Annette O'Toole wears 'Jewels' in Danielle Steel drama

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

It's quite appropriate that a new miniseries entitled "Jewels" gives a respected actress the means to sparkle.

A past Emmy nominee (for "The Kennedys of Massachusetts"), Annette O'Toole — whose many other TV ventures have included "IT" and "The Dreamer of Oz: The L. Frank Baum Story," in addition to feature films such as "Superman III," "Cross My Heart" and "48 HRS." — has one of her highest-profile roles to date in Sunday and Tuesday's five-hour NBC drama, the latest of the network's adaptations of romantic stories by best-selling author Danielle Steel. Not only is "Jewels" a reference to the many expensive baubles worn by O'Toole and other female cast members, but it also applies to the business run by her character Sarah and second husband William, the Duke of Whitfield (played by Anthony Andrews, of "Brideshead Revisited" fame). Before they can start their gem dealership, though, World War I intervenes ... and while William is away on military duty, Sarah grows close to a German officer (Jurgen Prochnow). More romance enters her life later in the persona of an American friend from her childhood (Robert Wagner), but in and around those encounters, "Jewels" also focuses on the lives of Sarah and William's children: ambitious eldest son Phillip (Christopher Villiers), his sibling rival Julian (Benedict Taylor), and twins Isabelle (Chloe Annett) and Xavier (Robin Hart).

Annette O'Toole and Anthony Andrews

After spending three months filming "Jewels" in European locales including England, France, Italy and Luxembourg, the pleasant O'Toole recalls the experience as "just the best. I got sick, and the schedule was crazy, but it was mostly incredible. To have this whole show riding on my shoulders was really daunting to begin with, but as I got into it, I didn't think about that. I just took it a day at a time and did what I had to do, and the people around me were amazing, from cinematographer Ronnie Taylor to the makeup and hair people. We were all in this together, and it was that rare occurrence where every single person was totally committed to the project. I think that really shows in the finished product." So does $10 million worth of actual jewelry, provided by the world-renowned, Milan-based House of Buccellati.

Since it spans four decades, O'Toole deems "Jewels" to be "an epic story, and who wouldn't want to have a part that allows you to play virtually everything? In fact, I probably don't ever have to work again, since I did everything I knew how to do in this. I cried and screamed every way a person could, and it was a wonderful opportunity. You can't have a preconceived idea about what something's going to be, but I do have to say that when I opened the script and saw the name Danielle Steel, I went, 'Uhhh.' Then, as I read the story, I was totally carried away. It's the kind of material we need, so romantic and escapist, as well as all the more-realistic films. This is what it's all about to me, doing things I've never done before, and getting to work with fabulous people like these in England has always been my dream."

With O'Toole a prominent presence throughout the entirety of "Jewels," a vital aspect of her performance rested in the hands of makeup artists, whose skills aged her appearance progressively. However, that wasn't a new process for her, since she also was made to look much older in the TV-movie inspired by Barry Manilow's song "Copacabana," as well as in the aforementioned "Kennedys of Massachusetts" and "Dreamer of Oz." With that background, O'Toole reasons, "I actually feel that going up in age is easier than going down. I just don't find playing 20 years old interesting anymore. The makeup here was done beautifully; it's very, very subtle, and how old I should look and when was all graphed out. I wore contact lenses for certain scenes, and I'd never done that before. It was strange but it really helped, because as you get older, your eyes get more watery."

Having had no less than three leading men in "Jewels," O'Toole is hard-pressed to compare them: "With the quality of these people, how could you go wrong to play opposite them? You don't have to do anything ... you just look at them. They were just fabulous, and I can't put

MREs will soon be easy and quick hot meals for the field

After a long day of work in the field, nothing is better than a hot meal. Unfortunately, Meals-Ready-To-Eat are not a convenient, quick, hot meal. Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Armed Forces Network reports that thanks to researchers at Natick Research Institute in Massachusetts, that is soon going to change.

Natick is also bringing future equipment, clothing and shelter to Army installations. Next week on USAIC TV, there will be reports from Soldiers Television Service on some of Natick's innovations that will equip the Army of tomorrow.

Also on USAIC TV next week, Armed Forces Digest reports on the status of the Women in Military Service Memorial in Washington, D.C., and how business is booming at Army education centers.

This fair offers chance to horse around

Mike Flowers Promotions

Horsarama II '92, the second annual trade and expo horse fair, will be Oct. 31 and Nov. 1 at the historic Lakewood Fairgrounds in Atlanta.

A full schedule of ring events plus more than 100 retail dealers featuring the latest in fashions, tack, medicine, feed, vehicles and trailers make Horsarama II the major stop for horse enthusiasts this fall season.

Two informative and entertaining days are planned for the entire family. Demonstrations and clinics include Dave Seay — developing communication with your horse, restraint-free handling and breaking a horse.

Jean-Claude Racinet will show how to ride and show your horse without applying undue force. Dave Lackey will show elements of dressage. Ronnie Wayne will give a roping demonstration.

Bullmania, presented by Bill Crowder, will offer all the thrills of wild bull riding and features 25 rides by professionals.

Demonstrations in dressage, hunting and jumping, reining and roping round out the arena events.

The Bureau of Land Management will offer its adoption program for mustangs and burros.

Gold Kist Inc., a show sponsor, and the University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Office will present daily seminars on feed, equitation, horsemanship, showmanship, nutrition, bits, biting and equine awareness.

Continuous entertainment has been expanded to include Dan Wolf's brahma bull and wild boar acts, knife throwing, whip cracking, wild west shoot outs, antique wagon displays, pony and wagon rides, polo and polocross demonstrations.

Indian dancers, storytellers, and cloggers will also appear.

The Georgia unit of the Confederate Cavalry Re-enactment Camp will provide a real-life glimpse of history.

A petting zoo will allow hands-on for the kids.

Horsarama II '92 will be Oct. 31 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Nov. 1 from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Follow I-75/85 between the airport and downtown just south of the city. Take exit 88 east and follow the signs.

Admission: Adults (12 and up) $6, 6 to 12 years $4, under 6 free.

There are special rates for 4-H, Future Farmers of America and Scout groups.

Springer starts classes

Springer Theatre

The Springer School of Theatre Arts is accepting registration now for its fall schedule of acting classes for adults and children.

The theatre's professional staff will be augmented by guest instructors for the eight-week sessions designed for both novices and stage veterans.

Tuition is $45 per student per student and class space may be reserved by calling 324-1100 or by mailing a check to: Springer School of Theatre Arts, P.O. Box 1626, Columbus, Ga. 31902.

The Sky's the Limit - Ages 5 to 7

A creative dramatics workshop that helps the young performer explore imaginative expression through theatre games, storytelling, drawing, pantomime and music and a way for children to develop cooperation skills and self-confidence.

Mondays, 5 to 6 p.m. through Nov. 16.

Theatre Magic - Ages 7 to 9

By using costumes, improvisation and theatre crafts, the child uncovers the wonder of character play — the foundation for developing the young actor's creative instincts.

Tuesdays, 5 to 6:30 p.m. through Nov. 17

Bustin' Loose - Ages 9 to 13

The expressive youngster begins to channel his or her creative energy with role playing, character exploration and actual scene work. This class provides the basic tools for learning teamwork and actor discipline.

Thursday, 5 to 6:30 p.m. through Monday

Talkin' That Talk - Adult and Teen

A stage speech and dialect class that helps cure "South-in-the-mouth" for performance and public speaking and introduce the speaker to the most commonly used stage dialects. An introductory course in the Arthur Lessac Stage Speech System.

Mondays, 5 to 6:30 p.m. through Nov. 16

Enter Stage Right - Adult and Teen

A class for both the beginning and experienced actor that covers both the art and craft of stage work. By employing scene work and improvisation, the student learns techniques for getting the most from any stage role, how to land more roles at auditions and how to become a more productive member of any cast.

Tuesdays, 5 to 6:30 p.m. through Nov. 17

With two students registered, families may claim a 10 percent discount on tuitions. With three or more registrations, a family may deduct 15 percent.

CSO opens new series

Columbus Symphony Orchestra

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will open its masterpiece series Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The program will include Beethoven's Egmont Overture, Dvorak's Symphony No. 9 "From the New World" and Rachmaninoff's Piano Concerto No. 3 featuring world renown pianist Ilana Vered.

Tickets range from $9 to $15 for adults; $5 to $8 for students and are available at the CSO office located in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Tickets are also available by calling 323-5059.

Singer and actor T. Graham Brown will appear in Buena Vista, Ga., Nov. 14.

Country, R & B singer to play

Evelyn Shriver Public Relations

Ten years and six albums into his musical journey, T. Graham Brown still sings every song as though it was his last — piercing the heart and soul of the listener — whether it be country, beach music, or straight from the guts R & B.

T. Graham Brown will be performing at Silver Moon in Buena Vista, Ga., Nov. 14. Show time is 9 p.m.

Brown, whose career spans radio, television, and motion pictures, exploded onto the music scene with his Capitol Records album "I Tell Like It Used To Be," which generated two number one hits and two top ten singles.

His second album "Brilliant Conversationalist," produced the hits "She Couldn't Love Me Anymore," the title track and "The Last Resort."

Brown's album "Come As You Were" yielded the Number One smash hit "Darlene."

Brown also brings his gravel-voiced, rocking, blues-edged brand of country music to the popular "Run For The Border" national television commercials for Taco Bell.

Chamber of Commerce seeks Woodruff award nominees

Columbus Chamber of Commerce

The Columbus Chamber of Commerce is taking nominations for the Jim Woodruff Jr. Memorial Award that will be presented at the chamber's 1992 annual meeting Jan. 7.

The deadline for the award, which represents the "Hall of Fame for Columbus Leadership," is Oct. 23. Nomination forms can be picked up at the Columbus Chamber of Commerce.

The Jim Woodruff Jr. Memorial Award is presented to an individual who has had a great deal of impact on the community.

The committee looks past just membership or office holding in various religious, civic or service organizations. The award is given to a person for the depth of contribution in leadership, innovation, imagination, involvement, commitment and unselfish humanitarian service — the total community experience.

Since 1977, there have been only 11 people who have received the award. According to the award criteria, it should be given to a person who is so singularly meritorious as to clearly warrant the presentation of it.

The award committee strives to go beyond personal and professional achievement into the areas of religious life and community service when judging an individual for this honor. The candidate is not judged for the past year alone but rather the accomplishments or contributions made through the years.

The list of citizens who have received the Jim Woodruff Jr. Memorial Award include: D. A. Turner; Dr. Thomas Y. Whitley; Dr. William Henry Shaw; Maynard R. Ashworth; Charles S. Daley; Emily Woodruff; Sara Spano; J. W. (Bill) Feighner Sr.; L. Rollins Aldridge Jr.; John B. Amos; William B. Turner and G. Gunby Jordan.

Mammograms provide early detection of breast cancer

By Dr. Richard F. Jones III
American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

When women reach the age of 40, they should start making mammography part of their routine health care. A mammogram is an X-ray of the breast used to detect breast cancer.

Doctors use mammograms to detect cancer early, even before a breast lump can be felt.

Scientists estimate that deaths from breast cancer would decrease by at least 30 percent if all women got mammograms as recommended.

Mammograms are available through hospitals, clinics, doctors offices and special mammography centers.

The procedure itself is quick and harmless. The doctor or a technician will ask you to take your clothes off from the waist up and will position you in front of the X-ray machine. He or she will then place two smooth plates around one of your breasts, flattening it so the greatest amount of tissue can be examined.

Sometimes the pressure of the plates causes discomfort. When the X-ray is completed, the procedure will be repeated on the other breast.

Single, free copies of "Mammography" (AP076) are available by sending a stamped, self-addressed, business-size envelope along with the name of the booklet to: The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, Resource Center, 409 12th St., S.W., Washington, D.C. 20024.

Breast self-exams crucial

By Richard F. Jones III
American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Ask yourself these questions: Do you know the normal shape and feel of your breasts? Would you be able to tell if a lump or other change occurred in one of your breasts? Do you visit your doctor each year for a breast examination?

If you have been neglecting your breasts, it's time to start making breast self-examination and yearly physician exams part of your routine health care. Since the most successful treatment for breast cancer may be given when lumps are found in the earliest stage, it is crucial to get to know your breasts and to check them each month for lumps and other changes.

The best time to do BSE is a few days after the last day of the menstrual period when your breasts are not tender or swollen. After menopause you should choose a particular day to do the exam to establish a regular monthly routine.

Here is one way to do breast self-examination:

1) In good light, stand or sit in front of a mirror, arms at your sides.

2) Look for dimpling or puckering of the breast skin, retraction (or pulling in) of the nipples, and changes in breast size or shape. Look for the same signs with your hands pressed on your hips and then with your arms raised.

3) Lie flat on your back. Place a folded towel or a pillow under your left shoulder and place your left hand under your head.

4) With your right hand, keeping the fingers flat and together, gently feel your left breast without exerting too much pressure. Use small, circular motions with your fingers.

5) Picture your breast as the face of a clock. Begin your small circles at 12 o'clock at the very top of the breast. Repeat the circular motion at 1 o'clock, 2 o'clock and so on. When your hand returns to 12 o'clock, move it closer to the nipple and repeat the process. Do this in smaller and smaller circles until you have examined all the breast tissue.

6) Examine the nipple area in the same way and check for any discharge.

7) Be sure to examine the area below the armpit, which also contains tissue.

8) Lower your right arm to your side and reverse the procedure. Place the folded towel or pillow under your right shoulder, right hand under your head, and use your left hand to feel your right breast.

Once you learn how to do BSE, the procedure should be easy and quick. Get in the habit of doing a self-exam every month. It could help you spot a problem before it becomes a real health danger.

Know cancer facts

American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists

Five years ago, a woman's chances of developing breast cancer were one in 11. Today the chances are one in nine.

This alarming trend has prompted many women to learn the facts about breast cancer and to follow screening recommendations for early detection of the disease. Many other women, however, do not know or tune out this bad news and never take steps to protect the health of their breasts.

This year, 180,000 American women will develop cancer of the breast. The good news is that, despite increasing incidence rates, the death rate from breast cancer has been fairly stable for the past 50 years. A major reason for this unchanging death rate is increased emphasis on early detection, along with improved treatment.

Early diagnosis is the key to treating breast cancer before it has spread. With prompt treatment, the chances for complete recovery are good.

Every woman should take an active role in the early detection of breast cancer by practicing monthly breast self-examination, having a yearly breast exam by a physician, and getting routine mammograms after age 40. A mammogram is an X-ray test to detect lumps in the breast before they are large enough to be felt.

Doctors don't know why some women develop breast cancer and others do not. We do know, though, that some factors can increase your risk, including age over 50, having a personal or family history of breast cancer, and having your first child after age 30. Early onset of menstruation and late menopause may also increase your risk.

Don't assume, though, that just because you don't fall into any of these groups that you do not need to worry about breast cancer. Many women who develop the disease have no known risk factors. The wisest strategy is to become familiar with your own breasts, examining them regularly for changes or lumps, and see your doctor each year for an examination.

Even if you or your doctor finds a lump, the chances of it being cancer are small — one in five. Most lumps are fluid-filled cysts or benign (noncancerous) tumors that do not pose any serious health threats.

Don't let your fear or ignorance about cancer interfere with proper health maintenance. Taking care of your breasts is a life-long project that will hopefully be rewarded with healthy breasts and a healthy body throughout your life.

Dining out can be healthy

General Mills

On average, American adults eat almost a third of their total calories away from home, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

By selecting wisely from the menu, you can make away-from-home calories healthful ones, said Mary Helen Gunkler, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal.

Gunkler offered these suggestions for choosing foods from restaurant menus.

• At breakfast, ask for toast without butter or margarine. Use jam or jelly instead. Some fast food restaurants have cereal available as an alternative to higher fat choices.

• Choose broth-based soups rather than cream-based soups.

• Order a salad with just a squeeze of lemon as the dressing. Or choose low-fat or nonfat salad dressings when available.

• At the salad bar, top your lettuce or spinach leaves with other fresh vegetables, such as broccoli, cauliflower and carrots, plus a crunchy topping of pretzel sticks. Juicy tomatoes make a tasty salad dressing replacement.

• A baked potato or steamed rice is a delicious side dish. Go easy on the high-fat toppings.

• When ordering meat, opt for grilled or broiled varieties without added breading. Stir-fried and roasted meats also can be good choices.

• Try a meatless meal occasionally with a main dish of pasta and a vegetable sauce, meatless chili or lentil soup.

• Choose sandwiches with a filling of lean turkey or chicken. Lettuce, sprouts, tomatoes and other raw vegetables are nutritious additions to sandwiches.

• Choose fresh fruit as a sweet treat to finish off your meal. Other delicious low-fat dessert options are angel food cake, sherbet, fruit ice or sorbet.

By ordering foods such as these, concludes Gunkler, you can maintain healthful eating habits and still have the fun of eating out with family and friends .

Word processors meet needs

Better Business Bureau

If a typewriter no longer meets your needs, but you feel a personal computer is more than you need, you may find a word processor will fill the bill.

Personal word processors, which have been on the market for approximately five years, are designed for the kind of typing you would do at home or in a small office.

However, they possess many of the enhancement and editing features of a personal computer. You can boldface and underline, as well as delete, copy, and move parts of the text. Almost all come with a spelling checker, thesaurus and punctuation checker as part of the word-processing package.

Unlike typewriters, word processors display the copy on a screen before it's committed to paper. And when you're ready, the word processor's built-in printer can generate your document.

Word processors have word-processing software built into their system, and allow you to store the information you've created on removable disks.

However, the disks are not compatible with other word processing systems, or with a computer.

The disks can only be used with the system on which they were created.

A spreadsheet program comes with most word processor models, or it can be purchased as an option.

The programs allow you to plan a monthly budget, track savings and investments, or balance your checkbook.

You also may be able to design a spreadsheet tailored for your own financial needs. However, don't expect the calculations to be made as quickly as on a personal computer.

Many different makes and models of word processors are available. They can be found in electronics or department stores alongside typewriters and computers, or through authorized dealers. Prices vary according to the size of the machine, the printing system, and the features and options that are included.

Before purchasing a word processor, be sure to try it out and compare it to other models. Type a short letter using the different features and print it out.

Ask about the warranty. How long does it last? Does it cover parts and or service? And, where do you take the machine for repairs?

ALC offers free college courses

Self-paced courses let students breathe a little easier financially

Army Learning Center

Free self-paced courses are available at the Soldiers' Plaza and Kelley Hill Army Learning Centers, Buildings 2611 and 9005.

Introduction to computers, computer literacy, basic programming, effective writing, high school GED preparation, college level test preparation, speed reading, reading improvement, math improvement and English improvement are just a few of the free courses available.

All courses are free and self-paced. Computer literacy, English as a second language, keyboarding, blueprint reading, GED preparation, algebra, geometry, BASIC programming and many, many other courses are offered.

In addition to active duty and civilian members, family members are eligible to use the center. Certificates are provided for completing most courses. Family members less than 14 years old must be accompanied by an adult.

Many courses are available over the Cybis, formerly Plato, mainframe system and can be accessed from your home or work computer.

A free Cybis access disk is available at the Soldiers' Plaza learning center.

The Cybis system is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Bring a replacement disk to exchange for your access disk. An instruction handout is also provided.

The Georgia Career Information System has also been installed at the Soldiers' Plaza learning center.

This computer-based career and education information system is free to Fort Benning personnel and assists personnel in making informed occupational and educational choices.

English as a Second Language for Spanish speakers is available in the Soldiers' Plaza learning center. A Spanish- speaking staff member is available for assistance.

This course, available on the Cybis computer-based instruction system, is approximately 64 hours long and is divided into two separate courses of instruction.

Major topics include vocabulary, parts of speech, pronunciation, listening comprehension, math problems and coping skills.

The Soldiers' Plaza Army Learning Center is open Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturday, 8 a.m. to noon.

The Kelley Hill learning center is open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Call Soldiers' Plaza at 545-1436 or Kelley Hill at 544-2603 for more information.

Library of Congress offers wealth of knowledge

PM Editorial Services

Where can you find the contents of Abraham Lincoln's pockets when he was assassinated, music of the American Indian tribes, and the smallest book on record, which, at one-twenty-fifth of an inch, is smaller than an ant?

All of these unusual items can be found in one of the world's most comprehensive libraries — the Library of Congress.

More than 97 million items, including books in 470 languages, comprise the Library of Congress' collections housed in the Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and John Adams buildings in Washington, D.C.

A visitor to the library's facilities can peruse its extensive collection of books, charts, maps, pamphlets, manuscripts, photographs, engravings, musical recordings and motion pictures.

Established by Congress in 1800, the library's original purpose was to provide research and reference assistance exclusively to members of Congress.

In 1897, however, its vast resources were made available to the general public.

The Library of Congress originally was housed in the U.S. capitol building, where most of its books were destroyed when the British shelled the building during the War of 1812.

In 1815, Congress took a major step in rebuilding the library when it purchased the contents of Thomas Jefferson's 6,000-volume personal library.

The library moved into its current home, the Thomas Jefferson Building located across the street from the U.S. Capitol, in 1897.

Among the library's collections are the official documents and personal papers from almost every U.S. president up to Calvin Coolidge.

The library also contains one of the world's largest collection of books printed before 1500 and oversees the American Folklife Center, which collects and preserves aspects of American folklore and presents exhibitions of folk music, arts and crafts.

One of the library's chief functions is the administration of the nation's copyright system.

Each day, Library of Congress staff members process more than 500 public requests and 1,000 requests from congressional staff, and reshelve approximately 5,000 reference books.

Roaches present an all year problem for homes

Terminix International

Roaches aren't fussy about weather and can present problems during any season of the year, according to Delmus Woolard, manager of the Columbus Service Center of Terminix International.

"There are many different types of domestic cockroaches, but they all have similar habits," Woolard said. "They can be tan, brown, reddish brown or black and generally have flat bodies. Some can even fly."

Roaches are usually found in kitchens, basements, bathrooms and closets, according to Woolard, but can roam any area of the house. They can even be found hiding behind hanging pictures and inside electrical appliances.

"Roaches like to stay close to food and water sources," Woolard explained. "So they especially like to hide in cracks and crevices in kitchens and bathrooms. The spaces between countertops and cabinets or between walls are excellent harboring places for them."

Roaches scurry for food and water mainly at night, Woolard said, and light usually sends them running back to their hiding spots.

"If you see roaches during the day, the infestation could already have become very large."

Roaches feed on crumbs left behind in the kitchen, especially those left from sweet foods, cereals, meat, cheese and even on spills like milk and beer. They will eat the glue on stamps and envelopes and also eat leather, fabrics and wallpaper.

"Although roaches can be present under clean conditions, the best way to begin controlling them is to practice rigid sanitation," Woolard suggests. "Be sure all foods are covered tightly when stored, and wipe up all crumbs or spills immediately. Pay special attention to the cracks between appliances and countertops. Roaches can thrive even on very small amounts of food left behind."

Woolard also cautions against leaving dirty dishes and glassware on sinks and countertops.

"Roaches need water, too, so standing water is attractive to them. Be sure to fix leaky faucets and drains also."

Good housekeeping doesn't guarantee that roaches won't return, Woolard warned.

"Roaches can hitch rides into your home on grocery sacks, fruits and vegetables and in boxes. From there it takes very little to encourage them to stay and they multiply very rapidly."

Beside beings unsightly, roaches can cause other problems, too.

"Many types release foul odors, for one thing," Woolard said. "They can also cause stains, pollute foods and carry bacteria and diseases."

If roaches are still invading your clean, well-repaired home, it may be necessary to call in a professional.

If you do seek professional help, Woolard recommends that you follow these simple guidelines when choosing a pest control company:

1. Be sure the company you contact is reputable an reliable.

2. Many firms offer free inspections. Ask about this service when you call.

3. Get more than one estimate and compare services.

4. Make sure the pest control company you choose guarantees its work.

'Guaranteed' scholarships take students for a ride

Better Business Bureau

Offers for "guaranteed" scholarships, grants and loans may look very attractive to those students who didn't qualify or take the time to apply for financial aid. But before signing up, do your homework.

Better Business Bureaus report that scholarship information firms advertise on television and in newspapers, or may contact prospective students over the telephone or through direct mailings.

For up-front fees ranging from $20 to hundreds of dollars, the firms indicate that students can obtain funding, regardless of their academic qualifications, scholastic credentials or family economic status. Some advertisements and sales pitches claim there are millions of dollars in unclaimed scholarship monies just waiting to be tapped.

But, in exchange for their up-front fee, students receive lists of possible scholarship sources. While the company making the offer may claim scholarships are guaranteed, prospective students should understand that only the source actually granting the funds can guarantee approval.

These companies don't assist students in obtaining scholarships and they don't screen applicants.

Students who are unsuccessful, or not satisfied, may find that refunds are difficult, if not impossible to get. The company may require students to prove, through documentation, that they were denied a scholarship by every source on the list.

Many of the scholarship sources that these companies provide for a fee are available at no cost from high school guidance offices, in the reference sections of libraries or from the financial aid office of the college the student is planning to attend.

In another twist, some scholarship information firms also try to recruit "licensees" to open their own scholarship services. Usually for a fee of several hundred dollars and yearly renewals, licensees receive training tapes and materials on how to start their own business. Problems may arise because licensees are not given specific territories and can operate anywhere they choose, regardless of whether other licensees have already set up shop.

into words what a good time I had with all of those guys, just being around them. Not only are they great actors, they're good people." O'Toole harbors particularly fond feelings about working with Wagner, not only due to his own qualities, but also because of his late wife. "Natalie Wood is my favorite actress," she states, "and though I never met her, she's always been a force in my life. To be able to be near her through him somehow, I just kind of felt her around me. I had met him once at a party very briefly, not long after she had died, so I didn't really go up to him. He was so kind to everyone on this set, though, and so caring about the work. I had a ball with him."

Brace may reduce injuries

Soldiers test new prototype at Fort Benning

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Airborne soldiers would still have to keep their feet and knees together, but an ankle brace currently being tested at Fort Benning might reduce the number of injuries that occur during jumps if adopted by the Army.

For more than a year, the brace has been the special project of a team of specialists headed by Col. Jack Ryan of the Letterman Army Institute of Research and Maj. Paul Amoroso of the U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine.

Ryan said the most common injuries sustained during airborne operations are ankle sprains and fractures. The prototype brace being tested will help prevent such injuries by providing reinforcement to the muscles, tendons and ligaments of the ankle while still allowing almost the full, normal range of motion to the ankles and feet.

"Besides being painful to the soldier and causing a potential loss of jump status, a sprain or fracture reduces the unit's effectiveness," Ryan said. "In ranger and special forces operations, even the loss of a single soldier can prevent the mission from being accomplished," Ryan said.

The brace, which is worn on the outside of the boot, is made of a hard plastic, two-part shell that is lined on the inside with a spongy foam rubber material. Three velcro straps secure the brace in place.

Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

A soldier fits a prototype ankle brace.

Ryan said durability and ease of use were two of the main concerns in the design of the brace.

"A previous study was done with braces that were worn inside the boot," said Ryan. "These were uncomfortable and the boot had to be removed to take off the brace. Our brace is easily removed in the consolidation area and can be left with the parachute."

Ryan said the brace withstood initial testing on a machine that exerted 250 pounds of twist. In addition, the brace was subjected to a five-mile road march and showed no signs of damage.

"We foresee the use of the brace in a wide variety of military operations, including airborne operations, air mobile operations, road marches and any situation in which there is a high risk of ankle injury," said Ryan.

The testing at Fort Benning is conducted with volunteer students who sign a consent form and fill out a questionnaire after each jump. Only half the volunteers wear braces so that the injury rate between the two groups can be compared.

Ryan said initial results of the testing at Fort Benning is positive.

"There seems to be a definite decrease in injuries and the brace itself is not causing any injuries; however, not enough data exists yet to form a definite conclusion," Ryan said.

After testing at Fort Benning is completed, the team will go to Fort Bragg, N.C., for further testing with the 82nd Airborne Division.

"Field testing at Fort Bragg will allow us to use the brace in conditions that approach those of actual combat, including mass tactical jumps with full combat gear," he said.

"We've really had great support from the Airborne School and the 11th Infantry Regiment. Fort Benning has really been supportive, and we have had a chance to do some valuable testing," he said.

Fitness manual undergoes face-lift

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

The Army Physical Fitness Test standards may not have changed, but the field manual that helps soldiers prepare for their mission has undergone a face-lift.

The revised Field Manual 21-20, the Army's physical fitness manual, was released for unit use on Sept. 30. The Army has added new variations to exercises and has added different groups of exercises for soldiers.

For example, a group of exercises has been added to offer soldiers alternate exercises to running everyday. Some alternatives include exercise to music, aerobics, aquatics and a variety of competitive sports have been included in this manual.

"Units will be able to plan specific programs according to their needs," said Frank A. Palkoska, chief of Doctrine for the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School.

> We've made this book more user friendly.
> — Frank A. Palkoska
> U.S. Army Fitness School

Palkoska said the addition of new exercises is not the real appeal of the new manual.

"Basically, the old manual is a good book," said Palkoska, "but we've made this book a lot more user friendly."

To make it more user friendly, Palkoska said the new manual breaks down each chapter into a specific topic, such as Cardio-respiratory Fitness (Chapter 2), Muscular Development (Chapter 3), Body Composition (Chapter 5) and Nutrition and Fitness (Chapter 6). Palkoska said this makes it easier for a soldier or supervisor to go to a specific problem area or question and get a quick answer in the manual.

Graphic illustrations have replaced the photographs of proper exercise performance because, according to Palkoska, the photographs are sometimes hard to understand.

Palkoska said copies of the new FM 21-20 can be obtained through the Pin-point Distribution System. See your local publication clerk.

ADAPCP

The Drug Free and Proud National Red Ribbon Campaign Week will be Saturday to Nov. 1.

It will be a joint effort of the National Federation of Parents for Drug Free Youth Inc. and the Fort Benning Alcohol and Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Program to promote alcohol and other drug awareness and prevention activities and programs.

The campaign slogan "Drug Free and Proud" means "no use of illegal drugs, no illegal use of legal drugs," said program officials.

The red ribbon demonstrates a commitment to a healthy, drug-free lifestyle, said Dr. Tom H. Tennent, chief of the program.

"We encourage everyone in the Fort Benning community to actively participate during the Red Ribbon Week by wearing and displaying red ribbons," he said.

"President and Mrs. George Bush are the honorary chairmen of the national campaign," he said. "The objective of this grass roots effort is to represent a unified and visible commitment toward the creation of a drug-free America.

"All segments of our community must work together to prevent the use of drugs and support drug-free youth," he said.

For information and support for your activities or programs, contact Al Curry, ADAPCP education coordinator, at 545-4993 or 545-1138.

CG unveils TRADOC Excellence Award

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence Award was unveiled by Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White and Sarah McLaney, post Community of Excellence coordinator, at the Quarterly Excellence Appreciation Day Breakfast Oct. 16 at the Officers' Club Supper Club.

The post was awarded first place in TRADOC in the extra large installation category after a visit by the TRADOC Excellence and Quality Team in July.

The award, which was based on how well the post serves its soldiers and other customers and its relations with the civilian community, was originally presented to White by TRADOC Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. in a ceremony at Fort Sill, Okla.

"It was all of you who made (winning the award) happen," White told the audience, "and who continue to make it happen everyday through the support and service you give to soldiers and families and through doing the extra things that might not be in your job description, that you might not get paid for, but that you know are the right things to do."

The silver trophy is displayed on the first floor of Infantry Hall.

During the breakfast, it was also announced that Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City have been designated as a World War II Commemorative Community by the Department of Defense because of the programs they have developed to promote a greater understanding of the history and impact of the conflict.

White also took the opportunity to hand out awards to military and civilian personnel for their achievements of excellence in their work on post.

In addition, the following post directorates and offices were awarded for various top accomplishments in TRADOC: the Directorate of Community Activities for best morale, welfare and recreation and family support; the Directorate of Public Works for best strategic plan[illegible]; the Directorate of [illegible] Management for [illegible] management and financial services; the Directorate of Civilian Personnel for best civilian personnel services (second consecutive year), the Adjutant General's Office for best military personnel services; and the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate for best legal assistance.

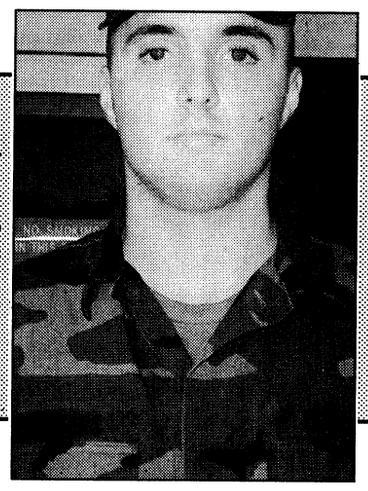
VARIOUS VOICES

Is it important to contribute to the Combined Federal Campaign, and why?

Pat Norman, family member — "Yes, it is important to contribute to CFC because you are helping others and possibly yourself. CFC especially helps the children."



Pvt. 1 Ryan Shoars, Company D, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment, — "Yes, it is important to fund the CFC. The Boy Scouts, especially, is a good cause. I used to be one and I enjoyed it."

Gail Glenn, family member — "Yes, it is important to contribute to CFC. It gives kids a place to go (by funding groups like the Scouts, etc.) and helps mothers, too!"

Troops should beware of scams

COMMENTARY

When it comes to things mechanical, I'm what you'd refer in polite company as "disabled."

Show me a wiring diagram and I black out. I couldn't even pass a ranger knot test. I simply can't make my two running ends do what the ropes in the pictures do.

I do know how to make toast, but I can't work a microwave. I can change a light bulb, but not a light switch.

I do know how to place a key in the ignition of most any vehicle and stand a good chance of having it start. However, if the offending vehicle refuses to start, I have no idea what to do.

Oh sure, with some effort I could raise the hood and I'd probably do that, but only as a signal that "there's a disabled vehicle here, someone, anyone, please help."

Yes, it's embarrassing to look under the hood and not know the difference between a distributor cap and the brake fluid reservoir.

I tried to change my oil once. After a great deal of struggling, I found and finally removed the oil filter. I recognized it by comparing it to the new one I had in my hand.

But somehow, the oil wouldn't come out. I called a friend and he told me there was a bolt at the base of the engine that had to be removed to drain the oil.

I panicked. I could see myself removing the wrong bolt and the engine falling apart. So I put the filter back on and drove down to the local oil change shop.

I've learned that being mechanically illiterate is very expensive. For not only do I know nothing about mechanical stuff, I tend to trust people who do.

This is a fatal character trait — fatal to the pocketbook.

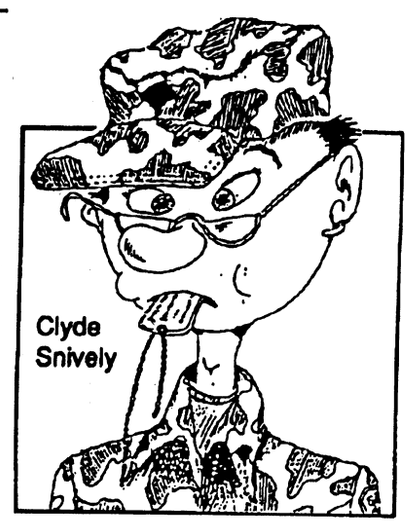
I have a friend whose wife went to a place that sells tires. She bought the most expensive set and was ready to tootle on home until the tire man told her he wouldn't issue a warranty for the tires.

"Why?" she wanted to know.

"Because your rear shim is out of line," he said.

"How much?" she asked.

"For you, $150," he said.



She did the smart thing. She told the man her husband would be back in the morning.

As promised, the husband was the first in line the next morning, but the tire guys wouldn't wait on him, seeing other customers first.

He finally asked why and was told the "shim man, hasn't come in yet, why don't you go get breakfast."

"Fine," he said, "but I'm taking the car with me."

After the shim man came, the customer went into the bay to see what the shim man was going to do. First the shim expert pulled out a book and scratched his head.

"Ever do this before?" the customer asked. "Nope," the shim man said. "Put my tires back on," the customer said. He then went in to see the manager and got his warranty.

Me? I would have probably agreed on the spot to the $150 repair bill. Also, I'd have gone out for coffee and trusted the men to do the work.

If someone tells me my Ford Escort needs all four wheels aligned, I let them do it and charge me for it, learning later that you can't align the rear tires on an Escort.

Fellow soldiers, I know most of you have mechanical acumen, that you insist on seeing old parts when work is done and that you can drop a few mechanical words that at least make the repairer think he's dealing with someone with moxie.

For those of you like me, talk to the natives. They can tell you where to go and even call ahead to some relative that works for some garage that will take care of you — properly —and save you money too.

Traditions carry in modern Army

William H. Acebes
Fort Benning command sergeant major

Even though we work in a changing Army, some things about soldiering remain the same.

Soldiers may be doing new and different things in new and different ways, but they are still responsible for proper care and wear of uniforms.

Army Regulation 670-1, with changes, outlines uniform policy, and individual soldiers are responsible for knowing and following that policy.

Remember, to find out what's right or wrong, or what's an infraction, always check the changes. Distribution centers and unit Personnel Administration Centers should have all changes posted with the regulation.

Some violations of AR 670-1 I see are:

• Not wearing the battle dress uniform jacket while driving

• Wearing uniform headgear like a "bubba hat," pushed to the back of the head

• Unserviceable uniforms, with holes not repaired

• Wearing civilian backpacks with the uniform

Some people may consider these regulations dumb, and these are often the people responsible for enforcing the regulations.

A lot of our young soldiers get in trouble when they see a person in a leadership position not following the regulation. When the soldier follows this incorrect example, he or she gets reprimanded. Leaders should be careful not to make infractions an example.

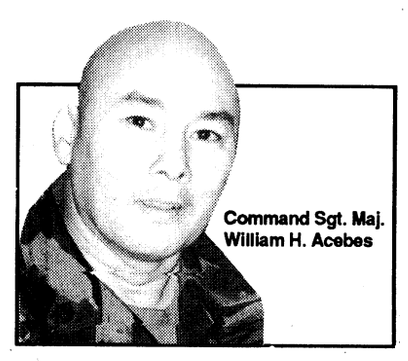
Commanders, in certain instances, are authorized to amend the regulations to meet local conditions.

Soldiers need to be careful when they buy uniform items. An item should be tried for fit and checked for defects before purchase.

Soldiers also have six months from initial issue date to exchange or have altered, free of charge, items that no longer fit. Our Army food and training sometimes change the shapes of new soldiers' bodies, change their body chemistry and metabolism, and allowances are made for this.

The only other thing we could do would be to have soldiers run around naked until they're through training.

Shakedowns, checking soldiers' uniforms for fit and serviceability, should be a part of inprocessing for soldiers just coming out of one station unit training or advanced individual training. I did this with inprocessing soldiers when I was a first sergeant, and it is the unit leader's responsibility to see that soldiers' uniforms are serviceable.



Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes

Another thing that hasn't changed about the Army is that soldiers are givers. Even back when soldiers made $75 a week, there was a tradition of giving to others. With Fort Benning in the midst of this year's Combined Federal Campaign, ending Nov. 20, soldiers are once again being given a chance to help.

CFC offers a wide range of organizations to choose from. One great thing about it is that Fort Benning benefits directly from some donations.

Some people choose to give to the scouts, because children here can benefit. We used to take programs like scouting for granted, but now we have to help ourselves.

People sometimes don't realize the importance of these programs until they hit home. I choose to give to organizations for cancer and heart disease research. I lost my mother and father both to heart disease and my grandmother died of cancer, and there was nothing I could do. Now I feel I'm doing something to help. I may be the one who gives the few dollars that pay for the vial that holds the cure — the point is, I'm doing what I can.

I also give to the Humane Society, because I have a dog. Nobody likes my dog but me, so I figure I'd better do everything I can to look out for him.

Giving is like voting — you may feel that your contribution won't make a difference, but it does. The right to give to any organization of your choice, like the right to vote, is a freedom that should be protected and a right that should be exercised.

Officials set safety standards on post

A Fort Benning family member was seriously injured recently when a privacy wall fell.

The brick wall was seven feet high and nine feet long. Two children were swinging on a hammock attached to the wall and a clothesline. The victim was riding a tricycle in front of the wall when it fell on him.

Privacy walls should not be used to support items such as tarps, hammocks and swings, etc. Children should not climb on privacy walls or fences.

For more information, contact the Family Housing Section of the Directorate of Public Works at 545-3701, or call the DPW Work Order Section at 545-2135 to request repairs. To report hazards, call the Infantry Branch Safety Office at 545-3267.

Our goal is to provide a safe and healthful place to work and play. I ask your assistance in identifying, reporting and correcting safety hazards.

Make Halloween a treat, follow safety rules

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Halloween trick or treating will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Oct. 31 (the only day trick or treating is permitted).

Here are some guidelines for trick or treating on post:

• Activities for trick or treating are limited to children under 13 years old. Preschoolers must be accompanied by on older person (14 years or older).

• Residents should limit trick or treating only to the housing area in which they live and approach only residences with lighted entry ways

• Light-colored, nonflammable costumes, short enough to prevent tripping, should be worn by children. Costumes can be marked with reflective tape or glow spray paint so they can pick up auto headlights and other lights.

• Observe all basic safety precautions. Use sidewalks and crosswalks; don't cut through yards. Look in all directions before walking across the street.

• Wear masks or head coverings that do not restrict vision. Use colorful facial makeup as much as possible.

• Pet owners should take measures to prevent pets from being a nuisance or a menace to children, and caution children about the wrongs of vandalism and causing damage to other people's property.

• Ensure children carry flashlights after dark. If a pumpkin is carried, it should be lit with a battery device, not a candle.

• Never let your child eat anything until you have inspected the treats. Give your child a full meal before he or she goes trick or treating.

"Our policy is to be as liberal as possible, and we work with the customer on a case-by-case basis. Our bottom line is to do everything possible to please the customer."

John Kelley, Fort Benning Army and Air Force Exchange Service retail business manager, said the AAFES policy on return, alteration and refund of uniform items is determined by a host of regulations.

"The issue items come from the Defense Personnel Service Center," said Robert Herrington, assistant manager of the Military Clothing Sales Store here. "They supply us with battle dress uniforms, boots, and all other required issue items."

Herrington said DPSC sets the refund and alteration policy on items it supplies to AAFES. "Their policy is if you bought the item and used it, it's yours," Herrington said. "If you polish a pair of boots and then find they're the wrong size, you'll have a lot of trouble returning them."

DPSC policy requires that an item be returned unaltered with receipt for a refund to be given, Herrington said. This means, among other things, uniform clothing can't have been laundered or pressed, or have patches attached.

"With their items especially, it's very important to be sure the item fits and is serviceable before the customer purchases it," Herrington said.

Kelley said that AAFES-supplied items, including "class B" shirts and suits, are subject to different regulations. "AAFES sets the policy on these items, and we'll try to satisfy the customers' needs in whatever they purchase," he said.

AAFES will provide certain alterations free, Kelley said, and will exchange or refund the purchase price of other items.

"We will gladly exchange or give a refund for items that don't fit," Kelley said, "whereas DPSC regulations don't permit this on its items."

Kelley said customers who want a refund on an AAFES item should return it along with the sales receipt.

Kelley said the customer should find out whether an item is issue, and so subject to DPSC regulations, or provided by AAFES.

"We're authorized to do alterations on some issue items purchased by enlisted soldiers and some optional clothing for all ranks," Kelley said.

For answers to any questions you have about return policy, call the Military Clothing Sales Store at 689-7981.

CFC drive strives for 1992 goal

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning Combined Federal Campaign funds currently stand at $98,783, according to Cathy White, CFC coordinator. This is about 20 percent of the 1992 goal of $500,000.

The campaign kicked off Sept. 28 and is expected to run through Nov. 20.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, noted before the kick-off that generosity and concern for others have always symbolized those who serve the United States government. This is a way to continue that tradition and support both the military and civilian communities.

Agencies at Fort Benning that receive help from CFC funds include the supplemental Food Locker, Volunteer Services, Youth and Handicapped Programs, Chaplains Enlisted Outreach, post community improvement, child care provider certification, the Family Unit Network Center and Dental Health.

Post soldier pleads guilty to forgery

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Spc. Thomas H. Christian of Company B, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, pleaded guilty to one specification of forging a check and was found guilty of an additional specification of forgery as well as larceny of the check from one soldier and a checkbook from his roommate.

Christian took a checkbook from his roommate and forged one check at a local business. Some time later, he stole a federal tax refund check from another soldier, forged the endorsement of the soldier and cashed it at a liquor store near his hometown.

He was identified by a surveillance photograph taken as he cashed the check as well as by handwriting analysis of the forged endorsement.

Christian was sentenced to a reduction in rank to private 1, forfeiture of $500 per month for five months, five months of confinement and a bad-conduct discharge.

A hearty welcome

Maj. Gen. John P. Herring, Training and Doctrine Command's new deputy commanding general and chief of staff (right), inspects the troops with Capt. LaTonya McDougald, commander of troops (center), and Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander, at a welcome ceremony Sept. 23 at Fort Monroe, Va.. Herring formerly commanded the U.S. Army Training Center and Fort Dix, N.J. before taking the reins at TRADOC.

TRADOC may combine schools

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Training and Doctrine Command is considering the possibility of combining all Army schools under one comprehensive system.

This would include the training systems of all three Army components: active, Reserve and National Guard.

According to a TRADOC news release, the proposed system was developed by Future Army Schools Twenty-one, or Task Force Fast, under the directive of Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan.

The task force is composed of 20 full-time representatives from all three Army components.

"America's Army needs a cohesive institutional training system that leverages available resources and investments currently in the Total Army School System," said Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander. "As we reduce the size of the components we must also reduce our institutional training investments."

The task force found that many Army schools, even ones located in the same area, teach similar subjects. Consolidating such schools will conserve manpower, equipment and building space, according to TRADOC.

Currently the National Guard has 88 schools and a total staff and faculty of approximately 3,000; the Reserve has 124 schools and about 13,000 staff and faculty; and the active Army has 63 schools and a staff and faculty of approximately 40,000 members.

Under the proposed Total Army System, the various schools would be consolidated into several regional universities. These would probably be established at existing Army training centers.

Each university would serve as the headquarters and would be the site for such courses as the Primary Leadership Development Course, phase one of Basic and Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Courses and Officer Candidate School.

Additionally, each university would have several colleges within its region that represent combat arms, combat support and combat service support. Under each college would be schools aligned with Army proponents, such as the U.S Army Infantry School at Fort Benning.

Deputy Assistant Commandant Col. Craiger C. Parker said the new proposal offers the potential for lasting benefits.

"We at Fort Benning are undertaking a part of the study to determine what efficiency and enhancement could be achieved through the consolidation of the active and Reserve component NCO academies located at Fort Benning," Parker said.

According to TRADOC, some additional benefits to the proposed system would include standardized instructor certification, uniform training standards, and the possibility for institutional accreditation for National Guard and Reserve component.

"The goal is a trained and ready Army, units and soldiers," said Sullivan. "I am really excited about this. We are moving in the right direction."

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Oct. 7 to Oct. 13. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt and/or innocence of any person.

• A sergeant was charged with assault after hitting his son in the face.

• A private first class was charged with aggravated assault after scratching another soldier in the face and hitting her.

• A retired major and his wife were charged with shoplifting after exiting the Post Exchange at the Main Mall with several concealed items of jewelry.

• A staff sergeant reported that persons unknown entered his unsecured storage shed and stole a deer stand.

• A civilian was charged with criminal trespassing after a family member observed him in her quarters. The civilian fled the area but was later apprehended by the MPs.

• A set of quarters sustained extensive damage from a fire, which is believed to have been started by a faulty light fixture. The family residing in the quarters was awakened by the smell of smoke and exited without injury.

• A major reported that persons unknown entered his unsecured wall locker and stole several items of field gear and an M-17 protective mask.

• A vendor reported that persons unknown short-circuited two vending machines on post and removed approximately $12 in change from the machines.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with loitering and wrongful possession of marijuana

• A private reported being assaulted by two unknown males while walking in the vicinity of the Mini Mall.

• Two children were charged with shoplifting after exiting the Post Exchange with several concealed packages of football and baseball cards.

• A family member was charged with cruelty to children after a doctor's examination of her children revealed physical abuse.

• A civilian reported that persons unknown removed $69 from his wallet, which was in an unsecured nightstand, in his room at Martin Army Community Hospital.

• A specialist was involved in a traffic accident when he apparently fell asleep while driving. His car struck a guardrail and flipped over, coming to rest in a ditch.

• A specialist was charged with driving under the influence after his car hit a guardrail and flipped on its side, while traveling north on 1-185.

• A specialist was charged with aggravated assault after hitting a private first class over the head with a beer pitcher.

• A family member reported being assaulted by four unknown males while walking through a post housing area.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with driving under the influence of alcohol, having an open container of alcohol, and no state tag, after being involved in a one-vehicle accident.

Other activities included 18 traffic accidents and six reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were seven cases of DUI, 10 reported cases of larceny of private property and one reported case of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest!" Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223, or the "Crime in Progress" line at 545-2222.

Post to get new MSE platoon

USAIC Public Affairs Office

A platoon from the 24th Signal Battalion, stationed at Fort Stewart, Ga., is scheduled to come to Fort Benning as part of the reorganization of the signal battalion.

Second Platoon, Company D, a mobile subscriber equipment platoon, was officially organized Oct. 16 at Fort Stewart and is expected to be fully operational at Fort Benning in late February, following four months of mobile subscriber equipment training at Fort Stewart.

The 61-soldier platoon will be attached to the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division at Kelley Hill. It will provide the brigade with telephone, computer and facsimile communications.

The system represents the equivalence of a modern telephone company on wheels, according to a unit spokesperson.

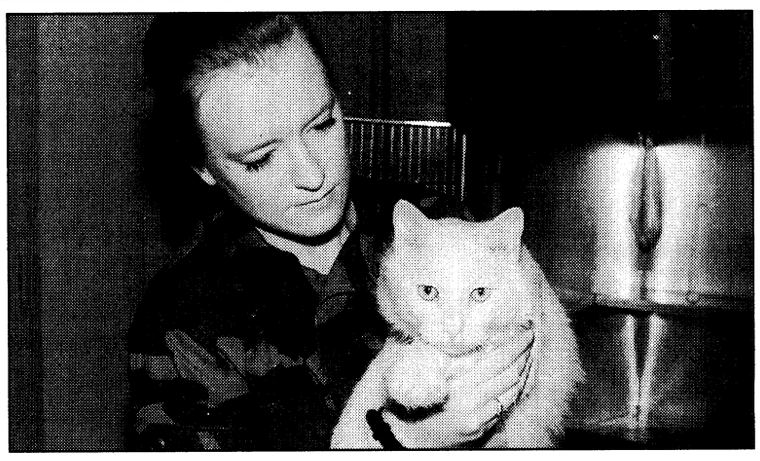
PET OF THE WEEK



Private first class Sarah Clymer holds a male, mixed-breed cat (age 9-12 months). He is neutered and extremely affectionate. If you would like to adopt him or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

GATEWAY TO CARE

Martin Army Community Hospital

The flu season is rapidly approaching, and many people are already asking about when the flu vaccine will be available.

The staff at Martin Army Community Hospital has anticipated the need for the vaccine and taken steps to ensure that adequate supplies are available for everyone who wants it.

The influenza or flu virus causes an illness with fever, cough and body aches that lasts for several days. In the United States, there have been many epidemics caused by this virus.

Different problems occur when many people have the flu. Workers usually lose many work days due to the disease. Elderly people and those with chronic medical problems have a high risk for developing complications from the flu, such as pneumonia, and may need to be hospitalized.

The consequences of the flu are far reaching; therefore, it is important to prevent this disease in as many people as possible.

The vaccine being used in the 1992-1993 flu season protects against the two major types of influenza viruses, A and B. Rather than having whole viruses, this vaccine contains specific parts of viruses that stimulate the immune system. the immunity lasts for about a year, so each person must receive the vaccine again in following years.

By Army regulation, all active duty persons must receive the vaccine annually. Other people who should receive the vaccine include those age 65 and over, and those with chronic medical diseases such as diabetes, heart disease or lung disease.

The vaccine is recommended and available for all civilian health care workers.

Any family member 6 months of age or older or retiree may receive the vaccine if he or she chooses to take it.

Although the vaccine has few side effects, there are certain people who should not receive it. These include people who have had serious allergic reactions to eggs or to the flu vaccine itself. Pregnant women will not be given the vaccine early in the pregnancy, but may receive it after 13 weeks.

The flu vaccine is already available to family members and retirees through the Immunization and Family Practice clinics. Active duty soldiers will receive their vaccine beginning Nov. 2, and should go to the Immunization Clinic or their usual Troop Medical Clinic. Medical and Dental Activities employees will also receive their vaccine beginning Nov. 2 in the Immunization Clinic.

Everyone who wants the vaccine must bring their medical records and shot records.

Hours of operation for those clinics giving flu vaccines are as follows:

Martin Army Community Hospital Family Practice Clinic – beginning Nov. 3, Tuesdays and Thursdays, 1 to 3:45 p.m., Special Family Practice Flu Shot Day – Nov. 6, 9 a.m. to noon, and 1 to 3:45 p.m., Immunization Clinic —beginning Nov. 2, Monday through Friday, 7:30 to 11:30 a.m., and Tuesdays and Thursdays, 1 to 3:30 p.m.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Kurt Mleth

Staff Judge Advocate's Office

Q: I'm looking to buy a new or good used car and am concerned about arranging financing. What issues do I need to consider?

A: Shopping for car financing is as important as actually shopping for the car. Consider the example of a $ 10,000 car purchase being financed with a four-year loan that carries an 11 percent annual percentage rate. By the time the car is actually paid off, the consumer will have paid more than $2,000 beyond the original purchase price. This makes financing charges one of the biggest costs, if not the biggest cost, associated with car ownership.

If there is one rule of thumb that consumer advocacy groups all agree on with respect to car financing, it is "never shop for a monthly payment." When shopping for car financing, you need to compare annual percentage rates and total financing costs, not monthly payments.

Be careful: car dealers often try to sell more expensive cars than customers can really afford by offering longer term loans that may seem attractive because they result in either lower down payments and/or monthly payments.

Consider the following example found in one consumer group's car buying guide involving a $14,000 car purchase financed through a 12 percent annual percentage rate loan:

If a three-year loan at these terms is made, monthly payments are about $460, amounting to more than $ 2,740 in added interest. If the same deal is made with a six- year loan, monthly payments drop to about $ 310 but involve more than $4,680 in total interest payments. The cost to the consumer in this case is more than $1,900 more than the shorter term loan.

Because of changes in tax laws that went into effect in 1991, consumers are no longer able to deduct interest paid on auto loans on their tax returns, so there is little benefit in choosing a longer term car loan.

Also keep in mind that with the newer, longer term (five or six-year) car loans being offered these days is the fact that during the first few years of the loan you'll probably owe more than the car is actually worth (because of depreciation costs). If your car should be stolen or "totaled" in an accident during this time, your insurance will probably only cover the actual value of the car at the time of loss, not the total amount still owed on the car. The consumer is responsible for making up the difference in this case.

Another factor to consider is whether the possibility exists that you'll want to take this car outside the continental United States while the loan is still being paid off.

Many financing companies will require you to get their advance approval before doing so. Or they may require as part of the financing agreement that an insurance policy be purchased (to cover a total loss) despite the fact that such insurance may not be valid or meet legal requirements at the overseas location.

The cost of this insurance is often made a part of the actual loan note and has in many instances, added up to $ 2,000 in costs over a four-year period.

Editor's Note: This is the first of an occasional series of articles dealing with your credit. This article discusses the credit history report — what it is, why it is important, and consumer's rights under federal law. Future articles will discuss topics such as the practices of bill collectors and billing disputes with creditors.

"Credit history reports" are among the most important documents affecting a consumer in today's economy.

Nearly all businesses rely on credit history reports as a legitimate means of cost control. No business wants to extend credit to an individual unless it can be established that this person is a safe credit risk.

Information about individual consumer practices and credit histories are reported in profiles made and sold to businesses by "consumer reporting agencies." It is these reports that often ultimately determine whether employment, insurance, loan, financing, or credit applications are approved.

Information commonly reported includes a consumer's current, as well as paid off, loan, credit, and/or charge accounts (to include the length of time any payments were reported "past due"); "public record" information such as the filing of bankruptcy petitions (whether or not these petitions are eventually completed, discharged, or dismissed); issuance of tax liens or wage assignments against the consumer; legal judgments against a consumer; or "not responsible" notices such as when a husband or wife claims to be not responsible for debts incurred by his or her spouse.

Information about current or "open" accounts remain in a credit report indefinitely.

However, "negative" consumer information can only remain in your report for up to seven years, after which time the law requires its removal. The only exception to this is with regard to bankruptcy information, which will remain in a credit report for 10 years from the date of filing, even if the petition is ultimately dismissed or discharged.

Investigations made by various state attorneys general and consumer and privacy advocates reflect that a significant number of "credit history reports" prepared by these businesses contain major errors, are sold to companies who use them to send out "junk mail" solicitations, or make it easy for almost anyone to learn confidential information about a particular person.

In order to better protect consumers, Congress passed the "Fair Credit Reporting Act" in 1988. The purposes of the act is to require consumer reporting agencies to adopt fair means to ensure accuracy, confidentiality and proper use of credit reports, to ensure consumers are made aware of negative actions taken against them based on these reports and to allow the consumers access to this information that is collected about their spending and borrowing practices.

A consumer's legal rights under this act include:

- being informed of the name and address of the consumer reporting agency that prepared the report that was subsequently used as a basis to deny credit, insurance or employment,
- receiving a copy of this report, free of charge, if credit was refused within a 30-day period,
- obtaining a copy of their credit report for a "reasonable" charge (usually around $ 15 to $20) if the consumer does not qualify for a free copy of their report.

Other consumer rights extended by this act include:

- to be told the sources of information in their reports (except for opinions contained in investigative reports),
- to be told to whom this information was given,
- to have information in their file kept confidential until proper investigations and verification has been completed,
- to have information disputed by a consumer investigated by the agency and to have unverified information removed from their report,
- to include the agency's sending notice of this removal to all persons or businesses who originally received the unverified or incorrect information,
- to be informed of credit investigations before they occur,
- and to take legal action against those who did not comply with this act.

Another area covered within the act addresses disputes between consumers and consumer reporting agencies.

If a consumer challenges information found in his or her credit report, the credit reporting agency must re-investigate this information unless the agency can clearly determine that the consumer's dispute is either frivolous or irrelevant.

If reinvestigation does not resolve the dispute, the consumer may submit a rebuttal statement to the credit reporting agency. The purpose of this statement is to explain why the consumer believes the information contained in his or her file is inaccurate, not to explain the circumstances or reasons why they could not pay certain bills.

The agency must furnish a copy of this rebuttal statement to all subsequent recipients of the consumer's credit history report of profile.

The "consumer reporting" business is a billion-dollar industry dominated by three major companies who each may be independently compiling and maintaining reports about a person's credit history. Smaller, local companies may also be compiling and maintaining their own files and reports.

By gaining access to these reports, consumers are in a better position to be able to see and correct the information used by credit and loan officers to determine their credit-worthiness before they apply for credit or financing. Consumers might also be able to determine which businesses or persons have asked for, and received, copies of these credit histories.

In response to consumer demand, one of the major companies, TRW Inc., has begun a service in which they will provide consumers free copies of their credit histories once a year upon request. In order to get your free copy, send your full name (include spouse's name if married), present home address and previous home addresses for the past five years, year of birth, and Social Security number to: TRW; National Consumer Relations Center; 1Z606 Greenville Avenue; P.O. Box 749029; Dallas, Texas 75374-9029.

Further articles will discuss billing disputes between consumers and creditors. The Legal Assistance Division of the Staff Judge Advocate's Office is available to help persons with their questions and concerns in this area.

Bad Boys behave against Beasts

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 36th Engineer Group and the combined league, including the 75th Ranger Regiment, Military Police Activity, 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital and others, have been working hard to make the post playoffs. Here is a wrap-up of games played Monday night at Engineer Fields 1 and 2.

As a flag is thrown, Bad Boys receiver Dennis Baltzell tries to get around the right side with Bravo Beast linebacker Herman White hot on his trail.

Headquarters Support Co. (Bad Boys) defeats Company B, 43rd Engineers (Bravo Beast), 7-2

Bad Boys' quarterback Tommy Johnson threw a touchdown pass to tight end Tony Gooden and then hit Gooden with a shovel pass for the extra point late in the second half for their only score of the game and a 7-0 lead.

On defense Gooden intercepted one pass, safety Todd Thiel picked off one and cornerback Terry Arp snatched away another to end drives by the Bravo Beast offense. Bravo Beast got their only points of the night when defensive tackle Thomas Ussery tackled Johnson in the end zone for a safety and a 7-2 loss to the Bad Boys of HSC.

With the win, the Bad Boys upped their record to 2-0 while Bravo Beast dropped to 3-2.

Co. A. 43rd Engineers (Alpha Raiders) defeats Co. C, 43 Engineers (Charlie Rock), 9-0

Raiders' tailback Dock Walls took a pitch from quarterback Lenielle Davenport off the right side late in the second half and scampered 45-yards for the only touchdown of the game.

A few minutes later the Raider defense sacked Charlie Rock quarterback Andre Williams in the end zone for a two-point safety, crushing Charlie Rock's chances of a come-from-behind win. The Raiders improved to 2-2, with Charlie Rock dropping to 1-3.

Military Police Activity defeats 75th Ranger Regiment, 6-0

MPA improved its record to 4-2 with a 6-0 win over the Rangers. MPA quarterback Darrell Barfield hit wide receiver Joe Baker in the left corner of the end zone on a down and out pattern for the games only score and a 6-0 victory. Barfield also had an interception for the MPA defense.

Ranger safety Steven Long picked off a Barfield pass to keep MPA off the board in the first half. The Rangers dropped their record to 2-4 on the season.

Other scores from Engineer Field Monday night:

Medical Department Activity defeats 690th Medical Co., 1-0 (forfeit)

The 36th Engineer Group will start a 16-playoff double-round-robin Monday. Results will determine four teams to go to the post playoffs.

The tournament will be at Engineer Field with four games Monday, two each Tuesday and Wednesday and a championship game Thursday. Games will start at 5:30 p.m. each day.

Marines grapple to victory in wrestling tournament

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Wrestling teams from Fort Polk, La.; Camp Lejeune, N.C.; and battalion-level teams went to the mat Saturday at Briant Wells Field House with the U.S. Marine Corps posting another victory over Fort Benning and Fort Polk.

For the second time in two weeks, the Marines posted team victories in both freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling.

The Fort Polk team was also well represented in freestyle, tying for second place with Fort Benning's 11th Infantry Regiment and placing second in Greco-Roman.

In freestyle competition at 125.5 pounds, Keith Idleburg, Fort Polk, took first place with three straight shutout wins.

At 136.5 pounds, Micheal Woltman of the Marine Corps whipped off four wins to take first place.

Clarence Arrington of the U.S. Army Medical Department Activity had to go to the mat five times before winning the 149.5-pound weight class.

In the 163-pound division, Townley Hedrick of the 11th Infantry Regiment posted a first place victory with four wins.

Keith Sieracki of the 29th Inf. Regt. captured the 180.5-pound weight class with four wins.

In the 198-pound weight class, All Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas of the 11th Inf., Regt. came out of retirement after a three-year layoff to win four straight matches and take first place.

In the heavyweight division, David Sanders of Fort Polk took first place with only one win.

In Greco-Roman individual competition, Kevin Hannon of the 75th Ranger Regiment won the 125.5-pound class uncontested.

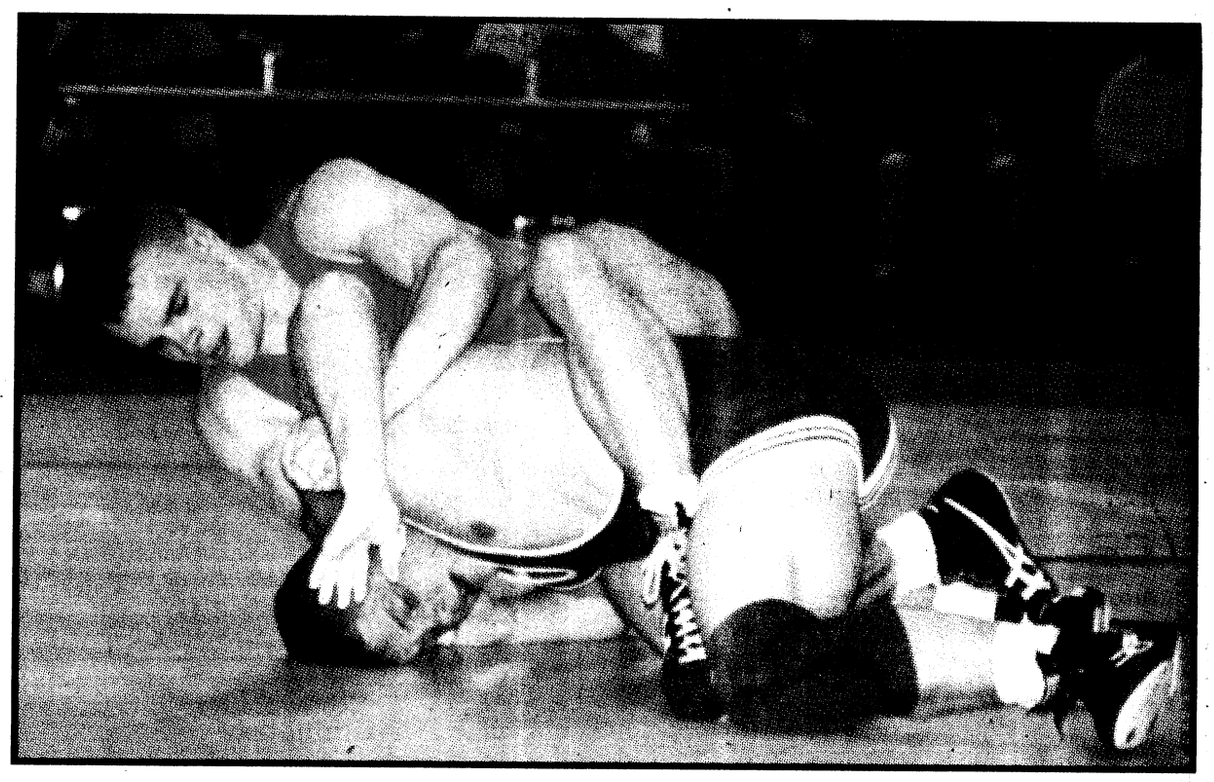
Keith Idleburg once again threw shutouts at his opponents winning four matches without being scored upon.

John Petty of 1st Battalion, (Airborne) 507th Inf. Regt., captured the 149.5-pound division with three wins — one by shutout and two by pin.

Three wins for Richard Neal of the Marine Corps won the163-pound weight class.

Keith Sieracki dominated the 180.5-pound weight class with three wins and his second first-place finish of the day, repeating his success in the frestyle competition.

In three tournaments so far this season, Sieracki has not lost a match in either freestyle or Greco-Roman wrestling.



Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

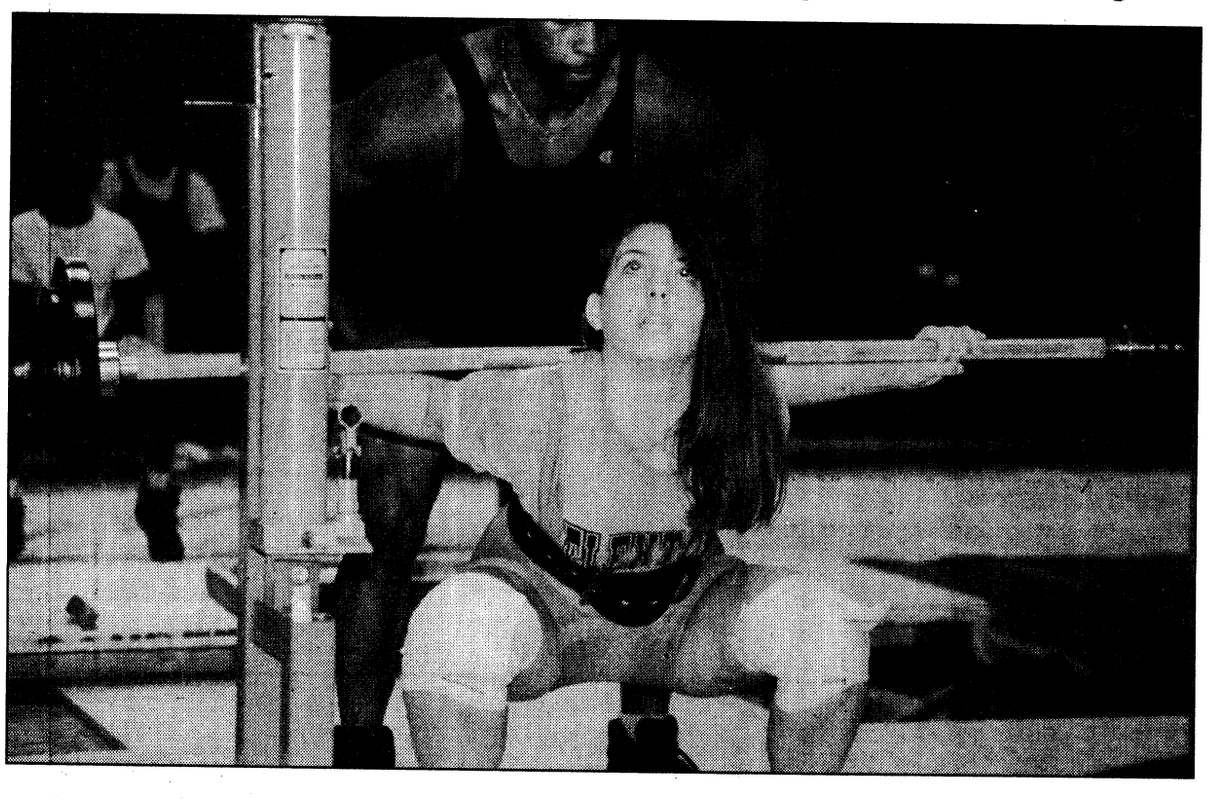
Chad Young (top) of Fort Benning attempts to turn Kevin Brown of the Marine Corps in freestyle competition.

Chris Vike of the Marine Corps won all four of his matches to win the 198-pound class and seal the team victory for the Marine Corps.

Anyone wishing to train for the Nov. 7 tournament should come to Building 3245 on Sand Hill, Monday through Friday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. for training.

Weigh in will be Nov. 6 from 4 to 7 p.m., and a late weigh in will be Nov. 7 from 8 to 8:30 a.m.

Powerlifters carry heavy totals in post competition



Terry K. Ray/Special to The Bayonet

Jamie Myles attempts to lift 117 pounds in the squat, while her spotter looks on.

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The fifth annual Fort Benning Powerlifting Competition presented by the Physical Activities Branch and sponsored by General Nutrition Centers was Saturday at Briant Well Field House and drew 17 lifters in nine weight classes.

In the women's novice class, Melissa Townsend captured first place with a total weight of 425 pounds in three categories. Jamie Myles took second with a total weight of 420 pounds.

In the men's 123-pound division, Jose Sanchez came out on top with a total weight of 1,050 pounds. David Peterson took first place in the 148-pound class with a total weight lift of 540 pounds.

In the 165-pound class, Michael Franck took the top spot with a total weight of 1,040 pounds, while Otis Newby captured second with 1,005 pounds and Harold Holloway placed third with a weight of 885 pounds.

Guest lifter Willie Grider showed why he is ranked in the top 20 in the nation in the 165-pound class with lifts of 690 pounds in the squat and 360 pounds in the bench press. Grider attempted to lift 700 pounds on his third try in the deadlift competition, but he was unsuccessful in his bid for a new competition record.

Reginald Johnson took first place in the 181-pound class with 1,425 pounds total weight.

With a total weight of 1,170 pounds, Shannon Hill captured the 198-pound class. Jeffery Fletcher came in second with a total of 1,090 pounds and Jeffery Cain took third with a weight of 1,085 pounds.

Three quarters of a ton or 1,550 pounds propelled Regan Ward to first place in the 220-pound weight class. Esau Bright finished a close second with a total of 1,390 pounds and Maurice Jordan placed third with 905 pounds.

In the last two weight classes, only two lifters competed in each class. Willie Able was willing and able to place first with lifts of 650 pounds in the squat, 385 in the bench press and 625 pounds in the deadlift for a total of 1,660 pounds in the 242-pound class.

Xavier Bailey squatted 680 pounds on his third try, benched 400 pounds on his first attempt and finished off the deadlift with a pull of 520 pounds for a grand total of 1,600 pounds in the 275-pound division.

Sanchez and Able were named best lifters in the light and heavy division.

"Everything went rather well," said competition coordinator Hazel Henry. "I was extremely pleased with the help given by Dean Rose and the people who spotted for the lifters. For my first powerlifting competition we did all right."

Take aim at safety for accident-free season

Infantry Branch Safety Office

With the hunting season about to get into full swing, Fort Benning hunters are encouraged to make the 1992 hunting season accident-free. Each year tragedies and injuries occur in the woods from accidents.

The two major causes of hunting accidents are shooters failing to make certain of their target and falling out of tree stands.

Wearing reflective clothing (vest and cap) reduce the possibility of hunters being mistaken for game. Check out your tree stands before using them. Make any necessary repairs and use a safety belt when in the tree stand.

Safety measures relating to fence climbing, tree climbing or ditch jumping with a loaded gun should be followed by all hunters.

These measures are: remove the magazine, clear the cartridge from the chamber, and apply the safety lock. By exercising gun safety measures, a gun firing accidentally is less likely.

Prevention is the solution to hunting casualties. Every hunting accident that has occurred could have been prevented. Most hunting accidents happen as a result of people ignoring firearms safety rule. Prevention involves knowing and obeying those basic safety rules.

Responsible, knowledgeable, and safe hunters will learn, remember and follow these simple rules:

• Control the direction of your firearm's muzzle. Carry your firearm safely, keeping the safety on until ready to shoot. Keep your finger off the trigger until ready to shoot.

• Identify your target and what is beyond it. Know the identifying features of the game you hunt.

• Treat every firearm with the same respect due a loaded firearm.

• Be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstructions and that you have only ammunition of the proper size for the firearm you are carrying.

• Unload firearms when not in use. Leave the actions open. Firearms should be carried empty in cases to and from shooting areas.

• Never point a firearm at anything you do not want to shoot.

• Never climb a fence or tree, or jump a ditch or log, with a loaded firearm. Never pull a firearm toward you by the muzzle.

• Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water. During target practice, be sure your backstop is adequate.

• Store firearms and ammunition separately (locked) beyond the reach of children and careless adults.

• Avoid alcoholic beverages or other mood-altering drugs before or while shooting.

Tournament to aid Santa's Castle

By Timothy G. Bosse
11th Infantry Regiment

The first "Buddy Bass Tournament" sponsored by 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment in support of Santa's Castle is set for Oct. 31.

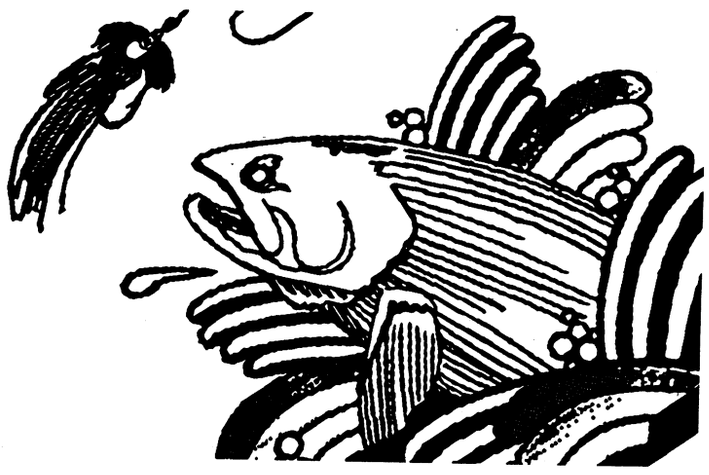
The tournament begins at first light, but entrants are requested to have their boats in the water and ready to go by 6:30 a.m. The launch site for the tournament is the Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

The store at Uchee Creek will be open early for last minute purchases to include ice, drinks or snacks. Coffee and fresh muffins will be on sale prior to casting off. If you need a boat, one can also be rented at the facility. The entry fee for the tournament is $25 per boat.

There is a maximum of two fishermen in each boat. Weigh-in to determine the tournament winners begins at 4 p.m. Prize money will be awarded to the top finishers as well to the fisherman who lands the day's big fish.

At the conclusion of the weigh-in, drawings will be held for free gifts. Winning names will be selected from all registered contestants. You must be present to win.

Information and registration forms can be obtained by calling Command Sgt. Maj. Ken Sponslor at 545-1962 or by stopping by Santa's Castle.



The first to register is the first to leave the dock. Late registration will be available on the day of the tournament.

Tournament organizer Sponslor emphasized that "the competition is open to the entire Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City community." Contestants do not have to be affiliated with the military, he said

Organizers said they hope the bass tournament will not only provide a great day of fishing and competition for the entrants but will provide much-needed revenue for Santa's Castle as the holiday season approaches.

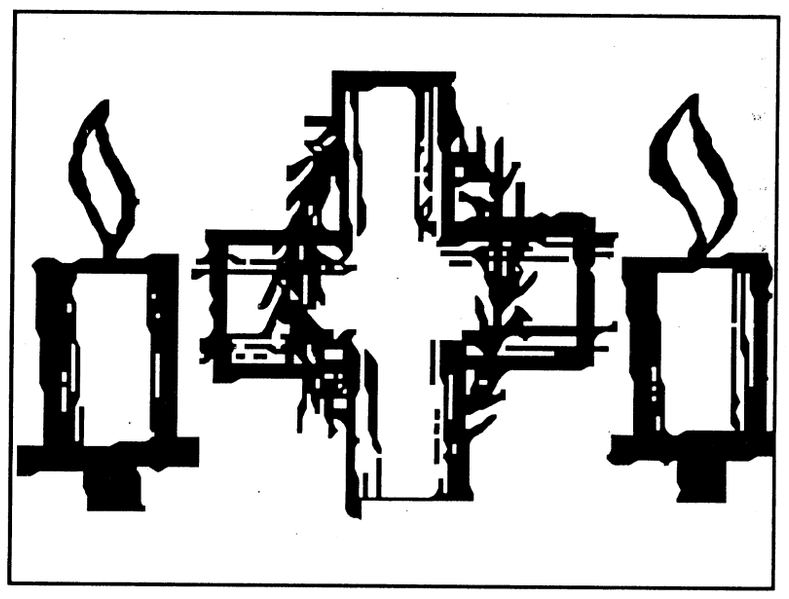
Center takes applications

Loyola master's program offers study choice



By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Religious Education Center is still accepting applications for the Loyola master's degree program.

The program offers a master's degree in either religious education or pastoral studies and will be conducted totally on Fort Benning.

The program consists of ten courses, three semester hours each, as well as homework assignments. The source books are not provided.

Classes will meet once each week, and one of the features of the program is that it is sponsored at Department of the Army level by the chief of chaplains, and it will be offered on many Army posts throughout the United States and overseas.

Student can begin the program here; and, if he or she is transferred to another post prior to completing the program, the student can join the program at the new post.

Although the program comes from Loyola University in New Orleans, personnel of all denominations are authorized and encouraged to participate.

This is an opportunity to gain a master's degree from a university, which is nationally known, and the graduate program has been approved for DANTES and by the Veterans

Army battle situations demand 'purple suiters'

TRADOC News Service

When assigned to joint service commands, Army people will have to become "purple suiters," according to retired Lt. Gen. Calvin Waller, who was deputy commander in chief for Desert Storm."

Waller, who retired in November and now resides in Colorado Springs, Colo., was the third speaker in the Training and Doctrine Command Leader Development Program. He spoke on joint operations and coalition warfare.

"If you are part of a joint headquarters, then you ought to forget what color uniform you are wearing," he told his audience. "Then you are no longer a green suiter, you are a purple suiter. You should be working for the betterment of your overall organization.

"Parochialism is hard to break; it will happen ... and that's a disloyalty to the organization that you're working for," Waller said.

The general said soldiers must also understand the other services' roles and missions and the different languages. "Just like you have your own language, they have their own language," he said.

Referring to his experience in Desert Storm, Waller said commanders of coalition forces should perform much as they do when leading any Army organization.

"I don't think we'll have another war, or a police action or a skirmish that you aren't going to have some support of other countries. If you don't try to make an effort to understand the different cultures, the varied ethnic groups, the various religions that you're going to have to deal with, then you're not going to be successful," he said.

Waller also talked about the qualities of good leaders. To him the most important is common sense.

"Soldiers ... understand what is right and what is wrong," he said. "Common sense is a rare commodity. Your soldiers are filled with common sense, and you ought to use it whenever possible.

"Few things are more damaging to a leader's ... reputation than if someone says he or she lacks common sense," he said.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks, TRADOC commander, initiated the Leader Development Program to expose members of the headquarters staff to current ideas regarding defense issues.

Other speakers have been Tom Clancy, novelist, and retired Lt. Gen. John J. Yeosock, commander of ground forces during Operation Desert Storm.

2/29 to change command

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment will conduct a change of command ceremony Oct. 30 at 11 a.m. at Dickman Field.

The outgoing commander, Lt. Col. Thomas Carraway, has been the battalion commander since November 1990.

The incoming commander is Lt. Col. Michael Bingham, who is coming from 177th Separate Armor Brigade (Opposing Force) at Fort Irwin, Calif. He was the deputy brigade commander.

The change of command ceremony will necessitate the closing of 1st Division Road between 8th Division and Old Cusseta Roads.

This part of the road will be closed form 10:30 a.m. to noon.

29th's Bradley NETT trains in South Korea

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

Sixteen soldiers from the 29th Infantry Regiment's Bradley Fighting Vehicle New Equipment Training Team returned to Fort Benning recently after an extensive training program in South Korea.

The two-month program provided training for soldiers of the 5th Battalion, 5th Air Defense Artillery of the 2nd Infantry Division.

The BFV NETT trains mostly mechanized infantry and cavalry units, of active and National Guard units on Bradley operator maintenance, vehicle operations and gunnery. This was the first time they had trained an air defense unit, according to 1st Sgt. Jeffery P. Pelot of the team.

The training team was led by Capt. Donald Koehler. His team consisted of Sgts. 1st Class Vincent Woodland, Jeffery Stansfeilt, Johnny Jackson, David Stokes, Pablo Delgado, Staff Sgts. Kenneth Riley, Donald Ladakos, Albert Boyd, William Evans, Dennis Link, Keith Rynott, Robert Moss, Charles Pranter, Troy Ross and Paul Bogash.

The team will assist in other Bradley Fighting Vehicle training missions at Fort Benning over the next few months, officials said.

29th soldier trains Bahrain soldiers

U.S. Embassy - Bahrain

BAHRAIN, Saudi Arabia — A soldier from the 29th Infantry Regiment recently participated along with nine other U.S. soldiers in training Bahrain Defense Force soldiers in the maintenance and operation of that country's newly acquired M-3 vehicles.

Maj. Edward Walsh of the 29th Infantry Regiment was chief of the mobile training team that conducted the training.

The Americans, representing Training and Doctrine Command and Forces Command installations throughout the the United States, began two courses of instruction on Aug. 8.

According to Walsh, the courses are designed to build subject matter expertise in the operators and mechanics who will employ and maintain the vehicles.

Walsh's team is further divided into two groups. Gary Shoults of the 756th Maintenance Company at Fort Knox, Ky. trains the Bahrain Defense Force's mechanics on all levels of maintenance.

"The BDF mechanics have a great deal of knowledge on diesel engines and are quickly learning how this new transmission works," Shoults explained. Maintenance instruction covers both the A2 and A3 models of the M-113.

A total of 26 BDF officers, noncommissioned officers and soldiers have been trained in the first of three operator courses. Students are divided into sections for training based upon their unit of assignment. This allows the BDF to maintain unit integrity and minimized the need for translation support.

The members of the mobile training team enjoyed great success in their first month of training. They comment on the camaraderie that develops among the soldiers of the two armies.

In one section of the operator course, taught by Staff Sgt. Mitchell Freeman of Fort Gordon, Ga., and Staff Sgt. Dan Post, who like Walsh, represents the 29th Infantry Regiment at Fort Benning, instruction takes the appearance of an informal discussion.

"We explain a task in English," Post said, "then our interpreter translates into Arabic. Often, another student will ask a question, our interpreter answers, then he translates both the question and answer for us to make sure he said the right thing." Added Freeman, "That's a little different technique from Fort Gordon, but it works. "

Staff Sgt. John Curtis of Fort McClellan, Ala., said, "We're not boring students to tears in a classroom. All soldiers know that during the course of the day they will have to touch, feel, and operate every item we talk about. That keeps their interest up."

Curtis is teamed with Staff Sgt. Walton who, like Staff Sgt. Robert Sanders, is assigned to Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Training highlights include operating the vehicle in the rugged desert terrain common in the Middle East and weapon firing. Regarding the rough terrain operation, Lee recalls explaining to his mechanics about the M-113's ability to negotiate a 60 percent slope.

"I perceived some doubt on their part," he continued "so I put them in the back of the vehicle, found a steep hill, and showed them!" Rough terrain driving also includes operating the vehicle using the M-17 periscope. That experience for the soldiers was, in Sanders' words, "a real confidence-builder."

Like the terrain driving, the opportunity to live fire from the M-113 was also a confidence-building feat for the students, many of whom had never fired from a vehicle before. Soldiers engaged targets with both the M-2 .50-caliber machine gun and the MK-19 40mm grenade machine gun.

"We had the students engage several targets at various ranges so they could learn the techniques of traversing and elevating the weapons while mounted on the vehicles," said Wheeler.

Training in 100 degree heat takes its toll on men and equipment, as any Desert Storm veteran can attest.

Shoults took advantage of a transmission oil warning light in one vehicle to make a teaching point.

"When the light came on, the driver stopped," Shoults said. "I showed him in the training manual what the warning light means, then had him check the transmission fluid level. It was low. That problem was easily fixed, but it demonstrated to the students the need to do a good pre-ops check and keep an eye on the gauges."

The Bahrain Defense Force has organized several orientation visits for the visiting mobile training team. Such visits to historical and cultural sites promote camaraderie among the soldiers of both countries and provide the Americans with a greater appreciation of Bahrain, officials said.

The M-113 will conclude its training and return to the United States in late November.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

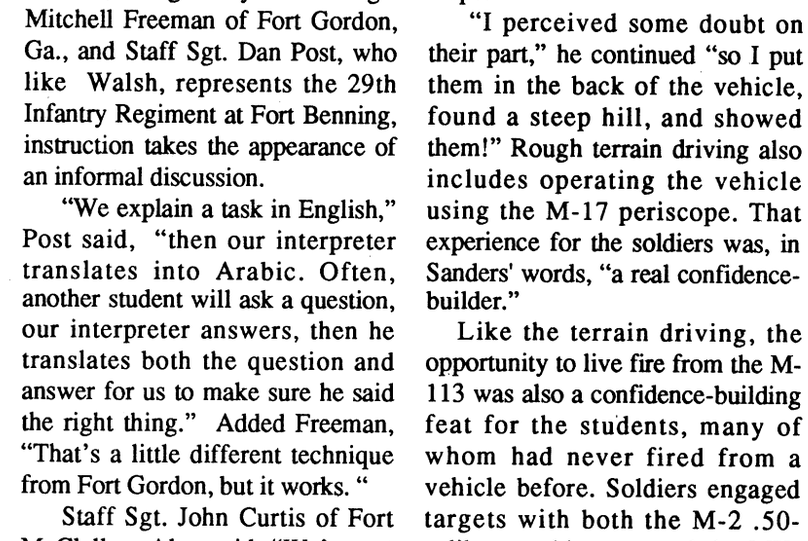
50 years ago this week

• In North Africa, the Battle of El Alamein began as Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery led the British Eighth Army against the German Afrika Korps, under the command of General George von Stumme

The British X Corps lost 250 tanks but reduced the 15th Panzer Corps to only 40 tanks. Rommel returned from medical care in Germany to command after von Stumme died of a heart attack.

Montgomery halted to regroup after enjoying initial success and Rommel tried to take advantage of the opportunity by mounting a counterattack at Kidney Ridge.

However, the attempt failed as a relatively small group of British defenders repelled the attack.



• On the Eastern front, German forces advanced in the Red October and Barrikady factories provinces of Stalingrad. German intelligence assumed higher Soviet casualties than there actually were — a mistake which would later haunt German planners.

• New Guadalcanal, the Battle of Santa Cruz began between U.S. and Japanese carrier forces under the commands of Vice Adm. Thomas Kinkaid and Vice Adm. Admiral Hiroaki, respectively.

The Japanese force squared off with four battleships and the carriers Shokaku, Zuiho, Zuikaku and Junyo against an American force that included the carriers USS Hornet and USS Enterprise and the battleship USS South Dakota. The Americans damaged only the Shokaku and a cruiser.

• On Guadalcanal, the Japanese discontinued their planned offensive after suffering 3,500 casualties; however, the exhausted American forces were unable to capitalize on the opportunity to sieze the initiative.

• At Fort Benning, actress Mary Martin served as the "Bayonet Girl" for the post's fledgling newspaper, "The Bayonet." Martin had accepted the title in September saying "My heart belongs to Benning."

EXCELLENCE & QUALITY

ACAP offers services for soldiers getting out

Army Career and Alumni Program

Most people leaving the military find themselves at a disadvantage when they start looking for a job, according to Ted Craig, Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program transition services manager.

They have never had to submit resumes, sit through job interviews or decide what type of work they want to do, he said. They haven't thought about where they want to live or worried about a work wardrobe.

"It's important to think far ahead," Craig said. "We offer career guidance to people. It's never too early to begin thinking about what you may want to do after the military. We help people based on their individual needs."

ACAP offers:

• A three-day workshop within 180 days of separation that helps military members prepare for transition.

• A one-day "advanced course" dealing with resume writing and interview skills.

• The Defense Outplacement Referral System process that provides a free service to match a person's abilities to civilian employment positions and by sending a mini-resume to a data base used by hundreds of employers throughout the world.

• Career Day provides an opportunity for employers to meet, brief and interview soldiers.

• The Educational Opportunity Program makes it possible for a person to get a help and information about tuition assistance, enrollment procedures, or data on any college or university.

• Referrals for separation benefits to include Special Separation Benefits, Voluntary Separation Incentive and retirement.

Below is a timetable for job hunting while still in the service.

12 months before leaving:

• Talk with local transition center personnel.

• Visit the Retirement Services Office if you are retiring.

• Discuss with your family, possible options, setting goals for the job and location search.

• Decide where you want to live after leaving the military.

• Decide what types of jobs you qualify for and the income you will need.

• Start subscriptions or check the local library for professional or trade journals.

• Make sure you have or can acquire any necessary license you need for your chosen profession.

• Check your financial status and make plans to have enough money to cover several months of expenses if you don't find a job immediately.

• Research job possibilities, job markets and the economic conditions in the area you want.

9 months before leaving:

• Decide what type of work you are going to look for.

• Do first drafts of your resume.

• If possible, visit the area where you plan to move to after leaving the military; if you can't visit, write the local chamber of commerce for information.

• For job and real estate information, subscribe to weekend newspapers from the area where you plan to move.

• Keep in touch with the local transition point.

6 months before leaving:

• Attend an ACAP transition class whether retiring or getting out of the Army.

• Finalize your resume; decide if you need help in developing the best possible resume and if you need to hire a professional resume writer.

• Develop a list of employers in the field in which you are interested; also, determine any friends you might have in the private sector who may be able to help you.

• Contact an executive recruiter for assistance if you qualify and are looking for a job in this category.

• Begin developing a contingency plan for job and location in case your plan falls through.

Actress to spend time at White School

Fort Benning Schools

Actress Heather Heath will spend four weeks as artist-in-residence at Edward A. White Elementary School beginning Nov. 16.

The residency is sponsored by the Georgia Council for the Arts Artist-in-Education Program and is funded in part by the school.

Designed to bring professional artists into schools and communities, the program is supported through appropriations of the Georgia General Assembly and the National Endowment for the Arts.

During the residency, Heath will guide students in an exploration of theater and help them discover their own creative potential. Special workshops will also be offered for the parents in the community.

What: Parent-child workshop

When: Dec.3, second grade and kindergarten Dec. 10, third, fourth and fifth grade

Two parent-child workshops are being scheduled for White School students and their parents. A Dec. 3 workshop will be from 2:15 to 3:15 p.m. for parents and students in kindergarten and second grade. For parents and students in third, fourth and fifth grade, a workshop will be Dec. 10 from 3:15 to 4:15 p.m.

Heath has been a working actress in Atlanta for the last eight years. A graduate of Oxford College of Emory University and Florida State University with a bachelor of arts in theater, Heath worked with the Academy Theater, Southern Theater Conspiracy, Theater in the Square, and Theatrical Outfit, as well as many independent projects.

Her work on stage has been critically acclaimed and much in demand. She also performs through young audiences for middle schools and high schools and teaches acting for adults and children throughout the state.

Post school coordinator serves on Arctic project

Fort Benning Schools

A curriculum coordinator for Fort Benning Schools has been selected as a member of the International Arctic Projects Development Team.

Jerry Christy is one of 20 teachers from 10 states and six countries currently serving on the team.

The International Arctic Project — the premier project of the World School for Adventure Learning — will engage students in an environmental education program that focuses on the Arctic as a laboratory for testing principles of environmental responsibility. The program features unique interdisciplinary studies and electronic communications tied to an international dog sled expedition across the Arctic Ocean.

The International Arctic Project was conceived by explorer, author and teacher Will Steger, whose goal is to "tap children's curiosity and sense of adventure and help them learn about the fragility of the Earth's environment — before it's too late."

Steger sees an urgent need to raise children's awareness about the importance of personal, local action for the survival of our planet and to provide them with a communications system and content that is rivetting and compelling.

In the first training expedition of the program this past spring, the team and its students followed a team of scientists and explorers by radio, satellite and computer telecommunications. During the spring of 1993 and 1994, students will again be following training expeditions.

The project will culminate in 1995 with the crossing of the Arctic Ocean from the northern coast of Russia across the North Pole to the Canadian-Alaskan border. Students will focus on the Arctic, studying its ecology, culture, wildlife and specific environmental challenges. At the same time, they will parallel the expeditions and relate studies by developing "adventures" and environmental projects in their own communities.

From 1992 to 1994, the program will expand from 30 to 300 to 3,000 schools and then to worldwide open enrollment prior to the 1995 Arctic crossing.

Throughout this expansion, the team and other program planners will be creating a permanent, global network of schools for on-going, interactive environmental studies beyond the program.

1/29 honors pioneer volunteers of quarter

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment recently recognized Spc. David Donaghy of Company D and his wife, Rosanne, as the Pioneer Volunteers of the Quarter.

The Donaghys received this honor for their dedicated volunteer work with the Boy Scouts of America and the Fort Benning Youth Activities T-Ball League.

Donaghy has been an active scout master with Fort Benning Troop 127 of the Boy Scouts Chattahoochee Council for about four months. As a scout master he organizes trips, campouts and other activities. He was also a coach during the last T-ball season, leading his team, the Tigers, to a winning season.

Besides supporting his work with the scouts and T-ball, Donaghy's wife has been a member of Company D's Family Support Group for the past two years.

Donaghy stated that he and his wife were honored to receive the award and both will continue their work with Troop 127.

Besides the award he was treated to lunch and a reserved parking space for the rest of the quarter in front of Battalion Headquarters.

Post welcomes new mayors

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

"It's hard work, but they do it because they care," said Col. Gary Jones, Fort Benning's garrison commander. He was talking about the new mayors and vice mayors of the post housing areas who were installed in a ceremony Oct. 15 at the Follow Me Golf Course Banquet Room.

Darlene Perry of the Community Life Office noted that these are special people who must enforce the regulations on post so they are investigated prior to installation with regard to any incidence of spouse or child abuse, or flagrant violations of post regulations.

They are elected for one-year terms.

Those serving during the coming year are:

Bouton Heights/Davis Hill

Mayor: Rhonda Rardin
Address: 1-B Roark Court
Telephone: 682-6905
Family: Husband, Randall K. Rardin
Place lived before: Erlangen, Germany

Rardin

Comments about living at Fort Benning: Life at Fort Benning is a new adventure in our many stops with military tours. Adventure brings different experiences, and I'm taking this one on with great enthusiasm.

Goals as mayor: To bring more unity to the community by bringing in services to generate participation, pride and family living in Custer Terrace and to have the mayor's office inspire the "good neighbor policy."

Custer Terrace/Upatoi/Battle Park

Mayor: Diane Winmon
Address: 206-A Christian Lane
Telephone: 682-6666
Family: Husband, Sgt. Jerry Winmon, children, Doreen R. Butler and Robert L. Butler Place lived before: Wiesbaden, Germany

Winmon

Comments about living at Fort Benning: I love the area and the people. It's a nice post.

Goals as mayor: To better the community for the people and to make Bouton Heights/Davis Hill a better and respectable place to live.

Indianhead Terrace

Mayor: Linda S. Matheny (second term)
Address: 266 Lavoie Ave.
Telephone: 687-5118
Family: Master Sgt. Gerald W. Matheny, three daughters, Theresa,, Jennifer, and Rebecca Jo Place lived before: Fort Bliss, Texas

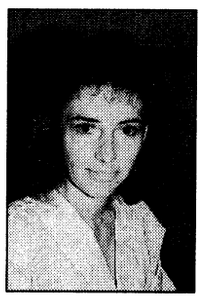
Matheny

Comments about living at Fort Benning: I really enjoy Fort Benning. The people are great, and the command group is for the military families.

Goals as mayor: To make Indianhead Terrace and Fort Benning a better place to live.

McGraw Manor

Mayor: Cindy Burnett
Address: 155-E McGrath St.
Telephone: 682-2518
Family: Husband, Sgt. Donnie R. Burnett, sons, Jason and Jacob Burnett, and daughter, Jessica Burnett
Place lived before: Greenwich, Conn., native of Utah



Burnett

Comments about living at Fort Benning: When I first moved to Fort Benning I was very impressed with the individual yards and the well-kept community.

Goals as mayor: Looking forward to learning what the needs of the community are and finding ways to meet them, improving community life and working with the vice mayor in organizing fun, motivational ways to get our community members to support each other.

East Main Post

Mayor: Michelle Brau
Address: 102-A Yeager Ave.
Telephone: 682-8469
Family: Husband, James C. Brau
Place lived before: Greenwich, Conn., native of Utah

Brau

Comments about living at Fort Benning: When I first moved to Fort Benning I was very impressed with the individual yards and the well-kept community.

Goals as mayor: To improve the community and get the residents involved, to promote youth activities in our community and to get to know all of the residents and help with any problems they might have.

West Main Post

Mayor: Oelean Wiley
Address: 961-B Michael St.
Telephone: 685-2720
Family: Husband, Sgt. Guy E. Wiley, and children, Susannah, Shamte and Jasmine
Place lived before: Fort Ord, Calif.

Wiley

Comments about living at Fort Benning: I love it. The area I stay in is nice.

Goals as mayor: To make the community an eye-looker, to bring the people together and to get the people involved in the community.

According to Perry, three of the housing areas also elected vice mayors. They are:

Custer Terrace - Dana Pund
East Main Post - Peggy Alexander
West Main Post - Sheryl Vanet.

Voters can get info on candidates

Voting Information Center

Besides relying on the news and print media to learn more about the candidates and the issues this election year, voters may also call the Department of Defense's Voting Information Center to hear messages directly from candidates for president, governor or U.S. senator or representative.

The center also provides a direct line to all service voting action officers. For example, if voting assistance officers are having difficulty receiving materials necessary to carry out an effective program and have been unable to solve the problem through normal chain-of-command channels, the service voting assistance officer should be notified.

In a joint effort with the Noncommissioned Officers' Association, the voting information center has been handling an average of 200 calls a day from voters who desire or request information not otherwise available. The information is forwarded to the appropriate official for action to ensure the caller's request is accommodated.

Students see theater through eyes of mime

Fort Benning Schools

Students at Faith Middle School were introduced to the world of the performing arts recently. But the teacher taught the class without saying a word.

Fort Benning's Faith Middle School's artist-in-residence recently, was Ann Smith, a professional mime and movement performer.

The three-week residency brought the world of theater and performing arts to Faith's sixth-, seventh- and eight-graders through improvisation, games and exercises designed to combine physical development and the creative process.

Students explored costume, voice and scene development and also performed a variety of improvisation.

Smith is an accredited artist with the Georgia Council for the Arts' Artist in Education Program. She offers theater residencies in schools throughout the state for all grades from elementary to high school.

Smith

Smith's residency at Faith Middle School was sponsored by the Fort Benning Schools and the Georgia Council for the Arts.

School hosts workshop for post parents

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Edward A. White School is having a Parent Workday Saturday from 1 to 4 p.m. at the school.

The Parent Teacher Organization is sponsoring the workday as part of a beautification project. The day will be spent landscaping around five or six buildings at the school.

PTO President Debbie Dabbs said many parents will be needed to successfully complete the entire project. Parents are asked to give their time, plants, or a cash donation for the project. All donations will be used for the beautification project.

Parents wishing to donate a plant are asked to donate one that is listed as part of the landscaping plan.

Officers' Wives' Club to sponsor Benning bazaar

Officers' Wives' Club

The Benning Bazaar will be Nov. 14 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Infantry Hall.

Sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club, the bazaar will feature arts and crafts, a country store, Christmas items and door prizes and a quilt give-away.

Donated by more than 50 vendors, the door prizes, which will be given away every half hour, include a sold-out limited edition print by Don Stivers, titled "Running the Gauntlet," donated by the Columbus Studio.

A queen-size quilt also will be given away. The quilt, which was donated by Columbus Bank and Trust, is done in the "Many Trips Around the World" pattern.

Tickets for the quilt can be purchased for $1 at the Thrift Shop Craft Cabin, from an OWC board member, or at the bazaar.

Admission will be $1. Proceeds will benefit the OWC Welfare Fund.

For more information, contact the OWC at 687-3537.

Seminar helps families

UGA Cooperative Extensive Service

A series of workshops focusing on today's families will begin Nov. 6. at the Columbus Government Center.

Sponsored by the University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service, the workshops will be a month-long, lunch-time series, titled "Building Family Strengths."

Home economist Joanne Cavis is the workshops' coordinator.

"We're hoping to help family members realize their potential for developing, supporting and nurturing each other", said Cavis.

The series of workshops will be conducted in the Cooperative Extension education center located in the Columbus Government Center.

The workshop schedule is as follows:

- Nov. 6, 12:10 to 12:50 p.m. , Identifying Family Strengths
- Nov. 10, 12:10 to 12:50 p.m., Time Together
- Nov. 16, 12:10 to 12:50 p.m., Appreciation and Encouragement
- Nov. 23, 12:10 to 12:50 p.m., Communication Skills
- Nov. 30, 12:10 to 12:50 p.m. Family Council Meetings

Interested persons may call 571-4793 to register for one or all five sessions in the series. Bring a sack lunch.

Part of a state-wide campaign, The University of Georgia Cooperative Extension Service invites each community to celebrate families.

Managing change made easy; seminar helps transitions

UGA Cooperative Extension Service

How do you view your self and your future? How are you managing change? Where will you go from here when 2001 is less than 100 months away?

A change management seminar will be Nov. 13 from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at the Columbus Government Center.

At the seminar, participants will learn how to harness and direct change for positive results.

Dr. Vickie Johnson Stout, an active writer and researcher, will conduct the seminar. She is the head of the Department of Human Resource Development at The University of Georgia Center for Continuing Education and member of the graduate faculty at UGA. She has conducted numerous training and development seminars for management and staff in business, industry, education and government.

The fee is $50. For more information or to receive a copy of the brochure, call 571-4793.

Community workshop set

Volunteer Resource Center

A community development workshop will be Nov. 6. at 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Family Unit Network Center, Building 359.

The trainer is Ida Rush George of Organizational Development Inc. of Montgomery, Ala.

George is a nationally recognized consultant, trainer with extensive experience in assisting organizations and communities.

The cost for the one-day workshop is $20.

Lunch will be on your own. Individuals interested in attending this workshop should contact the Volunteer Resource Center at 545-5602.

For more information, call Kathy L. Case, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

The workshop is sponsored by the Volunteer Resource Center and Tri-Community Directors of Volunteer Services.

Loyd broadcasts news

Fort Benning Schools

Fort Benning's Frank R. Loyd School is broadcasting Good Morning Loyd Wednesdays at 9 a.m.

The show is televised live on TV-4 Panther Network through the school's closed circuit television.

The broadcast, created and produced by students, features Headline News, Fort Benning News and Loyd News.

News is followed by a sports segment, weather, birthdays, Panthers of the Month, health and safety tips from the school nurse, humor, student interviews and a commentary.

Each week will feature a different class.

Fine arts to come to post

Fort Benning Schools

The first in the series of Fine Arts concerts will be at each of the Fort Benning Schools Tuesday and Wednesday.

Soprano Meg Stecker-Runde will be accompanied by Rexford Widdon of Columbus College. Her program for Fort Benning students will feature music by Mozart, Brahms, Britten, Copland, Kingsley and Pergolesi.

Stecker-Runde is the recipient of numerous awards including three in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions. She has performed with the opera companies of New York, Wisconsin and Alaska.

Her roles have included Adele in Die Fledermaus, Lola in Cavallaria Rusticana, Papagena in The Magic Flute, Susanna in The Marriage of Figaro, Clorinda in La Cenerentola and Frasquita in Carmen.

The fine arts series, in its ninth consecutive year in the Fort Benning Schools, is designed to provide children with a quality artistic experience while teaching them appropriate concert behavior.

Guest artists for the series are professional musicians, most of whom are associated with Columbus College.

This fine arts concert is sponsored by the Enlisted Wives' Club.

Coast Guard wants cadets

U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary

The local U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary officer is available to assist any interested high school junior or anyone interested in applying for a competitive appointment as a cadet at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn.

The Coast Guard Academy is the only national service Academy where admission is through individual application and college board examinations (Scholastic Aptitude Test or American College Test).

There are no geographical quotas or congressional appointments. Any high school junior interested in information on the Coast Guard Academy or the U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Academy Introduction Mission or the Minority Introduction to Engineering Program may contact the local officer.

During the engineering program, qualified candidates spend five days during the summer at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy and receive first-hand exposure to the routine of a cadet.

Interested persons may contact the local Columbus/Fort Benning Coast Guard Auxiliary AIM officer, Emerson Addington, at 568-1235 (home) or 545-7649 (work).

Education center offers courses

Free self-paced courses are available at the Soldiers' Plaza and Kelley Hill Army Learning Centers, Buildings 2611 and 9005.

Introduction to computers, computer literacy, basic programming, effective writing, high school GED preparation, college level test preparation, speed reading, reading improvement- , math improvement and English improvement are just a few of the free courses available.

All courses are free and self-paced. Computer literacy, English as a second language, keyboarding, blueprint reading, GED preparation, algebra, geometry, BASIC programming and many, many other courses are offered.

In addition to active duty and civilian members, family members are eligible to use the center. Certificates are provided for completing most courses. Family members less than 14 years old must be accompanied by an adult.

Many courses are available over the Cybis, formerly Plato, mainframe system and can be accessed from your home or work computer.

A free Cybis access disk is available at the Soldiers' Plaza learning center.

The Cybis system is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Bring a replacement disk to exchange for your access disk. An instruction handout is also provided.

'Heat' builds fresh steam with move to CBS

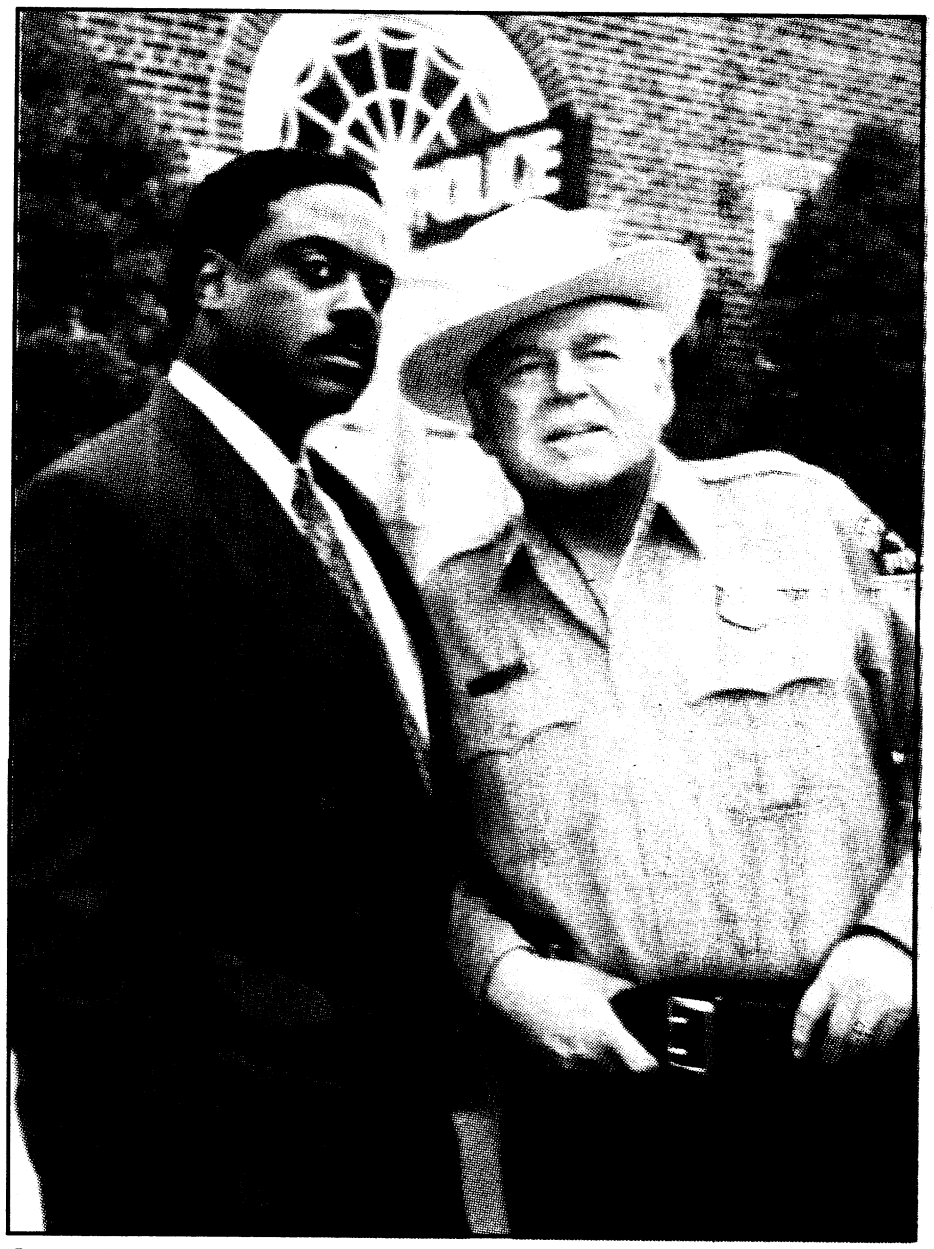
By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Truth in advertising can be a tricky proposition, even when the subject in question is television.

SPOTLIGHT

Last spring, NBC billed the fourth-season finale of the drama "In the Heat of the Night" as the "last" episode of the show ... though it was known that CBS had picked up the program for the 1992-93 schedule. Indeed, it relocates to its new network starting Wednesday, with cast and crew virtually intact. Inspired by the Academy Award-winning 1967 movie — which, in turn, was based on a novel by John Ball — it continues to star Carroll O'Connor as Bill Gillespie, police chief of the fictional Mississippi town Sparta, and Howard Rollins as former Philadelphia detective Virgil Tibbs. Still being filmed on location in Covington, Ga., the show also features Alan Autry as Deputy Bubba Skinner, Geoffrey Thorne as Sgt. Wilson Sweet and O'Connor's son Hugh as Lt. Lonnie Jamison. A guest in past installments (which recently began repeating in syndication across the country), Denise Nicholas now becomes a permanent cast member as Councilwoman Harriet DeLong, who figures prominently into the two-parter that marks the first of the CBS episodes. With her relationship with Gillespie deepening, the couple becomes concerned about possible reactions to their still-secretive affair, as suggested by the anger of her son (Troy Hogan) upon learning of it. However, the youth's witnessing of a murder soon becomes Gillespie's only key to preventing a major drug ring from establishing operations in the area.

Having already added a 1989 Emmy for "In the Heat of the Night" to the four he won previously as "All in the Family's" immortal Archie Bunker (as well as to his 1980 Peabody Award), O'Connor also continues as co-executive producer of his current show. "We started in April," O'Connor reports of going before the cameras for the new season, which afforded him a late-summer trip to Italy and Ireland. "We took off the worst month (heat-wise), but August is tough anywhere. We had the first 13 episodes done by then, then we came back in September to start on the other nine. We've usually worked right through the year, but I decided this time that we should take a rest. The old man is gettin' on."



Carroll O'Connor (with hat) and Howard Rollins

O'Connor is in a rare spot to make such a decision, given his dual "Heat of the Night" roles as actor and producer ... a position he attained after the show had started, during a meeting that is detailed by former NBC programming chief (and present Paramount Pictures overseer) Brandon Tartikoff in his new book "The Last Great Ride." As the story goes, Tartikoff tried to call O'Connor's supposed bluff when the latter vowed to leave unless he got increased creative control. When Tartikoff mentioned that Rod Steiger — who earned an Oscar for playing Gillespie in the movie version — probably could be recruited to replace him, O'Connor casually responded, "I can find other things to do." The result: O'Connor won the title of co-executive producer and stayed.

The performer asserts that on television, Gillespie "couldn't be the same character Rod played, and if he had come into the series, he would have been the first person to recognize that. You can't have a racial conflict (like that which largely fueled the film) on a weekly basis, so some accommodation had to be made between these two abrasive characters. Rod would have done the same thing with the Chief as I've done, in his own way. When people come up to me on the street or in hotel lobbies, if they're older, the first thing they'll mention is 'All in the Family.' It's still playing all over (in syndicated repeats). Meanwhile, people in their 30s and 40s usually mention 'In the Heat of the Night' first. Some like Gillespie better and some like Archie better, but either way, it's great with me."

Though pleased that "In the Heat of the Night" is continuing, O'Connor reasons that in terms of making the series, the switch of networks "doesn't mean a thing. It's just like playing the same movie in a different theater. CBS is now the exhibitor, where NBC used to be. We knew we were going to CBS for quite a while, because we really were not dropped by NBC. We left them, because they would not pay us any more money to do the show." Licensing fees for

Army civilians can look forward to earning some time off.

Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Soldiers Television Service reports that a new government-wide award allows supervisors to give civilian employees time off for personal achievements on the job.

The "Time Off Award" is similar to the Special Act or Service Award but instead of cash, direct-hire, appropriated-fund civilian employees can receive up to two weeks time off.

There will also be reports from Soldiers Television Service about how the Small Business Administration is

Fox Theater plans 'Aspects of Love'

Theater League of Atlanta

"Aspects of Love," Andrew Lloyd Webber's most recent musical is coming to Atlanta's Fox Theater for one week, Nov. 17 through Nov. 22.

"Aspects of Love" is presented in a new staging, conceived by Robin Phillips, former Artistic Director of Canada's Stratford Festival, and now director general of Edmonton, Alberta's Citadel Theater.

This new production was premiered at the Citadel's Shoctol Theater in the fall of 1991, and opened at Toronto's Elgin Theater in December. The production had its U.S. premiere at Chicago's Civic Club Theater April 23.

In "Aspects of Love" Webber has transformed David Garnett's 1955 novella of the same name into a musical featuring the composer's most amorous and intimate score. "Aspects of Love" has lyrics by Don Black ("Song and Dance") and Charles Hart ("The Phantom of the Opera".)

The result is a musical that brings to life five impassioned characters who trace out an expanding circle of emotion on a golden post-war continent. The impoverished French actress, Rose Vibert, accepts the invitation of Alex, a 17-year-old British devotee, to spend a fortnight in his uncle's villa in the south of France.

The unexpected arrival of Uncle George swells what might have been a brief "amour" into a surge of passion that changes the lives of five people over three generations and as many countries.

The passions that unite these characters accompany them from Paris to the Pyrenees amid the international arts scene of the 50s. "Aspects of Love" reflects the graceful yet intense relations of the famous Bloomsbury group, of which Garnett was the last surviving member.

The 20-member cast of "Aspects of Love" stars Linda Balgord as the French actress Rose Vibert. Alex, her devoted fan, is played by Ron Bohmer. Kelli James is featured as Giulietta, the Italian sculptress who is also Uncle George's mistress. Lori Alter and Maryke Hendrikse, respectively, portray the older and younger Jenny, the daughter of George and Rose, and Allen Fitzpatrick is featured as Marcel, Rose's manager.

In addition to "Aspects of Love," Webber is the composer of "The Phantom of the Opera," "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," "Jesus Christ Superstar," the film scores of "Gumshoe" and "The Odessa File," "Jeeves," "Evita," "Variations" and "Tell Me on a Sunday," combined as "Song and Dance," "Cats," "Starlight Express" and "Requiem," a setting of the Latin Requiem Mass.

Webber is the recipient of four Tony awards, four Drama Desk awards and three Grammy awards, in addition to numerous other honors.

"Aspects of Love" showtimes are: Nov. 17 through 21 at 8 p.m.; Nov. 22 at 7:30 p.m., and matinees Nov. 21 and 22 at 2 p.m.

Ticket prices are: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings and Sunday matinee — $26.50, $16.50 and $10. Tickets are on sale at the Fox Box Office and all Ticketmaster outlets.

To charge tickets call (404) 249-6400. For group discounts, call (404) 873-6300.

New displays make festival bloom

Cypress Gardens

This fall, visitors to Cypress Gardens, Fla., will rediscover their senses as 2 million multicolored chrysanthemum blooms decorate the world-renown botanical park during its Annual Mum Festival in November.

Considered the most elaborate exhibit of its kind in North America, this year's Mum Festival features several new displays, including four floral hearts reaching up to 6 feet in height and two delicately shaped swan figures.

These new elements demonstrate the expertise and creativity of Cypress Gardens' master horticulturists that is evident in the park's world-renowned botanical gardens and seasonal floral festivals.

Other new features of the display include coneshaped forms up to 8 feet in height and spherical shapes solidly colored with orange, purple and red blooms.

"We were able to adapt several of the techniques that were used to create our Spring Flower Festival topiaries, such as the application of metal framework, to create these new Mum Festival displays," said Norm Freel, vice president of horticulture for Cypress Gardens.

Constructed with metal rebar, two heart-shaped displays actually will contain double hearts that crisscross directly in the middle, each containing a dangling basket of mums at its center. The other hearts will be freestanding forms.

Starting with less than 60 plants in 1984, the festival has grown to feature more than 750 mum cascades, each containing between 1,000 and 2,000 blooms of at least three different chrysanthemum varieties.

Other elements include beautiful gazebos adorned with a blend of pink, purple and yellow chrysanthemums, mum cascades draping the ledges of a 40-foot-high waterfall, and multicolored blooms decorating the walls of an Italian-style fountain.

Upon entering the festival through a magnificent floral archway, guests will stroll along large freeform beds of potted mums that cover most of the park's lawn areas. Hanging baskets, ball forms, "poodle baskets" and 5-foot-high columns of blooms accent this breathtaking display.

In addition to these new elements, geometric color patterns also are found throughout the festival in several of the poodle baskets dangling from the park's trees. Many of the potted mums planted in the ground and the colorful blooms found on columns in the exhibit create a checkerboard effect.

Cypress Gardens' nursery staff began preparing for the Mum Festival in January by cutting their chrysanthemum stock plants in order to achieve the desired number of blooms for the festival.

Since these initial preparations, these plants have been watered four times a day, and following the last trimming in September, the chrysanthemums reach full bloom in eight to nine weeks. It requires approximately seven weeks to move the mums into the festival site and arrange this spectacular display.

The chrysanthemums found in Cypress Gardens' Mum Festival represent nine of the park's daisy varieties. These include: "shinotome," a pink selection; "rainbow" and "yellow rainbow" orange varieties; "fire chief," deep crimson blooms; and "Jean Hart," yellow.

The other varieties are"sozan," a deep purple flower; "shimizu," a white selection; and "sunny day," a yellow selection.

Admission price is $19.95 plus tax for adults, and $13.95 for children. There is no charge for children 2 and under. for more information, call toll-free (800) 338-MUMS.

Gardens go 'mum' in style

Cypress Gardens

What: The most elaborate chrysanthemum exhibit of its kind in North America is held annually at Cypress Gardens, the world's foremost tropical showplace known for its spectacular, year-round botanical displays.

When: November

Where: Cypress Gardens is located near Winter Haven, Fla., off U.S. 27, 40 minutes southwest of Sea World and Walt Disney World, one hour from Tampa or Orlando.

Admission: The festival is included in the regular price of park admission.

Hours: Cypress Gardens is open daily 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Festival Facts:

• More than 2 million multicolored chrysanthemum blooms are showcased during the festival.

• The first Cypress Gardens' Mum Festival in 1984 featured 53 cascades without any baskets or specialty forms. In 1992, the display includes more than 750 mum cascades, 32 poodle baskets and ball forms, seven bonsai tree forms, 10 different-sized arches, three 9-foot gazebos and 18,500 potted mums.

• The 1992 festival also features several new displays, which include four heart-shaped forms ranging from 5 to 6 feet in height, two small swans approximately 3 to 4 feet tall, three 6-foot cones and three 5-foot spheres.

• All 2 million blooms come from only 250 stock plants, representing 15 different varieties.

• Cypress Gardens' personnel spend four to six weeks (working eight-hour days) to transfer all the mums from the greenhouse to the festival site in preparation for this annual event.

• For more information on the festival, call (800) 338-MUMS.

'Miss Daisy' to come to post

Fort Benning Officers' Club

The Fort Benning Officers' Club and the Springer Opera House present a Driving Miss Daisy dinner theater Nov. 7.

The cost of $14.50 per person includes dinner, which will be served at 6 p.m., followed by the show at 8.

Alfred Uhry's Pulitzer prize-winning play, "Driving Miss Daisy," is the "odd couple" story about the unlikely relationship between an aging, wealthy Jewish widow and the proud black man who is her chauffeur.

"Driving Miss Daisy" is a humorous and tender tale that spans a 25-year period between 1948 and 1973 — the most turbulent years in the South's struggle to desegregate its racist and classicist institutions.

More than anything else, "Driving Miss Daisy" is about freedom and the loss of freedom that aging or prejudice can bring with it.

The Springer's production of "Driving Miss Daisy" premiered at the Springer Theater in Columbus in January of 1991 and is cscheduled to tour the Southeast. The Benning performance will be followed by stops in Macon, Jacksonvile, Fla. and Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

For reservations and tickets, come by the club's Cashier Cage or call 682-0640.

All officers and noncommissioned officers are invited to attend, officials said.

Dental hygiene career offers satisfaction

Georgia Dental Association

Would you enjoy a career that offers personal satisfaction, a flexible work schedule and a variety of responsibilities? Are you interested in a health career oriented toward preventing disease and maintaining good health? If so, dental hygiene may be for you.

Sunday began National Dental Hygiene Week in honor of the hygienist's role as a member of the dental care team.

Dental hygiene offers women and men of all ages and background exceptional career opportunities. There is reported to be a shortage of dental hygienists across the United States, particularly in rural areas.

Some dentists are offering excellent incentives to attract qualified hygienists to their practices. The dentist and dental hygienist work together to meet the oral health care needs of each patient.

Dental hygienists usually are employed in general dental practices, though they may work in specialty practices such as pediatric dentistry or periodontics. Hygienists may also provide services for patients in hospitals, nursing home and public health clinics.

Some of the patient care services performed by dental hygienists may include:

- Review of the health history, dental charting and taking of blood pressure
- Exposing and developing X-rays
- Cleaning the teeth to remove calculus and plaque
- Teaching patients appropriate oral hygiene measures to maintain healthy teeth and gums
- Counseling patients about good nutrition and the need for regularly scheduled preventive dental care.

A career in dental hygiene offers many advantages, such as personal satisfaction from directly providing people a valuable health care service; prestige and respect as a valued member of the dental care team; and variety in the use of interpersonal and clinical skills.

A big plus in having a hygiene career is flexibility in terms of full or part-time employment, a wide variety of potential work settings and flexible hours.

Dental hygienists receive their education through academic programs at community colleges or universities.

The majority of programs are in community colleges and take two years to complete, with graduates receiving associate degrees.

University-based dental hygiene programs may offer baccalaureate and master's degrees, which generally require at least two years of additional schooling.

Dental hygienists are licensed by each state to provide dental hygiene care and patient education. A passing score on the Dental Hygiene National Board Examination is required.

Dental hygiene education programs are accredited by the Commission on Dental Accreditation of the American Dental Association. There are approximately 209 accredited dental hygiene programs in the United States.

For more information on a career in dental hygiene, contact the Georgia Dental Association, 2951 Flowers Road South, Suite 112, Atlanta, Ga. 30341.

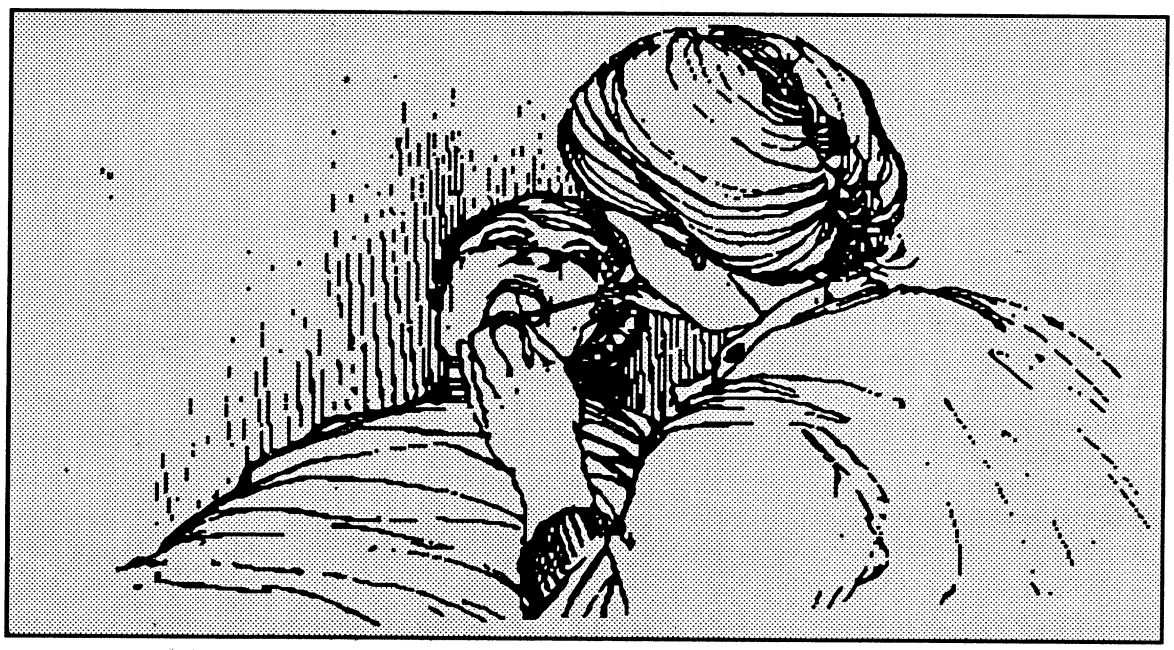
Do research before choosing dentist

Georgia Dental Association

As a consumer, you have the opportunity and responsibility to make wise choices among marketplace offers and alternatives — not just in products, but in services such as health care.

In honor of National Consumer Week, which will be celebrated Saturday through Oct. 31, the Georgia Dental Association offers the following tips on selecting a dentist:

- Ask family, friends, neighbors or co-workers for a recommendation.
- Ask your family physician or pharmacist to recommend someone.
- Call or write to your local dental society, which may provide you with several referrals. The local dental society is usually listed in the telephone book under "dentists" or "associations."
- Call a local hospital that has an accredited dental service.
- Ask faculty members of the local dental school.
- Check the American Dental Association Directory of Members, which can be found in many public libraries and dental school libraries.



- If you are moving, your current dentist might provide you with a recommendation. You may wish to consider several dentists before making a final decision. During your first visit, ask yourself the following questions:
- Is the appointment schedule convenient for you?
- Is the office easy to get to from your home or job?
- Does the office appear to be clean, neat and orderly?
- Does the office employ proper infection control procedures, such as the wearing of masks and gloves and sterilizing dental equipment?
- Was your medical and dental history recorded and placed in a permanent file?
- Does the dentist explain techniques that will help you prevent dental health problems? Is dental health instruction provided?
- Are special arrangements made for handling emergencies outside of office hours?
- Is information provided about fees and payment plans before treatment is scheduled? How does the office handle insurance coverage?

Rapport with your dentist is as important a factor as convenient location or office hours. The dentist you choose should be genuinely concerned about you and your family's health.

If you have questions about or a problem locating a dentist, contact the Georgia Dental Association at (404) 458-6166.

Healthy snacks keep decay at bay

Georgia Dental Association

October seems to have become the "snacking" month. Not only is October National Popcorn Poppin' Month and National Pizza Month, but Halloween on Oct. 31 is celebrated by the distribution of treats to little ghouls and goblins.

The Georgia Dental Association has some tips on choosing dentally smart snacks for your October celebrations.

To keep tooth decay at bay, between-meal snacks should be limited. But when you do snack, choose tooth-friendly foods.

Fortunately, popcorn and pizza can both be enjoyed this month and any month from a dental health perspective.

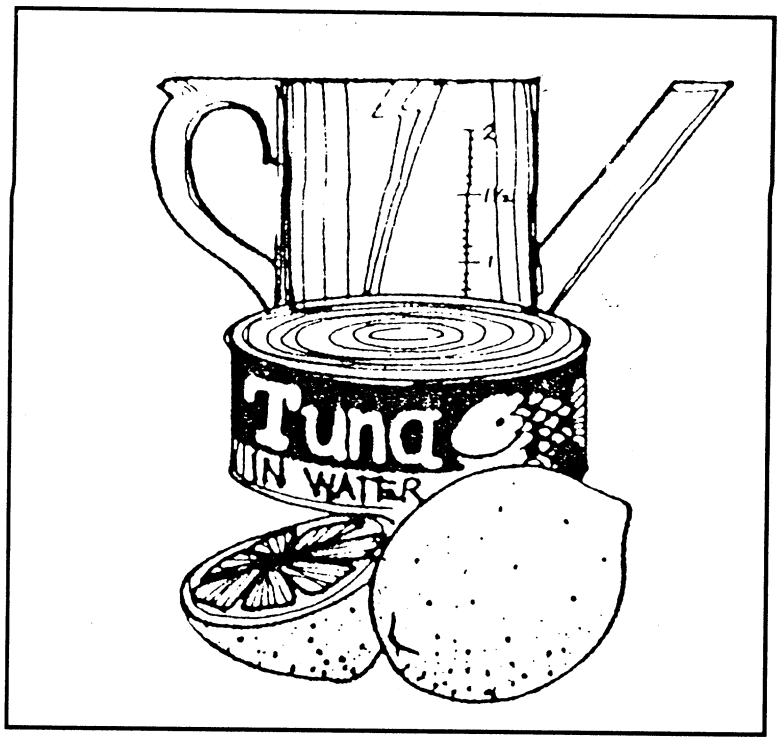
Popcorn is a good alternative to sweet or sticky snacks. It contains no sugar, is high in fiber, contains protein and iron, and is also low in calories.

Pizza is a nutritious food and especially friendly to teeth because of its cheese content. Cheese is one of the best sources of calcium, a nutrient essential for healthy bones and teeth. Some cheeses, such as aged cheddar, Swiss and Monterey Jack, even buffer the teeth against the acids that can cause tooth decay.

A study of 22 commonly-consumed snack foods found that those with a high fluoride, fat or protein content tend to cause fewer cavities. Fatty foods don't stick to your teeth long enough to trigger decay.

Both high-fat and high-protein foods appear to coat tooth enamel, providing some protection against decay causing acids.

Foods high in fluoride (including canned fish) may even help to repair early lesions of decay before they can develop into full-blown cavities.



If cheese is one of the safest snack foods from a dental health standpoint, raisins and granola bars rank among the most dangerous because they stick to teeth. This clinginess is as important a factor in causing tooth decay as is a food's sugar content.

Other dentally harmful snacks include toffee, dried fruits, caramels, doughnuts, mints, cupcakes, and other treats containing confectioner's sugar.

Tooth-friendly snacks include nuts, carrots and other raw vegetables, yogurt, sugarless gelatin desserts, and sugarless chewing gum.

For Halloween treats, hand out little bags of fresh-popped popcorn rather than sticky popcorn balls, and beautiful red apples instead of caramel apples.

Then next Halloween, the witch can really mean it when she says, "What lovely teeth you have, my pretties!"

Water is an essential nutrient

General Mills

Well over half of the human body is made up of water. And, although water is not usually thought of as a food or a nutrient, it is actually both, says Mary Helen Gunkler, a registered dietitian and staff nutritionist.

Water is an essential nutrient —like protein, carbohydrates, fats, vitamins and minerals. In fact, it is the most important nutrient of all. A healthy adult can survive without food for weeks but only a few days without water.

Water carries nutrients to body cells and carries the waste away. It is needed for almost every process in the body. Without water, dehydration can occur and cells "starve." Water also helps cool the body.

Most adults should drink six to eight glasses of water per day to help keep a proper water balance in the body. Those who exercise strenuously, work in high temperatures or live in hot climates may need even more because large amounts of water are lost through perspiration.

Those who live in high altitude areas also may need more water due to the low humidity associated with high altitudes. The same is true for those taking long commercial flights because the air inside a plane's cabin is generally very dry.

The foods we eat also provide water. Most fruits and vegetables are more than 80 percent water. Milk and fruit juices are other good sources of water.

Alcoholic and caffeine-based beverages act as diuretics and are, therefore, not good sources of water. Some health experts recommend that if one is consuming such beverages, an equal amount of water should be consumed as well.

Gunkler points out that a popular alternative for many people is bottled water. It can be used as a convenient substitute when tap water is not readily available.

Water labels hold different meanings

General Mills

Here are some names you may see in your supermarket's bottled water section:

- Drinking water is usually noncarbonated. It may be distilled with minerals added back for taste or may simply be bottled tap water.
- Distilled, or purified water, is tap water with the minerals removed.
- Spring water is bottled at or near the spring where it originates and is not altered in any way.
- Sparkling water is carbonated by an outside source.
- Naturally sparkling water has enough natural carbon dioxide to make it bubbly. This natural carbon dioxide may be removed at the spring and added back during bottling.
- Mineral water contains dissolved minerals. This actually describes all waters except those with minerals removed.

Knowledge of home valves helps with maintenance

By Joe Zorc

PM Editorial Services

The following are a few basic maintenance items you should know about your house:

Water

It is important to know a little about the water sources in your house and how they can be isolated in the event of a leak at one of the fixtures or plumbing lines.

It is common to install a shut-off valve before a toilet, sink, shower or tub, etc., are put in place. These usually are just below the fixture, inside the vanity cabinet, or found behind an access panel directly behind the wall of the shower or tub.

It is recommended that you test the shut-off valves and inspect them for leakage. The main shut-off valve for the house usually is located in the basement or garage at the front or rear of the house. In the event that the individual fixtures' shut-off valves do not work or were not installed, use this valve to isolate the water.

Propane/Natural Gas

According to building codes, shut-off valves also are required for all gas-fed appliances. Check your dryer, oven, hot-water heater, central air conditioner, and furnace for these valves.

In the event that you ever detect the odor of gas, do not turn on any lights or use any electrical fixtures. Open all doors and windows to ventilate the area, turn off any valves to the appliances, and immediately call your gas company's emergency number, which you should keep handy at all times.

There also is a main shut-off before and after the gas meter. It usually is an in-line valve, and requires pliers or a wrench to turn off.

The valve should be perpendicular to the piping to shut off the flow.

Never try to replace any gas fixtures on your own. A licensed, insured plumbing contractor should be contacted for any gas-related work.

Oil

The same shut-off valves should be located before oil-fed equipment.

In addition, a main shut-off valve is located near the oil tank. In the event of a break in the line, turn off the main valve.

Electric

Most houses have one electric panel, located in the basement.

In addition to the individual breakers, there is a main breaker usually located at the top of the panel.

In the event that you work on any minor electrical repairs, always turn off the main breaker.

You never can be certain if someone before you installed faulty wiring, or incorrectly labeled the panel.

continuing series have become a major issue of contention between networks and studios, since the production company incurs the losses when it costs more to make a show than the network is willing to pay for it (though the studio might make the money back, eventually, through direct syndication to stations). "When we informed NBC that we were leaving and going to CBS," O'Connor recalls, "they sent us some violent letters, threatening lawsuits and everything else. They were not anxious to lose this show at all, but they just didn't want to pay what we felt we had to get for it, going into our fifth year."

3rd Brigade participates in joint FTX

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Loading trucks, tanks and Bradley Fighting Vehicles onto railroad cars was the task at hand for elements of the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division Oct. 22.

The equipment loading was part of "Victory Reach," a planned military readiness exercise being conducted by elements of the 24th Infantry Division stationed at Fort Benning, Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Air Field, Ga.

The equipment went to the Port of Savannah for loading aboard the USS Bellatrix.

Additional equipment loading was conducted at Lawson Army Air Field aboard 10 C-5 aircraft for movement to Fort Drum, N.Y. Once in New York, the equipment was used during the combined arms live-fire exercise with elements of the 10th Mountain Division, the U.S. Air Force, the 18th Airborne Corps Artillery and the 24th Infantry Division Aviation Brigade.

"Victory Reach" was designed to test the division's ability to rapidly deploy combat units worldwide, said 2nd Lt. Susan Dutton, assistant brigade adjutant.

Lt. Col. Marshall Reed, deputy commanding officer, said the exercise was an excellent opportunity for the brigade to demonstrate its effectiveness.

"Victory Reach is a superb exercise that clearly exercises every node of the out-load deployment system," Reid said.

Overall, the 3rd Brigade 24th Infantry Division deployed 566 soldiers and 626 track and wheeled

Community schedules Halloween activities

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Halloween, that season where boys and girls become ghosts, goblins, mermaids and other creatures of fantasy, is here.

Before little ones make that magical transformation, parents are asked to observe the post guidelines and safety rules concerning trick or treating on post.

Trick or treating activities will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Saturday. These activities are limited to children under 13 years old and preschoolers must be accompanied by a person 14 years or older.

Post residents must limit their trick or treating to their own housing area and should only trick or treat at houses with lighted entry ways.

Trick or treating is meant to be a fun activity for post children; keeping safety a top priority during trick or treating may preclude an accident ruining the Halloween fun, Infantry Branch Safety officials said.

Some important safety tips to remember are:

• Children should wear costumes that are short enough to prevent tripping and falling. Costumes should be marked with reflective tape or glow spray paint.

• Observe all basic safety precautions. Use the sidewalks and crosswalks; don't jaywalk. Remember to look twice in both directions before crossing the streets.

• Don't wear masks that restrict vision or proper breathing. If possible, forgo the mask altogether and opt for colorful nontoxic facial paints instead.

• Residents with pets should ensure their animals cannot be a menace, threat or nuisance to trick or treaters. It might be best to keep pets in the house during the trick or treating hours.

• Children should be cautioned about the dangers and consequences of vandalism and property damage before trick or treating.

• Children should carry flashlights after dark. If a jack-o-lantern or pumpkin is carried, do not use a candle to provide the light inside. Stick a flashlight inside or use a battery-operated device to provide light.

• Children should never eat their treats before returning home where parents can inspect it first. Children should have a full meal prior to trick or treating to curtail snacking.

While trick or treating is usually the main event of a Halloween evening, there are a couple of events happening on and off post that may put a new twist on this year's Halloween fun.

• Youth Activities is sponsoring a haunted house on post at Building 1234. The house will run this evening from 7 to 10 p.m. Everyone is invited to attend and admission will be $2.

• The Bouton Heights/Davis Hill housing area will be sponsoring an event Saturday at its community life center.

• The Columbus Jaycees are sponsoring its annual haunted house today. For more information, call 323-7224.

CISM begins Nov. 4

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Opening ceremonies for the 1992 Conseil International du Sport Militaire shooting championships will be on Fort Benning's York Field Wednesday at 9 a.m.

Teams from 102 countries have been invited to participate in the World Military Shooting championships, hosted by the U.S. Army Infantry Center Monday through Nov. 11.

There will be individual and team rifle and pistol 25-, 50- and 300-meter competition for both men and women, all competing for the U.S. Army's Team Challenge Trophy, as well as other medals and awards.

CISM, founded in 1947 with headquarters in Brussels, Belgium, has 102 member nations and is the largest sports organization in the world after the Olympic games.

Each year CISM holds championships in up to 22 military-oriented sporting events including skiing, cycling, fencing, track and field, wrestling and basketball. Events are usually hosted by a different country.

CISM has many goals, including the interaction of soldiers of different nations and cultures during sporting competitions. The CISM motto is "Friendship Through Sports."

The closing awards ceremony is scheduled for Nov. 10 at 3 p.m. on York Field.

Engineers award contracts

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Savannah District, recently awarded contracts for a $2 million recreation center and a $1.9 million maintenance shop at Fort Benning.

Both contracts were awarded to the Lisle Company of Phenix City. Construction will begin next month. Corps officials said both projects will take a year to complete.

The recreation center will be built in the Sand Hill community for use by soldiers in One Station Unit Training.

The equipment maintenance shop, which is being constructed for the 317th Engineer Battalion, will feature state-of-the-art automotive equipment for service and maintenance of small tactical vehicles.

The Bayonet wins at TRADOC in 1992 Journalism Competition

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, The Bayonet, won first-place honors recently in the 1992 Training and Doctrine Command Journalism Competition.

The Bayonet took top honors in the civilian enterprise metro newspaper category, which is for large military newspapers published by Public Affairs Offices and printed by civilian enterprises. The Bayonet is printed by the Advertiser Company, publisher of the Montgomery Advertiser, a division of Multimedia Inc.

Also winning honorable mention in the TRADOC competition was Spc. Clyde Snively in the commentary category.

Educators, editors, reporters and former military journalists were among the seven judges for the competition.

TRADOC winners will go on to compete in the Department of Army's Keith L. Ware Competition, which recognizes journalistic excellence in 20 print and 20 broadcast categories. Winners of the Keith L. Ware competition are expected to be announced in early December.

The Keith L. Ware competition is named for a former Army chief of Public Affairs, who received a Medal of Honor during World War II. Ware, a major general, was killed in Vietnam while commanding the 1st Infantry Division in 1968.

The secretary of the Army sponsors the contests annually to ensure recognition for the best internal information efforts.

Commander talks health care

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

Editor's note: In a recent interview, The Bayonet asked Col. Vernon Spaulding, commander of Martin Army Community Hospital, about his views on the future of the Army and the military's health care system.

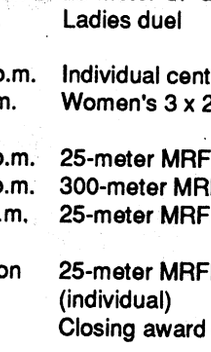
Q: How do you see the future of health care in Army ?

A: I see the future of health care in the Army quite the same as in the civilian community — making sure that everyone has access to good care. Overriding all that is the extreme expense of medical care in this country and in the military, too.



Spaulding

We have a really big challenge to maintain quality while holding down costs.

The direction we feel will give us the best chance of accomplishing that is the managed-care concept. This concept is similar to an HMO, or health maintenance organization, model. Our new surgeon general, with guidance from the Department of Defense, is leading us in that direction.

Q: Is that where the Gateway to Care program comes in?

A: Yes. Gateway to Care is the name of the Army's managed care program.

Q: Would you explain what the program is and how it will affect the Fort Benning community?

A: Managed care means that everyone who is eligible for care — active duty soldiers and their family members and retirees and their family members — will be offered one doctor or one clinic to manage their care. Everyone will be assigned one doctor or clinic that will take care of his or her primary care needs. We have found that a primary care clinic can usually take care of 85 to 90 percent of a person's health care needs.

If a patient needs care that the primary clinic cannot provide, clinic personnel will

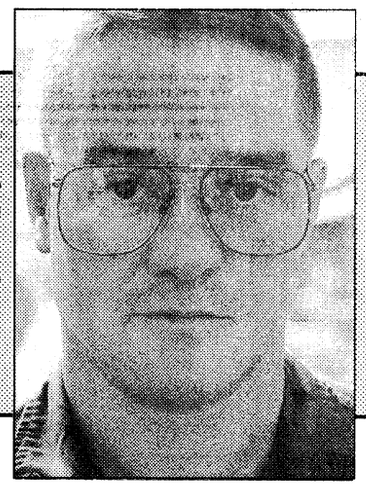
How do you feel about hunting?

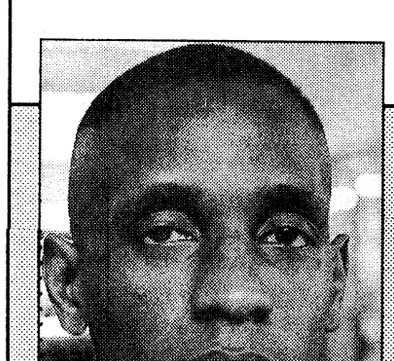
Norma Durham, Four Star Photo — "First of all, it's cruel. Second, I can't stand it when people use it as a sport."

Jennie Jones, Four Star Photo— "A lot of people use it as a sport. I think it's cruel."

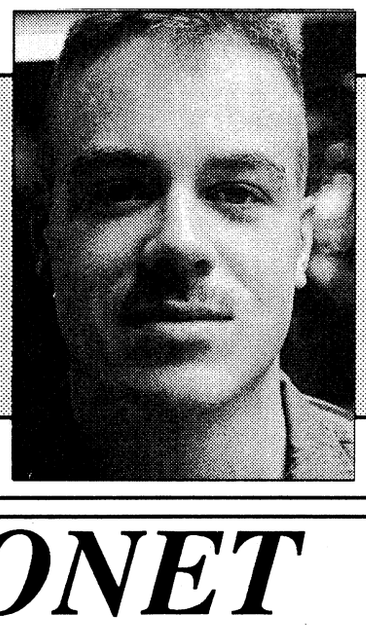
Brandi Gentry, Army and Air Force Exchange Service — "I support it. It's a good way to control the animal population."



Staff Sgt. Ronald Turner, Company D, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "I'm all for it. I hunt deer. I was brought up around it."



Staff Sgt. Gregory Willis, Company D, 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment — "I don't hunt; but, as far as how I feel about it, I look at hunting as putting food on the table."



Spc. Kevin Wasson, Company A, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment — "I support it. I hunted back home for squirrel and rabbit."

Is hunting ecologically correct ?

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

COMMENTARY

Hunting is a popular debate topic, guaranteed to stir up controversy in almost any group of two or more people. One side steadfastly maintains killing animals for sport is a barbaric, inhuman practice, while the opposing side insists hunting is necessary to control animal population.

I've been straddling the fence on this for quite a while, but I'm finally jumping to the side of the hunters. I don't hunt and have no desire to, but it seems logical to me that others be allowed to hunt if they wish.

Controlled hunting, done only at certain seasons and with limitations on the sex, weight and habitat of the game, is one of the few remaining restraints on animal population. In Georgia, for instance, many natural predators of deer are now extinct or nearly extinct in the wild.

I believe in animal rights and deplore cruelty to animals in all forms, but hunting need not be cruel.

Careful, trained hunters, at least those I've met, usually have a great respect for their prey, and avoid inflicting pain and suffering on the animals they hunt.

Certainly, hunters should be careful, sober, and take all possible safety precautions. Also, they shouldn't indiscriminately blast away at anything they see.

If hunting were abolished, not only would many people be deprived of a food source they rely on — yes, many people these days still hunt for subsistence — we would be doing the animals no service.

With essentially no natural predators and no artificial checks on population, the number of deer would grow to the point where the food supply would not support them. An overpopulation of any species causes damage to the species' habitat, threatens the security of other species in the ecosystem, and can lead to starvation and disease in the species affected.

Bambi is a myth. The billions of deer and other animals that inhabit our planet are real, and a "hands-off" system of wildlife management, while it may sound humane and benign, is not.

If we are to be stewards of the land we inhabit, we must control the spread of other species just as we control (often too little, too late) our own effect on our environment. Controlled hunting seems to me a very good way to maintain animal populations at levels that will ensure their optimum survival.

By protecting the young and endangered and allowing a measured harvest of the overpopulated, we can help ensure the survival of all.

Why must hunters kill Bambi?

By Alyanna B. Summers

COMMENTARY

The season for that gross national pastime is upon us again.

No, I'm not talking football — but something that is potentially more deadly and definitely less politically correct. Yes, my friends, it's open season on Bambi and his forest buddies once more.

All the Bubbas and Jimmy Joes and Martha Sues in the area are chomping at the bit — anxious to get out the old trusty rifle and take the beer coolers out of storage. Their gleaming eyes and salivating mouths contemplate once more the joy of gunning down "the one that got away" last season.

What is the attraction?

What sport can there be in gunning down a creature whose only means of defense is to run like heck in the opposite direction?

How can you look a tiny doe in its big brown eyes and still kill it, unceremoniously tie it to your car's hood, drag its carcass home and eat it, without so much as "beg your pardon?"

It is suggested that we can promote hunting in a better light as "animal population control." When the population in China got to more than 1 billion people, no one suggested hunting down the Chinese to control their population.

I am in no way suggesting that this is the thing to do, no more than I am suggesting we go to the forest, build clinics and hand out birth-control pills to does after a certain age. But, I am suggesting we not cover up a hideous sport with an honorable title, like by hunting we are doing a noble deed for the animal world. I'm quite sure none of the hunters or animals involved in the sport see hunting as doing a good turn for animalkind.

I am vehemently against hunting for sport or any other reason, but if hunters must hunt, (my feelings aside), I strongly urge responsible hunting.

This includes not hunting drunk. It is criminal to handle firearms of any sort while under the influence of alcohol or any other intoxicant. Men or women who take this sort of risk should have more than their hunting licenses revoked.

Hunters should also wear the proper hunting apparel so they don't get shot by one of the hunters in the preceding paragraph (you know the old saying — after a couple of beers, anything looks like a target).

Third, I urge all hunters to get the proper license and hunt on appropriate property. I am sure there is nothing worse for a hunter than to neatly pick off an 11-point buck, only to have the carcass confiscated and to be charged by authorities with poaching.

Lastly, I urge all hunters to rethink their position on hunting. There is more than enough meat in the local grocer's freezer. Besides, you could spend your time in the comfort of your own home, feet up, sucking down brewskis and checking out the other gross national pastime.

Hunting requires use of safety skills

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

Craziness season is here. Some people know it as deer season.

It's crazy because what sane person would pay $30 a pound for meat? That's about what it cost as you amortize your firearm, pay for your hunting license, deer stand and transportation to and from the hunting area.

This does not include the cost of a pickup, which all hunters need. I mean, who would want to haul a dead, bleeding deer around in the back of a Mitsubishi 300SX? Wouldn't that muck up the interior?

Nor does it include the time you spend actually hunting. Add those costs in and the price really skyockets.

It's crazy because what other season elicits so many safety advisories?

Some of the precautions would be ludicrous if they weren't so necessary.

I especially like the one about identifying your prey before shooting it.

"Let's see now," says Bubba as he pulls his "Game Identification Book," out of the knapsack, "two legs, upright position, nope, can't hunt two-legged creatures, especially those wearing them bright orange clothes.

"Ah, hah. There's a four-legged critter. Hmmm, wonder what kind of deer has a long tail, fat nose and wears a bell. Must be something else. Yep, book identifies it as a cow.

"Whoops, there goes another four-legged animal. Hmm, long hair, long bushy tail. Makes, woof, woof noises. Nah, must be something else."

The safety messages warn about deer seats. I never knew deer needed seats, but I was told by Monique Deerslayer of this office that the seats are for the hunter, and that they are actually called deer stands and are used to sit in above the ground.

She says they (the hunters) put them in trees and wait for deer to show up, shooting them once they do (and once properly identified of course).

The problem with deer seats is people tend to fall out of them. The falls come because the hunter might forget or refuse to strap him or herself in.

Then in the heat of the battle, they fall asleep, lean too far over to loose a stream of tobacco juice, or get knocked out of the stand by firing them big guns.

Another reason for falling is the deer stand might be old and the wood rotted. Then the hunters go crashing through the floor, not stopping until they reach terra firma.

The fall itself can be painful — can even result in severe injury. But the hunter, holding mightily to his weapon could also end up shooting him or herself on impact.

Other hunters have been known to shoot themselves as they pull the weapon quietly and carefully toward them. Unfortunately, they've got a hold of the barrel and the trigger or hammer catches on something and boom, one less hunter.

Climbing fences and leaping ditches with loaded weapons are other favorite ways for hunters to dispatch themselves rather than the deer.

Whoever said hunting wasn't a sport ... that the deer didn't stand a chance ... didn't know what he was talking about. Deer might not kill (just like guns don't) but people sure can and do.

So hunters, carry your bullets in your shirt pockets. Leave your flasks at home, dress brilliantly and call me when you want to share your deer burger.

Military, family members not always allowed to vote

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Freedom and the right of Americans to elect their representatives are the fundamental basis of our democracy, said Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

Not all Americans, military members included, could vote in general and primary elections throughout the country's history.

Not until 1942 and World War II could service members vote while stationed away from home.

In addition, direct election of officials has grown, but still today not all officials are elected by the general population. For example, before various amendments to the Constitution, state legislatures selected the U.S. senators. Today, the Electoral College still selects the president and vice president.

After the ratification of the 15th Amendment to the Constitution in 1870, race was no longer a bar to voting. But it was almost another 100 years before the 24th Amendment and the 1965 Voting Rights Act outlawed the poll taxes and literacy tests used to keep people from voting.

The 15th Amendment, however, pertained only to an individual's race, not sex. Women still didn't have the right to vote and wouldn't until 1920 with the ratification of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution.

For the most part, military members, along with U.S. citizens overseas, were left out of the election process until the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act was passed in 1942.

It required states to allow certain groups of people to register and vote absentee for federal officials. The act covered members of the uniformed services and Merchant Marine, their spouses and U.S. citizens living outside the United States.

Since then, the states have passed laws allowing these individuals the right to register and vote in local and state elections.

CFC drive in fourth week

Garrison Commanders' Office

The Combined Federal Campaign is in its fourth week and is currently at 40 percent of the campaign goal of $500,000.

The campaign solicits monetary support for more than 900 humanitarian agencies, including Fort Benning's own Soldier and Family Support Association.

The Combined Federal Campaign was developed in response to federal employees' wishes for a single campaign to reduce administrative expenditures and permit voluntary payroll withholding for contributions to better support local, national, and international health, welfare, and philanthropic organizations, according to officials.

The CFC, an annual on-the-job solicitation, is the only federal employee-authorized method of fund raising for recognized voluntary agencies.

Voters may get excused leave

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

Supervisors are reminded that on Tuesday all civilian employees who vote in this year's election may be excused for up to three hours immediately after the polls open or immediately before they close, whichever requires the lesser amount of excused leave.

Employees who are already off duty for three hours or more while the polls are open may not be granted excused leave. In cases that require additional time to enable the employee to vote, the supervisor should contact the Management Employees Relations Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel at 545-7657 or 545-5562 for a determination on a case by case basis. However, in no event will excused absence to vote exceed one full workday.

make an appointment for the patient. If an appointment can't be found within the hospital, then we will use a network of civilian doctors that we have signed up in the civilian community to see our patients at a reduced cost. We feel this will really cut costs, while maintaining good care.

Q: How do you think Army health care measures up to civilian health care?

I think that military health care compares favorably to civilian health care. For example, when compared with all hospitals surveyed for accreditation, Martin Army Community Hospital was among the top 5 percent nationwide.

Q: When you first entered the Army, did you think you would go as far in your career as you have ?

That's an excellent question. I entered the military during the Vietnam War in 1968 under the senior student medical program. I merely wanted to serve my country, get medical training and start my own private practice. That was my intent when I entered the Army; I definitely was not career-Army oriented at that time.

In 1977, I finished a fellowship in gastroenterology. Before I realized it, six more years had passed and I had been in the Army 15 years. It was at that point that I thought about whether or not I wanted to continue with the Army. Of course, after 15 years it is pretty much taken for granted that you will continue to retirement.

By this time, my hearing had progressively worsened as well. That's another thing I needed to take into consideration. My hearing loss helped me to move away from clinical medicine and more toward management.

Q: Has your hearing impairment affected your military career in any way?

A: No, it hasn't. I think it's a lesson for many people with disabilities. It shows that a person with a significant disability can adjust and go as far as his or her talent and desire will permit.

Q: What advice would you give to young officers and soldiers coming into the Army now?

You need to become and remain technically competent to be competitive — especially in the uncertain climate of the Army right now. Technical proficiency, learning to adjust to change and not giving up are the keys to success — in both the military and civilian communities.

Families may get break on travel

Army News Service

Military families are getting a break on flights for emergency travel.

Several airlines recently started emergency leave programs offering special fares to active duty personnel. The special rates also apply to family members who are ticketed at the same time for the same flight.

Airlines generally waive the requirement for the seven-day advance purchase of round trip tickets, allowing purchase of the lower-priced tickets on short notice.

Under the emergency leave program, airlines require personnel to show an identification card and a copy of emergency leave orders when purchasing tickets .

Programs for emergency leave fares are available through TWA, Delta, Continental, American, Northwest, United and USAir.

Terms of the purchase vary among airlines. Personnel should call the airline or commercial travel office for details.

NIM gains wings

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning has acquired an original Fairchild C-119 Flying Boxcar, one of the post World War II era's most distinguished transport planes.

The plane is on long-term loan from the Forest Service of the Department of Agriculture, which used it to fight forest fires.

The National Infantry Museum learned of the aircraft through museum channels and worked with the Agriculture Department to secure the plane for display on Eubanks Field.

Museum Curator Frank Hanner said the plane has held up remarkably well over the years.

"We were amazed that it was in such good condition," Hanner said. "Forest Service personnel were actually able to fly it in to Lawson Army Air Field."

The plane will be stored at the air field until a cement pad can be constructed on Eubanks Field. Some restoration work will also have to be done before the plane is placed on display.

"We will restore the plane to the appearance of the 1950s," said Dick Grube, museum director. "This will include repainting the aircraft and removing the radar dome that was placed on the front that would not have originally been present."

Hanner said little is known about the history of this particular aircraft.

"Unfortunately we don't have any of the aircraft logs," Hanner said, "but the C-119 in general had a very distinguished history."

The C-119 gained distinction for being the first completely new aircraft that was designed in the United States as a military transport. It can carry up to 20,000 pounds of cargo or 62 paratroopers.

It is also noted for its unusual design. Its twin tails are attached not to the fuselage, but from projections extending from the wings. This left the fuselage open at the rear for easy loading and unloading of cargo and parachute drops.

The C-119 was used in both combat jumps made during the Korean War by the 187th Airborne Regiment Combat team. During these operations, C-119s were used to drop howitzers, Jeeps, trucks and heavy guns.

During the Vietnam War, C-119s were modified to serve as gun ships, complete with multi-barrel 7.62mm machine guns capable of firing 6,000 rounds per minute, electronic night illumination systems, image intensifiers and computer fire-control.

Badges: Know the regs

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Soldiers who wear the Combat Infantryman Badge or combat jump wings need to be careful that they are not wearing unauthorized decorations.

A recent Department of the Army message said many soldiers are mistakenly wearing combat decorations they are not authorized to wear.

"I haven't had any reports or received any inquiries about improper wear of combat decorations here at Fort Benning," said Sgt. Maj. Jessie Tiller, chief of the Personnel Operations Division, Adjutant General's Office. "Still, it is important for soldiers to understand who is authorized to wear what."

According to the message, no assault landing credit has been approved or announced for Operation Just Cause.

"This means that soldiers who jumped into Panama who are wearing a bronze star on their parachute jump wings, signifying a combat jump, are wrong until assault landing credit is authorized" said Tiller. "Requests have been made to authorize assault landing credit for the operation, and I think that sometime in the near future this will happen."

The regulations governing the wear of the Combat Infantryman Badge state that one award is authorized to each individual for each separate war in which the requirements have been met for award of the CIB. Second and third awards are indicated by superimposing one and two stars respectively, centered at the top of the badge between the points of the oak wreath.

Only one award of the CIB is authorized for service in Vietnam, Laos, the Dominican Republic, Korea (subsequent to July 27, 1954), Grenada, Panama and Southwest Asia regardless of whether an individual has served on one or more tours in one or more of these areas, Tiller said.

"Even if you served in Vietnam, Grenada, Panama and Iraq, you can only wear one CIB," he said. "Any soldier on active duty who has earned the CIB should not have any stars on the CIB unless he is also a veteran of the Korean War (June 27, 1950, through July 27, 1954) plus one or more of the before- mentioned actions."

One final point of contention with awards is the correct process for forwarding awards to soldiers who have left the units in which they earned the awards.

According to Tiller, units that don't have a forwarding address for soldiers who have earned awards and then changed duty stations have been sending the awards to the U.S. Army Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center for forwarding. However, awards will no longer be accepted at USAEREC without complete information on the soldier's new unit of assignment.

If the unit does not know the soldier's new address, the unit should contact the Personnel Service Company of the soldier's new unit or the Enlisted Records and Evaluation Center, Field Assistance Branch, Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Man impersonates city police officer on post

Military Police Activity

On Oct. 22, a black male wearing a tan uniform knocked at the door of a family living in Custer Terrace.

The male identified himself as a Columbus police detective and asked the woman if he could speak with her in reference to her vehicle being involved in a robbery.

The unidentified male flashed a badge for the woman. She asked the man to remain at the door while she called the Military Police.

The male then departed the area in a blue 1983 or '84 Buick Regal,

This unidentified male was not a Columbus Police detective, according to officials.

All civilian police are required to have military police escorts when conducting official business on post.

If this male should be seen on post or attempting to enter quarters, contact the Military Police Station immediately at 545-5222 or 545-5223 or 545-5224.

Post honors Native Americans

November set as the month to celebrate culture, heritage

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Nov. 1 to 30 is Native American Month and Fort Benning will celebrate the month in a number of ways.

The following activities have been tentatively planned for Native American Heritage Month through the installation's Equal Opportunity Office:

• Native American display, Infantry Hall Display Room, Nov. 20 to 25.

• Ethnic meals in dining facilities throughout the month.

• An exhibit at the National Infantry Museum Sunday to Nov. 30.

• A book display at Sayers Library, Main Post and School of the Americas Library.

• Pictures displaying notable Native Americans throughout the month at local businesses.

• Film on Native American history each Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Building 2515 (across from Indianhead Terrace).

• An essay contest, sponsored by Youth Activities. Deadline for entry is Nov. 20. Contact Quintella Thorn at 545-7945 for more information.

• A test your knowledge quiz will appear in The Bayonet each week.

• Directorate of Logistics Systems Management Branch will disseminate information on cultural traditions of Native Americans who reside in this area to branch employees.

• DOL Transportation Division will display posters in main lobbies and show customers videotapes of Native Americans.

• The Directorate of Civilian Personnel will have a static display of artifacts and educational and historical memorabilia in Meloy Hall, Building 6, Room 115. Contact James Fleming 545-4246 for information

• Sunday through Nov. 30 — School of the Americas, static displays in each company and one-hour presentation on Native Americans.

• Sunday through Nov. 30 — Ranger Training Brigade, display in brigade headquarters of Native American culture.

• Sunday through Nov. 30 — The Infantry Training Brigade will display posters of Native Americans throughout the area. Point of contact is 1st Lt. Fredrick Hannah at 544-9702

• Thursday and Nov. 6 — The U.S. Army Dental Activity will sponsor a trip to the Indian Cultural Museum in Columbus (tentative). For more information, contact Sgt. 1st Class Manmion Montgomery.

• Nov. 6 — DOL Plans and Operations Division will take a tour to the Columbus Museum.

• Nov. 13 — DOL Industrial Engineering Branch will have a static display with artifacts of Native Americans.

• Nov. 17 — The U.S. Army Medical Department Activity will have an ethnic meal with a static display. Also, a static display will be featured throughout the month. For information, call Staff Sgt. Rhonda Hobday at 544-4051.

• Nov. 20 — DOL Maintenance Division will have a Thanksgiving dinner at Uchee Creek. The Boy Scouts "Order of the Arrow" will present authentic Native American dancing and costumes. Posters will be displayed throughout the month.

• Nov. 30 — 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital will have a trip to Lumpkin, Ga., and take a tour of the Rood Creek Indian Mounds.

For information, contact Jeannette McMullan.

School activities

• Dexter School — study projects and art teacher will incorporate Native American studies into her program, which will include having the children make a large teepee, pottery, mask using beads and feathers and animal skins.

• Faith School - variety of activities at sixth-grade level in social studies.

Loyd School - writing activities in the computer lab; fourth-grade readings from selected passages concerning North American tribes; media display in the learning resource center; fifth-grade environmental study projects that incorporate writing, science, and social studies; Indian culture study projects that highlight regalia, customs and kindergarten art projects.

White School - Fifth-graders have developed a display in the cupboard that includes an Iroquois mural, dolls, Native American families and creative writing.

Fourth-graders will study the western move of the Native Americans. Native American culture through song and through mask making in art classes will be highlighted in November.

• Wilbur School - variety of art, music and writing activities.

• Wilson School - creative art work in the school cafeteria.

Volunteers keep it in the family

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

When your mother is Fort Benning's volunteer coordinator, volunteering becomes part of your way of life — at least that's what's happened for Kathy Case's daughters.

The installation volunteer coordinator since October 1990, Case is the mother of four daughters: Sarah, 18; Suzanne, 17; Katie, 14; and Elizabeth, 12.

All four, somewhere along the line, acquired their mother's values in helping others through volunteering.

Most of it began, say the girls, when the family was stationed at Fort Ord, Calif., while their step-father, Joe Case, was still in the Army. In July 1991, he retired as a first sergeant and became the caretaker/maintenance worker at Uchee Creek Recreation Area at Fort Benning.

While at Fort Ord, Sarah said she began volunteering as a way to avoid boredom. She served as a volunteer receptionist for the Army Emergency Relief office there for two summers.

This past summer, she and her sisters helped John Cook and his staff move and shelve Fort Benning's Main Post Library books to an alternate location so that the building could be renovated. She also assisted Anna Wilson in the Housing Referral Office mostly full time.

"You learn a lot about people volunteering," she said.

A senior at Kendrick High School, Sarah also is working to raise money so the Kendrick Chorus can go to Disney World in May. She is also an ambassador for the Columbus Convention and Visitors Bureau and has begun her first paid position at a women's clothing store in Phenix City.

Suzanne, Katie and Elizabeth are also Columbus ambassadors, do timing for aquatics meets at the D.A. Turner YMCA, helped take tickets and sell hotdogs at the Superfest on post last year and hid eggs for the Riverside Easter Egg Hunt. They also spent an afternoon at Goodwill Industries not long ago packing boxes for Hurricane Andrew Relief.

In addition, they each have their own special interests.

Suzanne is the Drama Club stage manager at Kendrick High, and at Fort Ord she volunteered at the Radiology Clinic for the Silas B. Hays Hospital on post.

This past summer, she worked for Ken Hankins at Fort Benning's Directorate of Public Works to help DPW get caught up on some basic allowance for quarters forms that were backlogged.

This she considers her most challenging experience. In her six weeks with this office, Suzanne said she learned about how often people can be "demanding and impatient" and how you have to deal with them.

She said volunteering for her was a way to keep busy because she was too young to apply for a job anywhere at the time.

Suzanne deems her most fun volunteer experience to be working the Superfest celebration honoring the soldiers who spent time in Saudi.

A cheerleader at Kendrick High, Katie considers her most enjoyable volunteering to be what she's doing now — coaching nine 6- to 8-year-old cheerleaders for the Dolphin youth football team on post.

Last year she assisted Anna Butler with the 9- to 10-year-olds. This year, Katie's mom is her assistant.

While at Fort Ord, Katie volunteered as a receptionist at the Cardiology Clinic at the hospital there and was the manager of the swim team at the Officers' Club.

This summer she worked at Fort Benning's Winder Clinic on Sand Hill for a couple of weeks answering phones, making appointments and pulling records.

Photos by Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet
Katie Case works with Dolphin cheerleaders.

"If someone needs help, I'd rather do something for them than sit at home," Katie said.

She added that "some things Mom encourages us to do, but for the most part we decide for ourselves if it's something we're interested in."

Even Elizabeth, the youngest, has her own causes. After school at Our Lady of Lourdes Elementary School in Columbus, she helps with the kindergartners in the after-school program.

At Fort Ord, she worked for Army Emergency Relief, Army Community Services and taught swim classes at the Youth Activities Center. This past summer, she washed toys and fixed up dolls at Santa's Castle.

Elizabeth also has helped Girl Scouts put together a sign language song for a program they were presenting. She had originally learned to sign in fourth grade when her teacher, who had a deaf son, taught the class to communicate with him.

Kathy credits her daughters with wanting to volunteer because of who they are, not who their mother is.

She said that while she might be the source of their knowing who needs help, it is they who are the ones who want to be involved.

Parents get hands-on training

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Students at Herbert J. Dexter School and their parents had the opportunity Oct. 20 to 22 to work together in the school's Library/ Media Center to use computer programs that support materials being presented in the classroom.

Parents getting hands-on experience with computers that Dexter students use during their regular schoolwork is the school's way of celebrating Computer Learning Month, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development for the Fort Benning Schools.

Kindergartners and first-graders and their parents were invited Tuesday, second and third-graders Wednesday and fourth and-fifth graders Thursday.

Lynn Harp, Dexter's media specialist, said new this year is Prodigy, an information service that has the latest breaking news in current affairs.

Last year it was a new weather program by National Geographics that caught the students attention, said Vicki Rogers, Dexter principal.

Students would work on-line with other students across the country also using the same computer program. One of the first assignments involved giving the longitude and latitude of the other school so that Dexter children could determine the location of their counterparts.

At the parent-sharing sessions, suggestions were given also of programs to use at home on Macintosh/Apple equipment if parents were considering purchasing new software.

Advance invitations were sent home for parents to take part in this "Computer Learning Month" experience, and participation was on a drop-in basis with the terminals being occupied most of the two-hour sessions from 4 to 6 p.m.

Fort Benning participates in quality group

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning has taken Total Quality Management to a corporate-sharing level.

Fort Benning is a member of the Columbus Quality Council. This group of local businesses applies TQM to its everyday business activities, according to David L. Flo, Fort Benning's director of Resource Management.

The council meets monthly at the Columbus Technical Institute from 6 to 8 p.m. The fee for attendance at the meeting is $2.

According to Flo, speakers at the council meetings are from local companies, and they discuss their experiences implementing and using TQM.

Flo said programs scheduled for the next few months include speakers from CB&T, Total Systems, Charbroil, St. Francis Hospital and Columbus Tech.

Flo said there are many advantages to membership in the Columbus Quality Council. Meeting attendees can learn more about TQM by sharing their experiences with others.

The council sponsored its first annual conference Oct. 9. The keynote speaker was Ed Hubbard, a former Vietnam prisoner of war. The conference included several seminars of particular interest to Fort Benning's Community of Excellence and Total Army Quality efforts.

For more information, contact Kevin Topping at the Columbus Regional Training Center at 563-0800 or Gene Cottle at 545-2311.

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital will initiate a new Pharmacy Phone-in Refill Service Nov. 1.

Pharmacy patrons can use this service by simply calling 544-1352, listen to the recorded message, and provide the information requested.

Patients should have the following information on hand when phoning: patient's name, sponsor's Social Security number, the total number of different medications requested, the prescription number (located on the upper left portion of the label just above the patient's name), and the medication's name. Refills can be phoned in 24 hours a day.

Refill requests phoned in before noon will be ready after 4 p.m. on the same duty day. Refill requests phoned in between noon and midnight will be ready after 9 a.m. the next regular duty day.

Requests placed after noon on Friday, on weekends, or during a holiday period will be ready after 9 a.m. on the first working day after the weekend or holiday.

The completed refill prescription will be available at the hospital pharmacy pick-up window upon presentation of the patient's identification card. Refills not picked up within one week after being phoned in will be returned to stock.

Lt. Col. Errol L. Moran, chief of Pharmacy Service, encourages all patients to use the Phone-in Refill service as the primary means of obtaining refills on prescriptions. He said if all patients use this system, congestion at the Pharmacy will be reduced.

This will improve efficiency and further reduce waiting times, he said. Patients still have the option to use the Refill Pharmacy at the Main Mall or the hospital pharmacy to obtain their refills, he said.

Gateway to Care briefings for retiree families and families of deceased military:

• Evening briefings: Infantry Hall, Marshall Auditorium, 6 p.m.; Nov. 2, 5, 12, 17, 24; Dec. 1 and 3.

• Daytime briefings: Nov. 10, 10 a.m., Infantry Hall, Classroom 5 (200 people maximum); Nov. 14, 10 a.m., Infantry Hall, Marshall Auditorium; Nov. 19, 10 a.m., Infantry Hall, Classroom 3, (200 people maximum).

Cruisers uproot Shamrocks

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Cruise-matics rugby team beat the Savannah Shamrock rugby team of Savannah, Ga., Saturday at Stilwell Field 40-11 over a makeshift lineup for the Shamrocks.

Cruise-matic fly half Mike Monnard scored 17 of the Cruise-matics 40 points on a one-try, two penalty kick and three extra point kicks.

Wing forward Darren Monaco of the Cruise-matics got the first try of the afternoon when he was able to cover the ball in the end zone early in the match.

Winger Mark Davidson added another try in the first half to push the Cruise-matic lead to 23-0 before the Shamrocks ever got on the board.

Fly half Tom Nelson put the Shamrocks on the scoreboard late in the first half when he split the uprights with a drop goal kick for three points.

Nelson added another drop goal a few minutes later to bring the Shamrocks to within 17 points at 23-6.

Cruise-matic winger Darren Broome pushed the score back up to 28-6 just before halftime when he broke away from the Shamrock defense for the try.

In the second half, Nelson got the only try of the afternoon for the Shamrocks when he was able to put the ball down in the end zone for the try, cutting the Cruise-matic lead to 28-11.

Joe Hyder ended the scoring for the Cruise-matics late in the match when he took a pitch from Hernandez and plowed his way into the end zone for the try.

The Cruise-matics actually won this match on a forfeit by Savannah for only having eight players on the field at game time. The rest of the team was made up of Cruise-matic players.

NIM race historic

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The 11th Annual National Infantry Museum Road Race Saturday at Fort Benning drew more than 1,700 runners.

Sponsored by General Motors, Miller Brewing Company (Dixie Beer) and Buffalo Rock Pepsi distributors, the race is one of the largest road races in the Southeast.

The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts provided water stations on the race course.

The post's Physical Activities Branch conducted the race with help from the Columbus Track Club. According to Jim Brown, Physical Activities Branch director, the response to this year's race was excellent.

"The race drew more than three times the number of participants we had for last year's race," he said. "We hope to improve on that even more next year.

All proceeds will go to the One Fund to benefit the National Infantry Museum.

Charles Dent, a sergeant with the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, won the five-mile individual race for men, for the second year in a row. This year's time was 25 minutes and 37 seconds, while Kelly Custer took the top spot for females with a time of 33 minutes and 21 seconds.

Below are winners from each category:

SOA professor is in the swim

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

For some, swimming is recreational or just a good way to get some exercise; but, one local swimmer takes to the pool to maintain a competitive edge.

Dr. Russell W. Ramsey, visiting professor at the School of the Americas, has been a competitive swimmer for most of his 57 years and Oct. 27, he tested his ability at the Briant Wells gymnasium pool on main post.

Ramsey entered the 1992 Richardson Masters U.S. Masters Swimming Long Distance National Championship 6,000-yard Postal Swim in the 55- to 59-year-old age group.

According to Ramsey, swimming 240 lengths (3.41 miles) in one hour, 53 minutes, 57 seconds, should place him in the top three in the nation.

The official results, gathered from pools around the nation, have yet to be announced since the deadline for submissions is Dec. 15.

Although Ramsey enjoys swimming and sees it as one of the best ways to exercise, the competition, especially within the USMS, drives him to maintain his competitive edge.

"I do enjoy the competition," he said. "Swimming is the one sport where you get an aerobic, anaerobic and nonconcussive workout, so you can work your heart and muscles without beating up your joints."

Belonging to USMS also gives Ramsey an accurate way of measuring his abilities.

"With the Masters structure, you know no one is faster than you, because it's an official network," Ramsey said.

To remain competitive, Ramsey maintains a strict regimen, when his teaching calender allows, of workouts at the Briant Wells pool during his lunch hour. His dedication has honed his strokes to near perfection, evident in his success in competitive events.

In August, Ramsey received a Gold Medal for first place in the USMS 2,000-yard Masters Postal Swim for his age group. The following month, he took first place in the 50-yard breaststroke and second in the 200-yard freestyle in the open age group during the Fort Benning Swim Championships Sept. 23 at Briant Wells pool.

Currently Ramsey is preparing to recapture his number one ranking for the USMS 1992 Postal Pentathlon Swim Meet.

Ramsey set a national record in 1990 with a time of 18 minutes, 57 seconds and finished second last year with a time of 18 minutes, 56 seconds.

Half-marathon runner matches age, distance

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Thirteen-year-old Jeremy Liehr hopes to some day run the Olympic marathon, but for now running in a half marathon will suffice.

Liehr, the son of Staff Sgt. Roy Liehr, an instructor at Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officers Academy, and mother, Debbie, started running four years ago after seeing his father's trophies from his high school days in cross country. Now an eighth-grader at Faith Middle School, Liehr is training to run a half marathon at Kiawah Island, S.C., Dec. 12.

Liehr has competed in numerous races around Fort Benning and the surrounding area over the last four years and finished second in his age group at this year's 11th Annual National Infantry Museum Road Race with a time of 34 minutes and 14 seconds.

Liehr, with the encouragement of his physical education teachers Sue Emerson and Bruce Wade, trains Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays after school, running an average of 25 miles a week.

His diet consists of a light breakfast, usually cereal, apples and oranges throughout the day and chowing down at dinner time. "I'll eat whatever's on the table at dinner time as long as it doesn't have onions on it," said the 13-year-old.

Liehr hopes to make the Spencer High School cross country team next year, followed by a college scholarship somewhere; but, for now, he has four races coming up before the Kiawah race.

"As long as he wants to run and it doesn't affect his grades in school, we will be there for him." said Liehr's mother, "We are very proud of him."

Club zeroes in on match

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a tactical pistol match Nov. 14 at 9 a.m. at English Range.

Entry fee is $11 if paid by Nov. 8 and $13 after that date. All entrants will receive a sweat shirt from Columbus Firearms Manufacturing Company.

There will be first-, second- and third-place trophies in the following categories: competitor class, sportsman and female class.

A separate award will be given in the sportsman and/or female class for high service revolver.

The high law enforcement trophy will be awarded in the noncompetitor class for active corrections and law enforcement professionals.

Interested shooters can register in person at the Rifle and Pistol Club Tuesdays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. or mail entry forms to the Rifle and Pistol Club, P.O. Box 1469, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

For more information, call the club at 689-3371.

Women to take aim at firearm safety

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a basic firearms safety course for women Dec. 12 from 8 a.m. to noon.

Instruction will be given on the moral and ethical considerations of the use of deadly force and the legal considerations on Fort Benning and in Georgia.

Instruction will consist of how to load and unload a weapon, safe storage of a weapon in the home and safe and effective use of a weapon.

"The Rifle and Pistol Club is moving more toward safety and education for the nonprofessional shooter." said Jim Graham, club safety coordinator.

The course will be limited to 20 people to give a better instructor to student ratio.

The course is free, but participants must pay $6 for a manual, which is mandatory for the course and will be issued at the time of registration.

Registration will be at the Rifle and Pistol Club with preregistration ending Nov. 29.

For more information, call Graham at 689-3371.

Headhunters make kills

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment's Headhunters pounded out two wins Wednesday and Thursday over the Adjutant General Replacement Detachment's Triple A's team and Company A, 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regiment's Albatrosses at Roberts Field to solidify their chances of making the post playoffs. Here is a wrap-up of those games.

HHC 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. vs. AG Replacement Det.

Preston Smith scored three touchdowns to lead the Headhunters to a 20-0 win over the Triple A's Wednesday evening.

Smith scored on runs of 40 and 5 yards and caught a 17-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Rick Lingerfelt to cap the scoring for the Headhunters.

On defense, strong safety Tom Goulter picked off two passes and linebacker Kelly Green intercepted another to effectively shut down the Triple A's passing attack.

HHC 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. vs. Co. A. 1st Bn. 11th Inf. Regt.

Headhunter quarterback Rick Lingerfelt threw three touchdown passes, and Clyde Mitchell returned the second-half kickoff 60 yards for another score to clip the wings of the Albatrosses 24-0, Thursday night at Roberts Field.

Lingerfelt hit wide receiver Scott Lee with touchdown strikes of 10 and 42 yards, and receiver Bobby Winebrenner hooked up with Lingerfelt on a 5-yard strike to finish off the scoring for the Headhunters.

Cornerback Delaney Phillips intercepted two passes while defensive lineman Thomas Rondeau and Lee had one apiece to keep the Albatrosses' offense off the scoreboard.

Has the NFL gotten too big for its pads?

COMMENTARY

I think there's a real problem with the way the National Football League is playing the game these days, and it's as plain as the players on the field. Or maybe they're not on the field.

With the way the NFL has come to rely on constant substitution and specialization, it's hard to tell who's playing the game. Specialization also interrupts the flow of games and detracts from the enjoyment of fans.

I think almost all football fans will agree that the tide of players running on and off the field makes it difficult to know whom to cheer for these days.

Great linebackers like the Chicago Bears' Mike Singletary are taken out of the game in passing situations and are replaced with someone supposedly more adept at pass defense. On the other side of the ball, potentially great running backs are taken out for those same passing situations and replaced by backs who are really just wide receivers who work out of the backfield.

The specialization seems to continue on down the line to the point where it has affected almost every position on the field.

It's a shame, because I think all this is a reflection of a lack of skill, rather than greater skill.

When I played in the NFL, a player was supposed to be able to do it all. Running backs were taught that they should not only know how to run the ball, but how to catch passes and block for others as well. Now it seems there are separate specialists for each assignment.

Is there anything that can be done about the problem? Jim Finks, president of the New Orleans Saints and head of the NFL's competition committee, has a good idea. Finks has proposed that teams limit the number of players who can dress for games to 40, down from the current 47. With fewer men available, players actually might have to play more of a game. Fewer substitutes, fewer substitutions. It sounds like a great idea to me.

Let's face it, a team could actually get by with 33 players — 11 each for the offensive, defensive and special teams squads. I don't think teams need to bring three backup offensive tackles to a game.

Any offensive lineman should be able to play every position on the line. I also don't think teams need three running backs. They need players who want to play the game.

Today's high-dollar contracts often state what players will not do, such as the supposedly risky job of returning punts and kickoffs. Today, you almost never see a first-string back sent out to receive a kick.

Think back on some of the great names in football —Paul Hornung of the Green Bay Packers, Dick Butkus of the Chicago Bears, Jim Brown of the Cleveland Browns. These were men who did it all and made the sport what it is today.

It would be a shame if it ever got to the point where we couldn't associate great players with their teams and cities anymore.

Limit substitutions. Generalize the skills that make great all-around players. This will save professional football and make it more enjoyable for the fans.

Editor's note: Gale Sayers is considered one of the greatest running backs of all time. The former Chicago Bear is a member of the National Football League's Hall of Fame.

Lures, sharp hooks give fishers the 'edge'

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Fishermen everywhere continually search for a magic lure that will catch bass and other species. For the coming months of autumn, there is just such a lure, according to well-known bass tournament pro Denny Brauer.

It's a topwater popping plug with a floating jig tied behind.

"I've used this lure many, many times on the Lake of the Ozarks where I live," says Brauer, a member of the Evinrude Outboards pro staff and runner-up in this year's Bass Masters Classic world championship. "It catches largemouths, spotted bass, white bass, and even stripers."

The lure Brauer likes is a small topwater popping plug with a concave face. When the lure is jerked, it pops noisily across the surface and displaces a lot of water

Using a 12 to 15-inch length of monofilament line, Brauer ties a small bucktail jig to the rear split-ring of the plug; this jig dances erratically behind the lure and catches many of the fish.

"Most anglers think this is just a lure for white bass," says the Evinrude pro, "but it really catches a lot of largemouths this time of year.

"I like to use it around windy points and bluffs where baitfish may be concentrated because the lure really does imitate an injured shad. A lot of bass hit the jig, but I've caught some nice fish on the lure itself, too."

The popping plug jig lure is best fished with a steady jerking motion so the plug continually pops and gurgles its way over the surface, says Brauer. This causes the trailing jig to rise, fall and jump from side to side. Some fishermen even tie two jigs on the leader to increase their chances for hook-ups.

"Saltwater anglers often use a variation of this lure for speckled trout," explains Brauer. "Instead of using a popping plug, they substitute a large popping cork. The result is the same: the cork makes noise and moves water to gain the attention of the fish, and the trailing jig catches them."

Because the plug and trailing jig is somewhat awkward to cast, Brauer suggests using at least a seven-foot rod. The extra length not only sends the lure out further, it also makes setting the hook easier.

"I have been as guilty as anyone in searching for a magic lure," laughs Brauer, "and I have a tackle box full of strange and unusual plugs to prove it. This simple topwater plug and jig combination is as close as I've come to finding a magic lure, especially at this time of year."

Sharpen those hooks

For more than 20 years, Guy Eaker has watched bass anglers make the same mistake: fishing with dull hooks.

"I'm amazed," says Eaker, a former fishing guide and now a full-time bass tournament competitor.

"I've watched fishermen use hooks that were so dull and rusted you could break them with your fingers, so you know they would never hold a bass."

Many of the pros actually change hooks on their lures almost as often as they change fishing line. Eaker checks his lures after each day of competition. If a hook appears the least bit dull, it gets replaced.

"It really is not practical for nontournament fishermen to change hooks the way we do," says Eaker, "but it is important to make certain the hooks are sharp. There are many different types of sharpening stones and files available, too, and all of them are easy to use."

What's important when sharpening a hook, explains the Evinrude pro, is making an angular point on the barb of the hook so it cuts as it penetrates. This is easily done by filing the hook on one side and then the other, almost like a knife is sharpened.

"You know you have a sharp hook when the barb will scratch and hold on your fingernail," says Eaker. "You know how a lot of bass will just bump a lure rather than actually bite it? Well, I want my hooks to grab the fish when they do that.

"I catch a lot of bass that are hooked on the outside of the mouth rather than on the inside."

Eaker also advises fishermen to check the hooks on their plugs after a hard day of fishing around heavy cover.

"Those hooks need to be sharpened and straightened, or replaced entirely," says Eaker. "Nearly all tackle stores sell replacement hooks and now some small kits containing different sizes of hooks are even available.

"Dull or broken hooks really should never be an excuse for losing fish."

Bye, Braves

Thanks, congratulations, see you next year

By Hank Aaron
PM Editorial Services

Despite their seventh-game loss to Toronto in the World Series, the 1992 Atlanta Braves proved this year that their success of last seaon was far from a fluke.

Forgive me my personal pride in the success of the Atlanta Braves. Over the years, I have watched players like Tom Glavine and Ron Gant struggle in the minor leagues before finally building the confidence and abilities necessary to make it big in the majors.

Aside from pitching, hitting and defense, the 1992 Atlanta Braves were blessed with one other game-breaking weapon—team speed. For the Braves, a player like Otis Nixon or Deion Sanders can disrupt a pitcher's carefully practiced routine and make him throw a fat fastball right over the heart of the plate.

The Braves remind many people of the 1969 "Miracle Mets." That team beat Atlanta in the first-ever National League divisional playoff, before dispatching the favored Baltimore Orioles in the World Series.

I also believe the Braves will be a team to be reckoned with for years to come. Their pitching staff is very young. John Smoltz is only 25. Steve Avery is just a baby at 22 years old. The team has several solid stars in Gant, David Justice and last year's Most Valuable Player, Terry Pendleton. There is no limit to these players' futures, and any of them could develop into a superstar.

COMMENTARY

Don't lose heart with this team — they went from last place two years ago to first in their division the last two years in a row.

Injuries and contract disputes can ruin any team. But when you look at the talent in the Braves' minor-league system, this team is going to be a winner for a long time to come.

Editor's Note: Hank Aaron is the top home-run hitter of all time with 755 homers. A member of baseball's Hall of Fame, Aaron is senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves.

PET OF THE WEEK

This female chow-mix puppy (age 7-8 weeks) is looking for a home. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

29th hosts Saudi soldiers

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment hosted guests from Saudi Arabia at the Gen. J. Lawton Collins Training Center and Red Cloud Range Oct. 20.

The guests were Brig. Gen. Saror Bin Mohamed Al-Harbe, commander of Saudi Arabia's 4th Armor Brigade, and eight other officers from Saudi Arabia representing infantry, armor and aviation units.

The officers made a stop at Fort Benning as part of a U.S. tour of several Army installations, including Fort Carson, Colo.; Fort Stewart, Ga.; and Fort Irwin, Calif., home of the National Training Center.

Army Lt. Col. Roger Colombana, the adviser from the Infantry Corps Headquarters of the Royal Saudi Land Forces and escort to the guests, explained that while visiting the installations, they will be shown different facets of training for soldiers in the U.S. Army.

Round-table discussions were conducted about Bradley Fighting Vehicle training and doctrine while at the Collins Training Center.

Hands-on demonstrations and briefings were held on the unit conduct of fire trainer, which is designed to train Bradley crews on engagement techniques and covers many different combat situations .

Following this, the guests were shown the precision gunnery system.

"This system is a much improved training system over the current multiple integrated laser engagement system now widely used," said Sgt. 1st Class Spillman Maxwell of the Bradley Instructor Company.

The group was also given an opportunity to drive the Bradley Fighting Vehicle as a cap to the briefings at the Collins Training Center.

After lunch, the officers were guests of Company A, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment at Red Cloud Range.

At the range, the guests viewed a capabilities exercise that included the M-2A2 Bradley Fighting Vehicle with dismounted section and the M-1A1 main battle tank.

Soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment demonstrated the weapons systems firing capabilities. Several of the visitors fired the Bradley Fighting Vehicle turret weapons systems following the formal demonstration.

Pfc. Scott Eustice, Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment gets promoted to specialist by his commander, Capt. Timothy Loudermilk and his platoon leader, 1st Lt. Joe Dixon following a capabilities exercise at Red Cloud Range Oct. 20 for distinguished visiters from Saudi Arabia.

1/29's 100th soldier finishes Airborne School

By Phil Mandile
29th Infantry Regiment

The 100th soldier from 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment to graduate from Airborne School in fiscal 1992 received his wings Oct. 16.

The distinction went to Sgt. Richard McBride of Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment also had two other soldiers among the graduates from Airborne School that day.

They are Sgts. Marvin Watson and Adam Weber, both from Company D.

The Silver Wings opened the graduation ceremony with a free-fall demonstration.

Following the invocation from 1st Sgt. Willie C. Peoples Jr., the stick leaders were instructed to present airborne wings to the soldiers.

At this time, family members were given the opportunity to pin on airborne wings.

The guest speaker for the graduation was Lt. Col. Robert L. Jordan Jr., chief of Tactics of the Combined Arms and Tactics Division.

Jordan said much would be expected from those who were given much. His advice to the graduates was to emulate the actions of their instructors, the "Black Hats."

Lt. Col. Robert M. Leon Jr., commander of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was on hand to congratulate the soldiers in his command.

50 years ago this week

• In North Africa, units participating in Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery's Supercharge Operation at El Alamein sustained heavy casualties, but forced Field Marshal Erwin Rommel to signal Adolf Hitler and concede defeat due to crippling shortages of fuel and ammunition. Rommel then withdrew, allowing the Allied forces to capture 30,000 prisoners, 1,000 guns and the remains of 450 tanks. British losses for the operation totalled 13,500 killed or wounded and 150 tanks destroyed with an additional 300 damaged.

• On Guadalcanal, U.S. forces overcame a heavily resupplied Japanese force to advance, albeit slowly, after inflicting casualties significant enough to force an enemy withdrawal. Additionally, a Japanese landing, attempted east of the American perimeter, at Koli Point, failed after U.S. reinforcements arrived from the west.

• In London, the Cabinet Anti-U-Boat Warfare Committee held its first meeting.

The committee brought together the Allied service chiefs as well as important scientists to coordinate efforts and formulate plans for defeating the menacing German U-Boat threat.

Paratrooper dies

Army's first airborne soldier, organizer of Airborne School leaves legacy

By Michele R. Hammonds
Fort Bragg Public Affairs Office

Retired Brig. Gen. William Thomas Ryder, the Army's first airborne jumper and pioneer died Oct. 1.

Ryder commanded the U.S. Army Parachute Test Platoon in 1940.

Ryder, a lieutenant then, and 48 enlisted men were selected for special duty as the Parachute Test Platoon, said John Ward a member of the original Test Platoon. Ryder was assigned to Benning's Infantry Board in 1940 and served as a test officer.

"Ryder was the platoon leader of the test platoon," Ward said. "He was a firm leader and demanded full training and support from everybody in the platoon. We were the guinea pigs to test to see if it was feasible to jump into combat with our weapons."

Ryder and his men received their airborne training from the Army Air Force, said Ward.

"They came over to instruct us on the techniques of packing and maintaining parachutes," he said. "We were required to pack our own parachutes back then. They didn't have riggers to pack our chutes."

Ryder and his men went through weeks of physical training, Ward said.

"We developed our own physical training. We jumped from platforms and moving vehicles to assimilate wind drifts and made our landing falls," Ward said. "We did thousands of push-ups and assimilated parachute landing falls off platforms. The platoon jumped from the 250-foot tower that was used in the World's Fair in 1938."

On Aug. 14, 1940, Army officials came down to view the mass jump of the test platoon. Ryder was the first man out the door of a Douglas B-18 aircraft to jump at Lawson Army Air Field at Fort Benning, Ward said.

"He jumped first and came back down and talked to us. Then we loaded up and jumped. The Test Platoon jumped from three cargo planes to include a B-18 Bomber and C-33 and C-39 cargo planes at 1,500 feet," Ward said.

Later Ryder organized and commanded the Army Airborne School at Fort Benning.

IOBC light infantry platoons ambush mechanized infantry

By Chris McManus
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

The enemy approaches a well prepared defense that is ready for its first test. The light infantry platoons are ready to ambush the mechanized enemy, while dug-in Bradley Fighting Vehicles are waiting to stop the enemy advance.

This is Class 8-92 of the Infantry Officer Basic Course training on defensive tactics and techniques from Oct. 13 to 17.

Second Lt. Brian McCarver learned that defensive preparation is a leader intensive exercise.

The training was organized so every platoon of students would prepare a light infantry defense and a mechanized infantry defense.

Leadership positions within the platoon also rotated so students had a chance to be in charge and learn the role of a leader in the defense.

"The defensive scenarios given to us challenged us to be creative and thoughtful when planning," said 2nd Lt. Chris Rogers.

Second Lt. Wesley Otken said he enjoyed working with the Bradley Fighting Vehicle because his first assignment is with a Bradley unit. Second Lt. Glenn Roe said he found the attached Bradleys to be a great asset in learning about their capabilities and limitations.

Officers get taste of combat

By Conan L. Schafer
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

Newly commissioned second lieutenants got a taste of what combat could be like as they played out a platoon attack battle drill in the forests of Fort Benning.

Company D, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment completed its eighth week of training with a live-fire exercise, bringing together all that the soldiers had learned to that point at Infantry Officer Basic Course.

The last seven weeks have been characterized by "demanding training that has so far been physically and mentally challenging," according to 2nd Lt. Jason Orlich.

Transition week is a seven-day exercise, two days in the classroom and five days in the field.

The two days of class instruction set the stage for the Situational Training Exercise.

Each lieutenant was required to write a platoon-level, movement-to-contact, operations order and execute it on the live-fire exercise.

As the members of Class 9-92 moved ahead with the exercise, they performed the squad and platoon attack drills, honing their skills on how to react to contact and indirect fire, using various movement techniques.

All tasks were performed during the day and night.

Students performed the first half of their training using blank ammunition, sharpening needed skills to accomplish the mission.

The second half of the mission was a live-fire exercise of the same scenario. Realism of combat was dramatically increased as the lieutenants focused their attention and concentration during this portion of the mission.

According to Capt. Sam J. Knapp, one of Company D's platoon cadre, the movement and security STX is one of the toughest of IOBC.

"It establishes the tone and sets the standard for all remaining exercises at IOBC," he said.

On the final day of transition week, the students were sent out to conduct an advanced land navigation course.

"The knowledge gained through practical application during the movement and security STX, combined with the advanced land navigation skills, will aid the new lieutenants as they prepare for their future assignments as platoon leaders," said Knapp

Patricia Bergen

IOBC students discuss an objective during transition week.

Post names top disabled worker

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Fort Benning named its Disabled Person of the Year Oct. 22 at the monthly civilian awards luncheon.

Terri Bradley Bass, a six-year civil service employee who is a data transcriber for the Maintenance Division of the Directorate of Logistics, won the honor over about 14 other employees who competed for the title.

Though hearing-impaired since birth, she is not hindered in entering work load data into the computer, doing electronic filing or even communicating with customers, according to her supervisor, Audrey Walker.

Ann Wright, chief of Production, Planning and Control, said that Bass is independent, corrects errors and doesn't allow a person to leave until she is sure she has been understood.

"Her data is critical in reporting to the Training and Doctrine Command," Wright said, "so communication is im-portant for accuracy."

Bass

Bass was one of five children born into a military family in the Columbus area. Her mother developed German measles while pregnant, and thus Bass was born with a hearing disability.

Bass began her education at North Carolina School for the Deaf. After returning to Columbus following her father's death, she attended Key Elementary, Talbotton Road Junior High and Jordan Vocational High School with the help of interpreters.

She graduated with honors and went on to the Columbus Area Technical School where she studied business, taking classes in data processing, math, filing, etc.

In 1985, Bass came to work as a data transcriber for the Directorate of Public Works. She began her position with the Directorate of Logistics in 1988.

A telecommunications device attached to her work phone about a year ago has allowed her an even greater degree of independence.

Yet she's been known to remark to Wright when the office has been empty for a time that "it's too quiet back here."

Five years ago she married her husband, Arthur, after meeting him in church. They now have a 13-month-old son, Arthur Jr.

Wright said that Bass is capable of producing a large volume of work without sacrificing quality.

"Her enthusiasm and dedication can and should be emulated by all employees," Wright said.

Columbus salutes disabled Benning worker

Fort Benning was well-represented Oct. 22 at an awards luncheon hosted by the Columbus Mayor's Committee for Persons with Disabilities at the Iron Works Convention and Trade Center.

Receiving the award for the Disabled Employee of the Year was Bartholomew Gardner, a deaf laborer in the Maintenance Section, Hotel Business Management Branch for the Housing Division of the Directorate of Public Works.

According to Mildred Watts, Fort Benning program manager for Persons with Disabilities, Gardner was chosen after his nomination with documentation of his work performance was reviewed by the Mayor's Committee, as were nominations from other local employers.

Barnett

Also, accepting the award for Fort Benning beng the largest employer of the disabled in the community was Col. Gary Jones, garrison commander. This was the 12th time that the post was recognized with this honor.

Columbus Mayor Frank Martin made the presentations.

Offering the welcome and presenting the appreciation awards was another post representative, Margaret Kambitz, chairwoman of the Mayor's Committee for Persons with Disabilities and Fort Benning's 1991 Disabled Person of the Year. She works at the U.S. Army Infantry Training Brigade at Sand Hill.

On hand as well was Patricia Barnett, 1992 Ms. Wheelchair Georgia and a medical clerk at Martin Army Community Hospital.

The ceremony was in conjunction with the observance of October as National Disability Awareness Month. Every year since 1945, the President of the United States has issued a proclamation in support of this observance.

DPW deaf employee overcomes many obstacles

A Fort Benning employee was named the 1992 Disabled Employee of the Year at an awards luncheon hosted by the Columbus Mayor's Committee for Persons with Disabilities.

Bartholomew Gardner, who works in the Maintenance Section, Hotel Business Management Branch of the Directorate of Public Works, was nominated by his supervisor, Mike Childs.

Hearing-impaired since birth, Gardner attended the Listening Eye School of Columbus, has mastered sign language techniques and reads lips fluently. He has been employed with civil service since 1986.

He also attended the Columbus Technical Institute and earned a diploma in cabinet-making and wood-working.

"(Because of) Gardner's inability to hear, his other senses are sharpened, and he uses them to his advantage in performing all tasks," Childs said.

He added that no special adjustments had to be made for Gardner, and no special treatment is needed.

Working with other hearing-impaired people within his church and community, he has given insight into the unlimited ability of the hearing-impaired.

"Because of his efforts and ability, we see the hearing-impaired as very creditable employees," Childs said.

Gardner, 28, is responsible for moving furniture items in and out of troop quarters and is also tasked with assisting maintenance personnel in renovating apartments, lounges and laundry rooms.

"His willingness and ability to accomplish any task in record time is exemplary," Childs said. "His personal work standards are extremely high, and his constant efforts to excel, along with his positive attitude, has encouraged his co-workers to increase their productivity and improved morale."

Single, Gardner enjoys working out in the gym, long-distance running and watching sports on television. His favorite teams are the Los Angeles Lakers, the San Francisco 49'ers and the Chicago Bears.

29th gives $$$ to Santa's Castle

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The noncommissioned officers of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment held a dining in Sept. 26.

Command Sgt. Major Riley Miller of 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment said the dining in was the first conducted in many years.

"This event was designed to raise morale and develop esprit de corps among the NCOs, and was also a fund-raising event for Santa's Castle," said Miller.

"Mr. Vice," an NCO selected to be in charge of running the dining in, assessing fines for uniform violations and other deficiencies, charged fines totaling approximately $60.

During the event, an additional $100 was donated by the noncommissioned officers.

The unit presented a total donation of $160.95 to Santa's Castle Oct. 20. The donations will be used for various Christmas activities for children at Fort Benning.

Employees catch Riverside in 3-D photos

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Two civil service employees, Randy and Linda Johnson, recently presented several matted three-dimensional photographs of Riverside, home of the Fort Benning commanding general's family, to one of its current residents, Linda White, wife of Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White.

The photos of Riverside, inside and out, were put together as a gift for the Whites to remember Fort Benning by, according to Mrs. Johnson.

A national historic home, Riverside received its name from the Arthur Bussey family, who in 1909 bought the plantation on which it stood, adjoining the Chattahoochee, from Martha Hatcher, wife of Benjamin Hatcher, owners after the Civil War.

Prior to this, it had been part of an even larger estate called the Cusseta Plantation, originally purchased by Col. John Woolfolk in 1827 and 1828.

However, it was the Busseys who moved an old meeting house on Lumpkin Road through a grove of trees to form the nucleus of the Riverside "big house."

Bussey added two kitchens, a bathroom of the "bowl and pitcher" type and upstairs bedrooms and porches. The completed home had two parlors and a dining room.

A rarity in those days was the running water system. From a pond at the foot of a hill about a mile away, water was pumped by a ram to a tower and then piped into the house.

After Bussey's improvements, Riverside Plantation was one of the last great self-supporting agricultural projects of the plantation system in western Georgia.

Riverside made the transition from a family summer home to military quarters soon after The Infantry School was moved from Fort Sill, Okla., to Columbus in 1918. A camp named for Confederate Gen. Henry Lewis Benning had first been established on Macon Road, and then moved to its present location and designated as Fort Benning.

In July 1971, the home was added to the National Register of Historic Sites. Extensive renovation in 1983 further insured the preservation of Riverside, which now has five bedrooms, three baths, central heating and air conditioning.

When coming to Fort Benning in 1990, Mrs. White saw to some simple refurbishing of the residence — taking down old wallpaper and repainting an off-white on the interior walls that will be versatile for future residents and gives the structure a large, open, airy look.

Furniture in two rooms, the formal dining room and one parlor, belong to the Army, Mrs. White said. All the other pieces belong to her family.

The Whites have been very open about having guests tour the house that is their home on post. The last volunteer recognition event and an Easter egg hunt were held at Riverside.

"This is our home. We can relax here," Mrs. White said, "but I don't mind showing it and sharing it with others."

MPA to begin explorer post

Post youth to learn about law enforcement, build leadership abilities

Military Police Activity

A new law enforcement Explorer Post will begin the second week in November. It is being sponsored by the Military Police Activity, according to Maj. Terry R. Driskill, program coordinator.

Young people interested in leadership and practical law enforcement skills will have a chance to learn both in a challenging and fun environment, Driskill said.

The post is open to all young men and women between the ages of 14 and 21.

The post will provide training in the areas of career opportunities, criminal justice, marksmanship, adventure training and leadership.

The Explorers will elect their own leaders, who will manage the post with the assistance of adult advisers.

The many facilities and assistance from highly-qualified personnel at Fort Benning will make the program an exciting way to prepare the Explorers for future careers, said Driskill.

The group will meet once a week at Fort Benning. Additional training and travel opportunities will be offered at other times throughout the year.

During meetings, the Explorers will conduct post business with professional law enforcement or public safety officers.

Trips will be to off-site training facilities or points of interest.

The post will ensure that costs are minimal and well within the means of every member, Driskill said.

Those interested should contact Driskill at 545-5741 during duty hours or 685-2072 after duty hours for more information.

Girl Scouts to gather Saturday

Concharty Council of Girl Scouts

The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts is organizing a renewal of the Order of the Silver Trefoil Saturday during a coffee from 10 a.m. to noon at the Girl Scout Little House Program Center in Columbus.

The day marks the birthday of Girl Scout founder Juliette Gordon Low.

All adults with 10 or more years as a registered Girl Scout are invited to attend.

The Order of the Silver Trefoil is an organized group of Girl Scout adults who serve as a positive force for Girl Scouting in the local council, officials said. The Concharty Council of Girl Scouts has been a chartered chapter of the Order of the Silver Trefoil since 1982.

At the coffee, Girl Scout adults will be encouraged to share their Girl Scout adventures, memories and traditions.

For more information, contact Aletta Eldridge-Thompson at 327-5536.

FYI

Beware of credit cards

Credit offers may cause trouble for consumers

Better Business Bureau

Have you received a credit card offer, not from a bank, but from a telephone or appliance company or car manufacturer?

These nonbank cards may offer good interest rates and other appealing incentives, but as with any credit card offer, take the time to read the offer carefully before making a decision.

First, look at the annual percentage rate. It may appear to be low, for instance, 14 to 16 percent, compared to the 18 to 21 percent rates charged on other credit cards you may hold.

However, by reading the fine print you may find that the APR is variable. This means the APR could fluctuate depending on the prime lending rate, which is the interest rate banks charge on business loans to their best corporate customers. It's quite possible that the rate will only increase, since the prime rate is at its lowest point in years.

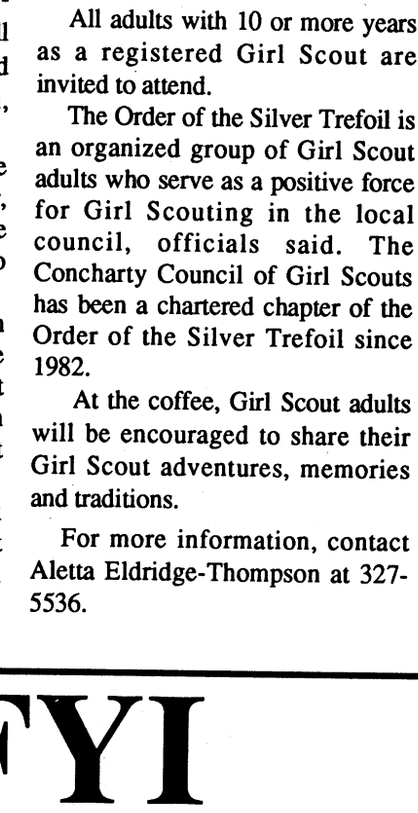
Next, find out if there is an annual fee and a grace period. The grace period, which may range from zero to 30 days, determines when finance charges will be added to your account.

For example, if the grace period is seven days, finance charges will begin to accumulate one week after you've made your purchase, even if you haven't received your monthly statement.

When evaluating credit card offers, consider your bill-paying habits. If you faithfully pay off your credit card balance each month, the grace period and APR are not that important, but the annual fee is. However, if you carry a balance from month to month, choose a card with a longer grace period as well as a lower APR.

As for the incentives that are offered in conjunction with nonbank cards, such as rebates and discounts on the companies' products and services, consider whether you will use them.

Even if you plan to take advantage of the incentives, you still may save more money in the long run with a card with a lower APR or longer grace period.



Holiday shopping can be made easier

Better Business Bureau

The Better Business Bureau offers the following tips to take the hassle out of holiday shopping and help you keep your good cheer from turning to the blues when bills start to arrive in January.

Before you even walk out the door, set a specific, realistic budget. Ask yourself what can you afford to spend on all your holiday shopping. Next, identify two to three alternative gift ideas for each person on your shopping list, and calculate whether all those purchases will exceed your budget.

If so, re-think your ideas. This exercise may seem obvious and unnecessary, but it can help you avoid buying on impulse gifts that are inappropriate or too expensive. Also, compare prices and shop carefully, as you would throughout the year. Read catalogs and advertisements to compare prices on the same or similar merchandise to determine whether a holiday sale price is really a bargain.

Before making a purchase, ask about a merchant's refund and exchange policy. While most stores will exchange merchandise that is not defective, but may be the wrong size or color, they are under no obligation to do so. To make the refund or exchange process easier be sure to save all receipts and hang tags.

If you are buying gifts by mail, always pay by credit card, check or money order and keep a record of your purchase, including the name and address of the company and the date you placed the order. Be sure to order in plenty of time for the holidays by checking cut-off dates for delivery.

Some companies may ship up to the last minute if you agree to pay the extra delivery charges, but if your order is not in stock you'll be scrambling for a last-minute substitute. If the company's return policy is not stated, ask before you order. And remember, you will probably have to pay shipping on merchandise you must return.

When buying gifts for children, consider their age and ability level when selecting toys. While many manufacturers list age recommendations on toy packages, also use your own judgment and inspect toys carefully.

Look for toys that are solidly built, made of non-toxic materials and have protective edges or tips. For infants and toddlers, avoid toys with long strings or cords that could cause strangulation or toys with detachable parts that could be swallowed.

Microwave treats are quick, easy, delicious

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Halloween party treat recipes were part of the handouts at the Halloween Safety Carnival at Custer Terrace Community Life Office.

Dana Pund, Custer Terrace vice mayor, said these should only be used for home parties because most parents will throw out any homemade goodies their children bring home from trick or treating.

Microwave Candy

Caramel Apples

- 8 apples
- 14-ounce package unwrapped caramels.

In small bowl, place half of package of unwrapped caramels with one tablespoon water. Microwave on high three minutes. Stir until smooth. Insert wooden sticks into stem ends of four apples, dip in caramel. Repeat for remaining four apples.

Peanut Brittle

-1 cup sugar
-1/2 cup white corn syrup
-1 cup roasted salted peanuts
-1 teaspoon butter
-1 teaspoon vanilla extract
-1 teaspoon baking soda.

Stir sugar and syrup together in two-quart casserole. Microwave on high four minutes. Stir in peanuts. Microwave on high for three to five minutes until light brown. Add butter and vanilla, blend well and microwave on high one to two minutes. Add baking soda and stir until light and foamy. Pour mixture onto lightly greased cookie sheet. Cool one hour and break into small pieces. Store in airtight container. Makes about one pound.

Chocolate Pops

- Plastic Halloween candy molds
- 3 pounds milk chocolate morsels, candy-making wafers.

Pour small portion of chocolate into bowl or glass measuring container. Microwave on medium two minutes or until melted. Stir chocolate until liquid consistency. Pour into candy molds, place candy sticks in base. Place in freezer for five minutes while you melt the next portion in the microwave. Remove from freezer, pop candy out of molds and store in refrigerator. Each pound yields 12 to 20 pops, depending on the size of the candy molds. Individually wrap pops for best results.

Message of reform is faith

By Robert Helton
USAIC Chaplains' Office

On the eve of All Saints Day at noon Oct. 13, 1517, a rather obscure monk and professor at the University of Wittenburg posted 95 theses for debate on the door of the castle church.

This door served as a bulletin board for faculty and students at the university. Little did he realize it would become a worldwide debate that would change the shape and place of the church in the world.

The invitation to debate began with: "Out of love and zeal for truth and the desire to bring it to the light, the following thesis will be publicly discussed."

Most of the document discussed how a Christian receives repentance. For example, he said: "When our lord and master Jesus Christ said, 'Repent' (Matt. 4:17), "he willed the entire life of believers to be one of repentance."

This does not mean solely inner repentance. Such inner repentance is worthless unless it produces various outward mortifications of the flesh.

Luther opposed, as the entire church does today, the idea that a petty religious act performed by a believer can set one straight with God. It is God alone, because of his unbounded love, who can grant forgiveness.

Christians experience this grace solely through faith in God and its effects are life-changing.

This theme is echoed throughout the ages. Abraham was declared righteous because he believed. David was faithful because he knew God went with him. Saul became Paul because God changed him.

REFLECTIONS

The message rings true in the works of a 19th century hymn, "No merit of our own we claim, but wholly lean on Jesus' name."

Today people talk about allowing God to be at the center of their lives. Assessments of Martin Luther vary widely depending on the stance of the assessor.

To Pope Leo X, he was a stiff-necked, notorious, damned heretic; to Philip Melanchton and many of his contemporaries, a second Elijah, a new Paul; to Goethe, he was a genius and to Nietszche, a vulgar peasant.

Luther regarded himself as a tool in the hand of God. As such, his message was to return to the central truth of the scriptures. It is God who redeems and reforms man.

On the eve of All Saints Day, which is Reformation Day and also Halloween, do some good old-fashioned soul searching.

How is your relationship with God? Is he at the center of your life or is your life centered around your own selfish motives and desires? Does the devil or the desires of the flesh control you or have you surrendered your life to God?

The central truth of the Reformation remains the same today as forever. God calls man to turn away from sin, to resist the devil and all his empty promises, to live and grow in his never-failing love, or in words borrowed by the infantry, to deny yourself and "follow me."

Service set to inspire

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Do you need some inspiration?

Do you feel like you have been in a dry place and need to be revived?

Shelly Harris of the Gate of Life Church in Columbus will minister in song at the charismatic prayer and praise service Sunday from 6 to 7:30 p.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel.

Harris has sung for the James Robison Evangelistic Association, with Sandi Patti, the Gaither Vocal Band and Ray Boltz.

She is the founder of a music school, has a full-time traveling ministry and performs as professional vocalist.

The event will be free of charge, and baby-sitting will be available.

For more information, call John Houser at 544-2511 or James Rayburn at 545-1760.

Glenn Bannermann, a recreational leader, will cnduct workshops for leaders and youth, as well as a family night Nov. 13 to 15.
For more information, call Bill Putman at 545-2366.

All Saints' Day honors the (extra)ordinary

By Orlando R. Fuller
324th Forward Support Battalion

There are two kinds of saints — the saint with a capital "S," and the saint with a small "s."

The former refers to those holy men and women canonized by the church because of their heroic virtues. The latter refers to anyone whose life story is ordinary or unknown, and yet merited eternal life for leading a holy life.

Every canonized saint has a designated feast day (memorial), usually held on the day of his or her death, which is considered to be the time when he or she was born into eternal life.

How about those saints with a small "s?" Don't they deserve to be commemorated as well, at least as a group?

This is the rationale for All Saints' Day. The church set aside one day in the liturgical year — Nov. 1 — to honor them, to rejoice with them.

It originated in a fourth century Eastern feast of all martyrs. Pope Gregory VI later established their commemoration in 884 for all the Roman Church.

Is this comemoration necessary? The church is teaching that people do not have to be extraordinary to be great; they can be great by being ordinary.

People often lose sight of this in this messy life. This commemoration gives hope to ordinary people that one day this feast may be theirs, too.

CHAPEL NOTES

PWOC — The Protestant Women of the Chapel will have a monthly general meeting Thursday from 9:30 to 11:45 a.m. in Building 2521.

Meredith Baxter returns as murderous Betty Broderick

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

In television, you can't keep a fascinating character down ... even if she's been convicted for the murders of her ex-spouse and his second wife.

SPOTLIGHT

Last March, "Family Ties" alumna Meredith Baxter earned some of the highest ratings and best reviews of her career — culminating in an Emmy nomination — for her TV-movie portrayal of the real-life Elisabeth "Betty" Broderick, a San Diego woman who reacted drastically to being left by her prominent lawyer husband, harassing him and relentlessly attempting to turn their four children and everyone else against him. Finally, she entered the bedroom where he was sleeping with his new mate and shot them dead. That moment marks the point where Sunday's new CBS sequel "Her Final Fury: The Betty Broderick Story, Part II" picks up, with Baxter reprising the role as the arrested Broderick awaits what became two separate trials, both prosecuted by the same district attorney (played by current "Designing Women" regular Judith Ivey). Following a hung jury in the first trial, Broderick eventually was convicted on two counts of second-degree murder, though she consistently justified her actions by claiming emotional abuse. Producer-director Dick Lowry, writer Joe Cacaci and producers Kenneth Kaufman, Tom Patchett and Ann Kindberg also repeat their jobs from last season's film; additional cast members include Ray Baker as Broderick's defense lawyer, and Kelli Williams as her eldest daughter, whose testimony was critical to the resulting verdict. (The opening scene includes brief appearances by Stephen Collins and Michelle Johnson, who played the homicide victims initially.)

Meredith Baxter

Baxter asserts that in the second "Betty Broderick Story," the acting challenge was greater, since "There was an arc to the first one, and this is much more linear in where it goes. She's already reached her peak (in dramatic terms), so this is about maintaining it and seeing where it takes her in the limited arena she's now in." Still, that "arena" provides the setting for a new fight, since the ferociously independent-minded Broderick is shown engaging in an ongoing battle of wills with a prison guard determined to make her adhere to the facility's rules. "I felt that Betty herself created the arc in the first film," Baxter reasons, "but in the second one, the circumstances created it. I had a harder time seeing where I was going, since I wasn't really part of (fueling) it." Ultimately, Baxter kept her approach to playing Broderick basically the same, primarily in showing no remorse for the killings.

"That's what's so scary about her," the actress says. "I felt that one of the strongest parts of this, certainly in reading all of the transcripts from both the first and second trials, is when a psychiatrist took the stand and identified (Broderick) as having all nine of the characteristics attributable to narcissistic behavior. It's the total inability to see anybody else's point of view but your own, a lack of empathy that's so revealing about her personality, you're able to see how she was able to do the things she proceeded to do. Her only sense of remorse comes out of embarrassment for herself." While agreeing that Broderick is a showcase part for any actress, Baxter adds that she originally wasn't sure she wanted to tackle it again. "It crossed my mind that once was enough," she admits, "and there's always the feeling that if you do something a second time, it'll always be compared to the first. Maybe that's unavoidable. To me, the job is to find the contradictions in (characters) and still make them the human beings that we all are. We all run counter to ourselves and our desires sometimes, but that's just the complexity of our make-up, and that's what I love to find."

According to Baxter, no one had counted on a "Betty Broderick" sequel while the original film was being made late last year, prior to the actual courtroom outcome. "There had been talk about going on with the story through the trial," she recalls, "but I

Single, dual-soldier families adding to DoD's child-care need

Army families are changing. In growing numbers of families, single parents or both parents must work and the changes are adding to the demand for safe, affordable child care.

Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Armed Forces Digest reports that the Department of Defense has sent a report to Congress detailing this demand among military and DoD civilian families and its ideas for meeting it.

During Desert Storm, some commanders were given a choice between a staff officer with Combined Arms Services Staff School experience and an officer without it — they chose the Combined Arms and Service Staff

Westville takes visitors back in time

Westville

To experience life as it was in the fall of 1850, there is no better time or place than at the "Fair of 1850" in Westville, the museum village near Lumpkin, Ga.

Through Nov. 15, there will be special demonstrations and events planned to show life as it was 142 years ago.

There will be demonstrations of black-smithing, quilting, pottery-making, wood-working, candle-dipping, leather crafts, spinning and weaving. George and Kathleen Weldon will have special demonstrations of musical instruments from the time period. On Nov. 7, from 10 a.m to 5 p.m., the Stewart County Historical Commission will sponsor "The Heritage Days Traditional Crafts Fair" at Westville, and the Stewart County Chamber of Commerce will sponsor a "Wildgame and Fish Cook-off" at the Stewart County Campground on the south side of the village.

Tickets may be purchased at Westville for all three events. Westville is located on South Mulberry Street, one-half mile from the Lumpkin town square.

Special event hours are Monday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. Regular village hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Westville is closed on Thanksgiving, Christmas, and New Year's Days and Jan. 4 to 8.

For more information, write: Westville, P.O. Box 1850, Lumpkin, Ga. 31815 or call (912) 838-6310.

REVIEW

By Va Ebron
Special to The Bayonet

The Pulitzer Prize-winning musical, "A Chorus Line" has become a part of the State Theater of Georgia's artistic history at the Springer Opera House.

Thanks to a generous grant from the Georgia Council for the Arts through appropriations from the Georgia General Assembly and the National Endowment for the Arts, Columbus gets another first-rate and long-running musical production.

"A Chorus Line" is a thought-provoking musical that says, "We are people. We are human. We see, smell, taste and feel; but, most of all, as humans we think. And the way we think can be influenced by others."

Witness Zack and his former lover, Cassie, and how their feelings and thoughts about each other affect their current lives.

The musical also reflects the way people are shaped by their experiences and by other people's perceptions of them. The dance captain, Mike, was branded "Stinky" because of one small slip.

Then there is Val, who because of her looks, was rejected for parts. Other people's view of her influenced her to change her looks — in two particular areas. This resulted in changing the view of those in power so that she was able to get work. It also changed her view of herself.

Next in the musical's parade of human foibles is a young couple. The husband called the wife a ding-a-ling and saw her as inadequate, while she accepted his name-calling and felt she was the cause of the problem.

"A Chorus Line" focuses on differences, and it questions people's attitudes toward other's appearances, age, sexuality, etc.

All in all, "A Chorus Line" is a musical that gives the audience a look behind the scenes at the audition that is life.

The Springer production of the musical was excellent, although a bit slow-paced in the beginning and with spicy language. The director, cast, production staff and volunteers are all to be commended. It was good to see veterans of "42nd Street" on stage again practicing their craft.

The musicians also are to be commended, though they did their jobs so well the people in the front seats had difficulty hearing the actors over the music.

For those of us in the back, though, the music sounded great.

Georgia shows off for visitors

Presidential Pathways

Travel retailers from more than 10 countries will visit the Presidential Pathways region.

"World View '90s" will be through Saturday, and it is the third tour in a series designed to inform the world about Georgia well in advance of the 1996 Olympic Games.

The participants will arrive in Atlanta and then will separate into groups, one of which will visit the Presidential Pathways.

The visitors will experience a mix of American history and natural beauty. The tour will include a visit to the Little White House, which was a retreat for Franklin Roosevelt; a tour of Warm Springs, a village filled with shops and restaurants; an excursion to Pine Mountain Animal Park; and a two-night stay at Callaway Gardens, where they will have the option to bicycle, golf, shop, ride horses, roam the gardens or just relax.

After touring the region, the group will return to Atlanta for an in-depth look at the city before returning home.

"We're very pleased to have the opportunity to show off the state," said Hanna Ledford, deputy commissioner of Tourism. "Georgia is looking forward to the Olympics with an eye to the numbers of visitors who will be travelling around the state before, during and after the Games."

Europeans and Japanese in particular rely heavily on retailers when booking their vacation travel, Ledford said.

The entire process of tours will be repeated yearly through 1995, all in preparation for the influx of visitors to the state as a result of the Olympic Games.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Diamond jubilee — The Modern Free and Accepted Masons of the World Inc. will celebrate its 75th Diamond Birthday Gospel Jubilee at 8 p.m. Nov. 6 at the Columbus Municipal Auditorium.

Featured on the program will be the Freeman Sisters, Gospel Messengers, the You-Can Choir and the Wings of Faith.

Donations will be $6 in advance or $8 at the door. For more information, call 322-3638.

Veterans Day — New Heritage USA will host a Veterans Day celebration Nov. 13 through 15 at Fort Mill, S.C.

Events will include musical presentations by vocalist Earl Harrigan, a seminar titled, "Christians in the Military" and displays of military equipment as well as a "Ranger Combat Readiness" demonstration.

Special rates are available for weekend or Saturday night packages. There is an additional charge for banquet attendance.

For reservations, call (803) 548-7800. For more information, call Nicole Messer at (803) 547-8124

Card tournament — A spades tournament is each Sunday at 2 p.m for beginners or advanced players at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

Other activities available at the center include pool, pingpong, darts and movies. Table games and 41 Nintendo games are on hand.

For more information, call Kelley Hill Recreation Center Wednesday through Sunday from noon until 9 p.m. at 544-3079.

Bluegrass jam session — A bluegrass jam session will be the last Sunday of every month at the Uchee Creek Lodge on post. The sessions are open to anyone who wants to play, sing or listen and will begin at 2 p.m.

Donations of $2 per person older than 16 years will be accepted to help pay the rent.

For more information, call Bonnie Tyer at 298-4870.

Springer Opera House seeks playwrights

Unknown writers get chance for exposure at Ga. state theater

Springer Opera House

The Springer Opera House is once again seeking the emerging playwrights of the Southeastern region as It accepts playscripts for the 1993 Deep South New Play Contest. The competition is now in its third year.

The winning playwright recieves a $500 cash award but the real benefit comes from actually having the play produced as the third show in the Springer's 92-93 Studio Series, scheduled for a June 10 opening.

"The long road to shepherding a new play into the commercial arena starts with getting the script produced," said Paul R. Pierce, Springer managing artistic director. "That's the hardest thing about managing a writing career for the theater. And yet, we have to recognize that these unknown writers are the life blood of our art and that unless we encourage them, there is no future for American theater.

"Although the Springer has to produce popular theater to survive, it is also our duty to be an incubator for new work and to provide a venue for the struggling playwright who may be the next Eugene O'Neill or Tennessee Williams," he said.

Even the second and third-place winners of the contest will get a modest boost. Second place brings a $200 cash prize and a staged reading of that play, and the third-place winner will receive $100 and a staged reading as well.

So far, the contest has enjoyed significant success in the past two years. The 1991 winner, Rafael Blanco's "The Fall of 1991," gained the Miami playwright a subsequent production at the Carrousel Theater in Coconut Grove and is now being considered for an Off-Broadway production.

That year's second-place winner, Bric Barker's "Turn In Your Hymnals" was produced, after its Springer staged reading, as the first show for the Human Experience Theater. The Springer chose Ned Campbell's children's play, "Belinda Braveheart and Billy Barnstorm" as its winner last year and has selected the third-place winner, Marie Mersinger's "Theater Alchemy," to launch its 1993 tour of elementary and middle schools under a grant from the Knight Foundation.

All writers living in Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Florida and Mississippi are eligible to enter the DeepSouth New play Contest.

Scripts should be original and full-length, produceable with eight actors or fewer. More characters are acceptable as long as no more than eight actors cover all roles with doubling.

Monoscenic or unit sets and a must and no multiple set shows will be accepted. (Call for clarification.)

Musicals and adaptations are not accepted, and plays must not have had previous professional production.

All manuscripts must be postmarked no later than Jan. 15. Each play will be read twice by a screening committee, which will reduce the entries to 20 playscripts.

From that group, a selection committee, chaired by Paul Pierce, Springer artistic director, will choose the three winners.

Writers may send playscripts to DeepSouth New Play Contest, P.O. Box 1626, Columbus, Ga. 31902. For more information, call the Springer Production Office at 324-1100.

Christmas musical

The Springer will present its Christmas musical, "Babes In Toyland," the holiday fantasy with Victor Herbert's original score. Dec. 3 to 20 on its main stage.

Allen O'Reilly from Atlanta will be the guest director.

"Babes in Toyland" features Herbert's songs in a yuletide adventure in Toyland involving the jolly toy maker and all of the Mother Goose characters joining forces to save Christmas from a holiday calamity.

O'Reilly has directed at the Georgia Shakespeare Festival, the Atlanta Shakespeare Company and the Alliance Theater.

He has taught classes at the Alliance Theater School and the Georgia Shakespeare Conservatory and staged shows for the Lake Lanier Children's Theater. The director is also a member of the Actors Equity Association and is the former artistic director of the Mystery Cafe in Atlanta.

For more information, call the Springer at 324-1100.

think everyone's feeling had been, 'She's going to be convicted. What's the story?' It wasn't until the hung jury came about that they said, 'Wait a minute. There is more here.' I mean, look at the media job she did. That's what I thought would be interesting to explore in this one, to be able to indict the press a little bit for buying what she put out there." Indeed, several sequences of "Her Final Fury" depict Broderick giving in-prison interviews to visiting reporters ... and, in fact, the publication of one of those stories played a large part in attracting the producers to make the first "Betty Broderick Story" for CBS.

On the lookout

Felix Duran De La Cruz from the Dominican Republic prepares to cover fellow cadets during a room-clearing exercise at the McKenna Military Operations in Urban Terrain site Oct. 29. The cadet is attending the 20-week Cadet Branch Qualification Course at the School of the Americas. In the first 15 weeks of the course, students are trained in basic and special military skills to include weapons training. For the remainder of the course, students are in branch specific groups. The training at the McKenna MOUT site is part of the infantry/cavalry portion on the course.

Housing automates phones

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Soldiers waiting for post quarters can find out where they are on the housing waiting list 24 hours a day with just a simple phone call.

The Family Housing Branch of the Directorate of Public Works now has a computer-controlled, automated phone system that can be accessed from any push-button telephone.

Soldiers who want to find out their positions on the list can simply dial 545-3107. A pre-recorded message will ask callers to press the number one button. The caller will then be asked to enter the sponsor's Social Security number, followed by the pound key.

"The entire process is very fast," said Jim Young, chief of the Family Housing Branch. "It takes only maybe 20 or 30 seconds, which is far less time than it would take for someone to call us directly and have one of our people look up the same information on the computer."

Young encouraged soldiers to call after duty hours.

"The system works 24 hours a day, but we are trying to cut down on the large number of daytime telephone calls we receive that tie up the system," he said. "More than 75 percent of the calls we receive are from people wanting to find out their position on the waiting list."

Young added that it is important for soldiers who desire to be removed from the housing list to call the Family Housing Branch to be taken off of the list.

Military Police offer free rides

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Had a little too much to drink and need a ride?

Then call the Military Police.

Under the Military Police Activity's "Safe Ride Program," a person can get a free, no-questions-asked ride home back on post or to the barracks.

"The purpose of the program,"said Maj. Jack Heacock, chief of Law Enforcement Operations, "is to deter drunken driving, especially as the holiday season approaches."

The year-round program is simple. If a person feels that he or she is intoxicated, just call the Military Police front desk at 545-5222 and request a ride. No questions will be asked and no report made to commanders or supervisors.

"We don't want to discourage people from using the program by punishing them," said Heacock. "We will have to record the escort in our log for informational purposes, but the soldier who requests the ride will remain anonymous."

There are two restrictions to the program, however. A person must truly feel that he or she is intoxicated and the Military Police escort will only make drops at on-post housing or barracks.

"We are not a substitute for commercial transportation. If you are in genuine need of a ride because you have had too much to drink, then we will give you one," Heacock said.

Heacock added that soldiers who use the program might have to wait until a car is available to pick them up.

"We can't always get to them right away, but we will get to them as soon as we can," he said.

Heacock also encouraged soldiers not to be afraid to use the program.

"People are often reluctant because they think they are going to be punished. We will be good on our word. There will be no penalty," he said.

John Bush, chief of the Community Operations Division of the Directorate of Community Activities, reminded soldiers that free nonalcoholic beverages are available to designated drivers at all post clubs and the bowling facilities.

"You must be with a group, however," Bush said. "You can't just come in alone and say you are a designated driver."

Designated drivers will be given a designated driver sticker and free fountain soft drinks, he said.

CFC drive heads toward goal

Garrison Commander's Office

The Combined Federal Campaign is in its fifth week and is currently at 50 percent of the campaign goal of $500,000. The campaign is to be completed by Nov. 20. The campaign is open to all federal employees who wish to donate to the CFC.

General donations to the CFC can be made in three different ways.

First, LLLL is for local designated charities. The donations are distributed equally among all local charities.

Second, NNNN is for agencies listed in the National Section. Donations are distributed equally among those charities.

Third, AAAA is for agencies listed in the agencies listing section. These donations are also distributed equally among those charities.

Post says farewell to commander

Community holds memorial service for officer killed in helicopter crash

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Grieving friends, family members, fellow soldiers and officers gathered Monday in Marshall Auditorium to share their memories of Col. John T. Keneally.

Keneally, who was commander of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was killed Oct. 29 during routine ranger exercises involving joint airborne and air assault training.

The accident happened in Utah when the helicopter Keneally was riding in crashed into the Great Salt Lake. There were 11 others killed. They were from Fort Stewart, Ga., Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., Pope Air Force Base, N.C. and Hurlburt Field, Fla.

Monday's memorial service included scripture readings, prayers, hymns and personal tributes from people who had known and worked with Keneally.

"He had an unquenchable spirit," said Col. David E. Grange, 75th Ranger Regiment commander. "He knew that before you can be a good officer, you have to be a good soldier, and before you can be a good soldier, you have to be a good man. John (Keneally) was that man."

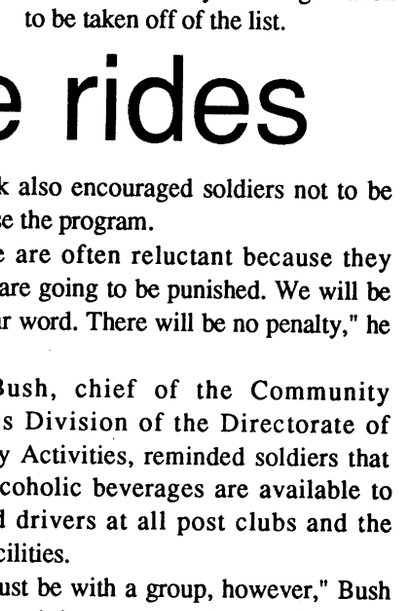
"John (Keneally) was an ideal role model," said Lt. Col. Frank Kearney, executive officer of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment "He was committed to excellence, committed to discipline, and most of all, committed to people."

"He will go to sleep with heroes," said Kearney, who was scheduled to attend Keneally's burial at Arlington National Cemetery Wednesday. "They will welcome him — he deserves to be in that company."

Keneally was posthumously promoted to colonel and awarded the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster. His other awards include the Meritorious Service Medal with two Oak Leaf Clusters, Army Commendation Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, and Army Achievement Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster.

Keneally earned the Expert Infantryman Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Army General Staff Identification Badge, Pathfinder Badge, Air Assault Badge and the Ranger Tab.

Keneally is survived by his wife, Barbara, daughters Jennifer Gant and Kathleen, brothers Robert and Kevin, sister Joan Keneally-Nies, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Keneally.



Col. John T. Keneally

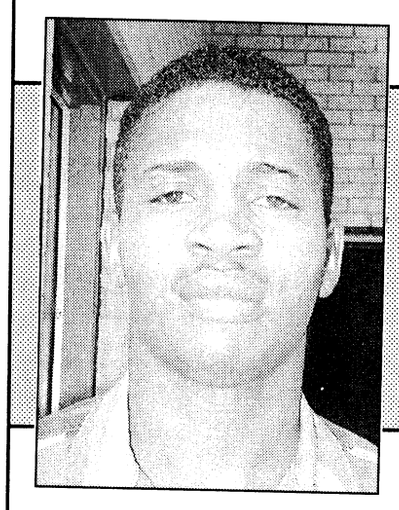
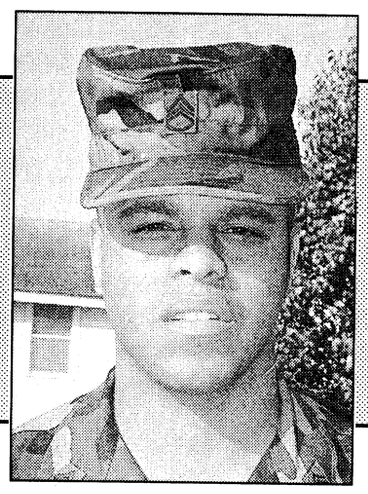
What do you think about living on post?

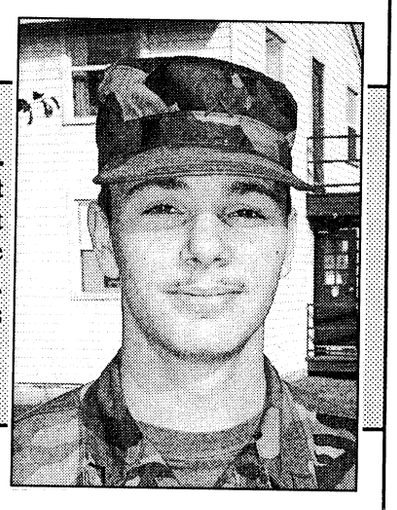


Spc. Everette Brockington, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I don't live on post at this time; but when I did, I thought it was more convenient, in terms of using the Commissary and other facilities. Also, it's a lot safer to live on a military installation."

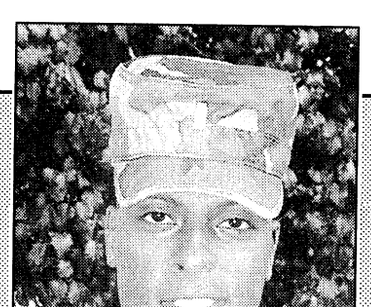
Michaela Keidel, family member — "I like living on post because the people are really nicer, the cost of living is cheaper than living off post, and people in the community work together. The school system on post is better, too."



Staff Sgt. Levi Robinson, Company B, 1st Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division — "I don't like living on post because I feel like I am surrounded by the military 24 hours a day and I don't have any privacy."



Pvt. 2 John Richardson, U.S. Army Medical Department Activity — "I like living on post because everything is so close here — it's like its own little city. Also, the people are close. Everyone helps everyone else."



2nd Lt. Wayne Stafford, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I like living on post because you don't have to fight traffic to get to physical training or to your place of duty in the mornings."

COMMENTARY

If these are austere times, the message doesn't seem to be getting through.

People keep insisting on having the niceties in life as well as the necessities. At least that's the message that comes through loud and clear after reading minutes from various advisory board meetings.

For instance, in the minutes from the Post Exchange board meeting, someone insisted on the PX stocking a certain brand of pantyhose.

The PX stocks three other brands, tried stocking the requested brand but found no one was buying them, so dropped them. But now one person on Fort Benning wants them for herself.

If I was on that board, I'd tell her to go downtown and buy them.

Someone else wanted the PX to stock clothes to wear to proms. Obviously these must have been senior officers and noncommissioned officers who have teen-age kids, because I can't see any of my buddies benefiting from these things being stocked.

Like the guy with the 1937 Hupmobile who went into the PX garage and asked for a taillight. He couldn't believe it when the person told him they didn't carry them.

Seems to me, for every item the PX carries that it can't sell, that means a loss of revenue (remember, we soldiers benefit from PX sales) and it means less shelf space for something we do need, like football trading cards and Redman.

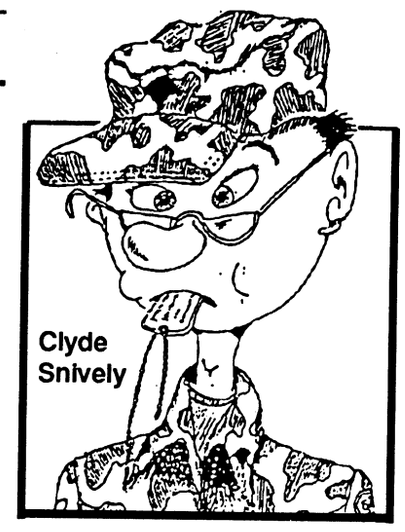
I will hasten to add the PX can and will special order these other items.

The folks who sit on the Officers' Club advisory board must also be in the clouds. The minutes I read showed monthly losses of megabucks.

Yet, here are people wanting to refurbish the women's bathrooms — put in more commodes, put in comfortable furniture.

I sure don't know what ladies do in commodes, talk about us men, I guess; but, you don't see men socializing in the men's room.

They go in with a mission to accomplish, accomplish it and move out. They don't need furniture.



On the men's side of the house, they're complaining about a jacuzzi in the Officers' Club physical fitness room. It stinks or something. What does anyone need a jacuzzi for?

All jacuzzis do is turn you into a prune, sap muscle tone, yet they must cost a fortune to run — you have to heat the water, change the water, and probably add lethal chemicals to the water to prevent the spread of disease.

How many strangers are you willing to share bath water with?

Then there are our on-post residents. They, too, want all sorts of things built— pads to park cars on, buildings to meet in, playground equipment, the whole works.

I agree, we need certain amenities, but when we get new swings, basketball goals, etc. we need to take better care of them.

It's not like a civilian community. There, if you want something, you pay for it through increased taxes. In the Army, there's just so much money and for every item you get, there's something else taken away.

Unfortunately we live in an instant gratification society. In the old days, families didn't immediately have washers, dryers, televisions, compact disc players, new cars, new clothes, microwaves, etc.

They scrimped and saved and got these items one piece at a time. But today, whatever mom and pop had, son Johnny and daughter Becky think they should have as soon as they get married, employed or not.

And we wonder why the nation's debt is so high.

Well, there is a limit. Fort Benning is bumping into that limit, so instead of asking what the post is going to do for them, they need to be thinking about what they can do for the post.

Stop whining and start budgeting

COMMENTARY

For those of you who think you're getting a bad deal living in government housing and earning a soldier's pay, you've got a serious "give me everything for free" attitude.

Why does the government owe you housing or more money? You already make more money than your civilian counterparts, and you don't even have to pay health insurance, dental insurance, optical insurance (for you eyeglass wearers).

And, if you live off post, you get Basic Allowance for Quarters, Basic Allowance for Subsistence and Variable Housing Allowance, all of which is nontaxable I might add.

On the issue of living on post, you only have to surrender your BAQ and VHA. That shouldn't be a problem considering you pay out more each month than BAQ. You save a heck of a lot of money living in post housing; and, normally, at least for this area, you get better quality housing. Let's face it, I think housing within the means of most soldiers in Columbus leaves a little something to be desired.

A civilian worker living in Columbus making $5 an hour is lucky to take home $800 a month after taxes. Deduct the inflated health-care insurance, etc., and they're lucky to have $600 to spend, out of which must come the car payment, gasoline for the 25-minute drive and car insurance.

The way I see it, soldiers should be proud to serve their country. They also benefit financially (how many jobs can you name that have a cost of living increase almost every year and a time-in-service increase every two years or so).

I'm tired of hearing soldiers whine about how little money they make. You've got it good, gang. Live it up or get out. That would leave a slot open for someone who wants to stay in.

Soldiers asked to use caution

The month of November will provide this command with two holidays.

This signals a special need to alert our soldiers to a very real threat of motor vehicle accidents and instill in them a general sense of safety awareness.

Last year, more than 500 Americans were killed on our nation's highways during the Thanksgiving weekend.

This calendar year, three Fort Benning soldiers have been killed in vehicle accidents.

The most common causes of traffic fatalities are: speeding, not wearing seat belts, driving after drinking beer or other alcoholic beverages, and fatigue. To emphasize the dangers of privately owned vehicles, leaders should inspect POVs and brief soldiers concerning POV safety.

My goal is to protect the lives of the soldiers entrusted to me. I want your wholehearted support to reduce traffic accidents.

Post celebrates Native American Month

November is proclaimed Native American Heritage Month at Fort Benning to recognize the contributions of Native Americans.

This year's theme is "Year of the American Indian: A Heritage of Greatness and Longevity Lives."

The military and civilian contributions of Native Americans reflect a deep commitment to the principles of freedom and democracy that are the strengths of the United States.

The Native American community has given us artists, sculptors, musicians, authors, poets, artisans, scientists and scholars, and they have made important contributions in many fields including agriculture, medicine, music, language and art.

The various Native American cultures continue to contribute significantly to our American society.

I encourage everyone on Fort Benning and in surrounding communities to participate in this observance through the planned activities by units, staff and other agencies.

Never shall we forget the bravery, courage and valor of our comrades ... have a safe Veterans Day

Chairman sends message

We, as a people, have set aside Veterans Day as a national day of recognition and special tribute to all veterans — past and present — for their dedication, sacrifice, and exceptional service to their country.

On behalf of a grateful America, a special thanks and sincere gratitude to:

- Those men and women who have served our country during times of peace and during times of war.
- Those who realize that man's struggle for freedom is eternal and like all things of value must be earned and preserved.
- Those who meet loneliness, sacrifice, hardship, uncertainty and risk with undaunted valor and pride.
- Those who have contributed time, determination, commitment, courage and their lives to the promotion of American ideals and democracy.
- Those who have served as guardians of freedom.

We commemorate this legacy of strength, compassion, and achievement as displayed by America's veterans.

You have created and upheld a tradition of excellence. Your selfless devotion to service has not gone unnoticed.

Today's free world stands as testimony to your commitment to independence and democracy. Your diligence and devotion have safeguarded this nation through war and in peace. We remember you, and we thank you.

On behalf of the members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, I salute all veterans who have served this great nation. I am particularly proud of our armed forces today — of the spirit and fortitude, of the strength and discipline, of the men and women who dedicate themselves each day to the preservation of security and freedom.

The chapter was also recognized for commemorating the anniversary of World War II at its functions.

Navy secretary announces Desert Storm unit award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The secretary of the Navy recently announced the award of the Navy Unit Commendation to I Marine Expeditionary Force for its exceptional meritorious service during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

The medal is the second highest sea service unit award for combat operations and represents actions, which if performed by an individual, would result in an award of the Silver Star Medal for heroism or a Legion of Merit for meritorious service.

Although no Fort Benning units are included in the list, Lt. Col T.O. McQuerry, Marine liaison, said that some Fort Benning soldiers may be eligible to receive the award. For more information, contact McQuerry at 545-1715.

Participating units include the 1st and 2nd Marine Divisions, elements of the 4th Marine Division, 3rd Marine Air Wing, 1st and 2nd Force Service Support Groups, and attached Army and Navy units. Commanders of soldiers attached to one of the Marine units or the Army units may obtain details about this award by contacting the Marine Corps representative's office.

Participating Army units include elements of the 9th Psychological Operations Group and 502nd Forward Support Battalion.

Marines celebrate 217 years

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Courage, honor, valor and the spirit of the Corps will be remembered Tuesday as the U.S. Marine Corps celebrates its 217th Anniversary.

In celebration, Fort Benning's liaison Office of the Marine Corps will host its annual Marine Ball Tuesday at 6 p.m. at the Supper Club at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Currently 19 Marines are permanently assigned to Fort Benning performing a myriad of functions.

Marine liaisons serve with the 75th Ranger Regiment, the School of the Americas, the Ranger Training Brigade as ranger instructors in three phases of training and at the Infantry School.

Fort Benning's chief Marine Corps representative, Lt. Col. T.O. McQuerry, oversees almost 3,000 Marines working, training and attending schools on post.

Riverside Concert set Nov. 22

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, and his wife, Linda, invite all Fort Benning personnel, their family members and members of the surrounding communities to attend a concert performance by the Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus at 4:30 p.m. Nov. 22.

The performance will be on the grounds of Riverside, the commanding general's quarters.

Everyone is encouraged to bring blankets, lawn chairs, picnic foods and beverages and make this an occasion to renew old friendships, meet new friends and enjoy fine music, said post officials.

Special Ops Command chief opens CISM championships

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Army Gen. Carl W. Stiner, commander in chief of the U.S. Special Operations Command, was the guest speaker at the 9 a.m. opening ceremony Wednesday for the 1992 Conseil International du Sport Militaire shooting championships.

Stiner's command is headquartered at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla. He is a former commander of the 1st Infantry Training Brigade at Fort Benning.

Stiner's first assignment, upon being commissioned a second lieutenant in 1958 from the Reserve Officers' Training Corps at Tennessee Polytechnical Institute, was at Fort Benning with the 9th Infantry Regiment. Since then he has served in a number of staff and command positions both stateside and overseas, including Vietnam and Korea.

In 1988, Stiner was named commanding general of XVIII Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg, N.C. While commanding XVIII Corps, he was designated commander of Joint Task Force South in December 1989 and served as the operational commander of all forces employed on Operation Just Cause in Panama.

Stiner and his wife, Sue, have two children.

The closing CISM ceremony will be Tuesday at 3 p.m. Lt. Gen. James R. Ellis, commanding general of the 3rd U.S. Army and deputy commanding general of Forces Command, Fort McPherson, Ga., will be the guest speaker. Ellis is a former commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment and Infantry Center chief of staff.

He, too, has held numerous command and staff positions both stateside and overseas, including two tours in Vietnam, one in the Dominican Republic and one in Pakistan.

He and his wife, Carol, have two children.

Commissary shopping different 50 years ago

National Infantry Museum

Fifty years ago at Fort Benning, shopping at the Commissary was a little different than today. For example, a person could buy the following 22 items for $3.32.

- 1 pound Canadian bacon - 46 cents
- 1 pound butter - 36 cents
- 2 pounds Kraft American cheese - 58 cents

1 package Beechnut chewing tobacco - 7 cents
Colgate toothpaste - 14 cents
Loaf of bread - 2 cents
1 pound peaches - 17 cents
Kellogg's Corn Flakes - 7 cents
Kellogg's Rice Krispies - 10 cents
1 pound salmon - 14 cents
1 pound corned beef - 22 cents
Heinz vinegar - 8 cents
Campbell's tomato soup - 7 cents
Heinz pickles - 27 cents
1 pound sugar - 5 cents
1 pound brown sugar - 6 cents
Lifebuoy soap - 6 cents
Frank's hot peppersauce - 9 cents
1 pound peanut butter - 12 cents
Bathroom tissue - 6 cents
Shinola shoe polish - 6 cents
1 pound mixed vegetables - 7 cents
Total cost: $3.32

Not only were Kellogg's Corn Flakes a bargain at just 7 cents a box, they were delivered to a person's home and sold on credit. All accounts had to be paid in full by noon on the 20th of each month.

Like today, the Commissary would not take orders by telephone. They would accept just one written order per day. If an order was in by 6:30 a.m., it would be delivered the same day. If a person was not at home when the delivery was made, the order would be placed on the porch but at the occupant's risk.

Deliveries were made only on post. Agents or servants could shop for service members at the Commissary provided the service member gave them a written list of items to purchase.

Fresh beef, lamb, pork and veal were sold to individuals as wholesale market cuts. Customers were required to place orders for meat in advance and in person.

There was no open display of pre-cut meat as there is today. Customers 50 years ago were not even allowed to examine the cuts of meat when placing an order.

Editor's note: The information presented here was found in a 1942 Commissary price list, which was published each month for use by soldiers and their families. The price list is part of a collection at the National Infantry Museum.

GATEWAY TO CARE

Martin Army Community Hospital

More than 9,000 individuals have attended the Gateway To Care briefings, according to Martin Army Community Hospital officials.

The briefings were designed to inform military beneficiaries of the Army's new Coordinated Care Program that will provide family practice care to those who enroll.

Throughout the month of October, the hospital's Coordinated Care Division informed beneficiaries of the benefits of Gateway To Care compared to the present system. So far, the hospital has conducted 18 briefings and has scheduled more throughout the months of November and December.

The briefings were well received by both active duty and retired populations, according to Lt. Col. Charles Bottoms, chief of the Coordinated Care Division. Bottoms said the majority of the retirees in attendance indicated they have long awaited the opportunity to receive family practice care.

Briefings for active duty soldiers and their families have been arranged through individual units. If a soldier or family member is unable to attend the unit's briefing, he or she may attend one of the make-up briefings.

Military retirees, their family members and family members of deceased military members may attend one of the scheduled briefings at Infantry Hall.

For the convenience of beneficiaries, the briefings are scheduled during day and evening hours. Beneficiaries may attend the briefing of their choice; however, attendance at a briefing is required to enroll in the Gateway To Care Program.

Gateway to Care Briefings

Monday, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, 6 p.m.

Tuesday, retirees, Classroom 5, Infantry Hall, 6 p.m.

Thursday, retirees, Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, 6 p.m.

Nov. 14, retirees and active duty make-up session, Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, 10 a.m.

Nov. 16, make-up session for active duty soldiers, Classroom 8, Infantry Hall , 10:30 a.m.

Nov. 19, retirees, Classroom 3, Infantry Hall (200 maximum), 10 a.m.

Nov. 23, 36th Engineer Group, Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, 6 p.m.

Nov. 24, retirees, Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, 6 p.m.

Nov. 30, 36th Engineer Group, Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall, 6 p.m.

TRADOC to upgrade course manuals

Leadership development programs to focus more on equal opportunity

TRADOC News Service

FORT MONROE, Va. — Training on equal opportunity awareness and sexual harassment prevention will be upgraded in all Training and Doctrine Command leader courses by the end of 1992.

Revised leadership manuals and regulations will incorporate equal opportunity and sexual harassment prevention into leadership doctrine.

The actions are not a result of recent highly-publicized cases of sexual abuse in the military, according to Jim Ligon, a TRADOC leader development analyst. Those cases merely underline the need for such training, he said.

"In 1989, we did a review of our leader development programs and found that equal opportunity and sexual harassment prevention training needed upgrading," Ligon said.

Development of new training support material was directed in 1989 and reemphasized last summer by Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander.

TRADOC school commandants and installation commanders will also establish training for all those assigned to schools and posts. Unit and school training will be done by trained equal opportunity advisors.

The upgraded training will be included in courses ranging from initial entry training to the Command and General Staff Officers Course. Length of the training varies based on duties students will perform after graduation, according to Ligon.

The book, "Step Forward - Sexual Harassment in the Work Place," by Susan Webb, has become required reading in officer and noncommissioned officer courses. Some schools will use training materials and videos developed by Webb.

"The directors of Evaluations and Standardization at the schools will check to ensure that there is proper emphasis on equal opportunity and sexual harassment prevention training," Ligon said.

EXCELLENCE & QUALITY

Now's the time to make holiday travel plans

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Now is the time to book your holiday vacations before it's too late.

SatoTravel has three locations on post to meet a variety of different travel needs, said Linda Cobb, complex manager.

What's more, she said, SatoTravel guarantees the lowest rates anywhere.

"If you purchase a ticket from us and find that you can get a rate cheaper than ours somewhere else, we will match that fare and refund the difference," Cobb said.

Anyone, not just military personnel, can use SatoTravel, said Linda Guerrero, Leisure Travel Office Branch manager.

"Anyone can use SatoTravel, including soldiers, retirees, civilian employees and their family members, but our number one customer is Fort Benning," Guerrero said. "A lot of people are missing out on great deals because they don't know that we're here or that they can use our services."

Besides offering airline and cruise tickets, SatoTravel can arrange conferences and conventions and offers group travel packages and rates.

Cobb said that holiday flights need to be booked as soon as possible.

"The best deals right now are round trip flights booked in advance, but the seats are limited and are going fast," said Cobb.

She added that those who are seeking something different for the holidays might try one of the package deals that are offered, including cruises to Cancun and ski trips.

SatoTravel has three separate offices on post that offer the same basic services.

The Leisure Travel Office, Building 247, is located on Ingersol Street and is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Through Dec. 19, the Leisure Travel Office will also be open on Saturdays from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

The SatoTravel Office, which is located in Soldiers' Plaza Building 2628, is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

The Sand Hill Office is located in Building 3245 on Hanson Drive and is open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

SatoTravel offers a reservation number that can be used weekdays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. To make airline reservations, call 687-4900.

About $3,100 and a variety of toys were presented to Santa's Castle Tuesday by the 11th Infantry Regiment, according to Susan Eckhart, Castle chairwoman.

A total of $385 was earned by the 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry, by sponsoring a Bass Tournament Oct. 31 at the Uchee Creek Recreation Center.

Other fundraising included members of the cadre dressing up like Santa and asking for donations.

In all, the 1st Battalion collected $1,244; 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School), $448; and 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, $1,149, according to Command Sgt. Maj. Kenneth Sponsler. The Noncommissioned Officers Association also donated $100.

In addition, Capt. Abdullah M. Al-Azmi of Kuwait, a member of the International Student Training Detachment contributed $150 on his own.

Sponsler noted that a number of businesses contributed to the success of the Bass Tournament. Butch Jordan of Leon Jordan Marine provided the grand prize, rod and reel. Others merchants who made donations included: Action Marine, ARCCO, Ranger Joes, Victory Bait & Tackle, Lewis Barber Shop, Mann's Fish World, Mann's Bait Company and Military Bass Anglers Association.

In other donations to Santa's Castle, the 317th Engineers Battalion contributed $346.

The School of the Americas brought in three boxes of new and used toys as well.

Eckhart said that all cash donations will go into the general fund to be used to purchase new toys in age groups where they are lacking in inventory.

Santa's Castle is a volunteer organization that provides toys for soldiers' families based on referrals from their commanding officers and noncommissioned officers.

SOA 'B' kicks it in

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The U.S. Army Infantry Center soccer championship played Thursday evening at Doughboy Stadium saw the School of the Americas B team defeat 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, 3-2 in overtime.

SOA drew first blood early in the opening half when Mario Cusano drove a 30-yard kick to an unprotected goal. The 11th Regiment goalie Jack Doddridge left the net open when he moved out to kick the ball downfield.

Cusano got his second goal of the match a few minutes later and upped SOA's lead to 2-0 on an inbound pass in front of the net. Cusano slammed home the shot and it looked as if SOA would walk away with an easy win.

Early in the second half the 11th Regiment was able to get on the board and cut SOA's lead in half 2-1 when Steven Miehauss put a penalty kick past SOA goalie Jose Moran.

The 11th Regiment tied the match at 2-2 midway through the second half when Jong Kim used his head to put the ball past a diving Moran, who had shifted to the left side of the goal expecting a shot from that side.

Regulation play ended with the match still tied and a 30-minute overtime period awaiting.

In overtime, SOA got the only goal that would be needed when Jesus Guevara put a deflected pass into the net for a 3-2 lead.

SOA played good defense through the rest of the overtime by not allowing the 11th Regiment a shot on goal the rest of the period.

When overtime ended, SOA's B team walked away with a 3-2 win and the title.

The Payday Golf Tournament played Oct. 30 at the Follow Me Golf Course drew 108 entrants for the largest field for a payday tournament.

First place went to the team of Errol Moran, Vern Spaulding, Robert Willis and James Delaney with a score of 58.

Second went to Tom Funderburke, Bob Weekly, Roy McCage and Dan Mims with a round of 59.

Jim Crockert, Tom Christopher, Powell Johnson and Paul Timm took third place with a score of 60.

Willie Watkins, Ed Gilmore, Bob Wiese and John Miller took fourth place with a score of 61.

Ed Burkhalter, Howard Miller, Daivd Bolding and Jack Heacock took fifth place with a round of 61.

All ties were broken with a reverse score card starting on the 18th hole.

John Miller won the grand prize drawing of two round trip tickets to anywhere in the continental United States. The tickets were donated by Delta Airlines. The tournament was also sponsored by SatoTravel.

The next tournament will be Nov. 27.

1/29 plays pioneer

By Gregory Carlson
29 th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment completed the flag football season Oct. 21 with its version of the Super Bowl called the Pioneer Bowl. The bowl game outcome would decide the top team in 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Going into the playoffs, three teams were tied for first place with 5-1 records: the "Aces" of Company A, the "Cougars" of Company C and the "Hawks" of Headquarters and Headquarters Company. The playoff matched these three teams with the second-place team, the "Dogs" of Company D.

The four teams competed in the playoffs for the chance to play in the Pioneer Bowl. The teams played Oct. 19 at Gowdy Field, resulting in the advancement of the Hawks and the Aces.

The HHC Hawks soared over the Delta Dogs, 36-6, and the Alpha Aces squeaked by the Charlie Cougars, 13-6.

The Pioneer Bowl pitted the HHC Hawks, with a 6-1 record, against the Alpha Aces, also with a 6-1 record.

The game was intense and the Hawks managed to edge by the Aces,13-12.

The win not only gave battalion bragging rights to the Hawks, but also the opportunity to represent the battalion in the post tournament, which began Monday and will be played through today.

Tactical pistol match set

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a tactical pistol match Nov. 14 at 9 a.m. at English Range.

Entry fee is $11 if paid by Sunday and $13 after that date. All entrants will receive a sweat shirt from Columbus Firearms Manufacturing Company.

There will be first-, second- and third-place trophies in the following categories: competitor class, sportsman and female class.

A separate award will be given in the sportsman and/or female class for high service revolver.

The high law enforcement trophy will be awarded in the noncompetitor class for active corrections and law enforcement professionals.

Interested shooters can register in person at the Rifle and Pistol Club Tuesdays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 5 p.m. or mail entry forms to the Rifle and Pistol Club, P.O. Box 1469, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905.

For more information, call the club at 689-3371.

Safety class aimed at women

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a basic firearms safety course for women Dec. 12 from 8 a.m. to noon.

Instruction will be given on the moral and ethical considerations of the use of deadly force and the legal considerations on Fort Benning and in Georgia.

Instruction will consist of how to load and unload a weapon, safe storage of a weapon in the home and safe and effective use of a weapon.

"The Rifle and Pistol Club is moving more toward safety and education for the nonprofessional shooter," said Jim Graham, club safety coordinator.

The course will be limited to 20 people to give a better instructor-to-student ratio.

The course is free, but participants must pay $6 for a manual, which is mandatory for the course and will be issued at the time of registration.

Registration will be at the Rifle and Pistol Club with preregistration ending Nov. 29.

For more information, call Graham at 689-3371.

Faith Middle School schedules holiday race

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 14th annual Faith Holiday Race, sponsored by Fort Benning's Faith School Physical Education Department, will be Dec. 5.

Each year, 500 to 1,100 runners participate in the race. Students, parents, teachers and members of the Fort Benning and surrounding communities are invited to participate. The race is an outgrowth of the Faith Physical Education Program and Faith Jogging Club, which was formed in 1978.

Faith Race is made up of three different runs that begin and end at the Faith Middle School at 1375 Ingersol St. The one-mile race for boys and girls 14 years old and younger begins at 8:30 a.m. The five-mile race, also open to all age categories, begins at 10 a.m.

T-shirts are presented to all finishers and awards will be presented in each category at the awards ceremony in the Faith School gym.

Preregistration for 14 and under is $4 and $6 for 15 and over. Race day registration begins at 7:30 a.m. with fees of $5 and $7 respectively.

Refreshments of fruit and soft drinks will be available. All proceeds from the race go to the Faith School's Physical Education Program to provide additional equipment and incentive awards for students.

Bass head for cooler water in autumn

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation

Bass anglers know one of the most reliable places to locate autumn bass is in the backs of tributary creek, but not many fishermen realize why these are such good spots.

"It all depends on baitfish migrations," explains Texas guide and Johnson Outboards Pro Staff member Randy Fite. "No matter what time of year you're fishing, if you locate baitfish, you'll find bass.

"In .the fall months, the baitfish move into the creeks, and the bass follow."

The reason baitfish make such a migration, explains Fite, is to take advantage of cooler, better-oxygenated water. During the summer, lakes gradually become warmer and warmer and oxygen levels generally decrease. By late summer, this can become critical.

"The coolest water will be in those tributaries that have a slight current," notes Fite, "and naturally, moving water like this will have more oxygen. Both gizzard and threadfin shad will leave the main lakes in late summer and migrate into the tributary creeks in search of these better conditions, and eventually, they'll move all the way to the backs of the creeks.

"The bass make this same migration a few days behind the baitfish, and stay there as long as the bait does."

Because of the improved water conditions, the Johnson pro continues, both baitfish and bass are more active. The bass begin feeding heavily, as if in preparation for the approaching winter and are such good lure choices," says Fite. "The bass are striking by readily hit artificial lures.

"This is why fast-moving lures, such as spinnerbaits and crankbaits, impulse at lures that come anywhere close to them."

The autumn feeding frenzy can continue for several weeks, according to Fite, but begins to slow down when weather fronts have cooled the water and forced the baitfish out into the deeper channels. The shad gradually migrate out of the creeks and may school over deeper structure near the mouth of the tributary.

"Again, the bass follow the migrating baitfish," says Fite, "but this time, as the water gets colder, the bass become less and less active. They concentrate in large schools near the shad, but finding them is much more difficult.

"This is why autumn fishing is probably some of the most enjoyable fishing of the year. It is not really difficult to locate the bass because you know they're going to be in the tributary creeks, and if you throw a spinnerbait or crankbait around heavy cover, you'll get strikes."

Fite suggests fishing tributaries on the upper end of a lake early in the fall because these are more shallow and will cool first. Gradually, as the season progresses, he advises moving to other deeper tributaries on the lower end of the lake.

SPORTS SHORTS

Interested persons should register by Nov. 13 at any post gym or at the Sports Office.

For more information contact Hazel Henry at 545-4726 or 545-4388.

Deer check station — The Department of Natural Resources deer check station, Building 5883, in Harmony Church is now open from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

DNR staff members will take samples of blood and ticks to check for Lyme disease. They will also weigh the deer, check its age and measure its antlers.

The check station will be closed Veterans Day, Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Youth basketball — This is the last day for Youth Services' basketball registration. Registration is open to children of active duty, retired military and Department of Defense civilians. Registration will be Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Youth Services, Building 1056.

Basketball coaches are needed for the upcoming season. Individuals interested in volunteering should call 545-3070 or 545-3913, or stop by Building 1056.

For more information, call Linda Laine at 545-3070 or 545-3913.

Hunting safety— Persons born on or after Jan. 1, 1961, who wish to hunt in Georgia or on Fort Benning must complete a state hunting safety course. The next course will be Nov. 17 and 18 in Classroom 2, Infantry Hall, from 7 to 10 p.m.

Hunters must attend both nights to complete the course and must have a Social Security card to register. For more information, call 545-3267.

Martial arts— The Fort Benning Officers' Club now offers a martial arts (Yoshukai) class Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. Fee for the class is $30 a month, open to military and civilians at least 16 years of age.

Instructor Ron Ziss has 23 years of experience in martial arts. For more information, call 687-0871 or 682-1267.

Golf tourney— The Society of American Military Engineers will host a golf tournament at the Follow Me golf Course Nov. 13 at 1 p.m. The format will be four-ball scramble.

The tournament is open to the public. Prizes will be awarded to first, second, third and fourth-place teams and closest to the hole on par threes.

For more information, call Glenice Myers at 297-1079.

Aerobics classes — Low-impact aerobics classes are conducted every Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. at Santiago Fitness Center, Building 3350.

Cost is $2 per session or $15 monthly for the coed classes. The first class is free. For more information, call 544-9595 or 544-1595.

Family fitness — The Fort Benning Officers' Club offers aerobics classes in the mornings and evenings. Classes are $15 monthly, a drop-in fee of $2 per visit. Nonmembers fee is $18 monthly. The first class is free.

The club also offers a kuk sool class, which is a form of martial arts, Tuesday and Thursday from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. There is no charge for the first class. Subsequent classes are $5 each.

Classes are open to members and nonmembers. For information, call 687-0871 or 545-4162.

Recreation leader's workshops will highlight new ideas

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

A recreational specialist is coming to Fort Benning to conduct workshops Nov. 13 through 15.

Glenn Bannerman will hold a family fun night, several workshops and a trainee program from Nov. 13 through 15.

The scheduled is as follows:

• Nov. 13, 11 p.m., Family Fun Night, Dexter School Cafeteria.

• Nov. 14, 10 a.m., Leader Workshop, Infantry Center Chapel Annex; 2 p.m. Youth Workshop and Recreation, Infantry Center Chapel Annex.

• Nov. 15, 11 a.m., Trainee Program, Soldiers' Chapel.

"Glenn Bannerman captivates his audiences with his enthusiastic and delightful ideas," said Bill Putman, Protestant director of Religious Education, who has known Bannerman for 18 years.

"The workshops and the family fun night is sponsored by the Unit Ministry Team, and it promises to be an enjoyable weekend for leaders, trainees, youth and families," Putman said.

Bannerman taught Recreation and Outdoor Education at the Presbyterian School of Christian Education in Richmond, Va., for 31 years. He was named "Educator of the Year" by the Association of Presbyterian Church Educators in 1989.

He has produced four records of music and dance instructions as well as co-authored with R.E. Fakkima a book, "Guide for Recreation Leaders."

He and his family were selected by the State Department to represent the United States on a good will tour of Central and South America. Also, he performed at the Doe Dans Festival in Holland with 2,000 participants from Eastern Europe. In Mexico and Canada, he was a workshop leader.

For more information and registration, call Bill Putman at 545-2366.

Master's program available

By Bill Putman
USAIC Chaplains' Office

The Religious Education Center is still accepting applications for the Loyola master's degree program. This program offers a master's degree in either religious education or pastoral studies and will be conducted at Fort Benning.

The program consists of 10 courses, three semester hours each. These courses are made up of 10 class sessions of three hours each, as well as homework assignments.

Classes will meet once each week.

The program is sponsored at the Department of the Army level by the chief of chaplains and will be offered on many Army posts throughout the United States and overseas.

This will enable a student to begin the program here, and if he or she will be transferred to another post prior to completing the program, the student can join the program at the new post.

The graduate program has been approved for DANTES and Veterans Administration.

For more information or registration, call 545-2366 or leave a message at one of the following numbers: 545-5508 or 545-2288.

Veterans Day offers chance to honor fallen comrades-in-arms

By Kerry M. Steedley
Religious Activities Branch

Veterans Day is a day to remember those who have served their country.

Veterans Day was originally called Armistice Day, a holiday in the United States, Great Britain and France to celebrate the end of World War I on Nov. 11, 1918. It has come to honor men and women killed in war since that time. In 1954 after the Korean War, the date was officially designated as Veterans Day.

In Canada, Nov. 11 came to be Remembrance Day. In Britain, the Sunday nearest Nov. ll was proclaimed Remembrance Sunday. For us as Americans, the day is an opportunity to reflect on the blessings of life and liberty we enjoy. It is also an occasion to remember significant places and situations and to recall special people and their stories.

REFLECTIONS

There is the story I heard at a prayer breakfast at Fort Campbell, Ky. It is the inspiring testimony of Marine Lt. Clebe McClary, who suffered the loss of one eye, his left arm and endured 26 operations from injuries in Vietnam.

There is the story I read in Chaplain John Porter's book, "If I Make My Bed in Hell." It is the moving recollection of the death of a soldier, Spec. 4 Ray Bowen from Hannibal, N.Y. Porter writes:

"Ray served as my enlisted assistant. He was a good soldier and a good friend. He was the kind of boy I would like for my daughter to marry. He never squeezed a trigger in combat, never killed, never even hated. Yet he is dead. Ray begged to go with me into combat, and he pleaded for us to stay where the action was so that we could help the men in case of trouble.

"Trouble came, and side-by-side we lay in the midst of it. I looked into his eyes and saw faith and courage. When I looked back, his eyes were closed, not to open again. He died in my arms.

"I am now back home again. Two years have passed, but I still remember Ray Bowen and the men like him in the 173rd Airborne Brigade with whom I had the privilege of serving.

In them I saw the American ideal, and in the process I became a better American. They gave the words, duty, honor, and country a new meaning. I salute their heroism, their courage and their faith."

Veterans Day is the realization of the painful price of freedom's fare. There are many veterans of many wars who like McClary have lost limbs.

There are seemingly countless crosses in Arlington National Cemetery and European burial places that make one think about the ultimate sacrifice of people like Ray Bowen who laid down his life in battle.

Veterans Day is a day of remembrance. It is a day to remember those who have done their duty. It is a day to especially remember those who died doing their duty.

May it also be a day where the living, reserved by the grace of God, remain faithful in doing our duty.

Seventh-Day Adventists gain place of worship

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Seventh-Day Adventist soldiers coming to Fort Benning for training or duty have a time and a place to worship on post.

The Fort Benning Seventh-Day Adventist fellowship began meting in the Sand Hill Chapel Oct. 17 and will meet every Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

"The service has three purposes — to worship God, to fellowship, and to study God's word," said Chaplain (Capt.) Dale Forrester, a Protestant chaplain endorsed by the Seventh-Day Adventist Church who directs the service.

"Although this service is designed for soldiers in training with the Infantry Training Brigade, anyone wishing to worship God is welcome," he said.

Testing evaluates mental proficiency

Maj. Richard Dabbs, chief nurse, 2nd MASH, moves a patient downstream.

36th Engineer Group

The 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital hosted the Expert Field Medical Badge competition Oct. 25 to 30.

The EFMB is awarded to those soldiers who successfully complete a demanding training and testing course outlined in Training Circular 8-100.

According to 2nd MASH commander Lt. Col. James Brooks, the EFMB is much more than a chance for a soldier to add a badge to his or her uniform.

"The EFMB is an opportunity for all soldiers assigned to a medical unit to experience intense realistic field training that can only improve the skills they will need in time of conflict," said Brooks. "It also gives the hosting unit an opportunity to enhance its unit proficiency and combat readiness."

To do this, mechanics, drivers or whoever become litter bearers when the number of wounded personnel overwhelm the normal medical support staff, Brooks said.

"The litter bearer obstacle course is very realistic and physically demanding," he said. "Each soldier learns the correct procedures for transporting wounded soldiers without causing them greater injuries. This should increase the average soldier's confidence that he or she will receive only quality medical care should the need arise."

All soldiers in Brooks' unit underwent the EFMB training but only volunteers went on to test for the badge.

Soldiers from around the country came to Fort Benning to compete and train. In all, 195 soldiers took part in the training week prior to test week.

The 2nd MASH set up training week with the individual soldier in mind. One on one with the instructor was the rule rather than the exception.

"It was very important to set up the training just like we would be testing, one-on-one with the same standard of excellence used," said Brooks.

The same instructors used to set up training were the ones the candidates would face during the actual test. In support of the daily training schedule a nighttime study hall was set up so students could seek help from an instructor in problem areas.

It was this attention to detail and individual instruction that impressed those who took part in the EFMB, said Brooks.

"Our training is outstanding – the best I've received (compared to) the two other times I went out for the badge," said Spc. Artie Davis of 2nd MASH.

His sentiment was echoed by Capt. Tracy Saboy, a nurse practitioner at Martin Army Community Hospital.

"The training is excellent; even if you don't get the badge, you come out well trained," Saboy said. "The personalized instruction at night (reinforces) what you were taught during the day and you can practice on the actual equipment on which you will be tested. That is very important for (people) like me who work in a hospital environment and don't get to the field very often."

For the 171 soldiers wishing to compete, the first step was a 100-question written test covering everything from patient evacuation to probing for mines. Out of those, 114 soldiers advanced to the next phase.

Next came hands-on tests in communications, emergency medical field treatment, cardiopulmonary resuscitation, a litter obstacle course and a 12-mile road march.

One by one, each of the 114 gave it his best effort until only 27 remained to capture the EFMB.

The spirit of the EFMB competition can best be summed up by the feelings voiced by those who fell short this time, "It got me this time, but I'll be back!"

Cadets get 'real' training

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Conducting a successful training exercise under any conditions requires proper instruction, preparation and execution, especially when the rounds are live.

At the Department of Tactics and Combined Arms at the School of the Americas, live fire means recreating combat conditions to ensure Latin American cadets "understand what it sounds and feels like to have rounds going off to the left and the right, while being supported by another element," said Lt. Col. John J. Bastone, director of DTAC.

Bastone was describing a recent squad movement to contact live-fire exercise conducted Oct. 26 at Malone Range 22, by students of the Cadet Infantry Qualification Course and the instructors of Detachment 2 of the Tactics Division, DTAC.

Although the course is "similar in scope to the Infantry Officer Basic Course," Bastone said, the students are, however, still in their final year of study as cadets.

The live-fire conditions of the exercise make it unique because SOA is the only institution that trains cadets using live rounds, Bastone said.

In addition to training cadets to react under fire, the use of live rounds is necessary because SOA's cadet infantry course is, in many cases, the only infantry training the cadets will receive, even after being commissioned, unless they return to SOA for advanced training.

The necessity of using live fire to enhance the training exercise also increases the responsibilities of the instructors to ensure safety.

According to Bastone, Capt. Norberto Colon, commander of Detachment 2, and Sgt. 1st Class Miguel A. Carrion, noncommissioned officer in charge of Detachment 2, maintain high standards of proficiency and safety within the detachment and extend it throughout the course.

The results of conscientious and meticulous attention to detail maintain safety and result in a combat realistic environment.

Most of the students in the current C-23 course are from the Dominican Republic and Colombia. The class will graduate in December.

The 1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment, Infantry Training Brigade, will change commanders Thursday during a 9 a.m. ceremony on Weatherby Field.

Lt. Col. Charles W. Cardinal will take command from Lt. Col. Mark H. Gerner.

Cardinal was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1975.

He has served in a number of command and staff positions both in the United Stated and overseas, including command of an infantry company in the 9th Infantry Division at Fort Lewis, Wash.

In April 1991, he deployed with the 3rd Battalion, 325th Infantry Airborne Combat Team during Operation Desert Storm.

He is married to Maj. Beverly S. Cardinal, who is assigned to the 1st Personnel Command in Germany. She will be reassigned to Fort Benning in the near future.

Gerner is being reassigned as the deputy commander of the Infantry Training Brigade.

He graduated from the U.S. Military Academy as an infantry second lieutenant in 1973.

In 1988, he deployed with the 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry, to conduct peace-keeping operations with the Multinational Force in Sinai, Egypt.

The 2nd Battalion, 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Mechanized), changed commanders Oct. 30 during a ceremony 2 p.m. on Dickman Field.

Lt. Col. Alex B. McKindra took command from Lt. Col. Eric T. Olson. McKindra was most recently assigned as a tactics instructor in the U.S. Army Infantry School.

McKindra was commissioned in the infantry as a distinguished military graduate from the University of Arkansas' Reserve Officers' Training Corps program in 1975.

He has served in a number of command and staff positions, including command of four companies. He served with the 3rd Armored Division during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

He and his wife, Martha, have two children.

Olson is being reassigned to the Pentagon in Washington, D.C. He was commissioned an infantry second lieutenant in 1972 from the U.S. Military Academy.

He took command of the battalion in October 1990 in Saudi Arabia. During Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm, he commanded Task Force 2-18 of the 24th Infantry Division.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• The Allied invasion of French North Africa, known as Operation Torch, under the overall control of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, began successfully in three main areas.

The Western Task Force, commanded by Gen. George S. Patton, swept through Casablanca where French forces sympathetic to the Germans quickly rethought their political preferences and threw down their arms.

The Center Task Force, led by Gen. Lloyd Fredendall, captured the city of Oran. The Eastern Task Force, commanded by Gen. Charles W. Ryder, landed at Algiers.• On Guadalcanal, the 1st Marine Division began attacks on the east main perimeter, successfully dispersing Japanese forces at Koli Point.

• In North Africa, Allied forces, commanded by Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, pursued the Afrika Korps from Egypt into Libya. The New Zealand Division led the pursuit as units from the British 1st and 7th Armored divisions entered Tobruk.

• Despite disadvantages in terms of armaments, the Indian minesweeper Bengal and the tanker Ondina sunk the Japanese merchant raider Hokoku Maru and drove off the Aikoku Maru.

• Fort Benning prepared for an even larger influx of soldiers as President Franklin D. Roosevelt lowered the draft age from 20 to 18 years old. Estimates placed the U.S. armed forces at the 10 million men mark by the end of 1943.

ALL THE WAY!

Post employee receives 'Falcon'

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

During weekdays, David Mize goes about his tasks as chief of the Training and Doctrine Command Manpower Activity at Fort Benning.

Mize

On weekends, However, Mize is a lieutenant colonel in the Air Force Reserve and holds a position that has a direct impact on the future of that and other military services.

Mize is the liaison officer commander for Georgia and was recently honored for doing his job better than anyone else. He received the Falcon Trophy as Outstanding Liaison Officer Commander for Region II, Southeast United States.

Mize received his commission in the Air Force in June 1966. After serving 8 1/2 years of active service, Mize joined the Reserves and the U.S. Air Force Admission Liaison Officer Program in June 1979.

Mize, with his staff of 45 officers, ranging in rank from first lieutenant to colonel, has the responsibility of recruiting the Air Force officers of tomorrow — a job that Mize said he truly enjoys.

"I tell my officers that you must wear a purple suit for this position," said Mize. "Yes, you wear the uniform of the Air Force, but you must sell the idea of the military as a whole," said Mize.

Mize and his staff recruit the best all-around students to compete for scholarships from the Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps or to the Air Force Academy. The Air Force ROTC scholarship is worth $70,000, according to Mize, and the Air Force Academy scholarship is worth $225,000.

For a student who has achieved academically and in other ways, but whose parents just don't have the means to send him or her to college, a scholarship can be a real blessing — for the students, their families and the Air Force, according to Mize.

"Our job is to recruit what the Air Force will need five years down the line," said Mize. "The officers must recruit students with abilities in traditional areas such as engineering and math, or hot new areas, such as environmental studies, students who will be willing to get degrees in these subjects, as well as being outstanding in other areas in their lives, such as sports, community service or holding an after-school job.

"The scholarship is not a free ride," Mize said. "There are commitments. A recipient of an Air Force ROTC scholarship must commit to four subsequent years of active duty service. An Air Force Academy scholarship incurs a five-year term of active duty service."

Mize said it's worth it. "I enjoyed the time I spent on active duty," he said. "And the service academies and ROTC programs in colleges offer students a top quality education," he said.

Post receives donation for AER

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning received an outside donation for its soldiers Oct. 27.

Col. Burnet R. Quick, post chief of staff, accepted a check for $1,000 from Billy Watson, publisher of the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer.

Watson said that he wished the money be used to help soldiers who need financial assistance during economic troubles, such as the Army Emergency Relief fund.

AER is the quickest way for soldiers to get money when they need it immediately, said Quick after accepting the check.

Quick assured Watson the money would be used to better the lives of soldiers in need.

Students experience 'Pioneer Days'

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

As the teacher rang the bell, the students looked up from their slates, marbles, horseshoes and jump ropes, and prepared to change to another activity.

With girls in long dresses and bonnets, the children's handcrafted toys, and a meal cooked over an open fire, the scene was straight out of the 1800s. The children, however, were students in Sue Ann Dixon's fifth-grade class at Fort Benning's Wilbur School, apparently confirmed members of the computer generation.

Oct. 23, Pioneer Day, was the culmination of eight weeks of study in a "whole language" project, during which the entire curriculum — science, math, social studies and language arts — was drawn from one book, "Sarah, Plain and Tall," by Patricia MacLachlan.

The book tells the story of a pioneer woman in the 1800s and the family of which she becomes a member. Using the book as inspiration, Dixon's class created its own "Pioneer Day" complete with appropriate activities.

The students made a paper quilt, pieced together from individual squares depicting scenes from the book. They also dressed as pioneers, gathered wood for an open fire, chopped vegetables for stew, made butter for cornbread and cooked venison.

Dixon seemed enthusiastic about the project, helping the students get into the "pioneer spirit" with her own costume and role-playing.

"This is something they'll never forget," she said.

Dixon added that "whole language" learning and special activities helped make the students' classes connect, so their interest remained keen throughout the eight weeks.

The students seemed to agree that the project was a lot of fun, and said they learned a lot, especially about history, during the project.

Class members Anthony Hyde, Gloria Monell, Missy Haskins and David Coleman seemed to sum up the general attitude, remarking that while it was fun and educational, marbles and slates couldn't replace video games and computers.

Fine arts come to Fort Benning schools

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Soprano Meg Stecker-Runde, accompanied by pianist Rexford Whiddon of Columbus College, entertained Fort Benning Schools students this week as the first in the Fine Arts Concerts series to be performed in the schools this academic year.

Stecker-Runde is the recipient of numerous awards including three in the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions.

She has performed with the opera companies of New York, Wisconsin and Alaska.

Her roles have included Adele in "Die Fledermaus," Lola in "Cavallaria Rusticana," Papagena in "The Magic Flute," Susanna in "The Marriage of Figaro," Clorinda in "La Cenerentola" and Frasquita in "Carmen."

In its ninth consecutive year in the Fort Benning Schools, the Fine Arts Concerts series is designed to provide children with a quality artistic experience while teaching them appropriate concert behavior, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, director of Staff Development.

Guest artists for this series are professional musicians, most of whom are associated with Columbus College.

It is sponsored by the Enlisted Wives' Club.

More information about the performance schedule may be obtained by contacting Middlemiss at 545-2500.

Tot Town provides family support

Spc. Anthony Jackson
U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit

Forty years after Fort Benning was established, a new facility was erected on post, thus beginning a unique legacy of soldier and family support — the Fort Benning's Tot Town Child Development Center.

To help Tot Town celebrate its 35th anniversary, another post unit joined in on the festivities at the Tot Town Child Development Center.

Sgt. Thomas Tamas and 1st Lt. Kristin Peterson, along with a staff of clowns and a number of other visitors helped Tot Town and the children celebrate the center's 35 years of dedicated service to the Fort Benning community.

Tamas and Peterson, both 1992 Bacelona Olympians and shooters with U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit expressed interest in the center.

"The children were a treat to be around and it really gave me a chance to see the quality of service that Tot Town provides to our youth," said Peterson.

"Sometimes the urge comes over me to constantly check up on my family when I'm out of the state or the country at a shooting event," said Tamas. "The visit to the center gave me the opportunity to see what's available and to reassure me that when I'm gone, my family will be in good hands."

The Daughters of the United States Army was created at Fort Benning in order to develop community support, which established Tot Town as a tool to do just that.

"Though we're a nonprofit organization that is self-supported, I think we're unique because we're the only child-care center in the whole military program — worldwide — that provides hourly care," said Lani Longarzo, DUSA-Tot Town chairwoman.

"We also provide some full-day care and preschool programs," Brown said. "Because Fort Benning is home of the infantry, it seems we (Tot Town) are afforded the chance to meet many interesting people. It's because of this very reason we have day-care specialists here who speak Spanish, English and a variety of other languages."

"We also can tailor our services to a unit's specific needs if need be," Barnes added.

"We've had 35 years of dedicated service, and it's not about to stop," Brown said.

Any questions or concerns about Tot Town can be answered by calling 689-8698 or 689-8772.

Driver saves lives, receives an award

Quick thinking saves school children

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Quick thinking and sound judgment about a downed power line earned Tammy Shier a Certificate of Commendation for exceptional performance of her duties as a bus driver for the Fort Benning Schools.

Shier

On Oct. 1 as Shier was delivering her students from school to the Custer Terrace area, a moving van clipped a power line that fell across the hood of her bus.

She quickly stopped the bus, removed the children to an area some distance from the bus and enlisted the help of several soldiers on the scene to keep the children in a group.

While others lifted the power line, she drove the bus clear of the area, reloaded the students and delivered them home.

The award was presented to Shier by Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, superintendent of schools, during a bus driver training session Oct. 30 at Herbert J. Dexter School.

The training session is part of an ongoing program designed to keep bus drivers current on school bus safety procedures.

Shier has been with J.R.W. Enterprises, Fort Benning's school bus contractor, for the past two years.

COMMUNITY BRIEFS

American Indian Day — Kindergarten students in Fort Benning's McBride Elementary School will celebrate their second annual American Indian Day Nov. 20.

There will be music dance, games, clay pottery, dyes and symbols and jewelry.

The school yard will be transformed into an Indian village as students spend the day moving through the variety of educational experiences focusing on aspects of the American Indian culture.

OWC to host bazaar — The 1992 Benning Bazaar will be Nov. 14 at Infantry Hall from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Anyone desiring to participate as a vendor should send descriptions and photographs of merchandise to be sold to the Officers' Wives' Club, P.O. Box 1978, Fort Benning, Ga. 31905. Booths are available on a first-come, first-come, first-served basis.

For more information, call the OWC at 687-3537 or Holly Grange at 682-49647.

Girl Scout registration — Girl Scouts are currently registering. For more information, call 327-2646. Fort Benning Girl Scouts needs volunteers. Current volunteer positions still available include: service team secretary, Brownie and Daisy consultant, and two Brownie co-leaders. To volunteer, call 682-8222.

Mayors on radio — WEAM Radio will highlight Fort Benning's mayoral system on Saturday at 9 a.m. on 1580 AM.

The 30-minute talk show will feature newly-elected mayors Linda Matheny and Diane Winmon and Darlene Perry, Community Life officer.

Soldier shines in school arena

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

In today's Army, every soldier needs an edge to keep him or her competitive.

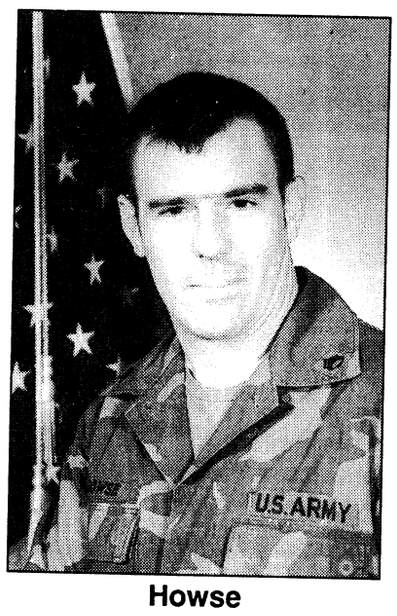
One soldier on Fort Benning has taken this advice to heart, rising from a ninth-grade education to earning an associate's degree and now is making strides toward earning a bachelor's degree.

Sgt. 1st Class James W. Howse, noncommissioned officer in charge of the Sightseeing Road Army Learning Center and assigned to Company B, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, never thought that school was his "cup of Joe." A native Georgian from just outside of Savannah in Effingham County, Howse joined the Army Oct. 20, 1972, a few years after dropping out of high school after the ninth grade.

"I thought that school was too regimented for me, but the Army took care of (those ideas)," said Howse. "If I thought school was tough, it was nothing compared to the Army!"

That was fine with Howse. Having planned to stay in the Army only long enough to earn the money to buy a Corvette to travel across the country, Howse didn't want to make the Army a lifelong career.

"I did get to travel, thanks to Uncle Sam, but not by that Corvette," said Howse. He soon found himself on a plane to Fort Lewis, Wash. as a switchboard operator.



Howse

After a tour in Washington, Howse was sent to Germany. There he began the road to reaching his education goals by completing his high school education.

"The first month I was stationed in Germany, I went to the soldier of the month board," said Howse. "After winning, my company commander called me into his office to congratulate me on being the soldier of the month. Then he asked me if I was ready to go back to school, and the rest is history," he said.

Howse reported to the post's education center the next day and has not looked back since. After six months "and a lot of research papers later," Howse was the honor graduate of the senior class of 1975 at the Stuttgart American High School.

Howse's father died three days prior to the graduation, so Howse had to miss the ceremony to take emergency leave.

Howse was then assigned at Fort Lewis once more. Soon after he met his future wife, Joan, and started a family. Howse had another overseas tour in Korea, where he dabbled at college night classes, but he did not get serious until he returned to the states.

After attending the Chemical Operations School, where he was the distinguished honor graduate from his class in May 1981, Howse came to a point where he decided that the Army was going to be his career. After another tour in Germany, where his education goals were also put on hold, Howse returned to the states and was stationed with the 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division at Fort Benning. Howse was hurt in an accident and was made an instructor and moved to Infantry Hall. It was there that Howse caught the fever once again.

"One of my NCOs at that time, Staff Sgt. Sandra Sykes, was enrolled at Troy State University and between her and my wife, it wasn't long before I was enrolled in school myself," he said.

"My wife, Joan has really encouraged and stuck by me, especially when I felt like quitting again. When I complete my bachelor's degree, then it will be Joan's turn to go to school."

Howse received a scholarship from the Fort Benning Management Association, and was able to complete and receive an associate's degree in computer information systems from Troy State University, Fort Benning Branch. Howse has since enrolled at the Phenix City campus, where he hopes to finish the requirements for a bachelor's degree.

As well as reaching his own education goals, Howse has encouraged soldiers under him to continue their education.

"After I enrolled in college here, I encouraged all the NCOs in my section to go back to school," said Howse. Eventually, every NCO in his section did enroll — a fact that was favorably noted on his NCO evaluation report.

Howse will retire from the Army Jan. 30 and he hopes to find work as a computer programmer, analyst or in computer sales. Howse and his wife, Joan have two children, Sandra, 14, and Donald, 13.

Residents test Saturns

Directorate of Community Activities

A vehicle display and a new car test drive incentive program was conducted at Fort Benning by the Saturn Corporation Oct. 16 and 17 at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The test drive provided nembers of the Fort Benning :ommunity an opportunity to see ınd test drive a new Saturn utomobile.

Those who visited the display ad the opportunity to receive romotional T-shirts and special rizes and an opportunity to win a 100 gift certificate.

The Fort Benning Installation Morale, Welfare and Recreation Fund received $5 for each test drive taken.

According to Directorate of Community Activities officials, 250 persons completed test drives,.

The event concluded with a brief ceremony during which Jeff Goodrum, Saturn of Columbus sales manager, presented an appreciation plaque and a check for $1,200 to Col. Gary Jones, garrison commander.

Goodrum also presented Alan Stewart, the director of Community Activities, an appreciation plaque

PET OF THE WEEK

This female german shepherd-mix puppy (age 11 months) is looking fa home. She is nuetered, and her shots are up to date. If you would lilto adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office inuilding 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 nedoor. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to).m. For more information, call 545-1127.

you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facty. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Acity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray imundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arres, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or desyed.

bies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Seres can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records whchanges occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last worng day of each month.

Miniseries dramatizes life, times of 'Sinatra'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Between all the facts and all the rumors, the entertainer known as "Ol' Blue Eyes'' and "The Chairman of the Board'' has lived an exceptionally fascinating life.

SPOTLIGHT

For the story of Frank Sinatra to be told with any extensive degree of accuracy, the participation of someone close to him was virtually mandatory. As it has turned out, his daughter Tina is the executive producer of "Sinatra," Sunday and Tuesday's long-awaited new five-hour CBS miniseries that casts Philip ("North and South") Casnoff in the title role. The script traces the legendary performer's history from 1925 — when he was 10 years old, and already singing in Hoboken, N.J. — to his celebrated 1974 concert at New York's Madison Square Garden. Traced along the way are his marriages to Nancy Barbato (Tina's mother, played by Gina Gershon), Ava Gardner (Marcia Gay Harden) and Mia Farrow (Nina Siemaszko); other prominent Sinatra acquaintances depicted in the drama include bandleader Tommy Dorsey (Bob Gunton), "Rat Pack" members Dean Martin (Danny Gans) and Peter Lawford (Joris Stuyck), John F. Kennedy (James F. Kelly) and underworld figure Sam Giancana (Rod Steiger). Olympia Dukakis and Joe Santos portray Sinatra's parents, and Frank Sinatra Jr. contributes certain "vocal performances" to the soundtrack, as does Australian actor Tom ("The Man From Snowy River") Burlinson.

Philip Casnoff as Frank Sinatra

"I suppose we do set some records straight," says Tina Sinatra of the project, "but first and foremost, we intend to entertain. My father had everything to do with the development of the screenplay (which was written by William Mastrosimone), and the scenes that put together this picture are all his recollections and remembrances of his own life. In the process, I think you learn the truth far more than you would have, had he not been responsible for the material himself." Acknowledging possible doubts about the program's handling of less-attractive aspects of her father's life, such as his alleged mob ties, Sinatra adds that she and her staff did "cross-reference and corroborate. There were times when he thought he had a clear recollection, and perhaps from his vantage point, it was ... but when I could not corroborate something completely, I had to find the 'truer truth.' That happened in many cases.''

Casnoff concedes that he isn't "crazy about" some of Frank Sinatra's music ("when he did The Beatles' stuff"), but he quickly adds, "He was my father's icon, and for that reason, his music was always playing in the house. Because he was so meaningful to my father, I wanted to make sure I did a good job for him. Nobody had ever told me I looked like Frank or anything like that, so I watched some of his early films and just kept watching and watching, and I think I picked up an unconscious gesture here and there. If I'd had the feeling of awe, I couldn't have begun to play the part." Casnoff actually met Frank Sinatra once, after he had landed the role, last Presidents' Day on a lot at Warner Bros. (the studio backing the miniseries): "I was nervous about it, but I was told that he was nervous about it too, so that made me feel better. I've heard that he's easiest to talk with (when) sitting down and having a drink or dinner, so I wasn't expecting too much. I thought that if I was going to get something from him, I would have to try and start a conversation, but he was very nice. He said, 'You're going to do a great job.'"

Tina Sinatra claims her father took "a very hands-off approach" to the CBS biography after his participation in the writing process was over, refusing to watch dailies or a 22-minute presentation film that was assembled to secure foreign sales. Still, she recalls, "When Dad read the drafts, he would call and say, 'Where did you get that?' It happened, for example, (regarding a scene) between him and my mother. I said, 'I got it from Mom,' and he said, 'Gee, 'cause I never would have told you that.' He would not talk easily about the women in his life, ever. He's a gentleman, so those

Army warns — get ready for flu season; here's what to do

Your muscles ache. Your chest hurts. You're running a fever and your head feels like someone is using a jackhammer in it. Chances are, you've got that seasonal malady called the flu. Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Soldiers Television Service reports on what soldiers can do to avoid the flu.

America needs teachers and the transitioning soldier needs a new career. Seven years ago, the secretaries of Defense and of Education recommended the marriage of the two needs. Soldiers Television Service presents an update on the new Careers in Education Program on TV next week.

USA Express slated for Benning performance

TRADOC News Service

It's new, it's fresh, it's fast-paced, it's fun, it's music, and it's all Army!

It's the USA Express seven-piece soldier variety show, which is touring 22 Army installations across the country during November and December.

USA Express is made up of the most talented instrumentalists and vocalists who competed in the October Army Battle of the Bands at Fort Stewart, Ga.

The musical battle is sponsored by U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center Entertainment division, the same Alexandria Virginia-based agency that produces the U.S. Army Soldier Show.

"The idea is to build esprit de corps and pride by sending talented soldiers around to entertain their fellow soldiers," said Mike Wellert, chief of the CFSC Entertainment Division.

"We've seen tremendous success with the Soldier Show and there are so many talented soldiers and so much interest in music that we wanted to come up with another smaller vehicle to showcase more talent.

"USA Express lets us do that," he said. "Audiences can dance and party to this music in a nightclub environment. That's what the show is designed for," he said.

Wellert and other Entertainment Division staff selected five men and two women form the 10 bands that participated in the Battle of the Bands. Selections were based on talent, musical ability, stage presence and military deportment.

Sgt. Crosby Bowens, keyboard and Sgt. Joceline Sanders, vocalist were selected from the Fort Stewart entry, "Gold Touch," a rhythm and blues band that was judged best of show and that took first place in the R & B category.

Also selected were vocalists Spc. Jon Cable, with the Fort Polk band "Excursion" and Spc. Mary Anna Langston of Camp Red Cloud, 8th U.S. Army, Korea, who recently finished a tour with the 1992 Army Soldier Show. U.S. Army Europe is represented by drummer Spc. Michael Williams from Kitzingen, Germany.

The base player, Spc. James Brown, was selected from the Fort Sill, Okla., band "Millennium." Rounding out USA express is Spc. Vernon Cunningham, guitarist with "The Other Band," from Fort Campbell, Ky.

Joining the musicians are two experienced audio technicians, Spc. David Tennant, Schweinfurt, Germany; and Sgt. Timothy Higdon, Fort Knox, Ky.

USA Express will perform the latest top 40 chart hits as well as some oldies but goodies in clubs and recreation centers at Army installations in 12 states.

Hit play 'drives' to post Officers' Club

Fort Benning Officers' Club

A dinner theater featuring "Driving Miss Daisy" will be Saturday at the Fort Benning Officers' Club.

Sponsored by the Officers' Club and the Springer Opera House, the dinner theater is $14.50 per person and in-cludes dinner from 6 to 8 p.m. and theater at 8 p.m.

Alfred Uhry's Pulitzer Prize-winning play, "Driving Miss Daisy" is the "odd couple" story about the unlikely relationship between an aging, wealthy Jewish widow and the proud black man who is her chauffeur.

"Driving Miss Daisy" is a tale that spans a 25-year period between 1948 and 1973 — the most turbulent years in the struggle to desegregate the South'ds racist and classicist institutions.

For reservations and to buy tickets, call 682-0640.

Shop wisely for auto mechanic

Better Business Bureau

If you're a typical car owner, you may have little reason to learn about the mechanics of your vehicle; but, when it's time for repairs, you should know how to locate a reliable shop and a qualified mechanic.

If you have a problem with your car while it's still under warranty, follow the manufacturer's requirements, which may include having repairs made at an authorized franchised dealership to keep your warranty in effect.

If your car is no longer under warranty and you're looking for a qualified repair shop, ask friends for recommendations.

Look for shops that have mechanics certified through the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence. This program certifies mechanics in eight areas of repair.

And, whether you're going to a dealership or independent shop, check it out with your BBB.

For major work, such as brake, transmission or engine repairs, you need to find a shop employing a specialist. Because of complex auto designs and the use of computers in diagnosing your car's problems, make sure the repair facility has the equipment to detect problems and repair them.

If you don't know a distributor from a differential, don't display your ignorance. Let the shop diagnose the problem. You may cost yourself money by requesting a specific repair that may not solve the problem at all.

Before authorizing repairs on your car, get an estimate in writing for parts and labor. Tell the shop to get your permission before making additional repairs or replacements.

To ensure you are notified about additional costs, have the service manager write this request on the bottom of the repair order, and leave phone numbers where you can be reached.

When you pick up your car, ask the service manager to explain all work completed and all replacements made. If you don't understand, ask questions until you do.

If the shop guarantees its work, get the guarantee in writing. Be sure that your bill itemizes the repairs so if a problem occurs later, you can prove that the item in question is covered by the guarantee.

The Council of Better Business Bureaus has published a booklet "Tips on Car Repair." For a copy, send $1 and a self-addressed, business-size envelope to CBBB, Department 023, Washington, D.C. 20042-0023.

Dentists encourage smokers to quit

Georgia Dental Association

ATLANTA — Four out of five dentists don't smoke, because they say they care about their health and they know what smoking will do to their oral health.

Dentists are among those who support the Great American Smokeout Nov. 19. The smokeout is sponsored by the American Cancer Society to encourage smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours.

The cancer society estimates there are 50 million cigarette smokers in the United States.

Smoking has been implicated in cancers of the mouth, pharynx, larynx, esophagus, pancreas, cervix, kidney and bladder. Smoking accounts for nearly 30 percent of all cancers.

The Georgia Dental Association offers the following tips to help smokers kick the habit of smoking:

- Try brisk walks to stay alert
- Toy with a pen instead of a cigarette
- Learn a new sport or hobby
- Stop smoking during a non-stressful period in your life
- Become aware of every cigarette you smoke

Take safety precautions to ensure safe fireplace

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Sitting in front of a blazing fireplace on a cold fall or winter evening sounds warm and cozy.

Unfortunately, it can also be dangerous with 84,000 fires occurring every year in fireplaces and wood stoves, according to a National Fire Protection Association study.

"It's the only time you openly invite fire into your living room, and you have to respect that and take the necessary precautions," says Geoff Wurzel, executive director of the Wood Heating Education and Research Foundation.

Here are several precautions Wurzel suggests you keep in mind:

- Don't leave the fire unattended, especially when small children are in the room.
- Keep the glass doors or fire screen closed to keep logs in place and to prevent sparks from coming out. "People often open up the screen and leave it that way so they can see the fire better," Wurzel says.
- If you are having a fireplace installed, make sure the installer is certified.
- Take care if you use wood-wax fireplace logs, especially in metal fireplaces.

"People often buy the wood-wax logs and stack two or three on top of each other, and light them.

"Those logs burn much hotter than normal wood because of the wax, and can warp your chimney system. Follow package directions, and use only one log at a time," Wurzel says.

- When you clean the fireplace, put ashes in a metal container with a lid. Embers can burn for weeks and have been known to cause fires when placed in a garbage can with other trash.
- Have your chimney and fireplace checked every fall or winter before you use it.

If you use your fireplace often, have it cleaned every year.

Chimney sweeps check for accumulations of creosote, a black, tarry substance that is extremely flammable.

"Ninety-three percent of all chimney fires are related to creosote buildup," Wurzel says.

- Make sure you use seasoned wood, and don't burn treated lumber.

Treated wood produces vapors that are harmful to your health," Wurzel says.

moments in the story became surprises to him, and they were also painful." Sinatra maintains she had no problems distinguishing Frank Sinatra, miniseries figure from Frank Sinatra, her father in the course of making the drama. "For seven years (during the show's development), he was a character on a page, but it was hard in certain scenes for me to be on the set. I was a pain to the actors and to the director (James Sadwith), and fortunately for me, they were all very understanding. The script was written very carefully so as not to lose (Frank's) true characteristics or anybody else's, so I had a responsibility to everybody in the piece."

U.S. shooters take CISM title

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 31st Conseil International du Sport Militaire Shooting Championships came to a close Tuesday. More than 300 competitors from more than 20 different countries participated in the military-oriented sporting tournament.

Military shooters etched their names into the record book of six events and the host United States of America won the Challenge Trophy to highlight the week-long event.

The U.S. team, comprised of shooters from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, the Navy, the Marines and the Air Force, made a come-from-behind victory to retain the trophy and to also claim the spoils as the best CISM Shooting Nation title. Norway claimed second and Switzerland took third.

Bulgaria's Olympic silver medalist Capt. Vessela Letcheva, the Army's 1st Lt. Kristin Petersen and Capt. Rhonda Barush all set records in women's individual events.

Letcheva dominated the 50-meter standard rifle 3x20 event scoring 588 out of 600. Letcheva shattered the second oldest record in the CISM books set back in 1983 by U.S. Olympian and former Army Marksmanship Unit member Gloria Parmentier.

Petersen struck gold first with a record 588 firing in the 50-meter individual standard rifle prone event. Petersen was an Olympic alternate for the U.S. teams at Barcelona and Seoul.

A two-year veteran of the marksmanship unit, Petersen said her top priority during the CISM matches was to compete against Letcheva and win.

"I was an alternate for the 1992 Olympic shooting team so I didn't get a chance to compete," she said. "I knew in my heart I could beat her; all I needed was the opportunity."

Not only did Petersen defeat Letcheva, but she was the dominating power shooter that led the women's Standard Rifle Rapid Fire Team to a second place and silver medal finish.

The final women's individual record set was by Barush in the women's 25-meter military rapid fire pistol with a score of 573. The old record was by Marine Corps Olympian and 1991 Armed Forces Female Athlete of the Year Staff Sgt. Roxann Thompson.

The South Korean women's teams proved a strong force setting records in the 25-meter sport and military rapid fire pistol. Gold medal team winners were Hyun Sook Kim, Mi Ya Han and Mi Hyang Kim.

Sgt. Ragnar Jelsnes of Norway registered the only men's record. On the final day of competition, he shot a 586 in the 25-meter military rapid fire pistol. His teammate and previous record-holder Paal Hembre could only place 11th in the event.

Other CISM shooting action saw the men's 300-meter standard rapid fire rifle team leave its competition behind as the combined shooting of Capt. Glenn Dubis, Sgt. Thomas Tamas, 1st Lt. Robert Harbison, Capt David Erickson and Sgt. Lance Hopper put their combined talent together to put first place out of reach.

Finishing first with a combined score of 2,245, the men's rapid fire rifle team claimed an uncontested gold as their closest competition, Norway, took second with 2,216 followed by Sweden with 2,191.

The United States garnered the most medals with 11. Korea and Norway were two back with nine each.

The Polytronic trophy for best rifleman was won by France's Dominique Maquin. Hans Rudolph Schneider of Switzerland was awarded the best pistol shooter trophy.

Next year's championship is set for Norway in July.

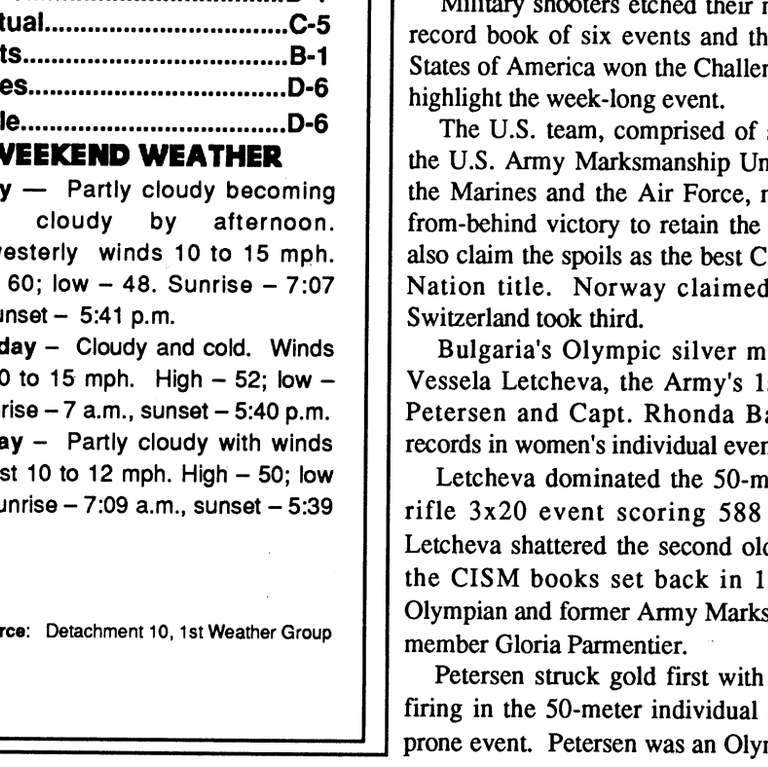
Benning to host seminar



School of the Americas

The fourth Training and Military Education Conference of the 20th Conference of American Armies will be hosted by Fort Benning and the School of the Americas from Sunday to Nov. 20, at SOA headquarters.

The conference will kick off with an opening ceremony scheduled for Monday at 8:30 a.m. in Pratt Hall on the third floor of the SOA headquarters building.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general of Fort Benning, and Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant for SOA, will co-host the conference.

The theme for this year's conference focuses on the role American armies and their reserves will play in guaranteeing the security of democracy.

The conference will cover a variety of issues such as the military's role in countering drug trafficking, officer and noncommissioned officer exchange programs and training methods for promoting democratic systems.

Conference participants include military professionals from the armies of Latin America, as well as the United States and Canada.

The conference will conclude Thursday with a closing ceremony 4:30 p.m. in Pratt Hall.

Bayonet holiday deadlines change

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Bayonet will be published Nov. 25 instead of Nov. 27 because of the Thanksgiving Day holiday.

The deadline for publication in the Nov. 25 issue is noon Tuesday. Anyone who needs to submit articles, photos or film for that issue must have it to The Bayonet no later than noon Tuesday.

The deadline for the following week's issue, which will be published Dec. 4, is noon Nov. 27.

The Bayonet is located in Infantry Hall, Room 601. The newspaper's FAX number is 682-0095 and PROFS identification is Bayonet.

For more information, call 545-2201.

CFC campaign in its sixth week

Fund-raising drive reaches 72 percent

Garrison Commander's Office

The Combined Federal Campaign is in its sixth week of fund raising and has presently reached 72 percent of the goal of $500,000.

CFC is a diverse charity effort because of the vast number of organizations involved that help people, acording to post officials.

Organization capabilities range from feeding the hungry to providing relief to disaster victims.

The program also touches the Army community through programs for youth, handicapped and civilian employees.

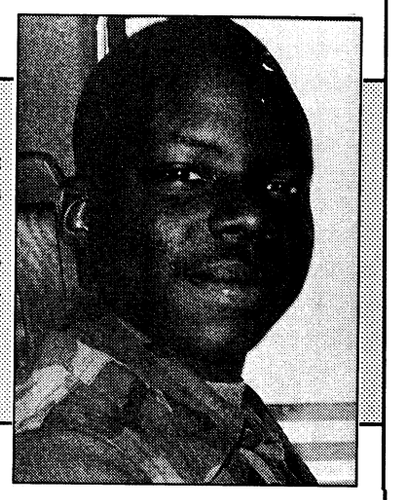
Soldiers should contact their unit or organization coordinator to make donations.

For more information, call Cathy White, CFC coordinator, at 682-5142.

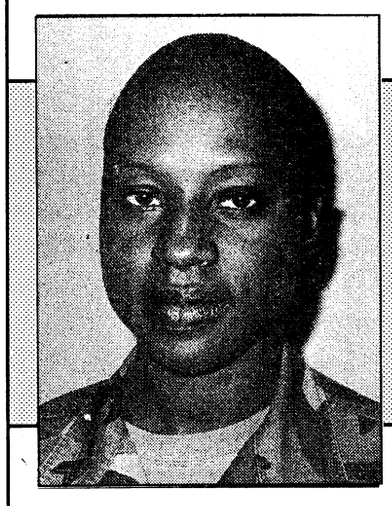
VARIOUS VOICES

The Great American Smokeout is Thursday. Do you think this is an effective way for smokers to quit?

Denise MacDonald, , American Red Cross — "Yes, I think it helps people to quit. The Smokeout gives people a target day to try not to smoke."

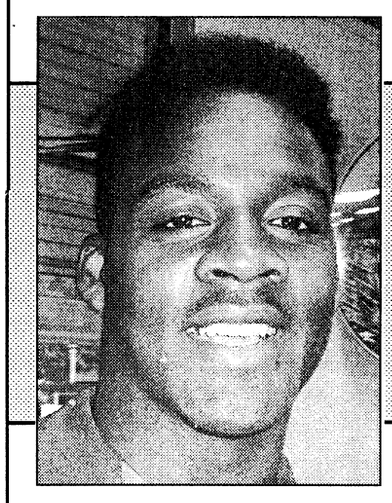


Spc. Keith Robinson, Public Affairs Office — "Yes, I think the Smokeout is effective. If a person stops smoking for one day, he might feel better about himself and quit completely."

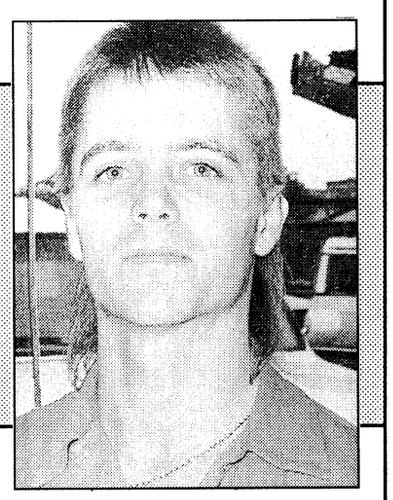


Sgt. Devlin Houston, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "I don't think the Smokeout is effective. People have to have the determination and willpower to quit on their own."

Barbara Lawrence, family member — "I think the Smokeout is effective. It gives people an oppportunity to work with others to quit smoking, instead of doing it on their own."



Staff Sgt. Randy Walker, 4th Ranger Training Battalion — "The Smokeout is a good idea. If people can stop for one day, they've made a beginning."



Mike Duvall, Army and Air Force Exchange Service — "I think the Smokeout is a good idea if people participate. I'm going to try it this year."

Smokers to get a day to quit

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

The American Cancer Society's "Great American Smokeout" is upon us once again.

I think it's stupid.What good does it do? I know of no people who quit smoking because of this one day. In fact I know nonsmokers, hardheaded, obstinate nonsmokers, who decide to try cigarettes on that day.

It's been my experience that if a person is good and ready to quit smoking, really wants to quit smoking, then he or she will.

But if a person isn't, all the messages, all the propaganda, all the incentives in the world, won't get the smoker to quit.

I quit smoking because I didn't like my life being ruled by a weed. I wanted control over how I lived. I didn't like subjugating it to a 96mm piece of paper with dead vegetation rolled up inside.

So one day I got up, tossed out my last pack of Pall Malls and haven't smoked since.

If I can do it, anyone can.

Brad did it. He was one of the healthiest and heaviest (as in several packs a day) smokers I ever knew. He'd run eight miles a day and hack the rest of the time.

He finally decided to quit so he got into the patch program. He hasn't smoked since and says he's got no desire to. If he can quit, anyone can.

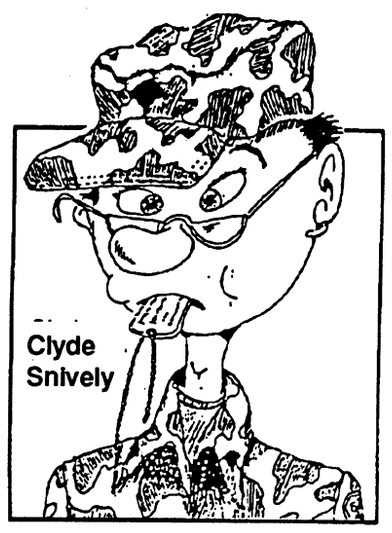
This is one time quitters become winners.

I'm not surprised that smokers ignore the health warnings. Heck, if you're young and healthy, there's no way lung disease or cancer will get you. You're like Lancelot — invincible.

But what does surprise me is that young women smoke. Ladies, now that they've installed Kleig lights in the rest rooms in Infantry Hall, go in there and take a close look at yourselves.

Look at the premature wrinkles around your lips. They're there because of all the sucking action you do with your cigarettes.

Then check out the premature wrinkles around your eyes. They're there because all the squinting you do as the smoke flows up your cheeks and into your eyes.



Why otherwise beautiful ladies want to look 10 years older than they are is beyond me. But they do it.

I'm also surprised that people are willing to spend the money on smoking. If they put 10 cents (approximate cost of a cigarette) in their pockets each time they pulled out a smoke, then counied those dimes up at the end of the day, they'd be amazed at what it's costing them to smoke.

As a reformed smoker, I love the Army's policy on no smoking in buildings. I remember the days when I'd come home from work and smell like a cigarette. The stench would be in my hair, my clothes, up my nose.

The trips back to reality, going to places off post where there are smokers, is devastating. I hate the thought of putting on good clothes to go out, knowing what they'll smell like when I get back.

What really disturbs me though is seeing people in closed up cars smoking, especially when there are young, defenseless children in there with them.

How can anyone consciously subject their own children to the hazards and smells of cigarette smoke? Obviously they don't care, or can't help it because they're controlled by the weed — in other words, they're unconscious.

So, make a liar of me. Use Thursday as the first day of a smoke-free life. Break the shackles of the weed and live free and smokeless.

It ain't easy, but it's doable. Ya just gotta wanna.

Hunter speaks out

After years of being portrayed as a drunkard and an uneducated barbarian, I have finally had enough. Hunters have been taking abuse from nonhunters for years, and it's time for us as hunters to stand up for our rights and put our foot down to this nonsense.

Your hypocritical views toward hunters is to say the least, absurd. I say hypocritical because for someone who has not invested the time, money and care into the"sport" of hunting or even the effort to learn about it and spend time enjoying nature, you have no right to judge us.

Hunters are the ones who spend their time and money trying to conserve nature and make it last so it will be there for others to enjoy in the next generation.

I don't look down on nonhunters because then I would be as bad as they are. I feel sorry for them for their lack of knowledge and for the fact that they are missing out on something special.

For you to understand my point of view, you must first love nature for what it is and not for what you see it as. It is there to be used to enjoy, yet also to respect. It is not a place to take for granted and to abuse as we see fit.

All things were put on this earth for a purpose. Just because you own a gun and have a valid hunting license, you are not a hunter.

Safety to a hunter is not something that is taken for granted, but it is a thing to live by. A hunter is not a drunkard or an uneducated barbarian. A hunter is a person you can learn from if you take the time to listen

In my eyes, it is wrong to raise an animal from birth, teach it to be unafraid of man and then slaughter it. At least the animals we hunt fear man and are given the instincts to outsmart us, which nine times out of ten they do.

In closing, I think it's time to start teaching our children to respect and love nature and to stop teaching them to hate those who do.

Smoking cessation should apply to ads

I was quite shocked when I opened my copy of The Bayonet newspaper last Friday evening to find a full-page ad of the "Marlboro Man" in the sports section, no less, lighting up!

With the Army's in-place policies on smoking cessation and many other health concerns, I am sure we can sell our advertising space to more suitable commercial agencies.

As a physical fitness educator, and a member of the U.S. Army Physical Fitness School, I am obligated to advocate a healthy lifestyle.

While smoking is a personal choice, it is not, by any means, recommended. Smoking contributes to the development of coronary artery disease, a prevalent form of cardiovascular disease. More than 50 percent of all deaths occurring yearly in the United States are related to coronary artery disease.

Smoking can also affect your health and performance in many ways. One of the most obvious is the Army Physical Fitness tests.

According to the Master Fitness Trainer Course workbook, regardless of the soldier's age, number of cigarettes smoked or gender, smokers perform less well than nonsmokers on the Army Physical Fitness Test. The longer an individual has been smoking, the poorer the performance. Smoking cigarettes harms your health, negatively affects performance and shortens your life. It can cause serious diseases that may result in disability or even death.

Physical fitness training is believed to reduce the detrimental effects of smoking. There are also suggestions that regular exercise, and possibly the healthier lifestyle associated with exercise, makes it easier to quit smoking.

If you would like to know more about the relationship of exercise to risk factors for coronary artery disease, contact your local unit master fitness trainer or the Army Physical Fitness School.

Our smoking policies at Fort Benning speak for themselves; local policies limit smoking in Army and Air Force Exchange Service facilities, restrict smoking in certain buildings and prohibit smoking while operating military vehicles, to include Transportation Motor Pool vehicles.

These policies are quite clear, yet for some reason, it was still decided to run this full page ad of a "cowboy" and his preferred brand.

I strongly believe that there are more worthwhile ideas, events and daily activities that can be expressed in our newspaper at Fort Benning. If anyone has a desire to be heard, do as I did; contact the Public Affairs Office and "sound off!"

Staff Sgt. Dennis Guaglianone

Editor's note: Health reasons notwithstanding, cigarettes are a legal product and soldiers are allowed to purchase them (not to mention the fact that they are sold everywhere on post).

Post resident blasts housing commentary

As a career service member and an occupant of a truly fantastic set of quarters on post, I don't do much complaining about my family's living conditions.

I do, however, take serious umbrage at the content and tone of staff writer Brian C. Sutton's commentary ("Stop whining and start budgeting") in the Nov. 6 issue.

Soldiers, of whatever grade, are not "civilian workers living in Columbus making $5 an hour." They are dedicated professionals, called upon to sacrifice far more of their liberties, time and personal lives than any civilian, and they have far less to say about where they work and live than most civilians. They deserve a decent standard of living and quarters that are well maintained.

Fortunately, Fort Benning has many sets of really fine quarters. In spite of that, we do have many homes that are in need of major and minor repairs that are beyond the capability of occupants, or that need repairs the occupants are not authorized to make. Calling the command's attention to problems is not whining.

Sutton's commentary reveals a level of ignorance about the facts of military compensation, which I find appalling in a staff writer on a prize-winning military paper like The Bayonet. Suffice it to say that the cost of living increase that he mentions has been held below the percentage called for under the law almost every year since comparability with civilian pay was adopted as the basis for military pay increases, that base pay is artificially kept down to compensate for the tax-exempt status of allowances, and the soldiers also pay for gasoline, supplemental health insurance and car insurance.

At any rate, Sutton's closing comment is the consummate slap in the face to soldiers because it implies that legitimate complaints somehow equate to disloyalty and ingratitude. Accepting that line of logic and following it to its ultimate conclusion is a sure way to build a second-rate Army devoid of pride.

3rd Battalion rangers, family express gratitude to Fort Benning personnel

On behalf of the rangers of the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment and the family of Col. John T. Keneally, I would like to thank the staff of Fort Benning for its outstanding support during our recent loss.

Often, we take for granted the fine support this post gives the rangers. At times such as these, the quality and compassion of the Fort Benning staff shine brightly.

Once again, we thank you for your support.

Army Continuing Education System

Education and learning centers on post are observing American Education Week, which begins Sunday.

Through the Army Continuing Education System, a broad spectrum of educational opportunities and services are available to members of the Fort Benning community — whether an active duty soldier, family member, civilian employee, Reservist or retiree.

Three education centers and three learning centers offer programs ranging from the Job Skills Education Program (general testing preparation, basic skills and remedial lessons pertaining to math, reading and vocabulary) up through college programs.

Some services rendered by education centers include career counseling, financial assistance (tuition assistance, veterans' benefits, federal aid) and testing foreign languages available on cassette tapes include German, Spanish (Latin America), Spanish (Puerto Rico), Japanese, Arabic, Turkish and Russian

Learning centers currently provide more than 100 self-paced and user-friendly computerized courses to assist in military-related training and educational, professional, and personal development courses.

Also, learning centers offer the Read-to-Lead Program to assist in preparing candidates for the Noncommissioned Officer Education System, Primary Leadership Development Course, Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course, Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course or the Sergeant Major Course.

The centers are open to anyone at anytime.

Prevention can stop injuries

Martin Army Community Hospital officials offer tips for those outdoors in cold weather

By Reginald Richards
Preventive Medicine Service

The cold-weather season is almost here. This is a good time to start thinking about prevention of cold-weather injuries.

Whether a soldier participating in a field training exercise, children playing outside or a family enjoying outdoor activities, everyone must protect themselves from the environmental threat of cold-weather injuries.

Here's a list of cold-weather injuries.

First, there are non-freezing injuries, occurring in temperatures above freezing. These injuries are chilblains, immersion foot and trench foot.

Chilblains result from exposure of fingers, feet, ears and nose to the cold. Symptoms are pain, redness and swelling of the affected areas.

Trench foot and immersion foot result from the feet's prolonged exposure to cold water. Symptoms include pale, wrinkled feet that are swollen and painful.

Second, there are freezing injuries, occurring in freezing temperatures. The main injury is frostbite. Frostbite is deep freezing of the extremities. Symptoms include numbness and pale, waxy skin color. If not treated properly, a limb could be lost.

One of the biggest threats facing Fort Benning personnel is hypothermia. This occurs when the body's temperature begins to decrease. If not treated quickly, hypothermia can result in permanent brain damage or even death. In fact, hypothermia can occur in freezing and nonfreezing temperatures.

Here's how to prevent cold weather injuries. First, go inside and get warm. Children may be able to take this advice, but soldiers in the field may not have this option, so they need to learn to recognize the symptoms of cold-weather injuries and let noncommissioned officers know when they have a suspected injury.

Dress properly. That is, dress in layered clothing and change damp, dirty clothes to avoid moisture from freezing within the clothing. Finally, eat good meals and drink plenty of water.

If anyone has questions or concerns in reference to cold weather injuries, or if units would like detailed training in cold weather injury prevention, contact Environmental Health at Martin Army Community Hospital at 545-3577. Hospital officials can answer questions and provide reference material and classes for cold weather injury prevention.

Commemoration recounts WW II invasion

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The 50th anniversary of "Operation Torch," the Allied invasion that spelled the death of the Axis presence in North Africa in World War II, was commemorated at the National Infantry Museum Sunday.

The commemoration was the ninth in a series of presentations sponsored by the Military History Division.

The next commemoration, titled "The Infantry at Guadalcanal," will be Dec. 13.

Capt. Pete Panzeri,coordinator of the commemoration, said that the commemorations are an excellent way for soldiers, military enthusiasts, veterans, history buffs, or anyone to remember the events of World War II.

"We want to recognize and congratulate those who have served, recognize those who have fallen and recognize their contributions," he said.

The "Operation Torch" commemoration included a reception for the World War II, Korean War and Vietnam War veterans in attendance, guest speakers, a miniature war game hosted by the Historical Miniatures Gaming Society and a living history demonstration by members of the National Military History Association.

Guest speakers included Lt. Col. Jeorg Bahr, German liaison officer; Lt. Col. David Black, British liaison officer; and Howe Winton, professor of Military History at the School of Advanced Air Power Studies at Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.

ACAP is on the move

Army Career and Alumni Program

Army Career and Alumni Program personnel have been busy assisting soldiers in places where most people think soldiers don't work.

Soldiers — active Army, Reservists and National Guard personnel are assigned to Air Force bases and Naval stations, in the Carolinas, Florida, Puerto Rico, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

The Fort Benning ACAP Office ensures that these soldiers and family members are given the same opportunities for transition services that are available at Fort Benning.

Soldiers and families at these "remote" sites are served by one of three ways. These personnel can come to Fort Benning on permissive temporary duty or they may obtain ACAP services at the nearest ACAP office.

Besides Fort Benning, ACAP offices in the Southeast United States are located at Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Gordon, Ga., Fort Jackson, S.C., Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort McClellan, Ala., Fort Rucker, Ala., and at Redstone Arsenal, Ala. If neither one of these two options is feasible, a mobile team takes ACAP services to those soldiers and families.

The team usually consists of one transition services specialist from the Transition Assistance Office, two Job Assistance Center counselors, and an administrative assistant.

The team packs the JAC-In-The-Box (a mobile computer system) and heads for remote sites.

Using the mobile equipment, clients receive a personal transition plan, resume, and a cover letter and have access to the Army Employer Network. These clients receive virtually the same basic seminars that are available at any ACAP Office, officials said.

The team began the regional visits in March 1991 with a trip to Puerto Rico and since then they have completed seven trips and assisted about 500 clients.

Transition services specialists have provided about 1,500 services such as counseling, needs assessments, individual transition plans, and referrals to various service providers.

The Job Assistance Center counselors have provided about 1,875 services such as conducting seminars and workshops, job search planning, resume writing, marketing and interviews. JAC counselors also conduct individual career counseling and assist clients in utilizing the automated Army Employer Network.

Based on the feedback from these remote sites, ACAP is the best thing the Army has implemented because the focus is on the individual, the family and how people are treated, officials said.

All transitioning soldiers are processed in a caring, disciplined, organized and dignified manner, ACAP officials said. The mobile team has planned about 30 regional trips for fiscal 1993 to serve soldiers and families all over the Southeastern United States.

Anyone leaving the Army — soldiers, civilians, and family members are eligible to participate in the Army Career and Alumni Program whether it is a voluntary or an involuntary transition.

Soldiers should contact their unit commanders for more information or call the ACAP Office at 545-4892 or 545-4902.

Post offers free counseling

Civilians get crisis intervention, community referral information

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Help for personal problems can be found right on post.

Fort Benning's Civilian Counseling Service helps employees deal with a variety of problems.

Civilian Counseling Service offers assessment, crisis intervention, short-term counseling, community referral information and supervisory consultation, said Yvonne Wilbanks, coordinator of the program.

These services are free of charge and are available to all civilian employees (Department of the Army and non-appropriated fund) and their families.

"We have no restrictions on what kinds of problems we deal with," Wilbanks said. "Stress, family problems, problems with children, depression, anger, substance abuse ... anything that affects the well-being of employees and their performance at work."

Wilbanks said they will help employees recognize what problems they are having and determine a course of action. If it is necessary to refer the employee to outside counseling or services, then we will work with the employee to try to find services that the employee can afford.

Civilian counseling services are conducted on a completely confidential basis.

"No one will ever know that you came unless you tell them," said Wilbanks, "and participation in the program will not adversely affect your employment or promotion status."

Wilbanks encouraged employees to seek help while their problems are still small.

"If the problem is tackled while it is still small, it will be easier to overcome; but, no matter what the problem, large or small, we are here to help," she said.

She also encouraged supervisors to refer employees experiencing problems to the program as a form of nondisciplinary assistance.

Anyone desiring more information on the program or to schedule an appointment with a counselor can call 545-2475, 545-2742 or 545-4821.

"I look at the program as an employee benefit," Wilbanks said. "Similar services downtown cost money and our services are free," Supervisors and employees are recognizing the value of the program. It's a good sign when people feel free to come and get help for their problems rather than hide them."

COMMISSARY CORNER

Fort Benning Commissary

The Defense Commissary Agency's goal is to enhance the quality of life and benefits of the Commissary to shoppers — a benefit that military people and families consistently rate as their most valuable, after medical care.

Persons who have suggestions on how to improve service may contact the Commissary.

Commissary shoppers average 25.8 percent savings when compared with commercial retail food store prices.

Also, shoppers receive substantial savings through voluntary price reductions by vendors and by using coupons. These savings can help stretch a paycheck and provide money for future or other immediate needs.

Shoppers can expect the Commissary to busy today, Saturday, Sunday, Tuesday, Nov. 24, and Dec. 2 so shopping days should be planned carefully for your holiday needs.

The Commissary will be closed Nov. 26 to observe Thanksgiving Day and will reopen Nov. 27 at 10 a.m. Shopping on the 27th is expected to be very slow.

Shoppers may order party trays and fruit baskets for the holidays from the Commissary.

The trays can be prepared to suit shoppers' needs by calling the responsible department and placing an order.

The deli and party trays can be ordered by calling 544-3524 and the fruit baskets and vegetable trays can be ordered by calling 544-2638.

SECTION B

Teams play season's semi-final football

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Two semi-final games were played Monday and Tuesday evening at Doughboy Stadium to determine who will play in this year's post championship. Here is a wrap up of the games.

3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, (Queen's Own) vs. Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Get Some).

Get Some got a 20-14 win Monday night over Queen's Own and a trip to the post championship Thursday.

Running back Roderick Fairchild powered the Get Some offense scoring two touchdowns and passing for another.

Early in the first half, Fairchild took a pitch from quarterback Perry Toomer off the right side and reached pay dirt 45-yards later with the first score of the night and a 6-0, Get Some lead.

On their next possession, Fairchild went in as quarterback and on second down and long Fairchild hit wide receiver Michael Ward in the back of the end zone and a 12-0, halftime lead.

Get Some's first drive of the second half went for 42-yards with Fairchild capping the drive with an 8-yard touchdown pass from Toomer. Toomer hit tight end Terrence Galloway for the two point conversion and a 20-0 lead.

Queen's Own got on the scoreboard midway through the second half when replacement quarterback Ray Bentley took over for starter Michael Artis and on their second possession moved the offense 39 yards with Bentley scrambling into the end zone from 10-yards out. Bentley hit Richard McPheters with a two-point conversion pass and cut the lead to 20-8, with time running out.

On their next possession, Queen's Own moved to the 5-yard line; and, with two minutes left in the game, Bentley hit tight end Dallas Hogan to narrow the score to 20-14.

Queen's Own couldn't get the ball away from the Get Some offense and time expired with Get Some ahead 20-14.

On defense Reginald Collins, Ward and Fairchild each had an interception to kill off Queen's Own drives. Bentley also had a pick for the Queen's Own defense.

Company C., 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Cougars), vs. 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment (Queen"s Own).

Defense was the name of the game Tuesday evening with the Cougars coming out on top 6-0.

In the first half Queen's Own had two golden opportunities to get on the scoreboard.

With first and goal from the 5-yard line, the Cougar defense held on four straight downs, taking possession at their own five.

The Cougars first drive of the night ended just as fast as it got started when defensive back Richard Webb picked off quarterback Gregory Armwoods first pass of the night, returning it to the Cougar 19-yard line.

But, once again, the Cougar defense flexed its muscle shutting down Queen's Own on four downs. The first half ended with the score still 0-0.

At the start of the second half, the Cougars put an offensive drive together. Starting from their own 35-yard line, the Cougar offense relied on running back Alonzo Upshur to gain most of the yards on quick hits up the middle. Upshur capped the drive with a 7-yard run off left tackle for a 6-0, Cougar lead.

Queen's Own had one final drive that ended, along with their hopes of a rematch with Get Some, at the Cougar 7-yard line when cornerback Jeffrey Poates picked off quarterback Michael Artis to seal the victory.

The Cougars ran out the final minute of the game and propelled themselves to the championship game Thursday evening at Doughboy Stadium starting at 5:30 pm against another team from Kelley Hill, Headquarters Headquarters Detachment 324th Forward Support Battalion (Get Some).

Coach seeks heavy hitters

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Boxing, "the sweet science," has been a home to Sgt. 1st Class Charles E. Kirkland since the age of 12 when he took up the sport.

Kirkland is the boxing coach for the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division. Assigned to Service Battery, 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery, he is now passing on what he has learned in almost 20 years of service to the Army and boxing at Kelley Hill Fitness Center.

Growing up in Detroit, Mich., Kirkland has had the opportunity to fight two world heavyweight champions.

In 1975 in an interservice match, he lost a bout on a decision to Leon Spinks, who would go on to become heavyweight champion of the world. In 1976 Kirkland fought Spinks again at the Olympic trials, losing once again on a decision.

At a tournament in Atlanta in 1980, Kirkland fought Evander Holyfield. Kirkland went the distance but lost on a decision to Holyfield. Holyfield is the current heavyweight champion of the world.

With 293 amateur fights to his credit, he has lost only 27 while winning 192 by knockout.

Kirkland has coached boxing at Fort Hood, Texas; Fort Lewis, Wash.; and Frankfurt, Germany, before coming to Fort Benning. What he wants to do here, he said, is put Fort Benning on the boxing map.

"This is the home of the infantry," he said. "I want to build a program here that ranks with places like Fort Bragg, N.C.; Fort Hood; Fort Campbell, Ky.; and Fort Huachuca, Ariz., which is home of the All-Army boxing team."

"With help from unit commanders on post, we can build a boxing program that Fort Benning can be proud of," he said. "The soldiers who want to come out for boxing need to have time to train. I'm only asking for a few hours a day."

Kirkland has anywhere from seven to 14 boxers in training at any given time because of the Army's commitment to training, and he said he understands the mission comes first.

"If the commanders will allow the soldier who wants to participate in boxing to do so, it will not only benefit the soldier, it will also benefit the Army and that unit." said Kirkland. "The skills that a soldier learns in boxing will not only benefit him physically, but also mentally because the soldier will become more disciplined and become a better soldier."

Fort Campbell pins opponents to mat

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet

Wrestlers from Fort Campbell, Ky., rolled onto Fort Benning Saturday at Briant Wells Field House and wrapped up a team victory, in freestyle and Greco-Roman wrestling.

Fort Campbell totaled 65 team points to Fort Polk's 44 and Fort Benning's 35.

In individual freestyle competition at 114.5 pounds, Norman Golden of Fort Campbell took first place. Golden also captured first place in Greco-Roman.

Fort Polk wrestler Keith Idleburg won first place in both freestyle and Greco-Roman at 125.5 pounds.

Anthony Seal of Fort Benning took second in freestyle with Golden coming in third. In Greco, Golden placed second and Julius Bisarra of Fort Campbell came in third.

At 136.5 pounds, the only wrestler from Fort Lee, Va., Trevor Humphrey, took first place in both competitions.

Seal took second and Michael Cox of Fort Polk, La. placed third in freestyle. In Greco, Idleburg captured second while Cox slipped in at the third spot.

Steven Wilson of Fort Campbell won the top spots in both Greco and freestyle at the 149.5-pound weight class. Kiemba Knowlin of Fort Polk placed second in each event.

In the 163-pound division, Fort Benning captured all three spots in the freestyle competition. Clarence Arrington placed first with Townley Hedrick second and Andrew Flagler third.

In Greco, Flagler reversed positions and took first with Rob Fisher of Fort Benning taking second and Anthony Caruso of Fort Polk finishing third.

Roy Amos of Fort Campbell captured first place in freestyle and Greco in the 180.5-pound weight class.

Julio Medina also of Fort Campbell place second and Troy Pigrenet of Fort Polk took the third-place spot.

Paul Solmonson of Fort Campbell won both freestyle and Greco in the 198-pound division. Bert Vaughn of Fort Benning placed second in freestyle and Fort Polk wrestler Gary Doughty took third.

In Greco, Doughty placed second while Gary Miller of Fort Campbell placed third.

In the 220-pound division David Sanders of Fort Polk took first in freestyle with Ken Henry of Fort Benning taking second and Miller placing third.

In Greco, Jerry Cobb of Fort Campbell finished in the top spot with Sanders taking second.

Cobb also won the 286-pound weight class with Daryl Wilson of Fort Benning taking second.

The post wrestling championships will be Nov. 21 at Briant Wells Field House. Winners from post will travel to Fort Hood for the Forces Command wrestling championships Dec. 7 through 10.

The top three winners from each weight class in freestyle and Greco-Roman will qualify for the All-Army training camp starting Jan. 6 through March 24.

Placement on the All-Army wrestling team will come from this camp. All-Army wrestling coach Tony Thomas said he is looking for a few good men to step up and lead Fort Benning to another victory at U.S. Army Forces Command.

Soldier delivers baby at home

By Alyanna B. Summers
Bayonet staff writer

The birth of a baby brings to mind the usual setting — a sterile white operating room, a flurry of nurses and doctors dressed in surgical garb, surrounded by ominous equipment and sharp, shiny medical instruments.

But for Spc. Michael McCarter and his wife, Artice, this was not the scene for their "blessed event."

McCarter, 23, a mechanic with the 598th Maintenance Company, 13th Corps Support Battalion, 36th Engineer Group, never "in his wildest dreams" imagined that he would be the sole support for his wife, Artice, also 23, when she suddenly went into labor with their second child in their McGraw Manor quarters.

McCarter and his wife went to Martin Army Community Hospital Oct. 29 at 10 a.m. because she was feeling pains in her lower back that "felt like contractions."

The doctors in the Labor and Delivery section of the hospital examined her, checking to see if she had dilated and monitoring the baby for any unusual activity. This type of examination is normal for women in the latest stages of pregnancy who complain of strong, cramplike pains, according to hospital officials.

The doctors at that time did not anticipate an early delivery, so they sent her back home.

Martin Army Community Hospital officials confirmed that it is not uncommon to allow expectant mothers to return home for their personal comfort when delivery is not imminent. However, the hospital advises the expectant mother of the indications when to return to the hospital, said John Wynn, public affairs officer for the hospital.

Little did the McCarters know they would not enjoy the luxury of a normal hospital delivery.

Back at home, the expectant mother rested.

"Although I still had pain, I thought everything was OK. I wasn't alarmed. I was confident that I would have the baby over the weekend, like the doctors predicted," she said.

At 3:13 p.m., she knew it was time to go back to the hospital. "The pain was so severe by that time, I could not stand up," she said.

She called to her husband, who was upstairs, and slowly made her way to where he was, so that she could get ready to go the hospital.

McCarter went to get their older child, Andre, 3, and prepare him for the the trip to hospital. But that trip never happened.

"I turned around to get my son, and when I turned back to check on Artice, she was telling me that it was too late for the hospital; the baby was coming right then," said McCarter.

He quickly made his wife more comfortable for the delivery, then called an ambulance to come to the home.

"The nurse on the phone talked me through the entire procedure" he said. "She was very helpful. I never could have gotten through it without professional instruction." Almost 30 minutes after the sever pains began, at 3:45 p.m., Takiya Chante McCarter was born.

"This experience made me have a greater appreciation of the strength and courage women have," said McCarter. "This experience brought me and my wife even closer, though I don't want to experience childbirth at home again.

She echoed her husband's sentiments and added that situations like this make it imperative that young couples, especially those expecting their first child, must attend the Lamaze classes and keep in constant contact with their doctor.

"It could mean the difference between a healthy baby or a problem," she said.

Dr. Efiong Andem, a physician in the Obstetrics and Gynecology department at MACH, stressed the importance of getting to the hospital in time for the delivery.

"The most ideal situation is to deliver at the hospital," said Andem. "However, if delivery is imminent and there is no chance to get to the hospital and you find yourself in the position of having a home delivery, contact the hospital's labor and delivery section immediately.

"A doctor or nurse will stay on the line with the "coach" or give instructions throughout the labor and delivery process. As soon as the baby is born, bring mother and child to the hospital for examination by a physician,"said Andem.

White School kicks off Book Week, promotes reading

Fort Benning Schools

White School will kick off National Children's Book Week with a book party today at from 7 to 9 p.m. in the school cafeteria for fourth and fifth-grade students.

The party will begin with a professional storyteller, Akbar Imhotep, who specializes in African tales. Children will participate in numerous activities throughout the evening, to include storytelling sessions, reading activities, refreshments and a silent reading period.

The purpose of the book party is to promote reading. It is sponsored by the school media specialist, Owen Ditchfield, with the help of parents and teacher volunteers. Teachers and parents will serve as storytellers in the sessions.

In addition to the book party, White School is making further effort to promote reading among children.

Students in kindergarten through third grade will have the opportunity to hear professional storyteller at an assembly today. Other efforts include a book fair, which will run through Thursday.

Efforts are not only geared toward students, but involve parents as well. The school attempted to accommodate the schedules of working parents when hosting the book fair.

The book fair will be open during the book party to allow an evening shopping time for parents who would like to participate with their children. Also geared toward parents was a recent "Reading Challenge" presented by the school.

White School parents and students were challenged to turn off their televisions from 30 to 40 minutes each night to read together.

According to Janet Wynn, White School principal, parents who participated in the challenge may see improved school performance and achievement as a result of the improved reading opportunities.

The book party, book fair and reading challenge are just a few of many endeavors to encourage and promote recreational reading among students of the school.

Much of the encouragement comes from daily efforts of the White School teachers, according to school officials.

In addition to curriculum efforts, many teachers are using incentive programs to allow teachers and students to set reading goals. Students are then rewarded with buttons, pencils and pizzas for reaching their goals. The faculty of White School is hopeful that the planned activities and challenges will result in increased reading at home, officials said.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet
Dr. John Piper, motivational speaker, expounds on some of his ideas on child-raising with parents.

Post schools host 'Talks with Children'

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

For the young child from birth to age 5, motivational speaker Dr. John Piper identified a variety of ways for parents to help this age group improve their children's self-concept within the family.

Piper served as the featured speaker for the Nov. 4 "Talks About Young Children" lecture series that is being presented throughout the academic year by the Fort Benning School system at Herbert J. Dexter School.

For the developmental stage of 1 to 3 years Piper suggested:

- encouraging separateness so the child can feel more independent,
- using positive suggestions instead of direct commands to inspire less resentment from the child,
- giving the toddler time to move from one activity to another so that change does not become a threat to security,
- allowing the toddler to be possessive and have some things that belong only to him or her because ownership must be taught before sharing,
- not forcing toilet-training, waiting until the child is more accepting of change makes it less of a power struggle,

With the young child ages 4 to 7, Piper's advice included:

- avoiding continual criticism and competition as a motivator,
- focusing on a child's strengths and allowing room for mistakes using private correction and praise, thus pointing to a behavior that is unacceptable, not the person,

Piper noted that the building blocks of self-concept are a sense of connectiveness to family and things, a sense of uniqueness and pleasure in being special and different, a sense of personal power in influencing people and events and a sense of role models who provide values and standards to use as guides.

Scouts to collect food

Boy Scouts of America

Scouts on Fort Benning and in Columbus will begin their food drive Saturday as 5,000 members of the Chattahoochee Council of the Boy Scouts of America participate in the Scouting for Food National food drive.

On Saturday, Boy Scouts, Cub Scouts and Explorers will go door-to-door, handing out flyers requesting food donations for the hungry.

Different from last year's drive that encompassed one Saturday, this year's drive will be conducted on Saturday with Scouts delivering informational flyers and picking up donated food the following Saturday, Nov. 21. This way people will have a week's time to fill the bags.

"Scouting for Food is a dramatic and practical way to combat hunger. It is action, not words," said Tommy Sands, a representative of the Chattahoochee Council. The Scouts have asked that donations be placed on front porches by 9 a.m. Nov. 21.

Anyone whose bag is missed may still donate by calling the Council at 327-2634.

Sands said that the foods that are most needed are nutritional items such as canned baby formula, soup, chili, tuna fish, meats and vegetables.

The Boy Scouts of America collected a combined total of 221 million cans of food nationally in 1988, 1989, 1990 and 1991. Chattahoochee Council collected 100,000 cans last year.

Warrant officers donate gifts

Post Warrant Officers' Association

The Fort Benning Warrant Officers Association presented three Thanksgiving food gift certificates, redeemable at the Commissary, to Linda Matheny, president of the Community Life Mayors Association Thursday.

The Community Life mayors will award the gift certificates to soldiers and their families residing on the installation who would otherwise have difficulty purchasing items for a traditional Thanksgiving meal.

The Warrant Officers Association conducted fund-raising activities to purchase the certificates.

Post Girl Scouts celebrate with song

By Sandra Lombardo
Fort Benning Girl Scouts

The Fort Benning Girl Scouts celebrated the birthday of the Girl Scout founder, Oct. 31, with a "Songfest," featuring Girl Scout and other camp fire songs.

Though rain kept them from holding the event outdoors around a campfire, about 250 girls filled the Main Post Girl Scout Hut to participate.

A group from each Girl Scout age level performed different songs. Special guest Kathleen Meade of the Benning Belles singing group led the girls in singing of more traditional songs. Local camp songs and cadence calls rounded out the musical portion of the event.

A candle-lighting ceremony followed, led by the Cadette Girl Scout Troop 135. In honor of Lowe, each girl received a cupcake and joined in singing "Happy Birthday."

Low founded the Girl Scouts in 1912 with a vision of girls all over the world meeting together in an intercultural friendship exchange.

OWC to host post bazaar

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

More than 60 vendors ranging from those selling dresses to those with handmade cane chairs will be on hand at the Fort Benning Bazaar Saturday, according to Holly Grange, bazaar chairwoman.

Sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club, the bazaar will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. inside Infantry Hall's main entrance and around the east side.

Admission will be $1 with the proceeds to benefit the OWC Welfare Fund.

Arts and crafts, a country store, Christmas items, door prizes and a quilt giveaway will be featured.

The door prizes were donated by more than 50 vendors and will be given away every half hour. These include a sold-out limited edition print by Don Stivers, titled "Running the Gauntlet," which was donated by Columbus Studio.

A queen-sized quilt, done in the "Many Trips Around the World" pattern, also will be given away. It was donated by Columbus Bank & Trust.

Tickets for the quilt can be purchased for $1 at the Thrift Shop/Craft Cabin, from an OWC board member or at the bazaar.

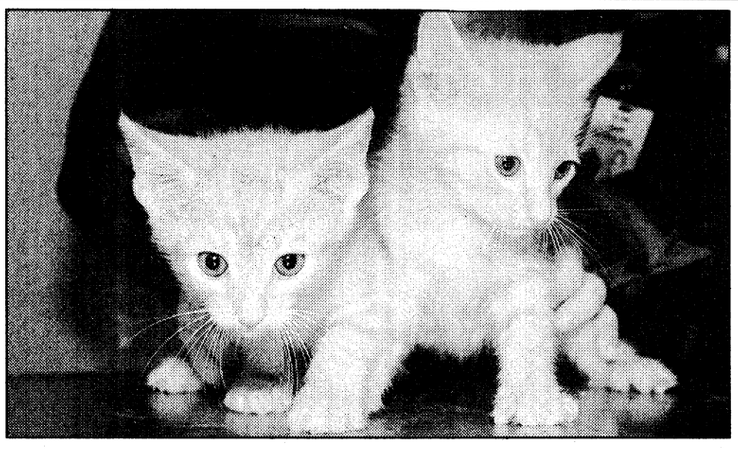
PET OF THE WEEK



These male orange tabbies (age7 weeks) are looking for a home. If you would like to adopt one, or both, or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

MOUT

Urban terrain provides cadets needed training

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Adjusting infantry tactics to urban terrain requires discipline, quick reactions and the ability to make split-second decisions, because the fighting is close and the enemy hidden.

For infantry cadets at the School of the Americas, the McKenna Military Operation in Urban Terrain site presented numerous challenges as they recently applied their infantry skills during cordon and search and conventional attack exercises Oct. 29.

According to Lt. Col. John J. Bastone, director of the Department of Tactics and Combined Arms (directorate in charge of the Cadet Branch Qualification Course) at SOA, the MOUT site combined with a cordon and search gives cadets a chance to learn the proper way to handle civilians and enemies on the same soil.

The cordon and search "is a precision type of operation in which units capture enemy personnel and equipment without doing damage to the town or inhabitant," according to Bastone.

The cadets search for enemy personnel and weapon's caches, while reacting to various human rights situations, Bastone said.

During the exercise, a wounded civilian had to be evacuated, while the cadets fought to neutralize a sniper, Bastone said.

In addition, SOA's chaplain, Chap. (Maj.) Michael Travaglione, played the role of the town priest providing an extra human rights situation for the cadets requiring them to react quickly under sniper fire.

In the end, the cadets were able to successfully bring the sniper down from a church tower and secure the McKenna MOUT site.

During the same training session at McKenna, the cadets launched a conventional attack against an enemy force, which Bastone described.

In the scenario, an enemy force held the town and the cadets moved the civilians out, seized the objective and destroyed the enemy force, he said.

During the conventional attack, the cadets also used human rights training when they evacuated women and children, secured prisoners-of-war and handled guerrilla soldiers that wanted to surrender, Bastone said.

The cadets will graduate in December and return to their countries for commissioning.

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a Combined Arms Live Fire Exercise at Cactus Observation Post Oct. 29.

The CALFEX was conducted by soldiers from both the 1st and 2nd Battalions of 29th Infantry Regiment. Also participating in the exercise was 317th Engineer Battalion and the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division's 4th Battalion, 41st Field Artillery Regiment and 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

The 111th Attack Helicopter Battalion, a National Guard unit from Florida and members of the 70th Fighter Squadron from Georgia provided air support.

The 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital provided medical support.

Col. Gregory Camp, 29th Infantry Regiment commander, made opening remarks.

Students from the Infantry Officer Advanced Course, the Infantry Pre-Commanders Course and members of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce and family members attended.

The exercise was divided into two parts.

The first part demonstrated the accuracy and firepower of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle, M-1 Abrams main battle tank, M-901 improved tube-launched, optically tracked, wire-guided missile vehicle, M-106 mortar carrier and the U.S. Army Sniper Team.

Also included were two AH-64 Apache attack helicopters and two F-16 fighter aircraft. This part of the exercise was capped by a demonstration of a combined assault of most of the weapon systems.

The second part of the exercise was specifically designed for the Infantry Officer Advanced Course students, and it consisted of an attack including the clearing of enemy bunkers, track lines and wire and mined obstacles.

Following the exercise, the guests viewed a static display consisting of the weapons systems used during the exercise.

Noncommissioned officers briefed the guests on their particular weapons systems technical characteristics.

Researchers develop new boots

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

Combat boots just aren't the sexiest item in the military's inventory. But any service member who has had to stand in the cold and rain can tell why good boots are important.

The Department of Defense can, too. In 1991, officials told Congress they regard combat boots as "extremely critical" items. The lack of boots is a "warstopper," according to DoD.

Researchers at the Army's Natick (Mass.) Research, Development and Engineering Center develop footwear for the military — most recently the desert boot for Operations Desert Shield and Storm.

Service members will see another fruit of the researchers' labor when the intermediate cold/wet boots are issued next year.

Any development starts with a user requirement.

"We knew for years that there was a requirement for desert boots," said Vasant K. Devarakonda, chief of the Handwear, Footwear and Specialty Clothing Section. "They were not a high priority before Iraq invaded Kuwait."

The Army proponent from the Training and Doctrine Command usually starts such requests. Other military services often buy into the results of Natick's requirements research. Researchers check what's available off the shelf.

"Sometimes we can take a commercially available boot and change it enough to meet the military's needs," said Devarakonda. Sometimes they can't. Then researchers, with contractor help, develop a prototype.

An example is the intermediate cold/wet boot. The Army's Infantry School identified a requirement for boots to fill a vacant niche.

The military needs boots to cover all ranges of temperatures and conditions. "We have boots that handle hot/wet environments — the jungle boot," Devarakonda said. "We have the standard combat boots that are good in a temperate climate. Now we have the desert boot for hot/dry conditions. Then we have the cold weather boot good for extreme environments."

But there was no boot for the range between the very cold weather boot, what some military people call the "Mickey Mouse boot," and the standard issue combat boot. "The boot is a relatively new requirement," said Devarakonda. "Places like Korea, Germany and much of the continental United States have temperatures low enough that the regular combat boot doesn't provide enough warmth."

A request for procurement was sent in 1991. Several companies responded, and Natick officials put the samples through a series of tests. Officials evaluated the results and chose a winner.

The new boot, which has entered production and should be issued to service members beginning in 1993, is made of black leather with a waterproof, insulated lining and speed lacing. The winner is really a commercial boot, and the manufacturer made some changes to satisfy military requirements.

"Taking the boots off the shelf saves money," Devarakonda said. "We also don't have to worry much about whether it's producible."

Boot testing is thorough. While there is a wear test by humans, it isn't practical to do all testing with humans. Testers are not going to have a soldier march 100 miles to see if the boot will hold up.

The lab — jointly with industry — has developed a machine that simulates human movement. In the machine, the boot is placed on a prosthetic foot, then the assembly is submerged in water. The boot "walks" in the water, and sensors within the boot note when it becomes worn enough for the water to enter.

"This tells us how long the boot will last plus where the weak point is," said Jim Brennick, a research chemist with the section. "We have the capability at Natick to test all the materials making up the boot."

Another machine tests shock absorption in boots and shoes. Another literally grinds down the sole of a boot.

"We have other means of testing the strength of leather and other products used in footwear," Brennick said.

Finally, Devarakonda said the standard combat boot is produced in 133 width and length combinations to fit military men and women. In instances where there is a special need, the Defense Orthopedic Footwear Clinic in Boston produces special order boots for all services.

Retirement plans vary

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

A key selling point for a military career has been 20-year retirement with 50 percent of the final basic pay.

But two other retirement pay systems apply to military members, and which of the three they collect under depends on when they first became members of the service, said Tom Tower, a Department of Defense compensation specialist.

"You'd be surprised how many people don't know which retirement system covers them," said Tower. "When they first enlist, they should be informed of their retirement program. But how many people are thinking 20 or more years down the road when they first come in the service?"

Final pay

The final pay, or 50 percent, system applies to people who joined the military before Sept. 8, 1980. The individual's final basic pay based on rank, and length of service determines retirement pay.

"Each year over 20 is another 2.5 percent of the basic pay, up to 75 percent at 30 years' service," said Tower. The formula is final basic pay times 2.5 percent times years of service.

In addition, retirees under this system receive full cost-of-living adjustments for inflation, based on the increase in the average U.S. Consumer Price Index for wage earners and clerical workers. Rounded to the nearest 10th of 1 percent, the adjustment is based on the percentage increase of the consumer price index from July to September of the previous year to July to September of the current year.

High-three

The high-three system covers service members who entered military service between Sept. 8, 1980, and July 31, 1986. It uses the monthly average of the highest 36 months' basic pay times 2.5 percent times years of service.

"This system avoids the sudden increases in retired pay that occur with a new pay rate," he said. The high-three system doesn't encourage a service member to stay until that next pay increase, because it has no immediate effect on the amount of retired pay.

For example, said Tower, many senior individuals covered by the final pay system stay until they cross the 26-year service mark, when a substantial longevity pay increase occurs. The high-three system's averaging method eliminates the windfall. High-three retirees also receive full cost-of-living adjustments, said Tower.

Redux

Service members who joined the military after Aug. 1, 1986, fall under the redux retirement program. Under this system, members retiring after 20 years receive 40 percent of the monthly average of their highest 36 months of basic pay, Tower explained. The retired pay increases 3.5 percent for each year over 20 and reaches a 75-percent cap at 30 years. At age 62, the member's retired pay formula changes to basic pay times 2.5 percent times years of service.

The annual cost-of-living adjustment for the redux system also differs, he said. The adjustment is the consumer price index minus 1 percent. Full inflation adjustment catchup takes place at age 62, giving the redux retiree the same pay as an individual who retired under the high-three system. But at age 63, the redux retiree once again receives the cost-of-living adjustment minus 1 percent.

"The redux structure tends to reduce the retention of people with less than 20 years but increases the retention once they reach 20 years," said Tower. It changes the force structure somewhat, he added but it also cuts DoD's retirement costs.

To show the difference between the three retirement systems, said Tower, take a look at what a sergeant first class retiring with 22 years in service who turns 62 years old would be paid. Under the final-pay system, the pay would be $1,201 per month; the high three, $1,064 per month; and redux, $914 per month.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• The naval battle of Guadalcanal began between American forces, under the command of Adms. Daniel J. Callaghan and Willis A. Lee and Japanese forces, led by Adm. Nobuyuli Abe and Vice Adm. Nobutaki Kondo.

U.S. forces, consisting of the carrier USS Enterprise, the battleships Washington and South Dakota, eight cruisers and 22 destroyers, squared off against 50 Japanese vessels to include the carriers Junyo and Hiyo, the battleships Jiei, Kirishimi, Kongo and Haruma, 30 destroyers and 14 submarines.

The American naval forces lost the cruisers Atlanta and Juneau, along with seven destroyers while sinking the Jiei, Kirishima, two destroyers and the cruiser Kinugasa.

• On the Eastern front, the Soviets launched their winter offensive along the River Don. With Georgi Konstantinovich Zhukov commanding, Soviet Forces, consisting of more than 500,000 infantrymen, 900 new T-34 tanks and more than 1,000 aircraft, began to drive the exhausted Germans from Stalingrad.

• In North Africa, British and U.S. Airborne forces, under the command of British Gen. Kenneth Anderson, swept through 10,000 German defenders in Tunisia and Algeria, capturing airfields at Youks les Bains and Souk el Arba.

• In New Guinea, Japanese forces received reinforcements, while the Allied forces continued to advance toward Gona, Buna and Sonada.

• Adm. Sir Max Horton took over the British Western Approaches Command from Adm. Sir Percy Noble.

• Fort Benning soldiers aided Canada by overseeing the formation of its first airborne unit.

The 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion established its temporary headquarters on post pending the completion of its own school at Camp Shilo in Manitoba, Canada.

Quitters to win with smokeout

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Whoever said quitters never win didn't know about the Great American Smokeout.

The 16th annual smokeout is Thursday. It's the day family and friends will encourage smokers to quit for a day in the hope they will stop for good.

Last year, military bases held fun runs and other events such as ashtray throws on the day. Similar events are scheduled this year.

According to the American Cancer Society, almost 36 percent of the nation's smokers quit for the day last year. Of those, almost 12 percent were still not smoking one to three days later.

But not just smokers should quit. Research about the harmful effects of passive smoking on nonsmokers has led to more and more smoke-free work places.

Health officials are concerned some smokers are responding by switching to smokeless tobacco, said Army nurse Lt. Col. Gale Pollock, a senior policy analyst in the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs. She said smoking is decreasing in the military, but the use of smokeless tobacco seems to be increasing.

According to the Department of Agriculture, the general population is using more smokeless tobacco than ever before.

"Although smokeless tobacco does not expose others to sidestream smoke, it is no safer for the user than cigarettes," said Pollock. "Because there are so many tiny blood vessels in the mouth, people seem to get a bigger jolt from dipping or chewing than from smoking. This makes smokeless tobacco extremely addictive."

Terry Conway, a scientist with the Naval Health Research Center in San Diego, Calif., said she believes smokeless tobacco users may be deceived about its safety. She compared the physical fitness of Navy smokers with that of nonsmokers and smokeless tobacco users.

"Smokers didn't do as well as nonsmokers on the Navy's Physical Ready Test," Conway said. "But smokeless tobacco users and nonsmokers performed about the same. Smokeless tobacco users and nonsmokers both tend to do more voluntary exercise than smokers, which indicates that fitness is important to both groups. So perhaps the fact that the negative health effects of smokeless tobacco aren't as easy to see at first may lead them to believe it is safe."

A medical academy is running a public service campaign called "Through With Chew." According to the academy, doctors diagnose some 30,000 new cases of smokeless tobacco-related cancer every year. Some cases take years to develop.

Tragically, others develop quickly. The academy's education kit shows smokeless tobacco user and high school athlete Sean Marsee first as a handsome 16-year-old and then as he looked at age 19 shortly before he died of oral cancer. His face was distorted and a tube was hooked to his nose.

Marsee, who thought smokeless tobacco was safe when he started to use it, gave permission to use the pictures. In his final days, he actively campaigned to prevent others from taking up the habit.

Academy Executive Vice President Dr. Jerome C. Goldstein said quitting smokeless tobacco is often tougher than quitting smoking. So the group focuses on discouraging young people from taking up the habit. Major league baseball players John Franco, Dan Quisenberry, Nolan Ryan and others are helping with the effort. Ryan said he quit chewing after he decided there were no positive aspects of chewing to balance out the negatives.

The negatives, say researchers, include increased risk of cancer, especially in the cheeks, gums and throat. The habit can also lead to mouth sores, receding gums, tooth decay, bad breath and permanent discoloration of the teeth.

Some military installations have special classes helping those who chew tobacco quit. For those installations without special classes, smokeless tobacco users are as welcome as smokers in smoking-cessation classes.

For those who need additional help, doctors in the military medical system may prescribe nicotine patches that deliver gradually reduced doses of nicotine over a period of time.

Since the patches are a dangerous drug — smoking while wearing a patch can be fatal — they are available only as part of a medically supervised program.

Civilians can get help, too. Last year, the Office of Personnel Management ruled insurers participating in the Federal Employees Health Benefits program had to fund at least $100 of an approved smoking-cessation program.

Salt may not be a health concern

General Mills

The long-standing concern about salt has been its sodium content — and the relationship of sodium to hypertension, said Mary Helen Gunkler, a registered dietician.

For salt-sensitive people, reducing sodium can help lower blood pressure.

Most experts agree that reducing salt intake may be helpful to some and won't hurt anyone.

Today, the average American diet includes up to 5,000 milligrams of sodium per day, with most of it coming from salt.

A person needs only 500 milligrams per day for the maintenance of bodily functions and could get adequate sodium just from that which occurs naturally in foods.

To know where sodium occurs, start with food package labels. Look at the nutrition information for the amount of sodium per serving.

Also, watch for words in the ingredient list that indicate sodium, such as baking soda, monosodium glutamate, sodium citrate and other ingredients with sodium in the name.

Children have grasp of good nutrition

General Mills

Children know what makes up healthful eating, said Mary Helen Gunkler, a registered dietician.

And about 98 percent realize the importance of eating plenty of fruit, vegetables and whole-grain breads and cereals.

As with adults, however, the challenge for children is to match their eating behavior with their knowledge.

Here are some ideas to try at home:

• Cookies that are lower in fat, such as animal crackers, ginger snaps, fig bars and graham crackers.

• Sandwiches made with lean meat, vegetables and whole-grain bread.

• Vegetarian pizza with low-fat mozzarella cheese.

• Angel food cake topped with fresh fruit sauce rather than frosting.

• Low-fat or nonfat frozen yogurt mixed with fresh fruit to make a fruit shake.

Chapels, Gideons celebrate the word

By Geoffrey and Melinda Alleyne
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Fort Benning's Protestant Chapels will join churches across the nation Sunday celebrating "Bible Sunday."

Each year, the third Sunday of November is nationally designated as "Bible Sunday," a day designed to honor the word of God.

This year, as in the past, a designated offering will be collected to be given to the Gideons International Group. This offering helps them to further their work in placing the scripture into the hands of people across the nation.

Each year the Gideon International Group provides thousands of New Testaments (between 50,000 and 75,000) to the soldiers and their families at Fort Benning.

Soldiers who would like to have a copy of God's word may see their unit chaplain or chapel representative.

The Bibles distributed by the Gideons are given without charge to any soldier or family member. The Gideons supply both English and Spanish translations.

The Bible gives direction on how people should honor God's word.

Psalms 119:11 says people should hide the word of God in their hearts so that they might not sin against God.

Likewise the scriptures say:

• Do what the word teaches (Col. 3:16 and 17, James 1:22 to 25)

• Obey the word (I John 2:3 through 6)

• Teach, speak and spread the word of God (Matthew 28:19 and 20; Acts 5:17 through 20; Acts 13:48 and 49).

• God's word gives people direction for their lives (Psalms 119:105) and gives the simple understanding (Psalm 119:130).

The Bible promises that a young person can keep his ways pure by living according to the God's word. (Psalm 119:9)

Take time this year to get to know the word of God, Chaplain officials said.

"Bible Sunday" is a time to make a solid commitment to getting to know God's word better, chaplains said. Individuals who don't have a Bible may stop by unit chaplain's office to get one.

Adventists meeting on post

USAIC Chaplains' Office

Seventh-Day Adventist soldiers coming to Fort Benning for training or duty have a time and place to worship on post.

The Fort Benning Seventh-Day Adventist fellowship began meeting in the Sand Hill Chapel Oct. 17 and will meet every Saturday at 6:30 p.m.

"The service has three purposes — to worship God, to fellowship, and to study God's word," said Chaplain (Capt.) Dale Forrester, a Protestant chaplain who directs the service.

Thanksgiving services

Catholic - A Thanksgiving Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. at the Main Post Catholic Chapel Nov. 26.

Ecumenical - Thanksgiving Day services will be at 10 a.m. Nov. 26 at the Infantry Center Chapel. Ecumenical services will also be at 10 a.m. Nov. 26 at the Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill and at the Sightseeing Road Chapel at 11 a.m.

Protestant - A Thanksgiving Day service will be at 11 a.m. Nov. 26 at the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Donahue marks his 25th talk-show anniversary

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

Phil Donahue didn't invent the talk-show genre, but lots of people — including many of his broadcasting peers — seem to feel he did.

Small wonder, too, after 25 years of daily and much-watched programs. At the very least, Donahue re-invented the talk format, heavily involving the studio audience and telephone callers in dissecting topics covering as broad a spectrum as one can imagine ... and earning numerous honors in the process, including 19 Emmys and the prestigious Peabody Award.

Under the executive-producing guidance of compilation expert Jack ("That's Entertainment!") Haley Jr., Sunday's aptly titled NBC special "Donahue: The 25th Anniversary" serves up two hours of memorable highlights culled from nearly 6,000 installments of the series.

Among the many peers featured in the course of the festivities: Oprah Winfrey, Joan Rivers, Barbara Walters, Bryant Gumbel, David Letterman, Sally Jessy Raphael, Larry King, Diane Sawyer, Maury Povich, Connie Chung, Geraldo Rivera, Faith Daniels, Jerry Springer and Dr. Ruth Westheimer. (Since she was working in California at the time of the taping, Donahue's wife Marlo Thomas made a pre-recorded contribution.)

"Everybody was very generous to me," the friendly and sincere Donahue says of Sunday's showcase. "But, it was clear that everybody had a real good time, too." Actually, the official celebration of his quarter-century milestone began when he co-hosted last summer's Daytime Emmy Awards, at which he was paid tribute via a shorter montage of clips and a standing ovation from those in attendance.

"I had no idea that was coming," maintains Donahue, though he was consulted about the packaging of this week's venture. "I told them, 'In a lot of ways, I don't want this job.' I didn't think I was the best witness to walk up to that library (of shows) and presume to choose which ones to use, but I think they've done a fabulous job.

"You really do see 25 years of this century roll right past your eyes in two hours, and it's very, very watchable, if I do say so myself."

Demurring that having such focus placed on his work "may be more attention than is good for the average man," Donahue adds that watching the assembled sequences was quite an experience for him.

"You see yourself age," he reflects. "You see your hair get grayer, you see Jane Fonda almost 25 years ago and Jane Fonda today, and you see Jesse Jackson with and without an Afro. You see pieces of the first program anybody ever did on AIDS, in 1982, when less than 300 people were dead from it; we now have more than 150,000 dead.

"Obviously, though, you also bleed a little for all the things that didn't get in (the special). Still, we did a sketch with all the talk-show hosts who were there, and they gave it all they had. It was a very nice thing they did for me, and I also got a little performance in there that I think may surprise some folks."

Donahue asserts that when he began his show on a single station in Dayton, Ohio on Nov. 6, 1967, "We did not ever think we were giving birth to any kind of television movement. We thought we might be giving birth to a show that would flop in Dayton.

"That was our biggest concern, whether we'd succeed there. We were different from everything else around us: We were visually dull, with people sitting on folding chairs; we had no spinning wheels, we didn't give away money, and nobody was dressed up like a chicken-salad sandwich; and we were also competing with soap operas, where semi-naked people were rolling around on water beds. We were very insecure, not knowing whether this kind of program would survive in that environment.

"What we didn't know then," Donahue reasons, "and certainly do now, is that the viewers — especially women, I think, in the daytime — always wanted a show like this. We were just lucky enough to come along and give it to them, but we also were blessed by the 'Women of Distinction' to be highlighted on USAIC TV

Women who prove that there's no limit to what women can achieve will be highlighted on "Women of Distinction," produced by the Girl Scouts of America. Next week, the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel presents "Women of Distinction," hosted by the star of Lifetime's "Attitudes," Rolanda Watts. Women who will be featured on the program include: Dr. Tamara E. Jerigan, astronaut; Jan Yanehiro, television news reporter; Sharon Feeney Durham, architect; Linda T. Berry, FBI agent; Patricia Diaz Dennis, attorney; and Ann Curless, pop music star.

Also featured on USAIC TV next week will be a four-part series from U.S. Army Europe on how training

Local events feature fair, holiday fantasies

Presidential Pathways

A $2.7 million holiday season attraction, "Fantasy In Lights," will begin Nov. 28 and run through Jan. 2 from 4 to 10 p.m. at Callaway Gardens.

"Fantasy in Lights" will be a ride through experience celebrating the beauty, wonder and magic of the holiday season. The production will be a visual and audio experience through a dozen illuminated scenes along the five-mile drive through the Gardens.

"Fantasy in Lights" along with displays in Pine Mountain and Hamilton are expected to generate more than $2.4 million dollars for the local economy including jobs, overnight visitations, etc. according to local government officials. The economic impact is projected to reach $6 million in 1993.

Westville

To experience life as it was in the fall of 1850, there is no better time or place than at the "Fair of 1850" in Westville the museum village Sunday.

Activities include blacksmithing, quilting, pottery-making, wood working, candle-dipping, leather crafts, spinning and weaving.

Each day at noon, Westville's mule drawn cotton gin will be in operation

Christmas tree exhibit

The Newnan-Coweta Historical Society is sponsoring an exhibit of Christmas trees from Nov. 25 through Jan. 15 at the Male Academy Museum, College Street and Temple Avenue in Newnan.

The display will follow the evolution of the tree from 1860 to 1950, showing the development trends in ornaments and decorations. The Male Academy Museum is open Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m., Saturday and Sunday from 2 to 5 p.m.

The Flat Creek Campground at Hogansville will stage the Flat Creek Horse Trials Area III Training Level Championship Nov. 28 and 29.

Springer spreads Simon's 'Rumors'

Springer Opera House

"Rumors," a Neil Simon comedy continues at 8 p.m. today and Saturday at the Springer Opera House.

The show is a rapid-fire, laugh-filled comedy that recalls Simon's magic.

The story is set in Atlanta's Buckhead section in the ritzy home of the deputy mayor and his wife, who have invited four couples to celebrate their 10th wedding anniversary.

The party never begins, however, because it is revealed that the host has just shot himself in the head and his wife is, well, missing.

His lawyer decides on a coverup, which gets progressively more difficult to sustain as more guests show up and nobody can remember who has been told what by whom.

"Don't expect this play to change your life," warned Fenter. "This is a no-holds-barred comic farce with absolutely nothing on its mind except making an audience laugh.

"And, believe me, this cast is a scream," he continued. "I can't wait for an audience to see these guys."

The comedy is fast paced and reveals the flaws, frailties and heroism of its characters with the widest array of physical humor and contrived situations.

The difficulty in both performing and writing farce, however, is in maintaining the humanity of the characters, otherwise it degenerates into burlesque.

The production will be directed by Neal Fenter, an old hand at staging and performing Simon comedies. (He played Herb in the Springer's spring production of "I Ought To be In Pictures.")

The show is presented with a lavish set designed by Peter Cranton and elegant contemporary costumes by Dona Pierce.

Tickets are $12 for adults, $10 for senior citizens and $7 for students.

Reservations are recommended and may be made by calling the Springer box office at 327-3688.

Symphony to host conductor

Columbus Symphony

The Columbus Symphony Orchestra will perform a master piece concert Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Three Arts Theatre.

The guest conductor will be Adrian Gnam, music director and conductor of the Macon Symphony since 1983.

The program will consist of Barber's First Essay for Orchestra, Hummel's Trumpet Concerto, featuring James "Bud" Taylor as soloist and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 2 in C minor, the "Little Russian."

Maestro Gnam will present a free preconcert lecture on the music at 7 p.m.

The concert will open with Barber's First Essay for Orchestra, which is written in the literary form of an essay with a thought expressed in the beginning and developed throughout the work then concluding in a questioning attitude.

Hummel's Trumpet Concerto, being lyrical, energetic and brilliant, requires the technical skill of a virtuosic trumpeter, which critics judge Taylor to be.

The evening will close with Tchaikovsky's 2nd Symphony, which consists of many Russian folk melodies giving it the title of "Little Russian."

Gnam is in his 11th season as principal guest conductor of the Philadelphia Concerto Soloists Chamber Orchestra and is the music director of the Shreveport Summer Music Festival.

Tickets range in price from $9 to $15 for adults $5 to $8 for students and are available at the symphony office in the lower level of the Barnett Bank on First Avenue or at the Three Arts Theatre the day of the performance.

Tickets are also available by calling 323-5059.

USAIC TV

is changing with the times.

Other highlights will include the recent Association of the United States Army annual meeting in Washington, which includes a report on what soldiers might use on the battlefield in coming years, and the Army Family Action Plan annual conference where solutions were found to quality of life problems.

Previews of movies showing at post theaters will also be shown.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on Channel 32 Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call the Public Affairs Office at 545-2201.

Gateway opens for new health-care program

HSC News Service

What do you do if you run one of the world's largest health-care systems and you're about to suffer manpower and budget cuts, but your number of patients is going to stay about the same?

If you're the Army Medical Department, you decide to work smarter so that you can give your beneficiaries more and better health care despite those declining resources.

To accomplish that feat, the Army has created a coordinated care program called Gateway To Care.

Coordinated care means that beneficiaries — instead of determining their own health-care needs and making their own arrangements, as they largely must do today — will have expert "guardian angels" or "gatekeepers" to guide them and oversee their care.

Gateway To Care is an interim stage on the Army's way to a Department of Defense coordinated care system being planned for all services.

The DoD system may introduce important new details and resources to the coordinated-care concept in military hospitals.

However, Army officials say they can give patients many benefits of coordinated care right now, using existing resources.

According to the U.S. Army Health Services Command, which operates all Army hospitals in the United States, Martin Army Community Hospital is one of the 11 original pilot sites. More Army hospitals will join Gateway To Care over the next two years.

The hospital has begun adding to its primary care assets, appointment and patient-referral resources. It has an affiliation with the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services' Select program to set up a Preferred Provider Network of civilian practitioners (individuals, groups and institutions).

The Preferred Provider Network will make it easier and cheaper for patients to go off post for careif needed.

These improvements will enable Martin Army Community Hospital to provide:

• Better care. Each family participating in Gateway To Care is assigned to a small group of primary care providers. They always see one of these providers for primary care, so patients and providers get to know each other well.

The primary caregiver is the guardian angel, following patients carefully and continuously. He or she personally approves all tests and procedures. This ensures that patients get all the top quality care they need — and no tests or procedures they don't need.

Preferred providers

To ensure quality care, Preferred Provider Network members must prove they meet the same high qualification standards as Army providers.

• More convenience for patients. Phone consultations with nurses or physicians reduce the need for clinic visits. If one is needed, a phone consultant determines what kind (routine or same-day appointment or emergency room).

Appointments are available since primary-care staffs are larger and have fewer walk-ins to treat. Health-care finders schedule appointments for patients who require Preferred Provider Network services outside the hospital. PPN providers do all CHAMPUS, paperwork for patients.

• Less costly care. Gateway To Care patients save money several ways.

First, primary care is given in the Army hospital, where it is free to the patient.

Second, because a primary caregiver will approve all treatment, patients may avoid CHAMPUS co-payments for unnecessary services.

Third, CHAMPUS co-payments are lower than standard CHAMPUS, because PPN members agree to negotiated special rates.

Enrollment

Joining Gateway To Care will be strictly voluntary. Registration is called empanelment, which refers to patients being assigned to panels of primary-care providers.

Beneficiaries may withdraw from Gateway To Care at any time, but planners expect the advantages to be so abundant that few will want to.

Theoretically, a hospital could disempanel a participant who repeatedly buys standard CHAMPUS care instead of using the Gateway To Care system.

However, officials say most hospitals will be more interested in asking such people why they aren't taking advantage of Gateway To Care, so they can correct any flaws in services.

Officials admit some people will have good reasons not to participate in the program (such as if they have a good employer health plan).

To increase availability of family medicine, the Primary Care for Uniformed Services Clinic will become the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic in February. After that point, patients not empaneled in Gateway To Care will be seen in the Outpatient Clinic or the Emergency Room.

Dental care is not part of Gateway To Care, since it is covered by the Delta Dental Plan instead of CHAMPUS.

The theory behind Gateway To Care is like many other management-reform ideas — decentralization and empowerment. Let the people doing the work, on the scene, design better ways of doing business, say Army officials.

In Gateway To Care, this means letting hospital commanders tailor the program to local situations, based on beneficiary needs and local Army and non-Army medical assets, so Martin Army Community Hospital can strive to give the best care possible to its patients.

Commander sends message

For the past year and a half, the Army has been developing the Gateway To Care program.

Spaulding

From initial unclear directives, the program is emerging as a viable means of organizing the way health care is offered to medical beneficiaries.

The purpose of this supplement is to show you some of the ways in which care will be expanded and improved under Gateway To Care. This will make you a better informed consumer as you make health care decisions for your family.

The aim of Gateway To Care at Fort Benning is for each beneficiary to receive better service than he or she received before the program began. All patients should perceive something better, if not in level of care then in better organization of care and less red tape.

Martin Army Community Hospital will have the same number of health-care providers. Therefore, there will still be some problems with timely access to health care.

However, the patient should have answers sooner even if he or she is not seen sooner. The patient should not have to continue to call back for appointments.

This allows the patient options about using a civilian provider or waiting for a military doctor and assistance in finding medical help when it is needed.

The process of improving services at Martin Army Community Hospital is ongoing. Changes will be made as opportunities present themselves.

Finally, please read and save this supplement because an informed patient is better able to contribute to the treatment process.

Patients must know rights

Martin Army Community Hospital

The staff of Martin Army Community Hospital is committed to your care and health and believes you should be aware of your rights as a patient.

Hospital officials list the following rights:

Patient rights

- To receive the best medical care.
- To be treated with respect.
- To be treated as an individual with personal values and beliefs.
- To be given privacy and treated with confidentiality.
- To know who is your health care provider.
- To be given complete information about your medical treatment.
- To participate in decisions concerning your care or to designate someone who can speak for you.
- To provide the hospital with your wishes for a living will or power of attorney for health care.

To provide you with quality health care, there must be close cooperation between you as a patient and the hospital staff.

You can help by assuming the following responsibilities.

Patient responsibilities

- Keep your appointment and be on time.
- Cancel your appointment ahead of time if you cannot keep it.
- Provide all the information you can on your medical history, condition and medications.
- Ask questions if you do not understand what is said to you.
- Be considerate of other patients and the staff.

Patient Affairs Office

If you feel you are not being treated fairly or properly, you have the right to discuss this with your doctor, nurse or other health-care worker.

You may also contact the Patient Affairs Office, Room 114, across from the Information Desk in the Main Lobby or call 544-2788 or 544-4140.

This office also has information packets on living wills, durable powers of attorney for health care, and the Organ Donation Program.

The office can assist you in contacting a lawyer should you need legal assistance in preparing documents concerning your wishes for your health care.

GATEWAY TO CARE AT A GLANCE

Martin Army Community Hospital

Beneficiaries who register for Gateway To Care agree to be empaneled into and use family practice for all primary health care needs.

The following options are available:

- Active duty family members — empanel in either the unit family practice clinic or the Primary Care for the Uniformed Service, or PRIMUS, Family Practice Clinic.
- Retirees and their families—empanel in the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic or Martin Army Community Hospital Family Practice Clinic. The hospital's clinic is limited to some currently empaneled beneficiaries.
- The Emergency Room and the Outpatient Clinic will remain available during nonduty hours. The Outpatient Clinic will have extended hours.
- Use health care services available at Martin Army Community Hospital.
- Use the military health care system, Veterans Affairs, or Preferred Provider Network when health care services are unavailable at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Registering for Gateway To Care allows you:

- To have a designated clinic and physicians to help oversee your total health care needs.
- To have access to health care finders who work with you on a one-to-one basis to locate cost- effective sources of care when unavailable at Martin Army Community Hospital.
- To reduce out-of-pocket expenses when using civilian medical care unavailable at MACH. Providers file all claims.

Nonregistration into Gateway To Care results in:

- Accessing primary health care through the Outpatient Clinic or Emergency Room.
- Using Standard CHAMPUS. The Preferred Provider Network may be used to receive cost share reductions.
- No access to the PRIMUS Clinic. Effective Feb. 1, the PRIMUS Clinic becomes a family practice clinic for enrollees only.

Nurse case manager is GTC 'beacon of light'

Martin Army Community Hospital

With the Gateway To Care Program, most beneficiaries will want to know, "Will my benefits be cut, reduced or even eliminated, and what kind of care can I expect?" These are certainly legitimate concerns.

The coordinated care or "Gateway To Care" concept is the military's way of coping with the spiraling cost and changes within the health care system.

This service will provide either the medical care required by military beneficiaries (retirees, active duty and their family members) or arrange for other practitioners or facilities to assist in providing that care.

As the concept of coordinated care unfolds, the nurse case manager will become a "beacon of light" — a visible presence within the coordinated care system who is committed to quality care.

The most promising component of coordinated care is case management, which ensures the patient receives the right health care, according to Johnnie M. Smith, nurse case manager at Martin Army Community Hospital.

It has proven to be the most effective way to maintain quality health care and control cost, she said.

In the military health care system, costs can be controlled through the reduction of CHAMPUS, which stands for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, and its supplemental care costs.

The nurse case manager is a registered nurse who works as a liaison between Martin Army Community Hospital and other medical treatment facilities.

The nurse case manager makes use of broad clinical knowledge when coordinating the needs of each patient.

Nurse case managers routinely interface with civilian and regional military treatment facilities to obtain clinical data on patients hospitalized in these facilities.

Cynthia Barnes

Johnnie Smith is the nurse case manager at Martin Army Community Hospital.

Nurse case managers keep the hospital commander informed on the financial implications when appropriate to facilitate cost-savings and cost avoidance.

They are also responsible for transfers from the civilian to the military treatment facilities.

During the process of coordinating care, the nurse case manager will take the time to discuss the health benefit options and alternatives of care with the patient and their family members.

The nurse case manager is that "beacon of light" – that person with a deep sense of compassion and caring for the welfare of all beneficiaries including active duty, retirees and their family members, Smith said.

The nurse case manager will work to ensure that patients continue to receive the quality of health care they deserve, she said.

Gateway brings with it new terminology

Martin Army Community Hospital

Enrollment ... empanelment ... registration.

Just what ARE Army hospitals doing when patients sign up to participate in the Gateway To Care program — the Army's version of the Department of Defense coordinated care plan?

Enrollment

Enrollment is the term one hears most.

It is also the one the real experts agree on; they agree it is wrong. At least for now it is wrong.

Someday Gateway To Care will enroll participants. But this term has certain implications that are not yet valid for technical reasons. At this time, true enrollment is not possible.

No Gateway To Care participant can be truly enrolled until the Defense Eligibility Enrollment Reporting System can tell Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services whether or not a beneficiary has joined Gateway To Care.

At this time that is impossible because the DEERS file format does not have spaces for this information and the Army hospitals have no way to put that information into DEERS.

The first problem requires changing the DEERS contract to enlarge the data base.

The Department of Defense is now negotiating with the contractor who runs DEERS to make the necessary changes.

The second obstacle requires buying, or creating special software, adapting this to hospital computer systems, and connecting it to DEERS.

This will be done with a linkage called a DEERS tap, which is still being developed. In some cases, new computers are needed.

Within a year or so, most stateside Army hospitals will be able to collect and organize enrollment date on patients.

Completion will take time because the Department of Defense must give approval and money for more computer systems.

Collecting data in the right format will give hospitals a head start.

They can quickly put all the data into DEERS as soon as DEERS is enlarged to accept it and the DEERS tap has been installed.

Until this is done, other terms are more accurate than enrollment.

Empanelment

Some officials prefer empanelment, which is the process of assigning Gateway To Care participants to primary care physicians or clinics.

That emphasizes the improved access and more personalized service that beneficiaries receive under Gateway To Care.

Registration

Information collected during registration will help hospitals provide more and better care.

This information, consisting of patient names, military status, addresses, health problems, insurance coverage, etc., gives hospitals a working knowledge of its particular patient populations and allows the hospital to develop the plan best suited to meeting its patients' needs.

That is something hospitals never had under the traditional first-come, first-served system.

Hospitals had this information for patients admitted to Army hospitals, but not for patients who used only Army clinics and CHAMPUS providers.

Hospital officials can now determine what kinds and qualities of care are needed.

That gives them the ability to decide the most efficient mix of in-house and Preferred Provider Network resources.

In-house resources includes all located in the Army hospital: military, civil service and contract providers.

Preferred providers are civilian CHAMPUS providers who, in exchange for getting Gateway To Care patients' business, sign agreements to cooperate closely with the Army hospital, provide special services to patients and charge discounted fees.

Enrollment, empanelment, registration — whatever the term, those who join when invited will have increased access to quality health care either provided or arranged by Martin Army Community Hospital.

PRIMUS to become 'family practice clinic'

Patients to receive 'family doctor' care

Martin Army Community Hospital

Gateway To Care is a health-care plan designated to improve access to care and contain health-care costs for the patient and government.

A complaint frequently heard from patients of Martin Army Community Hospital has been the inaccessibility of family-practice doctors.

Beginning in February, the Primary Care for the Uniform Services Clinic will become the PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic.

What are the advantages of a PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic over PRIMUS walk-in clinic?

There are several benefits, the first of which is the "gatekeeper" concept.

One doctor or group of doctors will guide the patient through day-to-day health care, rather like the old family doctor. Walk-in care is fragmented and not well regulated.

Patients can't be evaluated for follow up to see if different treatments are effective. If the doctor doesn't know the patient, he or she won't know what has or has not worked in the past and valuable time is wasted learning medical history.

There will be expanded laboratory, X-ray and pharmacy services. This will cut down the necessity to travel to MACH for further testing.

Medications not available at the clinic will continue to be provided free of charge at a local specified drug store.

Finally, more beneficiaries, retirees' families and family members of active duty service members will have family-practice care available.

The PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic will also have extended hours.

The contract for the new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic has not been let.

When the location of the new clinic has been established, further information will be published.

CHAMPUS expands

New Select program offers voluntary option

By John Wynn
CHAMPUS Select Coordinator

The Gateway To Care program will provide many benefits to those who enroll, according to Martin Army Community Hospital officials.

One benefit is in the way beneficiaries obtain civilian health care.

Active duty family members, as well as retirees and their family members, have a cost-effective option to the standard Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services when needed health care services are not available from the military medical system.

It's a relatively new program called CHAMPUS Select that is being offered in conjunction with the Army's Gateway To Care Program.

CHAMPUS Select is a voluntary health-care program offered by the Department of Defense to provide sound, affordable health care for CHAMPUS beneficiaries in the Southeastern region of the United States.

The program consists of a comprehensive network of "preferred" doctors, hospitals and other health-care professionals established to deliver standard CHAMPUS benefits plus reduced cost-shares and automatic claims filing.

CHAMPUS Select is not a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance plan; therefore, beneficiaries pay no premiums to use the program.

To take advantage of the money- and time-savings benefits available through CHAMPUS Select, beneficiaries simply need to use doctors and hospitals affiliated with the program.

With CHAMPUS Select, beneficiaries receive the following benefits:

• Lower out-of-pocket costs — this is because of reduced cost-share percentages and lower negotiated fees for health-care services.

Active duty family members, as well as retirees and their family members, can save more than 5 percent on doctor visits and other outpatient care.

For inpatient hospital care, active duty family members pay no cost-share while retirees and their family members save 10 percent on inpatient care.

• Less paperwork — health care claims are completed and submitted by CHAMPUS Select providers, not by beneficiaries.

• Easy access — to use the program, call the Health Care Finder at 544-1591 or 544-1447 to schedule an appointment.

• No premiums — this is not a CHAMPUS supplemental insurance plan.

In addition to its availability in the Fort Benning area, CHAMPUS Select operates throughout the five Southeastern states of Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi and Tennessee.

This means that a CHAMPUS beneficiary who is either stationed at or traveling through any of these areas can take advantage of the benefits available through CHAMPUS Select.

There are currently more than 100 hospitals and approximately 6,200 doctors, mental health providers and other health-care practitioners participating in the CHAMPUS Select Program.

At Fort Benning, the program has been operational since May 1991.

CHAMPUS Select health-care providers in the Columbus area include The Bradley Center and more than 70 individual practitioners.

Beneficiaries who are interested in receiving a current copy of the list of providers who participate in the program may call the Fort Benning CHAMPUS Select Office at 682-5949.

Also, beneficiaries may call toll free (800) 824-3570 to confirm the name of a CHAMPUS Select provider in their area.

If your doctor is not part of this new program, it's to your advantage to ask him or her to consider joining the program, the CHAMPUS Select coordinator suggested.

Hospital to bill health insurance companies for outpatient care

By Charles Oliver
Patient Administration Division

In November 1990, Congress passed legislation that directs all military hospitals to begin billing commercial health insurance companies for the care provided in outpatient clinics. This applies to all beneficiaries except active duty members.

Since 1987, military hospitals have been billing insurance companies for inpatient care provided. Therefore, this revision to the law is not a new concept, but rather an expansion of the old law.

Policyholders pay premiums to have the cost of their care reimbursed, so it is logical to allow military hospitals to be reimbursed like their civilian counterparts.

Providing high-tech medical care costs a lot of money; the hospital operating budget is in the neighborhood of $32 million per year, according to officials at Martin Army Community Hospital.

This program will allow the hospital to maintain and even possibly expand the level of services it provides despite the continuous budget cuts.

Thus, the Army medical system can strive for higher quality of care without sacrificing other vital military operational programs.

Anyone who is covered under a commercial insurance policy falls under this program. This includes employer-sponsored group policies that cover soldiers and their family members.

It includes Medicare supplemental policies and any commercial policies that patients may have. It does not include Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, CHAMPUS supplemental, Medicare or Medicaid policies under the current law.

The amount billed is a flat rate of $71 for each clinic visit. If a patient goes to the Internal Medicine Clinic and, on the same day, is also treated at the Surgical Clinic, his or her insurance company will be billed $142. If a patient visits the Internal Medicine Clinic twice in the same day, the fee will be $71.

If a patient has more than one insurance policy, the hospital will bill the second policy the portion of the $71 that the first policy does not pay, so the total collected by the hospital will never exceed the $71 per visit.

If a patient's policy has deductibles or co-insurance, the patient will not receive a bill for these amounts. The hospital will absorb any portion not reimbursed by the insurance.

Since this money will stay in Martin Army Community Hospital's budget, the hospital will be able to use it for the priorities that it sets for its patients.

This could include new waiting room furniture, electrocardiogram machines, microscopes, wheelchairs, delivery room warmers for newborns, pediatric cribs and glucose monitors to give to diabetic patients for use at home.

Clinics to merge

Martin Army Community Hospital

Winder Health Clinic and Kelley Hill Health Clinic will merge in January in response to the growing medical needs in the community and in preparation for the Gateway To Care health initiative.

To accommodate more patients and streamline patient flow, a major building project is almost complete. An annex to the existing Winder Health Clinic will double the clinic space.

The new and improved clinic will bring modernization and new equipment to the facility. Patients eligible for care at the new facility are those enrolled in Gateway To Care and whose sponsors are assigned to units presently designated to Winder or Kelley Hill Health Clinic.

The new role of the modernization project is to be a completely functioning family practice clinic for primary care and specialty referral.

The projected staff will include six family practice physicians, a nurse practitioner, a registered nurse and a physician's assistant, along with dedicated civilian and military medics, record clerks and appointment clerks.

The facility will be equipped with X-ray capabilities, limited prepackaged pharmacy support, as well as physical therapy services.

These changes are intended to streamline medical services and to provide complete health care outside of Martin Army Community Hospital.

This will be the primary entry point to health care for the beneficiaries assigned to the facility, and medical records of these recipients will be housed there. Specialty referral will be made as needed.

For more information, contact the Coordinated Care Division at Martin Army Community Hospital at 544-1591 or 544-1447.

Pharmacy strives to give best care possible

Martin Army Community Hospital

The goal of the Outpatient Pharmacy is to provide the best pharmaceutical care possible for patients in an efficient professional manner.

Martin Army Community Hospital dispenses approximately 2,000 prescriptions daily.

To improve convenience for patients, the pharmacy has upgraded its computer system. This has cut the waiting time from an average of about an hour to 30 minutes or less.

The pharmacy has started a call-in refill system. The number to call is 544-1352.

Prescriptions called in before noon Monday through Friday will be ready by 4:30 p.m. the same day. Requests received between noon and midnight will be ready by 9:30 a.m. the next duty day. Prescriptions called after noon on Friday through midnight Sunday will be ready after 9:30 a.m. Monday.

Refills can be picked up at the pick-up window at the main pharmacy. Just tell pharmacy personnel that the refill prescription was phoned in.

Planning for quality

Cpt. Judith L. Avera will be the head nurse of the expanded Winder Health Clinic. Here she discusses plans with Cpt. Mary C. Hess, clinical head nurse, family practice.

Family practice to grow

Martin Army Community Hospital

Family practice physicians specialize in you — the patient.

More than 95 percent of all medical problems can be safely and effectively managed by a family physician, according to Dr. (Maj.) Nancy L. Walker, clinical director of Martin Army Community Hospital's Family Practice Clinic.

These "family specialists" are trained to listen to the patient, taking into consideration lifestyles, working habits, family relationships and long-term effects of therapy.

Family physicians have a broad- based training background, ranging from obstetrical and newborn care, pediatrics and adolescent medicine to surgical care, adult medical care, gynecology, urology and emergency medicine.

Your family doctor is not only concerned about your medical condition, but he or she can order preliminary tests, explain the results clearly in plain talk, and refer patients to the appropriate specialist if necessary.

After patients are evaluated by the specialist, they often will be followed by the family physician. Thus, patients are able to see their doctors before and after specialty consultation.

Family physicians serve Army beneficiaries throughout the world. In fact, they are present in some remote areas because of their extensive abilities to care for families.

At Fort Benning, there are four family practice clinics: Martin Army Community Hospital, Aviation Medicine, Kelley Hill and Winder Health Clinic.

Families enrolled in the family practice clinics have been more than pleased with the care received, said Walker.

The waiting list for family practice care at Fort Benning has been considerable.

Therefore, in an effort to better serve the Fort Benning population, a new Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Family Practice Clinic will be opening in the spring.

This will enable thousands of families to have access to their family physician who cares for them, hospital officials said.

GATEWAY TO CARE

Quality, concerned health care ...

Health-care finders can help

By Glenda Hall
Coordinated Care Division

Specialist John Doe is assigned to the 29th Infantry Regiment at Fort Benning.

Because Doe registered his family into Gateway To Care, Winder Family Practice Clinic becomes his family's primary care clinic.

When Doe's wife experienced pain in her right ear, she reported to Winder to be treated. After being seen by her primary-care provider, she was told that a consultation would be forwarded to the Ear, Nose and Throat Clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital, and she would be contacted regarding an appointment.

Because of the lack of available appointments within the time frame specified by the primary-care physician, the consultation was referred to the coordinated-care health-care finder section. Mrs. Doe was contacted by a health-care finder who gave her information regarding physicians within the community.

The finder also told her about the physicians in the Preferred Provider Network called CHAMPUS Select. These are physicians and other health care providers who have agreed to lower their fees for beneficiaries eligible under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Service.

Using the Preferred Provider Network will impact in a saving, not only to the patient through lower cost shares, but also to the government by reducing the growth rate of government and beneficiary health-care costs.

The health-care finder explained information regarding deductibles and cost shares to Mrs. Doe. An appointment was set up for Mrs. Doe with a physician in the Preferred Provider Network, and she was given directions to the physician's office.

This is an example of the service provided by the health-care finders in the Coordinated Care Division, a result of Martin Army Community Hospital's participation in Gateway To Care.

When care cannot be provided at Martin Army Community Hospital, you can seek the expertise of a health-care finder. The finder will offer personalized services in arranging for your health-care needs.

They will evaluate all available resources, to include but not limited to the Medical Center at Keesler Air Force Base, Miss.; Dwight D. Eisenhower Army Medical Center at Fort Gordon, Ga.; or Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.; as well as local health care providers. The finders will assist in locating the most affordable health care for beneficiaries requesting their services.

Finders have access to a comprehensive amount of detailed information they will use to identify appropriate sources of care for appointments for tests and specialty care, to advise patients regarding their cost shares and deductibles, and to inform patients of available community services.

GATEWAY TO CARE Q & A

Martin Army Community Hospital

Q: My spouse speaks a foreign language and does not understand English. Does he or she have to attend the scheduled Gateway briefing?

A: No. An appointment should be set up with one of Martin Army Community Hospital's health-care finders to brief the spouse, and the hospital will arrange for a translator to be present.

Q: My spouse works evenings and can't attend evening briefings. Will there be other briefings ?

A: Yes. A schedule of make-up briefings will be given to your unit and additional briefing dates for retirees will be announced.

Q: My spouse or sponsor can't attend the enrollment briefing. What do we do?

A: The family member attending the briefing may register all eligible family members.

Q: If we don't like the care we're receiving at the clinic we select, can we switch?

A: No. However, you will want to discuss your concerns with the clinic chief to resolve any problems.

Q: We have an established relationship with a physician in the community to take care of a particular condition for one of my family members. Will signing up for this program cause us to transfer this care to MACH?

A: Maybe. If neither the hospital nor a provider in the Preferred Provider Network can render the needed health-care services, then maintaining the current relationship may be appropriate.

Q: If we don't enroll into Gateway To Care, do we lose CHAMPUS benefits?

A: No. Enrolling will allow you to receive the benefits or incentives that the Department of Defense is considering.

Q: My spouse has primary health insurance or we have CHAMPUS supplemental insurance. Do we need to give up this coverage?

A: No. When care can't be rendered in the military system and you have to go to the community, health-care providers must bill primary insurance before they can bill CHAMPUS. Additionally, since there will continue to be some costs incurred, maintaining a supplemental insurance plan may be appropriate for you.

Q: I am divorced and my children live elsewhere and visit on occasion. Do they need to be enrolled?

A: No.

Q: Is there any cost to sign up?

A: No. This program is not an insurance program. This program is designed to streamline your current access to health care, control health-care costs, and assure quality of care.

Q: My spouse and I are both active duty. What clinic do we enroll our children into?

A: Based upon which sponsor the children have been enrolled into Defense Eligibility Enrolment Reporting system, the children should be enrolled into that sponsor's clinic.

Q: I'm active duty and my children go to the Pediatric Clinic. Do they need to be enrolled into a Family Practice Clinic?

A: Yes. Pediatrics will be a specially referral clinic. They will work closely with the primary care providers in providing pediatric services.

Q: I'm active duty and my family is currently empaneled into Family Practice at the hospital. Do we have to switch clinics?

A: No. You will not be required to switch clinics.

Q: I'm active duty and if I transfer (for example, to Korea) and my family remains at Fort Benning, will my family members need to move from their clinic?

A: No.

Q: I'm due to retire from active duty soon. Will my family and I be able to stay in our current clinic?

A:Upon retirement PRIMUS will become your primary-care clinic.

Army Cares About People

PHARMACY: Busily fills orders

Listed below are some frequently asked questions.

Q: Will the pharmacy fill prescriptions from a civilian physician or dentist?

A: The pharmacy will fill prescriptions from civilian prescribers if the medication is on the hospital's formulary (authorized to be routinely stocked at the hospital) and the prescriber has written it for a specific product the hospital carries or a generic equivalent.

If a physician writes "brand necessary" on the prescription, the pharmacy will not be able to provide a generic substitution.

If the pharmacy fills a civilian prescription, it is limited by the same restrictions imposed upon the prescriptions written by the physicians assigned to Martin Army Community Hospital.

Therefore, patients may not receive the complete quantity of medications or the number of refills that a civilian doctor has written. The pharmacy cannot fill prescriptions written by civilian physician assistants, optometrists, nurse clinicians/practitioners.

Q: Can a doctor phone in a prescription to the pharmacy?

A: No, Martin Army Community Hospital is prohibited from receiving prescriptions over the telephone. The hospital must have a written prescription from a doctor. However, physicians are encouraged to call the hospital to inquire about medication availability or for a clinical pharmacy consult.

Q: Can the pharmacy refill prescriptions from another military post or civilian drug store?

A: The hospital can refill prescriptions for noncontrolled drugs from other uniformed medical facilities (on a one-time basis only) if refills are authorized. However, the hospital cannot accept refills from a civilian drug store.

Q: Can prescriptions be dropped off and picked up later?

A: Patients may leave prescriptions at the main outpatient pharmacy to be filled and picked up within five calender days. If the prescription is not picked up during this time period, the medication will be returned to stock and the prescription voided.

The hospital also has a mail drop box located in the pharmacy waiting room. A refill request may be left in this box after the pharmacy has closed and will be ready for pick up later, after noon the following day. This service is offered Monday through Friday.

Cynthia Barnes

Spc. Joanne Inami (front), pharmacy technician, and Sgt. Sherry Glenn, pharmacy NCO, fill prescriptions.

Q: Can someone else bring in prescriptions to be filled for a patient or pick up prescriptions left by a patient?

A: Yes, provided that they bring the patient's identification card. This is a requirement for both new and refill prescriptions. Make sure the person also brings the pharmacy receipt ticket to pick up prescriptions; it will help to locate the medication.

Q: What patient information is required on prescriptions?

A: Printed patient's name, patient's identification number on the medical card (example: 30-123-45-6789), address and telephone numbers, written on at least one of the patient's prescriptions each time he or she visits the pharmacy in case the pharmacy needs to contact the patient about the medication.

To comply with Department of Defense directives, all civilian prescriptions are required to have a Defense Eligibility Enrollment Reporting System, or DEERS, check prior to submission to the pharmacy. DEERS checks are performed at the Outpatient Records Section. This policy does not apply to refills.

Q: How much medicine can a patient receive at one time?

Normally prescriptions are filled for a maximum of a 30-day supply with a maximum of 11 refills. Exceptions to this policy are birth control pills, estrogen type medications, slow release potassium (Slow-X), hydrochloriazide (Oretic), and digoxin (Lanoxin, which can be dispersed for a six-month supply with one refill). The prescription must be written in such a manner to allow the hospital to furnish this much medication.

Q: How can a patient get a prescription refilled?

A: If the patient's physician has authorized refills, it will be indicated at the lower left portion of the prescription label. (Example: "Refill 3," means there are three refills left.)

If the prescription label indicates refills are allowed, bring the container, with the label attached, to the pharmacy with the patient's identification card within 12 months of the original filling date, which is located on the lower left corner of the label.

Patients may use the Outpatient Pharmacy, the Refill Pharmacy, or utilize the call-in refill system. The hospital encourages patients to use the call-in refill system.

Q: Are patients allowed to bring in refills early?

A: Yes, prescriptions will be refilled up to seven calendar days before their actual due date. The chief of the Outpatient Pharmacy may approve filling a prescription earlier than the seven days in special situations.

Q: How can a patient tell when a prescription is ready?

A: The yellow pharmacy receipt ticket given at the prescription turn-in window contains a stamped serial number.

Refer to the last three digits of this number and when they appear on the lighted display call board, the prescription is ready.

Q: How long is a prescription good?

A: With only a few exceptions, prescriptions are typically valid for a 12-month period or for no more then 11 refills, whichever comes first. New prescriptions should be presented within seven days of when the doctor wrote it or the hospital may not fill it. This is especially true for controlled substances.

Q: Why does medication look different sometimes?

A: Generic medications are made by several companies. Frequently the company providing a specific type of medication will change, which also results in the medication's appearance changing.

Martin Army Community Hospital personnel attempt to inform the patients of these changes either orally or with an auxiliary label on the prescription bottle.

If hospital personnel forget to mention the hospital is using a different company and the medication appears different, ask for clarification or that the prescription be doubled-checked.

Q: Why does it take so long just to get a prescription filled?

A: With a few exceptions for patients being discharged from the hospital or in severe pain, the pharmacy operates on a first-in, first-out principle.

Each prescription processed must be reviewed for completeness, correct dosage, and drug-to-drug interactions based on the patient's profile. Then a label is produced and the medication is selected, packaged and labeled.

Next a registered pharmacist evaluates the product and verifies that the prescription is correct.

Finally, the medication is dispensed to the patient who is instructed how to use it properly. This process is multiplied by the number of prescriptions being presented at that time.

The pharmacy averages more than 150 prescriptions per hour, and during peak hours (10 a.m. to noon and 2 to 4 p.m.) the hourly volume frequently exceeds 200.

Each of these steps requires time; they are all necessary to provide the correct medication to the right patient with the right dose.

Survivor benefits options change

By Friede McDonald
Adjutant General's Office

The option for increased life insurance coverage is one of several changes in the military survivor benefits package under the new law. Effective Jan. 1, the rates of Dependency and Indemnity Compensation paid to survivors of members who die on active duty or after military service from a service-connected cause will be standardized at $750 per month.

Current DIC payments are based on the member's pay grade. They range from $616 per month for the spouse of a private to $1,580 per month for the spouse of a general. Deaths occurring after Dec. 31 will result in a DIC payment of $750 per month for surviving spouses, regardless of the member's pay grade. This means that survivors of members at the grade of sergeant first class and above will have a reduced benefit.

The $750 DIC payment increases by $165 per month if the service member was 100 percent disabled as a result of military service for at least eight years before death.

Those currently receiving DIC payments retain them at the current level. However, retirees and separatees with service-connected disability will receive the new DIC payment of $750 per month. These personnel are not eligible to increase their veterans' life insurance coverage now to compensate for the change. Commercial insurance is their only recourse.

Post soldier dies

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Sgt. Jeffrey A. Palmer, 21, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, died Wednesday as a result of injuries sustained during a routine ranger training exercise at Twenty-nine Palms, Calif., Tuesday about 11:30 p.m. Palmer, who was shot through the right thigh, was air evacuated to the Naval Hospital at Twenty-nine Palms. After several hours in surgery, he died from complications resulting from his injuries.

Palmer, of Mount Jewett, Pa., arrived at the 75th Nov. 21, 1989. He was an infantry team leader.

An investigation is under way.

Veterans' Act allows increased SGLI coverage

By Friede McDonald
Adjutant General's Office

As a result of the Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992, military members will be able to increase their Servicemen's Group Life Insurance coverage to a maximum of $200,000 effective Dec. 1.

In the past, soldiers were automatically signed up for the increased coverage. That is not the case with this new voluntary increase. Soldiers must elect the increase coverage by completing a new SGLI form. The current $100,000 coverage will continue unless active and Reserve soldiers elect to increase or decrease their coverage. Any changes in coverage can only be made in multiples of $10,000. Premiums will remain at 80 cents for each $10,000 of coverage, so $200,000 will cost $16 a month.

Any members eligible for SGLI coverage on Nov. 30 may elect to increase the amount of their SGLI coverage up to the maximum of $200,000 without proof of good health. After this "open season" enrollment from Dec. 1 to Mar. 31, soldiers can still increase their coverage, but they will have to show proof of good health and eligibility.

Coverage at the increased level becomes effective once the SGLI form is prepared, signed by the soldier, and received by the serviceor Dec. 1 whichever is later.

Separating service members will be able to convert the new maximum active-duty coverage into an equivalent amount in the SGLI program.

Commanders must ensure all of their eligible soldiers have the opportunity to increase their SGLI coverage.

There is new information required to complete the forms. Soldiers must provide the full name, Social Security number and address (with ZIP code) for principal and contingent beneficiaries. Soldiers need to have this information available when they prepare their new SGLI election.

Permanent party soldiers should coordinate with their battalion personnel administration center to schedule an appointment with customer service. Battalion PACs may coordinate with Customer Service to schedule individual appointments or group and unit processing. Appointments are scheduled on a first come basis. For information at Customer Service, call Darlene Feagins, chief, Building 2638, 545-4893 or 545-2602. At 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, call Chief Warrant Officer 3 Roger Beleau, at 544-3277 or 544-2216.

Battalion PACs supporting U.S. Army Infantry School students can contact Chief Warrant Officer 3 John Towry at 545-5459 or 545-5932.

TRADOC commander discusses issues at video teleconference

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

"If you're on a battlefield when conditions are changing rapidly, it's important that everyone know what everyone else is doing and that you have a firm sense of direction."

With these words, Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., Training and Doctrine Command commanding general, explained his purpose for a video teleconference he conducted with several TRADOC newspapers staffs Nov. 10.

Franks outlined current TRADOC policy in light of the ongoing drawdown. Franks discussed regionalization, changes in training methods, military occupational specialty consolidation, resources, sexual harassment and other topics during the hour-long conference.

Following is an overview of topics Franks discussed:

TRADOC mission

"As I travel around TRADOC, I'm frequently asked how I would describe the Army as it is now. I say we are proud, motivated, tough, working hard, but changing and getting smaller.

"In changing from a Cold War force to a force projection focus our major challenge is to sustain excellence and maintain relevance in training and leadership. Also, we must provide modernization alternatives that ensure we maintain our edge on the battlefield.

"To accomplish organizational excellence, we have to have a Training and Doctrine Command in which we all have a sense of ownership about the accomplishment of our mission — to meet the needs of the Army.

"We all have to have a sense of ownership about the standards of living and quality of life within which we accomplish that mission.

"We must be able to set mission priorities before making cuts. In TRADOC our priorities in personnel are those who teach, those who train and those who write doctrine. We must ensure we maintain our capability of training to excellence. We need to keep our drill sergeants working with the soldiers in our classrooms and training areas.

"Our last point of major effort is to focus on our people – soldiers, civilians and family members, and

Army commits to environment

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The Army strengthened its commitment to environmental concerns Thursday with the signing of the Army Environmental Strategy.

The strategy, which was signed in a Pentagon ceremony by Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Gordon R. Sullivan, is the guidepost for the Total Army Environmental Stewardship Campaign.

"The Army Environmental Strategy consists of four pillars: compliance restoration, prevention and conservation," said Maj. Gen. Charles W. McClain Jr., chief of Public Affairs. "Moreover, it integrates these pillars into a comprehensive environmental stewardship approach, which will guide Army actions involving the environment into the next century."

Maj. John Orosz, chief of the Environmental Management Division, Directorate of Public Works, said that Fort Benning will continue to embody the theme of the Army Stewardship Campaign: "Every Day in America's Army is an Environmental Stewardship Day."

He said that Fort Benning is a model post because its size and diversity have caused it to become involved with every major environmental program the Army has.

"The preservation of our land resources is particularly important," said Orosz. "The ability to train the finest infantry in the world depends on us being good stewards of these resources. Strategies such as rotation, re-vegetation and erosion control must continue or Fort Benning's training lands will cease to exist."

Orosz added that good stewardship of the post's lands will also ensure that they are available for multiple reasons.

"Hunting for example," Orosz said. "We allow hunters to access training areas that are not being used where they can enjoy some of the finest hunting in the Southeast."

Orosz cited several examples of the post's continuous commitment to the environment.

Stress-free life found in car

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

Once again, I've been inspired by the flashing sign ... er, electronic message board on 1st Division Road.

I haven't been convinced to do anything like go to Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers night, or sign up for underwater basket weaving. Nor have I been reminded to do something I'd forgotten. But just the same, the concept of the board has inspired me.

Actually, it's only made a "wisher," a "dreamer," of me because there's no way I could bring this idea to reality.

My idea, thanks to the message board, is to get a smaller version or two for my car.

I'd put one in the back window and one in the front window (the one in the front window would need to display words in reverse sequence so people could read it through their rear view mirrors).

Yeah, you've got the idea. A way to communicate with our fellow drivers.

COMMENTARY

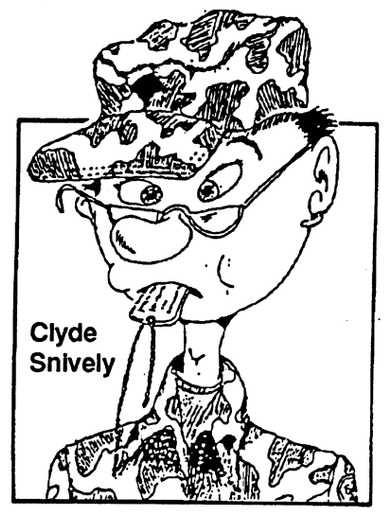
For instance, the rear message board would tell others to dim their head lights or be prepared to be blasted by a hidden laser gun.

It'd tell creeps to get the blankety blank off my blankety blank tail.

My front message board for rear view mirrors would congratulate drivers for being law-abiding citizens, but if they didn't get out of the fast lane in two seconds I'd blow them away.

It'd also thank them for cutting in front of me and ask them where they were when God passed out driving skills and brains after they finally locate the turn indicator half way through their turns (if they even locate it then).

For those drivers who self-righteously honk at me to correct my driving, I'd use the message board to say things like "au contraire, I didn't cut you off, you're the one who failed to yield for the yield sign," or "I assume you were honking at me for being in your lane. However, if you will only study your drivers' manual, assuming you learned to read, you'd see that people turning left from the far left lane should remain in that lane so people making similar turns in adjoining lanes can safely complete turns in their lanes."



Naturally both thoughts are far too long for such message boards, so we'd do it headline style, cutting the first message to "yield, you blind jerk." and "road hog — one lane per car!"

For the ghoulish ones who like to rubber neck at accidents, backing traffic up for miles, I'd add a horn that sounds like squealing brakes to catch their attention then flash a sign about morbid curiosity and their own driving skills putting them in the same place as the hapless victims of the wreck they're viewing.

I'd also have choice words for those who think the safe driving speed on wet interstates is 25 mph.

Obviously such signs can have their drawbacks.

They too could be the cause of traffic accidents. Many, many accidents, I'm sure. And if you're not too careful and flash a truly meaningful sign to some gorilla or armed cowboy, the consequences could be dire.

Still, it'd be fun to try for a day or two. It wouldn't improve driving habits for these brain-dead toads, but at least you'd have the satisfaction of "talking back" to these creeps. And you know what they say, "express your feelings to relieve stress." Boy, would I be stress free.

Native American leader sends greetings

Greetings, Ya'teeh (hello) from the Navajo Nation. I am president of the Navajo Nation. We are recognized as the largest Indian tribe in the United States with a population of about 200,000.

Most of our people live on our 25,000-square mile reservation, which extends into the states of New Mexico, Arizona and Utah. Other members of our tribe reside throughout the United States and in places such as Fort Benning.

We are an Indian nation as established by international law, which formed the basis for the treaties we signed with the United States. Our treaties (1845 and 1868) are similar to those other Indian tribes have signed with the United States. They are agreements between two independent and sovereign governments.

The Navajo people elect the Navajo leadership every four years in the same way states elect governors and state legislatures. Like state citizens, we are citizens of the Navajo Nation and the United States. The Navajo people are proud to be members of the great Navajo Nation and United States of America and nowhere is this fact demonstrated more than in the U.S. armed forces.

On the occasion of Native American Indian Heritage Month at Fort Benning, I believe your recognition of the contributions of American Indians is very appropriate.

There are about 16,000 veterans living on the Navajo Nation. Navajos have served with honor in every war or conflict in which the United States has been engaged. Like all Indian tribes, our people have enlisted without hesitation to serve this country. In fact, our service in World War I is one reason American Indians were granted U.S. citizenship in 1924.

On Sept. 17, the contributions of the Navajo people to World War II was recognized with a permanent display in the Pentagon.The exhibit commemorates the service of the Navajo codetalkers who used the Navajo language in code in the Pacific against Japan. This code remains the only unbreakable code in the history of modern warfare.

During the Persian Gulf War, about 400 Navajo men and women served with honor. We can thank the Great Spirit that none of our tribal members were killed, and others have received citations for their service in a time of battle.

Going to war to protect homeland, families and freedom is a heritage of all American Indians. As shown in the wars during the 1800s, we would fight when we had to even against superior weaponry or numbers. This warrior heritage continues today in service to the United States.

I send my greetings from Navajoland in the Southwest. I appreciate the opportunity to write to you and I thank Cynthia Loney for her invitation to do so.

U.S. president proclaims 'Year of American Indian'

Half a millennium ago, when European explorers amazed their compatriots with stories of a New World, what they actually described was a land that had long been home to America's native peoples.

In the Northeast part of this country and along the Northwest coast, generations of tribes fished and hunted; others farmed the rich soils of the Southeast and Great Basin. In the arid Southwest, native people irrigated the desert, cultivating what land they could. Each tribe formed a thriving community with its own customs, traditions and system of social order.

The contributions that Native Americans have made to our nation's history and culture are as numerous and varied as the tribes themselves. Over the years, they have added to their ancient wealth of art and folklore a rich legacy of service and achievement.

Today, we gratefully recall Native Americans who helped the early European settlers to survive in a strange new land; we salute the Navajo code talkers of World War II and all those Native Americans who have distinguished themselves in service to our country; and we remember those men and women of Indian descent — such as the great athlete, Jim Thorpe and our 31st Vice President, Charles Curtis — who have instilled pride in others by reaching the heights of their respective fields.

We also celebrate, with special admiration and gratitude, another enduring legacy of Native Americans — their close attachment to the land and their exemplary stewardship of its natural resources. In virtually every realm of our national life, the contributions of America's original inhabitants and their descendants continue.

During 1992, we will honor this country's native peoples as vital participants in the history of the United States. This year gives us the opportunity to recognize the special place that Native Americans hold in our society, to affirm the right of Indian tribes to exist as sovereign entities and to seek greater mutual understanding and trust. Therefore, we gratefully salute all American Indians, expressing our support for tribal self-determination and assisting with efforts to celebrate and preserve each tribe's unique cultural heritage.

The Congress, by Public Law 102-188, has designated 1992 as the "Year of the American Indian" and has authorized and requested the president to issue a proclamation in observance of this year.

Now, therefore, I, George Bush, president of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim 1992 as the Year of the American Indian. I encourage federal, state and local government officials, interested groups and organizations, and the people of the United States to observe this year with appropriate programs, ceremonies and activities.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand this 2nd day of March, in the year of our Lord 1992, and of the independence of the United States of America the 216th.

George Bush

GATEWAY TO CARE

Martin Army Community Hospital

Martin Army Community Hospital officials announced today the award of a multi-million dollar contract to provide family practice care to eligible beneficiaries. The contract was awarded to PHP Healthcare Corporation of Alexandria, Va., that is responsible for the operation of the present Primary Care for the Uniformed Services Clinic located on Boxwood drive, near Columbus Square Mall.

Fort Benning's new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic contract will start Feb. 1. Until this date, eligible beneficiaries may continue to use the clinic on a walk-in basis. Beginning Feb. 1, only those enrolled will be eligible for care. The new clinic will be designated as a primary care entry point into the Army's Gateway To Care Program.

According to Lt. Col. Charles Bottoms, chief of the hospital's Coordinated Care Division, this new contract should not be confused with that which is presently in operation. The new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic will remain at its present location, but the actual size of the clinic and services available will be much greater.

Use of the clinic will be limited to active duty family members, retirees and their family members, and families of deceased military. Those eligible must enroll in the Gateway To Care Program and request assignment to the new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. They must also be registered in Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System. Active duty soldiers will not be eligible for treatment at the new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic.

The hours of operation will be from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays. The new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic will not be open on Sundays and federal holidays.

The significant benefit of the new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic is that family practice level care will finally be available to thousands of beneficiaries who have not been able to enroll in the hospital's Family Practice Clinic. All laboratory test, X-rays, immunizations and prescriptions will be provided at the clinic. The clinic will keep and maintain all the medical records for the patients they serve.

Those who enroll will receive a special medical card that will identify them as members of the new PRIMUS Family Practice Clinic. The only time the patients enrolled at the clinic will be seen at Martin Army Community Hospital is when the clinic is not open, in the case of an emergency, when the patient is referred to a specialty clinic for consultation, or when the patient needs hospitalization.

In order to be seen in the clinic, active duty family members must enroll at one of the scheduled unit briefings. The Gateway To Care briefings have already begun and will continue to be scheduled by individual units. Check with your unit for briefing dates.

Briefings for retirees, their family members, and families of deceased military began in October and will continue through December. For the date, time and location of upcoming briefings, beneficiaries should call the Health Care Finder's Office at 544-1447 or 544-1591.

VTC: Cmdr. speaks on mission

make sure their working and living conditions are not degraded.

Regionalization

"We are looking at ways to sustain our training and leader development capability while combining our resources so we can train to excellence with more economy and efficiency.

"One way to do this is to combine mission requirements at installations in the same region. For instance, Fort Jackson (S.C.) and Fort Gordon (Ga.) are 70 miles apart. We also have installations close to other service installations and to government agencies like the Veterans Administration.

"I am asking installation commanders to suggest regionalization projects combining resources with these other institutions.

"Things like laundry, communication equipment repair, tank repair and a number of other tasks can be done regionally without degradation of services.

Consolidating MOSs

"The driving force here goes back to excellence and relevance — you say to yourself, maybe our soldiers are capable of doing two or three MOSs, so those specialties can be combined into one.

"This is not so much an economic move as one that recognizes the excellence of our young soldiers.

"We are also realizing that some MOS training can be streamlined — instead of teaching each internal combustion engine individually, we can teach the basic principles and let the soldiers apply those principles as they need them.

"We are recognizing that our young soldiers are capable of a great deal, and we're giving them a chance to work to their true potential.

Sexual harassment

"TRADOC is continuing to improve education and prevention programs aimed at eliminating sexual harassment and discrimination of all kinds.

"We emphasize these issues in training our noncommisioned officers, officers and soldiers, to ensure they're thoroughly familiar with the behavior expected of them.

"Sensitivity to these efforts is everybody's job. We're not perfect yet, but we need to keep working at it.

Environment

"What we've got to do for the environment is to meet our responsibility for land, water and air. It's right, it's the law, and we've got to demonstrate that training to complete missions for our country in peace and war is not incompatible with taking care of the environment.

Training deficiencies

"We are instituting a system of trial unit station reports to provide information on shortages or deficiencies occuring during training.

"These needs can often be balanced, and equipment and training aids are often available, but the right people aren't always aware of the needs.

"With these reports, we'll be better able to assess shortages and adjust supplies accordingly."

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Nov. 4 to Nov. 10. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt and/or innocence of any person.

•A family member reported that persons unknown entered their quarters and stole a .38 caliber pistol.

•A specialist reported that persons unknown obtained the calling card number from his phone card and used it to make $472 in unauthorized calls.

•A lieutenant reported that persons unknown gained entry into the unit supply room by crawling through an overhead space. Once inside, they cut the locks off of the lockers and removed more than $3,000 in government equipment.

•A civilian was charged in a traffic accident with following too closely, failure to use safety restraints for children under the age of 4, and failure to use seatbelts.

• A retired lieutenant colonel was charged with shoplifting after removing the price tag from a jacket and exiting the Post Exchange while wearing it.

•A private first class was charged with possession of marijuana after a military narcotic dog alerted on his room during a command directed health and welfare inspection.

•A specialist was charged with shoplifting and assault after exiting the Class Six store with two bottles of cognac that had not been paid for. While awaiting the arrival of the MPs, the specialist pushed the security guard away and fled the store. He was later apprehended after an unknown bystander detained him until the MPs arrived.

• A specialist was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, excessive speed, driving with a suspended license and failure to comply with restricted license.

• A specialist was charged with assault after hitting his wife in the face during a domestic dispute.

• A private first class was charged by civil authorities with improper lane change and DUI.

• A civilian was charged with larceny of private property after cashing six checks, which he knew to be worthless, at the Main PX. The total amount of the checks was $1,315.

• A family member was charged with shoplifting after placing a bottle of liquor in his pants and exiting the Class Six store. He was detained by store personnel until the arrival of the MPs. A search of his vehicle revealed a bottle of cognac.

• A sergeant reported that persons unknown broke the passenger window of his car and removed a carrying case containing 25 cassette tapes.

• A hospital employee reported that persons unknown removed the lock from her locker and stole her name tag that had $30 taped to the back.

• Two unidentified males were loitering in the Sand Hill PX when one the males placed three cartons of cigarettes under his shirt and exited the store. When an employee attempted to detain them, the individuals fled in a gray car.

Other activity included 24 traffic accidents and 13 reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were eight cases of driving under the influence, 12 reported cases of larceny of private property and four reported cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post the Best – Give Crime Arrest!" Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223, or the "Crime in Progress" line.

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The coming of cold weather brings not only the possibility for the usual first-aid emergencies, such as frostbite and trench foot, but for other hazards besides.

Infantry Branch Safety Officer Regis Beighley recently gave some winter safety tips.

"Fort Benning does not get as cold as some areas of the United States, so we don't have very many cold injuries," Beighley said. "It's still important for soldiers and civilians to be aware of some of the cold weather safety hazards in case those hazards happen to occur here or they become stationed in colder climates."

Here are some tips to remember:

• Watch out for slick spots on sidewalks, especially if you are carrying boxes.

• The best way to dress in cold weather is in layers so that if you are too warm you can take some off. Loose, warm, light-weight clothing is best, and don't wear so much that you perspire. Wear clothing to protect the ears, fingers, feet and face from frostbite when outside.

• Drinking plenty of water in cold weather is just as important as in hot weather. Heat injuries, including dehydration, can occur in the winter as well as the summer.

• Beware of the danger of carbon monoxide poisoning, which occurs more frequently in the winter. Carbon monoxide is an odorless, colorless, tasteless gas that is created by incomplete combustion. Symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning include tightness across the forehead followed by headache and pounding of the heart and possibly a feeling of weariness and dizziness.

"Make sure that there is enough ventilation," Beighley said. "Avoid the use of unvented heaters or charcoal grills in closed areas and make sure there are no leaks in your vehicle exhaust. Soldiers who drive or ride in tracked vehicles should also be careful."

Beighley also gave the following reminders to observe when operating motor vehicles in cold weather.

• Be sure to remove all frost or ice glaze from all windshields before driving.

• Turn on your heater for a few minutes before using the defroster to avoid fogging the windshields.

• Keep lights on low when diving in heavy fog, rain or snow.

• Remember that stopping distances will increase on wet or slick roads. If you have to stop quickly don't slam on the brakes. Pump the brakes by applying the brakes quickly, releasing them and then repeating the procedure until you stop. If you have automatic brakes, the brakes will automatically "pump."

• Wear your seatbelt.

"This is one of the best safety tips year round," said Beighley. "People pay thousands of dollars for insurance, but wearing your seatbelt is the best insurance of all for surviving automobile accidents."

IRS wants to give back $$$$

Georgia Department of Revenue

Several Fort Benning residents are among the thousands of Georgians who are owed a tax refund.

If you are a Georgia resident who never received your 1991 federal tax refund, the Internal Revenue Service is inviting you to step forward. The annual search for owners of unclaimed refunds is beginning now.

"When a refund is returned by the Postal Service, the IRS attempts to find the taxpayer, but there are always those who cannot be located," said Paul Williams, IRS district director for Georgia.

There were 2,824 refund checks returned undeliverable in Georgia, ranging from as little as $1 to as much as $19,457 and totaling nearly $1,253,555. Some of these refunds are for years prior to 1991.

The most common reason refund checks cannot be delivered is that taxpayers move after filing their return and do not give the IRS or the Post Office a forwarding address. Taxpayers who change their names for any reason should also notify the IRS.

According to Williams, taxpayers may claim an undelivered refund by establishing their identity and their right to receive a refund check. This can be done by addressing a letter to the IRS, Atlanta Service Center, Refund Inquiry Unit, Stop 112, Atlanta, Ga. 39901 with the following information:

• Name and address exactly as shown on tax return

• Present name and address if different from that shown on the return

• Tax year for which refund is believed due

• Social Security number or numbers if the return is joint

• Amount of refund claimed

• Signature (not printed)

To eliminate the possibility of a lost, stolen or undeliverable refund check, taxpayers can file electronically and have their refunds deposited into their checking or savings accounts. For more information, call toll free (800) 829-1040.

PET OF THE WEEK

This male German shepard/chow mix (age 1 year) is looking for a home. If you would like to adopt him or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Storyteller spins tales for students

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Professional storyteller Akbar Imhotep, who specializes in African tales, entertained fourth- and fifth-graders Nov. 13 in the evening as part of Edward A. White School's celebration of National Children's Book Week, this week.

Children participated in a variety of activities including storytelling sessions, reading activities, refreshments and silent reading with the purpose being to promote reading for the fun of it.

Sponsored by school media specialist Owen Ditchfield, the party enlisted the aid of teachers and parents to serve as storytellers as well in one of 10 sessions.

Following Imhotep's presentations, children then had the opportunity to attend four of these sessions in rounds.

Sessions included a reading of "Cajun Christmas," which is like another version of "`Twas the Night Before Christmas," Nonsense Poems, "Solve a Mystery" story, humorous poetry, "Hershel and the Haanukkah Goblins," a story using math, Indian legends, a story using puppets, ghost stories, Brer Rabbit and a progressive story with student input.

About 86 children and 19 parents attended the event.

Other efforts to celebrate the special week included a book fair Nov. 9 through 19.

Also parents and children were challenged to turn off their televisions 30 to 40 minutes each night to read together as part of a "Reading Challenge."

According to White School Principal Janet Wynn, parents who participate in the challenge may see improved school performance and achievement as a result of these increased reading opportunities.

ENVIRONMENT: Cmdr. outlines plans

• Efforts to expand or extend the life of the post's landfill.

• An Environmental Awareness Program to ensure that everyone on the installation, from privates to commanders, becomes aware of his or her responsibilities. The program includes the use and distribution of training aid and, field guides and integration of environmental awareness training into One Station Unit Training and leadership development courses.

• Hazardous waste disposal.

• The testing of all drinking water sources on post for the presence of lead and copper. The recent completion of this project indicated that Fort Benning's water supply is free of such contaminants.

• The continuing assessment of the environmental impact of major troop movements, field training exercises and construction projects.

Orosz was optimistic about the prospects that will be opened up by the Army Environmental Strategy.

"As the Army signs the new Environmental Strategy, those of us at Fort Benning will renew our commitment to future generations to be good stewards of the environment for its use by generations to come," he said.

Big Brothers help community

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Being a Big Brother to 9-year-old Jason Holt for the past year has helped keep Capt. Randall Anderson thinking young.

Designed to enhance the lives of children from ages 7 to 15 from single-parent homes, Big Brothers/Big Sisters is a program that matches a child with an adult volunteer.

Anderson said he participated in the program once before during college and enjoyed the experience enough to volunteer again.

An only child, Anderson said his family make-up was different from Holt's, whose mother is divorced with four daughters, as well.

During the year they have been seeing each other about once a week, Anderson and Holt have attended such community activities as RedStixx baseball games, Springer Theater productions, bowling fund-raisers for Big Brothers/Big Sisters, the Shriners Circus, "Sunshine Day" at Richardson Farm in Phenix City and the program's Christmas party.

Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Capt. Randall Anderson of the 498th Air Ambulance Company feeds ducks at a lake with his little brother, Jason Holt.

Their own special activities included collecting aluminum cans to fund outings, fishing, building a dog house for Jason's new dog, Boy Scout programs and Little League baseball games. They also visited the Fort Benning Infantry Museum, Fort Rucker's Aviation Museum and Lawson Army Airfield, where Anderson works flying helicopters as part of the air ambulance service for the 498th Medical Company.

Anderson said from the beginning he had some personal goals for the relationship.

"I wanted to help improve Jason's performance at school, develop some ideas into projects to teach Jason some new skills, find new and inexpensive things to do together and provide a positive role model for Jason to follow," he said.

It would appear he's succeeded.

In the past year, he said that Holt's attitude toward school has improved, and "he's settled down a lot."

By building things together like repairing an old skateboard they found, Anderson has taught Holt new skills.

Also, many of their activities have either involved Big Brother sponsorship and are free to the little brother, or don't cost at all and have merely involved the enjoyment of being together.

Holt said he enjoys doing things with Anderson because "he's a guy who does fun things like fly helicopters."

One of their outings that stands out in his mind is when they went to the Pine Mountain Animal Park, where they drove through and fed the animals as they went.

A buffalo started chewing on Holt's shirt until he practically sat in Anderson's lap to get away from him, and a couple zebras got their heads stuck in the car window.

Holt's mother may be remarrying soon, and Anderson will probably be transferred somewhere next spring, but the relationship has been satisfying for both of them.

According to Michael Pesackis of the Big Brothers/Big Sisters Program, these volunteers offer educational, social and recreational activities that aid the children in growing to responsible adulthood.

Prospective volunteers should have at least a year to offer a child, be at least 18 years of age and have the stability and maturity necessary to be a good role model.

After filling out an application and providing letters of character recommendation, there is a counselor interview to match up the adult with a child based on preferences, personalities and interests.

A number of adult volunteers in the Big Brother Program come from Fort Benning, Pesackis said.

Anyone interested in volunteering can contact him at 327-3760, Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Dexter School students dancing for fitness, fun

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Ever seen more than 100 third- through fifth-graders dancing to "Achy, Breaky Heart" at 8:15 a.m. because they want to do it?

Then you've not been to Herbert J. Dexter School on Thursday mornings before school starts.

Physical education teacher Pam Wright began offering this dancing time a few months ago, and slowly the numbers have grown including not only students, but teachers, parents and bus drivers, as well.

The children initiated the practice, Wright noted, because when dancing during their regular physical education time was replaced with the sports units, such as the soccer they play now, the students asked for additional time to dance.

"Children love to dance," she said, "and we cover the whole gambit."

Wright has taught them the two-step, the waltz, the jitterbug, the cha cha, the Virginia reel, the Texas Schottishe, the patty-cake polka, the electric slide and folk dances.

On Tuesday mornings, they do clogging and tap and include the second-graders too.

Wright said 15 years of teaching and physical education workshops have given her the teaching material.

"Boys like it as much as the girls," she added, "and if they start now, they're not as self-conscious later on."

She said she teaches some dancing to the younger children at Alexander Patch School too, but most of her time is spent at Dexter, which is her home school.

As the result of a staff development course on multi-cultural dances, Wright taught the fourth-graders to do a Danish folk dance called the "Crested Hen," during regular class time.

"They did very well too, she said. "The first few years I was here, it was difficult to get any of them out on the dance floor, but things have changed."

A kindergartner recently came up to her and said, "When you grow up, Ms. Wright, you must want to be a ballerina because you like to dance all the time."

However, his friend piped up with, "No, she does it because it's healthy."

Dexter Principal Vicki Rogers said that it's fun to watch them when Wright reminds them of "spatial awareness" and they all spread out to give their neighbors room to move.

In February, the school plans to have groups of students from each grade perform at a Family Night Supper to show the parents what they have learned.

Students find solutions

First-graders in the Academically Talented Program with the Fort Benning Schools could be found this week experimenting in an egg dropping activity.

This creative problem-solving activity called for the nearly 70 children to think up and carry out a way to cushion an egg from breaking when dropped from a high place.

Their teacher, Marie Hand, told parents and children at Alexander Patch School Monday that with experiments we learn sometimes activities work and sometimes they don't.

A variety of containers ranging from boxes lined with bubble wrap to milk cartons filled with popcorn protected eggs from splattering when dropped from a tall stepladder by Principal Kenneth Stettes.

Native Americans have proud history

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Columbus "discovered" a crowded land.

Archeologists estimate the New World had more than 16 million people when Columbus arrived. Many of these belonged to the hundreds of American Indian tribes in what would, in a couple of centuries, be the United States.

Apache, Cheyenne, Sioux, Nez Perce, Blackfoot, Cherokee, Iroquois — the list of tribes, their languages, customs and livelihoods, ranging from hunters and farmers to craftsmen and fishermen, can be found throughout the pages of American history. By the end of the 19th century, the tribes had lost their lands through wars and treaties and found themselves on reservations. By this time, the tribes' populations were greatly decimated, with millions dead from measles, smallpox, cholera, tuberculosis, starvation and war.

The names of many American Indian leaders from the past are well-known today. American Indian leaders who made history include Wahunsonacock, Cochise, Sitting Bull, Red Cloud, Osceola, Tecumseh and Chief Joseph.

Wahunsonacock was chief of the Powhatan Confederacy in Virginia in the early 1600s. Through his efforts Jamestown and other early settlements were able to survive as the Powhatans provided corn, bread and other necessities to the English. Wahunsonacock, also known as Powhatan, was responsible for the peace between his people and the English settlers. War between the settlements and the Powhatan Confederacy did not break out until after his death.

Cochise was a Chiricahua Apache chief in the Arizona territory. He and his people remained at peace with the Americans through the 1850s. In 1861, the U.S. Army called in Cochise and four other chiefs for questioning concerning a raid on a ranch. The chiefs denied any knowledge or involvement, but the Army arrested them on the spot. Cochise escaped, but the others were hanged.

Over the next 10 years, Cochise planned and executed a successful guerrilla war against the Army and the settlers, with just 200 followers. Not one band of Apaches had been caught by the time both sides agreed to peace in 1871. The war cost the U.S. government more than $40 million and 1,000 lives.

Cochise and his people agreed to move to a reservation. They went back on the warpath, but peace talks soon followed. Cochise died, peacefully, on the Chiricahua Reservation in 1874.

Forming the southeastern corner of Arizona is Cochise County, the only county in the United States named after an individual American Indian.

Sitting Bull was chief of the Hunkpapa Sioux; his wisdom and courage were recognized in the late 1860s when he was made chief of the entire Sioux nation, covering the area that today is the Dakotas and Montana. The Sioux and the U.S. Army skirmished, reaching a climax in the 1870s when gold was found in the Black Hills.

In 1876, the U.S. government was dealt a terrific blow when Sitting Bull's Sioux and warriors from other tribes annihilated the Seventh Cavalry, commanded by Lt. Col. George Custer. Sitting Bull and his people escaped to Canada, later moving back to the United States when famine forced their return. Following several years as a prisoner, Sitting Bull joined Buffalo Bill's Wild West show in which he toured and gained international fame. In 1885, Sitting Bull returned to the reservation. A rumor of an Indian uprising spread, and an arrest warrant was issued for his arrest. He was pulled from his bed and accidentally killed in the melee that followed.

Red Cloud, an Oglala Sioux chief, emerged as a natural leader and spokesman for his people, as well as for independent followers from other tribes.

In the mid-1860s, the U.S. government decided to open the Bozeman Trail, running from Fort Laramie — in what is present-day Wyoming — to the newly discovered gold fields in Montana. Three forts were built along the trail for protection. Red Cloud and his people didn't like this idea because the trail ran right across their land.

For two years, he and his people harassed and attacked workers, stopped supply shipments and basically held one of the forts in a state of siege. Red Cloud's War came to an end when the U.S. government agreed to close the trail and abandon the forts. In 1987, the U.S. Postal Service issued a stamp honoring him as a great American.

Run-off election coming up

Voting Asistance Office

Because of two close races in Georgia, a run-off election will be Tuesday to determine the U.S. senator and the public service commissioner for the state.

The candidates in the U.S. senate race are Wyche Fowler Jr. (D) and Paul Coverdell (R).

All military citizens who followed proper procedure to receive absentee ballots for the primary and general elections will be sent run-off election absentee ballots. Because of time constraints, however, citizens may use the federal write-in absentee ballot to cast their votes if they do not receive the regular absentee ballot in time to make the receipt deadline.

These voters should also return their voted regular absentee ballot as soon as they receive them in the mail. Election officials will count the federal write-in absentee ballot if it is the only one received from an eligible voter before the deadline. If two ballots are received from one voter, they will discard the federal write-in absentee ballot and count the regular absentee ballot.

The deadline to return ballots to county election officials is 7 p.m. Tuesday.

For information or assistance, contact your unit voting assistance officer or call the voting information line at 545-3881.

GARRISON HIGHLIGHTS

Center to offer workshop for Christmas crafts

The Kelley Hill Recreation Center is hosting a Christmas craft workshop today and Saturday. Cost for the three days is $5.

For more information, call 544-3079 Wednesday through Sunday from noon to 9 p.m.

Environmental committee to meet Monday

The Environmental Quality Control Committee will meet Monday from 3:30 to 5 p.m. in Room 647, Infantry Hall.

Phillip Laumeyer of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service will talk about compatibility of training with the red-cockaded woodpecker.

The Administrative Law Division of the Staff Judge Advocate Office will make a presentation concerning commanders' environmental responsibilities and liabilities at Fort Benning. Other environmental legal requirements (such as the clean water act, etc.) will also be addressed.

Since commanders at Fort Benning are responsible for environmental compliance, it is imperative that they attend instead of sending a representative, officials said.

Publications reduces operating hours, days

Hours of operation will be 8 a.m to noon, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, and will be closed each Wednesday. Emergencies will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

Outdoor recreation equipment available

Canopies are available for rent at the Outdoor Recreation Equipment Rental and Storage Facility. A dunking booth and log splitters are also available for rent.

For more information and rental fees, call Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 545-7978 or 545-3504.

Units must monitor oil levels of collection tanks

Units are reminded that oil collection tanks, from oil/water separators that are part of vehicle wash racks, must be monitored daily to determine oil levels.

When tanks are three-quarters full, units must contact Charles Sanders at 545-4749 or 545-4232 to have waste oil pumped.

Monitoring is a manual process requiring the units to verify the level of the oil either visually or by stick measure.

If the oil tanks are filled too much, an oil spill could result, which is a direct violation of the Clean Water Act.

Units will be responsible for the subsequent cleanup and disposal costs. The cost for disposal is $1.85 per pound.

For more information, call 545-4749 or 545-4232.

MWR benefits from sales

AAFES sales help fund post recreational facilities

By Mike Childs
Army and Air Force Exchange Service

Sergeant Jarvis pulled up in front of the auto craft shop to do an oil change on his '92 Cherokee. As he moved to the office to rent a bay and check out some tools, he thought, "It sure is nice not to have to pay 30 bucks to someone to do this."

Across the installation, 16-year-old Susan Jones entered the youth center to meet her friends for some games after school. Her mom, after dropping her off, moved on to the library to check on some new books that a friend had recommended.

Meanwhile, over at the installation golf course, Susan's dad drives a Topflite 200 yards down the fairway at the 12th hole, enjoying the afternoon of relaxation with some friends from his unit.

What do these people have in common? Besides being a part of the military family, they are all also benefitting from the purchases they and thousands of others make at the local Army and Air Force Exchange Facilities. But, how can that be, you say? How can spending money at the exchange have any effect on the auto craft shop of golf course?

Well, the answer is simple! For every dollar a customer spends in the exchange, 3 cents are returned to the Morale, Welfare and Recreation funds of the Army and Air Force. The way that is done gets pretty complex, but simply put, part of this money is paid directly to the local installation MWR fund to support quality of life for the installation's service members and families. And more money is then paid into the Army and Air Force central MWR funds and eventually divided by the services among their installations.

Under the Army simplified dividend program worked out between AAFES and the Army community and family support center in 1991, each Army post gets a set percentage of the overall sales at AAFES facilities on post each month paid directly into that post's MWR account.

And, as of Oct.1, the Air Force began using a simplified system that is similar, paying a percentage of all alcohol sales on the base directly to the installation MWR fund each month.

Now 3 cents of each dollar spent in the exchange doesn't sound like much, does it? But AAFES' stockholders, the soldiers and airmen of the Army and Air Force, spent more than $7.5 billion in the exchange worldwide in 1991. Three cents of each dollar of that amount means that in 1991, AAFES contributed $224.5 million to MWR funds, which represents more than $178 per active service member. And if you add AAFES' MWR contributions over the past ten years, they add up to over $1 billion.

Without these funds, the Army and Air Force would not be able to provide the many fine community facilities they do now. AAFES' payments to Army MWR funds in 1991 represented 41 percent of the money available to MWR. For the Air Force, AAFES' dollars were 48 percent of the support.

So, in a manner of speaking, almost half of the auto craft shop, the library, the youth center, the bowling alley, the gyms, and many other facilities are supported by customer spending at the local exchange.

Now that is good news. And while you are spending at the exchange, you also know you are getting a quality produce at the lowest possible price - and tax-free, too. The exchange privilege is a benefit that pays you twice - first through overall savings on goods and services, and then again through supporting the quality of life MWR activities that enrich life for all soldiers and airmen around

VA Q&A

VeteransAdministration

Q: I am a student receiving benefits under the Restored Entitlement Program for Survivors. Will I continue to receive payments during the summer if I am not in school?

A: Benefits may be paid for periods of nonattendance or less than full-time attendance if those periods do not exceed four calendar months and are preceded by a period of full-time attendance.

Each year, near the end of March, students are sent a Student Beneficiary Report Form. This generally serves the purpose of a re-enrollment certification. Shortly after the fall term starts, students will be required to certify their school attendance.

If full-time enrollment cannot be verified at that point, benefits may be terminated the month following the beginning date of the fall term.

Q: Does VA publish a booklet on benefits for veterans and their family members?

A: Yes. Each year, VA publishes a booklet titled "Federal Benefits for Veterans and Dependents." The booklet is available for $2.75 from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Superintendent of Documents, Mail Stop: SSOP, Washington, D.C. 20402-9328. The stock number is 051-000-00-198-2.

Q— Are there small business loans available to disabled veterans?

A — Since 1983, the Small Business Administration has administered a direct loan program for Vietnam-era and disabled veterans. A Vietnam-era or disabled veteran who meets SBA's credit criteria may qualify for a direct loan if unable to obtain financing from commercial or other lenders.

In each SBA field office, there is a veterans' affairs officer who is designated as the contract person to assist veterans in dealings with SBA. Interested veterans should contact their nearest SBA field office to obtain additional information on SBA loan programs. SBA also maintains a national toll-free number: (800) 827-5722.

Q — I lost one of the medals that I was awarded for Army service in the Vietnam War. I would like to know how I can go about getting a replacement.

A — Medals that were awarded while in active service will be issued upon request to the appropriate branch of service.

All requests for medals pertaining to service in the Army should be sent to Army Commander, U.S. Army Reserve Personnel Center, Attn: DARP-PAS-EAW, 9700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, Mo. 63132-5100.

Editor's note: For more information, call toll free (800) 827-2039.

'Get Some' takes home flag football championship

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The U.S. Army Infantry Center crowned a new flag football champion Friday afternoon at Doughboy Stadium. Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 324th Forward Support Battalion, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, (Get Some) defeated Company C., 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. (Cougars) 6-0, in overtime.

Get Some took the title when quarterback Perry Toomer slipped into the end zone on a second down roll out option right from the 5-yard line. Toomer was met at the goal line by the Cougar defense but was able to cross over before his flag was pulled.

Both teams played tough defense for 20 minutes. Every time it looked as if one team was about to take control, the defense would step up and shut the offense down.

In the first half, the Cougar offense stayed primarily on the ground using running backs Alonzo Upshur and James Fontaine on quick hits up the middle. The Get Some defense countered by filling the gaps and sealing off outside. A strong pass rush forced Cougar quarterback Gregory Armwood to hurry his throws and miss his receivers.

The Get Some offense featured running back Roderick Fairchild as a triple threat. Running, passing or catching the ball, Fairchild was everywhere.

The Cougar defense quickly adjusted picking off one pass by defensive end John Jenkins to end a Get Some drive and knocking down another potential scoring pass by Toomer at the goal line. The first half ended knotted at zero.

The second half was almost a carbon copy of the first with defense still the key.

The Cougar defense stopped two drives with interceptions by defensive end Jeffrey Shelton and Fontaine.

Not to be outdone, the Get Some defense led by Toomer with a pick and a knockdown sent the game into overtime.

In overtime, both teams would get the ball at the 10-yard line and try and score on four downs. Once again the defense roared to the forefront.

The Cougar offense would try their hand first. A first down pass by Armwood was picked off by Toomer for his second interception of the afternoon. Get Some turned around on offense and took four shots at the Cougar defense.

The last one was picked off by Upshur giving the Cougar offense one more chance to win the game and force another game, but Armwood's first down pass was picked off by linebacker Reginald Collins giving new life to Get Some.

Two plays later, it was all over and Get Some had wrapped up a perfect season at 17-0.

"It was a hard-fought defensive struggle," said Fairchild. "Charlie Rock gave us one of the hardest games of the season. We underestimated them, but we still came out victorious."

Battleship sinks Cruisers

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics played host to the defending division II champions Battleship Rugby Football Club of Mobile, Ala., Saturday at Stilwell Field and got sunk 48-8.

Battleship fired an early salvo at the Cruise-matics in the first half scoring three tries, one by fly half John Friend and another by outside center Eric Dayton.

The other score came on a penalty try awarded by the referee on an offsides call against the Cruise-matics. Friend tacked on two extra point kicks and also a penalty kick to open the scoring.

The Cruise-matics got their only points of the half on a penalty kick by kicker Malcom Frost at the close of the first half. Battleship 22, Cruise-matics 3.

In the second half, Battleship fired at will on the floundering Cruise-matics. Dayton scored his second and third try of the match and tacked on three extra-point kicks.

Friend added his second try of the afternoon and fullback Tim James also had a try.

Joe Hyder scored the only try of the contest for the Cruise-matics late in the second half when he took the ball off a maul and exploded into the end zone.

The Cruise-matics will finish their season with a home game against Birmingham, Ala., at Stilwell Field Saturday at 2 p.m.

Faith Race set for Dec. 5

Fort Benning Schools

Mark your calendars. The 14th annual Faith Holiday Race has been set for Dec. 5.

This event, conducted by the Faith School Physical Education Department, is open to everyone. Students, parents, teachers, and members of the Fort Benning and surrounding communities are invited to participate. Entire families can run the race together.

Each year 500 to 1,100 runners have participated in the race. This race began 14 years ago as an outgrowth of Faith Physical Education Program and the Faith Jogging Club, which had been formed in 1978. Faith's Jogging Club is still going strong with students training with relays and extended runs two days a week after school.

All proceeds from the race go to the Faith School's Physical Education Program to provide additional equipment and incentive awards for students.

The Faith Race is made up of three different races that begin and end at Faith MIddle School at 1375 Ingersol St. The one-mile race for boys and girls 14 years old and under begins at 8:30 a.m. The two- mile race, open to all age categories, begins at 9:15 a.m. The five-mile race, also open to all age categories, begins at 10 a.m.

T-shirts will be presented to all finishers and awards will be presented in each category at the awards ceremony in the Faith School gym.

Pre-registration for 14-year-olds and under is $4 and for 15 and over $6. Race Day registration begins at 7:30 a.m. with fees of $5 for 14 and under and $7 for 15 and over runners.

Refreshments of fruit and soft drinks will be available.

Anyone needing further information can contact physical education teacher, Susan Emerson, at Faith Middle School at 545-5524.

Hurricane Andrew Relief soldiers receive kudos from CG

36th Engineer Group

Fort Benning soldiers who deployed to Southern Florida to aid victims of Hurricane Andrew received thanks at a ceremony Nov. 10 at Marshall Auditorium.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, was the guest speaker at the ceremony.

"Fort Benning soldiers came to rescue Americans of South Florida and one could not help but be moved by the compassion of our great soldiers: medics providing urgent care to those in need, military police providing much needed security, engineers working to improve the quality of life for those much-needed relief supplies to South Florida and the actions of the support units are testaments to today's soldier."

Soldiers from the following units deployed to South Florida:

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group;

43rd Engineer Battalion (Combat);

535th Engineer Detachment;

533rd Transportation Company;

675th Medical Detachment;

676th Medical Detachment;

988th Military Police Company;

586th Assault Float Bridge Company;

63rd Combat Support Element;

926th Preventive Medicine Detachment;

598th Maintenance Company.

Units from Fort Benning were sent to Florida after federal assistance was requested by Lawton Chiles, governor of Florida .

According to the U.S. Weather Service, Hurricane Andrew was a Category 4 hurricane, resulting in two to three times greater damage than any hurricane previously recorded. A 30-mile wave of destruction lay in its wake. Countless homes were destroyed and life-supporting services such as power, water and toilet facilities were inoperable.

Local and state authorities were overwhelmed, according to Kate Hale, director of the Dade County Emergency Operations Center.

"People are hurting out there and I don't know if they know we're trying to help them," said Hale. "People are asking us why we aren't doing more. We're doing all we can. People wanted to know where the cavalry was on this one."

All branches of the armed forces as well as Canadian forces arrived to help the people of Florida.

Honor grads make history

Top two ranger graduates receive plaques from Korean War rangers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

The past and present met as one as rangers of the Korean War presented the honor graduates of Ranger Class 12-92 with their awards.

First Lt. Stephen J. Roach of Company C, 3rd Battalion, 17th Infantry Regiment, Fort Ord, Calif., and Staff. Sgt. Ricky A. Kiser of the 29th Infantry Training Detachment, Fort A.P. Hill, Va., became the first officer and enlisted honor graduates to receive their awards from the sponsors of the awards.

Retired Col. Ralph Puckett presented Roach with the Ralph Puckett Award, a plaque which is awarded to the officer honor graduate. Puckett commanded the 8th Army Ranger Company during the Korean War and is a two-time recipient of the Distinguished Service Cross and an inaugural member of the Ranger Hall of Fame.

Kiser received the Glenn M. Hall Award, a plaque which is presented to the enlisted honor graduate, from Ranger Emmett Fike, former president of the Ranger Infantry Companies (Airborne) of the Korean War. Fike presented the award for Korean War veteran Bob Schusteff, the sponsor of the award, who was unable to attend the ceremony.

Both Roach and Kiser were impressed by their experiences during the course.

"It's a great course for leaders," Roach said, "especially for those who are apprehensive about being in leadership positions. The course really boosts your confidence."

Roach added that being named officer honor graduate was not something he had planned. He simply earned it by doing his best.

"One thing for sure, though, is that I never could have earned it without the support of the five other guys in my squad," he said. "Really they won it for me. Ranger School is impossible without a team effort."

Kiser said that the course presented him with some of the best training of his career.

"It was very demanding," he said. "I think that all soldiers should go through the course right after basic training and overall we would have a better force. The cadre are outstanding and the training was more realistic than anything I've experienced in all my time in the military."

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• On the Eastern Front, Gen. Erich von Manstein arrived to take command of the beleaguered German Army Group A, finding the once advancing forces significantly worn down by the harsh Russian winter conditions and an encircling Soviet army. Despite the realities of the situation, Adolf Hitler, inexplicably ordered von Manstein to hold Stalingrad with little or no chance for escape.

• In New Guinea, Australian and American attacks initially broke through Japanese positions at Gona, only to be driven back later.

• In North Africa, Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery halted his pursuing British Eighth Army in Libya to reorganize. This allowed the fleeing Axis troops to safely withdraw from El Agheila. The British advance had pushed the Germans back 600 miles in the last 14 days.

• Also in North Africa in Tunisia, British forces drove the Germans out of Mediez el Bab in Tunisia as American tanks raided a German airfield at Djedeida.

• In Greece, local resistance fighters benefitting from British support blew up an important viaduct on the Athens-Salonika railroad at Gorgopotamos, cutting off a railroad used to supply Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's Afrika Korps.

• Fort Benning officials announced the arrival of the post's first contingent of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps – the 43rd WAAC Post Headquarters Company. The Auxiliary Corps effectively assumed service support positions previously held by enlisted Army servicemen.

ARMY NEWS BRIEFS

New weapons to offer battlefield flexibility

Kinder, gentler weaponry?

That's what's evolving at the Army's Armament Research, Development and Engineering Center, for use on the battlefield of the future.

More than a dozen "less-than-lethal" munition technologies are being studied at ARDEC, located at Picatinny Arsenal, N.J., as part of the Low Collateral Damage Munitions Program. Its goal is to produce weapons that effectively disable, dazzle or incapacitate the enemy and its equipment — all the while minimizing collateral damage.

Proponents of the effort say the program will minimize loss of life in future conflicts, increase tactical flexibility and enhance battlefield performance.

Army volunteers to see more reimbursements

Volunteers working in support of certain Army programs can now be reimbursed for more of the work-related expenses they may incur, according to U.S. Army Community and Family Support Center officials.

Expenses related to volunteers' work supporting Army Community Service, unit family support groups or installation mayoral programs can now be reimbursed for mileage expenses, dining facility surcharges, telephone bills and newsletter reproduction.

Previously, volunteers were authorized reimbursement for training travel and child care only.

The revisions are outlined in interim changes to AR 215-1, Morale, Welfare and Recreation; and AR 608-1, Army Community Service Program.

VSI/SSB program gears up for new fiscal year

If you're an officer with at least six years' active federal service as of Dec. 5, 1991, and can meet certain other eligibility criteria for voluntary release from active duty, the Army has a deal for you.

The voluntary separation incentive or the special separation benefit applies to those officers who choose to hang up their uniforms to avoid the reduction in force during fiscal 1993.

A recent message from the U.S. Total Army Personnel Command in Alexandria, Va., announced requirements for officers in the Army competitive category to be eligible for the VSI/SSB program.

For detailed information on applying for VSI/SSB benefits, officers should contact their local personnel service center.

Survey tracks soldiers' use of drugs, habits

Alcohol still remains the drug of choice among soldiers, according to a 1992 DoD worldwide survey, though trends indicate a decline in its use.

More than 16,000 service-members participated in the anonymous survey, nearly one-third of those were soldiers. The Army statistics show an increase, since 1988, in non-drinkers from 17.1 to 21.8 percent, and a decline in moderate drinkers from 19.5 to 17.2 percent.

Trends show that non-medical drug use among the military is declining, with 3.4 percent of the military reporting use within the past 30 days.

Cigarette smoking decreased for the second consecutive survey period. Eighteen percent of soldiers reported smoking a pack a day in 1992, down from 22.8 percent in 1988. One in five reported using smokeless tobacco.

All services showed a high level of knowledge about AIDS, correctly answering 90 percent or more of a variety of factual questions.

About two percent of those surveyed reported having symptoms that suggest they need help with a gambling problem.

Army joins fight to help youth stay in school

A partnership that will address the needs of troubled young people and their families took a step forward Oct. 20 with the signing of a "memorandum of understanding" between the Army and the nation's largest nonprofit dropout-prevention program.

Secretary of the Army Michael P.W. Stone presided over a Pentagon ceremony in which William E. Milliken, president of Cities In Schools, Inc., praised the efforts of the Army in joining forces with the organization.

"This partnership," Stone said, "will focus on the sharing of Army expertise in training and educating America's disadvantaged youth. It also will give Army alumni new opportunities to continue serving the nation."

The memorandum calls for Army officials to make soldiers aware of CIS opportunities.

In turn, local CIS directors will be encouraged to employ former soldiers in the organization's programs.

Cities In Schools is a registered in the Army Employer Network Database of the Army Career and Alumni Program.

Delta Force recruiters to visit Fort Benning in December

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The Delta Force Team will conduct general orientation briefings starting Dec. 7 at 1 p.m., Dec. 8 and 9 twice daily at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. in Infantry Hall, classroom 21. Make-up orientation briefings will be conducted at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. on Dec. 10 in Infantry Hall, classroom 21.

On Dec. 14, the Delta Force Team will visit the 6th Ranger Training Battalion at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; and on Dec. 16 the team will visit the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Dahlonega, Ga.

Physical fitness qualification test will be administered Dec. 11 on Olive and Stewart Fields at 7 a.m. A make-up test will be conducted at the same location and time Dec. 17.

Immediately following the test, a 100-meter swim test will be administered at Harmony Church swimming pool.

Uniform for the PFQT (including the 100-meter swim test) is battle dress uniform and combat boots.

Delta Force team members will conduct personal follow-up interviews with previously selected applicants from Fort Benning on Dec. 11.

Housing automates phones

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet

Soldiers waiting for post quarters can find out where they are on the housing waiting list 24 hours a day with just a simple phone call.

The Family Housing Branch of the Directorate of Public Works now has a computer-controlled, automated phone system that can be accessed from any push-button telephone.

Soldiers who want to find out their positions on the list can simply dial 545-3107. A pre-recorded message will ask callers to press the number one button. The caller will then be asked to enter the sponsor's Social Security number, followed by the pound key.

"The entire process is very fast," said Jim Young, chief of the Family Housing Branch. "It takes only maybe 20 or 30 seconds, which is far less time than it would take for someone to call us directly and have one of our people look up the same information on the computer."

Young encouraged soldiers to call after duty hours.

"The system works 24 hours a day, but we are trying to cut down on the large number of daytime telephone calls we receive that tie up the system," he said. "More than 75 percent of the calls we receive are from people wanting to find out their position on the waiting list."

Young added that it is important for soldiers who desire to be removed from the housing list to call the Family Housing Branch to be taken off of the list.

Use common sense for holiday dinner

American Forces Information Service

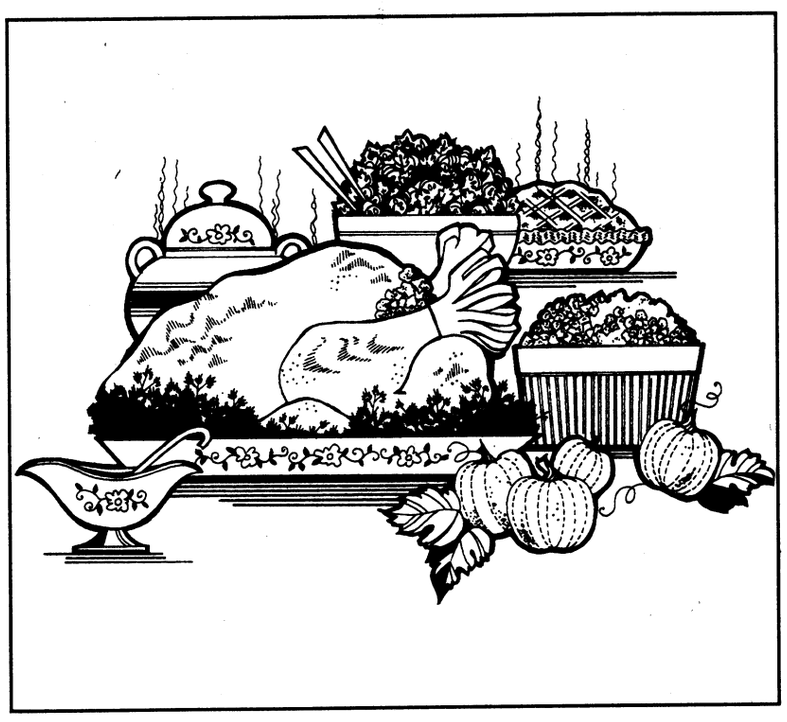
Thanksgiving is a time of peace, not a time for a visit by the "gobbler from hell."

Follow a few simple guidelines and use common sense when fixing the holiday meal, said Department of Agriculture meat and poultry hot line officials, and you should have a meal to remember. Fondly.

For instance, don't buy a fresh turkey more than two days before serving it. Further keep it in the refrigerator at a temperature of 40 degrees or colder.

If the turkey is frozen, there are three ways to defrost it, said hot line officials — in the refrigerator, in a microwave or in cold water. A word of caution, said officials: Cook the turkey as soon as it is defrosted.

Don't take shortcuts when stuffing the turkey. Dry ingredients can be mixed ahead of time, but don't add perishables, such as margarine or celery, until it's time to stuff the turkey. Also, don't partially cook the bird one day and finish cooking it the next, said officials. Prestuffing or partial cooking can cause bacteria to grow, which could cause food poisoning.



When eating the holiday meal or leftovers, take into account the calories that go with the turkey or ham and all the trimmings. A little restraint at the table may lessen that feeling of being too full and cut down on holiday weight gain.

For example, four ounces of roasted turkey white meat is 154 calories, but with the skin it's 191 calories; four ounces of lean baked ham, 165; half a cup of candied yams, 290; half a cup of prepared stuffing mix, 210, a third of a cup of cranberry sauce, 140; pumpkin pie, 320; and pecan pie, 575.

Suggestions for safer holiday meals include:

• Clean hands, counters and utensils with hot, soapy water between steps when preparing raw meat and poultry.

• For fast thawing of meat and poultry, place it in a plastic bag under cold water and frequently change the water.

• Store food as soon as possible, don't let it cool on the counter.

• Throw away any cooked or chilled food that's left out for more than two hours.

• Cover leftovers when cooking to retain moisture.

• When shopping, pick up perishables last; make sure frozen foods stay solid and refrigerated foods stay cold.

Specific information on how long to defrost or cook the turkey, about the holiday meal or about meat, poultry and eggs in general is available through the hot line.

Staffed by home economists and registered dietitians, the Agriculture Department hot line's toll-free telephone number is (800) 535-4555; in the Washington, D.C., area, the telephone number is (202) 720-3333.

During November, call the hot line Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Eastern time. Agriculture officials said the hot line will also be operational Saturday and Sunday, the weekend before Thanksgiving, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Thanksgiving from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Starting Dec. 1, the hot line returns to its normal hours, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

In addition, the department has prerecorded messages on various subjects, available to those with touchtone telephones. Topics include how to have a safe tailgate party, packing lunches, after school snacks and how to tell if food is still safe after a power failure.

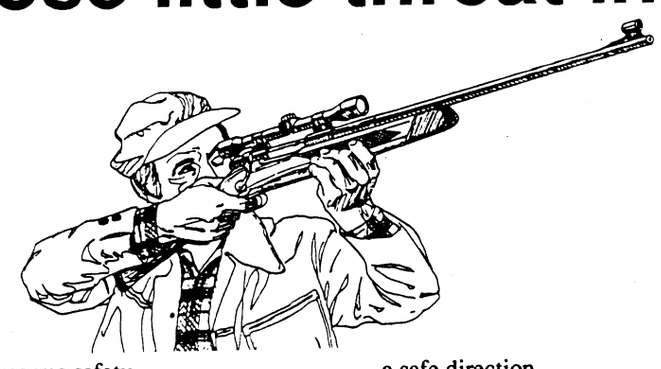
Firearms pose little threat in good hands

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Firearms may serve many purposes. Some are used for recreation, such as hunting or target and skeet shooting; others provide the hobbyist or collector with hours of enjoyment.

Regardless of their purpose, firearms by themselves are completely safe; it is only when they are in the hands of the unskilled, nonthinking or careless person that they become dangerous.

Accidents with firearms are needless and can be prevented through conscientious adherence to the following cardinal rules for firearms safety.



1. Treat every gun as if it were loaded.

2. Don't trust safety mechanisms.

3. Make sure the gun is empty before handling or cleaning.

4. Always keep a gun pointed in a safe direction.

5. Point guns only at targets you intend to shoot.

6. Keep guns unloaded when not in use.

7. Avoid horseplay.

8. Be sure the gun barrel is clean and free of obstructions.

9. Store guns and ammunition in separate areas. Never together.

10. Never leave firearms in any area that children can get into. Guns and ammunition should always be locked up and use of firearms by older children should be thoroughly supervised. Teach children that guns are not a toy and are not for play.

Safety Office: Carelessness kills

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Ralph and Burt, coworkers in the battery shop, became good friends as they worked together for several years. Both young and single, Ralph and Burt often attended sporting events and hunted together. They were comfortable with each other. They knew each other's work habits well - perhaps too well. They became complacent and started slipping in their safety habits.

They made small talk as they drove to the remote worksite to change a battery on a forklift. After finishing the task, Burt stepped between the forklift and the service truck to turn off the generator. Ralph had already mounted the forklift to move it away from the truck. Burt and Ralph both knew better, but they had done this before and never had a problem. The forklift was in gear because of a broken cable. As Ralph pressed the seat down, releasing the brake switch, the forklift jumped backwards, pinning Burt between it and truck. Hearing Burt yell, Ralph quickly realized what had happened. Moving the forklift away from his friend Ralph jumped off and ran to Burt. Once released from the vehicles' grip, Burt slumped to the ground and was immediately surrounded by a pool of blood. As Ralph approached his friend, he saw that Burt's right leg was almost severed.

But Burt was lucky: He survived the accident. Doctors were even able to save his leg, although he will never again have the dexterity, flexibility, or strength that he once had. Burt and Ralph are still good friends. In fact, Burt doesn't blame Ralph at all. He knows they were both wrong. Ralph, on the other hand, suffers in ways that Burt was spared. Ralph will live forever with the knowledge that he came very close to killing his best friend.

What Ralph and Burt both should realize is that complacency kills. Becoming "too familiar" with the job, letting familiarity override common sense, taking things for granted, or forgetting to follow procedures is asking for trouble. Burt and Ralph's supervisor has some uneasy moments now too. He could and should have corrected Ralph and Burt on the spot every time he saw evidence that they were too comfortable working together. It only takes one second of carelessness to cause a lifetime of pain.

Safety is ... as safety does

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Safety is not necessarily a seat belt. Safety is not assured with even a face shield to protect the shop wearer from hot sparks and intense light. Nor is it a pair of safety shoes. It's not perfect brakes and new rubber. Safety is not a warning sign or 10 signs or even a thousand. Yellow lines, white lines, glow-in-the-dark lines aren't safety. It is definitely not a poster, a pamphlet, a film, a speech, a demonstration, or a newsletter.

Safety is learning, without experiencing, that a seat belt can keep one from sailing through the windshield. Safety is realizing that eye protection saves sight. Safety is learning that safety shoes are fashionable when equipment can fall or be dropped. Safety is learning when following too close leads to eventual rear-end collisions. That speeding hastens the point of no return in an impending accident as well as adds, despite brakes and tires, to its severity since the energy of the force increases as the square of the speed. Impact at 70 mph is not twice that of 35 ... it is four times as much.

Safety is the eagerness to know and to apply our knowledge. To read and absorb the message in signs — in the interest of accident prevention.

Safety is tolerance and it is intelligence enough to know that signs, scripts, stories, speeches and all of the caution and gear is for our benefit

Safety is one thing more. Safety is a continuing education. It never stops. Safety is ...as safety does.

Travel safety is key

Seat belts, simple rules may keep unsuspecting drivers, children alive

Egleston Children's Hospital

The hustle of the holidays is almost here. Family, friends, reunions and travel are on the minds of many. Travel related injuries increase when roads are crowded, so remember to think about safety whether you are driving to the grocery store or to grandmother's home. Following these guidelines can reduce the risk of injury and keep parents and children safe while traveling.

• Buckle-Up ... It's the law!

• Restrain children under 4 years old, or under 40 pounds, in a child safety seat.

• Secure safety seats tightly to your car seat. Use a locking clip to hold your child's seat in firmly.

• Remember to place your child's safety seat in the center of the back seat, the safest place for a child to ride.

• Face your child's safety seat toward the rear of the vehicle if he is under 20 pounds.

• Use a seat belt once your child has outgrown the safety seat. The shoulder strap should cross your child's body at the shoulder, not the face or neck. Use a booster seat to raise your child if necessary.

• Plan your travel route ahead of time and tell someone your schedule.

• Stop frequently for stretching and bathroom breaks.

• If the driver becomes tired, take a break. A tired driver is not an alert driver.

• Secure all articles in the car in case of a sudden stop.

• If you have ever been involved in an accident, replace your safety belts. Contact your car insurance company to discuss reimbursement of the cost.

• Allow plenty of time to get where you're going. A rushed driver may make mistakes.

• Pull off the road and stop your car if you need to feed your child or change a diaper.

• Do not allow your child to come out of his safety seat or unbuckle his seat belt for any reason, not even for a nap, to eat, or to play games. A crash can occur at any time, so keep your child buckled up during your entire trip .

For more information on travel safety or any other area of child safety, call Egleston Children's Hospital at 321-KIDS.

'Big picture' tells real tale

General Mills

The bold, often brightly colored words on a package label, such as "no cholesterol" and "fat free," describe key benefits. But it's even more important to look at the "big picture."

Consider the whole food, suggests Mary Helen Gunkler, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal. Ask yourself these questions: How does the food fit into my overall diet? Am I balancing high-fat or high-cholesterol foods with foods that have little or no fat or cholesterol? What important nutrients does the food contribute?

For example, many cereals today are labeled "fat free." Whole-grain cereals, however, cannot be labeled this way as whole grain naturally contains a small amount of fat, mostly of the unsaturated types. Cereal in general is not a high fat food. And whole-grain cereals, such as Total cereal, are valuable choices because of their complex carbohydrates, fiber, vitamins and minerals.

Another food may be labeled "cholesterol free" and have many other equally important benefits. For example, canola oil is not only cholesterol free—as are all vegetable oils—but it's also the most unsaturated oil in the supermarket. These positive characteristics do not mean, however, that it can be used freely. It's still 100 percent fat.

Remember that a low-fat food is not necessarily low in cholesterol, nor does the absence of cholesterol predict the absence of fat. For example, a teaspoon of butter has only a little cholesterol, but virtually all of its calories come from fat. While servings of shrimp and lean hamburger have similar cholesterol content, shrimp is almost fat free.

Do notice the words on the food package that describe its special characteristics, recommends Gunkler, but also remember to turn to the nutrition information on the package. It's the best way to get the "big picture."

Eating well affects ease of travel

General Mills

What you eat and drink may help ease the effects of rapid travel across multiple time zones, says Mary Helen Gunkler, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal.

We're not prescribing a special "jet lag" diet, Gunkler continues. However, there are some easy steps to take that can help make long-distance air travel, and the days that follow, more comfortable for you.

Drink lots of liquids to offset the dehydrating effects of air travel. When the cabin attendant asks for your beverage order, be bold and request two or more items. Water, juice and decaffeinated beverages are all good choices. Some passengers bring water in plastic bottles on board—just to make sure they get enough liquid.

These liquids plus high-fiber foods also can help overcome constipation that some travelers suffer. Be sure to eat all the fruits and vegetables provided in the airline's meals and snacks.

For extra-long trips, you might want to take along your own snacks. Nutritious, easy-to-tote choices include small packages of raisins or other dried fruit, fresh fruit, fresh vegetables and wholegrain crackers.

Eating the right amount of food is important, too. The inactivity of sitting on a plane for hours probably calls for fewer calories than usual.

So, you may want to eat the same healthful foods but simply cut back on portion sizes. These tips may help you cope more comfortably with long-distance air travel, said Gunkler.

High-fiber foods add to balanced diet

General Mills

If you're like most Americans, your diet is probably a bit short on dietary fiber. In fact, the average daily diet in America includes only about half the 20 to 35 grams of fiber recommended by health experts. Fortunately, it's really not so difficult to achieve this level of fiber intake, says Mary Helen Gunkler, registered dietitian and staff nutritionist for Total cereal.

Fiber in the diet should be increased gradually, Gunkler adds. This allows the body a chance to adjust to the dietary change.

Moderation is another important guideline for increasing fiber. It's wise to stay within the recommended range for fiber intake. An excessively high level of fiber can hinder the body's ability to use certain minerals.

A well balanced diet including a wide variety of foods offers the best way to get plenty of fiber. This "clip and save" list includes foods providing at least 2 grams of total dietary fiber per serving, which can quickly add up to the current fiber recommendations.

The following is a list of high fiber foods:

Fruits:
canned pears, 1/2 cup, 4 grams
dried prunes, 3, 4 grams apple, with skin, med., 3 grams banana, med., 3 grams
dried dates, 5, 3 grams
nectarine, with skin, med, 3 gr.
peach, with skin, med., 3 grams strawberries, 1 cup, 3 grams canned peaches, 1/2 cup, 2 gr.
canned pineapple, 1/2 cup, 2 gr.
cantaloupe, 1/4, 2 grams
orange, medium, 2 grams

Vegetables(all cooked):
frozen peas, 1/2 cup, 4 grams baked potato, with skin, med. 4 grams broccoli, 1/2 cup, 3 grams
carrots, 1/2 cup, 3 grams cauliflower, 1/2 cup, 3 grams
corn, 1/2 cup, 3 grams
asparagus, 1/2 cup, 2 grams
Brussels sprouts, 1/2 cup, 2 grams eggplant, 1/2 cup, 2 grams green beans, 1/2 cup, 2 grams spinach, 1/2 cup, 2 grams
sweet potato, 1/2 med., 2 grams

Legumes(all cooked):
kidney beans, 1/2 cup, 6 grams
baked beans, 1/2 cup, 6 grams navy beans, 1/2 cup, 5 grams pinto beans, 1/2 cup, 5 grams garbanzo beans, 1/2 , 4 grams
lentils, 1/2 cup, 2 grams

Breads, Cereals and Pasta wheat bran cereal, 1 oz., 10 gr.
cooked whole wheat pasta, 1 cup, 5 grams cooked oat bran cereal, 1 oz., 4 grams whole wheat cereal, 1 oz., 3 gr.
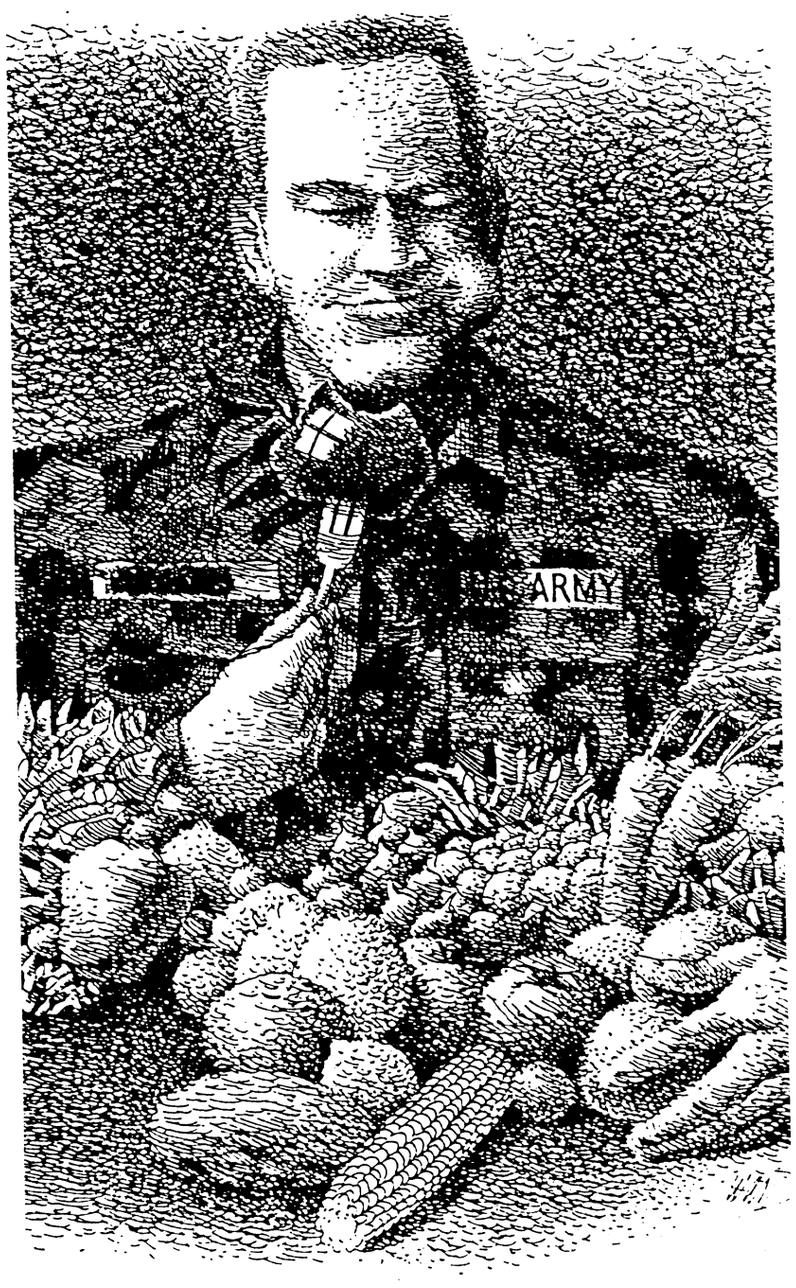
bran muffin, medium, 3 grams



Furnaces need care

Derus Media Service Inc.

Fall is a good time to make sure your heating equipment is in first-rate operating condition. Turning on a furnace that hasn't been properly inspected or serviced creates the risk of asphyxiation or fire.

Underwriters Laboratories Inc. , a nonprofit product safety testing organization, recommended that qualified service personnel inspect the equipment at the beginning of each heating season. In addition, here are some checks to make on a regular basis through the fall and winter:

• Replace disposable air filters when dirty with replacements that bear the UL listing mark. Wash permanent filters in mild soap and water to help increase furnace efficiency and promote safe operation.

• Clean warm air outlet register and air returns of any accumulated dust, and be sure they are not covered by rugs, drapes or curtains.

• Make certain room thermostats are free of dust and correctly set.

• Keep the furnace area clear of combustible materials. Never store liquids with flammable vapors, such as gasoline and paint thinners, in the furnace room.

• Clean and inspect your humidifier for optimum operation.

•Clean all combustion air intake openings of accumulated dust and dirt.

Post honors Native Americans

Equal Opportunity Office sponsors post-wide activities, contests

USAIC Public Affairs Office

November is Native American Month and Fort Benning is celebrating in a number of ways.

The following activities have been tentatively planned for Native American Indian Heritage Month through the installation's Equal Opportunity Office:

• Native American display, Infantry Hall, Display Room today through Wednesday.

• Ethnic meals in dining facilities throughout the month.

• An exhibit at the National Infantry Museum to Nov. 30.

• A book display at Sayers Library, Main Post and School of the Americas Library.

• Pictures displaying notable Native Americans throughout the month at local businesses.

• Film on Native American history each Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., Building 2515 (across from Indianhead Terrace).

• An essay contest, sponsored by Youth Activities. Deadline for entry is today. Contact Quintella Thorn at 545-7945 for more information.

• A test your knowledge quiz will appear in The Bayonet each week; prizes will be given.

• The Directorate of Logistics Systems Management Branch will disseminate information on cultural traditions of Native Americans who reside in this area to branch employees.

• DOL Transportation Division will display posters in main lobbies and show customers videotapes of Native Americans.

• The Directorate of Civilian Personnel will have a static display of artifacts and educational and historical memorabilia in Meloy Hall, Building 6, Room 115. Contact James Fleming at 545-4246 for information.

• Through Nov. 30, the School of the Americas will have static displays in each company and a one-hour presentation on Native Americans.

• Through Nov. 30, the Ranger Training Brigade will have a display in its headquarters on Native American culture.

• Through Nov. 30, the Infantry Training Brigade will display posters of Native Americans throughout the area. Point of contact is 1st Lt. Fredrick Hannah at 544-9702

• Today DOL Maintenance Division will have a Thanksgiving dinner at Uchee Creek. The Boy Scouts "Order of the Arrow" will present authentic Indian dancing and costumes. Posters will be displayed throughout the month.

• Nov. 30 — 2nd MASH will have a trip to Lumpkin, Ga., and take a tour the Rood Creek Indian Mounds. For information, contact Jeannette McMullan.

What is there to be thankful for?

USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTION

Thanksgiving is again upon us.

Already we are overwhelmed with the needs of others in our community. We've heard plenty about the starving in Somalia, and conditions continue to worsen in the former Yugoslavia.

In addition to that, the Christmas shopping season looms before us with the required cards and gifts. After that it's tax time.

Thanksgiving would be easier if the pace and demands would slacken up a bit.

I think it is easier to give thanks when you are in severe need. When you're hungry, homeless or jobless it is easy to focus your thoughts on God as you ask for his provision.

When you do eat, find shelter or work, the relationship with God is already there and you easily give thanks to him for caring for you.

So it was with our Pilgrim forefathers. Their lives in the New World were far from comfortable. It certainly would have been easy for them to complain; instead, they chose to thank God for what they did have: food, fellowship and freedom.

When things in life are going well, it's tough to remember to stop and thank God. Being fat and happy can make you forget about your relationship with God and his daily provision. You can begin to think that you are self-sufficient; no longer needing either neighbor or God.

Compare our plight with that of the less fortunate of today's world or of our forefathers, and there can be no doubt that we are among the "haves" and they, the "have-nots." The question is, can we be thankful?

This is not a Thanksgiving season to be found sitting on the rail. To determine if you can be thankful or not, repeat the following statement, "Me, give thanks? Hey (or some other appropriate expletive to shore up any lack of conviction), I deserve this!" Say it again and note any words that you stress.

"Me, give thanks?" If you chose to emphasize this phrase, then there's no need to feel alone. Many are filled with anxiety when they feel thankful and have no one to credit for their good fortune. Many are uncomfortable with the emotional inclination to thank God when they have failed to develop any relationship with him in the past.

"Hey." Emphasizing this word means that you probably already sense a need to be thankful to God but are trying to convince yourself otherwise. Again, no need to feel like the Lone Ranger. Many try their hardest to slip off the hook when overwhelmed with thankful feelings toward God.

"I." Count yourself among the many whose "I's are too close together." (I want this, I need that, I am the one who...). You may notice that things still aren't good enough for you. Sure others are suffering and are less well off than you, but God still hasn't blessed you enough. Your own hard work is probably the primary source to your success after all (unlike the hungry, homeless and jobless).

"Deserve." You're entitled to your blessing because of who you are or what you've done. A deserved blessing is far easier to accept than undeserved blessings. You don't need to feel thankful.

"This." A good focus on the things you have will keep you far from that dependent relationship with God who provides every good gift.

If, after repeating the phrase numerous times, you still can't say it with a straight face while looking in the mirror, then now is a good time to give in and thank God for all the wonderful gifts he has showered on us. After all, "What is man that thou are mindful of him" (Psalm 8:4). We were all undeserving sinners when Christ died for us (Romans 5:8) making possible a fresh new relationship with God.

God continues to bless us. It is only right that we give him thanks.

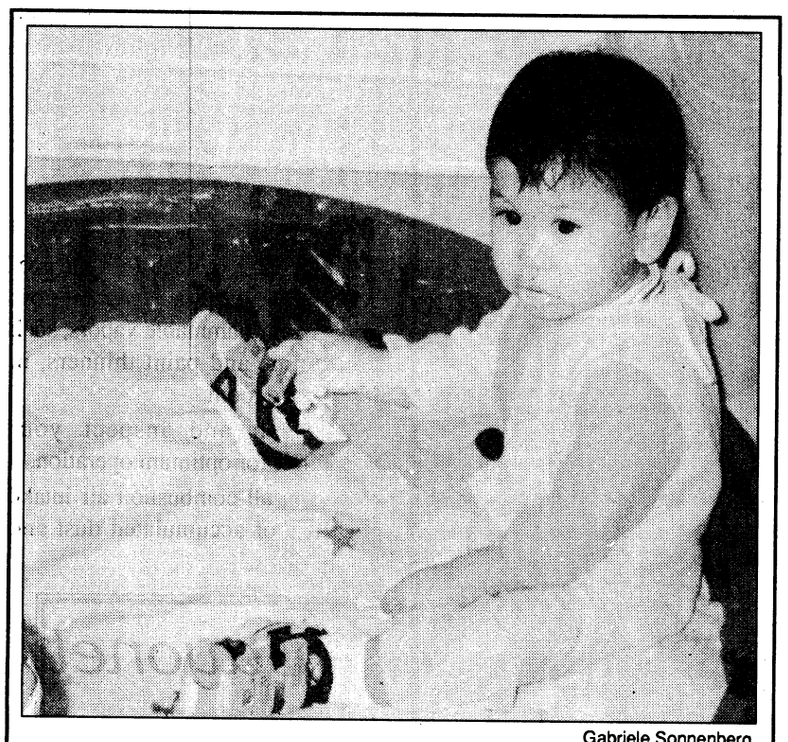
Glenn Bannerman displays an inexpensive toy for children at a recent recreation workshop here. The workshop was one of a series demonstrating a variety of low-cost, high-participation recreational options.



Gabriele Sonnenberg

Gold digger

James McMahon searches for buried treasure during the recent Protestant Women of the Chapel's "Noah's Ark" party for children.

Prayer

Oh, give thanks to the Lord, for he is good; his loving kindness continues. forever.

Give thanks to the God of gods, for his loving kindness continues forever.

Give thanks to the Lord of lords, for his loving kindness continues forever.

Praise him who made the heavens, for his loving kindness continues forever.

Praise him who planted the water within the Earth, for his loving kindness continues forever; the sun to rule the day, for his loving kindness continues forever; and the moon and stars at night, for his loving kindness continues forever. Psalm 136:1-9.

CHAPEL NOTES

Prebaptism class — A prebaptism class will be Sunday and Dec. 13 and Jan. 10 at 1 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Buildings 2517 and 2522, located off Indianhead Road, behind the Quartermaster Laundry.

There are three session in each cycle. All parents who wish to have their child or children baptized in the Catholic church are required to attend prebaptismal instruction. To register call Phil Reilly at 545-4715.

Peter Falk returns as 'Columbo' in new ABC mystery

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

SPOTLIGHT

More than a quarter-century after his TV debut, one of the home screen's most popular detectives is still going strong.

PoliceLt. Columbo originally was invented by writer-producer William Link and his late partner Richard Levinson for the stage play "Prescription: Murder," which then was developed into one of the first movies ever made expressly for television ... with Peter Falk inheriting the role. Of course, he's played it ever since, winning multiple Emmy Awards in the process; he performed it on a regular basis through the 1970s on the NBC "Mystery Movie" anthology, then revived it when ABC resuscitated that rotating-series format in 1989.

Though the other elements didn't last long, "Columbo" survived, in the form of several new TV-movies per season. ABC has used repeats of those in recent weeks, in trying to cure its Saturday-night ratings woes, but a brand-new caper arrives Sunday: "A Bird in the Hand," which finds Columbo puzzled by several murders in the course of a single case. The story stems from a plan by a compulsive gambler (played by Greg Evigan) to cash in big by killing his football-team-owning uncle (Steve Forrest), with whose second wife (Tyne Daly) he's become romantically involved. Inevitably, the plot goes awry, resulting in unexpected deaths that even leave the supposedly daft – but truly ingenious – Columbo almost totally baffled.

Peter Falk and Greg Evigan

The extremely amiable Falk now does double duty on the "Columbo" tales by also serving as their executive producer, and he claims that he "can't think of anything in life that gives me more pleasure" than coming across one that contains a big quota of surprises. The last entry (last spring's "No Time to Die") strayed from the usual format, since it was an adaptation of a novel by best-selling crime novelist Ed McBain that had Columbo trying to solve the kidnapping of his nephew's new bride. "I had to make a choice between what was on hand and the script that we chose to shoot," Falk explains. "I was happier with the one we shot than I would have been with the alternatives we had. The way I feel about it, if you know who did (the crime) and you're waiting 90 minutes to find out how they're caught, you'd better have a pretty good curtain. I just can't stand the ones that don't have a 'pop' at the end, which are the hardest to come up with. We didn't have a good 'pop' in any of the other scripts I saw, and I thought they were all soft in the middle, so we decided to go with the other one."

Falk acknowledges that a huge aspect of "Columbo's" appeal is the cerebral cat-and-mouse game that develops between the sleuth and the culprit, but he cautions, "Good interplay and good matching of wits is hard to come by. Occasionally, we come out ahead, and you just have the feeling it's going to work. Patrick McGoohan, John Cassavetes, Ruth Gordon, Jack Cassidy ... they were just terrific to play opposite, but there's never been a producer or a writer connected to this show who hasn't said at some point, 'This is the toughest show I've ever been involved with.' If you know (from the beginning) who did it, and you don't have any action, and you're reduced to two guys talking, it's tough. The trick is to not have it all come down to a scene at the end that actors refer to as 'Moishe the Explainer,' where everything has to be gone through and explained in great detail. Viewers fall asleep, because by then, they're not interested. The idea is to have a scene that takes you right up to the last minute, and you don't resolve (the mystery) just by talk, but also by unpredictability, tension and some fun."

As time has marched on, suggestions have been made by programming executives about incorporating certain ideas into "Columbo" mysteries, but Falk insists they've never been to the detriment of the basic formula. "You hear talk like that," he confirms, "but it's usually in generalities, and it never comes to grips with the main problems. What is clever about the murder? What is the first clue that takes Columbo in the direction of (the guilty party), or at

Springer receives touring grant

Springer Opera House

The state theater of Georgia, the Springer Opera House, will have a bigger voice in the theater world beginning this year, thanks, in part, to a $18,210 touring grant from the Knight Foundation of Miami, Fla.

The grant provides assistance in the production and promotion of the theater's first regional tour and helps to keep performance fees low and accessible to even the poorest of communities and groups.

Springer Theater on Tour will perform shows throughout the Southeast, often in out-of-the-way places and, usually, in non-traditional theater environments.

The purpose of the program is to make live theater available in communities, schools and organizations that may not normally have access to professional productions and to demonstrate the adaptability of different facilities that groups might then use for future presentations.

The Springer launches the program this fall with a production of Driving Miss Daisy, by Alfred Uhry, which was performed in a pre-tour schedule in the Springer's Actors Arena.

Native American puzzle

Test your knowledge regarding Native American and win one of several prizes.

Only open to Army and air force Exchange Service patrons.

Call 545-3198 or 545-6665 or bring your answers to the Equal Opportunity Office, Building 2515. Deadline is Wednesday.

Answer the following questions from the words given:

1. "Great Muddy" is the name given this river from the Algonquian dialect

2. "Pictured Rocks" refers to the picture writing found on the rocks in this area.

Riverwalk youth music event set

Columbus 1992 Commission

A special one-hour music and candlelight ceremony saluting our youth will be Wednesday on the new Riverwalk in Columbus.

Sponsored by the Columbus 1992 Commission, "Children's Lights For the Future" is a Quincentennial event that begins at 6 p.m. and is free to the public.

The event will feature the 90-voice Columbus College Civic Chorale and the 60-piece Columbus College Orchestra under the direction of Dr. William Bullock and Patricio Cobos.

In addition, approximately 100 scouts will participate in a candlelight procession and two young adults will deliver comments on freedom and citizenship.

The audience is asked to bring a canned good to exchange for a Quincentennial commemorative candle. Canned goods will be delivered by the Exchange Club to the House of Mercy to help feed the homeless during the Thanksgiving season.

In case of inclement weather, the ceremony will be moved to the North Hall inside the Columbus Ironworks Trade and Convention Center.

Show needs crafty people

Unicoi State Park

The call is out for artists and crafters interested in participating in the 18th Annual Fireside Crafts and Arts Show.

Scheduled for Feb. 20 to 21 at the Unicoi State Park Lodge and Conference Center, the annual event attracts more than 8,000 visitors each year.

Park officials are looking for 60 of the Southeast's finest crafters to provide a good artistic representation of the region.

All varieties of art will be considered for the show to create a balance between fine arts and good crafts. In order to qualify, artists must make all their own crafts.

Deadline for applications is Dec. 1; exhibitors will be chosen by Dec. 15.

Christmas in Savannah promises festive events

Savannah Convention and Visitors Bureau

The Savannah Area Convention and Visitors Bureau announces that the new Christmas in Savannah brochure is available and free for the asking .. .and is 'chock full' of fun and festive events taking place during the holiday season.

The holiday season always winds up the year in style ... as Savannah's parks, squares, windows and doorways are bedecked with red bows, greenery and traditional holiday finery.

From Christmas tours of private homes, historic inns and churches, or Christmas on the river with a street parade, boat parade and festivities along the riverfront plaza, to Winter Musters and Confederate Nog parties at area fort and a myriad of whimsical activities, there's something for everyone.

If you're dreaming of a "White Christmas," then Savannah is not the place for you. This sunny coastal city enjoys mild temperatures and warm sea breezes year-round. There may be a nippy day or two ... but December is tradition-ally a month that you can still enjoy shirtsleeve sight-seeing.

For more information and a copy of the free brochure contact:

Savannah Area Convention and Visitors Bureau, Holiday Dept., P.O. Box 1628, Savannah, Ga. 31402-1628, or call (912) 944-0456 or (800) 444-2427.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Card tournament — A spades tournament is each Sunday at 2 p.m for beginners or advanced players at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

Other activities available at the center include pool, pingpong, darts and movies. Table games and 41 Nintendo games are on hand.

For more information, call Kelley Hill Recreation Center Wednesday through Sunday from noon until 9 p.m. at 544-3079.

Chess tournament — The rated U.S. Chess Federation chess tournament is the last Saturday of each month at Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Registration begins at noon and play begins shortly after.

Tourney players must be USCF members. Memberhips may be purchased at the tourney, and play is open to military and civilians.

Entry fee for the tournament is $2. For more information, call the Kelley Hill Recreation Center at 544-3079 or 544-1721 Wednesday through Sunday after noon.

Bluegrass jam session — A bluegrass jam session will be the last Sunday of every month at the Uchee Creek Lodge on post. The sessions are open to anyone and will begin at 2 p.m.

So, you can't go home for Thanksgiving weekend.

history that surrounds it. Next week, USAIC TV takes a look at the home in Washington, D.C., that provides a retirement haven for our nation's veterans.

Armed Forces Digest will also have reports on the Army's new expanded allotment program, an update on the President's Commission on Women in the Military, and the new Department of Defense Schools' Early Childhood Guide, a book to help parents prepare their children for school.

If you are a subscriber to Fort Benning Cable, you can watch USAIC TV on channel 32.

For more information, call the Public Affairs Office at 545-2201.

Post prepares to celebrate Thanksgiving

Tonight while you are fast asleep, dining facility personnel across the post will be preparing a sumptuous Thanksgiving feast.

The yearly day of thanks is the busiest day of the year for Army cooks, but according to personnel of the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital Dining Facility, Building 2831, it is also the most rewarding.

"I look forward to Thanksgiving," said Spc. Amy Rossell. "It's the one time of the year that cooks are really appreciated."

Spc. Henry Otero, also a cook, agreed. "It's the one time we really get to shine and show off our cooking skills," he said.

Preparation for the Thanksgiving meal actually begins days in advance, said Sgt. 1st Class Emanuel Floridia, dining facility manager.

Work on decorative items, which includes ice sculptures, a cross made entirely of frosting, gingerbread houses with "gummy bear" residents and a handmade pastry cornucopia, begin a week in advance.

Monday, the dining facility received its issue of food, including 220 pounds of turkey, 50 pounds of roast beef, 72 pounds of cornish game hens and 62 pounds of ham.

The bulk of the food preparation, which is done in three shifts, will begin tonight.

"A night shift will prepare things such as the dressings, fruits and vegetables ... basically everything except the meats," said Floridia. "At 4 a.m., the early morning team will begin preparation of the turkey and other meats, and at 11 a.m. the late morning shift will begin serving the meal."

Floridia said that the dining facility plans to feed around 400 people from the 75th Ranger Regiment, the 2nd Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, the 498th Maintenance Company, the 690th Medical Company and others.

Edward C. Hilton, chief of the Food Services Branch, said that dining facilities postwide will serve between 18,000 to 20,000 military personnel, family members and guests.

Despite all the hard work, which will tap the talents of every member of the dining facility, the preparation of the Thanksgiving meal is challenging, fun and rewarding, Floridia said.

"Personnel across the entire post from all the dining facilities will be working hard and doing their best," he said. "We don't get overtime or any compensation except for the satisfaction of a job well done and the thanks of those who enjoy the meal."

Dining facilities menu and schedule at a glance

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Post dining facilities will feature traditional Thanksgiving trimmings and more this year.

Besides the ever popular turkey, dining facilities will offer ham and roast beef, and some will also feature cornish game hens.

The following is the menu for the Follow Me Dining Facility, Building 73.

All retired military personnel are invited for dinner Thursday at the Follow Me Dining Facility.

The serving hours are 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. The food cost is $3.10 plus $7.40 surcharge for retirees. According to Edward C. Hilton, chief of the Food Services Branch, other dining facilities will offer menus that are the same or similar.

- Roast turkey, ham and roast beef.
- Giblet gravy.
- Oyster dressing.
- Cranberry sauce.
- Mashed potatoes and candied sweet potatoes.
- Seasoned spinach and cauliflower au gratin.
- Tossed vegetable salad and zero salad dressing.
- Jellied banana salad.
- Cloverleaf rolls and margarine or butter.
- Pumpkin pie, pecan pie and fruitcake.
- Hard candy and assorted fresh fruit.
- Milk, tea, coffee and soft drinks.

The schedule at the dining facilities on post is as follows.

Soldiers may not have to pay utility deposits

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning soldiers may not have to pay deposits for gas, electricity, water and telephone services as a result of a utilities clearinghouse that will open on post effective Tuesday.

The clearinghouse, which will be located in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2633, is designed as a one-stop facility for soldiers to take care of all their utility needs in one place, as part of in- and out-processing.

The Consumer Affairs Division of Army Community Services will operate the clearinghouse.

"It will be a one-stop set up for all soldiers transferring to Fort Benning with good credit to get their gas, electricity, water and telephone without paying a deposit," said Ann Pratcher of the Consumer Affairs Division of Army Community Services.

"Interests in this facility have been ongoing for the past five years, and now it will become a reality."

The program is available for Muscogee County residents and soldiers living on post, but will be expanding to include others in Phenix City, Russell County, Lee County and Chattahoochee County in the future, Pratcher said.

Currently, Southern Bell, Georgia Power, Columbus Water Works and United Cities Gas Company are participating in the program.

A ribbon-cutting ceremony will take place Tuesday at the facility at 1:30 p.m.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning's commanding general, will conduct the ceremony.

According to Pratcher, the program is patterned after programs in place at Fort Stewart, Ga.

Friends, family remember ranger

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Soldiers and officers of the 75th Ranger Regiment joined family members and friends in Marshall Auditorium Sunday to honor the memory of Sgt. Jeffrey A. Palmer.

Palmer, an infantry team leader assigned to Company B, 3rd Ranger Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, died Nov. 18 as a result of injuries sustained during a routine ranger training exercise at Twenty-nine Palms, Calif.

Palmer, who was shot through the right thigh, was air evacuated to the Naval Hospital there. After several hours in surgery he died from complications resulting from his injuries.

Sunday's memorial service included scripture readings, prayers, songs and personal tributes from his chain of command.

"I saw him as an example of the quality we try to instill in our rangers — of being a quiet professional," said Capt. Thomas P. Wright, company commander. "I can never remember hearing him brag or being loud. I do remember that Sergeant Palmer was the type of ranger who was always there, doing what he was supposed to," he said.

"Sergeant Palmer knew and lived the ranger creed as I have tried to recount here today, he was one of those special and rare men who say little and do much," Wright said.

First Sergeant Dean Gambrel echoed his commander's sentiments about Palmer saying he set the standards for rangers and the first sergeant asked his fellow rangers to meet the standards Palmer had set.

According to Palmer's platoon sergeant, Sgt. 1st Class Alan T. Boswell, he enjoyed watching Palmer work with his men. Boswell said Palmer was a good person, as well as a good team leader, and that he wouldn't want anything to change because of this (his death). "Sergeant Palmer will be missed by us all," said Boswell.

Palmer was posthumously awarded the Army Commendation Medal and the Meritorious Service Medal. He earned the Combat Infantryman Badge, senior Parachutist Badge with combat jump star, Pathfinder Badge and the Ranger Tab.

Palmer is survived by his wife, Michelle, his brother, 2nd Lt. Todd A. Palmer of Fort Sill, Okla., and his parents, Donald and Rosemary Palmer of Kane, Pa.

How to get stories in The Bayonet

Editor's note: Many people call us with questions about how to get their information in the paper or with erroneous information about deadlines, so we have compiled the following for your information.

Our mission

The Bayonet is here to serve you — our audience. Our mission is to provide timely, accurate and truthful information that supports Army goals and directives.

We get a lot of feedback from readers, and we appreciate your letters, story ideas and comments. We appreciate the positive comments, and we do our best to address the negative ones.

As Fort Benning's authorized newspaper, we are dedicated to giving you the most complete coverage possible. In order to do this, we rely on members of our audience to keep us informed about their units' activities.

Requesting coverage of news happenings

The staff of The Bayonet enjoys covering newsworthy events on post that are timely and pertinent to our readers. Some events we cover include brigade-level changes of command, changes in post policies or procedures and other postwide events.

We don't have enough personnel to cover everything on post, so we focus on the events that affect most of the post.

Some events we do not send a reporter to cover are parties, dinners, dining events, dances, balls, teas, coffees, club and organization meetings and elections, award presentations, changes of command below the brigade level, check presentations and group photos.

The frequency of such events on post and small number of photojournalists on The Bayonet staff prohibit us from covering these events.

Also, Army Regulation 360-81, which governs the production and content of Department of the Army newspapers, states covering such events is not a function of the post newspaper or the Public Affairs Office.

If you need a photographer to record events for official purposes, you need to call the Training and Audiovisual Support Center's photo lab at 545-4417.

Deadlines

Film, photos, stories, letters to the editor and other news items intended for The Bayonet must arrive in our office no later than noon Friday prior to the next week's publication.

Copy must be typed and doubled-spaced. The only handwritten items we will accept are letters to the editor. Everything else must be typed. Typed copy is easier for us to edit, easier for our typesetter and results in fewer errors.

Use civilian dates, times, the name of the building as well as the building number. You may include the street or road if desired. Also, be sure to include the first and last names of all individuals mentioned in the story, and spell out all acronyms on first reference.

If you submit an announcement for garrison highlights, post briefs or c when it appears in The Bayonet. Then, if you must resubmit it at a later date, submit it as it ran in the paper.

Story ideas, submission

If you believe you have a good story idea and want to write the story yourself, call us to see if we're interested. If you don't want to write the story, call us and we'll arrange a time for you to talk with a reporter.

We reserve the right to edit all stories for publication, and we cannot guarantee if or when submitted stories will appear in the paper. Stories that are submitted after the deadline will be published in the next week's paper.

Stringers

Stringers are people belonging to various units who write about and take photos of unit activities for The Bayonet.

Without stringers, our coverage of unit activities would be decreased. Unit commanders who would like to arrange for a stringer should call The Bayonet command information officer or the editor at 545-2201.

Stringers need not be trained or have experience as journalists; The Bayonet will provide training and materials including film and photo processing.

Letters

The Bayonet welcomes letters to the editor and readers' responses to the paper's contents. Letters should be typed, if possible, and should include name and telephone number. Names may be withheld on request.

Photos

We will accept photos that are black and white glossy prints or color prints. We also accept black-and-white and color negatives and color slides. We prefer action shots — people doing their jobs or interacting with other people. Head and shoulder shots of individuals are also acceptable.

Complaints

If you have a complaint, question or comment about The Bayonet, call the editor or the command information officer at 545-2201.

Corrections

We strive for accuracy, so if we make an error, we will correct it in the next edition of The Bayonet. Call us at 545-2201.

Classified advertising

Free classified advertising is available for Fort Benning soldiers, family members and Department of Army civilians. To place a classified ad, call 682-3346.

Safety can keep holidays festive

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

In case you didn't guess, the holiday season is here and merchants are licking their chops in anticipation of greenbacks filling their tills.

It's also the season for us to pull dunderheaded stunts that put us into hospital beds instead of under the mistletoe during this jolly, jolly time of year.

A Dr. Paul J. School of Fort Belvoir, Va., noted: "Human error is a behavioral oddity that is like stumbling over our own feet. We do not intend to do it, and we wonder why we did. Often, we do it again."

That's the reason we injure ourselves. It's our own boneheaded mistakes that get us in trouble.

How else do you explain a soldier injuring himself by falling out of his bunk while lacing his boots? How else do you explain how a soldier injured his groin while walking around his bunk, or a civilian injured his ankle as he was walking past a trash can? Or what about the troop who stabbed himself in the thigh while whittling on a piece of wood?

These miscues can test the best of minds.

COMMENTARY

According to post safety records, falls account for most injuries to civilian employees; and, not counting airborne injuries (most of which are from improper parachute landing falls), falls also account for the most injuries to soldiers.

People end up in hospitals or convalescing at home because they slip on stairs, because they trip over stumps at company picnics, because they fall off their tanks.

Eighty percent of accidents are caused by human error. Not because some piece of machinery is faulty.

In all wars, except Korea, accidents caused the most casualties. During World War II, they accounted for 56 percent, during Vietnam, 54 percent, and during Desert Shield and Desert Storm, 75 percent.

The safety gurus say these human errors are caused by not following procedure, carelessness, boredom and fatigue. But the biggie is lack of discipline.

They say leaders aren't correcting their people when they see them doing dumb things, like smoking next to fuel tankers, like driving a humvee too fast on a dirt road trying to catch up to a convoy, like not wearing reflective clothing and jogging on major thoroughfares during the hours of darkness.

Leaders — all of us for that matter — must try to protect Specialist Clumsy or Mr. Bumble from themselves.

We can try to eliminate everyday hazards or clearly mark those we can't correct.

Let's face it, a certain percentage of us are going to hurt ourselves because we don't pay attention or we don't follow proper procedures. We also hurt ourselves because we're clumsy and there's not much that can be done about that.

But again, most injuries come from not following proper procedures. If an ammo loader had been sitting instead of standing while his tank was moving, he probably wouldn't have lost two fingers in the tank's door.

Another soldier could have avoided getting his big toe crushed when a torsion bar fell on it if he'd been wearing safety shoes, and a third soldier probably wouldn't have driven head on into an on-coming truck if his blood alcohol content hadn't been .17.

Another common injury, especially among civilians is from lifting. Again, these are injuries that occur because proper procedures aren't being followed. The person doesn't lift properly, or tries to lift too large a load.

The holidays are a festive time —a time to be with families and friends — not a time to be suspended from bars in a hospital room, and especially not a time to be paying last respects at a cemetery.

So enjoy the holidays. Just think what you're doing, don't get fatigued and pay attention.

President sends Thanksgiving wishes

I am pleased to extend greetings to the members of the United States armed forces as our nation observes Thanksgiving.

Today, as we Americans pause to reflect on our many blessings, we have much for which to be thankful. Imperial communism has been defeated, the Cold War has ended and more people are living in freedom than at any time in history.

Much of this progress has been made possible by the courage, sacrifices and professionalism of our men and women in uniform. Indeed, no prayer of thanksgiving would be complete without acknowledging the debt of gratitude that we owe each of you for your dedication to protecting our security and preserving our way of life.

Whether leading the international effort to liberate Kuwait or bringing aid to victims of hurricanes and other disasters, you serve our country in countless ways. Your patriotism and skill are unsurpassed, and it has been a high honor to serve as your commander in chief during the past four years.

To those of you who are stationed far away from home and must spend this holiday away from family and friends, I offer a special salute, the thoughts and prayers of a grateful nation are with you on this occasion.

God bless you and God bless the United States of America.

George Bush
President

Powell urges armed forces to reflect on blessings

Happy Thanksgiving. This year, as in past years, we pause to give thanks for the many blessings that our freedom has brought us as individuals and as a nation.

The day of Thanksgiving was the first holiday celebrated by American settlers. The traditional meaning of Thanksgiving is as relevant today as it was 371 years ago. It is a time for all of us to reflect upon the values we hold dear and the legacy of freedom and prosperity we inherited from our founding fathers.

Their determination still motivates us and is exemplified by you — the men and women, military and civilian, who serve with the armed forces of the United States.

Take time this Thanksgiving to give thanks for the infinite blessings enjoyed by our country. While conflicts and strife still abound, this year's Thanksgiving finds us hopeful and thankful for the momentous changes that have taken place in the world.

The sacrifices you make as soldiers, sailors, airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen are many. You serve with distinction and courage in order to guard and protect our way of life.

Guided by the example of our early colonists, your selfless service, courage and loyalty have assured that the ideals of freedom and democracy prevail.

I also urge you this Thanksgiving to pause and reflect on the many blessings we share and to recall the dedication of those who have gone before us.

I know that many of you are away from home, families and friends because of your selfless service to our country. You are performing an important mission, and I, as well as Americans everywhere, appreciate you — the members of the finest armed forces in our nation's history.

On behalf of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, I wish each of you and your family happy Thanksgiving.

Gen. Colin L. Powell
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff

CG encourages troops to celebrate our freedom

Today we celebrate an honored American tradition that began 371years ago in Plymouth, Mass., when Governor William Bradford proclaimed a day of public thanksgiving for the past year's blessings.

By presidential decree, Americans continue to set aside this special day to thank God for the abundance of his blessings.

Therefore, on this fourth Thursday of November, we again acknowledge with gratitude, that the Lord has looked with favor upon our people and our land.

As we observe this Thanksgiving Day, we give special thanks for another year of an abundance of blessings and prosperity. We enjoy greater freedoms, enhanced well being, and more opportunities than any people in history — we celebrate the freedom to worship, speak and choose our direction in life.

Those freedoms and opportunities were achieved through rigorous training, attention to the mission, dedication to high and noble ideals and the personal sacrifices by our generation and generations of Americans before us.

This year, especially, let us, the inheritors of these abundant blessings, take time to realize how fortunate we are to be free.

My prayer for you and your loved ones is for a safe, happy and blessed Thanksgiving.

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Commanding general

Volunteer coordinator thanks post helpers

The Thanksgiving season gives us a chance to celebrate friends and family, and all that is special to us.

It also provides an opportunity to thank those who have given so much to Fort Benning throughout the year.

In the spirit of this season, I want to thank each of the Fort Benning volunteers for sharing his or her time and talent. Their gifts are many and they are the greatest Fort Benning resource.

Once again, I want to thank them for caring and sharing.

First sergeant's family expresses gratitude

The family of 1st Sgt Harvey L. Moore Jr. wishes to acknowledge with great appreciation the kind expressions of sympathy of the U.S. Army, the 75th Ranger Regiment and all military personnel at Hunter Army Airfield (Savannah, Ga.) and at Fort Benning, Ga.

Your kind words, prayers and flowers were more than we could have expected.

Please accept our warmest thanks.

Open season begins for TSP

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

The Thrift Savings Plan open season began Nov. 15 and will continue through Jan. 31.

The TSP is a retirement savings plan for the Federal Employees' Retirement System and Civil Service Retirement System employees.

Employees pay no taxes on TSP contributions or earnings until withdrawals are made.

Employees covered by FERS, can contribute up to 10 percent of basic pay each pay period to your TSP account (up to the IRS limit, which was set at $8,728 for 1992).

Federal agencies automatically contribute an amount equal to one percent of the employees' basic pay each pay period, whether the employee contributes or not.

Those covered by SCRS can contribute up to 5 percent of their basic pay each pay period (up to the IRS limit). They do not receive any agency contributions.

The TSP open season is a chance for employees to start or change contributions to their TSP account.

During the open season, employees can also change the way future payroll contributions are invested in the three TSP funds: Government Securities Investment (G) Fund, Common Stock Index Investment (C) Fund, and Fixed Income Index Investment (F) Fund.

Employees desiring to participate in TSP initially or make changes should complete a TSP 1 Election Form.

The form must be completed and submitted to the Personnel Services Center, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, Meloy Hall, Room 115, by close of business on the last day of open season (Jan. 31).

Now's the time to choose health benefits

Directorate of Civilian Personnel

The Federal Employee Health Benefits Program open season began Nov. 9 and will continue through Dec. 14.

Under open season regulations, any eligible employee who is not currently registered may enroll, and an enrolled employee may change from one plan or option to another, or from self only to self and family, or any combination of these.

Those employees who do not wish to make a change in current enrollment need take no action during this open season.

The 1992 Enrollment Information Guide and plan comparison chart has been distributed to administrative offices. This booklet contains open season enrollment information and a chart that lists all of the plans.

It also gives the major features of each plan and the enrollee's share of the biweekly and monthly premium rates.

Employees desiring to enroll or change their enrollment must complete a Standard Form 2809, Health Benefits Registration Form, in Meloy Hall, Room 115, Personnel Services Center, Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

Appointments should be made through administrative offices. The forms must be complete and submitted to the Personnel Services Center prior to the close of business on the last day of the open season (Dec. 14).

New enrollments and changes in current enrollments elected during the open season will normally become effective the first day of the first pay period beginning on or after Jan. 1.

ASK THE JUDGE

By Rick Parker
Legal Assistance Division

The purchase of a home is probably going to be the biggest investment you will ever make in your life.

Unless you are a building contractor or structural engineer, you will need an expert to help you. Also, you need to know how to structure your contract to buy the house in order to allow you to have the home inspected before you buy.

There are three basic types of inspections that you may encounter in your purchase of the home.

First, if you are getting a Veterans Affairs guaranteed loan, you should know that the VA will do an appraisal of the house. This appraisal is performed to make sure the house is worth at least the amount of the mortgage for which you are applying.

You should understand that this appraisal is for the benefit of the mortgage company and the VA, not for the buyer. In some cases, the VA appraiser may find structural or other defects that require repair, but you cannot count on this inspection as a thorough indicator of the condition of the home.

Second, particularly in the Columbus market, you will see references to a "systems check." Most of the standard contracts used by real estate agents in this area have a provision that requires this type of inspection.

While a systems check is for the benefit of the buyer, it is not intended to be a thorough inspection of the structure and condition of the home. It is only intended to ensure that the systems (plumbing, electrical, heating, air conditioning and appliances) are in working order. Such an inspection offers no guarantee of the true condition of these systems or of the structure (roof, walls, ceilings, foundation and the like) of the home.

The final type of inspection, and the one that really needs to be performed, is a thorough inspection of the entire home systems, structure and environmental hazards (i.e., radon, lead).

Having discussed the various types of inspections, the question becomes how to preserve your right to have one performed and what happens if the inspection reveals defects. These issues should be addressed in the real estate contract for the purchase of the home.

The starting point of any real estate deal, once you have found your home, is the preparation and signature of the real estate sales contract. The contract will determine and set the rights and obligations of all of the parties to the transaction: the buyer, the seller, and, if involved, the real estate agent or agents.

The contract will, of course, set the price of the house and how it is to be paid (that is, what kind of mortgage, the down payment, and the like). Usually, you will enter into a "contingency" contract — your obligation to go through with the deal will be contingent on your ability to get approved for a mortgage of a specified amount at a specified interest rate.

The right of inspection should also be handled as a contingency in the contract. First, the contract should specify that the buyer has an absolute right to have a complete inspection of the home performed within a certain time period (usually anywhere between 10 to 30 days after the signing of the contract).

It should provide that the buyer and inspector will be granted free access to the home to perform the inspection. Once the inspection is performed, if defects are revealed, a written statement of defects should be tendered to the seller, within a specified period of time.

The seller would then have three options: make the repairs and go through with the deal as agreed; or, make a counteroffer to the buyer that the buyer may either accept or reject; or, do nothing, in which case the contract is void.

The Fort Benning Housing Referral Office has brochures and pamphlets on this subject. The staff attorneys at the Legal Assistance Division can assist you. Call 545-3281 or 545-3282 for an appointment.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters from Nov. 11 to 17. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt and/or innocence of any person.

• A staff sergeant reported that persons unknown broke the bedroom window of his quarters with an unknown object.

• A private was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct after refusing to leave a local restaurant parking lot.

• A family member reported that persons unknown attempted to pry open the kitchen window of her quarters, damaging the screen and window pane.

• A staff sergeant was charged by civil authorities with making an improper lane change and driving under the influence of alcohol. He registered .14.

• A staff sergeant was charged with wrongful use of cocaine after testing positive during a command directed urinalysis.

• A family member reported that persons unknown broke the driver's side window of her car and stole her in-dash stereo, then forced open the trunk and stole four speakers and an equalizer.

• A civilian was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol in a traffic accident, speeding excessively for road conditions and having no driver's license in possession.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with three counts of uttering worthless checks.

• A civilian was charged with fleeing and eluding, possession, manufacture and distribution of a controlled substance and carrying a concealed weapon. The individual failed to stop for a stop sign and refused to pull over for the Military Police. After a short chase, the individual stopped his car and fled on foot. He was apprehended and searched, at which time two cubes of crack cocaine were found.

• A staff sergeant reported that persons unknown damaged the front door of his quarters by apparently kicking it.

• A staff sergeant was charged with assault after hitting his wife in the face during a domestic dispute.

• A specialist reported that persons unknown dented the door and cracked the windshield on his car while it was parked and unattended.

• A civilian was charged with failure to drive on a roadway laned for traffic after she lost control of her car and struck two vehicles that were parked. She then attempted a backing maneuver and struck a tree.

• A family member reported a dog being left outside with no food, water or shelter. The dog was transported to Veterinary Services for observation.

• Two civilians were charged with shoplifting after exiting the Class Six store with four magazines for which they had not paid.

Other activity included 17 traffic accidents and nine reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were seven cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 11 reported cases of larceny of private property and three reported cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Make Our Post The Best — Give Crime Arrest!" Report any suspicious activity to the Military Police Station at 545-5222 or 545-5223.

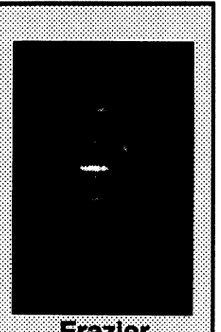
EXCELLENCE & QUALITY

PROFILE OF EXCELLENCE

Name: John M. Frazier III
Award or recognition: Server of the Month
Organization: Fort Benning Officers' Club (Lexington Room)
Time on the job: Four months



Frazier

What were your reasons for joining the staff of the Officers' Club?
I was looking for a part-time job. I enjoy working with people.

What are your future career plans?
I'm still on active duty. The Army is my career. I just enjoy working here as a server.

Define your style:
My customers are first. I just be myself; personality is very important. They see I enjoy serving them, and I'm very professional so their evening is pleasant.

What person has most influenced your career?
Patricia Hoaglin, who is my girlfriend. She's been a waitress for five years. She's the best. She's taught me a lot.

Most memorable moment in your career:
Every time I work I have a memorable moment. It would be very hard to choose one.

Preparation key for easy transition

Army Career and Alumni Program

Most people leaving the military find themselves at a disadvantage when they start looking for a job, according to Ted Craig, Fort Benning's Army Career and Alumni Program transition services manager.

"It's important to think far ahead," Craig said. "We offer career guidance to people. It's never too early to begin thinking about what you may want to do after the military. We help people based on their individual needs."

ACAP offers:

• A three-day workshop within 180 days of separation that helps military members prepare for transition.

• A one-day "advanced course" dealing with resume writing and interview skills.

• The Defense Outplacement Referral System process that provides a free service to match a person's abilities to civilian employment positions and by sending a mini-resume to a data base used by hundreds of employers throughout the world.

• Career Day provides an opportunity for employers to meet, brief and interview soldiers.

• The Educational Opportunity Program makes it possible for a person to get a help and information about tuition assistance, enrollment procedures, or data on any college or university.

• Referrals for separation benefits to include Special Separation Benefits, Voluntary Separation Incentive and retirement.

Below is a timetable for job hunting while still in the service.

12 months before leaving:

• Talk with local transition center personnel.

• Visit the Retirement Services Office if you are retiring.

• Discuss with your family, possible options, setting goals for the job and location search.

• Decide where you want to live after leaving the military.

• Decide what types of jobs you qualify for and the income you will need.

• Start subscriptions or check the local library for professional or trade journals.

• Make sure you have or can acquire any necessary license you need for your chosen profession.

• Check your financial status and make plans to have enough money to cover several months of expenses if you don't find a job immediately.

• Research job possibilities, job markets and the economic conditions in the area you want.

9 months before leaving:

• Decide what type of work you are going to look for.

• Do first drafts of your resume.

• If possible, visit the area where you plan to move to after leaving the military; if you can't visit, write the local chamber of commerce for information.

• For job and real estate information, subscribe to weekend newspapers from the area where you plan to move.

• Continue research.

• Keep in touch with the local transition point.

6 months before leaving:

• Attend an ACAP transition class whether retiring or getting out of the Army.

• Finalize your resume; decide if you need help in developing the best possible resume and if you need to hire a professional resume writer.

• Develop a list of employers in the field in which you are interested; also, determine any friends you might have in the private sector who may be able to help you.

• Contact an executive recruiter for assistance if you qualify and are looking for a job in this category.

• Begin developing a contingency plan for job and location in case your plan falls through.

3 months before leaving:

• Send out resumes and begin making telephone calls to check on their arrival.

• Begin replying to want ads in newspapers and magazines.

• Visit the state employment agency where you plan to live.

• After each job interview, evaluate your performance and decide what you did right and what you need to improve.

• Keep in touch with your local transition office.

For more information, call 545-4892 or 545-4902 or drop by the office in Building 2617 (upstairs) in Soldiers' Plaza.

GARRISON HIGHLIGHTS

Publications reduces operating hours, days

Post publications has changed hours as a result of reduced manpower resources.

Hours of operation will be 8 a.m to noon, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, and will be closed each Wednesday. Emergencies will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

ID section to close for Thanksgiving holiday

The Personnel Processing Division in Building 2622 and the Identification Card and Customer Service in Building 2638, Soldiers' Plaza, will be closed Friday. Normal duty hours will resume Monday.

Units must monitor oil levels of collection tanks

Units are reminded that oil collection tanks, from oil/water separators that are part of vehicle wash racks, must be monitored daily to determine oil levels.

When tanks are three-quarters full, units must contact Charles Sanders at 545-4749 or 545-4232 to have waste oil pumped.

Monitoring is a manual process requiring the units to verify the level of the oil either visually or by stick measure.

If the oil tanks are filled too much, an oil spill could result, which is a direct violation of the Clean Water Act.

Units will be responsible for the subsequent cleanup and disposal costs. The cost for disposal is $1.85 per pound. For more information, call 545-4749 or 545-4232.

TSC sets up schedules for taking official photos

The Training Support Center has implemented an appointment system for Department of the Army photographs.

Appointments may be made either in person at Building 108 or by calling the appointment desk at 545-1381. Hours of operation are Monday and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Wednesday from 8 a.m. to noon.

Outdoor recreation equipment available

Canopies are available for rent at the Outdoor Recreation Equipment Rental and Storage Facility. A dunking booth and log splitters are also available for rent.

Bullets shoot past Jazz

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Basketball has hit the hardcourt at Briant Wells Field House. Two games were played Thursday evening. Here is a wrap-up.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, (OCS Jazz) vs. Co. A., 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt. (Alpha Bullets).

The Alpha Bullets got 18 points each from Ronald Davis and Reggie Mack to power the Bullet offense past OCS Jazz 66-30.

Derek Patterson hit for 8 points and Eric Turner added 7 in a losing effort for the Jazz.

Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 11th Infantry Regiment, (Skyforce) vs. School of the Americas (SOA).

Marlon Morning poured in 28 points, Antoine Wright hit for 12 and Charles Sanders added 11 to slam dunk SOA 67-41.

Rudy Valentine and William Clark each hit for 11 and Ronnie Jimenez chipped in 7 for SOA.

Champs grapple on

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The post wrestling championships held Saturday morning at Briant Wells Field House saw eight men earn the right to wrestle at the Forces Command wrestling championships at Fort Hood, Texas, in December.

Anthony Seals of Company C, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division, will wrestle in the 125-pound weight class.

586th Engineer Bradley Moran will wrestle at 136.5 pounds.

Andrew Flagler of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment is in at 149.5 pounds.

At 163.5 pounds Bill Bargus of Co. C, 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt. is slated to wrestle.

Ken Henry of Battery C, 4th Bn., 41st Field Artillery, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. will occupy the 180.5-pound division.

Bret Vaughan of Co. E, 4th Ranger Training Battalion is in at 198.5 pounds.

At 220.5 pounds, Roscoe Jeffrey of Co. C, 2nd Bn., 69th Armor, 3rd Bde., 24th Inf. Div. will fill the spot, and at 286 pounds James Demos of HHC 29th Inf. Regt. will anchor the final spot for Fort Benning.

The FORSCOM championships will be Dec. 7 through 10 at Fort Hood.

Youth Falcons outsoar Eagles

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Youth Services Falcons went 6-0 to win the 9- to 11-year-old football crown with a 24-0, shutout of the Eagles Saturday at Blue Field.

In the first half, both teams played solid defense with the half ending knotted at zero.

The Falcons showed their talons early in the second half. With the Eagles driving downfield, linebacker Douglas Cox forced a fumble that was recovered by cornerback Shelen Peters giving the Falcons first and 10 at the Eagle 25.

Four plays later, running back Sean Nelson took a pitch from quarterback John Stafford around the right side and scooted into the end zone for the Falcons first score of the day.

Peters added the extra points try and the Falcons were up 8-0 early in the second half.

The Falcon defense stopped the Eagles once again deep in Eagle territory taking over on downs at the Eagle 11.

On a first-down handoff, running back Keneke Burkes went off tackle for 11 yards and a Falcon touchdown. Nelson punched across the extra points try for a Falcon 16-0 lead.

On the Eagles last drive of the game, quarterback Brian Lucas moved the offense down to the Falcon 12-yard line, and it looked as if the Eagles would avoid the shutout; but, Peters stepped in front of a Lucas pass at the 12 and went 88 yards for the final score of the game. Running back Alectis Jones went up the gut for the extra point capping the scoring at 24-0.

"This is the way to win a championship," said rookie head coach Kenneth Burkes.

"We had some problems in the first half, but we were able to adjust our offense and the defense took care of itself."

Faith holiday race approaching

Fort Benning Schools

Mark your calendars. The 14th annual Faith Holiday Race is set for Dec. 5.

This event, conducted by the Faith School Physical Education Department, is open to everyone. Students, parents, teachers, and members of the Fort Benning and surrounding communities are invited to participate. Entire families can run the race together.

Each year 500 to 1,100 runners participated in the race. This race began 14 years ago as an outgrowth of Faith Physical Education Program and the Faith Jogging Club, which had been formed in 1978.

Faith's Jogging Club is still going strong with students training with relays and extended runs two days a week after school.

All proceeds from the race go to the Faith School's Physical Education Program to provide additional equipment and incentive awards for students.

The Faith Race is made up of three different races that begin and end at Faith Middle School at 1375 Ingersol St.

The one-mile race for boys and girls 14 years old and under begins at 8:30 a.m. The two-mile race, open to all age categories, begins at 9:15 a.m. The five-mile race, also open to all age categories, begins at 10 a.m.

T-shirts will be presented to all finishers and awards will be presented in each category at the awards ceremony in the Faith School gym.

Pre-registration for 14-year-olds and under is $4 and for 15 and over $6. Race Day registration begins at 7:30 a.m. with fees of $5 for 14 and under and $7 for 15 and over runners.

Refreshments of fruit and soft drinks will be available.

For more information, call physical education teacher, Susan Emerson at 545-5524.

Aim at safety

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Rifle and Pistol Club of Fort Benning will conduct a basic firearms safety course for women Dec. 12 from 8 a.m. to noon.

The course will be limited to 20 people.

The course is free, but participants must pay $6 for a mandatory manual.

Registration will be at the club, with preregistration ending Sunday

For more information, call 689-3371.

Cruise blasts Vulcans

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Columbus Fort Benning Rugby Football Club Cruise-matics ended its regular season playing host to the Vulcans of Birmingham, Ala., Saturday at Stilwell Field and sent them back to Birmingham at warp speed defeating the Vulcans 41-29.

The Cruise-matics drew first blood when outside center Steve Bunch, with a Vulcan defender hanging onto his legs, placed the ball down in the end zone for a 5-0 lead. Minutes later, kicker Malcom Frost increased the lead to 8-0 with a penalty kick for high tackling.

Cruise-matic wing Rudy Hernandez made it 13-0 after the Cruise-matics stole a Vulcan line in close to the goal. Frost tacked on another penalty kick for offsides and a 16-0 lead.

The Vulcans cracked the scoring ice a few minutes later when scrum half Jim Kistecky took a line-in pass near the Cruise-matic goal and stuffed it into the end zone for a try. Kicker Richard Hardy added the extra points attempt trimming the Cruise-matic lead to 16-7.

Late in the first half, hooker Mike Pasakis got his first try when the Vulcans let the ball get loose near their own goal line, Pasakis pounced on the ball as it bounced into the end zone upping the lead to 21-7.

The Vulcans came right back with a try of their own with some good line passing and support. James Smith took the last pass into the end zone, and Hardy made the kick cutting the Cruise lead to 21-14.

A penalty against the Vulcans allowed Frost to up the lead to 24 - 14 with time running out in the first half; but, the Vulcans were not quite done, adding a try as the half ended when inside center Tim Flynn was able to squeeze into the end zone under the pile of a scrum. The Vulcans had cut the lead to 24-19 at the break.

The Vulcans climbed even closer at the start of the second half with Hardy putting up a penalty kick cutting the lead to 24-22.

Referee Charles Living awarded the Cruise-matics a penalty try minutes later after inside center Brian Mennes was not taken out of play legally by a Vulcan defender at the goal line. Frost hit the extra points kick and a 31-22 lead.

Minutes later the referee awarded a penalty try to the Vulcans because wing forward Darren Monaco touched the ball after a penalty was called against the Cruise-matics.

Handy hit the chip shot putting the Vulcans right back in the match at 31-29.

Frost came to the rescue hitting a crucial penalty kick late in the match giving the Cruise-matics a five point lead at 34-29.

The referee put the finishing touches on the match by awarding a second penalty try to the Cruise-matics. Frost hit the kick and sealed the Vulcans' fate at 41-29.

Quilter wins OWC quilt

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet

Signe White, a quilter herself, won the quilt given away at the annual Officers' Wives' Club Bazaar Nov. 14 in Infantry Hall.

The queen-sized quilt was done in a "Many Trips Around the World" pattern, made by Christine Turner and donated by Columbus Bank & Trust.

According to Holly Grange, chairwoman, about 1,000 people attended the event, and OWC expects to clear about the same as last year, which was more than $4,000.

More than 60 vendors had tables at the bazaar, and the housing area mayors featured a booth for children to visit with Santa Claus.

Cub Scouts receive our nation's flag

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

In a pack meeting opening ceremony Nov. 17, Deborah Douglas, aide to Sen. Wyche Fowler, presented Fort Benning Cub Scout Pack 271 with a flag that flew over the nation's capitol on Oct. 20 to use as its official pack flag.

According to Pack 271's leader James Conaway, there are about 50 boys in his organization, and it was his Den 2 Webelos who accepted the flag for the pack.

Conaway gave a short history of the American flag and what previous flags have looked like. Then Den 2 Leader Chuck Robinson accepted the certificate and held the pole while his scouts put on the new flag. These Webelos included Rodney Watson, Tommy Robinson, Michael Lynch and Ryan Richardson

Air Assault Challenge

29th soldiers put their skills to test at Rucker

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The second annual Air Assault Challenge, a challenge designed to mentally and physically test soldiers while measuring their proficiency in all facets of air assault operations, was held at Fort Rucker, Ala., Nov. 17 through 19.

At the beginning of the competition, the field consisted of 50 two-man teams representing units from the continental United States and overseas.

The group consisted of soldiers in many different military occupational specialties, men and women, ages 19 to 42.

Fort Benning was represented by 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, which fielded 16 soldiers making eight two-man teams.

Once the competition was complete, only 44 teams still remained with teams dropping out because of injury or disqualification.

Events included an Army Physical Fitness Test with extended scores, the marking of a helicopter landing point, an obstacle course testing not only endurance but confidence, a slingload inspection test and a Swiss seat and rappel tower run.

The tower run is a timed event testing the soldiers' ability to tie a Swiss seat and then run to the top of an 80-foot rappel tower.

The final events included a 15-minute, 100-question exam that tested the soldiers' knowledge, an examination in a "sergeant says" format testing hand and arm signals and a 12-mile road march.

Each of the top three teams received plaques. Also, first-place winners, from Fort Rucker, received a Ruger 9mm pistol, second-place winners, also from Fort Rucker, received a Gerber survival knife, and third-place winners, from Fort Drum, N.Y., received a leatherman's tool.

Teams from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. placed seventh, 10th, 16th, 26th, 33rd, 36th and 42nd with one team not completing the competition.

Placing seventh and receiving Army Commendation Medals was the team of Staff Sgt. Dock Newell and Pfc. David Watson. The team of Staff Sgt. William Miller and Sgt. Jessie Gaddy, which placed 10th, received Army Achievement Medals.

The remaining competitors from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. are teams as follows: Staff Sgt. Drew Weakland and Capt. Joseph Croskey; Staff Sgt. Herman Hill and Spc. Arthur Swartz; Sgt. Joseph White and Spc. Eric Thorton; Staff Sgt. Anthony Martin and Spc. Steve Rieches; Sgt. Michael Lemon and Spc. James Browning; Staff Sgt. John Alley and Sgt. Adam Weber.

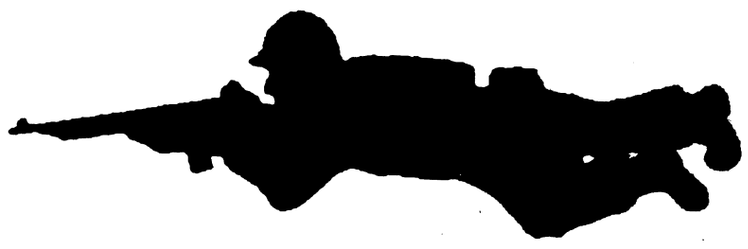
29th conducts machine gun display

IOBC students receive instruction, chance to fire automatic weapons

By Gregory Carlson
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment conducted a machine gun demonstration exercise at Red Cloud Range Nov. 13.

The 2nd Battalion demonstrated the techniques used to fire many of the infantry's automatic weapons, as well as the firing commands used to control these weapons.



Following the demonstration, Company A, 1st Battalion provided a demonstration of the firing capabilities of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle.

The future platoon leaders were shown different light infa\ntry weapons used in the Army to include the M-60 machine gun and the M-249 squad automatic weapon.

The firepower and tactical supporting roles of the Bradley Fighting Vehicle were demonstrated and students had a chance to fire the weapons.

MREs endure lengthy fruition

By Jim Garamone
American Forces Information Service

It was during Operation Desert Shield that most Americans learned about Meals, Ready-to-Eat — and the initial information was not favorable.

Some service members called MREs "meals rejected by everyone." Officials admit the name was somewhat deserved. The nature of the logistics operation was such that older MREs —often past their expiration dates— were issued to service members in the Gulf region during the early phases of Operation Desert Shield.

"As soon as the first rush was over and the logistics system began moving well, newer MREs arrived and complaints about the food dropped considerably," said Gerald A. Darsch, chief of the Food Technology Division at the Army's Natick Research, Development and Engineering Center, in Natick, Mass. "The point is that we're continually trying to improve the MREs. We want them to be nutritious and tasty."

Darsch said the most nutritious food in the world won't do one bit of good if it tastes so bad no one will eat it.

The Army developed MREs to replace the Meal, Combat Individual, commonly called C-rations. The other military services followed the Army's lead. C-rations consisted of canned meat, a can of fruit or cake, crackers, cheese or peanut butter spread and an accessory packet. But the cans added unneeded weight.

"MREs are lighter, easier to ship and stow, don't require a can opener and, we believe, are tastier than C-rations," Darsch said.

MREs weren't the first lightweight meals in the military's inventory. During the Vietnam War, some soldiers and Marines carried freeze-dried, long-range patrol rations, or "lurps."

Even before Vietnam, Army researchers were working on cutting down weight of rations. The freeze-dried instant coffee sold everywhere today grew out of an Army effort.

The need for lighter and tastier rations led to the development of MREs in the late 1970s and early 1980s. Today, researchers are working to improve them further.

Natick researchers don't come up with ideas for improvement out of the blue. The soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines who eat the rations have a great deal to say in terms of what goes in those olive drab plastic envelopes.

"We conduct field surveys and focus groups and ask our customers what they would like to see,"Darsch said. "Their input in essence drives our research and development efforts."

For example, service members asked for more ethnic and other popular foods in the packets. Fast foods, Italian and Mexican foods were mentioned most often. Natick researchers had to see first if they could formulate the foods. They had to work on whether the foods would provide the nourishment service members needed. Then they had to determine if the rations could be mass-produced. And finally, they had to be sure the foods have the long shelf life the military requires.

Natick researchers work closely with other government agencies and industry during both the research and development process and the actual procurement of the ration component. They work with the Defense Personnel Support Center in Philadelphia, which buys the rations, and various companies that make them.

"We bring these people in early in a real team approach," said Darsch. "We want to buy off the shelf whenever we can. This saves money and time. The only time we come up with our own military specifications is when there is absolutely nothing that meets our customer's needs."

Then the rations face the acid test —the researchers take them to the field and ask service members what they think. These are true "field" tests. Officials must be sure that what works in the laboratory works in the field.

"There is a lot of stress on soldiers in a field environment," said Darsch. "We're well aware of that. But sometimes, even with that knowledge, we still find we may be off the mark. Our job in testing is to find those problems, then go back to the lab, correct them and then test the rations again.

The critical element of the field test is the rations' acceptability," said Darsch. "The soldiers give their opinions not only on how the food tastes, but how it's packaged and how will it fits in with all other elements of the MRE."

Researchers are also concentrating on packaging improvements to make the MRE easier to carry and easier to eat, as well as more environmentally friendly.

We have several concepts that we are anxious to show to our customers to get their reaction," Darsch said. Two packaging concepts involve reducing the bulk of the MRE menu bag, another provides stability to the entree pouch while the soldier is eating the MRE.

"We are also beginning to include biodegradeable items in the MRE for field evaluation, starting with a biodegradeable spoon. If it performs well, it will be a move in the right direction," he said.

Darsch said Natick researchers are always ready to listen to ideas from service members.

"That's where the process really begins — with the service member," he said. "No one here forgets that we work for that soldier or Marine eating the MREs in the foxhole, the airman eating on the flight line or the sailor who must be fed ashore or afloat."

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• American forces near Guadalcanal, under the command of Adm. Carlton Wright, dispatched five heavy cruisers and seven destroyers to intercept Rear Adm. Raizo Tanaka's nightly resupply run. In the ensuing battle, Wright lost four cruisers, while sinking only one Japanese destroyer. Despite this seeming failure, the effort successfully prevented Tanaka from delivering the much-needed supplies to the islands' starving Japanese soldiers.

• Adm. Jean de Laborde, commander of the French Fleet, gave orders to scuttle three battleships, seven cruisers, and 62 other craft at Toulan, before the German II SS Panzer Corps could capture the naval base.

• Broadcasting from London,

Prime Minister Winston Churchill warned the people of Italy that unless they launched an immediate revolt against Benito Mussolini, they would face an impending full-scale Allied invasion.

• In North Africa, Allied forces came under heavy pressure around Tunisia as German counterattacks by the 10th Panzer Division, under Gen. Wolfgang Fischer, succeeded in retaking Djedeida and Tepourba.

• On the U.S. homefront, gasoline rationing began nationwide and scientists achieved the first man-made, self-sustaining chain reaction in the atomic pile at Chicago University.

• At Fort Benning, the 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment's mascot, a thrill-seeking dog called Max, qualified as a U.S. parachutist by making the last of five necessary jumps from an airplane in flight.

Watch for food-borne illnesses

Holiday food, turkey preparation might cause health risks

U.S. Department of Agriculture

If you defrost your turkey on the kitchen counter, stuff the bird the day before or slow-bake it overnight, you may be putting your health in jeopardy

"Cases of food-borne illness go up during the holidays. People often prepare larger quantities of food than they are used to; they are in a hurry and may not take the care they usually would in food preparation," says Susan Conley, manager of the U.S. Department of Agriculture Meat and Poultry Hot Line.

The hot line receives thousands of telephone calls about turkeys during November and December.

One of the most common mistakes people make is to thaw the turkey at room temperature, says Conley. Bacteria thrive in a warm environment and might not be destroyed during cooking.

"Plan on one day of refrigerator defrost time for every five pounds of turkey. A 20-pound bird, for example, will take about four days to defrost," Conley advises.

If you do forget to thaw your turkey enough ahead of time, you can use a cold-water technique. Submerge the wrapped bird in cold water, adding ice or new cold water every 30 minutes.

Turkey tips

Here are some other turkey tips the hot line suggests to keep your dinner healthy:

• Cook at 325 degrees and above. Cooking below 325 degrees is unsafe because low temperatures permit the bird to remain in the "danger zone," allowing food-poisoning bacteria to grow.

"A lot of people cook their turkeys at 200 to 250 degrees overnight so the turkey will be ready early on Thanksgiving Day. This is potentially dangerous," Conley says.

• Handle raw meat with care. Wash hands, utensils, counter and sink that have come in contact with raw turkey to prevent the spread of bacteria.

• Avoid undercooking. Make sure the turkey is cooked thoroughly before serving. Typically a 20- to 24-pound stuffed turkey will take around six to seven hours to roast.

Use a meat thermometer to check the final temperature of the turkey. The thigh should be about 180 degrees and the stuffing 165 degrees. Juices should be clear, not pink.

• Don't prestuff the turkey. Stuffing the turkey the night before you roast it may seem like a time-saving idea, but it also may lead to an upset stomach.

"We recommend stuffing the turkey immediately before putting it into the oven. If you place the warm stuffing into the turkey and then place the bird inside the refrigerator, it will create a warm atmosphere and a food source for the bacteria to multiply," Conley cautions.

• Avoid partially cooking the bird. Partially cooking the turkey the day before is another no-no. Interrupted cooking can increase the possibility of bacterial growth. The turkey may be heated long enough to activate bacteria, but not long enough to kill it.

• Handle leftovers carefully. Leaving the turkey out on the table to snack on all day is a common, but risky, practice. Two hours after you pull the cooked bird out of the oven, be sure to place it back in the refrigerator. Cut leftover turkey off the bones and place it in several small containers.

"If you put the large warm bird in the refrigerator, it will take longer to cool down, and bacteria could grow. When you cut the turkey into smaller pieces, it will cool faster," Conley says. Usually, refrigerated cooked turkey will keep three or four days.

For answers to other turkey quandaries, call the USDA Meat and Poultry Hot Line at (800) 535-4555.

Conserving energy reduces nation's need

Infantry Branch Safety Office

Help reduce the nation's need for oil and other fuels — and save money — by conserving energy in your home this winter.

There are a lot of simple things consumers can do to use energy more efficiently, especially during the fall and winter," says John Morrill, research associate for the American Council for an Energy Efficient Economy.

Here are a few energy-saving tips that the council recommends:

• Have your furnace inspected by a professional service. You should check and tune-up your furnace or heating system annually.

• Check insulation levels in the attic, walls and basement.

"To determine if insulation is in a wall, drill two small holes in an inconspicuous area in the wall (inside a kitchen cabinet, for example). Then shine a light in one of the holes and look in the other hole to see if you can see any insulation," Morrill suggests.

• Let the sunshine in. Open shades and curtains during the day to allow sunlight to warm the house. When you keep windows clean and remove screens for the winter, more sunlight comes into the house.

• Inspect ducts for leaks and use duct tape to seal if loose or leaky. If you don't wish to heat the area where ducts are located, consider insulating ducts.

"You don't want to heat an unfinished basement with leaking ducts; you want to heat other areas of the house," Morrill points out.

• Conduct an energy audit. "If last year's heating bills were high or you just moved in, call your local utility or state energy office about conducting an energy audit," Morrill advises. The audit will evaluate the energy performance of the house.

• Use window film or heavy drapes. During the winter, faulty windows can be blamed for nearly 25 percent of a home's heat loss. Heavy drapes can help insulate windows. Also, many companies sell plastic film that can be attached to windows to reduce drafts.

• Don't use kerosene heaters, which can cause a fire as well as diminish indoor air quality.

•Install a clocked thermostat. If you aren't going to be home during most of the day or would like to regulate when the furnace turns on and off, consider installing a clocked thermostat. You can program it to turn the heat on before you get out of bed and down when you are at work. It can turn up the heat again before you arrive home and down again at bedtime.

• Reduce waterbed energy. If you decide to run the waterbed heater, keep the bed made and place an insulating pad between the water bag and the sheets. This will keep heat from escaping during the day.

• Caulk and weatherstrip. Test your windows and doors for drafts. If you find one, caulk and/or weatherstrip the opening. Also check for air leaks in other areas, such as around the doors, dryer vent, electrical outlets and around ceiling fixtures. The Department of Energy reports that if every gas-heated home were properly caulked and weatherstripped, enough natural gas would be saved each year to heat about 4 million homes.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Volunteer Resource Center

• Coaches are needed for Youth Service basketball. The season begins in December.

• Army Community Service needs volunteers to assist in budget counseling and clerk-typists for the Family Member Employment Assistance Program.

• Santa's Castle needs volunteers to serve in leadership roles, to repair toys and to sort donated items.

• Fort Benning Red Cross needs course instructors and volunteers at the hospital and in the post library. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The Rape Crisis Intervention Program is looking for female volunteers. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• The National Infantry Museum needs volunteer tour guides and assistance in the Gift Shop. Tour guides can schedule volunteer time around their paid jobs or other activities. Training and child-care costs are provided.

• Several agencies need individuals to assist with clerical tasks. Some assignments will provide word processing and data base experience.

• Volunteers are needed in each housing area to assist community mayors. For more information, contact the housing area Community Life Center or the post Community Life Office.

•Fort Benning needs volunteer tae kwon do instructors for children ages 5 to 17 years. Individuals must have a black belt in tae kwon do.

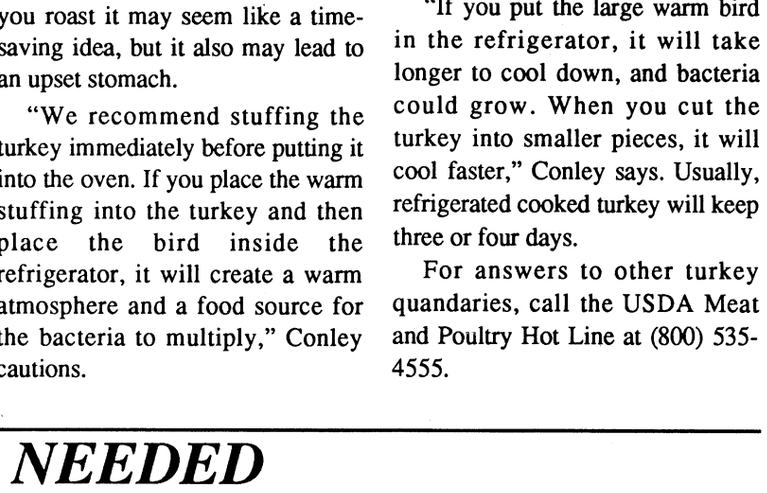
• Volunteers are needed in the Thrift Shop on Tuesdays and Thursdays and on the first Saturday of each month. Individuals will gain retail experience while helping others.

• Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Columbus need adults to share love, support and time with children from single-parent families. For more information, call Nick Holt at 327-3760.

• The Columbus Parks and Recreation Department needs volunteers to serve as tutors, mentors and coaches to work with youth. Individuals working in this program will serve as role models through their efforts in sports, education and recreational programs. For more information, call Nick Holt at 571-4975 or 571-4976.

• For more information about volunteering, call Kathy L. Case, installation volunteer coordinator, at 545-5602.

PET OF THE WEEK



Pfc. Sarah Clymer holds this week's pet, an orange and white domestic shorthair. The cat is female and around 13 weeks old. If you would like to adopt her or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Sand Hill offers variety

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Do you need some encouragement or inspiration?

Have you been separated not only from your family but from your community as well and need a replacement?

A variety of religious activities and programs are available throughout the Infantry Training Brigade at Sand Hill.

The Regimental Chapel, Building 3220, is the site of Jewish worship, Jewish religious education, Catholic Mass, Protestant worship, choir rehearsal, Bible study and Episcopal worship.

The Sand Hill Chapel, Building 3802, hosts the Seventh-Day Adventists on Saturdays, the Latter-Day Saints, Lutheran and the Samoan services on Sundays. The Samoan service is held in Samoan.

The Soldier's Chapel, Building 3420, provides a place for choir rehearsal, Protestant worship and Bible study on Sundays. At the 30th Reception Battalion, a Protestant worship service is each Sunday.

A Bible study, titled "Spiritual Fitness," is each Thursday. There is singing, praying and fellowship. Some of the topics discussed are: love, self-esteem, ethics, anxiety, thankfulness and citizenship.

"A small group named Alcoholics Anonymous meets weekly on Sundays at 10 a.m. at the Regimental Chapel," said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Kenneth Carpenter. "Anyone interested to attend is welcome."

" 'Operation Appreciation' buses soldiers to the First Baptist Church in Columbus on Saturday nights," Carpenter said.

"This program has been offered for 15 years and combines light entertainment, religious music with an opportunity for the soldiers to sing, share devotions and enjoy refreshments."

Some of the additional key programs involving chaplains and chaplain assistants at Sand Hill are company orientations, company graduations, family support seminars and special programs. The special programs conducted in the past include the Entertainment Company, Glenn Bannerman, Continental Singers, Covenant Players and Flash Back.

Carpenter is the Infantry Training Brigade staff chaplain. He and his wife, Joanna, and two college-aged children arrived at Fort Benning in August.

Previously, Carpenter was stationed at Fort Hood, Texas, as garrison chaplain and as chief, operations and Support at the III Corps Chaplains' Office.

For more information about chapel services at ITB, contact Carpenter at 544-9269.

Gabriele Sonnenberg

Large crowds of soldiers in training attend worship services Sundays at Theater No. 3, Building 3440.

CHAPEL NOTES

Catholic women's council — The Military Council of Catholic Women invites women to actively participate in the process of the Catholic Church and to share through eucharistic celebration, spiritual development programs and community activities.

The women meet the first Friday of the month at 9:30 a.m. at the Main Post Catholic Church. Baby-sitting is available at no charge.

For more information, contact Teresa Zepeda at 682-3918 or Jackie Place at 571-8883.

Menorah, Christmas tree lighting — A post-wide Menorah and Christmas tree lighting ceremony will be at the Field of Four Chaplains Dec. 15 at 6 p.m.

The event will include the Benning Belles, the Infantry Band and a visit by Santa Claus.

PWOC — The Protestant Women of the Chapel will meet Dec. 3. The theme will be "Peace in the Midst of Holiday Hustle." Worship and workshops begin at 9:30 a.m. and will last until 11:45 a.m. in Building 2521.

Free baby-sitting is provided in Building 2517. These buildings are located off Indianhead Road and Thorson Street.

For more information, contact Gwen Chandler at 682-5546 or Loree Smith at 685-0809.

Protestant youth — The Protestant Youth of the Chapel meet at 7 p.m. at the Infantry Center Chapel annex. The group provides food, fun and fellowship for all junior and senior high students.

For more information, call Chaplain (Maj.) Kerry Steedley at 545-2502.

PARTY — A program, titled "Personal Attitudes Relating to You," will be Dec. 5 and 19 at 1 to 3:15 p.m. at the Religious Education Center, Building 2522, located off Indianhead Road, behind the Quartermaster Laundry.

The program is for children 4 years through the sixth grade, and the theme for Saturday will be "Gift of Faith."

Parents may come and volunteers are needed. For more information, contact Margaret Alberici at 689-1164.

Officers fellowship — Officers Christian Fellowship offers all officers assigned to or visiting Fort Benning the opportunity to fellowship with other officers in pursuit of the message of Jesus Christ.

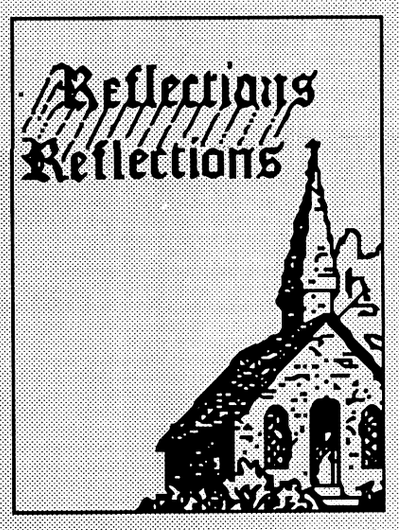
For more information, call Lt. Col. Richard Seim at 545-2745 (work) or 685-9475 (home).

Jewish fellowship — the Jewish Community Fellowship breakfast will be Dec. 3 at 6:30 a.m. at the Kelley Hill Chapel. The topic of discussion will be Hanukkah: the true story.

For more information, call Rabbi (Capt.) Arthur Rutberg at 544-9269.

Advent heralds Christmas

By Gabriele Sonnenberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office



Sunday will be the first Advent, indicating that Christmas is right around the corner.

Advent is a time for Christians to look forward to Christmas Day, the commemoration of Christ's birth on Earth.

Advent is the season before Christmas during which Christians anticipate the coming of the savior, Jesus Christ. It begins on the fourth Sunday before Christmas Day and extends through Christmas Eve.

Advent is a time for Christians to draw closer by sharing special activities of the season.

Some of the activities are reading from the Bible, saying a prayer and singing a hymn. One of the suggested Bible readings for Advent is:

"And in that region there were shepherds out in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night.

"And an angel of the Lord appeared to them, and the glory of the Lord shone around them, and they were filled with fear.

"And the angel said to them, 'Be not afraid; for behold I bring you good news of a great joy which will come to all the people; for to you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord.

"And this will be a sign for you: you will find a babe wrapped in swaddling cloths and lying in a manger.' And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, 'Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men with whom he is pleased.'" (Luke 2:8 through 14.)

The prayer can be as follows:

O, Lord make us ready and worthy to receive the joy of Jesus. May we open our hearts to welcome your glory. In the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, your son, who lives and reigns with you and the Holy Spirit, one God, forever and ever. Amen

A suggested hymn is as follows:

Joy to the World;
The Lord is come:
Let Earth receive her King,
Let every heart prepare Him room,
And heaven and nature sing,
And heaven and nature sing,
And heaven and nature sing,
And heaven, and heaven and nature sing.

Thanksgiving at a glance

Catholic - A Thanksgiving Mass will be celebrated at 10 a.m. at the Main Post Catholic Chapel Thursday.

Ecumenical - Thanksgiving Day services will be at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Infantry Center Chapel. Ecumenical services will also be at 10 a.m. Thursday at the Regimental Chapel, Sand Hill and at the Sightseeing Road Chapel at 11 a.m.

Protestant - A Thanksgiving Day service will be at 11 a.m. Thursday at the Kelley Hill Chapel.

Prayer rests on the fundamentals

By Kenneth V. Carpenter
Infantry Training Brigade

REFLECTION

Prayer is one of the most fundamental forms of spiritual exercise. It is the heart of religion and God-consciousness.

People pray, especially in times of trouble. It is interesting that one of the first things people will do in a crisis is pray.

A soldier in the Civil War was asked by an Army chaplain, "Do you ever pray?" He replied, "Sometimes. I prayed last Saturday night, when we were in that fight at Wagner. I guess everybody prayed there."

Prayer requires hands-on involvement. It cannot be learned from a book — it must be practiced constantly.

Here are a few principles about training effectively in prayer.

• First, prayer is about reverence and worship. The Lord's Prayer, which is an excellent training model, begins with "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name..."

• Second, prayer is about relationship. It has to do with getting to know God. It is communication and fellowship with a best friend.

Prayer allows people to cultivate this relationship, leads to a higher knowledge and spiritual insight. It is a way of intelligence open only to those who truly learn to pray.

Hallmark Hall of Fame presents 'An American Story'

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

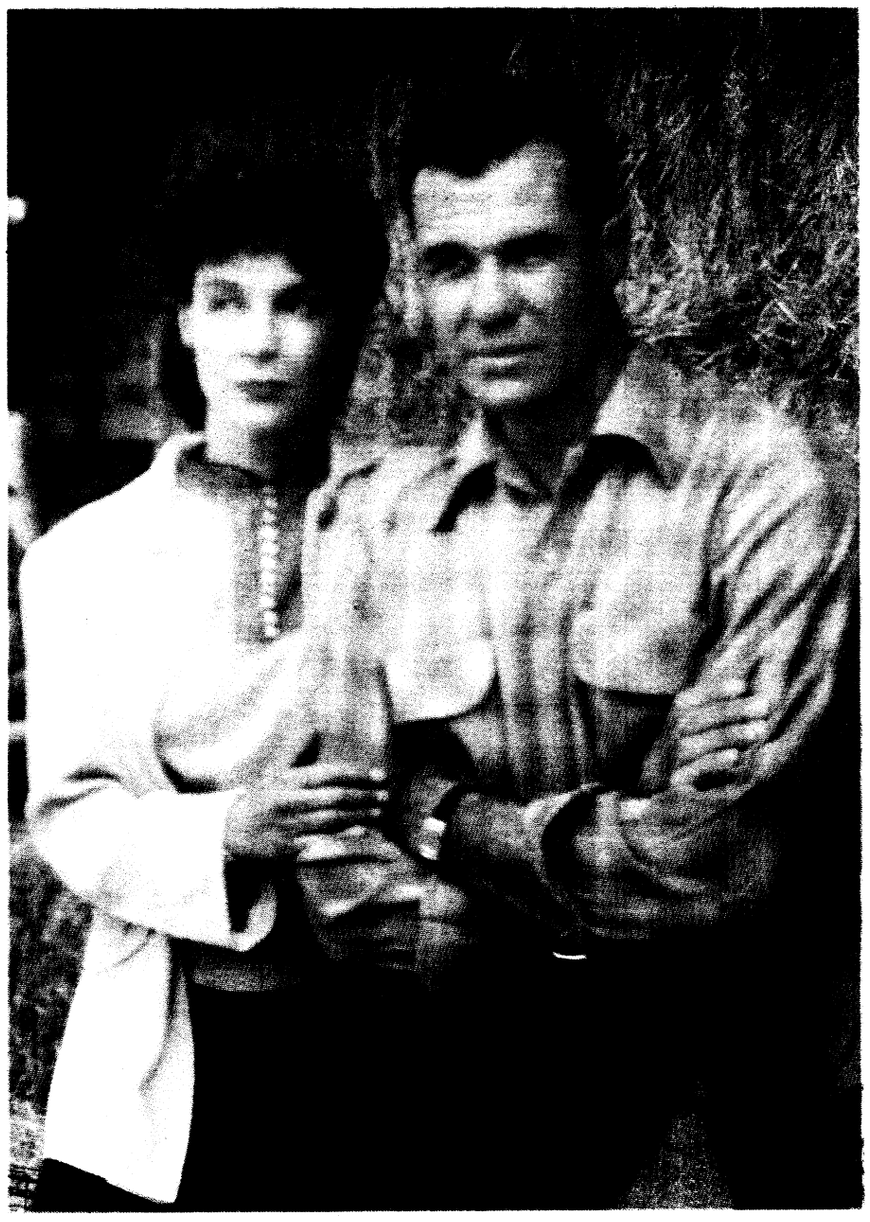
The acclaimed and much-honored "Hallmark Hall of Fame" series regales in presenting stories of personal triumph, and it's found yet another.

Airing Sunday on CBS, the new

SPOTLIGHT

drama "An American Story" casts Brad Johnson — seen previously in the movies "Always" and "Flight of the Intruder" — as George Meade, the commanding officer of a World War II military troop, who finds the same degree of disillusionment upon returning from Germany as the soldiers he led. Instead of coming back to their Texas town with a sense of glory and pride, the men of the 26th Division find themselves battling inner demons or ostracism from others ... but they soon develop another common bond when they learn of the corrupt activities of the local mayor (played by G.W. Bailey, of the "Police Academy" comedies) and his chief of police (John M. Jackson, previously a semi-regular on "Wiseguy"). The veterans decide to form their own political party to unseat the present government, though Meade hesitates to join in the campaign since he faces conflicting pressures from his wife (Patricia Clarkson) and father (Josef Sommer). Written and directed by John ("The Marla Hanson Story") Gray, the film also features Kathleen Quinlan, Tom ("Passenger 57") Sizemore and Lisa ("An Officer and a Gentleman") Blount.

Acknowledging that most of his screen work to date has involved very physical action, the pleasant, straight-talking Johnson deems "An American Story" to be "a traditional, dramatic and rather Capra-esque type of piece. I think it's important to try different things, although once again, I'm in uniform. I can't seem to get out of that, but I really liked this story. John Gray had a lot of good ideas, and we enjoy the same old films, the John Ford sort of old-fashioned project. Things like honor and standing up for what you think is right, whether it goes against the law or not, intrigue me. That's what (Gray) saw in this and wanted to make, and I was glad to come aboard."



Kathleen Quinlan and Brad Johnson

Though "An American Story" is set nearly a half-century in the past, Johnson recognizes the plot's relevance to modern times, since it's basically a David-and-Goliath parable of an underdog's seemingly foolhardy efforts to topple the reigning power ... particularly, in this case, in terms of government. "It's certainly an appropriate time for this," the actor reasons, "since it's a few weeks into the president-elect's (victory). It's great there was such a huge voter turnout, which shows that everybody's interested in what's going on in the country, or at least interested enough to actually cast the vote. I'm always saddened and disappointed by apathy, but there's clearly a re-ignition of (political) interest."

That has a very direct application in the case of Johnson's "American Story" character, whom he deems "a reluctant hero and a reluctant leader, but really, his destiny and his fate have already been chosen for him. When he first gets back from the war, his wife, his father and the mayor (have mapped it out); then, when things start to roll, the comrades he fought alongside have chosen it. He then makes the decision to go from there." Though Johnson is pleased to have participated in a venture backed by Hallmark, which has an esteemed tradition of quality programming, he adds that the new drama is "a little uncharacteristically dark and cynical for a Hallmark show especially the ending, but it still falls within their guidelines."

A former rodeo rider who entered the acting profession when he was hired as an extra in a beer commercial, Johnson agrees he has a certain appearance that has led him into a number of military-related roles, "but I would hope it's more an attitude or a feeling than it is a 'look.' You can't believe the number of scripts I get sent where the people behind them tell me, 'It's perfect for you, a real John Wayne character."' quite differently, citing "major, major battles" on the set between director John Emotionally, 1992 has been a rough year for Johnson, since death claimed both his mother and his sister (he recently became the adoptive father of

Wind ensemble to open season

Columbus College

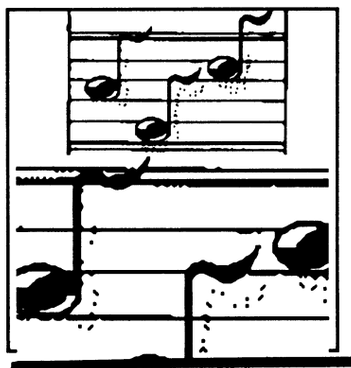
Columbus College's Symphonic Wind Ensemble will present the first concert of the 1992-93 season Monday at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Hall auditorium on campus.

Under the direction of Dr. William Fry, the Wind Ensemble will perform a wide variety of selections, beginning with "A Musical Toast" by Leonard Bernstein.

Following the Bernstein number will be "The Soaring Hawk" by American composer Timothy Mahr, Morton Gould's "Babi Yar," and "Wedding Dance" by Jacques Press will complete the first portion of the program.

A trumpet trio of students in "Parading the Brasses" by Anton Ostling will follow intermission, and Kathy Hesler, a graduate conducting student, will make her first appearance leading the ensemble in Vincent Persichetti's "Divertimento for Band."

The last two numbers on the program will be "La Procession Du Rocio" by Spanish composer Joaquin Turina, and "Armies of the Omnipresent Otserf" by American composer David Holsinger.



This will be the first concert of the Wind Ensemble under the direction of Fry, its new conductor. Formerly director of bands at Susquehanna (Pa.) University, Fry is a 1975 graduate of Columbus College. He received a master's degree in music education from Georgia State University and a doctoral degree in instrumental conducting from the University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

The premier performance by Fry and the Symphonic Wind Ensemble is free and open to the public.

For additional information, contact Columbus College's Schwob Department of Music at 568-2049.

Parks plan holiday events

Georgia State Parks

The ho-ho-holidays are fast approaching and Georgia's state parks and historic sites have special events planned to light up the season with fun.

The wide array of events planned for December include:

• Dec. 5, Hofwyl-Broadfield Plantation Historic near Brunswick will host "A Plantation Christmas" from 7 to 9 p.m.

A candlelight tour of the rice plantation home decorated with traditional greenery will be followed by a pinata swing for the kids and musical entertainment for the entire family.

The event costs $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for children 6 to 18 and is free for children under 6.

For more information, call Andy Beckman at (912) 264-9263 .

• Elijah Clark State Park presents a "Log Cabin Christmas" Dec. 5 from 6 until 9 p.m.

The event will include traditional Indian dances, campfires and storytelling.

Call Marc Toto at (706) 359-3458 for more information.

Holiday customs date back

Biltmore Estate

Many current Christmas traditions began in the 19th century, long before commercialization of the holiday created a season of shopping.

Here are some of the customs that are continued to be observed and how they began:

• Singing carols in the neighborhood probably began as an extension of "mumming," a tradition of holiday door-to-door revelry originating in Europe.

The majority of our modern Christmas carols date from the 19th century: "Hark, the Herald Angels sing" (adapted 1855); "O Little Town of Bethlehem" (1868); "We Three Kings of Orient Are" (1863). "The Twelve Days of Christmas" became popular in Appalachia with substitutions such as "Twelve fiddlers fiddling."

• The "father of the American Christmas card" was Louis Prang, who began producing lithographed cards in 1875. In 1880, he sponsored his first open competition for card design, with judges including Louis Tiffany and John LaFarge, whose stained glass is exhibited at Biltmore Estate.

• Perhaps no one did more to establish our current Christmas traditions than author Charles Dickens, who published "A Christmas Carol" in 1843.

Dickens was so closely associated with Christmas that when he died in 1870, legend has it that a young orphan on Drury Lane asked, "Dickens dead? Then, will Father Christmas die too?"

• "The Night Before Christmas" by Clement Clark Moore was first published in the Troy, N.Y., Sentinel in 1823.

• In 1851, the first American nativity play was performed in Boston by children dressed in Oriental costume. The children sang carols and delivered gifts for the poor to the church altar.

• In 1825, South Carolinian Joel Poinsett introduced the red "flower of the Holy Night" from Mexico (later called the poinsettia) to the United States.

• One of the most popular Christmas gift during the 1800s was the Christmas annual, a literary gift book which, in its various publication dates, included works by William Wordsworth; Samuel Taylor Coleridge; Alfred, Lord Tennyson; and American authors Washington Irving, James Fenimore Cooper, John Greenleaf Whittier, William Cullen Bryant and Oliver Wendell Holmes.

the latter's daughter). Nevertheless, he's now moving forward career-wise by making a science-fiction movie entitled "Night of the Phoenix," with a miniseries continuation of last season's CBS western movie "Ned Blessing" slated after that. Still, he maintains that establishing a career in acting was something he never anticipated. "I was never aiming for it," he states, "and I kept sidestepping it and not wanting to do it, but everything just pointed toward it. One day, I said to myself, 'Dummy, wake up. Maybe somebody's trying to tell you something.' Then, when I finally took a good look at it, I thought, 'I should've been doing this the whole time.'"

Post utilities center opens

One-stop facility allows soldiers easier transition

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

Fort Benning soldiers will save money, time and hassles when they start using the Utilities Coordination Center, which officially opened with a ribbon-cutting ceremony Tuesday in Building 2633 in Soldiers' Plaza.

The center is designed as a one-stop facility for soldiers to take care of their personal utilities needs, including gas, electric, water and telephone services.

"It will be a one-stop facility for all soldiers transferring to Fort Benning with good credit to get their gas, electricity, water and telephone without paying a deposit," said Ann Pratcher of the Consumer Affairs Division of Army Community Services.

Officials said Tuesday that the project has been in the works for many years, but it wasn't until recently that the plans were finalized.

"Six months ago, the wheels started rolling and now here we are," said Becky Carroll, chief of the Family Support Division of the Directorate of Community Activities.

Carroll said ACS is pleased to offer this service to soldiers to help ease the burden of setting up a new residence.

Brian C. Sutton

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, Fort Benning commanding general, said that the command cares about soldiers.

"We have to demonstrate to soldiers and their families that we are a first-rate organization, and we care about them," he said.

White further pointed out that with the drawdown affecting so many soldiers, the Army needs to further its efforts to keep soldiers happy.

The program currently includes participation by Southern Bell, Georgia Power, Columbus Water Works and United Cities Gas Company. The plan is hoped to be expanded in the future to include utility companies from Phenix City, and Chattahoochee, Lee and Russell counties.

Mike Hill of United Cities Gas Company was the guest speaker.

TRADOC cmdr. visits new battle lab

- Battle lab locations, A-3
- Fort Benning's lab, A-3

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Training and Doctrine Command Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. will spend today wrapping up his visit to Fort Benning's new Dismounted War-fighting Battle Lab.

The lab is the post's contribution to TRADOC's newest system for improving the Army's war-fighting capability — the battlefield laboratory.

Six battlefield laboratories, located at various posts, will determine the needs of the future fighting force through the integration of computer simulation, field testing and research and analysis, said Lt. Col. Arnold Canada, center director.

Franks said the battle lab concept is in part a direct result of the end of the Cold War, during which the United States could measure the strength of its armed forces by comparing them to the Soviet Union's.

"In the absence of that certainty and that measurement," said Franks in a recent video teleconference, "it seems to me that what we want to do is provide ourselves with what I call battle labs in order to do some experimentation to develop capabilities that either protect our vulnerabilities or help us continue to maintain the edge that we currently have on the battlefield."

Canada cited the changing battlefield as another factor in the development of the battle labs.

"In the future, we will need a more deployable and more lethal force that will enable us to win more quickly, more decisively and with greater survivability," said Canada. "Our forces will need to be lighter in order to move faster and more lethal in order to inflict maximum damage."

Franks said one of the outstanding benefits of the battle labs will be the ability to tap into the knowledge and experience of actual soldiers.

"We ought to be providing ourselves with the opportunity to experiment with where the battlefield appears to be changing, and to do that in a way that will tap into the great wisdom and what I call tactical savvy, 'battlefield smarts,' if you will, of our soldiers and noncommissioned officer and officer leadership."

This is why, Franks said, that the battle labs were carefully located at posts that would ensure maximum input from and testing by soldiers.

"That's why we located the battle labs where we've got real soldiers and real units, not test units, real units ... so we can tap into the great 'tactical street smarts'... they got off the recent battlefield," Franks said.

The battle labs will work to identify current deficiencies and how they can be repaired and also to identify technological advances that can be implemented in the mid- and long-term to give the Army a significant advantage.

"We want to develop the Army's capability to the point that no enemy that exists could ever possibly defeat us," Canada said. "We must maintain the capability to engage in warfare that will be quick and decisive and that will ensure maximum survivability of our forces."

Franks said the battle lab concept is another example of TRADOC's motto: "Where Tomorrow's Victories Begin."

"I think it's a great, exciting, different way to do business," said Franks. "I think it will ensure, if we do it right, that our Army learns its lessons and continues to maintain its edge on the future battlefield."

Fort Benning hosts high-level visitors

Military, civilians meet to discuss infantry doctrine

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The U.S. Army Infantry Center hosted a number of general officers and senior civilians who were here to receive briefings and observe demonstrations involving infantry doctrine from Monday until today.

Four major events were scheduled to take place during the week.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., commanding general of the Training and Doctrine Command, and other members of the senior Army leadership visited the Dismounted War-fighting Battle Laboratory and the Soldier Integrated Protective Ensemble test and demonstration.

Additionally, the Technology Base Executive Steering Committee conducted an executive level meeting with directors from the various U.S. Army research laboratories.

This committee is charged with reviewing the technology base that is applicable to the soldier systems under study and developing long-range direction and guidance.

The Army research community is deeply involved with many of the test items involved in the SIPE demonstration.

The 17th Quadripartite Working Group conducted a multinational conference with representatives from Australia, Britain, Canada, New Zealand and the United States discussing topics of mutual interest pertaining to infantry doctrine and combat developments. Participants viewed the SIPE test and evaluation.

Operation Holiday rescues soldiers

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

Each year Operation Holiday comes to the rescue of soldiers who have to spend the Christmas season on post, and this year is no exception.

Since 1980, Operation Holiday has offered soldiers a variety of free activities, including musical entertainment, tours of local attractions and tickets to college and professional sporting events.

Jim Gallagher, executive vice president, Association of the United States Army, said that this year is no exception, but that the activities planned for this holiday season will reflect the changing times.

"We have eliminated some of the less popular activities and worked with the Directorate of Community Activities to plan a lot more on-post activities," he said.

"We also relaxed the uniform requirement," said Gallagher. "In the past, soldiers were required to wear their Class A or Class B uniforms, but now they can wear appropriate civilian attire."

> "Operation Holiday continues to promote meaningful activities for soldiers who can't be with their families."
> —Jim Gallagher
> AUSA

Transportation to and from the various events will be provided, as well as the cost of admission; but, any additional items, such as refreshments at sporting events, must be paid for by the soldier, Gallagher said.

The list of events has not been finalized. Unit representatives will be given the final schedule when it is finished, and soldiers will be able to register through their units at that time. Space for many events is limited, so soldiers should sign up early, Gallagher said.

Gallagher also reminded soldiers that Operation Holiday is intended primarily for those who cannot go home for the holidays, who are separated from their families, or who have no transportation.

"There have been some misconceptions in the past," he said. "We just don't have unlimited tickets to pass out. Quotas are set for each of the units on post," he said.

Operation Holiday will kick off at 11 a.m. Dec. 18 with a ceremony at the Government Center in Columbus. Fort Benning commanders and Columbus and Phenix City officials are scheduled to attend.

Operation Holiday is sponsored by the Association of the United States Army and donations are made by individuals and organizations.

"Operation Holiday is not supported out of AUSA's general budget," Gallagher said. "It is supported entirely from donations and fund-raisers. The Columbus and Phenix City communities have always been extremely supportive and a great help."

"Operation Holiday continues to promote meaningful activities for soldiers who can't be with their families during the holiday period," he said.

Beware — the walls have ears

By Clyde Snively
Bayonet columnist

COMMENTARY

They say, "tell one person in the Infantry Hall cafeteria and you tell the world."

That might not be quite true, but it comes close to the truth. I do know that if you say a disparaging word about someone down there, it will get back to him or her at warp speed.

And the Infantry Hall cafeteria is probably not much different from any other public gathering place where there's no such thing as a "secret."

This is not a briefing on SAEDA (subversion and stuff by the bad guys directed against the Army), although it could be since one of their tenets is to keep the lips zipped when in public.

Instead, it's a reminder that even the walls have ears, that brigade tactics and the school solution to the war in Bosnia aren't the only topics discussed or listened to there.

A fellow specialist found this out the hard way. This soldier told another soldier that she thought she'd gotten a raw deal in her unit.

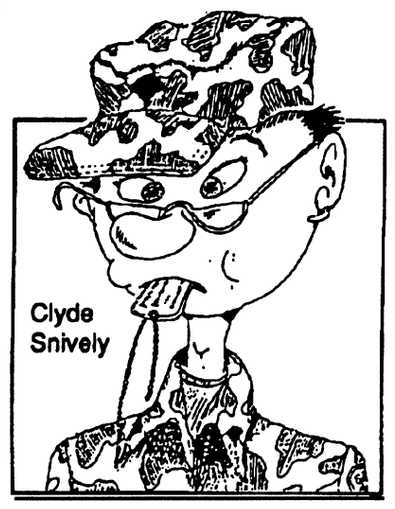
That person in turn told a friend and before you knew it, field grade officers and even sergeants major from the highest of highs were involved.

It was like Moses coming down from the mount and pointing a long bony finger at you and saying in a deep, grave voice "Specialist, you have sinned."

Who was right and who was wrong didn't matter anymore. On the one hand a soldier's reputation had been sullied, and the other soldier got to endure a very uncomfortable counseling session with at least one sergeant major.

As she was told, "You can never take back what you say." Then the parable of the rumormonger came out. Seems some gal went around spreading gossip about another woman. She later learned what she'd been saying was wrong and went to some wise dude to see how she could recant.

He told her to take a feather pillow to a bridge over the local river. She did. Next he told her to shake out all the feathers.



She did. It was a windy day and the feathers flew wide and far.

When she was finished, he next said to her, "Now go and pick them up."

"Why that's impossible," she protested.

"Yes," the wise guy said, "just as it's impossible to go to everyone who heard your gossip and set the record straight."

It's bad enough when soldiers defend their turf at the Hidden Door Club; it's worse when they knock fellow unit members around in the barracks. But, the gravest sin of all has got to be spreading rumors and lies about others.

Others I have trouble with, and I'm sure I'm not alone, are whiners and tattletales.

I thought when I left home, I wouldn't have to deal with, "Mommy, Clyde's not doing the yard work," or "Mommy, how come Clyde doesn't have to wash the car and I do?"

My revenge was to tell the younger brother, "It's because Mom loves me more than she loves you." This of course would elicit more protests and I'd just get into more hot water, but it was worth it.

I had a first sergeant who had an effective way of dealing with whiners and tattletales. He'd make the whiners do twice the work, often putting the person they were complaining about in charge of them.

That was what I called "enlightened leadership."

CG reminds post of DUI dangers

Traffic accidents cause more violent deaths in the United States than any other cause, more than 40,000 annually.

About 40 percent of fatally injured drivers have alcohol concentrations in their blood above the legal limit.

In Georgia, more than 200 people a day go to court for driving under the influence of alcohol.

Last fiscal year, 346 Fort Benning soldiers were ticketed for DUI.

Nationwide, nearly 70 Americans are killed daily in alcohol-related traffic accidents.

National Drunk Driving Awareness Week, Monday through Dec. 12, is designated to remind everyone of the dangers of drinking and driving and to offer workable alternatives.

I strongly endorse the goals of this campaign.

The penalties for drinking and driving not only include fines and imprisonment but also include injury, permanent disability and death.

These penalties can be completely avoided by some good planning. When you decide to attend a party or visit a bar, plan to:

• Return with someone sober driving (a designated driver).

• Return in a a taxi. (Safety Cab's telephone number is 323-0110.)

• Stay over at a friend's place.

Refrain from drinking any beer, wine or other alcoholic beverages if you are going to drive.

The only belt for the road is the seat belt.

Maj. Gen Jerry A White
Commanding general

Dec. is drunk driving prevention month

ADAPCP

Take a stand now. Drivers or pedestrians impaired by alcohol account for one death on U.S. highways every 22 minutes, adding up to about 20,000 lives lost in 1991.

This equates to 220,000 lives lost in a decade or almost a quarter of a million people. That is more than 60 deaths per day. About 12 of those who lose their lives are young people — those under 21 years old.

Additionaly, about three-quarters of a million people are injured in alcohol-related motor vehicle crashes annually. This equals the population of San Francisco. Coincidentally, an estimate of the total years of life lost this way comes out at around three-quarters of a million.

The prevention of alcohol abuse problems is a cooperative responsibility shared by each of us. Prevention efforts are ongoing and require the active participation of each of us.

We can become "preventers" in many ways — through our families, churches, schools, civic groups, informal social groups and company and unit parties.

Here are some suggestions:

• As concerned people, we can examine our own alcohol use behavior.

•As friends and relatives, we can tell people how we feel when they act inappropriately when drinking.

•As friends, we can encourage others to use any drug carefully and responsibly.

•As friends, we can listen and support each other in times of stress.

•As family members, we can create a home environment that allows our family members to communicate openly and honestly.

•As parents and teachers, we can model behavior we want our children and friends to follow.

•As parents and teachers, we can encourage and help our children to develop a feeling of self-worth.

• As parents and teachers, we can encourage and provide opportunities for our children to make decisions.

•As citizens, we can support and encourage our lawmakers to enact legislation that will reduce the likelihood of people developing or continuing chemical use problems.

We recognize the need, we see the directions we can go, we have some ways to get there. Each of us has a role — each of us has an impact.

Together we can be a powerful positive influence on the environment of our communities to allow and encourage the development of skills, which will enable each of us to make personally and socially responsible decisions about chemical and alcohol abuse.

Be the "life" of the party this holiday season; be a designated driver.

December is National Drunk and Drugged Driving Prevention Month. Help make this last month of the year the safest at Fort Benning.

Proclamation

Whereas, drivers and pedestrians impaired by alcohol and other drugs account for nearly 10,000 highway deaths annually; and

Whereas, motor vehicle crashes are the number one cause of death for children, adolescents and young adults in the United States; and

Whereas, alcohol is involved in nearly half of all traffic fatalities; and

Whereas, injury and property damage resulting from impaired driving cause physical, emotional and economic hardship for hundreds of thousands of adults and young people; and

Whereas, a decade of intense public education and effort has proved that alcohol related highway crashes are not accidents and can be prevented; and

Whereas, comprehensive community-based strategies to further reduce and prevent impaired driving tragedies are known; and

Whereas, if we take a stand now, we can prevent impaired driving;

Now, therefore, I, Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, do hereby proclaim December 1992 as National Drunk and Drugged Driving Prevention Month at Fort Benning. As the commanding general, I also call upon all citizens, government agencies, public and private institutions, businesses, hospitals and schools in our total military community to promote awareness of causes of driver impairment, existing and proposed laws intended to further reduce and prevent impaired driving, and opportunities to establish safer and healthier norms regarding the use of alcohol and other drugs for all citizens, particularly the young.

Benning's battle lab focuses on Army's dismounted elements

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©.

Fort Benning's new Dismounted War-fighting Battle Lab is one of the six battlefield laboratories established by Training and Doctrine Command to plan for the needs of the future fighting force.

The battle lab will focus on the dismounted elements of the battlefield, such as the infantry, said Lt. Col. Arnold Canada, lab director.

Officially established July 1, the lab is already involved in several major projects. One of the most elaborate is dubbed, "Owning the Night," and it involves the study and testing of equipment and tactics that will enhance the Army's night-fighting capability.

"Basically, we are comparing what the Army needs to what technology exists or will exist in the future," Canada said. "Night-vision equipment that is currently being developed has the potential of significantly increasing our combat effectiveness."

Testing began at the squad level and will continue all the way through the battalion level, including the addition of combat service and support elements, by August or September, Canada said. A simulated night fight involving helicopter attacks is scheduled for April.

"We hope to make developments that — whatever your role on the battlefield, whether you are a track driver, a dismounted infantryman, an aviator, or whatever — will truly increase the combat effectiveness and truly help integrate the various aspects of the combat force into a force capable of winning on the battlefield at night," said Canada.

Here are some other projects the lab will tackle:

• Improving target acquisition for the combined arms force.

• Improving indirect and direct fire capabilities.

• Increasing the survivability of soldiers through signature reduction, lighter equipment and improved communications through the use of sensors.

"We want to make soldiers truly bionic," Canada said. "We want to equip them with sensors that will provide the ability to pass information such as status, location and commands back and forth through the chain of command."

• Improved detection of biological agents.

One of the other major goals of the battle lab will be to consolidate all of the post's computer battle simulators into one central location on Main Post.

"We are working very closely with TRADOC headquarters to develop a state of the art warfare simulation center," said Canada.

"This will be far more than just a developmental facility for the battle lab," he added. "It will serve primarily as a training laboratory for actual units. New equipment and tactics will be tested through computer simulation."

The center will also provide a link with Fort Stewart, Ga., for interaction with the elements of the 24th Infantry Division, Canada said.

He said the entire center should be completed by 1995 or 1996, but that several of the elements will be in place by June.

The center will be located in the 2800 series buildings, which is already home to Simulation Networking.

TRADOC battle labs set new Army course

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

As the battlefield changes, so does the Army.

Training and Doctrine Command's new battlefield laboratories will use computer simulation, field testing and research and analysis to ensure future success on the battlefield, said Lt. Col. Arnold Canada, director of the post's Dismounted War-fighting Battle Lab.

Each battle lab is devoted to one of five major elements that TRADOC Commander Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr. believes will be the key to success on the future battlefield because they are the areas that appear to be changing.

Here is a list of the six battle labs and a brief description of what each does according to a recent TRADOC news release.

• The Dismounted War-fighting Battle Lab at Fort Benning and the Mounted Battle Space Laboratory at Fort Knox, Ky., will experiment with expanding the striking force of infantry and armored forces so enemy forces can be attacked from beyond their capabilities range.

• The Early Entry Battle Lab at Fort Monroe, Va., will work with the Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force to ensure quick and lethal initial entry into combat.

• The Depth and Simultaneous Attack Battle Lab at Fort Sill, Okla., will determine methods to attack the enemy at all depths and find ways to locate and destroy the enemy's intelligence capabilities.

• The Combat Service Support Battle Lab at Fort Lee, Va., will find ways to improve logistical support to combat forces.

• The Battle Command Laboratory at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., will seek means to improve the control that commanders at all levels have on the battlefield through providing them with more complete situational information.

MACH plans toy safety class

By Alfreta Gibson
Martin Army Community Hospital

Community Health Nursing of Preventive Medicine Activity will sponsor a Christmas Toy Safety Program today, Monday, Dec. 11 and 14, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Post Exchange at the Main Mall.

The program will focus on education and guidance in selecting appropriate toys, age/maturity and motor skills, safety accessories, inspecting toys, child proofing your home, storing toys safely, keeping older children's toys out of reach, supervising play, teaching safety to children, and heeding safety warnings.

Emphasis will be placed on the bright, colorful plants available at Christmas time because many of these plants are poisonous.

DeCA to kick off promos

Defense Commissary Agency

Two cause promotions and a national buy program to be held in commissaries during January and February have been approved by Headquarters, Defense Commissary Agency.

Six major manufacturers are sponsoring January's "Home Front" cause promotion. They are Campbell, Kellogg's, M&M Mars, Dial, Scott Paper and Best Foods. C. Lloyd Johnson Company Inc. will be the primary organizer of the sale.

The promotion is tied to Campbell Soup's Labels for Education program. Additionally, sponsoring manufacturers will fund a DeCA Scholarship Sweepstakes valued at $200,000.

January's program will feature products from Pillsbury, American Home Foods, Nabisco Biscuit, Johnson & Johnson and Proctor & Gamble.

"Salute to Women in the Military" and "Go for the Gold," two military-unique cause promotions, will be in February.

Monies generated from the "Salute to Women in the Military" will be donated to the Women in Military Service for America Memorial Fund. "Go for the Gold" will provide direct support to military athletes to cover expenses associated with their participation.

Manufacturers participating in the February events are First Brands, Kal Kan, M&M Mars, Pet, Uncle Ben's, Best Foods, Muellers, Dial, Kikkoman, Vlasic, Campbell, Mrs. Paul's Kellogg's, Nissin, Johnson & Johnson, Keebler and Warner-Lambert.

Industry sponsors are responsible for DeCA's role as a cause benefactor. For each special product purchased, a few cents is donated to the cause being promoted.

Shoppers benefit, also. Cents-off savings on products range from 10 percent to as much as 38 percent. Savings are increased when the shopper also uses a coupon to purchase an item.

As in the last fiscal year, the joint cooperative efforts of DeCA, industry and commissary customers, the families — active duty, retired and Reserve component — who fully utilize what has been termed "their second most important military benefit," have made the program successful, officials said.

POST BRIEFS

Army loosens its allotment policy

American Forces Information Service

In a move to ease military members' handling of their finances, the Defense Finance and Accounting Service loosened its allotment policy.

Fort Benning soldiers can now take advantage of this change, according to Theresa Foust, Personnel Administration Center finance liaison clerk for 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

Under the new system, members can request up to six discretionary allotments without any limitation as to whom payment is made as long as the allotment is within the limits of the law, said Navy Capt. Robert R. Bird, acting chief of the finance service's Military Pay Division. A discretionary allotment lets the individual earmark amounts for automatic payment of debts or bills, or for deposit to a financial institution.

"Soldiers just need to bring in as much information as they can about the account or person they want finance to send money to," said Foust. "The more fully informed they are, they are less likely to have a mistake.

With this change, members can send payments to investment firms and can pay their rent via allotment, Bird said. Service members may also make allotments for vehicle insurance, personal loans and payment of legal debts. This includes life insurance payments, child support, alimony and mortgage payments.

Officials limited allotments to six because 99 percent of all service members have six or fewer discretionary allotments. Those members who have more than six need not worry, said Bird. The allotments will continue to be paid. However, members in this category may not change the discretionary allotments until they drop to six. Changes will be handled on a case-by-case basis, Bird said; policy exceptions include changes in the mortgage payment and the receiver's name.

Another category of allotments is the nondiscretionary type, Bird added.

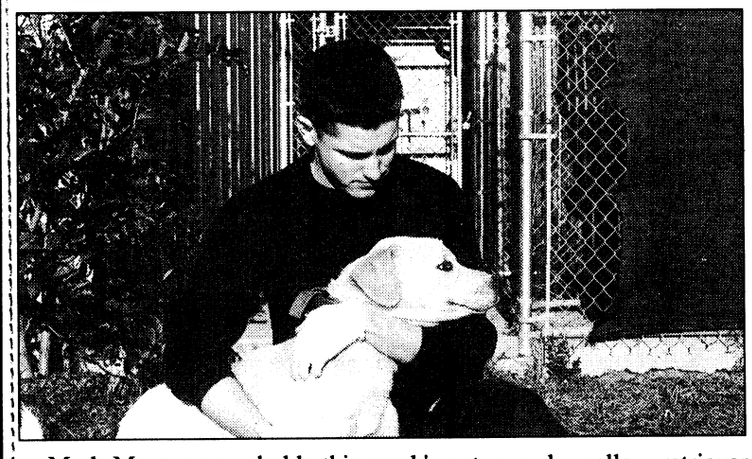
Nondiscretionary allotments are restricted to certain types of payments, including U.S. Savings Bonds, service relief loans, charity donations and Voluntary Education Assistance Program Payments.

There is no limit to nondiscretionary allotments, Said Bird, but there are certain restrictions. Members can have no more than one allotment for the Combined Federal Campaign and can purchase no more than $15,000 per year in U.S. Savings Bonds.

The service streamlined the allotment program into just two categories with these changes and opened the door for some previously denied ones, like investment firms, said Bird.

Fort Benning service members can get further details at installation finance and accounting offices and unit PACs.

PET OF THE WEEK



Mark Montgomery holds this week's pet, a male, yellow retriever which is approximtely one year old. If you would like to adopt him, or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Help others when you order Cable TV this holiday season.

Dear Neighbor:

With the holiday season upon us, I'm reminded of sixteenth century English clergyman Robert South who once said, "If there be any truer measure of a man than by what he does, it must be by what he gives." Though spoken long ago, South's words still ring true today.

At CVI, we're more than just a provider of Cable TV service. We're a friend in the communities we serve. Every year, in 18 states across the country, in towns similar to ours, CVI employees and customers join forces with local charitable organizations to help people in need. Together, we collect toys for children, canned goods for the homeless, money to help support athletic programs for the mentally retarded, and much more.

This holiday season please join us in the spirit of giving. Make a contribution toward our holiday drive and help those in our community who are less fortunate. When you do, we'll return the favor with a reduced-price installation.

Judy Deeter clips coupons.

ACS to begin coupon swap

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

People who want to learn how to stretch their dollars in a variety of ways may want to consider taking part in a new endeavor being put together by the Army Community Services Consumer Affairs and Financial Assistance Program.

According to Ann Pratcher, manager of the program, the effort will begin with the development of a coupon-swapping service to kick off Thursday upstairs in Building 2640 in Soldiers' Plaza from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m. Future meetings will be after the first of the year on all Thursdays before paydays.

Information about clipping coupons, categorizing them, then exchanging them on a regular basis will be the beginning of this consumer advocacy approach to help soldiers and their families make the most of their money, Pratcher said.

In the past, the office has been mostly reactive to existing problems, she said. This time they want to show people how to take control of their finances through consumer education.

Judy Deeter, volunteer consumer advocate with the program, is putting together the coupon swap.

She said the categories that will be used are: bread and dairy, beverages, condiments, side dishes, fruits, snacks, baking goods, breakfast foods, pets, cleaners, paper products, health (medicines), health and beauty, meats, frozen foods and miscellaneous.

What : Coupon swapping service

Where: ACS, Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2640 (upstairs)

When: Begins Thursday, 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Pratcher noted that other posts' ACS offices have been successful in using coupon swaps. Her office will be contacting individual units, chaplains, mayors, Community Life offices, wives clubs and family unit networks to get as many people involved as possible.

Anyone with a military identification is welcome to attend, Pratcher said.

"Many people from all ranks are coupon clippers," Deeter said, "but her target market will be young enlisted wives.

"I want to show them that homemakers can make a significant contribution to family finances even if they are not bringing in regular incomes," she added.

A former budget counselor at Fort Carson, Colo., she has been married for 18 years to Staff Sgt. Robert Deeter, Headquarters, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment. They have three children.

Working on a degree in accounting, she has experience in operating on a tight budget and knows the value of using coupons.

She said that last month she saved 10 1/2 percent of her grocery bill with coupons.

"I have learned by trial and error on my own," Deeter said. "I look to these sessions becoming sharing opportunities where we can learn together."

Other subjects to be addressed through presentations and discussion will include buying in bulk, using a shopping list and comparative shopping and saving at the Commissary.

"We want to give (people) a reason to come back and learn more," she said, "also, it will be a way to socialize for those who are new to the post."

Soldier gets award for heroics

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

A soldier, who came to the rescue of a school bus driver and some school children when a power line fell on the bus' hood, recently received recognition for his heroics.

Sgt. 1st Class Jose Morales, a drill sergeant for the 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment, received an award Nov. 24 from Fort Benning Superintendent of Schools Dr. Rolla Baumgartner.

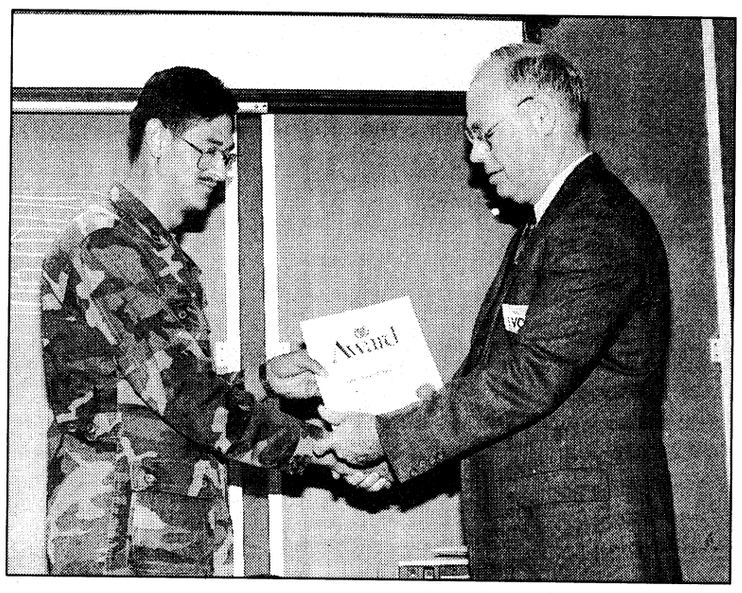
Morales said he was in the area after picking up his furniture from 210-A Arrowhead Road.

When the moving van behind him clipped the power cable, which then fell on the hood of Tammy Shier's school bus, Morales said he was one of the soldiers who stopped to help her.

He told two of the men who were with him to act as road guards while he knocked on the window of the bus and told Shier he would get the children safely away.

The cable was still sparking on the hood of the bus with the driver inside when Morales looked for a piece of wood or something to knock the wire free of the bus.

Finding nothing, he grabbed the wire with his hands and pulled it over the side of the bus.



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner presents Sgt. 1st Class Jose Morales with an award.

Morales said he felt his teeth snap shut from the force of the electricity, but he was afraid she would be electrocuted inside the bus, so he acted on impulse.

Once the bus moved ahead to a safe area, he guided the children back to the bus making sure everything was okay before he went back to his truck to turn in his furniture.

On Nov. 24, Baumgartner presented Morales with an award for his assistance.

"I noticed leaving that day that a number of the power lines in the area are low for moving vans," he said. "I'm just glad I was there to help."

Morales' battalion commander, Lt. Col. Mike Dykes, termed Morales a "good drill sergeant" and noted that it's great when his men receive recognition for things they do on and off the job.

Hunters face image problem

By Aaron Pass
PM Editorial Service

Being in the spotlight is not necessarily a good thing. If it casts too dark a shadow, a spotlight might become the headlight on the locomotive of public opinion. This is a fact American hunters are currently facing.

The "animal rights" movement, once dismissed as a group of extremists, has improved its image. Powerful and emotional messages against hunting are being presented to an increasingly urban populace that has little first-hand experience with the natural cycle of life and even less real knowledge of what hunters contribute to wildlife.

American hunters started the wildlife conservation movement at the turn of the century and have overwhelmingly financed it ever since. Such technical facts, however, seldom fit a 20-second television sound bite.

Also, hunters have an image problem — too often we do look like "goons with guns."

An honest and critical appraisal of our hunting ethics and approach now is needed. Soon, simply being "legal" may not be enough.

Every successful hunter is proud of his buck, but not everyone on the highway wants to see it lashed across the car hood.

COMMENTARY

Show respect for your game and for others' sensibilities.

The display of firearms intimidates and frightens some people. Even in hunting country, making a carload of nonhunting tourists feel like they might experience a B-movie plot doesn't help the hunters' image.

Our bewhiskered faces, muddy boots and hunting clothes drenched in deer scent make a strong impression in the local restaurants.

If shaking off society's shackles, including shaves and showers, contributes to your "rugged and manly" outdoor experience, fine. But keep your experience to times when you are either outdoors or by yourself.

Clean up before you go into town and inflict yourself on people who favor regular bathing.

Hunter safety is not just for kids. The world is getting more crowded and so are hunting areas. The veteran hunter who learned his craft almost alone can be dangerous in the modem woods.

In these recessionary times, state hunter-safety training programs could be a target for budget cuts.

Take the course and support your state's hunter safety program—it may be the future of hunting in America.

Hunter/landowner relations also are critical to hunting's future. Rural landowners control much of the hunting land in the country, and many are fed up with goons with guns.

Sure, it's the poachers and slobs who litter, cut fences and shoot up signs, gates, cows and family pets.

But, who forgot to close the gate that let a dairy herd out on the highway? Who trampled standing crops? Do you know what gunning a 4-wheel drive across a wet field does to the field? The farmer does.

Ask permission before entering private land. But remember, the farmer's tractor is his "office"—interruptions during critical planting and harvest times are not appreciated.

Call at a convenient time, present yourself as a safe and responsible person and say "thank you" in a tangible way.

On private land, you are the landowner's guest; on public land, you are the public's guest — act like one.

Gator center Jack Smith pulls down an offensive rebound.

Gators chomp Eagles

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

Basketball abounds at Harmony Church Field House. Units from 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division are in full swing. Here is a wrap-up of games played Monday night.

Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, 324th Support Battalion (Eagles) vs. Company A, 324th Spt. Bn. (Gators).

A ball-hawking Gator defense closed the net on the Eagles with a vise-like grip allowing the Eagle offense only 9 points in the first half on the way to a 53-19 drowning.

Larry Lark led the Gator offense with 18 points with Jack Smith and Marvin Smith each chipping in 9. Alfred Brown added 5.

The Eagle offense was led by Jeff Pettigrew with 7 points, and 4 points each from Cris Hurley and Nathaniel Faulk.

The Gator defense took control of the game early, leading 27-9 at the break. In the second half, the defense for the Gators switched to a man-to-man defense and a full-court press from time to time to thoroughly confuse the Eagle offense.

Gator center Jack Smith clogged up the middle anytime an Eagle player tried to drive to the hoop and pulled down numerous rebounds allowing the Gators the chance to get out and run the court.

Company B, 317th Engineer Battalion, (Bandits) vs. Headquarters and Headquarters Company 317th Eng. Bn. (Hurricanes).

Philip Towles hit two free throws with 20 seconds left on the clock to steal a win from the Hurricanes, 42-34. Preston Allen hit 11 points and teammates Donald Rogers and Jessie Allen added 10 each to pace the Bandit offense.

For the Hurricanes, Edward Jackson popped in 8 points with Reginald Anders adding 6. Sam Wills and Terrence Bandy each had 4 points.

The game was close throughout the evening with the Bandits holding a 3-point edge at halftime, 20-17. The Hurricanes could get no closer than 4 points late in the second half and watched a chance for a win slip away when Towles clinched the win with his two free throws for the final score of 42-34.

Heisman hunt heats up

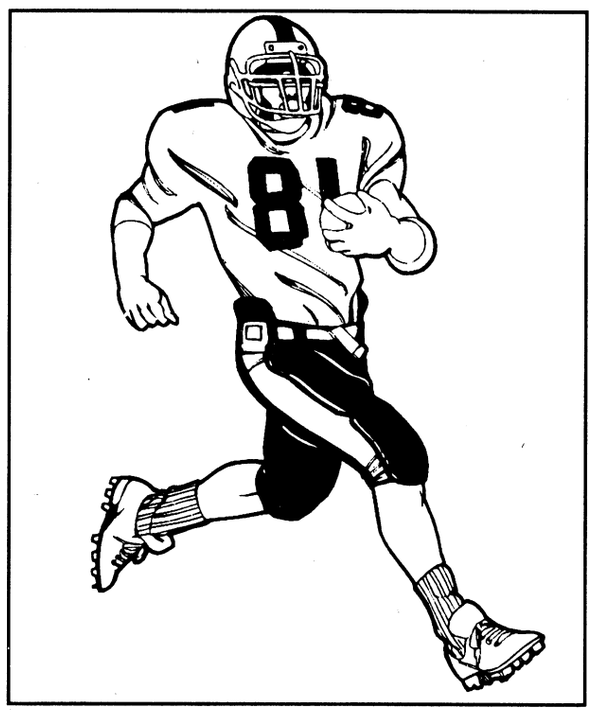
Gale Sayers
PM Editorial Services

A strange thing is happening on the way to this year's Heisman Trophy presentation. For once, the leading candidate to win the honor is not from some famous football powerhouse like Notre Dame or the University of Southern California.

While those two schools together seem to have won half of the Heismans ever awarded — some would say the other half must be at Ohio State — this season's front-runner is from San Diego State University.

San Diego State? Yes, San Diego State. Running back Marshall Faulk led the nation in rushing and scoring last season, his freshman year at San Diego. This is true despite the fact that he missed three games. He's been piling up the yards again this year and is getting the kind of national exposure it takes to win college football's most prestigious award.

I think it's great that a player from a supposed "no-name" school now is the odds-on favorite to take the Heisman. Because it really is about football and not about public relations.



For too long, the Heisman has been the domain of schools with great players and great sports information directors, the individuals in charge of alerting the media about the Heisman-worthy accomplish-ments of their schools' players.

While I still don't think we'll ever see the Heisman awarded to a star lineman or linebacker, the fact that Faulk is a serious contender shows an opening in the system that' s been needed for a long time.

Of course, Faulk will have to [illegible] the most of the national spotlight whenever it shines on him.

I'm not writing off any of the other top candidates for the trophy. Certainly Rick Mirer and Jerome Bettis of Notre Dame will be crossing their fingers on the day the Heisman is awarded. Who knows what the old Notre Dame magic can do.

University of Florida quarterback Shane Matthews also is a real contender to take the trophy.

My point is that, for the first time in recent memory, the center of the Heisman attention is not from some time-honored football power.

How many times did you ever hear San Diego State mentioned before Faulk came along? To me, he seems to be the most exciting offensive player in college football today.

It's about time a player from a lesser-known school is taken seriously in Heisman balloting.

Make no mistake. The sports publicity machinery at schools like Notre Dame will have a bearing on voting for this year's Heisman winner. But Faulk may show up that machinery with pure ability.

Fort Benning Schools

Mark your calendars. The 14th annual Faith Holiday Race is set for Saturday.

This event, conducted by the Faith School Physical Education Department, is open to everyone. Students, parents, teachers, and members of the Fort Benning and surrounding communities are invited to participate. Entire families can run the race together.

Each year 500 to 1,100 runners participated in the race. This race began 14 years ago as an outgrowth of Faith Physical Education Program and the Faith Jogging Club, which had been formed in 1978.

Faith's Jogging Club is still going strong with students training with relays and extended runs two days a week after school.

All proceeds from the race go to the Faith School's Physical Education Program to provide additional equipment and incentive awards for students.

The Faith Race is made up of three different races that begin and end at Faith Middle School at 1375 Ingersol St.

The one-mile race for boys and girls 14 years old and under begins at 8:30 a.m. The two-mile race, open to all age categories, begins at 9:15 a.m. The five-mile race, also open to all age categories, begins at 10 a.m.

T-shirts will be presented to all finishers and awards will be presented in each category at the awards ceremony in the Faith School gym.

Pre-registration for 14-year-olds and under is $4 and for 15 and over $6.

Race Day registration begins at 7:30 a.m. with fees of $5 for 14 and under and $7 for 15 and over runners.

Refreshments of fruit and soft drinks will be available.

For more information, call physical education teacher, Susan Emerson at 545-5524.

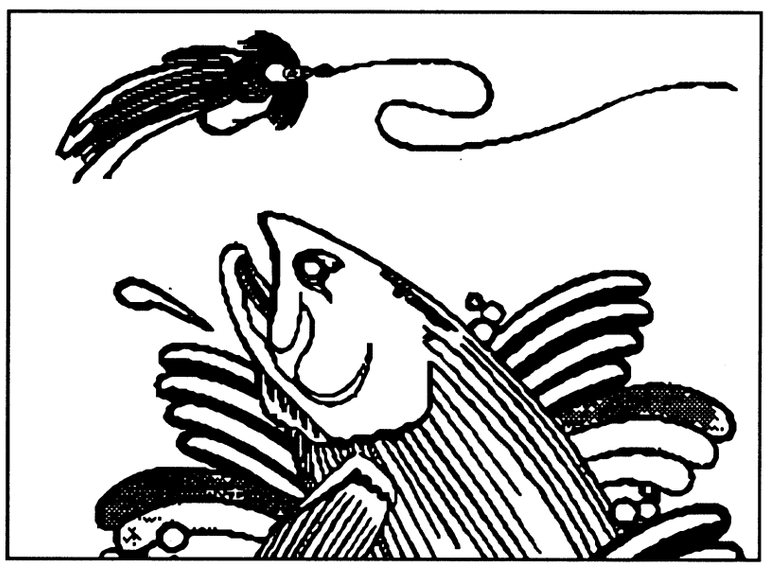
'Magic lure' helps fall fishers

By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation



Fishermen everywhere continually search for a magic lure that will catch bass and other species. For the coming months of autumn, there is just such a lure, according to well-known bass tournament pro Denny Brauer.

It's a topwater popping plug with a floating jig tied behind.

"I've used this lure many, many times on the Lake of the Ozarks where I live," says Brauer, a member of the Evinrude Outboards pro staff and runner-up in this year's Bass Masters Classic world championship. "It catches largemouths, spotted bass, white bass, and even stripers."

The lure Brauer likes is a small topwater popping plug with a concave face. When the lure is jerked, it pops noisily across the surface and displaces a lot of water

Using a 12 to 15-inch length of monofilament line, Brauer ties a small bucktail jig to the rear split-ring of the plug; this jig dances erratically behind the lure and catches many of the fish.

"Most anglers think this is just a lure for white bass," says the Evinrude pro, "but it really catches a lot of largemouths this time of year.

"I like to use it around windy points and bluffs where baitfish may be concentrated because the lure really does imitate an injured shad. A lot of bass hit the jig, but I've caught some nice fish on the lure itself, too."

The popping plug jig lure is best fished with a steady jerking motion so the plug continually pops and gurgles its way over the surface, says Brauer. This causes the trailing jig to rise, fall and jump from side to side. Some fishermen even tie two jigs on the leader to increase their chances for hook-ups.

"Saltwater anglers often use a variation of this lure for speckled trout," explains Brauer. "Instead of using a popping plug, they substitute a large popping cork. The result is the same: the cork makes noise and moves water to gain the attention of the fish, and the trailing jig catches them."

Because the plug and trailing jig is somewhat awkward to cast, Brauer suggests using at least a seven-foot rod. The extra length not only sends the lure out further, it also makes setting the hook easier.

"I have been as guilty as anyone in searching for a magic lure," laughs Brauer, "and I have a tackle box full of strange and unusual plugs to prove it. This simple topwater plug and jig combination is as close as I've come to finding a magic lure, especially at this time of year."

SPORTS SHORTS

Christmas smoker — Third Brigade, 24th Infantry Division will host a Christmas Boxing Smoker Dec. 17.

The boxing smoker will be at 6 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Physical Fitness Center, with an all-novice boxing team from Fort Benning competing against an all-novice team from Fort Gordon, Ga.

Fort Benning's team is open to all units on the installation.

Advent celebrates Christ

Lewis Williams
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Advent is a season filled with longing within the Christian church.

During Advent, Christians remember with longing the first coming of Christ.

It is also a time of celebration as Christians remember special event of so many centuries ago and celebrate divine intervention in the life of the human race.

REFLECTION

Advent is the story of God's love for the world — sending his son Jesus Christ that all might celebrate life in abundance.

Advent is also a season filled with expectation for the future. In anticipation of Christ's coming again, Christians emphasize the message of hope, the message of peace, and the message of God's reconciliation with all human life.

During this special season of Advent, may people be challenged to rethink the coming of Christ for their lives and the lives of their families.

May each person's journey of faith lead to the true meaning of Christmas and the hope and peace shared by all Christians.

Mass of Immaculate Conception honors the grace given the Virgin

By Michael J. Travaglione
School of the Americas

At the beginning of the eighth century, a feast celebrating St. Anne's conception of Mary began. In the ninth century, the feast was celebrated at Naples; and, a century later, it began to spread from there.

It was still an optional feast, and the emphasis was on the special favor God gave to Anne for conceiving after so many years of barrenness. The celebration had no further dogmatic dimension.

In about the 11th century, the feast became widespread in the West.

In the course of time, the celebration began to take on a greater solemnity and, above all, a new doctrinal meaning. Following a great deal of discussion in theological schools, clarification was gradually achieved on the special privilege the Blessed Virgin had received of being preserved free from original sin.

It was only in 1854, however, that Pope Pius IX proclaimed the dogma of the Immaculate Conception.

The prayers and preface of the Mass of the Immaculate Conception bring out the essential content of the dogma: the fact that the Virgin was preserved from original sin by prevenient grace and thus prepared to be a worthy mother for God's son.

The preface also sees the Immaculate Virgin as prefiguring the Church, Christ's beautiful bride that is without spot or wrinkle.

We have recourse to Mary's intercession because she was chosen in a unique way from among all women and because she intervenes in behalf of God's people, for whom she is a figure of ideal holiness.

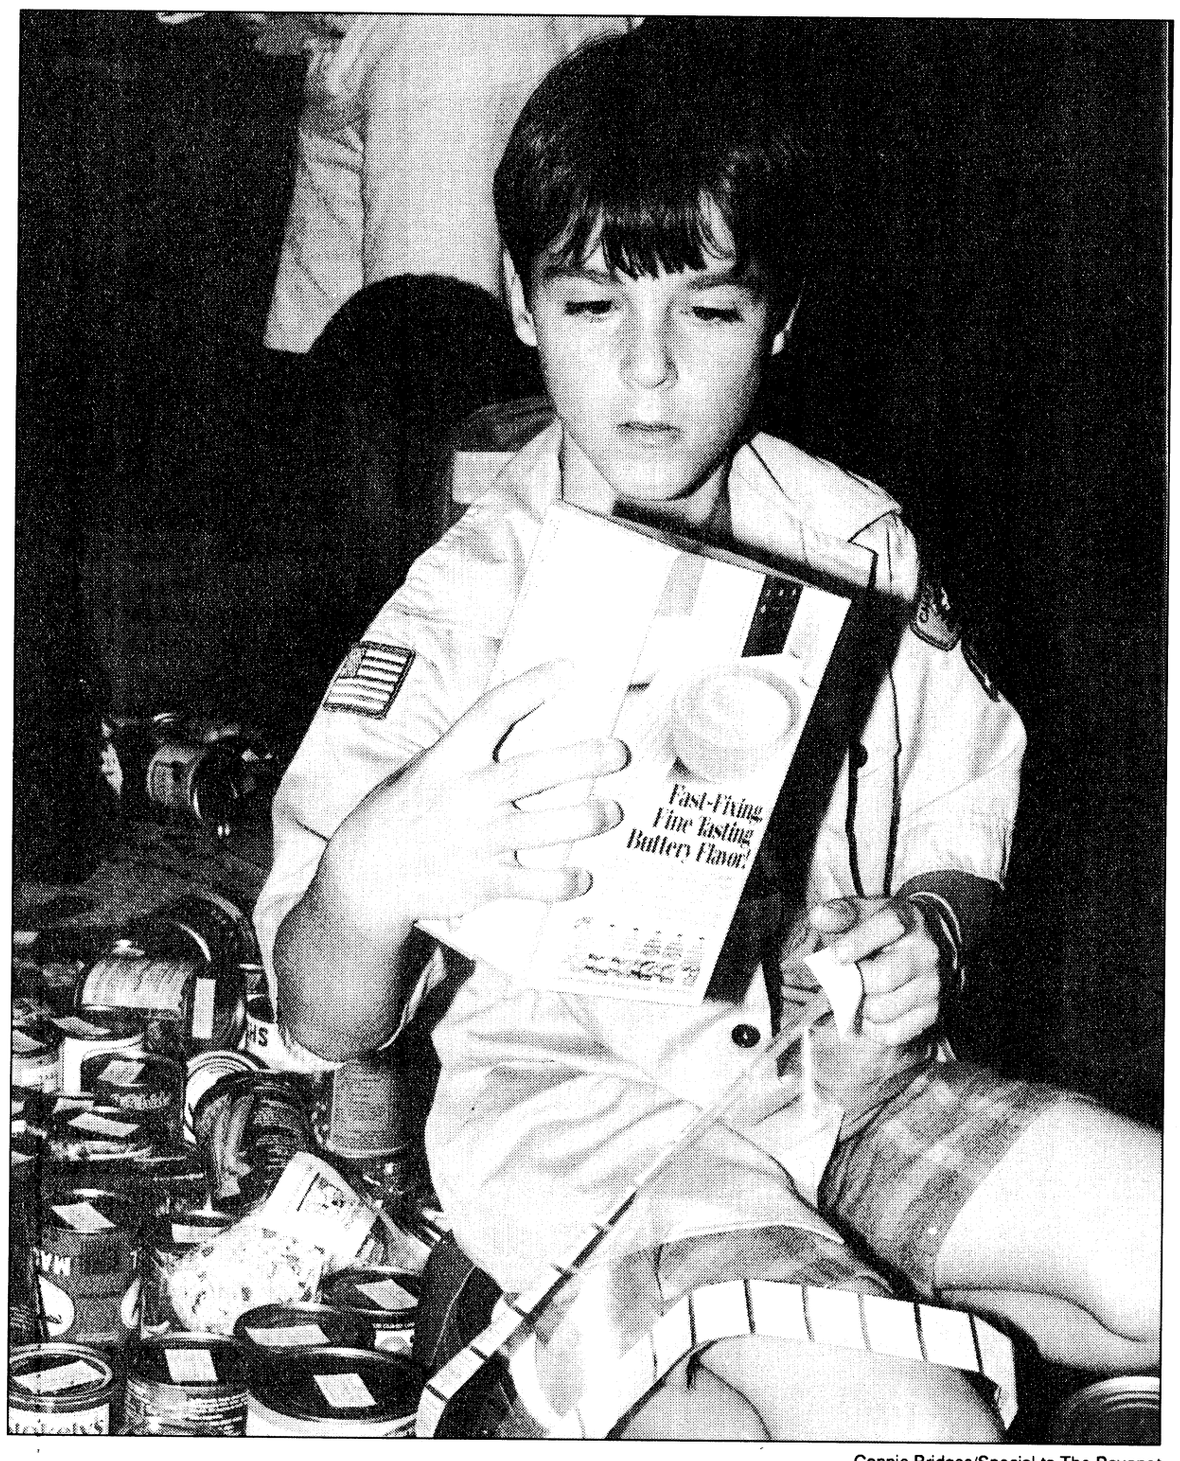
Scouts 'scout' for food



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

A scout puts stickers on a box of food collected in the drive.

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

A total of 17 scout units collected about 7,000 food items Nov. 21 while "Scouting for Food" for the needy on post, according to Dean Sims, Fort Benning Scouts district director.

Sims said all the food collected on post and some from South Columbus is brought to the Food Locker.

"It all will be used up by the end of the year," he said.

The Food Locker in Building 2642 helps families having financial problems by giving them two to three days worth of food.

Alfonso Deane, Army Emergency Relief officer, pointed out that the most common reason soldiers seek help from the Food Locker is that they have just moved to Fort Benning and because of advance pay for the move, or casual pay taken, they find themselves one payday with "no pay due."

Deane said that just by showing a military identification card and filling out a form, soldiers can receive help with food the first time they come to the Food Locker. After that, they must go through their units and have a referral from their company commanders.

Following the Scouting for Food collection Nov. 21, Sims added that the Cub Scouts and Boy Scouts also brought the food into the Food Locker, put on "Scouting for Food" stickers, separated it and put it on the shelves ready for use.

Assisting the scouts at the Food Locker were members of the 29th Infantry Regiment and the South Columbus Kiwanis Club.

Cherokee natives highlight events at Uchee Creek Recreation Area

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The Directorate of Logistics Maintenance Division conducted Organization Day festivities Nov. 20 at Uchee Creek Recreation Area.

Eddy Ensly and Robert Herman, both of Cherokee Indian descent, gave the invocation and conducted a peace pipe ceremony for the 300 who attended the event.

Ensly said although his Cherokee grandparents couldn't read or write, they were the most intelligent people he has ever known about things that really matter. They taught him some of their chants and dances.

He said the Uchee Indians, for whom the recreation center was named, also had a number of festivals, one of which was for the purpose of reconciliation and seeing life through the eyes of another person.

It was appropriate, he said, that this day of celebration for the meeting of two cultures take place on one of the staging grounds where the Uchee were removed from their land and sent to a land they did not know.

Ensly added that the Uchee were not warlike, and he was not bitter about the things that had happened in the past because he was a product of the meeting of two cultures. Rather, he wished the event to be a day of awareness about what has happened in the past.

With a "Native American" theme, the celebration also included a traditional Thanksgiving dinner menu, prepared by 12th Street Catering, an Indian dance ceremony conducted by three Boy Scouts from Order of the Arrow and door prizes.

The three scouts who took part in the entertainment were Kevin Knopf and Bryan Stokes of Troop 107 and Bucky Tuthill of Explorer Post 107.

Organizing the event was a committee headed by Vic Prophet and Vanessa Green.

Prophet said the theme was selected because 1992 was declared by Congress to be the "Year of the American Indian."

Wilson soldiers' breakfast gives parents encouragement to visit

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

During a recent breakfast at Richard G. Wilson School, Col. Greg Camp, commander of the 29th Infantry Regiment, told parents he has visited every school and classroom in the system.

"We can be proud of the schools we have at Fort Benning," he said, "and by your very presence here today, you show that your children's education is important to you."

Camp called parental support one of three legs in a triangle that put together a good education.

The other two, he said, are a quality school system "blessed with good leadership," and individual children who come to school prepared, dedicated and ready to take advantage of what school has to offer. Parents often cannot come to school events due to their jobs.

GARRISON HIGHLIGHTS

Santa to visit YA

Santa will be at Youth Services Dec. 16 and 17 from 3 to 6 p.m. Parents can bring their children to sit on Santa's knee and tell him what they wish for Christmas.

Publications reduces operating hours, days

Post publications has changed hours as a result of reduced manpower resources.

Hours of operation will be 8 a.m to noon, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, and will be closed each Wednesday. Emergencies will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

Units must monitor oil levels of collection tanks

Units are reminded that oil collection tanks, from oil/water separators that are part of vehicle wash racks, must be monitored daily to determine oil levels.

When tanks are three-quarters full, units must contact Charles Sanders at 545-4749 or 545-4232 to have waste oil pumped.

Monitoring is a manual process requiring the units to verify the level of the oil either visually or by stick measure.

If the oil tanks are filled too much, an oil spill could result, which is a direct violation of the Clean Water Act.

Units will be responsible for the subsequent cleanup and disposal costs. The cost for disposal is $1.85 per pound. For more information, call 545-4749 or 545-4232.

TSC sets up schedules for taking official photos

The Training Support Center has implemented an appointment system for Department of the Army photographs.

Custer Terrace announces holiday schedule of events

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

The Custer Terrace community has planned a number of activities to help spread Christmas cheer this holiday season, according to Diane Winon, Custer Terrace mayor.

Saturday to Dec. 13, the Community Life Office at Custer Terrace will provide Christmas wrapping service next to the Post Office and Shoppette from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Winon said that Boy Scouts will be selling Christmas trees to add to the holiday spirit today through Sunday in front of the Shoppette with the following schedule:

- Today — 3 p.m. to 9 p.m.
- Saturday — 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.
- Sunday — 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Girl Scouts will be selling 1993 calendars to carry the holiday spirit throughout the year, she said. They will be in front of the Shoppette Saturday and Sunday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Santa Claus will be on hand at the Community Life Office Saturday to Wednesday based on the availability of volunteers to help with this, Winon said.

Finally, Winon said that the Army and Air Force Exchange Service will sponsor a hot dog and sausage sale Saturday and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. to 8 p.m.

VIP program gets parents involved with school

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"My son went from needing remedial classes to the A-B Honor Roll, and I thank God we live in Custer Terrace so he was assigned to Wilbur. I give the credit to the Very Involved Parent Program."

Hope Wells said this of her son, DeAngelo, and the VIP Program that began at William H. Wilbur School in September to allow parents to see and take part in the classroom and to let students know that parents think school is important.

A special celebration to mark the end of this quarter on "Self Esteem" was Nov. 18, and Wells led Kris Clemons' third-grade class in a rap from the social studies curriculum on feeling good about yourself.

"We teachers are excited about having you parents in the classroom," Clemons said. "The students are proud you're there, too."

Principal Gail Wilson said that participation has ranged from 38 to 96 parents on various Wednesdays, when parents visit from 9 to 10:10 a.m.

According to Dr. Ida Graham, Wilbur counselor, about 50 percent of the parents have come at one time or another during the quarter.

Dr. Rolla Baumgartner, Fort Benning Schools superintendent, applauded the Wilbur staff and the commanders who make it easier for soldiers to attend on Wednesdays, for making the program a success.

He then challenged those present to encourage other parents to take part in upcoming quarters.

The focus during the second quarter will be math, language arts in the third quarter and science and social studies for the fourth quarter.

Darby Queen

IOBC students measure their confidence on obstacle course

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Every Infantry Officer Basic Course student must meet her. She will test and evaluate each of them impartially, as she does for the ranger students. She is challenging, but fair, and those who meet her sometimes develop a respectful affection for her.

She is the Darby Queen, and she is an experience most who face her will never forget.

"We incorporated the Darby Queen confidence course over the summer," said Capt. David Tafares, assistant operations officer for 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment.

"The course is valuable for IOBC students because it helps develop confidence, it takes stamina, it uses all the muscles and, since the students go through it with a buddy, it develops teamwork," Tafares said. "The confidence course also breaks up the routine of regular physical training — it's a change from push-ups, sit-ups and running."

When the lieutenants complete the more than 20 obstacles (with flutter kicks and push-ups in the intervals) contained in the Darby Queen, Tafares said, some like it, most are challenged and all are tired.

"I did the Darby Queen in Ranger School, and I thought it was fun compared to the rest of what we did in that school," said Tafares. "The students we have now who go on to Ranger School say the Darby Queen helps them get conditioned. It's definitely one of the highlights of IOBC."

Spanish infantry cadets meet an American queen

When Infantry Officer Basic Course class 10-92 ran the Darby Queen recently, some participants had language barriers as well as obstacles to overcome.

Four Spanish cadets from the Academia de Infanteria in Toledo, Spain, who were here to observe American infantry training, participated in the event along with Infantry Officer Basic Course students in their 10th week.

Cadets (second lieutenants) Jose Antonio Lopez Valenzuela, Carlos Miragall Prieto, Andres Gonzalez Alverado and Jose Maria Pascual Orbe, along with Capt. Javier Gallego Garcia Lorenzana, also participated in squad automatic weapon training and observed bayonet training, demolitions and the Leaders' Reaction Course.

"The reaction course was very interesting," Lorenzana said. "At the academy, we have five years to observe the students' leadership reactions in various situations. Here, they have 16 weeks, and the pace is very accelerated."

Lorenzana added that the Leaders' Reaction Course was one aspect of American training that he would like to see applied in Spain.

"Other than that, your training is very much like ours," Lorenzana said. "Infantry training is pretty much the same in all armies. America has more money and more mechanized equipment, so you are able to do more things in your training."

Lorenzana explained that at the academy, students attend for five years, combining the equivalent of America's U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. and infantry officer training into one course of study.

"After graduating from the academy, we are promoted to first lieutenants," Alverado said. "Then, depending on assignment, we may go on to more advanced training — parachute, mechanized or something like that."

The four students agreed the visit had been worthwhile.

"Everyone has been very kind to us," Alverado said. "We've been very well treated, and people have given us all the information we have needed."

"It's been a good experience," Lorenzana said. "We've picked up some ideas we can use for our drills, and some new training methods we can apply at home."

The cadets met and mastered the queen in good time, Tafares said.

29th competes for award

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

Soldiers and noncommissioned officers from the 1st and 2nd battalions and Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 29th Infantry Regiment competed in the Fifth Annual Pioneer Leadership Award competition from Sept. 22 to Nov. 3.

The competition started with 19 enlisted soldiers and 24 noncommissioned officers from the 29th Infantry Regiment. The soldiers in the competition were recommended by their company commanders and first sergeants.

Final recommendations were made by the battalion commanders and command sergeants major. Following these recommendations, applications were submitted to the Pioneer Leadership Award Committee headed by Command Sgt. Maj. Vincente Mesa, command sergeant major of the 29th Infantry Regiment, for final approval.

Soldiers competed in many different events designed to test their overall military knowledge and skill. The events were graded on a 100-point scoring system.

Events included the Army physical fitness test, M-16 qualification, a 500-word written biography, a 50-question written test of soldiers common tasks and a drill and ceremony competition in which the soldiers led a platoon- or squad-sized element. The final events included a six-mile road march that had to be completed within 90 minutes or less. Each soldier also had to go before a board and answer questions on topics encompassing basic soldiering, current events and the heritage and history of the 29th Infantry Regiment.

The competition was designed to test each soldier's physical fitness and mental toughness, military knowledge, competence and military bearing. Soldiers were eliminated if not able to score better than 70 percent in any event. At the competition, only five of the 19 enlisted soldiers and five of the 24 noncommissioned officers remained.

These soldiers' overall scores were finally evaluated by the committee, which consisted of Col. Gregory Camp, commander of the 29th Inf. Regt., Mesa, Command Sgt. Maj. Riley Miller of the 1st Bn., Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent Sampson the 2nd Bn., Sgt. Maj. Jerome King of HHC, 29th Inf. Regt., Master Sgt. Carlton Cribb, of HHC, 29th Inf. Regt., 1st Sgt. Gradey Snell of HHC, 29th Inf. Regt., Staff Sgt. Michael Carter of the 2nd Bn. and Sgt. Michael Gustafson of the 1st Bn.

The ten soldiers who completed the competition are: From 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.; Sgt. 1st Class Lawrence Davis, Bradley Instructor Company; Staff Sgt. Dock Newell, Co. B; Sgt. Michael Cox, Co. A; Sgt. Charles Ruehl, Co. C, Spc. Randell Patches, Co. B, Spc. James Shedden, Co. D and Spc. Thomas Moore, Co. C. From 2nd Bn., 29th Inf Regt.; Staff Ssg. Dennis Nichols, Co. C, Spc. Victor Tse, Co. B and Spc. Charles Potter from HHC.

An awards ceremony and luncheon was at the Main NCO Club Nov. 20 in honor of Patches, the enlisted soldier winner, and Ruehl, the noncommissioned officer winner.

3/32 changes command

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry, Infantry Training Brigade, U.S. Army Infantry School, changed commanders Thursday during a 10 a.m. ceremony on Wetherby Field.

Lt. Col. Kenneth M. Obermeyer took command from Lt. Col. John N. Dykes.

Obermeyer is a graduate of Kansas State College and received an ROTC commission in 1974 as an infantry officer.

He has served in a number of command and staff positions both in the United States and overseas, including command of an infantry company in the 5th Infantry Division at Fort Polk, La.

He was assigned to the "Tiger Brigade," 2nd Armor Division, during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

He and his wife, Kathryn, have five children.

Dykes is being reassigned to the U.S. Army Infantry Center's Inspector General's office.

He graduated from Nicholls State University and received an ROTC commission as an infantry second lieutenant in 1973.

He has served in a number of command and staff positions, including command of an infantry training company in the 1st Infantry Training Brigade at Fort Benning.

He and his wife, Kathy, have two children.

WORLD WAR II — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• On the Eastern Front, Soviet forces launched attacks against Nazi-held positions inside Russia, threatening to recapture airfields serving as bases for the German supply operations into Stalingrad.

The 11th Panzer Division successfully halted the Soviet advance in a series of maneuver battles, but at a high cost in terms of men and equipment.

• In Europe, the U.S. Army Air Corps 9th Air Force attacked Naples, Italy, and succeeded in sinking two cruisers in the first American air raid on the mainland of Italy.

• On Guadalcanal, Gen. Alexander Patch's XIV Corps relieved the exhausted 1st Marine Division, under the command of Maj. Gen. Alexander Vandegrift. The Japanese continued their supply operations but with only limited success.

• After vicious fighting in New Guinea, Allied forces reached the east side of Buna. Australia's 21st Brigade stormed the Japanese positions at Gona twice in some of the bloodiest combat in the Pacific theater to date.

• On the U.S. homefront, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt received a petition endorsed by 244 congressmen supporting the establishment of a Jewish homeland in Palestine.

• In Britain, Parliament officially lowered the draft age.

• Two companies from Fort Benning's 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment tested the abilities of a defense battalion guarding the air base in Orlando, Fla.

VA Q&A

Veterans Affairs

Q: What VA benefits will my spouse be entitled to if I die while on active duty.

A: The surviving spouse will be entitled to several benefits from VA, two of which are the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance and the Dependency and Indemnity Compensation.

Q: What is the SGLI and how much will it pay?

A: The SGLI is payable to a surviving spouse if the soldier's death was not the result of willful misconduct. The amount payable depends on the coverage elected by the soldier, up to a maximum of $200,000.

Q: I was under the impression that SGLI automatically paid $100,000 unless I elected to take out a lesser amount. Is that not the case any more?

A: No, not if you elect to purchase an additional $100,000 for a maximum coverage of $200,000 that will become effective once the SGLI form is prepared, signed by the soldier and received by the service.

Q: I am getting ready to leave the service. Can I keep the $200,000 insurance after separation or retirement:

A: If you separate or retire after Dec. 1, you could increase your SGLI insurance to $200,000 and then convert it to Veterans' Group Life Insurance, which becomes renewable every five years after separation from active duty. Soldiers that separated before Dec. 1, lose their VGLI five years after separation.

Q: Why should I increase my SGLI when my spouse is also entitled to the monthly payment of the VA Dependency and Indemnity Compensation?

A: The increase of the SGLI was only one change of the Veterans' Benefits Act of 1992. Another change resulted in a flat DIC payment of $750 per month for deaths occurring after Dec. 31, 1992. Let me also mention that the indemnity compensation goes to survivors of members who die on active duty or after military service from a service-connected cause. Current indemnity payments are based on the member's pay grade, and range from $616 per month for the spouse of a private to $1,580 per month for the spouse of a full general. The new benefits act keeps indemnity payments at current levels for survivors who are already getting them.

Q: Is a general discharge a bar to receiving Chapter 30 (Montgomery GI Bill) education benefits?

A: Yes. The law requires that to be eligible for educational assistance under the Montgomery GI Bill (active duty), also known as Chapter 30, a veteran must have received an honorable discharge. No other type of discharge is acceptable.

Q: I have a private pilot's license. I am a veteran and desire to obtain flight training. What is the reimbursement for flight training?

A: The Department of Veterans Affairs reimburses 60 percent of the cost of the course.

Q: I am entitled to benefits under the Montgomery GI Bill. I want to take some courses at a community college to help me decide if I want to return to school full time. Will the GI Bill pay for those courses?

No. You must be pursuing an educational, professional or vocational objective in order to use the GI Bill.

Q: Can a student receive VA educational payments while training for a private pilot's license?

A: No. VA will only pay for training toward a commercial pilot's license.

Q: I am a drilling Reservist with a six-year obligation in effect. I am thinking about enrolling in school, but I will need some remedial training. Can benefits be paid under the Montgomery GI Bill for the Selected Reserve for this type of training?

A: You may be able to receive benefits for remedial, deficiency and refresher courses if you have a six-year obligation that begins after Sept. 30, 1990. The remedial and deficiency courses must be necessary for the pursuit of a program of education.

Q: What is the total maximum benefit payable under VA's tutorial assistance program?

A: $1,200.

Q: I am a veteran receiving benefits under VA's Improved Pension. I am supporting two of my grandchildren who live with me and my wife. May I claim my two grandchildren as dependents for pension purposes:

A: No. But it would be possible if you adopted your grandchildren.

Q: I am a World War II veteran. I was injured during the war, but I never filed a claim for disability compensation claim for a service-related condition. Is it too late?

A: No. There is no time limit for filing a disability compensation claim for a service-related condition.

Q: May a surviving spouse's pension benefits be terminated based on an "inferred marriage," even though the state in which the spouse resides does not recognize "common law" marriages?

A: Yes.

Q: My father was exposed to radiation while on active duty in the early 1950s and later died of leukemia. Is my mother entitled to any VA benefits?

A: Possibly. If your father developed the disease within 40 years form his discharge, exposure to radiation during military service is confirmed, and the disease is determined to be service-connected by VA, your mother would be entitled to Dependency and Indemnity Compensation.

Q: My VA pension is being deposited directly into my bank account. I have decided to change banks. How do I get the direct deposit changed to my new bank?

A: Ask your new bank to complete a new SF-1199A, Direct Deposit Sign-up Form, and send it to your VA Regional Office. Be sure not to close your account at the old bank until the direct deposit starts at your new bank. It should take between 30 and 60 days for the change to take effect.

Q: I was recently separated from the military under the Special Separation Benefit incentive plan. I also was determined to be 30-percent disabled by VA. Does the SSB payment affect the compensation I will be getting from VA?

A: It probably will because, in most instances, VA must recoup the SSB payment. The only instance where this does not happen is when a veteran previously received compensation for a disability incurred during a period of service prior to the period of service used to compute the SSB payment.

Pills may lead buyers to poverty

By Sarah L. Van Eden
Martin Army Community Hospital

Are you a pill, powder or potion pusher wondering if the amino acids or protein supplements are worth the price?

A canister of special supplements will get you one thing — poverty.

Many people believe proteins build muscle; therefore, they pile their plates with beef, tuna, eggs or other proteins including protein supplements promising muscle bulk.

However, protein does not build muscle — exercise does. In order to build and strengthen muscle, resistance exercises like weight lifting need to be included in exercise programs along with aerobic activities.

The amount of protein or amino acids in expensive powders or pills is less than that you might easily get from foods.

For example, you have to eat five tablespoons of one popular protein powder at a cost of $1.10 to get the same amount of protein as a 3 1/2 ounce can of tuna at half the cost or four ounces of chicken breast for 30 cents.

A good diet should provide enough calories for muscle-building exercise.

To have enough energy for weight-lifting, you need about 55 to 60 percent carbohydrates, such as whole grains and fruits, and 12 to 15 percent protein from meats, dairy products, eggs and dried beans. For example:

A 200-pound weightlifter might consume 3,000 calories, 15 percent times 3,000 equals 450 calories or about five ounces of meat (three ounces is about the size of a deck of cards).

Protein-based diets do not provide muscle fuel and will not allow exercise at an intensity hard enough to build to full athletic potential.

Too much protein can cause problems as well. Proteins may be replacing needed carbohydrates to fuel the muscle and the brain; therefore, muscles become fatigued much faster.

Excess protein intake may also contribute to dehydration by burdening the kidneys because proteins are broken down into urea, a waste product of urine.

Also, protein-rich foods can be expensive, especially in excess. Lastly, a diet high in protein typically is high in fat, which can contribute to an increase in blood cholesterol and increase the risk of developing heart disease.

The proper diet can enhance performance and contribute to a healthy well-being and prevention of diseases, such as heart disease, stroke, diabetes and cancer.

Passing the torch

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, commanding general, pins captain's bars on his son, Capt. Jerry White II, during a promotion ceremony Tuesday at Infantry Hall. The senior White, remarking that the promotion to captain and command responsibility is the most exciting event in an officer's life, marked the occasion by passing on to his son the bars he wore as a captain in Vietnam.

Medic receives MSM

Actions to help a wounded soldier are lauded

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

For one Fort Benning private first class, the memories of an effort to help a fallen comrade will be proudly worn on his chest.

Pfc. Richard C. Strous, Company B, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was awarded the Meritorious Service Medal Tuesday for his actions in the stabilization and evacuation of Sgt. David Palmer, also of Company B. Palmer was seriously wounded in a live-fire exercise at Twenty-Nine Palms, Calif., Nov. 17. Palmer later died in surgery.

Strous, Palmer's squad medic, acted immediately and performed all necessary field treatments to ensure Palmer was stabilized at the scene and evacuated for more extensive treatment, according to officials at the 75th.

During evacuation, Strous remained with Palmer throughout and continued treatment until reaching the local hospital where relief was given by hospital medical teams.

Col. David Grange, commander of the 75th, said Strous's actions were "what being a ranger is all about; taking care of their ranger buddies."

'Full House' twins star in new ABC holiday

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

The holiday season is a special time for children ... including the popular "Full House" twins, who have a unique way of marking it this year.

Though they share the role of

SPOTLIGHT

Michelle on the long-running comedy series, look-alike sisters Ashley and Mary Kate Olsen get a rare chance to appear together by making their TV-movie debuts in "To Grandmother's House We Go," Sunday's new ABC comedy. The 6-year-olds portray -- of all things -- twin siblings whose store-manager mother ("Northern Exposure's" Cynthia Geary) expresses the desire for some time to herself as yuletide pressures mount. However, she's unaware that the girls have overheard her wish, and they decide to fulfill it embarking on their own to visit their grandmother. Their trek then takes a very unexpected twist when they fall into the clutches of two inept kidnappers, played by Rhea ("Cheers") Perlman and Jerry ("Coach") Van Dyke, but trying to hold onto the clever and lively young ladies shows the felons that they've gotten much more than they bargained for. The film was directed and co-written by Jeff Franklin, who's well-acquainted with the Olsens, since he also happens to be the creator and executive producer of "Full House."

"I talk to their parents all the time," says Franklin, "and we'd talked about testing the waters with them, seeing how they enjoyed working in something other than a sitcom. When I heard they were interested in something like that, I decided to write a movie for them, along with another of the `Full House' writers, Boyd Hale. We wrote this so that we could see the two girls act together, because they play one character (on the series). They're so much fun working together, it just seemed like a natural thing to create something so the two of them could play with each other." "Is it just because they love everybody on `Full House,' which has been their home since they were 7 months old, or is this something they really love to do? We put this together to find out, and they had a ball."

Ashley (in plaid scarf) and Mary Kate Olsen

Also novice singing stars now, since they recently released their first album, Ashley and Mary Kate appear rather shy when they aren't in front of the cameras. However, both of them allow that "It was fun" to make their first movie, with Mary Kate explaining that the biggest difference was that "We have to say more lines." According to Franklin, "They've made remarkable progress as actresses. It's amazing how far they came during this (TV-movie) process, because it's not like `Full House,' where they're playing scenes with other people and only have to say one or two lines at a time. (Here,) they learned whole pages of dialogue and did whole scenes together.

Reportedly, the Olsens enjoy one of the highest TV-Q ratings (the rankings that are assigned, somewhat secretly, to television performers on the basis of recognizability and likability), a fact that could cause an adult performer to feel eclipsed in their presence. However, three-time Emmy-winner Perlman – alias the eternally brassy "Cheers" waitress Carla – claims that she had no such problems in working with the twins. "They were great," she states, "and my kids flipped out when they heard I was going to work with these two: `The kids from `Full House'? You GOTTA be in this movie!' They're very real kids, fun to be with with, so they were fun to work with." Perlman says she didn't do anything drastically different in performing opposite them, explaining that "You try not to alter your own style. You just try to be real. Sometimes, it's difficult because you're thinking about problems they might be having, but then you do it again until it becomes real for you."

Franklin acknowledges that seeing the twins in the hands of kidnappers could be frightening to their very young fans, but he maintains, "The feel of (the story) is sort of like `Home Alone.' I think the situations they're in are handled comedically, and it's not like (the Olsens) are ever scared or worried. It has a relaxed, fun feel to it, really like they're heading off on an adventure."

Infantry skills sharpened through live-fire training

Infantry training is continuous exhausting work. An infantry soldier spends most of his time sharpening combat skills. Next week, on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Soldiers Television Service reports that a unit in Korea is putting it all together with live-fire training – something these soldiers do not practice very often.

Safety – it's a daily part of every unit's mission. Next week, USAIC TV will air reports showing that based on statistics, Army units are doing their best to reduce the number of soldiers who are hurt or killed in accidents.

Armed Forces Digest will have reports on the drawdown, retention programs and separation bonuses.

UPCOMING EVENTS

Providence Canyon – Providence Canyon State Park will host a living history program depicting an 1863 Confederate winter encampment Saturday and Sunday. The program will begin at 7 a.m. and end at 4 p.m. each day. Throughout both days there will be military drills and demonstrations showing what life was like for Confederate soldiers in 1863.

School groups interested in this special program may call the park office for reservations at (912) 838-6202.

Providence Canyon State Park is located seven miles west of Lumpkin, Ga., on Highway 39C.

College mixer — The Fort Benning Officers' Wives' Club invites all college students of Fort Benning military families to a holiday mixer Dec. 21 at the Ranger Training Brigade Recreation Center from 6 to 10 p.m.

The cost is $3, and a valid college identification is required. Reservations should be made by Dec. 20.

For more information, contact Holly Grange at 682-4967 or Patty Francis at 687-7591.

Christmas concert — The Chattahoochee Valley Community College Chamber Music Group will present its annual Christmas concert Sunday at 3 p.m. in Fine Arts Recital Room G 103.

The program will feature the CVCC Chamber Choir and Wind Ensemble in a program of traditional sacred and secular Christmas music. Also featured will be violinist Erica Hillhouse, clarinetist Tammy Smith and vocal soloist Mindy Thompson. Mindy is an 8-year-old student enrolled in the CVCC Music Preparatory Program.

CVCC instrumental instructor May Kay Coffin has arranged the music for the wind ensemble, and she will serve as piano accompanist for the concert. The Chamber Music Group is under the direction of Emily Davis.

This concert is open to the public and is free. For more information, call Davis at 291-4987.

Card tournament — A spades tournament is each Sunday at 2 p.m for beginners or advanced players at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

Other activities available at the center include pool, table tennis, darts and movies.

Table games and 41 Nintendo games are on hand.

For more information, call teh center Wednesday through Sunday from noon until 9 p.m. at 544-3079.

Bluegrass jam session — A bluegrass jam session will be the last Sunday of every month at the Uchee Creek Lodge on post. The sessions are open to anyone and will begin at 2 p.m.

Donations of $2 per person older than 16 years will be accepted to help pay the rent.

For more information, call Bonnie Tyer at 298-4870.

Stone Mountain decks the halls

Stone Mountain Park

Dazzling decorations, seasonal sounds and, of course, the jolly old elf himself highlight the holiday celebration at Georgia's Stone Mountain Park through Dec. 31.

Special activities are scheduled every weekend (Friday through Sunday) through Dec. 20.

The holiday celebration begins in style this year as the massed choirs of area schools and churches gather on Memorial Lawn for a grand lighting of the park and festive holiday sing-a-long.

Visitors are given holiday candles in holders that glow in festive green and red illumination as the crowd joins the choirs in ushering in the holidays and welcoming Santa himself to the park.

An array of special activities is planned for weekends during the holiday season. Spread throughout the park, these exciting activities are guaranteed to cheer up even Scrooge himself.

Memorial Depot is 1992 holiday headquarters. Here, Santa and his elves delight children of all ages.

Park staff members will be taking pictures of children on Santa's lap, or guests can bring their own cameras to capture the moment.

Santa and his elves appear weekends from 6 to 9 p.m.

While at the Depot, participants can hop aboard a journey to the North Pole on the Stone Mountain Scenic Railroad.

A ride on the sing-a-long train costs only $2.50 for adults, $1.50 for children 11 and under.

The mascot, Buford the Bear, appears in the special holiday laser show along with holiday characters and images dancing across the north face of the mountain adjacent to the depot.

"Christmas in Dixie" and other seasonal favorites create a memorable holiday experience. The show runs at 6:05, 7:05 and 8:05 Friday through Sunday evenings through Dec. 20.

Holiday tours of the antebellum plantation on weekend evenings add a spark to the nip of night.

Illuminaries lighting the walkways add just the right festive touch. Adjacent to the plantation entrance, The Clayton House Gift Shop and The Christmas House offer one-of-a-kind gifts.

During the week, there is plenty of yuletide cheer to go around as well.

The South's largest tree of lights crowns the park-wide festivities.

Tens of thousands of twinkling lights decorate countless areas throughout the park creating a light show that can be enjoyed as a holiday driving tour.

Giant greeting cards created by area schools are a special highlight.

Whether holiday celebration activities are going on or not, the park is open daily, 365 days a year, until midnight.

More than 400,000 lights — switched on each evening until New Year's eve at dusk — create an experience for guests each time they visit.

Park entry requires a valid 1992 parking permit that may be purchased daily for $5 or yearly for $20.

For more information on attractions or scheduling, call (404) 498-5702.

Fox to host follies

Fox Theater

The Will Rogers Follies, winner of six 1991 Tony Awards including best musical and the 1992 Grammy Award for best musical show album, is coming to the Fox Theatre for one week only Feb. 2 to 7.

Keith Carradine and Dee Hoty, who originated the roles of Will Rogers and his wife Betty Blake on Broadway, reprise their starring roles in the national touring company of the award-winning hit musical, which is directed and choreographed by Tommy Tune. Tune received Tony Awards for both his direction and choreography of The Will Rogers Follies.

The musical presents the life and career of Will Rogers as the great showman Florenz Ziegfeld would have — with all the girls, the glitter and the glamour of pure entertainment.

The Will Rogers Follies has a book by Peter Stone, with a Tony-winning score by composer Cy Coleman and lyricists Betty Comden and Adolph Green.

The set design is by Tony Walton; the Tony-winning costumes are by Willa Kim; the Tony-winning lighting is by Jules Fisher.

In addition to six 1991 Tony Awards and a 1992 Grammy Award, The Will Rogers Follies won the 1991 Drama Desk Award and the 1991 New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for best musical.

The national tour of The Will Rogers Follies is produced by Pierre Cossette, Martin Richards, Sam Crothers, James M. Nederlander, Stewart F. Lane and Max Weitzenhoffer in association with William E. Simon.

The Will Rogers Follies show times are: Tuesday through Saturday evenings at 8 p.m., Sunday evening at 7:30 p.m. and matinees Saturday and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Ticket prices are: Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Sunday evenings and Sunday matinee - $29.50, $21.50 and $10; Friday and Saturday evenings - $31.50, $23.50 and $10; and Saturday matinee - $27.50, $19.50 and $10.

Tickets are on sale at the Fox box office and all Ticketmaster Outlets including Turtles, Sound Warehouse, Tower Records and Coconuts.

'Mountain Country' holiday events set

Towns County Chamber of Commerce

The fourth annual "Mountain Country Christmas Weekend" will celebrate the holiday season in the communities of Hiawassee and Young Harris today, Saturday and Sunday.

A tour of homes and historic sites will feature the Susan B. Harris Chapel located on the campus of Young Harris College, the starting point.

One of the historic sites on the tour will be the Union Hill United Methodist Church that was built in 1895.

All the homes and sites will be decorated for the holidays.

The famous "Christmas House" of local antique dealer Jane Head, a tour all by itself, will be decorated with feather Christmas trees as well as antique trains and dolls.

Visitors will be treated to refreshments at the Fieldstone Inn located on the shores of Lake Chatuge.

An old-fashioned chicken-pot-pie supper with entertainment will be in the Young Harris College Grace Rollins Dining Hall Saturday evening.

The new Goolsby Center, also on the college campus, will be the site of a one-day craft show that will give visitors an opportunity to purchase special and unusual Christmas gifts.

There will be an abundance of free entertainment during the weekend.

McConnell Memorial Baptist Church in Hiawassee will present "The Majesty and Glory of Christmas," a Christmas concert, Saturday and Sunday evenings.

The Rollins Planetarium located on the college campus will present "The Christmas Star" show.

For the young and young-at-heart, there will be showings of classic Christmas movies and two sessions of storytelling by Bob Chaille in the Wilson Lecture Hall in the Goolsby Center.

The Mountain Community Chorus will perform an assortment of familiar Christmas carols Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon.

For more information on the Mountain Country Christmas Weekend, call (706) 896-4966.

TWINS

Still, Franklin says he has remained cognizant of, and responsible about, the girls' large following among children who are likely to tune in. "We've tried to insert messages into the piece," he reports, "so that kids are aware they shouldn't be going off with strangers, crossing the street alone and that kind of stuff, but there are motivations in the story for (the twins) to do what they do. This was originally written as a theatrical feature, but when we couldn't set it up in time (for a Christmas release), we decided to make it into a TV-movie. It has a little more edge than something developed (from the outset) as children's programming might."

36th Engr. gets ready for Somalia

Elements of the unit may leave by Dec. 24

USAIC Public Affairs Office

About 1,000 Fort Benning soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group have been alerted for possible deployment to Somalia. Some could easily leave as early as Dec. 24, others following in early January, to participate in Operation Restore Hope.

This alert does not guarantee that a unit will eventually deploy, officials said. Soldiers are scheduled to depart from Lawson Army Airfield. Heavy equipment and vehicles will be shipped from East Coast ports.

Members of the 36th Engineer Group would provide humanitarian relief, construct base camps improve and construct roads and bridges, improve serviceability of unit buildings and erect security barriers.

Subordinate units of the 36th Engineer Group affected are Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 36th Engineer Group; 43rd Engineer Battalion; 63rd Engineer Company; elements of the 535th Engineer Detachment; 608th Ordnance Company and the 498th and 690th Medical Companies.

Benning to light tree Tuesday at 6 p.m.

USAIC Chaplains' Office

A post-wide Menorah and Christmas tree lighting ceremony will be at the Field of Four Chaplains Tuesday at 6 p.m.

The Infantry Band and Infantry Chorus will provide a concert of holiday music from 5:30 until 5:50 p.m.

Also, the event will include the Benning Belles, the Boy Scouts, first-time presentation of the Menorah by the Jewish Chaplain, lighting of the tree, refreshments and a visit by Santa Claus.

The Fort Benning community is invited to participate. For more information, call 545-2288.

Management course open to post civilians

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning civilian employees, as well as military members, may have an opportunity to advance their military education and development as a result of the addition of a recent Department of the Army course, according to Patty Pfeiffer, chief of Training and Development, Directorate of Civilian Personnel.

The DA Office of the Inspector General investigated civilian school opportunities and found there were limited management courses available for key civilian employees within the Army school system, Pfeiffer said.

Consequently, the Army chief of staff authorized the establishment of a college called the Army Management Staff College, she said.

According to Army officials, the school's major objectives are to:

• Educate leaders in the theory and practice of sustainment base management and operation.

• Develop leader competencies in the functional areas of Army systems management.

• Develop doctrine for installation management and sustaining base operations.

• Establish an academic environment that will enhance the achievement and practice of the highest professional standards.

• Institutionalize the "Total Army" philosophy and foster the partnership between the military and civilian leadership within the Army.

"It's an exceptional education opportunity and a great career enhancement for anyone who completes the course," said Pfeiffer.

Pfeiffer said the 14-week course for civilians is located at Fort Belvoir, Va., and is comparable to the military members' Command and General Staff College.

"Up until this course was developed, civilians had limited comprehensive management training opportunities," said Pfeiffer. "Completing this course is a stepping stone for a more successful career."

To be eligible for the course, civilian employees must meet the following criteria:

• Serve in or have the potential for advancement to key leadership positions

• Have career status or serve in Schedule A excepted appointments without time limitations and have a minimum of three years in such appointments.

• Are in grades GS-12 or GS/GM 13 and 14. Individuals in grade 15 may apply by exception.

Military Members will be considered for the course if they:

• Are or will be assigned to the sustaining base environment (Table of Distribution and Allowance positions).

• Are majors or lieutenant colonels.

• Have military education level 4.

Lee Capraro, chief of Publications, was recently accepted to the Jan. 12 course. She said the course could be a real career booster for her and could lead to advancement.

Applications are now being accepted for the third class of the fiscal year. Interested civilians may fill out an application and return it to the Training and Development Division, Directorate of Civilian Personnel, and military members may contact their branch manager no later than Feb. 15 for consideration for the course. This class is currently schedule for Sept. 13 through Dec. 17, 1993.

For more information, call 545-5580 or 545-5656.

CFC drive winds down

Campaign at 99 percent

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

At 99 percent of the goal of $500,000, the Combined Federal Campaign at Fort Benning, which began Sept. 28, is winding down, according to Cathy White, CFC coordinator.

With $495,739 collected thus far, the campaign is awaiting its final contributions.

White is asking unit project officers who still have outstanding donations to turn them in to the receptionist at the front desk in Building 359, the Family Unit Network offices.

Anyone with questions may call 545-4937 or 545-3024.

"We will gladly accept any donations that haven't yet been turned in," she said. "Perhaps one of these will put us over the $500,000 mark."

She added that she would like to thank not only those who contributed to the campaign, but also those key unit workers who helped make this CFC drive a success.

Post competes for ACOE award

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning is in the running for the $1.5 million prize awarded to the top installation in the Army.

Fort Benning is one of 13 posts vying for the Commander-in-Chief's Community of Excellence award.

COE officials will be visiting the installations some time during February and March.

Prizes are also presented to the top three installations in each category. Fort Benning is in the large category along with Forts Sill and Lewis.

SIPE may make future infantrymen better

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The infantryman of the future will be faster, lighter, more lethal, and look like something straight out of a science fiction movie.

Fort Benning soldiers found this out when they tested the Soldier Integrated Protective Ensemble, the proposed battle gear for warriors of the future.

The field testing at Fort Benning, which began in mid September and lasted until the end of November, represented the culmination of a three-year research program by a team of U.S. Army Materiel Command Organizations led by the U.S. Army Natick Research, Development and Engineering Center, Natick, Mass.

The field testing involved soldiers from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion and the 29th Infantry Regiment and included target detection and engagement, land navigation, and a series of situational training exercises.

According to Carol J. Fitzgerald, Army SIPE manager, the aim of the SIPE program is to significantly improve the war-fighting capabilities of the individual soldier.

"The object of the SIPE program is to develop, fabricate and demonstrate a modular, head-to-toe, integrated fighting system which will afford improved combat effectiveness while providing the individual soldier balanced protection against multiple threats," she said.

SIPE is made up of several subsystems. It includes:

• The integrated headgear subsystem, which includes soldier-to- soldier communication capability; enhanced hearing; a video screen that provides enhanced image intensification and interfaces with a thermal sight mounted on the M-16A2 rifle; and ballistic/laser eye/respiratory/aural protection.

• The advanced clothing subsystem, which includes an improved combat uniform; improved, lightweight body armor and load bearing equipment; a chemical undergarment that provides better protection than the current overgarment; and improved hand wear and footwear that provide durability, warmth, and chemical protection.

• The weapons subsystem, which includes a long range hearing device mounted to the M-16A2 rifle and gives the ability to hear people talking from 100 to 200 meters away; a laser aiming light; and a thermal sight that can see through smoke, fog, haze, dust and night and is connected to the visual display in the soldier's helmet so that the rifle can "see" for him.

• An individual soldier computer that includes digital maps of the operations areas, including a moving cursor that moves as the soldier moves to indicate his position on the map; a digital compass; the ability to send orders and reports back and forth within the squad or to and from higher headquarters; and a video camera that can be used to take instant snapshots of the objective or enemy vehicles and equipment for relay back to higher headquarters for intelligence purposes.

The soldiers who tested the system gave it a unanimous thumbs up.

Sgt. Brad Danker of the 4th Ranger Battalion said it did not take long to learn to use the new equipment.

"It was very user friendly," Danker said. "It took us only about half the time they had originally allotted for us to learn to use it."

Staff Sgt. Paul Mewborn was impressed with the soldier to soldier communications system.

"One of the best benefits is that soldiers are informed at all times; they know what course of action is

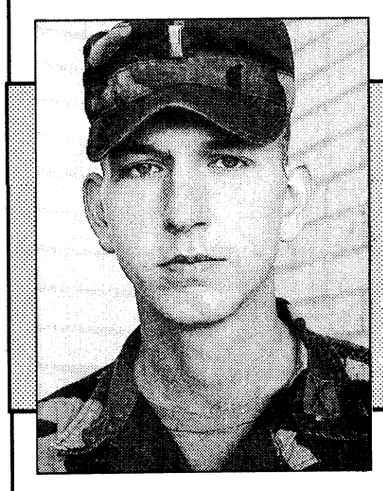
What do you think is the best way to prevent drunken driving?

Spc. Gregory Carlson, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "The penalties for drunk driving should be increased so people will take drinking and driving more seriously."

Ursula Harris, Directorate of Civilian Personnel — "The best way to prevent drunken driving is to have stricter enforcement of drunk driving laws."

Georgette Nixon, Directorate of Contracting — "The best way to prevent drunken driving is not to drink and drive."

Patsy Jackson, Directorate of Public Works — "The best way to prevent drunken driving is take offenders licenses away and put them in jail for six to 12 months."



2nd Lt. Bill Flora, Infantry Officer Basic Course— "Choose a designated driver. People could pay one of their buddies to go out with them and drive."

Pvt. 2 Kellena Smith, Company A, 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — "Stricter laws would deter people from driving after they drink. The taxi services are an excellent idea and should be continued all year."

'Tis the season to be jolly — isn't it ?

COMMENTARY

No one in Public Affairs is talking to anyone else.

Why? Isn't it obvious, it's that time of year again — office Christmas party time.

That's the time of year when most offices get together, break bread together and share the joys of the Christmas season.

But not in Public Affairs. Oh no!

In the past, because we're cheap, we usually have a covered dish dinner in the office.

But this year a couple of the higher ups decided we'd go to a restaurant. They claimed there was a disparate distribution of labor. "Too few fixin' and too many eatin'."

Naturally, by the time we arrived at that decision, nearly all the places in town were booked.

So now what do we do?

The fighting going on around here while we tried to decide made eating Thanksgiving at my in-laws look civilized.

Monique, who finally took charge of the operation is mad because every plan she suggests gets vetoed by what she calls the "nattering nabobs of negativism in The Bayonet office."

She says all we do is come to office parties and eat the food.

I pointed out that that wasn't true, that I'd contributed to the Thanksgiving office party by bringing plastic ware and a bag of chips.

"Oh, great," she said.

But she was still bound and determined to have a "no work" Christmas office party.

After many, many phone calls, Monique discovered that all the popular restaurants were booked for the traditional party day.

So there we were, an afternoon to party, but no place to go.

Finally, the deputy recommended we have a traditional Mexican meal and go to a Mexican restaurant, ("cheap," said he); while Professor Moriarity discovered a Chinese restaurant that was available, ("exquisite," said she).

So Janice, the front office dictator, sent out a sign up sheet with three options. Option one was a Chinese restaurant ($11 plus), option two was the Mexican restaurant (less than $5 and they have 40-ounce Margaritas) and option three was covered dish (duke mixture).

Not knowing what "Duke Mixture" was (one of the older members of the office came up with that term), I added a fourth option, Peachtree Mall Food Court, and actually got one other person (the editor of all people) to join me in my vote.

My reasoning, everyone's palate could be satisfied and afterward we could go shopping.

Well, anyway, by the time the sheet had wended its way all around the office, the entire Public Affairs Office was polarized.

The front office is having Duke Mixture, the Community Relations Office will be on leave, The Public Information Office is going Mexican, most of The Bayonet will be eating Chinese.

Me, I'm staying at my desk, playing "Bah Humbug" tapes while I eat my bologna and peanut butter sandwich.

I hope you other, civilized offices have a good time at your parties next week. If there's any food left over, could you please drop it by The Bayonet office. I don't think my sandwich will go too far.

Alcohol accounts for many deaths

National Highway Safety Administration

Drivers or pedestrians impaired by alcohol account for one death on U.S. highways every 22 minutes, adding up to about 20,000 lives lost in 1991.

This equates to 220,000 lives lost in a decade, almost a quarter of a million people. That's about 60 deaths per day. A dozen of those who lose their lives are young people under 21 years old. Every day. All year long. Every year.

About three-quarters of a million more people are injured in alcohol-related motor vehicle crashes annually. This equals the population of San Francisco.

Coincidentally, estimates of the total years lost this way also comes out at around three-quarters of a million.

When it comes to everyone's bottom line in the 1990s, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration puts the cost for a highway crash involving a driver or pedestrian impaired by alcohol and/or other drugs at $308 annually for every man, woman and child in the United States.

According to Injury Prevention: Meeting the Challenge, the total medical cost per critical injury is at an average of $138,000. Also, every highway death costs society more than $330,000.

But an additional study cited in Injury Prevention: Meeting the Challenge upped that figure to $425,000. Even taking the statistical low road, 20,000 times any of these numbers adds up to a huge dent in the fender of the U.S. e

Research shows that any measurable alcohol level increases the crash risk for some drivers and the risk increases substantially by .08 blood alcohol content. By now, just about everyone has heard

"Don't drink and drive" messages enough times.

"Unfortunately, decisions to refrain from driving can also be impaired by drinking, especially when risk-taking use of alcohol is modeled by some of the very same people who deliver the "don't drink and drive" message.

Telling kids to just say no may not be worth much if kids see their parents and others they look up to saying yes.

And it can't be easy on them to be surrounded by positive alcohol images featuring all kinds of things they want to be part of, when the health education their community offers them about drinking is an occasional classroom hour, or maybe a public service announcement that airs after midnight.

Progress already makes clear that there's nothing "accidental" about impaired driving crashes. Communities can change, just as laws and individual behavior can change.

These grim statistics can change. We can save dollars. We can save limbs and eyes. We can save minds and property. We can save precious law enforcement resources and court time and precious health-care dollars. And we can save lives, one at a time, or even by the dozen.

Chief outline posts holiday schedule

The Fort Benning Christmas and New Year holiday schedule begins on Dec. 20 and ends Jan. 2.

Commanders, directors and chiefs of activities will ensure effective operations are maintained throughout the holiday period.

Commanders are authorized to staff offices with duty personnel beginning at noon on weekdays. A liberal leave policy is encouraged for civilians and military.

Commanders, directors and activity chiefs will ensure proper supervision and meaningful work are offered for those who do not wish to take leave.

Supervisors are encouraged to contact the Directorate of Civilian Personnel's Management and Employee Relations Division at 545-5562 for assistance and additional information.

The USAIC Chaplains' Office will host the annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony at the Field of Four Chaplains Tuesday at 6 p.m. This is an excellent program and will include a band concert prior to the ceremony and refreshments following the ceremony.

All personnel and families are invited.

In keeping with our energy conservation efforts, nonelectric decorations will be used in office and operational facilities throughout the post.

Exterior and interior lighting is authorized in housing areas and lighting use should be kept to modest and prudent levels.

For safety and fire protection, family housing residents should ensure that appropriate safety practices are observed.

Traditional Christmas parties for the office may be held Dec. 18. Facilities used for Christmas parties must be cleaned up and secured no later than 5 p.m.

Col. Burnet R. Quick
Chief of staff

Cold weather necessitates special safety precautions

Our soldiers must be aware of the special precautions necessary to prevent cold weather injuries.

Through education of the early warning symptoms and application of common sense, injuries can be prevented.

Now is the time to educate leaders in the prevention, recognition and treatment of cold injuries. Pocket cards (FB Form 42, Cold Facts for Keeping Warm, and GTA 8-6-8, Adverse Effects of Cold, Cause and Symptoms), provide guidance for the prevention and treatment of cold injuries and are available from Post Publications, Building 2409.

These cards, used with the wind chill equivalent temperature , which can be obtained anytime by calling 545-5281, give definitive instructions on conducting safe physical training.

Major unit commanders are tasked with ensuring that all military personnel receive cold injury prevention training.

Cold weather injuries are preventable. The key is strong first line leaders trained to recognize potential cold weather injuries.

Commanders should make the prevention of cold weather injuries a personal goal.

Col. Burnet R. Quick
Chief of staff

Bayonet changes holiday deadlines

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Because of the Christmas Day holiday, The Bayonet will not be published the week of Christmas.

The last issue before Christmas will be published Dec. 18. The deadline for publication in that issue is noon today.

The next issue will be published Dec. 31 because of the New Year's Day holiday Jan. 1. The deadline for that issue is noon Dec. 22.

Free VTC a chance to send greetings

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

If you can't make it home for the holidays, then why not sign up for a free, 30-minute, phone call in which you can not only hear, but see whomever you are calling.

For the third year in a row, Fort Benning military personnel, their family members and Department of Defense civilians are being offered the opportunity to schedule a holiday video teleconference with their faraway family members.

A video teleconference is a live video conversation from one military video teleconference center to another. The Fort Benning VTC is located in Infantry Hall, Room 207, and can be reached at 545-5552.

Conferences can be between 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. from Dec. 21 through Dec. 31, except for Christmas Day and weekends. Reservations are being taken now and it is best to sign up early, said Staff Sgt. Philip Pushic, who will be facilitating the holiday video teleconferences.

Pushic said that this is an excellent opportunity for those who cannot make it home for the holidays to see and hear their friends and family almost face to face.

"During the conference we can display artwork or a drawing that one family member might want to show to another, or even play a videotape that someone might want to show," he said.

If you plan to schedule a video teleconference, it is up to you to explain to whomever you will be calling where the nearest military teleconference center is and what time they need to be there. Contact the post VTC to find out which posts have teleconference centers.

Here are some other guidelines to keep in mind when you schedule a teleconference.

- You must provide the name and telephone number of yourself and one of the other persons participating in the conference at the other location.
- You must be present 15 minutes prior to the starting time of your conference. Holiday teleconferences can be pre-empted by regular, mission-essential calls. You will be notified in the event of any schedule changes.
- The conference can be taped if you provide a videotape.
- The VTC must be informed of a cancellation at least 24 hours in advance.
- All calls are limited to 30 minutes.

TRADOC cmdr. observes battle lab

USAIC Public Affairs Office

The commander of the Training and Doctrine Command visited Fort Benning recently to observe and evaluate progress on Fort Benning's introduction of the Dismounted War-fighting Battle Lab.

Gen. Frederick M. Franks Jr., TRADOC commander, spent part of his stay last week discussing the simulators and what role they will play in today's Army and the Army of the future.

Franks said the battle labs, as they are commonly called, will be the focal point for the Army to look for ways to insert technology onto the battlefield.

"The battle labs (concept) marries soldiers together with technology and gets their ideas working," said Franks.

Franks said the concept is in part a direct result of the end of the Cold War, during which the United States could measure the strength of its armed forces by comparing them to the Soviet Union's.

Franks also visited several units on post to discuss the Soldier Integrated Protective Ensemble, which will enable soldiers to move, communicate and ultimately achieve their objective.

SIPE includes such items as night observation devices and enhanced land navigation systems.

Safety Cab ready for party season

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

If you've been drinking and find yourself without a designated driver while celebrating over the holidays, you can call Safety Cab for a free ride home.

Beginning today and running through Jan. 1, simply dial 323-0110 and give your location for a free taxi cab ride home, said Regis Beighley, Infantry Branch Safety officer.

The yearly program is sponsored by the Bradley Center, Columbus Bank and Trust, AFLAC, the Association of the United States Army, the Rotary Club, Columbus Jaycees, WTVM Channel 9, the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer, and the B and B Beverage Company.

Beighley also noted that all post clubs, and many off post clubs as well, will offer free non-alcoholic beverages to designated drivers.

Participating clubs will have stick-on badges that read "I'm driving" for designated drivers to wear.

According to Beighley, a total of 947 people in the Columbus/Fort Benning/Phenix City area used Safety Cab during the 1991 holiday season.

He added, however, that at the same time there were still 19 accidents, 14 injuries and 140 arrests resulting from driving under the influence of alcohol.

Beighley emphasized that the cabs will only take you back home, not to another club.

SIPE: System to make infantry better going to be taken and they can begin to mentally prepare. This gives us more confidence," he said. Mewborn said that SIPE doesn't pose any threat to the individual soldier's skills.

"We still need to know our stuff. SIPE is just an enhancement, not a replacement," said Mewborn.

Col. Al Nahas, director of Combat Development, said that the equipment tested at Fort Benning was only a prototype, not the actual product that will be fielded. Before a final product is ready, miniaturization of some of the components will be necessary to reduce the size and weight.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military police blotters from Nov. 24 to Dec. 1. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt and/or innocence of any person.

Beginning this week, the Crime Watch column will have a new look. The article will begin with a "hot topic" and end with a "booby prize." The hot topic will concern incidents of importance to the community, while the booby prize will concern offenses that defy common sense.

• Hot topic: Lost Post Exchange privileges. A retired service member lost his Post Exchange privileges for six months after a guest whom he had signed into the Post Exchange was caught shoplifting.

He allowed the guest to shop alone for approximately 20 minutes, while he shopped elsewhere. Post policy requires a sponsor to remain with his or her guest(s) for the duration of the Post Exchange visit. Sponsors are responsible for the actions of family members and guests.

• A family member was charged with shoplifting after placing five running suits in a bag and exiting the Post Exchange without rendering payment.

• A government employee was charged with larceny of government property after making personal telephone calls on an official government telephone line, in excess of $1,000.

• An Army and Air Force Exchange employee reported that persons unknown removed a lock from a refrigeration truck and dented the freezer door.

• A family member was charged with possession of alcohol by a minor and larceny of government property after she took two traffic cones and placed them in the back of her truck.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with disorderly conduct while intoxicated after causing a disturbance at a local nightclub.

• A specialist was charged with failure to stop for a posted stop sign and transporting a concealed, unregistered weapon.

• A civilian was charged with driving with an expired license plate, no driver's license in possession and no proof of insurance.

• A specialist reported that he observed several individuals behind an unoccupied set of quarters. A check of the quarters revealed that a screen had been removed from a window and the window had been shattered.

• A specialist was charged by civil authorities with driving under the influence of alcohol, criminal trespass and disorderly conduct while intoxicated.

• A family member was charged with aggravated assault after repeatedly hitting her husband in the head with a telephone receiver.

• A family member was charged with leaving the scene of a traffic accident without rendering any information.

• This week's "booby prize" is awarded to a specialist who was arrested by civil authorities for pandering. He offered an undercover female police officer $40 to have sex with him.

Other activity included 13 traffic accidents and eight reports of shoplifting at facilities on post. There were six cases of driving under the influence of alcohol, 10 reported cases of larceny of private property and two reported cases of larceny of government property.

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police Station at 545-5222.

Doctors Hosp. joins CHAMPUS

CHAMPUS Select

Doctors Hospital of Columbus has joined the CHAMPUS, or the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services, program.

The program is a health care benefits program made available to military families through a Defense Department contract.

While the program offers all the benefits available through standard CHAMPUS by visiting a CHAMPUS Select doctor or hospital when care is not available through Martin Army Community Hospital, beneficiaries can take advantage of the following:

• Lower CHAMPUS cost shares - CHAMPUS Select health-care providers agree to charge less for their services than they usually would, lowering the portion of the health care claim you are responsible for paying.

• Less paperwork —Your health care claim forms are completed and submitted for you by CHAMPUS Select providers, saving you time in addition to money.

• Easy access to health care services — A number of qualified hospitals, primary care doctors, specialist and mental health professionals are available through the CHAMPUS Select program.

• No costly premiums — This program is not a supplemental CHAMPUS insurance plan. There are no insurance premiums involved with this program.

While CHAMPUS beneficiaries are encouraged to use the military hospital as their first resource, when services are not available there, CHAMPUS Select hospitals and doctors offer a sound alternative to standard CHAMPUS providers.

For further information about this program, including a directory of area health-care providers, call Kathy Jeffers at 682-5949 or stop by the CHAMPUS Select office in Building 9204, Room 206, next to Martin Army Community Hospital.

CHAMPUS inpatient costs change

CHAMPUS

The daily amount active duty families pay for inpatient care in civilian hospitals under the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services increased from $8.95 to $9.30 Oct. 1.

An active duty family member who is admitted to a civilian hospital for care under CHAMPUS will pay the daily rate of $9.30 times the number of days spent in the hospital – or a flat fee of $425, whichever is greater.

This rate doesn't apply to any other category of CHAMPUS-eligible patients. Their care will, in most cases, be cost-shared under CHAMPUS' diagnosis-related group payment system.

Faith student wins essay contest

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Don C. Faith Middle School sixth-grader Jed Forrester took first place Dec. 2 in the awards ceremony for an essay contest on "Contributions Made by the American Indians."

Sponsored by the Equal Opportunity Office and Youth Services, the contest was for children 6 to 13 years of age with Nov. 29 as the deadline, according to Billie Smith, Youth Services director.

A Faith School sixth-grade teacher had all of her 120 students write something on this topic with the contest in mind. Then she took the 31 best and entered them.

Seven prizes were presented to the top winners by Ellis Dandy, Equal Employment and Equal Opportunity officer, assisted by Lorene Chesnut, Native American Employment Program manager and EEO Specialist.

In addition to Forrester, prize winners included:

Second Place - John Davis

Third Place - Amanda Zeider

Fourth Place - Kristen Chandler

Connie Bridges/Special to the Bayonet

Jed Forrester (third from the left), first place winner in the essay contest, shown with his brother, Jed, and parents, Chaplain (Capt.) Dale and Gwen Forrester.

Fifth Place - Karla Fuentes

Sixth Place - Nishea D. Hightower

Seventh Place - Courtney Ellis.

Prizes ranged from cameras to gift certificates.

Dandy said this contest is something they do periodically.

"We always have a good turnout when we involve the children," he said.

Sgt. lst Class Jim Davis, EEO adviser who served as coordinator for Native American Month activities on post, read a sample of what the essays were like, noting the quality of the entries and the difficulty the judges had in selecting winners.

TAQ saves Follow Me dining facility

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Total Army Quality is defined by regulation as a leadership philosophy and management approach. The spirit of TAQ seems to be, do it right the first time and look for ways to do it better.

The Directorate of Logistics was recently faced with a $2.5-million shortfall in its fiscal 1993 operating budget and recommended closing the 11th Infantry Regiment's Follow Me dining facility.

The closure of the facility was projected to save Fort Benning $800,000, but would have created some problems as well, according to Capt. Garry Stephens, unit supply officer for the 11th Regt.

"The Follow Me facility does more than just provide meals for soldiers living in the barracks," Stephens said. "It provides field feeding, is conveniently located for people serving on temporary duty and provides meals for military personnel from sister services. Students from the 29th Infantry Regiment, the School of the Americas and the International Student Training Detachment use the facility daily. Also, it is designated as the installation's transient mess."

Stephens said that as no plans had been suggested to replace all of these services, Col. L. K. White Jr., commander of the 11th Regt., assembled a process action team, according to TAQ guidelines, to study the problem and come up with alternate solutions.

The team consisted of representatives from the 11th and 29th Infantry Regiments, DOL, the School of the Americas, the Directorates of Community Activities and Public Works, the Judge Advocate General and the International Student Training Detachment.

Maj. Lawrence Pallotta, deputy regimental commander of the 11th Regt. and a member of the process action team, said after several meetings, a lot of research and encouragement from Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, post commanding general, the team came up with an alternate suggestion.

"Our major challenge was to develop a plan that takes care of soldiers," Stephens said, "Heading that list were TDY personnel. Since there is no dining facility at Olson Hall, the closing of the Follow Me mess hall could mean that all the people on TDY would be paid $26 per diem instead of $18.15. This amounts to almost $3 million a year in increased per diem. That money isn't paid by Fort Benning, but it is still Army money.

"We realized that with diminishing resources, individual units could no longer have their own mess hall. We have to get used to the idea of sharing facilities to maximize resources. Since the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry had two dining facilities, one of them could be closed instead of the Follow Me facility," Stephens said. "The overflow from the Airborne School could then eat at the Noncommissioned Officers Academy/Officer Candidate School mess hall. DOL will still realize a savings by closing a mess hall."

White concluded, "Given flexibility by the commanding general to develop an alternate plan, DOL, the 11th Regt., and the team pooled their abilities and ideas to develop a plan that takes care of soldiers and saves money.

"We ended up saving the Army about $3 million, and the commanding general, DOL and other members of the team helped to make that happen ," White said.

Faith race is record breaker

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

On a very chilly Saturday morning, more than 1,300 people ranging in age from 4 to 64 participated in the 14th Annual Faith Holiday Race sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club and the Don C. Faith Middle School Physical Education Department.

According to Sue Emerson, physical education teacher at Faith School and one of the coordinators for the race, the turnout was on track with previous races.

Listed below are the first-, second- and third-place winners from each race, age group and their times.

Bobby Reyes set a new course record for the one-mile, 8 and under division with his time of 6:43.

In the two-mile female division, Angela Jones broke her own record of 12:17 with a time of 11:52. In the five-mile female division, Jennifer Yancey broke third-place finisher Beth Lasseters old mark of 31:55 with a time of 31:20.

Engineer Kenneth Turner goes up for an uncontested layup

Veteran players go to court

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

They may not jump as high as they used to or run as fast, but the 30 and over men's basketball league is just as fierce in competition as the younger players' leagues.

Here is a wrap-up of games played Dec. 4 at Briant Wells Field House.

Retros vs. 533rd Transportation Company

The Retros won the game without getting on the court when 533rd failed to show and forfeited.

36th Engineer Group vs. The Bandits

The Engineers fought back from a 32-21 halftime deficit to pull out a 64-55 win.

Tommy Johnson ripped the nets for 24 points and teammate Elliot Mitchell poured in 15 to pace the Engineers.

The Bandits were led by Anthony Chapman with 16 points and Rony Rexter added 12.

The Bandits watched an 11-point lead disappear in the second half behind the 3-point shooting of Johnson.

Johnson hit four 3-point shots in the second half, and Mitchell hit four straight free throws to help build a 10-point lead for the Engineers late in the game.

Leftovers vs. Fire Department

The Leftovers cooked the Fire Department 49-40 behind the hot shooting of David Terrell and Gary Gaither.

Tied at 19 at the half, the game was nip and tuck as the Fire Department led by as many as 5 points.

The Leftovers went on a shooting binge all of a sudden, led by David Terrell, who ended up with 19 points, and Gary Gaither, who had 13.

The Leftovers reeled off 14 points to take a 49-38 lead before the Fire Department could answer the call.

Willie Waldon scored 13 points and teammates Howard Walton and Joe Bonner added 11 for the Fire Department.

Noncommissioned Officers Academy vs. Infantry Training Brigade

ITB drilled NCOA 71-54 behind the second half shooting of Fernando Torres who hit for 14 points in the second half and 16 for the game.

Dallas Hogan led the scoring for ITB with 18 points and Floyd Edwards chipped in 16 of his own.

ITB, up by only 3 at the half, 28-25, took control of the game, outgunning and outrunning NCOA at every turn.

Torres found the range after hitting only one basket in the first half.

Hogan and Edwards led the running game fastbreaking on almost every missed shot by NCOA.

Tyrone Robinson and Ezra Jackson paced NCOA with 19 points each, and Wayne Jones added 10 more for NCOA who just fell out of step against ITB.

Infantry Officer Basic Course

Infantry Officer Basic Course Class 8-92 recently took part in a company-sponsored golf tournament at the Follow Me Golf Course.

The tournament was organized into teams consisting of four players. Each team had an even mix of seasoned players and novices.

Prizes were awarded for the overall winning team and closest ball to the hole on four short par threes. Most teams scored either par or just over par.

The winning team was Neil Hatcher, 2nd Lt. Scott Campbell and 2nd Lt. Robert O'Brien, with a score of 66.

Landing closest to the hole was 2nd Lt. Trevor Bredenkamp who had two holes where he was the closest, and Neil Hatcher and Sam Bass each had one.

The tournament featured everything from a shotgun start to "Hooter Girls" serving beverages on the course.

"It was a great way to bring all the students together," 2nd Lt. Jack Vantress.

Tournament sponsors were: Alpine Pawn Shop, American Eagles Airline, ARRCO's, B. Merrills, Columbus Bank & Trust, Custom Sharpening, Delta Airlines, Denny's, Double Eagle, Hooters, Precision Tune, The Pro Shop, The Prudential, Post Exchange, Ranger Joe's, Trophy Shop, Wal-Mart, Western Auto and Western Sizzlin.

All funds contributed that did not go toward the tournament were given to Santa's Castle for Fort Benning children.

Lock and load

Sgt. 1st Class John McMarron of Company C, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment prepares to load his M-16A2 rifle. McMarron is participating in the 300-yard rapid-fire competition at McAndrews Range during the U.S. Army Infantry Center Small Arms Championships, ending today at McAndrews and Shelton Ranges.

SPORTS SHORTS

Christmas smoker — Third Brigade, 24th Infantry Division will host a Christmas Boxing Smoker Thursday.

The boxing smoker will be at 6 p.m. at the Kelley Hill Physical Fitness Center, with an all-novice boxing team from Fort Benning competing against an all-novice team from Fort Gordon, Ga.

Fort Benning's team is open to all units on the installation.

For more information, call Don Plotner at 544-1747.

Basketball screening — The Fort Benning Physical Activities Branch will conduct its All Army Basketball Screening Test to determine potential All Army athletes.

A meeting will be today at 1 p.m. in the Physical Activities Branch conference room, Building 394, Doughboy Stadium.

All interested active duty men and women must attend to be considered.

Aerobics classes — Low impact aerobic classes will be Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 9 to 10 a.m. at Briant Wells Field House. The instructor will be Jo Martineg.

The classes are free. For more information, contact Hazel Henry at 545-4726 or 545-4388.

Deer check station — The Department of Natural Resources deer check station, Building 5883, in Harmony Church is now open from 7:45 a.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

DNR staff members will take samples of blood and ticks to check for Lyme disease.

They will also weigh the deer, check its age and measure its antlers.

The check station will be closed Christmas Day.

Fitness Center – The Fort Benning's Officers' Club offers aerobics classes in the mornings and evenings. Classes are $15 monthly, a drop-in fee of $2 per visit. Nonmembers' fee is $18 monthly. The first visit is free.

The club also offers a martial arts (yoshukai) class Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7:30 to 10:30 p.m. Fee for the class is $30 a month, open to military and civillians at least 16 years of age.

Instructor Ron Zis has 23 years of experience in martial arts.

For more information about the Fort Benning Officers' Club Fitness Center, call 687-0871 or 682-1267.

Young bowlers wanted — The Young Americans Bowling Alliance is seeking young bowlers to compete in the winter leagues.

Bowlers must be between the ages of 6 to 18 years old. Participants will bowl every Saturday at 9:50 a.m.

An awards banquet will be at the Main Post Bowling Center at the conclusion of the league's season. Coaches are available for instruction.

For more information, call 687-7777 or 545-4272.

Bass club — Active duty and retired soldiers, Department of the Army civilians, and family members 16 years and older are eligible to join the Fort Benning Bass Club.

Meetings are the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at 7:30 p.m. at Victory Bait and Tackle, 3146 Victory Drive, Columbus.

Call Jack Pines at 687-1232 or 561-6337.

Menorah sheds light on Jewish tradition

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

Perhaps the truest and most pervasive symbol of the Jewish people is the Menorah.

Its construction was first commanded by God while Moses was standing on Mount Sinai.

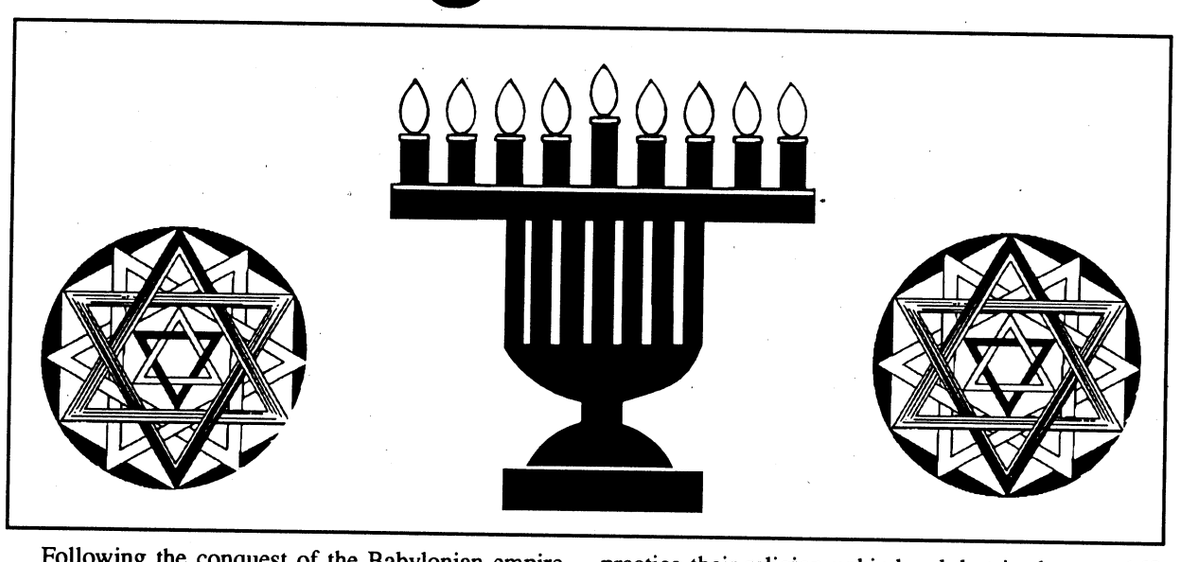
"You shall also make a lampstand of pure gold. Six branches shall come out of its sides; three branches on one side of the lampstand and three branches on the other side. You shall make seven lamps for it and arrange the lamps so that they give forth light." (Exodus 25:31 to 37).

The seven-branched Menorah stood in the tabernacle as the Israelites traveled through the wilderness towards the "Promised Land."

Once they settled in Israel and were able to live in peace, King Solomon erected the temple in Jerusalem, the capital city.

Within the anteroom to the "Holy of Holies" blazed the Menorah as it did in the tabernacle with seven lights to represent the six days of creation plus the seventh day of rest.

It was the responsibility of the priests, the descendants of Aaron, Moses' brother, to keep the lights burning at all times.



Following the conquest of the Babylonian empire, the first temple was destroyed. Soon after, under the protection of the Persian empire, the Jews were allowed to return to Jerusalem and rebuild the temple and, of course, the Menorah.

The Greeks defeated the Persians and took control of Jerusalem. For a while the Jews were allowed to practice their religion unhindered, but in the year 168 before the common era, everything changed.

When the Greeks forbade the practice of Judaism, they sent Jerusalem into chaos. A group of priests, teachers and others refused to accept the decree and rebelled.

After three years of rebellion and guerrilla warfare, the Greeks were defeated and the rebels, known as Maccabees, went to Jerusalem to reclaim it as theirs.

In the temple, they discovered filth and desecration, statues of Zeus and altars for pigs. They cleaned it out; and, to fulfill their God-given function, they went to the "Holy of Holies" to relight the Menorah.

They found enough oil to light the Menorah for a day or so. Concerned that the Menorah would go out before the Jewish oil pressers could make more oil, they were amazed that the oil miraculously lasted eight days. From then on, that victory and miracle are celebrated as the eight days of Hanukkah.

The Menorah that most people are familiar with has nine lights — eight for the eight days of Hanukkah and the ninth one to act as a serving light to light the others.

The Menorah that is being erected on Main Post on Fort Benning is a Hanukkah Menorah with nine lights. It will be presented to Fort Benning at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the Field of Four Chaplains, and the actual lighting of it in celebration of Hanukkah will begin Dec. 19 and end Dec. 27.

Choose safe toys for holidays

By Evelyn D. Harris
American Forces Information Service

Child-development experts say hat playing is children's work. They need to play to develop skills necessary to be competent adults. But unfortunately, children suffer ome on-the-job injuries.

Between January 1990 and September 1991, a total of 37 children died of toy-related njuries, according to the the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Many more were hurt. In 1991, about 163,600 toy-elated injuries required trips to emergency rooms.

Of these, 78,250 involved children under 5, according to Elaine Tyrrell, a Consumer Product Safety Commission spokeswoman.

Unfortunately, some were fatal. Most involved children choking on balloons or small balls. Toy testers use a cylinder with a one-inch diameter opening to test objects for safe use by children under age 3.

If you don't have a cylinder, ouch the tip of your thumb to the ip of your index finger. If the object can fit through the opening or has small parts that can break off, it is unsafe for children under .

But not all choking incidents nvolved the tiniest children; 5- and 6-year-olds also choked on balloons. Other toy-related deaths and serious injuries involved riding oys that were ridden into traffic, down steps, off balconies or into swimming pools.

Tyrrell said most toy deaths and njuries were not due to defective products, but to simple accidents or mproper use.

"Young children have to be watched carefully," she said. "Parents also need to teach them where they can safely ride. Young children think that if they can see a car, the driver can see them — they should be told that's not the case."

Strangulation also causes death for young children: Babies can hang themselves on, or become entangled in, crib toys and mobiles hung across a crib or playpen.

Nongunpowder firearms, such as BB guns or guns with rubber-tipped sticks, are another major source of injuries. Often these are shot toward the face or the pellets ricochet off other surfaces. And if real firearms are on an adult's gift list or are in the home, Navy Exchange Service Command spokesman John Russas suggests buying and using a trigger lock to protect curious children.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission does not classify bicycles as toys and lists them separately. In 1990, about 580,000 bicycle injuries required trips to the hospital. Approximately 350 children under 15 died in biking accidents, mostly from head injuries.

Tyrrell recommends giving a helmet along with the new bicycle. The Safe Kids Program, part of the curriculum at Department of Defense Dependents Schools and most public schools, emphasizes the importance of wearing helmets.

But helmets are not the only recommended safety gear.

"An attentive parent is the best way to ensure safety," said Richard Ziegler, chief of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service's Inspection Branch for Quality Assurance.

"I can't stress this point too often," said Ziegler. "Parents have to watch their children while they're shopping and while they're playing."

Toys should be kept in good repair, and broken toys that can't be fixed should be thrown away, he said.

Ziegler also said parents with children of several ages have to teach older children to keep inappropriate toys out of their baby brothers' and sisters' reach.

The quality assurance expert believes toys have become safer over the years. The Consumer Product Safety Commission and the military exchange systems work together to spot unsafe toys and keep them off or take them off the market.

Some things quality assurance people want to avoid are:

- Sharp points and edges.
- Small parts on toys for young children.
- Loud noises that can damage hearing.
- Absence of appropriate warnings, such as the warnings on cap guns not to fire them near the face or head.
- Burning hazards, such as toy stoves that can burn a child.
- Strangulation hazards.
- Entrapment hazards, such as toy chests that can smother or injure a child if the lid falls.

Toys babies chew on should be washable, Ziegler suggested.

"However," he said, "Safety warnings and well-designed toys are no substitute for proper supervision of children."

Actress visits local school

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Activities such as playing "Simon Says" and pretending their bodies were molding clay were part of the student-parent workshops conducted by actress Heather Heath at Edward A. White School during the past few weeks of her term as an artist-in-residence at the school.

Parents and students also worked in teams to "creatively" move from one part of the room to another. Heath's assignments allowed the participants to lose some of their inhibitions.

Throughout her residency, Heath has guided students in discovering their own creative potential while exploring the world of theater.

She is also working with students on a special Christmas presentation for parents to be performed Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the school's newly-completed auditorium.

A working actress in Atlanta for the past eight years, Heath is a graduate of Oxford College of Emory University and Florida State University.

She has worked with the Academy Theatre, Southern Theatre Conspiracy, Theatre in the Square and Theatrical Outfit and many independent projects.

The residency is sponsored by the Georgia Council for the Arts, Artist-in-Education Program, to bring professional artists into schools and communities.

1/29 makes donation to Santa's Castle

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The 29th Infantry Regiment donated $1,540 to Santa's Castle recently, according to Susan Eckhart, chairwoman at Santa's Castle.

The donations were raised through various fund-raising activities by the 1st and 2nd Battalions.

Money was raised during the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, noncommissioned officers' dining in and the officers' dining in, the 1st Battalion Pins for Presents Pioneer Bowling Tournament, and other fund-raisers.

The 2nd Battalion also raised money for donations to Santa's Castle.

Both battalions donated new and used toys and stuffed animals to be given to needy children.

Publications reduces operating hours, days

Post publications has changed hours as a result of reduced manpower resources.

Hours of operation will be 8 a.m to noon, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, and will be closed each Wednesday. Emergencies will be handled on a case-by-case basis.

Units must monitor oil levels of collection tanks

Units are reminded that oil collection tanks, from oil/water separators that are part of vehicle wash racks, must be monitored daily to determine oil levels.

When tanks are three-quarters full, units must contact Charles Sanders at 545-4749 or 545-4232 to have waste oil pumped.

Monitoring is a manual process requiring the units to verify the level of the oil either visually or by stick measure.

If the oil tanks are filled too much, an oil spill could result, which is a direct violation of the Clean Water Act.

Units will be responsible for the subsequent cleanup and disposal costs. The cost for disposal is $1.85 per pound. For more information, call 545-4749 or 545-4232.

Destin recreation area offers vacationers trip to paradise

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

In Destin, Fla., snowy egrets wade in the waters of the Gulf of Mexico's Emerald Coast. Quick-footed sandpipers dart across diamond white beaches. Sunshine gleams off the emerald green sea, and sand dunes spotted with sea oats and magnolias drift along the calm shoreline.

In Destin, Fla., time stands still, and for those who visit the U.S. Army Destin, Fla., recreation area, the rest of the world is forgotten.

The recreation area's 15 1/2 acres of land located on the shore of Choctawhatchee Bay provide active duty and retired military personnel, their families and guests many ways to unwind and enjoy a tropical vacation just 220 miles south of Fort Benning.

Vacationers find a home away from home when they return from a day of sunning on the beach, swimming in the warm Gulf waters, or fishing on the Gulf of Mexico.

The recreation area has 22 fully-furnished two- and three-bedroom cabins. Each has a screened porch, a patio with a barbecue grill and modern furniture. Some even have a romantic master bedroom overlooking the bay.

In addition, the recreation area has a 34-unit motel and 66 campsites, some with full hook-up facilities and others with water and electric only. Vacationers who visit the area regularly can store their trailers between visits for a low monthly fee. Tent camping is also available, and a bath house and on-sit laundromat make the area even more appealing.

Outside the lodging facilities, the options for action and relaxation are endless. All vacationers can take advantage of the recreation area's private beach. A small swimming pool sits just off the beach, and two full playgrounds help keep children entertained.

The recreation area's 300-foot pier is perfect for fishing and is a great place to watch for dolphins, crab, snails and other bay creatures.

The recreation area's marina provides even more activity. Hundreds of people a year depart the pier aboard Follow Me, the recreation area's 48-foot charter boat.

Follow Me departs the pier at 6 a.m. every day and takes up to 22 passengers offshore for an all-day deep-sea fishing adventure. Passengers can either fish or relax on deck.

For those who would rather boat on their own, the recreation area rents 24-foot pontoon boats, 14-foot jon boats, 14- and 16-foot sailboats, paddle boats and jet skis.

But the fun does not stop at the recreation area's borders. Destin is saturated with exciting attractions, including shopping areas, nightclubs and a variety of restaurants, serving the best in fresh seafood.

Golfers can spend countless hours on any of the Fort Walton/Destin area's numerous world class golf courses. All are just a short distance from the recreation area.

Eglin Air Force Base, the largest air base in the world, is located just 13 miles from the recreation area. Tours of the base are available from January through March and from June through August. Eligible personnel can also take advantage of the base's Commissary, Post Exchange and medical facilities.

The Gulfarium is also close and is a fun place to take children. Daily shows feature trained dolphins, sea lions, seals, otters, penguins and other sea animals.

Another great children's attraction is the zoo, located just a short 25 miles from the recreation area. The zoo is home for more than 80 species of animals.

Indian Temple Mound Museum is a fascinating way to spend a day. The museum houses more than 4,000 Native American artifacts.

Whether the vacation ideal is lounging on the beach, swimming, fishing, shopping or sightseeing, the recreation area at Destin has it all.

The snow white beaches surrounded by the sun-kissed Emerald Coast of the Gulf of Mexico makes a vacation in Destin a trip to paradise.

CTT

36th Eng. Grp. soldiers hone skills

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

The 63rd Combat Support Element conducted its Common Task Training operation Nov. 17 and 18 at a local field training site.

This was the first CTT operation for the unit since it became an active part of 36th Engineer Group July 17.

"We needed to find out just what our soldiers' strengths and weaknesses were, so we could plan a training schedule that would provide the time required to improve in those areas that showed a need," said 1st Sgt. Marcus Clay of the 63rd.

The training was set up in a field environment to give soldiers a touch of realism.

Sgt. 1st Class Timothy Magee, maintenance supervisor for the 63rd, was responsible for teaching basic rifle marksmanship.

"We conducted realistic training using the same standards on which the soldiers would be tested," said Magee. "Most of the troops were very receptive and had positive attitudes throughout the training."

"It was good training," said Sgt. Anthony Snincsak, an assistant squad leader for 2nd platoon, 2nd squad. "Overall, the instructors were subject matter experts, and each soldier received one-on-one help if needed. We ran to each station by squad so there was a lot of peer teaching and support among the squad members."

"The younger soldiers impressed me," said Staff Sgt. Daniel Mitchell, a transportation section sergeant. "I ran the pressure-dressing station, and it seemed that the younger soldiers paid a lot more attention to details than some of the more experienced ones. This training should be done more often than once a year, say each quarter, so it would remain fresh in the soldier's mind."

This was echoed by Clay.

"Although the company did very well, of the 110 soldiers tested, only 5 percent received a no-go in any of the 13 subjects tested, and some weaknesses did come out," he said. "We plan to change those to strengths by using a year-round training concept.

"Our squad leaders, under the supervision of the platoon sergeants, will have the responsibility of training the individual soldier to meet Army standards. When we have a field exercise, training on common tasks will be included," he said.

Soldiers vie for German award

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

Fort Benning units got the chance to compete for the German Armed Forces Efficiency Badge Nov. 30 to Dec. 3 to promote partnership between the German and American armies, according to Sgt. Maj. Karlheinz Nikolaus of Fort Benning's German liaison staff.

Lt. Col. Joerg Bahr, the German liaison officer, agreed with Nikolaus. "Now that American soldiers have competed with a foreign army, they are closer to that army than before."

German officials said the badge, called Leistungsabzeichen, certifies special leadership and physical fitness efficiency.

Events featured in the competition were a five-kilometer run and track and field meet, consisting of a 100-meter or 400-meter dash, long jump or high jump and shot put.

"A lot of people thought the track and field events would be easy." said Pfc. Greg Junge from Company B, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "But, we didn't practice these events, and some couldn't make it."

A 200-meter swim, 30-kilometer road march and 9mm pistol competition rounded out the different requirements for the German Efficiency Badge.

"I thought the swim was tough, but the road march was definitely harder," said Spc. Matthew Stanley of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion., 29th Infantry Regiment.

Staff Sgt. Douglas Fisher of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion talked about the 30-kilometer road march saying, "That last hill was really special."

The competition started with 33 participants who represented their units. Units included 1st and 2nd Battalions of the 29th Infantry Regiment; HHC, 29th Inf. Regt.; and the 4th and 5th Ranger Training Battalions. Only 14 soldiers qualified and were awarded either the gold, silver, or bronze medal for their efforts.

Gold medals were awarded to; Staff Sgt. Kevin Yungandreas from 29th Inf. Regt.; 1st Lt. Robert Dixon from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.; Pvt. 2 Phillip Erndon from 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.; and Staff Sgt. Douglas Fisher, Spc. Jason Bubie and Pvt. 2 Christopher Davis from 5th Ranger Training Battalion. Also, Spc. Robert Ortiz from 4th RTB received a gold medal.

Silver medals were awarded to Pvt. 2 Jason Noetzel and Pfc. Mark Smith from 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.; Spc. David Sticklar from 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.; and Spc. Christopher Piland, Pfc. Christopher Hendrickson and Pvt. 2 Patrick Culligan from 5th RTB.

A bronze medal was awarded to Pvt. 2 Jimmy Fairbanks from 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Nikolaus said they hope to offer opportunities for more soldiers to earn the German Armed Forces Efficiency Badge and the German Sport Badge in the next year.

WWII — A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• Rear Adm. Ruizo Tunaka led a failed Japanese supply operation to Guadalcanal, losing one destroyer and a significant amount of supplies.

Left with little chance of actually reaching the island, Tunaka's force threw 1,200 supply-filled containers overboard hoping that Japanese forces would retrieve them.

The plan fell far short of expectations, however, as machine gunners from American PT boats punctured and sunk all but 200 of the containers. After this, Tunaka's flotilla carried out several missions in an attempt to build an airfield on New Georgia to support the operations on Guadalcanal.

• In New Guinea, American forces attacked Buna village, successfully breaking through the weakened Japanese defense.

In the meantime, Japanese reinforcements landed 30 miles west of Gona and began to march to counterattack the Australian 21st Brigade.

• On the Eastern Front, German forces pushed their way slowly toward Stalingrad in an effort to reinforce the trapped German 6th Army. The Soviets began the next phase of their winter offensive, shattering the Italian 8th Army in the north.

The solid ice covering the completely frozen Volga River allowed the Soviets to resupply the 62nd Army on the west bank of Stalingrad.

• In North Africa, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel reconsolidated his Afrika Korps at Buerat, Libya, while the Allied Eighth Army, commanded by British Gen. Bernard Montgomery, forced the Germans out of El Agheila.

• On Fort Benning, drivers who broke the 35 mph speed limit on post had their gasoline rationing books withdrawn for two to four weeks as an arrangement between the Military Police and the Mileage Rationing Board took effect.

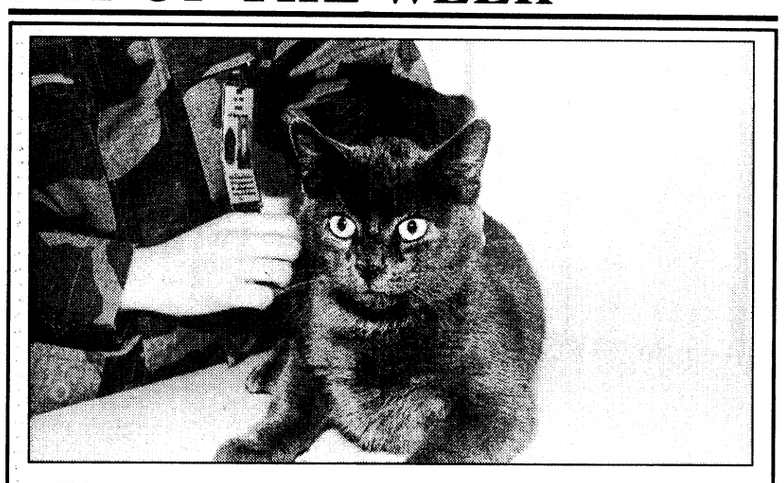
PET OF THE WEEK



This male, domestic short-haired cat is looking for a home. He is approximately 1 1/2 years old and is neutered. If you would like to adopt him, or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the last working day of each month.

Successful weight loss involves motivation

By Sarah L. Van Eden
Martin Army Community Hospital

Often people who are on a weight-loss program complain that their motivation is not what it was in the beginning.

Since staying motivated is the key to successful weight loss and weight maintenance, knowing the signs that motivation is waning and ways to maintain motivation can keep the weight-loss enthusiast from giving up.

Signs motivation may be decreasing:

- No longer weighing and measuring food for portion control.
- No longer reading food labels for fat content.
- Accepting foods that were previously avoided regularly.
- Nibbling during food preparation ("these calories do not count").
- Finding excuses to eat for emotional reasons.
- Feeling less control during social situations.
- Skipping or neglecting regular exercise ("the weather has been bad").
- Rationalizing that certain calories "don't count."
- No longer planning ahead, therefore settling for higher calorie choices away from home.

Reasons motivation is lost during weight-loss process:

- Weight loss plan too strict to live with.
- Not receiving compliments from relatives and friends.
- Hitting a plateau in which weight loss slows or stops, causing discouragement.
- Boredom with foods commonly consumed.
- Delayed gratification from weight loss (takes time to see tangible results).

Keeping motivated may not seem easy, but all efforts will pay off in the end. Remember to try to emulate behaviors practiced in the beginning of the weight-loss process.

Recognizing times when motivation tends to be lower and preparing in advance to deal with the situation can prevent a slip in motivation. For example, the time of day such as evenings, watching television or social activities may be a trigger to overeat or make unwise choices.

Removing yourself from the trigger or planning ahead to avoid catastrophes can prevent unfortunate detours from the weight-loss plan.

When the motivation is slipping, remember why originally embarked on a weight-loss program and ask whether giving in to temptation is worth sacrificing all the hard work.

In order to keep up the motivation, personal rewards can give the needed gratification to continue your weight loss program. However, be sure to reward yourself with nonfood items like a new aerobics tape.

If the exercise regimen seems to be decreasing, get started again. Exercise will accelerate weight loss by burning fat and give you a positive feeling about yourself.

TIPS FOR MAKING YOUR AD MORE EFFECTIVE

- Start Your ad with the item you are selling, service you are offering, or job title you are looking to hire.
- Be descriptive. The more information you provide to the reader, the better the responses will be to your ad.
- Use bold type, white space of decorative characters such as stars, to bring attention to your ad.
- Run your ad for an ample length of time. Remember, as soon as you get results, you can cancel at any time during regular business hours.
- Always include the price of your item.

Your Guide to Prime-Time TV: Cable and Broadcast Schedules

Catherine Oxenberg plays Princess Di again

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

The problems of England's royal family already have been covered by two TV movies this season, but ABC is hoping that viewers want another.

On Sunday, the network presents

SPOTLIGHT

"Charles and Diana: Unhappily Ever After," a depiction that automatically stands apart from the others for one reason: Not only are the title stars not unknowns, but the actress in question has her own history with her role. Former "Dynasty" regular Catherine Oxenberg made her acting debut 10 years ago in "The Royal Romance of Charles and Diana," one of two dramatizations televised shortly after the couple's wedding; moreover, as the daughter of Charles' second cousin (and the granddaughter of the former Regent of Yugoslavia), Oxenberg actually is related to the current monarchs of Great Britain.

In the new film, she and Roger Rees — the "Nicholas Nickelby" stage alumnus who also was a semi-regular on "Cheers," as Rebecca's (Kirstie Alley) love interest Robin Colcord — portray the maritally troubled spouses, with the relationship dilemmas of Princess Anne (played by Cate Fowler) and Prince Andrew (Benedict Taylor) also drawn into the teleplay by veteran TV writer Nancy Sackett. Another prominent character is Camilla Parker Bowles (Jane How), the socialite with whom the press alleged Charles continued a long liaison during his marriage.

Musing that she has "mileage on the other ones" in terms of all the actresses who have been appearing as Diana lately, the good-humored Oxenberg reveals she actually felt no advantage in having done the part previously. "Honestly, it's like playing two different characters," she maintains. "It was far more interesting and far more rewarding this time, because there was far more depth. The other (story) was just like a little fantasy, and she was more like a fictional character in that, because no one really knew anything about her then. That was like a sweet little fairy tale, while this shows a human being with many different dimensions and incongruities. I had archives of (film and videotape) footage to review and books to read, so I could really do a character study, which made this much more of an acting job than the first one."

Catherine Oxenberg and Roger Rees.

Though one might assume that her background has made her privy to the internal goings-on at Windsor Castle — where a big toll was taken recently by a major fire — Oxenberg states, "I've been wretched about that. I'm not a gossip-monger, and I had not been keeping up with all that was happening. I was really appalled when I read the (related) books, because I had no idea it had gotten that bad. I knew things weren't going great, but then again, I don't believe everything I read in the press. When I heard it was (Diana) who had really given the OK on the Andrew Morton book (the international best-seller "Diana: Her Own Story," which will become an NBC miniseries next spring), and that she had all that information to come out through her own close sources, that was when I knew that things must be really bad."

Oxenberg says she didn't feel compelled to watch her 1982 performance as Diana in preparing for her reprise, since she laughs, "There was not much there. It was the first acting I had ever done, but the critics were kind." This week's project was filmed mostly in Scotland, an option taken basically for the same reasons that October's CBS offering "The Women of Windsor" was shot in Ontario, Canada: the lack of cooperation that would have been likely from the British government, and the relentless scrutiny that would have been given the production by that nation's media. "They kept it a well-guarded secret that we were in Scotland," Oxenberg confirms, "and only one photographer managed to infiltrate the ranks. He was caught on the periphery of the property, lurching in a tree, and he was chased out promptly."

Explaining her own connection to the royal family is "tighter genetically than socially," Oxenberg acknowledges that

Fort Benning's environmental precautions noted Armywide

It is not a secret that Fort Benning soldiers train long and hard to stay ready for war. But the installation's environmental concerns have forced the home of the infantry to balance training and conservation practices. Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, Soldiers Television Service reports on what Fort Benning is doing to save an endangered bird.

Also featured on USAIC TV next week will be a look at some new Army environmental strategies — strategies that the Army's Environmental Protection Agency hopes will bring a more positive response than what it has been getting for the past few years.

Springer stages Christmas classic

Springer Opera House

A gaggle of Mother Goose characters team up with a pair of star-crossed lovers to save Christmas for all the world's children when Victor Herbert's immortal "Babes in Toyland" explodes onto the Springer Opera House stage today, Saturday, Dec. 18 and 19 at 7:30 p.m. Matinee performances will be at 2:30 p.m. Saturday, Sunday and Dec.19.

Allen O'Reilly of Atlanta, the show's guest director, has assembled a huge cast for the Christmas musical including one who has become an expert at yuletide musical shows at the State Theater of Georgia.

Cy Dietrich, returns to play the toy maker in "Babes in Toyland," recreating the same role he played in the Springer's 1986 production of the musical.

The accomplished singer and actor has also entertained countless local children over the years in "The Showmaker and the Elves," "The Wizard of Oz" and "A Christmas Carol."

"It's been a delightful experience getting to know the Springer family and working with this lovely agroup of people," O'Reilly said of his cast. "There seems to be a real excitement surrounding this theater right now, and I'm proud to be a part of the action."

The director explained that this production of "Babes in Toyland" mixes a variety of styles.

"From the first time I talked to Paul Pierce (the Springer's managing artistic director) about the show, we agreed that, above all else, the production needed to be colorful, fast-moving and visually fun. So I've taken a little bit of the older, turn-of-the century charm of Herbert's musical and added some contemporary MTV-type stage effects. What the audience should see is happy-go-lucky Christmas story with lots of nutty humor and physical movement."

Victor Herbert opened his musical Christmas fantasy in 1903 and is considered the first composer of the modern musical theater. His haunting, enchanting score conjures up the charm of a child's make-believe world where characters from fairy tales and children's legends come to life.

O'Reilly has had help in bringing Herbert's 89-year-old musical to the stage.

Imaginative sets designed by Mel Coe and a host of elaborate costumes by Coe will create a sense of pageantry when added to the special lighting and special effects by William Rich.

Dr. Paul Vander Gheynst, dean of Arts and Letters at Columbus College will conduct the orchestra and choral director Amy Bishop has directed the vocal arrangements for the show.

Tickets are $12, $10 for senior adults and $7 for students. Reservations may be made by calling the Springer Box Office at 327-3688.

'We Were Soldiers ... ' authors to speak here

By Tom Wilkinson
USAIC Public Affairs Office

Military history is what all soldiers read and learn lessons from — where better than here at the home of the infantry.

On Tuesday, soldiers at Fort Benning will get the chance to meet and listen to two individuals who made and documented history in Vietnam.

They are retired Lt. Gen. Harold
Galloway, and they have written a book about their lives in the Ia Drang Valley, Vietnam, in 1965.

Moore and Galloway will speak to students and faculty of the U.S. Army Infantry School in Marshall Auditorium Tuesday at 2 p.m. They will autograph copies of the book immediately following the address.

The book, "We Were Soldiers Once ... And Young," recounts the terror and exhilaration that many soldiers experienced in the "Valley of Death."

In four days in November 1965, 234 soldiers of the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment fell dead in the steaming jungle of Vietnam at Landing Zone X-Ray.

Moore, then a lieutenant colonel commanding the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry, and Galloway, a United Press International reporter working with the 1st Cavalry Division, witnessed up front, the first major battle in the undeclared war — the battle that would, according to the authors, alter the course of the war irrevocably.

COMMENTARY

The book depicts this decisive action from the perspective of both sides, the United States and the Vietnamese, and in its proper historical context — the actions that ensued at Landing Zone X-Ray and Albany.

The book sums up mental pictures of the rage, horror and sorrow of war, the bravery of those who survived and its long-lasting effects.

"Uncommon valor truly was a common virtue on the field at Landing Zone X-Ray," say the authors. "Acts of valor and sacrifice that on other fields, on other days, would have been rewarded with the Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross or Silver Star, but instead were recognized only with a telegram saying, 'The Secretary of the Army regrets ...' "

This book really puts the reader in the jungle at LZ X-Ray. It is a gut-wrenching account of what war is like — told by men who experienced it.

Moore is a graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, master parachutist and former commanding general of Fort Ord, Calif. Galloway is now a senior writer with U.S. News and World Report.

"Obviously, because of my profession, I've distanced myself. I don't see myself as protecting anybody, though, I just see myself as an actress. I think for many performers who play royalty, it can be intimidating, but (such characters) are simply people to me. The emotions are the same, even if the circumstances are more restrictive. Still, I'm sensitive to the media (treatment of the matter), and I was appalled when I read the script for the CBS movie. It was so frightening that I decided I was not interested in portraying Diana again unless (the approach) was more favorable, and as far as I'm concerned, she is the heroine of this piece."

THE BAYONET®

Fort Benning's authorized newspaper — Home of the Infantry

Volume 51, Number 12 — Published in the interest of the Fort Benning, Ga., community

Richard Brill/Special to The Bayonet

And I want ...

Christopher, 5, and Hilary, 5 months, are hoping Santa will bring them what they want. The children of 2nd Lt. Chris and Sue Durham, met Santa Sunday during the Fort Benning Officers' Club Christmas Super Brunch.

CG focuses on future

Editor's note: The Bayonet interviewed Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White in the second of a series of articles on the state of the post. This article focuses on post achievements in 1992 and projected changes for the future.

By Karen S. Morarie
Bayonet staff writer

Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White

"Looking back over the last year, I've been amazed at what we've been able to accomplish," said Fort Benning Commanding General Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White, who took the opportunity recently to assess the post's accomplishments over the last year and to outline plans for the future.

"With very limited resources, we've still made significant improvements. That's due to everyone's efforts; soldiers, civilians and family members have all pulled together to make this a great year.

"I'm very pleased about what we've been able to accomplish," White said. "The year exceeded my expectations in a lot of ways. Winning the Training and Doctrine Command Communities of Excellence award was a prime example. We came a long way to make that happen, upgrading services and quality of life for everyone here.

"We've also hosted some major events," the commanding general continued. "The Conseil International du Sport Militaire championships were a tremendous undertaking, and we pulled it off superbly."

White stressed that quality of life issues are a major concern as the force gets smaller and funding is cut.

"As money gets tighter, we must continue to demonstrate that we are the first team," he said. "Quality soldiers wouldn't be here otherwise. The Army is and will be a great opportunity for young soldiers, and we have to make sure that we continue to maintain and improve conditions for them.

"We have remodeled the post library, built a Family Unit Network Center that's the first of its kind anywhere, instituted a Utilities Coordination Center that will make life easier for inprocessing soldiers, and the new Thrift Shop is incredible," White said.

"We've made major improvements to the Officers' Club and the noncommissioned officers' club. I believe they are two of the best to be found anywhere. We're planning a completely new enlisted club as well, which should be finished sometime in the late summer."

"We plan to continue improvements over the coming years," White said. "In 1993, along with the enlisted club, we're continuing improvements at the Uchee Creek Recreation Center and at Destin Recreation Area, barracks renovations and doing some needed work in family housing.

"We want to continue to be on the leading edge," White said. "We can't take any backward steps. For us to stay on course, it's essential that we have the full support of the entire community. We need everyone to keep looking for ways to be more efficient, and we need to keep cutting down on waste."

White also addressed safety concerns at the post level. "We've done reasonably well in safety over the last few months," he said, "but in 1992 as a whole we had six preventable accidental deaths. It hurts when you go to a memorial service for a soldier who was killed needlessly.

"Handguns and alcohol abuse continue to be major safety concerns," White said. "The Military Police are instituting new procedures to help prevent drunk driving incidents, and we're continuing to focus on educating people about handguns. It's my responsibility to protect the soldiers on this post, and I take that responsibility very seriously."

The commanding general then outlined changes taking place relating to training.

"Change is definitely taking place, and dealing with it will be a challenge," he said. "The changes are revolutionary, not evolutionary — doing things in completely new ways. The TRADOC battle lab concept is revolutionary and Fort Benning is playing a key role with the dismounted battle lab located here. We are in the business of determining the right mix for doctrine, leader development and materiel for the future.

"The major challenge here will be for the officers and NCOs to expand their thinking to include new applications of concepts they haven't dealt with before," White said. "Change isn't easy, but it's very necessary as we develop a smaller, highly efficient, power-projection Army.

"We'll have more changes with training techniques and equipment over the next several years," White said. "Because of funding restrictions, we'll use more and more simulation. In fact, we're building a state-of-the-art simulation facility now for our dismounted battle lab."

"We're always working hard on soldier systems such as the protective ensemble equipment that's being developed," the chief of infantry said. "We need to explore this new technology, even if some of it's not practical now. The new weapons sights, the communication equipment and the land navigation equipment will be extremely valuable to a smaller Army.

"Our objective is to own the night," White said. "Future combat will be decided by which troops have the technological edge, and this equipment will help us to dominate enemy forces before they even know we're there, before their weapons can reach us.

"The main thing that will continue to make the Army successful is the quality of today's soldiers," White said. "Today's soldiers are computer smart, and they understand technology. They grasp new concepts quickly and they're eager to learn new ways of doing things.

"The soldier will continue to be challenged," White said. "The Army will continue to expect a lot from its soldiers, but I think it will remain a great place to work and live. With budget cuts, new technology and a new administration, change is certainly coming — our challenge is to stay ahead, to keep our edge.

"I'd like to end by wishing everyone on Fort Benning a happy holiday," White said. "I encourage everyone to take advantage of the opportunity to relax and enjoy spending time with family and friends — you've certainly earned it."

36th prepares for Somalia

By David Greer
36th Engineer Group

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group are preparing for deployment to Somalia.

According to Col. Phillip Anderson, commander of the 36th, the soldiers will be providing engineer support to the 10th Mountain Division of Fort Drum, N. Y.

The 36th's mission will include building roads and bridges to ensure the delivery of humanitarian aid being transported by trucks, Anderson said. The 36th will also be building support facilities for the troops sent over, he said.

The Group could leave as early as Christmas, Anderson said, but no firm date has been set at this time.

The commander went on to say that because of the ever-changing mission requirements, the exact units and number of soldiers to deploy keep changing.

"Each unit and soldier alerted may not go, but each will have ample time to fully prepare for deployment," Anderson said. "This includes making sure the families are prepared for the separation."

The soldiers began the soldier readiness process Dec. 10 at Audie Murphy fitness center. The process will ensure each soldier's personal readiness, Anderson said.

Soldiers will go through several stations to update their personal files, the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance, immunizations, vision and the status of their family care plans.

"I'm ready to go," said Spc. Winter Miller, a clerk/typist for the 36th Engineer Headquarters. "We're well-trained and can do the job needed."

David Greer

Administrative specialists assist 43rd Engineer Battalion soldiers during the readiness process.

Sgt. 1st Class Fletcher Bailey, the security manager for the 36th, echoed Miller's positive attitude.

"It's a very worthwhile cause," Bailey said. "But, it's at an inconvenient time for the families of the soldiers. This deployment shows that the American soldier and his family are ready and willing to sacrifice to aid others whenever the need arises."

Throughout the 36th Group, family care networks are being set up and points of contacts for each unit are being established.

The 36th will be deployed until the mission is completed, Anderson said.

Santa's Castle helps 858 children

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Their work for this holiday season is basically done.

Fort Benning's Santa's Castle, an organization that helps provide toys and gifts for families of needy soldiers, has already helped 858 children this season, according to chairwoman Susan Eckhart.

That's up over last year's 770, and they're still taking stragglers here and there until Christmas Eve, Eckhart said.

Eckhart said that soldiers must be referred by their first sergeants or company commanders in order to receive help from Santa's Castle.

The shopping days for most of their referrals were the first part of December.

Santa's Castle is a volunteer organization that works all year long to help out at this time of the year. Castle volunteers will begin making plans for Christmas 1993 in January.

Operation Holiday to kick off today

Operation Holiday kicks off today on the plaza level of the Columbus Government Center at 11 a.m.

The ceremony will mark the official start of the yearly program that provides a variety of entertaining activities for soldiers who cannot make it home for the holidays.

The ceremony will be attended by officials from Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City, including Association of the United States Army Chapter President retired Lt. Gen. Ben Register, Assistant Commandant Brig. Gen. John W. Hendrix, Columbus Mayor Pro-Tem A.J. McClung and Phenix City Mayor Sonny Coulter.

Soldiers from the 36th Engineer Group, the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division and the Infantry Training Brigade will also attend the ceremony, which will include entertainment by Miss Columbus Simone Savoy.

Since 1980, Operation Holiday has offered soldiers a variety of free activities, including musical entertainment, tours of local attractions and tickets to college and professional sporting events.

AUSA sponsors Operation Holiday through fund-raisers and donations from area individuals and businesses.

"The Columbus and Phenix City communities have always been extremely supportive and a great help," said Jim Gallagher, executive vice president of AUSA. "Whatever Operation Holiday has needed, they have provided."

For more information on events, call Gallagher at 545-4426.

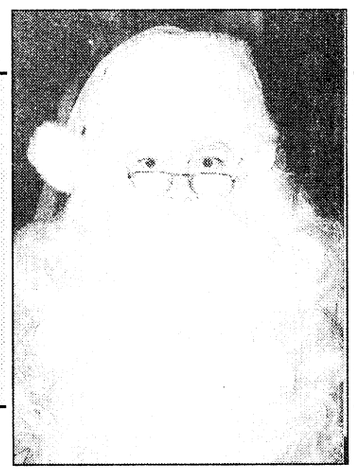
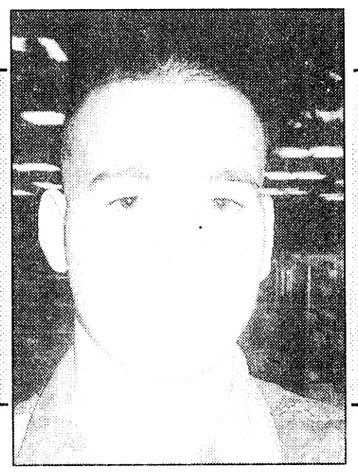
VARIOUS VOICES

What was your most memorable or unusual Christmas?

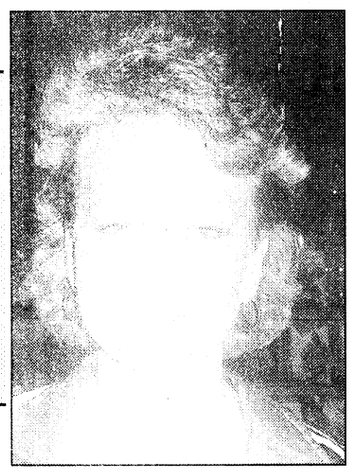


Santa Claus, toy development and distribution — "The most memorable Christmas I had was the year Rudolph led the team — it was the closest we ever came to not getting all the children's presents delivered."

Spc. Carla Brown, School of the Americas — "My most memorable Christmas was the year I was in Germany. It was my first Christmas away from home, but it was fun."

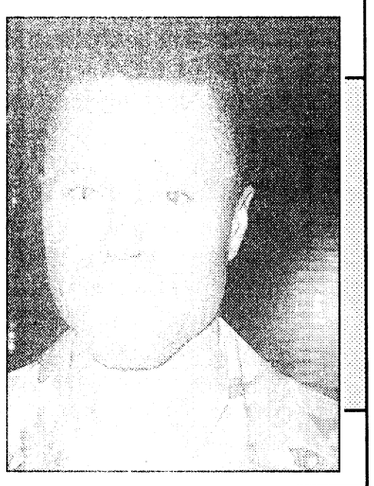


Pfc. Marc Gonzales, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment — "The Christmas I remember best was in 1989 because I went back to Germany and saw the wall come down"



Warrant Officer 1 Cindy Anderson, Fort Rucker, Ala. — "My most memorable Christmas was when I was about 8 and my German grandmother came to visit for the holidays. We hadn't seen her in a long time, and it was a present for the whole family."

Gina Williams, family member— "Last year was my most memorable Christmas, because my husband was home from Saudi Arabia, and it was his first Christmas with our 1-year-old daughter."



Sfc. Randy Baldwin, Company C, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — "My most memorable Christmas was when I got married — it was over the Christmas holidays."

Christmas spirit? Bah, humbug!

COMMENTARY

The Christmas spirit is certainly infectious around the office.

It may have had something to do with the traditional office Christmas party, held the traditional way in a Chinese restaurant (we all sang Christmas carols in Cantonese).

But anyway, Ms. Editor, the woman who sits on the right hand of God, let me know in no uncertain terms that my first attempt at a Christmas column was junk and she expected something more in the spirit of the season – or else.

I tried to get Professor Moriarity to write it for me since she's always so "up with life," and is really into the Christmas spirit (kind of sickening, but she's that kind of person).

That idea was nixed.

"The professor has more than enough to do than have to do your work, too," Ms. Holier-Than-Any-of-Us Editor proclaimed, loftily.

I was thinking about asking B.S. but I knew Smurfman would cheerfully tell me that he was way, way too busy to help.

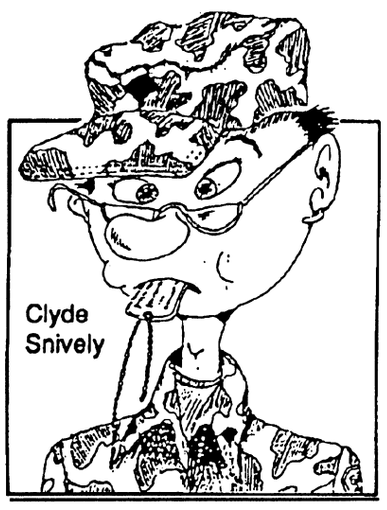
So here I sit. Deadline minutes away and I have to get into the Christmas spirit.

How can I get into the Christmas spirit without a tree to decorate at home? I hate these native, pre-shaped pine trees they try to pawn off as Christmas trees, but I can't afford any of those import jobs from North Carolina.

So I keep holding off, thinking the prices will drop (I know, they give them away free Dec. 26).

Then there's the question of the traditional Christmas meal. Do you do the dining facility gig, or stay home and eat? And if you stay at home, do you eat turkey, ham, meatloaf or Chinese noodles?

And finally there's the gifts for the ankle-biters and the spouse. Fortunately Emma takes care of the kids. That leaves me with trying to read Emma's mind and figure out what she wants. I know she doesn't want butcher knives or vacuum cleaners, "I want something personal and something that doesn't spell `W.O.R.K.'" she says dustily.



I'd get her clothes, but women don't wear clothes that tell men how large they are. They come in numbers that have no bearing on size. Then there's those nebulous descriptions such as, "petite" and "large."

I'd get her perfume, but I can never remember the name of the stuff she uses and one day I discovered a cache of bottles I'd bought her hidden in her lingerie drawer.

There's a lot of neat stuff in the hardware department, but I astutely determined that she probably wouldn't know what to do with a band saw and would probably not get wound too tightly over a cordless screwdriver.

We've got a television that works, our videocassette recorder is good for changing channels remotely, and there's a radio in each room of the house (all on different stations), so scratch the audio-visual department.

That about leaves luggage and jewelry.

I won't get her any suitcases because I don't want to give her any ideas. Jewelry is probably a good bet, but what can you get that's inexpensive but doesn't look cheap? And in the back of my mind there's something about earrings. She either has or doesn't have pierced ears and apparently pierced earrings are not compatible with unpierced ears and vice versa.

Well, I've still got six shopping days to figure out something.

And oh, by the way, Merry Christmas and happy holidays to all of you. (Whew, that gets me out of sending out Christmas cards.)

CG extends holiday greetings, cheer

The holidays of Hanukkah and Christmas are among the happiest and most cherished of the year.

These festivals are rich in meaning and tradition for both Jews and Christians. Light comes into a darkened world. All join together in celebrating faith in God and dedication to world peace.

Hanukkah, or the Festival of Lights, commemorates a hardfought victory by the Jewish people over oppression and tyranny. We give thanks for the sacrifices they made and the inspiration of their lives.

The Christmas season celebrates the birth of the Christ child. The first Christmas message, "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men," rings true today and in a special way for all serving in the armed forces. The spirit of Christmas and Hanukkah reinforces the conviction that we will work continually toward the achievement of world peace and goodwill.

May each of you enjoy a safe and happy holiday season, and may God bless you in the coming new year.

Chief of staff congratulates post for ACOE

Congratulations! I am happy to announce that Fort Benning is one of 13 installations selected to compete in the finals for the Army Communities of Excellence Best Army Installation in the World Competition.

As finalists, we are now competing to win the Army's Commander-in-Chief Award that is worth $1.5 million; however, if we are not selected as the CINC winner, we still have a chance to win the Best Large Installation Award worth $1 million as we compete against Forts Sill, Okla., and Lewis, Wash.

The runner-up in this category will receive $250,000 and placing third amounts to $100,000.

The commanding general and I want to convey our appreciation to all the members of this fine installation for your untiring support and superb efforts in reaching this milestone.

Disseminate our gratitude and appreciation to your soldiers, civilians and family members for their contributions in reaching this band of excellence.

Continue to stress the importance of their efforts as we strive together as a team toward the ultimate community recognition award.

In preparation for the Department of Army ACOE team visit, which we anticipate will occur sometime between Feb. 1 and April 2, review and revise, as necessary, your respective areas of responsibilities that may be subject to inspection.

Any questions regarding the visit should be addressed to Sara McLaney, Fort Benning's ACOE officer and coordinator, at 545-7283.

Continue to adhere to your Total Army Quality goals and Community of Excellence plans, and accept the challenge to be named as the Best Army Installation in the world.

Alcohol-related crashes No. 1 killer of young adults

U.S. Army Safety Center

The number one killer of teens and young adults in the United States is alcohol-related highway crashes.

A young American dies about every three hours in an alcohol-related vehicular crash. That's almost nine teens per day — the starting lineup of a baseball team.

The Office of the Inspector General found that two-thirds of teen-agers who drink — almost 7 million youth — buy their own alcohol.

One of the report's conclusions is that on the one hand parents and the public at large remain indifferent when it comes to underage drinking; on the other hand, youth are vulnerable to a barrage of messages from many directions encouraging them to drink.

A generation has grown up surrounded by slogans — on buttons, bumper stickers, billboards and milk cartons, in radio and television spots — urging them to "Just Say No."

Primarily, they've been admonished to "Just Say No to Drugs." Among many youth who stay in school, use of the so-called illicit drugs has declined, a very good thing for everyone's health and safety.

But "no" doesn't seem to mean what it used to when it comes to alcohol. This is especially important when it comes to drinking and driving.

While we've been telling our children to just say no to some drugs, we've also been telling them (and everyone else) not to drink and drive.

But, here's where the word "no" begins taking on shadings and variations and ambiguities. In spite of the law, many adults tolerate, even condone, adolescent drinking. They rationalize, "At least they're not on drugs."

Particularly for young people, it may be easy to translate anti-drinking-driving themes into meaning that drinking, even heavy drinking, is OK as long as you don't drive.

Youth, alcohol and driving is a recipe for tragedy wherever it occurs. It's time we made use of their awareness of anti-drinking and driving messages.

Parents, educators, community leaders and law enforcement officials all need to deliver firm, clear messages about compliance with the national 21 minimum drinking age. Communities need to decide what they can do to make clear that "no" means "NO"— in no uncertain terms — when it comes to underage alcohol use.

Co-workers, friends mourn loss of fellow employee

This letter is in memory of Hubert (Slim) Fears, who was killed in an automobile accident on South Lumpkin Road Nov. 24.

A news article in the Nov. 25 edition of the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer about the accident did not explain who Fears was and did not list his exact place of employment.

Fears was a dedicated, well-liked employee of the Fort Benning Billeting Branch, Housing Division.

He worked at Billeting for 13 years, the last five years in the Customer Service Section, and he was recently given a cash award for training a new employee.

Fears leaves a void that will not easily be filled, both in his work ethic and in the hearts of his many friends and co-workers.

Holidays can bring low spirits

Civilian Counseling Services offers tips to survive season

By Richard Brill

Special to The Bayonet©

The holiday period is supposed to be a time of joy and happiness; but, for many people, it can be the most stressful and depressing time of the year.

For a variety of reasons, from dislike of social gatherings to being alone or separated from loved ones, the Christmas season can be an uphill struggle.

"Memories of unhappy holidays can also contribute to emotional lows and strange feelings of sadness," said Yvonne Wilbanks, coordinator of the post's Civilian Counseling Services.

She said that some signs that a person may be emotionally distressed include: changes in eating and sleeping habits; withdrawal from family and friends; an unwillingness to participate in holiday functions; unusual giving of extravagant gifts or personal possessions for no apparent reason; unexplained, sudden or extreme personality changes; and thoughts of suicide.

Any talk or threats of suicide should be taken seriously, Wilbanks said. Encourage the person to seek professional help or seek help on their behalf.

Wilbanks also gave some helpful hints that can be used to fight holiday depression.

• Get involved in helping others who are less fortunate.

• Talk about your feelings with a trusted friend, counselor or partner.

• Get plenty of exercise.

Avoid alcohol, which acts as a depressant.

• Ask for help if your feelings get out of control.

• Participate in a hobby.

• Write to and call your friends and loved ones.

• Get in touch with your spiritual beliefs.

Wilbanks also reminded all Department of Defense civilians and their family members that they can take advantage of the confidential screening and referral services offered by the Civilian Counseling Services on post.

Call 545-2475 or 545-4821 for more information.

Post begins controlled burning

Natural Resources Management Branch

Prescribed burning of various compartments on Fort Benning in accordance with the recommended three-year burning cycle began Dec. 1.

This cycle or rotation has been recommended to enhance and maintain the red-cockaded woodpecker's habitat.

The woodpecker is endangered and burning is critical to its survival, officials said. Pine and pine-hardwood stands within one-half mile of a colony or cluster site will be burned.

In addition to improving habitat for endangered species, such as the red-cockaded woodpecker, gopher tortoise and pitcher plant, burning has other benefits when applied in a prescribed manner. Some of these benefits are:

• Improved foraging habitat for deer.

• Improved access and visibility for turkeys.

• Reduced fuel accumulation and frequency of training fires.

• Maintenance of the early successional stage preferred by quail.

• Enhanced training as a result of improved access and visibility.

Compartments scheduled for prescribed burning will be coordinated by Range Control.

Since compartments must be scheduled well in advance because of training, they must be reserved several days at a time to ensure burning is done within prescribed weather conditions, officials said.

Although this method of scheduling will impose a temporary inconvenience, it is necessary to ensure the safety of all users of Fort Benning's woodlands to include troops, hunters and others pursuing recreational opportunities, officials said.

Post residents can check the range clearance maps daily until March 15 for areas that are subject to burning.

Post residents and units should plan training or recreational activities outside the scheduled compartments, officials said.

CRIME WATCH

Military Police Activity

The following entries were taken from the Fort Benning Military Police blotters. Such entries may be incomplete and are not the adjudication of the guilt and/or innocence of any person.

The hot topic this week is driving under the influence of alcohol. Many intoxicated drivers will be on the road during the holiday season. Police agencies use additional patrols during this time to keep as many intoxicated drivers off the road as possible.

The Military Police Activity has added an additional safety measure this year, providing courtesy rides that will be available from any on-post location to quarters or barracks, with no questions asked.

•A private first class was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and failure to drive on a roadway laned for traffic. He failed a field sobriety test but refused a breathalyzer test. His driving privileges were immediately suspended for one year (according to Army Regulation 190-5) for refusal to take a lawfully requested test.

•A family member was charged with assault after hitting her husband in the face during a domestic dispute. The husband, while attempting to leave, was further kicked and hit by his wife until he got in his car and drove away.

• A private first class was charged by civil authorities with speeding, fleeing and eluding, driving under the influence of alcohol and driving without a valid driver's license. The soldier, attempting to elude police, drove to a nightclub parking lot and shut off his headlights. He was apprehended and administered a breathalyzer test.

• A family member was charged with fraud after altering repair receipts for a government claim.

• This week's booby prize is awarded to a second lieutenant.

It is reported that the second lieutenant was stopped at a traffic light when a car slightly struck his truck in the rear bumper. The second lieutenant exited his truck with his personal .45-caliber pistol and walked toward the car.

The driver of the car maneuvered around the second lieutenant's truck and drove away. The second lieutenant fired a shot toward the car, striking a private first class who was a passenger in the back seat.

The private first class was taken to the hospital where he was treated for a nonlife-threatening injury. The incident took place off post and the second lieutenant has been charged and bound over to the Georgia Superior Court.

Other activity included 13 traffic accidents, six reports of shoplifting, 13 cases of driving under the influence, 13 reported cases of larceny of private property and five reported cases of larceny of government property.

Remember to help "Mpake Our Post the Best – Give Crime Arrest!"

Report any activity that seems wrong or out of place to the Military Police at 545-5222.

FOR THE RECORD

The Dec. 11 issue of The Bayonet included an article about changes to the cost of inpatient care under the Civilian Health and Medical Program for the Uniformed Services . The article quoted a flat fee of $425 for a family member stay in a civilian hospital. The figure should have been $25.

OPENS FRIDAY, DECEMBER 25TH AT A THEATRE NEAR YOU

Benning firefighter top exec

By Richard Brill
Special to The Bayonet©

The professionalism of a Fort Benning firefighter has won him recognition Armywide.

Arthur E. Simmons, chief of the Fire Prevention and Protection Division of the Directorate of Public Works, was selected as the Army's 1992 Directorate of Engineering and Housing Support Executive of the Year.

The Department of the Army award was given to Simmons at a Springfield, Va., ceremony Dec. 8 by Chief of Engineers Lt. Gen. Arthur Williams.

The award recognizes Simmons for his "managerial excellence and enhanced productivity," and commends him for "his outstanding achievement in supporting the engineering operations, maintenance and repair mission at Fort Benning," according to the citation.

Simmons said the real winners of the award are the people who work for him.

"This is not an award I won by myself," he said. "This is an award I happened to be recognized for because I'm captain of the ship, but there are a lot of other people who actually make the ship sail."

"There are a lot of people to thank who made this award possible," Simmons added. "The first is God. The second is my wife of 34 years, Henrietta. I couldn't do anything without her. Next is my boss, John Baggett, who has supported me and lets me do my job. I also have to thank my secretary Jeri White, who is more valuable than she could ever know. Nothing can happen without the paperwork being done, and she keeps it moving."

Simmons especially expressed his thanks for the professionalism and dedication of the chief officers, supervisors and firefighters.

"I am very proud of all of them. They care about their jobs and about providing quality service to the people of Fort Benning, who are our customers," he said.

Simmons left the Navy in 1961 and in 1967 was employed at the Fire Department at Camp Pendleton, Calif. Over the years, he has worked almost continuously with military fire departments, including positions at various Marine, Army and Air Force bases.

"I have loved every minute of my work with the military," Simmons said.

Simmons assumed his present position in January 1989 and is very proud of the accomplishments of the post's Fire Department.

"Fort Benning has an excellent Fire Department. I think a lot of people on post really don't realize this. The personnel are truly outstanding and as professional as can be. I would rank the post's Fire Department alongside the best. I have talked to personnel from some of the nation's major fire departments and have seen how they operate. They don't have anything over us; they're just a little busier."

Simmons said he is especially impressed with the way that professionalism has increased among the personnel of the Fire Department.

"Professionalism has risen and at the same time our mission has been changing. Over the last 10 years our mission has really expanded. We do a lot more than just fight fires." Simmons said the Fire Department acts as a response team to a variety of different emergencies, from rescuing cats in trees to extricating victims from car wrecks. The department maintains a water rescue team, is prepared to do heavy rescue work during storms, conducts safety inspections of the post's 25 million square feet of floor space, gives public fire safety education classes and fills and maintains all the fire extinguishers on post.

He is also extremely proud of the post's Hazardous Materials First Responders' Management School, which trains personnel from all service branches and government agencies to react to emergencies involving hazardous materials, such as chemical spills.

"Students come from all over the nation, even from as far away as Alaska and California," said Simmons. "We've even had students from Panama, and the school is ranked by the Environmental Protection Agency as one of the top five schools nationally," said Simmons.

Simmons said that although he is proud to have won the award, being a professional is his first concern.

"I don't try to win these things, but I'm happy when they come along. I just try to do my job," he said.

Gen. Colin Powell to visit Columbus

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce Jan. 7.

After arriving at Lawson Army Airfield at 3 p.m., Powell will proceed to a road dedication ceremony in Phenix City, where the Broad Street extension will be named in his honor.

He will speak at the meeting at the Columbus Hilton later that evening.

Powell's wife, Alma who will be accompanying him, will be honored at a 4:30 p.m. reception sponsored by the Officers' Wives' Club, according to Conie Reamy, president.

Reamy said that the reception will be open to OWC members, sergeants major's wives' and guests of OWC members. It will be limited to the first 250 reservations and will cost $6 per person.

It is expected that a receiving line will last for 30 minutes, to be followed by a 20-minute talk by Powell, who will then need to leave and join her husband.

For more information or reservations for the reception, call OWC at 687-3537.

Games continue with No Mercy

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The Infantry Training Brigade and the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division basketball programs are well under way at Santiago Fitness Center at Sand Hill.

Here is a wrap-up of games played Thursday night.

Headquarters Services Company (No Mercy) vs. 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment (Mailed Foot).

No Mercy scored a victory over Mailed Foot 56-47, led by the tandem of Gerard Williams and Fred Hannah.

Williams and Hannah each hit for 15 points and Lewis Hall chipped in 11 to outdistance Mailed Foot.

No Mercy built as much as a 15-point lead late in the second half.

Henry Johnson kept Mailed Foot in the game with 18 points, 12 in the first half.

Willie Black knocked down 15 and Don Hutchings added 10 for Mailed Foot.

1st Battalion, 38th Infantry Regiment (Rock of The Marne) vs. 3rd Battalion, 32nd Infantry Regiment (Queen's Own).

Queen's Own pulled out a squeaker over Rock Of The Marne, 49-46. Robert Amaker hit one of two with less than 20 seconds left in the game; then he grabbed the rebound off his second shot to seal the win.

In a low-scoring first half, The Rock held a 22-19 lead, then watched as Queen's Own built a 10-point lead late in the second half behind the hot shooting of Jerald Russell who finished the game with 19 points.

Geoffry Kolanowski added 13 and Amaker tipped in 8 to lead Queen's Own.

The Rock cut the lead to two at 48-46 with 24 ticks left on the clock.

Amaker was fouled and went to the line to shoot a one and one. He made the first shot and missed the second. Amaker grabbed the rebound and was able to keep the ball away from The Rock as time ran out.

Gary Wiltshire and Fernando Torres each scored 12 points each and Ivan Oztolaza added seven in a gallant effort by The Rock.

Company E, 2nd Battalion 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division (Eagles) vs. Company B, 2nd Bn. 18th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Bde. 24th Inf. Div. (Bulls).

The Bulls held the Eagles to 11 points in the first half while scoring 28 points of their own and led by as many as 17 points in the second half. Rounda Dixon scored 12 points to lead the Bulls; Orlando Sanchez chipped in 8 and Perry Taylor added 7.

The Eagles were paced by Patrick Miller with 9 and Mario Gabriel hit 8.

Early in the first half, the Bulls shut down the Eagle offense with a stingy defense not allowing the Eagles any second chance shots at the basket.

The Bulls, on the other hand, pounded the glass keeping the ball alive for second and third shots.

Competitors shoot it out

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The 1992 U.S. Army Infantry Center Small Arms Championships Tuesday through Thursday at McAndrews and Shelton ranges drew 170 shooters from almost every major unit on post.

A blustery north wind throughout the week had shooters competing not only against their fellow soldiers but against a wind chill factor in the mid 20s as well.

Listed are the winners from individual and team competition in the M-16A2 rifle, 9mm pistol and the M-60 machine gun categories.

Staff Sgt. Kenneth Gill of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Infantry, 11th Infantry Regiment won the 100-, 200-, 300- and 400-yard competitions in standing, sitting and prone positions with a score of 383.

Gill also won the Excellence in Competition award for the M-16A2 category with a score of 229.

The grand aggregate title also went to Gill with a combined score from the individual and EIC competition of 612.

In team competition, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th Inf., 11th Inf. Regt. captured first place in the team match, combat team match and combat team aggregate with scores of 823, 497 and 1,320, respectively. Team members were: Gill, Sgt. 1st Class Ricky Good, Sgt. 1st Class John McMorran, Pvt. 2 Michael Ricklefs, Sgt. Donald Young and Staff Sgt. Charles Wittmack.

In 9mm individual pistol competition, Col. Lawrence White, commander of the 11th Inf. Regt., took top honors with a score of 833. The 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. won the pistol team match, Patton match and team match grand aggregate with scores of 1,065, 1,469 and 2,534. Team members were: Sgt. Donald Stewart, Pvt. 2 John Kimbrough, Cpl. Eric Linch, Spc. Richard Hahn, Sgt. Robert Stevens Jr. and Staff Sgt. Walter Simpson.

The Excellence in Competition award in the 9mm category went to Sgt. Martin Edmondson of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit with a score of 284.

The M-60 machine gun individual competition saw Spc. Jason Benham of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. with a score of 294 to take first place.

In team competition, Staff Sgt. David Rogers and Staff Sgt. Paul Frischkorn of the Bradley Instruction Course, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt. won the M-60 competition hands down.

"We didn't do very well as individuals; but, as a team, we came together at the right time," said Rogers.

IOAC students, cadre vie for Iron Mike triathlon title

By Terry K. Ray
Special to The Bayonet©

The first Iron Mike triathlon held at Gardner Field drew 62 students and instructors from the Infantry Officer Advanced Course and the Tactics Division.

The triathlon was organized by the U.S. Army Infantry School's Tactics Division as a challenge to the students and cadre and consisted of three events — push-ups, sit-ups and a six-mile ruck run in combat boots and a 35-pound ruck sack.

The push-ups and sit-ups were conducted just like a physical training test except that the competitors were given five minutes to complete as many correct repetitions as possible.

"This event challenged even the boldest of hearts, and all who competed took pride in the challenge." said Capt. Brian Barham, one of the organizers of the challenge.

"The winners are worthy of the title 'Iron Mike' champion," said Barham.

The overall title of "Iron Mike" champion went to Greg Larson with a total of 2,550 points. Mike Kerrigan finished a close second with 2,373 points and Mark Strong followed up in third place with 2,273 points.

In the push-up event, Kerrigan finished first with 213, Troy Busby came in second at 183 and Strong took third with 180 push-ups.

Larson captured the sit-up event with a total of 256 with Strong taking second at 235 and Rich Townes coming in third with 216.

The six-mile ruck run belonged to Brian Mennes with a time of 46 minutes and 16 seconds.

Busby took second with a time of 48 minutes and 58 seconds and Kerrigan rolled into third place at 49 minutes and 1 second.

Buddy team standings saw Larson and Rocco Minicucci capture first place with 4,234 points, Busby and Mennes took second at 3,716 points, and third place went to the team of Kerrigan and Chris Appleton with 3,546 points.

Fisherman makes big catch

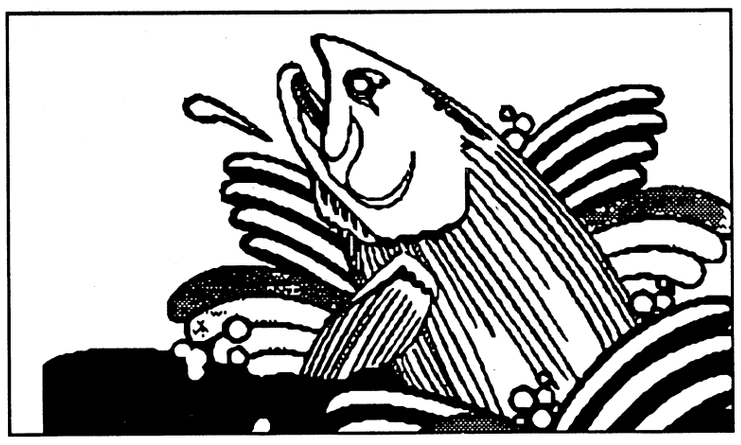
By Earl Bentz and Steve Price
Outboard Marine Corporation



What does it take to win a million dollars in bass tournament prize money?

"Fifteen years of hard work and a lot of luck," said well-known tournament pro Larry Nixon, who passed the million-dollar mark when he finished fourth in the recent Bass Anglers Sportsman Society MegaBucks tournament on Lake Guntersville in Alabama.

"I never dreamed of winning a million dollars when I started fishing tournaments in 1977," says Nixon, a member of the Evinrude Outboards pro staff and a former guide on Toledo Bend Lake in Texas.

"All I wanted to do was win enough money so I could go to the next tournament," said Nixon. "In the beginning, I was sleeping in my car and eating one meal a day because that's all I could afford."

It took Nixon a full year as a fishing guide just to save enough money to enter his first professional bass tournament, held in Palatka, Florida. He finished 19th; and, with the paycheck he won there, he went to his next tournament, which was on his home lake of Toledo Bend.

"I didn't win that tournament," he said, "but I did get a paycheck. From that moment on, I committed myself to becoming the best tournament fisherman I could.

"As I guided clients there on Toledo Bend, I began really studying the fish and learning more about how they acted under different conditions. I couldn't have chosen a better lake on which to guide," continued Nixon, "because there are so many different ways to catch bass there.

"Every day I could do something different if I wanted to, and I often did."

Nixon finished second in the 1977 Bass Masters Classic world championship, losing only in the final minutes when his line broke as he was playing what would have been the winning fish.

His first professional win followed a few months later, and with it came his first sponsorships. He has since won 11 more national events and qualified for 16 consecutive world championships.

"Even in some of my best years between 1980 and '83 when I won the world championship and two angler of the year titles, I never thought it would be possible for anyone to actually win a million dollars fishing bass tournaments," Nixon remembers.

"People really started talking about the possibility last year when I went over the $900,000 mark. Even then, when I would win only $1,000 or $2,000 at a tournament, I wondered if I'd ever make it.

"It wasn't until the MegaBucks tournament when I realized I only needed $27,000 to break a million that I really decided I could do it. I put a lot of pressure on myself at that tournament, but everything worked out just fine."

Holiday sports events set

Physical Activities Branch

Several sporting events have been scheduled on Fort Benning over the holiday period. Listed below are some of these events:

• Bench press, Tuesday through Jan. 3 — Each fitness facility will conduct this competition. Results will be kept and the top 10 or 20 names and weight will be posted.

Each contestant will get three attempts each day. There will be three weight classes: men 149 and under, 150 to 199 and 200 and over; women 119 and under, 120 to 149, and 150 and over.

Individuals may compete at more than one facility. The competition ends at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

• Cycle time trials, Tuesday through Jan. 3, Infantry Hall Fitness Center — Similar to the bench press competition, except the Lifecycle will be set on resistance nine and cyclist will ride nine for ten minutes.

Distance will be recorded and charts maintained for the top 20 riders.

No divisions, only male and female categories will be kept.

• Indoor track and field, Tuesday at 2 p.m., Briant Wells Field House — The meet will consist of 40-meter dash, 40-meter intermediate hurdles, high jump, long jump, shot put and 4x40-meter relay.

Men and women will participate in equivalent events, except women will compete in 40-meter low hurdles.

• 2 on 2 Basketball Tournament — Thursday at 2 p.m., Briant Wells Field House; Dec. 28 at 2 p.m., Sand Hill Recreation Center; Dec. 29 at 2 p.m., Harmony Church Field House; and Dec. 30 at 2 p.m., Audie Murphy Gym.

This tournament is open to all two-person teams. Elimination after two losses.

Categories are men, women and mixed teams. Separate tournaments will be conducted at each facility.

• Swim meet, Wednesday at 2 p.m., Briant Wells swimming pool — events will be 50-, 100- and 200-yard freestyle, 50-yard backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly; 100-yard individual medley and 4x50-yard medley and freestyle relay.

• Ultimate flag football, Wednesday at 2 p.m., Dec. 29 at 2 p.m., both days at Doughboy Stadium — This event is a fast-moving game similar to "Ultimate Frisbee."

Depending on the number of seven-person teams, the length of the game will be modified. Also, if the weather is poor, the event will be indoors.

• Jingle bell run, Thursday at 2 p.m., Audie Murphy Gym — This will be a two- to three-mile fun run. A bell will be given to each runner to wear on the right shoe.

On the course, several cards will be given to each runner. There cards will be turned in at the finish line.

• Doubles racquetball tournament, Dec. 28 at 2 p.m., Briant Wells Field House — This will be a normal double-elimination doubles tournament.

• Wallyball, Dec. 30 at 2 p.m., Kelley Hill Recreation Center — This event is a three-on-three Wallyball tournament conducted in the racquetball courts. The walls and ceiling are in play. The type of tournament will depend on the number of entries.

• Indoor soccer, Dec. 28 at 2 p.m., Audie Murphy Field House — Six-on-a-side soccer will be played. There will be two halves, 15 minutes each. In case of a tie after regulation, an overtime period will be played.

First team to score in overtime is the winner.

Warm up to winter exercise

By Linda Lee
American Forces Information Service

Some people settle in for the winter and turn into couch potatoes until the spring. They drop running and other cardiovascular exercises. Then, come spring, they try to get into shape fast.

Don't let cold or inclement weather keep you inside and away from running or exercising outdoors this winter, said Army Brig. Gen. Raymond T. Roe. A marathoner and long distance runner for more than 30 years, Roe is commander of the Army's Community and Family Support Command.

"Mother Nature shouldn't dictate what you do or don't do," said Roe. "If you follow a few simple steps, you shouldn't have any trouble. Common sense has to take charge, like don't run on ice."

Officials at the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports warn runners to watch out for hypothermia, frostbite, wind chill and dehydration.

Most people associate dehydration with exercising in warm or hot weather, but it can occur just as easily in cold. Cold air is often dry, and people lose water by breathing and perspiring. To avoid dehydration, the president's council recommends drinking plenty of water or fluids while exercising.

Wind chill is double trouble, said Roe. It can cause both hypothermia and frostbite. Wind chill measures the cooling power of temperature and wind as they hit exposed skin. For example, an outdoor thermometer might register 40 degrees Fahrenheit, but the apparent temperature would be subfreezing to a person standing in a breeze.

Average normal body temperature is 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit. Hypothermia begins when the body's core temperature falls below its normal level. Just a few degrees below normal can cause a coma, cardiorespiratory failure or even death.

Hypothermia can result from a simple thing like sweat. Say a person is running and becomes sweaty, said Roe. The clothes become wet, losing about 90 percent of their insulating value. The wind hits the clothes, driving cold air straight through to the person's body. The clothes freeze, providing no protection from the wind and cold.

Frostbite affects exposed or wet skin, especially the ears, nose, cheeks, fingers and toes. It can damage or even freeze the skin and what's below it. Frostbite can cause sensory loss, scars, arthritis and increased sensitivity to the cold.

A simple way to ward off hypothermia and frostbite is to dress appropriately for the weather. Wear layered clothing, because the layers trap heat between them, said the president's council. Also, layers can be removed if the person gets too warm, and they can be added again if the cold begins to seep through. The outer layer should be water resistant and windproof.

Remember to start off exercising or running a little cool, wearing lighter clothing than temperatures may seem to warrant, said the president's council. This is because the body generates a lot of heat and a person can become too warm.

A hat is mandatory because a person loses a lot of body heat through the head. It also helps protect ears from frostbite.

Runners should also wear gloves or mittens to protect fingers and hands from frostbite. In addition, people exercising outside should wear scarfs over their mouths.

"Always leave yourself an escape route to safety when you run or exercise in inclement or cold weather," said Roe. "Know where there's a shelter, a house or telephone nearby if you should get into trouble. Don't go so far that you can't get help if you need it."

To celebrate Christmas, reflect on the birth of Jesus Christ

By Kevin B. Weston
USAIC Chaplains' Office

As we approach the reason we celebrate this coming holiday, let's focus on the significance of Jesus Christ's birth.

Micah (an old Testament prophet) prophesied that the Messiah's birth would be in Bethlehem (Micah 5:2, quoted by Matthew in 2:4-6.) The gospels tell of a virgin birth and recount the lineage of Jesus as being within the household of David.

These Old and New Testament passages remind us that the truth of God underlines all human effort. The coming of the Christ child was the fulfillment of all God's promises.

Jesus' birth was of such a nature as to have profound social importance. He was not born to a rich family, nor to a royal family. Neither fame nor fortune surrounded his birth.

God brought his son into the world in the midst of ordinary people, and by so doing, he showed profound respect for their lives.

This fact says something to us.

It makes a profound social statement. It says that God has high regard for human life on any level. It says that we are important in the eyes of God no matter what our life's circumstances are. It says that we ought to have high regard for all people. We should not discriminate against people. We should have equal regard for people.

A human life is a human life wherever you find it and in whatever condition you discover it.

Because it is a human life, it has vast significance in the eyes of God and should be treated with this in mind.

Human life is precious in the eyes of God. Howard Thurman says "Love enables us to look upon a human life in the lowest condition and treat it as though it were where it ought to be."

This is the way the Holy Spirit enables us to regard life — with utmost care and respect.

So, as we focus on the birth of Christ, let us keep in mind the significance of this event — that Jesus is the reason for the season. We should then be mindful to treat humanity more loving as Christ has loved us.

Message of Hanukkah is religious freedom

By Arthur Rutberg
USAIC Chaplains' Office

REFLECTIONS

How do you spell it? Is it Hannuka? Chanuka? Hanukkah? Take your pick. The spelling or pronunciation is not important. What is important is the meaning of the holiday.

Within the Jewish festival cycle, Hanukkah is one of the least important holidays. It is not mentioned in the Bible. Its observance does not involve a cessation from work. There is no special synagogue service for it.

Hanukkah has received increased notice in the last few years because of its proximity to Christmas. Although it is a minor holiday, it does have an important message.

Hanukkah commemorates a victory won by a band of Judean priests, teachers and soldiers known as Maccabees. It was a miraculous victory of the few over the many. This small band of freedom fighters defeated the mighty Greek army.

The cause of the war was the imposition by the Greek of martial law over the people of Judea in the year 168 before the common era. No longer could the Judeans worship God through holy sacrifices at the temple.

The Greeks forced the Judeans to bow to Zeus and offer pig sacrifices on the desecrated altar. The righteous people would not stand for it. Through the leadership of Mattathias and Judah, his son, the people rebelled. They fought for three years, defeated the Greeks, regaining their religious freedom and rededicated the temple.

Hanukkah means dedication referring to the dedication of the temple in Jerusalem in the year 165 before the common era. Before the Judeans could resume worship at the temple, it had to be cleansed of the pagan altars and Greek idols. The Maccabees rededicated the temple, relighted the menorah in the holy of holies and celebrated for eight days.

Today we still celebrate for eight days, lighting lights and giving gifts. This year, our menorahs will be lighted from Saturday through Dec. 27 increasing the light each day and displaying the menorah in windows facing out.

The primary significance of Hanukkah has nothing to do with gifts or games, candles or candy, but with religious freedom.

The story that many know about the oil in the menorah lasting eight days is a nice story, but it misses the point.

The true miracle and the key lesson of Hanukkah is that no matter what the odds, the people of Judea fought for their religious freedom in opposition to the controlling government and they were successful.

Each year, when the menorahs are seen in the windows on Hanukkah, it is a reminder of the need to fight for and maintain religious freedom.

It is a fundamental human right. It is a right guaranteed to all Americans by the First Amendment to the Constitution. It is one of our highest values.

There is an obligation to protect and preserve that freedom. So, when you see the lighted menorah in the window on Hanukkah, remember that just as the Maccabees fought for religious freedom, we must as well.

29th soldiers compete

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment held its Pioneer Obstacle Course Championship Nov. 20 at the Sand Hill Obstacle Course.

The competition started earlier in the month with company qualifying runs. Each company sent soldiers to compete. Soldiers scoring the best times qualified for the battalion runoff.

The battalion competition produced a first-place win by 1st Lt. Andrew Flagler of Headquarters and Headquarters Company with a time of 2:44.

Second and third places went to Staff Sgt. Clay Harris of Company E with a time of 2:56 and Sgt. Kelvin Gooding of Company A and Sgt. Marvin Watson of Company D, who both tied with a time of 2:58.

NCO receives 'battlefield commission'

By Gregory Carlson
29th Infantry Regiment

The 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment was recently honored by having one of its noncommissioned officers recognized by National Order of Battlefield Commissions.

This year's selection was open only to soldiers from Fort Benning, according to officials.

Staff Sgt. Enrique Hogan of Company D, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., was selected for this year's award, for which he received a personally inscribed saber at a banquet held in Boston, Mass., Sept. 12 to 14. The banquet and the convention was held in his honor for being selected by the commission.

Soldiers receiving the recognition must meet certain criteria. They must be a staff sergeant or sergeant first class with a Combat Infantryman Badge; be recognized as having outstanding character, and recommended by their chain of command.

Hogan was one of 10 noncommissioned officers who made it to the post selection board, where he was then chosen by a committee infantry units on Fort Benning.

The committee was headed by Post Command Sgt. Maj. William H. Acebes.

The National Order of Battlefield Commissions is headed by Winston E. Flynn, who is the national commander. The order was started by Flynn and others who received battlefield commissions.

Officials said that soldiers from all branches of the military in units worldwide will be eligible for recognition in the future.

Safety Center: Take caution when exercising

U.S. Army Safety Center

The Army expects all soldiers to be in good physical condition and requires a fitness demonstration at least twice a year in the physical fitness test.

The only way to get into and stay in shape is regular, vigorous physical activity running, swimming, weight lifting, organized athletics. But these kinds of activities carry with them the risk of injury.

The U.S. Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine in Natick, Mass., has done a number of controlled studies that can help soldiers manage the risks of stress injuries while gaining the benefits of being physically fit.

Some of their conclusions confirm what we have accepted intuitively in the past; in other cases, what they say may surprise you.

Soldiers who are already in good physical condition are up to two times less likely to suffer a stress injury than soldiers who are less physically fit. The bad news is that the risks of being hurt while getting into shape are high.

One study showed that the number of soldiers injured during one station unit training increased by nearly one-third as the distance soldiers ran during the cycle went from 60 to 130 miles.

Studies also showed that soldiers often did not know they had been hurt or did not appreciate the seriousness of their injuries. By the time they went for treatment, the injuries had progressed almost to the point of a chronic degenerative condition.

There is a warning here to weekend athletes and anyone else who tries to "cram" for the PT test. Soldiers cannot overcome the negative effects of a sedentary lifestyle in a few days or a few weeks. The only safe way is to build up stamina and performance gradually. And the old notion, "no pain no gain," is out. Soldiers who are hurting should be told to seek treatment.

Soldiers whose joints or feet hurt when they run might need new running shoes; the older the shoes, the more likely tendonitis or stress fractures.

The master fitness trainer can evaluate soldiers' levels of physical flexibility. Those who are least flexible suffer the greatest number of stress injuries — more than twice as many as soldiers in the middle of the scale. That's no surprise.

But an unexpected finding was that the group of soldiers who were the most flexible were 50 percent more likely to get hurt than the average soldier. In this case, the low-risk group were those in the middle.

Cigarette smoking is a big risk factor for stress injuries. Soldiers who smoke have up to a 21 times greater risk of joint and bone injuries. Perhaps now tendonitis, sprains and stress fractures to lung cancer, heart disease, and emphysema can be added as reasons for quitting smoking.

Good physical fitness makes soldiers healthier and raises morale, thus improving unit readiness; but, leaders need to control the risk of injuries during training.

Commander bids farewell to ITB

"Even in the Magic Kingdom, time does not stand still."
— Maj. Gen. Jerry A. White
Post commanding general

It was no Mickey Mouse affair Tuesday as the Infantry Training Brigade changed command on Wetherby Field.

Col. Theodore R. Severn took the helm of the brigade from Col. Joseph Trez, who had served as commander for the past two years.

Severn, a distinguished military graduate of the University of Massachusetts in 1967, has had many command and staff assignments to include command of a company with the 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam.

His awards include the Bronze Star, Purple Heart, Meritorious Service Medal with three oak leaf clusters, Air Medal, Combat Infantryman Badge and Expert Infantryman Badge.

Under Trez's command, the brigade was responsible for the training of Reserve component drill sergeants and troops during Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Trez, who dubbed the brigade as "The Magic Kingdom," will be reassigned to the 7th Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash., as chief of staff.

Retired BG invested as regimental col.

By Brian C. Sutton
Bayonet staff writer

A former commander of the 50th Infantry Regiment was honored at a recent ceremony at 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment's Headquarters on Sand Hill.

Retired Brig. Gen. Oliver B. Patton, who served in World War II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War, was invested as honorary regimental colonel Nov. 6 for a three-year term with the opportunity to extend for an additional three years.

The position of honorary colonel is an unofficial position created in order to allow units to recognize achievements and loyal service to the armed forces, according to Capt. Gregory Gatti, operations officer for the battalion.

The position carries no command weight, but it does carry with it the task of gathering unit historical documents and photographs, trophies from unit sporting events, etc., Gatti said.

Troops land in Somalia

Army News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. Marines landed in Somalia, Dec. 8, as part of a United Nations-sponsored effort to quell domestic violence in that country so that relief workers can bring help to starving millions.

The Marines are the advance component of a U.S. force that will soon number some 28,000 troops, including 10,000 infantrymen from the 10th Mountain Division, based at Fort Drum, N.Y. The humanitarian effort is labeled Operation Restore Hope.

In all, some 16,000 Marines are being committed to the action, which President George Bush announced in a nationwide address Dec. 4.

Marine Lt. Gen. Bob Johnston, of the 1st Marine Expeditionary Force, is commanding the joint task force. Marine Gen. Joseph P. Hoar, commander-in-chief of the U.S. Central Command in Tampa, Fla., is in overall command, but will remain with staff elements in the United States.

Also part of the CENTCOM force are Air Force and Navy contingents.

The Navy is sending maritime prepositioning ships and amphibious ships from its Pacific Fleet, with some 1,550 servicemembers total.

The Air Force has committed a C-130 Tactical Airlift Squadron from CENTCOM — about 800 airmen.

In his press briefing, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Gen. Colin L. Powell said that as the operation proceeds, the forces being committed could go up or down.

"We will send what is necessary to accomplish the mission and to take care of our troops," he said, "and do it in the most efficient way we possibly can."

When the U.S. leadership determined that it could restore order in the country so that relief work would proceed, the proposal was advanced through the U.N., whose 5,000 peacekeeping troops from Pakistan have been unable to do more than secure the airport in the Somali capital of Mogadishu.

The United States is proceeding, with the blessing of the U.N. and with support from other countries. The head of the U.N., Secretary General Boutros Boutros-Ghali, referred to the military action as the first of two phases, one that is expected to be of relatively short duration. What must follow is a political restoration of a local civil authority — not part of the U.S. mission.

The mission, according to Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, is basically "to use U.S. forces to restore the situation so that relief supplies can be delivered, and so that once we withdraw, we can turn over responsibility for dealing with the continuing security problem to regular U.N. forces."

Plans call for four stages of the operation, after which U.S. troops will withdraw.

The first phase, already underway, has the Marines establishing bases at Mogadishu and Baidoa, where they will take control of the airfields, and secure the port and harbor facilities in the capital.

The second phase has the Army's 10th Mountain Division joining the Marines in Baidoa, then moving to secure other areas: Belet Wen, Oddur and Gailalassi.

The third phase branches operations to southern Somalia, to Kismayo and Bardera on the coast.

The fourth and final phase is the transition of control from the U.S.-led coalition to U.N. observer forces in Somalia or regular U.N. peacekeeping forces.

Even before the present operation, the U.S. military has been involved in Somalia, but only to transport goods and personnel.

Air Force transports flew some 1,400 relief missions. The Pakistani forces that comprise the U.N. forces also arrived via American aircraft.

The U.N. concept calls for going in "with a fairly large force for the purpose of stabilizing this situation, and stabilizing it in a rather decisive way so that there will be no question in the mind of any of the faction leaders in Somalia that we would have the ability to impose a stable situation if it came to that, without their cooperation," Cheney said.

"It's sort of like the cavalry coming to the rescue, straightening things out for a while, and then letting the marshals come back in to keep things under control," Powell said.

WORLD WAR II – A LOOK BACK

50 years ago this week

• Soviets forces continued to advance, regaining ground in the southern sector of the Eastern Front.

Assault groups took Kantemirovka, which cut off the Voronezh-Rostov railway line north of Millerovo.

The remnants of Italy's 8th Army, hopelessly ill equipped for the rigors of a Russian winter, attempted to retreat only to be routed.

• Also on the Eastern Front, the German Army progressed, but with limited success, in its attempt to secure Stalingrad.

• In North Africa, fierce fighting between Axis rear guards and New Zealand's 2nd Division occurred at Nofilia, Libya, halfway between El Ayheila and Sirte.

Fearing the potential hazards of overextended supply lines and facing the threat of a German counterattack, led by Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, Allied commander Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery decided against further pursuit.

•In the Pacific, the commander of the Japanese forces on New Guinea, reached Giruwa from Napopo.

Soon after, fighting began in all sectors. The Japanese suffered considerable losses as a result of a Allied feint attack in a nearby area which lured the defenders out of fortified positions.

American forces then mopped up what little resistance was left and crossed the Simeni Creek.

• On the U.S. homefront, famous musicians, including Louis Armstrong, performed in a special radio Christmas program broadcast nationally with the hope of boosting wartime morale.

•On Fort Benning, Maj. Gen. Paul W. Newgarden took part in a dedication ceremony for a new range constructed to partially accommodate the wartime training needs of the post's ever increasing infantry personnel.

Uchee Creek provides R&R for soldiers

By Kimberly Bennett
Directorate of Community Activities

On the northwestern side of Fort Benning is a place where trees grow tall and the water of an inviting harbor flows deep and cool.

This is Uchee Creek Army Campground and Marina — a place where active duty and retired military members and Department of Defense civilians and their families can spend a weekend or an entire vacation enjoying the natural beauty of the Alabama countryside.

Those who really like to get back to nature can rent one of Uchee Creek's pop-up or self-contained trailers and take advantage of the facility's 38 full hook-up campsites or its 27 campsites with electric, water and a central dump site.

Primitive camping is also available, with a comfort station and coin-operated laundry just a short distance away.

Uchee Creek also has 16 log cabins secluded under the shade of the Alabama pines. The cabins come in four sizes and are furnished with cooking and dining utensils, stove, refrigerator, heat and air conditioning. The largest 14 cabins have shower and toilet facilities.

Many come to Uchee Creek for its beautiful marina, where a boat launching ramp, boat slips, docking facilities, gas, water and electricity are available for a variety of boating activities.

And for those who enjoy land more than water, Uchee Creek has basketball and volleyball courts, a softball field, picnic pavilions and playground equipment.

Uchee Creek Campground and Marina.

Friends can gather at Uchee Creek's lodge and relax before the warmth of the building's fireplace. The lodge seats up to 150 people and includes a refrigerator, ice maker, range, tables, chairs and a smoker/cooker barbecue grill.

Campers who want to go hunting and fishing will find everything they need at Uchee Creek's Country Store. Hunting and fishing supplies and state and post hunting and fishing licenses and permits are available at the store along with picnicking and camping supplies, drinks, snacks and ice.

Rentals at Uchee Creek include everything to help visitors enjoy themselves.

For water activities, visitors can rent 24-foot and 28-foot pontoon boats, 15-foot and 17-foot bass boats, a 14-foot boat, motor and trailer and canoes.

Campers can rent barbecue smoker/cookers and various camping equipment; and, for other outdoor activities, they can rent deer stands, bicycles, bicycle bumper/car top racks, rods and reels and various sporting equipment.

With all Uchee Creek has to offer, visitors cannot help feeling content.

From the first glimpse of its picturesque landscape to the last sail around the marina, Uchee Creek is the perfect spot for a relaxing getaway.

Wilbur hosts contest

Have you ever seen Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer made from recycled aluminum cans?

Joe Bustamente took first place in the third to fifth grade category with his version of this timeless character at the "Wilbur for a Better Environment Contest" Monday.

William H. Wilbur School Principal Gail Wilson said that the contest was one in which parent involvement was promoted.

A take-home assignment with the emphasis on recycling, the project encouraged students to make Christmas ornaments, wreaths, centerpieces or scenes from items that would otherwise be thrown away.

Judges for the event were Jessica Barrick, executive director of the Keep Columbus Beautiful Commission, and Mo Armstrong, solid waste recycling manager for the Environmental Management Division of the Directorate of Public Works.

With an angel made from a recycled bottle, Maurice Walton won first place in the kindergarten through second grade category.

Other winners included:

Third to Fifth Grade, second place - Nicole Trevino, third place- Johanna Smith, and honorable mention - Maria Gonzalez, Kindergarten to Second Grade, second place - Aisha Smith, third place - Kevin Beachy, and honorable mention - Meredith Lair.

Prizes ranged from plants and trees to environmental awareness books.

Arctic explorer visits post

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

"My mentor is Huck Finn."

That's what explorer Will Steger, 47, a member of the team in 1989 to 1990 that accomplished the first nonmechanized traverse of the Antarctic Continent, said during a recent visit to Fort Benning schools.

Steger, who has a master's degree in education, will be including Fort Benning students in his planned 1995 dog sled journey across the Arctic Ocean.

About 300 students from William H. Wilbur School, Herbert J. Dexter School and Don C. Faith Middle School had a chance to "rub elbows" with Steger Dec. 8 in an Arctic expedition simulation at Victory Pond to kick off this three-year relationship.

Fifth-graders from Wilbur, fourth- and fifth-graders from Dexter and eighth-graders from Faith are on board so far in this International Arctic Project, according to Dr. Beth Middlemiss, Fort Benning Schools director of Staff Development.

Jerry Cristy, Fort Benning Schools System coordinator for science and math, was responsible for arranging for local students to have this chance to be involved in the project.

Christy said it was Steger's idea during his last expedition to involve school children by calling a data base in Chicago with reports from their base camp in the Antarctic. School children could then call an "800" number to get progress reports.

This time, Cristy noted, they will be carrying their own computer equipment, and the expedition's signals will be sent by satellite to the Bulletin Board Service, which school children will be able to access through Internet, who will act as the facilitator for the schools,

Currently, schools in South America, Europe, Japan and about 10 states are involved, he said. They hope to grow in scope by stages, expanding to 300 schools around the world by the spring of 1993, and to 3,000 schools by the following year.

When the expedition takes place in 1995, he said that they hope to have worldwide school participation.

Steger pointed out that camping in the Arctic is more dangerous than the other pole because it is ocean and could open up at any time. Cristy said students are made to understand that there is this element of danger in the adventure.

Also, by having Steger here to participate with them in this simulation, the children now are not only excited about the event, but they also feel he is their friend, Cristy said, someone who they are concerned about.

During the simulation, students were divided into teams that were assigned various tasks such as tent assembly, cross-country ski materials and assembly and the design and assembly of a vehicle to transport supplies and equipment, all of which had to be accomplished with gloves. The importance of planning is emphasized.

According to Kenneth Stettes of the Fort Benning Schools, in the past few years, local students have been visited by two other polar explorers, Norman Vaughn and Geoff Summers.

This project also dovetails with the schools' recent emphasis on telecommunication through computers.

New Thrift Shop makes $$$

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

A new location appears to have done wonders for business at the Officers' Wives' Club's Thrift Shop just off Ingersol Street across from Herbert J. Dexter School.

According to Barbara Seim, Thrift Shop manager, in November 1991, total sales were at $12,000. In 1992, November sales climbed to $17,600; and, after expenses, $2,100 was contributed to the OWC's Welfare Fund.

Seim credits the increase in business to several factors. She said their new location is more accessible, and the arrangement of the building allows for greater visibility. Free public service announcements in The Bayonet has also helped to let people know where they are.

Instead of being in three buildings as they were before with the Furniture Barn, Thrift Shop Clothing and the Craft Cabin, now everything is in one building called simply the Fort Benning Thrift Shop.

In the two weeks prior to their opening in the new building, volunteers helped to paint the walls and shelving white to make everything look lighter, brighter, open and clean, Seim said.

Also, she said, people can see better what the store has to offer.

"We're also stricter on quality now, too, " she said. "We don't take in anything that is not clean or that has holes. It's more like shopping in a normal department store. We have clothes separated by age and sex now. Children even have a room of their own. Customers don't have to go through every rack."

The Craft Corner is also spotlighted in the center with a room of its own.

In addition, there are two back rooms for what she calls "odds and ends" including such items as bikes and lawnmowers.

In the consignment area, Seim said things are moving in and out faster. Now they take in as many as 90 items in one day, with a low of 50. In the other building, she has been told that 50 consignments per day were the average.

As before, the only paid employees are the manager, assistant manager and bookkeeper. All of the rest are volunteers.

Since June, a total of 2,700 volunteer hours have kept the Thrift Shop open and running with the majority of the volunteers being retirees.

"The oldest is 73, but most of them are in their 50s and can outrun me, " Seim said. "I have a commitment to them, the shoppers and the consigners to keep everyone happy.

"Sometimes it's difficult because we run this as any other business, and there's bound to be conflicts," she said.

The store's biggest problem is shoplifting, she noted, and that has been helped by the locked jewelry cases that the Thrift Shop has acquired. All sales are final too, as at any store of this type.

Store hours are Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and Saturdays, from 8 a.m. to noon on the first and third Saturdays of the month.

Others who have helped in the Thrift Shop's recent success are Karen Cook, chairwoman who serves as a liaison to the OWC, and Coney Reamy, OWC president.

The Thrift Shop moved into the new building, what was the Religious Education Center, in September. Seim took over the second week it was open.

With a background in nursing, she was the assistant manager for a similar store in Germany, and she says "managing is managing anywhere."

Her husband, Rick, is the commander of the School Battalion for the School of the Americas. They have two children, a daughter Jamie, 18, and a son, Derek, 16.

EOD offers ordnance amnesty

USAIC Public Affairs Office

Fort Benning's 89th Ordnance Disposal Detachment and the Columbus Police Department will jointly initiate a project to recover ammunition and explosives from the tri-community area of Fort Benning, Columbus and Phenix City.

The items include hand grenades, projectiles, mines, simulators and many other items that have been brought back as war trophies by returning service men and service women or picked up from the ranges on post.

These items are not approved as legitimate war trophies or souvenirs and pose a possible threat to anyone who possesses them, according to Capt. Douglas Chambers, commander of the 89th.

During the project called "Beware," any person who possesses any type of illegal ordnance item may turn it in with no questions asked, Chambers said.

Chambers said that anyone who wishes to turn in items may call the Columbus Police Department and request the item be removed.

An explosive ordnance team, along with Columbus Police Department will remove the item.

"Fort Benning authorities and the Columbus Police Department agree that the program is strictly one of amnesty," said Chambers.

He urged residents not to take the items to the police department or fire stations to eliminate possible detonation at the stations.

For more information, call the 89th at 545-2914 or 545-3761.

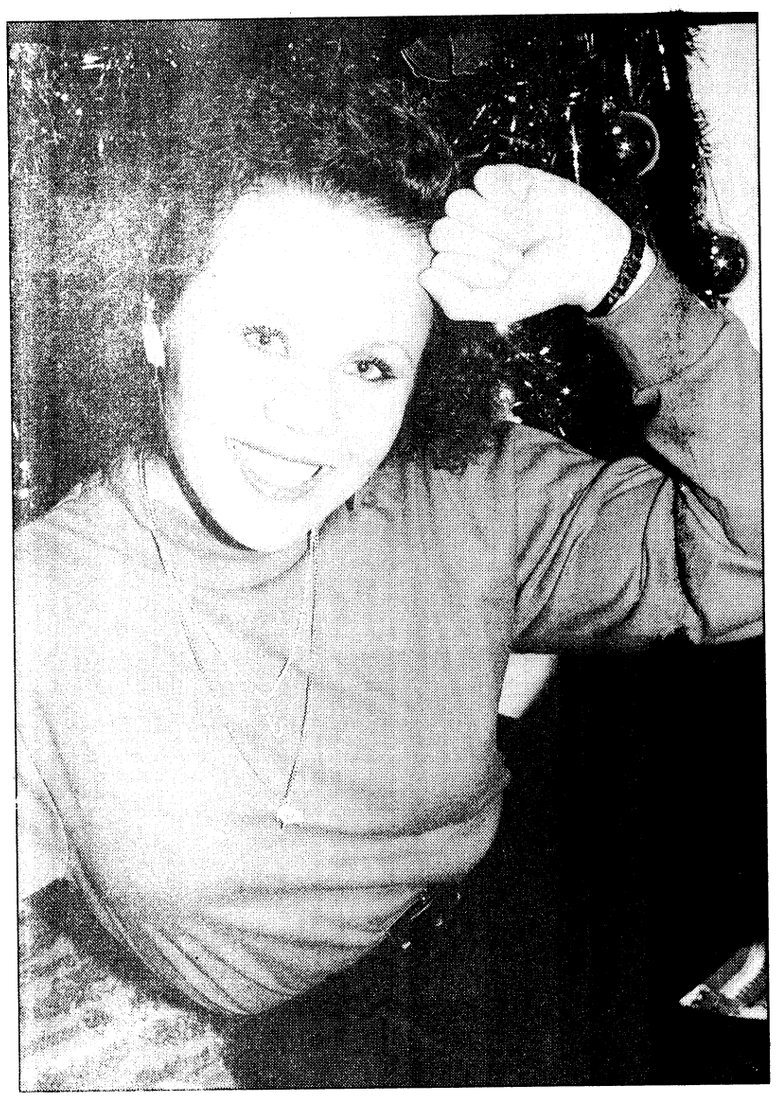
Benning family member signs record deal



Connie Bridges/Special to The Bayonet

Yvonne Denise Watkins

By Connie Bridges
Special to The Bayonet©

Singing the national anthem at the Atlanta Hawks basketball game against the Philadelphia 76ers Saturday has been a long time in coming for Yvonne Denise Watkins, wife of Staff Sgt. Walter Watkins, drill sergeant for the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception).

The last year has brought the majority of changes, but she has been singing for audiences since her childhood in Kansas.

Last year, she wrote and sang a song called "A Touch of Magic" about Earvin "Magic" Johnson and his plight with AIDS.

In buying some insurance from Tony Callaway, she learned he had a friend named Bart D. Nolde, who could get her song to Johnson.

Nolde, the chief executive officer for Zingerback, a company with several ties to the National Basketball Association, not only gave her song to Johnson, but after hearing her tapes, flew her to Detroit, Mich., and signed her to a five-year music contract with his company.

She is scheduled to appear on the Arsenio Hall show and several other radio and television talk shows after the first of the year and has been spending three of four weeks per month in Detroit working with John Sally on recording several singles to be released also in 1993.

"She is a great person who hung in there until she was 36 to fulfill her dream of singing, and I respect that," said Nolde. "She is also a great family person who calls home everyday that she is on the road.

"We feel she is about six months away from going on tour across the country," he said.

Acting as her producer for "Do Me Right" is R. J. Rice of R.J. Rice's Latest Arrival, and singing back-up are the Ridgeway Sisters, who have accompanied such people as Aretha Franklin.

Since May, when she signed with Nolde as her personal manager, Watkins has lost 40 pounds.

"I have also learned how important connections are and what it takes to make the difference," she said.

"Also, it's not all in a voice," she said. "You have to believe in yourself and hang in there. I have banking and computer skills, but my heart is in music."

In addition to recording while she is in Detroit, she is learning to read music, taking dance lessons and writing songs to go toward an album.

She said her drill sergeant husband is supportive, and she feels bad sometimes that her family is learning to survive so well without her when she is gone.

The couple has two children, Kynesha, 12, and Walter III, 10.

"The kids are more responsible now than when I was here all the time. I almost didn't feel missed at first," she said.

Her background singers for the Hawks game were local people, her husband, Judy Bethel and Spc. Marquita Jones.

Free long distance telephone calls for all Fort Benning soldiers will be available today and Saturday between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. The location is Building 2821 directly behind the 36th Engineer Group headquarters on Sightseeing Road.

Merry Christmas From All Of Us At Beneficial!

'Tis the season to practice toy safety

By Alfreta Gibson
Preventive Medicine Service

Unsafe use of toys can turn the most joyous time of the year into a time of tragedy and pain, but, with good judgement and proper supervision, this pain and tragedy can be prevented.

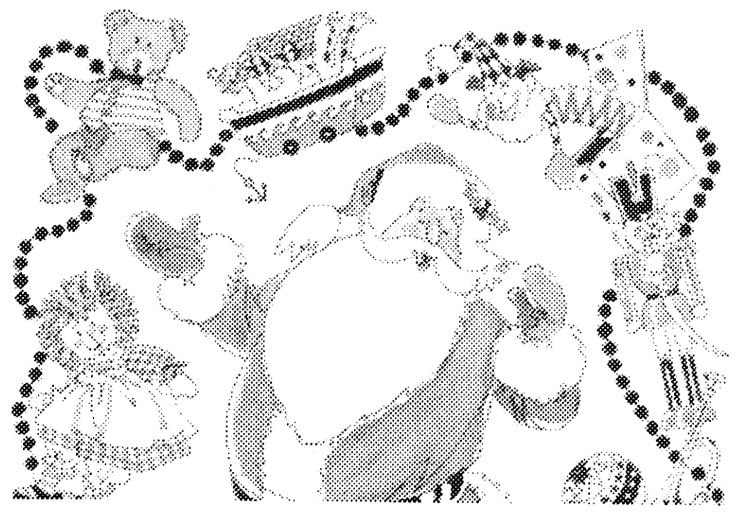
Yet, undoubtedly, some families will experience the injury or death of a child who unsafely played with toys.

Last year alone, 163,000 emergency room visits were made by children who were injured in toy-related accidents, according to the Injury Reduction Institute. This nonprofit institute, founded by trial lawyers to help reduce death and injuries from products, further states that between 1986 and 1990, 700,000 children died.

But, this year, the holiday season doesn't have to be that bleak if parents and other adults use good judgment while purchasing toys for children.

Fortunately, there are helpful hints and steps one can take to keep children toy safe:

• Know your child. A toy that may be completely safe for an older child may be very dangerous for a younger child.



For example, a young child could swallow a marble from a board game or choke on an uninflated balloon. Therefore, you should always look for age-appropriate toys, and always keep an older child's toys away from a younger child. Pay attention to those age and cautionary labels.

• Think like an infant or child when shopping. Always assume a child will use a toy in ways not recommended by the manufacturer.

For instance, do not buy a 2-year-old a dart gun. He may point it at his eye and shoot. Always remember, a child does not have the same judgment capabilities or life experiences as you to let him know when danger is imminent. Therefore, it's your duty to safeguard him, so think like a child when purchasing toys and see them from a child's perspective. Make sure a toy will be safe no matter how a child uses it.

• Don't buy toys with instructions written in a foreign language.

• Don't trust labels. If you believe there may be something in a box that could be swallowed or otherwise misused by your child, don't buy it!

• Always test toys to make sure they are not choking hazards to children. A natural inclination for a child is to put things in his mouth. Don't give him the opportunity.

To determine a toy's "choke potential," insert the toy into a toilet tissue tube; if the toy fits inside, it's too small for the child and has a very high choke potential.

• Don't always assume a toy manufacturer tested the toy. Test it yourself by looking for loose parts, sharp points and edges, heating defects or exposed electrical parts, loud sound effects or propelled objects such as darts.

• Inspect toys regularly to make sure they still meet safety standards. Look especially close for sharp splinters on the edges of wooden toys, rust on outdoor toys, rips or exposed wires in stuffed animals, and loose eyes or other small parts on dolls or stuffed animals. Once you've inspected, repair the damaged toys or throw them away immediately.

• Supervise your child – not just at Christmas, but year round.

• Toys and toy safety should go hand in hand. For instance, if you buy your child a bike, give him a helmet, too, and explain he must always wear the helmet for his own safety. If he doesn't, he loses the bike.

• Store toys in a safe place and insist that your children do so. If the child is too young to put the toy away, store it on a shelf or out of reach so that he can't pull it over on himself.

Toy safety is a 24-hour, seven-day-a-week, year-round job, but it's worth it because it ensures the safeguarding of our most precious resource from harm, injury and death.

Display targets diabetes awareness

Martin Army Community Hospital

Fourteen million Americans are living with diabetes. Unfortunately, more than half do not know they have it because it strikes silently.

More than 725,000 new cases of diabetes are diagnosed each year, according to Maj. Sybil Bradley-Dallas, a nurse practitioner in Martin Army Community Hospital's Internal Medicine Clinic.

In November, a display was set up in the hospital's lobby by the pharmacy in recognition of National Diabetes Month.

The purpose of the display was to provide diabetes education awareness through pamphlets, written assessment test of risk factors and the opportunity to speak directly to diabetes educators. The display was manned by Bradley-Dallas and Capt. Tracy Saboy an adult nurse practitioner.

Diabetes is a disease that affects the way the body uses glucose and insulin. Glucose is fuel for the body derived from the foods a person eats. Glucose is carried to the body's cell by the blood stream. Insulin, a hormone made by the pancreas, helps glucose enter cells. There glucose is changed into energy and used, or stored, for later use.

In a diabetic, something goes wrong with this process. Either the body doesn't make enough insulin or it can't use insulin correctly. The glucose is unable to enter the cells and builds up in the bloodstream. High blood glucose levels are one of the main signs of undiagnosed diabetes.

The goal of treatment for all types of diabetes is to keep blood sugar at or near normal (non-diabetic) levels.

Many people are involved with the treatment of diabetes — a physician, a nurse, a dietitian, a pharmacist, perhaps an ophthalmologist or podiatrist.

All these professionals can be thought of as part of a diabetes care team.

Persons who would like to know more about diabetes should contact their primary physician or request an appointment in the outpatient clinic. The physician may refer the patient to the hospital's diabetic educator for additional information.

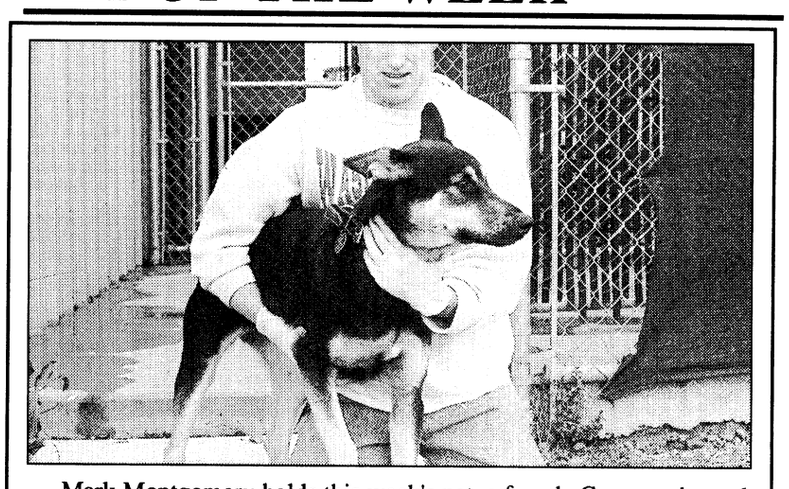
PET OF THE WEEK



Mark Montgomery holds this week's pet, a female German-shepard mix who is looking for a home. She is approximately 1 year old. If you would like to adopt her, or another pet, contact the Veterinary Services office in Building 265, with the Animal Adoption Facility in Building 263 next door. Hours are Monday through Friday, 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 12:45 to 3 p.m. For more information, call 545-1127.

If you have lost a pet, Fort Benning has a stray impoundment facility. Animal control on post is a division of the Military Police Activity. An officer will pick up strays and take them to the stray impoundment kennels, located in building 263. Once the animal arrives, it has three working days to be claimed. If the pet is not claimed, it becomes government property and may be adopted or destroyed.

Rabies tags are important, too, because it's the only way Veterinary Services can contact the owner. Pet owners should update their records when changes occur and register pets. The clinic is closed the

If you proudly serve our country, we'll proudly serve you Cucos fresh Mexican food with a 10% discount. The offer is good anytime of the week - simply present your military I.D. when ordering.

ABC presents Disney World Christmas Parade

By Jay Bobbin
Tribune Media Services

With Christmas Day approaching, so is a major event at one of America's top tourist sites ... and a worldwide audience will get to share it again.

The morning of Friday, Dec. 25 will be marked not only by the opening of presents, but also by ABC's 10th annual presentation of the Walt Disney World Very Merry Christmas Parade from Florida. "Good Morning America's" Joan Lunden — who has co-anchored all of the parade broadcasts since they began — will be on hand once more to cover the festivities, along with syndicated talk-show staple Regis Philbin. They'll be joined by actor-singer John Davidson, serving as "roving reporter" for the first time, and also by reigning Miss America Leanza Cornett; she has a special connection to Disney World, since she portrayed the site's "Little Mermaid" before becoming a beauty-pageant winner. One of the new highlights of this year's special will be the Ed McMahon-hosted "Aladdin's Royal Caravan" from the Disney/MGM studios, inspired by the animated movie currently playing in theaters nationwide. Also, a "Parade of Classics" will showcase characters from such other popular Disney works as "Beauty and the Beast" and the TV series "Dinosaurs," as well as Jim Henson's Muppets (who have become part of the Disney stable, as evidenced by the new "Muppet Christmas Carol" feature film). Additional segments of the two-hour show will originate from Southern California's Disneyland and from Euro Disney, outside Paris.

SPOTLIGHT

Miss America Leanza Cornett and Mickey Mouse.

Traditionally, Lunden travels to Disney World the weekend after Thanksgiving to do preparatory work for her parade role, and this year was no different. However, she reports that she stayed an extra day with her youngest daughters Lindsay and Sarah "to ride Space Mountain, Splash Mountain and Big Thunder Mountain several times each. The last time I went down there, I had my arm in a sling (the result of a horse-riding accident earlier in the year) and I really couldn't do much of anything, so I think my kids figured I had to make up for lost time. This is the first year (eldest daughter) Jamie didn't go down with us, because she had some big horse shows back home (in which she was competing), so having just the littler ones with me was interesting. We spent most of our time in the Magic Kingdom, but they'll all be there with me at Christmas, and they'll all be in the parade again."

Indeed, thanks to who their mother is, the girls get a very special view of the Disney operation that most other visitors don't ... and "Aladdin" was the key to their latest bonus. "We were in the park when the parade came by," Lunden recalls, "and little Sarah wanted to get as close as she could to see Aladdin, but she couldn't get close enough and ended up teary-eyed. The Disney guide who was with us told us to wait a minute, and he made a call and arranged for us to meet Aladdin backstage. In the movie, he has a little monkey friend named Abu, and we secretly got a stuffed toy of him before we went back. We sneaked it to the young man who was playing Aladdin, and he presented it to Sarah, and I can vouch that Abu has not been out of that child's sight since then. It's even had its own seat at dinner."

Lunden's youngsters have had the red-carpet treatment of the Disney experience for as long as they can remember. "I'll never forget the year they had Mickey and Goofy come to our room and deliver dessert after Thanksgiving dinner," their mom reflects. "Afterward, we sat down and had this long discussion along the lines of, 'Do you know how special this is? Not everybody has this.' I felt compelled to do the parental routine, but they do understand that they get to do very special things." Still, Lunden is quick to add that certain aspects are available to anyone who enters the world of Disney, as millions upon millions of tourists do annually. "It's like there's a party happening all the time," she reasons.

For Lunden, doing the Disney World Christmas Parade — and also, for that

Fort Benning's environmental precautions noted Armywide

It is not a secret that Fort Benning soldiers train long and hard to stay ready for war. But the installation's environmental concerns have forced the home of the infantry to balance training and conservation practices. Next week on the U.S. Army Infantry Center Command Information Channel, soldiers Television Service reports on what Fort Benning is doing to save an endangered bird.

Also featured on USAIC TV next week will be a look at some new Army environmental strategies — strategies that the Army's Environmental Protection Agency hopes will bring a more positive response than what it has been getting for the past few years.

Museum to show its colors for guild art show and sale

Columbus Museum

The flags will unfurl in February for the grand opening of the Columbus Museum Guild's Flying Colors Art Show and Sale.

Featuring regional and national artists, this biannual fund-raiser will open to the public Feb. 13 through 20.

All proceeds will be used by the guild to benefit the museum and its programs.

The show includes paintings, sculpture and prints and offers a variety of techniques, sizes and prices.

More than 75 artists were represented at the last Flying Colors and the guild is expecting even more to participate this year.

The week-long event will feature a number of programs including "Lunch and Lectures," a cartoonist and entertainment.

"We are extremely excited that a couple of nationally known artists, Dorothy Dierks Harris and George Cress, will be represented," said Claude Scarbrough, chairman of this year's Flying Colors. "We are waiting to hear from a number of others, and I think people will be very impressed with the collector-quality art work that we will be offering to them."

The Columbus Museum, located at 1251 Wynnton Road, features exhibitions of American art and regional history and includes a hands-on discovery gallery for children.

The museum is open free of charge from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Tuesday through Saturday and on Sundays from 1 to 5 p.m.

For more information, call the museum at 649-0713.

CGSC, IAAFA students graduate

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas held two graduations Monday of courses that amply display the school's diversity of training.

The Command and General Staff Course for 1992 and the Helicopter Repair Supervisor Course graduated students in ceremonies held at Fort Benning and Fort Eustis, Va.

The school's CGSC is equivalent to the course taught at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., except here the curriculum is presented in Spanish.

The CGSC graduation was held in Marshall Auditorium in Infantry Hall.

Guest speaker for the ceremony was Maj. Gen. James R. Harding, chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board at Fort McNair in Washington, D.C.

Col. Jose R. Feliciano, commandant for SOA; Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, assistant commandant for SOA; and Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent C. Sampson Jr., command sergeant major for SOA, were also in attendance.

Forty-four students from SOA graduated.

The graduates were from 11 countries: Argentina, Bolivia, Colombia, Ecuador, El Salvador, the United States, Guatemala, Honduras, Mexico, the Dominican Republic and Venezuela.

The honor graduate for the course was Lt. Col. Luis A. Maldonado, from the Republic of Honduras.

One of the most demanding course at SOA, the CGSC is a 47 week-long course, which prepares officers for duty as field grade commanders and as principal staff officers at brigade and division level in their armed forces.

Although the course demanded the most of its students, there was time for some emphasis on cultural exchange.

Because of the course's duration, many students bring their families and get involved in the school's Hosts Of Latin Americans sponsorship program.

Students also traveled to Washington, D.C., and toured the nation's capital, as well as military installations.

The Class of 1992 also has the distinction of graduating the first female officer to attend the course.

Maj. Sonia M. Roca, an adjutant general officer with the 75th Maneuver Area Command in Houston, Texas, set a precedent as the first female graduate.

SOA honors CSM

CSM Legoas moves on

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas recently said farewell to Command Sgt. Maj. Carlos E. Legoas, who served as SOA's CSM for the last three years.

Legoas was honored by SOA noncommissioned officers at a farewell dinner Nov. 13.

Throughout his time at SOA, Legoas oversaw the training and development of the permanent party soldiers, as well as the Latin American soldiers attending SOA.

Among his accomplishments was the creation of the Noncommissioned Officers Professional Development Course for Latin American NCOs, which encompasses all of the NCO courses from the Primary Leadership Development Course to the Advanced Noncommissioned Officers Course.

Legoas also oversaw the NCO Professional Development program at SOA, participated in Southern Command- Sponsored training exercises, published articles in military journals and played an instrumental role in getting the first Latin American candidate accepted to the United States Army Sergeants Major Academy at Fort Bliss, Texas.

For everything he's done at SOA, Legoas may be most proud of his work to promote NCO development throughout the Americas.

The importance of NCO development to Legoas reflects the role of the NCO in today's Army. "We run our Army and allow the officers to do their duties."

The pride Legoas felt about his time at SOA rested in the accomplishments of his NCOs. SOA has "quality NCOs who have reached a level of excellence that leaves a lasting impression on those attending SOA courses.

"When we send NCOs to Latin America (for training exercises) or Latin American soldiers come here, they see the best and this helps our NCO corps when guest instructors see the quality we have," he said.

"I am very thankful for the support of SOA's NCOs and proud of their quality and professionalism. They represent the NCO corps and the U.S. Army by their performance and

SOA support organizations round out year

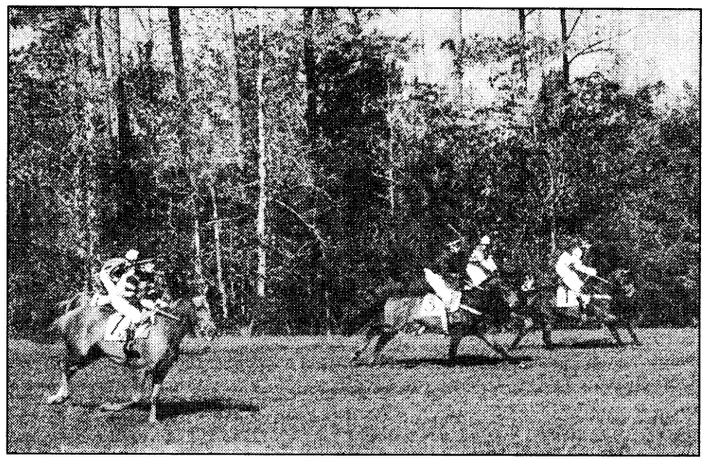
By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The School of the Americas Columbus Support Group and the Hosts of Latin Americans Organization rounded out the calendar year with a trip to Callaway Gardens and the Steeplechase.

The SOA Support Group treated the Command and General Staff Course students, guest instructors and their families to an old-fashioned hayride recently at Callaway Gardens.

According to Rosamarie Smith, executive director of the SOA Support Group, the event was planned to bring SOA students, personnel and their families together and share in seasonal traditions.

In addition to the hayride, games were organized for the children to include— three-legged races, ring tosses and croquet.



Daniel Maloney

Members of SOA's HOLA organization attended the Steeplechase at Callaway Gardens Nov. 7.

Another highlight of the evening was a bonfire and sing along complete with guitar accompaniment.

Finishing up the calendar year of courses at SOA also meant a trip to the Steeplechase Nov. 7 at the track in Callaway Gardens for SOA students and family members, hosted by the HOLA organization.

The day's races provided HOLA participants an opportunity to see steeplechase horse racing as well as socialize together at the annual event.

Both support organizations hold events throughout the academic year at SOA.

The Support Group held a cultural forum at Columbus College throughout the year. The forum introduced participants to different aspects of Latin American countries and lifestyles.

Throughout their activities, the intent remains the same, according to Smith.

"We accomplish with this a cultural exchange with the objective of aiding SOA in accomplishing part of its mission."

The school's primary function is training, but it also introduces Latin American soldiers to American life, customs and tradition through a cultural exchange. In addition, the students introduce members of the support group to their customs and traditions.

HOLA plays a major role in the school's secondary mission.

Through sponsorship, HOLA makes it possible to bring events like the Steeplechase to SOA students and their families, as well as providing numerous opportunities for a cultural exchange.

According to HOLA literature, "The HOLA Sponsor Program is a hospitality program designed to provide Latin American guest instructors and students at SOA and their families an opportunity to become acquainted with American family life in the broadest sense."

"To do this, a family agrees to take a genuine interest in a Latin American guest instructor and his family and help him understand the American way of life by giving him an opportunity to participate in home and community activities.

Anyone interested in sponsorship can call 545-1283 or 545-1285.

Defense Security Assistance Agency director addresses CGSC students on future of agency

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

The outcome of future conflicts involving the United States could be affected by the extent of the government's security assistance program.

This aspect of U.S. foreign policy was part of a presentation made by Lt. Gen. Teddy Allen when he visited the Command and General Staff Course of the School of the Americas.

Allen, director of the Defense Security Assistance Agency, spoke to CGSC students in October.

According to Allen, the DSAA is responsible for administering the foreign military financing and sales program and the International Military Education and Training program.

As a result of the agency's work, soldiers from Latin America have the opportunity to attend the School of the Americas, a point emphasized by Allen.

"The School of the Americas does a tremendous job of bringing together military professionals from the free nations of this hemisphere to learn from one another," he said.

Although Allen admitted foreign military aid is an unpopular subject on Capital hill and among the general public, he said, most of the ill feeling stems from a lack of understanding.

Foreign military aid "enhances our own economy" by providing customers for U.S. military businesses, Allen said.

According to Allen, IMET money used properly is "the best investment of a dollar the U.S. government can make, because when we train you (foreign military personnel) the pay off is 10-15 years down the road when you rise to higher offices in the military or government."

Although the U.S. military is adjusting to a post-Cold War era and a declining number of personnel, the future of security assistance (at least among the current administration's Defense Department leaders) remains high on the list of priorities, according to Allen.

The importance of forward presence has been identified as a key pillar of national security strategy and security assistance is an important component of that pillar," he said.

The importance of forward presence and DSAA's role in it was never so clear recently as it was during the first hours of Operation Desert Shield.

Allen has personnel in 74 countries around the globe and when the time came to get soldiers and equipment on the ground fast, security assistance agency personnel already in-country "made sure equipment got on the ground until Central Command got set up," he said.

In many instances, agency personnel are not only the first on site but stay in place as pull outs are executed.

According to Allen, the agency can maintain an important role of contact with other countries in the New World Order.

In addition, the coalitions formed by Allen' s agency are the keys for future conflicts because common equipment, tactics and logistics can equal victory.

Allen sees his agency as "investing in our future, not just the United States' but the world's."

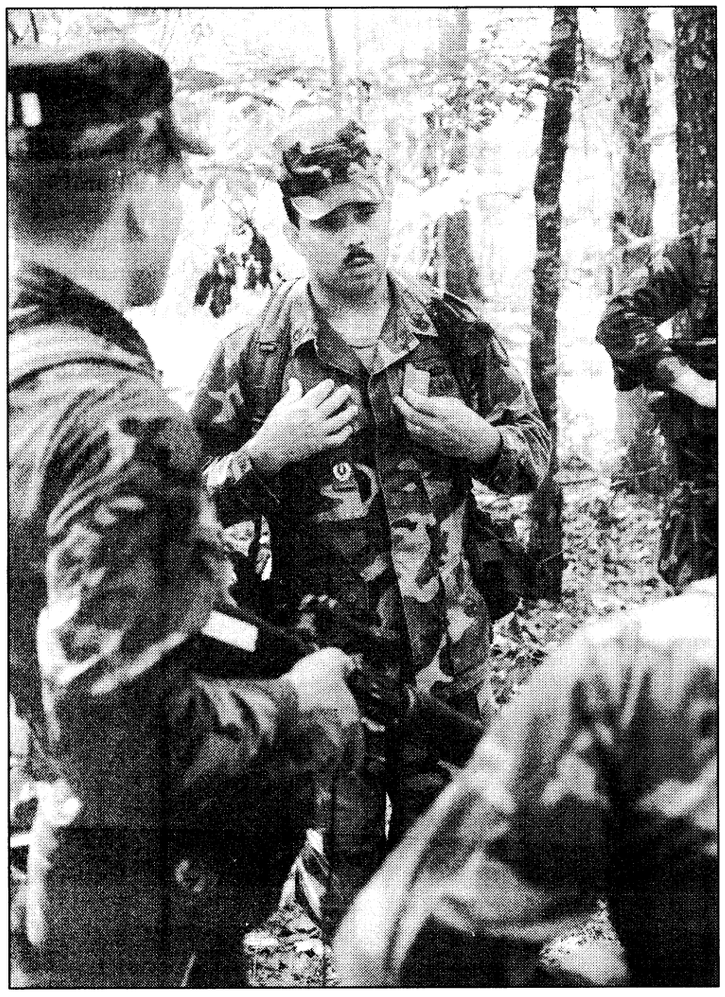
Commandos learn leadership skills, more



Daniel Maloney

During an informal discussion session, Staff Sgt. Josue Mateo, a ranger-qualified Commando instructor, reviews techniques and requirements for patrolling and occupying a base of operations. As with all other courses at SOA, the Commando Course is conducted entirely in Spanish.

Dan R. Wilson

A Commando Course student kneels in the underbrush prior to moving out on a patrol. Leadership skills are instilled in students by using patrolling operations as a test of leadership.

By Daniel Maloney
School of the Americas

Developing leadership skills through patrolling exercises may best sum up the purpose of the School of the Americas Commando Course, according to the sergeant major for the course.

Master Sgt. Rafael Colondres, acting sergeant major for the Department of Special Operations/Civil Military Operations, SOA, which instructs the course, said the Commando Course parallels the U.S. Army Ranger Course, minus the desert phase.

What these students eventually learn over the 10-week course can sometimes be used immediately upon returning home.

The course develops "better leaders, especially in the field," Colondres said.

Commando students can apply what they've learned and pass it on to their soldiers, he added.

The Commando Course breaks down into three phases, Colondres said.

The first phase conducted at Fort Benning teaches Commando students everything from land navigation to fire support and patrolling. In addition, the course covers waterborne exercises, as well as airborne and air assault operations.

From Fort Benning, the students move to the mountains of Dahlonega, Ga., where they undergo a mountaineering phase.

According to course literature, the phase, "... develops students' abilities to train small unit operations on independent dismounted, airborne or air assault operations against an enemy in mountainous terrain."

Following the mountains students enter the final phase of the course conducted in the swamps of Florida.

There students learn to execute many of the same operations performed in the first two phases with the added difficulty of swamp terrain.

Just as the Ranger Course tests the level of a soldier's endurance under extreme conditions, so does the Commando Course.

Many of the students are from a warm climate and the second course of the year (instructed from October to December) puts them into an unfamiliar situation and adjusting alone causes stress for some of them, Colondres said.

The weather coupled with the lack of sleep and food, plus being put in leadership positions can cause stress, Colondres said.

The Commando students who graduate learn to lead and pass those skills on.

Dan R. Wilson

Commando Course students move out on one of many patrols conducted during a cycle. Every change of terrain requires a reaction during patrol movements, whether the students are in the mountains at Fort Benning or the swamps of Florida.

GRADUATION: SOA's diverse mission evident in graduating courses' curricula

Although the Helicopter Repairer Supervisor Course (UH-1) had a smaller class of 11 students, its graduation marked another first for SOA.

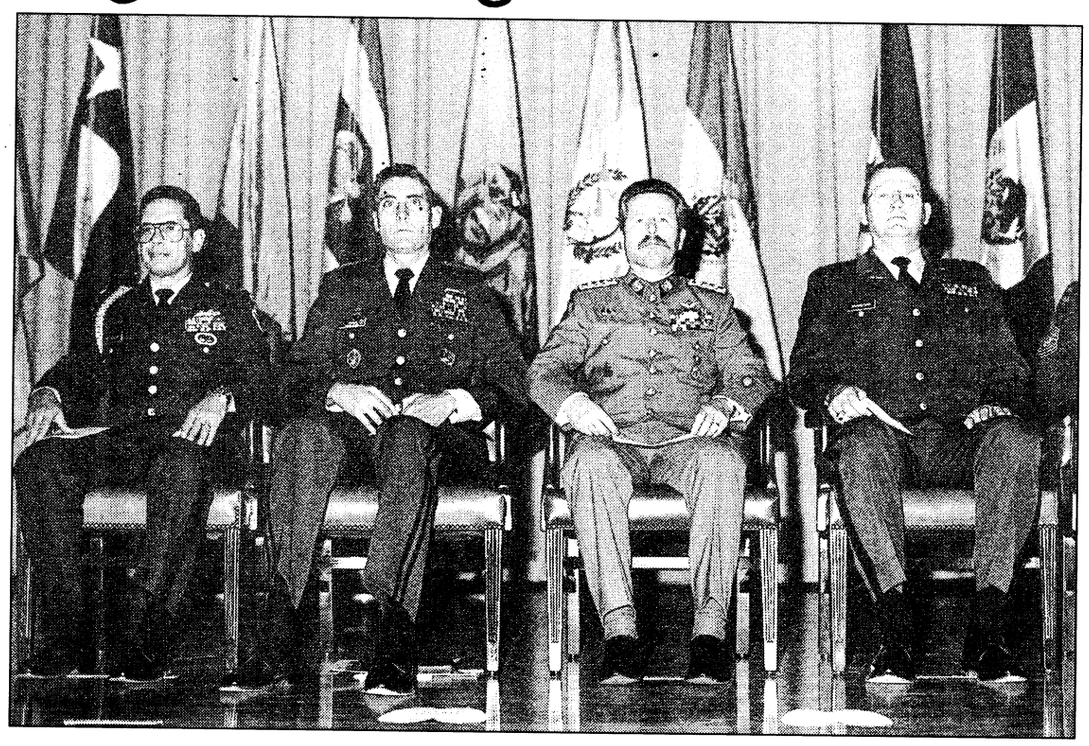
The graduates were routed to Company C, Helicopter School Battalion (Provisional), School of the Americas at Fort Eustis,Va., because they were to attend the Inter-American Air Force Academy at Homestead, Air Force Base, Fla., before Hurricane Andrew destroyed the base.

The students were the second contingent to arrive originally slated for IAAFA.

In September, eight IAAFA students were transferred to Co. C after being evacuated from Homestead prior to Andrew's devastation.

Although Co. C is still awaiting official orders, it has been preparing training materials and building a company from the ground up since fiscal 1992.

Preparing to meet a January deadline, Co. C's staff of instructors took their new mission of training the IAAFA students in stride and met the challenge graduating both classes.



Carla Y. Brown

Col. Jose R. Feliciano, SOA commandant (left); Maj. Gen. James R. Harding, guest speaker for the CGSC graduation; Col. Carlos Molina Johnson, SOA assistant commandant; and Lt. Col. William M. Bransford, director of SOA's Department of Joint and Combined Operations, await the beginning of graduation exercises for the CGSC Class of 1992. Not pictured is Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent C. Sampson Jr., SOA command sergeant major, who was also part of the graduation ceremony.

According to Sgt. 1st Class Luis A. Baez, first sergeant for Co. C, the first class of eight students were taught the Helicopter Repairer Course (UH-1) and graduated in October.

Monday's graduates met the requirements of the nine-week, course and will carry with them the ability to maintain aircraft crucial to military and police operations in their countries.

The students were sent from; Mexico, Honduras, El Salvador and Colombia.

According to Maj. Amparo T. McKissack, commander of Co. C., the students were taught "not only technical aspects of aviation maintenance, but how to inspect someone else's work."

In addition to classroom instruction, the students were instilled with a sense of responsibility for their work, because "people's lives are at stake," McKissack said.

According to McKissack, these recent graduates are entering a sometimes "humbling" job, because if a mistake is made anywhere in an aircraft repair, it must be pointed out, even if the repairers have to do it themselves.

"They have to admit it and correct it," she added.

The intensity of the course is necessary when one considers the importance of the job these graduates will be expected to perform.

According to McKissack, instead of just pointing out what needs to be repaired and repairing it, these graduates are "technical inspectors for everything."

Everything means what is commonly referred to as "shop" jobs, as well as aircraft engines.

Shop refers to jobs on components such as hydraulics, electrical systems and structural parts of aircraft. Additionally inspectors have to oversee the work done by aircraft mechanics.

involvement with Latin American soldiers."

Legoas's new assignment is as the command sergeant major of the 100th Area Support Group in Germany.

Before departing, Legoas admitted to growing attached to the school, the people and the friends he has made, but he was ready to "go on and do other things."

Taking over for Legoas is Command Sgt. Maj. Vincent C. Sampson Jr., whom Legoas said was "the right man for the job."

Legoas joined the Army and began his career with the 82nd Airborne Division, Feb. 16, 1968.

He has served in Vietnam in 1969 with the 173rd Airborne Brigade and Company C, 75th Airborne/Ranger Command (Long-Range Reconnaissance Patrol).

Legoas also served in Grenada with the 82nd Airborne Div.

He received his bachelor's degree in mathematics from the Inter-American University in Puerto Rico graduating magna cum laude.

His military studies include: the Airborne Jumpmaster's Course presented by the 7th Special Forces Group, First Sergeants Course, Operations and Intelligence Course, Sergeants Major Academy and the Command Sergeants Major Course.

PARADE

matter, the Easter gala that is staged and televised every year —really entails doing two parades, since a pretaped version is sent to foreign lands where the time difference doesn't allow for a live daytime airing Christmas Day. "I think this airs in 87 countries now," Lunden says, "and that's why the 'pre-parade' (the recorded edition) is so important. There was a time when that only served as a rehearsal, but no more. It goes out around the world four hours after we do it. This year, I'm going down to Florida on Tuesday, and we'll do the 'preparade' on Wednesday before the show Friday. My kids are off from school, so it works out well."
