Columbus baker creates cake replica

Kristin Molinaro

The museum cake and its counterparts took 180 eggs, 56 pounds of powdered sugar, 20 pounds of butter and even more flour to make.

Museum creation takes the cake

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Flour, sugar and 40 hours of baking and decorating — that's what went into Becky White's confectionary creation of the National Infantry Museum, which GEN(R) Colin Powell, Congressman Sanford Bishop, MG Michael Barbero and other dignitaries cut Friday after the grand opening of the new museum.

White decided to bake the cake several months ago after her family enjoyed a tour of the White House led by Bishop. The cake was a thank-you to Bishop, she said, but also a way to give back to the military for their service and sacrifices.

"It was so historic … just seeing all of the people who served and all the guys who currently serve who were there. It was just so moving, and I was really proud just to be a part of it," White said. "Obviously, it wasn't much, but it was a small thing to do, and I just really wanted that to be my contribution. We weren't involved in building the building, but we were able to do this for them for that one day and make it a little more special."

White's cake did make the day more special, said Vickie Benton, special events coordinator for the National Infantry Foundation.

"It was like another grand opening when they cut the cake," Benton said. "It looked

Woodcrafts defy warriors' limitations

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When MAJ(R) Nina Saeli injured her spine and neck during training exercises, it limited the use of her hands, feet, arms and legs. She wasn't sure she would ever be able to participate in any productive activities. Then, her life was changed by a visit to the home of Dawson McLemore, president of the Bi-City Woodturners.

"I can't even describe the difference this has made in my life," she said. "I went from being depressed and discouraged, thinking I'd never be able to do anything productive, to being able to make something with my own hands and feeling good about myself. Wood turning showed me there are things I can do despite my physical limitations that are enjoyable and productive."

Saeli, formerly assigned to the Warrior Transition Battalion, was one of the first Soldiers to participate in a partnership between the battalion and the Bi-City Woodturners, a group for wood lathe enthusiasts. Since autumn 2008, the battalion has brought Soldiers to McLemore's wood turning shop in Fortson, Ga., about once or twice a month to learn the craft of wood turning.

"They love it," said Karen Nichols, an occupational therapy assistant. "They seem absolutely proud of what they make. It's an outlet from what's going on in their everyday world, it's a way to get away from it all, and it's a way to fellowship and learn a new skill. It's just a win-win situation."

The partnership grew out of a project where club members created 50 wooden canes to donate to members of the WTB, said Bob Ingram, vice-president of the Bi-City Woodturners.

"We were trying to find a project — what could we give to a Soldier to say 'Thank you?'" he said. "And we came up with the idea of giving something practical."

To make the canes, which McLemore estimates are worth at least $100 each, club members donated more than 150 hours of their time over more than four months.

"We're giving back to veterans because we

Temps, competition heat up Outdoor games

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

It was so hot at the Aflac Outdoor Games last weekend the barbecue and hot dogs practically cooked themselves.

Temperatures dangled in record territory and flirted with triple digits Friday, Saturday and Sunday as the event returned to South Commons in Columbus for a second and final year. Despite the prolific heat, organizers expected about 15,000 people over the three days.

The games were packaged around the STIHL TIMBERSPORTS Series, an eight-discipline sport featuring pro and college competitors who clashed in tests of strength, endurance, stamina, tool skill and agility.

"The way I see it, this is nothing compared to our troops in Iraq. They have to deal with the real heat," said Roger Phelps, promotional communications manager for STIHL Inc. "We appreciate having these fans out here, supporting the guys. This is fun. Columbus is a great place for it, too."

But the Aflac Outdoor Games wasn't limited to lumberjacks chopping up pine logs and scaling 60-foot poles, or lumberjills doing a speedy tiptoe act in the boom run. There were plenty of other attractions on fields around the softball complex.

Vince Little

The Ultimate Air Dogs competition was one of the events during the Aflac Outdoor Games on Saturday at South Commons in Columbus.

Many visitors made their way to a small pool to watch canines fling themselves off a makeshift dock in the Ultimate Air Dogs contest. Agility Dogs and Flyball also were back this year. The Georgia State Frisbee Dog Championships and Extreme Power Sports Archery Challenge were two new events.

Meanwhile, the pros and amateurs locked up again in the Pig Bowl — a national and local barbecue-cooking contest sanctioned by the Kansas City Barbeque Society. Nearby, kids climbed and bounced in the Knology Family Zone, an inflatable playground.

All over South Commons, however, it was tough to escape the heat.

"When the heat is that bad, you want to do whatever you can to make sure people are as comfortable as possible," said Warner Neal, president of Outdoor Events, which organized the games in partnership with the Columbus Sports Council. "The word of the weekend was 'hydrate.' Do not sit out here and not drink any water.

"Obviously, you can't control the weather … (but) we did as much as we could to provide some relief from that unbearable heat."

Beekeepers share camaraderie, love of nature

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When LTC(R) Earl Cheal was preparing to purchase a house in Columbus in 2008, he had no idea his new home would lead to a new hobby.

Cheal, who served more than 20 years in the Army, said he purchased two beehives the house's former owner kept on the property, and quickly became hooked — so much so he now serves as president of the Chattahoochee Valley Beekeepers Association.

"The more I learn about bees, the more fascinated I am with them," he said. "The amazement they bring just never seems to end."

Cheal is one of more than 55 members of the association, whose purpose is to promote modern beekeeping methods, encourage brotherhood and fellowship among beekeepers and to act in the interest of beekeepers in protecting and carrying on beekeeping affairs. The association holds bimonthly meetings where members exchange beekeeping ideas and information.

Caroline Gotler

LTC(R) Steve Hawley, right, and his son, Joshua, move bees into a new hive at Steve's home in Harris County, Ga., Monday.

"Some of the older members with a lot of experience are very good about teaching us new beekeepers what to look for and how to do things," said Lewis Higgins, a financial systems analyst with Fort Benning's Directorate of Resource Management, who has been a member of the association for about four years. "Getting to know people of all ages and from all walks of life and sharing ideas has been a highlight."

Many of the association's members are retired or former military. Higgins, who served in the Marine Corps and in the Army Reserve, said he thinks the tranquility of working with bees attracts many veterans to the hobby.

"It kind of slows you down, because as long as you pull out the frames (from the hives) very slowly and gently, the bees won't bother you at all," he said. "I enjoy just going out and sitting close to the beehive and watching them as they come and go and fly around."

LTC(R) Steve Hawley, who began keeping bees at his Harris County, Ga., farm for the first time this year, said he enjoys the change of pace beekeeping has provided.

"It's pretty neat to sit in the garden with a cup of coffee right after sunup watching the bees already flying," he

Hayley Dralle, 9, adds to the painting of Anita J. Ellis, guest artist at Sayers Library Wednesday during the summer reading program. "I felt really special. I was happy I got to paint, because I don't get to paint very much and I love to," Dralle said. "I thought it was amazing when I saw it done, because I realized it was just a white canvas. It makes me think I can accomplish anything. If someone else can do it, I know I can do it."

appreciate their sacrifices," Ingram said. "It's a way to show them they can still do something."

SFC Ira Blair participated in his second wood turning session Monday.

"It's exciting — fantastic, really," he said. "It takes your mind off everything, and that's why I like doing it."

The club holds a "mentoring Monday," an open wood turning session for those who want to learn and improve, at McLemore's house every week.

"There's no competition here, and that's what's great about it," said Saeli, who joined the club in February. "Their entire focus (on Mondays) is helping people like me who are just starting out. Nobody's trying to be better than anybody else. Everybody is out here trying to help the other person be good at what they do. My skill has improved without a doubt, and it's because of the other club members.

"Now I'm on the other side. I get to help other Soldiers do things they probably never thought they could do and feel better about themselves. And I know they will because I know I did."

Games: Draw thousands

That included placing shade covers over spectator areas and setting up more than half a dozen cooling fans to blow mist on people. There were also buckets full of ice and bottled water.

Neal said two emergency medical services stations were in place to treat anyone who fell victim to heat stress, but officials reported no serious incidents.

Jacquie Moore was among a group from Fort Benning watching the STIHL TIMBERSPORTS action inside the softball stadium. Her husband, SSG Neil Moore, is deployed to Iraq.

"It's unbelievable," she said of the heat. "I'm about ready to go back to Ohio. My parents said it's in the 70s and 80s up there. This is insane."

The speed climb was her favorite event, Moore said.

"To see the agility of the guys was amazing," she said. "They go up and down the pole so quickly. It looked completely effortless."

CPL Kyle McMaster, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, said he enjoyed the springboard chop most — a discipline in which competitors chop pockets into a 9-foot poplar pole and then place 6-inch-wide platforms into the grooves as they slowly climb up.

"The other events with the chain saw were OK, but that takes a certain amount of skill … 'cause they actually have to work hard at it," he said.

McMaster said he wasn't bothered by the sweltering temperatures and humidity, adding he just completed the first half of the four-week Warrior Leader Course out in the field.

"At least I get to take off my shirt here and be in shorts," he said. "It's better than being in ACUs, I guarantee it."

Phelps said the STIHL TIMBERSPORTS Series, now in its 24th year, is the marquee event in lumberjacking. It again was taped by ESPN and will be broadcast this fall and next spring.

A $300,000 purse was at stake, but even the top pros aren't going to become millionaires — contrary to what happens in baseball, football and basketball, Phelps said. A lawyer, physical therapist, third-grade teacher and vice principal were among the athletes at the Aflac Outdoor Games.

"They're ordinary people doing extraordinary things," he said. "They just have a passion for it."

On Saturday afternoon, the temperature hit 115 degrees on the big platform where competitors plowed through logs with chain saws, axes and crosscut saws. In between events, they cooled off in front of fans and inside misty tents.

Most of the choppers and sawyers in the STIHL TIMBERSPORTS Series are hulking specimens. But Phelps said the sport demands tool precision and a sharp mental focus.

"The biggest guy doesn't always win," he said. "The guy who's accurate with the ax is going to get through a block of wood faster. That's followed by power and the last thing you worry about is speed."

In the end, Jason Wynyard of New Zealand edged out compatriot and five-time Series champion David Bolstad to capture the overall title Sunday. Australia's Brad DeLosa took third.

Adam LaSalle of the University of Wisconsin-Stevens Point won the college championship and earned an automatic berth in the 2010 professional series. Matt Slingerland of Montgomery Community College was runner-up while Curt Karboski of Paul Smith's College finished in third place.

The speed climb winner was Derek Knutson of Hayward, Wis. Alyse Schroeder, also of Hayward, emerged as the boom run champion.

Aflac had a two-year contract for the Outdoor Games.

While no decision has been made, Neal said organizers hope to replace it with the National Log Rolling Championships or pro beach volleyball in 2010, likely around April or May.

as good as our model replica that the architects did that we have down at the USO. It was absolutely perfect. She had every brick detail on there, and the roof, those terra cotta shingles, she had those on there. I don't know how she did it. It was beautiful, and it was delicious. That's not just any cake; it's a once-in-a-lifetime cake."

White said she wanted the public to be a part of the celebration, too, so she volunteered to make extra cakes to serve visitors as they streamed into the museum.

"I said, 'We'll need cake for about 1,000 people,' and she said, 'not a problem' — never missed a beat," Benton said.

White started baking cakes for crowds much smaller. When she arrived at Fort Benning eight years ago with her husband, MAJ Spencer White, cake baking was just a hobby, she said.

"I was doing them just for myself and friends and then other friends of friends and then I did one wedding ... and from there it kind of went crazy," she said. "So hobby's out the door, and business is here."

White signs a lease for a shop on Boxwood Place behind the Columbus Public Library next month.

Buttercream Cake Art and Sweets will have its grand opening, complete with samples and display cakes, in August.

Her goal, she said, is to make unique creations that don't look quite like anybody else's.

"Sculpting is really my passion," White said. "I love to create things, and sugar and flour is just another medium to express myself — as well as something super yummy."

White will continue taking custom orders after her store opens. To submit a request, e-mail her at sbcwhite@aol.com.

Becky White shows off one of her cakes she created with modeling chocolate. White created a model of the new National Infantry Museum and sheet cakes for the public for the grand opening of the museum Friday. She has done weddings, hail and farewell celebrations and birthday parties. White plans to open a shop in July on Boxwood Place behind the Columbus Public Library.

Dogs can teach valuable lessons about loyalty, trust

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Those who know me know I don't like little dogs and only tolerate big ones.

But someone asked the question, "What would our relationships be like if a dog taught us how to live them?" and it got me thinking about the lessons I've learned from the dogs I've known.

For your consideration:

The first lesson you could learn from a dog is to be enthusiastic when your spouse comes home. Always run to greet him or her. Dance around and "wag" your body. Imagine how you'd feel if your spouse acted this way when you came home. What a great feeling. What message would you send if you behaved this way? What message would you teach your children? After all, at the root of marriage and family relationships is love.

Dogs thrive on attention. So do people. Pay attention to your loved ones. Ever notice how a dog will nudge you with his wet little nose to get your attention? They don't sit and pout.

When you need some attention, ask for it. Do not be afraid to show your love through touch. Give some attention and get some attention in return.

Learn to take time to enjoy life. Run, romp and play every day. Go outside and lay in the grass. Take a few minutes to enjoy the sun and fresh air. Delight in a simple walk with your loved ones. Enjoy the outdoors with one another. Jump in the car and go for a joyride. Roll the windows down, and let the wind blow through your hair. Enjoy all of life's simple moments and opportunities.

Fido would tell you not to bite someone when a simple growl will do. If someone has invaded your personal territory, give him or her a kind little warning before dislocating their head from their shoulders.

A warning of a bad day or hurt feelings is more effective than firing all your guns at once. If you hold a grudge, it will erode the fabric of trust.

God says we are to forgive one another. There are spiritual and emotional ramifications to unforgivingness.

Always remain loyal to your spouse just as Fido is loyal to his owners. Be open and honest. Loyalty shouts of commitment, and commitment reinforces trust, which is the bedrock of any relationship. God is faithful to us always and demonstrates his love continuously.

When your spouse is having a bad day, be silent, but let him or her know you are there. Sometimes you say more by keeping your mouth closed. Our God is always with us and will never leave us.

We can learn valuable life lessons from our four-legged friends. I hope you grow and develop a deeper and more intimate relationship with your spouse and family every day.

If you are having difficulty in this area, then I invite you to call 706-545-1760 and make an appointment with one of our pastoral counselors at the Chaplains Family Life Center.

We are located at 2606 Dixie Road, in Soldier's Plaza. Call or stop by today.

May God bless you and your family!

Beekeepers: Raise awareness about bees, hives

said. "It's nice and quiet out here."

Hawley said he began keeping bees to pollinate his garden because he remembered his grandfather practicing the hobby.

"I'm trying to connect with my roots," he said.

Hawley credits members of the association with getting him started, and said attending the association's annual beekeeping short course was especially helpful.

"I've learned a lot," he said. "(The experienced members) are very knowledgeable about beekeeping and farming and have a lot of wisdom."

MAJ(R) Jim Harris, a major force in creating the course eight years ago, emphasizes the importance of educating the community about honeybees.

"Honeybee pollination is responsible for more than one-third of what we eat, and we have fewer bees and beekeepers than we had 10 years ago," he said. "If people want to eat, they're going to need a lot of bees around to pollinate."

In addition to teaching part of the short course, Harris speaks regularly to schools and church groups.

"There aren't many things I'd rather do than talk about honeybees," he said. "So I talk about them a lot. I try to get young people interested in bees and let them know they're not so dangerous. They don't sting unless you confine them in some way."

Duane Johnson, secretary and treasurer of the association, has been keeping bees for more than 30 years. He said raising awareness about bees is what has kept his interest.

"The public is not aware of how important they are in our society," he said. "Jim and I have gone to a lot of fairs and carnivals to set up observation hives for kids to look at. It gives us a chance to promote beekeeping."

At 31, SGT Keith Hutchison, a member of the Georgia National Guard, is one of the youngest beekeepers in the association. He said he began keeping bees about two years ago and would like to see more young people take up the hobby.

"Many beekeepers — especially commercial ones — are in their 60s, and we need to get more young people out there because bees are something we have to have," he said.

Hawley said the most rewarding part of beekeeping has been knowing he is helping the environment.

"It helps my garden and it's beneficial for everyone else too because bees can fly several miles away to pollinate," he said. "You end up with bigger, stronger fruit."

While Hawley's hives will not produce enough honey to harvest this year, he predicts a harvest of more than 100 pounds next year.

"I'll be cruising," he said. "I know about soldiering — I don't know a lot about beekeeping. But I'm learning."

The association's next meeting will be held at 7 p.m. July 13 at the Elizabeth Turner Continuing Education Center at Columbus State University.

It is free and open to the public. For more information, visit http://chattahoocheebeekeepers.com.

THE BAYONET

More than 200 years ago, America's founders signed the Declaration of Independence. Now, we mark the anniversary with cookouts, games, family get-togethers and patriotic concerts. Find a gala or two here where you can celebrate your freedom and honor those who made it possible.

• Fort Benning's Independence Day Celebration

Fort Benning will put on the biggest fireworks show in the area Saturday at Stewart-Watson Field. Besides fireworks, you can enjoy music, military demonstrations and more than 20 inflatables. Best of all, it's free. The event draws thousands every year. Highlights include Special Patrol Insertion and Extraction systems and Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction, also known as SPIES and FRIES. You can also buy refreshments from one of the many vendors who will be on the field. The festivities kick off at 3 p.m.

• Celebrate America

The Rock Ranch, a 1,250-acre working cattle farm owned by Chick-fil-A founder S.Truett Kathy, will honor the military and celebrate America's independence at 2 p.m. Saturday. Attractions include train rides, pony rides, a watermelon cannon, petting zoo, antique tractor display, giant jumping pillow, puppet shows, reptile shows and rock climbing. A fireworks show begins after dark. The ranch keeps prices low for this event with a per-vehicle charge: $20 for family vehicles and $30 for buses. So pack in the passengers and head to The Rock, Ga., about two hours northeast of Columbus. For more information, visit www.therockranch.com.

• Thunder on the Hooch

This annual event, from 5 to 9:30 p.m. July 4 at the Columbus and Phenix City Riverwalk, brings the community together for Independence Day entertainment, including crafts, food, games and a fireworks display. Be sure to get a good seat for "The God and Country Celebration," at the Phenix City Amphitheater at 7 p.m. Fair-style food, like snow cones, funnel cakes and barbecue, will be available for purchase at the event, along with handmade art and crafts. Festival-goers can try their luck in a watermelon eating contest, sack race or at the fishing hole. You can also register to compete in a new event — the Do the Dew Obstacle Course — at Piggly Wiggly stores or online at www.WTVM.com. Ten adults will be chosen to compete.

• Star Spangled Beach Party

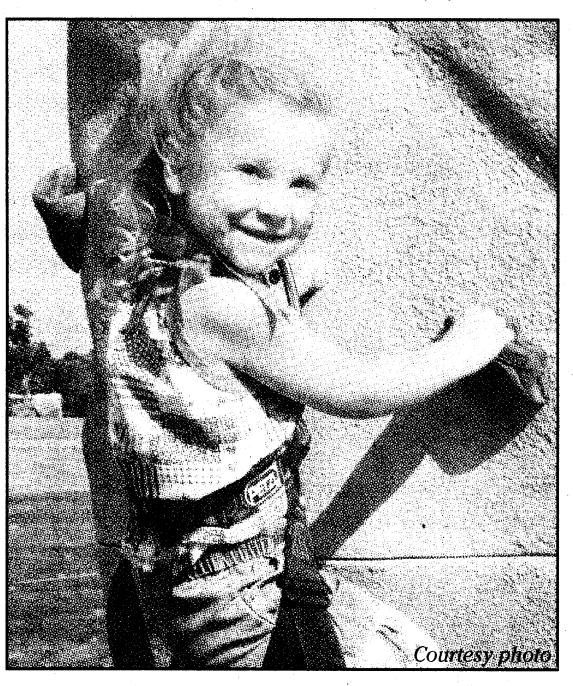
Callaway Gardens will host an independence-themed party at the Robin Lake Beach July 4-5. Activities includes paddleboat rides, miniature golf, shuffleboard, table tennis, circus performances and all the summer beach activities. At 7:30 p.m., July 4, the Swingin' Medallions will present a concert of oldies, and at 9:30 p.m., the fireworks finale begins. For more information, visit www.callawaygardens.com.

• July Fourth Celebration

Florence Marina State Park, about 45 minutes south of Fort Benning, invites visitors to enjoy old-fashioned games and crafts at the park from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. July 4-5 at the Kirbo Interpretive Center. Activities include long or "redneck" golf, badminton, horseshoes and making dream catchers, flags and walking sticks. The park includes miniature golf, a playground, walking trails, a deep-water marina and fishing pier. Admission is $2 and parking is $5. For more information, call 229-838-4706.

• Flag Retirement Ceremony

The Northlake Elks Lodge, 1775 Montreal Road, Tucker, Ga., will give the public a chance to properly dispose of worn American flags while celebrating Independence Day, starting at 10 a.m. July 4. The event will feature buglers, the Dobbins Air Force Base Color Guard and a dedication to prisoners of war and those missing in action. After the ceremonies, guests can purchase a meal of a hot dog or hamburger along with chips and a drink for $2. For more information, call 770-908-0835.



• Fantastic Fourth Celebration

During its 42nd annual celebration, July 3-5, Stone Mountain State Park offers live entertainment, fireworks and a "Lasershow Spectacular." See Journey to the Center of the Earth in 4-D. Climb the country's largest adventure ropes course, the Sky Hike. Other park activities include adventure golf, a train ride, farmyard and museums. Parking is $10 and admission is $23 for seniors and military, $26 for adults and $21 for children. For more information, visit www.stonemountainpark.com.

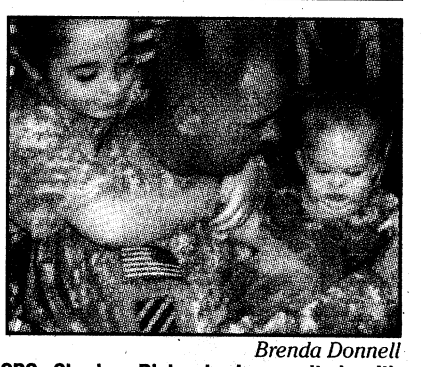
About 90 Soldiers from the 63rd Engineer Company are back on familiar turf after spending almost 15 months in Iraq.

Family and friends packed Freedom Hall in the wee hours Monday morning as the group's plane touched down at Lawson Army Airfield. A second wave of about 60 troops from the unit is expected to arrive this weekend.



This marked the company's third deployment for Operation Iraqi Freedom. The last was from November 2005 to November 2006.

MG Michael Ferriter, the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning commanding general, greeted the Soldiers as they stepped off the plane. The welcome also included LTC Dwayne Smith, the 11th Engineer Battalion commander.

"They did a great job, an amazing job," Smith said. "Thankfully, no one was hurt, either … We're just glad to have these folks home."

The 63rd Engineers served as a combat support equipment unit that worked on base camp improvements, built roads and airfields, maintained communication lines and helped patrols clear routes of roadside bombs.

Their loved ones began gathering between 2 and 3 a.m. at Freedom Hall for the homecoming.

Nancy Price said she drove an hour from LaGrange, Ga., and had been up about 24 hours to pick up her husband, SGT Carl Price. The couple's three boys — ages 4, 3 and 2 — stayed home with a baby sitter.

"I'm tired," she said, "but you get a second wind. It's kicking in. I'm very excited.

"The kids have no idea he's coming home. I want to surprise them. We did the same thing during his leave … They knew he was at work in the desert. This time, I can tell them he doesn't have to go back to work again."

Sparkle Sawyer, who brought 8-year-old daughter Arielle and 2-year-old son Cash, said she couldn't wait to get a glimpse of her husband, SGT Milton Sawyer. The children got some sleep earlier but Sawyer said she was awake all night.

Benning boasts Army's top drill sergeant

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

For the first time in more than two decades, the Army's top active-duty drill sergeant hails from Fort Benning.

SSG Michael Johnston of C Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, is the 2009 winner after a weeklong competition that tested the service's best drill sergeants on warrior tasks, battle drills and their ability to instruct young Soldiers. It took place June 21-26 at Fort Monroe and Fort Eustis in Virginia.

GEN Martin E. Dempsey and CSM David Bruner of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command presented Johnston with a trophy Friday during a ceremony at Monroe's Continental Park.

"When they called my name, it didn't click right away," he said Tuesday after returning to Fort Benning. "One of my buddies had to nudge me to go up …. It still hasn't hit yet completely."

SSG Michael Johnston, Drill Sergeant of the Year for the active component, receives a Meritorious Service Medal from GEN Martin Dempsey, TRADOC commander, and CSM David Bruner. Johnston, a drill sergeant with C Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, is the first Fort Benning Soldier to win the title in more than two decades.

Johnston is the first active-duty recipient from Fort Benning since SSG S.P. Watkins earned the honor in 1988. SSG Joshua Marshall of the 95th Division in Oklahoma City was named this year's best reserve drill sergeant.

Drill sergeants chosen for the 2009 competition represented the five basic combat training centers and two reserve training divisions. All seven worked their way up from battalion and brigade selection boards.

"Think about what they do. They take a civilian volunteer and forge that raw material into a Soldier," Bruner said. "Each and every one of these drill sergeants has proven themselves already, just by being here."

The candidates were tested and graded on more than 60 events.

The challenge began with the Army physical fitness test and ended with a written essay and interview with TRADOC leaders. In

MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Post officials hope a change in venue will encourage more local residents to attend the Community BRAC Update, held at 3 p.m. on the first Tuesday of each month.

Beginning Tuesday, the update will take place off post at the National Infantry Museum.

"We have a good number of dedicated people who come each month, people who understand that progress and growth on Fort Benning means progress and growth to the local communities," said Jay Brown, BRAC program manager for Fort Benning's Strategic Planning Office.

"Certainly the subject matter is of interest to the majority of our local residents, but coming on post, stopping at the gate to request a visitor's pass and trying to find their way around the installation, can be intimidating to people who would otherwise love to have an opportunity to learn more about what's ahead," said Brown, who hosts the monthly meetings. "We're taking those inconveniences' out of the equation, and I think we'll generate a lot more interest in the event."

The event usually lasts less than an hour, Brown said. After a brief summary of progress on the MCOE, he opens the floor for questions.

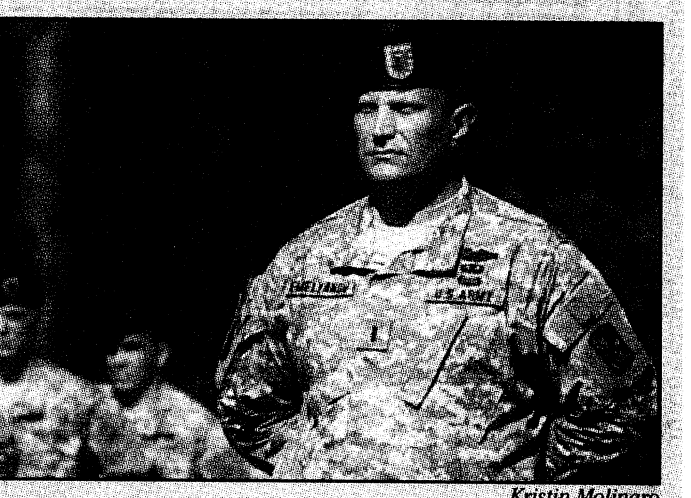
When Ruslan Emelyanov left the Russian army after nine years of service, he never thought he would wear a military uniform again. The former paratrooper, who fought with the 205th Infantry Brigade (Airborne) in Grozny, Chechnya, for 15 months, told his family he was through with war, he wanted to see the world.

"I had an excruciating experience in (Chechnya)," he said. "We lost lots of Soldiers … and I was too young to see that."

After traveling across Europe and Asia, Emelyanov visited his uncle on the Californian coast in 2001.



"(Carmel) blew my mind," he said. "I instantly fell in love with the city and … was amazed (by) the respect. People respect each other here."

A few months after Emelyanov immigrated, the 2001 terrorist attack in New York reminded him of Chechnya, he said.

"My first encounter with terrorism was while serving as a platoon leader and scout company commander with the 205th during the war in Chechnya.

"In September, the U.S. had that tragic attack … I saw young Soldiers joining the U.S. force, going to war and protecting their country," he said. "Having my

What advice do you have for staying safe this holiday weekend?

If you hear any gunshot noises, stay clear of that sound. In Puerto Rico, where I'm from, people shoot into the air on Independence Day. Eventually the bullets have to come down and you could get injured.

The heat is excruciating during the months of July and August in Georgia, so stay hydrated. Also, be safe out on the water. I'm going to take my kids to a water park and I'll keep a close eye on them and make sure they have proper safety equipment.

Stay aware of your surroundings and make sure you're looking out for each other. There will be a lot of visitors to the area, and especially as a female you need to pay attention to your surroundings to prevent sexual assault.

Always have a battle buddy when you go swimming. It's important because if something happens, especially if you're swimming in a lake, your buddy will be there to help you out. It could probably save your life.

More than just a three-day weekend

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Except for a trip home to see my ailing father two summers ago, Saturday will mark my first Fourth of July holiday in the U.S. since 2001.

My wife, Wendy, and I lived on an Air Force base in Japan the last seven years — and developed our own simple tradition for celebrating the occasion. We grabbed some good old-fashioned American burgers and fries at McDonald's outside the gate (no golden arches on the installation, unfortunately), then parked our SUV to watch the annual fireworks display over Yokota Air Base's runway.

This time around, we'll visit my in-laws in Florida, where the Independence Day festivities will surely include the same good times, food and cold beverages we enjoyed in Japan. But regardless of where I'm at on the planet, this holiday will always be more than just a three-day weekend.

Now more than ever, we need a refresher that liberty, freedom and independence should never be taken for granted. Nor should we overlook the price paid defending it. And these things are worth fighting for.

They are the traits that make America great, and separate us from the world pack. And they need to be reinforced.

On the eve of America's 233rd birthday, we are facing hard times — mired in a recession with an unemployment rate approaching 10 percent.

But this is not a time to fold our tents. It's a time to fight back and overcome.

Just the other day, I got my own reminder from Rob Marshall, an old buddy of mine from Japan now living in Florida.

"Our American spirit is our most misunderstood facet in this world," he wrote. "Those foreign and domestic people, who simply don't get it, who only see brashness and insolence; they fight like hell to extinguish our flame. They want to darken our 'city.'

"(But) America will never return to virtuous greatness until individuals stand up. As single flames of inspiration, those flames become a fire that can burn up the barriers, obstacles, and people who inhibit our return to blessed providence and prominence. We are 'a shining city on a hill,' but our candles and lamps are flickering. Feed the fires."

Indeed, Americans have always revived themselves with hard work, diligence, resolve, individual responsibility and reward — all carefully nurtured under the rule of law. After all, there are no free lunches in life.

Throughout our history, we've always learned more from getting knocked down, dusting ourselves off and prevailing in the end. But that perseverance wouldn't be possible without the self-evident guarantees of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

Most other nations, however, don't have such options. Their governments don't accept the notion that people are endowed with "certain unalienable rights." Rules, regulations and restrictions prohibit freedom and guide everyday life — and they're often enforced with an iron fist in some places.

At this moment, U.S. troops are in harm's way around the world in an effort to preserve our way of life, with the ideals of freedom and liberty under constant attack.

It bothers me that some people have been successful separating Iraq and Afghanistan in our fight. But it's one war against terrorism on two fronts. (During World War II, it was never referred to as the Japan war or Germany war. It was one conflict on two fronts: Europe and Pacific.)

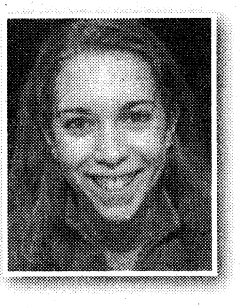
As we celebrate another Independence Day — in between the hot dogs, hamburgers, cold drinks and fireworks — let's remember the men and women overseas fighting right now, along with those who made the ultimate sacrifice, in the name of our liberty and freedom.

Safe holiday fun takes more than dumb luck

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"Stand back!"

Independence Day afternoons in Missouri are notoriously hot. I remember one year my friends and I were celebrating our nation's birthday the same way we had for years — by making things explode in my backyard. Since fireworks aren't exactly legal in St. Louis County, we spent that morning driving to the neighboring county to blow our cash on explosive goodies with names like "Cherry Bomb," "Silver Salute" and "Little Dynamite."



As one of my friends sprayed a tipped-over bottle rocket with a water hose, I wondered how we managed to go without being seriously injured or slapped with a citation for so many years. Or, for that matter, how none of us choked on the smoke from an old, defective batch of sparklers we had lit last year.

It's just dumb luck, I guess.

But, if you're going to celebrate Independence Day safely this year and still have fun, you need more than just luck — you need to be informed.

For starters, it's worth noting fireworks larger than 100-gram sparklers, glow worms, snappers or party poppers are illegal in Georgia. Buying or setting off anything bigger can land you with a fine of up to $100.

But monetary injury is nothing compared to the bodily harm fireworks can cause. Thousands of people are injured each year trying to set off fireworks, and while the numbers have steadily decreased since the American Pyrotechnics Association began keeping track in the 1970s, fireworks can still be extremely dangerous. If you light sparklers, be sure to follow some basic safety precautions. Wear goggles to protect your eyes, and when you're done, keep a bucket of water nearby to make sure they're extinguished. Use a lighter with an extender, and never, ever give any fireworks to small children. Getting a cute picture of Johnny waving a sparkler is not worth the safety risk that comes with it.

In addition to the fun and memories, Independence Day in Georgia can also bring scorching temperatures. If you're planning a celebration outdoors, exercise caution to avoid heat injury. Drink water even if you don't feel thirsty, wear sun block — the higher the SPF rating, the better — and wear a hat. If you can, avoid the sun from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., when its rays are strongest.

Barbecuing is one of the most delicious Independence Day traditions, but it too can bring safety hazards. The New York City Fire Department recommends checking your grill thoroughly for leaks, cracks or brittleness before using it, and making sure it's at least 10 feet away from your house, garage or trees. And of course, never leave your grill unattended. If it goes up in smoke, burnt hot dogs will be the least of your problems.

So, with these tips in mind, I wish you all a happy holiday. And please, if you buy party poppers, and your house has white siding, don't throw them against the wall. Trust me, I know.

The 24th Ordnance Company has closed its Fort Benning detachment as the unit prepares for a full transfer to Fort Stewart, Ga., later this summer.

The two platoons that formed the detachment cased its colors during a deactivation ceremony Friday.

CW2 James Gainey, the 24th Ordnance Detachment commander, said the company, which also has elements at Hunter Army Airfield in Savannah, Ga., is consolidating operations in one location.

"That will make it easier to funnel out supplies and help with the tracking of personnel, instead of being so spread out," said Gainey, who left for a new assignment at Fort Bragg, N.C.

The Soldiers still at Benning now fall under Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion. The 24th Ordnance Company will be reconstituted formally in August.

Gainey said U.S. Army Forces Command made the decision to move the entire company to Stewart, adding it would not affect the unit's mission. The heavy-lift ordnance company deploys platoons capable of supporting an ammunition supply point, and that process won't change, he said.

"It will continue to be a small detachment or platoon going out here and there in the future," he said.

In February, the 24th Ordnance Detachment returned to Fort Benning after a 15-month deployment to Iraq, where it handled ammunition support and convoy security for various units across theater. A platoon from Hunter Army Airfield also redeployed then.

Gainey said the unit ran three ammo supply points and had small teams of Soldiers at Camp Liberty in Baghdad; al Taqqadum; al Asad; and Tallil.

"It was a great deployment," he said. "Any (deployment) with no loss of lives is always great. We were very busy (and) very engaged with work."

Since returning, the detachment has worked with garrison officials during the $17 million expansion of Fort Benning's ammunition supply point, according to a 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion press release.

The 24th Ordnance Company, which formed in October 1927, participated in World War II, the Korean War and Gulf War. It has deployed to Iraq three times and Afghanistan once.

In October 2006, two platoons were added to the 24th Ordnance Company as a detachment from Fort Benning.

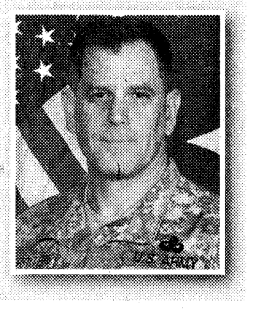
HOLIDAY SAFETY MESSAGE

Independence Day

The approaching 4th of July holiday will provide all of us with an excellent opportunity to relax and enjoy a well-deserved extended weekend. This popular holiday is usually associated with increased highway traffic. Privately owned vehicle and motorcycle accidents are the leading cause of accident-related fatalities within the U.S. Army. Excessive speed, driver fatigue and driving under the influence are the most common factors associated with these accidents. With this in mind, I ask each of you to exercise caution, stay alert and for all vehicle occupants to wear their seat belt and motorcyclists to wear an approved motorcycle safety helmet.



Recreational activities are another leading source of injuries and fatalities during this holiday period. Fatalities resulting from water activities rank second to automobile accidents. Among these, boating accidents account for the majority of these incidents. Capsizing and falling overboard are the most common occurrences. Excessive speed, inexperienced operators and alcohol are some common factors in these accidents. The tragedy is that most of these deaths could have been prevented had the victims followed boating safety practices and had worn a life jacket.

Finally, I ask each of you to consider the consequences of excessive alcohol consumption in all activities, and if you do drink, DO NOT drink and drive. If you do drink, have a designated driver or call SAFETY CAB, 706-527-7248 for a free safe ride home. SAFETY CAB operates from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. through Monday.

Prior to the holiday I expect commanders, directors and leaders at all levels to prepare their people for the holiday. Safety briefings, vehicle safety inspections and engaged leaders are keys to our success. Let's all do our part to make this a safe and enjoyable holiday.

I encourage all members of the Fort Benning Community to take advantage of this extended holiday weekend to relax and spend some quality time with friends and family. Have a great holiday weekend and enjoy a safe and accident-free summer. Together our teamwork, discipline, standards, and safety make Fort Benning the best place to live and work.

PVT Scott Eberhardt learned basic Infantry tasks such as marksmanship during 14 weeks of one station unit training but upon graduation, the things he claimed to have learned were less tangible. He learned patience, honor, loyalty — "the Army values really," he said.

Eberhardt was one of more than 200 Soldiers in F Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, who graduated June 19 on the Parade Field next to the new National Infantry Museum at the 200-acre Patriot Park.

"I think I've grown up a lot," said Eberhardt, reflecting on the 14 weeks of basic training. "Basically, you have to be a good person to be able to fight for somebody who you don't even know. In the end, it's all worth it. I'm going to be part of something huge — the Infantry, fighting for our country, the Army. We're part of this museum now."

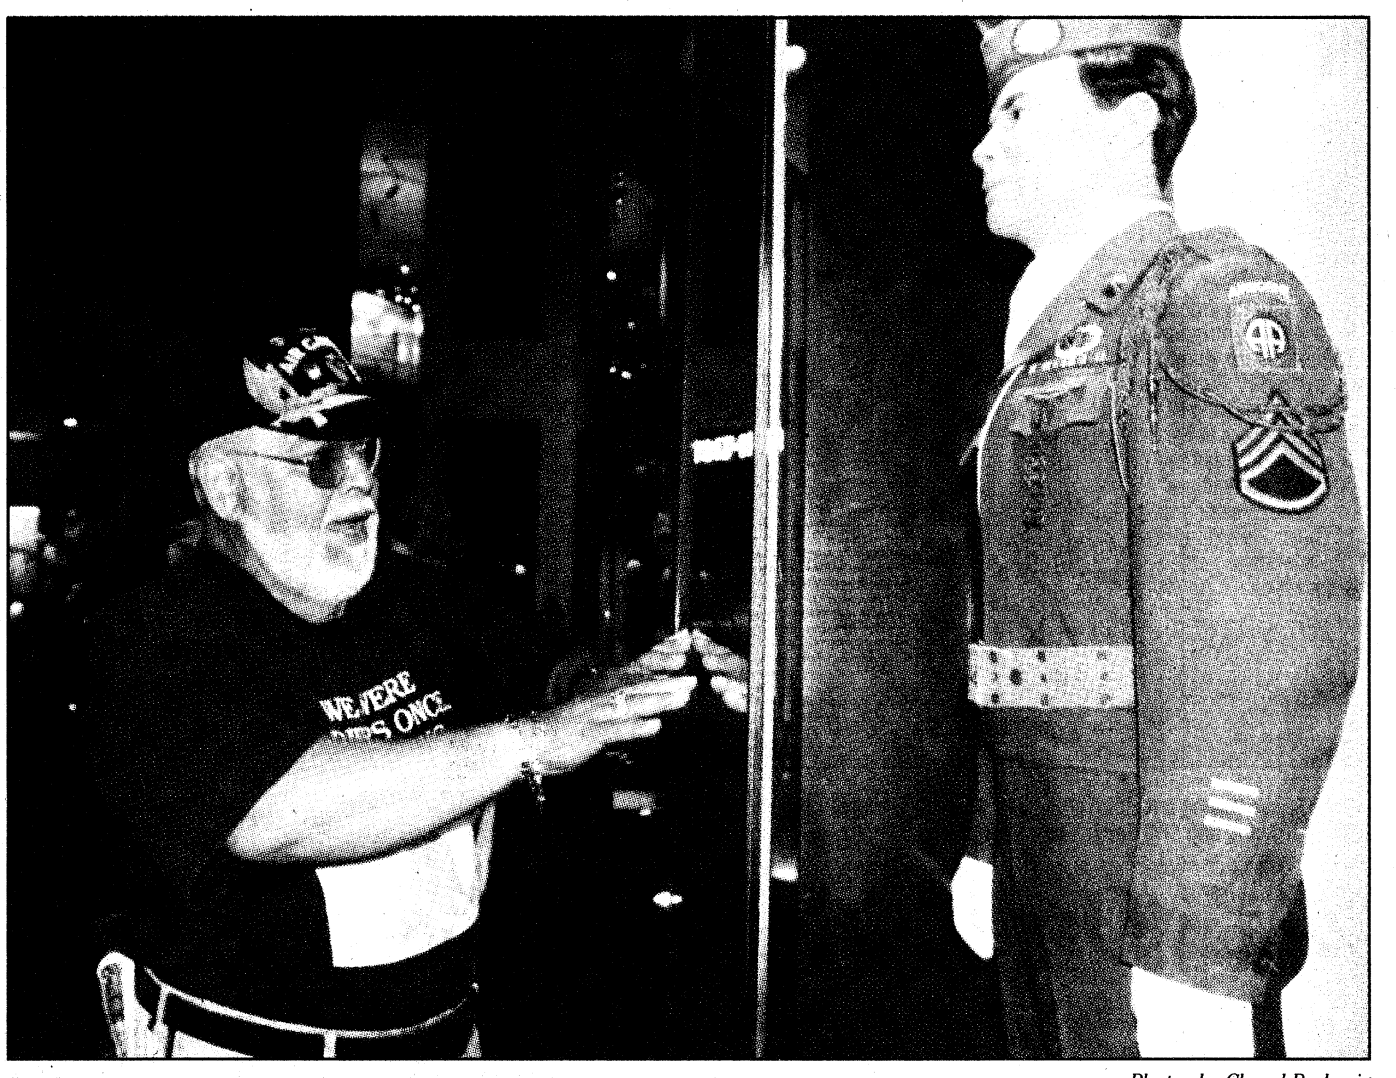
The Soldiers graduated in front of a particularly large crowd — more than 2,000, including GEN(R) Colin Powell, Senator Saxby Chambliss, Congressman Sanford Bishop, LTG(R) Hal Moore and CSM(R) Basil Plumley — attending for the opening of the National Infantry Museum.

When SFC(R) James Godfrey left his home in Alabama at 3:15 a.m. to drive more than 150 miles to Fort Benning, he didn't know the grand opening would include an Infantry graduation, but when he found that it did, he made sure he got a good seat, he said.

"I was glad to see it. It makes me proud," said the former Infantryman of 20 years and Vietnam veteran. "You have to be disciplined, you have to have leadership, and you have to learn to follow before you lead; it is what makes a successful Soldier. I hope they succeed."

Some of the new Soldiers may even be honored one day in the National Infantry Museum that they graduated next to, Godfrey said.

"In years to come, some of those 200 we saw graduate will go on to become first sergeants, some of them will go through Officer Candidate School and might become colonels," he said. "There will be some from the 200 we saw who will go to Iraq and Afghanistan and be involved in battles that will go down in history. They're going to continue the story."



The new graduates will be expected to live up to the standards set by the brave Infantrymen who came before them, said MG Michael Barbero, former Fort Benning commanding general and keynote speaker for the graduation.

"Today, you are joining the same fraternity as those Soldiers who stormed the beaches of Normandy, hunted the enemy in the Ia Drang Valley, parachuted into Panama and who are currently securing Iraq and carrying the fight in Afghanistan," he said.

Barbero advised the troops to stay alert and aggressive and to watch out for each other.

"The life of an Infantryman is not easy, but when push comes to shove, there isn't a more feared weapon in our military arsenal than steely-eyed warriors like you — American Infantrymen with boots on the ground, ready to take the last 100 yards and close with the enemy," he said. "That is why you did all of those push-ups and why you'll do thousands more. It's why you ran all of those miles and why you'll run many more. ... It's why you can take that rifle apart and reassemble it in the dark. It's why your parents can see the change in you simply by the way you stand."

The graduation included a Special Patrol Insertion and Extraction systems, or SPIES, demonstration, an air assault demonstration and a demonstration by the Silver Wings, the post command exhibition parachute demonstration team.

SFC(R) John Rangel talks about the Eisenhower jacket, part of the uniform he wore in the '60s during the Vietnam War. The uniform was one of the first things Rangel noticed when he entered the new National Infantry Museum. "I had an odd feeling when I came through the door — like I'm going back in time. I got goose bumps," he said. Rangel was one of more than 4,000 visitors who flocked to the museum June 19 during the grand opening celebration. "They gave their lives for this," said the Vietnam veteran and former Infantryman. "To me, that is meaningful. It is history today for this community and for Fort Benning and for all Infantry Soldiers."

LTC(R) Joe Stilwell points out some of the artifacts that belonged to his grandfather, GEN Joseph Stilwell.

More than 4,000 people celebrated the grand opening of the National Infantry Museum and Soldier Center at Patriot Park June 19. The 190,000-square-foot facility, which pays homage to the 234-year history of the American Infantryman is "much more than a mere memorial," said keynote speaker GEN(R) Colin Powell, former Secretary of State and chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

"The word museum is entirely inadequate to describe it," he said. "It's the only attraction in the country to tell the story of the Infantry from the perspective of the Soldier. ... There are individual war heroes, of course, but this place makes a hero of the Infantry itself — the legions of anonymous patriots whom history does not record but whose service and sacrifice was crucial to the success of our country."

The National Infantry Museum serves as both a reminder for Americans to honor service members and a salute to Infantrymen, the boots on the ground necessary to win any battle, Powell said.

Visitors to the museum toured the galleries, which feature a walk-through of America's major conflicts. In one of these galleries, CPT Jacqueline Stilwell found a familiar face, that of her great-grandfather, GEN Joseph Stilwell, commander of the China, Burma and India theater during World War II.

"It's pretty exciting," she said. "I always learn something new about family, about him, about what he did, about who he worked with.

"It's just really neat to see him honored in this way and all the Soldiers he fought with and trained and worked for. There so many artifacts, and the different setups give you a more real experience instead of just reading it in a book."

Although history is part of the past, it is also part of the future, said her father, LTC(R) Joe Stilwell.

"It's important to know what the history is, what the history was," he said.

"It's for the future. It's for people like my daughter to come find out what their dads did and to see where they worked and what it was all about."

The museum, which features eight major galleries and the signature exhibit, The Last 100 Yards, chronicles the battles of Infantrymen from the Revolutionary War to the current theater of operations.

It is a fitting "birthday present" for the Infantry, which celebrated its 234th birthday Sunday, said MG Michael Barbero, former post commanding general.

"For 234 years now, the Soldiers have led from the front," Barbero said. "They stormed the beaches of Normandy. They plodded the frozen hills of Korea. They slogged through the oppressive heat of Vietnam. They stood as lonely sentinels on the frontiers of freedom during the Cold War. They fought in Grenada, Panama, Somalia, Kuwait. They parachuted into Qandahar, and they were the tip of the spear in Baghdad. This museum is dedicated to all of them, from the Continental Army through the greatest generation of World War II to the newest Infantrymen who graduated only moments ago."

More than 200 Infantrymen in F Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, graduated from one station unit training when they marched across the Parade Field, part of the 200-acre Patriot Park.

"It is only fitting also that on this day we welcomed over 200 young Americans into this family of Soldiers," Powell said. "These fine graduates are a tangible symbol of the millions who have answered the call to serve."

If Americans forget the struggles faced by those who went before them, they will not be able to deal with the present or prepare for the future, Powell said.

"History gives us guideposts as to how to think about the future, recognizing that you're not going to repeat history, but history informs your judgment," he said.

"And history can become dull and dry if it's just left in books, but a place like this, you are seeing history living itself out, history in action."

More galleries to open in 2010

Two galleries at the National Infantry Museum chronicling the birth of the Infantry and leading into the start of the 20th century will remain closed until sometime next year, said MG(R) Jerry White, president and chairman of the National Infantry Foundation.

Another $10 million is needed to complete the two galleries, which were previously designed and constructed, foundation officials said.

White and COL(R) Greg Camp, the foundation's executive vice president, will head to Washington D.C. next week to pursue fundraising possibilities, foundation officials said.

The structure of the galleries is built; they've reached the fabrication and display phase, said Dr. Charles Cureton, chief of museums and historic property for the Training and Doctrine Command.

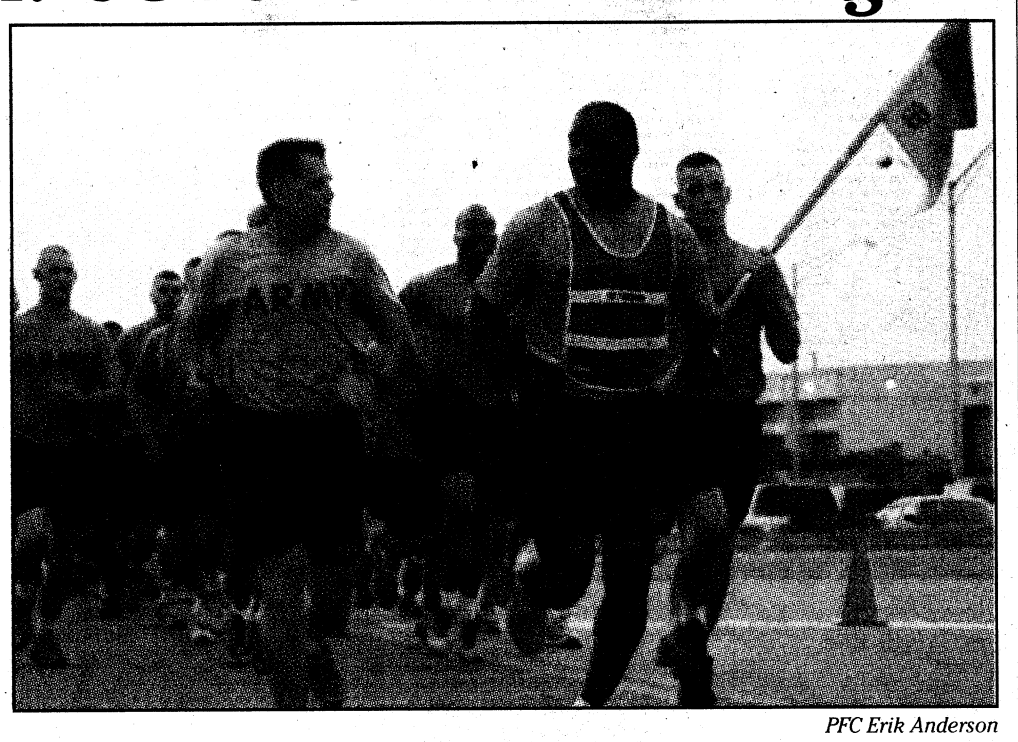
A gate blocks the entrance to Gallery Two at the National Infantry Museum.

In the meantime, museum staff will seek out significant artifacts from the Army history system for possible inclusion in the unfinished exhibits," said Jeff Reed, arms curator at the museum.



Gallery One, the colonial gallery, tracks the birth of the Infantry from the American Revolution to the War of 1812. Planned exhibits within the gallery include two Spanish howitzers possibly used during the Revolutionary War and taken as war trophies, Reed said.

GalleryTwo catalogs the era spanning from 1816 to that late 1890s and encompasses the Mexican War of 1847, the Civil War and the Plains Indians War. Though visitors cannot enter the gallery, one of the premier pieces — a pre-Civil war officer's uniform — is displayed in a glass case in front of the gallery to give a preview of what to expect, Reed said.

Reed said the staff is considering featuring rotating exhibits until the galleries open.

background — my experience — it was a simple decision for me to join the Army."

Now Emelyanov, 36, wears the Army combat uniform as a first lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

He is the executive officer for F Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, on Sand Hill.

Emelyanov enlisted in February 2002 and completed one unit station training with the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment. Following a yearlong deployment in Afghanistan with the 25th Infantry Division, Emelyanov became a U.S. citizen. In 2007, he graduated from Officer Candidate School.

"Others can take away great life lessons, such as perseverance and hard work paying off, from a Soldier like him," said LTC David Tate, commander of 2nd Bn., 19th Inf. Regt. "He is truly living the American dream."

He has a wealth of valuable experience to share with new Infantry recruits, said 1SG Patrick Roberson, a 22-year veteran.

"He is one of the most loyal officers I've worked with," said the first sergeant of F Company, "and he has been an asset to the unit since he arrived."

"There's nothing unique about me. I'm just being a Soldier," Emelyanov said. "I'm just one of a couple million service members."

nervousness and a lot of excitement," Sawyer said. "It's emotional, too. As soon as I see his face, it might bring a tear.

"(The separation) is a lot harder than you can really imagine ... It's been tough, but it's over with now."

Just after 4 a.m., families and friends erupted in cheers as the Soldiers entered the terminal in formation and marched past "Welcome Home" banners before coming to a halt under a large American flag.

After an invocation and singing of the national anthem, Smith put the company "at ease" and told the crowd, "Families, come get your Soldier."

"It's outstanding, man," said SSG Charles Miller, with both arms wrapped around his wife, Eva. "You can't beat coming home."

The 63rd Engineers will get about a month of leave before resuming normal duties, Smith said.

Eva Miller said they'd soon take a trip to Disney World in Florida, and then head over to Tampa and St. Petersburg to see their family.

Her husband reflected on his fourth deployment overall and third to Iraq.

"This one was a little more safe," Miller said, adding he likely has at least one more trip to go with four years left until retirement. "As long as we keep up with the changes over there, I think we'll be all right."

SPC Charles Richards, home after a third Iraq deployment, soaked up hugs with his two daughters, Savannah and Madison.

"This is great," he said. "(The deployment) was long. The last one was 12 months and the first was six months. I'm just glad to be back."

His mother-in-law, Cathie Littlefield, drove from Dallas, Ga., about an hour northwest of Atlanta, to join the reunion. "I'm making a big pot of spaghetti for him tonight," she said.

Richards also has plans to visit his parents in Illinois, he said.

Coming back around the July Fourth holiday makes the homecoming even more special for the 63rd Engineers, Charles Miller said.

"Independence Day means a lot to our own freedom," he said. "Now, we're free again to be with our family and friends."

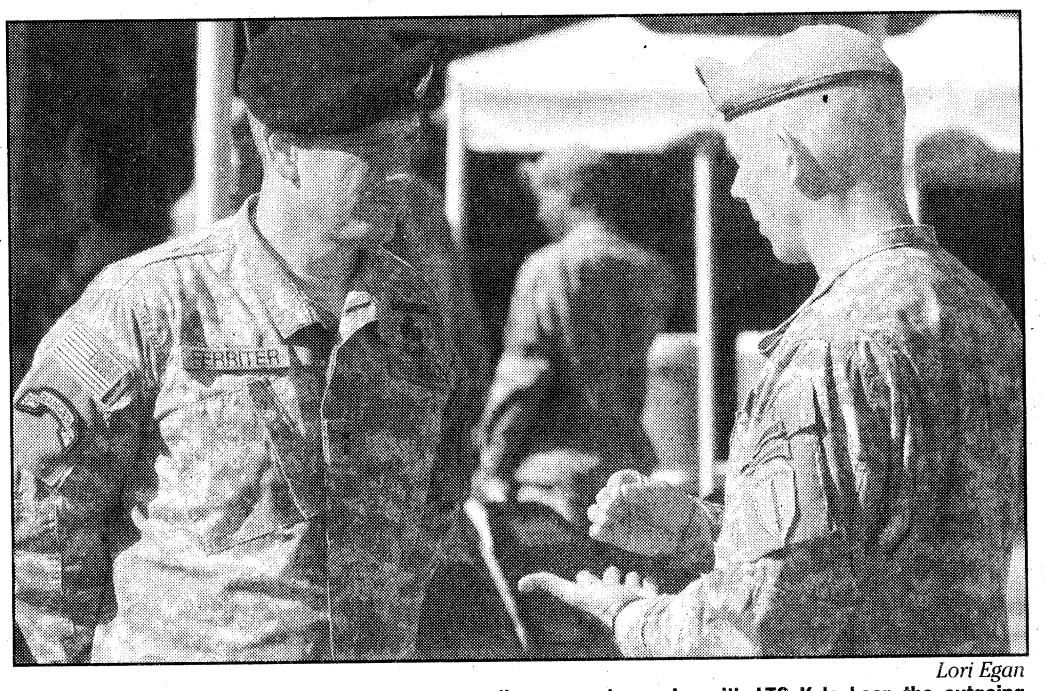
CG: Take 'opportunity to make Army better'

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

"It feels like home to us," said MG Michael Ferriter, new Fort Benning commanding general.

Ferriter has a long family history at Fort Benning, dating back to 1942 when his father attended Office Candidate School and he continues that history with his fifth tour.



A graduate of the officer basic and advanced courses at Fort Benning, Ferriter was assigned to the 3rd Ranger Battalion as an operations officer and 75th Ranger Regiment operations officer, then returned after graduating from the War College to command the 11th Infantry Regiment.

"We have watched our family grow here," he said. "So, we are very comfortable with the people here ... as well as the community downtown ... the warmth that you get each time you meet old friends and new friends in the Columbus and Chattahoochee area."

Since his last tour at Fort Benning in July 2001, much has changed, he said. The greatest changes, he said, are the housing improvements and Maneuver Center of Excellence construction.

"The investment we have put into the housing for young Soldier families and young officer families ... It is the right thing and appropriate," Ferriter said.

Ferriter said the Army is bringing state-of-the-art training facilities, living facilities and training area improvements during the next 18 months to two years as the Armor School completes the move to Benning.

Lori Egan
MG Michael Ferriter, left, Fort Benning's commanding general, speaks with LTC Kyle Lear, the outgoing commander of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, before the change of command ceremony Tuesday at Camp Merrill, Dahlonega, Ga.

He said the combined Armor and Infantry team will enhance the way the Army fights in the future.

"First of all, one of the enduring outputs at Fort Benning is it's a center of excellence for leadership," he said. "You are going to bring the best and the brightest leaders from two branches together.

"From that comes innovation, synthesis and creativity, so the way we may fight in three years will be further developed and refined right here as we bring together the way Armor leaders are training their young men and the way the Infantry School is training."

Ferriter said the Armor and Infantry schools will take the best practices and lessons learned from Iraq and Afghanistan and incorporate them into the MCOE.

"When we are called together to fight as a team, there will be a greater understanding of weapons capabilities and speed of movement and speed of decision that we might have otherwise not had in the past."

Leadership will play a key role in bringing the Armor and Infantry schools together, and although Ferriter said it was difficult to define his leadership style, he offered some insight to what he expected from leaders.

"I love to lead Soldiers," he said. "I think we are very privileged and I think our rank is a symbol of servitude in an organization that serves our country. Leaders should step up each day and tie their boots tight and say, 'Today I am going to demonstrate inspirational leadership. I am going to find someone who needs my help and take care of them.'"

Ferriter said he has high standards and will expect the same of his leaders.

"That means you can hand a cup of self-esteem to your troops and you can also have a highly trained and disciplined outfit," he said.

Ferriter said he concentrate on the priorities the previous commands have set over the past two years.

"Fort Benning is on track and has been on track," he said. "General Barbero and the leaders here spent some time in the development of the priorities and you will see them posted throughout the installation ... taking care of the families, fully support an Army at war, ensuring we enforce the standards and discipline, and then again, do that in a climate that encourages leaders to develop, leaders to be open and know they are going to develop and grow and be able to accept feedback in order to get better still.

"And finally, to approach each day as an opportunity to make the Army better."

RSLC cuts admin time, maintains competitive edge

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

The Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course offered by Fort Benning's 4th Ranger Training Battalion provides training to reconnaissance and surveillance leaders in all branches of the military.

But with current operational tempos high for many units, the RTB needed to find a way to train troops limited by time because of their unit's reset and redeployment processes, said CPT Brian Canny, executive officer for D Company, RTB.

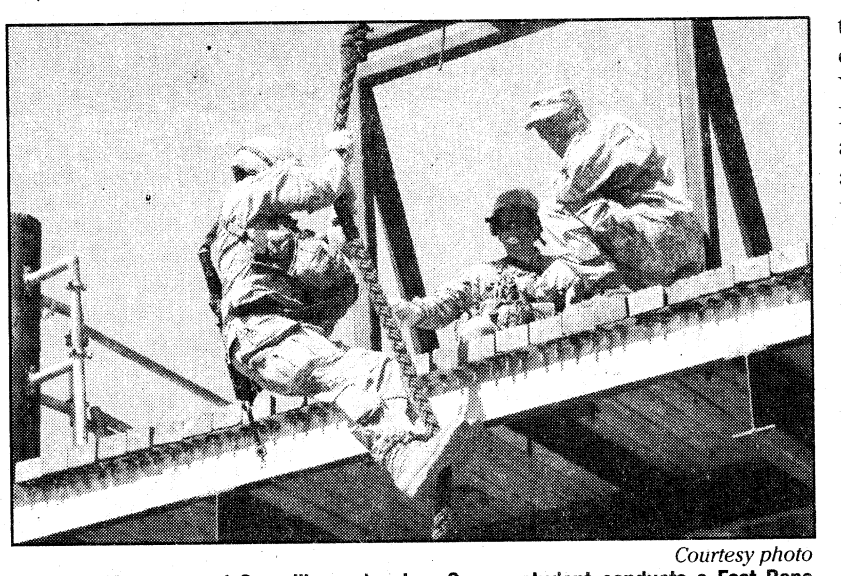
Previously 33 days long, the course introduced a shorter, streamlined course giving troops more hands-on time and a shorter stay at the post by reducing administrative time and eliminating non-essential training.

The move from a to a 26-day course is in line with achieving a greater competitive edge alongside shorter courses, such as the Army Reconnaissance Course, said SSG Alexander Marotta, an RSLC instructor with D Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, which conducts the course.

Formerly known as the Long Range Surveillance Leaders Course, RSLC was developed in 1986 to teach mission-essential tasks drawn from lessons learned in previous long-range reconnaissance operations conducted in Southeast Asia, according to a 2004 article in Infantry Magazine. In 2002, the course was renamed RSLC, and tailored to further develop the combat arms related skills of troops eligible for assignments to units whose primary mission is to conduct reconnaissance and surveillance, target acquisition and combat assessment operations. The course expanded from 36 slots available per course to 82 slots, and is open to eligible personnel from all branches of the military.

Today, the course brings in a variety of personnel, including Reconnaissance troops, cavalry scouts, Pathfinders, battlefield surveillance brigade troops, Navy Special Warfare candidates, Marine reconnaissance officers, Special Forces teams and Rangers.

Modifications made to RSLC, which provides expert-level instruction in areas including reconnaissance, surveillance, target acquisition, data transmission and foreign vehicle identification, will not affect training standards, Canny said.



RSLC will continue to provide essential training for all reconnaissance and surveillance leaders regardless of the type of unit they serve in, Canny said.

Among the changes, RSLC has cut back retraining time for first-time failures on land navigation as well as condensing classroom time on written land navigation skills.

For potential students, this means they must come prepared, said SFC Brian Baumgartner, primary instructor for land navigation and reconnaissance phyiscal exercises.

Troops should be reviewing and training on land navigation prior to coming to this course, Baumgartner said.

Classroom and field instruction was also reduced in the areas of vehicle mobility and close target reconnaissance. The course eliminated survival, evasion, and recovery and digital navigation, which had previously been trimmed back, Baumgartner said.

A Reconnaissance and Surveillance Leaders Course student conducts a Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction System exercise.

Additionally, nontactical airborne operations and Special Patrol Insertion and Extraction and Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction systems courses were combined into one day to reduce administrative time.

The course culminates in a five-day field training exercise, which was reduced by one day.

The result of the changes is an increase in practical exercises, which leads to an increase in retention of knowledge, said Marotta, primary instructor for intelligence collection and vehicle identification.

The course will continue to offer specialized training in areas such as vehicle identification, photography, observation techniques, communication, data transmission, battle drills and camouflage.

"Everyone who comes here, regardless of their skill level, is going to learn something," Marotta said.

LTC Daniel Waters, who graduated RSLC June 12, said he signed up for the course to increase his understanding of the capabilities of the recon squadron he would soon command. Waters is the incoming commander for 1st Squadron, 221st Armored Cavalry Regiment, of the Nevada National Guard.

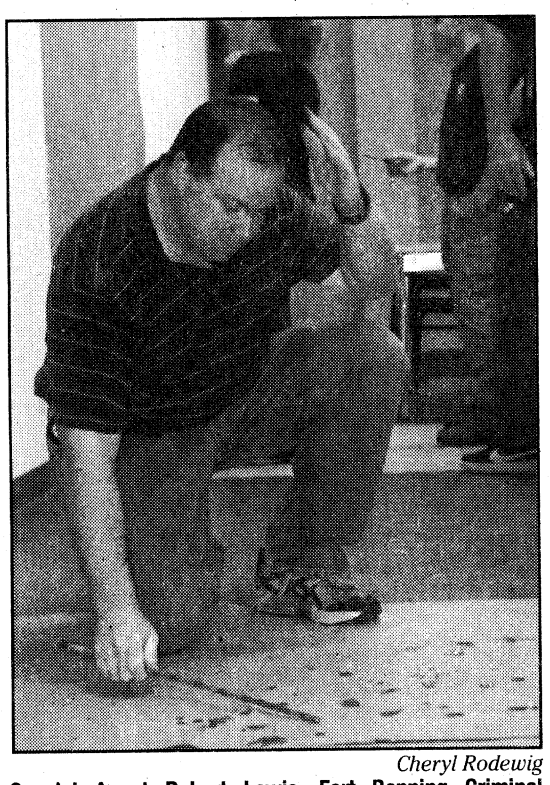
"As you move up through the ranks, you turn from direct leadership aspects to indirect. I liked getting back to the troop level, being at the tip of the spear," Waters said.

Waters said the course improved his knowledge of in-depth planning for team-level missions.

"When you send out a six-man team, you must make up for the lack of force protection and firepower. You must plan for contingencies. If there are any shortcomings in a person's planning, I can see that and improve the plan to make it valuable," he said.

The recent changes to the course are not noticeable to students, Marotta said.

By shaving a week off the course, RSLC has increased its attractiveness to units needing a quicker training cycle. However, other options are also available, Canny said.



The executive officer said RSLC offers Resident Unit Training, Mobile Training Teams and the Observer Controller/EXEVAL Package. For specialized training, Canny recommends units contact Co. D six to seven months in advance.

According to information posted at the school's Web site, students must possess a Ranger school physical completed within the last 18 months and be an E-5 or above (waiverable by the first O-5 in the chain of command). Personnel assigned to, have the potential to be assigned to or work alongside Infantry and Field Artillery units or involved in reconnaissance and surveillance operations are eligible to attend the course. RSLC graduates are authorized the 6B additional skill identifier.

For more information about the course, visit the RSLC Web site at https://www.infantry.army.mil/rtb/new_lrsc/default.htm or call RSLC at 706-544-6039.

Slots are still available for the next class scheduled to begin July 12.

Law enforcement study blood-stain patterns to aid investigations

Special Agent Robert Lewis, Fort Benning Criminal Investigation Command, spatters blood with a blunt object to study the patterns it creates June 23 in Infantry Hall.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Soldiers with the Criminal Investigation Command and local law enforcement from Georgia and Alabama studied blood spatter patterns last week in Infantry Hall.

MAJ Brian Heverly, operations officer for the post CID Battalion, said the class provided needed professional development, especially since Fort Benning's forensic science specialist PCSed recently.

"It directly impacts their ability to solve crimes and that's what they're here for," Heverly said. "A lot of times when you have a crime scene, time is of the essence, so this is another tool in their kit to help them steer the course of the investigation."

The 40-hour course focused on directionality, drying times and patterns made with blood. For the course, students worked with lamb's blood, so the consistency would be the same as what they would encounter during a crime scene investigation.

Special Agent Jennifer Harris, Fort Benning CID Battalion, said she was glad she had the opportunity to take the class.

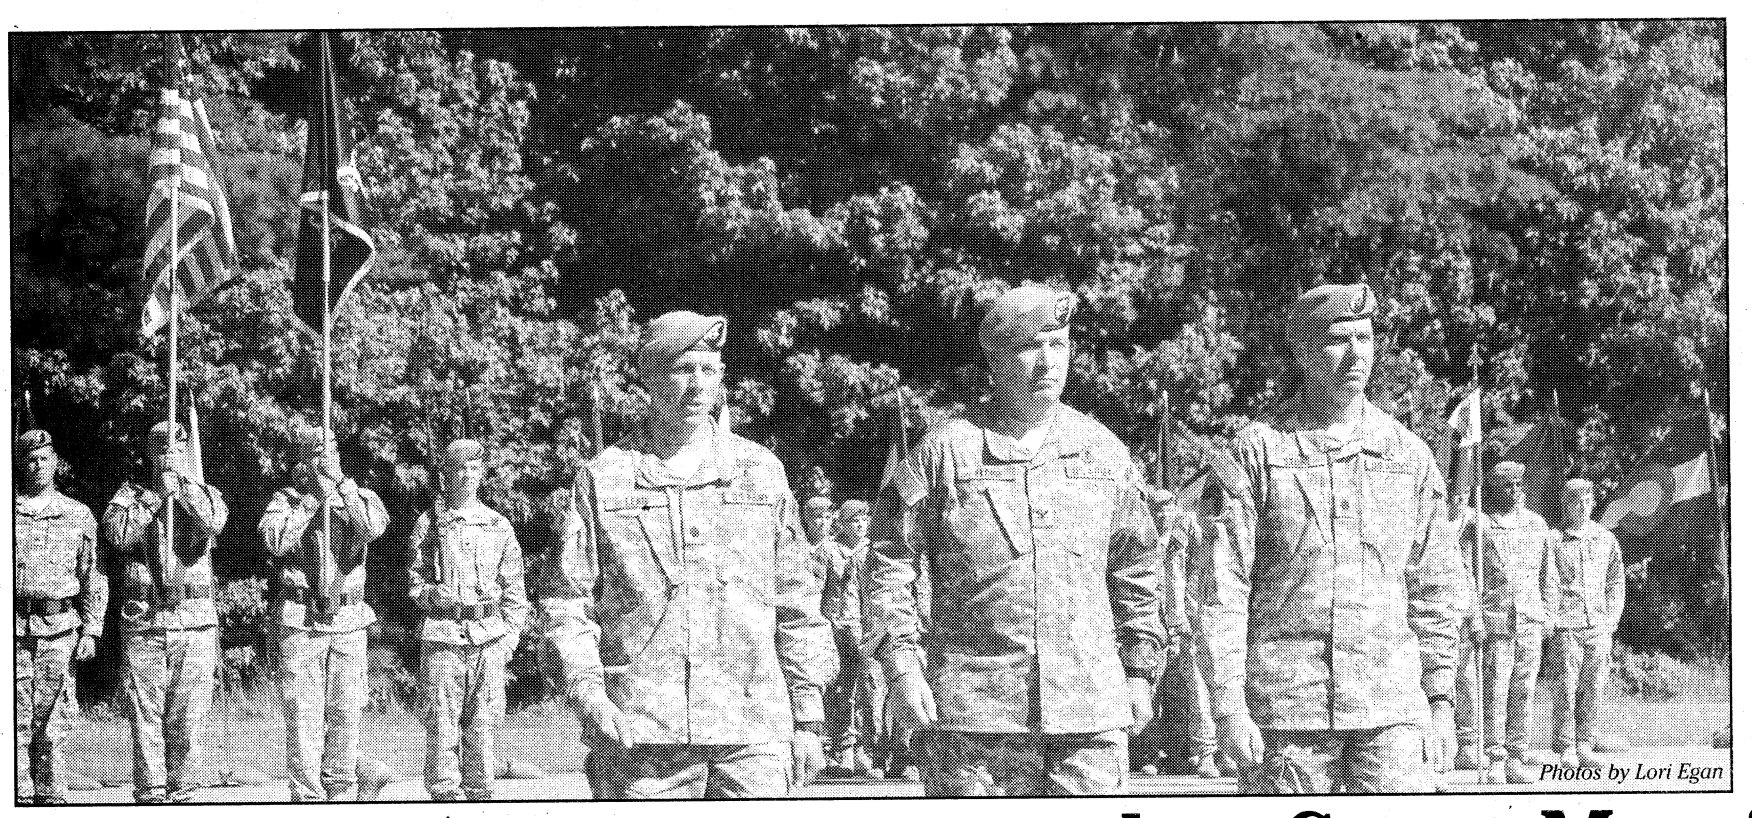
"It'll definitely make me a better investigator," she said. "When I walked into the last scene that was bloody, all I could do was photograph because I couldn't interpret what the blood was telling me. This will help me interpret it a lot more.

"Ultimately, you want to find out the truth of what happened at a crime scene. Without any witnesses' testimonies, you can walk in and you should be able to at least get an idea of what happened. That's why I think this class is important."

Analyzing blood patterns isn't difficult, said Rex Plant, instructor for the course. It's just a matter of knowing basic rules of physics and trigonometry and applying them to the pattern made by the blood.

"It can tell you so much ... where people were standing, how many times they were hit in the area, how long the blood has been there, estimated angles of impact," he said.

The students also learned how to identify the weapon used and discover if the scene was cleaned with a chemical agent. They spattered blood with different weapons, studied transferred patterns and used different surfaces, from paper to grass.



The training was more in-depth than any Thomas Pell, crime scene investigator for the Phenix City Police Department, has had before.

"It's been helpful," Pell said. "I've learned a lot about reading the direction, the angles, velocity. ... A lot of training we go to is not as hands-on. It's going to make it easier for (us) to understand a crime scene."

"The hands-on is 10 times better," said Special Agent Horace Jackson, post CID Battalion. "You're seeing what could possibly occur if someone did use a knife, an ice pick, a gun. ... You can actually see the differences in here because we take it through the different scenarios."

Jackson said he had been with CID for nearly 15 years but had never completed this type of training.

"I've learned quite a bit over the last couple days since we've been here — wish I'd had it earlier," he said. "I've worked in a lot of death investigations over the years, but this enhances your actual perception of crime scenes. It's kind of like going back in time and seeing what may have occurred at the crime scene. It helps you understand better."

Stone's most recent position was as the 75th Ranger Regiment's executive officer.

LTC Christopher Stone took the reins of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion from LTC Kyle Lear during a change of command ceremony Tuesday at Camp Frank D. Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga.

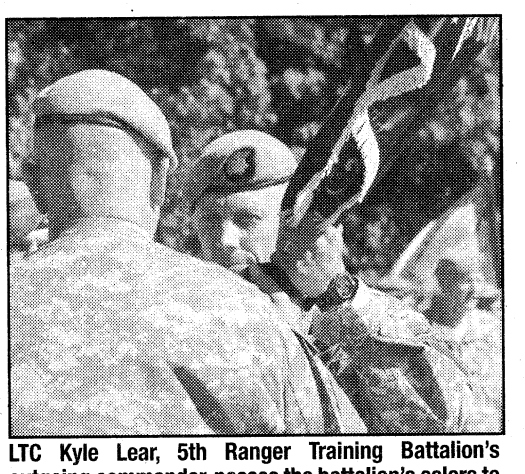
Before taking command of the unit responsible for the Mountain Phase of Ranger training, Stone was the executive officer for the 75th Ranger Regiment. Other assignments include battalion operations officer for the 2nd Bn., 505th Parachute Infantry Regiment, from 2004-2005 and the battalion's executive officer from 2005-2006. His awards and decorations include the Bronze Star, Meritorious Service Medal, Combat Infantryman Badge and Expert Infantryman Badge.

Before citing the accomplishments of both men, the ceremony's reviewing officer, COL Douglas Flohr, commander of the Ranger Training Brigade, praised the Soldiers standing in formation on the field.

"These are the men who conduct the toughest phase in Ranger School — the Mountain Phase," Flohr said. "These are American Rangers and they produce the finest combat leaders in the world."

The brigade's mission is to provide the military with Ranger leaders prepared for combat, Flohr said, men who choose environmental hardship over comfort and danger over safety.

"These are the men Kyle Lear has successfully led for the past two years," he said. "Men who are living embodiments of loyalty, selfless service, sacrifice and honor. Men who love their country — patriots — every one of them."



During Lear's command, more than 3,600 Rangers earned the Ranger Tab, which is "the greatest compliment I can pay to Kyle and his command," Flohr said, telling the audience he didn't envy Lear, who led the Rangers from the front while displaying a mental toughness and winning spirit.

"Giving up this battalion was the hardest thing I've ever done," said Flohr, who commanded the battalion from 2003 to 2005.

Lear and his family are PCSing to Vicenza, Italy, where he will serve as the deputy commanding officer for the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team.

In his remarks, Lear credited the professionalism and expertise of the cadre for the battalion's success in training Soldiers.

"Many of (the 3,600) Rangers or their Soldiers are still alive today because of the instruction provided by these men," he said. "The Rangers of this battalion are among the best Soldiers and the best Army our nation has ever fielded. It has been an honor to serve alongside of them."

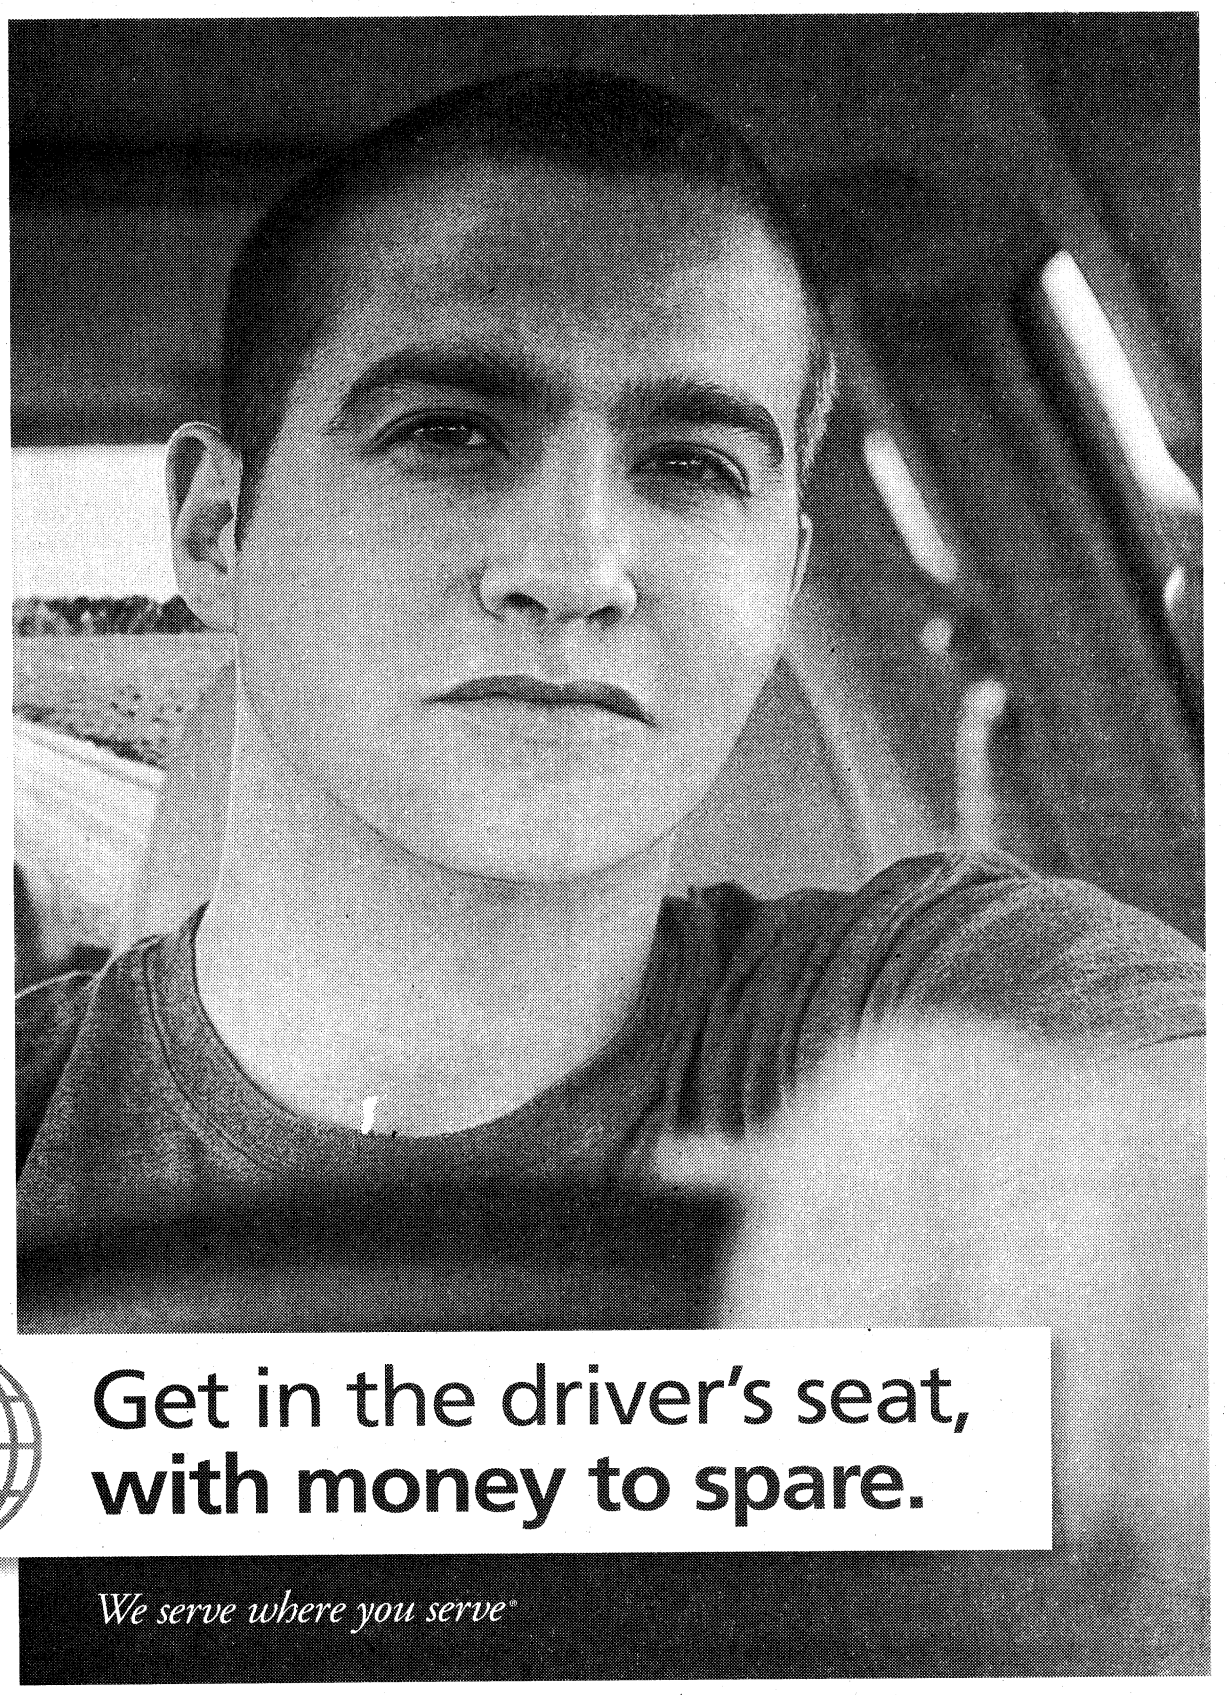
Lear described the Stones as a perfect fit for the battalion.



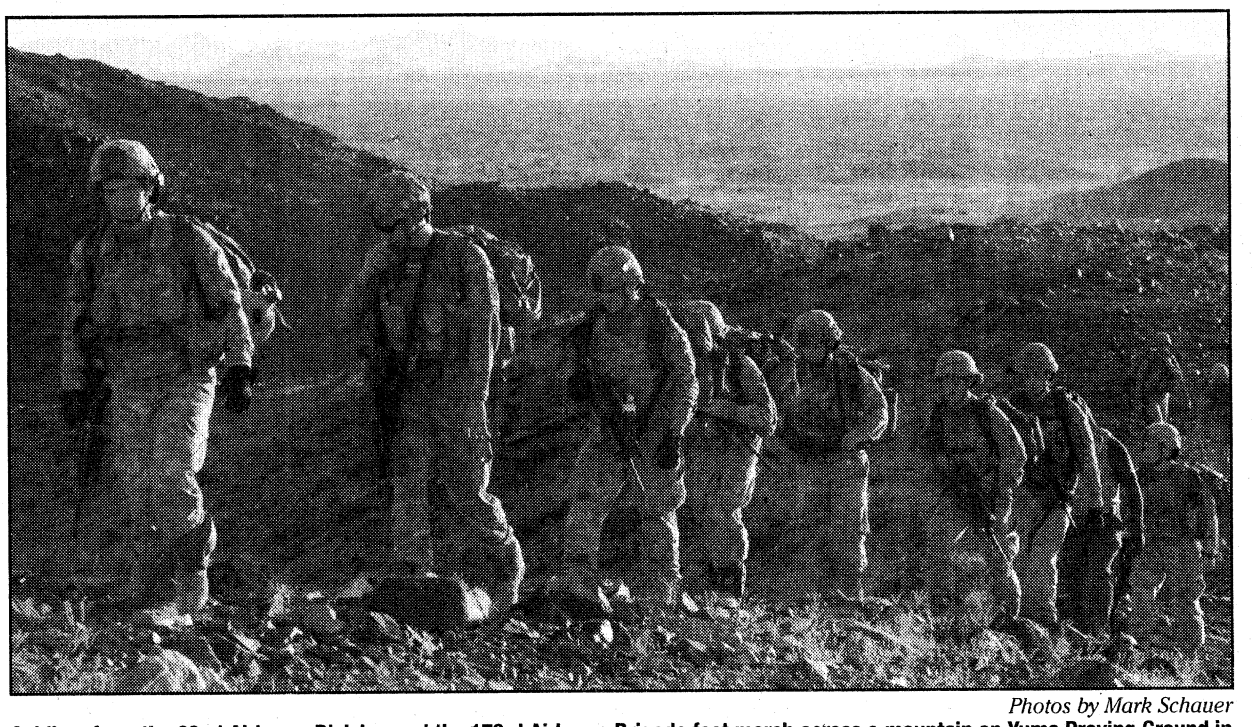
"Chris is absolutely the right replacement to command this battalion," he said.

Stone, who joined the Army in 1984 and graduated from one station unit training on Sand Hill, served with 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and as an Airborne instructor with 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, before graduating from the University of Delaware's ROTC program.

LTC Christopher Stone, commander of the 5th RTB, and his wife, Judy, greet well-wishers after the ceremony.

"It's an honor to serve in your ranks," he told the Rangers, and thanked the Lears for the support provided during the transition.

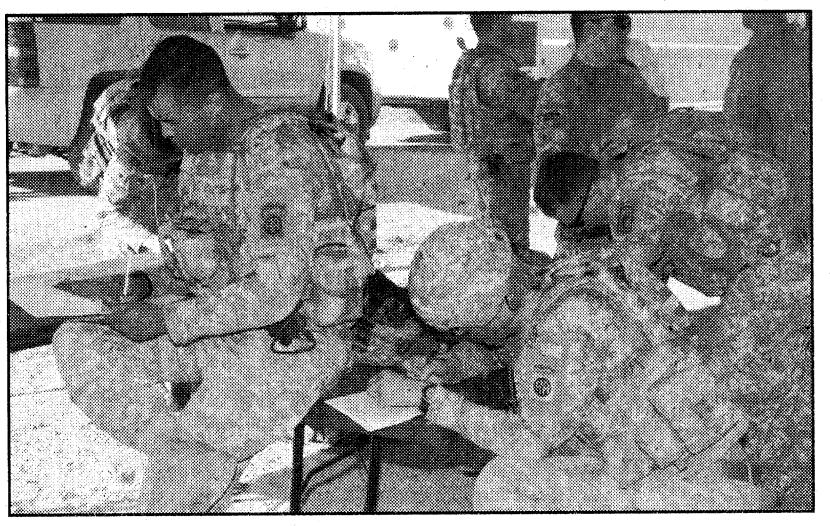
Yuma puts lightweight armor through its paces



Mark Schauer
YUMA PROVING GROUND PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Three-dozen Soldiers wearing body armor and carrying packs hiked into the mountainous terrain. Barely perceptible in the distance along a ridge was the forward operating base and the troops knew it would be hours before they returned to a meal and a cot. In between will be a day like all others since they arrived: long marches, entering and exiting armored vehicles, firing rifles, scrambling through obstacle-laden villages and treacherous insurgent houses, and eating MREs for lunch.

If this sounded like a typical day for Soldiers in Southwest Asia, the Training and Exercise Management Office at Yuma Proving Ground mimicked the conditions for Soldiers in Arizona to provide a realistic environment while developing the next generation of body armor.



Heavy body armor can impede the mobility of Soldiers in combat situations, said Jeremy Reed, a project officer from Fort Benning's Maneuver Battle Lab. Consequently, Soldiers run the risk of being outmaneuvered by the enemy. To counter this threat, the Defense Department wants to find a more lightweight armor system for American Soldiers.

"Our goal is to field a lighter, more mobile body armor system to allow Soldiers operating in high elevations increased mobility without lessening the amount of protection the armor provides," said Reed, who served two tours in Iraq.

Soldiers from the 82nd Airborne Division and the 173rd Airborne Brigade foot march across a mountain on Yuma Proving Ground in southwestern Arizona to simulate conditions in Afghanistan while evaluators worked to improve the body armor system.

At the conclusion of each exercise, participating Soldiers reported their opinion of the body armor's performance. More than 10,000 pages of Soldier evaluations were collected during the two-week demonstration.

Since the new armor system would benefit Soldiers deployed in the mountains of Afghanistan, evaluators needed a site that accurately simulated the topography encountered in Southeast Asia, said LTC Robert Myles, product manager for Soldier Survivability at Program Executive Office Soldier of Fort Belvoir, Va. Yuma Proving Ground's extensive range space was a logical choice. Using volunteers from Fort Bragg, N.C.'s 82nd Airborne Division and the 173rd Airborne Brigade based in Vicenza, Italy, the Maneuver Battle Lab staged a two-week exercise to evaluate personal armor systems. All troops that participated had previously been deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan.

"We're testing the compatibility, mobility and effectiveness of the equipment," said MAJ Michael Williams, branch chief of the Maneuver Battle Lab. "Our job is to test in conditions as close to combat as possible."

Each day began at the FOB where the Soldiers donned the armor being evaluated that day. For comparison purposes, one of those systems was the Improved Outer Tactical Vest currently used in Iraq and Afghanistan. The Soldiers carried the exact same rucksack every day, which data collectors weighed to confirm that the previous day's specifications were duplicated. The Soldiers then marched into a nearby mountain range. The Soldiers and several data collectors climbed up the slope, wound their way across the top of a ridge, then descended to the valley.

After data was collected, the Soldiers proceeded by bus to an obstacle course outside the K9 Village, one of YPG's simulated insurgent villages.

They tested the maneuverability of the body armor by climbing walls, negotiating a tire course, crawling through tunnels and covered ditches, climbing up and down steep A-frame roofs and staircases, pulling themselves up through high windows, and navigating through a simulated insurgent house.

Then the troops proceeded to a firing range, where they practiced combat maneuvers while wearing the armor. The Soldiers returned to the FOB for more tests to measure how quickly Soldiers could enter and exit a series of common combat vehicles, the range of motion each Soldier was capable of while wearing the armor, how easily the armor could be donned and doffed in a variety of positions while wearing a helmet, and how quickly a simulated wounded Soldier could be evacuated while wearing the armor.

The tested armor systems will undergo ballistics testing at another facility. The evaluations conducted at YPG could benefit deployed Soldiers as early as this summer.

DSOY: Competition tests Soldiers' fitness, knowledge

between, the drill sergeants battled in combatives, firing-range activities, an obstacle course, land navigation and orienteering. They also were evaluated on how well they teach recruits tasks such as emergency care, how to enter and clear a room, and deal with improvised explosive devices.

There was a 3 a.m. wakeup call one day after the drill sergeants got only five hours of sleep. Throughout the week, they also walked almost everywhere they went.

"The worst part was not knowing what's next," Johnston said. "On the road marches, you never knew how long they'd last ... Except for the APFT, you had no idea who was winning throughout the competition."

Johnston, who's been a drill sergeant for about 18 months, described himself as "confident, competent, and tactically and technically proficient," and applied those same attributes to the contest.

"They're definitely the traits I live by," he said. "You have to know your job and know the Soldiers you train. Recognizing their needs is the hardest part. You have to take each one of those Soldiers and see what you need to do to build them up as a Soldier."

Johnston, who's been in the Army for more than seven years and deployed to Afghanistan twice, said his first drill sergeant and the officers, noncommissioned officers and privates he's worked with and trained laid the foundation for his military success. He credits his father, Kevin, a 23-year Navy veteran and retired master chief petty officer, for giving him the right building blocks in life.

During a 14-week training cycle, Johnston said drill sergeants might get 11 off days. He said his wife, Malinda, pushed him to study and prepare for the Drill Sergeant of the Year selection boards, which cut into time with his two daughters, ages 7 and 6.

"I just want to thank her for all the hours she's helped me," he said. "All those Sundays. It was many, many hours."

Johnston and Marshall will spend the next year as liaisons between drill sergeants and TRADOC, which oversees all Army training. They also get to plan and execute the 2010 Drill Sergeant of the Year competition.

"It's more than just a competition. Now, I have a whole new set of duties and responsibilities I've got to fulfill," Johnston said. "My focus is on preparing for the job. I hope I do as well as the previous winners ... I don't want to let anyone down."

Next month, Johnston will be reassigned to TRADOC headquarters at Fort Monroe and work directly for Bruner and the command staff. He said he views it as an invaluable opportunity.

"I want to learn as much as I can (and) ... be able to bring that back into the NCO corps," he said. "I'll be a staff sergeant working right below generals, colonels and sergeants major. I'll be that one little guy, but have a big part to play as long as I perform my duties properly.

"Hopefully, I'll be able to relay what I've already learned as a drill sergeant in today's modern Army ... to make training better or more realistic for the Soldier."

Later this summer, Johnston will receive the Stephen Ailes Award at the Pentagon as the Army's active-duty Drill Sergeant of the Year.

After the TRADOC stint, Johnston said he plans to attend the Special Forces Selection Course at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Editor's note: Carroll Kim, of the U.S. Army Training and Doctrine Command public affairs office, contributed to this report.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

U.S. soccer loses, but gains respect

The U.S. men's national team dropped a two-goal lead to lose to Brazil, 3-2, in the Confederations Cup.

The team did exceed expectations, though, with a 2-0 win over Spain in the semifinal match.

Spain was the favorite to win the tournament, which ran for two weeks in South Africa.

LSU topples Texas

The LSU Tigers baseball team beat the Texas Longhorns 11-4 at the College World Series June 24 in the finale of a best-of-three series.

The Tigers now have their sixth title, which ties them with the Longhorns for second most on the all-time list.

USC leads with 12 championships.

Wimbledon plays on

One of the biggest tennis events of the year, Wimbledon, began last week and will wrap up with the final matches on Sunday.

In a first for the tournament, the roof on Centre Court was closed because of rain.

Amelie Mauresmo scored the first point after it closed, for you trivia buffs.

Voting over

As of 11:59 p.m. Thursday, voting for the 2009 MLB All-Star game closed.

This year marks the 80th All-Star game, and will be played at Busch Stadium in St. Louis July 14.

The State Farm Home Run Derby will be July 13.

All the events will be broadcast on Fox.

Logano makes history with win

Sprint Cup rookie Joey Logano, who took over the No. 20 car from Tony Stewart for Joe Gibbs Racing, got his first victory in 20 races at New Hampshire Motor Speedway on Sunday.

Although rain shortened the race to 273 out of 301 laps, Logano drove smart and became the youngest driver, at age 19, to win a Cup race.

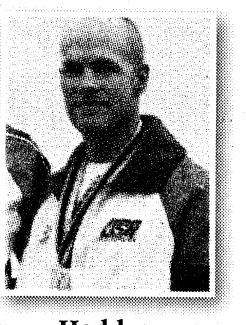
The teams head back to Daytona, where the season started, for a Saturday night race.

Coverage will be at 7:30 p.m. on TNT.

Rivera marks 500

New York Yankees closer Mariano Rivera became only the second reliever to record 500 career saves Sunday in New York. Milwaukee's Trevor Hoffman has 571.

Rivera reached the milestone as the Yankees beat the Mets, 4-2.



AMU Soldier wins gold at World Cup

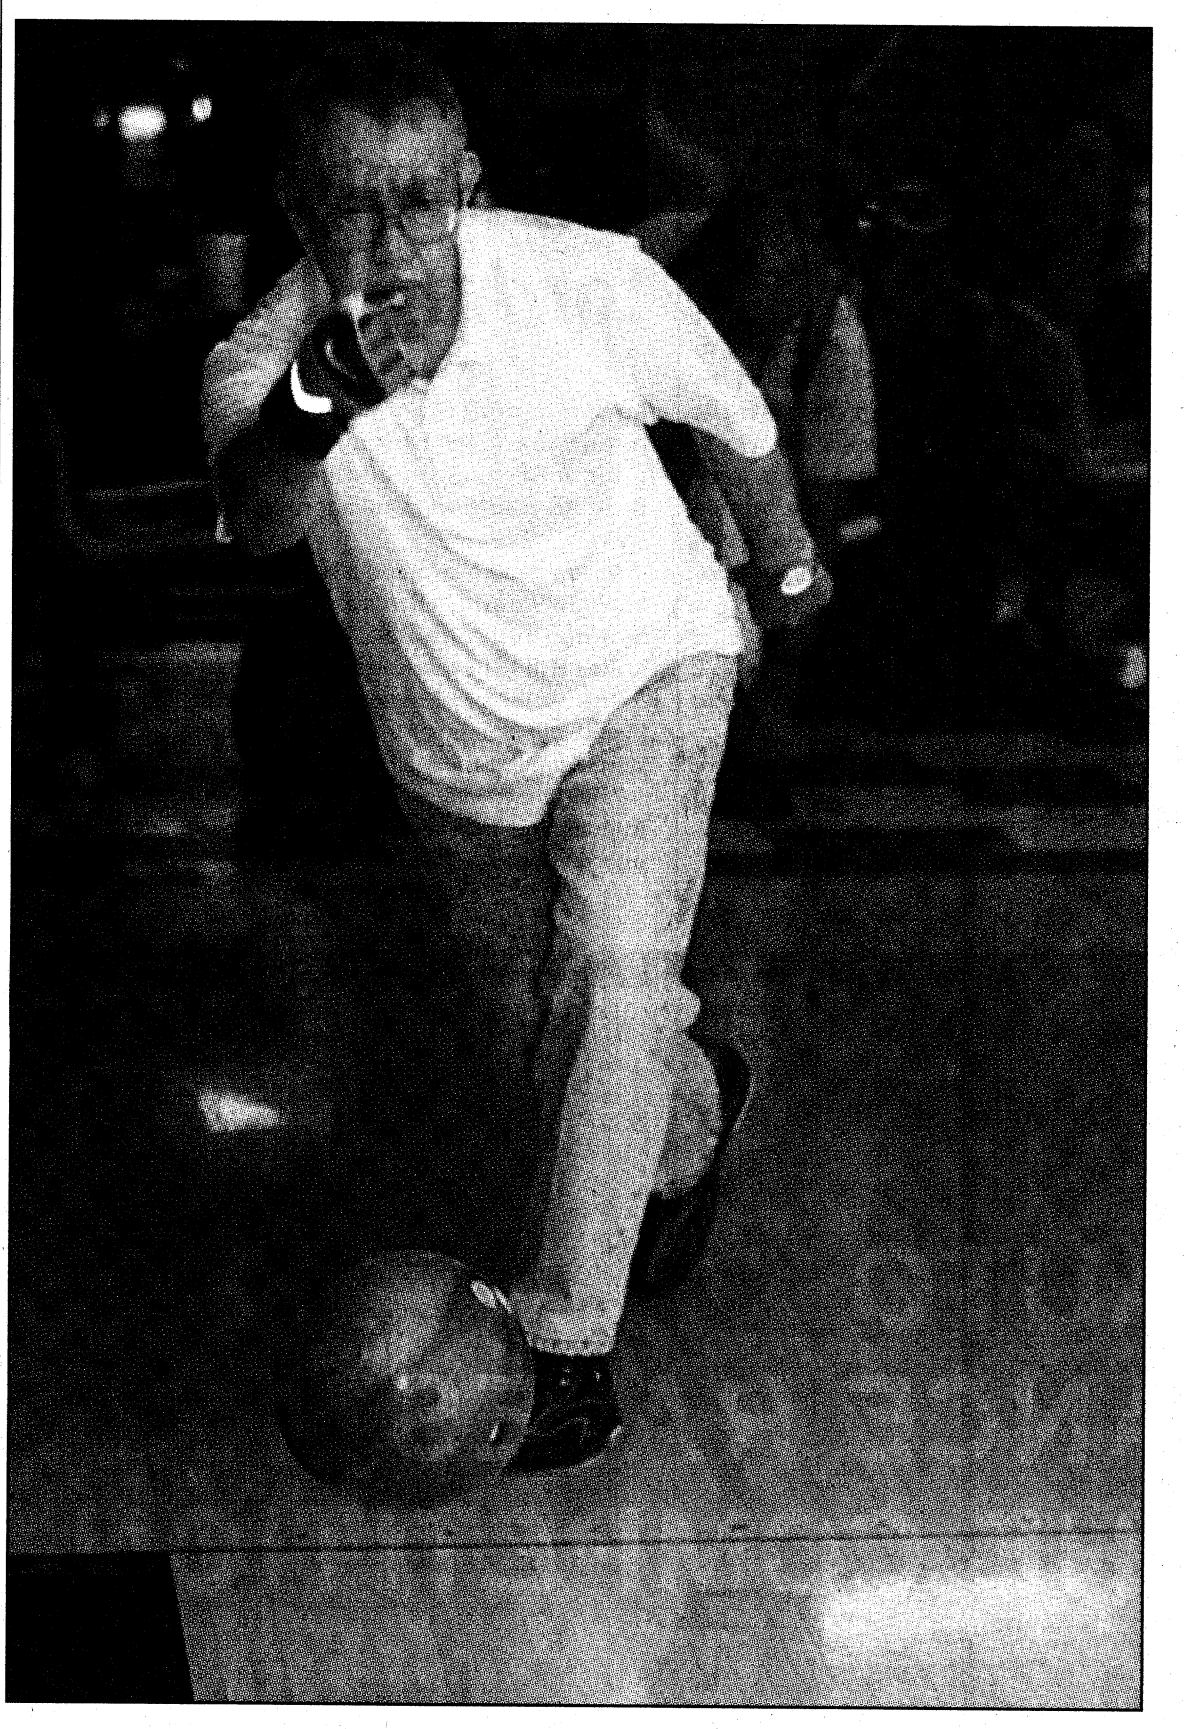
SSG Ryan Hadden of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit prevailed at the 2009 San Marino World Cup competition earning the gold medal in the trap event.

Hadden, a shotgun team member, was tied after the final round with the Czech Republic's David Kostelecky, forcing a sudden-death shoot-off. Hadden came up victorious after the third round, hitting his target while his opponent missed. It is Hadden's second gold medal winning performance in two World Cup events this year.



"I was confident," Hadden said. "I was actually feeling better in the shoot-off than in the fourth round of the match. I was able to keep it composed."

Hadden

In addition to winning the gold medal, Hadden earned the coveted U.S. Distinguished International Shooter Badge. The badge, along with the Distinguished Rifleman and Distinguished Pistol Shot badge, is the United States' highest award for marksmanship excellence.

Hadden said he looks forward to celebrating with his family and teammates when he gets back on U.S. soil.

Bowling is 'for any age'

79-year-old has 'been hooked on bowling since age 12'

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Bowling is a sport for any age, said 79-year-old CWO(R) Dan Olds, who bowls every Tuesday in a league at the Mall Bowling Alley on post.

"It's good exercise and you don't have to be a big person (in stature) to enjoy it," he said. "And it's a sport that is relatively inexpensive."

Olds remembers when children's bowling balls were made of cork and bowling pins were replaced by hand because at the age of 12, he was a pin boy.

"In the 1940s, everything was hand-operated," he said. "To replace pins, you either stepped on a pedal and spikes came out of the floor and you put the pins on it or you had a rack."

Olds began bowling because as a pin boy, he could bowl for free. He has been hooked on bowling from the moment he started it, he said.

"It's a sport that requires accuracy and concentration and I like the competitive nature of bowling," he said. "When I'm not bowling, I'm thinking about bowling."

Another thing that hasn't changed — since 1977 — is his bowling partner, 69-year-old CWO(R) Dick Erogdon. Olds and Erogdon met 32 years ago when they were stationed at Fort Bliss, Texas.

"Olds is a competitive person. He doesn't like to lose," Erogdon said. "I'm a competitive person, too. That's why I like bowling."

Erogdon and Olds have competed in state senior and Southeastern tournaments and the Georgia Golden Olympics. Olds has a bowling average of 182 and Erogdon's average is 166.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Reaves stresses bowling's mental aspect

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Bowling is a sport that is as much mental as it is physical, said 1SG(R) Jim Reaves, coach of the youth bowling league at the Mall Bowling Alley on post.

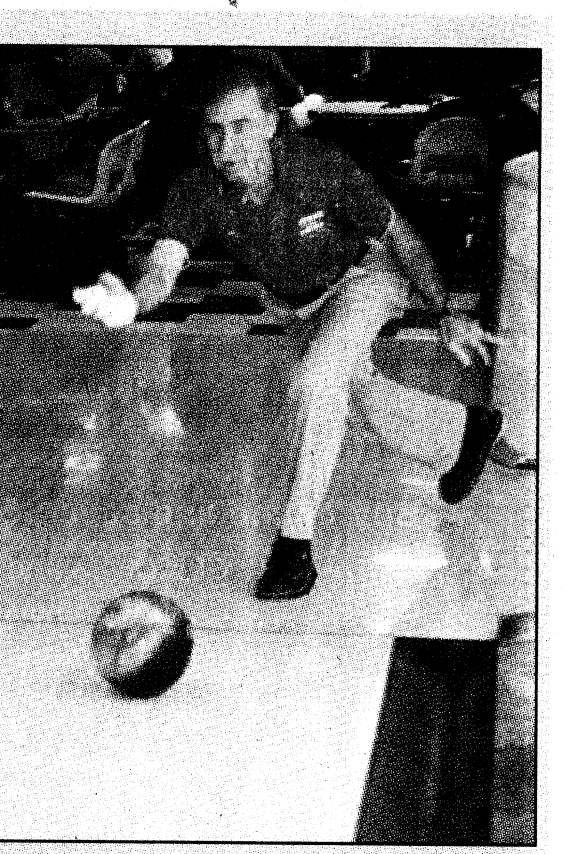
Reaves emphasizes the "thinking" part of the game to the youth league.

"The mental part of the game is focusing on the target mark and mentally preparing yourself for each shot before you get on the lane," said Reaves, who is a certified bronze U.S. Bowling Congress coach. "It's about focusing on what the ball is going to do down the lane, the trajectory and the arch of the ball and mentally going through the motion of the backswing all the way to the target."

The league includes children ages 6 to 20.

Reaves teaches beginning bowlers how to approach the lane and push the ball, stand at the foul line and roll the ball, swing the ball back and step up with the foot and how to execute the four-step approach.

Reaves helps experienced bowlers refine the four-step approach — working on accuracy and fluid motion.



"Bowling is about accuracy," Reaves said. "If you roll the ball in a specific place on the lane and you stand at a specific place you'll knock down 10 pins."

But the slightest change in form can stop that, he said. Bowlers develop their own style of bowling, but accuracy is important.

Reaves, who retired at Fort Benning, started bowling in 1970 when he was 20 years old because "it was something to do."

"I was in AIT and a friend of mine bowled and he taught me what he knew," he said. "We started going to the bowling centers and I have bowled ever since."

While in the Army, Reaves bowled on intramural teams in Fort Monmouth, N.J., Fort Sill, Okla., and Yuma Proving Ground, Ariz., and bowled in tournaments around the world including Alaska and Europe. Reaves has bowled an 861 series and has completed 27 perfect games and eight 800-plus series.

Twenty finalists will vie for 2009 Military Long Drive title

Tim Hipps

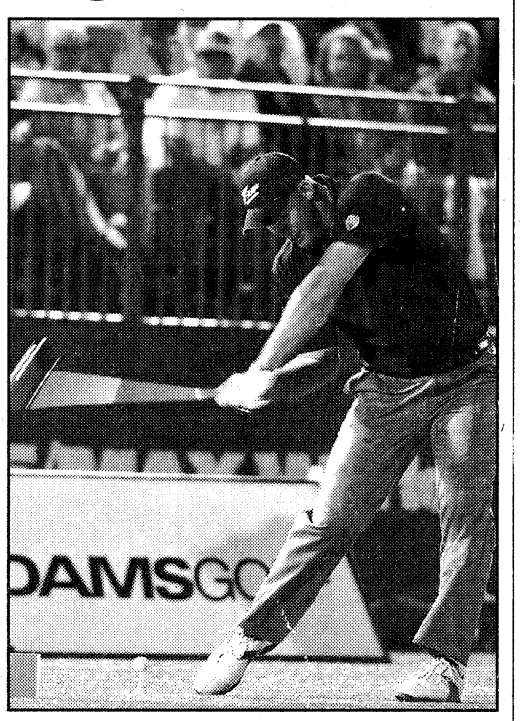
ALEXANDRIA, Va. — For the first time in the competition, 20 big hitters will advance to the finals of the 2009 Military Long Drive Championship presented by 7Up to compete for $10,000 Oct. 28 in Mesquite, Nev.

Former Army sergeant and military spouse Brandon Boehmer, who finished second in the 2008 Military Long Drive Championship, can't wait to earn another trip to Mesquite.

"It gives you an opportunity to go out there and win some money, get some sponsors, and meet good people, too," Boehmer said. "I've met a ton of good people out here. And if you win these little scrambles, they give you thousand-dollar clubs. I feel like a king.

"I'm from the country. If you go to tournaments out there, you get a hot dog, a Coke and a smile and a cigar, if you want one. Out here, they gave me clubs, a free flight over here, a stay in a nice hotel. It was awesome. The whole thing was great from start to finish."



Boehmer played golf without much success as a youngster and took up the sport of long driving 40 days before stepping onto the grand stage in Mesquite.

"I golfed with our club pro a couple of times and he told me I had a hell of a swing," said Boehmer, who works with U.S. Army Youth Sports programs at Camp Zama, Japan.

SSG Bryan King reached the finals in each of the first two years of the military competition.

"The Army always has some of the best people in anything in the world — you can put it right up there with people that are great at it or have the potential to be great," King said.

The Army Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command-backed Military Long Drive Championship is open to all active-duty military and family members, 18 and older, including National Guard, Reserves and retirees from all services.

U.S. Coast Guard Petty Officer 3rd Class Ryan Hixson wins the 2008 Military Long Drive Championship presented by 7Up with a drive of 389 yards in Mesquite, Nev. With the victory in the Army Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command event, Hixson won $10,000 and an exemption into the 2009 RE/MAX World Long Drive Championship. Twenty competitors will vie for the 2009 Military World Long Drive Championship presented by 7Up on Oct. 28 in Mesquite.

"MWR is all about families, not just Soldiers," said King, who is accustomed to being treated like a king. "I wouldn't be surprised if some of the top open-division guys have a military dependent card."

King dreams of eventually seeing a long-drive competition added to the Armed Forces Sports calendar. For now, a week in Mesquite with the Long Drivers of America will suffice.

"If they're doing it, I'm doing it," King said.

This time, local winners earn a trip to Mesquite.

Fort Benning will conduct its long drive qualifier Aug. 24 at the Follow Me Golf Course. For more information, call 706-687-1940.

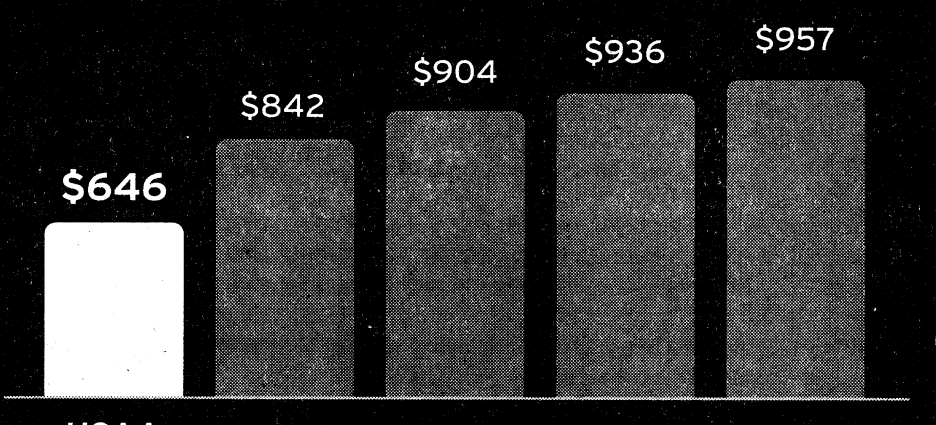
camaraderie of the bowling league.

For anyone new to bowling, Olds said there are many ways to improve in the sport.

"Get a good coach and a book on basic bowling," he said. "There are many helpful bowling Web sites also. And joining a league will help you learn the game."



The summer leagues have already begun, but sign-ups for the winter league starts Aug. 1 at the Mall Bowling Alley.

The alley offers youth and adult leagues and bowling lessons. For more information, call 706-682-7781.

I have to say 'I did' before I say 'I do'

Bayonet reporter heads to boot camp

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

T-minus 76 days and counting — not much time until liftoff. Soon, I will be walking down an aisle in a white dress saying "I do" to my fiancé, but first I have to say, "I did." That's why I have put "Operation Get Into Shape" into effect immediately, which will include tons of exercise on my part.

I have been telling myself I need to get in shape since May 2008, but let's face it, telling myself and doing it are two different things.

Leg lifts, pushups and crunches every other morning and walking at the park twice a week has been the extent of my exercise since the beginning of June. I know, I should exercise more — the doc has already told me a couple of times.

It probably doesn't help my favorite snack is chocolate — I can't stay away from candy. I wish I had cravings for healthy foods like rice cakes or tofu. But then again, that doesn't taste as good.

This operation isn't just about looking good in a wedding dress. It's about getting healthy and making a lifestyle change.

I've never been too excited about exercise and I want to change that. I want to wake up in the morning and say "I would rather exercise than sleep in" or "chocolate — who needs it?"

I will attend a monthlong boot camp session at Smith Fitness Center. The camp, open to military and their families, includes instruction from personal trainer Eric Dempsey. I'm told by people who have been through the camp that it's not easy, but the results are worth the work.

The camp includes everything from leg squats, running and jumping to working out using resistance bands, medicine balls and a sand log. The class is twice a week, and on the days there is no class, Dempsey gives campers a cardio plan and a nutrition plan.

I am ready for boot camp. I am up to the challenge. I am ready for a change.

If you want to join me in the boot camp or for more information about it, e-mail Lori.Smith6@us.army.mil.

I want to be able to say, "I did" succeed in "Operation Get Into Shape."

In a hurry? We'll try to get you in today!

Eagles edge RedHawks in season's final game

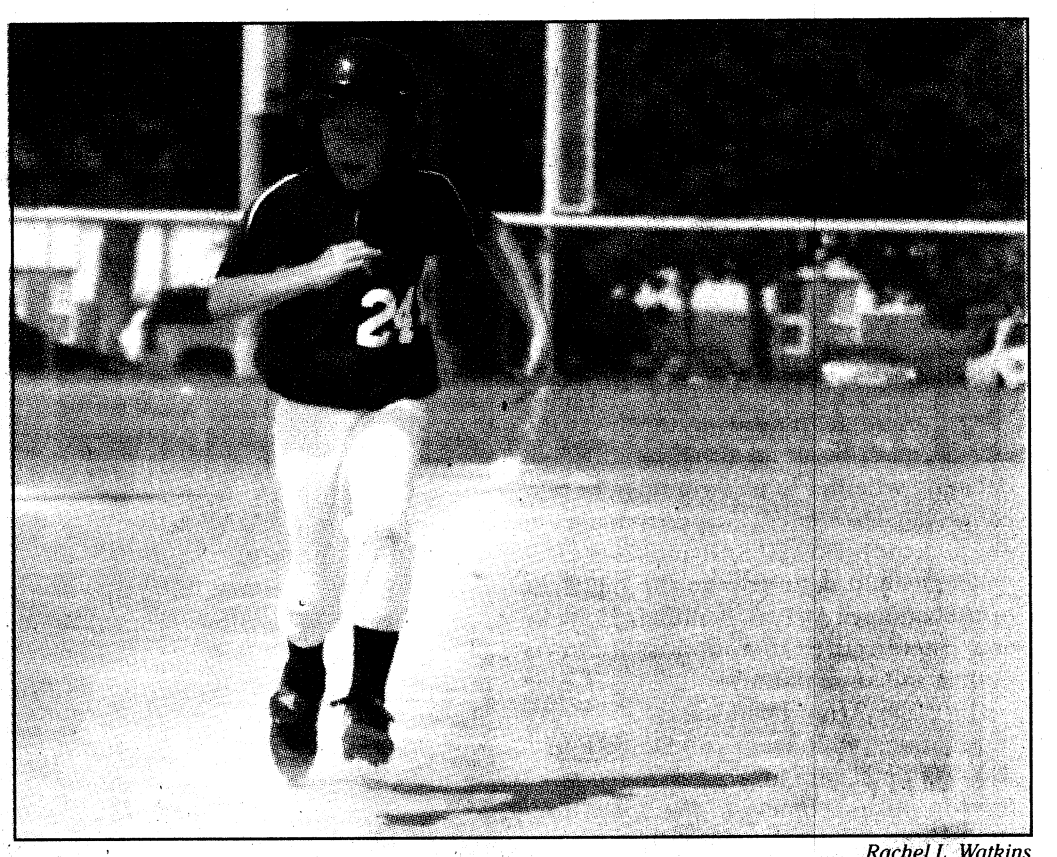
Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The 7- and 8-year-old Eagles soared past the RedHawks with a 10-8 victory in the last coach-pitch baseball game of the season Saturday at the Youth Sports Complex.

The Eagles scored on a Tommy Heffer RBI double, a Michaela Brown RBI double and a Deven Lopez RBI triple in the top of the first inning, taking a 3-0 lead.

The Eagles answered scoring on a Cameron Lawson RBI double, a Destinee Spicer RBI single and a Josh Youngblood RBI triple in the bottom of the inning to take the lead.

Trailing 4-3, the RedHawks came back to take an 8-4 lead in the top of the second inning, scoring on a Brown RBI single, a Lopez RBI triple and an Aareon Wofford RBI triple.



The Eagles turned the game around in the bottom of the second inning, capitalizing on six runs, sealing a 10-8 victory as the one-hour time limit expired.

"I think both teams played a good game and we had good defense," said Eagles' coach William Spicer. "I've seen a lot of improvement in the kids' baseball skills. My goal was to prepare them for the next level and I think they are ready for it."

Eight-year-old first baseman Josh Youngblood said working as a team was key to the win.

"We had good hitting and catching," he said. "This is our last game, but I wish the season lasted longer because I have had fun. I can't wait for next season."

All Child Youth & School Services baseball teams closed the season Saturday.

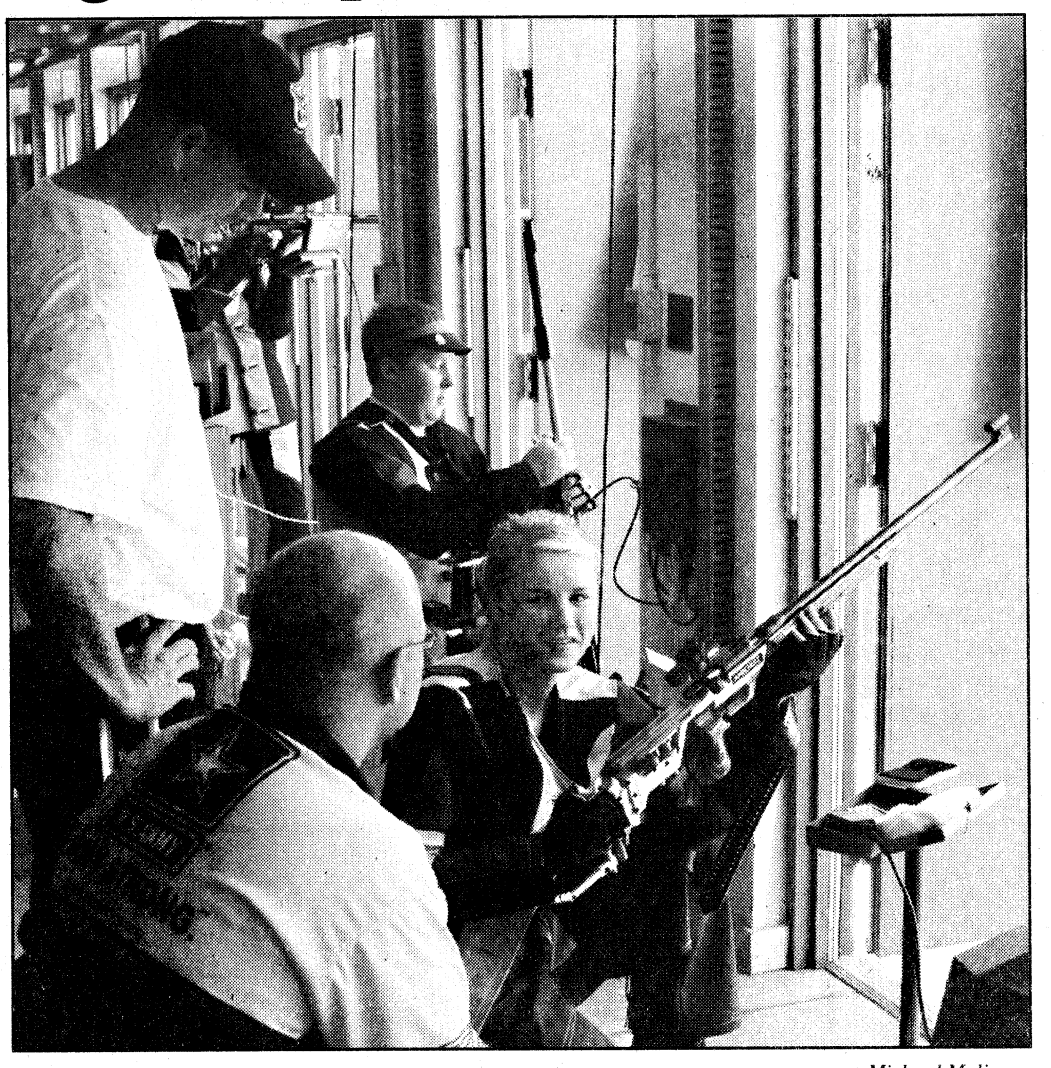
Junior shooters gain experience from USAMU Olympians

Camp concludes with Olympic-style finals

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PAO

Having the summer off is awesome enough for a kid, putting away the math book for three months and debating whether to go swimming or play ball all day. For some, a chance to hang out and pick the brain of U.S. Olympian or a U.S. Soldier would definitely be the highlight of the summer. At Fort Benning, 35 lucky youngsters earned the opportunity to do both at the same time.



The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's International Rifle team conducted a five-day shooting camp June 22-26 for some of the top up-and-comers in the sport from all over the country.

"It's more of an advanced camp," said SGT George Norton, the camp's director. "There are a lot of camps out there for the basic level and teaching the fundamentals, but this camp is bringing them to that next step. A lot of shooters are looking for that next thing to learn, but there aren't many camps out there that will do that for them. We wanted to have a camp that will help out those kids that wanted something a little extra."

The camp was born from the numerous amounts of requests for AMU Soldiers to teach shooters from all over the country every summer, said MAJ Michael Anti, a former U.S. Olympian. With the pace of the shooting schedule and other responsibilities, the team wouldn't have time to properly train if it was running all over the country, he said.

"We decided to do one clinic a year and open it up to the nation's best junior shooters so we can get a big group at one time," Anti said.

Entry is limited to 35 kids, who had to earn their way into the camp, Norton said. They had to meet certain criteria to attend the camp, including gaining a qualifying rank through USA Shooting.

Michael Molinaro
Kelsey Hansen, 16, from Minot, N.D., listens to instructions from SGT Michael McPhail (standing) and SSG Shane Barnhart of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Team June 25. Hansen was among 35 junior shooters who participated in the AMU's Junior Rifle camp June 22-26 at Fort Benning.

"We actually had to turn away a bunch of kids," Norton remarked. "We didn't want to, but we wanted to have that higher ratio."

The ratio of one coach to four shooters is one of the reasons the camp is so successful and sought after by shooters and their parents, he said. The time devoted to each shooter by a coach is something the AMU strives for and feels most proud of.

"The low coach-to-shooter ratio is great," said Kelly Edwards, who brought his 12-year-old daughter, Kaitlynn, to the camp from Victoria, Texas. "They really get to ask some good questions, more advanced stuff. Besides all of the shooting questions, the coaches were telling them how to pack for a match and how to handle a finals match, things like that."

The camp began with a diagnostic shooting event, giving the coaches a starting point to work from. From there, classroom work begins in the afternoon, preparing the shooters for the next morning's range session. They are taught the intricacies of the prone, standing, and kneeling positions, along with an array of marksmanship techniques. It culminates with a finals event, copied straight from the way an Olympic-level event would run.

"The match at the end of the week is my favorite part of camp," said Kelsey Hansen, 16, from Minot, N.D., who was making her second visit to the camp. "It allows me to see my improvements."

The kids bombard the coaches with all kinds of questions, such as "What is an accurate rifle?" "What do I watch for in the wind?" or "What do you say when you get nervous to calm down?"

"The overall goal is for them to realize that they can shoot better," Norton said. "Some of them come in thinking along the lines that this is as good as I am going to get --'I can't fix this or I can't fix that'— and we want to get rid of the cannot's. We want them to get to the 'I will fix this and I will fix that.'

"They're so young and it takes time. I mean, I've been shooting for 11 years. SFC Jason Parker has been shooting for 20 years. A lot of the guys on the team have been in the sport for so long and we're still getting better."

"I just like being around the kids," Parker, a three-time Olympian, said. "Some of the things we take for granted the kids don't have the knowledge to know about it yet. I really enjoy passing on my knowledge to these up-and-coming shooters."

The week is not all work. The team takes the shooters bowling, to a miniature golf course, and the brand new Infantry Museum and IMAX Theater in the evenings after training. The coaches also have a friendly competition amongst each other to see who can improve their shooters the best.

"If they have us we'll be back," Edwards said. "It doesn't get said enough how great these Soldiers are. I want to thank them for their great service to a great country."

Benning throws Independence Day bash

PFC Joshua Patterson, C Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, aims a ball at the target for the dunking booth Saturday at Stewart-Watson Field.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Though the thermometer tipped 100 degrees Saturday, crowds at Fort Benning's Independence Day celebration were not deterred.

"Regardless of the heat, it's worth it to be able to spend time with my husband and everybody," said Monica Hernandez, wife of SSG Praxedis Hernandez.

"This is our first Fourth of July together in three years. He was always deployed," Monica said.

"It's nice ... to actually get to enjoy the holiday with the ones we're honoring. We've had fun. The kids had a blast. It's nice not to have to pay to have fun."

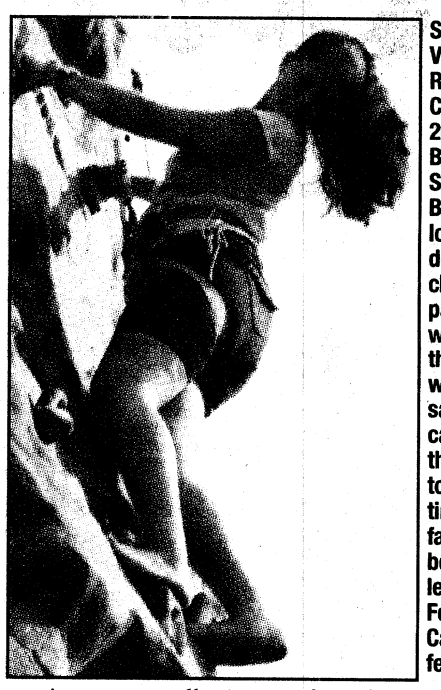
Festivities included a performance by the Silver Wings, a demonstration of SPIES and FRIES, or Special Patrol Insertion and Extraction systems and Fast Rope Insertion and Extraction, a performance by Edwin McCain and more than 20 inflatables — all free.

PV2 Timothy Thompson, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, cooled down on a slip and slide after climbing and jumping on several of the inflatables.

"I felt like being a little kid again," said the 18-year-old basic trainee.

"(I) went on all the little kids rides. I had ice cream. I had a whole pizza to myself. ... We've held ourselves up to such high standards for 14 weeks; I felt like stepping back a few years and being with the kids and knowing what they feel like. It feels great."

PFC Darius Turner said the celebration let him develop "a closer bond" with his battle buddies in B Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment.



"I enjoyed just chilling with them. Even though we come from Georgia, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, Ohio, we're all just one big family," said Turner, a native of New Orleans.

Turner said his past Independence Day parties — usually just a few firecrackers at night — weren't at all like the post celebration, which motivated him to keep working hard.

See Celebration, C4

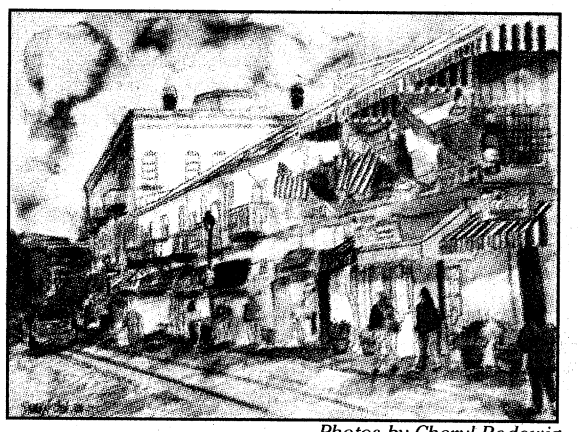
Three-year-old Mallory Parrish of Phenix City plays on the slip and slide Saturday at the post celebration.

SPC Vanessa Rios, B Company, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, looks down after climbing part of the way up the rock wall. Rios said she came to the event to spend time with family before leaving for Fort Irwin, Calif., in a few days.

Combat vet paints for relaxation

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

With 22 years in the Army, two tours in Iraq and the daily demands as the operations sergeant major for the 197th Infantry Brigade, SGM Derek McCrea paints to relax.



"Painting is a passion for me," McCrea said. "I paint because I enjoy painting. It's a hobby that causes me to focus and relax while creating a work. I have been at it for 25 years and will paint until my last breath."

McCrea started painting as a teen but briefly gave up the hobby when he joined the Army in 1987.

"Then one day I visited the Wuerzburg Castle and Residence in Germany while stationed with the 3rd Infantry Division in Germany. I was inspired by the history and architecture and started painting oils again," McCrea said. "That was followed by other European trips to Austria, Florence, Amsterdam and Budapest."

McCrea branched out from oils to watercolors at the suggestion of his wife, Sheila, who bought them as a birthday present.

They were both surprised when his first watercolor painting sold, she said.

This painting shows a view of a Savannah, Ga., street.

"He's the type of person who will start doing something he's never done before and he'll shock me. He's always wondering — 'What can I paint next?'" Sheila said. "It's a great hobby because it's something that motivates him, makes him want to go new places and see new things, (and) I like seeing what he comes up with."

Sheila said her husband rarely slows down, except when he picks up his brush.

If you're looking for a way to have fun for a good cause this summer, look no further than the American Cancer Society, said fundraising organizers. Its Columbus office has two new fundraising events planned for August.

American Cancer Society Idol will take place at 7 p.m. Aug. 4 at Columbus Technical College's Patrick Hall. The competition, open to anyone interested in singing, will be a great way for aspiring musicians to get their names out while getting involved in the fight against cancer, said Denise Dowdy, event organizer.

Judges will look for talent, showmanship, poise, stage presence, crowd participation, and creativity, Dowdy said. The first-, second- and third-place winners, as well as the participant who raises the most money, will advance to a regional competition Aug. 22 at the University of Georgia Tifton Campus Conference Center in Tifton, Ga. The overall winner will be interviewed and have a demo song played on

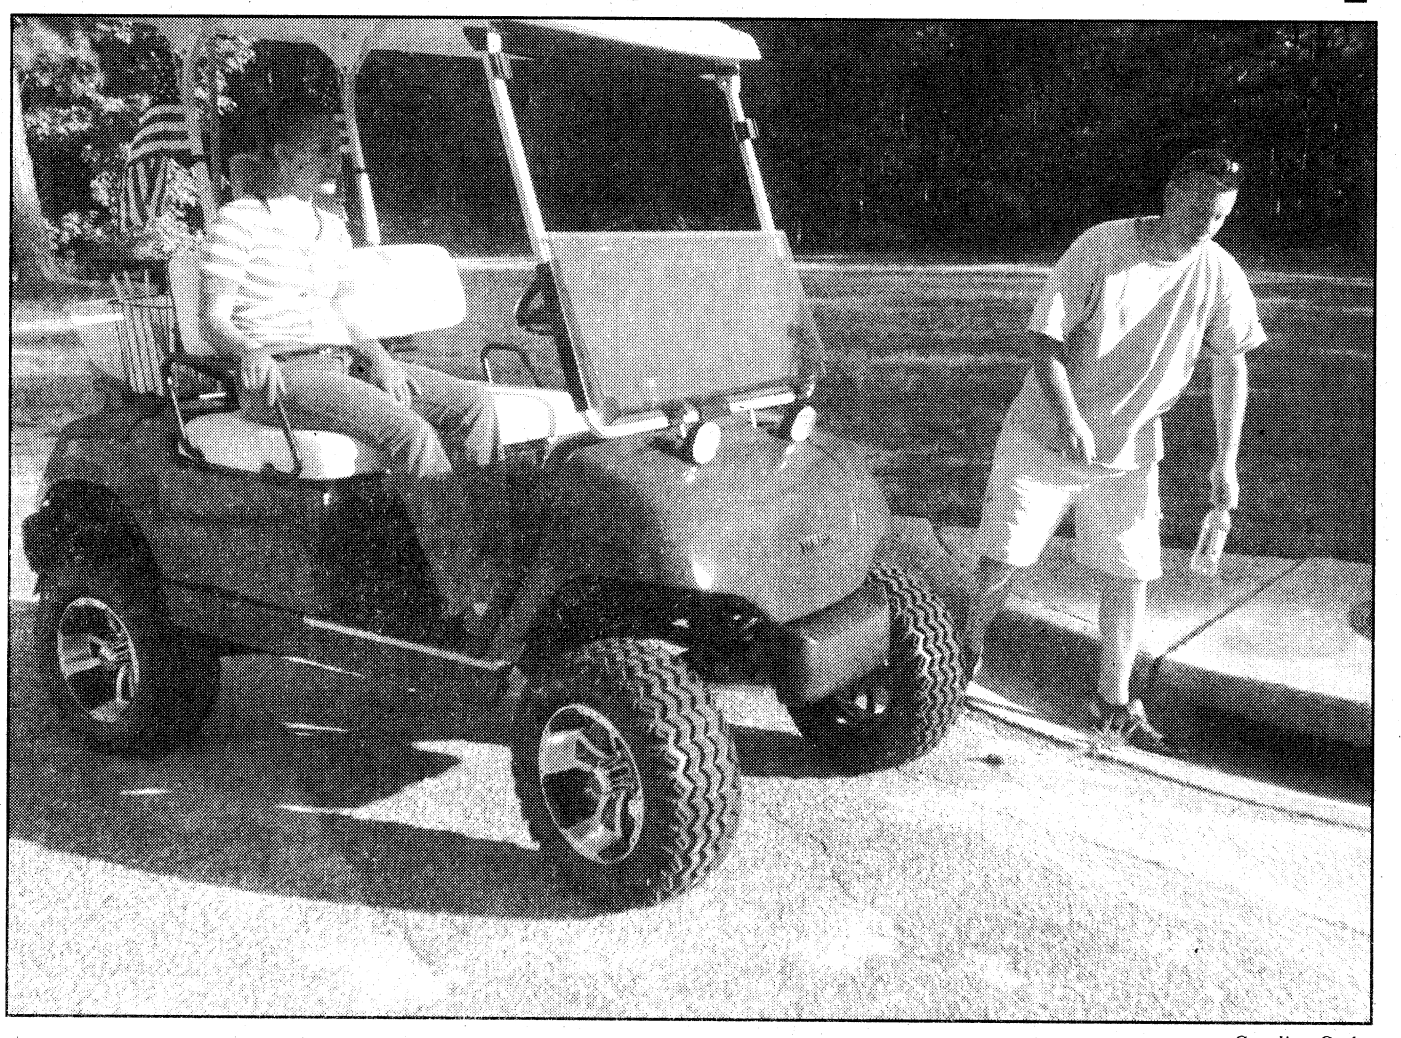
Soldier honored for neighborhood cleanup efforts



Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

After a long day at work, SGT Michael Boles said he doesn't like to unwind in front of the TV — he'd rather pick up road kill and trash around his neighborhood.

Boles, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, has lived in Bouton Heights since 2005, and has acted as what he calls its "watchful eye" since 2006. For about an hour each evening, Boles drives his golf cart around the neighborhood, collecting trash, road kill, fallen tree limbs and debris, and sometimes returns to mow grass, he said.

"It's one of the things I like to do," Boles said. "When I come home and (my home) doesn't look right, I want to fix it and better it."

Boles' efforts were recognized officially. Pinnacle, which manages The Villages of Benning, presented Boles with the Pinnacle Patriot Award during a luncheon June 25 at the Patton Village community center. Boles is the first recipient of the award, created by Terri Bond, Pinnacle's housing director.

Caroline Gotler
SGT Michael Boles drives his golf cart through Bouton Heights and cleans up scattered trash Monday with his daughter Ariel, a junior at Chattahoochee County High School. Boles' golf cart is specially fitted with all-terrain tires.

Bond said that after meeting Boles for the first time at a town hall meeting, she was so impressed with his character that she wanted to find a way to honor him.

"This man is the most incredible Soldier I've ever met," she said. "He's serving his community proudly and asks for nothing. He only wants to give. He not only touched my spirit, he touched my heart."

Boles said he had no idea he would receive an award when he arrived at the luncheon.

Boles received a brass eagle engraved with the words, "There is nothing wrong in America that can't be fixed with what is right with America," a quote by President Bill Clinton. COL(R) Keith Lovejoy, Fort Benning's housing director, presented Boles with a Garrison Commander's coin on behalf of COL Thomas Macdonald, garrison commander.

"This was the very least we could do to honor this Soldier," Bond said. "He's got such clarity, directness and sincerity. It's very seldom you come across people with qualities like that."

Because of a back injury during a 2007 tour in Korea, Boles said he has difficulty standing and walking for long periods. But, he hasn't let that hamper efforts to improve his neighborhood, he said.

"It's painful some days, but I enjoy doing it," he said. "Every time I pull into my housing area, I can say my community looks that much nicer. That's the reward."

To stay up-to-date on issues around Fort Benning, and to get ideas of ways to help around Bouton Heights, Boles said he attends as many town hall meetings as he can.

"Just because you don't live there, it doesn't mean there aren't some ideas you can take back to our own community," he said.

"Everything's fixable. It just takes somebody to get out there and take charge of it and clean it up."

Bonds said Pinnacle plans to make the Pinnacle Patriot award an annual event.

Strong bones require more than calcium, vitamin D

LTC Karen E. Hawkins
DECA DIETITIAN

It is not only the calcium and vitamin D, commonly found in supplements, which are important for building strong bones. A recent analysis of 12 population studies in The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition suggests that calcium intake — whether from food or supplements — had no effect on the incidence of hip fractures in men and women. This is just one reason to choose dairy foods in the commissary to get your calcium, vitamin D, magnesium and phosphorous to help build bones — not to mention the savings of 30 percent or more you'll realize by shopping there.

Another good reason to choose dairy foods for your health is the probiotics which are found in many dairy foods such as kefir and yogurt.

What are probiotics and how can they help me?

Probiotics are friendly bacteria that help keep you healthy by maintaining the balance of good and bad bacteria needed for a healthy digestive system. If the bacteria in your stomach get out of balance the bad bacteria can multiply and cause digestive problems. Probiotics bacteria are useful in relieving symptoms of inflammatory bowel disease, irritable bowel syndrome, colitis and alcoholic liver disease. Some research also shows that probiotics can help boost the immune system. The best way to get probiotics is in the food you eat or drink, as foods are uniquely packaged with all the nutrients that enhance absorption and use of probiotics.

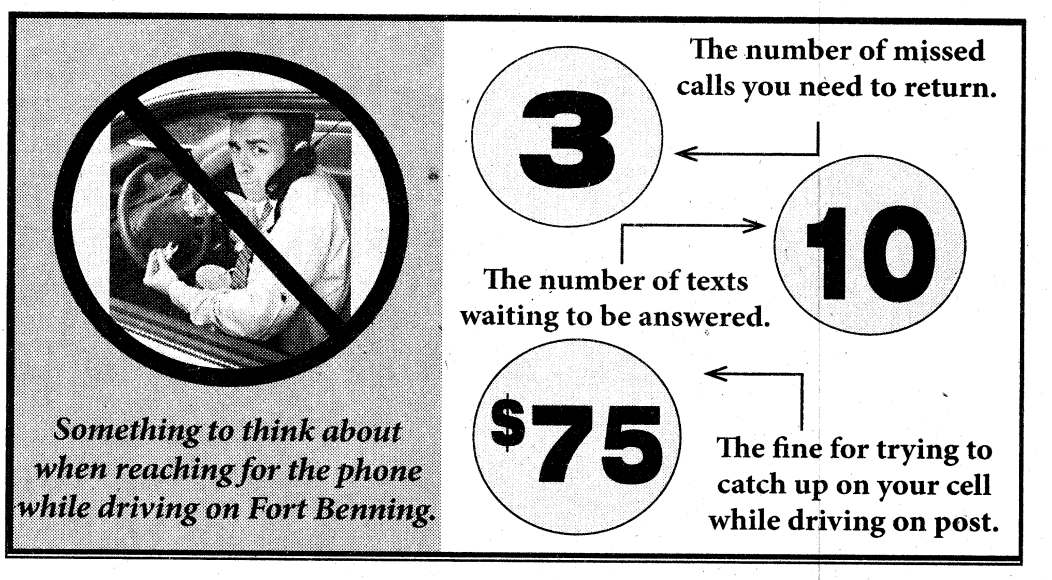
What if I am lactose intolerant?

If you are lactose intolerant you may want to try the cultured milk, kefir. It can help lessen the effects of lactose intolerance, which occurs when someone can't digest the naturally occurring sugars in milk.

How much should I eat or drink?

Research shows that probiotics don't stay in the intestines so you may want to eat or drink dairy foods with probiotics each day.

There are no established recommendations yet for probiotics, however there are guidelines for how much dairy we need to get necessary nutrients. The recommended daily amount depends on your age. The 2005 Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend three cups a day of fat-free or low-fat milk or similar milk product for older children and adults. Children between 2 and 8 years of age need two cups of milk each day.



- Choose dairy foods
- Eat yogurt with live cultures at a meal or as a snack
- Make a smoothie with yogurt, milk or kefir, and fruit
- Try recipes that include yogurt

Celebration: Brings together families, motivates Soldiers

"We woke up excited," he said. "It made you want to begin training this morning, made you want to wake up, get dirty and not quit."

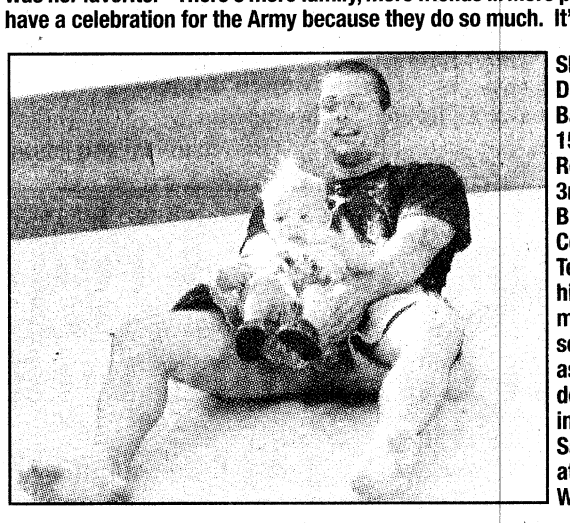
The celebration culminated in a fireworks display after dark.

The fireworks are the main draw for Vietnam veteran Tony Bishop, who has attended the annual celebration for so many years he's lost count.

"We never miss it," he said. "We have been to every fireworks (show) that's put on all over Columbus and Phenix City. Nothing compares to this one out here. They got the biggest and the best and the prettiest. That's what brings you back every single time."

This year, the Phenix City resident and his wife brought four of their grandchildren with them.

"Our grandchildren are safe here," Bishop said. "And they love it. They love this almost as much as they do our vacation."



Bishop said he was proud to see the Fort Benning Soldiers who volunteered to serve their country.

"It reminds me of when I was in the Army," he said. "You look at these Soldiers out here and you know what they're about — freedom. It's what the United States is all about. (This event) is a tradition. As long as they do it, we'll be here."

Anamaria Neudean, left, plays with her half-sister, 8-year-old Hayli Rhone, in an inflatable filled with soap bubbles. "It's been awesome because you can take your own bubble bath and dance, but you got to watch out for people," Rhone said. "You never know when water is going to splash on you." Rhone, who attended the celebration last year, said this year's bash was her favorite. "There's more family, more friends ... More people should have a celebration for the Army because they do so much. It's fantastic."

"He never really stops and sits and is just quiet, but when he paints, he relaxes," she said. "Whenever he's worried or upset about something, he paints. It gets his mind off problems. He just forgets about everything."

Derek "picked up the brush full time" in 2001, he said. "Lately, I have started to reach what some would call inspiration and confidence in my works. It makes me proud to create art that serves as memories for families — from their pets to their vacation, country and beach homes."

Along with the honor of hanging artwork in homes and galleries across the country, Derek has won several awards for his work. The most recent include serving as represented artist for the Pet Fashion Show in New York city and winning first place in the Art Space cover contest.

Derek donates his art to raise money for charities. His newest venture is Dog Days of Summer, a themed display hosted by the Joseph House Art Gallery in Columbus from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. Saturday.

Cheryl Rodewig
McCrea originally started painting landscapes but later moved on to paint animals.

As a participating artist, Derek will donate a portion of his sales to PAWS. He also painted dog and cat treat jars, donated by PetSmart, to raise money for the charity.

Gallery visitors can browse through drawings, paintings and sculptures featuring a variety of pets and farm animals. PetSmart will offer training and grooming demonstrations and free nail clippings for dogs and cats. There will also be door prizes, including a bull dog print and discounts for framing.

"It's basically a celebration of animals of art," said Len Jagoda, a local artist and Vietnam veteran who is coordinating the event. "Anybody who loves animals should be there. Support PAWS in a patriotic way."

Jagoda said he has known Derek for a few months. They are both members of the Columbus Artists' Guild.

The gallery is located at 828 Broadway. Dog Days of Summer is free and open to the public.

ACS: To hold singing competition

Clear Channel radio stations throughout southern Georgia, as well as the chance to sing at a major sporting event.

"It's not just a fly-by-night type of event," Dowdy said. "We're looking for someone who can definitely sing."

Song choice is up to participants, but no explicit lyrics will be allowed, Dowdy said. Background music should be in CD format, and performances are limited to three minutes.

For those who want to get involved without getting on stage, Dowdy recommends volunteering for a committee position. About 45 volunteers are needed to help with marketing, logistics, accounting, programs and talent searching, Dowdy said. The first committee meeting is 5:30 p.m. July 7 at the ACS office, located on the corner of 3rd Avenue and 12th Street.

ACS Idol is open to the first 30 people who register. Registration is $75, and admission to the event is $5 for adults and $3 for children 3-10 years old. Proceeds go to the American Cancer Society. To register or for more information, call 706-324-4573 or e-mail denise.dowdy@cancer.org.

Later in the month, the American Cancer Society will host a poker run. The run, which will begin at 10 a.m. Aug. 22 at Chattahoochee Harley-Davidson, located on Fortson Road, will be a fun and relaxing way to help out in the community while meeting other motorcycle enthusiasts, said Brenda Reis, event organizer.

During the poker run, motorcycle riders will stop at five checkpoints along a 70-mile route where they will draw playing cards. By the time they return to Chattahoochee Harley Davidson, they will have a five-card poker hand. Prizes will be given for the highest and lowest hands, and the checkpoints will feature games, food and contests, Reis said.

In the afternoon, festivities will continue until 5 p.m. at Chattahoochee Harley-Davidson, Reis said.

There will be live music, games, mud wrestling, a bike wash, bike and tattoo contests, food and drink vendors, raffles and a silent auction with prizes including gift certificates to local businesses.

"I know it's going to be a great time," she said. "It's going to be a community experience where people can take pride in knowing they've done something for a good cause."

Registration is $25 per rider and includes a hot lunch, T-shirt and two hands of poker. The cost for an additional rider on the same bike is $15 and includes a hot lunch, T-shirt and one hand of poker. Participants can purchase additional hands at $5 each. All proceeds will go to the American Cancer Society. To register or for more information, e-mail acspokerrun@gmail.com.

Giveaway: Grew out of idea for dream dresses

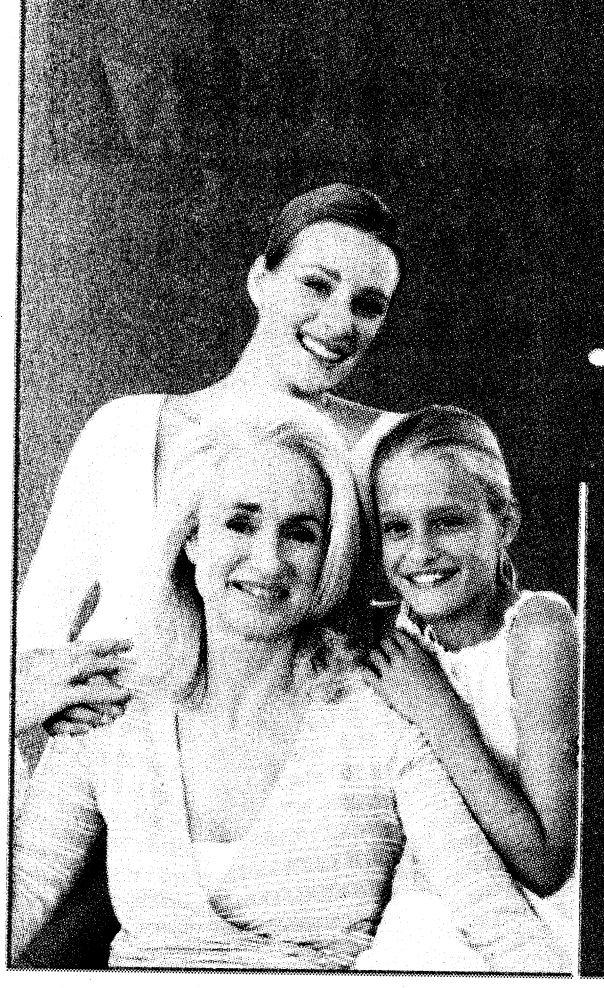
The idea for Brides Across America grew out of Janson's observation that many military brides who came to her store couldn't afford their dream dresses.

After Janson held a giveaway at the Bridal Stock Exchange in 2008, she said she was flooded with e-mails and phone calls from other boutique owners and managers who had heard about the event. It was then Janson decided to hold a nationwide giveaway, she said.

In Georgia, J. Andrew's Bridal and Formal in Peachtree City will participate for the second year. Jean Marmol, the boutique's owner, said she feels fortunate to be part of the giveaway.

"Every bride wants to feel like a princess," she said. "I want to help (military couples) in any way I can."

J. Andrew's will give away at least five gowns, valued at about $1,000 each, from designers including Maggie Sotero, Paloma Blanca, Mon Cheri and Watters. To enter the giveaway, brides must reside in Georgia, submit proof of deployment and write a brief essay describing their relationship and why they want to win a gown.



"We want to know their story," Marmol said. "We want it to grab us and touch our hearts."

J. Andrew's will accept entries through July 12. Essays should be at least a page long and e-mailed to jandrewsbridal@gmail.com. For more information, visit www.bridesacrossamerica.com.

Mind your words when sending loved ones e-mails

Chaplain (LTC) Bennie J. Wiggins
645TH AREA SUPPORT GROUP

In this wonderful age we live in, there are some great new ways to communicate … the telephone, with its vocal and texting capabilities, and e-mail available from multiple sources. Our society, as a whole, has come to rely on these means of communication. I only want to deal with one of them: the e-mail.

Face-to-face is the number one way to communicate, but unfortunately in our military culture we have some built-in distractions that greatly affect our face-to-face communication time with the people we love and care about. No one really has to look very hard to plainly see the distractions. Temporary duties of all sorts, training deployments and wartime deployments these days are all too frequent. Using e-mail has become a mainstay to communicate. If done properly, it's a wonderful tool but there are some dangers. The written word is the most difficult to get right because there are no nonverbal cues, only what we write. It seems many of us have a tendency to address issues in the e-mail in bullet form. I believe the thought process we use is to answer expeditiously — short, sweet and to the point — but it leaves way too much room for misinterpretation of what we are trying to say. Slow down. If it's worth saying, it's worth saying it right. There are many examples the Bible uses to give us guidance. I'm reminded of the Genesis story of creation. It is very clear that God said something six times and things happened. Point being, he didn't do anything physically; he spoke it into existence. The book of James talks about power of the tongue and its good and bad uses. Yes, we should all be mindful of how we speak, for the words we use carry the power of life and death associated with them affecting not just one generation but three generations deep. Most of us have either received our greatest joys or our deepest wounds from what has been said to us. Should we not be just as mindful of the words that come off of our fingertips? Emphatically, yes.

I would like to offer a challenge and a model to all of you that communicate via e-mail with your loved ones. When we speak or write, our loved ones need to be able to easily listen. In my definition for listening, whether it is said or written, the words should affect both our heart and our brain and cause movement or change within us that provokes thought and consideration.

The Challenge: Write in a manner that would be easy to listen to yourself, therefore easy for the receiver.

The Model: There is a heightened possibility of misunderstanding when using e-mails as your primary means of communication. When you sit down to craft an e-mail, you may be sending new information or responding to one you received.

1. Remember, the words you write are the only cues the receiver will get.

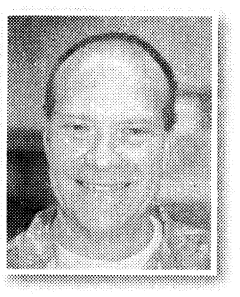
2. Put yourself in a place you are able to relax and have time to concentrate on what you're doing.

3. Think through and write your e-mail.

4. Save your e-mail with the save draft function.

5. Yes, walk away from it for a period of time — let it get cold.

6. When you re-open the e-mail, read it as if you are receiving it, not as the sender.



7. Question yourself — Can you listen with your eyes to what you've written? Is it clear? Is it concise? How would I receive this?

Chaplain says supporting families, Soldiers an honor

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

My orders arrived and my day has come. By the time you read this article I have completed my Family Life tour on Fort Benning. This, my 140th (give or take a few) article for The Bayonet, is my last as the Family Life chaplain. Chaplain Doug Hoover will be replace me as your new Family Life Chaplain. He reports in mid-August. He is a very capable chaplain and will do a great job. I am moving to the 199th Infantry Brigade. Stop by and say hello sometime as I will be located in the Airborne Chapel at least for the next 12 months.

I must confess, when I first assumed the responsibility of writing a weekly article, I thought, who reads this article anyway, "Am just wasting my time?" It takes me around four hours to crank out a weekly article, I know, some of us are much slower than others. But what kept me motivated to write each week was not just The Bayonet editor (always courteous and patient if I missed the deadline), but you the readers. I was truly blessed by those of you who would acknowledge reading the articles and saying you liked or appreciated them. You always brought a smile to my face when some of you said, "I left it out so my spouse would read it." That was encouragement to me and I sincerely thank you for the feedback. For those who had suggestions, I tried to accommodate those suggestions as best I could. I hope I did not disappoint you.

My three-year assignment seemed to be over in the blink of an eye. I still remember working with the spouses support group during the 3rd Brigade's second deployment and cycling around again through another support group during their extended, 15-month, third rotation to Iraq. It was an honor to be a part of that group and support the families and Soldiers of the Fort Benning community. I pray God will bless the men and women of Fort Benning as the 14th Combat Support Hospital prepares to deploy this summer and the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team prepares to go again. Thank you to all the wonderful partners who I had the privilege of serving with these past three years.

I had the opportunity to counsel many Soldiers, spouses and family members. Thank you for your trust and confidence. As I depart, I leave knowing that Chaplain Hoover will provide great care to you and our community. The Chaplain Family Life Center is available to help our Soldiers and family members with combat stress, parenting, marital stress and the long separations that come with the Army life.

If you need some help or someone to talk with, do not hesitate to call the Chaplain Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 or stop by the office at 2606 Dixie Road, located in Soldiers' Plaza. It is our goal to help with you with your journey. I hope to see you around the town. God Bless.

A Bradley fighting vehicle in The Last 100 Yards illustrates Infantry operations in Iraq. The Bradley was used by B Company, 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 1st Brigade Combat Team, 4th Infantry Division, during combat operations 30 miles north of Tikrit in 2003. After being damaged by an anti-tank mine, the Bradley returned to the U.S. The Bradley was salvaged from Red River Army Depot in Texarkana, Texas, to be used in the National Infantry Museum's exhibit.

Photographs of nearly 1,500 Medal of Honor recipients, including COL Robert Nett, pictured top left, cover the walls of the Hall of Valor in the museum's lower level. Visitors can read Nett's award citation, which details his bravery during a World War II battle in the Philippines.

In the main level of the museum, a mannequin shows visitors how Soldiers rappel, one of many activities they must complete during basic training and other training programs at Fort Benning.

National Infantry Museum

Experience Infantry past with all senses

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

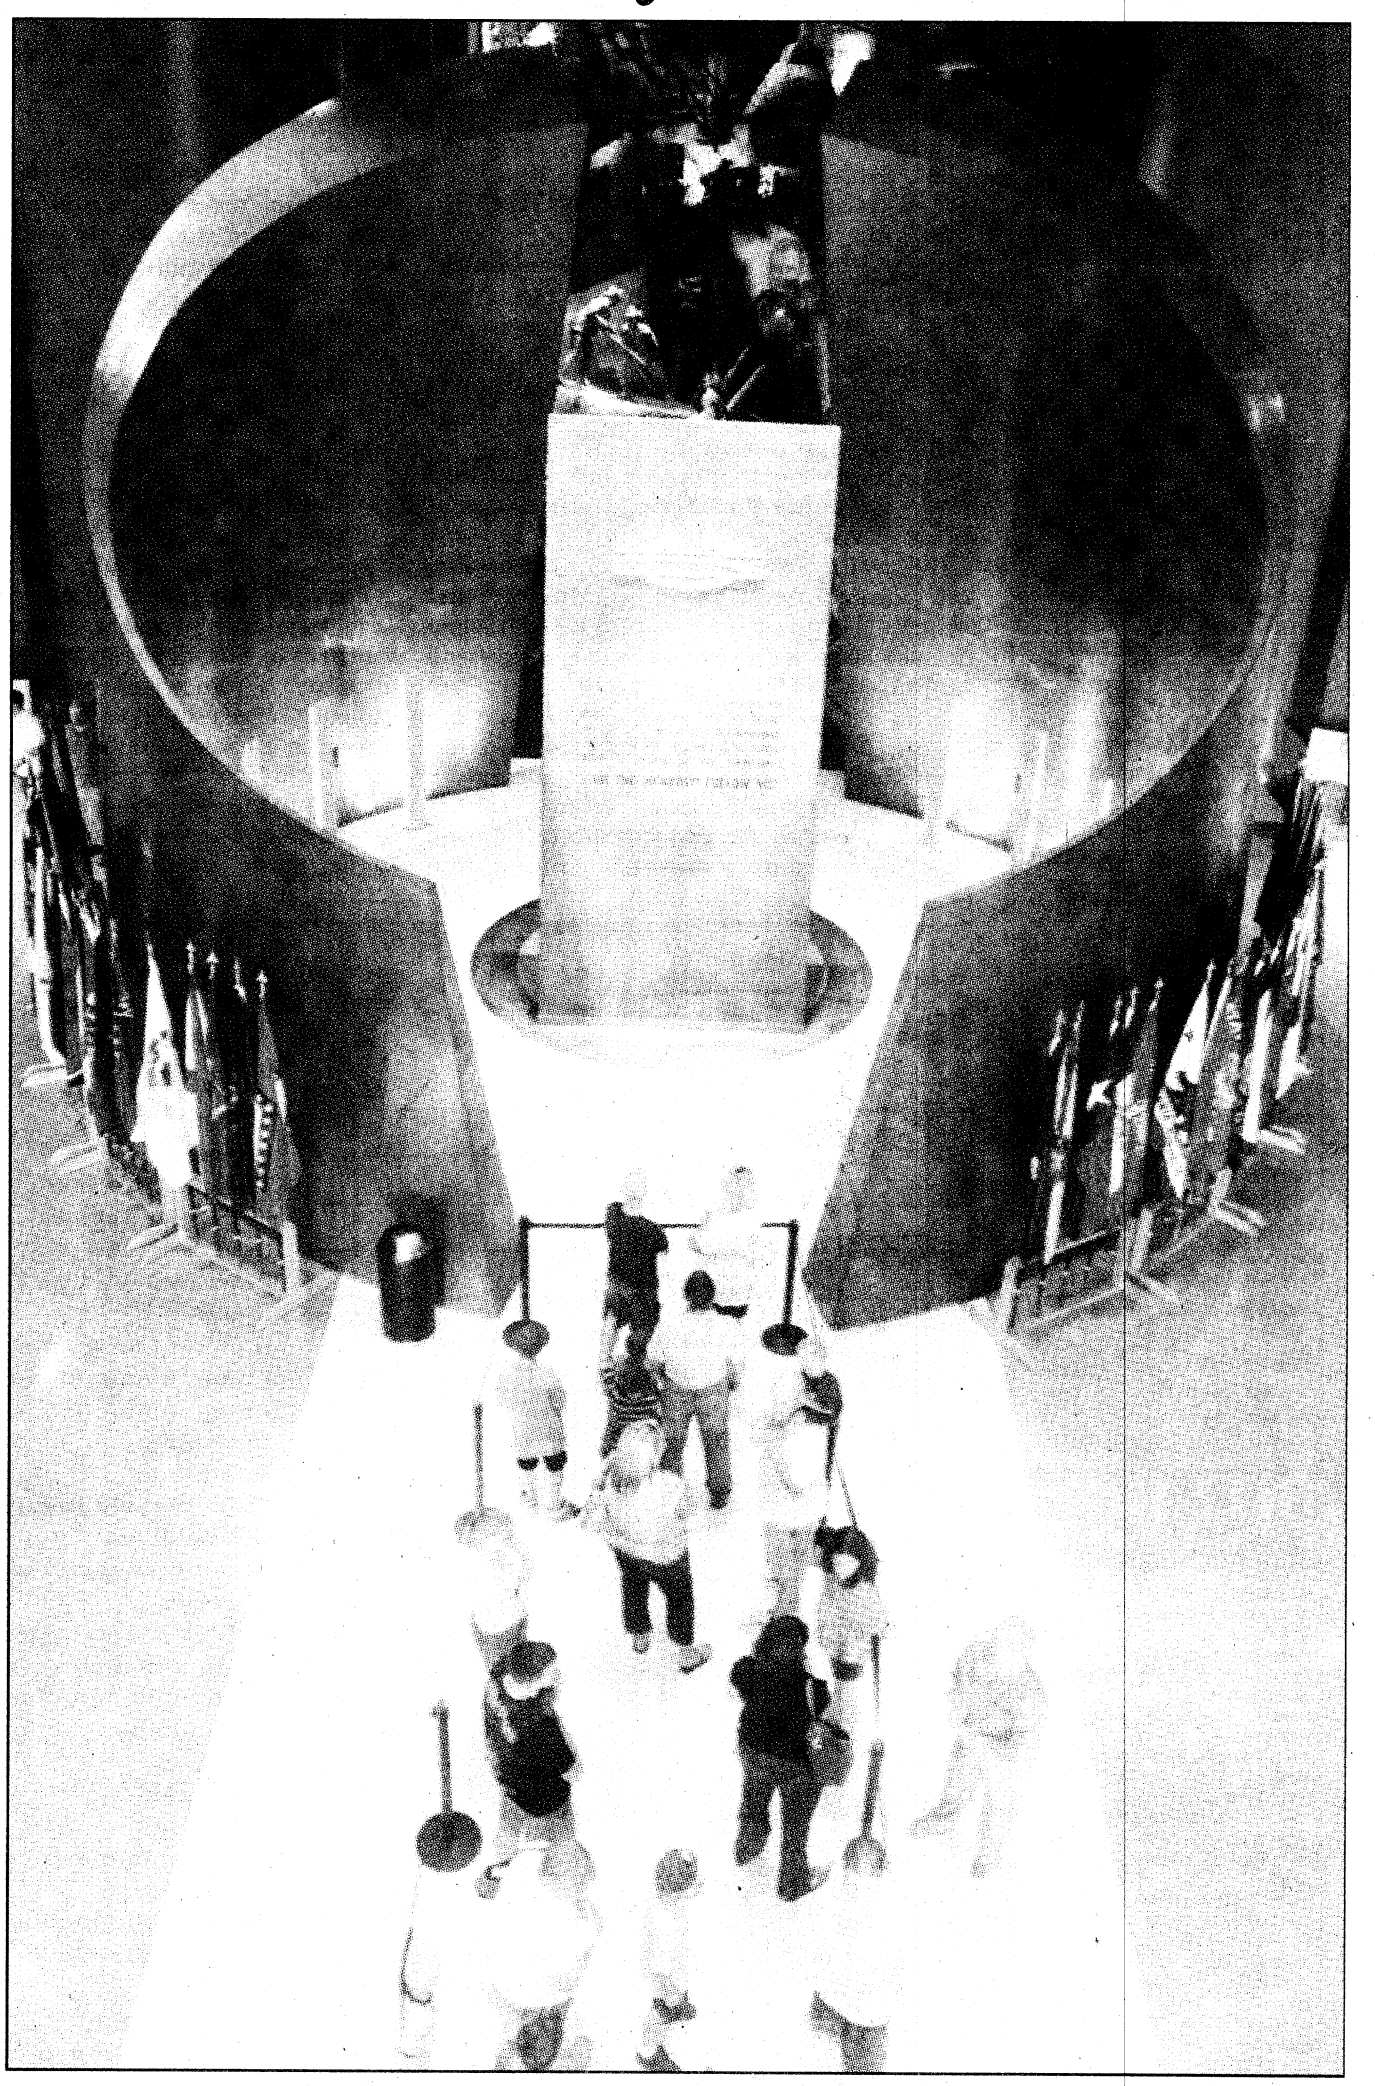
With sound effects, vibrating floors, videos projected on textured walls and freshly grilled rib eye steaks, a visit to the National Infantry Museum is a treat for all the senses.

Visiting for the first time Sunday, I was stunned by its considerable size — 190,000 square feet — and by the depth and scope of history it covers. Spanning 234 years, the museum uses artifacts and firsthand accounts to tell the story of the Infantry Soldier from the Revolutionary War through modern-day operations in Iraq, and Afghanistan, and spaces recreate battle scenes; bunkers and trenches immerse visitors in the Infantryman's experience.

The Last 100 Yards is an exhibit that offers a full sensory experience. To reach many of the main galleries, visitors must pass through its gently upward-sloping 100-yard walkway whose length represents the Infantry's role in closing with the enemy. Leaving behind the airy lightness of the museum lobby and entering a narrow, dimly lit space, visitors hear recordings of gunshots and shouts playing over battle video. Life-sized mannequins in period uniforms depict scenes from many of the Infantry's major battles. Through the use of fog machines and footage of World War I Soldiers projected onto a recreated bombed-out building, one part of the exhibit made me feel as if I were almost there.

The Last 100 Yards opens into an exhibit space with information about training programs at Fort Benning, including one station unit training, Airborne School, Officer Candidate School, Ranger School and Sniper School. Timelines and artifacts like the Belly Flopper, a 1937 prototype two-man automatic weapons carrier made at Fort Benning, guide visitors through the installation's history.

Those looking for a hands-on Infantry experience won't want to miss the firing range simulator, located in the same area. For $5 or $4 with an IMAX ticket, you can try your hand at an M-4 rifle. The simulator uses a video screen with pop-up targets, and is identical to ones used to train Fort Benning's basic trainees.



The museum's lower level houses its six Era Galleries, which offer in-depth looks at the Infantry's role throughout American history. In The International Stage gallery, an exhibit called Into The Trenches recreates a World War I battle locale, complete with floors that vibrate in time to audio recordings of bomb blasts. The World Power gallery contains a diamond-encrusted baton that belonged to Hermann Goering and Japanese general officers' swords, and the Cold War gallery contains sections of the Berlin Wall.

In the Hall of Valor, located between the Era Galleries, the names and photographs of nearly 1,500 Medal of Honor recipients surround benches in a glass-enclosed space. Visitors can read the award citations of COL Robert Nett, SSG Laszlo Rabel and others who earned the military's highest honor.

If you spend enough time at the museum to thoroughly peruse all it has to offer, you'll probably get hungry. Climb the stairs to the third floor where the Fife and Drum Restaurant serves crab fritters, endive salad, angel hair Alfredo and grilled filet mignon, with views overlooking the nearby Parade Field and World War II Street. Decorated with photos of fife and drum corps, the restaurant is open from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday through Tuesday and from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday. Happy hour, featuring half-price appetizers and beverages, is from 4 to 7 p.m. Wednesday through Friday.

Admission to the National Infantry Museum is free. It is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday.

For more information, call 706-545-2958 or visit www.nationalinfantrymuseum.com.

Visitors to the National Infantry Museum wait in line Sunday afternoon to enter The Last 100 Yards, which features major Infantry battles.

A uniform like the one worn by SGT Nicholas L. Holmberg, a scout dog handler with the 34th Infantry Scout Dog Platoon during the Vietnam War, is on display in the Cold War gallery. Holmberg and his German Shepherd led combat patrols in Vietnam, alerting them when his dog sensed an enemy presence.

OPENING THIS WEEK
PUBLIC ENEMIES

No one could stop John Dillinger and his gang. No jail could hold him. His charm and audacious jailbreaks endeared him to almost everyone — from his girlfriend Billie Frechette to an American public who had no sympathy for the banks that had plunged the country into the Depression. But while the adventures of Dillinger' gang — later including Baby Face Nelson and Alvin Karpis — thrilled many, J. Edgar Hoover made Dillinger America's first Public Enemy Number One and sent in Melvin Purvis, the dashing "Clark Gable of the FBI." However, Dillinger and his gang outwitted and outgunned Purvis' men in wild chases and shootouts. Only after importing a crew of Western ex-lawmen (newly baptized as agents) and orchestrating epic betrayals — from the infamous "Lady in Red" to the Chicago crime boss Frank Nitti — were Purvis, the FBI and their new crew of gunfighters able to close in on Dillinger.

Public Enemies stars Johnny Depp, Christian Bale and Marion Cotillard. It is rated R for gangster violence and some language.

ICE AGE: DAWN OF THE DINOSAURS

The sub zero heroes are back. Scrat is still trying to nab the ever elusive nut, while maybe finding true love. Manny and Ellie await the birth of their mini-mammoth. Diego the saber toothed tiger wonders if he is growing too soft and Sid the sloth gets into trouble when he creates his own makeshift family by hijacking some dinosaur eggs. On a mission to rescue the hapless Sid, the gang ventures into a mysterious underground world, where they have some close encounters with dinosaurs, battle flora and fauna, run amuck and meet a relentless, one eyed, dino-hunting weasel named Buck.

Ice Age stars the voices of Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary and Queen Latifah. It is rated PG for mild humor and peril.

ALSO SHOWING
TRANSFORMERS: REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

When Sam Witwicky discovers some crucial information about the Transformers' creation and their history on our planet, the Decepticons set out to catch him and pick his brain. Optimus Prime must join forces with armies from around the world in order to stage an epic battle against the Decepticons in Egypt.

Many secrets about both human and Cybertronian history are revealed amid spectacular clashes of robots against robots.

The movie stars Shia LaBeouf, Megan Fox, Josh Duhamel, Tyrese Gibson, John Turturro and Matthew Marsden. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action violence, language, crude and sexual material, and drug material.

MY SISTER'S KEEPER

Anna Fitzgerald has coped with her older sister's rare cancer her whole life, and served as a donor for her as long as she can remember. Although Anna has missed many opportunities in order to help her sister, she never resented it. But, when Anna discovers she was conceived to keep her sister alive, she goes to court in hopes of freeing herself and earning the chance to live her own life.

My Sister's Keeper stars Cameron Diaz, Abigail Breslin, Alec Baldwin, Jason Patric and Joan Cusack. It is rated PG-13 for mature thematic content, disturbing images, sensuality, language and teen drinking.

THE PROPOSAL

When Margaret, a high-powered book editor, faces deportation to her native Canada, she declares she's engaged to Andrew, her put-upon assistant who she has tormented for years. Andrew agrees to the charade, but with several conditions. So, the couple head to Alaska to meet his quirky family, where Margaret finds herself in one fish-out-of-water situation after another.

With a wedding in the works and an immigration official on their tails, Margaret and Andrew reluctantly stick to their plan, despite its consequences.

The Proposal stars Sandra Bullock, Ryan Reynolds, Mary Steenburgen and Craig T. Nelson. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content, nudity and language.

YEAR ONE

Zed and Oh, two hunter-gatherers, are too lazy to be of use to their community as hunters, so they are banished from their village. The pair set off on an epic journey through the ancient world, meeting biblical characters such as Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, and Abraham. Will the pair of mismatched losers ever find a place to settle down or a girl to settle down with?

Year One stars Jack Black, Michael Cera, Oliver Platt, David Cross and Hank Azaria. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content throughout, language and comic violence.

IMAGINE THAT

Evan Danielson is a successful financial executive who has more time for his BlackBerry than his seven-year-old daughter. But when he has a crisis of confidence and his career starts going down the drain, Danielson finds the solutions to all his problems in his daughter's imaginary world.

Imagine That stars Eddie Murphy, Yara Shahidi, Thomas Hayden Church and Vanessa Williams. It is rated PG for language and behavior.

THE TAKING OF PELHAM 123

Walter Garber is a New York subway dispatcher whose day is thrown into chaos when Ryder, a criminal mastermind, hijacks a subway train. Leading a highly-armed gang of four, Ryder threatens to execute the train's passengers unless a ransom is paid within one hour. As tension mounts, Garber uses his knowledge of the subway system in a battle to outwit Ryder and save the passengers.

But, one question remains: even if the thieves get the money, how will they escape?

The movie stars Denzel Washington, John Travolta, James Gandolfini and John Turturro. It's rated R for violence and language.

LAND OF THE LOST

Has-been scientist Dr. Rick Marshall is sucked into a space-time vortex where he is chased by dinosaurs and stalked by painfully slow reptiles known as Sleestaks. Marshall has no weapons, few skills and questionable smarts to survive in an alternate universe full of fantastic creatures. Holly, a research assistant, and Will, a survivalist, join Marshall in his attempt to get back home.

Land of the Lost stars Will Ferrell, Anna Friel and Danny R. McBride. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, and for language including a drug reference.

THE HANGOVER

Two days before his wedding, Doug and his three friends drive to Las Vegas for a blowout bachelor party they'll never forget.

The Hangover stars Justin Bartha, Bradley Cooper, Zach Galifianakis, and Heather Graham. It is rated R for pervasive language, sexual content including nudity, and drug material.

MY LIFE IN RUINS

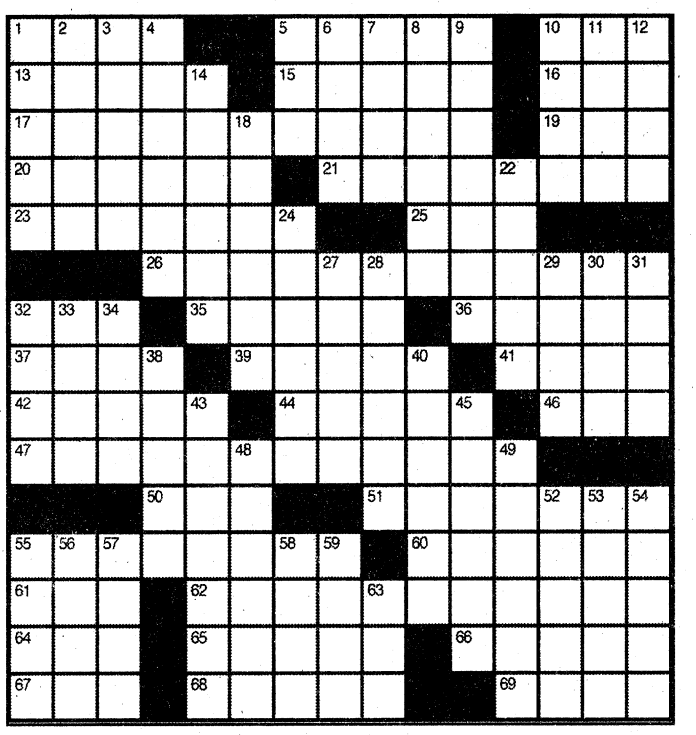
A Greek tour guide attempts to recapture her kefi — Greek for "mojo" — by guiding a ragtag group of tourists around Greece and showing them the beauty of her native land.

The movie stars Nia Vardalos, Richard Dreyfuss, Harland Williams, Rachel Dratch and Caroline Goodall. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content.

UP

Carl Fredricksen spent his entire life dreaming of exploring the globe and experiencing life to its fullest. But at age 78, life seems to have passed him by, until a twist of fate — and a persistent 8-year-old Junior Wilderness Explorer named Russell — gives him a new lease on life.

The movie features the voices of Edward Asner, Jordan Nagai and Paul Eiding. It is rated PG for peril and action.



DRAG ME TO HELL

Christine Brown is an ambitious loan officer with a charming boyfriend, professor Clay Dalton. Life is good until the mysterious Mrs. Ganush arrives at the bank to beg for an extension on her home loan. Should Christine follow her instincts and give the old woman a break or deny the extension to impress her boss and get a leg up on a promotion?

Christine fatefully chooses the latter, shaming Mrs. Ganush and dispossessing her of her home. In retaliation, the old woman places the powerful curse of the Lamia on Christine, transforming her life into a living hell. Haunted by an evil spirit and misunderstood by a skeptical boyfriend, she seeks the aid of seer Rham Jas to save her soul from eternal damnation.

The movie stars Alison Lohman, Justin Long, Lorna Raver and Dileep Rao. It is rated PG-13 for sequences of horror, violence, terror, disturbing images and language.

While the nation celebrated its freedom over the weekend, troops with the 14th Combat Support Hospital were preparing to defend that freedom as they embarked on a yearlong deployment to Iraq.

Nearly 400 Soldiers departed Sunday and Tuesday from Fort Benning's Lawson Army Airfield for Kuwait to begin a deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The Soldiers will join Task Force 134 and 1st Medical Brigade Soldiers, said COL Judith Lee, commander of the 14th CSH.

PFC Chris Okamoto, E Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, practices buddy team tactics Tuesday on Pierce Range. Like all the Soldiers in his unit, Okamoto wears yellow and black beads that he slides along a cord to keep track of how much water he drinks during the day. "If it's close to 100 (degrees), we try to get in at least three camelbacks," Okamoto said. His pant legs are turned up to encourage air flow. CPT Patrick Sleem, E Co. commander, said even something as simple as making sure the water buffalo stays iced is important because Soldiers are reluctant to drink warm or room-temperature water.

High temps mark high-risk period

With temperatures reaching well into the 90s and above, the summer season marks a high-risk period for heat injury. Now is the time to be especially careful about staying safe outdoors, said MSG(R) Kestner Edens, safety and occupational health specialist with the Fort Benning Safety Office.

"The biggest thing is you got to drink … and I don't mean beer," he said. "Drink water, Gatorade, Powerade. It cools the system. If you don't replenish your electrolytes and cool your body down, you're going to become a serious heat casualty."

Alcohol, soft drinks, tea and coffee aren't good choices for anyone trying to stay hydrated, since they actually dehydrate the body, Edens said.

Other key factors to consider are staying in the shade, wearing sunscreen and eating to renew the body's supply of energy.

"They have to take it seriously," Edens said. "Have fun, enjoy the day, (but) be careful."

When Soldiers train outside during the summer, leadership takes heat safety very seriously, said CPT Calvin Hutto, operations officer for 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, 192nd Infantry Brigade.

All brigade Soldiers must carry at least one canteen or camelback of water with them at all times on the range, he said. Cadre carry a heat injury prevention card with the steps to take in case someone suffers heat exhaustion or heat stroke.

MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The monthly Base Realignment and Closure community update moved from Building 4 to the National Infantry Museum Tuesday and drew a larger crowd.

About 100 people attended the event, which typically brought in about 20 people, mostly local businessmen and women with a vested interest in the progress of Fort Benning as it transitions to the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

Jay Brown, BRAC program manager, spoke to a diverse group, which included Soldiers and their spouses, realtors, contractors, community activists, local business leaders, reporters and job-seekers. Brown's update addressed most of their concerns. He said:

- The Residential Communities Initiative has completed the construction of more than 1,060 new homes and 209 historic home renovations. When all is said and done, there will be 4,200 sets of "quarters," just one more than there was when the post turned responsibility for post housing over to RCI in 2006. That means, Brown said, local housing markets will absorb most of the increase in population when the Armor School moves to Fort Benning.
- Officials anticipate as many as 1,400 new civil service job

Army limits re-enlistment options for fiscal year

C. Todd Lopez
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

In an effort to slow the momentum of what has been an exceptionally productive year in recruiting and retention, the Army has limited re-enlistment options during the last three months of fiscal year 2009.

"Due to the Army's great success in growing the force and meeting and exceeding our retention mission, the Army has been taking steps to slow retention and overproduction for the remainder of the fiscal year," said SGM Dean Drummond, Army Senior Career Counselor, G-1 Army Retention.

"These steps have included reductions in retention bonuses, reductions in the number of military occupational specialties eligible for a selective re-enlistment bonus, suspension of the retention mission and most recently, two-year re-enlistments."

In a DA retention policy message released June 25, the Army spelled out changes to re-enlistment option eligibility. According to the policy message, if Soldiers want to re-enlist between June 27 and Sept. 30, they may be limited to a two-year re-enlistment under the "Regular Army Re-enlistment" option.

By the beginning of fiscal 2010, which begins Oct. 1,

Truck drivers log 66,000-plus miles on support mission

Soldiers in the 104th Transportation Company logged more than 66,300 miles during a 30-day mission in support of the 41st Infantry Brigade Combat Team, training at Fort Stewart, Ga. During the scenario-based mission, the company played the role of civilian contractors, allowing the 41st BCT to train on escort missions near Fort Stewart.

The units completed 132 convoys between June 3 and July 2, said 2LT Victoria Wynn, the 104th Transportation Co. OIC for the event.

Even as a support mission, it was good training for the motor transport operators, who had a chance to familiarize themselves with new vehicles and build camaraderie, Wynn said.

"We have a lot of new Soldiers since we last deployed, so it's a great opportunity for them to get incorporated into the company

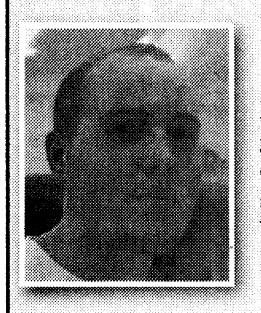
How do you beat the heat?



I stay home and watch TV and try not to move too much. I try to keep my electric bill down, so I keep the air conditioning set between 75 and 79, depending on how hot it is outside, so we use a lot of fans. I'm from Florida, so I actually like the heat.

I head to the pool. My apartment complex in Columbus has a community pool, so I use that. When it's hot like this and I don't have to work, I usually go three or four times a week.

INSPIRATIONAL LEADERSHIP

'I joined the Army because of him'

Bridgett Siter
MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Frank Warren Cross amused his friends with stories about flying Army One for presidents Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson. He told great anecdotes about Kennedy, who apparently had quite a sense of humor. His college buddies agreed, Frank had the best job in the world.

But it wasn't enough for Frank, who felt called to serve where helicopter pilots were needed most — in Vietnam. He came home two years later with a chestful of ribbons and medals. He had plenty of stories to tell, but they weren't funny, and mostly he kept them to himself.

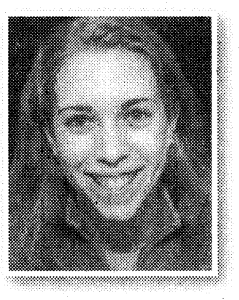
Years later, family members would tell of his bravery, how he took that helicopter into places other pilots wouldn't go. How he rescued South Vietnamese soldiers stranded on an isolated hilltop. How he made it home safe and sound in the summer of '68, then volunteered for another tour with the 1st Cavalry Division.

One month later, Frank was killed when his helicopter went down in the Province of Thua Thien.

Harry Warren was 10 years old that summer, 26 years younger than his cousin Frank. That was the year Bart Starr led the Packers to the Super Bowl, and Yellow Submarine topped the box office charts. That was the year Mattel introduced Hotwheels. It was a good year to be a kid. But Harry had weightier matters in mind. The day they buried Frank was the day he decided to follow in his cousin's footsteps.

"He was my role model, my hero. I joined the Army because of him," Harry said.

COL Harry Warren relinquishes command of the Medical Department Activity next week. He has given 27 years of his life in service to this nation. After med school, he took to the sky, just like the man who inspired him to serve, and racked up more than 2,100 miles in the air. As a flight surgeon and the commander of a number of surgical teams, Harry saw action in Iraq, Kuwait, Bosnia, Kosovo and Honduras. He led humanitarian aid missions into various disaster areas. Like Frank Warren Cross, Harry Warren was willing to go where others would not dare.



At Fort Benning, we're fortunate to have more than our fair share of servant leaders like COL Warren. I wonder how many of them were inspired by men like Frank Cross. I wonder if Frank had any idea of the impact his life had on that little boy more than 40 years ago.'

If you're lucky enough to have personal heroes in your life, be sure to tell them what they mean to you. And please never forget that someone is watching you, perhaps patterning his or her life after yours.

If you know someone like Frank Cross or Harry Warren, someone who inspires others to serve and lead, I'd like to hear from you. E-mail me at Bridgett.Siter@us.army.mil.

Beat summer heat with attitude

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

I have something to say to all my fellow Georgia residents who sing the praises of this state's climate: I disagree.

While millions of Americans from cooler climates flock to Georgia each year to soak up its sunshine and humidity, I dream about snow. When temperatures climbed into the 70s in January, I gazed longingly at my collection of coats, sweaters, scarves, hats and boots, unsure how to dress for winter days that felt more like spring.

The funny thing is, before moving to Georgia, I had always considered myself more of a warm weather person than a winter person. I grumbled when Midwestern winters dumped out seemingly endless amounts of ice and freezing slush, and welcomed the time of year when I would no longer have start each day with my fingers numb from scraping ice off my car.

That was before I'd ever set foot in Savannah, Ga. I grew up believing there was no humidity worse than that of Missouri in August, but the weather in Savannah quickly set me straight. On a particularly hot day during the first week of summer last year, I made the mistake of taking the time to apply makeup and blow dry my hair before setting out to run errands. By the time I got back a couple hours later, I was sporting a poofy frizz ball on my head and stripes of melted concealer on my face. Clearly, the state of Georgia didn't want me to wear makeup that summer, and I grudgingly complied.

As the summer wore on, I tried coming up with creative ways to beat the heat — a bag of frozen peas on your head will do wonders on a triple-digit day.

But some days, despite my best efforts, nothing really seemed to help. No matter how much water I drank, nothing was going to change the fact that I could have fried an egg on the sidewalk. Now, instead of grumbling about snow and ice, I grumbled about the heat. And that was when I discovered the best weapon of all for surviving a Savannah summer — a positive attitude. There is always going to be something I'd like to change about the place I live, and unless I'm lucky enough to someday move to San Diego or Honolulu, it will probably be the weather. I'm sure that even people in those cities can find plenty of things to complain about.

So rather than grumble about the heat this summer, I'm going to try embracing it. I'll forgo the makeup and hair dryer, fill up my water bottles, slather on the sunscreen and head outdoors for a walk or a bike ride with a smile on my face. And, hey, if that doesn't work, there's always air conditioning.

Correction: The Eisenhower jacket was misidentified as part of the military uniform worn in the 1960s during the Vietnam War in last week's edition of The Bayonet. The jacket, named after GEN Dwight D. Eisenhower, was first issued in 1944 but worn primarily by officers. The next year, it was issued to all ranks. Inspired by the Brit battle dress, the jacket, which used less wool than the dress coat previously in use, was common in the Army from 1945 through the Korean War. By the 1960s, it had been phased out and replaced by a system of blues and Class A and Class B greens. We regret the error.

TO ADVERTISE IN THE BAYONET, CALL 706-576-6239

Post bids farewell to 14th CSH Soldiers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

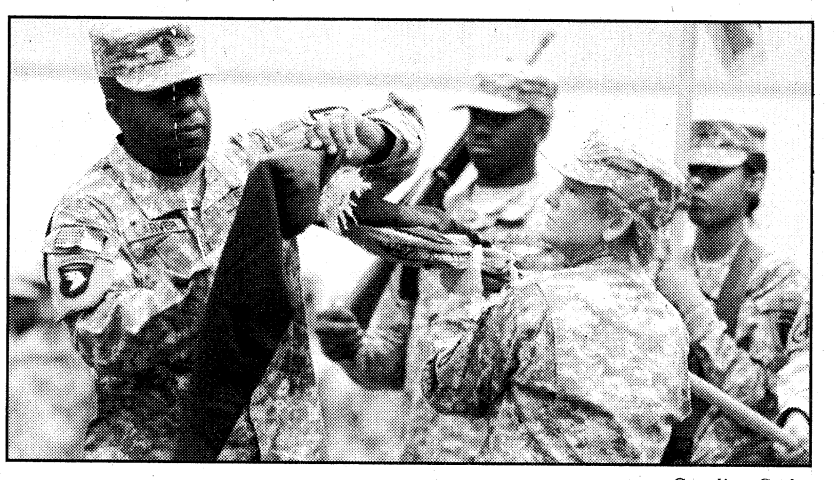
As unit colors were cased, the Infantry Center Band played and Fort Benning bid a temporary farewell to one of its units.

More than 350 Soldiers deploying to Iraq with the 14th Combat Support Hospital were given an official send-off during a deployment ceremony July 2 at Freedom Hall.

The unit, most of whose personnel departed Sunday and Tuesday, will serve a 12-month tour in three locations in Iraq, where it will provide health care to detainees.

This will not be the first time the 14th CSH has deployed in support of the Global War on Terrorism. In January 2006, the unit deployed to Afghanistan during Operation Enduring Freedom VII, where it supported Combined Joint Task Force 76 and the International Security Assistance Force Afghanistan.

Although about 140 of the Soldiers deploying with 14th CSH came to the unit from installations around the world less than three weeks before deployment, COL Judith Lee, commander, said she is confident her unit is prepared.



"There's been a lot of activity in the past 20 days to make sure we're 100 percent prepared," she said. "We took (the new personnel) through theater-specific training, and we're 100-percent qualified on our weapons."

The detainees her unit works with will receive the same standard of care as American Soldiers, Lee said.

"How we treat the detainees absolutely affects what kind of person they will be once they are released, and that affects our Soldiers on the ground," she said. "When they go back out to their communities in Iraq, they'll realize Americans are good people."

MG Michael Ferriter, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, told the 14th CSH Soldiers they would play an important role in establishing a stronger relationship with Iraqis.

"Iraq seems like a large country, and you may wonder if you will make a difference there," he said. "I say 'Yes' — you will make a big difference. (The Iraqis) will see what right looks like when they look at you. You will heal their bodies and their hearts."

Caroline Gotler
CSM William Carver III and COL Judith Lee case the colors July 2 at Freedom Hall.

CPT Jessica Stone, a registered nurse whose deployment with 14th CSH is her first, said she is looking forward to working in Iraq.

"I joined the Army because I wanted to go be able to do greater things," she said. "I've got some friends who deployed and said some (Iraqis) changed their minds about Americans after being in the hospital. That's kind of what our job is, I guess — to show them we're not bad guys."

Stone, like many Soldiers, said the hardest part of deployment would be leaving her family. Stone said she would spend her first wedding anniversary in Iraq, without her husband, who is completing a master's degree at Mount St. Mary's University in Emmitsburg, Md.

"My husband and I are already writing letters to each other," she said. "I'm going to see if I can get the Internet set up in my room over there, and I'm going to use the phone call and Internet centers."

Joy Row, whose husband, CPT Lewis Row, last deployed in 2003, said she hoped advances in technology over the past six years would help ease their separation.

"We did a lot of e-mailing last time, but back then they were only able to get on e-mail every two or three days," Row said. "In 2003, we didn't have a lot of things like online chatting and video messenger, and I think that will make it better."

Row said keeping a positive attitude is important.

"You never want to see them go, but you don't have a choice, so you have to make it as good as possible, as positive as possible," she said. "The day-to-day stuff that seems so unimportant at the time is the kind of stuff they want to hear. It's a matter of opening up and letting them know that, yeah, this is hard, but you're doing OK."

Steven Pagotto, who drove with his three children from Reading, Pa., to support his brother, MAJ Michael Pagotto, said he is proud of his brother and all the 14th CSH Soldiers.

"We really appreciate all these men and women who go over there and do the jobs that have to be done to let us have the freedoms we have here at home," he said.

Troops: To take over medical mission in Iraq

The "First to Care" troops will provide level three health care to detainees and coalition forces at three detainee internment facilities within the Baghdad and southern Iraq areas of operation, said Lee, who took command of the unit three months ago.

The 14th CSH will relieve the 115th Combat Support Hospital, which served more than 10,000 patients at their two main locations as of April, she said.

"We will have the main medical mission in Iraq," Lee said. "Our unit has surgical capabilities, both in orthopedics and general surgery. We can also offer dental, optometry, physical and occupational therapy, an emergency room department, lab, X-ray and CT scan capabilities … many of the things you would find in a regular hospital."

To meet this mission, Lee said the unit gained 140 additional personnel, mostly doctors and nurses, from approximately 40 posts worldwide within the last three weeks.

"Providing this level of care is important to our mission as Americans," Lee said. "It's a force multiplier.

"We hope that when detainees are released and returned back to their communities, they will remember the dignity and respect our health care workers treated them with, and consequently, won't go back out and hurt more Americans."

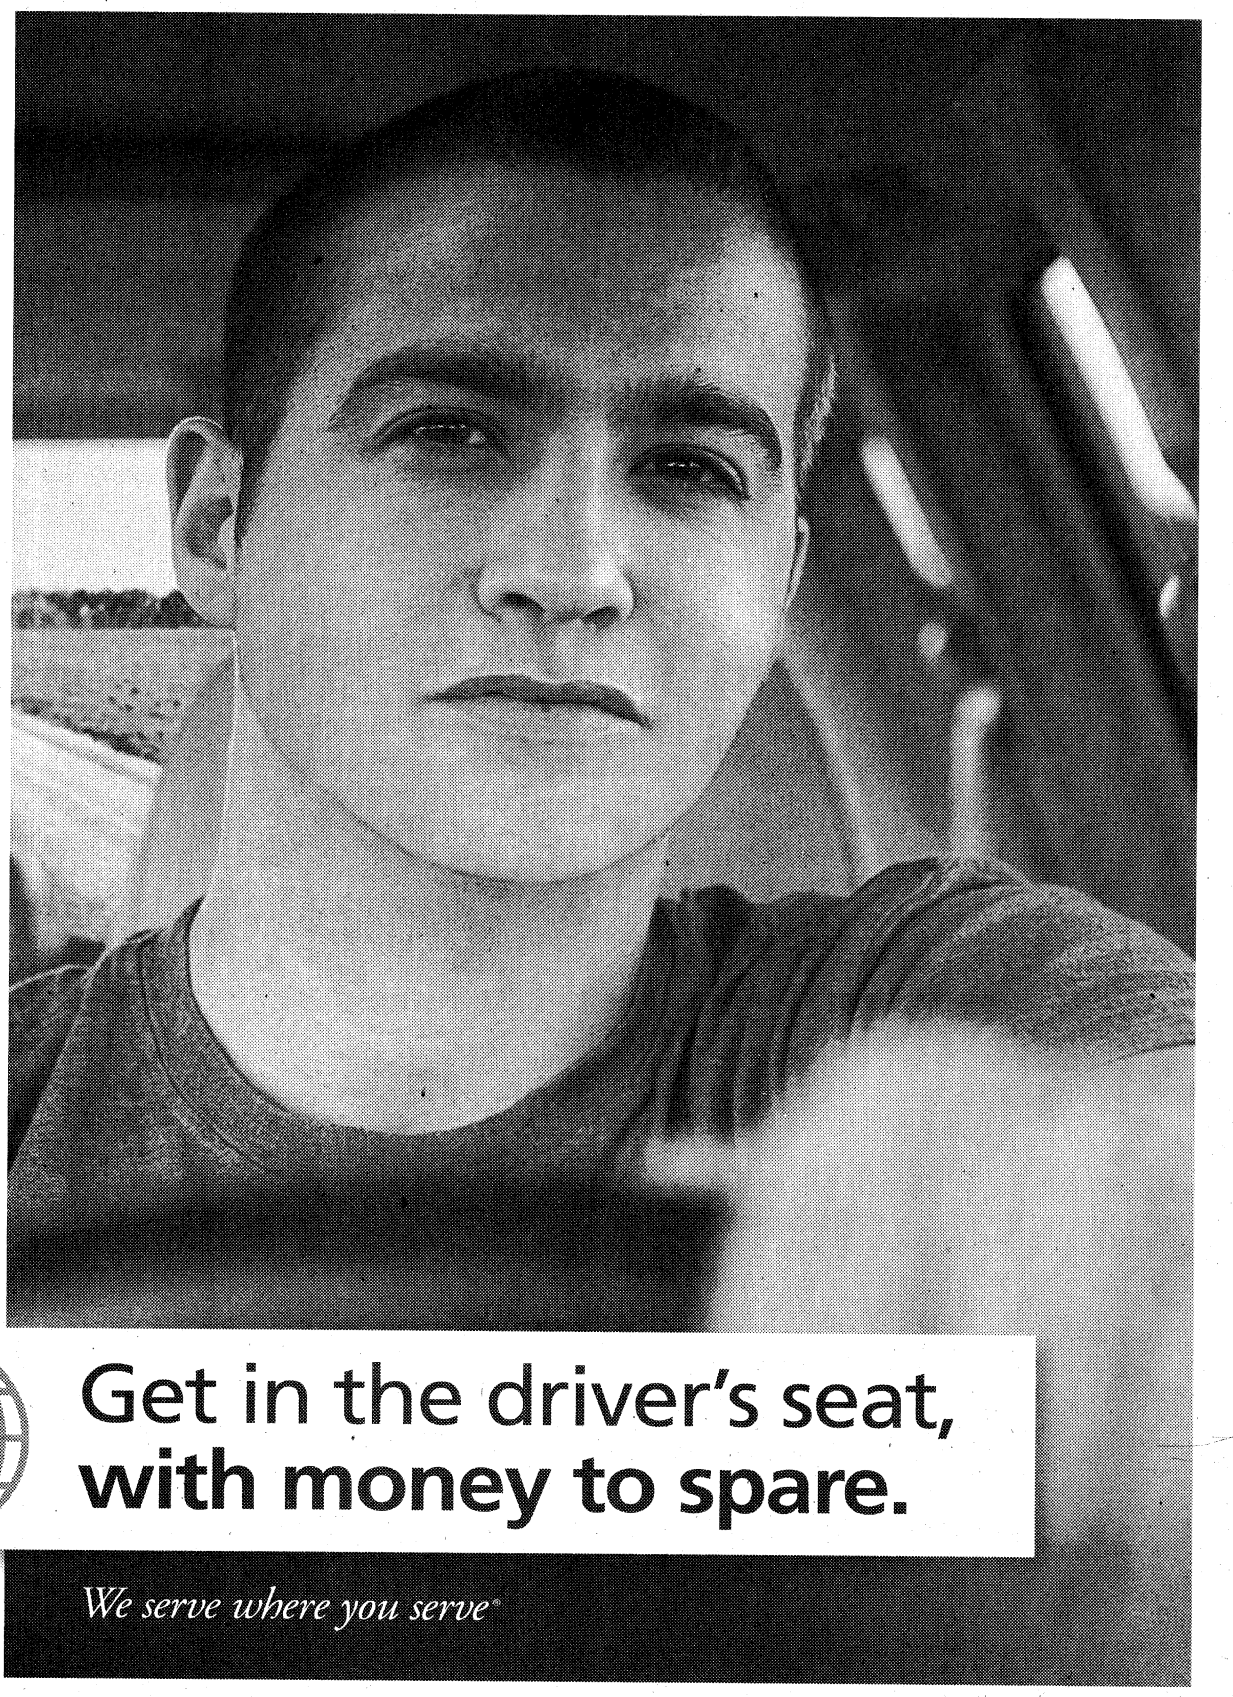
The troops, coming off an Operation Enduring Freedom deployment in early 2006, will be tackling a new role caring for detainees, said CSM William Carver III, the 14th CSH's senior noncommissioned officer.

The greatest challenge the Soldiers face is this is not a standard mission, he said.

"They are required to provide care for detainees on a daily basis who may or may not have committed horrific crimes. We've trained them to stay focused on the health care mission, not to become emotionally involved and to provide world-class care," Carver said.

In the last six months, Soldiers completed cultural training, trained on a variety of medical scenarios and conducted mock exercises such as establishing a detainee facility, he said.

MAJ Tara Spears is one of the 140 Soldiers added to the unit in recent weeks. A former emergency room nurse, Spears will serve as the head nurse at one of the Baghdad detainment facilities.



Spears, the deputy chief of hospital education at Madigan Army Medical Center in Fort Lewis, Wash., said she looked forward to returning to her nursing role as well as seeing the changes that have taken place in the six years since she last deployed to Iraq.

The morale of the unit is high; the trust is there, Carver said.

There is some anxiety as team-building and bonding takes place with the new unit members, but everyone is confident in their abilities, Carver said, adding that his goal is to bring every Soldier back safe.

"This is an opportunity to shape and be involved in the medical system in Iraq," Lee said. "We will be making a huge difference."

The Soldiers will spend 10 to 14 days in Kuwait doing theater-specific training before they join their counterparts in Iraq. The troops are expected to return in July 2010.

Soldiers assigned to 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team sit on the fence Monday as they wait for a bus to transport them to a training class at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin, Calif. The Soldiers spent their first week at NTC taking classes to prepare for their time "in the box," the two-week period where they conduct simulated full combat operations in the Mojave Desert. Soldiers will practice individual skills, squad tactics and battalion-size operations and missions during their 30-day training rotation in preparation for their upcoming deployment to Iraq. Benning CID Battalion welcomes new commander

THE BAYONET

The Benning Criminal Investigation Division Battalion welcomed a new leader Wednesday.

LTC Kevin Moffett handed over the battalion colors to LTC David Koonce during a change of command ceremony at the Benning Conference Center.

COL Jeffrey Davies, commander of the 3rd Military Police Group, the reviewing officer, said he was confident Koonce would perform well as commander of the battalion, which has eight subordinate units in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Honduras and Puerto Rico.

"Dave, I know you will continue to mentor, take care of them and their families as your reputation and impeccable records clearly demonstrate," Davies said. "You will find our civilians, support Soldiers and special agents are some of the best."

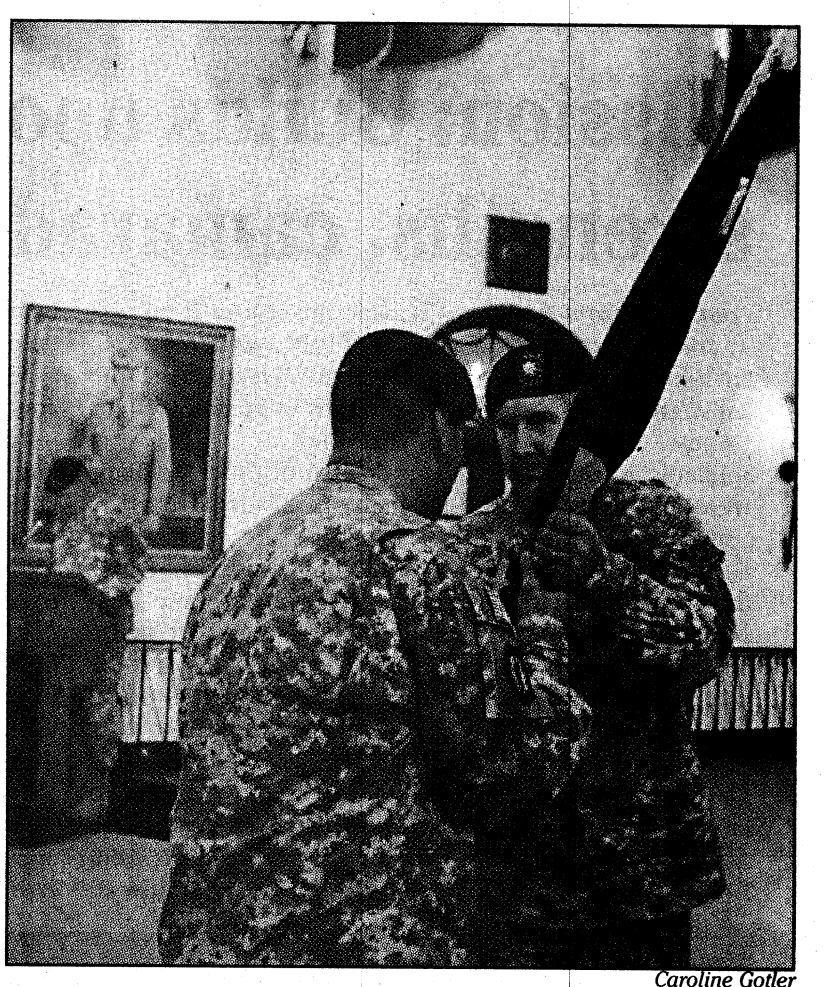
Koonce, who received his commission in 1990 from Texas A&M University, most recently served as director of detainee operations for Combined Security Transition Command-Afghanistan, at Camp Eggers, Afghanistan. His previous assignments have taken him across the country and to Germany and Kuwait.

Koonce joins the battalion at a time of expansion. In October, it will add new CID offices at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., and Tampa, Fla. This is the first time Koonce will serve at Fort Benning.

Koonce said he considered it an honor to assume command of the Benning CID Battalion.

"I look forward to the next two years, and consider it a privilege to serve as your commander," Koonce said.

Moffett said he and his family have known the Koonce family for many years, and wished them luck in their new assignment.



"I know the type of officer (LTC Koonce) is, and I must say the battalion is in great hands," he said.

Moffett said the two years he spent at Fort Benning were some of the best of his Army career, and he credited the battalion's detachment commanders and sergeants with contributing to his success as a commander.

"You guys are outstanding," he said. "The work you do on a daily basis cannot be measured in this short speech."

Moffett's next assignment is deputy brigade commander of the 89th MP Brigade, currently deployed to Baghdad.

Army: Keeps 'total concept' of re-enlistment options

the Army will rescind the policy memo and reinstate all regular re-enlistment options, Drummond said.

"The total concept of what we are doing, keeping five options available for Soldiers, is not going to change," Drummond said. "What this does is just eliminate the options that they may have been able to receive for the remainder of this year and move them until Oct. 1."

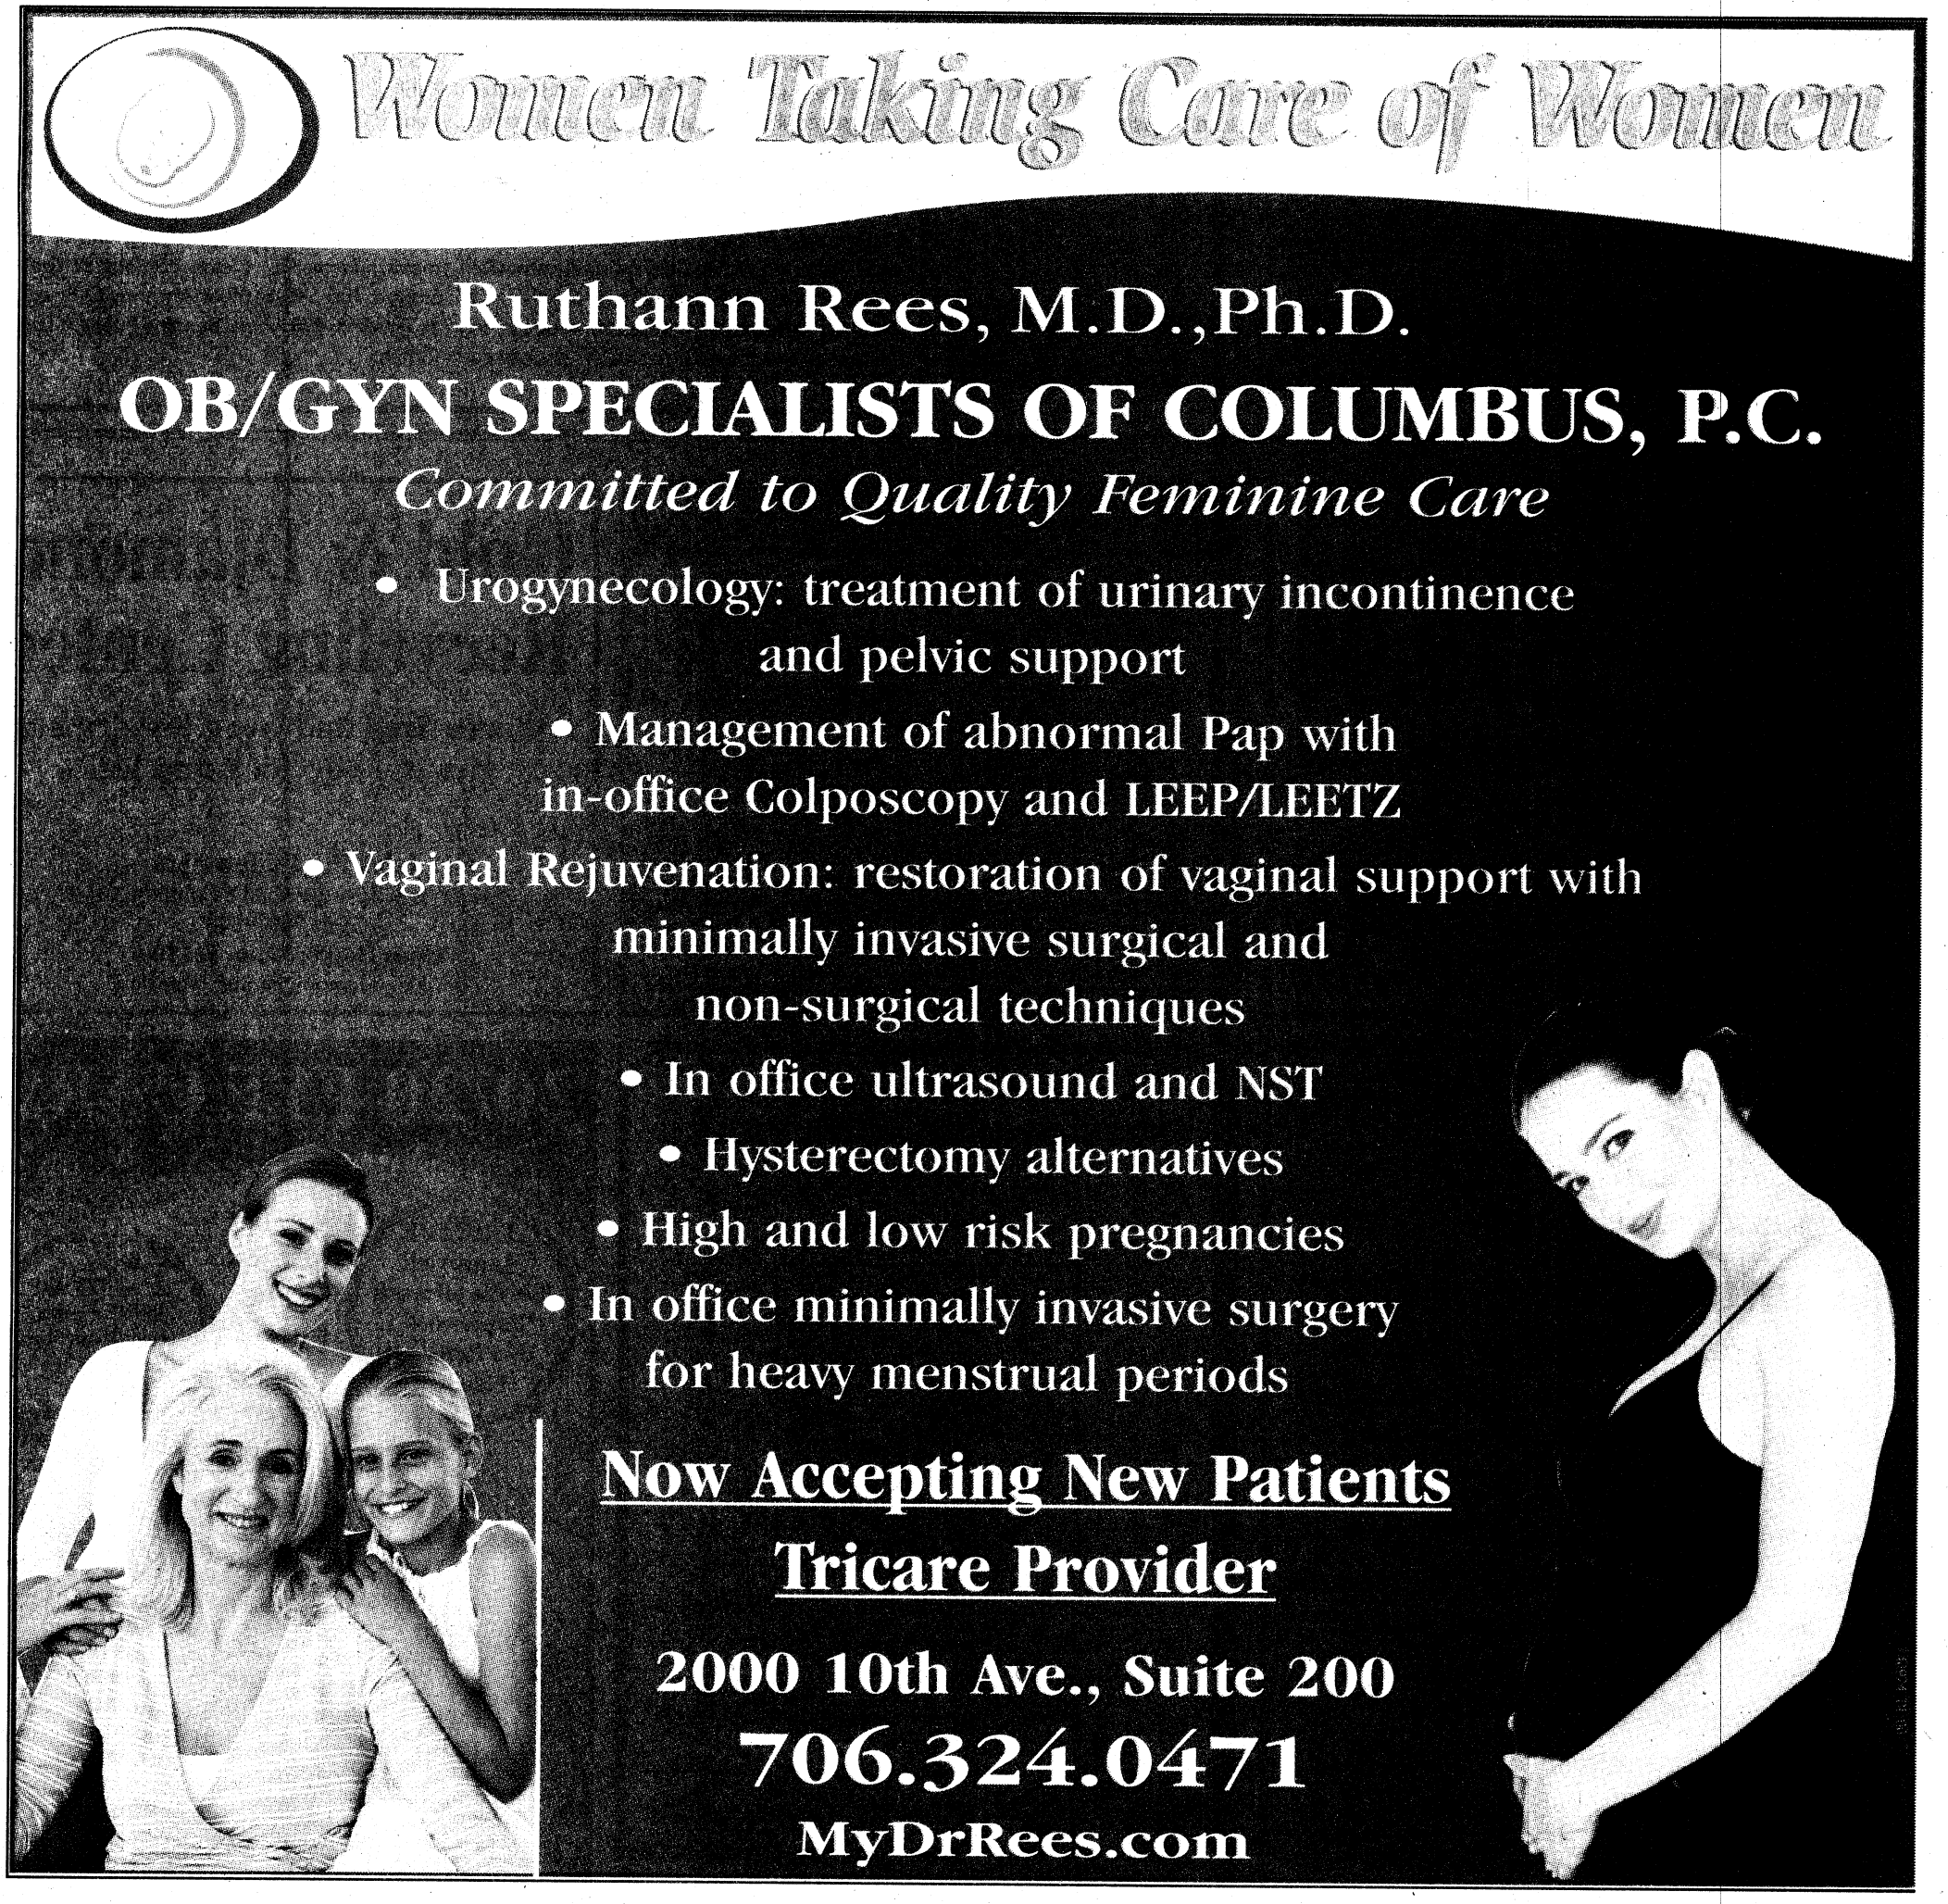
The four re-enlistment options off the table until the end of the fiscal year include the current station stabilization re-enlistment, the Army training re-enlistment, the overseas assignment re-enlistment, and the CONUS station-of-choice re-enlistment.

According to the policy message, there are exceptions to the temporary policy. Soldiers scheduled to return before Oct. 31 from overseas contingency operations such as Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom are exempt and are entitled to all re-enlistment options.

"It does not affect those units," Drummond said. "We have a number of units out there from the brigade combat teams all the way down to battalion and company levels with unit identification codes that are deployed. Those Soldiers that are out there are eligible to receive all options as if nothing has changed — as long as they are redeploying prior to Oct. 31."

Additional exemptions from the temporary policy include Soldiers in over-manned career fields. They may re-enlist for three or more years in order to meet the retainability requirements for moving into a new career field.

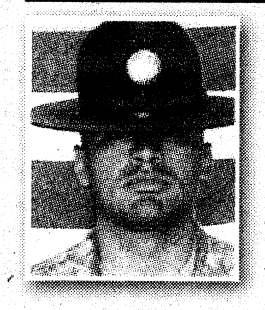
Soldiers in the rank of staff sergeant and above, who have 10 or more years service, are required to re-enlist under the provisions of the indefinite re-enlistment program. Additionally, Soldiers participating in the bonus extension and retraining program, known as BEAR, can re-enlist in accordance with their program agreement.



The temporary policy has the effect of stopping re-enlistment bonuses for some — as a requirement for those bonuses is a three-year or more re-enlistment. Soldiers hoping to reenlist and receive such a bonus, if they meet the requirements to receive a reenlistment bonus, will have to wait until the new fiscal year begins and reenlist then.

Some Soldiers who want to re-enlist, however, will be forced to re-enlist during the last quarter of fiscal 2009, because their re-enlistment window — though a full two years long — will end during that period. Those Soldiers will have to re-enlist for two years, and then re-enlist again inside the new fiscal year if they want to stay in longer.

"But most of the Soldiers that have waited to the last minute have re-enlisted prior to this message going out," Drummond said. "So it only affects those who have been on the wire."



Drummond said even those Soldiers will still be able to eventually get a re-enlistment bonus.

"If you've done two years and you re-enlist for six years, you are actually in sense adding four more years," Drummond said. "But that's all you'll get a bonus for is four more years, not six."

Measures: Help Soldiers, civilians avoid heat injury

"All of our cadre are combat lifesaver qualified, so when they identify a Soldier suffering from or at risk for a heat injury, they will administer an IV immediately at the discretion of a drill sergeant or company commander," Hutto said.

Within the brigade, Soldiers use an identification system for anyone with prior heat or cold injuries, allergiers or under a doctor's care. A red wristband or red beads designate a Soldier who has suffered a previous heat injury. For a cold injury, the wristband and beads are blue. For allergies, they are yellow and for medical conditions, they are white.

The system allows the cadre to keep an eye out for medical complications with anyone who may have a predisposition to them because of a weakened immune system, Hutto said.

While the risk for heat injury is high due to rising temperatures and humidity, leadership is given leeway in their efforts to counteract the risk, he said.

"In the training environment, it's one of the things we can easily control," Hutto said. "We can mitigate the risk of heat so easily with a well-thought-out plan and a risk-management process that's briefed to each Soldier."

The commanders implement controls, such as moving to the shade, downgrading the uniform or making sure Soldiers drink a certain amount of water each day.

Sand Hill Soldiers use a string of beads to keep track of how much water they drank during the day, moving one bead for each canteen and two for each camelback.

Soldiers also use "ice sheets," large sheets soaked in ice water and ready to cool a heat victim if needed, Hutto said.

There are three stages of heat injuries. The first, heat cramps, involves cramps in the arms, legs and abdomen, said SGT Joseph Stephens, environmental health NCOIC with the Department of Preventive Medicine.

It's a result of dehydration, he said. The skin becomes flushed and often feels clammy as the victim perspires less.

Heat exhaustion is the next stage of severity. Symptoms include light headedness, lack of energy, dizziness, a headache, absence of sweating and sometimes vomiting.

For either condition, the person needs to be removed from the heat, sip cool water and relax, Stephens said.

In the case of heat stroke, the most severe response to excessive heat, emergency personnel need to be called in.

"As you get hotter your heart rate increases. Your body had no water, no way of cooling down, so its response is to shut everything down," Stephens said. "If you're outside and you see somebody just drop, call 911. Time is of the essence. What you can do is move them to a cool area and then just wait for emergency personnel to get there."

Stephens said his goal, and the goal of Preventive Medicine, is to make sure things don't progress to the point where a trip to the hospital is necessary.

"It's going to get hotter. The summer isn't over until mid- or late-August; that's when it normally starts cooling off around here," he said.

"Drink water. Your blood is made of 70 percent water, so if you don't replenish the water as you're sweating, then your body can no longer function the way it's supposed to. Monitor the time (you) are outside in the extreme heat. You should always use sunblock if you're going to be out 30 minutes or longer. You can develop skin cancer. And look out for each other. Some people think 'I'm a superhero; I can do anything' and sometimes all it takes is someone else saying, 'You look kind of warm. We need to go inside.'"

For more information about how to avoid heat injury, call 706-545-1144.

Update: Informs public of progress, traffic changes openings will be created on post during the next few years. Information about the jobs and the application process will be distributed at future BRAC community updates.

• Harmony Church traffic routes were reconfigured. The traffic routes will continue to change until construction is complete in that area. Mostly these changes impact on-post traffic, but from time to time, traffic on Highway 27/280 will be reduced to one lane as is currently the case at the 8th Division Road underpass, where construction on a new bridge is under way.

• The final Environmental Impact Statement notice of availability was released July 2. The final EIS details the various approaches considered by planning officials when developing a growth and construction pattern for the MCOE. The final EIS presents all the options, or "alternatives," considered and the impacts each would have upon the environment. After 30 days, a Record of Decision will be published in the Federal Register. That document will lay out the alternatives that have been determined to be most appropriate in respect to the Army mission and the environment.

• It's too early to say when it will happen, but the Army has approved non-appropriated funding for a lodging facility on post with approximately 800 rooms. That's good news for Fort Benning Lodging, which will accommodate an additional 30,000 new military students annually when the MCOE is complete.

The next BRAC community update will start at 3 p.m. Aug. 4 in the first-floor classroom at the National Infantry Museum. It is free and open to the public. After the update, Brown will open the meeting for questions. For more information, call 706-545-6169.

Titan tragedy

Former Tennessee Titans quarterback Steve McNair, 36, was found shot to death in his Nashville condominium Saturday. Police have classified his death as a murder-suicide.

McNair was drafted by the Houston Oilers in 1995 and moved with the franchise to Tennessee, where the team was renamed the Tennessee Titans. He played with the Titans until he was traded to the Baltimore Ravens in 2006. He retired in April 2008.

McNair shared the NFL MVP award with Peyton Manning in 2003, and led the Titans to Super Bowl XXXIV against the Los Angeles Rams, the only appearance for the franchise.

Federer wins, barely

In the longest men's Grand Slam final at Wimbledon, Roger Federer finally managed to best Andy Roddick on Sunday. The 77-game final broke the previous record of 71 games played at the Australian Open men's final in 1927.

Federer now stands at 15 Grand Slam titles, breaking the record of Pete Sampras, who was there to watch his record broken.

In the women's final, it was sister versus sister, but in the end Serena Williams beat her older sister Venus for her third Wimbledon title. The girls then teamed up to win the women's doubles final.

Busch spins, Stewart wins at Daytona

After a late caution, with four laps to go at Daytona International Speedway, Kyle Busch had the lead, but Tony Stewart was right behind him. After leading 86 laps, and on the last lap, Stewart made slight contact with Busch's rear bumper, sending him into the wall and for a ride on the hood of Kasey Kahne's car, then got hit by the No. 20 car of Joey Logano. Busch went from second place on the final lap to finishing the race in 14th place.

Stewart said it wasn't the way he wanted to win. Hey, Tony, whatever it takes, right?

This week is another Saturday night race. TNT will broadcast from Chicagoland Speedway at 8 p.m.

All-Star week

Major League Baseball's 80th All-Star game will be played Tuesday at Busch Stadium in St. Louis. Detroit Tiger and former Shaw High School hurler Edwin Jackson was selected to his first All-Star game. Jackson was selected by the Los Angeles Dodgers out of high school in the 2001 amateur draft and played on last year's Tampa Bay Rays World Series team. He was traded to the Tigers in December.

St. Louis Cardinals first baseman Albert Pujols was the leading vote-getter overall. Other NL starters include Yadier Molina, Chase Utley and Carlos Beltran. AL starters include Dustin Pedrola, Derek Jeter and Evan Longoria.

Don't forget the Home Run Derby at 8 p.m. Monday on ESPN.

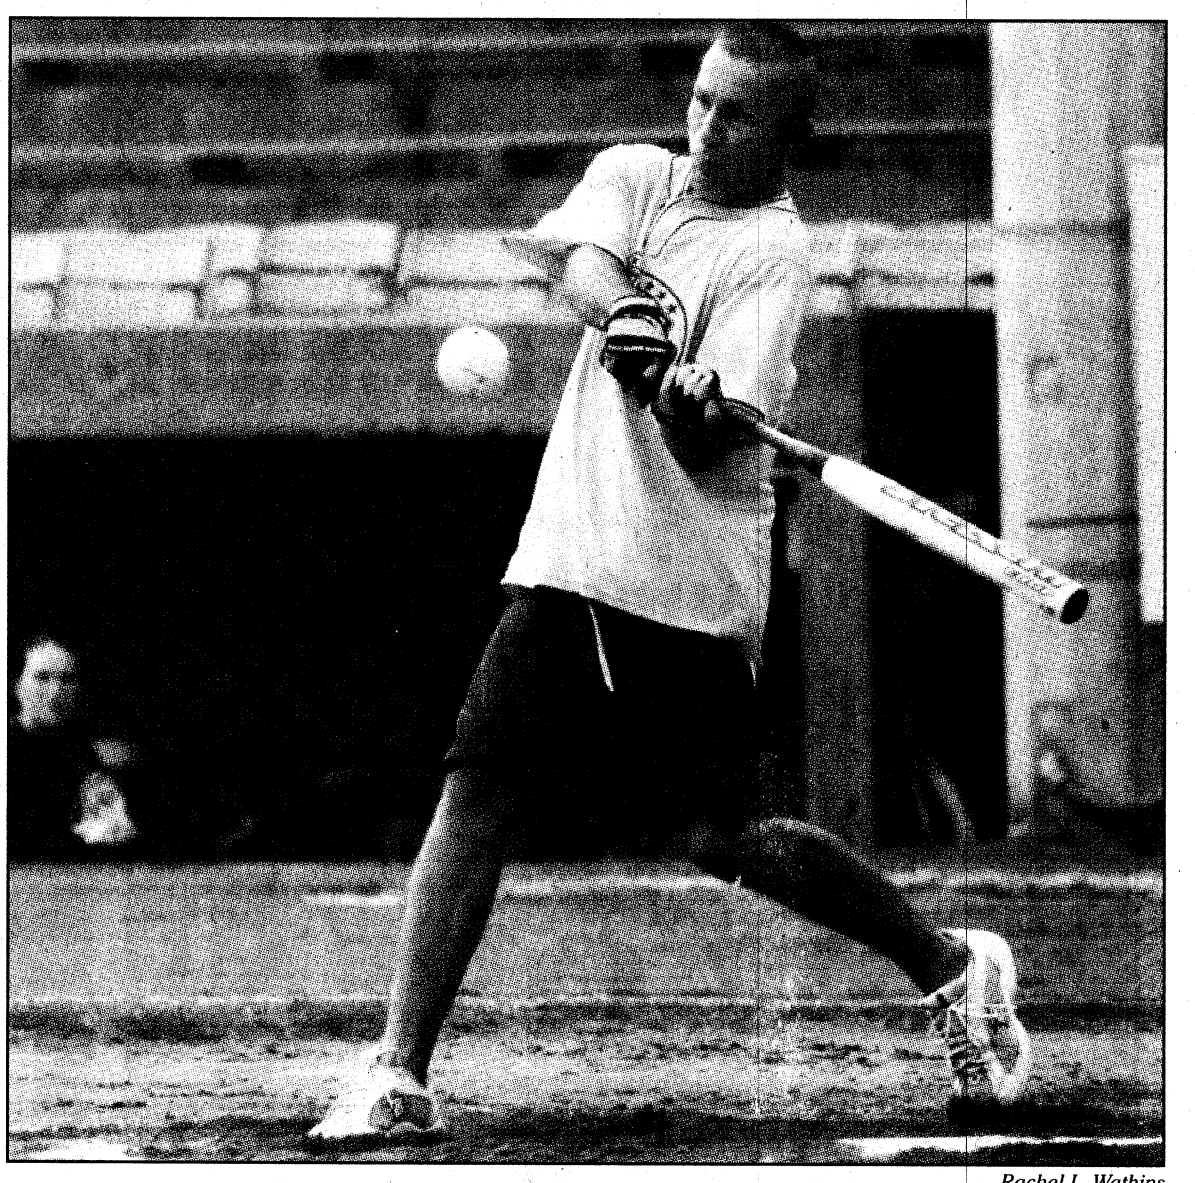
Team Two sweeps all-star softball series

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Teams comprised of Soldiers from Main Post, Kelley Hill and Sand Hill competed in the post intramural softball all-star series Tuesday at Gowdy Field, with Team Two making a clean sweep in a best-of-three matchup.

In Game 1, Team Two scored early, getting eight runs. Brian Walker, Roger Mendenhall and Jackie Jenkins had RBI singles while Robert Buller delivered an RBI double in the top of the first inning.

The bottom of the first inning was Team One's lone scoring inning as it got three runs. Julius Miley had a two-run triple, and Thomas Meno followed with an RBI double.



With an 8-3 lead, Team Two scored four runs on a two-run Mendenhall RBI single and a two-run Chris McFarland RBI triple while Ralph Hodgden pitched a three-up, three-down bottom half of the inning.

Leading 14-3 at the end of the third inning, Team Two scored six more runs in the fourth inning, while Team One left a runner stranded on second base in the fourth.

Team Two tacked on eight more runs in the fifth inning to seal the game, while Hodgden continued to shut down Team One. The game ended after the fifth inning because of the mercy rule, with Team Two on top, 28-3.

"I think everyone played hard and we had good teamwork and communication," said McFarland, assistant coach of Team Two. "We had good hitting and a lack of errors. That played in our favor. I think if we play with the same intensity in the second game as we

"It's never too early to get ready for soccer season," said 12-year-old Alton Day, who participated in a weeklong soccer camp, which began Tuesday at the Youth Sports Complex. "I'm at the camp to improve my soccer skills before the season, so when the season is here, I am ready for it. I think I can learn a lot of new skills at this camp."

Twenty-five children ages 4-15 participated in the camp, led by Columbus State University soccer players and Jay Entlich, head coach of CSU's women's soccer team.

Beginner soccer players learned dribbling, passing, shooting and receiving skills, while expert soccer players learned how to make decisions on the field and worked on improving their skills.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach emphasizes giving 100 percent effort

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Giving 100 percent effort, practicing hard and playing with integrity is what Donald Finley, coach of the 9- to 11-year-old Troopers, expects from his baseball team.

"We have won and lost games this season, but no matter what, the kids always put forward 100 percent effort and that is what I want from them," Finley said.

Finley played little league in California when he was a child. He has coached youth baseball teams, in Italy and Fort Benning, for five years. Finley was assistant coach of the Troopers but became head coach after the head coach deployed.

Coaching is just as much a learning experience for Finley as it is for the players, he said.

"I like coaching — it gets me away from TV — and outside," he said. "It balances my life. You have to have a lot of patience to coach. My goal as a coach is to set example as a good role model for the kids."

Finley said each child has different needs and it's important to know what those needs are.

"Some kids want a male role model, some are looking to build confidence and some want to learn the fundamentals of baseball," he said.

Whether it's at the plate or in the field, the key to baseball is consistency, Finley said.

"Baseball is all about numbers," he said. "Every statistic is tracked, so if there is consistency, it'll show in the numbers."

The Troopers closed out the season June 27 at the Youth Sports Complex.

Before the season ended, Finley wanted to make sure the kids knew their field positions, have a feel for what position they like the most and a knowledge of the game. But most importantly, he said, apply what they learned this season to life.

"I hope the kids have learned that they should never give up and always give 100 percent in everything they do," he said.

Soccer: Practice, dedication key to sharpening skills

Alton Day, 12, moves the ball down the field in a drill at the soccer camp Tuesday at the Youth Sports Complex. Beginner players worked on dribbling, passing, shooting and receiving skills, while expert soccer players learned how to make decisions on the field and worked on improving their skills.

a foundation of skills for players who have not played before and for experienced players, we try and expand their skills and make them better soccer players by increasing their tactical awareness," Entlich said.

Entlich has played soccer for 35 years. As a military child, he played soccer in Virginia, Pennsylvania, Germany and at West Point.

From 1990-94, Entlich played for VirginiaTech and in 1994-95 was a left midfielder with the Middlesbrough Football Club, a professional soccer team in England.

"I think it's cool I get to learn from experienced soccer players," Day said.

Seven-year-old Michael Williams said he went to the soccer camp to improve his soccer skills, and is looking at making the sport a career.

"I want to be a professional soccer player when I grow up, so I need to improve my skills," he said.

"I learned some new dribbling skills already."

For players who want to improve their soccer skills, Entlich said the best way to get better is practice and dedication.

"Most kids don't want to practice outside of scheduled practice times but that's a way they can get better at the sport," he said.

Getting into shape isn't easy

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Operation Get Into Shape is in effect. For those of you who don't know, I am attending a monthlong boot camp at Smith Fitness Center as part of my operation to look good in a wedding dress by September and also make a change in my lifestyle.

I was prepared Tuesday for a smokin' at boot camp, but because it was an orientation day, we didn't work out. I have to admit, though, I was questioning whether I would be able to pull this off because my favorite snack is chocolate and my favorite exercise is clicking the TV remote. As part of the orientation, the boot camp instructor, personal fitness trainer Eric Dempsey, weighed us in and measured our body fat and took our "before" photos.

After we reviewed the exercise and nutrition plan for the camp, I wondered, just for a minute, "what have I got myself into?"

I think I underestimated how much work this camp would be on my part.

I worked out Wednesday on my own and followed the cardio plan. By the end of the session, I was sweating so much, I looked like I walked through a rainstorm. I really had to push myself to get through the first 42-minute workout, but I am proud I didn't give up. Oh, and by the way, I found that staring at the timer on the treadmill doesn't make time go by any faster.

As Dempsey once told me, "You get out what you put into the camp."

And that includes improving my nutrition, too.

When I start eating healthy, all I see is junk food. As I walked on the treadmill Wednesday, a man came on TV and pointed to a pizza in a commercial. The TV was on mute, but I heard in my head, "Rachel, you like pizza, go get one." I soon came back to reality. And when I went to the drug store to pick up a couple groceries after my workout, I went to the counter to pay and I all I could see were the rows and rows of candy adjacent to the checkout counter. It took a lot of self control to only look.

I am saying goodbye to cookies, candy and pizza and hello to protein shakes, vegetables, fruits and baked chicken.

And then came Thursday, the first real day of boot camp — a reality check and a smokin'. I was drenched with sweat by the end of the workout and my muscles were immediately sore. I thought to myself, "I know I'll sleep great tonight," but I wasn't looking forward to waking up in the morning. After the high-intensity hourlong workout, I realized how much work I really need to put into this camp so I can be fit.

I am determined to complete this camp. I think it's the kick in the pants I need to change my exercising and eating habits. Getting into shape isn't supposed to be easy. If it was, I guess everyone would be excited to do it.

I have work to do.

Want to attend boot camp? The next session begins Aug. 4. The class meets from 9:15-10:15 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday at Smith Fitness Center. Participants are given nutrition and cardio plans to use outside of class. The cost is $120 per monthlong session. The cost is $60 for those who get a friend to sign up. The participant who loses the most body fat in a session gets another monthlong session free.

did in the first game, we can win."

Team One struck first in the second game, scoring on RBI singles by Miley and Jerica Ogle in the first and second innings, while Team Two remained scoreless at the end of two innings.

Leading 2-0, Team One's Alan Gaines hit a home run in the third inning, while Team Two tied the score with three runs.

Team One broke the stalemate in the fourth inning by scoring on a Kirk Parker RBI double and a catcher's error, while keeping Team Two from scoring, taking a 6-3 lead.

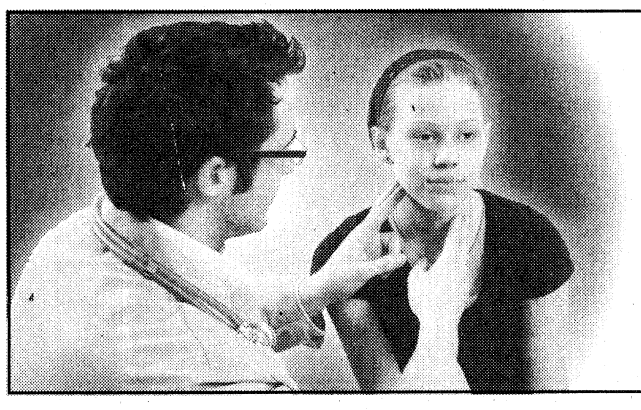
Hodgden pitched a three-up, three-down top of the fifth inning, and Team Two took a 10-6 lead by scoring seven runs.

Team One scored five runs in the sixth inning to take a temporary 11-10 lead, but Team Two scored two runs on an Elenzia Booker RBI single and a Nathan Dow hit to right field, to clinch a 12-11 win.

"We came out kind of slow in the second game," Dow said.

"We needed a few hits in the end and luckily we got enough to win the game. They almost had us — it was a close game. We started getting hits when we needed them late in the game and we came back in the end."

Brian Walker, coach of Team Two, said the team was fatigued in the second game.



"We had a few guys struggling, but all the players came out and hustled and played hard," he said. "It got close for a minute, but we were able to pull out the win in the end."

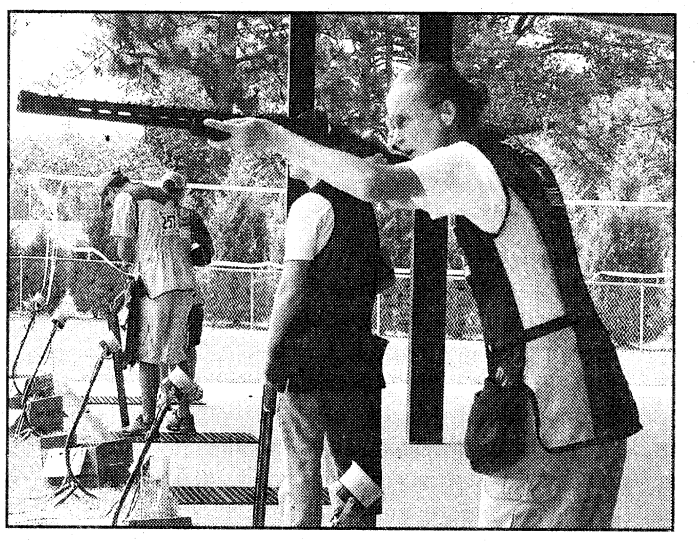
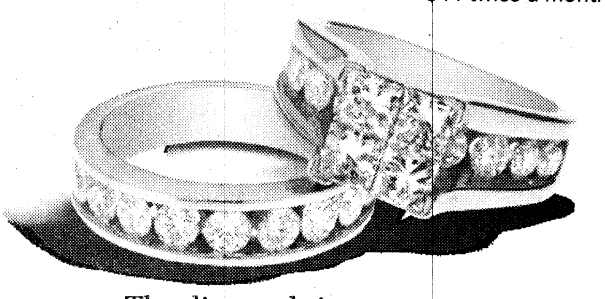
USAMU shotgun team wins six medals



Michael Molinaro
USAMU PAO

Soldiers from the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Shotgun Team brought home six medals recently on both the International and Interservice stage.



At a World Cup Shotgun meet in San Marino, SPC Joshua Richmond was awarded a bronze medal in the Double Trap event June 20. Richmond tallied a final score of 190, losing out on a gold medal by three points to eventual champion Junjie Mo of China.

During the Interservice Championships at Fort Benning, SPC Jeff Holguin crushed the field after setting two Interservice records and winning the Double Trap event. He was followed by teammates SSG Matt DePuydt and SFC Joetta Dement, making it a clean sweep for the AMU.

In the Trap event, DePuydt took first place and was followed by Dement closing out the weekend with six team medals for the AMU.

Have a splash in outdoor pools, stay safe

They might be called the lazy days of summer, but apathy has no place in or around the swimming pool — at least when it comes to safety, lifeguards say.

With people heading to Fort Benning's outdoor pools in larger numbers as the season approaches its midway point, officials want to reinforce the practices and measures set up to prevent mishaps and accidents in the water.

The Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation outdoor pool behind the Benning Conference Center is a big hangout for families and kids seeking refuge from the heat, attracting about 50 visitors a day, said Rachel Patrzeba, the facility's head lifeguard. More than 85 people hit the pool on its busiest day a few weeks ago, when temperatures consistently reached the upper 90s.

The other two outdoor swimming pools operated by DFMWR at Fort Benning are Carey Pool on Main Post and the pool at Kelley Hill.

Patrzeba said it's OK to have fun and cool off with a dip but safety should never be overlooked.

"If people know and follow the basic rules, it will make the experience more enjoyable for all," she said. "We haven't had any problems here this summer. The lifeguards know how to prevent things from happening — I couldn't ask for a better staff. And most patrons know how to have fun in a safe manner."

LaToya Stewart teaches her 4-year-old daughter, Christina, how to swim Tuesday in the outdoor pool at the Benning Conference Center. Christina's father, CPL Chris Stewart, said he brought his family out to escape the summer heat.

She said the pool at the Benning Conference Center has more features for children, including a baby pool and playground structure. Carey's baby pool is closed indefinitely.

Former Stowers principal returns to post as principal for White

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Glenn Hughes, a former principal of Stowers Elementary for seven years, returns to Fort Benning as principal of E. A. White Elementary School this fall. He replaces Dr. Tommy Lee, who is retiring after nine years as principal at White.

Hughes previously worked as the Instructional Systems Specialist for the Area Service Center in Peachtree City, Ga. He also served as an Elementary Instructional Specialist for the Pacific area, based out of Okinawa.

His first love, however, after God and family, is being a principal, he said.

"I am absolutely thrilled to be here," said Hughes, who was named Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools principal of the year while at Stowers.

"I love student interaction, and I feel like I've been away from the student interaction long enough. I wanted to be back into a school where things are really happening," he said. "As a coordinator you can certainly lay the groundwork to make things happen for students and for teachers, but you can only stay away from the daily student interactions (so) long. Then it's time to get right back into a school. That's where it makes the difference."

The Columbus native and Phenix City resident started his career as a language arts teacher in Muscogee County in 1979, but after two

When reflecting on his years in grade school, Dr. Matthew Kralevich can remember a few special educators who positively influenced him as a child. As the new principal of Dexter Elementary, Kralevich said he hopes to be that kind of person for the students who will start school Aug. 7.

"It truly is a magical profession," he said, "to be a positive role model day in and day out. While many of our lessons and activities are planned, quite often they are not scripted. You never know what's going to happen on any given day that will leave a positive lasting impact in the memories of students."

Previously, Kralevich served as a principal of Memorial Intermediate School in Texas for two years. He takes the reins at Dexter from Dr. Renee Mallory, the principal of Wilson, who oversaw both schools last year.

From his earliest days as an undergraduate, Kralevich knew that the field of education was for

Friends plan ride for wounded guardsman

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Longtime friends of SPC Andrew "Sully" Sullens, a Georgia Army National Guardsman from Dahlonega, Ga., severely wounded in Afghanistan, are organizing a motorcycle ride through the mountains of North Georgia to raise funds for him and his family to help with expenses.

The Sully Run, slated for Aug. 1, will begin and end at Lumpkin County High School, where a family fair is scheduled afterward. Organizers expect more than 300 people to take part in the ride, which will last more than two hours along a route through Lumpkin, Union and White counties.

Sullens, who belongs to a reconnaissance and surveillance troop attached to the Dalton-based 108th Cavalry Regiment, was injured by a roadside bomb May 17 while on patrol, according to his Web site at www.andysullens.com.

The Web site includes updates on Sullens' recovery and a page for guests to leave messages of support.

Ashley Coker and Shane Squires, who attended Lumpkin County High School with Sullens, are coordinating the motorcycle run.

Coker said Sullens suffered burns, knee damage, a compound fracture to his leg and several fractures to his pelvis in the explosion. Three other National Guardsmen from his unit also were wounded.

Sullens underwent multiple surgeries to his pelvis and legs at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, according to his Web site. In late June, he was transferred to Fort Gordon in Augusta, Ga., where he's completing physical therapy in the Active Duty Rehabilitation Unit at the Charlie Norwood Veterans Affairs Medical Center.

"That's one more step closer to getting home. I will end up spending the rest of my rehab there," Sullens wrote June 21 on his blog. "I still can't bear weight on my pelvis until around mid-August, so I'll still be in a wheelchair for the Sully Run."

Coker said her husband, Scott, and Squires work with Sully at the Lumpkin County Sheriff's Office.

"Andrew and my husband are best friends, like brothers," Coker said. "After he got hurt, we wanted to do something. We thought about doing a concert, but Andy really likes to ride motorcycles, so we decided to do the benefit ride for him.

"It started as a small-town thing and turned into something really big. It's a lot bigger than we thought it would be. We're really excited about it."

Riders may register for the Sully Run in advance through July 20. The cost is $20 per bike. The fee is $25 the day of the event.

Kurt Thomas, a singer and songwriter from Dahlonega, is scheduled to perform at the festival. Family events include games, a giant slide and moon bounce. Barbecue plates will also be available for purchase.

To sign up for the ride, or for more information, visit www.sullyrun.webs.com.

Respite care offers families rest

Jason L. Austin

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The Exceptional Family Member Program Respite Care Program provides a temporary rest period for caregivers of disabled family members.

"Special needs care is around the clock," said Sharon Fields, a program manager for Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation's Respite Care Services. "When a family has a special needs child or adult, respite care provides a break for the primary caregiver."

The EFMP puts respite care in place when needed for eligible families of active Army, Army National Guard and Army Reserve Soldiers.

"Our primary goal is to ensure consistency and continuity of our Respite Care Program, regardless of where our Soldiers and families are located," Fields said.

Families can apply for the Respite Care Program at the nearest Army Community Service EFMP office. Eligibility for the program is based on EFMP enrollment and the medical or educational condition of the family member requiring care.

Qualifying families are eligible to receive up to 40 hours of funded EFMP respite care monthly for each certified family member and can receive up to $45 per hour for care.

During fiscal years 2007 and 2008, FMWRC received $8.2 million in supplemental funds for EFMP respite care. In FY09, respite care has been included in the base operating funds for ACS and is no longer funded by supplemental funds.

To further standardize and expedite service delivery Armywide, the Army Installation Management Command published revised guidelines for use of FY09 EFMP respite care funds June 11.

These guidelines become effective Aug. 3.

For more information on respite care, call the Fort Benning EFMP officer at 706-545-5521 or visit www.benningmwr.com/acs-efmp.php.

The post EFMP office is located inside Building 2624 of Soldiers' Plaza on Dixie Road.

Pools: Merit safety

are held in the conference center pool from 9 a.m. to noon Tuesday through Friday.

While there haven't been any major incidents this summer, lifeguards remain diligent with the enforcement of rules, Patrzeba said.

"Kids love to run on the pool deck here. That's a big no-no," she said.

Children 10-and-younger who don't know how to swim must be accompanied by a parent in the water, she said.

"That's a big rule we enforce," said Patrzeba, who's been a lifeguard for eight years, including the past two summers at Fort Benning. "Parents should also keep an extra eye on their children because it does get really crowded in here sometimes.

"The teenagers can get a little rough, too. We just tell them to calm down."

She said there have been isolated instances this year of people sneaking into the pool after hours by hopping over the fence. That's dangerous because someone could get hurt and no one would be around to help, she said.

"Don't ever swim without a lifeguard," she said.

Patrzeba encourages pool visitors to always wear sunscreen — even when it's cloudy — and stay hydrated in the hot weather. Little Caesar's nearby offers free water, she said.

Alcohol is allowed at the outdoor pool but glass bottles are prohibited.

Patrzeba said officials also take precautions during afternoon thunderstorms, a common occurrence in the summer. The pool closes for an hour when lightning is spotted and 30 minutes if thunder is detected in the area.

The pool at the Benning Conference Center is open 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and noon to 8 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. It's closed every Monday for lifeguard training and team building.

Hours of operation are the same at Carey Pool and Kelley Hill, but the lifeguard in-service days are different. Carey Pool is closed Tuesdays while the Kelley Hill facility shuts down each Wednesday.

After Aug. 3, the Fort Benning outdoor pools will be open on weekends only until closing for the season on Labor Day.

years, transitioned to Wilson Elementary on post. He served as the assistant principal at White and later the technology director for Fort Benning Schools.

Now, he is ready for the first day of school and getting down to business.

"I'm really looking forward to the first day of school when all the teachers and students are once again back in session," he said. "You see new kids coming in. It's all fresh. It's new. It's exciting. And I want kids to look at school that way, to be fun every day."

"I'm a motivator. I want students to know anything is possible. I like working with students and seeing the excitement in their eyes when they learn a new skill. It's just an exciting place and there's not anywhere I can think that I would rather be."

Cheri Corser, a Stowers Elementary teacher who has known Hughes for 20 years, said she is thrilled he is returning to Fort Benning.

"Mr. Hughes was a very positive and proactive principal — a kid magnet, the kind of principal that made all of the students in the school feel he knew them personally," said Corser, who teaches preschoolers with disabilities. "He always knew my students and made it a point to get down on his knees when he came in to visit them, so he wasn't looming so far above them. They never pronounced his name correctly; it was either Mr. Shoes or Mr. Huge, but he responded to them either way. He's just able to communicate in a way they can understand."

Corser said she always felt she could come to Hughes with any questions about education, even after he left for the Pacific.

"He's an open-door kind of a person," she said, "an asset to the school and to the Fort Benning school system."

His open-door policy — and his emphasis on a close relationship with the community — is something that won't change, Hughes said.

"This school is in this community for our students and for our parents," he said. "As a staff at White school, we're here to meet their needs. My door and the doors to the school and the doors to these classrooms will always remain open."

Hughes arrives on Fort Benning at the beginning of August and will be happy to meet parents and students before the start of school. Hughes said he knows it takes everyone, community, staff, parents and teachers, to create quality learning.

"White school is an incredible school. Our students are great, and we attain great things. But we need to be able to carry the students as far as we can educationally, so they are prepared for the ever-changing world," he said. "I know this is an elementary school, pre-K through five, but they have to have a solid foundation for whatever career they choose. Our goal is to provide that solid foundation that is going to open up many opportunities for them down the road.

"We hit the ground running and we'll work hard until we break for another summer vacation. We have a lot of work to do."

him, he said. He completed his graduate and doctoral degrees in educational administration and educational leadership, respectively, while working as a teacher and assistant principal.

"With education, a lot of people really start out with that internal flame, I call it, where they have a strong desire to hold the future in their hands and to really know that what they do on a day-to-day basis will impact children for the rest of their lives," he said. "The role of a teacher is not only for instruction. We also need to be role models for students … to inspire them to know what opportunities are available to them."

When Kralevich visited Fort Benning in May, he was struck with the history and sense of community.

"It's something I wanted to be a part of," he said. "I've always had a profound respect for the military. And to be able to work alongside them in this capacity, I felt the opportunity was right. I've spent my entire career, both academic and professional, working to this point. I don't think it can get any better than where I'm at right now. It's outstanding."

Kralevich said he still has a lot to learn about the military — particularly the acronyms — but he looks forward to building strong relationships between the community, staff, students and families. Meanwhile, he offers an open invitation to meet parents and others who would like to drop by.

> "I don't think it can get any better than where I'm at right now."
> — Dr. Matthew Kralevich

"Come on by," he said. "I really want to get to know as many people as possible. I'd be happy to introduce myself, but more importantly, I'd like to get to know them."

Dr. Dell McMullen, Fort Benning schools superintendent, said she knew after meeting Kralevich he would be a good fit for the school.

"I'm delighted Dr. Kralevich will be at Dexter," she said. "It was evident in our interview that he is warm and very collaborative. He is eager to talk with teachers and staff about what's working well at Dexter and garner their ideas for how to make a great school even better. "

If I had to choose the one thing that struck me about Dr. Kralevich, it's that he's a servant leader. He truly believes he is here to serve the children, parents, teachers and staff, not the other way around. That's what leadership is. I look forward to seeing Dexter reach even greater heights."

Enduring trials, pain brings victory

Chaplain (CPT) Bruce Duty
3RD BRIGADE SPECIAL TROOPS BATTALION

Experiencing times of doubt and struggle are common. When faced with trying circumstances, we often lose patience and hope. Trials and troubles occur in each of our lives. The question is not, "Will I go through a difficult time?" but "When will I go through a difficult time?"

The Bible says, "Blessed is the man who endures trials."

This kind of endurance speaks of patiently and triumphantly enduring. It says that we can do more than survive the pain of life — we can have a victorious outcome. Pain often precedes progress needed in our lives. The person who goes through trials and comes out a winner ultimately has his faith strengthened.

Broken relationships, the death of a loved one, personal sickness, career challenges or some other struggle may seem overwhelming.

This is the time to cling to the heavenly Father. Be patient in your prayers. Be persistent as you move forward one step at a time.

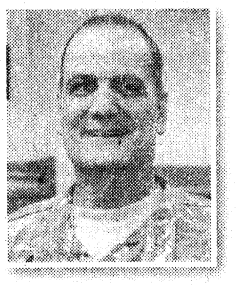
Indeed, God knows what it is like to experience pain. Jesus knows what it is like to experience pain and abandonment.

Therefore, know that God sympathizes and empathizes with you and your struggle.

God has worked his best miracles in seemingly impossible situations. Noah survived the flood. Moses made it through the Red Sea. David defeated Goliath.

You, too, can endure the pain of the problems in your life. As you endure by trusting in God, you will do more than survive. You will come out on the other side a winner. You will be thankful to a God that will "never leave nor forsake you." Others will be grateful for the positive role model you were during tough times.

So, stay in the fight. Endure hardship. Grow with the grace God gives. Love, joy, peace, patience and the like will result in your life.



God bless.

Connect to life through relationships

Chaplain (CPT) Steve Doyle
3RD BATTALION, 47TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

What matters most?

Can you answer that question with any certainty? And is that answer clear and unambiguous in your mind?

For me, I have to say it is relationships. That is the bread and butter of life.

I can hear someone reading this and saying, "Yeah, yeah, yeah, Chaplain." It usually comes from someone who has had a relational meltdown or experienced brokenness in relation to another.

We all start out in life needing friendship, wanting companionship and longing to belong. This is true for the toughest of Soldiers. Think of it: some of the strongest bonds — outside of marriage — that a Soldier feels are with those he or she has served with in combat. It is hard to explain to others but no less real.

Think of this: I worked as a chaplain for a medical hospital for a little more than a year. During that time, I saw over two hundred people die.

Never — not once — did I hear a person on their deathbed complain of not being able to buy the bigger house or not making a promotion or not getting enough sex.

In all cases, what people talked about during the last moments on this earth was other people. No exceptions. When push comes to shove — regardless of what people say — their actions betray a underlying longing for ultimate meaning and love.

What grounds you to this world? Is it people? Is it your job? Is it God?

By "ground," I mean what holds you to this world and gives life meaning? Can meaning be found in what we do? Most certainly for many our work plays a large part in defining us.

But life is more than just work. For some, the real connection in life comes through faith. Once the issue of faith is settled, then all other relationships seem to sort themselves out.

Others see no need for any connection with God yet do seem to enjoy the comfort of kindred souls.

All that I know is this: Isolation kills the soul and takes no prisoners. This is an undeniable truth.

So, no matter what has happened to you, no matter what you have gone through, no matter how much you hurt, you must fight against the inclination to shut down. You must reboot the hard drive and re-engage life.

Then, and only then, will you find life, love and happiness. True life is not really about me — it is much more plural in nature.

Happy birthday, America

Soldiers with the 198th Infantry Brigade unfurl the garrison-size flag as Soldiers with the Infantry Center Band, SSG Stan Hinds, left, SSG Sam Metcalf, 2LT Kelly Seeley and SGT James Beeson, sing the national anthem a capella at home plate before the Columbus Wood Bats and East Alabama Big Train game at Golden Park during military appreciation day Saturday. The Big Train won 8-4.

Soldiers celebrate 4th with national pastime

Army Drill Sergeant of the Year SSG Michael Johnston throws the ceremonial first pitch prior to Saturday's game between the Columbus Wood Bats and East Alabama Big Train at Golden Park. More than 3,000 Soldiers attended the game.

The inning ends as an East Alabama Big Train batter pops out into foul territory. Thousands of Soldiers attended the Columbus Wood Bats military appreciation day at Golden Park on Saturday.

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

Take me out to the ballgame, take me out to the crowd. And boy howdy, was there a crowd when more than 3,000 Soldiers from Fort Benning spent the Fourth of July root, root, rooting for the home team, the Columbus Wood Bats, as they challenged the East Alabama Big Train in America's national pastime — baseball.

And it was a shame, the Wood Bats lost 8-4.

Both teams are part of the Great South League, where amateur college players hone their skills in a summer wood bat league.

I didn't see a lot of peanuts or Cracker Jack, but I did see a lot of hot dogs, hamburgers and pizza.

Megan Wilkeson, whose father is a retired lieutenant colonel and concessionaire, told me she got to Golden Park at 10:30 a.m. to start cooking the thousand hotdogs and 600 burgers. When they put in the order for 1,200 pizzas, the response was, "are you feeding an army?" How would you like to be the one delivering 200 pizzas at a time?

It was all part of the Columbus Wood Bats military appreciation day. The pregame festivities included a tug of war between the two training brigades from Sand Hill. The post command sergeant major, CSM Earl Rice, officiated the contest. Soldiers from the 198th Infantry Brigade made pretty quick work of pulling the 192nd Infantry Brigade Soldiers across the line. The winners got pizza.

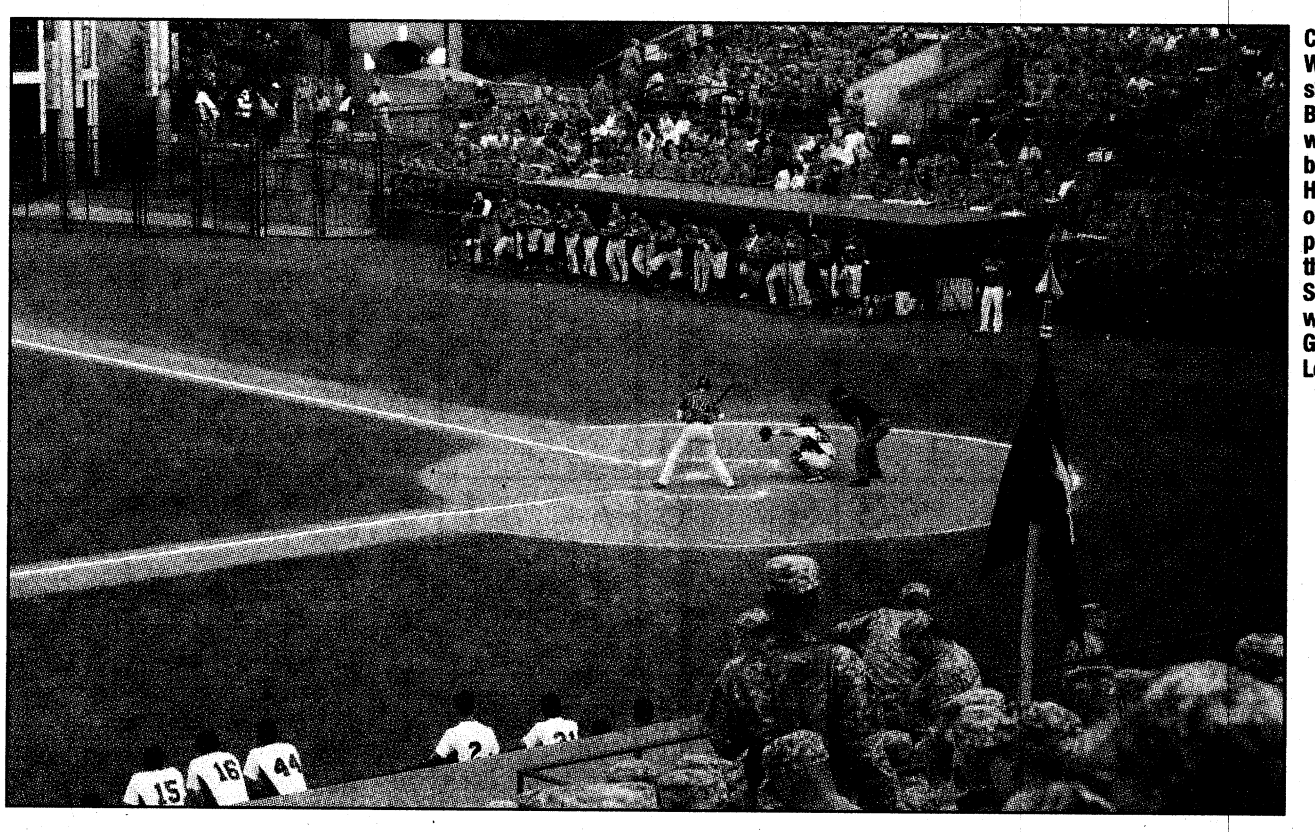
Soldiers with the 198th Infantry Brigade celebrate winning the tug-of-war contest over the 192nd Inf. Bde. Soldiers. The tug of war was part of the military appreciation day festivities Saturday at the Columbus Wood Bats' game at Golden Park.

A quartet of Soldiers sang The Star-Spangled Banner a capella at home plate, while more Soldiers displayed the garrison-size flag in the infield.

The Army Drill Sergeant of the Year, SSG Michael Johnston, threw out the first pitch and then the players took the field. The Wood Bats wore camouflage jerseys in honor of the military.

The time-honored tradition of a baseball game and celebrating the nation's birthday resonated with the troops.

A Soldier from Miami, Pvt. Kim Slayko, C Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, said he wouldn't trade this holiday for anything, even though last year he spent it boating.



"I love it. I want to thank the Army for bringing us out here," Slayko said.

"Baseball is how we spent summers," said PFC Russel Ravellette, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., who grew up playing the game in a town with a population of 800 in Southeastern Illinois.

Baseball is how PFC Alex Stamps, with A Co., 1st Bn., 19th Inf. Regt., met his wife, he said. The 19-year-old from VanBuren, Ark., has umpired Little League games since he was 13.

"She's an umpire, too." The couple will celebrate their first anniversary July 22. "Baseball is the American experience."

The next military appreciation day is Tuesday. Admission is free with a military ID card. For more information, go to www.greatsouthleague.com.

Columbus Wood Bats shortstop Ben Inman watches the ball go past. He walked on the next pitch. More than 3,000 Soldiers watched the Great South League game.

OPENING THIS WEEK

BRUNO

Brüno, a gay fashionista, is the host of the top-rated late night fashion show in any German-speaking country — apart from Germany. Brüno's mission? To become the biggest Austrian celebrity since Hitler. His strategy? To crisscross the globe in the hope of finding fame and love.

The film stars Sacha Baron Cohen and is rated R for pervasive strong and crude sexual content, graphic nudity and language.

HARRY POTTER AND THE HALF-BLOOD PRINCE

Voldemort is tightening his grip on both the Muggle and wizarding worlds and Hogwarts is no longer the safe haven it once was. Harry suspects that dangers may even lie within the castle, but Dumbledore is more intent upon preparing him for the final battle that he knows is fast approaching. Together they work to find the key to unlock Voldemort's defenses. Meanwhile, the students are under attack from a very different adversary as teenage hormones rage across the ramparts. Harry finds himself more and more drawn to Ginny. Love is in the air, but tragedy lies ahead and Hogwarts may never be the same again.

The movie stars Daniel Radcliff, Emma Watson, Rupert Grint and Michael Gambon. It is rated PG for scary images, some violence, language and mild sensuality.

I LOVE YOU, BETH COOPER

A nerdy valedictorian proclaims his love for the hottest and most popular girl in school, Beth Cooper, during his graduation speech. Much to his surprise, Beth shows up at his door that very night and decides to show him the best night of his life.

The film stars Lauren London, Paul Rust and Hayden Panettiere. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language, teen drinking, drug references and brief violence.

ALSO SHOWING

ICE AGE: DAWN OF THE DINOSAURS

The subzero heroes are back. Scrat is still trying to nab the ever elusive nut, while maybe finding true love. Manny and Ellie await the birth of their mini-mammoth. Diego the saber toothed tiger wonders if he is growing too soft and Sid the sloth gets into trouble when he creates his own makeshift family by hijacking some dinosaur eggs.

On a mission to rescue the hapless Sid, the gang ventures into a mysterious underground world, where they have some close encounters with dinosaurs, battle flora and fauna, run amuck and meet a relentless, one eyed, dino-hunting weasel named Buck.

Ice Age stars the voices of Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary and Queen Latifah. It is rated PG for mild humor and peril.

TRANSFORMERS: REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

When Sam Witwicky discovers some crucial information about the Transformers' creation and their history on our planet, the Decepticons set out to catch him and pick his brain. Optimus Prime must join forces with armies from around the world in order to stage an epic battle against the Decepticons in Egypt.

Many secrets about both human and Cybertronian history are revealed amid spectacular clashes of robots against robots.

The movie stars Shia LaBeouf, Megan Fox, Josh Duhamel, Tyrese Gibson, John Turturro and Matthew Marsden. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action violence, language, crude and sexual material, and drug material.

PUBLIC ENEMIES

No one could stop John Dillinger and his gang. No jail could hold him. His charm and audacious jailbreaks endeared him to almost everyone — from his girlfriend Billie Frechette to an American public that had no sympathy for the banks that had plunged the country into the Depression. But while the adventures of Dillinger's gang — later including Baby Face Nelson and Alvin Karpis — thrilled many, J. Edgar Hoover made Dillinger America's first Public Enemy No. 1 and sent in Melvin Purvis, the dashing "Clark Gable of the FBI." However, Dillinger and his gang outwitted and outgunned Purvis' men in wild chases and shootouts. Only after importing a crew of Western ex-lawmen (newly baptized as agents) and orchestrating epic betrayals — from the infamous "Lady in Red" to the Chicago crime boss Frank Nitti — were Purvis, the FBI and their new crew of gunfighters able to close in on Dillinger.

Public Enemies stars Johnny Depp, Christian Bale and Marion Cotillard. It is rated R for gangster violence and some language.

MY SISTER'S KEEPER

Anna Fitzgerald has coped with her older sister's rare cancer her whole life, and served as a donor for her as long as she can remember. Although Anna has missed many opportunities in order to help her sister, she never resented it. But, when Anna discovers she was conceived to keep her sister alive, she goes to court in hopes of freeing herself and earning the chance to live her own life.

My Sister's Keeper stars Cameron Diaz, Abigail Breslin, Alec Baldwin, Jason Patric and Joan Cusack. It is rated PG-13 for mature thematic content, disturbing images, sensuality, language and teen drinking.

THE PROPOSAL

When Margaret, a high-powered book editor, faces deportation to her native Canada, she declares she's engaged to Andrew, her put-upon assistant who she has tormented for years. Andrew agrees to the charade, but with several conditions. So, the couple head to Alaska to meet his quirky family, where Margaret finds herself in one fish-out-of-water situation after another.

With a wedding in the works and an immigration official on their tails, Margaret and Andrew reluctantly stick to their plan, despite its consequences.

The Proposal stars Sandra Bullock, Ryan Reynolds, Mary Steenburgen and Craig T. Nelson. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content, nudity and language.

IMAGINE THAT

Evan Danielson is a successful financial executive who has more time for his BlackBerry than his seven-year-old daughter. But when he has a crisis of confidence and his career starts going down the drain, Danielson finds the solutions to all his problems in his daughter's imaginary world.

Imagine That stars Eddie Murphy, Yara Shahidi, Thomas Hayden Church and Vanessa Williams. It is rated PG for language and behavior.

YEAR ONE

Zed and Oh, two hunter-gatherers, are too lazy to be of use to their community as hunters, so they are banished from their village. The pair set off on an epic journey through the ancient world, meeting biblical characters such as Adam and Eve, Cain and Abel, and Abraham. Will the pair of mismatched losers ever find a place to settle down or a girl to settle down with?

Year One stars Jack Black, Michael Cera, Oliver Platt, David Cross and Hank Azaria. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content throughout, language and comic violence.

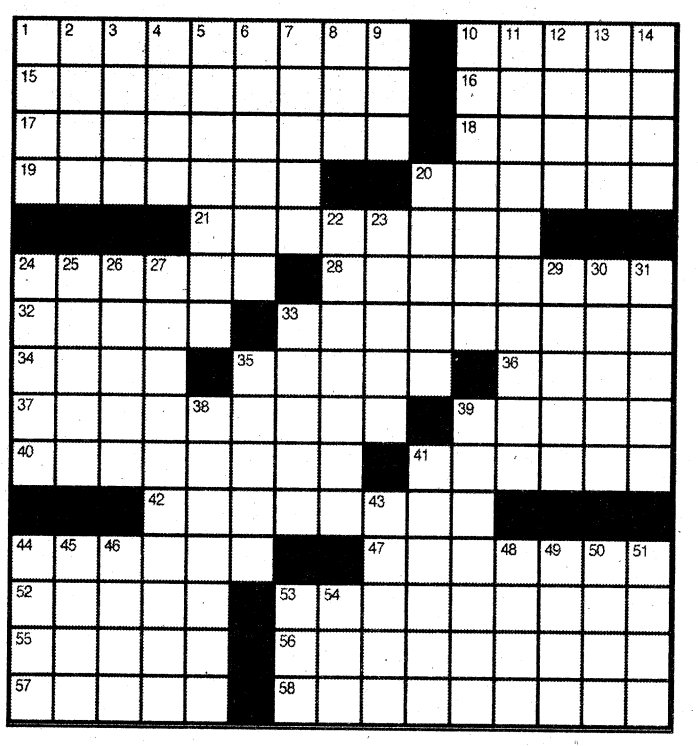
THE TAKING OF PELHAM 123

Walter Garber is a New York subway dispatcher whose day is thrown into chaos when Ryder, a criminal mastermind, hijacks a subway train. Leading a highly-armed gang of four, Ryder threatens to execute the train's passengers unless a ransom is paid within one hour. As tension mounts, Garber uses his knowledge of the subway system in a battle to outwit Ryder and save the passengers. But, one question remains: even if the thieves get the money, how will they escape?

The movie stars Denzel Washington, John Travolta, James Gandolfini and John Turturro. It's rated R for violence and language.

LAND OF THE LOST

Has-been scientist Dr. Rick Marshall is sucked into a space-time vortex where he is chased by dinosaurs and stalked by painfully slow reptiles known as Sleestaks. Marshall has no weapons, few skills and questionable smarts to survive in an alternate universe full of fantastic creatures. Holly, a research assistant, and Will, a survivalist, join Marshall in his attempt to get back home.



Land of the Lost stars Will Ferrell, Anna Friel and Danny R. McBride. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, and for language including a drug reference.

Army announces Iraq rotation

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

Three division headquarters and eight brigade combat teams have been scheduled to support Operation Iraqi Freedom in the next rotation beginning this fall.

The deploying units include a total of about 30,000 troops. The deployment window for the rotation begins in the fall and continues into early 2010, officials said.

The deploying division headquarters are:

• 1st Infantry Division (Big Red One), Fort Riley, Kan.;

• 1st Armored Div. (Old Ironsides), Wiesbaden, Germany;

• 3rd Inf. Div. (Rock of the Marne), Fort Stewart, Ga.;

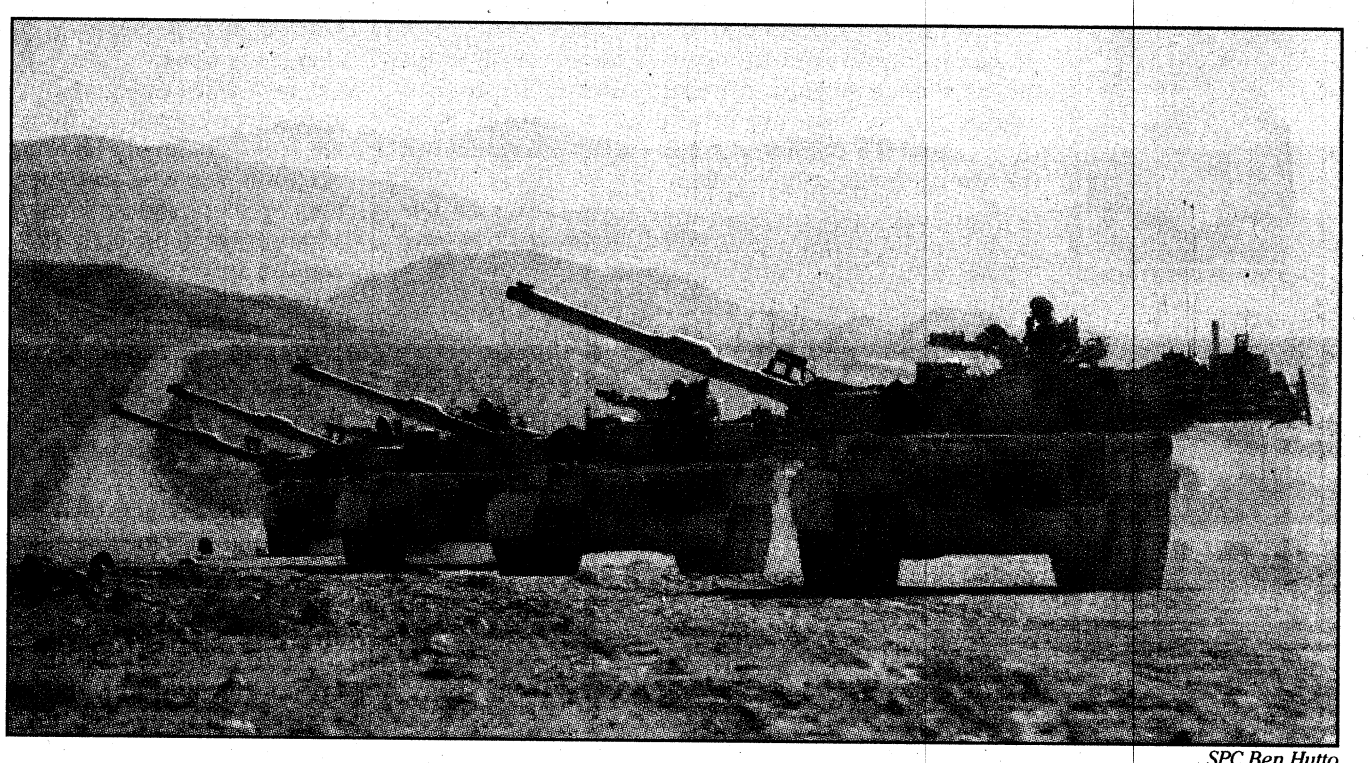
The brigades are:

• 1st (Forerunners) Bde., 1st Armored Div., Fort Bliss, Texas;

• 1st (Warrior), and 2nd (Commando) Bde., 10th Mountain Div., Fort Drum, N.Y.;

• 1st (Raider) and 2nd (Spartan) Bde., 3rd Inf. Div, Fort Stewart, Ga.;

• 3rd (Sledgehammer) Heavy Bde. Combat Team;



• 3rd (Iron) Bde., 4th Infantry Division Fort Carson, Colo.; and

• 53rd (Gator) Bde. Combat Team, Florida Army National Guard.

All deploying units will conduct full-spectrum operations to support the U.S.-Iraq Security Agreement .and the Strategic Framework Agreement, Army officials said.

The 3rd Inf. Div. (Rock of the Marne) will deploy for the fourth time to Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

The division led the charge into Baghdad in 2003, returned in 2005 in support of the Iraq provincial elections and deployed again in 2007 in support of the "surge" of forces for 15 months, returning June 2008.

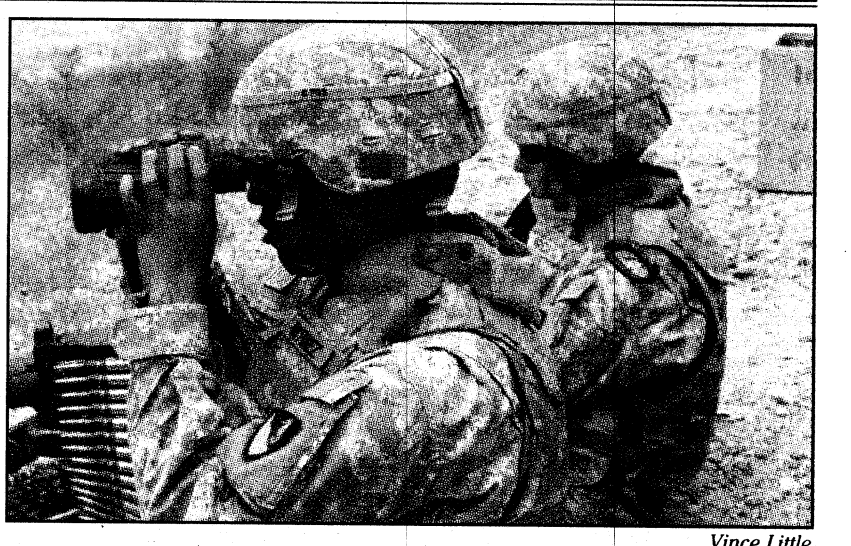
Soldiers praise new .50-cal machine gun



Vince Little
THE BAYONET

More than a dozen Soldiers from Fort Benning test-fired an enhanced .50-caliber machine gun that allows troops to rapidly change the barrel without having to check or reset headspace and timing, officials said.

The Maneuver Battle Lab conducted its experiment on the M-2 E2 weapon at Coolidge Range. It began July 8 and ended Wednesday.

Rusty Schulten, test director and project officer for the Maneuver Battle Lab's Soldier team, said the Army identified the need for a revision to the M-2 HB, the .50-caliber machine gun now in use. The upgraded version increases safety and improves survivability, he said.

Bradley's combat history part of museum

File photo

The M-2 A2 Bradley, or "Bravo 1-4" to the 2nd Bn., 22nd Inf. Regt., 4th Inf. Div., during its deployment to Iraq in 2003, was damaged when it hit an anti-tank mine. It was refurbished and brought to the National Infantry Museum in June 2007. It is a part of "The Last 100 Yards" exhibit.

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

The refurbished remains of a Bradley Fighting Vehicle are all that remains of SGT James E. Powell's sacrifice one October morning in 2003.

A new coat of paint and a large metal plate disguise the damage from an anti-tank mine that blasted through the underbelly of the Bradley, sending its engine soaring into the air, killing the driver and wounding Soldiers inside.

Six years later, a journey that began with a combat patrol along the outskirts of Bayjii, Iraq, ended at the National Infantry Museum as the Bradley that carried Powell and other 1st Battalion Soldiers into combat operations found a permanent home inside the museum's signature exhibit, "The Last 100 Yards."

Colleges sign Yellow Ribbon pact

New GI Bill aims to improve financial aid for veterans

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

More than 1,100 colleges, universities and schools across the country have entered into "Yellow Ribbon" program agreements with the Department of Veterans Affairs to improve financial aid for veterans participating in the Post-9/11 GI Bill.

The new GI Bill will fund tuition up to the level of the highest public in-state undergraduate tuition rate normally. The Yellow Ribbon program funds tuition expenses at private schools that exceed that rate. Institutions can contribute up to 50 percent of those expenses, and VA will match this additional funding for eligible students.

More than 3,400 agreements were received from the 1,100 schools participating in the Yellow Ribbon program.

"This is a strong response to a new benefit," said Keith Wilson, director of VA's Education Service. "We are

Reporter to sing in local contest

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

By day, Rachel Watkins is a reporter for The Bayonet, but at night — specifically the night of Aug. 4 — she will take the stage as a contestant in the American Cancer Society's Sing to Win.

Watkins said she has loved music for as long as she can remember.

"It's like an escape," said the 26-year-old singer. "When I sing I don't have another care in the world. It's a stress reliever. You don't have to think about anything else; you can just sing."

She participated in orchestra and choir during grade school and since then, the occasional karaoke stint. But her decision to sing in the ACS competition was based on more than her love for song.

"It's for a good cause that could change someone's life," Watkins said. "I have seen what cancer does because my grandfather died from it three years ago. The most heart-wrenching thing for me was knowing he had cancer and knowing there was no cure. If the chemotherapy and radiation didn't work, it was just a matter of time before I would have to say goodbye to him one last time. Cancer has taken too many lives. The sooner we find a cure, the better."

When choosing her song,

VARIOUS VOICES

What do you think about the amount of media coverage of the recent string of celebrity deaths?

I think it's a little bit excessive, but I think it's very informative to learn about their lives and how it affects us. For example, with Michael Jackson, we never knew some of his major medical problems. The coverage of Farrah Fawcett was very mild. I think it could have been a lot more.

— SSG Brenda Bush-Hall
U.S. Army Garrison

I don't really pay attention to that celebrity stuff, so it doesn't matter to me that much. It doesn't really affect me. I wouldn't mind hearing more news on the Iraq and Afghanistan war. I don't know why they need to broadcast (news about the deaths). It doesn't affect the nation, but the war affects the whole nation.

— SPC Chu Lor
63rd Engineer Company

I think there should be less. If one of my friends or family members passed away, I would want it to be private. They're just people, too. I think it should be more private. I do watch entertainment television, but I'm really not interested in the deaths. I don't think somebody dying should be a big, huge thing. I think it's kind of invasive.

— SSG Alicia Santana
2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment

That's the media. Some people would like to hear more about what's going on in Iraq and Afghanistan with the Soldiers who are defending America's freedom, doing a good job at it. I understand these celebrities were great entertainers at some point, but sometimes enough is enough. The U.S. Army is 1 percent of the population, and they have family members, and that's a lot more people than these celebrities. When's the last time we heard about a Soldier doing something good?

— SSG Dwayne Simmons
5th Armor Brigade, Fort Bliss, Texas

I think that's a very private time for the family of that person, and I think they should be given that time. However, if you're famous, there's nothing, it seems, anyone can do about it. They're going to take pictures; they're going to write stories. I still believe in the privacy for the family members. Personally, I prefer a lot less of the coverage. After a day, it's gone. You just need to let it go.

— Delores Guynn
Family member

It's something they deserve. They gave their lives to society, so they earned it. How many shows in a month did Michael Jackson do when he was big? It's the same with Farrah Fawcett. They probably performed every day in the week.

— SGM(R) John Ransom
Columbus

Seeing as it's a death, and it's a private matter for their families, I think there should be less. I don't usually follow all that gossip, but what I do hear isn't that great. They should just leave it alone.

— Courtney Aldridge, 15

Michael was a pop legend, but enough is enough

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Enough with the Michael Jackson coverage, please.

In the aftermath of his death — and the wall-to-wall media coverage that ensued — the nightly documentaries and specials continue on several cable outlets. It's merely fed into the shameless culture of celebrity worship that already exists in our country.

Look, say what you want about Jackson, but he cemented his legend long before the bizarre transformation of the last two decades — when child-molestation charges, curious behavior and a changing appearance completely overshadowed his life. There's no doubt he was an entertainer extraordinaire who absolutely revolutionized the pop music industry and sent MTV into the stratosphere in the early 1980s. I was a big fan and can appreciate that.

Just as Elvis Presley will always be the "King of Rock and Roll," Michael Jackson has forever etched his name as the "King of Pop."

I only wish U.S. service members killed in the war on terrorism would get a fraction of the media coverage he's received the last few weeks.

Seven U.S. Soldiers died July 6 in attacks across Afghanistan, the highest single-day loss of life for American forces in nearly a year.

But I hope no one blinked while watching the evening news, because their deaths earned a grand total of less than one minute combined on the ABC, CBS and NBC evening newscasts that Monday night — 1/20th the time given to Jackson a week-and-a-half after he passed away, according to a report by Brent Baker, vice president for research and publications at the Media Research Center.

It states that CBS anchor Katie Couric read a 13-second item on the deaths in Afghanistan as she sat in Los Angeles with the Staples Center, Jackson's memorial venue, in the background. Meanwhile, the troops got 23 seconds of coverage on NBC and 20 seconds by ABC.

CNN's Anderson Cooper 360 devoted just 15 seconds to Afghanistan, according to Baker.

"Even without Jackson it's doubtful these deaths would have generated significant television network coverage," he wrote, citing as evidence a 2006 MRC study titled, Touting Military Misdeeds, Hiding Heroes.

Since Jackson's most recent child-molestation charges in 2005, he had become a pariah in most circles around the globe, which made the star-studded L.A. memorial and subsequent media coverage even more dubious.

I'm also bothered that some in the media portrayed it as a "shocking death." Let's be serious, Jackson was not the stereotypical 50-year-old man.

According to one report, authorities hauled two trash bags full of prescription medications he'd taken at one time or another out of his residence. That's alarming. Given Jackson's circumstances — with his fragile physique, drug intake and image-altering plastic surgeries — the surprise isn't that he died but he lived as long as he did.

In the world of pop music, there may never be another icon like him. But he was a seriously flawed character.

Consider this: Since Jackson died June 25, at least 29 U.S. troops have been killed in combat in Afghanistan or Iraq, according to the Department of Defense. They made the ultimate sacrifice protecting freedom and our way of life.

It's a shame they don't register more than a blurb on the scrolling bottom lines of cable news telecasts. Very sad indeed.

Is that a nervous tick you're wearing?

Bridgett Siter
THE BAYONET

Have you heard Brad Paisley's latest — I Want to Check You for Ticks? As far as lyrics go, it ranks below "I was drunk the day my momma got out of prison." As far as pick up lines go, it ranks below "I don't really think we're cousins, do you?"

It's a good idea to check for ticks from time to time, mind you. It's never a good idea to mix tick checking and passion. Aside from the obvious repercussions, like the sordid explanation you'll have to give when little Tweezer asks how come he wasn't given a normal name like Bubba or Junior, there's actually a valid, medical reason you shouldn't tick-check in a frenzy. Just like there's a valid medical reason you should assume you are cousins.

According to my source, a surprisingly entertaining magazine published by a major property insurance company — which presumably stands to gain nothing by ridding the world of tick-borne diseases, bad country music or pathetic pick up lines — ticks are nervous little buggers given to bouts of nausea. If a tick is aggravated, it will vomit into your bloodstream. Really. If I wanted to make stuff up, I would pick a better topic.

It seems conventional wisdom about tick removal (i.e. burn it with a match, smother it with petroleum jelly, twist it counterclockwise, etc.) is not wise at all. Those methods unnerve the tick, and a nervous tick will throw up. I said that before, but I think it bears repeating, because it's amusing to imagine your reaction to the varied and sundry ways I might convey the ticks' proclivity to regurgitation. A tick will upchuck. It will heave. It will spew. Puke, ralph, barf and blow chunks. It will toss its cookies all over your platelets.

And when it does all that, it will make you sicker than you are right now.

According to my source, you should sneak up on a tick with tweezers, pinch it behind the head in the area one might classify as a neck if a tick had a neck, and pullllllll. Afterward, wash the wound and apply antibiotic cream.

And get this — don't flush the little sucker, because ticks won't drown, so it'll wash right out the sewer system and doggy paddle its way back to dry land, attach itself to someone else and spew sewer garbage into his bloodstream.

Nope, you should put the tick in a zip-lock bag and keep it in the refrigerator, so if you develop a rash or flu-like symptoms, you can take the tick to the doctor with you, where he'll prescribe a series of shots for you and Pepto-Bismol for the perp.

Of course, the best way to avoid a tick problem is to avoid ticks altogether. Treat your clothes with a tick repellent, treat your skin with a DEET product and wear long pants tucked inside your socks or boots when you plan to be somewhere ticks like to hang out.

Remember that ticks climb upward, they don't jump or fly, and they only live on the ground. So if you block their entrance from below, you'll probably come out tick-free.

Still, it's a good idea to check. Just make sure you put on a little mood music first.

197th Infantry Brigade welcomes new commander

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's 197th Infantry Brigade said farewell to its leader, COL Gregory Kane, and welcomed incoming commander COL Ryan Kuhn during a ceremony held Tuesday at the Parade Field behind the National Infantry Museum.

Reviewing officer COL Bryan Owens, deputy commander of the U.S. Army Infantry Center, said the ceremony is a milestone in the brigade's history.

"Greg established a climate of teamwork and discipline ... he inspired Soldiers," Owens said.

Owens said he expects Kuhn will continue to carry on the brigade's mission without missing a beat.

"Colonel Kuhn is no stranger to Fort Benning. We are thrilled to have him back on the team. He's a proven combat leader," Owens said.

Kuhn said his priority would be to provide world-class training and support.

"I look forward to building upon the accomplishments of this brigade," he said.

Kuhn previously served as deputy commander for 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team. Kuhn was commissioned after graduating from Kemper Military School and College in 1984. Kuhn holds a bachelor of science, and master's degrees in science and strategic studies. He is a graduate of the Infantry Officer Basic and Advanced Courses, Combined Arms and Services Staff School, Army Command and Staff College and the U.S. Army War College.

In his farewell, Kane cited the brigade's accomplishments during his tenure and his pride in the troops.

"We've run 28,900 training events in support of the Infantry Center ... conducted 800 resident courses training master gunners, snipers, mortar leaders, mechanized leaders and twenty other functional skills," Kane said. "We were selected as the 2009 Army Maintenance Excellence Award winner in the large unit category.

"The Soldiers of the brigade are professionals who could always be counted on.

"Next to watching my son being born, serving this brigade has been the highlight of my life."

Kane said he felt the new commander would succeed with the brigade.

"Jane and I are confident in knowing you are taking command of this team," Kane told Kuhn.

Only one-third of the brigade was present for the ceremony, which Kane said is a reflection of their mission on Fort Benning.

"If the entire brigade was here, Fort Benning would shut down," he said.

WTB to brief Army's WTB leaders on Reception Platoon

As Fort Benning's Warrior Transition Battalion streamlines inprocessing for Soldiers, it is taking its mission of improving Soldier care Armywide.

Fort Benning's WTB command will brief WTB commanders nationwide at a medical symposium hosted by the Association of the U.S. Army in San Antonio Tuesday to Friday.

Leadership from Fort Benning's WTB will speak on its recently unveiled project, a Reception Platoon, said CPT Robert Strawley, commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, WTB.

The platoon, which activated June 29, streamlines inprocessing requirements to ensure Soldiers are well-informed and prepared for life at the WTB. If successful, the Reception Platoon could become a model for other WTB's Armywide, he said.

In the past, Soldiers came to the unit and were immediately assigned to a company, Strawley said.

A squad leader was tasked to ensure the Soldier met with a nurse case manager, made billeting arrangements, and inprocessed through the various agencies. However, squad leaders were taxed between caring for their squad members and helping new Soldiers navigate the complex inprocessing requirements, Strawley said.

The result was a stressful situation that placed a lot of anxiety on Soldiers new to the unit and pulled squad leaders in many different directions, he said.

"The process was haphazard and we weren't providing Soldiers with a seamless transition," he said.

In December, the WTB formulated a plan to give Soldiers a two-week transition time to take care of administrative and initial medical needs before being assigned to a company, said 1SG Gary French, of HHD and Reception Platoon.

In June, the WTBs goal was realized when the Reception Platoon activated.

Now the experience for incoming Soldiers is better, Strawley said.

"We've implemented a new business model to provide a smoother transition in inprocessing. Phase one, which is Reception Platoon, includes reception, inprocessing, goals and assessment," Strawley said. "Things that were once spread out within the companies are now combined and moved to a dedicated element."

French said that upon arrival, Soldiers receive their billets, an orientation packet, and a briefing from the commander on what to expect while at the WTB. They also receive an inprocessing checklist, meal card, free cell phone with 450 minutes each month, comprehensive transition plan and an interview conducted by a platoon sergeant or squad leader. Within 24 hours, new Soldiers must meet with a nurse case manager, behavioral health and primary care manager per Medical Command policy. Soldiers have 72 hours to meet with occupational therapy, he said.

Previously, the first few days were not used efficiently, but now everything is scheduled and there is less chance Soldiers will fall through the cracks, Strawley said.

The Soldiers attend mandatory classes during the first two weeks ranging from family and financial readiness to resume writing, he said.

"We want to address all the non-medical issues Soldiers may be bringing with them," Strawley said.

SGT Jonathon Fret has been assigned to WTB since he damaged his shoulder in 2008. Fret recalled his experience inprocessing with the WTB at the time as "hectic and full of unknowns."

Fret said he already sees a positive change since the Reception Platoon began.

"I see a major difference in the outlook of new Soldiers. They're more positive and less stressed," he said.

"It's a support team," said CPL Tim "Pop" Seckel, another Soldier in the WTB. "Newer Soldiers are at an advantage. They may be injured, but if they get through their worry, they will transition better."

Strawley said he expects the project will be well-received at the symposium next week. "Other WTB's will be curious to see how we've implemented it," Strawley said. "This will change the dynamics of how warrior care is being done."

WTB partners with Groome to offer free shuttles to troops

Service to save troops $37 fare from Atlanta to Fort Benning

Groome Transportation is helping wounded Soldiers newly assigned to Fort Benning's Warrior Transition Battalion.

Groome Transportation partnered with WTB to offer free shuttle services from Hartsfield-Jackson Atlanta International Airport to wounded troops reporting to the unit.

The service began June 29.

Many wounded Soldiers reporting to Fort Benning are being medically evacuated from destinations such as Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Md., and Landstuhl, Germany, said CPT Robert Strawley, commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, WTB. They aren't familiar with the Atlanta area or Fort Benning and get confused trying to arrange transportation to the post, he explained.

As a result, two of the detachments' eight squad leaders must meet each wounded warrior arriving in Atlanta.

Strawley, in an effort to simplify the process of getting the troops to the post, reached out to Jeffery Weynand at Groome Transportation to find out how they could help.

Groome Transportation provides round-trip shuttle service from Columbus and Fort Benning to the Atlanta airport more than 30 times a day. The 24-hour service operates seven days a week transporting 600 passengers a day on average, Weynand said.

Weynand knows first hand how difficult and stressful it can be for wounded troops.

Weynand is a disabled veteran serving as the manager of Groome's Columbus branch on Double Churches Road. He was discharged from the Army with service-connected disabilities in 1983.

In his last duty station, Weynand served as an Infantryman with 197th Infantry Brigade on Fort Benning, he said.

"I spent a year traveling between various hospitals to get my leg injuries repaired," Weynand said. "It's hard when you have to transfer from one unfamiliar place to another on your own. Throwing a disability on top of that makes it even harder."

It was this understanding, Weynand said, that led him to contact his corporate office in Virginia to ask about a possible free shuttle service for all wounded troops reporting to the WTB.

"Depending on their situations, these troops may be coming in without any type of funds. It strikes a chord in my heart," he said. "It's fantastic we have people volunteering to be in the military in the first place. To see them come back wounded ... we need to take the time to say thank you and assist them in any way we can."

Groome began providing door-to-door service Monday, delivering the troops directly to the WTB. The service would normally cost $37.

Strawley said he expects between two to three Soldiers per week will be able to take advantage of the free service.

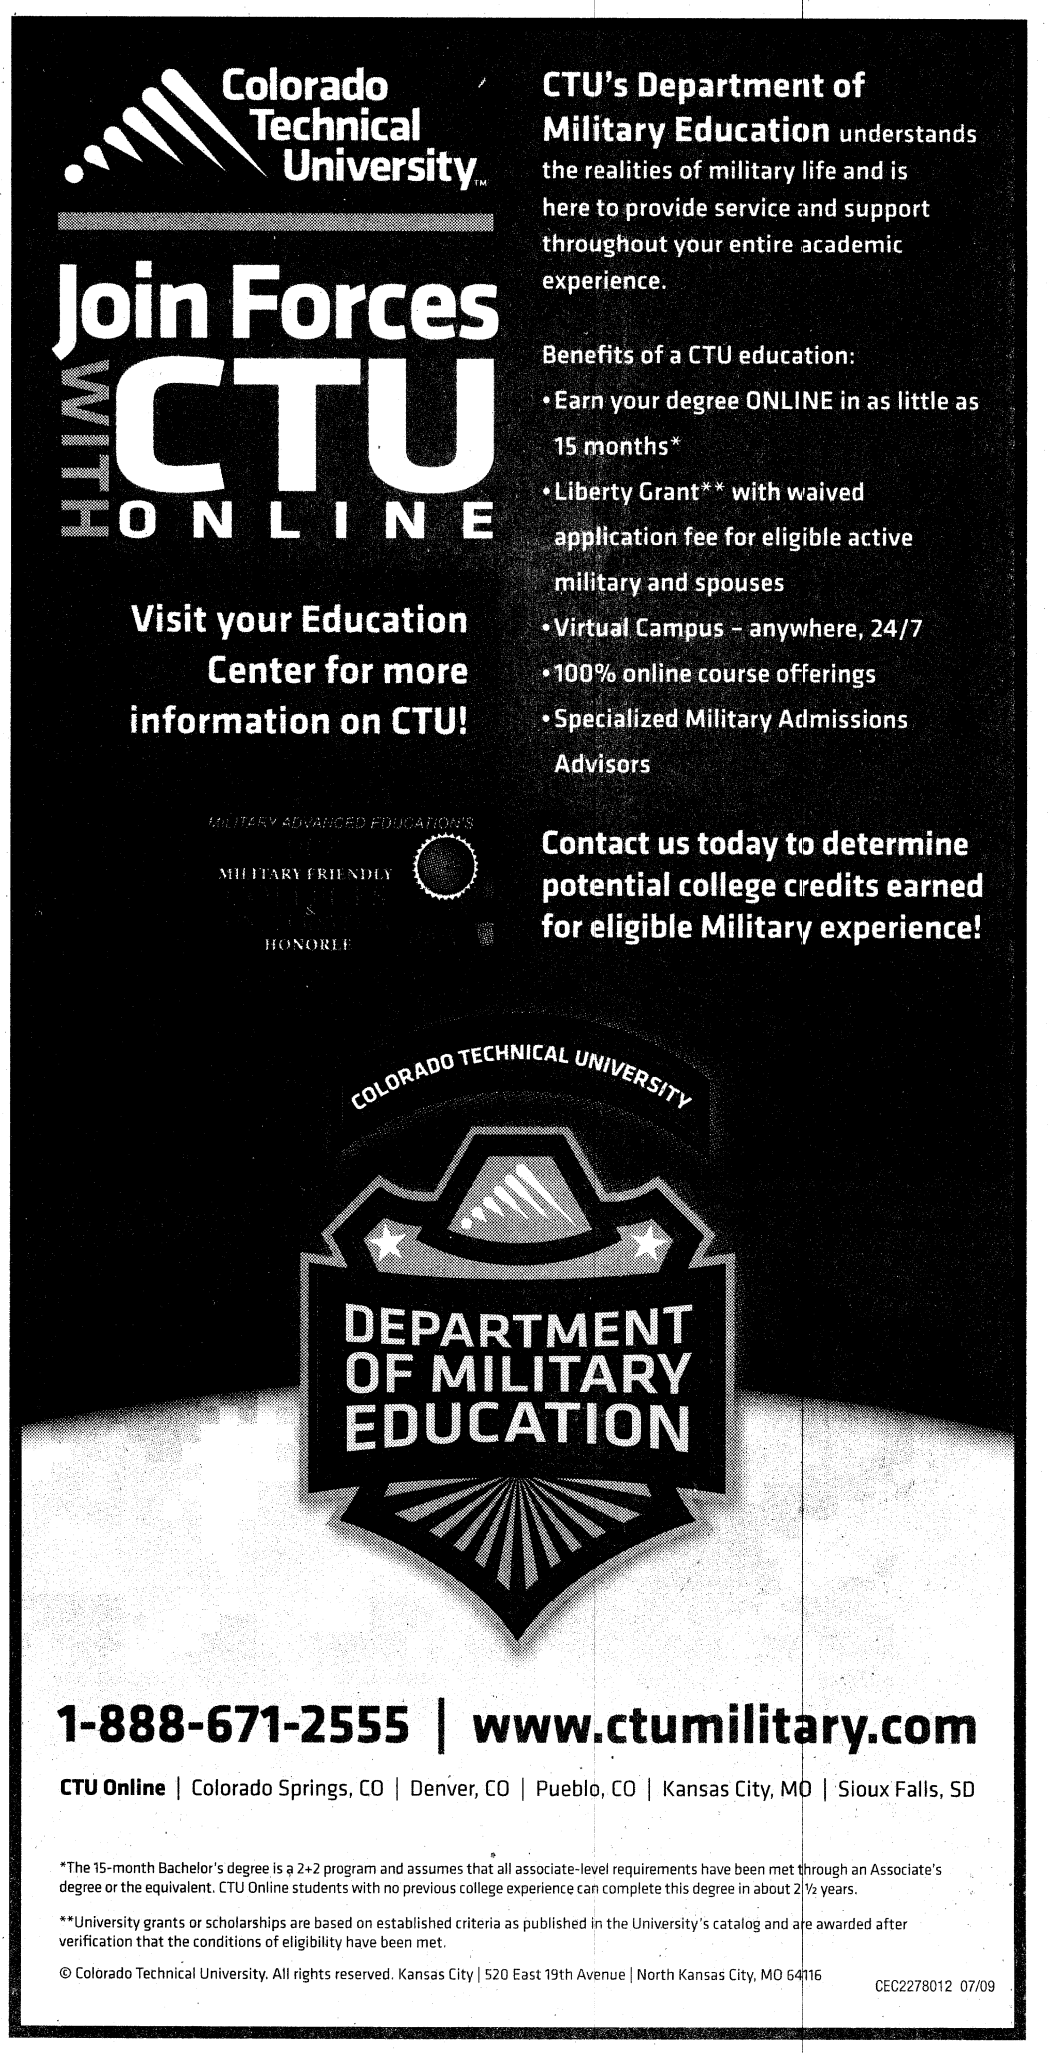
The partnership will benefit not only wounded troops, but also the battalion as a whole, he said.

We are responsible for picking up wounded Soldiers from Lawson Army Airfield and Columbus Regional Airport as well as Atlanta, Strawley said.

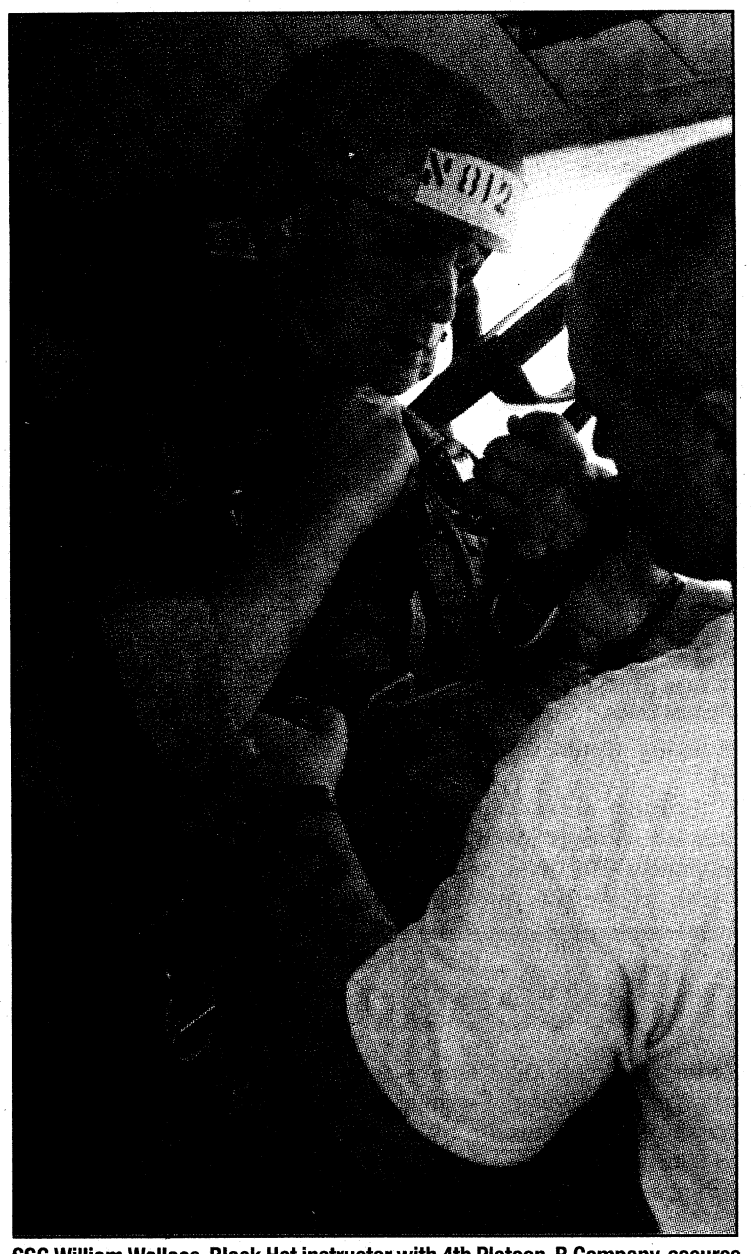
"This will alleviate a lot of stress on the part of the battalion as well as the traveling Soldier," Strawley said. "It's a testament to the support the Columbus community gives its troops."

"With the help of Groome, we can continue to meet the needs of all WTB Soldiers," he said.

The partnership is part of the battalion's efforts to streamline inprocessing procedures for troops.

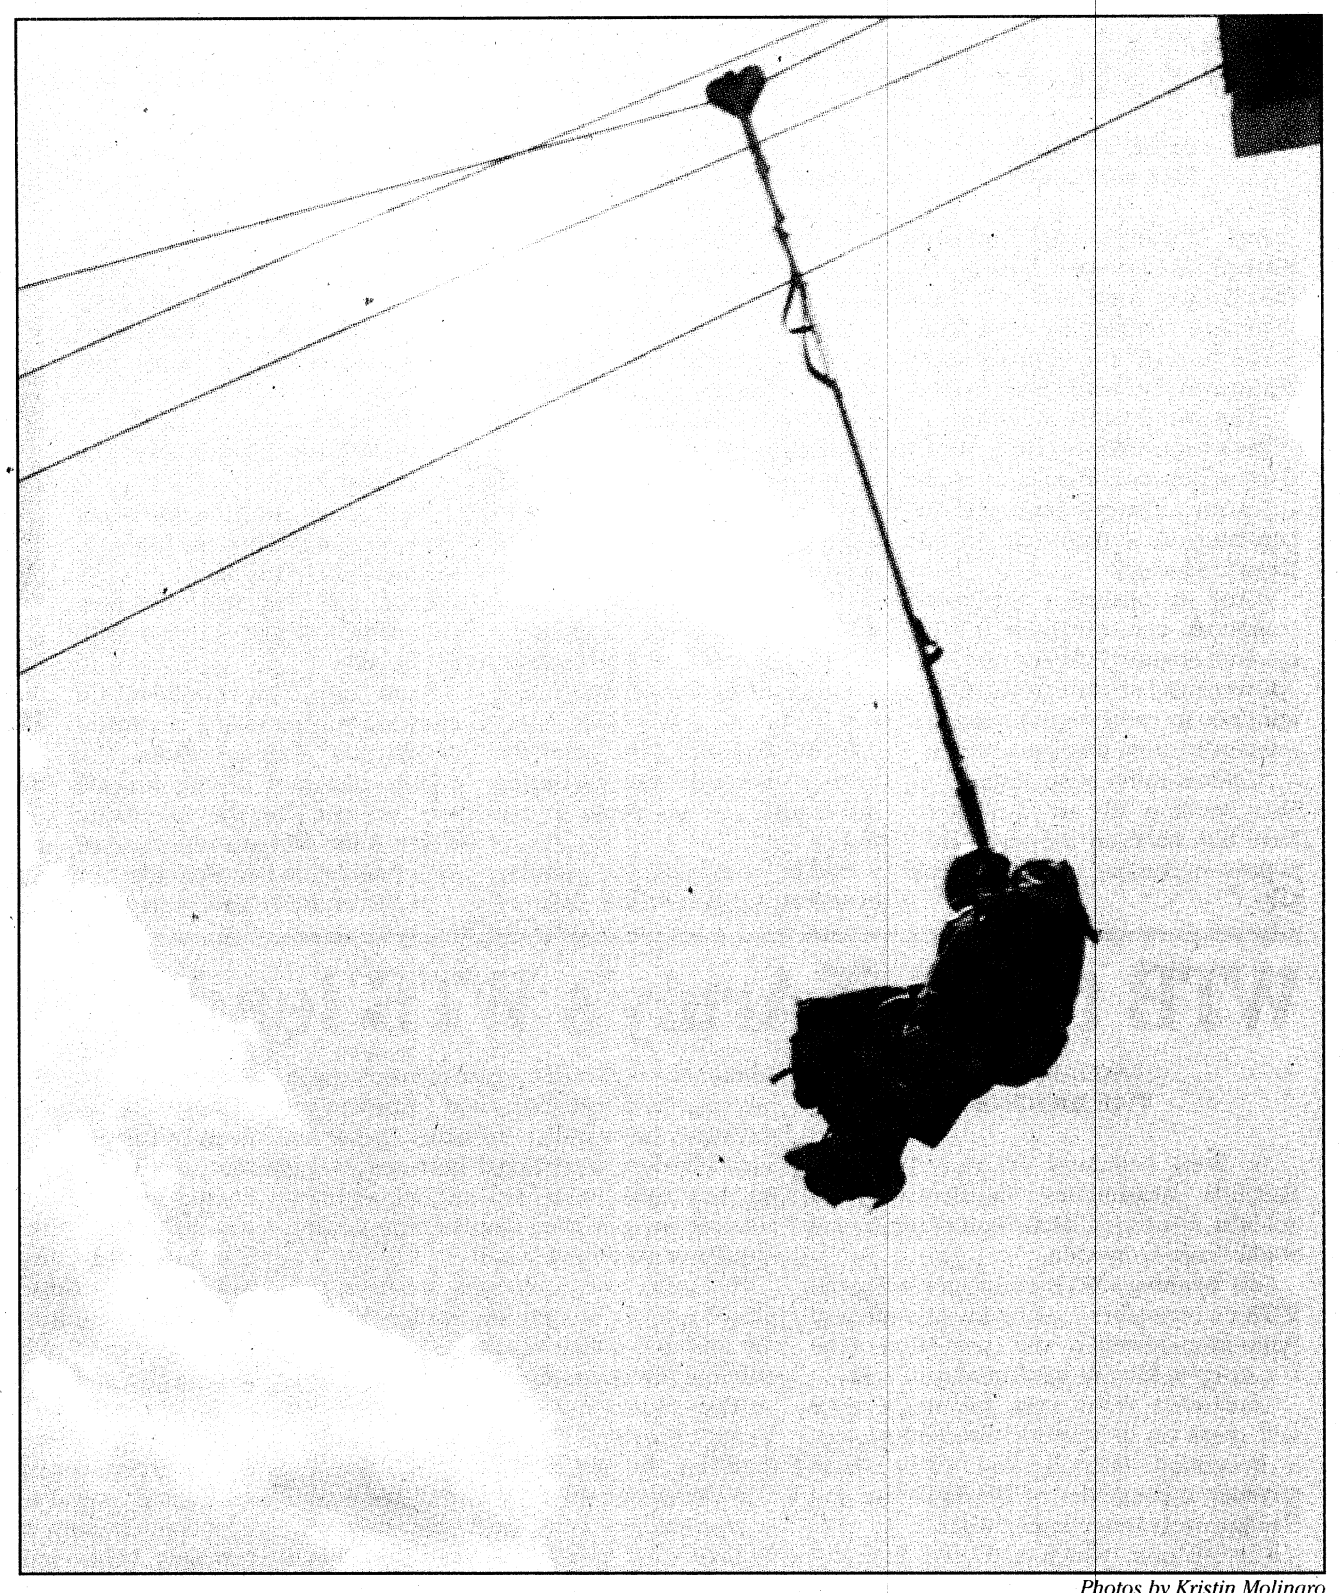


The battalion recently stood up a reception platoon specifically to handle administrative needs for all incoming WTB Soldiers before they move to the company level.



We're working closely to ensure orders for medevac'd troops flying into Atlanta now include information directing them to the free Groome shuttle, Strawley said.

Weynand said the Columbus office has set no end date on the free service.



"As long as I am manager here, we will continue to offer this service to wounded warriors medevac'd to Fort Benning until our troops come home from Iraq, Afghanistan and anywhere else they are," he said. "This service is in line with Groome's commitment to the Fort Benning community."

"I started jumping from 5 feet and I'm working my way up to 1,250. If you have a fear of heights, Airborne School will help you get over it," said PFC Ryan Layne, an Airborne School student in his second week of training.

Layne said he's always wanted to jump out of an airplane and will finally get the chance when he enters jump week.

Layne is one of 1,500 Soldiers attending Fort Benning's Airborne School this week.

Students with A Company began the first of three phases of training, while B Company troops entered their second phase and C Company troops completed five static line jumps to earn Airborne wings.

During the first week, called ground week, students focus on the individual skills needed to make parachute jumps and land safely, said CPT Winston Nabors, commander of B Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Under the watchful eye of "Black Hats" cadre from the battalion, ground week students learn mock door exercises, conduct 34-foot tower jumps and train on the lateral drift apparatus to practice parachute landing falls.

Layne said he felt nervous on his first tower jump, but after his 10th he felt much more confident.

"I didn't want to screw up the first time, but now I feel good," he said. "It's given me the motivation to overcome my fears."

The students, who qualify, move into tower week where they use the 34-foot and 250-foot towers to jump.

Tower week builds on ground week skills and emphasizes the "mass exit" concepts the Army uses in airborne operations, said SSG Joseph Tremblay, Black Hat with C Company's 2nd Platoon.

The students work with the 34-foot and 250-foot jump towers; swing landing trainer and suspended harness until they've mastered the landings, he said.

After two weeks of training, jump week is the test of the students' skills, Tremblay said.

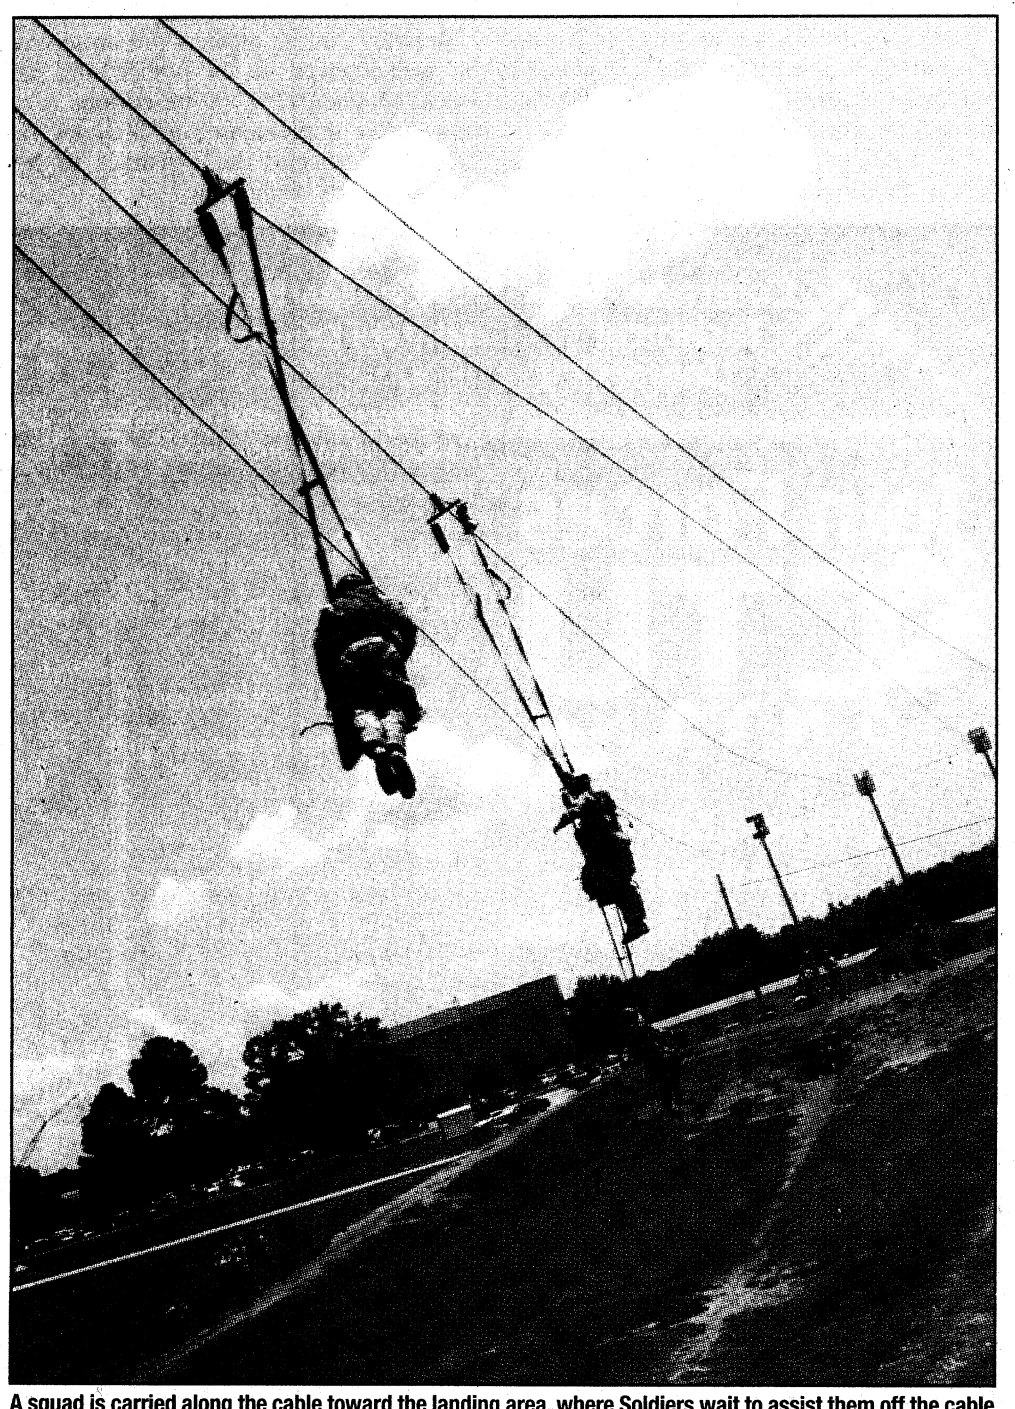
Students must complete five parachute jumps onto Fryar Field Drop Zone, two with combat equipment and three "Hollywood-style," only the parachute and reserve. Students who complete all five jumps earn their wings.

Despite the rigorous, extensive training, not all Soldiers will make it to jump week, Tremblay said.

"Not every Soldier is a paratrooper. Some are scared of heights and some just aren't cut out for (Airborne School)," he said

"Soldiers have to be prepared for the physical aspect of it, being thrown to the ground. It takes a lot of dedication to continuously jump off a 12-foot platform and hit the ground hard," said SSG Steven Grafton, Black Hat with C Company.

In her second week, Cadet Olivia Oh said this course has taught her a lot about motivation and integrity.

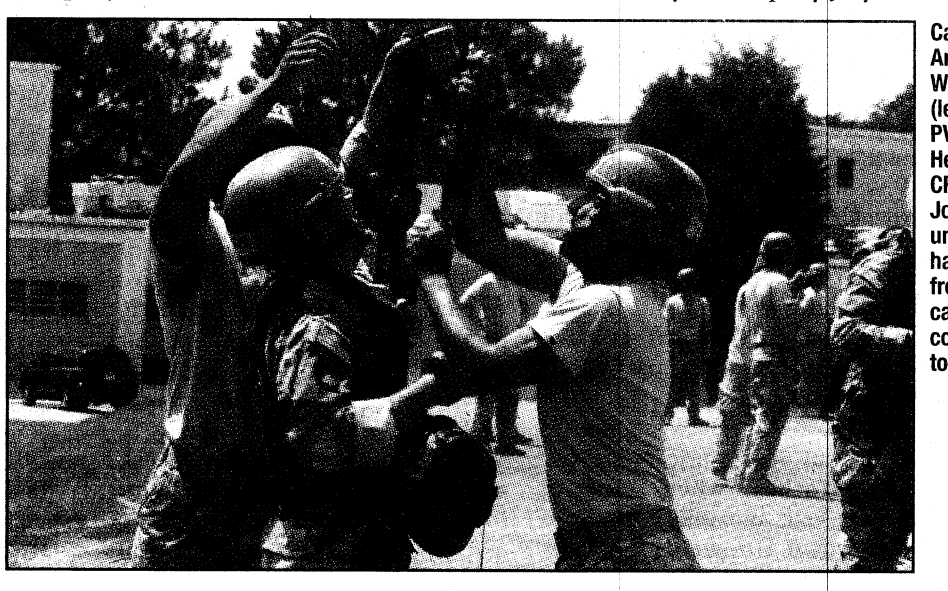


"I came here without any expectations other than wanting to jump out of a plane. I have learned a lot that I can bring back to my fellow cadets," said Oh, a criminology student at the University of California – Irvine.

For those who stick with it, the benefits are many, Tremblay said.

"Completing Airborne School opens up opportunities and can help Soldiers get promoted, he said.

"This course instills students with the warrior spirit," said CPT Jeffery Curry, commander of C Company. "It's not just a class, it's a way to get to work."



B Company students will graduate Friday, followed by A Company July 31.

A squad is carried along the cable toward the landing area, where Soldiers wait to assist them off the cable. As they swing across the field, the squad releases packs full of equipment.

Bradley: Patrolled 'Projects' with 22nd Inf. Regt.

"I hadn't seen this Bradley since November 2003," said LTC(R) Steve Russell, the former commander of the 1st Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 4th Infantry Division, who now serves as a senator in Oklahoma and chairman of Vets for Victory. "It's pretty moving to know one of our Bradleys used in battle overseas is here."

In Russell's soon-to-be-published book about the hunt and capture of Saddam Hussein, a chapter titled, As Long As We Have Breath, details the final days of the Bradley, known as "Bravo 1-4," and the Soldiers of B Company.

"Rifle companies were patrolling in Bradley's and conducting bomb sweeps along the main routes. Foot patrols had been reduced to almost nothing," he wrote.

B Company, attached to the division's 3rd Battalion, 66th Armor Regiment, patrolled an area north of Tikrit, Iraq, along the outskirts of Bayjii known to Soldiers as "The Projects," Russell said.

In the book, Russell recalled that the Soldiers weren't welcome in the neighborhood.

On Oct. 3, 2003, a squad of Soldiers in two Bradleys rumbled toward the town early in the morning and noticed an absence of people, he said.

As the convoy moved closer to town, an anti-tank mine blasted through the Bradley, leaving a spray of engine parts and road wheels along the ground, Russell said.

"Bravo 1-4 lay like a snake, gutted and broken," he said.

As Soldiers evacuated the disabled vehicle and established a perimeter, they discovered the blast killed Powell, wounded other Soldiers and left a 4-foot gaping hole in the Bradley's bottom, Russell said.

Powell, from Mark Center, Ohio, was days away from completing his enlistment and returning home to his family. But instead of being greeted with "Welcome Home" banners and hugs from his wife and 2-year-old daughter, he returned with an Honor Guard escort and a flag flown half-staff in his honor.

An M-88 recovery vehicle picked up the Bradley to tow back to camp, Russell said.

The Bradley caught fire but the crew continued to tow it to the battalion's combat outpost, even as ammunition within the Bradley began to "cook off," he said.

"Since (the Bradley) was armored, it caused no harm to those outside of it but the vehicle (was) a total mess," he said.

On Oct. 15, the Soldiers gathered around the burned-out Bradley for a memorial service to honor Powell and another Soldier, SPC Donald L. Wheeler Jr., who was also killed in combat.

In early November, the burned-out shell of the Bradley was shipped back to the states, Russell said.

Russell, certified as an Army historian, attempted to secure a vehicle as an artifact, but said his request was denied.

After the unit redeployed to Fort Hood, Texas, Russell found out a vehicle request was approved. Russell assembled a team to pick it up from Red River Army Depot in Texarkana, Texas, and transported it to Fort Hood.

It was an emotional moment, Russell said.

"We had requested a Bradley to preserve the memory of our Soldiers, but I hadn't expected to ever see one we actually fought in again," he said.

Thanks to many agencies, the Bradley found a home at the National Infantry Museum, Russell said.

Russell got his first look at Bravo 1-4's improved appearance after the museum opened last month.

"I'm grateful the museum kept the company's bumper numbers on the Bradley and put combat loads on it the way it was used in battle," he said when he visited the museum to coordinate a future memorial to the 22nd Inf. Regt. "I was very concerned that they keep a semblance of history with it."

Russell said the Bradley gives him and other members of the regiment a connection to the Soldiers who served and died with them, such as Powell and Wheeler.

"We mourn their loss; we honor their sacrifice. As long as 'Regulars' draw breath, we shall not forget them," Russell said at a memorial service in 2003 for Powell and Wheeler.

pleased so many institutions are supporting our veterans."

"The Post-9/11 GI Bill is an important part of fulfilling our promise to the men and women who have served our country so honorably," said Secretary of Veterans Affairs GEN(R) Eric K. Shinseki. "Implementing this landmark legislation and providing even more veterans with a quality education is a top priority for VA. We are grateful so many schools are joining us as partners in this unprecedented effort."

The Yellow Ribbon program is reserved for veterans eligible for the Post-9/11 GI Bill at the 100-percent benefit level. This includes those who served at least 36 months on active duty or served at least 30 continuous days and were discharged due to a service-related injury.

The Post-9/11 GI Bill, passed by Congress last year, is the most extensive educational assistance program authorized since the original GI Bill was signed into law in 1944. The maximum benefit allows every eligible veteran, service member, reserve and National Guard an opportunity to receive an in-state, undergraduate education at a public institution at no cost.

Provisions of the program include payments for tuition and fees, housing, and a books and supplies stipend. Benefits are payable for training pursued on or after Aug. 1, 2009. The tuition and fee benefit is paid directly to the school.

"The M-2 HB requires headspace and timing to be set, which exposes Soldiers to enemy fire for extended periods of time, while performing barrel-changing procedures," Schulten said.

"The M-2 E2 implements a fixed headspace and timing operating system. These modifications are intended to make the .50-caliber machine gun easier and safer to employ."

The Maneuver Battle Lab collected data and Soldier feedback, he said.

"Our only objective is to provide an unbiased evaluation of the operational effectiveness of the M-2 E2 in order to inform future acquisition decisions," Schulten said.

General Dynamics Armament and Technical Products developed the M-2 E2 12.7mm weapon. Along with the Quick Change Barrel system, the enhanced machine gun also reduces muzzle flash, making it more night-vision friendly, according to the company's Web site.

Experiment officials said no decision has been made on how soon the M-2 E2 could be ready for the battlefield.

Operational testing in hot and cold environments is under way at Aberdeen Proving Ground in Maryland, said Matt Pintsch, an engineer from Picatinny Arsenal, N.J., who was here as an observer.

"They have the final say on safety issues," he said. "You have to get their approval before moving on with the program."

If effective and fielded to the Army, the M-2 E2 would ease training requirements and decrease the chance for weapon malfunctions, Schulten said.

Sixteen Soldiers — 11 from the 11th Engineer Battalion and five with the 209th Military Police Detachment — took part in the testing at Coolidge Range. They fired the old and new machine guns at known distances and were timed on barrel changes from the tripod and vehicle mounts.

"It's pretty hot," said SSG Mark Hooks of the 209th MP Detachment, referring to the upgraded weapon. "The components are a lot better. Everything is going to go so much faster because you don't have to do headspace and timing adjustments. You're alleviating a whole lot. We went from 10 minutes to 10 seconds."

The M-2 E2 would significantly cut down on prep and readiness time in a combat zone, he said.

"People will be ready to go twice as fast," Hooks said. "If I got a squad out there getting fired at, I've got to go out and help them right away ... This is probably one of the best things I've seen the military do weapons-wise."

Other Soldiers also touted the machine gun's effectiveness.

"It makes the barrel change a lot more efficient and doesn't take as much time," said SGT Fred Roberts of the 209th MP Detachment. "But the main operation of the weapon is exactly the same."

SPC Arthur Coleman of the 11th Engineer Battalion said the fixed gauges on the M-2 E2 are a major difference over the M-2 HB.

"I love it," he said of the Quick Change Barrel.

"It fires just like the old weapon. But on the old weapon, you had to check the headspace and timing every time. If you're in a firefight, this will make it a whole lot easier to change the barrel out."

The Department of Veterans Affairs offers numerous programs to assist Soldiers transitioning out of the military, buying homes and pursuing educational goals. But one program many veterans aren't familiar with is the VA's On-The-Job training program, said Robert Aylward, executive officer for the Army Marksmanship Unit.

Aylward and members of the AMU, including Clarence Fedrick, spearheaded an effort to open up the unit to OJT applicants.

For Soldiers facing challenges to finishing their education, the OJT program allows them to cash in on their GI Bill benefits while gaining valuable training for employment, he said.

Through the program, veterans who don't have the qualifications for a job can use one year of their GI Bill benefits to pay for one year of training in a VA-approved job, according to the Georgia Department of Veterans Service.

The Georgia Department of Veterans Service assists veterans, their dependants and survivors with all matters pertaining to veteran benefits, including the OJT program administered by the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Designed for honorably discharged veterans and members of the National Guard and Army Reserve, the OJT program pays eligible participants approximately $12,000 tax free for one year of training, according to the department's Web site at https://sdvs.georgia.gov/.

The OJT program was established in 1944 but many eligible veterans don't take advantage of the opportunity, Aylward said.

Aylward hired a veteran, Cheryl Bagby, as an administrative assistant through the OJT program in 2006. Bagby left the Army after five years so that she could focus on her family.

She landed a job working in the operations shop at the AMU but didn't have the time to return to school.

"I had a newborn and I didn't plan on going back to school at the time but wanted to improve my career as well," she said.

When an OJT opportunity opened up in the unit for her to train for a government service position at a higher grade level than she was eligible for, Bagby said she saw that as an opportunity.

"I applied and was hired for the job as a GS-5 and I trained for a year to reach GS-7," she said. Bagby completed her training in 2007 and said she is happy with her choice to use some of her GI Bill benefits.

"I still have enough benefits left over for school when I am ready to go back," she said.

In addition to the salary the employer provides, the OJT program pays veterans $990.75 a month for the first six months of training, $726.55 for the second six months of training and $462.35 for remaining training required to meet the qualifications for the job.

For Reserve and National Guard Soldiers, the program pays $237.75 for the first six months, $174.35 for the second six months and $110.95 for remaining training.

Qualified personnel, who have started a job and are eligible for the OJT training benefits, can apply and have their benefits paid retroactively up to 12 months, according to the Georgia Department of Veterans Services.

There are more than 500 companies in the state with VA-approved OJT programs, Aylward said.

According to the Georgia Department of Veterans Services, the veteran and employer must agree on a training plan at least six months in length leading to new skills and new pay and the veteran cannot be qualified for the position. The employer must maintain work and training records, evaluate the trainee's progress and agree to at least one wage increase during the training period.

Upon completion, the veteran is hired at the pay rate for which he or she is now qualified.

To qualify, participants must receive training leading to an entry-level position, be a full-time paid employee (not on commission), be supervised at least 50 percent of the time, no previous job experience in chosen field, hired within one to two years and the employer must be VA-approved. Management training programs do not qualify.

GI Bill on-the-job training benefits cannot be used concurrently with education benefits.

The Georgia DVS offers a list of companies participating in the OJT program in the Columbus area. Companies include: Columbus State University, Comcast, Department of Corrections, law enforcement agencies and local fire departments.

For more information on the OJT program and for a complete listing of participating employers, visit https://sdvs.georgia.gov/ and click on Department Directory. Select State Approving Agency and then Approved Training Establishments.

Singer: Competes to help raise funds

Rescue Me by Fontella Bass, Watkins wanted a positive and uplifting tune. In a way, the song reflects the need for support that someone struggling with cancer feels, she said.

"It says, 'Because I need you by my side. Can't you see that I'm lonely.' This song is about a longing for hope," Watkins said.

The two-hour concert will begin at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 4 at Columbus Technical College's Patrick Hall and includes a line-up of 30 singers. Admission is $5 at the door and entering the contest costs $75.

All proceeds go to ACS to fund research, education, advocacy and awareness, said Denise Dowdy, the event organizer.

"Cancer is the second most common cause of death in the U.S.," Dowdy said. "(It) accounts for one of every four deaths, so if there are four people sitting in a room, statistically, one of them will have cancer. That's staggering."

Right now, ACS is struggling with a deficit from not raising enough money earlier in the fiscal year. Their largest fundraiser, Relay for Life, came up short, but Dowdy said she hopes this competition will help fill the gap and communicate an important message.

"Cancer doesn't stop just because the economy is bad, and I think that's as much a focal point for us as the fundraising," she said. "We want to keep awareness of cancer in the forefront of the community so people will continue to donate."

And it'll be fun, said Jenn Gunn, command information officer on post and Watkin's sponsor for the competition.

"You spend $5 for two hours of quality, wholesome entertainment," said Gunn, who is volunteering at the fundraiser. "Not only does that money pay for your good time, it pays for the research that will find a cure for cancer one day. You think $5, that's chump change, but every little bit does help. My $5, your $5 — if we fill the theater, 230 people's $5 — it can make a difference."

Gunn used to walk in Relay for Life, ACS's largest fundraiser, but she hasn't volunteered with ACS in years, she said, because of frequent moves.

"When I was growing up, I would participate in a team for Relay for Life. We would pitch our tents and stay out there all night; it was a good time," she said. "Since then, I lost both of my maternal grandparents to cancer. ... This is a disease than can touch anybody anywhere. If you don't personally have somebody in your immediate family who has cancer, you know of somebody who has been affected by cancer. Supporting cancer research gives hope to people where their hope has been beaten down.

"It's exciting to be a part of it."

The 30 slots for the competition will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis. First through third places are chosen by a panel of judges, but a fourth "People's Choice" award is based on the number of dollar votes the singer receives.

All four winners advance to a regional competition in Tifton, Ga. The winner there will have the chance to be interviewed, meet with a music industry consultant, have a demo song played on the radio and sing at a sporting event.

"If you know somebody who can sing in your unit or your organization, put together a pool and sponsor them," Gunn said.

"Put 'em in the spotlight. I'd love to see some Soldiers up there because I know we have Soldiers on this installation who can sing and sing well.

"Every dollar is a vote (for the People's Choice). If you raise $250, that's 250 votes. If that's the most, then you win."

Watkins said she invites everyone to come watch her perform — and she doesn't have stage fright.

"I'd love to see everyone, all my friends at Fort Benning and Columbus and the tricommunity and everywhere — including you. You will have fun," she said.

Concessions will be available at the concert. To volunteer at the event or request a contestant packet, call 706-324-4573. Songs must be under three minutes. The first 30 packets received will be entered into the contest. To send a check to ACS or turn in a packet, the mailing address is American Cancer Society, PO Box 1382, Columbus, GA 31902.

Post continues sustainable efforts

The Valley Partnership Joint Development Authority, a community action group that helps prepare the installation for growth, will offer free workshops on sustainable construction starting this fall at local universities and centers. The program is spearheaded by environmental leaders on post and funded by the Federal Workforce Development Grant, which includes more than $100,000 to promote sustainable or "green" construction in the valley.

"The Sustainable Industrial Construction Program was placed in the valley region due to the construction opportunities associated with the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure," said Lynn Deaton, project engineer with the Army Corps of Engineers.

"Starting with fiscal year 2008, all new military construction must meet the Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design silver standard, which includes all BRAC construction on post," she said.

"The workshops will help contractors comply with Fort Benning's environmental standards."

A range of workshops will be offered to meet the varying demands of construction professionals.

"Eventually, the workshops will evolve to curriculum for high school and college students to prepare them for a career track in sustainable construction, something currently unavailable in the state of Georgia," Deaton said.

Project manager for the program and Fort Benning sustainability planner, Peter Lukken said he hopes the program will spread across the country to promote sustainable construction in the military and civilian sectors.

In the long run, introducing students to new career options in school can help the community train and retain workers who will be needed in the future, said John Fuller, the grant's project manager for the Valley Partnership.

Directing the bulk of the available sustainable grant money toward education has the greatest positive effect possible with limited resources, Fuller said.

"We're making progress, albeit slowly. There is a lack of knowledge right now about how you install some green products. What our part can be is education. The best way to change attitudes is to catch young people when they're in middle school or high school and educate them on the importance of sustainable construction."

Eventually, Fuller said, he hopes the training will develop a nucleus for sustainable construction in the valley by educating and retaining construction professionals familiar with green technology.

"We may not be talking about a large number, but even a few in this area can make a major contribution," he said.

"Lets face it; sustainability is our future. We have to be good stewards of the resources God has given us and the best way to do that is to practice sustainable use of those resources — reusing them and reusing them."

AL wins again

Carl Crawford's leaping grab an inning before Curtis Granderson tripled and scored the tiebreaking run in the eighth inning was a game saver for American League All-Stars. The American League won 4-3 Tuesday night at Busch Stadium, its seventh straight win.

Crawford went on to win the MVP award for the game. He became the first non-pitcher to win the MVP with no RBIs since Willie Mays in 1968.

Monday, Milwaukee Brewers' first baseman Prince Fielder won the home run derby crown, the annual slugfest held prior to the All-Star game. Fielder outslugged Texas outfielder Nelson Cruz 6-5 for the title.

Mayfield tests positive

Jeremy Mayfield's most recent drug test came up positive for methamphetamines July 6, according to court documents filed by NASCAR Wednesday.

The governing body asked the 4th Circuit Court to vacate the ruling by Judge Graham Mullen lifting Mayfield's indefinite suspension for violating the sport's substance abuse policy. Mayfield originally tested positive for methamphetamines May 1 and was suspended eight days later. He was granted an injunction lifting the suspension two weeks ago in federal court. This is his second positive test in three months.

NASCAR will take the week off and resume racing July 26 at Indianapolis.

Gasquet cleared to play

From the "you can't make this up" section, 23-year-old Frenchman Richard Gasquet was cleared of a lengthy doping ban Wednesday when the International Tennis Federation's tribunal panel ruled that he inadvertently took cocaine by kissing a woman in a nightclub. Yes, kissing a woman.

Gasquet was cleared to play after completing a two and one-half month ban after convincing the independent anti-doping tribunal he ingested cocaine with the kiss of a woman he had just met.

The tribunal panel ruled a long ban would be an injustice in a case that was unusual to the point of being "probably unique." Lifting the ban cleared the 32nd-ranked Gasquet to resume playing.

I bet he won't be going to any carnival kissing booths anytime soon.

Just Favrelous

I told myself I wasn't going to mention his name until he signed, but here goes. Brett Favre told The Associated Press that he is "running out of time" to decide whether he'll play for the Minnesota Vikings this season.

Favre said he'll give the Vikings an answer on whether he'll play by the July 30 start of training camp. Favre has been working out with the Oak Grove High School football team three days a week all summer, but added a Sunday workout this week. So stay tuned.

Soldiers strike gold, silver at nationals

AUSTIN, Texas — 2LT Steven Ostrander struck gold, and SGTs William Rider and Louis Davis won silver medals at the 2009 U.S. National Taekwondo Championships July 5.

Ostrander, a U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program martial artist from San Antonio, celebrated a homecoming by winning his third national crown before family and friends at the Austin Convention Center. Ostrander, however, wished one other person could have attended the tournament: 1LT Amanda Ostrander, his wife, who is deployed at Camp Liberty, Iraq.

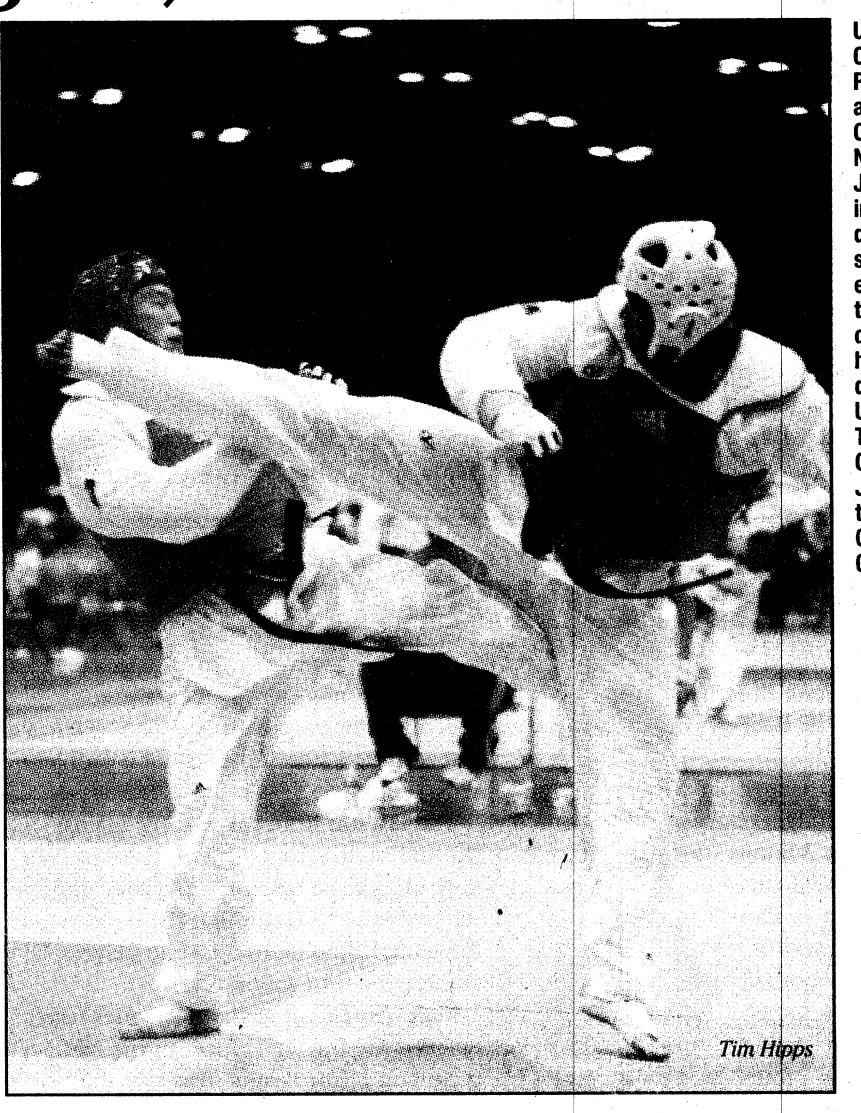
In his first heavyweight match, Ostrander posted a 12-1 victory over Jonathan Lee of New Jersey. He capped the conquest with a spin-hook kick that dropped Lee, who took a standing eight-count during the waning seconds of the bout.

"I knew that he was going to come hard," said Ostrander, a 6-foot-2, 224-pounder. "I felt that he was coming and just went ahead and spun."

Ostrander's semifinal opponent defaulted because of injury.

"I was actually kind of disappointed about that," Ostrander said. "My second fight is usually one of my better fights, and I get stronger as the day goes on."

But Ostrander did not disappoint his supporters, winning 14-1 over Mehdi Dehghani of Virginia in the finals.



Rider, a WCAP martial artist from Orangeburg, S.C., lost 5-3 in the featherweight finale to 17-year-old Jaysen Ishida of Hawaii.

The score was tied at 3-3 in the second of three 2-minute periods, but Ishida tallied one more point in both the second and third periods.

"It was a good match against a tough opponent; I just didn't dominate like I should have," said Rider, who has competed in five national championships.

In his quarterfinal match,

When Phenix City chiropractor Dr. Stephen Cooper heard the Russell County Child Advocacy Center had to raise an extra $6,000 this year because of budget cuts, he wanted to help. His idea is Run for Their Lives, a race that benefits the advocacy center.

The center offers counseling and support groups to child abuse victims and abuse prevention education.

"This is the best way I thought I could help the center raise funds," Cooper said. This is a way to raise money and have fun at the same time."

Run for Their Lives begins at 8 a.m. July 25 beginning at the Phenix City Spine and Joint Center. It includes a one-mile fun run and a 5K. Activities following the race include water slides, games, a performance by Christian rock band Holding Grace, a martial arts performance by Premier Martial Arts, and a chance to dunk a doc for $1. Waffle House will provide free breakfast and 13th Street Barbecue will provide free lunch.

"I named it Run for Their Lives because the race is to save children who have been abused," Cooper said. "If we don't stand up for abused children, who is going to?"

Cooper said he hopes to make the race an annual event.

Russell County Child Advocacy Center executive director Lynn Hart said she is grateful for Cooper's help.

"His help will make a big difference for the center," she said. "We can focus more on providing services and less about fundraising."

Preregistration for the race is now until July 24.

The cost for those who preregister is $20 for adults and $12 for children. On the day of the event, the price is $25 for adults and $15 for children. Registration will begin at 7 a.m. and the fun run and 5K race begins at 8 a.m.

There will be additional parking and a shuttle at Kmart and Fitness Plus in Phenix City.

Participants can register online at www.pcspine.com and can drop forms off at the Phenix City Spine and Joint Center or mail them to the center at 3304 U.S. Highway 80 W Plaza, Phenix City, AL 36870.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Keeping an 'open mind' important

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

No matter what unit Bernard Smith is with, he plays softball. Smith has been playing softball for more than 10 years and coaching for three years.

"I like softball because it's a stress reliever," he said. "It takes your mind off everything else."

As a child and in high school, Smith played baseball. But when he joined the Army, it was softball.

He's played in South Korea, Germany, Fort Hood, Texas, and Fort Stewart, Ga.

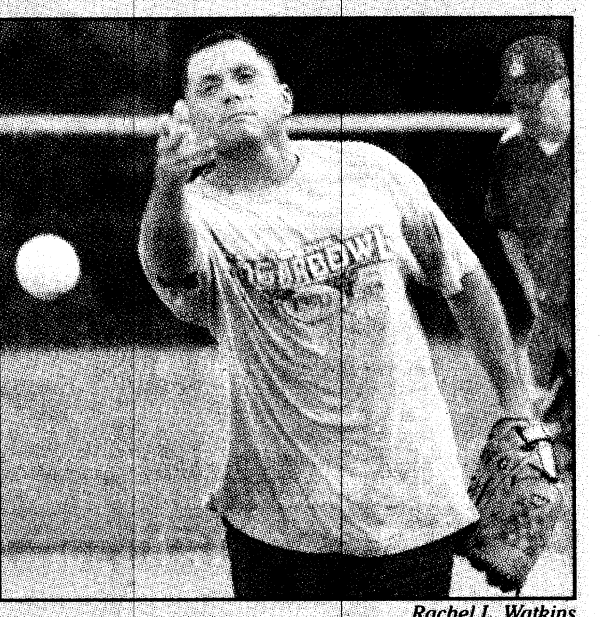
Intramural sports in the Army is a good opportunity for Soldiers who are athletic and want to play sports at a recreational and All-Army level, he said. And intramural softball is a chance to get to know Soldiers outside of work.

This season, his team, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, is 4-1.

Smith wants to take the Commander's Cup.

"It is a challenge because we have guys in Korea, on leave and PCSing, so the roster is never the same," he said. "I think we have a chance to win though."

Win or lose, Smith expects his players to give 100 percent.



"As long as the team comes out to the field and puts forth effort and I can tell they are trying, I am happy," he said.

Not every game will be perfect, he said.

"If you make an error, you shake it off and you keep going," he said.

When it comes to coaching, Smith looks to his players for advice.

"They might have a better strategy than me — that's why you have to keep an open mind when coaching," he said.

Grunts pound out win over Los Internacionales

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Grunts defeated Los Internacionales 12-2 in a softball game Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

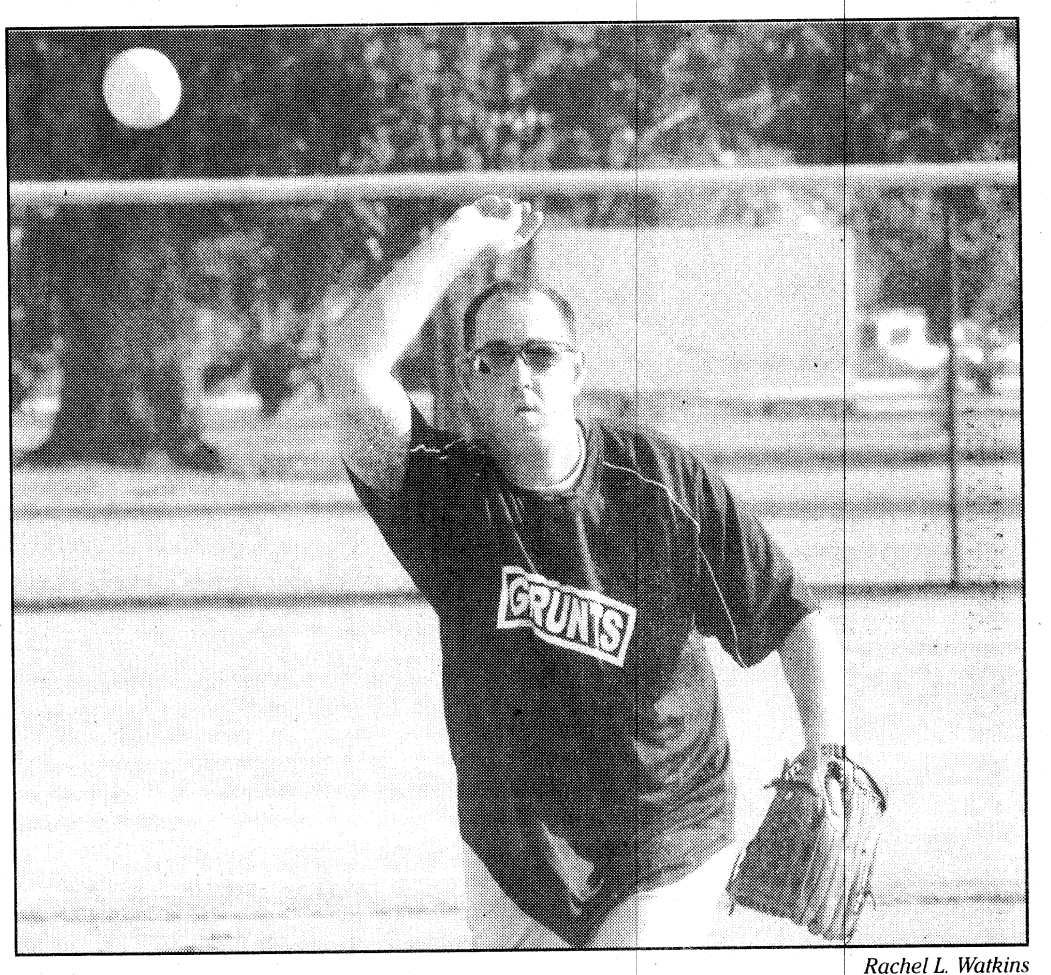
Los Internacionales, Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, was shut out in the first inning, while the Grunts, Infantry Basic Officer Leaders Course, scored on a Joel Molena RBI single to lead 1-0.

Los Internacionales had a runner reach base in the second inning, but Grunt pitcher Chris Jones recorded the third out before they could score.

The Grunts added runs on the scoreboard in the bottom of the inning with a two-run RBI double from Frank Geitz.

Trailing 3-0, Los Internacionales had a chance to score in the top of the third inning with a runner on third base, but left the runner stranded, while the Grunts increased their lead to 4-0.

The Grunts held Los Internacionales scoreless in the fourth inning, while racking up two runs on an error and a Molena RBI single.



The fifth inning was Los Internacionales' lone scoring inning with a two-run RBI double by Julio Candelario. The Grunts were held scoreless, but still led 6-2.

In the bottom of the sixth, the Grunts scored six runs, sealing the 12-2 victory as the game ended with the hour time limit being reached.

"I think our team played really well," said Grunts coach Dan Anton. "Our bats were coming around and we had a solid defense. Once we got going, the team was motivated to win."

Grunt Andy Miller said his team fought hard and attributed the victory to solid play in aspects of the game.

"We didn't have any major errors and we had good fielding and hitting out there," he said.

Matter of principle, not going to see the principal

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Last week, Hennepin County, Minn., District Judge Gary Larson ruled Minnesota Vikings defensive tackles Kevin and Pat Williams (not related) can play while awaiting the National Football League's appeal on an earlier federal ruling involving their four-game suspensions.

The two tested positive for a banned diuretic, bumetanide, which is in the over-the-counter weight-loss supplement StarCaps. Bumetanide is a masking agent for steriods.

Looking at the bulk of the two defensive tackles, it is easy to see why they were taking StarCaps — to meet weight incentives in their contract. The NFL has all but admitted steroid use is not a problem with the two.

The lawsuit from the players against the NFL stems from Minnesota labor laws governing drug testing in the state and whether the NFL, through the collectively bargained agreement with the players, trumps the state labor laws.

Many professional sports leagues have entered the fray in support of the NFL including Major League Baseball, the National Basketball Association, the National Hockey League and the United States Anti-Doping Agency, which tests Olympic athletes and whose protocol the NFL generally follows — all have filed court briefs in support of the NFL.

Why? Because ruling in the Williams' favor could influence the role of state labor laws in drug testing programs throughout professional sports.

Although I bleed Viking purple, I cannot see the "Williams Wall" winning this case. I would rather see their suspensions during the start of the season — an easier schedule — than at some other point in the season.

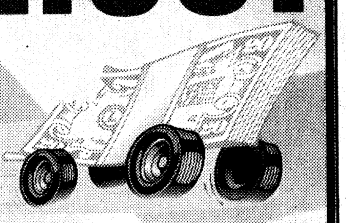
I want the team to win, but I can also see the Williams' point of view — they are standing on principle.

The NFL knew of the banned substance in StarCaps — they admitted it. The NFL knew the banned substance wasn't listed on the bottle — they admitted it. The NFL did not inform the players — they admitted that too, yet, they still want to punish the players.

Is it just me, or is there something screwy with this way of thinking?

With both players tipping the scale at more than 300 pounds each, I hardly think teams in the NFL are in jeopardy of these two gaining a competitive edge against them — unless it is a pie eating contest.

The NFL has a responsibility to inform the players of the banned and potentially harmful substance in StarCaps. The NFL response — players are responsible for what they put in their bodies.



As a former NCO, I liken it to going into battle and not telling a Soldier he had put blanks in his weapon, rather than live rounds — then having to look the deceased or wounded Solider and say, "You should have known better."

I cannot fathom the guilt I would feel for knowingly putting a Soldier in harm's way, yet the NFL doesn't have this burden.

I hope the Williams' prevail in court. It's time the NFL's principal, Commissioner Roger Goodell, takes responsibility for the league's part, rather than doling out the punishment.

It's a matter of principle, and not about going to see the principal for punishment.

About 1,500 archers are expected to gather at Uchee Creek Thursday to compete in the sixth annual ASA Classic. The four-day event runs through July 26 on the ranges at Uchee Creek Campground.

Benning to host ASA archery classic

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

About 1,500 professional and amateur archers are expected at Fort Benning next week for the sixth annual ASA Classic, sponsored by Team Realtree, organizers said.

The four-day event begins Thursday and runs through July 26 on the ranges at Uchee Creek Campground. A Saturday evening session featuring various pro classes will begin at 4:30 p.m. in the Columbus Civic Center.

The Archery Shooters Association stages seven events each year, and this is the premier showcase on the calendar, with a purse of more than $200,000, said Mike Tyrell, president of ASA. The total includes season-ending bonuses and promotional prize money.

"It's our largest event of the year," he said. "Our classic championship includes people who qualify from state federations, so it typically draws another 200 or 300 competitors ... It's one of the largest archery events in the country."

The ASA Classic is the nation's biggest 3-D archery event, Tyrell said.

3-D shooting is unique because people with all levels of archery skills — from novice to pro — can participate, according to Uchee Creek Archery Club's Web site. It involves placing a realistic animal decoy at known and unknown distances, guessing the yardage and shooting exactly where a competitor aims.

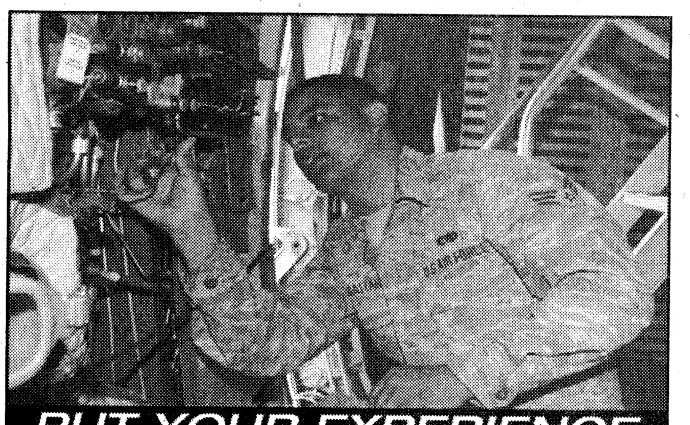
Cliff Hughes, manager of Uchee Creek Campground and Marina, said the ASA Classic generates more than $20,000 in revenue for the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"It is the largest, best-attended shoot in the U.S.," he said.

Hughes said up to $5,000 in prizes will be up for grabs among Soldiers and their families during Thursday's kickoff event, the DFMWR Benefit Shoot. Military units will compete with a pro partner for the MWR Fort Benning Cup.

The entry fee is $25 and registration starts at 9 a.m. For more information, call 706-545-7238 or 706-681-6995.

The Uchee Creek Archery Club has about 300 members, and one-third will compete in the ASA Classic, including 50 to 75 Soldiers and family members, Hughes said.



In all, there are 12 categories, ranging from junior amateur shooters to the Senior Pro Class.

Tyrell said organizers are hoping for decent weather to avoid any serious heat problems for spectators and competitors.

"If temperatures are in the 80s, we'll be very happy," he said. "We have a very good relationship with the MWR and people at Uchee Creek. Everybody involved with that event is very professional. They're used to dealing with large events and big crowds.

"We get very good support and we look forward every year to coming down there."

It's time to kick it up another level

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Tuesday's boot camp class was a new adventure. It was just me — cue The Good, The Bad and The Ugly theme song by Hugo Montenegro — and the inch worm exercise. While the inch worm sounds like it would be a cute and easy exercise, I can tell you — and some of my boot camp classmates will back me up — it's not. When I first heard the name, I thought, "This can't be so bad." But after being in a push-up position and scooching my way up with my feet and straightening back out in the push-up position across the Smith Fitness Center yard several times, I was spent.

The classes are still challenging. There hasn't been a day I wasn't drenched with sweat. But as the boot camp instructor, Eric Dempsey, says, "The workout isn't supposed to be easy."

I have seen a difference. The four workouts outside of class are getting easier. That means one thing to me. It's time to kick my exercise routine up another level.

It's important to keep challenging myself because that's what motivates me to keep going.

Another motivation is to see Soldiers at the Smith Fitness Center who can run miles and miles on a treadmill without stopping. It makes me want to work harder and go faster.

The good news is I'm starting to like it. I look forward to going to the gym.

On the food front, I have been eating grilled chicken, veggies, fruits and many protein shakes. I admit, changing my diet is difficult, especially on the weekend. My fiance and I had an Ultimate Fighting Championship night Saturday and invited friends. Our friends brought every temptation imaginable — pepperoni and sausage pizza, hot dogs, chips and soda — but I didn't break.

Eating healthy and exercising definitely takes a lot of self-control and discipline, but I know I can do it. In 52 days, I am getting married. In the meantime, my focus is Operation Get Into Shape.

Want to attend boot camp? The next session begins Aug. 4. The class meets from 9:15-10:15 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday at Smith Fitness Center. Participants are given nutrition and cardio plans to use outside of class. The cost is $120 per monthlong session. The cost is $60 for those who get a friend to sign up. The participant who loses the most body fat in a session gets another monthlong session free.

TKD: World Class athletes compete on national stage

Rider rallied from a 5-2 deficit after two periods to defeat Colorado's Jacob Amerman in sudden-death overtime and in the semifinals, Rider broke a 5-5 tie by knocking out Californian Cory King with a powerful kick to the ribs with 1:03 remaining in the second round.

Davis, 38, of Fort Lewis, Wash., banged up his right foot, right knee and tore tendons in his left thumb before losing 3-2 to Georgia's Curtis Barnett in the finals of the welterweight division. Competing in his eighth national championship tournament, Davis said he blocked out the pain until his day was done.

"I didn't feel a darn thing until after the (final) match was over," said Davis, who injured his thumb during a semifinal victory over Darrell Rydholm, a former member of WCAP. "I just chalked it up as 'bang, I got hit.'"

U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program martial artist SGT William Rider kicks Michigan's Michael Walker en route to a 4-2 victory July 5 at the 2009 U.S. National Taekwondo Championships at Austin Convention Center in Texas. Rider won a silver medal in the featherweight division.

Davis deploys to Iraq in October.

"Fighting side-by-side with these Soldiers, that's a great honor," he said. "Our battlefield is that mat.

"We're representing every Soldier — able-bodied, wounded, people who have gone out and paid the price — that's what we do."

ARMY NEWS

JOLIET, Ill. — Ryan Newman made a late-race surge to post a sixth-place finish in Saturday night's LifeLock.com 400 Sprint Cup event at Chicagoland Speedway.

The finish snapped a four-race streak without a top-10 result for Newman and the U.S. Army/Haas Automation team.

"It was a great rebound for us and a good points day," said Newman, who recorded his ninth top-10 finish of the year, one more than he had the entire 2008 season. "The guys did a great job, especially on pit row."

It was also another successful race for the first-year Stewart-Haas Racing organization with Newman's teammate, Tony Stewart, finishing fourth.

Newman remains seventh in the points while Stewart continues to hold down the No. 1 spot in the driver standings. There are seven races remaining before the top-12 drivers in points begin the Chase for the Sprint Cup Championship.

Newman's Chevrolet Impala SS had handling issues for the first half of the LifeLock.com 400, but the No. 39 car came to life as the 267-lap race was winding down on the 1.5-mile oval.

After running in the mid teens, Newman found himself in the top 10 for the first time on Lap 138. He slipped in and out of the top 10 until he made a strong charge following the second-to-last restart on Lap 251.

He went from 11th to fifth and appeared to be heading for a top-five or better finish. But a caution flag came out on Lap 260 and in the final two-lap, green-flag dash to the checkered flag he lost one position.

"At best we had a 10th-place car today," noted Newman, who has three consecutive top 10s at Chicagoland Speedway. "And it looked like we were in more trouble early in the race as we were fighting to stay in the top 20. We'll take the strong sixth-place finish. It was an Army-like effort of getting the most out of what we had."

The race winner was Mark Martin. Rounding out the top-five in order were: Jeff Gordon, Kasey Kahne, Stewart and Denny Hamlin.

The Sprint Cup Series will have next weekend off before returning to action July 26 at Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the running of the Allstate 400 at the Brickyard.

Fort Benning Baller Detarian Davis moves the ball toward the basket as Fort Stewart players follow Saturday at the Child, Youth & School Services Gym.

Ballers: Roll to 50-42 win

going with baskets by Shaun Tandarich, Karl Ivey, B.J. Knight and Brett Barrientes for 12 points in the third quarter, while Fort Stewart's Shadeed Reed, ZaQuarious Brown, Spencer Asher and Brenden Stone matched the Ballers basket-for-basket.

Trailing 43-30, Fort Stewart tried to close the gap in the fourth quarter, adding 12 points to their score, but it wasn't enough. Fort Benning sealed the win 50-42.

"We came out playing aggressively the first half," said Jeff Todd, who coached the game for the Ballers and is the coach for the Hardaway High School girls junior varsity and freshmen basketball teams. "We had a big lead on them early in the game. I told the team, 'let's do what we have practiced all week — man to man plays and rebounds — and stick with our game plan no matter what the score is.'"

Philip Whittington, 12, said his team played good defense.

"I think we could have played harder, but I think we are better on our turnovers and rebounds," he said.

Soldiers support filming of Transformers sequel

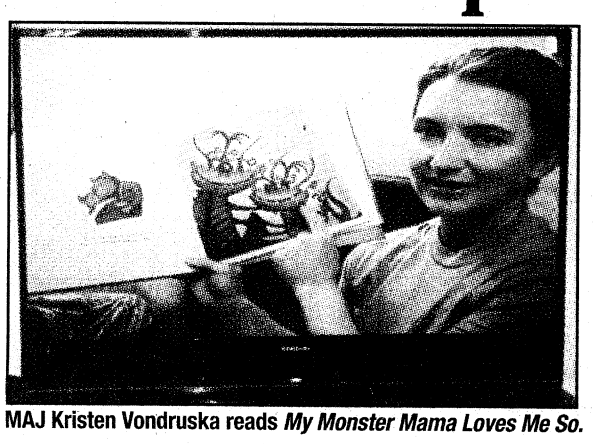
Shown is a battle scene from "Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen" in which Soldiers from the 1st Armored Division operate the tracked vehicles.

Grafton Pritchartt
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Soldiers are saving the world against alien attacks — or at least they are helping in the new movie Transformers: Revenge of the Fallen.

About 20 Soldiers from the 5th Brigade, 1st Armored Division, at Fort Bliss, Texas, traveled to White Sands Missile Range, N.M., last fall for two and a half weeks to help director Michael Bay with the battle scenes for the film which opened June 24.

1LT John Auger and SFC Ryan Buettner were in charge of Soldiers supporting the movie from the unit, which has served as the Army Evaluation Task Force for Future Combat Systems. Auger and Buettner also coordinated equipment and tasking details for the Army's support of the film.



"It was dumb luck," said Buettner about being selected to help with the movie. And Auger echoed similar sentiments, "Luck of the draw being the tank platoon leader."

Film Liaison Officer LTC Gregory Bishop of Army Public Affairs-West was in charge of ensuring the depiction of Soldiers in the movie was accurate. In addition to behind-the-scenes advice, the Army provided two M-1 Abrams tanks and two Bradleys from Fort Bliss, a humvee, an M-113 armored personnel carrier and arranged live-fire shots that were used in the film.

Three-year-old Kate Vondruska and her brother, 5-year-old Mark, watch their mother read If I Ran the Circus by Dr. Seuss Monday. MAJ Kristen Vondruska deployed with the 14th Combat Support Hospital July 8, but before she left, she recorded several stories on Video Messenger for her kids.

"I'm listening to my mommy," 3-year-old Kate Vondruska said.

Kate's mom, MAJ Kristen Vondruska, deployed to Iraq July 8, but Kate and her 5-year-old brother, Mark, can hear and see her whenever they want. It's called Video Messenger, and it lets Soldiers record messages to their loved ones while they're deployed or Temporary Duty. The free service is available at Sayers Memorial Library on Main Post.

Most people choose to read books to their children, but the service is versatile, said Nancy Wahlstrom, technical services librarian at Sayers.

It could be a veteran who wants to make a video for his grandchildren, a Soldier who leaves a "love letter" to her husband while she deploys, or a dad who mails home a message to a baby born while he's out of town, Wahlstrom said.

The DVDs, mailing envelopes and library books a person chooses to record are free, and there is a private room in the library where patrons can record the videos.

"It's to support the troops and the families," Wahlstrom said. "It gives them a tool to interact with their family when they're deployed, in the field or TDY. They see their face, hear their voice. (It) just keeps the memory alive, especially for young kids."

Mark and Kate are keeping the memory of their mother alive with the help of several books and Bible stories Kristen recorded in the week before she deployed.

Mark said he enjoyed listening to his mom read on Video Messenger.

"She has a much smoother voice (than anyone else). It makes me kind of sleepy," he said. "It's just special to me. She loves me so much; I really know because of this, my book."

Kristen learned about Video Messenger through her husband, MAJ John Vondruska, who recorded several books for their children while he was in Kuwait last year.

Program offers exceptional help

THE BAYONET

The Exceptional Family Member Program is another example of the Army taking care of Soldiers and their families, said Marsha Collins, program manager for the post EFMP.

EFMP is a mandatory program for active-duty Soldiers who have family members with special needs, anything from asthma or epilepsy to attention-deficit hyperactivity disorder or a mental health condition, Collins said.

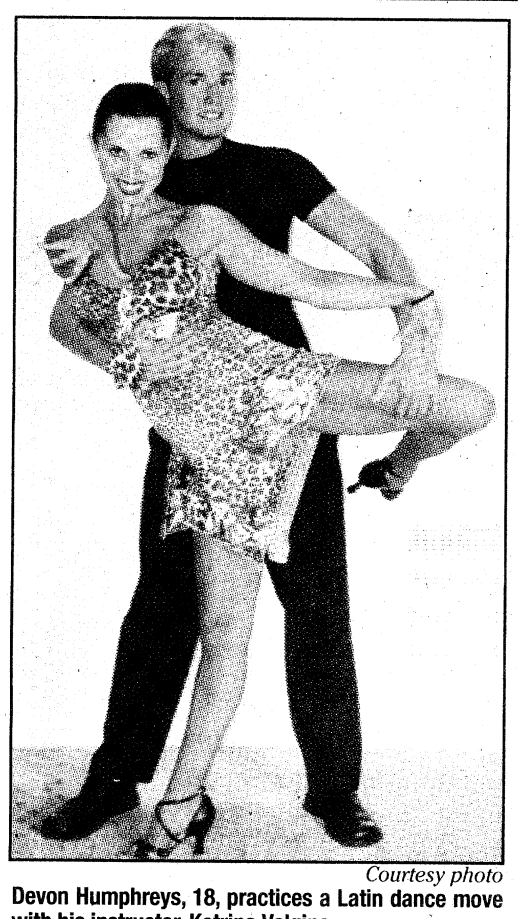
Enrollment in the program doesn't hurt Soldiers' careers, she said, but it does make sure they are assigned to installations where their family's unique medical or educational needs can be met.

The program offers respite care, resource information, advocacy, medical screenings and special events. The most recent post EFMP activity, a free summer day camp with nearly 20 special needs children, included swimming, bowling, horseback riding and themed movies, such as Black Beauty, at Little Creek Horse Farm in Upatoi, Ga.

"The kids had a great time," Collins said. "They need to have opportunities to participate in recreational activities just like everyone else. And it was sort of therapeutic. We could see changes in the children and their attitudes."

Just by watching their behavior, Collins said, she knew the kids appreciated the opportunity to attend a camp made especially for them.

"It was fun and silly," said 9-year-old Khayla Johnson, who attended the summer camp June 15-19.



"I threw the Frisbee. I went swimming. I made new friends. And you get to ride your own horse — incredible."

It's the first time MSG Carol Williams, Khayla's mother, heard about an EFMP camp in her four years at Fort Benning, but she hopes there will be more summer activities in the future, she said.

"Studies have shown kids respond more when they're playing with animals or given an opportunity to take care of something else other than themselves," Williams said. "That's the reason why I enjoyed that program. They feed the horses; they ride them; they brush them.

"Also the interaction with other

Senior sharpens Russian skills

Graduate learns Latin dance for senior project

Devon Humphreys has never been to Russia, but he's no stranger when it comes to the language.

Over the last two years, the 2009 Columbus High School graduate taught himself how to speak and read Russian, a skill he hopes to someday parlay into a career as a diplomat and translator, Humphreys said.

The 18-year-old is the son of COL Paul and Tammy Humphreys, who most recently served as chief of the Office of the Chief of Infantry at Fort Benning's headquarters but is now heading to the U.S. Army War College in Pennsylvania.

Humphreys is so proficient at Russian his father asked him to act as one of three interpreters during a dinner at the Benning Conference Center three weeks ago for two dozen officials from Tajikistan and Turkmenistan, both former Soviet republics. The other two were professional translators, he said.

"They told me I speak without an accent, like a native of Russia. That's what I want to hear, for sure," he said. "It took a lot of work to lose that accent. I'd sit and pronounce a word or phrase over and over and over. I wanted people to ask me where I'm from in Russia."

For his senior project at Columbus High — a requirement for graduation — Humphreys learned Latin dance, but the yearlong endeavor turned into another opportunity to enhance his fluency in Russian, he said.

His instructor, Katrina Volgina, who teaches aerobics and dance at Smith Fitness Center, was born in Vladivostok, Russia.

"It was a match made in heaven," Humphreys said. "I always felt so awkward, so I decided I had to learn how to dance. And she gave me all I needed to be able to pronounce things correctly. It helped my social skills and enhanced my Russian. It was very holistic."

Volgina, a professional ballroom dancer, praised his Russian abilities and strong work ethic.

"His Russian is better than my English," she said. "We became friends through the Russian Transformers sequel: 'Fun experience to be a part of'

The film also included a Black Hawk helicopter and Apache helicopter from the Pennsylvania National Guard, a Black Hawk from the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii, a CH-47 Chinook from the Nevada National Guard and a Multiple Launch Rocket System from White Sands Missile Range, N.M.

"Ever since I was a kid, I watched the Transformers cartoon," Buettner said. "To be able to grow up, watch the first movie and be a part of the creation of the second movie was awesome."

The Transformers sequel picks up with the Decepticons making their return to Earth. Josh Duhamel and Tyrese Gibson returned to portray CPT Lennox and SGT Epps. Shia LeBoeuf and Megan Fox also came back to the big screen.

The movie is currently at number three in the box-office charts. It debuted at number one, has grossed nearly $340 million since opening and has had 66 million viewers worldwide.

"That's a lot of people watching a film that positively depicts the Army," Bishop said.

Not only does the movie depict the Army, but it features real Soldiers in a few of the scenes as well.

Soldiers operate the Army vehicles in the film and charge out of the APCs. Auger and Buettner at first gave direction to the drivers of the tracked vehicles via radio behind the scenes. But they did it so well, Bay wanted them in the movie.

One day Auger and Buettner were standing next to the director and transmitting orders to the Soldiers driving on camera.

"They asked me to take off my sunglasses," Auger said. "They said, 'Yep, you've got good eyes — get out there, lieutenant!'"

Auger, who has not yet seen the movie due to his son's birth July 1, was reluctant to the idea at first.

"Acting is not really my thing, but it's definitely a unique experience that I will have forever," he said. "I just hope I look good."

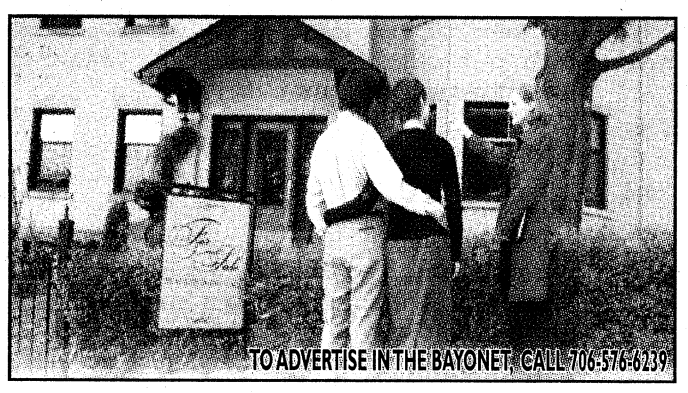
Bishop, Auger and Buettner spent 12 and 13 hours on set per day filming scenes. Mostly they stood by Bay and the crew radioing orders to the Soldiers on the set.

"It was a lot of hurry up and wait," Auger said.

In the end, all of the waiting paid off.

"It was an interesting and fun experience to be a part of it. It's really cool to be able to see the movie and realize how we witnessed the filming of the scenes," Buettner said.

The Soldiers had other perks to filming, aside from coordinating machinery.



"To be able to watch Megan Fox was a big deal for a lot of the guys," Auger said. "The actors, mainly Duhamel and Tyrese, thanked us for what we do for the country. It was very humbling from our perspective. To have these famous people appreciate us was a very heartfelt thing."

The Soldiers also allowed the assistant directors to ride in the tanks and see the equipment up close and personal. "The assistant directors really got a kick out of that," Auger said.

All in all, the movie has proven to be a success in the box office and with Army objectives.

"It was one of the largest joint films made with the military; it is a great film and the Soldiers had a lot of fun doing it," Bishop said.

Seniors tackle diverse disciplines

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

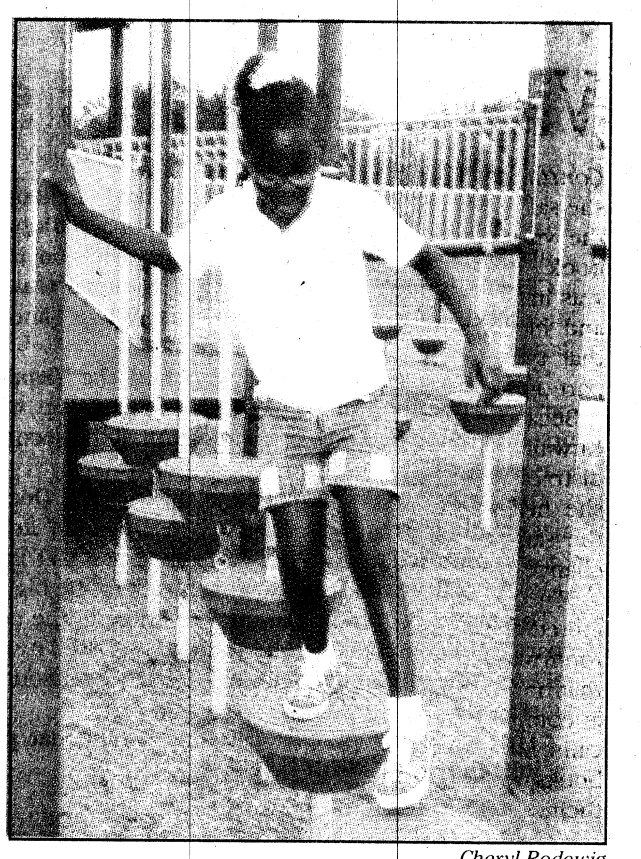
Columbus High School students who complete senior projects gain an advantage in the college admissions process because of the skill sets and qualities they pick up, a longtime humanities teacher said.

Marcie Mitchell is a former senior project coordinator at Columbus High and has been involved with the program for a decade. She said it's the only school in Georgia certified by the Senior Project Institute, which started as a think tank in North Carolina and now provides teachers and schools with the resources to implement the curriculum.

The project, housed in the humanities program at Columbus High, is a culmination of skills students have learned since their freshman year and is devoted to building time management, research, writing and presentation abilities. It's also a graduation requirement.

"Many of the things we do here is more college-prep oriented," Mitchell said. "In that regard, the senior project is a capstone event ... They have to learn to manage their own time and do a balancing act."

Students must set goals, work independently, solve problems, and master the art of written and verbal communication, according to Columbus High School's Web site. They're expected to spend at least 100 hours outside class developing a portfolio and a product, which is presented to a panel of community judges during spring of their senior year.



Mitchell said 25 of the 100 hours must be spent with a mentor who's an expert in the field the student has chosen.

She said disciplines tackled by seniors have included music composition, jewelry making, yoga, guitar and dance lessons, chef training and scuba diving. They'll also learn sports such as archery, golf, tennis, boxing and martial arts and then compete in a tournament or event. One student spent nine months getting in shape for a charity marathon, she said.

In recent years, a senior took part in an archeological dig at Fort Benning while another worked to get Lawson Army Airfield on the National Register of Historic Places.

"The sky is the limit really. They can pick just about any project," Mitchell said. "Sometimes, they'll end up getting scholarships or special awards based on their projects ... The biggest thing is they have to show progress from start to finish."

Columbus High seniors often devote up to 400 hours on their senior projects, Mitchell said.

language (and) he helped me a lot with my English as well. He was a very good student and very hard-working student."

Volgina said she's a tough teacher and not easy on her pupils. Many often break down and want to quit, but Humphreys never did.

"He was able to go through the tears and pain," she said. "He had to take extra classes like yoga. He went through a lot, because I don't work with people for fun. This is my profession. When I teach people, I want them to work hard.

"It's not about his athletic skills. It's about his spirit. He has passion for it. You can teach anybody to dance ... but to have passion to dance is very rare."

The senior project was incredibly demanding on many levels, Humphreys said. He and his family spent more than $2,000 on lessons and dance attire for his presentations at the high school, which included video footage and photographs. He had to maintain a logbook and other documentation as well.

> — Devon Humphreys

"I love this skill, but it was the most stressful part of my senior year, to be honest," he said. "There were some nights it did not seem worth it to stay up till 3 or 4 a.m. finishing my portfolio ... It taught me a lot of hard work, perseverance and dedication."

Humphreys said Marit Quirion, his best friend at Columbus High, got him interested in Russian in 2007. His interest peaked that summer, when he visited his grandparents in New Jersey and befriended a group of Russian exchange students.

He wound up getting Rosetta Stone and a Harry Potter book in Russian for Christmas, he said.

"I knew I wasn't going to stop until I perfected it," Humphreys said. "I can also speak French and some Italian, but I have a passion for Russian. It feels natural.

"I understand it as well as I do English. No space of time has to pass for me to get it. I can't express how much Katrina helped me improve my Russian skills."

In May, he earned a $1,000 scholarship as the foreign language honoree in the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer's 34th annual Page One Awards. This fall, Humphreys will attend the University of Georgia and major in Russian. He said he wants to minor in Italian and take as many other language courses as possible, with Greek, Latin and Arabic among his top choices.

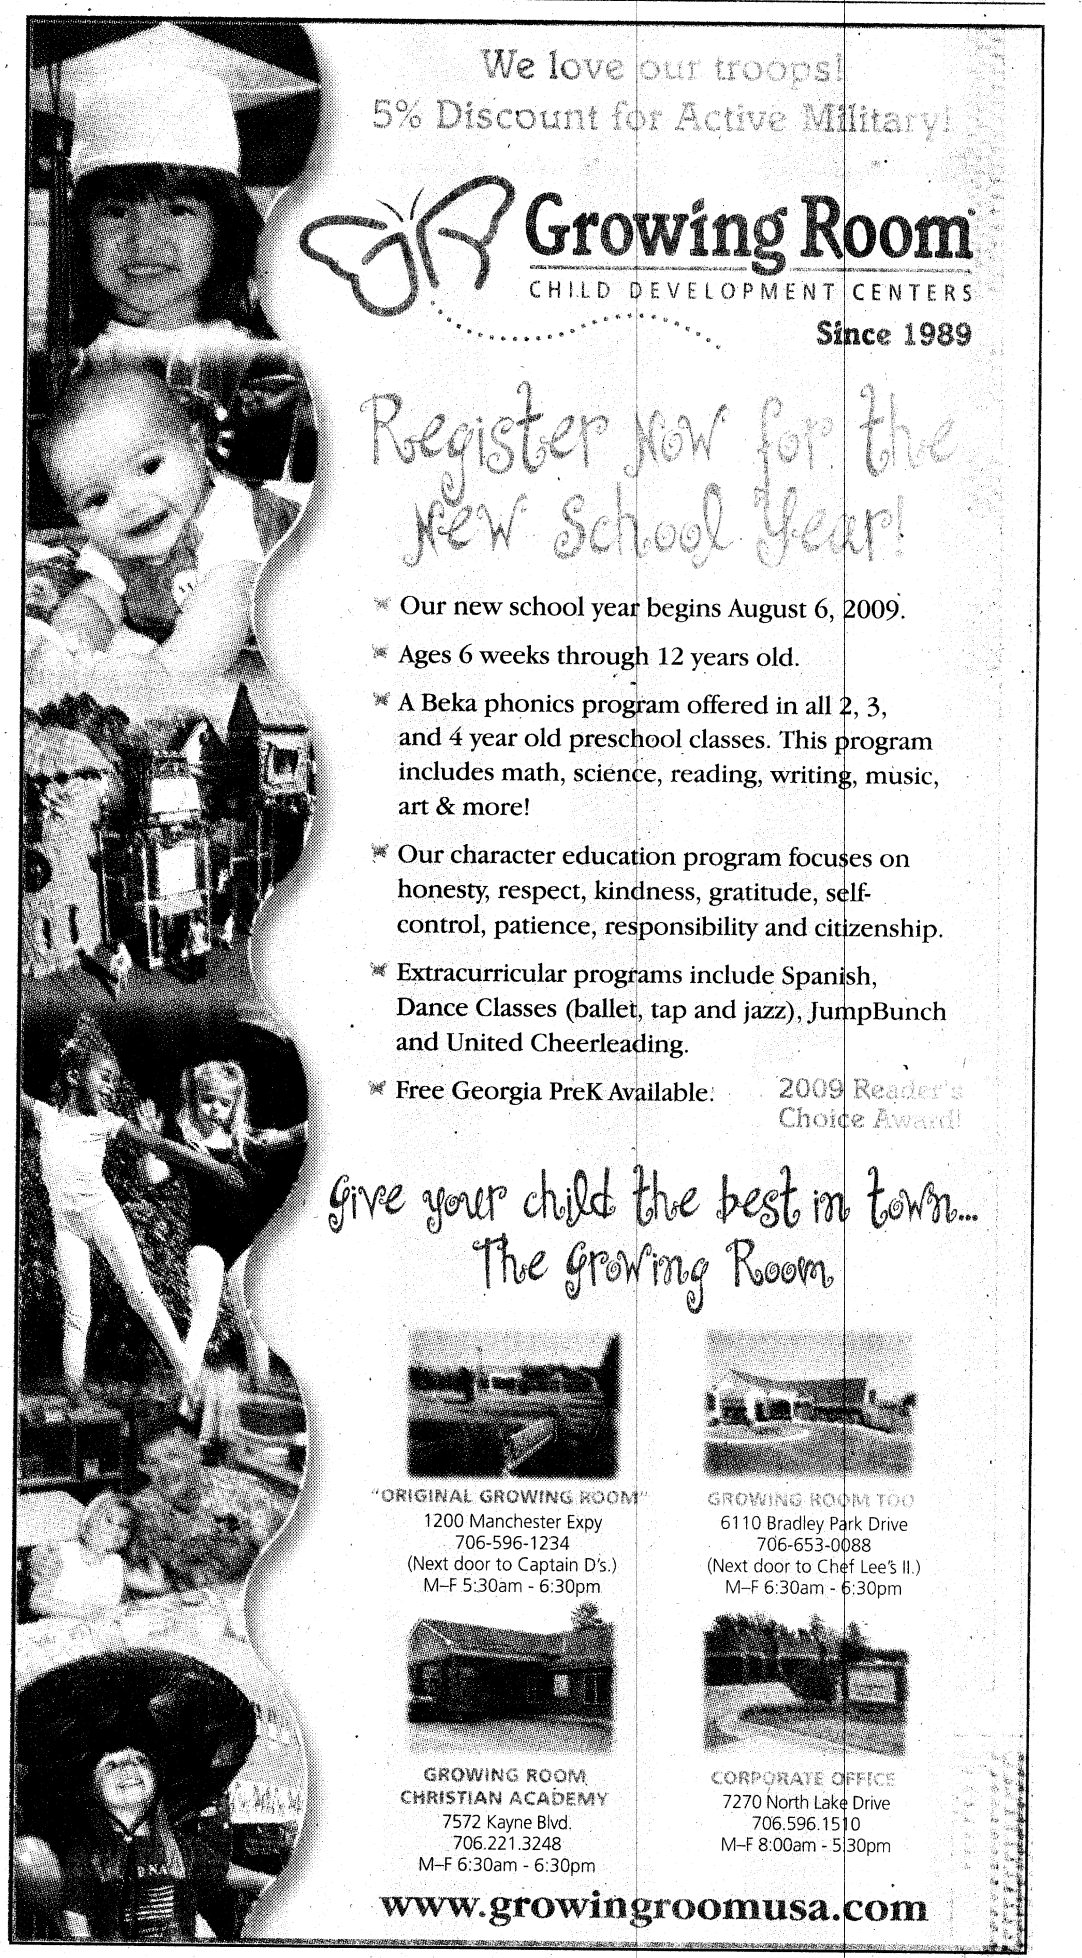
EFMP: Offers resources, care kids in the program. When (Khayla) gets around 'normal' kids without a hearing aid, they tend to tease her.

"But when she's with her own group, then everyone is pretty much the same, so they learn from each other. They maximized their days. Once she goes back to school, she has more to tell her friends about what she's done."

The camp also provided a much-needed break for Williams, a single parent who must balance her time between work and the unique responsibilities of raising Khayla. Williams said she is considering taking advantage of EFMP's respite care program, which offers a quality care provider for special needs children, affording some "down time" for the parents.



"Overall, I've enjoyed being in the EFMP," Williams said, "because of the different activities (and) the information they do put out."

That's the whole goal of EFMP, said Collins, who has a special needs child and empathizes with the struggles families face.

"When our families are taken care of, then our Soldiers are taken care of, and they can be ready for the mission and to do their job," she said.

For more information about EFMP, call 706-545-5521.

Videos: Record family messages

she said. "My children loved watching the videos of Daddy reading them a book. It provided a connection that was invaluable — to see Daddy's face and hear his voice doing something that they loved and was an integral part of their nighttime ritual."

Because they were recorded in Kuwait, the background noise was distracting, Kristen said, so when she heard that Fort Benning offered the same service, she jumped at the chance.

"The setup at Fort Benning is incredible," she said. "It's in a private room with simple, yet quality equipment that produced a clear recording. And it is completely free of charge. When I came home with the stack of DVDs and books, my son couldn't wait to watch them. It lightened my heart and eased the guilt of leaving him as I listened to him chuckle as he turned the pages as I read. I know part of me is with him while I am so very far away."

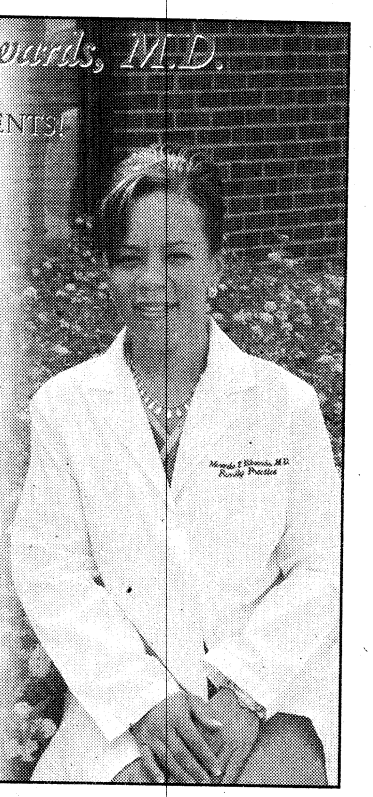
The family plans to watch at least one video a week during the yearlong deployment.



"This is going to give them an opportunity to see their mom every week," said John, who returned from Iraq in March. "It reinforces the bonding — just another avenue to keep everybody in touch as much as possible. The kids are really excited. It definitely keeps their interest; even Kate at 3 wants to flip to the right pages. I think they really liked seeing their mom on TV and having that interaction with her reading books. It's a great program."

Appointments are not required for Video Messenger and there is no limit on the number of DVDs a person can record.

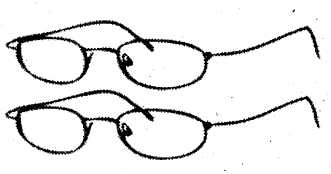
God's plan overcomes uncertainty, creates hope

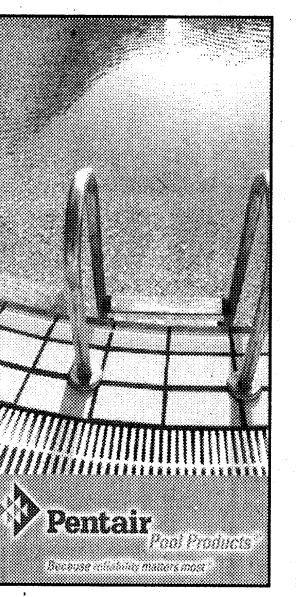
Chaplain (MAJ) Thomas M. Gorrell
2ND BATTALION, 47TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

While stationed at Fort Polk, La., I noticed an elderly couple standing outside looking into the front doors of the World War II Chapel where my office was. As I approached, two thoughts flowed through my mind. Either they are here because of a problem with a son or daughter or, I said to myself jokingly, they are here because they need marriage counseling. Surprisingly they stopped to see the chapel where they were married.

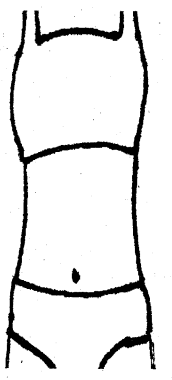
As I opened the doors, I couldn't help but notice the look of amazement on their faces. Twenty-five years ago this man, a private in the Army, was a trainee assigned to Fort Polk. The couple met each other in Leesville and were married in this World War II chapel. They were astonished to find the chapel was still intact and had stood the test of time. They told me the interior had changed some, but the beams and the structure remained the same. After a few "Kodak" moments, the pair thanked me for allowing them to see the chapel. I thanked them for allowing me to experience their legacy and a piece of this chapel's history.



Sometimes our lives may seem mundane. We strive to live our lives to the fullest, only to realize they are filled with daily chores and commitments. Too often we find ourselves doing the same thing over and over with little reward. It may seem that our efforts to find happiness and a purpose in life may be null and void.



More than 2,000 years ago the Israelites felt their lives had no future. Because of their disobedience, they found themselves exiled to Babylon for 70 years. All seemed hopeless until the prophet Jeremiah revealed God's plan for Israel.



"For I know the plans I have for you, declares the Lord, plans to prosper you and not to harm you, plans to give you hope and future. Then you will call upon me and come and pray to me, and I will listen to you. You will seek me and find me when you seek me with all you heart. I will be found by you, declares the Lord. ..." Jeremiah 29:11-14.

I can only imagine when that couple was first married, they shared the same doubts and fears of uncertainty we all have in life. Now, 25 years later they are happily married and cherishing what God has done for them. When we are tempted to lose hope let's remember how much God desires to give us a hope and a future. Ultimately, His plan for us will stand the test of time.

God Bless.

Summer Concert in the Park D3

WWW.THEBAYONET.COM

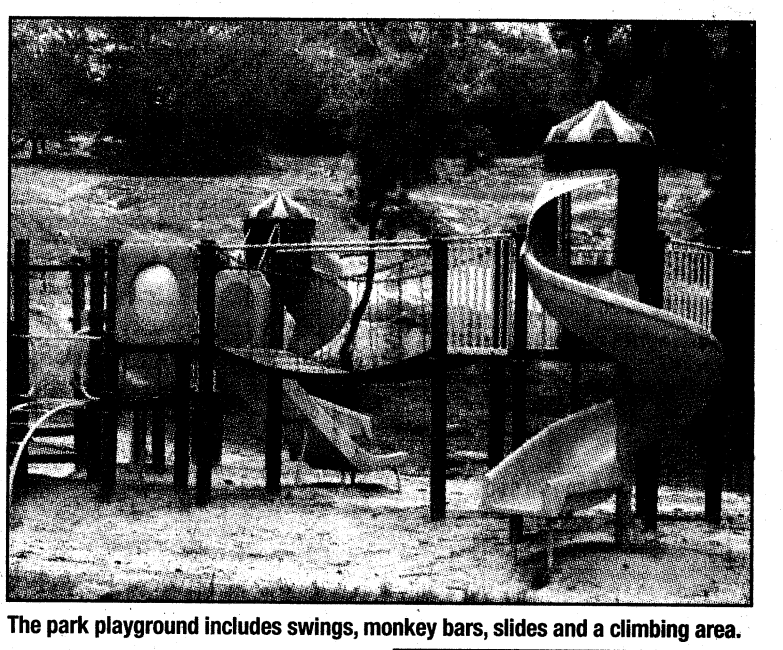
Families visit Flat Rock Park Sunday to play in the water, sunbathe and relax. The 193-acre park includes walking trails, covered pavilions, rental space, water fountains, picnic tables and benches, a lake and several grills. The park is located off Warm Springs Road in Columbus, only minutes from Fort Benning. For directions or more information, call the Columbus Parks and Recreation Department at 706-653-4189.

Dakota Bailey, 7, son of SSG Nicholas and Vanessa Bailey, slides down the wet rocks at Flat Rock Park Sunday afternoon. Dakota and his sister, 8-year-old Imagin, visited the park with their parents as "a family outing," said Nicholas, a drill sergeant on Sand Hill. Since he usually gets Sundays off, they try to go somewhere together every Sunday, he said. Children who slide down the rocks may want to wear shoes, like Dakota, to help them stop quickly when necessary. The flow of the creek depends on the rainfall — from nearly dry last year in the summer drought to much fuller after a heavy rain. Children should be supervised while in the water or on the rocks.

Slide, swim, climb at Flat Rock

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET



Somewhere between a toned-down water park and expansive nature preserve is Flat Rock Park, one of more than 30 parks in Columbus.

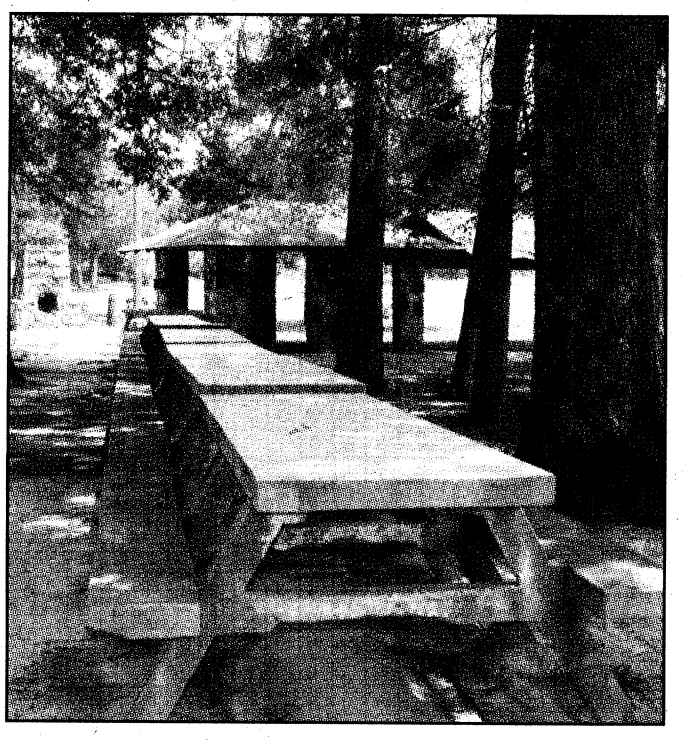
Flat Rock is a marvel of just what nature can do. There are water slides, scalable jungle gyms and quiet resting places, all formed by the rocks and the creek, which runs through the park. Most man-made features, from the picnic benches to the bridges are made of broad, open stones in this appropriately named retreat.

The park includes a lake, grills, picnic tables and a playground. However, my favorite picnic spots are on the grass with a view of the water and my favorite playground is the creek with its slick stepping stones and shallow pools.

The park is also the perfect place for fishing, photography, bird watching and mountain biking. Bring your bike or a good pair of walking shoes and loop around the lake or hike through the wooded trails for some pleasant exercise. You'll want to pack your sunscreen and water if you plan to be out more than a half hour.

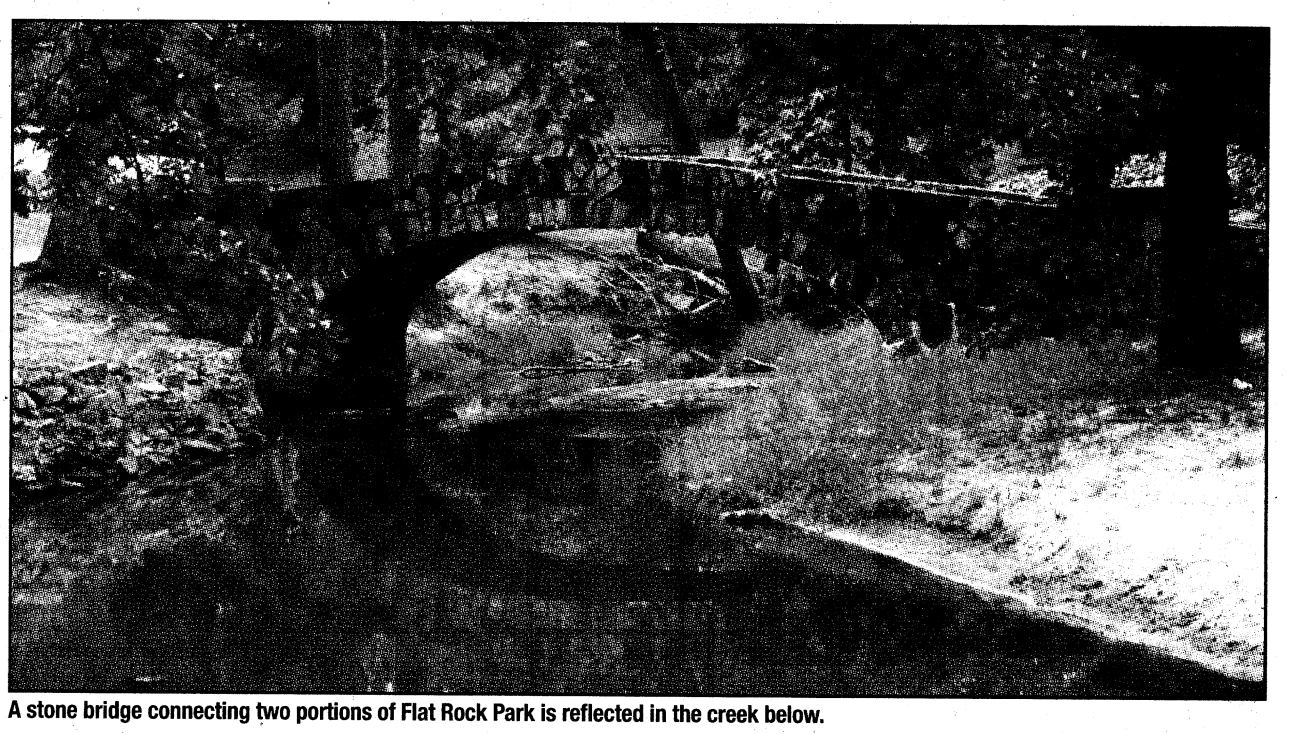
Most importantly — however you choose to pass your time at this oasis — be sure to go again. In my several visits to Flat Rock, I have noticed it changes wonderfully with each season and after each heavy rain. I regret not making it there during our March snowfall to see it blanketed in white, but I can speak for its many splendors in spring, summer and autumn.

The park playground includes swings, monkey bars, slides and a climbing area.



This city escape is suited for almost anyone. Children will enjoy splashing in the creek and slipping — carefully and safely — down the rocky slides. Couples can find secluded settings to enjoy the scenery and a romantic portable lunch for two. By yourself, it's an ideal location to bring your journal, your camera or just your thoughts while you wander the 193-acre site.

The park is located on Warm Springs Road between J.R. Allen Parkway and Blackmon Road.



Most of the features in Flat Rock, including these steps, are made out of stone to match the rest of the park.

To get there from Fort Benning, take I-185 to Manchester Expressway, and head northeast to Warm Springs Road. Flat Rock will be on your right, about three miles away once you pass Miller Road. It is open from 5 a.m. to dusk daily.

This picnic area, located between the lake and the creek, features shade from trees, several picnic tables, a grill, a covered pavilion, a trash can, a water fountain and nearby restrooms.

A stone bridge connecting two portions of Flat Rock Park is reflected in the creek below.

HARRY POTTER AND THE HALF-BLOOD PRINCE

Voldemort is tightening his grip on both the muggle and wizarding worlds and Hogwarts is no longer the safe haven it once was. Harry suspects that dangers may even lie within the castle, but Dumbledore is more intent upon preparing him for the final battle that he knows is fast approaching. Together they work to find the key to unlock Voldemort's defenses. Meanwhile, the students are under attack from a very different adversary as teenage hormones rage across the ramparts. Harry finds himself more and more drawn to Ginny. Love is in the air, but tragedy lies ahead and Hogwarts may never be the same again.

The movie stars Daniel Radcliff, Emma Watson, Rupert Grint and Michael Gambon. It is rated PG for scary images, some violence, language and mild sensuality.

BRUNO

Brüno, a gay fashionista, is the host of the top-rated late night fashion show in any German-speaking country — apart from Germany. Brüno's mission? To become the biggest Austrian celebrity since Hitler. His strategy? To crisscross the globe in the hope of finding fame and love.

The film stars Sacha Baron Cohen and is rated R for pervasive strong and crude sexual content, graphic nudity and language.

I LOVE YOU, BETH COOPER

A nerdy valedictorian proclaims his love for the hottest and most popular girl in school, Beth Cooper, during his graduation speech. Much to his surprise, Beth shows up at his door that very night and decides to show him the best night of his life.

The film stars Lauren London, Paul Rust and Hayden Panettiere. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language, teen drinking, drug references and brief violence.

ICE AGE: DAWN OF THE DINOSAURS

The subzero heroes are back. Scrat is still trying to nab the ever elusive nut, while maybe finding true love. Manny and Ellie await the birth of their mini-mammoth. Diego the saber toothed tiger wonders if he is growing too soft and Sid the sloth gets into trouble when he creates his own makeshift family by hijacking some dinosaur eggs.

On a mission to rescue the hapless Sid, the gang ventures into a mysterious underground world, where they have some close encounters with dinosaurs, battle flora and fauna, run amuck and meet a relentless, one eyed, dino-hunting weasel named Buck.

Ice Age stars the voices of Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary and Queen Latifah. It is rated PG for mild humor and peril.

TRANSFORMERS: REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

When Sam Witwicky discovers some crucial information about the Transformers' creation and their history on our planet, the Decepticons set out to catch him and pick his brain. Optimus Prime must join forces with armies from around the world in order to stage an epic battle against the Decepticons in Egypt.

Many secrets about both human and Cybertronian history are revealed amid spectacular clashes of robots against robots.

The movie stars Shia LaBeouf, Megan Fox, Josh Duhamel, Tyrese Gibson, John Turturro and Matthew Marsden. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action violence, language, crude and sexual material, and drug material.

PUBLIC ENEMIES

No one could stop John Dillinger and his gang. No jail could hold him. His charm and audacious jailbreaks endeared him to almost everyone — from his girlfriend Billie Frechette to an American public that had no sympathy for the banks that had plunged the country into the Depression.

But while the adventures of Dillinger's gang — later including Baby Face Nelson and Alvin Karpis — thrilled many, J. Edgar Hoover made Dillinger America's first Public Enemy No. 1 and sent in Melvin Purvis, the dashing "Clark Gable of the FBI."

However, Dillinger and his gang outwitted and outgunned Purvis' men in wild chases and shootouts. Only after importing a crew of Western ex-lawmen (newly baptized as agents) and orchestrating epic betrayals — from the infamous "Lady in Red" to the Chicago crime boss Frank Nitti — were Purvis, the FBI and their new crew of gunfighters able to close in on Dillinger.

Public Enemies stars Johnny Depp, Christian Bale and Marion Cotillard. It is rated R for gangster violence and some language.

MY SISTER'S KEEPER

Anna Fitzgerald has coped with her older sister's rare cancer her whole life, and served as a donor for her as long as she can remember. Although Anna has missed many opportunities in order to help her sister, she never resented it. But, when Anna discovers she was conceived to keep her sister alive, she goes to court in hopes of freeing herself and earning the chance to live her own life.

My Sister's Keeper stars Cameron Diaz, Abigail Breslin, Alec Baldwin, Jason Patric and Joan Cusack. It is rated PG-13 for mature thematic content, disturbing images, sensuality, language and teen drinking.

THE PROPOSAL

When Margaret, a high-powered book editor, faces deportation to her native Canada, she declares she's engaged to Andrew, her put-upon assistant who she has tormented for years. Andrew agrees to the charade, but with several conditions. So, the couple head to Alaska to meet his quirky family, where Margaret finds herself in one fish-out-of-water situation after another.

With a wedding in the works and an immigration official on their tails, Margaret and Andrew reluctantly stick to their plan, despite its consequences.

The Proposal stars Sandra Bullock, Ryan Reynolds, Mary Steenburgen and Craig T. Nelson. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content, nudity and language.

Top engineer praises MCOE progress

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The Army's chief engineer got an update on the future Maneuver Center of Excellence and toured several facilities during a recent visit to Fort Benning.

LTG Robert L. Van Antwerp, commanding general for the Army Corps of Engineers, said projects now under construction are either ahead of or on schedule to meet deadlines within Base Realignment and Closure initiatives.

"We are keeping a very close eye on BRAC projects supporting the MCOE and move of the Armor School to Fort Benning," he said. "There is great progress being made in the construction currently ongoing. We are getting great bids enabling the Maneuver Center of Excellence to get full scope on their projects.

Woman pleads guilty to arson in OSJA fire

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

The woman who started the fire that destroyed one of Fort Benning's oldest buildings, which housed the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, pleaded guilty to arson July 15.

Shwana T. Pierce, 31, entered the guilty plea in federal court before Judge Clay Land. She faces a minimum sentence of five years imprisonment up to a maximum sentence of 20 years, $250,000 fine, plus three years of supervised release. There is no parole in the federal system.

Pierce, who once worked in the building, started the fire Feb. 6.

According to a press release from the Department of Justice, Pierce broke a window to enter the building, pouring gasoline in different places in the building and placing piles of paper on some desks. She placed two propane gas bottles inside the building. Then she used a butane lighter to light the gasoline-soaked parts of the building and left.

The building, originally a creamery built in 1915 for the Bussey plantation, was completely destroyed. It was valued at nearly $10 million.

The sentencing date has not been set.

'Sex Signals' show tackles dating, stereotypes

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

The creators of "Sex Signals" promise their sex talk will be anything but traditional.

Fort Benning's Family Advocacy Sexual Assault Program in partnership with the Army Substance Abuse Program and Installation Equal Opportunity Office will host "Sex Signals" Aug. 3-4 and 6-7 at the Benning Conference Center.

"Sex Signals," a 90-minute program created by Catharsis Productions, tackles the taboo of sexual discussion, gender stereotypes and the truth about acquaintance rape.

The program is made up of interactive skits dealing with topics of dating, rape and the core issue of consent.

The program, created by Gail Stern and Christian Murphy, uses improvisational comedy and audience interaction to address stereotypes men and women hold about one another as well as unrealistic fantasies, social pressures and power inequity that contribute to dating tension.

Kristin Molinaro
Ben Murrie and Amber Benson square off in performing the Sex Signals Tour at Fort Hood in 2008. Murrie and Benson use audience participation, skits and on-stage antics to break down stereotypes and expectations to help the sexes communicate better.

"It's important to approach Soldiers in a way they can relate to. Comedy is a universal language and it is a nonthreatening way to discuss a serious issue," said Yvonne Wilbanks, chief of ASAP.

The "Sex Signals" tour kicked off at Fort Hood, Texas, in 2008 and has been incorporated into the Army's "I. A.M. Strong" sexual assault prevention campaign.

The tour offers a change of pace for Soldiers who often conduct annual prevention of sexual assault training via power point slides, said Becky Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager.

"Soldiers will come away with a different viewpoint," said Welch, who attended the show during the Army Sexual Assault Prevention and Risk Reduction Summit in 2008.

Attending the show counts toward mandatory training requirements for prevention of sexual assault, prevention of sexual harassment and substance abuse education, said SFC David DeLuca, Installation EO officer.

The show will perform at 9 a.m. and 11 a.m. daily and is open to military and civilian personnel.

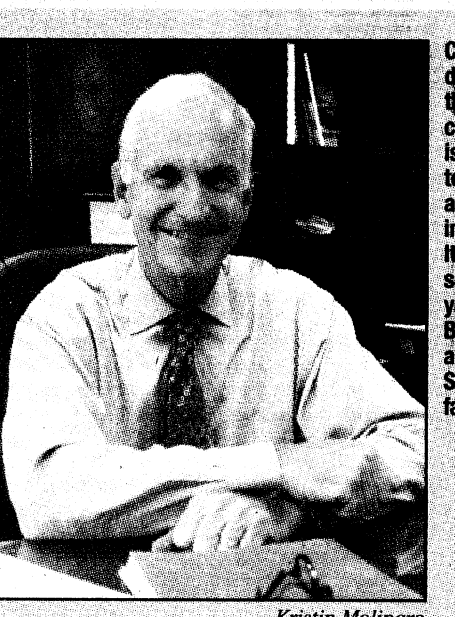
To request seating, call Michelle Fonseca, FAP Sexual Assault Response Coordinator, at 706-545-8740 or Eleanor Bentson, FAP Victim's Advocate, at 706-545-7594.

Walls bids farewell to Fort Benning

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Deputy garrison commander Chuck Walls isn't ready to leave.

"I'm still packing things up and finishing paperwork. I probably won't leave this office until I have to get on the plane," Walls said.



After 20 years serving Soldiers and families at Fort Benning, Walls will be taking on a new assignment in Vicenza, Italy.

"It's very hard to go," Walls said. "It's not where I'm going, but where I am coming from that makes this tough. I prefer being in the middle of something, making things happen, than dealing with this departure business."

Walls joined the Army in 1976 as an Armor officer. He served in a variety of command and staff positions in Kansas, Virginia, Germany, England and Georgia before retiring in 1996. After his retirement, Walls became the venue staffing manager for the women's fast pitch softball competition hosted in Columbus during the 1996 summer Olympics. In November of the same year, Walls was hired as the deputy to the garrison commander for Fort Benning and began a long career serving the post and its surrounding communities.

"I've seen Columbus and Fort Benning grow enormously in the last 20 years," he said. "This job gets into your blood. I wake up in the morning and I'm excited

I just got done at a water park, and I've been doing a hockey camp and spending time with family and friends. And getting ready for school. I'm just hanging with my friends before summer ends, because there are, like, 10 high schools we can all go to and we've already picked them. Hardly anyone is going to mine —Hardaway. We meet for lunch, hang at each other's houses, come to the pool, because when school starts we'll all make new friends and we probably won't be friends with the same group of people. We'll just have more friends to hang out with.

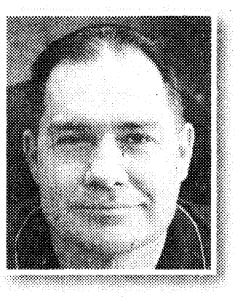
Already time for school?



Vince Little
THE BAYONET

This just in: Next year's "back to school" sales around town will kick off during spring break.

Do kids really go back to school Aug. 6? Are you kidding me?

No doubt, there are parents around the tricommunity who marked the date weeks ago and have no issues with the launch date. They're surely eager for a, um, break.

I graduated from Henry County High School in McDonough, Ga., a long time ago, more than two decades to be exact. But the mere thought of returning to school that early — with so much swimming, baseball, late nights and unadulterated fun left in the summer — seems unfathomable. I never went back until after Labor Day.

August or September, one thing's a guarantee. It's always cold the morning of that first school day. It might have been 95 for a high the previous afternoon, but I felt like grabbing a blanket or huddling up next to the fireplace the second I rolled out of my bunk bed.

I've certainly spotted some other changes since I slammed my school locker for the last time.

Kids today all have backpacks. The little ones cram their books and supplies into tiny suitcases and roll them to school.

And teenagers? Appearance remains the only priority, right? I'm convinced there are some nowadays whose greatest fear in life is walking out in public and not having enough fold in the bill of their cap.

In my day, books and folders were always tucked under my left hand and balanced on the hip — during each leg of that walk through the snow, uphill in both directions, of course.

In 2009, students don't leave home without a cell phone, iPod or MP3 player. In some cases, it's all of the above, packaged neatly into a BlackBerry.

Today, kids in the classroom text and tweet — whatever the latter is. I got no problem with it. I just wish someone could come up with a better name.

I had it much tougher, but managed somehow to get by.

Back in the 1980s, we marked up our notebooks and tried to slip handwritten notes to each other without getting caught by the teacher.

My parents even covered my textbooks in paper bag scraps, which offered another outlet for scribbling.

I recall getting a Walkman radio for Christmas, but it never left the house. In high school, I learned to type on an electronic typewriter and never used a word processor till my junior year. Didn't even hear about the Internet until the late 1990s.

But even when school got back in session, I couldn't wait to race home and head outside. Growing up in the country just south of Atlanta, we peddled around on our bikes, then graduated to go carts, motorcycles and mopeds later on.

Each fall and winter, we played basketball until dark, then used a street light in the driveway till our parents screamed at us to come inside for dinner. When spring rolled around, it was time to dust off that baseball glove again.

Kids nowadays still race home, but only to plop down in front of Xbox, the PC or Nintendo. (Don't get me wrong. We had Atari — but it always took a backseat.)

No matter the decade, or how you and your child approach this new school year, the blueprint for success is still the same. Play hard, work harder.

Take full advantage of the opportunities that await in and outside the classroom. Life is what you make of it.

Benning schools the best

Bridgett Siter
THE BAYONET

Welcome back.

Or perhaps I should simply say, "Welcome," since nearly 25 percent of you have children entering Fort Benning schools for the first time.

Welcome to Fort Benning, home of the Infantry and the best doggone schools in the world.

That's a pretty bodacious statement? I stand by it.

Fort Benning schools restored this former home-school mom's faith in organized education. I've been to "the dark side" — public school systems where my third-grader was taught the finer points of "alternative lifestyles" and my son's principal said, "No, ma'am, we cannot make any exception for any child. They must all be treated alike."

You see, at that time, Jacob was struggling with the early diagnosis of a visual perception deficiency, which is a technical way of saying his eyes saw one thing, his brain saw another. Kinda like dyslexia.

That meant Jake needed a few special considerations to succeed in school — nothing complicated or difficult. A spot near the front or the class, preferably near a window, since he reads best under natural light. And he used a tinted overlay on all his worksheets "to make the words behave."

Ahhh, but that was too much to ask of a rigid cookie-cutter, by-the-book school system.

Disheartened and frustrated, we turned to home schooling, perhaps the best decision we ever made. It forced my husband and I to take complete responsibility for our children's education. We dug deep within ourselves to determine our educational values.

It was obvious to us, of course, that our children are all very different, and therefore they learn in different ways and have unique needs.

We wanted a school system that recognizes every child as an individual. One that is willing to make an exception to rote practice when it serves the child best. One that puts children first and allows, even welcomes, our presence and our involvement in our children's education.

A pretty tall order, I admit, and one I didn't figure to fill anytime soon.

Then we moved to Fort Benning, and the rest is home-schooled history.

"Of course we can accommodate Jacob. That's what we're here for, the children," the principal said, and I knew we'd found a "home" school, one that shares our values and understands that every child comes with unique needs.

My job as a reporter has taken me into every Fort Benning school time and time again. I've found my children's school to be a rule rather than the exception.

We're blessed with a school system that exemplifies the very best DoDEA has to offer, and it starts at the top, with the superintendent, and includes a cracker-jack team of principals, teachers, paraprofessionals and support staff.

They're the best.

SPC Isaac "Chip" Johnson, a Georgia National Guardsman from Columbus killed in Afghanistan earlier this month, was laid to rest Friday.

Johnson was one of four Soldiers who died July 6 when a roadside bomb exploded near their vehicle in Konduz, Afghanistan. The 2003 Spencer High School graduate had been assigned to the Rome-based 1st Battalion, 108th Reconnaissance, Surveillance and Target Acquisition Squadron. He was 24.

Another Georgia native, SGT Brock Chavers, 25, of Bulloch, also was killed in the attack, according to the Defense Department. He belonged to 2nd Battalion, 121st Infantry Regiment, out of Americus, Ga.

More than 400 people attended Johnson's funeral at the Cusseta Church of Christ, the Columbus Ledger-Enquirer reported. He was buried at Fort Mitchell National Cemetery in Alabama.

"This young man has rendered great service to our country," minister Elliott Glasgow said, according to the newspaper. "It is better to die for something than to live for nothing."

Johnson's body was flown to Columbus Metropolitan Airport via charter jet on July 16.

About 30 family members and friends openly wept as his flag-draped casket emerged from the plane and was lowered to the tarmac.

Members of a motorcycle group called the Patriot Guard Riders brandished American flags, stood at attention and saluted. They later escorted the hearse to a local funeral home.

Two dozen Soldiers, including an honor guard from Fort Gillem, Ga., also attended the somber homecoming.

"It's good to know the Soldiers are behind him," said SGT Sam Bennett of the honor guard detail. "We're one big family."

Bennett has taken part in about 10 returns involving U.S. troops killed in the war on terrorism, and it's always a powerful experience, he said.

"We honor the fallen Soldiers. It's what we do," he said. "It's hard to see something like that happen to a 24-year-old, but he died for our country and our freedom.

"It's very emotional (but) someone has to honor these Soldiers. We don't want to forget them."

USAIS names three instructors of the quarter

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The U.S. Army Infantry School and Fort Benning named its top instructors for the third quarter.

The junior enlisted honoree is SSG Robbi Stanton of B Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion, at Camp Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga. SFC Stephen Stancil of A Company, 6th Ranger Training Battalion, at Camp Rudder on Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., earned the senior enlisted nod.

CPT Nate Smith, a senior platoon trainer with A Company, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment — which teaches the Infantry Officer Basic Course — was selected best instructor in the officer category.

MG Michael Ferriter, Fort Benning's commanding general, will recognize all three Friday during a ceremony and breakfast at the Benning Conference Center.

"It's a pretty good feeling," Stanton said of his selection. "Hard work and dedication definitely paid off. I always try to be professional toward my students and peers … You've got to be willing to put forth effort and go that extra mile."

Stanton

Stanton has been assigned to Fort Benning for eight of his nine years in the Army. He's been with the 5th Ranger Training Battalion at Camp Merrill since June 2006.

In January 2008, Stanton became a Ranger instructor with B Company, where he teaches mountaineering skills and dismounted patrols.

For part of this year, however, teacher became student at the Army Mountain Warfare School in Jericho, Vt., where he was a distinguished honor graduate of the winter phase and honor graduate during the summer session.

"Mountaineering and outdoors stuff are things I've been doing since I grew up. It's second nature to me," said the Salt Lake City native. "But at the end of the day, you realize you're definitely making an impact on these (Ranger students) out there. You've got to stay fresh and keep focused."

Stanton went to Iraq and Afghanistan twice each as a member of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. He also completed a yearlong deployment to Iraq with 1st Battalion, 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment, out of Fort Irwin, Calif.

Right now, he's attending the Maneuver Advanced Noncommissioned Officer Course at Fort Benning and will finish Aug. 18. This fall, he reports to a new assignment with the 4th Infantry Division at Fort Carson, Colo.

Stanton said he's working toward an online degree in global security and intelligence from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. He also just re-enlisted.

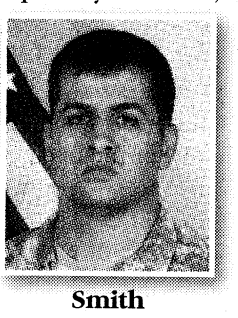
He said he hopes to become a first sergeant for an Infantry company and would like to pin on sergeant major before reaching the 20-year mark in his military career.

Stancil

"I'm definitely in it for the long haul," Stanton said.

Stancil, meanwhile, mentors and coaches students in "small, critical combat techniques (within) a very tough, stressful environment" during the Florida phase of Ranger School, he said. He's served at Camp Rudder for the past 14 months.

"It is a great honor to be selected amongst so many other great instructors who have not only been there but those that are stationed at Fort Benning, too," Stancil said. "It really came as a surprise. I have had other Ranger instructor buddies of mine who I look up to that have won this award, and now I am part of that group. I always strive to go above the standard when the standard is set."



Patience is a critical component of his job, he said.

"You have to realize that not all Soldiers know all the battle drills and classes that we teach," he said. "We teach it every cycle so it's like a clock for us. And also putting 45 to 50 Soldiers together within a week and having them work as a platoon and knowing each Ranger's capabilities is tough."

Stancil, of San Diego, has been in the Army for 16 years. He deployed to Iraq from January 2007 to March 2008.

"My success has been the result of outstanding leadership from when I was a private all the way through till now," he said. "I have been lucky enough to have great platoon sergeants, first sergeants and command sergeants major who have taught and led in great ways."

Winning the award among officer instructors wasn't a major priority for Smith, he said. He just wanted to teach his class and continue the mission.

Smith

"It's an honor. I feel surprised and appreciative," he said. "I know my students, and I have a good relationship. You know, it feels good. I'm not going to rest my laurels on it, but it's a nice thing to feel appreciated."

Smith was commissioned in May 2004 after graduating from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. He arrived at Fort Benning two years ago to complete the Maneuver Captains Career Course. In December 2007, he assumed his current position.

"Captain Smith brings endless optimism to training and then spreads that optimism to his Soldiers," said MAJ Mariano Wecer, his company commander. "He is just a great trainer to be around."

Smith said he instructs lieutenants with different backgrounds and experience levels. Some are straight out of college while others are former NCOs. Striking a balance can be challenging, he said.

"I try to be approachable and fairly easygoing, but at the same time, you have to set the standard," he said. "I try to provide them some realistic expectations of what they're going to face in the Army. That's how I set my benchmark for success. Are they more ready to lead Soldiers than I was when I was a lieutenant?"

Smith praised his own NCO team for "pulling a lot of the weight" on various tasks and allowing him to focus on teaching and interacting with the lieutenants.

"I'm successful in my job because of the hard work of my NCOS. They carry the burden, and they make my job easy," he said.

From October 2005 to September 2006, Smith deployed to Iraq with 2nd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division (Assault). He said he'd like to become a company commander in his next assignment and lead Soldiers in combat.

He's taking online courses for his master's degree in business administration from American Military University. Ultimately, Smith hopes to work as an instructor at West Point, he said.

Stanton, Stancil and Smith now have an opportunity to compete for USAIS Instructor of the Year. Each recipient of the quarterly honor also receives a certificate of achievement, USAIS plaque, Army and Air Force Exchange Service gift certificate, and merchandise from Ranger Joe's and Commando's Military Supplies.

Housing expands at Camp Merrill

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Military family housing options recently doubled for Soldiers at Camp Merrill in Dahlonega, Ga., with the expansion of Porter Village.

Thirty-seven new homes were completed last month and are ready for Ranger families. Porter Village also received a swimming pool, cabana, playground and basketball court, said Mike Douglass, project manager for Clark Realty Capital, the developer and builder for Fort Benning Family Communities LLC.

A ribbon-cutting celebration was held June 12 at the new Flohr Pool. COL Doug Flohr, the Ranger Training Brigade commander and former 5th Ranger Training Battalion commander; LTC Kyle Lear, the previous battalion commander; and LTC Chris Stone, the new commander, attended the opening.

It's part of the Army's Residential Communities Initiative, a 50-year effort to turn government-owned housing over to the private sector, post housing officials said. The program is currently in the fourth year of a decade-long initial development plan.

"That 10-year period is when we're doing most of the new housing construction and renovations," said Keith Lovejoy, RCI program manager.

The $612 million initial development phase covers the demolition of 1,222 sets of quarters, construction of nearly 1,400 new homes, and renovation of more than 2,550 historic and nonhistoric homes on Fort Benning and at Camp Merrill.

Camp Merrill is home to the 5th Ranger Training Battalion — with Porter Village about 12 miles away in the city of Dahlonega.

Douglass said the Army built 40 houses at Porter Village in 1995. The relatively small community includes a mix of enlisted Soldiers and officers.

"It's a nice spot to be," Douglass said. "The big benefit was getting more Ranger families together, living in the same neighborhood, their children able to go to the same schools and a shorter drive from home to Camp Merrill than from other surrounding communities."

Clark Realty spent about $6 million on the 37 new homes and other upgrades at Porter, he said.

Lovejoy said the project illustrates the commitment to improve housing for Soldiers and families.

The new units at Porter Village are ENERGY STAR-certified, a design aimed at protecting the environment through enhanced energy efficiency. Some homes include decks and all feature three or four bedrooms, two-and-a-half baths, modernized kitchens, new appliances and two-vehicle garages.

In a mass exit, 30 Soldiers jump from doors on both sides of the aircraft. The jumps are staggered by instructors aboard the aircraft to prevent Soldiers from having in-air collisions.

Cadet Bernard Wheeler (right) and PV2 Daniel Shirer boarded a C-130 Tuesday for their first jump with combat equipment. "I was nervous," Wheeler said. "But you've got to be tough to be Airborne."

Airborne students take to the skies

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Hundreds of Soldiers dropped out of the skies above Fort Benning this week in a bid to earn their wings.

Airborne School students with B Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, parachuted from C-130s into clear skies above the Chattahoochee Valley Monday through Wednesday for the ultimate test of their skills.

To earn the title of Airborne Soldier, each student must complete a total of five jumps by week's end.

Of the nearly 525 Soldiers that began training July 6, only 424 made it into the final week, said CPT Winston Nabors, B Company commander.

The Soldiers who remain are those who have overcome their fears, worked hard and are determined to finish, he said.

To graduate, each Soldier must complete five parachute jumps onto Fryar Field Drop Zone, two with combat equipment and three "Hollywood-style," with only the parachute and reserve.

"My first jump was both terrifying and peaceful," said PV2 Daniel Shirer. "When I looked out through the door of the aircraft, my first thought was 'wow, I've never been this high.' It was scary. But by the second jump I wasn't afraid anymore."

There's fear but you trust the leadership, training and equipment to get you through it, said CPT Justin Zevenbergen, another student with B Company.

After getting the first two jumps under their belt, the students are generally more confident, Nabors said.

"The students start off with two 'Hollywood-style' jumps early on to get them familiar with jumping from 1,250 feet," he said. "The combat jump is a bit more complicated because of the equipment they must carry."

The Soldiers conducted their final 'Hollywood' jump and a night combat jump Wednesday.

Night jumps are not as difficult as they sound, said LTC Jon Ring, battalion commander, who jumped with the troops Tuesday.

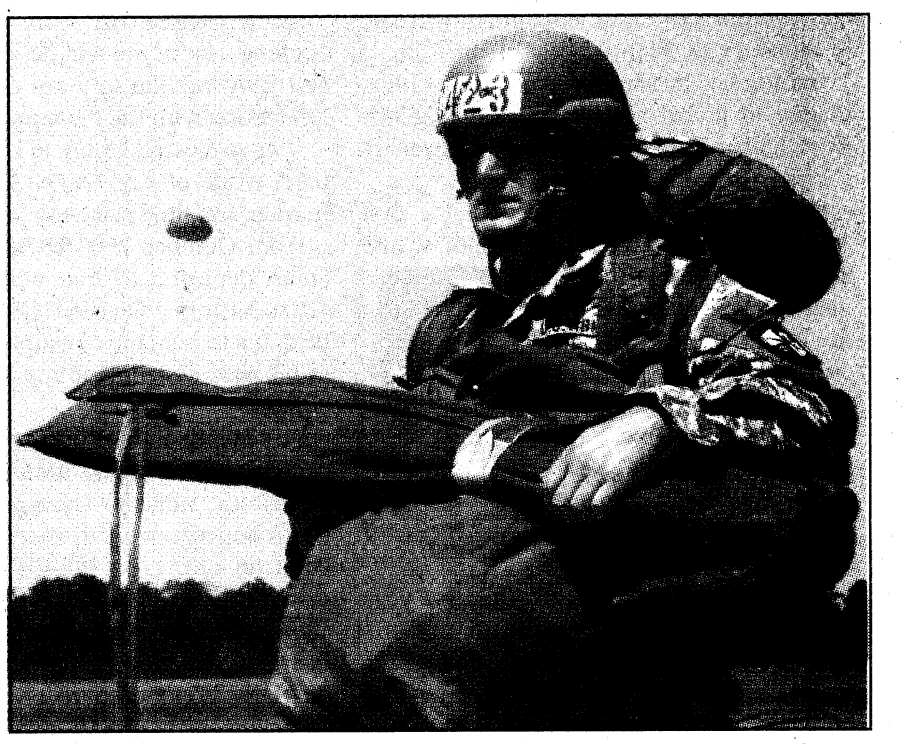
"Students generally land better at night because they can't see the ground. It comes as a surprise to them, and it should be a surprise," Ring said. "When students anticipate a landing, they tend to tense up and that can lead to injuries."

As B company students prepared for their last jump Wednesday, CPT Daniel Hankes said he looked forward to the final test of his abilities.

"I feel anxious, apprehensive and excited," Hankes said.

Cadet Ema Gondkavska said that as with her previous four jumps, she didn't feel nervous about the last one, just determined.

"I couldn't believe my stomach didn't turn inside out when I looked out the door of the plane on my first jump. I wasn't nervous; I was ready to go for it," she said.



Gondkavska is already looking ahead to a future hobby in skydiving.

"It feels great when you are up there, you don't want to land," she said.

"Black Hat" instructors SGT Aaron Eller and SSG Alex Iungerich push students out the door during a mass exit aboard a C-130 Tuesday. The yellow static lines pull the parachutes automatically once the students jump from the aircraft.

Cadet Garret Rinaman carries his equipment off the drop zone after landing at Fryar Field.

Memorial luncheon held in honor of 'Shifty' Powers

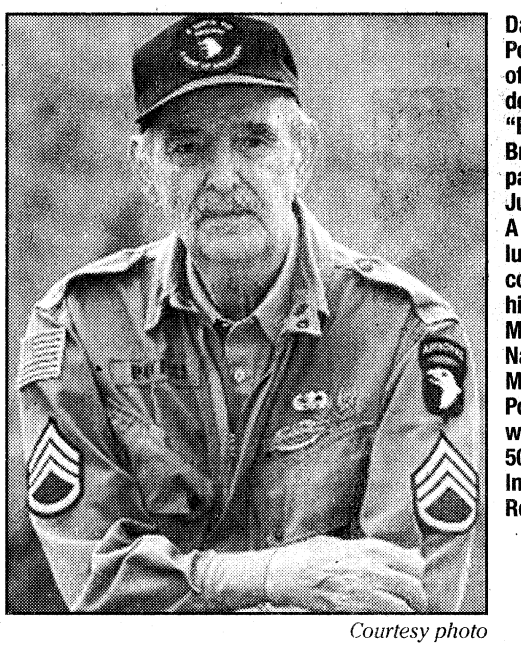
Vince Little
THE BAYONET

About 40 people attended a memorial luncheon Monday at the National Infantry Museum commemorating the life of Darrell "Shifty" Powers, who fought in World War II and gained fame in the company of Soldiers portrayed in HBO's "Band of Brothers."

Organizers said it grew out of a nationwide Internet effort to make July 20 a day of tribute to his memory and other fallen American military heroes.

"He was a true hero (and) a phenomenal guy, and there are many like him," said Bob West, a retired Army sergeant major who works as a project manager for Lockheed Martin. "These are legends from the greatest generation, who are passing from our midst very quickly. This is our answer to the call and our way to honor them."

Powers died June 17 in Bristol, Tenn., after a bout with cancer, according to his obituary, posted on the Bristol Herald Courier's Web site. He was 86.



He volunteered for the Airborne corps in World War II. After five training jumps at Camp Toccoa in North Georgia, he dropped behind enemy lines during the Normandy invasion on D-Day.

Powers served with E Company, also known as Easy Company, of the 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment, part of the 101st Airborne Division. He participated in all of the unit's battles against the Germans in France and Belgium, including Operation Market Garden, Battle of the Bulge and the capture of Hitler's Eagles Nest.

In the HBO miniseries produced by Tom Hanks and Stephen Spielberg, his character appears in all 10 episodes and Powers himself is interviewed in several of them.

"Today, we honor another fallen hero of a dying generation," said Erin Willcox, a Lockheed Martin administrative assistant who also spent time in the Army and planned Monday's event. "As former Soldiers, (we) share a deep passion for informing and reminding present and future generations of the selfless sacrifices that past generations of military personnel have made for their country."

Monday's luncheon featured video footage, photo presentations and historical accounts of the "Band of Brothers" and the 506th Parachute Infantry Regiment's training sessions at Camp Toccoa.

Deputy: Appreciates garrison team to go to work. It's not a job, it's a way of life."

The deputy garrison commander supervises 14 directors who support the installation base structure. The directors are responsible for personnel, budget, law enforcement, safety, logistics, engineering, transportation, environment, contracting, communications, recreation facilities, childcare and other installation services.

"So much of what we do is 'invisible' such as training support to all our units such as making sure air conditioners are running and our dining facilities open on time," Walls said.

Walls said in his time at Fort Benning he encouraged directors to be visionary rather than reactionary when planning projects.

"We don't want to go back after we constructed something and wish we'd done something different during the planning stages," he said. "I appreciate the entire garrison team. We've got so many strong directors in charge that my role was only to keep everything on track, plug in information and be there to support them. When we started, the garrison was three people, a secretary and a driver. We've now grown to a robust organization that can meet any challenge."

> "When we started, the garrison was three people, a secretary and a driver. We've now grown to a robust organization that can meet any challenge."
> — Chuck Walls

While Walls prefers to downplay his role, local leaders such as LTG (R) Carmen Cavezza said his absence would be felt.

"He will be missed, just like any key leaders," Cavezza said. "The void will be filled but there will be a gap for a while."

Cavezza said he first met Walls while serving as the post's commander in 1990.

After working together during the 1996 summer Olympics, Cavezza continued to collaborate with Walls on projects.

"He was a key staff person for Fort Benning when you wanted to get something done," said Cavezza, who now serves as the executive director of the Cunningham Center for Leadership Development at Columbus State University. "He's not out for glory, he's out to get the job done."

Walls said he is proud of the preparation done by the installation for BRAC and bringing the Armor School to Fort Benning.

He said he is also proud of the effort and work put in to effecting the land swap with Columbus and especially proud of his role with the new National Infantry Museum.

Other accomplishments he recalled during his tenure included raising money for the Combined Federal Campaign, building a strong garrison team that works well with the command, working under 11 commanding generals and seven garrison commanders.

"I don't look at them as 'my' accomplishments, they are the organization's accomplishments," said Walls, giving credit to the directors, various agencies and staff involved in these projects.

With 20 years of accomplishments under his belt, Walls said it is tough to single out one to be most proud of. But if he had to choose one, it would be helping families.

"You can work large construction projects but helping a family is truly the most rewarding," he said. "I believe I'm leaving the installation in good hands with my replacement, George Steuber. He will do great things for Fort Benning."

In a few weeks, Walls and wife, Terry, will be headed to Italy and will remember fondly their time at Fort Benning.

"When we got here in 1989, we never dreamed where we'd end up," he said. I've had great folks to work with since I got here. I've been blessed."

Fair: Provides info to Soldiers

the new Post 9/11 GI Bill, which allows eligible troops to transfer education benefits to family members.

Military personnel from all branches who register at the downtown Atlanta Marriot Marquis Hotel in uniform will be admitted free to the education fair from 10:45 a.m. to 3 p.m. Wednesday. Adult family members accompanied by a military sponsor also are welcome to attend at no charge. Lunch will be provided.

"The goal of the fair is to give the military unique access to the specialized Worldwide Education Symposium exhibits," Zernick said. "I hope it will motivate them to work toward attaining some form of higher education — either a college degree or technical certification — while at the same time improving their chances for advancement."

The Education Symposium takes place every three years. Zernick, who attended the 2006 event in Orlando, Fla., said the fair is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity he hopes many Fort Benning Soldiers take advantage of.

"I learned so much while walking through the exhibit hall and it had a lasting impact on me," Zernick said. "At the least you will walk out with a lot of Frisbees and pens, but I think it will motivate (service members) to complete whatever program of study may be of interest to them. I promise it'll be well worth the trip."

MCOE: To be fully operational by September 2011 the progress in barracks, family housing and the new headquarters facility."

In the next four years, the post is scheduled to complete $3.5 billion in construction, most of it aimed at creating the MCOE, which will merge Fort Benning's Infantry Center with the Armor Center and School from Fort Knox, Ky. It's set to become fully operational by September 2011.

A total of $1 billion in construction is under way and another $1 billion in projects will be awarded to contractors by year's end.

On July 16, COL Frederick Wolf, the deputy garrison commander for transformation, briefed Van Antwerp on MCOE developments.

"We laid out the impact the Maneuver Center of Excellence is going to have on Fort Benning and the timeline for when the facilities will be ready for those units," Wolf said. "It's critical for us to be prepared for the Armor School to be able to train here in two years. We re-emphasized the importance of that program. He supports that and is confident his team is going to be able to deliver."

When awarding future military construction contracts, Fort Benning officials want to include provisions allowing for better integration of furnishings, equipment and furniture into buildings and facilities, Wolf said, adding the general pledged to help coordinate such arrangements.

"That would help us deliver a fully functional facility," Wolf said. "It will be an easier turnover for the end user."

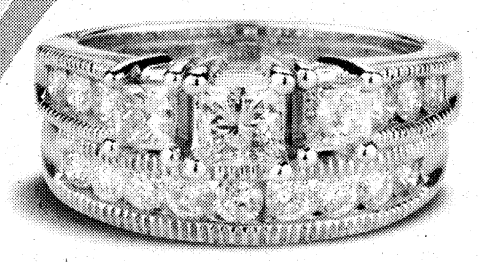
Van Antwerp said all new facilities across the installation are being built to Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design silver standards, incorporating sustainability and environmental measures into the engineering and construction.

"I was very impressed by how the MCOE has organized for mission success," he said. "They have already worked a number of 'virtual' organizational changes to take advantage of the Infantry and Armor synergies."

The Corps is managing its largest military construction program ever, said DeDe Cordell, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Washington.

Between fiscal years 2006 and 2013, it will execute $67.5 billion in military construction, including $44.6 billion for the Army.

"To meet the Army's construction demand, the Corps is transforming its military construction delivery process," she said. "This will allow the Corps to provide quality, adaptable and sustainable facilities in 30 percent less time and at 15 percent lower cost."



Cordell said that is being accomplished through improved master planning, a more reliable funding system, using all types of construction techniques and expanding manufactured building solutions.

Under the streamlined process, facilities will have a service life of 50 years, she said.

Benning club wins at Junior Olympics B2

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Armstrong moves to second place

Lance Armstrong moved second place after Stage 16 of the Tour de France, but on Wednesday fell to fourth place overall. The final stage, the 21st, will determine the winner on Sunday.

It would be a welcome sight to see Armstrong win another title after coming out of retirement.

Cink floats to victory

It should have been Tom Watson's sixth British Open Championship win Sunday in Turnberry, Scotland. It just wasn't meant to be, though. Watson three-putted on the 18th hole for a bogey, which forced a four-hole playoff with Stewart Cink. Cink beat Watson by six strokes in those playoff holes.

If you really care ...

Because I really don't care what Brett Favre's "decision" to play or not to play will end up being. Favre has said he'll make a decision by Thursday whether or not he'll play this season for the Minnesota Vikings. Sources say he'll make the decision as soon as today. Favre has said it all depends on how his throwing arm feels after having surgery on it.

NASCAR returns

After a weekend off, NASCAR will head to Indianapolis Motor Speedway for the Brickyard 400. Coverage starts at 12:30 p.m. and will be on ESPN for the next six races.

Thank goodness for ESPN coverage, because TNT's coverage was as awful as ever.

Waiting on Goodell

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell won't say when disgraced quarterback Michael Vick will be reinstated to the NFL.

Vick, who served 23 months on a dogfighting conviction, was released from home confinement Tuesday.

I'm personally OK with Vick never playing in the NFL again, but that's me speaking more as a dog lover than football fan.

From athlete to pimp

Every week there are athletes who make you shake your head and say, "You can't make this up."

From the "you can't make this up" department, Olympic taekwondo hopeful Logan Campbell of New Zealand has opened a brothel to finance his trip to London.

Yes, that's right, a brothel. Campbell has said he will need about $200,000 to pay for his coach and a doctor to travel, train and compete before the Olympics.

His solution? Instead of breaking his parents' back with the cost, I guess he has decided to break the backs of his employees.

So much for Olympic values.

Wood Bats pitcher focuses on future

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Jacob Fox, Columbus Wood Bats pitcher and son of Maneuver Career Captains Course CPT Donald Fox, has traveled far distances to be where he is at today — and still has quite a distance to go to reach his ultimate goal of being a major league pitcher.

"I started playing Tee-ball when I was little in Florida and have been in Columbus since I was 11. I have basically been playing since I was in diapers."

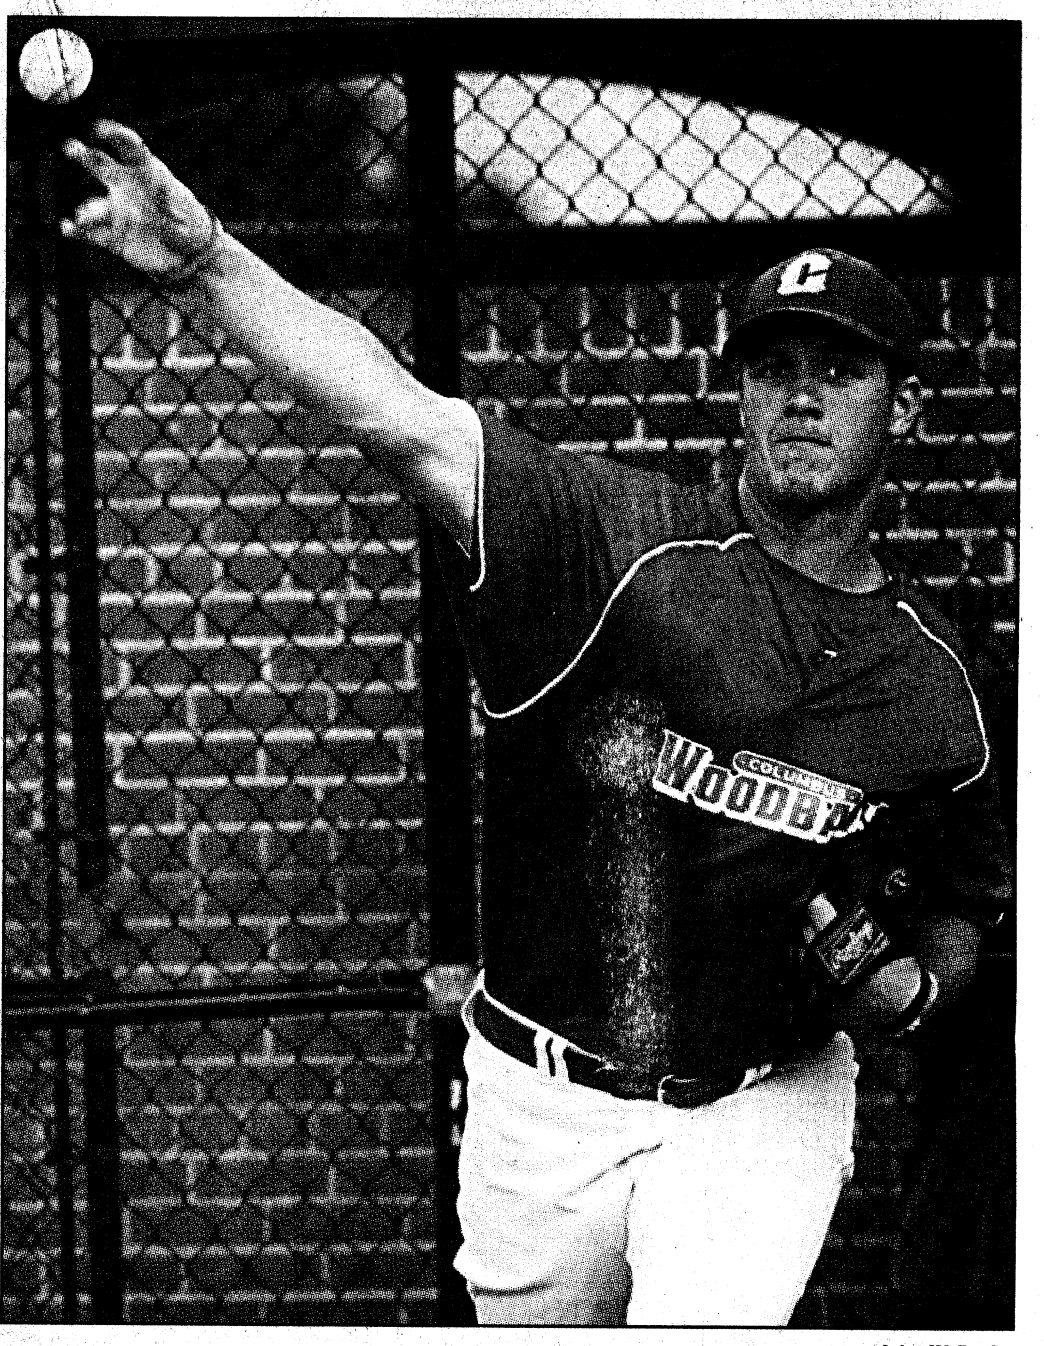
As a member of the Columbus High School baseball team, Fox was a part of the two CHS state championship teams in 2004 and 2005, he said.

"We lost the championship my junior and senior year," he said. "That (high school) was a good experience though."

Fox said some of his high school teammates who are currently playing at the college and professional level.

Although his father is in the Army, Fox said being a military child hasn't affected his ability to play or his father's attendance at most of his games.

"He coached me when he had a chance to (growing up) and he has come to pretty much all of my games in high school," he said. "During high school he was in a nondeployable unit, then he deployed last year when I went off to college. He just got back from Iraq in February."



Following high school, Fox said he was recruited by colleges more for football as a tight end, but decided to pursue baseball. Ultimately, Fox found his way to Chattahoochee Valley Community College and continued his career in baseball as a pitcher for the Pirates after transferring from Jackson State Community College in Jackson, Tenn.

"I pitched about 20 innings with CVCC and my ERA was somewhere around 4.00 to 4.50," he said.

Although Fox is preparing to transfer to West Georgia College, it was CVCC where he met his current coaches, Wood Bats head coach Adam Thomas and assistant coach Dash Oneill.

"Coach Thomas and coach Oneill were my coaches at Chattahoochee Valley ... they called me and asked if I would be interested in playing summer ball ... I

Rugby clubs battle at Benning

Rachel L. Watkins

Six rugby clubs from Atlanta, Daytona Beach, Fla., New Orleans and Little Rock, Ark., made their way to Stewart-Watson Field Saturday to compete in the USA Rugby South Seven's Championship, a qualifier for the USA Rugby Seven's Championships Aug. 15-16 in San Francisco.

"This is a very competitive championship," said Ray Davis, assistant event coordinator of the Columbus-Fort Benning Rugby Club. "The teams competing are the best rugby teams in the south and the top two advance to the nationals."

Old White Team One, from Atlanta, took home first place, defeating Life, from Life University, 19-0 in the championship finals. New Orleans took third, defeating Daytona Beach, Fla., 22-12. Old White Team One and Life earned spots in the USA Rugby Seven's Championships.

"We came out a little rusty — this was a good warm-up game," said Old White Team One's Chris Kombo after the first of four games in a game against Little Rock, Ark. "We'll just take one game at a time and go from there."

Old White Team One defeated Little Rock, Ark., 19-0.

Old White Team One's coach, Caleb Tanui, said his team could have done better in the first game of the championships.

"I think we need to improve on handling the ball in the next game," he said. "The other team played good defensively. I know we'll do better in the next game."

Tanui has been playing rugby for 10 years and said he likes the intensity of it. Tanui said he isn't worried about the rough sport without pads.

"I'm not afraid of getting hit," he said. "You learn how to land safely and the rules protect the players."

Jeff Reuther, who plays and coaches for the New Orleans team, has been playing rugby for 15 years. He said rugby is a sport that takes endurance and concentration.

"It's a non-stop sport. You have to have a focused aggression," he said. "You don't want to be wild out there. You want to anticipate where the ball is going next and make a plan to be where you need to be."

Reuther who has been playing the sport since he was 13, said he likes rugby because it's a combination of soccer, basketball and football.

Reuther said rugby is a growing sport in the United States.

"It's like soccer was 10 years ago," he said. "Rugby is offered at some high school and middle school levels, but there is a lot more room for the sport to grow."

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach expects dedication, discipline

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Dedication, discipline, respect and 100 percent effort is what SSG Armando Ayala expects from shooters.

He is coach and director of the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club.

"If shooters want to do well at the sport, that's what it takes to win," Ayala said. "I can have a shooter that has natural talent with a very high aptitude to do well, but without dedication, that shooter won't be able to advance. It takes a lot more than natural talent to be a competitive shooter."

Ayala said it's hard to find shooters at the high school level who are dedicated to the sport because of the time and effort it takes, he said. But he is happy with the dedication of his members.

The junior club competes in the precision air rifle class against teams from across the nation in Civilian Marksmanship Program and USA Shooting Championships.

Ayala has been coaching the club part time for the past three years and began coaching full time in January. He has been shooting with the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit for 15

Four shooters from the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club took first place in the precision class team competition July 6 at the National Junior Olympic Air Rifle Championship at Camp Perry, Ohio.

Jimmie Cooper, Forrest Klien, Andrea Vautrin and Breanna Kasl competed against 31 clubs from around the nation for the win. Fort Benning had a total score of 4,670, a 27-point lead over second-ranked Lincoln Rifle Club of California which scored 4,643.

Shooters competed individually and as a team firing 20 shots each in the prone, kneeling and standing position during the two-day competition.

"The team has been working hard for this," said Vautrin, a senior at Chattahoochee County High School. "No matter what match we are competing in, we try to do our best and place. I knew we had a good chance to place first but I wasn't sure."

Vautrin placed sixth in the individual precision shooting class with a score of 1,282.1 after competing in the finals.

"I was really happy my last shot in the finals was a 10.9," she said. "The whole time, I was thinking, 'don't concentrate on the people behind you, but on shooting and think 10,10,10. Do what you have to do and shoot.'"

Kasl, daughter of SSG Misty and Carl Cazee and a senior at Chattahoochee County High School, said she had the jitters the first day of the event.

"I was nervous the first day," she said. "It was our first time in a competition away from our home range and we were competing with the big dogs — the top shooters in the United States. I was scared I wouldn't be able to hold my rifle straight."

Kasl was off to a rocky start her first day of the championship, but she improved on the second day, she said.

"What kept me going was my teammates encouraging me," she said. "I ended up setting a new personal best of 584 on the second day. I think I could have done better, but I was ecstatic when I found out I made 584."

Kasl, who wears a necklace with the word "determined" engraved on it as a good-luck charm, said she practiced at her home range five days a week, eight hours a day for this championship. Kasl came in 55th with a score of 1,158.

Cooper came in 19th with a score of 1,169 and Klien came in 31st with a score of 1,164.

SSG Armando Ayala, who coaches the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club, said he wasn't surprised the shooters did so well at the competition.

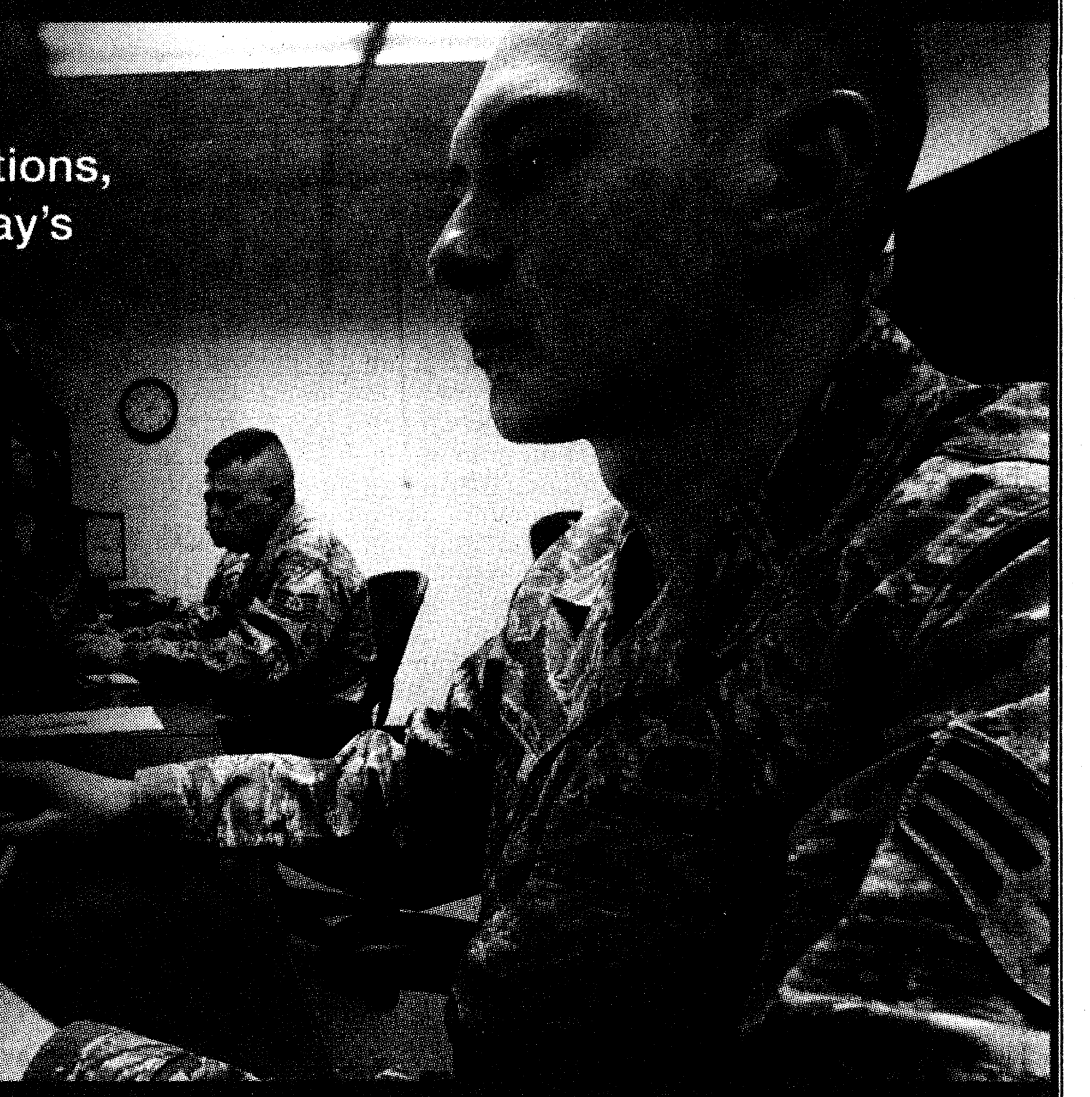
"I knew they were going to do well," he said. "They committed themselves to training for this event and they are dedicated to shooting."

Ayala put the shooters through a strict training regiment, which included shooting two rounds of 60 shots in prone, standing and kneeling positions five days a week for three weeks.

"I made the training so they would build their endurance up so they would be prepared when it came time for the championship," he said.

Although Ayala wasn't allowed to coach while the shooters were on the line, he did have meetings with them prior to the matches.

"I told them on the first day to be confident and if things aren't going well, don't shoot with fear. Don't feel like performance is controlling you," he said. "On the second day, I told them to be confident and don't be too anxious to finish. Don't rush just to finish shooting. It's not about finishing. It's about accuracy and performance."



In addition to gold medals, the Benning club will add the air rifle they won, valued at around $1,700, Ayala said, to their collection.

Denise Martin of Spokane Junior Rifle Club, Washington, took home the individual precision win with a score of 1,292.4 after competing in the finals. Spanish Springs High School took the scholastic first-place precision win with a combined score of 4,594.

In the sporter class, William Eades III of C.E. Byrd High School JROTC, Louisiana, took the individual win with a score of 1,208.1. Zion Benton High School NJROTC of Illinois took the first place sporter scholastic team win, scoring 4,299 and Lafayette Club of Virginia took the first-place club win, scoring 4,347.

I'm heading in the right direction

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The weeks are winding down to my wedding and to the end of the boot camp I'm attending at Smith Fitness Center.

This was my third week at boot camp and I have good news to report. We had our body fat weigh-ins Tuesday and I am heading in the right direction. In two weeks, I have lost four-and-one-half percent body fat. That makes me want to sing and dance around my office, down the street and in the gym — but I will restrain myself. Ordinarily, I would celebrate by eating something really fattening and delicious, like cake or doughnuts, but instead, I celebrated by eating watermelon. It's good to know working out six days a week and eating healthy is actually doing good. I just need to keep doing what I'm doing and I will be good to go.

The workouts are getting more and more adventurous as the weeks go by. Tuesday, we did 10 different drills. After I finished, I thought I just went through the course on Ninja Warrior. It was definitely a good workout. It included everything from lifting a sand log and working out with resistance bands to doing leg squats, pushups and kicks. We learned a new exercise, too — hand walking. It's what some people call the wheel barrow. After Tuesday, I won't look at that exercise as being easy ever again.

Just when my fellow boot campers and I thought the workout was over, we did front, back and sideway sprints.

I woke up Wednesday morning with sore muscles.

Every Tuesday and Thursday I go into class knowing I'll be exhausted at the end, but I know there are other people with me who are going through the same thing. That encourages me to stick with it.

I'm getting used to eating chicken, veggies, fruit and protein shakes, but I have to admit when someone eats candy, pizza or cookies, I am tempted. Luckily, there is a voice in my head that tells me, "You don't need that."

The nutrition plan includes eating six meals a day. The ideal meal for the plan is a piece of lean meat such as turkey or chicken, fat (pecans, almonds or olive oil) and vegetables. High-fructose corn syrup and vegetable oil are not encouraged. Neither is red meat — too bad, because I love a big juicy burger with all the toppings.

I'm working on eating the correct amount of calories for my body weight and the amount of exercise I do. The calorie count is different for everyone.

I'm actually falling short of the 1,900 calories I am supposed to eat every day. It's not easy to eat 1,900 calories of healthy food. The upside to eating six times a day is that I get to eat practically the whole day and I am never starving.

Eric Dempsey, the boot camp instructor and a certified personal fitness trainer, said we have to eat a certain amount of calories because if we eat less, we'll be burning lean body mass, including muscle. In order to lose body fat, Dempsey said we have to follow both the nutrition and exercise plan.

I'm going to keep working on my calories, but in the meantime, I'm curious and excited to see what exercises we will do next week.

Want to attend boot camp? The next session begins Aug. 4.

The class meets from 9:15-10:15 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday at Smith Fitness Center. Participants are given nutrition and cardio plans to use outside of class.

The cost is $120 per monthlong session. The cost is $60 for those who get a friend to sign up. The participant who loses the most body fat in a session gets another monthlong session free. For more information, e-mail Lori.Smith6@us.army.mil.

Fox: Credits Dad for teaching knowledge of game was working at the time and said 'Yeah, I will come out and play," he said.

Fox said playing on the Wood Bats has been a positive experience and has reunited him with players he has played with before — and players he has played against.

"It's been pretty cool ... seeing players I have played with and against, and seeing all the Soldiers who come to the game," Fox said. "The biggest thing when I go to school in the fall is I will be ready to go. I won't have to get back in the groove of things. When I step on the campus at West Georgia, I will be ready to pitch right off the bat."

Fox said he has been both a starting and relief pitcher and has been both for the Wood Bats, but prefers being a starter.

"I like to know when I am going to pitch and be able to settle down (into a rotation)," he said. "But, I have been mainly a reliever during my career and probably better in relief."

Fox said no one would mistake his fastball for one thrown by Roger Clemens, but it's been clocked around 88 mph.

"I am definitely not the most talented, but I know the game," he said. "Knowing the game, I give myself a chance. I know how to pitch and know what to do and have a game plan with what I am trying to get done. I think that is what helps me the most."

When asked who was his baseball idol while he was growing up, Fox didn't pick a professional baseball pitcher, it was someone much closer to home.

"I would have to say it was my Dad," Fox said. "He taught me everything. Since I was little and even now, we still talk baseball. He has been my biggest inspiration and idol in baseball.

"If I had to pick a professional player, it would probably be Greg Maddux," he said. "My style of pitching is a lot like his. He changes his speed and movement versus blowing past somebody. I don't have a Clemens fastball, I just try to do what I can with what I have."

If Fox is able to parlay his lifetime of playing baseball into a professional career, the road will not be easy, he said, but he will use his experiences to continue to be around the game he loves.

"I want to finish out my college career playing for West Georgia, pitch a lot, and if I don't get to go pro, I want to coach after I am done playing ball," he said. "I hope to play professional ball one day, but the chances are slim. It's not impossible and I hope I get that opportunity."

years, and shoots in the International Rifle section. Ayala received his first BB gun when he was 6 years old.

"I loved to hunt growing up and I shot all kinds of stuff including bugs and lizards," he said.

As a freshman in high school, Ayala landed a spot on his school's shooting team and later went to college on a shooting scholarship. He was recruited by USAMU out of college. He has shot in countries including China, Russia, Germany, Italy, Spain, Croatia and Argentina and has taught shooting clinics to youth around the United States.

His job, as a coach, is to set up the youth shooters for success, he said.

"I want to make sure they are heading in the right direction," he said. "I want to be a good role model for them like my coaches were to me. I believe I can help them become better shooters and better citizens."

Ayala said the best part of coaching is seeing the shooters develop their skills and getting motivated about shooting.

"It feels good to know that I am helping them learn and grow in the sport," he said.

The team took first place July 6 at the National Junior Olympic Air Rifle Championship at Camp Perry, Ohio. Up next for the team is the Champion of Champions in August at Fort Benning.

Valley championship.

"This is a championship for all amateur golfers of any skill level whether it's beginner or expert," Jacobson said. "You don't have to be a member of a golf club to participate."

In 2008, 100 golfers participated in the event. This year, Jacobson said he expects 120.

Unlike its predecessor which was open to residents in Columbus and Phenix City, Jacobson said the aim is to also get players from Fort Benning, LaGrange and Cusseta, Ga., and Auburn and Opelika, Ala., and other cities in the Chattahoochee Valley.

The two-day event includes 36 holes of stroke play. It'll be based on individual stroke play and flighted after the first round. The first day will be at Maple Ridge Golf Club with the second day at the Green Island Country Club.

The entry fee is $130 and includes cart fees, range balls, a gift and lunch on both days of the event. Players can practice Aug. 10-14 for $35 on either course.

Prizes will be awarded to first through six places in each flight with prizes ranging from $100 to $300.

Advance payment is required. Registration is open until Aug. 10.

To register or for more information, go to any tricommunity golf club, go to www.golfmapleridge.com or call Maple Ridge at 706-569-0966.

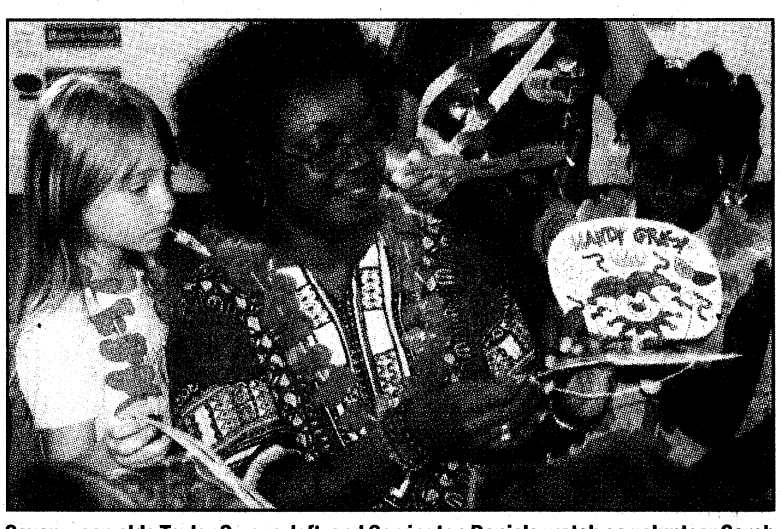
Camp Courage

Summer program allows children to experience food, music, crafts of different countries

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET



More than 75 children in Camp Courage, a post summer camp, explored international cultures Friday at Patch Hall.

"You didn't have to take a plane or anything, said 10-year-old Christian Haywood, who attended the camp the last four summers.

"I got a passport, just like in real life. You have to have a passport to go to tropical islands, Africa (and) China," he said. "I would like to travel because of the way it looks here," at camp.

Children ages 6 to 10 discovered countries such as Japan, Mexico and Italy through diverse mediums. They sampled food, looked at displays featuring different flags and languages, made crafts, listened to music and took part in dancing and martial arts demonstrations.

"I'm trying to bring a little creativity and diversity," said James Traylor Jr., a pre-K assistant teacher at the Main Post Child Development Center who coordinated the event.

"A lot of parents can't afford to go around the world and travel, so we're trying to bring it in smaller increments into this cafeteria," he said. "We want these children to learn, but we want them to learn without sitting and listening to a lecture. This is a way we're going to sneak in some learning without them actually knowing about it."

"I loved it," said 9-year-old Kaniya Johnson. "It felt like I was traveling around the world. I bought a mask, a pouch, a purse and a Chinese fan. It's like souvenirs."

Felicia McCord, director of School Age Services, said she would like to have the international day again next year

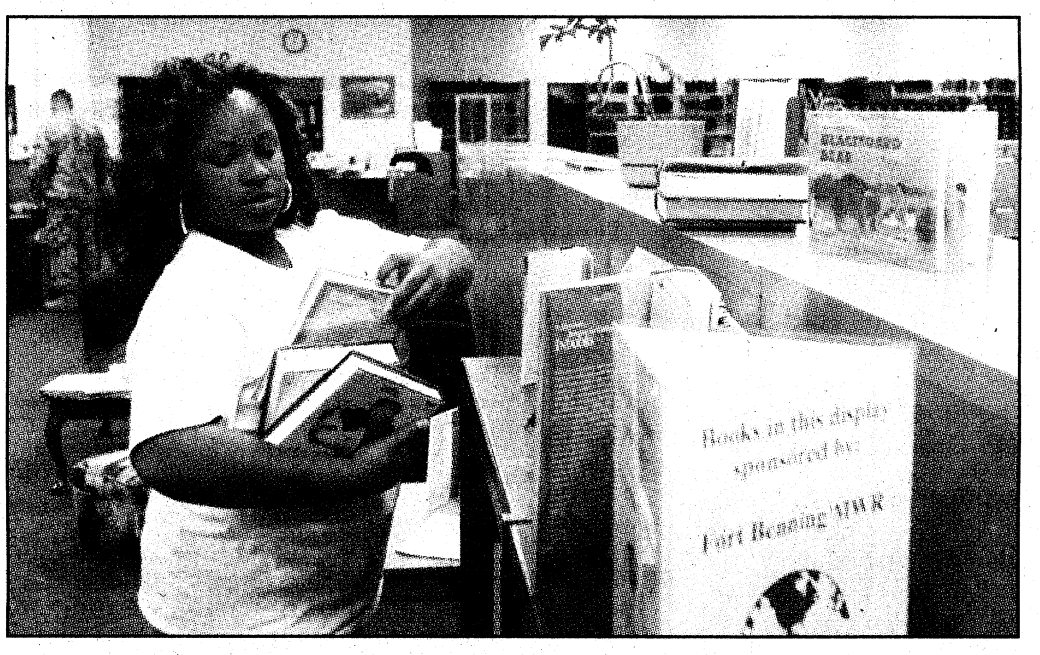
Families find Donovan library's new location 'convenient'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Donovan Research Library has a new look.



Located near the commissary and the Pins & Daubers Bingo Hall on Marne Road, the library has a more open floor plan, compared with its previous location in Infantry Hall. It also has new books for recreational reading.

People will be surprised, said Ericka Loze-Hudson, the library director. The library is airy and open with a wider variety of books and more space for reading or group studies.

Loze-Hudson decided to partner with Sayers Memorial Library on Main Post earlier this year to build a small collection of fiction and nonfiction books, since more families were visiting Donovan in its new location, she said.

Besides the research literature, magazines, war movies and newspapers that were part of the regular collection, the library has added mysteries, romances, how-to books, children's stories, audio books and The New York Times bestsellers.

During the school year, Donovan hosts kids' story times with the Parent to Parent program.

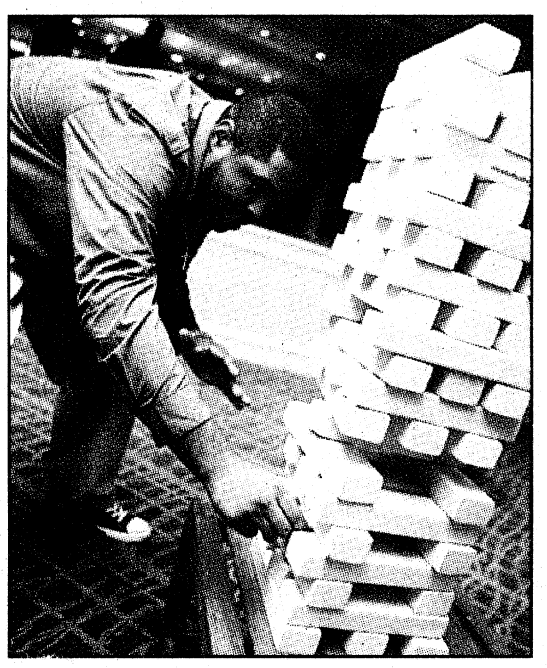
Cheryl Rodewig

Rashondra Dotson, a summer assistant at the Donovan Research Library, reshelves books in the recreational reading collection, which includes cookbooks, children's stories, pop fiction and several other genres.

Finding the library would be "right in the heart" of shopping on post was a pleasant surprise, said Rebecca Hodne, who PCSed to Fort Benning two weeks ago. Hodne visited the library Monday with her three daughters, Lauren, Kristen and Carolyn.

"It worked out really well for us. We're actually on our way to the commissary," Hodne said.

"I have three avid readers. My kindergartner was very happy to find a Dr. Seuss book. My fourth-grader was excited to find a book about women who fly. My fifth-grader found one that she liked as well, a book by an author she recognized."



Hodne said she will definitely return to the library, where the staff is helpful and the selection and location are convenient. Tiffany Alsup, who works at the Java Café, visits the library nearly every day.

> "It's quiet. It's relaxing, and if you want to just sit and read a book, you've got a lot of area. ... You can come in here and just take time to breathe."

"I come here on my lunch breaks and use the computers and the newspapers," she said. "It's quiet. It's relaxing, and if you want to just sit and read a book, you've got a lot of area. It's huge. You can come in here and just take time to breathe."

In its new location, the library averages more than 300 visitors per day, including students, civilians who work nearby and family members, Loze-Hudson said.

Vincent Cooper removes a block from a "Jumbo Jenga" tower at a PlayDate in Atlanta. Randalette Barnes attended PlayDate Atlanta to get an idea of what the evening offers, she said, before bringing the event to Columbus.

PlayDate hosts game night for professional adults

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

A new entertainment venue is coming to the tricommunity. It's called PlayDate Columbus, and it's not a play club for children or a singles scene for hooking up — those are the two most common misconceptions, said Randalette Barnes, the owner of PlayDate Columbus.

If PlayDate Columbus is about one thing, it's about games, she said.

"We've got Hungry, Hungry Hippo, checkers, chess, Uno, Connect Four, Candyland: all of the kids' games we grew up with. It's a chance to just get in touch with that inner child I think we all have and just play," Barnes said. "A game night is an interactive event. You have to laugh; you have to talk. There's going to be camaraderie; there's going to be some competition. It's that kind of environment. You get to let your guard down, take off that professional persona all of us have to wear from time to time and relax."

PlayDate began in Atlanta in 2005, launched by a marketing and event management company, Timeless Entertainment Concepts. Since then, it has branched out to more than 20 cities across the U.S. The venue aims at attracting mature, professional adults in their mid-20s to mid-50s for a night of stress-free and sometimes nostalgic entertainment with friends.

Hosted by Barnes' event planning company, Southern Girl Entertainment, LLC, and Clear Channel Radio, the Columbus event will be held from 8 p.m. to midnight tonight at the Doubletree Hotel, 5351 Sidney Simons Boulevard, Columbus. Barnes said she plans to make PlayDate Columbus a monthly affair.

A $10 cover charge includes all the games — from Taboo, Rock 'Em Sock 'Em Robots, Wii and Pac-man to Jumbo Jenga blocks, hula hoops and Twister — food and music, Barnes said.

Barnes said she understands the importance of keeping the party clean and safe. There will be some off-duty police officers on site, and the party will never be held in a compromised location, she said.

To keep costs low, the events are staffed by volunteers, people like Dr. Precious Evans who will help the festivities run smoothly throughout the night.

Evans is a mother of three, including a recent Airborne School graduate and a National Guardsman. PlayDate is a perfect night out for people like her, she said, who aren't interested in the club scene but still want to have fun.

"I'm excited ... the food, the fun, the fellowship. Everybody should come," she said. "It's wonderful, clean fun. They will have an awesome time."

International day: Teaches acceptance

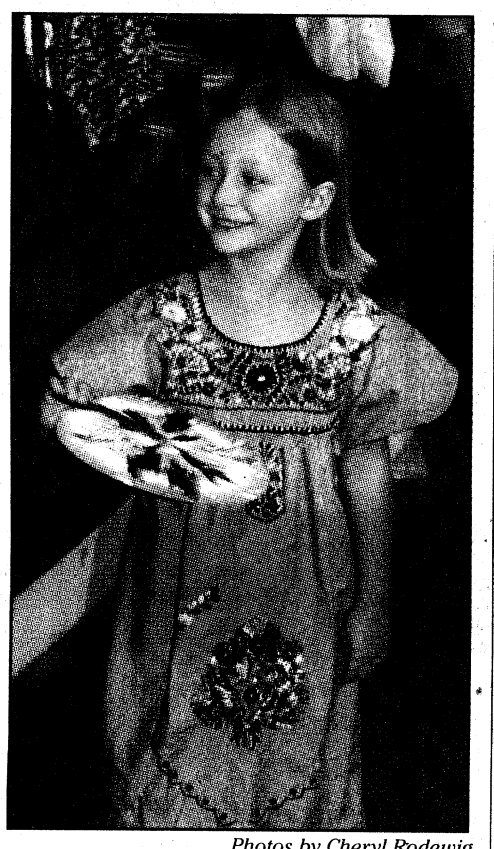
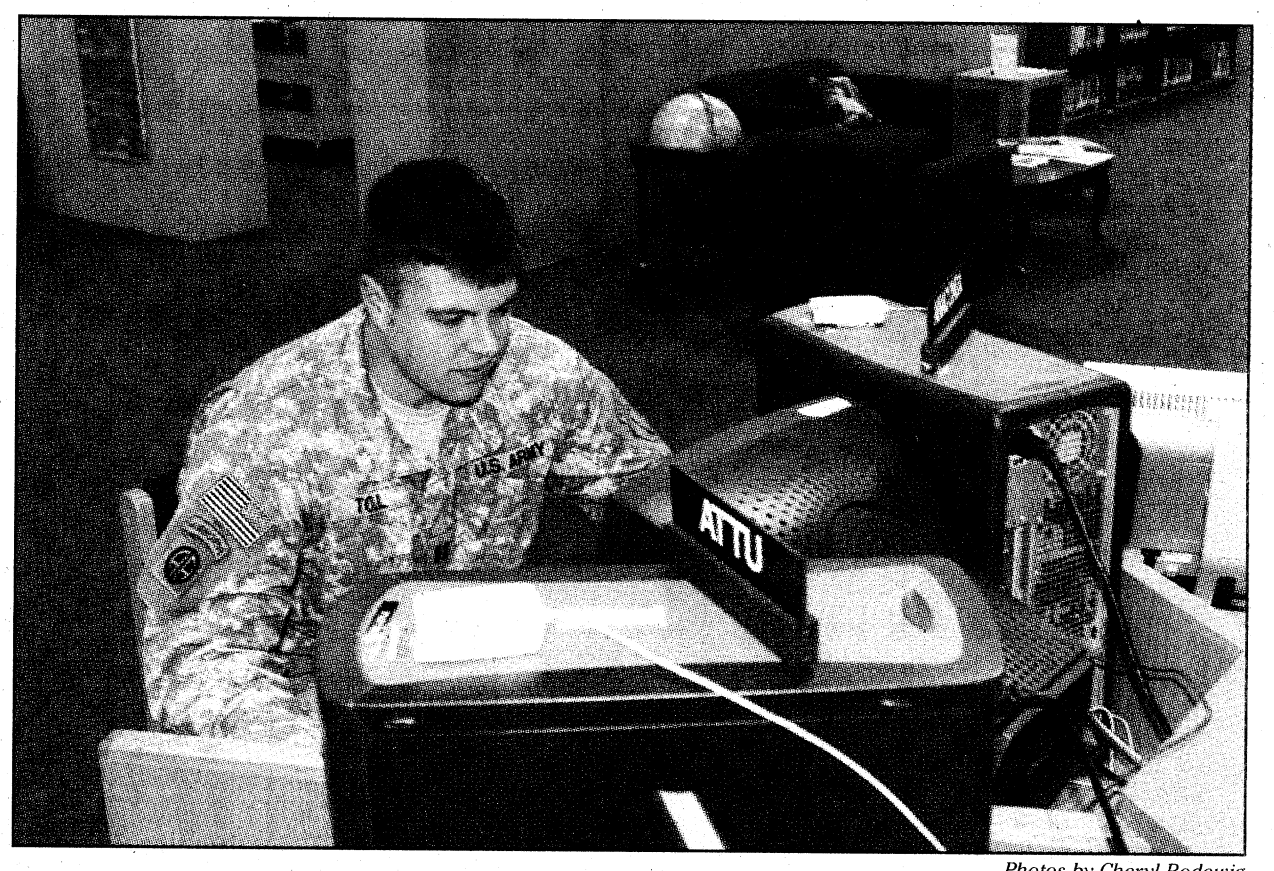
at Camp Courage.



"This will be a learning experience where they realize all cultures are acceptable, and they can experience that hands-on today," McCord said.

"They actually get to try on the clothing. They actually get to taste the foods. I think this will be an experience they never forget."

"You can learn a lot," 10-year-old Chyna Easterling said.



"I learned Mancala — the game I usually play — comes from Africa," she said.

"It's really good to learn about different countries when you're younger so you'll know about them throughout your life. (International day) was exciting and educational at the same time. That's what I like about it."

Library: Wins excellence award

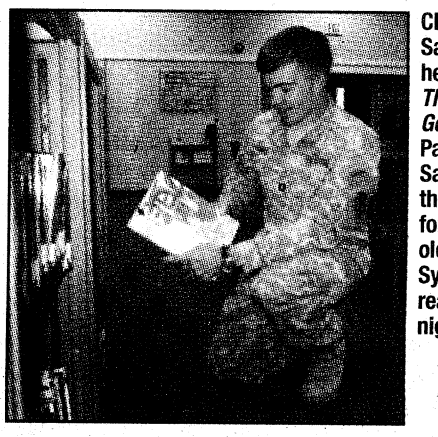
Donovan's success will be acknowledged Friday at the Fort Benning quarterly recognition of excellence breakfast where the staff will receive the Team of Excellence Award.

The Team of Excellence Award focuses on a specific process that the single organization has improved upon, said Janie Pearson, program manager for the excellence breakfast.

For the library, that process was the move from Infantry Hall to their swing space on Marne Road.



The move allowed staff to update and organize the permanent and 'circulating collections and expand their services with Fort Benning families in mind, Loze-Hudson said. The material is also more accessible since it is all located on one floor.

"It's indescribable until you come and see," she said. "Libraries are for everybody. We want everybody to come in."

The library is expected to be in their temporary location at the old PX, Building 9230, for the next two years.

To search the library's collection online visit https://www.infantry.army.mil/donovan. Library hours of operation are Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

For more information, call 706-545-5661 or e-mail the library's reference desk at DonovanRefDesk@conus.army.mil.

Satisfy hunger while saving money, calories

LTC Karen E. Hawkins
DECA

It's that time of day when your stomach starts growling. You feel hungry so you make your way to the vending machine for a quick energy boost. But there's a healthier way to satisfy your desire for a quick snack and watch the calories at the same time: make your very own 100-calorie snacks. It's easy to do with the variety of foods you can find at your commissary — all at savings that average 30 percent or more.

Snacks can be an important part of your diet by helping you get the nutrients you need, such as fiber and protein, to help you feel full longer and the carbohydrates you need for energy. To get the most out of snacking here are some ideas:

Try boxed popcorn with 100-calorie serving packages or pop your own light popcorn and bring a couple cups for a snack.

Make a snack mix with four cups of whole grain, high-fiber cereal (five grams fiber or more per serving), sliced almonds, 1/2 cup raisins, miniature marshmallows and 1/2 cup dark chocolate chips. One-half cup has about 100 calories, so watch the portion size.

Cut up broccoli, cauliflower, carrots, celery, peppers and squash on the weekend and portion it out for snacks during the week with two to three tablespoons of hummus per serving.

Some foods that make great 100-calorie snacks include:

- Four-ounce applesauce cups
- Fat-free pudding snack cups
- Four-ounce fruit cups, packed in fruit juice
- Two mini-size boxes of raisins

Fresh fruit with less than 100 calories per serving:

- Medium apple
- Small banana
- Medium peach
- Medium plum
- One-fourth cantaloupe
- Medium kiwi fruit
- One-half mango
- Medium orange
- One cup blueberries
- Sixteen grapes
- Sixteen strawberries
- Medium pear

Root out bad behaviors from bottom up

Chaplain (COT) Dan Hardin
1ST BATTALION, 29TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

Have you ever wondered, "Why do I behave the way I do? What I want to do, I don't do; but what I hate to do, I often find myself doing." If you have wondered that about yourself, you are in the company of many.

Saint Paul said the same thing about himself to a group of Christians living in Rome around 60 AD.

Often we want our behavior to change but feel powerless to do anything about it. Sometimes, recurrent patterns of dysfunction return within minutes or hours of when we last swore to ourselves to never do "that" again.

We could feel this way about eating, how we relate to our spouse or children, drug and alcohol usage, how we deal with our feelings, sexual misbehavior or any number of other habits that seem insurmountable. Given time, we often convince ourselves, "I guess this is my lot in life; I guess I was born this way. I'll just have to live with it and suffer in shame."

There is good news, though: there's a better way.

Paul wrote other words to the believers in Rome. He said, "Don't model yourselves on the behavior of the world around you, but let your behavior change, modeled by your new mind. This is the only way to discover the will of God and know what is good, what it is that God wants, what is the perfect thing to do" (Romans 12:2). In other words, don't try to change your belief system by addressing your behavior. Instead, address your belief system first and that will correct your behavior.

Here is the common scenario. Something bad happens to us, such as injury or abuse, so we, trying to make sense of what happened, begin to believe false things about ourselves — "I deserved it. I am now spoiled goods. I'll never recover from this wound."

The lies we believe generate a lot of emotional pain, anger, bitterness, resentment and grief. The pain hurts, so we turn to destructive patterns of behavior to ease the pain. It may be people pleasing, gambling, drug or alcohol abuse, sexual addictions or an obsession with performance. These dysfunctional behaviors spill over into our lives and can negatively affect it in places such as our marriages and families or work.

Often, we can see the things we do that we don't want to do and so can others around us. We tell ourselves — and so do others — "Stop that. Don't be a fool. Change your behavior before it destroys you." And in a way, that advice is true. But the way we go about it can be healthy or generate more pain.

If all we do is address the dysfunctional behaviors but never cut off all that is feeding it, then it will be only a matter of time before the weed returns to the surface of our lives in full force, but this time, stronger. This leads to further pain and our eventual ruin.

The healthy answer is found in addressing the wound and trauma, replacing the lies with truth and healing the emotional pain — thus cutting off the root of the dysfunctional behaviors from the bottom.

Wounds can range from childhood events to prolonged exposure to distress, as in combat, to relational events like divorce and adultery. The answer is still the same — a bottom-up approach that starts with the wound and works upward.

The place to start must include facing the wound, grieving the wound and releasing forgiveness. Without these, the wound will fester and entrench.

You can find healing for your wounds. You don't have to be enslaved by behaviors you hate. You can be free. You do not have to feel helpless.

Listen to the words of Isaiah: "The spirit of the sovereign Lord is on me, because the Lord has anointed me to preach good news to the poor. He has sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim freedom for the captives and release from darkness for the prisoners" (Isaiah 61).

Inner healing — binding up broken hearts — is God's business and is at the center of the gospel and teachings of Jesus Christ. (See Luke 4:16 for Jesus' first sermon topic.)

If you are hungry to be free and want to help others experience freedom from "the things you wish you didn't do," then be encouraged. There is help and hope.

Connect with our Family Life Chaplain's Training Center by calling 706-545-1760 or stopping by Building 2606 in Soldiers' Plaza.

They are trained to help, and the help is free. Alternatively, you can pick up a copy of Dr. Terry Wardle's book, Healing Care, Healing Prayer.

Choose to make positive steps toward wholeness. Your healing journey can begin right now.

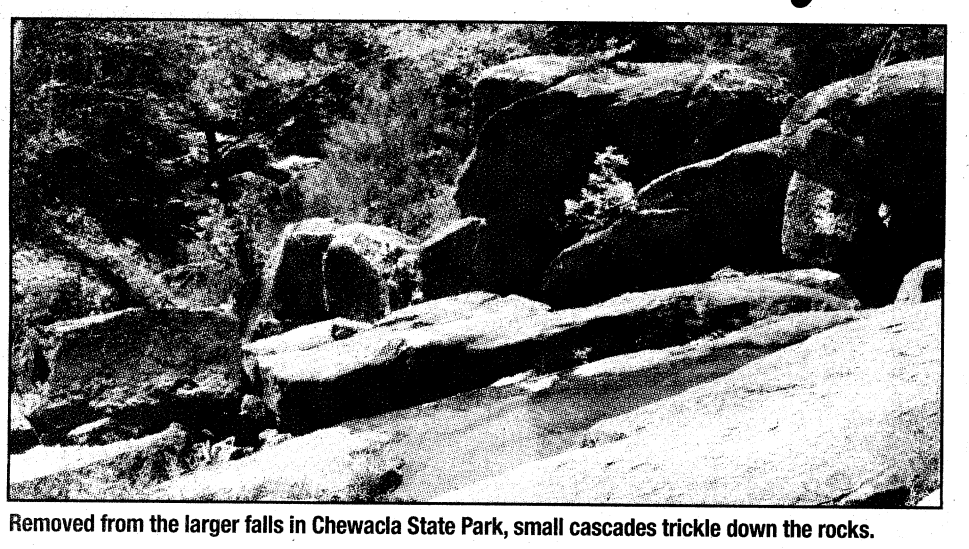
Corona, a mobile sculpture of polished and painted aluminum, adorns a corner near the entrance to the Susan Phillips Gardens and the Jule Collins Smith Museum of Fine Arts.



Several flowers, including azaleas that peak during the spring, bloom in Donald E. Davis Arboretum. The arboretum includes a butterfly garden, pond, small waterfall and several trails.

Three butterflies perch on flowers in a small butterfly garden Saturday at the Donald E. Davis Arboretum in Auburn, Ala.

Forget football, Auburn home to some of nature's best hideaways

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Removed from the larger falls in Chewacla State Park, small cascades trickle down the rocks.

If you think Auburn, Ala., only means football, think again. Saturday, I discovered a hidden waterfall, garden sculptures and miles of trails — all well worth an hour drive. For the nature-lover in all of us, there are at least four environmental havens within 10-miles of the city and you can visit all of them in a day.

My first stop was the 696-acre Chewacla State Park, which includes waterfalls, hiking trails, a 26-acre lake, fishing, swimming, playgrounds and camping facilities. The most popular site in the park is a man-made waterfall at the bottom of a steep hill.

To visit the falls, you can park in the lot at the top of the hill and take a short walk to the creek. For a better view, you may want to step into the creek bed or on top of some of the larger rocks.

The smaller falls are scalable and a veritable playground for the brave of heart and sure of foot. Other trails of note are the mountain biking trail, a short hike along the Boy Scout trail to the Civilian Conservation Corps stone bridge and a longer trip to a natural waterfall located closer to the entrance of the park.

Admission to the park, open from 7 a.m. to sundown, is $2 for adults on the weekdays and $3 on the weekend. For kids 6 to 11 and adults 62 or older, admission is $1. The park is 10 minutes south of Auburn and less than two miles from I-85. For more information, call 334-887-5621 or visit www.alapark.com and click on Chewacla State Park.

After the park, head north to Auburn University. On South College Street, you can visit the Jule Collins Smith Museum of Fine Arts and the Donald E. Davis Arboretum. The museum has manicured grounds, a pond, memorial garden and outdoor sculptures that dot the landscape. Inside, you will find nature captured in art, particularly paintings of birds.

The most moving exhibit for me, Dale Kennington's Subjective Mythologies, on display through Sept. 26, consisted of several folding screens painted with contrasting yet linked scenes. Each panel contains a hidden box with a written note inside. Cleverly concealed, the compartments blend with the painting. I couldn't find a single one.

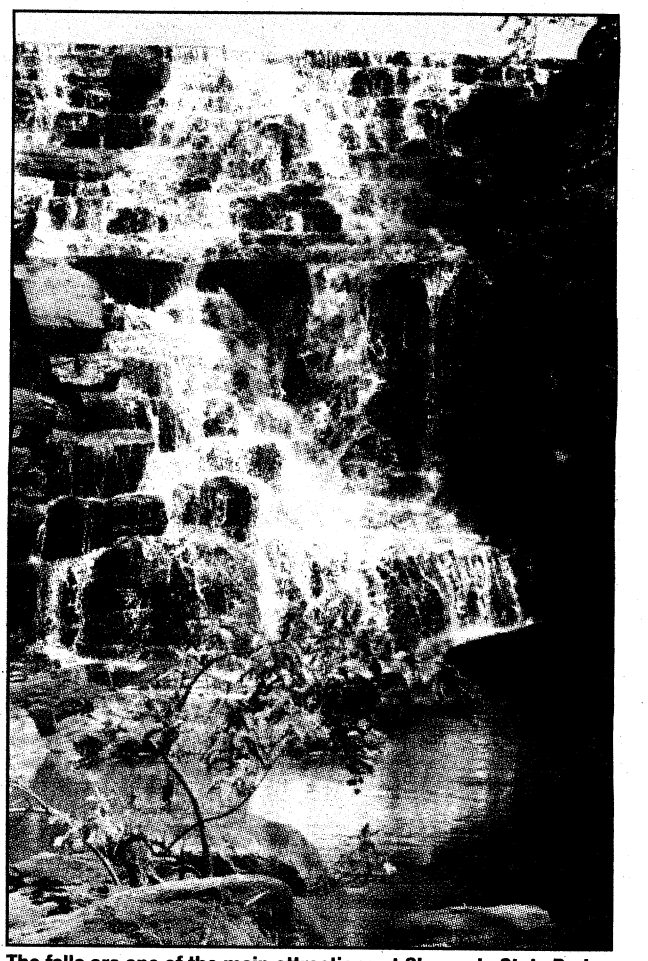
Admission to the museum is $5 for adults and $4 for seniors. It is open from 8:30 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Saturday. For details, go to http://jcsm.auburn.edu or call 334-844-1484.

Like the hidden boxes, the arboretum can also be a challenge to find. Look for a gate entering a green space located off Garden Drive, which intersects South College Street. Although it took some investigative driving after both GPS and Google Maps failed me, I eventually found the place.

Encompassing a variety of habitats, from wetlands to a vinery, the arboretum is devoted to cultivating native trees, shrubs and plants. The site is also home to more than 30 species of reptiles and amphibians along with several birds, fish and mammals.

My favorite species, however, was none of these. Rather it was some insects — the pretty ones with wings — butterflies. I have never been able to be so close to so many without a crowd of people around. Near a covered bench and miniature fountain in a secluded spot, a small gathering of flowers attracts dozens of butterflies that apparently have a limited fear of humans.

The 13 acres and two miles of trails at the arboretum allow plenty of space for picnicking, reading, walking or relaxing. There's no charge, and it's open daily from dawn to dusk.



For more information, call 334-844-5770 or visit www.auburn.edu/arboretum.

Less than five miles from the campus, another free excursion, the Louise Kreher Forest Ecology Preserve offers more space to wander with 100-plus acres and more than 20 trails.

The preserve features a "hidden" waterfall, pond, butterfly garden, reptile viewing area and an old homestead. It also offers several programs throughout the year. During the summer, discovery hikes on Thursday afternoons and summer walks on Tuesday and Thursday mornings are free and open to the public. No registration is needed, and the walks are canceled only if it rains.

For more information, visit https://fp.auburn.edu/preserve or call 334-707-6512.

All in all, Auburn offers a busy, healthy, nature-packed day for less than $10 per person. And football team preferences aside, you can't beat that.

The falls are one of the main attractions at Chewacla State Park.

Located off Hidden Falls Trail, this waterfall is near the middle of Louise Kreher Forest Ecology Preserve, an education outreach program of Auburn University.

OPENING THIS WEEK

G-FORCE

Armed with the latest high-tech spy equipment, a covert team of highly trained guinea pigs discover that the fate of the world is in their paws. Tapped for the G-FORCE are guinea pigs Darwin, the squad leader determined to succeed at all costs; Blaster, an outrageous weapons expert with tons of attitude and a love for all things extreme; and Juarez, a sexy martial arts pro; plus the literal fly-on-the-wall reconnaissance expert Mooch, and a star-nosed mole Speckles, the computer and information specialist.

G-Force stars the voices of Bill Nighy and Will Arnett. It is rated PG for some mild action and rude humor.

ORPHAN

The tragic loss of their unborn child has devastated Kate and John, taking a toll on both their marriage and Kate's fragile psyche as she is plagued by nightmares and haunted by demons from her past.

Struggling to regain some semblance of normalcy in their lives, the couple decides to adopt another child. At the local orphanage, both John and Kate find themselves strangely drawn to a young girl named Esther. Almost as soon as they welcome Esther into their home, however, an alarming series of events begins to unfold, leading Kate to believe that there's something wrong with Esther — this seemingly angelic little girl is not what she appears to be.

Concerned for the safety of her family, Kate tries to get John and others to see past Esther's sweet facade. But her warnings go unheeded until it may be too late — for everyone.

The film stars Peter Sarsgaard, Vera Farmiga, Isabelle Fuhrman and Lorry Ayers. It is rated R for disturbing violence, some sexuality and language.

THE UGLY TRUTH

Abby Richter is a romantically challenged morning show producer whose search for Mr. Perfect has left her hopelessly single. She's in for a rude awakening when her bosses team her with Mike Chadway, a hardcore TV personality who promises to spill the ugly truth on what makes men and women tick.

The movie stars Katherine Heigl and Gerard Butler. It is rated R for sexual content and language.

NOW SHOWING

HARRY POTTER AND THE HALF-BLOOD PRINCE

Voldemort is tightening his grip on both the muggle and wizarding worlds and Hogwarts is no longer the safe haven it once was. Harry suspects that dangers may even lie within the castle, but Dumbledore is more intent upon preparing him for the final battle that he knows is fast approaching. Together they work to find the key to unlock Voldemort's defenses. Meanwhile, the students are under attack from a very different adversary as teenage hormones rage across the ramparts. Harry finds himself more and more drawn to Ginny. Love is in the air, but tragedy lies ahead and Hogwarts may never be the same again.

The movie stars Daniel Radcliff, Emma Watson, Rupert Grint and Michael Gambon. It is rated PG for scary images, some violence, language and mild sensuality.

BRUNO

Brüno, a gay fashionista, is the host of the top-rated late night fashion show in any German-speaking country — apart from Germany. Brüno's mission? To become the biggest Austrian celebrity since Hitler. His strategy? To crisscross the globe in the hope of finding fame and love.

The film stars Sacha Baron Cohen and is rated R for pervasive strong and crude sexual content, graphic nudity and language.

I LOVE YOU, BETH COOPER

The film stars Lauren London, Paul Rust and Hayden Panettiere. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language, teen drinking, drug references and brief violence.

ICE AGE: DAWN OF THE DINOSAURS

The subzero heroes are back. Scrat is still trying to nab the ever elusive nut, while maybe finding true love. Manny and Ellie await the birth of their mini-mammoth. Diego the saber toothed tiger wonders if he is growing too soft and Sid the sloth gets into trouble when he creates his own makeshift family by hijacking some dinosaur eggs.

On a mission to rescue the hapless Sid, the gang ventures into a mysterious underground world, where they have some close encounters with dinosaurs, battle flora and fauna, run amuck and meet a relentless, one eyed, dino-hunting weasel named Buck.

Ice Age stars the voices of Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary and Queen Latifah. It is rated PG for mild humor and peril.

TRANSFORMERS: REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

When Sam Witwicky discovers some crucial information about the Transformers' creation and their history on our planet, the Decepticons set out to catch him and pick his brain. Optimus Prime must join forces with armies from around the world in order to stage an epic battle against the Decepticons in Egypt.

Many secrets about both human and Cybertronian history are revealed amid spectacular clashes of robots against robots.

The movie stars Shia LaBeouf, Megan Fox, Josh Duhamel, Tyrese Gibson, John Turturro and Matthew Marsden. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action violence, language, crude and sexual material, and drug material.

PUBLIC ENEMIES

No one could stop John Dillinger and his gang. But while the adventures of Dillinger's gang — later including Baby Face Nelson and Alvin Karpis — thrilled many, J. Edgar Hoover made Dillinger America's first Public Enemy No. 1 and sent in Melvin Purvis, the dashing "Clark Gable of the FBI."

However, Dillinger and his gang outwitted and outgunned Purvis' men in wild chases and shootouts. Only after importing a crew of Western ex-lawmen (newly baptized as agents) and orchestrating epic betrayals — from the infamous "Lady in Red" to the Chicago crime boss Frank Nitti — were Purvis, the FBI and their new crew of gunfighters able to close in on Dillinger.

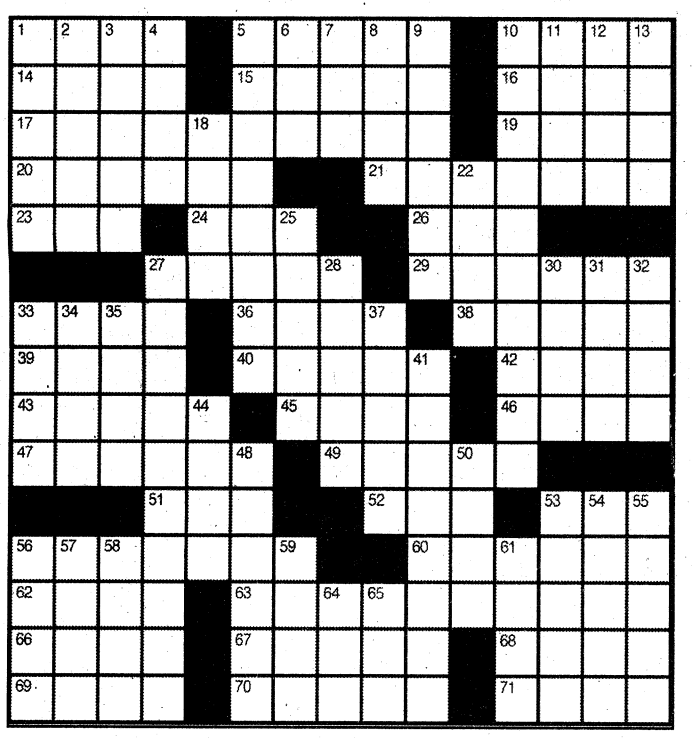
Public Enemies stars Johnny Depp, Christian Bale and Marion Cotillard. It is rated R for gangster violence and some language.

MY SISTER'S KEEPER

Anna Fitzgerald has coped with her older sister's rare cancer her whole life, and served as a donor for her as long as she can remember. Although Anna has missed many opportunities in order to help her sister, she never resented it.

When Anna discovers she was conceived to keep her sister alive, she goes to court in hopes of freeing herself and earning the chance to live her own life.

My Sister's Keeper stars Cameron Diaz, Abigail Breslin, Alec Baldwin, Jason Patric and Joan Cusack. It is rated PG-13 for mature thematic content, disturbing images, sensuality, language and teen drinking.



THE PROPOSAL

When Margaret, a high-powered book editor, faces deportation to her native Canada, she declares she's engaged to Andrew, her put-upon assistant who she has tormented for years. Andrew agrees to the charade, but with several conditions. So, the couple head to Alaska to meet his quirky family, where Margaret finds herself in one fish-out-of-water situation after another.

With a wedding in the works and an immigration official on their tails, Margaret and Andrew reluctantly stick to their plan, despite its consequences.

The Proposal stars Sandra Bullock, Ryan Reynolds, Mary Steenburgen and Craig T. Nelson. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content, nudity and language.

Teachers prepare students for 21st-century

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"We've got to change the way we approach teaching our students — our students are just not the same as they used to be," said Julie Pelletier, information specialist at Loyd Elementary, who has been meeting with other school leaders since late last summer to talk about ways to enhance student learning.

This shift in teaching depends on "Lead the Learning" teams, which include an information specialist and education technologist from each of the 11 schools in the Georgia and Alabama Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary Schools district. The team meets regularly to discuss techniques and tools they will later pass on to teachers in their schools.

"They are going to enhance their knowledge of teaching and learning," said Dr. Dell McMullen, district superintendent.

"The job of schools is dramatically different than it has been in the past, even five to 10 years ago," she said. "And we have to make dramatic changes to ensure that our students have the 21st-century skills they need.

"It's about teaching and learning the standards that are going to prepare our students. They need to be able to think creatively, solve problems, innovate, design, make oral presentations and interact with a variety of tools, with people all over the world. It's not about the technology, (but) the technology is being used to improve the teaching and learning."

McMullen said she was confident that school leaders and teachers would make the transition smoothly to the benefit of the students.

"We're very much on the cutting edge. Nowhere else is this kind of initiative being implemented," she said. "Our goal is that every one of our classrooms is a true 21st century place of learning for every child."

"We are learning so much from each other," said Holmes, who works with the teams to develop strategies for teaching kids in a 21st-century world.

Superintendent not afraid of taking risks

Dr. Dell McMullen received the National Excellence in Education Award in March from AdvancED, an accreditation organization that includes DDESS.

McMullen, superintendent of the Department of Defense Domestic Elementary and Secondary Schools for the Georgia and Alabama district, was nominated by several of her colleagues for her leadership and hands-on involvement during the past 15 years with Fort Benning schools.

"She's in the schools all the time," said Margaret Koger, a teacher at McBride Elementary.

"She's not just a figurehead with her picture on the wall in the foyer. The kids know who she is, and she remembers them from year to year. She still knows how important it is to be where the real learning takes place, where the students and teachers are interacting. Really and truly everything she does is all about our kids, the kids of the United States military. She believes in that with her whole heart - she's given her life to this."

Cheryl Rodewig
Eight-year-old Parker Nance, a second-grader at McBride Elementary, shows Dr. Dell McMullen, superintendent of DDESS for the Georgia and Alabama district, how to count by hundreds using base 10 blocks.

McMullen was nominated for many reasons, Koger said, but chief among them is her plan to prepare students for the 21st century, a process that began under McMullen's watch more

Top teacher offers 'keys of success'

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Pam Koon was named the 2009-2010 Teacher of the Year for the Georgia and Alabama Domestic Dependent Elementary and Secondary School district.

Koon

Koon began as a teacher in Muscogee County in 1975 but decided to transition to Fort Benning in 1981.

"And I just loved it," said Koon, who has taught physical education at Dexter Elementary for the past 28 years. "I felt like I had come home ... like I fit right in, and I've been very happy."

In Koon's class, P.E. isn't just running laps or doing push-ups. Koon has a more "connected" approach, said Dr. Renée Mallory, principal for Dexter and Wilson Elementary.

"A lot of people think P.E. teachers teach only P.E., but she does so much more," Mallory said. "She uses what she teaches (kids) in P.E. as a platform to support academic programs. She finds out what they're doing in the classroom than a decade ago.

District: Helps children 'learn at high levels'

"She is such a visionary and such a leader in education," Koger said. "She's always encouraged us to step out of our comfort zone and try new things and for some years has seen the importance of us moving toward 21st-century learning, so that we are preparing students for this century rather than the century we were educated in."

Knowing how much McMullen supports creativity in the classroom means a lot to Barbara Culwell, a teacher at Dexter involved in the nomination.

"She has really encouraged us to think outside the box ... be creative. I know that translates back into meeting the needs of kids," Culwell said. "There is no one I'd rather work for than Dell McMullen, and I mean that wholeheartedly. I have worked for her for 18 years. She's always been helpful. Whenever I have gone to her to ask her advice, she always makes sure she has time to sit down and listen. She'd go out of her way to help me if I felt like I needed help."

Although education is a good fit for McMullen, who has more than 30 years of experience in the field, it wasn't her first choice.

"I was too short to be a flight attendant," she said. "I had never been on a plane - at that time I had only been four hours away from where I grew up, a farm (in) Crawfordville, Ga. — but I thought that would be great. And then the second thing I wanted to be was a concert pianist, because in my hometown I was great. But my hometown only had 700 people, and as soon as I got to college, it was very clear I was not going to be a concert pianist.

"So I fell into education — and loved it. When I look back, I wouldn't change a thing. Everything happens for a reason. I believe that."

McMullen taught in Muscogee County, later becoming an assistant principal at an elementary school.

"Then I became really interested in becoming a principal, so I applied 23 times," McMullen said. "I was really, really persistent because I had my heart set on becoming a principal.

"So when Loyd school came open on post, I applied and I got it. I didn't have any military connection at all. In fact, I didn't know much about the military. But they treated me so well at Loyd. I loved it."

McMullen enjoys working with the military and their families, she said.

"It really is an opportunity to serve our country," she said. "To know we really are working with the children of the men and women who give their lives for our country is very humbling and rewarding. I love it here."

After McMullen served for nine years as superintendent on post, the district was reorganized to include Robins Air Force Base, Maxwell AFB and Fort Rucker. In all this time, McMullen said, she appreciates working with people who are committed to helping children learn at high levels.

"The kind of people I'm so fortunate to work with are always ready to try something different. Teachers are innovative. Principals allow teachers to try things. It takes everybody, all of us working together."

That's the vision McMullen said she sees for the future: a team of educators, administrators, parents and support personnel who cooperate to maintain and improve the level of excellence in the schools.

"It's a creative team that's not afraid to take risks," she said. "They're always excited about new opportunities, always trying to figure out new ways for children to learn better. And that's exciting. It never gets old as long as you're learning new things."

Educator: Promotes core subjects, setting goals

then, when she forms her lessons, she also incorporates what the teachers are teaching, whether it's math or vocabulary. Her focus is so much on the children. She's amazing; she really is."

"These are my kids. They're my legacy," Koon said. "I try to do everything to make a child the best person that child can be: all around balanced, physically, mentally, emotionally, socially.

"I knew one little boy played baseball, and I asked him, 'How is your team doing?' and he said, 'Why do you care?' I said, 'You've hit the nail on the head. I do care.' I do care about what you do when you leave this school, what you do after school, what you do on the weekends. I do care. And I want you to do the right thing. That's why I'm up here doing what I'm doing, because I care. I just feel like that's my purpose. It's my heart. It's everything."

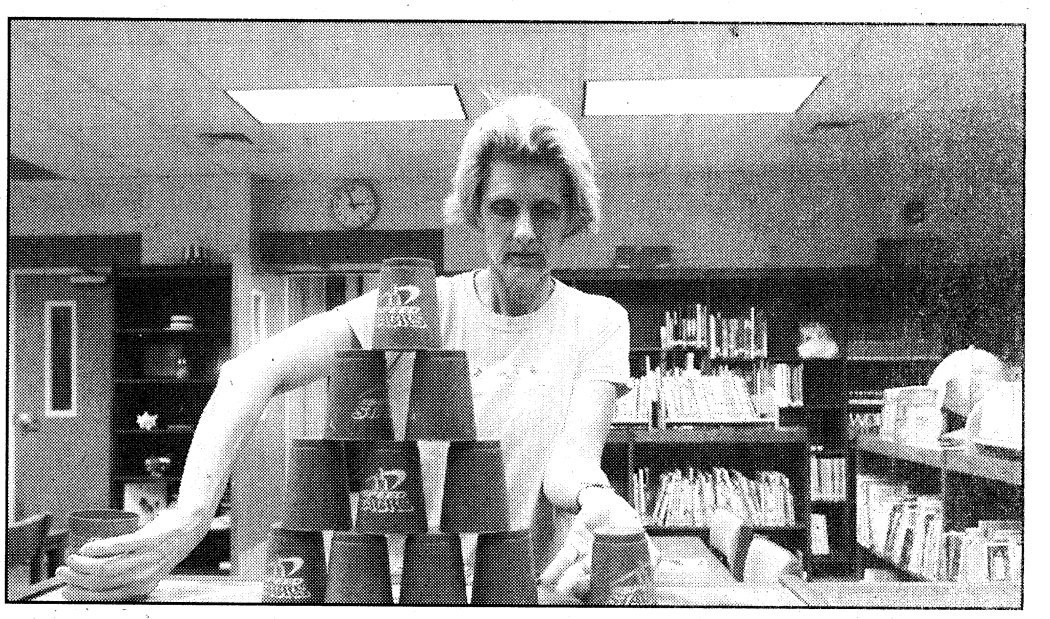
When she's not teaching physical education, Koon works with students to help them catch up in their studies and leads brain-based activities in other teachers' classrooms.

She also teaches sign language and, after school, knitting. With a small group of students and teachers, Koon has helped knit caps and blankets for children in the community.

Koon said she wants students to learn the keys of success. She promotes the core subjects, technology, goal setting and good manners to help students grow to their full potential.

That's part of why Koon introduced sport stacking, a competitive sport where participants stack cups quickly and carefully in varied formations, to the Fort Benning community.

The activity "makes your brain work better" and builds confidence, Koon said.



"Everybody can do this," she said. "I don't care (if) you're not that good in sports or you don't like sports or whatever — you can do this."

Another idea that integrates movement with learning, the Feeling Good Mileage Club meets twice a week before school to walk around the track. Koon started the club to let students gear up for learning with exercise.

"It's a good time to get energized, to get your brain ready for learning, to get your blood flowing. It's a good time to walk and talk with your friends," she said.

While they walk around the track, students may count in twos or discuss shapes in the clouds to incorporate thinking with physical activity.

"It all works together," Koon said. "If you've got the body involved, you're going to make the learning more meaningful, and it's going to go in your brain better. And it just makes it more fun."

Cheryl Rodewig

Pam Koon, a physical education teacher at Dexter Elementary for 28 years, demonstrates sports stacking, a competition that focuses on dexterity and speed. Koon said she introduced the activity to post after reading about it online as a way to keep the P.E. program current.

Teachers: Use technology to advance learning

The "Lead the Learning" initiative is still in its early stages, but there has been promising growth, said education specialist Beth Holmes, who works with the Lead the Learning teams to introduce the new teaching methods.

One of the goals for the new classroom is to be much more student-directed and project-based, Holmes said.

"We want more explorative type of learning," said Sherri McKendree, education technologist at Loyd. "The students learn by doing. They use creative thinking instead of just answering questions, making lists and quoting information back. They're having to problem solve."

For example, students at Loyd used a tool available at www.xtranormal.com to make a miniature movie about their New Year's resolutions.

"So if you think about project-based learning, and the students have a goal like identifying their New Year's resolutions, then that project culminates in an Xtranormal video," Holmes said. "But you can see what all that would involve if the child has to come up with the ideas, create a script, decide who's going to input the information. You have students playing different kinds of roles and working in teams."

Similar projects have also been in place at other schools, she said. At Dexter Elementary, students planted an outdoor garden and collected data on a spreadsheet. At McBride, they created an online "Wiki space" to communicate with students in DDESS and around the world.

Although the focus is not on technology, teaching kids the right way to use the Internet and other tools is critical, Holmes said.

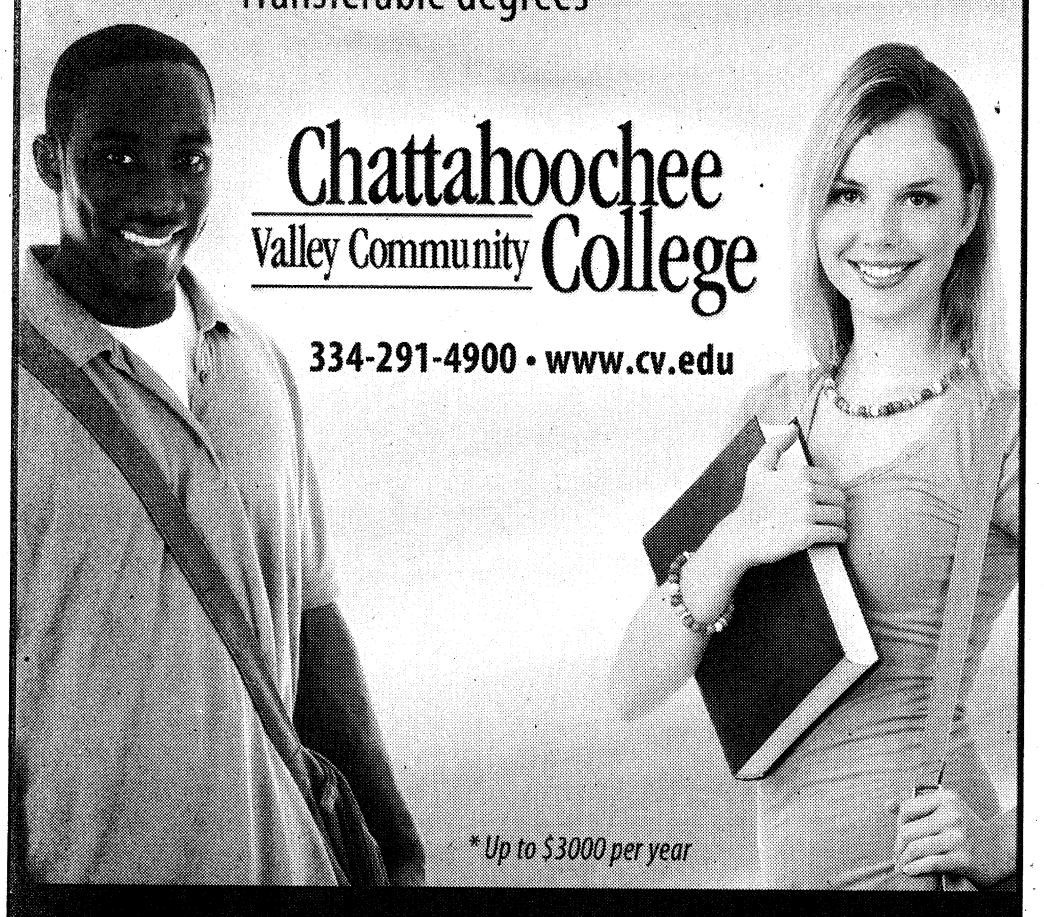
Some older students have e-mail accounts, powered by the Gaggle Network, which block spam and can be monitored by teachers.

"It's electronic, and it's the world that these kids live in," Holmes said. "They'll always communicate via the Web, and it's giving them the opportunity to learn to do that appropriately."

"Lead the Learning" has applications for all age levels, Holmes said.

Students in Katherine Walker's kindergarten class at Loyd made an online cartoon greeting card at www.acapela.tv that they sent as a class to their parents. Walker learned about the Web site from the "Lead the Learning" team and used it the next day, letting her students work as a group and write their messages before e-mailing parents the card.

"And she started immediately getting responses back from the parents," McKendree said. "They had gone on this site and made a cartoon also and sent it back to the class, and the kids were just thrilled. That was one of the simplest ones, but it excited me because somebody jumped on it."



"It's a start," she said.

If parents have any questions about "Lead the Learning," McMullen encourages them to contact the school their child attends.

VARIOUS VOICES

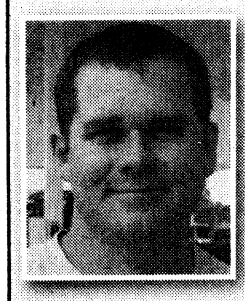
What's your opinion of social networking?

It's good for keeping in touch with old friends. I talk to friends I went to high school with who I never would have talked to otherwise. I use Facebook and MySpace and check them every couple days.

— SGT Nicole Allaire
Army Marksmanship Unit

My wife uses it to keep in touch with friends, but I don't have much of an interest in it, and don't have time. I might try it one day if I have more time.

— SPC Royston McKaig
1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment



I think it's a good way to stay in touch. I go on Facebook and MySpace at least once a day to check my messages and talk to people. I use them to keep in touch with my brother and friends from high school and college.

— Jonathan Smith
Windjammer Cable

I don't use them. I think they're mainly just Web sites for dating. But I might consider using them to meet people for dating, and I would probably use MySpace instead of Facebook.

— SPC Marcus Walker
Benning CID Battalion

I have accounts on MySpace and Facebook to keep in touch with my family from afar and meet new people from time to time. I've used it to meet new friends and for dating. But, I don't use it on a regular basis.

— SGT Jason Lay
Warrior Training Center

I think it's pretty juvenile. People post a lot of stupid things on there, and I don't have time to log on every five minutes. I used MySpace to keep in contact with my husband when he was deployed to Afghanistan, but I haven't logged on in about six months.

Branching out in a digital world

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

I'm a convert. I love YouTube. Who knew it was more than teenagers beating and bullying other teenagers? For the longest of time, that was the only news I saw on the evening news programs about the Web site. However, my teenage digital native forced me to watch YouTube videos of comedian Jeff Dunham and Achmed the Dead Terrorist after she finally shamed me into paying for DSL. (Something about how the dial up connection kept booting her off the Internet when she was doing her homework.)

Digital natives are children who have grown up with computers and the Internet, who used PCs to learn the alphabet, built Web sites in the third-grade and taunt their parents for using the "Columbus method" of keyboarding.

As a digital immigrant, I haven't mastered the Excel spreadsheet, but I Google and occasionally will use the dictionary on the computer instead of the book on the desk.

Now that we have DSL, I use the Internet to stay current with what's going on in the world. Granted, I don't understand the flap President Obama created when he wore jeans to throw the first pitch for the All-Star Game, but I'm not much of a fashionista — a word I Googled to use correctly.

When I was on leave last week, I spent some time on Facebook ... looking at pictures from the 30th class reunion I didn't attend, catching up with Army friends I hadn't seen since they PCSed, and becoming a fan of several Army pages, including Fort Benning's page (www.facebook.com/fortbenning), U.S. Forces-Afghanistan (www.facebook.com/usforcesafghanistan), and, of course the Army's page (www.facebook.com/USarmy).

I like the way people from all over the country are using these sites to connect and share information — the way mothers, whose sons are at Fort Benning, make plans to meet at the graduation or see pictures of the Sergeant Major of the Army with 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team Soldiers at the National Training Center in California.

I may never pass for a digital native, but I'm learning the language. I can find my way around without a teenage tour guide, and I've bonded with a community of like-minded immigrants who appreciate a good pair of old jeans.

Weight attacks send awful message

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

President Obama's selection of Dr. Regina Benjamin as surgeon general has sparked fresh controversy over what does, or should, constitute the picture of health in America.

The Alabama physician has been roundly criticized by health lobbyists — pardon the pun — for being overweight and skewered as a bad example for a nation already burdened with burgeoning waistlines and rising health-care costs.

Indeed, the obesity rate in America spiked 37 percent from 1998 to 2006, The Associated Press reported earlier this week, citing a study published by the journal, Health Affairs. In the past decade, obesity-related health spending on ailments such as diabetes and heart disease doubled to $147 billion.

But if you ask me, America's new top doctor doesn't look much different than your next-door neighbor. And who among us doesn't have a few pounds to drop?

I am tired of the relentless attacks on ordinary-looking Americans, especially when so many come from critics who themselves look malnourished. Sure, there's no glossing over the health hazards of morbid obesity, but eating disorders like anorexia and bulimia — triggered by media stereotypes — are equally dangerous. There are more than 8,500 different Web sites that deal with anorexia, according to one titled, "The Secret Language of Eating Disorders." Others state that 8 million people in the United States suffer from eating disorders, which hold the highest mortality rate of any psychological disease. About 80 percent of American women claim to be unhappy with their appearance and shape, and one in two are on a weight-loss diet, another site reports.

"The prevailing standards of body weight and shape, as revealed in the use of abnormally thin models in the media, continue to emphasize the idea that 'thin is beautiful' and (one suspects) only make things worse for adolescents and adults with borderline anorexia, bulimia or binge eating disorders," reads a graph at http://www.annecollins.com/eating-disorders/statistics.htm.

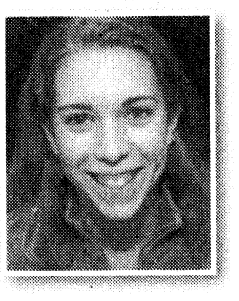
For years, I've been appalled by Hollywood's portrayal in movies and commercials of how people — particularly women — should look.

A recent Subway commercial depicts several individuals the producers obviously consider overweight, including one woman on a beach, with her back to the camera, who accidentally loses her top before quickly covering up. The implication is she has no business wearing a two-piece bathing suit in the first place. But there was nothing wrong with her appearance. She looked normal and healthy, not overweight.

In the past, Hollywood has ripped Jessica Simpson, Beyonce and Britney Spears for being "fat," yet props up stick figures such as Nicole Kidman, the Olsen twins, Ellen Pompeo, Nicollette Sheridan, Lara Flynn Boyle, Kate Moss and Paris Hilton as sex symbols to emulate. It sends a hideous message to girls everywhere — and contributes heavily to the self-image issues that fuel unhealthy diets and eating disorders.

Other celebrities apparently have taken the hint. Carrie Underwood, Christina Ricci, Nicole Richie and Thora Birch are just a few who look like shells of their former selves. And I'm not sure what to make of Star Jones these days.

Even Scarlett Johansson, voted the "Sexiest Woman Alive" by Esquire magazine in 2006, looks emaciated compared to earlier roles — perhaps in an effort to keep the absurd body critics at bay and maintain her status on the A-List. And what the heck happened to Drew Barrymore?



No, Dr. Benjamin looks a lot like the rest of us. And average Americans don't deserve ridicule from the media, TV marketing executives or Hollywood elitists with slanted, dangerous images of what they think about our appearance.

Don't let the name change fool you

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

"What's in a name? That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet.""

Juliet's famous speech asking Romeo to change his name is not only one of the most famous in English literature, it also happens to be part of one of my all-time favorite plays. If you're not familiar with Romeo and Juliet, put down this paper and run, don't walk, to the nearest library. You'll find the play touches on some fundamental questions of love and identity, which are summed up in Juliet's speech.

So why am I lecturing you on Shakespeare? Well, I recently got married and decided to change my name, so I've been thinking a lot lately about what the significance of a name really is. About two days ago, I began introducing myself using my married name for the first time, and it's an odd feeling to suddenly begin calling yourself something else. I wondered what this change meant. Does changing your name change you, or are you still the same person, as Juliet suggests?

It depends who you ask. For some people, names really are a reflection of what's inside. A close friend of mine recently converted to Judaism, and in the process, decided to change both her first and last name to reflect her new identity. It was the final step in a long journey of self-discovery, and she told me she is quite happy that her public self — her name — now matches how she feels. It's taken me a while to get used to calling her by her new name, but I think it suits her well.

For others, names are an important professional asset. Another friend, who will be married next year, publishes in academic journals and is considering keeping her maiden name as a professional byline, but changing it on most other documents. And, as Juliet suggested, you can change your name if it no longer suits you, like one of my aunts who went back to her maiden name after being divorced for many years.

As for me, I considered hyphenating my name, but decided against it because Gotler-Keyser doesn't exactly roll off the tongue. It's long, unwieldy, and frankly, it offended my sensibilities as a writer. That, plus my husband didn't like it either. In the end, I decided to change my last name to Keyser and take Gotler as another middle name. And for the time being, the name on my e-mail addresses will remain Gotler.

I think names do have a strong influence on your identity, but they don't make you a different person.

So if you were wondering whether we hired a new writer named Caroline Keyser who looks exactly like Caroline Gotler, let me assure you it's still me — only now I get to add even more heritage, tradition and stories to my identity by adding my husband's name to my own.

boards where fans can talk to each other.

The Facebook fan page message boards have been especially helpful to families of basic trainees, Gordon said.

"I would like to connect with other parents or loved ones who have someone in F Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment," wrote a mother of a basic trainee. "My son started boot camp July 10. We miss him and are very proud of him."

"My brother is in F Company," replied the sister of a basic trainee. "We miss him so much and it's been really hard on my mom. I would love to stay connected with you."

Gordon said administrators aim to get 1,000 fans of Fort Benning on Facebook, which will allow the fan page to have a simplified Web address of www.facebook.com/fortbenning, rather than the lengthy combination of numbers and letters in its current address.

Flickr, a photo sharing Web site, allows users to post and view photographs and images. Though Fort Benning's Flickr site is still in its beginning stages, Gordon said she and other administrators aim to eventually post all photos from The Bayonet in searchable folders.

On Twitter, a type of microblog, users can post messages up to 140 characters long and receive new posts by e-mail. Gordon said she updates Fort Benning's Twitter site every day and frequently posts links to articles in The Bayonet.

"Twitter is kind of like a status update on Facebook, because it allows people to know what you're doing at that moment," she said. "We can update Twitter from an event, and you don't have to wait for anything to be printed."

Twitter also keeps Fort Benning leadership connected. COL Bryan Owens, Fort Benning deputy commander and U.S. Army Infantry Center assistant commandant, created a Twitter page for the U.S. Army Infantry School in order to connect Fort Benning with brigade and battalion commanders in the field.

"What I found as a brigade commander is that you don't have time to surf Web sites, but you do have time to (view) your Twitter site," Owens said. "Most commanders in the field have a BlackBerry. Twitter allows daily visibility with brigade commanders, who can see Fort Benning is interested in what they have to say. If they're following the Infantry School, they're going to see updates and questions like 'Do you like this piece of equipment? Is there anything we can do better?' It's more than just providing information, it's getting feedback and having a dialogue."

Owens said he created the Infantry School Twitter site less than two weeks ago, but with 18 of the approximately 100 Army brigade commanders already following it, he said he is confident it will be a success.

To view Fort Benning's social media pages, visit Fort Benning's home page at http://www.army.mil/info/organization/benning/ and follow the links at the bottom of the page. To view the blog, which will launch Aug. 17, go to http://benning.armylive.dodlive.mil.

Hiring changes: To streamline process will be added for a total of 1,465.

Slightly more than half of those — 760 in all — have already been spoken for by current employees at Fort Benning or Fort Knox, Ky., who qualify for what is called a "direct match" or "indirect match" — those who are already doing the jobs or those who are interested, have been displaced by the transformation and were given preference in the hiring process.

Employees at Fort Benning and Fort Knox were given the opportunity to secure a position in the new organization through the Civilian Volunteer Process, which ended last month. That leaves 705 jobs available in the next two years.

Those positions will be listed on the CPOL Web site, at http://acpol.army.mil/employment/, and some may be listed at usajobs.com.

The sheer volume of positions that must be filled to accommodate the Armor Schools move from Fort Knox may challenge the civilian hiring system, Richardson said. Officials are implementing a number of changes to streamline the process, which typically takes about 55 days from the time hiring actions are initiated by the activities in which the vacancies are located. CPAC has measures in place that will help reduce the hiring process to about 27 days.

Blanche Robinson, Human Resources officer at the Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, said the positions will be widely varied. They will include supply, budget and manpower, safety, clerical, administrative, blue collar and more.

Robinson encouraged those hoping to snag one of those jobs to continuously check the vacancy announcement board on the CPOL Web site.

BRAC growth yields new jobs

Numbers don't lie. But they do have a way of twisting the truth.

Those 705 TRADOC positions that will become available at Fort Benning over the coming months - that's not half the number of total job openings you'll see as an indirect result of the growth associated with BRAC actions on Fort Benning. BRAC planners say as many as 2,000 jobs will be created on post in the next few years.

Besides TRADOC, Fort Benning also has an Installation Management Command, which is responsible for managing the garrison much the way a city manager operates. Though the BRAC law did not directly impact Fort Benning's IMCOM, there may be several hundred civilian garrison positions added simply to accommodate the growth brought about by the establishment of the MCOE, said Joyce Golden, a senior budget analyst for the Installation Management Command.

The increase in population of about 30,000 permanent party Soldiers, family members, civilian employees and contractors, and another 30,000 trainees annually, will task current facilities and services. Martin Army Community Hospital will be replaced by a bigger facility, and medical and dental services will expand. The commissary will expand. Morale, Welfare and Recreation will see an increase in demand for lodging, entertainment and food. That means an increase in the number of employees within the service sector.

Those figures do not factor in the number of contractors who will be employed to see the post through construction projects for the next seven years. Current estimates put the total of contractors working on post each day at 2,000.

Calpena: Tapped for MNSTC-I

Calpena said he would help develop a Training and Doctrine Command-type organization for Iraqi security forces.

The MNSTC-I is transitioning from an ad-hoc military transition team-based concept to an organization focusing on building strong leadership and an NCO Corps, he said.

"We need to get them to understand not only the way we train, but the bigger concept of developing strong (leaders)," Calpena said.

After nearly 27 years in the Army, developing leaders is something Calpena has had a lot of experience doing, he said. He's served as both a drill sergeant and Ranger instructor at Fort Benning in addition to numerous senior NCO assignments including command sergeant major for the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Infantry Division, and the 3rd Infantry Division.

COL Daniel Kessler, the commander of the 198th Infantry Brigade, said Calpena's time at Fort Benning has prepared him well for his next job.

"He's got an incredible amount of experience training Soldiers and mentoring senior noncommissioned officers," said Kessler, who served with Calpena for 13 months with the 198th Inf. Bde.

Kessler said one of Calpena's greatest contributions was helping to rewrite drill sergeant school courses at Victory University in Fort Jackson, S.C. The new courses transformed the Army's approach to the way drill sergeants teach initial entry training to recruits, Kessler said.

"He's been very effective as a mentor and this will be extremely beneficial in his new position," he said.

Calpena said although he relishes the new challenge, he is sad to be leaving Fort Benning.

"It's been awesome working here being a part of something so big. I've seen first-hand how radically we are changing the philosophy of training and how I can directly impact it," he said.

"It's an honor to serve with these drill sergeants, meet their needs and be a part of their professional development, turning out better first sergeants and sergeants major for the Army."

Calpena will transfer responsibility of the 198th Infantry Brigade to CSM Richard Weik at 9 a.m. Aug. 10 in front of the brigade's headquarters on Sand Hill.

Post names top Soldiers, honors NCOs

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Four of Fort Benning's finest have been recognized for their service this quarter.

Following a series of boards July 16, SSG Timothy Acosta was named NCO of the quarter, SPC Shane Haffey was named Soldier of the Quarter, and SSG April Dean and SSG James Spangler were named the newest members of the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club which recognizes outstanding NCOs.

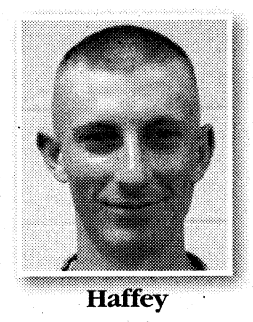
Acosta

Acosta, who maintains Bradley fighting vehicles with the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, said he wanted to go to the NCO of the Quarter board to inspire his Soldiers and fellow NCOs.

"If I can do it, they can do it, and hopefully I'll get some guys going to the board next month," Acosta said.

To prepare, Acosta said he spent a lot of time studying and credits support from his chain of command with helping him succeed.

With seven years of service already under his belt, Acosta said he plans to serve at least 20 years in the Army, and would like to retire as a sergeant major. In the short term, he said he would like to use his time at Fort Benning to attend college and aims to complete at least an associate degree.



"I'm just starting off small and am working my way up," he said. "You can't just sit back, you've got to work to be the best."

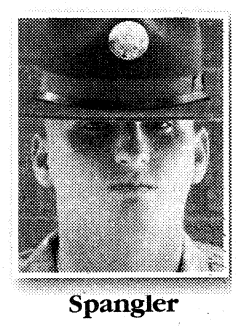
Haffey, an Infantryman with 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, has appeared before five boards in the past four months. In April, he was named his battalion's Soldier of the Month, in May he went to a promotion board, and in June he was named Soldier of the Quarter for his battalion and brigade. Haffey passed all five boards and will be promoted to sergeant in August.

Appearing before so many boards in a short time helped prepare him for the post Soldier of the Quarter board, Haffey said.

"I was more confident, and I brushed up on little mistakes I made," he said. "The more times you go, the easier it gets and the more confident you get. I took advice from the after action reviews. If you don't listen to their recommendations and try to improve yourself, you're not gong to get any better. Being able to listen to feedback is important not just as a Soldier, but in anything you do in life."

Before coming to Fort Benning in October, Haffey served with the 2nd Battalion, 12th Cavalry Regiment at Fort Bliss, Texas, and deployed to Iraq. He said he strives to set a positive example for his children, 2-year-old Maddyson and 9-month-old Skyler, and as an NCO will work to pass on a disciplined work ethic to his Soldiers.

Haffey



"I'm excited about becoming an NCO," he said. "When I came into the Army as a private, I looked up to my NCOs, and now that it's my turn to become one, I want to give (my Soldiers) some of the discipline and training they gave me."

Haffey's future goals include attending Ranger School and appearing before the NCO of the Quarter board. He plans to serve 20 years in the Army.

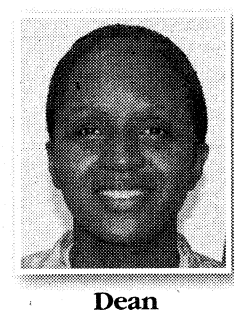
Spangler and Dean, who will be inducted into the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club in a ceremony today, both said they wanted to set an example for their Soldiers by applying for membership in the club.

Spangler, a drill sergeant with D Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, credited fellow NCOs in his battalion with helping him prepare for the board.

"I attended a study group at my battalion for people preparing for boards for about a month beforehand, and it really helped out a lot with my confidence level," he said. "Some of the other NCOs in the unit who are already Audie Murphy members provided good leadership examples for me to follow."

Spangler

Spangler said he follows the Sergeant Audie Murphy Club motto and leads his Soldiers from the front.



"I wouldn't ask them to do anything I wouldn't be willing to do or show them how to do," he said.

Spangler said he plans to become a leader of the study group he attended.

"Some of the guys who helped me out are leaving now, so I want to keep the cycle going of helping out Soldiers," he said.

Dean, a human resources sergeant with 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, said she spent a lot of time examining her strengths and weaknesses before going to the board.

"I did a self evaluation," she said. "I did a double check on my military bearing, my competence and how I deal with my Soldiers. I made sure I worked on bettering myself and (improving) any weaknesses I saw before I said, 'Yes I can do it.'"

Dean

Dean has worked in human resources her entire nine-year Army career, and she said loves her job because it allows her to help her Soldiers and their families.

"My Soldiers should be able to take my place, so I always encourage them to continue their civilian and military education, and to work on things like their military bearing," Dean said.

Dean said she plans to spend 30 years in the Army and continue working in human resources.

Program offers free education to law students

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

The Army's Funded Legal Education Program is accepting applications for the fall of 2010. Annually, up to 25 eligible active-duty commissioned officers are selected to attend law school at government expense.

Soldiers on Fort Benning are already taking advantage of this program.

MAJ David Drake, chief of the criminal law division for Fort Benning's Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, said there are four Soldiers in his office who are enrolled or have graduated from the FLEP program.

The program sends students to law school at a state-supported school in their state of residence or a school granting military students in-state tuition. During the summer following each of the first two years of academic study, students intern with SJA offices.

"We get approximately four FLEP students each year," Drake said.

CPT Steve Bishop is in his second summer internship with Fort Benning's criminal law office.

Bishop, in his third year at Rutgers School of Law in Newark, N.J., said he appreciates the opportunity to work with and learn from military attorneys.

He said his goal is to work with the U.S. Army Special Operations Command's SJA.

Because Bishop is not a certified attorney, he can't prosecute cases, but he can do anything short of what a licensed attorney can do, Drake said.

"Our interns can research, write motions and assist with administrative boards," he said.

Once students graduate law school, participation in FLEP is complete. But in order to practice military law, the officers must pass a bar exam and attend the Judge Advocate Officer Basic course at the Judge Advocate General's Legal Center and School in Charlottesville, Va. The course certifies them to practice military law under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, said CPT Adam Kersey, a trial counsel with the criminal law division.

CPT Adam Kersey is a 2008 graduate of the FLEP program.

"I didn't have much exposure to law prior to FLEP. I first started thinking about the law, and how it intersects with the military, while I was deployed to Kuwait in 2004," Kersey said.

After serving five years as an Army transportation officer and returning from a deployment, Kersey took the Law School Admission test, enrolled in FLEP and studied full-time at the College of William and Mary in Virginia to earn his degree.

Kersey said anyone interested in FLEP should prepare now.

Potential FLEP candidates must pass the LSAT prior to applying. According to the Office of the Judge Advocate General, the average LSAT score for officers selected for the FLEP program in 2008 was 160 — 82 percent.

This program is open to commissioned officers in the rank of second lieutenant through captain. Applicants must have at least two but not more than six years of total active service at the time legal training begins. Interested officers should review Chapter 14 of Army Regulation 27-1 governing FLEP. The deadline for applications is Nov. 1.

For more information regarding FLEP eligibility and requirements, call COL Tracy Barnes, Staff Judge Advocate, at 706-545-4611 or visit Building 128. Additional information can be found at www.jagcnet.army.mil.

Enhancing quality of life for Soldiers and their families

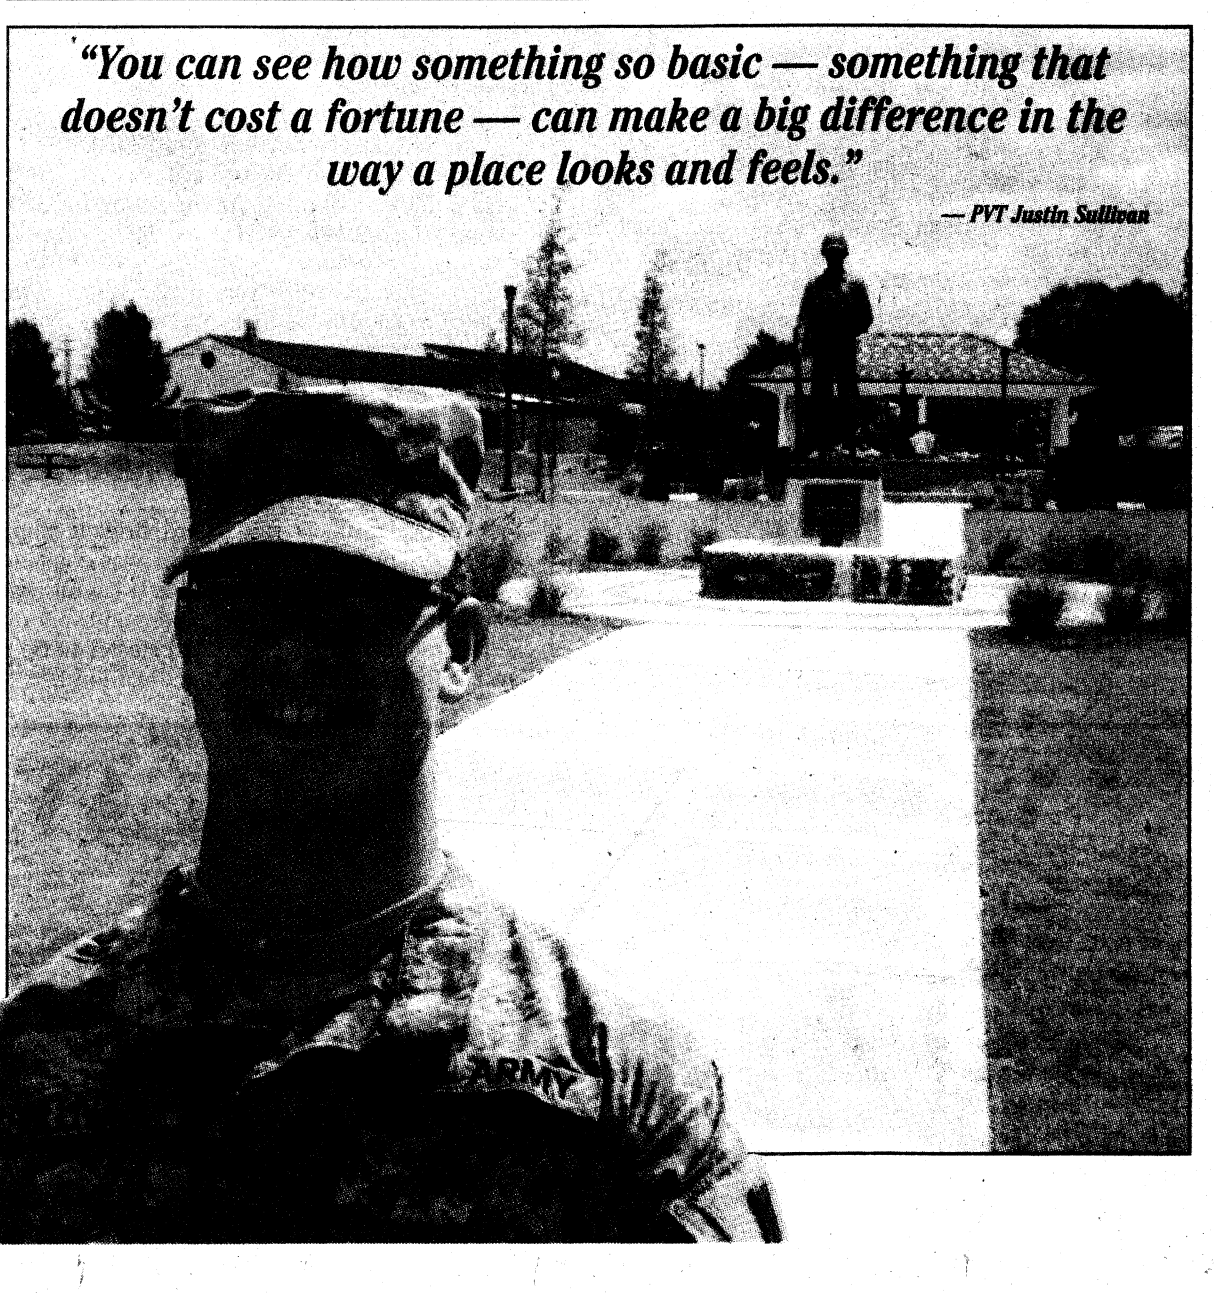
PVT Justin Sullivan paused briefly to admire the green space tucked into what was once a vacant lot behind the shoppette at the corner of Marchant and Edwards streets. He was on his way to lunch with the guys, hoofing it from Building 4 to Burger King.

Sullivan said he liked what he saw; the park has plenty of seating, a gazebo for shade, a fountain and a statue.

"When you think of a military installation, you think of sand pits and dilapidated buildings," he said. "This is nice. You can see how something so basic — something that doesn't cost a fortune — can make a big difference in the way a place looks and feels."

That's exactly what post officials hope to accomplish just down the road from the new park in the historical warehouse district off Vibbert Avenue. The warehouses will be renovated — while retaining their historical integrity — to create classrooms for the OCS and NCOA students who will be housed in the cuartels on the opposite side of the road. Much of the sprawling. overgrown pavement surrounding the warehouses will be converted into greenspace. A dining facility will also be added.

The goal is to create a campus atmosphere, said Jay Brown, BRAC project manager, who expects the project will start early in the new year.



As the post moves forward with its transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence, planners are working hard to ensure the results are "sustainable, eco-friendly and esthetically pleasing," Brown said.

Ranger honored for 45 years of service

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

CPT Freddie Odomes said he is 99 percent sure he's the oldest active-duty Ranger in the Army.

At 63 years old, Odomes, who commands B Company, Warrior Transition Battalion, has served 45 years in the U.S. Army — longer than most active-duty Soldiers have been alive. During that time, he has racked up a list of accomplishments that includes two tours in Vietnam, a two-and a half-year stint as a Ranger instructor, positions as a platoon leader and executive officer, and awards including a Purple Heart and a Bronze Star with V device. He earned a Ranger Tab in 1971, and also wears the Combat Infantry Badge, Senior Parachutist Badge and Pathfinder Badge.

On Wednesday, Odomes was honored for his service and achievements in a ceremony dedicating a stone on the Ranger Monument to him.

"It just amazed me that there are people here who thought highly enough of me to have that done in my honor," Odomes said.

The ceremony was the result of collaboration between CSM(R) Michael Broady, a WTB transition counselor, and other Rangers and WTB staff who felt Odomes should recognized.

"We were talking about getting a stone for CPT Odomes and said, 'Why had there not been any recognition for him?'" Broady said. "In the space of probably 45 minutes, we were able to raise the money from Soldiers and Civilians at the WTB to put the stone (on the monument). We've waited 45 years to basically say, 'Hey Ranger, job well done.'"

Odomes' service has not been without interruptions. In 1987, he retired after 22 years on active duty and worked as a restaurant manager and insurance agent, but said he wasn't satisfied with his work and missed the strong dedication and work ethic of Soldiers. So in 2006, he came back to the Army 19 years after leaving active duty, and asked to command a WTB company.

"For me to come back and help these guys get over their problems was a blessing," he said. "As a wounded Soldier in Vietnam, there was basically no one to take care of me when I returned and found out what other problems I may have had besides just the (physical) wounds. I wanted to be sure our Soldiers were getting what they needed to assimilate back into society or to go back into the ranks of the military able to perform their duties."

Caroline Keyser
CPT Freddie Odomes speaks during a ceremony dedicating a stone to him at the Ranger Monument Wednesday. Odomes joined the Army in 1964 and received his commission in 1968.

Although Odomes was just one year away from the age cutoff of 60 for Army volunteers, he said he never considered his age an obstacle. At the ceremony, he credited his family, fellow Soldiers and co-workers with helping make his Army career a success.

"This was a tremendous undertaking, and I appreciate each and every one of you for it," Odomes said. "No person makes any accomplishments alone. It's been said many times that it takes a village to raise a child, and it takes a group to make you successful."

Broady said humility is one of Odomes' best qualities as a leader.

"He's seen it all at least a million times," Broady said. "Rather than tell Soldiers how to do things, he's there to counsel them in the right direction so they make the right decisions on their own. I've seen that not only with individual Soldiers but also with his staff. He's able to mentor without talking. He sits back, sees what the situation is, makes a quick assessment and then comes up with a plan of action. He's invaluable, not only to B Company but to the WTB as a whole."

1SG Zachary Mitchell, who had four previous assignments as a first sergeant before coming to B Company, said his working relationship with Odomes is one of the best he has had.

"He's a great guy," Mitchell said. "I haven't had the kind of continuity before that he and I have. Everything is a smooth transition with him."

At the ceremony, Odomes offered advice to young Soldiers.

"Do not look for the reward, look for the deed," he said. "The reward may be long in coming, but at some point, someone will recognize the deed, and the reward will be put in the proper place at the proper time."

After getting out of the Army, Odomes said he would like to work with youth and veterans' groups. Although his Army contract will expire in March, Odomes said he plans to try to extend it for at least another year.

"I feel great about being back," he said. "It's wonderful. They've got to get rid of me now."

Journalist graduates basic training

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The 192nd Infantry Brigade has trained fewer than 20 Soldiers with a military occupation specialty of 46Q, or public affairs specialist, out of more than 150,000 Soldiers who came through the brigade in the last five years, said Thomas Kennedy, computer systems supervisor for the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception), 192nd Inf. Bde.

Usually, a 46Q would head to Fort Jackson, S.C., or possibly Fort Sill, Okla., but the decision is made on a "big Army" level, he said.

That decision brought PV2 Robert England, a 46Q, to Fort Benning May 28.

The California native expected to head to Fort Jackson, but he said he was glad to be in Georgia.

"I prefer to be here, to be honest, just because the training is supposed to be a little bit tougher," said England, A Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

England was born at Great Lakes Naval Training Center in Illinois. His father was in the Navy for 11 years, England said, but when it came time to join the military, he "couldn't see (him)self on a ship for six months at a time."

Before becoming a Soldier, the 24-year-old gathered some "life experiences," such as living on his own, attending some college, learning to pay bills and becoming a father.

He never thought he'd join the military, he said, but all that changed with the birth of his daughter Zoey, now 4 months old.

"My daughter was a big part of it," he said. "I wanted to be able to provide for her and give her something to be proud of and someone to look up to. Basically, this was a turn in my life, 180 degrees, (to) try something I never thought that I would do in my life."

Cheryl Rodewig
PVT Robert England stands in formation Monday on parade field during a practice of the A Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, graduation. A Company graduated Thursday.

When England learned the public affairs MOS was available, he jumped at the chance, he said.

"The act of writing itself is what I'm passionate about," said England, who hopes to work someday for a magazine or newspaper and eventually in the Pentagon. "It's kind of like how painters are with painting and artists are with drawing. It's a form of expression. Words are just as beautiful as pictures to me. You can say a million things in so few words. I've never been big with numbers, but when I write it's liberating … it's freedom."

England said the Army was a "stepping stone" for him to become proficient in a field he loves. The first step on that path — basic training — wasn't everything he expected, he said.

"Aside from how to fire a weapon and first aid (and) the knowledge they teach you, some of the more implied things were how to push yourself beyond your limits," England said. "Things I never thought I was capable of doing, I found there's inner strength you have to tap into at certain times. You have to find motivation when you feel like you can't go on."

England graduated Thursday as the Soldier of the Cycle for his company.

He was chosen for this distinction based on his discipline and his weapons qualification and PT scores, said SSG Rodricus Owens, Drill Sergeant of the Cycle for A Company.

Owens gave England positions as team leader and squad leader as his teamwork and leadership skills developed during the cycle, Owens said.

"He'll go far in his career as long as he stays on the path that he's on right now with his discipline, following orders, adapting to the Army values," Owens said. "All those things that are going to help him succeed, he has those down now."

England's next duty station is Fort Meade, Md., where he will complete advanced individual training.

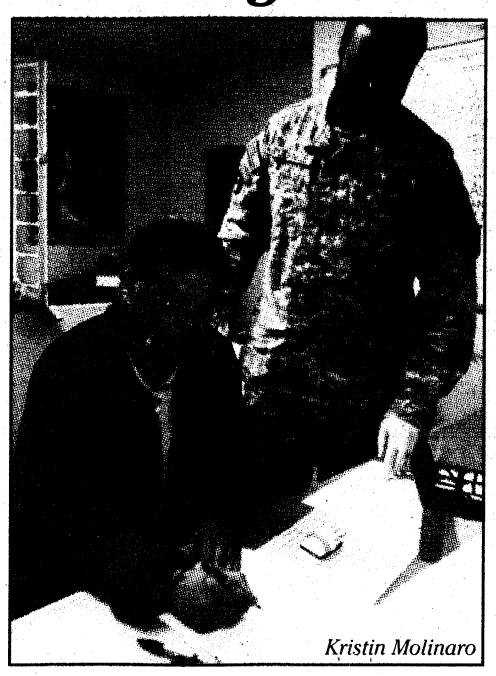
weapon.

"It's easier to manipulate, less complicated to use. You don't need to have as much focus on it," said SPC Robert Paskiewicz, who's assigned to B Company. "But one button is good for the 240. It cuts down on the length of the weapon, and makes the weapon a little more balanced."

SPC Austin Mistretta, also of B Company, who routinely works with both weapons on Fort Benning's SAW range, had a similar impression.

"The 249 is a shoulder-fired weapon with a thicker, bigger stock. It's better for urban operations," he said. "I don't like the one-button (buttstock) on the 249 because you can't adjust it as quick. It's too thin. But it works better on the 240."



SSG Dino Vassilakos of C Company said the M-249 modification is negligible but the single-button buttstock significantly improves the M-240B's handling without compromising firepower.

"One button definitely makes it more shooter-friendly," he said. "It can adjust to the shooter, depending on the person's size, but the weapon fires the same as before."

After the recent data and feedback are analyzed, the Maneuver Battle Lab will provide a final report to the program manager to assist in a decision on type classification for the buttstocks, Rose said.

Fort Benning's biochemical test coordinator named best in Army

Penny Carter checks to ensure urinalysis specimens were collected properly by SSG Yenn Polynice. Carter is the biochemical test coordinator for Fort Benning. Carter was recognized as the Army's Installation Biochemical Test Coordinator of the Year.

THE BAYONET

For the third time this decade, Fort Benning's Army Substance Abuse Program has won the Army's Installation Biochemical Test Coordinator of the Year award.

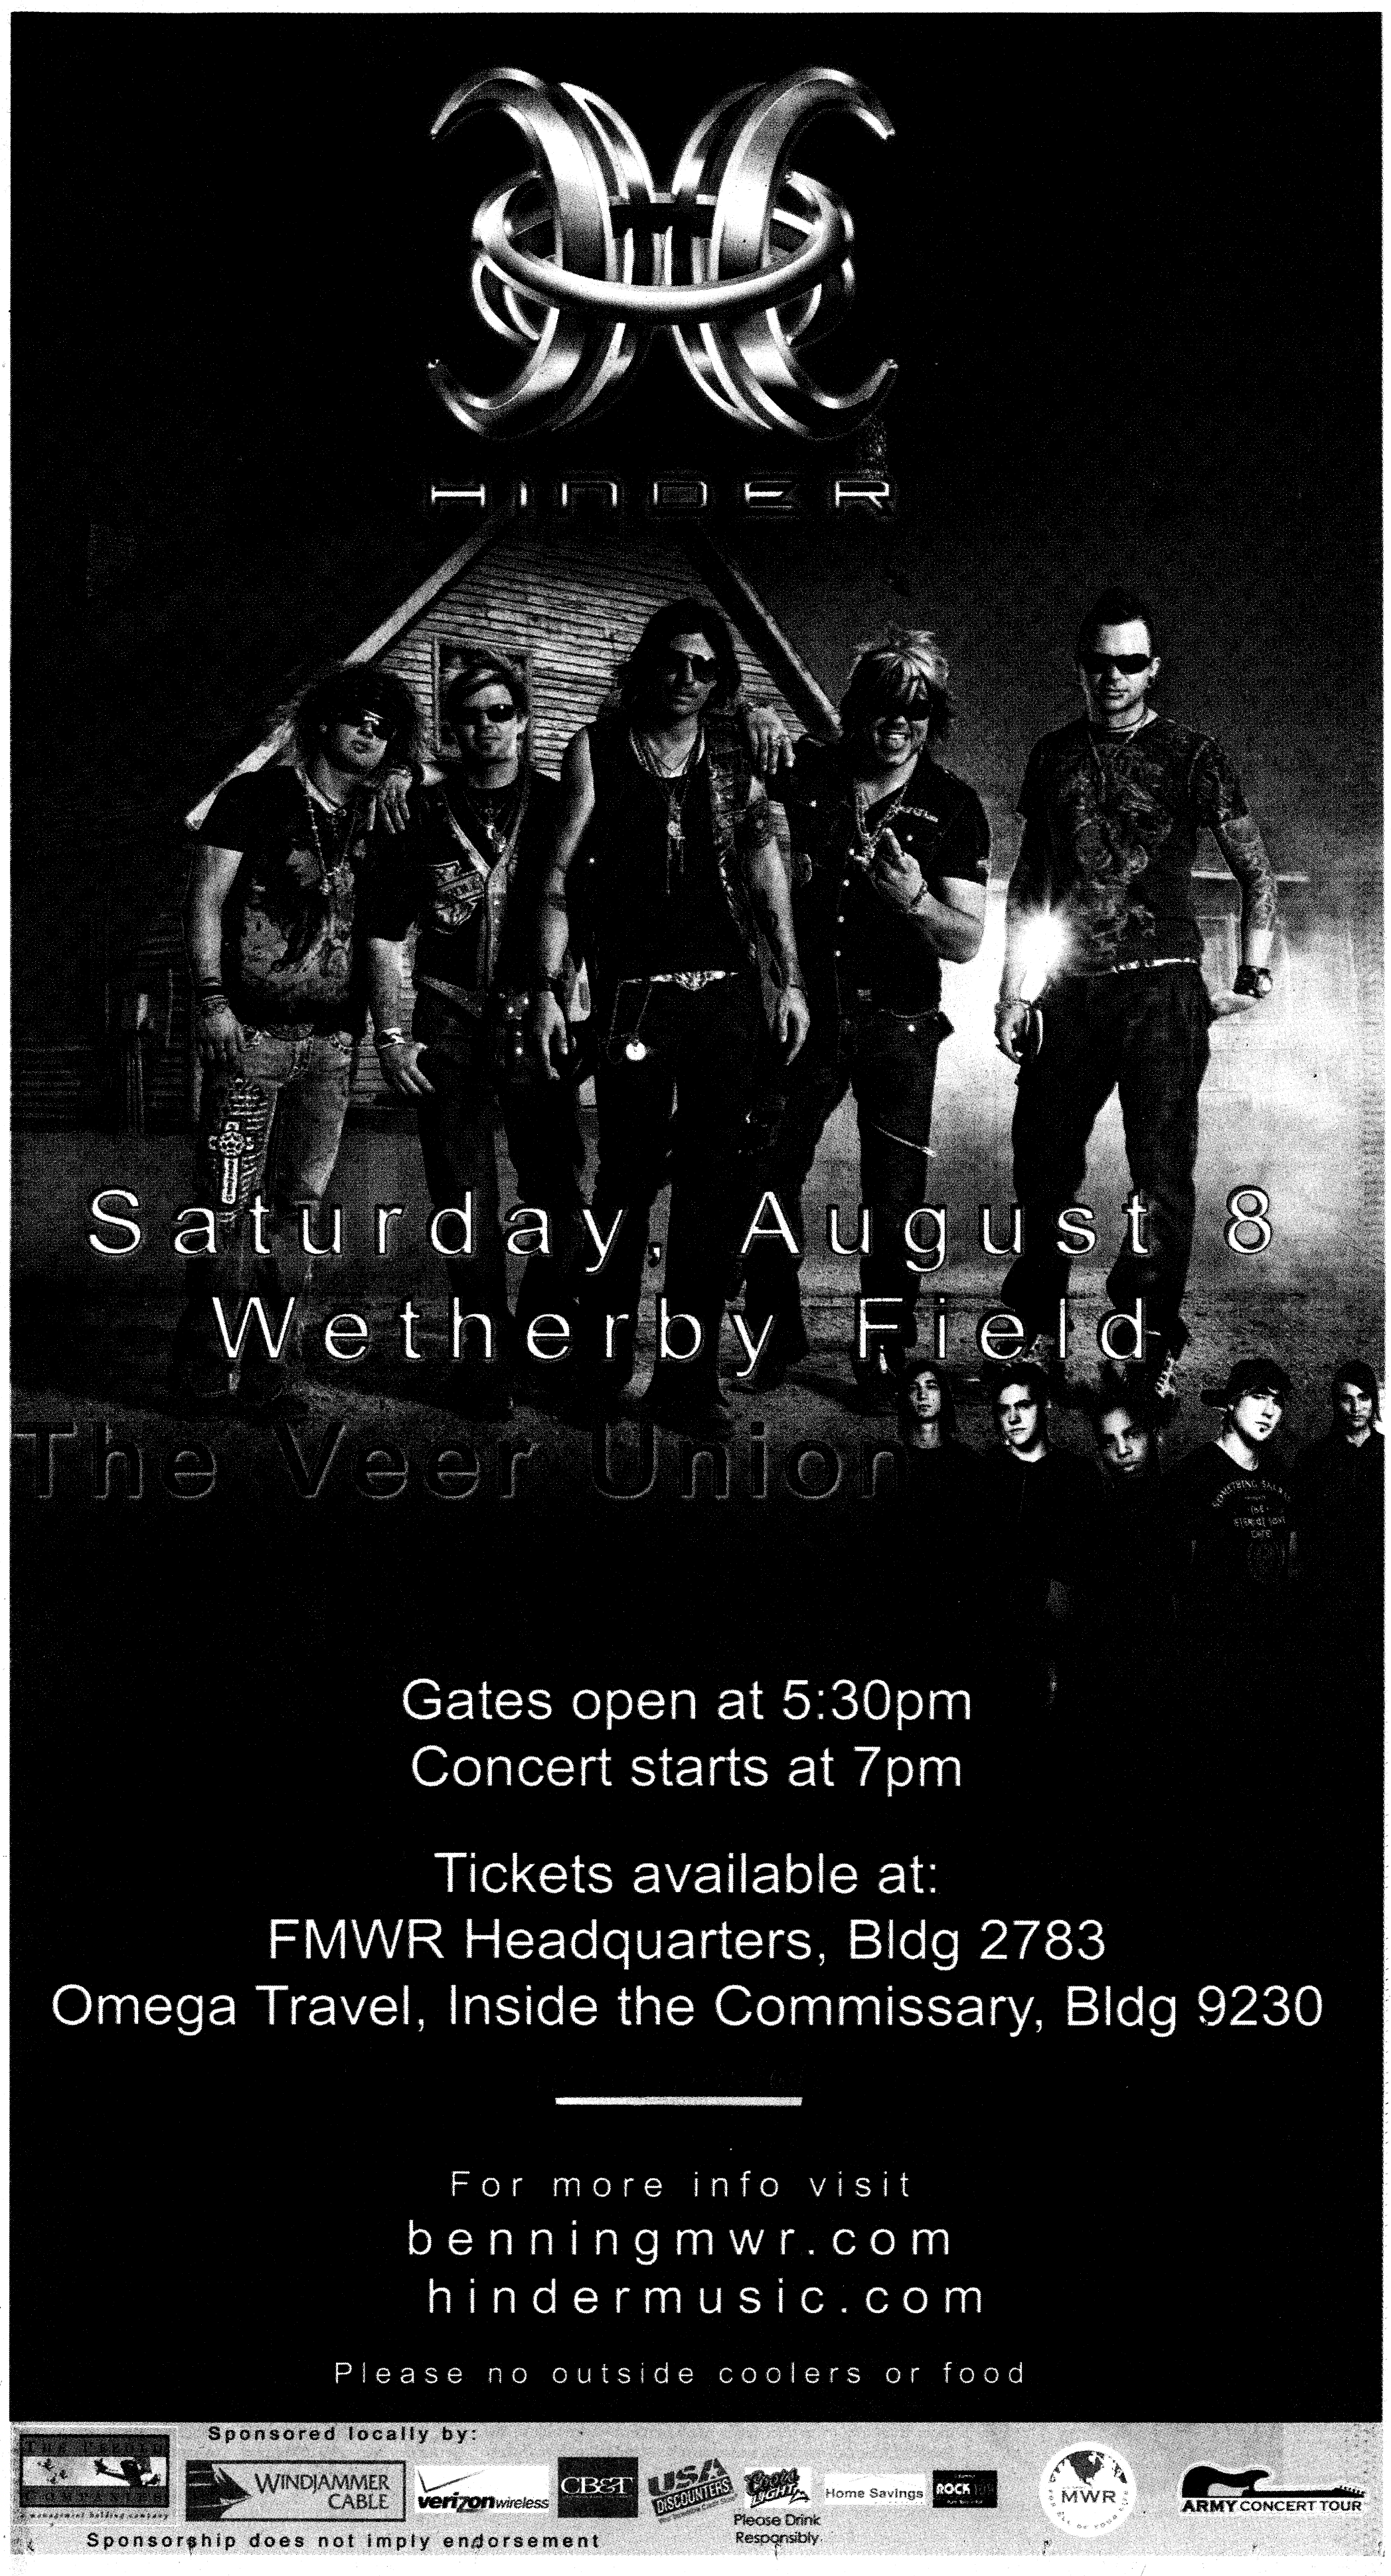
SFC(R) Penny Carter, Fort Benning's biochemical test coordinator, received the trophy in a ceremony July 6 in Austin, Texas. Carter operates a forensically secure biochemical collection point on post serving 214 units and more than 40,000 active duty Soldiers, trainees, students and civilians.

Carter is also the primary instructor for the post's Unit Prevention Leader course, a 40-hour course training students in conducting urinalysis collections. Carter has trained nearly 400 prevention leaders since 2008. She teaches the "Super UPL" course to certify prevention leaders in deploying units to collect urine samples and ship them directly to a Forensic Toxicology Drug Testing Lab.

COL Thomas Macdonald said more than 67,000 military specimens were processed through the collection point with a discrepancy rate of only 0.36 percent - well below the Army's standard of less than 3 percent.

"She is tenacious in her zeal to operate by the book," Macdonald said, in nominating her for the award. "(She) has demonstrated the ability to exceed what is normally expected to manage our Biological Collection Point. Through her efforts, Fort Benning commanders can have the tools they need to deter the use of illegal drugs and abuse of alcohol by their Soldiers."

Carter retired from the Army in 2000 after serving 20 years as a combat medic. In her final duty station at Great Lakes Naval Station, Ill., Carter was the medical Inspector General for 65 Military Entrance Processing Stations Armywide.



Prior to coming to Fort Benning, she worked in Tripler Army Hospital's Forensic Toxicology Drug Testing Lab in Honolulu.

Carter came to Fort Benning as an assistant biochemical test coordinator in 2005.

"She goes beyond the scope of her duties. She lives and breathes this job," said Yvonne Wilbanks, chief of ASAP.

Wilbanks said the award shows what Fort Benning is doing to deter and combat drug abuse in the ranks.

"Drug use in a unit undermines morale and unit cohesion. Drugs are so deadly to families, Soldiers and units that it's vital we continue a strong drug abuse prevention program," Wilbanks said.

Vick partially reinstated

NFL commish Roger Goodell partially reinstated disgraced quarterback Michael Vick Monday.

Vick can take part in preseason practices, workouts and meetings. That is, if he can find a team to sign him. Vick served a year-and-a-half in prison for running a dogfighting ring.

If Vick can find a compassionate soul, he can do everything but play in games. Goodell said he would consider him for full reinstatement no later than the middle of October.

Lance is second loser in Tour

Three weeks of cycling through France landed Lance Armstrong third overall. Not too shabby for a guy coming out of retirement. It would have been nice to see him win though.

Armstrong's rival and teammate Alberto Contador of Spain was the ultimate victor, winning his second Tour de France in three years.

Forrest killed

Former boxing champion Vernon Forrest was killed Saturday during a robbery in Atlanta. Police have said Forrest exchanged gunfire with the robbers, who shot him while he was putting air in his tire at a gas station.

Forrest was a former IBF welterweight and two-time WBC junior middleweight champion. He was also on the Olympic boxing team in 1992.

Johnsonwins on Montoyaerror

With just 35 laps remaining at Indianapolis Motor Speedway Sunday, Juan Pablo Montoya was flagged for speeding on pit road.

This error, which he vehemently denied over his radio, gave Jimmie Johnson the opening he needed to take the lead. Pole sitter Mark Marth attempted to pass Johnson in the final laps, but Johnson's car was too strong.

This week's race will be at Pocono Raceway. ESPN will cover the race at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Last year involved a three-way deal between the Pittsburgh Pirates, Boston Red Sox and Los Angeles Dodgers, which included a Manny Ramirez trade.

The Fort Benning Combatives Tournament, open to Soldiers around post, is set for Saturday at Smith Fitness Center.

It's a tough competition, said SFC Tohonn Nicholson, NCOIC at the Combatives School. "It's a big deal to win at this stage because then you go on to represent the best in the Army at the Army Combatives Championship," Nicholson said.

The top two in each weight class will compete against other Soldiers in the Army Combatives Championship Sept. 17-20 at Smith Fitness Center. The top three in each weight class will receive medals.

During the semifinals, competitors will fight with standard rules, which includes grappling and no striking. And during the finals, competitors will fight with Around 1,600 archers from around the world, including Britain and South Africa, competed in the Archery Shooters Association Classic, which featured junior amateur to Senior Pro classes, July 23 to Sunday at Uchee Creek. About 3,500 spectators watched the archers shoot 3D animal targets at various distances.

"Some of the best shooters in the world compete in this tournament," said Cliff Hughes, Uchee Creek Campground and Marina manager.

SFC Mike Smith, an instructor with the 4th Ranger Training Battalion, competed for the third year.

The 39-year-old Ranger, along with his teammates, Hughes, pro Tim Gillingham, SFC Darren Cufaude and 1SG Randy Thompson, took first place in the Morale, Welfare and Recreation team shoot July 23. They won the Commander's Cup trophy.

Smith, Cufaude and Thompson have competed together in the archery tournament for three years. The first year, they took eighth place, in 2008 they took third and this year they took first with a score of 217.

"Finally. We won," Smith said. "It was exhilarating standing in front of a large audience being announced as the Fort Benning champions for 2009."

"I love archery," he said. "It's a way to keep my hunting skills sharp year-round and when I shoot, I can relax and just think about the target."

The key to archery is being mentally focused with every shot, said Smith, who has shot archery since he was 12.

Cufaude said accuracy is key in archery.

"If you are off an inch, it could be the difference between getting a 12 and getting an 8," he said. "I like archery because it's an individual sport. If you miss the target, you can't blame anybody but yourself."

Coach emphasizes positive attitude

Rachel L. Watkins

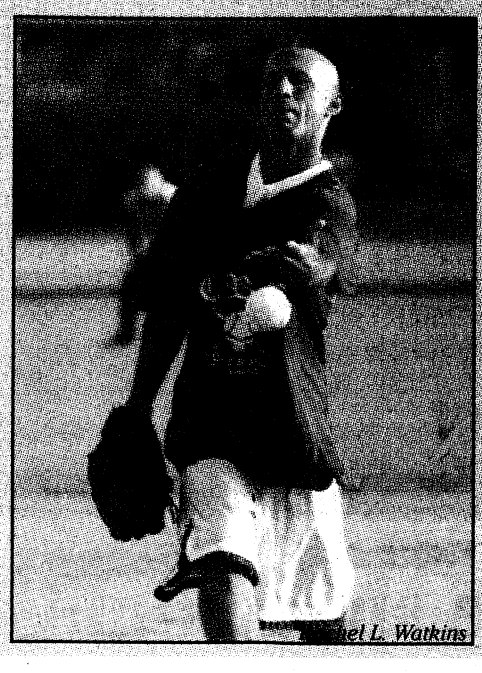
A positive attitude is important for every softball game — it's contagious, said Rodger Mendenhall.



"Having a positive attitude can be the difference between winning and losing a game," he said. "You have to go in thinking you will win because if you don't, there is a bigger chance you won't."

Mendenhall coaches and plays for the CONUS Replacement Center Team One in the post intramural softball league. He's played softball at the post, intramural and recreational levels at Fort Bliss, Texas, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and Alabama.

"When I grew up, there were no Playstations or cell phones — we had sports," said the 40-year-old. "We played whatever sport was in season. My parents used to tell my brothers and me to go outside and not come back until the streetlights came on."

Mendenhall said an outstanding softball player is one who has talent, athletic ability, desire, determination and is someone who practices a lot.

USAMU Soldiers win three national championships

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Soldiers from the U.S.Army Marksmanship Unit continued their season after claiming three national championships.

The winning commenced at the U.S. National Shotgun Championships in Colorado Springs, Colo., when SSG Josh Richmond won the gold medal in the double trap event July 13. Richmond outlasted two other competitors in a shoot-off, including fellow USAMU Soldier and teammate SPC Jeff Holguin to claim the gold. Holguin won the silver medal. Richmond scored a total of 268 targets out of 300, not including the 15 he hit in the shoot-off.

Richmond's results were similar to other competitions he has competed in this year. He won a gold medal at the Munich World Cup event and the bronze at a World Cup event in San Marino. Next up for Richmond, Holguin and the USAMU Shotgun team are the World Championships in Slovenia, the top event of the year.

The following day the skeet shooters came out in force at the International Shooting Complex. SPC Vincent Hancock, a gold medal winner from the summer 2008 Olympics, claimed his first gold medal at the National Championships in skeet, defeating teammate SFC Shawn Dulohery in a shoot-off.

Hancock led after day one, Dulohery bounced back and was on top after day two and then Hancock put together two perfect rounds to get to the shoot-off. It was Dulohery's final National Championship as his Army career retirement is a few months away. A four-time National Champion, he wanted to taste victory one final time on the big stage, but Hancock came away with one more target than his veteran teammate. The duo scored a 268 in the event before the shoot-off.

Two time zones to the east, a Soldier from the USAMU was the first active-duty Soldier to win the Individual National Pistol Championship in 24 years at the National Pistol Matches at Camp Perry, Ohio.

SFC James Henderson, USAMU, won the most coveted individual prize in all of national pistol shooting when his score of 2,646 was enough to win the top prize at the competition July 18. The best civilian and military pistol shooters in the country show up for the pre-eminent event every year and Henderson, who won the award as a member of the Army Reserves, was unequivocally the top dog as he also won the individual championship for the .22-caliber and center-fire matches.

"This tournament isn't just a tournament," said Nicholson, who has deployed to Iraq and Afghanistan several times. "It's about preparing Soldiers for the battlefield. It's realistic training. The more trained they are in combatives, the better. Combatives focuses on the warrior ethos and teaches Soldiers how to close with the enemy should they encounter a close quarters battle too close to use a weapon or if a weapon malfunctions. They can still close with the enemy and still survive using combatives."

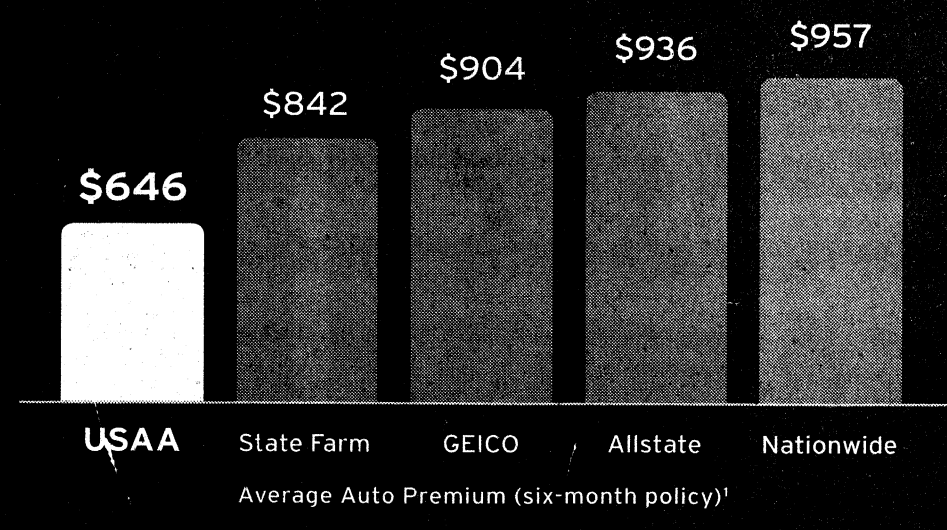
"You can't go out to the field one night a week and swing the bat and think that you are going to be a great hitter," he said.

Mendenhall practices four weekdays and whenever he has time on the weekends.



His team has a record of 6-1 in the regular season. He said he has been training his team for the postseason Commander's Cup Softball Championship.

"My goal for this season is to take home the cup," he said.

USAMU Soldier shoots his way into national record books

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PAO

The U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Service Pistol team set its sights on the National Pistol Matches when the 2009 shooting schedule came out, and that training paid off in a big way, specifically for one Soldier who now calls himself a national champion.

The National Rifle Association and the Civilian Marksmanship Program held their annual National Pistol Championships July 12-19 at Camp Perry, Ohio. SFC James Henderson swept every major individual award, breaking national records along the way and establishing himself as the standard bearer in service pistol.

"SFC Henderson accomplished a feat that will undoubtedly be the topic of discussion among shooting circles for the foreseeable future," said LTC Daniel Hodne, commander of USAMU.

The Soldier's dominance commenced at the NRA's Pistol Championship when he won the Harrison Trophy as the top individual with a score of 2646, becoming the first active-duty Soldier to win the national championship in 24 years. He also finished in first place in the individual .22-caliber and center-fire events.

At the National Trophy Pistol Matches, Henderson took it up a notch, winning every event he was entered in and also led his team to a championship.

Henderson began the day winning the President's Pistol Match, breaking his own record that he set a few days before by scoring 393 out of 400 with 17 bull's-eyes. The record was first broken during a warm-up match July 14 by teammate SSG Robert Park II, who scored a 389. Henderson scored a 392 to win the Service Pistol warm-up match.

Seven USAMU Soldiers placed in the top ten of the President's Pistol Match. SSG John Ennis IV placed second and SSG Lyman Grover came in third.

Next up was the National Trophy Individual Pistol Match, where Henderson won the General Custer Trophy for the third time. Henderson set a new national record with a score of 297 out of 300, breaking a record that had stood since 1978. Park and Ennis tied for third place in the event.

Competing in the National Trophy Team Individual match and with a score of 291 out of 300, Henderson won both the Military Police Corps Trophy as the top military service pistol shooter and the General Mellon Trophy as the top pistol shooter in the Army, encompassing all active, reserve and National Guard Soldiers. Ennis placed second in both categories and Park finished third in the Army category.

With all of the points in the National Team and National Individual Trophy matches combined for an aggregate score, Henderson won the U.S. Forces Command Trophy with a score of 586, breaking his own national record he held since 2007. Once again, teammates Ennis and Park came in behind Henderson for second and third place, respectively.

Michael Molinaro
SFC James Henderson, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, fires on a target during an individual match at the National Trophy Pistol Matches July 19. Henderson won the Individual National Pistol Championship and several other awards, breaking four national records along the way.

Henderson was named as the Overall Individual Service Pistol Champion with a score of 981.

"What SFC Henderson accomplished this season is best left undescribed, as there are no words that can put it in a context that does the feat justice," said SFC Jason St. John, service pistol team NCOIC. "Never in the history of marksmanship competition that dates over 100 years has anyone done this. No one ever has or probably ever will."

The crowning achievement for the USAMU was the Blue team winning the Gold Cup Trophy as the National Trophy Pistol Team Match champion. The team was led by Henderson, Park, Ennis and SFC Daryl Szarenski with a score of 1142. It was the third consecutive year that a four-man team from the USAMU won the award.

With the success of the nationals upholding the unit's reputation, the service pistol team will return to Fort Benning, and set it sights on its most important mission: raising the standards of marksmanship proficiency and enhancing the Army's combat readiness through many close-quarters marksmanship training programs for various Army units.

"SFC Henderson's accomplishments lend credibility to the Army; they showcase the best of Army Soldier capabilities to the American people," Hodne said.

Tank Killers defeat CRC Team One in 11-10 squeaker

Tank Killers advance in winner's bracket

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Tank Killers defeated CONUS Replacement CenterTeam One in an 11-10 squeaker Monday in their first game of the 2009 postseason Commander's Cup Softball Championship.

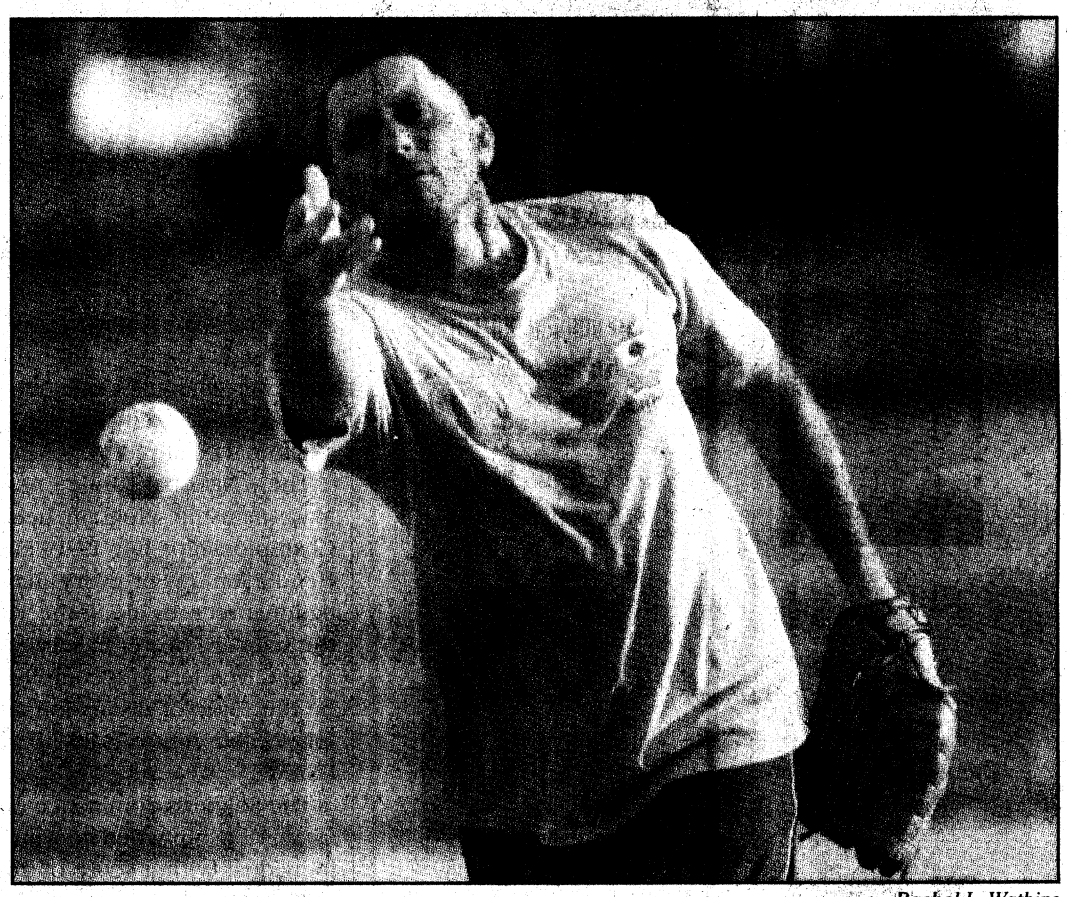
CRC scored three runs in the top of the first inning, while the Tank Killers, B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, remained scoreless after a three-up, three-down inning.

CRC kept its scoring streak going, capitalizing on a Jason Poore two-run double for a 5-0 lead and the Tank Killers scored their first run in the bottom of the second inning.

CRC scored on a Robert Pemberton RBI single and one run on an error while the Tank Killers closed the gap, scoring three runs in the bottom of the third inning. CRC led 7-4.

CRC increased its lead by three runs in the fourth inning. Trailing 10-4, the Tank Killers had their biggest inning in the bottom of the fourth, taking the lead with runs from errors, stealing and a Michael Blair two-run double.

Neither team picked up any more runs in the final inning, sealing the victory for the Tank Killers.



"We were down for a minute, but we kept our heads in the game and had one strong inning and that's what won us the game," said Alan Gaines, Tank Killers assistant coach.

Tank Killers left fielder John Rogers said his team played really well.

"I was hoping we could contain them for a few innings and keep the game close and we did," he said. "I think as long as we minimize errors from the beginning of each game, we can win the championship."

B Co., 2nd Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., won the postseason championships in 2007 and 2008 and Gaines said he wants to win it again.

The Tank Killers will compete in the winner's bracket while CRC Team One is knocked down to the loser's bracket. Look in next week's Bayonet for more coverage of the Championship.

Operation Get Into Shape: There's no turning back

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

This was my last week at the monthlong boot camp at Smith Fitness Center. I made it to the end alive and I lost 8.1 percent body fat. I couldn't be happier and I'm motivated to continue Operation Get Into Shape.

Tuesday, we did four sets of drills including squats with medicine balls, squats with 30-pound sand bags, lateral pull-ups in a plank position and knee lifts. After that, we ran six sprints across the Smith Fitness Center yard. It was definitely a challenge, but I did it.

If anyone asked me four weeks ago if I thought I could do these exercises, I would have said, "are you crazy?"

Operation Get Into Shape has been a reality check. I started camp out of shape and unmotivated about exercise. Now, I want to eat healthy and work out. Strange, but I like it. I haven't felt like this since college when I was weight training four days a week and learning martial arts in 2004 and 2005.

Eric Dempsey, boot camp instructor and personal fitness trainer, kept me motivated through camp. When I wanted to quit during a difficult workout, he encouraged me.

The most difficult thing for me was to start exercising because I didn't do it for so long. Now that I'm into exercising, there's no turning back.

I have come a long way, but there is more I can do. I plan to go to the gym six days a week and stay on the nutrition plan.

I am so excited with Operation Get Into Shape and I can't wait to wear my wedding dress — only 38 more days.

The next session of boot camp begins Tuesday. The class meets from 9:15-10:15 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday at Smith Fitness Center. Participants are given nutrition and cardio plans to use outside of class.

The cost is $120 per monthlong session. The cost is $60 for those who get a friend to sign up. The participant who loses the most body fat in a session gets another monthlong session free.

Gateway planned for I-185

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Old Bill and Follow Me are standing side by side. Right now, the 12-foot bronze sculptures are in Loveland, Colo., but soon, they'll be here, where they'll be prominent fixtures at the new Maneuver Center of Excellence.

The Trooper of the Plains, also known as Old Bill, and the Follow Me statue, representing the Armor and Infantry branches respectively, will sit on top of two 50-foot pedestals near the Victory Drive overpass on I-185, said John Flournoy, chairman of the Columbus Gateway Foundation, which is funding the project. They will form part of the new "gateway" to Fort Benning.

The sculptures were cast by Bronze Services of Loveland earlier this year but won't be shipped to Georgia until the landscaping is ready. Flournoy said he expects them to be in place in February or March of next year.

The $5.5 million entryway will include 10 American flags on each side of the road. Each flag will have a 20-foot fountain in front of it. Both the flags and the fountains will be lighed at night.

Old Bill and Follow Me will face visitors as they enter Fort Benning. Exiting, visitors will see two bronze and steel eagles on 50-foot columns on either side of the interstate.

"The eagles were chosen because they're a symbol of American freedom," Flournoy said. "They're bald eagles in flight, their wings are spread out 12 feet wide."

On the north side of the bridge, bronze letters will spell out Fort Benning, Georgia, and on the south side, Columbus, Georgia.

The new gateway will be visible for quite some distance, Flournoy said, especially at night.

"It will be something special ... the first impression when you come on Fort Benning," he said.

Sculptures of Follow Me and the Trooper of the Plains sit outside the offices of Bronze Services in Loveland, Colo., where they were cost in bronze. Follow Me was completed in Feb. 25. Trooper of the Plains was finished May 14.

"This event introduced the teachers to what the parents of some of their students go through on a daily basis," said Jim Sims, principal of Chattahoochee County High School. "Some of the teachers had hesitations going into the first challenge, but I give them credit, they mustered up."

The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, brought together nearly 50 Chattahoochee County school workers for a Partners in Education event July 28 to help them prepare for the school year.

The educators and workers put their skills to the test Monday at Fort Benning's Leadership Reaction Course.

Originally known as the "Adopt-A-School" program, Partners in Education provides opportunities to improve education in the greater Columbus area by community involvement in the public school system, according to the Greater Columbus PIE Web site.

One of the goals of the event was to build unity and cohesion within the teaching staff, Sims said.

"We brought together people who don't normally work together," he said.

Hinder to headline Army concert Aug. 8

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"Come ready to have fun. We'll make it a party. We always do," said Cody Hanson, drummer for Hinder, a rock band that will perform Aug. 8 on Wetherby Field, Fort Benning.

Part of the Army Concert Tour, the show, which is open to the public, includes opening act The Veer Union. Tickets are $20 at Omega World Travel, Directorate of Family, Morale, Welfare and Recreation headquarters in Building 2783 or online at www.TicketMaster.com, and $25 at the door. Gates open at 5:30 p.m. and the concert starts at 7 p.m.

Hinder has done several concerts at military bases in Europe and the Middle East, Hanson said, and it's always something they enjoy.

The band always tries to meet service members when they perform on an installation, Hanson said.

"We just wanted to say thank you to the Soldiers for everything they do," he said. "Without them, we couldn't do our jobs. It's cool to entertain people who give up so much on a daily basis. Hopefully, we'll provide a little bit of fun and entertainment for a night — that's about all we can offer. It's something we love doing, and we're looking forward to it."

People not familiar with their "straight forward fun rock" style of music can visit their Web site, www.hindermusic.com, Hanson said.

Fort Benning DFMWR officials chose Hinder because they are well known to teens and adults in their 20s and 30s, said Donna Hyatt, acting marketing director for DFMWR.

The headlining act has several worldwide hits and promises "an excellent time" to anyone who comes, Hyatt said.

"What we're trying to do is bring in the music our Soldiers and families want to hear," she said. "The music is good, and this is a great way to have a fun night for everyone without breaking the bank."

Hyatt cautioned that the concert will be most appropriate for older children and adults.

Pets, coolers and cameras are prohibited at the outdoor concert. Food and drinks will be available for purchase by tokens. Sponsors will also be on site with giveaways.

Directions to Wetherby Field are online at http://www.benningmwr.com.

Schools prep for first day back

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning schools are gearing up for the first day of classes Friday. Although teachers officially start back Monday, many of them, like Dr. Kris Keske, a third-grade teacher at Wilson Elementary, have worked during the summer to prepare their rooms.

"I want to create an attractive and stimulating environment, and that does take a lot of planning," said Keske, who has taught on post for more than 20 years. "I spend more waking time in this classroom than I do at home, so I want to make sure it's just right before the school year starts."

"Just right" meant bringing in some new decorations, including a drum, where students can learn about music and sound vibrations, Keske said, and African souvenirs from her three-week stay in Liberia.

Keske plans to show students wood carvings, painted tapestries, traditional clothing and pictures. She also hopes to start a pen pal program between her class and an African school.

"Learning is stronger when you make connections from different contexts ... so (I) arrange the classroom and put things in it that would stimulate children's interest in the world," she said. "They might never get the opportunity to go to Africa, but they get to experience a little bit of Africa with me. I'm preparing these kids for life; that's why integration is so important. You become a better citizen when you're aware of people and places around you."

An integrated, interconnected approach to learning will better prepare children for a 21st-century world, said Keske, who tries to make everything in her classroom, from the elk antlers on the wall to the pet turtle,

Schools: Focus on continuous school improvement

Franklin, a learning opportunity for students.

Also in preparation for the students' return, Keske is changing her bulletin board.

Bulletin boards used to be the traditional place for teachers' rules, but not anymore, she said.

"Now, we have more emphasis on student-made work," she said. "So, I'm redesigning my bulletin board so each child has a space to put up something he or she is proud of. The big deal in education now is people assuming responsibility for their own learning. I'm thinking if I can have the kids pick out something they are proud of then that might encourage ownership."

Teachers across post schools are making similar changes, redoing displays, bringing in conversation pieces. Cathy Tuggle, a teacher at Loyd Elementary, said she plans to implement ideas she has learned from her summer social studies and reading courses into her first-grade classroom.

In the 26 years she has been teaching the first grade, a lot has changed, said Tuggle, who tries to keep her teaching methods current and relevant.

Her other focus is straightening up her room and its "Tuggle's tigers" theme for the children who will arrive next week.

"You want to make sure they're comfortable and look around and see this is a fun place. You want to make sure they want to come back the next day," she said.

Tuggle's classroom will have new furniture for the start of the year. Part of the Department of Defense Education Activity's replacement cycle, all first-grade classrooms on post will be newly outfitted. There will also be new furniture for the two new kindergarten classes created at Dexter and Wilson Elementary.

The two classes, created in an effort to reduce student teacher ratios, reflect increased enrollment patterns, said Dr. Dell McMullen, Fort Benning Schools superintendent.

Enrollment is up across the board, McMullen said. Wilson Elementary and Faith Middle School are seeing the greatest influx, with nearly 100 more students at each compared with this time last year.

Each school is getting new teachers — 28 in all. Schools will also be operating under new hours, McMullen said.

"When we looked at our transportation dollars, it was clear we could save several hundred thousand dollars by reusing the buses we have," she said.

All six elementary schools will start and end 15 minutes later than they did last year, while Faith Middle School will start and end a half an hour sooner, McMullen said. This approach allows the buses to be reused in the mornings and afternoons — a savings of more than $400,000.

Even with some changes under way this year, the focus is still on continuous school improvement, McMullen said. School Improvement Leadership Teams, made up of teachers and administrators from each school, have met during the summer to discuss specific goals for each school.

"They look at data, evaluate programs, examine the research to ensure the best teaching practices. Essentially, they are leading the school improvement efforts," McMullen said.

A school's goals reflect what is most needed for their students, she said.

McBride Elementary, for example, is focusing on writing skills across the curriculum and problem solving. White Elementary is focusing on critical thinking and reading comprehension.

"We are so excited about the first day of school," McMullen said.

"There is nothing else throughout the whole year that has the same feeling as the first day. We want to make sure we have everything in order so that every child and parent will feel comfortable and confident that we're going to have the best school year yet."

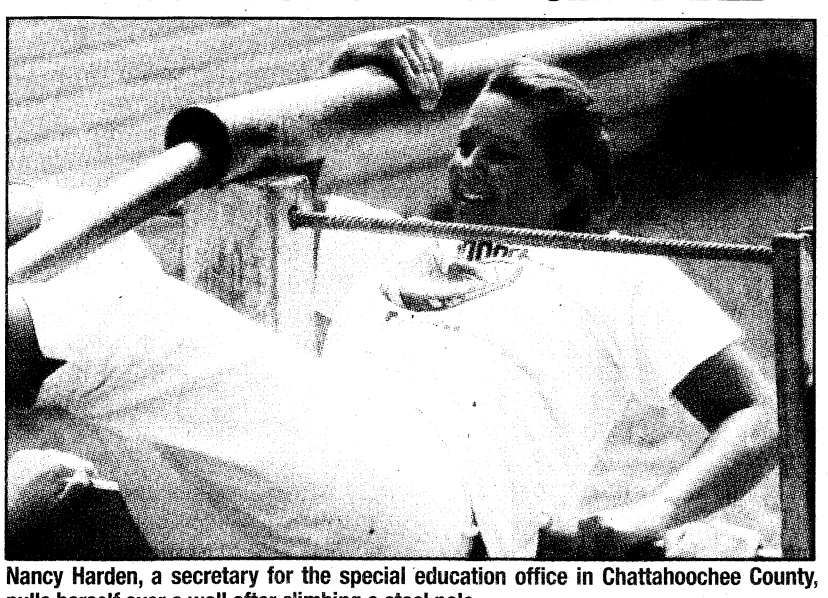
has conducted several events with Chattahoochee County schools in the past, but this is the first time school workers were invited to post.



"In the past, we've helped the high school with donations, banquet awards ceremonies, college fairs and giving classes on attaining goals," said MSG Christopher Goodrow, operations NCOIC.

"We invited them here to give them exposure to what we do."

The event began in the morning with the "Airborne 5000" demonstration. New students at the Airborne School sat alongside the school workers to get their first taste of what Airborne School offers. After watching the demonstration, teachers loaded up in busses and headed to the Leadership Reaction Course.

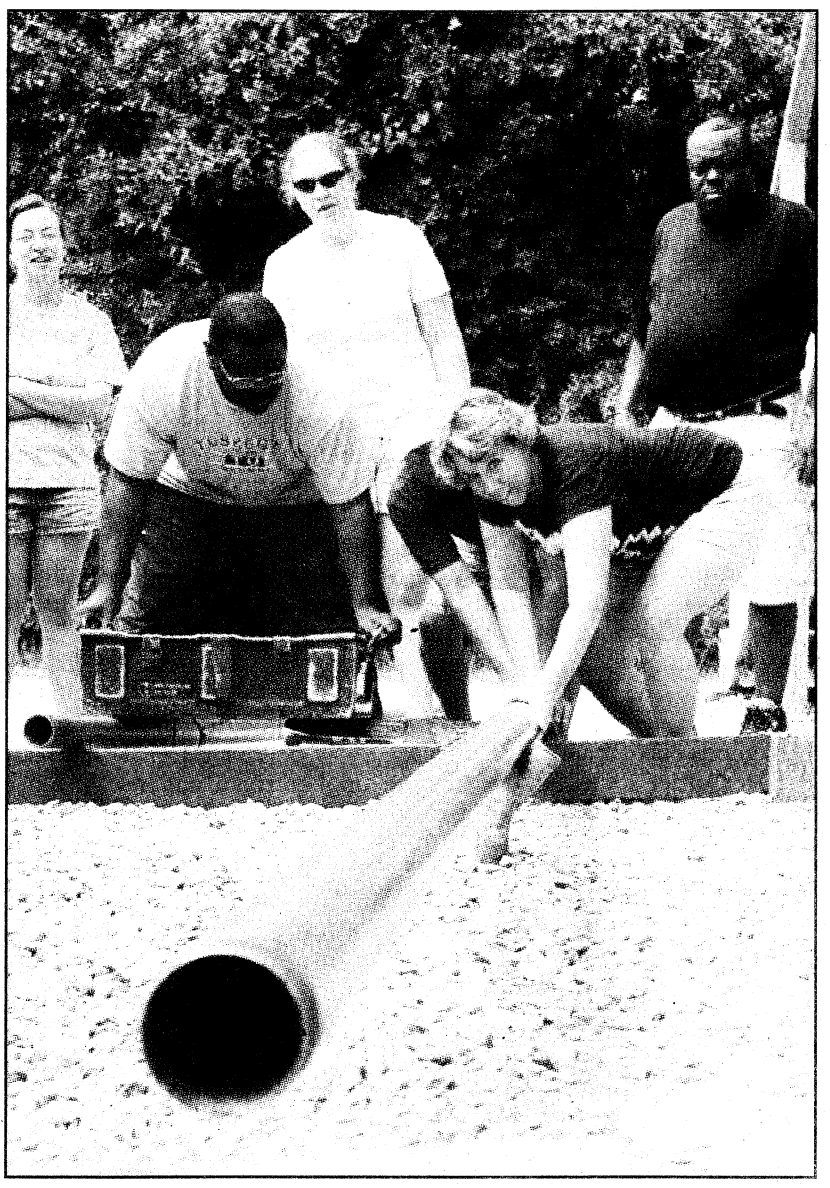
At the obstacle course site, teachers were divided into six teams to complete three of six possible challenges. Each challenge encouraged participants to work as a team to brainstorm and execute the mission, said CPT Michael Rybacki, commander of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1st Bn. (Airborne), 507th PIR.

Most of the challenges involved the teachers making bridges over pools of water using long boards, ropes and ammunition containers. One challenge involved crossing a "land mine" zone using steel cylinders and another had teams climbing steel poles to cross a body of water.

Nancy Harden, a secretary for the special education office in Chattahoochee County, pulls herself over a wall after climbing a steel pole.

Frank Saunders, a special education and math teacher at the high school, said a good lesson to take away from the experience was that in any situation people could contribute positively.

"We all have strengths and weaknesses," said Saunders, whose team completed two of the challenges. "You have to find a person's strengths and utilize everyone."



"You get to see what Soldiers go through and it gives you a lot of respect for them," said Nancy Harden, a special education secretary for Chattahoochee County.

Harden said lessons learned at the Leadership Reaction Course event tie into educating students.

"It takes a lot of different minds coming together to get through these challenges, just like many teachers must come together to give students a great education," she said.

Sims said he hopes this will become an annual event for the school workers.

"This is building pride and spirit in our school," he said.

Gateway: Scheduled for completion in summer 2010 morale for the thousands of people who visit, live or work on post.

Flournoy will be honored today at the Fort Benning quarterly recognition of excellence breakfast. MG Michael Ferriter, the post commanding general, will present Flournoy with a Follow Me statue to thank him for his work on the gateway.

"He's a former Marine with a heart for the military," said Bridgett Siter, with the Maneuver Center of Excellence public affairs. "He has worked doggedly over the past few years to see to it that this gateway will make a powerful statement about how we value the Fort Benning community and the Soldiers who serve this nation."

An initiative from the local community, the project shows community support for the installation, said Jay Brown, the post Base Realignment and Closure program manager.

After BRAC was announced, Flournoy assessed the main entrance to post as "non-distinctive" — it didn't fit with the caliber of the future Maneuver Center of Excellence, Brown said.

After the gateway's completion, slated for summer 2010, anyone entering post will know that it is one of the premier training installations in the Army, he said.

All current construction near the main gate is related to one of two Georgia Department of Transportation projects: the widening of I-185 to three lanes on each side or the lengthening of the on and off ramps at exits 1A and 1B to allow for easier acceleration and deceleration.

The first project will take about 18 months to two years to complete, said David Spear, press secretary for the Georgia DoT. Work on the exit ramps will be completed by October.

Construction on the gateway should begin in a few weeks, Flournoy said.

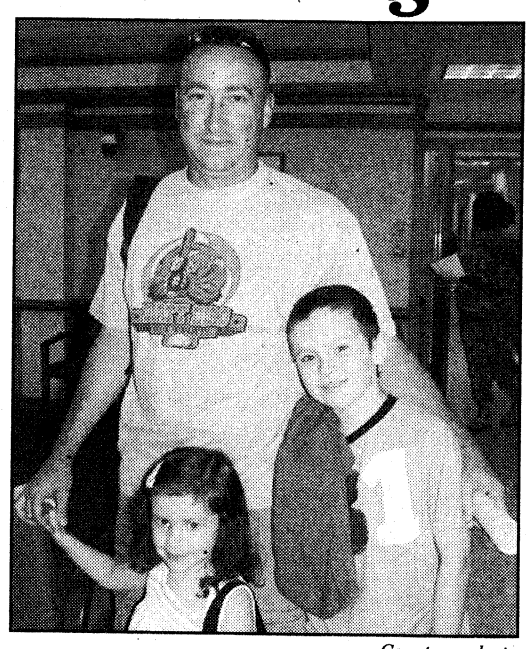
Martin Army hospital offers school screenings

Patrick A. Thomas
MARTIN ARMY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Three Saturdays during the summer Martin Army Community Hospital offers school physicals and immunizations for children who attend or play sports in the Georgia or Alabama school systems.



SFC Trevor Proefrock, who has been on Fort Benning since March, said this service is beneficial to Soldiers and their families because everything is done at one convenient location.

"This whole process has been quick and easy," he said.

An advantage of the Saturday screenings is parents don't need take time off from work, said CPT David Hurst, chief of Pediatric Services.

ENT (ears, nose, and throat) and physical forms for prospective students and athletes are finished in a single visit that lasts about an hour, he said.

Katrina Edwards, a licensed practical nurse for almost 10 years, volunteered to work Saturday because getting children immunized is important, she said.

"Immunization is the first step in the beginning of a child's healthy life," she said.

This year's screenings were July 11 and Saturday. The final screening is Aug. 15.

Workers complete MASCAL

Patrick A. Thomas
MARTIN ARMY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Soldiers and civilians from Martin Army Community Hospital performed a mass casualty, known as a MASCAL, exercise in tandem with several hospitals within the Columbus Regional Healthcare System and surrounding regional facilities. These exercises were designed to test objectives and hazards specific to various regions of the state, and the design driven by the needs of regional hospitals.

Using this exercise as a tool to identify omissions in an agency's response during a MASCAL situation allows emergency operational plans to be evaluated and reorganized if indicated.

The exercise covered several real-life scenarios, including a notification from the National Weather Service that a tornado watch was in effect in this region. Later, those reports indicated that several different tornadoes touched down causing severe damage and injuries to the Martin Army Community Hospital facility, staff and patients.

The Emergency Operations Center for Martin Army was activated and in response to the scenario, vertically evacuated five prepositioned patients, and notionally transported them to the Medical Center.

A simulated 30 trauma patients from outside the Martin Army area of operation arrived shortly after the virtual tornado strike.

It was during this portion of the exercise where a chemical decontamination site was established because of a traffic accident that spilled pesticide. The final catastrophic event in the exercise entailed a military vehicle humvee accident in which 10 injured Soldiers needed medical treatment at the hospital.

"Martin Army Community Hospital set the Gold Standard in comparison to other agencies and facilities," said Bob Wentworth, an observer and controller from the University of Georgia.

The training mission at Martin Army never ceases, said LTC David Aut, acting chief of staff for the hospital.

"It is important that we remain vigilant and trained," he said. "Instances like Hurricane Katrina in 2005 and the Northridge Earthquake of 1994 were unforeseen disasters but they demonstrated where emergency contingency plans could be honed to minimize the loss of life, and maximize the mission of saving lives."

Commissary customers reminded of CertifiCheck deadline

DECA

FORT LEE, Va. – The deadline for Defense Commissary Agency customers to redeem CertifiCheck gift certificates is today.

This deadline affects units, organizations and other customers with unredeemed CertifiChecks who do not qualify for an extension.

Friday, DeCA had announced an extension for authorized customers who were deployed or away on temporary duty from March 6 to today.

These customers still have until July 31, 2010, to redeem gift certificates in a military commissary.

To take advantage of the extension, customers who were deployed or on temporary duty for the entire period from March 6 to today must complete a form and have it signed by a supervisor, certifying that the duty took place during that time.

The necessary form can be downloaded from the DeCA Web site, www.commissaries.com.

It also will be available in store customer service areas and cash offices. The customer must present the signed form along with the gift certificate to a cashier at the point of purchase.

Shortly after CertifiChecks Inc. ceased operations Feb. 26, DeCA announced that its customers could continue using their commissary gift checks in stores until today. Since then, certificates with a face value of about $732,705 have been accepted by DeCA commissaries through July 18.

The company, based out of Dayton, Ohio, formally filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy in April.

Since 2002, more than $20 million in gift certificates have been purchased for authorized commissary customers, including more than $3.9 million in fiscal 2008.

Ramadan stands for peace, hope

Chaplain (MAJ) Carlos Huerta
30TH ADJUTANT GENERAL BATTALION (RECEPTION)

Muslims at Fort Benning, in the surrounding Columbus community and around the world prepare to embrace the Islamic Holy Month of Ramadan beginning on or about Aug. 21 through about Sept. 19. (The exact date of the start and finish of Ramadan depends on when the new moon occurs.)

As a Soldier, I have experienced the special holiness that Muslims bring to this season.

I also have experienced those who purport themselves to be Muslims and then use this time to attack and kill those who do not believe in what they do.

For many non-Muslims, Ramadan may bring images of terrorist attacks, but these images deny the true purpose and meaning of Ramadan.

It was during Ramadan in Mosul, Iraq, in 2005 that I experienced both. It was during a terrorist attack that I met a 7-year-old Iraqi boy whose name I never learned.

He came into the combat surgical hospital with a severe head wound and needed blood. It turned out we had the same type, so I gave him a pint of mine. I stayed with him, holding his hand. I knew he was dying.

All around us there were the doctors and medics talking and screaming medical jargon and commands in English. For his last sounds on earth, I wanted him to hear, if even subconsciously, sounds that would comfort his soul, sounds that were familiar to him.

I got a Holy Qur'an from an Iraqi translator and started chanting to him in Arabic passages he would have been familiar with as a young Muslim. As I chanted I watched his blood, our blood ooze out from his head wound and held his hand as his soul returned to Allah.

I cried and it was then that I realized the holiness of Ramadan. It was then that I vowed that this child whose name I never knew would not be some forgotten statistic in a war. It was then that I promised myself that when Ramadan came around I would remind all those who would listen what Ramadan was really about.

People who have had the advantage of living in Islamic countries or have Muslim friends know they approach and enter this month with great expectation and joy. While it is true that Muslims observe a daily fast for nearly 30 days from dawn to twilight, the fasting is only a small part of the hope of Ramadan.

Ramadan is about the journey. It is about the Muslim, as an individual and as part of the community, finding his or her way home to Allah.

The path of life can be very complicated with its twists, turns and dead ends. As humans, we often lose focus of what our existence is about and what our purpose is here.

It is so easy to chase the wind, to consider wealth, fame or promotion as the point and sole purpose of our existence. It is too easy to forget that our goal on this Earth should be to love justice, seek mercy, and walk humbly with our God.

For some of us, it may be too inconvenient to remember that what God requires of us is to feed the hungry, clothe the naked and take the homeless into our residence. It makes us uncomfortable to be reminded that, as Jesus said, we should take care of the "least of these," our brethren.

This is what Ramadan means for Muslims. It is about bringing life back into focus through selfless service and devotion to duty to Allah and humanity. It is about losing the baggage that a year of living builds up on the soul. Ramadan offers the soul its chance for an annual checkup and spring cleaning.

Many religious traditions include fasting as a path to introspection, self-reflection and as a way to bond our soul to the creator. Judaism observes many fasts, including Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. Christian fast days are equally numerous and are for the same purpose.

Ramadan, rather than something that separates, is truly a holy season that can bring Jews, Christians, Muslims and others together in dialogue concerning our mutual hopes, dreams and responsibilities.

Ramadan is about hope. Ramadan is about bringing a holy peace to the soul and the world. And for me, Ramadan is about remembering a little Muslim boy who showed me the way to God.

To our Muslim brothers and sisters with whom we share our life at Fort Benning — Soldier, civilian and family — I wish you all a Ramadan Mubarak, a blessed Ramadan.

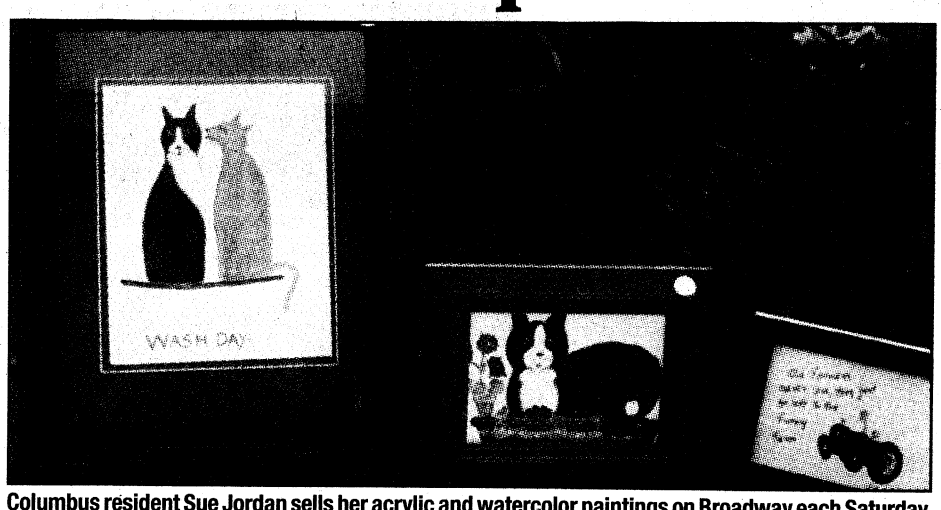
Market boasts local specialties

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET



Art, jewelry, cookbooks, cakes and crafts — these are just a few of the items you will find at Market Days on Broadway. In its third year, Market Days brings a variety of vendors and their homemade and handcrafted wares to the 1100 block of Broadway in downtown Columbus from 9 a.m. to noon each Saturday.

I made my first trip of the summer Saturday to examine the bright flowers, delicious breads and sweet-smelling soaps. Like you might expect at a friendly village market, I ran into a couple familiar faces and came away with a treasured purchase: a darling hand-sewn bib cloth for my niece on the way. It's all the more special since I know no one else will give the exact same pink and green cloth to my sister as a present. To personalize it, Cocoa Dreams — a local home business that makes aprons, clothes, blankets and more — will monogram the article.

Meeting the people behind the products is always a special part of the market. I sampled a jalapeño-strawberry spread, out of curiosity, I admit, that was absolutely scrumptious. It was even more of a treat to chat with Cheryl Little and Faye Pepper of Phenix City. The two friends, often mistaken for sisters, they said, started Homemade Delights as a venue for selling jellies, spreads and preserves. They keep their ingredients fresh with figs from their own trees, muscadines from a family member's vines and locally grown peppers from a friend. And the inspiration behind that spicy-sweet jelly?

Jeff McCrea, 19, mans the booth for his dad, SGM Derek McCrea, 197th Infantry Brigade operations sergeant major, who paints acrylic and watercolor paintings. Saturday was their second week at the market.

Columbus resident Sue Jordan sells her acrylic and watercolor paintings on Broadway each Saturday. She started painting in 2007, but this is her first year at the market, she said.

"We had some jalapeños and some strawberries," Little said. "We just put the two flavors together."

If you're looking for organic food, the market is for you. Many local growers bring their produce, which varies as the season shifts. You can always depend on Harmony Hill Farm, from Pine Mountain Valley, Ga., to be there with pesticide-free veggies and eggs from free-range chickens.

Cathy's Cakes is another business offering delectable cuisine. Her pound cakes — Dutch chocolate chip, banana walnut, fresh-squeezed lemon, pumpkin and cream cheese — are wonderful. Like many others who set up shop on the sidewalk, owner Cathy Thorpe has been sharing her talent with family and friends for some time but only recently opened it up to the public. Thorpe often sets aside special requests for regular patrons, who recognize her and her mother, Janice Yarnall, every Saturday at the market, but she also enjoys meeting new customers, she said. Some of them, like 1LT Bruce Malkenhorst, just make her day, she said.

Malkenhorst bought a red, white and blue ribboned cake earlier this summer at Market Days. On the 24-hour flight to Kuwait, he ate some, then later shared the rest of the cake with his unit to celebrate their first week in country.

"It was still very fresh and gave us all a taste of home," he said in a thank-you e-mail to Thorpe.

Besides the edible delights, there are plenty of handcrafted treasures, from photographs and wooden pens, made by Air Force veteran Johnny Watson, to SGM Derek McCrea's acrylic and watercolor paintings. Some vendors even offer classes, so you can pick up a new skill.

Visit the market Saturday mornings through November. For more information or details on how to set up a booth, call UPtown Columbus at 706-596-0111.

Maelee's Handmade Crafts, Sewing & Gifts, one of the many booths at Market Days on Broadway, features decorative plates, totes, frames and jars. Maelee's also offers sewing, craft classes and home parties.

Nathan and Cynthia Chapman of Harmony Hill Farm, Pine Mountain Valley, Ga., provide locally grown produce free of chemicals and pesticides every Saturday at Market Days on Broadway.

FUNNY PEOPLE

George is a successful stand up comedian who learns he has an untreatable blood disorder and is given less than a year to live. Ira is a struggling up-and-coming comedian who works at a deli and has yet to figure out his onstage persona. One night, these two perform at the same club and George takes notice of Ira. George then hires Ira to be his semi-personal assistant as well as his friend.

The film stars Adam Sandler, Seth Rogen and Leslie Mann. It is rated R for language, crude sexual humor and sexuality.

ALIENS IN THE ATTIC

Kids on a family vacation must fight off an attack by knee-high alien invaders with world-destroying ambitions — while the youngsters' parents remain clueless about the battle.

The film stars Carter Jenkins and Ashley Tisdale. It is rated PG for action violence, suggestive humor and language.

THE COLLECTOR

Handyman and ex-con Arkin aims to repay a debt to his ex-wife by robbing his new employer's country home. Unfortunately for Arkin, a far worse enemy has already laid claim to the property — and the family. As the seconds tick down to midnight, he becomes a reluctant hero trapped by a masked "Collector" in a maze of lethal invention — the Spanish Inquisition as imagined by Rube Goldberg — trying to rescue the family he came to rob.

The film stars Josh Stewart, Madeline Zima and Michael Reilly Burke. It is rated R for pervasive sadistic bloody violence, language, sexuality and nudity.

NOW SHOWING

G-FORCE

Armed with the latest high-tech spy equipment, a covert team of trained guinea pigs discover that the fate of the world is in their paws. Tapped for the G-FORCE are guinea pigs squad leader Darwin, outrageous weapons expert Blaster and sexy martial arts pro Juarez.

G-Force stars the voices of Bill Nighy and Will Arnett. It is rated PG for action and rude humor.

ORPHAN

The tragic loss of their unborn child has devastated Kate and John, taking a toll on both their marriage and Kate's fragile psyche as she is plagued by nightmares. When the couple decides to adopt a child, they find themselves drawn to an orphan named Esther. But after Esther moves in, an alarming series of events begins to unfold.

Concerned for her family, Kate tries to get John and others to see past Esther's sweet facade. But her warnings go unheeded till it may be too late.

The film stars Peter Sarsgaard, Vera Farmiga, Isabelle Fuhrman and Lorry Ayers. It is rated R for disturbing violence, some sexuality and language.

THE UGLY TRUTH

Abby Richter's search for Mr. Perfect has left her hopelessly single. The romantically challenged morning show producer is in for a rude awakening when her bosses team her with Mike Chadway, a hardcore TV personality who promises to spill the ugly truth on what makes men and women tick.

The movie stars Katherine Heigl and Gerard Butler. It is rated R for sexual content and language.

HARRY POTTER AND THE HALF-BLOOD PRINCE

Voldemort is tightening his grip on both the muggle and wizarding worlds and Hogwarts is no longer the safe haven it once was. Harry suspects dangers may lie within the castle, but Dumbledore is more intent upon preparing him for the final battle. Whiles they work to unlock Voldemort's defenses, Harry finds himself more and more drawn to Ginny. Hogwarts may never be the same.

The movie stars Daniel Radcliff, Emma Watson, Rupert Grint and Michael Gambon. It is rated PG for scary images, violence, language and sensuality.

BRUNO

Brüno, a gay fashionista, is the host of the top-rated night fashion show in any German-speaking country, except Germany. His mission? To become the biggest Austrian celebrity since Hitler. His strategy? To search the globe for fame and love.

The film stars Sacha Baron Cohen and is rated R for pervasive strong and crude sexual content, graphic nudity and language.

I LOVE YOU, BETH COOPER

A nerdy valedictorian proclaims his love for the hottest and most popular girl in school, Beth Cooper, during his graduation speech. Much to his surprise, Beth shows up at his door that very night and decides to show him the best night of his life.

The film stars Lauren London, Paul Rust and Hayden Panettiere. It is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual content, language, teen drinking, drug references and brief violence.

ICE AGE: DAWN OF THE DINOSAURS

While Manny and Ellie await the birth of their mini-mammoth, Sid the sloth gets into trouble when he creates his own makeshift family by hijacking some dinosaur eggs. Ice Age stars the voices of Ray Romano, John Leguizamo, Denis Leary and Queen Latifah. It is rated PG for mild humor and peril.

TRANSFORMERS: REVENGE OF THE FALLEN

When Sam Witwicky discovers some crucial information about the Transformers' creation, the Decepticons set out to catch him and pick his brain. Optimus Prime must join forces with armies from around the world in order to stage an epic battle against the Decepticons in Egypt.

The movie stars Shia LaBeouf, Megan Fox, Josh Duhamel, Tyrese Gibson, John Turturro and Matthew Marsden. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action violence, language and sexual and drug material.

PUBLIC ENEMIES

While the adventures of John Dillinger's gang — later including Baby Face Nelson and Alvin Karpis — thrilled many, J. Edgar Hoover made Dillinger America's first Public Enemy No. 1 and sent in Melvin Purvis, the dashing "Clark Gable of the FBI." When the gang outwitted Purvis' men, he imported a crew of Western ex-lawmen (newly baptized as agents) and orchestrated epic betrayals. Only then were they able to close in on Dillinger.

The film stars Johnny Depp, Christian Bale and Marion Cotillard. It is rated R for gangster violence and some language.

MY SISTER'S KEEPER

Anna Fitzgerald has served as a donor for her older sister, who has cancer, as long as she can remember. Though Anna misses many opportunities to help her sister, she never resents it. When Anna discovers she was conceived to keep her sister alive, she goes to court to free herself and earn the chance to live her own life.

New security system enhances ACP checks

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Beginning Aug. 17, security guards at the ACPs will use handheld ID card scanners to check the ID of every person entering post.

The scanners, purchased at $7,500 each from Intellicheck Mobilisia, can read CAC cards, contractor badges and most driver's licenses.

Georgia drivers' licenses are encrypted, Webster said, so people who use that as their ID when entering post will have to stop by the visitors center, either at I-185 or Fort Benning Boulevard, to pick up a pass. People who work on Fort Benning and have no other ID to access post will be issued an ID card that

Fort Benning is staying "up-to-date" with a new security measure at the access control points on the installation, said Jim Webster, physical securities specialist for the Directorate of Emergency Services.

Starting Aug. 17, motorists will see security guards at the access control points using handheld ID card scanners.

Soldiers from the 75th Ranger Regiment bail out of a C-17 Globemaster III cargo aircraft Monday during a mass tactical jump in the skies over Fryar Drop Zone. More than 1,000 Rangers in full combat gear took part in the airborne operation, the kickoff event for the Ranger Rendezvous.

BRAC jobs posted

Bridgett Siter
MCOE PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Tuesday's monthly Base Realignment and Closure Community Update at the National Infantry Museum drew a crowd of 170, including elected officials anticipating economic growth, local contractors hoping for a shot at construction projects, and a number of people inquiring about jobs.

Jay Brown, BRAC program manager, offered the following information:

Post officials announced last week that the first jobs created by the post's transformation to the Maneuver Center of Excellence have been approved and posted online. A conservative estimate puts the number of potential jobs created by the transformation at about 3,000, including Department of the Army civilian positions, private hires and contracts. Though the hiring process has begun, Brown said most of the positions will become available in 2010 and 2011. Those seeking employment should monitor the Civilian Personnel Online Web site at www.cpol.army.mil and www.usajobs.com. The MCOE will complete its stand up by September 2011.

The Environmental Impact Statement Record of Decision was signed and will be entered into the Federal Register next week. The signing of the ROD, which details practices and policies that will be employed to mitigate potential negative

Liberian delegation visits Fort Benning

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

A Liberian military defense delegation has come away from a visit to Fort Benning saying they've gained insight into military training that could be used to help stabilize the country and rebuild the Armed Forces of Liberia, currently being restructured after a decade and a half of war.

The three-member delegation led by Liberian Maj. Andrew Wleh, commander of the AFL Training Command, wrapped up a three-day stop at Fort Benning Friday after touring several sites and meeting with key leaders.

The visit, part of a weeklong tour of U.S. military training installations at Fort Benning and Fort Jackson, S.C., was aimed at furthering Liberia's efforts to build an army capable of sustaining security in the country as the United Nations Mission in Liberia draws down its forces, said COL A. L. Rumphrey, chief of the Office of Security Cooperation, U.S. African Command, at the U.S. Embassy in Monrovia, Liberia.

The U.S. government has been heavily involved in Liberia's efforts to grow a quality army, said Rumphrey, who is responsible for helping to rebuild the AFL.

German liaison office's top NCO to bid farewell to post

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

When he arrived at Fort Benning in September 2005 on his first trip to the United States, German army Sgt. Maj. Georg Hof said he felt like a stranger.

Now, the German army liaison's noncommissioned officer is about to return to his homeland after a four-year stint he calls the "best assignment in my 27 years" of military service — and one he even extended by 12 months.

"We had close contact with the Americans always," Hof said Tuesday. "American culture — we know very, very good. We found comrades and friends here (and) had a lot of great times … When I have an opportunity to go to America again, I will go again."

Hof and his wife, Inge, will be honored Monday during a farewell ceremony at the Benning Conference Center. His replacement, German army Sgt. Maj. Bernd Rabenstein, arrived earlier this month but the changeover won't be completed until Aug. 18.

For the past 18 years, Rabenstein was stationed in Mittenwald, site of the German army's Mountain and Winter Combat School, where he most recently served as a company operations sergeant. Hof is headed back to Hammelburg, home of the nation's Infantry, this time to become the operations sergeant major at the German Armed Forces United Nations Training Center.

Among foreign liaison offices at Fort Benning, Germany has the only two-

VARIOUS VOICES

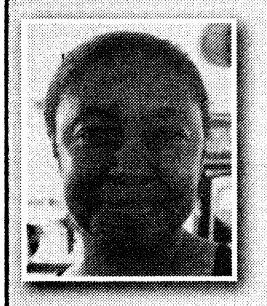
What role do pets play in mental health?

Pets give us self-confidence and unconditional love. They do a great deal for my sanity. I have two Bloodhounds, a Great Dane, seven cats and a horse. But they're back in Louisiana and it's hard on me.

— SFC Kim Dantzler
Warrior Transition Battalion

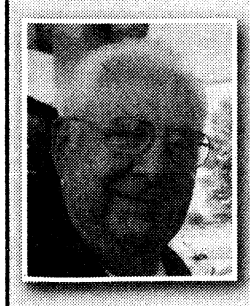
I think they play three roles: stress relief, giving us attention and companionship. I don't have any pets, but I dog-sit my sister-in-law's Shih Tzu. I've got a baby on the way so I'm not going to get any pets right now.

— CPT Roy Horikawa
75th Ranger Regiment



I had a dog when I was a kid, but my mother took it away from me and I've been crushed ever since. I love dogs. They provide comfort and you can really bond with them.

— SGT James Riley
733rd MP Battalion (CID), Fort Gillem, Ga.

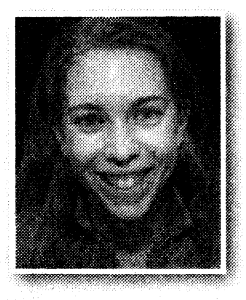


They provide comfort, someone to talk to and general companionship. I have a Cairn Terrier and a cat. The cat came to the house one day as a stray and never left. That was 15 years ago. Sometimes they can be a handful, but I enjoy having them around.

— 2LT Cody Martin
1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment

They provide companionship. You can depend on your animals. Somebody can walk away from you, but your pets are still going to be there with you. I don't have any pets right now, but I might get a dog after I retire and I'm at home more.

— Louise Bethay
Directorate of Contracting



I think pets are an integral part of life. I think people have a tendency to relate more to pets than other people. Pets are forgiving, and they are a constant in your life. They don't ask for a lot.

Beware of four-legged regifts

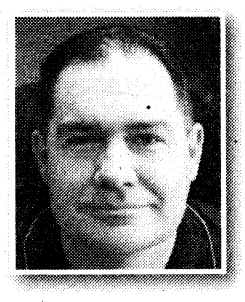
Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Regifting, a term coined by Jerry Seinfeld in 1995, is the act of giving an unwanted gift to someone else, according to www.regiftable.com. The site is full of hilarious and embarrassing stories posted by users who have regifted items like potpourri dishes, teapots and jewelry. Regifting household items is fine and dandy, but as I read through the site, I wondered just how far the boundaries of regifting etiquette could be stretched. Could you regift an ugly sweater? A fruitcake? A piece of modern art? An unwanted pet?

Apparently, you can. On a recent visit back home in St. Louis, my husband and I were regifted one medium-haired, bad-tempered, straw-colored cat. Jasmine, as she is called, was my husband's very first pet, which he didn't get until the age of 21 because he was never allowed to have pets growing up. So adopting her was sort of an act of rebellion. But when he joined the Army three years later, he sadly gave Jasmine to his aunt and uncle for temporary safekeeping. My husband loved that cat, which he described as the most loyal, loving, friendly animal you'd ever want to meet.

I don't believe him.

The cat I met a couple weeks ago likes to hiss at me for fun, spends her free time hiding from people in corners, and when my husband tried to put her in her cat carrier for the drive back to Georgia, she bit him, hissed and emitted a horrible growl. Which might explain why his aunt and uncle were so eager to regift her, and even offered a bottle of prescription kitty sedative pills as an added bonus. Five years after the cat custody arrangement, which was supposed to be temporary, Jasmine was still very much there, and didn't get along with their other cat. But, even more offensive to my husband's aunt, her fur clashed with the furniture — a problem for a couple with impeccable taste and burgundy sofas in their living room.



So after five years of incessant clashing and shedding, his aunt seized the opportunity to pawn, or re-pawn, the cat off on us. I heard that at family get-togethers the past several years, she'd been asking my in-laws if he were ready to re-adopt Jasmine. My husband was vaguely insulted that his beloved pet had been deemed unworthy of their home, but was glad to have her back. I've chalked up Jasmine's supposed personality change to anxiety over being abandoned by her owner for the past five years. Since we brought Jasmine home a couple weeks ago, she's already managed to escape into our parking lot, bite my husband and make a mess on our porch. And she doesn't get along with our other cat, either.

So if you're going to regift, stick with pots and pans. At least they won't shed on your furniture or need an animal psychiatrist.

Giving blood always a noble cause

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The need for blood is constant, and reserves typically run even lower in the summer.

Giving blood is among the noblest of causes and provides the essence of life. It's needed for emergencies and for people who have cancer, blood disorders, sickle cell anemia and other illnesses. Some need regular blood transfusions to live.

Every two seconds, someone in the United States needs blood, according to the American Red Cross. But only 5 percent of the eligible U.S. population donates blood in any given year.

Healthy donors are the only source, and there is no substitute.

During the summer months, blood supplies and donations dip. Officials point to a number of reasons, including vacations and more active lifestyles in the warmer weather.

But mishaps and traffic accidents also tend to spike in the summertime, which makes the importance of collections more crucial.

According to various studies, the main reasons for not donating blood include lack of opportunity, insufficient information, fear of needles, laziness or apathy, and fear of disease.

The trepidation over needles is easy to understand. It creeps me out just watching someone get poked by a nurse or doctor on TV or in a movie. I'm squeamish that way. I compare it to footage of the wide receiver or running back who blows his knee out after going over the middle for a catch. Why do networks insist on showing that five times in slow motion?

I can do without that, just as I deal with needles much more easily when they're being injected into me. I merely look away.

As the summer winds into fall, and we turn from baseball and barbecues to browning leaves and weekend football parties, please consider making an effort to donate blood. The experience is instantly rewarding.

For more information about donating, contact the Fort Benning Blood Donor Center at 706-544-8812, or visit the American Red Cross Web site at www.redcross.org.

This week in Fort Benning history

1934

• The "new, modern" quarters on Miller Loop were completed and assigned to captains.

• 1,000 head of government cattle were shipped in from drought areas out West and placed in quarantine near the post's Sulphur Springs. After three days, they would be turned out to pasture on 20,000 acres in the southeastern area of Fort Benning until they were sufficiently fattened and ready for slaughter. Then they would be processed locally and distributed to the needy.

• Underprivileged children from Columbus were treated to a number of activities at a two-week summer camp at the Infantry Rest Camp near Harmony Church. Post residents were urged to donate clothing for the boys.

• "Every fly must die" was the philosophy of one PFC Lawson Burton, the Fly Orderly for the 112th Company, Second Student Regiment. Since the inception of the Fly Orderly Program, which involved a swatter and a kill chart posted in the dining room, the 112th's mess hall had received superior ratings on fly control.

• Six — count 'em, six — Medal of Honor recipients called Fort Benning home: 1LT Arthur Jackson, 1LT Jack Montgomery, MSG Jake Lindsay, MSG Charles McGaha, MSG Wilburn Ross and SGT John Pittman.

• A Fort Benning fish and game maintenance report noted that the State of Georgia would furnish 50 deer to be "planted" on post at the junction of Randall and Upatoi creeks. Also noted: Post officials had trapped 15 beavers and transplanted them at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida.

• The post athletic officer announced that football would be back on the sports schedule in the fall after a year's hiatus, brought on by the outbreak of hostilities in Korea.

• At the movies: Let's Go Navy, So You Want to Buy a Used Car, GI Jane and Nit-Witty Kitty.

• In an exit interview with local media, the outgoing post commander, LTG David Grange Jr., said he believed electronic games would one day be used in Army training.

"It's not gimmickery," he said. "It makes good sense. First of all, they're cheap, you can train effectively, you can save a lot of money and you don't use a lot of gasoline to get out to training areas."

BRAC: Lodge to be constructed on post

impacts on the environment as a result of the BRAC build-up, clears the way for the remainder of the 2009 construction projects to move forward on schedule.

Brown reminded the audience that an estimated 30,000 Armor School cadre, family members and civilian employees will move to the Chattahoochee Valley area to support the MCOE. They will begin to "trickle in" next year, he said, but the majority will not arrive until 2011.

The number of on-post houses will not increase, so local housing markets will see an increased demand.

Al Gelineau, director of the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation, spoke briefly at the update. He showed the audience a rendering of an 860-room lodge that will be constructed on Main Post and opened in 2012.

The hotel will replace most of the older lodging facilities on post.

The next BRAC Community Update will start at 3 p.m. Sept. 1 in the first-floor classroom at the National Infantry Museum. As always, it is free and open to the public. After the update, Brown will open the meeting for questions.

AFL: New army to create stability, peace

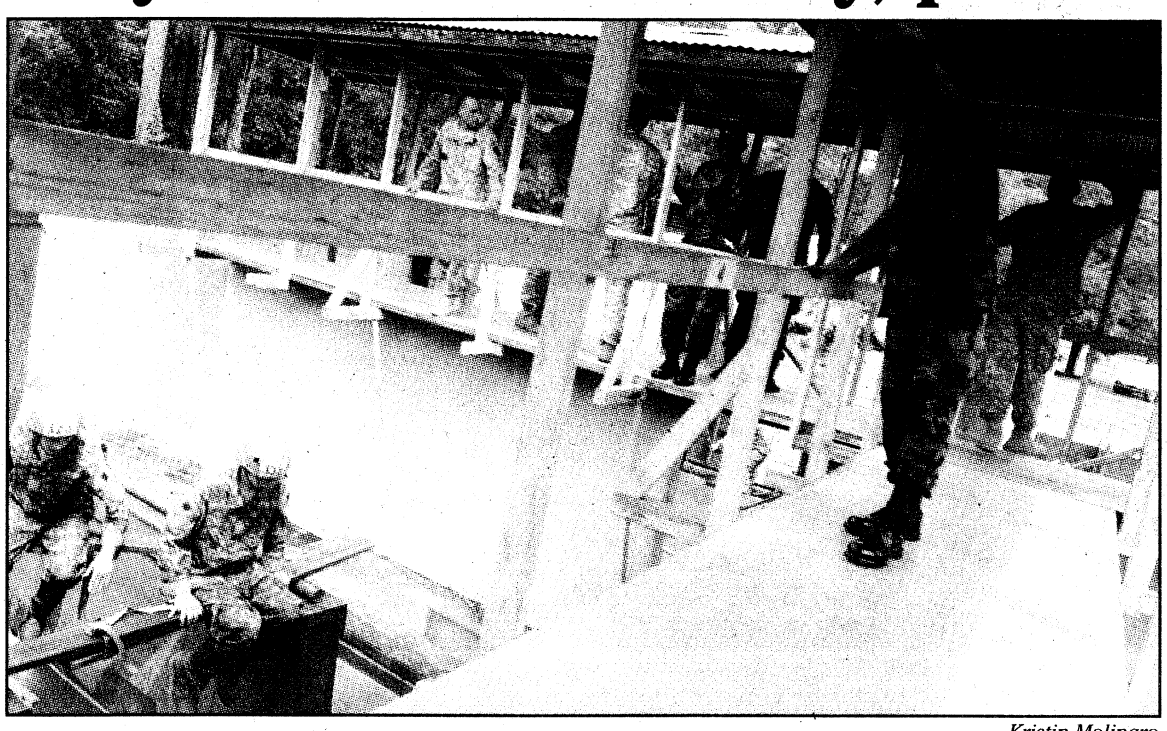
during their visit to the U.S. July 26-Aug. 2.

Last year, the AFL began basic and advanced training courses modeled after the principles of the U.S. military, he said.

"Approximately 200 contracted personnel, along with active-duty U.S. Marines and Soldiers are on the ground in Liberia working with (AFL soldiers) every single day and training them," Rumphrey said.



To meet Liberia's goal of a sustainable force, Wleh, accompanied by a lieutenant and drill sergeant from the young army, toured Fort Benning's Maneuver Battle Lab, Officer Candidate School, Basic Officer Leadership Course, Noncommissioned Officers Academy, 30th Adjutant General Battalion, the Leadership Reaction Course and several training events hosted by the 199th and 198th Infantry Brigades.

"We wanted them to see the way we've implemented training in their country is similar to the way we do it here," Rumphrey said.

Last year, Liberia's Ministry of National Defense set a goal of having 2,000 trained soldiers by 2010.

The AFL exceeded that goal in June by nearly 200 soldiers, Rumphrey said.

But the nearly 2,200-strong army now faces many challenges in its path to redeeming itself and gaining the trust of the countrymen, Wleh said.

Kristin Molinaro

Liberian army Sgt. Melvin Tolbert (right), a drill sergeant with the Armed Forces of Liberia Training Command, observes troops with 1st Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, negotiate the Leadership Reaction Course. Tolbert was part of a three-member Liberian delegation to the U.S. to learn more about how to train the new army their country is building to take over security in the country when the United Nations Mission in Liberia pulls out in the next few years.

"One of the obligations we have is to erase the old, negative image of our army," Wleh said. "And let the Liberian people know that yes, we now have a military that people can depend on, be proud of, and that is prepared to protect their lives and property."

The war in Liberia was initially a political fight for power that expanded to a 14-year battle between various groups, but was marked by corruption and excesses on the part of the army against the very people it was expected to defend, he said.

"This country was ravaged for nearly fifteen years by the military themselves," said Rumphrey. "When we brought the military back, we got rid of every single (soldier) and now we are trying to build a confidant military that the public has faith in."

Wleh said as Liberia continues along the path toward national reconciliation, development and reconstruction, rebuilding the AFL and restoring the public's trust is critical to the country's efforts at democracy.

"I for one know, being a citizen, that the standing up of a professional military is necessary for our national stability," he said. "There are those ... that given the chance, would do anything to get power.

"But if they see that we have a standing, regionally-balanced military on the ground, a military not willing to compromise, that will defend its oath to protect lives and property, it will serve as a deterrent. They will be forced to comply with democratic norms instead of aspiring to power."

Scanners: To begin Aug. 17

can be scanned by the handheld devices.

The scanner checks for expired or forged IDs, Webster said. It also runs a background check against a known database that includes the terrorist watch list and wanted criminals.

"It doesn't replace anything we're currently doing," he said. "It's just an additional tool to assist the security guards with ensuring personnel coming onto the base have proper ID and are authorized to be here.

"One of our main focuses is the security of the installation for the Soldiers, the families, the civilians who work out here. That's always a top priority. Times change. We try to keep up-to-date."

The system was installed on Fort Benning by July 24, said Kenna Pope, executive assistant for Intellicheck Mobilisia.

Installation included training Fort Benning personnel on the system and installing the Internet connection through which data updates for the criminal database are received, she said.

Several installations from all services have the system, which has been in use for about five years, Pope said. The first Army post to receive the scanners was Fort Belvoir, Va.

It started on a trial basis in September 2006, said Frank Hentschel, deputy director for Emergency Services at Fort Belvoir.

Some people were concerned when it first started, he said, but they were reassured after learning that any personal data would be discarded after the check, if they were allowed to be on the installation.

After working with the system for nearly three years, Hentschel said it has increased their security posture and provided a helpful force protection measure for the installation.

The scanning system is just another method to "keep bad guys away," Webster said. He said he doesn't anticipate traffic coming onto post to be significantly affected, but post officials will work to minimize any delays.

Hof: Helped Soldiers earn German proficiency badges member staff. Lt. Col. Walter Schleef heads up the branch.

Hof's role was to support his commander, help fortify the bond between the two armies, and promote future plans and exchanges. He routinely arranged for German officers and Soldiers to take part in training opportunities at Fort Benning. That included an annual swap of Jumpmasters with Germany's Airborne school in Altenstadt, where Hof became a paratrooper early in his career.

Through Hof, U.S. Soldiers also could earn the German army proficiency badge — a decoration awarded for passing tests in marksmanship, first aid and sports — as well as the German Schuetzenschnur marksmanship badge and German jump wings.

Last year, he visited the German Infantry School in Hammelburg with CSM Matthew Walker, the U.S. Army Infantry School command sergeant major, and CSM Jay Brimstin, the former Noncommissioned Officer Academy commandant. He also worked regularly with the Ranger Training Brigade and 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

Hof said he still marvels at the expanse of Fort Benning and all the training areas, comparing it to the size of Berlin.

"That gives us some idea of how big it is," he said. "Fort Benning has changed a lot, from the home of the Infantry to the Maneuver Center of Excellence. I'm really happy to see the start of that change ... The construction on the ranges is amazing, and it's coming together really fast."

Unlike his successor, Hof and his wife lived off post near downtown Columbus. He said overcoming cultural differences and mastering English on American soil — particularly in telephone conversations — was challenging at first, but the couple adapted quickly.

> "We had a warm feeling in Columbus and I got so much support here from the Army."
> — German army Sgt. Maj. Georg Hof

"We had a warm feeling in Columbus," he said, "and I got so much support here from the Army."

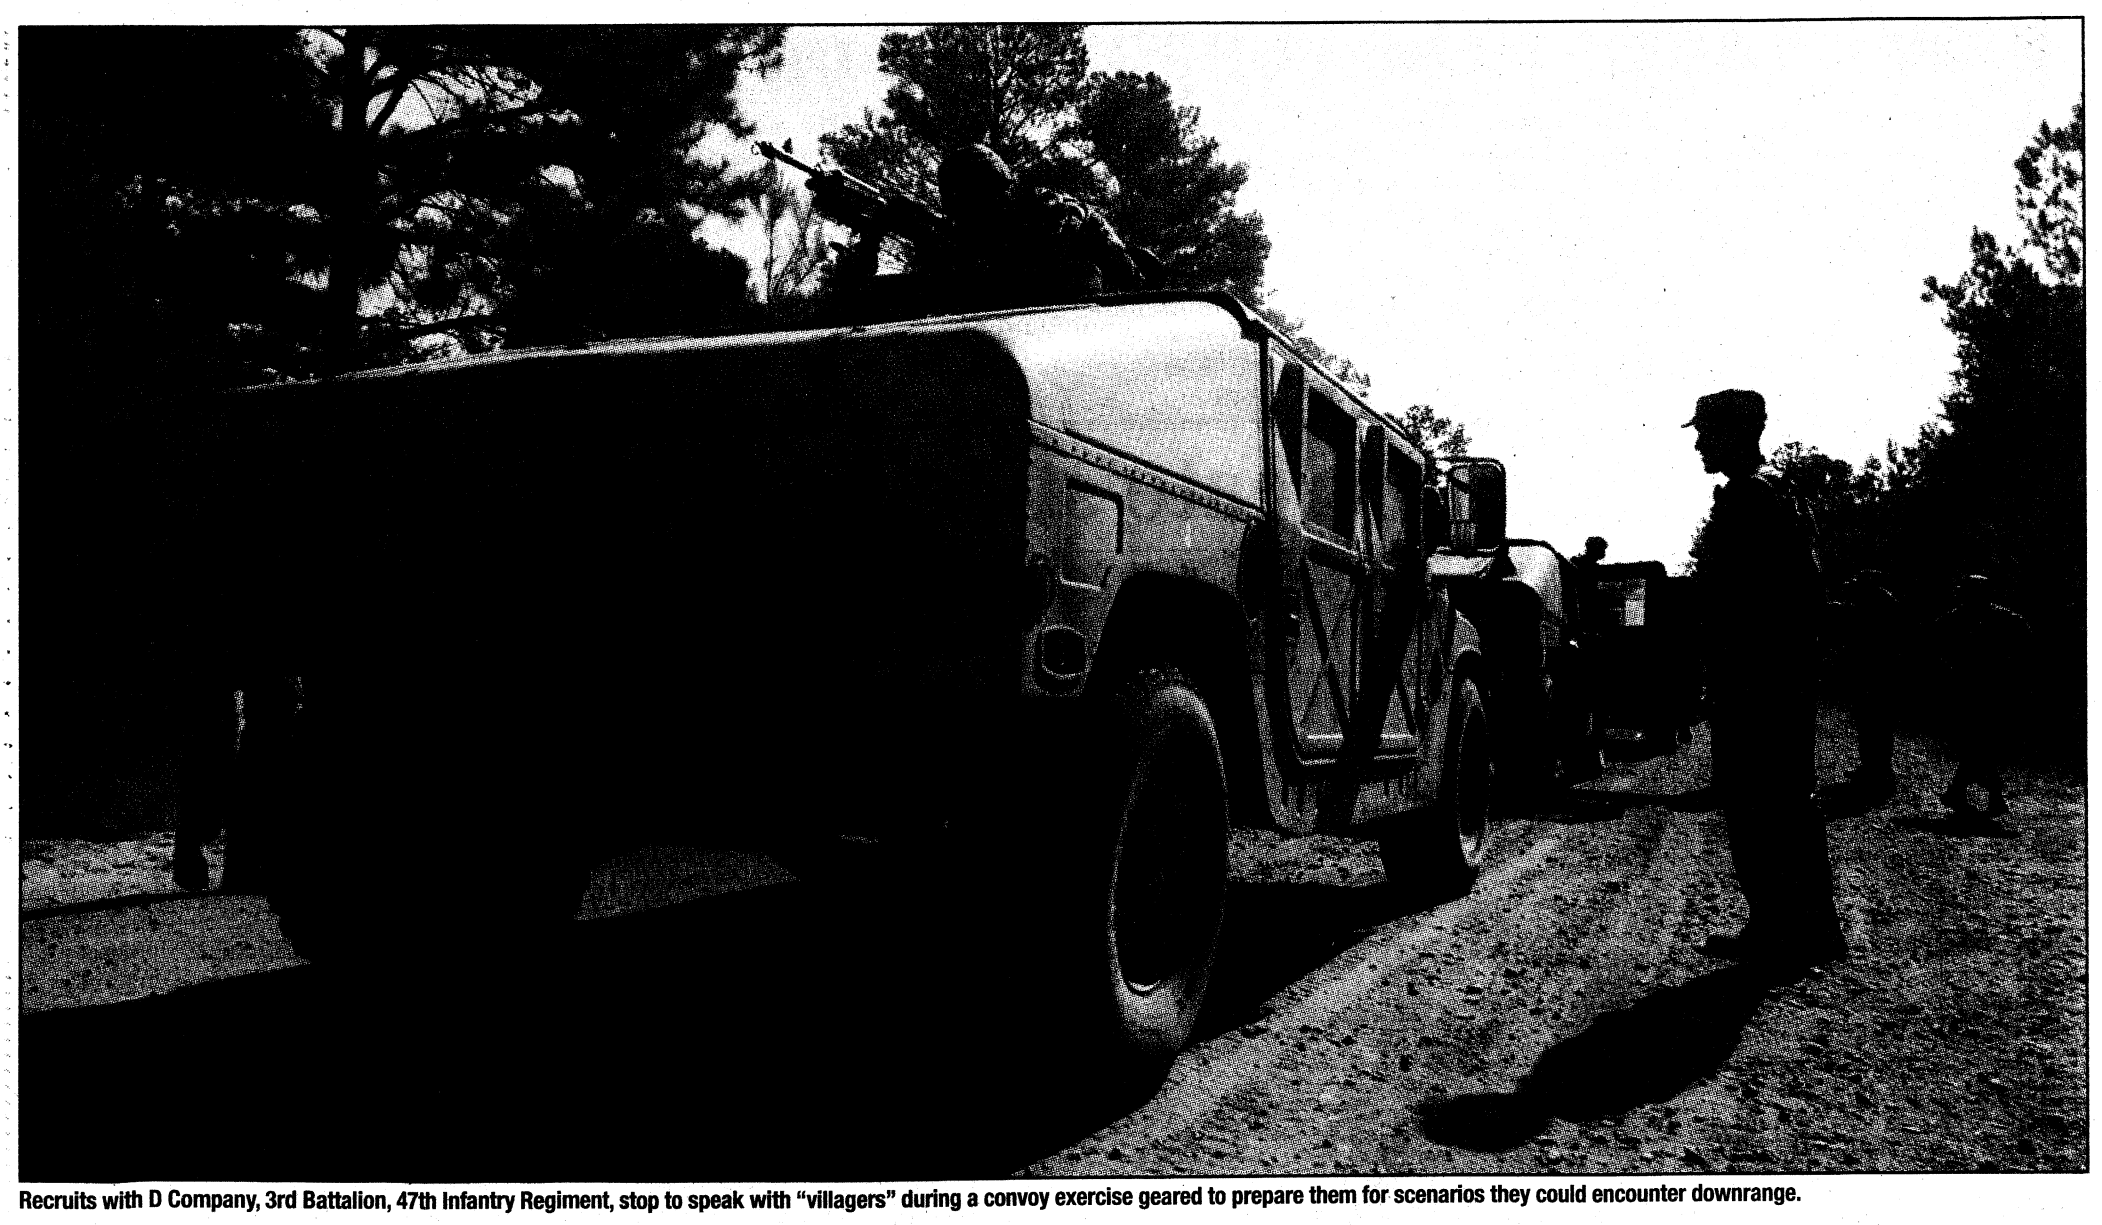
Hof is leaving America, but he won't be giving up his hog, a 1996 Harley-Davidson Dyna he rode to work almost every day after receiving it as a Christmas gift three years ago. It's being shipped to Germany, he said.

He joined the Southern Cruisers motorcycle club and took part in a 280-mile ride into the Great Smoky Mountains. Among other memorable moments in America, he and Inge also got to experience New Orleans. Hof promises a smooth transition to Rabenstein in the German liaison office.

"He's the right man for this job with his experiences," Hof said. "A new job is always a new challenge, and particularly with a move from Germany to America ... But he will do well."

Rabenstein will be busy right away coordinating five major events this fall: the annual Infantry Warfighting Conference, German Unity Day at Fort Benning, the German-American Oktoberfest at Uchee Creek, German-Italian Memorial Day and an exchange training program for five company-level officers from Germany.

"I'm very proud to be here at Fort Benning and the center of Infantry," Rabenstein said, "but it's very hard for me to follow a man like Sergeant Major Hof. I will try to manage it like he did. He's a great soldier with many experiences. I will do my very best."



Hof said he hopes Rabenstein gets the same backing he did.

"I'm not into slogans normally, but this really is the best installation in the world," Hof said. "We had a really, really great time here. I thank everybody for their support. God bless Fort Benning, and God bless America."

Recruits with D Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, stop to speak with "villagers" during a convoy exercise geared to prepare them for scenarios they could encounter downrange.

Training offers realistic live fire, fewer restrictions

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Rolling down a dusty road in armored Humvees scanning for roadside bombs and potential ambushes is nothing new to most combat-proven Soldiers, but to fresh recruits with D Company, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, it is a taste of military life others before them didn't get this early in their careers, said CPT Christopher Russo, D Company commander.

The basic training company introduced a new class this cycle to give recruits realistic training for what they may encounter if deployed, Russo said.

The class, called react to contact while mounted, takes a fresher approach to combat operations than its predecessor, convoy live fire training, Russo said.

For most of the recruits, this was their first time in Humvees, he said.

The recruits, equipped with combat gear and M-16s packing high-speed paint ammunition, mounted up into four-truck convoys at Forward Operating Base Mailedfoot, an outpost on Sand Hill set up to simulate base operations in Iraq and Afghanistan.

They were told their mission was to visit a nearby village, Russo said.

Outside the gate of the FOB, each convoy was approached by "villagers" concerned about new people in their village stirring up trouble. If any suspicious activity was spotted, the recruits were expected to call it out so the convoy could take off down the road out of the danger zone. Once each convoy reached the village, they were ambushed by a three-person element with a roadside bomb, a simulated smoke bomb detonated by cadre. Some convoys spotted the roadside bombs before they could detonate, while others did not.

After the blast or once terrorists attacked, the recruits dismounted the vehicles and split into two squads to search out the enemies.

In each scenario, Soldiers had to identify a threat and make the decision to shoot or not, Russo said.

"It's on them to figure out what the next step is with minimal if any drill sergeant guidance," said Russo, who incorporated rules of engagement criteria into the scenarios.

Russo said the training, one of the final exercises before the company graduated Wednesday, builds a foundation for more in-depth training the Soldiers should expect to receive in their new unit.

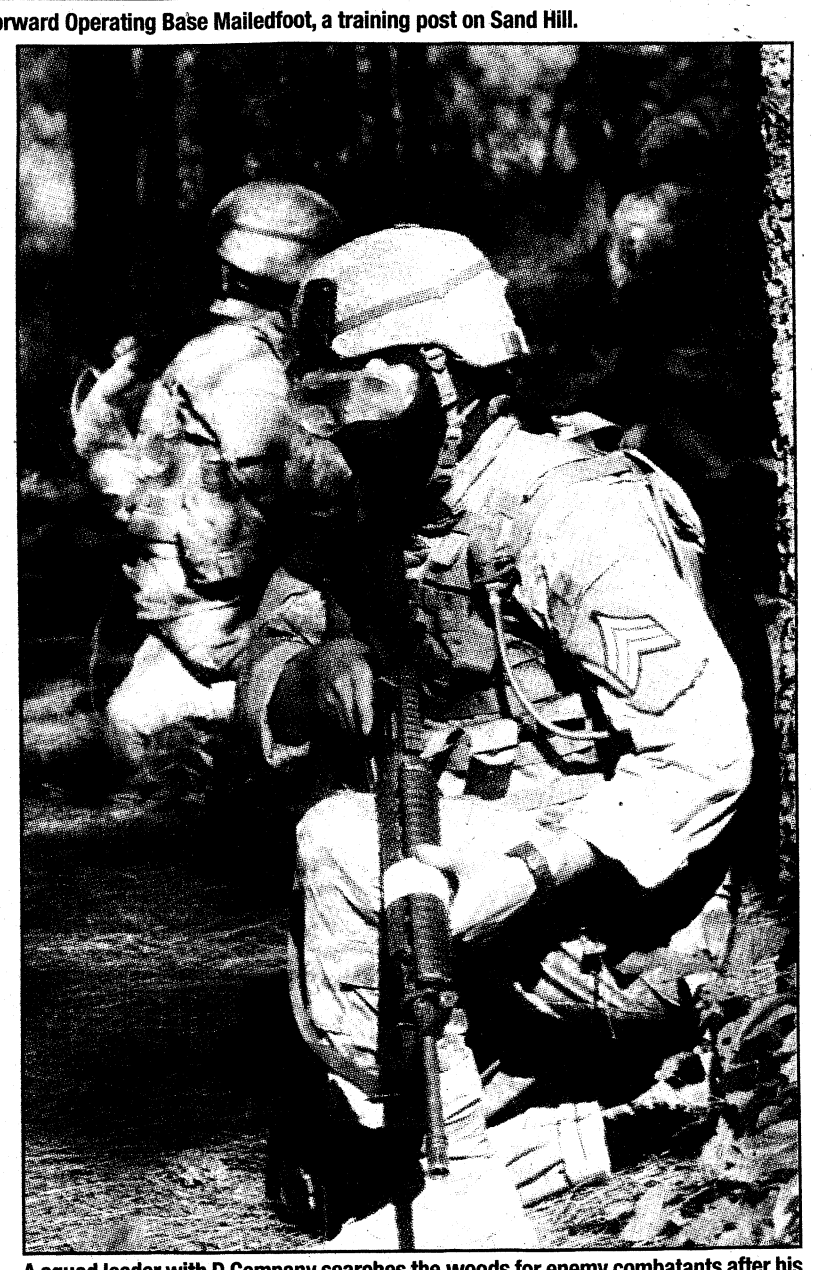
"We wanted a good culminating event that covers the tasks they needed to be proficient in, which are primarily weapons handling, marksmanship and being able to shoot, move and communicate in squads," Russo said. "This is better than the old way, convoy live fire, because there is less control and range restrictions."

A gunner scans the tree-lined trail along the convoy route outside Forward Operating Base Mailedfoot, a training post on Sand Hill.

"In the environments the U.S. is in right now in Iraq and Afghanistan, the Army is doing a lot more mounted patrols, a lot more of this type of thing," said PVT Brandon Green, who enlisted to become a combat medic. "For us to get hands-on experience right here before we hit our unit gives us a heads up on what to expect."

Other members of Green's squad said the realistic training gave them a bigger dose of reality than they were expecting.

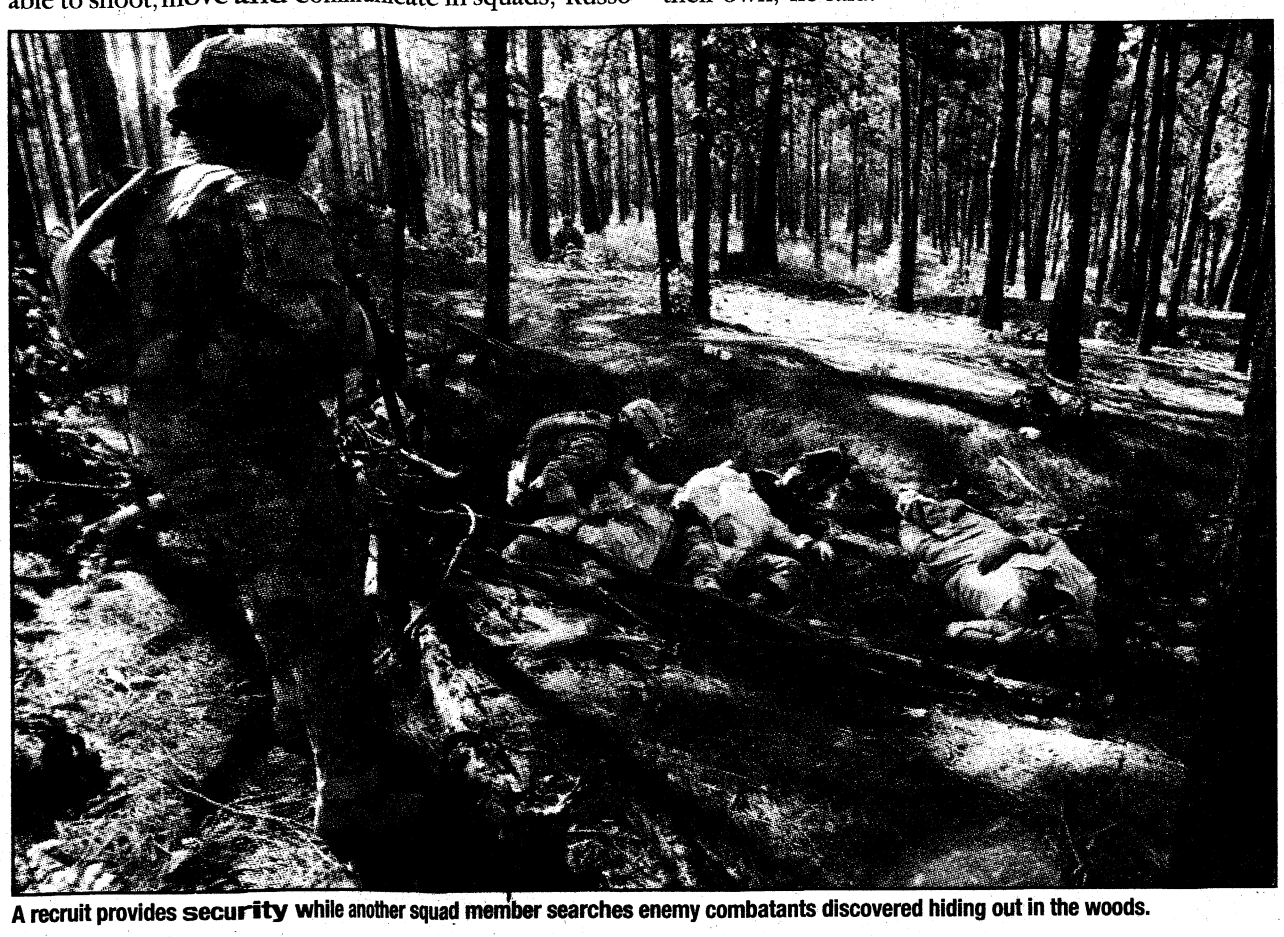
PV2 Caine Jones said he was surprised when a gunner in his convoy identified the improvised-explosive device on the side of the road before his convoy reached it.



"I wondered how realistic the training would be, if there was going to be an explosion," said Caine, who is training to be a cook.

Another squad member said he was caught off guard by environmental conditions he had never considered before.

"I was confident going into this training, but once we started, I realized how hard it is because you really can't see with all the dust flying," said PVT Joshua Hewitt, who enlisted for a job in satellite communications. "You realize how much harder it must be (in Iraq) in real life."



SFC Edward Deal, a drill sergeant with the company, said the training not only reflects what's happening downrange but also gives the recruits invaluable experience in the early stages of their military career.

"It teaches them teamwork and how to think on their own," he said.

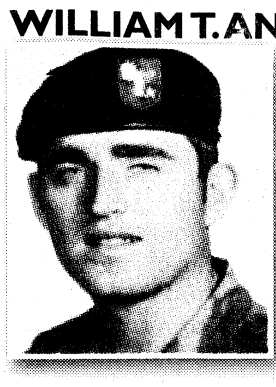
RANGER HALL OF FAME INDUCTEES

JAMES J. ALTIERI

Altieri entered the Army in November 1941 and initially served with the 1st Ranger Battalion. His World War II battle honors include 17 battles and raids, five major campaigns, four major amphibious landings, the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster, a battlefield commission and promotion to first lieutenant. He attained the rank of major while serving in the U.S. Army Reserve.

ALFORD M. BUKATY

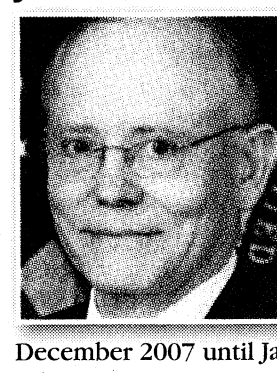


Bukaty attended Ranger training and was assigned to the newly formed Rangers shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Korea. He deployed to Korea with the 1st Ranger Infantry Company (Airborne). Bukaty fought in four major campaigns and numerous raids and ambushes behind enemy lines, and was awarded the Silver Star for his actions in battle April 2, 1951.

STEPHEN J. MURPHY

Murphy served in Vietnam with Charlie Company (Ranger), 75th Infantry Regiment (Airborne), where he received the Bronze Star. He also received the Air Medal for his participation in more than 25 combat assaults. He participated in Operation Eagle Claw, the rescue attempt of 53 American hostages from the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran. Murphy retired in February 1996.

WILLIAM T. ANTON



Anton, a Distinguished Military Graduate, was commissioned as a second lieutenant and attended the U.S. Army Ranger School with Ranger Class 14-70. Anton was a platoon leader in Company O (Arctic Ranger), 75th Infantry Regiment (Airborne), and made the historic first tactical parachute jump on the polar ice cap. Anton retired in November 1990.

EDWIN L. DEAN

Dean earned one of the earliest Silver Stars awarded to a Ranger during the World War II Sened Station Raid. Acting as a forward scout for the mission and with fixed bayonet, Dean charged a machine gun nest and destroyed the enemy position, enabling the raid to continue. He also fought in the invasions of Sicily and Italy. During the battle for Italy, Dean earned his battlefield commission.

JAMES B. PEAKE

Peake graduated from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1966 and was commissioned as a second lieutenant in the Infantry. Following service in Vietnam, he was awarded the Silver Star, a Bronze Star with "V" device and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Cluster. Peake was the secretary of Veterans Affairs from December 2007 until January.

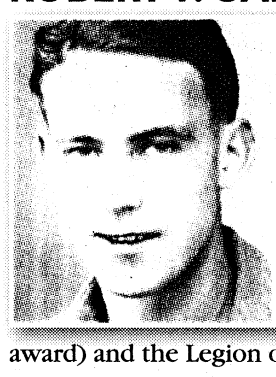
KEITH P. ANTONIA

Antonia participated in two combat actions: Operation Urgent Fury in Grenada and Operation Just Cause in Panama with the 1st Ranger Battalion in 1989. In 1987 he was selected to be the first commander of A Company, 4th Ranger Training Battalion. Antonia spent his entire career in Airborne units and made 233 parachute jumps. He retired from the Army in July 2001.

RUSSELL E. DODGE

Dodge served with Merrill's Marauders from April to August 1944, fighting in two major campaigns in Burma. Shortly after the outbreak of hostilities in Korea, he volunteered and trained with the 13th Airborne Ranger Company, where he earned the Ranger Tab. After his special forces assignment in Laos and Vietnam, he was assigned to the Army Infantry Center as an instructor at Camp Rudder, Fla.

CARLTON G. SAVORY



Savory was commissioned as a second lieutenant of Infantry after graduating from the Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., in 1967. Volunteering for service in Vietnam, he served with Charlie Company (Ranger), 75th Infantry Regiment (Airborne). He retired June 30, 1987 but was recalled to active duty in support of Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

AJ "BO" BAKER

Baker served two tours in Vietnam to include service in Project Delta where he earned the Silver Star for gallantry in the defense of Plei Me Camp in October 1965. His awards and decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster, Combat Infantryman's Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Special Forces Tab and Ranger Tab.

ROBERT P. GARY

Gary's 32-year military career spans three wars, including two tours of duty in Vietnam. With the 2nd Ranger Battalion, Gary participated in the invasion of France on D-Day and the Battle of the Bulge until the end of World War II. For his contributions in Vietnam, Gary was awarded two Bronze stars, a Combat Infantryman's Badge (second award) and the Legion of Merit. He retired June 30, 1976.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Burress indicted

Plaxico Burress, former New York Giants star, was indicted by a grand jury Monday on three gun charges.

Burress accidentally shot himself in the thigh at a Manhattan nightclub last fall.

He faces a minimum of three and one-half years in prison if convicted.

Burress is scheduled to be arraigned Sept. 23.

Tiger dominates

Tiger Woods won the Buick Open Sunday by three strokes, bringing his PGA Tour victory count to an astounding 69. It was his third time winning the Buick Open.

Woods moved into first place in the FedEx Cup standings.

Tiger's on track to surpass both Jack Nicklaus (73 wins) and Sam Snead (82).

Meyer makes bank

Urban Meyer, the Florida Gators head football coach, was given a new six-year contract worth $24 million. He's the highest-paid coach in the SEC.

It seems deserved, since the Gators have claimed two national championships in four seasons.

In Meyer's first four seasons, the Gators have the impressive record of 44-9.

Emotional Hamlin wins at Pocono

Still mourning the loss of his beloved grandmother, Denny Hamlin took the checkered flag at Pocono Raceway Monday. The race was rained out a day earlier.

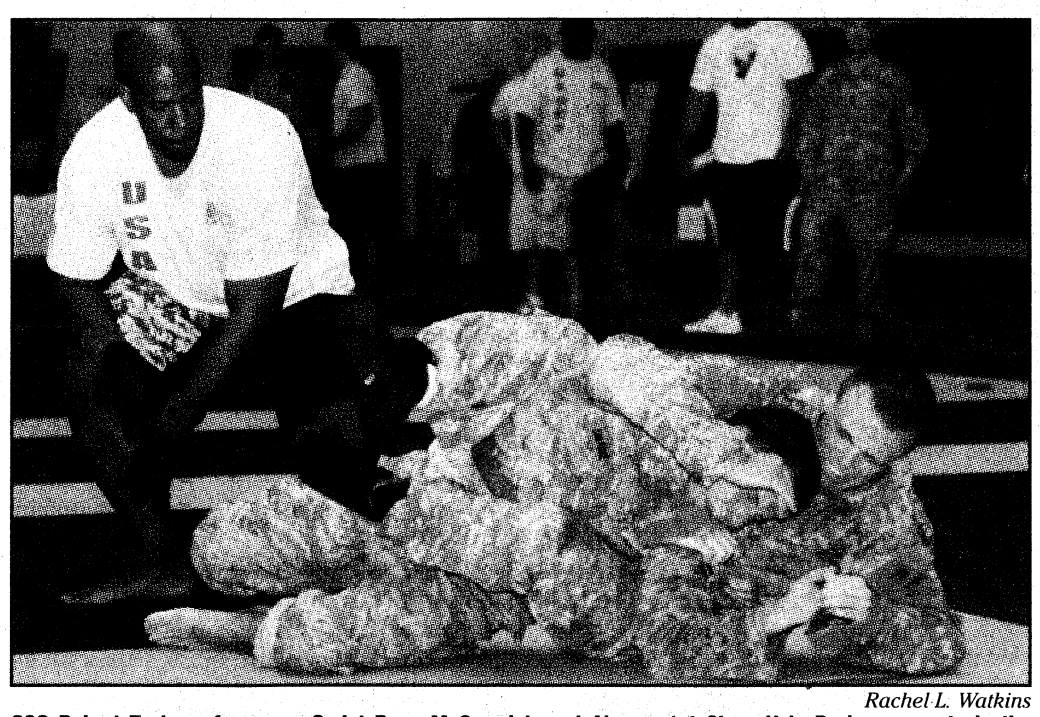
Hamlin hasn't won in the last 50 races.

NASCAR will race at Watkins Glen at 2 p.m. Sunday. Coverage is on ESPN.

No surprise

Various reports are saying the Arena Football League is folding, and will declare bankruptcy.

Several owners are saying there were two groups – those owners that were doing everything they could to ensure a 2010 season, and those that weren't willing to make the investment.



Giving McNair some love

While the jury is still out on how people feel about the late Steve McNair, the Tennessee Titans will honor the former quarterback with a No. 9 decal on the back of their helmets this season. The former Titans quarterback was shot and killed July 4 by his alleged girlfriend in Nashville, Tenn.

NFL spokesman Brian McCarthy said the NFL found the request appropriate.

The NFL is apparently a lot more forgiving than those who have spoken out over his lifestyle and the circumstances of his death.

Fighters vie for spot in Army championship

Fighters took to the mats and battled it out in the Fort Benning Combatives Championship Saturday at the Smith Fitness Center for a chance to advance to the Army Combatives Championship.

Although the number of fighters has dwindled in the post championship since 2008 — from 100 to 40 — the crowd is larger and the level of competition has intensified, said SFC(R) Matt Larsen, director of the Combatives School at Fort Benning and author of the Army combatives manual.

The level of competition gets higher and higher every year, Larsen said.

As the combatives program continues to spread throughout the Army, Larsen predicts the level of competition will increase in future years. The combatives championship is a way to get Soldiers motivated to train hard not only for the competition, but for the battlefield, he said.

"Our real fight isn't here, this is just training. The real fight is in Afghanistan or in Iraq," Larsen said. "Many competition based systems have an inherent problem that people will train for the competitions and not for the real fight. We are cognizant of that. That's why there are

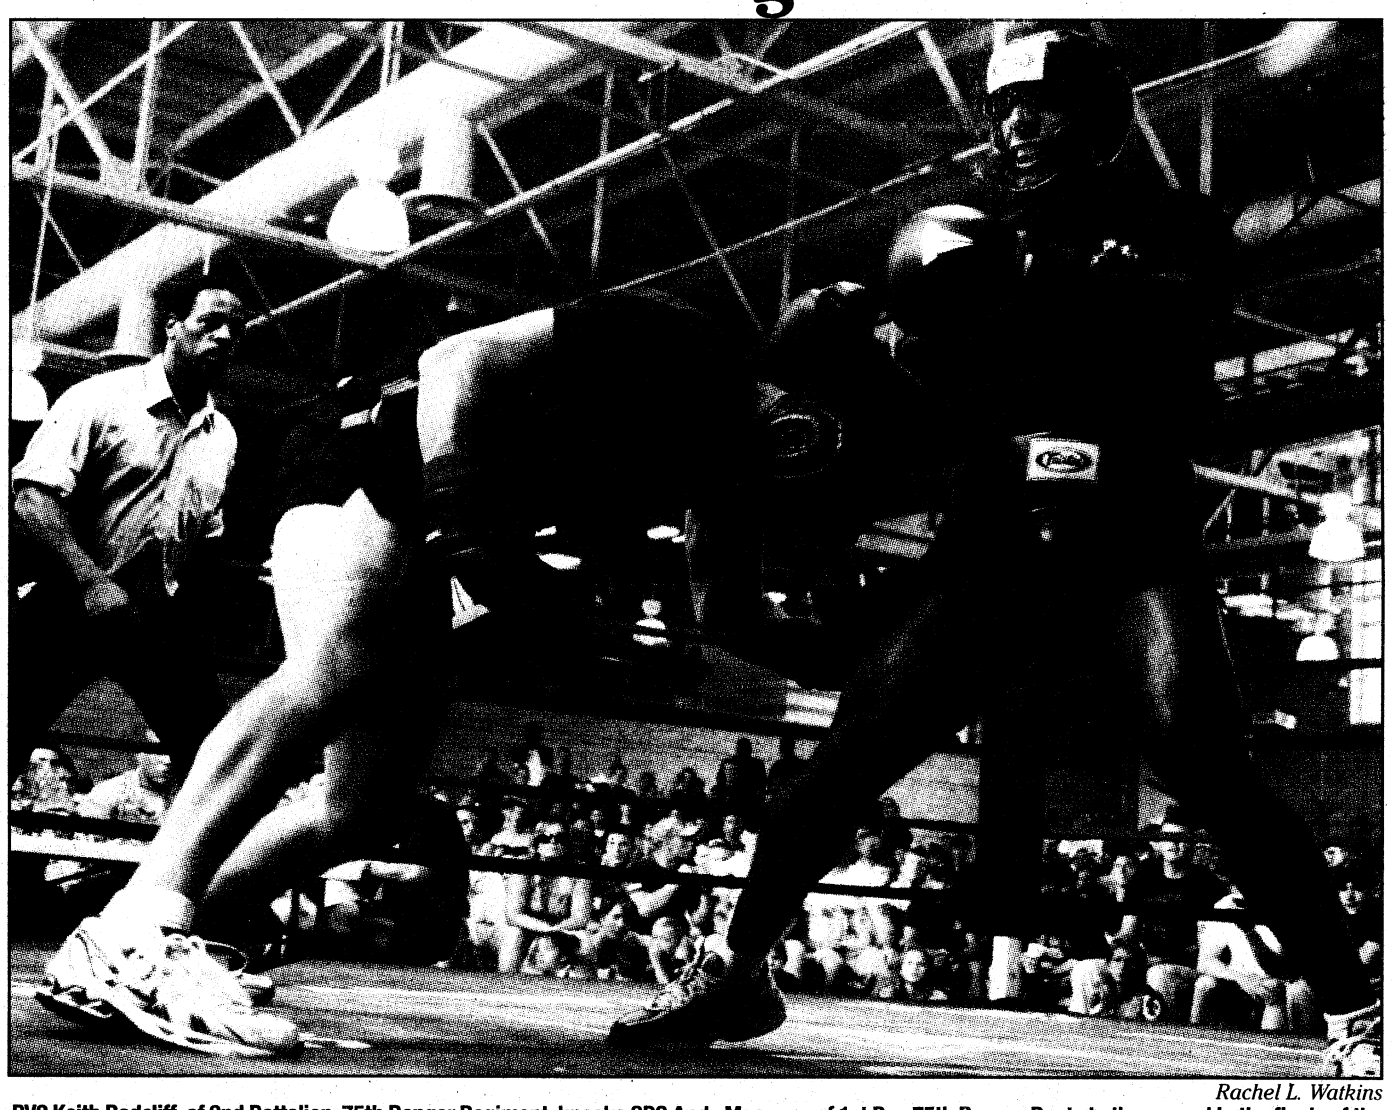
Rangers duke it out at boxing tournament

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET



Spectators, including active-duty, retired Rangers and family members, filled Briant Wells Gym for the Ranger Rendezvous combatives and boxing tournament Wednesday.

The tournament was one of many events that were part of Ranger Rendezvous, a three-day kickoff to the 75th Ranger Regiment change of command ceremony Thursday. Other events included softball, tug-of-war and football in addition to a mass tactical airborne operation.

The Rendezvous is a tradition in the regiment, said MAJ Jeth Rey, who was assigned to the 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regt., in the 1990s and now is stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C. He said the rendezvous is something great to come back to.

"Rangers stay in touch throughout the years, but the rendezvous is what

Skater gets national record

Jimmy Decker, 8, son of Dr. (MAJ) Carl and Amy Decker, is the third best skater in the nation in the Primary boys' skating division. He was one of 15 skaters representing GT Speed, a speedskating team in Columbus, who competed in the 2009 Speed Skating National Championships July 18-25 in Peoria, Ill.

"Going into the competition, I didn't think I would get third in the nation because it was difficult skating against the other kids, but I did and I'm really happy," Jimmy said.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach sets 'attainable goals'

John W. Peeler

Yamill Collazo teaches a skating safety class every Saturday and coaches GT Speed, a speed skating team in Columbus. The 52-year-old has been coaching for 20 years.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Start, stop and stand is what speed skating coach Yamill Collazo calls the three S's.

"The three S's are the first things every skater should learn," he said. "If you don't know the proper way to stand, in the "T" formation, you'll fall down. I teach skaters how to get up properly, and how to fall."

Every Saturday, he teaches a skating safety class, which is open to the public, in Columbus.

Collazo begins the class with participants skating on the carpet and then the rink.

"There are two things kids are afraid of — loud noise and falling," he said. "That's why I make sure they are comfortable skating on the carpet before they skate on the rink."

He said his focus is safety, enjoyment and family togetherness. His class is geared toward anyone

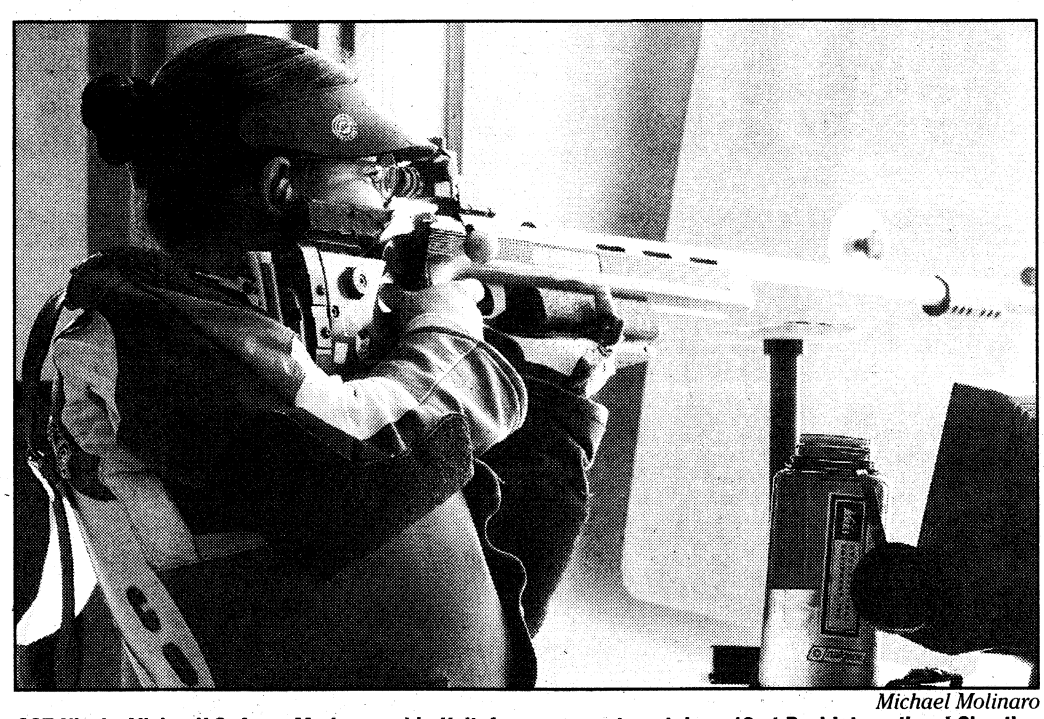
USAMU to shoot in CISM World Championships

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PAO

The U.S. Military Shooting team is set to take on the world's best at the 44th Conseil International Du Sport Militaire World Shooting Championships in Zagreb, Croatia, Aug. 12-16.



Soldiers from the U.S.Army Marksmanship Unit here make up the majority of the team, along with a Coast Guardsman, Sailor, and Army Reservist.

"This is a veteran-laden team," said Michael Behnke, team captain and USAMU chief of competition. "Except for one member, all have been to a CISM, some more than others."

There was a series of tryouts this year to invite non-USAMU members from other services to provide them an opportunity to be on the team, Behnke said. Because of deployments and opportunities throughout the year it's very difficult for other services to do so.

The U.S. team consists of USAMU Soldiers SFC Thomas Rose; SFC Eric Uptagrafft; SFC Janet Sokolowski; SSG Armando Ayala; SSG Kelly Dove; SSG Robert Park II; SGT Michael McPhail; SGT Nicole Allaire; and CPL Brad Balsley.

Army Reservist LTC Rhonda Bright made the team, as did Navy Petty Officer 1st Class Sandra Uptagrafft and Coast Guard Lt. Jennifer Leong. The coaches are Thomas Tamas, Glenn Sulser, and Ray Arredondo. LTC Daniel Hodne, USAMU commander, serves as chief of mission and jury members are Wanda Jewell and Richard Hawkins.

Michael Molinaro

SGT Nicole Allaire, U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit, focuses on a target June 16 at Pool International Shooting complex during the Women's U.S. National three-position finals. Allaire and her teammates will take on the world at the 44th Conseil International Du Sport Militaire World Shooting Championships in Zagreb, Croatia Aug. 12-16.

The U.S.team has had a very successful past at CISM. They have won the competition's highest award, Best Nation, so many times that CISM named it the U.S.Army Challenge Trophy and permanently gave the award — a pair of antique silver dueling pistols donated by King Paul of Greece in 1957 — to the U.S. in 1972.

The U.S.handed the trophy back to CISM to serve as a perpetual trophy at featured CISM matches. After losing out on the trophy for two years, the U.S. won the coveted trophy in 2008 for the 24th time and will defend it this year.

The competition includes events in rifle and pistol shooting for both men and women. They compete in individual events as well as team events. The men shoot with 300-meter bolt guns and.32-caliber center fire pistols. The women shoot with small-bore rifles and .22-caliber pistols.

The women's 50-meter prone rifle team won that event last year and all three competitors—Bright, Dove, and Allaire—will be on hand to defend their crown. This year, the toughest competition for the U.S. team in general will be perennial powerhouses China, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, and Belarus, as well as Russia and Germany, said Behnke.

According to the mission statement of CISM, its goal is to promote friendship through sport. All of the athletes are in the military for their respective nation and while they train to meet on the battlefield, CISM's goal is to use a sports field to bring those athletes together.

The competitors will stay on post for the most part, Behnke said, since they stay in barracks and the ranges are all on the post grounds. While opportunities for sightseeing arise, clubs with casual settings on post allow the teams to reacquire old friendships and acquire new ones. Since it is a military-only sports organization, CISM's shooting championships are one of the best attended events of the year.

"Shooting is the center of all armies," Behnke said. "This is a military skill set in a military competition."

The opening ceremonies will include drill and ceremony, military bands, and a conglomerate of shooters on the world stage representing their nations. The U.S. team will wear their Class B's, march before the world and reacquaint themselves with old friends, but make no mistake about it: their focus will be on the task at hand.

"We go to win, we don't go to participate," Behnke said. "We are going there to defend our title."

GT Speed: Prepares for next skating championship

Jimmy's mom, Amy, said he put in a lot of hard work to train for the championship.

After PCSing at the beginning of July to Lacrosse, Wis., from Fort Benning, Amy drove Jimmy three hours to train with a speed skating team, the closest team to their new home, eight times and rented the skating rink twice a week so Jimmy could practice.

Jimmy has skated with GT Speed for two years.

"He learned to skate and never wanted to quit," she said.

His coach, Yamill Collazo, said Jimmy has always been determined to win.

"He's emotional about skating," Collazo said. "If he doesn't win, he gets upset with himself. Usually those are the ones who are the champions. It's hard to beat that guy because he wants to win so bad that he runs past the last inch he can push."

Another way Decker prepared was competing in five races before the national championship.

"The best way to get better at something is to go and do it," Collazo said. "The more races you compete in, the less nervous you will be about them."

Allison Pierce, Jimmy's former teammate, competed for the fourth time at nationals and made it to the semifinals.

"The competition was really tough," she said. "I have learned from it and I know what I need to do for next year."

Another GT Speed member, Tanner Watts, took fifth place in the Primary Boys 400-meter. Jayden Watts took second place in the girls Tiny Tots division and Will Morales placed third in the Elementary Boys division.

Up next for GT Speed is the National Inline Roller Association championship Labor Day weekend in Marietta, Ga.

Vick's future no clearer than his past

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Two years ago, Michael Vick gave away the keys to the castle in Atlanta. It's still difficult to comprehend, even after all this time.

On top of Vick's 10-year, $130 million contract with the Falcons, he also made tens of millions from endorsement deals. His No. 7 was consistently among the hottest-selling jerseys in the National Football League.

Yet in the end, bankrolling $20,000 dogfights seemed to be the only thing that really revved up his engine. That's the most disturbing part of all.

Seriously, with that much fame and fortune, how hard is it to stay within society's framework and live like a normal human being?

And what a sad waste of time and talent for this tremendously gifted athlete. It was the rare exception when Vick wasn't the fastest player on the field.

As a freshman at Virginia Tech, he almost single-handedly beat Florida State for the national championship in the 2000 Sugar Bowl with a performance that included 322 yards in total offense and two touchdowns.

His 46-yard TD run against the Minnesota Vikings — which gave the Falcons an overtime victory in December 2002 — might be the most spectacular play I ever witnessed. People muse about "lightning in a bottle," but in the NFL, you just don't see defensive backs slam into each other and get embarrassed like that.

In the same game, Vick also rushed for a quarterback-record 173 yards. That 46-yard burst in sudden death also was the longest TD run ever by a quarterback in overtime.

After serving 18 months in prison for spearheading a dogfighting ring, he's been given the proverbial second chance by NFL commissioner Roger Goodell, who conditionally reinstated him last week.

Vick can immediately take part in preseason practices, workouts and meetings, and play in the final two preseason games — but he has to latch on somewhere first. So far, no team has publicly shown interest in him, but several have stated they would not sign him.

Few organizations appear willing to even take a chance on what's certain to be a media circus, if not a public-relations nightmare.

Vick pleaded guilty and acknowledged committing "heinous" acts. His three co-defendants told of how he participated in the killing of dogs that didn't perform well in test fights by shooting, hanging, drowning or slamming them to the ground.

We're a nation of pet and dog lovers. Such images are difficult to extract from the American conscience.

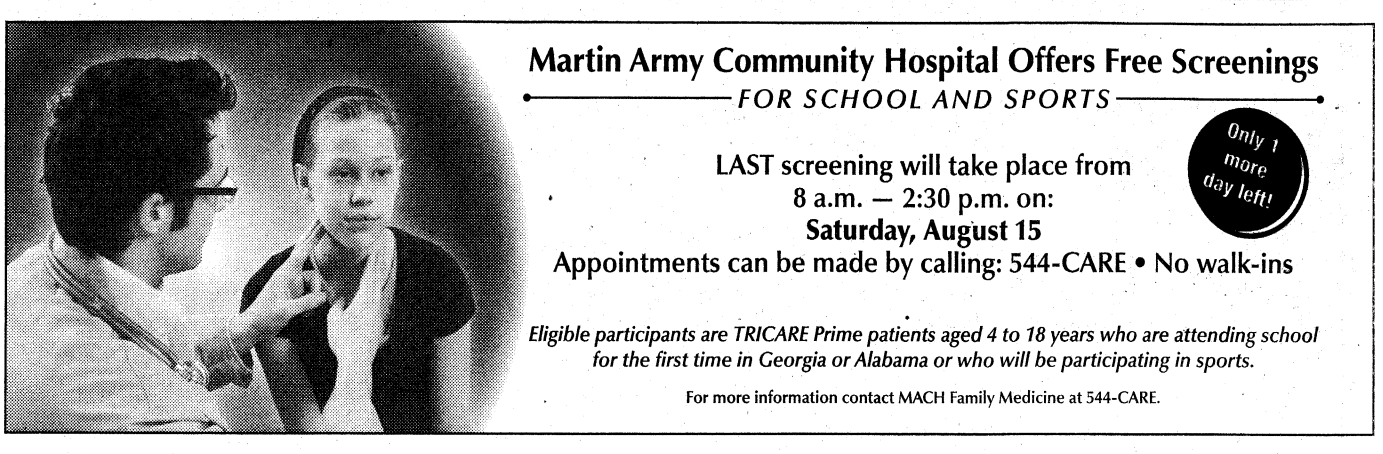
I've always said, Vick would have been more forgiven for killing another man in a bar fight in Buckhead. Want proof?

In June, Cleveland Browns wide receiver Donte' Stallworth pleaded guilty to DUI manslaughter charges after fatally striking a 59-year-old construction worker on March 14 in Miami. He remains under indefinite suspension by the NFL, but served just 24 days in a Miami-Dade jail as part of his plea agreement.

With no suitors in the NFL, Vick may have to take a less-glamorous route back. It's rumored he could land in the new United Football League for its inaugural season, set to begin in October.

That might be the best path toward possible redemption. He could play immediately and show he's willing to step on a smaller stage to rebuild his tattered image.

One thing's a guarantee: He'll never again wear an Atlanta uniform after blatantly misleading team owner Arthur Blank. Drafting quarterback Matt Ryan, who guided the team to a playoff appearance last season as a rookie, has tempered outrage and planted fresh hope among lifelong-suffering Falcons fans, myself included.



Vick paid a hefty price — jail time, bankruptcy and a permanently stained character — for his poor choices and crimes. Other players with serious legal issues have rebounded to the NFL.

He's expressed remorse and a desire to change his ways. But Vick's future looks no clearer than his dubious past.

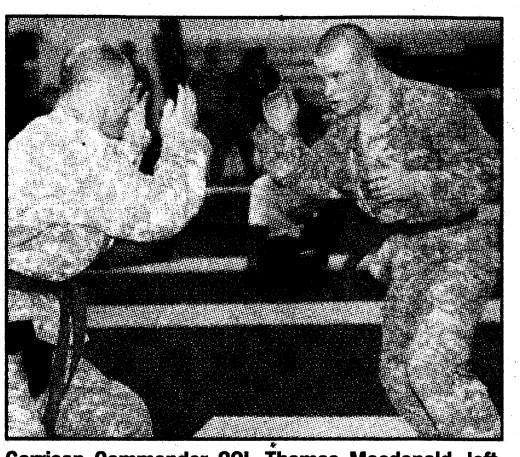
two sets of rules — so no one can train for the bottom end of the competition."

Competitors fought using standard rules, including grappling and no striking until the semifinals. Finalists fought with intermediate rules, including kneeing below the waist, open-hand strikes, kicks to the head and closed fist attacks.

A new addition to the post combatives championship was stick fighting and shock knife and Blauersuit demonstrations, which showcased what Soldiers learn at the Combatives School.

Competitions are 2 percent of the combatives program, Larsen said. The other part is teaching how to conduct missions and helping Soldiers with what they need to do on the battlefield.



The competition is about building the warrior ethos, confidence and learning how to close with the enemy, said SSG Jermaine Trevillion, a drill sergeant with the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, who took first place in the heavyweight category.

SSG Dane Armentrout, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, who took third in the welterweight division, said the competition instills pride.

"The championship teaches Soldiers they are more effective fighting machines than they think they are," he said.

For 12 of the competitors — the top two in six weight classes —the Army Combatives Championship Sept. 17-20 at Smith Fitness Center will be the next opportunity to showcase their skills.

brings us all back together," he said. "It's pretty competitive between the battalions. And they may compete, but at the end of the day, we are all Rangers."

Rey said his favorite part of the Rendezvous was the boxing tournament.

PV2 Keith Radcliff, of 2nd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., boxed for the first time in the tournament.

"I was going to compete in combatives, but there were too many guys in my weight class that were better than me and the boxers needed another competitor," he said.

"I think I did well for my first time boxing and no training. I tried to keep my hands up. My opponent was a tall guy and had a little more of a reach. My strategy was to stun him with my jab and go with a right hook — that's all I had. I did it and it worked. He almost got me a couple times, but I was able to stay strong."

Radcliff took first place in the 205-pound weight division.

The Ranger Rendezvous wrapped up with the change of command ceremony Thursday.

Collazo: Has 'passion' for skating, coaching children who wants to learn basic skating safety.

He uses the class to recruit members for his skating team, GT Speed, which consists of skaters ages 5 to 60.

"If children are going to fall and cry, speed skating probably isn't for them," Collazo said. "But if they fall and get up, I might recruit them."

There's a difference between recreational and competitive skating, he said.

"If you want to be a competitive skater, you have to eat, drink and sleep skating," he said. "If you don't do that, you won't want to race because there are other kids who are doing that, plus more."

Collazo requires his skaters to drink a gallon of water a day and stay away from sweets and soda.

The key to succeed is not winning, but making attainable goals, Collazo said.

"I teach the kids to make it to the finals," he said. "I tell them if you can make it to the finals, you can be in the top six in the country."

The 52-year-old has been coaching for 20 years and began competitive skating when he was 9.

"I started skating when my dad was in Vietnam and my mom had to work," he said. "My mom would drop me off at the skating rink Friday, Saturday and Sunday so she could go to work.

"I really enjoyed it. I started competing and working at bowling alleys and I skated in Camden, N.J., when I joined the Navy in 1976. Skating is a part of me."

Lauren Pierce, 12, is one of Collazo's student skaters with GT Speed.

"Coach Collazo makes skating fun and always helps me fix any skating problems I have," she said.

Pierce's father, Jon, said Collazo has a passion for skating and coaching.

"He volunteers his time to coach, skates with the kids and helps them. I can tell he really loves skating and coaching," he said.

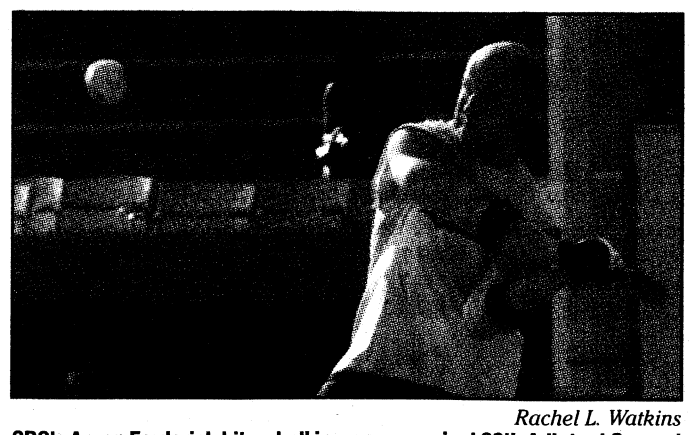
CRC Team One defeats 30th AG, 22-10, in loser's bracket



Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

CRC Team One fell to the loser's bracket of the postseason Commander's Cup Softball Championship July 27, but they have won all four of their games to advance to the loser's bracket semifinals. Their last victory came at the expense of the 30th Adjutant General Battalion, which CRC defeated 22-10 Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

CRC began the game scoring six runs on errors, and RBIs from Aaron Frederick, Jason Poore, Robert Pemberton and Mark Kottka, while 30th AG's Ernesto Velez scored one run on an error.

Leading 6-1 in the top of the second inning, CRC scored on a two-run RBI triple by Frederick but the 30th AG answered with two runs going into the top of the third inning trailing CRC 8-3.

CRC's momentum slowed in the top of the third inning scoring one run while 30th AG inched closer, scoring three runs in the bottom of the inning to cut the CRC lead to 9-6.

Rachel L. Watkins
CRC's Aaron Frederick hits a ball in a game against 30th Adjutant General Battalion Tuesday at Gowdy Field.

CRC Team One squeezed out one run on a Frederick RBI single in the top of the fourth, but 30th AG tied the game at 10-10 scoring four runs in the bottom of the inning.

CRC Team One broke the stalemate on a Joe Barrett RBI single, while 30th AG was held scoreless in the bottom of the inning.

CRC had their biggest inning in the top of the sixth, scoring 11 runs to seal the 22-10 win. "Even though the game got close, we still were able to keep the bats going," said Rodger Mendenhall, CRC coach, "If we want to win this championship, we have to play a better overall game and hit the ball more consistently rather than have one big inning."

Right Center fielder Demetrius Minor said the tension was high in the game.

"We went out there, hit the ball and I'm glad we came out with the victory," he said.

"Everyone stayed in the game and focused on playing and we kept it going, especially in the last inning. I think if we can take the momentum from this game and carry it to the next games, we can win the cup."

CRC took on 1st Bn., 19th Infantry Regiment, in the semifinals and won 14-8. CRC played in the championship Wednesday at Gowdy Field. Look for more coverage of the championship in the Aug. 14 edition of The Bayonet.

Women's shelter seeks help

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Patti Herron, a financial specialist with Army Community Service, believes that when it comes to money matters, people have a choice.

"I think we go through life thinking we're thrown things and we don't have a choice in the matter and you do," Herron said. "I like to tell people that they have a choice about how they spend their money, the decisions they make."

Herron shares her financial know-how not only with Soldiers and families but also victims of domestic violence to empower them to become independent and informed about their finances, she said.

She started volunteering at Hope Harbour about two years ago. A local battered women's shelter, Hope Harbour offers a variety of services, including a 24-hour crisis line, counseling and support groups, referrals for legal and medical assistance and filing Georgia Crime Victims' Compensation.

Herron said she works with the residents to teach them financial planning and budgeting, the "cornerstone" of gaining financial control. She helps them manage their monthly expenses and offers practical advice, such as going grocery shopping on a full stomach.

"That's the most important thing: ask yourself, 'Do you need it or do you want it?'

Run raises thousands for scholarship

Kristin Molinaro

"Charlie Mike: Complete the mission."

Five years ago, Dr. John Henderson used this phrase in ending telephone conversations with his deployed son, PFC John Henderson Jr.

Today, Henderson uses the Army slang to explain his commitment to a memorial scholarship program he created after the death of his son in combat in 2005.

"We have to remember there is always a mission; you have to continue the mission, you can't give up," said Henderson, who was an Army doctor in Saudi Arabia during Operation Desert Shield.

Henderson now works as a family practice and sports medicine doctor in Columbus and sponsors an annual run to raise money for the scholarship program.

Henderson's mission is to award a full four-year scholarship every year to a new freshman student at St. Anne Pacelli Catholic School in Columbus for as long as the school stands, he said.

"All three of my children graduated from Pacelli," said Henderson, whose son was a 2002 graduate and senior class president at the school. "I was fortunate enough that I could provide for Five-year-old Jayden Kimball-Pratt holds a nonpoisonous snake Friday at the post safety fair. Jayden said the snake felt "smoothie" when he held it. James Whitlock, a post safety specialist, said many of the booths were interactive, so they would attract children's attentions and help them learn about safety.

"What is that?" asked 5-year-old Catey Myers. Catey pointed out different substances in the Army Substance Abuse Program's identification kit and asked her parents, SPC Scott and Beth Myers, about each one. ASAP was one of 15 booths on display at the safety fair.

Kids learn about safety

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"I got a lot of information," said 8-year-old James Myers, after visiting several of the booths at the Fort Benning safety fair Friday outside the Youth Activity Center.

"I learned about safety — it's really important to be safe," said James, who attended the fair with his sister, 5-year-old Catey, and parents, SPC Scott and Beth Myers.

James said he learned a rattlesnake is poisonous, that he should never mess with drugs and alcohol or electricity, and to "always be prepared" for bad weather, including a tornado, hurricane or flood.

He learned all that while having fun, he said.

James was one of nearly 2,000 children who attended the fair, held in conjunction with the Back-to-School Bash. Children learned about bicycle safety, what to do in case of a fire and how to be safe at home.

The goal of the safety fair was to educate children and adults about staying safe, said James Whitlock, a safety specialist with the Fort Benning Safety Office.

"We try to be proactive to prevent accidents from happening," Whitlock said. "We don't want anyone to get hurt. Any information we can give that saves them or a loved one from being injured, that's our purpose."

While the safety office passed out Frisbees, tote bags, flashlights and water bottles with safety mottos written on them, the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation gave children school supplies, including more than 1,000 backpacks, said Donna Hyatt, acting marketing director for DFMWR.

"We want the children to go back to school well stocked and ready to go," Hyatt said. "We do this to help children get excited about going back to school again. Everybody gets together and sees their friends and meets new friends. It's just a great way to end the summer and start the school year. It was a great success."

As Allison O'Brien watched her husband's promotion from major to lieutenant colonel Saturday morning on post, it was dinner time in Baghdad.

LTC Charles O'Brien has been deployed there since April, where he serves in the Commander's Initiatives Group for Multi-National Security Training Command - Iraq. His promotion was broadcast for Allison, her parents, and the couple's two children through a video teleconference — or VTC — a system that allows users to connect through real-time video calls.

It was important to be able to share the moment with his wife, said O'Brien, who has experienced a gamut of access to family communication during each of his five deployments throughout his 20-year Army career.

"Back in 2003, I literally did not have Internet or phones to contact my wife for almost four months," he said.

Back then Allison had just given birth to their 6-year-old daughter, Caroline, and there was nothing, she said, — no phone calls and no e-mail — to keep her family connected.

Now, times have changed and staying in touch during deployment is easier than ever, said SGT Russell Dutton, a communications NCO for the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team.

LTC Charles O'Brien, left, speaks with his wife and children Saturday through VTC.

"One of the things that has helped, is the longer we're in a place, the more infrastructure is built up with VTCs and Internet cafes on the (forward operating bases)," Dutton said.

Post schools kick off with celebration

THE BAYONET

After a two-month break, Fort Benning students return to school today. Their teachers, however, returned Monday, with a back-to-school celebration kicking off the 2009-2010 school year. Faculty and staff met Monday at Faith Middle School to hear from school leadership and celebrate the theme for the event, "Making a Difference."

"The research is clear that a quality teacher in every classroom and strong principal leadership makes a difference in schools that are dedicated to high student achievement and continuous school improvement," said Dr. Dell McMullen, superintendent of the Georgia and Alabama Department of Defense Domestic Elementary and Secondary Schools district. "World class-schools demand world-class leaders. We have phenomenal teachers at Fort Benning."

Among those teachers are 30 educators new to Fort Benning as well as two new principals: Dr. Matthew Kralevich for Dexter Elementary and Glenn Hughes for White Elementary.

The event allowed post educators to celebrate the opportunity they have to serve military families, McMullen said.

"It reminded us once again that although we are certainly not on the front lines as our military is, we are serving our country by teaching the children of the brave men and women who protect us and preserve our freedom," she said.

Many of the speakers encouraged teachers to continue persevering in their work with children.

"What has happened to our summer? It is hard to believe that we are ready to begin another school year and that the class of 2022 will begin kindergarten this year," said Evelyn Braman, president of the Benning Education Association, as she addressed the assembly of several dozen teachers, administrators and support personnel.

"We now live in an interdependent, rapidly changing world, and schools must adapt to the needs of the new global economy," she said. "This 21st century is an age of knowledge and lifelong learning ... Success now depends on providing every student

Five-state yard sale offers variety of used items

Veteran shopper shares advice on 654-mile sale

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

It's 654 miles and known as the world's longest yard sale. Yes, yard sale. Spanning five states, four days and thousands of vendors, the sale runs along U.S. Highway 127, from Gadsden, Ala., to West Unity, Ohio, according to www.127sale.com, the official Web site for the sale. The event started Thursday and lasts through Sunday.

For tricommunity residents considering the journey, the closest stop is Gadsden, a little over three hours away, said Linda Lee, human resources assistant for Martin Army Community Hospital and past attendee of the yard sale.

Lee has attended for the yard sale for 13 years, picking up each year where she left off the previous year. Lee finally completed the entire sale in 2007.

"You can't do it all in the weekend," she said. "If you could spend all day in Columbus and only go to maybe 30 sales, in 15 minutes, you'd go to 30 sales at this place. If you like to yard sale, you will enjoy it. And if you collect something, you should be able to find something that you're looking for — that hard-to-find item."

Lee said she often finds bargains at the sale as well as collectibles her friends are looking for. She has also added to her own collection of panda bear themed items.

Most of her panda bear treasures come from this yard sale, said Lee, whose collection includes stuffed animals, figurines, jewelry, bookends, ornaments, wind chimes, frames, clocks, tins and more — all sporting a depiction of a cuddly panda bear.

Her most unique finds, including a toy block with a P for Panda, a panda fan and a panda teapot, were discovered at the world's longest yard sale. She's been looking for a panda bear snow globe for some time, she said, but even though she hasn't found one, she always has a good time and comes home with purchases that make it worth the trip.

Even a yard sale enthusiast, however, can leave home without proper preparations. It's important to plan ahead, Lee said.

"Take suntan lotion or you will get burned, a hat, drinks (and) snacks," she said. "This is out in the country; you're not going to find any place to eat. You're going to go hungry if you don't take food. And a backpack. People set up in fields. You're going to park your car, and you're going to walk in a large area as big as this hospital. Just prepare for the crowds."

HDTV.com gives more detailed advice, including a recommendation for two pairs of walking shoes — one for the outdoors where it often gets muddy and another for the car — measuring tape, antibacterial wipes, a flashlight or magnifying glass for hard-to-see places, bags, boxes, tape and packing paper, and cash in small bills, since most sellers don't take credit cards or checks.

Weather precautions, such as a rain jacket, sunglasses and layers of clothing, are also wise for days that can start out at 40 degrees and reach a high of 90, according to the Web site.

The site also recommends a camera, since there will be photo opportunities with the scenic countryside and friends that travel together, and plenty of music for the road, especially during the long stretches without many radio stations.

Other than that, shoppers need to make lodging arrangements in advance, research prices to improve haggling ability and check their car or truck to make sure it's ready for the rural terrain. And keep an eye out for restrooms, gas stations and restaurants. They are few and far between and worth the extra stop when available.

To download the brochure, see a map or learn about other stops along the trail, including the headquarters location, Jamestown, Tenn., visit www.127sale.com.

Cheryl Rodewig
Linda Lee, a human resources assistant for Martin Army Community Hospital, has attended the world's longest yard sale, also known as the 127 corridor sale, for 13 years. To tackle the long stretch of tables, Lee suggests parking in the middle of a long stretch and walking halfway around the line of tables before making a pit stop at the car to unload and then completing the second half. The route will look like two horseshoes, she said.

Hope Harbour: Offers resources for women, children

There is a difference," she said.

Volunteering with the shelter has been rewarding, she said.

"This is something that I just feel: if the Lord has given you the ability to do certain things, you should share it with others," she said. "I think once you get in there and you see you're making a difference and you're giving your time, you'll feel better for it."

Mary Leverett, volunteer coordinator for Hope Harbour, said she has heard positive feedback from the residents about Herron's financial literacy class — "that it's very helpful for them in a day-to-day sense."

"The women who stay here, a lot of times they're starting from the bottom," Leverett said. "They may not have had a checking account. They may not have ever really thought about planning meals for their kids and how to do it in a cost effective manner. So in that aspect Patti is super, because she really starts from the basics."

But people don't need to be financial gurus to volunteer. The shelter needs adults to help the kids with their homework and play with them, tutors for some of the women and groups or individuals who can help organize the donations the shelter receives, Leverett said.

An Officer Candidate School group visited Hope Harbour two consecutive Saturdays and refurbished a room, cleaned out the donations shed and put in shelving in the children's room. It wasn't much time, but it made a big difference to the women and children who live at the shelter, said Diane Hett, the director for Hope Harbour.

> "Research shows that the greatest likelihood that a woman will stay free from violence is to have support from other people."
> — Diane Hett

Celebrating its 30th year, Hope Harbour serves six counties and about 400 women and children each year, Hett said. Volunteers are an important part of that service.

"Research shows that the greatest likelihood that a woman will stay free from violence is to have support from other people," she said. "The more protective factors the women have, the less likely they are to get into another abusive relationship."

Volunteers can be part of that shield of protection, she said.

Leverett said she encourages volunteers to learn about legislation related to domestic violence and learn how to respond to the warning signs of domestic violence: isolation, changes in mood and fear.

"Learn about what the correct response might be to your sister when you find out something is going on with her relationship," she said. "Domestic violence keeps happening in part because we as a society allow it. One in four women in the United States either are, have been or will be in a violent relationship. So when you're sitting at work, or you're sitting in church or you're sitting at a family get-together, look around you. Somebody there is either abused or an abuser."

Volunteers are required to attend an orientation, complete training and undergo a background check. To learn more about volunteering or Hope Harbour, call 706-256-0237 or visit www.hopeharbour.org.

Scholarship: Honors fallen Soldier, supports students

my children's (tuition) directly but a lot of their classmates needed help."

After the death of his son, a mortarman with Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, who was killed in a combat mission near Jalalabad, Afghanistan, Henderson wanted to honor his memory.

"I wanted to try and make something good out of something that wasn't," he said.

In 2006, Henderson awarded his first scholarship to David Miller.

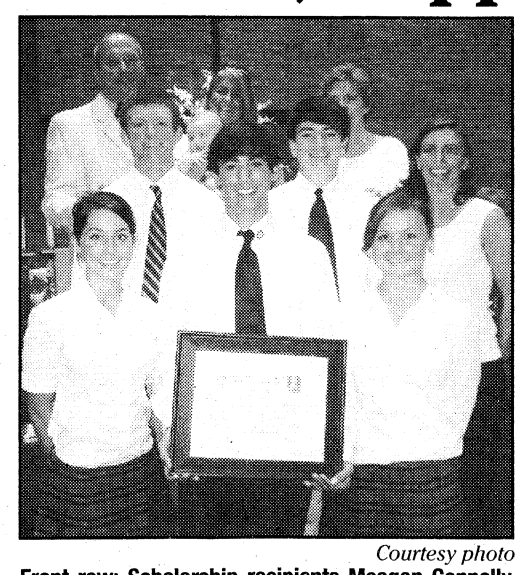
"A lot of the kids I knew worried about what their parents were giving up in order to send them to Pacelli," said Miller, who graduated in 2008. "Looking back now, I greatly appreciate what Dr. Henderson did for me."

Miller is now a presidential scholar at LaGrange College in LaGrange, Ga.

In his sophomore year at the catholic school, Miller's previous scholarship was discontinued and his family faced the financial challenge of putting all three of their children through school at Pacelli, said Miller's father, Ken.

"We are grateful and humbled that Dr. Henderson chose him," Ken said.

Miller is only one of six recipients of the scholarship over the years and the criteria behind making the award decision is simple, Henderson said.



"The kids who've been awarded the scholarships have shown by their actions that they won't give up," he said. "Some kids will be 'B' students, some are 'A' ... they just have to do their best."

To help defray the costs of the scholarship, Henderson conducts an annual memorial run on the anniversary of his son's death. The fourth annual run was Tuesday and raised more than $5,000 toward the scholarship for next year.

The 15-mile run began at his son's grave in Park Hill Cemetery and ended in front of the 3rd Bn., 75th Ranger Regt., memorial on Fort Benning. The run took approximately four hours for Henderson to complete but he didn't have to do it alone.

Nearly 100 Soldiers, including the post's senior ranking NCO, CSM Earl Rice, ran alongside Henderson.

Soldiers from 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, the 1st Battalion (Airborne) 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment and the 75th Ranger Regiment also participated.

John's one unit station training was with the 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., and he went through both Airborne school and the Ranger Indoctrination Program, Henderson said.

Henderson invited each of the units to participate in the run to honor his son's memory.

LTC Richard Timmons, commander of 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., said he and 17 of his cadre ran with Henderson.

"He's turned a sad situation into a positive for other people," said Timmons, whose seven-year-old son attends Pacelli. "Our battalion motto is 'love of country and patriots,' and I told him he will always be a member of this battalion and that we are here to support him."

Henderson credits the support of Fort Benning units, the post's leadership and community officials for helping make the run possible.

"This is another chance to remind people we are at war, and on the home front we have to do our part because guys overseas are doing theirs," he said.

Communication: Links families separated by war

"You can e-mail, pay your bills and do whatever you need to do Internet-wise as long as you're on the FOB."

But the further you get from the flagpole the harder communication becomes, said Dutton, who remembers when getting a hold of a telephone in remote locations meant having to connect through several operators just to get a line out.

Because of the nature of his job, O'Brien has been able to send regular e-mails home to Allison and the children. At their home in Vienna, Va., the family uses Skype.com to connect several times a week. The online software application allows users to make voice calls over the Internet, instant message, transfer files and video conference.

"I think it's a lifesaver," Allison said about Skype. "With all the deployments families have to go through, to be able to see them and hear them means everything in the world."

Allison believes the Internet makes family separations much more bearable, and there aren't many Americans who don't have access to some kind of online connection, she said.

With a myriad of social networking sites, such as MySpace, Facebook and Twitter, the options to help families keep in touch are better than ever before.

The number of adult Internet users who have a profile on an SNS has more than quadrupled in the past four years — from 8 percent in 2005 to 35 percent as of January, according to the Pew Internet & American Life Project's December tracking survey.

And while SNS communication can still be one-sided at times, Dutton said any communication while a family member is thousands on miles away is better than none when it comes to the morale of the Soldier.

"It's very important — even little things," Dutton said. "But if (Soldiers) can talk to their kid or read their kid a bedtime story — I can't think of anything that helps more than being able to talk to home — home is the best escape."

Variety of ways available for keeping in touch

There are many ways to keep in touch with a loved one deployed overseas. Below is a list of the most popular.

- Postal Mail — Using an APO AE address of a Soldier, letters and packages actually go to New York, which means you pay domestic mail rates instead of international rates. Mail is then sent via the Army Postal Service once it leaves the country. Expect packages to take 10-20 days to arrive, depending on the time of year.
- E-mail — Use a Soldier's Army Knowledge Online e-mail address that ends in @us.army.mil to send e-mail. Family members can also get their own AKO account in order to instant message a Soldier overseas. There are a number of Internet cafes at foreign U.S. bases, some free while others charge a small fee for higher connection speeds.
- AKO Instant Messaging — Soldiers can sponsor guest accounts for family members to use this feature. Soldiers used to be able to use Yahoo, AOL and MSN IM programs to communicate with families back home but that is being restricted in more locations now due to security concerns.
- Phone — There are a number of Defense Switched Network phone centers and AT&T phone tents located throughout U.S. bases in Iraq and Afghanistan. Soldiers can also use low-cost prepaid phone calling cards to call home.
- VoIP — Voice-over Internet Protocol offers a low-cost way to communicate. Morale, Welfare, and Recreation centers often provide "Spawar" setups which are USB Internet phones or headsets plugged into computers running Skype to call a phone or an equipped computer in the U.S.
- Video Teleconferencing — Secure, dedicated video conferencing systems are available at family readiness centers on U.S. posts to allow family members to engage in real-time video calls at specific times. These are sophisticated setups that run on secure military networks.
- Social Media — Soldiers and families can blog, post videos, Twitter or update a Facebook or MySpace profile to keep the lines of communication open. As with other means of communication, access may be limited due to missions or location, or by command directive.

Editor's note: The above information was compiled from www.bootsonground.com, a Web site that supports troops during deployments.

Schools: 'Encourage military children' to succeed with a quality education that includes 21st-century skills and knowledge needed for career or college. You, the educators on the front lines, know what it takes to increase student learning. Your innovation and dedication found ways to lead, inspire and create new possibilities for students."

School board president and mother of a Dexter Elementary student, Christy Benitez said she knows teachers work hard to help children succeed. She also challenged educators to use the varied experiences military children have as learning tools.

"There is no doubt to me that the military life experiences lend themselves to learning," she said. "There is frequent travel, which leads to a wide circle of friendships and contacts, but our schools have the opportunity to encourage military children to glean from the experiences they have had and will have. (Teachers) have the great challenge to encourage children to use their diverse experiences for learning instead of seeing them as fearful circumstances."

Former Faith Middle School student DaShawn May addressed the faculty at the close of the celebration.

Teachers help students in many ways that most people never recognize, he said.

"First, you show up ready for your mission, and many take more time to do extra things, most of the time without extra pay," said the Columbus High School sophomore.

Teachers also understand the specific needs and trials military children face, said May, who dealt with his father's deployment to Iraq during his time at Faith.

"I know you all realize your importance to the students, and I'm here to thank you on behalf of all of us," he said.

May said he wanted to speak at the celebration, so he could thank all the teachers who impacted him during his time on post.

At the end of his speech, he performed a dance, while lip-syncing, to James Brown's I Got You (I Feel Good).

DaShawn said he chose the song because of the difference, especially with building his confidence, that teachers made in his life.

"I hope you all know that it's in your power to make these students feel good," May said. "I feel good."

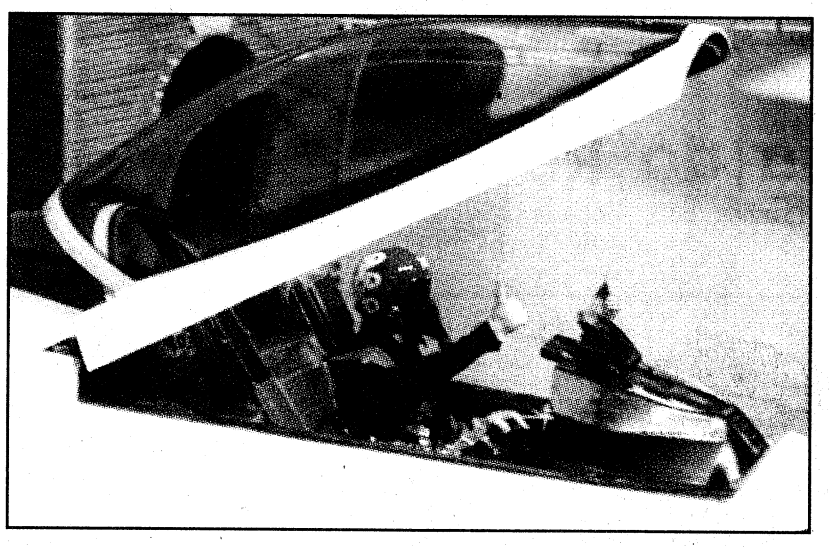
This Stearman PT-17 has a wingspan of 32 feet, 2 inches, weighs 2,717 pounds when loaded, and has a maximum speed of 125 mph. During World War II, it was used as a trainer at Tuskegee Army Air Field, Ala. The PT-17, nicknamed the "Kaydet," was the most widely used primary trainer plane of the Allied forces during World War II.

Explore Air Force history at Museum of Aviation

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

The Century of Flight Hangar encompasses 66,000 square feet and houses aircraft, including an SR-71 "Blackbird," far left, that set a world record for speed. The hangar's upper level has exhibits on national leaders from Georgia as well as classrooms for the museum's education center.

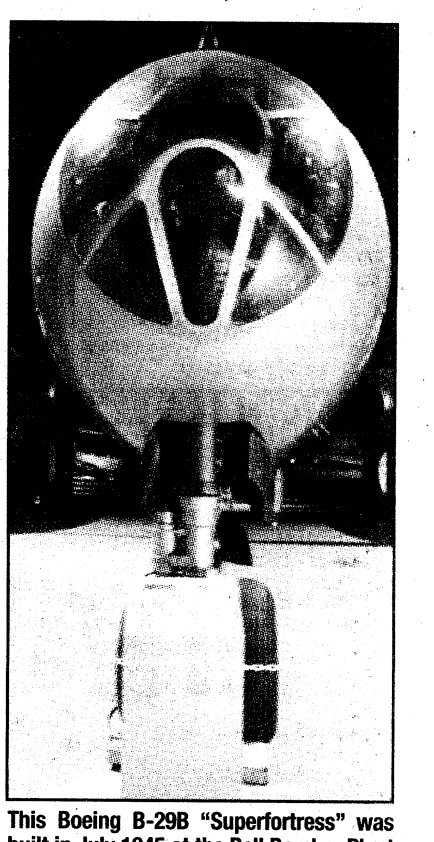
Where can you find presidential helicopters, a World War II glider and a fighter plane that belonged to the Bulgarian air force all in the same place? Right here, at the Museum of Aviation in Warner Robins, Ga.



The museum, located just outside the gates of Robins Air Force Base, houses more than 100 aircraft ranging from a replica of an 1896 glider to modern planes such as the B-1B bomber. It's the second-largest museum in the U.S. Air Force, and with more than 200,000 square feet of exhibit space in its four main buildings, is responsible for more than 68,000 historical items.

Visiting the museum for the first time Saturday, I was stunned by the breadth of history it covers. The Eagle Building alone houses exhibits on the 14th Air Force Flying Tigers, the Korean War, the history of Robins Air Force Base, and the story of WWII ace Brig. Gen. Robert L. Scott. It's also where you can take a ride in a transporter motion simulator. For $5, you can be virtually transported to locations such as the moon, Christopher Columbus' ships and a fighter jet strike mission during Operation Desert Storm. And if all that virtual flying makes you hungry, head upstairs to the Victory Café, where you can enjoy sandwiches and snacks in a walkway with panoramic views of the aircraft and a wireless Internet connection.

In the World War II Exhibit Hangar, the museum's newest building, a permanent exhibit named Down to Earth tells the story of the 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment and the D-Day air invasion of Normandy. Visitors can read about how some of the United States' first paratroopers trained, view a simulation of the planning room used by allied leaders to plan Operation Overlord, and watch a film about the experiences of townspeople in Graignes, France. One of my favorite displays in the exhibit was the nose of a crashed World War II glider, preserved with its seats and windshield intact. The canvas covering the outside of it still has traces of dirt from its crash landing.



Next door, the Century of Flight Hangar features aircraft including an SR-71 that set a world speed record in 1976 of 2,193 mph, and an MH-53M "Super Jolly" special operations helicopter. The upper level of the building has classrooms for the museum's education programs, workshops and camps. Spooky Science after Dark, Science with Santa and Paratrooper for a Day are some of the programs scheduled for the 2009-2010 school year.

Across from Century of Flight, Hangar One houses the country's largest exhibit on the Tuskegee Airmen, the first African-American Airmen in the U.S. military. The exhibit honors the achievements of aviators like Bessie Coleman, the first licensed African-American pilot in the United States, and Gen. Daniel "Chappie" James, the first African-American four-star general in the Air Force.

A mannequin portrays the pilot of an F-16A "Fighting Falcon" in the Century of Flight Hangar. This F-16A flew with the Air Force's Thunderbirds demonstration team from 1982 to 1991. It has a top speed of 1,345 mph.

The Museum of Aviation is located 10 miles east of I-75 at Georgia Highway 247 and Russell Parkway in Warner Robins. Admission is free and it is open daily from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For more information, call 478-926-6870 or visit www.museumofaviation.org.

This Boeing B-29B "Superfortress" was built in July 1945 at the Bell Bomber Plant in Marietta, Ga. B-29B bombers were used in the Pacific theater during World War II, as well as in the Korean War.

Edgar Hoover made Dillinger America's first Public Enemy No. 1 and sent in Melvin Purvis, the dashing "Clark Gable of the FBI." Confirmation delayed on Army secretary

Process on hold for at least a month

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

The Senate adjourned without voting to confirm New York Rep. John M. McHugh as Army secretary, but Pete Geren will remain on the job until formally replaced, Pentagon Press Secretary Geoff Morrell said.

It will be at least a month before a vote can be held.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates "is deeply disappointed" that the Senate delayed the confirmation of the Army secretary and undersecretary, Morrell said.

In the meantime, Geren will continue to serve as Army secretary.

"It's too important a job to be left vacant or manned in an acting capacity while we've got tens of thousands of Soldiers in combat," Morrell said.

President Barack Obama announced the nomination of McHugh, a Republican representative from upstate New York on June 2.

His district in New York includes Fort Drum, and he has served on the House Armed Services Committee. The Senate Armed Services Committee held confirmation hearings July 30.

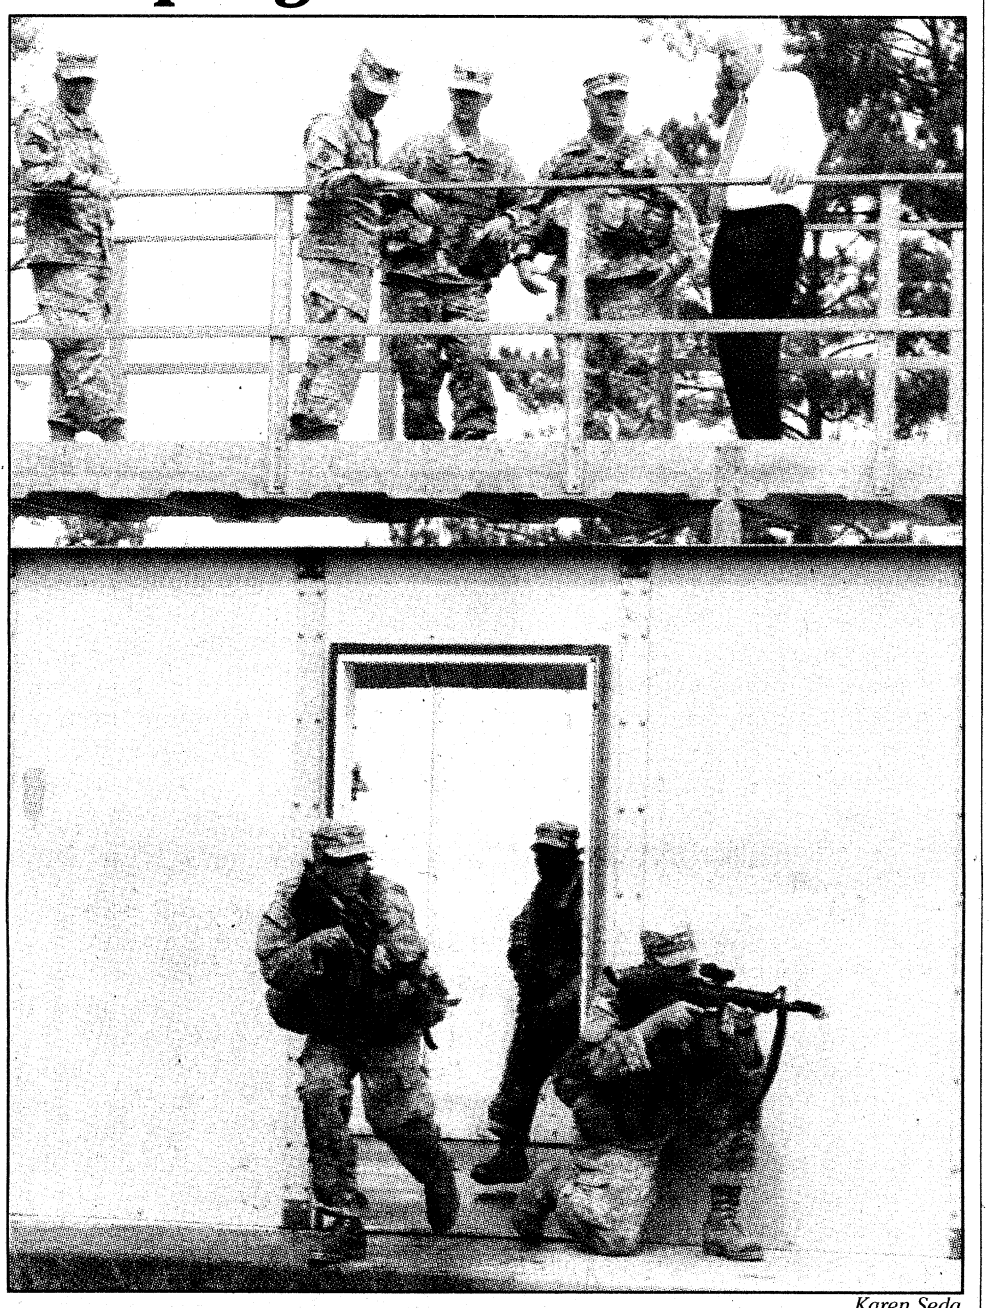
Post 9/11 GI Bill transferability begins

SFC Michael J. Carden
ARNEWS

WASHINGTON — With the Post-9/11 GI Bill's option to transfer unused educational benefits to eligible family members taking effect Aug. 1, it's no surprise that more than 25,000 service members have pre-applied, a Pentagon official said.



The wave of applicants has far exceeded the Defense and Veterans Affairs departments' expectations, said Bob Clark, the Pentagon's assistant director for accessions policy.

"We've seen, roughly, a thousand applications a day for the past week or so, and we expect that to continue," Clark said. "Transferability of these educational benefits has been one of the most requested provisions by family support groups, family advocacy groups and the troops out in the field and fleet."

Keeping watch

Karen Seda

Post Commanding General MG Michael Ferriter, top left, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, commander LTC Dean Weiler, CPT John Dudish, drill sergeant SFC James Finfrock and U.S. Senator Saxby Chambliss watch Soldiers in C Company, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., as they exit a building after clearing the rooms. Chambliss visited Cashe Town on Sand Hill Tuesday to observe training. "It gives him a chance to see some of his sons of Georgia in Infantry training," said MAJ Charles Hallman, operations officer for the 192nd Infantry Brigade. After observing the training, Chambliss shook hands with some of the Soldiers. "It makes me proud that you're Georgians and you're here for the right reasons. We'll (make) a better America because of what you do."

988th MPs return home from Iraq

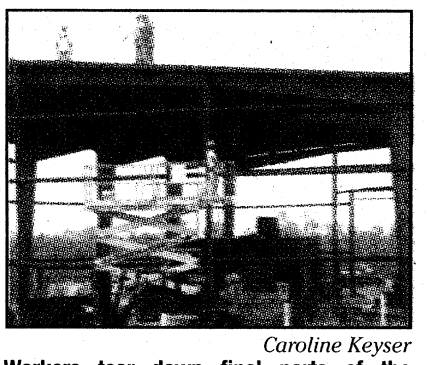
Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

A military police company that introduced police transition teams to Iraq's Maysan Province has returned home following a yearlong deployment, which saw the withdrawal of forces from Iraqi cities, villages and localities.

Nearly 50 troops with the 988th Military Police Company arrived Monday at Lawson Army Airfield after completing a mission to train and mentor Iraqi police.

Kristin Molinaro

Nearly 50 Soldiers returned home Monday following a yearlong deployment to Iraq.



"We established a (Police Transition Team) mission in the Maysan Province where there was none before so the company blazed the trail on that," said CPT Samuel Meyer, commander of the 988th. "We started our mission in Baghdad, where we did successful recruiting drives to bring 1,500 Sons of Iraq into the Iraqi police force. The unit was also a part of history when the June 30 Iraqi security agreement kicked in."

The company, initially assigned to 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Armored Division, was later assigned to 1st Cavalry Division before falling under 4th BCT, 1st Armor Div., prior to returning home.

"(They've) done an outstanding job accomplishing all the missions and tasks they were asked to do," said LTC Dennis Zink, commander of the 988th's higher headquarters, the 92nd Military Police Battalion from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Recycling program suspended on post until October

Caroline Keyser

Workers tear down final parts of the recycling facility on Cusseta Road. The facility will be rebuilt on Jamestown Road in Harmony Church.

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's recycling program is undergoing some major changes.

Effective Monday, all recycling on Fort Benning will be suspended for about two months while a new recycling facility is constructed at Harmony Church. The current facility, located on Cusseta Road, is being torn down to make way for a new access control point that will accommodate expected increases in traffic when the U.S. Army Armor School arrives at Fort Benning. A new recycling facility is being constructed on Jamestown Road, one-quarter mile east of 8th Division Road at Harmony Church.

The new facility is tentatively scheduled to open by Oct. 1, at which point recycling will resume on post. The facility will accept the same materials as before the construction — paper, newspaper, aluminum, cardboard and No.1 and No. 2 type plastic products. The recycling of glass, which was suspended in May when construction began near the current recycling facility, will be reinstated. However, tin will not be accepted because so many people mixed it in with aluminum cans, and extra manpower was needed to separate the two, said Dorinda Morpeth, Fort Benning's solid waste program manager.

The recycling trailers on post will be removed Monday, and signs will be posted at each location to inform the community of the changes. Directorate of Public Works

New deputy garrison commander braces for expansion

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

In some ways, Fort Benning doesn't look much different than it did 43 years ago — the last time George Steuber was here for advanced individual training and jump school, he said.

After all, headquarters is back at Ridgway Hall, and those massive jump towers remain a signature spectacle on Main Post.

"It's good to see they're still landmarks on the installation," Steuber said. "The more things change, the more they stay the same."

Last month, he returned to Fort Benning as the new deputy garrison commander. Steuber spent the last four years in the same role at Fort Rucker, Ala. He replaces Chuck Walls, who left after 20 years for a new assignment in Vicenza, Italy.

While a few facilities might look the same, the other differences here are drastic, he said. In terms of population, Fort Benning is seven times larger than Fort Rucker, and that gap is projected to grow with Base Realignment and Closure initiatives and the arrival of the Armor Center

What was your most memorable vacation?

I went to the beach in Biloxi, Miss., with my kids about eight years ago. I had just come back from basic training and Advanced Individual Training and hadn't seen them in nearly a year. We spent a week at the beach relaxing, going to water parks and riding jet skis.

Going to Gatlinburg, Tenn., in 2007 was my most memorable vacation because I got married. We went up there for a few days with the intent of getting married, but it also turned into a vacation. We saw Pigeon Forge and a lot of the historical sites.

I went to Tampa, Fla., on leave in June this year. It was memorable because I had never been on a real vacation since I joined the Army three years ago. I was there for 30 days and hung out with friends and family. I would love to go back to Florida.

— PFC Centria Cameron

When I was stationed in Okinawa, Japan, with the Navy, we went to Manza Beach. It was one of those luxury resort hotels. We saw things we'd never seen before — dragon boat races and caves cut into the mountains, and crystal-white sand on the beaches.

My four boys and my husband and I went camping at Uchee Creek for three days this summer right after school got out. It was just all about being a family. We had a little bonfire and roasted marshmallows, and the kids loved it.

I went on a cruise to Belize, Cozumel and Costa Maya, Mexico, and Nassau, Bahamas, with five of my buddies from my unit about a year ago. We did a lot of sightseeing, and being on the ship was a good time. I would definitely like to take another cruise.

Gulf Coast revives after Katrina

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

They were once the Mississippi Gulf Coast's version of Las Vegas. The casinos that lined U.S. 90 glittered like neon jewels along the beachfront.

But four years ago, Hurricane Katrina left an indelible scar — just as Hurricane Camille had done in 1969.

When I lived in the Atlanta area in the early to mid-1990s, Biloxi and Gulfport, Miss., were routine getaways for me. Only five or six hours away, I'd drive out there about twice a year. The return trip was often made with barely enough funds for fuel and a snack. But it was always a great time.

About three weeks ago, my wife, Wendy, and I went back for the first time in a decade. It was an anniversary celebration, delayed a couple of months by our recent move back to the U.S. from Japan.

We found a great little cottage online for $80 a night. It was a block from the beach in Gulfport and secluded from the restaurants, hotels and casinos. But these days, there are far fewer tourist attractions and condominiums along that strip.

After Katrina struck, the national media devoted most of its attention to the disaster and levee breaches in New Orleans. Lost in the coverage were Biloxi and Gulfport, which got pounded by the storm's eastern quadrant.

Before Katrina, Mississippi's state government allowed the casinos to operate only if they were built over water or a flood plain. Many sat on coastline barges. All the casinos suffered significant to catastrophic damage during Katrina, and several were tossed across U.S. 90 like beach toys by the devastating storm surge and Category 3 winds.

I'd estimate there were about 20 casinos in Biloxi and Gulfport before the storm. Only 11 have reopened.

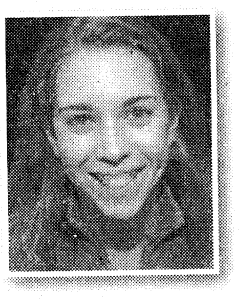
Driving up and down U.S. 90 at night was a little eerie. Everything is cleaned up now, but you could see where entire neighborhoods got wiped out. We spotted dozens of old parking lots and concrete foundations that used to be restaurants, hotels and houses.

At the height of Katrina's ferocity, the water level reached about 12 feet in the cottage we rented, according to its owners.

The recovery has been difficult. We were told 50 percent of the residents in Biloxi and Gulfport never returned.

Earlier this year, the arduous healing process was further slowed when former Gulfport Mayor Brent Warr and his wife, Laura, were accused of Hurricane Katrina fraud. According to local media reports, they have pleaded not guilty to charges in a 16-count federal indictment.

Many residents — thankful for the volunteers who helped clean up debris and provide relief supplies — still say they felt slighted by the media's lack of attention to their struggles. But the people along the Mississippi Gulf Coast have shown resilience.



The beach looked spectacular. Much effort was put in to restoring it. All the roads have been repaved and redevelopment plans remain in the works.

It was a very relaxing weekend for us, and we actually fared pretty well in the casinos — for a change. Over the years, we've made our share of "donations."

The Mississippi Gulf Coast remains a super vacation destination or weekend getaway. It's not that far away, either. I know we'll be back.

THE BAYONET

As some of you may already know, this week has been my last at The Bayonet. My husband has gotten orders for our next duty station and we will be PCSing to Fort Irwin, Calif., home of the National Training Center, later this month.

Looking back over the time I've spent at Fort Benning and The Bayonet, I can hardly believe it's been nearly a year. Time really does fly when you're having fun, because this year has flown by faster than any other I can remember. Working at The Bayonet has truly been an enriching experience that taught me more than I ever expected. Coming in as a civilian who had never spent any extended amount of time on a military installation, I found myself getting a crash course in what it means to work on one. Within a few short months, I could rattle off acronyms like a pro and find out a Soldier's rank and unit with a quick glance at his uniform. Through trial and error — and of course, help from my editors and co-workers — I learned the right way to take a photo and the best interview questions for everyone from generals to drill sergeants. I can't think of many other jobs where your daily schedule might include running an obstacle course with a camera, bird watching with middle-schoolers, and learning about beekeeping techniques.

So, in the spirit of Jeff Foxworthy's You Might Be a Redneck If... jokes, I've made a list of my own for Fort Benning.

You might work at Fort Benning if...

- You measure distance by how far a place is from the jump towers.
- You've been here for years and still have no idea how to get to any of the Malone ranges.
- Acronyms like MCOE, MACH, IOBC and RSLC make sense to you.
- You know what a red-cockaded woodpecker is.
- You've ever gotten lost in Soldiers' Plaza.
- You've ever gotten lost going to Uchee Creek.
- You know the correct spellings of Ridgway, Wetherby and Stilwell.
- Going out to lunch means walking to El Zapata.
- You've ever been late because you were stuck behind a Bradley or a tank.
- You know Fort Benning has four seasons: hot, hotter, rain and construction.

I won't end this with goodbye, but rather with a "see you later." I'm sure I'll be back here at some point in the future. Because, as they say in the Infantry, all roads lead to Fort Benning.

This week in Fort Benning history

1951

• A Bayonet columnist reminded Soldiers to bathe daily and change their uniforms every third day to prevent body odor during the hot summer months.

• Thomas Alexander Mario Jose Fernandez de la Reguera: His name was too long to print on an Army ID tag, so officials made him drop "Jose."

• The Bayonet posted this incentive for re-enlistment: "Now that the Army is growing so fast, there's a better chance than ever for trained men to get ahead. Master sergeants get $220.50 per month after 30 years of service. That's a lot of money."

• Colliers Magazine featured five "streaky-faced" Rangers on its cover. In an article titled "Super-Infantrymen," Colliers called them "steel-tough Rangers who specialize in swift, surprising, bloodletting blows" at the enemy.

1981

• Washington announced that AAFES would seek new, local sources to reduce the cost of gasoline on installations across the country. Until new gas contracts went into effect in the fall, AAFES would allow installations to take advantage of the present oversupply of gas by purchasing locally at lower prices.

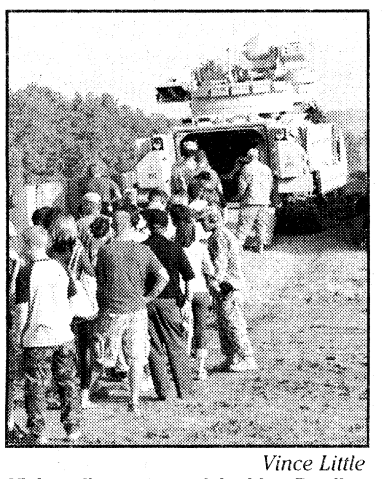
Hundreds turn out for firepower demonstration

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

With several hundred people packed into viewing stands at Red Cloud Range, the Bradley Fighting Vehicles and Stryker Infantry Carrier Vehicles rolled into view.



They whizzed past the audience, which included about a dozen students from the Infantry Pre-Command Course, showing off their power and mechanical finesse. Then, the machines unleashed a torrent of missiles and gunfire on targets downrange, using strategically placed berms as "cover."

The Aug. 6 event was part of a hands-on training exercise, or HOTEX, conducted by the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. Soldiers from the unit's 2nd Battalion put on a display featuring small arms, rifles and squad automatic weapons.

"This was a firepower demonstration," said LTC Michael Junot, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment commander.

"We're trying to show the capabilities and systems that the modern Infantryman employs on the battlefield. The reason families are out here is to allow the Soldiers to demonstrate their capabilities to the citizenry.

"My guys are well-trained, capable Soldiers who can fight and deploy anywhere in the world."

Vince Little
Visitors line up to peek inside a Bradley Fighting Vehicle during the event.

The last three HOTEX events had to be canceled due to inclement weather, unit officials said.

SFC Robby Burns, the noncommissioned officer in charge of Red Cloud Range, said the demonstration serves as a combat refresher for the battalion's Soldiers.

"It lets people see what we can do," he said. "But it helps us sustain our discipline and tactics."

SFC Kevin Willis, officer in charge of Red Cloud Range, said the HOTEX makes family members feel like part of the team.

"This gives them a closer connection to their Dads and spouses," Willis said. "Also, it helps prepare our future leaders for battle."

LTC Terry Wilson, of Fort Hood, Texas, was among the IPCC students in attendance. He develops equipment for the Army's Program Executive Office for Command, Control and Communications Tactical — or PEO C3T.

"A lot of us who left our units have gotten away from the gunpowder and muddy boots. We're getting a big dose of that again today," Wilson said. "This helps us get a taste of it again and gets us to a level of comfort with our own abilities. As we go back to our formations, we walk away with the tool kits to get our Soldiers to this next level."

After the military exhibition, visitors could enter the Bradleys and Strykers to test-fire the weapons systems. They also went into the live-fire pit to shoot the small arms and rifles.

Columbus resident Laura Phillips brought her son, Evan, 12, and his 15-year-old friend, Coleman, to the HOTEX.

"I wanted to shoot that Bradley," she said. "I got to shoot everything. I thought the demonstration was awesome. They did an excellent job. I'm impressed."

Home: 988th returns

"They moved their headquarters to better support another brigade combat team. They moved farther south (in Iraq) and picked up right where they left off doing police training and transition."

After the security agreement was signed between Iraq and the U.S., the MP company underwent another transition as it stepped back to let Iraqi police take the lead in their own training.

"The security agreement established on June 30 cut back our mission a lot," said 1SG Allen Kenton, of the 988th. "We could let (the Iraqi police) be in control of the training we were conducting — let them be in the lead."

Not only did the company see historic changes in Iraq through the security agreement, they also have the distinction of completing their mission without losing one comrade.

"That was the No. 1 goal I had for the unit before we deployed," Meyer said. "All the Soldiers understood that. They took care of their buddies, NCOs took care of their Soldiers, and we got everybody home."

When the aircraft landed on the runway just after 7 p.m. Monday, families inside Freedom Hall cheered, preparing to wrap their arms around their loved ones.

"I'm going to hug him, kiss him and tell him I love him," said Leanna Landreth, of her husband and father to 18-month-old daughter, Madison. "I got butterflies in my stomach when the plane landed."

Brothers Damon and Cole Williams, ages 3 and 6 respectively, said they were looking forward to seeing their dad and playing the video game Halo with him.

"I missed him very bad but he's coming home and he has a (PlayStation Portable)," Cole said. "Our favorite game to play is Halo, we always battle each other."

Another family member, Angela Tate, waited patiently for the first glimpse of her son, SPC Phillip Mason, whom she hadn't seen since his mid-tour leave.

"Right before he deployed, we shared a meal at Burger King, and at the end he said, 'Momma, don't cry. Leave. The quicker you leave, the sooner I get back,'" recalled Tate.

In another room, Soldiers waited to be reunited with their families after walking off the runway.

Knowing his mother was nearby, Mason joked about their pre-deployment meal together and said "I've cut Burger King out of my diet. I want to eat at Chester's BBQ."

Mason said what he would remember most about the deployment was the morale and cohesion within his platoon.

"I would go to war with these guys any day of the week," he said.

But with the war in Iraq now 1,500 miles behind them, Mason and the rest of the company can now focus on enjoying their time at home among family and friends.

"I'm very excited. It's an overwhelming feeling to be home," Mason said.

In the coming months, the unit will begin to prepare for its move to Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., to be completed by late April.

GI Bill: More than 25,000 apply for benefits and Accounting Service personal identification number.

Spouses and family members must be enrolled under their servicemember sponsor in the Defense Eligibility Enrollment Reporting System, also known as DEERS, to be eligible for the transfer benefit. Military members also can link to the site through http://www.defenselink.mil/gibill.

With the Post-9/11 GI Bill, servicemembers are eligible for 36 months of educational benefits — the equivalent of four nine-month academic years. To qualify for the transfer benefit, servicemembers must have six years of service on active duty or in the Selected Reserve on or after Aug. 1 and commit to an additional four years of service.

Servicemembers have the option to use or transfer as much of their benefits as they want to, and can revoke or redesignate who receives the benefit at any time, Clark said.

He added that servicemembers can add names only while on active duty, and not after separating or retiring from active-duty service.

The unused benefits can be transferred to a spouse, two children or any combination, he said. But children cannot start using the benefit until they're 18 or have a high school diploma or equivalent

Clark noted children enrolled in DEERS lose their military benefits at age 21 unless they are full-time students. Only eligible dependents' names will appear on the registration Web site, he explained.

Once servicemembers register on the site and designate who the benefits will be transferred to, the application will be processed through their appropriate service branch.

After the service verifies eligibility to transfer the benefits, the application will be forwarded and processed again through VA. And finally, when the selected dependent decides to use the benefit, he or she must go to the Department of Veterans Affairs Web site and fill out an online application to request a certificate of eligibility, Clark said.

The certificate then can be taken to the school to be processed by its Veterans Affairs representative and used to request tuition, payment for books and the living stipend, which varies by institution and location, he continued.

Of the 25,000 who've already applied, more than 15,000 have been approved, and of those, 5,500 dependents already have requested certificates to start their education.

"It has been a very fast, long run-up to the first of August ... I see this as a wonderful opportunity for our veterans, our servicemembers, in particular, the families of our career members to give them the opportunity to further their education and reach their dreams," Clark said.

Most servicemembers who have at least six years of military service as of Aug. 1, and agree to serve an additional four years qualify, he said. Department officials have proposed measures to support servicemembers who have at least 10 years of active service but can't serve the additional four because of service or department policy. They would, however, have to serve the maximum time allowed before separating from the military, he said.

Another provision will cover servicemembers who will reach the 20-year service mark, making them retirement-eligible, between Aug. 1, 2009, and Aug. 1, 2013.

Clark explained how servicemembers who complete 20 years of service will be able to transfer the benefits:

- Those eligible for retirement on Aug. 1, 2009, will be eligible to transfer their benefits with no additional service requirement.
- Those with an approved retirement date after Aug. 1, 2009, and before July 1, 2010, will qualify with no additional service.
- Those eligible for retirement after Aug. 1, 2009, but before Aug. 1, 2010, will qualify with one additional year of service after approval to transfer their Post-9/11 GI Bill benefits.
- Those eligible for retirement between Aug. 1, 2010, and July 31, 2011, will qualify with two additional years of service after approval to transfer.
- Those eligible to retire between Aug. 1, 2011, and July 31, 2012, will qualify with three additional years of service after approval to transfer.

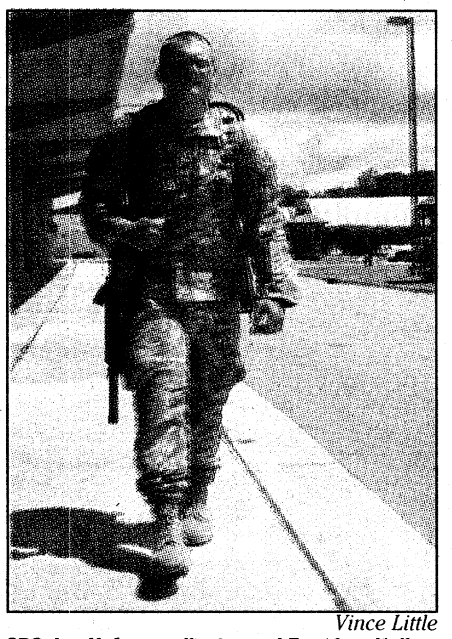
6th RTB Soldier deploys via CRC

Vince Little
THE BAYONET



Facing his first Afghanistan tour, SPC Jon Kofron isn't overly concerned about the delicate security situation there. He said he'd simply rely on his preparation and mechanics.

The 24-year-old Army automations and systems clerk was among a few hundred personnel in a recent batch processed for deployment by the CONUS Replacement Center at Harmony Church. He's assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 6th Ranger Training Battalion, at Camp Rudder on Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., but was expected to join the International Security Assistance Force in Kabul for the next six months.

"I'm not worried about it any more than I was before," Kofron said of his second trip overall downrange and the potential dangers. "I remember my training and take it seriously. You don't let fear block your focus. I know it's there, just deal with it and go with the flow."

Fort Benning's CRC plays a key role in America's deployments by funneling service members, Department of Defense civilians and military contractors to 36 different countries — including Iraq and Afghanistan — on a weekly commercial flight out of Lawson Army Airfield, said 1LT Steve Stewart, the unit's C Company commander. About 270 depart Freedom Hall every Friday.

Two other companies also handle the rotating cycles, while D Company is responsible for redeployment arrangements.

Vince Little
SPC Jon Kofron walks toward Freedom Hall as he begins his journey to Afghanistan.

Stewart said about 75 percent of the deploying personnel are DoD contractors. They come from all over the world, but everyone arrives Saturday to begin a week of training, paperwork and processing.

"We're a distribution point," he said. "On flight day, for security purposes, passengers are given no details other than it's flight day. We don't tell them when it leaves or anything about the route in advance.

"At the terminal, they can get a hot meal, sit in the air conditioning. There are free reading materials ... We give them a few briefings, then they're on their way."

During the week, Kofron and other Soldiers took part in roadside-bomb scenarios and other tactical training, also courtesy of the CRC.

Kofron, of Wakeman, Ohio, said he feels better prepared than he did four years ago before going to Iraq with the 101st Airborne Division.

"I'm ready to go," he said. "The first time, you feel kind of lost, not sure what to do or where to go. I'm not nervous or frustrated this time. It's just time to go."

In November 2006, Kofron finished a yearlong deployment to Forward Operating Base Rustamiyah in east Baghdad, a frequent target for mortars and rockets, he said. One day, about three weeks before he left, the base got rocked by 25 blasts in 45 minutes. No one got hurt but some buildings were damaged, he said.

In Afghanistan, Kofron will work as a bandwidth management technician, he said. Like many other Soldiers, he'll spend free time working out in the gym and also play video games occasionally.

"I'll try to keep moving all the time," he said.

Kofron admits the separation from family will be tough but offered a message to his wife and kids.

"I love them all, and I'll see them in six months," he said.

Unauthorized gear risky to Soldiers

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Soldiers are putting themselves at risk by using unauthorized ballistic protection and body armor. That's the message the Army is passing down to troops this week following reports of Soldiers buying protective gear from unapproved sources.

According to a memo sent to key leaders this week, some Soldiers have bought ballistic protection items, body armor and Advanced Combat Helmet padding through a variety of sources including internet retail sites, General Services Administrative Advantage and local retail stores.

"In most cases, these items do not meet Army protection and safety standards and many have failed Army safety testing," the memo states.

Though this is not a huge issue at Fort Benning, Dave Shepherd, the post's acting Director of Logistics, said it is good to remind Soldiers about the potential dangers of buying protective gear from unauthorized sources.

"These items haven't been tested through Army channels, so there is no way to know if they do what they're intended to do," he said.

Some items Soldiers are purchasing can be replaced cost-free through Army supply channels, Shepherd said.

Additionally, if Soldiers are looking to replace items they've lost, they should know CIF will not accept items from unauthorized sources, Shepherd said.

"We check everything that comes back in," he said.

"This is a good policy and we need help from commands to make Soldiers realize they put themselves at risk if they aren't using approved equipment through approved Army sources," Shepherd said.

The only authorized sources for ballistic protection gear are through the Department of Defense supply system and Army & Air Force Exchange Service's Military Clothing Sales Stores.

Program links post, disabled college students

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning got a boost this summer from a Department of Labor effort aimed at providing disabled college students with meaningful employment, officials said.

Dandy

In the process, the post — which had never been affiliated with the program before — became one of the top Army installations to make use of it, finding temporary positions for seven individuals from Columbus State University, said Ellis Dandy, director of the Equal Employment Opportunity Office. Only Rock Island Arsenal in Illinois had more employees with eight.

"There are stigmas some people have in their minds toward those who have disabilities. If you come in as a blind person or an amputee, they might look at you a little differently," Dandy said. "A lot of people think they can't do. Well, they can do. You've just got to give them an opportunity."

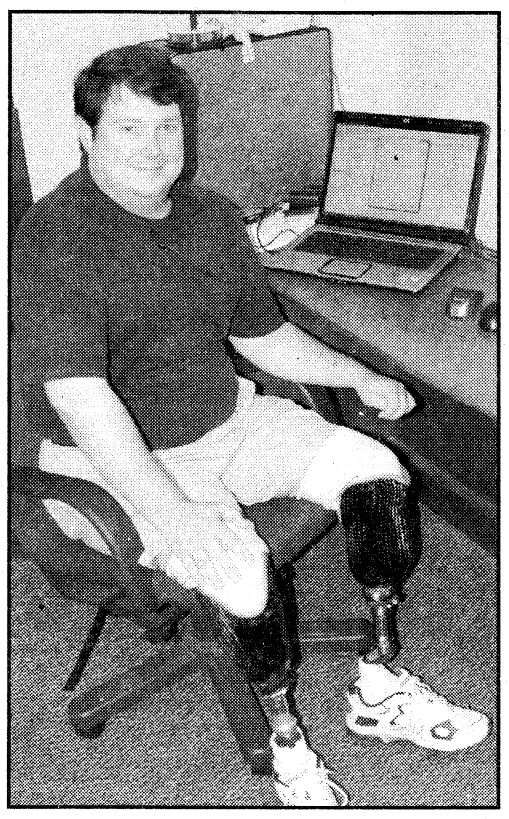
The Workforce Recruitment Program for College Students with Disabilities is a resource for federal agencies and private businesses nationwide to identify qualified temporary and permanent employees from various fields, according to the Office of Disability Employment Policy's Web site.

Michelle Williams, the EEO's individuals with disabilities program manager, played a major role in bringing the program to Fort Benning, Dandy said.

He said the Department of Defense is a project co-sponsor and pays the salaries and wages for positions allocated to the Army. With seven students working full time over a 14-week period, Fort Benning received almost 4,000 hours at no cost, he said.

"It's similar to volunteer labor because we don't have to pay for it. That's a lot of free labor," he said. "It's a beautiful opportunity to allow these young people a chance to enter the world of work. It also provides us an opportunity to view their skills and performance to see if we can employ them full time."

Department managers also can hire on a part-time basis, which would allow the students to continue working after returning to school for the fall semester, he said.



Each year, it starts when trained recruiters conduct interviews with interested students on college and university campuses, according to the Office of Disability Employment Policy. From the interviews, a database is compiled with information on more than 1,500 students and recent graduates seeking temporary or permanent jobs.

According to the ODEP Web site, candidates in the database are categorized by job interest, degree program, geographic location and other factors. Employers may interview the students independently after a referral.

Dandy said the EEO office brought in a communications major, Heather Hammond, who's blind but performed clerical work by using a Java program that gave audio cues and signals as she typed.

This week, two hearing-impaired students are scheduled to wrap up their stints with the Directorate of Public Works and the Directorate of Training, respectively. The Directorate of Emergency Services has a wheelchair-bound employee through the end of August.

Chris Hodnett, 35, recruited to work this summer as a Web designer for Fort Benning's public affairs office, said he had both legs amputated six years ago after being seriously injured in a hunting accident. In the early 1990s, he attended the University of Georgia briefly but dropped out to take a lucrative information technology job.

Vince Little
Chris Hodnett, a double amputee, was employed this summer as a Web designer at Fort Benning's public affairs office under the Workforce Recruitment Program for College Students with Disabilities.

Fitted with prosthetics that enable him to walk, the Columbus State sophomore is now majoring in biology. His new ambition is to develop prosthetics for a living, he said.

"I might not be able to get a summer job at a fast-food joint, your average retail store or my old standby — construction — but it is good to know that there are opportunities out there for people who might not otherwise be able to find a summer job," Hodnett said. "It also provides a chance to develop new work skills and job-networking opportunities ... I hope I have been able to provide some benefit to the PAO group.

"I also hope it gives both the employer and employee a chance to see what difference, if any, there is to hiring a disabled worker as compared to an able-bodied worker. Maybe it can help dispel some concerns and myths."

Bob Purtiman, public affairs officer for the U.S. Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, said his staff was fortunate to get Hodnett, who spent eight years as the director of network services for a large financial company in Atlanta.

"When I first heard about the program, I thought it would be great to get a person with a computer background to augment the Web team. We got that and more," Purtiman said. "His extensive computer background got us looking at new ways of conducting Web operations — ways we never thought (possible). He led us on a path to future success. We not only benefited from Chris's efforts, the entire Fort Benning community did as well."

Purtiman praised the Workforce Recruitment Program as a valuable commodity for other department heads.

"We get to tap into a cost-free resource and offer a student an opportunity at the same time; it's win-win," he said. "When next summer rolls around, I would encourage managers to really take a close look at the program. I think they'd be pleasantly surprised."

Dandy said the program has been mutually beneficial.

"For the first time being involved with the WRP, that's excellent to have gotten seven students at Fort Benning," he said. "They bring all types of beneficial skills to the workplace. There are so many outcomes that are positive for the employer and employee."

Leaders work toward partnership between WTB, center

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Five months ago, SGT Mathew Harvey couldn't walk, let alone drive. But today, he can go for a walk or take his car for a spin with the same ease he enjoyed years ago, before the repeated injuries in Iraq took their toll on his back and left him with painful, herniated discs.

"When (the discs) popped, I table-topped. I couldn't stand up straight and I was dragging my left leg because it was almost paralyzed," Harvey recalled.

Harvey's difficult journey back from a wheelchair took 18 months and several major back surgeries.

"It's not easy to get back on your feet," said the Infantryman.

Regaining his driver's license in April was a pivotal moment in Harvey's road to recovery, as it now meant he had the strength and balance to once again operate a vehicle. And though Harvey said he prepared himself for returning to the road, he hopes to take advantage of the medical driving evaluation and simulator at Roosevelt Warm Springs Institute for Rehabilitation in Warm Springs, Ga., to further develop his skills.

U.S. Congressman Ike Skelton said he hopes to see a partnership develop between the institute and Fort Benning's Warrior Transition Battalion to help more troops.

Skelton, chairman of the Armed Services committee and author of the Wounded Warrior Transition Act of 2007, spoke of the importance of helping wounded military service members at a dedication held in his honor Aug. 3 at the institute where he used to be a patient in the late 1940's after contracting polio his first year at West Point.

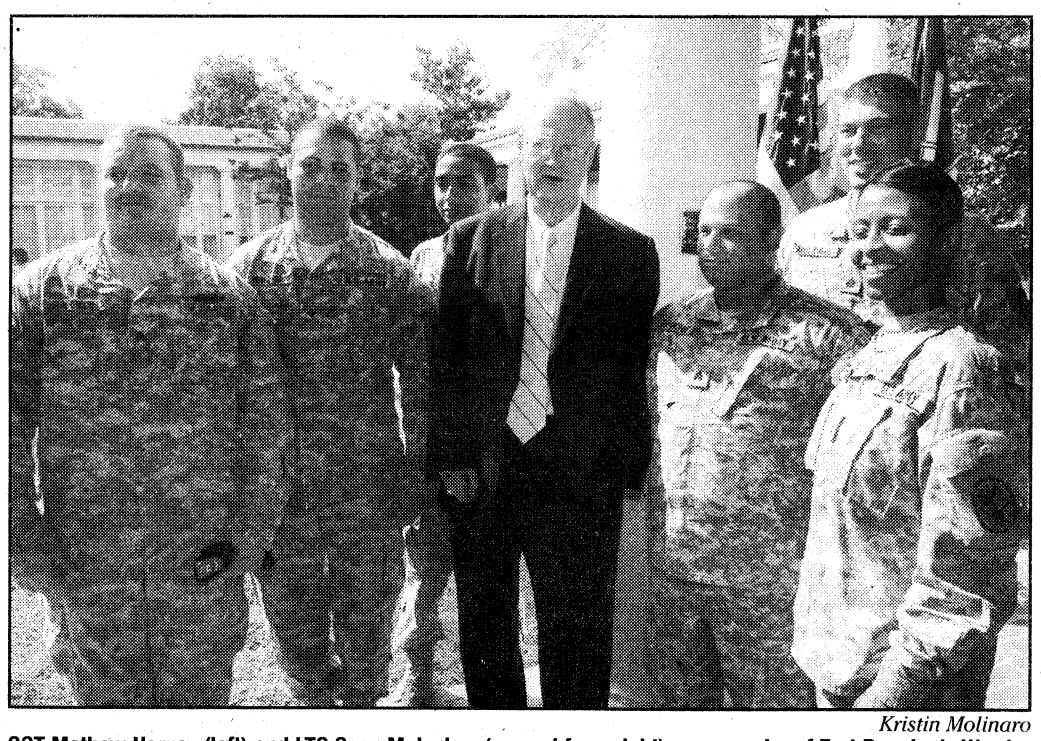
"I finished here as a full time patient this month 61 years ago," Skelton said. "Everybody has defining moments. The defining moment in my life was the Warm Springs experience. Coming here as a patient from the St. Luke's hospital in Kansas City, I was bewildered, unhappy, uncooperative but I was able to dispel all of that and receive the finest polio treatment in the world."

Addressing U.S. Congressman Lynn Westmoreland, U.S. Congressman Dr. Phil Gingrey, and approximately two dozen federal, state, local and military VIPs in attendance, Skelton said the rehabilitation institute in Warm Springs has a lot to offer wounded warriors.

"No one left (Warm Springs) feeling sorry for himself or herself. There was a spirit here that was indescribable and it caused us to leave with a can-do attitude," said Skelton of his experience. "My initial hope and prayer is that those who come through the doors of Warm Springs today will leave here with the same attitude or spirit that we enjoyed. It is a wonderful institution."

Skelton said WTBs must continue to work toward finding new ways to help wounded service members and hoped Fort Benning would be able to expand their efforts to include the institute.

The rehabilitation center is a state-run facility that accepts Tricare referrals for Soldiers needing treatment, said LTC Sean Mulcahey, commander of the WTB, who attended the dedication.



The center offers Soldiers vocational training and medical driving evaluations, and is one of only a few places in the area with a driving simulator to help gauge a person's ability to operate a vehicle, he said.

Despite the distance from Fort Benning, approximately 60 miles to the north, the institute is enticing to the WTB because of its relaxing environment, said Jarnetta Fowler, occupational therapist for the WTB.

Out of the nearly 360 Soldiers in the WTB, the WTB commander said so far only a handful have taken advantage of services offered at the facility.

A partnership with the institute is one of many ideas Fort Benning's WTB is exploring to increase its level of care to troops, Mulcahey said.

As WTBs Armywide continue to raise the bar in wounded warrior care, BG Gary Cheek, the assistant surgeon general of warrior care and transition and a guest speaker at the event, said Fort Benning's WTB commander is leading the way.

Kristin Molinaro

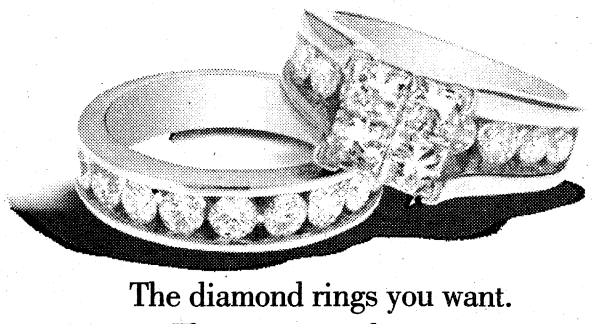
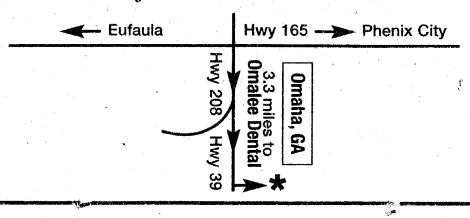
"Mulcahey is leading the Army in developing a comprehensive transition plan," he said.

The transition plan will be automated and standardized across the Army so WTB Soldiers can easily track their progress, set goals for their treatment and transition, and take that plan with them if they transfer to another WTB, Cheek said.

"We are very excited about that. We want to change the paradigm and get Soldiers away from that culture that thinks about what's wrong, and (instead) think about what's right. Focus on their abilities, not their disabilities," Cheek said. "We would welcome the opportunity to bring our Soldiers to Warm Springs and help them focus ... on their abilities to make them better, stronger and to have a rich, rewarding future."



Skelton said key leaders including Westmoreland and Gingrey are working to help the partnership become possible.



"I think there is a good chance for (a partnership)," Skelton said. "If you've been to Walter Reed, and visited the troops that are wounded, you want the best for them and you also want the best for their families."

For Harvey, something as simple as driving has lifted his spirits and he hopes that others in his shoes will be able to take advantage of a future partnership that would help them regain their independence.

"My attitude changed so much when I could drive again. It gave me my independence back," he said.

Ranger Regiment welcomes 16th commander

USASOC PAO

In a change of command ceremony Aug. 6, COL Michael E. Kurilla became the 16th commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

Kurilla is returning to Fort Benning, where his Army Ranger career started in 1991 as a rifle platoon leader with 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, and a deployment to Haiti for Operation Uphold Democracy.

He left his command of 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, Fort Lewis, Wash., in July 2008 after two years and multiple combat deployments to Afghanistan and Iraq.

"Every day for the last eight years, Rangers have gone out into the night and boarded a helicopter, plane, Stryker, MRAP or humvee, and, without fanfare or recognition, carried the weight of the nation's future on their shoulders," Kurilla said when he asked Family members, guests and visitors to focus on the Rangers standing on the parade field and the other 40 percent of the regiment currently deployed in combat.

"If you do not remember a single word from today — never forget the Ranger spirit ... that lives in every man you see before you today," he said.

SGT Tony Hawkins

A West Point graduate in aerospace engineering, Kurilla served with other historic Army units such as the 82nd Airborne Division at Fort Bragg, N.C., 2nd Infantry Division in South Korea, 173rd Airborne Brigade in Italy, and the 24th Infantry Division. He grew up in Elk River, Minn., and has a Master of Business Administration degree from Regis University, and a Master's degree in National Security Studies from the National War College.

Addressing a gathering of Ranger supporters at the new National Infantry Museum Soldiers Field, BG Ray Palumbo, deputy commanding general of the U.S. Army Special Operations Command, Fort Bragg, N.C., noted the growth of the unit during the tenure of outgoing commander, COL Richard D. Clarke. The regiment grew more than 50 percent from 2,400 Rangers to more than 3,700.

"General George S. Patton said, 'Wars may be fought with weapons, but they are won by men.' And, they are won by men like Rich Clarke and the Rangers you see standing before you," he said. "Let me tell you about the combat actions of this regiment under Rich's leadership. To date, the regiment has captured or killed more than 200 high-value targets in a difficult and politically sensitive operational environment ... where room for error is slight, consequences of mistakes are high and the enemy's room to maneuver is great."

He also said Clarke led unprecedented growth in the unit by increasing the number of low-density military occupational specialties (MOS) from cook to supply sergeant to communications specialist.

Each of the three rifle battalions grew by about 200 Rangers with the addition of another rifle company.

"Every man a Ranger, every man an integral part of the Ranger team," Palumbo said.

Clarke stood before almost 2,000 Rangers for the last time as their commander.

"We are a regiment at war," Clarke said. "It is daytime here, so it is approaching early evening in both Iraq and Afghanistan, so there is most likely a Ranger element either on an objective or getting ready to go on one.

"But, I would also highlight that every Ranger on that parade ground in front of you would trade that parade ground for the battle ground. All of them would rather be in the mountains of Afghanistan or the deserts of Iraq than on the turf of Fort Benning," Clarke said.

Clarke noted the price a Ranger pays is in hard work, sweat and blood.

"I dedicate this day to those Rangers killed in combat and training over the last two years: Rangers Libby, Dillon, Ganczewski, McDowell, Gathercole, Duncan, Rudd, Roulund, Davis, McGhee, Kopp. May we continue to pass their names and deeds to live on in perpetuity."

Clarke's next assignment is at Fort Bragg, N.C.

Rangers dot sky in mass jump to kick off rendezvous

USASOC PAO

More than 1,000 Rangers from the 75th Ranger Regiment soared above Fryar Drop Zone here Aug. 3 in a mass tactical airborne operation officially commencing Ranger Rendezvous 2009.

Every two years, since the first Ranger Rendezvous was held in 1987, the weeklong event has begun with the jump, which is conducted with combat equipment in excess of 70 pounds.

"The key for this week, since it only happens every two years, is to bring in all the Rangers not currently forward and just enjoy the camaraderie," said CSM Chris Hardy, 75th Ranger Regiment command sergeant major. "It helps to build espirit de corps, and also allows us to showcase, for the veterans and distinguished visitors coming in, the regiment's capabilities and current state."

Although all four of the regiment's battalions were represented in the jump, many of their Rangers could not be present.

"Not only is our Army and our nation at war, but most importantly this regiment is at war," said COL Richard Clarke, then the 75th Ranger Regiment commanding officer.

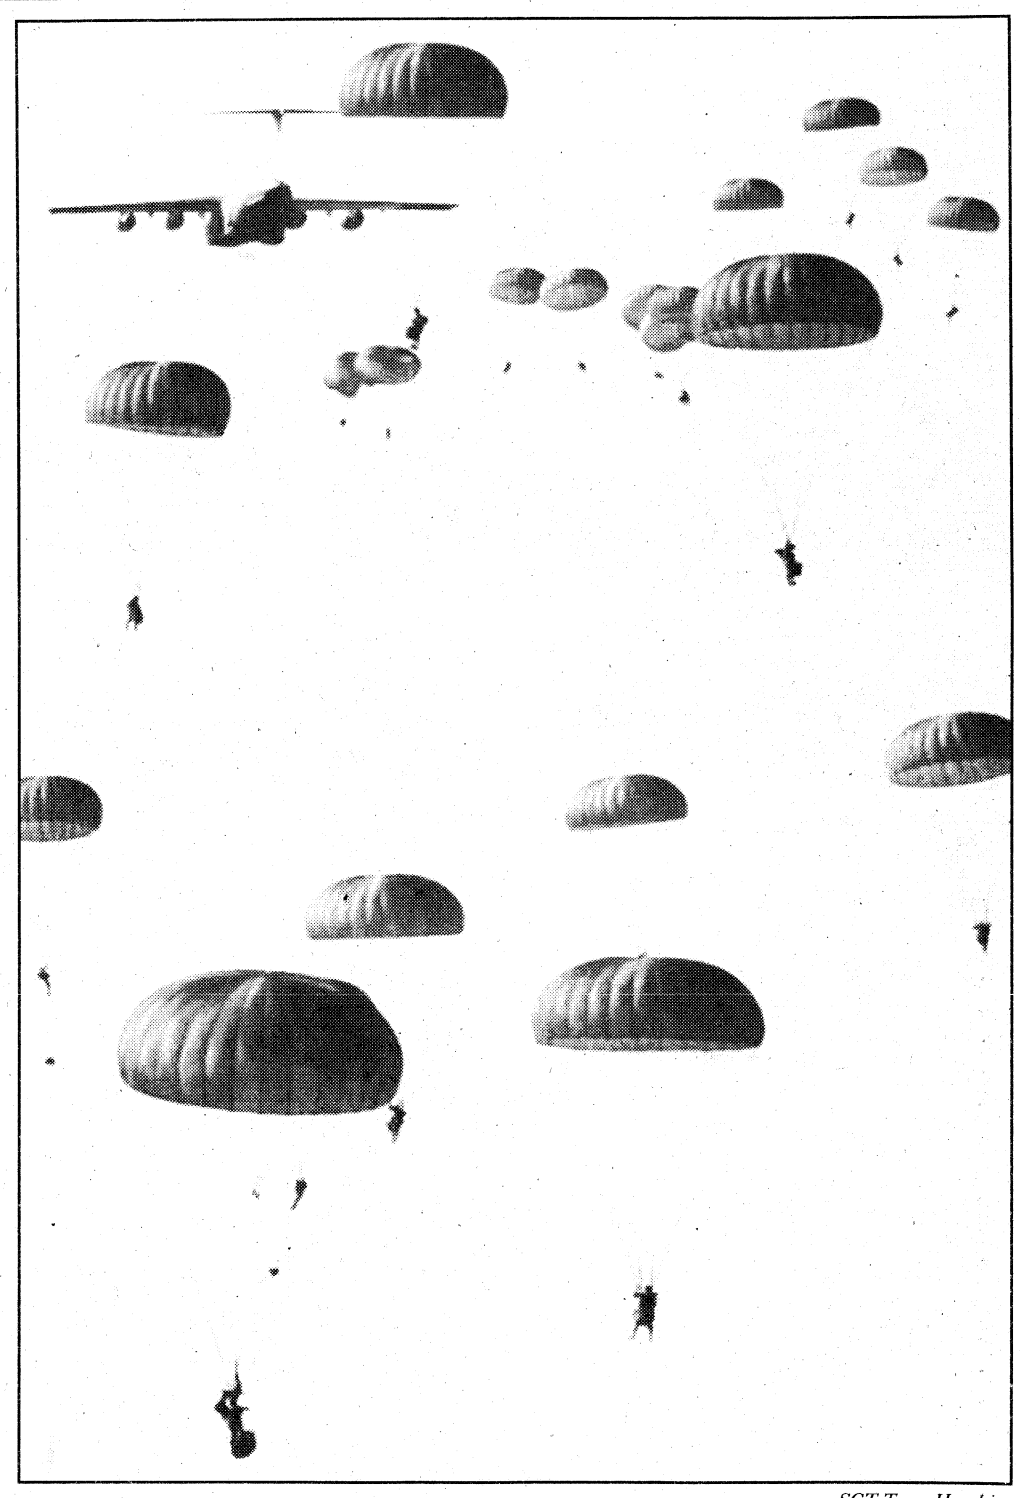
With more than half of the regiment currently deployed, Clarke said it would be a much larger event had all his Rangers been able to attend.

Coordination was essential as all four battalions prepared to jump from the C-130 Hercules and C-17 Globemaster III aircraft. With battalions from Fort Lewis, Wash., and Hunter Army Airfield, Ga., linking up mid-flight with those from Fort Benning, safety and communication were crucial.

"Safety is key," Clarke said, who also acted as the airborne commander for the jump. "We don't get to do this often so we really have to stress the importance of safety."

"When you call the 75th Ranger Regiment in, no one can do it better."
— COL Richard Clarke, the Regiment's former commander

For the family members present, the jump provided them a glimpse of how their Rangers operate. The regiment is highly-trained in airborne insertions to seize key objectives, often hitting multiple targets in rapid succession.



"Movement to contact as soon as we hit the ground," Clarke said. "When you call the 75th Ranger Regiment in, no one can do it better. If you look at what Rangers are doing every single day in this conflict, and you look at the changes that have been made, how much we've developed as a regiment, you can't lose sight of that."

Clarke said the regiment is able to be so successful in their missions, not because of technological advantages, but because of the Rangers on the ground.

"It's because of what the Ranger squad leader, platoon sergeant and team leader has done," he said. "The flexibility and adaptability you all bring to the fight. Because of that, this regiment will stay out there after the relentless pursuit of the enemies of our country."

Before he bid the regiment farewell, Clarke and his Rangers took part in several days of events including sporting events such as football, boxing and combatives, as well as a regimental barbecue.

Clarke handed over the reins of the regiment Aug. 6 to incoming commander COL Michael E. Kurilla, who became the 16th commander of the 75th Ranger Regiment.

SGT Tony Hawkins

Members of the 75th Ranger Regiment dot the sky as they exit a C-17 Globemaster III aircraft during a mass tactical airborne operation Aug. 3 at Fryar Drop Zone. More than 1,000 Rangers from all four of the regiment's battalions participated in the jump, officially kicking off Ranger Rendezvous 2009.

75th Ranger Regiment inducts distinguished, honorary members

USASOC PAO

This year's Ranger Rendezvous theme of 'the legacy continues' was reinforced Aug. 4 when 16 distinguished and honorary members were inducted into the 75th Ranger Regiment, during a traditional Ranger ceremony initiated 20 years ago.

Thirteen former members of the 75th Ranger Regiment were inducted as distinguished members and represented 150 years of service to the unit, said COL Richard D. Clarke, then the 15th commander of the regiment.

"You've heard the words honored and humbled (used) here today," said CSM Dennis Smith, one of the 13 inductees and who served more than half of his Army career with the 75th Ranger Regiment.

"I don't deserve to carry their socks to the laundry mat," he said of his Ranger mentors. Smith is currently the command sergeant major for the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment here.

"They found a niche that no one else could do or did do," Clarke said of the three newest honorary members. "They are an incredibly gifted group who epitomize and live the Ranger Creed every day."

Sudan army generals visit

Kristin Molinaro

Representatives from the Sudan People's Liberation Army visited Fort Benning Aug. 6-8. Maj. Gen. Garang Tuge Garang (center), commander of the Ngchigak Military College, Brig. Gen. Rabi Mujung Emmanuel, deputy director for research, and Brig. Gen. Kiir Garang D. Kuek, director of training, listen to a briefing given by CSM Zoltan James, commandant of Fort Benning's NCO Academy. The delegates want to learn more about managing military schools and developing academic policies in hopes of bringing those practices back to their army. In addition to visiting the NCO Academy, the group visited the 199th Infantry Brigade and the Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate.

Kenyan army soldiers observe Pre-Ranger Course instruction

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

"When we do training, we must factor in the immediate threat — our neighbors," said Kenyan army Capt. Xavier Omondi, of the Kenyan army's special operations forces central command.

The Republic of Kenya is located along the equator in East Africa and is bordered by five countries: Somalia, Sudan, Ethiopia, Uganda and Tanzania.

Its capital is Nairobi, one of the most prominent cities on the African continent. The country boasts a population of nearly 40 million, according to the Central Intelligence Agency's Web site.

To help protect the war-torn region, the Kenyan military is working with the U.S. to ensure it can respond to threats and keep its borders secure. This mission is what brought six delegates from the country to Fort Benning this week, Omondi said.

"We hope to develop a specialized unit that can respond to the country's immediate threats," he said.

"This is an opportunity to build relationships in the region," said MAJ Amanda Azubuike, media relations officer for Third Army. "And it's an example of Third Army/U.S. Army Central Command's Theater Security Cooperation program."

The unit, a Ranger-like battalion that would mirror the U.S. Army's Rangers, is still in its formative stages as Kenyan army officials gain more insight into Ranger training, Omondi said.

The delegation arrived Saturday to observe the Pre-Ranger Course at the Warrior Training Center. This is the delegation's second trip to Fort Benning in as many years to observe aspects of Ranger training.

"Previously, they were here to observe our Pre-Ranger Course to help them model a course of their own," said CPT Brian Deaton, A Company commander, WTC, of the delegation's trip in 2008. "Now, they are back to observe once again and to refine their training."

The Pre-Ranger Course trains and evaluates Soldiers before they get to Ranger School. The 17-day course mirrors the Darby phase of Ranger School, which emphasizes squad tactics, patrolling operations and leadership skills, Deaton said.

Though the visiting delegates are already considered certified as instructors for the course, there are other elements to course instruction that they needed to learn, he said.

"They are getting into the administrative and logistical conduct of the course and some of the behind-the-scenes events we do in order to put the course on," Deaton said.

Omondi said the instructors will be learning firsthand the finer details of the Pre-Ranger Course that will help them to develop their own courses.

"We want to mirror, in every aspect, the Ranger community," he said.

The trip wraps up Aug. 24. Officials from the Kenyan army, accompanied by members of ARCENT, U.S. Army Africa and Special Operations Command Africa, will arrive next week for a tour of the Ranger Training Brigade and surrounding camps.

'Sex Signals' educates through humor, discussion

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Soldiers who attended "Sex Signals" laughed along with the show's presenters — something many said they had never done before during sexual assault prevention training.

"It was way better than PowerPoint," said SPC Cierra Sauls, Warrior Transition Battalion.

"Sex Signals," a 90-minute, interactive show addressing issues such as rape, sexual assault and consent, came to Fort Benning Aug. 3-4 and 6-7. Through the use of humor and skits, actors Chris Sanders and Sharyon Culberson drew audience members into discussions about gender stereotypes and dating, often pausing during skits to ask or answer audience questions.

More than 2,200 Soldiers and civilians attended the 10 shows at the Benning Conference Center and on Kelley Hill, which were sponsored by the Department of the Army, said Becky Welch, Sexual Assault and Family Advocacy Program manager.

"The Soldiers have enjoyed it, and we've even had some standing-room only shows," Welch said.

The goal of presenting "Sex Signals" at Fort Benning was to educate Soldiers, she said.

"We want to make sure Soldiers know there are services there for them 24 hours a day, seven days a week," Welch said.

Displays in the foyer of the Benning Conference Center provided information on resources such as the Chaplain Family Life Center, the Sexual Assault Response Line, and Martin Army Community Hospital.

During the performance of "Sex Signals," Sanders and Culberson urged audience members to seek help if they, or someone they know, has been affected by sexual assault.

"We really just want to raise general awareness of sexual assault and how much it actually does happen," Sanders said. "Because when people become more aware of it, it personalizes it for them, and then they start thinking, 'Well if it's happening this much, maybe it can happen to someone I know, or to me, or to someone I love.' To step up and say, 'Hey, that's not right,' is going to prevent a lot of sexual assaults from happening."

To show audience members they can prevent sexual assault, Sanders and Culberson performed a skit where Sanders tried to get an unwilling Culberson to go out with him while at a bar. Audience members were told to hold up signs with the word "stop" when the scene became too uncomfortable, showing them they have the power to intervene in real-life situations.

Sanders, who served four and a half years in the Army, said being able to relate to Soldiers in the audience enriched his performance.

"I remember as a Soldier, if a civilian tried to talk to me about an issue, I always thought they didn't completely get it," he said. "But I can say to them, 'Hey, I've been there.'" SGT Thomas Weaver, Warrior Transition Battalion, said "Sex Signals" was informative and attention-getting.

"I learned how to better conduct myself in certain situations," he said. "Stop means stop."

For help dealing with sexual assault, or for more information, call the Sexual Assault Response Line at 706-566-7393, the Chaplain Family Life Center at 706-545-5301, or visit www.militaryonesource.com.

Steuber: Says teamwork is key to managing garrison and School from Fort Knox, Ky.

Steuber said the future Maneuver Center of Excellence, scheduled to become fully operational by September 2011, will support about 144,000 Soldiers, family members and civilians.

"In the next couple of years, Fort Benning is going to increase by over 33,000 people. That's twice the population of Fort Rucker," he said. "For me, that's a real change in scope of operations."

Steuber said Fort Rucker's focus is largely on aviation and aircraft upkeep. The installation conducts all Army pilot training, and one-third of the branch's flying hours are logged there. Its annual maintenance bill is half a billion dollars and 1.2 million gallons of jet fuel are consumed every month, he said.

"Fort Benning's capital is people," he said. "They train the Infantry, the Queen of Battle. That's essential in today's Army.

"Technology is great, but it's boots on the ground that win wars. That's always been the case."

After Steuber's brief stint here as an enlisted Soldier more than four decades ago, he went on to U.S. Army Special Forces training Fort Bragg, N.C., before spending 39 months in Vietnam. He later became an artillery officer.

Steuber headed the joint operations center for Joint Task Force-Somalia from 1993-94. In 1994, he was chief of staff for Task Force Mountain during the invasion of Haiti. From 2001 to 2003, he was the garrison commander at Fort Sill, Okla.

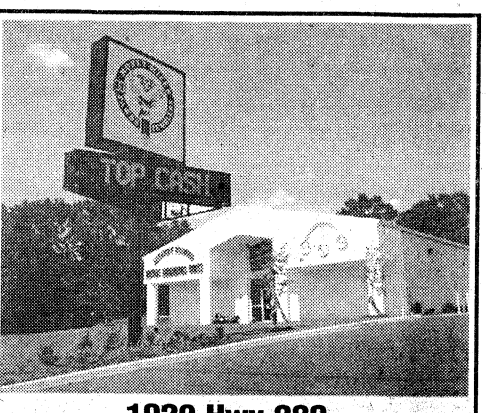
Steuber served more than 37 years on active duty and in reserve component assignments, retiring as a colonel in 2004.

His top priorities at Fort Benning include taking care of all post tenants and ensuring a smooth transition to the MCOE, he said.

"The other piece is you can never look at Fort Benning as an island unto itself," he said. "We work with community leaders and organizations in the seven counties and two states surrounding us on a daily basis ... Maintaining good relations on both sides of the Chattahoochee River is also a priority."

Steuber said his approach to managing garrison issues is built around collaboration.

"My predecessor built a very good team, and my intention is to maintain that team as we prepare for the eventual arrival of the Armor School," he said. "I'm glad to be here. Challenges are what keep us young and keep us engaged. They give us a reason to wake up in the morning. I have no doubt this team will surmount all of them."



Steuber bought a home in Phenix City but he's commuting to Dothan, Ala., on weekends, where he and wife Patricia are trying to sell their old house. The couple has two sons — including a KC-130 pilot in the Marine Corps — and four grandchildren.

BENCH NOTES

Pitino apologizes

University of Louisville men's basketball coach Rick Pitino apologized Wednesday for "an indiscretion" he committed six years ago. His indiscretion — having consensual sex with Karen Cunagin Sypher.

The incident became public when she allegedly attempted to extort $10 million from him and filed rape charges.

Louisville athletic director Tom Jurich said, "Coach Pitino has been truthful with us about this matter all along and we stand by him and his family during this process." Truthful during this process? What about the past six years, coach?

Nadal gets win

Rafael Nadal hasn't played tennis since May 31 because of knee problems, but it looks like his most recent opponent Wednesday at the Rogers Cup might need some time off now. Nadal took a one-set, match-shortened 4-3 win over David Ferrer when Ferrer informed the match umpire he could not continue.

Ferrer limped off the court with indications of knee problems. It was Nadal's first win since losing to Robin Soderling in the fourth round of the French Open.

Stewart still on top

For the second week, NASCAR had to delay a race due to the weather. NASCAR's Sprint Cup race at Watkins Glen International finally got under way Monday with Tony Stewart coming out on top. The win was Stewart's third in his first season as an owner-driver. Stewart is on a tear, finishing in first or second place in eight of the past 11 Cup races.

Stewart leads Jimmie Johnson in the Cup standings by 260 points. All he has to do is start Sunday at Michigan to secure his spot in the 12-man Chase for the Cup title. Sunday's race will be televised on ESPN beginning at 2 p.m.

Crabtree living in fantasy world

From the "You can't make this up" department, the 10th selection in this year's NFL draft, Michael Crabtree, believes he should be paid commensurate with where he should have been drafted according to all the mock drafts, rather than be paid for the position he was actually drafted — talk about living in fantasy land.

Crabtree is holding out of San Francisco's training camp, threatening not to play this season and re-enter the draft next year.

Thanks to Oakland Raiders owner Al Davis, who drafted Darrius Howard-Bey instead of Crabtree, the rookie slotting system has been thrown into turmoil.

Obviously, someone felt he wasn't the best, even if it was Davis.

CRC was shut out in the first two innings, while CSC 2/29 racked up six runs to take a 6-0 lead.

CRC closed the gap to 6-4 in the third inning with a Demetrius Minor RBI triple, and three runs on errors, but CSC 2/29 added two runs in the bottom half, to lead 8-4.

CRC took the lead in their biggest scoring inning of the game in the top of the fourth inning with nine runs on RBIs from Minor, Aaron Frederick, Robert Paul, Colin Singleton and Joe Barrett. CSC 2/29 scored one run in the bottom of the inning on an error, giving CRC their first lead of the game, 13-9.

All-Army camp set for Aug. 24

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Players from throughout the Army will compete at Fort Benning during the men's All Army Softball Trial Camp Aug. 24-Sept. 17 for a chance at a spot on the All-Army team. Those chosen for the team will compete in the All-Armed Forces Championship Sept. 19-24 at Pensacola, Fla., Naval Air Station.

While 25 players were invited to the camp, only 15 will be selected to the team.

"It's a big deal to make it to the All-Armed Forces Championship," said Ken Wetherill, Fort Benning sports director. "This is the highest level of competition for military. It's big time ball and there are tough players competing."

Each player filled out an application, including a resume to make it to the trial camp and were evaluated by Victor Rivera-Collazo, camp coach.

Collazo, who has coached for seven years, said he is looking for players who have a lot of talent, discipline and players who can play at a high level consistently. He will use the camp to evaluate the players' skills.

Collazo spent 10 months looking for the best players, he said.

"There's a lot of good talent this year," he said. "Those who make it to the team will be the best of the best."

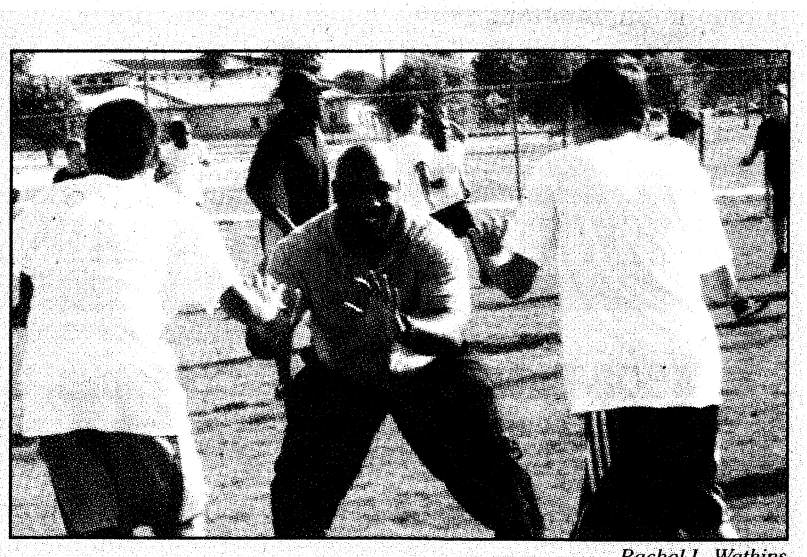
The Army team has taken gold medals and first place bragging rights at the All-Armed Forces Championship for the past two years and Collazo said he wants to make it three years in a row.

During camp, players will play against the Fort Benning post team. Spectators are welcome at the trial camp and admission is free. Games are from 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at Gowdy Field.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Coach looks for 'heart' over talent

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET



Football season is here and all you have to do is follow the grunts and growls to the Youth Sports Complex, where you will find the 12- to 13-year-old Fort Benning Bengals football team preparing for the upcoming season — along with third-year assistant coach Keith Goddard.

Goddard said he is not looking for what is on the outside of a player during the preseason conditioning camp, but more of what's inside.

"Heart and aggressiveness go a long way in football," Goddard said. "When players get on the field, and they have somebody lined in front of them who is going to put them on their behinds, that's where you find out who's aggressive and who isn't and how much heart they have.

"Football isn't so much about talent, it's about heart. If your arm hurts or you have a headache and you push through it, you are going to get where you want to go. But if you aren't injured and you just want to go sit down, you are hurting everyone else out there."

Fort Benning Bengals prepare for football season

Fort Benning Bengals players run drills in conditioning camp Monday at the Youth Sports Complex. The two-week camp includes two hours of exercise during weekdays.

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

In about a month, the 12- and 13-year-old Fort Benning Bengals football team will play their first game of the season in Columbus, but in the meantime, players are going through the rigors of conditioning camp at the Youth Sports Complex.

"There is a lot of work to be done between now and our first game," said Bengals coach Lee Obie. "Conditioning is where it starts. It's an intense regiment that includes two hours of exercise, five days a week. The team will not see a football or blocking pads. They won't see anything for the next two weeks, except for exercise."

The Bengals began conditioning drills Monday, including pushups, sit-ups, long-distance running and sprints.

"As the weeks progress, we'll add in more exercises," Obie said. "I will break them down and build them back up in the next two weeks."

After conditioning, comes the pads and football.

The team is beginning training a week earlier than they did in 2008, so the kids can get acclimated to the warm weather and the strict training regiment, Obie said. Ninety percent of the team's 32 kids haven't played for the Bengals before and may be new to football. By the end of conditioning, Obie said the players will know what is expected of them.

Of the 32 in camp, Obie said some players will leave before the first game, either because of PCSing or some may quit because they think conditioning is hard.

"Conditioning is hard, but if the kids can get through this, they can get through the season," said assistant coach Keith Goddard.

William Peters, 13, played for the Bengals in 2008 and expects to play again this year.

"Conditioning is challenging, but it helps strengthen our minds and lets us know we can beat the other team," he said. "I think this will definitely prepare us for the upcoming season."

For the past three years, the Bengals have made it to the Peanut Bowl playoffs, but Obie said he wants to win it this year. He has a new plan for his team too.

"The defense and offense will be different this year because we don't have the same players we have had the past three years," he said. "We went off a run-run-pass scheme for the past couple of years. We are going to mix it up this year."

The team still has openings for players. The last registration days are from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday and Aug. 22 at Comer Gym in Columbus. For more information on registering, go to www.columbusyfl.com or call 706-505-0750.

Players must also register with Child, Youth & School Services. To register with CYSS, call 706-545-2079.

Goddard: Searches for players who 'motivate' team

An ideal player is one that has both strong individual and team skills, he said.

"An outstanding football player is one who motivates and uplifts his team," he said. "If you are only a good player by yourself, that doesn't help the team but if you are willing to see a player who is always finishing the runs last and you go back and pump him up, that's an outstanding player."

At the 12- and 13-year-old level, teaching the fundamentals — how to run the ball, which holes to hit, how to block, how to cut and block and how to read the defense and offense — is key to preparing the children for the high school level, he said.

The children play different positions so Goddard can assess positions they are the best suited for so they can play to their strengths when they go to a high school tryout, he said.

Goddard said he enjoys teaching youth football because the focus is learning.

"At the end of the day, it doesn't matter if the kids win or lose," he said. "If I have taught the kids something about football and they retain that knowledge, I feel like I did my job."

For now, Goddard's job is getting his players in shape for their first full-pads practice Aug. 24.

Soldiers reflect on golden year

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PAO

It's been one year since U.S. Army Marksmanship Soldiers SGT Glenn Eller and SPC Vincent Hancock won Olympic Gold medals in the sport that has engulfed their lives. They can't believe how fast a year can go.

"I still can't believe I did it," said Eller, who won gold in the Men's Double Trap Aug. 12, 2008, setting an Olympic record along the way. "I remember how nervous I was, but reality never set in on what I was doing until it was over. It's still all kind of surreal right now."

Hancock already had a world record in skeet but had been aiming for Olympic gold since the age of 10. On Aug. 16, he fulfilled that dream and also set an Olympic record.

"I don't remember much besides breaking the final pair and holding my gun up because it was an accomplishment that I had been dreaming about my whole life," he said. "Thinking about it now brings a smile to my face. It's just awesome."

The Soldiers dreamt of winning gold medals at the Olympics and sharing it with their families and friends, but those dreams didn't include sharing it with the country, they said. It didn't include meeting the president and vice president, throwing out the first pitch at a baseball game or jumping out of a plane. They didn't include becoming heroes to the nation's youth or a Soldier deployed in combat.

Eller and Hancock hit the ground running after returning to the U.S. from the games. They met then-President George W. Bush and Vice President Dick Cheney, had lunch with Defense Secretary Robert Gates, made small talk with Secretary of the Army Pete Geren and GEN George Casey, Army chief of staff — and that was only the beginning.

"The first six months was completely hectic," Eller said. "We were traveling from city to city, going to NASCAR races, visiting high schools, colleges — you name it and we were there. We were showing people that your dreams can come true."

"It was tough being away from my wife so much," Hancock said. "We've only been married since May of last year so being gone from her for the first half-year of our marriage had been kind of difficult."

Besides being away from loved ones and friends, they were also taken from two of the reasons why they are successful — their training and the unit.

"A lot has been asked of them and they definitely rose to the occasion," said SFC Charles Coffey, USAMU shotgun team noncommissioned officer-in-charge. "They shared that victory with other Soldiers. They showed young adults and teenagers that anything is possible if you set your mind to it. It shows that we're Army strong.

"It's neat to see how that individual accomplishment affected so many. Our brigade commander, COL Fred Johnson, Accessions Support Brigade, was telling us how he was deployed overseas and one of his Soldiers was holding a newspaper illustrating a fellow Soldier had won gold and his Soldier raved, 'The Army won!' That's the team spirit of the Army. We always come together as a team."

Eller and Hancock didn't train for four-to-five months after the Olympics due to their mission for the Army. It was the longest they both had gone without shooting since they started as youth and both agree it affected their results in competitions early in the season. But now things have calmed down and their focus has returned, evident by Hancock winning his first national championship last month in skeet.

The duo is currently in Slovenia competing in the World Championships. Both said they now have a plan to get back to the Olympic podium in London in 2012.

"It's not easy, but I love it," Hancock said. "(The Army) is a great place to be and I wouldn't trade it for anything."

While the extra work Eller and Hancock have put in away from the shooting range during the last year is somewhat expected of Olympic gold medalists, the two can now concentrate on getting back into a routine.

The gold medals, however, are theirs for keeps — they still can't believe it.

Audie Murphy: Open to valid military ID cardholders

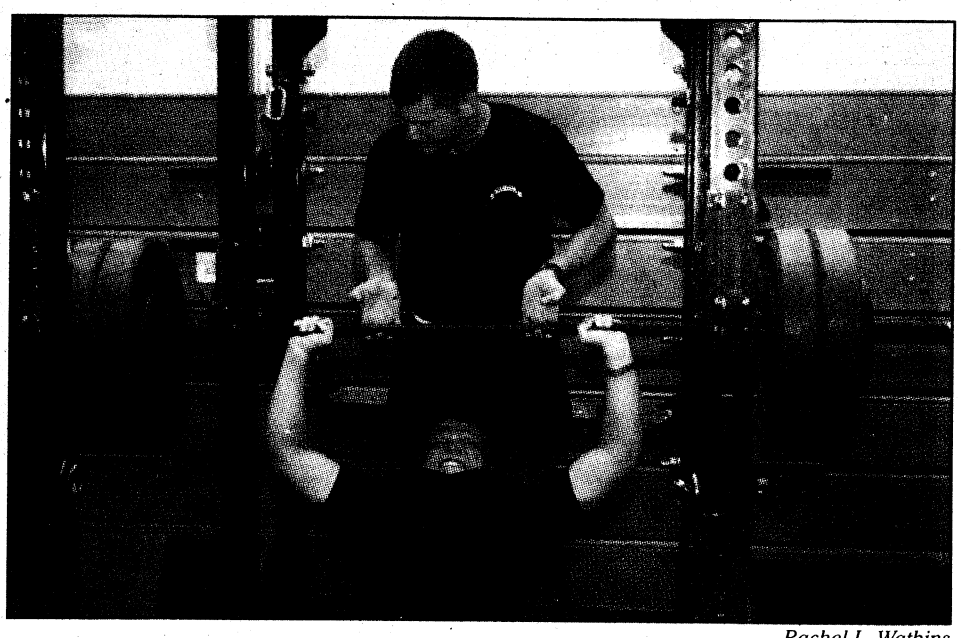
Recreation funded the renovation.

The biggest addition to the gym is the athletic performance enhancement room, located in what used to be the basketball court. It includes a dead-weight lifting area, weight sleds, an abdominal training area, Jacob's ladders, weight benches, kettle bells, medicine balls, rubber weights, resistance bands, plyometric boxes and obstacles. The two racquetball rooms were replaced with a combatives room and a boxing room including combatives mats, speed bags and punching bags. There is still one more phase remaining in the renovation, including exchanging weight machines for versa climbers and rowing machines.

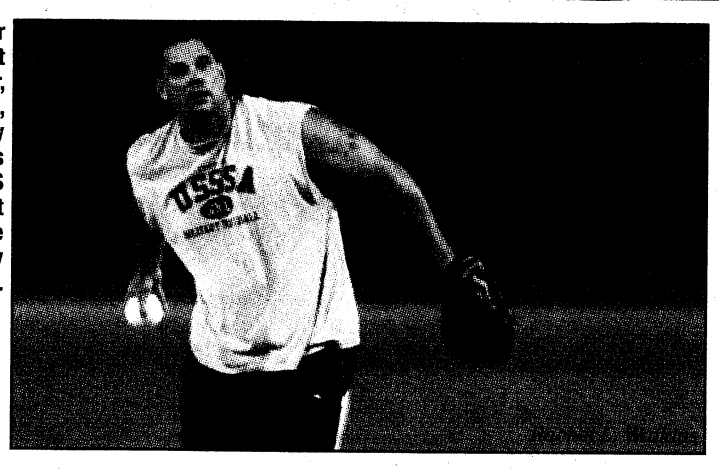
Most cardio equipment — ellipticals and treadmills — only work the lower body, Gearheart said. The new center is designed to work on both cardio and strengthening.



"This is more tailored to a Soldier's training needs," she said. "This center prepares Soldiers to be more combat ready."

2LT Tyler Rossley, 2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, who exercised at the gym Monday, said the center is more relevant to Soldier training.

"It's great to have a facility like this," he said. "It's not just about getting buff in the gym. It will actually help us in our job — it's a much better way to train. Getting buff might make you look good, but it's not going to help you too much on a 20-mile ruck march or a 10-mile run. At this center, you can strengthen your entire body and get a good cardiovascular workout and get your heart rate up."



The center is open 5:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. weekdays. The gym is open to all valid military ID cardholders. Units can reserve the gym for training, but must reserve it two weeks in advance.

To reserve the center, e-mail Joanne.Cain@us.army.mil or for more information, call 706-604-0977.

Rachel L. Watkins

SPC Wayne Knapp bench presses weights as SGT Scott Roth spots him Tuesday at the Audie Murphy Athletic Performance Enhancement Center. Both Knapp and Roth are with the 75th Ranger Regiment. The gym is open to all valid military ID cardholders, and units can reserve the gym for training.

Brian Walker of Combat Support Center, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, delivers a pitch to CONUS Replacement Center Team One Aug. 5 at Gowdy Field.

CSC 2/29: Wins championship

the sixth, while CSC 2/29 came back in the bottom of the inning, to lead at 17-15.

CRC made a comeback in the top of the seventh to lead 18-17, but it was short-lived when CSC 2/29 scored three runs in the bottom of the inning to seal the win.

"The game was back and forth," said CSC 2/29 coach Brian Walker. "Both teams played well and there was good sportsmanship and positive attitudes."

CSC 2/29's Eric Wofford said it was a tough game and the team stuck together through the ups and downs for the win.

"We were down, but we came back," he said. "We just had to stick together, play tough and tell ourselves we could win the game. We had a couple mistakes on our end, but we made up for it."

CSC 2/29 was awarded first-place individual trophies and a team trophy following the game.

CAA offers grants to spouses

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Spouses who want to further their education and career have a valuable resource at their disposal, tricommunity educators said.

The Career Advancement Account program, a joint initiative of the Georgia Department of Labor and the Department of Defense, offers spouses of active-duty Soldiers a grant of up to $6,000 to pursue a two-year degree or certificate. Since the program's inception in December 2007, nearly $1.9 million has been awarded to more than 400 spouses at Fort Benning.

"It's a tremendous opportunity, one that spouses have been deserving of for a long time," said Dr. Grey Edwards, director of Fort Benning's Army Continuing Education System. "Spouses are an important part of recruiting, retention and the framework of military life, so anytime we can assist them, we should."

To be eligible for a CAA grant, which covers tuition, books and other school-related expenses, spouses must be stationed at Fort Benning for at least one year, and must be pursuing a two-year degree or certificate program in one of CAA's targeted fields, such as health care, education or information technology, and must have a high school diploma or GED.

The aim of CAA is to give spouses education and in-demand skills to make them more employable as they move between installations, said Michelle Ortiz, admissions clerk at Chattahoochee Valley Community College.

"When you go to a new post, it's difficult to grasp the area as far as living, let alone trying to figure

VFW collects wheelchairs for disabled vets

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Named for the medevac choppers who lent aid and mobility to wounded Soldiers in Vietnam, Operation Dust Off gives mobility through the gift of an electric wheelchair to disabled veterans, said 1SG(R) Mike Craig, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 5180 in Seale, Ala.

His goal is to improve the quality of life for veterans and spouses who gave of themselves for the betterment of the nation, he said.

"There are people out there who at one time wrote a blank check to this country who are not doing so well right now," he said. "I think it is our responsibility as citizens to do what we can for these people. Some of them have fallen on hard times."

Craig

Craig started collecting electric wheelchairs two weeks ago. So far, he has seven. In exchange for their gift, donors receive a tax write-off for $2,000, a certificate of appreciation from the post and a thank-you note from the recipient.

Many veterans cannot afford electric wheelchairs, even with insurance, Craig said.

"Imagine yourself trapped in your house," he said. "Imagine yourself not being able to go to the store because you don't have any mobility. Imagine yourself being out of breath walking from the chair to the bathroom. Being able to move around (is) one of the basic qualities of life, and these people can't do it. It makes a big difference to these people's lives."

A refurbished electric wheelchair made a big difference to Polly Mattila, said the 63-year-old member of the VFW post's ladies auxiliary, who

Hinder rocks Fort Benning

Band performs for Soldiers, civilians at outdoor concert

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning was rocking Saturday night when Hinder performed at Wetherby Field.

More than 3,000 people attended the concert, which Donna Hyatt, marketing specialist with the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation, called a success.

"Everybody seemed to be having a good time," she said.

Opening act Danielia Cotton, a rock artist from New Jersey, kicked off the show with her band. Cotton dedicated several songs to service members, urged audience members to get involved in their communities, and closed out her set with a rendition of AC/DC's *Back in Blac*k that got much of the audience on its feet and singing along.

Before Hinder took the stage, MG Michael Ferriter, commanding general of Fort Benning and the U.S. Army Infantry Center, addressed the audience, accompanied by CSM Earl Rice, post command sergeant major.

"Sergeant Major Rice and I are very proud of the Soldiers in the field today," Ferriter said. "It takes a special man to raise his hand and fight for his country in a time of war. I'm proud of you."

Hinder performed hit songs such as Better Than Me and Use Me. Lead singer Austin Winkler had audience members cheering, clapping and singing along as he strutted across the stage.

"On a scale of one to 10, this is a 10," said PV2 Russell Carroll, who was in his eighth week of one station unit training with A Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment. "This is the most fun I've had since I joined the Army."

Getting a break from the daily routine and eating junk food were highlights of the evening for some basic trainees. PVT David Gillespie, A Company, 1st Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, said he enjoyed the funnel cake he bought and was very excited about coming to the concert. Gillespie said the concert raised his morale.

Hinder frontman Austin Winkler performs for a crowd of Soldiers, families and civilians Saturday on Wetherby Field.

The Verizon Wireless tent, where Soldiers could make free phone calls, was one of the most popular vendor sites, Hyatt said.

"Being able to call my girlfriend was one of the best parts of the concert," said PVT Guillermo Aguirre as he shared a pizza with PVT Joshua Gilpin. Both Soldiers were in their sixth week of OSUT with D Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment.

For some audience members, Saturday's performance was their first live concert experience. Nine-year-old Kalie Mendoza said she was excited to see Hinder with her mother, Christy, who works in the installation housing office.

MAJ Will Kepley, 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, said he was impressed that Hinder wanted to perform for the troops.

PVT Tyler Jensen, a Soldier in A Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, cheers for Hinder, the headlining act of Saturday's concert on Wetherby Field. Jensen was one of more than 3,000 people who attended the concert.

"I'm sure they could be playing a gig on a Saturday night that pays a lot more, but they're here," Kepley said. "I think that says a lot."

Back to school

Cheryl Rodewig
Kindergartner Ethan Shull watches his teacher, Beverly Corcoran, draw an example of a family Friday at White Elementary School. Friday was the first day back to school for children on Fort Benning. For kindergartners, the first day means getting used to eating lunch at school and not going home halfway through the day, said Corcoran, who read her class a story called The Kissing Hand about a raccoon who is scared on his first day of school. Corcoran said she enjoys the first day. "I love starting fresh," she said. "The kids are a blank slate I can work with." Ethan said he liked his first day, too. "I want to learn because it teaches me stuff that I don't know," he said. Ethan said he enjoys playing with his friends and visiting the housekeeping center in the classroom.

Women's Equality Day luncheon set for Aug. 26

> — SFC David DeLuca

If you'd like to learn about women's history while enjoying a hot meal and good music, come to the luncheon for Women's Equality Day Aug. 26, organizers said.

The luncheon will take place from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the Benning Conference Center, and will feature several guest speakers and presenters, as well as songs. It will mark the 89th anniversary of the passage of the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, which gave women the right to vote.

"People will most definitely enjoy themselves," said SFC David DeLuca, NCOIC for the U.S. Army Infantry Center Equal Opportunity Office. "They'll get a good meal, hear some music and learn about women's equality achievements."

Jonnie Clasen, president of the Columbus and Phenix City chapter of the American Rosie the Riveter Association, an organization that recognizes and preserves the legacy of working women and women volunteers during World War II, will be the featured guest speaker. Clasen will discuss achievements that helped advance women's equality, such as the suffrage movement.

June Tinker, a "Rosie" who worked during World War II, will sing Gold Star Mothers, an original song she wrote about her brother who was killed at Iwo Jima. Carol Cain, a storyteller, actress and educator, will perform a one-woman show about Rosie the Riveter, which she presents at museums, World War II events, and other functions throughout the Southeast.

DeLuca said he expects a turnout of about 200 people, including many members of the American Rosie the Riveter Association.

"This luncheon is all about education," DeLuca said. "People will learn where we've been in the past, and hopefully that will plant a seed for them to want to look up more information about the important roles women have played in history."

Tickets are $8.50 and are available through unit Equal Opportunity advisors and at the EO Office, building 2509 on Indianhead Road. For tickets or more information, call 706-545-6665 or 706-545-3196.

out where the areas of employment are," she said. "It gives you an advantage to be able to bring these skills and certification with you to the employment table."

Ortiz, whose husband served 20 years in the Army, said she wished resources like CAA had been available when he was on active duty.

"I worked, but it made it harder because I only had some college and no certification," she said.

Jennifer Freeman, a Fort Benning stay-at-home mom, is enrolled in a paralegal associate degree at Chattahoochee Valley Community College, and received a CAA grant.

"CAA is a wonderful program," she said. "There's nothing bad I can say about it. It's nice to know I don't have to worry about taking (tuition) money away from paying for gas or child care. It's been one less thing to worry about."

Freeman said she decided to go back to school after her husband was diagnosed with a brain injury that will affect his ability to work after he gets out of the Army.

"I want to make sure my family is taken care of," she said.

Because CAA is a pilot program, its funding is slated to end in June. However, MyCAA, a program through Military One Source, has already been implemented and will continue to provide grants to spouses after CAA ends. Unlike CAA, MyCAA provides grants for degree programs through the post-doctoral level and is open to spouses of service members in all branches of the military. In some cases, a spouse can use a CAA grant to complete an associate degree, and then a MyCAA grant for further education, Ortiz said. She urged spouses interested in going back to school to take advantage of on-post resources, such as the Army Education Center.

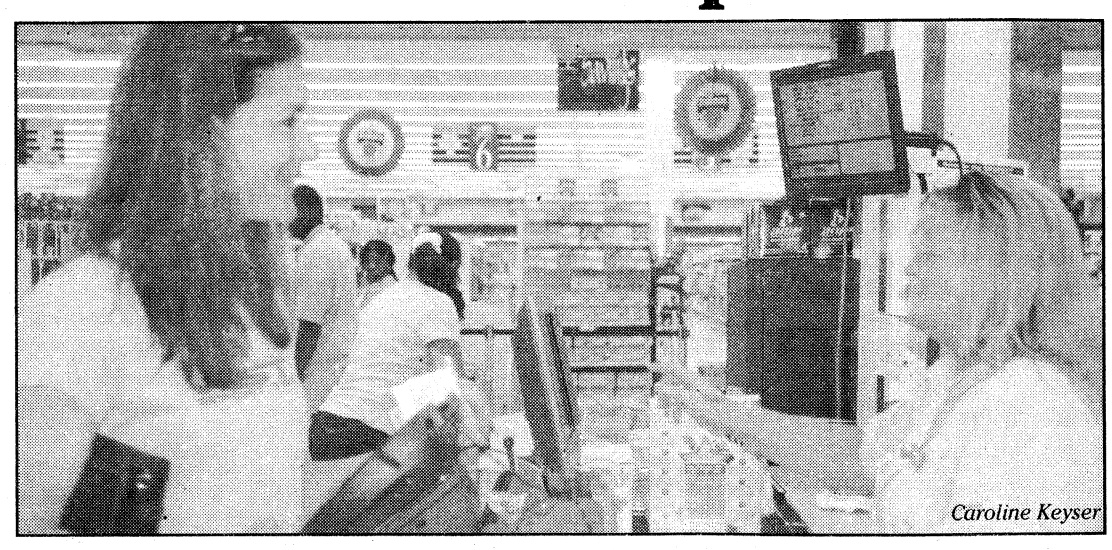
Commissary strives to exceed expectations

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

"We have better customer service than any place else in Columbus, but we can always improve," said Gary Hensley, director of the Fort Benning Commissary.

Commissary employees are going back to school. Beginning Monday, the commissary's 141 employees will attend World Class Customer Service, a professional training course offered through Dale Carnegie Training. The course addresses issues such as how to exceed customer expectations and strengthen customer ties, and provides tools and strategies for improving customer service.

"Our goal is to deliver the very best customer service we can," Hensley said. "We're constantly striving to improve, and this is just another step."



The commissary has already improved on past performances, he said. As of July 31, sales for fiscal year 2009 are up $3.3 million from fiscal year 2008, an increase of more than 7 percent. If sales continue at their current pace, the commissary will surpass its 2009 year-end goal by about $1 million, Hensley said.

The Fort Benning Commissary has the highest customer satisfaction rating out of the Defense Commissary Agency's 250 stores. Out of a possible five points on DeCa's yearly customer satisfaction survey, it received 4.99, he said.

Hensley credits the commissary's employees with the store's success, and said he anticipates receiving five points on the 2009 survey.

"They do a terrific job," he said.

Julia Ferebee, the commissary's customer service clerk, said she often helps customers find items or fill special orders, and helped a retired Army officer obtain 65 orchids as a gift to his wife for their 65th wedding anniversary.

Caroline Keyser

Kelly Waler helps Cathy Kelly purchase groceries Wednesday at the Fort Benning Commissary, which scored a 4.99 out of a possible five points on the Defense Commissary Agency's annual customer satisfaction survey.

"I got the flower pot for him here at the commissary, but we don't do arrangements, so I went to the PX and counted out 65 orchids," Ferebee said. "When he came back (to the commissary) he was so happy. I go the extra mile because that's how you keep your customers coming back."

Ferebee also fills large orders for unit parties and functions, which she said saves units valuable time and energy.

"They tell me how much money they have, and I put a grocery list together for them so all they have to do is come here and pick it up," she said.

Ferebee said she attended a customer service training course in Fort Lee, Va., several years ago and found it helpful.

"I got a lot of good points on how to deal with customers and how to go the extra mile, and I expect the (Dale Carnegie) course will definitely be helpful," she said.

Attending World Class Customer Service will help commissary employees sharpen their skills, which will prepare them for the influx of new customers arriving at Fort Benning because of Base Relocation and Closure, Hensely said.

"If we can perfect our customer service now, then when the new (Soldiers and families) arrive, it will be right on target," he said.

SKIES*Unlimited* lets kids explore new areas of learning

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Eleven-year-old Michael Meraz knows how to break dance, execute a high block and sing Michael Jackson's Thriller. He keeps up his skills — and learns new ones — with SKIES*Unlimited*.

SKIES*Unlimited* offers a variety of classes, from archery and swimming, which will start in September, to art and yoga, slated to begin during the school year.

With the support of his parents, 2LT Robert and Holly Meraz, Michael participates in taekwondo and dance lessons. He will start piano and voice next month.

"It's exciting," Michael said. "I can learn something new ... meet other kids there. It's a lot of fun."

Michael said he enjoyed the singing and dancing because they are his "two favorite things" and the taekwondo because he can learn how to punch, kick and block.

"I think it's important for kids to experience different things," Holly said, "not to push them to try it but to help them realize there are other activities besides staying at home and watching TV. There are just so many things out there for kids to do. That's our main goal: to get Michael interested in different activities."

Sampling diverse classes lets Michael meet a variety of people and develop different areas of expertise, making him a more well-rounded person and helping him in the long-term as well as now, Holly said. It also keeps him busy.

"I'm really happy they offer all these classes because the kids need something to do after school," she said.

"I don't want Michael to be behind the remote control all afternoon, so he's pretty booked up Monday through Friday. It fits perfectly. I don't get the 'I'm bored' after school and he still has plenty of time for homework."

It's easier to enroll in multiple classes on post, since they are less expensive than their off-post counterparts, Holly said.

Enrollment is on a monthly basis, and prices range from $35 to $75, said Carolyn Shelton, program manager for SKIES*Unlimited*.

SKIES*Unlimited*, which stands for Schools of Knowledge, Inspiration, Exploration and Skills Unlimited, offers classes that extend beyond the traditional school curriculum to include life skills, recreation, citizenship, leadership, sports and health, Shelton said.

"We're here to offer instructional programs for the children that are not offered in the school or to continue education on skills they may currently (have), so they can become better adults in the community," she said. "It opens up different areas of knowledge for them. They may have a hidden talent and not know it."

> "I think it gives them a sense of responsibility and a sense of value ... and the goals are not so high that they aren't tangible to them."
> — Carolyn Shelton

Besides the immediate benefits, such as learning discipline with karate or balance with dance, learning or perfecting a skill gives children confidence, Shelton said.

"It's kind of a program to help the kids feel good about themselves," she said. "I think it gives them a sense of responsibility and a sense of value that they can accomplish things, and the goals are not so high that they aren't tangible to them."

Classes are open to children ages three to 18 who are registered with Child, Youth & School Services, Building 104, Marchant Avenue.

SKIES*Unlimited* also offers babysitting and CPR certification and drivers education courses at specific times throughout the year. The next babysitting and CPR class will be in October. Drivers education begins at the end of the month.

Children with deployed parents are eligible for up to four free classes through the Army Family Covenant.

Friends, activists host benefit to continue Lonnie Jackson's legacy of service

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

Nearly three years after his death, Lonnie Jackson's relentless efforts to improve the tricommunity continue to inspire others to get involved, close friends and colleagues say. The longtime activist will be honored during the fifth annual Lonnie Jackson Benefit at 6 p.m. Thursday in the Columbus Convention and Trade Center. The event is a fundraiser for the programs he spearheaded in the Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning areas.

Jackson, who retired from the Army in 1972 as a sergeant first class, was a Korean War veteran and also served two tours of duty in Vietnam. In 1983, he founded a service organization called the Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus. Jackson died in September 2006 at age 77.

Michael Armstrong Sr., chair of CCSC Inc.'s executive board and committee chairman for the upcoming benefit, said he began working with Jackson in 2000.

"Lonnie felt that the same sense of togetherness and camaraderie that makes the Army work would work here. So he appealed to our collective sense of right and righteousness in an endearing way," said Armstrong, who's also a teacher at East Columbus Magnet Academy and the youth pastor at Christian Fellowship Church on Cusseta Road. "He always advocated for how much we could get done and how quickly it could get done if we just worked together."

Among numerous community initiatives, Jackson launched a tutoring program that served thousands of students — assisted by volunteers, certified teachers and aides, Armstrong said. He started a citywide voting awareness campaign, organized anti-litter and community beautification drives, and promoted cultural diversity awareness.

Jackson

Jackson helped establish the Vietnam Memorial Park at the corner of Buena Vista Road and Lawyers Lane in Columbus. The memorial honors 119 Soldiers, fallen comrades of Jackson.

"Lonnie's dream was to see the community united, educated, confident and strong — like he was," Armstrong said. "He also wanted the men and women who had given so much for this nation to be remembered and honored. It became his passion and the driving force for his life."

Jackson's devotion to community improvement earned him state, local and national recognition. In 1993, he received the President's Volunteer Action Award from President Bill Clinton and was honored by the Points of Light Foundation. He also received a 2001 Jefferson Award from the American Institute for Public Service.

Armstrong called Jackson a "great motivator (who) had a keen awareness of the power of people working together."

He said it's important to pay tribute to Jackson's legacy and carry on his work through events like the benefit.

"People will tend to focus on what's going on in their own lives at any given moment, without realizing how what they are or are not doing affects everyone around them, even in small ways," Armstrong said. "The total body of his work in Lonnie's lifetime tried to address all of these issues ... This effort was and is too honorable to be neglected or allowed to fall by the wayside simply because the one who was the seed for it is no longer with us."

The Lonnie Jackson Benefit is a semiformal affair featuring a catered dinner. The Rev. Michael Biggs Sr. will be guest speaker, with live entertainment provided by Ed Cox and the Tender Blenders Jazz Quartet.

Tickets are $45 for adults and $15 for children 13 and younger. The cost is $60 for adults at the door.

Checks or donations can be made payable to: CCSC. Inc., P.O. Box 2543, Columbus, GA 31902.

For more information, call 706-888-6711, 706-332-3111.

Chairs: Help improve vets' quality of life received the donation Tuesday.

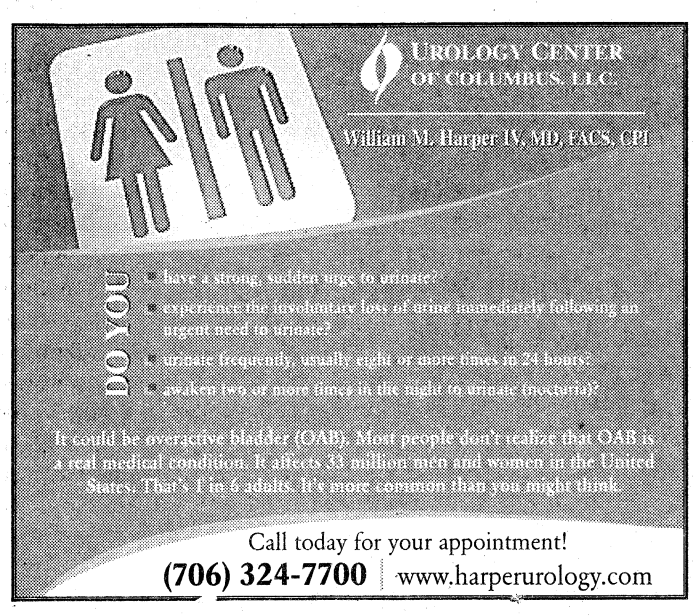
"If it weren't for the VFW, I don't know what I would have done these past few months. They've been a godsend," she said. "My husband passed away June 15, and it seems like everything has fallen apart. The hand rails on my porch just fell off. Not only did the VFW repair my rails, they also built me a ramp. (And) with my arthritis, I'm not able to walk around very much, so they helped me get the scooter.



"If you don't get out and socialize, you get into a shell. I don't want to do that. I want to get out and socialize and be a part of the community, and with this chair and the ramp that they've built me, I can do that."

Mattila sums up her newfound mobility in one word, she said: "freedom."

A small donation, such as an electric scooter, is "nothing less than what we owe the veterans who are underprivileged and can't help themselves," said SFC(R) Troy Green, who donated an electric wheelchair to the VFW this week.

Green, who works with Range Control on Fort Benning, said he wants to do anything he can to help veterans and their spouses. "I think it's what the American people owe the veterans," he said. "I think it's important to give to a veteran because the veteran gave all he can. That's the way I look at it."

To donate an electric chair, call the VFW at 334-855-0090.

Post Soldiers share stories through blogging

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Real Soldiers blogging about their lives — that's what Army Strong Stories is about, said MAJ Mary Constantino.

Constantino, chief of program analysis and initiative for the U.S. Army Accessions Command Directorate of Marketing, oversees some aspects of USAAC's social media, including Army Strong Stories, a blogging initiative that began in January 2008.

Open to Soldiers in any rank or MOS, Army Strong Stories is a forum where Soldiers can share their personal stories, post photographs and have online discussions with each other and with blog readers.

The site aims to give the public a window into Soldiers' lives, and nothing they post is censored in any way, Constantino said.

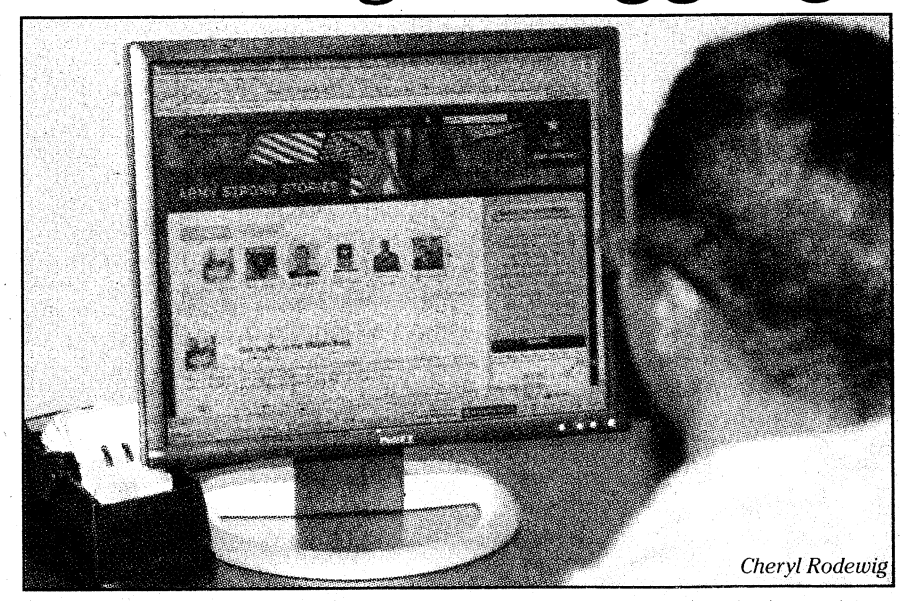
"The whole intent is to make the Army transparent to the public," she said. "We don't tell the Soldiers what to put or not put on their blog. They're able to blog from their perspective, and it comes through. By inviting the public into the Army and letting them see what we're about, I think that creates a bond of trust."

Fort Benning is home to two Army Strong Stories bloggers, 2LT Alex Frank and SGT Tiffany James.

Frank, who is completing Infantry Officer Basic Course, said he began blogging in 2008 when he was an ROTC cadet at Duke University. When a professor asked for volunteers to contribute to Army Strong Stories, Frank said he was eager to participate.

"My story can help others see what (the Army) is like," he said. "I really like that aspect of it — getting a chance to give people an honest appraisal of what it's like, and I hope people can look at it and see whether ROTC and being an Infantry officer is for them."

Frank said he uses his blog to reflect on how being in the Army has changed him.



"The Army has really given me a good sense of purpose in my life, and it's helped me become a stronger, more confident individual," he said. "The Army has really taught me how to become an individual that people would want to follow. It's really gotten me outside of my comfort zone and given me more self awareness."

James, a parachute rigger with E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, began blogging in June after being named Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year.

"It's a good place to network and talk to NCOs in other branches," she said. "You're able to meet a lot of people and see how things are different for them, even though we all have the same mission."

Networking has been especially important lately, James said, as she transitions from junior enlisted Soldier to NCO. James was promoted from specialist to sergeant Aug. 1.

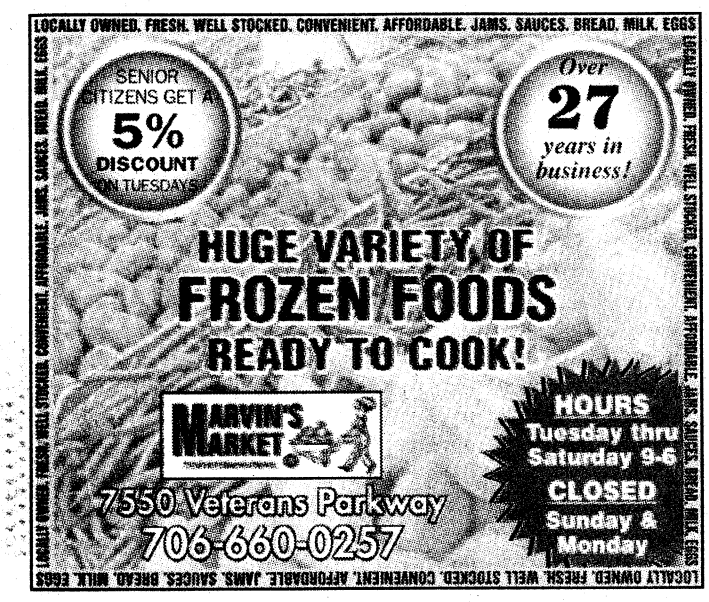
"It was hard because I passed all my friends up," she said. "I have had some people send me e-mails about their transition from E-4 to E-5. Getting advice has helped me."

Cheryl Rodewig

A Soldier logs on to www.armystrongstories.com, a Web site devoted to sharing Soldiers' stories with the rest of the military community and the civilian world.

James said her favorite part of blogging on Army Strong Stories is the diversity of the forum's members.

"That's the coolest thing about it — you can get a major's opinion on something," she said. "You get to see all the different branches. Warrant officers, officers and enlisted all come together to talk about the Army."



James said she plans to continue blogging in the future and hopes her blog will help civilians gain a better understanding of Army life.

"It gives civilians an inside look at things that actually happen, and what we do besides just going to Iraq," she said. "We deal with so much more (than that), and blogging about it gives them a different (point of view). It might open their views on the Army and help us get more support in the future."

Constantino said she would like to see Army Strong Stories continue to grow.

"If Soldiers want to tell their story, we want them to tell it here," she said. "It's a great way for them to get their story out to a large number of Americans. The Army is a microcosm representing America, and we are eager to get as many Soldiers as possible to tell their story."

The Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation celebrates the independence days of each country that is represented in the institute. Celebrating the independence days calls for the people of each nation to present a program about their country, followed by toasts to the country and its people. On Aug. 3, WHINSEC honored Peru; on Aug. 5, Bolivia; on Aug. 7, Jamaica; and on Monday, Ecuador.

Gain conflict resolution through proper anger management

Chaplain (LTC) Lyn Stike
DEPUTY GARRISON CHAPLAIN

"We hold these truths to be self-evident. All men are created equal and endowed by their creator with certain unalienable rights. Among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." — Declaration of Independence

In terms of anger management and conflict resolution we can come up with many theories as to why people are angry: Repressed childhood experiences, relationship issues, selfishness, maybe someone always heard they wouldn't amount to much.

I would like to suggest that "inferiority" is one reason. Even though we are all equal in God's eyes, and in the wording of our beloved constitution, we all don't feel equal. These feelings of low self worth have a direct relationship to anger.

We have such an awareness of our standing among others and are prone to striking out at others when criticized or attacked. Anger is the means by which we refute the label of "inferior."

History holds many examples of persons who had great reason to feel inferior.

One 6-year-old boy was very slow. He was written off by his teachers as ineducable. His vocabulary skills were poor. He couldn't count numbers as well as the other children. Both parents and teachers feared he really would never amount to much. His name? Albert Einstein.

Abraham Lincoln was at times so depressed that he doubted his leadership skills.

Winston Churchill acknowledged that he was often overtaken with feelings of depression and low self confidence.

Martin Luther feared he would fall into the gates of hell.

Moses stuttered and felt inept.

Gideon was fearful in battle.

The list goes on and on and on.

These people could have lashed back at someone and could have become angry, but they overcame their low sense of self worth and did great things.

In our work place we can feel inferior by others who seem to excel more than us.

We can look at others whose marriages seem to be perfect when ours is not, or we've been divorced.

We can get upset because someone makes more money than us.

I suggest there are two kinds of anger: aggressive and assertive. One is negative the other positive.

Anger, as an emotion, is not bad. Its an emotion like happiness, sadness or fear.

Aggressive anger can take two forms: The person who "goes off" on others, or the person who is passive and who just takes it inward.

My concern is with the second. They quit, admitting their inferiority. It can lead to mental, spiritual, emotional illness, or they become passive. The first person has some fight in them. The second has resigned.

The crowbar is a good illustration to explain assertive and aggressive anger. It can be a tool to pry, lift, open — very useful indeed, wouldn't you say? Conversely, it can be a lethal weapon used destructively.

God never meant for us to feel inferior.

Genesis 1:27 states: "God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he them, male and female created he them."

The right way to resolve conflict is to realize that God loves us and values us. We are highly prized. If we concentrate on how much God loves us — and oh by the way, he loves the one who is acting like a jerk, too — we will not retaliate.

"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son ..." (John 3:16). Remember that from Sunday school? We don't have to "prove" anything to him, and consequently to his creatures either.

The wrong way is to strike back to establish our superiority. When I am overly criticized, my tendency is to do something to embarrass that person back. Make them look foolish, put them down.

This keeps us in a seesaw motion. In the work place or at home, it only makes matters worse. This affects us negatively both individually and corporately.

Scripture states: "A soft answer turns away wrath (anger), but grievous words stir up anger."

So the next conflict we have, we can choose to do the right thing and resolve it — and mitigate the anger — or we can throw gas on the fire and make our already stressful environment more so.

Lisa Person, visiting Montgomery, Ala., from Tennessee, contemplates the Civil Rights Memorial, which includes the names of people who died during the Civil Rights Movement engraved on a black granite fountain. Designed by Maya Lin, creator of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial, it is located next to the Civil Rights Memorial Center. The Center includes exhibits, a theater and the Wall of Tolerance, where people can record their names with others who have pledged to stand against injustice.

The Shakespeare Garden, one of only seven of its kind in the U.S., features plants mentioned in Shakespeare's plays. The pavilion, with medieval chandeliers and a thatched roof, sits in front of a 325-seat amphitheater. It is the site for several outdoor events, including Broadway Under the Stars — a free performance by the Montgomery Symphony Orchestra, to be held this year Sept. 17.

Tony Davison sings in the background about the woes of falling "down, down, down" in A Victim of Gravity, while Chris Kelly, far left, courts "Mary Jean," played by Katie Romine. The song was one of 20 in Faulkner University Dinner Theatre's performance of School House Rock Live. The family-friendly show features favorites such as Just a Bill, Conjunction Junction and Great American Melting Pot. The breakfast buffet includes fruit salad, biscuits and gravy, sausage, bacon, Danish pastries, hash brown casserole and dessert. The show runs Thursdays through Saturdays in August. Reservations must be paid in advance. The cost is $25 for general admission and $20 for season ticket holders, military and groups of 30 or more. For more information, visit the Web site at www.faulkner.edu/campuslife/dinnertheatre.asp or call 334-386-7190.

Discover history, culture, entertainment in Alabama capital

The Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts houses a large collection of paintings, such as this oil on canvas by John Singer Sargent, titled Mrs. Louis E. Raphael (Henriette Goldschmidt). Sargent was a turn-of-the-century expatriate American who learned to paint in France. He painted this member of the aristocracy in 1906.

A late-blooming rose blossoms in Shaffer Garden, part of Old Alabama Town. The garden includes a replicated well, period plants, crape myrtles and narrow walkways to imitate a small 19th-century central Alabama garden.

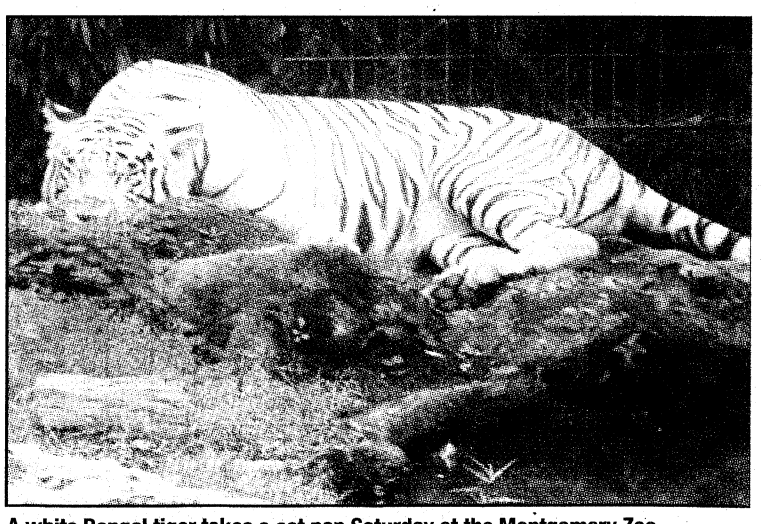
THE BAYONET

Have you visited Atlanta half a dozen times? Exhausted everything it has to offer? Take advantage of the tricommunity's convenient situation. We're less than two hours from the capital of Georgia, but we're even closer, by about 25 miles and 15 minutes, to the Alabama capital. So for a different kind of weekend get away, why not consider heading out of state?

Like any big city, Montgomery, Ala., offers a variety of attractions, including a zoo, a riverboat cruise, sports — specifically the Alabama State University Hornets and the Montgomery Biscuits — museums, parks and plenty of food, from Thai to barbecue. Chart your own itinerary through the city, whether you want shopping and culture or history and the great outdoors.

I started my day on the wild side with a trip to the zoo. I met a magnificently large bison, a maned wolf, also called a fox on stilts for its reddish coat and long legs, a white Bengal tiger and a few other species I've never seen before. I also witnessed the reunion of a pair of peacocks after the elder one flew the coop — they found each other through call and response squawking.



After you tour the fauna of five continents, cool off at the Mann Wildlife Learning Museum, a walk-through of animals native to North America. Highlights include tangible displays of animal fur, larger-than-life elks and bears and several fossils, such as an 87,000-year-old woolly mammoth femur.

If you've worked up an appetite, Blount Cultural Park is a wonderful place for a picnic. This 300-acre oasis includes a Shakespeare Garden, an English-style bridge, picnic tables and outdoor sculptures. After touring the garden and reading the literary quotes below the flowers' names, stroll down to the lake for a shady seat. You might find yourself sharing bits of your lunch with the yellow ducklings paddling in the water.

A must-see before leaving is the Montgomery Museum of Fine Arts. The oldest fine arts museum in the state, it features porcelain, mixed media, stained glass, textiles and many paintings, together comprising around 3,000 pieces in the permanent collection. The hands-on children's gallery is an enjoyable stop for all ages. Walk inside a kaleidoscope or make your own print.

Montgomery offers many more museums to choose from. Visit the Rosa Parks Museum and travel back to the days of Jim Crow laws and the Montgomery bus boycott. In the Children's Wing of the museum, you can hitch a ride on a time machine to the early 1800s when some of the first civil rights leaders, such as Harriet Tubman, began to make a difference for social equality.

Country music fans will want to stop by the Hank Williams Museum to see autographed records, portraits, personal belongs and other related memorabilia.

A white Bengal tiger takes a cat nap Saturday at the Montgomery Zoo.

For all things beef, visit the Alabama Cattlemen's Association "Mooseum." This free museum features agricultural and nutritional information about America's favorite meat.

Many of Montgomery's art galleries and museums are located downtown. This walkable portion of the city is nicely laid out with attractive landscaping, several statues and examples of beautiful architecture. Within a half hour, you can see Old Alabama Town, a 19th and 20th century history village, the state capitol and the Civil Rights Memorial.

If you want to catch a show after dinner, choices range from ballet to live concerts. I chose to combine entertainment with dining at the Faulkner University Dinner Theatre, my favorite part of a very full day. In the past, the theater has put on a variety of classics, including Little Women, The King and I, Fiddler on the Roof and Our Town. Saturday night's performance was classic, too, with a twist.

School House Rock Live brought me back to my childhood with its signature songs about grammar, math, science and history. The themed meal was a breakfast buffet, just like — though perhaps better than — Mom used to make.

I laughed throughout the show at the exuberance of the actors and ingenuity of the props. They call themselves Montgomery's best entertainment value, since you get dinner and a show for only $25 — $20 for military. This season's lineup includes a Bronte romance and a Hitchcock thriller. For more information or reservations, call 334-386-7190.

If you plan to visit Montgomery, stop by the visitors center at 300 Water Street. Visit them online at www.visitingmontgomery.com or call 334-261-1114.

OPENING THIS WEEK

BANDSLAM

When gifted singer-songwriter Charlotte Banks asks new kid in town Will Burton to manage her fledgling rock band, she appears to have just one goal in mind: go head-to-head against her egotistical musician ex-boyfriend, Ben, at the biggest event of the year, a battle of the bands. Against all odds, their band develops a sound all its own with a real shot at success in the contest. Meanwhile, romance brews between Will and Sam, who plays a mean guitar and has a voice to die for. When disaster strikes, it's time for the band to make a choice: Do they admit defeat, or face the music and stand up for what they believe in?

The film stars Vanessa Hudgens, David Bowie and Lisa Kudrow. It is rated PG for thematic elements and mild language.

DISTRICT 9

Thirty years ago, aliens made contact with Earth. Humans waited for the hostile attack, or the giant advances in technology. Neither came. Instead, the aliens were refugees, the last survivors of their home world. They were set up in a makeshift home in South Africa's District 9 as the world's nations argued over what to do with them.

Now, control over the aliens has been contracted out to Multi-National United, a private company uninterested in the aliens' welfare: they will receive tremendous profits if they can make the aliens' awesome weaponry work. So far, they have failed; activation of the weaponry requires alien DNA.

The tension between the aliens and the humans comes to a head when an MNU field operative, Wikus van der Merwe, contracts a mysterious virus that begins changing his DNA. Wikus quickly becomes the most hunted man in the world, as well as the most valuable — he is the key to unlocking the secrets of alien technology. Ostracized and friendless, there is only one place left for him to hide: District 9.

The film stars Sharlto Copley, Jason Cope, Nathalie Boltt and Sylvaine Strike. It is rated R for bloody violence and pervasive language.

THE TIME TRAVELER'S WIFE

Clare has been in love with Henry her entire life. She believes they are destined to be together, even though she never knows when they will be separated: Henry is a time traveler — cursed with a rare genetic anomaly that causes him to live his life on a shifting timeline, skipping back and forth through his lifespan with no control. Despite the fact that Henry's travels force them apart with no warning, Clare desperately tries to build a life with her one true love.

The film stars Rachel McAdams and Eric Bana. It is rated PG-13 for thematic elements, brief disturbing images, nudity and sexuality.

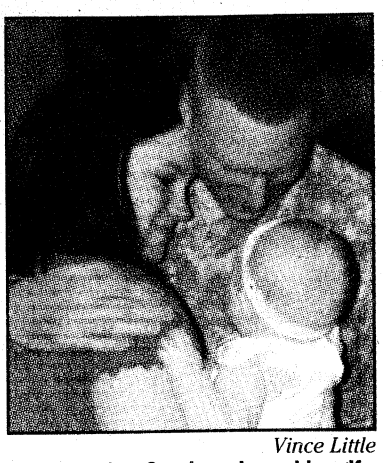
About 65 Soldiers from the 233rd Transportation Company are back at Fort Benning after a yearlong deployment to Iraq.

Family and friends packed Freedom Hall on Sunday morning as 57 members of 4th Platoon landed at Lawson Army Airfield. A smaller advance party from the unit arrived home Aug. 8.

This marked the transportation company's sixth deployment for Operation Iraqi Freedom. The previous five were six months in duration.

SSG William Marshall said he's been a part of all six deployments.

"It feels great," he said of the homecoming. "This is a big relief. It's like we let all the air out ... I just want to relax and kiss all my babies."



Marshall's welcome party included wife Kristina, their three children and his mother, Bethany.

The Soldiers were assigned to the 264th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, 16th Sustainment Brigade, at Contingency Operating Base Speicher, near Tikrit in northern Iraq.

They provided logistical support to units from Camp Adder southeast of Baghdad all the way up to Mosul, said 1LT Kimberly Ordonez, the platoon leader.

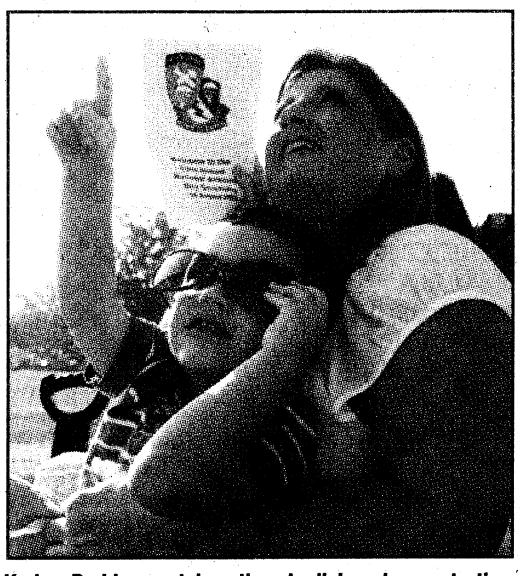
"I want to do that," said 2-year-old Kaden Perkins as he watched a Silver Wings parachutist glide through the air carrying the American flag above Eubanks Field.



Perkins, son of SGT Anthony Perkins, joined his mother, sister and grandmother for his father's graduation from Airborne School Friday.

The Army family planned for a graduation, but got a crash-course in paratrooper history since the event coincided with National Airborne Day.

"As a young man, I learned about a hardy band of brothers called paratroopers," said MG Michael Ferriter, commanding general of Fort Benning, and speaker for the event. "Venerable Airborne veterans gathered here today, I thank you for being the kind of leaders who inspired me to become a paratrooper 32 years ago."

Descendant of Corregidor veteran earns wings

When LTC John L. Erickson jumped out of a C-47 above Corregidor at just after 8:30 a.m. Feb. 16, 1945, he stepped into history as the first American paratrooper out the door in the effort to reclaim the island during World War II.

Though the history lesson may no longer be a part of Fort Benning's Advanced Infantry Officers Class, in the late 1940s it was a story many officers learned, according to curriculum from the course taught by CPT Donald Crawford from 1948-1949.

Four generations later, Erickson's descendants are still taking to the skies.

Cadet John Cochran, the great-grandson of Erickson, earned his Airborne wings Friday at a graduation ceremony held on Eubanks Field.

"That kind of family legacy is more valuable than gold," said MG Michael Ferriter, commanding general of Fort Benning, of the family during his speech to the graduating class from C Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

The ceremony coincided with the 69th anniversary of the first Airborne test platoon jump in 1941 that paved the way for Airborne operations.

On hand to pin Cochran's wings were his father, LTC(R) Lewis Cochran, and grandfathers, MG(R) James Francis and COL(R) Frank Casey, who attended Airborne School at Fort Benning during their Army careers.

The family legacy began when Erickson commanded the 3rd Battalion, 503rd Parachute Regimental Combat Team, and led troops into battle to reclaim the island of Corregidor three years later after the U.S. surrendered it to Japanese troops in 1942, said his son-in-law, Casey.

Erickson died in 1967 but his stories of that day live on through his family.

The troops landed on a drop zone, Erickson described to Casey as "like

CSU hosts leadership forum

GEN(R) Colin Powell and GEN David Petraeus will headline the Jim Blanchard Leadership Forum Aug. 31 through Sept. 1 at the Cunningham Center for Leadership Development at Columbus State University.

Now in its fourth year, the forum is named for retired Synovus chief executive officer and chairman of the board Jim Blanchard, who emphasized the principles of servant leadership while at the company.

"Servant leadership is a worthy goal unto itself," Blanchard is quoted on the forum's Web site. "We run our company this way simply because it's right, because every person who labors here has great worth and deserves to be treated so. Our company is built on these values. They define who we are."

The annual conference pulls in people from all levels of expertise, from chief executive officers to small business owners, said LTG(R) Carmen Cavezza, executive director of the Cunningham Center for Leadership Development and former commanding general of Fort Benning.

Powell, the former Secretary of State, is slated to kick off the conference at 8 p.m. Aug. 31. Other speakers include Paul Amos II, Dan Cathy,

CFC sets $1M goal; expands to include 12 counties

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Combined Federal Campaign will kick off at 10:30 a.m. Sept. 2 in the Benning Conference Center. The annual fundraising campaign for federal employees lasts through Oct. 16.

Last year, Soldiers and civilians raised more than $950,000, said Laura Walker, CFC manager, but this year, they're raising the bar.

"We have a goal of $1 million," Walker said. "It's a rallying cry, and we are going to shoot for it."

There will be more people to help meet the goal this year, since the local CFC is expanding from its original three counties of Muscogee, Chattahoochee and Russell to 12 counties.

The nine new counties, which will add mostly post office and national historic site workers, represent an area not served before by the CFC, Walker said.

The counties include Harris, Talbot, Taylor, Marion, Schley, Sumter, Webster, Stewart and Quitman. To reflect the additional counties, the local campaign has changed its name to the Columbus/Fort Benning Regional CFC.

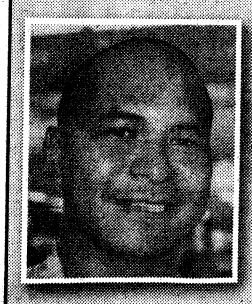
Even with the addition, most of the money raised goes to a variety of organizations. Many of them are on post, including Fort Benning Schools, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, the Red Cross and Santa's Castle.

The CFC screens the charities that want to be a part of the campaign to make sure they are responsible with their funds and providing a good service, Walker said. The list currently includes more than 4,000 charities.

"Almost* everybody can find something they feel passionate about: animals, children, the environment, medical research, wounded warriors," she said. "You can give to local charities. You can even choose to give internationally."

People can choose to have their donations automatically deducted from their paycheck.

Walker said it may be a small amount every two weeks, but it adds up.



It's especially important that people give during these difficult economic times, said Scott Ferguson, president of the local United Way.

Equally fair or fairly equal?

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

If you don't know, National Women's Equality Day is Wednesday.

Women's rights have come a long way since the first convention in 1848 in Seneca Falls, N.Y. Although it took another 72 years to pass the 19th Amendment, women today enjoy the benefit of their foremothers struggles over the past 161 years.

I am by no means an activist in the area of women's rights, nor am I passive when it concerns the right of people to be treated equally.

But, as a man I have to admit the lines get fuzzy sometimes. I am sure I am not the only man who struggles with distinguishing between what is and isn't equal and what is just plain ol' good manners and being a gentleman.

Although I would never open the car door for a man, I would be committing a cardinal sin if I didn't do it for a woman, especially if my mother found out about it — I would be in big trouble because she raised me to be a gentleman.

The approach I take is if it is something of a personal nature, then I react like the gentleman I was raised to be. And, if it is on a professional level, I do not make distinctions between genders, but always apply courtesy and fairness.

I believe all people deserve and want to be treat equally, but I think above all, people just want to be treated fairly.

When my children were younger I had to have the fair versus equal discussion with them.

The discussion came about when my son was late getting home and my daughter wanted to know why his punishment was less severe than what she would have received for the same offense.

After I explained to her it was his first offense and she was a habitual offender, I decided I needed to have a fairness versus equal discussion with them.

Once I asked if she would like to be punished the same for a first offense when he might be an habitual offender of the same offense, she had to think about it.

So, I posed the question to both of them 'Would you rather be treated fairly, or equally?'

I let them think about it for a while, then both came back with the only answer they have ever agreed on as far as I know — "fairly," they said.

While Wednesday marks the 89th anniversary of Women's Equality Day, there is more work to do when it comes equality, not just between the genders, but for society as a whole..

Equality among people and classes of people should be the rule and not the exception — the participants in women's rights convention of 1848 proved it could be done — it is up to our generation to continue their work.

Soldier grows as war continues

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

I remember how miserable I was at the National Training Center, Fort Irwin Calif., in January 2007. I was paralyzed by the cold. No matter how many layers of clothes I wore, how long I stood by the portable heaters or how many times I told myself to "Soldier up," I didn't feel better about the below-zero temperature.

Still, I knew NTC was necessary before deploying to Iraq. I wanted to make sure I was ready.

But NTC wasn't just training. For me, it was the moment I realized I was actually going to war.

Deployment wasn't far off. My leaders said things like "next month, when we are in Iraq" and "during our deployment." We were told not to unpack when we returned from California. Deploying for war was now my reality.

At first, I doubted what I knew. Could I treat a casualty? Would I be able to shoot someone? How would I handle being away from my family? With each passing day, I doubted myself more, although I was learning an astounding amount.

I learned to look for improvised explosive devices while driving, learned how to clear rooms. My press releases and pictures were scoured for operational security violations.

How was I going to keep all of this straight?

It turns out I was ready. I passed every test Iraq threw at me. The training worked like it was supposed to and I returned a more confident Soldier and an experienced combat veteran.

As 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team prepared for its fourth deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, I was ready for NTC. Instead of railway boxcars, the towns looked like Iraqi towns. Instead of one Iraqi surrounded by Americans dressed as Arabs, the whole town was filled with Iraqis. Arabic was spoken everywhere.

And the training was different, too. Instead of concentrating on room clearing and leading operations, now the training was about supporting the Iraqi Security Forces rather than how to use them in our operations.

But the biggest change was in me.

Everything seemed to slow down and become more manageable. My leaders relied on me and gave me more responsibility.

What I found out during my second rotation at the NTC was how much I had grown emotionally and mentally.

In two and a half years, I went from a Soldier who was unsure of his abilities to a Soldier who wasn't afraid to make mistakes. I became a Soldier who leaders relied on. I went from a Soldier who asked a million questions to a Soldier who answered them.

I can only imagine and hope that if I return to NTC, I will have grown even more as a professional and a Soldier. What a difference a few years can make.

Leadership: It's not just for breakfast

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

My mom used to tell us children to do as she said — not as she did. I never really understood that type of autocratic leadership and questioned it — a lot. My family and friends were surprised when I joined the Army. But I learned a lot about leadership in the Army.

As a junior enlisted Soldier studying Russian at the Defense Language Institute at Monterey, Calif., I railed against what I called the lunacy of "hurry up and wait." Showing up 15 minutes before the first sergeant called the formation to attention didn't make sense to me.

It wasn't until I was late and my corrective training involved arriving 30 minutes before each of the three daily formations for a week that I began to understand. My squad leader, an Infantryman who was learning Russian before he could work in one of our embassies, started my education. He was always at the appointed location before me. He didn't yell or lecture me. He didn't complain because my weeklong corrective training cut into his study or personal time. He was a Soldier — twenty-four seven.

I learned about discipline, respect and military bearing from a tactful sergeant who took the time to lead by example.

Several years ago, a coworker tore a quote about leadership from the newspaper's opinion page to give to me. The gist — leaders do the right thing, managers do things right. I taped it to my desk.

I just returned from two weeks at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where I attended the basic course of the Civilian Education System. We talked about leadership, Field Manual 6-22 and the Army Values. And we had to describe our leadership philosophy.

I believe a leader lets workers have the freedom to do their work in their own way. A leader is confident, trusts the employees to know their jobs and encourages them to work independently. Leaders guide, mentor and develop people in a positive environment and clearly communicate the organization's goals. They are empathetic, knowledgeable and tactful. Leaders take responsibility, they know their job and they get it done while motivating the work force.

Harry Truman had a sign on his desk — The buck stops here. My reminder to lead by example is taped to my desk.

Army leaders GEN David Petraeus and GEN(R) Colin Powell will speak at the Jim Blanchard Leadership Forum Aug. 31 through Sept. 1 at the Cunningham Center. For more information, visit the Web site www.jimblanchardleadershipforum.com.

Top NCOs, Soldiers compete for Best Warrior

National Guard Soldiers vie for spot

Caroline Keyser
THE BAYONET

Some of the Army's finest noncommissioned officers and Soldiers came to Fort Benning to compete for the title of Best Warrior during the third annual National Guard Best Warrior Competition Aug. 1-4.

The competition tested participants on a wide variety of Soldier tasks in a nearly nonstop barrage of events. They zeroed and sighted weapons, went on a 12-mile ruck march, completed first-aid tasks, took the Army Physical Fitness Test and Combat Water Survival Test, completed a land navigation course and participated in combatives. The competition also included a written exam, and essay writing and uniform inspection tests.

The 14 competitors are the National Guard's Regional NCOs and Soldiers of the Year. The top two winners will represent the National Guard at the Armywide competition in September.

Running on about eight hours of sleep over three days, the competitors tackled some of their last physical challenges at Booker Range the morning of Aug. 3 — a combat warrior skills test that included engaging targets in an urban environment, throwing hand grenades and transporting casualties.

"My feet are really beat up and my legs are really sore, but I'm glad I'm doing it," said SPC Jeffrey Deslauriers, 3rd Battalion, 172nd Infantry Regiment, Vermont National Guard.

A competitor prepares a rescue system to evacuate a casualty as part of a skill test during the Best Warrior Competition.

Deslauriers, who has served four years in the Army, said even if he didn't win, he would be glad to have gained valuable training.

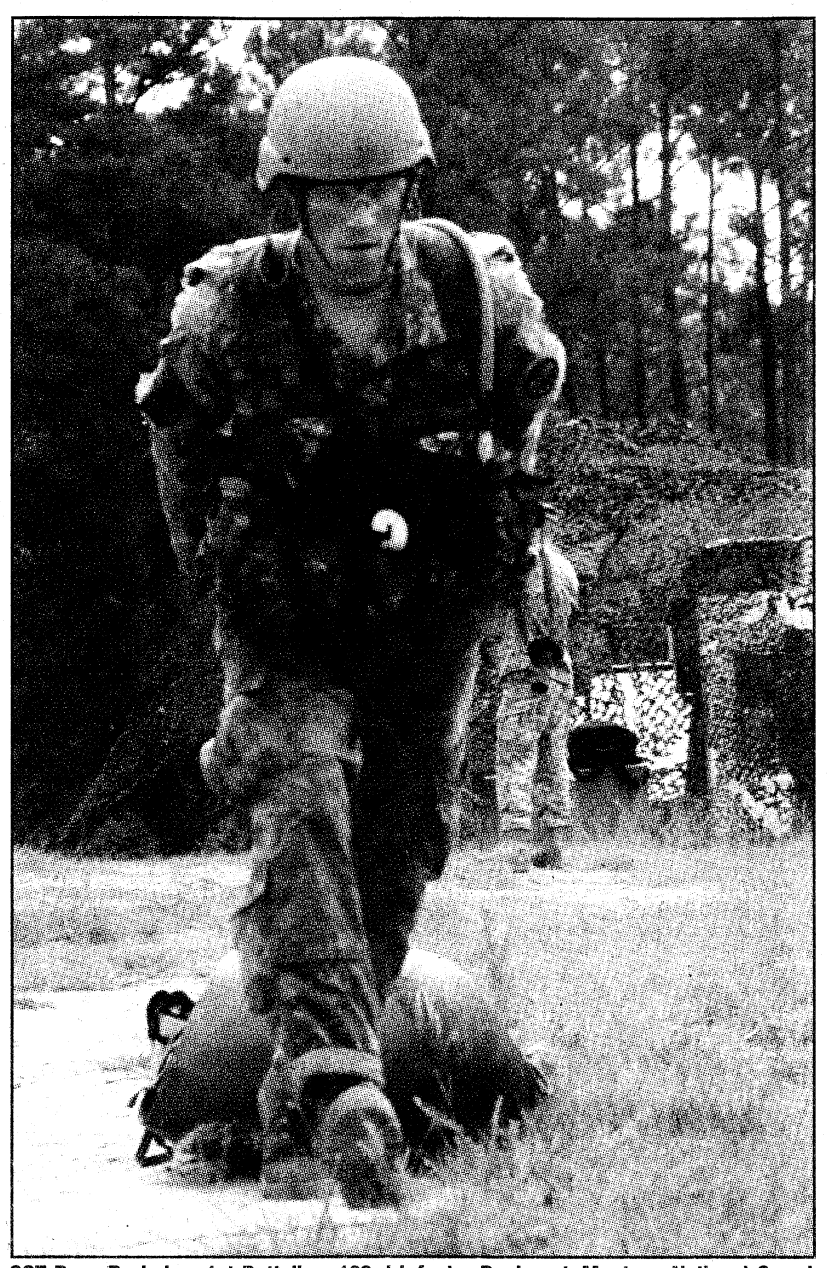
"A lot of this stuff I haven't touched since basic training," he said. "It will help me out."

SGT Danny Boone, 150th Engineer Company, Delaware National Guard, said competing was an honor.

"The caliber of competitors here is incredible," he said. "Everybody here is just pushing their body and mind beyond their limits, and everybody has done a great job so far. Despite various injuries and aches and pains, everybody has still finished the events."

Boone said he found the 12-mile ruck march to be the hardest event to that point.

"We had so many events the day before (the march) that I was really fatigued," he said. "Once your body starts wearing down, it weighs heavily on your mind and it's easy to say, 'I've had enough.' Keeping my mind (sharp) so my body could hold up was definitely a challenge."



Mental toughness was a major factor in the competition, said CPT Brian Deaton, officer in charge of the Best Warrior Competition, and commander of A Company, Warrior Training Center.

"They have to be mentally tough to complete the physical tasks," Deaton said. "The body will go far beyond what the mind thinks it will. If you have strong mental fortitude, you're going to be able to push your body to its limits."

While participants came from across the country to compete, one NCO traveled much farther than his fellow competitors. SGT Vince Bowles, 1st Battalion, 121st Infantry Regiment, Georgia National Guard, is three months into a nine-month deployment to Afghanistan. Back in his home state for the competition and two weeks of leave, Bowles said he was eager to rejoin his buddies in theater.

"It's good to be home, but at the same time I'm ready to go back because my whole platoon is there," he said. "I'd like to get back as soon as I can, which won't be too long."

Bowles credited his battalion and brigade sergeants major with helping him get clearance to return to the U.S. for the competition, which he called "a smoker."

SGT Ryan Brubaker, 1st Battalion, 163rd Infantry Regiment, Montana National Guard, pulls a dummy representing a wounded Soldier. Brubaker won the four-day competition and was named Best Warrior of the Army National Guard. He will represent the National Guard at the all-Army Best Warrior competition in September.

"The competition is much tougher here than at the state and regional levels," he said. "At those levels we had maybe three people in serious competition for the top slots, but here everybody is good. When I came down here, my goal was to beat everybody, but now I'm just looking to do well and to finish (knowing) I gave it my best."

CSM Victor Angry, command sergeant major of the Army National Guard, attended the event for the first time.

"I'm very impressed," he said. "This is where the rubber meets the road. Watching them do this, it's just pure courage."

Soldiers target real-world combat scenarios

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

It's muggy and buggy, there are MREs for lunch and there's no indoor plumbing, said 2LT Brian Kift, but after five days of FTX 3 and at least 25 kilometers of walking, the Soldiers leave the field smiling.

"If you were to see these guys on the walk in Saturday morning, a lot of them are just ecstatic and thrilled to say, 'Hey, I was out in the field for a week.' It's a big confidence booster," said Kift, executive officer for A Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

During the exercise, basic trainees in A Company set up traffic-control points, interacted with U.S.-friendly sheiks, discovered weapons caches and conducted patrols.

"It's an accumulation of everything they've learned in the past seven weeks," Kift said. "We want to see how they think on their feet when they react to an improvised explosive device. Are they going to call for a nine-line medical evacuation? Do they remember their 360-degree security? We want to see how they react."

Kift said the drill sergeants and leaders try to make the training as realistic as possible to prepare the Soldiers to join their next unit.

PFC James Reilly, whose next assignment is Officer Candidate School, said he learned a lot about leadership during the exercise when he was in charge of 30 Soldiers for the first time.

"Everything comes into realization why we're trained the way we're trained," Reilly said. "Being in this kind of environment, a dozen things go through your head all at once … and then you have things blowing up around you. You have to know where everyone is. You have to make sure you stay on track with your plan, make sure everyone has ammo, liquids, (that) we have no casualties. It could be a diversion. We could have more people coming in to ambush us. You have to keep a steady head, and remember what you have to do and remember what you're trained to do."

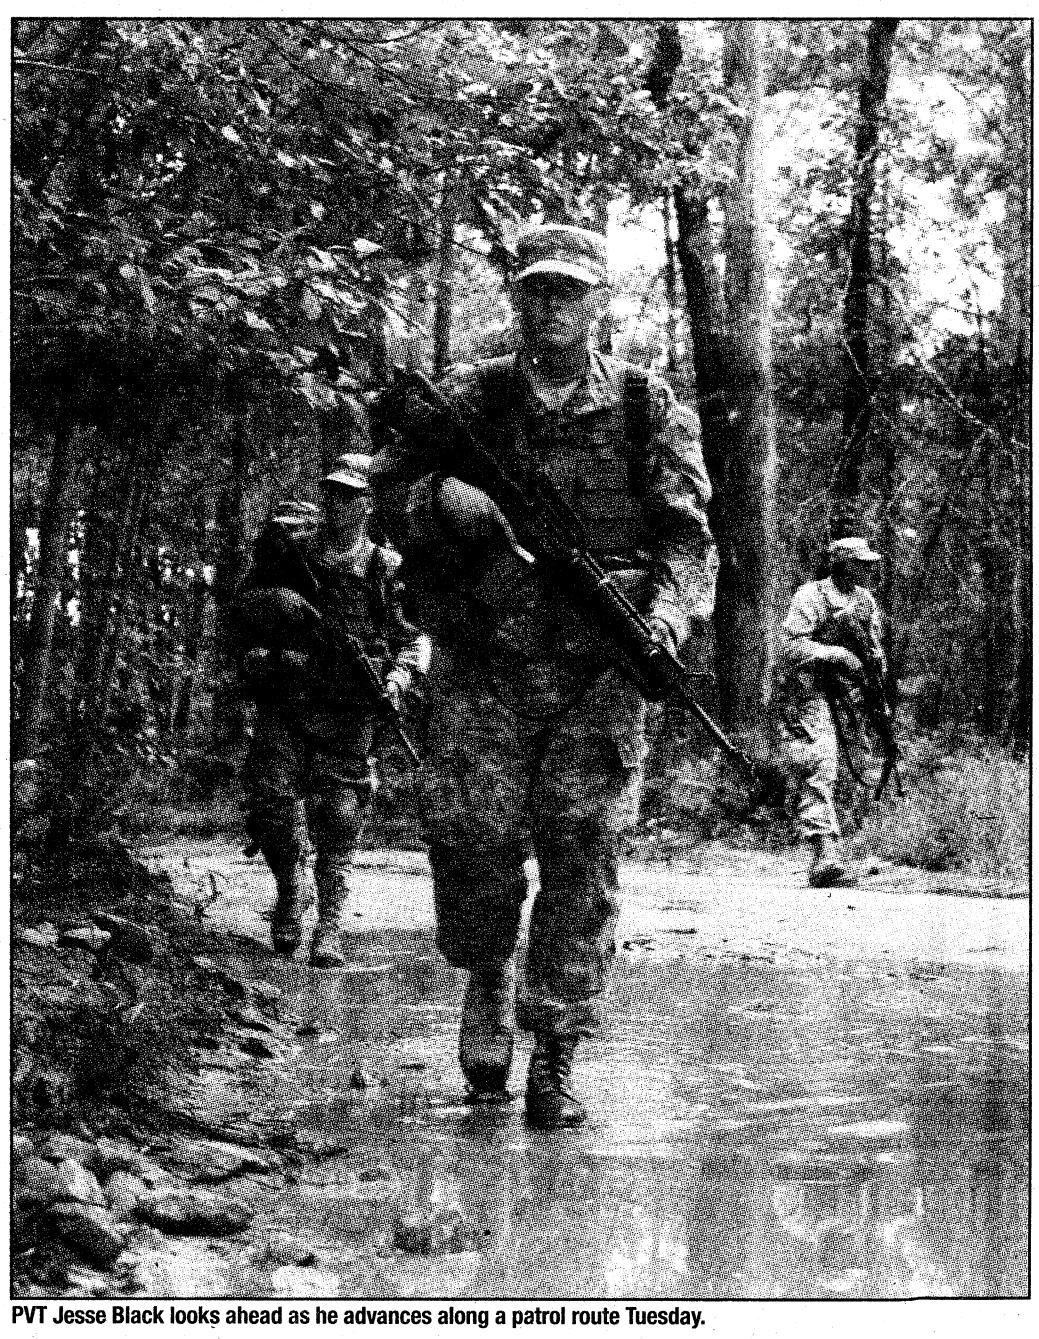
Reilly said he expects to conduct patrols in Iraq or Afghanistan similar to those he led during the field training exercise.

"I think everything I've learned yesterday and today is going to help me in my military career," he said, "because it gives you hands-on experience out in the field dealing with the kind of situations we're going to be dealing with in real life."

To add to the realism, company commander CPT Jay Kosturko started using IEDs that the drill sergeants can set off with their radios.

Before, an IED simulation would make a "pop and hiss" sound to alert Soldiers of an attack, Kosturko said. Now, it's a strong explosion that creates a "gut-wrenching negative experience," so Soldiers associate the sound with immediate reaction.

"The increase in the realism gives them another reason to take the training seriously," he said.



SPC Glenn Robertson, in charge of radio communications for 4th Platoon during its patrol mission Tuesday, calls in a nine-line medical evacuation after two Soldiers are wounded in an IED attack.

> "It's tough because it's a lot of information — just trying to fight through the number of acronyms is tough enough — but … it's all about trying to control it, making sense of the organized chaos."
> — SPC Glenn Robertson

The training IED is used throughout the battalion and will be presented to the command for use throughout the brigade.

Kosturko said he wants to build confidence in his troops and develop agile thinkers.

"I don't need an FTX to teach tactics," he said. "I can teach tactics in a classroom or out in front of our company. What I need them to learn (is) how to think through a scenario … to be able to respond to something that's not just straight out of the book and be able to figure things out. I want them to be the ones making those decisions and them to be the ones saying, 'Hey, this is how we're going to adapt.' That's the whole idea behind agile thinking."

PVT Jesse Black looks ahead as he advances along a patrol route Tuesday.

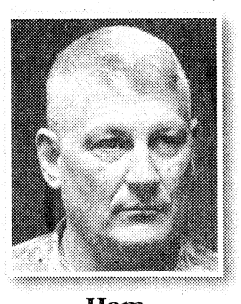
Troops advance down the road on the lookout for enemy activity.

SPC Glenn Robertson said the scenario-based mission let him realize how complex decision-making in a combat environment can be.

"You get to see how it really takes time to make a decision and do something," he said. "You're trying to think on your feet as fast as you can, and your decisions just don't flow as easily. It's tough because it's a lot of information — just trying to fight through the number of acronyms is tough enough — but … it's all about trying to control it, making sense of the organized chaos. And to get out here with your teams and have your teams finally understand what their role is, you can see it. It starts to work smoother and smoother as you go through."

"I feel like we're starting to make sense of all the information we were taught," said Robertson, who will graduate with A Company Sept. 3 at the National Infantry Museum.

Ham: Infantry-Armor merger 'makes perfect sense'



Vince Little
THE BAYONET

When the top U.S. general in Europe — a 33-year Army veteran with longtime ties to Fort Benning — first heard the Infantry and Armor schools would merge here into the Maneuver Center of Excellence, he said his reaction was mixed.

"Culturally, I wasn't ready to accept that because this has always been the Home of the Infantry," said GEN Carter Ham. "Then you start thinking about it logically and it makes perfect sense to do this. We bring together the two principal maneuver arms of our Army ... It's a very powerful opportunity."

The U.S. Army Europe and 7th Army commanding general spoke Monday during the Combat Leader Speaker Program, a quarterly event in which military dignitaries are invited to address Fort Benning commanders, students and trainees. He spoke to about 530 people at the National Infantry Museum.

Ham was commissioned in the Infantry in 1976, served as executive officer of the U.S. Army Infantry School from 1990-93 and was the 29th Infantry Regiment commander from 1999-2001. He has a daughter at Fort Benning who's married to a Soldier.

Ham

"This is home for us," he told the audience.

Ham recalled how he sat as a young Soldier at Fort Benning years ago and listened to renowned Army leaders such as Hal Moore — whose heroics in Vietnam are chronicled in the movie, "We Were Soldiers" — and David E. Grange Jr., who was commandant of the Infantry School from June 1979 to August 1981 and whom the Best Ranger Competition is named after.

"We'd hear these legends of our Army," he said, "and I'd find myself mesmerized."

Ham talked about the CLSP's relevance and how lessons learned within the venue can help young officers and noncommissioned officers in combat, but said the roles are reversed today.

During the Cold War, he said, very few Soldiers had been to war. The earliest experiences came during the Grenada invasion in 1983 and Desert Shield and Desert Storm in the early 1990s.

"That caused us to rely on the older officers from Vietnam, even Korea, to share their experiences in combat," Ham said prior to his speech. "We listened to them and gained their insights on small-unit combat."

At the height of the Cold War, he said U.S. Army Europe was made up of a quarter-million Soldiers. That number has shrunk to about 42,000 today, with only four brigade combat teams stationed on the continent.

The decline has been steady since the Soviet Union collapsed in 1989.

But the Soldiers he addressed Monday are already part of "a combat-seasoned force," he said, and most have deployed at least twice to Iraq or Afghanistan.

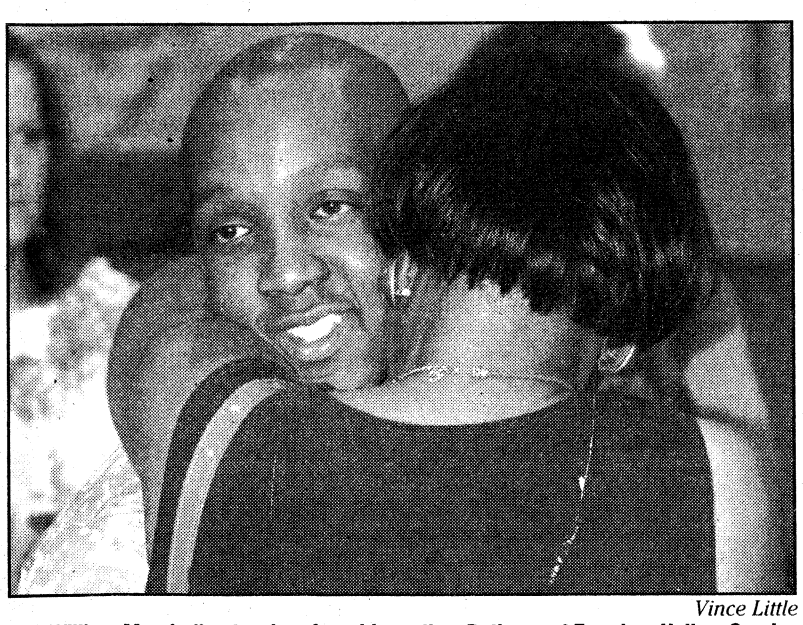
"Those guys in that room today don't think they've done anything extraordinary or special," Ham said. "Us old guys think just the opposite. What they have done is very extraordinary."

Ham said courage, perseverance and offensive spirit are the traits of good leaders and Soldiers and have served the Army well for 234 years. He praised the recruits, one station unit training Soldiers, NCOs, new lieutenants and captains emerging from Fort Benning on the Army's front lines.

"They're better than they've ever been," he said. "The Army wants to produce agile and adaptive leaders. Fort Benning has done that for generations, and they do it better than anyone else. The nation is well-served by what Fort Benning is doing today."

The general said he's inspired by the dedication and "selfless service" of today's all-volunteer force.

"There's not a Soldier, NCO or officer who has to be here. Nobody has to serve," Ham said. "And they've extended service beyond their initial obligation knowing we are a nation at war ... To me, that's inspirational."



He said the U.S. presence in Europe remains vital as his command faces evolving missions, which include forging partnerships with former Eastern Bloc countries.

He encouraged Soldiers in the crowd to seek an assignment with U.S. Army Europe.

"It's a great place to continue to Soldier and serve," Ham said. "We are the guardians of freedom and the American way of life. You represent the very best of our nation, and the future of our nation."

233rd: Families reunite after yearlong deployment

Support Battalion, said the company's mission was to provide heavy equipment transportation in support of all Iraq operations, including reception, staging, onward movement, integration and retrograde of equipment from theater. The platoon logged about 115,000 miles and hauled more than 13,000 tons of equipment, she said.

Loved ones gathered early at Freedom Hall to wait for the plane.

"I'm just ready for him to come home," said Shaneeka Phillips, while waiting for her boyfriend, SGT Justin Leverett. "It's been hard because I've been lonely and wondering what's going on with him over there."

She said they talked to each other daily on the phone. The couple plans to take a vacation in Florida.

PFC Corey Durham, returning from his first deployment, was greeted by someone he's never met — his 2-month-old baby girl, Julianne. He had only seen her on a webcam while communicating with his wife, Lindsey.

"I can't explain it," he said. "Being able to hold her for the first time is just amazing. (The deployment) was tough, but I'm here now — so it's better."

Lindsey Durham said the separation was difficult on many levels.

"He really hasn't seen his wife, either," Lindsey said. "In the past two years, we've only spent about eight months together."

After arriving at Fort Benning last summer, Durham immediately found out he was going to Iraq. He and Lindsey, both natives of Phenix City, spent three weeks planning their wedding. The following day, he left for pre-deployment training at Fort Stewart, Ga. Lindsey learned she was pregnant in October, she said.

Now that he's returned from the desert, the Durhams said they don't have any big plans. They just want to hang around the tricommunity and be a family.

"We haven't got to do that," Lindsey said.

After receiving a 48-hour local pass, the platoon began a 10-day reintegration schedule Wednesday, officials said. The Soldiers will get about a month of block leave starting Sept. 2.

troops and to remember the achievements of 69 years ago at Fort Benning, where the first Airborne troops trained under a pilot program called the Airborne test platoon. The test platoon led to the creation of the 501st Parachute Infantry Regiment, considered the father of future regiments of Airborne troops.

> "The Airborne test platoon troops led the way. We need to always remember that ... they are the ones who won the fame we bask in these days."
> — LTC Jon Ring, commander of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment

To kick off the celebration, a team of parachutists from Fort Benning's Silver Wings, the Air Force's Wings of Blue, 82nd Airborne Division's All-American Free Fall Team, the 101st Airborne Division's Screaming Eagles, the U.S. Special Operations Command's Black Daggers and the Special Operations Command's Para-Commandos jumped onto Eubanks Field, landing just a few feet away from the crowd.

"We just happen to be on some of the most sacred ground in the Airborne world: Airborne Walk and Eubanks Field," said LTC Jon Ring, commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, to the families. "Almost every paratrooper in American history has trained right on this ground."

"The Airborne test platoon troops led the way," he said. "We need to always remember that. Their numbers are down to two, which is unfortunate. We lost some pretty stalwart members of the platoon last year ... they are the ones who won the fame we bask in these days."

The most recent original test platoon member to pass away was CW4(R) Benjamin Reese in March, Ring said.

Reese spent time in both the 502nd and 504th Parachute Infantry Regiments following his stint in the test platoon.

Reese attended last year's celebration.

National Airborne Day wrapped up with families pinning wings on their graduating paratroopers.

"It was wonderful," said Denise Ryals, mother of SGT Perkins. "We were so proud of him."

jumping onto a dime."

The troops faced winds between 16-18 knots per hour, roughly 19-20 miles per hour, as they attempted to land on one of two small drop zones on the island, according to the 503rd PRCT's Heritage Web site at http://corregidor.org.

"They only let three Soldiers jump on each pass from each door," said Casey. "The aircraft made circles until they were fully unloaded. But even with only three jumping, they still didn't hit the drop zone. Some landed on the cliffs, some were blown into the ocean. It was a difficult jump."

LTC(R) Lewis Cochran pins Airborne wings on his son, Cadet John Cochran.

Karen Cochran, Erickson's granddaughter and mother to John Cochran, recalled looking at mementos her grandfather kept from his time at Corregidor.

In a box along with pictures of the island, there was "a whiskey bottle that all the paratroopers had signed and written comments on from the jump onto Corregidor," she said.

The youngest Cochran paratrooper, John, said he couldn't imagine the conditions his great-grandfather faced, but hopes to live up to the legacy three generations have built upon.

"They inspired me," said John, the oldest of four brothers. "As I grew older and saw the importance of certain things they did, I wanted to emulate them. I get to wear the wings they wore and gave honor to."

John's father said he first saw his son's interest in the Army when John began working at the Conus Replacement Center doing odd jobs after graduating high school.

"He was working with a bunch of old NCOs and was inspired by their example," said the elder Cochran, who retired from the Army in 2001.

Shortly thereafter, John enrolled in ROTC at Columbus State University to pursue his goal of becoming an Army Infantry officer.

He is now majoring in political science and is looking forward to attending the Infantry Officer Basic Course and Ranger School.

"This is just the beginning of a lot of things I (hope to) accomplish," he said.

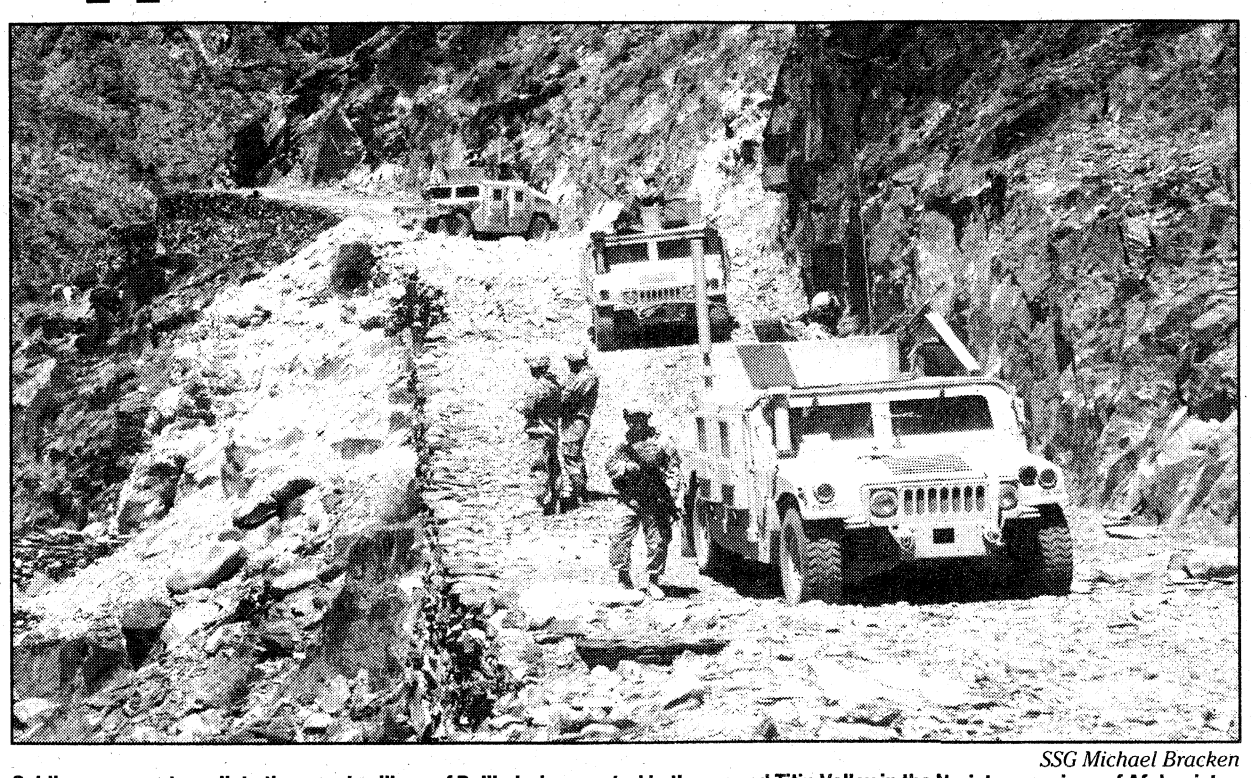
Handbook applies lessons learned in Afghanistan



Judith Snyderman
ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — A recently published Army handbook addresses the unique set of topographical, cultural and operational challenges facing troops in Afghanistan.

"What you will find in this handbook are specific objectives and lessons that have been learned at the small-unit level that pertain to the very specific and unique set of conditions that small-unit commanders will find themselves in Afghanistan," COL Robert Forrester, director of the Center for Army Lessons Learned, told bloggers and online journalists Tuesday during a "DoDLive" bloggers roundtable.

Topics and themes in the handbook emerged largely from six months of field interviews, observations and collaboration with the Infantry School and Maneuver Center of Excellence. One recurring theme is the need for redundant communications, said retired LTC Brice Johnson, who wrote the handbook.

"In some of the very tough environments of Afghanistan, FM radio may be sketchy, satellite communications may be intermittent, so the small-unit commander has to plan for primary, alternate, contingency and emergency communications for each operation they go out on," he said.

SSG Michael Bracken
Soldiers prepare to walk to the remote village of Balik during a patrol in the rugged Titin Valley in the Nuristan province of Afghanistan in June 2007. A recently published Army handbook addresses the unique set of topographical, cultural and operational challenges facing troops in Afghanistan.

Johnson said that a chapter on cultural engagement recognizes the challenges that stem from the diverse ethnic enclaves in Afghanistan.

"Each small-unit leader has to examine the area he is in, interpret the ethnicities, the tribal loyalties and previous history of the area, so he can form lasting relationships with the leaders in that area and have a successful operation," Johnson said.

Other chapters cover force-protection — including the protection of combat outposts — fires and joint fires, marksmanship, medical and casualty evacuations, battle drills and maintaining fitness in high-altitude areas with steep terrain. Checklists in the handbook enable squad leaders and platoon sergeants to ensure they have taken all the right steps and precautions for successful perimeter defense.

"I think it will serve as a good guide to any small-unit leader as he sets up an outpost with the right information, the right lessons to posture them for success," Johnson said.

Forrester told bloggers that the foe in Afghanistan is extremely well-seasoned and experienced. "They are very resourceful. They are very adaptive. They are willing to stand toe to toe with you and fight it out at a small-unit Infantry level," he said.

The print version of the handbook is now available. For more information, visit the Center for Army Lessons Learned Web site.

AKO, DKO increase security measures to prevent identity theft

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Army Knowledge Online and Defense Knowledge Online are changing procedures for users who log on without a common access card.

Users accessing the AKO or DKO Web portals without a CAC will soon need to take additional steps to verify their identity when logging on.

"Last year, more than 9 million people became prey to identity thieves who obtained significant portions of the information about their victims from the Internet," said MAJ Alprentice Smith, AKO/DKO director of security.

The AKO and DKO Web portals now serve more than 2.2 million users, he said.

"We want to make sure our users and their information are protected to the maximum level possible, while still providing an environment for warfighters, and those that support them, to communicate and access information," Smith said.

Because mission-critical and personal data are essential to the Department of Defense, AKO will use knowledge-based authentication, or KBA security questions, to provide proof of authentication for users entering the system with their user name and password.

"One of the most common ways hackers gain access to information is through keystroke monitoring," he said. "KBA helps eliminate that threat by allowing users to click on the correct answers to personal security questions with a mouse."

The enrollment process, which began this month, will include providing answers to a series of personal security questions.

After enrollment, the new authentication process will begin and users will be required to select correct multiple choice answers to three of these security questions each time they log in before access is granted to the AKO portal.

"This adds another layer of security without increasing the time it takes to log on," Smith said. "If a question is answered incorrectly, the user will have three attempts to get it right. If he fails at that, the user is locked out. At that point the user must log in with a CAC or reset his password using the current methods."

Resetting security questions will require a call to the help desk.

KBA implementation will not disrupt the services provided by the AKO and DKO portals, Smith said.

KBA simply will ensure the security of user information and critical data, making it more difficult for information — whether personal or mission-essential, to fall into the wrong hands, he said.

Tiger caged

Y.E. Yang shocked the golf world Sunday, overcoming a two-stroke lead by Tiger Woods in the final round of the PGA championship to win the tournament. Yang, from South Korea, became the first Asian-born player to capture a major title.

Woods had never lost a tournament on American soil when leading by more than one shot and after the first 23 holes led Yang by nine strokes. Yang played the final 49 holes 13-under-par to overtake Woods and win the championship.

Smoltz to join Cardinals staff

Former longtime Atlanta Braves pitcher John Smoltz agreed to a deal with the St. Louis Cardinals Wednesday. Smoltz spent 20 seasons with the Braves until he signed to play for Boston in January. Smoltz is 212-152 with a 3.32 ERA and 154 saves in 21 seasons.

An eight-time All-Star, he's the only pitcher in major league history with 200 wins and 150 saves. He is expected to start Sunday.

Williams sisters sign on with Dolphins?

Tennis sisters Venus and Serena Williams may become the latest stars to sign on with the Miami Dolphins as part-owners of the team. ESPN's Greg Garber is reporting that although no announcement has been made, a deal is in the works and imminent.

The Dolphins already boast musicians Gloria and Emilio Estefan and Marc Anthony as part-owners and have close ties with musician Jimmy Buffet. Maybe the Williams sisters can sing as well?

No gas, no win

When will Jimmie Johnson learn? In last week's NASCAR race in Michigan, Jimmie Johnson was poised to win the race, then the unthinkable happened — he ran out of gas. Unthinkable? No. It was the second time this season he ran out of gas at Michigan. The last time was in June when his blunder led to a Mark Martin win. Sunday, it was Brain Vickers' turn to snatch the victory from Johnson.

Johnson finished in 33rd. With three races left before the cutoff for NASCAR's season-ending championship chase, the win provided a significant boost to Vickers' chances of qualifying. Vickers jumped one spot in the standings to 13th, and is only 12 points behind Martin for the 12th and final chase qualifying spot.

This week's race at Bristol will be televised on ESPN beginning at 7:30 p.m. Saturday.

Benning Military Long Drive set for Monday

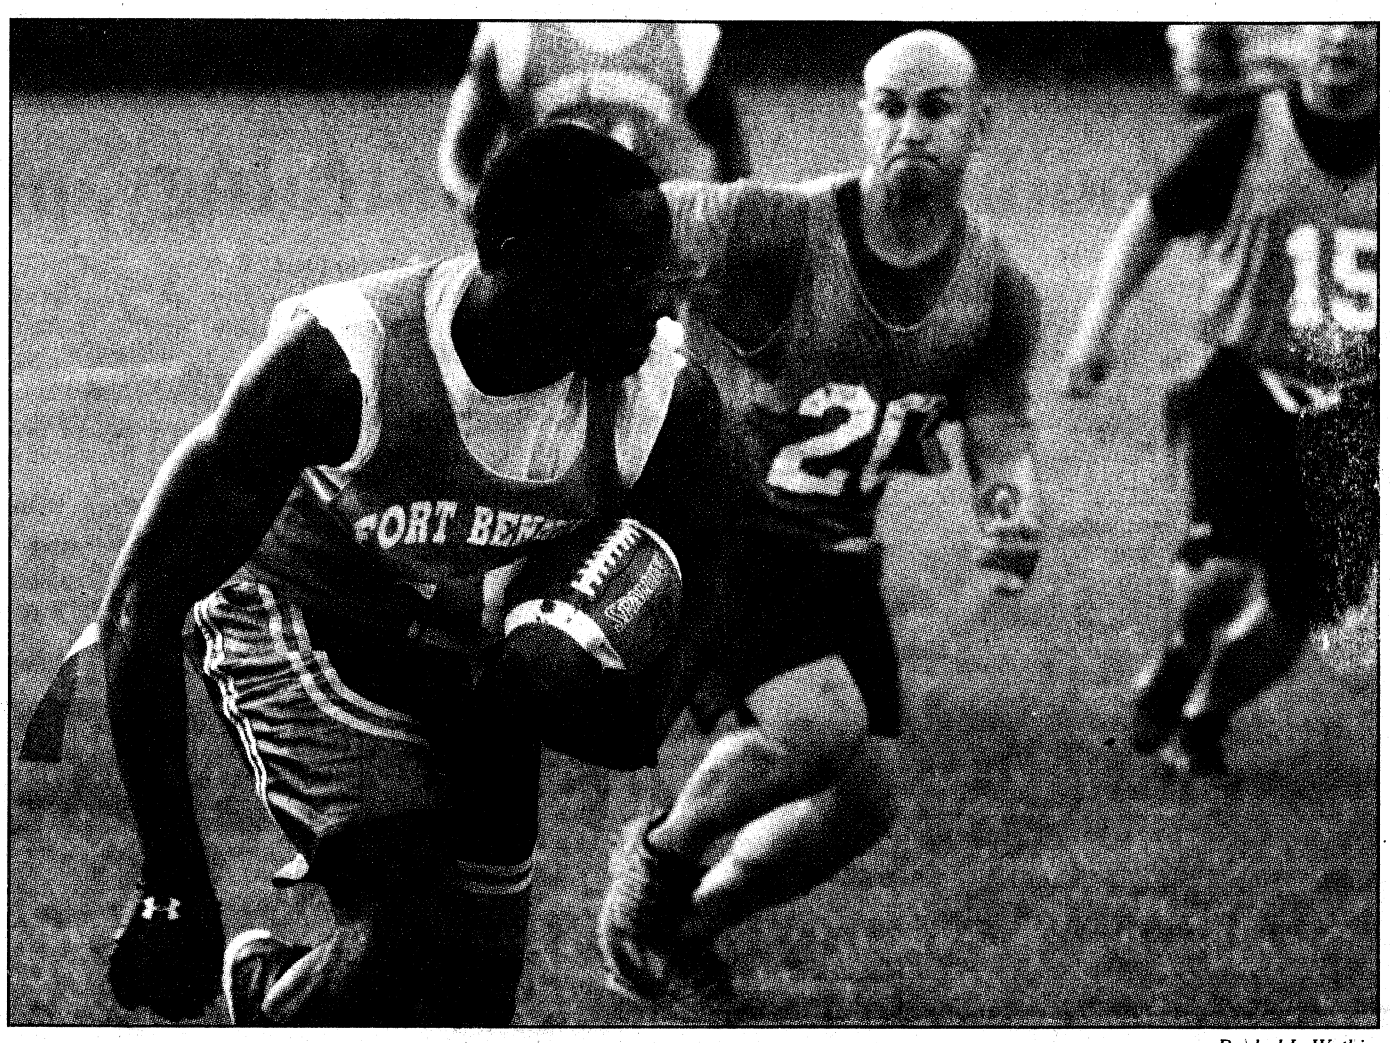
Golfers will go the distance in a local level Military Long Drive Championship, presented by 7UP, from 2 to 7 p.m. Monday at the Fort Benning Golf Course. The golfer who drives the ball the farthest within set parameters will get an expense paid trip to Mesquite, Nev., to compete against 20 competitors Oct. 28 in the military national finals, organized by Army Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command. The national finals winner will receive a $10,000 check, the military championship title and a spot to compete in the RE/MAX World Long Drive Championships.



Last year, the Fort Benning winner, SFC James Prasse of Fort Bragg, N.C., drove a ball 328 yards.

"Not everyone can hit a ball even 300 yards," said class A PGA professional George Cliff, business manager and director of golf operations at the Fort Benning Golf Course. "Most golfers hit around 240 or 250 yards. This is a very competitive tournament and there is a lot at stake at this championship. It's a chance to go to Nevada and compete nationally in the finals."

Golf championship draws 120

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Golfers from the tricommunity area, LaGrange, Cusseta and Pine Mountain, Ga., gathered at Maple Ridge Golf Course Saturday and Green Island Hills Country Club Sunday to compete in the second Chattahoochee Valley Amateur Golf Championship.

The flighted event, created by the local golf community to replace the Bi-City Annual Golf Championship, drew a field of 120 players.

"Overall, we had a great turnout — last year we had 100 players, so I'm happy about 120," said Mike Gill, director of golf at Maple Ridge. "The championship can only get better next year. We have already begun working on it."

The championship is definitely competitive, said Scott Brosch, Fort Benning's deputy G3, who competed in the event.

"I am hoping to be consistent and have a decent swing," said Brosch before teeing off Saturday.

Not every shot is a good one, but the more consistent a golfer is at good shots, the better, Brosch said.

After playing two days of 18 holes on each course, players' scores were totaled for a final score. Brosch took 15th place in the fourth flight, shooting a two-day total of 179.

Stephen Woodill said it was interesting competing against golfers from all around Chattahoochee Valley.

"I like competing in the tournament because it's always a challenge," said Woodill, before teeing off on his first hole Saturday. "My strategy today is to hit as many birdies as I can."

Woodill placed first in the second flight, shooting a three-over-par 146, and took home $300.

A total of $5,500 in certificates were given to winners in each flight.

Chad Glanton took first place overall, shooting a three-under-par 140, earning $500, the championship trophy and bragging rights until the 2010 championship.

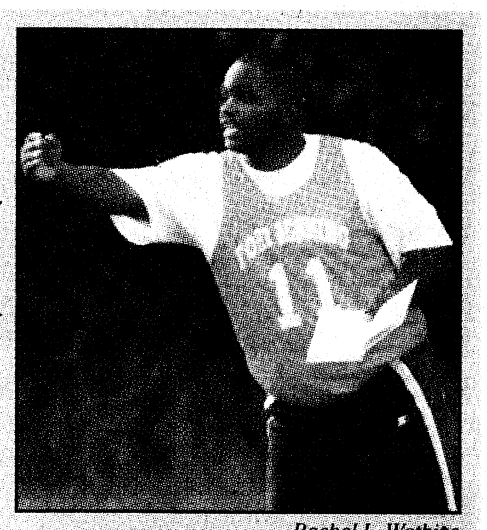
COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Polishing playbook prepares team for success

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Kyle Bender is pumped to start flag football season, he said. The first-year player-coach has been studying and researching plays, formulating a playbook and having his team practice four times a week in preparation for the opening game.



His secret weapon this season — his playbook, he said.

"I have taken some plays from last year's book and designed some of my own," said Bender, who coaches the Gators, A Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, in the post intramural flag football league. "People should watch out for us this season. We have a lot of good talent and fast runners on our team and a new playbook."

In 2008, the Gators made it to the playoffs of the Postseason Flag Football Commander's Cup tournament but lost in the second round of the loser's bracket. This year, Bender wants to take the cup, he said. And if not the cup, he'll be happy to be one of the top three teams at the end of the season.

"This year will be different," he said. "I am going to enforce the rules of the game and we are going to

Fishing, hunting open house set for Wednesday

Fifteen changes made to hunting, fishing rules

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Fishing, Hunting and Recreation Open House is Wednesday at the Uchee Creek Activity Center.

Brent Widener, fish and wildlife biologist with the Conservation Branch, Directorate of Public Works, said there have been changes made to the post fishing and hunting rules and regulations and the open house is where hunters and fishers can find out about them.

The changes include a requirement for hunters to take a hunter education course and show a hunter education card to purchase post permits. Creel limits at all ponds on post have changed and there is a price increase for post hunting and fishing permits. In all, there are 15 changes.

"The open house is a one-stop shop for information about hunting, fishing and recreation on post," said Brittany Beadle, outdoor recreation specialist with the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. "Whether people are new to Fort Benning or have been stationed at Fort Benning awhile, they are invited."

There will be a hunting swap meet, where participants can buy used hunting gear from other hunters, from 3 to 5 p.m.

From 5 to 8:30 p.m., there will be presentations about the new hunting and fishing rules and regulations, stocking of ponds, harvesting statistics from 2008, and U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit zero days, information about ponds and picnic areas at Fort Benning and an introduction to the 2009 post hunting map.

There will also be an archery shoot, air gun shoot, a virtual hunting and fishing game and casting lessons.

No registration is required, admission is free and there will be free refreshments. For more information, call 706-545-9636 or go to www.benningmwr.com/odr-openhouse.php.

Long Drive: Post champion to compete nationally

Ryan Hixson won the finals with a drive of 367 yards.

Entrants can purchase six golf balls for $10 at the Fort Benning tournament and can purchase as many as they want, as long as they drive them within the event time limit.

Cliff said he expects to see at least 40 golfers at the championship. In the past, he has seen golfers from Alabama, Tennessee, Kentucky and Georgia compete in the tournament. And if some golfers don't win at the Fort Benning tournament, they can go to 19 other sites that will host local tournaments, including Fort McPherson, Ga., and Fort Gordon, Ga.

Second-place finishers in the Fort Benning contest will receive a $200 gift certificate from the pro shop and third place will receive a $100 certificate.

Anyone who is a valid military ID cardholder and is 18 and older can participate in the tournament. Entrants must fill out a registration form either before the event or the day of the event.

For more information or to get a registration form, call 706-687-1940 or stop by the golf course.

Bender: Says football is game of strategy, planning practice, practice and practice some more."

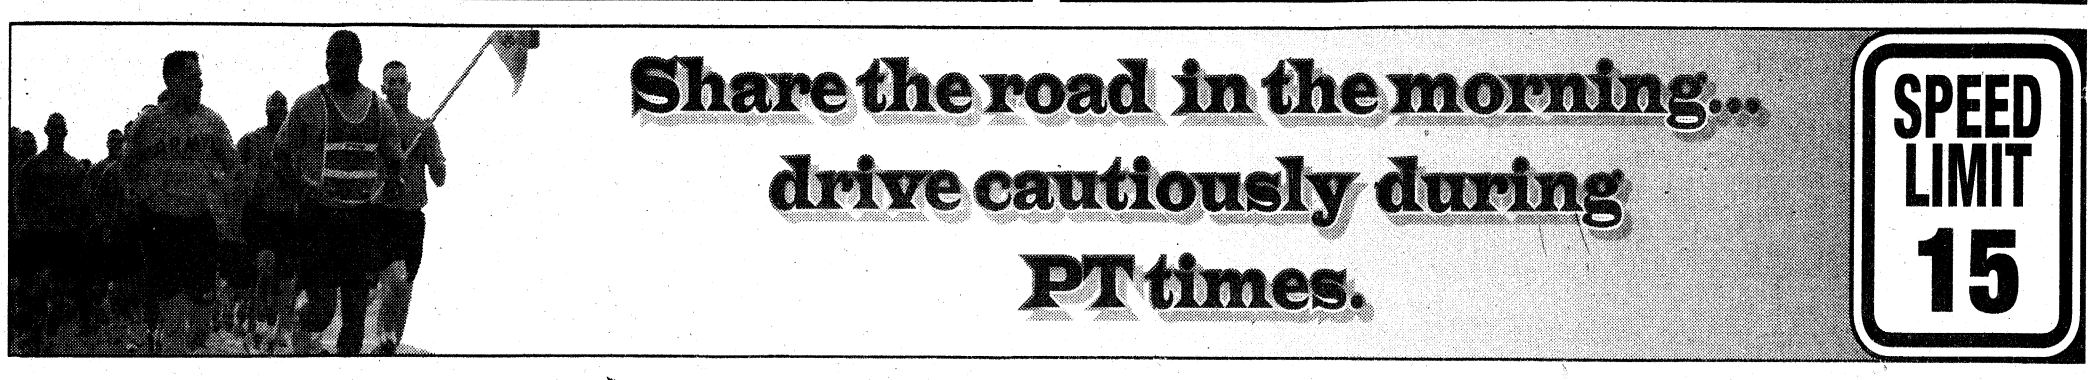
Bender has never coached before, but has played flag football in the intramural league since 2005. He said he began coaching because he wanted a different perspective on the game and he wanted to lead the team.

Bender said much like chess, football is a game of strategy and planning.

"The key to success in football is to always have a plan. If you don't have a plan, you won't get very far," he said.

Planning pertains to players, too, he said.

"I tell my players to stay in their zones and don't overcommit because when people are all over the field, that's where mistakes are made," he said. "I want players to know their positions, plays and the playbook."



Win or lose, Bender stays positive because he said a team is only as strong as its leader. And he expects his team to have the same positive attitude during every game.

The Gators competed in the Preseason Flag Football Commander's Cup Championship this week.

"We are going to go out on the field this season and give it all we have," Bender said.

Favretastic or Favreageddon?

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Well, I said I wouldn't mention the "F" word until something concrete happened, so now I can say it — Favre.

Former Green Bay Packers and New York Jets quarterback Brett Favre is now a Minnesota Viking. Favre signed a two-year deal with the Vikings Tuesday reported to be worth $12 million this year with the option of a second year for $13 million.

As a die hard Vikings fan I am ecstatic, but as a journalist I am leery and a little pessimistic.

On one hand I see the addition to the team as filling the Vikings' most glaring need — the quarterback position. But, I wonder how many games the king of waffling will play before he re-retires for the gazillionth time, leaving the Vikings in the same quandary before signing Favre.

Favre brings a lot to the table for the Vikings and will improve their offense immediately. Favre turns 40 in October, but he is still a better option at 40 than nine-year perennial backup Sage Rosenfels or fourth-year quarterback and former starter Tavaris Jackson.

Other than the contract cost, what will the Vikings pay for adding Favre to their roster?

The Vikings' courtship of Favre began as soon as he announced his retirement from the Jets and lasted the entire summer culminating in a resounding, "No, I am not coming out of retirement."

With his answer in mind, Vikings coach Brad Childress said he was "closing the door" on Favre becoming a Viking and was continuing with his quarterback competition between Rosenfels and Jackson for the starting job.

Monday, all that changed with Childress' call to Favre — Tuesday, Favre was a Viking. So, what kind of confidence and trust will Rosenfels and Jackson have in the coach and management? And, what about the players who went through the rigors of training camp while Favre was at home in Mississippi taking it easy? How will they feel about letting Favre just walk into practice and be immediately anointed the starting quarterback?

On the surface the Vikings will benefit from the signing, but I believe some trust issues will resurface throughout the season. Who is to say Favre won't retire again if he is injured during the season?

Many may look at his unretiring as damaging his legacy, but that is hogwash. A legacy is built by accomplishment, not by who you play for. Favre established his legacy and has an opportunity to add to it — and I hope he does, with another Super Bowl victory.

What irony — a former Packer bringing the trophy named after the legendary Packers coach, Vince Lombardi, to archrival Minnesota. I have a feeling Favre's name would be Mudd in cheeseland.

I can't wait for the season to begin, but like every year, I will reserve judgment whether signing Favre was a good idea — or not.

It could be the beginning of a Favretastic season for the Vikings, or it could be the beginning of the end — Favreageddon — for an otherwise cohesive Vikings team.

You never know — but that's why they play the game.

Gators: Shut out Rock Force, 18-0

quarterback Marcus Mickens threw a 25-yard touchdown pass, giving the Gators a 12-0 lead.

The Gators scored on another touchdown pass from Mickens to Arenteanis Adams from Rock Force's 10-yard line in the final plays of the first half. With a failed one-point conversion, the Gators led 18-0.

Both teams played to a scoreless stalemate in the second half as the Gators held on for the win.

"We came out organized, my quarterbacks read their defense and changed when they had to and my players executed (the plays)," said Gators' coach Kyle Bender. "Before the game, I told the players to know the plays and positions and stay in their zones. Our defense pretty much blanketed the other team and shut them down."

Gator Marcus Griffin said his team played how they practiced.

"As long as we learn from our mistakes in each game, we can stay in this championship," he said.

The Gators played 598th Maintenance Company Wednesday in the second game in the winner's bracket and lost 7-6.

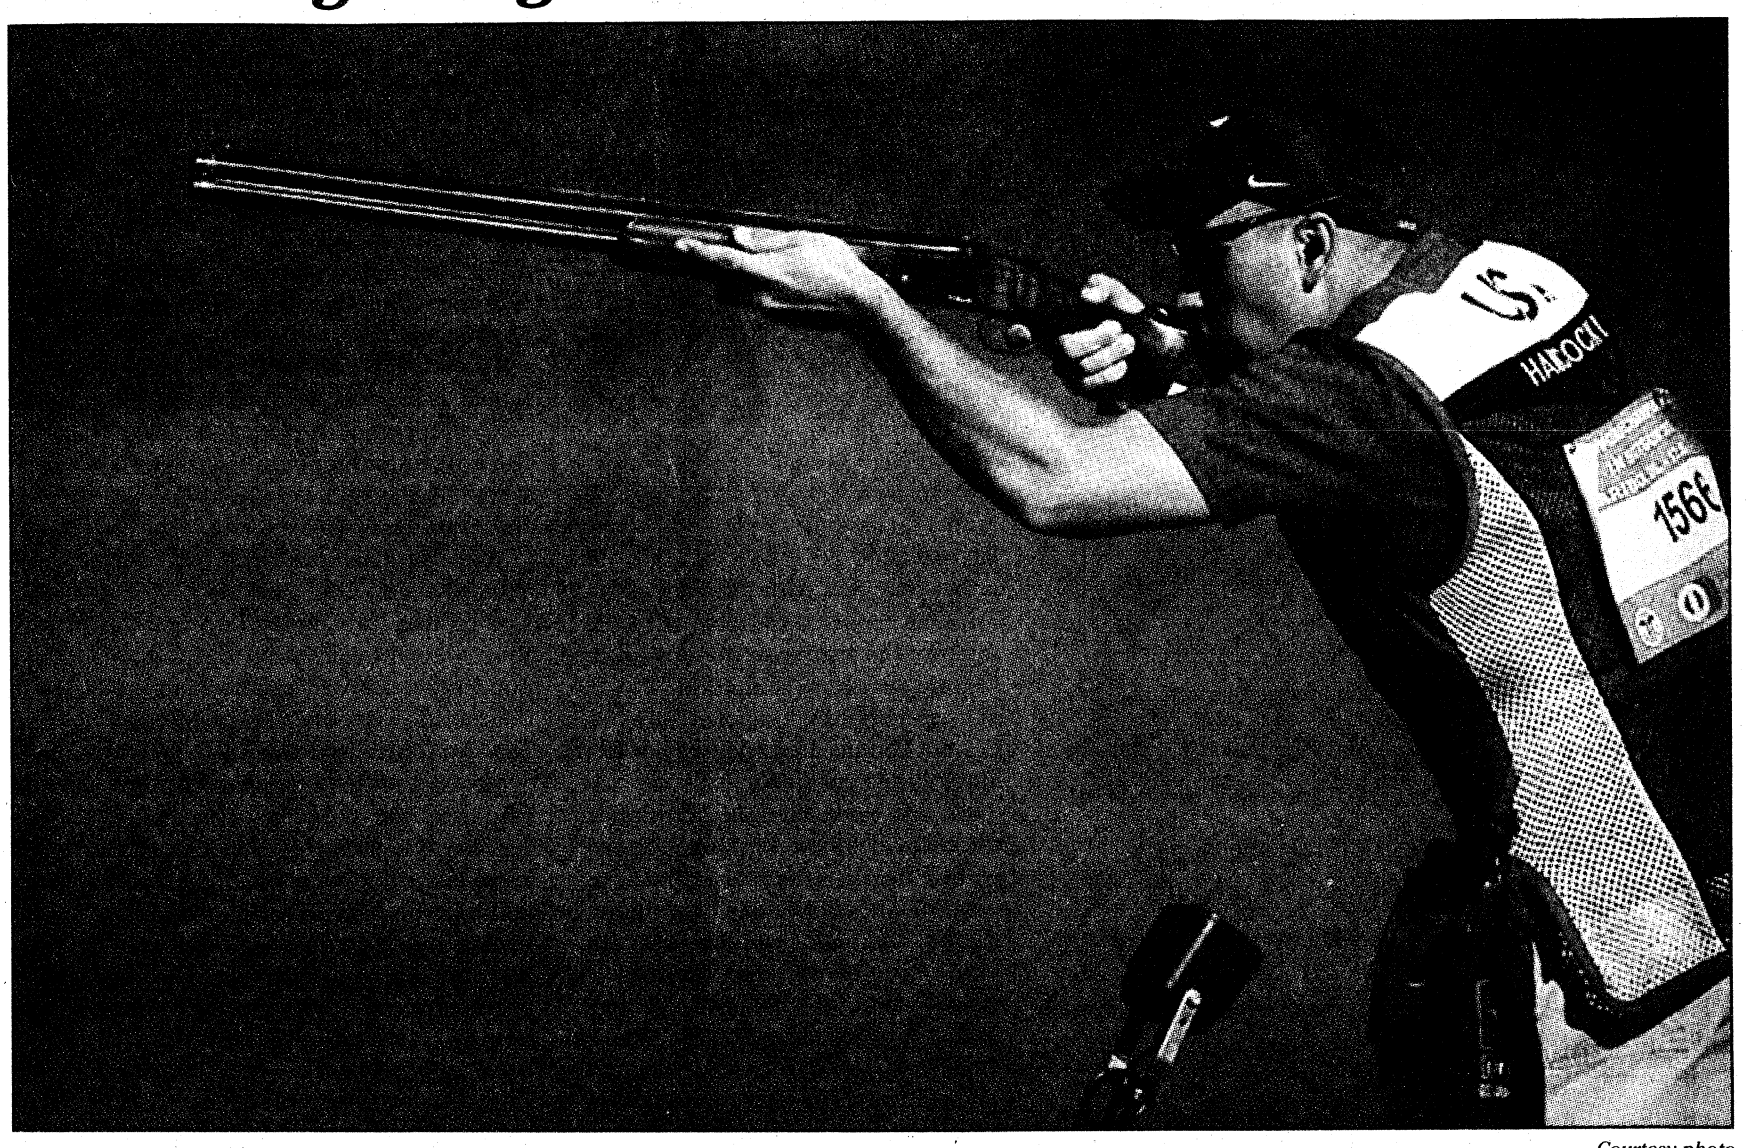
USAMU Soldier takes silver

Michael Molinaro
USAMU PAO



U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Soldier SPC Jeff Holguin took home a silver medal Aug. 13 in Men's Double Trap at the 2009 International Sport Shooting Federation Shotgun World Championships in Maribor, Slovenia.

Holguin hit 144 out of a possible 150 targets in the qualification round and scored a 42 in the finals, missing out on the gold medal by four targets to Italy's Francesco D'Aniello, the 2008 Olympic silver medalist.

Holguin, a 2008 Olympian, was joined in the final round by USAMU teammates SSG Josh Richmond and SGT Glenn Eller, the 2008 Olympic gold medalist, giving the Army three competitors to earn a berth in the final round of six. Eller finished fourth in the world and Richmond followed his comrade in fifth place.

The USAMU Soldiers' solid performance enabled the U.S. team to set a new world record and take home the gold medal in the team portion of the championship.

Soldier wins gold at World Championships

USAMU PAO

U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit Soldier SPC Vincent Hancock reigned over the entire field of competitors Sunday and won the gold medal in Men's Skeet at the 2009 International Sport Shooting Federation Shotgun World Championships in Maribor, Slovenia. The victory came exactly one year to the day after Hancock won a gold medal at the 2008 Summer Olympics in Beijing.

Hancock, the world and Olympic record-holder, hit 149 out of a possible 150 targets in the qualification round and scored a perfect 25 in the finals, foiling the efforts of those chasing him for the gold, including teammate SFC Shawn Dulohery, who also earned a berth in the final round of six competitors and finished in fourth place overall.

"It was great," Hancock said. "It felt like the old me. It had been a long time coming since the Olympics."

Hancock and Dulohery, along with U.S. teammate Frank Thompson, made up the gold medal-winning men's team, setting a world record with a score of 366 out of 375 in the process.

USAMU produced two Olympic gold medalists in 2008 and, including silver medalist SPC Jeff Holguin in Men's Double Trap, now has two medalists at this year's World Championships.

Deployment fair takes care of Soldiers, families

SPC Ben Hutto

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Cradling his 2-month-old son, SPC Michael Bradberry said his biggest concern when he deploys in October is that his family is taken care of.

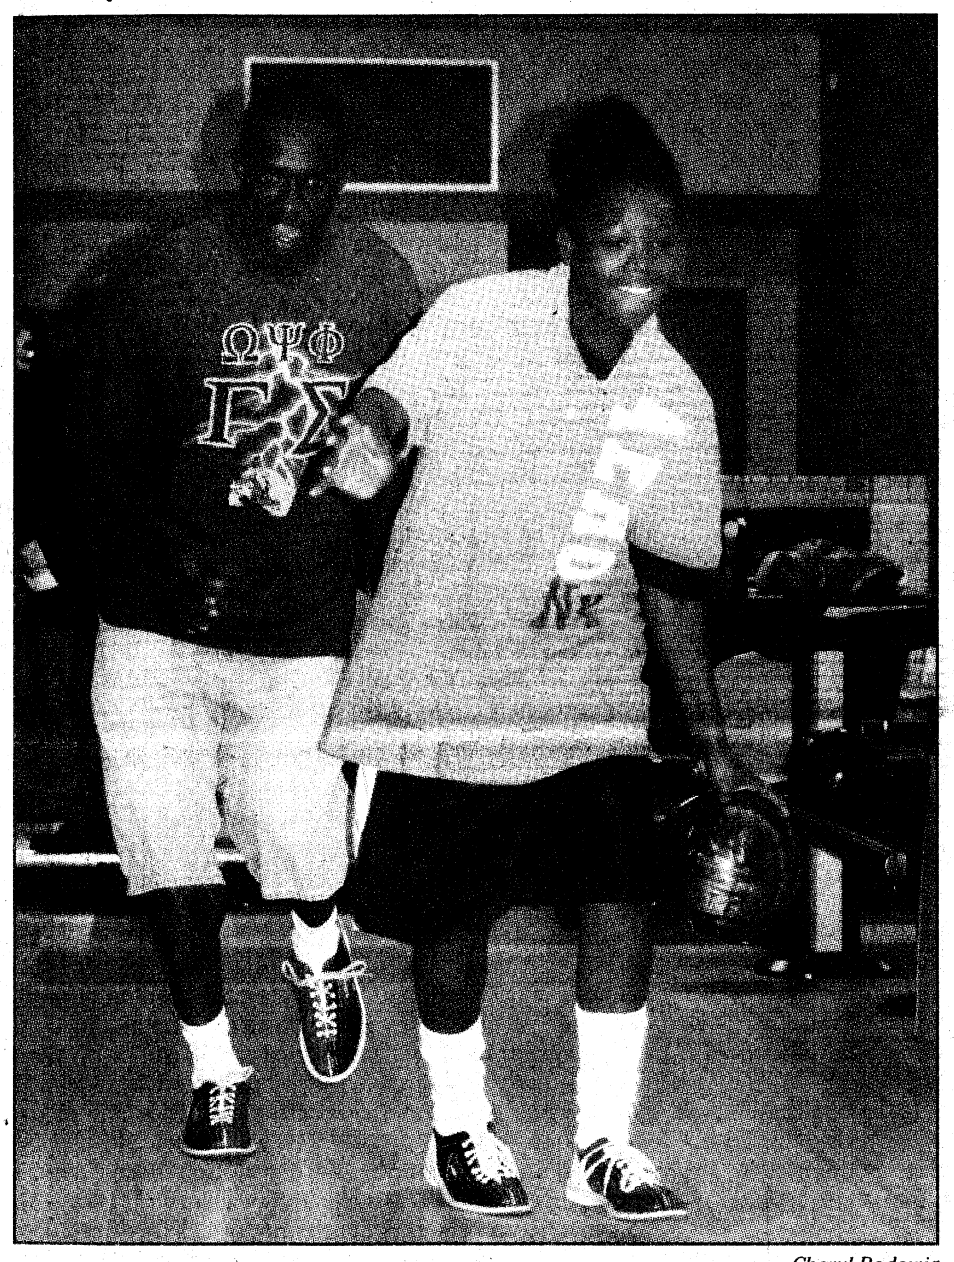
This concern is what brought Bradberry and his family to the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team's deployment fair at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Tuesday.

Bradberry has two children and wife Rebecca is new to the military lifestyle. Bradberry will deploy just shy of the couple's first wedding anniversary.

"This is the first time we will be apart since we've been married," said Bradberry, who has deployed two times previously. I want to get her situated so that when I'm away I feel comfortable knowing my wife, son and daughter are taken care of."

Families who came to the brigade fair learned about programs like Army Community Service, Military Family Life Consultants and Family Advocacy. Representatives from the Muscogee and Russell County school districts answered questions about enrolling students and available programs. Several booths provided information about United Services Organizations, Parent-to-Parent, the Army Volunteer Corps and other programs.

Katrien Smith, a new Army spouse and native of Belgium, said she came to the fair to learn more about the Army lifestyle.



"I came out here to get a general idea," Smith said. "When something happens, and stuff always happens, that's what I've been told, this information gives you a place to start."

1SG Mario Cirinese, rear detachment sergeant major for the brigade, said the goal of the fair was to get as much information to families as possible.

A lot of younger Soldier' spouses don't know about all the programs available, said Cirinese, a married father of two who's been deployed three times in the last eight years. "So we are pushing information down to those who wouldn't normally get it," he said.

Approximately 4,000 troops will deploy to Iraq when the 3rd HBCT departs for a yearlong deployment in October.

Big Brothers Big Sisters 'makes a difference'

Cheryl Rodewig

Twelve-year-old Jessie Harper aims for a spare while SPC Sanqwey Walker watches. Walker has mentored Harper for the past year through the Big Brothers Big Sisters program. Volunteers or parents interested in enrolling their children in the program should call 706-327-3760.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

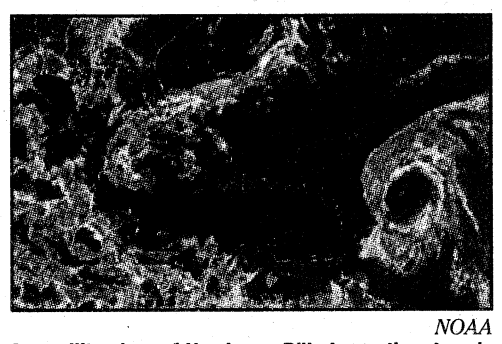
After 20 years of serving the valley area, Big Brothers Big Sisters is concentrating much of its efforts on Fort Benning, thanks to a $20,000 grant that will link military children and Soldiers with "Bigs" and "Littles" in the community.

The grant will allow the nonprofit organization to quadruple the number of military children it serves, said Sally Gowins, special programs and volunteer recruitment coordinator.

Gowins said she is currently looking for active-duty Soldiers and children of deployed parents to plug into the program.

"We see the need," she said. "I'm a military wife myself, and we see how hard it is for children to adjust to having a parent gone. We just want to provide whatever support we can to the troops, considering what sacrifices and dedication they've given to us as a nation."

Active-duty volunteers are also an important part of the program because they provide a positive influence in a child's life and strengthen the ties between the Army community and the local civilian community, Gowins said.



"You're already a great role model in serving your country, and then to extend that service and help kids in the community, I think that's amazing," she said.

So far, Soldiers have stepped up, said Gowins, who has signed on at least 15 military volunteers since they received the grant this spring.

It's especially helpful to have male Soldiers volunteer, she said, because there is always a waiting list for boys who need to be paired with a big brother.

SPC Sanqwey Walker started volunteering as a "Big" last year. That's when he met 12-year-old Jessie Harper.

A satellite view of Hurricane Bill shows the storm's advance toward the U.S. coastline Wednesday.

Preparation key to riding out hurricane season

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

The tropics are firing up — so Fort Benning officials are reminding community members to stay vigilant as the most active part of hurricane season approaches.

Tropical Depression Ana was loosely organized over the Caribbean but forecast to enter the eastern Gulf of Mexico by the end of the week, while Bill intensified into a major hurricane Tuesday night and remains a threat to the East Coast and Bermuda, according to various news reports. Earlier this week, Tropical Storm Claudette became the first named storm to hit the U.S. mainland this year when it came ashore over the Florida Panhandle.

"Situational awareness is important for Soldiers and their families in order to avoid finding themselves trapped or in an unsafe environment at the onset of a major storm," said Jeff Shuck, chief of installation plans and operations at Fort Benning. "This speaks to proper preparation ... Prepare yourself and your family now. The time to prepare for natural disaster is not during the storm itself."

The Atlantic hurricane season officially runs from June 1 to Nov. 30, but early to mid-September is considered the peak, according to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. The period between August and October accounts for 78 percent of tropical storms, 87 percent minor hurricanes (categories 1 and 2), and 96 percent of major storms (categories 3, 4 and 5).

Fort Benning has a standing operational plan and conducts a review with key post agencies at the beginning of each season, said Kerry Johnson, chief of the installation's plans section. Officials also sponsor site visits from partners at other installations, including Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., which is subject to mandatory evacuations.

He said the last storm to have a major impact on Fort Benning property was Hurricane Ivan in 2004. It downed trees, knocked out power and left minor building damage on Main Post. Ivan also caused significant damage to 6th Ranger Training Battalion facilities at Eglin and the Destin Recreation Center.

Although hurricanes tend to lose their punch over land, storms can still wreak havoc on Fort Benning and the Chattahoochee Valley area, Johnson said.

"Depending upon the strength and category of the storm after making landfall,

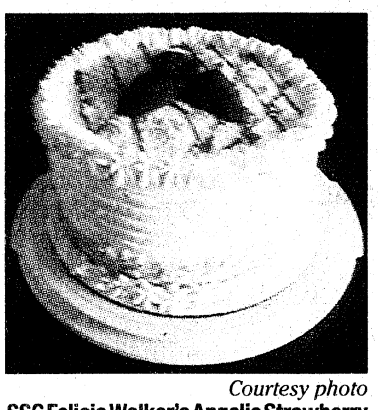
NCO bakes cakes, cupcakes to finance adoption

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

It all started with a third generation secret recipe for a 7UP pound cake.



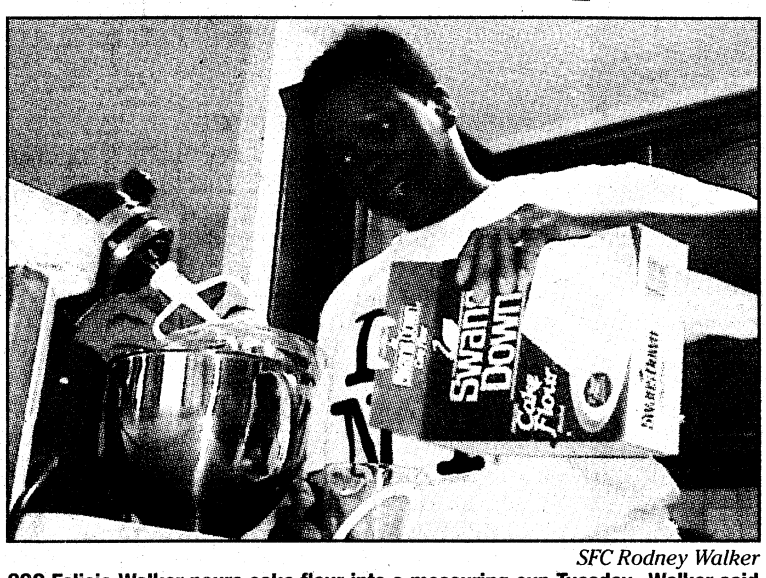
"I took one bite, and I was like, 'Wow, this is amazing,'" said SSG Felicia Walker, who learned the recipe from her mother-in-law a year ago. "It just takes you back to childhood. This is something that can't be just within our family. Everyone needs to know about this."

Walker named the confection the Hallelujah 7UP Pound Cake — "because when you taste it, you will say hallelujah" — and it became the inspiration for Simply Delectable Cakes.

Simply Delectable Cakes, Walker's hobby and passion, she said, offers a variety of cakes and cupcakes with different "signature" icings and fillings. Walker and her husband, SFC Rodney Walker, use the proceeds to help fund their effort to adopt a child.

The couple began raising money last year during Thanksgiving and Christmas.

"I made anywhere from 150 to 200 cakes, and everyone just really enjoyed it," Walker said. "And I found it a pleasure and exciting to be baking for their holiday family dinners."



Courtesy photo

SSG Felicia Walker's Angelic Strawberry Lemon Meringue won first place in the Warrior Transition Battalion's bake off.

Walker began to build a clientele of friends and acquaintances who appreciated her unique brand of culinary creativity.

Walker's creations are "the best cakes I have ever had," said SSG Nadia Johnson, who recalls a seven-layer strawberry birthday cake, which inspired more than one person to ask Johnson where she got such a unique cake.

SFC Rodney Walker

SSG Felicia Walker pours cake flour into a measuring cup Tuesday. Walker said she always uses Swans Down because it was recommended by her mother-in-law. "'Use that one, nothing else,' that's what I was told," she said.

"She's so creative: flavor, texture, appearance, everything," Johnson said. "All the cakes I've tasted from her are different. Once you taste one, you'll want another one. You'll want to see what else she can do."

When Walker cooks in the kitchen, she lets her creativity flow, she said.

She can make miniature cakes, cupcakes or large cakes to feed a crowd. She can make her confections low calorie or sugar-free and she's working on an organic cake. If someone wants a specific decoration in the icing, she can do that, too. She even adds a touch of "whimsy" to the boxes by painting stenciled designs on them, she said. But her creativity flows freest when it comes to layers.

Cakes: Remain hobby

"I'm always thinking outside the box," she said. "It's not just cake and icing. It's a total experience. It's something that your taste buds will probably jump up and slap you and say 'Where have you been all my life?' If you love chocolate cake, it's not going to just be a chocolate cake; it's going to be a chocolate experience. It's going to be layers on layers. You're going to have maybe a chocolate ganache or a chocolate cream. You have to taste it to believe it."

Walker said clients can customize their desserts. If the flavors are a winning combination, there just might be a new cake on the menu named after the person who inspired the idea, she said.

Walker's cakes, including Intoxicating Double Rum, Blissful Buttermilk and — the winner of the Warrior Transition Battalion's bake-off in May — Angelic Strawberry Lemon Meringue, generally range from $15 to $40. And all of that goes toward offsetting the costs associated with adoption, said Walker, who hopes to adopt a girl first and a boy in a few years.

Walker also said she wants to get out the message that adoption is an option.

"I know a lot of people who want to adopt, but they don't have $20,000 to $50,000 to do it," Walker said.

"The way we did it was we stayed persistent and dedicated, and we knew without a shadow of a doubt that we would be providing a life for a child who probably wouldn't get a second chance. We are truly blessed and excited about it. And I look forward to expanding and growing (Simply Delectable Cakes) into a business."

For now, her cake baking is still a hobby, but someday, Walker said, she hopes it will be more.

"My husband and I plan to retire in this area, so look for us soon," she said.

For more information about Simply Delectable Cakes or about how to adopt through fostering, contact Walker at felicia300@bellsouth.net.

Storms: Require awareness

the worst case is high winds, heavy rain, damaging hail, possible tornadoes and in some cases widespread flooding due to the amount of rainfall," he said. "Usually, the main threat during hurricanes to us is the tornadoes that sometimes arise from hurricanes making landfall."

Johnson said Fort Benning relies on the Lawson Weather Notification System to declare conditions of readiness when hurricanes and tropical storms approach.

The post also fields a giant voice system to widely disseminate information over loudspeakers, he said. This system is currently being used for tornado warnings only but will allow for additional warnings in the near future as the installation buys more of the poles and speakers that will eliminate remaining sound gaps.

He said other means for warnings include e-mails, hurricane operations orders and the Communicator NXT, a mass notification system that can contact telephone and fax numbers, e-mail addresses and BlackBerrys.

In the event of a hurricane, Fort Benning has partnerships with local and federal agencies to provide relief and support, Shuck said.

"Preparation is always key to self-assistance during disaster. In being prepared, you can better assist the installation in recovery efforts," he said. "Equally important to preparation is awareness. Being self-aware and environmentally aware of developing conditions allows yourself and your family to execute your preparations and disaster plans in a timely fashion."

Program: Provides mentors

Harper is a middle schooler who enjoys sports, especially basketball. For Walker, that was a perfect fit, said the 352nd Engineer Company Soldier.

The "brothers" will celebrate their one-year anniversary this month. In the past year, they have spent time bowling, playing ball, swimming, riding go karts and working on school assignments.

"Some of the things he's taken me to I've never done before," Jessie said. "I like being in the program and getting out of the house. It's been fun. If I need help, he'll try to help me. And at school, he tries to keep me out of trouble."

Walker said he understands the importance of positive role models because of his own childhood, spent in some "rough" apartment complexes without a father. It was volunteer groups that kept him out of trouble, he said, and that's why he joined Big Brothers Big Sisters.

> "...I knew I had a chance to connect. I have an opportunity now to be a big brother to somebody."
> — SPC Sanqwey Walker

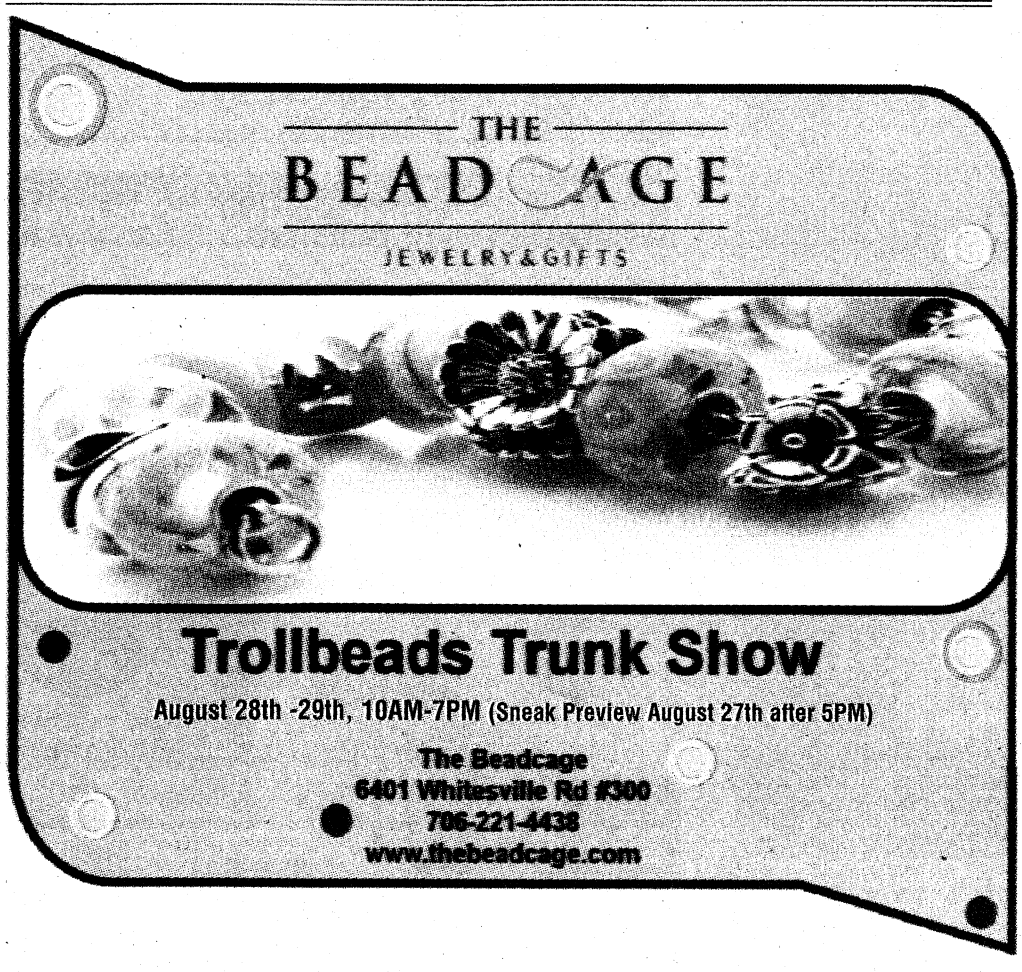
"It was an opportunity," Walker said.

"I figured I didn't have anything to do with my spare time and I like doing fun things so I gave it a try. I love volunteering. When I met Jessie — personality and everything he liked to do — I knew I had a chance to connect. I have an opportunity now to be a big brother to somebody."



Walker said he tries to teach Jessie Army values like integrity and leadership and share lessons from his own life experiences. Jessie has started doing better in school, and Walker continues to reward good grades and good behavior with special activities.

Jessie said he enjoys having a "Big" who calls him and takes him out somewhere for a game or a bite to eat.

"I like having a big brother," he said. "It makes a difference to me."

Gowins' goal for the grant is to match at least 50 active-duty Soldiers and at least 25 children with a deployed parent by the end of the year.

With the needs of the children on one side and the willingness and generosity of the Soldiers on the other, she has no doubt she will meet that goal, she said.

Surviving potholes, claims process

CPT Robert J. Rauckhorst Jr.
OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE

Fort Benning landscape is dotted not only by trees, but by potholes in every direction, as far as the eye can see. No matter where you are — driving a car, riding a bike, walking on a sidewalk, or riding on a golf cart path at the Fort Benning Golf Course — it is hard to miss them.

Wikipedia defines potholes as "a type of disruption in the surface of a roadway where a portion of the road material has broken away, leaving a hole." Potholes form because changes in weather and motor vehicle traffic cause stress and fatigue forming cracks in the surface of the road. These cracks allow water and moisture to penetrate through the road to the soil. Changes in weather cause the water in the soil to expand and contract, putting more stress on the cracked pavement. Over time, the added stress, together with motor vehicle traffic, cause pieces of the pavement to break away from the roadway, creating a pothole. Since there are potholes on Fort Benning, it is a good idea for drivers to know how the U.S. Army Claims Service deals with claims for pothole damage on Fort Benning.

Under the Personnel Claims Act, damage to automobiles caused by potholes isn't compensable generally by the U.S. Army Claims Service, according to DA PAM 27-62, 11-5c (3) and DA PAM 27-67, 11-5c (3)(j).

Generally, potholes are not caused by an omission or negligent act of a government employee. As such, the government is not responsible for damage to automobiles caused by potholes.

However, there may be very limited and specific circumstances where the U.S. Army Claims Service may consider compensation for damage caused by a pothole.

Since it is likely the U.S. Army Claims Service will not compensate individuals for damage to their automobiles caused by potholes on Fort Benning, I have a few suggestions to help you navigate the pothole minefields and avoid damaging your automobile:

• Drive slowly. If you hit a pothole at a slower speed, it is likely that your car will sustain less damage, if any at all, than if you hit it at a higher speed. Hitting a pothole at a high rate of speed can damage tires, wheels, suspension, shocks and struts.

• Leave plenty of space between your vehicle and the vehicle in front of you. Leaving space between vehicles will help you spot potholes early enough to avoid hitting them.

• Be careful of puddles. If there is a puddle of water on the surface of the roadway, chances are good that there is a pothole lurking beneath.

• Maintain proper tire pressure. Proper tire pressure will help protect your wheels and tires from sustaining damage from hitting a pothole.

•Stay alert. An alert driver is more likely to spot a pothole in enough time to avoid hitting it. Drivers should avoid sending text messages, and making cell phone calls, unless using a hands-free device, which is mandated on Fort Benning, or engaging in activities that take their primary focus off driving their automobile.

No matter how carefully you drive your automobile, chances are good that you will encounter potholes on Fort Benning.

However, if you stay alert and follow the suggestions above, you might avoid the potholes and potential damage to your automobile.

Focus steers one to life's successes

Chaplain (LTC) Lyn Stike
DEPUTY GARRISON CHAPLAIN

Talk about pressure. On Day Six of the ill-fated Apollo 13 mission, the astronauts needed to correct their course. If they failed, they'd never return to Earth.

To save power, they shut down the on-board computer that steered their spacecraft. The astronauts needed to conduct a 39-second burn of the main engines. Somehow they had to steer themselves back on course. But how?

Jim Lovell knew that if they could just keep their eyes on a fixed point in space, they could steer manually. Their focal point turned out to be their destination — Earth.

So for 39 agonizing seconds, Lovell kept his focus on earth and saved the lives of himself and his crewmates.

Success in life often hinges on maintaining a fixed focus.

That's why every building needs a blueprint, and every vision needs a clear strategy. Unless you keep focused, you'll become distracted by lesser priorities, and fail to reach your long-term goals.

Over three centuries ago, a preacher by the name of Habakkuk had a vision of the future, he was told in Chapter 1, Verse 2, to write it down "in large, clear letters on a tablet, so that a runner (could) read it and tell (others)."

He was reminded that the vision wouldn't happen instantly, but would slowly and steadily come into focus.

By writing the vision on a tablet, Habakkuk had something that would realign his focus and renew his faith as time passed.

What are your long-range goals?

Whether you're aiming for that next promotion, trying to balance your budget or working toward a college degree, stay focused on your goal. It may not happen overnight but you'll reach it if you keep after it, one day at a time.
