It is for this very reason that the military, more so than any other organization, encourages diversity within its ranks. And we often educate our Army Family about the different cultures and backgrounds that are part of our make-up. At Fort Benning, our Equal Opportunity Office hosts regular events that further expose our Soldiers, Families, Civilians and contractors to the diversity of our people. In August, we celebrate women's equality day, National Hispanic Heritage month follows, then Native American Indian Heritage month, and in February, African American History is celebrated.

Our Army is strong because it has the strength of countless individuals, who differ in race, creed, color, class, religion and gender, but use their differences to unite into a single force capable of overcoming any obstacle. Diversity of people is crucial to the Army's success.

The same holds true for the organization of our modern fighting force. Just as the many parts of a rifle, with their different functions, come together to create a single powerful tool, the different parts of the Army come together to form a more powerful whole. Fort Benning, for example, is an installation made up of units with different missions, but they all come together to create strong American Soldiers. We train Soldiers in units like the 192nd and 198th Infantry Brigades, Airborne and Ranger Schools. From units like the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, the 75th Ranger Regiment, and the 11th Engineer Battalion, Fort Benning sends Soldiers to fight the Global War on Terrorism. We develop new technologies at our Soldier Battle Lab and in our Directorate of Combat Developments. All parts of the installation work together to accomplish the mission: developing leaders and Soldiers who are imbued with the Warrior Ethos; highly trained and capable of dominating all enemies regardless of environment.

As we look toward the future and our transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, we see that diversity continues to play a role in the success of our mission. By bringing Armor together here with Infantry, the Army will strengthen the synergy of our fighting force on the battlefield. These two branches have two very separate and different functions that work together to accomplish a common goal — the defense of our nation.

Today's battlefields see Soldiers meeting scenarios and operations that are very different than anything we've encountered in the past. Units composed of diverse individuals with different skills and strengths make for units that are ready for anything, both here and abroad. It is the blending of our different backgrounds that is one of our greatest strengths as an Army. Individually we are strong, but together we are Army Strong.

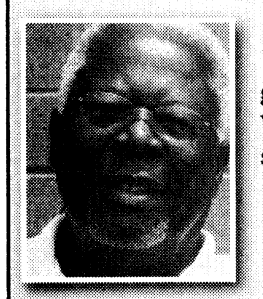
How do you think integration has affected today's Army?



Integration has brought about great change to the armed forces. We have the "best with the best" serving and defending our nation.

We have more diversity in today's Army — it gains us credibility in our nation and internationally as we deploy. It breaks down barriers and helps us accomplish our mission.

Army celebrates 60th anniversary of integration of U.S. military

"Culture does not change because we desire to change it. Culture changes when the organization is transformed; the culture reflects the realities of people working together every day. Culture is the beliefs and values practiced by an organization."

—Frances Hesselbein
Presidential Medal of Freedom recipient

On July 26, 1948, President Harry Truman issued Executive Order 9981, which established equal treatment and opportunity in the United States military, and Executive Order 9980, to integrate the civilian work force. The president believed it essential that inclusion — the highest standard of democracy — be afforded to those who defend our country. Thanks to President Truman's transformational executive order, our Army today is a reflection of our society — a diverse force strengthened by our many different perspectives, approaches and skills.

Military leaders understand that effectiveness depends on the ability of people of different military backgrounds to work together. With a culture that embraces diversity, the U.S. military is able to operate successfully across the nation and around the world. Army leaders, in particular, manage and promote diversity by creating and maintaining an inclusive environment where individual attributes are accepted, understood and valued — inspiring all Soldiers and Army Civilians to be culturally astute, agile and adaptive public servants.

So, let us celebrate this historic occasion, knowing that the blending of cultures and backgrounds is one of our nation's greatest strengths.

We are the best Army in the world, and together, we are Army Strong.

Letter to the editor

Soldier comes to her aid

Some say discipline is doing the right thing when nobody appears to be watching. Well, there is plenty of discipline in and around Fort Benning. Recently, my tire ruptured while I was driving along I-185. My spare was already pending repair from a similar fate. I wasn't on the side of the road for more than two minutes when a Soldier stopped to help. He was on his way home following his end-of-day workout. After a long day such as his, most people would simply bee-line it home. In this case, the Soldier stopped ascertained my situation, and without hesitation offered to return with a tire he had available that would fit my jeep.

He returned within 20 minutes, this time with his wife (you have to love that commitment to family and maximizing time with the ones you love!). Within minutes, I was on the road.

He wasn't your average Soldier. He is a senior NCO in 1st Battalion, 29 Infantry Regiment. 1st Sgt. John Finch is a true professional on and off duty. His strong sense of discipline was a superb reflection of his unit, Fort Benning, and the NCO Corps. This experience has renewed my faith and confidence in our Soldiers, our Army and our country. I have also renewed my support to our troops as they continue to win the Global War Against Terror.

Thank you 1st Sgt. Finch and the thousands others who would have selflessly done the same thing to help an American in need. God bless you, God bless our troops and God bless Fort Benning.

This week in Fort Benning history

• The crushing power of the mighty land battleship, the Mark VIII tank, was demonstrated when two of the 44-ton monsters demolished the last of the post's Negro housing into a heap of splintered kindling. The buildings had stood at the site of the Infantry School since the turn of the century when they were built to shelter colored laborers on the old Woolfolk Plantation.

• A new rule was established for members of the Thanatopsis Club: No telephone calls during the game.

• In this week's Benning Herald, a gossip columnist poked fun at Lt. Tarpley for making a wrong turn in the post theater and ending up in the ladies' room. Really.

3rd BCT welcomes new commander

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

Soldiers of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, bid farewell to their former commander while welcoming a new commander July 18 in front of the headquarters building on Fort Benning.

Col. Peter L. Jones assumed command of the brigade combat team from Col. Wayne W. Grigsby Jr. who had commanded the "Sledgehammer" brigade since June 2006.

Grigsby described his former Soldiers as disciplined and motivated, and congratulated them on a job-well-done during their most recent deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom March 2007 under Grigsby's command. Soldiers returned to Fort Benning in May.

"You always 'got 'er dun' and did the right thing when no one was watching," he told brigade Soldiers. "Just remember for the rest of your lives, hold your heads up high. You are the most important resource this country has."

Jones, a 1985 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy, West Point, N.Y., served as the chief of strategic threats during the 3rd ID's deployment in support of OIF.

"It is truly an honor to become part of the 'Hammer' team and the great 'Marne' Division again," he said.

"This is a great brigade that has a proud history and tradition known throughout the Army. I will give my all to continue this great tradition and prepare the brigade for warfighting anytime, anywhere."

Jones' awards and decorations include the Legion of Merit, the Bronze Star with "V" device and oak leaf cluster, the Combat Infantryman Badge, the Expert Infantryman Badge, the Parachutist Badge, the Pathfinder Badge and the Ranger Tab.

Grigsby's new assignment is in Washington, D.C., where he works with the Joint Staff at the Pentagon.

THE BAYONET

The 92nd Military Police Battalion is relocating to Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., and they cased their colors during a ceremony Thursday to symbolize their departure from Fort Benning.

As part of Army transformation, the Phoenix Battalion was assigned to the 4th Maneuver Enhancement Brigade, a new Army Force structure that can be employed on the battlefield to perform command and control maneuver space like a brigade combat team, said Lt. Col. Dennis M. Zink, battalion commander.

"This is a win-win situation for Fort Benning and Fort Leonard Wood," Zink said. "The 209th Law and Order Detachment will provide law and order enforcement duties at Fort Benning, and it gives the 92nd an opportunity to be part of a new Army Force structure at Fort Leonard Wood."

4th MEB is one of only two existing brigades of its kind in the Army, he said. The other is the 1st MEB, located at Fort Polk, La.

Col. John Huey, 89th Military Police Brigade commander, said no one was surprised that the Phoenix Battalion was selected to join the 4th MEB.

"This battalion has a long and tremendous history of varied and unique service dating back to 1945," Huey said. "The most recent addition to this legacy was a 15-month deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, where they did a marvelous job."

The 89th MP Bde. at Fort Hood, Texas, is the higher headquarters of the 92nd MP Bn.

Zink said the new brigade will give the Army many capabilities, such as providing combat assets, rear area law enforcement and infrastructure repairs, sustainment and stability. They can also provide host nation support, such as rebuilding infrastructure and improving logistical routes.

Zink said their mission to provide a deployable battalion headquarters for the U.S. Army Forces Command, anywhere in the world, and to provide law and order enforcement support in garrison remains the same.

The 4th MEB will be comprised of three basic units — military police, engineers and logisticians — and can have other units assigned to it for particular missions, he said. Air space management will be included, so they can operate as a separate brigade maneuver headquarters.

The 209th Law and Order Detach. will be commanded by a provisional headquarters run by Lt. Col. Willard Moore, Directorate of Emergency Services, and will continue to perform garrison duties under the new headquarters, Zink said.

The 92nd MP Bn. will have an unfurling ceremony to announce their arrival at Fort Leonard Wood in late August.

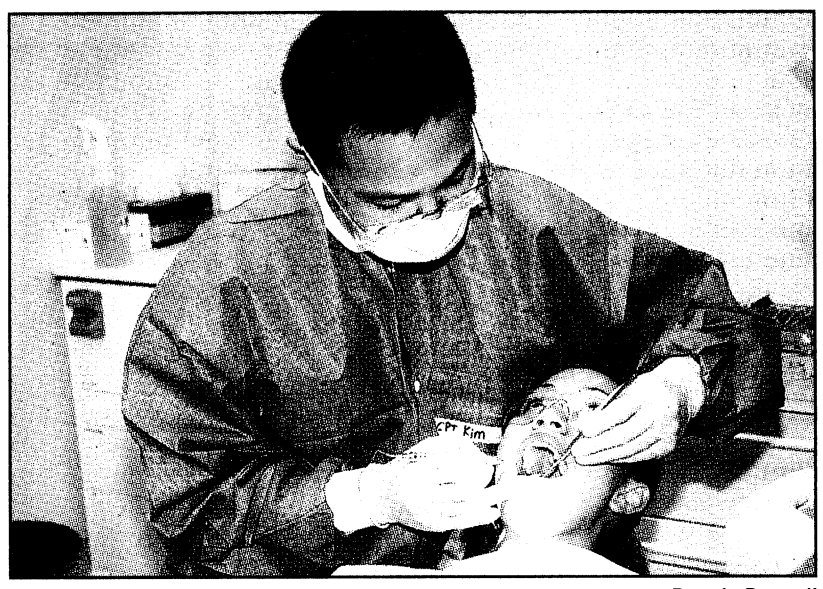
Residency program available for new dentists

Doctors will be ahead of peers in experience

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Six dentists attending a residency program at Fort Benning will be five to six years ahead of their peers when they join their new units, said Col. Bob Manga, the residency program director.

When they graduate today, the dentists will be able to handle Soldiers' dental care in the desert and across the world. They will be able to take care of 90 percent of their patients' needs as opposed to dentists who haven't attended the program who won't be able to handle 50 percent of care, he said.



Brenda Donnell

Capt. Sewhan Kim, a dental resident, examines a Soldier's teeth July 11 at Love Dental Clinic. Kim and five other dentists are attending a 12-month residency program at Fort Benning.

Manga said the officers leave dental school with some experience, but the residency program gives them the tools to become outstanding dentists.

There are six Army residency one-year programs located around the U.S., Manga said, and the Army tries to train about 40 dentists each year in that program. Approximately a dozen dentists attend two-year programs, he said, and those numbers combined are about half of the dentists accepted by the Army each year.

Capt. Chad Eardley said he applied for the residency program because he wanted to get as much training as possible.

Eardley, a graduate of A.T. Still University of Health Sciences in Mesa, Ariz., said residents immediately begin working with patients, and they are exposed to multiple materials, equipment and treatment options.

Manga, who has been a dentist for 27 years, said board-certified specialists act as mentors. They provide one-on-one instruction in every facet of dentistry, including endodontics, periodontics, prosthodontics, orthodontics, oral surgery, pediatric and general dentistry.

The training is world-class, and the intent is to send the dentists to smaller assignments where there aren't any specialists available, Manga said.

Eardley said he has learned things he wouldn't have learned in the civilian world as a new dentist, and anything he doesn't know, he can find the resources to learn. He said he can also focus on what he is learning without other worries.

"Some of my colleagues who aren't in programs aren't doing much," Eardley said. "If they're in private practice, they're trying to figure things out, get their speed up, make money and there is a lot of pressure on them."

Eardley will be assigned to a unit in Germany when he graduates. He said eventually he wants to specialize in pediatrics dentistry. Eardley joined the Army in 2003 in the Health Professions Scholarship Program, which provides comprehensive scholarships in health-care fields.

ICE feedback helps improve post services, organizations

Comments can be made at any computer

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Have you ever wanted to give someone a piece of your mind? To put it all out so there is no misunderstanding about your feelings?

Fort Benning officials encourage Soldiers, family members, civilians and visitors to share their ideas and comments and provide feedback about services available on post through ICE — the Interactive Customer Evaluation program.

Ginny Basl, who is the installation ICE manager, said anyone can provide feedback by logging onto the ICE Web site from a home or office computer or at one of many kiosks around post.

Comments, both positive and negative, are sent directly to the organizations rated.

Responses are sent to the rater if requested, but those providing feedback don't have to leave their name or identifying information. However, if they do, their privacy is protected.

Organization managers have seven days to respond or take action on negative comments, Basl said, and the garrison commander is briefed quarterly about ICE feedback.

Brady Stewart, Security Division chief for the Directorate of Intelligence and Security, said ICE is an effective tool to ensure organizations are giving customers the best service.

"Customer feedback is important because it provides insight from a different perspective. It gives us the opportunity to check the level of service we are actually providing against what we think we are providing and adjust as needed to reach our goal of excellent customer service," Stewart said.

Danny Wilson, adjutant general, Directorate of Human Resources, said ICE helps improve his organization.

"Good feedback reinforces the quality of work we do for the customer, and the negative feedback assists us in determining ways we can improve," Wilson said. "We're very serious about customer feedback and have formal documentation requirements when we get negative feedback that requires branch and division chiefs to formally respond to our director."

Basl said any organization can have a section on the Fort Benning ICE Web site, and anyone can make comments about the services listed on the site.

Army's first black Soldiers integrated into all-white unit

Editor's note: The following article is the last in a series about the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion, the first black paratrooper unit. Three Soldiers of the original 16 paratroopers are still alive. With the help of Mike Lyde, president of the 555th Parachute Infantry Association in Columbus, they shared their stories.

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

The Army's first black paratroopers became members of the newly formed 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion, Nov. 25, 1944. It was the first Army unit comprised of and led by all black active-duty Soldiers, and they became known as the Triple Nickles.

It was a milestone for black Soldiers because until then, most had not been allowed to train for combat in World War II, said Walter Morris, the first black enlisted Soldier chosen to be a paratrooper. Most were assigned to service companies, where they were basically servants performing menial tasks, he said.

Some black Soldiers had fought in combat, including members of the 92nd Infantry Division, from Fort Huachuca, Ariz., a unit comprised of black Soldiers and led by white officers. They made up the majority of the original 16 enlisted paratroopers

Once the 555th became a battalion, the unit moved to Camp Mackall, N.C., where they awaited orders overseas.

Instead, they received orders to the American Northwest and were assigned a secret mission designated Operation Firefly, to find and destroy balloon bombs that were launched from Japan on the jet stream. While there, they worked with the U.S. Forest Service.

The Triple Nickles arrived at Camp Pendleton, Ore., in May 1945, where they became the military's first smoke jumpers, according to the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion Association Web site.

"So, the 555th's mission became to seek and destroy any Japanese balloon bombs and fight any fires caused directly or indirectly by them," said Clarence Beavers, one of the sixteen original paratroopers.

Beavers said they were issued Air Force jackets and trousers with fleece linings, a football helmet with a fencing mask attached to it and 200-feet of rope, and they were taught to fight forest fires.

When they left the Northwest in October 1945, they had made 1,200 individual jumps and fought 32 fires.

The paratroopers returned to Camp Mackall. They were assigned to the 27th Special Troops, First Army, but by Dec. 6, they were attached to the 13th Airborne Division.

Later, they were attached to the 82nd Airborne Division under the command of Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, who decided it was time to integrate his black and white Soldiers.

"Recalling my own experience with black troops, I knew the time had come for change," Gavin wrote in the forward of the book, Triple Nickles, by retired Lt. Col. Bradley Biggs, the first black officer selected to be a paratrooper.

In the face of segregation, Gavin went directly to Washington, he wrote, where he visited the Chief of Plans and Operations in the War Department at the Pentagon. Integration orders were delivered, and the 555th was deactivated Dec. 9, 1947, and redesignated the 3rd Battalion, 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division. Gavin personally conducted the redesignation ceremony.

Walden said, after black and white Soldiers were integrated, he spent most of his career with the 82nd and the 11th Airborne Division, Fort Campbell, Ky.

Throughout his 24-year career, Walden served with the 24th Infantry Regiment, Japan; 188th Airborne Infantry Regiment; 746th Armored Rifle Battalion, later designated 3rd Armored Rifle Battalion, 51st Infantry, in Germany; 6th Army at the Presidio, San Francisco; and Central State College in Ohio, where he ran the ROTC program.

Walden was also in charge of 100 Soldiers from 188th when they took part in Atomic Shot 2, one of the detonations of an atomic bomb, in Desert Rock, Nev.

Walden said many things changed throughout his service, and the Army has come a long way since 1944 when he and the other 15 black Soldiers first qualified as paratroopers.

"It was something to go through because of segregation," Walden said. "The Army set the example for the rest of the country."

Morris, now 87 years old, said when he thinks about the changes the U.S. has made in the last 50 years, he has an "amazing and wonderful feeling."

"Now, I am looking at the prospect of an African-American being the president," Morris said. "Every time I think of it, I have to smile. It's wonderful to be alive and see the advancements we've made as a nation."

Origin of nickname, Triple Nickles

In addition to the obvious origin from the numerical 555, the historical roots of the 555th Parachute Infantry Battalion, is derived from the buffalo nickel. The buffalo was also the symbol of the 92nd Infantry Division, which adopted the symbol from the Buffalo Soldiers, the black cavalry divisions that fought the Plains Indians and explored the West in the late nineteenth century.

The unconventional spelling of nickle instead of nickel makes the word visually similar to the word, triple.

The 2nd Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne) was activated Oct. 6, 1950, and in March 1951, became the first all-black Army unit to make a parachute jump behind enemy lines with the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team at Munsan-ni, routing 150 Korean guerillas.

Members of the 3rd Battalion, 505th Airborne Infantry Regiment, and the 80th Anti-aircraft Artillery Battalion, 82nd Airborne Division, were all part of the first all-black Ranger company, the first all-black company to parachute into combat and the last all-black unit activated by the Army, according to the 555th Parachute Infantry Association Web site.

The 2nd Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne) was activated Oct. 6, 1950, and in March 1951, became the first all-black Army unit to make a parachute jump behind enemy lines when it jumped with the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team at Munsan-ni, Korea, where they routed 150 Korean guerrillas. The company was attached to the 187th Airborne Regimental Combat Team specifically for this daring mission.

The company fought in four major campaigns and received numerous citations, including 10 Silver Stars and 11 Bronze Stars.

Before going to their branches, all officers go one of two places — Fort Benning or Fort Sill, Okla. — for Basic Officer Leadership Course II.

"Our mission is to build leaders who are competent and who are able to lead Soldiers in any operational environment," said Capt. Kevin Pelley, platoon mentor.

In BOLC II, Soldiers learn advanced land navigation, rifle marksmanship, convoy operations and dismounted urban operations.

They also learn what it takes to be a leader.

"A leader is willing to make that split decision with no hesitation, has confidence, and knows what needs to be done without being told," said Sgt. Marty Brossett, squad trainer.

BOLC II Soldiers had the chance to lead during dismounted urban operations training July 10 at McKenna MOUT site. They took turns leading four-man entry teams as they entered, cleared and secured two- and three-story buildings.

"When you're put in a position of responsibility, it tests your ability and pushes your limit," said 2nd Lt. James Tran.

The Soldiers are tested in an environment that is realistic to combat in Iraq, said Capt. Howard Donaldson, company commander. This helps test their leadership skills under pressure.

After entering buildings, students had to take down mock insurgents, care for wounded Soldiers, detain panicked civilians and differentiate an insurgent from a bystander.

"McKenna MOUT is a hard site to train on, because there are so many open windows and loop holes. There are openings in the wall where insurgents can put their rifles and shoot in a stairway. If the students can deal with this site, they can deal with anything," Donaldson said.

Soldiers even felt the sting of a bullet. Instead of blanks, they shot blue and red paint bullets at insurgents who shot back at them.

Pelley said the sting of the paint bullets adds to the realism.

"Feeling the sting, adrenalin jumps and you react as if you are in combat," the combat veteran said.

Soldiers also learned about themselves and others.

"This training has helped me with enhancing my leadership skills and more about teamwork," Tran said. "Communication is key — along with patience and understanding — to work well as a team."

Students graduated from BOLC II Thursday.

MPs inducted into the 14th Military Police Brigade Hall of Fame during his tenure. He accomplished this by acing all qualifications during basic training and completing extra tasks.

"During company and battalion boards here, he stood out," Pearson said, noting that Miller is humble, physically gifted and a conscientious leader.

Miller, who is from Watertown, Wis., joined the Army Sept. 11, 2003. As the son of a Marine, he always wanted to join a military service. He plans to one day serve as a civilian police officer.

Palmer and Miller were named 2008 Soldier and NCO of the Year, respectively, for the IMCOM Southeast Region at Fort Stewart, Ga., June 26.

Palmer didn't win the worldwide IMCOM Soldier of Year, but he did extremely well, Pearson said.

"You've got a Soldier who has only 12 months in the Army competing at the this level — I mean it's just unheard of," Pearson said.

He said Palmer is mature, articulate and has a quiet confidence, which is unusual for someone of his age and experience.

Palmer credits Miller as one of the Soldiers who helped him through the boards and competitions.

"I wouldn't have anything right now if it wasn't for him," he said. "I would have been completely lost."

When he won his first competition, Palmer said he was surprised because he thought he hadn't done very well, and when he won the Southeast Region competition, he was very excited.

"The competitor I was going against was very "studied up," but physically I tried to stay in front the whole time," said the Oregon City, Ore., native, for whom military service is a family tradition.

Palmer said the IMCOM competition last week was challenging with a lot of events and more competitors than previous competitions. Although he didn't win IMCOM Soldier of the Year, the experience will help him in the future, he said

Palmer signed up for the Army in high school. He, too, hopes to one day become a civilian police officer, he said.

Pearson said his unit has a lot of outstanding Soldiers, but the fact that Palmer and Miller competed for the worldwide IMCOM Soldier and NCO of the Year validates their stellar qualities.

"I'm proud as I can be of them," he said.

Her son and Jalen's uncle, a Soldier now training personnel in Korea, was a good influence on Jalen when he lived nearby, but since his deployment, she has been overwhelmed.

"He's a very active child; he never sits down. He's always going and going," Denson said. "I'm 67, and I get tired. I'm not able to run up and down the basketball court, but Ollie loves basketball. I'm just hoping (Jalen) can connect with his big brother."

Denson started thinking about the program when she heard Griffin speak at a meeting of K ship Care, a local organization for relative caregivers.

"Jalen always asks about his dad," Denson said, "so I thought if a big brother figure would take him out and maybe do some of the things he sees other boys doing with their dads, maybe Jalen would calm down and not act out so much."

As Jalen bonds with White, his behavior is starting to improve, she said.

"It's been a big help for me," she said. "I was just looking for someone he could trust and I could trust. Sending that young man into Jalen's life, it's more than I can say or thank God for."

The Soldiers will mentor the children for at least a year. White said he hopes to keep in touch with Jalen even longer.

"I'm not good with kids, but he's growing on me," White said. "This is a good experience for me. I never had a little brother, and to have someone look up to me — that he would consider me his big brother — makes me feel good."

This type of mentorship position is encouraging to young Soldiers, said 1st Sgt. Charles Fuller, 362nd Eng. Co.

"It gives them a sense of pride and helps them with leadership," he said. "It has an instant impact when you touch a kid's life — just the joy you see on a child's face."

Fuller said he was proud to see such an enthusiastic response to the program. Volunteering lets them show the positive effects of the Army on their lives, he said.

White said he is teaching Jalen about Army values like respect. He is firm with him when he misbehaves, but always loving.

"I just feel like this is a good chance for me to better this kid," White said. "I'm here to tell him what's wrong and what's right — just be his big brother. He listens to me, and I hope he will follow in my footsteps and do something positive with his life."

CYS Back to School Bash set for Aug 1

First 500 will get free backpacks and supplies

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Child and Youth Services will host the annual Back to School Bash from 9 a.m. to noon Aug. 1 at the Youth Services Complex on McIver Street.

The bash will be the "last summer hurrah" before the kids start school, said Linda Laine, assistant project officer.

The children can make arts and crafts, play basketball or horseshoes or play on inflatables. Or they can test their strength in a tug o' war.

One of the highlights of the event will be the dunk tank, Laine said. Students can dunk the CYS sports and Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation staff. If they successfully dunk a staff member, they will get a prize.

The first 500 military children from kindergarten to the 12th grade will receive a backpack full of school supplies, including pens, pencils, notebooks and paper.

There will also be a raffle for iPods, DVD players, bicycles and helmets.

The event is free and snacks will be provided. For more information, call 706-545-3062.

'I found my way'

Post Chaplain's secretary to retire after serving more than 40 years

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

God uses ordinary people.
He chooses people just like me and you,
Who are willing to do just as He commands.
God uses people that will give Him all,
No matter how small your all may seem to you;
Because little becomes much
As you place it in the Master's hand.

— Ordinary People, by Danniebelle Hall

Danniebelle Hall "spoke" to Barbara Vining in the words to her song Ordinary People. Vining found validation in the assertion that God uses people just like her.

"I heard that song, it was sometime in the mid-70s, and it really spoke to me. It says that God uses ordinary people in ordinary places," she said. "I was that ordinary person, and God wanted to use me here."

"Here" is the Fort Benning Chaplains Office, where Vining has served more than 40 years, most of them as secretary to a succession of installation chaplains, 18 of them in all. Here she has taken care of the chaplains, so they can take care of the Soldiers. Here she has taken care of countless family members — sometimes 10 a day — who call seeking reassurance that their Soldier will be OK.

Since May 1967, Vining has wanted nothing more than to serve.

"That's what I am, a servant. That's where I'm most comfortable. I never considered myself a leader," said Vining, who entered civil service in 1966 and spent five months at the AG Replacement Center before landing a job as a clerk typist at the Chaplains Office. Back then, Vining was Barbara Tindall, 21 years old and engaged to a young man named Kenneth Vining, a chemist with the R.C. Cola Company. He wasn't thrilled when Barbara left her position as clerk at the Medical Center to work on post, surrounded by young, single Soldiers. At first, Barbara wasn't thrilled either.

"I was scared to death," she said. "I remember that morning, on my way to work, I thought 'What in the world am I doing?' I knew nothing about the military. I got lost that afternoon going home. But I found my way. And I've been very happy here ever since."

See 'Ordinary,' C5

Barbara Vining will retire Aug. 1 in a ceremony at The Infantry Center Chapel, a place that's near and dear to her heart. "TIC was the first chapel I ever went in. I had been here two weeks when I got a call — they were looking for someone to play the organ at a funeral that same day. I played the organ at my church, so I offered. I walked in there and I couldn't believe my eyes. I just stood there. I'd never seen anything so beautiful as TIC Chapel."

House of Heroes needs team captains, volunteers

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

House of Heroes, a nonprofit organization that repairs houses of retired military and public service veterans and their spouses, is looking for volunteer team captains and team members. The volunteers do everything from painting, plumbing and carpentry to yard work, pressure washing and minor construction.

The organization was established in 1999. When Rev. Wayne Anthony, founder, conducted funerals at Fort Benning, he noticed the decline in attendance at veterans' funerals, as reported on the House of Heroes Web site. And he noticed that aging veterans were having trouble maintaining their homes. It was after this realization that Anthony created the organization.

House of Heroes has repaired 275 houses since 1999. In September, volunteers will repair as many as 45 houses.

Jay Brown has volunteered for House of Heroes since 2004. Although no experience is necessary, the Fort Benning contractor does it all — carpentry, plumbing, electrical work, cleaning and painting.

"House of Heroes is a way to say thank you to the men and women who have volunteered service to the community and the nation," he said.

Brown said he has a passion for helping others. Before he joined House of Heroes, he repaired elders' homes and helped them determine if they were getting a good deal on air conditioning, heating and electrical services.

Last year, Brown was the captain for a House of Heroes team. He and 20 volunteers helped Era Mae Patrick, the widow of retired Sgt. 1st Class Clarence Patrick, a Korean and Vietnam veteran. Patrick's home had erosion damage outside, water damage inside and light switches that didn't work.

"The most rewarding part of it is to see the homeowner's face after you repair their house," Brown said.

There are still openings for team captains and team members, said Janie Pearson, Fort Benning's House of Heroes liaison. Captains will be responsible for overseeing the work, scheduling a work day and ensuring all materials are at the site. The materials are bought using donations from companies and individuals. Each team will be in charge of repairing one house in Phenix City or Columbus.

To volunteer, call Pearson at 706-545-1942 or e-mail Janie.Pearson@us.army.mil. Those interested in being captains must attend a training session from 3 to 5 p.m. Tuesday at Classroom 4A, Infantry Hall. For more information, go to www.houseofheroes.org.

There's help for seniors raising grandchildren

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"We raised our children and thought we were done. This is my second time around, and God has given me the chance to do it well — or even better."

— Haydee Dukes

More and more children are being raised by a family member other than a parent — about 7.5 percent of families nationwide. In Georgia, that statistic jumps to 10 percent. Many of these caregivers are older than 60 and retired.

Haydee Dukes is one of them. She and her husband, a former Fort Benning Soldier, took in their daughter's children more than 10 years ago. Since his death last year, Dukes has been raising the family herself.

"He was the backbone, the strength that held us up," said Dukes of her husband. "He was my encourager; he supported the children in their activities; he gave us wisdom and our financial security. Now, in a way, I'm a single parent."

Dukes has many roles to fill, from referee to counselor to president of the parent teacher organization. Despite its challenges, caring for her grandkids is a blessing, she said.

"There are times when I want to throw my hands up and say, 'God, how did I get myself into this?' Then there are times, like after my husband passed away, that having these kids has uplifted me," she said. "They've brought me into different avenues of life that I probably would have never walked in. The good outweighs the bad."

Dukes relies on prayer, a strong network of friends and, for the past three years, the Kinship Care program, a resource for relative caregivers.

Sponsored by the Area Agency on Aging, the program covers 16 counties, including Harris, Muscogee and Chattahoochee. Laura Walker, wife of Command Sgt. Maj. Matt Walker, heads up the program.

Most of the people involved here are grandparents, she said. They come from all walks of life and are raising their grandchildren through a variety of circumstances, but "the common thing that binds these grandparents is that they all are doing this because they love their families. We're just trying to provide as much information as possible to make their jobs easier."

Walker offers guidance on guardianship options, immunization requirements for school, and state and federal aid. She can also refer caregivers to legal assistance or medical providers.

The local support group meets the second Tuesday of the month at the Columbus Public Library on Macon Road.

"It provides a forum for grandparents to talk about what they're going through," Walker said.

Groups meet at 10:30 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Guest speakers address a range of topics.

"It's not like it was raising our children a generation ago," Dukes said.

Actor visits wounded warriors, screens movie

D.B. Sweeney visits Soldiers, gives them coins

THE BAYONET
Brenda Donnell

Actor and producer D.B. Sweeney visited wounded warriors at Fort Benning Friday and treated them to a free screening of his movie Two Tickets to Paradise at Wynnsong.

Sweeney went to the Warrior Transition Battalion and the Soldier and Family Assistance Center where he signed autographs and handed out coins he designed. The coins, similar to military coins commanders give out, were Sweeney's way of thanking Soldiers for their service, he said.

Master Sgt. Marcus Jefferson, who was wounded in Iraq last July and is now an operations NCO at WTB, said Sweeney's coins took his visit "to the next level," because coins are usually associated with visiting military dignitaries — not celebrities.

Sweeney took advantage of the computers at the Soldier and Family Assistance Center to check on his flight arrangements, and spoke to Sgt. Lori Oetzel. She called her mother in New York while Sweeney, a New Yorker, spoke to the sergeant's mom.

Later, Sweeney met Soldiers and family members at the theater, chatting with them and signing autographs before the movie started.

Oftentimes, the military doesn't get the recognition it deserves, he said, and his visit gave him the opportunity to recognize the contributions of Soldiers and their families.

"You make me proud to be an American," he said.

Sweeney has starred in numerous films, including Fire in the Sky, The Cutting Edge, Eight Men Out and Stiletto. He plays a colonel in Spike Lees' Miracle at St. Anna, a movie about Soldiers from the 92nd Infantry Division. The movie will be released in September. He has a television drama series debuting later this year on cable's Starz called Crash, inspired by the Academy Award-winning Best Motion Picture of 2006.

ASK THE JUDGE

OFFICE OF STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Anthony Tempesta

Q: I was involved in a contested child custody case last year, and I paid several thousand dollars in attorney's fees. Can I deduct those costs?

A: No, you cannot deduct the cost of legal expenses in that case.

Certain personal legal expenses are deductible, when they are incurred attempting to produce or collect taxable income, or paid in connection with the determination, collection, or refund of any tax.

If you are audited by the Internal Revenue Service, for example, and you hire an attorney to represent you, those legal expenses may be deductible.

Personal legal expenses may also be deductible if they are related to either doing or keeping your job, such as those you paid to defend yourself against criminal charges arising out of your trade or business.

A school teacher accused of striking a student for example, may be able to deduct the costs of defending himself in a criminal prosecution.

Personal legal expenses cannot be deducted for cases involving child custody actions, the breach of promise to marry, civil or criminal charges resulting from a personal relationship, damages for personal injury (except certain whistle blower claims and unlawful discrimination claims), preparation of a title (or defense or perfection of a title), property claims or property settlement in a divorce, or the costs of preparing a Last Will and Testament.

So much so that she turned down a number of opportunities to move into higher paying positions throughout the years, positions that might be considered more prestigious in some circles. She even went so far as to interview for a job with the post command group. "I don't know what I'm doing here," she told her interviewer. "I'm really happy where I'm at."

Barbara planned to retire in 2000 when she turned 55. Kenny had retired four years prior, and the two looked forward to their golden years with their children, Kenya, Kara and Kenny Jr., and their seven grandchildren.

But as the year approached, Barbara said, something held her back. She felt the need to keep working and did so with Kenny's blessing, figuring to work another three years, until June of 2003. Kenneth died suddenly in January 2003.

"That was it — that was the something that kept me here, I just didn't know it," Barbara said. "After Kenneth died, I needed to stay busy and to have that daily contact. I needed this job and these people. They just wrapped their arms around me and took care of me and got me through it. They were so wonderful. They've always been so wonderful. That's what kept me here."

In four decades, Barbara has seen a lot of change in the post's chaplaincy program. Her office has moved nine times since she first settled in with a manual typewriter in Building 35, which is now the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation. In 1967, there were no ministry programs specifically for youth, no family life programs, fewer chaplains, fewer services and more chapels.

But some things haven't changed. Being part or privy to the death notification process has never gotten easier. Back then, with the war raging in Vietnam, the process of notifying and ministering to the families of fallen Soldiers was unrefined. The same can't be said these days, Barbara said, but dealing with the death of a Soldier is still the most sobering aspect of her job.

And then, as now, the chaplains and their assistants became close to Barbara and her family. Most of them stay in touch, and when they pass through town, they often drop in to check on Barbara and the kids.

"That's what I'm going to miss, the people. We're a family. It's a wonderful feeling to be a part of the Army family," Barbara said. She will retire Aug. 1. in a 2 p.m. ceremony at The Infantry Center Chapel on Main Post.

Barbara will be missed terribly, said Chaplain (Col.) Scott Davis, the installation's senior chaplain, who has the unenviable job of finding a replacement for her.

"Not an easy thing to do," Davis said. "She has been the face and voice of the installation Chaplains Office for four decades. She has a servant's heart; you can call on her at the drop of a hat to sing or play at a funeral. And in this office, where propriety and confidentiality is paramount, you can count on Barbara to leave it all right here. She's given so much not only to the chaplains but to this whole community."

Barbara, who will celebrate her 63rd birthday Monday, said her time with the chaplains has been "a gift and a blessing."

"The chaplains and the chaplains' assistants, they always thank me, but you know, I'm the one who's blessed," she said. "I'm so grateful to have known them and worked with them. They've touched my life. I've been given so much more than I gave."

Kinship Care: Offers resources for grandparents

"Having the Kinship Care program helps us. The people who come (to the meetings) support each other with strategies that have worked for them. I think it's one of the great programs that have been designed for grandparents raising grandchildren."

Kinship Care helps financially when possible by hosting holiday parties and giving out school supplies. Money is often a concern, Walker said, since almost half the participants are retired.

Dukes said money is certainly an issue, especially with growing teens in the house, but she's not worried.

"We raised our children and thought we were done," she said. "This is my second time around, and God has given me the chance to do it well — or even better."

Dukes said the program has helped her on this "second" journey. She recommends it to others in similar situations, whether they are resentful, overwhelmed or "just plain afraid."

"I truly believe they will find friendship, support and the answers and solutions to some of the questions and problems they have," she said. "I very, very strongly encourage them to call and not be alone in their circumstances anymore. Together, we can make a difference for people who find themselves in this situation."

For more information, visit the Web site at www.lcrdcaaa.org or call Walker at 706-256-2939.

Spiritual support available for Soldiers, family

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Post chaplains offer a variety of support services for Soldiers and their families. They offer counseling, perform rites such as marriages and christenings and lead religious-based activities.

One of the most important aspects of spiritual support is the worship services, said Chaplain (Col.) Scott Davis, the installation's senior chaplain.

There are 22 worship services held every weekend in seven chapels. Services range in style from contemporary to traditional and represent different faiths and denominations, including Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and Muslim.

"The ultimate goal, what we really want to do as chaplains, is about a growth in spiritual strength," Davis said. "Spiritual strength equals life strength. Spiritual strength gives you that ability to not only handle the stresses of military life but to flourish and succeed, to grow."

There are 46 chaplains serving full-time on post, more than 40 chaplain assistants, 10 chaplains in training and four reserve chaplains. They meet the needs of almost 4,500 worshippers on post, Davis said.

Although all chaplains are available for pastoral support, the Family Life Chaplain Training Center is a great resource for families seeking confidential counseling, Davis said, since the chaplains there specialize in counseling.

A chaplain is also assigned to each unit. They offer advice and act as a liaison between the Soldier and the command. They often host prayer breakfasts and Bible studies for the cadre.

Other weekly faith-based activities, such as youth groups, choirs, Bible studies and men's and women's classes, are organized through the chapels.

Single Soldiers and married couples can take a weekend retreat through the Strong Bonds program. The retreat includes classes on different Army-life related issues. For couples struggling during reintegration, it can strengthen their relationship, Davis said.

Davis said he hopes the spiritual programs on post will continue to grow.

"My hope is that our biggest problem would be not having enough room," he said. "We have some great programs — exciting things going on. If you don't know who else to talk to, talk to a chaplain."

For more information, call 706-545-2288.

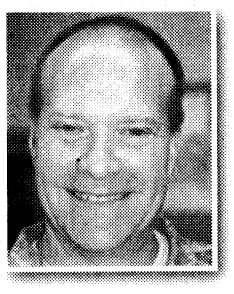
Learn to speak the same language as your spouse

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey



What woman wouldn't love to have the new power cleaning system with the bagless, ergo-gripped vacuum cleaner including the carpet cleaning attachment for her birthday or any other special day?

And what about him? Can you believe that a $15 greeting card with Elizabeth Barrett Browning's How do I love thee? embossed in gold leaf and lace, with the matching lovebird poem keychain got only a glance and grunt before being used to pick the meat out of his teeth after dinner?

What's the problem here? Well, the problem may have to do with the fact that in most relationships, we do not speak the same language.

Guys love things with power and cords. Remember Home Improvement? Power tools are cool. Men love horsepower, bigger and more powerful tools.

I learned the hard way that my wife's desires are not necessarily mine.

Men, here is a tip, do not buy her anything that plugs in (unless she specifically asks for it) on those days that belong to Hallmark.

Women, take no offense if your man doesn't melt after reading the sentimental card you bought for him. Going shopping with you for curtains is not a bonding activity.

I think I finally have it now. When my wife and I first married, I did not want to buy her cards or flowers on Valentine's Day or whenever because she expected it. Boy, was I a fool.

Fortunately, after 27 years of Valentine's days, I have gotten my act together. And part of the dance is knowing how to speak the same language.

Rookies in relationships often make the mistake of giving what they want, not giving what their mate wants — we just don't understand our mate's "language of love." Though there are many languages of love, here are six of the more common ones. Which language does your lover speak?

•The language of time — just being together, hanging out

•The language of encouragement — specific, positive affirmation

•The language of activity — doing something together that's fun and fulfilling

•The language of gifts — thoughtfulness in the form of small romantic purchases

•The language of affection — (not sex, guys) gentle, caring touch that doesn't demand anything

•The language of sex — (not affection, ladies) spontaneous, passionate, unbridled physical playfulness

Again, the key is not to give what you want, but what your spouse wants or needs. Ask your mate what his or her language of love is, and then see if you can speak his or her language in some way, large or small, at least once a day this week.

Want some more information or encouragement on how to speak your mate's language of love or how to help them speak yours? Then come see us at The Chaplain Family Life Center, Building 2606 Soldier's Plaza, Dixie Road, or call us at 706-545-1760 to make an appointment.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Harrington wins Open

He started the final round two shots behind Greg Norman in the 137th British Open, but Padraig Harrington pulled it out and won by four strokes over England's Ian Poulter July 20. Norman finished six strokes behind Harrington. Norman was trying to become the oldest winner of a major, PGA Tour event or European Tour event.

It was Harrington's second straight British title.

Wie disqualified

Michelle Wie, the 18-year-old golfer who has made headlines for years, made more news July 20 when she was disqualified from the State Farm Classic for failing to sign her scorecard before leaving the scoring area after the second round.

Wie was one shot off the lead and had no explanation as to why she didn't sign the scorecard.

She is bouncing back, though, and is planning on playing with the men in the PGA Legends Reno-Tahoe Open this weekend.

Shockey, Taylor traded

New York Giants' tight end Jeremy Shockey was traded to the New Orleans Saints for a second- and fifth-round draft pick next year.

Shockey has been known as disgruntled because he wanted more involvement with downfield passing. Maybe Saints' coach Sean Payton will use Shockey to his advantage.

In other NFL trade news, Miami Dolphins' defensive end Jason Taylor was traded to the Washington Redskins for a second-round pick in 2009 and a sixth-round pick in 2010.

Olympians get presidential send-off

About two dozen Olympic athletes visited the White House Monday for a send-off from President George Bush and his wife, Laura. Bush will attend the opening ceremonies and stay a few days when the games start Aug. 8 in Beijing, China.

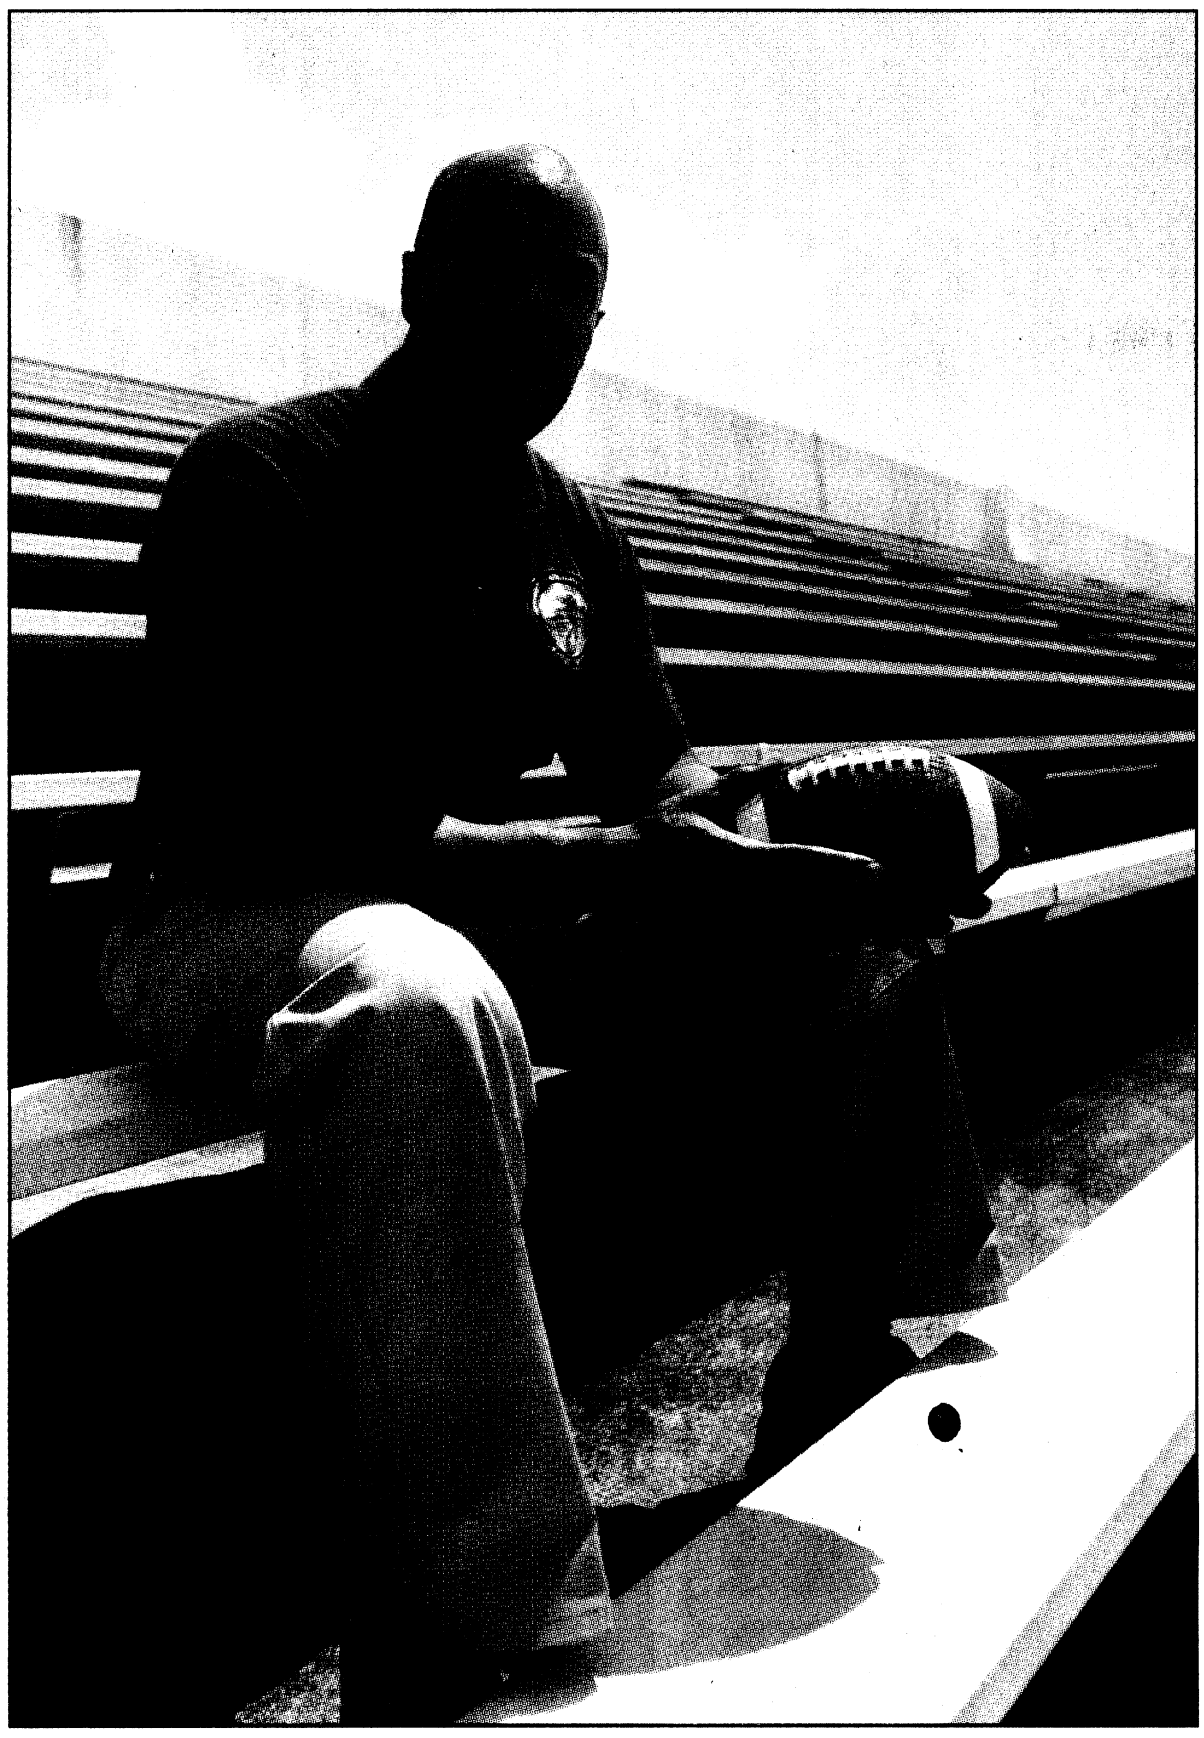
NASCAR hits the Brickyard

I might scream and pull my hair out this weekend if Kyle Busch wins another race. Luckily, the Brickyard at Indianapolis Motor Speedway is a race that every single driver wants to win. The Allstate 400 at The Brickyard starts at 1 p.m. Sunday. Finally, coverage will move from TNT to ESPN. TNT coverage was the worst — the commentators were boring and there were so many commercials, the coverage was confusing. Hopefully ESPN does a better job; it shouldn't be too hard.

'Mental toughness,' faith keys to success



Mitchell Thomas IV

John Mark III, a senior engineer for SAIC, is a retired Infantry Soldier, a former player for the Fort Benning Doughboys and a former member of the Army martial arts team.

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas

Football is all about aggression. Martial arts are all about self-discipline.

Real life — a successful life — means striking a balance between the two, said retired Sgt. 1st Class John Marks, who competed with the Army's martial arts team and played linebacker for the Fort Benning football team, the Doughboys, in the early '80s, when the team competed against the likes of Georgia Tech, Florida and Bear Bryant's Crimson Tide.

The 6-foot-1-inch, 227-pound combat veteran said he honed his physical strength on the football field long before he joined the Army in 1977. He made the all-state team in high school and walked on as a freshman at Bethune-Cookman College in Daytona Beach, Fla.

Martial arts came later in 1980. Marks took to the sport quickly, he said, earning his black belt in Chinese goju in less than two years.

"People think in martial arts you train to kick someone's butt," said Marks, a senior engineer with SAIC, "but it's really about learning to control yourself and walk away when you can walk away. You learn to be patient in dealing with people."

"Mental toughness," Marks calls it, and that, along with his faith in God, carried him through the darkest days of his life. In 1998, Mark's 15-year-old daughter, Bianca, died after being struck by a car while crossing the street after a chapel service on Fort Benning.

To heal, Mark's sister said, he'd have to forgive the young man who killed his daughter. He followed her advice and befriended the man.

"I heard so many people say I should sue him or hurt him," Mark said. "And all those things went through my mind. The tough side of me wanted to lash out at the guy, but I saw that this kid was hurting even worse than I was. (He) didn't mean to do it. If it was me who made the same mistake, I'd want forgiveness."

So Mark forgave, and it helped him find peace. But it wasn't enough to help the young driver, who committed suicide on the first anniversary of Bianca's death.

"I had no idea how bad he was hurting,"

Soldier hosts backyard volleyball games

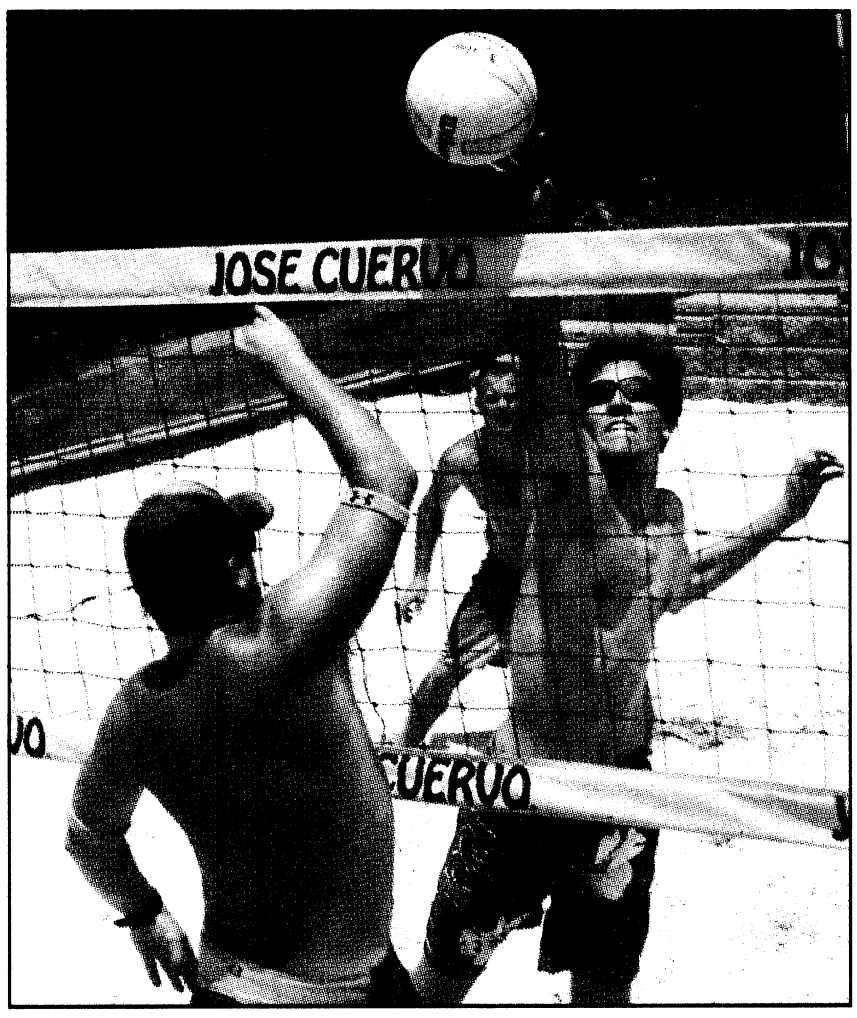
But Marsh's secret paradise, a competition-level volleyball court in his Midland, Ga., backyard, has been open to the public for two years.

"This is the nicest court in town. It has Cuervo nets, deep sand, and it's the same quality you see in the pros," Allen said. "The competition out here is the best in Columbus, and Soldiers who are looking to play need to take advantage of it."

Marsh and his wife Rachel, both competitive volleyball players, have held weekly sand, or "beach," volleyball games and taught players of all ages and skill levels for free since opening the court two years ago.

"We love the competition, it keeps us in shape, and we've made so many friends all over the country from playing," said Marsh, who has played for 15 years. "We love the game, and we want to share it with those who have the same passion for it."

After arriving at Fort Benning in 2002, Marsh, a California native, found very few places to play. He played for a few years at a local apartment complex's court. The idea to build his own court came after the apartment complex began forcing non-residents to leave the court.



Mitchell Thomas IV

Patrick Donnelly tries to tap the ball past Phil Enabnit during a tournament match Saturday at Sgt. 1st Class Josh Marsh's outdoor volleyball court. The court is free and open for pickup games and instruction.

"We had the space, and we had the means to make it happen, so we built it," Marsh said. "Most of the best players in town kept saying they didn't have a decent place to play, so we decided to do it and control everything ourselves."

The Marshes host pickup games for upper-level men's teams on Tuesdays and upper-level women's and coed teams on Wednesdays.

Once a month, they host pool play and double elimination tournaments for cash prizes. The registration fees for tournaments range from $25 to $40 per player.

"The level of competition is as stiff as it gets," said Tommy Roper, who has commuted from Atlanta to compete since the court opened. "I have my kids out here, and we all have fun. Josh opens his swimming pool to us and provides food and drinks. It's a family atmosphere out here."

On Thursdays, the Marshes give basic volleyball instructions for beginners. They also give refresher courses to experienced players and transitional lessons to players who play primarily indoors.

Chris Akers, the director of the Columbus Juniors Volleyball Club girl's indoor team, helps with the classes. Akers said playing on sand helps younger kids develop into better indoor players.

Rangers beat 198th by one

Intramural softball continued with three games Monday at Gowdy Field.

In the first game, the 75th Ranger Regiment edged out Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 198th Infantry Brigade, 7-6. The Rangers took control in the third inning with three runs. 198th brought in four runs in the sixth, but came up short as time expired.

In the second matchup, the 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, fell to 203rd Maintenance, 7-11. In the first inning, 203rd scored six runs, including an in-the-park homer by Kateesh McDonald. 3/47 couldn't close the gap in the sixth inning before time expired.

In the final game, the 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, knocked off the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, 21-10. After three innings, 2/19 held a one-run lead. In the fourth, 2/19 brought in six runs, making the score 14-7. They shut out 2/58 in the sixth and scored seven runs in the bottom of the inning.

Regular season games are played Mondays through Thursdays at Gowdy and Knappenberger fields. The playoffs will begin Aug. 4.

Express shut out in local tournament

The Fort Benning Express women's travel softball team went 0-2 in the ninth annual Lady Pirates Open Softball Tournament Saturday and Sunday in Phenix City. It was the first local tournament for the first-year team.

The Heartbreakers brought in eight runs to close out the game in the fifth, winning by the 10-run rule.

In their bracket play matchup Sunday, the Express was eliminated after putting up a solid offensive effort against the Buena Vista Coot Quarter.

After the Coot Quarter took a 13-6 lead in three innings, Hallingquest crushed a two-run homer in the fourth. The Coot Quarter brought in three more runs in the sixth before the game was called for time.

The Express will compete in the 2008 USSSA Military World Tournament Aug. 14-17 in Kissimmee, Fla.

Fired customer wonders what to do next

KING FEATURES SYNDICATE
Tom and Ray Magliozzi

I have been taking my cars for repairs and service to the same repair/tire shop for more than 10 years. The last time I went in for an oil change, the shop manager called me aside.

He said, "You've been coming in here for years for oil changes and so on, but I notice you have a brand-new set of tires and you didn't buy them from me, and I'd like to know why."

He was visibly upset, so I was very careful to say that it was just a matter of price, and that I had bought tires from him in the past.

He then got very upset and said, "Well, then you can let that other guy do your oil changes from now on, too." And he stormed off.

I felt like I'd been caught cheating on my wife. (NOT that I actually know what that feels like, of course). Why did he throw me out of his shop?

Can't I shop around for tires? The worst part is, now I have to find a new shop that I can trust.

— Peter

TOM: Geez, Peter. Your mechanic does not have what we refer to in the shop as "good heapside manner."

RAY: He was doing fine until he got visibly upset and fired you as a customer.

TOM: I think it was perfectly OK for him to inquire as to why you didn't buy the tires from him. Maybe that would have produced some useful information for him. Maybe you would have said, "I didn't know you sell tires," and he could have told you that he does, and taken steps to make sure other customers know that.

RAY: And if you said it was due to price, he could have considered lowering his prices or responded by saying, "Well, since you're a longtime customer, I'd be happy to give you a discount and match anyone else's price, so I hope you'll think of me next time you need tires." That would have been fine, right?

TOM: Or he might have said, "That's true, I can't compete with those big tire places on price, but since I see your car regularly, I can keep an eye on your tires for you, rotate them regularly and replace one if anything goes wrong." That would have an acceptable response too, right?

RAY: I can sympathize with the guy, to some extent. He probably feels like he's been good to you through the years, and he wishes you had at least called him and said: "Frank, I need tires, but they cost 10 bucks less per tire at Tires R Us. Is there anything you can do for me, or should I just get them over there?"

TOM: He just handled the situation poorly. So, now you have two choices, Peter.

You can call him up and say: "Frank, listen, I'm sorry about buying my tires elsewhere. And I assume you were just having a bad day. I've been a customer of yours for a long time, and I'd like to keep being your customer if we can get past this."

If he truly was just having a bad day — if he was unscrewing a spark plug, stripped the threads, dropped his wedding ring into the cylinder, and then went to the restroom and accidentally wiped himself with 100-grit sandpaper that day, he'll have a chance to apologize and get a good customer back.

RAY: Or, if you don't want to do that or don't think you should have to, you can go to our Web site, www.cartalk.com, and look at the Mechanics Files. Enter your ZIP code, and you'll get a list of nearby shops that other readers and listeners of ours have personally recommended. Good luck, Peter.

BASS Club stresses sportsmanship, conservation

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

While deployed in Iraq in 2003, retired Sgt. 1st Class Chris Cox said, he dreamed about two things — being with his family and bass fishing.

"When I'm in my boat bass fishing, I shut off my cell phone, and it's straight peace and quiet," Cox said. "If you want to talk to me, you have to swim to the boat.

"The thought that I would be back home fishing kept me sane while I was deployed."

Cox is one of 43 members of the Benning BASS Club, an organization that promotes education and sportsmanship, said Sgt. 1st Class Randy Duncan, the president of the club, which was founded in 1972.

"This organization has done so much for all of us over the years. We come together as men and women with the common desire to teach and learn new ways to fish," said Duncan, who's been a member for eight years.

The members meet biweekly to exchange ideas and techniques on all aspects of catch and release bass fishing. They compete in fishing tournaments every month.

Winners are determined after members weigh their best five catches after eight hours on the water. The entry fee is $15 for a one-day and $30 for a two-day excursion.

Members can qualify for state tournaments based on their yearly performances.

But more important than the competition is the club's contributions to the environment and the community, Duncan said. The club holds two charity tournaments annually, and they donate all proceeds to various local organizations.

Club members also conduct fishing rodeos to teach kids bass fishing skills.

In January, the Benning BASS Club formed the Benning Junior BASS Club.

Like the adults, the kids compete in tournaments, participate in conservation projects and conduct fishing derbies on post.

"When the kids help teach other kids who may have never fished before, it helps with the growth of the sport," said Command Sergeant Maj. John Burns, the director of the Junior BASS Club.

At present, kids must be family members of Benning BASS Club members.

Burns said the club will soon open to all children, although a member of the Benning BASS Club must sponsor the child.

Club dues for each child are $1 a month. The cost for tournament participation is $10.

Duncan said the addition of the Junior BASS Club helps the Benning BASS Club keep its focus on the future of the sport.

"I have been involved with fishing my whole life," Duncan said. "I have competed on the regional level, I have fished on pro tournaments and have bettered myself because of my involvement with the club. A lot of kids today don't know or care about fishing, so to see the look on my sons' faces when they fish makes it all worth while."

The Benning BASS Club is open to active-duty Soldiers, retirees, veterans, family members and DoD Civilians.

For more information on the Benning BASS Club or the Junior BASS Club, call 706-545-8825 or visit www.benningbassclub.com.

Skating safety classes offered every Saturday

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Yamil Collazo, the coach for the local GT Speed skating team, conducts skating safety classes every Saturday from 8:30 to 10:30 a.m. at Jam Skate Center in Columbus. The classes are for skaters of all ages and experience levels.

Students learn basic skills, including what Collazo refers to as the "three Ss of skating" — starting, stopping and standing.

"Many people have no idea that there is a correct way to do basic things like standing on roller skates," said Collazo, who has taught the classes for 20 years. "You are going to fall, and there's no way around it.

"But you have to learn to fall in a way that protects you."

Beginners learn to control themselves on skates by playing games and performing drills.

They are also taught the proper ways to wear protective gear, including helmets and pads.

After the beginner's course, students can participate in the more advanced outdoor class.

Stacey White said the safety classes provide her peace of mind.

"My son has split two helmets while skating," White said.

"If he didn't learn how to wear his helmet properly, he could have had serious brain injuries. It is such a relief knowing that safety comes first with these classes."

Collazo said common sense and education are the best means for preventing injuries while skating.

"I'm an advocate of roller skating," he said. "I feel it's my responsibility to the community to be a safety officer."

Saturday classes are $6. Outdoor classes are free. New participants can skate free the first time if they bring a copy of this article.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

I want to talk a bit about workout clothing. There are so many different options, it can get very confusing to know what's best for you.

Whether you're an athlete who endures constant, tough workouts or a "regular" who just enjoys staying active, you need the right clothing with the right fabrics and the right size. It's no fun to work out if your clothes and gear let you down. Plus, if you look good, that's a boost to your ego as well.

There are several things you have to take into consideration when choosing exercise clothes.

Let's start with temperature. In an air-conditioned exercise room, your temperature may fluctuate. You may get hot and sweaty as you exercise, then get chilled again when you cool down. When you leave air conditioned areas and walk to the car, you'll either be freezing or too hot. For all these reasons, layering is the answer to your workout wardrobe needs. You can probably stay comfortable with a pair of lightweight pants or shorts, a T-shirt, thick, absorbent socks and a sweatshirt or long sleeved shirt to prevent chills. I like to wear a T-shirt over my workout clothes, so I can take it off before my workout and put it back on after I cool down.

Cotton is an excellent fabric for exercise clothes because it is absorbent, comes in a huge variety of thicknesses and is easy to care for. Some of the new fabrics include moisture "wicking" material, which moves perspiration away from the body and into the outer layer of the clothing. Cotton has some natural wicking action, but it doesn't have the feel of some of the new synthetic blends. Cotton also tends to hold moisture, whereas wicking fabrics dry quickly. Discount stores, such as Wal-Mart and Target, sell inexpensive workout gear, so check these out before investing in high-end clothing.

Always choose comfortable clothes that stretch and bend with you. Try on athletic apparel and then try some of the activities you will be doing, such as stretching. Ideally, whatever you choose to wear will not only make you look wonderful, but will keep you comfortable during your workout.

Of course, you need shoes designed for the activity you are doing. Running shoes, for example, will not give you the lateral support you need in an aerobics class.

Remember, everyone has different tastes. You have to feel good to look good. Make sure you are comfortable in what you wear, and your workouts won't be so, well, uncomfortable.

Sgt. 1st Class Josh Marsh, pictured here at the net, hosts volleyball games in his backyard in Midland, Ga.

"The sand is huge in helping with conditioning, and you play with less people on the court," Akers said. "All high school volleyball players should play in sand, and learning on a court like Josh's is ideal."

Rachel said volleyball gives women an opportunity to stay involved in team sports as they get older.

"A lot of sports that women played in high school don't transfer well into their adult life," she said. "If they are cheerleaders, they can't continue it after college, and basketball can be tough on the body because of the playing surface. Playing beach volleyball is easier on the joints and knees than the hard gym floor. Whether you're male or female, 7 or 70, you can play and enjoy volleyball if you have some athletic ability."

Roger Sanford, a 53-year-old claims examiner in the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate and former national-level player, said playing at the Marshes' court for the last two years has kept him in shape.

"There was a time when I had a really good vertical jump, and I could hit the ball really hard, but as you get older, you learn to play smarter," said Sanford, who also officiates volleyball for local high schools and Division II colleges in the state.

"It's a very technical sport, and you can continue to play it well into your later years. You just have to learn to change your game."

Marsh, who played on the Maneuver Captain's Career Course team that won the Commander's Cup in intramural volleyball last year, said one of his main goals is to spread the word to Soldiers.

"There are a lot of guys on post who are talented players, but with the turnover rate and Soldiers being sent to other posts, the talent pool gets diminished," Marsh said. "I want Soldiers who play the game to know that we have the place for them to compete at a high level."

For more information, call Marsh at 706-587-3576 or visit http://marshvolleyballparadise.spaces.live.com

Mark: 'I could tell that uniform meant something'

Mark said. "The entire ordeal was a learning experience about forgiveness. I don't know where I'd be if I hadn't followed (my sister's) advice."

His sister Elaine, his spiritual mentor, lost her battle with cancer eight years ago. With both his parents and Elaine gone, he took it upon himself to offer the kind of spiritual guidance and support she once offered to anyone in need. Younger sister Angela said he's filled Elaine's shoes quite nicely.

"John is such an amazing man," Angela said. "With all of these sudden losses, we all suffered. But as a family, we found strength in God. Elaine helped John in so many ways, and the strength he got from her has spread throughout our whole family."

Mark joined the Army when he was 18, after admiring a cousin who returned home from a tour in Germany.

"I saw how my family looked at him. They were so proud," he said. "And he was proud. I could tell that uniform meant something. I wanted to have that same look, and I wanted people to look at me the same way."

Angela said her brother succeeded. His family is very proud of his service, but even more proud of the Godly man he has become.

"Through all the tough times, he has become a better person," she said. "Nothing but God can help a person grow that much. I look at John very highly, and he's proven, as long as God's in his life, he can't go wrong."

Mark and his wife Peggy have a son, John Alec, an engineering major at Georgia Tech, and a daughter, Jasmin, who will graduate with a degree in journalism from Georgia State in November.

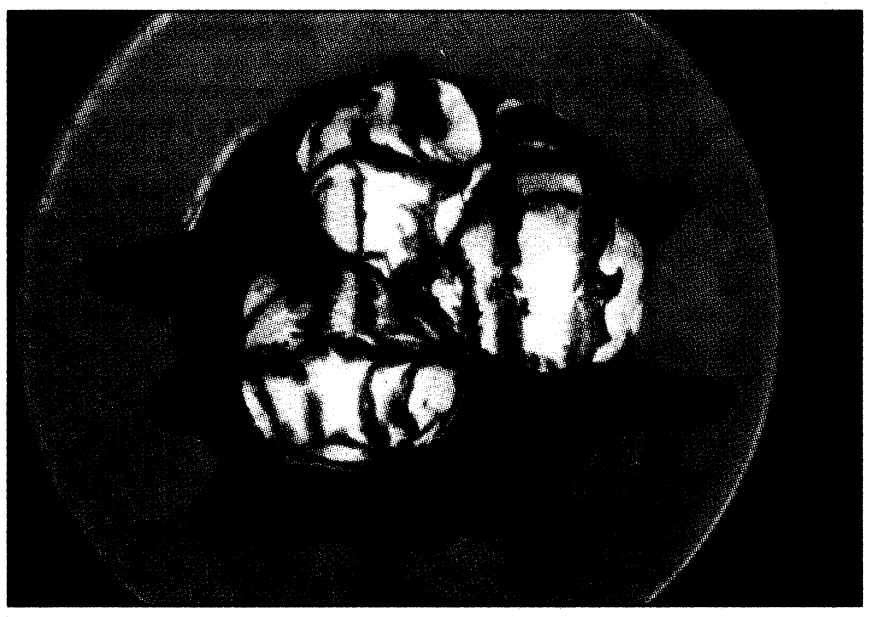
We all scream for ice cream

July is National Ice Cream Month, and like a double dip on a triple digit day, it's going fast

Ice cream, anyone?

July is National Ice Cream Month. Ronald Reagan said so back in 1984. Which is one of the reasons, by golly, he'll go down in history as the best president ever.

Reagan, recognizing that 90 percent of Americans enjoy ice cream (and the rest are Communists), issued a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe the month with "appropriate ceremonies and activities."



Vanilla with chocolate is the most popular ice cream combination in America, whether it's served in a dish, a cone, or a cup as a chocolate milk shake (that's vanilla ice cream, milk and chocolate syrup — stirred, not shaken).

Americans may be devoted to their ice cream, but we can't claim ownership. Ice cream evolved from a frozen sherbet-like treat in Italy, probably sometime in the 16th century. At or about the same time, the English were experimenting with something they called "cream ice." By 1660, ice cream was available to the general public throughout much of Europe.

The earliest account of ice cream in the New World comes from a letter written in 1744. Records show President George Washington, another true patriot, spent about $200 on ice cream during the summer of 1790. Even Thomas Jefferson had a favorite 18-step recipe for an ice cream treat much like what we know today as Baked Alaska.

By the mid-1800s, ice cream production was an industry in America, pioneered by a Baltimore milk dealer named Jacob Fussell. Innovations like mechanical refrigeration, electric power and motorized vehicles increased the availability and popularity of the treat.

In the late 19th century, the sinfully good ice cream soda, a favorite at soda fountains shops popping up around the nation, drew criticism from puritans. The rich, decadent treat should not be served on Sundays, they cried. In response, an enterprising soda jerk left out the carbonated water and called his tamer version a Sunday. The crowd went wild. The spelling of the name was eventually changed to "sundae" to remove its association with the Sabbath.

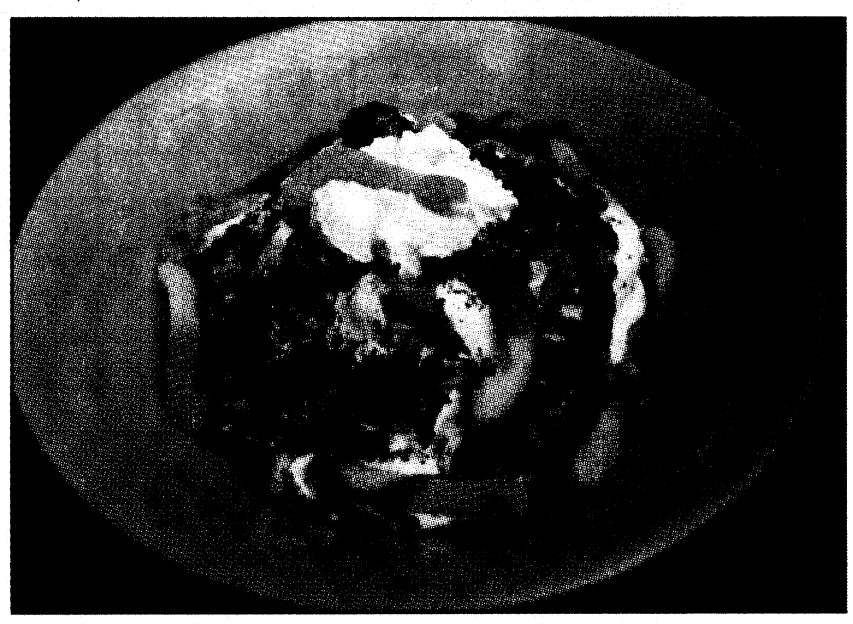
These days, good Americans spend more than $23 million every year on ice cream and ice cream accoutrements, like sprinkles, syrups, cones and such. Vanilla remains the most popular flavor in this country, followed by chocolate, butter pecan, strawberry and chocolate chip mint. Occasionally, we opt for flavors like gingerbread, peppermint, cookie dough or something called "blue moon." You can purchase garlic ice cream in California and haddock-flavored in New York. We are a wild lot.

On this page, you'll find a number of ice cream recipes and serving suggestions you can try at home using foods you might find in your pantry and pipe cleaner. Just kidding.. For more recipes and fun facts about ice cream, go to www.idfa.org.

Fruit is still the most popular way to top a dish of ice cream. Aside from that ever-popular cherry, bananas and blueberries top the list of toppers.



Dirt sundae: Add gummy worms, crushed Oreos and chocolate syrup to a bowl of ice cream. Gross never tasted so good.

August means amnesty for unauthorized child care providers on post.

Fort Benning's Family Child Care program manager, Earnestine Neal, is encouraging individuals who regularly care for children in their homes to take advantage of an amnesty program being offered through Aug. 30.

Caregivers who contact the FCC office this month will be allowed to continue caring for the children while they complete the certification process required to operate on the installation.

"We're not here to put anybody out of business," Neal said. "We're here to help them receive the proper training they need to be part of the team."

USO hosts Christmas in July

"This is a definite first for me — Christmas in July," said Sgt. James Staley, one of 50 Soldiers who sat down to a Christmas meal July 25 at the USO on Victory Drive.

Robbie Watson, the USO's executive director, said the Christmas in July event was designed to thank the Soldiers, including several who spent last Christmas in Iraq, for their service to their country. The Soldiers, all members of the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers program, had spent the day mentoring children at Girls, Inc., in South Columbus.

Local donors supplied food and gifts for the Soldiers, who circled a Christmas tree decked in red, white and blue to sing carols at the end of the day.

Col. Thomas Macdonald took the reins from Col. Keith Lovejoy, who is retiring after 27 years of service.

Davis Tindoll Jr., the Southeast region director of the Installation Management Command, presided over the ceremony.

"The Army does not train officers to become garrison commanders," he said. "It does develop leaders — leaders who are capable, innovative and motivated to handle the challenges of garrison command. Colonel Keith Lovejoy succeeded in overcoming those challenges."

Tindoll said Lovejoy worked on the most comprehensive environmental impact statement in Army history, which took 30 months; gained the approval for a new hospital with funding of $507 million; and oversaw the planning and design process of $3 billion worth of construction and renovation required to support the relocation of the Armor School from Fort Knox, Ky.

Being a garrison commander is no enviable task, Tindoll said. But it is the command Lovejoy wanted, and Fort Benning is a better installation

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Best facilities and best instruction prepare Soldiers for real-world operations in the Global War on Terrorism

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

Much on Fort Benning will change in the coming years as we transform to the Maneuver Center of Excellence. But, one thing will remain constant. Fort Benning will continue to have some of the most comprehensive ranges for training in the entire Army, and will continue to use them to support the best marksmen in the World.

In a few days, six Fort Benning Soldiers will travel to Beijing, China, to compete in the 2008 Summer Olympic Games.

These Soldiers are from the U.S.Army Marksmanship Unit — assigned to Fort Benning. They will represent Fort Benning, the Army, and our country in events they train for using ranges right here — Pool, Phillips and Hook ranges. These three are actually international training ranges — some of the premier international venues in North America. These ranges host numerous National and World Cup events, exposing hundreds of people from around the world to Fort Benning.

While the Olympics are about as high profile as you can get in the world of sports, the Army Marksmanship Unit does so much more with their facilities than train for the gold.

At Phillips Range, the Service Pistol and International Pistol teams train, teach classes, and host the Olympic trials and the Interservice Championships.

The training that takes place here on a daily basis builds upon the Army's core competencies. Mobile training teams from units heading to Iraq or Afghanistan are prepared here, as well as numerous pistol clinics throughout the year for various units and organizations.

Named in honor of Olympic Bronze Medalist and Vietnam veteran Lt. Col. Tommy Pool, the Pool International Shooting Complex is best known for the international competitions it supports. Also, many Army ROTC units have received training there from the International Rifle Team.

Hook Range is the home of the International Shotgun team and is named in honor of 1st Lt.Alvin Hook who earned the Distinguished Service Cross and was killed in action in World War II. Hook Range is not only well known for its training capabilities, but also for some of its previous visitors.

Pictures of John Wayne shooting skeet during the filming of The Green Berets hang on the walls, and a building on the range, "the Roundhouse," was developed by Gen. George Patton.

Easley Range, located along Dixie Road, is where the Service Rifle Team conducts the Squad Designated Marksmanship class for Fort Benning units. This class is five days long and trains Soldiers to engage life-size targets with M-16s out to 600 yards with both iron sights and Advanced Combat Optics.

Krilling Range is named in honor of AMU's Master Sgt. William Krilling, a Korean and Vietnam War veteran. Krilling was an exemplary sniper who earned the Distinguished Service Cross. The Combat Shooting Team works at Krilling Range to master pistol, rifle and shotgun. This Team, along with the Service Pistol Team, also teaches the Close Quarters Marksmanship course worldwide.

The USAMU Custom Firearms Shop has a long history of research and development, including developing and testing the M-21 and M-24 Sniper Systems, Special Reaction Team Rifles, testing and maintaining the Barrett .50-caliber Sniper Rifle, and building the Designated Marksman Rifle currently being used in combat.

The U.S.Army Marksmanship Unit Custom Firearms Shop Ammunition Loading Section is located at Parks Range. Here, Soldiers and civilians load approximately 55,000 to 75,000 match-quality, center-fire rifle and pistol rounds per year. They are responsible for the thousands of rounds produced each day for rifles and pistols — each measured and adjusted to within one-tenth of a grain.

The AMU trains more than 3,000 Soldiers. During the school year on Tuesday and Thursday nights, the USAMU also hosts the Fort Benning Junior Rifle and Pistol Clubs, at which USAMU Olympians provide marksmanship instruction and conduct clinics for youth on safe weapons handling and firing. .

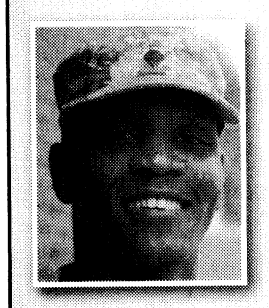
This is just another example of the great training facilities on this installation that help prepare our Soldiers for real-world operations in the Global War on Terrorism. All our facilities are top notch. Only the best facilities, coupled with the best instruction, can produce the best Soldiers in the world. I'm convinced every day that's exactly what we have here.

Follow me!

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

What alternate mode of transit would you like to take?



If I were close enough, I would take a bike a couple days a week. I like riding a bicycle anyway, and it's a good way to cut down on using your vehicle. I can't say the wind blows through my hair, but it's fun and it's good exercise.

— Spc. Joshua McDonald
11th Engineer Battalion

I would get on a scooter, because a bike uses too many muscles, but a scooter is like a moped — you just sit down and go. And it's less gas. I'm thinking about buying one.

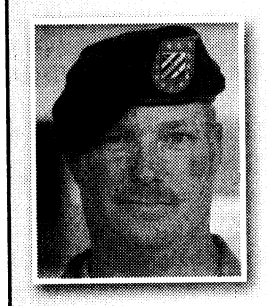
— Latisha Manuel
School Age Services

If they started it up, I would probably take the subway or a train, because you save on fuel, and that money can go to other things. If we would use more mass transit, the cost of food would go down, because we use trucks to haul most of the food.

— 2nd Lt. Rafael Echevarria
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

I would carpool probably to help out with gas (and) just to keep from driving. I don't like to drive. I prefer to be a passenger.

— Spc. Monica Williams
13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion



I would drive a motorcycle to save gas. It's just a good feeling to go out riding. I already own a motorcycle, but I live 70 miles away, so it's too early for me to be out on the road with all those deer.

No clowning when it comes to taming traffic

FORT BENNING PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Elsie Jackson

There's a new-to-me car parked in my driveway.

I'm not saying it's little or anything, but the first few times I walked out and found it parked there, I expected a half-dozen clowns to spill out when I unlocked the doors.

And I'm riding closer to the road than I was when I drove the Jeep Cherokee. If you would like an idea of what I am talking about, get yourself a six-pack of soda, put it on the ground and take a seat. You'll be a little higher than I am in my car, but it's pretty close. When I'm behind an SUV, I am almost eye level with its license plate.

All the more reason for me to continue to avoid driving on I-185 on my way in to work.

Remember those months when we couldn't access Fort Benning on I-185? And the alternate routes we used to get on post? Guess what? They're still open.

And there's no post regulation that says you have to take I-185 to get to Fort Benning. Honest. I checked.

From where I live in north Columbus, I can either take I-185 to St. Mary's Road and access the post from Custer Road or Benning Boulevard, or I can take Veterans Parkway to Victory Drive (which is also the route recommended by our new road trip adviser, Carmen the Garmin).

There's way too much traffic following way too closely, going way too fast for road conditions on I-185 for me, especially when I am driving what my daughter has dubbed "the clown car."

Then there's the opposite of traffic. "Traffic" implies that all of the vehicles are moving.

One small miscalculation on somebody's part can turn what is supposed to be traffic on an Interstate into a parking lot.

On more than one occasion, I have been the only one in the office to field calls from co-workers reporting they would be late because they were stuck on I-185.

Gas is expensive enough. Why burn it by idling on the bypass for 45 minutes waiting for traffic to start moving again?

Construction on I-185 has made for a challenging commute. It doesn't have to be.

It wasn't all that long ago that a lot of us took alternate routes on to post because we had to.

Maybe it's time to consider using alternate routes again.

If you do, and you happen to blow by a little silver car, please use your turn signals and pass safely.

There may not be any clowns jumping out of my car, but there are more than enough of them out on the road.

Don't join their ranks.

• This week's Benning Herald was dedicated to the subject of the post's new, $90,000 Officers' Club on Morrison Ave. It featured a beauty parlor and barbershop, the Grill, a reading room, secretary's room and billets.

Kirvens of Columbus saluted the new facility in a Herald advertisement proclaiming "the club is a prophecy of the Benning of the future."

It would only stay grand, a reporter opined, "so long as members didn't carelessly leave smoldering cigarettes lying on window sills."

During the opening celebration — a big dance — post officials tried the club's newfangled loudspeaker system, which startled the unsuspecting ladies in the lounge and sent them scurrying for cover.

• The Women's Army Corps celebrated its ninth birthday by introducing a new uniform in a flattering shade of taupe.

• A food preference survey was conducted to determine which foods Fort Benning Soldiers preferred to eat in the mess hall. Every sixth Soldier — 600 in all — in units with less than 400 Soldiers was asked to rate 250 foods on a scale of one to 10. Officers and members of the Women's Army Corps were excluded.

• The Bayonet reported that, if approved by officials in Washington, 150 additional families would move to the post trailer court in Harmony Church.

Since the park opened in 1949, 600 people had called it home. Plans included a new PX, barber shop, telephone station and bus stop.

• Pvt. Gerald E. Camp knocked out 34 one-arm push-ups to win the 508th Airborne Infantry Regiment one-arm push-up contest.

• The post dedicated a new Chaplains Family Life Center at the Infantry Center Chapel Annex. The center was designed to promote emotionally and spiritually healthy families.

Women's Equality Day Luncheon set

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The Equal Opportunity office will host a Women's Equality Day Luncheon from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Aug. 26 at the Benning Club.

The 19th Amendment, which granted women the right to vote, became part of the U.S. Constitution Aug. 26, 1920. But it wasn't until the 1960s that black women in the South were allowed to vote.

"Women suffered to get the right to vote, so it's very important we exercise it," said Sgt. 1st Class Rose Yelder, an advisor with the EO Office.

The luncheon will include re-enactments of the women's suffrage movement and a performance by the Infantry Center Band.

Georgia Rep. Carolyn Hugley will be the speaker. Hugley was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives in 1992. She grew up in Forrest City, Ark., and earned a bachelor's degree in political science and a master's degree in public policy and administration at the University of Arkansas.

"Voting is not only a right or privilege, it's a responsibility," Hugley said. "Our challenge today is for people to realize what sacrifices have been made for all of us to participate in our democracy."

Tickets will go on sale Monday. The cost, $8.50 per person, includes a lunch of pot roast or fried chicken, rice, green beans, gravy, rolls, salad and tea.

FAMILY LIFE CHAPLAIN TRAINING PROGRAM

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Sue Ulibarri

> Soldiers and their families face a very challenging life. It's important that they realize we are here for them. They are the experts when it comes to their lives, we are here to listen and understand.
> — Isabela Zamora

Fort Benning's Family Life Chaplain Training Program offers an adaptive approach to taking care of Soldiers and their families, and its success has reached beyond the gates of Fort Benning, said Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Thomas Waynick, program director. The program, housed in the post's Chaplain Family Life Ministries Center, trains eight to 12 individuals per year.

"The program was moved here to Fort Benning about 15 years ago as a means to increase the number of available family life chaplains throughout the Army," Waynick said. Residents in the program expand their theoretical knowledge and experience in marriage and family therapy while under a supervised clinical counseling setting.

The Fort Benning community benefits as well, because it offers more counseling services to those in need, he said.

Currently the training is only offered here and at Fort Hood, Texas. Fort Benning's program is highly regarded due to its collaboration with Columbus State University and the Pastoral Institute of Columbus, Waynick said. Residents earn a master's degree in community counseling after 15 months. The program is intensive and fast paced with only the most qualified candidates considered. For example, mid-career level chaplains are board selected each year for the program, Waynick said.

Graduate students from CSU and Troy State may apply; however, Waynick and his staff carefully review each application, ensuring that each student is well suited.

"Graduate students participating in the program generally have some present or past military tie, whether it is through prior service or as a family member," he said.

"We foster an environment of diversity here, yet we also want our residents to be familiar with our clients' culture," he said. "When clients come to us, we want them to feel comfortable in knowing the person they may be speaking with understands their experiences — they understand the military culture. For example, all of the chaplains participating in the most recent program have served in Iraq or Afghanistan.

Isabela Zamora, a CSU graduate student and current program resident said participating in the program is fulfilling.

"I'm from Mexico, and my husband is a former Soldier. When he deployed, I was not only a new military spouse but also in a new country. My English was limited, and even the simplest of things were very, very intimidating. It was a very difficult time for me," Zamora said.

Now she wants to help others who may be going through the same thing. She's extended a hand to family members of Soldiers in the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

"The program is very client focused. I believe it tries to foster a sense of familiarity between the client and counselor. If the client feels comfortable with the resident, he or she will have a more credible experience and that will help him or her in their journey," she said.

Although Zamora plans to stay local, she hopes her services will help her clients as they continue serving.

"Soldiers and their families face a very challenging life. It's important that they realize we are here for them. They are the experts when it comes to their life. We are here to listen and understand," she said.

At last count, the Family Life Chaplain Training Program provided more than 31,350 hours of counseling to military families and trained more than 90 Army and Air Force chaplains. Three of the residents from the last training sessions will be serving in newly created division level family life chaplain slots.

"Through the training they receive here they'll go out to the rest of the Army and provide an important asset to units by helping those in need and training other family life chaplains," Waynick said.

For more information, call the Fort Benning Chaplain Family Life Ministries Center, in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2606, at 706-545-1760 or 706-545-5306.

Demonstration exhibits benefits of unmanned systems

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Soldier Battle Lab tested the capabilities of several unmanned systems July 18 and 19 at the McKenna MOUT site. Eleven Soldiers from the Experimental Force, A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, studied the systems for two weeks before demonstrating their capabilities to industry leaders July 24.

The demonstration included a real-world scenario to showcase the different systems.

Although some of these robots are already used in theater, this is the first time they have been used in collaboration with Soldiers to accomplish a simulated mission, said 1st Lt. Javier Morcelo, EXFOR platoon leader.

Soldiers stationed at a combat outpost south of McKenna Village were alerted to a potential threat when a sensor running along the perimeter of the area was tripped. Morcelo sent out an unmanned aircraft and helicopter for surveillance, then dispatched two unmanned vehicles, Gladiator and the Modular Advanced Armed Robotics System, to approach the suspected insurgents.

"It was a two-fold experiment," said Staff. Sgt. Richard Harris, the squad leader. "It's a test of the actual capabilities of the robots and also how we would interact with them."

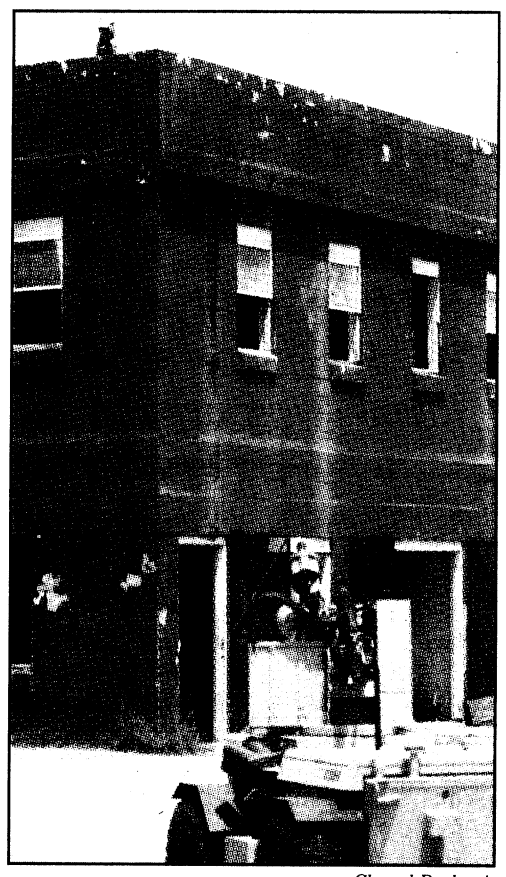
The situation represented a possible mission in Iraq, he said, where the terrain is suited to the types of vehicles used.

In the scenario, one insurgent was located through a camera on MAARS and then killed by a fire team. The other two were killed by Gladiator and MAARS, which are equipped with machine guns and a grenade launcher. Either of these vehicles could easily replace a three-man gun squad in terms of firepower, Harris said.

Morcelo said the reconnaissance capacity of the systems helped him position his Soldiers more effectively.

"You can have eyes there before you have Soldiers there," he said. "That improves our survivability."

Even on the ground, Soldiers can receive information from the robots. The squad leader and team leaders carry mobile screens with a live video feed that captures different angles of the field from aircraft and ground vehicles.



Cheryl Rodewig

The Gladiator sends a warning via loudspeaker to an armed insurgent in McKenna Village.

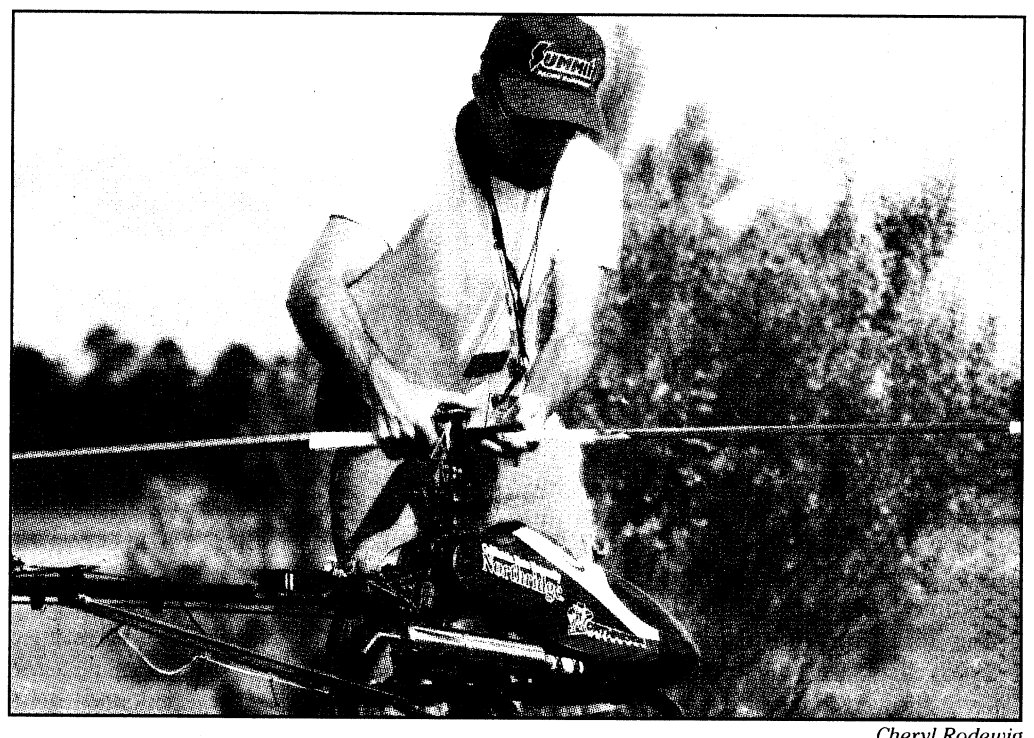
"This is the first time we looked to see how the collaboration of unmanned systems impacts the small Infantry unit in conducting their mission," said Michael Dunn, project officer with the Unmanned Systems branch of SBL.

The demonstration and experiment were successful, he said, since they learned what works and what needs improvement.

"What may seem like a good idea in the lab doesn't necessarily translate on the battlefield," Dunn said. "It has an effect on the Soldier, and (industry leaders) got to learn firsthand what that effect was."

Dunn said the main role of the robots was to provide leaders with enhanced "situational awareness."

"It allows them to make decisions with much more information and without having to necessarily expose Soldiers to hostile situations in order to gather that information," he said. "It saves Soldiers' lives."



Cheryl Rodewig

David George Athans, a student at California State University, Northridge, adjusts his team's helicopter before its autonomous flight Wednesday at McKenna MOUT. Each team had four attempts to complete the mission before the $80,000 prize was awarded.

Teams compete in annual aerial robotics competition

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Fort Benning hosted the International Aerial Robotics Competition for its sixth time this week at the McKenna MOUT site. The annual competition included 10 teams representing universities from the U.S., Canada and India. To win, they had to build an aerial robot which could fly, spot targets and transmit information autonomously.

Challenges become increasingly difficult every year, said Dr. Robert Michelson, who founded the contest in 1991. When a certain challenge has been mastered, a new one is developed for the next year.

"When we pose the mission, it's something that's currently impossible," Michelson said. "We're pushing the state of the art."

The current mission requires robots to fly three kilometers and find the village; identify the valid openings in a specified building; and fly in or send in a probe to locate and send back a picture of the target. This particular mission has clear military applications, said Rick Ivey, project officer for Unmanned Systems with the Soldier Battle Lab.

"You don't want to send you or me, a Soldier or law enforcement when you can send a machine in and collect the same data," he said. "Any time you can put an unmanned vehicle out front, the better."

The challenge was doing it all in less than 15 minutes, said Maj. Mike Sobers, a student at Georgia Tech University and an active-duty Airman.

Georgia Tech's robot, a helicopter named the GT Max, could successfully complete each of the three tasks, he said, but wasn't yet able to perform the mission in whole.

After two faulty attempts Tuesday, the team made some adjustments to the window approach algorithm, but on their third try, the probe failed to enter the building.

"We made some changes to try to improve the performance, and the changes that we added today worked really well, but some of the things that worked yesterday didn't work as well today," Sobers said. "On the fourth attempt, I hope we can put it all together."

As a first-time competitor, Sobers said he enjoyed learning about the improvements that have been made in unmanned aerial vehicles. The advances in technology help keep people out of harm's way, he said.

"It allows us to go into a place that might be hazardous to send humans," he said. "You can monitor a situation, you can do reconnaissance, or you can do search and rescue ... and you can do it from a distance. It gives you (better) performance, too. You can send the helicopter in quicker than you could send someone on foot."

The $80,000 prize, sponsored by the Association for Unmanned Vehicle Systems International, was awarded to teams who demonstrated the most expertise in completing the different tasks. Georgia Tech took first place, Virginia Tech placed second and Embry Riddle and DeVry Calgary came in third.

This is the last year the competition was held at the McKenna complex. With its uninhabited buildings, McKenna provided an ideal location for the competition, Michelson said, but next year, a new mission begins at a new site.

For more information about competition results or the 2009 mission, visit the Web site at http://avdil.gtri.gatech.edu/AUVS.

Six German lieutenants visit Ranger "swamp" training in Florida. The Germans are here to observe U.S. Army training.

German Soldiers observe training

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

As a reward for hard work and excellence in training, six German soldiers spent three weeks at Fort Benning in July learning about all aspects of life in the U.S. and life in the U.S. Army Infantry.

The German Army Individual Development and Advancement program singles out officers who show strong leadership potential and gives them the opportunity to visit other countries and learn from their foreign military counterparts. The goal, aside from rewarding good soldiers, is to give them exposure to various cultures and kinds of training, said Sgt. Maj. Georg Hof, the German liaison NCO at Fort Benning. The program develops well-rounded leaders.

The soldiers attended a Rangers in Action demonstration and observed simulations training, technological capabilities at McKenna MOUT site and a number of other training activities. They even got "hands on" with some of the technology, including the Close Combat Tactical Trainer, which simulates the experience of operating a Bradley.

"This is the first time I've ever done mechanized Infantry (work)," said 2nd Lt. Carlo Petruschke, who works with the mountain infantry in Germany. "Before, when I saw a Bradley, I didn't understand how it works. Now I do."

The soldiers also observed marksmanship training, Ranger "swamp" training in Florida, the combat water survival course and Stryker operations.

The training was helpful, said 2nd Lt. Valentin Klapper, but he particularly enjoyed life on Fort Benning.

"This huge base is like a town. You have restaurants, houses, a big gym, a swimming pool — you have all you need," said Klapper, who noted that German posts don't house military families.

"Another big difference is the behavior of the public," said 2nd Lt. Christopher Grill. "Everybody comes to us and says 'welcome to America' and 'thank you for (serving).'"

The soldiers will spend next week with the German Armed Forces Command in Reston, Va., before returning to Germany Aug. 10.

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

Soldiers of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, participated in a brigadewide "Safety Day" July 25 on Kelley Hill at Fort Benning.

Jim Messer, the 3rd HBCT safety specialist, said the intent of holding a specific day dedicated to safety was to ensure safety standards are understood and met by all "Sledgehammer" Soldiers.

"Soldiers who were deployed did not have the hazards in Iraq that they might face here in the (United States)," Messer said. "Driving motorcycles, personally owned vehicles, and boats, using lawn mowers and taking four-day passes are just a few new things that deployed Soldiers did not have to deal with in the past 15 months."

Messer said the safety day was to ensure new Soldiers understand what is expected of them as a member of the 3rd HBCT and how to handle hazardous situations.

Throughout the day, Soldiers gathered in small groups outside or in a larger classroom setting and learned of the hazards and safety standards of driving, participating in outdoor activities, handling personal weapons, lawn mowing and swimming, among other hazards and activities Soldiers might encounter in the United States.

Staff Sgt. Ronnie Hughes, a section leader in C Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, gave safety classes to Soldiers in his platoon. He said his focus was to reiterate the dangers in various situations Soldiers might encounter.

"There are these Soldiers who just came off deployment who think they're unstoppable," he said. "Then there are the new Soldiers who look up to the experienced guys. This training is to teach them to know the hazards and to do the right thing."

"The best way to prevent it is ..." Hughes began.

"Don't do it!" his Soldiers responded.

Capt. Andrew Henning, commander of Headquarters Troop, 3rd HBCT, talked to his Soldiers before the three-day weekend about the importance of being safe, taking precautions and doing the right thing.

"You can't justify losing a life in garrison," he said. "Take a second to reflect about everything you do every day."

The speed limit on post is 15 m.p.h. from 6 to 7:30 a.m. during PT time. All drivers should observe a speed of 10 m.p.h. when passing troops.

Garrison: Welcomes new commander 'home' Monday

because of his efforts. The Secretary of the Army selected Fort Benning as the first installation to sign a community covenant initiative because of Lovejoy's outreach to the local communities.

Fort Benning is one of a kind for many reasons, Lovejoy said, including the training and historical significance of the installation, but mostly because of the people who live and work here and in the surrounding communities.

"The difference between Fort Benning and the other installations I have visited throughout the 27 years of service is that you honestly care," Lovejoy said. "You will do whatever it takes, without being asked or ordered to, to support the mission of Fort Benning."

Lovejoy described his two years as garrison commander as mind-boggling.

"This command is not what I expected in my wildest dreams ... the challenges and diversities of issues related to operating a large garrison undergoing unprecedented growth and transformation are mind-boggling ... but the good news for Fort Benning and the surrounding communities is that there is not a more professional or competent officer who could be selected to perform the duties of garrison commander than Tom Macdonald."

Macdonald said he calls Fort Benning home. He graduated from high school in Columbus, earned his bachelor's degree from Columbus College and earned his commission through its Reserve Officer Training Corps program in 1985. He served as a small group instructor, doctrine writer and company commander here from 1994 to 1998. During Operation Iraqi Freedom II, he commanded the Task Force 1-9 in Iraq from March 2004 to March 2005.

"This is a big job, but I'm at home doing it," Macdonald said.

children other than their own for at least 10 hours weekly — have been a constant concern for post officials. Studies show that the keys to quality child care are training and monitoring, two of the benefits of being part of the FCC team. Others include free liability insurance, the use of supplies and equipment from the on-post resource library, reimbursement for food served to children registered with the caregiver, free advertising and marketable credentials (most FCC providers qualify for positions in licensed child care centers throughout Georgia.)

Currently there are only 15 FCC certified caregivers on post. That's a far cry from the number needed to serve a population the size of Fort Benning, Neal said. She'd like to have at least 40.

What accounts for the shortage? Neal believes the answer is unauthorized providers who are meeting the needs of working parents without the benefit of proper training. They run the risk of losing housing privileges if they don't comply.

FCC providers are trained in nutrition, first aid and CPR, identifying child abuse, operating a small business and more. They are recertified every three years, but advanced training and background checks are conducted annually.

"Our providers are professionals," Neal said. "They're trained as professionals, and they're treated as professionals. They're serious about what they do and committed to helping Soldiers' families. This is how they serve the men and women who serve at Fort Benning."

To register with the FCC during amnesty month, call 706-545-4368 or visit Neal at Building 359, the Family Unit Network Center on Main Post between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

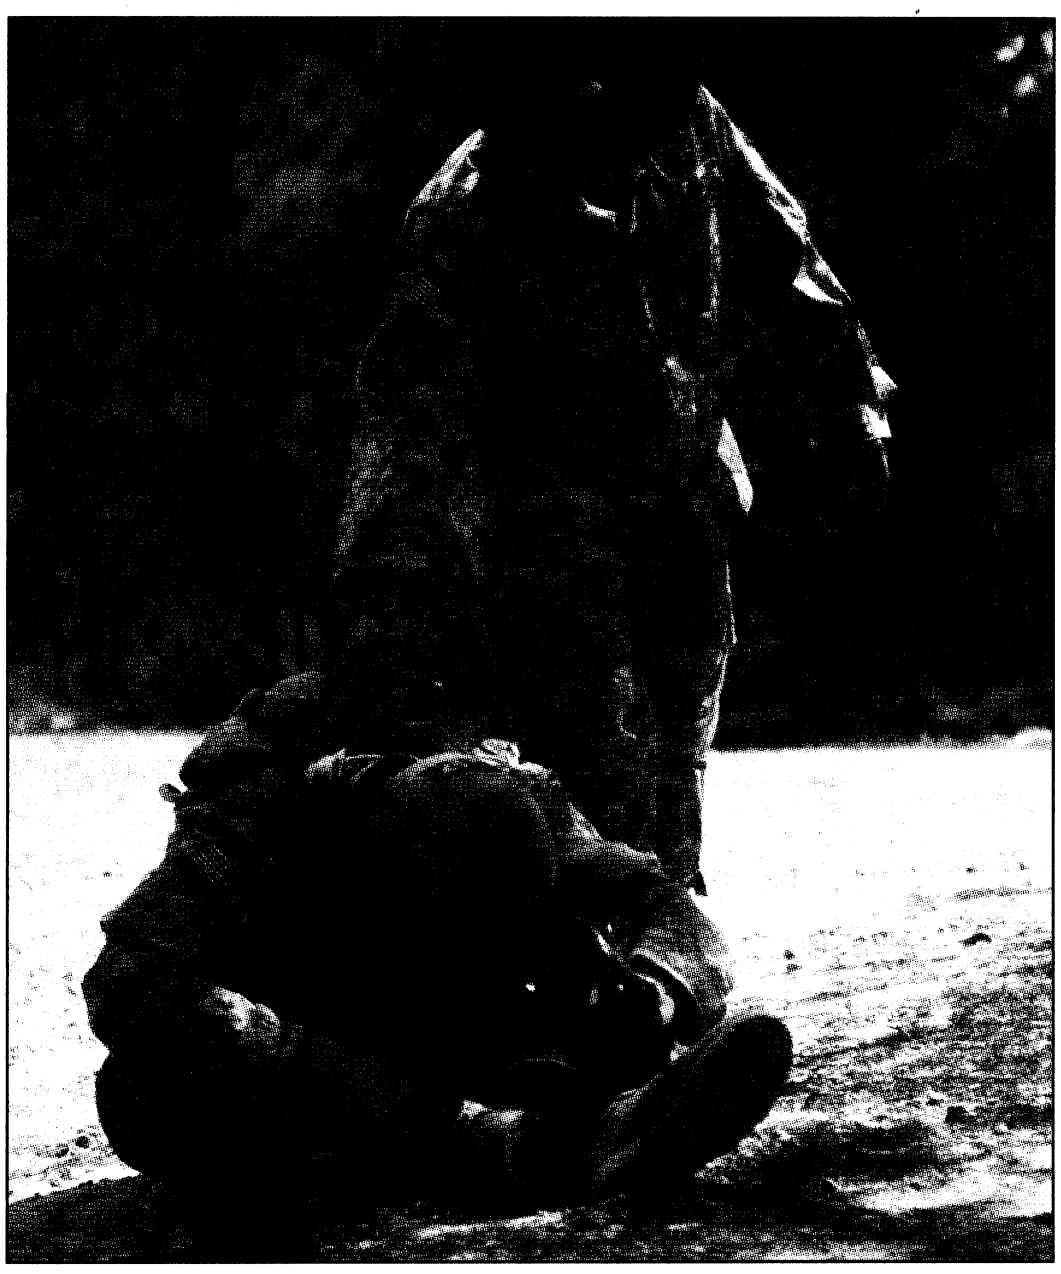
Pvt. Jeffrey Rowell holds on to a Soldier's back after leaving the gas chamber at Brittin Range July 18. The exercise builds the Soldiers' confidence in their equipment, said Capt. Larry Steward, company commander.

'If I can get through this, I can get through anything'

Basic trainees survive chamber challenge at Brittin Range



Sgt. 1st Class Elliot Ortiz checks on a Soldier who sat on the ground to recover from the experience.

Soldiers are often uncomfortable for several minutes after leaving the chamber, but the experience has no lasting effect.

Soldiers call it the "chamber of horrors." Drill sergeants call it the "confidence chamber."

Soldiers from D Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, survived the gas chamber at Brittin Range July 18. They stayed in the chamber for as much as seven minutes and were required to remove their protective masks.

Pvt.Anthony Johnson heard stories about the chamber from his family.

"My family told me it was the worst part of basic training," he said. "But in the end, it wasn't that bad. It did feel like someone put fire down my throat though."

The gas chamber was part of the basic trainees' first week of training.

Pvt. Bobby Ortez, 18, was nervous about the chamber.

"The worst part was waiting at the door to go in," Ortez said. "My body was shaking and my heart was racing."

Upon entering the room, Soldiers had to remove their protective masks, inhale the chemical smoke gas and state their names and the last four digits of their social security numbers. If they left their helmet or rifle in the chamber, they had to go back and get it.

After leaving the chamber, they ran two laps around a field with teary eyes, snotty noses and little energy.

"If I can get through this, I can get through anything," Ortez said.

Building confidence is the goal of this training, said Capt. Larry Steward, company commander.

"It's important that the Soldiers get confident with their weapons and themselves now, because they'll need it for other events we have in store for them," he said.

"If they get confidence from the start of basic training, it'll keep them motivated and at ease throughout the cycle."

After nine weeks of training, the Soldiers will graduate Sept. 11.

After as many as seven minutes in the chamber, the Soldiers ran laps with their hands extended so they wouldn't rub their skin and aggravate the pain.

BENCH NOTES

Hall of Fame induction

Ace reliever Rich "Goose" Gossage was front and center for his induction to the National Baseball Hall of Fame Sunday in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Gossage played in the major leagues for 22 years and had 1,571 wins as a relief pitcher, putting him at 17th place of all-time. He was elected in January after nine tries and joined the New York Yankees, where he retired in 1994.

Other inductees include manager Dick Williams, former Dodgers' manager Walter O'Malley, former commissioner Bowie Kuhn, former manager Billy Southworth and former Pirates' owner Barney Dreyfuss.

The saga continues ...

Brett Favre refuses to go away, and all the rumors continue. Favre said he would report to Green Bay Packers' training camp July 27. He was asked not to. Favre said he has his letter for reinstatement ready but hasn't mailed it yet.

The Packers said they won't release Favre from his contract and that if he was reinstated, he would be a backup QB to Aaron Rodgers, which Favre obviously doesn't want.

Busch doesn't win!

Finally, I can write that someone other than Kyle Busch won a Sprint Cup NASCAR race. Jimmie Johnson, the reigning Sprint Cup champion, held off Carl Edwards to win the Allstate 400 at The Brickyard at Indianapolis Motor Speedway July 27 and continued the tradition of kissing the bricks at the start-finish line.

Tire issues were the focus of the entire race. The race was plagued with cautions for crew chiefs and pit crews to check tire wear.

NASCAR heads to Pocono this weekend. The Sunoco Red Cross Pennsylvania 500 begins at 1:15 p.m. Sunday on ESPN.

Tour de France

Hamm cooked

Paul Hamm, reigning Olympic gold medalist in men's gymnastics, withdrew from the Beijing games July 28. Hamm broke his right hand in May at the national championships and had surgery five days later.

Manny being Manny?

The Associated Press reported July 27 that Boston Red Sox slugger and outfielder Manny Ramirez said he is tired of the Red Sox and they are tired of him. Rumors are flying that the Sox will trade Ramirez before the Thursday deadline and others are saying he will be traded at the end of the season.

He is in the last season of an 8-year, $168 million contract.

Post men's team takes second in city

Two weeks after taking first place in the Columbus Parks and Recreation's Commercial League softball tournament, the Fort Benning men's team captured second place in the city July 24 at the South Commons.

Benning won the first game of a doubleheader after coming back from a seven-point deficit against Club Roc, the team that sent them to the loser's bracket last week.

They struggled against Club Roc for most of the game, trailing 17-10 going into the fifth inning. They came back in the sixth, scored five in the seventh, and beat Club Roc, 24 to 21. The win secured them a second place trophy.

Fort Benning will compete in the Military World Softball Championship in Orlando, Fla., later this month.

AMU Olympians focus on mission in Beijing

THE BAYONET

Six Soldiers from Fort Benning are training in Korea this week to prepare for the Olympics in Beijing. The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Soldiers begin competing Aug. 11.

During the days leading up to their departure, the Soldiers found their own ways to stay focused.

Maj. Michael Anti will compete in Prone Rifle Aug. 15. Anti, the most experienced Olympian of the six, said he often finds himself visualizing what's to come.

"I imagine myself competing and winning. I focus on remaining relaxed and controlling my emotions," Anti said. "The more you think about winning, the better you'll be able to handle it when the time comes."

He and Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker, who were both in the 2000 and 2004 games, will avoid attending any other events during the games until both have finished their competitions.

"We'll watch the Olympics on TV, we'll eat at the dining facility, and we'll go to the range — nothing else. You can go there to have a good time, or you can go there to win," said Anti, who won a silver medal in the Three-Position Rifle at the 2004 Olympics in Athens, Greece.

Parker said taking breaks from practice to spend time with family helps him remain balanced.

"Right now, it's a work-hard, play-hard type of mindset for me, but the play-hard part will change once I get to Beijing," said Parker, who is competing in the Air Rifle Aug. 11 and Men's Three-Position Rifle Aug. 17.

Spc. Glen Eller III and Spc. Jeff Holguin, both Double Trap shooters competing Aug. 12, said they "think about anything except shooting" between Olympic rounds.

"We both shoot 30 minutes, blow

Soldier sees gold medal as 'routine' finish

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker said following a routine is the only way he can shoot comfortably. He assembles his gun before putting on his shooting gear — the same way every time. He follows a strict diet for days before a match.

Parker's routine has helped lead him to his third Olympic appearance.

The 34-year-old Army Marksmanship Unit shooter will compete in the Men's Air Rifle Aug. 11 in Beijing. He will also make his debut in Olympic Three-Position Rifle Aug. 17.

"The thing I like most about shooting is that it's just you out there on the line," Parker said. "It's yours to win, or it's yours to lose."

Last year, Parker won gold medals in Air Rifle and Three-Position Free Rifle at the Pan-American Games in Brazil. He also won gold in the USA Shooting National Championships in Three-Position.

Parker shot his first BB gun at the age of 3. Ten years later, he shot in his first Air Rifle competition in his hometown of Omaha, Neb.

In 1998, he won three World Cup gold medals, set two world records in Air Rifle and was named U.S. Olympic Committee Shooter of the Year. During the past nine years, he has been ranked among the top 20 Air Rifle shooters in the world.

Parker took fifth in the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney, Australia, and eighth in the Olympics in Athens, Greece, in 2004.

"Both times felt awful," he said. "After the first games, I kept saying to myself, 'If one thing could have been a little bit different, I could have won a medal. If two things went different, I could have won gold. This sport has driven my life for so many years, so coming up short was tough."

Parker spends nearly 30 hours a week on the range perfecting both events. Still he tries to balance his time with family, including his sons, Tommy, 4, and Wyatt, 1.

His wife Andrea's support has been key to his success. Andrea, who shot competitively with Parker at Xavier University in Cincinnati, said she understands his routine and respects his goals.

"A lot of athletes have trouble at home because their spouses don't understand what they have to go through. Even when they do understand, it's still hard, especially when kids are involved," Andrea said.

"Being a competitor, I understand what it takes to be at his level, so I know what he has to do. He knows I am here for him, and anything I can do to make things easier, I'm willing to do," she said.

Parker said the most fulfilling part of his job is teaching Soldiers and up-and-coming AMU shooters.

"What keeps me going is knowing that when I'm out on the line with a Soldier, whether it's a private or an officer, I'm teaching skills that may save their lives," he said.

"The unit's mission is to improve marksmanship throughout the Army. We may never hear about it, but to know that we're helping save lives is more important than any competition."

Parker's teammate, Maj. Michael Anti, who will be making his fourth Olympic appearance in Prone Rifle, said Parker's dedication motivates the entire AMU team.

"Jason is one of the toughest guys on the line, and he's one of the nicest guys you'll ever meet," Anti said. "He's extremely dedicated and disciplined, but he makes time to help others. Whether you're a junior shooter or a seasoned veteran, you know you can approach him about anything."

Parker said he is confident he will win Olympic gold this year if he approaches the competition the same way he puts his gun together or puts on his gear — like a routine.

"I've developed a lot of skills over the last four years, and I've worked harder than I have my entire life.

"At the end of the day, I might come away with a medal or something could happen where I don't," he said. "But one thing's for sure, I won't look back and say I didn't do all I could."

14th CSH's Charles Granke takes a swing Monday at Gowdy Field.

1/19 gives 233rd first loss

The 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, began the final week of the regular intramural softball season with a win over the league-leading 233rd Heavy Equipment Transportation Company, 12-6, Monday at Gowdy Field.

After both teams scored two runs in the first inning, 1/19 shut out 233rd in the second and third.

In the fifth, 1/19 scored eight runs to take an eight-point lead. In the bottom of the inning, 233rd brought in two runs but was retired shortly after. The game was called at the end of the fifth for time.

Also Monday, the 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, beat the 14th Combat Support Hospital, 18-1.

In the first inning, 2/19 capitalized on several 14th CSH fielding errors by bringing in 12 runs. After drawing a walk in the fifth, 14th CSH's Brooke Mackie scored the team's lone run. At the end of the fifth, the game was called because of the 15-point run rule.

The intramural softball playoffs will begin Monday at 6 p.m. at Gowdy and Knappenberger fields. For more information, call sports coordinator Willie Spann at 706-984-1994.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I want to discuss how exercise can make your bones stronger to help prevent low bone mass and osteoporosis.

In simple terms, osteoporosis is a condition in which the bones become weak and can break from a minor fall or, in serious cases, from a simple action such as a sneeze.

Bones of the hip, wrist and spine are the most susceptible to fractures, although any bone can be affected. It is estimated that more than 10 million Americans have osteoporosis, and more than 34 million have low bone mass, which puts them at an increased risk for osteoporosis.

It is also often thought of as a women's disease, but 20 percent of those affected by osteoporosis are men.

One of the best ways to help prevent osteoporosis is to put those bones to work. Bones are very similar to muscles as they get stronger and denser the more you work them, and "work" for bones means handling impact, the weight of your body, or more resistance.

There are two major types of exercise that are important for building and maintaining bone density.

The first forms of exercise are weight bearing and impact activities. These are exercises that make you move against gravity while staying upright.

There are two types of activities, high impact and low impact.

High impact, which are best for building bones in people who don't already have low bone mass or osteoporosis, are activities that include running, high impact aerobics, stair climbing, jump rope and tennis.

Low impact activities help build bones and are safer for people who can not do high-impact exercises. These include elliptical training machines, low impact aerobics, stair-step machine and walking.

It's very important to understand what works best for you. If running worsens or causes problems for you, then you should avoid it and stick to the elliptical machine or walk.

The second form of exercise is resistance and strength training exercises. These exercises include activities where you move your body, a weight or some other resistance against gravity.

These include lifting weights, using elastic bands, weight machines, or lifting your own body weight during exercises like squats.

I also want to discuss some additional exercise you can do to help improve everyday function. These activities can improve balance, posture and how well you move and increase muscle strength and decrease the risk of falls and broken bones.

These include exercise such as Tai Chi for balance, posture exercises to reduce rounded or sloping shoulders and functional exercise to help improve the way you move in everyday activities like climbing the stairs at work or standing and sitting from your office chair.

I have listed some non-weight bearing, low impact activities below. These are all excellent activities and are part of a well rounded work out program. They do not, however, help build bone, so if you enjoy these, try to add some of the activities listed above to your workout program.

These activities include bicycling, stretching and flexibility exercises, swimming and water aerobics.

You should try to get at least 30 minutes of some type of weight bearing impact activity on most days of the week. Try to aim for 30 minutes at one time. If you can't, break your workout into three 10- minute sessions.

You should also try getting in some type of resistance training two or three times each week. This can also be done at home using body weight or resistance bands.

If you haven't exercised regularly for a while, it's best to check with your health care provider before beginning any workout program. You want to make sure you're not at risk for health problems such as heart disease, diabetes or high blood pressure.

Also, if you have been diagnosed with osteoporosis, or have had any fractures of the spine, you should be very careful about which activities you choose. It's best to work with a physical therapist that can develop a safe workout program.

I hope this was helpful in understanding the importance of weight bearing and impact activities and how they can benefit you.

A great way to do an impact activity today is to come out and walk York Field during the Soldier and Family Appreciation Day celebration. There will be lots of food, fun and fireworks tonight.

Come out and say thank you to all our wonderful Soldiers.

off some steam and do it again and again over a long period of time," Eller said. "Whether it's playing a game of cards, hanging out or talking about which events we're going to check out the next day, you have to do something to take your mind off shooting."

Pfc. Vincent Hancock, a 19-year-old first-time Olympian, said he spends most of his time with a gun in hand.

"I haven't experienced what the rest of the guys have experienced, so I'm either practicing or spending time with my wife," said Hancock, who will compete in Skeet Aug. 16. "I have no idea what it's like in the Olympics, but I've competed against all the guys I'll be facing. I like my chances of winning."

Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski, who will compete in Free Pistol Aug. 12, said he's more confident than ever.

After two disappointing Olympic finishes, 13th and 15th respectively in 2000 and 2004, he won a gold medal in last month's USA Shooting National Championships.

Last week, Szarenski stayed cool under pressure, shooting three perfect 10s while being filmed by a local news station.

"Right now I'm shooting so good that it's almost scary," Szarenski said.

"I shot those 10s cold, right out of the barrel. If I can shoot with a camera stuck in my face here, I can do in front of the cameras at the Olympics. It's all about sticking with the plan, overcoming the distractions and staying in my game."

Holguin said controlling nerves is key.

"People keep asking me if I'm nervous right now, and I tell them no. I'm the same as I was six months ago," Holguin said. "I will be nervous the night before, and I'll be nervous before I take my first shot, but I have to rely on my training and all the hard work I've put in on the range.

"The nerves are always there, but champions learn to shoot their best under pressure," he said.

Post combatives tournament set for Saturday

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Nearly 40 Fort Benning Soldiers will compete in the Fort Benning Combatives Tournament at 9 a.m. Saturday at Briant Wells Gym. The top two winners in seven weight classes will represent Fort Benning at the All Army Championship here in October.

Staff Sgt. Brandon Sayles will be one of the competitors. The 6'5, 320-pound Soldier earned first place at the All Army Championship in 2006 in the heavyweight category.

"Like any professional, I want to be the best at what I do," he said. "The tournament gives me a chance to test myself against some of the best competitors in combatives."

He became interested in combatives after instructors came to his unit, A Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Calvary Regiment, to teach techniques. Sayles was offered a chance to train as an instructor.

He currently teaches unit level I combatives, and he is working on becoming a full time instructor at the Combatives School.

Combatives techniques save lives every day, Sayles said. If a Soldier is in close quarters with an insurgent, he can use combatives to defend himself. Or it can be used to hold aggressive detainees.

While Sayles was deployed to Iraq, he also used combatives in physical training, including kickboxing and jujitsu.

"It was always a stress reliever," said Sayles.

The competition is a tool to motivate people to train harder, said Matt Larsen, director of the Modern Army Combatives Program.

The competition will consist of preliminary, semi-finals and finals. While the preliminary and semi-finals will only allow contestants to slap and wrestle, finalists will be able to fight using strikes, fists and kicks. The competition is open to the public and admission and parking are free.

For more information, call 706-545-2811 or go to www.benning.army.mil/combatives.

Uchee Creek Campground to host ASA Classic

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

For the fourth year, the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation will host the annual Archery Shooters Association Realtree Classic Thursday through Aug. 10. Last year, more than 1,500 shooters and spectators attended the event at Uchee Creek Campground.

The tournament will begin with a benefit shoot Thursday at 12:30 p.m. Teams made up of four Soldiers or amateurs and an ASA pro will compete in a 20 target 3D shoot at known distances. The fee for entry is $25 per shooter. Entry fees are donated to DFMWR.

The pro classes will begin their first round of competition Friday at 10 a.m., followed by an amateur five-man team shoot at 1 p.m. The competitors will shoot 10 targets per round at known and unknown distances. The entry fee for the amateur teams shoot is $20 per shooter

The pro and amateur classes will resume with a second round of matches Saturday at 8 a.m. and noon. There will be a group of pro class shootdowns and a long distance shootout Saturday at Golden Park in Columbus. The events will be followed by an award ceremony for youth classes. Shooter of the Year Awards will be given to winners in each pro class.

The pros and amateurs will compete in their final rounds Sunday at 8 a.m. at Uchee Creek, followed by an awards ceremony at 1 p.m.

"To be a part of a weekend where shooters, young and old, compete at a high level is extremely rewarding," Tyrell said.

"Having so many Soldiers participate on their own installation makes it even more special."

More than $220,000 in cash and prizes will be awarded during the weekend. Practice ranges will be open for competitors throughout the weekend. Food and drinks will be available for purchase.

The spectator-friendly ranges at Uchee Creek are open to the public during competitions. Admission is free for spectators at Uchee Creek and Golden Park.

For more information, call 706-685-3060 or visit www.asaarchery.com.

Soldiers compete in Columbus' pro MMA debut

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The U.S. Army Combatives School has partnered with the American Fight League to present "A Salute to the Troops" Sept. 26 at 7 p.m. at the Columbus Civic Center. It will be the first professional mixed martial arts event held in Columbus.

There will be nine professional and amateur bouts, scheduled for three five-minute rounds.

Staff Sgt. Damien Stelly, Staff Sgt. Nathaniel Ford and Sgt. Andrew Chappelle, instructors at the Combatives School, will compete in their first professional matches since signing with the AFL in June.

"This is what I've been waiting for," said Ford, who has a combined pro and amateur record of 5-1. "I'm excited to fight in front of my home crowd. This is a long time coming, and I'm ready to prove myself."

The fighters will host a meet-and-greet for children Sept. 25 at 4 p.m. at the Columbus Civic Center.

While in town, the fighters will participate in service projects with Big Brothers and Big Sisters and the Children's Miracle Network.

The AFL will have a booth at Soldier and Family Appreciation Day today.

AFL fighters, including Bobby Lashley, former WWE champion, will sign autographs and give away tickets to "A Salute to the Troops."

B.J. Santiago, CEO of the AFL, is a former Airborne Ranger at Fort Benning.

"There are a lot of MMA fans in this area, especially at Fort Benning, where Soldiers are trained in combative techniques," Santiago said. "The AFL has a huge heart for the Soldiers."

Master Sgt. Lewis Fletcher, the NCOIC of the Fort Benning Combatives School, said the three pro combatives instructors will give fans a taste of what the combatives program is all about.

"To see these guys make it to the big stage is a huge achievement for the entire program," Fletcher said.

"Competitive fighting is their jobs. The public is going to find out that our guys are fit, strong and skilled, and they can compete with anyone in the world."

Tickets for "A Salute to the Troops" are on sale at Ticketmaster locations, www.ticketmaster.com or at the Columbus Civic Center box office. Active-duty, Soldiers and DoD Civilians can received discounted tickets through the Omega Travel Office on post.

For more information, visit www.americanfightleague.com or call the Columbus Civic Center box office at 706-494-8330.

safety tips
Most often, food poisoning occurs because food is incorrectly handled, improperly cooked or inadequately stored. The following steps can help reduce chances of getting food poisoning:
• Wash your hands, utensils and food surfaces often.
• Keep raw foods separate from ready-to-eat foods.
• Cook food to the recommended temperature.
• Defrost food safely in the refrigerator, microwave or cold water.
• Use caution when serving food:
◦ Throw out leftovers that have been out for more than two hours.
◦ Use a tray of ice for cold foods that must stay out longer than two hours.
◦ Use warming trays for hot foods that must stay out longer than two hours.
When in doubt throw it out.

Benning growth? Post schools can handle it

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

More than 2,030 Fort Benning students will head back to school Tuesday.

With Fort Benning's transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, new housing will bring more families to post. Post schools may see the kinds of numbers they once considered the norm.

"About 10 years ago, we had almost 3,800 students," said Bill Diesselhorst, assistant superintendent of Fort Benning Schools. "Without even overcrowding our schools, we can easily handle another 1,000 students."

School enrollment started dropping in 2006 when the Residential Communities Initiative agreement was signed. Housing in McGraw Village, across from McBride School, was vacated and torn down. As families move back in to houses, schools will start growing.

"Eventually, it will be a terrific thing, because we'll have all these nice houses, and people will start moving on post, so enrollment will go back up," Diesselhorst said.

By the end of the school year next spring, there will be about 2,300 to 2,400 students on post. When RCI is complete, there will be more than 3,000.

"We are so excited, because when people talk about families coming into a community, that can only be a good thing," said Dr. Dell McMullen, Fort Benning Schools superintendent.

"We're here to serve families, so having more families gives us greater opportunities to serve."

There will be about 820 new homes in McGraw Village and Patton Place by the end of the year, said Erik Dirks, development associate with Clark Realty Capital, LLC, the company helping to rebuild the neighborhood.

That will mean more than 300 new students for post schools this fall, post officials said.

Many families choose to live on post because of the excellent school system Fort Benning offers, McMullen said. As numbers increase, school officials will adjust whatever is needed to continue providing a quality education to military children.

There are already plans to expand after-school programs and students services, she said. Other key facets, like transportation, food and school supplies, will be regularly evaluated to keep up with growing demands.

School and community leaders on the Benning Futures Team meet monthly and work hand in hand with RCI, which updates privatized post housing, to prepare for the influx of students in the coming months. Overall, enrollment in Fort Benning schools will steadily increase, but it will also fluctuate from school to school.

New elementary school students will be assigned to a school near their home. According to current plans, housing construction will not limit a school's accessibility, Dirks said.

The current capacity for Fort Benning schools is 3,030 students, but if needed, outdoor trailers can be used as temporary classrooms. McMullen said she has seen children receive great educations in trailers, and regardless of class sizes, teachers will continue to help students learn and succeed.

"Having our schools full again — I call them robust — that's a blessing," McMullen said. "We are going to welcome every single child with open arms. That's what it's all about. That's our goal."

School liaison officer links families with resources

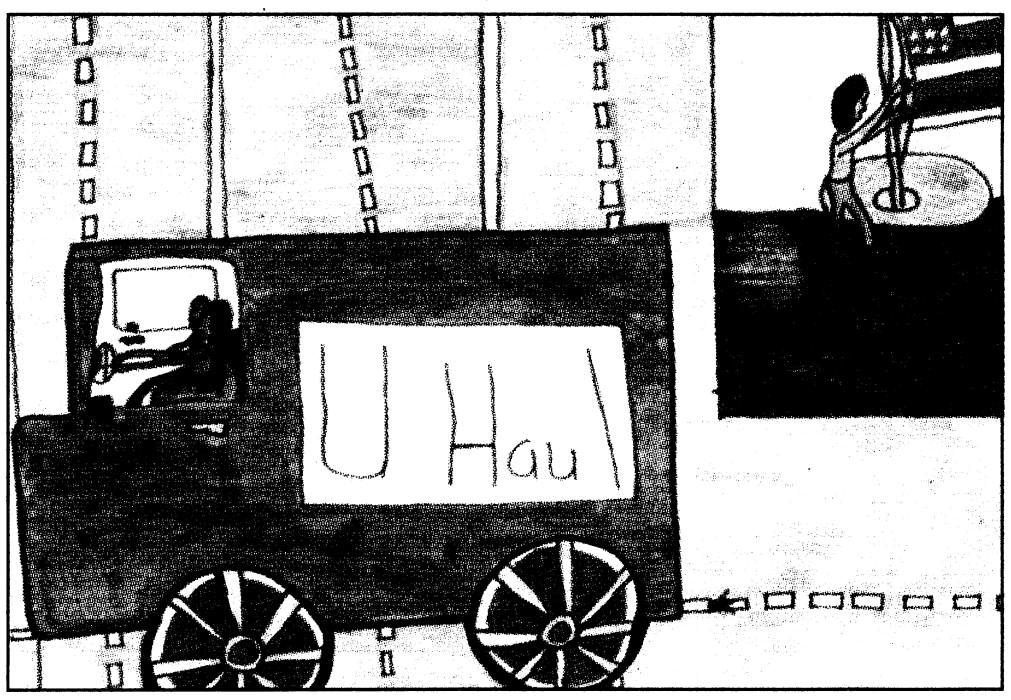
THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

When Sgt. 1st Class Celeste Henderson moved from Fort Stewart, Ga., earlier this summer, one of her primary concerns was how to get her 17-year-old daughter Jaleisa into a local high school magnet program. Her answer was Tawanna Brown, the school liaison officer for Fort Benning.

"I didn't have any idea where to go," Henderson said. "Someone told me about Tawanna — that she's the go-to person — and true to the word, that woman really was wonderful with getting us squared away."

Brown links families to the resources they need as they transition from one school system to another. She answers questions and offers guidance on everything from home schooling to post-secondary education.

"One may think that registering your kids for school is easy, but it's not always. So I'm here to help," said Brown, who found a magnet program at Shaw High School that matched Jaleisa's interests in filming and production. That was one less worry for Henderson during the move.



"I was a basket case. I was unpacking; I was trying to get situated. (Brown) did the legwork, getting packets from school, setting up appointments. She basically did it all," Henderson said. "And she was patient. I had hundreds of questions, and she answered all of them. I don't think I could have ever done it on my own. That's how good she is."

Brown said she can assist anyone moving to Fort Benning, whether they are looking for public, private or post schools.

"It's a common misconception that I work only with Fort Benning schools," she said. "I actually support schools in Lee, Russell, Chattahoochee, Muscogee and Harris counties, because Soldiers and their families live in those communities."

The number one problem she helps with is transferring records. She advises families to request copies as soon as they find out they're PCSing. She speaks from personal experience. She moved from Fort Lewis, Wash., without the copies and had trouble getting her son into a limited placement gifted program.

Brown also works with Partners In Education, coordinates speakers for home-schooled and college-bound students and attends school board meetings. Her roles are many, but she loves her job, she said.

"Knowing that I help ease the transition is probably the thing I enjoy most," said Brown, who has been school liaison officer for more than two years. "Putting those links together, connecting the dots, getting people together — that's basically what it's about, because in the end, it's for the sake of the child."

For more information or school-related questions, call Brown at 706-545-3062.

Welcome to Fort Benning Schools

The Fort Benning school district, with six elementary schools and Faith Middle School, is the largest system in the Georgia/Alabama School District, part of the Department of Defense Domestic Elementary and Secondary Schools.

Dr. Dell McMullen is the superintendent, and Shirley Jaeger and Bill Diesselhorst are assistant superintendents. The Fort Benning School Board includes Soldiers and civilian representatives from the post community. Each school has a representative serving on the board.

Post schools are active in Partners In Education, an "adopt-a-school" program of sorts, that partners Fort Benning units and local organizations with schools on post and off. PIE partners mentor students and sponsor various activities and educational programs throughout the year.

Fort Benning schools also rely heavily on parental participation. Parents and grandparents are always encouraged to volunteer at their child's school.

Peer program to help Faith students transition

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Four out of 10 children transfer to or leave Faith during the school year, said Dr. Julio Gonzalez, the school principal. "The main purpose of the program is to support students transitioning to Faith Middle School from anywhere in the world — real kids in real time with real needs."

JS2S will use the Internet to connect students from installations worldwide to student ambassadors at Faith. Students can take a virtual tour, talk with some of their future classmates and learn about the school they will be attending.

Representatives from the Military Child Education Coalition will train three to five eighth-graders and the eighth-grade counselor at Faith this fall to help incoming students adjust socially and academically. The training will focus on three aspects of school assimilation: after-school activities, relationships and scholastics.

Tawanna Brown, the post school liaison officer, said relationships were important for children at that age.

"I'm excited about this," she said. "They'll have positive role models. They'll have interaction with someone they feel they can trust. Instead of walking into school not knowing anyone, they'll have a whole group of people."

The student volunteers will represent the school's diversity and commitment to academic excellence, Gonzalez said. They will have the opportunity to become school leaders and develop "21st century learning" with the program.

Incoming students will be divided among the ambassadors throughout the year, and students will be able to use an extra classroom set up with computers dedicated to JS2S.

The Student 2 Student program began in high schools but is taking root in middle schools on and off post, Brown said. S2S is currently at Chattahoochee, Columbus, Kendrick and Spencer high schools.

Brown said the students who graduate from JS2S as ambassadors will help S2S work better in high schools. Students mentored under the program will also be better oriented for a successful experience at Faith, she said.

"It all goes back to easing the transition challenges," Brown said. "The younger you start the program, the better the viability will be in high school."

The program will also be helpful for students preparing to move from Fort Benning to another installation.

If the school has the technological capabilities, they can meet student ambassadors at their new school, learn about academic requirements and prepare for the transition in advance.

The program is currently for incoming eighth-grade students, but Gonzalez plans to expand it to the sixth and seventh grades. He also hopes to connect with students at Fort Knox, Ky., as the Armor School transitions to Fort Benning.

Transition Counselor Institute Conference set for Oct. 9 and 10

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Teachers, counselors, principals and Army Family program managers will gather from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Oct 9 and 10 at the Benning Club for the Transition Counselor Institute Conference.

Tawanna Brown, post school liaison officer, said the conference will help educators better understand how to help students deal with deployments.

The conference will include three phases:

- awareness, processes and networks,
- deeper understanding of the social and emotional needs, and military culture, and
- expert partnership with the installation.

Attendees will learn about issues military children deal with, how to support military parents, latest research findings about military children, and how deployment affects students.

Educators will get advice and hear stories from others on how to be sensitive to the needs of children who have deployed parents, Brown said.

"Whether an educator is acclimated to military life or not, everyone can learn something from this conference," she said.

Local school representatives are invited to attend. The event is free and lunch will be provided.

Dexter students write about military

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Corey McCoy

Ten students from Dexter Elementary School are published authors. Their essays, selected through the annual Armed Services YMCA contest, are featured in My Hero: Military Kids Write About Their Moms and Dads.

The contest winners, Aidan Sloan, Reed Hundertmark, Will Peters, Zach Hunter, Ben Gardner, Roland Lester, Mark Estrada, Susi Wills, Cathryn Thompson and Emily Mueller, were taught language arts by Kristen Holcombe and Laura Feagin.

The students worked on the essay submissions as a class project for two weeks before sending them off to be judged.

I hadn't thought about the contest anymore," Holcombe said. "We were pretty amazed when we found out about the book, because there were only 100 essays in the book, and ten of them were (from) our Dexter students," Holcombe said.

"We are so proud of the kids," she said. One student's story was particularly touching, Holcombe said.

Featured on the fifth page of the book, his essay is one of the few to fill an entire page.

The contest included children all over the world with military parents, and essays could focus on anybody who has served or is serving in the military.

The book is on sale at the PX and bookstores in the Columbus and Phenix City area.

"Being a teacher for military kids who are going through multiple deployments is a very incredible honor," Holcombe said. "Not only do you get to be their teacher, but you also get to share a very difficult time of their lives.

"They are strong beyond their years, and that is why I felt that it was important for them to be recognized for their accomplishments."

"Around here, you have to search real hard to find someone who doesn't have a tattoo these days. And most of them have more than one."

"It means I'm a product of my environment," said Spc. Joshua Mitchell, who got his first tattoo July 26. Mitchell had "P.O.M.E." tattooed across his back.

Sgt. 1st Class Tommy Mathisen spends at least 30 hours a week doing tattoos at Fast Freddie's on Victory Drive. "It gets kind of hard on a night when someone comes in close to quitting time. I'm not going to turn them away. I can be here till two in the morning, then it's up at 5 a.m. for PT."

Naked women are a problem.

So says Sgt. 1st Class Tommy Mathisen, who moonlights as a tattoo artist at Fast Freddie's on Victory Drive. The Army's tattoo policy is the most liberal of all the services, Mathisen said, but naked women, obscene words, gang-related artwork and racist symbols are a problem for Soldiers.

"I know the regulation real well, so I discourage them if they come in here asking for something that's going to get them in trouble," said Mathisen, who became a tattoo artist in 1987, six years before he enlisted. "The reg's a lot less restrictive than it was when I joined, but things like naked women are a problem — anything offensive, really."

Tattooing and Soldiering come naturally to Mathisen — they both run in the family. His father was an artist, his grandfather "fought in a few wars," his uncle is a general and he's got a cousin somewhere out there sporting sergeant's stripes.

Mathisen, the chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear NCO for the 11th Engineer Battalion, grew up watching his father do tattoos. By the time he turned 17, he was practicing on his friends with a mail-order ink kit. These days, he's amassed thousands of dollars worth of equipment and a number of tattoos of his own, including the ones on his forearms that he inked himself.

"I grew up drawing and watching my dad, so tattooing came naturally," Mathisen said. "For me, it's half mechanical and half art, and I really enjoy the art aspect of it. It can be monotonous if you do the same thing over and over — we get a lot of requests for skulls or flames or that sort of thing — but then you get the ones that want you to design something or do something unique. That's fun. I like the blacks and grays, with lots of shading and depth."

One in four Americans between 18 and 50 has a tattoo, a full quarter of the population. Statistics vary, but experts say that percentage is greater among the military. (It's also greater among prison populations, drug users, athletes and gang members.) Since the Army revised its tattoo policy in 2006, effectively reducing restrictions on "exposed tattoos," more and more Soldiers are getting more and more tattoos, Mathisen said.

Fort Benning keeps Fast Freddie's and a number of other tattoo shops on Victory Drive hopping most weekends and immediately following basic training, Airborne or Ranger graduations. Mostly they come looking for military artwork, including unit insignia, tabs and weapons, as well as skulls, eagles, flags, names and crosses. Among women, who typically bear up better during the painful procedure, Mathisen said, the most popular tattoos feature religious or tribal art, stars, names and fictional characters like fairies.

Like so many businesses, Fast Freddie's has suffered recently with soaring gas prices and a struggling economy. The redeployment of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team brought an influx of customers for a while, many of them looking for "memorial" tattoos to honor their fallen comrades.

"Tattoos are a luxury," said Donovan Stringer, who manages Fast Freddie's. "It's always an unpredictable market, but when gas is going for four bucks a gallon, people quit spending money on the luxuries. Or they go looking for cheaper work, and that's not always safe."

By "cheaper," Donovan wasn't referring to the cost of the tattoo, per se. A simple, but high-quality tattoo can cost as little as $30. No, a cheap tattoo can be costly if it comes with a case of hepatitis, the number one concern among conscientious artists. When searching for a reputable, tattoo shop, safety is paramount, said Donovan, who offered these guidelines to help ensure a safe procedure and satisfying results:

- Ask for recommendations from friends you can rely on who have had their tattoos for several months.
- In Georgia, tattoo shops are inspected regularly by the state health department. Ask to see their most recent rating.
- Make sure the shop is clean. A tattoo artist's studio is a laboratory, Mathisen said. It should be disinfected after every procedure.
- Ask questions. Does your artist have his license renewed annually? Is he trained in basic first aid? Does he wear fresh disposable gloves with each procedure? Is there an autoclave? Are the needles disposed of after every use?
- Make sure the floor and counter tops are made from nonporous material, not wood.
- Spray bottles, which are used frequently during tattooing, should be covered with disposable plastic bags.
- Ask to see the artist's portfolio. Most shops have several artists, and they may specialize in a specific subject or style. Don't be afraid to ask how long he's been practicing.

CFC contributions help Fort Benning community

Red Cross, Santa's Castle, the Boy Scouts and Girls Scouts, those are just a few of the organizations that benefit from the Soldier and Family Support Association.

SFSA distributes funds to post organizations that help Army Families, said Chris Ryan, SFSA president.

SFSA raises money through the Combined Federal Campaign, which will kick off at 9 a.m. Aug. 28 in Marshall Auditorium. The donations given to the organization mean a lot of things to a lot of people, Ryan said.

"It's toys for Santa's Castle, it's camp fees for Boy Scouts, it's educational field trips for our kids — it goes to everybody," she said.

Contributions donated to the association through CFC stay on Fort Benning and are distributed quarterly.

"That's our major source of money," said Barbara Singleton, treasurer for the Army Community Services Volunteer Support Association. "Without this, we couldn't support our volunteers, and a lot of the services volunteers give to Fort Benning wouldn't be there."

The volunteer organization receives funds from SFSA to support ACS activities like the newcomer's orientation and Army Family Team Building. They also distribute holiday turkeys to Soldiers and provide child care for those

Moore, Galloway to sign copies of new book

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore and Joe Galloway, who co-authored We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, the 1994 best seller that became the basis for the movie We Were Soldiers, will sign copies of their newest book between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. Aug. 25 at the AAFES shoppette on the first floor of Infantry Hall.

We Are Soldiers Still, a Journey Back to the Battlefields of Vietnam, will be released Aug. 19, and copies will be available at the shoppette. The price of the book was unavailable at press time.

The 384-page book, published by Harperluxe, is a follow-up to We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, which chronicled the 34-day Battle of the Ia drang Valley.

In their most recent collaboration, Moore and Galloway reflect on their return visit to Vietnam and their relationships with 10 American veterans of that battle and Lt. Gen. Nguyen Hu An, who commanded the North Vietnamese troops.

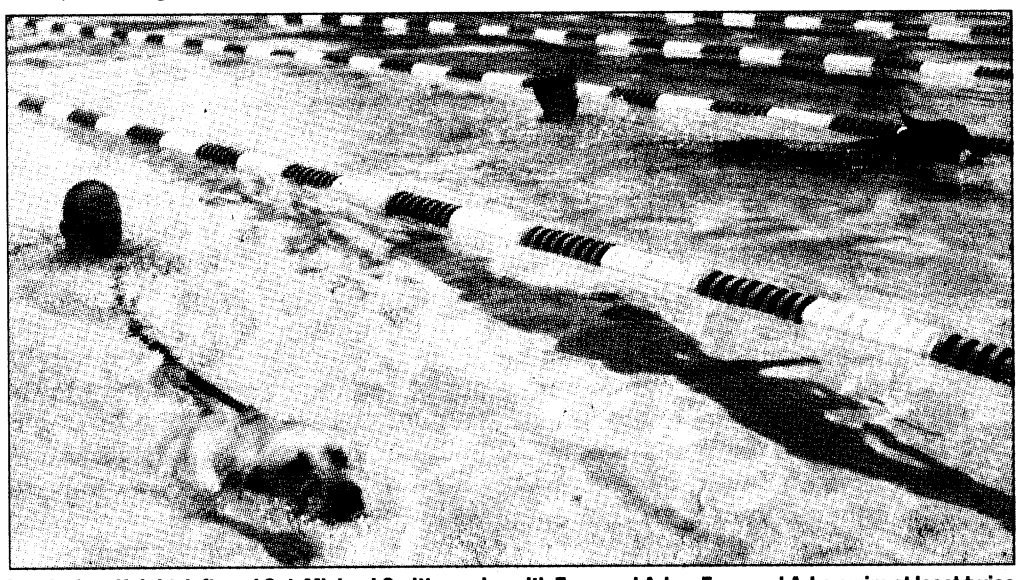
Deville, a new dog to the 209th MP Detachment, and Sgt. 1st Class Andrew Fountain, kennel master, take a rest from swimming laps July 30 at Carey Pool.



Sgt. Joshua Knight, left, and Sgt. Michael Gmitter swim with Fany and Arka. Fany and Arka swim at least twice a week because they have signs of hip degeneration.

Soggy hot dogs

Fort Benning MPs took their training to Carey Pool last week, and their canine partners lapped it up.

The exercise served dual purposes, said Sgt. 1st Class Andrew Fountain, kennel master for the 209th MP Detachment. Some of the older dogs benefit from the low impact exercise, which is easier on their joints — "It's like physical therapy for the dogs," he said.

And the younger dogs are training for combat.

"There were times in Iraq when we had to cross rivers that had no bridges or we had to walk through irrigation ditches in fields to get to weapons caches buried under crops," said Sgt. 1st Class Raymond Richardson, who deployed with his dog Ardy to Iraq and Afghanistan. "It's always good to know your dog is a good swimmer before you go downrange."

Spc. Daniel Horner won the TRADOC Soldier of the Year competition in July.

U.S. ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT, ACCESSIONS SUPPORT BRIGADE
Paula J. Randall

Confidence is the key to success. So says Spc. Daniel J. Horner, an action shooter with the Army Marksmanship Unit and the new Training and Doctrine Command Soldier of the Year.

After being named the AMU Soldier of the Quarter, the Accessions Support Brigade Soldier of the Quarter, the USAMU and ASB Soldier of the Year and the U.S. Army Accessions Command Soldier of the Year, Horner won the TRADOC competition in July.

Horner credits his success to confidence, focus and preparation. He got a perfect score on his PT test and shot expert with his M-16. He also took a written exam, wrote an essay and completed land navigation and common task tests.

Horner, who joined the Army in 2006, was the 2008 World Speed Shoot Off limited champion, the 2007 U.S. Practical Shooting Association Multi-Gun Tactical national champion, a two-time International Defensive Pistol Association champion and a four-time Recon champion. He has won a number of other titles since he started shooting in 2000.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Information key to process during transition to MCOE

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

In 2011, Base Realignment and Closure (BRAC) will expand Fort Benning's training mission, military population, and facilities, and will more than double the number of civilian employees needed to support the Maneuver Center of Excellence. Fort Benning is indeed looking forward to welcoming this expanded work force.

The Civilian Personnel Advisory Center (CPAC) will try to accomplish a seamless transition of our current employees and the expansion of the civilian employee population. The CPAC has established a cell of seasoned human resource specialists dedicated to planning and executing a transition plan to ensure all employees know if their positions will be impacted, what their employment options are, and any incentives that will be available to them.

It is important that all our civilian employees are well-informed of the progress we are making toward MCOE staffing. The CPACs at Fort Benning and Fort Knox are working in tandem to assist all federal employees involved in this massive undertaking. This transition may involve each of us at some point along the way.

There are several ways you can stay informed throughout the transition period. One way is by attending town hall meetings. Employees here and at Fort Knox have been briefed on the transition progress and given an overall view of how MCOE could affect them and if affected, the various incentive programs that are available. Both installations will continue to offer this and other counseling throughout the transition.

As the effective date approaches employees will receive one-on-one counseling to ensure they understand their options and how the decisions they make may affect their federal employment and benefits.

In the years to come there will be many new faces at Fort Benning, those who decide to relocate from Fort Knox and others from the community. Employees will have the opportunity to volunteer for specific MCOE vacancies and grades. Fort Benning has prepared a video briefing that covers information about the military and the tri-community area, including the educational, recreational, and employment benefits for the entire family. This video will be presented to Fort Knox employees to help them with their relocation decision.

Additionally, Fort Benning CPAC representatives will continue to travel to Fort Knox to answer questions and explain the relocation process and relocation incentives. Any Fort Knox employee who volunteers for a position here is guaranteed placement.

This only scratches the surface of the staffing process for those relocating. Employees moving under permanent change of station will be authorized house-hunting trips, travel and transportation expense reimbursement, movement of household goods, temporary quarters allowance, and real estate reimbursement. They will be able to use the Defense National Relocation Program Initiation Counseling and Destination Services, and the Guaranteed Home Sale and Marketing Assistance, or Property Management services.

Fort Benning civilians will be taken care of too. Fort Benning employees who decide to relinquish their positions will have the opportunity to apply for a voluntary separation incentive. Employees must either retire or resign to be eligible for a separation incentive.

The Voluntary Separation Incentive Pay is a tool used for reducing or restructuring the work force. Employees approved under this program can receive a payment up to $25,000 or the amount of severance pay the employee would receive using the standard formula, whichever is less.

Voluntary Early Retirement Authority is available to employees affected by BRAC who are not eligible for optional retirement but will qualify for early retirement. To qualify for VERA, an employee must be at least 50 years old with at least 20 years of creditable service, or must have completed 25 years of service at any age. Remember though, VSIP and VERA are not entitlements. When there are more applicants than available offers, offers are made based on seniority using the applicants' leave service computation dates.

We anticipate some vacancies will remain even after all employees volunteering for positions have been placed. It is our hope these vacancies will provide promotion opportunities for the current work force and employment opportunities for new hires.

There is definitely a lot to take in with the changes that will occur over the next several years. I encourage everyone to stay informed as we continue this transition together.

The more you know, the easier it will be for you to make the best decision.

Follow me.

OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

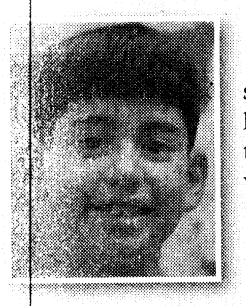
What does 'back to school' mean to you?

We're excited. My youngest is getting ready to go into the ninth grade. My oldest one is going to be a sophomore. For a mom, it's a time for the girls to go shopping, picking out clothes, shoes, backpacks, jewelry — everything has to match.

— Teresa Ellis
Family member

It's a little quieter at the house now. (My daughter) was always bored during the summer. Now she can see her friends again. She'll come home from school with different projects, wanting me to help her. It keeps her busy.

— Spc. Michael Buggs
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment



I like the summer, but I like school because you get out of the house more. I get up earlier, but that's OK; you should enjoy school while you have it.

— Christian Torres
Second grade

New adventures, that's what this is all about — learning new things, meeting new kids. I teach a mix of first-, second- and third-graders. It's exciting because I have kids of different ages, abilities and interests. I love it.

— Barbara Culwell
Dexter Elementary teacher

I have three kids. There's a lot to get prepared for, like getting supplies and getting a routine down. They're used to the summertime, when they can get up whenever they want.

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Elsie Jackson

My apron strings, they're starting to fray. Fast. When the new school year kicks off next week, my daughter will be starting the 10th (TENTH!) grade. There's no denying it, the baby girl is growing up.

During the last year or so, she's been allowed to operate with less and less adult supervision for longer periods of time.

Where her dad and I once alternated running errands so that she wasn't home alone, she progressed to being alone at home and finishing required summer reading and math packets without (too much) prompting.

Checking homework has evolved to simply inquiring if it is done, instead of combing through each sentence and math problem and helping to make fixes.

I once sat through movies next to her and her friends. We moved from that to sharing the same theater. Now she and her friends get dropped off and picked up a few hours later.

A learner's permit this year, a driver's license next year, and she and her friends won't be as dependent on hitching rides with parents, stretching those apron strings even more.

When she was an infant, I knew that if I fed her, she would grow. I just didn't think it would happen quite this quickly.

Wasn't it just last week that I walked her to a classroom on her first day of "big school?"

There were other 4-year-olds in that "big school" classroom, too. Young people claiming to be graduates of that classroom come up to say hello to me from time to time, but I'm almost certain they're just pretending to be the same kids.

Can you go from less than three feet tall to towering over me in the span of, what, 10 days?

My back to school list for crayons, glue sticks and construction paper has been replaced with entries that are less tangible, citing events and examples demonstrating how far my daughter has come from day one.

As each day goes by, she matures just a little more, snapping another thread in those pesky apron strings, sometimes two at a time.

The apron strings will soon dissolve into our collective past. The heartstrings, though, that's a different story.

This week in Fort Benning history

• The "new, modern" quarters on Miller Loop were completed and assigned to captains.

• 1,000 head of government cattle were shipped in from drought areas out West and placed in quarantine near the post's Sulphur Springs. After three days, they would be turned out to pasture on 20,000 acres in the southeastern area of Fort Benning until they were sufficiently fattened and ready for slaughter. Then they would be processed locally and distributed to the needy.

• Underprivileged children from Columbus were treated to a number of activities at a two-week summer camp at the Infantry Rest Camp near Harmony Church. Post residents were urged to donate clothing for the boys.

• "Every fly must die" was the philosophy of one Pfc. Lawson Burton, the Fly Orderly for the 112th Company, Second Student Regiment. Since the inception of the Fly Orderly Program, which involved a swatter and a kill chart posted in the dining room, the 112th's mess hall had received superior ratings on fly control.

• Six — count 'em, six — Medal of Honor recipients called Fort Benning home: 1st Lt. Arthur Jackson, 1st Lt. Jack Montgomery, Master Sgt. Jake Lindsay, Master Sgt. Charles McGaha, Master Sgt. Wilburn Ross and Sgt. John Pittman.

• A Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance report noted that the State of Georgia would furnish 50 deer to be "planted" on post at the junction of Randall and Upatoi creeks. Also noted: Post officials had trapped 15 beavers and transplanted them at Eglin Air Force Base, in Florida.

'Buddies' save lives on and off the battlefield

FORT BENNING PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Michelle Gordon

While deployed, Soldiers' "battle buddies" are their best friends, their confidants and their source of strength. But when the subject is suicide, their buddies may also save their lives.

"Battle buddy education is an important part of suicide prevention," said Chaplain (Maj.) Jeff Voyles, deputy director of the Fort Benning Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program.

"When you ask someone who he would most likely reach out to when he's hurting. It's not the doctor or the chaplain, it's his buddy," he said.

Voyles was part of a five-man team sent to Iraq last summer after the Soldier suicide rate jumped to its highest rate on record. The goal of the team was to identify the leading cause of the rise and determine what could be done about it.

He said they learned the common stressors were troubled relationships and what he refers to as self-inflicted shame. By shame, he explained, he means a feeling of letting your fellow Soldiers down or failing to protect them — absorbing the blame for actions that may be beyond your control.

Knowing these stressors allows chaplains, commanders, doctors, friends and family members to reach out to troubled Soldiers.

"When people are depressed they often don't have the energy or the ability to reach out to a professional," Voyles said. "Educating everyone about the signs of suicide can save lives."

In addition to knowing the warning signs and becoming familiar with the services provided by the Army Substance Abuse Program, ASAP Chief Yvonne Wilbanks also encourages Soldiers and family members to visit www.militarymentalhealth.org to complete an anonymous online mental health assessment.

"This assessment can give people a starting point to look at possible issues in their lives," she said, "because one suicide is too many."

Talking to your battle buddy is the first step to preventing suicide. Voyles likens it to collapsing on the field — you don't need a surgeon, you need someone who knows CPR. If you're having problems, you may not need a professional, you may just need someone to listen to you.

National suicide prevention week is Sept. 7-13 and ASAP has several events planned to educate the Fort Benning community.

Awareness training will be available at 9 a.m. Sept. 9 at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

Informational booths and displays will also be set-up around the installation throughout the week. For more information, call 706-545-1138.

attending ACS classes.

The list of organizations covered under SFSA changes from year to year. Stowers Elementary School's parent teacher organization is one of the newest additions.

They received their first check this summer, said Contrilla Sparkman, PTO president.

"Any way that I don't have to ask children to go door to door or put an added financial burden on our parents helps," she said.

The money will go toward school programs, Sparkman said. The first one, a puppet show planned for September, will help children discuss deployment.

Last year, SFSA raised more than $25,000 through the CFC, a 50 percent increase over 2006. Ryan said the goal this year is $35,000.

Soldiers and DoD Civilians can donate to SFSA by writing code 24249 on their CFC allotment forms. Donors can choose up to five codes. Forms are available from unit CFC representatives.

The campaign ends Oct. 17. For more information, contact your unit's representative or call Ryan at 706-610-5666.

Benning celebrates Soldier and Family Appreciation Day

Thousands attended Soldier and Family Appreciation Day

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Thousands of people gathered for Soldier and Family Appreciation Day Friday at York Field.

The event included a meet and greet with UFC star Rashad Evans and performances by alternative rockers Eve 6, rhythm and blues singer Kimberly Locke and country singer Miranda Lambert.

Activities also included a medieval fencing demonstration, a wildlife exhibit, face painting, inflatables and caricatures. Soldiers and families were given free food.

Because of inclement weather, attendees had to take shelter in Infantry Hall for about 30 minutes. Most of them waited for the weather to clear for the Lambert performance and a fireworks display.

"I'm glad to see this welcome home celebration for the Soldiers," said retired Col. Joe MacDonald, who stuck around for the fireworks. "It's great to be out here celebrating with the Soldiers and their families."

Dorthea Bolen, the wife of a deployed Soldier, Sgt. 1st Class Lewis Bolen, said the Soldiers deserve thanks.

"It's important to honor the Soldiers, because they get up every morning without complaining and they do an exemplary job," she said.

Sgt. 1st Class Cruz Garcia felt appreciated.

"This event really shows that Fort Benning does care about their families and Soldiers," he said.

He feels thankful to have his family.

"Military families take care of the homefront when their Soldier is deployed — they sacrifice so much and I am thankful for that," he said.

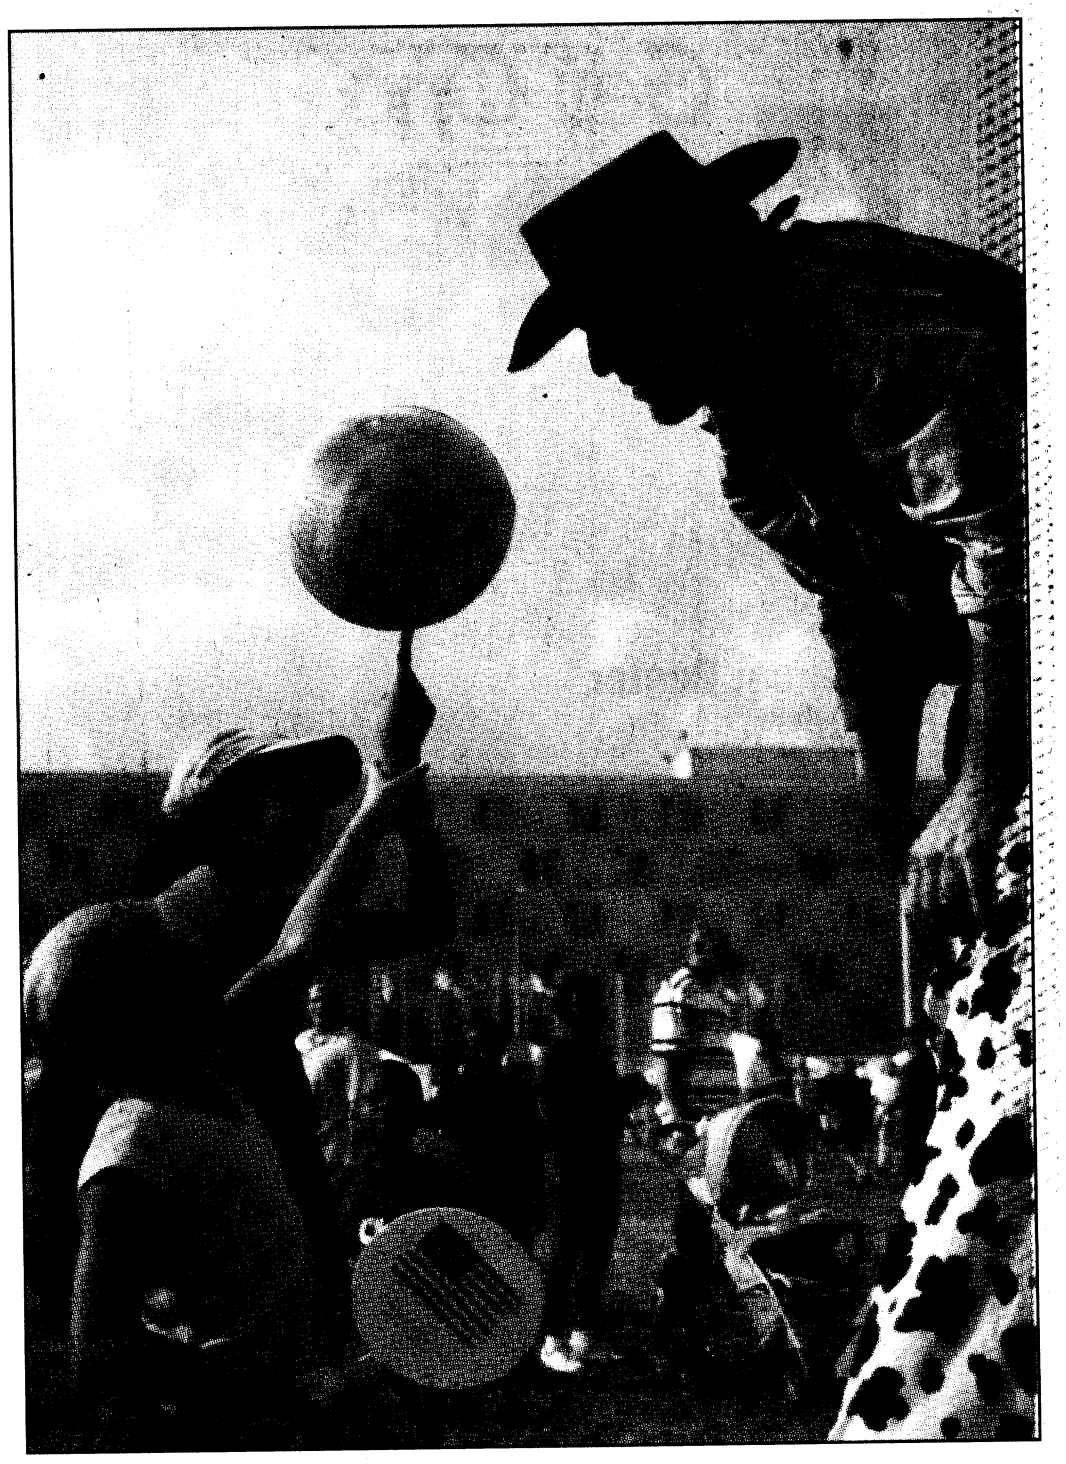
Morse Batista, 13, and his sister Jezabell, 8, play with beach balls at the Soldier and Family Appreciation Day. Other children's activities included face painting and arts and crafts.



Katherine Rodriguez, 12, smiles as cowboy stilt walker Todd Key puts a spinning ball on her finger. Rodriguez's sister, Ariana, 8, helps her hold it up.

The RIA gives family members a peek at what their new Rangers have endured during the 61-day course, which includes three phases — squad patrol training at Fort Benning's Camp Darby, mountain training in North Georgia and swamp training in Florida.

The Rangers in Action demonstrations take place all year and are open to the public. JROTC and school groups are welcome. The next RIA will start at 10 a.m. Sept. 5 at Hurley Hill. For a schedule, go www.benning.army.mil/rtb.

Soldier determined to earn Ranger tab after injury

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Michelle L. Gordon

"Who wants to be known as the guy who quit Ranger School?" said 1st Lt. Reinaldo Gonzalez II.

However, Gonzalez didn't "quit" Ranger School. The 25-year-old West Point graduate from New Jersey broke four vertebrae in his neck and back after falling head first off the 34-foot confidence climb in January 2007.

"I remember saying 'I'll be back tomorrow' as I lay on the mat unable to move," Gonzalez said. "I thought I had broken my arm because I could see it flapping in front of me, but I couldn't feel it."

Gonzalez didn't break his arm, but he did pinch his spinal cord, which left him paralyzed from the neck down.

Spc. Gerardo Muniz, a Ranger medic, was one of the first responders. He was next to the confidence climb at the time of the accident and he saw Gonzalez fall.

"I really didn't have time to think," he said. "It was more of a second nature to grab my aid bag and spine board before anyone could yell out 'medic.' Ranger Gonzalez was complaining about his arm and feeling tingling sensations in his lower body more than his neck. My concerns were stabilizing his neck, keeping him totally immobile, and getting him to further treatment."

Gonzalez was taken to Columbus Regional Medical center where a trauma team was waiting. The day after his accident he asked a doctor if he'd ever walk again. The doctor's response was "I don't know."

"He didn't say 'no,'" Gonzalez said. "That's pretty much what I needed to hear. It wasn't a definitive 'no.'"

During the next several weeks Gonzalez was transferred from one hospital to another — all specializing in traumatic spinal cord injuries. When he arrived at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, the chief of neurosurgery walked in and said "'Everything's going to be OK. I'm going to be your doctor.'

"He had a Ranger tab, he was a West Point graduate and he was an Infantryman," Gonzalez said. "So he knew where I was coming from, where I wanted to go and what my goals were. That was the first night I slept soundly since the accident."

Gonzalez was transferred back to his home state of New Jersey so he could receive physical therapy from the Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation, the same facility Christopher Reeve attended after his 1995 equestrian accident.

Gonzalez regained his motor skills and returned to Fort Benning in October. As the executive officer of the 198th Infantry Regiment he now runs two miles a day and said he owes his life to the quick response of the Ranger medics and he is forever grateful to the Ranger Training Brigade.

"After the accident, someone from the Ranger School came and sat with me and my family everyday, and while I was at Walter Reed I got lots of coins, everyone brings coins, but Col. (Sean) Jenkins, (commander, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment) gave me his phone number and told me to call him if I needed anything. That meant something to me."

It's been 18 months since he fell off the obstacle course, and Gonzalez isn't sure he'll be able to return to Ranger School. But he will try. He said he's a career Soldier and career Soldiers need to have a Ranger tab.

"I was only there eight days," he said. "I need to finish what I started for myself and for my Soldiers.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Favre back

The Centurion Boats at the Glen will be at 1:15 p.m. Sunday at Watkins Glen International. It's the last road race of the year.

Let the games begin

NBC Universal plans to show 3,600 hours of Olympic Games, the single most ambitious media project in history.

Go to the Olympic page on NBC.com and plug in your zip code for a full schedule of local Olympic broadcasts.

I'm looking forward to the Olympics, especially the women's gymnastics. I expect athlete Shawn Johnson to garner a few gold medals for the U.S.

Bulldogs mess

The Georgia Bulldogs football team will have five fewer players for their opening game Aug. 30 against Georgia Southern because of players behaving badly.

Two players were treated for injuries at a local hospital after they were involved in a bar fight during the weekend.

Another player, linebacker Darius Dewberry, was seen on hospital videotape overturning trash cans and causing other damage.

Brewers unravel

Milwaukee Brewers' first baseman Prince Fielder shoved teammate Manny Parra in the dugout Monday night after exchanging words with him. Apparently, Parra was going to the clubhouse in the seventh inning and Fielder told him he should stay in the dugout while the Brewers were at bat.

The Brewers lost seven of nine games since July 26, when they were tied with the Chicago Cubs for first place.

Sox trade Ramirez

The biggest surprise during the MLB trade was the trade of Boston Red Sox outfielder Manny Ramirez, who was traded to the L.A. Dodgers.

Hiking is one of the few outdoor activities the whole family can enjoy together. It's fun, it's affordable and it's educational. But don't tell the kids.

There are a number of local trails perfect for groups of hikers of various ages. The key is to travel at a pace comfortable for the slowest or least agile member of the family.

Introduce the idea to children as adventure, not exercise. Spark their imagination and curiosity with words like "explore" and "scout." Involve them in the planning by soliciting their advice: "What should we look for — bugs, birds or rocks?" "Should we follow the river or go through the woods?"

Several parks in Columbus, including Flat Rock, Heath and Cooper Creek, feature trails that are natural, if not primitive. Each centers on a lake or creek. Their trails are not strenuous or lengthy, making them perfect for an early morning or late evening hike.

The fitness trail on Main Post, just off Dixie Road next to the golf course, offers much the same level of challenge as the parks, but without the benefit of waterfowl.

At this time of year, heat is probably the greatest threat you'll face at any of the local parks or fitness trails, but an encounter with a snake is not unheard of.

Venture a little farther from home, and you'll find no shortage of hiking trails with greater potential and greater risks. Use travel time to talk to your kids about safety and hiking etiquette. Make sure they know there's a time to be quiet (they're more likely to spot wild animals that way) and a time to be loud (should they become separated from the group).

If you're returning to a trail you've hiked before, talk about what you recall — the animals, the plants, the view from the trail. Most hiking trails change or evolve very slowly and subtly. But some move much faster.

The three-mile trail around the rim of Providence Canyon in Lumpkin, Ga., constantly changes as the soft clay canyon walls erode. Visit Providence Canyon this weekend, then again in the spring, and you'll note a marked change in the trail.

A hike through the canyon floor — I recommend it only for the sure-footed — will give you a close and fascinating look at clay striations in striking colors and textures and a greater understanding of how poor 19th century farming practices resulted in what we know as Georgia's Little Grand Canyon.

If your group is up to tackling the seven-mile trail through the canyon floors, arrive early, by 8 a.m. if possible, to pick up a trail guide at the park information center and start your hike before the canyon heats up. Pack lightly for comfort, but wisely (see list of 10 hiking essentials) and carry a lightweight stick, one you can comfortably wave in front of you to remove spider webs from the trail.

Providence Canyon is 42 miles southeast of Fort Benning. In the opposite direction, and about the same driving distance, is the Pine Mountain Trail in Roosevelt State Park, five miles east of Pine Mountain, Ga.

With more than 9,000 acres, the park boasts some of the best hiking trails in the Southeast. Volunteers with the Pine Mountain Trail Association have carefully marked a number of routes, including the Wolfden Loop, Rocky Point and the Cascade Falls trail, which includes two very small waterfalls and an impressive one just two miles from the trail head.

Sections of the 23-mile Pine Mountain Trail are recommended for use only by experienced hikers.

Visit the park information center to find a trail suitable for your group. For more information, go to www.pinemountain.org.

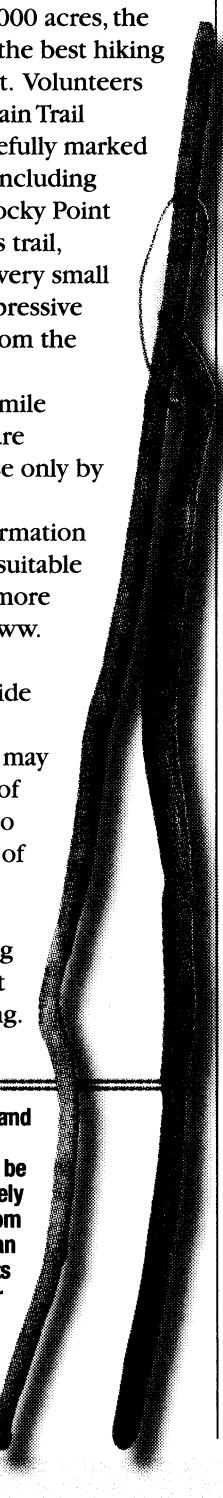
Wherever you decide to hike, know what kinds of wildlife you may encounter, the rules of the trail, and where to turn for help in case of an emergency.

For more information on hiking with your family, visit www.AmericanHiking.org.

10 hiking essentials*

1. Map or trail guide
2. Compass
3. Clothing appropriate for the weather
4. Plenty of food and water
5. Flashlight or headlamp
6. Matches or firestarter
7. Basic first aid kit
8. Whistle
9. Rain jacket and pants
10. Pocket knife

*also important: cell phone, sunblock, bug repellant, trash bags, watch, sunglasses or hat, personal medications



Walking sticks are not essential to hiking, but experienced hikers swear by them.

A good, sturdy stick will help you keep your balance crossing creeks, navigating slippery surfaces or climbing steep trails. It will reduce the stress on your back and lower extremities during long hikes and provide leverage for "high-stepping" rocks, logs or natural ledges. A good walking stick will also fend off unwelcome critters and sweep aside cobwebs or brush.

Some hikers prefer to use two sticks for more balance and comfort. But it may take some practice to develop a comfortable rhythm with two.

Handgrips or straps may also seem awkward at first. Aside from the obvious benefit — straps keep the stick within easy reach — they may also reduce stress on your hands and wrists if worn correctly, tethered firmly to cradle the hand.

Walking sticks or poles come in a variety of shapes and forms, with shock absorbers, adjustable shafts and camera mounts. But resourceful hikers report as much success with broomsticks, pool cues and thick tree limbs or roots.

A good walking stick should be about shoulder high and relatively straight, though top to bottom alignment is more important than what comes between. Twists and knots, often appreciated for their aesthetics, may weaken the wood, so test the stick for sturdiness before relying on it for protection or support.

Trail etiquette and safety

- Plan ahead. Know the weather forecast, when the park will close, the telephone number of the nearest aid station, etc.
- Tell someone where you will be and when you will return.
- Know your limitations. Pick a hiking trail appropriate for the slowest or least agile members of your group. Let them set the pace.
- Insist that everyone stay together. If one person stops to rest, everyone should stop to rest.
- Always stay on the designated trail.
- Carry a trail guide or map.
- Do not chase or approach wildlife.
- Do not litter.
- Avoid putting your hands or feet anywhere you cannot see. Never reach under or over a rock, a log or a tree limb.
- Do not pick flowers or plant life.
- Keep dogs on a leash, remove their waste and drop it in a solid waste container.
- Carry a whistle. Three short blasts on a whistle is a sign of distress.
- Dress children in bright colored clothing so they don't "blend" with the vegetation.
- Carry high-energy snacks, like cereal, granola or fruit.
- Teach children to "hug a tree" if they become lost. This means they should stay in one place until they're found. Teach them to respond loudly if they hear someone calling their name.
- Never assume stream or lake water is safe to consume. Carry plenty of drinking water and water purification tablets for extended hikes.
- Never assume cell phones will work off the beaten path.
- Wear good hiking shoes and socks. Avoid blisters by using moleskin, available in the footcare section of most drug stores. Apply it as soon as you feel a hot spot on your feet.
- Turn back if the weather becomes threatening or you become tired or fall ill.
- Dress in layers in moisture wicking fabrics.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I want to talk energy.

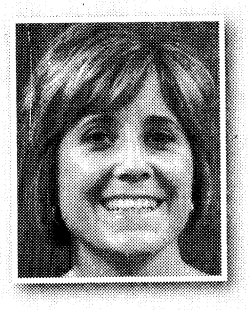
I know everyone is familiar with that all-out energy drain — that exhausted day (or night) when no matter what exciting things are going on, you just can't find the energy to participate.

What can be harder to recognize, though, is a low-grade energy drain. In this case, you may not necessarily feel the classic signs of exhaustion. What you do experience is an increasing lack of get-up-and-go. You may also find it hard to concentrate on your tasks. Your patience gets low and you get frustrated easily (which can be seen in our office weekly).

If this sounds familiar, take heart. Below I want to go over a few ways to help beat the energy zappers that are all around us and boost your energy level.

Increase your magnesium intake: Magnesium is needed for more than 300 biochemical reactions in the body, including breaking down glucose into energy, so when levels are even a little low, energy can drop. Eating a balanced diet can help ensure your vitamin and mineral needs are met.

But if you still find yourself too pooped to pop, you could have a slight magnesium deficiency. The recommended daily intake of magnesium is around 300 milligrams for women and 350 milligrams for men. To make sure you're getting enough, add a handful of almonds, hazelnuts or cashews to your daily diet, increase your intake of whole grains, particularly bran cereal, and eat more fish, especially halibut.



Take a walk around the block: While it may seem as if moving around when you feel exhausted is the quickest route to feeling more exhausted, the opposite is true. Experts say that increasing physical activity, particularly walking, increases energy. A brisk 10-minute walk can get your blood pumping and your heart rate up. Plus its effects can last up to two hours.

Take a power nap: This is my favorite one, but — if my boss is reading — I never take naps at work.

OK, to be serious, research has shown that pushing our brains too hard can zap energy. Studies by the National Institute of Mental Health found that a 60-minute "power nap" can not only reverse the mind-numbing effects of information overload, but may also help us better retain what we have learned. Can we add that as part of our work week?

Don't skip breakfast — or any other meal: Having a meal first thing gives your body the needed fuel to start the day, and this in turn sets the tone for the day.

Studies show that folks who eat breakfast report being in a better mood and have more energy throughout the day. To add to this, eat more whole grains and less sugar. The key here is keeping blood sugar balanced so energy is constant.

When you eat sweets, you get a spike in blood sugar, which gives you an initial burst of energy. But that's followed by a rapid drop in blood sugar, which can leave you feeling wiped out. Most people then eat more sugar, and it becomes a cycle. Do that enough times a day, and by evening you're exhausted.

But whole grains provide a steady release of fuel. If you eat those, your energy will be consistent and by day's end you'll feel less tired.

Power snacking is another great option. A snack that combines protein, a little fat and some fiber, like peanut butter on a whole-wheat cracker or yogurt with a handful of nuts, is a great way to boost that mid afternoon energy slump.

Reduce stress and deal with anger: Stress is the result of anxiety, and anxiety uses up a lot of our energy. It can leave you mentally and physically exhausted, even if you've spent the day in bed. In the same way, unexpressed anger can give a one-two punch to your energy level. When we spend energy trying to contain our anger, it's exhausting. The good news is we can counter these energy killers by programming more relaxation activities into our day.

My favorite way to deal with stress is to yell. OK, not really. The best way I find is to exercise.

Exercise burns off the chemical effects of stress and anger. Another way to "de-stress" is to find relief in quiet pursuits. Listen to music, read a good novel or just talk on the phone. Whatever is relaxing for you will reduce tension and help increase energy.

Check your thyroid function and complete blood cell count: It certainly won't provide an instant boost, but if you're constantly low on energy — especially if you feel sluggish even after a good night's rest — you should talk to your doctor about a blood test for thyroid dysfunction and anemia.

If you're diagnosed with low thyroid function, medication can bring your body back up to the correct levels. In anemia, a reduction in red blood cells can mean your body isn't getting the level of oxygen necessary to sustain energy, so you tire easily.

Drink more water: You may already know it's easy to confuse signals of hunger with thirst (we think we need food when we really need water). But did you know thirst can also masquerade as fatigue?

Dehydration is common in southern Georgia. Sometimes, even slight dehydration can leave you feeling lethargic. The solution is simple: a tall, cool glass of water. This is particularly important to boost energy after exercise, when your body is likely to be craving fluids.

I wish everyone an energy-filled, happy and healthy weekend. Thanks for reading Fit Facts.

Soldiers set to bolster Olympic Team USA

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Tim Hipps

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — Sixteen members of the U.S. Army will compete, coach or serve as training partners for Team USA at the 29th Olympic Games Aug. 8-24 in Beijing.

U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program Greco-Roman heavyweight wrestler Staff Sgt. Dremiel Byers will compete in the 264.5-pound weight class on Aug. 14. Byers, a world champion in 2002, will be accompanied in China by WCAP teammate and training partner Spc. Timothy Taylor, who Byers defeated in a best-of-three finale at the U.S. Olympic Team Trials for Wrestling in Las Vegas. They train together at Fort Carson, Colo., home of the WCAP wrestling and boxing teams.

We're in there pounding it out every day with each other," Byers said. "We really are family."

Byers, 33, of Kings Mountain, N.C., long ago promised his late grandfather, Theodore, that he would win an Olympic medal. He intends to fulfill the promise in Beijing.

"This is more than important," Byers said. "Everything is about having this come to pass. If it is not about getting the medal, I want it out of my life. I did it at the World Championships, and I am going to do it at this Olympics."

WCAP marksman Maj. Michael Anti, a 2004 Olympic silver medalist in three-position rifle shooting, will compete in his fifth Olympics in the 50-meter prone rifle event. Anti, 43, of Winterville, N.C., will lie on his stomach and fire at targets with bull's-eyes 10.4 millimeters wide, much smaller than a dime.

"The Soldiers who are a part of this program are not only outstanding athletes but they are outstanding Soldiers," WCAP Director Willie Wilson said. "Our Soldiers are very appreciative that the Army and America have given them the opportunity to continue to pursue their dreams. They take that very seriously and they're honored to represent the Army and their country."

WCAP rifle coach Maj. David Johnson, a 19-year member of the U.S. National Rifle Team who competed at the 1992 Barcelona Games, also coached Team USA's rifle shooters at the 2004 Athens Games. He was the first Soldier to learn he would be going to Beijing.

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit shooter Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker, under the tutelage of Johnson, won gold medals in the 50-meter and 3-position air rifle events at the 2007 Pan Am Games in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. He will compete in the 10-meter air rifle and the 50-meter three-position rifle event in Beijing.

"I think (Johnson) is probably the top coach in the world," said Parker, 33, a three-time Olympian from Omaha, Neb. "He comes along and always finds a way to push you and make you do better."

Cadet Stephen Scherer, 19, of the United States Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., also will compete in the 10-meter air rifle competition Aug. 11.

WCAP shooter Staff Sgt. Keith Sanderson, 33, of San Antonio, will compete Aug. 16 in the 25-meter rapid fire pistol event.

Army Reserve Staff Sgt. Elizabeth "Libby" Callahan, 56, will make her fourth Olympic appearance in the women's sport pistol event Aug. 13.

USAMU pistol shooter Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szarenski, 40, of Saginaw, Mich., will compete in his third Olympics in the 50-meter free pistol event Aug. 12. He placed fifth at the 2000 Olympics and 13th in 2004.

"To win in Beijing, I'm going to have to shoot 60 excellent shots," Szarenski said after winning a silver medal at the 2007 Pan Am Games. "I've shot the numbers before to win the Olympics. It's not like I have to have the moons aligned in order to win it. I've just got to do what I do, and I'll be alright."

USAMU shotgun shooter Pfc. Vincent Hancock, 19, set a world record in every skeet-shooting event at age 18. He will toe the line Aug. 16 in Beijing.

USAMU shotgun-shooting teammates Spc. Walton Glenn Eller III, 26, of Katy, Texas, and Spc. Jeffrey Holguin, 29, of Yorba Linda, Calif., will compete Aug. 12 in double trap.

"All of us are now shooting together in the marksmanship unit with great competition day in and out among us, and it's just improved all of our games," said Holguin, who joined USAMU in the spring of 2007. "I wanted to compete at the highest level of clay target shooting. To do that, I had to commit myself to the sport. The U.S. Army and the USAMU have given me the necessary resources to compete and win at the level required to win an Olympic medal."

As Holguin makes his Olympic debut, Eller will be competing in his third Olympics. He placed 17th in 2004 and 12th in 2000.

"Growing up, I always wanted to be an Olympian," Eller said. "The Olympics were greater in every aspect than I had anticipated, both in highs and lows. The emotions involved are so great because of the years of training that go into that one day of competition."

Retired Sgt. 1st Class Bret Erickson, 47, of Bennington, Neb., will compete in trap shooting Aug. 10.

Retired WCAP boxing coach Staff Sgt. Basheer Abdullah, the U.S. head coach in the Athens Games, will serve as a technical advisor for Team USA.

WCAP boxer Sgt. 1st Class Christopher Downs won Team USA's light heavyweight spot at the U.S. Olympic Team Trials in Houston but did not get the weight class qualified to compete in Beijing. He will make the trip to serve as a training partner. WCAP fencer Spc. Cody Nagengast will serve as a training partner for Team USA's epee squad.

NBC Universal will present 3,600 hours of Beijing Games coverage. The broadcasts will be available on seven NBC Universal networks: NBC, USA, MSNBC, CNBC, Oxygen, Telemundo and Universal HD. Viewers also can watch the Beijing Games on the NBCOlympics Web site, which will feature about 2,200 total hours of live video coverage as well as schedule information, news and video highlights.

"I'm sure all Americans are excited about having the opportunity to watch and support their Soldiers on TV," Wilson said. "There will be lots of opportunities to see your Soldiers competing at the 2008 Olympics."

Army Ten-Miler announces lottery

ARMY TEN-MILER

WASHINGTON — Army Ten-Miler officials announced that 400 ATM race entries will be offered to military service members through a special, online lottery Monday through Friday.

"This is the Army's race and many military personnel didn't know where they would be in October when the race sold out on April 21," remarked Jim Vandak, race director. "We realize that the 400 military entries will not cover everyone. However, we wanted to do something special for the military and recognize their service to our country."

The military lottery will be conducted online at www.armytenmiler.com. To register for the lottery, participants will need to have or use an e-mail address with a .mil extension.

The Army Ten-Miler lottery is open to all branches of the Armed Forces and winners will be randomly selected Aug. 16.

Registrants will be required to enter a valid credit card, but the card will not be charged unless the registrant is selected as a winner. All registrants will receive an e-mail notifying them if they were selected and a searchable list will be posted on the Army Ten-Miler confirmation page.

All lottery winners will be required to present a military ID to obtain their race packets. All lottery entries are final — no transfers or refunds. Lottery winners can still be drafted onto an existing team for the team competition until Aug. 26.

The Army Ten-Miler is America's largest 10-mile running event. The Army's annual 10-mile race will take place Oct. 5 in Washington, DC. This unique road race has both its start and finish lines at the Pentagon. Race weekend activities include a two-day race expo, fitness clinics, youth runs, 94.7 the Globe post race party and HOOAH tents from Army installations around the world.

The ATM is produced by the U.S. Army Military District of Washington, with proceeds benefiting Army Morale, Welfare and Recreation. The mission of the Army Ten-Miler is to promote the Army, build esprit de corps, support fitness goals, and enhance community relations. For more information, visit www.armytenmiler.com.

Nearly 90 Soldiers competed in the Fort Benning Combatives Tournament Saturday at Smith Fitness Center. Fourteen will represent Fort Benning at the U.S. Army Championship Combatives Tournament in October.

After preliminary elimination rounds, fighters duked it out for first through fourth places in seven weight classes. During the preliminaries, they were allowed to use ground grappling techniques. In the semi-finals and finals, they used intermediate rules, which allowed punching, choking, knee strikes and slaps.

The competition gave competitors a chance to put their skills to the test, said Sgt. 1st Class Keoki Smythe, chief trainer at the Combatives School.

"Competition drives people to improve in their training, because no one wants to come to the competition unprepared," he said.

Pvt. Justin Lawrence, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, entered the competition unsure if he would place. He said the competition was "any man's game."

"No matter what, another Soldier always looks stronger or faster to you. It's a possibility there's a wide open shot for him that you don't see," he said.

It was Lawrence's first time competing in the tournament. He placed second in the lightweight class and will move on to the Army championship.

Fort Benning Combatives Tournament results:

Flyweight
1st — Sgt. Nicholas Bihl, 199th Infantry Brigade, International Student Training Detachment
2nd — Staff Sgt. Jaime Garza, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment

Lightweights
1st — Spc. Chad Corrigon, 197th Inf. Bde.
2nd — Pvt. Justin Lawrence, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Cruiserweights
1st — 1st Lt. Daniel Barrow, Maneuver Captains' Career Course
2nd — 2nd Lt. Robert Carey, BOLC II

Welterweights
1st — Sgt. Thomas Snare, 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.
2nd — Pfc. John Mancino, 5th Ranger Training Bn.

Middleweight
2nd — Spc. Phillip Coates, 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

2nd — Staff Sgt. Phillip McDaniels, 192nd Inf. Bde.

Heavyweights
2nd — Staff Sgt. Jermaine Trevillion, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

"To be in the Army tournament is my dream," he said. "I want to be a UFC fighter, so this is just part of my training to get me there."

Many Soldiers said they were impressed with the skills of the competitors.

"The competition was good this year," said Sgt. Stephen Wyatt of C Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regt., who earned first place in the middleweight class.

He said the training for the Army tournament will be tough but will be worth it. He'll spend his time training mostly on fist and kick drills.

OSC becomes community club, opens membership

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Goodbye Officers' Spouses' Club, hello Community Spouses' Club.

The OSC, which opened as the Officers' Wives' Club in 1952, is now the Community Spouses' Club, or the CSC, and membership is open to the spouses of all service members, retired veterans and Department of Defense Civilians.

This is the first time in the history of the club that all spouses and civilians are allowed to join.

Mary Ring, the club president, hopes the change will increase membership. Last year, the OSC had 140 members. Ring would like to double that with the CSC.

"There are so many people who have so much to offer whether it be friendship or talents," she said.

The club will host the Welcome and Community Activities sign-up, from 2 to 6:30 p.m. Aug. 27 at the Benning Club. Families can talk to chaplains about post chapel services and sign up for clubs and Child and Youth Services.

Club dues are $20 per year and include a monthly newsletter. For more information about the Community Spouses' Club, go to www.fortbenningosc.org/index.html.

The Soldier's R&R Center in Columbus is now open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturdays. The complex includes a gym, ping-pong table, foosball, a weight room, lounge and a big screen TV.

"Every Soldier in the world knows what R&R means, so here it is," said Kerrie Edwards, a volunteer with the center. "You can come here. You can rest; you can relax. It costs you nothing. We want no donations. This is our service to you."

The center, located at 3564 Forest Road, is a ministry of Edgewood Baptist Church, but it's open to all Soldiers, regardless of religious beliefs, Edwards said.

"Many of us have family, acquaintances and friends in the military," he said. "We understand the burden they bear. There is such a deep sense of gratitude for what they are doing."

Local lad kneads dough for college

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Willie Andrews is baking bread and making dough.

He may be only 11, but Willie has big dreams, which include culinary school and an Ivy League education, preferably from Harvard. To reach these goals, he bakes cookies, cakes and breads and sells them at the Market on Broadway every Saturday in uptown Columbus.

Selling his cakes and cookies to raise money for college was his own idea, said Sally Andrews, Willie's grandmother. Just like it was his idea at age 4 to make some slice-and-bake cookies all by himself.

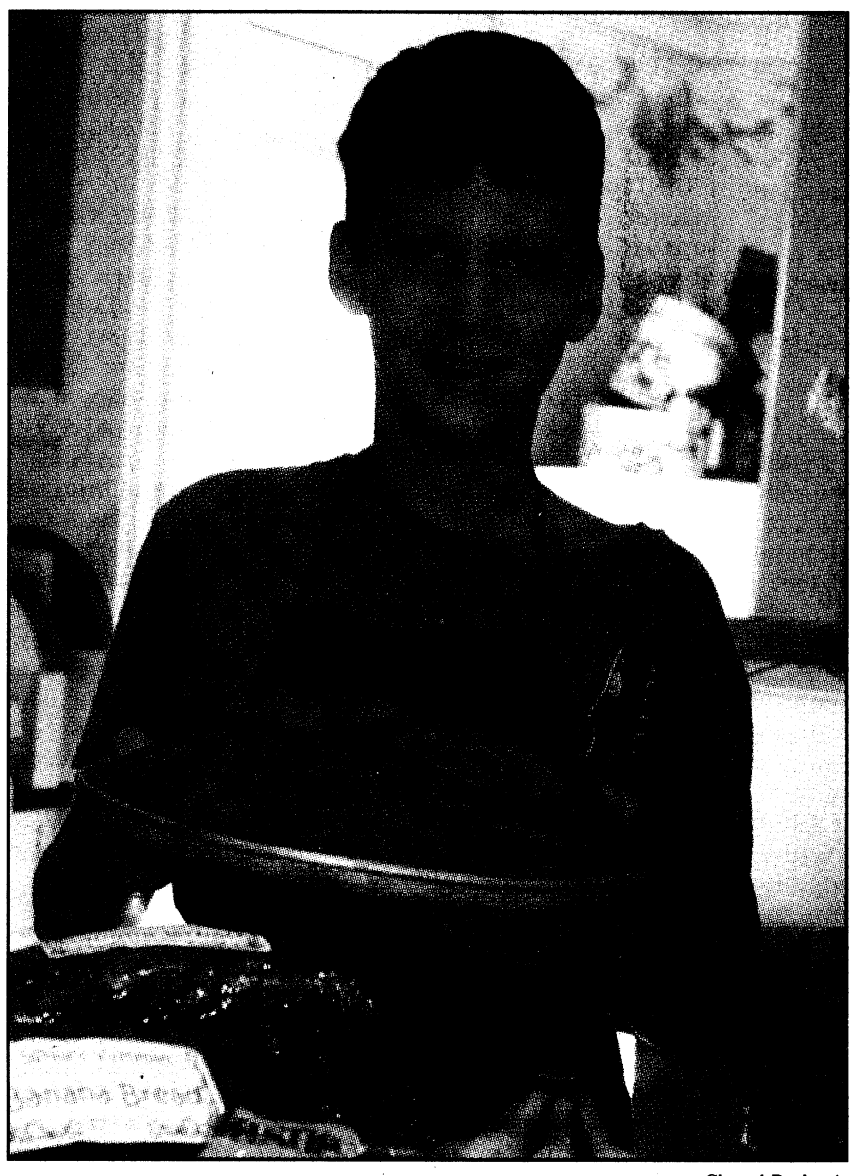
Willie learned to love baking by watching his grandmother. Now, he has a book of "top secret" recipes passed down from Sally's great grandmother.

Willie's version of her family's pound cake is even better than her own, Sally said.

"When I started all I was baking was cookies and pound cakes," said Willie, who enjoys sharing his goods with family and friends. "It gives you an opportunity to do something (to) help people. When I bake, I just feel good."

Willie has been selling his wares on Broadway under the name of Willie's Yummies for more than a year now. He has since developed a loyal following and sells out weekly.

"We have people who come back to our spot looking for him because they know what he bakes is good," said retired Maj. Bob Andrews, Willie's grandfather.



Cheryl Rodewig
Willie Andrews, 11, holds a plate of chocolate chip cookies after a full day of baking. Willie sells his cookies, breads and cakes at the Market on Broadway in Columbus.

While Sally has been his culinary mentor, Bob teaches his grandson how to handle the money. Willie buys his own ingredients and rents the space for his booth. He's even planning to purchase a second oven to speed up the cooking process.

"We don't buy the materials for him. He has to buy them," Bob said. "So he learns about the overhead and the expense of doing business."

Willie donates a portion of his earnings to charity, a practice he learned from his grandparents. The rest he saves.

"This is my cell phone, and it's not very good," said Willie, holding a not so new, not so small mobile phone. "Some kids would save money for cell phones and all, but I think it's better to save for college."

Willie bakes four days a week during the summer, from early in the morning to mid-afternoon. He's starting middle school this year and plans to continue baking through high school.

"He's an entrepreneur at heart," Bob said. "He's making good food, and he's making a little money at it."

Some of the "good food" Willie makes includes oatmeal raisin, white chocolate oatmeal cranberry and chocolate chip cookies. His breads come in banana, strawberry and apple, and for special occasions, he's made carrot cake and red velvet cake.

A loaf of bread is $7 and a pack of three cookies is $3. To order, call 706-323-0408 or 706-566-1886.

Strong relationships make strong Soldiers. That's the idea behind Strong Bonds, a chaplain-led program designed to encourage and educate Soldiers while strengthening important relationships in their lives.

Participants attend retreats where they can take a timeout to focus on their personal lives or recharge after a deployment, said Chaplain (Maj.) Walt Hoskins, who will lead a retreat for single Soldiers Aug. 15-16 in the Tennessee mountains.

Soldiers will participate in a team building exercise on the Ocoee River and attend workshops on communication, financial responsibility and "How to Avoid Marrying a Jerk (or Jerkette)."

"We're teaching them how to make right choices," said Capt. Carl Purgerson, company commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, U.S. Army Infantry Center, who organized the retreat.

Whether those decisions relate to combat, credit cards or selecting a mate, weighing and understanding options is important, he said.

"A private may not realize the benefit he's going to get out of this, but he will recognize its value when he's a team leader and he's able to communicate with his Soldiers, or when he gets engaged and he's made a good selection for a mate," Purgerson said. "That's the whole goal."

A second retreat, open to Soldiers and their spouses, will be Aug. 22-24 in Panama City, Fla. Classes will cover personality traits, the five love languages and keys to marital success. Activities like "marriage survivor" are designed to bring

Local military wives premiere on Silent Ranks Aug. 17

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The pilot episode of Silent Ranks, a talk show featuring five military wives, will debut at 7 p.m. Aug. 17 on cable TV of East Alabama, channel 7. The show will feature a different topic related to the military every week, but the first airing will center around meeting the cast.

"The reason I picked these five very different women is because I feel our audience will connect with one of us," said Kelly Klein, the show's producer.

The newest to Army life, Beth Boucher has been married less than a year. She's hoping to learn more about military life from fellow cast members, maybe even memorize a few Army acronyms, she said.

Shinene Currington has been married for 17 years and has a 9-year-old son. She knows the military lingo, but she's about to begin a new deployment with the 3rd Ranger Battalion. Although Edwards served in the Army for seven years, it wasn't until he visited Afghanistan as a civilian that he was struck by what Soldiers go through.

After seeing the challenges Soldiers face, he decided to create a place where they could unwind — "a home away from home," he said.

Soldiers can pass the time with books, games and free Internet. A dinner will be provided every Saturday, as well as snacks throughout the day. For those seeking Christian fellowship and study, there will be devotionals Saturday evenings and Bible studies during the week.

As the center develops, there may be day trips to places like Six Flags or Pine Mountain, Ga., said Warrant Officer Tim Parker, a Fort Benning Soldier who volunteers with the center.

Parker said he remembers being away from his family during training, and how hard it can be to find good, clean entertainment off post.

"I have an option for you that may be a safer alternative than some of these clubs out in town," he said. "There are no strings attached to it. You can come and you can go. But we would love to be able to take care of you and your family and meet any needs that you may have while you're here."

Edwards said the center is still in its early stages, but it is ready for Soldiers now.

"We want them to feel welcome," he said. "There is no other element within our society and culture that sacrifices so much for the nation. They ask nothing in return, but it is in our power to give it to them, and we will."

For more information, call Edwards at 706-329-7914 or visit www.edgewoodbaptistchurch.us/military.html.

part of life, as her husband, a Marine based out of Montgomery, Ala., retires at the end of August.

"I would like to see us do a show that will be embraced not only by the military but also the community that we live in," said Currington, who has been thinking about the show every day since she was selected for it in May. "I think it serves a really unique purpose — a platform for the military spouse."

The panel also includes Klein, a Reservist married for six years to a Fort Benning drill sergeant, Jessica Meadows, a mother of three who works full time and has been married for 10 years, and Annette Quinto, who comes from a military family and has been married for four years.

These women know about deployments, PCSing and other challenges that go along with being in the military, but they want to set the record straight about who they are, Meadows said, as military wives and as independent women.

If Army Wives is a soap opera, then this is reality TV, Quinto said.

"The thing I'm most excited about is just being me, not putting on a persona but actually showing people (who) military wives are as people, as mothers and as friends," she said.

During the show, the women will talk briefly about the previous episode of Army Wives. They will also do reviews of movies, restaurants and local businesses.

The goal is to help those transitioning to the tricommunity, Klein said. Guests featured on the show will cover a broad range of topics, from types of plants grown in the area to nearby recreation centers for children.

"You are almost lost when you move to a new base," she said. "We want people to watch the show and not have to wait a year to get to know this place. We want to help make it feel like your hometown."

Silent Ranks will air on Sundays from 7 to 8 p.m. and again on Wednesdays from 8 to 9 p.m.

The name of the show, which was suggested by two military spouses, comes from the title of a poem about military wives.

"It talks about how we're behind the Soldiers, supporting them," Klein said. "We didn't sign the papers, and we don't wear the uniform, (but) we go through trials and tribulations."

The five wives on Silent Ranks will be anything but silent. There will be debates and banter, Klein said, but all with the purpose of sharing information and letting viewers get to know real military spouses.

Viewers can also have family photos featured in the show's introduction. Klein is looking for pictures of military families, whether in uniform or not, color or black and white. They can have any subject, she said, from weddings and homecomings to a simple posed picture.

Retreats: Teach about communication, relationships

couples closer while helping them understand their differences.

"It's not psychotherapy; it's just a communications workshop," Hoskins said. "It gives the couple immediate tools they can use. When we talk about communication, we also talk about how to communicate in a fight — how do you keep it from blowing up into something bigger? We talk about how to discuss the issue rationally, calmly, where both sides understand. And it works. We get great reviews. I have an e-mail from our last retreat, and one of the comments was 'It saved our marriage.'"

Soldiers don't need to worry about rank at either retreat, Purgerson said.

"It's very informal," he said. "We encourage a lot of the senior leadership to come, as well. It doesn't have to be just the privates, the specialists and the sergeants. That sergeant major who's been married 22 years and that E-7 who's been divorced twice, they bring a lot to the table when we have these open discussions."

The retreats are informative and entertaining, Hoskins said, and Soldiers "would be crazy not to take advantage of them."

"It's going to be a fun time," he said. "We know Army Families are strong, because of how resilient they are in regard to moving so frequently, but after a while, everybody needs to take a knee, and this is a great way to do that."

To sign up for either retreat, call Purgerson at 706-545-0554.

The registration deadline for the first retreat is Thursday. The deadline for the second retreat is Aug. 19. Transportation to the Ocoee is included, but single Soldiers will need to bring their own bedding and toiletries. Couples are responsible for child care during the event and transportation to Panama City.

Q: I recently received a telephone call in which a telemarketer offered to send me $200 in gas coupons for a small handling fee of $3.95. He asked for my bank account information so he could debit my account. Does this sound suspicious?

A: Yes, it sounds like a scam.

First, you should never give your bank account or credit card account information to someone who calls you. This type of information is a prime target of identity thieves, who can use it to cause you great financial harm. Remember that the telemarketer called you, which means you have no idea if he really is who he says he is, or if he really works for the company he claims to represent. Do not give any such caller any personal financial information.

Second, why would a business give you $200 in gas coupons for $3.95? It doesn't make sense from a business perspective, though scammers can be very creative in their answers. The person may tell you that he represents a marketing firm that is trying to get people to use a certain brand of gas, or to get customers to become loyal customers of a particular gas station. You should look beyond any explanation to the financial bottom line however – it is "too good to be true" that a company would give you something worth $200 for less than $4.

Commonly, individuals who have given their financial information to such "telemarketers" have not received the promised $200 in gas coupons, and have found hundreds of dollars of unauthorized charges to their accounts. The best advice when receiving an unsolicited telephone call offering something of significant value for a fraction of its worth is to simply hang up.

Contact the Legal Assistance Division if you have been victimized in such a scam. For more information, call 706-545-3281.

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

Renovations will begin on the Kelley Hill chapel approximately Sept. 1, said Maj. David Lile, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team chaplain.

The civilian-contracted construction company responsible for many other structural changes on Kelley Hill will renovate the chapel's sanctuary, fellowship classrooms and fellowship hall.

"We are looking to have renovations complete and services resumed by the holidays," Lile said.

Although the chapel is not currently serviceable, the 3rd HBCT's unit ministry teams have planned activities. Two retreats will be held in September for single and married Soldiers and their families.

Unit religious representatives will also continue reintegrating the "Sledgehammer" Soldiers after the brigade's 15-month stint in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"It has been a smooth transition for the 3rd HBCT from the religious aspect," said Lile, who is new to the brigade.

"Chaplain (Lt. Col. Timothy) Sowers and his team of chaplains and chaplain's assistants have done a great job helping Soldiers make the transition from combat to garrison. For an inbound chaplain, that's a blessing."

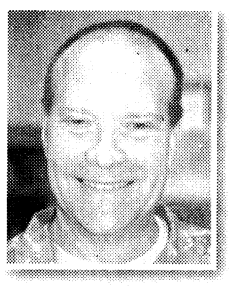
Author suggests creating a mission statement for your family to become more effective

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Are you aware that when a jet takes off or when the Space Shuttle thrusts off the pad at Cape Canaveral, it is "off-track" 90 percent of the time?

Amazing, isn't it, that something that critical is far from perfect; yet it's able to accomplish its mission with incredible accuracy. Parenting is a lot like that. About 90 percent of the time, it's easy to feel off track. But by continuing to monitor the situation, adjust course and stay steady, we can accomplish our mission as parents with incredible accuracy. How do we do that?



Author Steven Covey took his wildly successful book 7 Habits of Highly Effective People and applied the principles toward the family. And this is what he came up with when it comes to the 7 Habits of Highly Effective Families:

Habit No. 1: Be proactive — you be the agent of change in your family. Perhaps your home life isn't what you want it to be. Perhaps you have a vision for a family where there is harmony and peace instead of fighting and frustration. You can make the difference. It is said the definition of insanity is to do the same thing and expect different results. To be proactive means we need to be a transitional person, one who can make the changes where they need to be made in order to make a positive difference.

Habit No. 2: Begin with the end in mind. Where do you want your family to be in a year? How about in five years? What goals do you have, as a family? Covey encourages each family to create a family mission statement — where you want to go, what you want to be as a family. Then use the statement to keep on track and keep the end in mind.

I know several families who have taken a weekend camping trip with the sole purpose of hammering out a mission statement together. What better way to define for yourself, your mate and your children what "our team" is all about. Write it down; have everybody sign it; frame it — it will be a beacon to guide you for a lifetime.

Habit No. 3: Put first things first. If your family is a priority, then be proactive by focusing on those important things that will support your mission statement.

It's been said you can tell what any person's values are by looking at their calendar and their checkbook. In our busy world of work, school and extra-curricular activities, it is difficult to find time together as a family. If you do not plan to be together as a family, it will not just happen. Put your family first by making it a priority. It can be a challenge, but the payoff is huge if we'll just be intentional, not accidental, in making time for one another.

What are the other habits? Meet me here next week and we'll take one more look at how you can build a love that will last a lifetime with those God has given you. In the meantime, if you'd benefit from talking to some "family coaches" on how to get started in practicing the seven habits of highly effective families, call the Chaplain Family Life Center, Building 2606, Soldier's Plaza, at 706-545-9014.

Newnan, quaint and convenient

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Newnan, Ga., is convenient. If I'd been forced to pick a single adjective to describe the city of Newnan in the last few years, that's the word I would've used.

Newnan is just about 65 miles north of here on I-85, 40 miles southwest of Atlanta. Which makes it a convenient place to fill up on gas or food before you hit the 285 bypass if you're headed in that direction. For my family, Newnan has always been what those marketing types like to call a "destination city." It's where we stop on our way back from anywhere north of Atlanta. Our destination: a gas station with a clean bathroom. How convenient.

Last year, after a particularly long drive, I was seduced by a Starbucks sign and ventured a little further into Newnan past the Citgo and the Cracker Barrel in search of a good cup of coffee. Just a half mile to the west of I-85, I discovered a charming plaza called Ashley Place, an artsy little mall with streetscapes and fountains, much like The Landings in Columbus, only bigger. My daughters and I enjoyed ourselves there for a couple for hours and promised ourselves we'd return real soon.

But it actually took another Newnan attraction to draw us back to Ashley Place. The city hosts Market Day the first Saturday of each month on the square of the historic Coweta County courthouse. I love a good farmer's market. I'm a regular at the Saturday morning Market on Broadway in uptown Columbus, which is still struggling to establish itself as a viable attraction here.

On a good day, the Market on Broadway spans half a block at best. The Market Day in Newnan draws more than 60 vendors and thousands of shoppers, I'm told. It's a good example of what the Columbus market might one day become.

So I set out to see for myself, and I figured to make a day of it in Newnan, to visit the market and the mall. The market, which runs from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., was much bigger than the Columbus market, but it featured mostly artists and crafters and very few local farmers. Lots of jewelry and hand-stitched aprons, very few homegrown tomatoes. Really good pepper jellies but not one organically grown pepper, something I regularly find in abundance at the Market on Broadway.

That's the bad news.

Ah, but Newnan is located smack-dab in the middle of the city's quaint historic district, which has benefited greatly from a recent $3.5 million streetscapes project. The city capitalized on its history as a prosperous cotton and railroad town and turned its nine-block nucleus into an attractive business center with 19th century charm.

I circled the market in less than an hour, but spent twice that long browsing through antiques shops and specialty stores on the square. Given more time, I could have cheerfully spent the whole day strolling through the district, which is laid out in a traditional grid pattern and includes a nice variety of restaurants and clubs and an improv theater.

But I promised the girls we'd go back-to-school shopping, so we spent the remainder of the afternoon at Ashley Place. And I found the afternoon nearly as enjoyable as the morning. I'm no snob. The plaza was a pleasure with a mix of standard mall fare — Dillard's and Yankee Candle and the like — and quite a few independently owned shops and less traditional restaurants, like Five Brothers burgers and fries-to-die-for.

Yes, Newnan is convenient. It's a great place to visit when you want to get out of town but don't want to hassle with the traffic in Atlanta.

It's a great place to kill a few hours on your way to somewhere or on your way home.

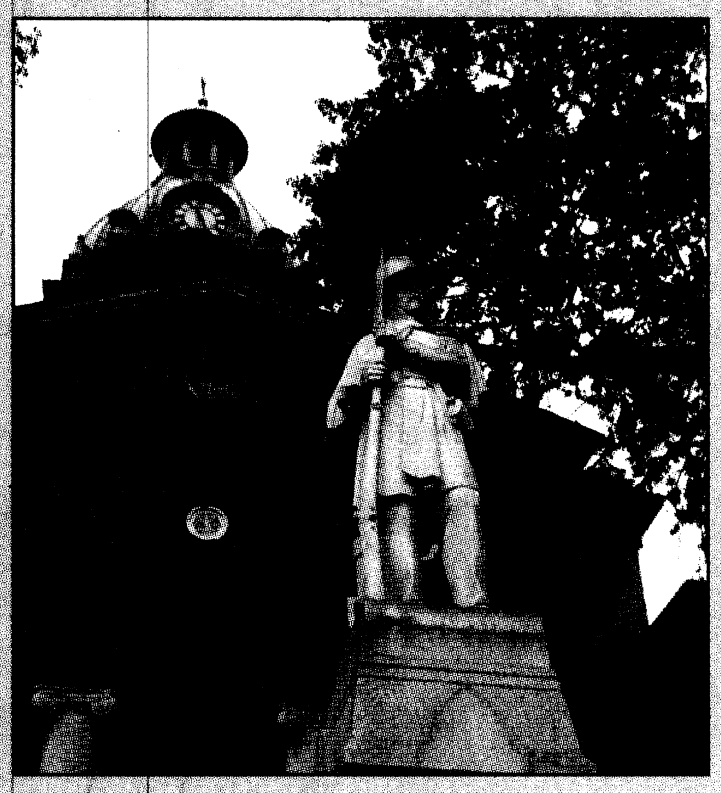
Market Day, the first Saturday of every month, draws more than 60 vendors to the courthouse square in Newnan, Ga. The market features the kinds of arts and crafts one typically finds at a traditional Southern fair, rather than a farmer's market. Pictured here is one of only two produce tables at the market last Saturday. The flutist pictured on the left, surrounded by vendors selling hand-stitched dresses, beaded jewelry and raw honey, was one of several local artists who sell their music, paintings, photography and pottery at the market.

Photos by Bridgett Siter



Newnan was settled in 1828 and named for Gen. Daniel Newnan, who commanded the Georgia Volunteers in the Creek War from 1812 to 1814. The North Carolina native also served as Georgia's secretary of state from 1825 to 1827 and a congressman from 1831 to 1833.

The city of Newnan was laid out in a nine-block grid pattern centering on a courthouse built in the Neo-Greek Revival style. The courthouse features a dome-shaped clock tower rising more than 100 feet and a bell that still chimes on the hour.

The courthouse was the site of the 1948 murder trial of John Wallace, made famous by Margaret Anne Barnes' book Murder in Coweta County, which was made into a movie starring Johnny Cash and Andy Griffith in 1983.

In its infancy, Newnan was a cotton town, the seat of Coweta County. Its leading citizens invested in the railroad in the mid-1800s and brought prosperity, establishing it as one of the wealthiest towns in the country, per capita.

The R.D. Cole Manufacturing Company, a former saw mill, constructed most of the homes in Newnan from the 1880s until well into the 20th century, replacing many early wood framed structures with ornate brick homes.

Newnan escaped the ravages of the Civil War — the closest it came to was the battle of Brown's Mill, three miles south of town — so many of its historic homes still stand and have earned Newnan the title "City of Homes."

These days the town encompasses 19 square miles and has approximately 27,000 residents. City planners project rapid growth over the next several years, due largely to the town's proximity to Atlanta and its "strategic" location near Interstate 85. Developers work to promote Newnan's small town charm and its Southern heritage.

Notable local residents have included author Erskine Caldwell, humorist Lewis Grizzard, cartoonist David Boyd, pianist Charles Wadsworth and country music stars Doug Stone and Alan Jackson.

THE SISTERHOOD OF THE TRAVELING PANTS 2

Lifelong friends (America Ferrara, Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel and Blake Lively) embark on separate paths for their first year of college and the summer beyond, but remain in touch by sharing their experiences with each other as they always have — with honesty and humor. Discovering their individual strengths, fears, talents and capacity for love through the choices they make, they come to value the bond they share and the immeasurable power of their friendship.

PINEAPPLE EXPRESS

Lazy stoner Dale Denton (Seth Rogen) has only one reason to visit his equally lazy dealer Saul Silver (James Franco): to purchase a rare new strain of weed called Pineapple Express. But when Dale becomes the only witness to a murder by a crooked cop and the city's most dangerous drug lord, he panics and dumps his roach of Pineapple Express at the scene.

SWING VOTE

Kevin Costner plays Bud Johnson, an apathetic, beer-slinging, lovable loser. In Swing Vote, Johnson's 12-year-old daughter, Molly, registers her father to vote and on election day, it's his vote that decides the election.

Swing Vote stars Dennis Hopper, Nathan Lane, Kelsey Grammer and George Lopez. It's rated PG-13 for language.

THE MUMMY: TOMB OF THE DRAGON EMPEROR

Explorer Rick O'Connell (Brendan Fraser) combats the resurrected Han emperor from the catacombs of ancient China to the Himalayas. O'Connell has his family's help in stopping a mummy awakened from a 2,000-year-old curse.

Jet Li, Maria Bello and Luke Ford star in The Mummy: Tomb of the Dragon Emperor, which is rated PG-13 for adventure action and violence.

STEP BROTHERS

When Robert (Richard Jenkins) and Nancy (Mary Steenburgen) marry and move in together, Brennan and Dale are forced to live with each other as stepbrothers.

Step Brothers is rated R for crude and sexual content and language.

THE X-FILES: I WANT TO BELIEVE

This movie is a stand-alone story in the tradition of some of the show's most acclaimed and beloved episodes and takes the complicated relationship between Fox Mulder (David Duchovny) and Dana Scully (Gillian Anderson) in unexpected directions. Mulder continues his quest for the truth, and Scully, the passionate, ferociously intelligent physician, remains inextricably tied to Mulder's pursuits.

The X-Files: I Want to Believe is rated PG-13 for violent and thematic material.

THE DARK KNIGHT

MAMMA MIA!

Meryl Streep leads an all-star cast, including Pierce Brosnan, Colin Firth and Christine Baranski in the film adaptation of a musical featuring the music of ABBA. A bride-to-be locates three men, one of whom might be her father, and invites them to her wedding on a Greek island.

JOURNEY TO THE CENTER OF THE EARTH

A science professor's (Brendan Fraser) untraditional hypotheses have made him the laughing stock of the academic community. But on an expedition in Iceland, he and his nephew stumble upon a major discovery that launches them on a thrilling journey deep beneath the Earth's surface, where they travel through never-before-seen worlds and encounter a variety of unusual creatures.

Journey to the Center of the Earth is rated PG for adventure action.

SPACE CHIMPS

Three NASA chimps are sent to a far-away galaxy. Two have "The Right Stuff" and the other is a good-natured goofball with the "wrong stuff."

Space Chimps is rated G.

HELLBOY II: THE GOLDEN ARMY

After an ancient truce existing between humankind and the invisible realm of the fantastic is broken, hell on Earth is ready to erupt.

Now, it's up to the planet's toughest, roughest superhero Hellboy (Ron Perlman) to battle the merciless dictator and his marauders.

His expanding team in the Bureau for Paranormal Research and Defense — pyrokinetic girlfriend Liz (Selma Blair), aquatic empath Abe (Doug Jones) and protoplasmic mystic Johann (John Alexander) — will travel between the surface strata and the unseen magical one, where creatures of fantasy become corporeal.

Hellboy II: The Golden Army is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action, violence and language.

MEET DAVE

The man turns out to be a spaceship operated by 100 human-looking aliens who are one-quarter inch tall and seeking a way to save their planet. Complications ensue when their captain falls in love with an Earth woman who's always picked losers for previous romances.

HANCOCK

There are heroes and superheroes, and then there's Hancock (Will Smith). With great power comes great responsibility — everyone knows that — everyone, that is, but Hancock. Edgy, conflicted, sarcastic and misunderstood, Hancock's well-intentioned heroics might get the job done and save countless lives, but always seem to leave jaw-dropping damage in their wake. The public has finally had enough.

Jason Bateman and Charlize Theron star.

Welcome!

The Alabama Clean Water Partnership, Chattahoochee-Chipola Clean Water Partnership, Middle Chattahoochee Water Coalition, and Columbus Water Works, in cooperation with multiple partners, are proud to bring you this informative insert. Our intention is to provide information about our incredible natural resources - the Chattahoochee and Chipola River Basins - and the many innovative projects underway to enhance and protect the quality and quantity of the water that flows past our towns and homes. The Chattahoochee and Chipola Rivers are vital life lines for all who live near them, with citizens depending on them for drinking water, agricultural production, recreational opportunities, and manufacturing.

The Chattahoochee-Chipola Clean Water Partnership is part of the statewide river basin management initiative called the Alabama Clean Water Partnership , a coalition of public and private individuals, companies, organizations and governing bodies working together to protect and preserve water resources and aquatic ecosystems throughout the state and in the shared watersheds of neighboring states. The goals of the Partnership are to link local basin efforts in order to maximize resources, encourage public and private investment, and empower citizens to become involved in watershed protection. Representatives from each river basin, as well as representatives from diverse interest groups, serve on a statewide board of directors. In each of the ten delineated river basins, such as the Chattahoochee-Chipola, a steering committee composed of local stakeholders with assorted interests in water resources and aquatic life is working to foster, coordinate, and encourage communication throughout the basin, and to provide guidance in the prioritization of resources.

The Chattahoochee-Chipola Clean Water Partnership, established in 2000, is sponsored by the Tri-Rivers Waterway Development Association, with Columbus Water Works leading the Steering Committee. To find out more about the Alabama Clean Water Partnership and its associated basin initiatives, go to www.cleanwaterpartnership.org or call: Billy Houston, Chattahoochee-Chipola Facilitator at (334) 688-1000 or Allison Jenkins, ACWP Statewide Coordinator at (205) 266-6285.

The Chattahoochee & Chipola River Basins

The Chattahoochee River Basin

The Chattahoochee River, a part of the greater Apalachicola-Chattahoochee-Flint (ACF) River Basin, is the 11th largest river in the United States. The name "Chattahoochee" is thought to come from a Creek Indian word meaning "river of painted rocks". Arising out of the Blue Ridge Mountains north of Atlanta as a cold-water mountain spring, the Chattahoochee River flows 434 miles to its confluence with the Flint River and Lake Seminole in Florida. The Apalachicola River flows out of Lake Seminole, through Apalachicola Bay and its associated estuary, and into the Gulf of Mexico. The Chattahoochee River Basin drains an area of approximately 5.62 million acres (8,770 square miles) with approximately 70 percent of the basin in Georgia and 30 percent in Alabama. Forestry and agriculture are the predominant land uses in the Chattahoochee River Basin. Millions of people rely on the Chattahoochee River as their main source of drinking water, including the metropolitan Atlanta area.

The Chipola River Basin

As part of the larger Apalachicola-Chattahoochee-Flint River Basin (ACF), the Chipola River is the third largest tributary to the Apalachicola River, with the total area of its basin being approximately 1,280 square miles within Alabama and Florida. The Alabama portion of the Chipola River Basin is 259 square miles, which is approximately 20 percent of the entire drainage. The remaining 80 percent (1,021 sq. miles) in Florida, constitutes over half of the Apalachicola River Basin. In the portion of the basin found in Alabama, major land uses are split evenly between forestry and row crop agriculture.

The sensitive and ecologically important spring-fed headwaters of the Chipola River emerge from the Marianna Lowlands of Southeastern Alabama in Houston County, south of Dothan, with a small portion of the river basin also lying along the eastern edge of Geneva County, Alabama. Two large creeks – Big Creek and Cowarts Creek – constitute the major tributaries of the Chipola River in Alabama. Except for these primary tributaries, the Chipola is fed mostly by groundwater. In Florida, the river "disappears" underground for a short distance near Marianna, Florida, flowing through predominantly limestone geology until it flows out of the limestone highlands and empties onto the coastal plain, finishing its journey above ground to Apalachicola Bay and the Gulf of Mexico, one of the most productive shrimp and oyster habitats in the United States.

What is a Watershed?

A watershed is an area of land that drains into a particular body of water such as a stream, river or lake. Any body of water and its drainage area make up a distinct watershed in which all living things are interconnected by one basic and dynamic element: water. The topography (lay) of the land helps direct the flow of water (downhill) and defines a watershed's boundaries.

What we do in the watersheds where we live has a direct affect on the quality of water in our local streams. As rainwater flows across the land, it picks up and carries pollutants to our creeks, rivers and lakes. We commonly refer to this as stormwater and we refer to this type of pollution as polluted runoff or nonpoint source pollution because it does not come from any one source. Land uses such as forestry operations, mining, road construction, urban development, and certain farming practices can increase nonpoint source pollution and negatively impact water quality, if they are not properly managed. Common homeowner practices such as washing the car, applying fertilizers and pesticides, and improperly disposing of pet and household wastes can also lead to nonpoint source pollution. Practicing sound and careful management, or Best Management Practices, plus a little common sense and courtesy for others, can minimize and control the impact we have on water quality.

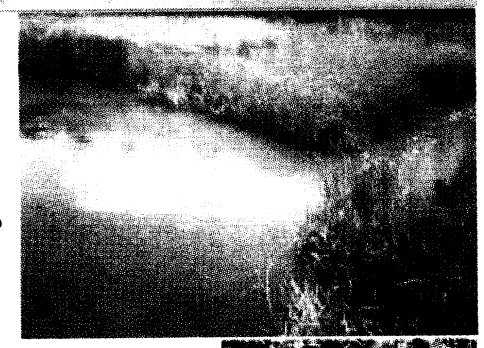
What's the problem?

Stormwater runoff occurs when precipitation from rain or snowmelt flows over the ground. Impervious surfaces like driveways, sidewalks, and streets prevent stormwater from naturally soaking into the ground.

Stormwater can pick up debris, chemicals, dirt, and other pollutants and flow into a storm sewer system or directly to a lake, stream, river, wetland, or coastal water. Anything that enters a storm sewer system is discharged untreated into the waterbodies we use for swimming, fishing, and providing drinking water.

The effects of pollution



Polluted stormwater runoff can have many adverse effects on plants, fish, animals, and people.

- Sediment can cloud the water and make it difficult or impossible for aquatic plants to grow. Sediment also can destroy aquatic habitats
- Excess nutrients can cause algae blooms. When algae die, they sink to the bottom and decompose in a process that removes oxygen from the water. Fish and other aquatic organisms can't exist in water with low dissolved oxygen levels.
- Bacteria and other pathogens can wash into swimming areas and create health hazards, often making beach closures necessary.
- Debris—plastic bags, six-pack rings, bottles, and cigarette butts—washed into waterbodies can choke, suffocate, or disable aquatic life like ducks, fish, turtles, and birds.
- Household hazardous wastes like insecticides, pesticides, paint, solvents, used motor oil, and other auto fluids can poison aquatic life. Land animals and people can become sick or die from eating diseased fish and shellfish or ingesting polluted water.

- Polluted stormwater often affects drinking water sources. This, in turn, can affect human health and increase drinking water treatment costs.

Recycle or properly dispose of household products that contain chemicals, such as insecticides, pesticides, paint, solvents, and used motor oil and other auto fluids. Don't pour them onto the ground or into storm drains.

Lawn care

Excess fertilizers and pesticides applied to lawns and gardens wash off and pollute streams. In addition, yard clippings and leaves can wash into storm drains and contribute nutrients and organic matter to streams.

- Don't overwater your lawn. Consider using a soaker hose instead of a sprinkler.
- Use pesticides and fertilizers sparingly. When use is necessary, usethese chemicals in the recommended amounts. Use organic mulch or safer pest control methods whenever possible.
- Compost or mulch yard waste. Don't leave it in the street or sweep it into storm drains or streams.
- Cover piles of dirt or mulch being used in landscaping projects.

Auto care

Washing your car and degreasing auto parts at home can send detergents and other contaminants through the storm sewer system. Dumping automotive fluids into storm drains has the same result as dumping the materials directly into a waterbody.

- Use a commercial car wash that treats or recycles its wastewater, or wash your car on your yard so the water infiltrates into the ground.
- Repair leaks and dispose of used auto fluids and batteries at designated drop-off or recycling locations.

Septic Systems

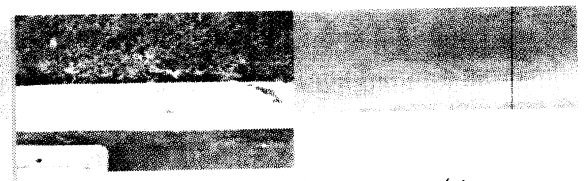
Leaking and poorly maintained septic systems release nutrients and pathogens (bacteria andviruses) that can be picked up by stormwater and discharged into nearby waterbodies. Pathogens can cause publich ealth problems and environmental concerns.

- Inspect your system every 3 years and pump your tank as necessary (every 3 to 5 years).
- Don't dispose of household hazardous waste in sinks or toilets.

Pet Waste

Pet waste can bea major source of bacteria and excess nutrients in local waters.

- When walking your pet, remember to pick up the waste and dispose of it properly. Flushing pet waste is the best disposal method. Leaving pet waste on the ground increases public health risks by allowing harmful bacteria and nutrients to wash into the storm drain and eventually into local waterbodies.



Education is essential to changing people's behavior.Signs and markers near storm drains warn residents that pollutants entering the drains will be carried untreated into a local waterbody.

Residential Landscaping

Permeable Pavement —Traditional concrete and asphalt don't allow water to soak into the ground. Instead these surfaces rely on storm drains to divert unwanted water. Permeable pavement systems allow rain and snowmelt to soak through, decreasing stormwater runoff.

Rain Barrels —You can collect rainwater from rooftops in mosquito-proof containers. The water can be used later on lawn or garden areas.

Rain Gardens and Grassy Swales —Specially designed areas planted with native plants can provide natural places for rainwater to collect and soak into the ground. Rain from rooftop areas or paved areas can be diverted into these areas rather than into storm drains.

Vegetated Filter Strips —Filter strips are areas of native grass or plants created along roadways or streams. They trap the pollutants stormwater picks up as it flows across driveways and streets.

Dirt, oil, and debris that collect in parking lots and paved areas can bewashed into the storm sewer system and eventually enter local waterbodies.

- Sweep up litter and debris from sidewaiks, driveways and parking lots, especially around storm drains.
- Cover grease storage and dumpsters and keep them clean to avoid leaks.
- Report any chemical spill to the local hazardous waste cleanup team. They'll know the best way to keep spills from harming the environment.

Erosion controls that aren't maintained can cause excessive amounts of sediment and debris to be carried into the stormwater system. Construction vehicles can leak fuel, oil, and other harmful fluidsthat can be picked up by stormwater and deposited into local waterbodies.

- Divert stormwater away from disturbed or exposed areas of the construction site.
- Install silt fences, vehicle mud removal areas, vegetative cover, and other sediment and erosion controls and properly maintain them, especially after rainstorms.
- Prevent soil erosion by minimizing disturbed areas during construction projects, and seed and mulch bare areas as soon as possible.

Lack of vegetation on streambanks can lead to erosion. Overgrazed pastures can also contribute excessive amounts of sediment to local waterbodies. Excess fertilizers and pesticides can poison aquatic animals and lead to destructive algae blooms. Livestock in streams can contaminate waterways with bacteria, making them unsafe for human contact.

- Keep livestock away from streambanks and provide them a water source away from waterbodies.
- Store and apply manure away from waterbodies and in accordance with a nutrient management plan.
- Vegetate riparian areas along waterways.
- Rotate animal grazing to prevent soil erosion in fields.
- Apply fertilizers and pesticides according to label instructions to save money and minimize pollution.

Uncovered fueling stations allow spills to be washed into storm drains. Cars waiting to be repaired can leak fuel, oil, and other harmful fluids that can be picked up by stormwater.

- Clean up spills immediately and properly dispose of cleanup materials.
- Provide cover over fueling stations and design or retrofit facilities for spill containment.
- Properly maintain fleet vehicles to prevent oil, gas, and other discharges from being washed into local waterbodies.
- Install and maintain oil/water separators.

Improperly managed logging operations can result in erosion and sedimentation.

- Conduct preharvest planning to prevent erosion and lower costs.
- Use logging methods and equipment that minimize soil disturbance.
- Plan and design skid trails, yard areas, and truck access roads to minimize stream crossings and avoid disturbing the forest floor.
- Construct stream crossings so that they minimize erosion and physical changes to streams.
- Expedite revegetation of cleared areas.

The Tri-State Water Negotiations

Of all the rivers in Alabama, the Chattahoochee River is quite possibly the most fought-over. Beginning in the Blue Ridge Mountains north of Atlanta, Georgia, the Chattahoochee River is tapped as a drinking water source, harnessed for hydropower, recepient of treated wastewater, controlled for navigation, enjoyed for recreation, and recognized as a state border. As it flows into Florida, it meets the Flint River to form the Apalachicola at Lake Seminole, and then it meets the Chipola River and spreads out across the coastal plain to drain into the Gulf of Mexico. All of these rivers and their surrounding drainages make up the Apalachicola-Chattahoochee-Flint (ACF) River Basin. Over the past two decades, this basin has been the subject of intense scientific research, residential, commercial, and industrial development, and political debate. The management of the quantity and quality of water within this vast hydrological system now walks hand-in-hand with the sustainability of the entire region, from Metro Atlanta to the Gulf of Mexico.

The Chattahoochee River has been the subject of considerable concern in recent decades, marked by political debate and legal action. In the center of the controversy is the question of water availability and how it should be fairly allocated to meet the increasing demands of the Atlanta Metropolitan Area while supporting the many other water demands downstream in Alabama and Florida. In addition, there is great concern about the environmental effects that alternative water allocation formulas would have on the land and water resources of the ACF Basin. As a result, financial and technical resources were invested in the 1990s to study many aspects of the basin and the probable effects of allocating water to meet the many growing demands.

Management of this basin requires equal participation and earnest cooperation on behalf of the governments, businesses and citizens of Alabama, Florida, and Georgia and their federal agency partners. Everyone who relies on the water resources within the basin is a stakeholder in this management process. These stakeholders share interests in the quantity and quality of the water in the basin for the sake of hydropower, navigation, recreation, and drinking water supply, in addition to its natural beauty and intrinsic value.

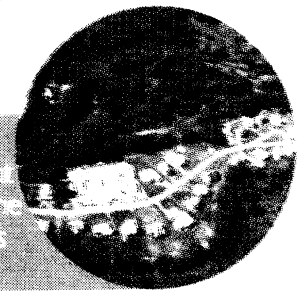
Low Impact Development

Low Impact Development (LID) is an innovative stormwater management approach with a basic principle that is modeled after nature: manage rainfall at the source using uniformly distributed decentralized micro-scale controls. The goal of LID is to mimic a site's predevelopment hydrology by using design techniques that infiltrate, filter, store, evaporate, and detain runoff close to its source. Techniques are based on the premise that stormwater management should not be seen as stormwater disposal. Instead of conveying and managing / treating stormwater in large, costly end-of-pipe facilities located at the bottom of drainage areas, LID addresses stormwater through small, cost-effective landscape features located at the lot level. These landscape features, known as Integrated Management Practices (IMPs), are the building blocks of LID. Almost all components of the urban environment have the potential to serve as an IMP. This includes not only open space, but also rooftops, streetscapes, parking lots, sidewalks, and medians. LID is a versatile approach that can be applied equally well to new development, urban retrofits, and redevelopment / revitalization projects.

How Low Impact Design Helps

Action	Benefit
Rain Barrels Native Plant Landscaping	Conserves Water
Rain Gardens Grass Swales Pervious Roadway & Driveway Green Rooftops Bioretension Circle Open-space Design No-mow Zone	Catches stormwater to slow it down and trap pollutants before they get to our rivers, streams, lakes and bays

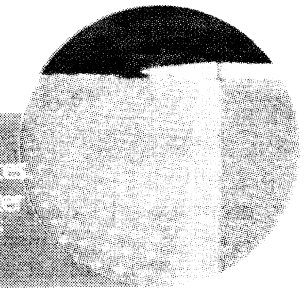
Rain Gardens
A rain garden is a planted depression that is designed to absorb rainwater runoff from impervious surfaces like roofs and driveways. Rain gardens can reduce the amount of pollution reaching creeks and streams by 30%.



Open-Space Design
Open space design involves concentrating development in a compact area of the site, leaving the remainder of the site as open space or natural development. This reduces runoff and decreases the amount of land disturbed.

For more tips, visit www.lowimpactdevelopment.org

Grassed Swales
A grassed swale is a shallow channel, planted with flood tolerant, erosion resistant plants. The design of the swale reduced the velocity of runoff, acting as a filter to reduce pollutants and allowing stormwater infiltration.



Pervious Paving Materials
The use of pervious paving materials in driveways reduces the amount of runoff, minimizing demand on stormwater systems. Toxic materials from car residues and rainwater are also filtered before reaching the water system.

The Coast Guard and the ACF

You may have seen the Coast Guard sign on the side of HWY 431 near Chewalla Creek and asked yourself, "Why is there a Coast Guard unit in Eufaula, and what are they doing on the ACF river system?" The Apalachicola, Chattahoochee, Flint (ACF) waterway represents 281 miles of the United State's 14,000 mile Inland River system. The inland rivers serve as major highways for commerce, transporting millions of tons of cargo each year. The unit in Eufaula is an Aids to Navigation Team (ANT) whose primary responsibility is maintaining buoys, passing boards, and other aids to navigation on the ACF system.

ANT Eufaula area of responsibility includes:

- Apalachicola River from Mile Marker (MM) 5.6 at the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway to MM 106.1 in Chattahoochee, FL.
- Chattahoochee River from MM 0.0 in Sneads, FL to MM 155 in Columbus, GA.
- Flint River from MM 0.0 in Chattahoochee, FL to MM 26.1 in Bainbridge, GA.

ANT Eufaula's all enlisted crew of 10 active duty personnel maintain 1,271 buoys and 768 shore aids navigation. They operate a buoy tender which is a 120 ton self propelled barge with a crane and two small workboats. They routinely travel throughout the ACF system visiting each area quarterly to perform maintenance. The buoys and boards are like the painted stripes on a highway. The Army Corp of Engineers builds the highway, and the Coast Guard paints the stripes.

Aids to navigation are placed at various points along the navigable waterway. The primary function of buoys is to warn rivermen of a danger, obstruction, or change in the contour of the river bottom and delineate the channel, leading to various points, so that dangers may be avoided. Additionally, each buoy serves as a marker and guide to enable rivermen to determine their position in relation to the maximum safe navigational channel, considering channel alignment, prevailing river stage, and obstructions. Inland river buoy tenders determine the best navigable channel by using a depth finder to ascertain the channel and surveys provided by the Army Corps of Engineers. Because of the dynamic, ever-changing, and unpredictable environmental conditions associated with the ACF rivers, buoys are not assigned positions and can be relocated based on the current conditions. One of the most notable differences is that Inland River buoys and day boards (one kind of fixed shoreside aid) are not numbered like they are in coastal regions.

Boating on the ACF

It has been several years since regular barge traffic utilized the ACF. As a result of decreased traffic and environmental and political opposition, the Corps has suspended maintenance dredging and snagging in the ACF navigational channel with the last dredge operations completed in 2001. Normally maintained as a 9' deep, 100' wide channel – it has become shallower and narrower in several areas which should be noted by boat operators.

The following is a list of areas where a 9' channel is no longer maintained:

Apalachicola River
- Powerlines at Ft Gadsden
- MM 35.0 at Styx River
- MM 35.9 Sand Mountain (deep enough, but very narrow)
- MM 42.1 Wewahitchka
- MM 77.4 near Blountstown

Flint River
- MM 21.1 near powerlines

Chattahoochee River
- MM 5.6 in Lake Seminole
- MM 45.0 at Farley Nuclear Intake
- MM 47.0 just below George Andrews Lock
- MM130.0 River Bend Park
- MM 152.0 Phenix City docks (Sediment from Bull Creek)

These observations are also noted:

A 6' draft vessel can safely navigate the entire system at normal pool level and a minimum of 10,000 CFS release from Jim Woodruff Dam.

A 9' minimum depth in the Apalachicola is expected with 16,000 CFS from Woodruff.

Numerous snags consisting of fallen trees and stumps line every bend of the Apalachicola especially near Wewahitchka. A vessel striking one of these snags often results in heavy damage to the boat and can result in injury or death to the passengers.

If the releases from Jim Woodruff Dam are 6,000 CFS or less, no vessel should attempt to transit the Apalachicola River due to snags and shoaling. There are areas you can literally wade from bank to bank and keep your shorts dry.

Near Columbus, GA, sediment from Bull Creek has filled the channel making the area inaccessible for the buoy tender, therefore all 9 buoys upstream of that point have been removed from the channel leading to the state docks in Phenix City and Columbus.

Groundwater in the ACF River Basin

An aquifer is an underground area of rock, soil or sediment that is capable of providing large amounts of water to a well or spring. Aquifers may be only a few inches beneath the surface, or hundreds of feet deep, and the water contained in the aquifer can be millions of years old. Perhaps one of the most productive aquifers in the world, the Floridan aquifer system, underlies about 100,000 square miles in Florida, southern Alabama, southern Georgia, and southern South Carolina. Abundant limestone leaves the basin riddled with sinkholes, with groundwater easily flowing through the irregular cracks and fractures in the rock.

Groundwater plays a significant role in the hydrology of the Chipola River and its tributaries. There is a strong connection between surface water and ground water, with ground water discharging to streams and streams discharging to ground water. Due to this fact, water quality impairments of surface water can lead to contamination of ground water, which is particularly important as the Florida Aquifer is the primary source of water for nearly 10 million people and supports agriculture, industry, and tourism throughout most of the region. In Houston County, AL, domestic supplies withdraw 6.17 million gallons per day (MGD) from the Florida Aquifer, which is the county's principal source of water.

Human Impacts on the W

Our activities on the land directly affect water quality ar groundwater. In urban areas, roads, parking lots, and roofto pesticides, litter – and when it rains the water cannot be abso the soil now flows directly to the stream through storm drains a the following problems:

- Pollutants run directly into streams
- Less rainfall enters the ground to replenish the water tab
- Greater risk of floods and streambank erosion
- Stream temperature increase (can be bad for the "critters

Tips for Lake Homeowners

As more and more homes are built on the shores of Alabama and Georgia waterways, homeowners want a beautifully maintained lawn to go with their beautiful home. Areas of vegetation next to water bodies benefit the water by providing filtration of runoff and protection against soil erosion. Lands adjacent to waterbodies are sensitive areas and should be handled carefully, so that water quality, lake habitat, and recreational and property values are protected.

Fertilizer & Pesticide Use Tips

- Leave a 5-10 foot buffer strip adjacent to any water body to which minimal or no fertilizer is applied.
- Always follow label directions - This is no place for the "if 5 pounds is good, 10 pounds would be better" theory.
- Keep products off concrete or asphalt surfaces - Sweep or blow fertilizers off the hard surfaces and back onto the lawn.
- If you use a professional service, make certain they are familiar with water protection techniques.

Mowing Tips

- Do not allow clippings to reach the water! This is like throwing fertilizer into the water and should be avoided.

Shoreline Development Tips

- Use mulch to cover bare soil to minimize erosion from the site.
- When disturbing soils on steep slopes, stabilize disturbed areas as quickly as possible.
- Shoreline Management Regulations may prohibit intensive removal of vegetation near the shore or on steep slopes. Check with your local jurisdiction for specific regulations.

Cities Active in Watershed Protection

City of Dothan, Alabama

Cities with populations of 50,000 or greater are required by federal law to control the quality of their stormwater runoff. Activities implemented by the City of Dothan include:

Volunteers gather at the Houston County Groundwater Education Day event at Wallace Community College in Dothan, Alabama.

- Participating in the Houston County Groundwater Day Festival for fourth grade students in Houston County,
- Cleaning pollution out of the city's storm drainage system to prevent it from going downstream,
- Providing a drop off point for paints, cleaning solvents, etc. once a year for proper disposal to ensure these substances do not end up in the storm drainage system,
- Performing stream walks to ensure there are no unauthorized discharges to the streams.

The City of Dothan is aware of how important a natural resource our rivers and streams are and continues to be a good steward of these resources. If you see problems, contact the city at (334) 615-3000.

City of Eufaula, Alabama

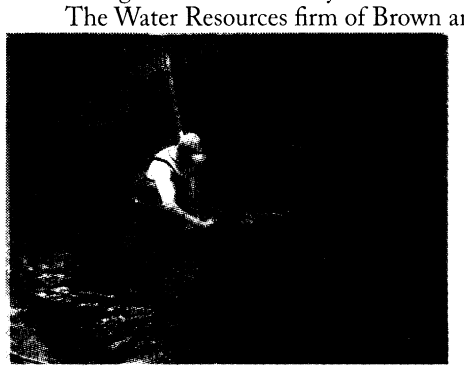
As you drive through the City of Eufaula, Alabama, one can't help but notice the beauty of the city and the imprint of the Chattahoochee River, both past and present. Both citizens and elected officials understand the importance of the incredible natural resource, the Chattahoochee River, and are working hard to protect it for the future in the following ways:

Students from Auburn University perform a stormwater assessment in Eufaula, Alabama

- Supporting educator workshops so that teachers can educate students about the importance of the river to the local economy, the wonderful natural resource that is the Chattahoochee River, and everyday things they can do to protect it;
- Examining ways to reduce polluted stormwater runoff, to increase water quality and protect the aquatic habitat for fishing, wildlife and recreational purposes;
- Developing environmentally friendly roadways;
- Updating land-use regulations to protect environmentally sensitive land, preserve open space, and encourage more sustainable development, including adoption of "Smartcode" zoning;
- Local affiliate of Groundwater Guardian, which works to protect groundwater by educating public, with emphasis on elementary school children - conducts annual groundwater festival for 4th grade, attendance averages 500-600 every year;
- City biodiesel fuel production from used cooking oil provided by local industry used in public works vehicles w goal of fueling city school buses eventually.

City of LaGrange, Georgia

The City of LaGrange recently completed a Watershed Assessment and Protection Plan for streams within its jurisdiction. The purpose of the project was to identify problems, implement corrective measures and prevent water pollution in local streams and the larger water bodies they feed - West Point Lake and the Chattahoochee River. The Water Resources firm of Brown and Caldwell is the project consultant.



A Brown and Caldwell employee performs a water quality assessment in a LaGrange, Georgia creek.

The first phase of the project involved data collection in the four watersheds within the City of LaGrange: the Shoal Creek and Dixie Creek watersheds in the northern part of the city which drain into West Point Lake and the Long Cane and Blue John watersheds in the southern part which drain into the Chattahoochee River below the dam. Water samples were collected and tested for chemical pollutants like phosphorus, metals and bacteria. Aquatic insect studies and electro-fishing were also completed. The type and diversity of aquatic insects and fish found are good indicators of past as well as present stream impacts since they tend to inhabit the same water for most of their life cycle (up to 10 yrs. or more). Stream walks evaluated erosion conditions and identified other potential pollutant sources or impacts.

After the data collected was evaluated, the City developed a Watershed Protection Plan to address current problems and provide future protection. Strategies to be implemented include ordinance revision and enforcement; sewer system maintenance; riparian area protection; and public education. Ongoing chemical and biological monitoring will measure the success the Plan and alert the City to new problems.

City of Valley, Alabama

The City of Valley has always been a "small town that dares to dream big", which is evident in the City's purchase of both the Langdale (2004) and Riverdale (2005) Mills. Located a few miles apart on the Chattahoochee River, these mills are considered 'twins' due to the fact that the cornerstone for each mill was laid on the same day. This fact led to the "Twin Mills On the Chattahoochee" concept the City is using in its redevelopment of these historic, old textile mills located on this scenic waterway. The Chattahoochee River figures prominently in all the redevelopment and revitalization plans and offers a myriad of uses such as river walks, island parks, canoe and kayak destination points, Environmental Learning Center, Wildlife Education Center, and a Multi-State Water Resource Management Center to name a few.

ADEM Staff performs brownfield testing in Valley, Alabama

Workshops, feasibility studies, environmental assessments, and environmental cleanups of these City properties were funded by grants from the EPA, U.S. Department of Agriculture, and the Appalachian Regional Commission. In-kind work performed by the Alabama Department of Environmental Management (ADEM) played a major role in the City being awarded the EPA grants. From these studies and workshops, A Master Plan for the redevelopment of the Langdale Mill has been created and proposed plans for future uses of the Riverdale Mill have been explored.

Georgia Educational Resources

Georgia Adopt-A-Stream

Georgia Adopt-A-Stream (AAS) is housed in the NonPoint Source Program in the Water Protection Branch of the Georgia Environmental Protection Division. The program is funded by a Section 319(h) Grant. The goals of Georgia Adopt-A-Stream are to (1) increase public awareness of the State's nonpoint source pollution and water quality issues, (2) provide citizens with the tools and training to evaluate and protect their local waterways, (3) encourage partnerships between citizens and their local government, and (4) collect quality baseline water quality data.

To accomplish these goals, Georgia Adopt-A-Stream encourages individuals and communities to monitor and/or improve sections of streams, wetlands, lakes or estuaries. Manuals, training, and technical support are provided through Georgia EPD, Adopt-A-Stream Regional Training Centers and more than 50 established Community/Watershed Adopt-A-Stream organizers. The Adopt-A-Stream and Wetland Regional Training Centers are located at State Universities in Columbus, Milledgeville, Americus, and Savannah. These centers play a key role in providing training, technical support and organizational support to citizens throughout Georgia.

River Bank Rescue

Where the Chattahoochee River runs between the two cities of Columbus, Georgia and Phenix City, Alabama, two old textile dams will be breached, releasing the water from these impoundments, and allowing the River to flow freely across the natural shoals and rapids of the Fall Line.

The Nature Conservancy's Chattahoochee Fall Line project is working to ensure that revegetation and restoration of exposed riparian and shoal habitat occurs in a way that reflects the River's natural history and honors its rich ecological heritage.

Our Goals…

- Minimize invasive plant species
- Maximize native vegetation
- Explore potential for eventual reintroduction of the state endangered Rocky Shoals Spider Lily

While waiting for the breach to be completed, TNC is working with a variety of partners to establish a trial riparian restoration and demonstration area. This trial area will allow us to gather information to guide future work.

Where is the trial revegetation area going to be?

Auburn University students, working with Charlene LeBleu, Assistant Professor of Community Planning and Landscape Architecture.

Weracoba Creek Project - Columbus, GA

Columbus Water Works, supported by GA EPD's Water Protection and Nonpoint Source Divisions, is working to improve water quality and protect downstream recreational users by decreasing bacteria in Weracoba Creek, located in Columbus, GA.

The project will improve water quality by:

1) Diverting dry weather flow through a UV treatment system, reducing the concentrations of viable bacteria downstream.

2) Slowing upstream velocities during wet-weather events, thereby reducing the ability of the flows to carry sediment and trash flushed from the upper portion of the watershed.

3) Screening, filtering and disinfecting a portion of runoff, retaining pollutants for disposal to the sewer system and reducing the number of viable bacteria that flow downstream during wet-weather events.

4) Significantly improving the health of the ecosystem, including the downstream fish and macroinvertebrate communities.

Endangered Wood Storks

During 2007 a committed group of Eufaula-area citizens was hard at work organizing a National Wildlife Refuge (NWR) Support Group, also known as a "Friends" group. This non-profit grassroots organization will function primarily to bring together local citizens and volunteers who are dedicated to protecting the region's wildlife heritage. Specifically, it will support and promote the Eufaula NWR by serving as an advocate and by supporting the mission of the refuge. Members of the Friends group will provide volunteer and financial support for the local Eufaula NWR. The Friends of Eufaula NWR is affiliated with the National Wildlife Refuge Association, which provides a network of Friends groups throughout the country. By joining together, affiliate Friends groups can have an even bigger impact on natural resource and conservations issues of national concern.

Friends group members contribute time, expertise, materials, and funding which help to promote land stewardship and educate others, especially local young people, about the significance of the local refuge. In 2008 the Friends of Eufaula NWR plans to organize educational activities and volunteer opportunities at the Refuge, as well as open a bookstore that will operate out of the Refuge Headquarters on AL Highway 165. The Friends also plan to have merchandise available for sale at the Eufaula Barbour County Chamber of Commerce.

Anyone can be involved with the Friends Group. Simply put, concerned citizens who share a passion for wildlife and are willing to volunteer time, labor, or money can get involved. To get involved contact the Eufaula NWR Headquarters at (334) 687-4065 or visit www.fws.gov/friends.

What is RC&D?

This project was funded in part with grant funds from assorted Resource Conservation and Development (RC&D) Councils, whose mission it is to help citizens protect and develop their economic, natural, and social resources in ways that improve their area's economy, environment, and quality of life. Local RC&D Councils provide ways for people to plan and implement projects that will make their communities a better place to live. They bring together people, needs, concerns, opportunities, and solutions. Find out more about RC&D - Check out:

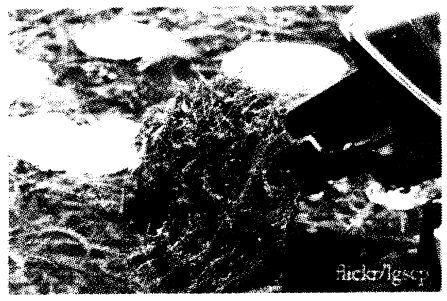
Have you seen these "Alien" Invaders?

Aquatic Nuisance Species pose a significant problem to the nation's waterways. These are species introduced outside of their native ranges that can grow in or are closely associated with the aquatic environment.

These nuisance species can have harmful effects on the local economy, human health and/or ecology by clogging and covering waterways, crippling boat traffic and competing with native vegetation, creating a monoculture unsuitable for recreation, commerce, native fish and wildlife species. Read on to find out more about the "alien invaders" in the Chattahoochee and/or Chipola River Basins and how you can help keep them in check!

Hydrilla



•A submersed, rooted plant, with long stems that branch at the surface, forming dense mats
•Originated in India and introduced into the United States via the ornamental aquarium plant trade
•Heavy growth impedes boating, swimming, and fishing in lakes and rivers, lowers oxygen levels needed by fish to survive, and displaces helpful native vegetation •Spreads by "hitching rides" on boats, boat trailers and outboard motors; has been deliberately introduced by recreational fishermen trying to establish submerged cover to encourage popular angling species like bass.

Water Hyacinth

•Leaves are thick, waxy, rounded, and glossy, and rise above the water surface on stalks
•Flowers are purplish blue or lavender to pinkish
•Reproduce via short "runner" stems that radiate from the base of the plant; also produce seed •Native to the Amazon River Basin in South America, introduced through the water garden trade.
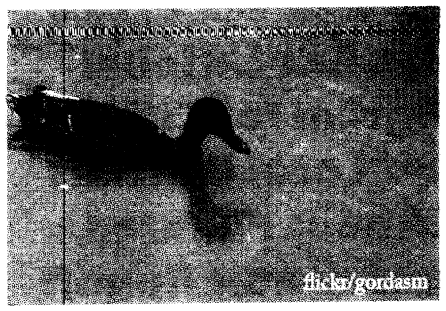
•Form large, free-floating, mats that compete with other aquatic species for light, nutrients, and oxygen
•Fish spawning areas may be reduced and critical waterfowl habitat degraded

Common Salvinia (Water Spangles)

•Free-floating, rootless aquatic fern
•Oval leaves often lie flat on the water surface, while larger leaves become elongated and fold upright
•Leaf color ranges from emerald green to rusty brown, with the upper surfaces of floating leaves covered with rows of thick white, bristly hairs
•Native to Central and South America; widely sold through the water garden trade and often found in aquacultural ponds
•Entered natural areas as a result of flooding of cultivated pools or through intentional release

Parrotfeather

•Also know as watermilfoil
•Bright green, perennial freshwater plant
•Rooted in waterway bottoms, but grows up to a foot above the surface
•Introduced worldwide for use in aquariums and water gardens
•Populations may be quite dense, sometimes forming floating mats, that when uprooted, choke waterways and impede recreational navigation
•Can change the physical and chemical characteristics of lakes and streams and provide habitat for mosquito larvae



Dotted Duckweed

•Tiny, dark green, free-floating aquatic plant comprised of one to four oval shaped fronds that produce fine roots
•Native to Australia and Southeast Asia and used extensively in the aquarium and water garden trades

Brittle naiad

•Also known as brittle waternymph, slender naiad, and spiny naiad
•Is a submersed rooted annual, native to Eurasia and Africa
•First detected in Troy, New York in 1932, it quickly spread to the Great Lakes and southward and is primarily dispersed by water currents and animals
•Forms dense stands in shallow water, which can hinder swimming, fishing, boating, and other forms of water traffic and recreation
•Out-competes native species

WHAT CAN YOU DO?

•Boaters should always check and wash boat hulls, trailers, bilge water and motors closely when transporting craft from one body of water to another, to minimize spreading
•Never allow store bought water garden plants to enter the natural environment – Let dry out and toss into garbage can for disposal at landfill

Precision Agriculture Protects Your Water

The Precision Agriculture Program of the Cooperative Extension System works with Global Positioning Systems (GPS) technologies that lead to reduced fertilizer and/or pesticide applications which translate into cleaner water and improved farm efficiency. Guidance systems, which are maintained for on-farm demonstrations, reduce equipment overlap in the field, resulting in decreased chemical application and fuel usage. Airplane imagery and data collected from tractor-mounted sensors can be used for variable rate chemical applications. Targeted fertilizer applications allow fields to be divided into zones (each is approx. 10-20 acres) instead of basing the application on one composite sample for the entire field, resulting in less chemical runoff.

In Georgia, visit http://www.nespal.org/precisionag.html or call Calvin Perry at 229-386-3377.

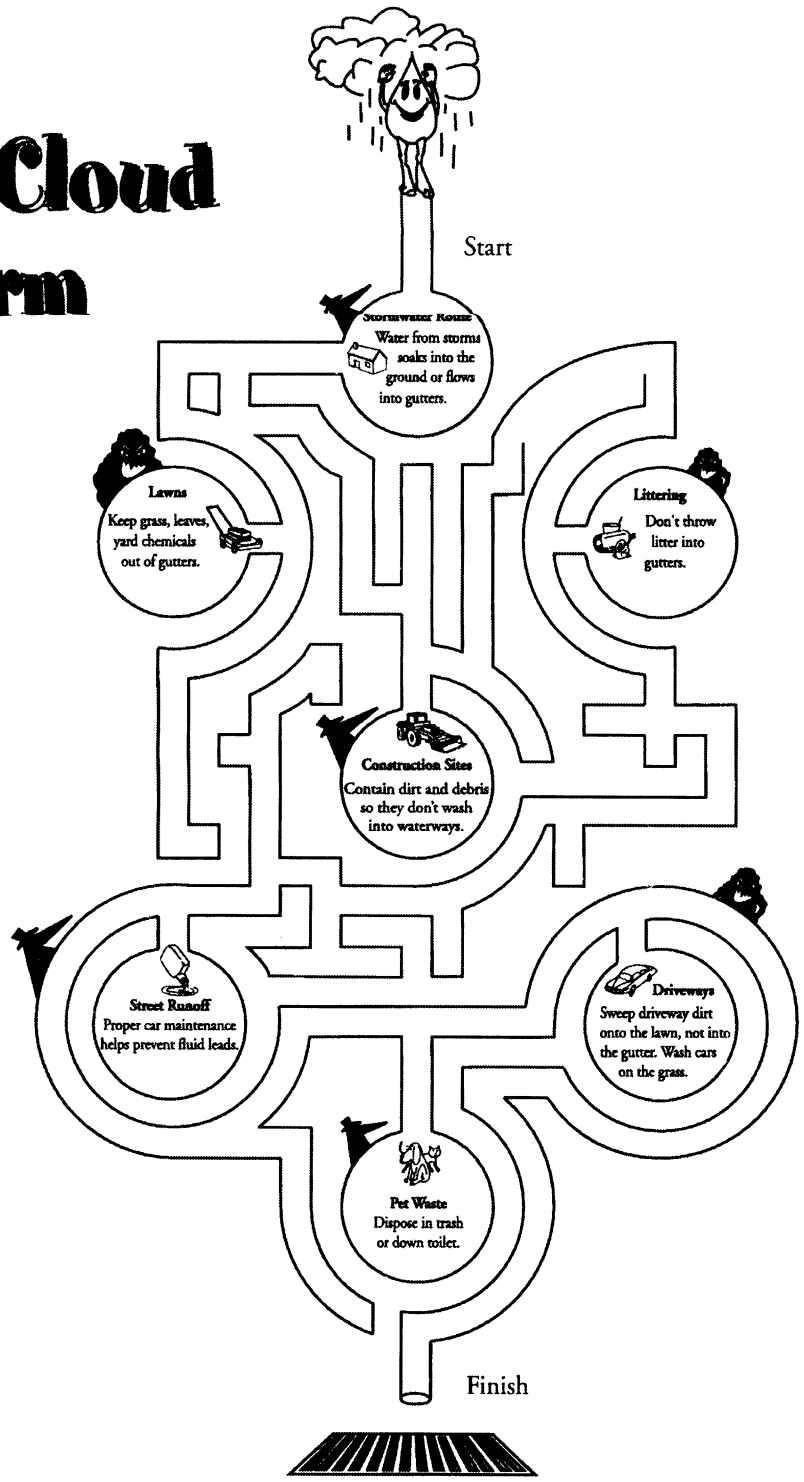
Historic Chattahoochee Commission

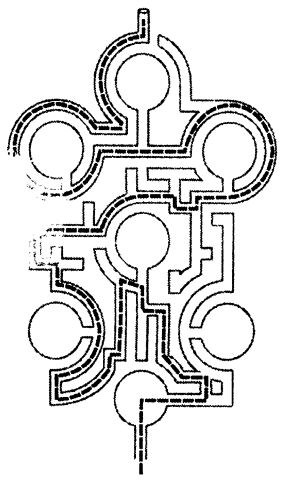
Organized in 1970, the Historic Chattahoochee Commission (HCC) is charged with the responsibility of promoting tourism and historic preservation throughout the lower Chattahoochee Valley of Alabama and Georgia. In 1978, the HCC became a state agency of both Alabama and Georgia when the Georgia General Assembly, the Alabama Legislature and the U.S. Congress passed identical legislation to establish an interstate compact for the operation of the Commission. The HCC serves 18 counties along the lower Chattahoochee River in both states in a region known as the Chattahoochee Trace. Its program of work is centered on a variety of heritage tourism projects and activities. Efforts are now underway, in the U.S. Congress, to have the Chattahoochee Trace designated as a National Heritage Corridor. The Commission maintains offices in LaGrange, Georgia and Eufaula, Alabama. For more information on the HCC and Chattahoochee Trace region, go to www.hcc-al-ga.org or e-mail trace@eufaula.rr.com. Inquiries are also welcomed at 1-877-766-2443 (toll free).

From Storm Cloud To Storm Drain

The stormwater system channels rain into gutters, which drain into streams and rivers. When people pollute stormwater, they also pollute our natural waterways.

Help Droplet journey through the stormwater system without becoming contaminated by Sludge or Toxic.





The Dirty Dozen

When stormwater carries pollutants from thousands of Alabama homes into gutters, it adds up to a big problem for our streams and rivers. Hidden in the puzzle below are a dozen common stormwater contaminants from household sources.

Moore, Galloway to sign books Monday

In the back of the rattling old helicopter was an assemblage of American and North Vietnamese military men, old soldiers all, who were journeying together to a place where we had all done our very best to kill each other in one month of ambush and assault and set-piece battles in November 1965 ... No one who fought there, on either side, talked seriously about who won and who lost. In such a slaughterhouse there are no winners, only survivors.

— excerpt from
We Are Soldiers Still

Retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore and Joe Galloway will sign copies of their newest book Monday between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. at the shoppette on the first floor of Infantry Hall.

Copies of We Are Soldiers Still, a Journey Back to the Battlefields of Vietnam, are available at the shoppette. The 384-page book, published by Harperluxe, is a follow-up to their 1994 best seller We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, which chronicled the 34-day Battle of the Ia drang Valley. Moore commanded the 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment, in the battle, and Galloway was a reporter.

In their most recent collaboration, Moore and Galloway reflect on their return visit to Vietnam and their relationships with 10 American veterans of that battle.

Another Fort Benning Soldier claimed a Gold Medal for the Army Marksmanship Unit last week.

Nineteen-year-old Pfc. Vincent Hancock, the youngest shooter on the AMU team, entered the finals in first place Saturday after hitting 121 out of 125 targets in the qualification round. That's a new Olympic record.

He shot 24 in the final to tie with Norway's Tore Brovold, who shot a perfect 25.

The two hit both targets in their first shoot-off, but Brovold missed one in the second. Hancock hit both, earning him a gold in his first Olympic appearance and making him the second Fort Benning Soldier to win a Gold Medal in Beijing after Spc. Glenn Eller won in the double trap event Aug. 12.

"This is such an amazing feeling, and I wouldn't trade a minute of it," said Hancock, who became the youngest world champion skeet shooter at 16.

They shared a plane and a plan.

Staff Sgt. Gregory Hopkins, a squad leader with the 233rd Transportation Company's 4th Platoon, and Capt. Samuel Meyer, who commands the 988th Military Police Company, loaded their Soldiers on a plane bound for Iraq Tuesday with one goal in mind.

"I'm going with a certain number of Soldiers, and I'm going to bring that same number back. My Soldiers are my mission," Hopkins said.

Meyer, who just returned from a yearlong deployment in January, said his MPs will train and mentor Iraqi police.

"That's our mission — the company's mission," he said. "But my job is to bring them all back safely."

Both units will likely spend a year in Iraq.

The MPs, more than 140 of them, will be stationed near Baghdad, where they will "continue developing a credible Iraqi police force," Meyers said. Over the past few months, the 988th has trained for this

On the 68th anniversary of the first Airborne jump, families, paratroopers and veterans celebrated National Airborne Day.

On hand for the celebration Aug. 15 was 91-year-old Benjamin Reese, a member of the original test platoon.

Reese had been in the Army for less than a year when he volunteered "to try that foolish thing of jumping out of planes," he said.

"I jumped into Normandy; I jumped into Holland. I am proud that I was able to be in the group that started it. I wasn't anything special," he said. "I was just there, and I did it."

Reese was assigned to the 502nd Parachute Infantry Regiment and later the 504th Parachute Infantry Regiment. He served in the Army for more than 30 years, mostly as a paratrooper.

"There were some sprained ankles," Reese said of those first few jumps over Lawson Field. "I happened to land pretty nicely."

Staff Sgt. Adrian Hill, the first to jump onto Eubanks Field Friday, honored Reese and his fellow paratroopers by carrying the test platoon flag. Members from the 82nd Airborne Division, the Screaming Eagles of the 101st Airborne Division, the Golden Knights, the Black Daggers and the Silver Wings jumped in formation before the graduation of 448 paratroopers in C Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Reese said he is glad to see the paratrooper spirit alive on National Airborne Day.

"It's just great to see them," he said. "I think it's great that I can come out here and see what these troops are doing with the little thing that I started."

Military to civilian conversion benefits Army work force

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

As the military wages the Global War on Terrorism, it has increasingly relied upon civilians to do work previously performed by Soldiers. At many Army installations there is an ongoing process to convert military positions to civilian positions. Some of the benefits of having civilians perform in these positions include fewer distractions, such as physical training, and other tasks that routinely fulfill requirements for Soldiers. In addition, the revamping of manning documents will help fill the Brigade Combat Teams throughout the Army.

At Fort Benning we use the A76 Contract Study process to allow more civilians to join the Army work force. This process allows outside companies/corporations to submit contract bids to operate installation support activities. The intent of this process is to increase efficiency and lower costs, and to transition all military positions previously authorized in affected organizations back to the fighting force. Fort Benning has had numerous organizations undergo A76 Contract Studies in the past seven years; some of them are identified below.

One of the most critical GWOT missions performed at Fort Benning is accomplished by the CONUS Replacement Center (CRC). It processes up to 25,000 personnel a year for deployment to contingency operations all over the world.

The CRC processes a wide range of people, including Soldiers of all components (Active, U.S. Army Reserves, National Guard, and Individual Ready Reserves, DA Civilians, Red Cross personnel, and DOD contractors). Many Fort Benning organizations provide critical support to the CRC mission. The majority of this assistance is provided by civilian employees who perform missions such as driving buses and vans, personnel and medical processing, training, food services, and a variety of other vital deployment missions.

The Military Personnel Division of the Adjutant General's office is another organization that participated in an A76 Contract Study and now performs its mission with a totally civilian work force. It performs numerous missions that support the CRC including Soldier Readiness Processing (SRP). At SRP, all individuals who are deploying in support of GWOT undergo a personnel records review, an update of insurance forms and casualty documents, and are issued a Common Access Card. The diligent and dedicated civilians who perform these tasks serve long duty hours, including nights and weekends, supporting the mission.

A few additional organizations affected by A76 are the Directorate of Information Management (DOIM), the Directorate of Logistics (DOL), and the Directorate of Public Works (DPW). DOIM enables the installation to communicate through e-mail and cellular phone systems. It also provides valuable assistance with upgrades of computer software and hardware, and with connectivity to the internet. This support is critical to all installation activities in their mission to support the GWOT.

DOL provides logistical support to training missions and to mobilized Army Reserve units. It helps in the sustainment and reconstitution of forces and in the maintenance of vehicles, aircraft, and other equipment. Additionally, DOL arranges the transportation of personnel and personal property to the theater of operations, and operates the Central Issue Facility on Fort Benning.

DPW provides, operates, repairs, and maintains the installation's facilities. Other services include the performance of minor and major construction, providing and maintaining housing, and installation space management. They also oversee environmental, historical, cultural, and natural resource programs to ensure Fort Benning remains a good steward of our natural resources and the environment.

It is fair to say that it takes an incredible team effort to keep this installation operating at a high level. Initiatives such as the A76 Contract Studies and military to civilian conversions have enabled us to streamline our processes, find efficiencies, and earn Fort Benning a well-deserved reputation as the best installation in the Army.

A "staycation" is a vacation near your home. Are you doing a staycation for Labor Day weekend?

Merrill's Marauders reunion

The 62nd annual reunion of Merrill's Marauders, the tough Infantrymen who were the first American troops to fight the Japanese in Asia during World War II, will be August 29-31 at the Marriott Atlanta Airport Hotel.

Formally organized Jan. 1, 1944, Merrill's Marauders made military history during the short eight months of their existence by marching farther than any other American fighting force during WWII.

The reunion will feature a WWII memorabilia room, a 1940's swing dance demonstration by Academy Balloom of Atlanta, and songs by June Midkiff Tinker, a former Ms. Senior Columbus Georgia and Rosie the Riveter.

The reunion's keynote speaker Aug. 30 will be Edward A. McLogan, who was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame in 2001 for his "exemplary conduct and actions in combat" while serving with Merrill's Marauders.

Merrill's Marauders were made up of 3,000 men who answered President Franklin D. Roosevelt's call for a "dangerous and hazardous mission" in 1943.

Landing in Bombay, India, the volunteers from the jungles of Panama and Trinidad, Guadalcanal, New Guinea, New Georgia and the United States had several months of intensive training before setting out on their long-range objective to cripple supply lines by capturing the only air field in Burma.

The Marauders are recognized as the predecessors of today's U.S. Army Rangers. Their stamina and fighting spirit inspired the Rangers to adopt the Marauders WWII patch as their own. The Marauders were disbanded in August 1944 and reorganized as the 475th Infantry Regiment.

Over the Limit, Under Arrest

As Georgians begin making their vacation plans for the Labor Day festivities, please remember there are two activities that never mix well on our social calendar: drinking and driving. Combining them behind the wheel creates a deadly combination on our highways. Now one out of every three of the 1,700-plus fatal crashes in Georgia every year involves an impaired driver.

Which is why there is a summer DUI enforcement campaign called Operation Zero Tolerance. OZT means you never receive just a warning or citation. If you're caught driving with a blood alcohol concentration at or over the illegal limit of 0.08, you will be arrested. In Georgia, if you're Over the Limit, you're Under Arrest. First time violators go to jail.

Why 0.08? That's the level where the risk of a fatal crash increases dramatically. It's at 0.08 where critical driving skills like braking, steering, lane changing, depth perception, judgment and response time are acutely affected — the very skills your life depends on — and the lives of everyone on the road around you.

The survival mathematics of drunk driving is even more sobering. Statistics show you're 11 times more likely to die in a crash with a BAC of 0.08 or higher than if you're in the same crash with no alcohol in your system. Yet according to the FBI's Uniform Crime Report, more than 1.3 million people across the country were arrested for driving under the influence in 2005.

That's why all 50 states now agree to uniformly enforce the BAC limit at 0.08 everywhere you drive in this country. So no matter what route you take for your Labor Day travel plans, if a sobriety roadcheck or concentrated patrol finds you driving under the influence of drugs or alcohol, you will be charged with DUI.

But avoiding the costly repercussions of a drunk driving arrest is easy. Just remember the goal of Operation Zero Tolerance is to bring awareness to the deadly consequences of drunken driving so motorists will drive unimpaired. Designating a sober driver and never letting a friend drive drunk are just two simple ways to avoid an impaired driving crash or arrest.

Here are more tips that can help keep our roads safe — and keep you safer 365 days a year: planning ahead by designating a sober driver before going out; calling a taxi, using mass transit or calling a sober friend or family member to get you safely home; not allowing alcohol to be opened or consumed in your vehicle; obeying all traffic laws and resisting influences to take risks; driving the speed limit; and reporting impaired drivers to the nearest law enforcement agency by calling 911.

As we celebrate the last holiday of summer, let's remember that the best way to protect your family against an encounter with a drunk driver is to wear your seatbelt and make sure your passengers always do the same.

And remember: Buckle-Up. Slow Down. Drive Sober.

This week in Fort Benning history

1934

• Fort Benning fielded the new U.S. semi-automatic rifle, which fired 30-60 shots per minute, making it at least three times more powerful than its predecessor, the Springfield, which had been used since 1903.

1951

• In a show of solidarity, the Citizens and Military Council of Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning passed a resolution to encourage local homeowners to rent to service members and their families. Soldiers had developed a reputation as irresponsible tenants, and as a result, there was a housing shortage for incoming troops and their families.

• Cpl. Janice Robinson, of the WAC Detachment, was named Miss Army Extension Courses 1951. The vivacious, curvaceous blond was assigned to the Records Group of the Extension Course Department.

• At the movies: The Strip, with Mickey Rooney, People will Talk, with Cary Grant, and The People Against O'Hara, with Spencer Tracy.

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

The Fort Benning Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers took first place at the annual BOSS Training Forum Aug. 8. The video they submitted, the only one to receive a standing ovation, stood out against submissions from more than 80 BOSS organizations.

Their "Soldier driven" outlook was what helped them reclaim the title of best installation from their 2004 win, said Noelle Phillips, Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation BOSS advisor.

It's all about the Soldiers, said Sgt. Zkmain Mahoney, BOSS president.

"It's more than a program. It's a sense of belonging," she said. "We've made it into a family. When I participate in BOSS, it makes me feel good about being in the military and doing what I do. You have to have a positive outlet. It keeps you encouraged."

BOSS is founded on three pillars: quality of life, recreation and community service.

"Those three pieces develop a more well-rounded Soldier and a better Soldier," Mahoney said. "If you know your quality of life issues can be taken care of, then you're more likely to take time out for community service and recreational activities."

BOSS members are active in reaching out to their community.

They have logged nearly 2,000 hours of community service in the last six months. They renovate homes with House of Heroes, clean up local waterways with Help the Hooch, assist children in the Special Olympics and help with post events like the annual luau.

"We have so many Soldiers who come out and volunteer. I ask for 15 and I get 60," Mahoney said.

Membership is on the rise, too.

There used to be fewer than 20 people for an activity, Phillips said. Now, there are as many as 100 participants in BOSS events. Since this time last year, the program has grown exponentially.

"We're serious about our BOSS family," Mahoney said. "Our goal is to be bigger and better."

The next BOSS event is a Blue Jeans Banquet Oct. 3. For more information about BOSS, contact Mahoney at 706-604-7675 or visit the Web site at http://benningmwr.com/boss31905.htm.

WTC puts the best to the test

The Army National Guard put 13 Soldiers through a 48-hour competition to test their warrior skills last week at the Warrior Training Center on Fort Benning. The winners of the Best Warrior competition, Spc. Jeremy Whipple and Sgt. Michael Noyce Merino, were named National Guard Soldier of the Year and NCO of the Year, respectively.

With less than three hours scheduled for sleep, the competitors tackled more than 25 back-to-back challenges, starting with a five-event physical fitness test and ending with a written exam and an interview before a board of senior Guard Soldiers.

Between those events, they ran five miles and road-marched 12. They were evaluated on their knowledge of various weapons systems, including the M-4, M-249, M-240B and the claymore.

They were also tested on their abilities to evaluate and evacuate casualties and administer IVs. They participated in a combatives contest, boxing, a stress shoot and a pugil competition.

"We've got National Guard Soldiers serving all over the world right now. Everybody's a warrior," said 1st Sgt. Douglas Conaway of the WTC's B Company. "That's why we do this — to challenge them to prove to themselves and their peers what they're capable of doing when they push themselves to the limit."

Staff Sgt. Han Wang said the lack of sleep made it difficult to handle challenges that might otherwise have been much less difficult.

"The key to getting through it is to stay focused on what you are trying to do and take one step at a time," he said.

The winners — Whipple, from an aviation unit in Utah, and Noyce Marino, from a cavalry unit in Montana — were announced at the Enlisted Army National Guard Conference Thursday in Savannah, Ga.

They will advance to the All Army NCO and Soldier of the Year Competition from Sept. 28 to Oct. 3 at Fort Lee, Va.

Jumper lands dream job after losing leg in combat

Wounded warrior joins airborne celebration

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Two years after losing his leg in Iraq, Sgt. Maxwell Ramsey celebrated National Airborne Day by jumping out of a Black Hawk helicopter 12,000 feet above Eubanks Field. He represented the Screaming Eagles of the 101st Airborne Division (Air Assault) during the parachute demonstration Aug. 15.

Ramsey was hoping for a position with the team after his deployment. But when an IED went off under his Humvee during a mission in Iraq, he was sent to Walter Reed instead.

He knew he was going to lose his leg, Ramsey said, but he remained positive.

"My outlook on life improved a hundredfold," he said. "I told my wife that we're going to get through this. We're going to take advantage of the opportunities that arise from this and go forward."

> "You don't sit there and wait for the doctors to figure out what's best for you. You actively involve yourself in what the doctors are thinking about doing and make sure it's in line with what you want. If you pour yourself into your recovery, you're going to get outstanding treatment in return, and you're going to recover and be strong because of it."

> — Sgt. Maxwell Ramsey

Six months after he was wounded, Ramsey found just such an opportunity when members of the skydiving community helped him return to his former hobby and eventually, become part of the Screaming Eagles. Although he trained with the team for several days, it only took one jump to confirm he was still a paratrooper.

"I knew I was going to be able to jump again," he said. "The feeling of freefall again — it was as if I'd never left the sky."

Ramsey said the key to his recovery was his interest in his healing.

"You don't sit there and wait for the doctors to figure out what's best for you," he said. "You actively involve yourself in what the doctors are thinking about doing and make sure it's in line with what you want. If you pour yourself into your recovery, you're going to get outstanding treatment in return, and you're going to recover and be strong because of it.

"The fruits of that labor is that I'm able to jump out of planes now and represent the Army in ways that most people don't get the opportunity to do. There's only a couple hundred people in the Army who get to do this type of job."

Ramsey joined the Army, he said, to be part of "the tip of the sword." Although he's no longer on the front lines, he's still able to boost morale and help recruit future Soldiers by jumping with the Screaming Eagles.

"It's a lot of fun. To skydivers in general, you would think it's the absolute best job in the world," said Ramsey, who already completed more than 350 jumps before joining the Army and now has completed more than 800.

"I won't lie," he said. "I miss being on the line with my guys, but my current conditions don't allow me to deploy.

"And this is probably the next best job you could have if you're not going to be an Infantryman."

Soldiers: Leave confident in training, family support deployment on post, and individual members have been sent for specialized training to learn how to deal with situations, cultures and concerns unique to the Iraq theater.

The 233rd's 4th Platoon, about 50 Soldiers in all, will link up with another transportation company from Fort Knox, Ky., and they'll haul heavy equipment wherever they're needed. Hopkins, who has deployed six times — three with the 233rd — said he expects they'll move in and out of Kuwait frequently.

"You never know what's going to happen when you're on the road, so you train for everything. We've trained for this, over and over," Hopkins said. "I tell my first-timers to expect the unexpected and they'll have nothing to worry about. But me, I stay busy worrying, because it's my job to take care of these guys."

Charlie Drake, a Military and Family Life consultant on Fort Benning, spoke to the families of the 233rd as they gathered at the unit headquarters to say goodbye. He hoped to help alleviate one of their primary concerns.

"We want you to know we're here to help take care of your families while you're gone," Drake told the Soldiers. And to their families, he said: "Don't carry anything around, hurting and struggling and thinking there's no one here for you. We're here to help."

The Military and Family Life Consultants program provides free, confidential counseling and referral services to family members coping with the stresses of deployment, Drake said.

It's that kind of support that gave Spc. Jesse Spain the confidence to leave his wife and two children at Fort Benning.

"When I went to Korea for a year, she stayed back home in Springfield, Missouri. That was hard on her," said Spain, a mechanic with the 233rd. "Here, she'll be surrounded by people who understand what she's going through, and I think that will make a big difference.

Spain's oldest child, 5-year-old Austin, has vague memories of his father's absence.

"He has some idea what to expect," Spain said. "But my daughter — she's two — this is all new to her. We got some kids' videos from the (family readiness group) to help them understand and deal with it. So I'm ready to go. This is what I've been training for. I'm ready to go and get back here to them."

Barbara Wentz broke into tears as she said goodbye to her "baby boy," Spc. Jason Wentz. But it was hard to tell if they were tears of joy or pain. Barbara, who traveled from Massachusetts for the departure, said she hadn't seen her son in more than a year.

"Look at him — he's an absolutely, unbelievably wonderful young man. The Army's the best thing that ever happened to him," said Barbara, who described her son as an unsettled young man who lacked direction when he enlisted five years ago.

"As scared as I am right now, I couldn't be happier about what he's doing, and I couldn't be prouder of him. I don't have words to tell you how proud I am."

As for Jason, he said, in so many words, just what so many of his comrades had to say about their departure.

"We trained for this. Let's go and get it done."

BRAVERY UNDER FIRE

Soldiers' combat actions earn Silver Stars

3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Spc. Ben Hutto

Neither Staff Sgt. John Zamarippa nor Capt. Ross Pixler consider themselves heroes, despite the fact both men were awarded Silver Star medals for valor.

But many of the Soldiers in A Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, consider their modesty part of what makes them deserving of the U.S. Army's second highest award.

During a combat patrol outside of Salman Pak, Iraq, Oct. 30, 2007, insurgent forces attacked Pixler, Zamarripa and the Soldiers of the 3rd Platoon.

A deeply buried IED (improvised explosive device) exploded under the lead vehicle. The blast pushed up the floor of the up-armored vehicle, killing three Soldiers and injuring Pixler, his gunner and the driver of the vehicle.

"I knew it was bad," Pixler said. "Even from inside the vehicle, I could tell, without seeing a thing, that the blast had disabled the vehicle. At the time, I didn't feel any pain. I was just trying to figure out how bad it was."

Pixler climbed out of the crippled vehicle and saw Zamarippa running toward him through the dust cloud that still hung in the air.

"He was the first one to us," Pixler said. "He was in the second vehicle behind us and was there just a few moments after it happened."

As Zamarripa pulled the injured driver out and started coordinating to secure the site, Pixler limped back to the convoy and started reporting what had happened to "Hardrock" headquarters.

Moments after the explosion, insurgents began to shoot at Zamarripa and his Soldiers with accurate small arms fire.

"At that point, I was just reacting," Zamarripa said. "I just got everyone behind the vehicles for cover and started firing back. To be honest, I only noticed two of the bullets that landed close, but the guys said it was a lot more than that. I just reacted. When stuff like that is happening, you just flip the switch and go on autopilot. We had taken fire before, so everyone knew what to do. I just happened to be there.

But Zamarripa did much more, Pixler said.

"Sgt. Zamarripa was everywhere after the attack," Pixler said. "He helped the injured get to the medic. He positioned the vehicles in the convoy to secure the IED site. He helped get all of the Soldiers providing security out of the way of sniper fire and coordinated a counterattack. He got our gun trucks into the fight. His actions freed me to call up what was going on and get us air support. His leadership allowed me to direct the fight. Without his actions, it would have been a lot more difficult."

"We had received a report when they were first attacked and we were all by the radio waiting for information," said Black who was the acting first sergeant of A Company at the time. When the call came that they had three casualties, we spun up as many Soldiers as we could and got out there to them."

Black had been the platoon sergeant just a few weeks before the attack.

"Most of the platoon served together in our last deployment. We were a tight-knit experienced group. This wasn't their first time being attacked. I knew they would be handling whatever was going on out there, but I had to get out there to them," he said.

As help was coming to them, the Earth Pigs of 3rd Platoon were in a fierce fight. Enemy combatants used small arms fire, machine gun fire and mortars in an attempt to kill them.

As the platoon medic assessed him, Pixler coordinated attack aviation.

"We were on a path that was between a farm and a graveyard so we couldn't just open up like we normally would have," Pixler said. "I directed the Apaches to use strafing gun runs and got the enemy off us. It was intense, but I knew we had already lost three guys and was determined not to lose more."

Zamarripa said it was Pixler's actions that prevented more injuries.

"He maintained his composure despite being injured," Zamarippa said. "At the time, we thought his ankle and arm were broken. It looked that bad, but he stepped up to the plate and saved lives that day.

"The guy had a serious concussion, but still maintained all the important information and got it out over the radio. The guy couldn't tell the medic what day it was when he was asked, but he pushed through. There wasn't a second that he choked up or forgot what to do."

When help arrived, Pixler and two injured Soldiers were put into another Bradley Fighting Vehicle for transport to Combat Outpost Cahill for treatment.

A few minutes into the ride, that Bradley was hit by another IED attack. The attack, while not fatal, disabled the vehicle.

"It was tough," Pixler said. "I think at that point we were all just wondering when it would end. We just held on until help arrived and we made it back home.

"We were all hurt, but what was really hurting us was knowing we lost three of our guys. It's tough. As a leader, you take it hard after everything is over. I figured I had the rest of the deployment to work through it, I just wanted to take care of the Soldiers and make sure I was doing my part to get us home safely."

Both men downplay what they did.

"When the worst happened, our guys stepped up and reacted in the best way," Pixler said. "We lost brothers, but (the Soldiers) stayed calm and collected. They reacted like they were supposed to ... the best way possible. The way they reacted that day brought honor upon themselves, our fallen comrades and our platoon. Those guys are the real heroes in all this."

Zamarripa said he was doing his job and every Earth Pig would have done the same.

"That wasn't the first time we had been attacked," he said. "I did what a squad leader was supposed to do. The medic did his job. Our Soldiers pulled security. Everyone did his job. It's that simple. I honestly don't see what I did as any more special than what anyone else in that platoon did that day. When the shooting started, none of our guys were scared or shied away. That is heroic. When a 19-year-old private does what he's told without asking questions, that's courage. It's real easy to follow orders when bullets aren't flying."

Black wasn't surprised by the Soldiers' modesty. Having served with both men, he said that neither looks for the spotlight.

"It was a bad day, but good results came from some good people," Black said.

"Both of them will never try and take the credit they deserve. That is part of the reason men want to serve with them and it's part of the reason they deserve the awards they received. I do believe they did extraordinary things that day that most people will never understand. The closest your average person will ever get to something like that is seeing it in a movie or on television. Both of them kept their head in a dangerous situation and made sure we didn't lose more Soldiers that day. When you look at the things they did versus the things they say, I think it is apparent they both deserved the awards they received. I know there is a whole platoon of men who will agree with me on that."

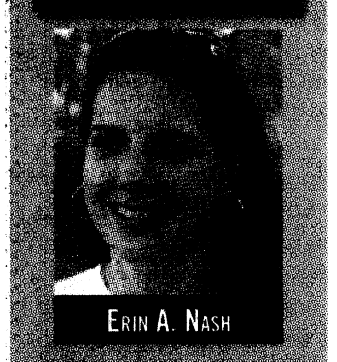
BENCH NOTES



ERIN A. NASH

Phenomenal Phelps

If you've been living in a cave for the past week, here's the deal: Michael Phelps won eight, that's right, eight gold medals in swimming at the Olympic Games. One of the medals he won by one-hundredth of a second, and I'm pretty sure everyone who watched it was also holding their breath.

Phelps broke swimmer Mark Spitz's 1972 Munich Games record of seven gold medals. I will give Phelps the honor of greatest swimmer ever, but greatest athlete? Not yet, when others like Tiger Woods and Michael Jordan are still on the top of my list.

Olympics end Sunday

I've really enjoyed the past two weeks of Olympic coverage. Who knew there was a men's field hockey event? If tennis and handball and basketball are Olympic sports, why not golf? I would love to see Tiger Woods win a gold medal.

The closing ceremonies for the Olympics will be broadcast at 8 p.m. Sunday on NBC.

A group of about 2008 practitioners from a Chinese martial arts school will be part of the show.

Thank you, Carl!

Carl Edwards, you made my week by winning both the Nationwide and Sprint Cup Series races at Michigan International Speedway, just for the sheer fact that I don't have to mention "that guy" who seemingly wins all the time.

Edwards won the Nationwide race Aug. 16 and the 3M Performance 400 Aug. 17, performing his trademark backflip after each victory, although he almost ate grass after the Sprint Cup win.

NASCAR heads to the tiny racetrack known as Bristol Motor Speedway for the Sharpie 500. It will be broadcast at 8 p.m. Saturday on ESPN. Have to love a Saturday night race at Bristol.

Bulldog Nation

The Associated Press named Georgia as number one in their preseason NCAA football poll. Ohio State was picked second, followed by USC at third, Oklahoma at fourth and the Florida Gators at fifth. Auburn made the top 10, at number 10. The season begins Thursday, although most of the ranked teams start Aug. 30.

LLWS

The Little League World Series wraps up this weekend with the International Championship at 12:30 p.m. and the U.S. Championship at 3:30 p.m. Saturday on ABC. The championship game will be at 3:30 p.m. Sunday on ABC.

Wounded warriors to take part in annual event

Country's Barbeque will host its annual Midnight Run Saturday at the Mercury Drive location. The 5K race, which has nearly 2,000 runners each year, has raised more than $200,000 for the visually impaired, including the Children's Miracle Network and the Blinded Veterans Association.

"This event has been a huge tradition in Columbus for the last 28 years," said Scott Ressmeyer, part owner of Country's Barbeque. "Every year, our goal is to make a difference one life at a time."

Country's has partnered with the Wounded Warriors Program to sponsor retired Sgt. Jeremy Feldbusch and Sgt. 1st Class John Brazzle's participation in the Midnight Run events.

Feldbusch, a former Fort Benning Soldier, was blinded in Iraq by a piece of shrapnel. Brazzle, a Soldier stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C., lost sight in his left eye after being injured during a training exercise.

A Soldier made history in the opening finals match of the first National Guard Combatives Tournament. Staff Sgt. Wendy Johnson, a Soldier from the Illinois Army National Guard, became the first female to participate in an Army combatives final Sunday at the Briant Wells Fieldhouse.

"I try not to think about the fact that I was the first female, because I believe a Soldier is a Soldier, but I knew I needed to hold my ground and show that women can give all they have just as a man can," said Johnson, a flyweight who placed second after losing to fellow Illinois Army National

Annual Hunting and Fishing Open House set for Wednesday

Fort Benning will host the annual post Hunting, Fishing Open House from 5 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Uchee Creek Activity Center.

The event is free and open to the public.

Fort Benning outdoorsmen have come to rely on the open house for information about changes in the hunting and fishing regulations on post, as well as updates on various programs available for sportsmen on and off post, said Darlene Hines, a specialist with Outdoor Recreation, which sponsors the event.

Attendees can expect an update on the post's pig eradication program and the Uchee Creek Archery Club, among other things.

This year's open house will be a family affair, Hines said. There will be a number of activities and prizes for children and adults.

Vendors include Tree Bark Taxidermy, Papa John's Pizza, Monkey Joe's, the Department of Natural Resources, Extreme Marine and Bill Heard Chevrolet.

There will be a raffle for a $1,000 gift certificate to Bass Pro Shop and various hunting supplies.

Raffle tickets can be purchased for $2.50 at the Outdoor Recreation office on Gillespie Street and the Uchee Creek Country Store. Any remaining tickets can be purchased at the event.

All participants will receive a ticket to win door prizes.

For more information about the event, call Hines at 706-545-9636.

AMU commander lauds shooters for Olympic performance

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Army Marksmanship Unit will bring home two Olympic Gold Medals. Pfc. Vincent Hancock won gold after defeating Norway's Tore Brovold in a shoot-off in the Skeet finals, and Spc. Glenn Eller won gold in Men's Double Trap.

"These wins reaffirm the importance of fundamental shooting," said Lt. Col. Frank Muggeo, the AMU commander, who returned from Beijing Monday.

"We have a great recruiting program, and these guys master the fundamentals to become the best shooters in the world."

Spc. Jeffrey Holgiun, who also shot in the Double Trap, missed the medal podium by one spot after shooting an overall score of 182.

Sgt. 1st Class Jason Parker, who competed in his third Olympics, finished 23rd in the Men's 10m Air Rifle with a total score of 591. The Omaha, Neb., native also competed in the Men's Three-Position Rifle, finishing 22nd with a score of 1,164 points.

Sgt. 1st Class Daryl Szaresnski, a three-time Olympian from Saginaw, Mich., finished 14th in the Men's 50m Free Pistol with a score of 550.

Maj. Michael Anti, a four-time Olympian, finished the Men's Prone Rifle in ninth place with 594.

"The level of competition out there is incredible. These countries have some of the best shooters in the world, and the difference between first and fiftieth place is a very small margin," Muggeo said. "I'm extremely proud of them."

Muggeo said the shooters will hit the road on a national tour over the next few weeks to show appreciation to supporters.

Summer Olympics spread patriotism, controversy

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Erin A. Nash

I was excited about the Summer Olympics in Beijing for weeks. I love sports, and I love competition, and the Olympics are the best of both worlds, especially since I get the chance to cheer on my country, the good ol' USA.

My family and I watched the opening ceremony attentively. The drummers were in sync, and the fireworks were awesome. Awesome, that is, until it was revealed shortly after that some of the fireworks were computer enhanced. Right after that, it was revealed that the cute little girl singing, 9-year-old Lin Miaoke, was lip-syncing the words to Ode to the Motherland. Yang Peiyi, a 7-year-old, was supposed to sing the song, but right before the ceremony, was dubbed "not cute enough." Say what? I saw pictures of both girls, and they were both adorable. China did both children and the viewers a disservice by swapping the girls at the last minute. I sincerely hope Peiyi wasn't told the real reason why she wasn't able to sing, but, sadly, she'll probably figure it out someday.

The first few days of the Games, I watched every event possible. I learned the rules while watching handball, discovered men's field hockey is an Olympic sport and had to suppress a laugh when a commentator declared the badminton players "exhausted." I'm not trying to take anything away from an athlete or their sport, but I've been known to play badminton for hours without breaking a sweat. Sure, these are the Olympics, and the athletes are playing their hearts out, but were they really exhausted?

The biggest story of the Olympics is Michael Phelps, of course. The world watched as he won eight gold medals in swimming, breaking swimmer Mark Spitz's seven golds at the 1972 Munich Olympics. Not only did he win the most gold medals in a single Olympics, he eclipsed the world record time in most of the races. Granted, he held most, but it's still a great feat.

The closest race Phelps was in was the 100m butterfly, where he beat Milorad Cavic of Serbia by a hundredth of a second. I was holding my breath until they posted the results, and immediately started knuckle bumping everyone in the room.

I'm a "Phelps Phan" through and through and can't wait to see him in the 2012 Olympics.

My favorite sport to watch is women's gymnastics. The Nash family picked 16-year-old Shawn Johnson as our favorite, as did many Americans. The American women won silver, behind China, who won gold. There was much criticism as to the real age of the Chinese women, as rumors put some of the girls at 13 or 14 years of age. One girl didn't even have all of her adult teeth yet, which leads me to believe the rumors might be true.

Other criticism, especially from former U.S. women's gymnastics coach Bela Karolyi, said that the U.S. gymnasts were scored unfairly, that they didn't score as high as they should have. I had to agree, especially after a seemingly perfect vault from U.S. team member Nastia Liukin was scored very low, as compared to a Chinese gymnast who had a big step on dismount and was scored higher. I know the scoring is different, but it doesn't confuse me. There are two different scores, one for the difficulty of the attempted apparatus and one for technique, which are then combined. The days of a perfect 10 are no more.

If you haven't been watching the Olympics, you have until Sunday to get in on the action. I'm still excited about the Games, despite all the controversy, and will continue to cheer on the USA.

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

I have wanted to write an article about nutritional supplements for quite some time now. There are so many products out there on the market, so I started doing some research and want to share some of what I have learned.

Since there is so much important information about supplements, I have decided to break this down into several weeks. This week I want to discuss what a supplement is, how they are regulated, and how to choose the best one for you. Next week, I will discuss the 10 most popular dietary supplements in detail.

The biggest thing I want everyone to remember is that dietary supplements are designed to supplement your diet, not replace nutritious foods. These supplements enhance diets where there are shortfalls, but dietary supplements can not replace a healthy diet.

Good nutritious foods are very complex, offering vitamins, minerals, fiber, carbohydrates, proteins, fats and a whole host of other nutritious substances. But often times the foods you eat do not provide adequate amounts of vitamins and minerals that are needed, especially for pregnant women, strict vegetarians, people with food allergies and senior citizens.

This is when supplements can provide that additional source of nutrition your body needs.

It can be really tough to figure out what to choose among the assortment of supplements that you can find out there. It leaves you wondering which ones are the best.

Here are a few tips to keep in mind when choosing a supplement for you.

Regulation:

I think many worry now about the way things are regulated these days. There are so many products with recalls that we sometimes feel like we have no idea what's OK and what's not.

If there are any questions as to which supplement you should choose, first and foremost, make sure that they are FDA approved. Buying a product that is FDA approved ensures that you are purchasing and ingesting a supplement that is produced in a quality manner, does not contain impurities or contaminants, and is accurately labeled with all ingredients. Most importantly, you know that whatever you're taking is effective and safe.

Product brands and what they promise:

Look for supplements with a trusted brand name that have been around for some time.

This will help ensure that what is found on the label is safe. There have been many supplements that are found to have been contaminated with heavy metals, so choosing a brand that is well known and respected will help ensure that the product is safe.

Also, read the claims carefully. If something sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Products that promise to pack on 20 pounds of muscle in weeks are not going to deliver because nothing can yield those kinds of results.

I would suggest doing some research yourself into any supplement you are looking to take.

You can find some really helpful information in the International Journal of Sports Nutrition and Exercise Metabolism or Medicine and Science in Sports and Exercise, or even the FDA Web site.

I hope this gives you some insight on dietary supplements, and how to make an educated choice when purchasing them.

Next week I want to go over the top 10 dietary supplements on the market today, and what they offer you.

But all in all, remember that there is no substitute for a healthy, well rounded diet rich in fresh fruit, vegetables, whole grains and complete proteins. Thanks for reading Fit Facts.

Finger football tournament set for Aug. 30

Columbus man's board game scheduled for eight-city tournament circuit

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

A Columbus native has taken his love for the age-old game of finger football to a new level.

Spud Alford, the president of Zelosport, created the prototype for a finger football board game four years ago to update the childhood game, typically played with a piece of paper folded into a triangle. Alford said his reason for creating the game was to pull families away from video games and back to their kitchen tables.

"My goal was to invent games that not only give feelings of nostalgia, but to bring families together. Video games require very little interaction with others, and I wanted to create games where families can focus on communication and togetherness."

Zelosport has grown to include finger baseball, golf and soccer games and the finger football games are licensed by the NFL and 60 collegiate universities.

Zelosport will host a finger football tournament Aug. 30 in Columbus. The winner of the 256 player tournament will receive $1,000. The $20 entry fee includes a free finger football board game.

Zelosport will host the first of an eight-city finger football tournament Aug. 30 at 8 p.m. at the Cornerstone Church of God gymnasium in Columbus.

The tournament will have 256 players competing in single elimination games. Contestants will flick a "slider" across a 2 foot by 4 foot vinyl football field with their finger to pick up rushing yards, passing yards and score touchdowns. Thumping a three-inch foam football between an opponent's hands, which form a goal post, scores extra points and field goals.

Players will be randomly selected for their matches and will be given advance notice of their match times. The final two players will compete for a grand prize of $1,000. The top four finishers will receive cash prizes and will advance to the National Championships in Pine Mountain, Ga. The winner of nationals will receive $10,000.

"Whether you're a young child or a grandparent, if you have a finger that works, you can play this game. It's addictive, and it's a lot of fun," Alford said.

The tournament is open to players 10 years of age and older. The entry fee is $20.

Participants will receive a free finger football board game for entering.

To register, visit www.zelosport.com or register at Zelosport office at 3021 Sandy Parkway, Suite E, in Columbus.

For more information, call Alford at 706-763-9290.

362nd edges out FSC

The 362nd Engineer Company (Multi Role Bridge) defeated the Forward Support Company, 11th Engineer Battalion, 19-12, in one of 30 intramural preseason football games this week at Essebagger Field.

FSC scored six points early after Antonio Lewis led a touchdown drive. During 362nd's first possession, running back Arthur Coleman moved the ball deep into FSC territory. FSC's Ratrel McLean made an interception to rob 362nd of their first score.

In the second half, 362nd completed short passes, which led to a score within four minutes. During FSC's first series of the half, they cut 362nd's lead to one with a touchdown. Midway through the half, 362nd's quarterback Christian Jones found Williams again for a deep touchdown pass, making the score 19-12.

FSC followed with two interceptions but was unable to score before time expired.

"Defensively, we just read their quarterback's eyes," Williams said. "We knew where he was going to throw the ball every time, and we forced him to make mistakes."

The preseason tournament will continue through Thursday. For more information, call sports coordinator Willie Spann at 706-984-1994.

Combatives: Draws 53 Guardsmen from 12 states

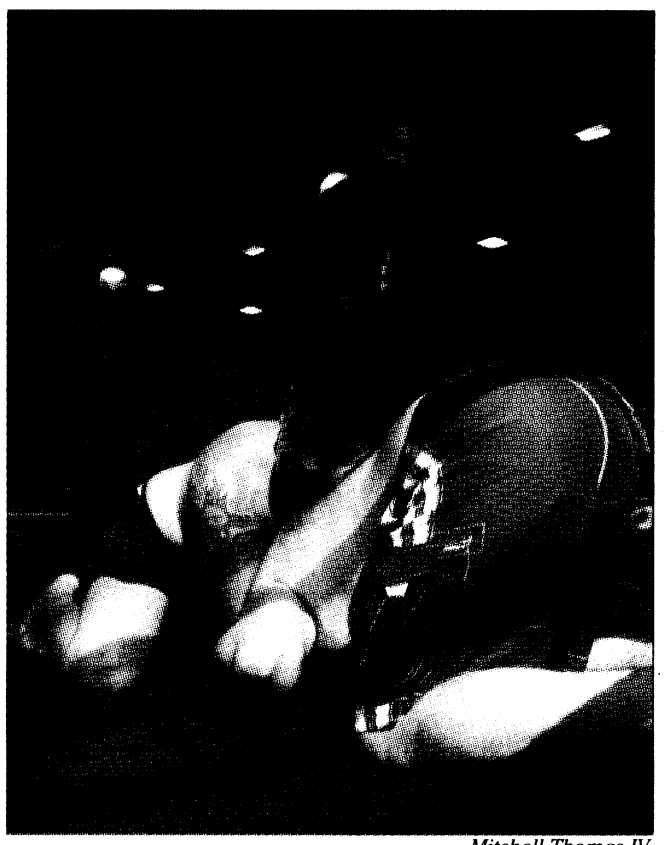
Guardsman Sgt. Joshua Crawford.

Fifty-three participants from Guard units in 12 states participated in the two-day competition hosted by the Warrior Training Center. Capt. Andrew Heyman, the tournament director, said the event was a step toward encouraging more units to incorporate combatives into their training.

"Combatives training is essential to being a complete Soldier," Heyman said.

"All Soldiers must know how to go downrange and engage with the enemy if its necessary."

The early rounds of the competition were conducted under the standard combatives rules while the semifinals followed the intermediate limited strike rules. The finals were conducted under advanced combatives rules, which allowed closed fist strikes, kicks, throws, ground strikes and submissions.



Mitchell Thomas IV

Spc. Lazaro Palos headlocks Maj. Dominic Dennis during the light heavyweight finals of the National Guard Combatives Tournament.

Sgt. 1st Class Michael Hannan, a lightweight who won his finals match by submission, said the camaraderie between the Guard units is as important as the competition.

"We all flew out here together, and we wanted to show what we can do as a team," Hannan said. "All of the units are passing along their knowledge and everyone is open to learning new techniques whether they're experienced or inexperienced fighters."

Country's: Raises money for visually impaired

Ressmeyer said. "To watch these two guys participate in the activities will be an inspiration. They are great examples of what you can do if you keep a positive attitude regardless of the circumstances."

Today's festivities, which draw thousands of participants each year, will begin at 8 p.m. with the fourth annual Perfect Touch Automotive Playground car show. Participation in the car show is free and open to the public.

Gold's Gym will also conduct a spin exercise bike class. The cost to participate in the spin class is $25, which includes a T-shirt and a meal.

There will be music and games, including a big-screen Guitar Hero competition, until the start of the race at midnight. There will be prizes for the winners in each age division of the race. Walkers are welcome to participate. The cost for the race is $25 per participant. Registration will take place on site.

The event began with an 18-hole golf tournament Thursday at Maple Ridge. There will be a beep ball exhibition game today at 7 p.m. at the Columbus State baseball field. Beep ball, a game typically played by visually impaired players, features a ball that beeps as it is pitched to the hitter. A team of Midnight Run sponsors will compete blindfolded against the Chicago Comets, a world champion beep ball team. The game is free for spectators.

Today's motorcycle poker run is a 75-mile route with five stops to collect five playing cards. The biker who returns to the Mercury Drive Country's before 8 p.m. with the best five cards will receive a Harley Davidson leather jacket.

Scouting for funds

CFC funds help Boy, Girl Scouts

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Shannon Moon thinks every girl deserves a chance to be a Girl Scout.

"The activities they do in Girl Scouts impact their lives for years to come … the team building, the confidence, that camaraderie, community service," said Moon, the service unit director for Fort Benning Girl Scouts. "Through Girl Scouts, my daughter has gone skiing in Switzerland. How many people can say that?"

Sometimes a family can't afford to pay the registration fees, but that doesn't have to keep their daughters out of the program, Moon said.

Funds from the Soldier and Family Support Association, raised through the Combined Federal Campaign, supplement registration fees and other expenses for families who want to put their daughters in Girl Scouts.

"'Every girl, everywhere,' that's our motto," Moon said. "Last year, we had a family who had three girls, and they couldn't afford to register all three, so we stepped in. There are (SFSA) funds set aside for that purpose."

Last year, SFSA raised more than $25,000, a 50 percent increase over 2006. Chris Ryan, SFSA president, hopes to raise $35,000 this year.

They have been supporting Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts on post for several years, Ryan said.

All CFC funds given to SFSA stay on Fort Benning, said Reggie Thompson, senior district executive of Boy Scouts. Money he receives through SFSA helps pay for uniforms, activities, fees, books and camp for roughly 140 boys.

"We make sure that every boy gets the opportunity to join Boy Scouts regardless of financial means," he said. "One day, they'll be running our businesses, leading the country. They'll be teachers in our schools. Every boy has the chance, and the Soldier and Family Support Association makes it possible."

Soldiers and DoD Civilians can support Fort Benning Scouts by writing in code 24249 on their CFC allotment forms, available from unit CFC representatives. Donors may select up to five codes.

The campaign kicks off at 9 a.m. Aug. 28 in Classroom 6, Infantry Hall, and closes Oct. 17. To have your organization receive funds from SFSA, contact Ryan at 706-610-5666.

Post housing liaison officer to listen to Benning residents

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

It doesn't get more basic than food and shelter. The latter is the number one concern for Fort Benning families reported to Army Family Action Plan officials.

"Housing is the main issue for a Soldier in transition to a new installation," said Raul Brown, deputy housing manager. "You need to have a place to put your head down."

For residents who have any issues or questions related to post housing, Fort Benning's new housing liaison officer, Sabine Ford is here to help. From finding information to mediating between families and housing authorities, Ford said she plans to be an impartial third party who gets the job done.

The housing liaison officer is an option for residents who have already talked with their leasing office, Brown said. She is a point of contact to listen to those families and answer their questions.

Listening will go a long way, whether the issue is pool regulations, landscaping or the possibility of town hall meetings, said Sharon DeNova, who has lived in the Davis Hill housing area for the last four years.

"I think we deserve to be heard," she said. "We need to be represented and bring some of these issues to the table."

Since Ford's dad was an NCO in the Army, she knows the stress associated with frequent moves.

"If you're happy at home and you're comfortable, that's going to trickle into other areas of your life," she said. "My goal would be to ensure that (residents) are satisfied with whatever the outcome of the situation will be. I can't guarantee that everybody's going to leave my office with a smile on their face, but I'm going to try to do what I can to have them leave as happy as I can make them."

To contact Ford, call 706-545-3009, or visit the Family Housing Welcome Center, 601 Lumpkin Road, across from the gas station on Dixie Road, between 8 a.m. and 4:15 p.m.

ARMY MARRIAGE PROJECT

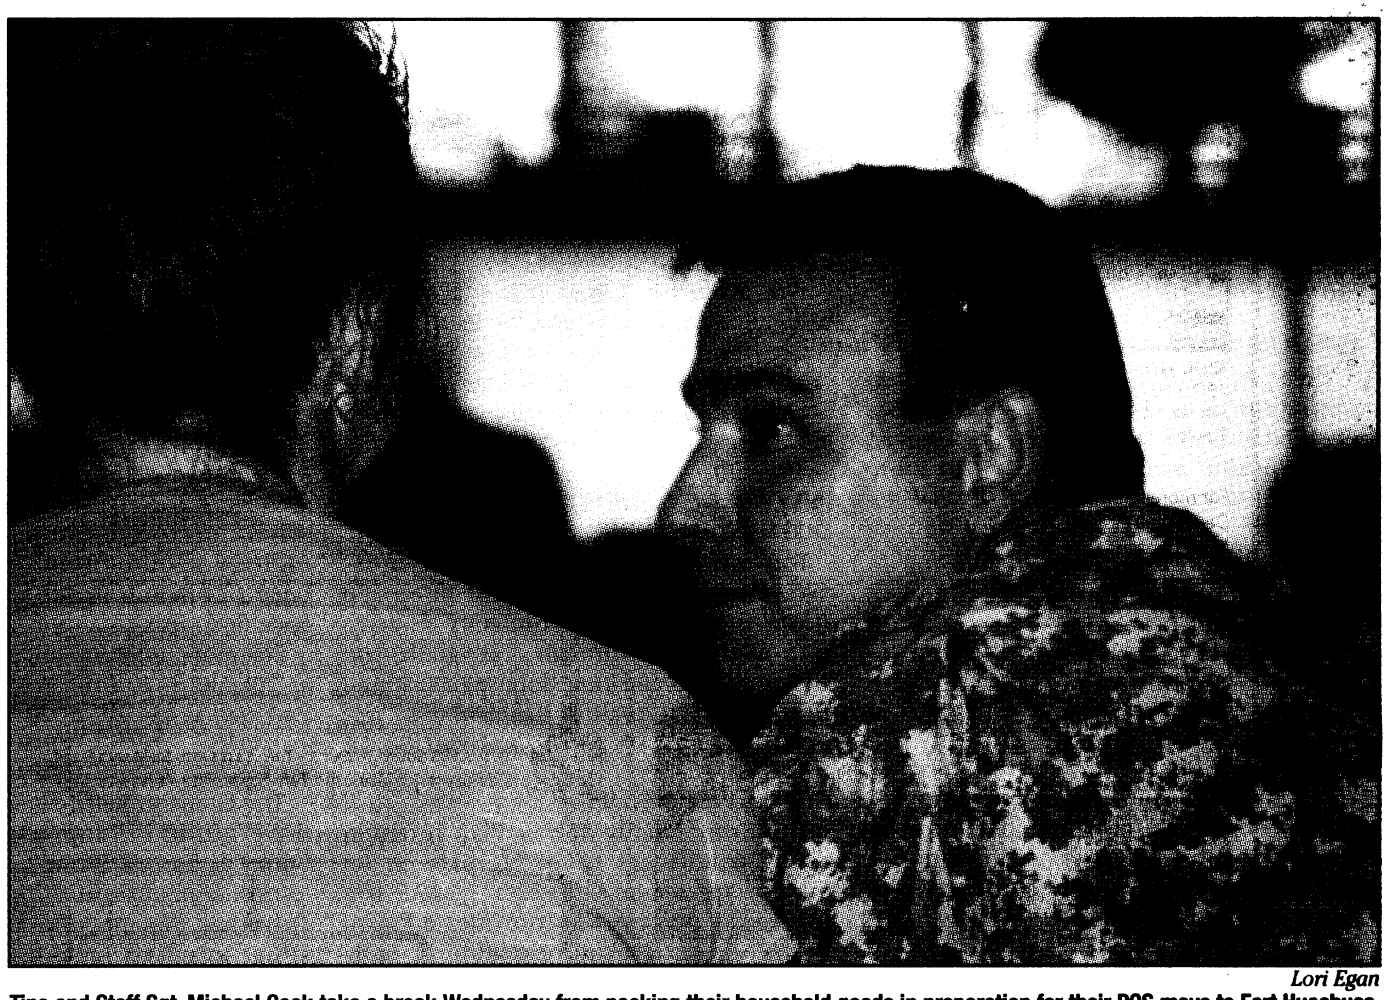
PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Michelle L. Gordon

Registration for the final Army Marriage Project session ends soon, marking the last opportunity for Fort Benning couples to get paid to enhance their marriages.

The Army Marriage Project is a three-year study to gather common principles Army couples use to prevent conflicts and increase marital happiness. The information is collected by a series of confidential questionnaires.

"Nobody on post or in the Army will see the information," said Deb McCranie, Army Marriage Project program coordinator. "Everything is completely confidential and all couples are given an ID number so their names are never on the questionnaires."



Lori Egan

Tina and Staff Sgt. Michael Cook take a break Wednesday from packing their household goods in preparation for their PCS move to Fort Huachuca, Ariz. The couple said their 10-year marriage has survived numerous moves and two deployments because of communication.

In addition to the questionnaires, half of the couples will also be randomly selected to receive a workshop and a Strong Bonds marital retreat. The workshop is held on post during the duty day and the retreat is a weekend at Callaway Gardens. Food, lodging and child care are all provided for both.

All couples are paid for completing questionnaires. They receive $100 as a couple for the first and the second questionnaires, $120 for the third and fourth, $140 for the fifth and sixth and $160 for the final completed questionnaire. McCranie said the questions focus on how couples relate to one another, such as their patterns of communication and their solutions for solving arguments, as well as how they each cope with deployments. The average couple completes a questionnaire in approximately 45 minutes to one hour and the couple receives $200 during the first month of the program. McCranie has already paid out more than $20,000 since the program was launched at Fort Benning in May.

Military donations can go to specific installations

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The Office of the Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Army launched a new Web site, giftstoarmy.army.mil, July 18.

The Web site provides information to the public on how to donate cash or goods and services to benefit Soldiers and families.

"With the war going on, you have more people who want to donate and show their support for the military," said Debbi Addison, chief of Non-Appropriated Funds Support Management Division on Fort Benning. "Some people don't know how they can help, but this Web site gives them a comprehensive look at how they can."

People can donate to a specific installation, to the Army, Soldiers and families and Wounded Warriors. The Web site includes links to every installation.

Donations up to $10,000 can be made online with credit cards to the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation headquarters. Goods, services and gifts of more than $10,000 can be accepted at installations, but not on the site, and donations for individual installations must go through the installation points of contact.

At Fort Benning, donors can contribute to the installation Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund, the Army Community Service Volunteer Association, the Soldier and Family Support Association, the installation Chaplain's Fund and the Soldier and Family Assistance Center.

For more information, go to giftstoarmy.army.mil. For more information about donating to Fort Benning, call Addison at 706-545-4060 or e-mail her at Debra.I.Addison@us.army.mil.

To participate in the project both spouses must speak English fluently and at least one spouse must be an active-duty Soldier assigned to Fort Benning. However, participating couples do not have to be stationed at Fort Benning the entire length of the study. They only need to be present to complete the first two questionnaires and attend the marital retreat if selected.

"Basically if you sign up for the program we have to know that you'll be at Benning for at least five weeks," said Chap. (Lt. Col.) Thomas Waynick, director of the Fort Benning Army Family Life Chaplain Training Program.

"Then you can deploy, you can PCS, you can even ETS and the questionnaires will follow you because they will be done online."

The final Army Marriage Project session is set to begin Monday, but to ensure maximum attendance, McCranie will keep registration open until Sept. 3 or until the class is full.

For more information, call 706-505-7770.

"This project gives Fort Benning couples an opportunity to not only enhance their own marriages, but also to enhance the marriages of couples Armywide," Waynick said, "plus they get paid to do so."

ARMY MARRIAGE PROJECT

Payment for questionnaires*:

1st: $100
2nd: $100
3rd: $120
4th: $120

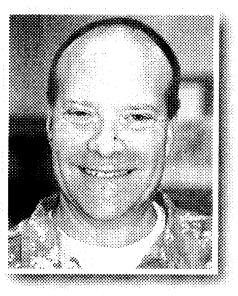
'ry to view a situation from spouse's perspective

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

OK, let's review: Habit No. 1: Be Proactive — You be the agent of change in your family. Habit No. 2: Begin with the End in Mind — Create a family mission statement, keep the goal of your family in focus. Habit No. 3: Put First Things First —Make family a priority in your heart and on your calendar. Habit No. 4: Think "Win-Win" — don't make everyday family life a constant battle or competition, but rather work together toward a solution where all parties involved see the solution as a win. This week it's Habit No. 5: Seek First to Understand, Then to be Understood. This is learning the twin skill sets of A — problem discussion, and B — problem solution. Interestingly, you can't get to the solution effectively without first giving the other person the feeling they have been valued and listened to.



Men by nature are fixers. When you tell a man a problem, he listens and calculates solutions. Men do not vent to one another. If they share their problems with other men, they typically want help in resolving a problem.

So what happens when a woman wants to vent or share with a man? He begins to analyze the problem and formulate solutions. Is this what women want? No, they want to be heard.

Men are listening, but not understanding because they are listening with the fixing ear.

Habit No. 5 allows you to get both inside the head and the heart of the one you love. It uses the one speaker, one listener rule — the wife speaks and her husband listens. The husband listens to the wife for understanding from "her" perspective and then acknowledges he understood her message by paraphrasing what he heard.

Guys, this skill alone will revolutionize your life and marriage. If you will listen without giving advice, input or solutions and just acknowledge her message, demonstrating you understand her point of view, she will feel you love and care for her.

Once the listener hears and acknowledges the speaker, then they switch roles and in our case above, the husband gets to speak while the wife listens to her husband.

Too often people try to solve a problem before they really understand the problem. While sincere in their intent, if they are trying to fix something that is not the problem, they waste a great amount of time and gain a great amount of frustration. Habit No. 5 helps families communicate effectively and reduces the amount of conflict because of miscommunication.

If you find you are spinning your wheels and not getting anywhere with your spouse or family, maybe this habit will help.

If you need some communication help in your family, call the Chaplain Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 or stop by 2606 Dixie Road and make a confidential appointment with one of our trained pastoral counselors.

A good attitude, perspective, thanks can go a long way

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (1st Lt.) Nathan White

"Give thanks in all circumstances, for this is God's will for you in Christ Jesus."

1 Thessalonians 5:18

"What is God's will for my life?" This is a question that I have asked myself and wrestled with many times. And I know that I am not alone in my struggle to figure out what I want to do with my life, and more importantly, what God wants me to do with my life.

People (both religious and non-religious) have asked themselves this question for centuries. Yet when we turn to the Bible, we find a surprising answer.

There is no specific plan laid out for us, and there are no explicit answers to the pressing questions in our lives such as "Who should I marry?" and "Should I re-enlist?" Instead, what we find is a simple answer to this seemingly complex question.

"What is God's will for my life?" Just "give thanks." That's it. It's so simple, yet so profound. So straight forward, yet so hard to actually do. That is the beauty of this Scripture — It can be applied in any circumstance, but it is powerful enough to transform our attitudes and our outlook on life.

God knew we would have questions about what direction to head in life, and he knew we would have worries, doubts and fears as we travel through this world.

He is concerned about these aspects of our lives and he has promised to guide and direct us, but he is concerned with something much more fundamental — our attitude.

It is our attitude that can determine whether or not we have success in many situations, and ultimately our attitude will have an important part in shaping who we become. How we think will shape how we act. Having a good attitude is not merely a matter of thinking good thoughts and looking on the bright side, however. You can find that in any self-help or pop-psychology book.

Rather, a good attitude will be a result of having the right perspective, a perspective that is God-centered. A God-centered life naturally will be a life full of thanksgiving.

When we give thanks, we have to give thanks to someone. When we receive a gift, we say thank you to the person who gave it to us. In the same way, when we give thanks to God we are acknowledging that we have received our life and the blessings in it from him.

We can thank him in all circumstances because he is with us in everything we go through and is working all things for the good of those who love him. So even our disappointments and struggles can be opportunities for praise and thanksgiving to the one who gave us life and daily sustains us.

So the next time you find yourself down and out, wondering about God's will for your life, or in the middle of a tough situation, turn your gaze heavenward and start to thank God for the blessings that he has given to you despite the tough circumstances.

You will find that this perspective makes all the difference in the world.

Naturally, a great place to play

Fort Benning's Kings Pond offers primitive camping with not-so primitive amenities

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Fall is in the air, someone said the other day in the office. By the time I got there (outdoors, where the air hangs out), fall had apparently fallen out of the air. Which is the nature of fall, one would think.

But I know — based upon historical data and interviews with subject matter experts — that fall is coming soon. It's on its way. It's right around the corner, hanging there in the air, no doubt, just waiting for you and me to catch up.

And I'll get there, just as soon as I shake the cobwebs out of my sleeping bag, Febreze the tent someone put away damp last year (It was "Not Me" that did it, I swear), tackle that tangle of fishing rods in the attic and load up on chocolate bars, marshmallows and graham crackers. Because those are the ingredients of a successful camping trip. And a successful camping trip is all I really need to feel fallish.

I'm a big fan of our very own Uchee Creek Campground and Resort. In fact, Uchee Creek has quite a fan base. It's popular year-round with RVers and boaters and those who prefer their "camping" accommodations with a porch swing and a television set. Uchee Creek is popular, period.

Which is why I head to Kings Pond when I want to be alone with all the other people who want to be alone.

Kings Pond is billed as a "rustic campground." That's a nice way of saying you can feel like a primitive camper without having to dig a latrine and gather leaves.

You won't get cable at Kings Pond — and you might not get a cell phone signal — but you will find indoor plumbing, a playground and picnic pavilions.

The park centers on a 75-acre pond, which is off-limits for swimming but great for fishing, boating and watching ducks and gators and snakes and the elusive red-cockaded woodpecker. So make sure you have a fishing license, a life vest and a healthy respect for wildlife.

And make sure you have a good pair of hiking boots, because you'll want to explore the trails around the lake, where you'll find more wildlife of the cute winged variety than anything else and lots and lots of wildflowers.

If you plan to set up camp, you might want to check in with the folks at Fort Benning's Outdoor Recreation Center on Gillespie Street on Main Post. They'll tell you what you need to know to camp safely and legally at Kings Pond.

And there you just might find something — like equipment or games — to make your camping experience more fun.

To get to Kings Pond from Main Post, you should take Dixie Road to 8th Division Road all the way past the shoppette in Harmony Church and beyond Victory Pond.

DEATH RACE

Overcrowding in the U.S. penal system has reached a breaking point. Prisons have been turned over to a monolithic Weyland Corporation, which sees jails full of thugs as an opportunity for televised sport. Adrenalized inmates, a global audience hungry for violence and a spectacular, enclosed arena come together to form the "Death Race," the world's biggest, most brutal sporting event. Five-time NASCAR champion Jensen Ames is a man who has become an expert at survival. After eight years of hard time, he has only six weeks before reuniting with his family. But when Weyland demands a driver to headline the big game, Ames is forced to submit.

Death Race stars Jason Statham, Joan Allen, Ian McShane, Tyrese Gibson, Natalie Martinez It is rated R for violence and language.

THE HOUSE BUNNY

Shelley Darlington has lived at the Playboy mansion for the last nine years. She is Hef's favorite and acts like a den mother to the other girls. On her birthday, she is unceremoniously evicted from Hef's pad for being too old. Homeless and without essential skills, Shelley wanders around L.A. until she finds a new job — the housemother at the most unpopular sorority on campus.

The House Bunny stars Anna Faris, Emma Stone, Rumer Willis, Kat Dennings and Katherine McPhee. It is rated PG-13 for sex-related humor, nudity and language.

THE LONGSHOTS

Hamlet 2 stars Steve Coogan, Catherine Keener, Skylar Astin, Amy Poehler and Phoebe Strole. It is rated R for language, nudity and drug content.

THE ROCKER

A failed drummer is given a second chance at fame 20 years after being booted out of his famous band. Robert "Fish" Fishman is the extremely dedicated and astoundingly passionate drummer for an 80s band until he is unceremoniously kicked out. Twenty years after his rock star fantasies are destroyed, just when Fish has finally given up all hope, he hears that his nephew's high school rock band A.D.D. is looking for a new drummer.

The Rocker stars Rainn Wilson, Christina Applegate, Jane Lynch, Josh Gad and Jeff Garlin. It is rated PG-13 for drug and sexual references, nudity and language.

MIRRORS

A man is head of security at a department store plagued by unexplained deaths. The store is also the target of demonstrators wanting compensation for an earlier staff fire tragedy. The man becomes intrigued by a disturbed woman who claims her dead sister is exacting revenge, using mirrors as a gateway back into the living world.

Mirrors stars Kiefer Sutherland, Paula Patton, Ezra Buzzington, Erica Gluck and Cameron Boyce. Mirrors is rated R for violence, language and nudity.

FLY ME TO THE MOON 3D

Three houseflies stow away on Apollo 11's flight to the moon.

Fly Me to the Moon 3D is rated G.

STAR WARS: THE CLONE WARS

On the front lines of an intergalactic struggle between good and evil, Anakin Skywalker, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Padme Amidala, along with Anakin's padawan learner, Ahsoka battle villains — led by Palpatine, Count Dooku and General Grievous, who want to rule the galaxy.

Star Wars: The Clone Wars is rated PG for sci-fi action violence, language and smoking.

TROPIC THUNDER

Ben Stiller, Jack Black, Robert Downey Jr., Jay Baruchel and Nick Nolte star in Tropic Thunder, a movie about a group of self-absorbed actors who set out to make a war film.

Ballooning costs cause the studio to cancel the movie; however, the director refuses to stop shooting, takes the cast to Southeast Asia where they meet real bad guys.

THE SISTERHOOD OF THE TRAVELING PANTS 2

Lifelong friends (America Ferrara, Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel and Blake Lively) embark on separate paths for their first year of college and the summer beyond, but remain in touch by sharing their experiences with each other as they always have — with honesty and humor. Discovering their individual strengths, fears, talents and capacity for love through the choices they make, they come to value the bond they share and the immeasurable power of their friendship.

PINEAPPLE EXPRESS

Lazy stoner Dale Denton (Seth Rogen) has only one reason to visit his equally lazy dealer Saul Silver (James Franco): to purchase a rare new strain of weed called Pineapple Express. Brig. Gen. Donald Campbell, chief of Armor, and Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, chief of Infantry, sign a charter establishing the Maneuver Center and Realignment Coordination Cell's virtual operating capability during the board of directors meeting. The VOC will allow for policies, procedures, methods and plans to be developed at the MCOE level. It will also allow the Infantry and Armor schools to leverage their full capabilities for the MCOE, said Michael Gillette, Fort Knox chief of Strategic Plans. "There is no MCOE switch that can be turned on to activate and establish the MCOE — the VOC is our first step," Gillette said.

Ten-year-old Morgan Mahurin's dad deployed with the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team three times during her years at Dexter Elementary. Each time, the Deployment Club at Dexter was there to help.

"It was a fun thing we could always look forward to. We could go in there and talk about our feelings and our parents and wishing they were back," said Morgan, now a student at Faith Middle School. "When someone's not there, you're always missing them. It's really tough. (The club) helped because it was a place you could go to get your emotions out — sort of like a comfort zone away from home."

Kids met weekly during school hours to talk and make crafts, such as picture frames or cards for the deployed parent. Having that support system at school, where Morgan spent so much of her day, helped her stay close to her dad, said her mother, Kris.

"The club helped her keep him a part of that life and somehow include him in what she was doing," Kris said. "With all the deployments, over and over, doing something like this helps the child realize, most importantly, that they're not going through it alone. They have the same worries and fears and heartaches."

It's talking about their feelings that lets the children concentrate on their work —

AMU shooters bring home Olympic Gold Medals

FORT BENNING PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Michelle L. Gordon

Superb, excellent, exceptional — all of these words can be used to describe the two Soldiers who returned from Beijing with Olympic Gold Medals, but perhaps the most appropriate word is humble.

Spc. Walton Glenn Eller III and Pfc. Vincent Hancock are assigned to the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit. They each won a Gold Medal in the sport of shooting, and they set three Olympic records. Both Soldiers started shooting at a young age, but they attribute their recent successes to their military training.

"Being Soldiers really helped us overcome the nervousness and the hardships we encountered as athletes," Hancock said. "We were well-equipped to handle the pressure."

Jennifer Gunn

Pfc. Vincent Hancock and Spc. Glenn Eller pose with their Gold Medals Monday in front of Infantry Hall's Follow Me Statue.

Hancock, the youngest member on the USAMU team, has been shooting since the age of 10. He joined the Army on the advice of his older brother.

Hancock said it was the knowledge his brother gained from his military experience that convinced him to join. As a member of the USAMU, he now has access to the best ranges and the best facilities, but he said it's the people he trains with who really put it "over the top" for him.

Hancock's teammate also credits his Army training for perfecting his accuracy. Eller competed as a civilian shooter in the 2000 Olympic Games in Sydney and the 2004 games in Athens, but he never medaled. In September 2006, he joined the Army and was assigned to the USAMU four months later.

"I'm so proud to be a Soldier, it's unbelievable," he said. "The Army gave me the tools I needed to stay calm under pressure and perform to the best of my abilities. They helped me achieve my dream of winning a Gold Medal."

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Veterans, wounded warriors have needed experience for Fort Benning's transition to the Maneuver Center

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

It is a misconception to think that simply because a Soldier leaves the Army he or she is no longer part of the Army Family. As Soldiers transition from the Army they take away skill sets, values, and vast experience attained from years of service.

Many of our former Soldiers will find themselves leaving military service equipped with skills uniquely suited to an Infantry environment and they may decide to pursue a career as an Army civilian.

While this situation is not unique to Fort Benning, our mission as the "Home of the Infantry," and soon, the "Maneuver Center of Excellence," will offer a diverse range of jobs with upward progression that will be filled by Government Service, Wage Grade, and contract personnel. A great number of these positions can be filled by retired military or prior service members. It is important for us to capitalize on the knowledge of these individuals as we continue to fight the Global War on Terrorism.

Now more than ever former Soldiers find themselves continuing to serve in ever-increasing capacities as Army civilians and DoD contractors. The need to maintain optimal operational readiness levels has caused the Army to look to the personnel assets of Training and Doctrine Command to meet the needs of the operational force.

In order to provide a pool of trained officers and NCOs capable of filling our operational Army and complete our mission of training Soldiers, leaders, and functional skills, a paradigm shift in the mission and roles of our civilian work force has occurred.

Filling the gaps in TRADOC with quality people comes with its own set of challenges, both in the physical and regulatory realm. While some positions easily lend themselves to conversion from military to civilian, other positions are not suited for civilian personnel. Fortunately, many of our wounded warriors arrive from the battlefield with a desire to continue to serve. These veterans, trained in the desired skills and endowed with lessons learned from the contemporary operational environment, are filling gaps and training Soldiers at Fort Benning and elsewhere. These warriors, while asking little more than to continue their service in their field of expertise, bring a wealth of knowledge, practical experience, and credibility to the training arena.

Though we often think of continuing to serve as being confined to a military reservation boundary, nothing could be further from the truth. Americans from the Revolutionary War to the Global War on Terrorism have served honorable tours of duty and returned to the jobs they left at home. And as more of America's young men and women serve in our military forces and return to the civilian sector, the military's sphere of influence continues to expand. In fact, many of our Soldiers leaving the service continue to support and serve in heightened capacities and are eventually elevated to positions of authority that impact, either directly or indirectly, the face of the military and our nation.

Regardless of what one chooses to do when leaving the Army, continuing to serve is not born out of need but out of desire.

The "Soldier Bond" cannot be erased from the record nor left on the stage at the retirement ceremony; it follows each of us who have served through the remainder of our lives. Those who end their military service with a desire to share their skills, lessons learned, and areas of expertise gained from their time in the Army, are a big part of what makes us strong. They have a vested interest in Soldiers serving now and will continue to seek opportunities to assist in the missions that ensure the success of today's Army.

What woman has been an inspiration to you?

It was my great grandmother. She was born in 1900, but she was still around when I was growing up. She kept the family together. They respected her. She always wanted to do the right thing. When I was 5, she taught me to read the Bible. She was a Christian.

Coretta King, because after her husband's death she took over the responsibility of civil rights for black women and men. It's inspired me to be a better woman and help everybody with whatever they need, because she helped a lot of people, black and white.

My girlfriend. She got me to keep going even though I didn't want to. She motivated me through tours in Iraq. It's a tough time mentally and physically, but if you have the right person, it makes it that much easier.

My mother. I've been in the military 23 years, and she's always been there for me. When times got hard, things got difficult, I would call her and she'd be there for that inspiration. In this line, that's important, because sometimes you have doubts.

Army has zero tolerance for sexual assault, advocates complete reporting

FAMILY ADVOCACY PROGRAM
Rebecca Welch

You may have heard it in safety briefings, trainings, or incoming briefs: "Sexual assault degrades mission readiness and has no place in our Army."

You may have looked around at your fellow Soldiers and wondered, "I know all of these people. I work with them every day. Is sexual assault even a problem here?"

Unfortunately, sexual assault is a problem both in the Army and civilian sectors.

According to current national statistics, one in 33 men and one in six women will be sexually assaulted during their lifetime. Think of all the men and women you know socially and through work, and those numbers start to sound alarming.

Sexual assault is a crime unlike any other. Instead of a material possession being taken away, victims' ability to choose what happens to their bodies is stolen from them.

In order to heal, in addition to seeking help from an advocate, counselor or friend, it is important for victims to feel empowered to take back control of their lives.

One of the ways victims can begin to feel more in control is through educated choices. Victims of sexual assault have two confidential reporting options: restricted and unrestricted.

Restricted reporting allows a Soldier who is a sexual assault victim to disclose the details of the assault confidentially to specifically identified individuals and receive medical treatment and counseling without triggering the official investigative process.

Soldiers who are sexually assaulted and desire restricted reporting should report to the Sexual Assault Response Coordinator, Victim Advocate, health-care provider or chaplain.

The Army prefers complete reporting of sexual assaults to activate both victims' services and accountability actions.

This can only be achieved through unrestricted reporting, which allows a Soldier to receive medical treatment, counseling services and an official investigation of the allegations using current reporting channels, for example, chain of command, law enforcement or report the incident to the SARC.

To help victims make educated choices and to ensure they have all the support they need, the SARC may assign a victim advocate to assist and accompany a victim of sexual assault throughout the medical, pastoral, judicial and law enforcement processes.

The role of the victim advocate is to provide quality support and assurance to sexual assault victims and those associated with the victim. Each battalion-level organization has two Unit Victim Advocates, which are supervised by the SARC. Additionally, the Family Advocacy Program has an Installation Victim Advocate, Eleanor Bentsen, who is trained to provide advocacy services to victims of sexual assault.

Sexual assault is not only devastating for the victim, it is detrimental to our close community. The Army takes sexual assault very seriously and will thoroughly investigate the incident and hold those who commit offenses accountable.

If you or someone you know has been sexually assaulted, you are not alone. The Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program is here to help and support you. The SAPRP provides all military victims of sexual assault the resources and support they need to help them through a very difficult time.

Editor's note: At Fort Benning, the SAPRP is under the Family Advocacy Program, directed by Rebecca Welch, located in Building 241. For 24/7 assistance, call the Fort Benning Sexual Assault Response Line at 706-566-7393 or call Michelle Fonseca, SARC at 706-545-8740.

Female drill sergeant leads troops on Sand Hill

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Sand Hill's only female drill sergeant, Sgt. Breanne Frye, came to Fort Benning three weeks ago for on-the-job training.

When Frye heard she was headed from her Reserve unit in Rockford, Ill., to the Home of the Infantry and a nearly all-male environment, she wasn't concerned. Her fellow drill sergeants in 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, have accepted her, she said.

"They work with me," she said. "They help me understand what I need to do. They've done a really nice job of incorporating me into their team and treating me just like anybody else."

A recent graduate of Drill Sergeant School, Frye said she is just as capable as any other drill sergeant, though she is still learning.

"If it came to rucking a 90-pound pack on your back for miles and miles, that's different. That would be a lot harder for me than all the guys," she said "But when it comes to doing PT or doing all the courses, I can do everything required of a drill sergeant. I work hard, I don't give up, and I show (my Soldiers) that whatever I make them do I can do, too."

Most basic training Soldiers will work with female leaders when they arrive at their unit, so it's good for them to see a female drill sergeant with the same professionalism and competence as her male counterparts, said Command Sgt. Maj. Todd Hibbs, the 192nd Infantry Brigade command sergeant major.

"Gender really doesn't matter," he said. "Basic combat skills are not gender specific. They're tasks that any Soldier should be able to complete."

Frye joined the Army Reserves right out of high school in 2001. Her unit was activated two years later. She re-enlisted in 2006 after being deployed to Afghanistan for a year.

"My dream had always been to become a teacher, but serving in the military was something I felt called to do," she said. "It gives me a lot of opportunity to grow and really establish a future for myself."

Frye chose to become a drill sergeant through the encouragement of her husband, Sgt. 1st Class David Frye. He was slated to attend Drill Sergeant School with her but was deployed to Afghanistan before the course began. Frye said her husband will attend the school when he returns. Meanwhile, she is glad to keep busy while he's away.

It's the best time to have this kind of job, because you work almost 15 hours a day, said Frye, who, like most drill sergeants, pulls 4:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. shifts regularly. There isn't much better she could do with her time than help shape the lives of basic trainees, she said.

Rachel L. Watkins
Sgt. Breanne Frye, the only female drill sergeant on Sand Hill, stands in front of her troops from A Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

"I want to be a drill sergeant to make a difference in the Army," she said. "I want to make sure the next generation of Soldiers can meet the standards. If I can get them to do it here in basic, then I know they'll be able to survive and accomplish many things when they get out into regular units."

Although Frye would take the opportunity to deploy if offered, she said her role in leading troops is vital to the Army.

"Now that I'm here, I really do feel satisfied in what I'm doing," she said. "When you see the Soldiers grow and develop into Infantry Soldiers, into American Soldiers, that's a reward in and of itself. I'm shaping the future of the Army right here and what bigger, more important job can you have than that?"

Fort Benning celebrates women's right to vote

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

This year's Women's Equality Day marks the 88th anniversary of the passing of the 19th Amendment, which granted women the right to vote. Fort Benning celebrated the anniversary at a luncheon hosted by the Equal Opportunity Office Tuesday. The program included music, an original poetry recitation and re-enactments from the women's suffrage movement.

"It's a very significant day, because it reminds us of one of the many milestones achieved in America's 234-year journey to realize equality for all — our great democratic experiment," said Col. Charles Durr, chief of staff. "The 19th Amendment to the United States Constitution in 1920 ... moved our government closer to President Lincoln's words: 'of the people, by the people, for the people.'"

Hugley

Although the goal of the suffrage movement came to fruition in 1920, the struggle began more than 70 years earlier with five women in New York. Within a week, the group helped convene the first Women's Rights Convention.

On July 20, 1848, these pioneers in women's rights adopted a Declaration of Sentiments, which included a demand for suffrage for women, said the Honorable Carolyn Hugley, the keynote speaker for the luncheon.

"Women marched. They protested. And they were persistent," Hugley said. "The women's movement was not just about voting. It was about women having full access to the benefits of this democracy. We are still struggling to expand the franchise for women beyond simply casting ballots to a broader influence in the political process."

While she is glad to see women rise to high-ranking political offices, Hugley said, she believes the candidate's agenda, not gender, is the determining factor. Citizens must vote on the issues to influence public policy, she said.

"Too many of us have been missing in action when it comes to voting and making our voices and desires heard," she said. "I believe our nation will achieve its fullest potential only when all gifts and talents of every citizen are encouraged and included in the process. As women, we have the power to choose. Now is the time and we are the people who can steer the course of our country."

The Women's Equality Day Award, which recognizes those who help support American citizens' right to vote, was presented to Donny Philips for his work with the post's Voting Assistance Program.

Recycled casings bring top dollar

Money earned from recycling program funds programs for Soldiers, families

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

A bullet casing doesn't lie on the ground at a range or training site long before Soldiers pack it up and drive it to the ammunition supply point on post, where it is recycled.

After every training exercise, every unit is required to turn in their used brass casings — live rounds or blanks — to the ASP, where they are sorted and checked by hand to make sure there are no live rounds.

The brass is sold, and the money from it is brought back to post to fund Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs and recycling operations.

More than 165 tons of brass has been sold since the beginning of fiscal 2008. The sales have brought in $495,000 to Fort Benning.

"Over the years, brass has become more valuable because of a metal shortage around the world, so that's why it's important it's recycled," said Dorinda Morpeth, solid waste program manager of the Directorate of Public Works, Environmental Management Division.

It is one of the highest money making recyclable items on post, next to aluminum, which sells for about $1,500 per ton, Morpeth said.

The brass recycling program is a "win-win situation," said Jorge Colon, the ASP assistant manager of ITT Systems Division.

"It keeps the earth clean while giving money to programs for the Soldiers," he said.

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Sue Ulibarri

Building agile and quick thinking leaders was the focus during an Adaptive Leaders Methodology Workshop this week on Fort Benning.

"In today's Army, we're looking at training future leaders who are capable of assessing a situation and thinking for themselves," said Donald Vandergriff, instructor for the Adaptive Leaders Methodology Workshop, Army Capabilities and Integration Center Forward, Crystal City, Va.

Vandergriff serves as the Army's subject matter expert when it comes to adaptability. His belief that it's more important to know "how to think" versus "what to think" has reach across the Army.

"As one of the Army's key imperatives to build agile and adaptive leaders, Fort Benning sets the conditions for this change by engaging future leaders in a more "thoughtful" process. Units across Sand Hill, the 198th and 192nd Infantry Brigades, Basic Officer Leaders Course II and the Henry Caro Noncommissioned Officer Academy have bought into the concept of ALM, Vandergriff said.

"Adaptability and agility are closely related," Vandergriff said. "We want Soldiers to learn to adapt quickly, almost instinctually, to situational changes.

"Mastering a skill is measured not so much by being able to perform a task thoughtlessly. Now a Soldier must make sense of why he is doing the task."

"It taught us how to think outside the box," said Sgt. 1st Class Alison Kempke, assistant branch chief for the Warrior Leaders Course, Henry Caro NCO Academy.

Kempke said the new Soldiers joining the Army today are more inquisitive.

"Young Soldiers seem to naturally question what they are doing, and that's good, because we want them to think critically," she said.

Much of the workshop uses scenario-based learning called Tactical Decision Games, which the WLC uses.

The TDGs let the instructors role play situations with limited information, time constraints and imposed dilemmas, which change constantly.

"The biggest stressor for me was working under time constraints. The seminar broadened my horizons, showing me how to be a better leader, while also empowering my Soldiers with more critical thinking skills," Kempke said.

62nd Engineer Company builds bridge across Chattahoochee

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Soldiers from the 362nd ngineer Company (Multi-Role Bridge), one of five bridge companies in the Army, built a 200-foot, 63-ton bridge from Georgia to Alabama over the Chattahoochee River Aug. 13.

The bridge has 21 separate sections, called interior bays, and two ramps.

Interior bay pieces are dropped in the water from trucks and then pushed by bridge erection boats to the other pieces. They are locked with the neighboring piece.

The bridge is free floating, meaning it's not anchored to anything under the water.

It's not every day that a full closure bridge is built, Lopez said.

The Soldiers build rafting bridges once a week. The rafting bridge has only six interior bays and is used to ferry across vehicles. It takes about 20 minutes to assemble.

The full closure bridge took three hours to build.

It takes at least 30 Soldiers and lots of teamwork to build a full closure bridge, said Pfc. Salman Rehman.

Practice makes perfect in bridge building, said Staff Sgt. Glenn Fulton, second platoon first section leader.

While in Iraq on a one-year tour from 2006 to 2007, Fulton built bridges on the Euphrates River. The current of the river can make building a bridge difficult, he said.

"The current in the Euphrates was pretty fast so it was sometimes difficult for the boat operators to do their jobs," he said.

Bridges are a necessity in combat, said Fulton.

"They are a line of communication between camps so if a bridge is down or blown up, rations and medical supplies can't be sent from one camp to the next," he said.

The 200-foot, 63-ton full closure bridge can hold up to 90 tons. It's used for trucks, Strykers, Bradleys and two-way traffic. After building the bridge, Soldiers tested it by driving a truck across it.

BRAVERY UNDER FIRE

Iraqi man sacrifices life for 3rd HBCT Soldiers

3RD HEAVY BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM
Spc. Ben Hutto

President George W. Bush told the world about an Iraqi man who sacrificed his life to save the lives of his family and the lives of 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team Soldiers.

This is the story.

The plan was to visit a leader of the al Arafia Concerned Citizens. After a hectic month of raids and route clearance missions, the scouts of 2nd Platoon, B Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, weren't worried about that day's particular mission.

The scouts had worked extensively with the locals in the area before, said 1st Lt. Mike Barth, the platoon leader, and felt the area was reasonably safe.

Barth and his Soldiers assisted the local Sons of Iraq group and helped the group set up security check points in the turbulent neighborhood.

During the early August 2007 evening, Barth, Staff Sgt. Sean Kane, Pfc. David Menillo, the platoon medic, Spc. Josh Berner, Barth's driver and the platoon's interpreter talked with the local SOI leader and his family about how to make the neighborhood safer.

Kane wanted to stay outside the home and provide security, but the leader had insisted that he come in. The area felt secure. Barth had a cordon of several Bradley Fighting Vehicles set up along the road in front of the house and the SOI leader had a small contingent of security personnel protecting the home.

"This is a very respected man in the neighborhood," Barth said. "He was always surrounded by family. Basically, the whole neighborhood was his family, so there wasn't a need for extra security."

As the meeting proceeded, trouble approached on foot. A man approached Barth's cordon and wanted to enter the courtyard to speak with the SOI leader.

As the guards searched the man, they discovered he was wearing a suicide vest, and the guards ran toward the house to warn everyone in the courtyard.

"They all came around the corner at virtually the same time screaming 'Ali Babba, Ali Babba!'" Berner said. The term, Ali Babba, is a widely used Iraqi slang term for a very bad person.

The next few moments were a blur as Soldiers and Sons of Iraq members ran for cover and attempted to find the threat.

Barth and Menillo ran to a window to see if the danger was coming from the street, while Berner grabbed the platoon interpreter to get him behind a wall in the courtyard.

"I just ran to the corner that was uncovered," Berner said. "I had no idea what was about to happen. I just tried to get the interpreter out of the way so we could do our job."

As the bomber rounded the far corner of the courtyard, Kane started moving toward him. Before Kane could shoot, one of the leader's sons ran and wrapped his arms around the bomber pushing him out of the courtyard. With his sight picture obscured, Kane couldn't shoot.

"I knew where our security was set up, so I had an idea where trouble would be coming from," Kane said. "I don't know if it was instinct or stupidity, but I just ran toward him with my rifle." As the son wrestled with him, the bomber detonated the vest, killing both instantly.

"My leg was hit and my Kevlar was blown off along with my ear plugs and eye protection," Kane said. "My weapon flew out of my hand. The next thing I know, I'm face down in the grass trying to get my bearings. At first I thought we were getting hit with mortars."

Stunned from the attack, Kane crawled to a bathroom in the courtyard for cover.

Berner said he saw the interpreter sprawled on the ground and helped him behind the wall.

"He stopped to see what was going on and I just grabbed him and tried to get him behind the wall," Berner said. Thinking of the SOI leader's family, he went back to the courtyard.

"I just ran back out and started grabbing them," he said. "None of them were hurt, but I wanted to get them into the house or behind the wall. I didn't know if we were going to take small-arms fire or anything like that. I yelled to (the interpreter) to tell them to get inside."

The blast threw Barth and Menillo against the adjacent courtyard wall.

"For the first 15 seconds after the explosion, everything was real quiet," Menillo said. "I heard Sergeant Kane yell he was hit and tried to find him."

When he reached Kane in the bathroom, he was shocked by what he saw. A disheveled Kane clutched his leg.

"I just grabbed his leg and started checking it," Menillo said. "I moved on to his ankle and didn't find anything. I got him up. I thought his leg was busted up based on where the blast was in the courtyard and where he was."

Kane was quick to point out that Menillo was injured as he worked on him.

"The guy received a concussion, but he still ran across a unsecured courtyard to get to me," Kane said. "The whole time he kept his calm and did his job. You would have never known he was hurt the way he performed."

Barth said the son took 90 percent of the blast and ultimately saved everyone in the courtyard.

The incident was over minutes after it had begun.

"The son was definitely a hero for acting the way he did," Barth said. "His actions saved four American lives that day and the lives of his father and family."

Barth said Kane's actions saved the lives of his platoon members that day.

As the bomber ran into the courtyard, the first thing Barth said he saw was the muzzle of Kane's weapon as Kane ran toward the attacker. It was Kane's quick reaction that caused the bomber to lose confidence and freeze up, Barth said.

"I have no doubt the bomber was trying to kill American Soldiers," Kane said. "It was very calculated the way he tried to do it. If (the leader's son) hadn't intercepted him, there is no telling how bad it could have been."

The attack was the only suicide bombing to occur in the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team's battle space during its 15-month deployment in the Mada'in Qada.

Berner, Menillo and Kane received Purple Hearts because of their injuries. In addition, Berner and Kane both received Bronze Star medals with valor.

Kane said he was just doing his job.

"It was a close call," he said. "I've been in a lot of IED strikes and have had people shoot at me, but that was different. I'm just thankful to have survived it. We were back out doing our job two days later. That said something to the people in the area. I think they saw that we weren't going to back down. They understood that we were going to help secure that area no matter what."

Editor's note: This is the third of a series of articles Spc. Ben Hutto is writing on 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team's recent 15-month deployment in Iraq.

functions will materialize, effective Oct. 1. It also allows for policies, procedures, methods and plans to be developed at the MCOE level, while leveraging the full capabilities of both the Infantry and Armor schools, said Jay Brown, BRAC program manager.

The Civilian Transition Plan discussed issues such as wage disparity and recruitment and reclassification processing, while the Installation Services Growth Plan highlighted increases in personnel and facilities for the Garrison, Medical Department Activity, Dental Activity, AAFES and the commissary.

Fort Benning will see its authorized end strength for these activities grow from 10,263 in fiscal year 2008 to 17,296 by fiscal year 2011, said Chuck Walls, Fort Benning Garrison deputy commander.

Walls also discussed the memorialization, or naming process for new construction projects.

More than 100 structures will need some sort of designation he said. "Not every building will get named after someone, but we do want to look ahead and ensure we have a plan."

Walls hopes to have a few buildings named prior to their ribbon cutting ceremonies. Considerations will include Distinguished Service Cross and Medal of Honor recipients. He proposed establishing cantonment area champions from key agencies and units to assist the memorialization board with the naming process.

"That way we all work effectively to come up with the best choices to honor our past heroes," he said.

Lastly, the Environmental Impact Statement process reaffirms the installation is still serving as an effective environmental steward by minimizing the impact on threatened and endangered species on Fort Benning.

Clubs: Get money through Combined Federal Campaign and lets parents know their kids are being taken care of at school, said Lisa Hunter, Dexter's parent teacher organization president.

The club is an important part of Dexter, Hunter said, which is why it is one of two programs at the school to receive funding from the Soldier and Family Support Association.

The PTO gave half of the $500 received from SFSA this year to the club. The other half will be used to update their collection of indoor recess supplies, such as books, puzzles, games and videos.

"We do fundraising at Dexter, but we're usually focused on larger items like a projector or whiteboards, so sometimes the smaller items get overlooked," Hunter said.

SFSA supports several other PTOs on post, said Chris Ryan, SFSA president.

SFSA raises these funds every fall during the Combined Federal Campaign, which started Thursday. To support Fort Benning's nonprofit organizations through SFSA, select code 24249. CFC allotment forms are available from unit representatives.

Smaller donations, even $5 or $10, are still very much appreciated, Ryan said. All donations stay on Fort Benning.

To receive funds from SFSA, contact Ryan at 706-610-5666. The CFC ends Oct. 17.

In addition to competing on national and international levels, the AMU also trains Soldiers on the fundamentals of marksmanship and accuracy. Competitions such as the Olympics better prepare them to train their fellow Soldiers because international shooting teaches you how to cope with pressure, said Hancock, who said he can't think of a greater pressure than being on the battlefield.

Accuracy under pressure is exactly what brought home the gold for Hancock and Eller, who described their Olympic experience as surreal.

"It's awesome to know that what you've been competing for and dreaming about is finally coming true," Hancock said. "I didn't have anything else to prove. I had the Gold Medal around my neck, and as I watched the flag go up and heard our national anthem play, I couldn't help but smile."

Both Soldiers now have their eyes set on the future, specifically to London 2012 — the next Olympic Games.

"Shooting season isn't over," Eller said.

"This was just another competition. From here we go right into training for the world championship selection match for next year. I want to repeat for the Army."

"Absolutely," Hancock said.

Olympics wrap-up

The Summer Olympics in Beijing ended Sunday. The final medal count was 110 for the U.S., 100 for China and 72 for Russia. Although the U.S. had the highest total, China bested us in gold medals, 51 to 36.

Some of those gold medals won by the U.S. include the women's beach volleyball team of Misty May-Treanor and Kerri Walsh, the women's soccer team and the aptly named "Redeem Team" of men's basketball.

The Olympic torch was passed on to London, England, where the Summer Olympics will take place in 2012.

Hawaii wins LLWS

The U.S. team won their fourth straight Little League World Series title Sunday when Waipahu, Hawaii, bested Matamoros, Mexico, 12-3. Tanner Tokunaga contributed to the Hawaii team with two homeruns.

Edwards gives Busch own medicine

Although Kyle Busch led for 415 consecutive laps at Bristol Motor Speedway Saturday, Carl Edwards nudged him out for the victory. Busch, being the immature dolt he is, had some very unsavory and unkind words after the race about Edwards. Hmm, seems to me Busch doesn't like the taste of his own medicine. Busch has never had a problem giving another driver a nudge, and consequently pushing them into the wall, to get the lead.

Edwards did indeed give Busch a nudge to get the lead, but Busch didn't wreck or even lose any control of the car. It's safe to say the rivalry is on between Edwards and Busch.

The Pepsi 500 will begin at 7:15 p.m. Sunday on ESPN from the Auto Club Speedway at Fontana, Calif.

Strahan pulls a Favre?

Although New York Giants' defensive end Michael Strahan retired at the end of last season, he is talking to his former team about a possible return. It comes in the wake of a season-ending injury to Osi Umenyiora.

Apparently the interest is coming from the Giants, Strahan's agent, Tony Agnone said. Strahan is on vacation in Greece and Agnone said he will speak to Strahan to see if he has any interest in coming out of retirement.

College football begins

I love the start of new sports seasons, especially the topsy-turvy world of football. Who will be the Appalachian State of this season and upset a ranked team? What team is expected to do well and will fall flat? Rejoice, fellow football fans, and let the games begin.

Sgt. Patrick Stone, an Infantryman with B Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, made his first hole-in-one July 4 on the seventh hole of the Patton Nine at Fort Benning.

His success continued Aug. 17, when he placed second in the Chattahoochee Valley Amateur Tournament finals at Fort Benning. It was Stone's first amateur match in nearly a decade.

"I did a lot of good things out there, and everything seemed to click," Stone said. "The first thing I did was call my wife. I knew it would make her feel better."

Stone's wife Mandy has been battling cancer since March of 2007, the same month he deployed to Iraq.

"I was torn emotionally, and I felt helpless," Stone said. "I knew we had a job to do in Iraq, and knowing she was at home going through cancer without me was tough. But I knew she supported my decision to join the Army. We support each other in everything."

Most of his time away from work is spent at Mandy's side.

"Patrick is such a great man, and I know how much golf means to him," Mandy said. "He does so much for others and puts himself last, so for him to do something he enjoys makes me feel good."

Youth bowling league starts Sept. 13

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

The winter youth bowling league will start at 10 a.m. Sept. 13 at the Mall Bowling Center on post.

Throughout the winter, coach Jim Reaves' primary focus will be to help children learn to bowl properly.

It will also teach children discipline and teamwork, Reaves said.

"Bowling is a sport," said Reaves, certified United States Bowling Congress coach. "You have to have the proper timing and rhythm and have the right equipment to be successful."

Bowling is for all ages, said Sgt. 1st Class Willie Anderson, who started bowling at age 8. Anderson plays in two leagues on post and bowls an average of 195.

"Bowling is a lifelong sport. Once you learn it, it always sticks with you and you never stop loving it," he said.

The league will meet at 10 a.m. every Saturday for 15 weeks. It's open to ages 6 to 21. There will be opportunities for children to participate in city and statewide tournaments to win scholarships.

The cost per child is $7 a day for bowling and shoes and a one-time fee of $12 that covers being sanctioned by USBC and awards. For more information, call 706-682-7781.

Wounded warriors participate in Country's event

THE BAYONET

Jeremy and Joe are very different men. One is used to being the center of attention. The other shies away from it. One tells the jokes, the other laughs.

But they have a lot in common. They are both Army veterans, 28-years-old, who picked up a golf club for the first time Aug. 21 at the Maple Ridge Golf Club in Columbus.

"How did I do?" asked Jeremy, after hitting the ball on the green.

"You missed it by a mile," Joe said.

"Well, hopefully I missed the birds and squirrels too, because I can't see a thing," Jeremy said.

Post hosts All Army tryouts

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Twenty-three softball players are competing for a spot on the All Army softball team during two weeks of tryouts at Fort Benning. Fifteen will be selected for the team's final roster.

Command Sgt. Maj. Victor Rivera-Collazo, the All Army coach, said the talent is equal to last year's team, which won the Armed Forces Championship.

"We had a balanced offense and defense last year," Rivera-Collazo said. "This year we have players with more power. But it's not about individual skill. It's about selecting the team that will represent best in the championship, because ultimately, they represent the entire Army."

There are a number of returning players, several of whom are retiring from the military this year.

Sgt. 1st Class Andre Elder, who will retire after 20 years of service, is trying to make the team for the seventh time. Elder, who is stationed in South Korea, said laying a foundation for the rookies has been his goal for the last few years.

Chief Warrant Officer John Watts, a 30-year veteran, has played with the team off and on since 1988. Watts said being a veteran on the team doesn't guarantee a spot on the final roster.

"You don't get any perks out here," Watts said. "You have to perform day in and day out, and if a first year guy does better than a vet, the vet goes home."

Watts, who also coaches the team during practices, said the team has placed more emphasis on mental preparation this season.

"We are the team to beat out here, but when we lose, we tend to beat ourselves," he said. "Defending the gold is always harder than winning it the first time. We're very serious about keeping the gold with the Army."

A training camp will follow the two-week tryout. The team will compete in the Armed Forces Championships in Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 13-17.

Soldiers: Learn to cope with vision impairments

"We have been going nonstop. I get a bite to eat, swing golf clubs, get another bite to eat and swing some more clubs," said Feldbusch, a former Soldier in the 75th Ranger Regiment. "I may have lost my sight, but at least I haven't lost my sense of taste."

A piece of shrapnel ruptured his right eye and severed the optic nerve in his left in 2003 while he was in Iraq. The shrapnel entered the frontal lobes of his brain. Feldbusch was in a coma for six weeks.

"The hardest thing to deal with was knowing I couldn't fight with my unit anymore," Feldbusch said.

Six months later, he became a volunteer spokesman for the Wounded Warrior Project.

"I joined the military because after I finished school, I knew I didn't want to be behind a desk anymore," Feldbusch said. "I wanted to do something important and hands-on. After losing my sight, I dropped the sword and picked up the pen to fight for our wounded Soldiers. Being blind isn't going to stop me from completing my mission. It's all about having the right attitude."

Brazzle is still learning to adjust. On Aug. 17, 2007, during a training exercise at a live fire range at Fort Bragg, N.C., explosives detonated six feet from where he was stood, sending shrapnel into both his eyes and dislocating his left retina. A projectile pierced his left calf, and he suffered second-degree burns to his left arm and torso.

"I was crushed," said the former combat engineer and paratrooper. "I felt like I was leaving my brethren behind. I was a part of a select group of Soldiers, and realizing my time with them was over was devastating."

While recovering at Fort Bragg's Warrior Transition Battalion over the last six months, Brazzle said his outlook has become more positive. He swims and runs daily. He finished the Country's Midnight Run in less than 42 minutes.

Brazzle said being around visually impaired people from all walks of life during the event inspired him.

"I have a new group of brethren now," Brazzle said "It's not just about visually impaired Soldiers, it's about all who have lost their sight one way or another. There is a whole new group I am concerned about, and we all can learn from each other. I want to do what I can to help and learn from anyone who has had to deal with this. This is a good start for me."

Brace Feldbusch, the outdoors coordinator for the Wound Warrior Project and Jeremy's father, said seeing Brazzle and his son enjoy new experiences is an inspiration to those who may not know how to cope.

"When he did his first speaking engagement, they offered to pay him. But Jeremy refused, because he knew it wasn't just about him," Brace said. "That's just the type of guy he is. Jeremy and Joe have such a great attitude, and I'm extremely proud of both of them."

Before Joe and Jeremy finished their round of golf, they worked together to make their first shot. Jeremy hit the ball near the green and Joe sank the putt two shots later.

"When brothers work together, anything's possible," Joe said.

Stone, a former all-state golfer and state champion at Evans High School in Evans, Ga., gave up golfing when his father, who taught Stone the game, passed away in 1999.

After graduating with a degree in political science, he worked for his family's clothing distribution company for 11 years.

"I felt like I was stuck in a rut," Stone said. I couldn't find a job in my field, and no one would hire a guy in his 30s who had only worked for his family.

"I knew that I needed to do something more. I wanted some adventure in my life."

Stone enlisted in the Army in 2006. He plans to be a career Soldier.

Stone said Mandy is getting stronger each day and is expected to make a full recovery.

"It's been a tough road for us, but we have faith in each other," he said. "We are fortunate to have such a good life, and the military is a big reason I can provide for her. I love every aspect of being an Infantry Soldier."

Stone said every waking minute he isn't working or with his wife will be spent on the golf course.

"I made a promise to myself after I returned from Iraq to spend as much time as I can on the course," Stone said. "Doing well in that tournament helped show me that I still can compete in the game I love."

3/47 beats CRC

CRC kept the ball for more than eight minutes during the opening drive. On third down, Demetrius Minor threw a touchdown pass to Robert Palmer.

3/47's quarterback Jacinto Garza burst through the defense on three straight keeper plays to move the ball into CRC territory. Garza completed a short pass to Anthony White to tie the game, 6-6.

CRC made an interception with two minutes to go in the half, but 3/47's defense prevented them from scoring before halftime.

In the first three minutes of the second, 3/47 rushed the ball up the middle and scored a touchdown. CRC's Brandon Barr countered with a few quick runs to tie the game, 12-12.

With two minutes left, Garza pitched the ball to Adam Bojarski, who reached the endzone to give 3/47 an 18-12 win.

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Brenda Donnell

Goodwill, Red Cross, the YMCA, the Salvation Army, Second Harvest Food Bank and about 50 other local organizations and services receive funding through the United Way of the Chattahoochee Valley.

United Way is one of the many organizations that Fort Benning's community can help by contributing to the Combined Federal Campaign, which kicked off Thursday.

"Give where you live," said Scott Ferguson, president and CEO of UWCV. "Last year, we had over 22,000 people in the Chattahoochee Valley who supported the United Way."

Ferguson said many of the services United Way helps fund benefit Fort Benning's Soldiers, civilians and retirees residing in the tricommunity.

"If you're living here and you're using the services, your children, spouse or parents are using them, you really need to support those quality of life programs," he said.

Forty-four percent of UWCV funds go to youth programs, such as Boy and Girl Scouts, Girls, Inc., Big Brothers and Big Sisters, Families and Schools Together and more, Ferguson said.

"A lot of what we do in the Girls and Boys Club, both in Phenix City and Columbus, is mentoring and homework help right after school, and they track their grades to make sure those kids are doing well in school, working with the schools," he said.

Columbus Hospice, Inc., receives funds from UWCV that are used for two programs, Caring for Our Own and Continuous Care, said Diane Taylor, vice president of marketing for Columbus Hospice, Inc.

Both programs provide patients with nurses, social workers, chaplains, volunteers and physicians who visit patients weekly in their homes to help them control pain and to take care of them. They visit more often if needed. Hospice care is given to patients without regard to diagnosis, cultural diversity or ability to pay.

Taylor said Columbus Hospice, Inc., employees are also very supportive of UWCV.

"One thing we pride ourselves on is that our employees have 100 percent participation in United Way, because they really believe in it," Taylor said.

Ferguson said those who donate probably won't miss what they contribute, but they will miss the services lost if they don't donate. Anyone who wishes to give to the UWCV during the Combined Federal Campaign should choose code 46792.

For more information about UWCV, visit www.unitedwayofthecv.org.

"That's exactly why (the musket) is here. The best place would be where the nation could see it and where John and the regiment's memory would be honored."

Veteran donates musket to museum

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"A little wistful and a lot proud," that's how M. Lawrence Shannon felt after donating his great grandfather's Civil War musket to the National Infantry Museum Aug. 21. The 79-year-old World War II veteran had kept the family heirloom, passed down through four generations, for 30 years when he decided it would be better off at the Home of the Infantry, where today's Soldiers and visitors from around the world can see it.

"I spent almost 31 years in the Army. I can't think of a better place to have it displayed," Shannon said.

Jeff Reed, arms curator for the museum, helped place the musket in a glass case near the front entrance of Infantry Hall, where it will be on display until the museum opens next year.

"If there is a single musket that would typify the American Soldier of the Civil War, it is this musket," he said. "It passed through the hands of more Soldiers than any other model."

In the hands of a skilled marksman, the .58 caliber percussion rifled muzzleloader is as accurate as modern military rifles, Reed said. It can hit a target at 450 yards and is lethal at 1,000 yards.

Weapons of this sort — and the inexperience of the shooters — were part of the reason the Civil War was the bloodiest in America's history, said David Stieghan, Infantry Branch historian.

"Technology was taking great leaps forward," he said. "The problem was that tactics on the battlefield weren't keeping up, and that's one of the reasons for such a high body count."

The problem was resolved more than

Bike patrols keep post neighborhoods safe

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Brenda Donnell

Pairs of military policemen pedaling on bicycles have been patrolling Fort Benning neighborhoods to get to know residents and keep neighborhoods safe.

Bicycle patrols help MPs meet families living in housing areas while deterring crimes, such as vandalism and theft, said Sgt. 1st Class Michael Snow, provost operations sergeant. Patrols are conducted mainly during the summer months when outdoor activity is greater.

Sgt. Jeremiah Grace, a Special Reaction Team member assigned to the bike patrol, said patrolling on bicycles is a way for MPs to get closer to the community they serve.

"You can get places you can't in a vehicle, he said. "You can stop (a bike) a lot easier and talk to the (residents) … and you can hear a lot

Wilson, Dexter elementary schools to share principal

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

"We'll be sharing ideas. We'll be sharing expertise — and doing a lot of collaboration. That's the key. If you think creatively, there are ways that the two together will be better than either one separately, so the kids will be the winners in the end."

— Dr. Renee Mallory

Dr. Renee Mallory, Wilson Elementary School's principal, is now the principal of Dexter Elementary, too. Dexter's former principal, Melissa Klopfer, transferred to Korea Aug. 1.

Vicki Rogers, who served as the interim principal at Wilson for the past three weeks, will remain on hand throughout the transition to support both faculties, said Dr. Dell McMullen, superintendent of Georgia and Alabama Department of Defense Schools. An assistant principal will also join the team later this year.

Mallory

Mallory will divide her time during the week between the two schools, McMullen said. Since they are only one mile apart on Main Post, commuting within the same day won't be an issue.

Enrollment at Wilson will decrease during the school year as housing in Indianhead is demolished. Dexter already has a smaller school population. The size of the schools makes managing both feasible, McMullen said.

"We're doing this at Maxwell Air Force Base and Robins Air Force Base, and it's working out very well," she said.

"When you have experienced principals who are very positive and staff who are open to new ideas, you can do something that's different. This is the perfect opportunity to work together and learn from each other."

Mallory said it will take a little organization and a lot of planning.

"We'll be sharing ideas. We'll be sharing expertise — and doing a lot of collaboration. That's the key," Mallory said. "If you think creatively, there are ways that the two together will be better than either one separately, so the kids will be the winners in the end."

McMullen expects each school to have its own principal next year, she said. Meanwhile, both schools will benefit from working together.

"I have every confidence that neither Wilson nor Dexter will miss a beat," she said.

To contact Mallory, call Dexter Elementary at 706-545-3424 or Wilson at 706-545-5723.

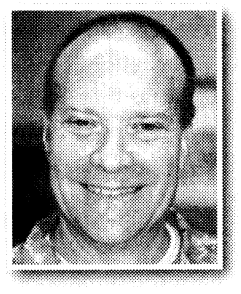
Family traditions, synergy help families bond

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Today, we look at the last two habits. First, let's review the first five habits. Habit No. 1: Be proactive. You be the agent of change in your family. Habit No. 2: Begin with the end in mind. Create a family mission statement, and keep the goal of your family in focus.



Habit No. 3: Put first things first. Make family a priority in your heart and on your calendar. Habit No. 4: Think "win-win." Don't make everyday family life a constant battle or competition, but rather work together towards a solution where all parties involved see the solution as a win. Habit No. 5: Seek first to understand, then to be understood. Listen to understand your family member, before trying to solve a problem or give your input.

Today, I want to look at the last two habits.

Habit No. 6 is synergize. By synergize, Stephen means finding a path that is not my way or your way, but a higher, "third alternative." This step is the fruit that comes from practicing the other five steps.

Synergy takes place when the sum of all parts make something greater than the individual parts. It is teamwork at its finest. Synergy makes us stronger. Synergy pushes us further than what we would accomplish on our own.

Synergy motivates us to be better and improve for the sake of the greater whole. Couples synergize. Families synergize. We even hear about synergy within companies. The strengths of each person strengthen the whole family. Embrace the synergy of your family.

Habit No. 7: Sharpen the saw. This habit basically keeps the ball rolling by establishing meaningful family traditions. Whether it's as simple as sitting down to a dinner table every night or attending the church of your choice each week, family rituals are anchors that hold a family together through storms and across the years.

What are two traditions you'd like to start or enhance this year that will last your family a lifetime? Sharpening the saw keeps us from being ineffective and dull.

What if you use a saw over and over again? The blade eventually becomes dull. When the blade becomes dull, the saw is less effective and more effort and energy is expended to cut wood. A little time to sharpen the saw will yield a more effective and efficient saw. Less time and energy is needed to cut the same amount of wood.

This is also true in our families and relationships. If we fail to take care of ourselves, we can become like the saw, worn out and ineffective. If we as family members become dull and ineffective, we affect the whole family. We sharpen our saw when we take some time for ourselves. We sharpen the saw when we take time for our families. We sharpen the saw when we establish and maintain important family traditions.

Well, there it is — a quick overview of The 7 Habits of Highly Effective Families. If you'd like some personal encouragement on how to set these or other principles for family success in motion, contact the Chaplain Family Life Center. If you are having problems in your marriage or family, take some time to sharpen your saw by stopping by our office at 2606 Dixie Road, or calling 706-545-1760 for a confidential appointment with one of our pastoral counselors.

We are here to help you and your loved ones with whatever problems or challenges you may be experiencing. We will help you become more effective in your relationships. I look forward to seeing you soon.

God meets spiritual needs when distractions fail

WARRIOR TRANSITION BATTALION
Chaplain (Maj.) Sandy McLean

Several thousand years ago, God, speaking through the prophet Isaiah, told us that he understood what our needs are and that he would meet them.

We need more than just food, clothing and shelter. As human beings, we are created in the image of God, fearfully and wonderfully made. Vastly complex, and at the same time, wonderfully simple, we are what we are. God made us to need what we need.

We are like a car: You have to keep us full if you want us to get somewhere. As the tank begins to empty, our potential to get somewhere, to do what we need to do, the potential we have to care for and support others, lessens. The question is, what keeps us full?

We've already mentioned food, clothing and shelter. Then, there are toys —you know, the things we like to do, the things that distract us and relax us. But even they don't reach and touch our deepset needs.

That is most often where we go wrong, by thinking we can substitute distractions for what really satisfies. God tells us that he and his ways are what really satisfy us. And he should know, seeing as how he made us. How fortunate are we then that God does not require payment for his supplies? He says to us, "You that have no money, come buy and eat. Come buy wine and milk, without money and without price." Then he asks a really important question, "Why do you spend your money for that which is not bread, and your labor for that which does not satisfy?"

More than anything, God wants to meet our needs. We just have to acknowledge them and know where to go to get them met. He tells us to come to the waters, everyone who thirsts. If you are thirsty, where do you go but to the waters?

He promises he will supply your needs. He promises to be the one to shepherd you through this life, and at every turn, prepare a table before you, full of richness and goodness, even in the presence of your enemies. Your cup, he says, will run over with what you need, and goodness and mercy will follow you as long as you live.

What a deal that is. But there is something you have to do. You have to admit your need and go to the waters. You have to know your limits and when you are reaching them. You have to be honest with yourself and admit when you need to go to the waters.

God is a deep, rich, refreshing spring, welling up to eternal life. Don't wait till you are parched and dry to go to the waters. Don't wait till you are dying of thirst to go to the waters. They are available now. Go to the waters and be satisfied.

RU PAYING ATTN?

- It is estimated that driver distraction accounts for 1.6 million accidents a year - about a quarter of the annual U.S. toll.
- At any given moment of the day, 500,000 drivers of passenger vehicles are using a handheld cell phone.*
- That adds up to a lot of miles traveled by people who do not give their full attention to driving.
- Texting or looking away from the road could cost you your life.

DFMWR
Donna Hyatt

The Fort Benning Auto Skills Center has been named the best in the Army.

After an Armywide assessment of renovations, efficiency and programs developed directly from customer input, the center was named number one by the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command.

Official recognition for the honor is scheduled during the National Recreation and Parks Association conference in October in Baltimore, Md.

Bill Player, manager of the center, said his staff is committed to providing the latest state-of-the-art automotive tools for their clients.

Among the services offered are laser-guided front end alignment, computer diagnostic tire balancing, air bag lifts that eliminate the need for jack stands, Occupational Safety and Health Administration-approved air conditioning and recycling equipment and a precision machine shop.

Along with a Master Certified Technician on staff, 80 percent of Auto Skills Center employees are certified by the National Institute for Automotive Excellence and are instrumental in providing free basic automotive classes for family members.

Free diagnostics, pre-purchase vehicle inspections and quality, professional automotive assistance also adds to customer satisfaction.

"I appreciate the convenience of having a professional automotive shop on post," said 1st Lt. John Read, a recent graduate of BOLC II.

"I dropped off my car at lunch time, and they called me a few hours later saying the services had been completed."

The center has 42 bays and more than 25,000 square feet of work space. Most bay rentals are used to restore older model vehicles or perform oil changes. Also available are paint and body shop bays for those who want to do their own cosmetic repairs.

Located in Building 111 on Marchant Street, the Auto Skills Center also offers towing service, engine rebuilds, tune ups and more.

For more information call 706-545-2337 or visit www.benningmwr.com and follow the Auto Skills link.

Martin Army offers free prostate cancer screenings

MEDDAC
Maj. Brian Parnes

Prostate cancer is the second leading cause of cancer-related death among American men. Every three minutes, an American man learns he has prostate cancer.

Since 1995, approximately 2,600,000 men in the United States have been diagnosed with prostate cancer, and nearly 375,000 men have lost their lives to this disease.

There are no warning signs of prostate cancer. The best way to beat it is through early screening and detection of the disease in its initial stages.

White, Hispanic or Asian males between 50 and 75 and African Black men older than 40 (or any man who has had a close relative with prostate cancer) should be tested. Screening involves a Digital Rectal Exam and a blood test called a Prostate-Specific Antigen.

This year, in conjunction with Prostate Cancer Awareness Week, a national program of the Prostate Cancer Education Council, the Urology clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital will conduct free prostate cancer screenings Sept. 17 and 18 for all eligible beneficiaries. Screenings will consist of a short medical history, a digital examination and a PSA blood test. Screenings will be done on a walk-in basis from 8 a.m. until 2 p.m. each day.

Call the clinic at 706-544-2292 for more information. Visit www.urologyhealth.org for more information on prostate cancer.

Musket: Symbolizes part of Infantry School's history

40 years after the war's end with the establishment of the School of Musketry, where Soldiers received specialized weapons training. The school, later renamed the Infantry School of Arms, relocated from Fort Sill, Okla., to Camp Benning in 1918.

In a way, the development and use of weapons like the M 1861 musket during this bloody war were key in the creation of Fort Benning, Stieghan said.

It was this war that the musket's original owner, Pvt. John Shannon, volunteered for. He and four other members of his family, recent immigrants from Ireland, joined the Union army in 1862.

"Our nation was in such peril, and it was saved by people who had almost just stepped off the boat," Reed said. "I think this is going to be a great inspiration to a lot of young men."

Fort Benning is an appropriate home for the artifact, Stieghan said.

"The principal weapon system for the Infantry is the Soldier, and the basic tool that he uses is the musket — or rifle, or machine gun," he said. "What is special is that this weapon belonged to a Soldier, and we know who that was. This piece of wood and iron has a story."

Shannon, a former Fort Benning civilian personnel director who lives in Smiths Station, Ala., said he is proud of his great grandfather, and he considers patriotism a family legacy.

"That's exactly why (the musket) is here," he said. "The best place would be where the nation could see it and where John and the regiment's memory would be honored."

Patrol: Deters crime, lets MPs get to know residents more and see a lot more."

Snow said most of the MPs conducting patrols in squad cars spend the majority of their time responding to incidents in the housing areas and don't always have an opportunity to interact with residents on a more personal basis.

Spc. Jamie Katz, who lives in the Indianhead Housing Area, said the bike patrols make residents feel safer.

"They should constantly roll through here, because when they do, (crimes) stop for weeks at a time," said Katz, whose car was vandalized. "I'd like to see them come out at least once or twice a day."

Snow said they would like to "flood" the neighborhoods with more bicycle patrols. However, other law enforcement missions prevent it. Bike patrols are only one tool used to prevent crime. DES also conducts speed enforcement, walking patrols and undercover surveillance.

Grace encourages post residents who see him and other bike patrol MPs to get to know them.

"If they see us, feel free to stop us and ask any questions," Grace said. "The bike patrols let the community see us a lot more."

Staycation ideas for Labor Day

Beaver Pond at Oxbows Meadows off South Lumpkin Road is one of several local 'staycation' options. Wild Birds Unlimited is sponsoring Everything You Want (and Need) to Know About Attracting Birds to Your Yard ... And How to Outwit Squirrels! Sunday at Oxbow Meadows. Heidi Hughes, author of The Expert's Guide to Backyard Birdfeeding, will provide tips on how to have a bird-friendly backyard and address a number of common backyard challenges — problems with squirrels, other rodents and insects, the wrong birds nesting in the bluebird box, woodpeckers "attacking" your house, birds flying into windows and hummingbirds and orioles ignoring your nectar feeders. Bring the feeders and nest boxes that don't deliver the birds you want to see. This information will be presented twice, once for families from 1 to 2 p.m. and then for adults only from 3 to 4 p.m. The cost is $5 for adults and $2 for children 13 and younger. Seating is limited, reservations are required. For more information, call 706-687-4090. For more staycation suggestions, see D3.

OPENING TODAY

BABYLON A.D.

In the not too distant future, much of the planet is a war zone; the rest, a collection of wretched way stations, teeming megalopolises, and vast wastelands punctuated by areas left radioactive from nuclear meltdowns. Thousands of satellites scan, observe and monitor every move. It is a world made for hardened warriors, one of whom, a mercenary known only as Toorop, lives by a simple survivor's code: kill or be killed.

COLLEGE

Kevin's girlfriend dumps him for being too boring so he doesn't want to go to the freshman orientation weekend at Fairmont University, where they had planned to go together. But his best friends convince him that the weekend away will help get his mind off her. Once there, one of the rowdiest fraternities on campus decides to recruit them as pledges.

College stars Andrew Caldwell, Drake Bell, Kevin Covais, Alona Tal and Ryan Pinkston. It is rated R for crude and sexual content, nudity, language, drug and alcohol abuse.

DISASTER MOVIE

The filmmaking team behind the hits Scary Movie, Date Movie, Epic Movie and Meet The Spartans puts its stamp on one of the biggest and most bloated movie genres of all time — the disaster film. Disaster Movie follows the comic misadventures of a group of ridiculously attractive twenty-somethings during one fateful night as they try to make their way to safety while every known natural disaster and catastrophic event — asteroids, twisters, earthquakes, the works — hits the city and their path as they try to solve a series of mysteries to end the rampant destruction. Disaster Movie lampoons everything and everyone, from Indiana Jones and Iron Man to Amy Winehouse and High School Musical.

Disaster Movie stars Matt Lanter, Vanessa Minnillo, Gary "G-Thang" Johnson, Nicole Parker, and Crista Flanagan. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language and drug references.

TRAITOR

When straight arrow FBI agent Roy Clayton heads up the investigation into a dangerous international conspiracy, all clues seem to lead back to former U.S. Special Operations officer, Samir Horn. A mysterious figure with a web of connections to terrorist organizations, Horn has a knack for emerging on the scene just as a major operation goes down. The interagency task force looking into the case meets with Carter, a veteran CIA contractor who seemingly has his own agenda and Max Archer, a fellow FBI agent.

Traitor stars Don Cheadle, Archie Panjabi, Guy Pearce, Lorena Gale and Raad Rawi. It is rated PG-13 for violence and language.

DEATH RACE

Overcrowding in the U.S. penal system has reached a breaking point. Prisons have been turned over to a monolithic Weyland Corporation, which sees jails full of thugs as an opportunity for televised sport.

Adrenalized inmates, a global audience hungry for violence and a spectacular, enclosed arena come together to form the "Death Race," the world's biggest, most brutal sporting event. Five-time NASCAR champion Jensen Ames is a man who has become an expert at survival. After eight years of hard time, he has only six weeks before reuniting with his family. But when Weyland demands a driver to headline the big game, Ames is forced to submit.

Death Race stars Jason Statham, Joan Allen, Ian McShane, Tyrese Gibson and Natalie Martinez. It is rated R for violence and language.

THE HOUSE BUNNY

She is Hef's favorite and acts like a den mother to the other girls. On her birthday, she is unceremoniously evicted from Hef's pad for being too old.

Homeless and without essential skills, Shelley wanders around L.A. until she finds a new job — the housemother at the most unpopular sorority on campus.

The House Bunny stars Anna Faris, Emma Stone, Rumer Willis, Kat Dennings and Katherine McPhee. It is rated PG-13 for sex-related humor, nudity and language.

THE LONGSHOTS

HAMLET 2

Hamlet 2 stars Steve Coogan, Catherine Keener, Skylar Astin, Amy Poehler and Phoebe Strole. It is rated R for language, nudity and drug content.

THE ROCKER

A failed drummer is given a second chance at fame 20 years after being booted out of his famous band. Robert "Fish" Fishman is the extremely dedicated and astoundingly passionate drummer for an 80s band until he is unceremoniously kicked out.

Twenty years after his rock star fantasies are destroyed, just when Fish has finally given up all hope, he hears that his nephew's high school rock band A.D.D. is looking for a new drummer.

The Rocker stars Rainn Wilson, Christina Applegate, Jane Lynch, Josh Gad and Jeff Garlin. It is rated PG-13 for drug and sexual references, nudity and language.

MIRRORS

A man is head of security at a department store plagued by unexplained deaths.

The store is also the target of demonstrators wanting compensation for an earlier staff fire tragedy. The man becomes intrigued by a disturbed woman who claims her dead sister is exacting revenge, using mirrors as a gateway back into the living world.

Mirrors stars Kiefer Sutherland, Paula Patton, Ezra Buzzington, Erica Gluck and Cameron Boyce. Mirrors is rated R for violence, language and nudity.

FLY ME TO THE MOON 3D

Three houseflies stow away on Apollo 11's flight to the moon.

Fly Me to the Moon 3D is rated G.

STAR WARS: THE CLONE WARS

On the front lines of an intergalactic struggle between good and evil, Anakin Skywalker, Obi-Wan Kenobi and Padme Amidala, along with Anakin's padawan learner, Ahsoka battle villains — led by Palpatine, Count Dooku and General Grievous, who want to rule the galaxy.

Star Wars: The Clone Wars is rated PG for sci-fi action violence, language and smoking.

TROPIC THUNDER

Ben Stiller, Jack Black, Robert Downey Jr., Jay Baruchel and Nick Nolte star in Tropic Thunder, a movie about a group of self-absorbed actors who set out to make a war film.

Ballooning costs cause the studio to cancel the movie; however, the director refuses to stop shooting, takes the cast to Southeast Asia where they meet real bad guys.

THE SISTERHOOD OF THE TRAVELING PANTS 2

Lifelong friends (America Ferrara, Amber Tamblyn, Alexis Bledel and Blake Lively) embark on separate paths for their first year of college and the summer beyond, but remain in touch by sharing their experiences with each other as they always have — with honesty and humor. Discovering their individual strengths, fears, talents and capacity for love through the choices they make, they come to value the bond they share and the immeasurable power of their friendship.

The Sisterhood of the Traveling Pants 2 is rated PG-13 for mature material and sensuality.

Green, white Class As, Bs to be phased out by 2014

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

After almost 60 years in the Army, green Class As and Bs will be phased out and replaced by modified dress blues as the only Army Service Uniform. Another uniform to go is the white Class As.

The policy change was announced Aug. 20 in a message from Chief of Staff Gen. George Casey and Sgt. Maj. of the Army Kenneth O. Preston.

The idea to have one Army Service Uniform was introduced in 2006. The decision to change the policy was made after Soldiers filled out surveys and voiced their opinions at more than 150 forums over the past two years. The majority opted for the blue uniform, Preston said.

The blue ASUs will give Soldiers "a better professional, attractive uniform grounded in tradition that they will be proud to wear," said Command Sgt. Maj. Matt Walker, the Infantry School sergeant major.

The modified blue ASU will include short and long sleeved shirts that are wrinkle resistant with permanent creases and shoulder loops. Unlike the old blues, they will have a place for a combat service identification badge.

Fort Benning Soldier aids gunshot victim

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Michelle L. Gordon

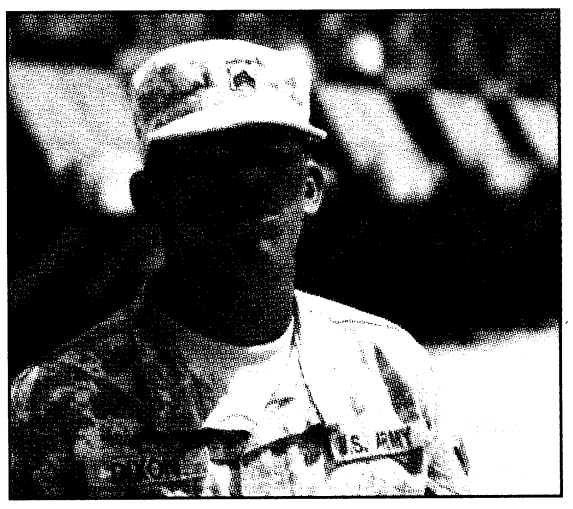
A Fort Benning Soldier saved a life on his way home from work last week when he stopped to assist a civilian who had been shot off post.

Sgt. Marvis Dixon, 362nd Engineer Company (Multi-Role Bridge), was stopped at a traffic light at the corner of Fort Benning and Torch roads Aug. 27 when he heard a gun shot and saw a man collapse to the ground at a nearby barber shop.

"He was shot directly in the chest and he was bleeding pretty badly," Dixon said. "I thought to myself 'I gotta get him outta here.'"

Rather than wait for an ambulance, Dixon helped the victim, 34-year-old Nathaniel Cuffy Jr., into his car and took him to Martin Army Community Hospital. As he drove, Dixon tried to keep Cuffy talking.

"He was fading and telling me he wasn't going to make it," Dixon said. "So I started asking him questions and assuring him he would be OK. It seemed to work. It kept him calm."



Michelle L. Gordon
Sgt. Marvis Dixon helped a gunshot victim last week.

Cuffy was treated at MACH and transferred to a Columbus hospital for further care. The bullet punctured a lung, broke a rib and shattered his shoulder bone. Dixon remained at the hospital for several hours, but before he left, he shook Cuffy's hand and told him he would see him the next day.

"He's a good guy," Cuffy said. "He's been calling every day. He's a hero for sure."

Dixon's willingness to help didn't surprise his unit leadership. 1st Sgt. Charles Fuller, 362nd Eng. Co., said he expects no less from him or any other Soldier in the Army.

"It's what we train to do," Fuller said. "Dixon followed his instinct. That's the same thing we expect of all of our Soldiers on the battlefield."

Dixon doesn't consider himself a hero. He said he just did what anyone else would do if they were in that situation.

"I know it's a good thing," he said, "but I'm a Soldier. I've been to war.

"It's the same thing — someone goes down you've got to help them because you never know when you're going to be the one who needs the help."

Army launches 'I. A.M. Strong' campaign

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Hank Minitrez

LANSDOWNE, Va. — The I. A.M. Strong campaign will empower Soldiers to "Intervene, Act, and Motivate" to prevent sexual assault, Sgt. Maj. of the Army Kenneth O. Preston said.

Preston "soft-launched" the peer-to-peer training effort with an announcement at the Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers Conference in Lansdowne, Va., Aug. 6.

The I. A.M. Strong campaign will officially be announced Tuesday when Secretary of the Army Pete Geren launches the Sexual Assault Prevention Campaign and Strategy, setting the tone for Soldiers to shift from response to prevention.

"I need your help with an issue that is affecting our Soldiers — sexual assault," Preston said. "We've been on the defensive concerning this crime. The Army was focused on response. Now, we're going on the offensive."

Soldiers at the conference came away understanding that preventing sexual assault is one of the highest priorities of the Army's senior leadership.

"As the Army moves out front in these efforts, I need you to ask yourself and each other, 'What can we do now to prevent sexual assault?'" Preston said. "It's about bringing the team together, looking out for our Soldiers and taking them under your wing to keep them safe."

The I. A.M. Strong program features role models, peer-to-peer messages and a social network to encourage Soldiers to participate in prevention and accountability behaviors; and offers workshops, projects, and awards.

EXFOR equips Army with latest technology

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Sue Ulibarri

Staff Sgts. Derrick Marez and Phillip Horton of A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, know a thing or two about new technology.

"The systems we try out should improve a Soldier's lethality out in the fight," said Horton, who deployed to Iraq with the 172nd Stryker Brigade Combat Team in 2005.

Like many of the Soldiers in the EXFOR Company, his experience gives him an understanding of what's practical and usable in theater.

"We wear it, haul it, and shoot with it, whatever it takes, to see if it's ready to either get sent out to units, or go back for improvements," Horton said.

The EXFOR adds the human dimension to the Army Expeditionary Warrior Experiments by allowing the Army to learn, mitigate risk, and answer questions about the current and future modular force.

Each annual experiment is called a "spiral," because as new technologies are deemed effective and lethal, the capability is quickly spiraled out to units in theater.

This spiraling capability gives meaning to the EXFOR's mission. It's a cohesive experimentation unit designed to determine how to connect, protect and project the Soldier, said Capt. Ray Almodovar, EXFOR company commander.

Almodovar said there is an obligation to equip Soldiers with the best technology to allow them to win the fight.

"We're helping the Army meet one of its top imperatives: to modernize the Army future combat systems," he said.

It's the fifth year that EXFOR Soldiers have taken a critical look at the Army's future combat systems.

"We've used some pretty cool equipment out here — technologies I would have definitely liked to have deployed with," said Marez, who has been EXFOR's Weapons Squad leader for two years and deployed to Iraq with the 101st Air Assault (Airborne) Division.

"If a piece of equipment gives you a better chance of hitting your target, an advantage over killing the enemy, then it's good," Marez said.

He has hauled the squad's M-240 B, roughly 25 pounds of additional weight, as the unit conducted day and night missions near the McKenna MOUT site Aug. 4-29.

"We're doing what they call the 'base case train up.' It's where we plan and execute a number of missions prior to getting the new technologies," Marez said.

Marez led his squad through the final day of the base case mission last week. He maneuvered through the tree line and brush as his squad came under enemy fire.

"The new technologies we test have the potential to make your regular nine-man Infantry squad even more adaptable, agile and lethal as it engages with the enemy," Horton said.

Hispanic heritage luncheon set for Sept. 24

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Tickets are on sale for the Hispanic Heritage Month luncheon. The luncheon will be from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Sept. 24 in the Benning Club's Supper Room. This year's theme is "Getting Involved: our families, our community, our nation."

The keynote speaker will be Gary Silva, owner of a Columbus realty company and son of retired Master Sgt. German Silva-Torres. Silva's father, who died five years ago, served with the 65th Infantry Regiment, a Puerto Rican unit known as the Borinqueneers. The unit served in both world wars and Korea before being deactivated in 1956.

Silva-Torres seldom spoke about his service or the many awards he and his unit received, Silva said, but he showed his Army roots at home. He ran a "dress right dress" house. The children made their beds, said "yes, sir, yes, ma'am," and never wore a hat indoors without the question from their father — "Do you have a head cold?"

It wasn't until Silva was an adult that he understood what his father's unit accomplished. Some doubted the capabilities of an all Puerto-Rican unit, Silva said, but the unit fought courageously in combat.

"What the Borinqueneers did and my father's part in it, I want my children and my children's children to know," Silva said. "Just as Americans need to know the history of America, I feel our children need to know the history, of our island. Like the rain forest will always be a part of Puerto Rico, the Borinqueneers will always be a part of Puerto Rico."

Retired Staff Sgt. Vidal Cordero served alongside Silva-Torres. The Smiths Station, Ala., resident, who plans to attend the luncheon, remembers his unit fondly.

"It was a well-trained outfit. It made me become a man," Cordero said. "I was not but 18 years and 9 months when I joined. I was a country boy — I wanted to see the world. I was raised in the 65th."

Cordero, 81, said he is proud of the Borinqueneers, but they only did what they needed to do.

"I want people in this country to remember everyone who fought for the freedoms of this country, anybody who wears this uniform — Puerto Rican or Indian, black or white," he said. "I'm no hero. I just went over there like any other Soldier. We just fought for our country, and that was it."

The luncheon will include a slideshow about the 65th Inf. Regt. A Columbus-based band, Son Tropical, will perform Latin-inspired music. The menu is grilled chicken or pork chops, rice, pinto beans, fried plantains, salad and flan. Tickets are available for $8.50 through Sept. 15.

For more information, call 706-545-3196.

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Benning leads way in combined arms training

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

When transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence is complete the Infantry and Armor schools will be co-located at Fort Benning. The schools will combine numerous training opportunities and resources, but we will not wait until 2011 to combine training opportunities; we need only look around today.

Fort Benning and Fort Knox currently teach the Maneuver Advanced Non-Commissioned Officer Course, where senior NCOs from both Infantry and Armor train side-by-side at both locations. The standardization of the Infantry and Armor Non-Commissioned Officer Education System was a challenging, yet simple, step toward combined arms training here. The flagship of combined arms training is the Maneuver Captains' Career Course (MC3). All basic branch captains' career courses accept students from other branches, but the MC3 raises the bar of combined arms training.

Its student population is only the beginning of the combined arms experience. While in the past most captains who attended Fort Benning for their career course were from the Infantry branch, today they come from all branches. Armor and Infantry students are mixed in the MC3, emulating the combined arms battalion. Engineers and Field Artillerymen also regularly attend the MC3.

The combined arms experience does not end with the student population. The MC3 Small Group Instructors (SGIs) are hand selected from among the top officers in their branches. Just as the student population is a reflection of the combined arms battalion, so too are the SGIs. Inside the MC3 you will find SGIs from the Infantry, Armor, Special Forces, United States Marine Corps, and our allies, Great Britain and Australia.

While the SGIs lead combined arms training at the small group level, the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate (CATD) leads the combined arms charge in larger settings. CATD provides War Fighting Function instruction for Logistics, Military Intelligence, Field Artillery, Chemical Corps, Signal Corps, Aviation, Engineer Corps and the Chaplain Corps.

Fort Benning is leading the Army by integrating courses like Biometrically Enabled Intelligence, Every Soldier is a Sensor, and Forensics into all levels of officer training. Our Leadership and Tactics divisions teach core Army values and principles to students in Officer Candidate School (OCS).

The NCO Academy, OCS, Infantry Basic Officer Leader Course and Direct Commission programs rely on our Field Artillery instructors to present the most realistic and challenging Call For Fire training.

Combined arms training in CATD goes beyond individual instructors. Just as many units within our brigade combat teams have combined arms leadership, so too does CATD. The Army's premier instructional cadre includes a Field Artillery Deputy Director and an Australian sergeant major. Our Aviation instruction encompasses Combat Army Aviation, Unmanned Arial Sensors, U.S. Marine Corps Aviation and Close Air Support taught by an Air Force pilot from the Aviation Center at Fort Rucker, Ala. Our MC3 even conducts combined training with the Aviation School.

Many of us grew up thinking of Fort Benning as the Home of the Infantry, Ranger school, and Airborne school. As Fort Benning progresses toward the Maneuver Center of Excellence, we continue to build on our rich heritage of combined arms training.

OPINION

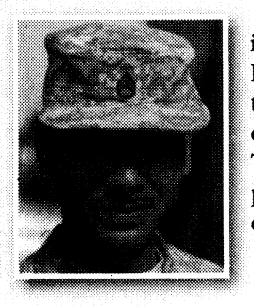
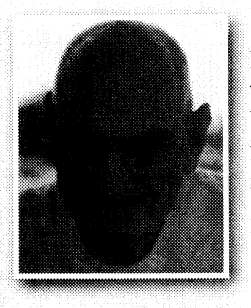
How have you seen diversity in the military?



I'm a good example of diversity in the Army. I'm a black Korean Irishman. But I notice diversity throughout the Army. We're educated on equal opportunity. The Army is always proactive to prevent discrimination. I've never experienced it.

— Staff Sgt. Alexander Janey, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment



I joined the Air Force in 1947. We had all races, but African-Americans were segregated in different barracks. It was sad. Everybody's treated equal now. Women can do more in the military, too — jobs that men used to do. It's a lot better than when I first joined.

— Retired Tech. Sgt. Leland Jolly

I've seen more diversity during three months on post than during three years of elementary school teaching. For children who aspire to be in the military, they can see Native Americans, Asian-Americans, African-Americans, people who look like them, and they know they can follow in their footsteps.

— Anne-Marie Stewart, Test examiner

There are a lot of people from the Caribbean serving in the Army. I'm from Jamaica, and I was in the military before I became a naturalized citizen.

— Sgt. Sujon Rincon, MEDDAC

I just think the U.S. Army is the best example of diversity and how well it works for ourselves and for the nation. I went through basic training in 1987, and they told us that everyone is green, and that's the creed I've lived by.

— Sgt. 1st Class Robert Nerkowski, Combined Arms Training Directorate

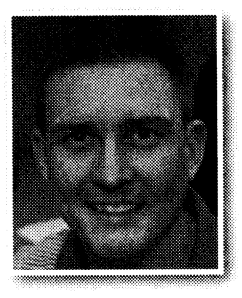
USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Anthony C. O'Bryant



Last Thursday, I witnessed a defining moment in American History. I watched as Barack Obama became the first African-American to win a major party's nomination.

I can remember watching in grade school and throughout my life, the black and white images of Martin Luther King Jr.'s "I have a dream" speech from the steps of the Lincoln memorial in 1963.

When in D.C., I made it a point to stand on that same hallowed ground where that truly remarkable man inspired a nation to fulfill the true meaning of its creed. I didn't watch Obama's speech at Invesco Field through the lens of a Democrat or a Republican, but through the eyes of a very, very proud American.

The next day, Republican presidential candidate John McCain announced that his running mate would be Alaska's Gov. Sarah Palin. Palin is the first female to be selected for the vice presidency as a Republican and only the second female to join the presidential ticket in our nation's history.

Palin is already the first female and youngest governor of the largest state in the union. She also has a son, Track Palin, whom graduated from Infantry basic training last year on Sand Hill after enlisting on the sixth anniversary of 9/11.

Although we still have a lot of work to do, our country has come a long way toward racial and gender equality, and the Army has been one of the main reasons why.

It was the Army that began the controversial process of integration in 1948, when President Truman signed Executive Order 9981. That decision has led to countless opportunities for talented heroes and warriors to defend our nation.

That decision led to Gen. Colin Powell becoming the first African-American to serve as the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff in 1993 and Secretary of State in 2001.

It was the Army that began the controversial process of recognizing the incredible service of female Soldiers with the establishment of the Women's Army Corps following WWII. That decision lead to Lt. Gen. Ann Dunwoody becoming the first female four star general in June.

All politics aside, and no matter if your mascot is a donkey or elephant; Obama and Palin represent the progress we all have made.

This week is the Armed Forces Voters Week and Absentee Voting Week is Oct. 12 to 18. The Federal Voting Assistance Program has a terrific Web site that is very user friendly to help service members navigate the once complicated process of registering to vote and absentee voting.

This week in Fort Benning history

1934

• The post's Department of Experiment revealed the results of a test measuring the merits of new cotton flags against the traditional woolen bunting flags that had flown over American Army posts for 150 years.

Two flags, one cotton and one woolen, had flown side by side in various places around post in all kinds of weather from reveille to retreat. So far, the woolen flag had shown more signs of wear. Edges were frayed and the red stripes had faded to a salmon color.

The cotton flags, which cost little more than half the woolen, were no worse for wear.

• The post newspaper released the results of a study by the National Tuberculosis Association in cooperation with the U.S. Census Bureau. A comparison of work-related fatalities showed the most dangerous jobs to be those related to the care and use of horses.

Men employed in industries using horses had a much higher death rate than those employed in automotive, air or railroad industries.

• Wildlife was increasing in population in the hinterlands of Fort Benning thanks to careful management. Hunting wild pigs on horseback was a popular sport.

The feral pigs, descendents of non-native domestic pigs, made an excellent dish for barbecue, a reporter said.

Also popular with hunters: turkey, squirrel, raccoon, fox, bobcat and geese. A pack of hounds was maintained at the Infantry School Hunt Club for use by hunters in pursuit of bobcat or fox.

1943

• "It was a safe and happy landing for Pvt. RR Daly, parachute student at Fort Benning, who made the 200,000th jump Friday," according to a Bayonet report.

There was no ceremony, no fanfare, the author noted, though Maj. Gen. Jospeh Swing, acting commander of the Airborne Command, did "dash out through the bush to congratulate Darby and pin wings on the pleased jumper."

Since the first jump was made at Fort Benning in July 1940, there had only been six fatalities, mainly caused by human error.

• Fort Benning Soldiers participated in opening ceremonies at the new Golden Park, home of the Columbus Cardinals.

Blues: Were favored in two-year Soldier study

Soldiers on jump status, military police and Soldiers who wear green, tan or maroon berets can wear black leather combat boots with the ASUs. The modified blues will be made of a 55 percent wool, 45 percent polyester blend and will be heavier and have more of an athletic cut than the previous uniform.

"The main purpose is to cut down on the number of uniforms a Soldier needs to maintain, consolidating and streamlining for ease of wear and care," Walker said.

The combined cost for the basic uniform and the accoutrements will be about $200, Preston said.

The modified blue ASUs will be available next year, and all green and white ASUs will be phased out by 2014.

BENCH NOTES

Jaguars' Collier shot

The Jacksonville Jaguars' offensive tackle Richard Collier was shot early Tuesday morning outside an apartment while with former Jaguars' player Kenneth Pettway. Collier's injuries are considered life-threatening.

Within the last 18 months, three NFL players, including Washington Redskins' safety Sean Taylor and Broncos' cornerback Darrent Williams have been shot. This is a disturbing trend. I hope Collier recovers from his injuries.

U.S. Open to finish

I'd be surprised if Rafael Nadal, the number one-ranked tennis player in the world, didn't win the U.S. Open at Flushing Meadows, N.Y., regardless of who he faces in the finals. Serena and Venus Williams faced each other in the quarterfinals. Serena won. The women's final match will be broadcast at 8 p.m. Saturday on CBS. The men's final will be at 4 p.m. Sunday on CBS.

Beltre, Drew make history

Monday, two major leaguers hit for the cycle in baseball (a single, double, triple and homerun). Third baseman for the Seattle Mariners Adrian Beltre and shortstop for the Arizona Diamondbacks Stephen Drew were the first duo since the Detroit Tigers' Bobby Veach and the New York Giants' George Burns in 1920.

Johnson wins easily

Jimmie Johnson breezed by the rest of the field to win the Pepsi 500 at the Auto Club Speedway at Fontana, Calif., Aug. 31. Johnson led 228 of 250 laps. Greg Biffle finished second, followed by Denny Hamlin in third.

Johnson moved to third in the points standings, behind Kyle Busch and Carl Edwards. Johnson is the reigning Sprint Cup champion.

Ryder Cup team chosen

It will be an interesting Ryder Cup for the PGA without Tiger Woods, but U.S. captain Paul Azinger has put together a great team: Phil Mickelson, Jim Furyk, Stewart Cink, Kenny Perry, Anthony Kim, Justin Leonard, Boo Weekley and Ben Curtis, Steve Stricker, Hunter Mahan, J.B. Holmes and Chad Campbell.

The 37th Ryder Cup will take place Sept. 19-21 at Valhalla Golf Club in Louisville, Ky.

Ready for some football

The NFL season kicked off Thursday with the Washington Redskins playing the N.Y. Giants. The Sunday night game will be the Chicago Bears versus the Indianapolis Colts at 8:15 p.m. on NBC. Monday night on ESPN, the Minnesota Vikings will play the Green Bay Packers at 7 p.m. and the Denver Broncos will take on the Oakland Raiders at 10:15.

Young skater sets world record

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Mitchell Thomas IV

Matt Stewart, a 16-year-old skater on the GT Speed team, set a record in the 3000 meter relay in July at the Speed Skating Nationals in Lincoln, Neb. Stewart has been skating for 12 years.

Sitting in the driver's seat of his bright red Acura, a thin teenager straps on a pair of Pinnacle inline skates with 110-millimeter wheels. He climbs out of the car and tugs on his one-piece skating suit. His peers tell him it's too tight.

"Man, this sport gets no respect," said Matt Stewart, a member of the GT Speed Skating team. "They see me wearing these tight shorts, and they think I'm going to the skating rink to hang with the little kids. It has nothing to do with that. This is one of the hardest sports in the world to train for."

Training earned him some new accessories a week ago — two long scars — one on his elbow and one on his knee. He wiped out while skating 35 miles per hour down a steep hill.

"Every other sport I've played is just too slow," Stewart said. "It doesn't interest me unless I'm going 30 miles an hour."

Stewart set a world record in the 15- and 16-year-old sophomore speed skating division in the 3,000-meter relay, roughly a 1.6-mile race, in four minutes and 37 seconds in July at the Speed Skating National Championships in Lincoln, Neb.

The Northside High School student, who was a summer lifeguard at Fort Benning, helps teach beginning skater's safety classes on Saturdays at Jam Skate Center in Columbus and assists with the local Safe Kids Coalition, which provides safety equipment and instruction for kids.

"Matt is a special kid," said Yamil Collazo, the coach of GT Speed. "He does exactly what I ask him to do, he never questions anything and he performs every drill with enthusiasm. He really cares about the sport, and he believes in helping those who want to learn it."

Stewart began skating at 4 years old. A decade later, Stewart competed in the Disney Marathon, placing sixth overall in the adult pro class and three seconds behind the event champion.

"Placing sixth over all those pro races was just an amazing feeling. It made me feel like I can take this sport to a whole new level," Stewart said. "Racing is in my blood, and I train hard to get better and better each year."

Two months before the 2006 Outdoor Nationals, Stewart suffered a bout of mononucleosis, which shut him down for six weeks. After recovering, he entered the competition and skated 15 seconds slower per mile than his usual pace. Stewart tossed his skates in a closet where they sat for six months.

"I was devastated. I had been training so hard, and everything was clicking for me," Stewart said. "I just wanted to give up."

"I was like, 'Jonathan, there are only three weeks before regionals and you really want me to show up like this?'" Stewart said. "He told me, 'Don't worry about it man, I'll get you through regionals. Just prepare for nationals.'"

Blair kept his word and carried them through regionals a few months before they set the 3000-meter record on the final day of July's nationals.

"Matt and I have been close for a long time. After I lost my old partner, I knew Matt would be a perfect teammate," Blair said. "Matt's goal was to break the relay record, and even though I had been racing all week, I told him I would do everything I could to help him get the record. He's a strong skater, and he has been there for me when I needed him. It was the least I could do."

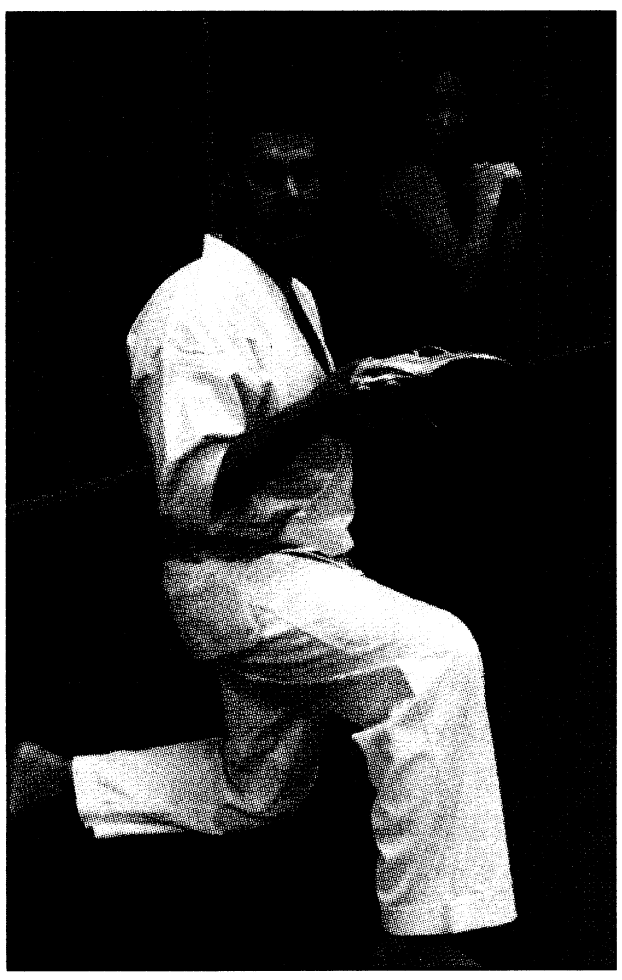
Records and skating aren't Stewart's only focuses. Stewart, a member of the Healthcare Occupation Students of America, maintains a 3.4 GPA and plans to attend Emory University, where he will pursue a career in medicine. Stewart said the dedication he's learned as a skater has led him to success.

"As a skater I push myself, but I also push myself in everything else I do," Stewart said. "To me, C's are unacceptable. Even when I was sick and couldn't train, I made sure I stayed on top of my grades. Education is far more important than any race."

Stewart plans to enroll in the Inline to Ice Transition Camp, a program where inline skaters can become Olympic hopefuls after learning to speed skate on ice.

"I want to go all the way with this," he said. "When I see guys like Michael Phelps breaking records, it inspires me. These Olympians are average everyday people, but they accomplish their dreams, because they want it bad enough. I know I want it, and I'm going do what it takes to get it."

Martial artists make Army, fitness their life



Mitchell Thomas IV

2nd Lt. Gary Khoury and his wife Cindy call Fort Benning home. The couple met when Cindy enrolled in a class at Gary's karate academy.

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

2nd Lt. Gary Khoury, a martial arts instructor from Salem, N.H., gave up his own business to join the Army at 39 years old. Gary, his wife Cindy, and their three children have been stationed in Fort Benning since last summer.

"I have experienced every good thing that a man can experience as an American. I have gone to the best schools, I have traveled the world, and I opened my own business with much success," Gary said. "But I would look at the news and see these 18-and-19-year-old kids fighting for the privileges that I have. As an able-bodied man who loves his country, I felt I needed to do something."

Gary wasn't always an athlete. In his freshman year in high school, he was 5 feet 2inches tall and weighed 120 pounds.

"I was an utter failure in team sports," he said. "I was cut from the football and basketball teams. I only took martial arts because my mother was scared for my safety."

By his senior year, he had grown to six feet and was a high school standout in football and track. But his heart was in martial arts.

Gary moved to Japan in 1990 where he attended college and trained under masters of Uechi-ryu, a style of Okinawan karate. He earned a fifth degree black belt and won a third place finish in the World Championships in Okinawa in 1998.

In 1997, Gary opened Khoury's Karate Academy, where he taught various styles of karate to students of all ages. Cindy, a single mother at the time, began taking Gary's classes in 1998.

"Gary taught me that if I was ever attacked, I would need to count on myself to survive, and as a single mother, that made so much sense," said Cindy, who became the school's fitness instructor. "I was one of those many people he helped change. He really guided me in the right direction."

"We are all in this together with our husbands," Cindy said. "When I hear the wife of a Soldier say the class is the highlight of her week, I know I've made a difference."

Gary plans to make the military his career.

"I always wanted to join the military, but when I was younger, I didn't have the guts," he said. "With Cindy's love and support, I was able to see the bigger picture, and I have everything I need to do what I feel is important for my family and for the country."

FIT FACTS

MWR FITNESS DIRECTOR
Lori Smith

This week I want to continue my article on supplements. I am going to talk a bit more in detail about a few popular dietary supplements and vitamins on the market today. These are not name brands — just types.

Multivitamins: Multivitamins lead the way in sales in the dietary supplement market. They have long been considered a valuable part of a healthy lifestyle and are a good way to fill in gaps when your diet is inadequate. But remember that it's important to take the right multivitamin for you, based on your age and sex.

Meal replacements: Powdered and liquid products like SlimFast and Ensure might not be what most of us think of as dietary supplements. They're included in the list because they are designed to supplement the diet.

For people who can't eat regular food because of illnesses, these products are good alternatives. It's still important to try and eat a wide variety of nutrient-rich foods if you can.

Sports nutrition supplements: This is a broad category including both sports performance and weight-loss supplements. Among them are creatine, amino acids, protein formulas and fat burners.

Creatine is one of the most popular supplements. Many studies have been done showing it can work in muscle cell recovery in athletes who engage in high-intensity, short-burst activity such as sprinting or weight lifting. Anyone taking creatine must remember to stay well hydrated to avoid cramping. Sports supplements provide subtle effects, so you won't see a drastic difference overnight. And remember, if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

Calcium: Calcium is one of the minerals most often lacking in Americans' diets. Experts say that whenever you can, you should choose calcium from foods such as dairy products, fortified foods, dark leafy greens, soybeans, beans, fish and raisins. The 2005 U.S. Dietary Guidelines recommend three servings of low-fat or nonfat dairy each day, but there are plenty of people who shun dairy, the best source of calcium in our diets. If you do choose a calcium supplement, look for calcium citrate or lactate. These forms are best absorbed by the body.

Many of us, however, don't need these supplements. Some people misuse them, thinking the vitamins will help reduce their stress and make them nicer in traffic. But there is not much research to support this theory. Besides, our diets are plentiful in B vitamins.

One exception to this is seniors, who may need additional B12.

As we get older, we absorb less of this particular vitamin. Most of us should skip the supplements and get our Bs from grains, dark green vegetables, orange juice and enriched foods. People with certain medical conditions or who take drugs that interfere with vitamin absorption may also require supplementation.

Vitamin C: My dad always tells me to take more vitamin C whenever I am sick. After reading more about vitamins, I found there is little proof that this works.

But it won't do any harm up to about 1,000 milligrams a day. Rich sources of vitamin C include oranges, peppers, grapefruits, peaches, papayas, pineapples, broccoli, strawberries, tomatoes and melons.

Glucosamine and chondroitin:These supplements are often taken by people with joint pain. As a matter of fact, my vet recommended I give my dog some for her arthritis.

But there's still not much evidence these supplements work. Studies have not shown significant pain reduction for osteoarthritis sufferers. However, many rheumatologists have prescribed this combination to their patients, who have been able to find some relief.

Vitamin D: Chances are, you are not getting enough vitamin D for good health. Experts suggest taking a daily vitamin D supplement or getting safe sun exposure to maintain proper blood levels of vitamin D. And be sure to eat a variety of foods rich in vitamin D such as fortified milk and cereals, salmon and tuna. Check with your dermatologist (or read my article from a few weeks ago) about guidelines for safe sun exposure.

Fish oils: Unless a doctor is treating you for heart disease or high triglyceride levels, you should not take fish oil supplements. Studies showing that omega-3 fatty acids are cardio-protective form the basis for the American Heart Association's recommendation to consume fatty fish twice weekly. But the studies do not show that popping a supplement can have the same benefit in healthy individuals.

If you don't like fatty fish such as salmon, try eating other kinds of fish, like canned tuna. For all you catfish lovers, don't go running to eat fried catfish thinking you're doing a good thing. Avoid breaded and fried fish.

Foods such as canola oil, soybeans, flax, and walnuts are also good sources of omega-3s, but they are not a substitute for fatty fish. However, if you are not getting any omega-3 fatty acids in your diet (I don't eat fish at all) then taking a omega-3 fatty acid supplement may be OK.

I hope this helps clear up some questions on supplements. Remember — it's best to try and get all your recommended nutrition from food first.

Thanks for reading and have a happy and healthy weekend.

Operation Homefront to host Freedom Walk

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

Operation Homefront will host the annual Freedom Walk at 6 a.m. Sept. 11 at Stewart-Watson Field.

It's not a race or a fundraiser, said Kim Scofi, chapter president.

"It's a statement to say we appreciate our freedom and those who have stepped forward to provide it for us," she said, "and to remember those who lost their lives on September 11."

Operation Homefront will also host a Freedom Walk at Warner Robins Air Force Base and the Operation Homefront office in Marietta, Ga.

Nearly 200 people participated last year at Fort Benning.

There is no set distance for the walk. Water and free T-shirts will be available while supplies last. The walk is open to the public and admission is free.

To register or for more information, go to www.operationhomefront.net/georgia and follow the links to the Freedom Walk or call the Operation Homefront office at 770-973-0014.

Red Cross helps Soldier after fire

THE BAYONET
Cheryl Rodewig

Staff Sgt. Meonsania Judge still has trouble talking about losing her Columbus home in a fire Aug. 8.

"I didn't believe it," she said. "It was a dream — it wasn't reality. I was in shock."

School would start for Judge's four children in three days. When they had no place to go, Red Cross came to the rescue.

"Thank you for the American Red Cross," Judge said. "They've been very helpful. Being a single mother, everything that I worked hard to get — to provide for my kids — it was all gone. You don't ever think it'll happen to you, but when it happened to me, the Red Cross came through."

The Red Cross put them up in a hotel for three days and gave Judge money for food and much-needed back to school clothing. Representatives from Red Cross still keep in touch with the family to make sure they're doing all right.

Judge said she is glad she volunteered and donated to the Red Cross in the past. After learning firsthand how much its support can mean, she plans to continue supporting the Red Cross.

Mitzi Oxford, development director for West Central Georgia Red Cross, said when people think of the Red Cross, they usually think of medical assistance during a major natural disaster or the place you go to give blood, but it's more than that.

"The mission of our Red Cross is to give help and hope when it's needed most, and that covers a lot of territory," Oxford said.

"When a family is watching their house go up in flames, and they're losing everything they have, they lose hope," she said. "When the Red Cross shows up, and we have blankets and water and teddy bears for the children, it really gives them hope. We call those fires the silent disasters, because they generally only impact the families who have them, but that's huge to them."

The West Central Georgia chapter serves nine counties, including Chattahoochee, Muscogee and Harris. Any time of day or night, they respond to disasters like house fires, providing people with basic necessities, including food, clothing, shelter, even eyeglasses or prescribed medication replacements.

On post, Red Cross provides safety classes, volunteer orientations and supplies for the Warrior Transition Battalion, said Michele Walton, station coordinator for Fort Benning.

"What we do with the military is part of the heart of the Red Cross, because the Red Cross started on the battlefield ... when Clara Barton started ministering and giving first aid to Soldiers during the Civil War," Oxford said. "We're trying to expand those services and provide a good volunteer base."

For all its humanitarian goals, the Red Cross relies on the generosity of the public — the time, talents and donations of people like Judge who may one day benefit from Red Cross assistance.

To volunteer or for more information, call Walton at 706-545-5194 or visit the Red Cross office in Building 2626, Soldiers' Plaza.

Kids talk about struggles as they 'grow up Army'

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Elizabeth M. Lorge

Constant moving. Difficulty making and keeping friends. Parents who may leave for months at a moment's notice.

Extra responsibilities. Loneliness. Missed birthdays and holidays. Constant fear that this time mom or dad might never come home.

These are the hallmarks of life as a military "brat," said Army kids at an Operation Purple summer camp for military children. But with these drawbacks come immense pride and patriotism, maturity, strength, along with a national and often global outlook.

Army kids also said that no matter what, they know their moms and dads are real-life superheroes.

"My mom's my hero since forever, because even before the war she was always a strong person," said 16-year-old Jeremy Beale. "She graduated when she was about my age. And knowing this is her third time over, it's just amazing to me that the Army would send her three times and she would just keep going."

Jeremy's mother is currently on her third deployment to Iraq, and his father has also deployed.

Jeremy said his parents worked hard to keep from deploying at the same time, and that he's closer to his mother, so having her gone is particularly hard.

Although she tries to call every day, and both his grandmothers live with the family, he said it isn't the same.

No amount of phone calls, e-mails, letters or packages can make up for a missing parent.

"It was really hard because my dad doesn't really do all of the taking care of and stuff — it was normally my mom," Jacob Gaz, 11, said.

"The hardest part was just not having her there. Like when you accomplished something, she'd be all the way over in the world. You just couldn't tell her."

Like Jeremy, Jacob had grandparents who tried to fill the void when his mother was deployed to Kuwait in 2005, although Jacob said he also tried to look out for his little brother.

In fact, when one parent is gone, an older sibling like Jacob or 13-year-old Audrey Zipperer often has to take up some of the slack.

"Being an Army kid is definitely different than being your normal, average kid," she said.

"We go through a lot tougher situations that require us to have certain things like courage and the ability to withstand pressure. And you have to be responsible, definitely.

"You have to be prepared for anything, because anything can happen and you have to be prepared for bad things and good things," Abigail said.

Audrey said that she got angry when her father left — angry at him, angry at the situation and angry in general. It just wasn't fair, she said, but her mother would remind her that her father didn't start this war. She should be angry, her mother said, with the people who did.

"We'd cry and get sad, but we knew that we couldn't change it. We couldn't say, 'You can't do this.' It was his job. He had to do it," said Audrey.

Most of the kids had a special, treasured memento to help them stay connected to their absent parent as they counted down the days and cried when they had to add more days as deployments were extended.

The two Zipperer girls had received stuffed animals with recordings of their father's voice from Build-a-Bear.

"I'd press the hand and the message came up. It's dead now because I pressed it so much when I was upset, and I still sleep with it. It's really special. That helped a lot," Audrey said.

The kids also agreed that the uncertainty and confusion of deployments was exacerbated by frequent moves and starting over in schools that might not have many other military kids. Civilian kids might try to understand what it's like to send a parent to war, but it's impossible, they said.

"Some people think that starting over is pretty much something that they would want to do," said Jeremy.

"Starting over's not always the greatest thing. This last move was the hardest because I moved right in the middle of middle school.

"Going to school off base was a little different because making friends with military kids would be easier because they have something in common," he said. "It's a little weird because you don't know what to say to kids or you don't know if they have military parents.

"You've just got to wing it."

Jeremy's mother actually deployed in order to avoid moving him in the middle of high school.

Like Audrey, he said it's useless to get mad or expect his parents to change who they are.

He said that he's grateful to simply have parents when so many kids do not, especially parents he can be proud of.

"Army kids are full of pride," said Audrey. "Especially with our parents. I'm very proud of my dad. He looks to me for support and love and comfort.

"They can't help their job," she said. "They can't help what they do. We might not like them going overseas and stuff, but we have to know that that's what they signed up to do.

"They signed up to help protect our country. We just have to say, 'Okay, I love you so much. I'm so proud of you all the time.'"

'Ma' Rainey Museum offers peek into blues era

THE BAYONET
Rachel L. Watkins

One doesn't have to travel far from post to find the house of the "Mother of Blues," Gertrude "Ma" Rainey. Rainey, one of the earliest professional blues singers, was born in 1886 in Columbus. Her house is now a museum open to the public.

Rainey first performed at the Springer Opera House when she was 15. Shortly after, she toured with vaudeville groups in the South.

At the age of 18, she married a vaudeville performer, William "Pa" Rainey, and became known as Ma Rainey. Ma's blues performances became a popular addition to the vaudeville shows.

Although her marriage didn't last very long, her music did. During the 1920s, Ma recorded more than 90 songs, including See See Rider, Georgia Cakewalk, Jelly Bean Blues, Lawd Send Me a Man Blues, New Bo Weevil Blues and Hear Me Talking to You.

She worked with Louis Armstrong, Bessie Smith, Ida Cox and Fletcher Henderson.

Ma Rainey has been inducted into the Blues Foundation's Hall of Fame and the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame.

The museum, about 30 minutes from Fort Benning, offers people a chance to see Rainey's personal belongings and look at history in the blues era. The most notable items are the piano, bed and dresser owned by Rainey. Other interesting items include her death certificate (with her birthday listed incorrectly), records she released, posters of Rainey and vaudeville memorabilia. Rainey's gravesite is at Porterdale Cemetery in Columbus, only a few miles from her house.

The museum, at 805 Fifth Ave., is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free. Large groups are welcome. Groups larger than 10 need to call and make a reservation.

For more information, call 706-653-4960.

An oil painting of Gertrude "Ma" Rainey by Columbus artist Garry Pound hangs in Rainey's bedroom. During the late 1920s, Ma recorded more than 90 songs, including See See Rider, Georgia Cakewalk, Jelly Bean Blues, Lawd Send Me a Man Blues, New Bo Weevil Blues and Hear Me Talking to You.

BABYLON A.D.

In the not too distant future, much of the planet is a war zone; the rest, a collection of wretched way stations, teeming megalopolises, and vast wastelands punctuated by areas left radioactive from nuclear meltdowns. Thousands of satellites scan, observe and monitor every move. It is a world made for hardened warriors, one of whom, a mercenary known only as Toorop, lives by a simple survivor's code: kill or be killed.

COLLEGE

Kevin's girlfriend dumps him for being too boring so he doesn't want to go to the freshman orientation weekend at Fairmont University, where they had planned to go together. But his best friends convince him the weekend away will help get his mind off her. Once there, one of the rowdiest fraternities on campus decides to recruit them as pledges.

DISASTER MOVIE

Disaster Movie follows the comic misadventures of a group of ridiculously attractive twenty-somethings during one fateful night as they try to make their way to safety while every known natural disaster and catastrophic event — asteroids, twisters, earthquakes, the works — hits the city and their path as they try to solve a series of mysteries to end the rampant destruction. Disaster Movie lampoons everything and everyone, from Indiana Jones and Iron Man to Amy Winehouse and High School Musical.

TRAITOR

When straight arrow FBI agent Roy Clayton heads up the investigation into a dangerous international conspiracy, all clues seem to lead back to former U.S. Special Operations officer, Samir Horn. A mysterious figure with a web of connections to terrorist organizations, Horn has a knack for emerging on the scene just as a major operation goes down. The interagency task force looking into the case meets with Carter, a veteran CIA contractor who seemingly has his own agenda and Max Archer, a fellow FBI agent.

Traitor stars Don Cheadle, Archie Panjabi, Guy Pearce, Lorena Gale and Raad Rawi. It is rated PG-13 for violence and language.
