchor. Her pre-"Today" assignments for NBC largely were European-based, since she had been stationed in London and Turkey, and you can write to her in care of the same New York address for NBC given above.

Q: Has Richard Chamberlain retired? He has not appeared in anything since April 1991.

A: To our knowledge, he hasn't announced any official retirement plans ... but it's not that big a surprise to us that he's taking some time off, and probably spending much of it at his home in Hawaii, since he indicated he was thinking of doing so when we spoke with him last year about his TV remake of "The Night of the Hunter" (his last piece of work to date). After appearing in "The Thorn Birds" and many other miniseries during the 1980s — enough to make him the so-called "king" of the genre — he was disappointed in the results of his CBS series "Island Son," both creatively and from a ratings standpoint. Since he also produced that short-lived show, he had said he wanted to hang back a bit and reassess his place in the industry, so we assume that's just what he's doing. With his continuing popularity, rest assured that offers still are being tendered to him, but it's most likely a matter of his finding something he really wants to do.

Q: My friend and I have a bet. I think Rue McClanahan is younger than Betty White, and she thinks Betty White is the younger one. Which one of us is right?

A: You are ... but we've found both of the "Golden Palace" stars so gracious and charming in our own encounters with them, we're certainly not about to make them mad by printing their exact ages here!

DRAGON

Though she is a regular in an ensemble cast, Lenz still has her sight set on projects beyond her work on "Reasonable Doubts." That regular check is a wonderful thing; a little bit of freedom is just as wonderful. "Another thing I really like about this show is I do it, and I have days off. If you're the lead ... you make a lot of money but you have no time to spend it, no time to be with your friends or have your regular life. ... With my part — for example, I'm not in the next episode, so it's possible I could do something else. ... One of the things I like about what I've done so far is the variety, the great variety. I've never been bored. I'm very lucky."

Lending Closet helps with aid of CFC funds

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

As one of several agencies on post that receive funds from the Combined Federal Campaign, the Food Locker has been able to help 384 families since January of this year, according to Alfonso Deane, Army Emergency Relief officer.

Deane said the most common reason soldiers seek help from the Food Locker is that they have just moved to Fort Benning; and, because of advance pay for the move or casual pay taken, they find themselves one payday with "no pay due."

Deane said that just by showing an identification card and filling out a form, soldiers can receive the usual two to three days worth of food the first time they come to the Food Locker.

After that, they must go through their units and have a referral from their company commanders.

Staple foods at the Food Locker include canned vegetables and fruits, dry cereal, meat, tuna, macaroni, rice, coffee, tea, peanut butter, jelly, soup, dry milk, flour, condiments and infant formula and baby food.

Deane said that those who request help three times within six months are referred to Army Emergency Relief and budget counseling.

Also, housed with the Food Locker in Building 2642 since October of last year is the Lending Closet, which also receives CFC funds.

The Lending Closet, run by Marsha Collins, relocation coordinator, is for people who have recently relocated to Fort Benning and are awaiting the arrival of their own household goods.

Therefore, the closet lends such items as cooking utensils, dishes, playpens, irons and ironing boards, car seats and more for 30 days.

Soldiers who have been here for 90 days or more and have had their household goods shipped may also use the Lending Closet.

In order to use this service, the soldier must show a copy of the orders that show his or her assignment status.

If lenders happens to break anything that is borrowed, they will be charged the price to replace it because there is no one on staff to fix broken items.

CFC funds, which help both of these causes, are at about $8,000 this week in the first phase of the 1992 campaign, according to Cathy White, Fort Benning CFC coordinator.

215th FSU prepares for move

Unit to transfer to Texas

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

As fine china is carefully wrapped and cushioned in preparation for a move, so the colors of the 215th Finance Support Unit were cased in olive drab for their transfer to Fort Hood, Texas.

In a 9:30 a.m. color-casing ceremony Oct. 2 at Engineer Field, soldiers, civilians and officers, including Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, gathered for a formal farewell to the finance unit.

The unit's members, including Lt. Col. George O. Smith, unit commander, will accompany the colors to the unit's new assignment at Headquarters, Forces Command, with duty station at Fort Hood.

The unit has deployed several times, including service in Saudi Arabia during Desert Storm; the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif.; South Carolina for relief operations in the wake of Hurricane Hugo; and to Panama and Egypt during training exercises.

The unit's motto, "A Tradition of Excellence," typifies its service, according to the commander of the 36th Engineer Group, Col. Philip R. Anderson.

"The soldiers of the 215th have earned our respect through their years of dedicated service. They will be deeply missed by all of us," Anderson said.

Environmental officials address concerns about abestos

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

If you have had concerns about asbestos in your home or work place on post, then read on to learn the facts about this often misunderstood substance.

Dorothy Richards, acting chief of the Environmental Programs Management Branch, said that even though many of the older homes and barracks on post were constructed with materials containing asbestos, residents have nothing to fear if the materials are of a certain type.

Asbestos is actually a naturally occurring mineral fiber that gained prominence because of its fire-retardant properties. It can be classified into two categories: friable and non-friable. Materials in the friable category are dangerous.

Friable materials can be easily crushed or pulverized by hand pressure and include pipe and boiler insulation covering. Non-friable materials are much more durable, and include floor tiles, transite panels and roofing materials.

"Non-friable asbestos is not dangerous," said Richards, "as long as it is in good condition."

Richards said that safety concerns regarding asbestos have surfaced in the last several decades because breathing the tiny asbestos fibers can cause respiratory diseases and even a form of cancer. These concerns have caused asbestos to be replaced with substitutes (such as fiberglass insulation) when practical, but many older buildings still contain it. On Fort Benning, floor tiles are the most prevalent building materials that contain asbestos, Richards said.

How do you tell if you have asbestos floor tiles?

According to Richards, only laboratory analysis can verify for certain, but a good rule of thumb is that tiles that measure 9 inches by 9 inches most likely contain asbestos. Twelve-inch square tiles do not.

"I cannot overstate, however," Richards added, "that you and your family are not in danger if you have asbestos floor tiles as long as they are in good condition." She said that laboratory analysis of floor tiles usually reveals only between 1 and 2 percent asbestos, an extremely small amount.

The danger with materials containing asbestos occurs when the substance is crushed or broken, causing the release of asbestos fibers into the air. For this reason, certain precautions must be taken if you have asbestos floor tiles.

Richards said not to use abrasive cleansers or scouring pads when cleaning the tiles. Simply mopping, sweeping, buffing or walking on the tiles poses no danger. She particularly emphasized the importance of not sanding the tiles or doing anything else that would cause the breakdown of the tiles and the consequent release of asbestos fibers, such as sawing or drilling holes in the tiles.

She added that a cracked or chipped tile is not dangerous.

Richards also emphasized that there is nothing to fear if you see workers in protective suits working in the housing areas. The Directorate of Public Works replaces asbestos tiles when the need arises, and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration requires the workers to wear protective clothing since

988th MPs return from Florida relief effort

Unit's mission included traffic control, escorting convoys, securing supply sites

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

As southern Florida slowly but steadily begins to repair and rebuild itself from the devastation of Hurricane Andrew, Fort Benning units that deployed to help in that relief effort are returning home.

The 988th Military Police Company, an element of the Military Police Activity, returned home Sunday to a greeting by family members, friends and members of the unit's advance party that arrived home Oct. 1.

Members of the 988th were called upon to perform several missions during their tour in Homestead, Fla., according to 1st Sgt. Cortez Globe.

"We deployed 96 personnel from Fort Benning to Goulds, Fla., which is north of Homestead," said Globe.

Some of the missions performed by the unit included traffic control for the local community, escorting supply convoys and securing supply sites, said Globe.

"We had a very positive impact on the community we served," said Globe. "Members of the community were constantly coming up to us and thanking us for coming to help. We received discounts from local merchants. People said they felt safer when we came down."

The soldiers provided the support and accomplished their mission in an outstanding manner, said Globe.

"The soldiers of the 988th were very motivated going down to Florida. This was our first time being deployed on a mission within the U.S., and we were encouraged by the positive response we received from the community," Globe added.

The soldiers of 988th are now winding down from their deployment, said Globe. The unit's mission now that the soldiers are back home is to provide Fort Benning with outstanding law-enforcement support, said Globe.

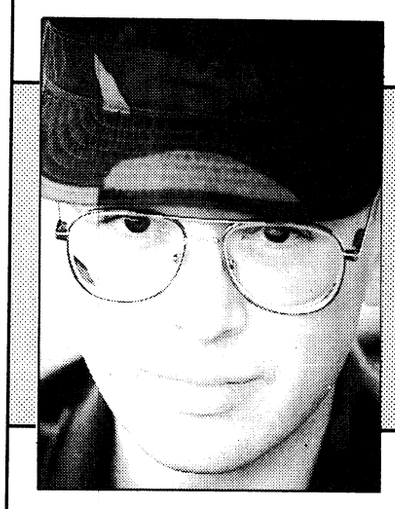
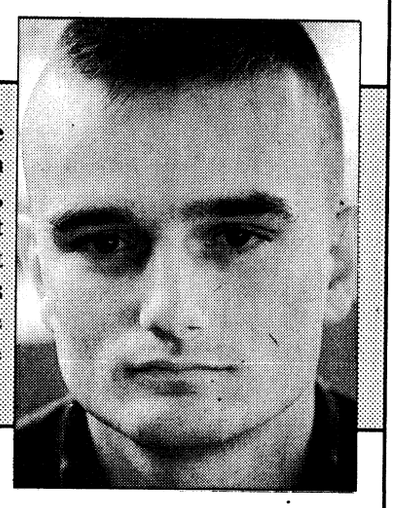
VARIOUS VOICES

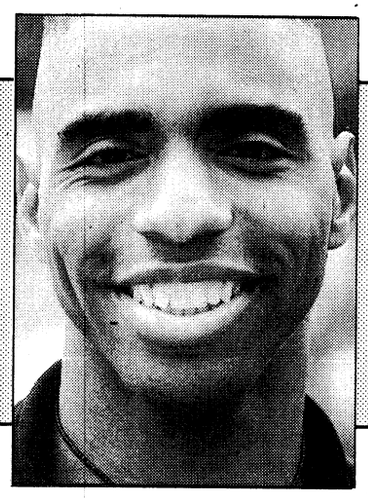
What do you think is the biggest problem facing our nation today?



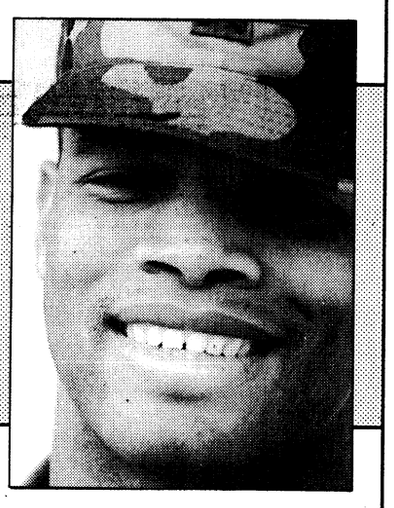
Spc. John Bensted, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment — "The biggest problem facing the nation today is the national deficit. It's outrageous. We're placing debt on the shoulders of our children and they will pay for our mistakes."



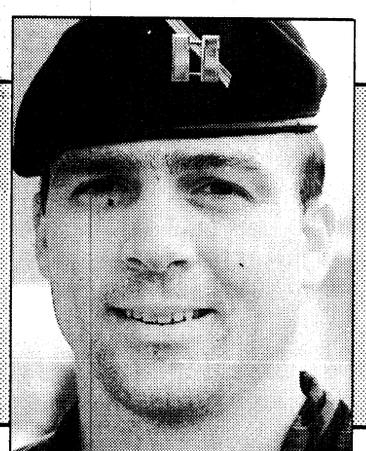
Sgt. Steven Round, Long Range Surveillance Detachment, 124th Military Intelligence Battalion, 24th Infantry Division, Fort Stewart, Ga. — "The biggest problem in our nation today is unemployment. More businesses are shutting down and no new ones are starting up."



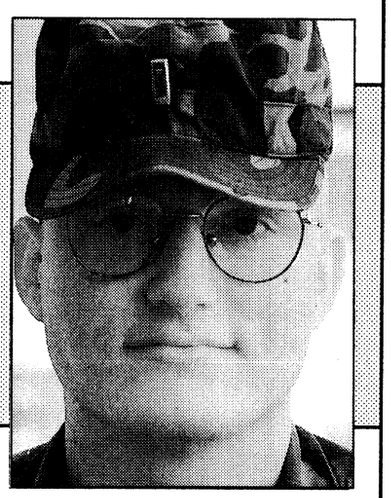
Pfc. Timothy P. Sweat, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 75th Ranger Regiment — "The biggest problem in our nation is that we spend so much money to provide foreign aid, and we don't spend enough money at home in our own country to fix many of the problems we have."



Sgt. Marcus Marshall, 608th Ordnance Company, 13th Supply and Service Battalion, 36th Engineer Group — "Our nation's biggest problem is that we have so many problems that we haven't come to grips with yet."



Capt. Nathan Hunt, 7th Special Operations Support Command, Stuttgart, Germany — "The biggest problem our nation is facing is the national deficit. It's embarrassing as a country to consistently spend more money than we make. If I did that, I'd be in jail by now."



2nd Lt. William Kondracki, Infantry Officer Basic Course 9-92— "The biggest problem our nation is facing is a lack of decisive action. Everyone can identify the problems; but, as a citizen, I don't see a whole lot of action toward fixing the problems."

Clothes don't always make the man

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

Soldiers who think they're making a fashion statement with their off-duty dress should keep their mouths shut.

If clothes can make a man, they can also make him look like a simpleton.

Case in point. Guys with Bert-and-Ernie haircuts shouldn't wear earrings – at least those little, tiny, effeminate gold ones.

Studs, if you're going to wear earrings, get something macho, like miniature maces or battle-axes. These should be at least three inches in length and weigh maybe a pound or more.

Sure, this might stretch your ear lobes a bit, but that'll just add to your macho, gorilla-like appearance.

Case in point. The dude with the whitewalls who was wearing a fluorescent pink Panama Beach baseball hat with a ponytail reaching down to his buttocks.

Give me a break. What's his fashion statement? Is it that he wants to look like a greasy civilian?

As for the clothes, actually there's not much to say. I know I'm not qualified. I haven't even reached the point that I'd dare button my shirt to the top unless I was wearing a necktie.

I do think I have pictures of myself as a kid wearing my top button secured under a sports coat. (That was probably my mother's doing – not mine). But to show you the taste my mother had, on occasion she'd have me wear my shirt collar on the outside of my sports coat.

We're talking 10, 12 years of age here. Nowadays, the only coats kids wear have some team's name on them and they go for about the same price as an M-1 tank. I'll say very little about clothes except to note that I'm glad most of our soldiers have grown out of the suspenders dragging-on-the-floor stage, although I do want to know what the deal is with pants that come down to mid-knee.

Are these guys who can't decide if they want to wear shorts or long pants? Some of them look like they're wearing skirts. We tell women they can't be in the front lines in combat, then we start stealing all their fashion statements — braids, earrings, bloomers.

What kind of deal is this?

One final bit of advice for you older dudes. When you're wearing civilian clothes, please refrain from wearing your Army-issued black shoes with your polyester pants. You look like geeks.

Women, you've long been suckers for the fashion industry. The biggest laugh came when you fell for the clown suits. Do you actually think you look cute in those things?

Now maybe if you painted your noses red and joined up with Ringling Brothers-Barnum and Bailey...

All I can say is I'm glad to be a soldier and not have to worry about what I'm going to wear to work everyday.

Grab the old battle dress uniforms and you're home free. But wait, what's the rumor that now we are a peace-time Army again, that starch may be coming back to our BDUs?

That must mean someone in the Pentagon decided that the enemy doesn't have the means of using infra-red detection devices to locate us while we're out in the field sweating over some fighting position we're digging.

I haven't seen anything official on this and since my noncommissioned officer in charge hasn't told me to start starching them, I'll continue to wear my BDUs fluff-dried and try to look like a field soldier in the process.

I wouldn't want to be identified as one of those rear-echelon, malingering fiddle-dee-dees.

CG thanks post

I want to thank everyone at Fort Benning for the tremendous support provided to the victims of Hurricane Andrew. You have once again excelled.

We deployed more than 1,000 personnel, provided $6,167 and sent much-needed supplies. The effort of our soldiers was commendable.

Our 36th Engineer Group deployed to render direct aid to these unfortunate people by clearing debris, providing medical treatment, power for a water treatment plant, warehousing and distribution of goods.

Members of the 988th Military Police Company deployed to help local law enforcement officials in Florida with traffic control and security in the aftermath of the hurricane.

Our Red Cross chapter sent a staff member to provide family assistance.

Even those who stayed behind contributed mightily to the cause.

Volunteers from the Red Cross, the 988th Military Police Company, the 13th Supply and Service Battalion and the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment proved invaluable as they labored to assist the Salvation Army in preparing relief supplies for needy families.

Our Commissary played an important role by providing containers and encouraging patrons to donate food to the hurricane victims.

As always, the post's Chaplains' Office was out in front gathering support from our parishioners. These efforts provided more than $4,000 for hurricane recovery assistance.

The School of the Americas held a fund-raiser, from which $254 was donated to the Red Cross, as well as holding a food and clothing drive, collecting 1,200 pounds of donations.

Students of Frank R. Loyd School collected and donated items to the Salvation Army, and the list goes on and on.

There is no doubt that many lives were blessed through the donations and volunteer efforts you provided. Your community involvement and selfless attitude is an inspiration to us all.

Again, thank you.

Fire safety must be priority one on post

Directorate of Public Works

Fire authorities agree that hundreds of lives could be saved each year if only people knew in advance exactly how they could get out of their homes in the heavy smoke and confusion that frequently accompany a fire.

Unfortunately, not everyone has the instinct to run from a burning home. Children often panic and hide in closets or under beds.

Knowing what to do in case a fire does break out may mean the difference between life and death.

The answer is an escape plan that is known and understood by every member of the family. Each member should be thoroughly familiar with every step of the plan.

Very young children and elderly persons should receive careful consideration when mapping out your plan. Both groups need special help in escaping a home fire.

The first thing to do when preparing your plan is to draw a floor plan of your home. Mark an escape route and an alternate route from each room. Pay particular attention to the bedrooms since nighttime fires are usually the most serious. Since it is impossible to get out through a high window invest in a rope or chain ladder.

Always make sure that doors can be opened and are easily accessible. Explain to each member of the family how to break window glass with a chair or heavy object and how to clear away pieces of glass remaining in the frame with a shoe or similar object.

Come to an agreement on a way in which any member of the family can sound an alarm. Pound on the wall, use a whistle or any method that will awaken those who are asleep. Time should not be wasted getting dressed or collecting prized possessions. Speed is of utmost importance in escaping fire.

Every family member should know how to test a door. If panels or knobs are warm, the door must be kept closed and the alternate escape route used.

If not, the foot and hip should be braced against the door, and it should be opened cautiously to prevent super-heated air from blowing it open. If no hot air or smoke enters, it is probably safe to pass through.

If it is necessary to stay is the room, stay near a slightly open window. Place towels or clothes in the door cracks. To reach the other side of a smoke-filled room, crawl with your head about 18 inches above the floor. Hang a sheet outside the window to signal for help.

Plan ahead on an outside meeting place where everyone will assemble. Once you have made your escape, never go back inside.

Once your plan is developed, hold a practice drill and then repeat the drill periodically. If problems develop in the escape plan, they can be worked out during the practice drills.

These drills are well worth the the effort to know that you and your family have a better than average chance of surviving a home fire.

For assistance in preparing your family fire escape plan, contact the post Fire Prevention Office at 545-2883 or 545-1967 or 544-1220 or 545-3964.

Post officials update policy

Wear of authorized military uniforms by all Fort Benning soldiers will be as prescribed in the Army Regulation 670-1. Commanders at all levels are responsible for ensuring that soldiers under their command wear the uniform correctly and present a neat and soldierly appearance.

The Army Green Uniform (all versions), the Army Blue Uniform and all semi-formal or formal uniforms may be worn off post at any time, in accordance with the referenced regulation.

Other uniforms (Class C), i.e., Battle Dress Uniforms, food service, hospital duty, aviation flight suit and combat vehicle crewmen uniforms may be worn anywhere off post to eat or conduct business of short duration.

The Class A or B uniform is appropriate for any business, military or personal, that requires more time for the soldier to complete.

A soldier wearing this type of uniform (Class C) may not drink alcohol, whether or not dining, on or off post, during duty hours or off post at any commercial establishment during nonduty hours.

The Army issued physical fitness uniform, to include sweat shirt, sweat pants, shorts and T-shirt will only be worn by military personnel for physical training or organized athletics.

Neither the physical fitness uniform, nor individual parts of it, will be worn as a casual, off-duty garment by military personnel.

The physical fitness uniform may be worn en route between quarters and physical training site.

The intent of this policy is to allow soldiers to make necessary shopping trips in a convenient manner, but not to treat the utility uniforms as a substitute for civilian attire.

GATEWAY TO CARE

Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: Why are patients assigned to individual clinics? Why don't they get to go anywhere they want?

A: Martin Army Community Hospital's goal is to provide the best care available for patients under its care.

Medical care is better managed when the same physician or group of physicians sees the same patients for all primary health care. That way, the doctor knows what medications the patient is taking and what complicating medical problems are present. The patient and doctor get to know each other and can build a trusting relationship. The doctor can also work with the patient to assure that care from specialists is coordinated. These are aims of Gateway to Care.

In addition, primary care clinics are staffed according to the number of assigned patients. If patients could go anywhere, some days there would be no patients and some days the wait for care would be unacceptably long. Time and resources would be wasted. Gateway to Care is intended to effectively manage resources, save time for both patients and providers and to optimize access to service.

Unlike family practice clinics, some clinics see specific types of patients, such as the dermatology, orthopedic or internal medicine clinics. Some clinics service special ages. For example, the Outpatient Clinic sees patients over the age of 15, while pediatrics sees patients under the age of 15. If any patient could walk into any clinic, those patients with special medical needs would not be able to be seen by specialists. The doctors would be too busy with walk-ins.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Bradley Vanderau
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I was recently contacted and informed by telephone that I was specially selected to participate in a fabulous investment opportunity. The salesperson said there was virtually no risk involved and that an initial investment of $50 would "get me in on a deal of a lifetime." I sent the salesperson $50 two months ago; however, I never received the investment information as promised. Have I been defrauded?

A: More than likely, yes. Although telemarketing has been used as a legitimate way of selling products and services, it has also been used as a common device to defraud consumers.

Telephone marketing investment scams sold by dishonest operators have included those for coins, gemstones, art, various types of leases, precious metals and various other products. A Louis Harris survey estimated that 92 percent of Americans have been contacted by telemarketing scams and 29 percent (52 million people) have responded.

These telemarketing investment operations are usually run from a low-rent office filled with operators who call hundreds of consumers everyday all over the country.

The operator will typically inform the consumer that he or she has been selected to participate in a unique investment opportunity where little risk is involved. Large profits are guaranteed, but the investor must pay his or her money immediately to get in on the deal.

Unfortunately, once the fraudulent telemarketers get your money, they usually change their names, move across state lines and never deliver the product as promised.

Q. What precautions should I take in order to protect myself from telemarketing investment fraud?

A: Here is a list of some suggested precautions you can take to protect yourself if you are contacted by someone selling an investment opportunity:

• When you receive a telephone sales call, find out who is calling.

• If you are interested in what they are selling, ask them to mail more information.

• Do not be pressured into buying. When you are urged to buy now or forever lose your opportunity to profit, you should realize you will probably never see your money again.

• If you are promised that the investment is risk-free, a red flag should go up cautioning you against investing with the telemarketer. Remember, offers that sound too good to be true generally are not true.

• Be extremely skeptical and cautious about any unsolicited phone calls you may receive about investments.

• Invest only in business opportunities about which you know something. Get all the information you can about the company and then verify that data.

• If in any doubt, do not part with your money.

• If you are not interested, interrupt the caller and say you are not interested. Ask the caller to take your name off his list.

since the act of removing the tiles causes the release of asbestos fibers. There is no threat to nearby residents, Richards said.

Eventually, the Directorate of Public Works will survey every building on post for the presence of asbestos, said Richards. Family housing units are inspected whenever they are vacated. As long as asbestos floor tiles are in good condition and not releasing any asbestos, they are not replaced, which is the Environmental Protection Agency's policy.

Over the past three summers, all materials containing asbestos in Fort Benning schools have been removed and replaced with substitutes, she added.

AER offers educational assistance loans

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

It seems that today, the only thing higher about "higher" education is the cost of obtaining it.

Many parents all across the country may be wondering about how they will finance their children's college education.

Military parents are probably no exception to this type of concern, but children of military parents do have an edge on receiving financial assistance to make college possible. That edge is Army Emergency Relief.

Army Emergency Relief, or AER, provides educational assistance to authorized children of retired, active duty or deceased soldiers who are younger than 22 years of age and are unmarried.

Army Emergency Relief's primary mission is emergency financial assistance," said Alfonso J. Deane, AER officer on Fort Benning.

"The educational assistance program is a relatively small secondary mission," said Deane.

Scholarships, federally guaranteed student and parent loans are all available through AER.

Scholarships are awarded based on financial need, academic achievements and individual accomplishments. Students can receive up to $1,500 in aid, and the money can be used toward all education expenses such as tuition, living expenses, transportation and books.

AER also provides assistance through federally guaranteed Stafford Student Loans. From Stafford Student Loans, eligible children and spouses of soldiers and active duty soldiers can receive up to $3,500 for the first two years of study and $5,500 for the next two to three years.

The actual amount of the loan is determined by the school. While the money for these loans comes from commercial lending institutions, AER makes obtaining the loan easier.

AER pays the loan guarantee fees, which can amount to approximately 3 percent of the face value of the loan. Students must a 5 percent loan origination fee.

Parents loans, called PLUS, are available to active duty soldiers for their children's education expenses. Soldiers may borrow up to $4,000 per student each academic year.

Like the student loan, the amount of the PLUS loan is determined by the school, and applications can be submitted any time during the year. Repayment of a PLUS loan begins 60 days after the funds are disbursed.

The advantage to the PLUS loan is that it requires no family income evaluation and no loan origination fee is charged, said Deane.

For more information on these forms of college assistance through AER, stop at Building 2643, AER office, in Soldiers' Plaza.

The hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

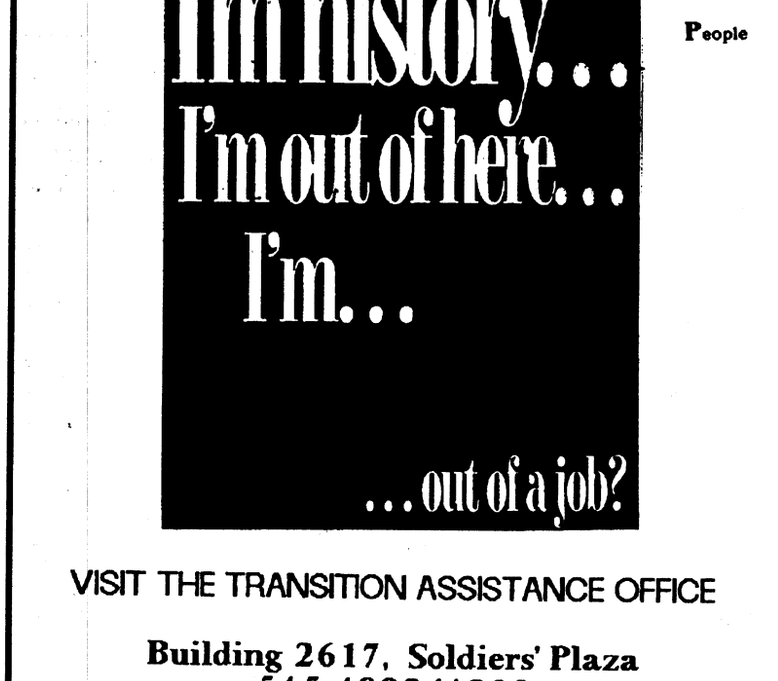
PET OF THE WEEK



These mixed breed kittens (one male, one female) are looking for homes. They are between 4 and 6 weeks old. If you would like to adopt one or both or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Storm washes out Columbus Stars

Stars' quarterback Eddie Mitchell eyes a receiver in the flat.

Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

On a cold, wet and dreary afternoon, the Columbus Stars were washed away by the North Mecklenburg Storm 12-6, in overtime in an exhibition game at Doughboy Stadium.

Three interceptions and three fumble recoveries by the Storm defense spelled doom for the Stars.

The Stars got their only points of the afternoon on a 55-yard halfback option pass play from Eddie Mitchell to wide receiver Andrico Carter capping an 82-yard drive late in the second quarter.

The extra point was blocked sending the Stars into the locker room with a 6-0 lead at the half.

The Storm came out of the locker room at the start of the third quarter and moved the ball down field 56 yards for the game-tying score.

Fullback Sandy Wilborn took a pitch around the left side from 8 yards out to cap off the drive.

The extra point was blocked leaving the game tied at 6-6.

The bad weather made for poor field conditions late in the half and neither team was able to make much headway for the rest of the game.

In overtime, the Stars started deep in their won territory.

On a third down pass play, Stars quarterback Donald Stroy was picked off by Storm linebacker Nathan Lambert setting the Storm offense up at the Stars own 25-yard line.

Three plays later, running back Ed McAdams punched the ball over the goal line to give the Storm a 12-6 win.

The Stars were outgained in total yards 231 to 209. Mitchell had 10 carries for 21 yards to lead the Stars. He also had a 55-yard touchdown pass to Carter.

Storm running back Wilborn led the way for the Storm with six rushes for 79 yards and one touchdown.

Defensively for the Stars, Frank Lewis had seven tackles and four assists.

Six turnovers for the Stars killed at least two potential scoring drives while the Storm turned the ball over only once.

The Stars will finish the season with a home game Sunday at Memorial Stadium against the Alabama Raiders beginning at 2 p.m.

Anglers fish in Japan's waters

Outboard Marine Corp.

In recent years, several top American bass tournament anglers have been invited to compete in fishing contests in Japan, but until recently, none of the Americans had actually won one of the events.

That changed earlier this summer, however, when lady angler Linda England won a major tournament near Tokyo.

England and Fredda Lee, both members of the Johnson Outboards Pro Staff, had been invited to compete in Japan as guests of the Daiwa Corporation, a major manufacturer of fishing tackle.

"Basically, a bass is a bass no matter where it lives," says England. "I was fortunate to locate some fish along a drop off and also around some boat docks, the same places we find them in American lakes. They bit plastic worms and crankbaits, too, the same lures we use.

"The biggest problem I had was learning to read my depthfinder. It was marked in meters rather than feet."

England and Lee were the first female anglers invited to fish in one of the Japanese tournaments.

"I was a little apprehensive at first," admitted England, "but the Japanese are very gracious hosts and did their best to make us comfortable. They are extremely interested in American bass fishing and are very anxious to learn our techniques.

"Language was not really a problem either," England continues, "because fishermen everywhere just seem to be able to communicate with each other.

"However, we did have an interpreter who stayed with us the entire time, which was good because we were interviewed by several radio, television, and magazine reporters before and after the tournament.

Infantry Training Bde. may be contender in upcoming playoffs

By Terry K. Ray

The Infantry Training Brigade hopes to be a force come playoff time.

Here is a wrap-up of games played Monday night at Roberts Field.

2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment (Patriots) vs. 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment (Queen's Own).

Queen's Own upped its record to 7-0, with a 20-0 win over the Patriots.

Queen's Own quarterback Michael Artis threw three touchdown passes to wide receivers Richard Webb, Dallas Hogans and Robert Amaker.

The Queen's Own defense flushed Patriot quarterback Malcom Jones from the pocket repeatedly causing him to throw two interceptions to defensive back Ray Bentley and dealing a dead man's hand to the Patriots' winless record of 0-6.

1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment (Bayonet Bandits) vs 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment (Rock of the Marne).

Bandit running back Duvowel Peaker hijacked the Rock of the Marne, 18-0, scoring all three touchdowns, two on offense and one on defense.

Peaker scored his first touchdown of the game on a lateral from quarterback Jeffery Fletcher on the Bandits first possession of the game.

In the second half, Peaker intercepted Rock of the Marne quarterback John Spisso and returned the pick off 40 yards for his second score of the evening.

Peaker scored his final touchdown of the night on a second and goal play, when center Chad Baker snapped the ball directly to Peaker who stole up the middle and into the end zone on the trick play.

The Bandits ran their record to 5-2, while dropping Rock of the Marne to 1-5.

The rangers were lead by Bert Vaughn, Company E, 4th RTB, who won double gold in the 198.5-pound class. In freestyle, Vaughn edged Bob O'Brien, Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, 5-4; Ken Henry, Company C, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, 10-0, and Fredrick Whitter, 75th Ranger Regiment, 9-5. In the final, Vaughn defeated Brian Eldridge by pin in two minutes and 23 seconds, Reginald Harden, Company L, 3rd Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, by pin in two minutes, 35 seconds and in the finals defeated O'Brien, 7-4. Keith Sieracki, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment, was able to keep his record for the 1992 season unblemished by winning both the Greco-Roman and Freestyle competition in the 180.5-pound class.

Sieracki came from a 3-0 deficit to defeat Clifford Alford, a corporal with Headquarters Service Battalion, Camp Lejeune, 5-4 in the first round. The next two rounds, he easily handled Michael Parker, a lance corporal with Company L, 3rd Battalion, 2nd Marine Division, 11-0 and Michael Crabtree of Fort Bragg, 10-0 to win the freestyle title. Exploration can deepen faith

By David Reese
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Considering that I'm a Columbus boy (Rothschild '70, Carver '74), I ought to be able to write something inspirational about ol' Chris discovering America.

After all, this is the quincentennial (at least that's what all the billboards say). But, I'm not sure we're approaching this Columbus Day with any grand reflective thoughts. I think maybe we've lost sight of Chris' spirit of adventure.

At any rate, 500 years after some guy with (or without) good intentions may (or may not) have set foot on what might (or might not) have been what we know as America, we remember that great (or not so great) event. We plant flowers, shrubs and flags, have concerts, and make no less than three movies depicting Christopher Columbus as (take your choice) a) a great explorer; b) a greedy exploiter or c) Sigourney Weaver's boyfriend.

Isn't it interesting how the further away from an event we get, the less pure or grand or wonderful the event seems? As I recall sitting in Ms. O'Brien's class in the fifth grade, Columbus' discovery of America did happen in 1492. It was for good intentions, and it was on the mainland USA; don't confuse me with details.

In fifth grade that was some pretty exciting history for a boy from Columbus. Considering the reality of simply sitting in school on a brisk fall day while piles of leaves were wasting away outside, the idea of discovering a new land sounded pretty good to me.

In fact, I was going to be Chris Columbus when we were studying history and had to do this dumb acting before the class. Yessir, I was going to dress up like him and march into the class and claim it discovered; only someone else stuck his hand up first and there I was left with Jacques Cartier. Jacques was an OK character, though; he was an explorer, too, before he became a jeweler in New York.

I still used my Columbus costume — my mom's old silk jacket turned inside out with fancy sleeves and buttons. I found a long feather and stuck it in an old floppy hat, rolled up my speech like a map and discovered – well, discovered whatever it was that Cartier discovered.

Many of us are drawn to explorers and the world of adventure. We're attracted to the unknown or the unique or to the thrill of discovery. There's still a part of us that holds onto the belief that Columbus' adventurous voyage across the ocean, with all its romanticism and intrigue, ended in a glorious, well meaning discovery of a new world. Now, if we could just find one of our own...

Christ offers us the opportunity for discovery each day. There is a world both within and without that is a new frontier. He offers us the chance to stake out a new claim for life, to trade the old man for the new adventurer.

But there is a major difference between the frontier that Columbus faced five centuries ago and the one we face — Christ has already been through the perilous voyage.

When Columbus set out, he wasn't sure what he'd find. We know that we can find a deeper life and a greater peace because Christ has prepared the way. When Chris set out, he went with limited resources; when we travel down the Gospel road, we have limitless riches. When Christopher landed on the opposite shore, he found strange faces, strange language, and a strange land; with Christ as our lead, we find the familiar faces of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Mary, Peter and Paul. We find the common language of neighborly love; we find a home that has been set aside just for us.

Maybe it's time we got closer to the one single event in history that has remained unchanged by the span of time – Christ giving himself on the cross so that we might discover eternal life. It is a life-changing adventure.

Workshop may give help to parents

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Why didn't my children come with instructions when they were born?

Why didn't anyone tell me I would have days like these?

Train a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not turn from it, the Bible teaches in Proverbs 22:6.

The New International Life Application Bible explains this verse as follows.

Many parents want to make all the choices for their child, but this hurts him or her in the long run. When parents teach a child how to make decisions, they do not have to watch every step he or she takes. They know their children will remain on the right path because they have made the choices themselves. Train the children to choose the right way.

All children, regardless of race, color, creed, economic background and social status create discipline problems, no matter how perfect the children or parents might be.

The overwhelming problems of parenting can often at least be minimized when parents learn how to match their parenting skills with their children.

A workshop titled "Discipline without Shouting and Spanking" presented by the Chaplains' Family Life Center offers practical remedies for the common behavior problems. The discussion group will meet every Tuesday from noon until 1:30 p.m. starting Tuesday through Nov. 17 at the Chaplains' Family Life Center, Building 2606, Soldiers' Plaza.

This is a course that has been used by parents who are sincerely searching for new and innovative ways to raise responsible children. Some of the topics covered are:

- A description of the symptoms, the causes and a general approach to corrective action.
- Preventive steps to avoid the problem.
- Practical solutions to the misbehavior.
- Important information about what not to do
- A real-life situation that shows how to successfully handled the problem

The workshop also provides an opportunity to share experiences and meet new people. Nursery is not provided.

Training sites are historical

Archaeologists extract valuable information

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning's 284 square miles of Georgia countryside was once home to more than just the infantry. Scattered across this thriving military installation are the remnants of what at one time were ancient Indian campsites, sprawling plantations and small farms.

"People are often taken aback when they realize how many people lived here before the Army came," said Directorate of Public Works Archaeologist Dean Wood. "It's as if they thought the area didn't exist or wasn't used for anything until Fort Benning came along."

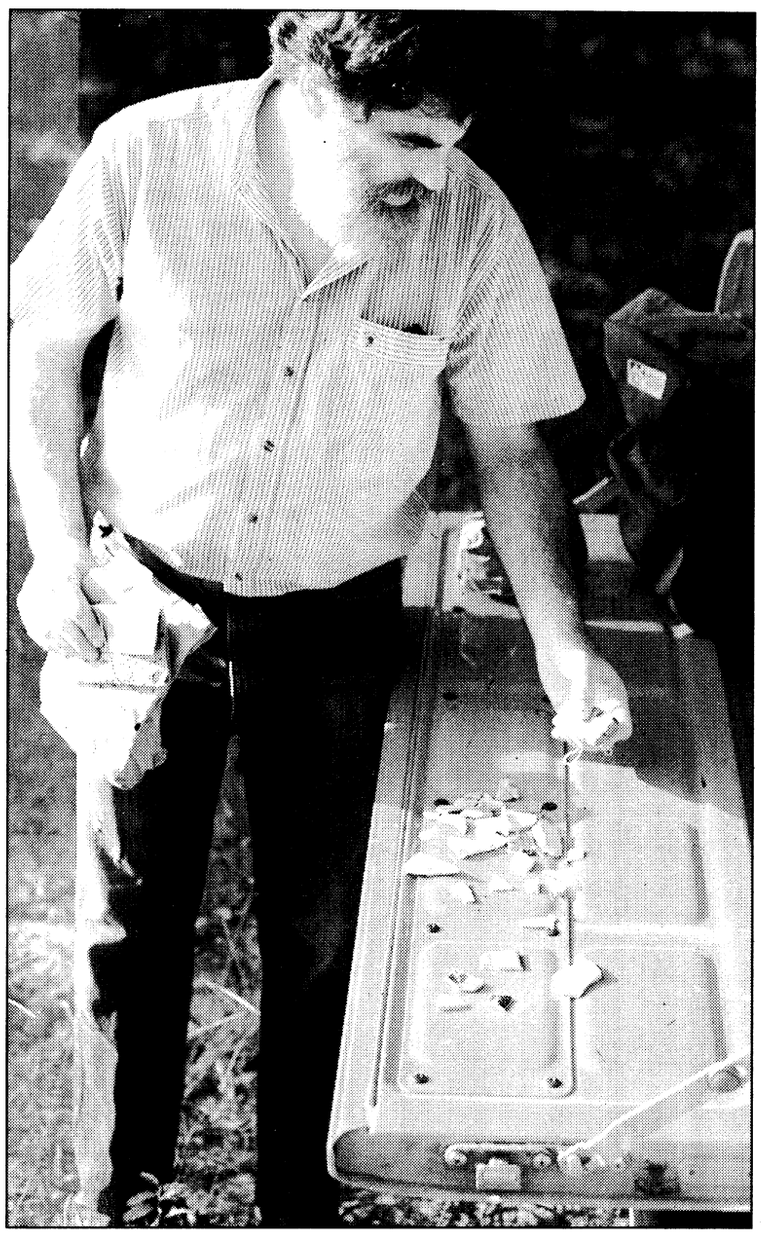
The Environmental Programs Management Branch of the directorate is faced with the dual task of protecting these historical resources without interfering with the Army's mission to train soldiers. The good news, said Wood, is that both can be accomplished without sacrificing either objective.

"You can have your cake and eat it too, so to speak. You can protect these resources and have Fort Benning, too," said Wood.

An excellent example of this philosophy in action occurred during the construction of Carmouche Range, used for firing Bradley Fighting Vehicles. Indian sites and an old cemetery were located on the proposed site for the range. The solution?

"The sites were excavated prior to constructing the range," Wood said. "Archaeologists gained valuable information on Indians of the Southeast and on the diet and health of early settlers in the area and the Army got its range."

Wood said that this type of solution works well because it is not so much the sites themselves that are necessarily worth preserving as it is the information that can be obtained by excavating the sites. Once archaeologists conduct a dig and extract what information they can, the site itself no longer needs to be preserved, Wood said.



Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

Post Archaeologist Dean Wood shows some examples of broken glass and plates from old homesites on post.

When units on post plan to conduct maneuvers or bivouac on areas not already established as sites to conduct such activities, they must submit a written request to the Directorate of Public Works. Wood then conducts a survey of the area to determine if there is any possible impact on the area's cultural resources. If a conflict exists, an alternate site is determined for use or Wood will brief unit representatives on what areas or activities to avoid.

"Some commanders may see this as interference, and it really is not. Many of them don't realize that archeological sites are protected by law and commanders can be charged if their troops destroy, even unknowingly, any of these historical resources," he said.

"All we are asking is the chance to go out to a site before a unit does to let trained professionals evaluate any possible impact so that soldiers and their commanders will not be breaking the law," added Wood.

According to Wood, there are approximately 2,000 old homesites on post. Most of these date from the end of the Civil War to the first two decades of this century. Wood said that maybe only 100 of these sites will be worth preserving intact.

"One of our goals is to inventory all of these sites and see what is worth preserving. We have only visited maybe 100 or so. We can't protect what we don't know exists," said Wood.

"For this reason, we need the assistance of units on post in giving us advance notice when they conduct maneuvers or bivouacs," he added.

ACAP helps soldiers transition

Army Career and Alumni Program

Most people leaving the military find themselves at a disadvantage when they start looking for a job, according to Ted Craig, Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program transition services manager. They have never had to submit resumes, sit through job interviews or decide what type of work they want to do, he said.

"It's important to think far ahead," Craig said. "Many things a person needs for a job, such as education requirements, may take a year or longer."

Department of Defense officials urge people leaving the military to visit an ACAP office for help.

"We offer career guidance to people," said Craig. "It's never too early to begin thinking about what you may want to do after the military. We help people based on their individual needs."

Fort Benning's ACAP offers the following:

• A three-day workshop within 180 days of separation that helps military members prepare for transition through the military system, veterans benefits, looking for a civilian job with information on the job market, networking, resumes and interview skills.

• A one-day "advanced course" dealing with resume writing and interview skills.

• The Defense Outplacement Referral System process that provides a free service to match a person's abilities to civilian employment positions and by sending a mini-resume to a data base used by hundreds of employers throughout the world.

• Career Day provides an opportunity for employers to meet, brief and interview soldiers right here at Fort Benning in the soldiers' own surroundings.

• The Educational Opportunity Program makes it possible for a person to get a help and information about tuition assistance, enrollment procedures, or data on any college or university.

• Referrals for separation benefits to include Special Separation Benefits, Voluntary Separation Incentive and retirement.

Department of Defense's transition officials with the help of several commercial organizations, developed the following timetable for job hunting while still in the service. Following the guide won' t guarantee a job, said transition officials, but it will improve chances of finding one.

Twelve months before leaving the service:

• Talk with local transition center personnel.

• Visit the Retirement Services Office if you are retiring.

• Discuss with your family, possible options, setting goals for the job and location search.

• Decide where you want to live after leaving the military.

• Decide what types of jobs you qualify for and the income you will need.

• Start subscriptions or check the local library for professional or trade journals.

• Make sure you have or can acquire any necessary license you need for your chosen profession.

• Check your financial status and make plans to have enough money to cover several months of expenses if you don't find a job immediately.

• Begin attending job fairs.

• Research job possibilities, job markets and the economic conditions in the area you want.

Nine months before leaving service:

• Decide what type of work you are going to look for.

• Do first drafts of your resume.

• If possible, visit the area where you plan to move to after leaving the military; if you can't visit, write the local chamber of commerce for information.

• For job and real estate information, subscribe to weekend newspapers from the area where you plan to move.

• Continue research.

• Keep in touch with the local transition point.

Six months before leaving service:

• Attend an ACAP transition class whether retiring or getting out of the Army.

• Finalize your resume; decide if you need help in developing the best possible resume and if you need to hire a professional resume writer.

• Develop a list of employers in the field in which you are interested; also, determine any friends you might have in the private sector who may be able to help you.

• Contact an executive recruiter for assistance if you qualify and are looking for a job in this category.

• Begin developing a contingency plan for job and location in case your plan falls through.

• Continue research.

• Keep in touch with the local transition point.

This is a good time line to follow if you choose to tackle the job search process on your own. If this sounds confusing or like more work than you had planned, the ACAP Job Assistance Center is for you.

The Job Assistance Center has done a great deal of the research and will provide individual counseling. For more information, call the Army Career and Alumni Program at 545-4892 or 545-4902 or drop by the office in Building 2617 (upstairs) in Soldiers' Plaza.

Electronic inspector receives nearly $2,000 for suggestion

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Foster Cassidy, electronic inspector for the Maintenance Division of the Directorate of Logistics, has been selected the recipient $1,960 as the result of a suggestion to the Army Ideas for Excellence Program.

Cassidy suggested that commercial and support-type equipment identified as unserviceable be evaluated for candidacy in a proposed disposal point.

Latrella Conwell of the Army Ideas for Excellence Program, said that Cassidy's idea to determine the usefulness of spare parts on each item to be coded will provide a store of spare parts to be used until a condemned item is reduced to an unsalvageable carcass.

It has been estimated that his idea will save the Army $42,000 annually.

Conwell said the cash amount of suggestion awards is based on scales using tangible monetary savings, as well as intangible items such as safety. The idea can't be considered to be a part of the person's job, and about 10 to 15 awards of more than $1,000 are presented each year.

Cassidy checks electronic items in the shop for repairs before they go out again.

He said 90 percent of his job deals with military equipment such as mobile subscriber equipment and single-channel-air-to-ground radios, but he also sees to the repair of such commercial equipment as video recorders, microfiche readers, and video/audio teaching materials like slide projectors and televisions.

When parts are no longer available through a contractor, he said, it only makes sense to keep at least some of them running by using parts out of a few that have been set aside for scrap.

With prior military service, Cassidy has been at Fort Benning as a civilian for about 18 years.

Reorganization has caused him to be shuffled around somewhat job-wise in the past few years, but he did serve in the Technical Assistance Section for eight of those years so he's familiar with electronics needs and the workings of a military post.

Charles Piper, branch chief for the Electrical and Communications Branch of the Maintenance Division, said that he has a place set aside for Cassidy's proposed salvage area. However, not everything is in place yet. He expects it to be ready for use within the month.

Abuse prevention top priority in Oct.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

During the month of October, the Family Advocacy Program will be giving away promotional items in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2640, in acknowledgment of Spouse Abuse Prevention Month.

According to Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, the handouts will include literature on communication, anger control and spouse abuse, T-shirts, mugs, tote bags and sun visors.

Welch said the purpose of the observance is to point out the prevalence of domestic violence, and the importance of seeking help early on when there are problems.

During fiscal 1991, 448 spouse abuse cases were reported at Fort Benning and 103 of the cases are active at this time, she said. "The trouble is that not all cases are reported, and then we can't get them help."

She said marriages aren't planned to fail. Unfortunately, marital partners sometimes don't prepare themselves for severe conflict.

"Marriage is something more than just a contract between two people," she added. "It is a partnership that is legally recognized and based on mutual love and commitment."

Support and education to build a strong marriage are available through the Army Community Service Family Advocacy Program and the Family Life Center.

Education for couples includes identifying some truths vs. myths about marriage.

Some of these include:

MYTH-Happy marriages don't have conflict.

TRUTH-Even people who love each other have conflicts, but they are able to solve problems by negotiation, not a clash of wills. A stronger marriage results.

MYTH-Successful marriage partners are always completely compatible.

TRUTH-Few people who marry come "ready-made" for each other. Being compatible is something that happens over time as two people learn more about one another.

MYTH-People can't change the way they act, so why try to change them?

TRUTH-People can change if they're motivated. Marriage partners change as they adjust to each other and grow together as a couple.

MYTH-Passion leaves a marriage as time goes on. It's inevitable.

TRUTH-Love goes through stages. "Fireworks" are still part of many mature marriages, but the passion usually grows into a love that is deeper and more intimate over time.

Welch also noted that certain practices can be done to strengthen a marriage.

• Commitment. Both partners must be committed to their marriage and spouse.

• Acceptance. Love can exist despite a person's imperfections. Focus on what you and your spouse have in common, not what your differences are. Marriage will have its ups and downs. Though you may not approve of a certain behavior, think about the good times and work through the bad ones.

• Appreciation. Take time out to show true love and appreciation for those things that your spouse does for the two of you. Be spontaneous, break away from the schedule of things. Surprise your spouse with a pleasant change and something fun.

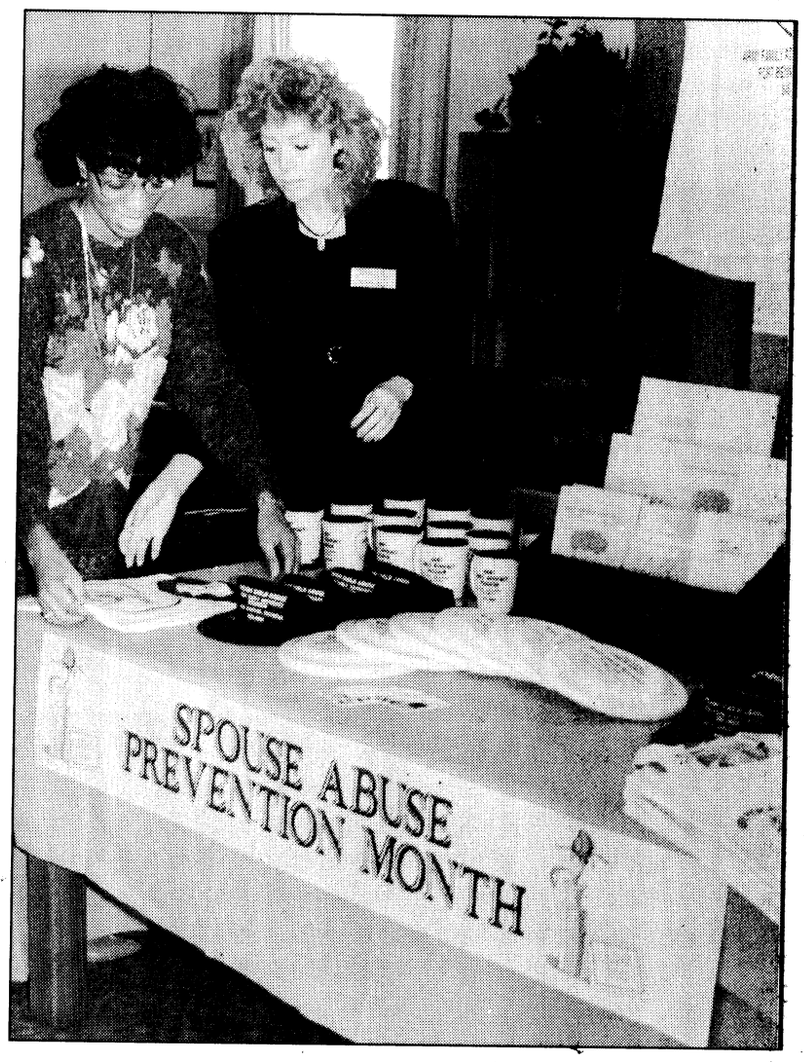
• Care. This is showing genuine compassion and concern for one another. Be considerate of your partner's needs. Treat your partner the way that you would like to be treated. Recognize the need for personal space and time, for example the need to pursue some individual goals. Express that you care verbally and nonverbally. Be loving in your words and actions.

• Trust. The cornerstone of all relationships, trust is built on mutual respect and love. Being responsible in your actions builds respect and trust. Express genuine respect for communicating openly with your spouse. It's the best policy.

• Sharing. Share the responsibilities and burdens of the household, as well as the rights and privileges.

Although couples may choose to delegate to one another specific responsibilities of the family, successful delegation carries with it good communication.

For example, money management should be a shared responsibility; work together to get through these areas, she said.



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Help ready for spouses

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

In the event of an occurrence of spouse abuse, the first thing to do is call for help, according to Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

On Fort Benning, the telephone numbers to call include the following:

• During the day: Welch's office at 545-6969 or Social Work Services at 545-3212.

• After hours: the administrative officer of the day at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-2041 or 544-2042.

Other numbers for help in this area are...

• Chaplains' Family Life Center at 545-1541.

• Columbus Alliance for Battered Women at 324-3850.

• Russell County Battered Women Shelter at 545-1511.

Welch noted that the shelters can be accessed directly, and all information is kept confidential.

There is also a 24-hour hot line for the Columbus-Chattahoochee-Fort Benning area at 327-3999.

Spouse abuse a common crime

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Domestic violence, or spouse, abuse, is one of the most common crimes, according to Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

She said acts of domestic violence occur every 18 seconds in the United States, about half of all couples experience at least one violent incident , and 20 percent of all murders in this country are committed within the family, 13 percent by spouses.

Other statistics include:

• Ninety-five percent of all spousal assaults are committed by men.

• Twenty-one percent of all women who use the hospital emergency surgical service are battered.

• Six million American women are beaten each year by their husbands or boyfriends; 4,000 are killed.

• Battering is the single major cause of injury to women — more frequent than auto accidents, muggings and rapes combined.

• One in four female suicides were victims of family violence.

• More than 1 million women each year seek medical help for injuries caused by battering.

• Victims of domestic violence are three times more likely to be victimized again than are victims of other types of crimes.

• Children are emotionally traumatized by witnessing family violence, many of them grow up to repeat the pattern as victim or abuser.

• One in every five women involved in an intimate relationship with a man is beaten repeatedly by the man.

• In at least half of the cases in which women are battered, children are abused.

• Battering occurs in 37 percent of teen-age dating relationships and 18 percent of teen-age dating relationships involve rape.

• Domestic violence is costly producing an estimated loss of $3 to $5 billion annually in abuse-related absenteeism and an additional $100 billion in abuse-related medical bills.

PX, Commissary no place for sloppy troops, families

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Next time you make a stop at the Post Exchange or Commissary, you might want to double check what you are wearing.

Improper clothing can mean no admittance to certain post facilities.

Sgt. Maj. Allen Thrower of the Directorate of Community Activities said that U.S. Army Infantry Center Regulation 600-5 specifically states that "civilian attire will be in good taste and repair, appropriate to the occasion and worn as the manufacturer intended."

The regulation applies to all military personnel, whether active duty, Reserve or retired, and to family members, civilian personnel and authorized visitors to post facilities.

"Because Fort Benning is the home of the infantry, we want to ensure that we are a notch above everyone else," Thrower said. "We want to maintain an image of excellence, and the dress code ensures that soldiers and personnel on post live up to that standard."

Thrower said that it is the responsibility of the non-commissioned officers and other command channels on post to ensure that soldiers understand and abide by the established clothing standards.

Here is a summary of the regulation:

Shirts, pants or shorts and footwear must be worn in all Fort Benning facilities. Items specifically prohibited in on-post facilities include:

• Underwear when worn as an outer garment.

• "Mesh" or "see through" shirts that expose the skin of the upper torso and any other garments that do not cover the upper torso, such as garments that expose the midriff or expose the underarms, i.e. "tank tops."

• Bare feet or shower shoes except at swimming pools and shower rooms or when sunbathing.

• Modified items of military clothing or mixed civilian and military clothing.

• Hair curlers or shower caps.

• Summer physical training uniforms, except at gymnasiums.

• Clothing that is disreputable or in extreme disrepair.

Additionally, the regulation states that male personnel may remove their shirts when in the yards of their quarters and when running, sunbathing or using post swimming pools.

Most of the post's exchanges feature placards listing the appropriate clothing standards, including photographs of inappropriate dress, at their entrances, Thrower said.

He added that personnel on authorized off-duty status may wear appropriate civilian clothing when conducting business at service-oriented facilities such as the Transportation Office, Soldiers' Plaza, TIC Federal Credit Union and the Finance and Accounting Office.

Fort Benning eight-graders are experiencing democracy at work.

For the next month, the students will be intimately involved in the election process, producing television, radio and newspaper ads and even conducting a campaign.

The program began with the students registering to vote and will culminate on Election Day, Nov. 3, when they go to the polls to vote for their candidates along with the rest of America.

The program is designed to acquaint students with the democractic process so when they reach the age to vote, they will be active participants, according to Lillie Galbraith, a member of the Chattahoochee Voter Board of Registrations, who presented information to the students on the voting process in this county.

Santa's Castle gears up for new season

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Christmas is not usually foremost in our minds in October — unless you work at Santa's Castle on post.

For these volunteers, knowing that there are just under 20 working days left until needy shoppers come to pick out gifts for their families makes this a busy time.

According to Susan Eckhart, new chairwoman for Santa's Castle, referrals must be in by Nov. 13 for soldiers who need help for the holidays because of financial problems, perhaps because of a handicapped child. Referrals must be made by such sources as unit commanders, unit sergeants major, chaplains, the Red Cross or Army Community Services.

Then clients are given a time to come and shop for free at the castle between Nov. 30 and Dec. 11. Late referrals are handled on a case-by-case basis, she said.

Last year, 770 children from 365 families received gifts of new and refurbished items from Santa's Castle. This year, the number of children is expected to grow by 100.

Eckhart said that throughout the year, a variety of units have supported the organization with cash donations and wives' coffees. Also, unit groups come to help clean up used toys while holding their regular meetings.

Also, the 43rd Engineer Combat Battalion (Heavy) regularly picks up donated toys in the container at the main Post Exchange.

However, it has been the Infantry Training Brigade at Sand Hill, under Commander Col. Joseph Trez, that has been the biggest cash supporter of this benevolent organization, Eckhart said.

Outgoing chairwoman Sharon Patton pointed out that on a regular basis ITB units have passed the hat and brought in a bag full of money.

It is the cash donations that help to buy gifts for the older children who are no longer interested in toys, but cannot be forgotten at Christmas.

In addition, Patton noted that last year, ITB sent only six soldiers to receive help from Santa's Castle. About 60 percent of the castle inventory went to the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, the largest brigade on post.

Coming up Oct. 31, the 11th Infantry Regiment will be hosting a bass tournament with proceeds to go to Santa's Castle, and the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment is in the process of sponsoring a bowling tournament.

Spouses of senior command and staff officers donated the goodies Tuesday for the open house to let the referral contacts know how to set people up to use Santa's Castle.

DENTAC promotes oral health

U.S. Army Dental Activity

An information booth promoting healthy oral habits will be today from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall as Fort Benning dental hygienists gear up for National Dental Hygiene Week, Oct. 18 to 24.

Fort Benning dental hygienists will also celebrate the week by displaying posters, providing information on dental health to all ages, providing programs for children at Dental Clinic No. 1 and providing healthy snacks for staff members.

At the booth, hygienists will hand out pamphlets about various dental procedures and answer dental-related questions.

The slogan for this year's observance is "Smile for Life," which stresses the importance of improving oral health care, according to Paula Dansereau of the Dental Activity.

Teeth and gums, like any body part, are susceptible to disease, Dansereau said. One prevalent problem among adults is periodontal (gum) disease, which is a major cause of tooth loss in adults, she said.

Dansereau added that individuals should inspect their mouths for any of the following signs of periodontal disease:

- Bleeding gums when brushing teeth.
- Red, swollen or tender gums.
- Loose or separating permanent teeth.
- Change in the way dentures or partials fit.
- Change in the way teeth fit together when biting.

Here are some ways to keep your healthy smile for a lifetime, said Dansereau:

- eat well balanced meals
- limit snacking
- brush after meals
- floss at least once a day
- visit your oral health care professional regularly.

50 workers feel effects of RIF

Number reduced from 202

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The number of post employees who left employment Sept. 29 decreased from the originally anticipated 202 employees to 50.

The reduction results from employees being moved to other positions on post to voluntarily leaving employment with the federal government.

Post officials determined that it was necessary to conduct a reduction in the civilian work force after a thorough review of fiscal 1993 budget and manpower guidance received from higher headquarters.

Terrorists use modern tools

Sapper course students learn to recognize traps

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

To the naked eye the lamp appeared normal. Nothing about it seemed suspicious; but, instead of providing light, it was wired to destroy.

At any other time the harmless buzz the lamp produced when activated would actually be a deadly explosion; however, the lamp was being used to teach a lesson, a lesson in terrorism.

Students of the Sapper (Engineer) Course at the School of the Americas used everything from a pair of shoes to an ordinary desk lamp as examples of harmless items made deadly by terrorists or drug dealers in Central and South America.

According to Capt. Fernando Paiz-Prem, a Sapper guest instructor from Guatemala, these basic items become deadly when terrorists and drug dealers turn them into booby traps.

Possibly the scariest reality is the accessibility of necessary triggering devices.

"The commercial switches (which trigger the devices) anybody can buy in any electrical store," Paiz-Prem said.

"The hardest thing to find are the explosives," he said. However, even the ingredients necessary to cause a blast big enough to kill or maim is found in a common, everyday item in rural communities.

"Guerrillas use ammonium nitrate or fertilizer and mix it with combustible products — either oil or diesel fuel," Paiz-Prem said.

The special course on booby traps was developed two years ago when Paiz-Prem came to SOA as an instructor.

"I decided students needed knowledge about traps, especially the ones from countries with guerrilla or drug-trafficking problems," he said.

The course gives students an opportunity to learn about the devices, and it gives instructors a chance to update their knowledge, Paiz-Prem added.

The most important lesson of this particular class, Paiz-Prem said, is that the devices can be built by anyone to kill or seriously injure people.

NIM adds Chilean wings to its airborne collection

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The National Infantry Museum recently added some jump wings to its prestigious collection in the Airborne Room.

Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, assistant commandant from Chile for the School of the Americas, presented Z. Frank Hanner, museum curator, with the jump, jumpmaster and master wings of the Chilean Armed Forces.

Molina also donated the Chilean airborne school badge to the museum.

Molina was joined by Lt. Col. Mark C. Collier, director of the Special Operations-Civil Military Operations Department; Lt. Col. Arturo Merino, guest instructor from Chile; and Capt. Ricardo Martinez, also a guest instructor from Chile.

Molina decided to donate the wings when he first visited the museum and saw all of the wings displayed from around the world.

"It is important for the museum to have information from different countries," Molina added. He also wanted visitors to be able to see the jump wings from his country's armed forces.

The Chilean jump school is officially titled the Airborne and Special Forces School. It was founded in 1965 and is located in Colina, Chile.

29th briefs Army official

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Assistant Secretary of the Army for Research, Development and Acquisition Stephen Conver visited Fort Benning Tuesday. Conver was briefed on weapons systems and participated in a demonstration by the 29th Infantry Regiment at Red Cloud Range.

Soldiers and noncommissioned officers from the 1st and 2nd battalions of the 29th were on hand as subject matter experts to brief Conver and demonstrate the weapons systems.

The vehicle weapons systems on display were the M-2A1 and M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicles, the M-901 improved tow vehicle, the M-106 mortar carrier and the stingray (a Bradley Fighting Vehicle modified to counter enemy optics). The M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle was also compared with a modified Bradley displaying new seating arrangements and a new driver's thermal night sight.

Conver was also briefed and given a demonstration of the firepower of the complete family of mortars to include the 60mm, I-81mm, 120mm mortar systems and the M-106 mortar carrier and the M-106 equipped with the enhanced mortar fire control system that significantly reduced the time needed to set up and fire, compared to the current system.

Conver was also briefed on, and given the opportunity to drive an M-988 high-mobility, multi-purpose wheeled vehicle. Conver visited the Collins Training Center earlier in the day where he was briefed on the unit conduct of fire trainer and the precision gunnery system.

WORLD WAR II— A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• At Guadalcanal, the 1st Marine Division attacked west of the river Matanikau, successfully wiping out three Japanese artillery battalions that had been shelling the airstrip on Henderson Field.

• Also on Guadalcanal, the Japanese battleships Kango and Haruna bombarded Henderson Field, destroying 50 U.S. planes to include more than half of the bombers on the island. Adm. Raizo Tanaka took advantage of the American setback, landing 4,500 men and large quantities of supplies at Tassafaronga.

• Just off Guadalcanal, at Cape Esperance, an American covering squadron, under the command of Adm. Norman Scott, engaged another covering squadron of Japanese ships, commanded by Adm. Aritomo Soto, in a confused night action. The American force lost one destroyer but sank a Japanese destroyer and cruiser. Both sides' convoys eventually reached their destinations.

• On the Eastern Front, Adolf Hitler overruled his military commanders and altered their strategic plan again, suspending all offensive operations on the Eastern Front with the exception of Stalingrad, where the XLVIII Panzer Corps had reached the Volga River. Hitler's constant intrusions inadvertently weakened the German effort.

• At Stalingrad, the Red Army removed command authority of the commissars as the Soviet forces began to mount reinforcements for a counterattack at Stalingrad.

• In the Battle of the Atlantic, a British liberator bomber sank the German U-boat V.597. This was the first success experienced by the British Royal Air Force's Coastal Command.

• In New Guinea, Allied forces pursued and engaged Japanese forces retreating along the Kokoda Trail at Templeton's Crossing.

• Fort Benning officials announced plans to offset some of the problems facing the post's increasing wartime population by building a new 250-seat cafeteria on Ingersoll Avenue.

NCOs average 70 percent for trial SDTs

Tradoc News Service

FORT EUSTIS, Va. — More than 125,000 noncommissioned officers who have taken the new Self-Development Test during the first year of validation have averaged answering 70 percent of the questions correctly.

Officials expect the scores to go up when SDT results become part of the Enlisted Personnel Management System in fiscal 1994, and when soldiers become more familiar with the new Field Manual 25-101, Battle Focused Training.

The SDT is aimed at NCOs from sergeant through sergeant first class. It replaces the Skill Qualification Test, which was taken by all enlisted ranks in skill levels 10 through 40.

"Another thing that we're finding during this validation period is that NCOs aren't studying as much as we'd hoped," said Jim Tripp, deputy director of individual training evaluation for the Army Training Support Center.

"That's not totally surprising, either, since the test is not now used for any EPMS purpose. The results are for the NCOs' individual use during this period so there's not as great an incentive for them to study," he said.

"The fiscal 92-93 validation is a period to fine tune each individual test and iron out any bugs that may exist before the SDTs are linked to EPMS beginning in 1994," Tripp said.

Some encouraging news has come from surveys of more than 3,000 NCOs from sergeant through command sergeant major.

"Almost 80 percent of those surveyed agreed that there's a need for a test to measure self-development," Tripp said.

The response from master sergeants and sergeants major was 85 percent positive for such a test. Seventy percent of NCOs being tested said the test is needed before they took it. That number went up to 77 percent after they completed the test.

"I think today's soldiers realize they have to take some responsibility for their own career advancement," Tripp said. "Self-development is more than just taking this test; it's all the things that go into preparing oneself to be a professional soldier."

The key element to the test is in the title — self-development.

"Soldiers are supposed to study and prepare on their own time," Tripp said. "The unit's role, basically, is to provide support from the standpoint of making sure that NCOs have access to reference material they need to study."

The SDT is a three-part, 100-question, multiple-choice answer examination. The leadership and training management sections each have 20 questions. The military occupational specialty portion has 60.

A two-year validation period began Oct. 1, 1991. During the first year, only active Army and active National Guard NCOs were tested. Reserve component soldiers began taking the SDT Oct. 1.

Tim McCarver is ready if World Series goes distance

By Jim Gaffney,
Tribune Media Services

"Some people say it was the most exciting World Series ever played, and I don't think that's a hyperbole. I think it ranks right up there."

SPOTLIGHT

So says CBS baseball announcer Tim McCarver about last year's fall classic, won by the Minnesota Twins in seven emotional games over the Atlanta Braves. On Oct. 17, McCarver and partner Sean McDonough will be in the home park of the National League champion for game one of the 1992 World Series. Coverage begins at 8 p.m. with a special edition of "Baseball '92," the network's pregame show hosted by Pat O'Brien and Jim Kaat. The game's first pitch is set for shortly before 8:30 p.m.

McCarver, a former catcher who played in three World Series for the St. Louis Cardinals during a 22-year major-league career, will be broadcasting his third Series for CBS. His first, in 1990, saw the Cincinnati Reds sweep the Oakland A's in four games.

Then, 1991's edition took it to the other extreme, as Minnesota went the distance to edge Atlanta. To McCarver, not only is a longer Series more exciting to watch, it's actually easier to announce.

"In a long Series, it's the players who take over the broadcast," he says. "All of a sudden we (the announcers) are no longer setting up the action. Instead, we're watching and enjoying the games along with the fans.

"We end up doing a lot less work when a Series is close," he adds, "like in games six and seven last year. For the most part, our contributions were just to gather the loose ends."

McCarver also says that players' attitudes seem to change as a Series goes on. The back-slapping camaraderie that existed early-on between the teams, stemming mainly from a sense of relief after having survived the league playoffs, is replaced by intense concentration.

"Players are often very loose coming into the Series because the playoffs were so tough," he reasons, "but what I noticed last year was that as the Series got longer, it took on more of a gut-wrenching playoff-type atmosphere. It was like in the movie 'Rocky,' when Apollo Creed got hit for the first time. It woke him up to take what he was doing more seriously. That's kind of what a long Series does; it gets the guys more centered."

Tim McCarver and Sean McDonough (in striped shirt)

With the 89th World Series in baseball history at hand, 32 of the the previous 88 have gone the full seven games, including all three that involved McCarver. His first, in 1964 — when St. Louis upset the New York Yankees — was something out of a storybook, as the then-23-year-old led all batters with a .478 average. "Certainly from a personal standpoint, that was a huge high," McCarver remembers. "Facing the Yankees, with all their tradition, they were almost bigger than life when we were growing up.

"And that was my first Series, too," he adds. "There's always something special about the first one."

Three years later, the Cardinals were back for an October meeting with the AL-champion Boston Red Sox. As in '64, St. Louis came out on top, but McCarver's line in the box score didn't look quite so good.

"The second time around, I was more or less expected to do (well)," he says, "but I didn't do a thing. (Teammate) Orlando Cepeda and I finished first and second in the National League most-valuable-player voting that year, but we both ended up hitting only .125 (actually .103 for Cepeda) in the Series. If we had done our jobs, we would have won the thing in less than seven games."

Game seven in Boston matched the Series' two pitching stars, Bob Gibson for the Cardinals against Jim Lonborg for the Red Sox. Gibson, working with three days rest, out-dueled Lonborg, rested for only two; St. Louis won easily, 7-2. "I think people in New England still feel that if Lonborg had had one more day of rest, things would have turned out differently," McCarver says, "and they may have a point."

At the end of a long Series, teams often come away respecting the opponent, regardless of who wins and loses. It's rare that any bad blood between the teams will surface, but McCarver claims that's just what happened against the Red Sox. "A lot of their players were ghostwriting for Boston newspapers, and of course, we read what they wrote (about us). There was a lot of bitterness in that Series; we took it personally. I remember one headline the morning of the seventh game said, 'Lonborg and Champagne,' and we all said, 'My a—, we'll see about that.' Winning that Series felt very good."

However, McCarver wouldn't feel quite so good the following autumn. After taking a three-games-to-one lead over the Detroit Tigers in 1968, the Cardinals dropped three straight to lose the Series. Even after so many years, it's obvious in

Desert Storm 'war souvenirs' tell us where we're going

You can't tell where you're going if you don't know where you've been. Army historians scavenge and hunt for anything that explains our heritage. During Operation Desert Storm, historians collected bits and pieces of the war. What they've brought back shows how the Iraqi army fought highly advanced allied forces with an incredible variety of outdated equipment.

Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Soldiers Television Service reports that many of those weapons are at Anniston Army Depot, Ala., waiting to find homes in Army museums.

Also on USAIC TV next week, Armed Forces Digest reports on the status of the Women in Military Service Memorial in Washington, D.C., and how business is booming at Army education centers.

Money management rests with parents

Georgia Society of CPAs

There's one vital subject that's usually not part of a grade school curriculum: money management. This responsibility falls on parents.

The Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants points out that teaching children how to manage their money is necessary for them to develop the discipline and skills they will need to manage their finances effectively as adults.

Benefits of allowances

One of the best ways to teach children about money is to give them money of their own to manage. Providing children with a fixed allowance on a regular basis is the best way to develop their money management skills and can be vary effective educational experience for children as young as age 6.

Children should clearly understand the purpose of the allowance and the consequences of their spending habits. The child should be aware that if he decides to spend the money on comic books during the week, he may not be able to go to the movies on Saturday.

Designate an "allowance day." Selecting a day in the middle of the week as allowance day teaches children to make their funds last through the weekend, a time when they are apt to spend the most money.

Keep in mind that associating an allowance with household chores may not be advisable. A child should feel a sense of responsibility to the house as a family member, and should not view his or her domestic contributions as employment.

Teach savings habits

Another way to actively involve children in managing money is by opening a savings account in their name. Parents should discuss the reasons and benefits of depositing money into an account and explain how money can grow by earning interest. To teach your children the importance of setting their own financial goals, let them make the decisions about their savings and the use of their money.

Setting the example

What you say about money and how you and your spouse communicate about it also affects your child's perception of money. If possible, involve your child in the financial management of the household by discussing how your family budget works. Then encourage your child to develop his or her own savings goal — for example, a raft to take on vacation or extra money for water-skiing lessons.

Finally, CPAs caution parents against giving money to children who continually deplete their own resources.

Later in life, it will be difficult for these children to find someone to bail them out when they have not managed their money effectively.

Children's education calls for early financial planning

Georgia Society of CPAs

With the cost of college education now running more than $10,000 per year, you should think about how to finance your children's education long before it's time for them to apply to colleges.

According to the Georgia Society of Certified Public Accountants, your savings strategy should depend on your age, the age of your child, and your income, as well as your financial resources.

Who is footing the bill?

Although almost half of all undergraduates qualify for some form of financial aid, the major financial demands of a college education still fall squarely on the family. With college costs rising at an average of 6 to 7 percent annually, a family now needs to set aside nearly $4,000 per year, earning an interest rate of 7 to 8 percent per year, to cover the full cost of a bachelor's degree for their newborn child.

Consider child's age

Your investment decisions should be guided, in part, by your child's age. If your children are under age 14, you can boost their college savings and minimize your taxes by shifting assets to them--thereby enabling each of them to generate as much as $1,200 in unearned income that will be taxed at a lower rate than your own.

Custodial accounts

The Uniform Gifts to Minors Act or the newer Uniform Transfer to Minors Act, enables you to set up custodial accounts through which you can transfer stocks, bonds and other property to your child.

Income from a custodial; account is taxable to the child, subject to the "kiddie tax."

Savings Bonds

U.S. Savings Bonds are especially well suited to college savings plans because they produce tax-deferred savings that compound interest until you cash them in.

What's more, their maturity can be timed to when you expect to be making tuition payments.

If the proceeds from Series EE Bonds issued after December 31, 1989, are used to pay for qualified higher education expenses, the interest these bonds earn may be tax-free.

Other savings vehicles

The College Sure certificate of deposit offered by the College Savings Bank in Princeton, New Jersey, is another option to consider.

A federally insured, variable-interest rate certificate of deposit, the College Sure pays an interest rate indexed at 1.5 percent less than the college tuition inflation rate.

Finally, you may want to consider guaranteed tuition plans now available in some states.

To participate in these savings programs, you pay the state a lump sum for four years of future tuition at a public university or college in that state.

CPAs point out that regardless of the savings mechanism you select, it's important to make saving for your child's education an integral part of your personal financial plan.

Civilians earn CDA

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Two Fort Benning Child Development Services program assistants each recently earned the Child- Development Associate Credential from the Council for Early- Childhood Professional Recognition in Washington, D.C.

Though there are others on post at the Custer Terrace and McGraw Manor Child Development Centers, Vanessa Harris and Leila Armour Jones are the first two staff members from the Marne Road Child Development Center to hold this credential.

Working on this educational milestone began by their acquiring packets from the national office and through independent study, completing extensive write-ups on 13 modules of topics ranging from safety to professionalism.

Harris

Knowledge of each topic is displayed by planned activities, an explanation of why they were done and what was achieved by them.

After completing the written portion, a representative from the national office observes the candidate in the classroom for three hours, questions the candidate for about 1 1/2 hours, and then a committee including a neutral parent representative, the candidate's adviser and the national observer discuss the written portion, classroom performance and vote on whether or not the credential should be awarded.

Jones

Having this credential makes Harris and Jones eligible to attend other training on and off post and is recognized by some community colleges with credit toward acquiring an associate's degree.

Harris said that she has an associate degree in substance abuse from Phillips Junior College, but she became interested in child care in 1986 when she went through the Associate Children's Education Program in Ansbach, Germany, as part of on-the-job training for a position she had there.

Her goal now is to get a master's degree in education. She works with preschoolers at the Marne Road center.

Jones began working with children in 1974 when she completed the Enrichment Services Center Training and Education Program at Fort Benning.

"After that, I worked in a variety of child-care centers as my husband moved with the Army," she said.

She has worked in child care in Columbus, Fort Carson, Colo.; Schofield Barracks, Hawaii; and Fort Ord, Calif. Jones handles infants and toddlers at the Marne Road center.

McCarver voices that some pain remains. "That loss was devastating," he says with a sigh. "Not only were we up three games to one, but we had just manhandled them in our three wins, yet it wasn't a matter of overconfidence on our part. They just deserve a lot of credit."

Almost a quarter-century later, do the thrills of the two wins overshadow the disappointment of the loss? "Yeah, but the disappointment is still there," replies McCarver. "I'll never forget it ... but I'll never forget any of them. Your concentration is at such a high level that those things — both the highs and the lows — are just embedded in your mind forever."

SOA honors Hispanic heritage

Speakers share history, culture

Carla Y. Brown

A Latin American dance was part of the festivities at the Hispanic Heritage Luncheon at the Officers' Club.

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

In recognition of Hispanic Heritage Month, the School of the Americas sent two representatives to post functions honoring Hispanic heritage.

Maj. Sonia M. Roca and Dr. Russell W. Ramsey shared their knowledge and experience of Hispanic culture with guests at the Hispanic Heritage Luncheon and at the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

Roca, the first female officer of the SOA Command and General Staff Course, shared her message of success through personal initiative and desire with guests at the Officers' Club during the luncheon Oct. 8 at the Officers' Club – a luncheon that also included demonstrations of Latin American dancing.

According to Roca, at a time when the world is celebrating the 500th anniversary of the discovery of the Americas, the message she feels most strongly about is success through self-esteem, regardless of one's background.

As a native of Puerto Rico and a member of the U.S. Army, she said she feels "doubly proud" to be representing Puerto Rico and the United States.

In addition to using heightened self-esteem as a tool for success, Roca also emphasized the importance of "wanting to make a difference."

It is this attitude that has Roca poised to make a difference for her race and gender.

Having researched the contributions of Hispanic females in the U. S. military, Roca hopes to call attention to their efforts by writing to the National Military History Department in Washington, D.C.

Ramsey, visiting professor at SOA, spoke to the Marksmanship Unit, Sept. 29 at the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy.

His presentation centered on the contributions of Hispanics in the military and the importance of training Latin American military personnel at SOA.

He also recalled the contribution of Raymond Ortiz, a Hispanic who was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross and three Purple Hearts in 1965 during action in Vietnam while assigned to the 1st Air Cavalry.

Ramsey was able to speak from personal experience in this instance since he was Ortiz's company commander during his heroic actions.

CVCC now offers classes on post

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Chattahoochee Valley State Community College in Phenix City, Ala., has joined hands with the Fort Benning community by beginning to offer post secondary educational classes beginning with the fall quarter, Oct. 1 through Dec. 9.

The arrangement to hold classes on post was made at the invitation of the commanding general, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, and the director of Operations and Training, according to Laverne Worth, acting educational services officer, Army Continuing Education System.

This fall the college is offering three developmental studies courses: basic writing, basic mathematics and developmental algebra.

These courses are designed to meet the educational needs of students who require reinforcement of basic writing and computational skills. All are being held evenings in Infantry Hall.

Worth said that other programs in the near future will include emergency medical technology, real estate and fire science. The need for these was based on a post-wide educational needs assessment survey conducted by the Army Continuing Education System.

With the aim of enriching the quality of life for the Fort Benning military community by providing additional alternatives for college-level studies, the addition of the college to the Fort Benning educational opportunities will be joined in the near future by Columbus College and Columbus Technical Institute, said Worth.

Worth noted that excellent degree programs have been available on post for the past 16 years through Troy State University.

All four institutions have agreed with the concept of offering non-duplicating programs.

Chattahoochee Valley State Community College can be found on post in Building 2612 in Soldiers' Plaza. Soldiers, family members and civilians seeking advice or enrollment should visit their servicing Education Center and this office for assistance.

- Main Post - Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2602
- Kelley Hill - Building 9027
- Sand Hill - Building 3006
- Harmony Church - Building 4635.

On hand for the cementing of the arrangements were Dr. Rickey Huffstutler, dean of administrative and financial services/acting dean of instruction; Mike Williams, assistant dean of administrative and financial services/acting assistant dean of instruction; Brenda Smith, coordinator of community relations/ recruiter; Doug Chambers, dean of students; and Jane Norden, from the college's president's office.

Installation CFC fund drive reaches 11 percent of goal

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

A total of $52,626 has been turned in to the Combined Federal Campaign at Fort Benning so far, according to Mary Letter, a CFC staff member.

"This is 11 percent of the 1992 goal of $500,000," she added.

This annual fund-raiser kicked off Sept. 28 and is scheduled to run through Nov. 20. CFC is the Fort Benning part of the local United Way drive.

The campaign solicits monetary support from soldiers and civilians on post for a variety of humanitarian agencies.

Those on post who receive help from CFC funds include the supplemental Food Locker, Volunteer Services, Youth and Handicapped Programs, Chaplains Enlisted Outreach, post community improvement, child care provider certification, the Family Unit Network Center and dental health.

Civilian personnel director to get award

Gunter became the first woman director of civilian personnel at Fort Benning in 1984. Since then, she has been recognized for outstanding performance every year by TRADOC, including the Civilian Personnel Sustained Leadership Award in 1990 and the Best Civilian Personnel Services Award in 1991.

Her staff has received awards and recognitions from local and state agencies, U.S. Department of Labor and Office of Personnel Management for operation of a Federal Equal Opportunity Recruiting Program and handicapped and disabled veterans programs.

LAAF says goodbye to last fixed-wing plane

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Lawson Army Airfield said goodbye to its last fixed wing aircraft Oct. 2.

The U-21 utility aircraft is a small, five-passenger aircraft primarily used for VIP transport. It was flown to Columbus, Ohio, to a Reserve unit.

Fort Benning's fixed-wing aircraft have all left post resulting from the Army's reshaping of its flight transportation system.

Under the old system, a post was assigned aircraft for its use for VIP transport or any other mission necessary.

"The new centralized hub system is how the Army will keep its planes," said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Dick Fegreus, the pilot who, with his co-pilot Col. Chick Eagle, flew the plane to Ohio.

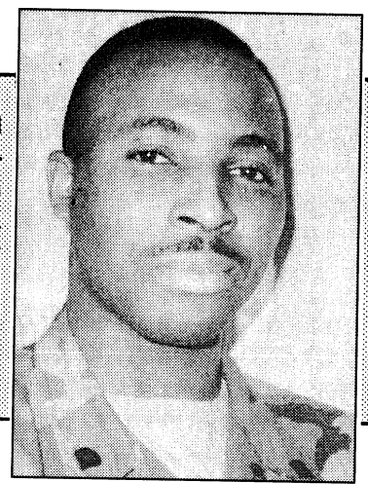
"From now on, when we want to use a plane, we must request it through channels. No longer is there a guarantee that we'll get a plane right away."

Fegreus said although it may take longer to get a plane for Fort Benning's use, more posts will benefit from having planes available to them for missions.

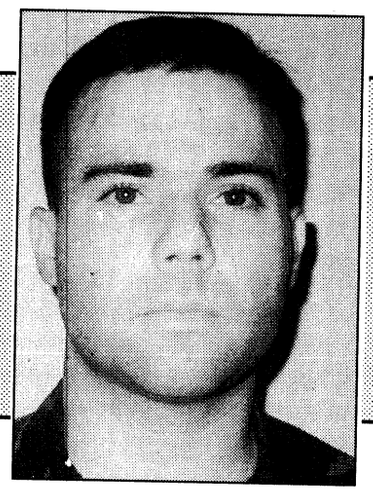
VARIOUS VOICES

Do you think voting is important, and why?

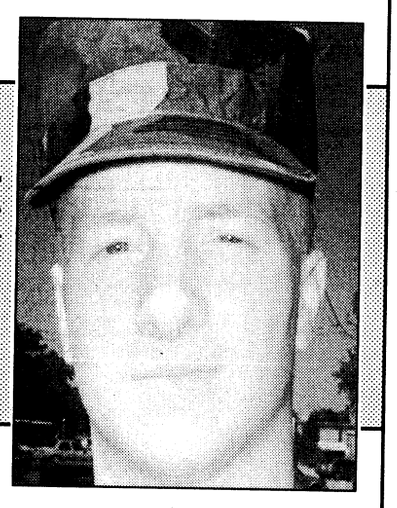
Lisa Kelly, clerk/typist, Training and Development Division, Department of Civilian Personnel — "Yes, voting is important, because our country is based on government by the people. If you don't exercise your right to vote, you're not participating.."



Spc. Levi McKeller, 533rd Transportation Cmpany — "Voting is especially important to the military because the president has a major effect on how you'll live for the next four years. He determines economic policy and can determine the course of your career "



Ist Lt. Dennis McCarthy, Company C, Ist Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Voting is important because if you don't vote, you really have no say as to what laws are enacted. Being in the military, it makes sense to vote for the candidate with the best military platform."



Pvt. 1 David Reed, Company D, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regt., Infantry Training Brigade — "Voting is definitely important. Basically, you're voting for the person you'll be working for."

Haydee Collins, Army and Air Force Exchange Service employee — "Yes, voting is important because if you feel something is wrong in the country, you can vote for the person you think is best to fix it."

Sgt. Velma Spann Redmond, Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers' Academy — "No, I don't think voting is important. I think it's imperative. It's an individual responsibility — how else can one person have a voice in the process of progress unless that voice is heard? Voting is our most powerful voice!"

Test leaves sergeant 'board' stiff

COMMENTARY

For two weeks, Sgt. Axtion Jaxtion roamed the Public Affairs Office with the "Definitive Guide to Promotion Boards," reciting dates, figures and immediate action drills to take in case of chemical attack.

After doing that for two weeks, he began shoving the guide under our noses, demanding that we ask him a question, any question.

Most everyone was busy and refused to help. But, since I usually have time on my hands, I asked questions I was sure the board would ask.

Under current affairs, I wanted to know the names of the countries that currently exist in what was once the Soviet Union. Naturally, I asked him to spell each of these new republics and to tell me who was currently the head of state in each one.

I asked him to explain who is killing whom and why in what was once Yugoslavia, and I asked him to tell me what the men's giant slalom course from the 1984 Winter Olympics in Sarajevo is now being used for, as well as the ice hockey rink.

I asked him to what community in Alabama does Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton trace his roots and how many 'greats' as in great-grandfather ago did this occur.

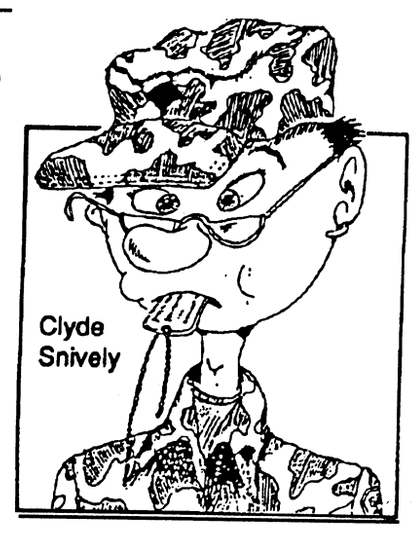
Moving to military history, I asked him what the alternate choice of a name for Fort Benning was.

Another was the street address of the apartment in Phenix City where Gen. Colin Powell stayed when he was stationed at Fort Benning.

Since he's a jumper, I asked him the origin of "Geronimo," and what unit used it when leaping from perfectly good airplanes?

Then I hit him with, "What unit the 11th Air Assault Division evolved into and how many helicopters did it have when it deployed from here to Vietnam?"

Under modern day history of the post, I asked him how many offices there are in Infantry Hall, and how many there were before the current moves began.



In line with this, I wanted to know where the headquarters of the Directorate of Operations and Training is located and where it will be located in six months.

Moving along to military courtesy and customs, I caught him when I asked how many steps to the left and how many to the rear does a subordinate walk when walking with a senior officer.

Then I caught him with a multiple choice question: "What is a soldier in uniform supposed to do during the pledge of allegiance indoors and during the playing of the National Anthem indoors: a) Salute? b) Place right hand over heart? c) Stand at attention?"

Turning to soldier skills, I thought it necessary for our promotion candidate to be current on things like nuclear, biological and chemical warfare.

A situation I posed was: "If you're walking down the road and come across a white triangle with black lettering, should you be concerned? What should you do? Did you prepare a will before deploying?"

Since he's a rear echelon soldier, I asked him how fast he can type while wearing rubber gloves issued with the chemical suits.

Naturally leaders need to know how to lead, but they can't lead if they can't find their way, so I asked him, "What's a click?"

As I suspected he only had one definition, not two.

To wrap it up, I asked him to recite the 11 Special Orders.

Axtion failed my test miserably. I have great faith and confidence that he'll do well on the real board.

Memorial to honor servicewomen

The Women in Military Service for America organization was established by Congress in 1986 to construct a lasting memorial to the women veterans who so gallantly served our nation's defense. The nonprofit organization has worked tirelessly over the years to raise monies to support this enormous project.

The memorial will be located at the entrance to Arlington National Cemetery and will honor the American military women of the past, present and future. The memorial will contain a theater that will bring to life the role of military women throughout our nation's history.

The focus of the memorial will feature a computer register that will give instant access to the names, photographs and brief history of all registered women who have served in our country's defense.

The organization has determined through informal surveys that many individuals are unaware of the foundation's efforts. I recently met with retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Wilma Vaught, president of the organization's memorial foundation, and gave her my support.

Commanders are prohibited from direct solicitation of funds for organizations other than the Combined Federal Campaign or Army Emergency Relief.

The secretary of Defense has authorized Army personnel to attend fund-raising events conducted on behalf of the memorial.

In addition, ceremonial units may be provided for public events sponsored by the foundation.

I recommend that all commanders promote public awareness regarding the WIMSA Memorial Foundation and encourage wide dissemination of this memorandum.

Individuals who desire more information or would like to volunteer to serve as points of contact for the organization in their community should contact WIMSA toll free (800) I -SALUTE or (800) 472-5883.

The leadership of the U.S. Army supports this tribute to the 1.8 million women who have served our country throughout history.

Your assistance in promoting awareness of WIMSA will make this memorial a reality.

Post officials set hairstyle, grooming standards

In addition to the grooming policies described in Army Regulation 670-1, haircuts, without reference to style for all male soldiers of Fort Benning, will conform to the following standards:

• The bulk or length of hair will noe exceed two inches for box haircuts or any other style haircut that grooms straight up from the scalp. These hairstyles will not interfere with the normal wear of approved military headgear. Furthermore, the wear of oversized military headgear to accommodate these hairstyles is unacceptable and a violation of the standards outlined in AR 670-1.

• Soldiers may part their hair in one of three locations, right, left or center (normal part areas.) The length of the part must not extend beyond the crown of the head. It can be combed or razor cut into the hair. The normal part area starts two inches above the temples. Only a slight angle in the part is permitted to accommodate various head shapes.

• Cornrows are an acceptable hairstyle for females only. "Cornrows" is a hairstyle where hair is divided into braided sections that are flat to the scalp in rows. The hair will not fall over the eyebrows or extend below the bottom edge of the collar or interfere with proper wearing of military headgear or protective masks.

• Personal hygiene and training requirements dictate stricter standards for one station unit training trainees and ranger students. Under no circumstance will soldiers be forced to shave their heads unless directed by a doctor for medical reasons.

• All trainees and students other than OSUT trainees and ranger students will be required to maintain their haircuts in accordance with Army standards at all tomes throughout the duration of their training.

• Wearing of the hair in uniform except as prescribed in AR 670-1 and this memorandum is prohibited.

LETTER

On behalf of the Army Community Service Outreach Program, I wish to personally thank The Bayonet staff for being supportive of programs that reach out and assist our military families.

Due to the downsizing of the Army, I will transfer to another program titled "The Army Career and Alumni Program." This program assists soldiers who are transitioning out of the Army into the civilian work place.

I have enjoyed the time I've spent helping families in the Outreach Program, and I will miss the wonderful people with whom I have had the opportunity to work.

It gives me gratification to know that with The Bayonet's help, families were kept abreast of current information and linked services and programs available in the military and civilian community.

Thank you for all the care and concern displayed in assisting our military families. The Outreach Program has benefited greatly from The Bayonet's contributions.

I will continue to serve soldiers and their families and I will look forward to networking together again in the future.

Hospital celebrates Food Festival Week

By Jeanne Dickerson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital helped to celebrate the American Heart Association Food Festival Week last month.

First Lt. Karen Schultz, registered dietitian, assisted by 2nd Lt. Sarah Van Eden, another dietitian from the hospital's Nutrition Care Division, manned a booth in the Commissary where they answered questions on how to "Turn Down Your Fat-0-Stat."

There was a display explaining a low-fat, low-cholesterol diet. Customers were advised to keep their total daily fat intake below 30 percent of daily calories consumed and to keep saturated fat intake below 10 percent.

The dietitians explained that consumers should read labels on food products and beware of those where saturated fats such as lard, palm oil or coconut oil were listed among the ingredients.

Healthful products should contain no more than five to six grams of fat per serving, they said. The average person in good health should keep their fat intake to no more than 50 grams per day.

Schultz and Van Eden gave out handouts containing a pledge to take 12 steps to lower cholesterol.

Schultz said she was pleasantly surprised at how many customers told her they are already taking many of these steps, such as using margarine with no more then two grams of saturated fat per tablespoon, avoiding fried foods, and using low-fat salad dressing and mayonnaise.

Many consumers also said they did not realize that low (or no) cholesterol on the product label is less apt to reduce cholesterol levels Than products that are low fat.

Schultz also said that skim milk has a much lower percentage of fat th 2 percent milk.

Anyone who would like inrmation on healthful ways to preare meals can call 544-1542.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Michael H. Lane
Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I own a Veteran's Administration-mortgaged home that has been hard to sell in the recent economy. My real estate agent says it will sell easily if I allow the buyer to assume my VA loan. He says that I can get a release from VA, and my eligibility for another VA loan will be restored if I do this. This looks like my best chance to sell. What is your advice?

A: Your agent is right on one count, wrong on another.

Failure to get the VA release of liability can result in a VA collection from you if the buyer fails to pay.

Even if you secure a release of liability, entitlement to a VA loan cannot be used again until the loan is paid off by the buyer or the buyer uses his or her VA entitlement to substitute for yours.

When a buyer "assumes" your loan, he takes over the loan for you, by contract. He promises to carry out your loan as you did and under the same terms, such as making your payments, carrying insurance and so forth.

You remain "secondarily liable" for the loan. That is, if the buyer ever defaults on his payments, the seller will remain liable for the loan. The buyer is primarily liable, and you are secondarily liable on the loan.

To avoid an unpleasant surprise in the future, you may secure a "release from liability" from the VA if three conditions are met: The loan is current at the time of assumption, the buyer qualifies as credit worthy and the buyer assumes all of your financial obligations. Most realtors are knowledgeable concerning this option and can help you arrange the paperwork.

After securing the release, the seller may sell his house without worrying about later liability.

But this is not the last consideration. If you allow assumption, your right to use the VA loan program in the future, that is, your "entitlement," vll be affected. So long as the assumption is ineffect, your ability to get a new VA loan will bempaired.

The only wato have the assumption and use your entitlementgain before the loan is paid off is to have the loa assumed by a person with VA entitlement.

This is called Substitution of Entitlement by the VA. This mns that in most cases, you will not be able to e the VA loan program again until the other lon is paid in full.

Whether yoshould use a VA mortgage assumption toelp sell your house is an economic decisin, not a legal one. However, failure to realizthe consequences can lead to surprise and disapointment later.

Sales target soldiers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Soldiers beware! They're out there. And they want your money.

Military personnel are often prime targets for companies out to make a fast buck.

Staff lawyer Michael Lane of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate said that the world of high-pressure sales is the realm of predators and victims.

"Soldiers often make excellent targets because so many of them are young, inexperienced and away from home for the first time," he said. "The predators know that soldiers have a constant source of income and that they tend to buy things without thinking about it."

Encyclopedia sales, automobile dealers and photography and health club memberships are classic examples of goods and services that rely on the compulsive buying practices of consumers, said Rick Parker, also a staff lawyer.

"I'm not saying that these things are necessarily bad. In most cases, the companies are not actually doing anything illegal," Parker said. "What happens is that people impulsively sign up for these things, change their minds and then find out that it is too late to get out."

The best advice, according to both Lane and Parker, is to think carefully about anything you are going to purchase that costs more than 10 percent of your disposable income after your bills are paid.

"Before you buy something, ask yourself, 'Is this something that I really need and can afford,'" said Lane. "Wait a few days or even a whole pay period to think it over; and, if you decide that you really want and need a particular thing, then go back."

Lane and Parker also offered the following advice:

• Read and understand every single word of a contract before signing it. If a salesperson tells you something that is not in the contract, make sure that such additions are put in writing.

• Ask questions about the terms in the contract and the company's policy regarding returns. The more you know about what you are getting into, the better you can protect yourself from being ripped off.

What about getting out of a contract after you have signed it?

"People seem to think that all contracts have a 72-hour cancellation period. This is completely false," Parker said. "With door-to-door sales, there is a 72-hour grace period. Some contracts give a seven-day period during which the buyer can withdraw. Any contracts that are not door-to-door, such as auto sales, are binding as soon as the buyer signs the contract unless there are specific provisions in the contract for cancellation."

He added that if you don't understand something on contract, ask your first sergeant c first line supervisor for help c bring the contract to the Leg Assistance Office if you can get th salesperson to release it.

"A lot of them won't release th contracts because they don't wai to give you a chance to think abo it," Parker said.

The bottom line is that th consumer is his or her own bes defense against being suckered int a bad deal.

"We can't protect people agains their own ignorance," Lane sai. "Make absolutely sure you know what you are getting into before you sign your name to a contract

Apartment dwellers can avoid pitfalls

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Current and would-be apartment dwellers, whether soldier or civilian, should be aware of some potential pitfalls.

Michael Lane and Rick Parker, staff lawyers with the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, recently gave some advice on how to avoid some of the problems that arise between landlords and tenants.

Here is what they had to say:

• Make sure you read and understand every word in the lease before you sign it.

• Inspect the apartment before you sign the lease. That way, you can protect yourself from getting charged for damage for which you are not responsible.

• Ask questions concerning who is responsible for repairs and how the lease can be terminated. Georgia law allows soldiers who are undergoing a permanent change of station or temporary duty more than six months in duration to terminate their leases with 30 days advance notice and a copy of their orders.

• Make sure what the landlord says and what the lease says are the same. If the landlord agrees to something not in the lease, make sure that he or she adds it in writing to the lease before you sign it.

• To terminate a lease that is on a month-by-month basis, you generally must submit 30 days advance notice. Make sure the notice is presented in time so that you do not get charged an extra month of rent.

• If you own pets, make sure that you understand your apartment's policy. Also make sure you understand who is responsible for any damage your pet causes.

CONVICTIONS

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

A federal jury for the Columbus Division of the Middle District of Georgia convicted Marvin Terrell Brooks of aggravated sexual assault and burglary Sept. 30.

Brooks was found guilty of entering a soldier's quarters on Fort Benning in July 1990 and raping the soldier's wife at knife point.

At the time of the offense, Brooks was a juvenile. The U.S. Attorney's office obtained permission to try him as an adult.

According to Capt Douglas Dribben, special assistant, U.S. attorney, Brooks covered his victim's face with his hands and a pillow during the rape to prevent her from identifying him. The defendant was identified through the use of DNA, or deoxyribonucleic acid, evidence, Dribben said.

DNA is a molecule found within most of the cells of the human body, including blood and semen. DNA is unique to each individual, although DNA does not differ between a person's blood and his semen, Dribben said.

DNA extracted from semen left by the rapist matched that found in the defendant's blood, Dribben said. The probability of someone other than the defendant matching the DNA was estimated at 1 in 780,000, he added.

In addition, the government introduced evidence that the blood type of the rapist and a hair left at the scene matched that of the defendant, said Dribben.

This was the first use of DNA evidence in the Columbus Division of the Middle District of Georgia, said Dribben. The case was presented by the U.S. Attorney's Office because the crime occurred on Fort Benning, a federal reservation.

District Judge J. Robert Elliott is expected to sentence the defendant sometime in December. The defendant faces a possibility of life imprisonment, Dribben said.

Stars fade out as season ends

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

"Just six more feet to the right and we were in the playoffs," said Columbus Stars' head coach Tom Staton after the Stars missed what would have been the game-winning field goal against the Gadsen, Ala., Raiders Sunday afternoon at Memorial Stadium.

The 14-12 loss ended the Stars' season at 5-5 and improved the Western division-winning Raiders to a 10-1 season record and into the playoffs.

The Stars got on the scoreboard first when quarterback Donald Stroy hit tight end Will Madison in the back of the end zone with a 5-yard touchdown pass early in the second quarter to cap a five play 49-yard drive to go up 6-0. Darin Larsen's extra point attempt was wide left.

The Raiders came right back with a score of their own, finishing off a drive that started at their own 34-yard line with a 10-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Tony Poole to wide receiver Corey Smith on a fade pattern in the left corner of the end zone. Pete Daniel kicked the extra point for a Raider 7-6 lead midway through the second quarter.

The Stars put a another touchdown on the board late in the second quarter when tailback Eddie Mitchell plunged over from the 1-yard line capping off a 69-yard drive, taking the stars to a 12-7 lead at the half.

In the fourth quarter, Raider quarterback Poole engineered a short drive off a Stroy interception that would prove to be the decisive score of the game when fullback Roderick Hunter went off tackle at the Stars' 17-yard line and scampered into the end zone. The extra point kick by Daniel gave the Raiders their final points of the afternoon and a 14-12 lead early in the final stanza.

The Stars were able to move the ball from their own 39-yard line down to the Raider 9-yard line with only four seconds left in the game. Darin Larsen came on to try the 26-yard field goal and give the Stars a revenge win over the Raiders, but it was not to be when Larsen's kick sailed six feet wide to the left.

The Stars outgained the Raiders in total yards 222 to 220.

Stroy hit eight out of 12 passes for 102 yards, a touchdown and two interceptions. Tyrone Ivory caught four passes for 81 yards and Larsen had 11 rushes for 72 yards to lead the Stars' offense.

Linebackers John Harris and Thomas Bryant teamed up to lead the Stars' defense. Bryant had five tackles, two assists and a fumble recovery while Harris had an interception and numerous hurries on the quarterback. Calvin Adams also had an interception for the Stars.

"I'm really proud of our team. They played their hearts out each and every game. Hopefully next year we can improve on what we have accomplished this year," Staton said. "We're a young team in this league and with a lot of the guys returning for us next year, maybe we can make some breaks for ourselves."

Ex-Raider charges again

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

After nine years in the National Football League with the then Oakland Raiders, Otis Sistrunk retired and came back home to Columbus.

With eight years of service with Fort Benning working for the Directorate of Community Activities, Sistrunk has moved on to greener pastures in the Pacific Northwest.

Fort Lewis, Wash., will be the new home for the former Raider defensive lineman and manager of the Infantry Hall Fitness Center.

Sistrunk feels the move will expand his career opportunities. "Besides working as a sports specialist at Fort Lewis, I will also be doing some promotional work for a company in Los Angeles, " he said.

Sistrunk began his second career working on post as a recreation aide at the Santiago Fitness Center on Sand Hill and steadily moved upward.

Two years ago, Sistrunk took over temporarily as manager at Infantry Hall and ended up staying until his departure Oct. 8.

Sistrunk says he will be doing basically the same thing that he has been doing here when he gets to Fort Lewis – working with soldiers on body conditioning and different exercise programs.

While at Infantry Hall, Sistrunk instituted a Nautilus program and has conducted powerlifting and bodybuilding competitions. He was also instrumental in getting new exercise equipment installed at the fitness center.

"When I started working on Fort Benning, I wanted to get involved working with kids in this area," he said. "I was born and raised here; Columbus is a great city and I wanted to give something back. I'm leaving to start something new and achieve some new goals in my life. The people at Fort Benning have been very good to me and I wish them all the best.

"When I get to Fort Lewis I will be able to take and use the things I've learned here from people like Jim Brown and Chris Winterman from the Physical Activities Branch and maybe make a difference up there," he continued.

With Sistrunk's family still in the area, Sistrunk says he will be back to visit from time to time.

Sistrunk doesn't watch much football these days, some college and high school and a little pro every now and then, he said. He picks the Dallas Cowboys and the Miami Dolphins to make it to the Super Bowl this year, with Miami winning it all.

Players serve up a win in volleyball

By Jeff Demeyer
Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group

Two Fort Benning personnel competed and placed third in a volleyball tournament Labor Day weekend.

Rick Lingerfelt, 23, a sergeant with Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group, and his roommate Scott Lee, 21, a specialist with Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, placed third in the Southeastern Regional Bud Lite two-man volleyball tournament. The tournament took place at Panama City Beach, Fla.

The tournament operated through three six-team pools. The top three teams from each pool advanced.

Lingerfelt and Lee placed third in their pool with a 7-3 record. They advanced to tournament play where they were 2-1, losing to the eventual champions by the score of 11-9.

The teams that competed in the tournament came from as far west as Texas to as far north as Tennessee.

Also, earlier in the year Lingerfelt and his four-person team placed second in an area tournament. Members of the four person team included Lee, Wanda Parmer, a specialist with Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and Tom Goulter, a first lieutenant with Detachment 10, 1st Weather Group.

English class gives warmth with words

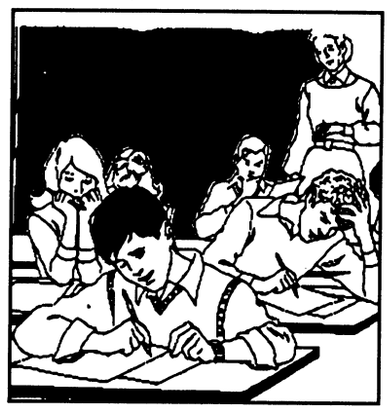
By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains Office

A friendly smile, a caring glance, a moment of patience — these are the most important prerequisites for volunteer English teachers at the Religious Education Center, according to Bill Putman, program coordinator.

This year marks the 23rd year of existence for the class designed for those for whom English is a second language.

The class is a rich blend of culture, customs and languages, yet students are bonded by circumstance and a desire to learn, Putman said.

"Students come from Central and South America, Puerto Rico, Spain, Italy and a host of other nations," said Putman. "They explore English and the American way of life — from traditions and history to everyday colloquialisms. The class helps them to make the most of their stay in the United States, whether it's for a few months or for a lifetime."



The weekly class enhances the lives of the students, he added. It helps them to accept the surroundings better and develop not only a book knowledge, but the required practice as well, one student said.

More than two decades of special interest in those for whom English is a second language has blended cultures and communicated the international language of caring, Putman said.

Divorce recovery group provides 'safe haven'

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

In the United States alone, more than 1 million marriages end in divorce each year.

Divorce can be one of the most drastic changes that life can bring. It changes people from partners in marriage to single individuals. It can mean loss of love, affection, family and emotional support.

After years of marriage and sharing, it's easy to feel isolated and being on one's own can be very demanding. There are several solutions and one solution is to join a support group.

A support group consists of people in similar situations getting together to discuss problems and solutions.

"The support group provides a safe haven in the midst of the crisis,' Chaplain (Maj.) James Rayburn, chief of Chaplains' Family Life Center, said. The group provides emotional support, practical help and acceptance."

The Chaplains' Family Life Center offers an on-going recovery of divorce support group. The group started Sept. 15 and will meet Tuesdays from 4 to 5 p.m. at the Chaplains' Family Life Center, Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2606.

The group meeting is free, but there will be no baby-sitting available.

For more information and registration, call 545-1760.

Engineers spell Hurricane Andrew relief

By Allen C. Estes
43rd Engineer Group

When Hurricane Andrew devastated south Florida on Aug. 24, the 43rd Engineer Battalion was ready to help in the clean-up effort.

"We had just returned from a field exercise the day before," said Maj. Kevin Wall, battalion executive officer. "We dropped everything and prepared three separate contingency plans, all of which involved an immediate response."

The notice to execute did not come for almost a week, but the unit continued to plan. The initial mission was to send 200 soldiers to Miami to fill the ranks of the 841st Engineer Battalion, a U.S. Army Reserve unit headquartered in Miami.

"The 841st never got called up," said Lt. Col. Robert L. Davis, commander of the 43rd Engineer Battalion. "They were manned solely by volunteers who had to return to their civilian jobs."

The 43rd Engineer Battalion deployed 200 members on Aug. 31, and the soldiers immediately joined their Reserve counterparts and continued with cleaning the debris in the hard-hit Florida City area.

"The event was historic, for if, nothing else, it emphasized the total Army concept", said Davis. "It is the first time I know of where an active unit fell in beside and operated the equipment of a Reserve component unit."

The advance party quickly recognized that the scope of the disaster was unprecedented and that the entire 43rd Engineer Battalion, with the 63rd Combat Support Equipment Company attached, needed to be deployed.

With the help of numerous post agencies, the 43rd quickly arranged for commercial bus transportation, commercial line haul for heavy equipment and convoy clearance for a 127-vehicle, 730-mile road march.

"The Fort Benning Emergency Operations Center and post agencies were fantastic," said Wall who was the rear detachment commander in charge of deploying the battalion. "They did everything possible to push us out of here quickly and efficiently."

Once on the ground, the initial focus was to clear the debris-lined streets. Working in the sector assigned to the 10th Mountain Division, the 43rd Engineer Battalion and 63rd CSE Company soldiers went from house to house picking up everything in site.

"The rules were to not go in farther than 10 feet from the curb," said Wilson, 63rd CSE Company commander. "But if someone asked for help or obviously couldn't do it themselves, we didn't hesitate to lend a hand."

"Our equipment was our most valuable asset," said Davis. "We divided into teams of loaders, dump trucks and chain saws that cleared entire streets in a matter of hours. We even rented wood chippers. The 63rd CSE, with all its heavy equipment, performed magnificently."

The Fort Benning engineers hauled more than 4,000 loads of debris and put approximately 3,500 miles on each dump truck.

Within two weeks, the Corps of Engineers had let so many civilian contracts that the military contribution to the total haul effort became less and less. The 43rd Engineer Battalion reoriented its primary effort to constructing relief camps at the Campbell and Homestead Middle Schools.

Rodney Hampton

Teams of soldiers with chain saws reduce larger debris to smaller pieces.

The relief camps provided plumbing, electrical, carpentry and equipment operator opportunity for the soldiers of the 43rd Engineer Battalion.

"The electrical design was tricky because we didn't have any of our books with us, said Sgt. 1st Class, Rudy Hernandez, a battalion construction inspector. "We had to coordinate with the city of Homestead, Dade County, the prime power unit, the Florida Power and Light Company and the customer. They all gave us different advice."

The battalion established a base camp at the Homestead Bayfront Park, a marina and along the coast. The cooks ran a consolidated mess facility out of mess kitchen tents and fed more than 500 people daily.

"With our reliance on our equipment," said Wall, "we ran a full-scale maintenance operation to include third shop direct support maintenance for both engineer equipment and wheeled vehicles."

The unit lived in tents but the park had running water so soldiers quickly constructed make-shift showers. "Engineers show a lot of ingenuity — especially when it comes to their own living space, " said Command Sgt. Maj. Larence Maxwell."

After 3 1/2 weeks, the 43rd soldiers had completed what they were sent to do and prepared to redeploy to Fort Benning.

Maj. Gen. S.L. Arnold, the commander of the 10th Mountain Division, and Col. Robert Melchoir, commander of the 20th Engineer Brigade presented the 43rd Engineer Battalion and 63rd CSE Company with certificates of appreciation and recognition for their disaster relief efforts during Hurricane Andrew.

"We learned a great deal during this deployment" said Davis, "I'm immensely proud of these soldiers who made a monumental difference to the victims of this tragic hurricane and to their families at Fort Benning who provided overwhelming support while they were gone."

After another series of bus rides, commercial line haul, and a return 730-mile convoy, the 43rd Engineer Battalion and 63rd CSE Company arrived back at Fort Benning with the knowledge that they had responded superbly in time of need.

Staff Sgt. Andre Williamson of Company C, 43rd Engineers summed it up when he said, "I feel really good about helping the people of Florida.

"We always seem to help other countries before helping ourselves. I feel the military should help out when it can."

War fighting improves with battle laboratory

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning is part of Training and Doctrine Command's newest system for improving the Army's war-fighting capability.

The post is one of six that has recently established a battle laboratory under the directive of TRADOC Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr.

The purpose of the laboratories is to determine the needs of the future fighting force through the integration of computer simulation, field testing and research and analysis, said Lt. Col. Arnold Canada, director of the Fort Benning Dismounted Warfare Center.

"The battle lab concept came about for two reasons," said Canada. "The first is with the end of the Cold War, we no longer face the same kind of threat. The second is in an era of declining resources, it is vitally important for us to continue to identify our war-fighting capabilities so that we can ensure success in the future."

The battle labs will work to identify current deficiencies and how they can be repaired and also to identify technological advances that can be implemented in the mid-and long-term to give the Army a significant advantage.

"We want to develop the Army's capability to the point that no enemy that exists could ever possibly defeat us. We must maintain the capability to engage in warfare that will be quick and decisive and that will ensure maximum survivability of our forces," Canada said.

Each battle lab is devoted to one of five major elements that Franks believes are key to success on the future battlefield, Canada said.

The six battle labs are the Early Entry Battle Laboratory, TRADOC headquarters at Fort Monroe, Va., the Mounted Battlespace Laboratory at Fort Knox, Ky., the Depth and Simultaneous Attack Laboratory at Fort Sill, Okla., the Battle Command Laboratory at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., the Combat Service Support Laboratory at Fort Lee, Va., and the Dismounted Battlespace Laboratory at Fort Benning.

The Fort Benning Warfighting Center, which was officially started July 1, will focus on the dismounted elements on the battlefield, such as the infantry. One of the current projects, dubbed "Owning the Night," involves the study and testing of equipment and tactics that will enhance the Army's night fighting capabilities.

"Basically, we are comparing what the Army needs to what technology exists or will exist in the future," Canada said.

"We have acquired many examples of new night vision equipment and are currently testing them at the squad level," he added. "In future tests, we will expand to the platoon and company levels and then the battalion level. We start at the bottom with the individual soldier and work our way up."

Other projects the Fort Benning lab will tackle include the development of ways to improve such factors as target acquisition, indirect and direct fire capabilities, the detection of biological agents and the survivability of the individual soldier.

Canada said that the battle lab concept has the potential for continuing and improving on the state of readiness that brought quick victories in Operations Just Cause and Desert Storm.

"It's really exciting. There should be a big payoff for the Army and all of the services. The battle lab concept is truly a dynamic process that attempts to integrate all technologies as a means to accelerate our effectiveness to wage fast, efficient war," Canada said.

He added that the battle labs are not meant to replace existing methods of training and testing.

"The battle labs will enhance our existing capability to determine the Army's capabilities and needs. They will actually save us valuable time and resources," Canada said.

"If through research and simulation we can determine that a particular technology will not work," he added, "then that saves us time by not having to go through the process of having to field test each and every thing."

LESs reflect incorrect carryover leave

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — Desert Storm-era soldiers who are entitled to a carryover of excess leave may rest assured that the leave will be preserved, despite what their end-of-September leave and earnings statements may reflect.

That's the word from Defense Department finance officials, who explain that a recent programming backlog caused some October LES entries to drop leave in excess of 60 days.

"We're working to correct the LESs by the time soldiers receive their November statements," said a spokeswoman for the Defense Finance and Accounting Service in Washington.

"We first must account for all leave taken in September before restoring any lost leave," she said.

Incidentally, policy requires that "A soldier who departed the area of hostile fire in fiscal 1991 must use all leave in excess of 60 days by the end of fiscal 1994," she said.

2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment has new leader at helm

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, U.S. Army Infantry School, changed commanders Oct. 9 in a 2 p.m. ceremony on Weather-by Field.

Lt. Col. Bruce D. Grant, formerly the executive officer of the 75th Ranger Regiment, took command from Lt. Col. Robert L. Smalser.

Grant was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. He has served in a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of an infantry company in the 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash.

He and his wife, Pat, reside on Fort Benning and have four children.

Smalser is being reassigned within the U.S. Army Infantry Center while awaiting his next assignment to a senior service college next summer. He graduated as a distinguished military graduate from Clemson University, S.C.

He was commissioned an infantry officer in 1970.

He and his wife, Elizabeth, have two children.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• On the Eastern Front, the first winter snow fell at Stalingrad, slowing the continuing German advance through Russia. Ill-equipped for cold weather fighting, the German army found its progress slowed, considerably, in the Krasnye, Red October and Barrikady Factory provinces.

• On Guadalcanal, the Japanese forces used tanks and infantry troops to spearhead an attack on American positions. Poor intelligence and coordination, however, hindered the effort, causing initial setbacks for the attacking force.

• In New Guinea, Australian forces successfully advanced, forcing the Japanese to withdraw from Eora.

• Adolf Hitler issued orders to his military commanders stating that all prisoners captured during Allied commando raids were to be shot.

• In the United States, Congress passed the largest tax bill in the country's history. Framers of the bill designed it to raise approximately $6.881 billion.

• Fort Benning officials announced the completion and scheduled opening of dormitories intended to house 310 wartime civilian post employees.

IOBC students take to post woods

By Chris McManus
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Company B, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment completed a five-day field training exercise on platoon tactics.

The recently commissioned infantry officers changed from their normal Infantry Hall classroom environment to the Fort Benning woods and hills. The students conducted platoon training on battle drills and applied it during a platoon live-fire. Later they performed an all-night land navigation course.

The squad training reinforced classroom instruction taught the previous week by the platoon cadre.

Each lieutenant was given the chance to lead a platoon or squad in executing battle drills and movement.

According to 2nd Lt. Mathew Tolle, the rigorous training taught each lieutenant how difficult it is to control a moving, fighting and occasionally misoriented infantry platoon.

Maj. Mike Burns, company commander, said the training was outstanding, and each lieutenant learned a lot and now understands platoon tactics.

Presenter makes living history

Leonard Bast gives a "Living History" presentation to members of the National Junior Honor Society at Don C. Faith Middle School.

Faith Middle School students learn about early-1800s fashion, utility

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Authentic clothing, tools and weapons of people in this country prior to 1812 were part of a "Living History" presentation made by Leonard Bast to members of the Don C. Faith Middle School National Junior Honor Society Oct. 7.

Dressed in the clothing of an average person from that era, Bast told how some of the pieces were just the style of the time, but other things had to do with utility — how feathers on hats were placed to the side to avoid soldiers guns while marching and how garments needed to wear well in the rain.

He also demonstrated starting a fire with flint and loading a flintlock rifle.

The father of Faith School assistant principal Melanie Bast and a retired Army master sergeant from Fort Rucker, Ala., Bast said he first became interested in this subject about seven years ago when he went to a living history program at Fort Toulouse (also known as Fort Jackson), Ala., to learn about muzzle-loading.

It was the weapons and ammunition-loading of the period that first drew his interest. This gradually grew into a desire to research other areas of the period.

He noted soldiers of this time had to be able to load powder and shot into a rifle and be able to fire four rounds per minute in order to qualify for the battlefield.

To do this, they carried cartridges of preloaded gun powder rolled in paper that resembled newsprint, he said. Civilians loaded powder in single shots from a horn of powder.

Bast showed the students a hand-made Carolina flintlock rifle and a production-made British service musket rifle.

Both are relatively new models, he said, because no one would want to shoot a valuable 150-year-old rifle. Also, such antiques would have dangerously brittle welding after all of these years and could blow up when fired.

'Lunch and Learn' promotes communication

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"All of our schools share information with their parents in different ways," said Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of staff development for the Fort Benning Schools.

Loyd School

Frank R. Loyd School does this through the "Lunch and Learn Program," in which parents come to the school for a 30-minute lecture, then lunch in the cafeteria.

Cathy Einhorn, assistant director of special education at Fort Benning, presented the first of these this year Oct. 8 on behavior being learned and how to change it with regard to such matters as better study habits.

She noted four strategies that work in this area:

- Differential attention — ignoring one behavior while rewarding another.
- Precision command — stating clearly and calmly directions one-at-a-time, then praising.
- Time out — having a quiet place for a brief period to sanction behavior that cannot be ignored.
- Charting behavior or contracting — emphasizing desired behavior through planned, written expectations and consequences.

Einhorn said that when doing academic charting, children learn that if parents are making a big deal of this, it must be important. Also, she recommended trying to reward not just with monetary things but with parent time and attention, social and activity rewards.

Also, these rewards should only be available by learning through the required behavior, not at any other time. It makes them more valuable.

For example, when charting shows that a child has written down homework assignments, brought home the correct books, completed daily assignments and scored well on tests, she suggested allowing them to use a reward spinner and be awarded such prizes as an extra 50 cents in allowance, pick from a grab bag, have a parent slave for 15 minutes, the choice of a game with mom, stay up an extra 10 minutes at bedtime, play miniature golf on the weekend or maybe help to plan the week's menu.

Some parents ask, "Why should I have to reward my child?'

Einhorn said children see it is an inducement or reward for being good children in the same way parents work for a paycheck.

She also said parents should check to see that children do their homework, but parents should not do it for them. If a child appears to have an inordinate amount of homework, the parent should ask for a conference with the teacher.

Wilson School

Richard G. Wilson School has begun giving its parents tips on helping their children in learning at home with a series of workshops for kindergarten, first- and second-grade students.

The first on Oct. 8 was presented by teachers to show how to assist with homework, read to children, plan fun and educational activities and select appropriate toys, games and books. A display offered some ideas for this.

The second workshop was Thursday from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Teachers and parents discussed the effects of radio and television on children, how to listen to a child read and interesting places to visit.

Wilbur School

William H. Wilbur School has another approach called the "Very Involved Parent Program," a concept that was developed by the Wilbur faculty.

The program provides an opportunity for parents to work side-by-side with their children in the classroom one hour per week.

Middlemiss said that a day care arrangement has been worked out with Tot Town for this growing activity that began with about 30 parents, and now involves about 90.

It also calls for group experts to help parents be more effective in working with their children on school work.

Parents in the program come to the school from 9:10 to 10:10 a.m. every Wednesday throughout the school year to work alongside their children and take part in the parent education classes.

Research has shown a direct link between student achievement and parental participation in the schooling process.

Fort Benning Garrison Commander Col. Gary Jones supports the concept and has called Wilbur's program "an innovative idea," which is "tutoring and mentoring at its best."

Middlemiss noted that it has helped parents to become familiar with the terminology the children are using, to better understand the child's teacher and to show the child that the parent cares about a child's progress in school.

The Wednesday sessions are structured, assignments are given for parent and child to do together at home promoting further bonding, and the time may not be used for parent-teacher conferences because the focus is on the parent working with the child.

I plan to stick with the Officers' Club as long as possible. I hope there will be some chance to move up to a better position.

Most memorable moment in your career?
During my stay at the Officers' Club, I have had the opportunities to work as a membership clerk, and I have also worked in the catering office and have met many very interesting people.

Radiology gives 'view' into health

Martin Army Community Hospital

A "hidden," largel unknown department at Main Army Community Hospil daily provides a view into hiden health conditions.

The Imaging Depitment in Radiology consists of three sections: mamography, ultrasound and comuterized tomography. These secialized tests diagnose many difrent types of conditions.

It is estimated that ce in nine American women wildevelop breast cancer, accding to statistics from the Natioal Cancer Institute. A mammogra is an X-ray examination of awoman's breast to look for thi disease, before a lump can be lt. Early diagnosis is the key tourviving this type of cancer, doctos say.

Baseline mammogams are recommended for all wmen 35 to 40 years old.

The National Cance Institute recommends mammogms every one to two years until ie age of 50, after which it shoul become every year. Women wi a strong family history of breast ncer may need more frequent evalutions.

Anna Gilson, a mamography technician, stresses that a mammogram is "a toc to find things too small to be felt.

Women should perfor the self breast exam every moth, and check with their doctors r more information about mammgrams, she said.

Ultrasound reading are different from X-rays; theynvolve sound not radiation. Durig this test, a sound is directed at a art of the body. Sound bouncing off different types of tissue prolces different tones, which are too sght to be heard but can be measurec It is the same type of process as sonar, which is used by submarines.

Ultrasounds are used to examine certain body organs, such as the testes, ovaries, gallbladder, liver, pancreas or kidneys. They may be used to examine breast cysts or with women too young to receive a mammogram.

Because there is no radiation involved, ultrasound can be used with pregnant women. They are done to date the age of the fetus and to look for certain types of fetal malformations.

In June 1991, a new ultrasound machine costing $130,000 was installed at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Computerized axial tomography is better known as the CAT or C-T scan. This is a specialized type of X-ray technique in which pictures are taken in a series of slices. A computer can stack these pictures to recreate the original organ, in three dimension.

To make different organs stand out more, the patient may be first injected with radio-opaque dyes through an intravenous line. For pictures of the esophagus, stomach or intestines, an oral radio-opaque dye may be used.

The CAT scan uses a high level of radiation in a narrow beam. According to Burl Price, registered radiology technician, taking a CAT scan is like using a straight razor rather than a butter knife.

The patient actually receives less radiation from a CAT scan than from traditional X-ray series. In January, the hospital updated its CAT scan with $460,000 worth of new equipment.

The Imaging Department is one of the ways the hospital continually strives to provide the best care possible for its patients, officials said.

The Drug Free and Proud National Red Ribbon Campaign Week will be Oct. 24 to Nov. 1.

It will be a joint effort of the National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth Inc. and the Fort Benning Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program. The campaign will promote alcohol and other drug awareness and highlight prevention activities and programs.

The campaign slogan "Drug Free and Proud" means "no use of illegal drugs, no illegal use of legal drugs," said program officials.

The red ribbon demonstrates a commitment to a healthy, drug-free lifestyle, said Tom H. Tennent, chief of the program. "We encourage everyone in the Fort Benning community to actively participate during the Red Ribbon Week by wearing and displaying red ribbons," he said.

For information and support for activities or programs, contact Al Curry, ADAPCP education coordinator, at 545-4993 or 545-1138.

Deadline is Noon Tuesday prior to Friday's issue
