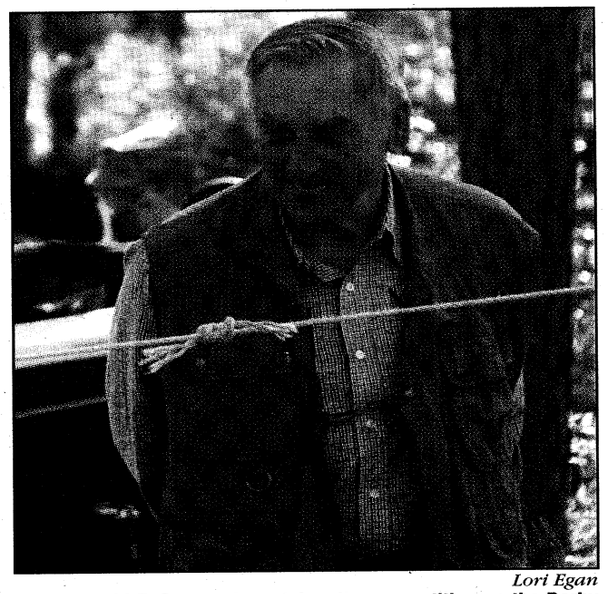
BRC honors Ranger legend

LTG(R) David E. Grange Jr. was inducted into the Ranger Hall of Fame in its inaugural year of 1992 for his dedication to duty and contributions to the U.S.Army as a Ranger and a leader.

Grange is a veteran of 20 campaigns in three wars and served with distinction throughout his Army career.

He enlisted in 1942 and as an Airborne Infantryman, he participated in the Rome-Arno, Southern France, Rhineland, Ardennes and Central Europe campaigns of World War II with the 517th Parachute Infantry Regiment. In 1949, he left the 82nd Airborne Division to attend Officer Candidate School. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1950 and served with the 187th Airborne Infantry Regiment in Korea.

He served his first tour of duty in Vietnam in 1963 as an Airborne/Ranger/Infantry advisor to the Department of Defense's Research and Development Field Unit.

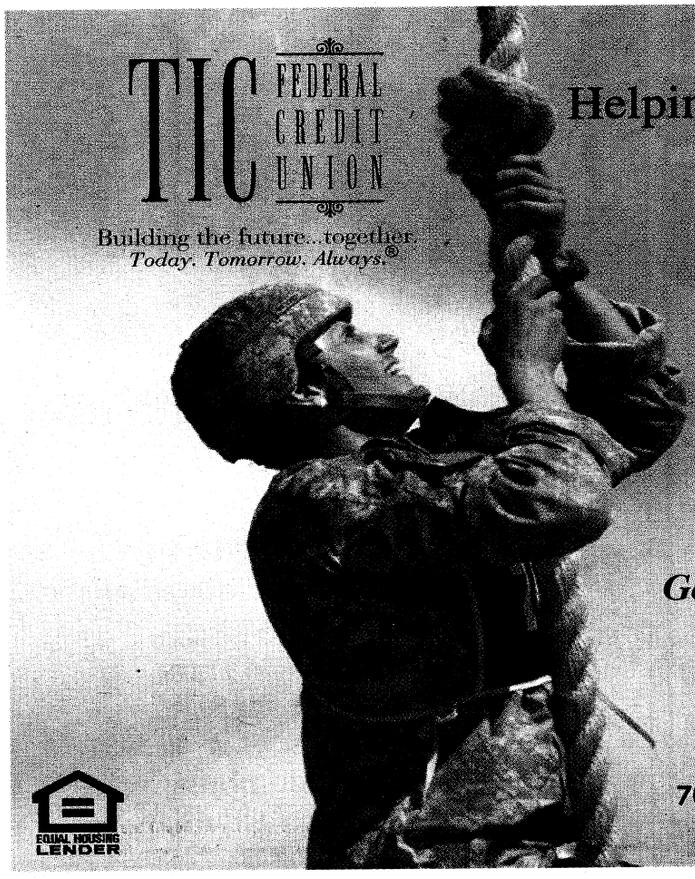


He commanded the 2nd Battalion (Airborne), 506th Infantry Regiment, 101st Airborne Division in Vietnam in 1967.

During his third tour in Vietnam in 1970, he commanded the 101st Support Command and the 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division.

He served as the director of the Ranger Department and later commanded the 2nd Infantry Division, the U.S. Arming Infantry Center and 6th U.S.Army.

He retired from the Army after 41 years of service in 1984.



Grange's awards and decorations include the Defense Distinguished Service Medal, the Army Distinguished Service Medal, three Silver Stars, two Legions of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Soldier's Medal, the Purple Heart and 38 other combat awards for valor and meritorious service. He has also received the French Legion of Honor, Degree of Officer, the Korean Wharang Medal with Gold Star, the Kuksun Medal, the Cheonsu Medal and Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry with 2 palms. He holds the Combat Infantryman Badge with 2 stars. Master Parachutist Badge with 3 stars and the Ranger and Special Forces Tabs.

Lori Egan

LTG(R) David E. Grange Jr. watches the competition on the Darby Queen during last year's event. The BRC, which began in 1982, was the brainchild of a group of civilian Ranger boosters, the Chairborne Rangers, headed by Dick Leandri, who envisioned a "Ranger Olympics" of sorts. They wanted the event to honor Grange, a former Ranger Department commander.

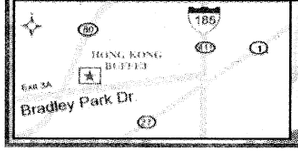
EVOLUTION OF BRC

In July 1981, the Chairborne Rangers, a civilian organization that supports Rangers, asked the Ranger Training Department to design and conduct a "Ranger Olympics" in order to identify the best two-man Ranger team in the Army.

From the beginning, the objective was clear, competition should place extreme demands on the team's physical, mental and technical abilities as Rangers.

The standards of performance must vastly exceed those required by the average Soldier.



The first two Best Ranger Competitions were held as competitions between teams from each of the three Ranger Department Camps.

In 1984, the competition expanded to include teams from throughout the Army.

Interest in the Best Ranger Competition has risen to such a high level that many of the participating commands now conduct preliminary competitions to select the teams that will represent their unit at Fort Benning each year.

The competition is a three-day event consisting of physical and mental tasks undertaken with very little rest between events. Selected events must be completed to remain in the competition. The historical attrition rate averages approximately 60 percent. Competitors are not aware of test sequence until arriving at the test site.

The competition has grown over the years to be one of the highlights for Fort Benning with multi-media coverage and outstanding guest speakers.

The Ranger Creed is the official creed of the U.S. Army Rangers. It was initiated by then-LTC Ken Leuer and his CSM Neal R. Gentry. It was re-drafted by the battalion XO, MAJ "Rock" Hudson and finalized at Fort Stewart, Ga., in 1974 when the original cadre deployed there July 1, 1974. The last word in the first stanza is a result of the battalions' re-organization to regimental.

Recognizing that I volunteered as a Ranger, fully knowing the hazards of my chosen profession, I will always endeavor to uphold the prestige, honor, and high esprit de corps of my Ranger Regiment.

Four Winds serves up burgers, tradition

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

With the running, jumping, climbing and lifting that goes on during the Best Ranger Competition, its competitors can work up a serious appetite. And if watching them makes you hungry, you'll want to head over to the Four Winds restaurant.

The restaurant, located in Cusseta, Ga., about four miles from Camp Darby, is best known for its Ranger Burger — a concoction consisting of one pound of ground beef, double servings of bacon and cheese, and an assortment of condiments piled onto a sesame seed bun. And if you can beat the record of Daniel J. Robbins, who ate four Ranger Burgers in 11 minutes, 56 seconds, your picture will be hung on the wall.

Four Winds owner Susan Cox created the Ranger Burger in 1985 as a way of satisfying the appetites of customers who consistently ordered double servings of meat and cheese. She got permission from the commander of the U.S. Army Ranger School to use the Ranger name for her burger, and has been serving them since.

"The commander said that as long as I kept the burger up to good standards, I could call it 'Ranger Burger,'" she said. "But, if I ever made a bad burger, I could take the 'Ranger' name off of it. So I've tried my utmost to keep it a good burger through all these years."

Cox said the secret to making Ranger Burgers is what she called "TLC" — tender loving care. Each beef patty is made fresh at Four Winds, and with more than 800 Ranger Burgers sold each week, Cox said business is booming.

"It's been a lot of hard work and a lot of understanding about people,

Ranger Burger: Secret is caring for Soldiers and loving and caring for them, that has made it a success," she said.

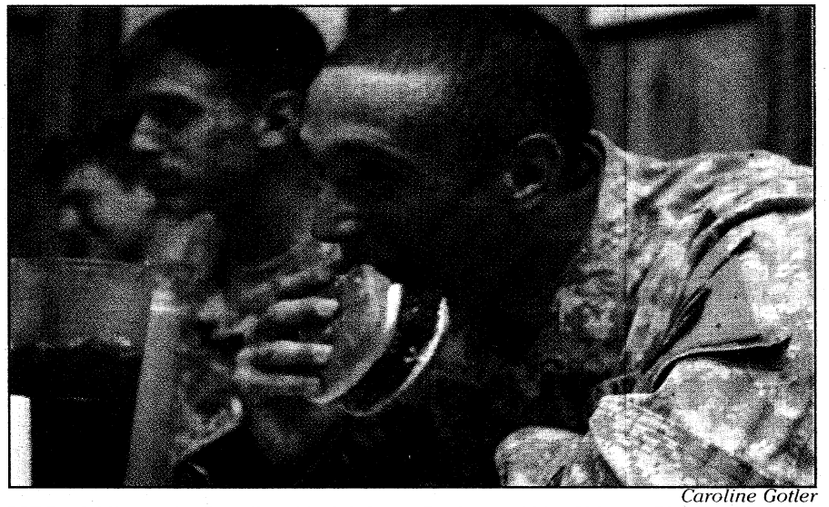
SFC(R) Joel Romo, a former Ranger, has been coming to Four Winds for more than 20 years. He said the people are what keep him coming back.

"The people are nice, the food is good and you get a chance to reminisce with some old Rangers," he said. "You always run into somebody you know here."

Cox credits word-of-mouth, especially in the Ranger community, with helping build her business. For many Soldiers, coming to Four Winds after earning a Ranger Tab is a rite of passage.

"We're normally open after every Ranger School graduation," Cox said. "Serving the Soldiers is a great honor."

Cox said she will continue to serve and honor Soldiers even after she retires from Four Winds, an event that may happen in the near future. After 30 years in business, Cox has put the restaurant up for sale, a decision she said came after much consideration.



"I've been considering it since last year, and it's to the point that I'm going to have to for my health," she said.

While Cox has not had any proposals from potential buyers yet, she said she hopes Four Winds will be able to continue providing quality service and food in the future.

In the meantime, the restaurant will still be open its normal hours, from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and from 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Cox will also be serving up her signature Ranger Burgers from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday to accommodate the Best Ranger Competition crowds.

And though the restaurant's sign, featuring a burger with a Ranger Tab over it, blew down during a tornado in late April, Cox said she is confident customers will still be able to find the restaurant.

"I'm definitely looking to have a big crowd during Best Ranger weekend," she said.

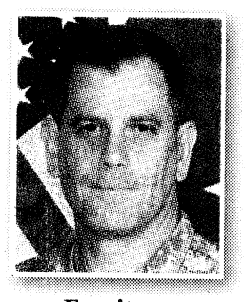
Post to get new commander



USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

The Department of the Army announced that MG Michael Ferriter will be the new commander of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, replacing MG Michael Barbero.

Ferriter, currently the effects coordinator for the 18th Airborne Corps at Fort Bragg, N.C., will take command in June.

The change of command ceremony is set for June 24 at 8 a.m. on Soldiers Field at the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center at Patriot Park.

Ferriter is no stranger to Fort Benning. He attended the Infantry Officer Basic Course and Infantry Officer Advanced Course and Ranger School here.

Ferriter

And he served three tours here.

While assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, from June 1991 to October 1994, he was the S-5 involved with civil and military operations, the Plans and Special Operations officer, and later S-3, Operations. He was the regimental S-3 here and in Somalia during Operation Restore Hope.

He commanded the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment from 1996 to 1998 and the 11th Infantry Regiment from 1999 to 2001.

"Major General Mike Ferriter is an outstanding Soldier, Infantryman and leader," Barbero said. "He is the perfect choice to lead Fort Benning as it develops into the Maneuver Center of Excellence. He brings a wealth of experience and a diverse background with service in Training and Doctrine Command, Forces Command, the 75th Ranger Regiment and in Operation Iraqi Freedom. I have served with Mike several times and I know that he and Margie (his wife) will have a positive impact on the community."

At this time, there is no official decision on Barbero's future assignment.

SFCs Blake Simms, left, and Chad Stackpole, 4th RTB, hold the Colt .45-caliber pistols they received for winning the 26th annual LTG David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition. It is the first time one team came in first in the road march and the night orienteering, winning all three awards: Best Ranger, Rippetoe Award (road march) and Leandri Award (night orienteering).

Two Soldiers made history this year during the 26th annual LTG David E. Grange Jr. Best Ranger Competition May 8-10.

SFCs Blake Simms and Chad Stackpole, 4th Ranger Training Battalion Ranger instructors, won the overall competition, and also came in first on the road march that began Friday night and first in Saturday night's orienteering, earning both the Rippetoe and Leandri awards, respectively.

This is the first time one team won the three major awards.

The Best Ranger Competition challenges the technical, physical and mental abilities of two-man Ranger teams. Out of a starting field of 49 teams, only 24 finished the three-day event.

One team fell out during the first event, the buddy run at Camp Darby, which took the Rangers, wearing Army combat uniforms and individual

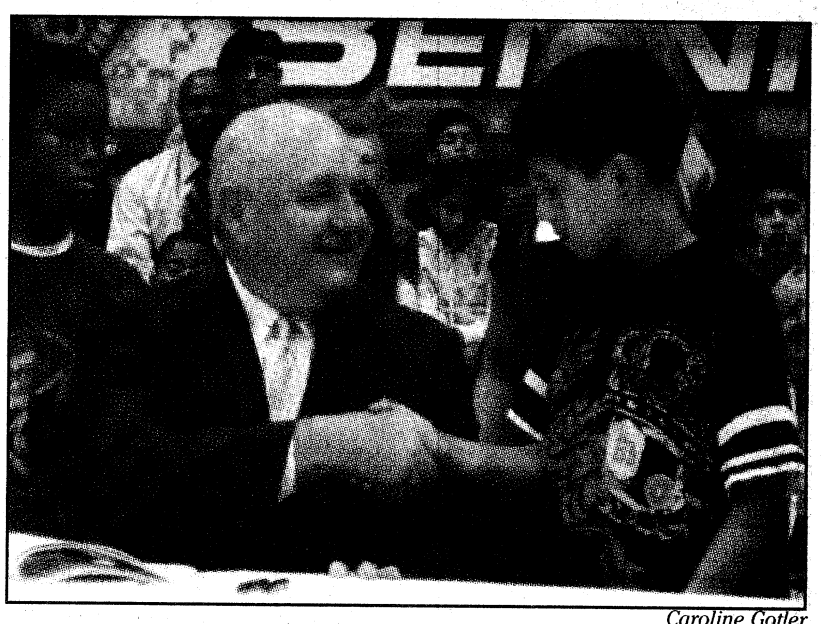
Perdue visits post, signs education bills for children

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Georgia Gov. Sonny Perdue visited Freedom Hall May 7 to sign two bills to ease military children's transitions between schools as they move because of their parents service.



Senate Bill 114 expedites the processing of records from a student's old school to the new one, allows for a waiver for some course prerequisites that could delay on-time graduation and allows school districts to excuse absences when parents deploy or redeploy. House Bill 484 deems children of active-duty military personnel stationed in Georgia as residents, making them eligible for the HOPE Scholarship. Both bills take effect July 1.

"There's no better place to sign this bill than in a community that values its military families such as the Columbus and Fort Benning area," Perdue said. "This is our way of saying 'thank you' for what you do."

Community representatives including Columbus mayor Jim Wetherington, COL Thomas MacDonald, garrison commander, and MG Michael Barbero, commanding general of Fort Benning, joined Perdue at the signing ceremony.

"Between deployments, new schools, new homes and new friends, our military children already have enough on their plates without having to worry about course credit transfers and different prerequisites each time they change schools,"

Fort Benning welcomes new deputy commander

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning formally welcomed its new second in command Monday — and bid farewell to his predecessor.

BG Lloyd "Milo" Miles, who's scheduled to leave today for a yearlong deployment to Iraq, was honored during a command retreat ceremony at the Benning Conference Center. His replacement as the post's deputy commander and U.S. Army Infantry Center assistant commandant is COL Bryan R. Owens.

"It's a bittersweet day for Fort Benning because we lose my deputy," said MG Michael Barbero, the commanding general. "Milo, it's safe to say, looking at the crowd here today, you and Betsy have certainly touched a lot of lives in your two years here at Benning, and you will be missed."

Owens

Miles will become head of the Joint Headquarters Army Advisory Training Team, which is responsible for developing Iraqi forces. Owens arrives from Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he served as chief of staff for the Combined Arms Center.

Barbero called Miles a "hands-on" leader who made a significant impact on young Soldiers. The former deputy managed an array of tasks and "perfectly executed every one of them," he said.

Miles oversaw more than 50 programs of instruction. Barbero praised him for expanding the use of mobile training teams that fanned out across the Army.

Miles thanked the civic, military and civilian leaders at the ceremony for "pointing me in

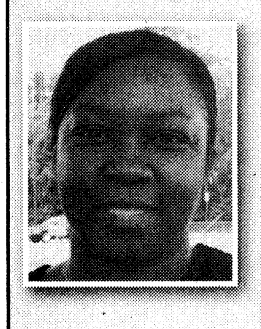
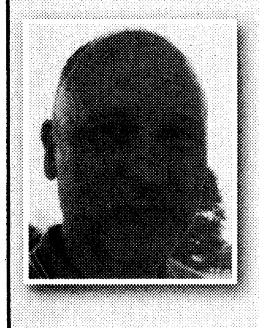
VARIOUS VOICES

What do you do to stay mentally fit?



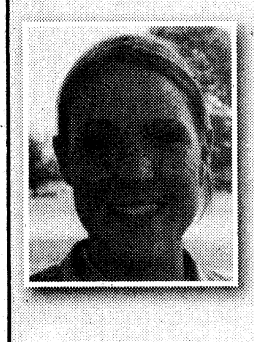
I take vacations, even if it's just going somewhere for a weekend. We like to go to the beach in Destin, Fla. Work can get pretty tough, and getting away and spending time with friends and family helps.

— 1LT Julia Ruddock
362nd Engineer Company



I'm a big reader, especially Tom Clancy novels and books on war and leadership. I read 10 or 15 pages before I go to bed at night. It helps me fall asleep, and sleep keeps you mentally fit, too.

— SPC Nathan Sutera
2nd Battalion,
69th Armor Regiment



I pray. It keeps me sane. I go to church every Sunday and Wednesday at Sightseeing Road Chapel. Everyone is of one accord, and you can get a lot of your worries out. It helps me a lot.

— Niatiacia Ash

I stay mentally fit by staying physically fit. I go to the gym three times a week and I ride my bike about 25 miles on the weekends. A healthy body leads to a healthy mind.

— Pete Pupparo
Army Corps of Engineers

I try to make the best of everything and stay positive. In my motor pool, we like to joke around and get together for cookouts. If you stay positive and keep a good relationship with your co-workers, it makes a big difference.

— SPC Candice Palen

I think staying mentally fit means making sure your brain stays stimulated and being at peace with yourself. I get up early every morning and sit down with a cup of coffee to read the paper and have some quiet time.

Don't forget: Improving mental fitness reduces 'blond moments'

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

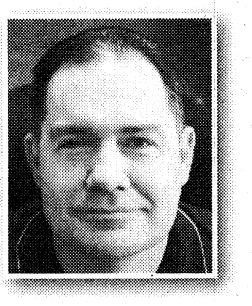
When was the last time you walked into a room and forgot what you went in there for? Or misplaced your keys? Or couldn't think of a word?

Forgetfulness happens to everyone, but for some of us it happens more often than others. I'm a prime example of someone who exerts more mental energy than most just trying to keep my life organized. My desk and computer screen are plastered with Post-It notes with reminders I've written myself. I carry a day planner everywhere, and no matter how hard I try, the surface of my desk never quite seems to stay clear.

So, imagine my dismay when I recently read that absentmindedness is a common symptom of dementia. According to an article on Discovery Health's Web site about staying mentally fit, people suffering from dementia often experience memory loss, misplace belongings, become disoriented in space and time and have trouble doing familiar activities — all of which I have experienced in the last hour. In fact, when I started to write this, I briefly forgot what I was supposed to write about.

Now don't get me wrong, I really don't believe I have dementia. But I have been known among friends and family to have what they call "blond moments" — brief moments where I've forgotten what I'm saying or doing. One member of The Bayonet staff chalks this up to the fact that I'm planning a wedding, but I think she's just hoping I'll improve after I get married.

The good news is that there are ways to improve your mental fitness. The article on the Discovery Health Web site suggests reading, doing crossword puzzles, studying a new language or learning a new skill. It also cites research by University of Michigan researchers that shows spending as little as 10 minutes each day engaged in conversation with another person can boost mental abilities as much as spending that same time doing a crossword puzzle.



Other ways to improve mental fitness, according to Dr. Mark Stibich, a contributor to www.about.com, include making simple changes to your everyday routine, staying physically fit, eating a healthy diet and practicing relaxation techniques such as meditation. All of these have been shown to reduce risk of diseases like dementia and Alzheimer's.

I'll probably never be able to eliminate my "blond moments" entirely, but by incorporating some mental fitness tips into my routine, I just might be able to reduce them. I think I'll start by taking a different route to work tomorrow.

That is, if I remember.

DoD gets it right: Outlaw cell-phone use while driving

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

I recently moved back to Georgia after living on an Air Force base in Japan the last seven years. While away, I didn't realize cell phones apparently now come with glue kits in the U.S.

Americans can't seem to put them down anywhere. It appears to be a genuine addiction.

I don't see what can be so dang important that you can't stash your cell phone while checking bags at the airport, pumping gas, paying for groceries, even surfing the Internet at the public library. Why not pick one or the other?

But maybe it's just me.

The worst place, however, is behind the wheel. Their rampant use is not only a personal nuisance, it's dangerous. And I'm absolutely appalled people would attempt a text message while on the accelerator.

During my short time in Columbus, I've seen enough reckless driving, screeching tires at red lights, minor fender-benders and close calls to recognize a problem.

No state completely bans all types of cell-phone use by drivers — either handheld or hands-free — but many prohibit their use by certain segments of the population, according to the Governors Highway Safety Association. Eleven states and the District of Columbia have a text-messaging ban for all drivers. In Georgia, only school bus drivers are banned from using cell-phone devices while driving.

The National Safety Council is calling for a nationwide ban on all cell-phone use behind the wheel to prevent the growing number of accidents that can be traced to distracted drivers.

Janet Froetscher, the organization's president, said it's not the act of holding the phone, but a person's drifting focus, according to comments posted on a Georgia injury law blog. Rather than maintaining concentration on the road, they're too engaged in conversation.

In early 2006, Defense Department installations began implementing cell-phone restrictions for drivers on military bases. There are stiff fines for offenders.

I'm a huge proponent of individual liberty — minus government intrusion — but with freedom comes personal responsibility.

It took us long enough to master walking and chewing bubble gum at the same time. In general, America's attention span simply isn't wide enough to allow coexistence of cell phones and vehicle operation.

Technology is a fine thing, but there's a time and place for it.

The DoD gets it right. Cell phones and driving don't mix.

This week in Fort Benning history

1923

• It was sure to be a sorry season for the Fort Benning football team, a columnist speculated, since "it is an exceptional case where a man is physically fit to play football after the age of 30. And most of the members of the (Infantry School) class will be over this age."

1967

• Post chaplains inaugurated a dial-a-prayer service here. Residents could call 545-PRAY 24 hours a day.

• In the Post Notes column: COL Robert Nett, operations department, U.S. Army Infantry Center, will lecture and present slides on the Republic of Vietnam at 7:30 p.m. May 13 in the Main Post Service Club.

• After college, a short stint teaching tumbling and two years with the circus, Jack Holden attended OCS at Fort Benning, where he was known to take a backward tumble in the middle of a conversation. The Bayonet noted that the young cadet had already broken his foot while tumbling on Sightseeing Field.

What qualifies one to be a professional tumbler, a reporter asked Holden.

"You've just got to be crazy," he replied.

• The post sports columnist reported the results of a study by the Athletic Institute showed, to his amazement, that more Americans attended horse races than baseball and football games the previous year. Cycling was the most popular participant sport.

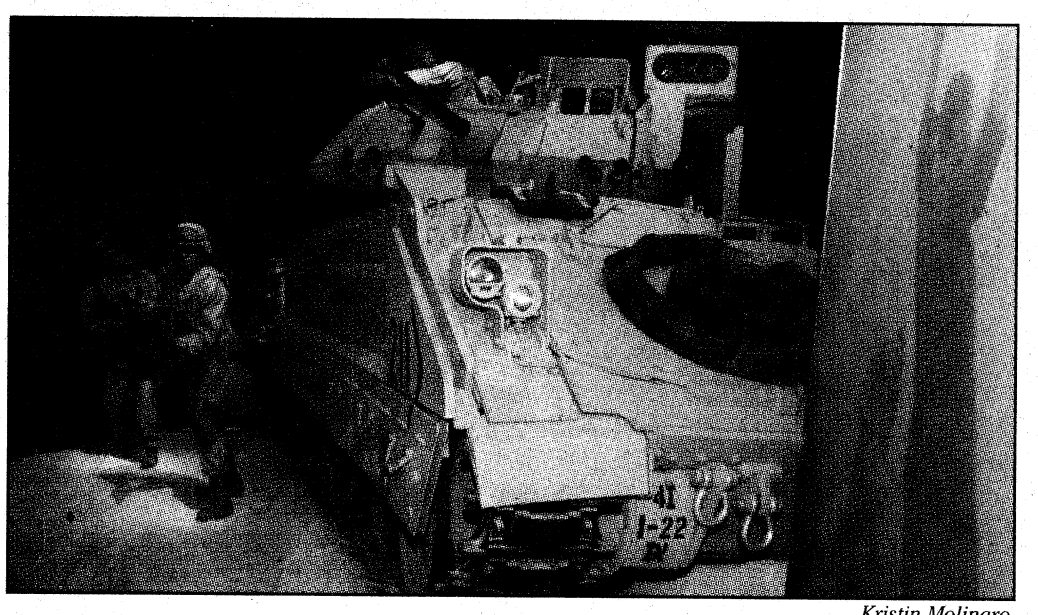
National Infantry Museum display items moving



John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

The countdown to the "green" opening of the new National Infantry Museum continues while the number of artifacts being transferred from the old museum continues to dwindle, said Mike Criscillis, museum curator.

"We're wrapping up our portion here with the last remaining artifacts to go on exhibit," he said. "We are down to about 50 pieces or so. The first installment of putting the exhibits in the exhibit cases started Monday and we're working long hours to get the artifacts installed so we can meet the green opening on the 19th of June."

During the next few weeks, Criscillis said his crew will put the finishing touches on many of the exhibits and likened it to detailing a car.

"You have a Cadillac here, so it's like detailing that car on the assembly line," he said. "We are still detailing the figures and putting the final touches on them and getting ready to install them. We are finishing up on the Bradley, ... hopefully the things that need to be done on it will be done in the next week ... things like tie-down straps, antennas, hand mics, ammo cans and things like that. Just little odds and ends ... we're getting close."

Kristin Molinaro
A scene from "The Last 100 Yards" depicts Infantry Soldiers serving in Operation Iraqi Freedom. Finishing touches are being added to the exhibits at the National Infantry Museum, which is scheduled to officially open June 19.

Authenticity in the exhibits is key, Criscillis said.

"Small things like binoculars, uniform items and insignia ... a lot of small stuff ... but people expect accuracy as much as we do. When you put a uniform on a figure we want to make sure we are accurate. We have to do a lot of research to make sure we are accurate."

Sometimes, replicas are used, like a World War II telephone, but Criscillis said he identifies them as replicas on the display.

When the doors of the gallery open, there will be a few surprises, Criscillis said.

"I don't want to give away all the key elements," Criscillis said. "We will have some of the Medal of Honor recipients items in there.

"A lot of stuff we pulled out of our artifacts hasn't been on display (before). So, I am not going to say what they are. We are going to do a hunt, a treasure hunt, to see what they can find what they haven't seen on display before.

"It's really an exciting time."

The museum is located off of Fort Benning Road at 1775 Legacy Way, approximately two miles south of Victory Drive and outside the access control points of Fort Benning.

The museum is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. World War II Street, Imax Theater, Soldier Store gift shop and Fife and Drum restaurant are open to the public. Admission is free.

Education: Bills to lesson burden on families

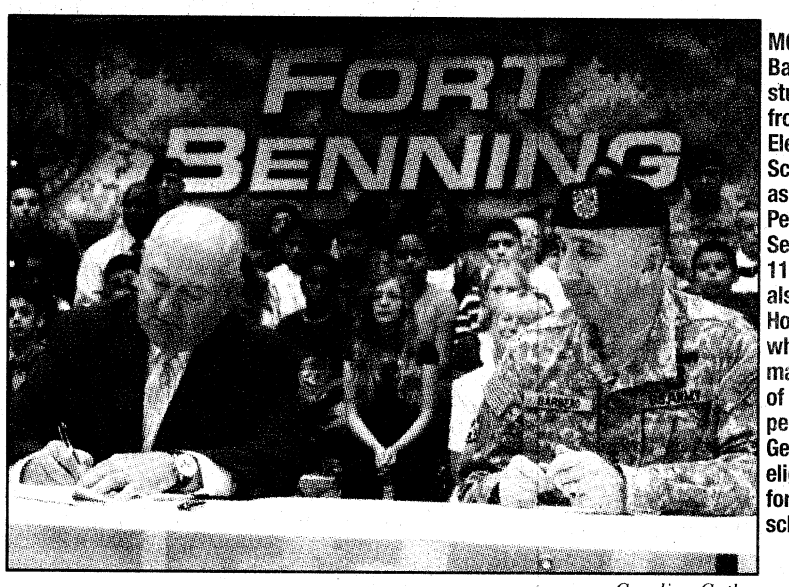
Barbero said. "So anything you can do to help lessen the burden of our Soldiers and their families is always appreciated."

Six thousand school-age children expected to arrive at Fort Benning by 2011 because of Base Realignment and Closure.

With the influx of a lot of military families, there was an urgency to make sure we put into law some of the things (educators) had been doing on a voluntary basis, Perdue said.

Thirty-five fifth-graders from Dexter Elementary School, as well as family members and Soldiers representing each unit on Fort Benning, watched Perdue sign the bills from bleachers directly behind his table.



Several fifth-graders, including Stanmore Hines and Victoria Williams, shook hands with the governor and stood next to him as he signed the bills. Hines and Williams called the experience "cool."

For SSG Albert Killian, 926th Medical Detachment, the new laws couldn't come soon enough.

"This is the greatest thing ever," he said. "When I was 14 and moved to Georgia from Florida, I lost at least seven credits because they weren't part of the Georgia system. I had to start fresh. If this bill had been around then, I probably would have had a 4.0 grade point average instead of 2.5."

Killian said he is confident his children, who are 7 and 9 years old, will benefit from the new laws.

"They've switched schools twice already," he said. "Neither one of them are Georgia residents, but we plan to make Georgia our home, so it's great they implemented this."

BRC: Tests 49 teams, 24 finish three-day event

body armor weighing more than 32 pounds, on a 4.8 mile run through rugged, unimproved terrain with a swamp and a chest-high creek, said SFC Troy Reed, a Ranger instructor with 5th Ranger Training Battalion in Dahlonega, Ga., who walked the course earlier in the week.

Team 8, SSGs Luke McDowell and Brandon Farmer, with the 75th Ranger Regiment, crossed the finish line first in the buddy run, followed by Team 22, MSGs Daniel Jenkins and Walter Zajkowski, with the U.S. Army Special Operations Command, and Team 46, CPT Samuel Linn and 1SG Robert Carter, 5th Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 2nd Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Simms and Stackpole came in fourth.

The second event was the Darby Queen, which is more than a mile long with 26 obstacles.

With names like easy balancer and island hopper, the obstacles are anything but, said CSM Matt Walker, U.S. Army Infantry School command sergeant major.

Three teams did not complete the Darby Queen, two teams were injured on the Island Hopper and one team didn't complete the Tough One.

"I always thought the Darby Queen was the toughest obstacle course in the Army," said SFC Jeffrey Vazzana, with the 95th Civil Affairs Brigade (Airborne), Fort Bragg, N.C., who competed for the first time this year after supporting the competition for years when he was assigned to the Ranger Training Brigade. "It's even worse than Nasty Nick," he said, referring to the obstacle course for Special Forces Assessment and Selection at Fort Bragg.

After the Darby Queen, the remaining 45 teams had a series of marksmanship challenges to complete on the Malone Ranges before making their way through the woods to the field expedient litter carry at Coombs Range, where Andy and Lynn McGarry, from Savannah, Ga., waited to watch their son, SGT Grant McGarry, and his partner, SSG Timothy De Leon, administer first aid to a "casualty" whose wounds included double amputation and abdominal evisceration.

Lynn said her son and his teammate came in ninth in the buddy run and finished the Darby Queen in 20 minutes, 14 seconds.

"It's like Little League all over again," Andy said.

"Having someone here to cheer, and you hear that encouragement on mile 16 of the road march — it is a real morale boost," said SFC Michael Bigbey, who competed last year and plans to compete again next year. "The BRC gets in your blood," said the Dahlonega Ranger instructor who first competed in 1996.

Friday's last event was the road march — 18 miles and the Rangers carried rucksacks weighing about 65 pounds.

Team 22, MSGs Daniel Jenkins and Walter Zajkowski, both who have won the competition before, pull a casualty on a Skedco during day two's Day Stakes.

"Having the Darby Queen right after the buddy run was tough," Vazzana said. "(After) three hours into the road march, I was tapped out. I had three bags (of fluids) put into me."

Only 26 teams completed the road march. Simms and Stackpole finished it in four hours, 23 minutes.

"My boy is an animal!" said Barby Morris, Stackpole's mother, after learning he and Simms finished first in the road march. "He's rocking and rolling out there."

Which was the plan, Stackpole said Monday after the awards ceremony.

Stackpole said he and Simms wanted be one the top two teams during day one and win the road march.

"Historically, it's impossible to win every event. Our goal was to be in the top three to five percent for every single event," Stackpole said.

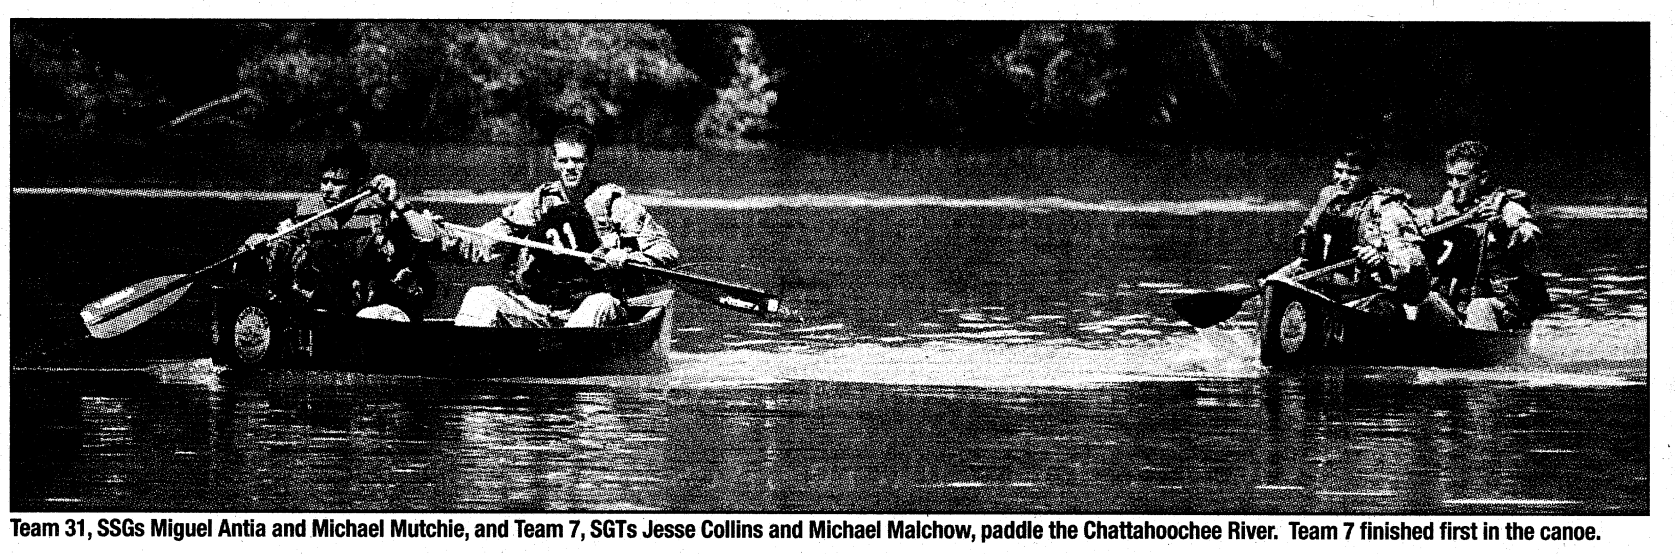
Simms, who competed in the last three competitions, was the strategic mastermind, and he broke every event down, Stackpole said.

During day two, most teams aren't competing anymore but just trying to finish, he said.

"Going into the night, we knew to win (orienteering) we had to stay out there all night," Stackpole said. "Five hours from finish time, we were at the farthest point you could be away from the finish point, and we ran for five hours just to make it back and made it back with eight minutes to spare."

Team 22 won Day Stakes on Todd Field, followed by Team 21. Team 7, SGTs Jesse Collins and Michael Malchow, 75th Ranger Regt., came in third.

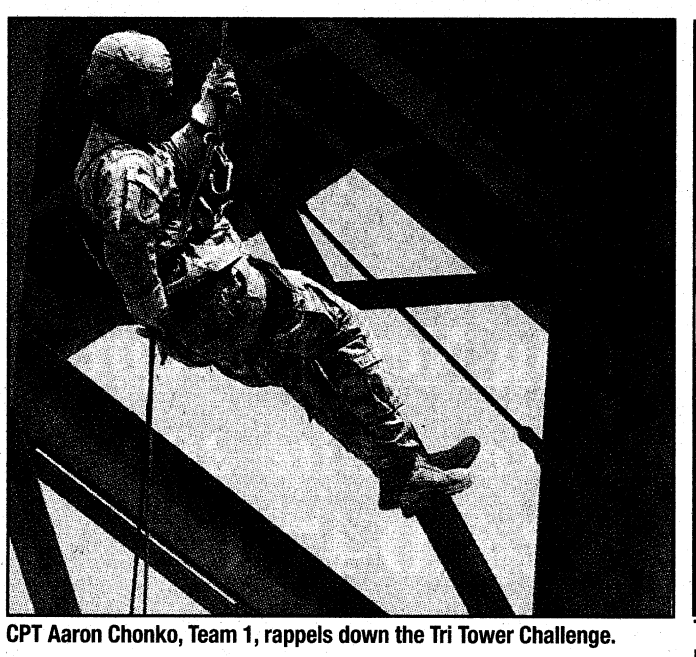
At the start of day three, two more teams were eliminated from the competition during the orienteering event. When the helocast began at Hurley Hill, Simms and Stackpole were in first place with 1914 points, Jenkins and Zajkowski were in second with 1857 points, and Collins and Malchow were in third with 1637 points.



After the helocast was the water confidence test, and then the teams were flown to Rotary Park on the Chattahoochee River for the legacy event — canoeing for nearly nine miles to the pet cemetery on Main Post where the final event, another buddy run started and ended nearly four miles away at Lawson Army Airfield's Freedom Hall, a change from previous competitions.

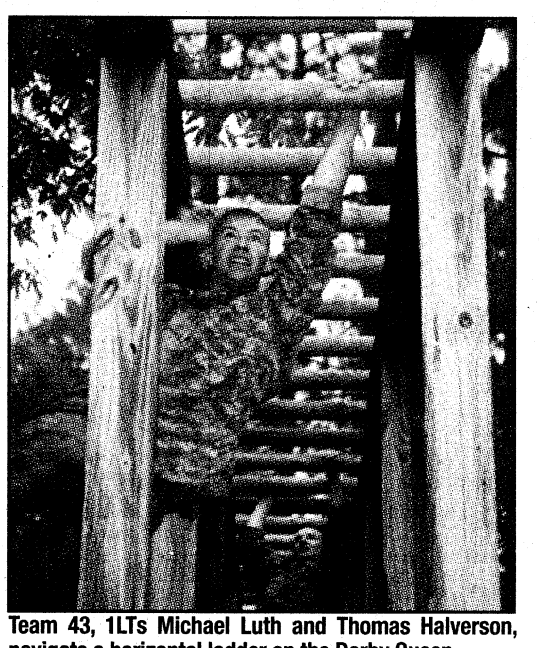
"It's good to change it up," said SFC Corey Hawkins, 5th Ranger Training Battalion.

"A lot of these guys have competed before, and the changes keep it interesting," he said. "The Best Ranger Competition is three days of hell, and it's a big deal, a sense of accomplishment just to finish it."



The first team to cross the finish line was Team 46, Linn and Carter, with Stackpole and Simms, in second place.

"I am so proud of him!" Morris said. "This is a great Mother's Day."



Team 31, SSGs Miguel Antia and Michael Mutchie, and Team 7, SGTs Jesse Collins and Michael Malchow, paddle the Chattahoochee River. Team 7 finished first in the canoe.

Teams representing the Ranger Training Brigade, 75th Ranger Regiment, U.S. Army Special Operations Command, 1st Infantry Division, 2nd Infantry Division, 3rd Infantry Division, 4th Infantry Division, 10th Mountain Division, 101st Airborne Division, Joint Readiness Training Center, Warrior Training Center, 199th Infantry Brigade, 95th Civil Affairs Brigade, 3rd Infantry Regiment, Marine Corps, and two teams, deployed to Iraq with the 25th Infantry Division, vied for the title of best ranger.

CPT Aaron Chonko, Team 1, rappels down the Tri Tower Challenge.

Team 43, 1LTs Michael Luth and Thomas Halverson, navigate a horizontal ladder on the Darby Queen.

Ranger Training Brigade prepares for 2010 BRC

THE BAYONET

Since 1982, Rangers have devised the most difficult, challenging obstacles to put between two-man Ranger teams and winning the pistols at the annual Best Ranger Competition, according to the United States Army Infantry Center.

These Rangers, along with a multitude of Soldiers and civilians around post and in the community, work behind the scenes for months preparing the events that will challenge every facet of Ranger knowledge, said SGM Erik Wilson, RTB operations.

By next week, they will have completed an after-action review of the competition, said COL Douglas Flohr, RTB commander.

The nonstop pace supports the RTB's goal of having a very tough, fair competition, said Flohr, who has been involved with five BRC events.

"This competition takes a year to prepare for and a lot of work goes into it," he said.

By July, the concept for the 2010 BRC will be clear.

In determining which events are modified or eliminated, BRC planners first look at the legacy events, which have been around since the competition's inception.

"Events such as the Darby Queen, land navigation, road march, helocast and the water confidence challenge are historical, or legacy, events," Wilson said. "We look at whether they are still relevant with what Soldiers are expected to do today."

Many repeat competitors and attendees over the past few years noticed the Prusik Tower challenge was first modified and then eliminated altogether, Wilson said.

"It was a regular event but we found that it wasn't relevant anymore," he said.

Other changes over the years include the addition of more marksmanship events and a greater focus on shooting in different types of conditions.

A few years ago, a marksmanship event was added for Soldiers to shoot from vehicles, in response to what these Soldiers must now be trained to expect on the battlefield, Wilson said.

The pace of the first day's activities also has changed.

Over the years, the first day leading up to the road march has become more difficult and physically demanding, Wilson said.

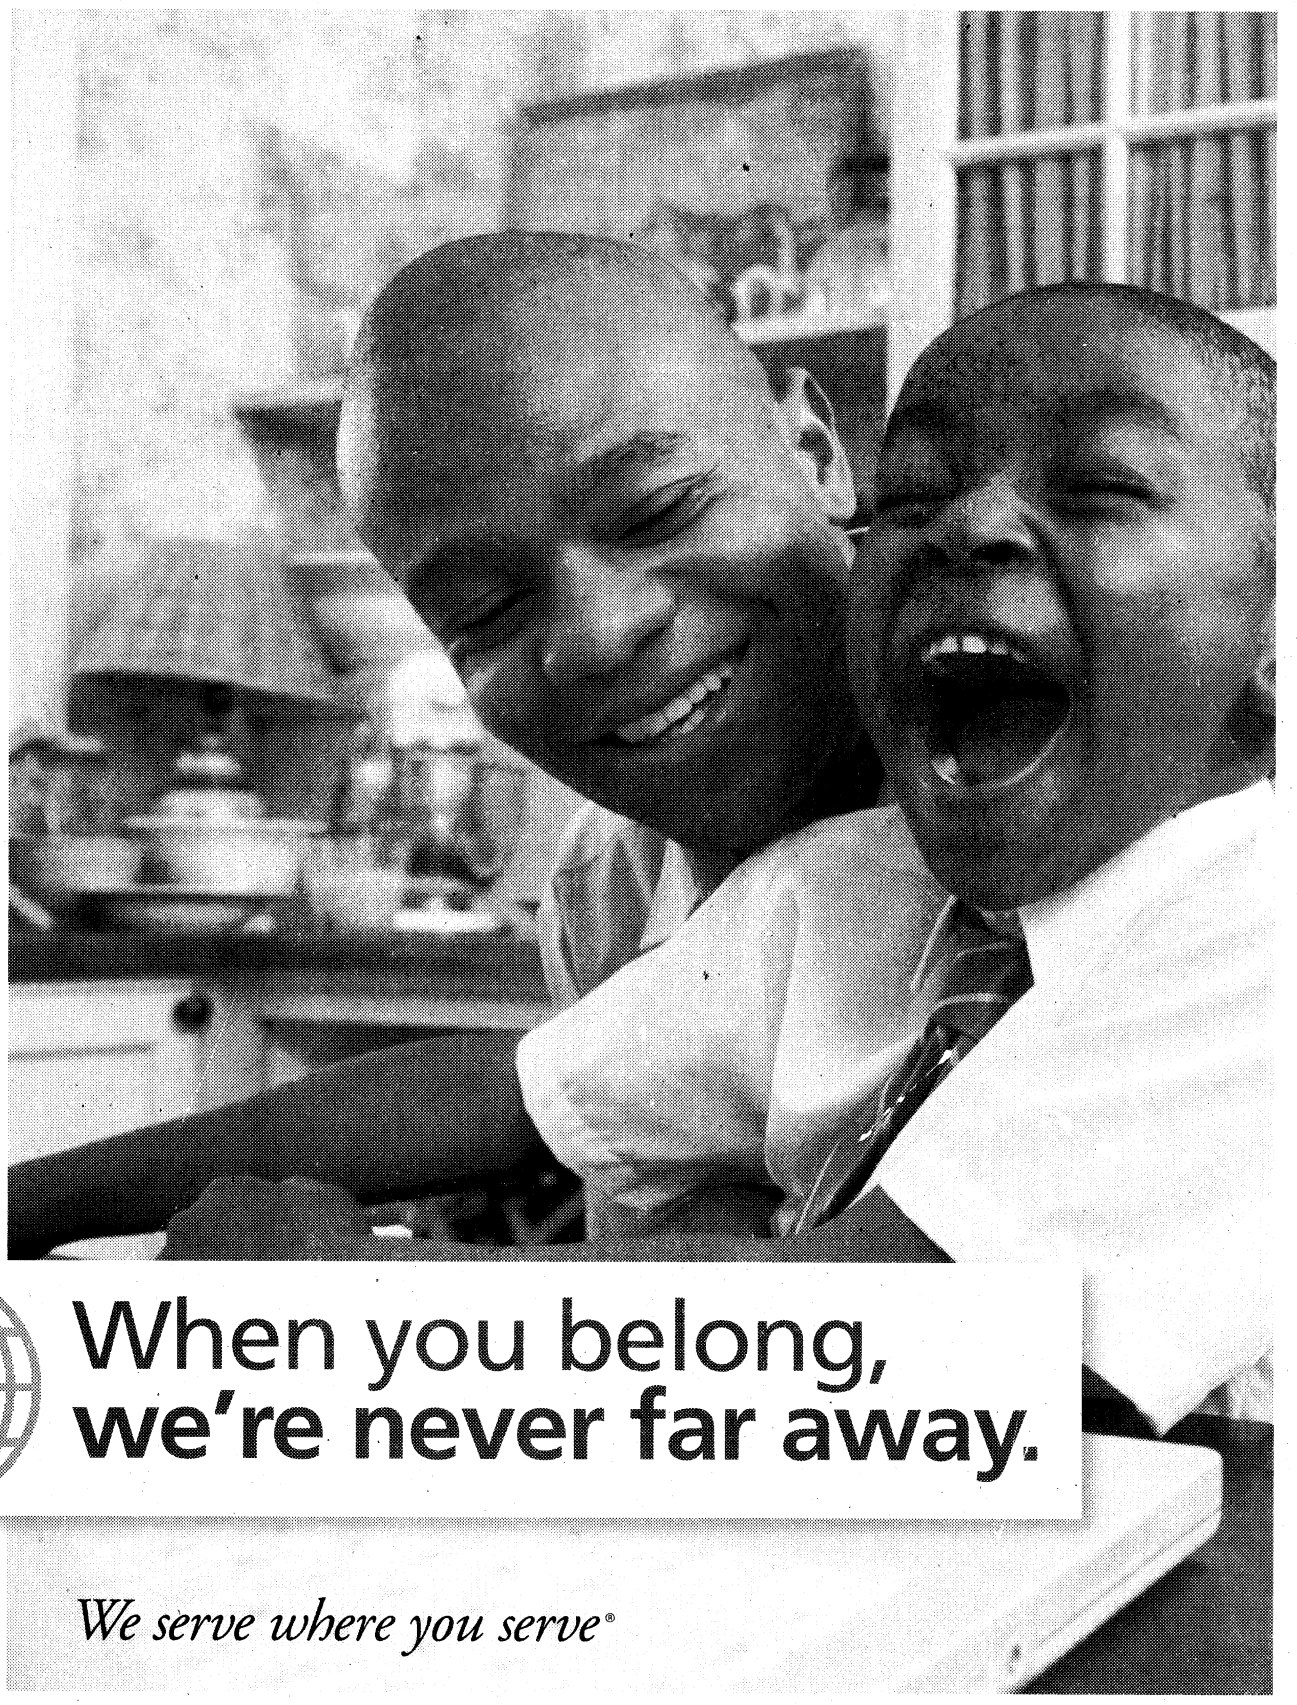
"Fifteen years ago, the 23- to 25-mile road march was the pinnacle event. Coordinators didn't want the teams burning out their legs beforehand," Wilson said. "But now we are pushing the guys to the edge on the first day."

Once the legacy events have been determined, select RTB staff plan the mystery events. These events remain secret to fans and most of the competition staff. The mystery events test each team's strategy and how they adapt to situations they haven't prepared for, Wilson said.

After the events are planned and scoring is calculated, the brigade calls upon nearly every unit and several agencies on post and in the community to support, staff, contribute equipment and add expertise to make the competition a successful one.

"We get a lot of assistance from the Fort Benning and Columbus communities," Flohr said.

This year, while members from the 4th, 5th and 6th Ranger Training Battalions staffed most of the challenges, Warrior Training Center personnel and Army Marksmanship Unit members facilitated stress shoots and Martin Army Medical Center personnel ensured safety for fans and teams alike. The 11th Engineer Battalion, Military Police and Army band members also stepped up to support the brigade, Flohr said.



"This year ran very smoothly," Flohr said. "I was impressed with the camaraderie."

For future competitors, Flohr offered advice on preparing for the challenges RTB will present them with in 2010.

"Pick your teammate early. Pick somebody you are good friends with and are compatible with. Find time to dedicate yourself to the process of winning. You have to have the heart to win. Give 100 percent or you won't be in the top five," he said.

Retreat: Miles to deploy

the right direction." He said he takes pride in the Infantry Soldiers being molded at Fort Benning.

"As long as we continue to produce young men and women as good as these, then the nation is in good shape," Miles said. "This is the most adaptable Army ever fielded in our history ... It's been my honor to serve beside you for the last couple of years."

For Owens, meanwhile, what's old is new again. He spent a combined 17 months at Benning in six previous trips here - all as a student.

"It's great to be back at the home of the Infantry," he said. "After 26 years in the Army, I get a chance to come back and be part of the great team here."

From September 2006 to November 2007, Owens was commander of the Fort Bragg, N.C.-based 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division, during its 15-month deployment to Tikrit, Iraq. "The Panthers" witnessed the troop surge, he said, and they also partnered with local Iraqi tribes, creating 29 concerned local citizen groups that helped clean up neighborhoods and reduce violence.

When his unit arrived in Iraq, U.S. forces were facing an average of 650 attacks a month, Owens said. That figure is down to about 100 today.

"We're blessed to welcome another Army family to our community," Barbero said. "Bryan is a field-tested combat Infantryman, and he's the perfect replacement for Milo."

Owens plans a simple approach at Fort Benning.

"For me, it's just getting back with Soldiers," he said. "Hopefully, I'll be able to impart some of the things I've learned, maybe the hard way."

Budget: Enlistment bonuses reduced

Future Combat Systems have been cut, for instance, as has the Army's ownership of the Joint Cargo Aircraft. And both enlistment and re-enlistment bonuses have been reduced.

"One of the main themes is taking care of families and Soldiers," said William H. Campbell, acting director, Army Budget Office. "That's a theme both the secretary of Defense, the secretary of the Army, and the chief of staff of the Army have emphasized as we built this budget."

Included in those family- and Soldier-friendly budget requests are funding for Soldier programs, wounded warrior programs, increases to child-care centers and services, and an increase in family-support activities. Also included are increases in the quality of facilities, Campbell said.

The costs of providing for such things as warfighter and family services; childcare and youth programs; morale, welfare and recreation; and voluntary education and tuition assistance are part of a more than $40 billion operations and maintenance expenditure. Those O&M funds also include recruiting, training, and maintenance of equipment, facilities and infrastructure.

The budget also includes provisions that will affect the wallets of Soldiers and Department of the Army Civilians — a pay increase of 2.9 percent for Soldiers and 2 percent for civilians, said LTG Edgar E. Stanton III, military deputy for budget.

This year there's funding in the military personnel budget for 547,400 active-duty Soldiers, 358,200 Army National Guardsmen, and 205,000 Reserve Soldiers. With the increases in Soldier funding, the Army has met its growth goals. More Soldiers in the mix translates to more time at home and more robust training, Stanton said.

"The Army in all three components has achieved its projected strength levels and we will stay at those strength levels both in the short term and the mid-term," Stanton said.

"The focus now will be on utilizing the Army Force Generation model as we hope to increase dwell and reduce deployed time. That will allow us to refocus training for the full spectrum operations as opposed to the current emphasis on COIN (Counter-Insurgency)."

Campbell also said the secretary of Defense decided to not stand up three additional brigades and to instead use those Soldiers to bolster the manning of other units.

"That will help fill out units," Campbell said. "It'll decrease the need to cross-level between units as forces begin to deploy. And combined with a structured delivered drawdown plan that will reduce demand, we should see an increase in dwell time for units."

Re-enlistment bonuses have gone down from 2009 to 2010 because of the success of the Army in both re-enlistment and recruitment, said Campbell.

"We still have some moneys in the budget for re-enlistment bonuses — but there is a decrease in the budget for bonus payments," he said.

From FCS, the entire line of manned ground vehicles — eight systems all based on a common chassis — have been canceled.

"(Secretary of Defense Robert Gates') guidance ... directs that the Army will restructure its Future Combat Systems," Stanton said. "This includes halting the development and production of the manned ground vehicles and directs that the Army relook at the requirement for the vehicle in the context of the current fight as well as the future fight and come forward with a new concept for an MGV."

Stanton said Gates, Secretary of the Army Pete Geren, and Chief of Staff of the Army GEN George W. Casey Jr. have directed research into a new manned ground vehicle be completed by the Army's Training and Doctrine Command.

Despite the loss of FCS's MGVs, the fruits of the work done by researchers will continue to be pushed to the field through "spinouts," Stanton said.

"We will roll out the spinouts, these are tactical unmanned sensors, unmanned aerial sensors and the non-line-of-sight launch system," Stanton said. "That technology, as it comes to fruition, will be rolled out to all brigade combat teams and done so in an accelerated manner. We will do it to all 73 BCTs and not just 15 BCTs. We are going to start in 2011 and finish in about 2025. It's going to take time, clearly, to get to all 73."

Also significant about the FY 2010 budget cycle is that both the base budget and the $83 billion "Overseas Contingency Operations" budget were submitted at the same time — in prior years that OCO budget was called a "supplemental" and was submitted after the base Army budget.

The base budget is specifically for funding training and equipping of the Army. The OCO budget is meant to address expenses related to actual Army operations.

Safety Fair set May 21

THE BAYONET

To learn how to stay safe and healthy this summer, come out to the Fort Benning Safety and Health Fair May 21 at Stillwell Field between Gillespie and Hall streets.

Sponsored by the Safety Office, the fair will be an opportunity for Soldiers, family members and civilians to learn about health and safety resources available to them on- and off-post, said Debbie Gutierriez, safety and occupational health specialist and event organizer.

"I think a lot of people really don't know what's out there, so the fair will help make them more aware of what's available," she said.

MEDDAC will be on hand with information on heat injury and poison prevention and representatives from family readiness groups will provide guidelines on building disaster preparedness kits.

There will be plenty of free services and giveaways, Gutierriez said.

DENTAC will be giving out free mouth guards, members of the Coast Guard Auxiliary will do free boat safety inspections and representatives from the Army Hearing Conservation Program will do free hearing tests, she said.

There will be interactive displays, including a golf cart obstacle course. Participants must maneuver their vehicles while wearing "drunk glasses" that simulate the effects of drunken driving. Operation Lifesaver, a nonprofit organization dedicated to ending deaths at railroad crossings, will have a trailer with hands-on activities about railroad safety.

Kids can head over to the children's game area, or watch live snakes the Natural Resources Management Branch will bring as part of its display on identifying dangerous animals.

Gutierriez encouraged community members to visit the fair.

"The groups that will be at the fair are here to help, and I hope a lot of people will come out and (take advantage) of that," she said.

Snipers test rifle capabilities

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Maneuver Battle Lab tested a new long-range weapon system this week on Griswold Range. Twelve Soldiers from across the Army, including the Army Marksmanship Unit, National Guard Sniper School and Experimental Force, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, participated in the experiment, which concludes today.

The MK13 has the potential to "fill the gap" between the M24 and the .50-caliber sniper rifle, said SSG John Brady, C Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, one of two Soldiers from the Fort Benning Sniper School to test the system.

The M24 can hit soft targets, or personnel, up to 800 meters. The .50-caliber reaches 1,700 meters but is less precise. It can only be used at long distances for hard targets such as houses or trucks.

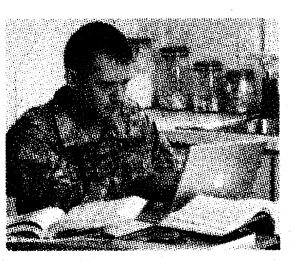
"I think the Army is definitely moving in the right direction for the shifting of focus from Iraq to Afghanistan. They're going to need a longer range, more precise weapon system," Brady said.

Afghanistan terrain is more mountainous and less urban, so snipers will need to shoot longer distances, he said.

The changes in elevation can also lead to fluctuations in elevation. That is where a larger bullet, like the one with the MK13, is helpful, said SFC Robby Johnson, AMU.

The larger bullet is more resistant to wind and weather, he said.

More precision at longer distances means increased survivability for the sniper and friendly forces.



"The more standoff you have the better. It only helps the sniper and your friendly troops. If I can keep the enemy 1,100 ... 1,300 meters away from us, there's not much they can do," Johnson said. "It would give you a better advantage at shorter ranges also. Any weapon that can reach out to extreme long ranges will definitely help make even the 600-yard shot attainable."

Soldiers fired about 150 rounds this week measuring the effectiveness of the weapon in the field.

The Maneuver Battle Lab chose the MK13, which is already fielded to special forces units, because of its availability, said Robert Harbison, project officer for the experiment. The experiment tests a sniper's improved capabilities when using any long range sniper rifle with features similar to those of the M13.

"In the conflicts we're currently engaged in, the ability for our Soldiers to use precise fires is key," Harbison said. "Precise fires both protect our Soldiers by quickly defeating enemy threats, but they also mitigate the risk of collateral damage."

The Maneuver Battle Lab will report its findings to the Picatinny Arsenal in New Jersey and the USAIC Soldier Requirements Division, Small Arms Branch, next month.

Favre to Vikings?

Although Brett Favre released a statement in late April saying he is retired and has no intention of returning to football, the jury is still out on whether or not he will stay retired. Favre pulled the same stunt last year, after retiring from the Green Bay Packers, and then signed with the New York Jets for the '08-'09 season.

On Monday, Vikings president Mark Wilf said the team is interested in having Favre play for them.

Brett, for real, spend some time with the family and relax. You've already proven yourself as far as I'm concerned.

Cavs sweep Hawks

The Cleveland Cavaliers seem well on their way to an NBA championship. First, they swept the Detroit Pistons, then swept the Atlanta Hawks. LeBron James, the recently named league MVP, can do no wrong.

The Cavs will play either the Boston Celtics or Orlando Magic in the Eastern Conference finals.

I'm a Celtics fan, but would be very surprised if the Cavs don't take it all.

NASCAR suspends Mayfield indefinitely

First Manny Ramirez, and now NASCAR driver Jeremy Mayfield is the latest athlete to test positive for a banned substance.

Mayfield, who said he believes he failed the random drug test due to a combination of a prescribed medicine and an over-the-counter medicine, was suspended indefinitely by NASCAR last Saturday at Richmond International Raceway.

One thought for Mayfield: I might have been born in the morning, but it wasn't this morning.

Stenson wins Players Championship

Before winning The Players Championship last Sunday, Henrik Stenson was more famous for being the guy who stripped to his underwear and a golf glove to play a water hazard at Doral. Now he's upped the ante.

Stenson won the championship by four shots over Ian Poulter.

Tiger Woods finished eighth. The last time Woods won the Players was in 2001.

Martin earns stripes

Mark Martin not only won at Darlington, but he moved into the 11th spot in points in the Sprint Cup championship.

Jimmie Johnson finished second, followed by Tony Stewart in third.

Jeff Gordon remains tops in the points race, followed closely by Stewart.

This weekend will be the All-Star Race at Lowe's Motor Speedway. It's a non-points race and the winner will take home $1 million. The race will begin with coverage at 6:30 p.m. Saturday on the Speed Channel.

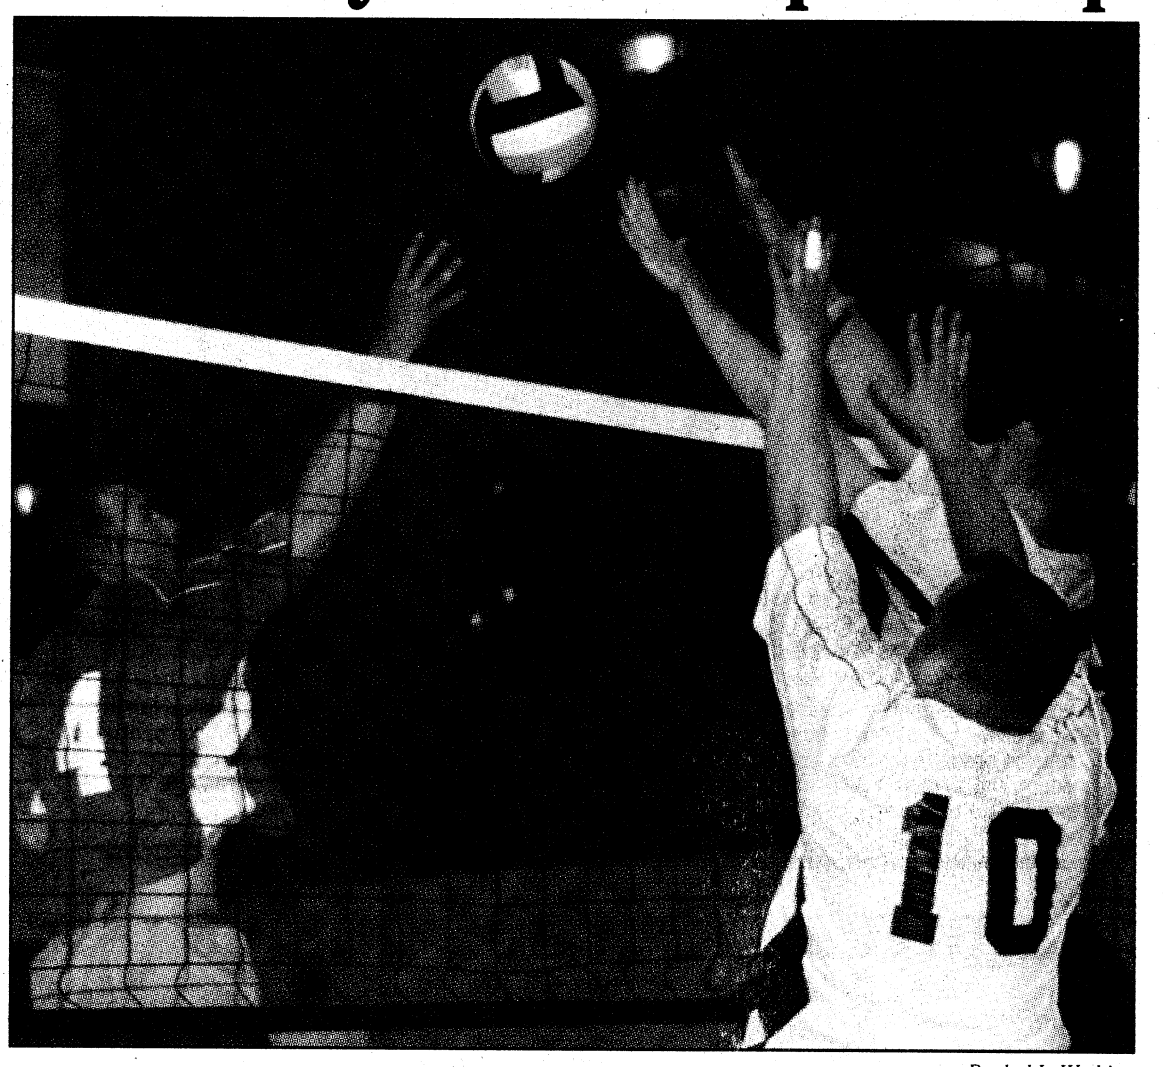
Team USAIC wins volleyball championship

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Team USAIC closed their season just the way they started it — with a championship.

Following a preseason tournament championship and an undefeated season, Team USAIC now has bragging rights as the best volleyball team on Fort Benning after winning the postseason Commander's Cup volleyball championship May 6 at the Smith Fitness Center.

USAIC defeated the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion in a best two-out-of-three game match winning, 25-10 and 25-17, to secure the championship.



Team USAIC racked up aces early in game one with USAIC's Corey Shaffer assisting Seth Gruenewald with several spikes over the net, sealing the USAIC's 25-10 win.

203rd BSB appeared to get on track in game two, keeping up with Team USAIC and tying the game on three occasions but Shaffer and Greunewald kept up their strong net play for Team USAIC to keep the game close. 203rd BSB capitalized on several USAIC miscues on serves, but Team USAIC came back defensively and shut down 203rd BSB to take a 25-17 win.

"I think spikes is what won us the game," Greuenwald said. "In the second game, we were a little worried the other team was coming back, but we got our mind off losing and started playing the game."

Shaffer, Team USAIC coach, said rhythm and consistency on the court was the key to the victory.

"After the first game, I told the team to stay active on their toes and get big blocks at the net and we did that," Shaffer said.

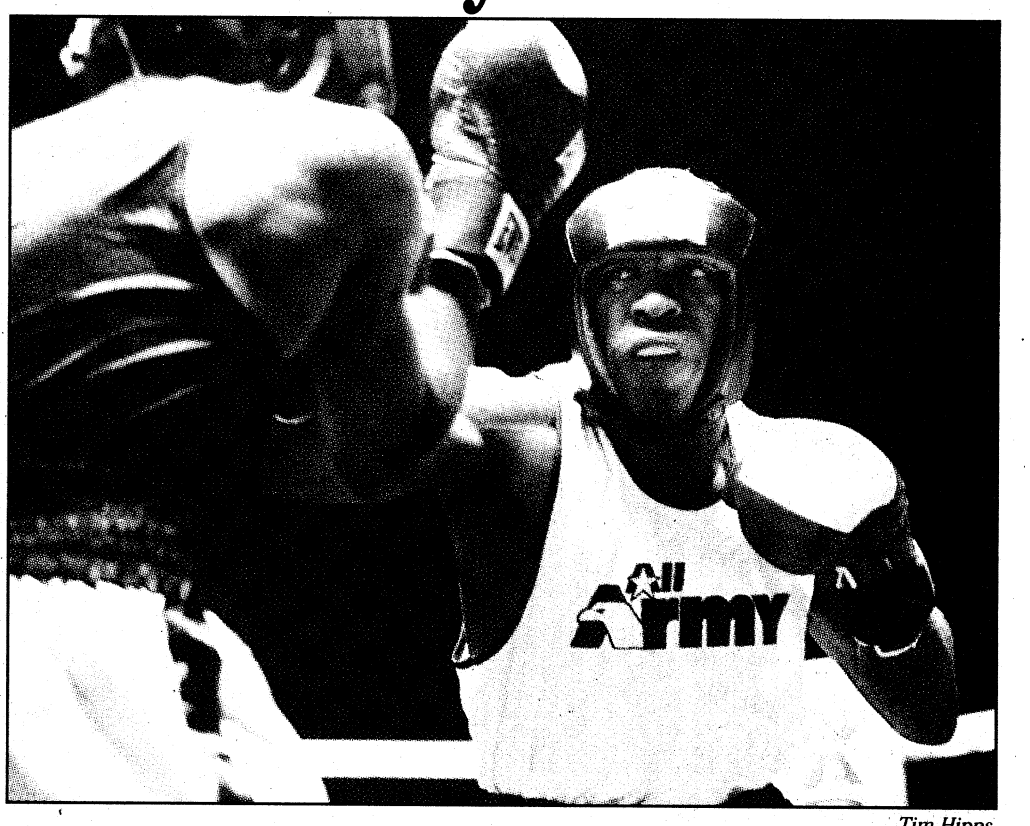
PFC Pieta Garrett, 23, of Fort Polk, La., took the top individual spot Thursday during the four-day Inter-service Chess Tournament at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The tournament brought 20 service members of all branches to post for a seven-round Swiss-system tournament.



The Air Force captured the team title, and the top six players — service members from the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marines — will represent the United States in the NATO Chess Championship, scheduled for June 15-19 in Hammelburg, Germany.

The NATO team is comprised of two Army and two Air Force players and one sailor and Marine.

FORT HUACHUCA, Ariz. — Seven Soldiers won gold medals to lead All-Army boxers to the team title in the 2009 Armed Forces Boxing Championships at Barnes Field House May 1.

All-Army dominated the tournament with 14 points, followed by All-Navy (4), All-Air Force (3) and All-Marine Corps (3).

Five-time Armed Forces champion SGT John Franklin of the U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program got the Soldiers going with a 20-5 decision over Marine Corps Lance Cpl. Magdiel Matias in the 119-pound weight class.

Rene Ramirez watches as 4-year-old Malichi Jackson hits a ball from a tee Tuesday during practice at the Youth Sports Complex. Ramirez has helped other coaches for the past five years, but this is his first year as a head coach.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach preaches repetition in tee ball

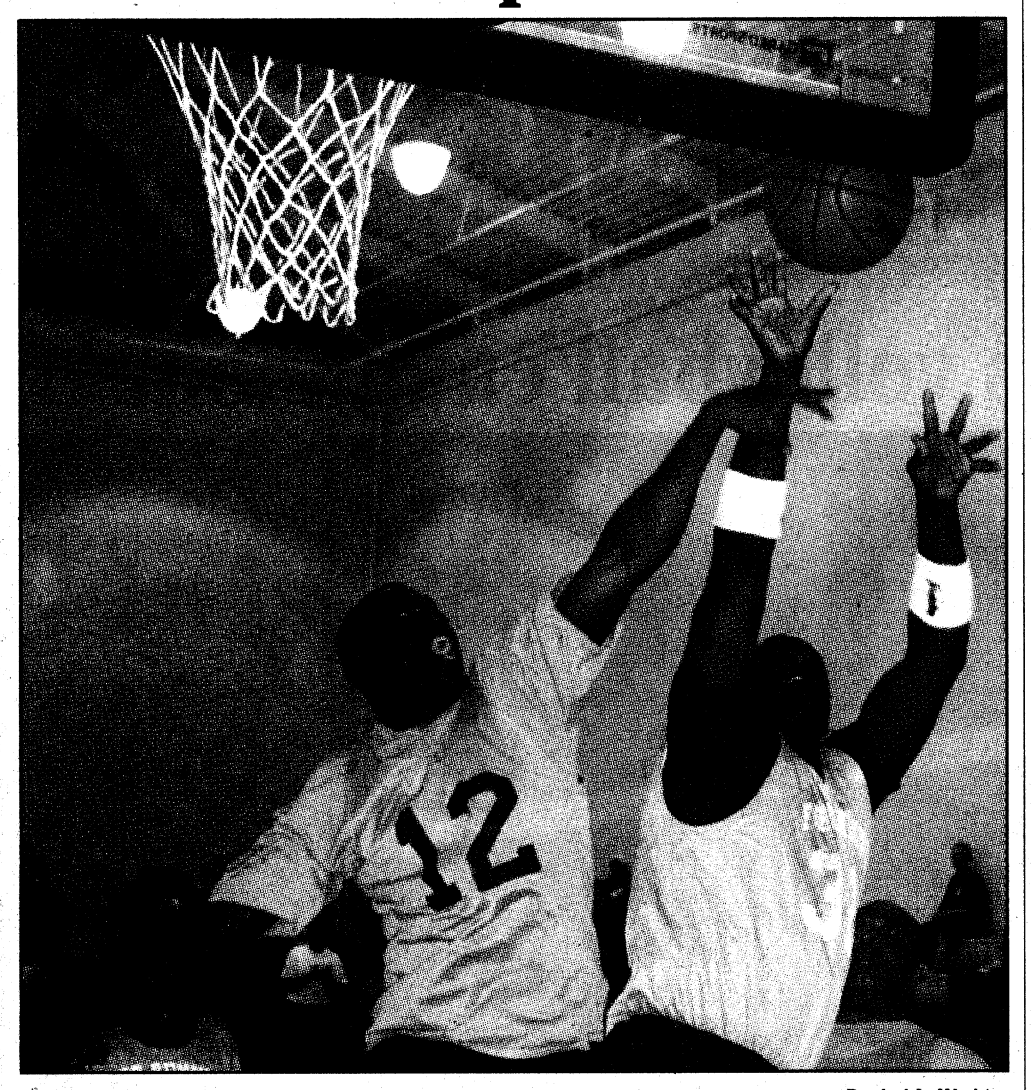
Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Repetition — that's what tee ball is about, said Rene Ramirez, a volunteer coach for a 4-and 5-year-old tee-ball team on post.

"The kids playing tee ball are new to the sport," he said. "It's important they get a firm grasp on the basic fundamentals now so they have a strong knowledge of it for the future. And the best way to teach the basics is to repeat the techniques over and over until the kids understand."

Ramirez has helped other coaches with youth baseball teams for the past five years, but this is his first year as a head coach.

Keeping it simple and teaching techniques over a long period of time is important because beginners might feel overwhelmed if they are taught too much at one time, he said.



Ramirez said patience and focus is key to succeeding as a tee-ball coach.

"There will be times (the players) make mistakes and get frustrated," he said. "I tell them 'you have to go back out there, learn from it and try again.'"

WTB companies competed against each other this week in events including volleyball, basketball, horseshoes, orienteering, shooting and fishing. "I think this cup is a good motivator tool to keep everyone upbeat," Martin said. After a talent show, 5K run and walk today, the company with the highest score will win the cup.

aspect Ramirez said is important when coaching as well as encouraging effort and sportsmanship.

"I want them to go out on the field and give it all they got — 110 percent," he said.

This level isn't as competitive as other levels, he said. The emphasis is on the kids learning the game and sportsmanship.

Ramirez is preparing the kids for the next level — coach pitch. The difference is the tee stand isn't used and players will have a coach pitch to them.

The season ends in late June, and by that time, Ramirez said he'll be happy if his players learned the fundamentals and had some fun along the way.

Boxing: National boxing championship set for June

"I wanted to start this night off the perfect way for my teammates," said Franklin, 25, a native of Kansas City, Mo., who is stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., home of the WCAP boxing program. "Start the fuel, start the fire, and let those guys put it out at the end."

All-Army and WCAP boxing coach Basheer Abdullah, head coach of the 2004 U.S. Olympic Boxing Team, was impressed with Franklin's performance and potential.

"He actually won this tournament (by performing) below his best," Abdullah said. "To me, that means he's on his way to being a great boxer because when he's not performing at his best, he's still finding a way to win."

WCAP SPC Alexis Ramos followed with a 12-9 decision over Cpl. Elias Sanchez of Marine Corps Base Camp Lejeune, N.C. Ramos rallied from a five-point deficit in the first round of their 125-pound finale.

"Last year, I lost to a Marine by three points," said Ramos, 25, of San Antonio. "This year, it wasn't the same guy, but I was able to get vengeance because it was a Marine. It was a very tough fight."

At 132 pounds, WCAP SPC Connor Johnson posted a 5-0 decision over Cpl. Tommy Rogue of Camp Lejeune.

"Most of the times I fight with my hands up, but I saw from the beginning that it wasn't working for me and I didn't feel comfortable," Johnson said. "I just tried doing a style that felt comfortable for me and it paid off."

PFC Sidney Williams, a Reservist from Kentucky, won the 165-pound division with a 19-17 decision over Navy boxer Seaman Abdullah Johnson.

"It was an exciting bout," coach Abdullah said. "He had to come from behind. He was always down one or two points, but he pulled it out."

Two-time Armed Forces champion SPC Jeffery Spencer closed out the All-Army portion of the program with a victory over Air Force Airman 1st Class Nicholas Alwan at 178 pounds. The referee stopped their bout at 1 minute, 36 seconds of the first round.

"I was kind of irritated when I got into the ring because our 152-pounder lost," said Spencer, 27, a native of Gary, Ind., who boxed his way onto the All-Army team from Fort Riley, Kan. "Some decisions go our way and some don't, but I was real hyped when I got into the ring so I had to calm myself down and box my style of boxing.

"I started seeing shots that were open, and I got the stop."

Spencer said he felt the pressure of being a defending champion on the team to beat.

"The pressure's there because everybody is gunning for the Army," he said. "We saw that with the 141-pound bout when Navy got the decision (over Army SPC Justin Lara) and everybody on the Navy team got all excited. The main goal for them is to beat us, but we just need to listen to our coaches and stick with the game plan. For me, this is just one step closer to achieving the goal I have set for myself this year: not to lose a fight in '09."

Spencer is chasing the Team USA spot occupied in 2008 by SSG Christopher Downs, who now coaches All-Army and WCAP boxers.

"Judgment day is at the nationals for him," Abdullah said.

1LT Michael Benedosso and SPC Adrian Ghisiou won uncontested gold medals in the 106- and 112-pound weight classes respectively because the other services did not have competitors in those divisions.

All in all, Abdullah was impressed with the fight in his young boxers.

"It's a great achievement for the amount of experience that this young team has," he said.

"It's just one step forward to what we're trying to achieve. Our goal is to be top three in the nation, team-wise, in two years at the U.S. Nationals. This was a performance that we can build off of."

The 2009 U.S. National Boxing Championships are scheduled for June 8-13 at the Denver Coliseum.

The 'pen' is mightier than the sword

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick's prison sentence for his participation in illegal dogfighting activities ends July 20 and his three-year probation begins. But where does he go from there?

Many people really won't care what happens to him, but there are just as many who want to make sure he is not given the opportunity to play in the National Football League again.

Although the Falcons still own the rights to Vick, they have made it known he will not play for them again should he be reinstated in the league.

I read the many blogs and comments on his possible return to the NFL and am amazed by how many people are against giving him a second chance.

While I don't condone his behavior with funding a dogfighting operation or his admitted cruelty to a defenseless animal, I believe he deserves a second chance.

Everyone, except for the most serious criminals, deserves a second chance and opportunity to earn a living after paying their debt to society for a crime.

Society gives people second chances all the time, so why penalize Vick because he is an athlete?

Millionaire Martha Stewart was given a second chance, and from what I read on the Internet hasn't seemed to miss a step. I know, her crime was nowhere near the magnitude of Vick's — she cheated defenseless people (stockholders), not defenseless animals — and she is in the same profession as before her conviction.

Vick is not asking to be allowed to fight dogs again, he is asking for the opportunity to resume his football career.

If the court system allows convicted DUI offenders to have their driver's licenses back after they have paid their debt to society, then it should be OK for Vick to play football again — at least he wouldn't have a license to repeat the offense.

Did Vick bring all this on himself? Sure he did. He is not the victim, but continuing to punish Vick past his sentence is not the answer, either. At 28, Vick and his reputation will suffer for his crime for a long time to come.

Believe it or not, football, just like all sports, is just a form of entertainment — I can't believe I said that — just like movies, plays, music and so on. Take a minute and ask yourself how many entertainers would be out of work if we held them to the same standard most are wanting to hold Vick to?

I can't begin to address the number of entertainers found guilty of something who are still performing — there are quite a few on their third, fourth and fifth chances.

At some point, all of us have been given second chances for one thing or another and Vick deserves a second chance from society.

Who knows, you may ask for a second chance one day. Wouldn't you like to believe you would get it?

Chess: Top six to compete in NATO Championship

playing chess since elementary school."I had to play perfect and not lose any games. I was excited I was able to do that. It feels good to win the first year I'm in the tournament and I hope I can keep it up."

Garrett won six rounds and had one draw in the third round. The win wasn't easy, he said.

"I was exhausted after the sixth round," Garrett said. "It was tough — I had to think for an hour straight. I was trying to think 10 or 15 moves down the road and I couldn't find the win. I thought another hour. And I had to come up with a completely different plan."

Marine Master Gunnery Sgt. James Adkins, Camp Lejeune, N.C., who earned a spot on the NATO team, said he looks at the chessboard as a battlefield.

"You have to be able to maneuver your pieces to the right place, not placing them in a line of fire," Adkins said. "You have to come up with a plan that is going to beat your opponent's plan and each move you make must be planned — there are no random moves in the game of chess."

It could have been anyone's win, said third-place winner SPC Jose Silva, who is stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash.

"You might be winning a whole four hours and you make one mistake and all of your work is undone," he said.

The Air Force finished with 26 points, while the Army scored 22. The Navy took third with 15.5 points while the Marines totaled 6.5.

The Omega Stone Big Dogs defeated Fort Benning softball Team One 31-23 Monday at South Commons in Columbus.

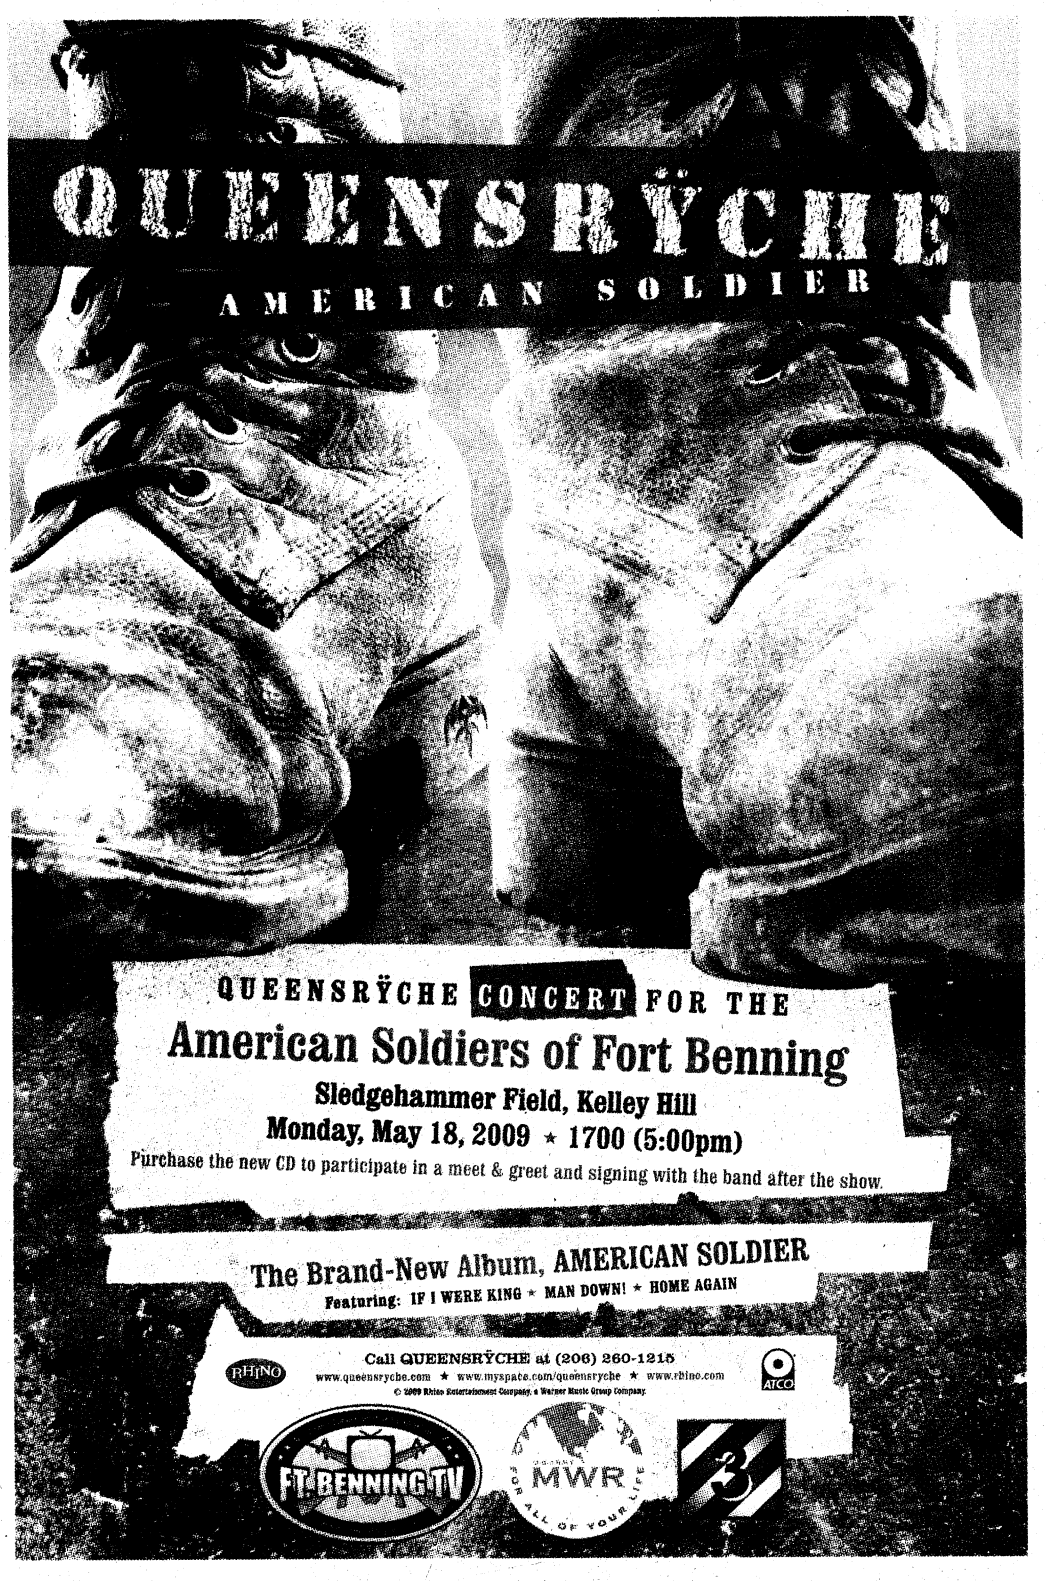
Fort Benning's Aaron Frederick began the first inning scoring on a William Neal RBI single, but the Big Dogs kept Fort Benning scoreless the remainder of the inning.

Omega Stone's Clarence Cook and Jason Judah scored on a Nate Daniels home run in the bottom of the inning for a 3-1 lead. Jeff Broadwater then scored on Brent Bell's RBI single. Bell later scored on a Gary Baker RBI double. Before the inning ended, the Big Dogs led, 10-1.

Fort Benning cut the lead to 10-6 in the top of the second inning.

Karl Ivey scored on a Larry Driggers RBI single and Jason Scott followed with a grand slam.

But the Big Dogs scored four more runs in the bottom of the inning to increase their lead to 16-6.



By the end of the fourth inning, Fort Benning pulled to within four runs of the Big Dogs, 23-19.

In the last two innings, Ray Reid scored on a Frederick RBI double and two other runners crossed the plate, while the Big Dogs scored eight more times for the 31-23 win.

"They got us in the beginning of the game," said Fort Benning's Bryan Walker.

"We came out a little passive and got behind too early and didn't make the right plays at the right time. We did make a comeback toward the end, but came up a little short."

Fort Benning will take on the Hard Knocks at 7 p.m. Monday at South Commons.

Fort Benning Pirates lose in a squeaker, 6-5

Fifth inning comeback boosts Giants to victory

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

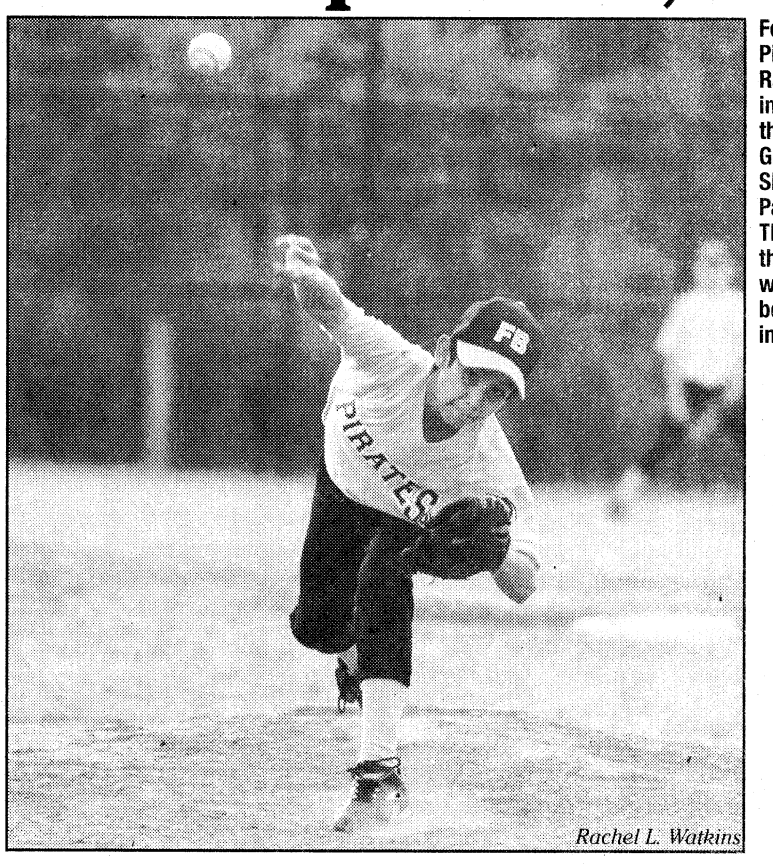
The Columbus Giants defeated the Fort Benning Pirates, 6-5, Tuesday at Shirley B. Winston Park in Columbus, scoring the winning run in the bottom of the fifth inning.

In the first inning, Pirates Ian Kessler and Max Ashe scored runs, while Pirate pitcher Rene Ramirez shut down the Giants three-up, three-down in the bottom of the inning for a Pirate 2-0 lead.

The Giants' defense kept the Pirates from scoring in the top of the second inning and Ramirez pitched another three-up, three-down inning to keep the Pirates out in front.

It wasn't until the fourth inning that the Pirates scored again with Justin Woods and Brandin Maier scoring on a Billy Cuellar RBI-double. The Giants answered with a run from Nick Brown on a Desmond Sampson RBI-double and Keith Goodwin stole home keeping the Pirates in the lead, 4-2.

The Pirates opened the fifth inning with a Nick Sargent run on a Nick Hunter RBI-double to increase their lead to 5-2, but the Giants turned the game around in the bottom of the inning, with Eric Jenkins, Marcel Byrd, Goodwin and Scott Marlar scoring runs. At the end of the inning, the Giants took the lead, 6-5.



In the final inning, Kessler made it to third base representing the tying run, but the Giants' pitcher Byrd shut down the Pirates, sealing the Giants' 6-5 victory.

"It came down to the last minute of the game — we were in the lead until the bottom of the fifth inning," Kessler said. "I thought we had it. I know we'll get it in the next game."

Pirate coach Lee Obie said it was a well-played game.

"The team showed a lot of spirit today," he said. "They went out there, played hard and played really good baseball."

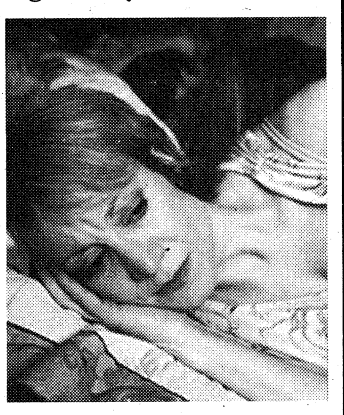
House of Heroes supporter to run 270 miles in four days

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

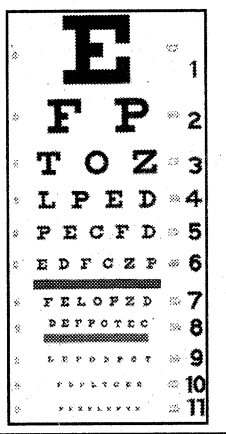
Ultra-marathon runner John Teeples will complete a 270-mile four-day run from Columbus to Tybee Island, Ga., Memorial Day weekend to raise funds and awareness for House of Heroes. His goal is to raise $20,000.

The run will start at 4 a.m. at the National Infantry Museum May 22 and wind through Fort Benning for 14 miles before continuing on Highway 26 to reach Five Points, Ga., by the end of the day.

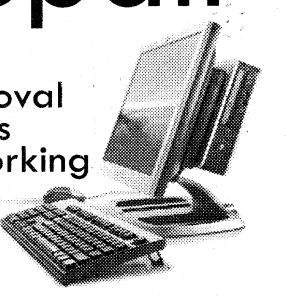
Soldiers and families are invited to run with Teeples during the first leg of his run as he takes a slow-paced route across post accompanied by a military police escort.



The run will take Teeples through Alamo, Ga., Groveland, Ga., and Savannah, Ga., before culminating at Tybee Island May 25.



House of Heroes is a nonprofit organization providing minor repairs and improvements to the homes of elderly or disabled military and public safety veterans and their spouses at no cost.



Since 2000, House of Heroes has repaired the homes of more than 320 veterans through a collaborative effort between 2,000 volunteers, employees, youth groups, local students and Fort Benning Soldiers.

For more information about House of Heroes or to contribute, visit www.houseofheroes.org. For Teeples' run schedule, visit www.runfortheheroes.com.

Census bureau conducts address canvassing

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Eight representatives from the National Census Bureau field office in Macon, Ga., will visit Fort Benning for approximately three weeks beginning Monday to conduct address canvassing for the 2010 census, using handheld tracking devices to ensure addresses and home locations match information in the Census Bureau's records.

Canvassing is conducted nationwide to prepare for the national census, which takes place every 10 years. On post, address canvassing concerns family and unaccompanied personnel housing residents.

Census information is used to determine funding for federal, state, local and tribal governments, community services and to distribute congressional seats to states.

"This happens on every installation in the continental United States," said Raul Brown, post housing operations officer.

While Census Bureau representatives will not enter homes, they will hand out information sheets about the census. The sheets will include phone numbers and Web sites residents can call and visit for more information.

Brown encouraged Fort Benning residents to fill out and return their census surveys, which will arrive by mail in early to mid-July.

"It's a civic responsibility of every citizen," he said.

Personal information provided in the census is protected by federal law, and participation is required.

For more information about the census, call Brown at 706-545-0667.

Scout honors friend with memorial

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When Gustavo Paz, a sixth-grader at Faith Middle School, lost his battle with cancer in September, his friend John Kaiser III wanted to honor his memory. And now, thanks to Kaiser's efforts, Faith Middle School will have a permanent memorial.

Kaiser, an eighth-grader at Faith and a member of Boy Scout Troop 27, planned a memorial garden at the school for Paz as his Eagle Scout project.

"It was everybody's responsibility to make this garden, but nobody stepped up to do it," he said. "It's something that needs to be done. He was a great guy."

Although Kaiser and Paz knew each other less than a year, Kaiser said they became fast friends and that he felt a connection to the boy because of their shared heritage — Paz was Honduran and so is Kaiser's mother, Sonia.

Paz came to Fort Benning in 2006 when his father, LTC Gustavo Paz, received orders for a guest instructor position at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

The family had been here less than a year when Paz was diagnosed with a brain tumor and began receiving treatment at Walter Reed Army Medical Center.

Once word of Paz's illness reached the school, students and teachers sent cards and photographs and called him on the phone, said Dr. Julio Gonzales, principal of Faith.

"I think it's only fitting to have a tribute for Gustavo as he was very well liked by the community," he said. "The kids got very attached to him as they saw him come and go (from the hospital)."

Although the Paz family returned to Honduras last summer, they were still very much in the thoughts of Fort Benning community, said Kaiser's father, Chaplain (MAJ) John Kaiser Jr., WHINSEC.

"Gustavo's death affected a lot of the children (at Faith) and also the WHINSEC community," he said. "This garden is a really good way to honor his memory. It shows he was part of the family here at Fort Benning."

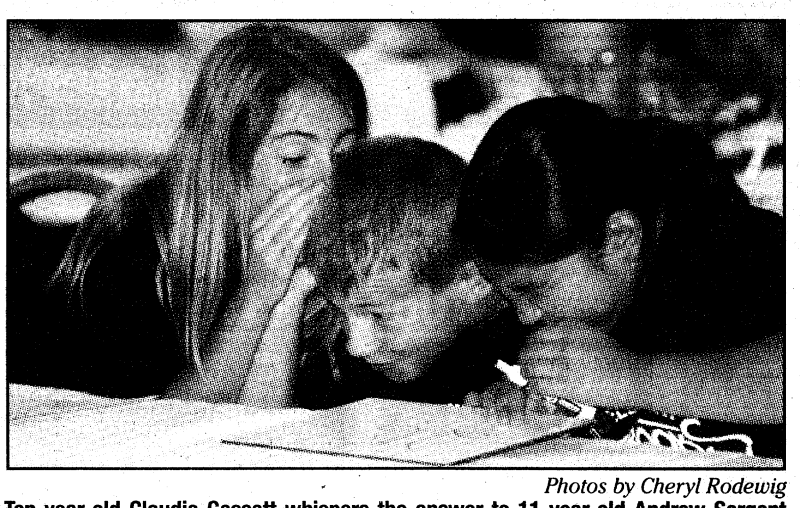
"This was the best field day by far," said fourth-grade teacher Jessica Thorne, who coordinated the event for Georgetown Elementary School.

The difference was the 23 Soldiers in the 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, partners in education with the school, she said.

The Soldiers started setting up for the event at 6 a.m. Friday and manned the different stations like the balloon pop and bean bag toss, directing kids through each relay race.

"I looked out and saw the Soldiers doing push-ups with the kids, running with the kids. They didn't just stand there and explain the directions; they showed them the directions," Thorne said. "They weren't afraid to take off their jackets and get down and dirty. They had a good attitude, and that's really what it's about. It makes the day so much better."

It was the first time the 13th CSSB came out for Georgetown's field day. Thorne said she heard veteran teachers of 20 years and several kids comment on the improvement.



"Last year was kind of good, but this year was super good," said 11-year-old Brady Pitts, a fifth-grader at Georgetown. "You can't even put it into words. It's just too amazing."

Brady said he enjoyed seeing the military vehicles and learning about the Soldiers.

"They inspire me," he said. "They set up the equipment. They helped show

Post children read 30 novels to compete in Battle of the Books

Ten-year-old Claudia Cassatt whispers the answer to 11-year-old Andrew Sargent while teammate Nikki Rodriguez, 11, listens. The Loyd Elementary fifth-grade team answered with the name Patricia Polacco, correctly identifying the author of My Rotten Redheaded Older Brother. The novel was one of 30 books featured on the reading list, which included Knights of the Kitchen Table, Ella Enchanted and Number the Stars.

"I feel wahoo!" 11-year-old Andrew Sargent said after Loyd Elementary's fifth-grade team won the annual Battle of the Books last Friday.

Teams of students from all six post elementary schools answered questions about 30 different books they had read during the past year. The competition was close, with only 10 points separating the top three spots.

"In the beginning of the year, Mrs. Pelletier, our librarian, said we had never won first place before, so we set our minds to bring it home," Sargent said. "I feel like a king. I feel like the Red Sox just won the World Series again. We worked really hard. All our work paid off."

Sargent finished reading his final book of 30 the night before the competition. The reading list included a variety of genres, including historical fiction with Meet Addy: An American Girl, fantasy novel A Wrinkle in Time and the biography, What's the Big Idea, Ben Franklin?

"Back then I wanted to read what I wanted, so I didn't sign up right away," said Sargent, who began the reading list in October. "But when I did sign up, I realized, wow, it's really good and I liked it. I discovered there are a lot of good books out there."

Ten-year-old Miley O'Neill holds up an answer for the fourth- and fifth-grade Wilson Elementary team Friday during Battle of the Books.

Ten-year-old Michaela Priatko, a fourth-grader at White Elementary, said she enjoyed competing in Battle of the Books just "for the fun of it," whether or not she won.

Field day: Shows students another side to Soldiers us how to do everything. They didn't yell at us (and) were really patient. I hope they come again next year."

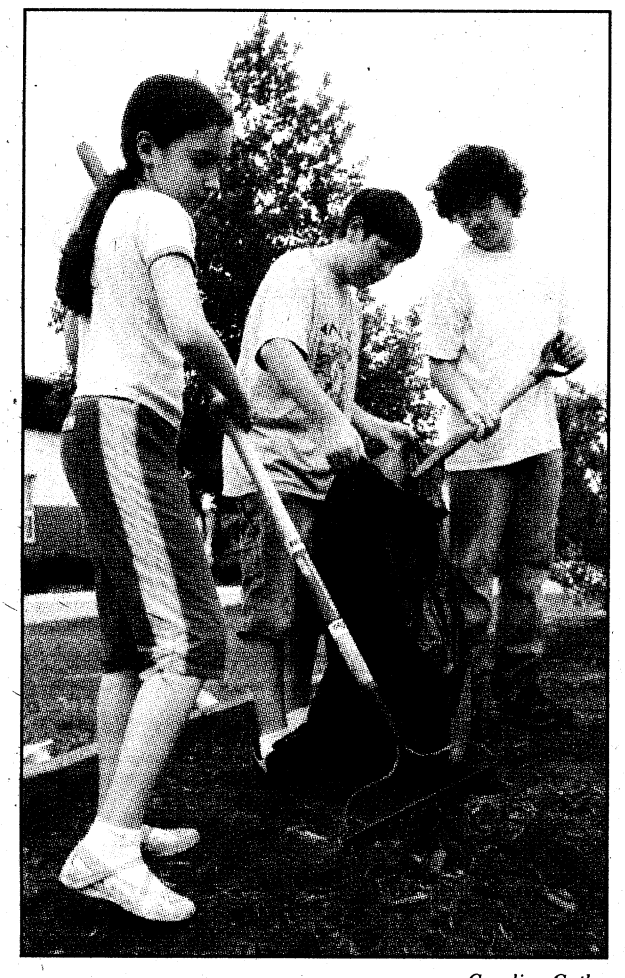
SGT Michael Davis, 104th Transportation Company, said this field day is the most memorable of all his volunteer experiences.

"Where do I begin? I loved it," he said. "I got a thrill out of seeing the smiles on the kids' faces. At the end when I was sitting down in my chair, a little kid came and gave me a hug and told me I did a good job. That made me want to come back and do some more work."

SPC Robert Edge, 598th Maintenance Company, said he volunteered for the event because it was an opportunity to be a positive influence in kids' lives.

"We're wearing this uniform; they're going to look up to (us)," he said. "If you teach them now, while they're young, it'll stick with them. You're helping future generations."

For fourth-grader Belle Force, it was her first time being around "Army people," but she enjoyed having them help her through the races.



"While you're running, they talk you through it. They force you to get through it — but in a good way," she said. "They clapped and cheered. They help you out, give you more strength."

The Soldiers were especially helpful in the tug-of-war, providing the "extra strength" to lead the fourth-grade team to a three-for-three victory, Belle said.

Thorne said the event is a solid foundation for a rewarding partnership in the future.

"This was a big blessing having the military here. The intensity of the excitement was definitely heightened," she said. "It shows the kids that not only are the military our protectors and our heroes, but they're also everyday people who can have fun with kids and play games."

Gonzales and Boy Scout leaders, Kaiser began work on the garden Saturday. More than 30 volunteers, including Boy Scouts, Honduran family members and Faith students, helped.

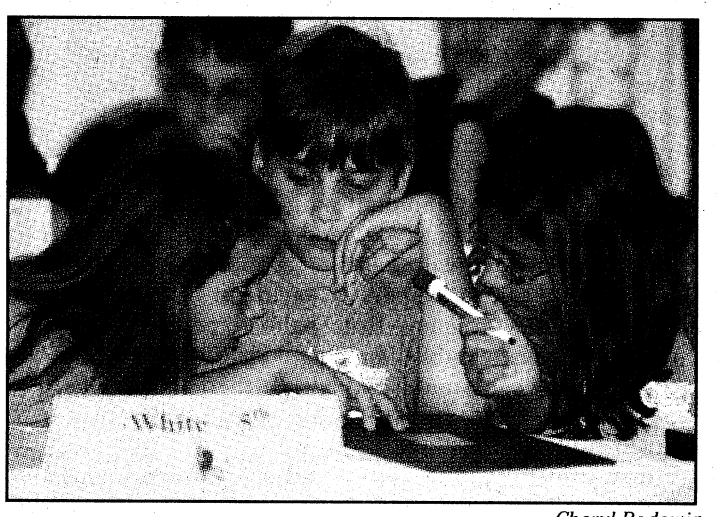
"It's good that we can remember what he did and every time he helped me," said Guillermo Sandoval, a seventh-grader from Honduras who was friends with Paz.

The garden is on the same site of a previous one in front of the school.

Kaiser and the volunteers spent the day weeding, planting shrubs and rose bushes, and putting down fresh mulch. Parkhill Cemetery donated a granite bench and plaque, which are expected to arrive at the end of May, when the garden will be officially dedicated with a ceremony. Members of Troop 27 will maintain the garden, which will serve as a memorial not just for Paz, but also for Faith teachers and students who die. Their names will be added to Paz's on the plaque.

To earn his Eagle badge, Kaiser must submit detailed documentation of the process to the Muskogee District of the Boy Scouts of America. This fall, he will go before an Eagle Scout Board of Review, that will evaluate his leadership abilities. If Kaiser passes, he'll become a third-generation Eagle Scout, a distinction he said was part of his motivation for joining Boy Scouts.

"My dad was an Eagle, my grandfather was an Eagle, and so I wanted to be a third-generation Eagle," he said. "I thought that was something very special."



COL Harry Warren, commander of Martin Army Community Hospital and Scoutmaster for Troop 27, said Kaiser has proved himself a leader in the troop.

"He does more than his share of the work when they're camping and that really sets an example for the other Scouts," he said.

Although Paz's parents are unaware of the project, Kaiser said he plans to surprise them with photographs of the work he has done to honor their son.

"I'm thrilled that I can honor a person who I knew dearly," he said. "This garden is going to continue on for many more generations."

Books: Promote quality literature

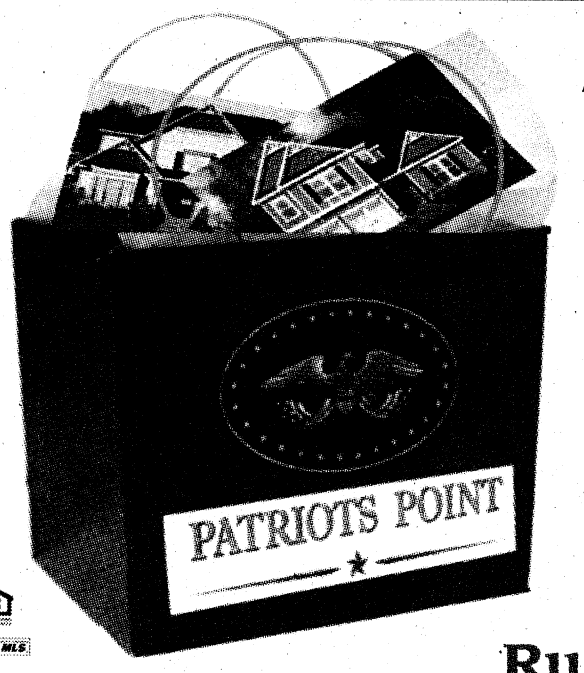
Her team placed third with 565 points.



"I like to read because it takes me to different worlds," she said. "Reading teaches you new things … how to not be afraid, how to be yourself, how to survive."

Most of the students who compete in Battle of the Books already enjoy reading, said Stowers Elementary information specialist Mitzi Crow, who coordinated the post competition.

Participation in the program encourages them to read quality literature, she said.

"Reading is the core of everything we do in elementary school," Crow said.

"Good readers do well in other subject areas. Reading leads to critical thinking, problem solving, looking at other points of view — those are world skills. (We) want to promote lifelong readers."

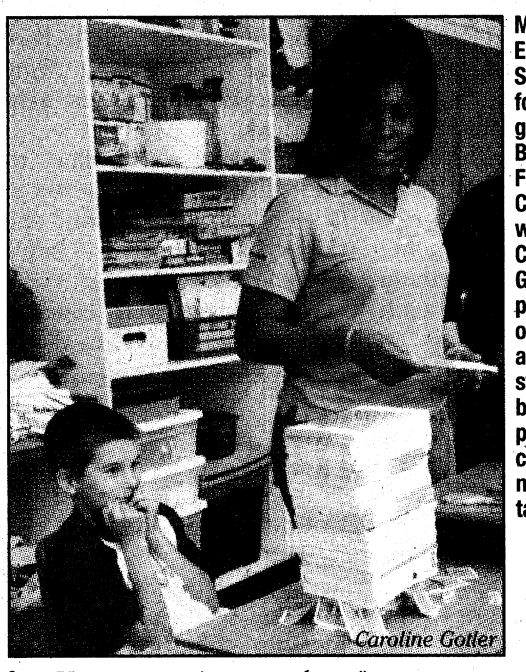
McBride students learn 'cool math'

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

While many fourth- and fifth-graders might not use the words "math" and "cool" in the same sentence, volunteers from Raytheon, a defense technology company, set out to change that when they visited McBride Elementary School May 6.

Their visit was part of Raytheon's MathMovesU program to get kids excited about math through hands-on activities that teach practical applications for math in everyday life and in various careers. Though the program primarily targets middle-schoolers, Raytheon representatives said they choose McBride fourth- and fifth-graders for their first Fort Benning MathMovesU event because those are ages when students begin losing interest in math.

"They're still forming ideas about what math is and whether it's cool or not," said Michael Doble, Raytheon's director of strategic communication. "If you don't catch them in late elementary or middle school, they don't tend to gravitate toward it in high school."



With help from members of Raytheon's Leadership Development Program that pairs recent college graduates with mentors, students constructed bridges using playing cards and masking tape, then piled books on top to see how much weight each bridge could hold.

Fifth-grader Jasmine Adams said she learned about building sound structures.

"I learned that you need to make good supports," she said.

Isaiah Carter, a fifth-grader, said MathMovesU helped him learn ways he might need to use math in the future.

"I want to be in the NFL and I'm going to need math to sign contracts," he said. "Now I think math is more fun. You can use it everywhere."

Caroline Gotler

McBride Elementary School fourth-grader Brenden Forbes-Chester watches as Chaundra Gipson piles books on top of a bridge students built with playing cards and masking tape.

"I am thrilled that they're stepping up and really analyzing the things the (MathMovesU) task requires them to do," said fifth-grade teacher Barbara Summers. "For me, it makes what we do as math instructors easier because they love it, and anything they love, they do better."

For COL(R) Chuck Betack, mission assurance director for Raytheon, holding a MathMovesU event on Fort Benning was a way of supporting the community where he lived for five years, and to the school where his wife was a teacher.

Phyllis Parker, principal of McBride Elementary School, called the event a success and said she hoped students learned that math could be fun.

VBS set for June 8-12

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's Vacation Bible School will be from 4 to 7 p.m. June 8-12 at Faith Middle School. It is free to children entering kindergarten through sixth grade. Preschool ages 3 to 5 will meet at the Follow Me Chapel.

Students will learn about God through drama, games, music and crafts, all set to a bayou theme with characters like Jacque le Croc and a firefly named Flash.

"Bottom line, VBS is just fun," said Rachel Bogle, who helped out with VBS last year.

"We begin our day with a song. There's an excitement in the air — it's electrifying," Bogle said. "The kids are smiling. It's like they're recharged inside. It just radiates from all the kids, and they can't wait to come back tomorrow.

"It teaches kids basic foundational lessons ... honesty, helping others, kindness, hope (and) just realizing it can be fun to be a Christian."

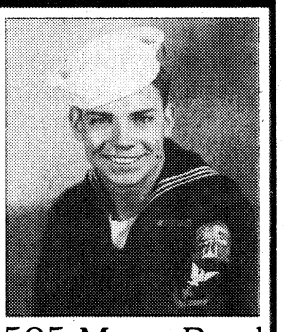
This is a great opportunity for those who don't really enjoy Sunday School, said Frank Doerr, director of religious education.

At VBS, they can run around, yell and play, and they're still learning Bible verses, he said.

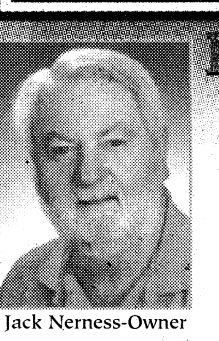
This year, they will be part of something new, Operation Kid-to-Kid, where they will send encouraging notes to military children stationed in Germany, Doerr said.

"We're trying to bring them to Christ through the Scriptures in a fun way, in a playful way," he said. "It is a community building event and faith building as well."

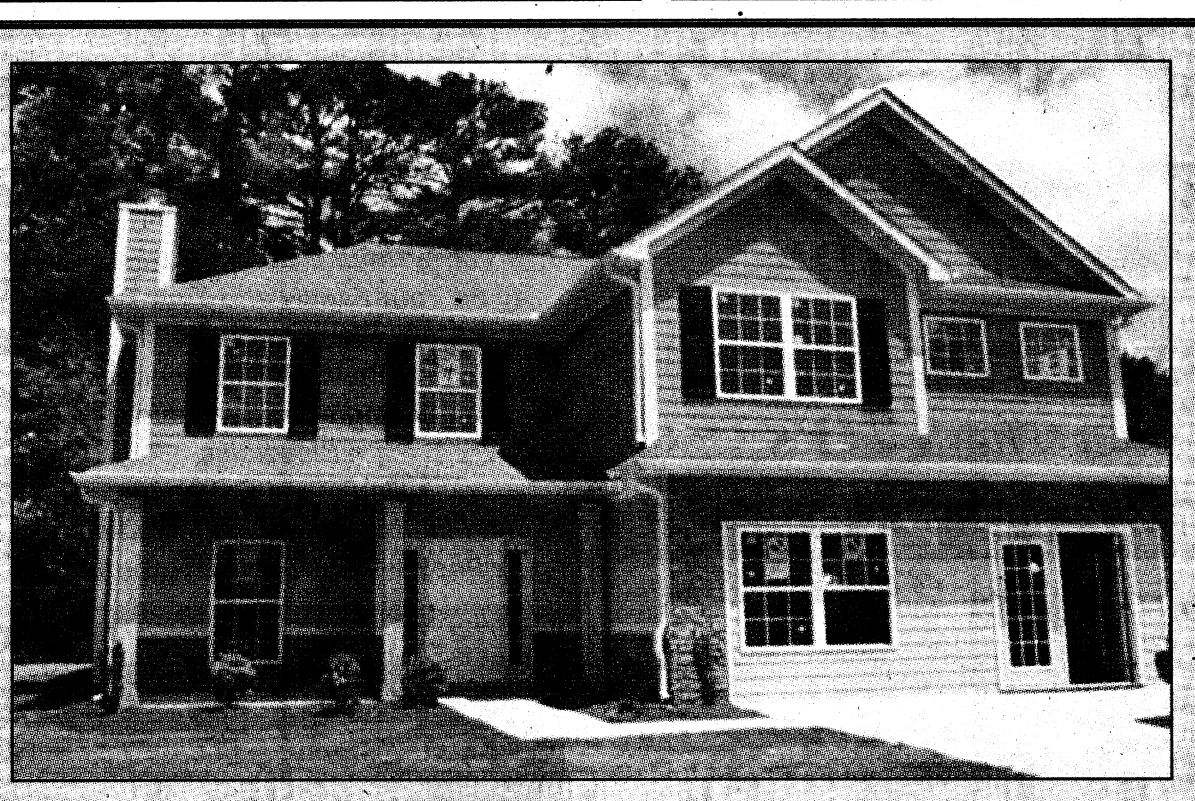
The fun isn't just for kids, Doerr said. They still need volunteers, 14 or older, to lead groups, work with crafts, snacks or games or help set up and clean up.



Last year, there were almost 300 kids. This year, 500 are expected, Bogle said.



Meeting the needs of all those children will take plenty of support, but it is a rewarding experience, said Bogle, who feels "blessed" to be a part of the outreach ministry.



Registration is open through June 7. Registration will be available from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. May 30 at the PX. Volunteer registration is open through Monday.

To register or for more information, visit https://www.groupvbs.com/webtoybox/myvbs/fortbenning or call 706-545-0045.

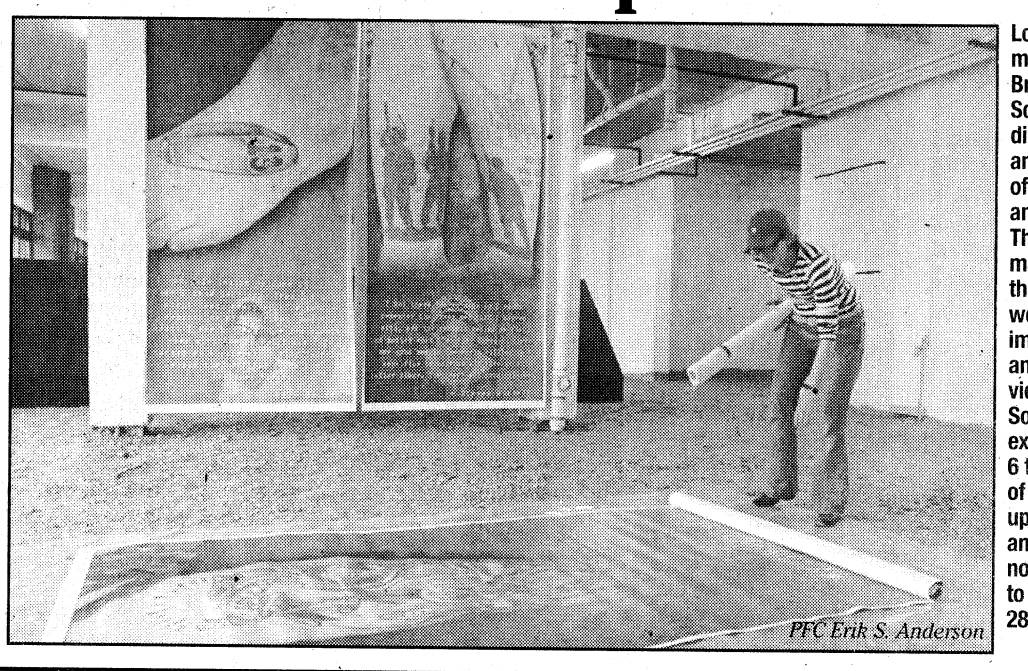
Bible study on Kelley Hill open to Soldiers

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers assigned to the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team have a Bible study at the Kelley Hill Chapel every Thursday starting at 7 p.m. Free pizza and drinks are provided at the meetings.



"We are currently in a 20-part series named The Call to Follow," said Chris Bean, the group's leader. "The part we are in now gives men and women the basics on how to follow Jesus."

Bean, a former Soldier, said the study is part of a postwide initiative designed to give single Soldiers more social options.

"This study is an excellent way for Soldiers to figure out who Jesus is and how they can follow him," Bean said. "There are a lot of Soldiers getting ready to go to Iraq and Afghanistan. This study will prepare them spiritually and get them ready for life."

For more information, call Bean at 706-464-6426 or e-mail him at bean375@hotmail.com.

CUSTOMER MANAGEMENT SERVICES

If you want your voice heard on the service you are getting from the various agencies on post, use the Customer Management Services, which provides the garrison commander the customer's feedback.

There are three tiers to CMS, which is designed to give a 360-degree view of delivery and receipt of services provided by Army garrisons and tenant activities, such as the Defense Commissary Agency and the Army and Air Force Exchange Service. They are interactive customer evaluation, Community FIRST and annual customer service assessments.

Anyone with a comment or concern regarding services should visit the ICE Web site to fill out a customer survey. The Web site is http://ice.disa.mil.

The Community FIRST (Feedback, Issues, Resolutions, Solutions Today) process gathers issues from the community larger than the scope of ICE. Focus groups, such as single Soldiers, spouses, retirees, teens, veterans or civilian employees, meet to identify issues that need attention at the installation level. Participants work the issues, offering suggestions on how to address the issues. Those issues are presented to a council that determines what level they can be solved, and, if appropriate, forwards them to the Army Family Action Plan.

Goss

The Army Family Action Plan Conference is open to all who live, work or play on the installation.

The Garrison Plans Analysis and Integration Office collects and analyzes the feedback to ensure customers' needs are met.

Watch Benning TV, or read The Bayonet or other information-sharing avenues like e-mail distribution or DFMWR marquees for the date of the customer service assessment.

For more information about Fort Benning's focus group schedule, call 706-545-5267 or e-mail bernard.goss@us.army.mil.

To deliver opinions through ICE, log on to http://ice.disa.mil, click CONUS, then choose Fort Benning, or fill out a paper comment card about your experience.

Beat the Blahs, reach out to fellow Soldiers

Chaplain (CPT) John M. Sedwick
3D BN (OCS), 11TH INF. REGT.

Welcome to springtime at Fort Benning. For those of you who are new to post, please let me explain how our weather operates here with a short poem: "March showers bring April showers, which bring May showers, which bring June showers, which finally give way to unrelenting heat and dire predictions of a pending drought in July."

Isn't it amazing how the doom and gloom of rainy weather can also negatively impact our outlook on life?

I always seem to struggle with "beating the blahs" when it rains a lot, and I imagine that some of you may face the same challenge. The unrelenting rain drops seem to greet us every morning at PT or during a midnight foot march underscore our sense of isolation and negatively harness our thoughts of separation from family members while we work or train.

I don't need to tell you these feelings of isolation and loneliness can sometimes lead to thoughts of inflicting self-harm, and every leader has become extremely concerned with our rising suicide rate — especially during the first few months of 2009.

A great way to "beat the blahs" is to look at your situation from a different perspective. How do you do that? Where do you gain this new perspective to measure your current "trials and tribulations" against? The answer lies in reaching out to other people, actively seeking out fellow Soldiers, family members — and even perfect strangers — to listen to their story.

Back in September, I was anxiously rushing to catch my flight from Atlanta to Kalamazoo, Mich., to conduct a wedding for a friend I served with during a recent deployment. When I arrived at the terminal (huffing and puffing and ready to blow the house down), I noticed a group of Soldiers were waiting to catch the same flight. They were all members of the Michigan National Guard and had just begun their two weeks of R & R. All of them were exhausted after flying 20 hours, and were also frustrated because they didn't have time to go to the USO to use the free cell phones to let family members know they had safely arrived in Atlanta.

I handed a Soldier my cell phone, and noticed a woman at the other end of the terminal had also offered her cell phone to a Soldier. Within 15 minutes, all of our Michigan National Guardsmen had spoken with their families — or at least left a message. When I boarded the plane I discovered the woman who had graciously offered her phone to the Soldiers was sitting right next to me.

I thanked her for helping me and asked why she had done so — when all of the other civilians in the terminal had not. She told me her son was a Marine. She also said he had served one combat tour in Iraq during 2004.

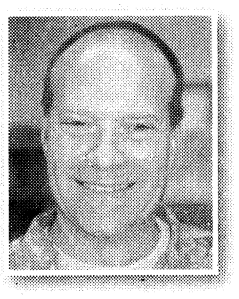
As she provided more details about her son's deployment, I realized I knew her son's Chaplain — a fellow Lutheran — Missouri Synod pastor. I asked her what her son was doing now, and whether or not he was still in the Marine Corps. She told me that he had been killed in Iraq in 2004. For the next 90 minutes I had the honor and privilege of listening to this mother of a fallen Marine tell his story — how he was the best son, the best older brother, the best young Christian man. I literally didn't say a word for 90 minutes, I just listened.

When we parted ways in the Chicago airport terminal, I felt like I was saying goodbye to one of my best friends.

Here's the question: how had the death of this woman's oldest son changed her perspective?

Here's the answer: she adopted all military members she comes in contact with as her new "son" or "daughter."

Here's the next question: how had my encounter with this mother of a fallen Marine changed my perspective?



Here's the answer: I give thanks to God every day for His gift of life, for His gift of my wife and my children. Every morning when I head out to run eight miles (rain or shine), I run for my adopted mom; I run for her fallen Marine son who now runs with the angels in heaven.

I conclude with this final thought: the best way to gain a new perspective, to feel better about who you are and where you are, and to heal, is to give someone else the honor and privilege of telling their story. Who knows, you might just gain a new friend for eternity — now that's a great perspective.

Listen before speaking to resolve arguments fairly

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Last week we looked at the first two principles for a fair fight; acknowledging it is okay to be angry, and not feeling guilty about having those angry feelings and understanding that although you disagree, you are not enemies.

Other practical steps to take in a fair fight are:

3. Never use something that has been told to you in confidence as a weapon in an argument. When your spouse shares with you in confidence, it is just that, in confidence and more importantly it is shared in trust.

When your spouse shares in trust, it is an intimate openness into their heart. It is shared when they feel emotionally safe. When you use this information as a weapon, you betray the trust your spouse has placed in you. You distance your connection with your spouse and make it harder for your partner to feel emotionally safe in the marriage. Trust is a foundational principle in every relationship. Honor it, keep it and do not violate it.

4. Never walk out of the room until you both agree that the argument is over or have decided to table the problem and chosen a specific time to bring it up again. Many marriage experts call this a "time out." This is a very good principle when tensions begin to escalate. Once this happens, very little effective communication takes place.

The Army teaches Soldiers to walk away when things get heated. While the point is to remove yourself from the situation before it becomes explosive, it needs to be done correctly. It is best to say, "Because I love you, I need some time to walk away and calm down and then we can resume our discussion." Just walking out often adds fuel to the fire and things get out of control. The message when you walk away is, "I do not care about you or what you have to say." So if you need to walk away, do it right.

5. Acknowledge each other's feelings and perceptions, without judgment or criticism.

Everyone owns their own feelings. There is no "right" way to feel. If you argue about feelings, you are going to lose. Mature couples recognize it is OK to have different views. You do not have to agree on everything.

One of the greatest communication skills is to listen first and then speak. James 1:19 says, "Everyone should be quick to listen, slow to speak and slow to become angry. ..." Try to listen from their point of view. This does not mean you must agree, but you should listen so you understand them. Make the effort to unravel what is troubling your partner and show genuine caring and awareness of his or her emotional experience. Say, "Tell me more." Or, "How does that make you feel?" Be careful, it only works if you ask with sincerity.

If you are having relationship issues or other personal problems, call the Chaplain's Family life center at 706-545-1760. Our trained pastoral staff is here to help. Our office is located at 2606 Dixie Road in Soldier's Plaza. We look forward to helping you. May God bless you and your family.

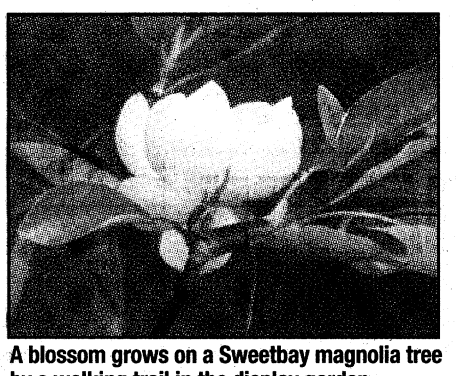
The Lillie Belle Kimbrough Adams farmstead is an 1890s home that features period furniture and several rooms, including a full-scale kitchen and bridal suite, available for rent. Columbus Botanical Garden staff recently planted this herb garden for spring. Other flowers, trees and shrubs adorn this area of the garden, where most of the blooms are on display. The gardens are updated regularly to reflect the changing seasons.

Local garden offers getaway to nature

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET



To escape from the city without a long drive, look no further than the Columbus Botanical Garden. In the wooded seclusion of the Joann Holt Walking Trail, the only reminder of civilization is the sound of the occasional car passing on Weems Road. Lined with native plants and a variety of hardwood trees and pines, the walk is interesting for the botanist and peaceful for the casual observer.

Named in memory of Joann Holt, a board member who initiated its creation, the trail opened in December and is continually being added to and improved. It includes three different loops that will take you by the wetlands, the gin house or the quickest route back to the parking lot — none of these longer than a mile.

The walk is mostly level and only moderately strenuous. Even though it's shaded most of the way, you'll still want to bring sunscreen for the sunny patches that break through the canopy.

If you pause during your walk and wait patiently, you may catch a glimpse of the wildlife that calls the trail home. I spotted a blue bird — or at least a bird that was blue — that brightened my walk. There are also deer, raccoons, lizards and hawks.

The trail opens an hour after sunrise and closes an hour before sunset and is free of charge. If you have extra time, be sure to visit the display gardens near the Adams family farmhouse, an 1890s home with period furniture and space for special events.

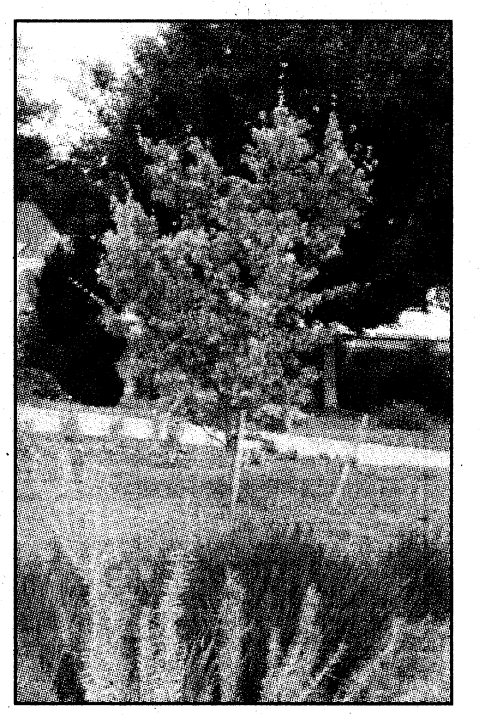
A blossom grows on a Sweetbay magnolia tree by a walking trail in the display garden.

The gardens near the house include herbs, perennials and flowering bushes and trees. Orlaya, Stokes aster and verbena homestead purple are in bloom this month. Other blossoms, such as California poppies, are planted by the entrance to the botanical garden. As the climate changes, the staff updates the gardens to reflect the shift in seasons.

The garden offers monthly workshops related to plant care and crafts. The next, "Tips and Tools for Mature Gardeners," will be June 27.

The garden is located at 3603 Weems Road, Columbus. Admission is free. The office is open from 1 to 5 p.m. Monday, Tuesday and Friday. For more information, visit www.columbusbotanicalgarden.com or call 706-327-8400.

Tropical hibiscus blooms in shades of pink all summer when well fertilized.



This front parlor to the left of the entrance to the farmhouse includes tall windows, a chandelier, fireplace, wood floors and 1890s period furniture.

This Japanese maple, a recent addition to the garden, was donated this year.

After learning the clock is ticking on an unstoppable Illuminati time bomb, Langdon flies to Rome, where he joins forces with beautiful and enigmatic Italian scientist Vittoria Vetra. Embarking on a nonstop hunt through crypts, catacombs, deserted cathedrals and the most secretive vault on earth, Langdon and Vetra will follow a 400-year old trail of ancient symbols that mark the Vatican's only hope for survival.

Officials to monitor flow at ACP1

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Garrison officials don't anticipate fallout from the upcoming change at Access Control Point 1 on South Lumpkin Road, but they'll continue monitoring traffic flow and adjust as needed.

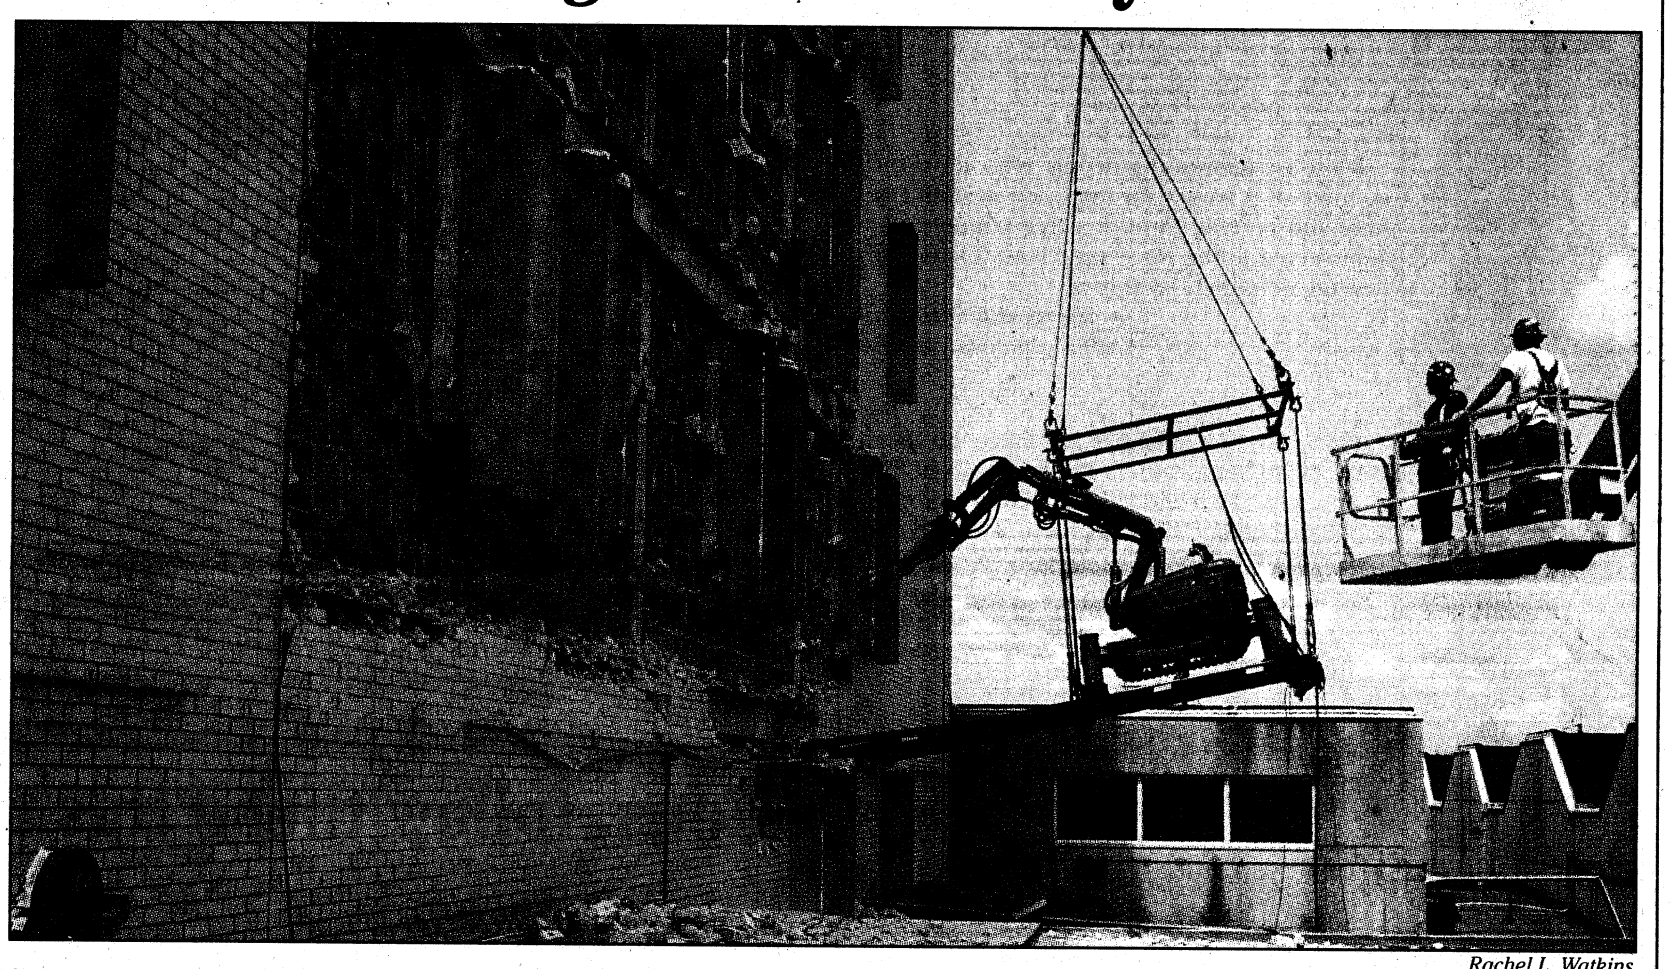
Starting June 1, the gate will be open from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday. It will remain closed on weekends and holidays.

"The reduced hours are a necessity because we have to man 10 ACPs," said deputy garrison commander Chuck Walls. "Some decision had to be made to adequately man those other ACPs across Fort Benning."

LTC Kevin Clarke, director of Emergency Services and provost marshal, said there's a "finite level of manpower" available for gate security.

"After careful study, we trimmed it down to the busiest hours at ACP1," Walls said. "It's really going to have a minimum impact."

Clarke said a weeklong scientific study was done at ACP1 to identify the largest surge in vehicles. Every vehicle was digitally counted.



With about 33,000 vehicles passing through Fort Benning's ACPs every day, it's Chris LeBlanc and Phillip Arrington of B&D Concrete Cutting use a robotic jackhammer, lifted by a crane, to chip away bricks from the north side of the Infantry Hall tower Friday. The bricks will be ground down and used to make new floors in the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

Stimulus money aimed at facility improvements

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

More than two dozen facilities on Fort Benning will get needed facelifts from millions in federal stimulus dollars pumped through the Defense Department, a Directorate of Public Works official said.

Mark J. Fincher, chief of the organization's business operations and integration division, said 31 projects are planned in the next two years, including a $9.75 million Ranger barracks renovation. All but 10 should be completed in 2009.

Friday, the DoD announced it's allocating $4.26 billion from American Recovery and Reinvestment Act funding to upgrade thousands of buildings. That includes energy-related improvements to military medical facilities. The Army alone is expected to get $1.74 billion for public works.

A total of $130 million has been earmarked for Georgia's military bases.

Fort Benning will receive about $31 million in stimulus spending for its restoration efforts, Fincher said.

Youth services adds staff, express window

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Improvements to the registration process at Child, Youth & School Services are under way as the department reduces wait times and improves customer service at its central registration office.

The registration process now averages 20-30 minutes per customer, down from 45 minutes last June, said Becky Carroll-Meredith, CYSS chief.

With summer camps and sports registration open, May is a peak season for the office.

"CYSS registers 300-500 children a month, but during peak times that number can increase," Carroll-Meredith said.

Carroll-Meredith offered tips to help families with the process.

Simply filling out and bringing all the required documentation can speed up the process, Carroll-Meredith said.

She said customers may make a registration appointment once the schedule for an activity is published and can also take advantage of the express window.

"We offer an express window to handle payments, take in health forms and outprocessing. If families remain current in the system and don't let their registration lapse, they can easily renew it using the express window," Carroll-Meredith said.

Though lines may be unavoidable at times, Carroll-Meredith said the central office is open with later hours throughout the week to help families fit registration into their schedules.

The office expanded its hours to 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday. On Thursday, the office is open until 7 p.m.

The office also added staff to compensate during peak periods: an additional clerk and trained office staff to help during peak times.

The main roadblocks to a faster registration process are unprepared parents and a cumbersome registration software system, Carroll-Meredith said.

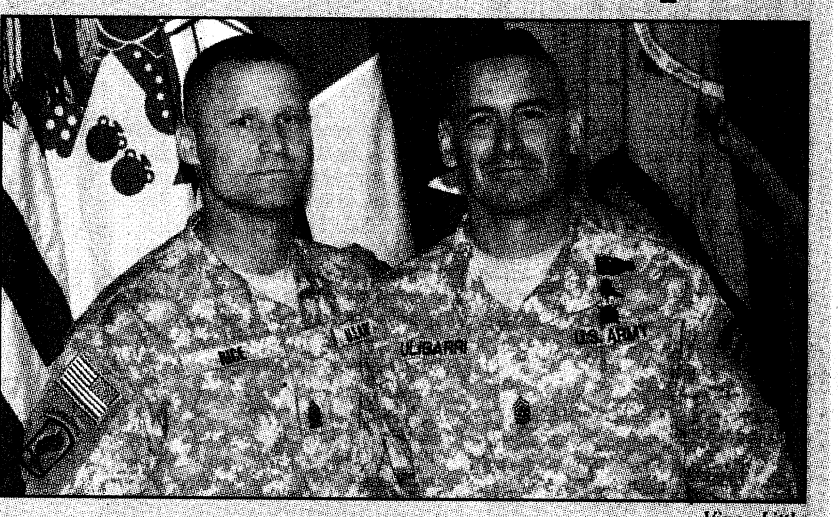
Ulibarri honored, new top enlisted Soldier assumes post

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning and the U.S. Army Infantry Center swapped out its top enlisted Soldiers on Monday.



CSM Earl Rice took over the position from CSM Joe Ulibarri during a change-of-responsibility ceremony at the Benning Conference Center. Ulibarri retired Tuesday after 27 years on active duty.

MG Michael Barbero, the commanding general, said he was paying tribute to "two distinguished noncommissioned officers who enjoy sterling reputations among Infantrymen and across our Army."

Rice arrives from Vicenza, Italy — where he was the Southern European Task Force's command sergeant major — while Ulibarri is staying at Benning in a civilian role. In a few weeks, he'll become a liaison officer for the post's Asymmetrical Warfare Group.

Rice spent two years as Barbero's command sergeant major at the Joint Readiness Training Center and Fort Polk, La. They also served

USAIC enlisted leadership change at the top

MG Michael D. Barbero
COMMANDING GENERAL

These are days of great change in leadership at Fort Benning. Within a six-week period, we will have changed the top three leadership positions at the U.S. Army Infantry Center.

On Monday, we had the Infantry Center command sergeant major change of responsibility ceremony for two outstanding senior noncommissioned officers, CSM Joe Ulibarri and CSM Earl Rice.

I, along with many of you, have had the honor to Soldier with these two distinguished senior NCO's, who enjoy sterling reputations among Infantrymen, and across our Army.

On Tuesday, I had the honor and privilege to retire CSM Ulibarri after 30 years of serving with distinction. It was a bittersweet day to say goodbye to my battle buddy. He has meant a great deal to the Infantry and to the Soldiers he has led.

As the command sergeant major of the Infantry Center, CSM Ulibarri dedicated himself to not only the Soldier, but to this remarkable institution that is responsible for training and developing today's warriors.

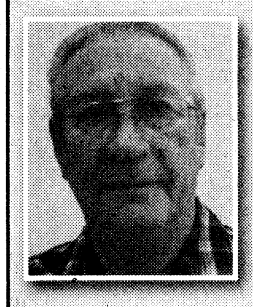
He leaves behind a legacy of dedication to the Soldiers he served with. Those Soldiers he mentored, challenged and inspired can attribute their growth as leaders to him and the example he set. He built their foundation.

This week, I also welcomed back to Fort Benning CSM Earl Rice. I have Soldiered with CSM Rice twice before, in Operation Iraqi Freedom and at Fort Polk, La. He is absolutely the right leader for the Soldiers at Fort Benning as we continue to transform to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

He is a superb combat leader. He leads from the front and always ensures his Soldiers are well prepared, superbly led and ready for any situation. He is the quintessential coach, teacher and mentor.

We are honored to have a Soldier of his reputation and caliber here. I look forward to the wealth of knowledge and great things to come as he joins us here at this very pivotal time in our transition.

Our job here is to provide Soldiers with the very best doctrine, training and materiel we can find — and to mold them into a force that is lethal, flexible, deployable and sustainable. CSM Ulibarri moved us closer to that objective.



As we move into the future, we must continue to increase our capabilities to deal with the challenges we are facing today — and accelerate our preparation for the challenges of tomorrow. CSM Rice is the right leader to help us meet these challenges.

The U.S. Army Infantry Center, Fort Benning and our Army are very fortunate to experience the leadership of CSM Ulibarri and CSM Rice. Their example of leadership, selfless service and commitment to excellence remind us all of the true meaning of the Year of the NCO.

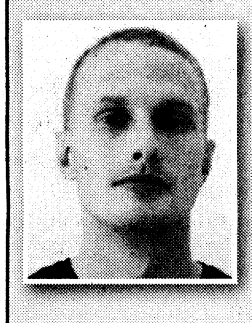
VARIOUS VOICES

What is the significance of Memorial Day?



It's a time to honor veterans, which is important to me because I'm one of them. I served in Vietnam. And we also definitely need to continue supporting our troops who are out there right now.

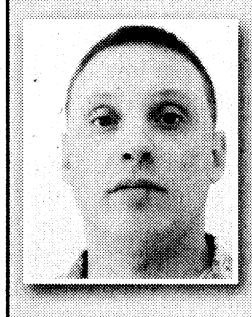
— Retired Senior Chief Petty Officer Wade Burns, Columbus

It's to remember the people who serve our country. If it wasn't for them, we wouldn't be here and be able to have a free country. My aunt served in the Navy, and I'll be thinking of her on Memorial Day this year.

— Madelaine Malikai, AAFES concessionaire

It's a day to remember my fallen brothers. Both of my grandfathers fought in World War II as Infantrymen and later as pilots. If people didn't remember veterans, there would be no point for us to serve.

— SPC Joseph Galles, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment

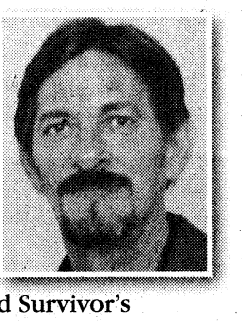


We need to honor the troops so they know they're appreciated. I'm a veteran and so is my husband, and I have three other family members deployed right now, so they will be in my prayers, as they are every day.

— Shequetta Green, Family member

It's a day to remember Soldiers' bravery. They gave their lives so people like us could be alive. I'm getting ready to deploy, so I'm going to spend Memorial Day with my daughter. If something happened to me, she'd realize Mommy sacrificed, too.

— SPC Maggie Gonzalez, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion



I've lost quite a few friends in combat, and it's their day. They were great, beautiful people, and now they're gone. They need to be remembered and they deserve to be remembered.

— SPC Bryan Spurlock, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment

Don't forget those who served

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

This is Memorial Day weekend, but what does that really mean?

Many will take the extended weekend to grill out, take a short excursion to the beach or get together with family and friends while forgetting about the day set aside to remember those who have fallen in defense of our country.

For me, the significance of Memorial Day took on a new meaning in the fall of 1968.

It was just like any other fall day until an Army chaplain and Survivor's Assistance officer showed up on our doorstep to let our family know my father was killed in action — I was 11 years old.

For the past 40 years, Memorial Day has had meaning — I reflect more on the sacrifices my father and men and women like him made than wondering what kind of fun I could have.

Memorial Day began as a way to pay tribute to the men and women who died during military service and expanded following World War I to include casualties of war or military action.

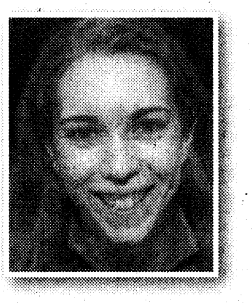
But, who are these people?

They are fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, sons, daughters, aunts, uncles, farmers, millworkers, high school athletic stars — you name it. They come from all walks of life. Although their faces may not be known to the world, many know the fruit of their sacrifices.

My father is buried within a couple of headstones of a big tree in the Fort Benning Cemetery. Since his death in 1968, a small bench has been placed at the tree nearby. On Memorial Day I will visit him, think about how much I miss him and wonder what it would be like if he were alive today. As I have done many times, I will look over a field of white headstones and be grateful to him and all of those who served.

I will remember the numbers of men and women they saved through their sacrifice and the freedom they preserved.

While Memorial Day is set aside to remember those who have given their life in defense of their country, families, ideals and way of life, we should also remember those who were fortunate enough to make it back home and those who are still out there defending our way of life.



When I walk through the Main Post Cemetery, I see a garden of stone filled with markers, and although I do not know them, I know of their sacrifice — and I am grateful.

Over the years, Memorial Day has changed from a visit to cemeteries to place flowers on the graves of the fallen to parades, picnics, barbecues and family get-togethers. Memorial Day, I will remember the fallen, along with all of the Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen and Marines who put their lives on the line for the many faceless people they will never know.

While enjoying the long weekend, don't forget the reason we have the holiday — I know I won't.

Teens, follow these tips to avoid work

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

I know there are a lot of parents who want their teenagers to get a summer job. Not too long ago, my parents nagged — I mean, encouraged — me to find summer employment. So, to help teenagers avoid job search pitfalls, I'd like to offer some tips for how not to ace a job interview:

1. Don't bother finding out anyone's names. Just call everyone "dude." Not only will you save yourself valuable time, but you'll also show your potential employer that you're ready to work in their Malibu office.
2. Don't shower. Deodorant is overrated.
3. Use lots of exclamation points on your resume, especially after words like "team player" and "experienced." Your potential employer will appreciate your enthusiasm. And don't worry if everything on your resume isn't 100 percent correct. Embellishing just shows you're reaching for the stars.
4. Fidget. Bite your nails, tap your foot and hold a pen in your hand so you can make a clicking sound with the cap. Remember, employees who are more physically active are also more productive.
5. Whatever you do, don't look anyone in the eye.
6. Don't plan out what you'll wear. Grabbing a T-shirt off the floor that morning will do just fine, you'll get a chance to show off your casual side.
7. Your first question should be about salary and benefits. You can never be too eager to find out how much you'll get paid.
8. Don't limit yourself to talking about previous work experience. That awesome story from spring break in Cancun is great for illustrating how you work your way out of tough situations.
9. If you can't remember what the company does, don't worry. You can always ask the interviewer.
10. Bring a snack and offer to share it with the interviewer.

With these tips, you'll be on your way to a successful career of sitting on the couch. But, hey, it could worse — at least you'll have a short commute.

AAFES gives dividend to DFMWR, supports Soldiers

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

In other businesses, excess earnings go back to owners or shareholders; in the Army & Air Force Exchange Service, they return to service members and their families, said Ken Brewington, general manager for the Fort Benning PX.

Last year, that totaled more than $2.3 million — about half paid to the Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation and the other half invested in capital expenditures.

Sales were up on post 23 percent for fiscal 2008 compared with the previous year, partly thanks to those capital investments, which helped build four new facilities on post, including the PX, Brewington said.

The funds were used to construct the Starbucks and day spa opening in McGraw Village June 1, he said.

Earnings that don't update shopping facilities go directly to DFMWR each month as the AAFES simplified dividend.

"(The dividend) is really essential to what we do at MWR," said Al Gelineau, post FMWR director. "If we didn't have it, we couldn't do many of the things that we do. We are constantly upgrading our products and services. For example, at Uchee Creek and the Destin Army Recreation Area, the boats and jet skis we rent have a life cycle of about three years. We keep that equipment in the most modern state we can, so Soldiers can have a first-class experience."

The dividend money also allowed DFMWR to open two new java cafes on Main Post this fiscal year, Gelineau said.

"What we do for Soldiers and families — their quality of life — is important," he said. "Quality of life is everything associated with the Army that isn't quite work related ... the overall experience that has an indirect impact on your satisfaction with your job and in this case, with your Army experience."

Services provided through DFMWR can help Soldiers focus while they're deployed because they know they're on an installation that makes family welfare a priority, Gelineau said.

As a contributor to DFMWR and a provider of modern shopping amenities, AAFES is fortunate to support service members here and overseas, Brewington said.

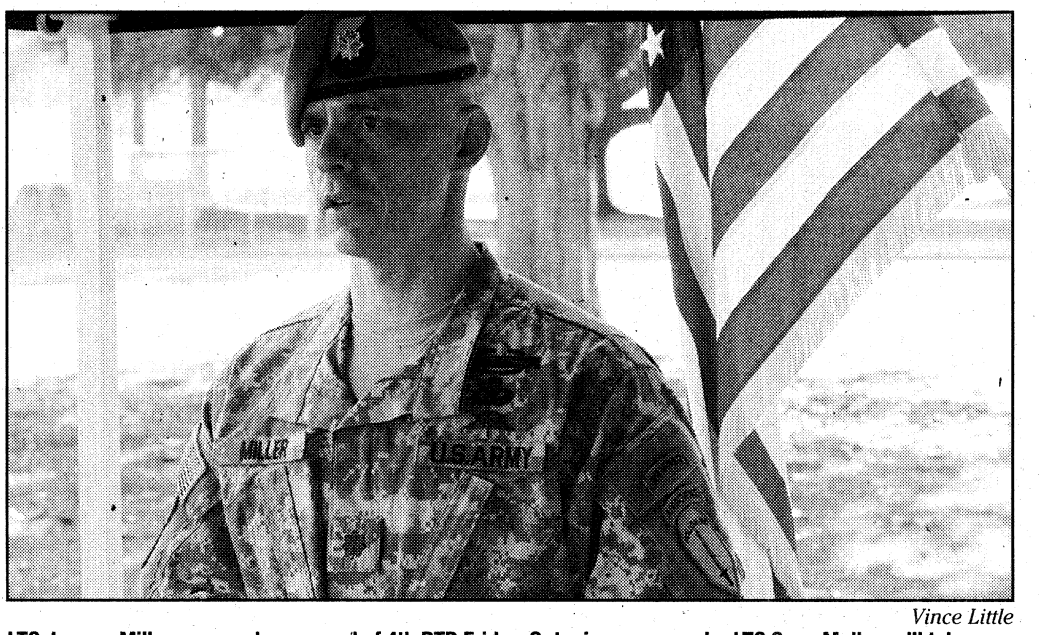
"Right now, we have over 500 AAFES employees — from Fort Benning over 25 — deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan," he said. "They volunteered to go serve the military where the military is serving. That's a unique relationship. We are part of the military. We are part of the community. These are their stores."

Miller takes command of 4th Ranger Training Battalion

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The 4th Ranger Training Battalion has a new leader.

LTC Jeremy Miller assumed command from LTC Sean Mullen last Friday in a ceremony at the Ranger Memorial.



COL Douglas Flohr, the Ranger Training Brigade commander, was the reviewing officer.

"This is the workhorse battalion of our brigade," he said. "They pull all the taskings from post, and they train the vast majority of our students."

Mullen leaves for Fort Carson, Colo., where he takes over as deputy brigade commander with the 4th Infantry Brigade Combat Team, 4th Infantry Division. He's expected to join the unit on its Afghanistan deployment.

His successor previously worked for the Joint Special Operations Command at Fort Bragg, N.C. While there, he went to Iraq a second time.

Earlier in his career — while assigned to the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Armored Division in Baumholder, Germany — Miller served as brigade operations officer during the unit's 15-month deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom from 2005 to 2007.

Vince Little
LTC Jeremy Miller assumed command of 4th RTB Friday. Outgoing commander LTC Sean Mullen will take over as deputy brigade commander for 4th Infantry Division's 4th Brigade Combat Team.

Miller's last tour at Fort Benning was a dozen years ago when he was a platoon leader with A Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment.

"There have been a lot of changes infrastructure-wise and a lot of improvements in services for Soldiers and their families," said Miller, who's accompanied by his wife, Nancy, and their two children, Madeline and Garrett. "Everybody here is so friendly. It's refreshing."

Flohr called Ranger instructors and the Soldiers they groom "men of substance, men of character, men who love their country."

"Our goal in the Ranger Training Brigade is to produce as many Rangers for the nation as possible — without lowering standards," he said. "And the greatest compliment that I can pay to Sean is that he led his battalion to produce over 3,600 Rangers in the past two years."

At the same time, Mullen successfully conducted two Best Ranger competitions, "the Ranger community's most vital marketing tool," Flohr said.

"But as it always is in the Army, as one great command team departs, another arrives," he said.

Miller said the 4th Ranger Training Battalion has been accomplishing its mission for a long time.

"We want to get the maximum out of every individual in the unit," he said. "But how we do it is also important."

Changes: Rice 'committed to taking care of Soldiers'

together in Iraq.

"He was a superb combat leader, leading from the front," Barbero told the audience.

"We're honored to have a combat Soldier of your caliber here at Fort Benning as we transition to the future Maneuver Center of Excellence."

The general also praised Ulibarri as an Infantry leader who made a difference at every step of his military career, which included a 15-month deployment to Baghdad and Mosul as command sergeant major for the Fort Wainwright, Alaska-based 172nd Stryker Brigade Combat Team.

"He's helped our Soldiers become more adaptive thinkers against the enemy we face today," Barbero said.

Ulibarri said his tour with the 172nd was probably the most rewarding of his career. "It made an indelible impression on me," he said.

Ulibarri, who joined the USAIC leadership in Febuary 2007, thanked his family for their support throughout his Army travels and expressed gratitude to Fort Benning's leadership. He also lauded the Soldiers.

"They're the reason I stayed in this uniform so long, and why I'll stay in the civilian position for many years to come," he said. "I can't think of a better mission than preparing our Soldiers to fight ... This doesn't feel like the end. It feels like the beginning."

Rice's 27-year career includes a stint as a drill sergeant at Fort Benning in 1990.

A highly decorated Soldier, he's held numerous command sergeant major positions and also is a member of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club. The Legion of Merit and Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for valor are among his awards.

Rice said he's committed to taking care of Soldiers, civilians, families and retirees at Fort Benning.

He said he understands the stresses faced by Soldiers within the Army's high-operations tempo.

"I know what our Soldiers are going through with multiple rotations," he said. "We want to teach the right courses, skill sets, and (tactics, techniques and procedures)."

Through a unified approach, Rice said he'd make sure the Infantry Center continues producing Soldiers the Army needs to meet today's demands.

"We'll capitalize on the great talent we have here and build on the team," he said. "Team stands for 'Together, Everyone Accomplishes the Mission.' None of us can do it by ourselves."

Soldiers assigned to Troop B, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, secure the perimeter of a simulated Iraqi village during training at Cactus Range on Fort Benning, May 14. The training allowed the Soldiers to simulate working with local Iraqis. It was one of the final exercises in the 30-day Hammer Focus event.

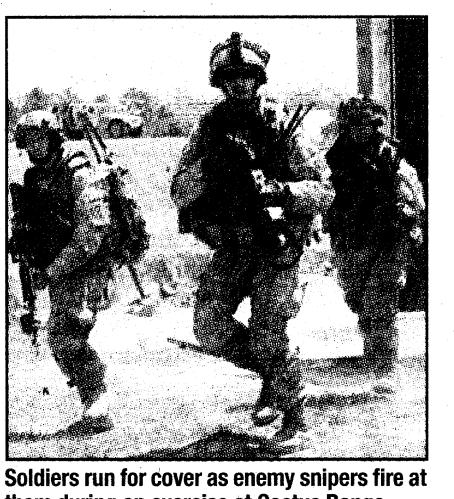
3rd Brigade wraps up 30-day Hammer Focus

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team completed Hammer Focus, the brigade's largest field training event at Fort Benning Monday.

The 30-day event employed all six of the brigade's battalions and allowed them to practice scenarios they may encounter during the upcoming rotation to the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., and future deployments overseas.



"Hammer Focus is like our Super Bowl," said 1SG Quentin Fenderson, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment. "Since January, we have been going through everything from small-arms qualification, our gunnery tables and company-level training exercises. Hammer Focus brings that all together."

For Soldiers new to the brigade, Hammer Focus is their first real taste of what being deployed is like, said 1SG Heath Potteiger, A Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment.

"All that time in the field isn't always fun, but I can see how far we have come," he said. "The improvement has been clear. I saw our guys get better every day we were out there. Hopefully, that will continue to build until we deploy."

The training, which focused on Soldiers learning to work effectively with Iraqi Security Forces, was different from the training many of the brigade's veterans had done in the past.

"One of the biggest highlights of the training was gearing our platoon sergeants and platoon leaders to work with the local security forces and let them take the lead," said 1SG David Eastabrooks, C Troop, 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment. "Back in (Operation Iraqi Freedom 1), there weren't any Iraqi security forces. They were all disbanded.The fight has changed."

Soldiers run for cover as enemy snipers fire at them during an exercise at Cactus Range.

Eastabrooks said the new way of conducting operations relies more on interacting with other people and letting them do much of the work.

"We are gearing down from a kinetic fight and changing gears to working with imams (religious leaders), village elders, police chiefs and Iraqi colonels. That is a big adjustment for our veterans."

Fenderson said he is happy with the way that the training went and is looking forward to the brigade's NTC rotation.

"I think NTC will go great because of Hammer Focus," he said. "I believe that about mid-way through NTC everything we are doing now will just be second-nature. I think this battalion, because of the training, is well ahead of where they were last year heading to Iraq."

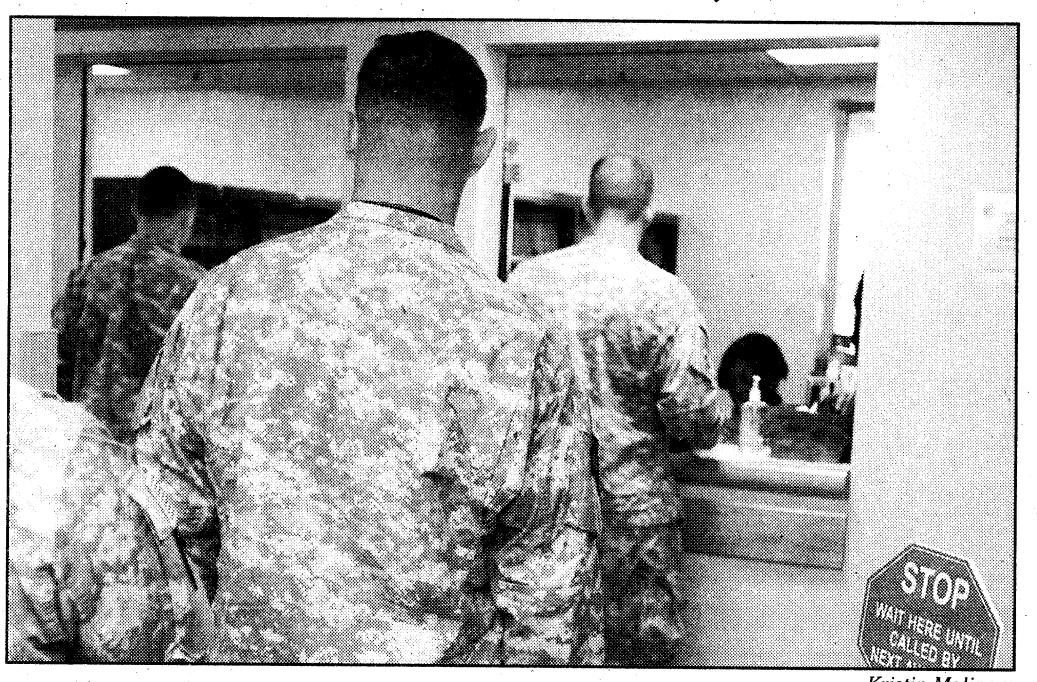
Love Dental Clinic takes in 4,000 more patients

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

A few weeks after the closure of Bernheim Dental Clinic, the staff of Love Dental Clinic continues to adjust to the influx of Soldiers coming through its doors.

"There are challenges for Soldiers getting an exam in a timely manner," said COL Mark McDonald, commander of Fort Benning's DENTAC.

Prior to Bernheim's closure, Love clinic was responsible for 8,000 permanent party Soldiers a month. That number swelled to more than 12,000 after Bernheim's closure, McDonald said.



"Initially, it's overwhelming to incorporate proportionally a third more Soldiers into the clinic," McDonald said.

During the last few weeks, Soldiers assigned to Bernheim for dental care were notified they would be reassigned to Love Dental Clinic while Bernheim undergoes improvements to upgrade its infrastructure.

Funded by MEDCOM, the goal is to have this, and other dental clinic projects, ready for the Armor Center and School's move to Fort Benning.

The project includes upgrading the air conditioning, plumbing and electrical systems in the building. The front desk area will be redesigned. Administrative and dental rooms will be realigned to capitalize on the space. The outdated chemical-processing area in the X-ray suite will be converted to administrative space.

"We now do digital X-rays, which saves us a significant amount of time," McDonald said.

Kristin Molinaro
Soldiers wait to be seen at the check-in counter at Love Dental Clinic. The clinic saw an increase of 4,000 more patients a month since Bernheim Dental Clinic closed for renovations. Bernheim is expected to reopen in a year.

The dental lab will receive upgrades to facilitate faster service.

"We are modernizing the dental lab equipment," McDonald said.

The plumbing and electrical systems used for dental services such as fillings and cleanings will be moved to chair-side instead of in their old location along the wall.

With renovations at Bernheim expected to take up to a year, Love clinic added a kiosk in the reception area to speed the check-in process.

The clinic only has two appointment windows to process patients through at check-in, leading to lines on a daily basis, McDonald said.

The kiosk will quicken the check-in process for patients not needing their records.

If patients need their records for an appointment, they must still check in at the window and not the kiosk, McDonald said.

One glitch with the kiosk is that it doesn't designate which waiting area on the lower floor or upper floor patients should be seated in to hear their name called, McDonald said.

McDonald said the clinic developed a temporary solution by posting a roster of doctor's names next to the kiosk to assist patients.

The busiest time for the clinic is first thing in the morning during sick call and walk-in exam hours, McDonald said.

Though wait times have increased, COL John Bryson, Love Dental Clinic's officer in charge, said there are many benefits to Bernheim Soldiers being seen at Love.

"These Soldiers will have easier access to specialty care," Bryson said.

Because doctors of various specialties are co-located in the clinic, receiving a chair-side consultation during a dental appointment is also possible, Bryson said.

Love clinic conducts a yearlong residency program with up to 8 residents to train in specialties such as prosthodontics, endodontics and periodontics.

"If people are having a problem, they need to let us know. We value their comment cards. We can't fix a problem unless we are aware of it," he said.

Love Dental Clinic exam and X-ray hours are 7:30 to 10 a.m. and 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday; 7:30 to 10 a.m. and 1:30 to 3 p.m. Wednesday. Sick call hours are 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. Monday through Friday. For more information, call the clinic at 706-544-2051 or 706-544-2052.

Service: Adds credit card bill paying at each site

"Failure to have required information compounds the problem and impacts other patrons waiting for service," Carroll-Meredith said.

Registrants are asked to bring ID card, current immunization records, emergency contact information, a Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System print out from the parent's Army Knowledge Online account and proof of income.

A signed health assessment form must be turned in within 30 days after beginning the CYSS program, Carroll-Meredith said.

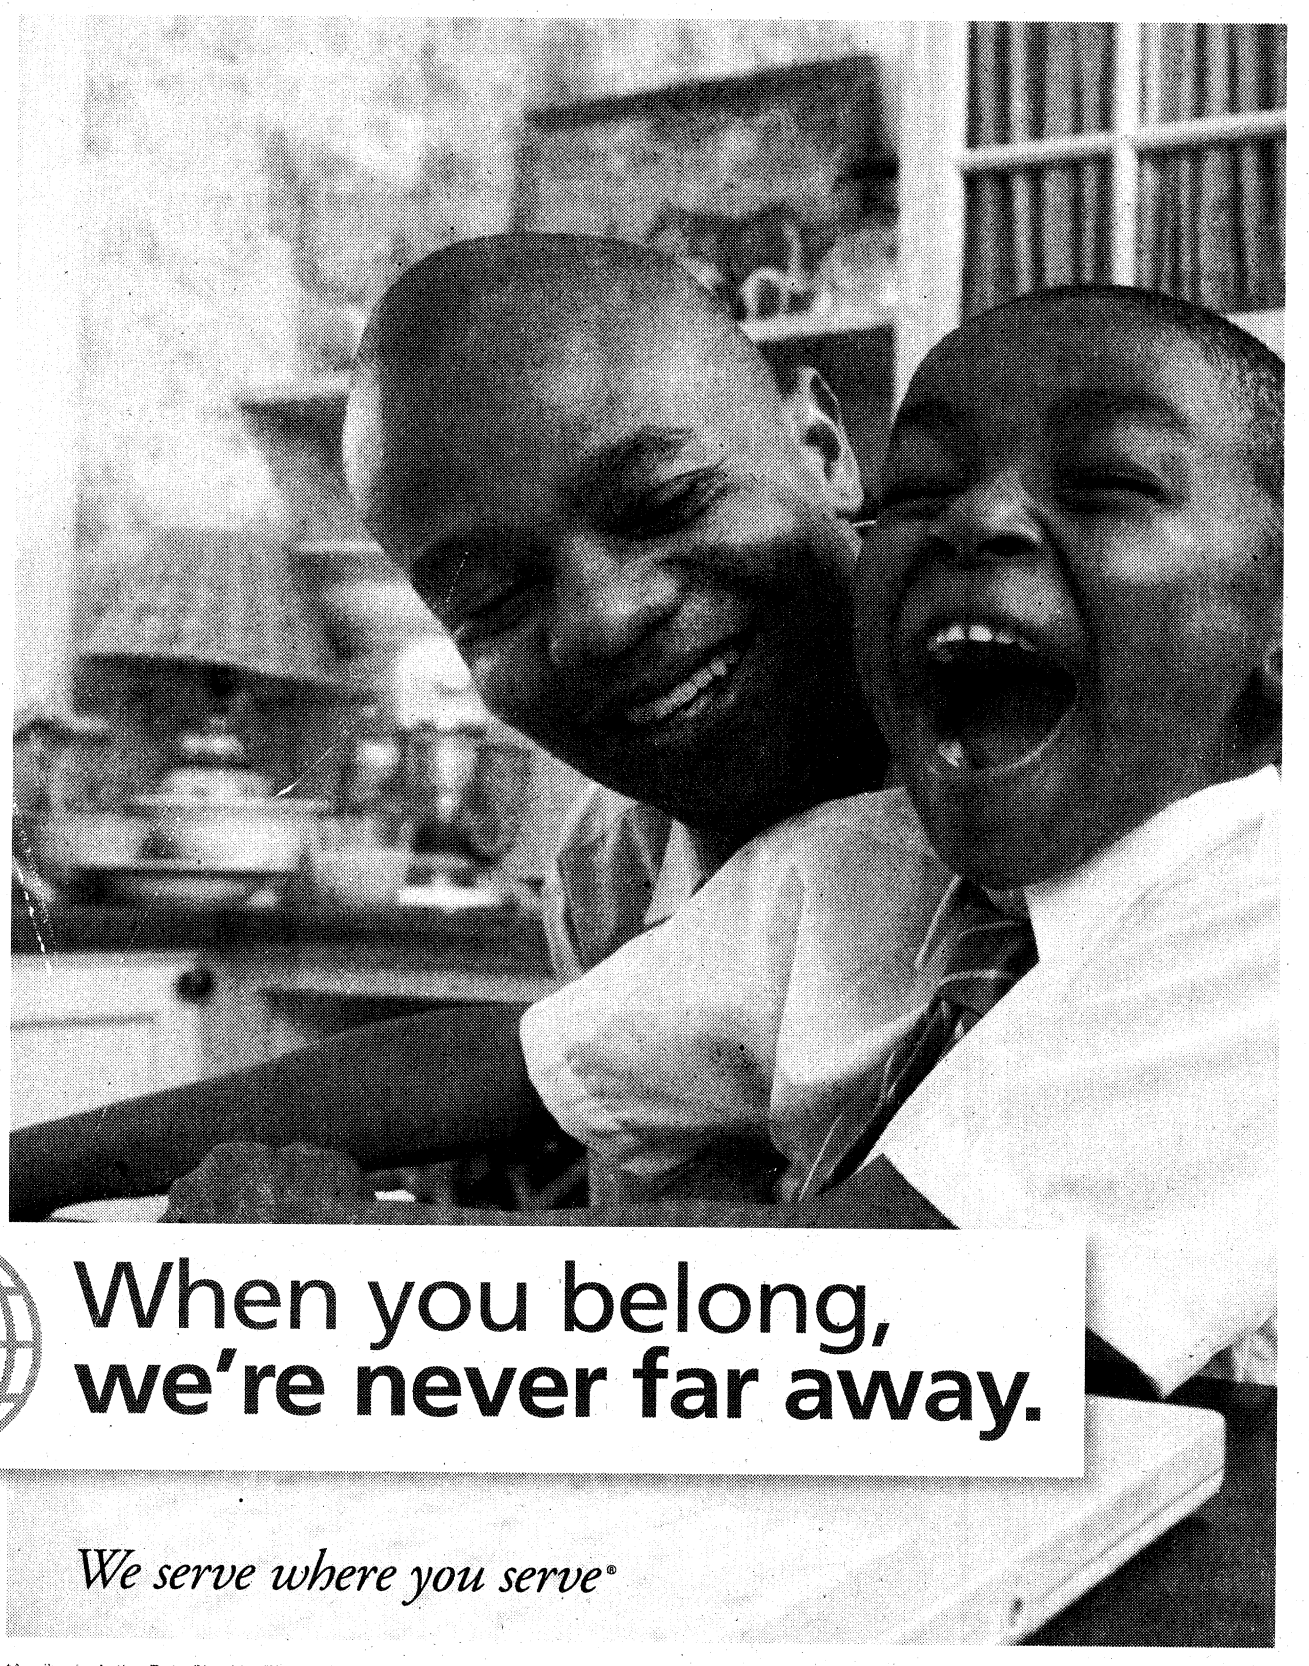
The registration and health assessment forms can either be picked up at the central registration office or downloaded from the Fort Benning MWR Web site.

The CYS Automated Management System, the software required by the Department of Defense for registering participants, is another reason parents may experience longer wait times and is an Army issue, not just a Fort Benning one, Carroll-Meredith said.

The Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command continues to field updates to the program and is working on a pilot project to allow online registration, she said.

Online registration will allow parents to initiate registration, make payments and select classes and activities for their child using their personal computer.

In the meantime, Carroll-Meredith said she recommends parents avoid peak registration hours, such as lunch time, and come prepared with all their paperwork completed for each child.



To further assist families, credit card systems were added to each of the CYSS facilities for convenient bill paying, Carroll-Meredith said.

This lessens the burden on families rushing from work to pick up their children and then trying to reach the central office before closing time to pay their bill, she said.

For more information or to download registration forms, visit the Fort Benning MWR Web site at www.benningmwr.com and click on the CYSS link or call 706-545-2079.

The central registration office is located inside Building 104 on Marchant Ave.

ACP1: Officials to solve outbound traffic issue

a tool routinely used by officials to make determinations about traffic issues, he said.

"We found out we can afford one shift there," Clarke said. "We did it during the highest volume period."

In the next couple of months, a "technical security solution" will be put in place at ACP1 allowing 24-hour outbound traffic, he said.

Walls said that should ease concerns of local merchants worried about a drop in business because of fewer motorists on South Lumpkin Road.

Officials will assess the change's effect on Fort Benning in the next six months to a year, he said. The garrison or city of Columbus could make adjustments.

During major events on post, the gate can be kept open longer to accommodate larger crowds, Walls said.

Meanwhile, construction is under way for a new five-lane ACP that will access Harmony Church off U.S. Highway 27. The project is about 18 months away from completion.

"It's going to be bigger and better than the one on (Interstate) 185," Clarke said. "It will be a phenomenal facility, totally state-of-the-art."

Overall expansion at Harmony Church will bring a population boom to the area. But officials aren't certain how that will affect traffic patterns around Fort Benning.

"There are too many variables (and) a lot you can't predict," Clarke said. "That changes all your traffic. That's why we constantly measure it."

The buildup along Dixie Road in recent years created bottlenecks that caught planners off guard, Walls said.

He said workers will begin widening the road to four lanes sometime this year. Congestion also has eased since the relocation of Building 4 offices to Ridgway Hall.

"It's all about synchronization," Walls said. "There's so much growth going on at Benning that it's critical to make traffic part of the equation … Even the slightest traffic jams can cause problems around post."

Clarke said construction and facility moves have a "ripple effect" on traffic streams.

"Every time you change those dynamics, you have to learn what the new traffic pattern will be afterward," he said. "Sometimes, we're behind the mission. It takes some time to adjust."

Stimulus: Helps with renovations

"It enables us to pursue projects in the DPW this year that we normally would've had to wait until next year for. It's extra funding," he said.

"Every week, we are required to update the status of every one of these projects we received money for. It's a little extra work, but gosh, that's a small price to pay for the free money."

Nearly a third of it will go toward refurbishing Building 2832, a three-story, 39,000-square-foot barracks used by the 75th Ranger Regiment's 3rd Ranger Battalion.

Other major projects at Fort Benning include: $3.26 million to decentralize the boiler plant at Building 397 and construct eight standalone units; $2.9 million to repair and upgrade a storm sewer between Wold Avenue and Ingersoll Street; $1.53 million to repair and modernize a storm sewer from Sigerfoos Road to Wold; and $1.5 million to replace the roof at Kyle Hall for the 29th Infantry Regiment.

In addition, DPW will spend $1.3 million on repairs to Building 89 for the Defense Military Pay Office; $1.3 million to restore the Army Community Service's Patch School; $1.14 million on interior renovations to Building 72 for the 199th Infantry Brigade; and $1.01 million to upgrade the post's propane peak shaving plant.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Gruden takes over

Former Tampa Bay Buccaneers coach Jon Gruden will replace Tony Kornheiser in ESPN's Monday Night Football booth.

Kornheiser cited his fear of flying as his reason for stepping down.

MNF's 40th season begins with a doubleheader Sept. 14.

Stewart an All-Star

Tony Stewart got the first win for Stewart-Haas Racing at Lowe's Motor Speedway Saturday.

He didn't gain any points in the Cup championship, but he did walk away with $1 million. Stewart was the first driver and owner to win the All-Star race since Geoff Bodine did it in 1994.

This week's race, the Coca-Cola 600, is also at Lowe's Motor Speedway.

Coverage begins at 5 p.m. Sunday on Fox.

Girl power

Rachel Alexandra, a filly, beat out the males at the 134th Preakness Stakes on Saturday at Pimlico.

She became the first filly to win the Preakness since 1924 and also the first horse to win the Kentucky Oaks and then the Preakness.

Mine That Bird, the Kentucky Derby winner, lost to Rachel Alexandra by one length.

Although she seems to be on a roll, Rachel Alexandra isn't a definite yet for the Belmont Stakes on June 6.

T.O. shows up

Terrell Owens showed up to voluntary minicamp for the Buffalo Bills Monday, before, of course, filming for his VH-1 reality show.

Owens signed with the Bills for one year and $6.5 million in March.

Sign of the times?

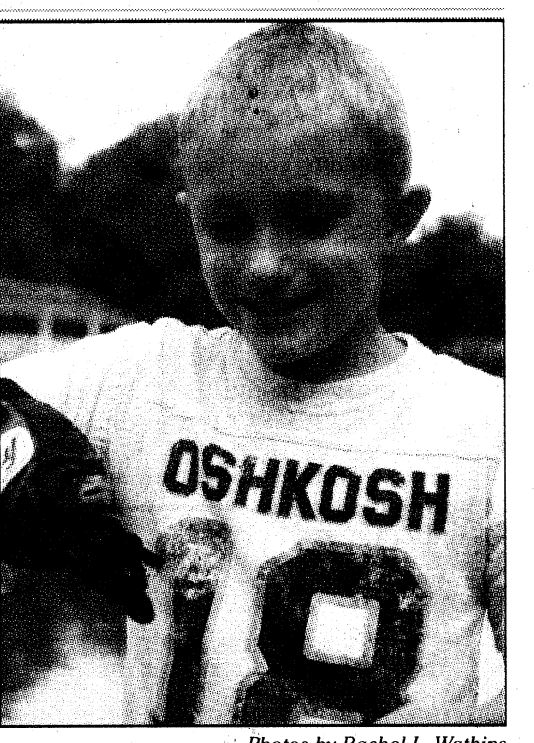
Twenty Belgian bodybuilders grabbed their gear and fled when doping officials showed up before a bodybuilding championship in Brussels, Belgium.

The championship had to be canceled.

During last year's championship, three-quarters of the competitors tested positive.

It's about time

Fox Network announced Monday that most World Series and American League Championship games will begin earlier this year.



Weeknight games are expected to begin at 7:57 p.m., about a half-hour earlier than last year.

Saturday games could be even earlier, and Sunday games will begin after NFL coverage.

Hooked on fishing

Four-year-old Trygbe Wilson shows a fish he caught at the rodeo to his father. "I love fishing with my dad — it's lots of fun," he said. Seventy-six children participated in the rodeo and caught a combined total of 720 fish.

After catching a channel catfish, 7-year-old Austin Allen felt another tug on his fishing line Saturday at Russ Pond as he waited for another fish to bite.

"I know I got another one," he said as he reeled in another catfish. "Whoa! That's a big fish."

Despite the threat of rain, Allen and 75 other children ages 4 to 15 participated in the annual Child, Youth & School Services Fishing Rodeo.

Eight-year-old Naiman Taylor doesn't like eating fish but he likes to catch them, he said.

"I'm going to give the fish I catch to my grandma so she can cook them and eat

Benning paintballer group seeks more players

Paintballers meet at 1 p.m. Sundays on Main Post

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The sting of a paintball doesn't intimidate SPC Jason Scott.

"Paintball is a sport for those who love an adrenaline rush — you get bumps and bruises, but it's worth it," said Scott, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "You go out and hunt other players knowing they are just as sneaky as you are."

Scott suits up in camouflage, a mask and arms himself with paintballs and a gun every Sunday to play paintball at Woodland Paintball Area on Main Post.

Scott, who has played paintball for a year, said he would play paintball every hour of the day if he could because it relieves stress. He has a philosophy on playing a good game of paintball.

"Hide really well and run really fast," he said. "The key is to hit the other player with a paintball before he hits you."

SSG Isaac Duncanson said the key to winning is accuracy.

"You don't have to shoot a lot of paintballs, you just have to be accurate," he said. "And finding a good hiding spot is important too. I usually hide, wait for other players to come toward me, and shoot them from behind."

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey, who has played paintball for three years and plays paintball every Sunday, enjoys the tactical part of paintball, he said.

"I like figuring out how I can outsmart the other players and come up with different strategies to outmaneuver the other team," he said.

5th Platoon, B Company, wins WTB Cup

WTB competes in weeklong competition

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

After a weeklong battle for the Warrior Transition Battalion's Commander's Cup, 5th Platoon, B Company, took the first place platoon trophy Saturday after competing in events including volleyball, horseshoes, softball, a talent show, shooting and fishing. Platoons from every company faced off against each other during the competition. B Company made a clean sweep by winning the company first-place trophy.

"There was some pretty tough competition," said SGT Dexter Graham of the 5th Platoon, B Co. "It took internal will and skill to win this."

More than 100 Soldiers competed in the platoon and company championships.

"This is the first year we have had the WTB Commander's Cup and we want to make it a yearly event," said CPT Robert Strawley, A Co. executive officer. "This unit is unique because it's a transition unit, so Soldiers could be here only six months to a year and then they move on," he said. "While they are here, we want them to feel like they are still part of a unit."

The championship builds esprit de corps and it shows previously wounded warriors "you have made it this far, now look what you can do," Strawley said.

SFC Marvin Churchwell, A Co., said the commander's cup raised his spirits.

"The cup gives Soldiers a chance to not think about their injury and get out and have fun," he said.

SPC Shawn Young said the cup was a way to escape from the "daily grind."

"A lot of Soldiers are facing a lot of different stresses in their life with injuries, so it's nice to break away and forget about it for awhile," he said.

Young, who has a back injury, said he couldn't participate in all of the events, but was happy to go fishing and throw horseshoes.

"I used to fish a lot but I haven't fished since I joined the Army, so it was nice to get back out there," he said.

All in all, it was a "friendly" competition, Young said.

Benning team takes first place

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning team closed the season with a 7-1-2 record.

The Fort Benning 14-and-younger coed soccer team ended the season as league champion in its division. The club defeated five teams for first place and earned bragging rights as the best team. The championship was based off a point system, tallied after the season's final game May 3.

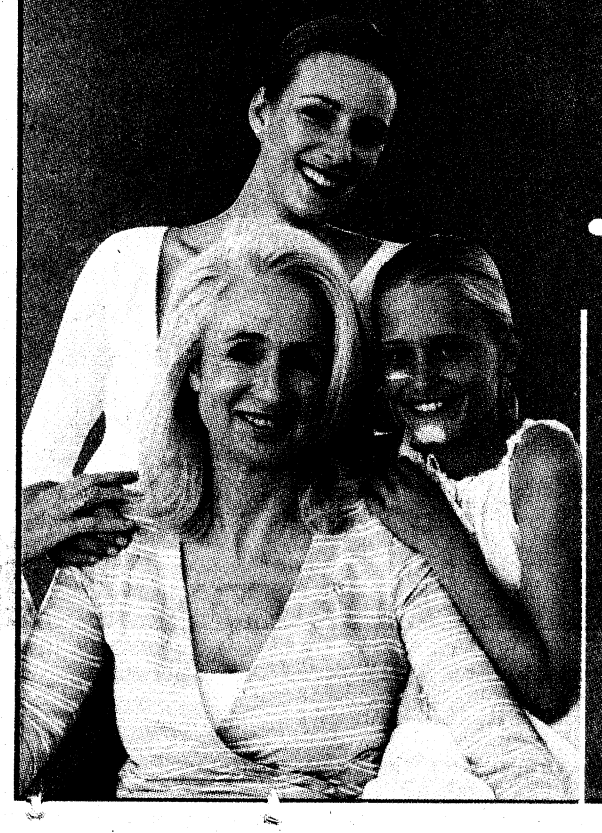
Fort Benning finished the season with a 7-1-2 record, claiming first by a half-point.

"Our team has really come a long way since the beginning of the season — I have seen a lot of improvement," said Coach Julio Miranda.

Miranda said the players have a better knowledge of the game and how to play their positions on the field.

Forward Colin Ryan, 14, said being No. 1 in the division was a surprise to him.

"There were some pretty tough games and some of them were really close, but we were able to pull together and get the win," he said. "Being the best in our division is a big accomplishment for the team."



Teamwork and good communication helped the team improve during the three month season, said 14-year-old Adam Wolf, who played forward.

"The beginning of the season was a little rough, but toward the end, we started working together," he said.

Out of the mouths of babes

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

I have never been one to watch NASCAR, but lately I have rediscovered the excitement of racing due to my 9-year-old nephew, Brian.

Since he lives outside Phenix City, he follows the Benning Challenge NASCAR picks closely.

In fact, he has picked two winners out of four races for a total of 480 points.

If he were competing in the challenge, that would be good enough for fourth place — not bad for a 9-year-old.

During last week's All-Star race in Charlotte, N.C., I tuned in to watch the race. Why? Just to root for the driver he picked — Tony Stewart.

Although it pained Brian to pick against his favorite driver, Jeff Gordon, he picked Stewart. Stewart won the race, and for some reason, I felt just as much joy for my nephew as I would if I had picked the winner.

It is funny how the excitement you see in a child's face and hear in their voice can be contagious to those around them.

Since my children are grown and gone from home, the more I am around my nephew the younger I feel.

Every time I go past a youth sporting event, I get the same type of feeling — probably the reason I began coaching youth sports many years ago.

Although I don't coach anymore, I do get a chance to go out and catch a game every now and then and I see the same type of enthusiasm in the athletes — and the parents.

I can't count the times I watched mothers run the sidelines while her son runs the ball in a football game, or the number of times I heard parents chattering "hey, batter, batter" at a baseball field.

Whether it is the Benning Challenge, youth sports or watching a game with a child, sports can bring children and adults together in many rewarding ways.

From giving adults and children something to talk about or providing lasting memories, sports can bridge the gap between generations — and make you feel younger — even if you aren't playing.

This weekend, I will take my own "youth pill" by watching the NASCAR race on TV while rooting for my nephew's pick, Jeff Gordon. It is the first time he has picked his favorite driver, and win or lose, I am sure we will have something to talk about.

I feel younger already — go Jeff!

SPC Jason Scott hides behind a paint-splotched barrier in a game of paintball at Woodland Paintball Area. He has a philosophy on playing a good game of paintball. "Hide really well and run really fast," he said. "The key is to hit the other player with a paintball before he hits you."

Paintball: Gun rentals available

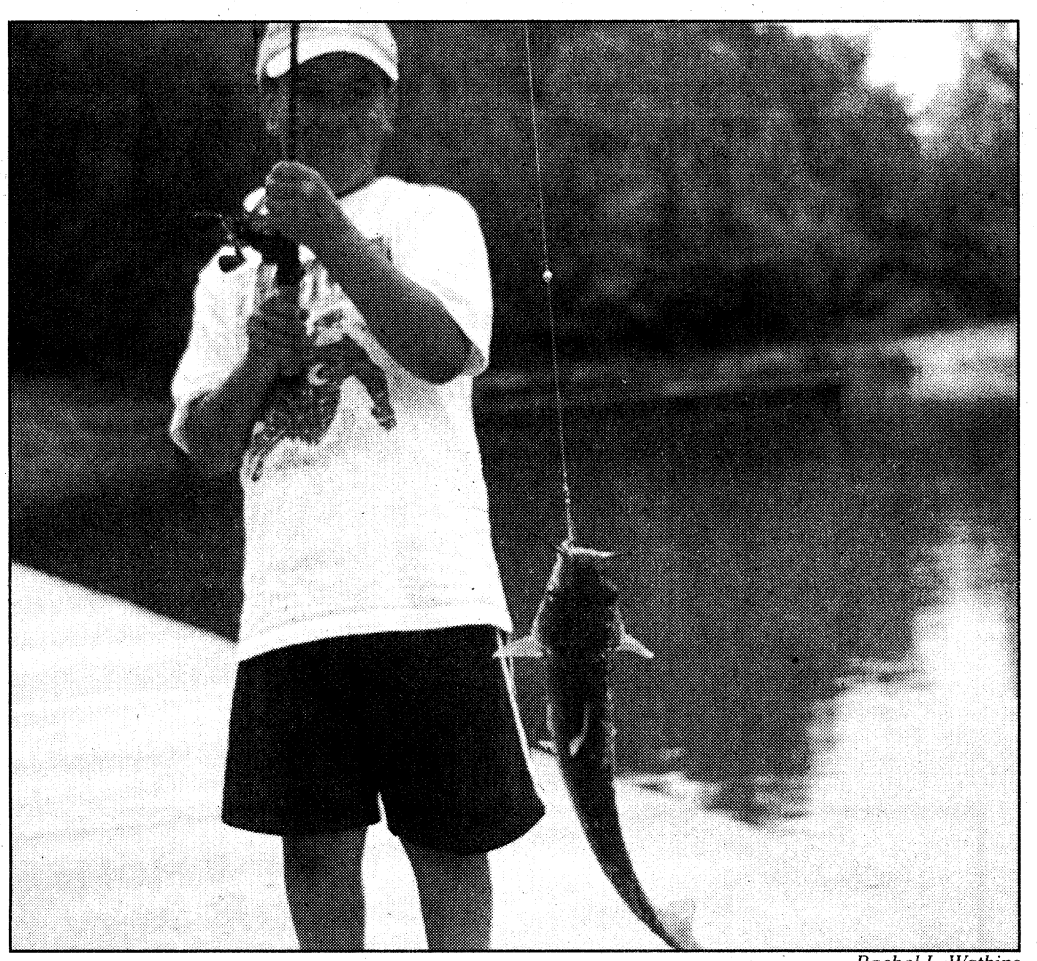
The more people playing the better, he said. The number of players has dwindled since the winter and the paintball group is always looking for more players.



Everyone is invited, whether they are experts or beginners, Garvey said.

The paintball group meets at 1 p.m. every Sunday at Woodland Paintball Area on Dixie Road, except when it rains.

Players can bring their own paintball supplies or rent paintball supplies from Outdoor Recreation with a military ID, but they must be rented by Saturday because Outdoor Recreation is closed on Sundays. The paintball rental is $30 with a $30 deposit and includes a gun, mask, hopper, 500 paintballs and a 20-ounce carbon dioxide tank. For more information on rentals, call 706-545-7978.

Scott also offers rentals at $30 each, but doesn't include paintballs. Scott said there are no reservations required to play, just show up. Players should wear long-sleeved shirts, pants, a vest, boots or sneakers and camouflage.

For more information, e-mail Scott at Jason.R.Scott@us.army.mil.

"Even if we don't catch any fish, I'm happy to spend time with my son — I cherish these moments," said Erik, who will deploy next fall. "It's good to get outside and spend some quality time with my son."

After fishing for three hours, the children turned in their fish count and had a combined total of 720 fish.

Contestants from each age group with the most fish caught within three hours earned prizes including bait and tackle kits and fishing poles.

Fort Benning wins at U.S. Army Junior Open Air Rifle Championship

Rachel L. Watkins

Fort Benning's Breanna Kasl and Arielle Mouhot shoot as Andrea Vautrin rests her eyes at the 40-shot relay Saturday at the Pool International Shooting Complex. The Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club took home a first-place precision class team win.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club took first place in the precision class team competition at the U.S. Army Junior Open Air Rifle Championship Friday and Saturday at Pool International Shooting Complex. The Fort Benning club received a trophy, medals and bragging rights as the best precision team competing against 20 teams from across the nation.

Fort Benning's Andrea Vautrin, a 17-year-old junior at Chattahoochee County High School, took second place in the precision class.

"There were some really tough competitors," Vautrin said. "I could have done better, but placing second individually overall is good and I'm ecstatic the team placed first. We worked hard for this."

The championship was two days long, with two sporter, two precision and two top eight competitions.

In the precision class, shooters fired 40 rounds in the standing position each day, and in the sporter class, shooters shot 20 rounds in three positions — standing, kneeling and prone. Each team participated in one class.

Vautrin said the championship's most challenging part was maintaining focus during the 40-shot relay.

"It was difficult to focus for that long," she said. "I haven't shot that long before in the standing position."

Breanna Kasl, stepdaughter of SSG Carl Cazee and a 17-year-old junior at Chattahoochee County High School, said the competition was more of a mental challenge than a physical challenge.

"You have to have a positive attitude when you shoot for that long and be confident that you will succeed," she said. "And focus is important too. The slightest movement can affect the accuracy of your shot."

Kasl placed 10th overall against 22 shooters in the individual competition.

"I think I could have shot better the first day — my nerves were getting to me," she said.

"I came back the second day confident, calm, focused and rested and did better and made the top eight."

Fort Benning's Arielle Mouhot placed third and Fort Benning's Jimmie Cooper placed fifth in the individual precision class championship.

Emily Quiner of the Minnesota Centershots from Brooklyn Park Minn., earned first in the individual precision class competition.

Yvonne Swiontek of Zion Benton High School, Illinois, took first in the sporter individual championship and Zion Benton High School took first in the sporter class team competition.

Miss Georgia contestants visit Sand Hill

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When basic trainees arrived at a Sand Hill obstacle course Saturday, they were greeted with a surprise — 41 Miss Georgia pageant contestants.

"I had heard rumors there might be some pageant contestants out here, but we didn't really expect them to be," said PV2 Wilson Jackson, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment. "But they were there, and they were all really nice. It was a blast."

The contestants' visit to the obstacle course was part of A Salute to Our Troops, a program created by members of the boards of the Miss Columbus and Miss Southern Rivers pageants to give pageant contestants a firsthand look at a day in the life of a Soldier. Contestants participated in initial tactical training, had lunch with Soldiers in a dining facility and participated in a basic rifle marksmanship course and a confidence course. In the evening, pageant contestants presented a concert for Soldiers.

Sherilyn Johnson, co-executive director of the Miss Columbus and Miss Southern Rivers pageants and one of the creators of A Salute to Our Troops, said the program grew out of her desire to put on a USO-style show for Soldiers while giving pageant contestants a meaningful experience.

"I didn't want the girls to just stand onstage and wave," she said. "I wanted them to feel a part of what these young men do."

Now in its seventh year, the program has grown beyond Johnson's expectations, evolving from a tour of the installation to a hands-on event that has changed the lives of many pageant contestants like Lauren Edmunds, who participated in her third salute.

The 18K resolution of Imax Theatre at Patriot Park's screen is nine times higher than that of a regular cinema.

Imax offers viewers big picture, better sound

Kristin Molinaro

The Imax Theatre at Patriot Park beckons moviegoers to immerse themselves in the larger-than-life action of Hollywood hits this summer.

The Dark Knight will run a final weekend at Imax before the theater kicks off a summer filled with big-name movies such as Monsters vs. Aliens in 3D, Star Trek, Night at the Museum 2 and Transformers 2.

The Imax theater, one of only three in the state and 182 worldwide, opened in March inside the National Infantry Museum.

The immense size of its five-story-high screen, comparable to the Columbus Bank and Trust building in downtown Columbus, overwhelms the audience with sights and sounds in a way regular cinema can't, said Joe Kleiman, director of attractions and Imax programming.

"When you go to a movie theater, you are seeing a film. With Imax, you are experiencing it," Kleiman said.

"It's amazing. We wondered if it would make a difference if we sat in the front row versus the back row. We sat in the middle and were completely enveloped by the movie. We learned it doesn't matter where you sit," said Melinda Topor, who attended a showing of Mysteries of Egypt with her husband, retired Air Force Tech Sgt. Dave Topor.

From the design of the auditorium's 12,000-watt sound system to the 18K resolution of the film, the advantages of the Imax theater are as clear as the images displayed on its 70-foot-wide screen, Kleiman said.

The Imax theater offers nine times higher film resolution than found at most cinemas, he said.

The $6 million theater in south Columbus houses an auditorium with stadium-style seating and two elevators for wheelchair access to both the lower and

Student wins national art award

Lillian Harris loves to create art, and now her talent and passion have been recognized nationally.

Harris, a fourth-grader at Stowers Elementary School, won second place in the Army category of the Armed Services YMCA annual art contest. The contest is open to children of military families in first through 12th grades and receives thousands of entries each year. To participate, children must draw a picture illustrating their military family. A first and second place winner is chosen from each branch of service, and all winning artwork is featured on the ASYMCA Web site and on a poster for Military Family Month that is distributed to members of Congress and Department of Defense officials. As a second place winner, Harris won a $100 U.S. savings bond.

"I wanted to enter the contest because I thought it would be fun, and it would be really cool if I won," Harris said.

City converts rails into trails

The Rails to Trails project will extend from the 14th Street pedestrian bridge to Psalmond Road. The project could take up to 18 months.

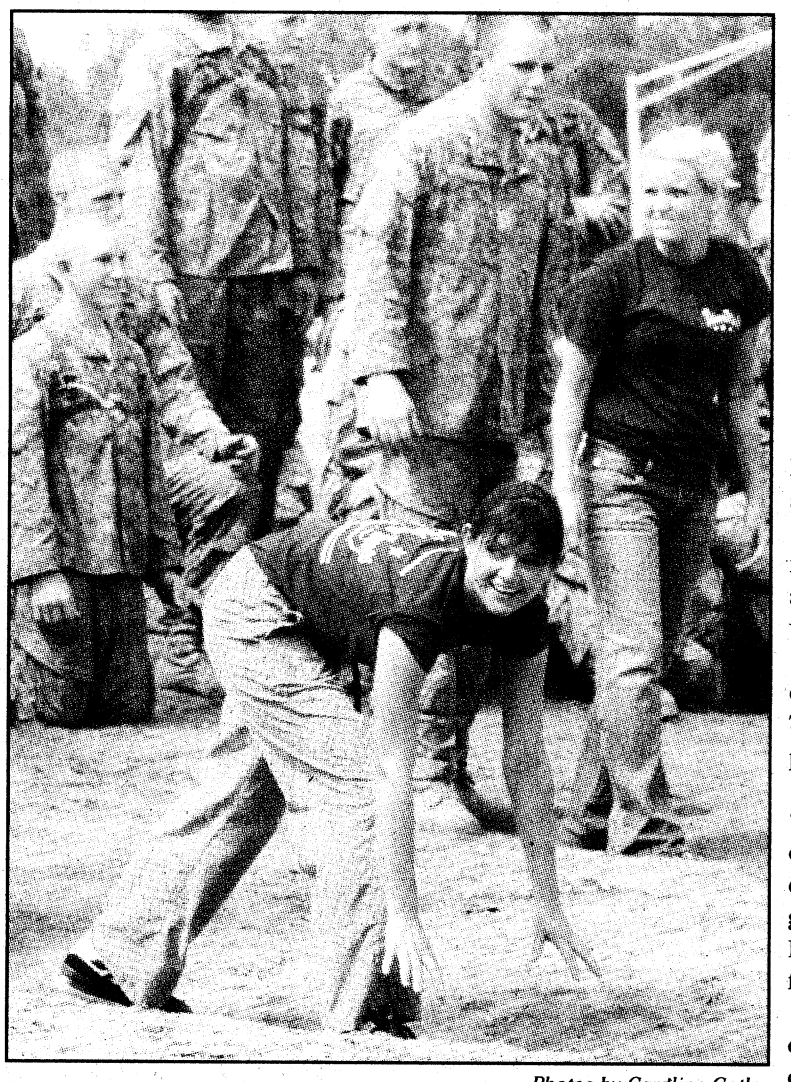
THE BAYONET

The city planning office broke ground this month on a project to convert sections of abandoned railway line into 11 miles of biking and walking trails in downtown Columbus.

The trail will feature a 12-foot wide paved path for biking, walking and jogging. It will also offer amenities including landscaping, benches, rest areas, trash receptacles, signs and easy access to shopping, dining and parking locations.



"The trail will tie commercial, residential and industrial areas together," said city project manager Rick Jones.

The project, part of the national Rails to Trails movement, seeks to revitalize sections of the city while emphasizing alternative transportation, Jones said.

The land, purchased by the Columbus Consolidated Government from the Norfolk Southern Railroad, was funded by a voter-approved Special Purpose Local Option Sales Tax in "The first year I did this, I was 18," Edmunds said.

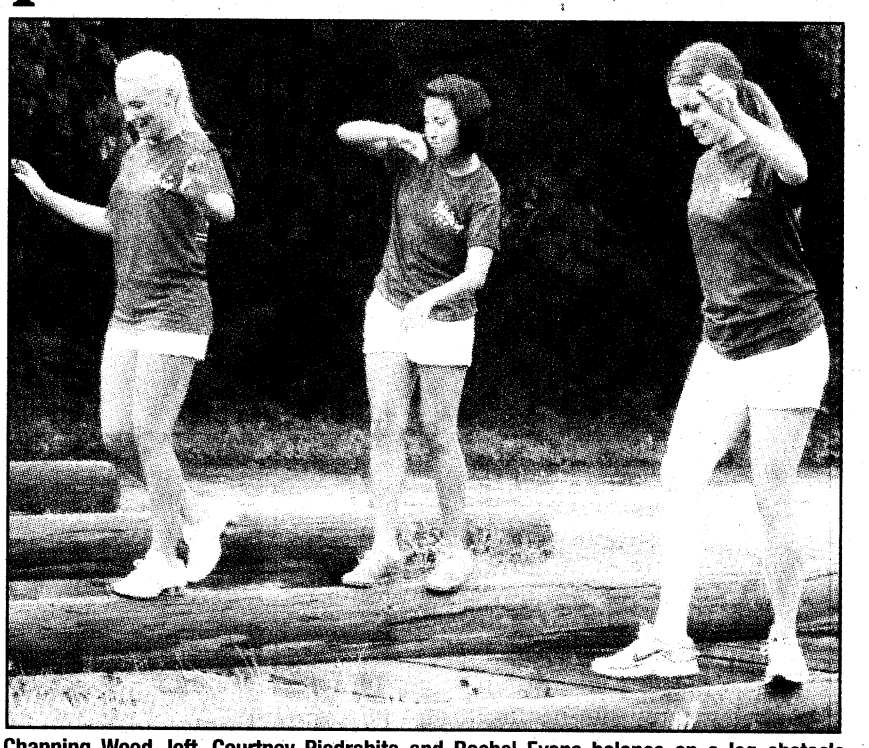
"We sat down to lunch and one Soldier told me he was also 18. I asked him, 'Why are you here? Why are you doing this?' A tear rolled down his cheek and he said, "I'm doing it for you, ma'am.' It gives me chills to this day. I'm here because they are doing it for me and they don't even know who I am."

Ashley Voyles, who participated in her first A Salute to Our Troops, said she learned a lot about the Army.



"It put (the military) in perspective for me," she said. "I'm just so amazed and even more thankful now for what they do."

Darlenda McNaull, event coordinator, said A Salute to Our Troops has had a ripple effect in the pageant contestants' lives.

"One of the parents said to me, 'The daughter I dropped off at 8 o'clock this morning is not the daughter I picked up,'" she said. "The girl's grandfather had been at the Normandy landing and she said she felt like he talked to her that day."

The day was not only an opportunity for the pageant contestants to change their views, but also for Soldiers to change theirs, McNaull said.

"They might think because they're beauty queens, they won't do (the activities), but they jump right in," she said. "The Soldiers get to see these girls in a different light."

Channing Wood, left, Courtney Piedrahita and Rachel Evans balance on a log obstacle Saturday on Sand Hill as part of their visit to Fort Benning for A Salute to Our Troops.

Voyles said she relished getting "sweaty, dirty and rough," as she called it.

"It was exciting to see them go through the obstacle course like we did," said PV2 Armando Estrada. "Their visit definitely gave us a boost."

SSG Todd Wilson, a drill sergeant, said he appreciated the pageant contestants' support.

"Not only does it say a lot for the Miss Georgia contestants, it also says a lot for these guys," he said. "It lets them know there are a lot of people who care for what they do."

Voyles said she hoped to participate in the program again next year.

"It lets them know somebody out there besides their drill sergeant supports them and wants to see them succeed," she said.

1999.

"There will be (areas) along the trail giving visitors the impression of being in dense, wooded areas when they are actually in the middle of town," Jones said.

There are plans to offer retail and playground areas along the trail itself as well, Jones said.

The trail will be completed in three phases over the next 12 to 18 months, Jones said.

The first phase of the trail, currently under construction, will stretch from the 14th Street pedestrian bridge to Columbus State University.

The second phase will continue from the university to Cooper Creek Park, and the third will extend the trail to Psalmond Road.

The second and third phases may begin construction as early as late summer, Jones said.

Jones said he expects the trail to be completed by the summer of 2010.

The trail will be open daily from dawn to dusk.

Sharon Del Gobbo, chose to submit for the contest.

"I told the students to draw something that would make the judges stop and look, and she really took that to heart," Del Gobbo said. "She thinks of things a little bit differently than other kids her age. Instead of just having her family parachute out of a plane, she also had her dog parachuting. She made it more interesting for the people looking at it."

Harris said the contest was an opportunity to share her pride in her family with the rest of the country.

"My favorite thing is to draw about my feelings," she said. "And when I was drawing (the picture), my feelings were how perfect I wanted my family to be, because that's how they are."

Harris said she is proud of her father's service.

"He helps other people have a free country," she said.

Joseph said his daughter has always been patriotic, and has shown increasing interest in understanding the military.

"Lately, she's been taking more of an interest in how the Army works," he said. "If I'm watching the History Channel, she'll sit down with me and ask questions like, 'How do you get to be a general?'"

In the long term, Harris said she hopes to study art in college, and perhaps one day become a professional artist.

"I can definitely see her continuing to create art," Del Gobbo said. "She's very organized in her drawing, and she really thinks a lot about what she's doing. She usually extends beyond the instructions I give on a project and carries it out further than I had outlined. She enjoys it very much."

In the meantime, Harris said she would continue creating artwork and spending time outdoors hiking and enjoying nature, another one of her favorite hobbies.

DoD promotes participation in World No Tobacco Day

WWW.UCANQUIT2.ORG

FALLS CHURCH, Va. — The last Monday in May is Memorial Day, a day set aside to honor the men and women who gave their lives in service to their country. Living freedom to the fullest by reducing unnecessary health risks is one way to honor the memories of those who have died.

Just around the corner from Memorial Day is World No Tobacco Day on May 31, sponsored by the World Health Organization. This year, for the first time, the Department of Defense is endorsing the observance of WNTD by encouraging military personnel to participate.

The effort is part of the DoD's multiyear tobacco cessation campaign, Quit Tobacco — Make Everyone Proud.

"On Memorial Day, when we reflect on the sacrifices our fallen heroes made so that we can live free, it seems that World No Tobacco Day comes at a perfect time," said CPT David Arday, a physician and U.S. Public Health Service officer and chairman of the DoD Alcohol and Tobacco Advisory Committee.

"Freedom from tobacco addiction is not a sacrifice — it's a way to live our lives to honor those who gave us our freedom," Arday said.

"This is a great opportunity for servicemen and women to connect to others on their installation, across the country and around the globe in a worldwide event to take a public stand and make a personal commitment in the fight against tobacco."

Health promotions staff members at installations are encouraging their patients and clients to sign the online pledge at www.ucanquit2.org/facts/WNTD and accept the challenge to live tobacco free on May 31.

There are free promotional and informational items available to order or download online to help stage events, plus specially designed e-cards visitors can send to encourage friends and family to give up tobacco.

Military personnel also can use e-cards to announce their intention to quit.

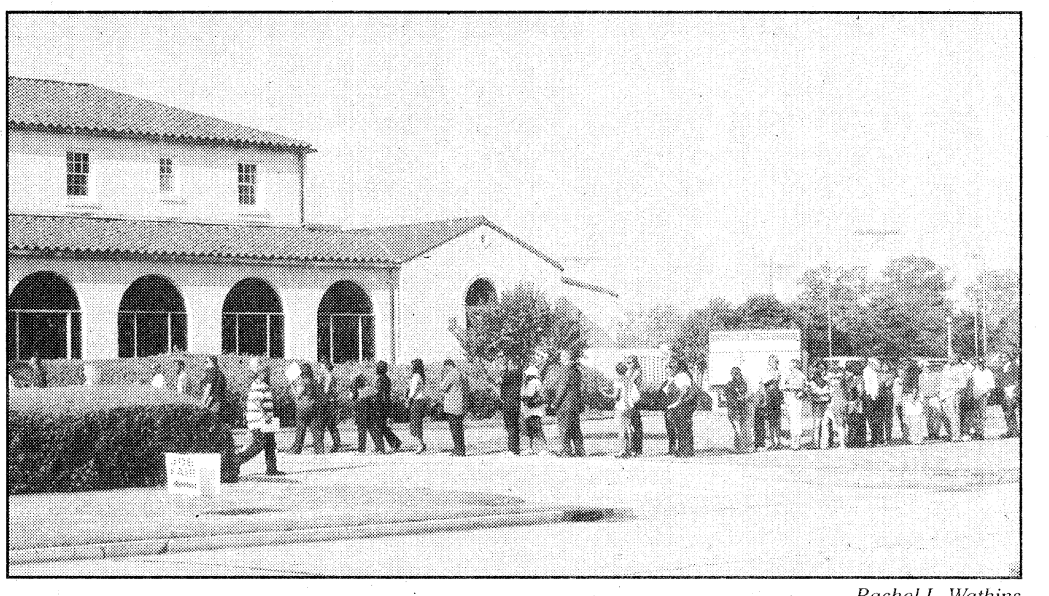
The campaign headquarters at www.ucanquit2.org offers the latest high-tech ways to connect with others on the road to becoming tobacco-free. The site has launched a Twitter page at www.twitter.com/ucanquit2, and anyone who signs up can follow the site's activities and news, including tobacco and other related health information.

Visitors can take advantage of other social networking opportunities, such as being a friend at MySpace, tuning in to the videos and making comments at the YouTube page and becoming a fan of the campaign's Facebook page.

On Facebook, there's a new feature that allows users to announce to others they've quit and to congratulate friends and family who've made the commitment to quit tobacco.

For those who want their own private area to concentrate on tobacco cessation, the campaign Web site offers users "My Quit Space," where they can create a customized quit plan and calendar.

Blogging options include starting a private blog or publishing it for others to read and make comments.



The site has gone mobile, which is perfect for the enlisted community.

Users can point their mobile browsers to http://wap.ucanquit2.org, the new mobile UCanQuit2 Web site, to find cessation programs across America to help them quit tobacco and access important tobacco cessation news.

Getting support from others is an important weapon in winning the battle against tobacco, which is recognized as an obstacle to optimal readiness and performance for the armed services.

"Committing to participate in World No Tobacco Day on May 31, 2009, is a one-day test run for what could be the beginning of a tobacco-free lifestyle for servicemen and women," Arday said.

upper rows. Additionally, a team of experts tested each of the auditorium's 289 seats to ensure each offers the best Imax experience, Kleiman said.

The sound system features 70 speakers and six channels spread throughout the theater, behind the screen and even on the ceiling to surround the audience with sound.

The projection suite includes two $1.5 million projectors.

The benefit of having two projectors is the turn-around time between movies. One movie reel can be loaded on a projector at the same time a different movie is being played onscreen with the other projector, Kleiman said. Also, some movies, such as Monsters vs. Aliens, are played in 3D and need two projectors running simultaneously in order to produce the three-dimensional effect for the audience.

The suite also includes a $200,000 digital cinema projector to play Blu-Ray DVDs on the big screen for special events.

All the technology at the Imax theater translates to the ultimate movie-going experience, Kleiman said.

To capitalize on what the theater offers visitors, Kleiman said the theater would soon have special movie nights.

Starting with Saving Private Ryan on Memorial Day, the theater will begin showing a military-themed movie at 7 p.m. every Monday for $6.

Other films on the Military Monday slate include The Longest Day playing June 1 and episodes of Band of Brothers later in the year.

Kleiman said there is a plan to bring video-gaming nights and themed movie nights, such as Big Lebowski night, to Imax.

"We've thought about combining a showing of Big Lebowski with a dinner and bar hour at the Fife and Drum restaurant inside the museum," Kleiman said.

A movie series featuring U2 and the Rolling Stones concerts is planned for September and October. Later in October, the theater plans to feature Halloween flicks. From October to Thanksgiving, the new Harry Potter movie will be at Imax. Because portions of the film were shot in 3D using Imax technology, the scenes will only be viewable in 3D in Imax theaters.

While the theater expands its show times for new movies, the Imax will continue to run documentaries and National Geographic specials that appeal to the military audience.

Everest and Mysteries of Egypt are currently playing at the theater.

Everest documents a group of world-class adventurers as they overcome tragedy and deadly obstacles to complete an expedition to the top of the world, according to the movie's description. The film is directed by David Breshears, who was born in the old hospital on Fort Benning while his father, an airborne major, was stationed at the post, Kleiman said. The film is based upon the book Into Thin Air.

Mysteries of Egypt reveals the truth surrounding the rumors of the Mummy's Curse, the discovery of King Tutankhamun's tomb and the Egyptian way of life. Sweeping panoramic views captured on the Imax screen leave little to the imagination of what it would be like to climb atop a pyramid overlooking the empire of Egypt. The National Geographic film traces the history of the desert civilization, its downfall and its lasting legacy. Omar Sharif narrates the special.

In the fall, Coral Reef Adventure will come to the Imax screen, Kleiman said. The documentary will follow marine biologists as they try to uncover what is causing coral reefs to die. Also in the fall, the Imax will feature a special on the expedition of Lewis and Clark.

The theater does not offer first-run movies, Kleiman said, because there is a movie theater on post receiving the new releases. Kleiman said eventually he would like to see the Imax get more of the first-runs.

In the meantime, the theater is working to continue bringing popular movies to the big screen.

For show times, admission pricing and more information, call 706-685-5800 or visit www.nationalinfantrymuseum.com and click on Imax.

NCO shares love of Army with students

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

As seventh-graders from Blackmon Road Middle School filed off their school buses and made their way down to Essenbager Field, SSG Terry Jones, a platoon sergeant in Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Brigade Special Troops Battalion, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, stood perfectly still.

He held the red guidon in his right hand and stared forward as the children in his platoon gathered around him. Many made jokes and laughed at his military bearing, not knowing what to make of it.

"I wanted to show the pride I held for the organization," Jones said.

"For that day, red platoon was my organization. It was their organization. They needed to see that as long as that guidon was standing tall, they would be, too."

For many students, their field trip to Kelley Hill May 12 was a day away from school. For Jones, it was an opportunity to represent the organization he has devoted his life to.

"The news shows positive images of what we do," he said. "These kids see us serving our country, saving lives and fighting for freedom on the news. I just wanted to maintain that and give them a live example of that."

For one day, Jones was allowed to let the students into his world.

It was an opportunity he enjoyed, he said.

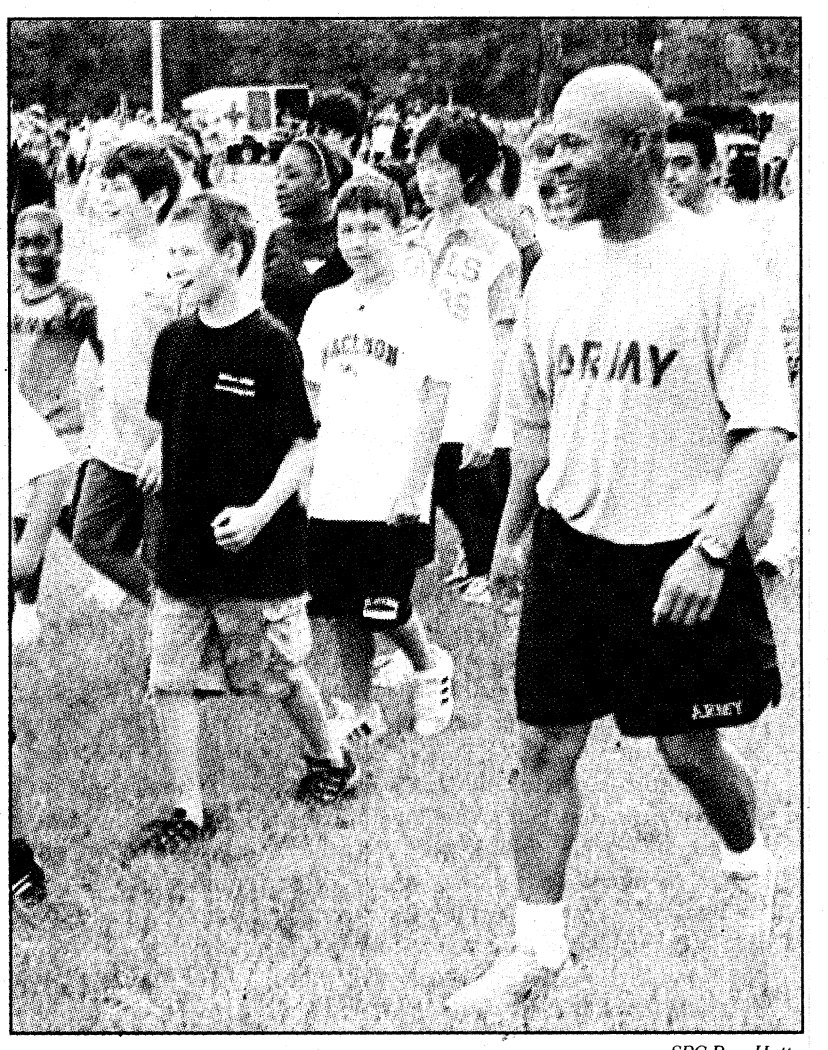
"I know there were a lot of future Soldiers in that group," Jones said. "The Army has taken me all over the world, taken care of my family and helped give my life discipline.

"I just hope the example I set that day helped give one of those children the same opportunity I was given."

Jones led his platoon in a mock physical training session, showed them the equipment he and his fellow Soldiers use to accomplish their missions and let the students try on his gear.

"We take that stuff for granted and don't realize how special it is," he said.

"As Soldiers we can get sidetracked by taskings and extra duties. It can be frustrating. Days like this allow us to get back to having the same pride we had when we first joined."



Jones believes that being around civilians can help Soldiers rediscover why they became Soldiers.

"I saw some of my lesser motivated Soldiers take pride in what they do during that event," he said.

"Everyone was very professional and took pride in what they did. We don't see how important what we do is, sometimes. Events like this remind us."

Jones was quick to point out that in five years, many of the students who participated in the event will be making the decision to join the Army.

"It's not a long time," he said. "You just hope you made the right impression and helped bring a quality person to the organization."

Memorial Day means more than just time for R&R

Chaplain (MAJ) Mike Shellman
RANGER TRAINING BRIGADE

As we approach Memorial Day, I have been thinking about the significance of this day of remembrance and how it moves me to make this a special day, not just a day of extra rest and relaxation. How can we celebrate America's most solemn and patriotic day? As you make plans for Memorial Day, don't only plan on some R&R, but also plan on following these four Rs to ensure you get the most out of this special holiday.

Remember our fallen comrades.

Memorial Day is a time when we stop and think about the men and women who paid the ultimate sacrifice for our freedom. It is a sacred day to all of America's war veterans. With love and longing, we gather on this day of remembrance to honor America's patriots who gave what President Lincoln called the last full measure of devotion. Their ultimate sacrifice serves as a constant reminder of the high cost of freedom and the hope for a better tomorrow.

Remind us to pray for our military.

We are a nation at war. As we celebrate Memorial Day with friends and family, let's remind ourselves to pray for those who are deployed in harm's way. When you pause to remember those who gave their lives to strengthen and preserve the invaluable gift of freedom, also pray that God will empower and protect those who are separated from loved ones and need our prayers and support.

Recommit to the ideals upon which this country was founded.

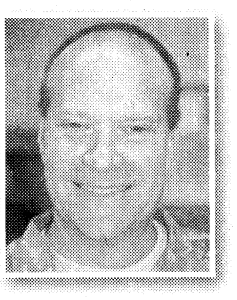
What would our fallen comrades want us to do on this special day? Perhaps they would encourage us to keep on keeping on and not to take our freedoms for granted. Perhaps they would encourage us to recommit ourselves to the ideals upon which this country was founded and hold true to our allegiance.

Rejoice and enjoy our freedoms as Americans.

Memorial Day is a somber day as we remember our fallen comrades of our nation's wars, but it is also a day of celebration of hope that the ideals of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness will shine forever bright in the life of our nation and in the lives of her individual people. I believe our departed comrades would want us to focus on the hopeful prospects of tomorrow and enjoy America's freedom that they courageously defended.

May you and your family enjoy the blessings of God that he has bestowed upon our great nation.

Celebrate Memorial Day in the spirit and fashion in which it was established and keep enjoying the freedoms we have in America.



Communicate fears with spouses before deployment

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Once again more Fort Benning units are going to Iraq. Our units seem to be in a revolving door. Someone is always returning, on R&R or deploying and who knows when the cycle will end. Soon, I pray.

Deployments, dangerous missions and sacrifice are the realities of our chosen profession. I thank God for each of you, Soldiers, spouses and other family members who support us each day. The Army spouse plays a significant part of who we are as Soldiers helping us endure long deployments.

One dynamic of pre-deployment is an emotional withdrawal. Once we know we are going to deploy, we get on the roller coaster of psychological ups and downs. One minute we are having a great time and the next we seem to be down.

I know it is extremely difficult to separate for a year. The days leading up to deployment become difficult. The apprehension about being separated, being left without one another, or being placed in harm's way, increases anxiety in our relationships.

It is common to have tensions rise in the family — especially between a husband and a wife. Fears and concerns aren't always expressed in a healthy manner. Instead of sharing these, we hold them in, failing to clearly communicate our thoughts and feelings to one another.

One thing I did prior to my deployment was to talk about what would happen if I did not come home. I wanted my wife to know if I died, I wanted her to move on with her life with my blessing. I did not want her to think she was betraying me. One spouse I spoke to said she and her husband talked about the funeral arrangements if he did not come home. Unfortunately, he did not. She was grateful they talked about it because she was able to fulfill his final requests. This is something you may want to discuss.

Other topics for discussion include the two, three or five things you, as a couple, would like to do before deployment, what needs to be done around the house and what you want to do as a family before deployment.

Husbands should understand your wives are grieving; they want to spend as much time together as possible before your departure. Women are very relational and want to know you love and honor them.

Wives should understand your husbands love you but often lack the ability to express their feelings clearly.

Emotional preparation and communication before deployment can ease the transition of separation. Do not allow your fears to cause dissension between you and your spouse before a deployment.

The Chaplain Family Life Center is here to help. For more information, call 706-545-1760 or stop by our office at 2606 Dixie Road (Soldiers' Plaza) to make an appointment.

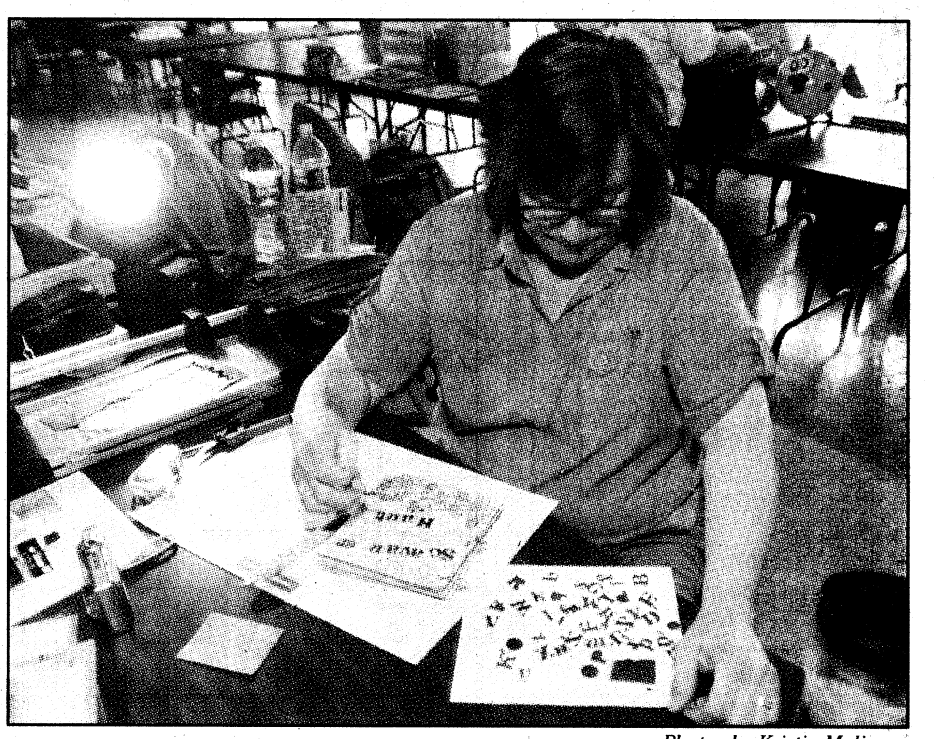
Scrapbooking preserves memories in fun, colorful way

By Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Got a shoebox stuffed with postcards and pictures from that amazing trip to Europe a few years ago or a drawer full of mementos from the day your first child was born you don't know what to do with?

Try visiting your local scrapbook store for ideas on preserving your memories in a colorful, imaginative way.

"Many keep their favorite pictures in boxes under beds, in drawers or in closets. They deserve to be put on display," said Tonya Stargel, owner of Scrapbook Memories in Russell Springs, Ky.



Scrapbooking serves dual purposes: To create one-of-a-kind projects for the home and office, and to preserve pictures in lignin- and acid-free products that prevent yellowing over time, Stargel said.

Scrapbooking enthusiasts, or "scrappers" as they commonly call themselves, have a number of reasons for delving into projects.

For Wendy Blair, medical assistant and mother of three, scrapbooking is stress relieving and relaxing. "There's no laundry, no cooking. It's like a time out for mommy," said Blair, who has scrapbooked for eight years.

Judy Roy, a laboratory and X-ray manager, said the appeal of scrapbooking is she can preserve her family history for future generations.

"I want to build a legacy for my family to treasure," Roy said.

Karen Kemplin works on a scrapbook project during a weekend retreat hosted by her local scrapbook store, Scrapbook Memories. Scrapbooking is a creative way to preserve memories by using lignin- and acid-free paper to prevent pictures from yellowing with age.

Angie Belcher, hairdresser and mother of one, said she began scrapbooking when her daughter was born six years ago.

All three women said they found the local scrapbook store a wonderful resource for getting started.

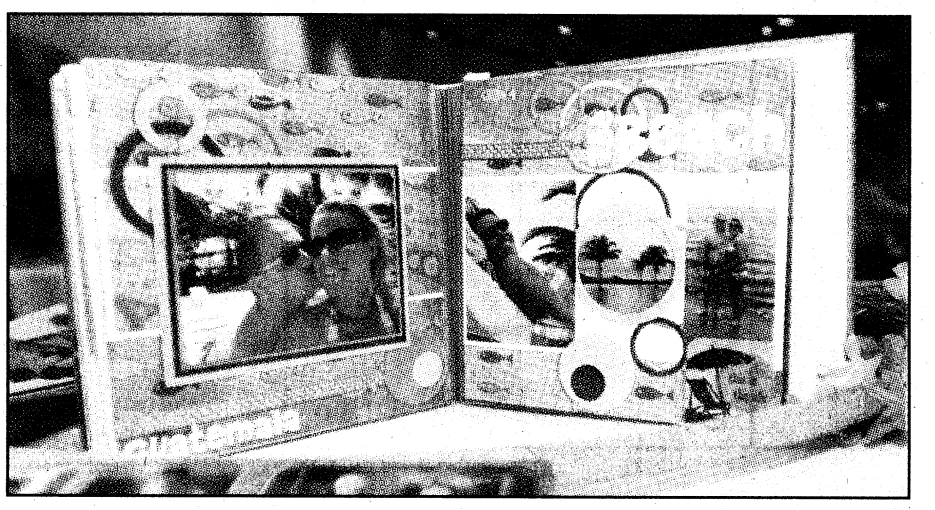
Once she gathered her daughter's baby pictures, Belcher said she went to a scrapbook store and asked for help in learning how to scrapbook.

For those new to scrapbooking, Stargel said she recommends this approach because the staff will generally take the time to demonstrate scrapbook tools and products.

Scrapbook stores are a wonderful resource not only for purchasing scrapbook materials but also to teach concepts of the scrapbook craft itself, Stargel said.

Many stores offer "crop" nights and day activities for scrapbookers to attend.

"Crops" are get togethers, hosted at either a scrapbook store or in someone's home, where fellow scrappers can get together to work on projects, get ideas from each other, learn new techniques and share equipment.



The benefit of attending a crop is the fellowship and the chance to see what others are working on, Stargel said.

Crops aren't the only places scrappers can gain ideas.

"If you are first starting out and want to know where to start, buy a scrapbook magazine. It can give you great ideas," Stargel said.

Roy said she uses the Internet to get

Connor must decide whether Marcus has been sent from the future, or rescued from the past. As Skynet prepares its final onslaught, Connor and Marcus both embark on an odyssey that takes them into the heart of Skynet's operations, where they uncover the terrible secret behind the possible annihilation of mankind.

After learning the clock is ticking on an unstoppable Illuminati time bomb, Langdon flies to Rome, where he joins forces with beautiful and enigmatic Italian scientist Vittoria Vetra. Embarking on a nonstop hunt through crypts, catacombs, deserted cathedrals and the most secretive vault on earth, Langdon and Vetra will follow a 400-year old trail of ancient symbols that mark the Vatican's only hope for survival.

As fiery instinct clashes with calm reason, their unlikely but powerful partnership is the only thing capable of leading their crew through unimaginable danger, boldly going where no one has gone before.

Star Trek stars John Cho, Ben Cross and Bruce Greenwood Schreiber. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action and violence and sexual content.

Just when it looks like Connor may single-handedly ruin the wedding, he is visited by the ghosts of his former jilted girlfriends, who take him on a revealing and hilarious odyssey through his failed relationships — past, present and future. Together they attempt to find out what made Connor insensitive and whether there is still hope for him to find true love.

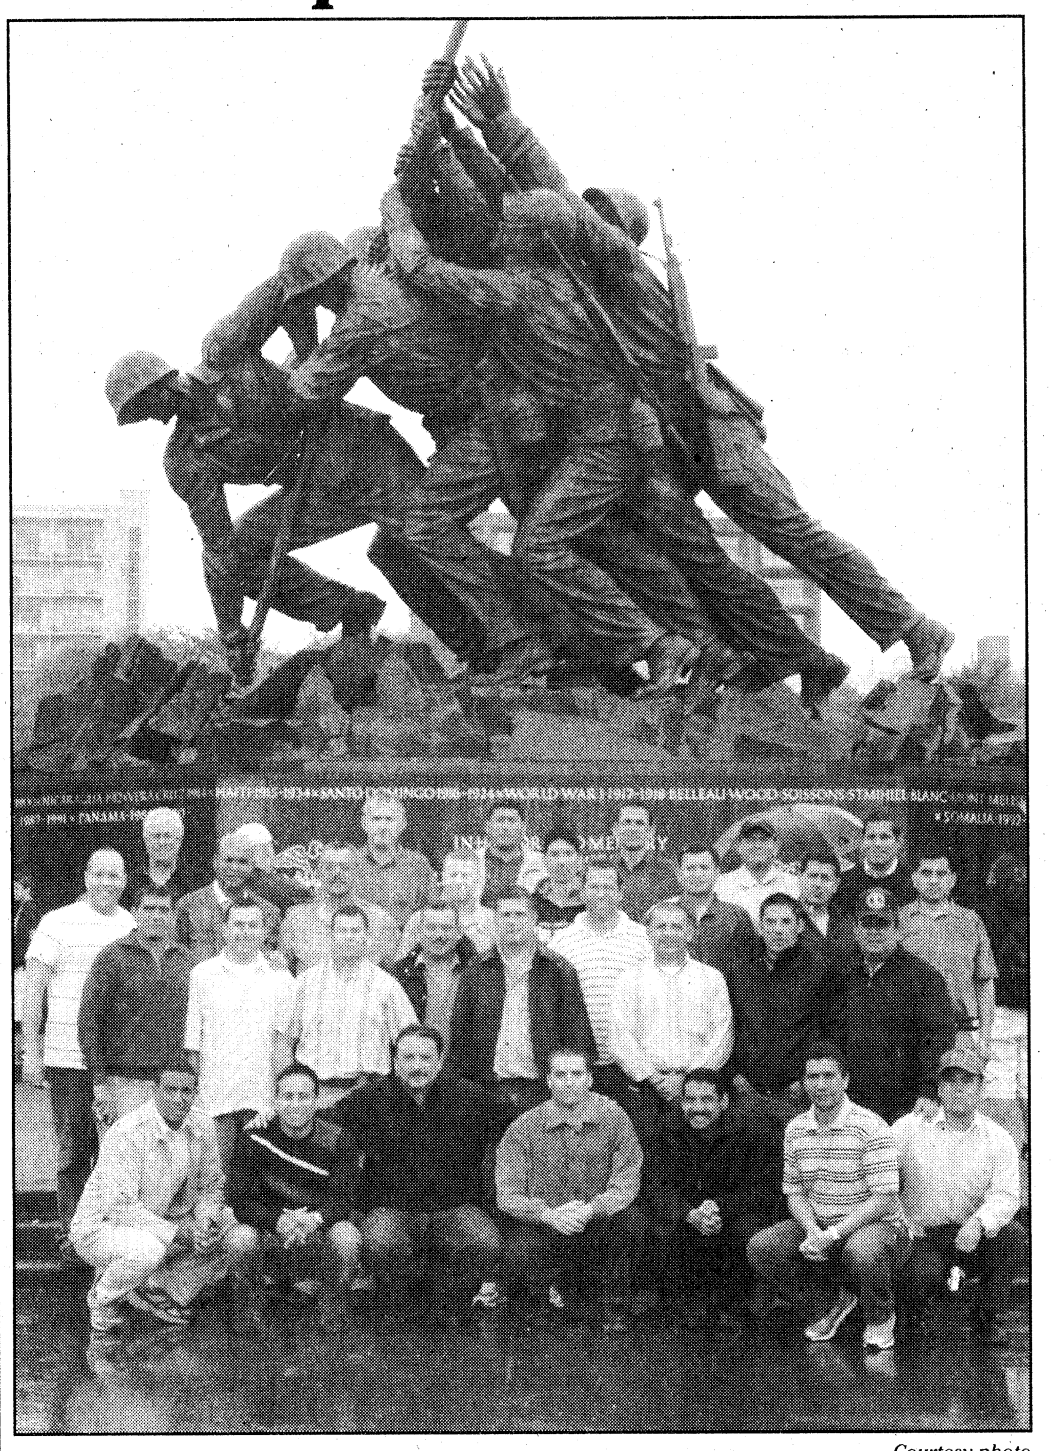
Blair said she'd been scrapbooking for several years before she became actively involved in attending crops and other activities hosted by her local store. The difference was profound, she said.

"Attending the crops has become my favorite part of scrapbooking," she said.



If you haven't begun protecting your favorite pictures and mementos, the time to invest is now, Stargel said.

"The Soldier, above all other men, is required to perform the highest act of religious teaching — sacrifice," said Douglas MacArthur in a 1935 address to his fellow World War I veterans of the Rainbow Division.

Post Commanding General MG Michael Barbero, the keynote speaker for the Memorial Day observance at the Main Post Cemetery, quoted MacArthur when he said Memorial Day is a sacred day of remembrance of all who made the ultimate sacrifice — the highest act of religious teaching.

"All Soldiers who died for our country are forever connected as the precious few who sacrificed everything for their country and the cause of freedom," Barbero said. "We honor them today ... as their ranks continue to grow. Iraq and Afghanistan are still hostile places where our Soldiers risk their lives and die so others can live free."

Monday's ceremony was without rain, the second year in row, said MSG(R) Joseph Roy, who attended the observance without his friend, Medal of Honor recipient COL(R) Bob Nett, who died last October and is buried near the Unknown Soldier, where the wreath was placed.

COL(R) Ralph Puckett and SPC Jonathon Kaderli helped the commanding general and post CSM Earl Rice place the wreath in tribute to all veterans who died in defense of America's freedom.

Post's PTSD program expands

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Facing emotional barriers shaped by war, the Army wants to chip away at stigmas and help Soldiers who might feel isolated after returning from an Iraq or Afghanistan deployment, post medical officials said.

At Fort Benning, a voluntary program known as RESPECT-Mil — or re-engineering systems of primary care treatment in the military — is expanding across the post to offer more avenues of help for Soldiers with symptoms of post-traumatic stress disorder and depression.

The program is available now at the Consolidated Troop Medical Clinic on Main Post and at Kelley Hill's Sledgehammer TMC. Next month, it's expected at TMC 5 on Sand Hill to cover cadre members assigned to the 192nd and 198th Infantry brigades.

"The program can offer Soldiers the opportunity to be screened for PTSD and depression, be treated for this if necessary, and receive all of

CG authorizes wear of unique brigade patches

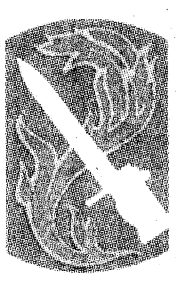
Some Fort Benning Soldiers will change part of their uniform soon.

MG Michael Barbero, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School, authorized Soldiers to wear their unique brigade shoulder patches. Taking effect Monday, the policy affects the 192nd, 197th, 198th and 199th Infantry Brigades, which were reflagged in 2007 as part of the Army's shift to a modular force.



The brigades are part of USAIS and began wearing its patch instead of their unique patches in 2007, a move meant to simplify insignia during the transition to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, said CSM Matthew Walker, USAIS.

197th Inf. Bde.

198th Inf. Bde.

199th Inf. Bde.

"We knew Base Relocation and Closure and the Maneuver Center of Excellence were coming, and we didn't want Soldiers to have to go buy this, that and the other," he said. "Fort Benning and Fort Knox were going through so many changes, the commanding generals wanted to let the water settle a bit."

Training and Doctrine Command brigades at Fort Sill, Okla., Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., Fort Jackson, S.C., and Fort Knox, Ky., are switching to brigade shoulder patches.

Drill sergeants and cadre of schools that fall under the 192nd, 197th, 198th and 199th Infantry Brigades will wear the patches of those units.

Students, with the exception of basic trainees, will continue to wear the USAIS patch so they will not have to change patches when they move between brigades to attend schools, Walker said.

"Guys going from basic training to Officer Candidate School to Ranger School won't have to switch out their patches and incur further financial liabilities," he said.

While cadre of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, will wear the insignia of the 199th Infantry

Mystery artifact to be displayed, 21 days and counting

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

"It flies and it lands on two feet and it has something to do with your head," said Mike Criscillis, National Infantry Museum curator when speaking about an exhibit that will be on display for the first time when the new museum opens June 19.

"It was in the development test stage and used in the testing," he said. "It was very significant and went through a couple of steps and that is all I am going to say."

Whatever the mystery artifact is, it is only one of many artifacts not seen by the public before, he said.

Criscillis

"We will have about 80 or 90 figures on display," he said. "I don't want to give away too much, but we have about 12 figures that will be unique. They are under lock and key and no one can see them (right now)."

Criscillis said the staff is making minor adjustments on the displays in the 10 galleries in the museum.

"It's like putting a living room together," he said. "You have to try out different furniture, different artwork. We are using other artifacts out of the collection to tell the story."

Criscillis said artifacts are being put through a cleaning process prior to moving the items or putting them on display.

"Everything we are doing is by the numbers," Criscillis said. "We don't want to contaminate the new area. It's just like a surgical procedure. We are making sure we

What are your summer vacation plans?

I'm going to try to get down to Destin Beach, Fla., for about four days in August to go golfing and fishing. The end of summer will work best with my work schedule, and I'll probably just go there on my own.

My 6-year-old stepson is coming here from Michigan, and we're going to take the family to Six Flags, probably in July if it's not too hot. We have four kids who are 13, 10 and two 6-year-olds. It will be fun.

We may be going to Disney World with our two children for a weekend in July. We went there the year before last and they enjoyed it. We also visited SeaWorld, and got military discounts at both parks.

We're going to North Carolina to visit my sister for three weeks. Her husband is away at an internship and my husband is a drill sergeant, so we'll hang out together with the kids. We also have friends in Fayetteville, N.C., so we're probably going to go there.

For the Fourth of July weekend, we're going to Panama City, Fla. My wife and I have 3-month-old twins, so it's the first break she's going to get. We got a big vacation house with a bunch of friends and I think it's going to be a good time.

Be like the Griswolds to avoid summer vacation stress

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

In National Lampoon's Vacation, one of my all-time favorite movies, Clark Griswold embarks on a quest to take his family on a perfect cross-country road trip vacation to Walley World, a theme park. Their journey is fraught with hilarious disasters, but through it all, Griswold keeps his ironclad resolve to make sure his family has a good time. If you haven't seen it, I won't spoil the rest for you.

I suppose you could say I'm a little like Clark Griswold. I love to travel, and have been known to force myself — and sometimes my friends — to have a good time on vacation, whether we like it or not.

When I was in college, my roommate and I decided to take a spring break road trip from Ohio to Florida. I had never taken a real road trip before, and had never done much of anything interesting over spring break. To say I was excited would be an understatement.

During the two-day trip down Interstate 75, I kept my camera close at hand so I could document the exciting places we passed — the Blue Ridge Mountains, signs announcing state borders, even the Waffle Houses, a rarity in Ohio. So of course it made sense that I would take pictures of my roommate driving, even if we had been in the car for 19 hours and she was exhausted and wearing a dirty sweatshirt. Unfortunately, she didn't share my enthusiasm and threatened to throw the camera out the window. But that didn't stop me taking pictures once we made it to the beach. Somehow, in spite of a close call with a punctured tire, we made it back to Ohio in one piece. Amazingly, we were still friends.

In another famous — or should I say, infamous — trip, my father and I spent a week in Quebec, where I refused to let the language barrier become an obstacle to our fun. I was 12 and had one year of middle school French under my belt. Sure, I couldn't really communicate, but that didn't stop me from making a valiant attempt to order at a McDonald's drive-through window in broken French. After several minutes of confusion, we finally got out of the car and ordered inside the restaurant by pointing at the menu. I didn't feel too bad, though, because no one ever understands anything at the drive-through anyway.

Later that week, in another misunderstanding, my dad got a parking ticket because neither of us could read a sign that apparently said "No parking." I tried to cheer him up by pointing out other signs I could read, like "Welcome" and "Restaurant," but my budding language skills weren't enough to overcome the $100 he had to pay.

So if you're going on vacation this summer, don't let the little things spoil your fun. Just be sure to tone it down before your camera goes out the window. After all, even the Griswolds managed to have fun.

Spending time fishing with kids can teach more than casting lines

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

With school letting out, I consider it officially summer, and as Brad Paisley sings in one of his songs, "Well, I love her, but I like to fish, ..." so, it's time to go fishing.

Although I am not an avid fisherman, I did a lot of fishing when I was a kid thanks to 1SG(R) Howard Rollins. He taught me a lot about fishing, and life. He passed away a few months ago but I remember our fishing outings like it was yesterday.

Whether it was fishing from a boat on a lake, or us fishing from the banks of Victory or Kings Pond, outfishing him and catching the bigger fish was always a challenge. He always knew an extra trick to catch the bigger fish.

Fishing with Sergeant Rollins wasn't about catching the most fish or catching the big one. It was about spending time with each other, and for me, learning the lessons about life he passed to me.

While I learned the difference between a mud cat, blue channel cat, large and small mouth bass and the difference between a treble hook and a regular hook, I also learned life does not end when you lose a parent, to live each day to the fullest, to always take responsibility for your actions and to practice patience — Sergeant Rollins had tons of patience.

It still amazes me how he taught life lessons because I wasn't in a learning mode during the summer months — my nonlearning personal time — but he did.

I can't recall who caught the most fish from summer to summer, but I did enjoy being out by the water with a sack lunch, a coke and not a worry in the world.

I shared what I learned from Sergeant Rollins on our many summer fishing trips with my children on our summer fishing trips — and I hope they pass those lessons along to their children for many summers to come.

With summer finally here, I expect to see a lot of parents and children out on the lakes and ponds fishing and enjoying the warm weather.

Remember, fishing is what you make of it. Whether you catch a fish or not, a lot can be learned on the opposite end of an empty hook.

"Oh, lookie there ... I've got a bite," as Brad Paisley sings.

• Post officials expected more than 10,000 visitors from the Chattahoochee Valley for the annual Armed Forces Day open house on York Field. The event would feature static displays, demonstrations of equipment, jeep rides and the ever popular junior jump tower and Ranger reptile show.

• The post commander, MG Robert York, was made an honorary Girl Scout and practiced his Girl Scout salute with Fort Benning troops.

• Mrs. Allen Fischer was featured in this week's Petticoat Portraits column. Jean Fischer was chairwoman of the NCO Wives' Club and the ceramics shop and bingo chairwoman. "Her attention to detail and creativity is evident in her home," the post newspaper stated. "Examples of her artwork include a porcelain cigarette set and a fruit compote."

A licensed beautician, Allen was taking a career hiatus to focus on her husband and two daughters, but she kept in practice as the neighborhood beautician.

• SPC Johnnie Crawford, a former Mouseketeer and a star on the TV show The Rifleman, was on Fort Benning to film a training movie about the importance of wearing the uniform correctly. The film synopsis: A Soldier finds that the proper wearing of the uniform ensures weekend passes that were previously denied.

PTSD: Getting help for symptoms is easy, confidential

this in the primary care setting," said Dr. Melissa Messina, chief of Martin Army Community Hospital's Department of Behavioral Health. "It is important Soldiers understand the point of this program is to get them help they may need, while not drawing attention to them or their situation ... and they need to be honest when they are answering the screening questions. This is their opportunity to get the help they need in a confidential manner."

Messina

Many Soldiers who experience warning signs are reluctant to enter the mental health system, fearing career consequences, she said.

But the Army remains concerned about the growing number of suicides in its ranks.

A record 140 Soldiers killed themselves in 2008 and the Army counted 64 possible suicides in the first four months of this year, according to a recent report by National Public Radio.

Research shows that Soldiers suffering from PTSD or depression who commit suicide usually go on sick call more frequently than non-affected Soldiers, said MAJ Dingane Baruti, the lead primary care physician for RESPECT-Mil at Fort Benning. But due to the large number of Soldiers seen daily at troop medical clinics, health-care providers usually get only 15 to 20 minutes with each patient, he said.

"This short period of time is insufficient to properly address PTSD and or depression," Baruti said. "The RESPECT-Mil program solves this problem by providing trained care facilitators to work with the Soldier and connect him or her to appropriate mental health specialists."

Messina said 90 percent of Soldiers have at least one annual appointment with their primary care provider, so it became the ideal slot for the Army to launch the effort.

RESPECT-Mil, which came to Fort Benning in December 2007, can be accessed any time a Soldier visits a troop medical clinic and the steps are simple, she said.

When a Soldier arrives to see a primary care provider, he or she receives a six-question screening. If it comes back positive, the individual is given a longer test for PTSD and depression. The information is then sent to the person's provider, who talks with the Soldier to determine if treatment is needed.

At that point, the Soldier may officially enroll in RESPECT-Mil.

Under the program, a registered nurse will contact him or her at least once a month to monitor progress and act as a liaison between the primary care provider and mental health professional.

CSM(R) Sam Rhodes, who spent 29 years in the Army and deployed multiple times, said he was diagnosed with PTSD during a tour to Iraq in 2005. He now works as an Army civilian at Fort Benning and shares his experiences and struggles during speaking engagements and appearances around the country.

He encourages veterans and active-duty service members to acknowledge and seek help for emotional health difficulties.

"I hope to not only help prevent the tragedy of suicide, but also to help our brave warriors overcome the too common lack of understanding about mental health issues," he said. "It is important for service members to know that PTSD and depression are not character flaws or personal weaknesses. They are illnesses that are common and treatable, but not totally curable. It takes courage to ask for help."

Suicidal thoughts are the most severe symptom of PTSD or depression, Messina said. Soldiers experiencing such feelings should report immediately to a Troop Medical Clinic, the mental health clinic on Martin Army Community Hospital's fourth floor or the nearest emergency room.

"It is important for family members and battle buddies to also keep an eye on one another and make sure their friends and family get immediate help if they are potentially suicidal," she said.

PTSD symptoms

* Traumatic nightmares or daytime flashbacks
* Anxiety associated with recalling a traumatic event, or even an inability to talk about it
* Difficulty sleeping
* Irritability
* Mild paranoia

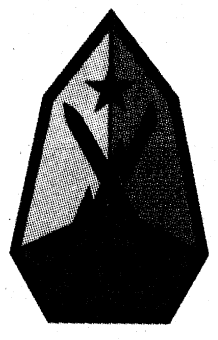
Warning signs of depression

A change in sleeping and eating patterns
Difficulty concentrating
Decreased energy level
Fading interest in normally pleasant activities

Screening for PTSD

During an initial visit with a primary care provider at Fort Benning, Soldiers receive a six-question screening as part of the RESPECT-Mil program, with questions like:

* Over the last 2 weeks, have you been bothered by any of the following problems?



1. Feeling down, depressed, or hopeless.
2. Little interest or pleasure in doing things.

and

* Have you had any experience that was so frightening, horrible, or upsetting, that in the past month, you...

1. Had any nightmares about it or thought about it when you did not want to?
2. Tried hard not to think about it or went out of your way to avoid situations that remind you of it?
3. Were constantly on guard, watchful, or easily startled?
4. Felt numb or detached from others, activities, or your surroundings?

Patches: MCOE patch incorporates Armor, Infantry

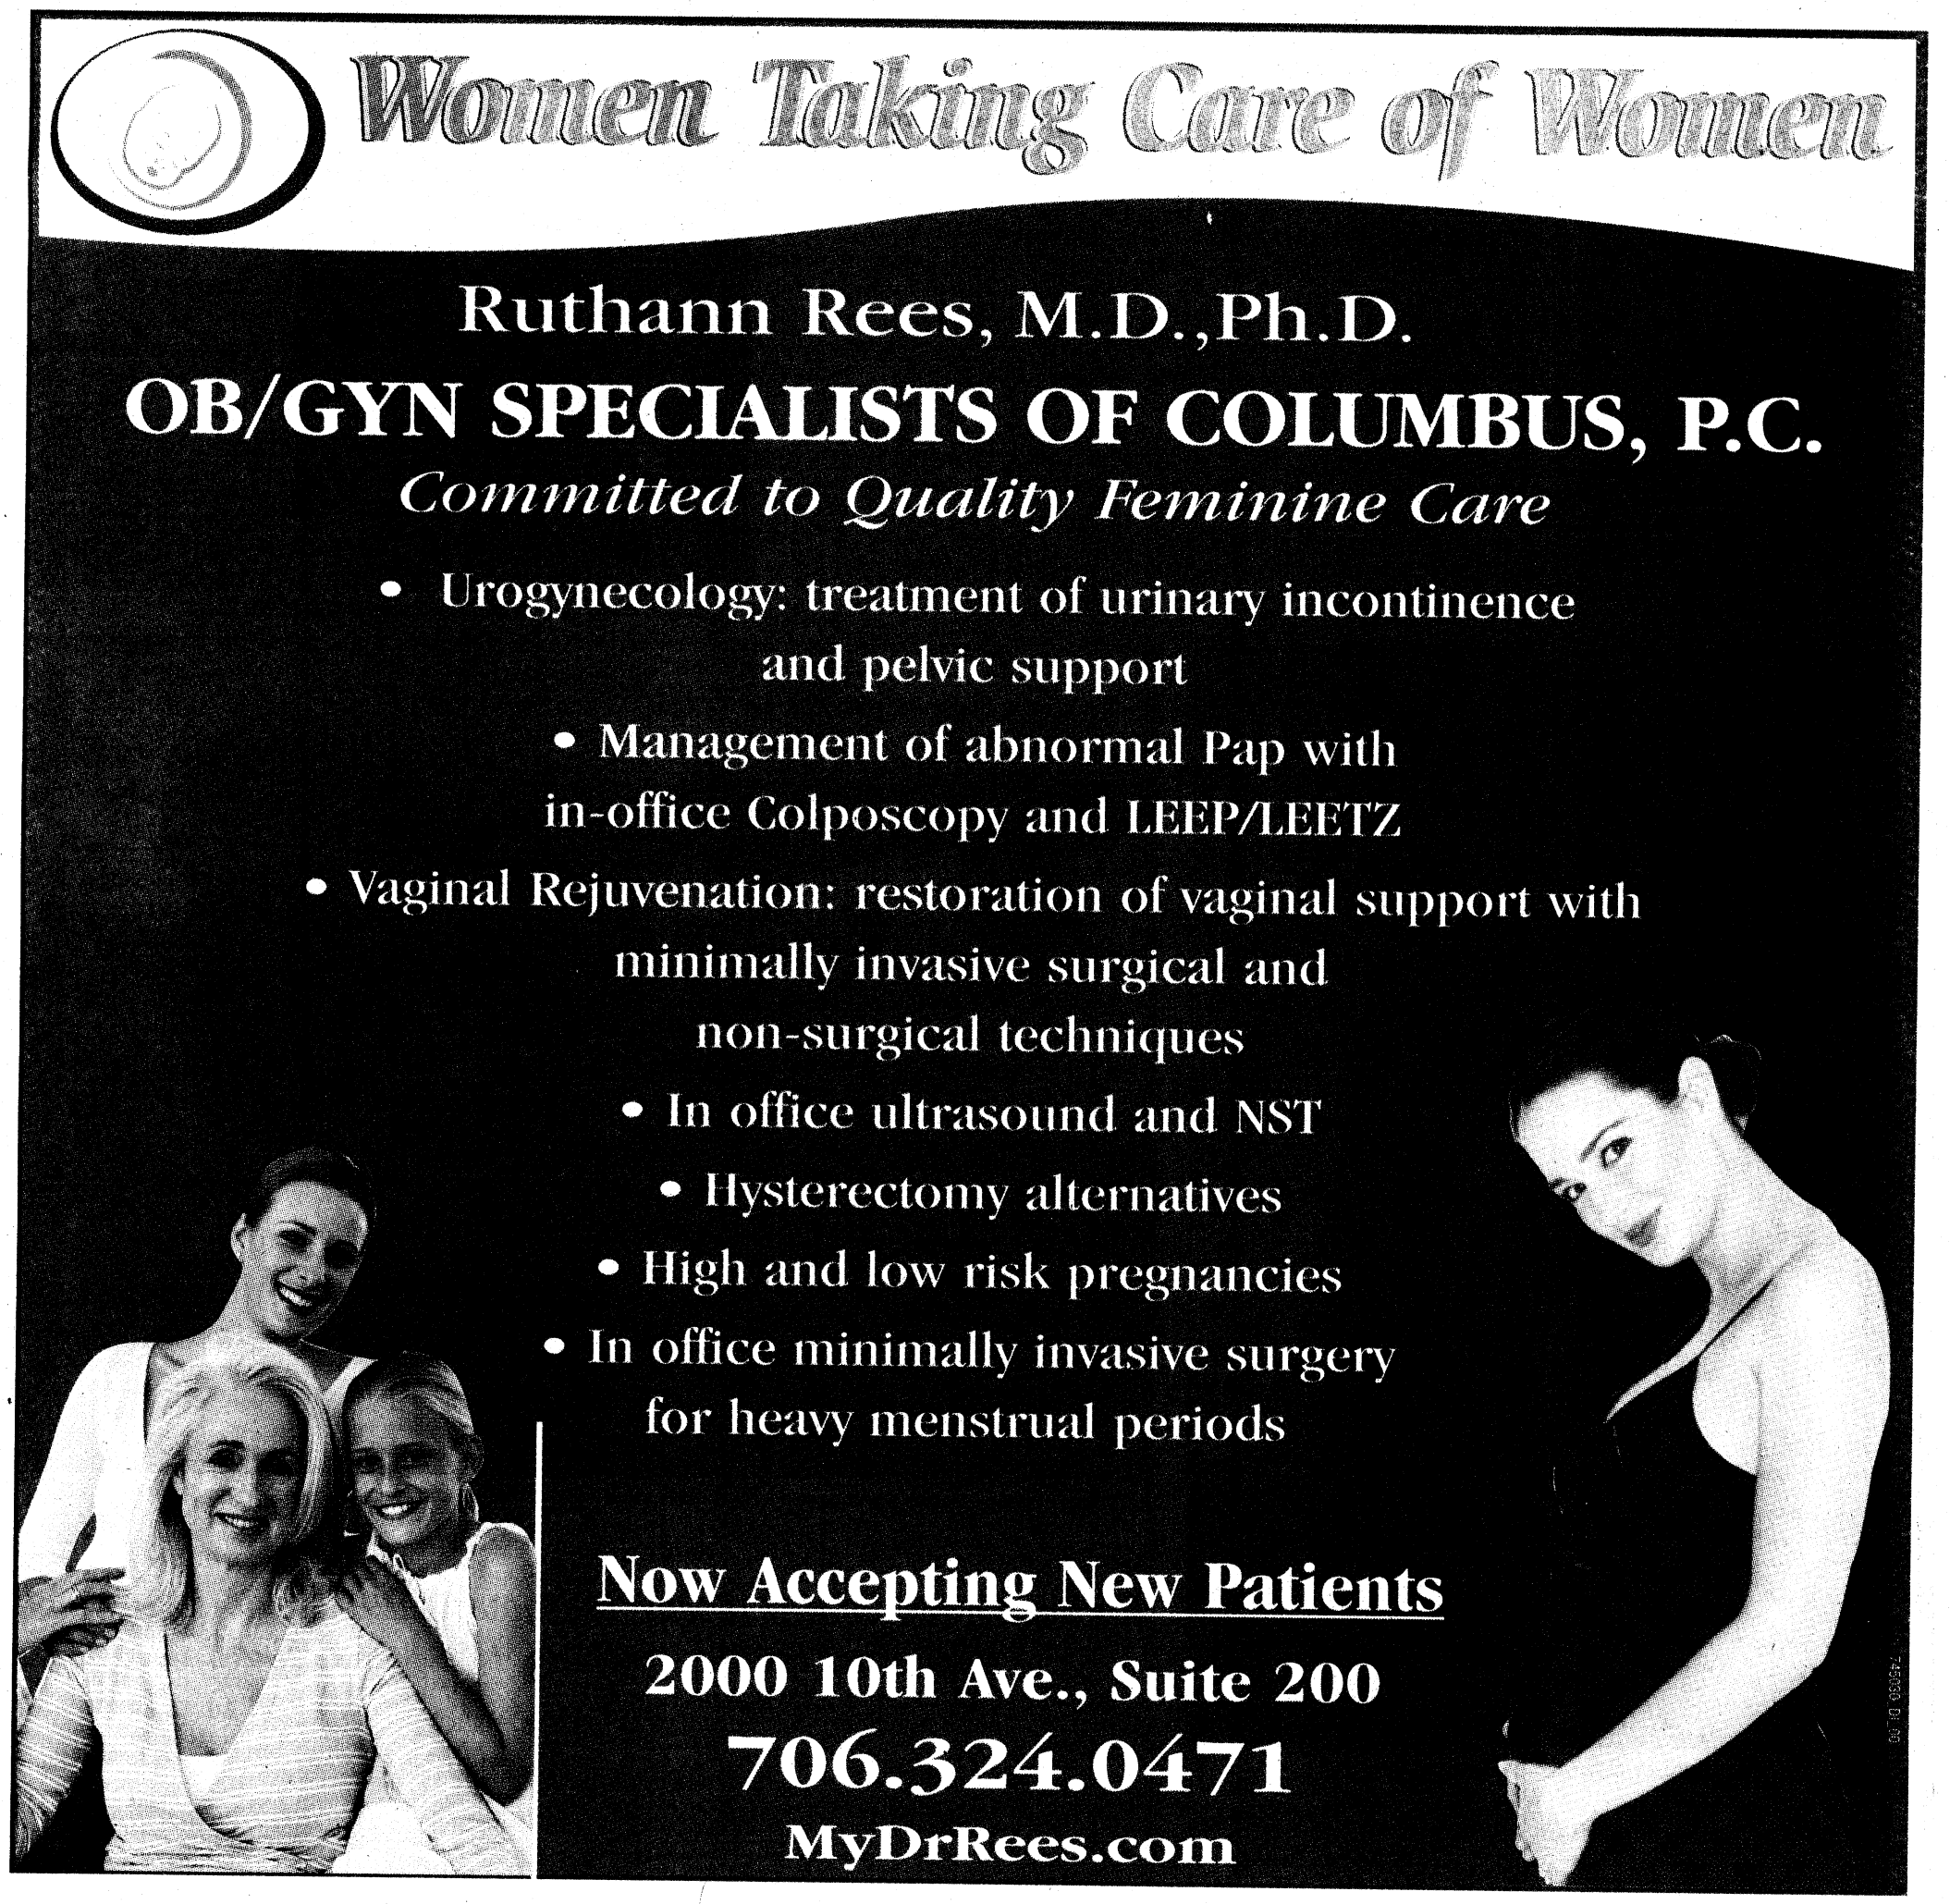
Brigade, it has not been determined which patch cadre of the Maneuver Captains Career Course and the Henry Caro NCO Academy will wear as integration of the Maneuver Center of Excellence progresses. Cadre of the Ranger Training Brigade will continue to wear the USAIS patch.

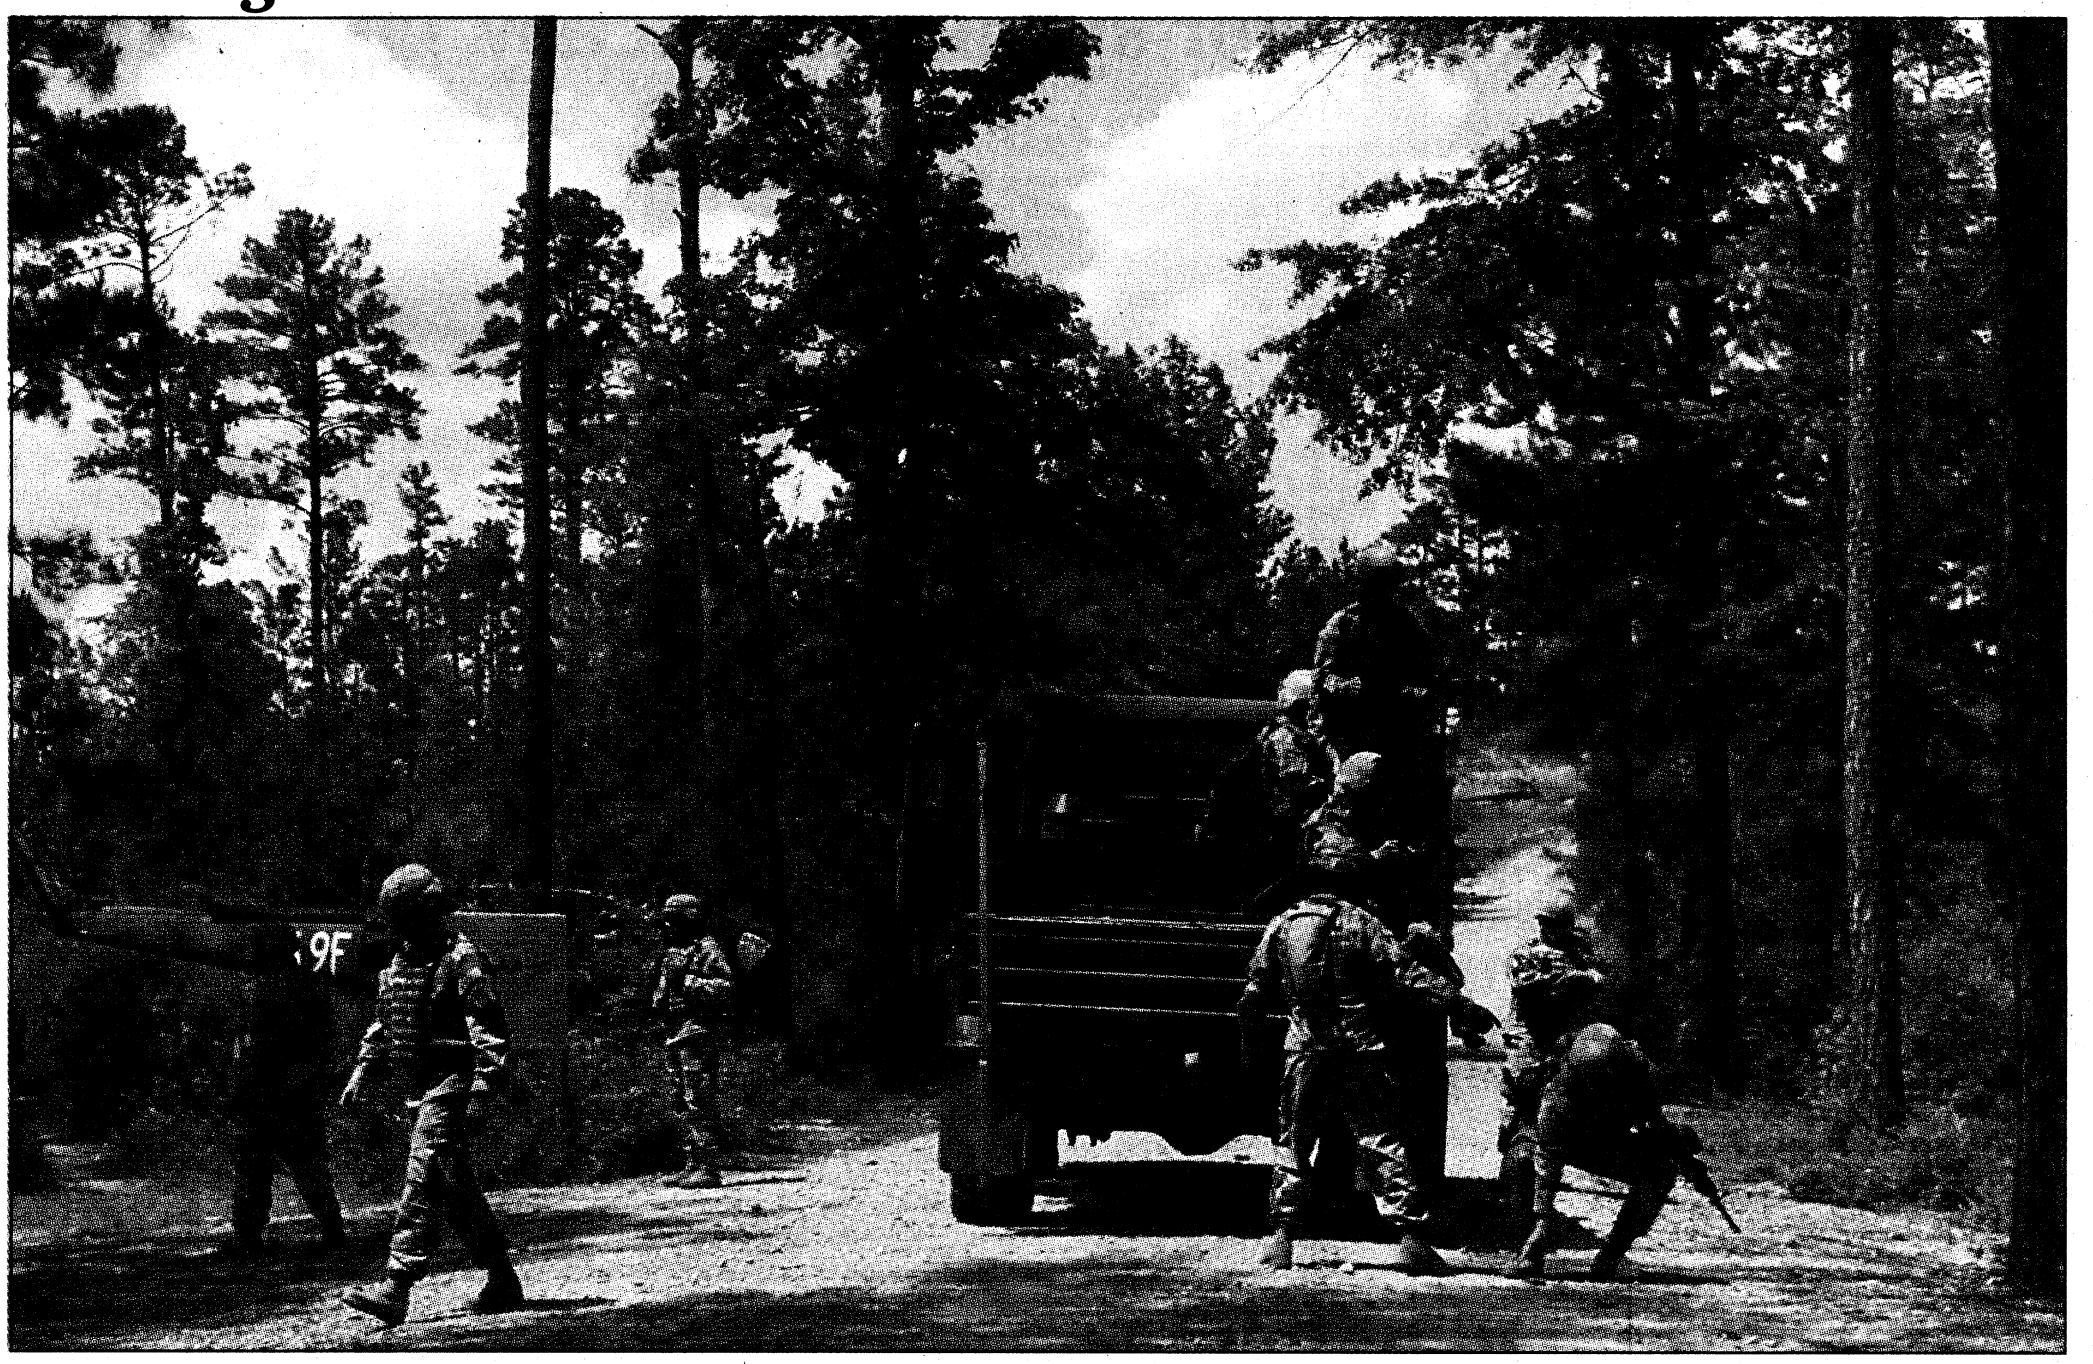
Soldiers and cadre permanently assigned to the MCOE will wear its newly designed patch beginning Oct.1. Featuring a bayonet crossed over a lightening bolt, the MCOE patch incorporates elements of both Infantry and Armor heraldry. The bayonet represents the Infantry, while the configuration of the sections is adapted from the insignia of the 1st Armored Division.

The move to bring back unique brigade patches will highlight the units' heritages, said Dave Stieghan, Infantry branch historian.



"I know a number of veterans are going to be quite proud to see the patch they wore into combat being worn by today's Soldiers," he said.

SFC Wayne Barker, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, said wearing brigade patches will help boost morale and increase unit pride.



"The Army is a brotherhood, so if a guy from the 197th Infantry Brigade sees another guy wearing a 197th patch, he'll think, 'Hey, this is my battle buddy,'" Barker said.

CSM William Morgan, 197th Infantry Brigade, said his unit is ready for the switch.

"We'll embrace it and we'll execute it," Morgan said. "A lot of veterans will probably unite with Soldiers when they see that patch and tell them they wore it. We've been through a lot of uniform changes over the years, and I think this is a good one."

Soldiers battle heat, IEDs in convoy live fire

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Pop-up targets weren't the only enemy facing Soldiers in C Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, when they took part in convoy live fire training at Engineer Trail May 15 — they also battled the Georgia heat. With humidity hovering around 100 percent and temperatures nearing 90, Soldiers spent the day mounting and dismounting vehicles, engaging targets while moving, conducting enemy prisoner of war searches and assessing and treating casualties.

To prevent heat injuries, Soldiers drank water and rested in the shade between exercises. Drill sergeants monitored them for signs of heat exhaustion, such as dizziness, muscle weakness and vomiting.

The scenario Soldiers were presented with was an IED attack. Each Soldier went through a run with blanks before completing a live fire.

The goal of the training was to teach Soldiers the technical aspects of a convoy live fire, and to give them a higher level of familiarity and comfort with their weapons and equipment, said CPT John Reinke, commander of C Company.

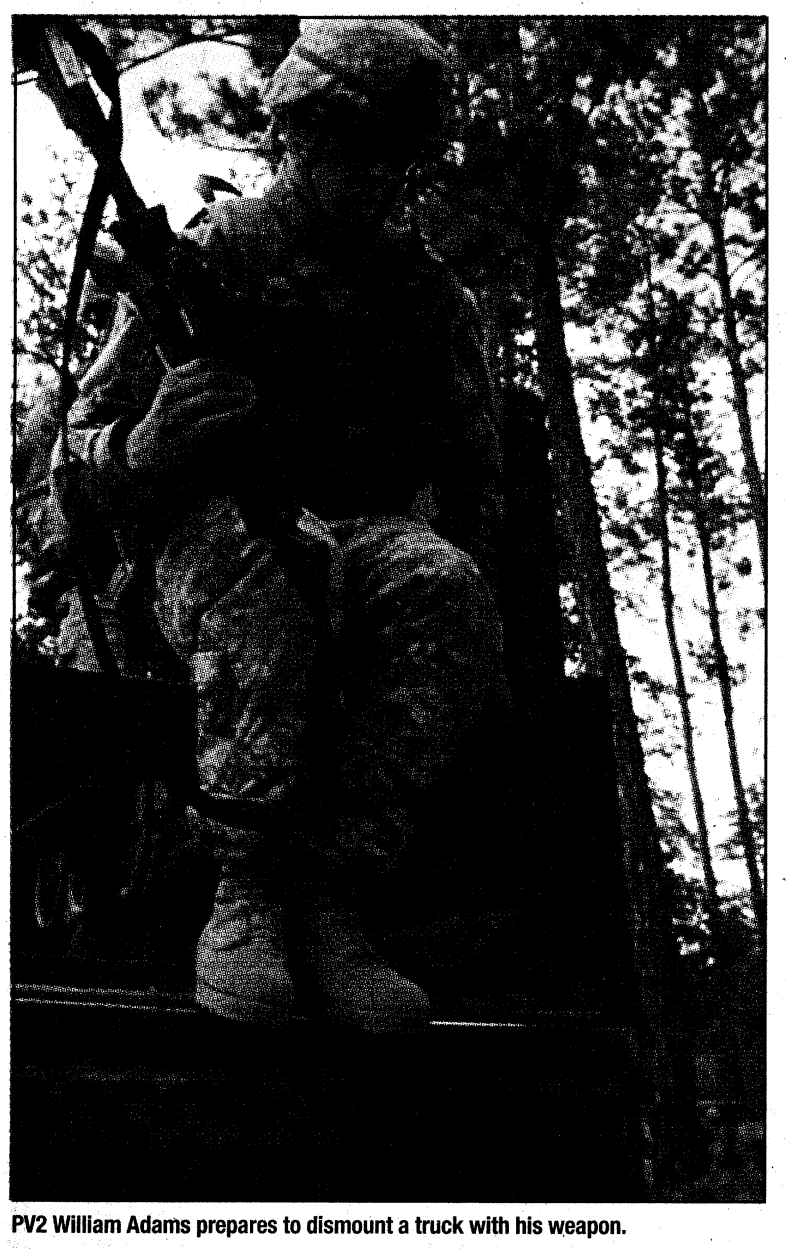
"If that situation were to ever come up, I'd feel like I was more ready for it," SPC Jared Waechter said. "I'd never shot from a moving vehicle before, but shooting in different situations will help in the future."

PFC Lasan Khotsombath, said the hardest part of the exercise was keeping still in a moving truck.

"We couldn't clamp on to the end of the truck," he said. "We had to hold our weapon up and keep that position until we turned or stopped."

The convoy live fire training marked one of the first times the Soldiers, who were in the ninth week of one station unit training, began to actively apply what they had learned in the classroom.

"It's good to be out here doing things that are meaningful and are going to help you when you get into a real-life combat situation," Waechter said.



For Khotsombath, the convoy live fire training was a turning point.

"It's been a tough nine weeks, but now that we're going through the actual Soldier training, I feel good about it," he said. "You've got to keep practicing (what you've learned) and then when you get out there in the real world, you'll be ready, and that's what all this training is about."

Soldiers in C Company were some of the last in the 198th Infantry Brigade to complete convoy live fire training. The brigade is phasing out the training beginning July 1 because it no longer reflects the current operating environment in Iraq and Afghanistan, Reinke said. Convoy live fire training will be replaced with scenarios where Soldiers interact with civilians and foreign soldiers on the battlefield.

Sand Hill gets 'realistic' live fire

Cheryl Kodewig
THE BAYONET

> "The battle is all around you. Every time it's a different scenario."
> — CSM Michael Hibbs

The mounted react to contact live fire will replace the convoy live fire for Soldiers on Sand Hill this summer. The new training exercise will feature high-speed paint ammunition with the look and sound of a real bullet and force-on-force contact instead of pop-up targets.

"It's something that's been needed for a long time," said CSM Michael Hibbs, command sergeant major for the 192nd Infantry Brigade. "Leaders continue to develop training to make it more realistic to Soldiers going to combat in the near future. So, the first time they experience someone shooting at them, it's not on the battlefield; it's here in training.

"Force-on-force contact brings realism into the training environment, so when you've been shot you know you've been shot. It forces the Soldier to go under cover and use the proper movement techniques. It provides immediate, realistic feedback to let him know if the maneuver he's doing is working, and if it's not, he's going to get shot."

During the live fire, Soldiers will depart from a tactical assembly area, dismount from their vehicle and make contact with civilians and the enemy. Then, they will move to a village where they must differentiate between civilians and enemy forces.

The convoy live fire wasted time with limited truck seating and live ammunition that caused Soldiers to move through the training slowly, said CSM John Calpena, 198th Infantry Brigade command sergeant major.

"It wasn't realistic to the way Soldiers traveled downrange," he said. "With this, they get the realism. They have to be careful of how they're shooting, where they're shooting, but because they're non-lethal rounds, we can make the training more complex. It's more time training and less time traveling."

Both brigades have conducted test pilots of the new live fire this year.

Hibbs said he believes the new exercise will help Soldiers learn to be adaptive thinkers who can react to a variety of situations.

"It used to be a linear battlefield, and now it's an asymmetric battlefield," said Hibbs, who deployed twice to Iraq. "The battle is all around you. Every time it's a different scenario. It's critical (Soldiers) are able to react."

The transition to the mounted react to contact live fire has been more than a year in the making and reflects the changes in the current fight, Calpena said.

"We're trying to design something that is more relevant to what we do right now," he said. "What's going on downrange always changes. We change our training to make the focus more on the intangibles ... the discipline, the confidence level, what we want to achieve. Training has become outcome-based instead of process-driven."

Calpena said he doesn't want his Soldiers to mindlessly go through a battle drill but understand what they are doing.

"Today, our Soldiers could be handing out hospital supplies, school supplies, securing an area and then find themselves in combat with an unknown enemy," he said. "A lot of times they're operating not on a battlefield but in a marketplace. That's where we've geared our training. Instead of making them obedient machines, they're thinking warriors.

"The old days of 'when I say jump, you say how high on the way up' are over. I want (my Soldier) to understand what's expected of him, read the situation and know when to jump on his own."

do it right and only have to do it one time."

For now, the cleaning process is being conducted at the old museum, he said. But, the new museum will have a designated area the artifacts will go through prior to being stored or put on display.

"At the new museum we will have a conservation lab, we call it the crime lab, that has special kinds of equipment and an archive lab that has special types of shelving for the artifacts. So once the item goes through the cleaning process it will go into the new shelving — we don't want to contaminate our new area.

"We want to make sure we are a world-class facility."

The museum is located off of Fort Benning Road at 1775 Legacy Way, approximately two miles south of Victory Drive and outside the access control points of Fort Benning. The Soldier Center is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission is free. World War II Street, IMAX Theater, Soldier Store gift shop and Fife and Drum restaurant are also open to the public.

West Point seeks to help Soldier-authors

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

SGT Jacob Smith, 982nd Combat Camera Co. (Airborne)
Soldiers from C Company, 1st Battalion, 111th Infantry Regiment (Associators), 56th Stryker Brigade Combat Team, 28th Infantry Division, Pennsylvania National Guard, Multi-National Division-Baghdad, provide security along the perimeter of a landing zone near Tarmiyah, Iraq, on April 29. West Point cadets are looking for Iraq and Afghanistan veterans to share their stories.

The U.S. Military Academy at West Point wants to help get you published.

That's the message CPT Mike Warren, English instructor at the military school, is sending to troops this month as he and four cadets travel to five posts, including Fort Benning, today through June 12 to promote their project, "Telling War Stories."

The goal of the project is to help Soldiers share war stories with an audience eager to learn about first-hand accounts of soldiering, as well as helping these Soldiers get published, said Warren, who kicked off the pilot project at the military school last fall.

This year, Warren said he has expanded the project and hopes to bring in three to four times as many stories by taking to the road and promoting it to more posts.

The trip, funded by the Army Center for Professional and Military Ethics, will bring writing orientation workshops to Forts Benning, Bragg, Campbell, Drum and Stewart, and give potential authors a chance to ask questions about the project and receive information on the submission process.

Warren and his team will be at Soldiers Plaza, Building 2614, from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday to host the workshop as well as a pizza luncheon.

The team will also visit wounded warriors at the post's Warrior Transition Unit and videotape their stories for West Point's Oral History Project, Warren said.

Soldiers who have considered writing a narrative or believe they have a story to tell that can offer a lesson or insight are encouraged to participate.

Though the team is primarily looking for stories from Operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom, submissions are open to any Soldier, veteran and family member with a story to share.

Once the submissions are received, 60 cadets from four freshmen composition classes will select stories to complete an essay on for their fall project.

Additionally, the cadets will provide feedback to the authors through summaries, rhetorical critiques and response to what the Soldiers narrative conveys to the audience, Warren said.

"What they provide will be similar to a creative writing workshop and it is also an opportunity for these authors to have their work read by a peer," he said.

For the cadets, this is a service. For the authors, these stories are an opportunity to share their experiences with future military leaders, Warren said.

West Point cadet Chris Jarrett said he looks forward to the insight these stories can provide.

"As an officer, I know I will think back to these stories I have read and better understand what my men are going through," said Jarrett, who will accompany Warren on the tour.

In return for their story submission, Soldier-authors will gain insight and perspective on their narratives as well as revisions that could help their piece reach publication, Warren said.

If enough submissions are received in the coming months, the stories may be published in a journal next year, Warren said.

The trip will wrap up June 12 with a visit to the wounded warriors at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington.

Authors whose submissions are selected for the project will receive feedback on their work after the fall semester ends.

Warren is currently accepting submissions by e-mail at michael.warren@usma.edu.

The submission deadline is Sept. 1.

Self Help Troop Issue offers free supplies to units

SFC(R) Bobby McGill, Self Help Troop Issue store manager, checks supplies. The store keeps enough supplies on hand to assist units with making minor repairs and landscaping their areas.

Units wanting supplies for light maintenance work and building upkeep need look no further than the post's Self Help Troop Issue store. The self-help store offers a wide variety of products at no cost to units.

"This is an organization where units can get items for their facilities without submitting work orders or having to pay from unit funds," said Steve Dudley, manager of special projects for Fort Benning's Directorate of Public Works.

Though the store doesn't provide specialized tools, the store stocks items necessary for painting walls, minor plumbing problems, replacing ceiling tiles, landscaping, killing mold and a variety of other projects.

On a monthly basis, the store services approximately 340-400 Soldiers and hands out $8,000 to $9,000 worth of supplies, said Charles Davis, supply assistant at the Self Help store.

The most requested item is ceiling tiles, he said.

While work orders are processing to correct leaking ceilings, SFC(R) Bobby McGill, self-help store manager, said many units come to the store and request tiles to replace the worst spots in the meantime.

Another popular item is light bulbs, he said.

"The store offers a wide range of light bulbs from energy-saving fluorescent bulbs to incandescent bulbs," McGill said.

He said the store is also a good spot for finding the right air conditioner filter for barracks on post, which often require several different sizes of filters.

A new item at the store is mold and mildew cleaner, McGill said.

"We saw a need (for) this product because of the mold problems on post," McGill said.

To use the store, units must appoint one to two individuals to attend the orientation class and receive cards that will allow them to draw supplies, Dudley said.

The classes are held every two weeks or more often if there are enough Soldiers attending.

The class gives instructions on using the store as well as ensuring troops are aware of restrictions on certain items, such as paint.

The supplies are free but there are limits on how much of a product may be drawn per month per unit, Dudley said. However, if a unit is working on a special project that requires more than the maximum allowed in supplies, the store will help them with the paperwork to complete the project, he said.

"If (the unit) is willing to do the labor, 99 percent of the time the government will approve their request and give them the materials," Dudley said.

The Self Help Troop Issue is located in Building 69 on Wold Avenue between Edwards and Gillespie streets. It is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, and closed on federal holidays.

Day: Post remembers veterans, heroes at ceremony

"We pause to acknowledge the debt owed to those who gave their lives for our freedom," said Chaplain (LTC) Don German during the invocation.

SPC Ross McGinnis, who was posthumously promoted, was one of those Soldiers. McGinnis was still a teenager when he trained as an Infantryman on Sand Hill during the summer of 2005.

He deployed to Iraq in August 2006 with 1st Battalion, 26th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Infantry Division. He died Dec. 4, 2006, after he threw himself on a grenade that landed in an up-armored humvee, saving the lives of four Soldiers. McGinnis' parents accepted the Medal of Honor McGinnis was awarded posthumously from President George Bush during a White House ceremony in June 2008.

After their son's death, his parents wrote, "Ross did not become OUR hero by dying to save his fellow Soldiers from a grenade. He was a hero to us long before he died, because he was willing to risk his life to protect the ideals of freedom and justice that America represents."

McGinnis is an example of why Memorial Day is important, Barbero said. It's important to honor and celebrate the veterans who sacrificed for this nation, that the nobility of their service not go unnoticed.

Among those who attended the Memorial Day observance was LTC(R) Joe Bell. He brought a poppy for his father's grave.

"It's more appropriate, he was a Doughboy, he fought in World War I," Bell said. "This is a family cemetery, my parents and my son are buried here. We're near the fence, up high enough to see the setting sun in Alabama."

BENCH NOTES

Rain shortens race

The rains came to Concord, N.C., and delayed the Coca-Cola 600, which is usually the longest race on the NASCAR circuit. What should have started Sunday began Monday instead, a first in its 50-year history.

After more than half the laps were run, the rain came and NASCAR officials deemed the race over.

At the end of it all, David Reutimann was declared the winner.

Ryan Newman finished second and Robby Gordon placed third.

This week's race is at Dover International Speedway. Coverage begins at 2 p.m. on Fox.

Helio's hat trick

Helio Castroneves earned his third Indianapolis 500 win Sunday. Castroneves, who was acquitted of most charges in a tax-evasion trial in April, drank the milk and let the tears flow in victory lane. He is the ninth driver to win the race three times.

Dan Wheldon finished second and Danica Patrick got her best finish at Indy, finishing third.

Tragedy for Tyson

Boxer Mike Tyson's 4-year-old daughter, Exodus, was involved in a tragic accident with a treadmill Monday at their home in Phoenix. Tyson was out of town at the time but returned home immediately.

Her 7-year-old brother found her on a treadmill with her neck in a cable that was attached to the machine.

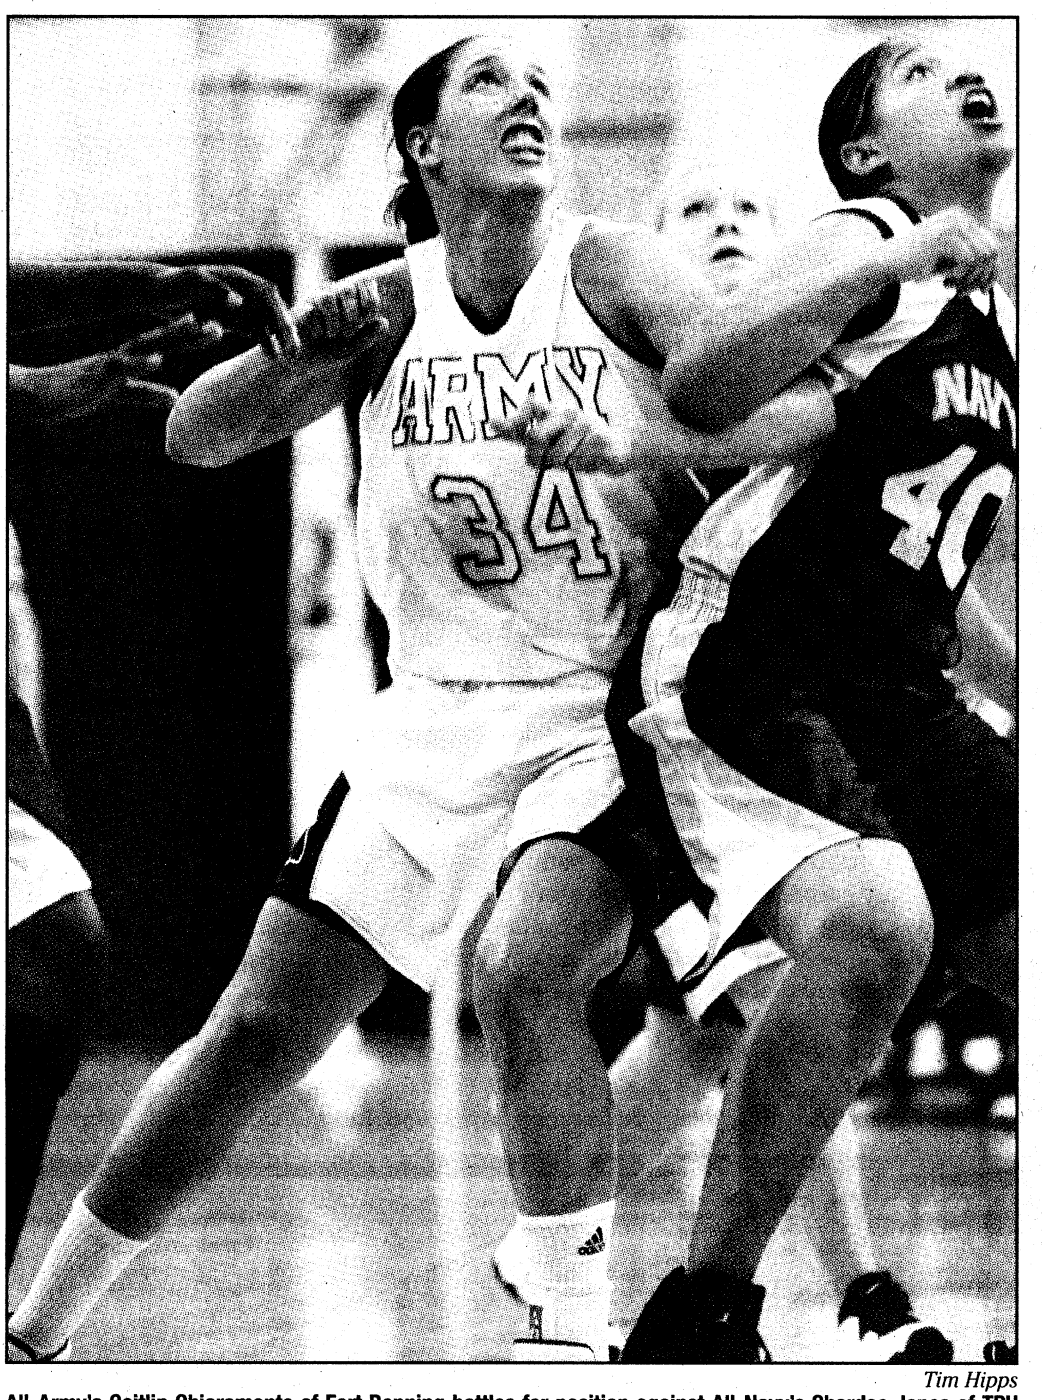
Exodus died at a hospital Tuesday after being on life support following the incident.

Texas earns top seed

The University of Texas nabbed the No. 1 spot for the NCAA baseball tournament. With a 41-13-1 record, the Longhorns won the Big 12 tournament for the fourth time.

Regional play begins today and the College World Series kicks off June 5.

Other national seeds are Cal State Fullerton, LSU, North Carolina, Arizona State, UC Irvine, Oklahoma and Florida.



Here's a great chance to see some of MLB's future rookies in action.

NHL, NBA heats up

The playoffs seem to go on for weeks, but the NHL and NBA should be wrapping up, with the finals beginning soon.

In the midst of baseball, NASCAR and college playoffs, it just seems strange to still be watching "winter" sports. Regardless, both the NBA and NHL have had some outstanding games.

All-Army women post win over All-Navy

FMWR COMMAND

MILLINGTON, Tenn. — Shamyra "Lil Bit" Daigle brought the biggest game to the All-Army women's 74-70 victory over All-Navy in the 2009 Armed Forces Basketball Championships, May 16, at Naval Support Activity Mid-South.

Daigle, 24, who insists she measures all of 60 inches and 105 pounds, played larger than a 5-foot guard against women from the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps who were head-and-shoulders taller.

"We call her Lil Bit," All-Army women's coach Mark Knight said of the Fort Bragg, N.C., Soldier. "She's five-foot-nothing. They tower over her. She's probably 4-11 and some change, but that Soldier is solid and full of intestinal fortitude. She's the best defensive point guard I've ever seen. I've never seen anybody who can track down people that well."

Daigle converted two steals into breakaway layups that helped All-Army maintain control midway through the second half against All-Navy, followed by an assist off another fast break.

Aquanita Burras, another guard from Fort Bragg who played for the University of Kansas, led All-Army against All-Navy with a game-high 27 points. Caitlin Chiaramonte, 29, who played collegiately for Richmond and Fordham, professionally for three teams overseas, and is now stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., had 16 points and 12 rebounds. Theais Edmonds, one of Daigle's teammates on Fort Bragg's post-level team, added 15 points and 13 rebounds.

But when push came to shove and All-Navy guard Erica Bouttry squared up for a potential game-tying 3-pointer in the waning seconds, Daigle dashed in from nowhere and blocked the shot. Daigle was fouled during the ensuing loose-ball scramble and a technical foul was assessed against All-Navy's bench for arguing the call.

Daigle sank one of two free throws to thwart All-Navy's comeback with 2.5 seconds left. For good measure, Daigle stole All-Navy's final inbound pass as the final horn sounded.

"What a Cinderella story," Knight exclaimed. "She won the game for us. You couldn't have scripted it any better. When the game is on the line, she tends to show up. She definitely shows up on the defensive side, but this time she showed

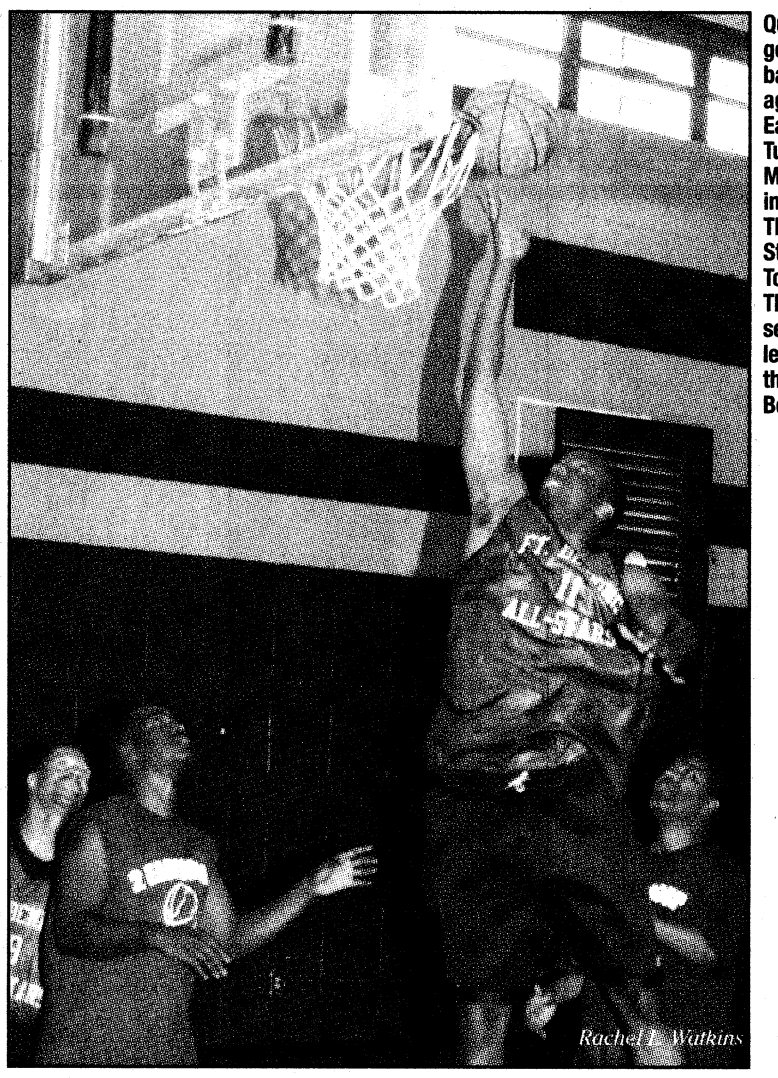
Benning All Stars defeat Too Easy

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning All Stars defeated the Too Easy Group, 78-72, in the Old School Basketball League Tuesday at A.J. McClung YMCA in Columbus.

Too Easy began the game with two two-pointers but Fort Benning's Antonio Anthony answered back with a three-point basket. As the game progressed, both teams remained close on the scoreboard. Too Easy tied Fort Benning twice, but Fort Benning's defense prevented Too Easy from taking the lead and by the end of the first half, Benning led, 46-39.

The second half was a mirror image of the first half. Too Easy tied Benning twice again, but didn't capitalize due to Fort Benning's defense. With 14 minutes to go in the game, Too Easy was tied with Fort Benning, 54-54, but Fort Benning's Solomon Loving broke the stalemate with two successful free throws. Too Easy came back to tie the game again at 56-56, but Loving scored on two more free throws to put Benning back on top.



Fort Benning continued to score to extend their lead to 67-60 and hang on for a 78-72 win.

"I think it was a competitive and hard-fought game by both teams," said Fort Benning's Victor Stephens. "We had good teamwork, defense and we did really good on outside shooting."

Fort Benning's Anthony, who scored 16 points, said it was anyone's game.

"We played with power in the first half, but in the second

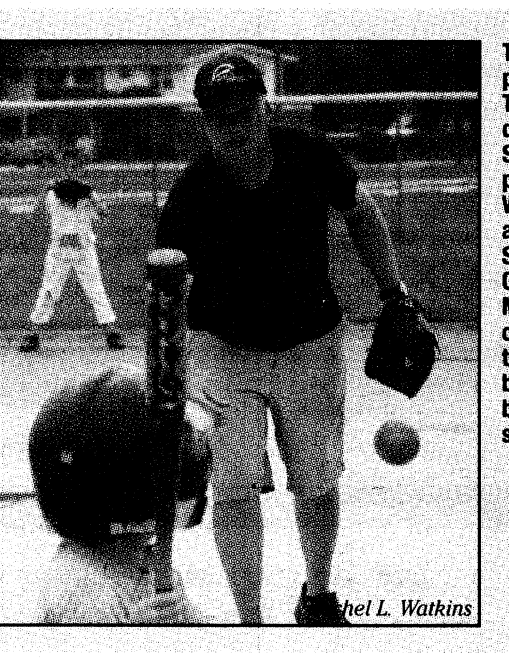
COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach emphasizes passion for game

Fond memories drive coach's teaching style

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

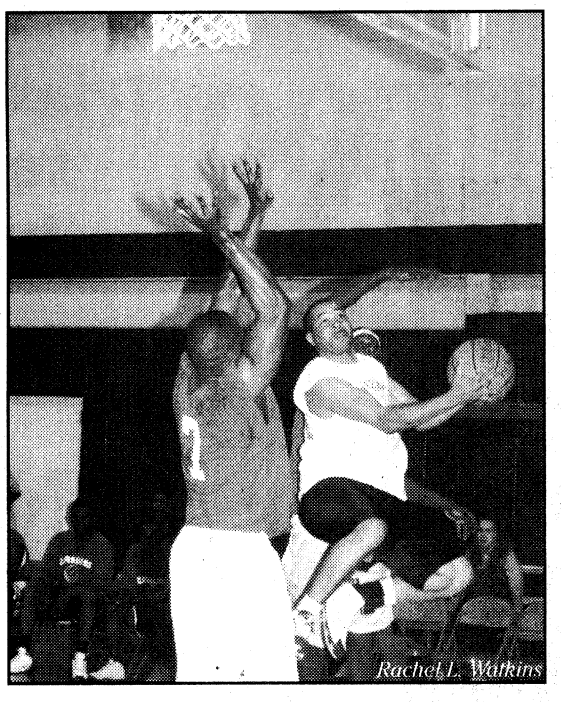
Coaching baseball is a family affair for Tim Morgan. His dad has been coaching little league for 30 years and Morgan and his two brothers coach baseball.



"I grew up playing baseball and I have fond memories of it," said Morgan, who coaches the 7- to 8-year-old Silver Hawks and the 9- to 11-year-old Knights at Fort Benning. "I want to teach my teams to love baseball just like my dad did with me when I was a kid."

Morgan played baseball in Washington, D.C. and Fort Hood, Texas, and has coached Little League in Virginia and Fort Benning.

Morgan can't play baseball anymore because of a past knee surgery, but he enjoys watching the children learn the game, he said.



"The most rewarding part of coaching is when you get that kid who has never played before and by the end of the season is developing into a decent ballplayer —

Cavaliers defeat Benning Heat

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Cavaliers defeated the Fort Benning Heat 60-49 Tuesday at A.J. McClung YMCA in Columbus.

The Cavaliers jumped out to a 6-0 advantage while Fort Benning got a late start scoring. The Heat got back in the game with four points, but the Cavaliers matched the Heat score for score.

Benning closed the gap to 14-13 and tied the game at 16, but the Cavaliers forged ahead.

But the Heat rallied and closed the gap, knotting the game at 28-28 as the two teams headed into halftime.

In the second half, Fort Benning led 34-32, but it was short-lived, as the Cavaliers took back the lead and went on to a 60-49 victory.

"We could have won and we could have played a lot better," said Fort Benning's Larry Addy. "I think we tried to do our own individual scoring instead of sticking to a plan. I think we fought them pretty hard — we just didn't get back into the game."

Benning's Norman King said the team's tempo could have been better.

"We had a good pace going in the beginning but it flip-flopped. One minute we were up and the next minute we were down," he said. "And we didn't take enough time with our shots and that's when they took control of the game."

Up next for the Benning Heat is the Kingdom Ballers at 10 a.m. Saturday. The Cavaliers will take on the Lakers at 7 p.m. Monday. Both games are at A.J. McClung YMCA in Columbus. Admission is $1.

half, we got a little lackadaisical — it was a close game," Anthony said. "We need to work on being serious throughout the entire game."

The Fort Benning All Stars are second in the league, trailing only the first-place Boston Celtics.

The All Stars will take on the Celtics at 11 a.m. Saturday.

Up next for Too Easy is the Boston Celtics at 7 p.m. Thursday. Both games will be at A.J. McClung YMCA in Columbus. Spectators are welcome and admission is $1.

Reverse Sprint Triathlon pre-registration ends June 5

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Think triathlon, but in reverse.

Instead of swimming, cycling and then running, participants in the Reverse Sprint Triathlon will run 5K, bike 20K and then swim 550 meters June 6 starting at the Main Post Bowling Alley.

Beginning with the run on Main Post, participants will cycle near Uchee Creek and make their way back to Main Post to complete the swimming portion at Carey Pool.

"Physically, anyone can get through this competition, but you have to push yourself past your comfort level to succeed and you have to have a lot of heart," said Jessica Troutman, co-manager of the Smith and Family fitness centers, who is working the event.

Troutman, who has participated in various triathlons over the past two years, said the swimming portion will probably be the most challenging. "I think most people gravitate toward running and cycling for regular exercise," Troutman said. "Some people may not swim on a regular basis and that makes it more challenging. And by the time they start swimming, they will probably be the most exhausted."

The age groups for the individual competition include 12 and younger, 13-17, 18-29, 30-39, 40-49 and 50 and older. The top three finishers in each age group in the male and female category will receive awards. Teams of two or three can also compete in coed, male, female and family categories.

Seventy-five participants are registered for the triathlon so far and Troutman said she hopes for more.

The event is open to everyone and anyone who can physically compete can participate, she said.

Pre-registration is open until Friday at the Smith Fitness Center or from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday at El Zapata on Main Post. Pre-registration costs $30 for individuals and $40 for teams. Registration at the day of the event is $35 for individuals and $45 for teams.

Registration is from 6:30 to 7:30 a.m. and the race begins at 8 a.m. Troutman said competitors should plan on arriving at the event no later than 7 a.m. to get registration packets. Helmets are required and competitors can't wear headphones during the competition. There will be a mandatory safety briefing at 7:45 a.m.

Spectators are welcome and can bring chairs and coolers, but no pets. For more information or a registration form, go to www.benningmwr.com/upcomingevents.php.

All-Army: Blocked shot secures win

Tim Hipps
Shamyra "Lit Bit" Daigle of Fort Bragg, N.C., goes for a steal against All-Navy's Tysheka Simpson during All-Army's 74-70 victory over the eventual tournament champion in the 2009 Armed Forces Basketball Championships May 16 at Naval Support Activity Mid-South in Millington, Tenn.

up offensively just as well — just an outstanding athlete.

"You don't expect that kind of electricity and lightning coming out of someone so small. And when you see it, you're in awe."

During training camp, the All-Army women played against three pro-am teams — the New York Gazelles, Baltimore Stars and D.C. Blue Streak — and split a pair of games with the Washington Area Military Athletic Conference All-Stars.

"We played three solid games in New York City the last weekend before coming here," Knight said. "So I felt very confident in what we had."

The All-Army team then headed to Tennessee to take on the best from its sister services. The highlight was the victory over host All-Navy.

"It really probably didn't change our outcome in the tournament standings, but it definitely can change theirs," Chiaramonte said of All-Navy, which won its second consecutive Armed Forces title with a 70-62 victory over All-Air Force on Sunday. "It's nice to be able to come in here and make some noise and lift this tournament up. That got everyone excited. So did Daigle. She is sort of the engine for our team. She never quits and she keeps us going.

"For it to end with a blocked shot by her, just sort of sums up our team. It was nice to have it end that way."

Daigle, Chiaramonte, Burras and Tarina Lloyd of Ansbach, Germany, were selected to represent All-Army on the All-Armed Forces team, scheduled to compete Aug. 7-9 at the Tournament of the Stars Basketball Classic in Lake Charles, La.

Morgan: Looks to next level

making good plays on the field and making solid contact at the plate," Morgan said.

Coaching takes time, but it's worth it, he said.

"Being in the military community, I know when I'm deployed other dads will be coaching my kids, so I am happy to return the favor," Morgan said.

Morgan is preparing his coach-pitch team for the next level — a pitcher that is a player instead of a coach. The coach-pitch team will need to take control of the game without coaches on the field at the next level, Morgan said.

The older team will also play on a bigger infield at the 13-year-old level.

Passion for the game and learning the fundamentals and rules of the game are Morgan's top priorities for his players, he said.

"Passion and knowledge of the game can go a long way — players can use what they learn now throughout their baseball careers," he said.

Fire Strikers defeat Fort Benning soccer team

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

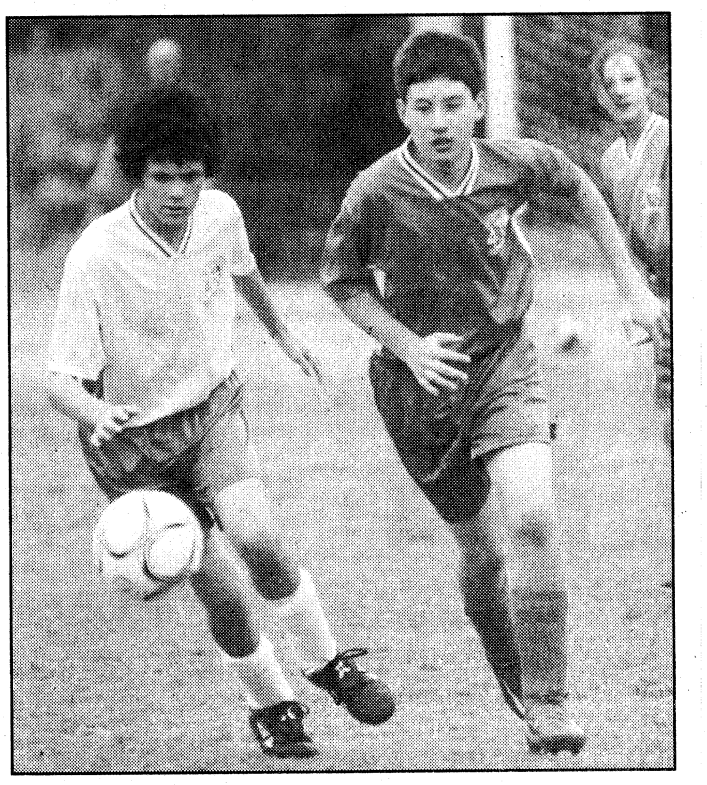
The Columbus Fire Strikers defeated the 11-to-14-year-old Fort Benning soccer team 1-0 May 21 at the Woodruff Farm Soccer Complex in the semifinals of the Columbus Youth Soccer Club's 14 and younger coed spring tournament.

Both teams battled back and forth for control of the game in the first half with neither able to take advantage of field position until Fire Striker Trey Carpenter broke the stalemate with a goal.

Fort Benning attempted a shot late in the first half, but missed and went into the half trailing 1-0.

Both teams made shots on the goal in the second half, but by the end of the final half, neither team could capitalize, sealing the win for the Fire Strikers.

"Don't hang your head low — we had a good season," Fort Benning coach Julio Miranda told the team.



"We were down a player and short on the field," Miranda said. "We had just as many opportunities to take the lead as the other team did, we just didn't capitalize on them."

"I think we could have had a good game, but today just wasn't our day," 14-year-old midfielder Kaycee Orlando said.

Carpenter, who scored the winning goal for the Fire Strikers, said his goal was a "lucky shot."

"It was a tough game because their defense was hard to get past," he said.

With the loss, the Fort Benning team concluded its season while the Fire Strikers advanced to the tournament finals, losing to the Columbus Knights, 1-0.

House of Heroes supporter runs for veterans

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

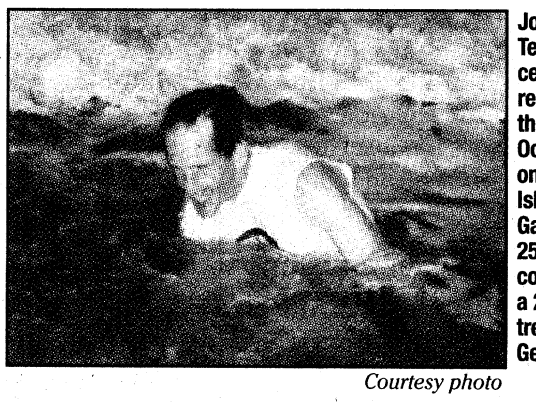
Ultra-marathon runner John Teeples completed a 270-mile four-day run from Columbus to Tybee Island, Ga., Memorial Day weekend to raise funds and awareness for House of Heroes. His goal was to raise $20,000.

"We've never had anybody do anything like this for House of Heroes," said Susan Gerkin, House of Heroes executive director.

Teeples began the first leg of the run at the National Infantry Museum May 22 along with 11 runners who ran with him 14 miles through Fort Benning.

"Two days of rain and two days of heat and humidity," Teeples said of the run. "No way it would have been possible without the help of friends, family and supporters. I'm very blessed to be able to do this."

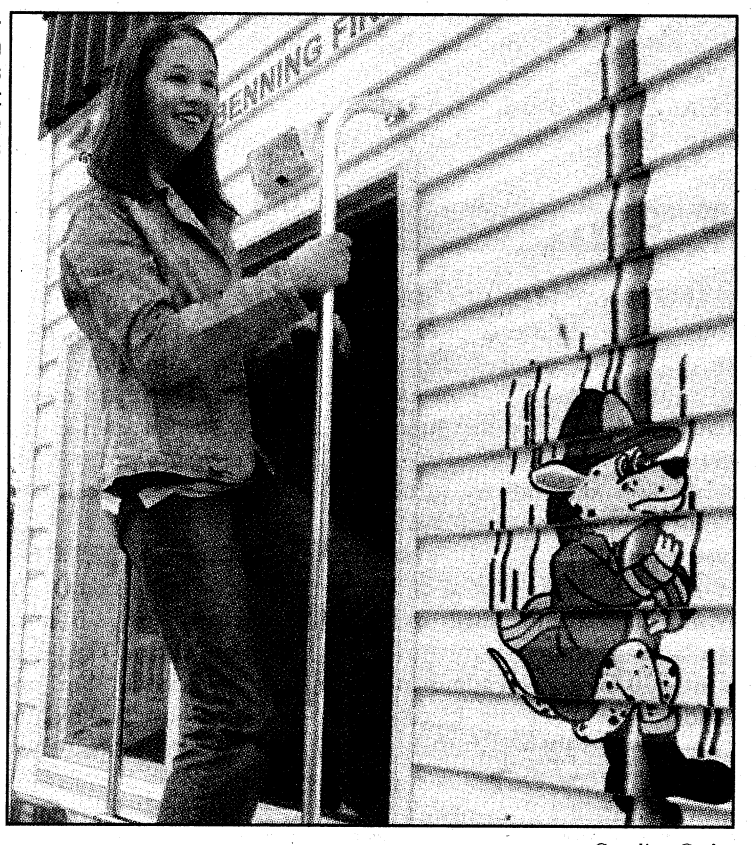
Teeples said he kept a journal during the run, which can be found on www.runfortheheroes.com.



"It tells details of the run and things that happened on that four-day excursion as well as pictures of sites across Georgia I took with my camera," Teeples said.

Teeples reached Tybee Island at 8:45 p.m. May 25.

"I saw the big old Atlantic ocean in front of me," Teeples said. "I had a bunch of sore spots from rubbing and chafing and that water felt so good on those sore spots."



Though he fell short of his goal,

Thirteen-year-old Rebekah McCuen climbs out of the Fort Benning Fire Department's safety and fire education trailer window to simulate exiting a burning building May 21. McCuen, of Pine Mountain, Ga., visited the trailer with her sisters, Shannon, 12, and Mariah, 10, and their mother, Tanja, who home-schools the girls. Rebekah said she was surprised to find the trailer shook and rocked.

Trailer simulates fire, tornado circumstances

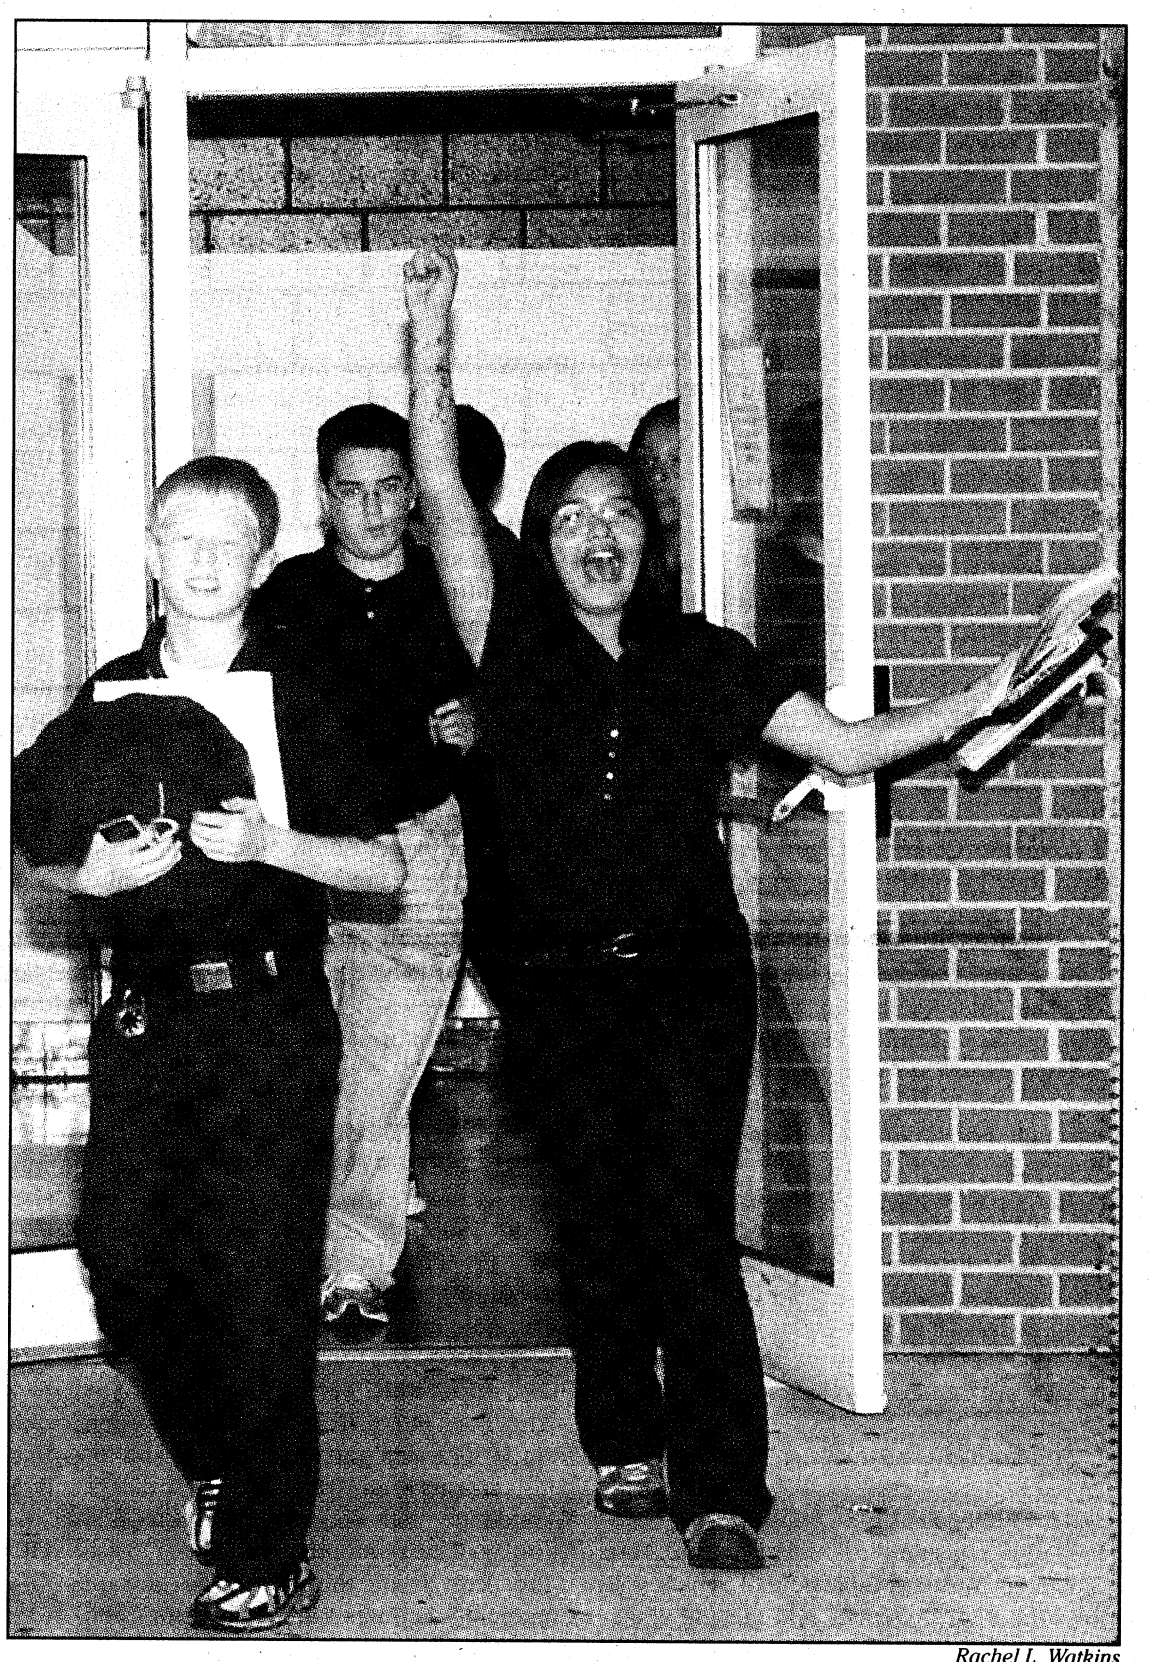
Thanks to a new teaching tool, Fort Benning community members can learn about fire and tornado safety by experiencing their effects firsthand.

The Fort Benning Fire Department acquired a 40-foot safety and fire education trailer in April that provides hands-on, interactive simulations of being trapped at home during a house fire, hurricane and tornado. The trailer features effects such as rocking and shaking, smoke, flickering lights, a door that heats up, and a window equipped with a ladder participants can climb down to simulate exiting a house fire.

Using the trailer will help firefighters and inspectors better educate parents and children on what to do during a fire or tornado, said Ryan Earwood, Fort Benning fire inspector.

"It's one of those things you don't really think about until it's too late, so we want people to keep it in mind," Earwood said.



Costing approximately $49,000, the trailer is divided into two rooms — one simulating a bedroom, and one with a small kitchen inspectors use to demonstrate kitchen safety.

Lessons using the trailer can be adapted to meet the learning needs of any age group, Earwood said. For young children, Earwood focuses on teaching where to go during a fire, and for parents, he talks about the importance of proper fire extinguisher and smoke detector maintenance.

"People tend to put their fire extinguishers in the back of their cabinets where they can't reach them," he said. "We want them to put it in the front, and to check their fire extinguisher when they check their smoke alarms. If they have questions, they can call the fire department and we'll come check their fire extinguisher for them.

Post EMS earns top region award

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

After 50 years of serving Fort Benning, the post's Emergency Medical Services has been recognized at the regional level for the first time.

Representatives from the West Central Georgia Region 7 EMS council named Fort Benning EMS the region's EMS of the Year for 2009. Fort Benning EMS was selected from among 20 emergency medical services in a 13-county area. Award criteria included response times, community involvement and service projects and participation in regional and statewide EMS boards and councils.

Dee Dunford, chief of Fort Benning EMS, credits the paramedics' dedication with helping them earn the award.

"Their dedication to the community and the level of care provided is the best I've seen in the 20 years I've been in emergency medical services," he said. "Their commitment to service is (great). If someone's out sick or on vacation, they step up and make sure we have the manning to handle the call volume. Their (medical) knowledge is strong. I would say they go above and beyond every day."

Students explore careers during WOW Day

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

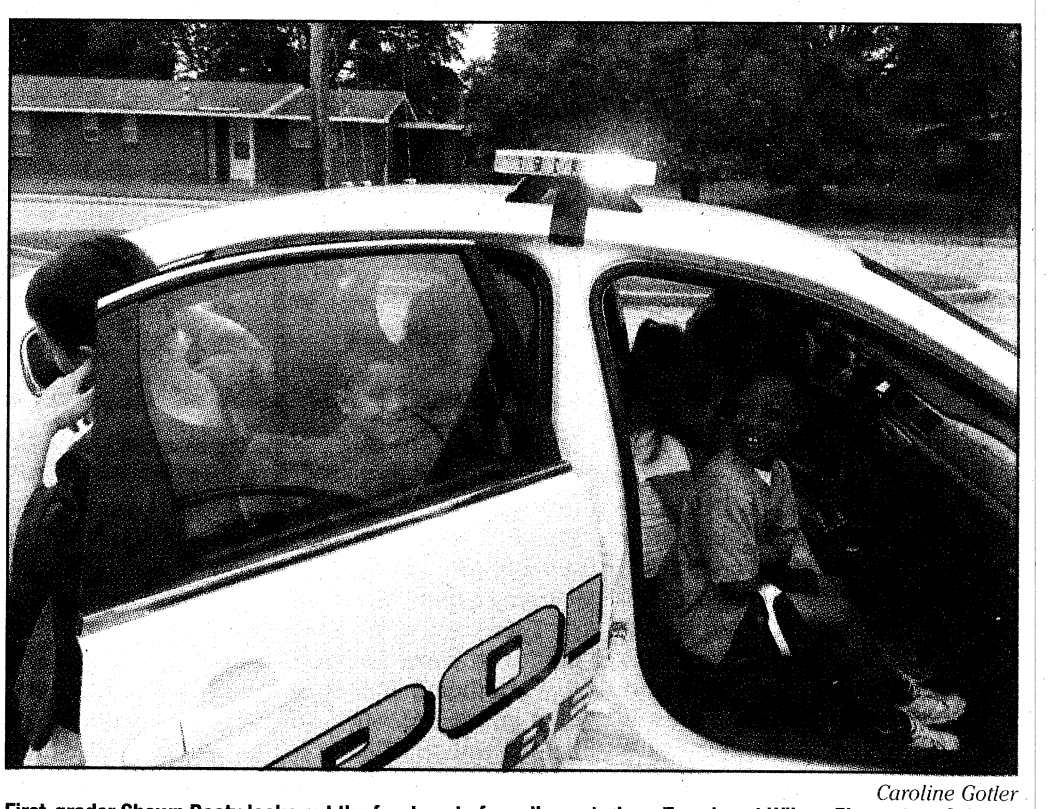
Students at Wilson Elementary School may be a decade or more away from entering the work force, but it's not too early for them to think about careers, school officials said.

Tricommunity business members visited Wilson Tuesday to talk to students about their careers during the school's second World of Work Day. The speakers included representatives from Columbus Bank and Trust and Alderson Electric, a clown with Zoo City USA, a Department of the Army police officer, veterinarian, physician's assistant and a TV news anchor.

"We want to make the connection between learning and education and getting a job, but we're doing it in a fun way," said Evelyn Montgomery, school counselor and event organizer. "Hopefully it will get students thinking about their interests, and they'll realize, 'Hey, this profession is a viable option for me.' We want kids to know what's out there."

Students experienced the speakers' careers through hands-on interaction including speaking through a police patrol car's loudspeaker, playing with a cat and flipping through bank account transaction registers.

Fifth-grader Victoria Williams said meeting veterinarian Roy Carroll reinforced her desire to join Carroll's profession.



"I've always loved animals and I've always wanted to take care of animals and make sure they're safe," she said. "Today I learned they also do surgery on animals, take X-rays and treat them like they would humans. I'm going to make sure I get a good education and do what I need to do (to become a vet.)"

For Carroll, speaking to students was a way of giving back to Fort Benning, where he served four years as a captain in the veterinary corps.

"I wanted to show them what they might strive for in the future," he said. "And I hope they got a little more understanding of what it takes to become a veterinarian."

While the speakers emphasized the role of education in getting a job, they also talked about the importance of working hard in one's career.

"It's not all fun and games," said Christopher Bradshaw, a fifth-grader. "Nothing is handed to you. It's a lot of school, a lot of work, a lot of dedication and sometimes hardships. I learned you need to work on your goals and don't ever give up."

Montgomery called the speakers role models and said she hoped students would learn from their examples.

"These are people who are committed to what they do, and they're taking time out of their busy schedules to be with these kids," she said. "That says a lot."

Trailer: Draws more than 300

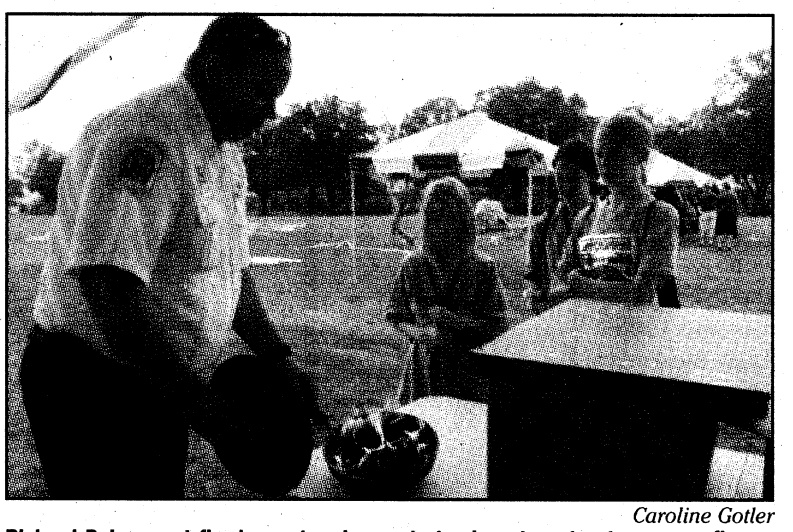
"The biggest thing we teach kids is not to hide during a fire. We hope the parents will get to them, but if they can't, kids should either stay close to the door, or if it's hot, the window, so firefighters can find them more easily."



Earwood emphasized the importance of having an emergency fire exit plan.

"Have a meeting point," he said. "A lot of parents don't know where they would go (in a fire) and realize after visiting the trailer they need to think about it."

One of the trailer's biggest benefits is that it provides a hands-on experience that helps participants better retain what they've learned, Earwood said.

"We could sit here and talk about it all day, but when you see the smoke and hear the smoke detector go off, you think, 'Hey this could be my house,'" he said. "When you actually see it, you're able to start thinking about it."

Tanja McCuen, of Pine Mountain, Ga., visited the trailer May 21 with her daughters, Rebekah, 13, Shannon, 12 and Mariah, 10, who she home-schools. McCuen called it a great learning experience.

Caroline Gotler

Richard Baker, post fire inspector, demonstrates how to put out a grease fire as Mariah McCuen, left, Rebekah McCuen, and Shannon McCuen watch May 21.

"There are a lot of things I intuitively know and don't think to teach them, like putting the lid on a grease fire," she said. "This helped with that."

"I learned what not to do in a tornado," Rebekah said. "We've done fire drills before, but not tornado drills."

Shannon said the smoke and grease fire demonstrations were her favorite part, while Mariah enjoyed climbing out the trailer's window.

The McCuens were just four of hundreds of people who have visited the trailer so far, Earwood said. The fire department plans to bring the trailer to town hall meetings and to future Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation events.

EMS: Reaches 50-year mark

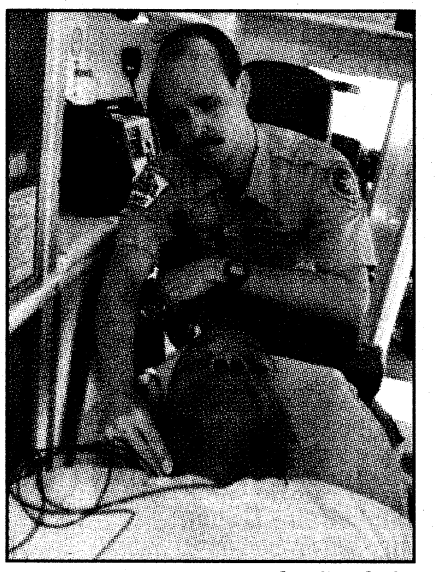
just medical emergencies. Dunford said paramedics hand out coloring books and crayons to children being treated at Martin Army Community Hospital, and visit schools to talk to children about safety. EMS also provides paramedics for programs of the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation, such as Oktoberfest and Salute to the South.



Fort Benning EMS plays a different role than civilian emergency services because they support training, Dunford said. Paramedics are required to be on hand for some types of nighttime training exercises, as well as training on high-caliber weapons.

For many of Fort Benning's paramedics, of whom more than half are former service members, EMS provides a way to continue serving their country.

"Sometimes I miss being in the military, but I like the fact that I can help Soldiers and their family members," said paramedic Michael Good, a former Army sergeant who served nine years as a medic. "That's one of the true benefits of being out here."

Providing top-notch EMS services helps deployed Soldiers better perform their missions because they know their families are taken care of, Dunford said.

"It's a confidence builder for those troops," he said.

Run: Raises money

Gerkin said Teeples raised enough money to repair nine homes in the tricommunity area.

Gerkin said the organization spends approximately $1,500 per home, has a waiting list of nearly 400 people and aims to repair 40 homes each year.

House of Heroes is a nonprofit organization providing minor repairs and improvements to the homes of elderly or disabled military and public safety veterans and their spouses at no cost.

Since 2000, House of Heroes has repaired the homes of more than 320 veterans through a collaborative effort between 2,000 volunteers, employees, youth groups, local students and Fort Benning Soldiers.

Teeples said his intention wasn't to place emphasis on his 270-mile run, but to draw attention to veterans in the community.

"They've done incredible things, much more than running 270 miles," he said.

Through House of Heroes, people can make a difference for veterans right in their own backyard, he said.

SSG Robert Price, of Flight Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade, ran with Teeples part of each day to honor friends he lost in war and the veterans in his family. Price deployed eight times in his 21 years of service.

"I know when I retire there will be people out there like (Teeples) to help me," he said.

In August, the organization will send out teams to repair selected homes.

Last year, 48 teams participated, said Gary Goodman, House of Heroes board member.

This year, Teeples plans to be on one of them.

"I want to continue on," said Teeples, who will be a first-timer repairing homes with House of Heroes.

Janie Pearson, Fort Benning liaison to House of Heroes and a long-time volunteer, said she sees a lot of military and civilian personnel get involved with the organization.

Units put together teams of 20-30 people to help repair homes, said Pearson, who works in the Plans, Analysis and Integration Office of the garrison commander.

"It breaks your heart to know some of these (veterans) don't have family members that will help them," she said. "You would hope if you weren't there to take care of your parents or grandparents that someone would help them out."

Pearson, who helped repair eight homes, said she volunteers with House of Heroes to say thank you to veterans and their families for serving our country.

Pearson said anyone aged 16 or older can volunteer with a team. Each team is assigned a captain and co-captain, who must attend a mandatory one-to-two hour training session in July.

For more information, call Pearson at 706-545-5607 or e-mail janie.pearson@us.army.mil.

House of Heroes will have several fundraisers this summer before repairs begin in August.

House of Heroes will have a fundraiser at the Chick-fil-A at Peachtree Mall from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. June 20; Ten percent of proceeds from meals purchased at the restaurant will be donated to the organization, House of Heroes will sell shirts for $20 with all proceeds benefiting the organization and Teeples will be present to meet visitors and autograph shirts.

Applebee's on Gentian Boulevard will have a pancake fundraiser from 8 to 10 a.m. Aug. 22. Tickets are $7 and proceeds benefit House of Heroes. To purchase tickets, call 706-569-7011.

A banquet will be held at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center Oct. 23 to honor the recipients of home repairs as well as the volunteers.

Luncheon: Features history of Japanese Americans

just China, but there are others -- Korea, Japan ... it gives people a chance to get educated about all the different cultures that are out there," said Church, who is half Korean and served her first tour in Korea.

"I think the Army is the best example of cultural awareness," she said. "Look around the room. Where else in a business organization are you going to see pretty much every state represented, every culture represented? You have it right here."

Although today the military is a strong supporter of equality, guest speaker 1SG(R) Harold Lusano reminded people of a time, in the wake of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, when hysteria turned the country against Japanese Americans.

"From March to May 1942, more than 110,000 Japanese Americans and American citizens of Japanese descent were uprooted from their homes and moved to relocation camps," said Lusano, who is of Chinese, Hawaiian, Japanese and Filipino descent. "Businesses were lost, homes sold quickly and far below market value, families were separated, privacy and dignity stripped from men, women and children — all because of the color of their skin and the origin of their ethnic heritage."

> "Ultimately, more than 800 Soldiers, virtually all Japanese Americans, gave their lives to reach 275 of their comrades. They believed in America even when America didn't believe in them."
> — 1SG(R) Harold Lusano

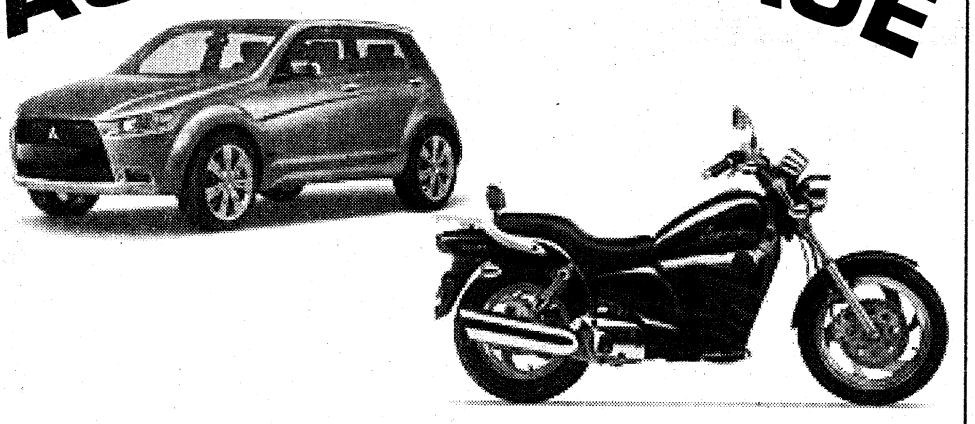
A year later, the 442nd Infantry Regimental Combat Team, a segregated Japanese American unit, was formed. Though facing discrimination at home, the unit risked everything to rescue Soldiers in the 1st Battalion, 141st Infantry Regiment, who were surrounded by German troops.

"Ultimately, more than 800 Soldiers, virtually all Japanese Americans, gave their lives to reach 275 of their comrades," Lusano said. "They believed in America even when America didn't believe in them."



Asian Pacific Americans were not accorded full consideration for the Medal of Honor because of prevailing racism at the time, he said. More than 50 years later, 22 Asian Pacific Americans were upgraded from the Distinguished Service Cross to the Medal of Honor.

"May we never forget the sacrifices made by others on our behalf, on behalf of justice, liberation and the American ideal of freedom," Lusano said. "America is a country of color ... a huge rainbow arching from the island of Hawaii to New York City. It's people of every race and religion coming together as one to support our great nation."

Mark time for friends, strangers through kindness

Chaplain (CPT) Cliff Vicars
1ST BATTALION, 330TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

Occasionally life presents us with opportunities and challenges that become so significant we use them to mark time. Years might pass by and we think back to the important occasions that happened to us and we "remember when."

The time markers of life aren't just opportunities and challenges, they are also people. Strangers become friends and their friendship follows us from assignment to assignment, and when we get together, we look back with mutual eyes and enjoy what has been a fascinating journey. We remember that we have shared burdens and celebrated common victories. We felt dismayed by some moments and enjoyed others. Through the ups and downs of each day, we come to share our life with those around us, and they have reciprocated.

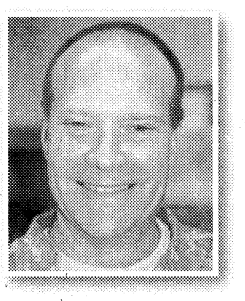
We know personally how others have affected us. Perhaps they stopped by when they heard we received sad news from home or called to congratulate us when something good came our way. They used our circumstances as opportunities to reach out to us and let us know we mattered to them. Their acts of kindness became our time markers, and when we think of them or the occasion, we feel anew their compassion.

It is important to remember our time markers. It is equally important to remind ourselves that we are time markers for other people. When we do something for someone else, though seemingly insignificant to us, it takes on a life of its own for them, and when they look back, they remember not just their circumstances, but that we were there. Our deeds mark time for other people.

The Fort Benning community is a wonderful place for marking time, not just for ourselves, but for those around us. We have neighbors returning from a deployment or getting ready to deploy who need to know they are appreciated. Trips to the commissary or hospital put us in contact with old Soldiers who have long been retired and could use a friendly hello from someone still in service, letting them know they are still important to the Army. We see excited young Soldiers in the PX or out at exit 10 who are new to the Army, and we mark time for them by wishing them well or thanking them for becoming part of our Army family.

We do the work of God by showing kindness to those around us.

Use three words to communicate needs with others



Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Somebody knocked me off my feet this past week with a wonderful report of how only three words had revolutionized a relationship.

They were words this spouse had heard before. They weren't complicated but were easy to remember, and they produced an immediate change in the emotional temperature of her house.

The words made her spouse smile. The words made her son smile. The words made both the husband and the son do things that she'd been wanting done for longer than she could remember.

A woman or a man can use the words. A child or an adult can use the words. The words work in the home. The words work in the unit. The words work in an office. The words work in a school. The words work in Scouts. The words work at church.

OK, before I start sounding too much like a Dr. Seuss book, what are the words?

The words are simply, "Would you please ..."

Take a minute right now, and whether you're a commander of a battalion or a squad leader of two toddlers, think about how many times in a day you could use this powerful tool for cooperation. Psychologists have intricate theories and postulates as to why this phrase works. However, you, like me, may not necessarily want to know "how the watch works;" you just want to know what time it is. The bottom line is: try it — it works.

Try it with your mate. Instead of, "I need you to do what you said you'd do and get that garbage out now," try, "Would you please take the garbage out by dinner time for me?"

Try it with your child. Instead of, "Stop yelling, I can't take it anymore," try "Would you please be quiet for Mommy right now?"

Try it with your commander. Instead of, "Hey, bonehead, where'd you get your commission — Wal-Mart?" try, "Would you be so kind as to relax the training schedule and deployment cycle so as to afford me maximum opportunity for meaningful family interaction and personal relaxation?" Well, maybe not ... two out of three ain't bad. I think you get the point.

Joking aside, I'll be anxious to see how your masterful injection of a calm, courteous "would you please" resets the emotional thermostat for those around you. Let me know how you do, and if you'd like some more coaching on how to build a love to last a lifetime, then come see us at The Chaplain Family Life Center, Building 2606 Soldiers' Plaza, Dixie Road, or give us a call at 706-545-1760. We look forward to serving you.

THE BAYONET
MAY 29, 2009

Disney's Up opens today
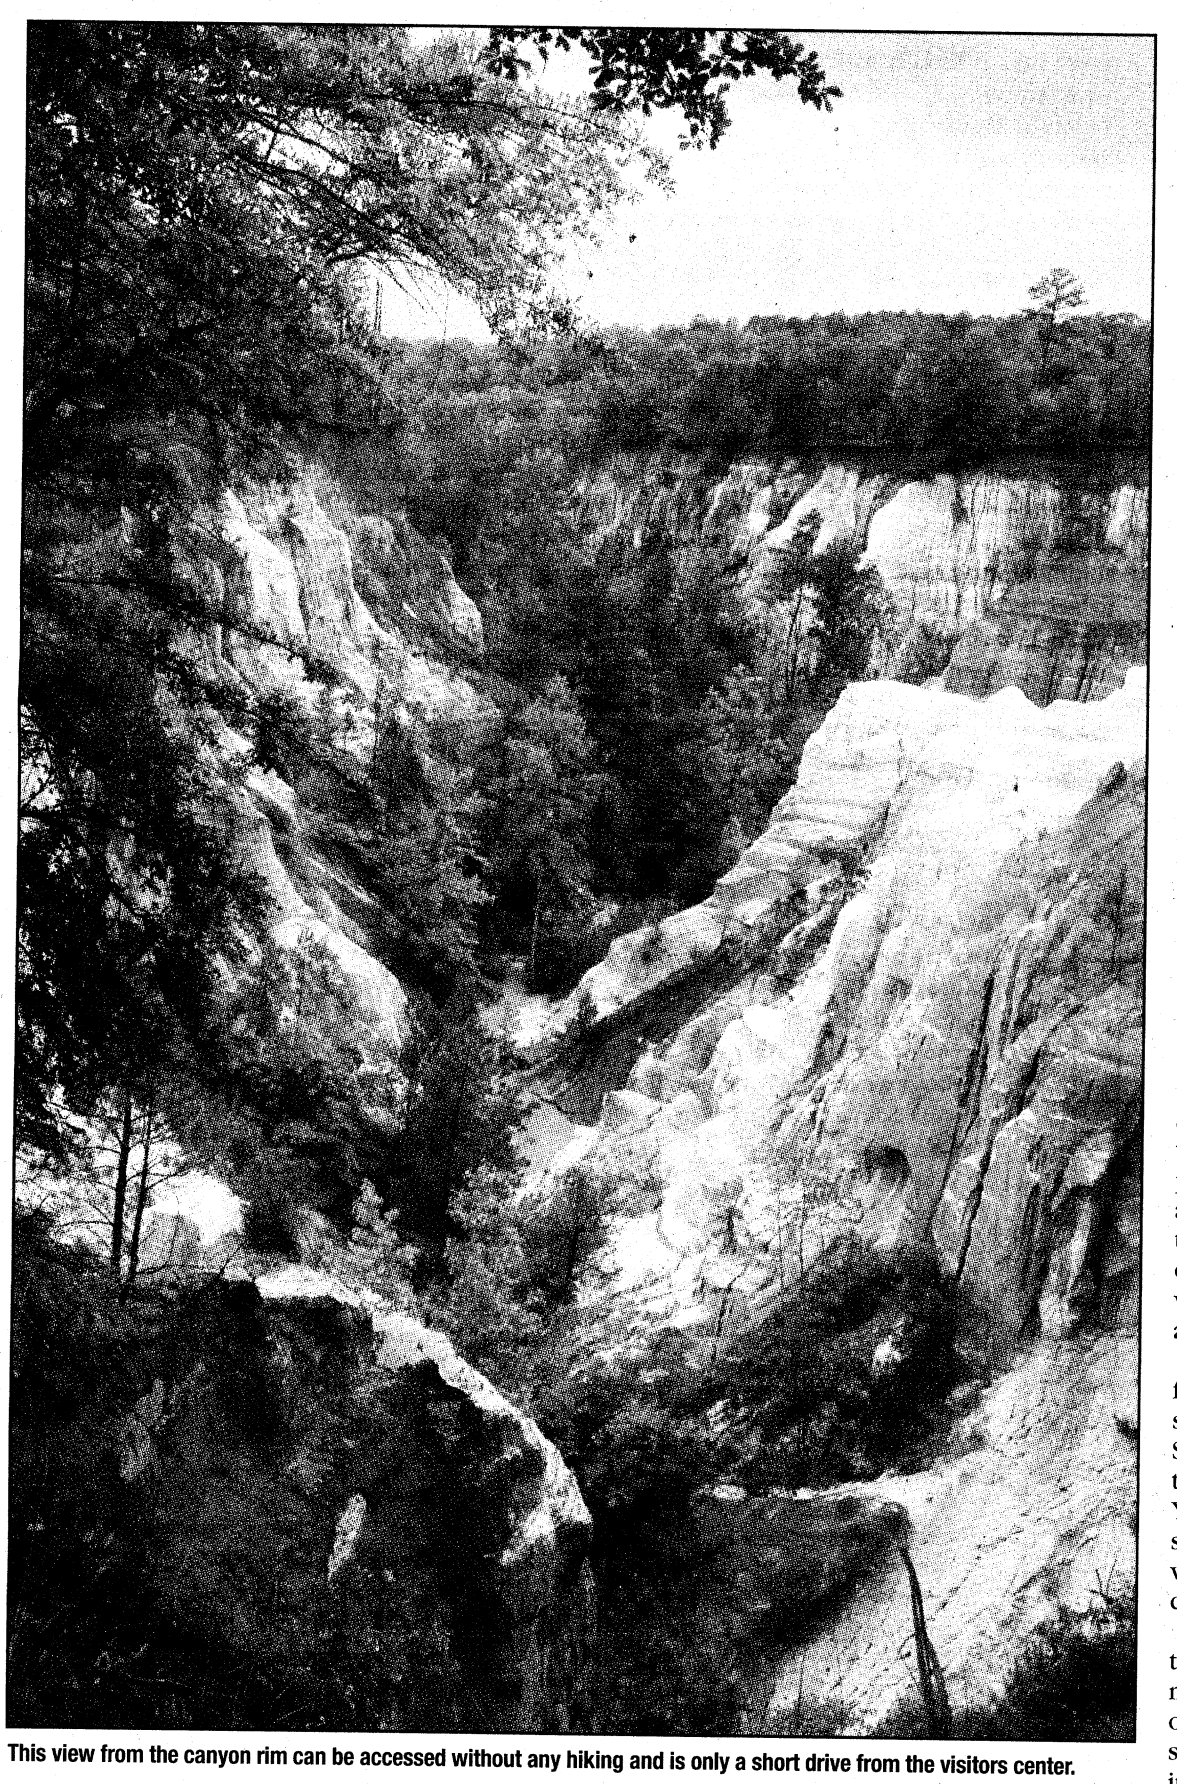
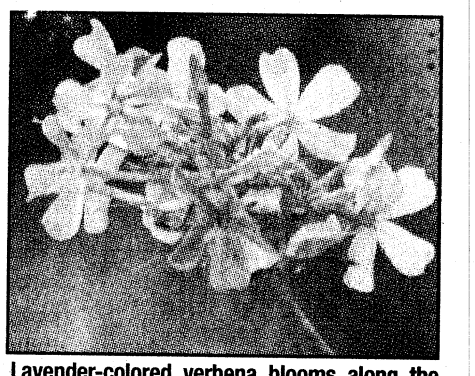
D2



WWW.THEBAYONET.COM

Displays inside the visitors center give details about the flora and fauna, like the raccoon and bobcat pictured, of the canyon ecosystem. This display board features the following information: "The floor of the canyon is a hauntingly beautiful spot awaiting a solitary stroll beside the trickling stream or a place to explore with your companions. A careful examination reveals water colored with an iridescent sheen of plant oils floating on the surface which reflects all of the colors of nature."

Wooden rails guard park visitors from the edge of the canyon walls, which widen over time through erosion. The canyons, however, deepest at 150 feet, will not become any deeper because the ground is too firm to erode further.



This view from the canyon rim can be accessed without any hiking and is only a short drive from the visitors center.

Gorgeous gorges

State park offers views of canyon floors, walls

THE BAYONET

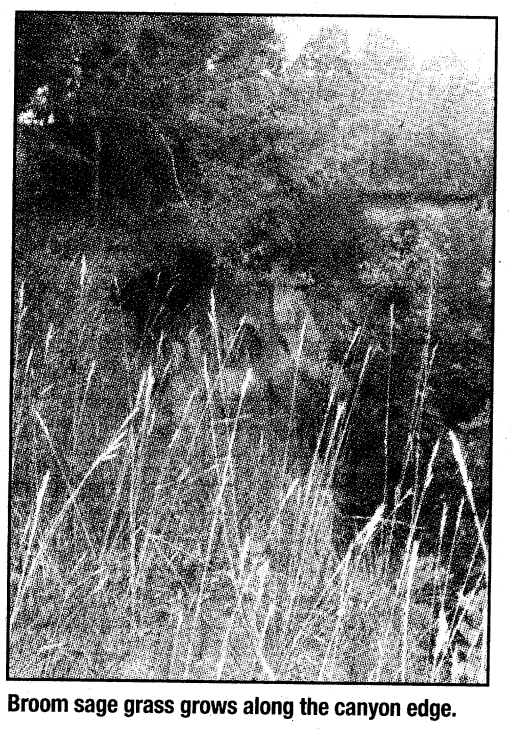
Lavender-colored verbena blooms along the canyon trail in May and June.

If a drive to Arizona to see the Grand Canyon is too far or out of your budget, try a detour 35 miles south to Providence Canyon State Park, also known as Georgia's "Little Grand Canyon." Though the western canyon is far deeper — 5,000 feet compared with 150 — there's nothing "little" about the Georgia version, at least not when you're standing on the canyon rim looking into a massive chasm below.

The park's not small on color either: red, orange, pink, mauve, maroon, brown … and that's only the canyon walls. Around this time of year, several flowers, including the rare plumleaf azalea, bring shades of purple, fuchsia, white and yellow to brighten up the rich greenery of the trails.

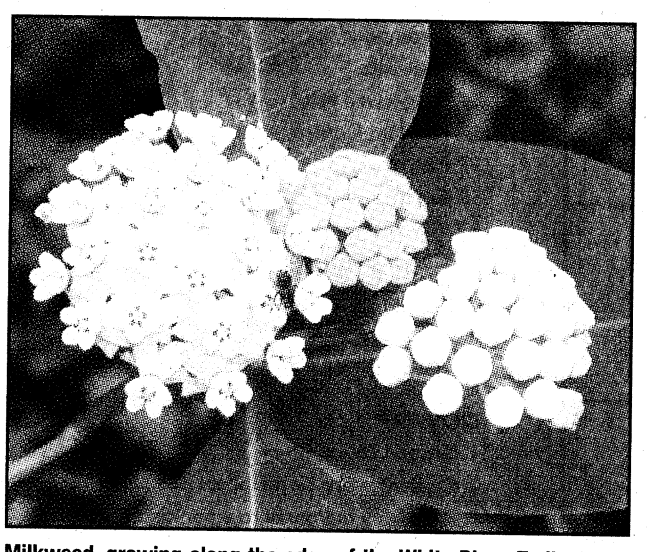
Tailor a trip to this colorful haven to suit your tastes. Looking for the "rugged outdoorsman" experience? Sign up for a primitive campsite along the backcountry trail, a seven-mile path that loops through the woods around the gorges. The sites are true to their name. Don't expect electrical outlets or running water. Instead, you will have your own fire pit and maybe a chance for a bit of adventure.

If you prefer to keep your distance from Mother Nature but still want stunning vistas, drive to the park for a Sunday afternoon stroll and stick near the picnic tables and playgrounds. You can walk along the rim and get some of the best panoramas of the valley without getting your shoes dirty.



For a middle-of-the-trail approach, try the White Blaze Trail. This three-mile walk brings you to the bottom of the canyon floor and ends with scenic views from the top. The trail includes several benches as resting points and a few cars — but don't expect to drive the rest of the way if you're tired. The rusting and dilapidated relics were abandoned by their owners a century ago. They have since become fully incorporated into the surrounding ecosystem as homes for animals, bugs and plants, so much so that they can't be removed without damage to the surrounding environment.

Whether you visit the park for a leisurely ramble or a serious hike, be sure to drop in at the visitors center for an informative look at the history of the canyons. You'll find out about the accidental beginning of the gullies, formed in the 1800s by farmers who razed the ground of vegetation then plowed up and down the land. Plowing in contours helps prevent erosion, but the plowing methods of the growers created deep furrows in the land, which over time widened into gullies and eventually huge rifts in the earth.



Seven miles west of Lumpkin, Ga., this 1,000-acre natural retreat is open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily. It closes three hours earlier starting Sept. 15. Picnic shelters and campsites are available for rent, and parking is $5.

Providence Canyon also hosts several events throughout the year. The next one is Snakes Alive, Saturday at 1 p.m., where visitors can learn about serpents both venomous and harmless.

For more information about events, rentals or directions, visit www.gastateparks.org/info/providence or call 229-838-6202.

Broom sage grass grows along the canyon edge.

Milkweed, growing along the edge of the White Blaze Trail, shows three stages of its growth in the same cluster. Several flowers, including aster, honeysuckle and azaleas, are also in bloom.

Before the creation of Providence Canyon State Park, a homestead was located in the area. This car, like the others left in ruin along the White Blaze Trail, has become an important part of the ecosystem for the plant and animal life in the woods near the canyons and cannot be removed.

Used Cars To Be Sold

For As Low As $49

In one day, local Columbus dealer must eliminate Millions of Dollars worth of pre-owned vehicles.

Columbus, GA
Saturday, May 30, 2009 Carl Gregory on Victory Drive is holding its biggest pre-owned super sale in the history of the company.

Saturday, May 30, 2009, they plan to eliminate their entire pre-owned inventory by means of a

"Eliminator Sale,"

During this one-day event, every pre-owned vehicle will be offered for Incredible low prices - including vehicles for only $49.

Why price them so low? Leo Gonzales, Used Car Manager at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive, offers this explanation for this unprecedented sale. "We've already had record sales in our new car department this year, and we're overstocked with trade-ins. Then we've added a big inventory of factory program cars and some real bargains we've gotten at the auction. So, now we're over-loaded with inventory. It's that simple." Gonzales adds, "Our goal is to reduce the amount of our overall inventory to a more manageable number, and to do that, we've got to price this inventory ridiculously low. Expect cars to be marked with incredible prices."

Gonzales further added, "The community has shown us great support throughout the years, and we're very grateful. We would rather give these great deals to the customer than unload these vehicles at the auction. We believe that people will not only enjoy getting a great deal, they'll also have a lot of fun doing it. Imagine the excitement of being able to buy a vehicle for just $49. Not $49 down, $49 flat."

Almost 200 pre-owned cars, trucks, vans & SUV's are available for this huge event. "We absolutely must reduce our pre-owned inventory at all costs; so customers can expect these vehicles to be sold at incredible low prices," he stated. "We truly will have a vehicle for everyone's budget."

These vehicles are available at this price, Saturday, May 30, 2009, at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive, in Columbus, GA. Special arrangements have been made for a record number of customers, with event parking clearly marked.

According to Kevin Bragg, General Sales Manager at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive, here's how the $49 "Eliminator Sale" works: Saturday, May 30, 2009, precisely at 9:45 am, the gates will be opened so that customers may inspect the vehicles. When the $49 "Eliminator Sale" begins at 10:00 am, whoever is sitting behind the wheel of the vehicle will have the first chance to purchase the vehicle at the "Eliminator Sale" price. Prices will be marked one time to the "Rock Bottom" price, including vehicles for only $49. This "Eliminator Sale" is not for auto dealers, employees of the dealership, and its affiliates, are not permitted to participate. Carl Gregory on Victory Drive has arranged for special finance and credit analysts to be on hand. If you've had trouble in the past securing auto credit, don't count yourself out. If you'll bring your current payroll stub and your driver's license, chances are we can arrange your financing.

The "Eliminator Sale" will be the biggest event we've ever had," stated Bragg.

Customers are required to come early and register for entry to this incredible sale. Registration to participate begins at 8:00 AM. "We expect a record number of people to leave with great vehicles at unheard-of, low prices."

"If you've been waiting for a great deal on a great pre-owned vehicle, your wait is over. The $49 "Eliminator Sale" will be held Saturday, May 30, 2009. You'll have the perfect opportunity to get a quality vehicle at a substantial savings while we drastically reduce our inventory." The will be held Saturday, May 30, 2009 only at Carl Gregory on Victory Drive.

"Eliminator Sale,"

Only one $49 vehicle per family, please. Questions may be directed to any sales consultant at (706)-324-4161.

Soldiers with 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, along with more than 400 troops from around the world jumped into Drop Zone T near Normandy, France, June 7 in remembrance of D-Day, June 6, 1944. The Soldiers flew to France for a weeklong tour of World War II battlefields that culminated in the historic jump. See story on A4.

Construction closes section of road

Bridgett Siter
MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

A section of Road on Main Post from Derrickson Street to Lavoie Avenue near the Indianhead Terrace community will be closed for a month, starting Monday, while new manholes are installed and water pipes replaced underground. Adjacent parking lots, sidewalks and driveways will be inaccessible.

Dave Benefield, a civil engineer with the Directorate of Public Works, said digging will be extensive, and Columbus Water Works, the agency responsible for the installation's water and sewage, will implement various safety precautions. But he urged residents to use caution and keep children and pets out of the area.

To avoid the construction zone altogether, motorists should use Logan, Bryant, Garrett and Englander streets.

Adrian Ezell, project manager for Columbus Water Works, said the pipe replacement project is one of many upgrades planned to prepare the post's infrastructure to accommodate the growth anticipated as the post transitions to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

The road is expected to reopen July 15.

Historical figures are coming to life at the National Infantry Museum.

Dressed in a range of uniforms, from the WWII cold weather uniform to the modern ACU, more than 50 life-size sculptures modeled after Infantry Soldiers will be on display when the museum opens June 19. The life-like sculptures are the work of StudioEIS in Brooklyn, N.Y., in partnership with the museum to bring the Infantry's heritage to life.

With the help of Soldiers who volunteered for the strenuous three-hour-long casting process, the studio created custom pieces accurate to the smallest detail, said BJ Ervick, a production manager for StudioEIS working at the museum to place finishing touches on exhibits.

"The sculptures add a level of realism that can't be accomplished with a mannequin," said Phyllis Aaron, project manager for the museum's exhibits.

The project is two years in the making.

In October 2007, a casting call went out to Soldiers around post to pose for the sculptures. Photos were taken and approximately 35 Soldiers were selected for the project.

"The Soldiers added an element of expertise to the project," Aaron said. "Many were very involved and supportive if we needed advice or input to make the sculptured figures seem more real."

"We had a team made up of knowledgeable Soldiers to act out each scene depicted in the museum," Ervick said. "We needed to see what they would do on the battlefield."

Although the Residential Communities Initiative is only in its fourth year, more than 1,000 new homes have been built on Fort Benning and nearly 40 new homes in Dahlonega, Ga.

"We're pretty far down the road," said COL(R) Keith Lovejoy, Fort Benning's housing director who retired from the Army last summer after 27 years of service.

The initial development plan, which is a 10-year, $612 million project, included the demolition of 2,110 sets of quarters, building 2,377 new homes and renovating more than 1,500 historic and non-historic homes on post and at Camp Merrill, home to the 5th Ranger Training Battalion in Dahlonega.

For example, McGraw Village features mostly single-family homes with garages for NCOs and their families, said Lon Sperry, investment manager with Pinnacle, Pam Koon was named the 2009-2010 Teacher of the Year for the Georgia/Alabama Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary School district.

Koon began as a teacher in Muscogee County in 1975 but decided to transition to Fort Benning in 1981.

"And I just loved it," said Koon, who has taught physical education at Dexter Elementary for the past 28 years. "I felt like I had come home … like I fit right in, and I've been very happy."

In Koon's class, P.E. isn't just running laps or doing push-ups. Koon has a more "connected" approach, said Dr. Renée Mallory, principal for Dexter and Wilson Elementary.

"A lot of people think P.E. teachers teach only P.E., but she does so much more," Mallory said. "She uses what she teaches (kids) in P.E. as a platform to support academic programs. She finds out what they're doing in the classroom

For fun, unplug computer

Increasing online capabilities and constant reliance diminishes human interaction, creates reclusiveness

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"You've got mail!"

There was a time when those three magic words made my face light up. An e-mail? For me? Who could have been thoughtful enough to send me one of those newfangled electronic messages?

These days, though, sifting through my inbox just makes me groan — on top of spam, I get e-mail from my university's alumni association, the American Greetings card company, a joke-of-the-day Web site, and a Spanish newspaper I subscribed to when I was trying to improve my Spanish — maybe if I had kept up with it, I would know how to take myself off their mailing list.

So where did the fun go? How did checking my e-mail go from excitement to drudgery?

The answer, I think, is that we spend too much time online. Just 10 years ago, the Internet was still a fairly novel invention; today, it's a necessity. The Internet, and e-mail along with it, has lost that new toy shininess and become ordinary and routine.

It dawned on me earlier this year, when one of my cousins was applying for college, just how much things have changed in a short time.

"When you were getting ready for college, did you download the Common Application, or just visit the school's separate Web sites?" he asked me.

"Um … I mailed in handwritten essays and put stamps on them," I said.

He stared at me blankly for a moment before saying, "Oh yeah …. I guess you would have."

Being able to apply for college online makes life easier, but there's a limit to how much we should rely on the Internet. Call me a dinosaur, but I miss the days when human interaction was necessary. Now, thanks to Web sites like www.exercisetv.tv and www.netflix.com, you'll never experience a spinning class instructor shouting at you to pedal faster, or bump into old friends at the video store.

So, just because I can use the Internet to order groceries, buy new shoes or learn to dance, you won't find me holed up behind the computer.

No matter how rude the grocery store cashier is, or how silly I look attempting the meringue, getting out of the house and having real experiences offline is what makes life interesting.

Now if only I could learn to program the VCR.

2009: YEAR OF THE NCO

NCOs' role has many facets

Relationship between NCO and officer is of great importance, pertinent to the highest fulfillment of both roles

SSG Natalie Hedrick
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Simply put, the role of the NCO is to lead and train Soldiers. It's in the Army Study Guide; it's in the NCO creed. We teach. We coach. We mentor. We do our best to build today's Soldiers into strong, confident leaders of tomorrow. That's our job as NCOs.

But there is more to being an NCO, spoken of less frequently, but just as important. We still influence. We still lead. We still train in a way. But instead of teachers, coaches, and mentors, we are referred to as a right arm.

I am talking about the relationship NCOs have with the officer corps.

I am the NCOIC of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team's Public Affairs Office. We are a small section — two Soldiers, the OIC, CPT Charlie Barrett and myself.

The captain took the position five months ago — it had been empty for almost seven months.

Before ever even meeting each other, we both had expectations. His: an enlisted advisor who is loyal, trusting, helpful, honest, knowledgeable and motivated.

My expectations are for an OIC who allows Soldiers to work to their fullest potential, not to the limits of their rank; who allows NCOs to fulfill their responsibilities; who has the courage to say yes, and no, when it's appropriate; and who asks for help when it is needed.

I have worked in this section for six years and for four public affairs officers. I know how important the relationship is between an officer and an NCO.

Whether you're a platoon leader's platoon sergeant, an OIC's NCOIC, a company commander's first sergeant, or a brigade commander's sergeant major, that officer is your battle buddy. They are the head — you are their backbone.

New badges to speed up motorcycles at gates

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Authorized motorcyclists have a new alternative for getting on post — and officials said it should speed things up at the gates.

The Contractor Badge Office at Building 19 on Main Post now issues badges that replace the four other forms of identification required at Fort Benning's access control points. Without it, riders must show a state driver's license, military ID, proof of registration and motorcycle safety card to get on the installation.

"One standard ID for these guys is a great logical solution," said Jim Webster, a physical security specialist who supervises vehicle registration. "We get a few complaints that motorcycles slow things down … Less fumbling (for IDs) lets them get through faster at the gate."

He said the badges aren't mandatory but will help people get through the ACP quicker. Authorities expect to give out 1,500 to 2,000 in the initial wave.

The cards are valid for 12 months for active-duty service members; four years for Department of Defense civilians, dependents and retirees; and for DoD contractors, duration of their contracts.

"It takes just a few minutes to get the card, then you're on your way," Webster said.

Rick Pollard, chief of guards for Wackenhut, the company that provides security at Fort Benning, originated the idea of a uniform ID for motorcyclists. Webster said he wasn't sure if the program is in effect elsewhere.

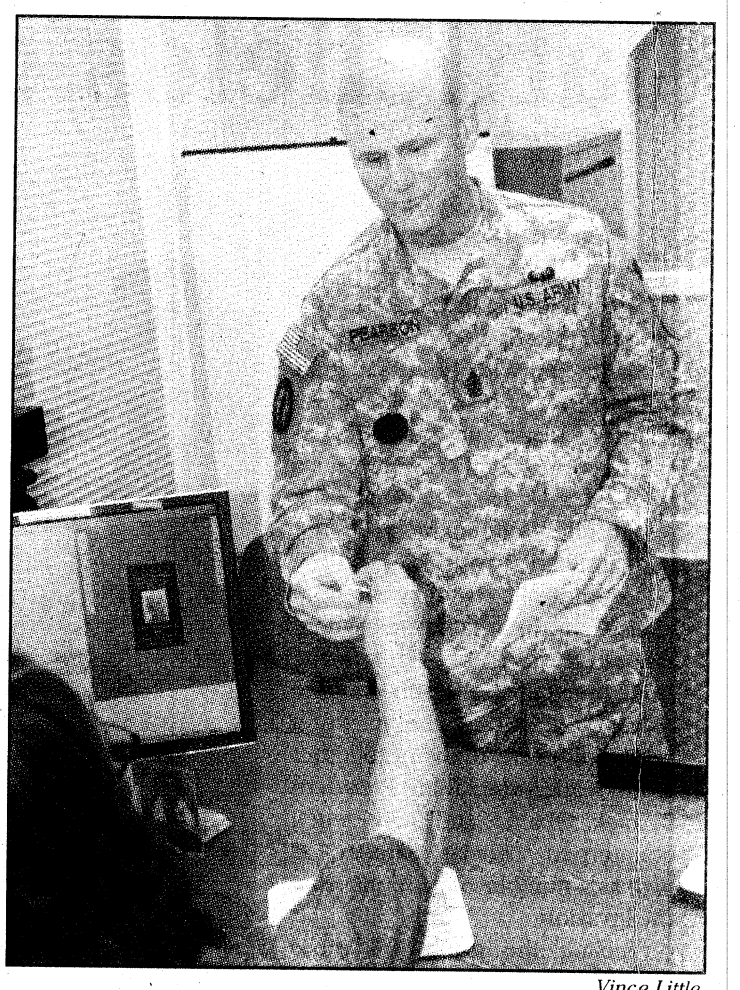
The badge prevents fraud through built-in security measures that include a photo, bar code and embedded watermark on the back, he said.

To get the new motorcycle ID card, Soldiers must bring four documents into the Contractor Badge Office: the battalion commander's authorization memorandum, military ID, state driver's license with motorcycle endorsement and Motorcycle Safety Foundation card. Civilians, family members and retirees need everything except the memorandum.

"It was surprisingly painless," said John Yancey, a Department of the Army Civilian and retired sergeant major. "It's great. Instead of getting stopped at the gate — having to dig through your stuff to produce all these IDs — you just have this one card in your pocket or around your neck to show the guard.

"It's going to make riding on post a lot easier … People sometimes have to wait on motorcycles, too, so it will facilitate traffic at the gate."

SFC Timothy Morgan, operations sergeant for the Directorate of Emergency Services, was among four Soldiers who got badges Friday morning. He said showing just one ID at the gate will be much easier.



"I can use Velcro to put it on my vest. All I have to do is pull it off and hand it to the gate personnel," Morgan said.

1SG Ted Pearson of the 209th Military Police Detachment said he'd clip the badge onto his uniform.

"Sometimes, you'd have to stop the motorcycle and show all four IDs. It was holding up a lot of traffic," he said. "This will be a lot safer for the guys. They're trying to expedite you through as best they can."

The Contractor Badge Office is open 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday and closed for lunch noon to 12:30 p.m.

198th Inf. Bde.'s motorcycle mentorship program promotes safe riding

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The 198th Infantry Brigade had its first "Ride into Summer" Monday. It was part of the brigade's motorcycle mentorship program, which provides structured guidance for riders of all ability levels.

Each battalion has a mentor who organizes rides, coordinates riding authorization with the brigade commander and helps people interested in riding with choosing a bike and receiving the necessary training, said MSG Thomas Brown, brigade mentor for the program.

Brown said they will try to have a ride each month, so motorcyclists can complete at least one group ride per quarter.

Monday, Soldiers took a two-hour trip to Andersonville, Ga., to tour the National Prisoner of War Museum and have lunch before returning to Fort Benning.

"To me, it's important to bring riders up in a safe environment," said Brown, who started riding 34 years ago. "Motorcycle riding is inherently dangerous. There's a lot of power in motorcycles and people get carried away. (The program) reinforces safe riding skills."

Before the start of the ride, Brown led a class about safe riding techniques and inspected the motorcycles.

The class was helpful, said MSG Shawn Prevost, the newest motorcyclist in the group who began riding two years ago in Michigan.

"This is my first group ride actually," he said. "I learned some of the group techniques we went over this morning … hand and arm signals, how to ride as a group, spacing … more than I knew before."

The mentorship program helps build camaraderie among motorcyclists and allows them to learn from each other, said Mark Kassam, training technician for C Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.

Veteran riders can still pick up tips from others in the group, said Kassam, who has been riding for more than 20 years. They can also pass on their knowledge to newer riders.

"A lot of these experienced riders can give the younger riders tips. Especially when they just come back from deployment, they have a lot of money to spend, they buy some new bikes — they don't know what they're getting into sometimes, so it's important that these younger guys know how to ride," Kassam said.

CSM John Calpena, the brigade command sergeant major, said the goal of the mentorship program is not only to let riders of different experience levels fellowship with each other but also to let them apply what they learn in a way that is fun.

They can learn about motorcycle riding, then go out on the road and put the knowledge into action, said Calpena, who plans to participate in the next ride.

"We're going to do this as often as possible, so everyone gets a chance to ride," he said.

Paratroopers land at Normandy, visit battlefields on D-Day anniversary

SSG Emmanuel Rodriguez, an airborne instructor with the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, is greeted by local villagers after completing the jump. Rodriguez, along with 33 Soldiers from the battalion, toured historic World War II battlefields in France during a weeklong trip.

More than 350 U.S., French, German and British airborne troops made the jump as part of a week of events to commemorate the 65th anniversary of the June 6, 1944, D-Day invasion.

Landing inside Drop Zone T off the coast of Normandy, 34 Soldiers with the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, participated in a historic parachute jump with paratroopers from around the world June 7 commemorating the 65th anniversary of D-Day.

Dropping out of the sky barely 20 miles from the original site where thousands of U.S. troops made landfall at Omaha Beach on June 6, 1944, the troops were part of a weeklong event drawing together world leaders, including President Barrack Obama and his French counterpart Nicolas Sarkozy, as well as a number of veterans from the invasion.

"Feeling the ghosts of those who were left behind and seeing those reminders meant a lot to the troops. They could truly grasp the gravity of the whole paratrooper concept and spirit," said LTC Jon Ring, the battalion's commander.

"Today, we have such modern technology and weapons. We would in no way be as bold and audacious as those men had to be," Ring said. "I couldn't help but think 'what the heck were these young guys thinking as they were loaded into airplanes and getting ready to invade the continent?' There were places where they just had to go for it and rush into incoming fire. They knew the mission that needed to be done."

The Soldiers toured historic battlefields, visited various French cities and met with villagers who remembered the invasion, he said.

A memorial plaque in the town of Amfreville, France, one of several the troops visited, recognizes the 507th's sacrifices with the words: "It is fitting and proper, therefore, that this monument be dedicated to the proud, courageous and tenacious men and officers of the 507th, many of whom lie in peace here in Normandy."

For SSG Emmanuel Rodriguez, an airborne instructor with the battalion, the experience left him with greater understanding.

"We visited areas where the biggest battles were fought and I could see craters still in the ground from the ordnance and bullet holes in gates," Rodriguez said. "It was emotional ... just to think of what they went through.

"So many have died to free people and liberate countries to get us to where we are today. Without them who knows how the world would be," he said.

The paratroopers also paid a special visit to the American Cemetery in Colleville-sur-Mer, France.

The cemetery contains the grave markers for 9,387 troops, according to the American Battle Monuments Commission.

Several grave sites in the cemetery are for paratroopers assigned to the 507th.

"At an hour of maximum danger, amid the bleakest of circumstances, men who thought themselves ordinary found it within themselves to do the extraordinary," said President Barack Obama, during a ceremony at the cemetery honoring the troops. "The sheer improbability of this victory is part of what makes D-Day so memorable."

The 507th were to be dropped west of the Merderet River on D-Day, but most landed in the river and drowned. However, a small force of the 2nd Battalion was able to secure a perimeter along the western bank of the river, according to an account published in the commemorative book U.S.A. Airborne.

Approximately 215,000 Allied soldiers were killed or wounded during D-Day and the ensuing three months it took to secure the capture of Normandy, a battle that helped free France from Nazi control.

The battle for Normandy is considered a pivotal point in the Allied victory in World War II.

Ring said the historic journey through the battlefields of WWII has left his troops with a deeper connection to their heritage.

"They now know they're responsible for passing our heritage to the future generations of paratroopers that come through the 507th," he said. "We are walking in the footsteps of those who bled a lot for us."

(Chaplain (CPT) Neal Hicks, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th, contributed to this story.)

Sculptures: 14-month process to create figures terrain forms constructed for the casts, each Soldier was cast by the StudioEIS team in the pose which would later be the cast figure in the exhibit, Ervick said.

Each body cast was broken into three phases, the head, body and hands, Ervick said.

A team of five sculptors worked on covering each Soldier in medical-grade plaster and rubbing in the mixture to capture fine details such as facial expressions before it solidified and could be removed, he said.

Once each cast was removed, the pieces were assembled and sculpted.The sculptures were then dressed in uniforms and given weapons before being treated with a resin coating and painted, Ervick said.

One challenge Soldiers faced was holding the pose throughout the casting process, he said.

Some poses are action poses so they must hold fighting stances until the plaster has set, which can take up to 20 minutes, Ervick said.

"I had an easy pose," said CPT Stephen Magennis, of the Maneuver Captains Career Course, who was cast as a Korean War Soldier writing a letter home."But when they poured the plaster on my face, I couldn't see anything. That 15-minute wait for it to harden seemed very long."

Magennis, company commander on Sand Hill when he volunteered for the project, was chosen to pose as both the anonymous Korean War Infantryman and Medal of Honor recipient COL Lewis Millett leading a bayonet charge in 'The Last 100 Yards' exhibit at the museum.

"I am honored that I portrayed someone like Lewis Millett," he said of the Infantry officer credited with leading the last major American bayonet charge in February 1951.

Emotions were pivotal to the construction of each sculpture, Ervick said.

"(The crew) did a good job in making us express the emotions," Magennis said."I had to put myself in the mind set of the character. For the Korean War Soldier I had to focus on the feelings of a depressed Soldier writing a letter to his wife."

The result is sometimes referred to as 'eerie' and 'surreal,'Aaron said.

"When you look into the figures' eyes, it's as if you really see the Soldier in them," she said.

Once the figures were sculpted, designers dressed 40 of them in reproductions of military uniforms and artifacts with the assistance of several historians providing knowledge of each era,Aaron said.

The dressed figures were soaked in resin to stiffen and leave a smooth surface for painting the figures.

The fabric on the figures was then shaped to show motion and movement,Aaron said. The sculptors added wrinkles in the fabric to depict various actions, including wind movement from a Huey helicopter, a Soldier lifting a rifle and troops climbing up a rope.

Magennis said he looks forward to bringing his daughter to see his "other half" at the museum.

"I like the idea they went with using life poses. It looks like a real person," said Magennis, who got a sneak peak of the Korean War Soldier.

"This is a great legacy for the Infantry, families of the Infantry and the city of Columbus," Ervick said.

Post remembers PV2 William Long at memorial ceremony

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The Fort Benning community gathered to remember one of its own when PV2 William A. Long was honored in a memorial ceremony Friday at Soldier's Chapel.

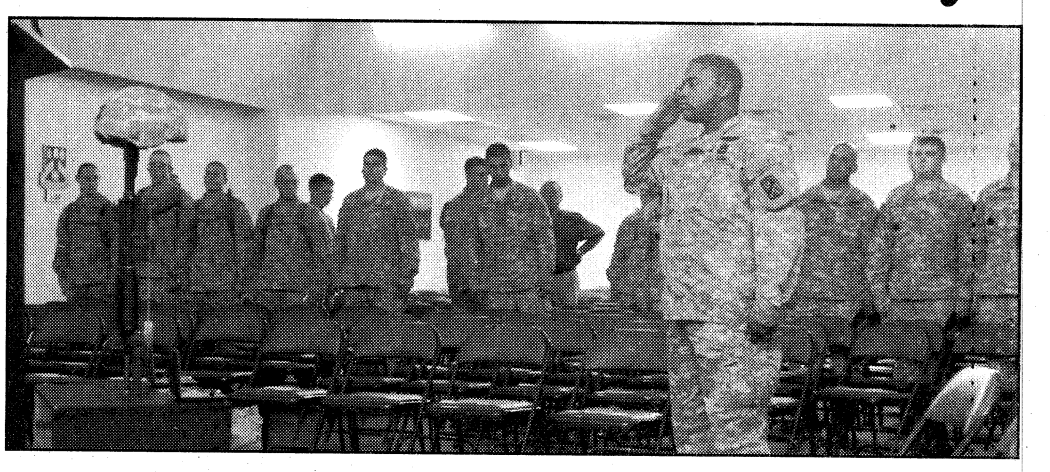
Long

Long was shot and killed June 1 by Abdulhakim Muhammad outside a Little Rock, Ark., recruiting center where he had been participating in the Army's Recruiting Assistance Program. Long had returned to his parents' home in Conway, Ark., to participate in the program before being stationed in South Korea.

Born in Long Beach, Calif., Long graduated basic training May 22 from D Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.

Long is survived by his parents, Daris and Janet Long, who served in the Marines and Navy, respectively, and his brother, PFC Triston Long, 2nd Battalion, 13th Cavalry Regiment, at Fort Bliss, Texas.

"Any young person who raises their hand to uphold and defend the Constitution in a time of war … has already done more than a large portion of society will ever do," said LTC Richard F. Timmons II, commander of 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment. "And for that, Private Long has my utmost respect and admiration."



Timmons read a letter Daris wrote for his son to read after leaving for South Korea.

"I'm personally proud of you graduating from boy to man," the elder Long wrote. "It's been hard, but the result is my hero. You and your brother are both my heroes by having the moral courage to stand up when your country needs you most. You are in my thoughts and prayers."

CPT Andrew Ropp, battalion chaplain for 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, offered a memorial message and benediction.

"Private Long joined the Army because he loved — he loved God, he loved his country," Ropp said. "He sought to play a role in making a difference in the lives of others, while placing his own life on the line."

SFC Michael Napier, Long's drill sergeant, said he would have made an excellent Infantryman.

Caroline Gotler
SFC Marquis Franklin, a drill sergeant with D Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, pays his respects to PV2 William A. Long during a memorial service Friday at Soldier's Chapel.

"He gave 100 percent every day," Napier said. "I definitely saw him transform from civilian to Soldier during the 16 weeks I worked with him. He had lots of potential. He was going to do things in the Army."

PV2 Andrew Diggs, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, who was in Long's platoon, called him a close friend.

"Everybody respected him," Diggs said. "He was always quiet, never got in trouble. He had a lot of integrity, and we were really close."

Diggs said his first reaction when learning Long had died was disbelief.

"I had to go ask my drill sergeant whether it was really true," he said. "And when I told the other members of D Company, they couldn't believe it either. He was just a great person and we had a lot of fun together."

30th Adjutant General Battalion changes command

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

LTC Mary Martin assumed command of the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) from outgoing commander LTC Neal McIntyre Tuesday on Pomeroy Field.

Martin's previous assignment was the deputy G1 strength manager for the 1st Armored Division, Wiesbaden Air Base, Germany, which included a 15-month deployment to Iraq. She served for two years in the enlisted ranks before receiving her commission in 1991.

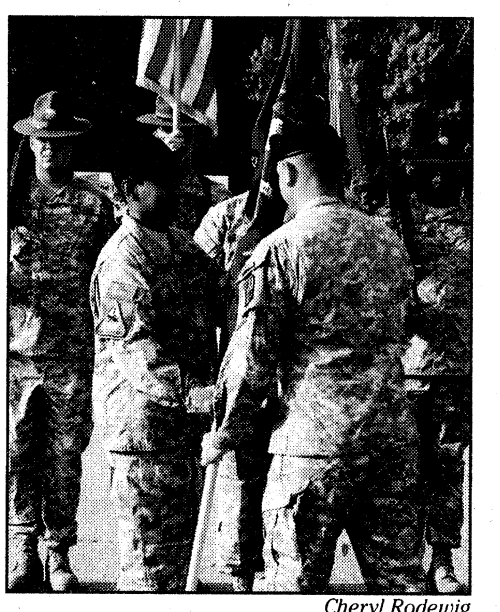
Martin said she looks forward to future rewards and challenges with the 30th AG Bn.

"I am truly honored and blessed to have been selected to command one of the finest organizations in the Army," she said. "First of all, I plan to learn everything I need to do and second of all, take care of the Soldiers who are coming into the Army. This is their first impression, when they come to the 30th AG, of what the true Army is. I look forward to the challenge and building a new team."

It will be a busy time in the battalion as the summer surge is under way and the new reception battalion is being constructed, said MAJ Keisha Douglass, commander of troops for the change of command ceremony.

Douglass said she is confident the battalion will continue living out its motto — the Army's best first impression — under the auspices of Martin, "one of the best AG officers out there."

Martin said she hopes to build upon the legacy McIntyre has left in place.



McIntyre will report June 25 to the Human Resources Command in Alexandria, Va., where he served before coming to Fort Benning, for his position as the Adjutant General Officer's Branch chief.

"I've learned a great deal from my time here," said McIntyre, who has been on post for two years. "Without reservation, I believe I'm a better officer for the experience I've had here at Fort Benning. This has been the best community experience I've had since I've been in the Army, and this is my 20th year."

McIntyre had mixed feelings as he left command, but he is certain the Army has provided "the right leader at the right time," he said.

"I'm proud in the sense that I think I've done what a commander is supposed to do, and I left a better organization than I took. I know the organization will continue to progress toward excellence; I'm just sad that I won't be able to be a part of it," he said.

"Colonel Martin has a great reputation in the AG community, both in the area of leadership as well as taking care of Soldiers, and that's truly what the mission of the 30th AG is all about. It's about leadership and it's about taking care of these new civilians that come into the Army to be Soldiers. She has the skills, she has the background, and she will most certainly do a great job."

11th Inf. Regt. hosts changes of command

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

The 11th Infantry Regiment's 2nd and 3rd Battalions welcomed new commanders Wednesday.

LTC Scott Halstead succeeded LTC Lance Davis as commander of 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, and LTC Dean Bushnell assumed command of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, from LTC John Shattuck.

"Passing the mantle of leadership from one great Infantry officer to another is a solemn occasion and a tradition," said COL Terry Sellers, 199th Infantry Brigade commander and reviewing officer for the change of command ceremonies at Stilwell Field.

The outgoing commanders were lauded for their achievements by Sellers and presented with Meritorious Service Medals. Wives Carrie Davis and Lee Shattuck were presented with roses, the commander's award for public service and the Shield and Sparta for their contributions to support the battalions.

The 2nd Battalion conducts the Infantry Basic Officer Leader Course to train newly commissioned officers. The 3rd Battalion (Officer Candidate School) mission is to train and commission second lieutenants for all branches of the Army.

"I know (Halstead) by his reputation and know he will excel," Sellers said.

Halstead, a graduate of Spencer High School in Columbus, was commissioned in 1991 after graduating the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. In addition to Fort Benning, his service has taken him to Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Stewart, Ga., Fort Myer and Alexandria, Va., and Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, as well as deployments in support of Operations Noble Eagle, Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom-Philippines. His most recent assignment was serving as the executive officer for Fort Benning's Ranger Training Brigade.

Halstead addressed the troops and said the battalion's pace will not slow despite the change in command.

"We will continue to challenge Soldiers so when they leave Fort Benning they will be prepared for what awaits them," he said.

Sellers lauded improvements to the 13-week IBOLC training undertaken by Davis, who commanded the battalion for two years.

"He empowered future leaders. Infantry lieutenants departed Fort Benning with confidence in combat thanks to Duke," said Sellers, referring to Davis by his nickname.

Davis earned his commission in 1988 through Oregon State University's ROTC program. He has served in various Infantry positions with the 9th Infantry Division and the 101st Airborne Division. He also served overseas in Egypt and Korea and with the 25th Infantry Division at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. Davis completed an Operation Enduring Freedom deployment to Afghanistan before being reassigned to the 199th Inf. Bde. as deputy commander and commander of 2nd Battalion.

"You don't realize the significance of Fort Benning's mission until you are training lieutenants," Davis said. "This mission is important and being at battalion level and below, you become a member of a team."

"I came here wanting to teach young lieutenants to be warriors. Davis is one of the best commanders I have served with. Our life has flourished because of him," said CSM Angel Ortiz, 2nd Battalion command sergeant major.

Ortiz said he looks forward to working with the new commander and expects Halstead will continue to spark the fire in the troops.

"I think it's going to be a bonfire with the knowledge he has," Ortiz said.

Davis will report to Fort Lewis, Wash., in the coming weeks to serve as the deputy commander for 3rd Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division. The unit is expected to deploy in July to northern Iraq for a yearlong rotation.

For incoming 3rd Battalion commander Bushnell, the transition will be smooth as he moves from his position as deputy commander of the 199th Inf. Bde. to take the reins of the battalion. Bushnell earned his commission as an Infantry officer through the post's Officer Candidate School in 1992 and said, "This is like coming home."

Bushnell began his career in 1984 and served at Fort Kobbe, Panama, and Hunter Army Airfield, Ga. He gained his commission after attending Officer Candidate School in 1992. Bushnell's career as an officer has included two Operation Iraqi Freedom deployments, command of company's within 11th Inf. Regt.'s 1st and 2nd Battalions and time with 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team on Kelley Hill.

Photos by Kristin Molinaro

LTC Lance Davis, outgoing commander of 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, hands the colors to COL Terry Sellers Wednesday at Stilwell Field. Davis is succeeded by LTC Scott Halstead.

"I look forward to influencing the next generation of future officers," Bushnell said.

Bushnell replaces Shattuck, who will serve as the deputy commander for the 198th Infantry Bde.

"(Bushnell) is no stranger to the challenges and rewards of this job," Sellers said. "He knows Fort Benning from several vantage points and will excel.".

Sellers congratulated Shattuck for his many achievements within the 3rd Battalion during his two-year tenure.

"Shattuck came in during a time when the 14-week OCS course was being streamlined into a 12-week course while mission requirements were expanding," Sellers said. "In this time, the battalion produced 4,300 Army officers. His calm, confident manner was a mechanism for mission accomplishment."

Shattuck enlisted as an Infantryman in 1982 and served at Fort Lewis, Wash. He graduated the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1988 and was commissioned as a 2nd lieutenant in the Infantry. Shattuck has served at Forts Drum and Benning, deployed to Iraq and participated in U.S., NATO and United Nations operations in Saudi Arabia, Somalia, Haiti and Bosnia.

LTC John Shattuck, outgoing commander of 3rd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, greets Soldiers and friends who attended his change of command ceremony Wednesday.

"He is a talented coach, teacher and mentor who strived to make the most of what he had," Sellers said.

Sellers credited Shattuck with developing programs to better educate officers and families as well as gaining partnerships within the community.

the company overseeing housing management, replacing McGraw Manor's eight-plexes and street parking. Patton Village, across from the entrance to Sand Hill's training brigades, has more than 550 homes. Before RCI, the area was forest. Construction of the Upatoi housing area is currently under way, while the renovation plan for the Indianhead housing area will be approved this fall. The Custer Village Community Center is scheduled to break ground June 22, and the Indianhead Community Center is still in the planning process. The community centers, with playgrounds and pools, are open to anyone living on post, regardless of housing area, Lovejoy said.

Housing is determined by rank and family size, Sperry said. The housing areas are set aside for certain ranks, such as Custer Village for privates and specialists, Patton Village for NCOs and Perkins Village for junior officers.

As Fort Benning continues through this initial 10-year plan, Lovejoy said, it's important for residents to look long term.

"Even though you may not be in a new house, your BAH goes toward the entire installation project and you're benefiting the overall program," he said. "The entire Army is going through this process and chances are good that even though you're not in a new house on this installation, when you go to another installation you will be afforded the opportunity for a new or renovated set of quarters."

And it's critical residents provide feedback as housing continues to change, said the former garrison commander who participated in the ribbon cutting ceremony for McGraw Village's community center two years ago.

"This is one area I really have a lot of passion about," he said. "It's important how families are treated, and I think housing is a very personal issue. I want to do the best I can to take care of Army Families and Soldiers, and I know our partners at Clark/Pinnacle as well are dedicated to making the most positive changes given the available resources for everybody involved.

It doesn't happen overnight, but if residents provide both positive and negative feedback, courses of action and priorities can be tweaked along the way. If no feedback is received, plans that have developed will continue along as scheduled."

Residents have multiple ways to let Fort Benning officials know what they think.

One of the best venues for submitting feedback is townhall meetings, Lovejoy said.

"They're not just for housing specific issues but for everything happening on the installation, and it's the residents' chance to act directly with all the garrison leadership ... MWR, the military police, emergency services, the commissary, the PX. There's that chance for one-on-one interaction to answer specific questions geared toward their own circumstances," he said.

Surveys are another important tool, Lovejoy said. The results of the annual housing survey, mailed to residents in May, goes directly to the chain of command.

Lovejoy encourages residents to submit customer feedback on the Interactive Customer Evaluation system. Located in various public places around post, from the commissary to the bowling alley, ICE lets consumers detail their experiences with different post services.

"If you feel strongly that none of these venues has worked to resolve your individual issue, try the garrison hotline at 706-545-9837," Lovejoy said. "This has been in place for a couple years and a lot of people don't know about it, but that line goes directly to a phone that is answered in the garrison commander and garrison command sergeant major's office."

As officials hear about concerns, they work to remedy them as quickly and efficiently as possible, Lovejoy said. For example, they are working to address the limited availability of storage space in housing, which they heard about through townhall meetings, ICE and the survey.

To submit a concern or thanks through ICE, log on to http://ice.disa.mil. Residents who have not received the annual housing survey should pick one up at the housing office in Building 280 or at the community welcome center on Lumpkin Road. The deadline to turn in the survey is June 30. To find out when the next town hall meeting is look for information marquees and read The Bayonet.

Soldiers complete mounted react to contact live fire

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

B Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, was among the first units on Sand Hill to complete the new mounted react to contact live fire June 1 and Tuesday. During the exercise, Soldiers in four humvees had to respond to an IED, dismount to pull security and pursue the enemy. The Soldiers and opposing force used high speed paint ammunition during the scenario-driven event.

The training event reflects the current theater of operations better than the convoy live fire, which has been phased out of basic training on Sand Hill, said CPT Tim Leone, company commander for B Co., 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt.

"This battle drill is exactly how we would do it," said Leone, who returned from a 15-month deployment to Iraq last year. "(The convoy live fire) taught them how to fire from a moving platform, kind of like a drive by, but that isn't what we would do. If you take contact from an IED, you wouldn't just push through and pretend it didn't happen. You would stop and react to that contact. That's what this event is training. Our biggest threat in today's environment is IEDs, so perfecting this battle drill is crucial."

PV2 Jarrod Griffy said the more real-world scenario training he completes, the better prepared he will be for "the real thing" when he deploys.

"(It) makes you think on your feet, makes you more prepared for those situations," he said. "We got hit by a scenario IED, and it got pretty chaotic with all the gunshots. It makes it more realistic when you know that you could actually get hit and that they do hurt. We didn't have a drill sergeant right next to us. We had to think on our own."

Griffy said the exercise taught him the importance of communication. Staying in contact helps limit and control the chaos, he said.

"I had seven men under me and if I didn't know where they were or what they were doing, that's not good," he said. "Communication made sure I know where they were going, what they were doing, when they were moving, so we didn't cross paths and so we could take out the enemy."

In a situation like the one given, there are many moving parts, so staying focused is important, said SGT Andres Gutierrez, a reclassified Infantryman in charge of about a dozen Soldiers during the exercise.

Although Gutierrez encountered two IEDs with his convoy in Iraq, he still learned from the live fire, he said.

"The support role is a lot different," said Gutierrez, who formerly worked with the Chemical Corps. "From the support side, we would mainly stay in our trucks. When you're leading Infantrymen, you're actually leading guys who are moving through contact. You have to keep an idea of who's on your left, who's on your right and making sure everybody's moving together. More than likely, I will be going to a leadership position at my next brigade, so this has given me good leadership experience."

The Soldiers completed the mounted react to contact live fire in their ninth week of training.

They will graduate Wednesday.

then, when she forms her lessons, she also incorporates what the teachers are teaching, whether it's math or vocabulary. Her focus is so much on the children. She's amazing; she really is."

"These are my kids. They're my legacy," Koon said. "I try to do everything to make a child the best person that child can be: all around balanced, physically, mentally, emotionally, socially.

"I knew one little boy played baseball, and I asked him, 'How is your team doing?' and he said, 'Why do you care?' I said, 'You've hit the nail on the head. I do care.' I do care about what you do when you leave this school, what you do after school, what you do on the weekends. I do care. And I want you to do the right thing. That's why I'm up here doing what I'm doing, because I care. I just feel like that's my purpose. It's my heart. It's everything."

When she's not teaching physical education, Koon works with students to help them catch up in their studies and leads brain-based activities in other teachers' classrooms.

She also teaches sign language and, after school, knitting. With a small group of students and teachers, Koon has helped knit caps and blankets for children in the community.

Koon said she wants students to learn the keys of success. She promotes the core subjects, technology, goal setting and good manners to help students grow to their full potential.

That's part of why Koon introduced sport stacking, a competitive sport where participants stack cups quickly and carefully in varied formations, to the Fort Benning community.

The activity "makes your brain work better" and builds confidence, Koon said.

"Everybody can do this," she said. "I don't care (if) you're not that good in sports or you don't like sports or whatever — you can do this."

Another idea that integrates movement with learning, the Feeling Good Mileage Club meets twice a week before school to walk around the track. Koon started the club to let students gear up for learning with exercise.

"It's a good time to get energized, to get your brain ready for learning, to get your blood flowing. It's a good time to walk and talk with your friends," she said.

While they walk around the track, students may count in twos or discuss shapes in the clouds to incorporate thinking with physical activity.

"It all works together," Koon said. "If you've got the body involved, you're going to make the learning more meaningful, and it's going to go in your brain better. And it just makes it more fun."

Roger that, Federer

Finally, tennis great Roger Federer can add the title of French Open winner to his roster.

Federer won over No. 23 seed Robin Soderling of Sweden.

Federer had lost the previous three finals in the French Open.

This win ties him with Pete Sampras' record of 14 major singles titles and makes him the sixth male to complete a career Grand Slam.

Huskies chomp Gators

The University of Washington women's softball team swept the Florida Gators in the best-of-three College World Series in Oklahoma City June 2.

Danielle Lawrie, who was named the National Player of the Year, pitched every inning of the team's six games at the World Series.

It's the first-ever NCAA softball championship title for the Huskies.

Stakes upset

Although Mine That Bird was the heavy favorite at the Belmont Stakes on Saturday, Summer Bird, an 11-1 longshot, overtook MTB in the final furlong for the win. Dunkirk finished second, just ahead of Mine That Bird.

The winning jockey, Kent Desormeaux, was the jockey of Big Brown in the Stakes last year, when he pulled up the horse, causing a last-place finish and the loss of the Triple Crown.

Smoke wins first points race as team owner

Tony Stewart made a gamble with his fuel and it paid off at Pocono Raceway.

Stewart earned his first NASCAR Cup win as a team owner last Sunday in Pennsylvania.

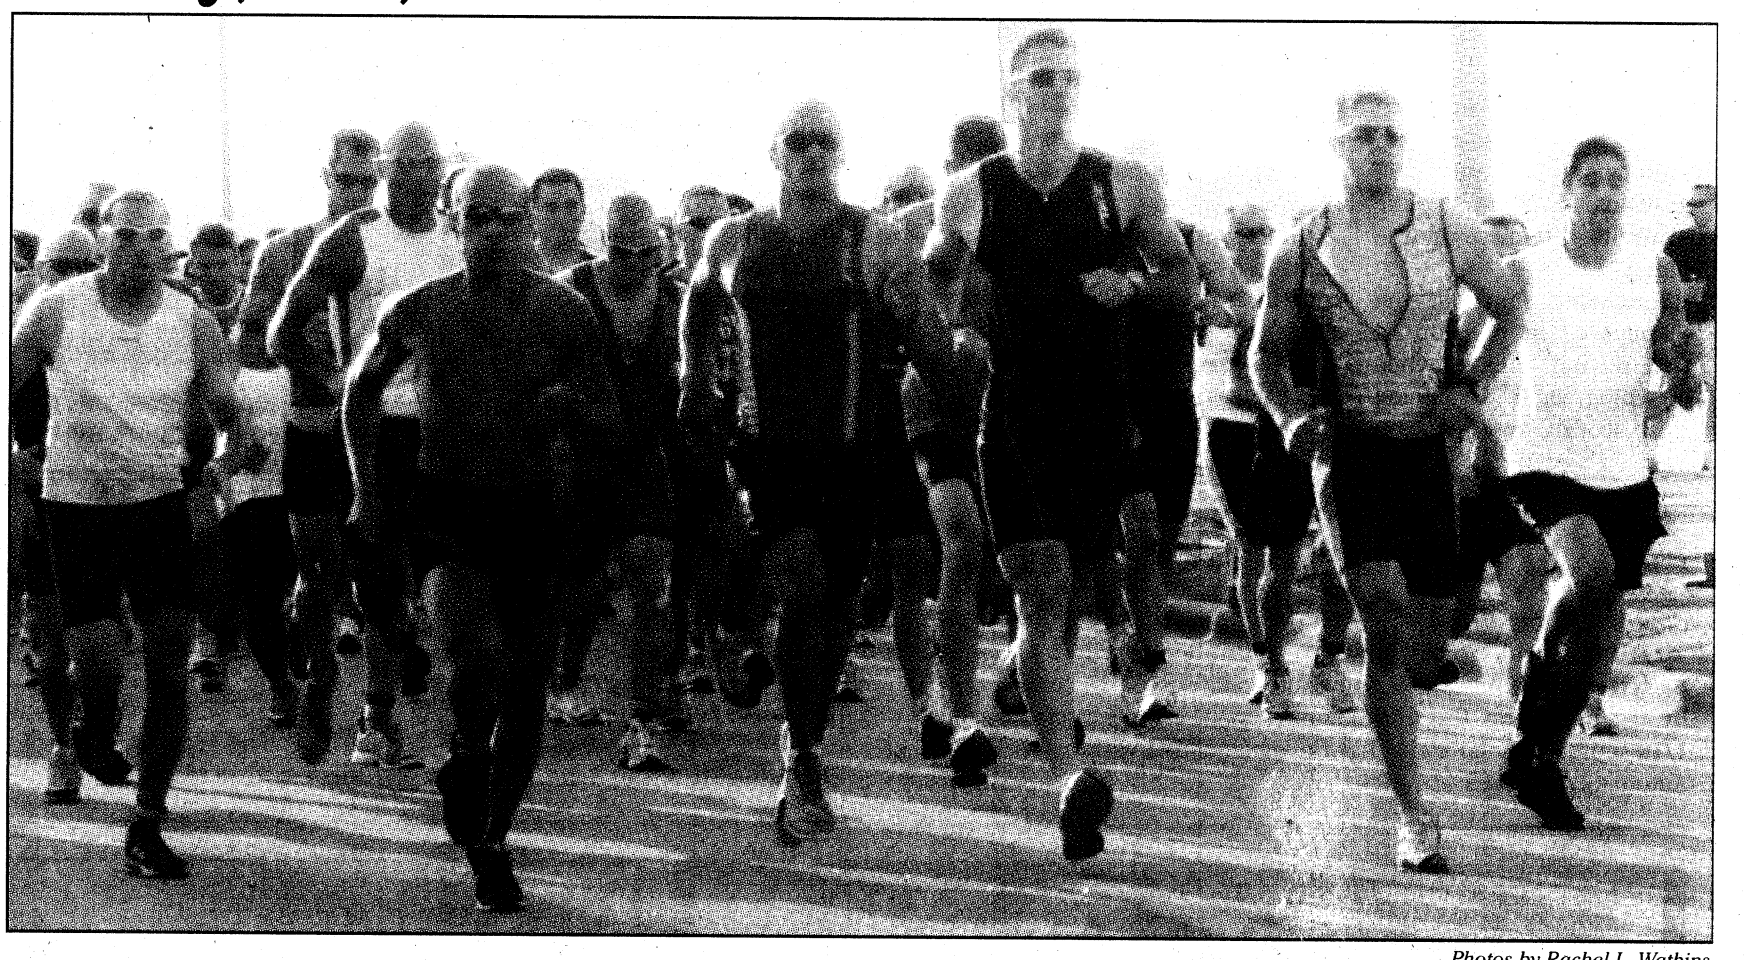
Stewart started at the back of the pack because of an accident during practice that forced him to go to his backup car.

Stewart is also the Cup's points leader, followed by Jeff Gordon and Jimmie Johnson.

Michigan International Speedway will host this week's race.

Coverage begins at 12:30 p.m. Sunday on TNT.

Tiger garners victory



Tiger Woods won his fourth Memorial Tournament title Sunday.

Tiger hit all 14 fairways during his 7-under-65 win, and birdied his last two holes.

Woods is a favorite to win his 15th major beginning Thursday at the U.S. Open on Long Island, N.Y.

It's nice to see Tiger being Tiger again. His knee problems seem to be well behind him.

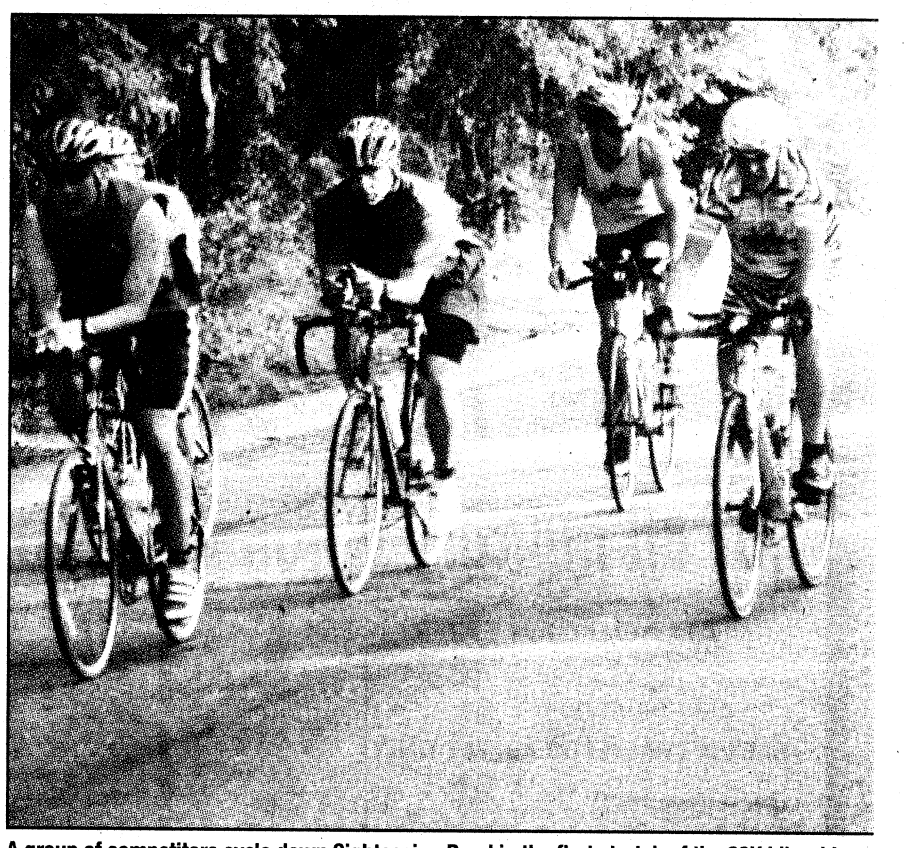
More than 200 competitors gathered Saturday at the Main Post Bowling Alley parking lot to compete in the fourth annual Reverse Sprint Triathlon, consisting of a 5K run, 20K bike ride and a 550-meter swim.

Participants made their way around Main Post running and biking and headed to Carey Pool to swim to the finish line.



The 75th Ranger Regiment's Casey Dawley took first place in the male overall category with a time of 59:17 and Kim Freeman of Phenix City took home first place for the women's overall category with a time of 1:13:51. Both received leis, a triathlon racing uniform and a trophy.

Dawley has competed in triathlons for two years, but this was his first year in the Reverse Sprint Triathlon. In the past, he placed third and fifth overall at other triathlons, but this is his first time placing first overall.

It took stamina and endurance to get through the competition, Dawley said.

"I've done triathlons before and I'm so used to giving my all in the swimming portion at the beginning of the triathlon, instead of the end," he said. "The swimming had to be

Commander's Cup Softball Championship — Automatic

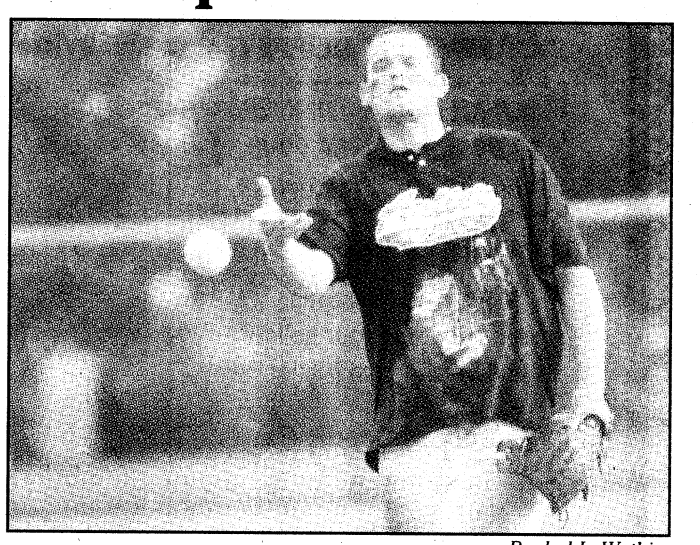
Team Automatic, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, came back from the loser's bracket to defeat the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, in two straight games in the finals of the Preseason Commander's Cup Softball Championship June 3 at Gowdy Field. 1/19 had an automatic spot in the finals after defeating the Eliminators, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, in an 18-9 victory, while team Automatic played two more teams than 1/19 to get to the finals.

In the first game, team Automatic started off with a Chris Overbeck home run while 1/19 took a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the first inning.

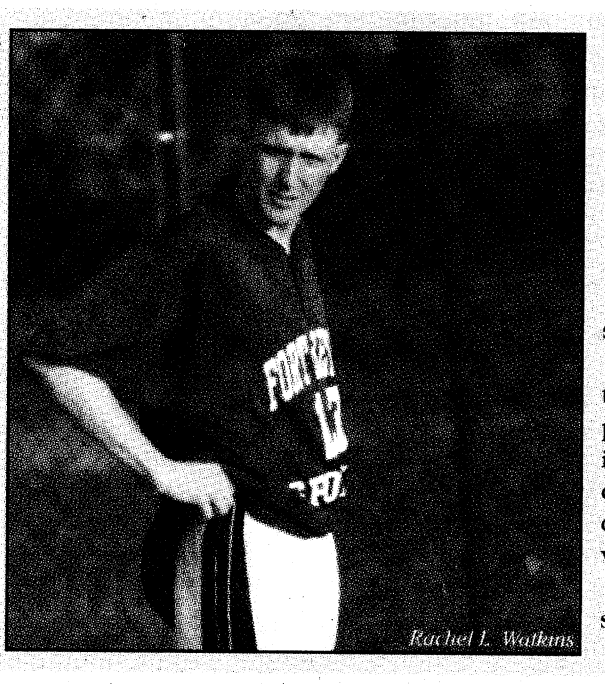
1/19's pitcher, James Falkenberry, struck out team Automatic in a three-up, three-down, at the top half of the second inning, while 1/19 kept team Automatic off the scoreboard in the bottom of the inning.



Falkenberry threw another three-up, three-down inning, while 1/19 scored a run on a Will Desmond RBI double. 1/19 led 4-1 at the end of the inning.

Team Automatic made a comeback in the fourth inning, capitalizing on four runs to take the lead at 5-4 to close out the inning.

Team Automatic scored six more runs before the game ended, while 1/19 picked up two runs, sealing an Automatic 11-6 victory.



In game two, 1/19 got off to a rocky start.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

'Softball is more than just a game'

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

For Dan Hopkins, post intramural softball is more than just a game, he said.

"It's about building a team on and off the field," said Hopkins, who coaches and plays for the 75th Ranger Regiment post intramural softball team. "It gives you a chance to get to know your co-workers outside of work and it builds camaraderie within your unit and with other units."

Hopkins has played intramural softball since he joined the Army eight years ago and has had a love for sports since he started playing baseball when he was 6 years old. This is Hopkins' second year coaching the 75th Ranger Regt.'s softball team. He was an assistant coach while stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., and a head coach when he was stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C.

"I'm a very active person," he said. "Whatever sport is in season, I will play it — whether it's softball, basketball, racquetball or football. I don't have a favorite sport. I like them all equally."

1/10 'Automatic' in bracket semifinals

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Team Automatic from the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment made their bid for the Preseason Commanders Cup Softball Championship as sure as their name defeating the Eliminators 15-5 in the semifinals June 3 at Gowdy Field.

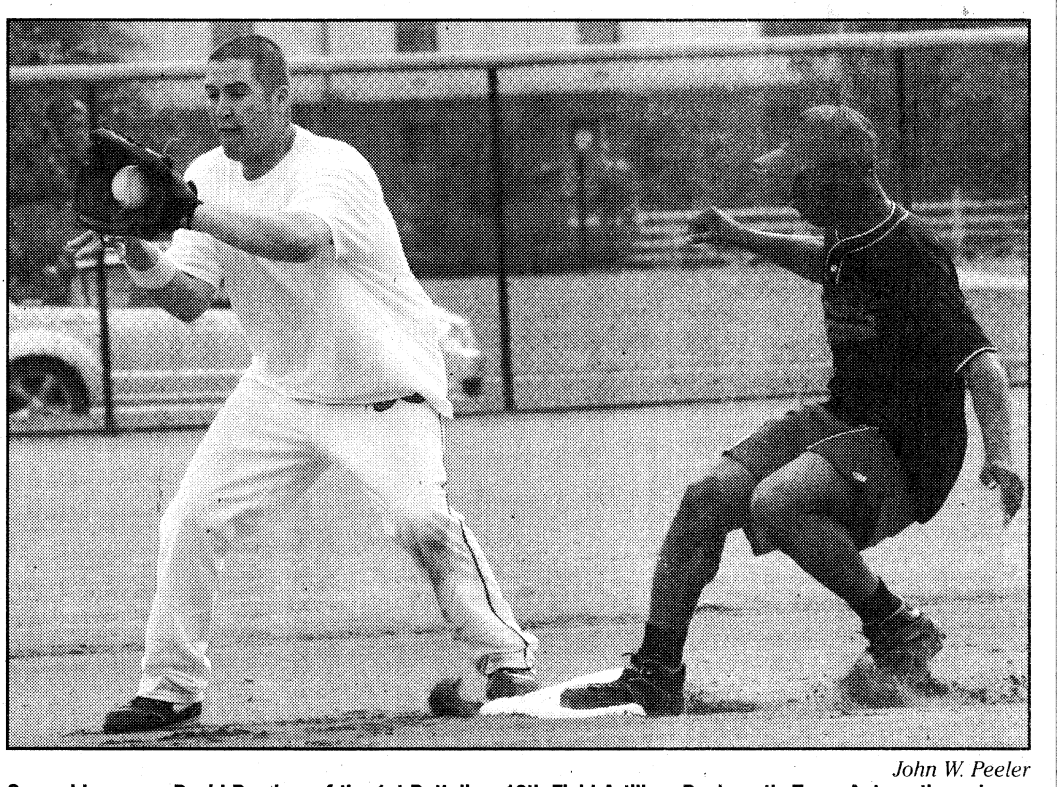
The Eliminators put the pressure on early in the top half of the first inning with four runs, but Automatic answered back to tie the game at 4-4 to close out the inning.

Automatic shut out the Eliminators in the top of the second inning while matching their first-inning total scoring two runs on an error and two runs off an RBI single from Chris Overbeck and an RBI double from Bobby Whitted to take an 8-4 lead.

The Eliminators scored their final run of the game in the top of the third inning off an RBI single while Automatic scored two runs in the bottom of the third and five runs in the bottom of the fourth inning to seal the 15-5 win.

"The first inning we made a couple of errors, but after that we played pretty solid defense," Automatic coach Keith DeMaso said.

DeMaso said he didn't lose faith in his team following a loss that put them in the loser's bracket, and expected his team to do well in the championship game.



"We lost a tough one that put us where we are, so we just wanted to come back and not make any errors like in the one we lost," he said. "I told the team going into the game the only one who could beat us was ourselves and I don't think there is any team here that can beat us.

"I think our chances in the championship game are good ... we're pretty fired up. We knew we would be here all along and now that we are here, we have to get the job done."

With the victory, Automatic moved into the championship finals to face the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment.

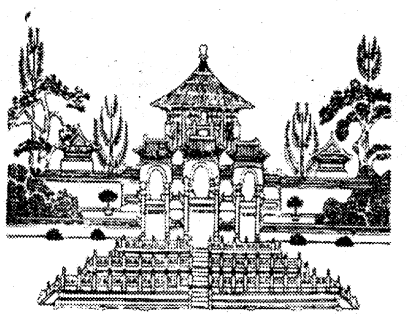
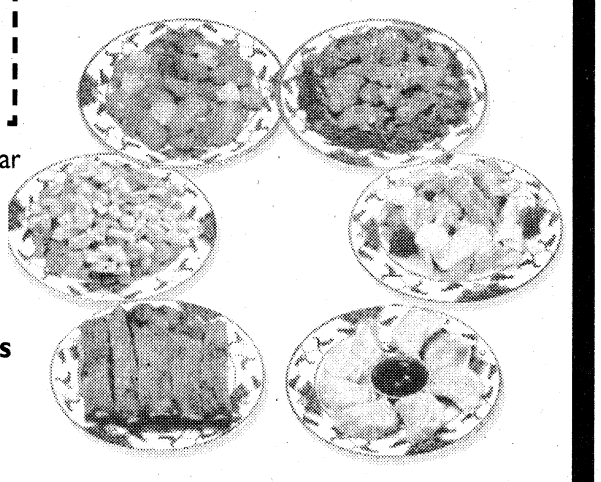
1/19 was held scoreless until the fourth inning when it picked up two runs, while team Automatic scored 13 runs by the bottom of the fourth inning to take a 13-2 lead. 1/19 scored one more run, but the game ended with team Automatic posting a 13-3 victory.

"We played good defense and our pitcher held it down," said Automatic coach Keith DeMaso.



"We stayed motivated to get the win. Between the two games I told the team to not give in and not make any stupid plays."



Team Automatic third baseman Scott Sandusky said the win was a team effort.

"It was an adrenaline rush when we won both games," he said. "As soon as we gained on them in the second game, we knew we had the championship in the bag."

The regular season began Monday for post intramural softball teams.

Decision deadline, near or Favre?

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

OK, enough already.

It would seem I would be grateful for any news on Brett Favre joining the Minnesota Vikings since I am a Vikings fan, but my patience with this story line is over.

True, he is a future Hall of Famer, but the back-and-forth nature of his retirement distracts from other important NFL news.

But what infuriates me the most at the situation is the shoddy manner of the reporting.

Over the past month or so very few of the articles, and I mean very few, of the articles attribute information to anyone other than "sources said," "sources close to the situation said," or "unidentified sources said."

Yes, there are times when wording like that is needed to protect a source, but not in every case, and certainly not all the time.

The latest report from "two sources," as reported by ESPN's Chris Mortensen and Ed Werder, is Favre has been given a deadline of this week to let the Vikings know if he intends to play for them this year.

Until Wednesday, the Vikings and Favre had no comment on the deadline, but sources are running rampant, according to the report from Mortensen and Werder. The latest article on ESPN relies on "two sources," "sources" and "according to sources," one time each.

This is not Watergate. But people supplying the information, the sources, of the Favre saga are the closest-held secret since.

If I were to write an article of that nature, my editor would kick it back to me and say, "Use names, or it won't run." And, I wouldn't have it any other way.

While I like Mortensen and Werder, their sources have been wrong before like when they reported Vikings coach Brad Childress had flown to Hattiesburg, Miss., to meet with Favre a couple of months ago — Childress never left Minnesota — so much for their sources.

Until someone wants to name sources in their Favre updates, I am going to quit reading the hype for now.

When I see a headline that says Favre has signed with someone, I will gladly read it.

But for now, my sources tell me it's a waste of time to believe anything other than Favre is retired, for now.

Biking the last stretch

the most challenging part of the competition because it was at the end."

Going into the triathlon, Dawley didn't expect to take first place, he said.

"I just went out there and tried to go as fast as I could. I wanted to get a better time — around 57 or 58 minutes," said Dawley, who was the only contestant to finish in less than an hour. "I still have time to meet my goal — I'll be back next year."

The top three participants in each age group received medals at a ceremony following the race.

Fourteen-year-old Colin Ryan competed for the past three years and in 2008, took second place in the 13-17 male category. This year, he took first place.

Training is key to being successful, Ryan said.

"I do the triathlon because I like a good challenge," he said. "I like to see how hard I can push myself. You have to be able to push yourself even when you are tired and you want to quit. I kept telling myself, 'I have to get to the end. I have to get to the end,' — that's what kept me going."

Lori Smith, director of Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation fitness facilities, was happy with the turnout.

"The turnout this year was twice the size of 2008," she said. "I think this year has been the best yet."

Junior captains lock up in combatives tournament

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

A class of more than 150 junior officers from Maneuver Captains Career Course Team 2 capped off its Level 1 Army Combatives training with a tournament June 3.

Champions emerged in six weight classifications. The event was held at Briant Wells Fieldhouse, home of the U.S. Army Combatives School.

The rules allowed for takedowns, chokeholds and various other submission locks. Fists, kicks and open-palm slaps to the head — incorporated in higher tiers of competition — were not permitted.

CPT Dan Rausch, a MCCC combatives instructor, said 99 percent of the class completed the Level 1 certification, a 40-hour process. The tournament wasn't required but has become something of a tradition within the MCCC, he said.

"It fosters competition and that warrior spirit. The Soldiers battle for bragging rights," he said. "But they also get a taste of what it takes to physically close the distance with the enemy and finish the fight."

The format was single-elimination with matches lasting six minutes, unless a fighter tapped out.

Dripping with sweat and exhausted afterward, many walked away red-faced, a result of choke techniques applied and broken. The absence of striking, however, didn't mean there wasn't any blood.

Frank Armeson overcame a bloody nose against James Prisoc in the final to capture first place in the heavyweight division. The match had to be stopped several times so he could pack his nose with cotton gauze.

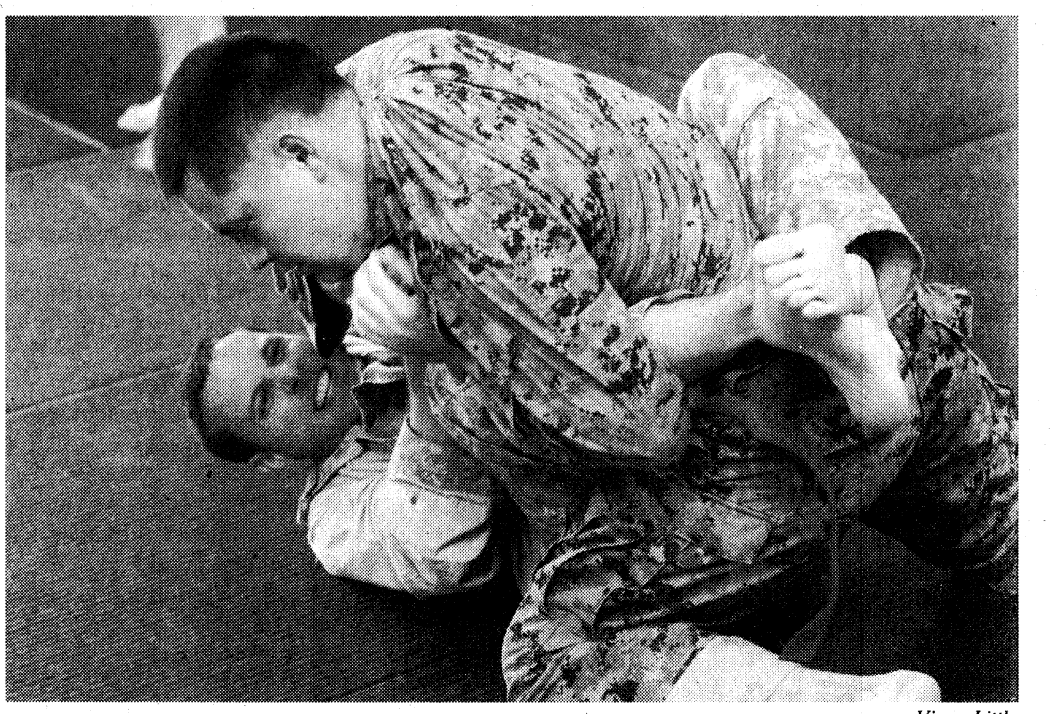
"I broke my nose several years ago, and it will bleed sometimes if I get hit the right way," Armeson said. "It was intense. You see previews of a movie and think there's no way it can live up to the hype. This lived up to it."

He said football, baseball and basketball don't compare to Army combatives.

"If one link fails in a team sport, everyone loses together," he said. "You come out on the mat and lose to another guy, it's all on you. You can't blame anyone else."

Josh Silver went 3-0 to claim the welterweight title. That included a semifinal victory over Marine Corps Maj. Jackson Doan, an MCCC academic instructor and late tournament entry.

"I was surprised when he came in," the Army captain said. "I saw that as my biggest obstacle to winning. I just got after it."



Silver said he gets a rush from the sport but it takes a physical toll.

"This goes a long way toward making men out of Soldiers," he said. "It took a little while to get my wind back, but you feel elated when you recover. It's a thrill."

Jonathan Norton needed six matches to pick up the cruiserweight championship. He said the intensity was apparent from the outset.

"There were a lot of pretty skilled fighters out there," he said. "I was just going out to have fun and compete. I didn't think I'd win, but it worked out in my favor and I ended up coming out on top."

Team Impact defeats Benning Ballers, 57-15

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Team Impact of Marietta, Ga., defeated the 13-14-year-old Benning Ballers in the playoffs of the Columbus Parks and Recreation ninth annual Summer Classic Saturday at Northside Park Recreation Center in Columbus. Children ages 7-17 from around Georgia competed in the tournament.

In the Ballers' third game of the tournament, Team Impact dominated from the opening tip and raced to a 20-0 lead at the end of the first period.

With two minutes to go in the second period, Baller Zach Garcia scored his third free throw of the game, but Team Impact led 37-3 at the half.

The Benning Ballers began the third period with James Young scoring two free throws and two baskets and Antonio Wilcox put two points on the board, but the team still trailed 49-11 at the end of the third period.

However, Team Impact kept up its scoring onslaught and went on to a 57-15 victory.

The Ballers suffered their third loss in the Summer Classic and were eliminated from the tournament.

"I think the team played hard," said Benning Ballers assistant coach Dan Huell Jr. "This is a learning experience. There is some of the best talent in Georgia here and playing in this tournament gives the kids a chance to play against other talented teams.

"And in the long run, it'll make them better players."

Garcia, 14, said his team put up a good fight but needed to improve on some aspects of the game.

"I think we played hard, but we didn't work as a team," he said. "Our percentage of shooting the ball was low and we couldn't get anything to fall."

Team Impact advanced to the semifinals, but lost to the Georgia Blazers, which ended its chance at competing in the finals.

The Alabama Kings took home first in the 14 and younger championship with a 73-72 victory over the Georgia Blazers.

Scoring: Ballers: Young (6), Huell III (4), Garcia (3), Wilcox (2).

Team Impact: Chenault (10), James (9), Oates (9), Coleman (9), Everage (8), Frazier (7), VanBuren (5).

CYSS Sharks circle Silver Hawks, win 10-9

Rachel L. Watkins

Shark Shawn Beaty prepares to hit the ball in a game against the Silver Hawks Tuesday at the Youth Sports Complex. The Sharks defeated the Silver Hawks, 10-9.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The 7-8-year-old Sharks caged the Silver Hawks 10-9 in a coach-pitch baseball game Tuesday at the Youth Sports Complex.

Both teams were scoreless after one inning, but by the end of the second inning, the Silver Hawks took the lead, 5-2.

The Sharks held the Silver Hawks scoreless in the top of the third inning, while the Sharks made a comeback with RBI singles from Gavin Gurganus, Luis Gutierrez and Marcel Ramirez to take a 7-5 lead.

The Silver Hawks scored four runs on RBI singles by Payton Huss and Noelan Woods to lead 9-7, but the Sharks scored three more runs in the bottom of the inning to seal the 10-9 win.

"I think it was a great game," said Sharks first baseman Ramirez, who received the game ball. "I'm excited about the season. I love everything about baseball — hitting, pitching and catching. I can't wait to play more games."

Sharks coach Sheila Sager said she has seen improvement in her team's baseball skills.

"The kids are working better together as a team, playing better defense and are hitting better than when they first started the season," she said.

Silver Hawks catcher Elizabeth Morgan said the game was a close one, but she had an optimistic outlook about the next game.

"I think we did good — we played hard," Morgan said. "We didn't win this time, but I know we'll get it in the next game."

Hopkins: Key to coaching is 'confidence in decisions'

Intramural softball is a good stress reliever for Soldiers, he said.

"Time on the field gives you time to let go. You can go on the field and for an hour, forget about everything else and just have a good time and play softball," he said.

The key to being a coach is having confidence in your decisions, he said. A coach has to know when to change the batting lineup and when to take a player out of the game.

He said his roster has changed since last year, but so far this season, the team is melding together well. And since the 2008 season, Hopkins has seen a growth in participants in the league.

"I'm glad to see there's more Soldiers out here participating," he said.

Hopkins is looking forward to a good season and he said his goal for the team is to have a winning record.

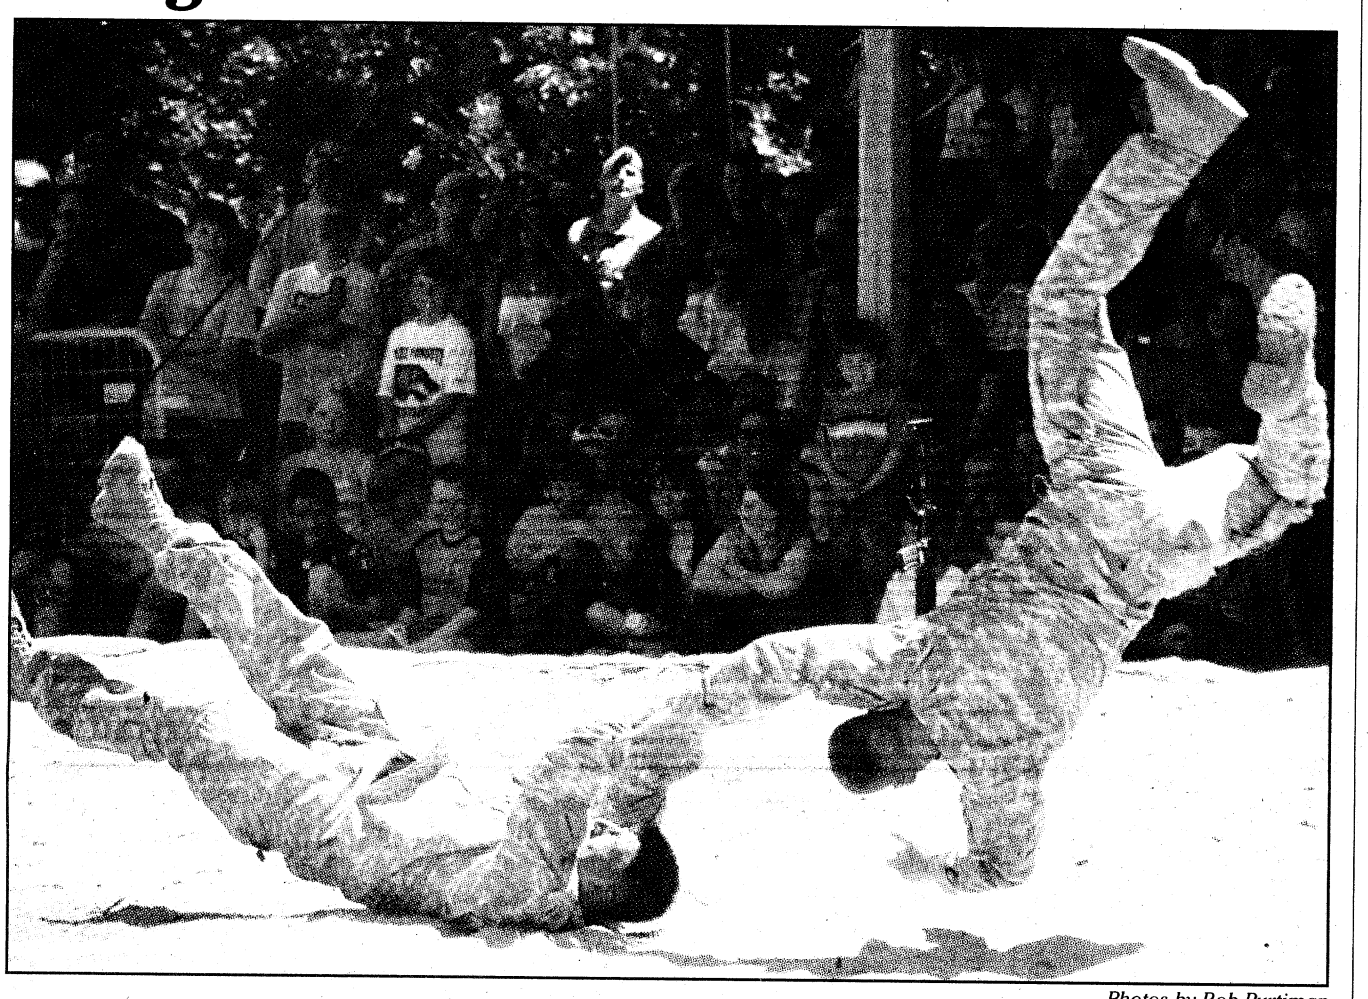
Riverside — the place where many commanding generals have called home — is the oldest structure on post.

Riverside marks its 100th year at Benning

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

One might call it Fort Benning's little White House.

Riverside sits on an 18-acre estate, a plot of land equal in size to the grounds at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.



This year, the white-columned frame house, home to a succession of commanding generals — including Omar Bradley, Courtney Hodges, Joseph Harper and Carmen Cavezza — turns a century old. Post officials said it's the oldest structure on Fort Benning.

"It's a fantastic house, synonymous with Fort Benning," said MG Michael Barbero, the current occupant, along with his wife, Linda. "It's a venue for everyone, with all the public events held here. I don't see it as our house. I see it as part of the community. That's what makes it so special."

Built in 1909 by Arthur Bussey, a Columbus businessman, the dwelling was a family summer home and among the last major self-supporting plantations in west Georgia, according

A competition to see how far dogs can jump in the pool is just one of the events at the Aflac Outdoor Games. Aflac Outdoor Games to return

Vince Little

Ax-wielding lumberjacks, flying dogs and a battle for barbecue bragging rights will be among the spectacles during the second annual Aflac Outdoor Games

The three-day event — featuring pro and college competitors in the STIHL TIMBERSPORTS Series — is slated for June 19-21 at South Commons in Columbus.

"In the lumber jacking world, this series is the Super Bowl of that sport," said Warner Neal, president of Outdoor Events, which is organizing the games in partnership with the Columbus Sports Council. "We will have the very best in the world here, and they will be competing for the championships. It's going to be a pretty big deal."

The inaugural Aflac Outdoor Games drew more than 15,000 people for the three-day weekend, he said, despite going up against two other major events in town, the Miss Georgia Pageant and Fort Benning's Independence Day celebration. It's been moved up a week this time to avoid the same conflicts.

The STIHL TIMBERSPORTS Series is comprised of eight events designed to challenge male and female athletes in strength, endurance, stamina, tool skill and agility.

They include Hot Saw, Stock Saw, Underhand Chop, Standing Chop, Single Buck Saw, Speed Climb, Springboard and the Boom Run.

Five-time Series champion David Bolstad of New Zealand, who dominated the 2008 games, highlights this year's 32-member professional field. Another six competitors will battle for the collegiate title.

"We want people to come out, have fun and enjoy seeing something that might be new to them," Neal said. "There are not many chances you get to see something like this live in Columbus."

In addition to the STIHL TIMBERSPORTS Series, the Aflac Outdoor Games again will be host to the Ultimate Air Dogs, Agility Dogs, the Knology Family Zone, Flyball and the Pig Bowl — a barbecue-cooking contest open to local amateurs

Post readies for Independence Day fun

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Independence Day festivities will be in full swing at Fort Benning June 27.

Beginning at 3 p.m., the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation will host its annual Independence Day celebration at Stewart-Watson Field. The celebration, which will move from its previous location on York Field, will feature food and drink vendors, inflatables, music, military demonstrations and fireworks. The celebration is held the weekend before Independence Day to allow Soldiers and their families to spend the holiday with friends and loved ones, said Donna Hyatt, a marketing specialist with DFMWR.

"It's going to be an exciting event, not to be missed," Hyatt said. "I think everyone will have a great time."

Great music from a variety of genres will be one of the event's highlights, Hyatt said. Singer-songwriter David Ryan Harris will kick off the evening's musical performances, followed by country trio Carter's Chord and headlining act The Edwin McCain Band.

"There will be something for everyone," Hyatt said. "We try to make the event as diverse as possible."

Jim Shoemaker, chief of DFMWR's Community Recreation Division, said organizers are expecting about 10,000 people.

Kids can bounce, hop, jump and slide on the more than 20 inflatables that will be available for free. The Silver Wings, Fort Benning's Command Exhibition Parachute Team, will perform a demonstration jump and Rangers will demonstrate SPIES and

Faith and fun, part of VBS

Caroline Gotler

Faith and fun came together for Fort Benning kids during Vacation Bible School.

The school, which began Monday and ends today, took place for three hours each evening at Faith Middle School and the Follow Me Chapel. Open to children 3 years old through sixth grade and, in certain exceptions, seventh grade, VBS taught kids about the Bible through songs, games, crafts and videos, said Frank Doerr, director of VBS and religious education.

The goal of Vacation Bible School is to be fun and to give kids an authentic worship experience and knowledge about God, Doerr said.

The school's curriculum, Crocodile Dock, is a bayou- and swamp-themed program that uses animal characters to help children remember what they've learned.

"I learned about Jesus," said 5-year-old Megan Johnson after a game where children ran under blankets to represent faith's protection. "The blanket was really shady and it was like a hat. And we were protected."

Volunteer leaders wore straw hats and khaki vests with the Crocodile Dock logo, and posters of crocodiles, rabbits and other swamp creatures reminded children of Bible verses and lessons.

Nearly 450 children and more than 100 volunteers participated in VBS, an increase of more than 200 people from 2008. It was the biggest turnout in recent memory for many volunteers, Doerr said.

Stefanie Cook, whose children Jerome, a sixth-grader at Faith Middle School, and Jeanette, a third-grader at Wilson Elementary School, attended VBS, said she volunteered because she enjoys teaching children about the Bible.

"I love seeing their happy faces and helping them with crafts," she said. "I know sometimes kids come who have never been to church, and they see how much fun it can be."

"I've never been to church, so getting to learn all these things about God and Bible verses is pretty exciting," said Claudia Cassatt, a sixth-grader at Faith Middle School who attended VBS for the first time. "My favorite part is being here and getting to see new people and learn different things."

For children who previously attended VBS, it was an opportunity to reunite with friends.

"We met here last summer and now we came back," said Teesha Buddle, a seventh-grader at Faith Middle School, after working on a craft project with Amani Bradley, also a seventh-grader. "I like the creativity and fun and learning about God."

Lauren Dillard, co-director of VBS, said she hoped its message would spread.

"It's sort of like a tree effect," she said. "You get people in here thinking about the Lord and his ministry, and those people go out and tell their friends about them and those friends tell their friends."

> I've never been to church, so getting to learn all these things about God and Bible verses is pretty exciting ... My favorite part is being here and getting to see new people and learn different things.

FRIES, also known as Special Patrol Insertion and Extraction systems and Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction.

The event will end with a fireworks display, which Hyatt said will be "fantastic."

"I've had people tell me it's one of the best in the area," she said.

Parking and admission is free, and the event is open to the public. Parking will be available at Meloy Hall, El Zapata, Smith Fitness Center and Bernheim Dental Clinic, and handicapped parking will be available at TIC Credit Union, the Bowling Center and DFMWR headquarters in Building 2783. Pets are not allowed. In case of inclement weather, the fireworks will take place at 10 p.m., but all other events will be canceled.

Riverside: Residence for many 'genuine legends' to historical data. The kitchen, part of an old meeting house moved to Riverside on logs from Lumpkin Road, dates to the early 1800s.

Once completed by Bussey, Riverside had two parlors and a dining room. Although designed as a summer home, several fireplaces also were added. The wood panels and floors are made of pine.

The home is surrounded by verandas, while flowers and towering oak trees adorn the grounds.

"Every room has a little different character to it," Linda said. "There are different scents on different parts of the acreage — the sweet smells of the South."

A sunroom features paintings from World War I, including one signed by President Woodrow Wilson. The dining room contains a mural of Confederate GEN Henry Lewis Benning, along with a long, wooden table that was an old meeting spot.

"You can only imagine the discussions that took place here," Linda said.

In July 1971, the five-bedroom home was added to the National Register of Historic Sites.

Jean Harron, a longtime Columbus resident, served as a tour guide from 1978 to 2006 and knew three of the Bussey children. She said other plantations didn't get the same attention because Riverside was the most beautiful and paid for itself.

"From Mr. Bussey's standpoint, he made it successful and made it self-sustaining — when people said it couldn't be done," Harron said. "The generals who lived there always honored the house and didn't change it too much."

Riverside became a military quarters in 1918 after the Infantry School moved to Columbus from Fort Sill, Okla. Since then, 49 commandants have resided there.

Other famous Army figures also lived on the property.

GEN of the Army George C. Marshall, a lieutenant colonel and assistant commandant from November 1927 to June 1932, resided in a structure behind the home that was later demolished.

Between August 1926 and January 1927, GEN of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower occupied quarters to the right front of Riverside. At the time, the future president was a major and commander of the 2nd Battalion, 24th Infantry.

Harron said GEN of the Armies John J. Pershing, who led the American Expeditionary Force in World War I, visited the home in Fort Benning's early years.

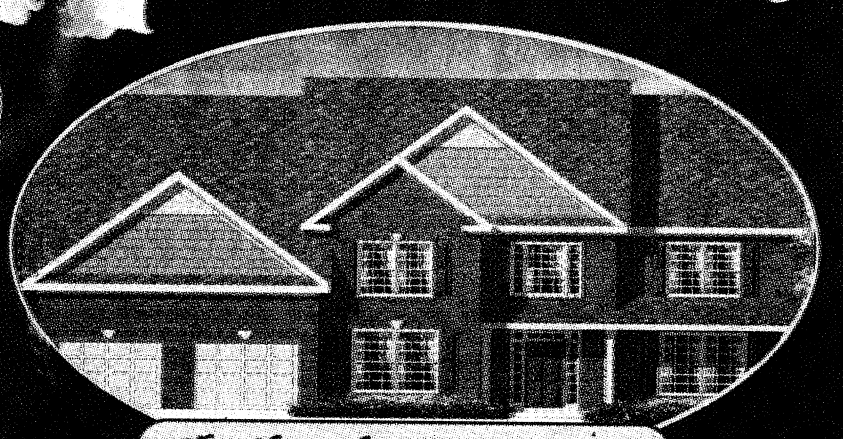
A large plaque on a first-floor hallway bears the dates and names of former commanding generals who resided at Riverside. It's also lined with old photographs.

Bob Purtiman

Even though Linda and MG Michael Barbero currently occupy Riverside, the Barberos see their historic home as a, "part of the community."

"These are genuine legends in the Army who lived here. Every time I look at it, it's really humbling," MG Barbero said. "It's a tremendous privilege and honor for me to have lived in the same place. I'm serving in the shadow of these great heroes."

Past commandants and their wives often return for visits, Mrs. Barbero said. She enjoys watching their reactions to Riverside's development over the years.



"When they see it again, they're almost in tears," she said. "Every occupant brings their own personality and flavor to this house ... We're just very humbled to be a part of history."

Marriage seminar offers faith-based learning

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's chaplains want to help you enhance your marriage.

Main Post's Protestant congregations will sponsor a military marriage seminar June 19 and 20 at the Follow Me Chapel to help strengthen couples' bonds from a faith-based perspective. Presented by guest speakers and leaders from Campus Crusade for Christ's military ministries, the seminar will feature discussion topics including God's plan and purpose for marriage, commitment, intimacy, and military-specific topics such as deployment and reintegration.

"They'll receive some of the best teaching around on strengthening a Christian marriage," said Chaplain (MAJ) Walt Hoskins, Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate, event coordinator. "It will be entertaining and informative."

COL(R) Keith Morgan, one of the event's scheduled speakers, who works with the family ministries division of Campus Crusade for Christ, will speak to attendees about building a marriage on a biblical foundation and gaining tools for effective communication.

Morgan emphasized the importance of being connected with God and with one's partner.

"We talk a lot in the seminar about oneness — being united physically, emotionally and spiritually in marriage, and we'd like to see more couples moving toward oneness," he said. "This seminar is absolutely a good way to start doing that."

Couples will learn how to strengthen their relationships to better meet the demands of Army life, Hoskins said.

"We'll talk about maintaining a Christian marriage during deployment," he said. "We want them to gain hope that despite the difficult situations they may be facing, whether it's deployment or being uprooted from a support base, their marriage can last and endure the struggles of a military lifestyle."

The seminar will build on the curriculum of the Strong Bonds retreats which many couples have attended, Hoskins said.

"There will be no repetition," he said. "They'll get something very different, even though they have a common theme (of strengthening marriage.)"

Whether a couple has been married several decades or are still engaged, any couple can benefit from the seminar, Hoskins said.

It will include an orientation and study project from HomeBuilders, a small-group Bible study program couples can use to enhance their marriages.

"It's easy to forget what you've learned once Monday morning rolls around," Morgan said. "But we find we can sustain the impact if we get folks involved in small group studies like HomeBuilders, and we'd love to see a huge impact on Fort Benning."

The military marriage seminar will take place from 5:30 to 9 p.m. June 19 and from 8:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. June 20 at Follow Me Chapel. Space is limited to 120 couples. Cost is $20 per couple and includes snacks and lunch June 20. Free child care will be provided for a limited number of children 6 months through 3 years old. For more information or to register, call Hoskins at 706-570-5788, Lyn King at 706-545-5475, or your unit chaplain. The deadline to register is today.

Games: Final year to be held at Southern Commons and pros sanctioned by the Kansas City Barbeque Society.

Two events are new this year, organizers said: the Georgia State Frisbee Dog Championships and Extreme Power Sports Archery Challenge.

On Day 2, Bob Lacey and Sheri Lynch of the nationally syndicated Bob and Sheri Show are scheduled to appear and sign autographs.

The games will be taped and broadcast by ESPN2 this fall and again next spring, Neal said.

He said Aflac's two-year contract for the Outdoor Games is ending. Organizers hope to replace it with the National Log Rolling Championships or pro beach volleyball in 2010, he said.

"Our goal was to create an event that provided great family entertainment, and have some kind of competition in it," Neal said. "But we want to have some different things going on. Every year, we want to add something new, so it's not the same thing year after year."

Advance tickets may be purchased at local Piggly Wiggly or Lewis Jones Grocery stores. The cost per day is $10 for adults, $5 for military and children ages 12 and younger, and $25 for a family package (two adults, two children). Single-day passes are $5 more at the gate.

Begin with small steps to gain financial freedom

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Are you feeling the pinch of the economy? Does your paycheck seem to fall short each month? Can you see financial hope for your household or is your financial ship sinking? Most of us make New Year's resolutions, often to get our finances in shape. It is easy to commit in January, but what happens now that it is June? Are you still committed to mastering your money? If you are, then you are probably asking the same three key questions that lots of folks are also wrestling with. These are:

Will I ever have enough?

Will it continue to be enough?

How much is enough?

The good news is, there is hope. The first step, and frequently most challenging in any journey, is to commit to success. If you find a program and simply commit to work on it weekly, then you can join the ranks of those released from financial bondage to financial freedom. I recommend Ron Blue's workbook Master Your Money, Dave Ramsey's Financial Peace University and Army Community Service's financial workshop. These programs will teach you simple, time-proven techniques to help you along the road to financial freedom and let your money work for you. You will be able to enjoy your purchases. As you work toward that goal, keep three tips in mind:

Don't strive for perfection. Financial freedom is a process, not a project.

Don't focus on the past. A verse in the Old Testament reminds us, "Don't remember the former things or consider the old habits you had."

If you'll let him, God wants to change your checkbook, and he may start by changing your heart.

Don't try to 'fix' your financial situation overnight. If it took you a while to get behind, it may take you a while to get out. Faithful, consistent progress is what you're after, not the fantasy of a quick fix.

Expert advisor Ron Blue says, "From a financial standpoint, you can have enough. If you plan using (proven) techniques and principles, you will have enough ... if our security comes from just money, though, we'll never have enough."

That's why whatever system you choose; make sure it's founded on the four key biblical principles. What are those principles? Join me next week to discuss those very secrets to financial freedom.

In the meantime, if there's any way that our team of trained counselors at the Chaplain Family Life Center, Building 2606 in Soldier's Plaza, can help you with your family, friends, finances or any other dimension of your journey, just pick up the phone and give us a call at 706-545-1760. For more information about ACS's financial workshop, call 706-545-5516.

Consider exercise balls, bands for home workouts

LTC Karen E. Hawkins
DECA

FORT LEE, D.C. — It is possible to get a really good workout at home using an exercise ball, exercise bands and a good pair of tennis shoes. Many of us don't have time to go to the gym, so we can use this convenient workout equipment to tone and strengthen our muscles, along with regular aerobic activity, such as walking, to help burn calories.

Exercise bands are great for strengthening muscles and increasing endurance. They are also compact and portable, so you can use them at your desk during breaks at work and also when you travel. According to the American Council of Exercise, you can get a whole-body workout in 10 to 20 minutes, twice a week. Normally, you need to do about 10 repetitions for each move. Some band exercises recommended by ACE include hamstring curls, squats and chest presses. Keep the directions after you buy an exercise band to help you get the technique down.

Exercise bands come in resistance levels from light to heavy. When starting out, choose an exercise band that offers enough resistance to work your muscles without excessive strain. Once the exercises begin to feel too easy, you may need to graduate to a band with greater resistance.

An exercise ball is great for helping develop balance, stability and strength. Exercise balls are great to use for strengthening your core muscles as you have to work at staying stable when on the ball. You can also use the ball to do weight training, stomach exercises and stretching.

Because exercise balls come in different sizes, choose one that is right for your height. When sitting on the ball, your hips should be level or slightly higher than your knees. This will help you maintain comfortable control while using the ball.

One of the best parts of using an exercise ball or band is that they are very versatile. You can use them when you are watching TV, or try sitting on the ball instead of using a chair while working on the computer. Your muscles have to work to hold you up, so you are toning while you type.

When you first start using the equipment, you may want to use a chair or a wall to help support yourself. Perform each exercise using slow and controlled movements and concentrate on what you are doing. This will help you get the most out of your workout.

THE BAYONET

Four-year-old Tyler Caughrom, from Atlanta, lands at the bottom of the Xcelerator. At four stories high, it is the largest inflatable water slide in the world, said Rachel Crumbley, marketing director for Callaway Gardens.

Summer adventure in full swing at Callaway

Gardens feature circus, kids' rides, beach activities

The Bayonet
CHERYL RODEWIG

Want to spend a day at the beach? Consider driving north instead of south. Only 45 minutes away, Callaway Gardens is in full summer swing. From the daring young man on the flying trapeze to water skiing and beach volleyball, you'll find all the makings of summer fun at this 13,000-acre getaway.

A stop by the circus is a must, as long as you're not trying to force unwilling family members to join in the action.

One of only two collegiate circuses in the nation, Florida State University's Flying High Circus has all the death-defying tricks of a big-time show. Students tumble, swing, dance, bike and more, often at dizzying heights.

I was impressed, as were the Soldiers behind me who made more than one connection between Army training and circus acrobatics. I happened to overhear the suggestion that the acrobats might join their unit. And no wonder: these artists performed some stunts that reminded me of post obstacle courses.

The show isn't long, so don't worry about bringing little ones. Shows are at varying times throughout the week, including 1:30 and 4 p.m. Saturdays.

The circus tent is right beside the mile-long Robin Lake Beach where there is ample room for sand castles.

You can also play beach volleyball, shuffleboard, miniature golf and ride a paddleboat, all free with admission. For an additional charge, there is Iceberg Island, a floating playground, rock climbing, a bungee swing, temporary tattoos, plenty of snacks and the world's largest inflatable water slide, the Xcelerator.

Even at the beach, you will find the floral beauty that characterizes Callaway Gardens.

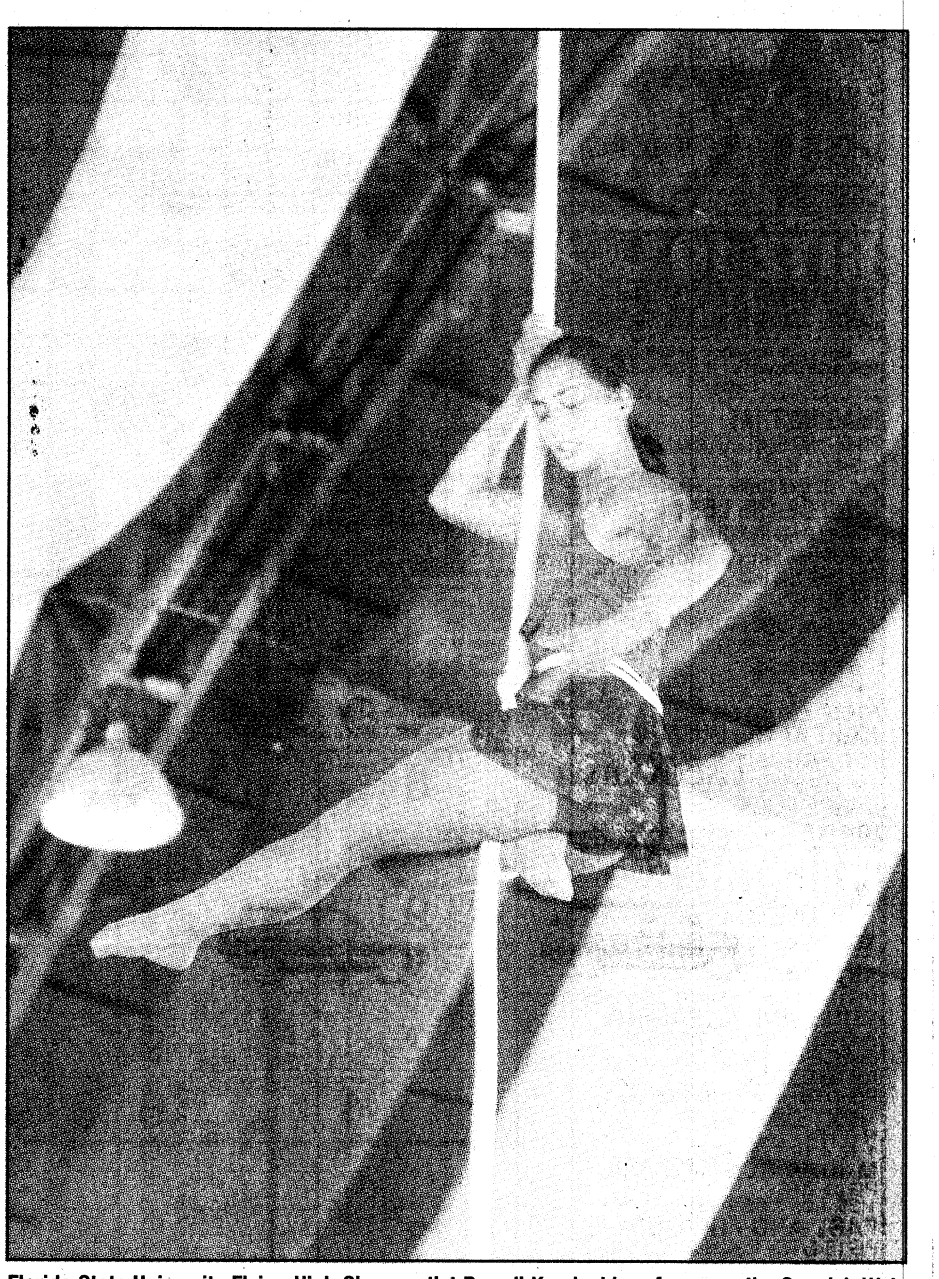
Water lilies bloom until about 2 p.m. every day at Robin Lake, near the paddle boat station.

Near the paddleboats, there are hundreds of water lilies. The blossoms close around 2 p.m. each day, but when the petals are fully open, they are an astounding sight — one of my favorite parts of the trip. Flowers are also on display near the pavilion where you can purchase sandwiches, sweets, pretzels and more.

If you go, be sure to bring a towel for the beach. Even if you're not planning to swim, you may want to lie down, have an impromptu picnic or go on the water slide. Bring plenty of sunscreen, too.

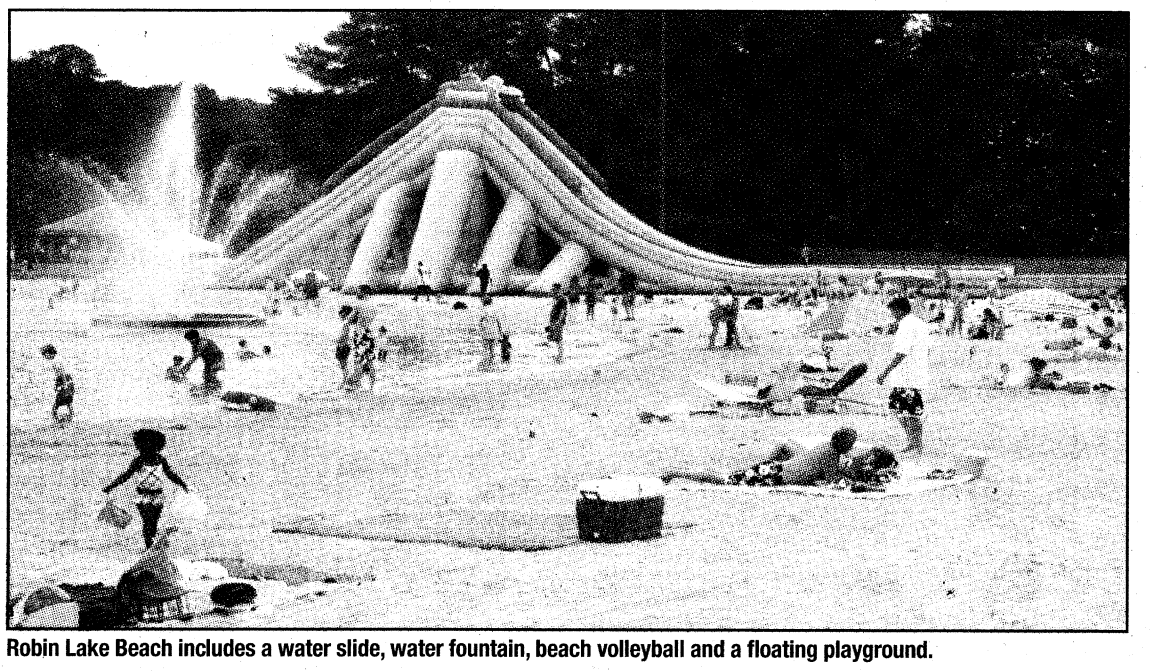
It gets hot out there, and the sun's rays, from overhead and reflecting off the water, may give you an unwanted and not-so-hot pink glow.

To show appreciation for the military, Callaway Gardens offers free admission for active-duty service members and spouses and 50 percent discounts for their guests.



Regular admission is $15 for adults, $10 for retirees and $7.50 for children 6 to 12.

There are also several summer stimulus packages available for guests who wish to extend their stay overnight. You can customize your package with different features, including discounts at the scenic golf courses in the gardens and the luxury of the Callaway spa. Those who stay Monday nights can enjoy an outdoor movie on the beach.



For more information, visit www.callawaygardens.com.For more information, visit www.callawaygardens.com.

Nine-year-old Maya Dunham, daughter of SSG(R) Edwin Dunham, plays miniature golf, while her friend, 8-year-old Eboni Herring, watches Saturday at Callaway Gardens.

Florida State University Flying High Circus artist Brandi Kaminski performs on the Spanish Web. During the dance, she climbed the rope, twirled and hung upside down. The dance was one of several performances during the show, including juggling, trapeze and jump roping using a circus artist as a rope. The circus performs throughout the summer at Callaway Gardens.

Robin Lake Beach includes a water slide, water fountain, beach volleyball and a floating playground.

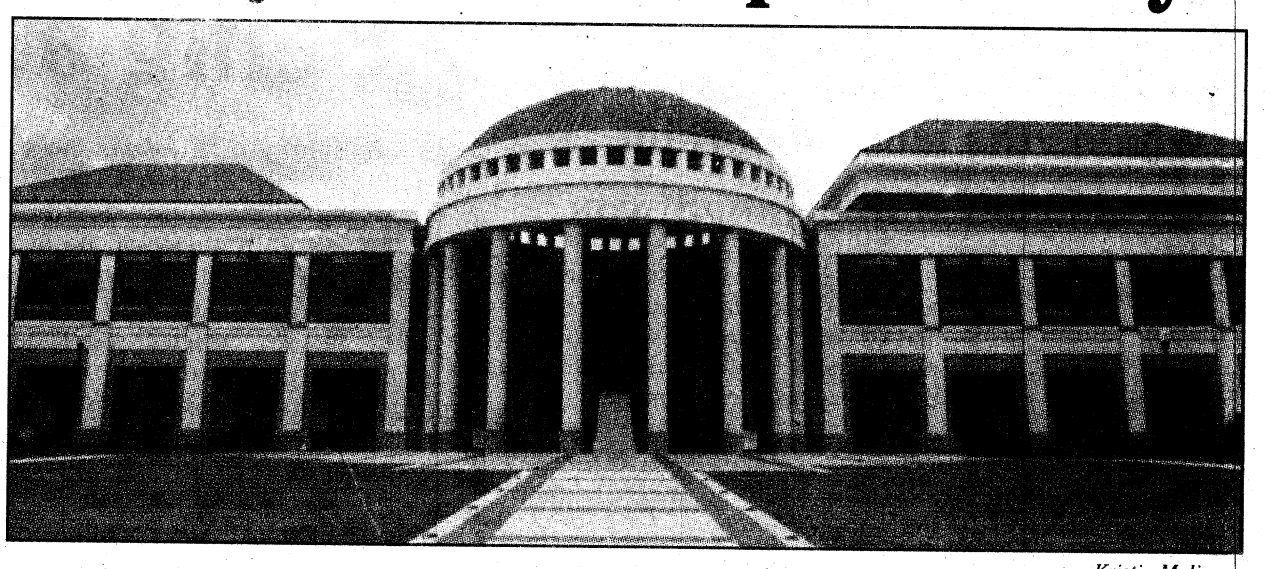
National Infantry Museum opens today



Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

What started out as a dream, with the advice from local philanthropists to think big, opens today. The National Infantry Museum opens its doors and exhibits at noon.

The ribbon-cutting ceremony begins at 11 a.m. The guest speaker is former Secretary of State and Chairman of the Joints Chief of Staff GEN(R) Colin Powell.

The memorandum of agreement, the official first step in building the state-of-the-art facility designed to tell the Infantry story, was signed by then Commanding General MG John Le Moyne, Judson Bennett, chief curator of the U.S. Army, and MG(R) Jerry White, president of the National Infantry Association, in October 2000.

"(The museum) is all about preserving the legacy of sacrifice, valor and honor for those who have gone before us," said then Commanding General MG Benjamin Freakley, during the groundbreaking ceremony in September 2004. "Our Infantry is the boots on the ground, ultimately armed with a rifle and a bayonet, taking the last 100 yards and closing with and destroying the enemy."

Kristin Molinaro
The National Infantry Museum opens today. The ribbon-cutting ceremony is scheduled to begin at 11 a.m. and will feature former Secretary of State and Chairman of the Joints Chief of Staff GEN(R) Colin Powell as the guest speaker.

The result is the 200-acre Patriot Park outside the gates of Fort Benning.

On site is the five-acre Parade Field where basic and one station unit training graduations take place. Today C Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, graduates at 9:30 a.m.

In March during the Sacred Soil Ceremony, soil from historic and present day battlefields was scattered by Soldiers who fought in the battles or family members of those Soldiers.

World War II Street replicates a typical garrison environment with original buildings from Fort Benning moved to the location. GEN George S. Patton's office and living quarters includes genuine artifacts.

Heritage Walk, the walkway from the Parade Field and surrounding grounds to the museum features pavers dedicated to Infantrymen and supporters of the military.

The museum has three floors. The main exhibit is the Last 100 Yards ramp, which features a restored Bradley M-2 A2 that was used by the 4th Infantry Division in Iraq. The ramp depicts battles from Yorktown to Iraq.

"It will be an emotional experience," White said. For more information, see A4-5.

New location for updates

Bridgett Siter
MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Post officials hope a change in venue will encourage more local residents to attend the Community BRAC Update, held at 3 p.m. on the first Tuesday of each month.

Beginning July 7, the update will take place off post at the new National Infantry Museum. Currently, meetings are held in Infantry Hall.

"We have a good number of dedicated people who come each month, people who understand that progress and growth on Fort Benning means progress and growth to the local communities," said Jay Brown, BRAC program manager for Fort Benning's Strategic Planning Office.

"Certainly the subject matter is of interest to the majority of our local residents, but coming on post, stopping at the gate to request a visitor's pass and trying to find their way around the installation, can be intimidating to people who would otherwise love to have an opportunity to learn more about what's ahead," said Brown, who hosts the monthly meetings. "We're taking those inconveniences out of the equation, and I think we'll generate a lot more interest in the event."

The event usually lasts less than an hour, Brown said. After a brief summary of progress on the MCOE, he opens the floor for questions. For more information, call 706-545-6169.

SPC Ross McGinnis honored at plaque's unveiling

MG Michael Barbero unveils a plaque featuring SPC Ross McGinnis' Medal of Honor citation last Friday in front of parents Tom and Romayne and sister Katie.

Medal of Honor recipient first to receive plaque

THE BAYONET

Medal of Honor recipient SPC Ross McGinnis was the first Soldier honored at the National Infantry Museum, a week before the museum's exhibits open.

It's fitting McGinnis is the first Soldier honored in this museum because he, and Infantry Soldiers like him, were the inspiration for the museum, said MG(R) Jerry White, chairman of the National Infantry Foundation.

McGinnis' parents, Tom and Romayne, and sister Katie, along with White and MG Michael Barbero, post commanding general, unveiled a plaque featuring McGinnis' likeness and Medal of Honor citation during a ceremony Friday.

McGinnis, who graduated from one station unit training on Sand Hill, earned the Medal of Honor Dec. 4, 2006, in Adhamiyah, Iraq. The machine gunner with C Company, 1st Battalion, 26th Infantry Regiment, 2nd Brigade, 1st Infantry Division, was providing Maneuver Battle Lab tests nonlethal shotgun round

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The Army wants to give U.S. military forces and Homeland Security better options for controlling mobs and marking suspects — while decreasing the odds of deadly consequences in the process.

Fort Benning's Maneuver Battle Lab conducted an experiment on a new 12-gauge nonlethal shotgun cartridge June 1-5. Fifteen Soldiers — five from the 209th Military Police Detachment and 10 with 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment — took part in the testing at Krilling and Pool ranges.

Rob Harbison, lead project officer for the Maneuver Battle Lab's Soldier team, said an assessment was done on the round's accuracy and the effectiveness of a paint and marking compound within it.

"We are analyzing the data, but initial insights indicate the cartridge met all of the performance parameters," he said.

A Soldier takes part in shotgun qualification for the Maneuver Battle Lab's experiment conducted this month.

Officials said the round, known officially as the 12-gauge nonlethal extended range marking munition, can be used during noncombatant hostile situations in combat zones and in the United States as authorities continue to engage terrorist threats.

It's especially helpful in detainee operations, crowd control, or marking a suspect vehicle or individual, officials said. The cartridge can identify targeted personnel at a range of more than 50 meters.

LTC Alfred Jackson, firepower branch chief for the Soldier Requirements Division, said the round enhances battlefield operations by minimizing widespread destruction of people, assets, infrastructure and the environment. Fiscal 2012 is the earliest it will be ready for use.

"This capability allows the tactical commander the option to tailor a response to situations when a lethal response is not the best option," Jackson said. "The Infantry Center is developing (nonlethal) capabilities that will not only protect our forces but also limit collateral damage and reduce noncombatant and friendly force casualties."

Harbison said the Army's requirement document calls for it to augment the currently fielded M-1012, a 12-gauge round with an

NCO Academy students hear firsthand account of PTSD

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

The Army has a new line of defense in the battle against post-traumatic stress disorder —better-informed NCOs.

Soldiers attending Warrior Leader Course, Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course and Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course at the Henry Caro NCO Academy receive 90-minute briefings on PTSD during the courses' last week of instruction. CSM(R) Sam Rhodes, who said he has struggled with PTSD since returning from back-to-back deployments in Iraq in 2005, shares his experiences, explains PTSD symptoms and warning signs, and talks about ways to build psychological resilience and the importance of seeking help.

The briefing builds on the Post-Deployment Health Assessment and Re-Assessment, which use written surveys to assess Soldiers' health after deployments, said CSM Zoltan James, commandant of the Henry Caro NCO Academy.

"With the post-deployment assessments, there is no direct command involvement," he said. "I wanted to incorporate a class to provide some awareness (of PTSD) with someone who has experienced it and knows what to look for. From a leadership perspective, this is something we need to do. NCOs are on the front lines, and this class is to give leaders the education and information to help their Soldiers."

James said he chose Rhodes to conduct the briefing because Soldiers could relate to him because he wore the uniform and has had the experience.

One of the goals is to reduce the stigma associated with PTSD, including the fear their responsibilities will be decreased or their superiors will frown on them, Rhodes said.

"It's OK to seek help, it's OK to talk about it, it's OK to talk to your buddy and say, 'Hey I'm having problems, can you come hang out

COMMANDER'S COLUMN

Fort Benning commander bids farewell

MG Michael D. Barbero
FORT BENNING COMMANDING GENERAL

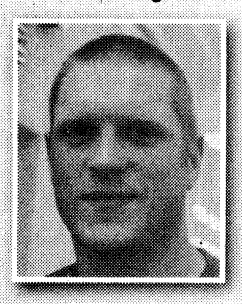
In a few days, Linda and I will leave Fort Benning to begin the next chapter of our lives. We depart reluctantly from this wonderful place. We have had many great assignments during my career, and we have fond memories of them all. However, this assignment, ironically the shortest of my career, has been the most enjoyable and the most rewarding.

The Fort Benning and Chattahoochee Valley Community is a special place for so many reasons, none more significant than the people who call it home. If the Army is a family — born of common goals, common challenges and common values — we must certainly count among our brotherhood the Chattahoochee Valley communities that embrace Fort Benning and share our desire to become a Center of Excellence in every respect. They have proven themselves worthy partners through their dedication to the principles outlined in the Army Community Covenant. They care about our mission, our families, our well-being.

Obviously the relationship is reciprocal. Any town in the world would be proud — and lucky — to embrace a community like Fort Benning.

As I have worked with local leaders, I have always considered myself blessed to represent a population of professional Soldiers and Army Families who are among the most productive, respected members of the Chattahoochee Valley community. And, Fort Benning is known across our Army as being home to the best leaders, Soldiers and Army Families.

I assure you that your new command team, MG Michael Ferriter and his wife, Margie, are the right team for Fort Benning. MG Ferriter is a great Infantryman and leader. The Ferriters come with one advantage Linda and I could not claim eight months ago; on this, their fourth tour at Fort Benning, they already know just how blessed they are to assume command of the best installation and the greatest Soldiers and Army Families in the world.



Thank you for all that you do for our mission, our community and our Army. And may God bless all of you -— our Fort Benning Soldiers and families who so selflessly serve our great Nation.

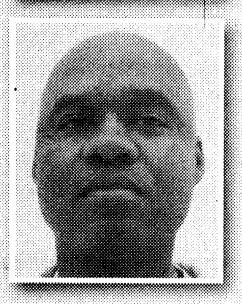
What is the most important lesson your father taught you?



He taught me to be responsible. When I was a kid, I had a list of chores I had to do, and if I didn't do them, I would have to do more chores. He set a very good example by the way he carried himself.

He taught me to take pride in everything I do and make sure I try my best. At school, whether it was something small or big, he told me to work hard like it was the biggest project I'd ever done.

Work hard. He showed me that if you want anything in life, you've got to work for it. Whenever we go out on missions or training, I don't complain and work hard, and I know that's from him instilling that in me.

Being a father isn't easy

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

What does it take to be a good father? I don't think anyone really knows, but June 21 is Father's Day and whether your father is still alive or not, everyone should have someone they looked up to as a father figure in their life to give thanks to.

Being a father is a difficult yet important role, especially for military men. I know, I have held the role of a military father like my father before me.

As a child I didn't realize what a tough job it was, trying to balance being in the military and being a dad, but after my first child was born reality hit really fast.

Between changing diapers and feeding a newborn in the morning, I ran PT and took care of Soldiers and my other military obligations during the day, to come home to changing diapers and feeding — then got up the next morning to do it all over again.

As my children got older I thought it would get easier, but it didn't, it was just different.

Feeding was easier because they could feed themselves. Changing diapers wasn't a problem because they were potty trained.

But now, they demanded much more attention. "Daddy, let's play," were the words I heard after I got home from a long day's work.

As my children grew and gained more independence the challenges were different, and so was my role as a father.

Since my father died when I was 11, the only examples of how I should be a father to them came from the father figures in my life. The examples of my uncle Bernard, my uncle Olis and our good family friend Howard helped me get through some difficult times, especially when I was a single parent. I was lucky to have had role model fathers like them to teach me how to be a father.

Both my children are adults now and being a father is just as much a challenge as it ever was, but I don't mind — I'm sure being my children has been just as big a challenge to them.

Father's Day is a special day to thank our fathers and those who have stepped in to be father figures in our lives.

While neither my father nor any of the men who were father figures to me are alive today, I will be forever grateful to them for helping me become a better man and a better father.

So, what does it take to be a good father? I still don't have all the answers, but I know I would do it all again just to hear those three words — "Daddy, let's play."

Need advice? Listen to dad

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"You know, you should have had the transmission checked out before you bought it."

I'm on the phone with my dad the day after my cute little Volkswagen Jetta came back from the auto repair shop for the umpteenth time, leaving me with a distinctly uncute, unlittle bill. I've owned the car less than a year but have already sunk more money into repairing it than I care to think about. My dad advised me against buying it in the first place — a 10-year-old car with two previous owners and no warranty? Sounded fishy to him.

"No, no, it's fine, I'm getting a deal on it," I told him. "This guy is really honest. And even if I do have to get it repaired, I'm sure it will still be less than what I would have paid for a new car from the dealership."

Famous last words. When I told my dad that I'm planning on selling it, he simply shook his head and said, "Didn't I tell you not to buy that thing?"

"Yeah, yeah, yeah — I know," I said.

Of course, my dad was right about the car. But the funny thing is, I've noticed a strange trend as I've gotten older — my dad has gradually been right about things more often.

I remember going to the pool with him as a kid, and how I refused to listen when he tried to teach me proper freestyle technique, preferring instead to perfect my underwater handstands. In the long run, knowing how to swim laps would probably have been more beneficial — I'd look silly doing handstands in the fitness center pool these days.

When I was 17, my dad decided my shorts were too short and told me so. Of course, I would have none of it. What 17-year-old girl in her right mind would take fashion advice from her father? But now, looking back on some of the styles I proudly sported in those days, he may have had a point.

When I landed my first job interview after college for a position as an event planner, I called my dad to share the good news, but was disappointed when he sounded more skeptical than excited.

"Are you sure it's legit?" he asked.

I ignored him and went to the interview anyway, only to find that the company was indeed running a pyramid scheme.

So by the time I was ready to buy the Jetta last year, I knew my dad was giving me sound advice when he told me to get the car thoroughly checked over by a professional mechanic. But even though I knew he was right, I didn't do it — it seemed like too much work, and I wanted to buy the car as soon as possible. Now I wish I'd listened.

So, the next time my dad offers advice, I might just take it. If the trend continues, odds are in his favor he'll be right.

rear security in the turret of a humvee during a combat patrol in the northeast Baghdad neighborhood when an insurgent threw a grenade. McGinnis tried to deflect it, but it landed in the hatch, near the radio.

McGinnis yelled "grenade" to warn the crew, then threw himself on it, absorbing the blast and saving the lives of SFC Cedric Thomas, SSG Ian Newland, SGT Lyle Buehler and PFC Sean Lawson. McGinnis died instantly.

Both Thomas and Newland attended the ceremony.

"His sacrifice changed absolutely everything," said Newland, who medically retired after the attack and attends college now. "(Ross was) not your typical, run-of-the-mill Soldier, not some 25-year-old solid, strong guy who had been in combat a million times. This kid was 19 years old and scared like the rest of us. He (showed) the nation how strong Soldiers can be."

Romayne McGinnis said her son found his calling in the Army.

"He loved it, loved the discipline, the PT and camaraderie with other Soldiers," she said.

After graduating from 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, McGinnis was stationed in Schweinfurt, Germany, with the Big Red One.

It was through physical training and ability group runs before the unit deployed in August 2006 that MAJ Mike Baka, McGinnis' company commander in 1st Bn., 26th Inf. Regt., became familiar with the young Soldier.

"Not many Soldiers can run two miles in 12 minutes," Baka said. "He kept his military bearing around me; it was only after his death, through videos, did I learn what a jokester he was."

McGinnis was chosen to man the .50-caliber machine gun because of his proficiency, Baka said.

"He was armed to the hilt when he was in the turret," Baka said, listing the .50 cal, squad automatic weapon, M-16, firing port weapon and 9 mm pistol McGinnis kept close when on patrol. "He was the best the platoon had."

Thomas, the platoon sergeant, recommended McGinnis for early promotion.

"He was always exceeding the standard, always taking on another task, when there was a detail, McGinnis volunteered for it," Thomas said. "I had to tell him to let others help carry the load."

Baka decided to promote McGinnis to specialist with a waiver at 17 months in service. "He earned it. I had 190 Soldiers and two waivers," Baka said. "I signed his 15 minutes before we went on patrol."

During the honor ceremony that also celebrated the Army's 234th birthday, Fort Benning's commanding general told the hundreds in attendance that McGinnis embodied what it means to be a Soldier.

And on the day he died, he demonstrated the Army values of loyalty, duty, respect, selfless service, honor and personal courage, Barbero said.

"Ross was an outstanding young man," said Baka, who recommended McGinnis for the nation's highest award. "His family, the values he got from his parents, they did 90 percent of the work. The Army topped it off."

President George W. Bush presented the Medal of Honor to McGinnis' parents a little more than a year ago, nearly 18 months after his death.

"Ross exemplified the training all Infantry Soldiers get," his mother said.

"Ninety percent of all Soldiers would do the same thing (covering a grenade with their bodies to save fellow Soldiers)," she said.

"My son gave these Soldiers a second chance, a gift," Tom McGinnis said, "not a debt to repay."

There isn't a day that goes by, Newland said, that he isn't thankful.

"Ross gave me an extra day — to be able to play with my daughter, to be able to teach my son something in his honor," Newland said.

"McGinnis is forever part of our Army team," Barbero said. "It is appropriate we honor his courageous actions with this plaque at the new museum, which is dedicated to the American Infantryman."

PTSD: Soldier shares story to teach future leaders with me?'" he said.

SFC Clark Gabriel, who has served more than 16 years in the Army, said his responsibilities as a platoon sergeant with 2nd Battalion, 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 82nd Airborne Division, were decreased after he was diagnosed with Traumatic Brain Injury and PTSD after redeploying to Fort Bragg, N.C., from Afghanistan in 2008.

"Basically I just helped out with administrative stuff," Gabriel said. "I ran my platoon and still attended training meetings, but when they did training exercises, I couldn't go. I couldn't (do Airborne jumps) and when they would go to the ranges, I couldn't go. I wasn't allowed."

After medical and mental health evaluations, Gabriel was put on non-deployable status and a profile barring him from training that involves explosives or could cause head injury. Gabriel attended Rhodes' briefing Thursday before graduating ANCOC, a school he said he was previously turned away from because of his profile and medical and mental health treatments. When he learned he might be discharged from the Army because of his condition, Gabriel appealed to his regimental sergeant major for help.

"He took a very active interest in (me) and really helped me out," Gabriel said. "He investigated the recommendations from my doctors and did what it took to bring me to ANCOC.

"I think it's important to know there are people who want to help you, but if you need help, you're going to have to find it yourself, because nobody is going to jump up and hand it to you."

Gabriel's next assignment is with the National Training Center Operations Group at Fort Irwrin, Calif.

SGT Jason Dietrich, 132nd Engineer Detachment at Fort Gillem, Ga., attended Rhodes' first briefing in late May while he was in the Warrior Leader Course.

"I was absolutely surprised to hear a senior leader talking about it," he said. "You know people who have (PTSD) and see people who have it, but you don't expect a senior leader to come out with it. It brings it to a whole other level when you have someone who has been through it, and makes (senior leaders) more approachable to junior Soldiers."

"I think people will think, 'If he can talk about it, I can talk about it,'" said SGT Ollie Cook, CONUS Replacement Center. "They'll feel more comfortable, and that will help a lot to reduce the stigma."

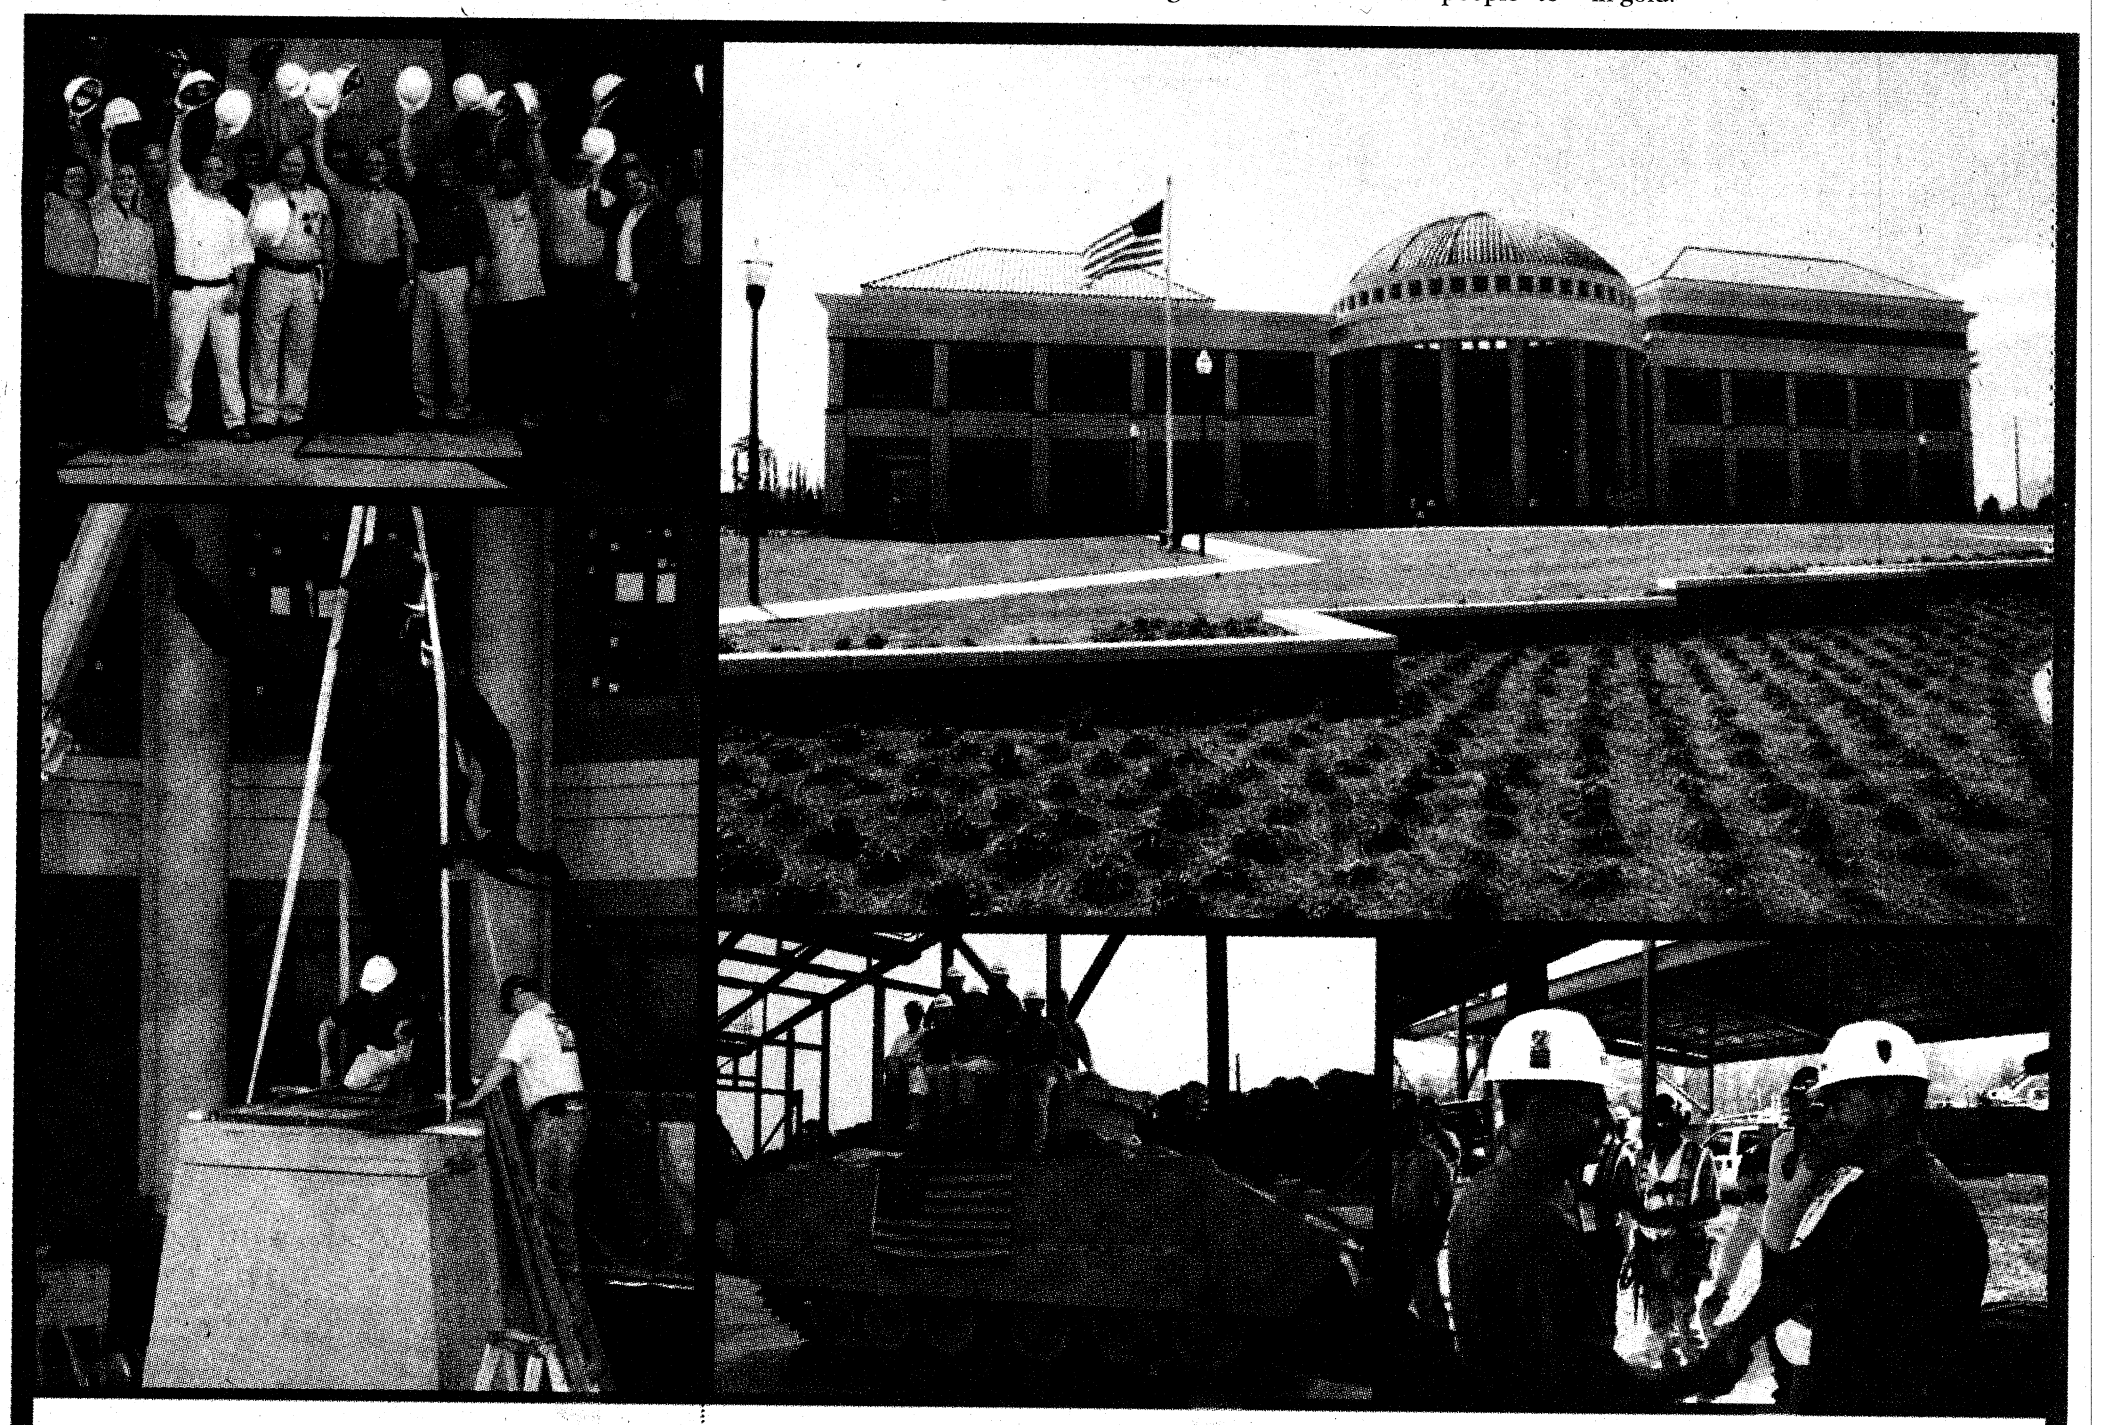
Though Dietrich has not deployed, he said he found Rhodes' insights valuable.

"Often times, being combat support Soldiers, we don't experience these things and as a result don't know what to look for," he said. "It's important that we talk to those who have experienced them, so we can identify the signs of PTSD and help them get treatment."

SGT Robert Adams, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 192nd Infantry Brigade, said the briefing was a sign of positive change in the Army.

"I remember people joking about getting mental health help when I first came into the Army in 2003," he said "But I think it's becoming more common for people to reach out and get help. It's not a sign of weakness anymore."

Rhodes said talking to Soldiers at the Henry Caro NCO Academy would help his message spread throughout the Army.



"They're not just Fort Benning Soldiers, they're Soldiers from the whole world," he said. "If just one student helps one guy, it will make the whole briefing worthwhile."

The ultimate goal, James said, is to reduce the number of suicides in the Army.

"This is a key component of providing suicide prevention training to our Soldiers," he said. "I think PTSD is a contributing factor people aren't aware of, and that's why I wanted to bring it into the course — so they can see the link and take appropriate action to get help for their Soldiers before they commit the act of suicide."

Dietrich said he believes the briefings will continue to have a positive effect.

"I think it will encourage people to become more open with PTSD, identify their problems and seek help," he said. "That alone makes that briefing worth its weight in gold."

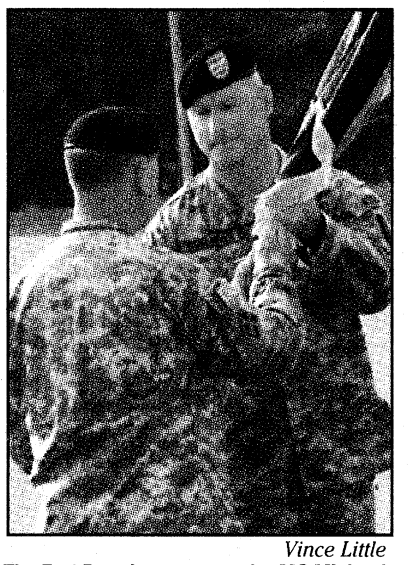
Familiar face back at Benning to lead 192nd



Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The 192nd Infantry Brigade's new commander is back in a familiar place, while the man he succeeds returns to the roots of his Army career.

COL Terrence McKenrick officially began a fifth tour at Fort Benning June 11 when he replaced COL Michael Coss during a change of command ceremony at Sand Hill's Pomeroy Field.

"We say farewell to one superb commander and welcome a new, equally gifted commander," said MG Michael Barbero, commander of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning. "It's really a 'welcome home' for him."

In his most recent stint here, McKenrick was the 4th Ranger Training Battalion commander. He also served as personnel chief for the 75th Ranger Regiment. Prior to returning, he commanded the Warrior Transition Brigade at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C.

Vince Little
The Fort Benning commander MG Michael Barbero hands the 192nd Infantry Brigade colors to incoming commander COL Terrence McKenrick June 11.

McKenrick graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1986 and was commissioned as an Infantry officer. He served as officer-in-charge of the joint operations center for Multi-National Corps-Iraq and supported Operation Uphold Democracy in Haiti. His 23-year career includes stops in Hawaii, Germany, Fort Myer, Va., and Fort Lewis, Wash.

"He understands the fight ... and understands the impact of sending Soldiers to war," Barbero said. "Under his leadership, the 192nd will continue to train the world's best Soldiers."

McKenrick said results of the brigade's work are seen daily in the "effectiveness of our junior Soldiers" in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"You have my personal commitment to continue to train Soldiers to the utmost highest standards," he said.

Meanwhile, Coss departs for South Korea, where he'll become the 2nd Infantry Division's chief of staff. In the mid-1980s, one of his first duty assignments came as a rifle platoon leader at Camp Hovey near Korea's demilitarized zone.

Barbero said the 192nd Inf. Bde. has made a "tremendous impact" on the Army in the last two years.

"We build the nation's might, and no one does it better than the 192nd Infantry Brigade," he said. "The one indispensable ingredient in this crucible is leadership."

The brigade supports the Global War on Terrorism with two basic combat training battalions, a one unit station training Infantry battalion and the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception). Under Coss, who took over as commander in May 2007, the 192nd Inf. Bde. produced more than 20,000 Soldiers "ready to fight" for the Army, Barbero said.

"He has turned these young Americans into confident, competent Soldiers," he said. "He set a strong, positive example for his leaders to emulate."

Coss was commissioned as an Infantry second lieutenant in 1984 after completing Officer Candidate School at Fort Benning. He has deployed to Iraq, Afghanistan and Bosnia, and also served at Fort Lewis, Wash., Fort Drum, N.Y. and Schofield Barracks, Hawaii. He praised the "huge sacrifices" made by the brigade's drill sergeants. They guide Soldiers and recruits six days a week and never take a day off — except Christmas, he said.

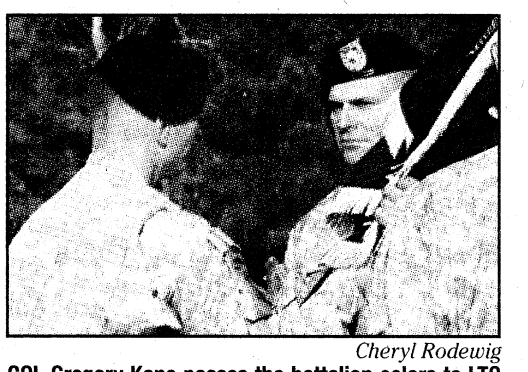
"This has definitely been the greatest and highest honor in my career," Coss said.

1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, changes command

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

LTC Michael Junot assumed command of 1st Battalion (Mechanized/Stryker), 29th Infantry Regiment, from outgoing commander LTC Thomas Carlisle Tuesday at the Collins Training Center on Harmony Church.

"Lieutenant Colonel Mike Junot comes to the battalion and the brigade well-prepared for command," said COL Gregory Kane, commander of the 197th Infantry Brigade and hosting officer for the change of command ceremony. "He's held all the required Infantry and mechanized positions and brings recent combat experience to sustain the battalion's responsiveness to our brigade combat teams engaged in Iraq and Afghanistan."



Junot's previous assignment was chief of Dismounted Test Division for the U.S. Army Operational Test Command at Fort Hood, Texas. He launched his Army career in 1988 at Fort Benning, where he attended Infantry Basic Training, Advanced Training and Airborne School. He received his commission three years later.

"I'm humbled and excited to join this battalion," Junot said. "It's an opportunity that every officer and certainly every Infantryman looks forward to. I got the opportunity; I'm going to do everything I can with it."

Junot said he will listen to his team as he learns about the battalion and its needs.

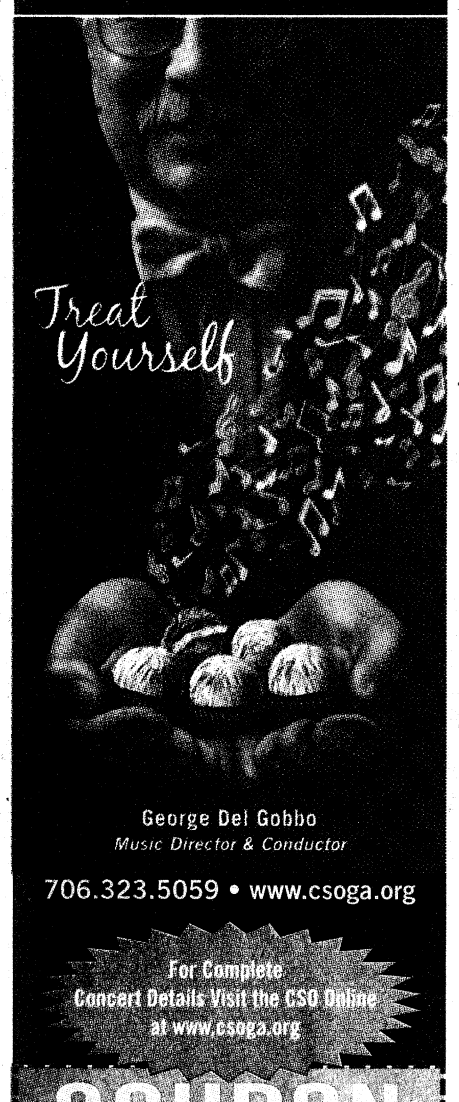
"I've got a great handoff from Lieutenant Colonel Tom Carlisle, who has already given me a wealth of information to start with, and I'm going to learn from the noncommissioned officers and resident experts on all the diverse missions that go on within this battalion. I'll adjust the helm as we all see fit."

The battalion went through considerable change in the two years of Carlisle's command, particularly in regard to re-enlistment and officer retention rates and morale, Kane said.

Cheryl Rodewig
COL Gregory Kane passes the battalion colors to LTC Michael Junot, incoming commander.

"Today the Outrider Battalion is a cohesive organization that is standards-based, self-critical and committed to providing quality Bradley master gunners and Stryker leaders to the Army," he said. "Their re-enlistment rates lead the brigade and are among the highest on the installation. They have improved in all their administrative and logistical lines of operation and lead the brigade in Sergeant Audie Murphy inductees. The Army talks about transformation but Tom and his team lived it."

Carlisle said working with such a great team for the past two years has been a privilege.



"In my 25 years of service, I have had no greater honor ... than serving in this incredible organization," he said. "Unquestionably, the highlight of my command centers on the dedicated Soldiers, noncommissioned officers and officers who are committed to making a difference and making our unit better than we found it."

Carlisle said he is confident Junot will do a good job as commander of the Outriders.

"I cannot help but see that the future of this battalion is in great hands and the new commander, Lieutenant Colonel Junot, is the right guy to lead it," he said. "Over the past five months I have gotten to know him very well, and I can say there is nothing more comforting than handing off something special to your friend."

Carlisle's next assignment is special project officer for the Commanding General Initiatives Group on post.

Test: Rounds to increase distance

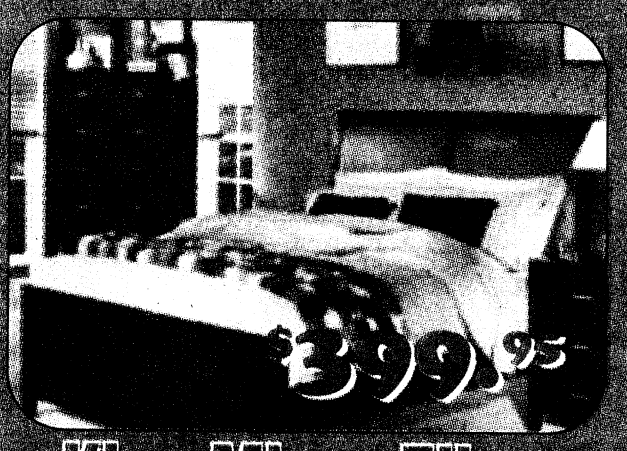
effective range of only 10 to 20 meters. Troops will gain the ability to maintain a distance outside the reach of hand-thrown objects and rocks — lessons learned from past civil disturbances, he said.

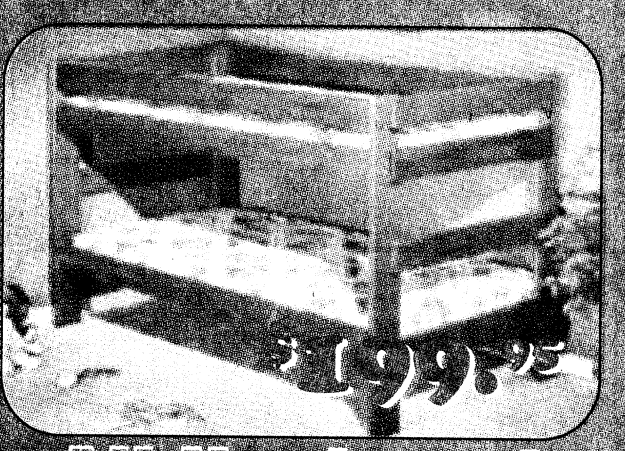
"This combines blunt impact with marking effects, enabling the warfighter to target a specific individual or individuals in a crowd, unlike other crowd-control munitions which produce area effects," Harbison said.

The extended range in excess of 50 meters is unavailable within current nonlethal munitions, he said.



During the experiment, Harbison said, evaluators looked at Soldiers' ability to accurately engage human-sized targets, identify the marking residue left on the target by the projectile, and visually and by touch distinguish the nonlethal round from lethal cartridges, or buckshot.

"(The new cartridge) allows for greater standoff and reactionary gap between you and the subject," SPC Jarrod Palmer of the 209th MP Detachment said in a survey taken during the experiment.



SPC Amos Elam, also of the 209th MP Detachment, had a similar impression.

"The round is easy to use and does its job," he said. "The round will do what it's designed to do."

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Lakers get 15th title

The Los Angeles Lakers won the NBA championship Sunday four games to one over the Orlando Magic.

Kobe Bryant, who had 30 points in Game 5, was also named the finals MVP. Coach Phil Jackson recorded his 10th title, passing Red Auerbach for the most championships by a coach in NBA history.

I was close in my prediction of the Lakers in six games.

Penguins revive hockey

The Pittsburgh Penguins' win over the Detroit Red Wings in Game 7 Friday was the most-watched NHL game since 1973. NBC averaged about 8 million viewers. It's the most since the '73 finals between Montreal and Chicago.

A Game 7 is a Game 7, and regardless of whether or not you're a hockey fan, you know it's going to be a good game. Congrats to the Penguins on their hard-fought championship.

Open is on

The U.S. Open began at 7 a.m. Thursday at Bethpage Black in Farmingdale, N.Y. Tiger Woods stands a good chance of winning the 109th playing of the Open, as usual. Look for Phil Mickelson to give Tiger a run for the money, though.

Mickelson's wife, Amy, was diagnosed with breast cancer recently, so that might weigh heavily on his mind.

This will be a must-see tournament, as usual.

Martin proves he's a contender

Mark Martin won his third race of the season and the 38th of his Cup career Sunday at Michigan International Speedway.

Jimmie Johnson dominated most laps but ran out of gas two laps before the end of the race. Greg Biffle, who was behind Johnson, also ran out of gas, which gave Martin the lead.

Martin was also running on fumes but managed to coast to victory lane.

Infineon Raceway will be the host of this week's race. Coverage begins at 5 p.m. Sunday on TNT.

Favre still on fence

Brett Favre has remained mum about whether he'll come out of what he deems "retirement" to play for the Minnesota Vikings this season.

Favre had surgery almost three weeks ago on his throwing arm, and needs another week or two to see if he's able to throw like he needs to.

I'm not on the fence about anything. As much as I respect Favre, I wish he would just stay retired. It seems like he's searching for glory that will most likely never be achieved at his age. Then again, never say never.

Ready, aim, fire!

Benning Rifle Club heads to Junior Olympics

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Four shooters from the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club are preparing for the National Junior Olympic Air Rifle Championship July 4-7 at Camp Perry, Ohio.

The championship includes two days of matches with shooters firing 20 shots each day in the standing, kneeling and prone positions. The top eight will compete in a finals match, which includes 10 shots in the standing position.

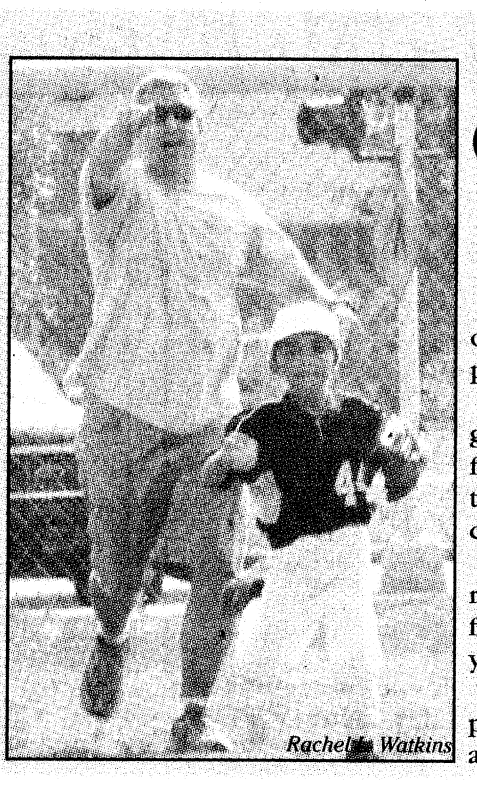
The Benning shooters — Forrest Klein, Andrea Vautrin, Jimmie Cooper and Breanna Kasl — will shoot in team and individual competitions.

Kasl, an upcoming senior at Chattahoochee County High School, has been a shooter with the Chattahoochee County High School Rifle Team and the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club for two years. She's the daughter of SSG Carl and Misty Cazee.

"I'm really nervous about going to the Junior Olympics but I'm so excited — not many people get an opportunity like this," said 17-year-old Kasl.

Kasl has been practicing for the championship since May.

"It's about building endurance," she said. "You have to be physically and mentally ready."



A perfect score at the Junior Olympics is 600. Kasl said her goal is 580 or higher.

Rhett Griner shows Jackson Griner where to throw the ball in a game against the Bulldogs Tuesday at the Youth Sports Complex. It's Griner's first year coaching baseball.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach uses every game as 'learning tool'

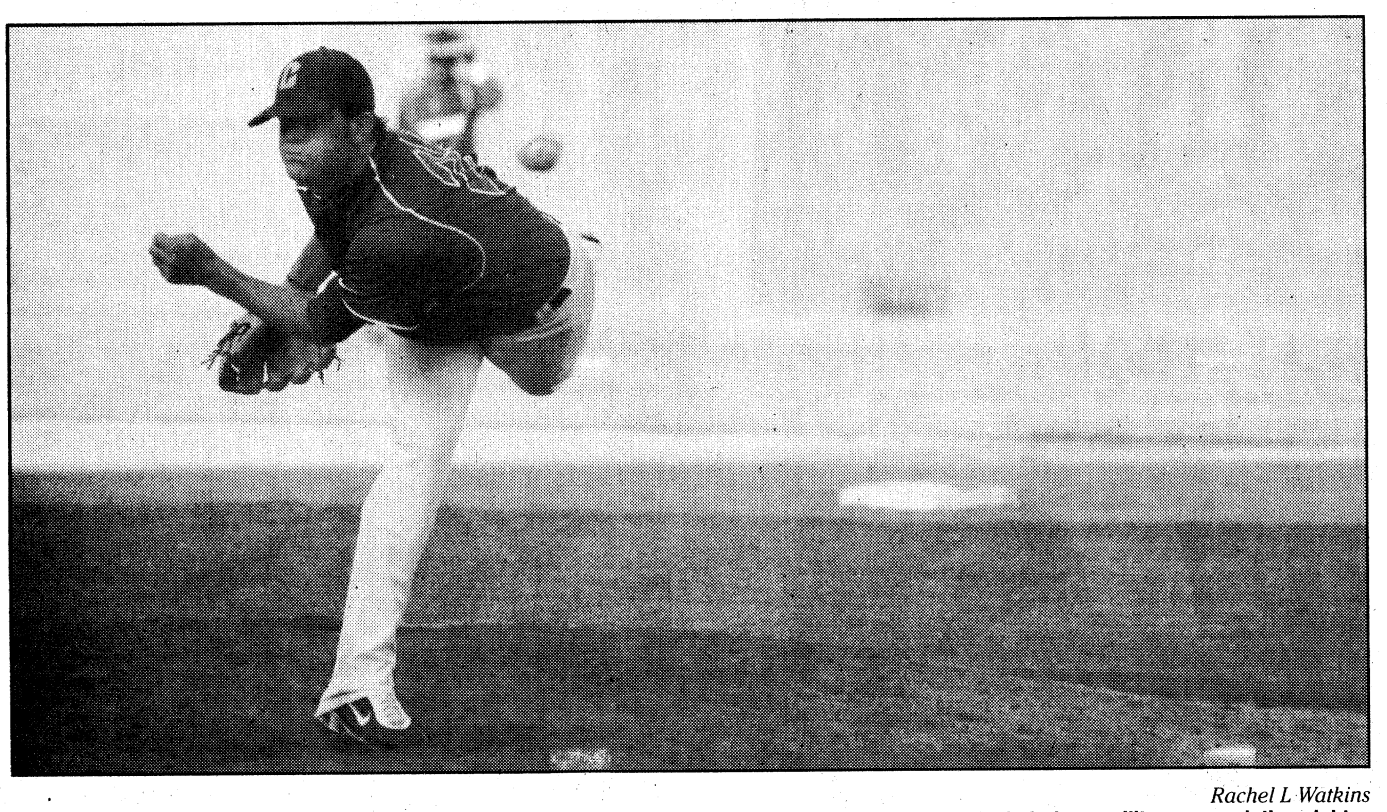
Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Rhett Griner, coach of the 7-and 8-year-old Pirates, said he looks at every coach-pitch baseball game as a learning tool.

"This level is not about winning games. It's about teaching the kids the fundamentals of the game and how to be team players," said the first-year baseball coach.

Griner played baseball, wrestled and ran track when he was a child and played football in college. He has also coached youth soccer for two years.

Part of being a team player is having a positive attitude and giving 110 percent all the time, Griner said. It's important the children learn the fundamentals and how to be a team player now because it will make the next level easier.



"At coach-pitch, an adult pitches and there are adult helpers on the field, but the next level will be completely different," he said. "The children will have to take responsibility on the field and be able to make their own decisions."

Some players have played T-ball and some haven't played any baseball before, but Griner said he tries to tailor his coaching to each player's needs. The children play different positions to get a feel for which one they like best.

Coaching 7- and 8-year-olds takes patience, Griner said.

WoodBats to host military nights at Golden Park

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Eight busloads of Soldiers and their families were treated to a Columbus WoodBats game Tuesday at Golden Park during a team military appreciation night.

The WoodBats feature college baseball players who want to enhance their skills during the summer break, said club president Jim White.

They play in the Great South League against teams from Georgia, east Alabama and Florida.

The WoodBats have two more days planned where Soldiers can get in the games for free with a military identification card.

The free games are a small way to give appreciation to the troops, White said.

"We don't say 'thank you' enough to the military for all that they sacrifice and all they do to protect us from harm," White said. "Without the military, our country couldn't survive."

SGT Marlena Rose, who is in the Warrior Leader Course, said she had a good time at the game Tuesday.

"A free game is good — you can't beat free," she said. "And it's good to be able to come to Columbus and have a change of scenery. I have never actually been to a baseball game before, so I'm learning a lot."

The WoodBats will host a "Salute to the Armed Forces" day beginning at 7 p.m. July 4 at Golden Park, where they will take on the East Alabama Big Train. Soldiers and their families, who get free admission when they present a military ID, will unfurl a storm flag before the game and one Soldier will sing the National Anthem. There will be a fireworks display following the game.

And Soldiers will get in free on another military appreciation night July 14 at Golden Park. The WoodBats will take on the Macon Giants at 7 p.m.

Military members get into the July 4 and 14 games free, but tickets for everyone else are $5 per person for general admission. Children 12 and younger get in free.

To buy tickets, go to the box office at Golden Park between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday, or call 706-507-3825.

Columbus WoodBats teach baseball clinic at Benning

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

More than 60 Child, Youth and School Services baseball players ages 4-13 participated in an hourlong clinic with 20 Columbus Woodbats players June 11 at the Youth Sports Complex.

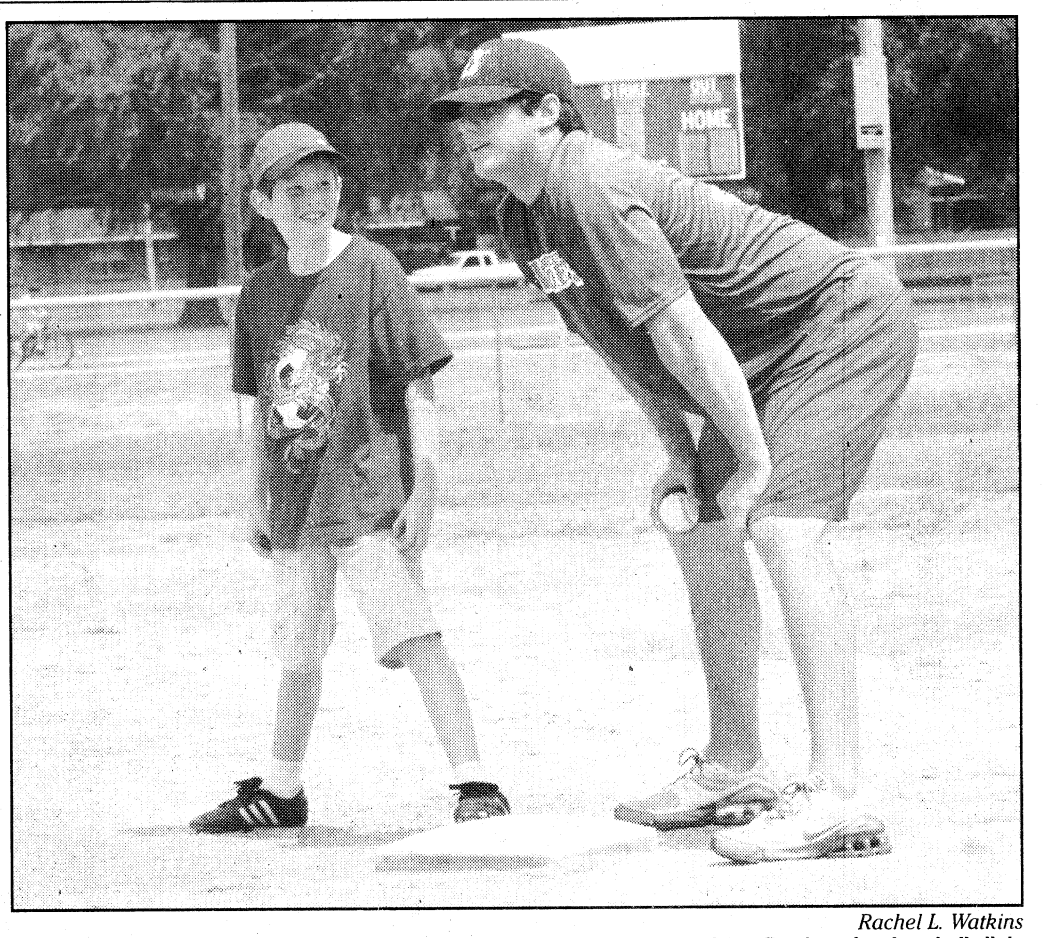
The WoodBats, a new nonprofit baseball team in Columbus play in a summer baseball league for college players. The club has filled the void left by the departure of the Columbus Catfish, the minor league franchise that moved to Bowling Green, Ky., after the 2008 season.

"This is awesome," said 8-year-old Patrick Golden. "I can't believe I get to play baseball with the WoodBats. I can learn a lot about baseball from them."

The WoodBats helped the players refine their hitting, catching and batting techniques.

"I'm having fun," said 12-year-old Karl Ivey II. "I think this a good way for everyone to practice their baseball skills. The team has helped me with playing the positions, making the plays and learning the game."

Charlie Vicars, 10, said it was neat to play baseball with good players.



"I'll use their tips when I play," he said.

WoodBats' catcher Carson Schilling said the camp's focus was to help kids improve their baseball skills and encourage them to keep playing.

"If they want to advance in baseball, my advice is to keep practicing, play hard and go out on the field and give it all they got and never give up," he said.

And never forget to have fun in the game, said WoodBats pitcher Chase Hawkins.

While at Benning, the WoodBats also shot sniper rifles, went through Army PT and jumped from the 34-foot towers. The WoodBats' season began June 3 and will end in July. They will play teams from Georgia, east Alabama and Florida this season.

Army 10-miler qualifiers set for June, July

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Rachel L. Watkins
Aaron Totten Lancaster runs 10-miler qualifier Saturday at Sand Hill. There are two more 10-miler qualifiers at 7 a.m. Friday and July 25, which will begin at Santiago Gym.

The Army 10-miler is Oct. 4 in Washington, D.C., and it's already sold out at 30,000 participants, but there is still a chance to compete. The Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation will have two more 10-miler time trial qualifiers at 7 a.m. Friday and July 25 at Santiago Gym on Sand Hill.

There are openings on both the mixed and male teams, which will represent Fort Benning.

Lori Smith, director of DFMWR fitness facilities, is looking for eight runners for the male team and two women and five men for the mixed team. Smith wants to find males who can run the 10-miler on the Benning course in less than 60 minutes and females who can run it in less than 70 minutes.

"The course at Fort Benning has many rolling hills — it's definitely not a course for beginners," Smith said. "If they can run this course and especially in the middle of a Georgia summer, they can definitely run the course in Washington in October."

Aaron Totten-Lancaster ran a 10-miler qualifier Saturday at Santiago Gym and ended with a time of 56:26:40.

Lancaster, who ran the Army 10-miler in 2006, said the Fort Benning course is more difficult than the D.C. course because of the hills.

"The Fort Benning course is hilly so you can't see very far ahead," he said. "Runners will be able to run at least two or three minutes faster on the D.C. course if they stay in shape. And the D.C. course goes by faster because it's a scenic route."

Runners in the 10-miler will pass by the Pentagon, Smithsonian, Lincoln Memorial, U.S. Capitol, Potomac River and Arlington National Cemetery.

Nate Pennington, who posted a time of 55:16:70 at the 10-miler qualifier Saturday, said the Army 10-miler is like the "Super Bowl for road racing."

He competed in the Army 10-miler in 2004 and already has a spot on a 10-miler team with the World Class Athlete Program but is at Fort Benning for Basic Officer Leadership Course II. Pennington ran in the qualifier to train for the 10-miler.

"Running 10 miles is a mental game," he said. "You have to stay positive and keep yourself motivated to get to the finish line."

His goal for this year is to be in the top five at the 10-miler.

The qualifiers are open to active-duty, activated reservists and activated National Guardsmen and there is no entry fee. Registration is at 6:30 a.m.

For more information, e-mail Smith at Lori.Smith6@us.army.mil.

Kefurt Fitness Center open after $900K renovation

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Vince Little

Soldiers looking to stay in shape have no reason to leave Kelley Hill anymore, post DFMWR officials said.

Kefurt Fitness Center reopened June 1 following a $907,000 renovation that included overhaul and expansion of the weight room, addition of new strength equipment and installation of air conditioning. The facility had been closed for more than six months.

"It's just a big plus for Soldiers on the hill," said Jessie Moore, fitness center manager. "It has everything they need. They don't have to go to Main Post or Sand Hill … There is an incentive to stay."

Kefurt's restoration involved two phases, said Lori Smith, fitness director for Fort Benning's Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. About two years ago, workers completed upgrades to the lobby area, basketball court, locker rooms and saunas.

In the latest changes, more space was added in the weight room. It has new free weights and Nautilus machines throughout, along with three 48-inch flat-screen TVs.

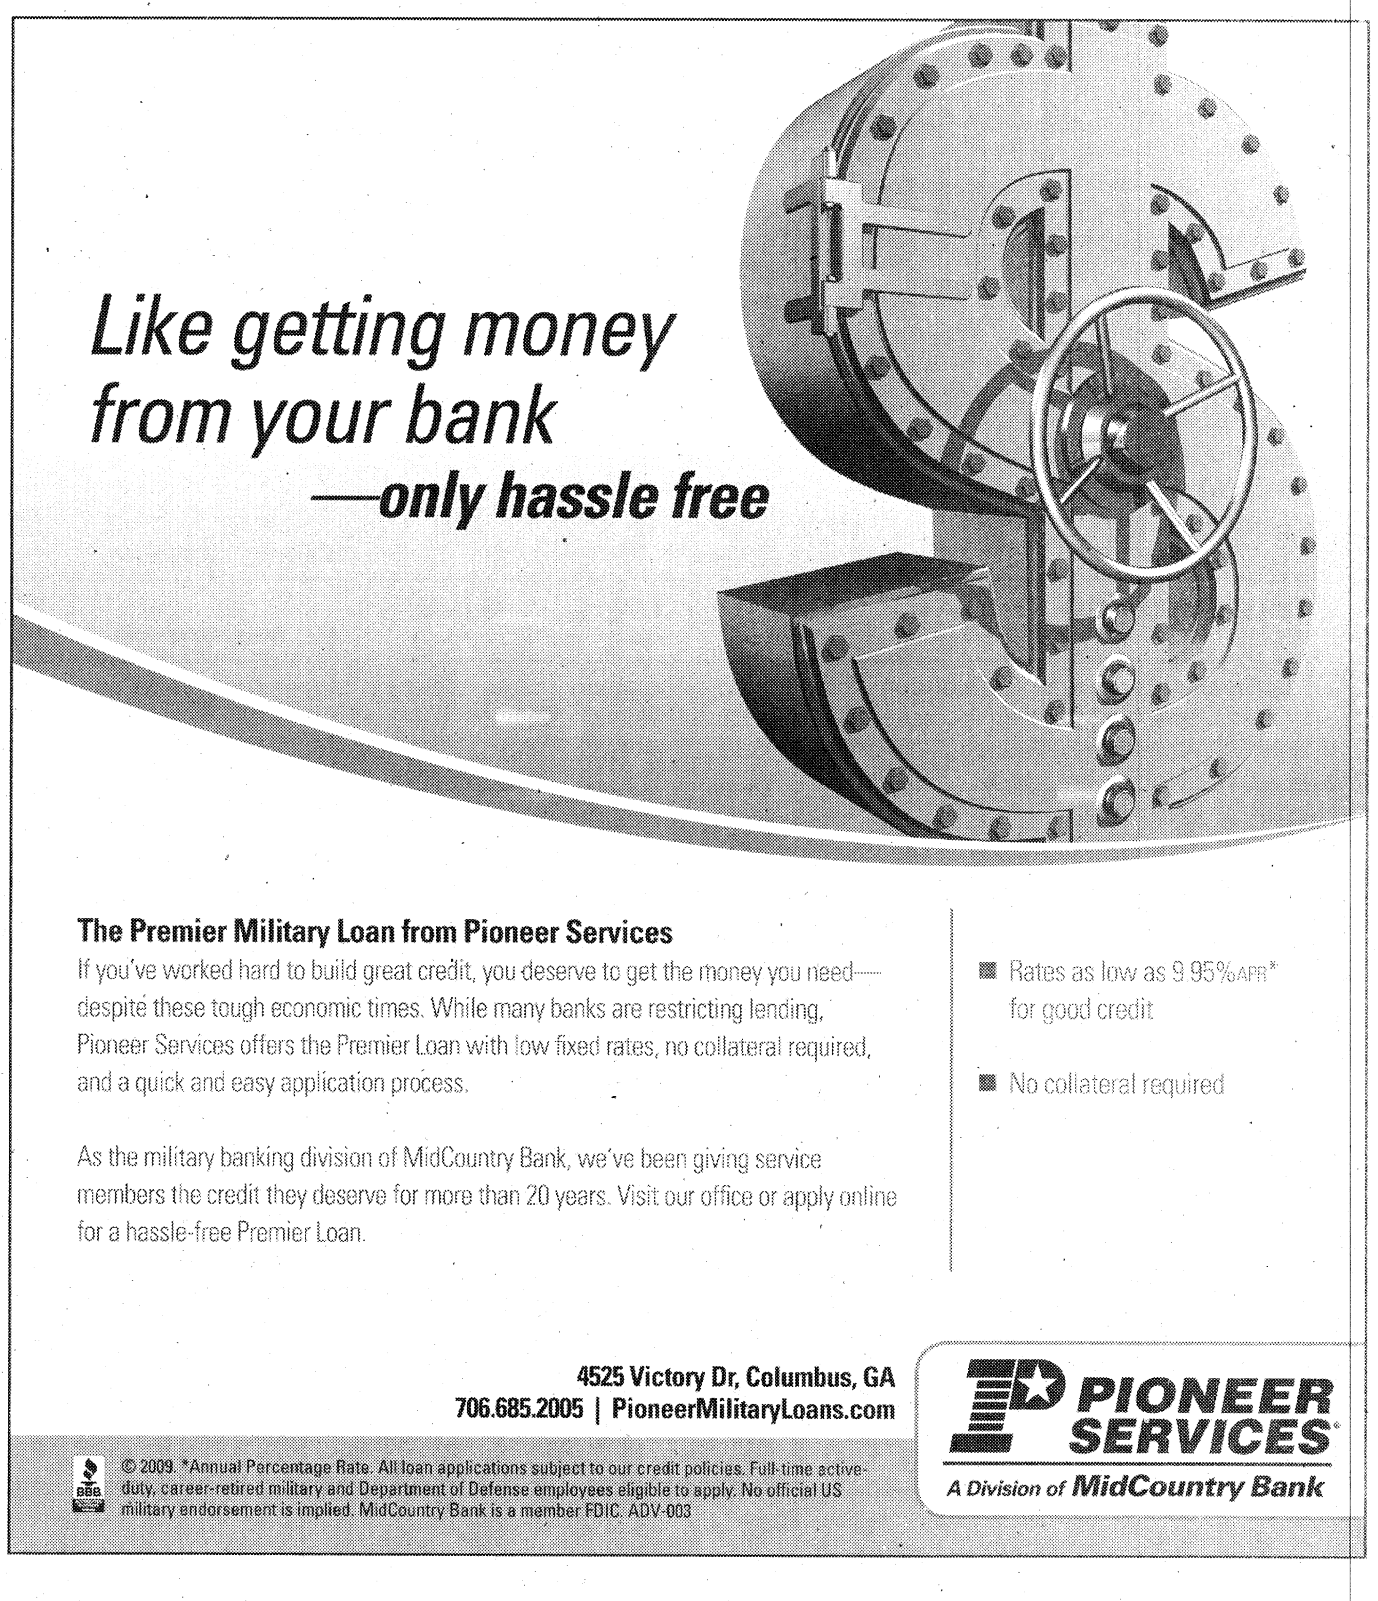
Three more televisions went into the cardio room — where the treadmills, stationary bikes and elliptical machines now feature built-in theater systems.

The cardio and weight rooms were combined prior to the renovation.

"They were very drab and not as bright," Smith said. "It was crammed in there. Now, it's a much more functional space.

"Before, it just didn't motivate you to work out. We took it up a notch. And the Soldiers deserve something new and nice. It keeps that morale up."

The racquetball courts were removed and turned into a padded room for wrestling, boxing and Army combatives. Old storage space also was converted into areas for stretching and abdominal training.



Moore said exercise equipment remains in place at Outpost Harry, an annex to the fitness center behind the Kelley Hill Recreation Center.

When Kefurt was shut down in November, Soldiers began using showers in the bathhouse at Kelley Hill's outdoor swimming pool, Smith said. But now that the fitness center is open again, they'll be closed along with the pool at the end of summer.

Kefurt Fitness Center is open 5:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every Saturday, Sunday and holidays.

"It's basically like a new facility," Smith said. "It now offers a basketball court, cardio room, saunas, additional weight room space and a boxing room. There is just a great deal of options to get a variety of workouts in."

2008 Water Quality Report for Columbus and Fort Benning, Georgia

Dear Customer,

Columbus Water Works is pleased to present our Water Quality Report. The report is designed to inform you about the quality of your drinking water, the source for your drinking water, the steps we take to ensure its quality, and the results of year-round water monitoring.

We are proud to inform you that Columbus Water Works did not have any violations of water quality parameters during 2008. Your drinking water is safe and has passed all tests for contaminants and purity, meeting or surpassing all federal and state drinking water standards.

Bob Tant,
President of Columbus Water Works

ENSURING THE SAFETY OF YOUR DRINKING WATER

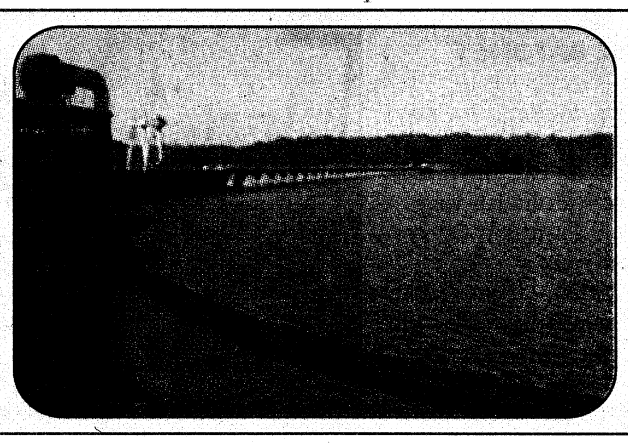
The sources of drinking water (both tap and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial - such as viruses and bacteria which may come from human, agricultural or wildlife sources.

Inorganic - such as salts and metals, which can be natural, from stormwater runoff, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides - which may come from agricultural, stormwater runoff or residential uses.



Organic chemical - which may come from industrial or domestic processes, stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

Radioactive - which can be naturally-occurring or the result of mining or other human activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection for public health.

SOURCE OF WATER

Columbus gets its water from a surface water source, the Chattahoochee River. Water is withdrawn from Lake Oliver under permit # GA2150000 at a point just above the dam. This provides the city with a safe and dependable supply of water.

TREATMENT PROCESS

Alum is added to the water taken from the river to cause the finely divided mud particles to clump together so that the mud and other particles will settle to the bottom of the settling tanks by gravity. The clear water is then filtered and disinfected with chlorine to make the water biologically safe. The pH is adjusted by adding lime to make the water non-corrosive, and fluoride is added to help prevent dental cavities.

Important Drinking Water Definitions

Term	Definition
AL	Action Level (AL): The concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.
MCL	Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.
MCLG	Maximum Contaminant Level Goal (MCLG): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.
MRDL	Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level (MRDL): The highest level of a disinfectant allowed in drinking water. There is convincing evidence that addition of a disinfectant is necessary for control of microbial contaminants.
MRDLG	Maximum Residual Disinfectant Level Goal (MRDLG): The level of a drinking water disinfectant below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MRDLGs do not reflect the benefits of the use of disinfectants to control microbial contamination.
NA	Not Applicable
NTU	Nephelometric Turbidity Units: Measurement of the clarity, or turbidity, of water.
ppm	parts per million: One part substance per million parts water (or milligrams per liter).
ppb	parts per billion: One part substance per billion parts water (or micrograms per liter).
TT	Treatment Technique (TT): A required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.
≤	less than or equal to
≥	greater than or equal to
(a)	Fluoride is added in treatment to bring the natural level to the EPA optimum of 1 part per million.
(b)	Turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of water. We monitor turbidity because it is a good indicator of water quality and the effectiveness of our filtration system.
(c)	This level is based on a system-wide 4-quarter running average of several samples, as required by EPA testing protocol.
(d)	Water from the treatment plant does not contain lead or copper. However under EPA test protocol, water is tested at the tap. Tap tests show that where a customer may have lead-soldered copper pipes, the water is not corrosive. This means the amount of lead or copper absorbed by the water is limited to safe levels. Flushing the line before drinking will ensure your safety.

Source Water Assessment Plan (SWAP):

Columbus Water Works completed a Source Water Assessment Plan (SWAP) in March 2001. The purpose of the Plan is to identify potential sources of contamination throughout the watershed, and determine the risk (susceptibility) that the sources pose to the Columbus water supply intake. The source water for Columbus is the Chattahoochee River and the Chattahoochee River watershed above the source water intake. Water sources were rated on their susceptibility to becoming polluted, such as proximity to major roadways (fuel/chemical spills), railways and agricultural runoff. Some sources from where substances could be released to the river and make their way to the water intake, include a marina with fuel station, sewer lift stations and pipelines, commercial and industrial areas, residential lawns and a golf course. Based on the assessment, the overall susceptibility of the drinking water supply intake is rated LOW. A complete list of all potential Pollution Sources (PPS), their substances of concern, and the assessment methods is in the SWAP. For more information on SWAP contact William Kent, Environmental Compliance Manager at (706) 649 - 3490 or wkent@cwwga.org.

Notice to immuno-compromised people

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791).

What is Cryptosporidium?

Cryptosporidium is a protozoan parasite too small to be seen without a microscope. It is common in surface waters (lakes and rivers), especially when these waters contain a high amount of sewage or animal waste. Cryptosporidium can cause symptoms that include diarrhea, nausea, stomach cramps or all three. Because many other conditions can produce these same symptoms, a special laboratory test is needed to find out whether Cryptosporidium is the cause. Samples of both untreated and treated water from our system have been sent to outside laboratories which are set up for Cryptosporidium testing. It may be assumed that Cryptosporidium may be found in all source water. Cryptosporidium has never been found in the drinking water that goes to your tap.

Information About Lead in Drinking Water

If present, elevated levels of lead can cause serious health problems, especially for pregnant women and young children. Lead in drinking water is primarily from materials and components associated with service lines and home plumbing. Columbus Water Works is responsible for providing high quality drinking water, but cannot control the variety of materials used in plumbing components. When your water has been sitting for several hours, you can minimize the potential for lead exposure by flushing your tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using water for drinking or cooking. If you are concerned about lead in your water, you may wish to have your water tested. Information on lead in drinking water, testing methods, and steps you can take to minimize exposure is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline or at http://www.epa.gov/safewater/lead.

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline (1-800-426-4791).

USAMU wins at Pistol championships

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

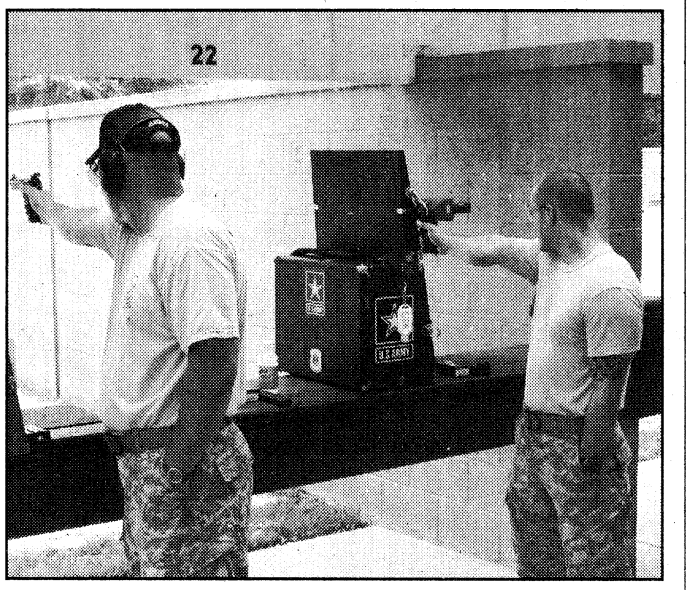
Soldiers with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit dominated the competition at the 50th Interservice Pistol championship matches at Fort Benning June 8-12.

The unit's Blue team swept the team awards, winning the .22-caliber team match, .45-caliber match, center fire match, service pistol match and the overall team championship against teams from across the military.The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Army Reserves, Army National Guard and Coast Guard were all represented at the event, totaling 79 marksmen and 14 teams.

"All who competed are champions in their own right," said LTC Daniel Hodne, USAMU commander. "They didn't get here by accident."

Individually, SSG James Henderson led the individual competition after taking home 10 first-place awards, including breaking two match records. Henderson broke records in the .22-caliber national match course, breaking a mark held since 1987; and the .22-caliber individual championship, formerly held by a nine-time national champion from the Marines.

Henderson won the top honor as overall individual pistol champion, missing his overall match national record by four points, and was followed by USAMU Soldiers SSG Robert Park II in second place and SSG Timothy Barber in third place.



Henderson's other first-place finishes were in the center fire individual; .45-caliber individual; service pistol individual; .22 caliber slow-fire; .22-caliber rapid fire; .45-caliber national match course; service pistol national match course; National Rifleman's Association 2700 match; and the overall individual aggregate.

Right behind Henderson in the individual competition were many of his USAMU counterparts. Park II was awarded three first-place finishes with the top scores in the .45-caliber rapid fire, service pistol slow fire, and service pistol rapid fire.

The center fire timed fire and the .45-caliber timed fire matches were won by SSG Adam Sokolowski. SFC Gregory Wilson won for center fire aggregate and the center fire national match course.

SFC Daryl Szarenski won the Excellence in Competition match; SFC Eric Daniels took home top honors in the center fire slow fire; SSG Jason Sargent won the .22-caliber timed fire match; SSG Lyman Grover had the best score during the .45-caliber slow fire match; and SGT Jean-Noel Howell was top shooter in the combat pistol match 30.

"They take a lot of pride in being the best in the entire military," USAMU service pistol team training instructor Rick Hawkins said."One reason is that they know they have worked harder at being the best than the other shooters. By knowing they have worked harder than the others, their expectation of their success is higher than the others."

SSG James Henderson and SSG Robert Park II, of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, compete during the service pistol team match at the 50th Interservice Pistol Championship Matches June 11 at Phillips Range. The two Soldiers were part of the first-place winning Army Blue team during the competition. More than 75 Soldiers, Marines, airmen, sailors and Coast Guardsmen took part in the event.

Kasl: Aims for 580 or higher

"I made 580 or higher my goal because I know I can do it. I'm going to go into the championship and give it all I have," she said.

The key to success in a match is practice, practice and more practice, Kasl said.

"Having talent is good but it will only get you so far," she said. "It takes hard work and patience to be a good shooter. And if you have a bad day, you just have to learn from it and move on. You can't let it get you down."

Kasl is aiming to make shooting her career, she said.

She wants to be in the 2012 Olympics. Her plan after high school is to attend and shoot at West Point and major in forensic science. After school, she wants to shoot for the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit.

"I love shooting so much," she said. "I don't know what I would do without it. I think if I broke my arm and couldn't shoot, I would cry — not because of the pain, but because I couldn't shoot."

Kasl is an outstanding shooter and has a lot of potential, said her coach, SSG Armando Ayala.

"She has incredible talent and she works hard," he said. "She is driven and committed and shoots well under pressure. Her commitment makes me want to work harder and teach her as much as I know."

Ayala said he's working on building and improving the team's endurance, tactical skills and positions for the championship.

The team is also raising money for the trip by selling cookies and having a bake sale.

The club needs donations to cut transportation costs. To donate, call Ayala at 706-545-2343.

Griner: Works on 'focus'

"You have to help them stay focused on the game," he said.

When it comes to coaching, Griner said he loves it.

"The most rewarding part of coaching is seeing the kids go out on the field and having a good time playing ball," he said.

By the end of the season, he said he wants his team to have a passion for the game, but most importantly, learn the game.

SOS call: New resource available for families

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

There's a new service on post to help surviving family members of fallen Soldiers navigate Army benefits.

Survivor Outreach Services, an Armywide program of Army Community Service, opened its doors at Fort Benning in April. Available to parents, spouses, siblings and children of Soldiers who were killed while on active duty, SOS provides free long-term assistance with financial issues, benefits and entitlements, counseling and social services.

While the Army provides casualty assistance officers to help survivors with paperwork and benefits immediately following a loss, they generally conclude their duties after four to six months — and that's where SOS comes in, said Jennifer Pierce, SOS support coordinator.

"After the relationship with the casualty assistance officer fades, we take over and are the advocate for that survivor," she said. "The CAOs are immediate and temporary, and sometimes after they leave, the survivor is left saying, 'There's no one for me to talk to.' They may not know of other services on post they can have access to, so we provide long-term support. We want to keep them part of the (Army) family."

OPERATION WEDDING BELLS

Couples wed, renew vows at 'dream' wedding

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"A big white dress, a big puffy veil and a crown, it's just every little girl's dream," Nancy Linsky said.

"I can remember running around in my mom's high heels and pearls when I was little; I wanted to be a bride."

When she met SSG Ivan Linsky and they decided to marry, Nancy tried to plan the perfect wedding, complete with flowers, family and a white dress, but Army scheduling got in the way.

"I would sit down and try to pick a day and then something would come up," she said. "Planning the wedding around schools and camps, it's just crazy."

The couple eventually gave in and shared their vows alone at the courthouse Feb. 22.

Nancy thought she would never have her dream wedding until she heard about Operation Wedding Bells, a free wedding for 19 brides at the Columbus Botanical Garden sponsored by Operation Homefront Georgia.

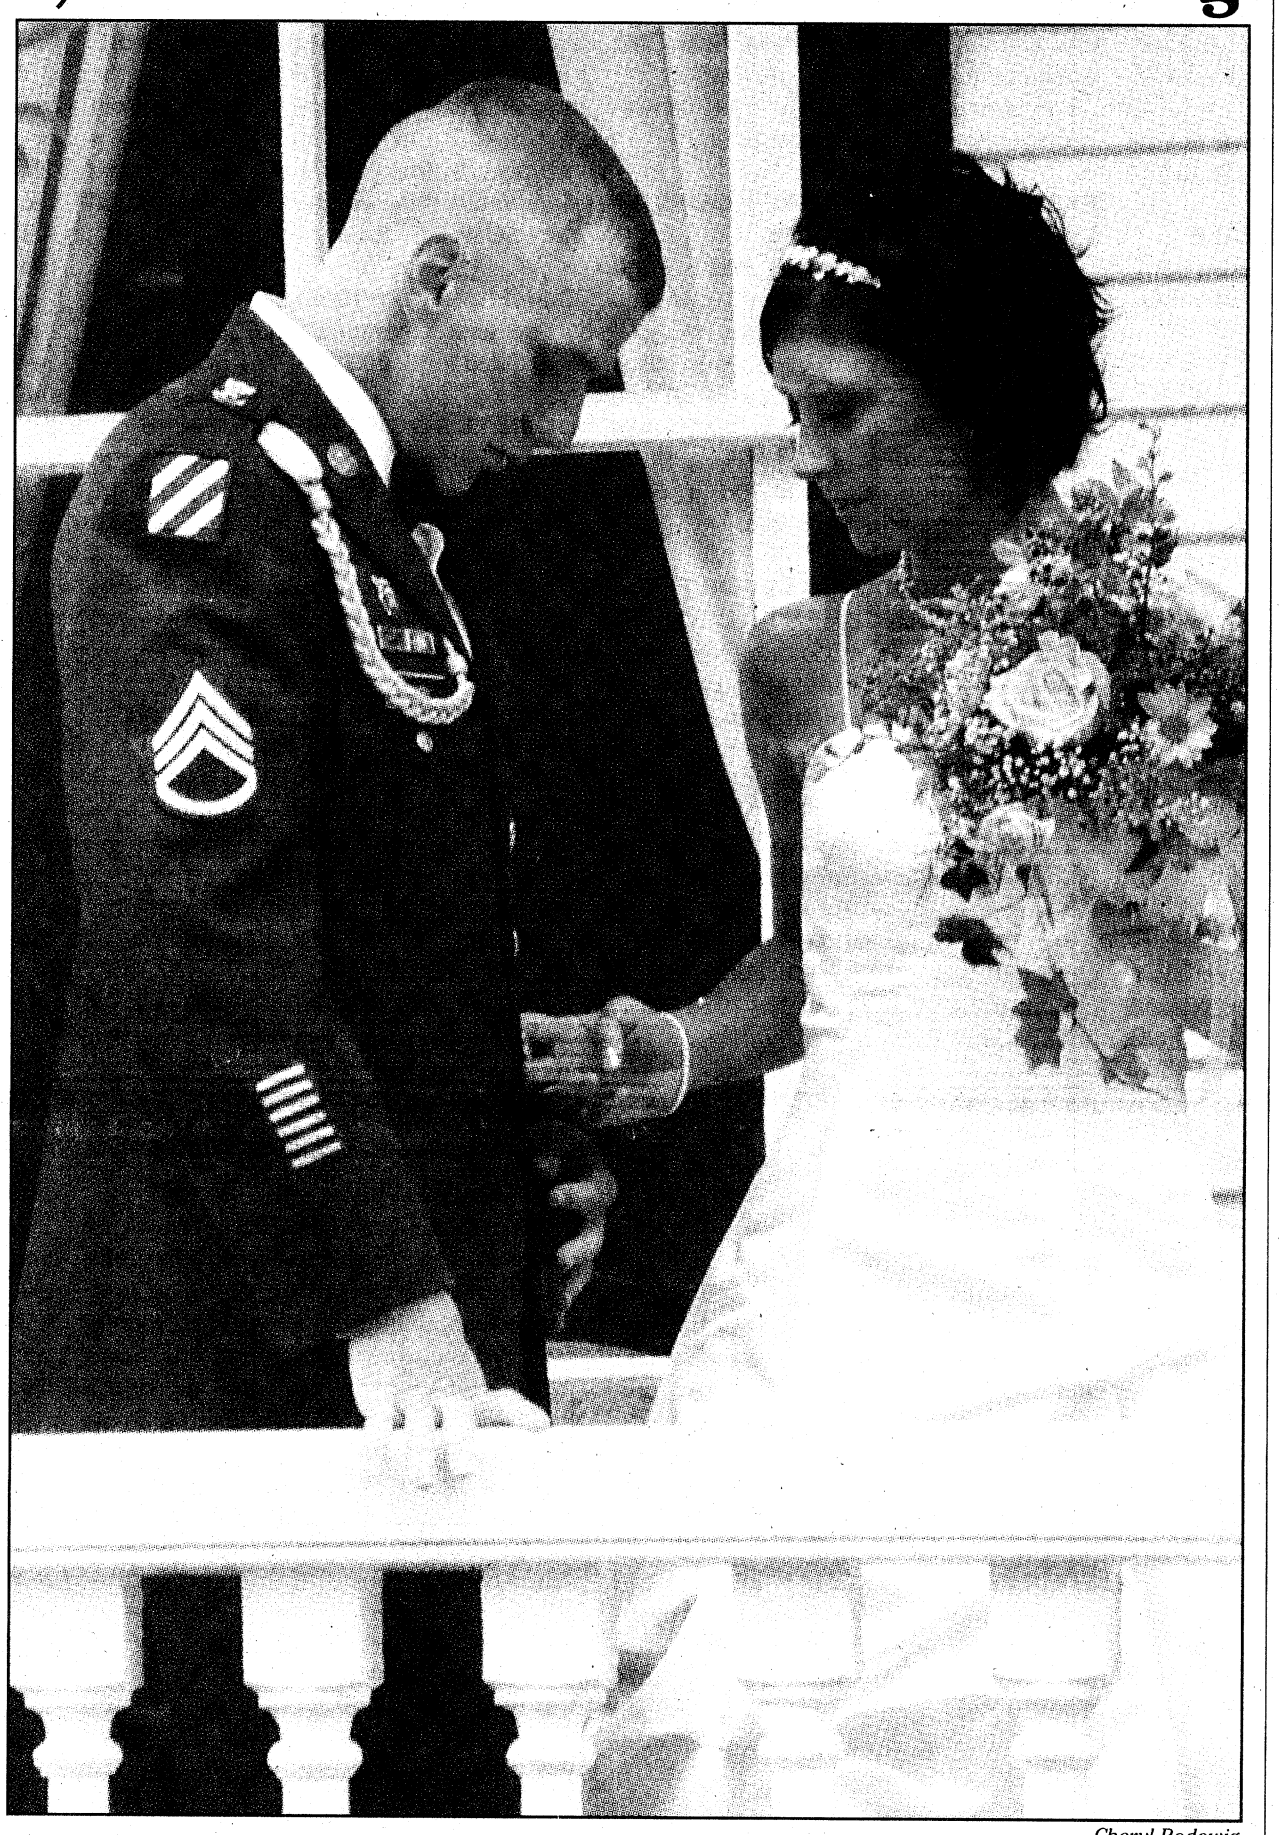
"I was ecstatic," she said. "It's my fairy tale that I never thought I would have. My husband and I both believe this is our miracle."

"I'm excited, but the main thing is I'm happy for her; she gets to do what she always dreamed of doing," Ivan said.

"We just didn't have time to plan for it. She was in school. I was in the Army. It was just one of those things (for) later, when we have time and we have money."

With their nuptials Saturday, they enjoyed "the whole nine yards of what a wedding is supposed to be" without the worries of time or finances, he said.

Operation Homefront Georgia collaborated with local sponsors and volunteers to provide everything from tiaras, flowers and hors d'oeuvres to Mary Kay makeovers and Alfred Angelo bridal gowns.



They also coordinated with the chain of command to guarantee time off for each Soldier.

That was the best part, said PFC Bradley Chadwell, one of two Soldiers to say his vows for the first time Saturday at the gardens.

"It was nice to have a time allotment where we didn't have everyone try and get here on this date and then not get that day of leave," he said. "It was already orchestrated. It was perfect timing."

His wife, Amanda, said they were

Veterans to visit memorial

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

More than 65 years after D-Day, Charles Maupin still remembers his first sight of Omaha Beach from aboard a ship bound for the French coast in 1942.

"We landed in the third wave on D-Day-plus-one … and saw rows of Soldiers lying on the beach covered in ponchos. The troops that landed at Omaha Beach on D-Day had to climb the cliffs despite enemy fire and break through barbed wire fences," Maupin said.

"My eyes fill with tears when I remember those who gave the last full measure of devotion in the cause of freedom," he said.

After 11 months of combat, Maupin, who served as a technical radio operator with the 175th Infantry Regiment, 29th Infantry Division, during the Normandy invasion and subsequent battles, returned home with a Bronze Star with oak leaf cluster for meritorious actions, a Purple Heart and a Combat Infantryman Badge among other awards.

He also returned home with the memories of friends lost or wounded.

Though he knew them only briefly before war took their lives, Maupin still carries the memories of his brothers-in-arms with him today.

On Sept. 22, Maupin will join fellow veterans for his first trip to the World War II memorial in Washington, D.C., and see first-hand the field of stars representing the 400,000 lives lost in the struggle for the Allied victory over the Nazis.

The trip is possible because of the West Georgia Honor Flight organization, a local chapter of the national Honor Flight Network. The chapter opened its doors to the West Georgia community in April.

Approximately 100 World War II veterans will join the West Georgia Honor Flight in its inaugural run to the capitol, said Royce Ard, general manager of Knology and a West Georgia Honor Flight board member.

Bike patrol keeps focus on community

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When SPC Charles Homer puts on a bicycle helmet and a reflective shirt, he's not getting dressed for physical exercise — he's getting ready for work.

Homer, 209th Military Police Detachment, is one of 12 MPs on Fort Benning's bicycle patrol, which patrols the installation's housing areas from Memorial Day through Labor Day. Mounted on 21-speed mountain bikes outfitted with sirens and warning lights, the bicycle patrol's purpose is to establish a closer relationship between MPs and the community, said SFC Tim Morgan, operations sergeant for the Directorate of Emergency Services.

"We're here for the community and we want to make sure they know that," he said. "The bike patrol is our way of going out and being directly involved in the neighborhood, of getting boots on the ground."

The bicycle patrols provide an increased MP presence during the summer months, when the community, especially children, spend more time outdoors. To maximize contact with the community and to best monitor children's safety, patrols go out in the evening, Morgan said.

"That's when people are out having barbecues, walking and jogging, and when the kids are out playing," he said. "We want our bike patrols to be out when the community's out."

Visibility is one of the biggest advantages of using bicycles because it helps establish trust, Morgan said.

"A lot of times in a patrol car, you've got the windows up and when you drive by somebody you don't really say a lot to them," he said. "But these guys' job is to stop, say 'Hi,' ask people how they're doing and what kind of issues they're having in the community. The kids get to

Atlanta Falcons sign autographs on Kelley Hill

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

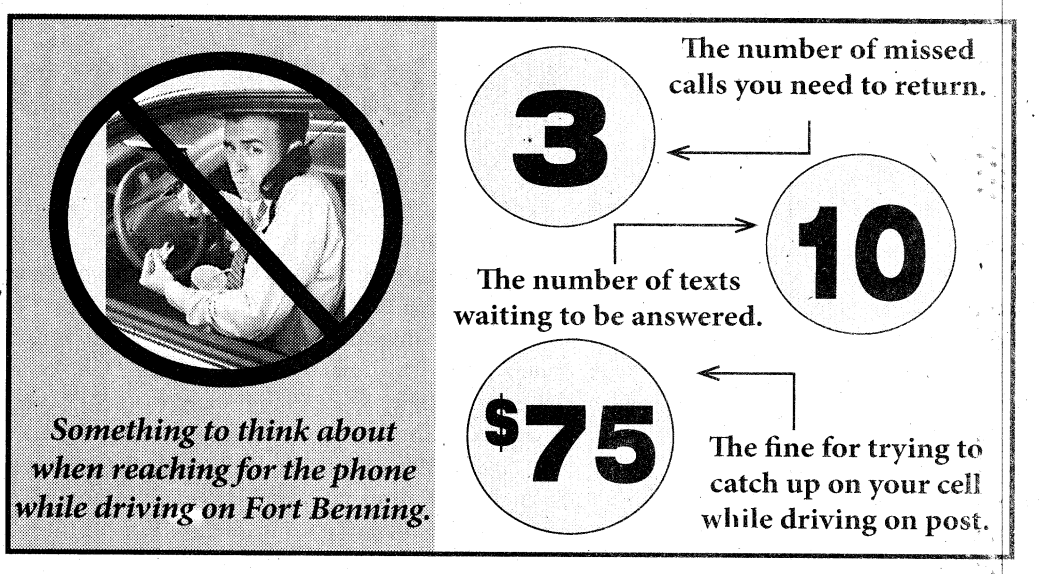
The Atlanta Falcons flew to Fort Benning June 8, courtesy of the Georgia National Guard, to visit with Soldiers.

The team wanted to show its support for the military, said Chris Millman, Falcons community relations and youth programs manager.

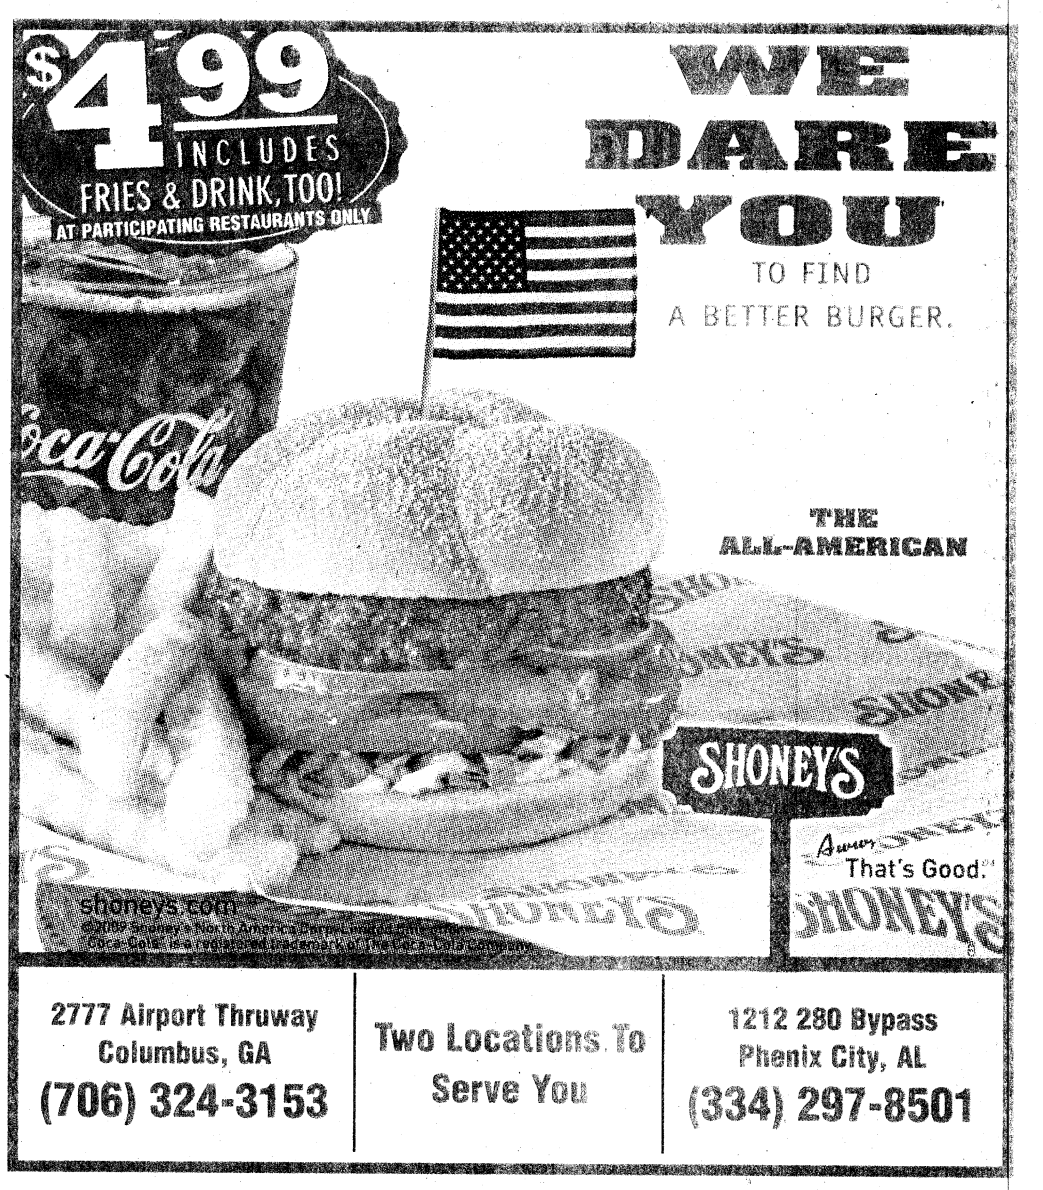
"We had previously gone to Fort Gordon and had a great time," he said. "When the idea of coming to Fort Benning came up, we thought it would be great."

Soldiers assigned to the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team welcomed 10 players and 10 dancers from the team's cheerleading squad to Kelley Hill, where they ate with Soldiers at the Kelley Hill Dining Facility, before having a meet-and-greet autograph session at the recreation center.

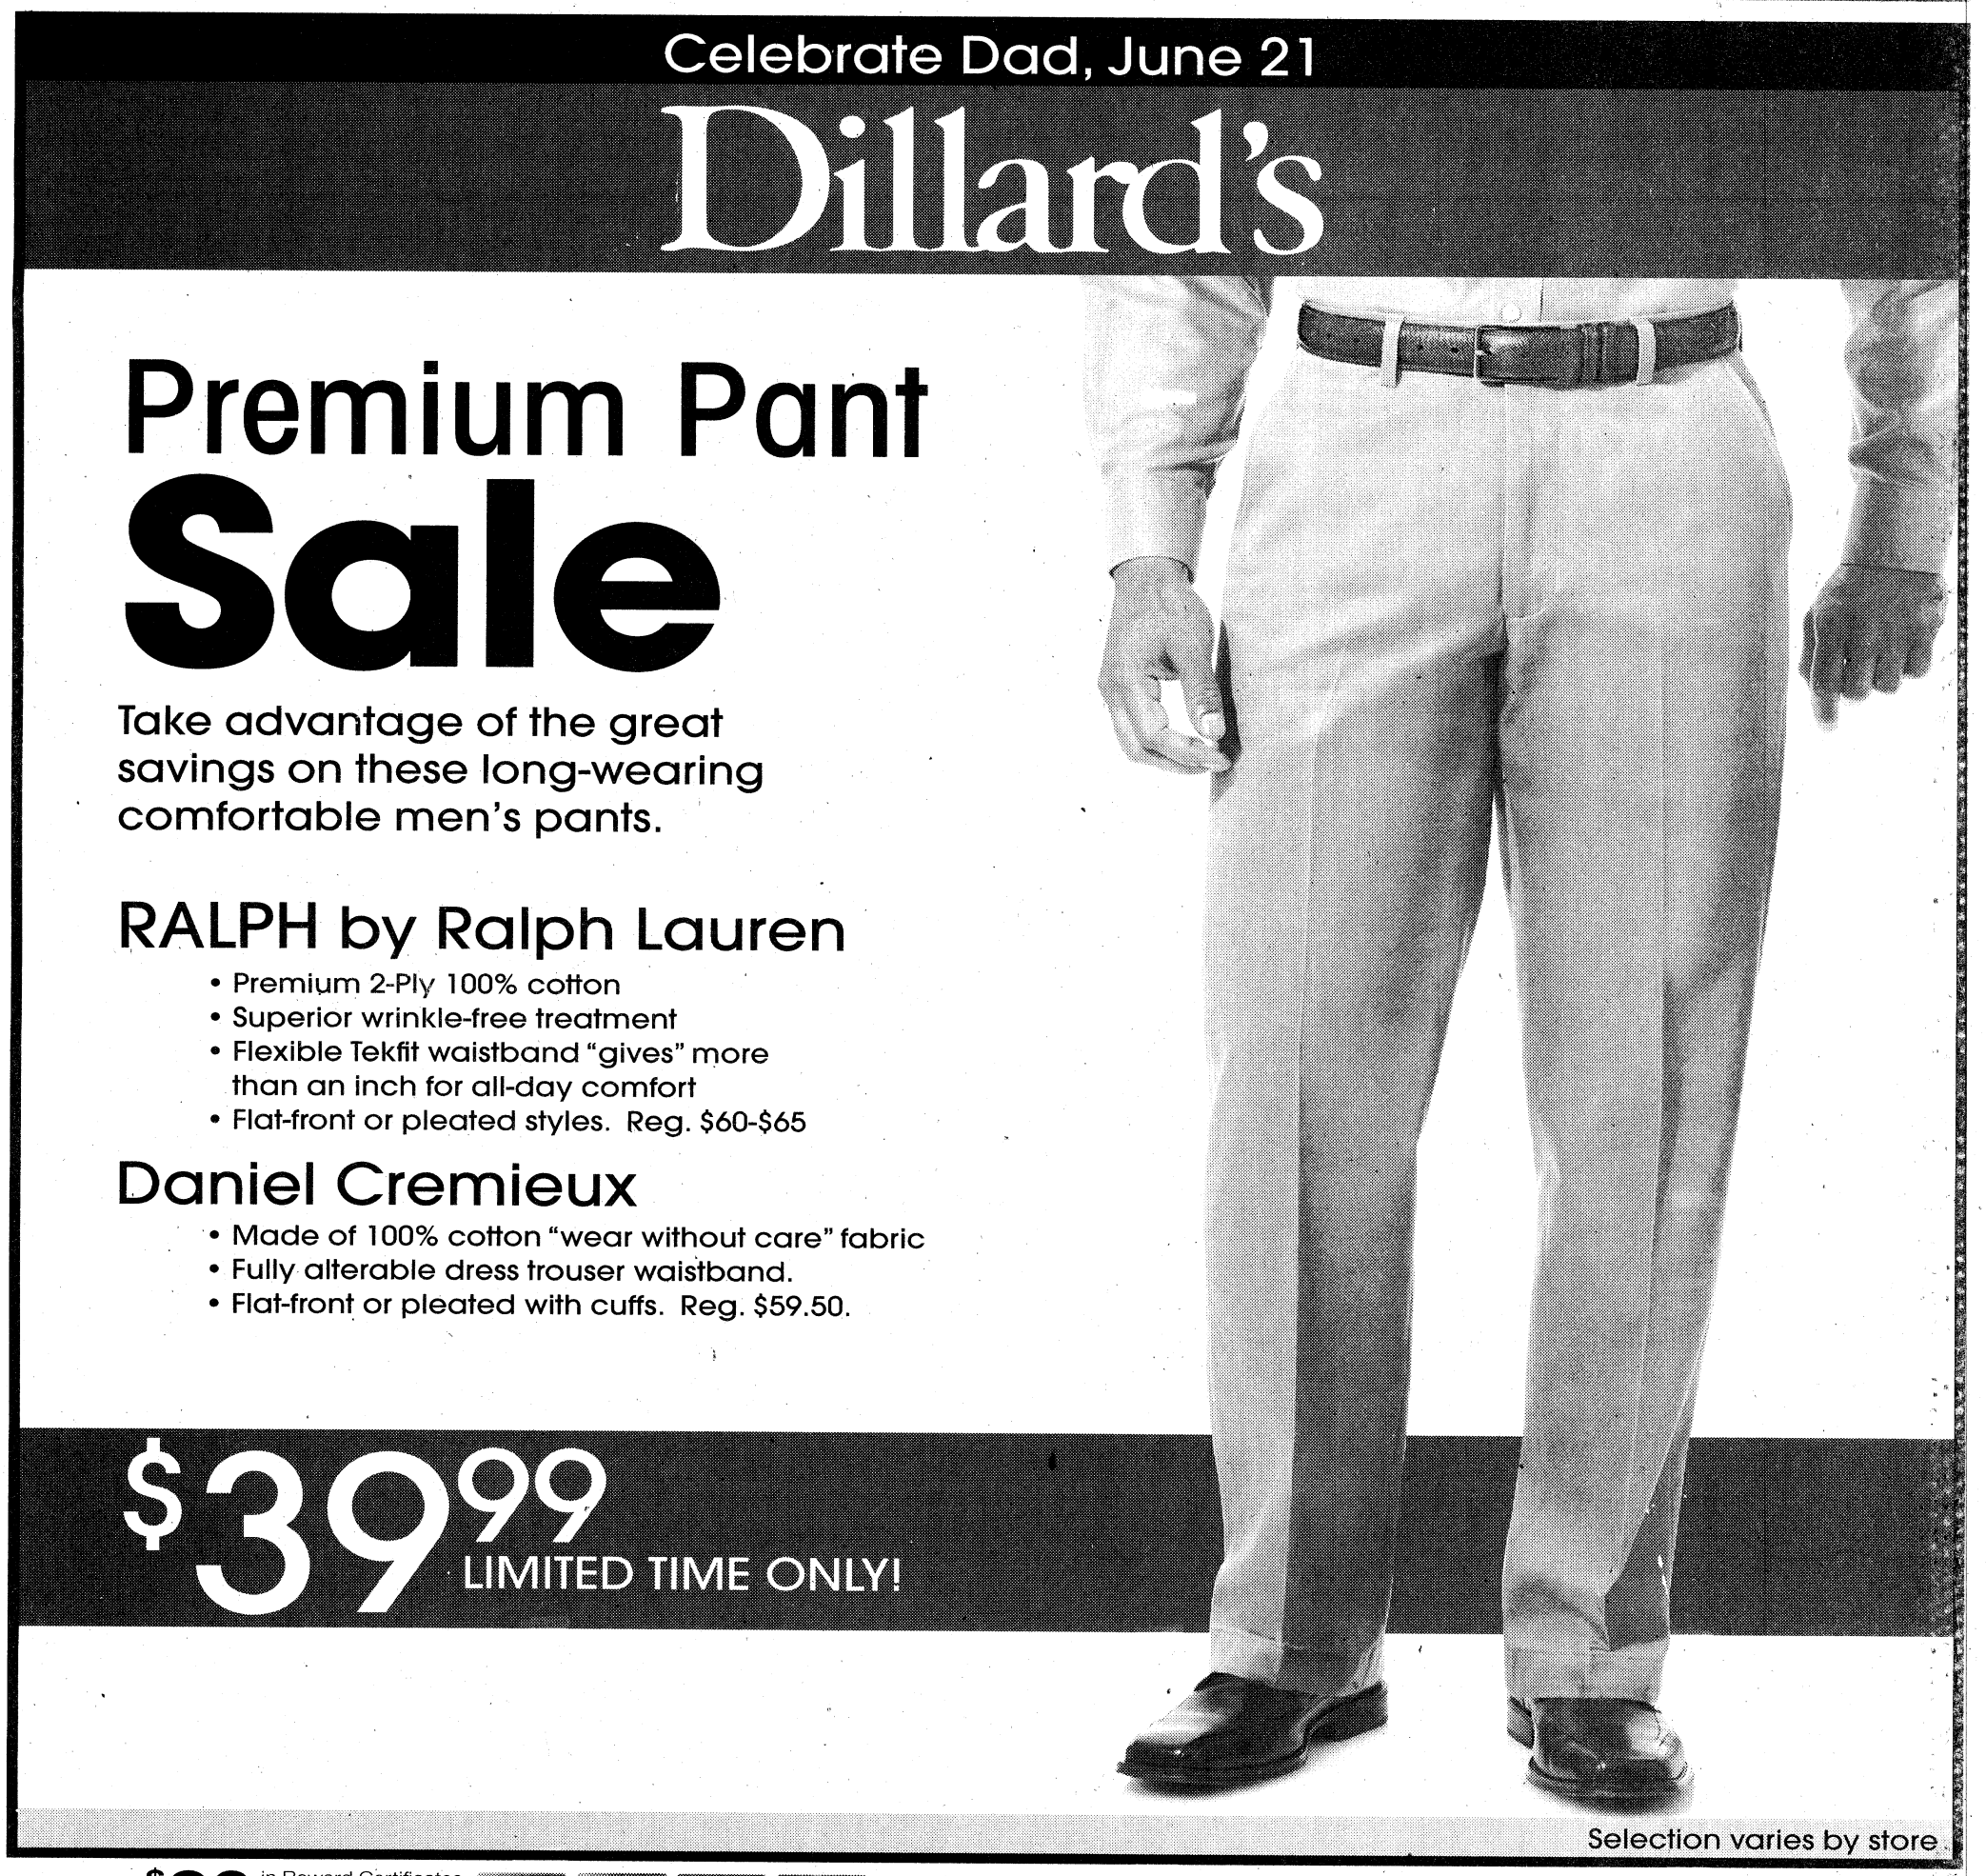
Coy Wire, a Falcons safety, spoke to the Soldiers before signing autographs.



"The one thing you can always be in control of is your attitude," he said. "During times of adversity, whatever they may be, how you get through the situation is by being positive."



The Sledgehammer Soldiers cheered when Wire and his teammates dedicated the first game of the season to the Soldiers of the 3rd HBCT.



"It is a really humbling experience to see people who have such an important job get excited over us," said Justin Blalock, a guard for the Falcons.

Millman said the players were humbled by the visit.

"The whole event is very special to (the team)," Millman said. "It isn't every day that they get to meet the men and women who defend our country. This is the kind of stuff you can't replace."

Eat the right carbs at breakfast to lose weight

LTC Karen E. Hawkins
DECA DIETITIAN

The battle of the bulge may just have gotten easier, especially if you eat breakfast. Eating breakfast that includes foods such as yogurt, whole grain cereals and skim milk might help with losing weight. Having all the tools you need can help increase your success with weight loss along with maintaining a healthy weight.

One more tool that can be useful, according to new research, is the type of carbohydrates you eat before a workout might influence how much fat you burn during physical activity.

In the May 2009 Journal of Nutrition, Emma Stevenson, Ph.D., a senior lecturer at Northumbria University, United Kingdom, noted that women who ate foods for breakfast with a low glycemic index, burned 50 percent more fat during their after-breakfast workout than those who ate foods such as corn flakes and white bread which cause blood sugar to quickly rise. In Stevenson's study, eight women of average weight ate either a high- or low-glycemic-index breakfast and, three hours later, walked on a treadmill for 60 minutes. The researchers then drew blood samples to measure fatty acids, which indicate fat burning for energy in the body.

What is glycemic index?

Glycemic index measures how much 50 grams of carbohydrate raise a person's blood-sugar levels compared to a food such as white bread or pure glucose. Almost all carbs are digested into glucose and cause a temporary rise in blood glucose levels known as the glycemic response. There are many things that can affect the response such as the amount of food eaten, the type of carbohydrate and how the food is cooked, to name a few. Many of the foods that are low on the glycemic index are less refined foods, however, so eating them is a good choice.

Here are just a few low-glycemic-index foods:

- Whole grain cereals (at least 16 grams whole grain per serving)
- High fiber cereals (at least 5 grams fiber per serving)
- Oatmeal (unsweetened is best)
- Skim or 1 percent milk
- Greek yogurt or other yogurt, plain or artificially sweetened
- Fresh fruits
- Dried apricots and dried prunes

For more information about making healthy choices, visit Ask the Dietitian on http://www.commissaries.com.

ASK THE JUDGE

Servicemember rental liability under Georgia law

CPT Shari Wichter
OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE

Many Soldiers and their families live off post and rent from landlords in Columbus. Most Soldiers understand that if they receive permanent change of station orders, the Service members Civil Relief Act entitles them to terminate their lease early without paying a rental penalty for the remaining duration of their lease term. However, although the SCRA is federal law applying to all 50 states, individual states may enact additional laws extending further protection to service members.

Georgia's law imposes less rental liability on Soldiers who terminate leases early because of military service than the SCRA does.

Under the SCRA, a service member who receives PCS orders or orders to deploy for a period of at least 90 days may terminate a rental lease early and is liable to pay rent for 30 days after the first date on which the next rental payment is due after the Soldier gave the landlord proper written notice.

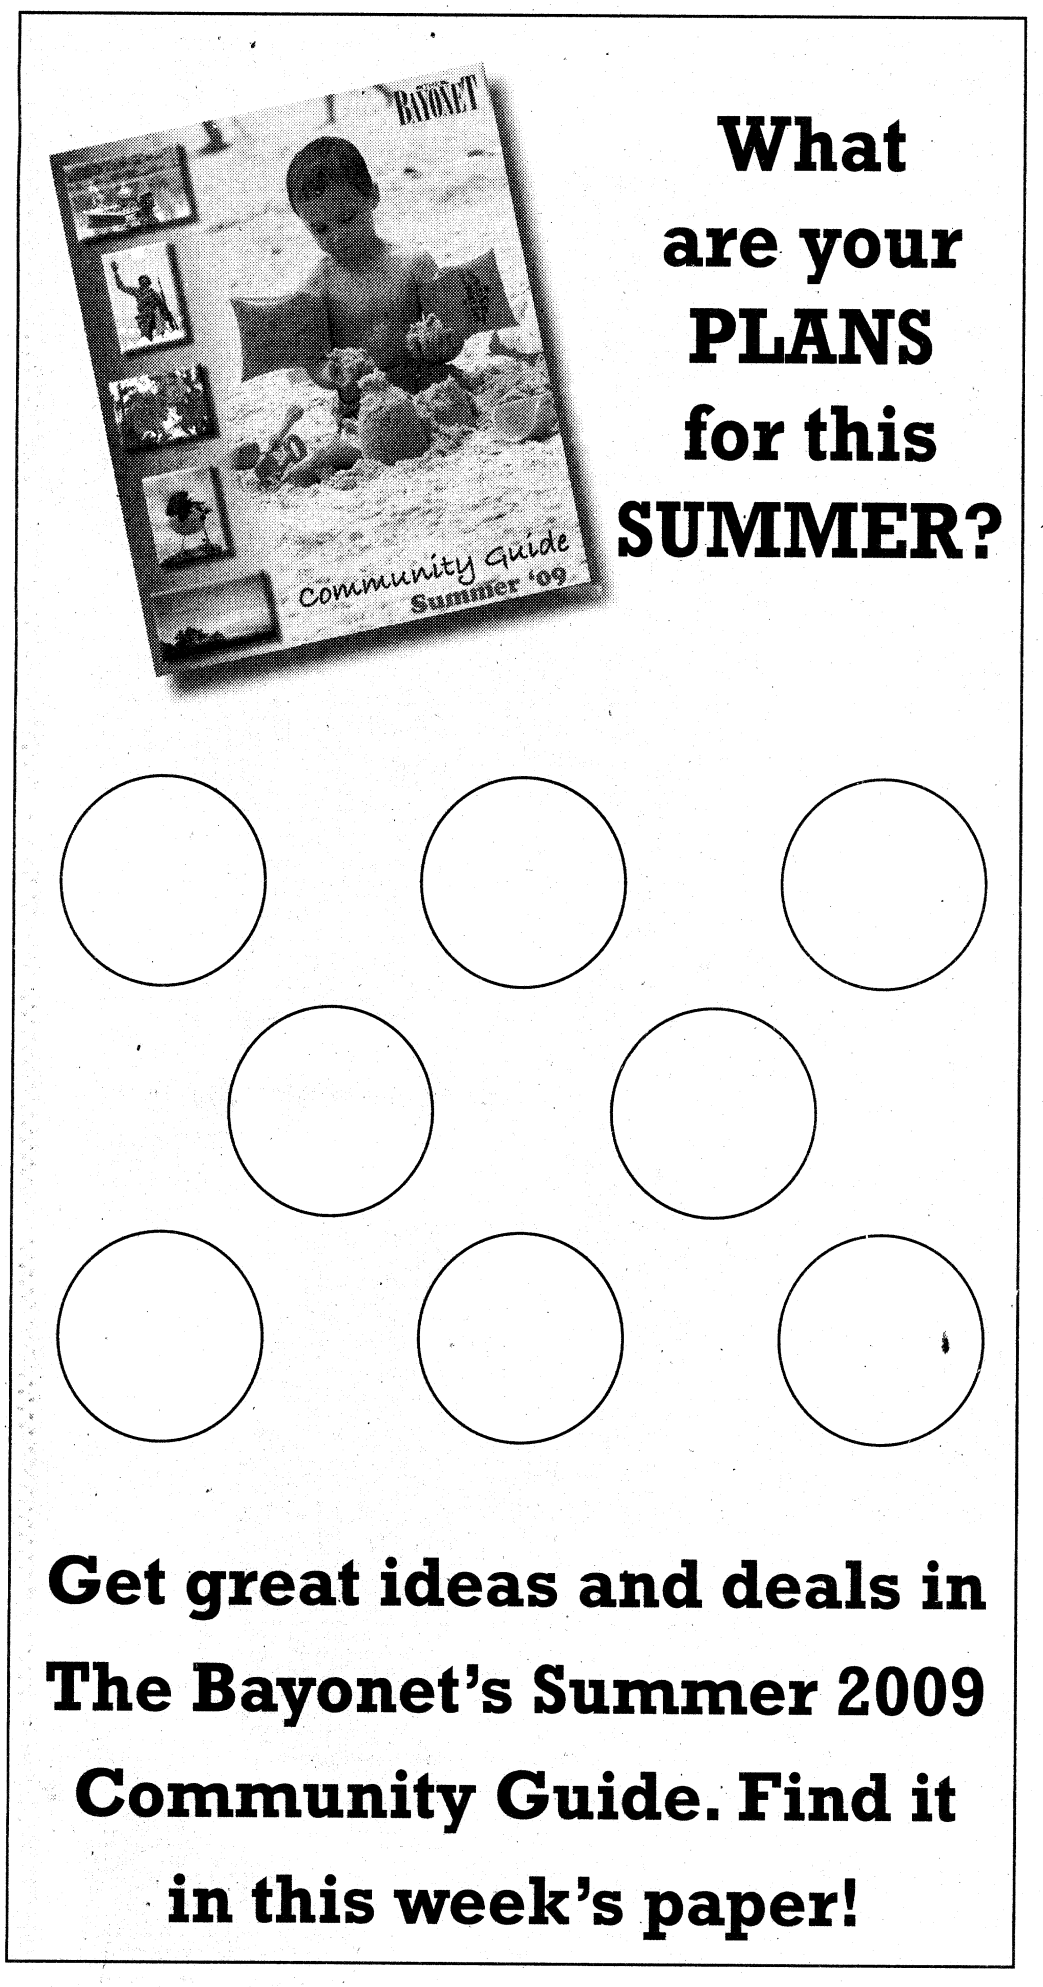
Under Georgia law, a service member who receives PCS orders or temporary duty orders for a period of at least three months may terminate a rental lease early and is liable to pay rent for 30 days after the date on which the Soldier gave the landlord notice.

These two statutes do not contradict each other; the Georgia law simply provides more protection than the SCRA affords. This extra protection may be significant, depending on a Soldier's situation. First, the Georgia law allows for early lease termination for any temporary duty orders for three months or more while the SCRA restricts temporary order lease termination to deployment orders only. Second, because under the SCRA, a service member must pay rent for 30 days from the first rental due date after which he or she gives notice, the Soldier could potentially be liable for almost a month's more rent under the SCRA than under Georgia law.

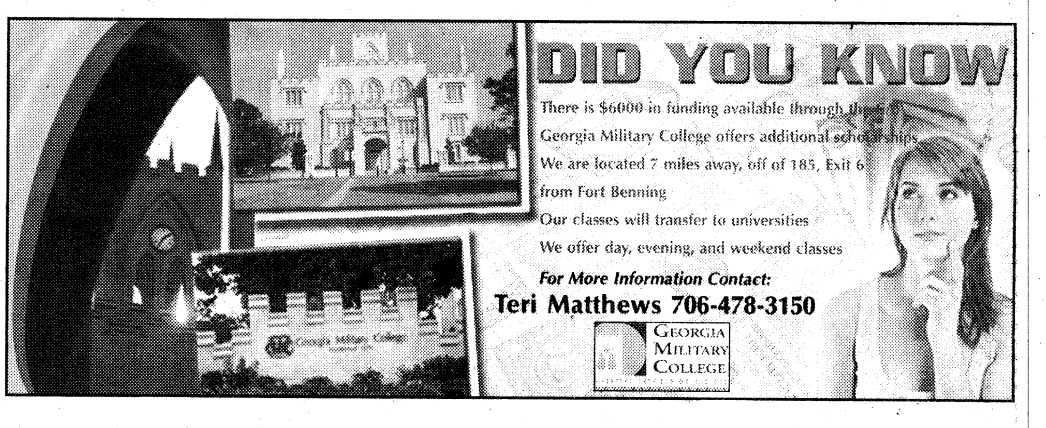
For example, suppose rent is due on the first of each month, and on June 6, a Soldier gives a landlord the proper notice required to terminate a lease early due to PCS orders. Under Georgia law, the Soldier would owe the landlord rent for 30 days after June 6, extending his or her liability until July 6. Under the SCRA, the federal law, the Soldier would owe rent for 30 days after the next rental due, which is July 1. Thus, under the SCRA, the Soldier is liable for rent until July 31. Based on this example, a Soldier pays more than three weeks of additional rent under the SCRA than under Georgia law.

Q: What is a service member's best course of action to ensure less rental liability?

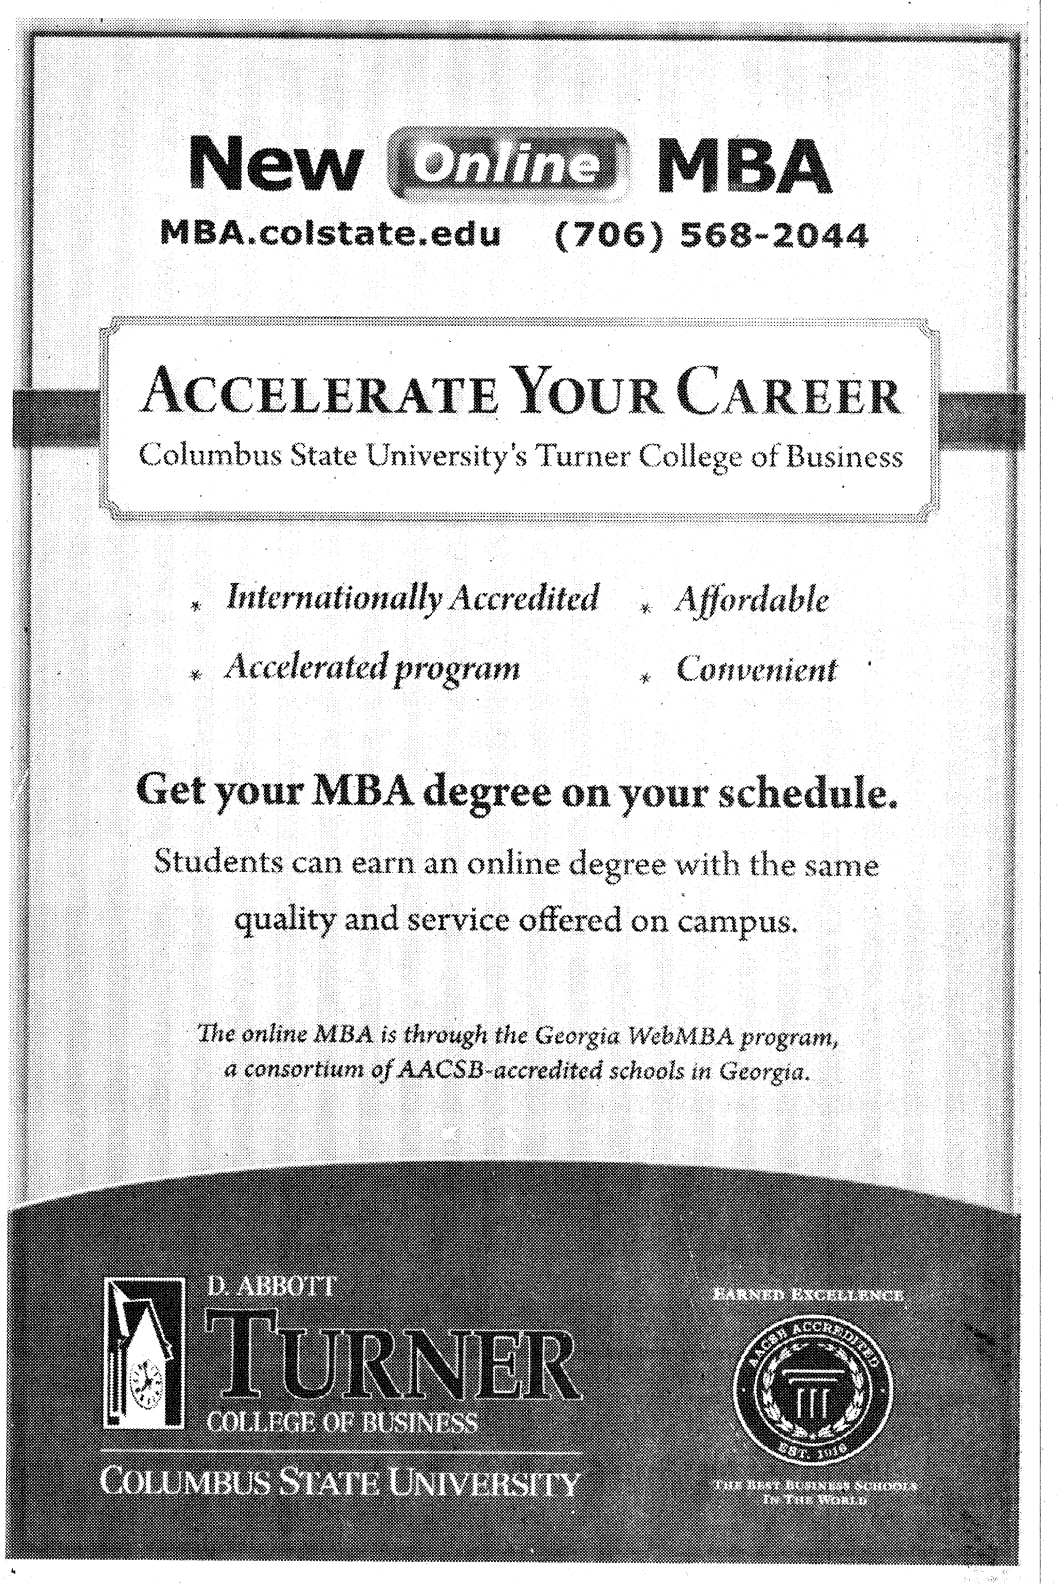
A: First, remember that there is no choice between Georgia and federal law. The SCRA is a federal law which sets certain minimum benefits and protections for service members; all states must abide by it. However, individual states may grant additional protections, and Georgia has chosen to do so. A Soldier's best course of action to ensure that his or her lease termination fee will be based on Georgia law is to read a rental lease over very carefully before signing it. Unfortunately, not all Columbus landlords are aware of or abide by the Georgia rental liability for service member lease termination. Instead, these landlords are aware of the SCRA and will include a Military Lease Addendum where the language for lease termination echoes that of the federal law. In other words, the addendum holds a Soldier liable for 30 days after the next rental due date. Soldiers need to be aware that such language fails to grant them the full protection extended under Georgia law because this addendum is part of the lease contract. If a service member fails to fully read his or her lease and signs a rental agreement with the SCRA language, he or she is then under a legal contract for the federal rental liability, and this complicates the ability to easily resolve the rental amount owed. Therefore, any contract, including a rental lease, should be carefully reviewed before it is signed. The Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate is here to assist service members and spouses with understanding contractual terms.



Important points to remember:



The additional protection under Georgia law applies only to Georgia leases. Alabama law governs Alabama rental agreements. Fort Benning is federal land, and the SCRA governs Fort Benning lease agreements.



Neither the SCRA nor Georgia law mitigates a service member's liability for past due rental payments, damaged premises, or early lease termination for reasons other than PCS or TDY orders. Landlords may charge late fees for past due rent or withhold security deposits to cover damages to the rental premises. Furthermore, tenants who terminate their rental agreements prior to the lease expiration date and do not have PCS or TDY orders for at least 90 days are liable to the landlord for the full penalties under the lease. In some cases, a tenant's financial obligation for improper early lease termination could extend for the entire remaining term of the lease.

To terminate a rental lease early due to PCS or TDY orders, proper notice is required. Under both the SCRA and Georgia law, both written notice and a copy of the Soldier's orders must be delivered to the landlord. Verbal notice is insufficient. While some landlords may agree to verbal notice out of the kindness of their hearts, they are not legally obligated to do so. Thus, Soldiers and spouses who rely on a leasing agent's oral promise that verbal notice of lease termination is sufficient, do so at their own risk. Both the Georgia and federal statutes call for written notice.

Please contact the Legal Assistance Division of the OSJA at 706-545-3281 with questions concerning your rental agreement. We are located at 7021 Ingersoll Street, Building 359, at the corner of Vibbert Avenue and Ingersoll Street.

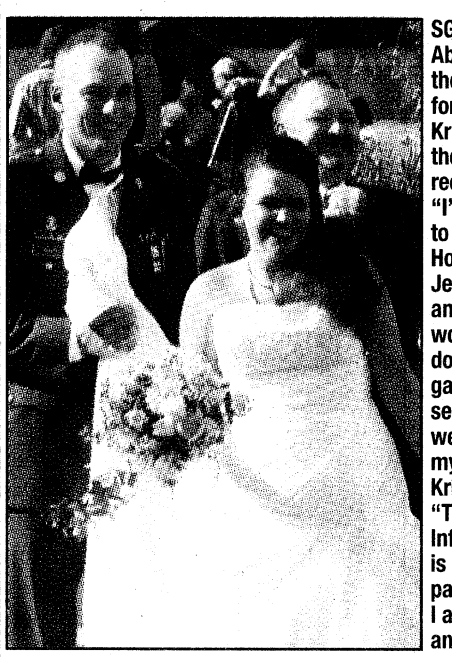
Wedding: Creates memories planning to marry at the courthouse to save money, but she is glad they didn't have to.

"This is a million times better," she said.

"I get to wear a dress. I got to get my hair done. Brad looks so handsome in his class As. And we actually got to have friends here to witness it. It was fabulous. I really appreciate all the help from Operation Homefront. They were lifesavers."



Although the nuptials included all the frills of a typical white wedding, Kim Scofi, executive director of Operation Homefront Georgia, said she hoped they gave the couples more than just a ceremony and reception. She wants them to share an experience that will strengthen their marriage.

Many of the couples who renewed their vows will face a deployment sometime this year. Photographs and memories from their special day will help them as they deal with separation, Scofi said.

"He can think about how beautiful she looked in her bride's dress; she can think about how stunning he looked as he (said) his vows," she said.

"When times are tough and you're separated because of training or deployment, you want to be able to remember the love in your spouse's eye. Having a day like that helps you remember."

"I'm so grateful to Operation Homefront, Jenie's Bridal and all of the wonderful donors that gave me a second-chance wedding with my Soldier," Kristen said. "The 3rd Infantry Division is such a big part of our lives. I am proud to be an Army wife."

Patrol: Provides first responders know their bike guys, and they talk to them."

"I think it's good that they're here," said 6-year old Nevaeh Villanueva of McGraw Village, who paused during an improvised game of baseball Monday to chat with Homer and SSG Christopher Olver, 209th MP Detachment. "It's good to make sure people aren't doing anything (bad.)"

Riding through McGraw Village Monday, Homer and Olver greeted nearly every resident they passed with a wave and a "hello." They joked about sports team rivalries and updated residents on the day's events.

"The bike patrols are like the eyes and ears in the housing areas," said Olver, who also served on bicycle patrol in Fort Wainwright, Alaska. "I've found that if you have a proactive bike patrol, the children are more apt to talk to military police, and they and their parents more likely to report crimes. We get better, more detailed reports and can resolve issues more quickly."

While traffic and helmet regulations are the main violations bicycle patrols deal with, they also provide backup when more serious issues occur.

"They're quick first responders," Morgan said. "If something happens in the housing areas, they're already there."

Staying in top physical condition is key for bicycle patrol members since they ride anywhere from 15 to 20 miles during an eight-hour shift, Olver said.

"There's a saying about bicycle patrol officers — they drink when they're not thirsty and eat when they're not hungry," Olver said. "You've got to do that to keep your energy up."

All bicycle patrol members are required to pass the Law Enforcement Bicycle Association's certification course, a weeklong program where they learn skills such as mounting and dismounting and using their bicycle to stop an offender.

Earning a spot on the bicycle patrol, one of DES's most sought-after assignments, is not easy, Morgan said.

"They are hand-picked by their first sergeant based on their performance," he said. "They're some of our best, most physically fit, sharpest guys."

SOS: Reaches out to survivors

There is no time limit on SOS, Pierce said.

"When you first have a tragedy, your mind is blank," said Monica Waddell, SOS financial counselor. Because survivors may be distracted immediately after their loss, they might be better prepared to understand their benefits after several weeks or months have passed, she said.

One of the ways SOS helps survivors is clearing up confusion about which office or organization can best help them, Waddell said.

"They may think they need to go to Army emergency services, when in fact, they need to talk to an attorney," she said.

SOS offers financial classes covering issues such as estate planning, budget management, insurance, credit repair and investment. The first class at Fort Benning is tentatively scheduled for late July.

Waddell, who conducts the classes, said she tailors her instruction to meet survivors' needs and ensure they learn how to become financially independent.

For help with emotional and social issues, SOS can recommend counseling and support services, and will also provide its own support group, which is in the planning stages.

The first support group meeting will be held at 6 p.m. Tuesday at the Follow Me Chapel, and will be a time for survivors to discuss the direction they would like the support group to take, Pierce said.

> "It helped to meet other survivors because I felt like I was the only one (dealing with issues). One of the biggest things I've gotten out of SOS is that I know I'm not alone."
> — Rachel Ganczewski

Waddell and Pierce are working to put survivors in touch with members of Gold Star Wives, a national organization for military widows and widowers.

"Gold Star Wives are big activists on the congressional level, and one of the most powerful things survivors can do is get involved, give feedback and be active in changing laws," Pierce said. "It honors their Soldier and can give them a sense of healing to have their voice heard."

Rachel Ganczewski, whose husband, SGT Steven Ganczewski, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was killed in Iraq in 2007, said having an SOS office near her home has helped tremendously.

"I kept getting fliers in the mail about SOS in North Carolina, but I can't travel that far," she said. "Then I got a packet in the mail from Jennifer (Pierce) and I was very glad to have something closer. So far they've been doing a really good job keeping me informed and giving me phone numbers of counselors."

SOS provides a quarterly forum for survivors to give feedback about services they received before and during their Soldier's deployment, as well as after their loss.

Ganczewski attended the first forum on post, which took place in May.

"It helped to meet other survivors because I felt like I was the only one (dealing with issues)," she said. "One of the biggest things I've gotten out of SOS is that I know I'm not alone."

"I want them to know there are people who have extreme esteem for them," Pierce said.

"I really care about them. I have the utmost respect for survivors. I think they have made the ultimate sacrifice anybody can make."

SOS is located in Building 2624 in Soldiers Plaza. It is open 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Veterans: To take Honor Flight to Washington, D.C.

The one-day trip — the veterans will depart from Columbus Metropolitan Airport in the morning and return in the late evening — is free for the veterans.

Many veterans have faced challenges to seeing the monument, which opened in 2005, including medical issues and living on fixed incomes, Ard said.

The chapter began raising the funds needed for the flight three weeks ago, Ard said. The chapter needs $68,000 and hopes to raise the money, through the help of the Community Foundation of the Chattahoochee Valley, by Independence Day.

Through the generous support of various organizations, groups and a recent telethon on WLTZ, the honor flight fund has raised enough money to send more than half of the veterans so far, he said.

"We really appreciate the support of the community," Ard said. "The youngest WWII veteran, assuming he enlisted at the age of 18, is 82 years old. There will be people on this flight who participated in D-Day, Operation Market Garden and other big battles of World War II, many of whom have not had the opportunity to see their monument."

"I'm really excited to visit the monument," said MAJ(R) Richard Hecht, who served as a platoon commander in the 73rd Bomb Wing during World War II. "It's a wonderful thing that this organization is doing."

> "There will be people on this flight who participated in D-Day, Operation Market Garden and other big battles of World War II, many of whom have not had the opportunity to see their monument."
> — Royce Ard, West Georgia Honor Flight board member

Hecht said he and his men endured 16 air attacks in the 18 months they were stationed in Saipan during the Pacific campaign.

Hecht kept in touch with several friends from the war and even returned to the island with two of them to mark the 50th anniversary of their service there.

"I met six of the best friends I've ever had while serving in Saipan. We kept in touch throughout the years," he said. "But now all six are gone."

The Department of Veterans Affairs estimates that of the 16 million World War II veterans, only 2.5 million are alive today and they are dying at a rate of 1,000 per day.

"Time is of the essence for these veterans," Ard said.

Betsy Covington, executive director of the Community Foundation of Chattahoochee Valley, said she expects the experience will be a memorable one for not only the veterans but the guardians as well.

Fifty-two guardians will accompany the veterans to Washington to help with pushing wheelchairs, airport check-in procedures and anything else the veterans may need assistance with during the trip, said Covington, who volunteered to be a guardian.

Covington said being a guardian is a wonderful opportunity to thank veterans for their sacrifices.

"For the veterans, being in the company of those who shared similar experiences in the war and being reminded that people appreciate what they did, that's going to be a great day for them," Covington said.

"These people put their lives on the line and many didn't come back. For those still with us, we want to thank them. You can't argue these veterans changed the world for us."

The cost for guardians is $400, which covers their trip.

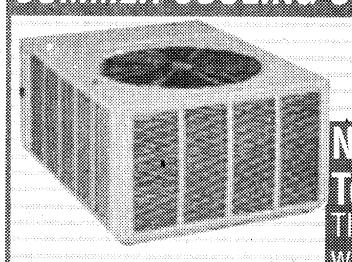
Despite the cost, the slots have filled up quickly, with less than fifteen seats still available, Ard said.

"Being a guardian really appeals to people who want to give back to the veterans, to take care of someone who is an American hero. It's not an opportunity that comes every day," Ard said.

The trip is tentatively scheduled to include a visit to the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery to see the changing of the guard or to see other war memorials at the capitol.

"A lot of the vets who fought in the war also fought in Korea or Vietnam. I know they'd like to see other memorials. They want to pay homage to these troops," Ard said.

For many of them, this is it. This is the chance to see these memorials and reflect on the friends they had during the war and those they lost, Ard said.



Ard said there are still plenty of seats available for veterans. The flight is open to all World War II veterans, regardless of whether they live in Georgia, he said.

To request a seat on the honor flight as a veteran or guardian, visit www.wgahonorflight.org and fill out an application or call the West Georgia Honor Flight at 706-507-9944.

Faith can help with sound money management

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

With the economy going downhill, do you feel like you are being pinched in a financial vice grip?

Are your credit card monthly minimum payments still higher than your General Technical score? Does your Visa card have wear marks on it? If so, there's still hope. But to get something different, remember that you've got to do something different.

Last week, I talked about how to begin improving your financial health. The first step is to make a commitment to your financial success. Next comes understanding that, as financial advisor Ron Blue wrote, "From a financial standpoint, you can have enough. If you plan using (proven) techniques and principles, you will have enough."

Here are the four proven principles that he and other experts say are steppingstones to financial success:

1. Realize that God owns it all. If you are a believer, this has an immediate implication — I'm not the owner of my stuff; I'm simply a steward, or caretaker, of the stuff God gives me. God has the rights; I simply have responsibilities.

It's a lot like my 17-year-old daughter and her car. She drives a car, so in one sense you could say she "has" it. However, I'm the owner. She understands that I gave it to her, and if I choose to, I could take it back for any reason. You see, as the owner, I have the rights; as the caretaker, she has the responsibilities.

2. In the laboratory of life, we're in a growth experiment. Did you know that spiritually, God uses money for three purposes? Money, and material possessions, can be used as a tool, test, or testimony. He can get our attention with it and use it as a tool to develop us. He can also use it as a test of what is most important to us, as the Bible shows. And, he can use it to show what a difference having peace of mind and financial freedom can make as a witness to those around you.

People may say, "Wow, look at those folks — what's different about the way they manage their money and handle their 'stuff?'"

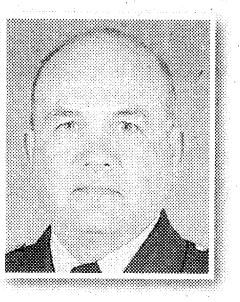
3. The amount isn't important. It's not how much you have, it's what you do with what you have that is important. Why do some people win the lottery and then blow it all, while others with seemingly little income live quite comfortably? Because it's not what you make that makes the difference — it's what you keep that makes the difference.

4. Faith requires action. Lots of us know what to do; we just don't do it. Financial freedom is like any other commitment. It requires that we not only talk the talk, but also walk the walk.

For more information about managing your money, I recommend Ron Blue's book, Master Your Money, and Army Community Service's financial counseling. ACS can be reached at 706-545-7517.

If there's any way our team of trained counselors at the Chaplain Family Life Center, Building 2606 in Soldier's Plaza, can help you, give us a call at 706-545-1760. We look forward to serving you.

Earthly fathers should reflect God's love to children



Chaplain (LTC) Lyn Stike
USAIC CHAPLAINS OFFICE

A son once asked his father for a loan until payday. His father replied, "When is payday?" And the son replied, "You tell me. You're the one who's working."

That story illustrates an important point about fathers; in more ways than one, they're essential to our existence.

First and foremost, of course, fathers help give us the gift of life. Then, they feed us until we can eat, guide us until we can walk, and support us until we can work — "until payday."

Some fathers teach us to laugh and sing. Some work beside us in a field or a factory. Fathers can show us how to bait a hook, catch a fish, climb a mountain or hit a ball. Some fathers sail the oceans while others govern our cities. Some fight for freedom while others heal the sick.

It's really impossible to describe a typical father — or even an ideal father — because each father possesses distinctive qualities he can use to bless his children.

You may respect your father for his good humor or his sound judgment. Someone else might cherish a father for his integrity or expressions of love.

Former President Jimmy Carter says his father was an expert marksman who taught him to shoot straight — in more ways than one.

Coach Richard Lapchick remembers his father as a great basketball player and coach who never pressured him to follow in his father's footsteps and, thus, made it possible for him to do so.

Of course, fathers can inspire their daughters as well as their sons. In the book How to Be Your Daughter's Daddy, author Dan Bolin lists 365 ways fathers can show love for their daughters. He suggests learning the names of her dolls or stuffed animals, asking her to help him pump gas, brushing her hair, hanging a picture she has drawn on a wall at work and kissing her mother in her presence.

In simple ways like these, any father can make his mark with his daughters — and with his sons.

That doesn't mean it's easy to raise children. But it can be the most rewarding experience of a man's life. As George Herbert wrote, "One father is more than a hundred school masters."

Our heavenly Father inspires us, his children, every day. He stands ready to lift us up when we fall or wander from his direction.

He has demonstrated the proper relationship between a father and his child; we must simply implement his instruction.

This week as we recognize our fathers may we remember our heavenly Father's love for us and share with our children such as we have received.

Blessings.

Sisters Jocelyn, foreground, and Madeline Marshall, from LaGrange, Ga., pick blueberries Saturday at A & J Farms in Pine Mountain, Ga. The farm, located at 6878 Hamilton Pleasant Grove Road, is open from 7 a.m. to dark, and the Storys give a $2 military discount. A gallon of freshly picked blueberries costs $9, $7 for military. The peace and quite — priceless. For more information, call 706-663-8352.

Anne Story shows one of the blueberry plants she rooted from a cutting. The master gardener advises gardeners to cut a 6-inch branch, strip all the leaves except the top two, dip the cutting in a root hormone and stick it in a mixture of one-third vermiculite, one-third soil and one-third sphagnum moss. Before planting the new bush, strip off any berries in order to have berries during the next growing season.

Blueberry picking at 'u-pick' farm is tasty

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

I haven't found Blueberry Hill, but I have found blueberry heaven, and it's nearby.

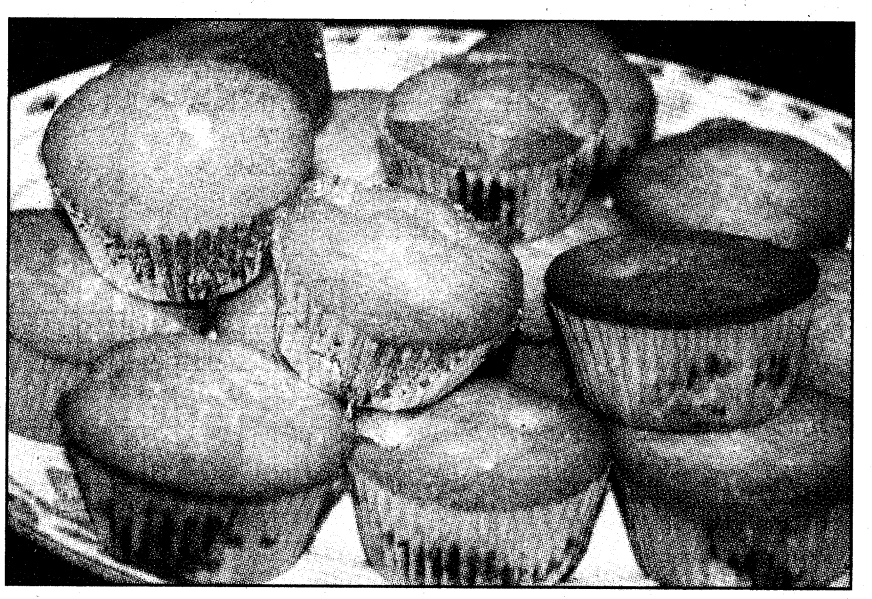
A & J Farms in Harris County has between 600 to 700 blueberry bushes on about an acre of the 55-acre farm in Pine Mountain. COL(R) Jack and Anne Story have grown blueberries for about 15 years, with a "u pick" option for consumers the last 12 or 13. Heaven.

The blueberry season started June 11 and should last about four weeks, said Jack, who was the executive officer for Martin Army Community Hospital when the Storys were stationed at Fort Benning.

"The best tour I had was at Benning," Jack said. The Storys' farm is about 45 miles from post, and Jack recommends traveling I-185 to Hopewell Church Road, Exit 30, to avoid the road construction on Veterans Parkway, also known as Highway 27.

The majority of the blueberries come from the bushes Anne grew when the couple lived in Buena Vista, Ga. They grow four varieties: climax, tifblue, premier and Woodard.

The Woodard, Jack said, is his favorite because you can eat it when it's not quite ripe and won't get a bitter taste. He tells customers to eat all they want while they're picking because the berries aren't sprayed and "it's not fun to pick if you don't eat 'em as you go."



I spent all of Saturday morning picking four gallons of berries in the quietness of a beautiful morning. I didn't notice other pickers and only stopped after the sixth phone call and third text from my 17-year-old daughter. It was a very good morning.

My co-workers, Jenn Gunn and Kristen Molinaro, also picked berries Saturday. Kristen said the Storys expect to harvest 800 bushels this year. Jenn said the directions from last year's article weren't precise enough and asked me to let everyone know when they exit I-185 at Hopewell Church Road, turn right. Anne said she tells everyone it's about five miles to a four-way stop. Turn left on Hamilton Pleasant Grove Road. There are "u-pick" signs.

The Storys also sell picked berries at a $17 a gallon. Neighborhood children who want to earn spending money are paid to pick the berries, but only in the mornings because it gets too hot out there in the afternoon, Anne said.

The Storys, both 75, no longer work at Callaway Gardens or make jams or jellies to sell. Growing blueberries and muscadines in August while managing the farm keeps them busy, Jack said.

"You have to keep going," Jack said. "If you don't, you die."

The fruits of my labor. I found the recipe online. An interesting aspect of the recipe was coating the blueberries in flour before adding them to the batter. The recipe is pretty simple ... eggs, flour, butter, milk, baking powder and vanilla.

COL(R) Jack and Anne Story stand in front of a row of blueberry bushes. Anne said Soldiers who saw last year's Bayonet article spent the day with Jack after redeploying from Iraq. "They just wanted to unwind. And this was the place."

Juneteenth Western Round-Up dinner and dance in Columbus TODAY

Sisters Inc. and the Gamma Tau Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority, Inc. present the Juneteenth Western Round-Up dinner and dance at 8 p.m. today in the South Hall of the Columbus Trade Center.

For more than 100 years, black Americans have celebrated Juneteenth, June 19, 1865, the date when many slaves in Texas learned they had been freed, two-and-a-half years after the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation by President Abraham Lincoln. Today, Juneteenth commemorates black freedom and emphasizes education and achievement.

Tickets for the dance are $35 per person. Everyone is asked to wear Western attire.

Proceeds benefit the chapter's scholarship fund and community outreach programs.

MG Michael Ferriter took command of Fort Benning and the U.S. Army Infantry Center from MG Michael Barbero during the traditional passing of the guidon and colors symbolizing the transfer of command authority Wednesday on the Parade Field adjacent to the National Infantry Museum.

"The U.S. Army Infantry Center and School is privileged to follow one great command team with another in Major General Mike and Margie Ferriter," said GEN Martin Dempsey, Training and Doctrine commander and reviewing officer. "Mike Ferriter is an outstanding Soldier, Infantryman and leader. He is certainly no stranger to Fort Benning."

A 1979 graduate of The Citadel, Ferriter was assigned to Fort Benning for the officer basic and advanced courses, was the operations officer for the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, regimental operations officer for 75th Ranger Regiment and commanded the 11th Infantry Regiment.

Ferriter comes to Fort Benning after serving as the deputy commanding general for Operations, 18th Airborne Corps and Fort Bragg. He has served in various capacities at the command and staff level during his career and has combat tours in Somalia and Iraq.

"He brings a wealth of experience and a diverse background of service to TRADOC," Dempsey said.

Outgoing commander Barbero said when he learned he was leaving, Dempsey asked him who should be his replacement.

"The one officer I recommended was Mike Ferriter," Barbero said. "With his impeccable credentials and sterling reputation Major General Ferriter is the right man and the right leader to usher in the Maneuver Center of Excellence and to lead Fort Benning during this historic period of change. Fort Benning is blessed to have Mike and Margie Ferriter as their new command team and it is truly a great day for Fort Benning."

In assuming command, Ferriter said while the task of transforming Fort Benning into the MCOE is "huge," the effort is well underway. Ferriter credited the leadership of Barbero and the hard work of Fort Benning, Fort Knox and

Memorial service set for Jenrette

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

A memorial service for MAJ Kevin Jenrette, who died June 4 in Afghanistan, will be at 4 p.m. Sunday at the Lyman Ward Military Academy in Camp Hill, Ala.

Infantry museum pays tribute to veterans

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"I had an odd feeling when I came through the door — like I'm going back in time; I got goose bumps," said SFC(R) John Rangel, one of more than 4,000 who visited the National Infantry Museum during its grand opening Friday.

"It was due, to have something like this," said the 72-year-old Vietnam veteran. "It's a tribute to the Infantry Soldier. Being an Infantry sergeant like I was, it was my duty to protect my men during this war in Vietnam, and I lost a lot of them."

Many veterans, from World War I to Iraq and Afghanistan, never came home, Rangel said. They never had the chance to marry or have children.

"They gave their lives for this," he said. "To me, that is meaningful. It is history today for this community and for Fort Benning and for all Infantry Soldiers."

The museum honors Infantrymen of all generations, from the earliest battles of the United States to the current war in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"You have to give everybody a good view of what the Soldier went through as an Infantry Soldier," he said. "I think a lot of people take for granted that you're alive today, you can do what you want to do. That is because the Soldiers are here to protect this country."

Soldiers of today and yesterday toured the galleries, many sharing memories and experiences. CPL Dave Broening, 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, said he enjoyed talking with the older veterans, particularly one who pointed out a weapon he carried in Bastogne, France, during World War II.

"We're Infantry Soldiers, and we're paying respects to the ones who came before us," Broening said. "That's the reason why we're Infantry, because these are the people who led the way for us to do it, to carry on. Anybody who walks through here and actually reads some of the stuff or talks to some of these guys who did what's going on in these pictures, they'd have a better understanding, a better appreciation of the life they have now."

The museum features six era galleries, a family gallery honoring those who love and support

World War II Street showcases authentic buildings

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Just behind the National Infantry Museum, there's a treasure trove of authentic history.

World War II Street features seven buildings constructed during that era that have been preserved and relocated from around Fort Benning.

Though the buildings, most of which were constructed from the Army Quartermaster Corps' 700 series design, were originally meant to last about 15 years, many were still in use well into the latter part of the 20th century.

Robert Hopkins and Robert Knowles, who attended the grand opening Friday with the Atlanta Vietnam Veterans Business Association, said they clearly remember using buildings like the ones on World War II Street while attending basic training in the 1960s.

"We stayed in houses just like this," Hopkins said. "They say it's World War II-era, but we were using buildings like these during Vietnam."

"It's neat to preserve it this way," Knowles said. "It reminds me of Harmony Church when my brother went through basic training here during the Vietnam era."

We fight together, we win together

MG Michael Ferriter
COMMANDING GENERAL

Margie and I are excited to be back at Fort Benning in this time of unprecedented change and to join the Fort Benning team as these historic events take place around us. I trust you are excited as well — that you embrace change as an opportunity to demonstrate the kind of out-front leadership that inspires others to follow.

As we join the Fort Benning family, Margie and I would like to recognize the great command team of MG Mike and Linda Barbero. Their strong leadership and commitment were key during this important period of Fort Benning history. They are our dear friends, and their openness truly made our transition smooth and easy. Margie and I congratulate MG Barbero on his upcoming promotion, and we wish them well as they move on to the next chapter of their lives.

As we transition Fort Benning to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, we will soon welcome the Armor School. We are shaping history in such a way as to impact generations of Americans to come. We are posturing our Army for success on a battlefield far different than that which our fathers and grandfathers knew. Times are changing; we will lead this change.

The Base Realignment and Closure process is considered laborious and sometimes painful. But it is good medicine. All across the Army and sister services, we are seeing a mighty transformation, as we reconfigure our forces to fight smarter and more effectively. Nowhere is this phenomenon as evident as it is right here. It is appropriate that the Home of the Infantry should lead the way in this process.

During a visit to Fort Benning about a month prior to taking command, I sat down with representatives from the many directorates handling the logistics of moving the Armor School from Fort Knox. We talked about infrastructures, housing, education, training, construction and expansion.

And we talked about people — those who are paving the way for expansion and those who will follow in the coming year as we staff directorates and units. We also talked about the Soldiers who will benefit when all is said and done, and their families. I am pleased to report to you the men and women working this process have the correct focus on Soldiers and their families.

As we will successfully integrate the Armor School, with its history and culture, we must remember that people — Soldiers, family members and the dedicated civilian personnel — are most important.

To the Fort Benning family and our brothers and sisters at Fort Knox, please know that I appreciate all your hard work, your willingness to adapt and work together toward the mission and the good of our Soldiers and our families. We fight together and we win together.

So much has changed, locally and globally, since the Ferriters pulled up stakes in July of 2001 and left Fort Benning for Virginia. But one thing remains the same; Fort Benning and the Chattahoochee Valley is an exciting place to live and a great place to call home. There is no place I'd rather be during this critical juncture in our nation's history.

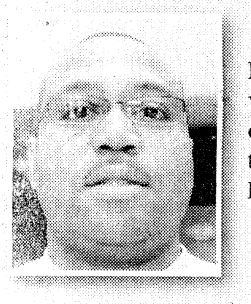
VARIOUS VOICES

What impressed you most at the National Infantry Museum?



The overall accuracy and detail impressed me. The models were made based on real people, and they even have real tanks and vehicles and realistic grass. You walk by and just say, "Wow."

I liked the presentations in the downstairs area, especially the World War II presentations. I liked seeing all of the artifacts.

I liked the Airborne parts because I was a paratrooper myself. I served with the 82nd Airborne Division overseas, so seeing things about the 82nd and the 101st Airborne Divisions was what I enjoyed most.

— SGT Marcus Williams

I liked the Last 100 Yards. Seeing the modern stuff brought back a lot of memories of being over in Afghanistan, but I also love all battle scenes, so I really enjoyed it. It was excellent.

— Retired Air Force Master Sgt. Diedrick Lewis
Goldsboro, N.C.

I identified a lot with the Cold War Era Gallery. As a young guy growing up, that era was when I started paying attention to world events, especially the Vietnam War because my brother served there. It reminded me how fortunate we are that era is over.

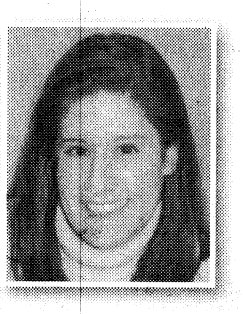
Are you on Team Jon, Team Kate or Team Why Do We Care?

Michelle Gordon
FORT BENNING PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE



Like millions of people around the world, I, too, watched Monday's episode of the TLC juggernaut Jon and Kate Plus Eight as the reality TV couple announced their pending divorce on national television.

The first half of the hourlong show was devoted to the delivery of prefabricated playhouses for the kids. It was cute, it was sweet, it was a light-hearted family show.

However, 30 minutes into the program, a black screen appeared that said, "Monday, June 22, 2009, legal proceedings were initiated in Pennsylvania to dissolve the 10-year marriage of Jon and Kate Gosselin."

Following the announcement were all the elements of a good drama — tears, excuses, tissues and ratings. Yep, ratings.

Approximately 10.6 million people tuned in to watch Monday night, not to see the young parents raise their eight kids, but because of the speculation associated with what TLC promoted as an announcement that would affect the entire family.

But why do we care? Why does the divorce of a Pennsylvania couple make national headlines? Why is this news?

I can't speak for anyone else, but I can tell you why I care. I care because I like to be entertained and that is what this show is for me, entertainment. Currently in its fifth season, Jon and Kate Plus Eight was not always so dramatic, and I liked it that way.

In fact, I only started watching it after the birth of my daughter two years ago.

The show revolves around a couple trying to raise two sets of multiples — twins and sextuplets. I watch because I want to know how other parents resolve the same issues I face. Things like tantrums, potty training and taking toddlers on an airplane are universal, and I like to see how others approach those situations.

It is only within the last four months or so that the once-quiet, little TLC show began consistently landing on the cover of US Weekly and other tabloid magazines.

Now ratings are up because of cheating and divorce rumors.

People are taking sides and tuning in to watch a marriage fall apart and a family break up, forgetting that these are real people and those kids are about to become another statistic.

It's sad.

Some say the couple brought it upon themselves — they invited the cameras and the fame into their lives so now they have to deal with the consequences.

Part of me agrees, but part of me also remembers a nurse and an IT specialist struggling to feed, clothe and raise eight kids under the age of 5.

I'm not sure which team I'm on, but in this case, I'm not picking sides. Both parents are at fault, and hopefully they can pull together and reconcile.

I miss my nondescript little show about raising kids.

There's enough drama on the news, and I just want to be entertained and get some parenting tips.

199th Infantry Brigade holds change of command

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's 199th Infantry Brigade, a storied unit that traces its heritage to 1921, hailed a new leader June 17.

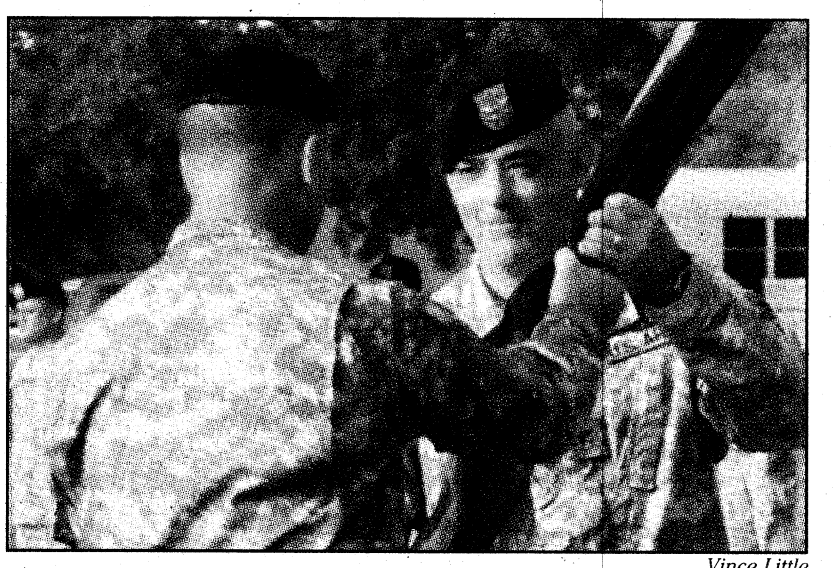
COL Sean McCaffrey took the mantle from COL Terry Sellers during a change of command ceremony at Stilwell Field on Main Post. MG Michael Barbero, then U.S. Army Infantry Center commanding general, was the reviewing officer.

"This is a very significant event for Fort Benning and a milestone in the history of this great brigade," Barbero said. "It's important to recognize these two superb leaders, and I don't take it lightly. There's no such thing as an easy command, and few with the breadth and scope of these four battalions."

Three fall under the 11th Infantry Regiment, which operates the Infantry Basic Officer Leadership Course and Officer Candidate School. Its 1st Battalion provides command and administrative support to USAIC. Headquarters and Headquarters Company is home to the Maneuver Captains Career Course Detachment.

The brigade's 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment trains Soldiers in basic Airborne, Pathfinder and Jumpmaster courses.

McCaffrey commanded that regiment from July 2004 to July 2006. He spent the past year at the U.S. Army War College in Pennsylvania, graduating earlier this month.



"It's always good to welcome back members of the Fort Benning family," Barbero said. "He's the right leader for this brigade in these demanding times."

McCaffrey was commissioned as an Infantry officer in 1986 after graduating from the University of Washington. In recent years, he completed a 15-month Afghanistan deployment as deputy commander of the 82nd Airborne Division's 508th Parachute Infantry Regiment, 4th Brigade Combat Team.

Barbero said he had no doubt the 199th Inf. Bde. would continue to excel under McCaffrey's leadership.

"It's the season of change at Fort Benning, but the 199th will continue to produce paratroopers and the finest lieutenants ready to lead from the front and uphold the highest Army standards," he said.

McCaffrey praised the Infantry Soldiers, officer candidates and paratroopers on the parade field.

MG Michael Barbero, former Fort Benning commander, hands the 199th Infantry Brigade colors to incoming commander, COL Sean McCaffrey, during a ceremony June 17 at Stilwell Field.

"They're the best example of what makes our military so great," he said. "I look forward to serving you to the best of my ability."

Sellers, who became the brigade commander in June 2007, won't stray too far. He takes over as Fort Benning's G3 — the director of operations and training for USAIC — and is expected to play a key part in making the future Maneuver Center of Excellence a reality.

He said the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, turns out 18,000 paratroopers, 725 Jumpmasters and more than 625 Pathfinders a year. Meanwhile, 30 percent of new Army officers are delivered by the brigade's commissioning source, he said.

Sellers also lauded the second lieutenants groomed here as Infantry platoon leaders.

"To knit this brigade together requires a thoughtful and agile commander," Barbero said. "No one understands that more than Terry Sellers."

Sellers was commissioned in the Infantry after graduating from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1985.

At the ceremony, he thanked several high-ranking Army officers, now retired, for being "mentors, role models and inspirations to me."

"There's no shortage of what you can accomplish if you don't care who gets the credit," Sellers said, aiming the comments at the young Soldiers on the field in particular.

He also said McCaffrey is "exactly the right warrior leader to lead this organization into the future."

The 199th Infantry Brigade's history dates to June 1921, when it was formed in the Organized Reserves and assigned to the 100th Division. The unit fought in World War II and went through numerous redesignations before being disbanded in April 1959.

It was reactivated in June 1966 at Fort Benning as the 199th Light Infantry Brigade, which adopted the motto, "Light, Swift and Accurate." During Vietnam, the brigade had four Medal of Honor and 15 Distinguished Service Cross recipients.

SPC Michael Engelsgjerd, an Infantryman from C Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, was named the U.S. Army Special Operations Command Soldier of the Year.

"It's an honor to have won," Engelsgjerd said. "The most difficult part was preparing for the competition."

The competitors faced a three-day challenge testing both their mental and physical capabilities. The event began with a physical fitness test, followed by rifle marksmanship qualification, and day and night land navigation courses. On the second day, the Soldiers' skills were tested with common tasks ranging from calling for indirect fire to treating a casualty on the battlefield. The final day of competition consisted of an oral board made up of each command sergeant major from the major subordinate units of USASOC.

"All of the competitors did outstanding jobs," said CSM Parry L. Baer, USASOC command sergeant major. "They represent the capabilities of the command and the Soldiers who are out there every day on the battlefield performing to make us successful. The interaction they have amongst themselves leads to the camaraderie within the organizations and across the command."

Eagle Tower challenge boosts troops' confidence

> — PFC Ryan McCann

Infantry recruits in their second week of one station unit training with C Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, reached new heights June 16 when they faced several challenges at the Eagle Tower confidence course.

The 60-foot tower tests each Soldier's physical strength, endurance and ability to overcome obstacles.

"This course teaches the troops to get over their fear and it builds their confidence," said CPT Erik Schefstad, company commander. "That's why we do it early in the cycle. If they overcome their fears now, they'll be better prepared for what's to come."

The tower consists of several rope climbs, a ladder climb and a rappel off the top of the tower.

But one of the biggest challenges Soldiers faced was taking the first step off the rappel tower, Schefstad said.

"Part of it is the fear of not knowing what's to come," he said. "It tests them mentally as well as physically."

PVT Jordan Rothermel, who is training to be an Infantryman with the Missouri National Guard, said he was afraid of heights and needed to build himself up mentally for the rappel.

"I don't know why heights bother me," he said. "My mom said when I was a baby if someone would hold me up high in the air I would cry."

Rothermel, who successfully completed the descent, said he focused on looking up, not down.

"This course is teaching me if anything seems difficult or challenging, to just push through it and complete the mission," he said.

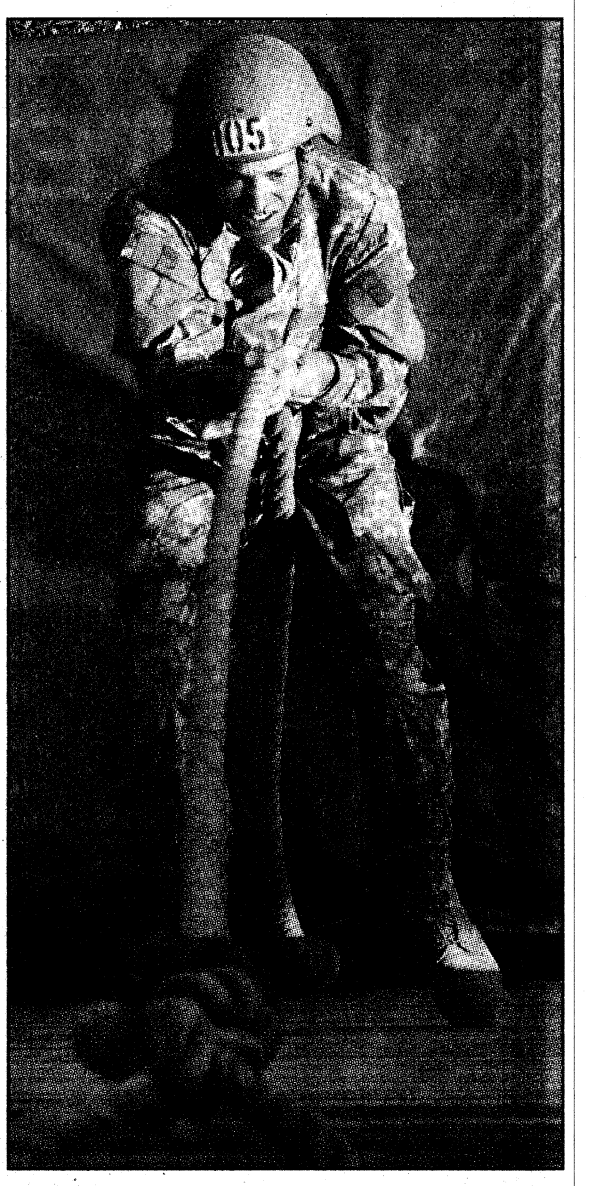
PFC Eric Teitloff said despite having rappelled before, he still finds the first step off the tower to be a difficult one.

"You've got to fall back and push off the tower. You have to believe the equipment won't fail," he said.

Teitloff said he looked forward to testing his skills on the rope climbs.

"As long as you keep your mind on it and go fast, it's pretty fun," he said.

PFC Ryan McCann, who will be assigned to the Minnesota National Guard upon graduation, said he felt the rope climb portion was great for building the "Soldier mentality."



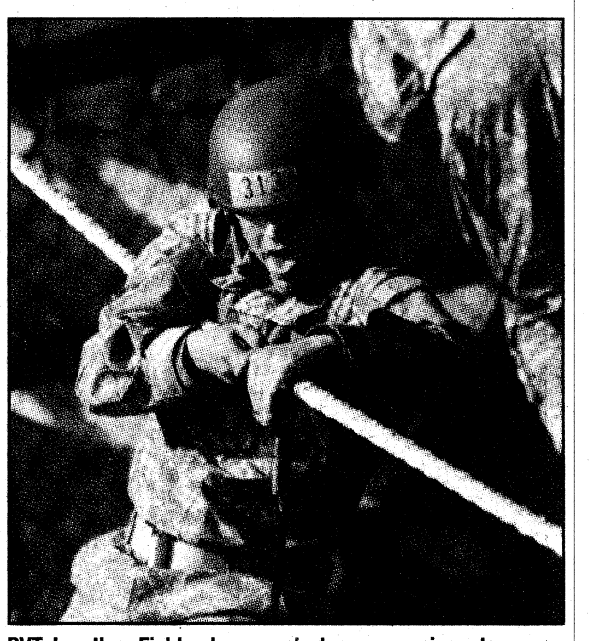
"You have to attack the course and find your own way of getting up the ropes. It helps you later on as a Soldier to conquer challenges," he said.

The tower teaches Soldiers to believe not only in their equipment but themselves, said 1SG Nestor Gomez, the company's first sergeant.

Gomez said the troops take a lot away from the various obstacles and confidence courses OSUT will put them through in the coming weeks.

"They will understand how much they can push themselves," he said.

Following six more weeks of training, the troops are set to graduate Aug. 6.



PVT Matthew Brown uses hand-over-hand to walk up the side of a wall approximately 30 feet tall.

SSG Andrew Rhinehart, a drill sergeant with C Company, monitors PV2 Aaron Hisek as he prepares to descend Eagle Tower's rappel wall June 16.

PV2 Ezequiel Alvarez and PVT Robert Morris observe as SFC Buford Grigley, a drill sergeant, supervises PVT James Harkey as he negotiates the cargo netting on the back side of Eagle Tower.

PVT Jonathan Fishbeck concentrates on crossing a two-rope bridge. The bridge consists of one rope to walk on and one rope located at chest level to balance.

Traffic to be rerouted for Harmony Church construction

Changes to take place July 8

Bridgett Siter
MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Traffic routes will be reconfigured next month on Harmony Church to make travel safer and more efficient in construction areas.

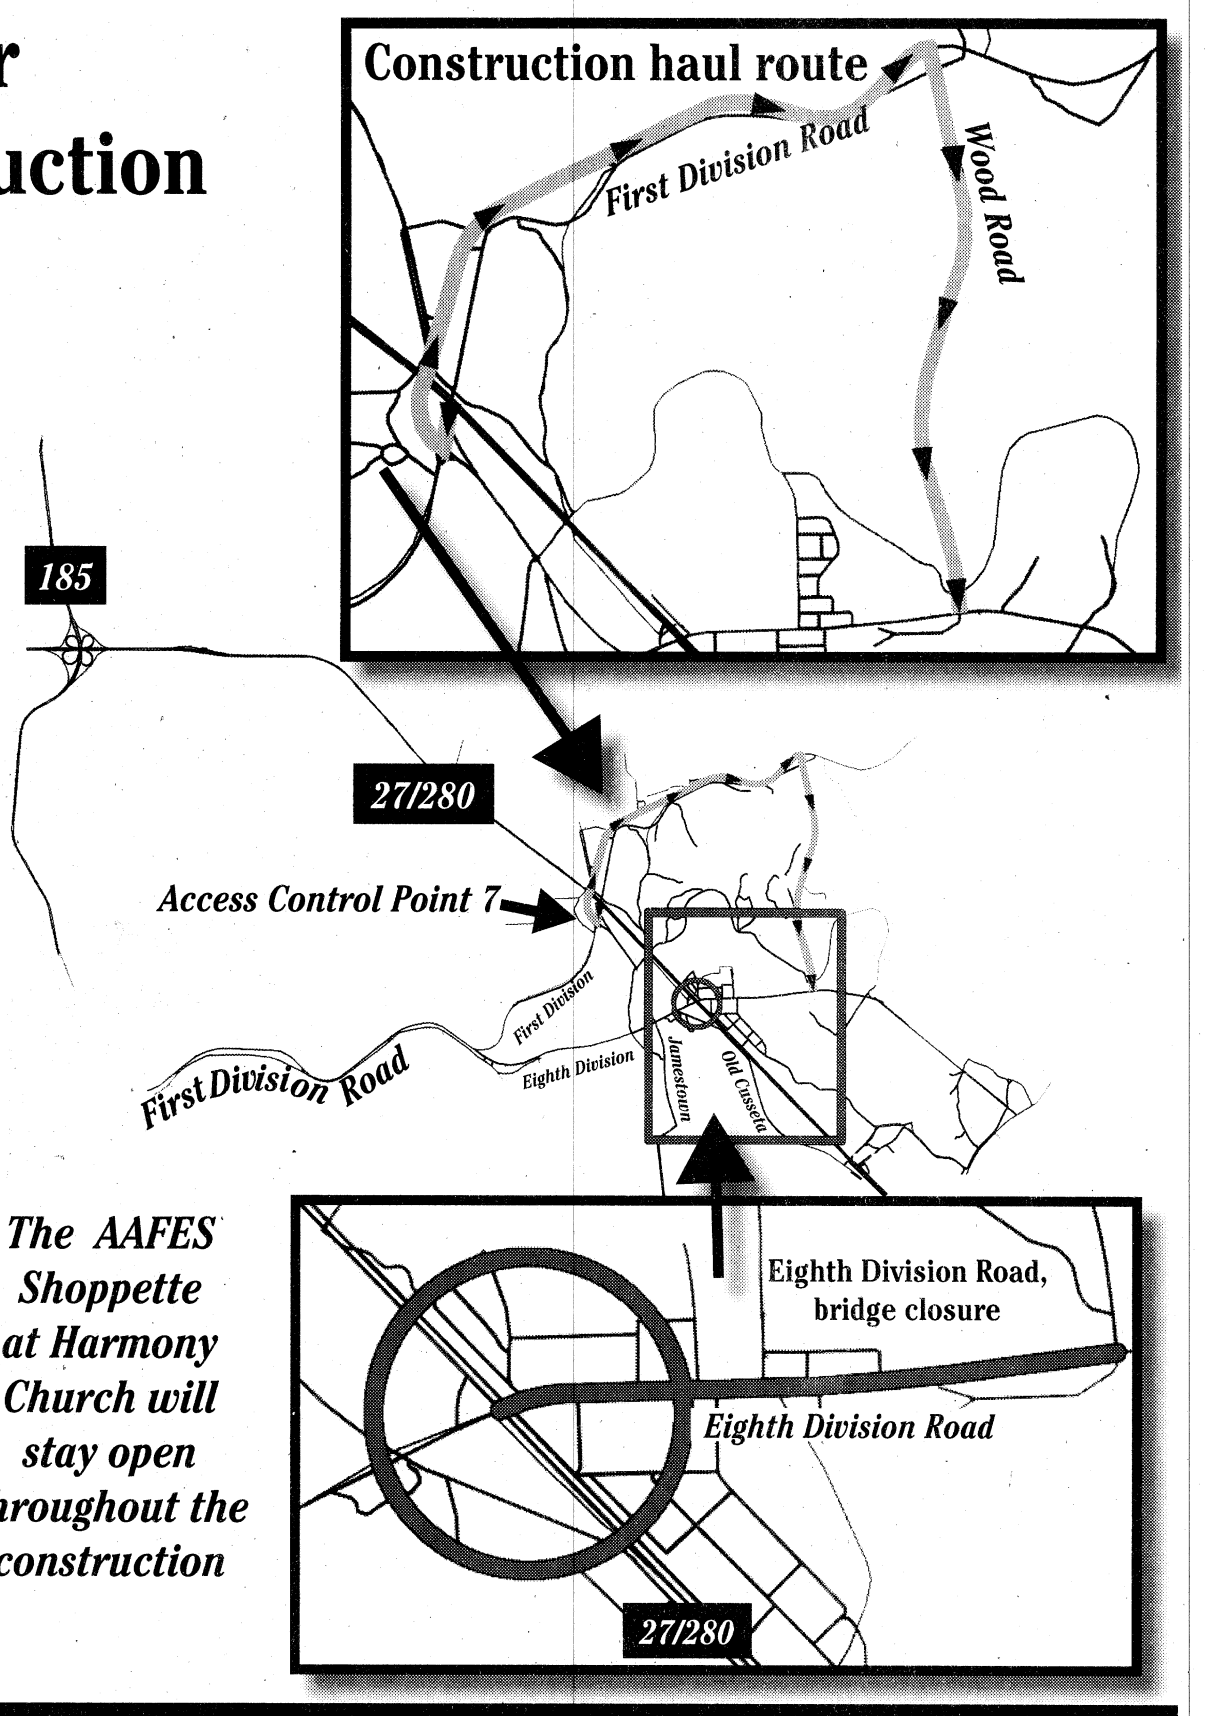
The temporary changes will also expedite massive construction efforts under way on the east side of the post, where most Armor training will take place when the Armor School moves here from Fort Knox, Ky.

When Soldiers and post employees return to work after the holiday weekend, they should anticipate congestion in that area.

The most notable change will be the closure of the section of Eighth Division Road that passes over Highway 27/280 and extends to Wood Road. That section of Eighth Division will be widened to four lanes.

During the closure, construction traffic will use a new "haul route" that circles the area undergoing the greatest buildup in the coming months, the area east of 27/280 and south of Sand Hill.

The haul route, which will be open to all motorists, starts at First Division Road where it crosses the highway and circles northeast to the intersection of Wood Road, then south to Eighth Division. Wood Road, which is not in good shape, will undergo repairs before the haul route opens.



The section of Eighth Division Road west of the highway to the intersection of Jamestown will also be widened, but it will not close.

Motorists should plan to use Jamestown Road whenever possible, instead of Old Cusseta, to access the Ranger Training Brigade, the Sniper School and other facilities south of Eighth Division and west of 27/280. Sections of Old Cusseta will be closed at various times.

When Eighth Division reopens in about 10 months, most of the new facilities adjacent to that section will be near completion. But that was not the primary concern driving the decision to reroute traffic, said Doug Greenway, of the post's Strategic Planning Office.

"It's all about safety. We're just being proactive," Greenway said. "Anything else — if it's more convenient or speeds up the construction process — that's a bonus. The decision was driven by safety concerns first and foremost."

Chaplains take fresh approach to trauma treatment

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Army chaplains and civilian interns from the Chaplain Family Life Center recently took a different look at trauma treatment.

Practicing a method called Eye Movement Desensitization and Reprocessing, the group of 19 participated in exercises that employ sets of eye and finger movements to produce snapshots of submerged memories for the purpose of helping patients overcome significant issues in their lives. The training took place June 1-3 at the Follow Me Chapel.

Counselors said it's a way of dealing with any traumatic event — from combat and post-traumatic stress disorder to a vehicle accident, assault, rape or incident of abuse.

Chaplain (LTC) Jeff Voyles, director of the Chaplain Family Life Training Program, said EMDR is designed to replicate the same benefits that come from REM sleep and psychotherapists don't have to prod very deep.

"When it works, it works well and quick, compared to other models," he said. "And you don't have to get into the gory details ... The brain does the healing. The concept is so simplistic, it's hard to believe it works."

Voyles said he was unaware of any past EMDR training for clinicians being offered at Fort Benning.

"It's not hypnosis," Voyles said. "You're always in control."

Using hand and finger movements from right to left, therapists ask patients for a mental image of the bad memory and then guide them along a path that connects the trauma's central theme by repeatedly asking, "What do you get now?"

Program experts said the memories are processed until a more positive picture emerges.

After therapy, clients generally report that emotional distress related to the memory has been eliminated or significantly decreased, and they have gained important, positive insights, changes in recollections or new associations, according to the EMDR Institute's Web site.

A.J. Popky, a private clinician from Southern California, was one of two psychotherapists who served as volunteer trainers.

In the late 1980s, he helped EMDR founder Francine Shapiro form the institute in Watsonville, Calif.

Popky said the EMDR Humanitarian Assistance Program trains counselors to deal with troop and family problems linked to multiple deployments. Psychological scars emerging from the global war on terror will take decades to defeat, he said.

"It works a lot faster than talk therapy," Popky said. "There are not enough therapists who are experienced enough in handling this type of trauma."

E.C. Hurley, a licensed psychotherapist and retired Army chaplain who specializes in combat trauma and has a private practice near Fort Campbell, Ky., said EMDR is ideal for treating PTSD, combat-related depression and can ease symptoms of so-called "phantom pain" associated with loss of limbs.

The therapy causes "bilateral stimulation" by engaging both brain hemispheres simultaneously, he said.

"A person is able to recall the bad memory and have it reprocessed to a healthy resolution," Hurley said.

Hurley has led other EMDR training sessions at Army posts around the country and will go to Germany this summer. He said chaplains are on the "front line" in the fight against combat trauma.

"They play such a critical role in recognizing the needs of Soldiers and reaching out to them in their time of need," he said.

Chaplain (MAJ) Matthew Gibson said EMDR is needed in the U.S. military.

"We can use this to help people access those target memories quickly, and be able to deal with their trauma in a more efficient manner," he said.

Chaplain (MAJ) Buddy Hammil has been counseling Soldiers for a decade but said he's never encountered a program this unique.

"There are some promising things about it," he said. "One of the things I like is it's a system that takes advantage of the body's ability to heal itself. We help stimulate the process. It's a simple procedure in a safe environment."

Voyles praised EMDR's effectiveness but said he's realistic about its potential.

"Like with any model of therapy, there are skeptics and worshippers," Voyles said. "Is it a miracle cure for the ages? Probably not. Has it helped some people? Definitely."

WHINSEC hosts US/LATAM Cadet Leadership Course

Lee A. Rials
WHINSEC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

What do U.S. ROTC cadets gain by training with Colombian cadets?

A tremendous head start on their careers, said CPT Brad Miller, Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation Cadet Leadership Course director.

The training gives the cadets a critical skill — how to work with partner nations, Miller said. In today's environment many operational requirements fall upon the collective shoulders of coalitions rather than single nations alone.

The course, with 20 cadets from 19 U.S. universities, 40 Colombian military cadets and five Colombian police lieutenants, graduates today.

All instruction is in Spanish, so cadets are immersed in the language.

"A company with Colombians and Americans standing side by side creates an interesting dynamic; language immersion for cadets from both countries and a melding of cultures that can't be compared," said Cadet Donald Penner, a junior at the University of Colorado.

In today's military forces, knowing other cultures and languages is important, said the secretary of defense during a speech to the Association of American Universities.

Although only two nations are represented in the class, the institute has instructors and students from 20 or more different nations on campus.

"The integration of U.S. cadets in this Cadet Professional Development is a watershed event for WHINSEC as well as a significant experience for these future lieutenants," Miller said. "This provides the Army with future officers who will better grasp the Institute's pivotal role as a forum of joint training and education."

The course allows U.S. cadets to focus on language awareness by training them along with international cadets, said Brazilian MSG Jose Nilson da Silva, one of the instructors. And cadets learn to recognize the importance of having healthy relationships among nations, so that when a conflict emerges, they have the ability to solve it through resolution strategies, he said.

"These cadets learn Human Rights in LDR-1 to better accomplish their missions without compromising the rights of civilians or those whom they vow to protect and defend," da Silva said.

"WHINSEC has provided a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to live and train with future officers of another country," said Cadet Jeremy Conway, a junior at Azusa Pacific University in Azusa, Calif. "Knowing that I can travel to another country and have someone waiting to welcome me to their home is priceless."

"The most powerful metric by which to gauge the success of this integration may not be entirely visible for another 20 to 30 years," Miller said.

"The friendships forged today will hopefully mature into lasting personal or professional relationships indicative of the strong ties shared between the United States and Colombia."

New CG: 'Thrilled to return'

TRADOC for the progress.

Ferriter credited Barbero with helping him throughout his career, but said this (assignment) was the best yet.

"A few weeks ago, Mike called a few times and asked if I knew what my next job would be," Ferriter said. "Each time I would tell him I am not sure. And he just kept saying, 'Don't worry.' And then he would say, 'Follow me.' Now I know what he meant by follow me."

Ferriter said while some things may change, Fort Benning will continue to support an Army at war, prepare for the future through training, leader and combat development and enhance the quality of life for Soldiers and families under his command.

"Margie and I are thrilled to return to Fort Benning," he said. "We will embrace each day and commit ourselves to provide the best leadership we can."

Barbero assumed command of USAIC in November. The president nominated Barbero for promotion to lieutenant general. Barbero's next assignment takes him to Iraq where he will command the Multi-National Security Transition Command-Iraq, NATO Training Mission-Iraq, U.S. Central Command.

"Over the last eight months, Mike's passion for Soldiers, his seasoned judgment and his combat experience has guided the Infantry Center and contributed to the development of those warriors, who are even today, walking point for our nation in Iraq and Afghanistan," Dempsey said. "As the commanding general of Fort Benning, he was your champion for the support of Soldiers, families and this great community."

"I leave here a better leader and Soldier," Barbero said. "Having received more than I have given, enriched in so many ways. It has been my highest honor to have served with you," Barbero said.

Museum: Tribute to Infantrymen

Infantrymen, a marksmanship simulator and halls of honor for Rangers and officer candidates. Next to the museum and part of the 200-acre Patriot Park is World War II Street, which includes a chapel, barracks, the headquarters of GEN George S. Patton and other original 1940s buildings.

The museum will draw around 400,000 visitors annually to the tricommunity, according to an economic impact study conducted by the Columbus State University School of Business.

"It's a tribute to all who have served as Infantrymen," said keynote speaker GEN(R) Colin Powell, former secretary of state and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "It's a wonderful facility because you get some sense of what battle is all about."

Visitors can get a "sense" of battle in the realistic walk-through of America's conflicts during the Infantry's 234-year history. In the Vietnam portion of the Cold War gallery, the floor rumbles at the sound of explosions and the temperature and humidity mimic the jungles of Vietnam. Visitors can look through a periscope at "no man's land" from a boardwalk trench in the World War I exhibit. In World War II Street, located outside the museum, the scent of cherry pie wafts through the mess hall. For the museum's signature exhibit, the Last 100 Yards, lifelike figures modeled after Fort Benning Soldiers, depict Infantrymen from the Revolutionary War to Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"This place makes a hero of the Infantry itself — the legions of anonymous patriots whom history does not record but whose service and sacrifice was crucial to the success of our country," Powell said. "Indeed, no war in all of history in any land has been won without an infantry ... Planes fly away, ships sail away, our brothers in the army are nearby, but to take and hold land and to dare anyone to try to take it away from us is our core mission. Our weapon is the rifle. We go the last 100 yards."

As an Infantryman himself, Powell said he learned his most important lessons, including trust and leadership, at "the Benning school for boys."

"This was our first Army home," he said. "Benning molded me ... and made me a professional Infantryman as it has done for hundreds of thousands of others over the years. People often asked me after I became chairman or Secretary of State, 'Where did you learn about leadership? Was it in graduate school? Was it at the war college?' and the answer is always the same: 'No, it was at Fort Benning.'"

The museum that now stands just outside the gates of the Home of the Infantry is "much more than a mere memorial," Powell said, for its depiction of the Soldier's story from the point of view of the Soldier.

"Insofar as the National Infantry Museum serves as a reminder and a salute to the millions of men and women who have worn the military uniform on behalf of this country, it is a welcome and much needed addition to America's commemorative institutions," he said. "You're not just reading about these places and these wars. ... You are seeing history living itself out, history in action. But more importantly, a place like this puts the individual Soldier into the history book. It's all about the Soldier, the one man with the rifle."

WWII Street: View history

In each building, visitors are greeted by audio recordings of conversations and sounds they might have heard during World War II. In the mess hall, an NCO argues with a mess sergeant about coffee, and in the Headquarters Building, which served as the headquarters of the 2nd Armored Division after its 1940 activation, an officer gives orders.

Picnic-style wood tables in the mess hall are arranged in rows much as they would have been during World War II, and a metal bar outside the building represents where Soldiers would have been required to do pull-ups.

The barracks building, which served as a temporary home for up to 74 Soldiers during World War II, has weapons, canteens, shovels, knives and other gear issued to Soldiers. Behind rows of beds, Soldiers' uniforms are folded over clothes hangers.

Next to the barracks, the Regimental Chapel houses a miniature model of a little-known Benning landmark that no longer exists. The St. Hubert Shrine was built secretly during the 1920s by PVT Paul Stadnik to give thanks to God for his recovery from an illness. According to a plaque in the chapel, Stadnik sneaked off after normal duty hours to construct the shrine in woods north of what is now 10th Division Road. But, by World War II, the shrine was crumbling because of erosion, and today, only scraps of wood and tin mark its site.

Fans of GEN George S. Patton won't want to miss his sleeping quarters, located near the World War II Street entrance. Formerly Building 3072 in the Sand Hill area, the quarters were not constructed from the 700 series, and no drawings for its construction exist. According the plaque outside the building, Patton used it as a quiet resting place when his operations were running a 24-hour schedule.

If tanks and weapons are more your style, visit the M4A2 Sherman Medium Tank and the M3A1 Stuart Light Tank next to the sleeping quarters. Both tanks were used during World War II, and the M4 series was the most widely produced and used by the Allied forces.

World War II Street is open for tour groups by appointment. For hours, appointments or more information, call 706-545-2958 or visit www.nationalinfantrymuseum.com.

Sergeant Audie Murphy Club inducts new members

Vice chief of staff presents awards

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning honored some of its finest when six NCOs were inducted into the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club during a ceremony at Ridgway Hall June 18.

GEN Peter W. Chiarelli, vice chief of staff of the Army, who was visiting Fort Benning, presented the membership medallions.

"NCOs are what make our Army different from every other army in the world," Chiarelli said. "They are the heart and soul of the Unites States Army. And when you get to see the ones I've seen here today training young recruits and making them Soldiers, it's a wonderful thing. It is truly an honor to be able to present these great NCOs with something they have justly deserved."

The club, which inducts new members each quarter, recognizes NCOs in the ranks of corporal, sergeant, staff sergeant and sergeant first class who show exceptional leadership. Audie Murphy, the club's namesake and Medal of Honor recipient, was the most decorated combat Soldier of World War II.

To be eligible for membership, Soldiers must score 90 or above in each event of the Army physical fitness test, and have letters of recommendation from their first sergeant, battalion sergeant major and brigade sergeant major. Once candidates are recommended by their chain of command, they appear before a board of sergeants major who evaluate their knowledge of Soldier skills and issues. If the board votes unanimously in favor of the candidate, he or she is inducted.

On average, only half of the NCOs who apply for membership each quarter are inducted, said SFC Namu Keys, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, president of the Fort Benning chapter of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club.

"They have to be high caliber," he said.

Club members must be able to deal with any and all issues that may come up with one of their Soldiers, Keys said.

"As a leader, they should know the answer, or know where to go to find the answer," he said.

One of the club's main activities is community service, Keys said. Club members pick up trash along Fort Benning's roads, conduct food drives for Damascus Way, a shelter for women and children, and collect toys for Santa's Castle, which provides Christmas gifts to military children.

Giving to the community outside of the Army is a greater part of what Soldiers should do, and a way for NCOs to set an example by following in the footsteps of Audie Murphy, who was involved in community service, Keys said.

SFC Erick Figueroa, a drill sergeant with D Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, said he wanted to apply for the club since 2006, but was unable because of deployments to Iraq. Figueroa, who has served nearly 12 years in the Army, said while he enjoys all aspects of his job, the best part is shaping young Soldiers.

"When the Soldiers go out (to their units), I like it when I get calls back saying 'Did you train this guy? Thanks,'" he said. "I want the Soldiers to go out there and be able to say 'My drill sergeant was Figueroa and he set the standard.'"

Figueroa said he and all the drill sergeants in his company push themselves and their Soldiers to achieve to the best of their abilities.

"On the PT test, I tell them that 80 push-ups, 80 sit-ups and 13 minutes on the run is the standard — but that's really the maximum," he said. "They might not achieve the maximum, but if you push for perfection, you're going to go above the standard."

Keys said Chiarelli's presence made the induction especially memorable.

"It made an impression on not just the NCOs who were inducted, but also their Soldiers and other leaders who were there," he said. "(The leadership) had the foresight to put these Soldiers out there as the best Fort Benning has to offer.

"When I do events like this one, and the young Soldiers see I'm being introduced to the vice chief of staff as the leader of the club here, I want them to see that they, too, can have their career go in this direction."

Vice chief of staff visits, re-enlists 3 Benning Soldiers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When three Fort Benning Soldiers decided to re-enlist, they took their oaths from someone they didn't expect — GEN Peter W. Chiarelli, vice chief of staff of the Army.

"It was really a shock," said SGT Robert Roeseler, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment.

"I just found out about it two days prior. He's one of the first generals I've ever been around, so it was a little nerve wracking, but when he started talking to us, I relaxed. He was really calm."

Chiaralli administered the oath of re-enlistment to Roeseler, SGT Christopher Shore, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, and SSG Jamie Thomas, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 198th Infantry Brigade, June 18 at Ridgway Hall. The Soldiers volunteered to participate in the ceremony with Chiarelli and were selected by their respective chains of command.

"To come down here and see what you're doing in training and leading young Soldiers is truly a very important thing for me," Chiarelli said. "It brings life into my time at the Pentagon.

"It's a tremendous honor for me to be here. I thank you for your leadership, I thank you for your support of the U.S. Army, your service to the U.S. Army and your service to the nation."

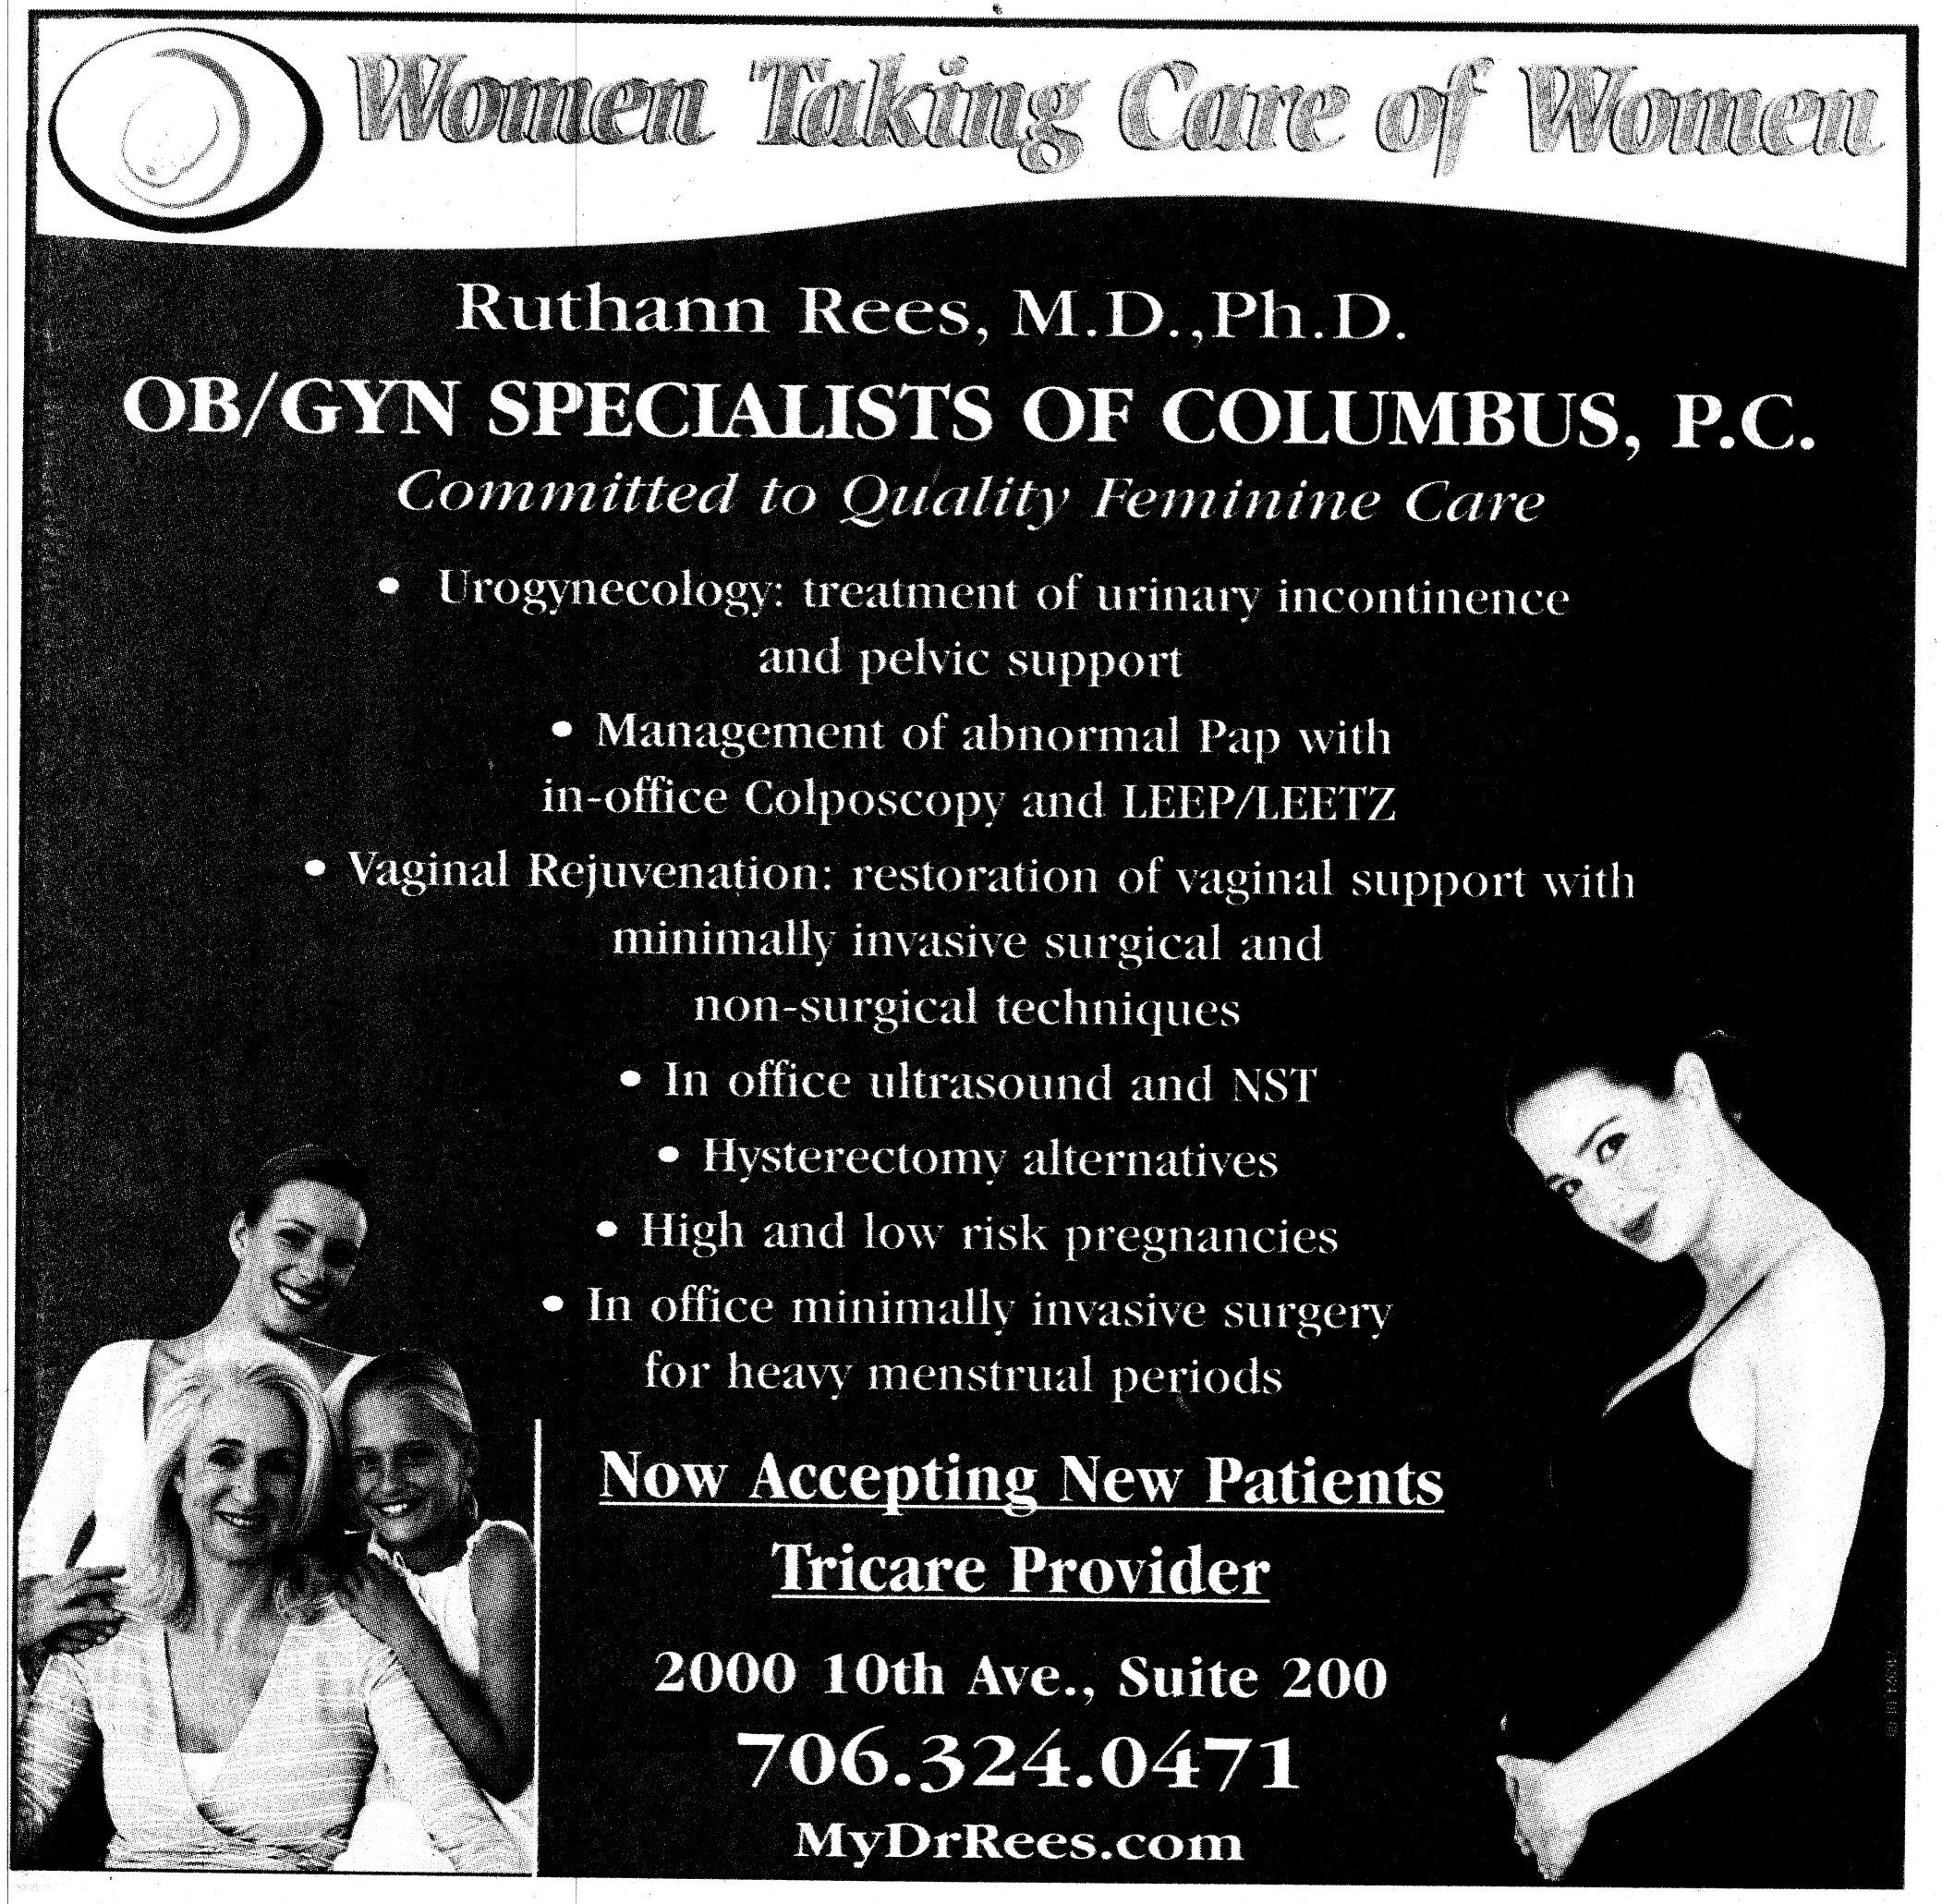
During his daylong visit to Fort Benning, Chiarelli received an update on the progress of the Maneuver Center of Excellence, met with students in the Maneuver Captains Career Course, presented NCOs with Sergeant Audie Murphy Club medallions, and observed basic trainees in live fire and urban operations training.

"What impressed me most was the young Soldiers," he said. "I got to go out and see some in their sixth and ninth week (of training), and it was absolutely amazing to talk to them about the training experiences they've had. I was totally impressed with them, with their drill sergeants and with their first sergeants."

Speaking to the crowd at Ridgway Hall, Chiarelli emphasized the importance of eliminating the stigma associated with post-traumatic stress disorder, an issue he has championed.

"We've got to make sure the people who need help get the help they need," he said. "I think a lot of folks today think folks who have problems are a little bit weaker — that is not the case. I ask each and every one of you to do everything you can to get those (Soldiers) the help they need. And if it's one of you, that you get the help you need, because we need you in the fight."

Shore, who has served five years in the Army, said the re-enlistment ceremony was a unique experience.



"It's not every day you get to be re-enlisted by a four-star general," he said. "I'll remember it for a long time."

Thomas, who works in human resources, has served for 17 years. The oath of re-enlistment she took from Chiarelli is her last, she said.

"It was an honor to re-enlist," she said. "There are so many ways I can make a difference (through my job). I take care of Soldiers from the time they come into the military until they retire. I help them with their family issues, their finances, and medical issues. When they walk away from my desk I want them to say, 'She helped me.'"

Chiarelli said NCOs such as Roeseler, Shore and Thomas are the future of the Army because of their valuable leadership experience.

"When you invest in a young man or woman like the three I got to re-enlist today, and they decide to stay, there's nothing more important for our Army than keeping that kind of experience in its ranks," Chiarelli said.

Shaq to Cavs?

The Cleveland Cavaliers and Phoenix Suns have come to an agreement on a blockbuster trade that sends Shaquille O'Neal to Cleveland to team with LeBron James, according to ESPN.

The deal was agreed to in principle Wednesday and finalized Thursday prior to the NBA draft.

Cleveland will send Ben Wallace and Sasha Pavlovic to Phoenix for the future Hall of Famer.

The Suns will also receive the 46th pick in the NBA draft and $500,000.

Iowa prep coach killed on campus

Ed Thomas, who produced four NFL linemen as the football coach at tiny Aplington-Parkersburg High in Iowa, was shot and killed Wednesday inside the school's weight room.

The gunman, identified by authorities as 24-year-old Mark Becker, is a former student who played football for Thomas.

Thomas, the 2005 NFL High School Football Coach of the Year, was airlifted to Covenant Medical Center in Waterloo, where he died, his family said in a statement. He was 58.

Miracle on grass

The U.S. soccer team is in the final of the Confederations Cup after beating Spain 2-0.

Jozy Altidore and Clint Dempsey scored the two goals for the U.S. as the team became the first to defeat Spain since Romania in November 2006.

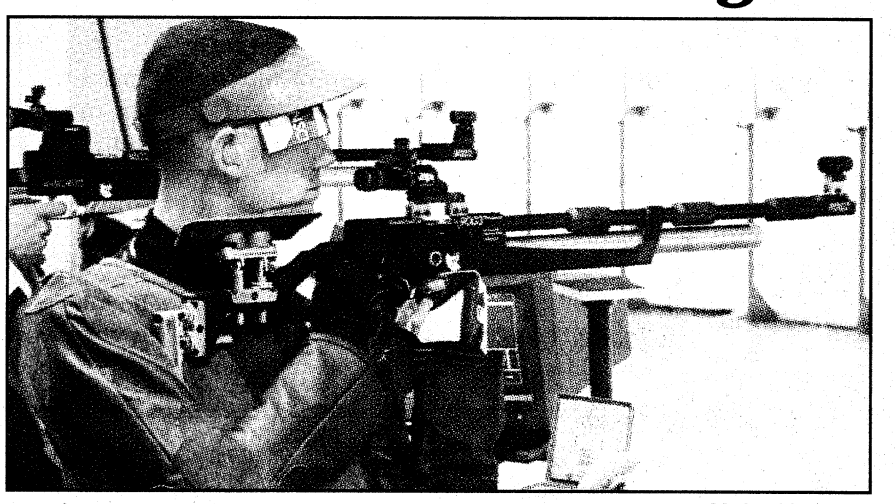
The U.S., on the verge of elimination, shocked Spain Wednesday in an upset of the world's top-ranked team.

By winning, the U.S. advanced to its first men's FIFA final since starting play in 1916.

It may not be the World Cup, but it is being likened to the U.S. hockey team's upset of the Soviet Union at the 1980 Olympics in Lake Placid.

Kahne get win, finally

Kasey Kahne returned team co-owner Richard Petty and Richard Petty Motorsports to victory lane for the first time in over a decade at Infineon Raceway Sunday.



Kahne won for the first time in 2009, snapping a 37-race winless streak. He last won at Pocono a year ago.

It is the first win for a Petty-owned car since John Andretti's victory at Martinsville in April 1999.

The next NASCAR Sprint Cup Series race is at New Hampshire Motor Speedway Sunday.

The race will be televised on TNT beginning at 2 p.m.

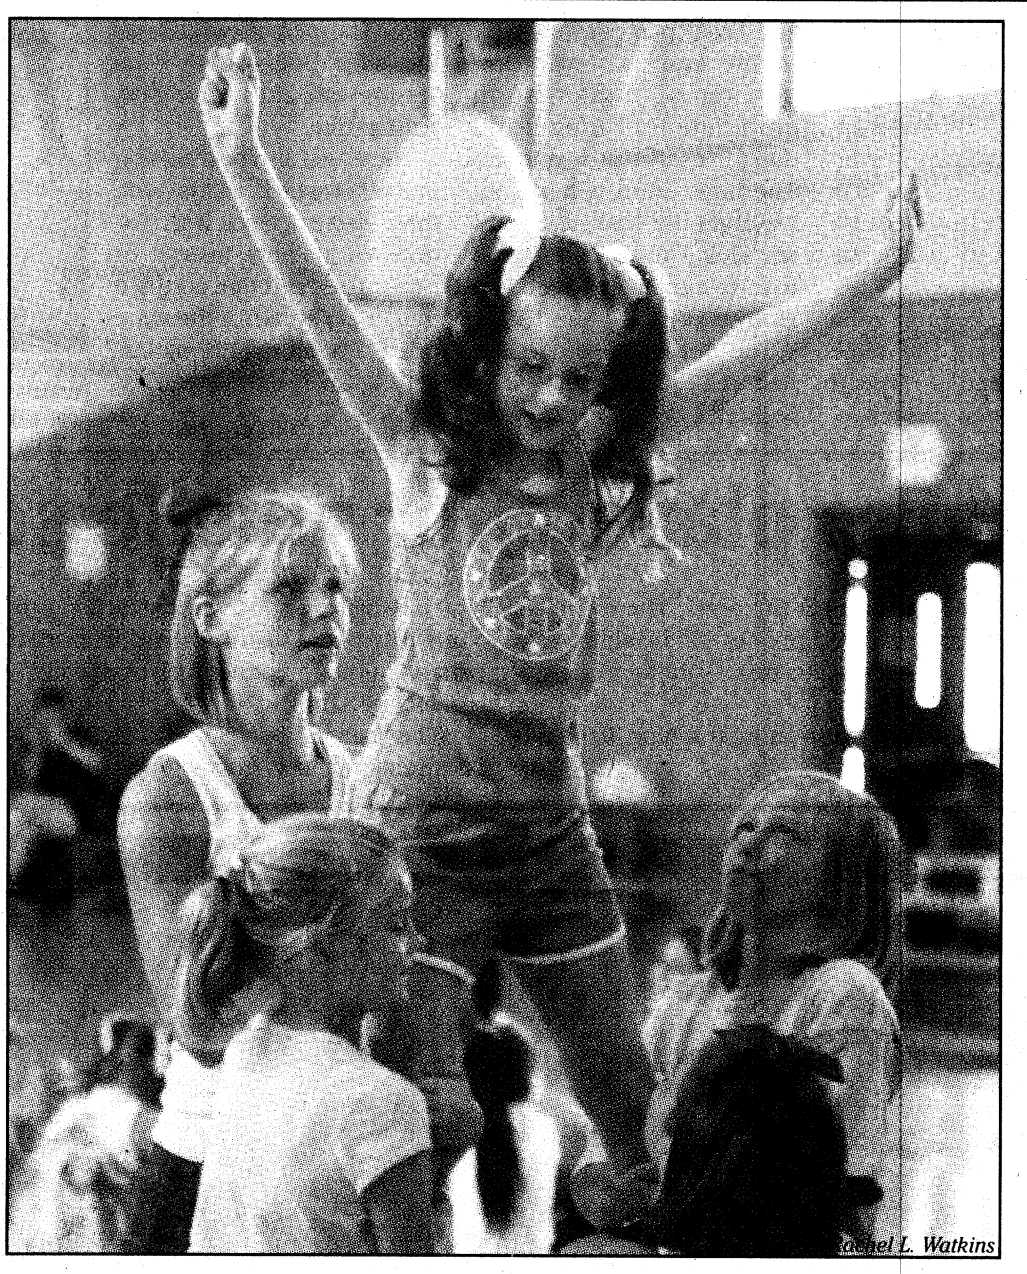
Soldiers with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit stood tall during the U.S. Shooting National Rifle and Pistol Championships June 13-20, collectively winning six gold medals during the weeklong event.

International Pistol team member SFC Daryl Szarenski took home two golds, winning the 10-meter air pistol event with a score of 1248.1 and the 50-meter free pistol event with a score of 1194.3.



Szarenski's teammate, SFC Thomas Rose, compiled more hardware for his trophy case.

Rose won the gold medal in the 25-meter center fire event with a score of 1170 and gold at the 25-meter standard fire event with a score of 1129.

Rose finished behind Szarenski in the men's 10-meter air pistol to add a silver medal to his collection.

In the International Rifle competition, USAMU dominated. In the Men's 50-meter three-position event, SFC Jason Parker won first place with a score of 2440.2. He was followed by teammates

Cheerleaders learn 'basics'

Children attend cheerleading camp

"I said a boom chick a boom!" yelled 15 cheerleaders, ages 5 to 10, who attended a weeklong cheerleading camp that started Monday at the Child, Youth & School Services gym.

Hardaway High School cheerleaders and coaches led the camp, which included instruction in cartwheels, stunts, dances and cheers.

"The focus of the camp is to teach the kids the basics of cheerleading," said Mary Pirkle, Hardaway High School assistant cheerleading coach. "Some of these girls are new to cheerleading, so I hope by the end of the camp, they learn a little bit about cheerleading and get excited about it."

Her advice to cheerleaders who are new and want to start cheerleading — practice hard and never give up, she said.

Eight-year-old Samantha Blocker was new to cheering.

Smith Fitness Center offers boot camps

Rachel L. Watkins,
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning families don't have to join the Army to attend boot camp. Smith Fitness Center now offers monthlong boot camp sessions. The next session begins July 7.

Boot camps are popular, said certified personal fitness trainer and boot camp instructor Eric Dempsey, of Smith Fitness Center.

"Everywhere you go, there is a boot camp. We are trying to stay on the cutting edge," he said.

Campers meet from 9:15 to 10:15 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday and do calisthenics, body weight drills, sprinting and resistance training using tools such as medicine balls, a sand log and resistance bands.

The camp also includes nutrition and cardio plans for the days participants aren't in class.

The name 'boot camp' shouldn't intimidate anyone, Dempsey said.

"Some people have a misconception that they have to be in super shape to attend boot camp," he said. "This camp is for all fitness levels. We want the clients to give

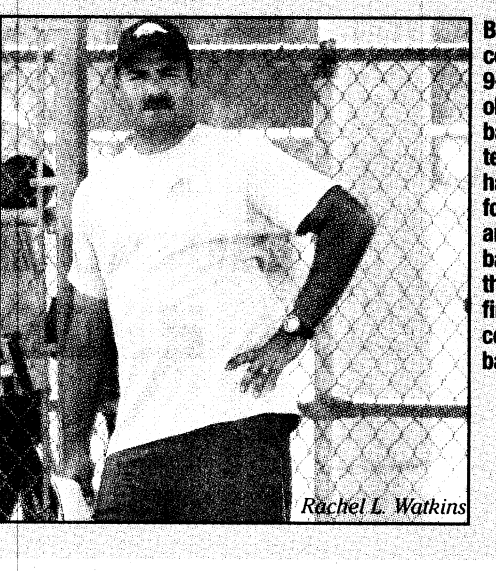
COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach emphasizes 'best effort'

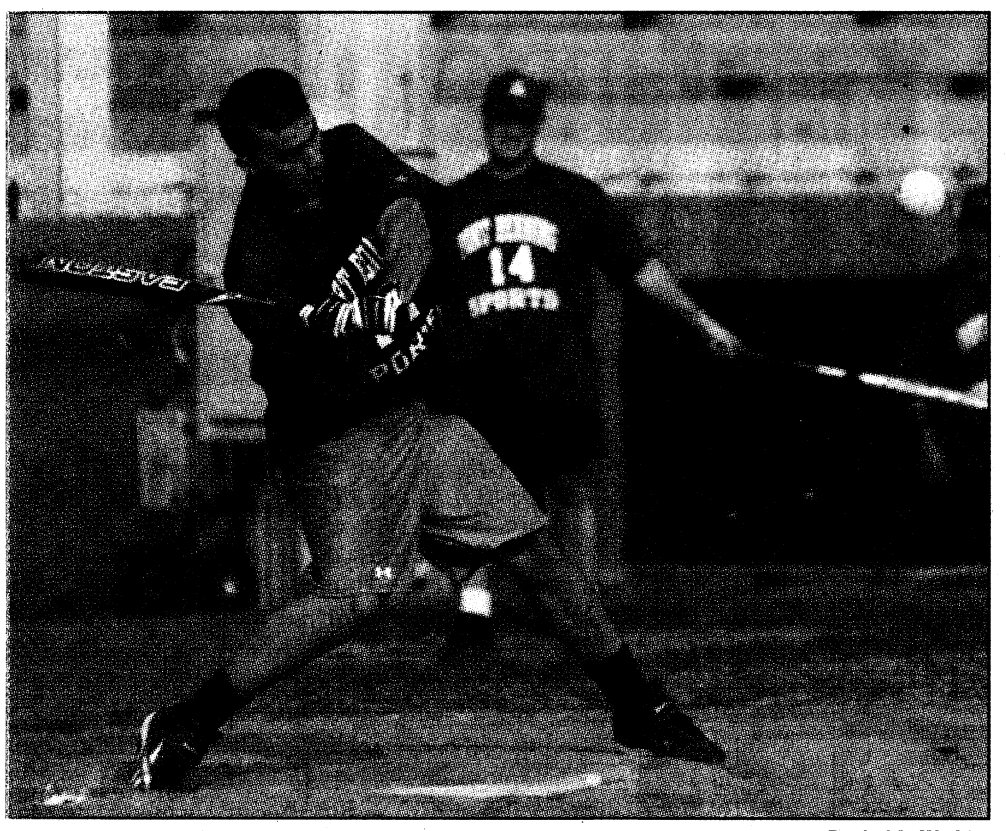
Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Burley Watkins coaches the 9- to 11-year-old Jaguars baseball team on post and the one thing he expects from his players is their best effort on the field.



"If my players go out there and try the best they can, I'm happy," he said.

Watkins coached 9- to 11-year-old football when he was stationed in Germany and has played recreational and college baseball. He is taking a break from playing baseball because of an injury, he said. In his first season coaching baseball, Watkins said he relies on the players making decisions during games, rather than try to coach on game day.



"I try not to coach too much at the game," he said. "If I keep telling the players what to do and how to play during a game, it might affect them negatively. I just let them play the game."

His focus — teaching the fundamentals of baseball and preparing them for the next level.

Rangers tame Dirty Birds with 12-2 intramural win

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Rangers from the 75th Ranger Regiment defeated the Dirty Birds from 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, 12-2, in intramural softball Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

Both teams went scoreless in the first two innings.

After a 15-minute lightning delay, the Rangers took control in the top of the third inning, scoring on infield errors and an RBI single by Kirk Parker to lead 3-0. Victor Ballesteros pitched a three-up, three-down, bottom half of the inning to keep the Birds scoreless.

In the top of the fourth, the Rangers scored three runs on an outfield error, an RBI double by Robert Sciandra and an RBI single by Kirk Woody. Dirty Bird Jackie Jenkins hit a single and stole second and third base in the bottom of the fourth inning, but Ballesteros struck out the remainder of the Dirty Birds to keep the Rangers ahead, 6-0.

The Dirty Birds held the Rangers to one run in the top of the fifth, while scoring two runs in the bottom of the inning. The Rangers didn't let up, scoring five runs on errors in the final inning to seal the win, 12-2.

"We played pretty well," Rangers coach Kirk Parker said. "We didn't have as many errors as the other team, and I think that had a direct impact on the win. Our bats started off pretty slowly, but we turned it around."

Ranger Tony Rivera said both teams fought hard.

"We had some good batting and defense," he said. "Playing the fundamentals of softball is what won us the game."

At press time, the Rangers are 2-1.

100 percent. It doesn't matter if it's one push up or a thousand, as long as that's their best, that's all that matters."

Another fear people have about boot camp is that they will get yelled at, said certified personal fitness trainer and camp instructor Gretchen Timmons.

"There is no yelling at the boot camp. The camp is about encouraging, challenging and motivating clients and keeping them accountable," she said.

The end goal for campers: a lifestyle change, Dempsey said.

Alisha Schultze, who finished a session Thursday, went to boot camp because she wanted to challenge herself.

"I got in the comfort zone and I was doing the same kind of workouts — weight training and step classes — and I eventually plateaued," said Schultze, who lost three-and-a-half percent body fat in the first two weeks of boot camp. "Workouts can get a little bit boring if you don't challenge yourself. The boot camp is hard, but I wanted the challenge and I am seeing results. It's good to have a trainer to keep you motivated."

The session, open to the first 12 participants who register, costs $120 per person. The price is $60 for those who get a friend to join. The person who loses the most body fat in each session can attend the next session free.

There will also be a session in the fall which will include three classes a week with two certified trainers instead of two classes and one certified trainer per week for the same price. For more information, e-mail Lori.Smith6@us.army.mil.

Watkins: Prepares players for middle school level

"They should have a sturdy foundation of the fundamentals and know how to play their positions," he said.

"Some kids will be heading to middle school baseball and that'll be more competitive than this level. There will be a bigger field and players will be able to steal bases so I want to make sure they are ready for that."

Baseball is also about teaching life lessons, Watkins said.

"Baseball is a good way to teach kids what integrity is and that they have to work hard for what they want not only on the field but in life, too," he said.

The Jaguars' last game of the season is Saturday at the Youth Sports Complex. Watkins said by then, he hopes the children will take good memories with them and most of all, have a solid knowledge of the fundamentals and how to play their positions.

Lakers fans far from angelic

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Los Angeles is called the "City of Angels," but the fans of L.A. showed why the nickname does not apply to everyone in the city.

Following the Lakers' Game 5, championship-clinching win over the Orlando Magic in the National Basketball Association finals, fans took to the streets to celebrate the team's 15th NBA title.

In the aftermath of the victory, pandemonium erupted. Bonfires burned in the streets, police cars and buses were vandalized and five police officers had to be taken to the hospital with minor injuries — so much for the "City of Angels" nickname.

It is true, the word "fan" is short for "fanatic," but there has to be a line drawn somewhere.

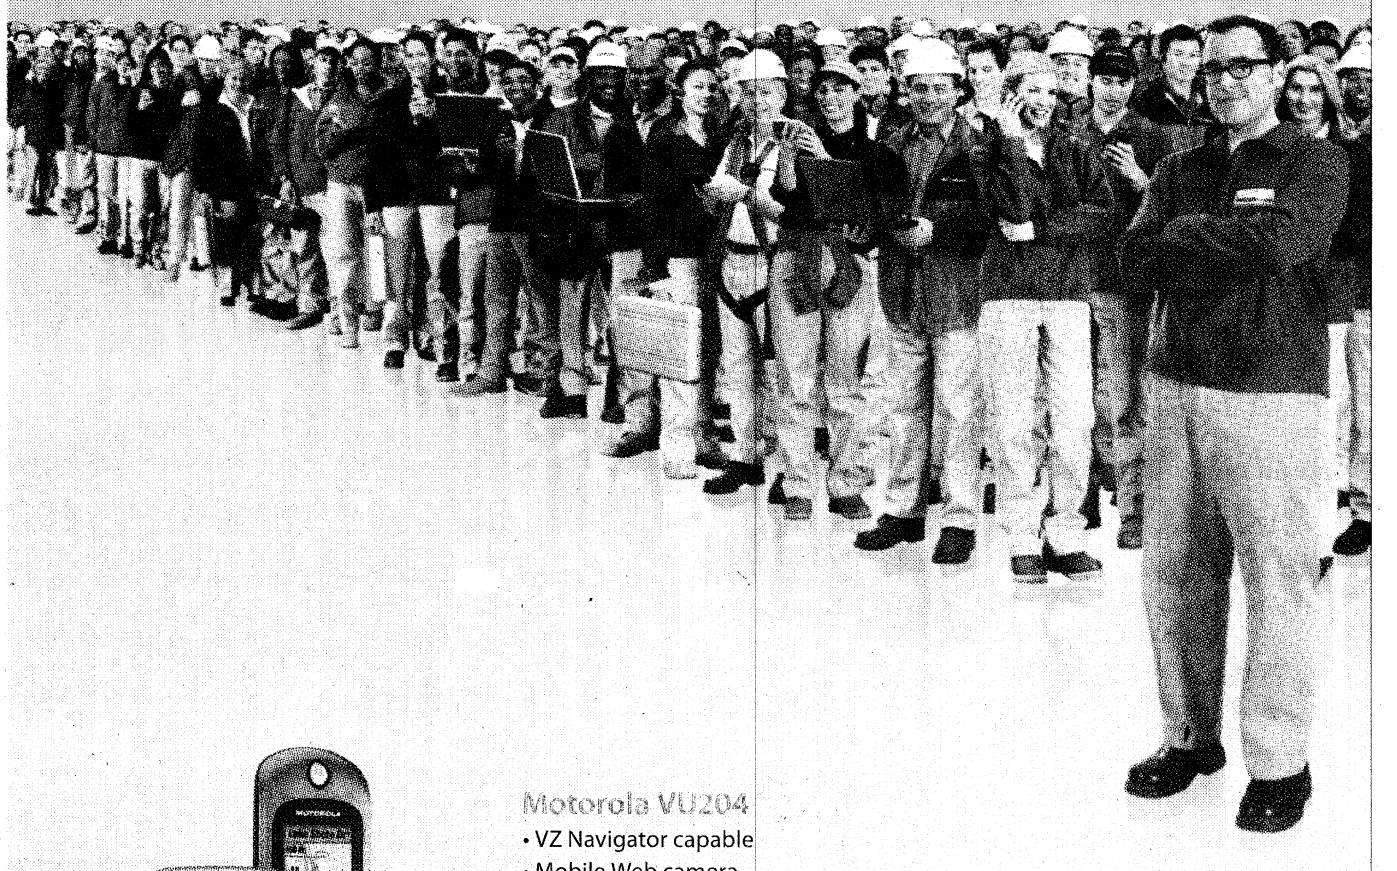
Fans want to celebrate after a major win and let emotions "flow freely" all in the name of supporting the team, yet would chastise a professional player if they were arrested doing the same.

Imagine what would happen if a high-profile player was arrested after trashing a police car, setting a bonfire in downtown L.A., or worse, causing injury to a police officer.

How long did the actions from the Lakers fans make morning sports programming news? — about two days. Yet the news of Sammy Sosa's steroid use that broke the following Monday was still being talked about almost a week later.

Something doesn't seem right about the way society holds others to a higher standard than we hold ourselves. While we continue to put sports personalities on a pedestal, we should realize they are mere mortals and will at some point and time fall off — just like all of us do.

Although 15 people were arrested in the aftermath of the Lakers' victory, we won't see their faces paraded across the television screen every morning on the news.



Many claim professional athletes should be held to a higher standard because they make so much money, garner public notoriety, act as role models and many other reasons, yet they are still human beings prone to mistakes.

Even if I had the talent, you could not pay me enough to be a professional athlete. I value my privacy and reserve the right to make mistakes.

As for the 15 people arrested in the victory celebration? I am sure they will be worked through the justice system — anonymously.

I have been told since I was a child, "People who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones." Think about that before you pick up your next stone.

THE BAYONET

The Jaguars defeated the Troopers, 11-9, in Child, Youth & School Services baseball Saturday at the Youth Sports Complex.

The Jaguars got on the scoreboard early scoring five runs in the top half of the first inning on a Joseph Simmons RBI single, a Kristopher Beck RBI double, and bases loaded walks. The Troopers answered with four runs on a Tra'von Seegers grand slam in the bottom of the inning cutting the lead to one run.

With Jaguars leading 5-4, the Jaguars capitalized on a run and an Aalyshia Williams grand slam in the top half of the second inning while the Troopers were sent back to the field scoreless, with the Jaguars leading, 9-4, to end the inning.

The Troopers held the Jaguars to two runs in the third inning, while attempting to make a comeback with five runs on outfielder errors, but the comeback was short-lived as the Jaguars closed the game with a two-run victory.

"I think our team did pretty good, but we started to slack up toward the end," said Jaguars' coach Burley Watkins. "I can see my players are getting better at hitting and fielding. I think overall this has been a good season."

Nine-year-old Jaguar center and right fielder Ahmad Elston said team defense was key to the win.

"I thought it was a pretty close game," he said.

"We went out there and played as a team, had some good hitting and got the win."

The Jaguars are 6-4-1 and play their last game of the season Saturday against the Bulldogs at the Youth Sports Complex. The game begins at 9 a.m.

doing big cheers, splits and cartwheels," she said. "I like cheerleading. I think it's a good fit for me because I like jumping and being high in the air."

Nine-year-old McKenzie Blocker said she couldn't wait to learn new cheers.

"I think I'll learn a lot by the end of the week," she said. "I know some already, but I want to learn some new ones."

Annisia Emanuel, 7, who has been a cheerleader for a year, said she was at the camp to have fun and improve her skills.

"I think it's neat we get to learn from older cheerleaders," she said. "They might teach me something I don't already know."

After practicing cheerleading drills all week, the campers will perform a cheer for their parents today as the camp comes to a close
