Infantry Soldiers strive to earn EIB

Cheryl Rodewig

SGT Richard Crawford tries to fix a weapon malfunction Tuesday with his remaining time at a station on the traffic control point, the last of three lanes that Soldiers had to complete Tuesday through Thursday to earn their Expert Infantryman Badge.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

More than 300 Soldiers gathered Monday hoping to earn their Expert Infantryman Badge. By the end of the day, which included a physical fitness test and day and night land navigation, fewer than 200 were left standing.

By the end of the week, less than half of the original 317 will succeed in earning the badge, said SGM Derek McCrea, operations sergeant major for the 197th Infantry Brigade

"It's a very challenging badge to earn," McCrea said. "The Expert Infantryman Badge is the sign of an expert Infantry Soldier. They're not just able to accomplish (Infantry) tasks; they are able to accomplish those tasks to a high standard in a stressful environment. The NCOs who earn their EIB are out there grading the test, and they're going to grade you to standard. You have to do it right."

McCrea said it took him four

New FM details COIN tactics

A new field manual for implementation will provide Army leaders fundamental information related to tactical counterinsurgency operations, said MAJ Michael Mulherin, a doctrine writer in the Doctrine and Collective Training Division with Fort Benning's Combined Arms and Tactics Directorate.

FM 3-24 deals with counterinsurgency operations at the division level and higher.

The Infantry School saw a need for more guidance, Mulherin said, so FMI 3-24.2, which focuses on brigade level and below — where the rubber meets the road — was created.

The manual is in its final review before publication in May but was released to the Army March 3.

"It's important information we want to get out now," Mulherin said. "Based on our lessons learned from our past counterinsurgency experiences — especially in the last eight years of the Global War on Terrorism — it gives a comprehensive approach to operations that will help, especially at the battalion and company level, in their planning and approach."

In creating the manual, writers looked at both successful and unsuccessful operations in recent and historic conflicts, said Arthur Durante, acting chief of Doctrine and Collective Training Division.

"Counterinsurgency is a complex issue. There are a lot of different points of view," Durante said. "We brought all of them together, analyzed them and took the best of them to make this field manual.

"Our evaluation of many, many different counterinsurgency efforts by many, many armies is that the successful ones

Post names Drill Sergeant of the Year

Cheryl Rodewig

SSG Michael Johnston assembles one of three weapons whose parts were mixed inside the same bag. This was one of four tasks the NCOs completed March 24 on Sand Hill, hoping to earn the title of Drill Sergeant of the Year.

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

When SSG Michael Johnston volunteered to become a drill sergeant, it was his way of "completing the cycle," he said.

"When I came in, I had a really squared away drill sergeant, Drill Sergeant Sheare, and my goal was to be just like him," Johnston said. "He was that one guy who was with us all the time. I don't ever remember him going home. I don't think I ever saw him mess up. He was on the ball, physically fit, mentally tough and he knew exactly how to train the Soldiers."

Now, Johnston wants to mirror his former drill sergeant.

"It's my turn to instill those standards he put into me, the ways of discipline, the ways he motivated me," he said. "I want to give that back to somebody else exactly the way he gave it to me."

Becoming Drill Sergeant of the Year for Fort Benning is just part of that. He completed several tasks last week, competing against three other top drill sergeants on Sand Hill. After earning the highest score, he was named Drill Sergeant of the Year.

Johnston said the news was a surprise, but he's proud to represent his unit, C Company, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, and Fort Benning at the TRADOC-level competition in June.

Johnston's company commander, CPT Jordan Garrett, said hearing Johnston won was no surprise at all.

"He's without a doubt my best drill sergeant — one of those guys you can give a task to and you don't have to check up on him; the job will get done," Garrett said.

> "When I came in, I had a really squared away drill sergeant. ... It's my turn to instill those standards he put into me."
> — SSG Michael Johnston

Johnston competed in the brigade-level competition last year and earned the highest score against drill sergeants with much more experience, Garrett said. He also holds his Soldiers to the same high standards he holds himself, making sure they leave here confident and equipped for their units.

SFC Billy Way, C Co. senior drill sergeant, summed it up in one word: leadership

"Leading by example, getting on the ground with the privates, showing what right looks like, just being there," Way said. "Your troops ... see you as the Army when they first get here. Whatever you possess and show them, that's what they're going to get out of the Army."

That's why Johnston puts in so much time with his platoon, working late and sometimes coming in on days off, Way said.

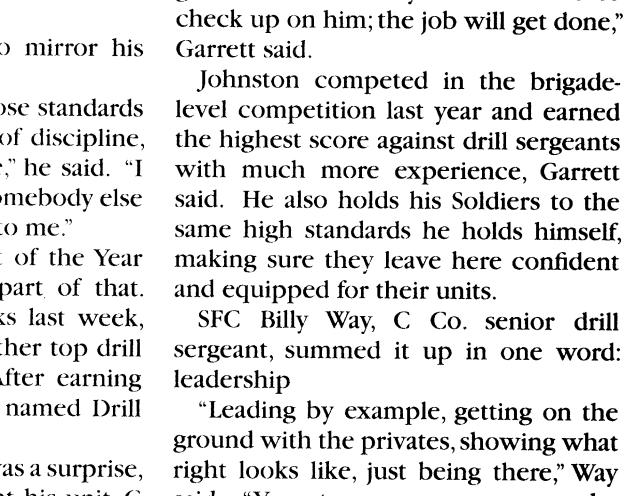
Soldiers receive valorous awards

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET



Three Soldiers received medals for valor Monday at the Airborne Walk. The Soldiers earned the awards for gallantry in action during the Battle of Wanat July 13 while deployed to Afghanistan.

CPT Matthew Myer and SGT Michael Denton received Silver Stars and SFC David Dzwik received a Bronze Star with "V" device from Fort Benning's Commanding General MG Michael Barbero.

During the Battle of Wanat, nine Soldiers with C Company, 2nd Battalion (Airborne), 503rd Infantry Regiment, 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team, died and 27 were wounded when an estimated 200 insurgents attacked a vehicle patrol base near the village of Wanat in the Hindu Kush Mountains near the Pakistan border. The platoon-sized element withstood a coordinated enemy assault of rocket-propelled grenades and effective small arms fire from numerous concealed fighting positions for more than four hours, according to the narrative of Myer's Silver Star award.

Col. Bill Ostlund, the 75th Ranger Regiment's deputy commander, commanded the 2nd Battalion (Airborne), 503rd Infantry — The Rock — during the unit's 15-month deployment. He told the crowd gathered for the award ceremony how the Soldiers lived in a very rugged, austere, underdeveloped and contested mountainous

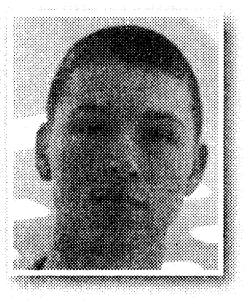
OPINION

VARIOUS VOICES

What are the challenges facing military children?

You have to meet new people. If your mom or dad comes home and tells you that you have to move to a new place, then you have to get up and go. You have to keep adjusting.

— Erlisha Roach
Seventh-grader



Often, with the moves, they have to adjust to a new school, community, neighborhood and friends. I know that's been one of the biggest challenges for my children.

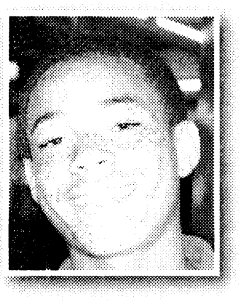
— Roxanne Govea
Family member

The separation from their parents when they deploy or go into the field. I think that's what my kids suffered the most when they were little.

— SSG Jonathan Hernandez
203rd Brigade Support Battalion

I have a baby on the way, and I guess not seeing him for the first year will be a challenge. I'm barely going to be here for the birth, and then I have to leave. The baby is due the same day I'm set to deploy.

— SPC Brian Pruett
2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment



I spent 30 years in the Navy, and all three of my children grew up in it. We moved every three years, but they said they were glad they got to see so much of the world and make so many friends.

— CPO(R) Everett Wood
Ideal, Ga.

I don't have kids myself, but probably being away from their parents is a challenge.

— SPC Sarah Lopez
Brigade Special Troops Battalion

Leaving one place and moving to another is a challenge. It can be hard for some people to make new friends, but it's not too hard for me. I've moved six times in the last four or five years.

Proud to be an Army brat

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

"Army brat!" I remember being called that all the time when I was a child and at the time I took offense. But, as I grew older I embraced the term with pride.

While we celebrate the Month of the Military Child this month, we should keep in mind that unless you have been an Army Brat or military child, it is difficult to understand the challenges and sacrifices that face military children, even if you are a military parent. The perspective is a little different.

Fortunately, I had the opportunity to be both — a military child and a Soldier with military children.

My children had an advantage. With every twist and turn, I was able to sympathize with them and understand the challenges they faced because in most instances — I had been there.

I knew the feeling of being separated from a parent and not knowing what tomorrow might bring.

When I left Kelley Hill for Saudi Arabia, I saw the looks on my children's faces and remembered the day my father left the Columbus airport for Vietnam — I felt their pain, and I understood.

But separation from a parent, and learning how to deal with it, is only one of many challenges facing military children.

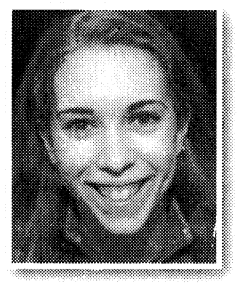
I cannot remember how many moves we made when I was a child but I know it seemed as if every one or two years I was in a new place, in a new school, making new friends.

Just about the time I felt comfortable and secure with my environment it was time to move again — but I managed, as did my sister and brothers because we had great parents.

It was different for us kids because neither my mother nor father had been a military child, but I know they tried to understand what it was like for us.

I didn't realize until much later in life what the effects of moving so many times would have on how I developed as an adult. Coupled with joining the military at 18, I continued moving from place to place for almost 38 years of my life.

Today, when people talk to me about someone they have known their entire lives, I can only talk about who I knew at different points in time. It seems to be a recurring theme with adults who were once military children.



Military children today face the same types of challenges and sacrifices I did a long time ago, but I would not trade those experiences for anything — it helped make me the person I am today.

While the challenges were great, I can also say being a military child was one of the best experiences of my life.

Bad driver? Don't be that person

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

I have a confession to make — when it comes to driving, I am one of "those people."

You know, that person in the car in front of you who decides just before the stoplight she is going to turn left after all. And that person who's blocking your way in the parking lot trying to execute a 72-point turn out of a space she didn't realize was too small until it was too late.

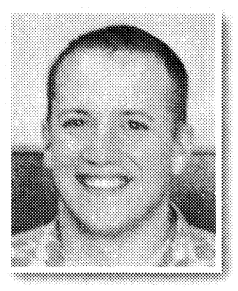
I'm also that person who becomes too engrossed in a conversation with their passengers to realize I've missed three chances to make a right turn in a busy intersection. And yes, on rare occasions, I have even been known to indulge in a snack while driving.

All right, so maybe my driving record isn't exactly spotless, but in my defense, there are a few lines I won't cross.

For starters, I never send text messages while driving. Not only is it extremely dangerous and illegal in two states and Washington, D.C., I have a hard enough time sending legible texts just sitting at my desk. And, according to the Baltimore Examiner, experts say driver inattention is a factor in 80 percent of motor vehicle crashes.

I also make an effort not to talk on the phone while driving.

There's a reason why this practice is illegal on post — studies, like one by the Harvard Center for Risk Analysis, show using hand-held phones while driving is responsible for 6 percent of all vehicle crashes in the U.S. each year. That comes out to about 2,600 deaths and 12,000 serious injuries. And when you consider that it's hard enough for some people to have an intelligent conversation at all, you can see why it's best to take the added distraction of driving out of the mix and leave the cell phone turned off.



So even though I don't have a perfect record, I will make an effort in the future to pay more attention to how I'm driving, and I'd like to encourage readers of The Bayonet to do the same.

No matter how safe a driver you are, there's always room for improvement. Not only will putting away the snacks and cell phone help make our roads safer, you'll also avoid inciting the wrath and indignation of your fellow drivers. And with that in mind, I leave you with one last piece of advice: Don't be that person.

NCOs, remember this year is for you

Pvt. Erik S. Anderson
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

I have been a disc jockey, a notary public and a small business owner. Today finds me as a Public Affairs specialist with the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team on Kelley Hill.

Almost every job has had a different type of boss. Whether it's the micromanaging type who constantly looked over my shoulder or the absentee boss who gave me all the freedom in the world, as long as I wasn't screwing up and making them look bad, I was good.

I've even been a boss myself, and although I want to think my employees think of me fondly, I realize that is probably not the case. I had responsibilities and a bottom line to watch, and that is not very helpful in making friends out of subordinates.

In the "Year of the NCO," the Army is recognizing the Soldiers who provide the backbone of its ranks.

As a young private (and I use the term young loosely) I have certain expectations of what a sergeant will be like. As a 29-year-old man, I have a different set of expectations for a boss.

As a private, I expect my sergeant to guide me through my military career. There are more procedures and paperwork to follow than I thought possible. I look for the help of an experienced noncommissioned officer to navigate the maze that is my Army life.

I want my NCOs to recognize my input to the mission of the unit. They should realize what I am capable of and give me the tools needed to make them look good, as well as myself.

As a human being, I extend my expectations of a boss to a more personal level. We all put our pants on the same way in the morning and I expect to be treated as a person.

I will always have my boss's back, no matter what kind of craziness we have going on in our shop. Likewise, I want my boss to have my back, because I am his Soldier.

Army NCOs reached their rank for a reason far beyond their time in service. They were promoted because of their proficiency in their career field and have been deemed capable of passing their knowledge to junior service members.

The rank of sergeant, to me, carries a tremendous amount of responsibility. NCOs are expected to be experts in their field and manage the lives of Soldiers who might not always make the best decisions.

I would like to think I make it easy on my sergeants because I'm an old guy who should know better, but alas, we all know that isn't the case. So to my sergeants and all the NCOs Armywide, this year's for you.

Harmony Church ACP to change April 13

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning commuters from Cusseta or Buena Vista, Ga., who travel northwest on Highway 27/280 to Harmony Church and use access control point 7 on 1st Division Road will no longer have to make a left turn to cross the highway to enter Fort Benning. Effective April 13, commuters will be able to leave the highway with a right exit and use the 1st Division Road overpass.

"It's safer for our Fort Benning drivers not to have to make the left turn, crossing two lanes of oncoming traffic," said Chuck Walls, deputy garrison commander.

Regardless of the posted speed, drivers aren't always slowing down for the commuters who use the 1st Division Road ACP on Harmony Church, he said.

The military police will place temporary barricades in the median to prevent drivers from making left turns, either to enter or leave Fort Benning through ACP 7.

There will be an ACP on the north side of the highway for people who exit right, said CPT Tim Stevens, who is the Directorate of Emergency Service's Patrol Branch chief.

The hours of operation for ACP 7 North will be Monday through Friday 6 to 9 a.m. and 3 to 6 p.m.

ACP 7 South hours of operation remain the same — 5 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday and 6 a.m. to 10 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. However, traffic leaving Fort Benning through ACP 7 South can only turn right, traveling eastbound toward Cusseta, Stevens said. Drivers who need to go toward Columbus will have to use a different ACP because of the right only turn. The median will be closed to prevent left turns.

"We're handing out flyers to people who currently use ACP 7S, to inform them of the upcoming change," Stevens said.

"Remember, this change is to keep our commuters safer," Stevens said.

integrate the whole of government. It requires a comprehensive approach."

This approach is detailed in the "seven lines of effort," which include establishing civil security and civil control, supplying the host nation a security force, government and economic and infrastructure development, restoring essential services and conducting information engagement.

These lines of effort are only the main ones that usually pop up, Durante said. Leaders may need to assess others for their unique situations.

"The definition of doctrine is that it's authoritative but requires judgment in application," he said. "We don't write a playbook — 'this is what you do.' We write discussions that would tend to lead Soldiers to success. It's the textbook our profession; it gives them some tools to use, but leaders still need to (show) adaptability."

Durante said they welcome feedback from Soldiers about the new manual. It is available to the Army online at https://www.us.army.mil/suite/folder/15648151.

DSOY: Enjoys job

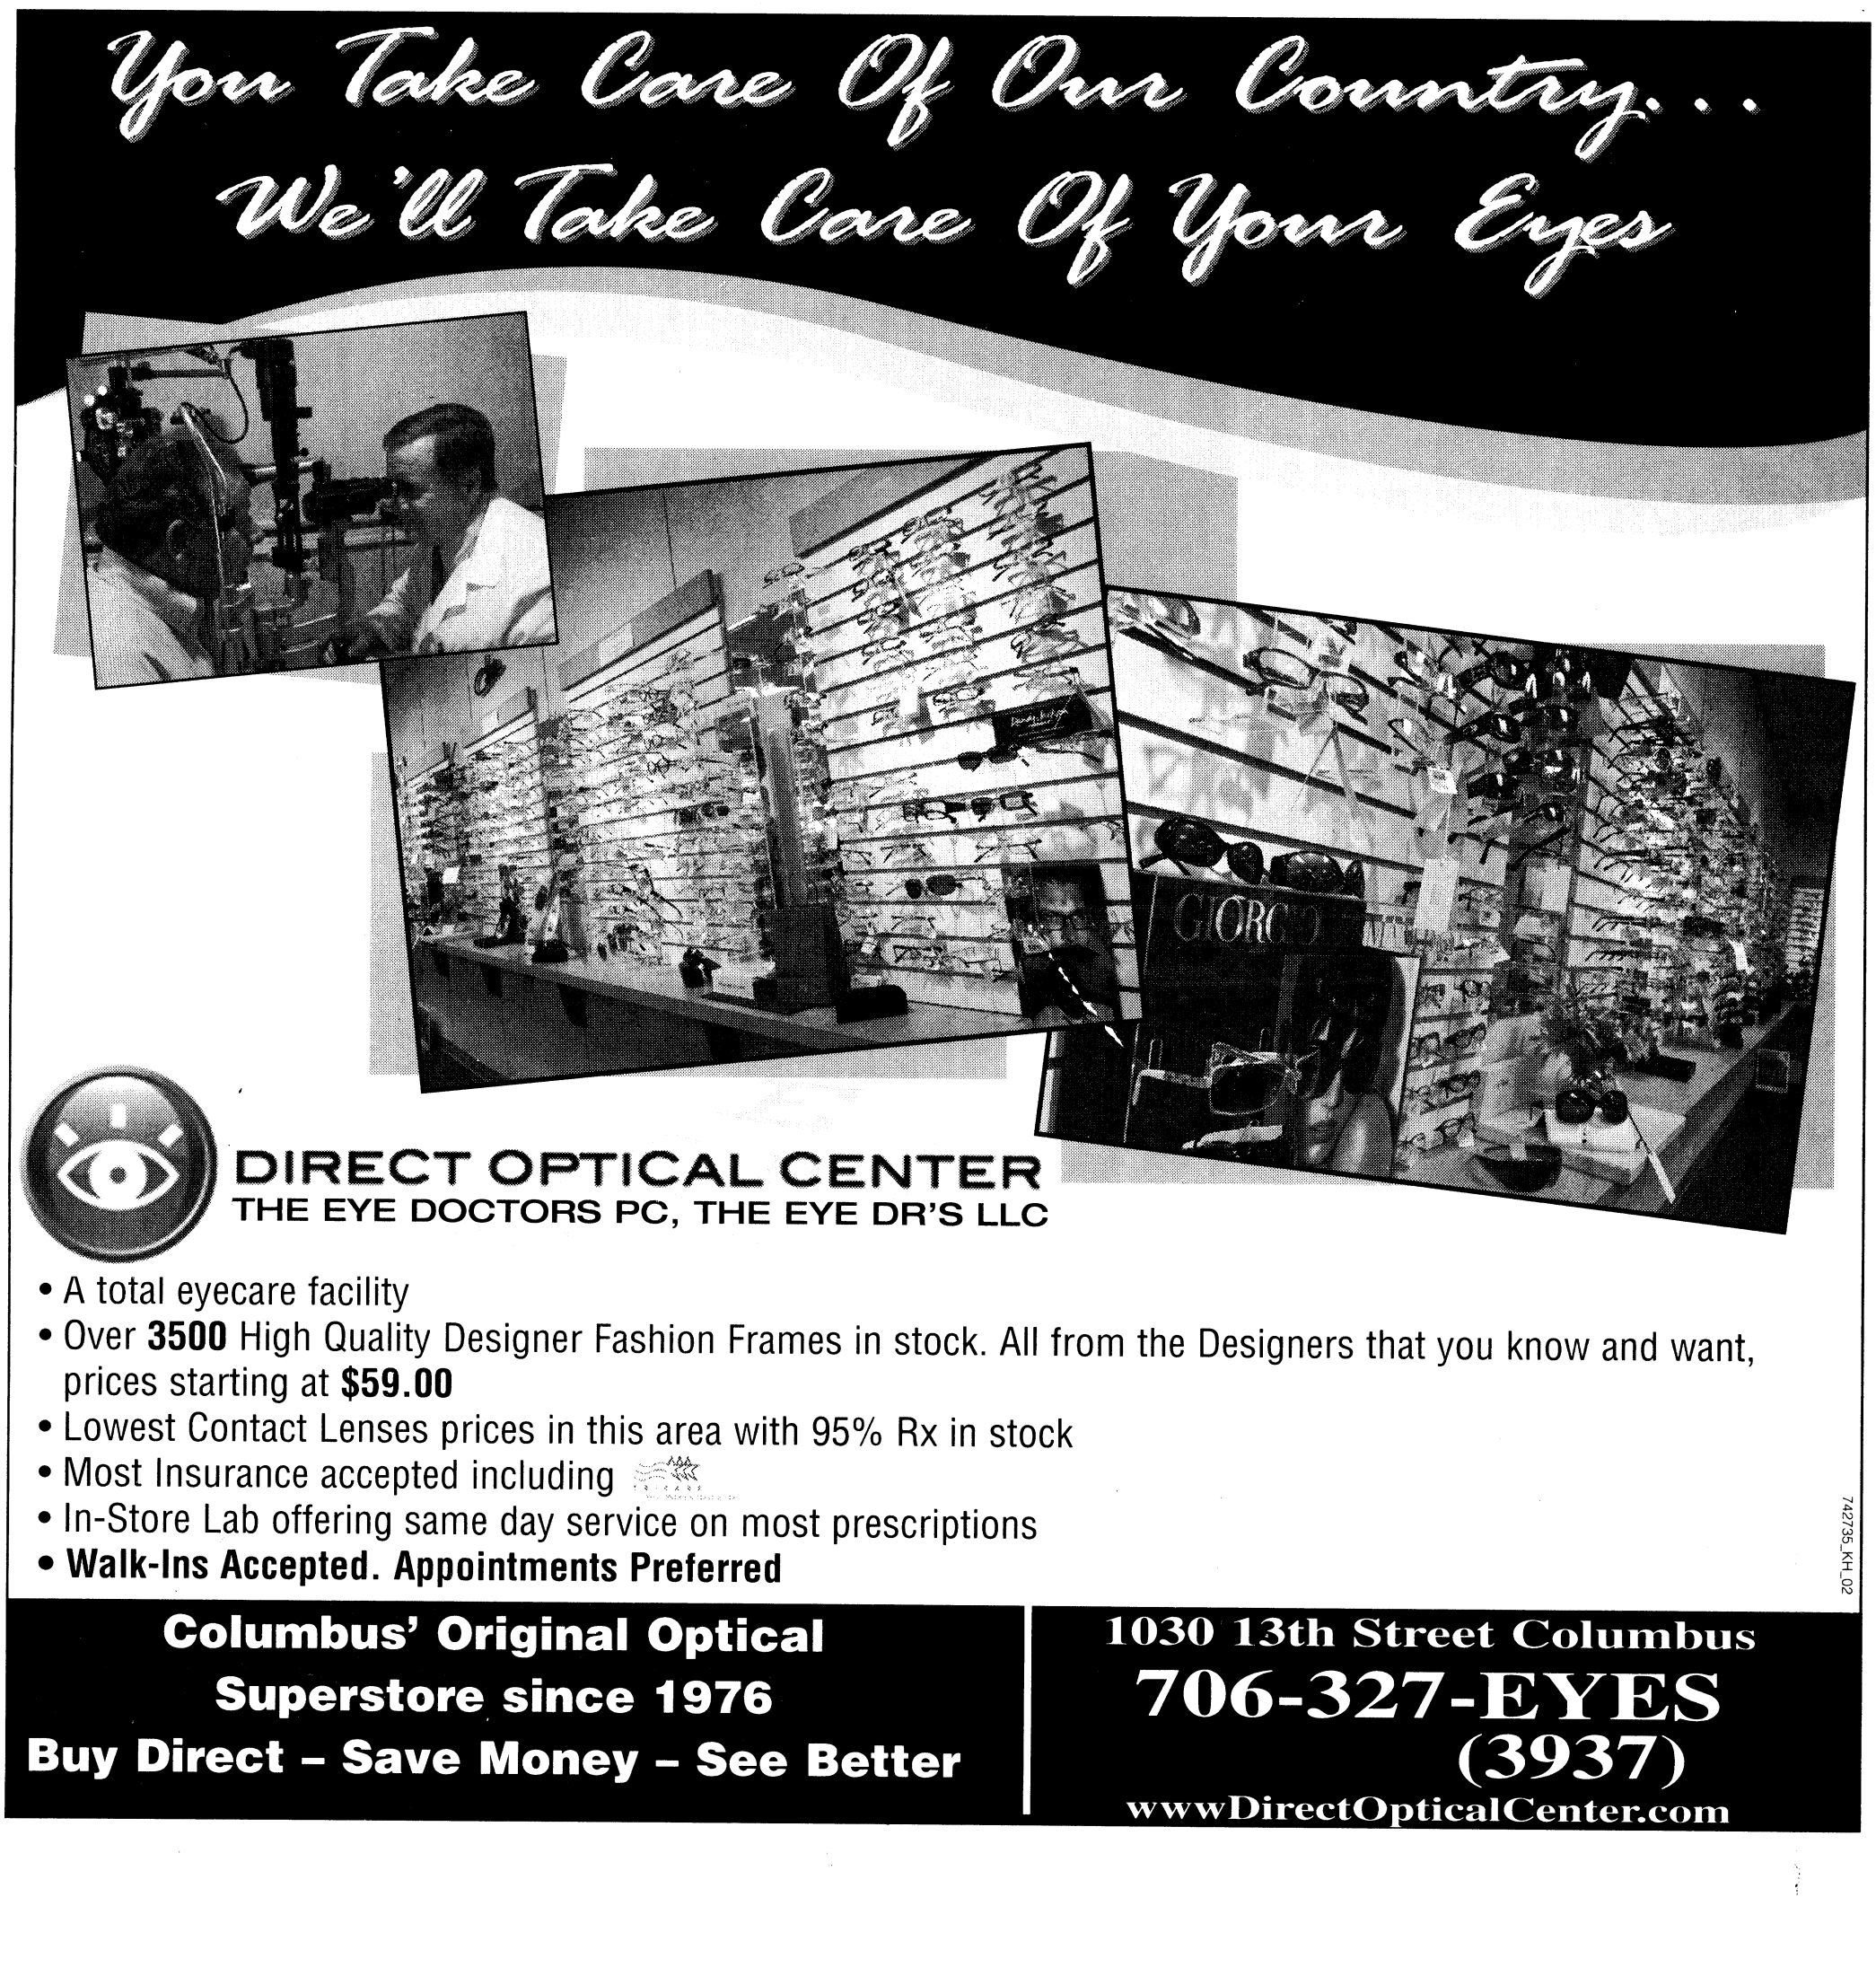
"He goes above and beyond whatever he's assigned to do, dedicates all his time to the Soldiers," he said. "He cares about the Soldiers."

Drill sergeants in 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., train nearly 4,000 Soldiers every year.

"It's a huge influence," said Way, who has been a drill sergeant for two and a half years. "Their job is tremendous. They take a civilian from the street and transform him into a Soldier."



Watching that transformation is amazing, Johnston said.

"That's the most thrilling part of the job: the training," he said. "You'll see it in their faces when something finally clicks. It motivates you to move onto teaching harder tasks. It's rewarding because you know that it's going to pay off with your battle buddies out in Iraq and Afghanistan. If you send this private to your old squad or platoon, he's going to be effective in that group."

Johnston's time as a drill sergeant winds down this fall, when he hopes to add Special Forces to his list of qualifications alongside Airborne, Ranger, Air Assault and others.

Johnston said he hopes he has created a lasting effect in the troops who have passed under his leadership.

"You want that phone call or e-mail someday down the road that says, 'Drill Sergeant that task you taught me in basic training, that made the difference. I'm here today because of that,'" he said. "That's the ultimate legacy you're trying to leave."

3rd HBCT Soldiers fly into training

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The adrenaline builds as the Blackhawk takes off. During the helicopter ride, Soldiers go over the mission in their heads, making sure they have it down. Adrenaline causes legs to bounce and Soldiers to fiddle with their weapons. As the helicopter starts to descend, everyone tenses up and prepares to exit the aircraft as quickly as possible. It is organized chaos.

MSG Troy Moore, the former first sergeant of A Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, said piling off a transport helicopter during an air assault mission is the most exciting 30 seconds in the Army.

SGT Richard Whittenberger, a team leader in B Company, 1st Bn., 15th Inf. Regt., agreed.

"It's addicting," Whittenberger said. "You know when you land you're hitting your objective quick. There is nothing like it."

But one of the problems he and the other NCOs in the battalion have is replicating the experience to train their subordinates who have never experienced it.

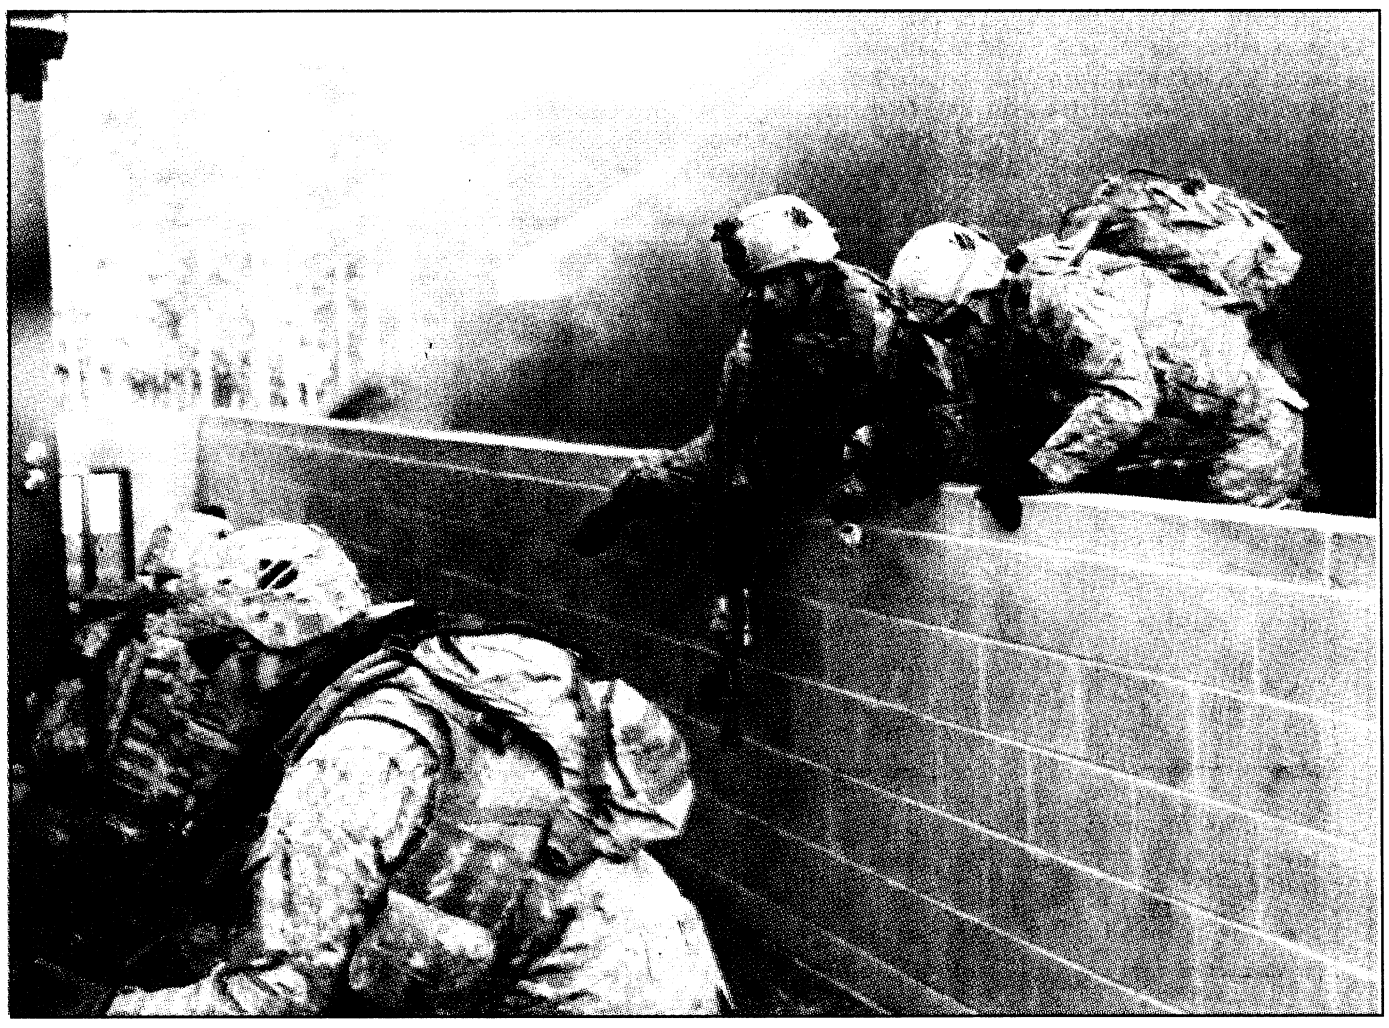
"You can drill it all day, but you have to actually do it to understand it fully," he said.

The Soldiers of B Company got the experience March 21, when they conducted air assault training at the Shelby Range training site on Fort Benning.

The site simulates the smells, sounds and arrangement of a typical Middle Eastern town and allows units to conduct realistic training scenarios to better prepare them for deployment, said SGT Jonathin Morgan, a team leader with B Company.

"I think the training is great," he said. "I think we got a lot out of it at every level. Leaders got a chance to see how their Soldiers performed and see what they did well and what they need to work on. Soldiers got the chance to operate in a 360-degree environment."

Shelby Village allowed Morgan's Soldiers to employ all of their skills in a real-time environment against a live, thinking enemy.



"That training is more realistic than a lot of the training we do," he said. "Not everyone in a room we went into was a pop-up target. Soldiers had to do everything from interacting with civilians to choosing sectors of fire. It gave them a real feel of what they could encounter overseas."

And the training also allowed Morgan and Whittenberger to evaluate the Soldiers who haven't deployed.

"Training like this allows us to fix something so it doesn't become a bad habit," Whittenberger said. "We can teach a guy who is pausing before he goes into a room or who is hesitant to pull the trigger what to do before we arrive in country. By then, it's too late."

As the 3rd HBCT's next deployment gets closer, both NCOs think that situation based training, like Shelby Range, will enable them to better perform their mission.

"Training like this is fun, but it makes you better," said Morgan. "In my opinion, we can't get enough of it. I'd have us do something like it every week, if it was up to me."

Using a smoke grenade as cover, Soldiers from B Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, leap over a wall during a training exercise at the Shelby Range site March 21. The site allows Soldiers to train in a realistic setting that forces them to make real-time decisions.

NCOs learn how to identify, defeat IEDs

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

NCOs assigned to the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team attended a four-day class to demonstrate effective ways to teach their subordinates how to identify and defeat improvised explosive devices and explosively formed projectiles.

The class, taught by the Joint Asymmetrical Threat and Counter-IED group assigned to Fort Benning, displayed the latest tactics and equipment used by insurgent fighters against Coalition Forces.

"Statistically speaking, we are neutralizing more IEDs than ever before, due to training like this," said Lance DeLong, the program director. "Classes like this one have made our Soldiers better equipped to negotiate those threats."

Soldiers viewed a variety of IEDs and firing devices and were shown how insurgents employ and emplace them.

"This class was very detailed," said SGT Jose Parra with 203rd Brigade Support Battalion. "Classes like this one have improved a lot since the last time I deployed in 2007."

Louis Francis is a retired first sergeant who served in the 3rd HBCT for eight years and now works for Fort Benning's IED Defeat Team.

"We were somewhat prepared when we first went over there, but we didn't know exactly what the enemy was doing," he said. "Now we have a better idea of how they emplace IEDs as well as the tactics and components they use. This information allows our Soldiers to identify those components and get them out of the insurgent's hands when they search warehouses and homes."

"The most important thing is saving Soldiers' lives," said Francis. "That is the main reason for all of this."

College help available for Soldiers, families

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Between buying books, choosing a field of study and arranging one's finances, the decision to go back to school as an adult can seem overwhelming. That's why guidance counselors are on hand at Fort Benning's Continuing Education Center to answer questions and provide direction for Soldiers and family members who want to continue their education.

"We assist Soldiers and family members with establishing their educational goals, and we provide them with the options available," said Tim Reynolds, guidance counselor at the center.

Once counselors have assessed a Soldier's educational needs and duty requirements, they can match him or her with a university, Reynolds said.

The Army offers Soldiers numerous financial aid options, including the Montgomery GI Bill, Tuition Assistance, and a program through Veterans' Affairs called Top-Up, which reimburses Soldiers for tuition costs exceeding Tuition Assistance limits. Family members can use counseling services through the Army's Career Advancement Account program, which provides up to $3,000 per year for family members enrolled in associate degree or certification programs. Plans are in the works to allow Soldiers to transfer their GI Bill benefits to their spouses and children, though the program is not finalized.

For Soldiers who are unsure what they'd like to study, Reynolds suggests they consider their interests.

"A Soldier needs to get in touch with his passion — what does he want to do after the Army?" Reynolds said. "If a Soldier wants to go into forensics or criminal justice, which we're seeing a lot of now, we'll find degree programs that will lead a Soldier toward his objective."

Guidance counselors will work to help Soldiers achieve their educational goals, even if they may not be able to find what they are looking for in the Fort Benning area, Reynolds said.

"For Soldiers who want to become, for example, civil engineers, there are no engineering programs in the area," he said.

"What we would do for an individual like that is begin to steer them in the direction where they can pick up the prerequisite courses so they can meet their objective once they leave the Army or PCS to a location where there may be an engineering program."

> "A Soldier needs to get in touch with his passion — what does he want to do after the Army? If a Soldier wants to go into forensics or criminal justice ... we'll find degree programs that will lead a Soldier toward his objective."
> — Tim Reynolds

A Soldier's deployment schedule can also affect his or her educational choices, and many opt for online classes because they are more convenient, Reynolds said, with most taking only one or two classes at a time.

While some Soldiers who have never attended college may be leery of re-entering the classroom after an absence of several years or more, Reynolds aims to help them draw parallels between school and their Army experience.

"I point out to them that they've already been in school," he said. "The Army is constantly training Soldiers, and it's the same system when you go to college — you've got to read, you've got to study, you have to do required homework. Many courses Soldiers take are recommended for college credit by the American Council on Education.

"Soldiers understand motivation — in order for them to graduate any of their schools, they had to be motivated. If one is motivated, it's reasonable to assume that person will be able to graduate from college."

The Army Continuing Education Center is located in Building 2602 in Soldier's Plaza. It is open from 7:30 a.m. to 5:15 p.m. Monday through Friday. No appointment is necessary to meet with a counselor. For more information, call 706-545-7397.

Board warns Soldiers of fraudulent businesses

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Sometimes businesses target Soldiers and their families. Sometimes a club or lounge gets a reputation for illegal activity.

They are places where the health, safety, morale or discipline of a service member is threatened — that's where the Armed Forces Disciplinary Board steps in, said Detective Clarence Rambo, lead detective for the board.

The board meets four times a year to look into circumstances that may be hazardous for service members in and around Fort Benning.

There are currently eight places on the list: Capital Consortium Group, Inc.; 3 Hebrew Boys, L.L.C.; Majestic Club, 2102 Cusseta Road; American Amicable Life Insurance Company of Texas; American Fidelity National Life Insurance Company; 13th Street Bridge; ABLE 2 STOR Self Storage, 4497 Victory Drive; and Shanty Shack, 4475 Warm Springs Road.

"It's all about looking out for the best interest of the Soldiers," Rambo said. "We're doing all this to make sure we correct any condition that affects health, safety, morale or discipline. Soldiers have to be ready to complete their mission, to defend America. We're trying to make sure they're visiting safe environments and not being taken advantage of."

The first two companies on the list are money scam operations, Rambo said. The two life insurance companies were put off limits because they solicited basic trainees on Sand Hill without approval from Fort Benning officials.

The 13th Street Bridge, the Shanty Shack and the Majestic Club, previously the VS Lounge, are on the list because of specific incidents.

A Soldier drowned while fishing near the bridge on the banks of the Chattachoochee River a few years ago. For one mile above and below the bridge, service members are not allowed to fish, wade or swim in or near the water and banks of the river. Rowboats and kayaks are not allowed, but military personnel may fish from powerboats if wearing a life preserver.

At the Shanty Shack, there were two shootings, and at the Majestic Club, located at 2102 Cusseta Road, a Soldier was shot.

"There were shootings, a lot of drugs around the area, and the commanding general decided it wasn't a safe environment for Soldiers," Rambo said.

"The bottom line is when they're on the list, they have to request in writing and show they have corrected the adverse conditions to be removed."

The storage facility, ABLE 2 STOR, which used to be called Eagle Self Storage, is another establishment that has cheated military personnel.

"A lot of Soldiers had their property stolen," Rambo said. "When Soldiers store their property there, go off to war for a year and come back, they can't get in touch with the owner, who lives in Atlanta, the codes have changed, and they end up having to replace or pay for property they stored in the unit. Nobody could get a hold of the owner or get a hold of their property."

Before an establishment is put on the list, the board conducts a thorough investigation, votes and makes a recommendation to the post commanding general.

Service members who violate this order could be subject to punishment under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, said Richard Gordon, chief of administrative and civil law.

"We consider these very carefully before we give the commanding general a recommendation, (and) we do it only when we have substantial evidence," he said. "The command has an obligation to protect Soldiers and keep them out of places where they could injure themselves ... or be taken advantage of."

Service members who feel they have been targeted or threatened at a certain establishment should contact their chain of command or the office of the Staff Judge Advocate. The board does not deal with issues of quality, such as a paint job.

Complaints may be submitted directly to Gordon at 706-545-1130 or Rambo at 706-545-5915.

Awards: Recognize valor

region where they gained and maintained freedom of movement in an area that had never seen government agents or Afghan security forces; how they bettered the lot of nearly 1 million Afghan people.

"Many talk about being in the company of heroes," Ostlund said. "Today, we truly are in their company."

Myer's Silver Star citation reads: Myer's perseverance under fire and leadership in the face of mortal danger saved the day when almost all had been lost. Myer's valorous actions, enabling the defeat of a numerically superior enemy force, are in keeping with the finest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team and the United States Army.

According to Myer's narrative, his "steadfast leadership and calm direction of battle singularly enabled the battalion to bring the full force of all available enablers to bear on the determined enemy formation, allowing the outnumbered group of American paratroopers to decisively defeat a much larger enemy force." ... "At the decisive moment of battle, Myer unflinchingly ordered the audacious reinforcement of the OP, and then exposed himself to the same risk his Soldiers faced in order to continue effectively leading the successful defense of his position."

Denton's Silver Star citation reads: while serving as a grenadier ... Denton's perseverance under fire and bravery in the face of mortal danger saved the day when almost all had been lost. Denton's valorous actions, enabling the defeat of numerically superior enemy force, are in keeping with the finest traditions of military service and reflect great credit upon himself, the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team and the United States Army.

According to Dzwik's Bronze Star Medal with V device narrative, Dzwik directly engaged the enemy with his personal weapon while also directing indirect fire. Dzwik led reinforcements to a beleaguered coalition force observation post and then ensured that several casualties were evacuated. Dzwik's tremendous courage, tactical and technical skills, high level of dedication and commitment to excellence were unmatched when he contributed toward overcoming an intense enemy attack.

Sustainability conference set

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

At the Bridging the GAPS conference, "sustainability" is more than just a buzz word, said Tony Westbrook, who is helping coordinate the event, set for Tuesday and Wednesday at the Columbus Convention and Trade Center.

The word sustainable is heard everywhere it seems, Westbrook said. But at this conference, people will learn how to apply sustainable strategies in their work and lives.

Sponsored by the Georgia Alabama Partnership for Sustainability, the conference includes different focuses, or "tracks," that help attendees do just that.

The military programs track will highlight environmental advances the Department of Defense has made recently. The education track will show what today's universities are finding in environmental research and application. The green building track will showcase green technology that conserves resources used in building or home maintenance, such as lighting and water. The broadest track, environmental resources, will discuss the earth's natural resources and means and projects for conservation.

In between these breakout sessions, visitors can learn about green technology already on the market from more than 40 exhibitors.

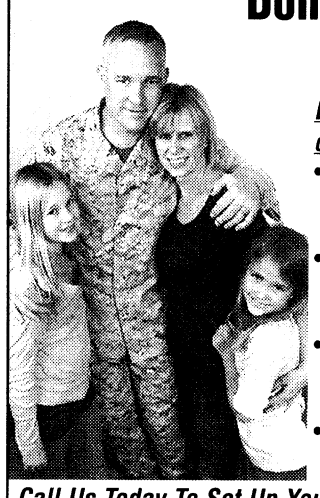
It will be a chance to share ideas and learn from each other, said Peter Lukken, Fort Benning's sustainability planner, who's heading up the event.

As environmentally friendly technology changes, it's important to keep up-to-date on strides made in the field, said Lukken, who plans to make the conference an annual affair.

"The entire program is really based around green technology, what's coming up, the new programs. Green technology gives us a higher level of efficiency, so what you're doing is giving you more with less," said Lynn Deaton, strategic planner, Maneuver Center Realignment Coordination Cell.

The conference is not just for people interested only in the environment but also for those looking to join green efforts with productive business, Deaton said.

"That's where I think this conference is going to bridge the gaps," she said. "We're trying to put two worlds together that have been traditionally butting heads. This world of 'save the trees, look at the natural resources, conserve.' And then the world that says, 'we have a bottom line and that's our first priority.'"



Assistant for sustainability Leslie Gillespie-Marthaler, Office of the Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Army for Sustainability, will open the conference Tuesday.

OLD CUSSETA ROAD CLOSURE

The Directorate of Public Works, in conjunction with the 192nd Brigade, has closed a portion of Old Cusseta Road until 5 p.m. July 31. The section of Old Cusseta Road between Bushnell Street and Whetherly Court will be closed to traffic. This section of roadway will be used to store about 100 temporary movable buildings for "Trap 09-03/09-05, Troop action to house a battalion-sized element."

Alternate routes include Bovington Street, Wildcat Drive and Bushnell Street.

8TH DIVISION ROAD CLOSURE

The Directorate of Public Works and its contractors will close a portion of 8th Division Road at Victory Pond Dam until 5 p.m. April 14. Only the section adjacent to the dam (in both directions) will be closed to traffic. The purpose of the closure is to install two spillway pipes.

Alternate routes include Wood Road, 1st Division Road, Pine Tree Road, Old Cusseta Road and Hourglass Road.

LEGAL ASSISTANCE AND CLAIMS OFFICE

The Legal Assistance and Claims office will be closed Friday.

NATIONAL ALCOHOL SCREENING

In observance of National Alcohol Screening Day, the Fort Benning Army Substance Abuse Program will host "The Power of Choice" from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. April 16 at Marshall Auditorium. The guest speaker will be Siran Stacy, a former University of Alabama football player whose vehicle was hit by a drunk driver. His wife and four children died in the accident.

There will be a mandatory meeting from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. for civilian supervisors.

BEST SAPPER CONTEST

Service members who think they've got what it takes to be the next "Best Sapper" now have the chance to show the Army what they're made of. The competition, sponsored by the U.S. Army Engineer School's Sapper Leader Course and held in the rugged Ozark Mountains at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo., is scheduled for April 20-22.

Events will be listed online at www.wood.army.mil/sapper/BSC/home.html, at a later date.

To register, e-mail competitor's names and biography forms no later than Wednesday to sean.m.carroll@conus.army.mil or submit requests at the Web site.

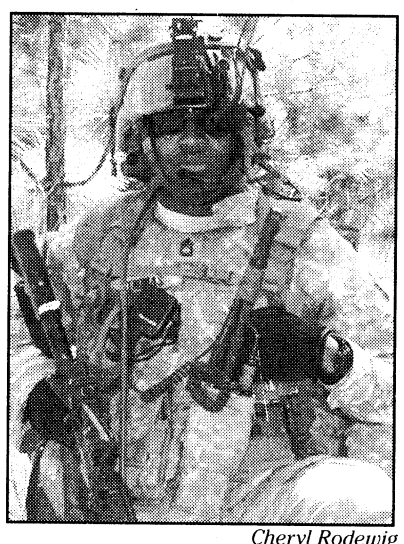
EXFOR Soldiers test Land Warrior System

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Maneuver Battle Lab completed its limited objective experiment with the Land Warrior System March 20. Soldiers in A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, also known as the Experimentation Force began the experiment March 2. They completed five missions at three different levels: not using the Land Warrior System, using it as only at the squad level and using it at the squad and team level.

"What we're trying to do is quantify the effectiveness of that unit conducting tactical operations with those three different alternatives," said Brian Kornett, project officer for the experiment.



Land Warrior is designed to give leaders better situational awareness on the battlefield and an enhanced ability to command and control their respective elements, Kornett said. All the computers are integrated into the body armor, which includes a radio, navigation system and helmet-mounted display, so Soldiers can see the map or imagery of a certain location.

One thing the Soldiers say they really like is their ability to see where everybody is on the field, Kornett said.

"As they're dispersed, they might not be able to see each other physically on the ground, but they can pull their HMD down and see where their guys are in real time," he said.

Each mission was based on operations that 4th Battalion, 9th Infantry Regiment, out of Fort Lewis, Wash., faced in Iraq. At the end of the missions, EXFOR Soldiers provided feedback the Maneuver Battle Lab will compile and forward to the TRADOC Analysis Center at White Sands, N.M.

After completing a time-sensitive mission Friday, platoon sergeant SFC David Thomas said using the Land Warrior System helped him coordinate his platoon's movements. On a 10-digit grid, he could see where all his elements were in relation to the target.

Cheryl Rodewig
SFC David Thomas, EXFOR, looks through his helmet-mounted display.

"Accuracy is critical," Thomas said. "It helps with completing the mission when the higher command can pinpoint all elements on the battlefield."

The downside to the system was its bulkiness, he said, but features that allowed him to measure distance and make a trail of lighted "bread crumbs" for Soldiers to follow on the screen offset the inconvenience of added weight.

SGT Christian Rincon, a team leader in EXFOR, said he thinks the system should be issued at the team level.

"Depending on the mission at hand, having the screen really helps," he said. "You know where your positions are at, you know when your guys are set, and you can see it. If your squad leader calls you and says, 'I need you to move here,' you can just look at your screen, he puts a graphic out there for you, and you know exactly where to go."

Most importantly, Land Warrior helps Soldiers avoid friendly fire, said platoon leader 2LT John Dills, EXFOR.

"In the heat of battle, guys will call out their position — 'I'm 100 meters away from this obstacle,' but you don't know which direction and you don't really know the distance," Dills said. "What the Land Warrior System does is it populates an icon for you to actually see where your individuals are, so it gives you a better visual picture of where everyone is at. You know where to shift your small arms fire, where you can and can't call for fire. That helps you avoid fratricide. It gives you the ability to save lives."

The system also allowed the platoon, split into two groups attacking from opposite sides, to assault the objective at the same time, he said.

"I think through the whole experiment we identified what works and what we'd like to see," Dills said. "Just like any new technology, it can always be made better. Right now, we're really just testing the technology to see if it's worthwhile and something the Army wants, and I would say most definitely yes, this is something the Army wants."

times to earn his EIB.

"Every leader strives to earn the Expert Infantryman Badge to set an example for their Soldiers," he said. "It's a major accomplishment in an Infantry Soldier's career."

Soldiers finish testing today with a 12-mile foot march, one of the most grueling tasks of the week, McCrea said.

That foot march is what kept CPT Patrick Sleem, who was just a few minutes shy of the time limit, from earning his badge five years ago.

"We take everything very seriously because anything can get you knocked out," he said.

Since the tasks are more battle-focused this year, testing for the badge is also "training you can really get something out of," said Sleem, 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

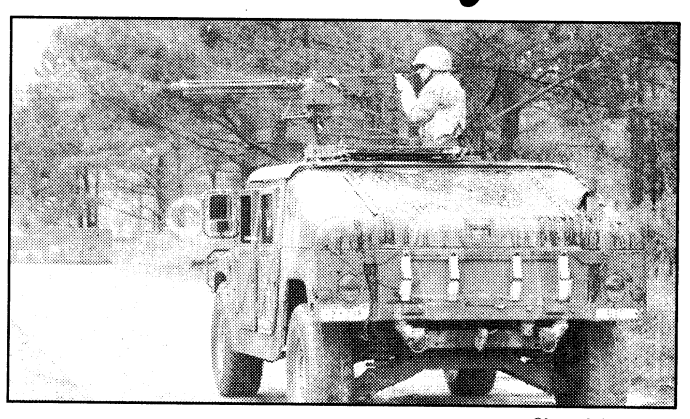
"You're going through the tasks and doing them as you would in a combat environment," he said. "It makes sense because it's training you realistically."

This is the first time Fort Benning has created a new standard to make testing for the badge simulate combat scenarios, McCrea said.

In the past, Soldiers had 30 separate tasks to complete, such as applying a tourniquet or operating a radio. They would study for that one task, complete it and move on to the next. Now, the testing includes three lanes, an urban lane, patrol lane and traffic control point, with 10 tasks that can changed based on the situation.

They show up to the station, receive an order and execute, McCrea said. They can't memorize 10 separate tasks in a row, so they have to make decisions based on conditions they face, just as they do in combat.

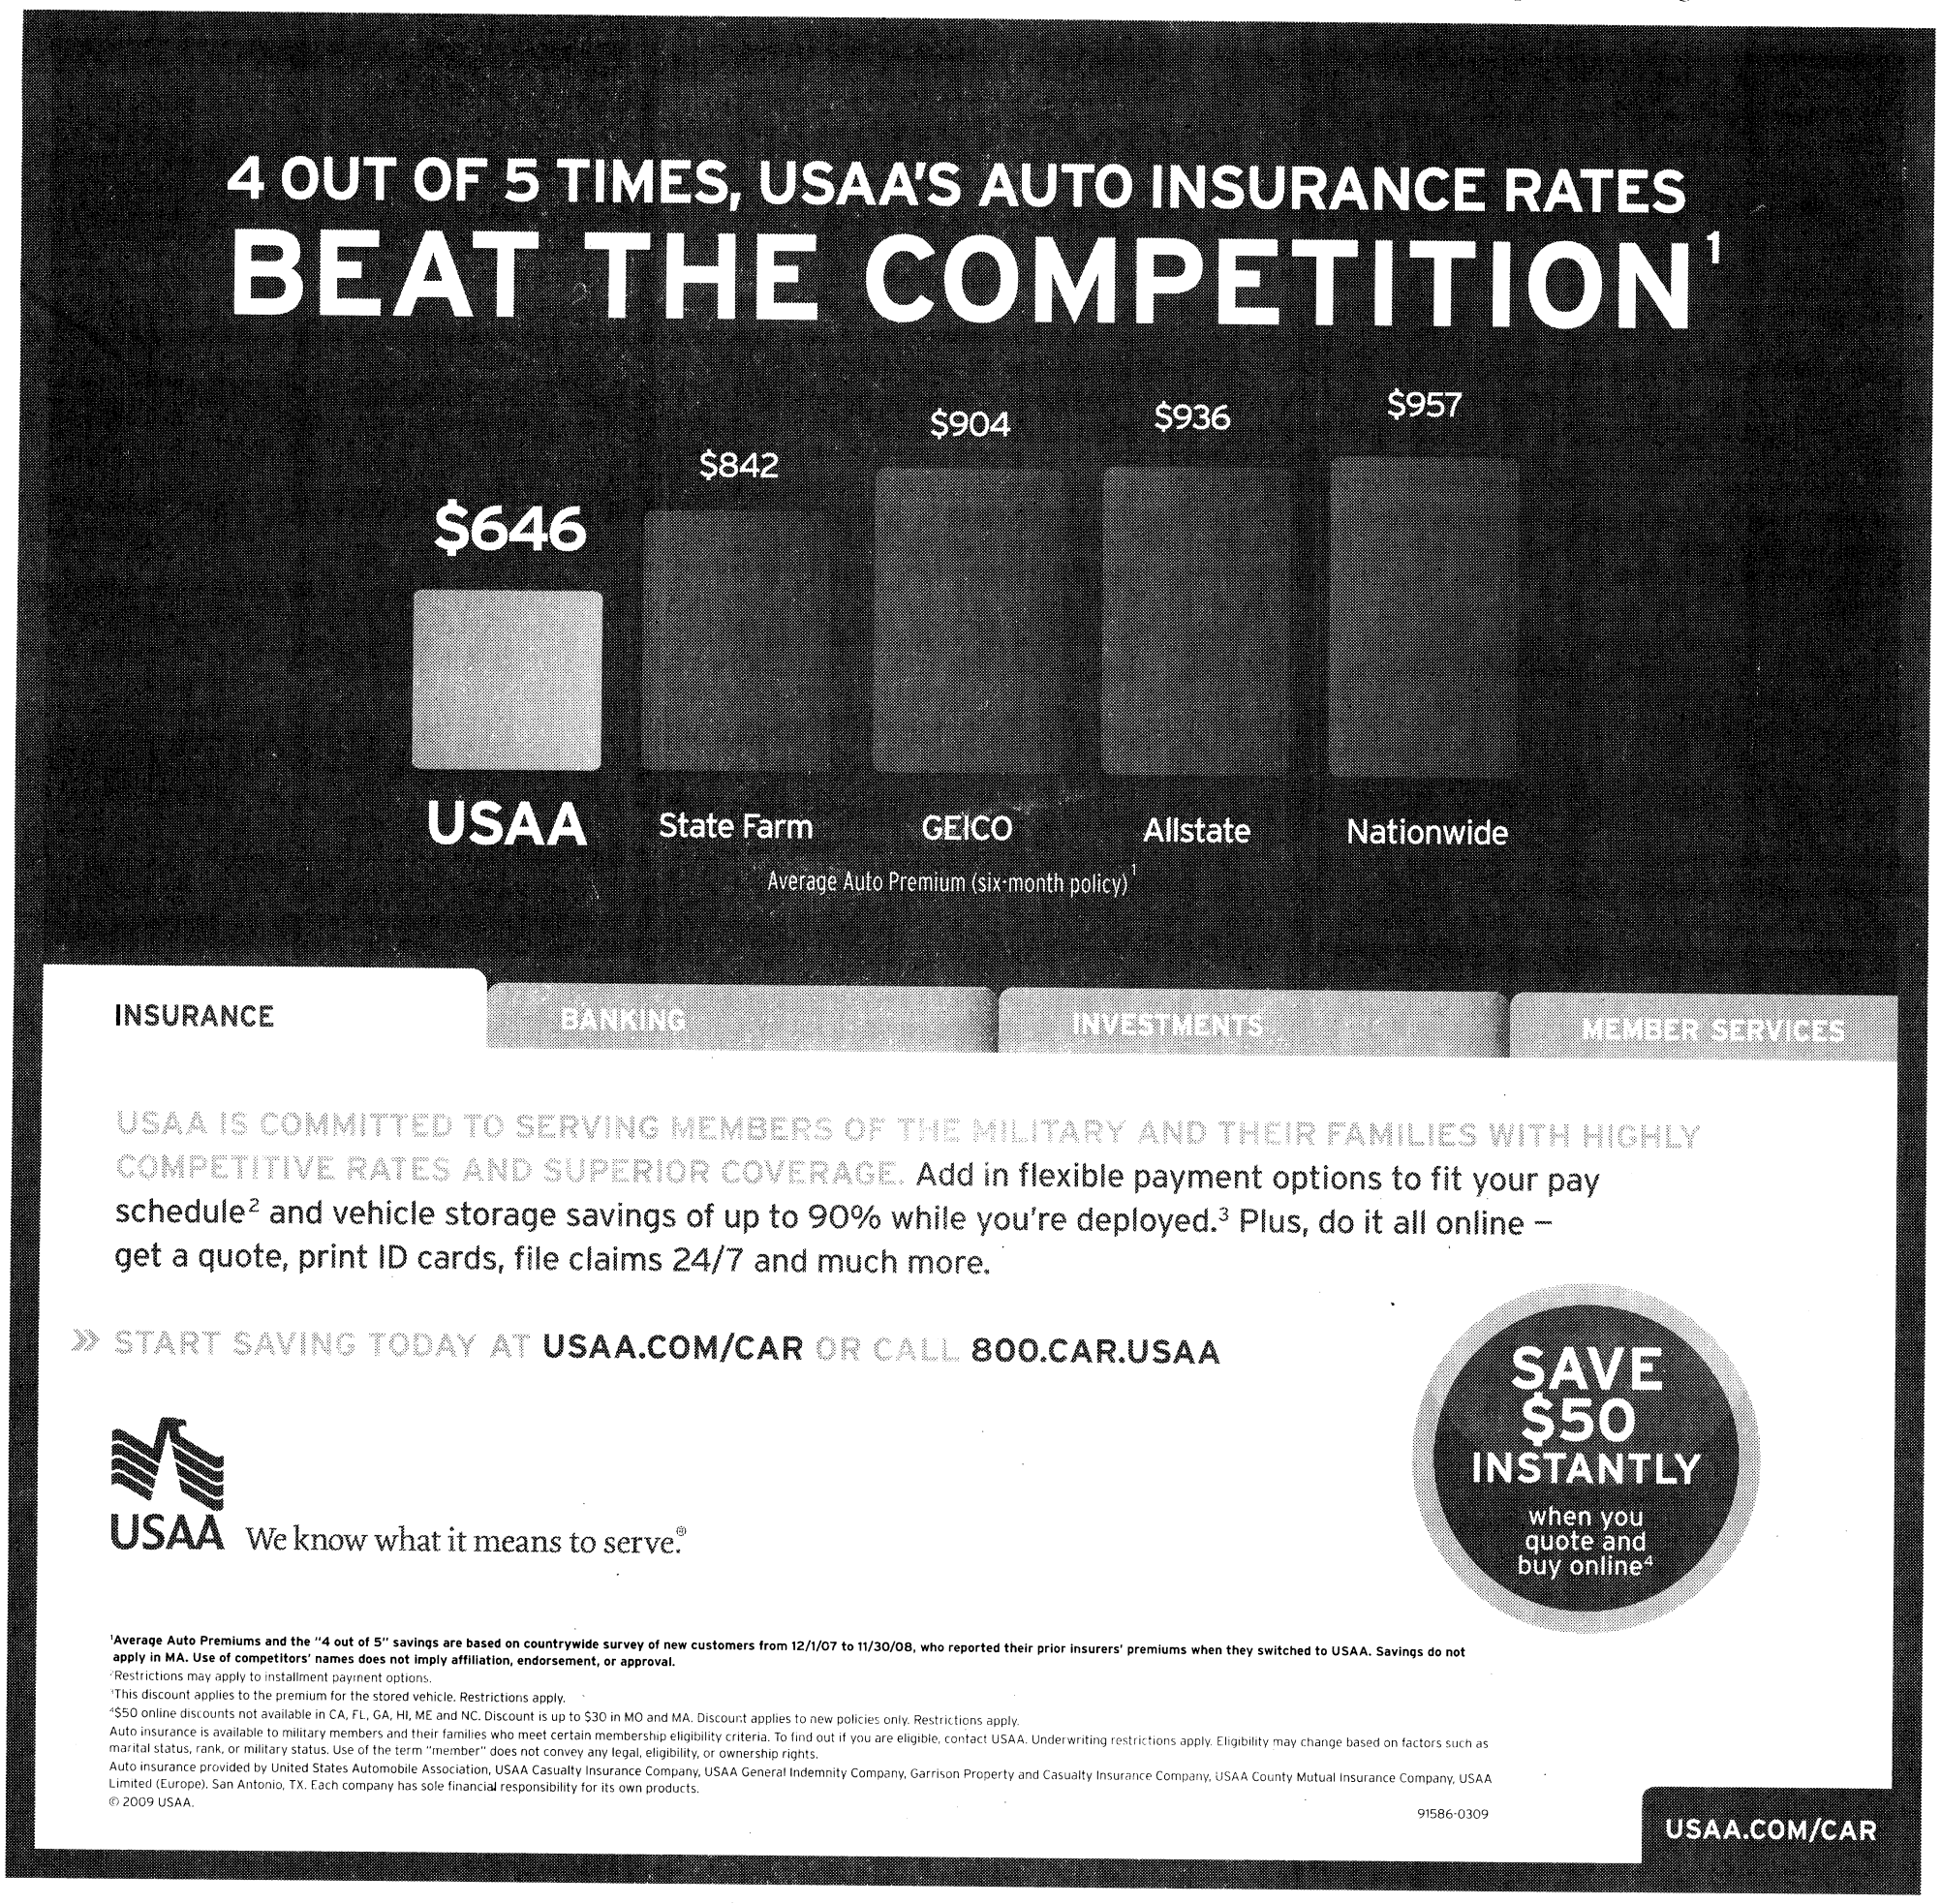
"I'm glad they're doing it like this," said SSG Michael Cugino, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, who is trying for the badge for the first time. "With the Army going to outcome based training, it's better to do it like this instead of the way it used to be with route steps."



Cugino said the EIB shows that an Infantryman thoroughly knows his job.

"An EIB separates you from your peers," he said. "It shows that you're not just doing your job. You're doing extra to set yourself apart."

The EIB, also known as the non-combat equivalent to the Combat Infantryman Badge, was created in 1944 to honor the U.S. Army Infantry Soldier. An 18th-century musket set against an Infantry blue background, the badge is "where it all starts from," said SFC Santino Sims, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment.



As an Infantryman, wearing the badge is matter of pride and honor, said Sims, who is on his third try to earn the EIB.

"That's my main focus. Nothing else matters right now," he said. "As a senior noncommissioned officer, you're going to lead your troops and teach them the basics. To have them look up to you and trust you, to me, that badge should be a standard."

Cheryl Rodewig
SGT Matthew Steinike fires a weapon from the top of a military vehicle Tuesday on Molnar Range.

The badge will be presented today to Soldiers from the 192nd, 197th, 198th and 199th Infantry brigades, the NCO Academy, 4th Ranger Training Battalion, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team and the Warrior Training Center who successfully complete the testing.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

NCAA Final Four

I'm happy I didn't do a bracket this year for the NCAA men's basketball tournament. I would have never picked Michigan State, Connecticut, Villanova and North Carolina for the Final Four.

Michigan St. will play Connecticut at 6:07 p.m. Saturday on CBS. Villanova will take on North Carolina following that game, at 8:47 p.m., also on CBS.

While Connecticut and North Carolina are favored, I'd love to see Michigan State and Villanova make it to the championship game, which is Monday.

Golf is exciting again

The golf world (not to mention TV ratings) seemed empty without Tiger Woods last year after he took time off after knee surgery.

Now he's back, and seemingly stronger than ever. Woods matched the largest comeback in his career March 29 at Bay Hill in Orlando, Fla., sinking a 15-foot putt for birdie to win the Arnold Palmer Invitational.

Buy me some peanuts

The Major League Baseball regular season begins Sunday, with the Atlanta Braves taking on the world champions, the Philadelphia Phillies, at 8 p.m. on ESPN.

Derek Lowe will pitch for the Braves, and Brett Myers will start for the Phillies.

Opening day is officially Monday, and ESPN will broadcast the Tampa Bay Rays versus the Boston Red Sox at 2 p.m.

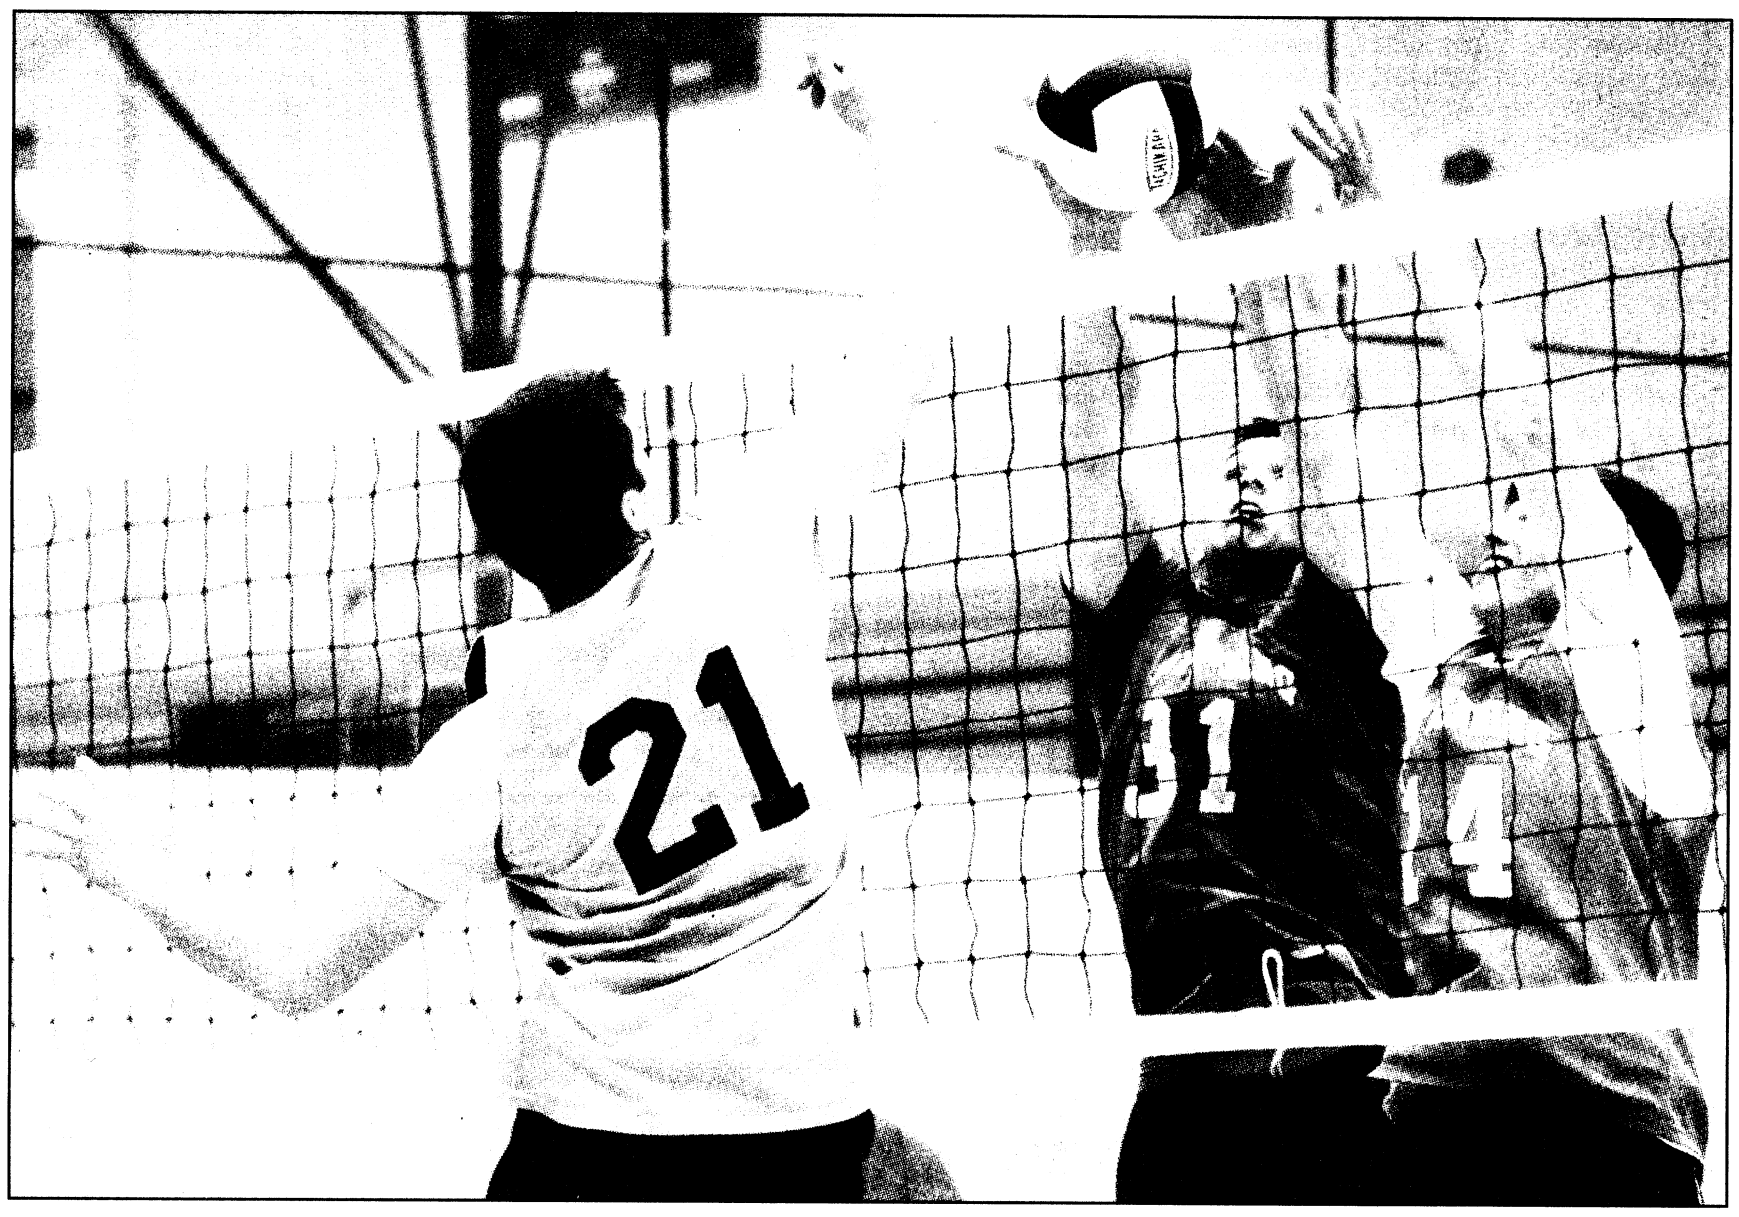
Johnson wins sixth race

Jimmie Johnson, also known as Mr. Martinsville, won the Goody's 500 March 29 after nudging aside Denny Hamlin with 15 laps to go to get the victory.

Hamlin finished second, followed by Tony Stewart in third and Jeff Gordon in fourth.

Gordon is the points leader, Clint Bowyer is second, Kurt Busch third and Johnson a close fourth.

The Samsung 500 will be at 2 p.m. Sunday on Fox from Texas Motor Speedway.



Moats receives apology

Houston Texans' running back Ryan Moats was officially apologized to by the officer who pulled him and his wife over March 18 while they were en route to a hospital to visit Moats' mother-in-law who was dying. Moats' SUV was pulled over right near the hospital after he went through a red light, and his wife said the officer pointed his weapon at her.

Moats' wife rushed into the hospital and was able to be with her mom when she died, but Ryan did not make it in time.

The officer resigned Wednesday.

Team USAIC came back in the loser's bracket to walk away from the Commander's Cup preseason volleyball tournament March 25 at the Smith Fitness Center as the champions. They defeated the 75th Ranger Regiment Champs.

Needing two match wins, Team USAIC got the lead over the Champs in the first game, scoring eight points before the Champs answered. Team USAIC won the game, 25-13.

In the second game of the first match, the Champs scored first, but Team USAIC outscored them by seven points taking a 25-18 victory to set up a winner-take-all second match.

In the second match, the game remained close. The Champs got within two points of Team USAIC, but couldn't catch up. Team USAIC closed the first game with a 25-23 win. In the final game, Team USAIC controlled the game and went home with a 25-11 win, and the championship.

"What won the game for us was the ability of the players to stay out of the net and to watch their errors on the court," Team USAIC coach Corey Shaffer said. "We played as a team, played strong defense and had big blocks at the net."

"Before playing against 75th Ranger Regiment, I told the team they would have to play good disciplined volleyball — have good passes and stay out of the net," Shaffer said. "We were successful doing that."

Practice before the game and communication during the game is what helped Team USAIC win the game, said Team USAIC player Ashley Cavazos.

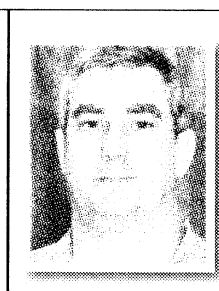
They call it "golf with a gun."



True to its nickname, sporting clay shooting shares several points in common with the sport Mark Twain called "a good walk spoiled." Like golfers, sporting clay shooters keep track of their score as they take shots at 10 to 18 different stations, similar to tees. Sporting clays also has a strong social aspect, and, much like golf, its enthusiasts travel the country to try out new courses. But that's where the similarities end. The shotguns sporting clay shooters use would not be permitted on most golf courses.

Sporting clay shooting originated in the early 1900s in England, when live pigeons were used as targets. Today, clay targets are used. Unlike

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

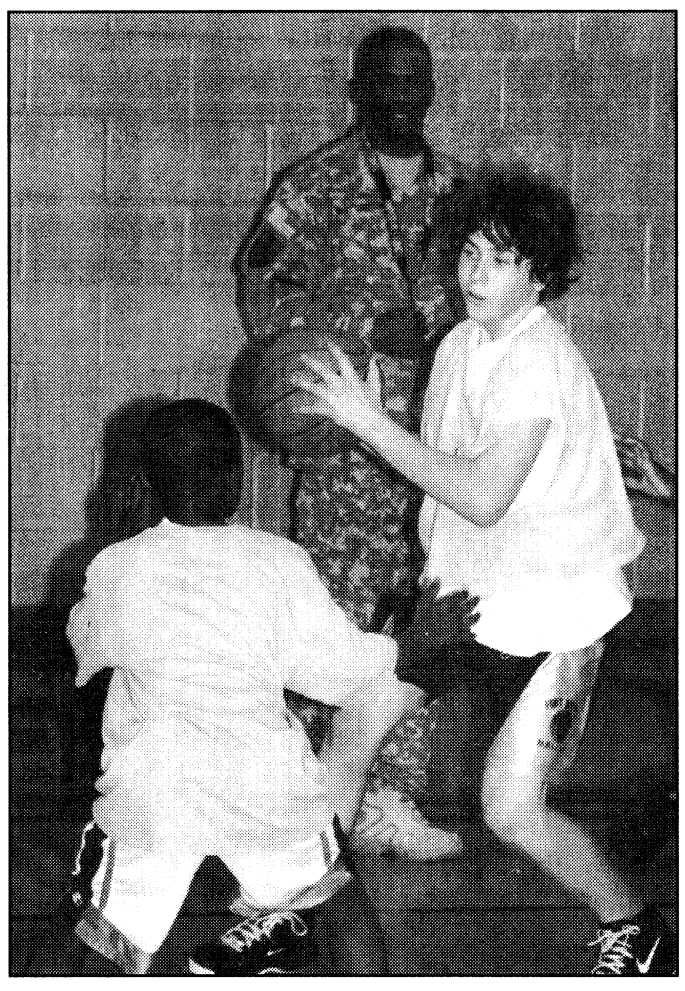
Using sports as learning tool

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Philip Whittington, who has been a volunteer basketball coach for four years, emphasizes a 'never-quit' attitude to his players and uses each game as a learning tool.

"You can learn from your strengths and weaknesses in a game and use them to your advantage in the next game," he said. "But the only way to get to that point is to never give up. If you don't try, you'll never know what your strengths and weaknesses are."

Whittington coaches the 10- to-12-year old Fort Benning Ballers basketball team and focuses on conditioning, working on ball handling and shot selection. It's a step above the basics of basketball, which the players learn at the 9- and 10-year-old level, he said.



"I want them to learn when to go on a fast break and when to slow it down and run offensive sets," he said. "They should be able to play at a high tempo from when the ball is tipped to the time the buzzer sounds at the end of the game."

The skills are necessary to learn because middle school sports will be more competitive than this level, Whittington said. Players have to be disciplined and conditioned and have a passion for the sport to make it in middle school basketball.

The best part of coaching, he said, is seeing his players succeed.

"It's rewarding to see a player at the beginning of the season who can't dribble the ball at all, dribbling the ball up and down the court like it's second nature by the end of the season," he said.

The Ballers season ends in July and by then, Whittington said he hopes the children gain a passion for the game.

Ballers take on Mustangs in classic

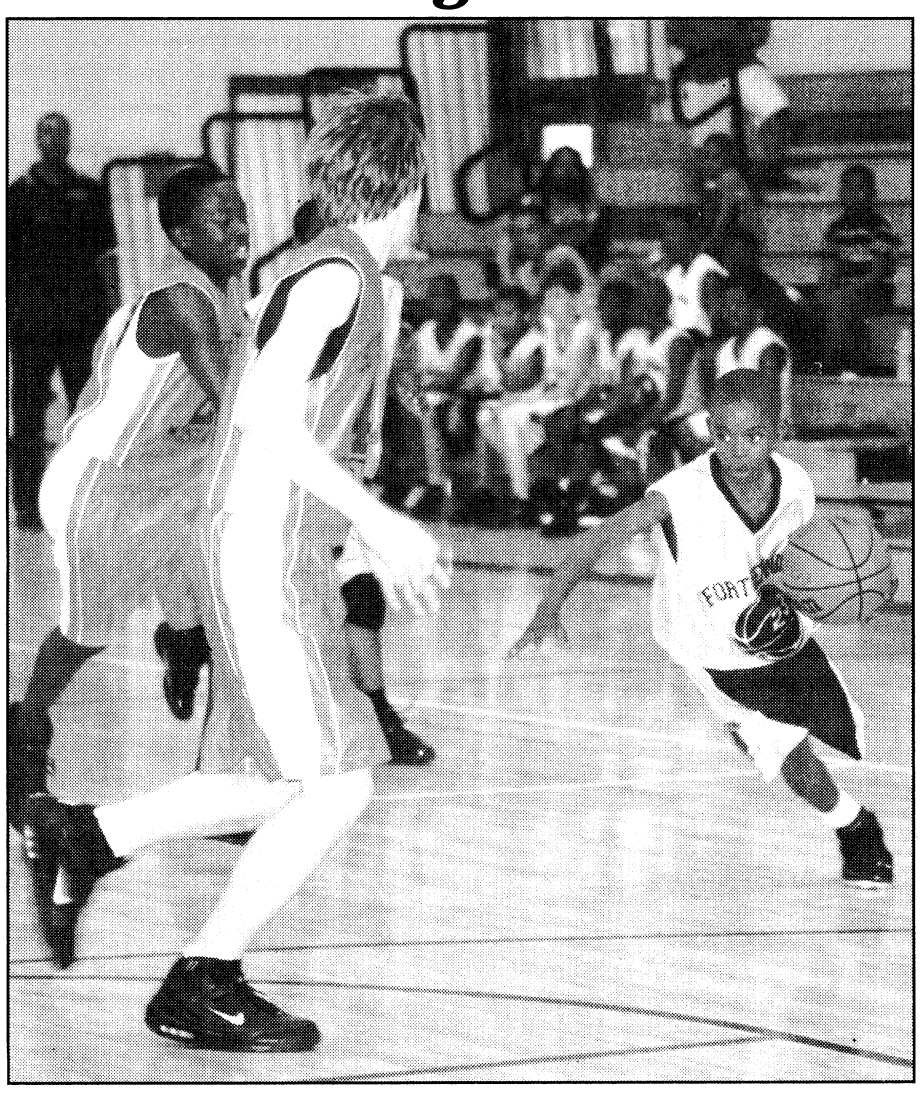
The 10- to 12-year-old Fort Benning Ballers basketball team competed in the 12th annual Riverfest Classic Friday and Saturday at Veterans Middle School, losing to the South Metro Mustangs, 49-19, in their third and final game to close out the tournament.

The Ballers kept the game close in the first period, but by the end of the period, Mustangs were on top, 8-7.



The Mustangs racked up 15 points in the second quarter, while limiting the Ballers to only five points and by the end of the first half, the Mustangs had a nine-point lead, 23-12.

"At halftime, I told the kids if we went out there and worked hard and pressed, we can get back in the game," said Ballers' coach Karl Ivey. "And, I told them to concentrate on free throws."

In the final half, the Mustangs' offense prevented the Ballers from catching up, sealing the victory for the Mustangs and sending the Ballers home with a 49-19 loss.

"I think if we could have communicated better on defense, slid to the spot instead of reaching, we would have been better off on the defensive end," Ivey said. "The kids worked hard out there and didn't quit. It's the first time for many players to experience this level of competition. We just have to keep working with them and teaching them the fundamentals and I think they will get better as the season goes on."

Baller Caleb Johnson said his team did well, but wasn't able to produce a win.

Rachel L. Watkins
Fort Benning Baller Jac'Quan Crawford moves the ball toward the basket Saturday in the 12th annual Riverfest Classic at Veterans Middle School. The Ballers were defeated by the South Metro Mustangs in their third game in the classic.

"I think with some more practice, we can do better at our next game," he said.

Scoring: Fort Benning Ballers: Whittington III (5), Knight Jr. (3), Warner (3), Crouch (3), Crawford (2), Ivey II (2), Horton (1).

South Metro Mustangs: Howard (12), Baum (10), Gutierrez (6), Maynard (6), Williams (4), Taylor (3), Mussellwhite (3), McCarden (2), Schultz (2), Easterwood (1).

Competing with best often shows shortcomings

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

April sure is an exciting time for sports fans. The NCAA will crown its men's and women's national champions, professional baseball gets underway and the National Football League will conduct its annual selection meeting otherwise known as the draft. Of course NASCAR drivers are tearing up the speedways, so there is something for everyone — almost.

During a recent trip to the supermarket, I came up with a new sport I feel should be introduced into mainstream athletics — Supermarket Olympics.

I didn't come up with the idea because I am specifically skilled at shopping, but because the event would encompass combined skills from many sports.

One word of caution though — men, you had better bring your "A" game if you want to compete with the women.

I have to hand it to women, or at least the ones I shopped with, or should I say competed against during my last trip to the grocery store. They seem to hold all the skills and advantages over us men.

Handicapping the event is easy and I made sure to keep close track of the women who entered "the fray" at the same time I did.

It all begins at the front door — I mean the starting line. If you have noticed, the buggies are lined up in stalls like the starting gate at the Kentucky Derby and trust me, the women are the first out of the gate. Advantage — women.

Rounding the first turn in the produce section is where I got an initial advantage, since I don't know what to look for. So, I grabbed what I needed while the women, my competitors, looked more for the quality of what they were getting. Advantage — men, since we are mostly meat eaters anyway.

On to the meat counter. I felt I could take the lead here since I know what I am looking for, could get it and move on to the next area quickly, boy was I wrong.

With hands as quick as Muhammad Ali, a woman snatched a steak from my hands at the meat counter — talk about fast, I am still having nightmares. Advantage — women.

About this time I noticed a woman who came into the store at the same time I did. What was she doing? Running a marathon? Her buggy had more stuff in it than mine, but then again she did have on tennis shoes and I had on cowboy boots. I guess it is all about pacing yourself and proper athletic attire. Advantage — women.

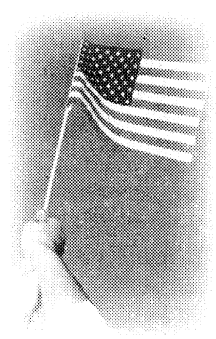
On the final leg of my supermarket challenge I encountered an elderly woman in the milk, cheese and butter section. Thinking I could make up some time by using my quickness to get around her, she showed me how experience and veteran moves do count for something. While trying to pass her by swerving between the Cheez-Its and potato chip display, she put me into the wall — I mean the dairy cooler. Advantage — women.

I quickly recovered knowing my final pit stop was ahead at the checkout stand. From the women who walked in the store at the same time I did, I was the last one in the pit.

As I walked out the door I imagined these women doing doughnuts in the parking lot as a part of their victory celebration, but they were already gone.

When I first thought of Supermarket Olympics, I thought it could be for both men and women, but to be honest, men do not stand a chance in the supermarket against these wily veterans — women.

Clint Eastwood once said, "A man has to know his limitations," and I do. My strengths are definitely not in the supermarket and I can accept that.



In my final analysis, women are definitely the quicker, smarter and stronger sex when it comes to competing in the supermarket, but it won't keep me out of the game — see ya in the frozen food section.

Benning Ballers compete in Riverfest Classic

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Eighty teams from Georgia, Florida and Alabama met Friday, Saturday and Sunday at recreation centers and middle schools around Columbus to compete in the 12th annual Riverfest Classic, hosted by Columbus Parks and Recreation. Among the teams were the 13- and 14-year old Fort Benning Ballers' basketball team. They played three games in the classic, but didn't pull out any wins.

In their second game of the classic, the Ballers fell to the Alabama Tarheels.

The Ballers kept the game close in the first period, but the Tarheels took a three-point lead at the end of the first period, 15-12.

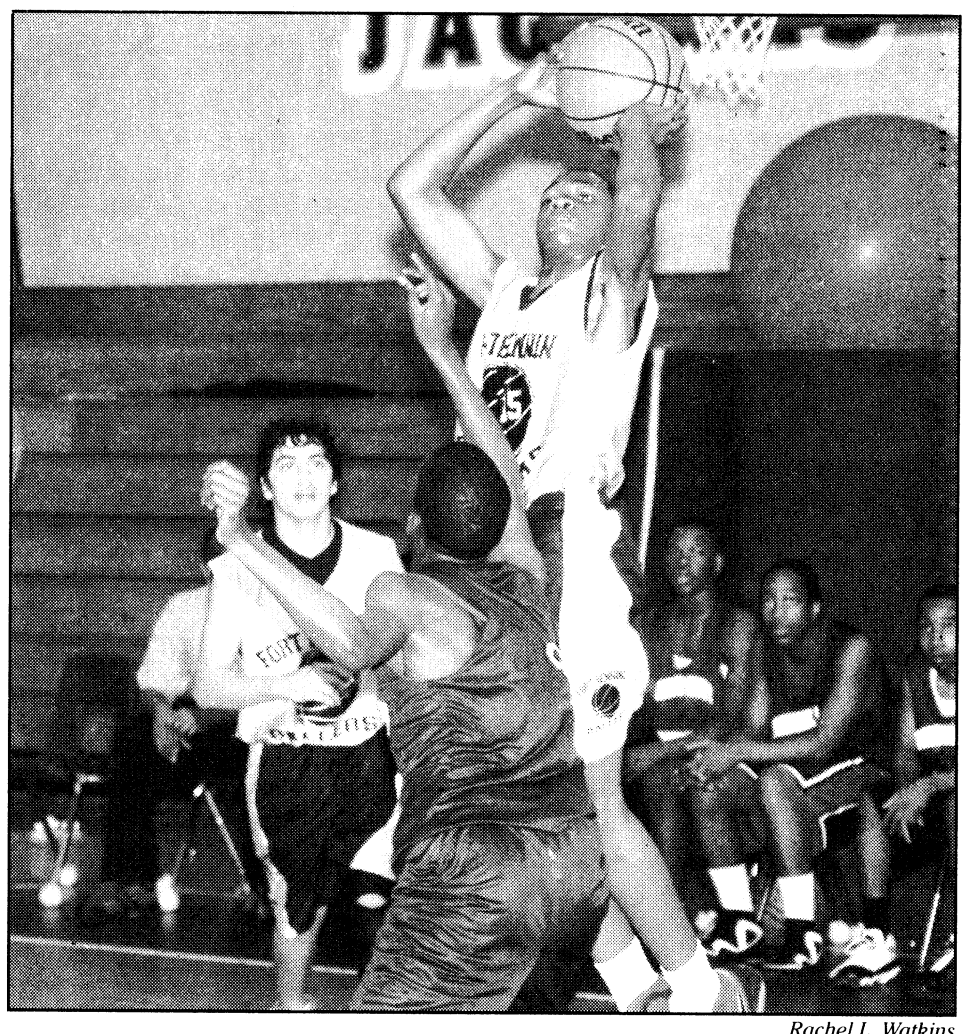
In the first few minutes of the second period, Fort Benning took the lead, but was unable to stay on top and by the end of the first half, the Tarheels led 31-26.

"At halftime, I told the team to forget about the first half and go into the second half and make runs and get comfortable with handling the ball," said Ballers' coach Paul Horton.

Both teams battled back and forth in the third period, but the Tarheels maintained control of the game, 45-35.

The Ballers' offense only allowed the Tarheels six points in the final quarter, but the six points was enough for the Tarheels to take a 51-40 victory.

"I think the kids had a fear of playing competitive basketball," Horton said. "The kids are learning from this — what they can and cannot do. I tell them after you lose a game, focus on the next and keep moving."



Baller Shawn Tandarich said the game was challenging.

"It was a rough game," he said. "I think we underestimated the other team and when they started winning, we gave up."

The Ballers played the Georgia Pacers in their third game of the classic and were defeated, 56-27.

Scoring:

Fort Benning Ballers: Wilcox (11), Tandarich (7), Barrientes (7), Garcia (6), Young (5), C. Davis (2), D. Davis (2). Alabama Tarheels: Farley (12), Jones (12), King (8), Terrell (7), J. Davis (4), Smith (2), Thomas (2), Gordan (2), Jones (2)

Clay: 'Physical strength is not a factor in this sport'

other shotgun sports, such as skeet or double trap shooting, sporting clay targets are presented in unpredictable patterns designed to simulate bird and game hunting.

At Cherokee Rose Sporting Resort in Griffin, Ga., a two-hour drive from Fort Benning, sporting clay shooters of all walks of life, ages and skill levels can test their aim amid the resort's pine and hardwood forest.

"One of the great things about sporting clays is that physical strength is not a factor in this sport," said Casey Atkinson, owner of Cherokee Rose. "Everything is on a level playing ground. It's just eye-hand coordination. Anybody can do it."

Atkinson, who has been shooting sporting clays for more than 18 years, said she fell in love with the sport the first time she tried it. Today, she's at the top of her game. Atkinson has won numerous national and international titles, and she's the only woman in the National Sporting Clays Association's top classification, master class. In 2005, she became the first woman to be inducted into the NSCA's hall of fame.

"One of the best parts of sporting clays is getting to meet so many different people from all walks of life, and being able to travel to different parts of the world I never would have traveled to," she said.

Jeff Arneson, a strategic planner with Fort Benning's Capabilities Development and Integration Directorate, agrees.

"You make all kinds of friends," he said. "It's a great sport, great people."

Arneson has been shooting since childhood, but didn't become interested in sporting clays until a friend introduced him to the sport in 2002.

"He got me to come out for a weekend to try it, and I really enjoyed it," he said.

Arneson is a member of the Social Shooting Club, a nonprofit organization that provides sporting clay competitions and outings. He shoots nearly every weekend, often with fellow club members.

Eloise Newton and her husband, Percy, joined Arneson and several other friends March 21 at Cherokee Rose for an afternoon of shooting.

Newton, like many sporting clay shooters, said she started out shooting skeet.

"Sporting clays is so much more fun," she said. "Every target is different. We travel all over the country and we plan our vacations around it."

Shooters at Cherokee Rose had the opportunity to participate in the resort's annual Anniversary Blast competition March 21, which Atkinson said was an opportunity for new shooters to try out the sport.

Atkinson encouraged those unfamiliar with the sport to test it out.

"I think the biggest fear, especially with women and children, is they're afraid the gun's going to hurt them," she said. "And if the gun properly fits, there isn't any recoil. And it's fun. When they break their first clay target, watching those eyes light up, it opens a whole new world. And it's a sport that husbands, wives and their children can all participate in together. It's a great outing."

"Come out and give it a shot, no pun intended," she said.

Blue Falcons defeat Roos

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Rock, paper, scissors — an unusual way to start a football game, but winning the opening "coin toss," in this case scissors over paper, was the first victory the Blue Falcons took over the Roos March 27 at Doughboy Stadium in the Maneuver Captains Career Course Mega Bowl.

The bowl, matching the top two teams in a 10-team league, also deviated from normal scoring in football by awarding one point for a touchdown giving the Blue Falcons a 9-4 victory, and the championship.

The Blue Falcons picked up two touchdowns before the Roos could score. By the end of the first half, the Blue Falcons had a six-point lead over the Roos, 8-2.

"At halftime, I told the team to keep our game plan," said Blue Falcons' coach Mike Mulherin. "We were concerned the other team was going to adjust and we were trying to think what they could do to counter our game."

In the final half, both teams battled up and down the field with turnovers playing a key part in the lack of scoring for most of the half. The Blue Falcons picked up one final touchdown, while the Roos scored only two touchdowns, sealing the victory for the Blue Falcons.

"We executed our game plan really well," Mulherin said. "We wanted to keep the game open and not spread the field and make them run a little more. We controlled the first half. The second half was a lot closer, but we were still able to get the win — it really worked out well."

Blue Falcons player Seth Rambo said his team gave 110 percent and executed when they had to.

"We had good passes and catches and we stuck to the fundamentals," he said.

Roos' team captain Jhon Henry said his team played hard but the elements may have played a big part in the outcome.

"I think weather (rain) definitely played a factor in the game — we were dropping some balls. The ball was pretty slippery and we had some bad passes."

The season is over and all ten teams took their MCCC final exams this week, but in addition to a diploma, the Blue Falcons will also take home bragging rights as the MCCC Mega Bowl champions.

Soldier wins $10K

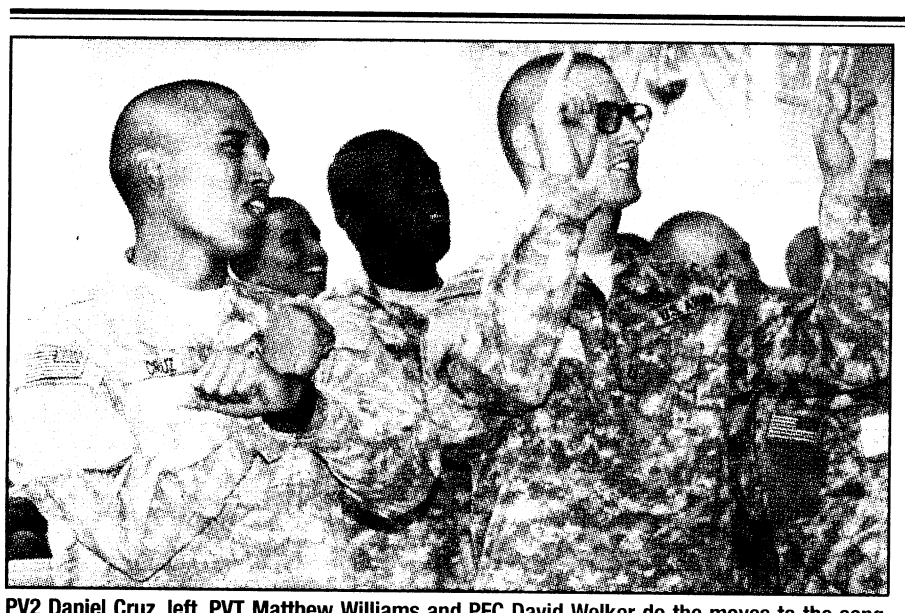
Soldiers, families beware of illegal solicitation

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"Wow, we just got scammed." That's what ran through PFC Ramon Diaz's mind after "Jimmy" left his house March 16.



"A young man came to my door saying he was a Reserve Soldier working for Success Express Sales, Inc., and he was looking for people to vote for him," Diaz said. "He said he is part of a competition trying to win a trip to Europe by getting votes."

Mentioning he was the son of an officer in the 3rd Infantry Division, Jimmy asked Diaz and his wife, Brittnie, to fill out a comment card, so the couple invited him into their home. That was when he first brought up the subject of money.

"He told us that if we were to buy magazines from him, he gets points helping him with the competition which was much better for him to win the trip than just filling out the comment card," Diaz said. "Every time I asked him about money his catch phrase was 'no, it's even easier than that.'"

They gave him a check for the Church lets trainees 'feel at home'

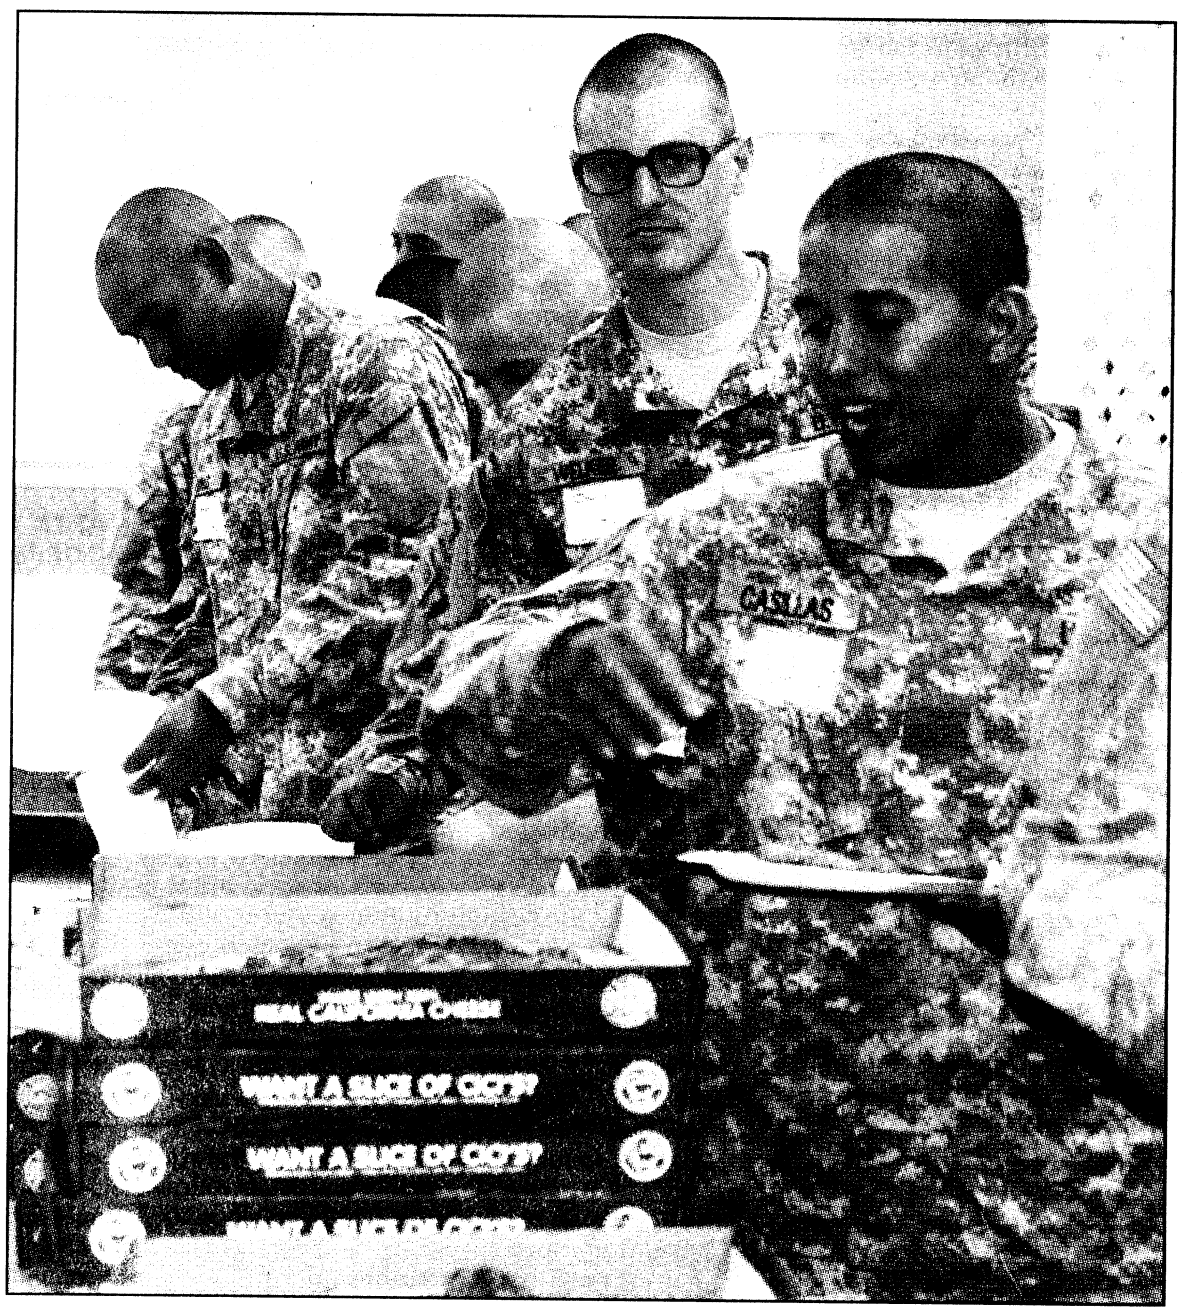
Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"It feels strange — a good kind of strange," said PFC Daniel Cruz of his visit to First Baptist Church for Operation Appreciation Saturday.

After 11 weeks of basic training, being in the civilian world took some getting used to, but the friendly smiles and warm welcomes from church members and volunteers helped, he said.

"They make you feel comfortable; they make you feel at home. I love it. It feels good to be appreciated," Cruz said.



"This lifted my motivation up. We have about three weeks left and I was kind of feeling horrible about next week, the whole FTX going on, but it's getting better. This is a blessing."

Showing gratitude and encouraging Soldiers is what Operation Appreciation is all about, said Stan Vaughan, interim missions coordinator at First Baptist in Columbus and a former Fort Benning chaplain.

"It's a way to reach out to Soldiers who come to Fort Benning for training and let them know there are people out there who support them and care for them," he said. "It's a chance to say to those Soldiers, 'Thank you for serving.' When the Soldiers leave, the expression on their faces kind of says it all, that there are citizens of this country who take notice of what they're doing (and) what a difference it makes."

Frank R. Loyd Elementary School celebrates 50 years

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Seven-year-old Justice Vinton enjoyed celebrating the 50-year anniversary of Loyd Elementary School, "the best school I've ever been to," he said.

"I like the teachers, the sports, the school flag, the choir, (but) the coolest thing is our school has Frank R. Loyd's picture right next to the office," Justice said.

The celebration Friday "was like a party," Justice said, because there was singing, a band and a lot of people.

In the crowd were past students, former teachers, Partners in Education, the entire school and Bonnie Crane, sister of 2LT Frank R. Loyd, the Soldier Loyd Elementary was named after.

"I was delighted to be invited," said Crane, who flew in from Massachusetts for the event. "I am so appreciative that my brother's memory goes on. He died in 1950, so 59 years after his death so many children have gone through the school inspired by what he did and his patriotism and dedication to this country. To think that his 22 years were very short, but he has touched so many lives, that is very heartwarming."

Cheryl Rodewig

The crowd applauds Bonnie Crane, the sister of 2LT Frank R. Loyd, for whom the school was named. Crane flew in from Massachusetts to visit the school for their 50-year celebration.

That morning, Crane visited many of the classrooms to meet the children and answer their questions, which were amusing, sensitive and surprisingly perceptive, "even from the little ones," she said.

"It shows that this generation of little kids is receiving a very fine

Students learn from Army leaders

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"The Army is the best example of leadership and structure the country has, and I don't think there's any better way to see that than to be out here in the midst of it," said Zach Zabel, a junior at Northside High School, after spending the day with Soldiers at Collins Training Center March 26.

Zabel was one of more than 30 Columbus area high school students who visited Fort Benning to learn about leadership. The students are members of Youth Leadership Columbus, a program of the Greater Columbus Georgia Chamber of Commerce for high school juniors to expose students to career opportunities and allow them to communicate with community leaders. Students are selected based on grades, teacher recommendations, an essay on leadership and extra-curricular involvement. The group meets once a month for field trips. Each trip focuses on different aspects of leadership, such as understanding leadership and taking control, the focus of the Fort Benning trip.

"I hope they'll see some leadership potential in themselves and a leader inside of them will emerge," said Keith Paul, Youth Leadership Columbus day chair for 2009. "A lot of them have never seen themselves as a leader; they've just seen themselves as a student. But at the end of this program they'll realize that to make it in this world, you've got to be a leader and hopefully they'll step up."

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Fort Benning Soldier wins top prize in AAFES giveaway

Specialist to use $10,000 toward daughter's birthday party, college fund

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

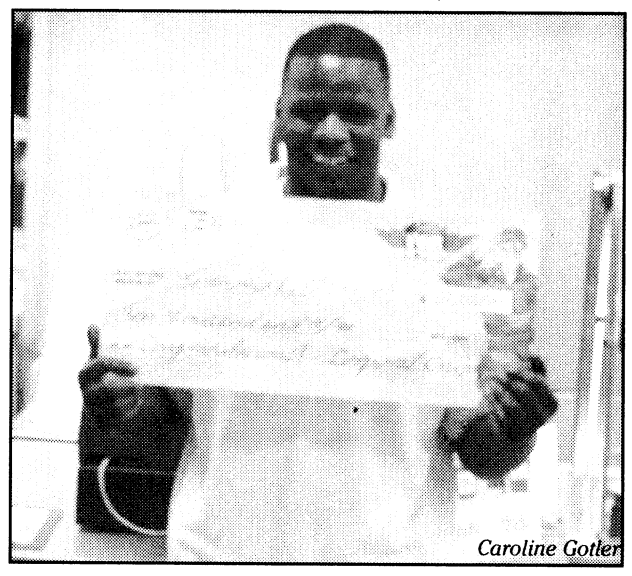
When SPC Jermorio Kelly, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, received a phone call from AAFES officials telling him he'd won $10,000, he didn't believe his ears.

"I was very surprised," he said. "I said, 'I won't believe it until I get the check.'"

That was in February. Now, Kelly said, with his prize check in hand, he believes he's won.

Kelly's win was the top prize in AAFES' Victory Crossing giveaway game. He won by turning in a game piece he peeled off a soft drink cup at the Kelley Hill Burger King, and was officially presented his check in a ceremony Friday at the restaurant.

Heidi Gonzales, manager of the Kelley Hill Burger King, said Kelly's win was the biggest event that has ever taken place in her restaurant.



"My crew and I were surprised," she said.

Kelly said he had already made plans to spend some of his winnings.

"My daughter's birthday is tomorrow," he said. "She's turning five. I'm going to throw her a good party, because next year, I know I'm not going to be here for it."

Kelly said he planned to save most of the rest of the money.

"My daughter has a college fund, so I'll put some toward that," he said.

Loyd: Continues working as team to teach students education in this school, that the dedication of the teachers and response of the students are both very positive," said Crane, who attended school on post with her brother more than 20 years before the creation of Loyd Elementary. "There's a curiosity, an enthusiasm and clearly a respect for our country and its symbols. That speaks well for the future."

Crane brought several mementos, such as her brother's high school ring and his second lieutenant rank, to display in the school's "antique museum" alongside a report card from 1959 and a typewriter.

The celebration included a performance by the Spencer High School Marching Band, the presentation of a new Loyd flag and the unveiling of the Loyd Panther, a statue of the school's mascot which will be placed in Panther Park in front of the school this month.

A time capsule the students helped put together for the 50th anniversary will be buried in the park until the centennial anniversary.

"It is so important to be part of history," said Julita Martinez, the school principal. "And that is something I've tried to instill in my children ... how lucky they are to be the ones here at the perfect time. It's been a very exciting learning experience for all of us. (Students) learned a lot about Frank R. Loyd and about the things that happened in the last five decades. They researched means of transportation, means of communications, the heroes that we had in the '50s."

In the coming years, Martinez said, she hopes the school continues to move "from good to great" as they have in the past.

"Our logo is creating excellence for tomorrow's world," she said. "We are hoping that if we continue working as a team on behalf of our children, this school is going to be one of the best on Fort Benning. I foresee another 50 wonderful years for this school."

Trip: Offers glimpse into Army life

LTC Tom Carlisle, commander of the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, who hosted the event, and CSM John Burns, Ranger Training Brigade, began the students' day by leading them in a discussion of leadership styles and the Army's view of what makes a good leader.

"The root of being a leader is enabling whoever's underneath you to function just as well with you as without you," Zabel said after listening to Carlisle and Burns explain their roles. "You have to think about how everything you do is going to influence people. I think that's one thing I'm going to take back with me — I need to be more conscious of what I'm doing, what I'm saying to everybody."

Next, SPC Michael Mitchum, SSG Ausean Fields and 2LT Kerry Zanders, all Soldiers in the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt., shared their personal leadership experiences with students.

"(I hope they will) strive to be the best they can be, not to be a follower, but to be a leader," Mitchum said.

At lunchtime, the students split into groups of about 10 each, and dined on MREs with Soldiers. The experience was meant to pull the students out of their comfort zones, Paul said, and for many, it did just that.

"I was expecting it to be really dry and nasty, but it was pretty good," said Caroline Adams, a junior at Brookstone School whose MRE contained chicken fajitas.

"I had the chicken and noodles, and I liked the crackers and cheese," said Chantea Barber, a junior at Pacelli Catholic High School. "People were joking about how it wasn't good, but I liked it. It's better than some cafeteria food."

After lunch, the students got hands-on experience with Army training outside the classroom. They rotated between activities including riding in a Stryker Infantry Carrier Vehicle, using the Bradley Fighting Vehicle simulators and trying on combat gear.

For many of the students, the day was their first glimpse into Army life, and the first time they had spent time on Fort Benning.

"(Army life) is really not as bad as a lot of people make it out to be," Adams said. "I know there are dangers, but it's not like it's a horrible way of life at all."

Before leaving Fort Benning, each student received a dog tag engraved with the Army Values and a certificate and coin from the 1st Bn., 29th Inf. Regt.

Quashundra Manuel, a junior at Spencer High School, said the day's activities gave her a new set of tools to use in future leadership roles.

"I learned that if you are to be a leader, you also have to be led," said Manuel, who plans to attend college and become a physical therapist. "It's going to help me later on in life. That way I'll know when I need to lead and when I need to follow."

Scams: 'Use your instincts'

subscription, but after he left, some quick online research showed it was a scam that had also targeted other military installations.

Now, Diaz said, he doesn't want that to happen to anyone else.

Since Jimmy didn't have a commercial solicitation permit to sell on post, he was detained by the military police and charged with criminal trespass and must appear in court before the federal magistrate, said CPT Joseph LaBranche, operations officer for the Provost Marshal Office.

The permit means that post officials have looked into the business to make sure it's legitimate, LaBranche said. Post residents should be wary of anyone soliciting them on post and ask to see a permit before buying anything.

If a permit can't be presented, notify the MPs, LaBranche said.

Families living off post should report suspicious activity to the police. They can also file a complaint with the Better Business Bureau to warn others of a possible scam.

"My recommendation is to know the individuals you may be purchasing from, for example, children in the neighborhood selling candy for their school," LaBranche said.

"I would (also) recommend using cash versus check, credit or debit, so individuals can't use the information for fraudulent purposes later. You have to be careful about giving bank account information (or) credit card numbers to anybody."

As with most instances, it comes down to common sense.

"Use your instincts," LaBranche said. "People know what feels right, what feels wrong."

There are some warning signs to look for. A reputable business will not ask for personal identification information, like a social security number, said Laurel Wilkerson, chief of the Legal Assistance Division, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

Wilkerson suggested Soldiers and families do research before spending money with a new company, especially in the case of door-to-door sales which rely on pressure and limited time to compel potential customers to make quick decisions to buy, she said.

"In any kind of situation, if something doesn't sound right, check it out, spend a little time making sure they're a valid business," Wilkerson said. "We're in tough economic times, and sometimes people are looking to make a dollar at the expense of other people, so it's just smart to check out companies before doing business with them."

Military ID cardholders who think they have been scammed can call the OSJA at 706-545-3281.

Church: Says thanks

Held about once a month, Operation Appreciation includes singing, a brief message, plenty of food, free phone calls and other entertainment, such as playing basketball or watching a game on TV.

Those options are definitely better than the alternative of "watching a movie in the day room (that) would've been the fifth time we'd all seen it," said PFC Timothy Campbell, 30th Adjutant General Battalion.

"I think it's nice to kind of get away from everything," he said. "Everybody seems really friendly here. The food is good. The atmosphere is pretty relaxed. It's a nice break from it all, just to have a good time, share some stories with friends and hang out with good people. Being out here kind of reminds me of home."

For the 40 Soldiers in D Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, it was also a reward for good behavior and high PT scores.

"I love what the Soldiers stand for and what they're doing, and I definitely appreciate them very much," said Alton Harpe, who volunteered at the event for the first time last week. "We just wanted to do what little bit we could to show our appreciation and give them a chance to relax and call home and get some food."

Harpe, 81, joined the Army shortly before the end of World War II. He knew some amazing Soldiers then, he said, and he enjoyed getting to know some of today's Soldiers at Saturday's event.

"They're all volunteering to do service for their country, and I think that's great," he said. "These guys are worth being admired for what they are willing to do."

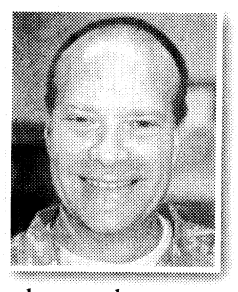
Good spiritual habits can help improve resiliency

Chaplain (MAJ) Michael L. Jeffries
197TH IN BDE

Resiliency is the ability of an object to return to its normal shape after being under pressure or stress that causes it to be stretched or compressed. The Army is working very hard to help Soldiers and families develop resiliency in their lives. The operational tempo of deployments and training has placed a tremendous amount of pressure on Soldiers and families.

Concrete without reinforcement is very brittle and crumbles under forces that place a load on it or try to twist it. However once steel rods or wire are placed inside the concrete it becomes amazingly strong. It can then be used for construction, roads, bridges and many other applications where it needs strength to bear a load or withstand forces that want to twist it out of shape. The concrete becomes stronger from the inside out when it is joined with the steel. They both lend to each other their greatest strengths and are able to accomplish great things.

Life can often put pressure and stress on our lives and try and twist us out of shape. You may have experienced a time in life when you thought you were going to break and crumble under the pressure and needed some reinforcement in your life to help you to endure and bear up under the load of life. The promise of God in our lives is to provide that reinforcement when we invite Him into our lives. Though we do not have much to offer God, He offers to us the very best that He has. God gave us his Son, Jesus, to join together with us and with the presence of God in our lives we able to endure and accomplish greater things than we ever thought possible.



Resiliency in life does not consist of just one thing but multiple assets coming together. The bringing together of good physical health, good mental/emotional health and good spiritual health all contribute to each other to build strong resilient men and women. As a Chaplain I encourage you to incorporate in your life some spiritual habits that help to strengthen spiritual resiliency. I encourage you to participate in a community of faith, spend time in meditation upon Holy Scripture, and spend time in prayer. This by no means is an exhaustive list but this provides a great place to start.

Being spiritually strong helps you to be Army Strong.

Kings, queens are made, not born

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Guys, how many of you would like to have the perfect wife? How many want to be the king of your castle? How many of you want to have the passion restored in your relationship? Remember how it was when you were dating, how she loved and respected you? What has changed? Oh, yes, you got married. Passion, love and respect don't have to fall by the wayside when you get married; in fact they should only get better.

Most men marry and want things to remain just the way they are while most women want to improve their relationship. What is wrong with wanting an even better relationship? Nothing. Part of the confusion is that the improvement is often translated by a man as "she wants to change me." If she wants to change me, then something is wrong with me. And if something is wrong with me, in a sense, I am a failure. And most men become confused as to how they ended up getting to this point from a blissful beginning.

Men are often task oriented. When a man dates he is looking for a mate. So what do you do, men? You advertise to your lady that you are her hero, her knight in shining armor, ready to defend and protect her honor and provide for her needs. You spend time with her, buy her gifts, take her out wining and dining her. In essence, you demonstrate you value and honor her. Then you marry her and what she believes is what you advertised while dating. She believes you will continue to treat her this way. But many men stop this dating treatment because they have completed the task of finding a mate.

After I was married, my wife asked me if I still loved her. Trying to process this through my mind was confusing. I married her, didn't I? What more can I do to demonstrate my love for her? To me, there was nothing greater I could do to show my love than to marry her. Well, I soon learned that a woman needs daily reminders of our love. They need daily affirmation of our commitment to them.

If you want to have a great relationship with your wife, take charge. Show her you love, honor and respect her — every day. When you make her feel she is the number one human relationship in your life, she will melt in your arms like butter on a hot Georgia day. If you would get up every morning and seek to honor your wife, you will have passion in your marriage. If you tend to her needs each day, you will have a divorce-proof marriage.

You may have heard that the mood of the family is set by the wife. While this may be true, a husband has the power in words and deeds to love, honor and respect his wife. In doing so, her mood will be one worth coming home to, it will be one worth spending time with, and it will be one filled with passion for her husband.

Negative words are like boulders which emotionally crush your wife. Your actions speak louder than words. Ask your wife what she needs and wants from you. Fulfill your advertised promises you made to her when you married her and she will become a different woman. She will become the woman you were crazy about when you were dating, the woman of your dreams.

If you are feeling you have been dethroned in your castle or stripped of your queenly crown, we can help restore peace in your kingdom. The Chaplain Family Life Center's trained counselors can help you get back on the track to marital bliss. Call 706-545-1760 or stop by our office, 2606 Dixie Road, Soldier's Plaza.

Post to celebrate Jewish Passover

Chaplain (MAJ) Howard Fields
192ND INFANTRY BRIGADE

The Jewish festival of Passover begins Wednesday at sunset and is eight days long. Passover celebrates the Israelites freedom from slavery. The first two nights of Passover have a unique ceremony called a Seder. A Seder takes place at the dinner table. Aside from a meal, it includes re-telling the story of Exodus — the Israelites escape from Egypt and slavery.

The story is told through the symbols of the festival, including matza (unleavened bread), bitter herbs and green vegetables to remind Jews of springtime and rebirth.

Fort Benning will celebrate Passover at the Follow Me Chapel on Ingersoll Street.

It will begin with a worship service at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday and the Seder starts at 7 and will end at approximately 9:30 p.m. The 192nd Infantry Brigade ministry team will prepare kosher dishes for the Seder. For more information or to make reservations, call 706-544-9496 or 706-544-9432.

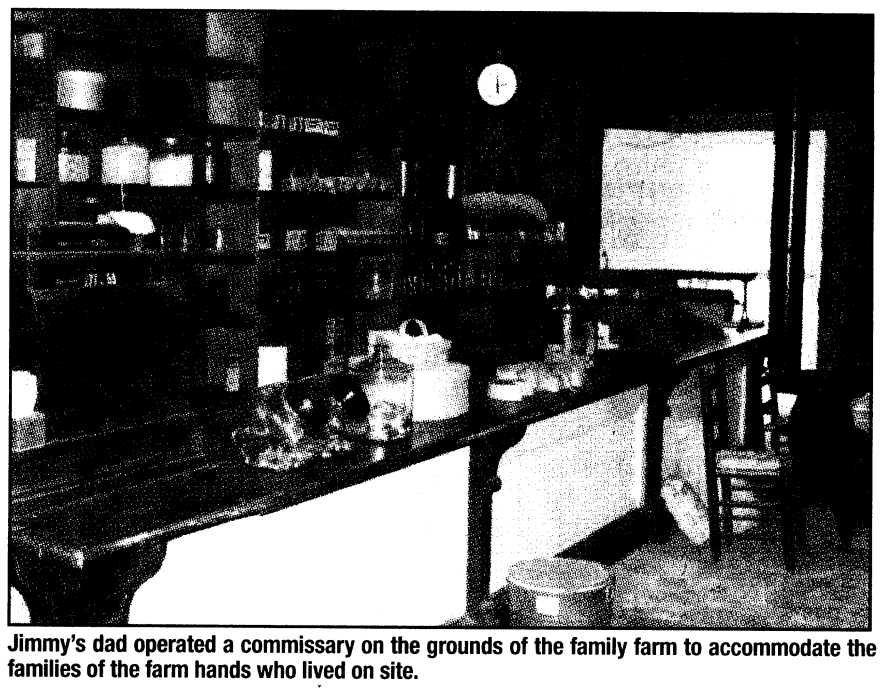
James Earl Carter Sr. moved his family to this house in 1928, when Jimmy was 4 years old. The house, built in 1922, had no electricity or running water until 1938. The National Park Service restored the house to appear as it would have in the 1930s. Jimmy lived here until he left for college in 1941. The home is one of a half-dozen sites open to the public on the Plains historic self-guided tour.

Just plain Plains

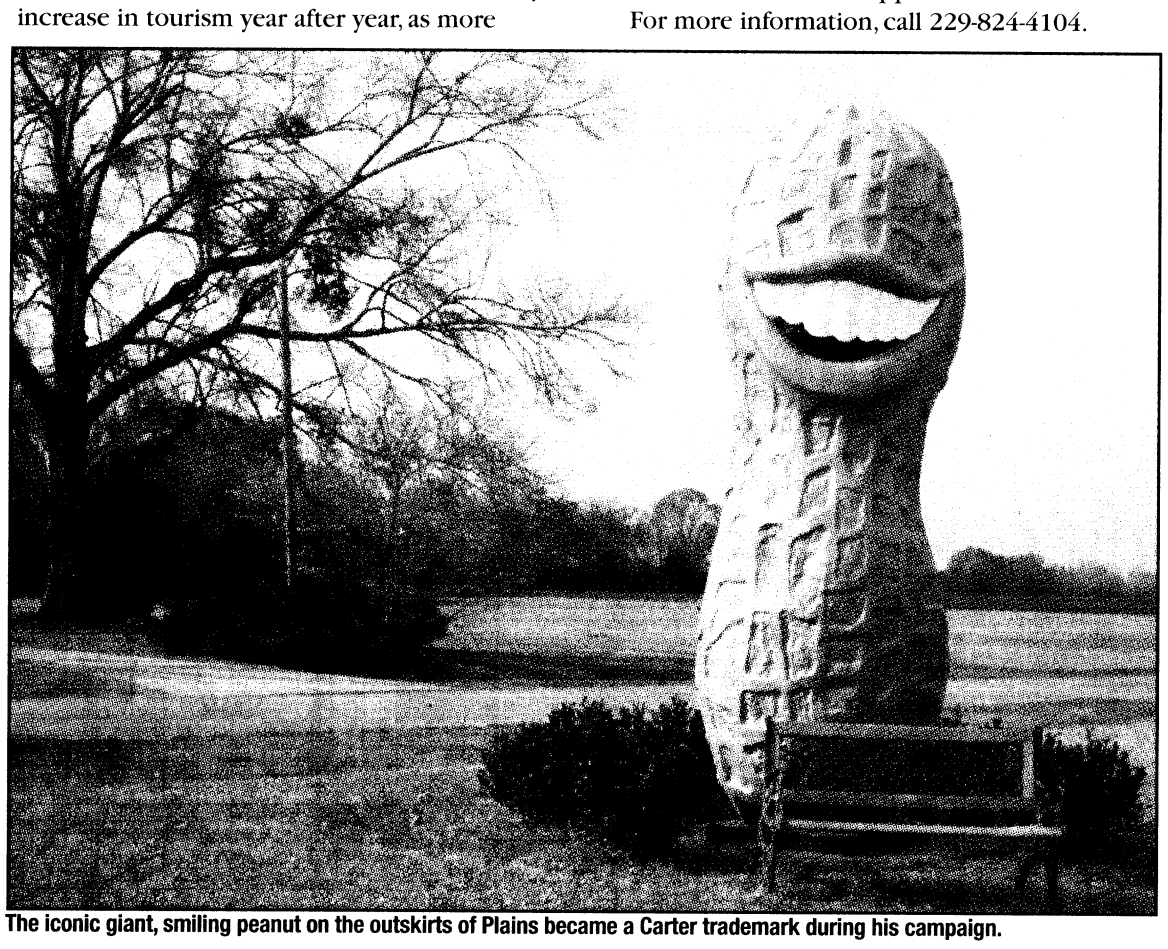
Story and photos by Bridgett Siter

Why anyone would name a town in Georgia after the plain in Babylon is a mystery to me. If my memory of third-grade Sunday school serves me right, the plain of Dura was where those three Hebrew boys, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, refused to bow down to worship King Nebuchadnezzer's golden idol. When three tiny farming villages came together in 1850 in Sumpter County to form one commercial hub, centered on a railroad depot, they called their town Plains of Dura. Eventually, the cumbersome title was shortened to Plains. Whew.



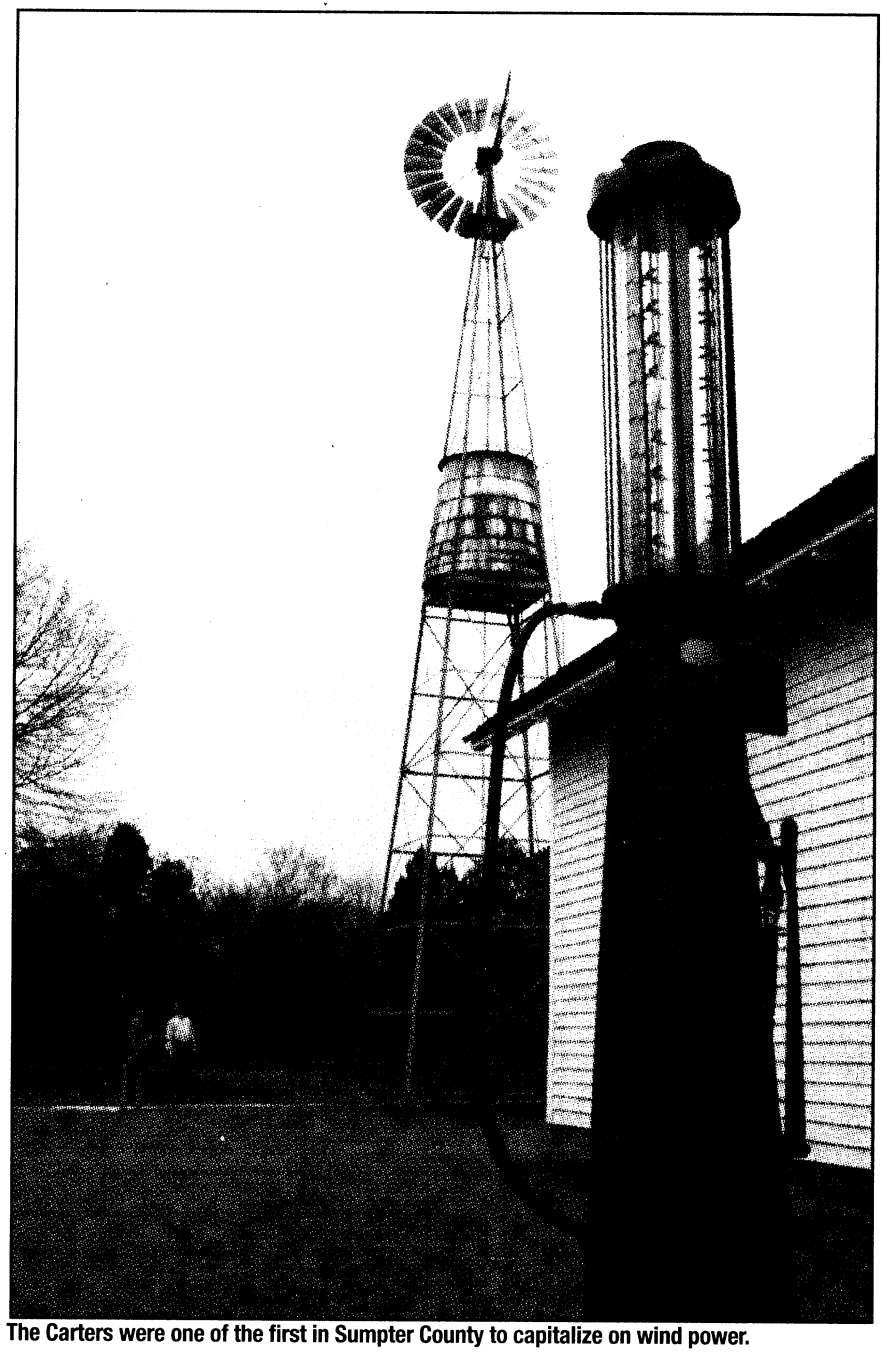
That obscure bit of Georgia trivia would have never seen the light of day, outside of Sumpter County anyway, were it not for Jimmy Carter, who put Plains on the map in 1975, when he announced his candidacy for president. America flocked to Plains to meet the small town farmer-turned-politician — a Southern Baptist, at that! — who had the audacity to take on Washington.

And they're still coming. In the 30 years since Carter left the White House and headed back home to Georgia, Plains has seen a steady increase in tourism year after year, as more people discover the charm of the small town that produced a charming first family.



Plains is not a tourist town, per se. It's not touristy. Local residents - all 637 of them - stand to profit very little from the tourist industry, save for the occasional peanut purchase or dinner at Mom's Café. So you'll know when you're welcomed — and you will be welcomed — that it's genuine and warm. Nobody's out to make a buck; they're just glad to see you.

The National Park Service has preserved a number of historical sites, including the train depot which served as Carter's campaign headquarters, his boyhood home and the high school he and Rosalynn attended. You'll find a brochure to guide you from site to site at www.nps.gov/jica. Plan to spend the night at the Plains Historic Inn and Antiques mall (ask for the Presidential Suite) in the Plains' Business District, which is a fairly pretentious name for a two-block stretch of real estate in the heart of Plains. If you time your visit just right, you might find yourself seated next to Jimmy and Rosalynn at the Old Bank Cafe. It happens.



For more information, call 229-824-4104.

Jimmy's dad operated a commissary on the grounds of the family farm to accommodate the families of the farm hands who lived on site.

The iconic giant, smiling peanut on the outskirts of Plains became a Carter trademark during his campaign.

The Carters were one of the first in Sumpter County to capitalize on wind power.

OPENING TODAY

FAST AND FURIOUS

Fugitive ex-con Dom Toretto reignites his feud with Brian O'Connor when a crime brings them back to Los Angeles. But as they are forced to confront a shared enemy, Dom and Brian must learn to trust each other. Through an adventure with stunts like convoy heists and precision tunnel crawls across international lines, the two men find the best way to get revenge is by pushing the limits of what's possible behind the wheel.

Fast and Furious stars Paul Walker, Vin Diesel and Michelle Rodriguez. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, sexual content, language and drug references.

ADVENTURELAND

It's 1987 and James Brennan has just graduated college. He planned to spend the summer trekking through Europe, but because of his family's sudden economic difficulties, he takes a job manning a game booth at Adventureland, an amusement park. While James believes at first that the park is the bane of his existence, he realizes as the summer goes on that things at Adventureland are not always what they seem. Falling for Em Lewin, a sharp-tongued arcade worker, James discovers the courage to battle for her heart.

Adventureland stars Jesse Eisenberg, Ryan Reynolds and Kristen Stewart. It's rated R for language, drug use and sexual references.

ALSO PLAYING

MONSTERS VS. ALIENS

After being hit by a meteorite on her wedding day, Susan Murphy is transformed into a monster named Ginormica and subsequently whisked away to a secret government compound where others like her have been rounded up over the years. When the Earth comes under attack by an alien commander known as Gallaxhar, however, Ginormica and her new allies are set free to save the planet.

The movie stars the voices of Reese Witherspoon, Will Arnett, Rainn Wilson and Kiefer Sutherland. It's rated PG for sci-fi action, crude humor and language.

THE HAUNTING IN CONNECTICUT

The Haunting in Connecticut is the story of a family forced to relocate near a clinic where their son was being treated for cancer. Strained financially and emotionally, the family discovers their recently renovated home was a former mortuary with a dark history. After experiencing violent supernatural events both inside and out of the house, the family seeks the help of ghost hunters and the Catholic Church, which performs an exorcism.

The movie stars Virginia Madsen, Brooklyn Prouix and Elias Koteas. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of terror and disturbing images.

12 ROUNDS

When New Orleans Police Detective Danny Fisher stops a brilliant thief, Miles, from getting away with a multi-million-dollar heist, the thief's girlfriend is accidentally killed. After escaping from prison, the criminal mastermind enacts his revenge, taunting Danny with a series of near-impossible puzzles and tasks... 12 rounds... that Danny must somehow complete to save the life of his fiancée.

The movie stars John Cena, Steve Harris, Aidan Gillen and Brian J. White. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action.

DUPLICITY

CIA officer Claire Stenwick and MI6 agent Ray Koval have left the world of government intelligence to cash in on a highly profitable cold war raging between two rival multinational corporations. Their mission is to secure the formula for a product that will bring a fortune to the company that patents it first. And for Stenwick's and Koval's employers, nothing is out of bounds. But as the stakes rise, the trickiest secret for Stenwick and Koval is their growing attraction. As they try to stay one step ahead of the other, they find the only thing they can't cheat their way out of is love.

Duplicity stars Julia Roberts, Clive Owen, Paul Giamatti and Billy Bob Thornton. It's rated PG-13 for language and sexual content.

I LOVE YOU, MAN

Peter Klaven is a successful real estate agent engaged to Zooey, the woman of his dreams. But, he realizes he has no male friend close enough to serve as best man in his wedding. So, Peter sets out to rectify the situation through a series of "man dates" and meets Sydney Fife, a charming, opinionated man with whom he instantly bonds. But the closer the two men get, the more Peter's relationship with Zooey suffers, and Peter must choose between his fiancée and his new friend.

The movie stars Paul Rudd, Jason Segel, Rashida Jones and Jaime Pressly. It's rated R for language and sexual references.

KNOWING

When a time capsule from 1958 is opened at an elementary school, John Koestler's son Caleb finds a sheet of paper filled with rows of seemingly random numbers. John realizes the message accurately pinpoints the dates, death tolls and coordinates of every major disaster of the past 50 years, and predicts three events involving himself and his son which will end in global destruction. When the authorities ignore John's warnings, he enlists the help of the daughter and granddaughter of the message's author to prevent more destruction.

Knowing stars Nicolas Cage, Lara Robinson and Chandler Canterbury. It's rated PG-13 for disaster sequences, disturbing images and language.

BROTHERS AT WAR

Jake Rademacher travels to Iraq to understand the motivation of his two brothers serving there. He gains unprecedented access to U.S. and Iraqi combat units. He follows his brothers and other Soldiers and Marines on missions and through everyday life in Iraq, and also explores the effects of his brothers' deployment on their families.

Brothers at War is rated R for language and war images.

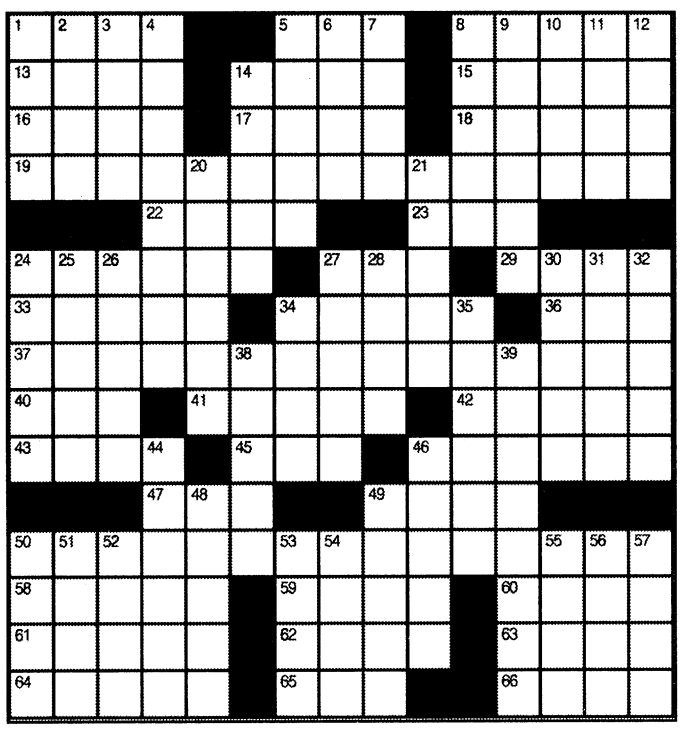
RACE TO WITCH MOUNTAIN

When Las Vegas cab driver Jack Bruno encounters two teenagers with supernatural powers in his cab, he suddenly finds himself in the middle of an adventure he can't explain. Rumors have circulated for years about Witch Mountain, known for unexplained phenomena and strange sightings. Working together, Jack and his passengers discover the only way to save the world is to unravel the secrets of Witch Mountain.

The movie stars Dwayne Johnson, Ciaran Hinds and Anna-Sophia Robb. It's rated PG for sequences of action and violence, dangerous situations and thematic elements.

THE LAST HOUSE ON THE LEFT

The night Mari arrives at the remote Collingwood lake house, she and her friend are kidnapped by a prison escapee. Terrified and left for dead, Mari's only hope is to make it back to her parents, John and Emma. But, Mari's attackers unknowingly seek shelter at the only place she could be safe. And when her family learns Mari's story, they set out to make her attackers wish they had never come to their house.



The movie stars Garret Dillahunt, Rhys Coiro, Martha MacIsaac and Riki Lindhome. It's rated R for violence including a rape, language, nudity and drug use.

WATCHMEN

In an alternate version of 1985 America, costumed superheroes are part of everyday life, and the "Doomsday Clock" that tracks the United States' tension with the Soviet Union is permanently set at five minutes to midnight. Rorschach, a washed-up vigilante, discovers one of his former colleagues has been murdered, and sets out to uncover a plot to kill and discredit all past and present superheroes. As he reconnects with his former crime-fighting legion, he glimpses a wide-ranging conspiracy with catastrophic consequences for the future.

Watchmen stars Malin Akerman, Billy Crudup and Matthew Goode. It is rated R for violence, sexuality, nudity and language.

THINGS to do

Columbus State University jazz festival
TODAY-SATURDAY

Columbus State University will kick off its jazz festival with a concert from Mingus Big Band at 7:30 p.m. today at the RiverCenter. This band, drawn from New York's jazz players, has performed at jazz festivals and clubs and recorded seven albums. Members of the Mingus Big Band will host a free pre-concert question and answer session at 6:45 p.m. in Studio Theatre.

The CSU Jazz Band and Melvin Jones will perform at 1 p.m. Saturday at the RiverCenter. The concert will feature works from Maria Schneider, Dave Rivello, Thad Jones and Chick Corea. Shirantha Beddage will direct the concert. The David Brothers Super Big Band will perform at 4 p.m. Saturday at the RiverCenter. The band is made up of musicians from across Georgia.

Admission is $5 per show. For more information or to get tickets, go to the RiverCenter box office, call 706-256-3612 or go to www.rivercenter.org.

Machinal
TODAY-SUNDAY

Columbus State University Theatre presents the 1928 Broadway classic Machinal today-Sunday at CSU Theatre on the Park Mainstage in downtown Columbus.

The play is loosely based on the sensational 1927 murder trial of Ruth Snyder — the first woman put to death by the electric chair for murdering her husband.

Shows are at 7:30 p.m. today and Saturday and 2 p.m. Sunday. Admission is $15, $13 for seniors, children, active-duty military and CSU alumni and free for CSU faculty and staff (limit two) and students (limit one).

For more information, call the box office at 706-507-8444.

Ceramics exhibition
TODAY-APRIL 17

Columbus State's Department of Art is hosting "Standing on the Shoulders of Giants," a ceramics exhibition by guest artists through April 17 in the Corn Center for Visual Arts' Illges Gallery in downtown Columbus. Participating artists are Val Cushing, Chris Gustin, Wayne Higby, John Jessiman, Ji-Wan Joo, Karen Karnes, Jackson Li, Brad Schwieger, Don Reitz, Allan Rosenbaum, Chris Staley, Lydia Thompson and Peter Voulkos. A closing reception is from 6 to 7 p.m. April 17 in the gallery.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday-Friday and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday. The Corn Center is located in downtown Columbus. Parking is available in the RiverCenter parking garage on Broadway. For more information, call 706-507-8300.

Murder mystery theater at the Garrett-Bullock House
TODAY-APRIL 25

The Garrett-Bullock House presents Cat on a Hot Tin Streetcar, written by Nita Hardy.

It's Fat Daddy's birthday party, and he's about to arrive from the Mustard and Mayo Clinic. Blanche Boudoir and Manly Cole-Slawski lock verbal horns again but this time with murderous results. It's Tennessee Williams' characters all rolled into one family. Everyone is a suspect in the murder mystery, including the guests.

The show is today and Saturday, April 16-17 and 23-25. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. and the performance begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are $35 per person on Thursdays and $45 per person on Fridays and Saturdays. The price incudes dinner, sales tax, gratuity and the play. Reservations are required and can be made by calling 706-536-4054.

5th RTB officer wins MacArthur award

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

When CPT Paul W. Witkowski received word he had been named as the only Training and Doctrine Command Soldier to win the General Douglas MacArthur Leadership Award he had just returned from preparing his students for another phase of their training, but it wasn't till later that he had the chance to think about the impact of the award.

Witkowski

"I had just finished walking a Ranger patrol and was focused on the mission at hand; preparing Ranger students for the Florida Phase of Ranger School," Witkowski said. "After I had time to think about it I was pleasantly pleased. For me, the MacArthur award is recognition of a career of service to our nation, our Army, and the Soldiers it has been my privilege to serve with and for. So this a wonderful opportunity, to be recognized and return back to work to continue to serve my Soldiers."

The General Douglas MacArthur Leadership Award recognizes company grade officers who demonstrate the ideals for which General MacArthur stood — duty, honor, country. The award is presented to only a select few officers and warrant officers; a total of 25 officers and three warrant officers from the active duty, Army National Guard and U.S. Army Reserve ranks.

Soldiers earn EFMB

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Seventy-four Soldiers came to Fort Benning March 22 to earn the Expert Field Medical Badge, but just over half are expected to emerge from their training Saturday wearing the badge.

"It's a high commodity," said MSG Harold Montgomery, NCOIC for the EFMB course. "Not a lot of people have the badge right now. In a few years, it's very likely it could make the difference in promotion selections and advancement."

Armywide, the EFMB has one of the highest attrition rates of any course, with only about 14 percent of candidates earning the badge each year. The rate for Fort Benning's course is about 55 percent, a difference Montgomery attributes to smaller class sizes and longer training. Though regulations call for a two-week course, Fort Benning EFMB candidates train and test for three weeks, which Montgomery said allows trainers to give more in-depth instruction.

To earn the badge, Soldiers must demonstrate proficiency not only in medical skills, but also in basic soldiering skills such as land navigation and reacting and moving under fire. Those with passing scores after the course's four and a half days of written and field testing earn the right to prove themselves on its final event, a 12-mile road march.

For some candidates, the course was an opportunity to brush up forgotten skills.

"Land navigation is not something you use in Afghanistan or Iraq very much, but when you come back here, it's like wiping the dust off," said SGT Bryson Grove, a combat medic with the 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment. "It's allowed me to rehash some of the basic medical skills I learned in Advanced Individual Training and put them to use again."

Grove said training for the EFMB would help him contribute to the success of future missions because he will be better able to train junior Soldiers.

"If you have a guy who comes to your unit with the EFMB, these (young) medics are going to look up to him,"

Testing in 'a comfortable environment'

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Taking a test may not be many students' favorite activity, but staff at Fort Benning's Army Continuing Education System Testing Center are committed to making testing as painless as possible.

"Everyone has a certain nervousness when they take a test," said Marvin Alston, Fort Benning test control officer. "I try to help them relax as much as possible by providing a comfortable environment."

The testing center's services are available to active-duty Soldiers and adult family members. Testing center staff administer and act as proctors for a variety of academic and personnel tests through the Army Personnel Testing Program and the Defense Activity for Non-traditional Education Support, including the Armed Forces Classification Test, the Defense Language Aptitude Battery and the General Technical predictor test.

Some of the academic tests available at the center include the SAT, ACT, GED and GRE and GMAT. Staff also proctor tests for Soldiers and family members enrolled in distance learning college classes.

Fort Benning's testing center is certified by the Department of Defense, and is the only center in the tricommunity

Paratroopers gather on post for Airborne festival

The past, present and future of the Army's Airborne community converged when paratroopers from across the country gathered at Fort Benning Friday for the 32nd annual Airborne Awards Festival.

The festival, which drew hundreds of veterans and guests, included a demonstration by the Airborne 5000 team, a wreath laying ceremony during the graduation of class 018-09 from the Army Basic Airborne Course, and firing time at Red Cloud Range. The festival was capped by a dinner for the veterans Saturday in Atlanta.

"It brings back many memories," said John Q. Bullard, a former captain with the 188th Glider Infantry Regiment during World War II. "It's always a good feeling to come back and see that we have this freedom. I like being able to be proud that I'm in the United States of America."

Barber retires after 64 years

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

After 45 years of cutting hair on post, Hubert Webb is retiring. He closed the doors of his shop in Infantry Hall Thursday as other businesses and offices nearby were also in the middle of moving, preparing for the building's renovation.

Webb started his career in the military, serving in World War II from 1943 until the end of the war. After that, he went to barber college on the GI Bill and found a job on Fort Campbell, Ky., giving military haircuts to thousands of Soldiers.

Webb came to post in 1964, the same year post headquarters moved from Ridgway Hall to Infantry Hall. Six years later, he set up shop on the ground floor of Infantry Hall and has been there ever since.

"You get a lot of hair here," he said. "Somebody asked me one time how many heads of hair I've cut over the years, and I said, 'Oh, 3 or 4 million.' That's a good estimate. Back when they were processing people, the draft was on and they were bringing them in and moving them out, everything was going like a madhouse. You didn't even have time to eat lunch. You can cut 300 or 400 heads of hair a day, because you cut so fast (and) you cut so short. You can do a ripsnorting business. Anytime after the war you were busier than a bee. I've seen barbers go gray-headed overnight working so hard."

It's calmed down since then, he said, but he has enjoyed meeting a variety of people over the years, including GEN William C. Westmoreland, then the commanding general of Fort Campbell.

"Soldiers and civilians, don't make no difference. They all got hair," said the 89-year-old veteran. "I've cut every rank there is except the five-star general. (Westmoreland) was the most famous,

Privileged to pay taxes

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

I know what many of you are saying after reading the headline — "This guy must be crazy."

Well, I do feel privileged to pay my fair share of taxes. Someone once told me that no matter what happened I needed to stay positive, so that is what I am doing as the deadline to file my taxes approaches.

Many complain about how much they pay in taxes, but when you stop and think about the good your tax dollar does, it really is a miniscule price to pay.

When I come to work, I see a couple of dollars of my taxes in the Soldiers I pass. I know my contribution in tax money is only a drop in the bucket compared to the $900-plus billion spent for military personnel, military procurement, research and development, family housing, retired pay and the multitude of other categories meant to keep our country safe.

Every time I speak with a DoD Civilian, I realize they are a part of the $300-plus billion spent on general government expenses. Again, my few tax dollars are only a smidgen of what is required to keep our government and country strong.

And, when I hear television commercials soliciting money to help children in poverty stricken countries, I am thankful my government spends more than $780 billion in human resource programs that includes health and human services, education, food and nutrition programs, housing and more.

I am not a whiz kid in math, but after glancing at my W-2, I think it is safe to say it would take me a while to figure out how much, or should I say how little I actually contribute to the overall country's responsibilities.

So, I am staying positive.

I know when I pay my taxes, the military will always be on watch and defending our county. I know my tax dollars are keeping the military up-to-date with the best and most technologically advanced equipment available. And, I know military families and retirees are being given the facilities and services they require in support of current and past service members.

When I see a DoD Civilian, I know my tax dollars are at work maintaining the needed support for our military at home and abroad.

And, when I think about the number of families who live in government subsidized housing, using food stamps or going to a health department for medical needs, I thank God I pay taxes to help those who are less fortunate than I.

Many will continue to complain about how much taxes they have to pay while missing out on the bigger picture.

Me? I will just continue to think positive knowing that although the little I pay may not seem like much in the grand scheme of things, the dollars and cents of more than 300 million Americans does make a difference in the freedoms and privileges we enjoy.

When April 15 arrives, my taxes will be paid and I will be proud to say I am an American taxpayer and that I have done my part — and that makes me feel privileged.

2009: YEAR OF THE NCO

Put the boot on the other foot

SGT Rebecka Reyes
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

The day I became a noncommissioned officer was just like any other.

It was a Friday, and I was at our battalion close-out formation. The Soldiers being promoted, including myself, were lined up in front of the formation.

One by one our orders were read. When my turn came, my specialist rank was ripped from my chest and the rank of sergeant was put in its place.

A few handshakes and a round of applause later, I found myself back in formation. Standing a little bit taller, proud of my accomplishment, proud that I now belonged to a group I'd longed to be in for more than four years.

After the usual safety briefing and well wishing for the weekend ahead, specialists and below were released and NCOs were told to stay behind.

This was the first time I thought, "What did I get myself into?"

Now, six months later, I've learned to be careful what I wish for. There are a lot of responsibilities that come with the "power" of being a sergeant.

Gone are the days when all I had to do was be at the right place at the right time. Now I have to make sure that my Soldier is there on time, in the proper uniform and prepared for the day's tasks. That is the role of an NCO — to lead and train Soldiers.

But what happens if your Soldier doesn't want to be lead or trained? What if they don't understand that your rear is on the line as much as theirs?

This year is the Year of the NCO, and with so much focus on what makes a good NCO, I thought it would be only fair to share what I think makes a good Soldier. What NCOs like myself are looking for in those we lead.

We want a Soldier who asks questions. Understand that you don't know everything — no matter who you are or where you came from. You are the rank you are because of what you know in the Army — the Army doesn't give out rank at a raffle. Every NCO you meet had to earn the rank they wear. That means when it comes to the Army, they do know more than you, so listen to them.

We want a Soldier who shares.

"I will communicate consistently with my Soldiers and never leave them uninformed."

Part of the NCO creed, I said these words the day I went before the board and have repeated them since then. But I think that some Soldiers don't understand that their world would be a better place if communication went both ways.

NCOs will make sure you know where you are supposed to be and when, what training is coming up, and how to take care of personal issues you might have. You need to let us know if you have an issue with your landlord or need money to get your car fixed, or if your girlfriend is pregnant or a member of your family is sick. While all of this may seem like your personal business, eventually we're going to need to know about it. It'll be a lot easier to resolve your issues if we're informed about them from the beginning.

We want a happy Soldier.

Let's all be big boys and girls. Everyone is not going to like what they serve at the dining facility every day, just like everyone is not going to like some of the training that we all have to do. Realize that a poor attitude isn't going to make the misery go away — it's actually going to make it miserable for you, your peers, and your leaders.

Do your best to stay motivated. If not, we will find a way to motivate you, and it'll probably to be more fun for us than it will be for you.

We want a Soldier with good manners.

Give the respect to your leaders that their rank and position deserve. Whether that means standing at parade rest or tacking the word "sergeant" on to the end of your sentences, do it. If my two-year-old daughter can say "please" and "thank you," you can be polite too.

Most of all, we want a Soldier that can follow instructions.

I know this sounds basic, but it's really the most important thing. If there's a formation at 9 a.m., it means you need to be in formation at 9 a.m. There is no "fashionably late" in the Army. If we say we need you to finish x, y, and z before you go home, make sure that you have those tasks done before the end of the day, because you're going to stay until they are done.

I realize this is not a perfect world and you don't always get what you want. However, as NCOs and leaders, we promise to be the best NCO we can be for you.

Now, as long as you're the best Soldier you can be for us, our world on "The Hill" and in the Army as a whole will be a better place.

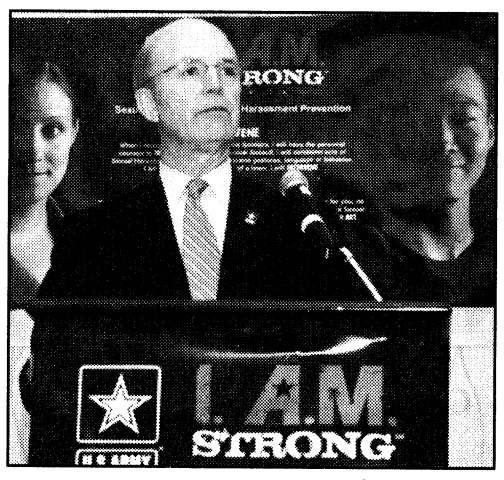
Army launches Sexual Assault Prevention Summit

J.D. Leipold
ARNEWS

WASHINGTON — Secretary of the Army Pete Geren launched the second "I. A.M. Strong" Sexual Harassment/Sexual Assault Prevention Summit in Arlington, Va., Monday, telling the audience of Soldiers and civilians that the Army would become the nation's "gold standard when it comes to sexual assault investigation and prosecution."



Echoing the words of LTG Michael D. Rochelle, the Army G-1, to "absolutely eradicate" sexual assault and sexual harassment in the Army, Geren said that since 9/11 nearly 2,000 American Soldiers had been punished for sexually assaulting a fellow Soldier. He also said that sexual assault is one of the country's most under-reported crimes.

"Experts estimate that only one in five sexual assaults are even reported and that's not just within the Army, that's on the outside, but we assume that to be true in the Army," he said. "And, if that is true, those 2,000 reports mean since 9/11 that 10,000 American Soldiers have been assaulted by a fellow Soldier, blue-on-blue ... 10,000 American Soldiers."

As part of Sexual Assault Awareness Month, the second annual summit kicked off phase two of a four-phase strategy to wipe out sexual harassment and sexual assault and mount a campaign of Army-wide conviction whereby all Soldiers and members of the Army community take direct ownership of sexual harassment and assault prevention by actively engaging as role models who personally take action and address any behavior which can lead to sexual assault.

Phase one began Sept. 9, 2008 at the first Sexual Assault Prevention and Risk Reduction Summit in which leaders dedicated their efforts to implement the cornerstone of the I. A.M. Strong campaign with senior leader condemnation of sexual harassment and assault. "I. A.M." stands for intervene, act and motivate, the cornerstones of the campaign.

"Last year with the launch of the I. A.M. Strong campaign, we committed to the same sort of historic change within our

Secretary of the Army Pete Geren opened the second annual I. A.M. Strong Sexual Harassment and Sexual Assault Prevention Summit April 6 in Arlington, Va., telling the audience that the Army would set the "gold standard when it comes to sexual assault investigation and prosecution."

Army with regard to sexual assault that you accomplished in regard to the ugly stains of racism that lingered for way too long in our values-based organization," Geren told the audience. "Sexual assault is an assault on the core values of every American Soldier and is repugnant to everything a Soldier stands for," he said.

Geren said the Army Criminal Investigation Command and the Judge Advocate General have taken new measures to support victims and hold offenders accountable. The measures includes hiring experts in the field of prosecution and investigations. Additionally, 30 special investigators and 15 prosecutors have been placed at installations with the highest occurrences of sexual assault. He also said the Army has brought on board 35 examiners at the Criminal Investigation Laboratory and funded specialized training with the National Advocacy Center for prosecutors. The Army has also established a mobilized investigation training team to train all CID battalions.

The additional resources will augment current capabilities by establishing a special victim's approach in the handling of sexual assault cases and it will reinforce the Army's commitment to accountability, the secretary said.

REPLY TO ATTENTION OF

Sexual Assault Prevention and Awareness Month: April 2009

SENIOR MISSION COMMANDER'S PROCLAMATION

Our Army-based campaign to prevent sexual assault is ongoing. Each year, along with citizens and public officials across the United States, we declare the month of April as Sexual Assault Prevention and Awareness Month, to call attention to the problem, and to re-commit ourselves to preventing sexual assault.

This year's theme is, "Our Strength is For Defending." The theme highlights the fact that our mission not only involves national defense, but the defense and safety of the Americans who voluntarily risk their lives in our defense. Every Soldier, starting with senior leadership, must understand the importance of safely intervening and preventing the crime of sexual assault. Soldiers have to safely intervene when they identify behaviors that may lead to sexual assault. Sexual assault degrades mission readiness and is fundamentally at odds with the responsibility of the men and women in uniform to treat all people with dignity and respect.

Our leadership is important. What we accomplish in the military can have positive results in the civilian community. Everyone at this installation must be a role model for what is right and just concerning sexual assault. We must continue so we may use Army teamwork to share our best prevention efforts. Our command commitment to sexual assault prevention is important. Leaders must fully implement and enforce the Army's Sexual Assault Prevention and Response Program and create a climate that minimizes sexual assault and encourages reporting. Soldiers must continue to live by the Army Values and treat each other with dignity and respect. By doing so, we will make progress toward reducing sexual assault within the Army.

To further our campaign, I hereby proclaim April 2009 as Sexual Assault Prevention and Awareness Month at Fort Benning and call on every member of this community to join the campaign.

Name: SSG Jazmin Pluas

Pluas

Unit: Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception)

Job title and military occupational specialty: Logistics NCO, unit supply sergeant

Years in service: Eight

Highest Education: Associate degree in general studies

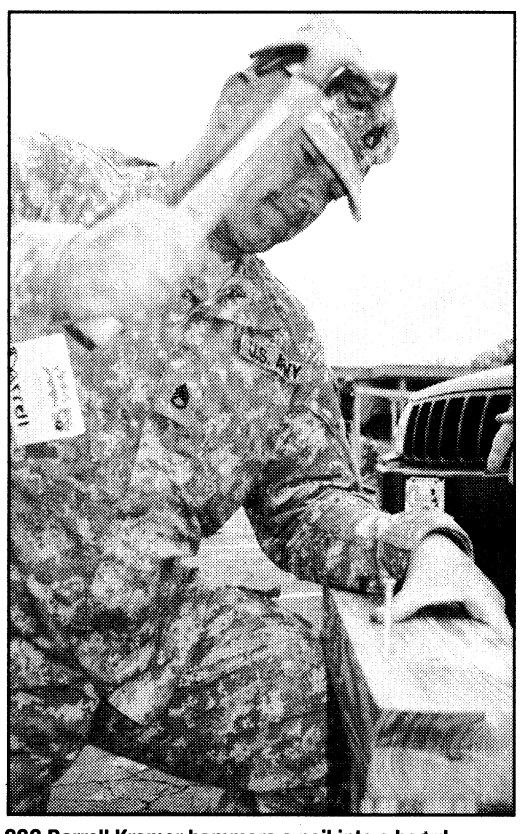
Hobbies: Playing soccer, working with the youth in the ministry, spreading the word of God to others

Biography: In the eight years Pluas has served, she has been stationed at Fort Drum, N.Y., Fort Huachuca, Ariz., and Fort Benning.

Her most memorable experience in the Army was when 9/11 happened and she was part of the relief efforts, Pluas said.

Early in her career, she aspired to be like her shop NCOIC because he managed his Soldiers well, she said. He knew when it was time to work hard and when it was time to relax.

After she retires from the Army, Pluas wants to work as a computer programmer in New York and work in ministry as a leader in the church.



Her advice to junior enlisted Soldiers is "do your best and work hard because at the end of the day it will all pay off," she said.

Engineers build playground for Atlanta children

"We went up there to do a job, and it turned into something way bigger than a job," said SGT Damiso Arrington, who helped build a playground in Atlanta April 2.

"What really got me is that it was inner city Atlanta," said Arrington, one of 26 Soldiers in the 11th Engineer Battalion who volunteered with the project.

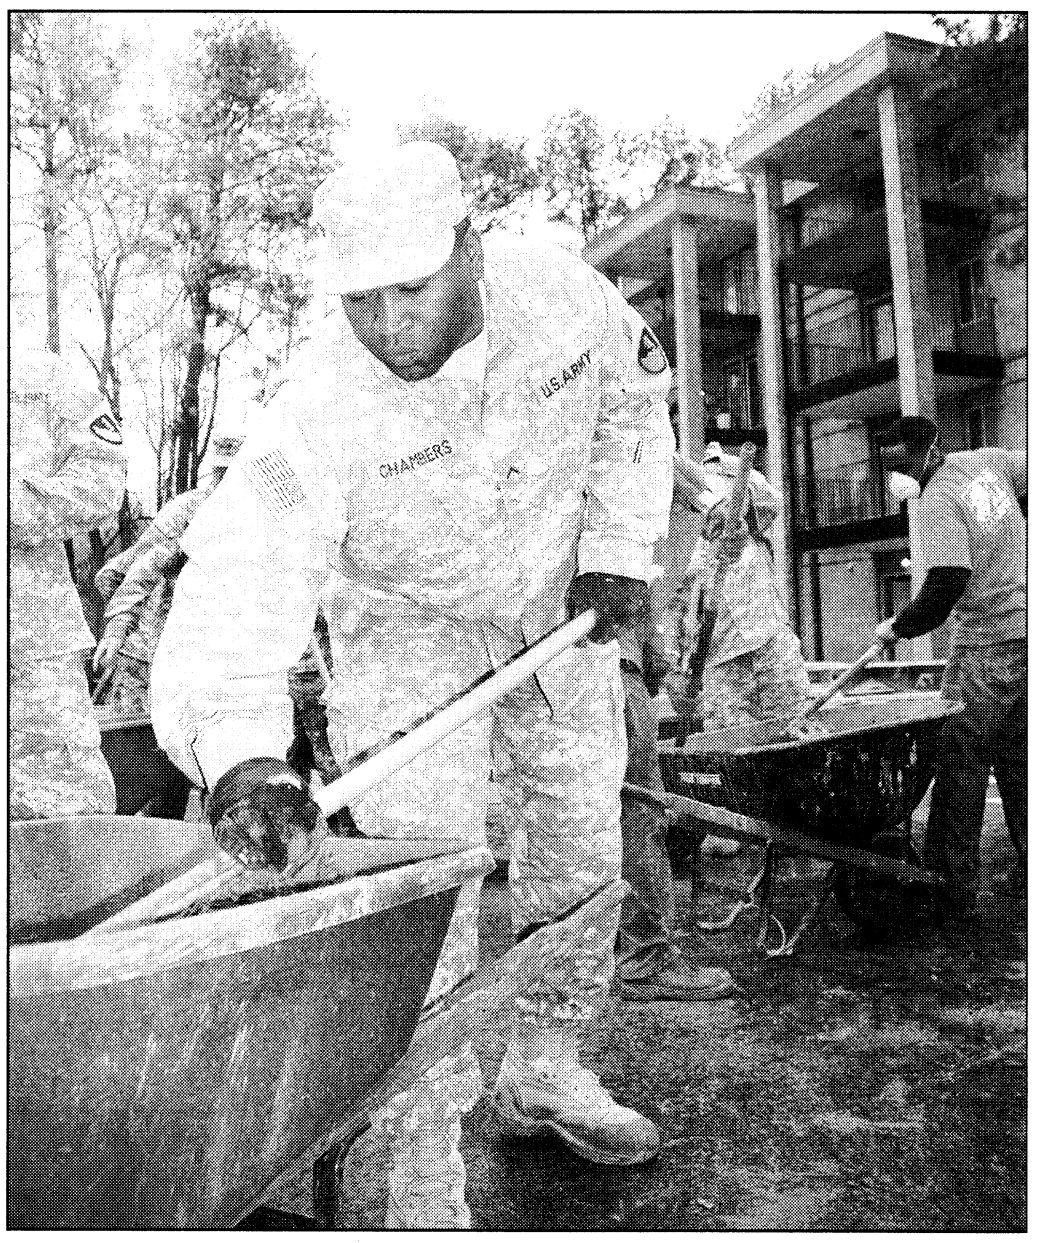
"There are a lot of places, especially the urban areas around the U.S., people tend to forget. It's a mentality where everybody is trying to get out, but nobody goes back to help the community better itself," he said. "I grew up in an urban area — Detroit — and whenever something different came to the neighborhood, it kind of gave us a little bit of an idea that it's not always poverty and violence; there are other things out there and by just having a slice of those other things, it gave us encouragement to say, 'I want more.'"

Building this playground was more than just great training for the Soldiers, Arrington said. It was hope for the children of the community.

"Once we got to the place, I saw the neighborhood and knew this was really going to make a difference," he said. "It's just a playground, (but) you never know how big a little thing can be."

The engineers constructed park benches, mixed and poured cement and put together playground equipment. When needed, they helped instruct more than 200 other volunteers who were from the area, Home Depot and the managing nonprofit organization, KaBOOM!

The battalion is always trying to get involved and make connections with the community, said CPT Vanessa Stolzoff, officer in charge for the event.



"You're helping out others who otherwise may not be able to have and enjoy the things you and I do on a daily basis," she said. "Something as simple as a playground can stimulate friendships, learning and growth for small children, and for parents, the opportunity to interact with each other. But if you don't have that, then where are your kids going to play? You don't want them playing in the streets."

While many of the volunteers met and talked with Soldiers for the first time, the engineers learned from them and reinforced their skills as they built the playground.

"Any experience you have provides you different levels of training," Stolzoff said. "Here it was working with different people, trying something new, thinking out of the box on how are you going to accomplish this mission and being thrown into an environment you're not used to and see if you can work and excel in it."

Work began at 8:30 a.m. and was completed that afternoon in time for a visit from the mayor of Atlanta, Shirley Franklin, and a bus load of children trekking home from school.

"The only time we stopped is when the thunder and lightning came. After that subsided we continued working in the pouring rain. There were some muddy Soldiers out there," Stolzoff said. "The weather conditions didn't matter. We gave them a task and they did it with enthusiasm, pride and motivation. Some of them came back asking when we were going to build another playground."

"It was raining. It was cold. I was tired — so was everybody — but it was definitely worth it," said SSG Darrell Kramer, who has helped build playgrounds in other countries for disaster relief.

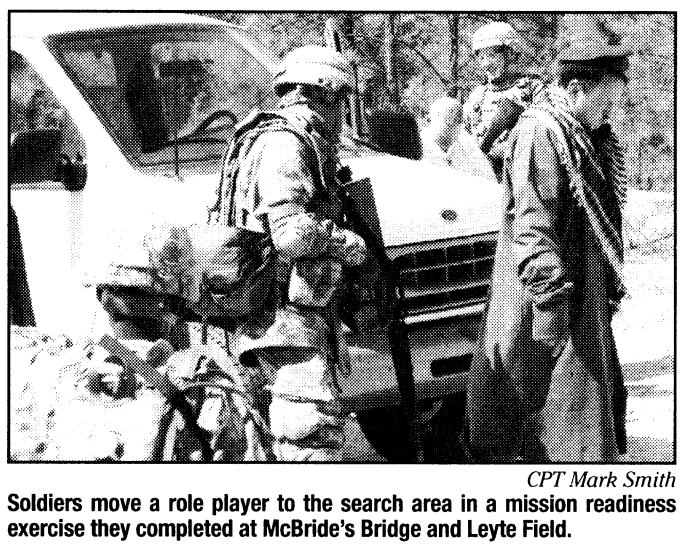
"This was something to do just to help somebody out," he said. "It's going to get the kids out of the house and let them play, laugh and go have fun in an environment that can be controlled, and maybe that'll help them as they grow up. That was my whole reason for going up there. When we got there, the only thing on the ground was the holes. When we left, we had a swing set, a triple basketball goal, a jungle gym with monkey bars, park benches, two pavilions, a picnic table — the whole nine yards."

The real reward of the day was the smiles on the children's faces when they came home — the look of "Christmas morning," Kramer said.

"They were excited. I wouldn't even know how to describe it," he said. "It's the 'Wow, I've never seen this.' A lot of cases, you don't get to see the outcome of the work you do. In this case, we were around long enough that the kids came home, and they were waiting for us to get out of the way so they could play. That was the highlight of the whole thing. That's what it was for."

PFC Michael Moore scoops water out of a three-foot hole with a cup to get to a rock that has fallen into the hole. "I enjoyed myself," said Moore, who got muddier than any of the other Soldiers as he worked in the rain. "If you don't get dirty, you're not working. I got a little dirty, but it was worth it."

Jungle Eaters train for upcoming deployment



2LT Alan Morris
11TH ENGINEER BATTALION

The 60th Engineer Company, 11th Engineer Battalion "Jungle Eaters," executed a mission readiness exercise at McBride's Bridge and Leyte Field training areas in preparation for their upcoming deployment to Afghanistan.

Training was initially conducted at the squad level and culminated at the platoon level by conducting several different mission scenarios. During the five-day MRX, Soldiers were instructed on the Afghanistan culture and languages with help from contracted interpreters in conjunction with their various missions. Soldiers conducted mounted patrols and practiced tactics, techniques, and procedures to include using the proper TTPs required to react to improvised explosive devices.

Two interpreters, from the California based organization CALTEL, taught Soldiers on the fundamentals of interacting with an interpreter, and carrying on a conversation with someone of another language. Both interpreters spoke Pashto and Dari, native languages to Afghanistan, and simulated several situations where Soldiers needed to use an interpreter to talk to a "local leader" or "Sheikh."

In conjunction with the use of interpreters, Soldiers also learned the proper steps to deal with IEDs.

CPT Mark Smith
Soldiers move a role player to the search area in a mission readiness exercise they completed at McBride's Bridge and Leyte Field.

A new organization to Fort Benning, the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization, offered instruction and set up simulated IED situations Soldiers may encounter in Afghanistan. JIEDDO came to Fort Benning as the result of a $783,000 grant and planning that started in June 2008. Its range area consists of 11 kilometers of roads with dismounted patrol options, single- and double-lane roads, choke points with 4,000 feet of guardrails and jersey barriers, a traffic circle, junk cars, an overhead pedestrian foot bridge, and 26 one- and two-story building façades.

SSG Ronald Brown, a Headquarters and Headquarters Company NCO, who worked directly with JIEDDO staff in support of the MRX, was extremely impressed.

"JIEDDO significantly increased the learning atmosphere of the exercise, which is ultimately the environment we tried to create here," Brown said. "Without JIEDDO's support of this MRX, it would have been significantly more difficult to produce such a realistic and quality training event for 60th's upcoming deployment."

CPT Daniel Andrews, 60th Eng. Co.'s commander, said the overall training at the MRX allowed the unit to train under realistic conditions and identified areas requiring additional training.

"This MRX was a first class training event," He said. "The quality support we received came together on short notice and the Jungle Eaters took full advantage of this opportunity to train; this exercise was exactly what the company needed to refine our focus.

Although the company performed extremely well, we realized that some areas need improvement. The remaining time we have before our deployment will be used to train in those areas in order to better prepare for our combat mission."

203rd BSB conducts sling load training

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Soldiers assigned to the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, completed sling load training March 19 on post.

Approximately 90 Soldiers from A and B companies learned how to hook up different loads to the CH-47 cargo helicopter.

During the three-hour event, each Soldier got hands-on training hooking up a vehicle, a water container and a cargo container to the helicopter, learning a variety of duty positions, including hook-up person, signalman and safety.

The 203rd BSB's executive officer, MAJ Damian Green, said the training was the first step in preparing Soldiers for their likely requirement of sling loading supplies or equipment to units within the brigade located at distant locations on the battlefield.

During the 3rd HBCT's last deployment to Iraq, logisticians in the brigade conducted more than 80 night sling load missions in support of the brigade's maneuver battalions.

The CH-47 flew to Fort Benning from Hunter Army Airfield, home of the 3rd ID's aviation brigade.

Barber: To open store

(but) I've cut almost every commanding general's hair since I've been in this building."

Even though Webb has finished his last haircut on post, he hopes to trim the hairs of a few friends or strangers somewhere on the outskirts of Columbus.

"Barbering is not all that adventurous," he said. "I want to retire, open up a little country store and live the life of Riley. My daughter has antiques, collectibles and memorabilia, so she'll have a spot there, and I'll have a little barber shop with the country store — a bit of yesteryear. People who I've cut before might want to drop by there for a loaf of bread, find out I'm there and get a haircut. I'd like to meet a few old cronies after I retire (and) talk old times, old Army adventures or just see them."

Free alcohol screening open to public Thursday

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"What you don't know can hurt you," said Yvonne Wilbanks, alcohol and drug control officer with the Army Substance Abuse Program.

Now is the time for people to find out if they have a drinking problem or habits that may lead to a problem down the road, Wilbanks said. They can take that opportunity during National Alcohol Screening Day at 9:30 a.m. Thursday in Marshall Auditorium, Infantry Hall.

This free program includes alcohol abuse prevention training, an anonymous self-assessment and a presentation by Siran Stacy, former football player for the University of Alabama, who lost four of his five children and his wife when his car was hit by a drunk driver.

"This is a good opportunity to hear firsthand what happens with having a drinking problem and not getting help for it," Wilbanks said. "You just never know where that one problem may lead you."

Even though people may think they don't have an issue with alcohol, certain behaviors, such as consuming more than three drinks a day, are warning signs, Wilbanks said.

"Many people are raised in families where heavy drinking is part of the way they're brought up. It seems normal," she said. "They may not realize their drinking is causing a problem to themselves and other people. These patterns are formed over years, and people think it's OK, but with every choice there's a consequence. Taking the questionnaire can open their eyes to the fact that their drinking can be a problem in the future."

A booth will be set up with brochures about Army programs and abuse prevention, "drunk goggles" people can try on and a free breath tester key chain. Information about resources such as the ASAP counseling center, www.drinkingIQ.org, Military OneSource and www.mentalhealthscreening.org will also be available.

The program counts as two hours of substance abuse training, required for DA Civilians and Soldiers each year.

This event is open to the community, said Wilbanks, who estimated that almost 3,800 completed the alcohol screening questionnaire last year.

"What our program does is encourage people to make good choices — to choose health and choose the Army values," she said. "Abusing alcohol is not in line with service to the country. We're training people to know their choices are powerful."

For more information, call the Army Substance Abuse Program at 706-545-1138 or visit https://www.infantry.army.mil/asap.

Award: To be presented in May

best company commander I have seen here," said LTC Kyle E. Lear, commander of the 5th Ranger Training Battalion, Camp Frank D. Merrill, Dahlonega, Ga.

Lear, who nominated Witkowski for the award, said Witkowski was the epitome of a Ranger officer.

"He is what Ranger leadership is all about and he understands what it is to be a Ranger," Lear said. "He has done everything he asks his Soldiers to do. He is a great coach, teacher and mentor for all of his Ranger students."

Witkowski, company commander for C Company, 5th Ranger Training Battalion, is anything but a typical officer and feels the route his career has taken may have played a part in him being recognized.

"I think I am an atypical officer," he said. "I have 10 years of prior enlisted service, and have completed eight years of commissioned service. I am sure all the recommended awardees are great leaders. Perchance it was my lengthened career (that made me stand out) over the other nominees."

Witkowski credited numerous Soldiers, enlisted and officer, who helped mold his career from shaping him as a young Soldier and giving him a strong foundation to build on to learning to be a junior NCO and squad leader then helping him transition to a junior officer.

"A lot of people played a role in my development in the Army," he said. "Each one in their own way helped shape, form, mentor, coach, cajole, and impart their wisdom upon me and I thank them all.

"Any recognition or success that I have accomplished is due the outstanding work of my subordinates," he said. "In my current position, it is due the tireless efforts of my Ranger instructors in grooming the next generation of Ranger leaders for the Army. They are out there in the mountains daily imparting their combat experience by teaching, coaching, and mentoring our Ranger Students. "

For junior officers seeking to be in the select company of the General Douglas MacArthur Leadership Award winners, Witkowski gives his advise using the words of another famous general.

"In the words of GEN George S. Patton, "If you do your full duty the rest will take care of itself," Witkowski said. "Focus on your Soldiers and accomplishing your mission. Strive to make your organization the best it can be, not to be better that your sister units, but to raise the quality of your parent unit."

The awards ceremony will be in Washington, D.C., May 7 and 8.

ACES: Offers tests

that provides the Prometric and Pearson Vue online testing systems. One of the center's biggest advantages, Alston said, is its convenient location.

"The next closest Prometric testing center is in Atlanta," he said. "Having to drive all the way to Atlanta in that traffic and then trying to meet a time when you have to be there, it can be a little scary. And you're all nervous because of the test. We take that away by having the opportunity to test here."

While the testing center does not provide any tutoring services, its staff help students find the resources they need, said Alston, who recommends students prepare as much as possible before a test to minimize anxiety and maximize performance.

"A lot of people come in here with their books and they're still reading (before a test)," Alston said. "Based on my experience, those last-minute crams don't usually work very well."

Time management during a test is key to performance, Alston said.

"Every test we give here, it's you against the clock, so you should keep moving forward on the examination," he said. "If there's a problem that's stopping you, move on to the next one, because you'll spend all your time on that and not finish the problems you could have finished."

Because many tests take several hours, the testing center operates on an appointment-only basis.

The center, Building 2612, Soldiers' Plaza, is open from 8 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays.

For more information or to set up an appointment, call 706-545-3708 or 706-545-2911.

EFMB: Tests Soldiers' medical proficiency

he said. "He'll be able to take those skills and pass them down to them and hopefully give them the urge to want to go get their (badge) as well."

Though all EFMB candidates must have a health care-related MOS, many are not medics and do not perform medical treatments regularly. For SPC George Josiah, 14th Combat Support Hospital, who works in patient administration, the most difficult part of the course was tactical combat casualty care.

"It's hard because you have to move under direct fire and treat casualties, and at the same time make sure you don't sever any limbs and that you treat everybody according to the regulations," he said. "And you have to make sure you don't miss any steps, or else they could die.

"I'm not a medic, but I'm with a medical unit, so it makes me more aware of my surroundings," he said. "And just in case anything were to happen, I would know what to do."

CPT Patrick Glass, a medical operations officer with 1st Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, shared a similar sentiment.

"I'm not expected to do all the medical tasks the medics are," he said. "But I'm a medical platoon leader, and all my guys are out here, so I need to be out here with them."

Though most of the Soldiers trying to earn the EFMB won't succeed on their first try, the experience is still valuable, Montgomery said.

"Regardless of whether they get the badge in the end, they at least get some training that they may not have had before," he said. "Depending on the unit, they may not get exposure to this kind of training at all otherwise. Nothing ever goes perfectly in combat, but the more you can perfect it in training, the better the outcome will probably be in combat."

Festival: Brings past, present paratroopers together

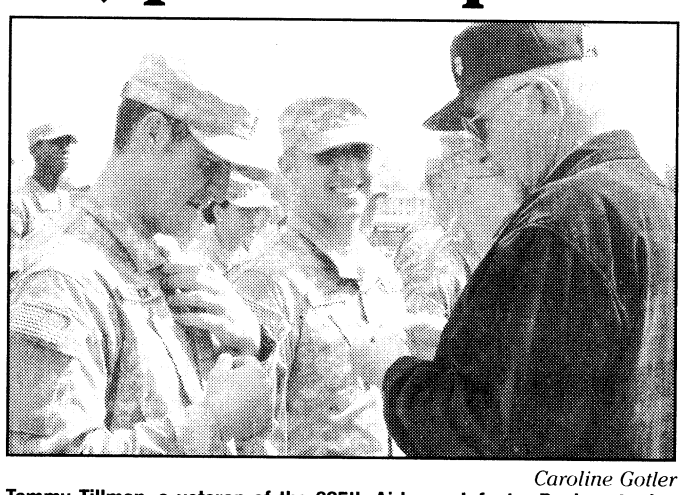
Bullard spent time at Fort Benning when he attended Officer Candidate School in 1944. Watching Friday's graduation, he said one of his favorite parts of the day was revisiting a plane he had jumped out of — the Boston Boomerang, the restored C-47 transport plane that sits next to Eubanks Field.

"I co-piloted that plane," he said. "I was an instructor in charge of training in 1945 and 1946, and I jumped out of that plane in North Carolina. "



For many veterans, the highlight of the weekend was pinning Airborne wings on new paratroopers after the graduation.

"It's an honor to pin the wings on the new guys, and of course, the lineage of the units is important," said MSG(R) Bill Patenaude, who served with the 173rd Airborne Brigade Combat Team.

Patenaude was attending his fourth Airborne festival, and said he feels an emotional tie to his fellow paratroopers that keeps him coming back.

"Things change so much, you never know what's going to happen," he said. "It's (important) to memorialize the guys who didn't make it back."

Clinton E. Riddle, who served with the 325th Glider Infantry Regiment during World War II, shared Patenaude's sentiments.

Caroline Gotler

Tommy Tillman, a veteran of the 325th Airborne Infantry Regiment, pins jump wings on 2LT James Schrock, 4th Infantry Division, Fort Hood, Texas.

"I wouldn't consider any other unit," he said. "I'm proud to be a member of it, and I'm thrilled to have the opportunity to be here."

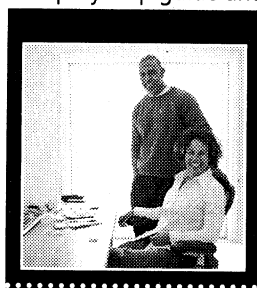
Such strong feelings of loyalty are an integral part of the Airborne community and spirit, said LTC Jon Ring, commander of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

"Paratroopers are a different sort of person and Soldier," he said. "There is something that's really tangible. They've been like that forever, since their inception in 1940. You stand a little taller, stick your chest out a little farther and have a little bit of cockiness."

That loyalty often extends beyond paratroopers to their family members. Barbara Gavin Fauntleroy, daughter of the late LTG James M. Gavin, who commanded the 82nd Airborne Division during World War II, said attending the festival each year gave her a way to connect with her past and her heritage.

"I've been here every year for a long time," she said. "My dad is not able to come anymore obviously, so I've been coming. It means a lot to me. I have a lot of friends here — people who served with my dad and people who know about his history, so it's something I enjoy very much."

For BG(R) Robert Johnson, guest speaker at the Airborne School graduation, the festival was a chance to see changes that have taken place in the Army since he received his ROTC commission in 1938.



"I can remember the days of horse-pulled cannons before World War II," he said.

Johnson, 90, was part of the original cadre of the 11th Airborne Division during World War II. He was attending his third Airborne festival and said he had no plans to slow down.

"We're definitely coming back again next year," he said.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

UNC wins easily

North Carolina scored early and scored often, beating Michigan State, 89-72, the largest margin in 17 years in the title-game. The Spartans only led once, and for 19 seconds, when the score was 3-2. The Tar Heels never looked back, and won their second championship title in five years.

Masters Time

It's one of my most favorite sporting events of the whole year — The Masters golf tournament from Augusta, Ga. The schedule for television coverage is the following: from 4 to 7:30 p.m. today on ESPN, from 3:30 to 7 p.m. Saturday and from 2 to 7 p.m. Sunday on CBS.

Trevor Immelman is the defending champion — I highly doubt a repeat and think that as usual, it's anyone's tourney to win.

Yeehaw! Gordon wins at Texas

After a winless 47 races, Jeff Gordon captured the checkered flag Sunday at Texas Motor Speedway. The four-time Cup champ also got to don a cowboy hat and fire six-shooters in the air.

Gordon remains the points leader, followed by Jimmie Johnson, Kurt Busch, Clint Bowyer and Tony Stewart.

There's no race this Sunday because of the Easter holiday.

New Hall of Famers

The newly elected members to the Basketball Hall of Fame are Michael Jordan, David Robinson, John Stockton, Utah Jazz coach Jerry Sloan and Rutgers women's coach C. Vivian Stringer.

The induction into the Hall is scheduled for Sept. 10-12 in Springfield, Mass.

Jordan's 15-year career ended with 32,292 points, just behind Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Karl Malone. He was also a five-time NBA MVP.

Burress cut from Giants

The New York Giants released wide receiver Plaxico Burress April 3, but had to pay him a $1 million bonus plus a roster bonus for 2008, but the amount wasn't disclosed. Arbitrator Stephen Burbank made the ruling.

Burress was suspended four games last season after accidentally shooting himself in the leg at a Manhattan nightclub. Burress' agent Drew Rosenhaus said the free agent is being pursued by several teams.

UConn takes NCAA title

UConn took home the NCAA national title Tuesday after defeating Louisville in a 76-54 victory in the March Madness tournament. UConn player center Tina Charles scored 25 points and had 19 rebounds. She was one rebound short of being only the second player in a championship game to have at least 20 rebounds and 20 points. She was named outstanding player of Final Four. UConn closes the season undefeated.

After winning the first game in their matchup against Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation Command and General Staff Officer Course team due to a forfeit, the Special Forces Liaison Office team completed their comeback from the loser's bracket winning the championship 7-1 in the Commander's Cup preseason soccer tournament Monday at Doughboy Stadium.

The Special Forces LNO team entered the championship expecting to play a full game against WHINSEC CGSOC, but were notified at halftime they had won by forfeit due to a rules violation, forcing a second game against WHINSEC CGSOC.

Both teams battled up and down the field, with several unsuccessful attempts at scoring, but remained scoreless, until Special Forces LNO player Joe Dessert scored a goal, followed by another goal by teammate, David Juarez. The Special Forces LNO picked up one more goal before halftime and led 3-0.

"Keep your head in the game," said Special Forces LNO team coach Dave Markel to his team at halftime.

Special Forces LNO Kerron Didier started the final half heading a ball into the goal, followed by another goal, giving the Special Forces LNO a 5-0 lead. WHINSEC tried to get back in the game with a goal from Tito Castellanos, but it was a little too late. Didier and Leonardo Negrete each scored a goal, sealing the 7-1 victory and the championship for the Special Forces LNO team.

"I thought the team was impressive,"

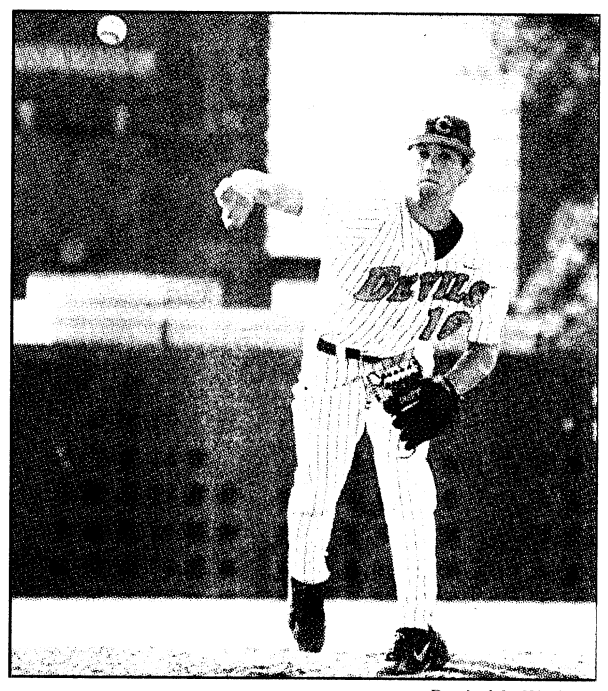
Blue Devils defeat Raiders

Pitcher throws shutout in three-inning game

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

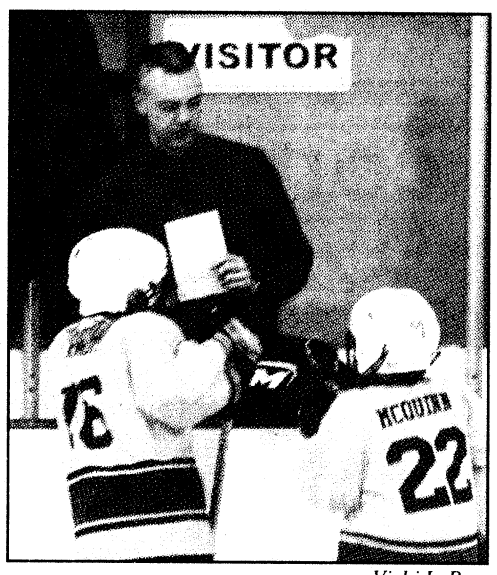
The Columbus High School Blue Devils (2-AAA) shut down the Shaw High School Raiders (2-AAA) in a three-inning baseball game Friday at Columbus High School, 15-0. The game was shortened because of the mercy rule.



In the top of the first inning, the Raiders threatened to score with two outs and the bases loaded but Blue Devil pitcher Drew Brooks worked out of the jam, striking out Kyle Rovig to end the threat. In the bottom half of the inning, second baseman Bobby Andrews gave the Blue Devils an early 1-0 lead scoring on a sacrifice fly from Bryce Dial.

The Blue Devils weren't on the field long in the top of the second inning with Brooks sending the Raiders back onto the field, three-up and three-down. In the bottom half of the inning, the Blue Devils got five runs getting two RBIs each from shortstop McClendon Hill and Andrews.

In the third inning, Raider Marquis Miller got on base with a single but the scoring threat was nullified by Brooks as he sat down the next three batters. The Blue Devils capitalized on a leadoff home run by Travis Benn, two RBIs by Dial and two RBIs by Phil Wise. The Blue Devils batted around with Benn ending the game with a grand slam home run to invoke the mercy rule.



"They (the Raiders) made some mistakes and we made them pay for it," said Blue Devil coach Bobby Howard. "The pitcher did a good job

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

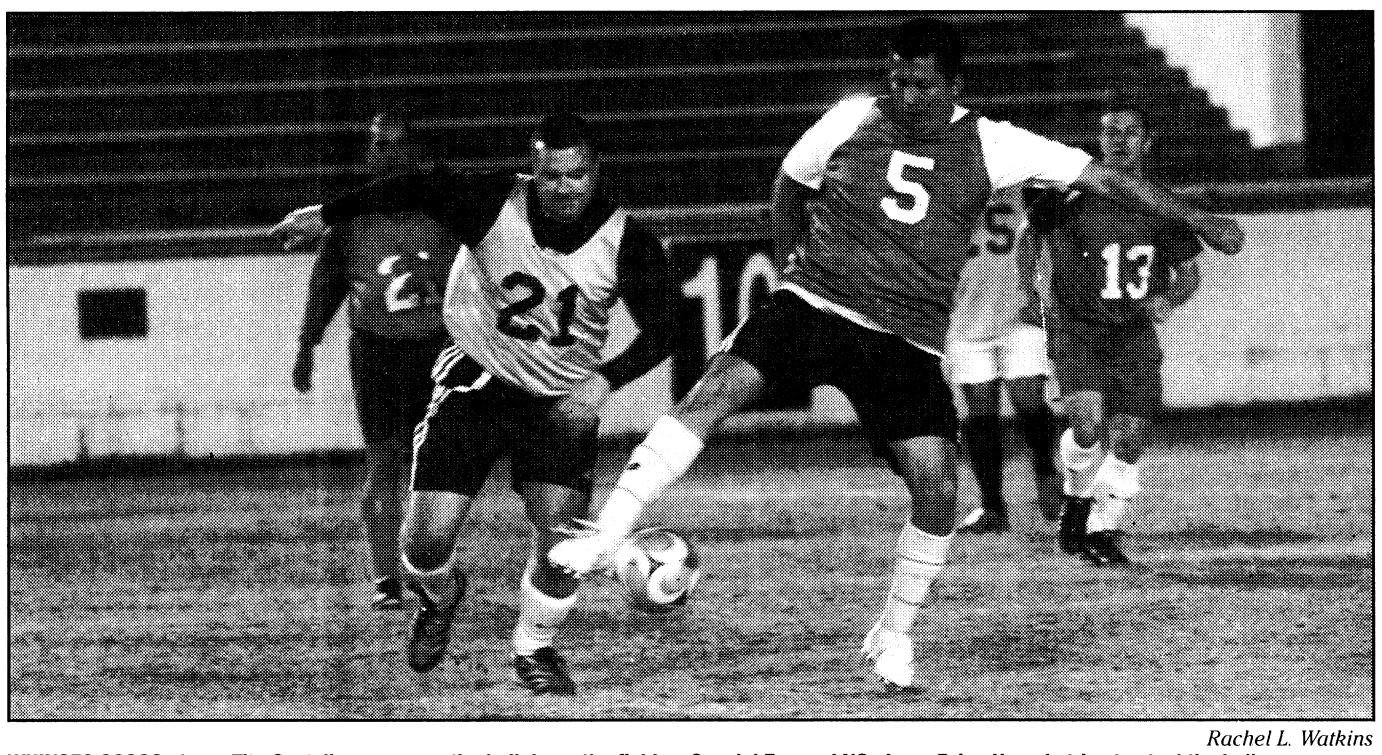
Building relationships, trust

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Brad Lee's coaching philosophy is "have fun, do your best and have integrity on and off the ice."

Lee has been a volunteer hockey coach for three years and started coaching as an assistant coach when he was stationed at Fort Drum, N.Y.

"My kids wanted to play hockey and I learned it while they did," he said. "I didn't grow up playing hockey, but I have a love for kids and a love for the game."



Lee just finished a season as head coach of the 9- and 10- year old Redwings and the Jr. Snakes in Columbus.

Hockey is more than a sport, he said.

"It isn't just about hockey — it's about learning life lessons and building relationships," Lee said. "It's about building trust with teammates where they say I have to trust my defense partner or I have to

Markel said. "The other team was short some guys and we knew if we kept playing hard, they were going to get tired."

Meyan Fien said the victory made him excited about the upcoming season.

"We played good, had good defense and communication and the goalie did a good job blocking shots. We played this team in a scrimmage game and lost, so it feels good to win. I can't wait for the season — I'm ready for it."

The season started Tuesday at Doughboy Stadium and will wrap up in May with the Commander's Cup postseason tournament.

and we had several big hits. We got some good arms, power and speed on the field."

The victory gave Blue Devils an 11-1 record.

"I think Travis (Benn) hitting two home runs really helped us win the game," said Brendan Fox, son of CPT Donald Fox. "I think we are improving every game and we'll do good this season if we keep improving."

Benn said concentration at the plate and at the pitcher's mound was what helped the team win the game.

"Drew (Brooks) started us off by striking players out early and I think that set the tone for the whole game," Benn said.

Benn said it's still early in the season, so there is more work to do.

"We will celebrate today and get back to work tomorrow," he said Friday.

Lee: Prepares players for next level

trust if I have the puck, my wingers know where to be."

This trust is something the players carry on and off the ice with their teammates, he said.

Another life lesson hockey teaches is responsibility, Lee said.

He enforces this by having each player set a goal at the beginning of the season.

As the season proceeds, Lee meets with the player and his parents and with their help, evaluates the player's progress.

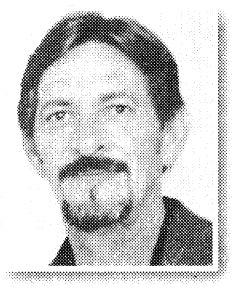
"At this level of hockey, each child needs to take ownership of their own goals and what they want to get out of the season and this is a great way of doing it," he said.

He said an essential role of a coach is to tap into a player's strengths and weaknesses.

"You have to play on strengths and be sensitive to the weaknesses of the players without it becoming a focal point," he said.

At the 9- and 10-year-old level, Lee teaches the basics — positions, puck control and passing. This season, he was preparing his players for the next level which will be different than the 9- and 10-year old level, because body checking is allowed at the 11- and 12-year old level.

Half of his team will move on to the next level by next season. And Lee will move on too. He will PCS to Fort Richardson, Alaska, and be there next season coaching a different hockey team in a different part of the country.



"I'm really going to miss my kids on the team — they are like family to me," he said. "It was a year of good hockey and building relationships."

NFL draft: As the league turns

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

When I was younger my mother watched soap operas. I would catch a few minutes of them when I would come in from school only because I was waiting to watch Superman, The Green Hornet, Gilligan's Island or one of the other shows kids watched at the time.

The soap operas taught me a few things about life — there is always a bad guy, a good guy, a bit of drama and that the music doesn't really play out loud when something is about to happen in life.

If you look at the National Football League, you will find much of the same plots, subplots and drama you find in soap operas.

Every soap opera has its variations of the NFL's Terrell Owens and Jay Cutler, players who believe they are better than everyone else and either invoke drama or pout when they don't get their way.

Just like soap operas, the NFL has its fair share of who's dating who like Tony Romo and Jessica Simpson, Carrie Underwood, Sophia Bush or whoever he is dating now and who is getting married like Tom Brady and Gisele Bundchen — the NFL has plenty of off-the-field subplots to keep its fans tuned to the television and Internet.

Talk about bad boys and villains — the NFL has the corner on the market over soap operas. Not even a soap opera has as many drunk drivers, dog fighters, alleged murderers, addicts or most any other criminal you can think of — there is always something to keep the fans coming back for more.

But, the NFL also has its good guys. Players from across the league are always lending a helping hand in their communities. From helping to build homes and serving dinner in soup kitchens to hosting camps for young football players.

As an avid football fan, I wake up in the morning and the first thing I do is surf the Internet for the latest and greatest NFL news. I mainly check on my favorite team to see if they have acquired any new players, if they have re-signed any of their current players, who is on their radar in the upcoming draft and hope none of the star players have gotten into trouble. It is an every day process because I am a true fan.

In two weeks representatives from all 32 teams will gather in Radio City Music Hall in New York city for the draft — and I will be glued to the television, just like my mother used to be with her soap operas.

I have already done all of my pre-draft homework and know who I would like to see my team draft with their first selection. I have looked at the players I believe will be available when my team has its chance to draft and hope the next player will be star on the team.

Just like the soaps, the next season will have some new players and stars. I just hope my team gets a star who will be "with the show" for longer than one season like the Young and the Restless star Eric Braeden who has played Victor on the show since 1980.

No matter the outcome of the draft or how many players change teams between now and the start of the season, it is always a new day with new drama in the NFL so tune in to — as the league turns.

The Chattahoochee County High School ROTC rifle team aimed for first place in the Georgia High School Association Air Rifle State Championship, but walked away with a third place team trophy and an individual second place finish in the state against schools across Georgia Saturday at the Pool International Shooting Complex.

"This is superb — the shooters have overcome many obstacles and still pulled out third place in the state," said Chattco coach Gary Keown. "Last year, we came in 12th place in the team championship."

The scores from each position were combined for the total team score.

Chattco's team, junior Breanna Kasl, junior Andrea Vautrin and freshmen Alex and Andrea Malagon, shot individually from the prone, standing and kneeling position.

"It looks like there are a lot of good competitors here," said Kasl, stepdaughter of SSG Carl Cazee, before she competed. "I think our biggest competition this year is Northside High School — they have really great shooters."

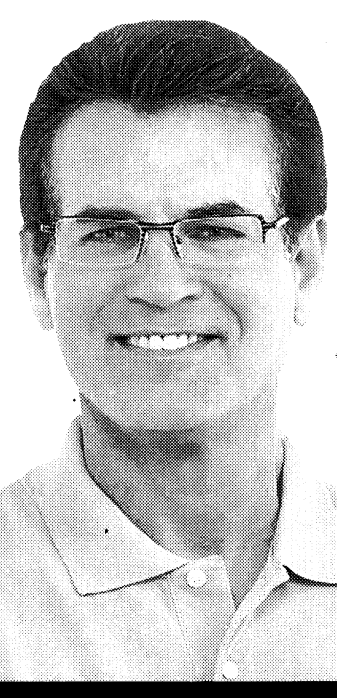
Northside High School came in fourth place, scoring 1140, three points less than Chattco's 1143.

Kasl said she could have done better in the team event.

"My score is a little lower than my normal, probably just because of my nerves," she said.

Her 291 points was enough to advance her to the top eight shooters in the state individual competition. She placed eighth with a total score of 384.7.

Vautrin said the key to shooting is being focused.



"You have to be mentally prepared," she said. "If you go into the competition thinking you'll do bad, you'll do just that. And if you do shoot a bad shot, it's important to forget about it and keep going."

Vautrin also made it to the top eight taking second place in the individual competition with 394.6 points, following first place Union Grove High School shooter Steven Frazier, who scored 394.7.

"All of the hard work this season was worth it," Vautrin said. "I'm kind of bummed I lost first place by a tenth of a point, but second place in the state is good."

Special Forces LNO team defeats WHINSEC HHC, 3-1

Winners advance to championship with overtime victory

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation Headquarters and Headquarters Company Unforgiven 38 and the Special Forces Liaison Office team went into five minutes of overtime in the loser's bracket semifinals of the Commander's Cup preseason soccer tournament tied at the end of the second half, but Abdul Barrie scored two goals in overtime, ousting the Unforgiven 38 with a 3-1 win Monday at Doughboy Stadium.

Both teams fought for control in the first half, but the half ended with both teams failing to sink the ball in the net.

"At halftime, I told the team to get our defense up," said Special Forces LNO team coach Dave Markel.

The teams battled to a stalemate in the second half until Barrie scored for the Special Forces LNO team. With less than seven minutes to go in the second half, Unforgiven 38's Alphonse Agbodekax scored a goal, tying the score 1-1. The Special Forces LNO team attempted three goals but failed to score, sending the game into overtime. Special Forces LNO team's Barrie scored a goal with assists by Meyan Fien and Joe Dessert, and before the game ended, Barrie scored again, sealing a 3-1 win for the Special Forces LNO.

"We were a little bit uneasy in the beginning of the game, but we brought it together and were able to pull out a win in the end," said Special Forces LNO player Gary Decosimo.

Barrie, who scored the winning goals, said his team fought hard for the win.

"We had good teamwork, defense and passes," he said.

Coach Markel said the team made a couple of offensive mistakes on the field, but overall was pleased with the team's performance.

The Special Forces LNO team advanced to the finals against WHINSEC Command and General Staff Officer Course team Monday at Doughboy Stadium.

3rd HBCT chaplain's son signs with Middle Georgia College

SPC Ben Hutto
3RD HBCT PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Kenneth Lile, son of the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division's chaplain, MAJ David Lile, signed a national letter of intent to play collegiate soccer for Middle Georgia College at Hardaway High School in Columbus, March 25.

Kenneth, who is also an Eagle Scout, hopes to use his time in college to expand his game and progress to the professional level.

"It's the first step to the next level," he said. "That means I have a chance at going as far as possible."

His father is excited about his future.

"I am very proud that he has accomplished his goal to be a student athlete," Chaplain Lile said. "He has been playing the game since he was very little and this will be a good opportunity for him."

Chaplain Lile stressed that it is his belief that his son's background, as the son of a service member, helped develop him as a player and person.

"He is very much a child of the military community," he said. "Throughout his academic career, his game has been developed by military volunteers at various posts. I think he is a good example of how military children, as mobile as they are, can keep academics and athletics in proper balance."

Kenneth signed his letter of intent with two of his high school teammates, David Burke and Kyle Hicks, who will also be joining him at Middle Georgia College.

The three have been playing together at Hardaway High School and on Columbus' Red Star Club for the past two years.

"It will be a great gift to their college coach to have a ready-made nucleus to build a team on, as long as they all study together," Chaplain Lile said.

Do You Know What To Do In A Tornado?

IF YOU'RE INSIDE, go to a safe place to protect yourself from glass and other flying objects.

IF YOU'RE OUTSIDE, hurry to the basement of a nearby sturdy building or lie flat in a ditch or low-lying area.

IF YOU'RE IN A CAR OR MOBILE HOME, get out immediately and head for safety.

Faith eighth-graders build bridges with Jordan High School

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

A box of toothpicks, a dab of Elmer's Glue, some trigonometry and a generous dose of imagination and communication — these are the ingredients Faith Middle School eighth-graders are using to build bridges with Jordan High School seniors, both literally and figuratively.

The students are participating in a program through Partners in Education that challenges them to build a model bridge out of toothpicks and Elmer's Glue. The program is open to all Faith eighth-graders and Jordan seniors. Since the beginning of the school year, three teams of three eighth-graders and one senior have each worked to design a bridge able withstand heavier loads than the other two, winning the group's informal competition.

Because much of the students' correspondence has been through e-mail,

Children can receive free lunches

Fort Benning schools will offer a free summer lunch program for children under 18

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

There's no such thing as a free lunch — but here, there is, said Gwyn Maddox, food service manager for post schools.

For a third summer, Fort Benning schools will take advantage of a free summer lunch program, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Children younger than 18 can receive a free lunch Monday through Friday, beginning June 8.

These "kid-friendly menus" will include popular entrees like hamburgers and tacos but will also represent all the food groups for a healthy lunch, Maddox said.

"We have kids come in dripping wet from the swimming pool, but that's OK, too," she said. "Anyone who wants to come and eat can come and get a balanced meal. It helps mom and dad, especially if they're working, and it's free. You can't beat free; that's the best price there is."

Adults are also invited to dine for $3 a plate. Other items, such as salads, ice cream and muffins are available a la carte.

Maddox said they can handle the crowds — about 300 meals were served each day last year. She hopes to double the numbers this year, she said.

"For kids to be able to get a balanced meal, that's a good thing," said Gail LaFramboise, director of accountability for Fort Benning schools. "It's convenient — right there in the neighborhood. And parents can enjoy a meal with their kids that doesn't cost a fortune. It's a great deal. I think you'd be hard pressed to get even a fast food meal for that price. We hope community people will come, even people who work on post. We like to have them be a part of everything we do. We hope people will take the opportunity when they can to come and join us."

Lunches are served weekdays from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Faith Middle School, McBride Elementary School and Wilson Elementary School. The program begins June 8 and ends July 31.

For more information, call Maddox at 706-545-8266 or e-mail her at gwyn.maddox@am.dodea.edu.

Egg-citement

Caroline Gotler
More than 1,700 people turned out Saturday morning for the TIC Spring Eggstravaganza and Easter egg hunt at Riverside. Children played games and won prizes, and the Easter bunny made a special appearance for photos and greetings. The hunt was open to children 18 months to 10 years old.

USS Water Witch commissioned

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

With the clang of a bell and the raising of a flag, the recreated USS Water Witch was commissioned in a Civil War period ceremony Saturday at the National Civil War Naval Museum.

The commissioning marked the end of a more than three-year process of planning and construction to bring the recreated Civil War ship to life. The ceremony was performed by re-enactors in period dress playing the parts of people who attended the ship's commissioning ceremony in 1863. Some, like Abraham Lincoln re-enactor Dennis Boggs, even spoke the same words as their historical counterparts.

"This is the first time I saw something like that so I thought it was pretty cool," said SSG Lamont Baeringer, 199th Infantry Brigade, who attended the ceremony with his family.

The ship features historically accurate details such as period flags, and is a full-scale model of the original. Adding to the sense of authenticity, CDR Woody Bollinger, a Navy chaplain, used a Bible from the original USS Water Witch for the ceremony's benediction.

For Janet Peterman, who constructed the ship's flags with her husband, 2LT Gabriel Peterman, taking part in the ceremony was a way to continue the legacy of wives of Civil War Soldiers.

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Cadet helps Web site say 'thank you' to Soldiers

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

A Web site that started as a Columbus man's spare-time project to help Soldiers is about to get a boost from a Columbus State University ROTC cadet.

As part of a class project, José Solis and six other students are working to raise publicity for www.thankyousoldier.com, a Web site that posts letters and .blogs thanking Soldiers for their service, and which serves as a hub for sending care packages to deployed Soldiers.

"My group got together and decided to work with this Web site because it's a good cause and we thought we could help out," Solis said.

The site has existed since May, when Columbus resident Jonathan Page started it as a forum for posting letters and blogs thanking Soldiers for their service. Since then, it's grown into a booming hub for sending care packages to deployed Soldiers.

> "It's a great sentiment, but I didn't feel it was enough. Being able to package up a little bit of home was a way to do more and remind our Soldiers we're thinking about them and supporting them."
> — Jonathan Page, Web site founder

"It was almost a natural progression, a way of being able to do more than just say 'thank you,'" Page said. "It's a great sentiment, but I didn't feel it was enough. Being able to package up a little bit of home was a way to do more and remind our Soldiers we're thinking about them and supporting them."

Initially, the goal was to mail 100 "hero packs," but Page has shipped more than 160. Word traveled quickly around the tricommunity, and when Solis heard about Page's work, he offered to help.

Solis and his project group have received pledges from local companies to provide goods to include in the care packages, such as single-serving snacks and toiletry items. They will also have booths set up in front of stores where shoppers can donate goods and provide the name and address of a deployed Soldier to receive one of Page's care packages.

Page said he was thrilled by Solis' desire to publicize the Web site.

"Our main goal is to have this site viewed by the Soldiers, and the only way to get them to view it is to get the word out," he said. "Jose's project will benefit the Web site by doing just that."

In addition to sending care packages, thankyousolider.com posts letters from deployed Soldiers, supportive comments from Web site contributors and provides links to organizations such as the USO. For Solis, the site has a personal meaning.

"My dad has been on active duty in the Army for more than 20 years, and I'm going to receive my commission after I graduate college," he said. "My dad has talked about how, when you're so far away from your family and friends, it's great to get that box. Jonathan doesn't get any money or big publicity out of it. It's a selfless cause, and that's what the Army's all about."

Solis and his project group will be at the Piggly Wiggly store on Milgen Road from 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. For more information, visit www.thankyousoldier.com.

Bridge: Develops teamwork skills

good communication has been crucial, said COL (R) Randy Buck, supervisor of the Muscogee County School District Career Academy.

"I hope the students will get a couple different things out of it — technical skills, understanding what goes into a structure such as a bridge … but perhaps the bigger value of this, though, is the collaboration and teamwork," he said. "They're learning good work ethics, team building and teamwork."

As the former director of Fort Benning's Directorate of Public Works, Buck has plenty of engineering and technical experience to share with students. He created the program with Anne Shaw, Faith Middle School applied technology teacher, and said that while its main goal is attracting more graduating eighth-graders to Jordan High School, the program has had many additional benefits.

"I think the high-schoolers are getting a good sense of responsibility," he said. "They step up to the plate and realize they have suddenly become face-to-face role models, and most of them have accepted that as a serious undertaking."

Senior Casey Strickland accepted that responsibility by mentoring Corey Stanley, his younger teammate.

"I told him once you get into high school, you might start off slow, but before you know it, you're going to be a senior," Strickland said. "When you start high school, it's time to start making decisions about what you want to do after high school. I tell him put in your best effort, try to live your life to the fullest, and to get a diploma so you can walk across the stage."

For Stanley, talking with Strickland has gone a long way toward helping him prepare for high school.

"It's helped me with trying to figure out what high school is all about," he said.

Many of the students said they learned a lot about teamwork and communication.

"I learned they have a lot of good ideas too and it's not just a one-man team," said senior Brandon Johnson. "In order to be effective, you have to take in everybody's answers and input and put it all together. The design originally was mine, but they changed it and actually it's a little bit better than I originally planned."

Caroline Gotler
Anne Shaw, Faith Middle School applied technology teacher, explains load-bearing weights as eighth-grader Corey Stanley watches.

While the bridge building program has allowed individual students to collaborate, it has also been an opportunity for cooperation between school districts, Shaw said.

"I think it's pretty remarkable," she said. "We hope to expand it later on to include more schools."

Water Witch: Commissioned in period ceremony

Caroline Gotler

Civil War re-enactors take down and prepare to fold a period flag on the recreated USS Water Witch Saturday.

"It's something the wives would have done back then," she said. "I've heard stories of dresses being cut up for flags, even one flag that was made with pink silk because that's what they had available at the time."

The commissioning ceremony was part of the museum's annual RiverBlast festival Saturday and Sunday, which featured games, period gun demonstrations, boat rides and cannon firings.

"I think the weekend's been a success so far," said Bob David, chairman of the museum's board of directors, after the commissioning ceremony.

The ship is not only important historically, but its highly visible location off of Veterans Parkway has also played a huge role in boosting museum attendance, David said.

"We've had double-digit growth in attendance every month since the USS Water Witch has been out there," he said. "People know that it's here, and along with the National Infantry Museum, it's a tremendous asset to Columbus. There's definitely a connection to Fort Benning and the military here."

For Boggs, portraying the 16th president for an audience including many Soldiers and retirees added a deeper meaning to his performance.

"I've been to Columbus several times, and I've met several members of our military here," he said. "I'm doing what I'm doing today because of men and women like them, many who have paid the ultimate sacrifice. They need our support, our respect and most of all, our prayers.

"All of the sailors and civilian (re-enactors) are voices of the past. Then you've got little ones here who are the voices of tomorrow. What we're trying to do is let them experience their past so maybe they won't make the same mistakes we made."

ASK THE JUDGE

Larger than usual refund may indicate error

Rheanna J. Felton
TAX OFFICER IN CHARGE
JUDGE ADVOCATE

Did you file your taxes and receive a larger than usual refund? If so, you should review your tax documents to ensure that your refund was not intentionally inflated by the tax assistant.

Some off-post tax assistants receive a commission based upon the amount of refund you receive. In these situations, it is in the tax assistant's best interest to get you the highest refund possible, sometimes regardless of whether it is legal to do so. The latest scam is to file a Schedule C allowing taxpayers to take business deductions. The deductions reduce taxable income and allow for higher refunds. However, to actually file a Schedule C, the taxpayer must own a business. Taxpayers beware: you are not a consultant unless you own a business.

Recently, the Fort Benning Tax Center has received phone calls from Soldiers who believe their taxes were wrongfully prepared off-post. In such circumstances, the tax center prepares a 1040X, or an amended return, and subtracts the wrongfully claimed business deductions. On one such return, a Soldier was overpaid $6,000 by the Internal Revenue Service.

Overpayments are subject to audit by the IRS. If the IRS discovers the overpayment, it will send a notice to the taxpayer demanding payment. The IRS will charge interest and penalties on the amount owed. The penalties and interest rates can be up to 25 percent of the tax owed. Thus, the Soldier in the example above would have had to pay the IRS an additional $1,500 if he had not filed an amended return before the April 15 due date. In addition to high penalties and interest, the IRS has the power to garnish wages. Therefore, it is in the taxpayer's best interest to file his or her taxes properly.

Although taxpayers need to be aware of off-post scams, it is important to keep in mind that most off-post tax offices are legitimate and prepare quality tax returns. Regardless of where your taxes are prepared, the best way to protect against improper filing is to review the tax return prior to submitting it to the IRS.

If you believe that an off-post tax assistant wrongfully inflated your refund, call the Fort Benning Tax Center at 706-545-4267 and schedule an appointment to file an amended return. Please mention that you prepared your return off-post and that you believe it was done incorrectly. The tax center will prepare the amended return free of charge.

The last day to file 2008 taxes is April 15. The tax center hours are Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Thursdays from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. The tax center will extend its hours to 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. April 13-15 to serve those who still need to file. If you need more time to gather your paperwork, the tax center will prepare an extension for you. The tax center accepts clients on a walk-in basis and takes appointments only if your 2008 taxes were incorrectly prepared off-post.

SJA has help on Health Care Decisions Day

Michael L. Russo
OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE

The Legal Assistance Division of the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate will offer walk-in service to all military and retiree ID card holders for consultation and preparation of advance medical directives Thursday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Building 359 on Ingersoll Street as a part of the National Health Care Decisions Day Initiative.

The National Health Care Decisions Day Initiative is a collaborative effort to ensure all adults with decision-making capacity in the United States have the information and opportunity to communicate and document their health care decisions.

Legal Assistance Division officials offer the following common questions and answers that should be considered when planning for and assessing health care needs:

Q: What is an advanced medical directive?

A: An advance medical directive is a written statement of your wishes regarding your health care that goes into effect if at some time you are unable to make health care decisions. There are two types of advance medical directives; a living will and a durable health care power of attorney.

Q: What is a living will?

A: A living will is a document which states your desires concerning the medical treatment you do or do not want to receive if you become unable to make your own medical care decisions.

Q: What is a durable health care power of attorney?

A: A durable health care power of attorney is a document through which you give another adult person the legal authority to make medical treatment decisions for you if you become unable to do so. You can designate anyone, a spouse, relative, or good friend as your decision-maker. This person is frequently referred to as your agent, proxy, or surrogate decision-maker.

Q: Why should I put my wishes in writing?

A: If, as a result of serious injury or illness, you become unable to make medical treatment decisions, you retain legal ability to control your medical treatment by having an advance medical directive. Writing your wishes down helps your doctor, family, and friends know what medical treatment you do or do not want in case you cannot tell them yourself. A doctor will not act without one, but will require that the next of kin get a court order authorizing treatment.

Q: Should I have both kinds of medical directives?

A: In most cases, it is a good idea to have both a living will and a durable health care power of attorney. Doing so helps your health care team, family, and friends carry out your wishes. If a type of treatment is not covered by your living will, your agent will be able to make an informed consent with regard to such treatment.

Q: Who should I tell about my advance medical directive?

A: Before you prepare an AMD, you should discuss your medical treatment wishes with your physicians, close family members, and the person you choose as your surrogate. You should give a copy of your AMD to your primary physician. Because military patients see different physicians, a copy should be placed in your outpatient medical record. Another copy should be placed in your inpatient record if you have one. You should also bring the original of your AMD with you any time you are admitted to the hospital. The original durable health care power of attorney should be given to the person you named as your surrogate decision-maker or agent, and you should keep a copy in your records.

Q: Am I required to have an advance medical directive?

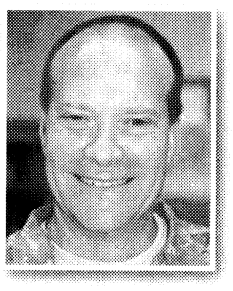
A: No, you are not required by law, Army regulation or hospital policy to have an AMD in order to receive care. However, your AMD is an effective way to ensure your desires concerning medical treatment are honored if you become unable to communicate your choices to those providing your medical care. Discussing your wishes with your physician in advance is another way to communicate your treatment preferences.

Q: What should be included in an advance medical directive?

A: You should declare your desires concerning the initiation or withdrawal of life-sustaining medical treatment. Typical instructions include those concerning:

- CPR: treatment to restore breathing and heartbeat. It may include pushing on the chest, electric shock to the chest and the insertion of a breathing tube in the throat.
- Dialysis: treatment to clean the blood with a machine when the kidneys do not function.
- Being placed on a ventilator or breathing machine.
- Given food, water and medication through tubes.
- Given pain medication and comfort care.
- Donating your organs.

For more information on advanced medical directives, call the Legal Assistance Division at 706-545-3281.



Celebrating Easter gives hope, strength to Christians

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

Today is Good Friday. This is a special time for those of the Christian faith. It is the day which most Christian faiths recognize as the day in which Jesus Christ was crucified.

Many different faiths and countries celebrate this season in various ways, but this weekend is one of the most significant seasons for Christians. The Christian faith teaches that all persons are born as sinners as a result of Adam and Eve's sin in the Garden of Eden.

The scriptures testify with nature and science that like kind give birth to like kind. Cats give birth to cats, dogs bear dogs, apple trees produce apples and so on. And sinful persons produce like kind.

Think about it for a moment. Do you know anyone who is perfect? Anyone who is without sin? If you do, please introduce me to them, because I do not know anyone who is perfect.

The apostle Paul, one of the greatest evangelists, claims he was the chief of sinners. Billy Graham reveals in his books that he is a sinner. Marriages testify to the fact of our sinfulness. Why is there strife in relationships? The answer is simply sin. Ask yourself about any fight or argument you have gotten into, and I will bet it is the result of being selfish and placing your needs before others. Countries fight because we want their stuff or they want our stuff, whether it is oil, food, water, gold, or anything else.

Well, I am thankful, as we celebrate Good Friday, for the cross of Jesus Christ. For on the cross, Jesus died for the sins of mankind. On the cross, he bridged the gap between a sinful man and a holy God. On the cross, Jesus brought salvation and hope to all mankind. Good Friday is the day we remember the death of Jesus on the cross.

Christians have hope because we serve and believe in the risen Savior. Easter Sunday celebrates Jesus' resurrection. Along with Christmas, Easter is considered one of the oldest and most joyous days on the Christian calendar.

In the United States, many sunrise services are held outside on Easter morning. These early services are symbolic of the empty tomb that was found early that Sunday morning and of Jesus' arrival in Jerusalem before sunrise on the Sunday of his resurrection.

"Do not be alarmed," he said. "You are looking for Jesus the Nazarene, who was crucified. He has risen. He is not here. See the place where they laid him," Mark 16:6.

While Easter was not celebrated or mentioned in the Bible, the three-day period from Good Friday through Easter Sunday has become a traditional Christian observance celebrating the belief that the crucifixion, burial and resurrection of Christ occurred.

This Easter, I hope you will join one of our many services on post, like the special postwide sunrise service at the Infantry Chapel. For Christians, this is one of the most important pillars of their faith. Because Jesus is risen, we serve a living Savior who is able to offer salvation from our sins and hope to get us through whatever situation we may be experiencing and hope for the life to come.

May you and your family enjoy a wonderful Easter weekend. May the road rise up to meet you. May the wind always be at your back. May the sun shine warm upon your face, and rains fall soft upon your fields.

And until we meet again, may God hold you in the palm of his hand.

God conducts spiritual suicide stand down every day

Chaplain (CPT) Philip Jeon
1ST BATTALION, 15TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

During this time of year, we are reminded of new life and the cause for celebrating it.

Easter takes place in spring as trees change colors from bare brown to full green, and as birds chirp and make nests. This evidence of new life is also visible in shopping centers. The first message we see and hear in stores is that Easter products and toys have arrived.

Even in venerable places of worship, new life is celebrated as little boys and girls in new suits and dresses celebrate life by hunting for Easter eggs.

The Army also values life, and shows it by requiring all Soldiers to receive suicide prevention training. When Kelley Hill held a suicide stand down day March 6, it was a very successful and meaningful day. Battalion and brigade commanders reminded Soldiers of the value of each individual's life.

Although society emphasizes the deaths associated with suicide, the Army has placed the focus on life by acting to help prevent suicide deaths.

Scripture reminds us that life is sacred in Psalm 139: 13-15: "For you created my inmost being; you knit me together in my mother's womb. I praise you because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know that full well."

When the day ended with a concert, it was truly an evening of worship, celebration, and even reconciliation as many groups of people came together to celebrate the value of life.

Throughout the course of that evening, we were reminded not only of the value of physical life, but also the meaning and value of spiritual and eternal life. We were particularly reminded that God himself conducts a spiritual suicide stand down day every day. He has provided a means for the world to receive his training by believing in him and celebrating life.

What does Easter mean to you?

Even though you may be overwhelmed by the commercialization of Easter, please do not forget its true message: nature reminds us of every spring and the value of all our lives not only because the Army says it is important, but more so because God who has created us says we are important.

After all, we are created in God's very own image.

Going ape

An orangutan stretches after rolling down a hill and stopping short of a small stream surrounded by rocks. This was the second orangutan to take a seat near the edge of the ravine after a crowd of zoo visitors stopped near their habitat Saturday at the zoo. Zoo Atlanta boasts the largest collection of orangutans in North America of both the Bornean and the Sumatran species. An audio recording playing near the habitat and display boards let visitors pick up interesting facts about orangutans. For example, they have the longest childhood of any animal, excluding humans. Most mothers spend so much time raising their young that they usually have only three or four babies in their lifetime.

Giraffes walk through their habitat Saturday at the zoo.

What a Zoo

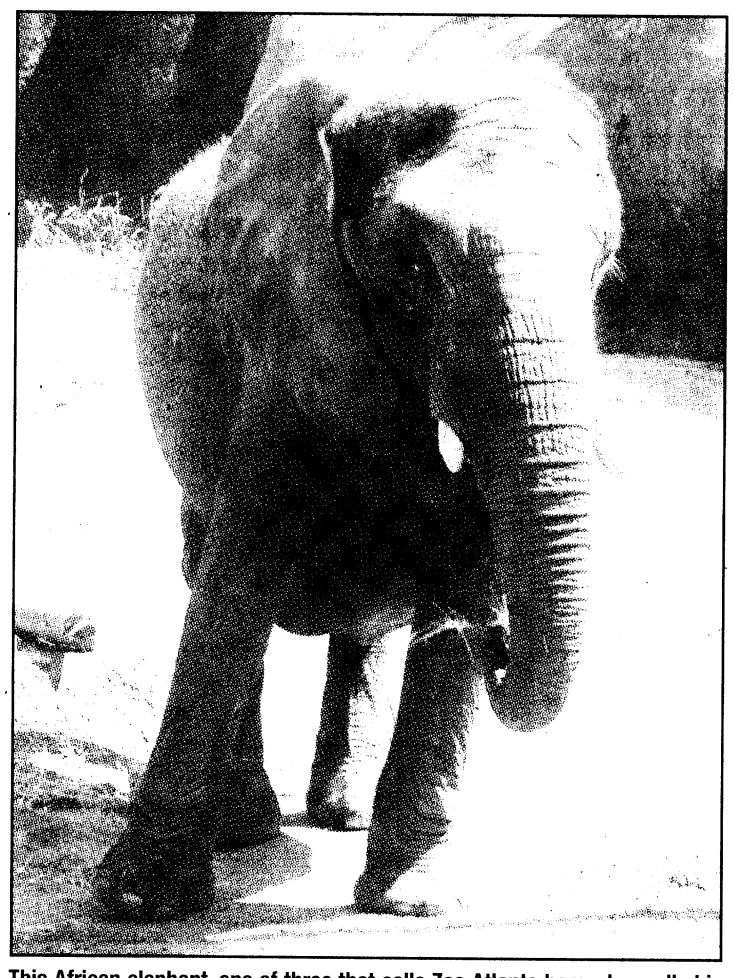
Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

It was a five-star show Saturday afternoon in Atlanta. The audience was treated to three performers and their tricks of rolling, swinging and climbing and other impressive gymnastics. When one tumbler stopped suddenly at the brink of a ravine, placed a small tree branch atop his head, contorted his arms and posed for effect, the crowd went wild with applause. Well, it was all pretty wild to begin with.

That's how it is at Zoo Atlanta, where circus-like entertainers are just orangutans hanging out in their habitat — and maybe trying to catch the occasional standing ovation. And that was just one of the stops on my tour through the Asian forest, African plains, the wetlands and the rainforest. There was almost too much to see.

The flamingos were beautiful, the same surprising shade of pink that's always better to see in person than in a picture. The lion cubs were playful and charming, almost cuddly if it weren't for the huge incisors they showed off when they yawned. The elephant was larger than life. The Komodo Dragon was hard to spot. The zebra looked like he needed a bath after playing in the Georgia red clay, and the kangaroos were more interested in a nap than hopping about and sticking small animals in their pouch. And these were my favorites — the ones I know I'll still be talking about next year.

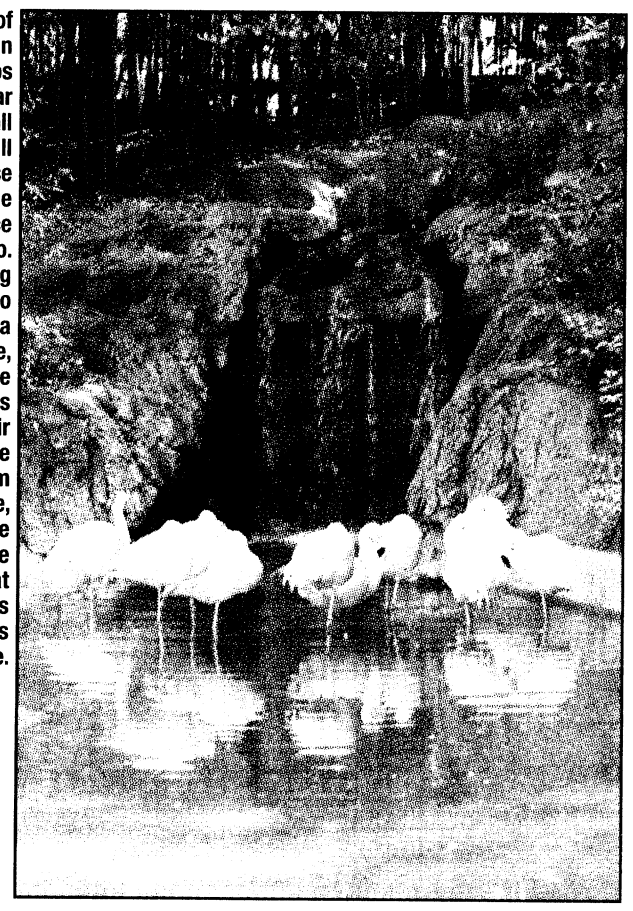
You can also hang out with a rhino, giraffe, meerkat, tiger and ostrich. Or check out the pandas, naked mole rats, otters and peacocks. If you're interested, display boards around the zoo and different exhibits give you background information on the animals you're looking at. My favorite was the Living Treehouse, which showed how trees and the creatures that call them home benefit the environment. From a birds-eye view, you can see lemurs, ducks, birds and more playing among the trees.



For families with little ones, don't miss out on the kids area at the front of the park, complete with train ride, snacks cafe and playground. The petting zoo and a "Wildlife Theater" are nearby.

For a different take on the traditional Easter egg hunt, visit the zoo Saturday between 2 p.m. and 2:30. In this version, gorillas hunt the "eggs," Jell-O confections hidden around their habitat.

The zoo is open from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. weekdays and an extra hour later on the weekend. Admission is $18.99 for adults, $13.99 for children and $14.99 for seniors, college students and military. For more details, go to www.zooatlanta.org or call 404-624-5600.



This Sumatran Tiger, or Panthera tigris sumatrae as a display board identified her, licks her lips after lapping a drink of water from the pool. She is the oldest female Sumatran Tiger in North America.

This African elephant, one of three that calls Zoo Atlanta home, has rolled in the mud to keep cool on a warm Georgia day.

A flock of Chilean flamingos wade near a small waterfall close to the entrance to zoo. According to the Zoo Atlanta Web site, these birds get their unique hue from carotene, the substance that makes carrots orange.

Ten-month-old lion cubs play and pounce on each other inside Zoo Atlanta.

This Violaceous Turaco perches on a branch in the Living Treehouse, a display which showcases a variety of trees and the animals that live in and around them.

OPENING TODAY

HANNAH MONTANA: THE MOVIE

Miley Stewart's alter-ego, Hannah Montana's popularity is taking over Miley's life. For the young pop star, events begin getting out of control.

When Miley misses her brother's departure for college because she was fighting with model Tyra Banks during a shopping spree, Miley's father devises a plan to fly her back to her hometown of Crowley Corners, Tenn., so she can regain perspective on what matters most.

The movie stars Miley Cyrus, Billy Ray Cyrus, Emily Osment and Jason Earles. It's rated G.

DRAGONBALL EVOLUTION

Goku and a handful of friends battle for the Earth against the deadly forces of the Saiyans, who are carving a path of destruction as they sweep through the universe. Goku and his friends' best chance for survival is the Namekian DragonBalls, which give them the power to summon a mighty dragon.

The movie stars Chow Yun-Fat, Emmy Rossum and Justin Chatwin. It's rated PG for sequences of action and violence and language.

OBSERVE AND REPORT

Ronnie Barnhardt is head of security at Forest Ridge mall, but dreams of becoming a police officer. When a flasher strikes at the mall, Barnhardt's delusions of grandeur are put to the test as he tries to use the opportunity to win the heart of makeup counter employee Brandi and earn a spot at the police academy.

But, his efforts launch a turf war with Detective Harrison of the Conway Police, and Barnhardt must catch the flasher before the police can.

Observe and Report stars Seth Rogen, Anna Fairs, Michael Pena and Ray Liotta. It's rated R for language, nudity, drug use, sexual content and violence.

ALSO PLAYING

FAST AND FURIOUS

Fugitive ex-con Dom Toretto reignites his feud with Brian O'Connor when a crime brings them back to Los Angeles.

But as they are forced to confront a shared enemy, Dom and Brian must learn to trust each other. Through an adventure with stunts like convoy heists and precision tunnel crawls across international lines, the two men find the best way to get revenge is by pushing the limits of what's possible behind the wheel.

Fast and Furious stars Paul Walker, Vin Diesel and Michelle Rodriguez. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, sexual content, language and drug references.

ADVENTURELAND

It's 1987 and James Brennan has just graduated college. He planned to spend the summer trekking through Europe, but because of his family's sudden economic difficulties, he takes a job manning a game booth at Adventureland, an amusement park. While James believes at first that the park is the bane of his existence, he realizes as the summer goes on that things at Adventureland are not always what they seem. Falling for Em Lewin, a sharp-tongued arcade worker, James discovers the courage to battle for her heart.

Adventureland stars Jesse Eisenberg, Ryan Reynolds and Kristen Stewart. It's rated R for language, drug use and sexual references.

MONSTERS VS. ALIENS

After being hit by a meteorite on her wedding day, Susan Murphy is transformed into a monster named Ginormica and subsequently whisked away to a secret government compound where others like her have been rounded up over the years. When the Earth comes under attack by an alien commander known as Gallaxhar, however, Ginormica and her new allies are set free to save the planet.

The movie stars the voices of Reese Witherspoon, Will Arnett, Rainn Wilson and Kiefer Sutherland. It's rated PG for sci-fi action, crude humor and language.

THE HAUNTING IN CONNECTICUT

The Haunting in Connecticut is the story of a family forced to relocate near a clinic where their son was being treated for cancer. Strained financially and emotionally, the family discovers their recently renovated home was a former mortuary with a dark history. After experiencing violent supernatural events both inside and out of the house, the family seeks the help of ghost hunters and the Catholic Church, which performs an exorcism.

The movie stars Virginia Madsen, Brooklyn Prouix and Elias Koteas. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of terror and disturbing images.

12 ROUNDS

When New Orleans Police Detective Danny Fisher stops a brilliant thief, Miles, from getting away with a multi-million-dollar heist, the thief's girlfriend is accidentally killed. After escaping from prison, the criminal mastermind enacts his revenge, taunting Danny with a series of near-impossible puzzles and tasks... 12 rounds... that Danny must somehow complete to save the life of his fiancée.

The movie stars John Cena, Steve Harris, Aidan Gillen and Brian J. White. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action.

DUPLICITY

CIA officer Claire Stenwick and MI6 agent Ray Koval have left the world of government intelligence to cash in on a highly profitable cold war raging between two rival multinational corporations. Their mission is to secure the formula for a product that will bring a fortune to the company that patents it first. And for Stenwick's and Koval's employers, nothing is out of bounds.

But as the stakes rise, the trickiest secret for Stenwick and Koval is their growing attraction. As they try to stay one step ahead of the other, they find the only thing they can't cheat their way out of is love.

Duplicity stars Julia Roberts, Clive Owen, Paul Giamatti and Billy Bob Thornton. It's rated PG-13 for language and sexual content.

I LOVE YOU, MAN

Peter Klaven is a successful real estate agent engaged to Zooey, the woman of his dreams. But, he realizes he has no male friend close enough to serve as best man in his wedding.

So, Peter sets out to rectify the situation through a series of "man dates" and meets Sydney Fife, a charming, opinionated man with whom he instantly bonds. But the closer the two men get, the more Peter's relationship with Zooey suffers, and Peter must choose between his fiancée and his new friend.

The movie stars Paul Rudd, Jason Segel, Rashida Jones and Jaime Pressly. It's rated R for language and sexual references.

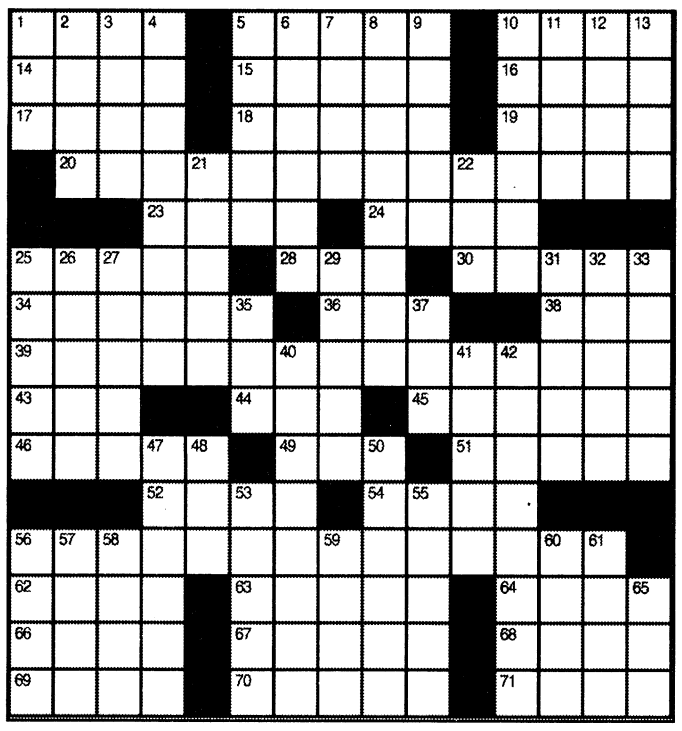
KNOWING

When a time capsule from 1958 is opened at an elementary school, John Koestler's son Caleb finds a sheet of paper filled with rows of seemingly random numbers.

John realizes the message accurately pinpoints the dates, death tolls and coordinates of every major disaster of the past 50 years, and predicts three events involving himself and his son which will end in global destruction.

When the authorities ignore John's warnings, he enlists the help of the daughter and granddaughter of the message's author to prevent more destruction.

Knowing stars Nicolas Cage, Lara Robinson and Chandler Canterbury. It's rated PG-13 for disaster sequences, disturbing images and language.



BROTHERS AT WAR

Jake Rademacher travels to Iraq to understand the motivation of his two brothers serving there. He gains unprecedented access to U.S. and Iraqi combat units.

Friday's tornadoes wreak havoc

Thunderstorm causes flooding, high winds on post

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Nine tornadoes were sighted Friday during the severe thunderstorm that passed through Georgia. Five others were reported in Russell and Lee counties, the nearest in Seale, Ala. Most of the damage on Fort Benning is related to high winds and flooding, although one tornado touched down on the southeastern border of the installation near Cusseta, Ga.

The weather sirens on post, which sounded for more than an hour while a tornado warning was in effect, went off because a tornado was sighted northwest of Fort Benning, said Michael Hawkins, plans and operations officer for the Directorate of Plans, Training, Mobilization and Security.

Several homes and buildings on post lost power due to high winds, Hawkins said.

Most of the damage was on Harmony Church, said Walker Fricks, manager of Fort Benning Operations for Flint Electric Membership Corporation.

ACES college fair set for April 28

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Soldiers, family members, retirees and DoD Civilians interested in furthering their education will be able to explore their options at the Fort Benning Army Continuing Education System's college fair April 28.

The college fair will take place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Main Post PX.

Representatives from eight area universities and programs including Green to Gold and Troops to Teachers will be on hand, as well as counselors from the Army Continuing Education Center and representatives from the Veterans Administration and the Department of Labor.

The fair will offer something for everyone and will combine many of the Army's educational resources into a one-stop shop where attendees can access information quickly and easily, said Melanie-Mandy Mayer, an ACES administrator.

"It's going to be very convenient for the Soldiers," she said. "Normally, if they have a quick question, they have to sign in at the education center and wait. Here, they can just walk up to a counselor."

Obama forwards supplemental war funding request to Congress

Gerry J. Gilmore
AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — President Barack Obama forwarded the White House's $83.4-billion war supplemental appropriations request to the U.S. House of Representatives April 9.

"We face a security situation in Afghanistan and Pakistan that demands urgent attention," Obama wrote in a letter addressed to U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi. "The Taliban is resurgent, and al-Qaida threatens America from its safe haven along the Afghan-Pakistan border."

Most of the funds contained in the fiscal 2009 supplemental request, according to the letter, are earmarked for anti-extremist operations in Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iraq. The supplemental funding request will be reviewed and voted on by U.S. legislators in the House and Senate.

"Nearly 95 percent of these funds," Obama wrote, "will be used to support our men and women in uniform as they help the people of Iraq to take responsibility for their own future — and work to disrupt, dismantle, and defeat al-Qaida in Pakistan and Afghanistan."

The remainder of the supplemental money will be used to fund "a variety of defense and international efforts that will help use all the elements of our power to confront the threats to our security — from securing loose nuclear weapons to combating fear and want under repressive regimes."

Workshops give employees information

Federal Employees' Week begins April 27

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Federal Employees' Week is April 27-30 on Fort Benning. The week will include a variety of workshops designed to help federal employees with personal and professional development.

The workshops are open to all federal employees and their family members, said Winnie Torain, equal employment opportunity specialist and special emphasis program manager.

"We want to give people an opportunity to learn more about their federal careers," she said. "A happy employee is one who is informed of all options."

It will be "an opportune time" for people to ask questions or receive training in areas unrelated to their specific position that they may want to branch into later, said Torain, who encourages managers to attend as well.

A kick off ceremony, featuring guest speaker and former Columbus resident Rear Adm.

Benning's diversity gives one plenty of pastime opportunities

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Join the club. Really.

Do you remember how much fun it was to be on the pep squad, color guard or debate team in high school? Do you cherish fond memories from Spanish club, Model UN or a literary guild you joined as a student? Or maybe you never felt like you had enough time, but you always wondered what it would be like to try out the chess team or drama club.

Well, now's your chance. Clubs aren't just for school. No matter your age there is something satisfying in finding shared interests with a group of like-minded individuals. And it's rewarding to learn more about your hobby, sport or other pastime while networking with others and meeting new people.

So imagine my delight when I found La Table Ronde, a club for people interested in speaking French. Sometimes a little nostalgic for France and often missing the language I studied for years, I never would have expected to find just what I needed so close to home.

But that's part of the beauty of Fort Benning. It is a rich and diverse community filled with people who have lived in varied places, studied many different fields and dabbled in unique pursuits. With such diversity, you're bound to find someone who shares your love of classic cars, cooking or postmodern choreography.

When seeking out a club, ask organizations that might have information about that area of interest. Want to know more about genealogy? Ask at the library. Like bird watching or hunting? Call Outdoor Recreation. Wild about rock climbing? Try Smith Fitness Center. If there isn't a group already started, someone who works there might be able to point you in the right direction.

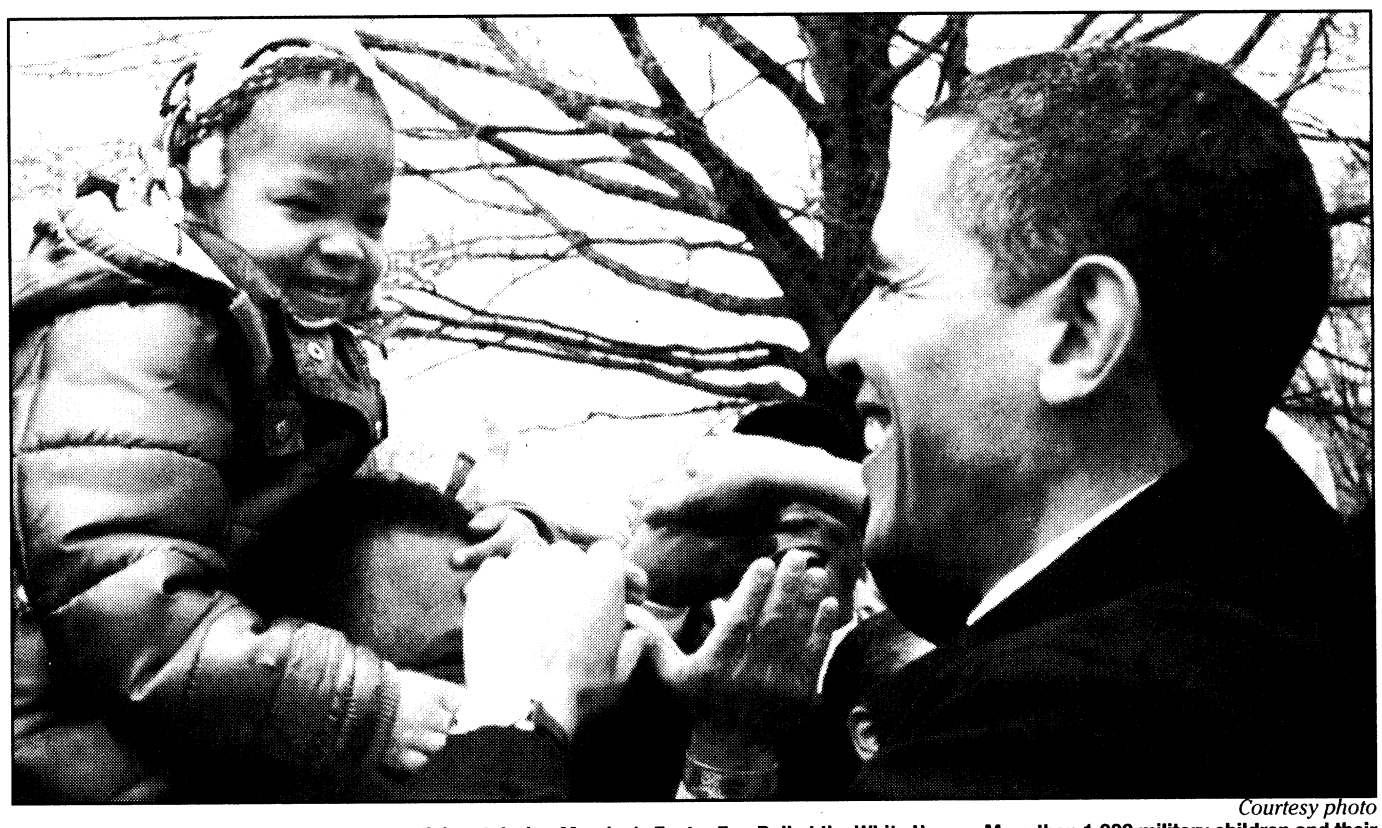
Here are some clubs that are already up and running and looking for more members. Maybe that could be you.

· Benning BASS Club — This fishing club meets twice a month at the Legacy Dealership in Columbus. Membership is open to service members, retirees, DoD Civilians and their families who are 16 or older. For more information, go to www.benningbassclub.com.

· Triathlon Club — Tone muscles and prepare for the June 6 post triathlon at the new Triathlon Club, which meets Mondays and Wednesdays, starting April 27. You don't have to compete in the triathlon to join, but you must have a military ID card. For details, e-mail lori.smith6@us.army.mil.

· Benning Book Club — Find the motivation to read new and interesting books with members of this club who meet one Friday a month at Sayers Memorial Library. The next meeting is at 10 a.m. Friday. For more information, call the library.

· Community Spouses Club — Open to spouses of service members, retirees or DoD Civilians, this club has regular get-togethers and a monthly newsletter to keep its members up to date. Visit www.fortbenningosc.org for details.



· International Wives Club — Despite its name, the International Wives Club is open to both men and women who are foreign born spouses of service members or civilians on Fort Benning. They meet the second Tuesday of the month and host various socials throughout the year. For more information, call 706-687-6471.

· New Parent Support Play Group — For moms and dads of children 3 and younger, this group gives parents an opportunity to focus on their child's developmental skills while meeting and sharing tips with other parents. It meets twice monthly in the Bouton Heights subdivision. Read the article on C1 for more information.

· Columbus Cycling Club — Hop on your bike and join a group of Soldiers and civilians who ride together Tuesday and Friday afternoons and at 8 a.m. Saturdays, starting at the old National Infantry Museum. For more information, e-mail jose.e.solis@us.army.mil.

I can't mention all the societies, circles and associations on post in this small space, but there are plenty more. And if you can't find a club for scrapbookers, skateboarders or stamp collectors, start one. You get to share ideas and meet new people. And you can name yourself president.

President Barack Obama greets a young participant during Monday's Easter Egg Roll at the White House. More than 1,000 military children and their parents participated in the egg roll.

President recognizes Month of the Military Child

In 1986, April was designated as the Month of the Military Child, and I am proud to mark the special recognition the Department of Defense has given to military children.

Like all Americans, I am grateful to the brave men and women in uniform who are serving our nation. They are the living embodiment of the ideals of sacrifice, honor and duty that have always made this nation great — and their sacrifice is their families' sacrifice too.

Their children, especially, display tremendous strength and courage each day, bravely bearing the burden of having a loved one serving in harm's way. They may move many times — across the nation and even around the world — as they grow up. They may not see their loved ones for months on end.

It is not easy, and Michelle and I, as well as the Vice President and Dr. Jill Biden, admire and are deeply grateful to each and every one of them. I call on all Americans to keep military children in their thoughts and prayers and to do their part to reach out to and support them and their families.

— President Barack Obama

Spring cleaning

CPT Vanessa Stolzoff

SGT Jullian Smith, 362nd Multi-Role Bridge Company, 11th Engineer Battalion, scrapes paint off the exterior of the battalion barracks April 3. The renovation was part of a nine-day process that involved the entire battalion. "There was a lot of work to be done, but we're way ahead of the spring cleanup," said CSM Terry Purdin, command sergeant major for the battalion. "Our primary focus was the barracks. We wanted to show our single Soldiers that we cared about them moving back into the barracks (and) that our standards are high for their welfare. We weren't asked to do it; we were just trying to improve our foxhole. It looks a whole lot nicer than it ever has since I've been here. It looks well manicured." The Soldiers, about 450 including the command team, also cleaned up the battalion headquarters, the motor pool, company buildings and the Sightseeing Road Chapel, sometimes working in the rain. "We painted doorways, windowsills, did a lot of work inside waxing and cleaning the floors, painting walls. It looked a lot different afterward," said PFC Garrett Webb, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, who worked on the chapel. "It was a good team effort ... definitely a job well done."

Rangers walk in annual Bataan Memorial March

Tracy A. Bailey
75TH RANGER REGIMENT

Five Rangers from Regimental Special Troops Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, participated in the 20th annual Bataan Memorial Death March at White Sands, N.M., March 29.

The environment: 55 mile an hour winds, temperatures in the mid 70s; the desert (and its creatures); 26.2 miles; and 5,300 participants.

"The men who were forced to march what is now known as the Bataan Death March had conditions that were much, much worse than this," said SSG Bill Gallant, with the 75th Ranger Regiment.

The Bataan Memorial Death March honors World War II heroes who were responsible for the defense of the islands of Luzon, Corregidor and the harbor defense forts of the Philippines.

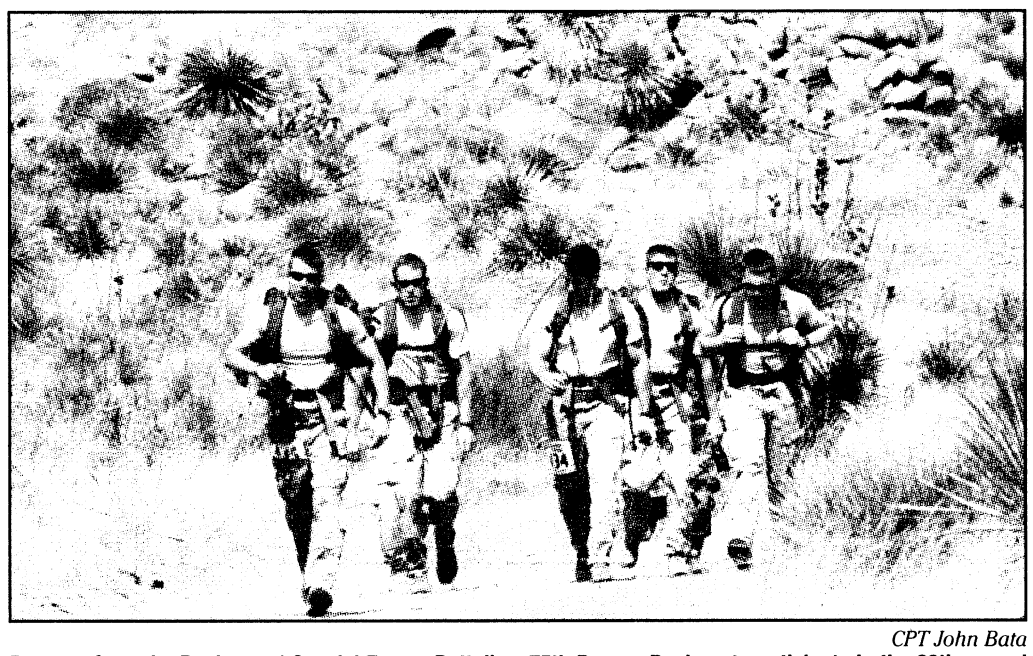
They fought in a malaria-infested region, surviving on half or quarter rations with little or no medical help. They fought with outdated equipment and virtually no air power.

They marched for days in the scorching heat through the Philippine jungles. Thousands died. Those who survived faced the hardships of a prisoner of war camp. Others were wounded or killed when unmarked enemy ships transporting prisoners of war to Japan were sunk by U.S. air and naval forces.

"Marching in this event is an honor and a privilege to pay tribute to the veterans of the march, to remember our fallen comrades and to represent our Ranger Regiment," Gallant said.

The Ranger lineage leads straight to the men who rescued the survivors at Cabanatuan. The 6th Ranger Battalion rescued the 511 prisoners of war who still remained at the Cabanatuan Prison Camp January 1945 after the 1942 Bataan Death March.

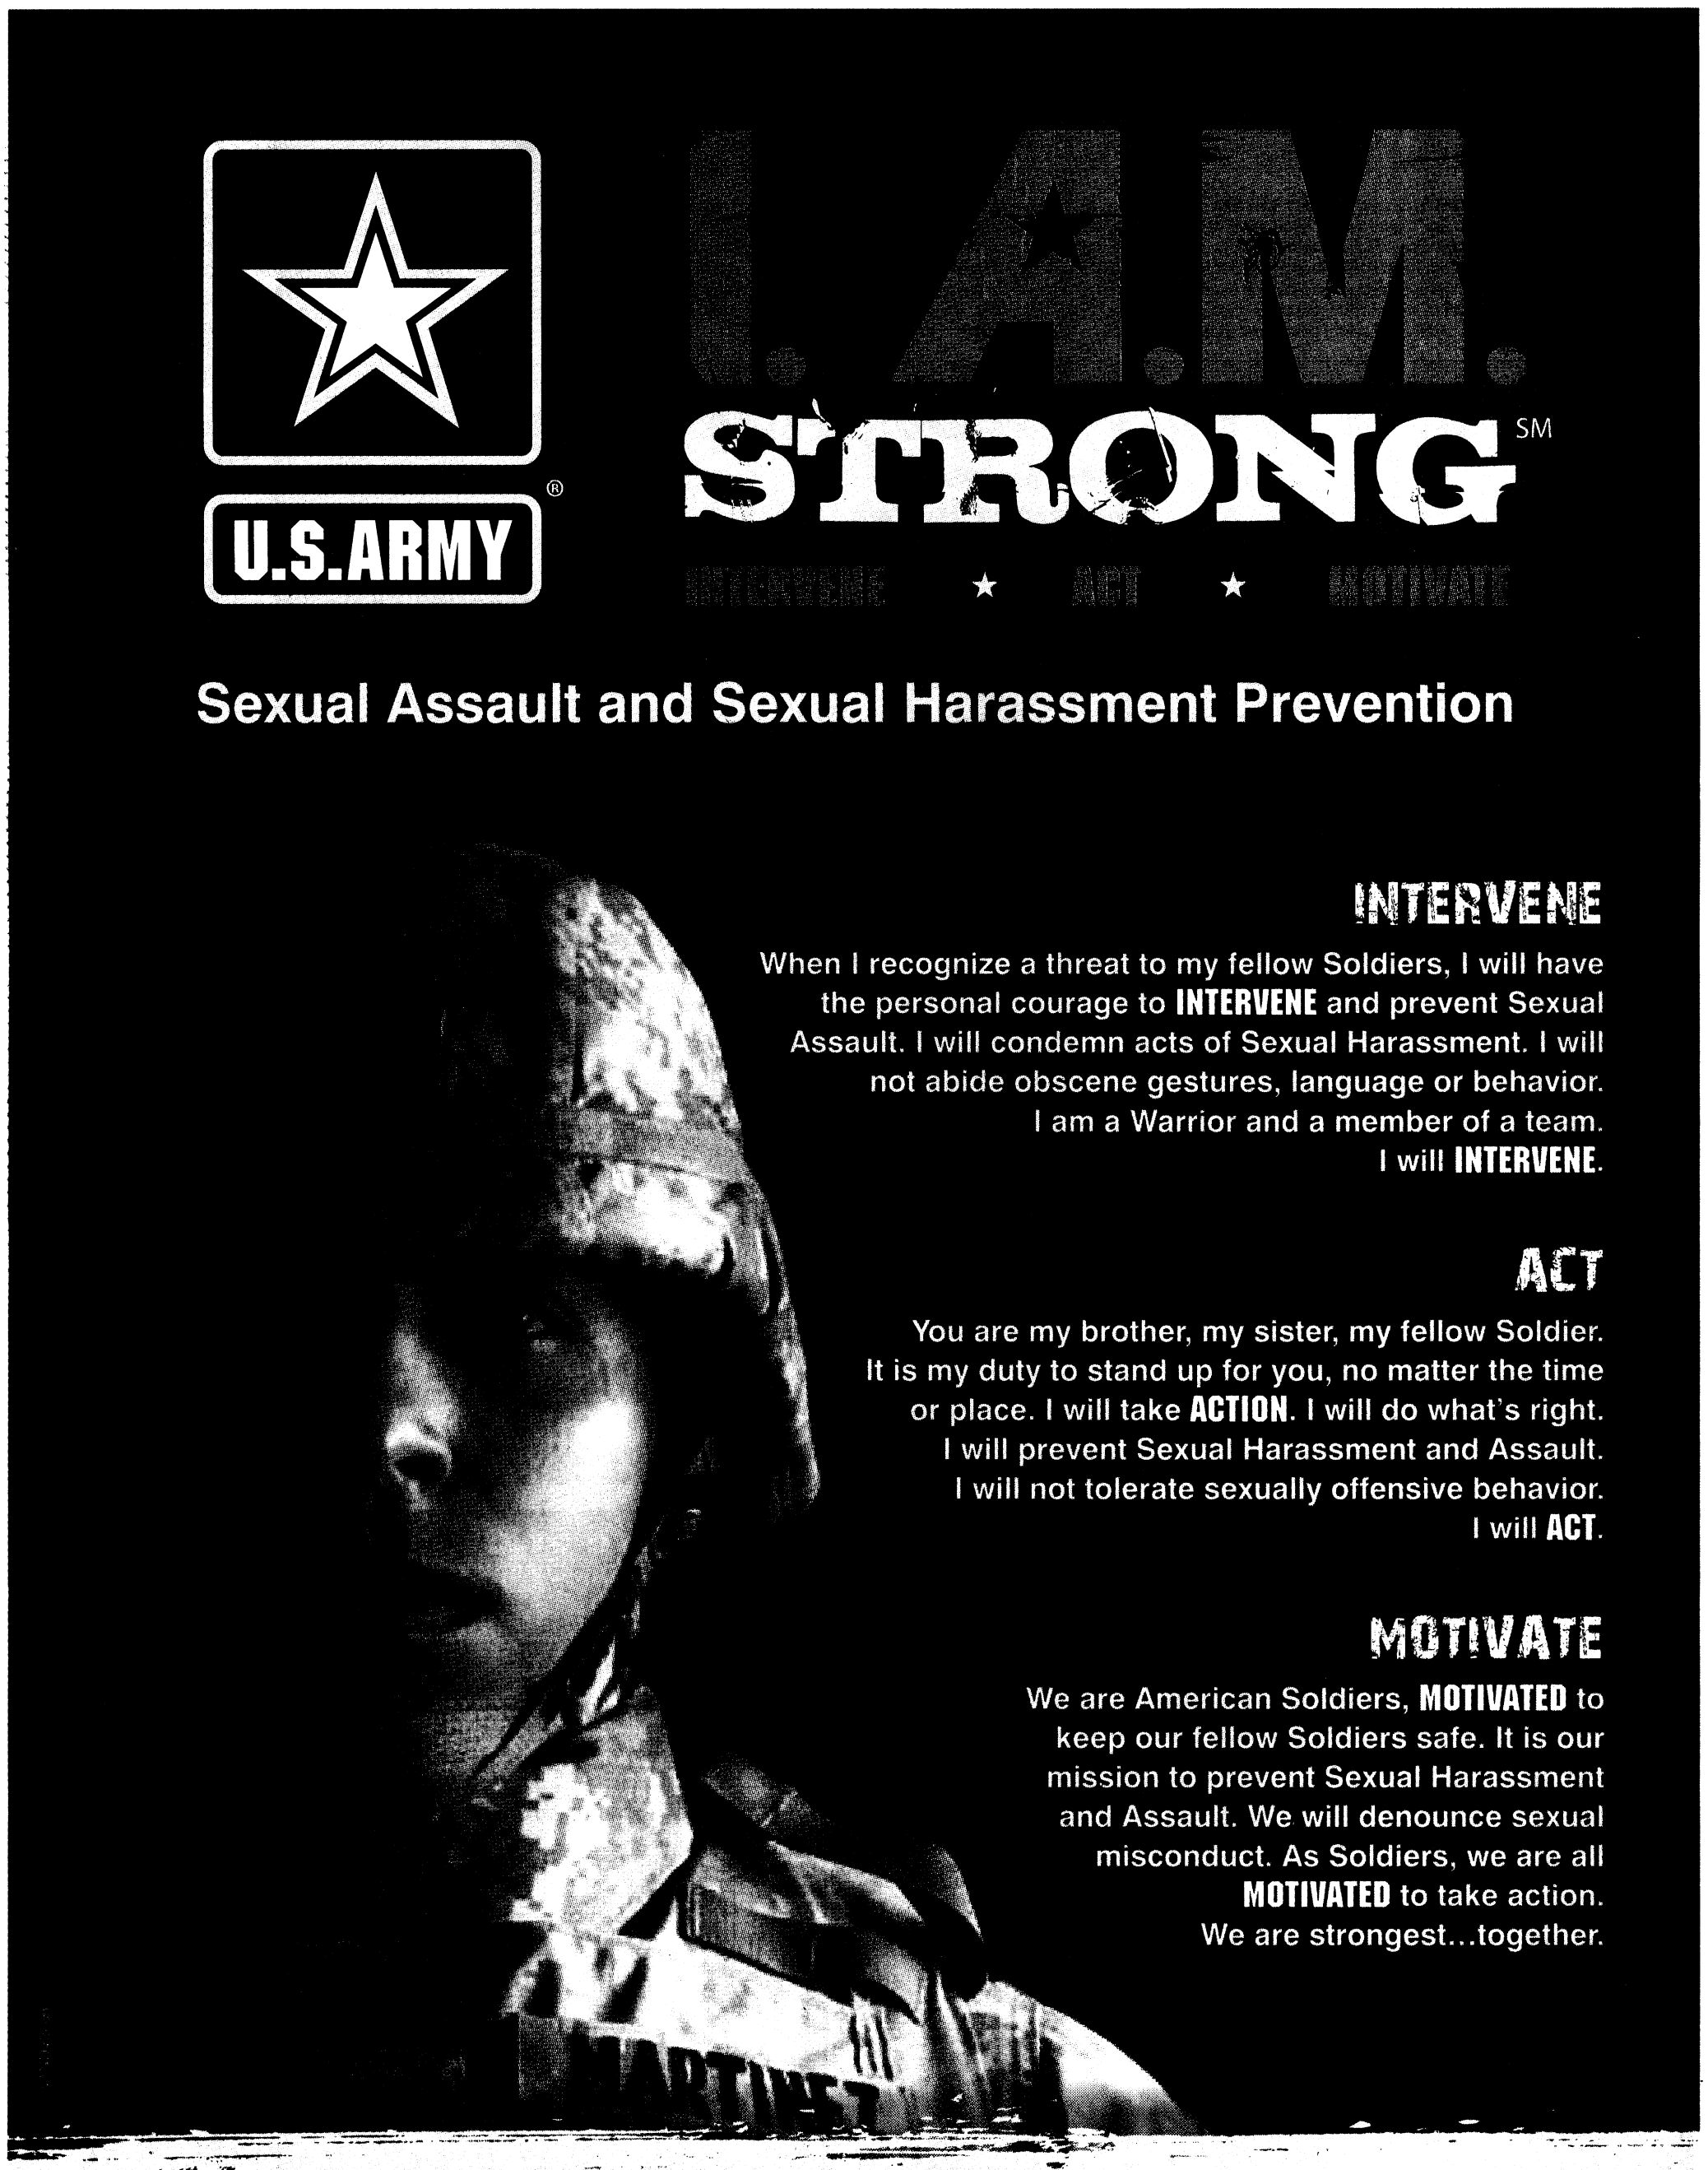
"This march is also a way for us to honor the men from 6th Ranger Battalion's heroic rescue of the survivors of the march," Gallant said. "And the best way to do this is to lead from the front."



The team came in first place in the Military Male Heavy Team Class with an overall time of five hours and 42 minutes.

"Luckily, we were allowed to use iPods; the music gave us the motivation to keep moving," Gallant said. "The modified uniforms were a must in the desert environment."

A number of veterans from the original march were in attendance.



"It was an honor to shake hands with the survivors of the actual march," Gallant said.

Employee Week: Places experts for on-site help

Clara H. Cobb, will be from 11 a.m. to noon in the second ballroom of the Middle School Teen Center on McIver Street. Cobb, who began her federal career 30 years ago, is the assistant surgeon general of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in Atlanta. A reception will follow the ceremony.

Workshops begin April 28 and last through April 30. The first workshop will be led by the Civilian Personnel Advisory Center.

"We're training on everything from how to advance in the federal system and tips on how to complete your resume to the civilian awards program and how we refer applicants to be considered for vacancies," said Blanche Robinson, human resources officer for CPAC. "I highly encourage any federal employee to attend as many sessions as they possibly can because there's going to be a litany of topics that will be of interest to them."

The topics have been gathered from suggestions from the current work force, Robinson said, so they are subjects that are relevant to today's workers.

"Very frequently it's hard to get all the information from one source at one time," she said. "This is an opportunity for them to get pertinent information in one fell swoop. All the experts will be on site. Just show up for one day or one or two hours for sessions that you're interested in. There's a lot available."

Besides job-related training, workshops will cover morale issues such as stress management, financial planning and health care, since efficiency at work and quality of life at home are closely linked, Torain said.

All workshops will be held in the teen center, Building 1056. Employees should make their workshop selections in advance, request permission to attend from their supervisor and arrive early to sign in.

For more information, call 706-545-1872.

College fair: Showcases educational opportunities

For those whose schedules normally prevent them from meeting with counselors and program representatives, the fair will provide that opportunity, Mayer said.

Many Soldiers do not take advantage of the Army's educational resources simply because they are unaware of them, said Dr. Grey Edwards Jr., director of the Fort Benning hub of ACES, which includes six other installations in the Southeast.

"I come across a lot of people who have no idea they're eligible to receive tuition assistance," he said. "They've been told in briefings, but a lot of times it's just an overload of information. The fair is going to give people more of an awareness of what's out there. If they don't already have an idea of what they'd like to do, this will give them exposure to what is available."

All of the programs participating in the fair offer flexible schedules tailored for Soldiers, Mayer said.

"The colleges that are here are here because they want to work with the Soldiers," she said. "They want to make sure that if you only have Friday night, Saturday and Sunday, then that's when you'll have class. They make it available whenever the Soldier can go, and that I think is really important for Soldiers to know."

Edwards said he hoped the information available at the fair would help set attendees on a path toward continuing their education.

"Hopefully people will take away things that will inspire them to go out and get their education," he said. "Because the more prepared a person is, the more marketable they become."

Supplemental: To help support Afghan governance

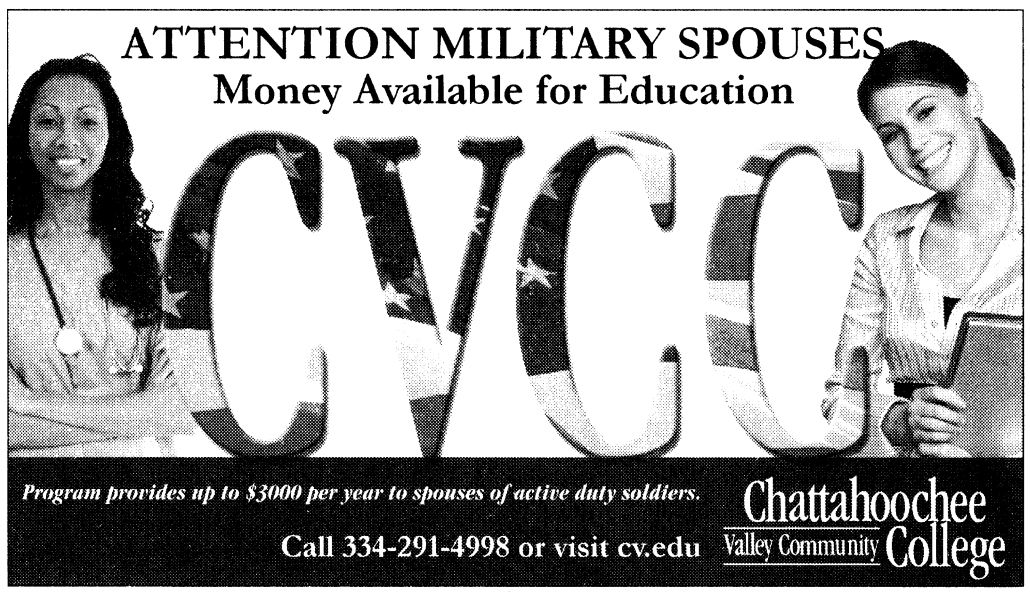
The supplemental funds also will contribute to creating political and economic stability in Iraq through governance, reconstruction and humanitarian relief programs, Obama wrote in the letter.

At the same time, the supplemental funds also will be used to "employ the necessary civilian resources to build Afghan governance capacity and self-sufficiency."



Since the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on the U.S., Obama wrote, Congress has passed 17 separate emergency supplemental funding bills totaling $822.1 billion for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. Obama said this would be the last planned war-funding supplemental request to finance the conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"We must break that recent tradition (of supplemental funding) and include future military costs in the regular budget so that we have an honest, more accurate, and fiscally responsible estimate of federal spending," Obama wrote. "And we should not label military costs as emergency funds so as to avoid our responsibility to abide by the spending limitations set forth by Congress."

The supplemental appropriations request assigns $75.5 billion to support U.S. military and intelligence community activities in support of operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, according to an Office of Management and Budget news release.

Billions in other funding contained in the supplemental is earmarked for diplomatic and foreign-assistance initiatives in Afghanistan, Iraq and Pakistan, as well as to help fund some United Nations peacekeeping efforts in Africa.

New GI Bill program provides tuition help

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Soldiers and veterans using GI Bill benefits to attend college have long been limited by their finances, but that is about to change.

The Yellow Ribbon GI Enhancement Program, a provision of the Post-9/11 Veterans Educational Assistance Act of 2008, will help veterans avoid paying out-of-pocket for tuition expenses that exceed their GI benefits. Participating colleges and institutions can choose to waive up to 50 percent of those expenses, and the Veterans Administration will match the same amount as the institution, thereby minimizing or eliminating the extra cost.

Colleges' participation in the program, which takes effect August 1 along with the rest of the new GI bill, is strictly voluntary. In the tricommunity, Troy State University is the first institute to announce it will participate in the program, and will match the full amount allowed.

"We've always wanted to support our military and veterans, and we felt it was the right thing to do," said Dr. Dave White, director of the southeast region of Troy's global campus. "There shouldn't be any local veteran who comes to Troy who will have to pay out-of-pocket for tuition."

In order to be eligible to participate in the Yellow Ribbon Program, colleges and training programs must be approved for GI Bill benefits. Soldiers receiving Yellow Ribbon tuition waivers must meet minimum eligibility requirements of the new GI Bill, which include serving at least 90 days of active duty since September 11, 2001.

The program will mainly affect students in graduate programs and private schools, since their tuition exceeds GI Bill maximum funding more often than that of public schools, White said.

That could be an incentive for more veterans and family members to attend graduate school, said Dr. Grey Edwards, director of the Fort Benning hub of the Army Continuing Education System.

"It gives them the option to shoot for the moon instead of having to accept that they can't afford it," he said.

Because the Yellow Ribbon Program also applies to out of state tuition, it will open a wider range of educational options to veterans and their families, Edwards said. He added that along with the other benefits of the new GI Bill, wider opportunities could be an important recruiting and retention tool.

"Not only are they going to learn a skill while they're in the Army, but they'll also have educational opportunities once they leave active duty," he said. "They or their family members will be able to pursue educational goals they may not have been able to without financial aid."

Storm: Damaged trees, power lines, bird habitat

The first crew arrived on site to restore power around 11 p.m. Friday, Fricks said. By the end of the day Sunday, all power was restored.

"Trees were the biggest problem, bringing down about two-miles worth of power lines," he said. "Preliminary estimates have the damage at approximately $250,000."

The damaged trees also affected the red-cockaded woodpecker, an endangered species that inhabits the longleaf pines which flourish on Fort Benning.

"Not only did we have red-cockaded woodpecker cavity trees destroyed, but a good deal of forest where they forage was destroyed as well," said Michael Barron, wildlife biologist with the Conservation Branch.

Fort Benning lost more than 60 cavities, home to 17 clusters, or family groups, of woodpeckers.

"Right now, we're still seeing and hearing birds in the habitat, so that gives a good indication that a lot of them survived the storm," Barron said.

Post officials have restored some of the cavities and are continuing to monitor the situation.

The storm also destroyed other trees besides the longleaf pines, Barron said.

Initially, they blocked several roads on post, but now all major roads are clear.

A portion of Sunshine Road is still in disrepair due to flooding. A small bridge on Caramouche Range that crosses Upatoi Creek is also being mended after floods broke the concrete.

Cheryl Rodewig
This tree, uprooted in the storm Friday, broke a fence at Range Control's headquarters on Harmony Church.

The tornadoes in Georgia, sighted between 5 p.m. and shortly after midnight headed east as the storm moved toward the coast. The third tornado of the night touched down at 9:46 p.m. on post. Its path was four miles long and 440 yards wide, said Laura Griffith, a forecaster with the National Weather Service in Peachtree City, Ga.

Strong winds, up to 100 miles per hour, flattened some trees and outbuildings, she said. The next tornado, southeast of the one on Fort Benning, was outside the borders of the installation near Cusseta, where it damaged sheds, two homes and a church.

North and central Georgia usually has about 20 tornadoes a year as cold fronts come through the area, Griffith said. Already, the state has had 19 this year.

Tornadoes in Georgia are common in the warmer months.

"What ends up happening is as thunderstorms develop you have differences in humidity, differences in the density of air masses and temperature differences," Griffith said. "What you could narrow all that down to is directly influencing air into and out of a thunderstorm, so you have air coming in to feed the cloud and you have outflow. A tornado is the result of that circulation."

When it comes to tornado safety, keeping up with weather advisories is critical, Hawkins said.

A watch means the conditions for a tornado are favorable; a warning means one has been sighted or will occur in the immediate feature.

When Lawson Army Airfield issues a warning because a tornado has been sighted — or is projected to occur — near or on Fort Benning, people should take shelter immediately, Hawkins said.

"If you have a basement, take cover in your basement. Get in the hallway if you don't have a basement," he said. "Stay away from windows."

Anyone driving should go into the nearest building or take cover under an overpass or, at the very least, a low-lying area, such as a ditch.

A disaster preparedness kit, including water, a flashlight, matches and other essentials, is always a good idea, he said.

"In our area with the weather transitioning the way it does, we tend to have a lot of thunderstorms," Hawkins said. "We're sitting where systems meet. Being prepared, that's the key — watching local news, being aware. Usually they project severe thunderstorms in the forecast and a lot of times tornadoes can spring up from severe thunderstorms."

Soldiers and civilians with a Fort Benning decal and proper identification can use the ACP, which provides access to Sand Hill, Kelley Hill, Harmony Church and all points north. Hours of operation are 5 a.m. to 7 p.m. Monday through Friday.

TELLING WAR STORIES PROJECT SEEKS VOLUNTEERS

Telling War Stories is a project started by CPT Mike Warren, an English instructor at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. that aims to help Soldiers share their stories with the help of cadets. Soldiers submit their work, which is read by cadets who offer revisions and feedback. The project provides an opportunity for the Soldiers and the cadets to gain new perspective on war stories. The goal is to eventually publish a collection of the stories submitted for the project.

Warren is seeking Soldiers who would like to share their stories. He and four cadets will visit Fort Benning June 4 and 5.

For more information, or to volunteer with the project, call Warren at 845-938-2661 or e-mail michael.warren3@us.army.mil.

SCAM WARNING FROM CID

The U.S. Army Criminal Investigation Command is warning the Army community of an ongoing Internet scam within popular social networking and dating sites where the criminal poses as a member of the U.S. Army. Scammers create profiles of senior Army officers and non-commissioned officers, to include the use of official photographs, in an attempt to lure unsuspecting persons into revealing personal, banking or financial information.

In their latest attempt, scammers are making contact with potential victims through various social networking sites. After contact, during instant messaging or e-mail correspondence, the scammers ask recipients to cash a check that would help the sender or the sender's family out of a terrible situation.

CID recommends Soldiers, civilians and family members who come across any known suspicious social networking or dating site profile or are solicited in this fashion contact the nearest CID office or e-mail CID at crimetips@conus.army.mil.

SUBMIT AN EVENT

Submit event and contact information to lori.egan@thebayonet.com. Submissions must be sent by noon the Friday before publication.

Challenger

Name: SSG Glenville Challenger Sr.

Unit: A Company, 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception)

Job title and military occupational specialty: Senior processor, Infantryman

Years in service: 21 years

Highest Education: Associate degree in general studies

Family: Married for 17 years and has three children

Hobbies: Spending time with family, working out, playing basketball, coaching kids' soccer

Biography: Challenger has deployed to Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Bosnia, Panama and Afghanistan. He has been stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky., Fort Bragg, N.C., Fort Drum, N.Y., Fort Benning and Korea.

He said his most memorable experience is having the privilege to serve and also receiving the Aubrey Red Newman Award for teaching, counseling and mentoring Soldiers.

Early in Challenger's career, he aspired to be like his first brigade command sergeant major because he was always talking to Soldiers and trying to motivate and inspire them to achieve anything they wanted in life in or out of the Army.

After he retires from the Army, he wants to coach basketball or football and teach young people to strive for success.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Perry chokes, Cabrera takes title

With just two holes left to play in the final round of the Masters, Kenny Perry had a two-stroke lead. It seemed like he would be donning the champion's green jacket, but choked on the 17th and 18th hole to force a three-man playoff with Angel Cabrera and Chad Campbell.

Campbell didn't make it past the first playoff hole. Cabrera and Perry dueled it out on the second and became the lowest-ranked player to win since world ranking began in 1986.

Phillies broadcaster dies

Harry Kalas, broadcaster for the Philadelphia Phillies, died April 13 at age 73 after passing out in the broadcast booth before the Phillies' game against the Washington Nationals.

Kalas had been with the organization since 1971. He was the recipient of the Baseball Hall of Fame's Ford C. Frick Award in 2002 for his contributions to baseball.

Angels' tragedy

Rookie pitcher Nick Adenhart, 22, of the Los Angeles Angels, died in a car accident April 9, after making his season debut the same night and throwing six scoreless innings.

A minivan driven by an alleged drunk driver struck the car Adenhart was a passenger in. Two others in the car with him died.

NASCAR heads to Phoenix

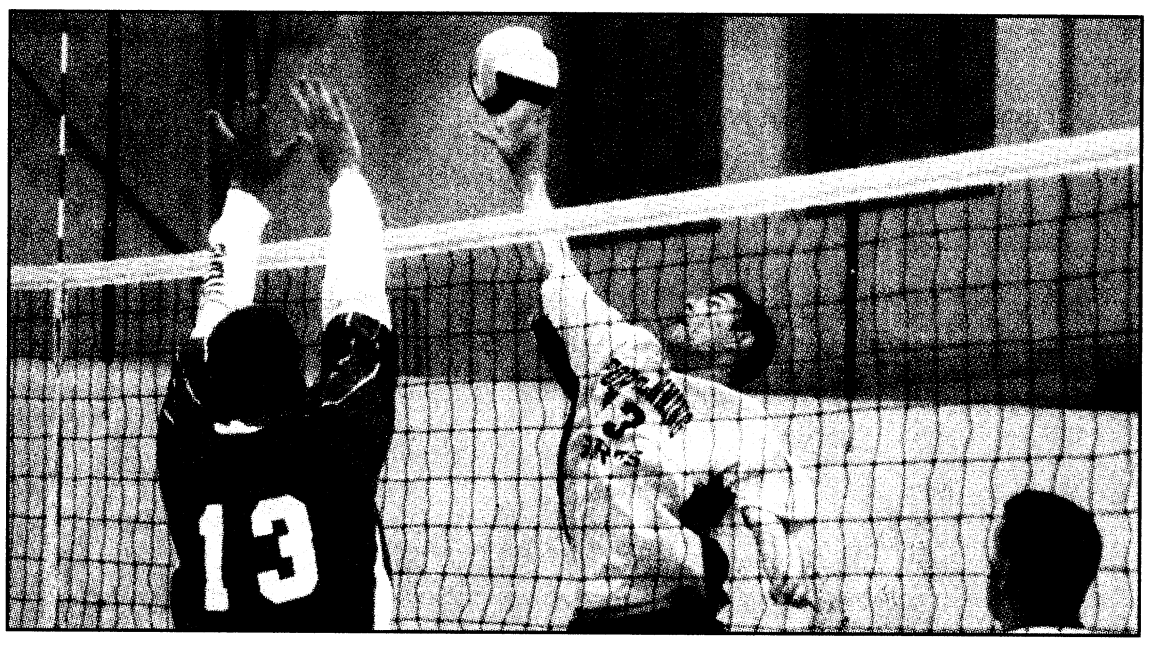
After a weekend off, the drivers are ready to get back on the track at Phoenix International Raceway.

The Subway Fresh Fit 500 will have coverage beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday on Fox.

Terriers win in OT

Boston University men's hockey clinched their fifth national championship April 11 in the Frozen Four. The team overcame a 3-1 deficit late in the third period to win in overtime over Miami University.

Save the date



The NFL draft begins at 4 p.m. April 25 at Radio City Music Hall in New York city. Rounds one and two will be April 25, and rounds three through seven will begin at 10 a.m. April 26. The Detroit Lions have the first pick, followed by the St. Louis Rams at second, and the Kansas City Chiefs at third. The draft will be televised by the NFL Network and ESPN.

And the winner is?

Don Sando came out on top in The Bayonet March Madness basketball pick 'em challenge. Sando went 5-3 the first week and 4-2 the final week finishing two games ahead of second place Carl Pignato and Michelle Gordon, who both went 7-7. MAJ Rhett Griner and Lori Egan both finished with 6-8 records for fourth place, and SFC Brandon Barnett came in sixth place at 5-9.

Team USAIC defeats 2/58 Patriots

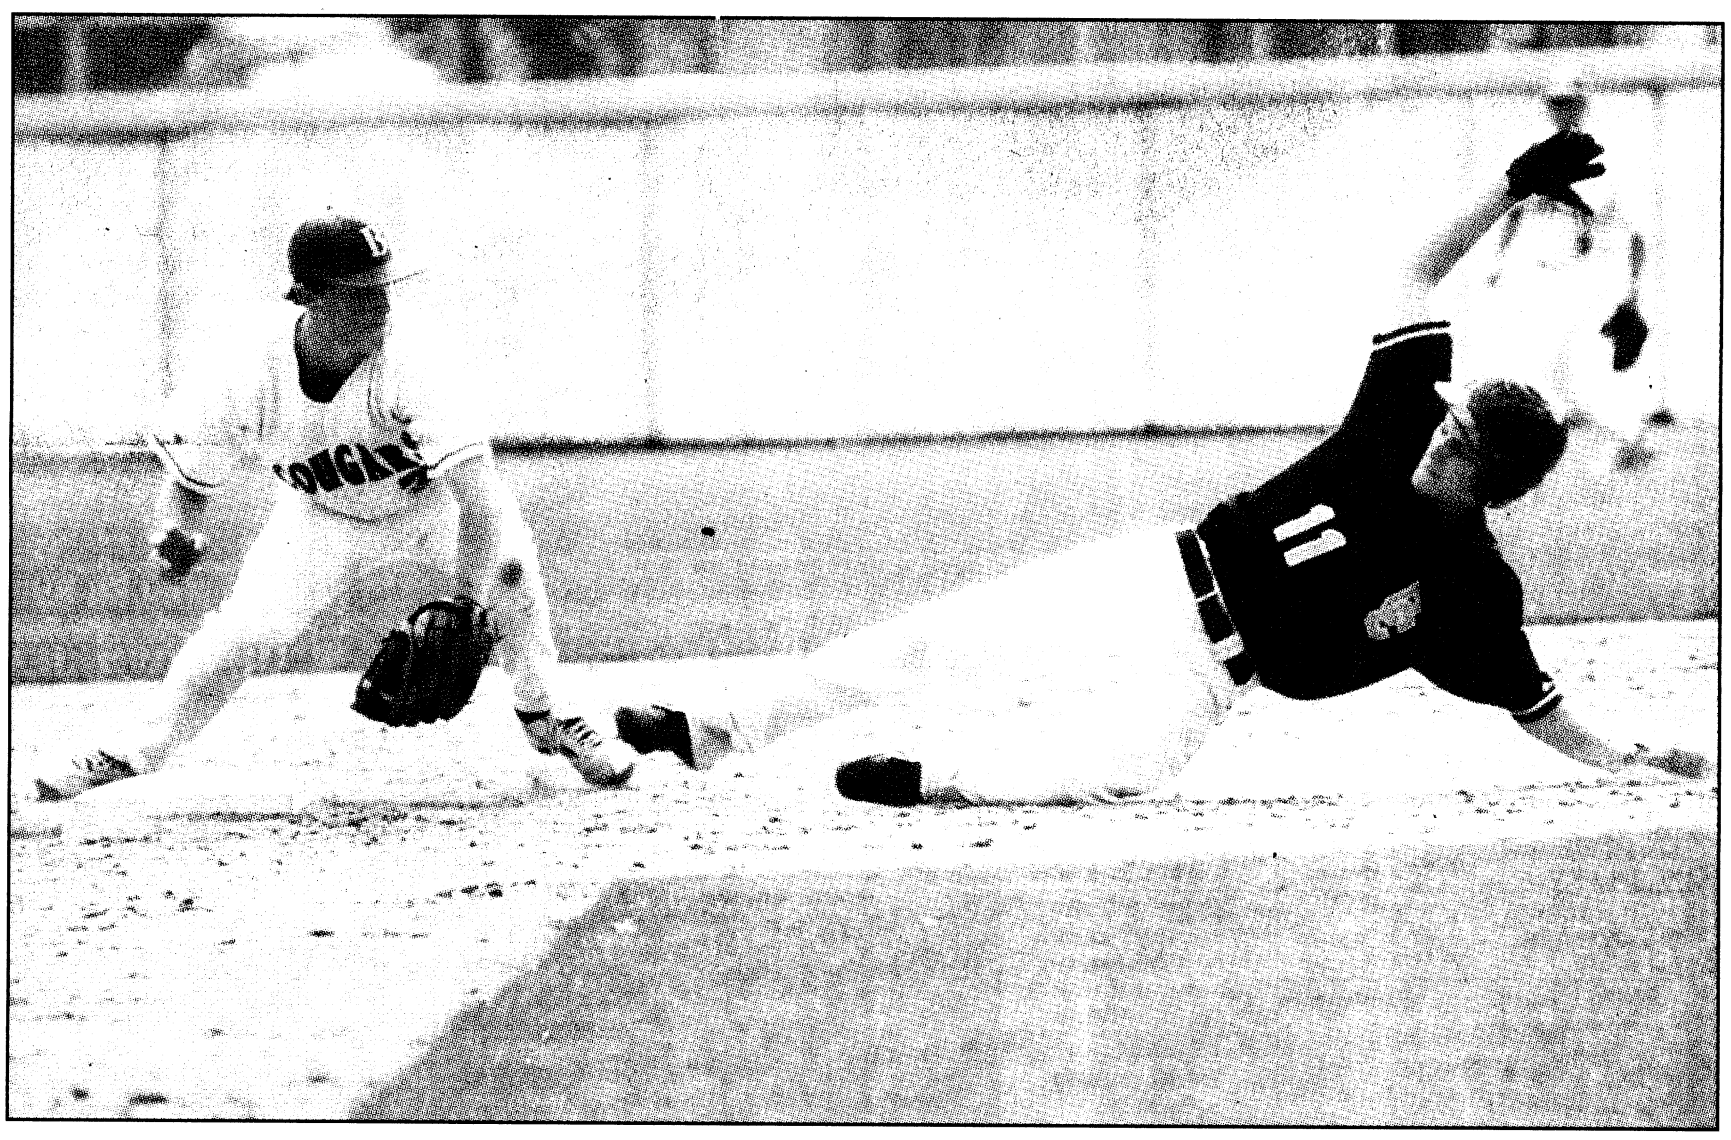
Team USAIC's Tony Skirko prepares to spike the ball over the net as Patriot Chad Fuller tries to block it. Team USAIC took a two-game victory over the Patriots Tuesday at Smith Fitness Center.

Team USAIC, champions of the preseason Commander's Cup intramural volleyball season, added one more victory to their perfect record in the intramural league after taking a two-game victory over the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment Patriots Tuesday at Smith Fitness Center.

Both teams battled early for control of the game with Team USAIC racking up 11 points before the Patriots scored their first point on an out-of-bounds play. Team USAIC scored on offense with a strong play from their setters while the defense held the Patriots to eight points en route to a 25-8 win.

"Between games, I told the team to keep up the momentum — that's what volleyball is about. And I told them not to get sloppy," said Team USAIC coach Corey Shaffer.



Team USAIC controlled the final game, with strong net play, sealing the game when Travis Whitney scored with a spike for a 25-12 win.

"I think the game went well. Everyone played their position, we didn't make errors and we were able to keep the momentum up," Shaffer said. "This win is one step closer to getting a spot in the postseason tournament."

"I think we had great communication and teamwork out there," Whitney said.

At press time, Team USAIC is playing the 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion and have five games remaining in the season.

The Chattahoochee County High School (Region 2B-A) Panthers fell to the Brookstone School (Region 2B-A) Cougars, 7-1, Friday in a baseball game at Brookstone.

Panthers' leadoff batter Mike Morgan got on base with a single in the top of the first inning and advanced to second on a Caleb Horvath single. Morgan attempted to steal home and was thrown out, but Horvath scored to give the Panthers the 1-0 lead. The Cougars came back in the bottom of the inning with a Taylor Herndon run and Brewer Carter scoring on a Jake Howard RBI single. With the bases loaded, Panther pitcher Horvath recorded two strikeouts limiting the Cougars' lead to 2-1 to close out the inning.

Cougar pitcher Carter sent the Panther batters back to the bench one, two, three; and then back

Benning Soldier heads to All-Army camp

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

CPT Caitlin Chiaramonte, a legal assistance attorney at the Office of the Staff Judge Advocate, packed her bags and left for Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. Wednesday to compete in the All-Army women's basketball trial camp. She's the only Soldier from Fort Benning accepted to the camp. She and 17 other Soldiers will compete for one of the 12 spots to represent the Army in the Armed Forces Championship from May 10-18 in Millington, Tenn.

"After a couple days at camp, I'll know how I size up against the other players but right now, there's no telling. Anything can happen," Chiaramonte said.

It's not Chiaramonte's first time at a championship. The 6'1, 29-year-old has played basketball since the sixth grade. She started playing because she was a "tall kid and very competitive."

She played in high school and got a full scholarship to play in Division I basketball at University of Richmond her freshman year and at Fordham University, while she earned her a bachelor's and a master's degree. She was the first women's pro in Jena, Germany, and she also has played in professional basketball leagues in Finland and Chemnitz, Germany.

Over the years, she has learned that basketball is more than just skill.

"Having skills is important, but if you want to succeed in basketball, you have to have heart and hustle," she said.

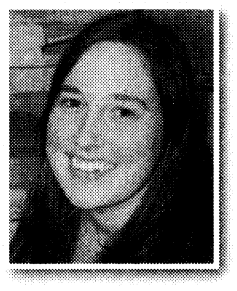
"You have to know you'll mess up sometimes, but you just have to get right back up and keep playing."

Representing the Army is an honor, she said.

"I really hope I get on the team," she said. "I would be so happy just to be able to wear the Army uniform and compete — it would mean more to me than any college or professional uniforms I have ever worn. The Army is an organization that I am now a part of and I have a sense of pride being in the Army."



She said she has been training hard for the camp and the Smith Fitness Gym has been her second home. She trained 15 hours a week in the gym and did conditioning work on the weekends.

"I've heard that the trial camp is intense and to bring lots of Icy Hot," she said.

"I want to be trained and ready for anything. If I play the way I think I am capable of playing, hopefully I'll get to go to the championship."

I have more to learn about sports

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

I feel like I have so much to learn about sports. I wasn't a hard core sports fan before I started writing for the section, but since I started writing sports, it has occupied my mind 24/7. I find myself flipping to baseball games, ESPN and any sport I can on television. Thanks to research and a sports genius, I am starting to get the hang of sports writing.

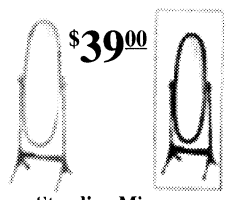
I have learned some important lessons along the way.

No. 1, learn the lingo. Sports lingo is funny. Like baseball, throwing around the horn is the funniest phrase to me. When I first heard it, I thought of two people throwing around a French horn and wondered what noise it would make. And the mercy rule — that's just plain mean. The team already knows they lost, they don't need a reminder on the record. Or how about a wild pitch? It sounds like the pitcher would dance funny while he threw a ball. I know, it seems silly.

No. 2, never get too close to the rodeo fence. Because if I do, I'm asking for a mud pie (mixed with other smelly surprises, if you know what I mean) in my face. I'll use the longer camera lens next time and stand farther back from the fence.

No. 3, keep rain boots and a rain jacket in the car because football games don't get canceled because of rain. I found that out at a Pacelli and Chattahoochee County High School football game last year.

No. 4, prepare for the unexpected — not every rifle range is outside. No joke — I went to a rifle range with a hat and sunscreen, when I walked inside the building to the range laughing at myself.



No. 5, always have fun. Bring a noisemaker to the hockey game to cheer the players who fight. Hockey is hilarious. It's like the Jerry Springer show minus the security guys and the crowd yelling "Jerry!" Instead, players' hockey sticks and fists flail before players are sent to penalty boxes while the crowd bangs fists on Plexiglas panels. That's priceless.

No. 6, sports is more than entertainment. It's teammates high fiving each other after a home run, players encouraging others on their team and coaches really caring about their kids. It's baseball players yelling "rip, rip, rip" as their teammate bats. And it's about seeing the faces of the players when they win — and lose.

There are lessons to be learned in sports — for the players — and for me. While I still have a lot to learn, I know sports writing and all of the adventures that come with it is something I'll stick with. Rainy football games and mud in the face is worth it — to experience the excitement of the team and the crowd, to learn lessons and to tell the story.

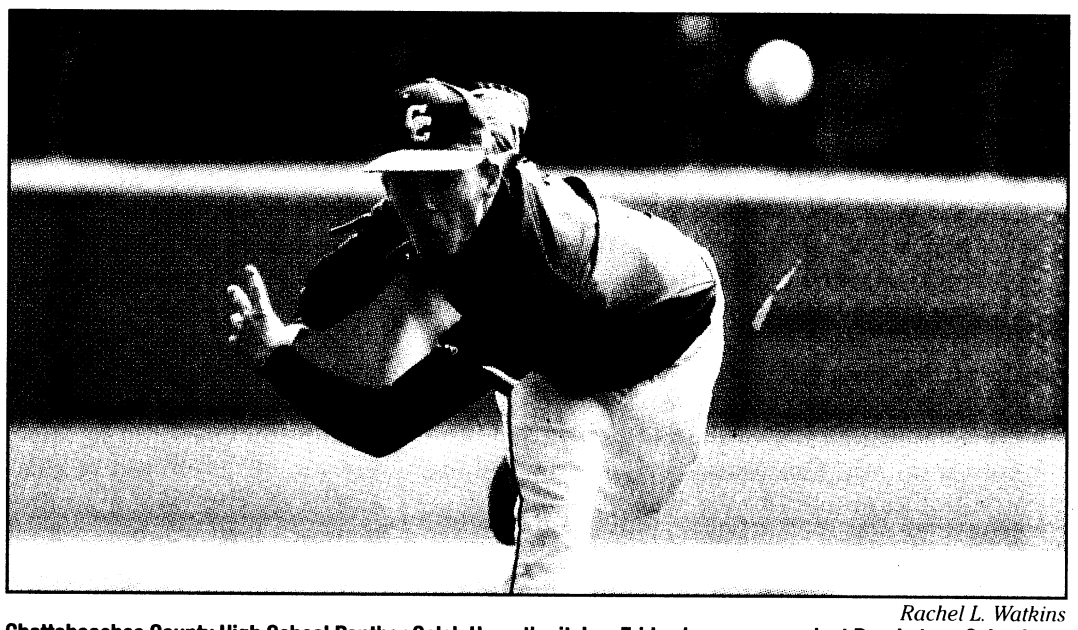
to the field. Herndon scored for the Cougars on a Joey Lewis RBI single and Carter tacked on another run for the Cougars scoring on a Howard RBI single. The Cougars led 4-1 at the end of two innings.

It was a three-up, three-down inning for the Panthers and Panther pitcher Cedric Wilson answered back with a three-up, three-down inning of his own.

With one out in the top of the fourth inning, Josh Gustason made it to first base after being hit by a pitch, but Carter retired the next to batters to end the inning.

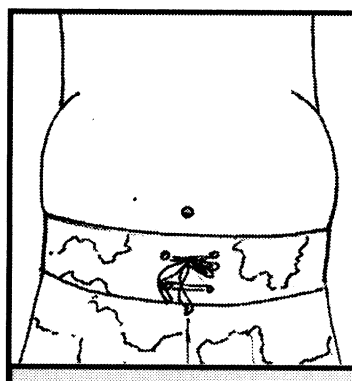
The Cougars scored two runs in the bottom of the inning and one more run in the bottom of the fifth inning for the win.

The Cougars are ranked second in the state coaches' poll with a record of 14-3, behind Pacelli High School Vikings, who are 12-1.



"You have good days and bad days and today just wasn't our day," Panther coach Danny Burgamy said.

Morgan, son of CSM William Morgan, said it was a "tough loss."



"I think our defense and pitching was good, but we could have hit more," he said.

The Panthers played the Pacelli Vikings Tuesday, losing 13-2. Next up for the Panthers are the Taylor County High School Vikings. Game time is 5 p.m. today at Taylor County.

Banana Open registration due today

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

It's time for the 17th annual Banana Open tennis tournament and the Junior Banana Open at Cooper Creek Tennis Center, hosted by the Columbus Regional Tennis Association. Registration is due by noon today for the Banana Open tournament and by noon April 29 for the junior tournament.

The adult tournament, open to players 18 and older, is April 26 to May 3 and includes singles, doubles and mixed doubles matches for the Junior Banana Open.

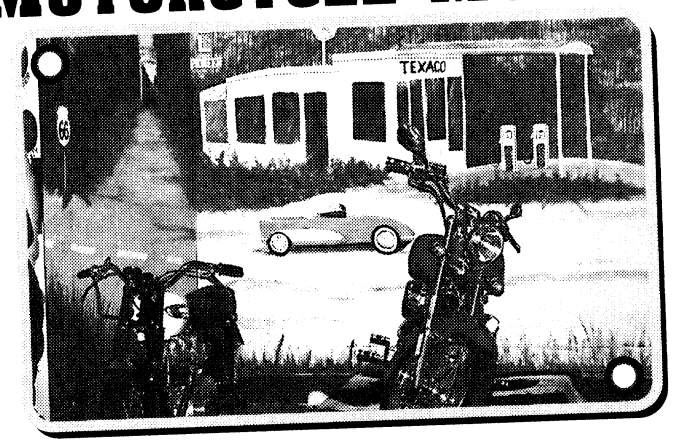
"This is the largest tournament of the year," said Helen Martin, CORTA community relations director. "We're expecting somewhere around 400 to 450 players."

Winners from each level at the Columbus tournament will compete against winners from 16 Banana Open national tournaments in the Banana Challenge and have a shot at claiming the Top Banana title Oct. 2-4 at Palmetto Dunes in Hilton Head, S.C.

Games begin at 6 p.m. on weekdays and 9 a.m. on the weekend. The finals will be 9 a.m. Sunday with draws posted at 4 p.m. April 24.

"This tournament will bring players of all age levels and skill levels and I know there'll be tough competition," Martin said.

The cost for the tournament is $43.50 for one event and $46 for two events. Proceeds go toward CORTA costs and tennis programs.



The Junior Open will be May 4-8 and is for children ages 9 to 18. There will be girls' and boys' singles and doubles matches with a 16 draw limit. The winners from each level will be given a banana-shaped trophy and a banana crown.

It is not a sanctioned tournament, but United States Tennis Association rules will still apply. The cost is $30 for the first event and $10 for the second. Matches begin at 4 p.m.

To register or for more information, go to www.corta.org or call 706-317-4136.

NOTICE:
The Smith Fitness Center pools will be closed today through Friday.

OFF POST

HOCKEY LEAGUE SEEKS PLAYERS

The newly formed Columbus Travel Hockey Association is forming travel ice hockey teams for the 2009-2010 season.

They are looking for experienced hockey players in the following divisions: Mite (birth years 2001 and 2002), Squirt (birth years 2000 and 1999) and PeeWee (birth years 1998 and 1997).

Interested parents should send their child's name, division (mite/squirt/peewee) and contact information to ColumbusTravelHockey@bellsouth.net.

The Columbus Travel Hockey Association serves youngsters from Fort Benning, Columbus, Midland, Auburn, Opelika, West Point, Newnan, LaGrange, Upatoi, Ellerslie, Peachtree City, and the remainder of Southwest Georgia and Eastern Alabama.

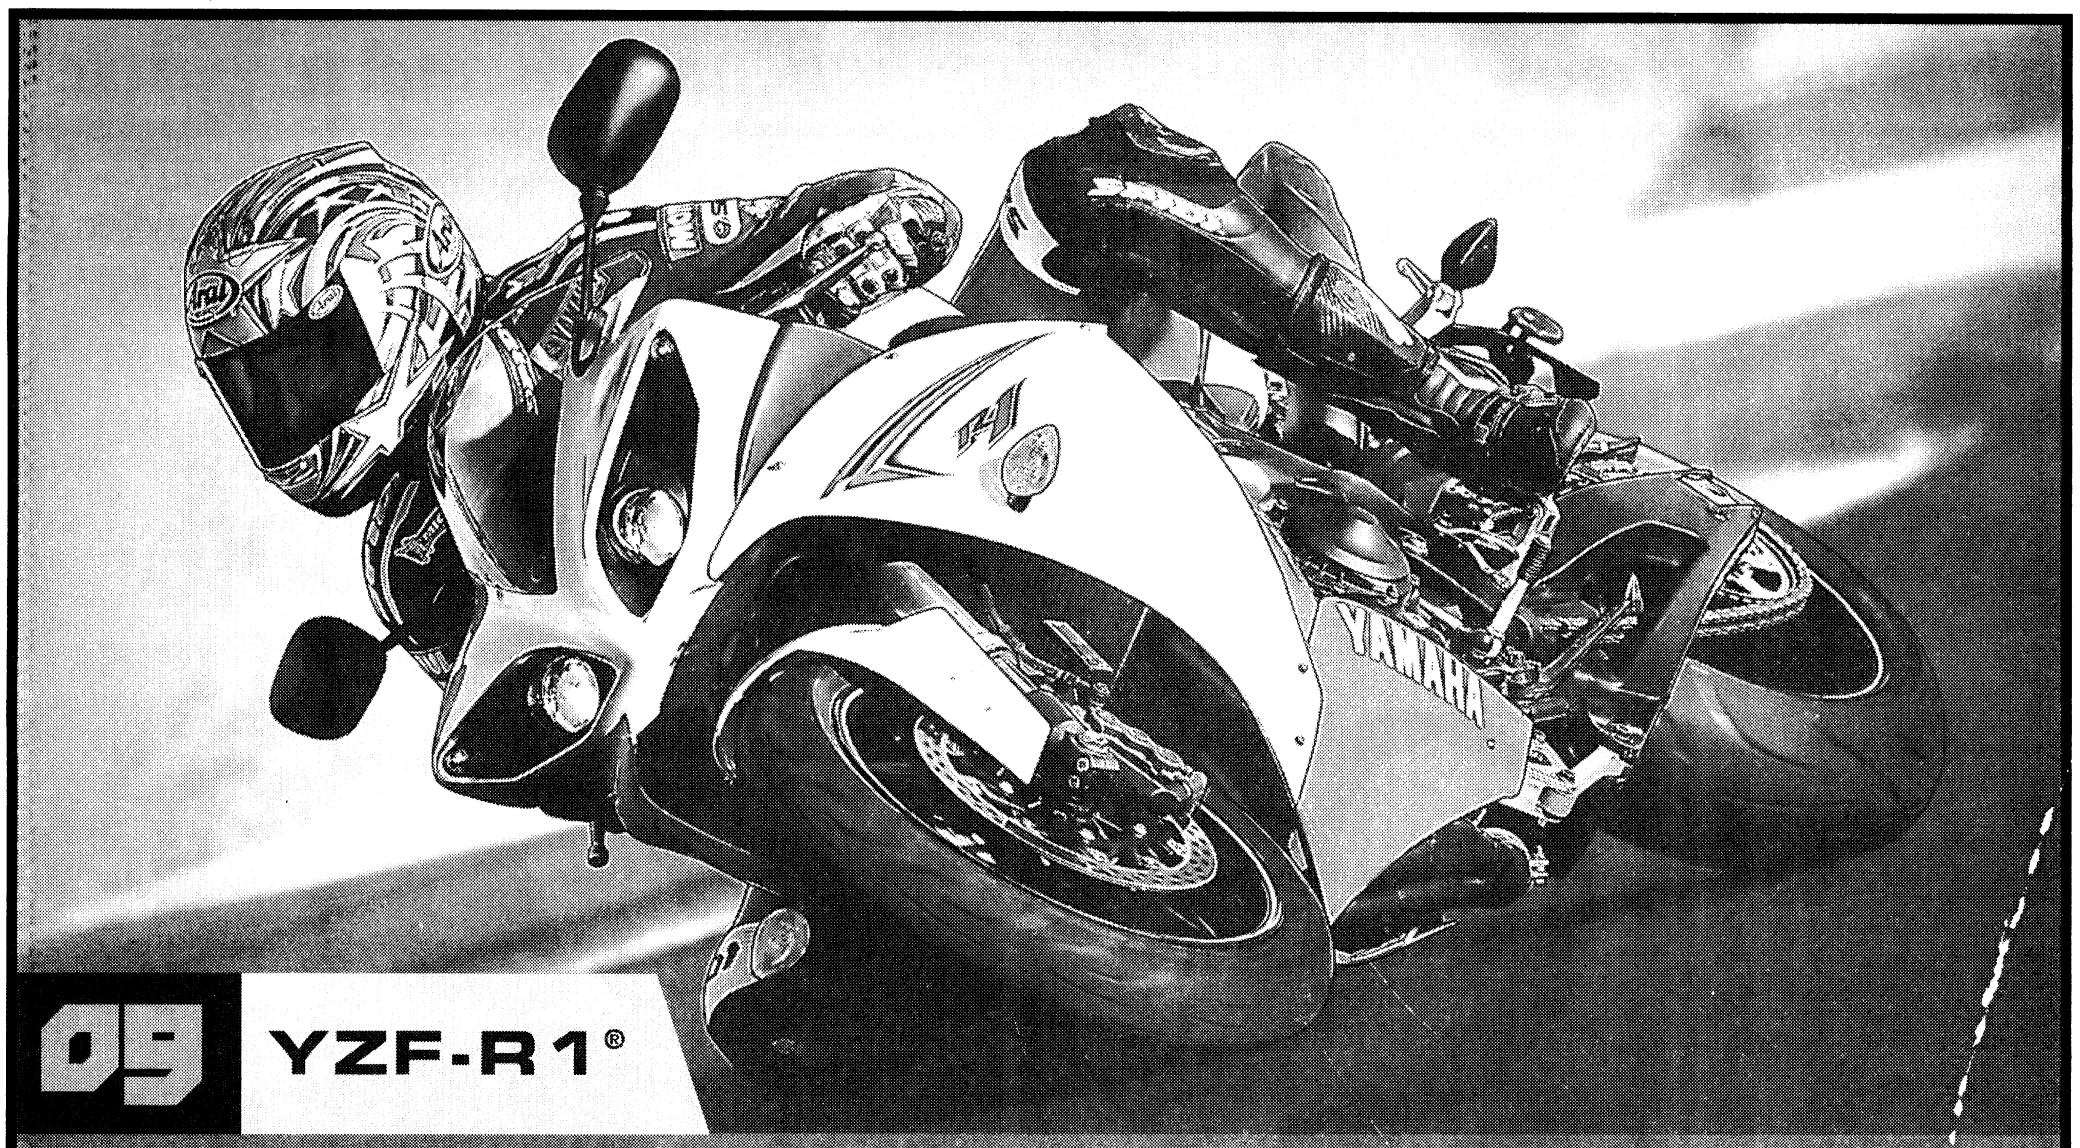
LIONS MILITARY APPRECIATION NIGHT

The Lions, Columbus' arena football team, will take on Washington, D.C., Armor at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Columbus Civic Center. That night will be military appreciation night, when Soldiers with ID can get upper level tickets for $6. For everyone else, tickets are $10-$50.

For more information, call the box office at 706-653-4460 or go to www.columbusciviccenter.org. and click on the event calendar.

RELAY FOR LIFE

Harris County High School will host American Cancer Society's Relay for Life May 1-2 at the school.



The event will begin at 7 p.m. Teams will camp out and take turns walking or running around a track. Each team member is asked to pay a $10 fee and raise a minimum of $100 in order to be awarded a participant T-shirt.

Teams are encouraged to have a representative on the track at all times during the event. Other events include a luminaria ceremony at 9:30 p.m., music and activities for all ages. The event ends at 7 a.m. May 2.

For more information, call Shirley Baker at 706-663-2281 or e-mail her at sugarbaker1646@aol.com.

THE BARK IS BAD. THE BITE IS BADDER.
• All-new from the ground up, the 2009 R1 brings MotoGP technology to the street for the first time ever in a production machine — for unparalleled traction, rider feel and performance. • A crossplane crankshaft with uneven firing intervals carries connecting rod journals 90 degrees apart, dramatically changing the character of the 998cc engine. • It's like having two engines in one: the low-rpm torquey feel of a twin and the raw, high-rpm power of an inline four-cylinder.

New playgroup focuses on positive interaction

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Parents of young children often have a lot on their plate — in between diaper changes, errands, work or military training, it can be difficult to find a spare moment to focus on their child's development. That's why Fort Benning's New Parent Support Program has launched a new playgroup to give parents of children 3 and younger time to interact and connect with their children.

The playgroup will be an opportunity for parents to spend time with their children outside of the distractions of home and work, said Elizabeth Owen, a registered nurse and home visitor with the New Parent Support Program.

"A lot of times, in our fast-paced world we're so busy doing other things that we don't have time to focus on our kids," she said. "Parents may not have time to work with them on their motor skills and development."

Half of each playgroup meeting is devoted to age-appropriate structured activities to help children develop their motor skills and intellectual and social development, Owen said, such as songs, rhymes, coloring and building blocks. The second half of each meeting is free time for parents and children to interact.

"The overall goal is to increase the chance for all children in this community to have a healthy start to life," said Sherry Daniels, a registered nurse and New Parent Support Program home visitor.

Because the playgroup's facilitators are all registered nurses, they are well-equipped to Lifestyle changes can affect environment

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

In honor of Earth Day — April 22 — here are some small changes you can make that could ultimately have a big impact on the environment.

1. Change your bulb. Use compact fluorescent light bulbs. These energy-saving bulbs can last up to 10 times longer than a normal bulb and use less energy. A single 20- to 25-watt energy-saving bulb provides as much light as a 100-watt ordinary bulb.

Earth Day

2. Recycle. Recycle any paper, metals (from canned food and soft drinks) and plastics that are recyclable and don't toss your electronics, such as cell phones and computer components, because they can be recycled, too.

3. Your unwanted household items can have a life again if you donate them to charity. Organizations such as Goodwill Industries will take your donations, sort and sometimes repair them and resell them in thrift shops nationwide. Broken items are fixed and scrap materials (like worn-out textiles) are sold for recycling. Goodwill provides jobs and job training for thousands of people who would otherwise have trouble finding work.

4. Re-think your water bottle. Eight out of 10 plastic water bottles used in the United States end up in a landfill, according to the Container Recycling Institute (http://container-recycling.org/). Instead, buy a sturdy portable water container and fill it daily with tap water you've filtered at home. Visit www.refillnotlandfill.org to learn more.

5. Bring your own bag. Pick up a canvas tote to take on shopping trips instead of using paper or plastic bags. If you leave your own bag at home and have to choose, go with paper, not plastic.

6. Reduce your need; reuse bags until they're torn. Use old bags to pick up dog waste. Many grocery stores have a barrel for recycling old bags. Since most of this gets mixed with sawdust to make plastic wood, padded bubble envelopes are OK.

7. The old lenses that steer you into walls may be the perfect gift for someone in need. Chances are an optician or club in your area collects eyeglasses for reuse. Collected eyeglasses are cleaned, repaired and measured to determine the correction. Available glasses are cataloged in a computer database and matched to people with need. Many of the glasses are sent to other countries, as laws in the USA make it difficult to redispense a prescription product. Another option is to have old glasses tinted to turn them into sunglasses. The Lions Clubs operate the largest program, collecting glasses from thousands of opticians. Of the chain stores, LensCrafters, For-Eyes and Pearle collect glasses chainwide. Several organizations accept eyewear by mail (use a Web search engine to find them). One example is New Eyes for the Needy, which accepts scrap metal frames in any condition, unbroken plastic framed glasses, non-prescription sunglasses, any precious metal scrap like broken jewelry and monetary donations.

8. Follow the Energy Star. Energy Star is a joint effort of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and U.S. Department of Energy that aims to help people save money and protect the environment through energy efficient products — such Swingtime!

Rachel L. Watkins
It's springtime and the children are out playing. Fourth graders Megan Sullivan and Presley Auer play on bars during recess Thursday at White Elementary School. "I'm so happy it's finally spring because it's warm outside — that means more time to play on the playground with my friends — and the flowers are blooming," Auer said. "I love hanging on the bars. At home, I have bar hanging contests with my brothers."

Fort Benning singer gives spouses a voice

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Sarah Hockridge has spent her life using her voice — as a child who loved to sing, as a college music major, and as a staple on the New York coffee shop circuit. Today, she uses her voice for a cause close to her heart — putting words to the experiences of military spouses.

"My civilian friends just don't understand military life and to be able to put a voice to it is a great opportunity that most musicians don't have," Hockridge said. "It's a really great opportunity to let them know they have a voice."

Hockridge, who grew up in Maine, has been singing as long as she can remember. After moving to New York to attend college, Hockridge began to realize her dream of performing professionally and also released several albums. But, everything changed in 2007 when she moved to Fort Bragg, N.C., to join her then-boyfriend Tobey, who was serving in the Air Force.

"I had never been on a military base in my life," Hockridge said. "It was a huge culture shock."

Adjusting to that shock became the topic of many of Hockridge's songs, which began to shift from lamenting broken relationships to presenting a frank look at deployment emotions and separation. Gradually, she gained a following of Soldiers and spouses in the Fort Bragg area who found a personal connection to her lyrics.

"Her voice just blows you away," said Debbie Haley, a Fort Bragg spouse who attended many of Hockridge's shows. "There's so much strength and conviction and feeling in it. It's inspiring to see how proud she is of her husband. She's just embraced it completely. It may not be the life she was used to, but she's so patriotic and

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Playgroup: Fosters social development offer parents feedback about their child's development, Daniels said, and will provide suggestions for ways parents can help advance their child's progress.

While the playgroup's focus is on fostering positive interaction between parents and children, it is also a chance for parents to interact with each other, which is especially important on a military installation, Daniels said.

"Some of the new moms I've talked to only have one or two friends," she said. "If you only have one or two people to talk to, you can burn out easily. And if they're not around, you're out of luck. So with the playgroup, we want to help new parents get out, too."

Though many playgroups are primarily attended by mothers, Daniels and Owen both encouraged fathers to attend as well.

"I think that too often we don't take the time to focus on the dads," Owen said. "It's just as important for the dads to have that opportunity to spend with their kids."

The playgroup meets from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. the first and third Thursday of each month in Building 9608 in Bouton Heights. For more information, call 706-545-9358 or 706-626-2599.

Changes: Tips to limit environmental impact as home appliances that bear the Energy Star logo — and practices. For more information, go to www.energystar.gov.

9. Wash and dry green. Sixty percent of the energy associated with a piece of clothing is spent laundering it, according to recent Cambridge University study. Wash your clothes in cold or warm water, use the most energy-efficient washer you can find and, whenever possible, hang clothes to dry rather than using the dryer.

10. Cut out the junk. Junk mail is a waste of time and resources. You can contact mail order companies and ask to be removed from their lists or go to www.directmail.com/junk-mail/, click "National Do Not Mail List," then fill out the form.

11. Shrink your footprint. A carbon footprint measures the impact human activities have on the environment — the amount of greenhouse gases produced, measured in units of carbon dioxide. To find out what yours is, go to www.carbonfootprint.com or www.footprintnetwork.org, where you'll also learn how to shrink it.

12. Grow your own. Grow veggies and herbs at home. Home-grown herbs are much fresher than "store-bought" herbs, and growing yours at home eliminates the packaging that normally ends up in landfills.

13. Create compost. You can create rich soil to use as fertilizer. Collect vegetable peels, coffee grounds and other food waste in a small bin in your kitchen; empty that bin into a larger bin outside and turn the compost once a week.

14. Create a wild animal sanctuary. Attract wildlife to your backyard to help them meet their four basic needs — food, water, shelter and space. Put up bird feeders, bird boxes or birdbaths; put in fishponds. Or commit yourself to creating a backyard animal sanctuary certified by the National Wildlife Foundation. Learn about the requirements a www.nwf.org.

15. Don't litter. As Woodsy the Owl would tell you, litter is a side effect of our convenience-oriented, disposable culture — and environmentalists agree. Once it's on the ground, wind and weather move it from streets and highways to parks and waterways. One study found that 18 percent of litter ends up in rivers, streams and oceans.

16. Discuss downsizing. Even the least energy-efficient small house consumes less energy than a large "green" house. Though the average American household has shrunk in the last 50 years, the square footage of a new single-family home has more than doubled. Find a home that both suits your needs and cuts down on waste.

17. Recycled art. After children's drawings and paintings have been displayed for a while, they can be used to wrap presents — this also makes the present more special.

18. Do your research. Read up on ways to help the environment — and why saving it is important — at sites including www.epa.gov, www.TheGreenGuide.com and www.SaveOurEnvironment.org.

19. Reduce paper waste. Send e-mail "stickies" and replace paper organizers with electronic calendars and address books. In the kitchen and dining room, go old-school by using cloth towels, not paper ones, to wipe down the kitchen and use cloth napkins at meals.

20. Lower the flow. Cut short your showers and, better yet, install a low-flow shower head, which is available at most home supply stores. Fix leaky faucets — just one wastes five gallons of water a day, or more than 1,800 gallons a year. Instead of hand-washing dishes, use your dishwasher — make sure it's full — and you'll save around 5,000 gallons of water — and lots of time — each year.

21. Consider a hybrid. There are now more than 1 million hybrid gas-electric vehicles on American roads, powered in part by rechargeable batteries, thus burning a lot less petroleum. Even if you're opposed to the very idea, at least check out the stats, facts and news (good and bad) about these vehicles at www.hybridcars.com.

22. Call 1-800-8BATTERY for information. Throw alkaline and heavy-duty batteries in trash, unless prohibited. Nickel-Cadmium rechargeable batteries contain toxins — recycle those.

Spices add flavor to foods, have health benefits

LTC Karen E. Hawkins
DECA

FORT LEE, Va. — Remember eating cinnamon and sugar on toast or in your oatmeal as a child? Well, cinnamon is not just for breakfast anymore. Try adding a little spice to food and gain the flavors along with health benefits. Spices are full of antioxidants similar to many fruits and vegetables. By adding spices to food to enhance flavor, cooks don't need as much salt, fat and sugar. Growing evidence supports the health benefits of using spices and authorized patrons can purchase spices at the commissary and save more than 30 percent.

Cinnamon

Cinnamon is one of the oldest spices known. Not only does it smell and taste good, research shows it is good for your health. The cinnaldehyde in cinnamon helps prevent blood clotting which is beneficial for blood circulation. Several studies show that small amounts of cinnamon, about one teaspoon, can lower blood sugar in people with diabetes.

Ginger

Ginger soothes a queasy stomach. Several studies show that eating about 1/2 to one teaspoon of ground ginger curbed nausea for pregnant women. So even if you're not pregnant, give it a try for an upset stomach. Most ginger ale has little ginger in it, so drinking it may not help. It can provide much-needed fluid and calories though when you are sick, especially for small children. Growing evidence shows that ginger may help prevent cancer and has been useful for treating headaches.

Turmeric

Turmeric contains curcumin, the compound that makes it yellow. Evidence shows that lab rats given curcumin get fewer breast, skin, mouth and colon cancers. The verdict is still out for people. More research is needed to see if it has the same effect at preventing cancer. Research on curcumin and the human brain is just beginning. However, it is known to protect the brain cells in animals, with strong indications for helping prevent Alzheimer's and stroke. It is important to note that only about 2 percent of turmeric is curcumin. Curry powders vary in how much curcumin they contain; eating curry will not guarantee that you get the health benefits. Eating mustard, which contains turmeric is one way to get curcumin in your diet.

Spice it up

Sprinkle cinnamon in your coffee, tea, yogurt, oatmeal, cereal and milk, fresh or canned fruit, ice cream and pudding. Add turmeric to rice, potatoes and pasta. Mix it into egg salad.

Dice it up

Peel and dice up some fresh ginger, add it to soups, stir fry and salad dressing.

Bake it up

Add some cinnamon when baking bread, brownies and cookies. Add ground ginger when making cookies, bread and bars.

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION MONTH

Teens try more than patience, communication key

FAMILY ADVOCACY PROGRAM

Parenting adolescents can be a challenging task. Adolescents are experiencing physical, emotional and intellectual growth. It's a wonderful time, yet it also can be a disruptive time. Teenagers are moving from childhood to adulthood and reaching out for independence with skills that haven't been proven. Parents can help ease the transition and ensure a positive relationship with their teens by keeping the following information in mind.

Maintain a positive outlook. Remember, adolescence is temporary and your attitude can help your teens develop and maintain a good self-image, confidence and competence. It's normal for teens to suddenly become critical of their family. They are trying to break away and need an excuse. Enjoy helping them discover their talents and interests.

Establish clear, simple rules. Your teens are experimenting, and just as you had to protect them from danger when they were young children, you need to protect them now. Part of what your adolescents need to know is that they have a responsibility to their family and community. Continue enforcing rules, although it may be a good time to review them to see if they are still practical.

Keep the lines of communication open. This is one of the most important tasks you have. Most teens don't know how to communicate. Really listen to them and avoid judgmental responses. Seek outside help to solve problems instead of risking the loss of your relationship with your teens.

Be patient. Your teens may not be comfortable with themselves. Their bodies and emotions suddenly seem strange, and their new skills are not perfected. They may be very critical of themselves and need your support and love.

Praise good behavior. Remind them that you think they are wonderful. Help them remember they are valuable people.

Evaluate your own attitude. Your teens' push for independence may trigger an equal but opposite response from you. Their independent behavior may make you aware that there isn't much time left for you to teach them everything they need to learn from you. Don't begin to lecture or become too controlling. It will only add stress to the situation.

Get professional help if your teens' behavior has gotten out of control. A good counselor often is the key to helping parents and teens get over rough spots.

Is sacrificing one's self for freedom worth it?

Chaplain John Kaiser
WHINSEC COMMAND CHAPLAIN & ETHICS INSTRUCTOR

The entire Fort Benning community has served the cause of freedom in Operation Enduring Freedom and Operation Iraqi Freedom. Some of those sent from Fort Benning to war have paid the ultimate cost, the ultimate sacrifice, with their lives. Those Soldiers are testimony that freedom is not free; it has a high, heavy cost. It is the cost that Soldiers from every generation from the American Revolution to now have paid, believing that the cause of freedom is worth the cost.

I remember one tasking I received years ago while serving with an Infantry battalion in Germany. It actually became one of the highest honors I have been privileged to do next to officiating at military funerals for Soldiers. I, as the chaplain, and a platoon of combat Soldiers were tasked to go to France and participate in Memorial Day ceremonies at two different American cemeteries outside of Paris.

Every time I enter an American cemetery overseas, or in the United States, I am humbled. I am humbled by the immaculate, almost endless rows of crosses and stars of David. Each one of those graves represents the sacrifice, maybe even the crucifixion, of a young Soldier's hopes and dreams; a future they will not be able to participate in with their friends and families.

At those two ceremonies in France, hundreds of grateful people showed their appreciation to us. One of the ceremonies started out as a beautiful European, sunny spring day, but I noticed dark clouds on the horizon. As the ceremony progressed, storm clouds quickly came up. It started to rain, then it even started to hail.

It was interesting for me, standing behind the podium, and the platoon to my left, as we watched everyone run under cover, all except for 22 U.S. Soldiers. The French civilians stared in amazement as we continued the ceremony, through the quick-passing hail storm, standing at attention until we finished the ceremony . . . and then the sun came out again. The people came out from under their cover, amazed that the U.S. Soldiers did not hide under the cover.

Later, they opened their city halls with one of the best buffets I have ever seen in my life, all of them praising the steadfast commitment of our proud Soldiers.

Was the sacrifice of those Soldiers in the American cemeteries we came to honor worth it? From the unflinching resolve of the Soldiers, and the appreciation of the people in those villages I think so.

Often our Soldiers from Fort Benning leave their families and friends to serve the cause of freedom in wars in Afghanistan and Iraq. They freely and willingly do what many in our society are unwilling to do to ensure peace and freedom in our imperfect world. Many of our comrades have paid the ultimate sacrifice. Was it worth it? The faces of the freed Afghans and Iraqis say it all. It was worth it.

In the Gospel of John, chapter 15, verses12 -14, Jesus said: "My command is this: Love each other as I have loved you. Greater love has no one than this, that he lay down his life for his friends. You are my friends if you do what I command."

Jesus modeled self-sacrificial love for the freedom of all humanity. We have seen our own Soldiers from Fort Benning lay down their lives for their friends in combat to help set oppressed people free. Was it worth it? That is the question we all need to answer; remembering that freedom is not free, someone has to pay the price.

Singer: Performing with emotion, experience in mind

proud and supports her husband 100 percent. It gives me some peace to see that, because it is difficult, and you really have to give a lot of yourself."

Hockridge lived at Fort Bragg for about two years, giving voice, piano and guitar lessons by day, and performing anywhere she could in the evenings. When Tobey made the decision to leave the Air Force for the Army, the couple moved to Columbus. Though they've only been at Fort Benning about a month, Hockridge's music has already gained a new audience in the tricommunity.

"She's got a beautiful voice," said Air Force Capt. Larry Owing, on a joint tour at Fort Benning with the 75th Ranger Regiment. "I think the Soldiers will love her."

One of Hockridge's long-term goals is to perform in a USO show for deployed Soldiers. She's already working toward that goal by working with the Fort Benning Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation to perform for basic trainees.

"I would love to give back some of my time to give them a little break for all of the time they dedicate to the country," she said. "I know how long and hard the days over there are, so to be able to give them a little break would be great. And of course, I would love to surprise my husband over there someday."

Until then, Hockridge plans to continue performing as much as she can. Her stage name, Ophir Drive, also the name of a street in New York, sums up her music and outlook, Hockridge said. In Hebrew, Ophir means land of riches, and Hockridge likes to think of her music as rich in both sound and meaning.

"When I heard her sing, I was hypnotized," said Mor An Amar, who came to Fort Benning from Israel with her boyfriend, a major in the Israeli army. "She played a couple songs when we were at her house having dinner, and she was just great. I think she brings a lot of emotion to her songs."

That kind of positive connection is exactly what Hockridge aims for.

"I do music because I love it, but I perform because I want other people to hear it and relate to it and know that somebody else is feeling the same thing," she said. "A lot of spouses have thanked me for giving a voice to the emotions they were feeling. If I can just make one person at a show feel something, whether they're crying or tapping their foot or thanking me at the end, that's why I do this."

American Outsourcing Alternatives is a Veteran owned tele-services company, located in Columbus, GA. We provide business process support & services for customer acquisition, customer service and collections.

The company was formed around a core of guiding concepts:

1. We believe that it is imperative to bring quality service jobs back to the US.
2. We are pledged to create and grow opportunities for good paying jobs for America's veterans, disabled vets, and families of service members.
3. AOA believes that the tele-services and BPO Space is an ideal platform to support these principles

If you value helping people by assisting them over the phone and overcoming obstacles with them, communicating in a way that engages the person on the other side of the line, attaining goals & receiving rewards for superior service and excellence, and giving back to a community of people who have served this country; then we have the following opportunities for you:

Accounts Receivable Associates
- Consumer collections and negotiation skills.
- Call center or automated dialer experience preferred, but not required.
- Strong PC and communication skills.

Medical Accounts Receivable Associates
- Healthcare claims experience required.
- Strong PC and negotiation skills.
- Call center or automated dialer experience preferred, but not required.

Customer Service Associates
- 1 yr. telephone customer care experience or training.
- Enthusiasm for helping others and resolving problems over the phone.
- Strong PC and communication skills.

Only those who schedule an appointment ahead of time will be seen individually. All others can drop off a resume or complete an application there to be contacted at a later time.

THE BAYONET
APRIL 17, 2009

These el nino tulips show off vibrant hues of salmon and amber throughout spring. Planted in one of the many flower beds lining garden walkways, the tulips are intermixed with other bulbs in shades of white, red, orange and yellow for a coordinated look.

These flamingos, sculpted from blown glass, perch on platforms amid a bed of tropical flowers and leaves inside the Dorothy Chapman Fuqua Conservatory. The conservatory, which opened 20 years ago last month, features desert and tropical plants, some of which are rare or endangered. Display areas include the lobby, rotunda, orangerie, desert house and special exhibits.

Stop and smell the flowers

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Whether your style is Venus fly trap or lotus blossom, you'll find something to suit your floral taste on the 30-plus acres of the Atlanta Botanical Garden.

Located conveniently near Piedmont Park, the gardens are open year-round, except for Thanksgiving and Christmas, and there's always something in bloom.

In the outdoor gardens, it's the season for pansies and tulips. Indoors, you'll find orchids, cocoa, Asian pitcher plants and other tropical plants fresh and fragrant in the Fuqua Conservatory. As the weather gets warmer, look for hydrangeas, roses and colorful perennials.

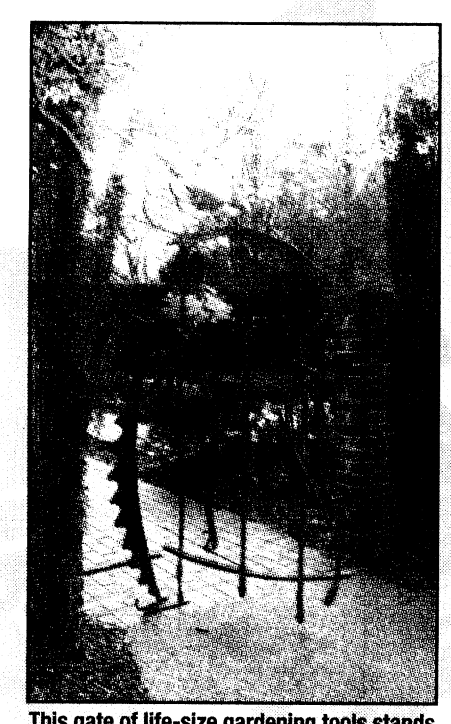
The botanical gardens aren't only for flower-lovers. Creepy crawlers and furry creatures more your style? An assortment of poison dart frogs, alligator snapping turtles, Saffron finches and geckos all call the conservatory home. In the Woodland Shade Garden, a variety of fowl nest, perfect for bird watchers. Goldfish swim underneath tranquil water lilies in the reflection pond. Other critters, including honey bees and butterflies, can be spotted throughout the gardens at any time of day.

Art connoisseurs will be pleasantly surprised by the variety of sculptures on display. Freeform shapes of blown glass, created by artist Dale Chihuly, decorate an outdoor fountain and an indoor exhibition space. Other sculptures range from animals and people to abstract shapes. They are cast in stone, bronze, marble and steel, providing a complimentary contrast to their natural surroundings.

Many of these art features are located in the children's garden, where kids can learn about nature while exploring a caterpillar maze, tree house, vegetable garden and more. Educational and entertaining programs start at 10:30 a.m. in the children's amphitheater every summer Saturday, except August.

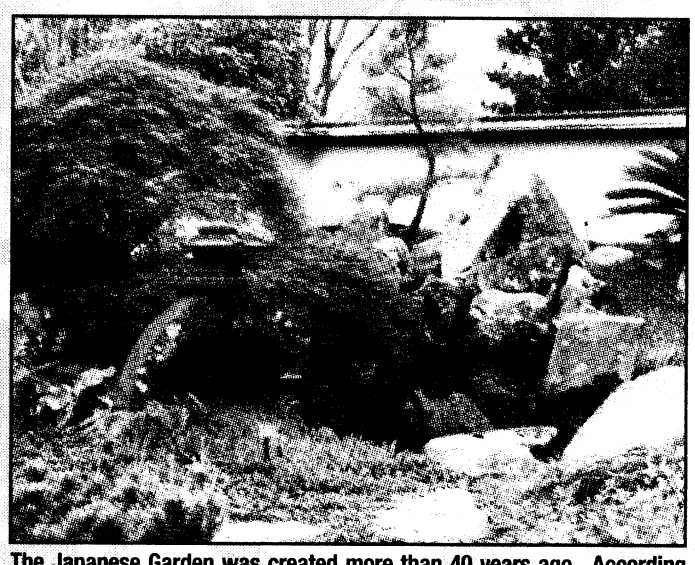
Pink tulips flourish in a bed near Mershon Hall.

Next month, the gardens stay open until 10 p.m. each Thursday, offering visitors the opportunity to see fountains lit up, hear bullfrogs croaking and tour nature's beauty after sunset.



Tuesday through Sunday, the gardens are open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Tickets are $12 for adults and $9 for seniors and children ages 3 to 17. Admission will be half price Wednesday in honor of Earth Day. Activities include conservation programs, an appearance from Mother Nature in the children's garden and information about green living.

For more information, visit the gardens online at www.atlantabotanicalgarden.org. For stunning photos, a romantic date or a fun family trip, visit the gardens in person. Consider it a worthwhile reward for all these April showers.



These white daffodils with yellow-gold centers are late bloomers that will likely last into May.

This gate of life-size gardening tools stands at the entrance to an outdoor garden.

The Japanese Garden was created more than 40 years ago. According to the Atlanta Botanical Garden Web site, the features of the meditation garden are symbolic. The pine and stone signify longevity and age while the bamboo suggests resilience in facing adversity. The flowering fruit trees correspond to youth and renewal of life.

The west entrance of Mershon Hall faces the Parterre Garden, decorated with a glass sculpture, fountain, benches and hedges. The hall, including a kitchen, can be rented for events.

OPENING TODAY

17 AGAIN

In 1989, Mike O'Donnell was a 17-year-old high school basketball star with a bright future and college sports scouts on his trail. But, he threw it away to share his life with his girlfriend Scarlett and the baby she was expecting.

Twenty years later, Mike's glory days are behind him. His marriage is falling apart, he was passed over for a promotion at work, and his teenage children think he's a loser. When Mike is miraculously transformed into a 17-year-old, he gets a chance to redo his high school years. But, in trying to recapture his best years, Mike could lose the best things that ever happened to him.

17 Again stars Zac Efron, Leslie Mann, Matthew Perry and Michelle Trachtenberg. It's rated PG-13 for language, sexual material and teen partying.

CRANK: HIGH VOLTAGE

When hit man Chev Chelios is kidnapped by a mysterious Chinese mobster, he wakes up three months later to discover his nearly indestructible heart has been replaced by a battery-operated one that requires regular jolts of electricity to work.

After a dangerous escape from his captors, Chev is on the run, determined to get his real heart back and wreak vengeance on whoever stole it.

The movie stars Jason Statham, Amy Smart and Bai Ling. It's rated R for violence, sexual content, nudity and language.

STATE OF PLAY

Congressman Stephen Collins is a rising star in his political party until his research assistant, who is also his mistress, is murdered, releasing a flood of buried secrets.

When reporter Cal McCaffrey and his partner Della are assigned to investigate the murder, they step into a cover-up that threatens the nation's power structures. As they try to uncover the killer's identity, they discover that when billions of dollars are at stake, no one's integrity, love or life is ever safe.

State of Play stars Russell Crowe, Rachel McAdams, Jason Bateman and Helen Mirren. It's rated PG-13 for violence, language, sexual references and drug content.

ALSO PLAYING

HANNAH MONTANA: THE MOVIE

Miley Stewart's alter-ego, Hannah Montana's popularity is taking over Miley's life. For the young pop star, events begin getting out of control.

When Miley misses her brother's departure for college because she was fighting with model Tyra Banks during a shopping spree, Miley's father devises a plan to fly her back to her hometown of Crowley Corners, Tenn., so she can regain perspective on what matters most.

The movie stars Miley Cyrus, Billy Ray Cyrus, Emily Osment and Jason Earles. It's rated G.

DRAGONBALL EVOLUTION

Goku and a handful of friends battle for the Earth against the deadly forces of the Saiyans, who are carving a path of destruction as they sweep through the universe. Goku and his friends' best chance for survival is the Namekian DragonBalls, which give them the power to summon a mighty dragon.

The movie stars Chow Yun-Fat, Emmy Rossum and Justin Chatwin. It's rated PG for sequences of action and violence and language.

OBSERVE AND REPORT

Ronnie Barnhardt is head of security at Forest Ridge mall, but dreams of becoming a police officer. When a flasher strikes at the mall, Barnhardt's delusions of grandeur are put to the test as he tries to use the opportunity to win the heart of makeup counter employee Brandi and earn a spot at the police academy.

But, his efforts launch a turf war with Detective Harrison of the Conway Police, and Barnhardt must catch the flasher before the police can.

Observe and Report stars Seth Rogen, Anna Fairs, Michael Pena and Ray Liotta. It's rated R for language, nudity, drug use, sexual content and violence.

ALSO PLAYING

FAST AND FURIOUS

Fugitive ex-con Dom Toretto reignites his feud with Brian O'Connor when a crime brings them back to Los Angeles.

But as they are forced to confront a shared enemy, Dom and Brian must learn to trust each other. Through an adventure with stunts like convoy heists and precision tunnel crawls across international lines, the two men find the best way to get revenge is by pushing the limits of what's possible behind the wheel.

Fast and Furious stars Paul Walker, Vin Diesel and Michelle Rodriguez. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, sexual content, language and drug references.

ADVENTURELAND

It's 1987 and James Brennan has just graduated college. He planned to spend the summer trekking through Europe, but because of his family's sudden economic difficulties, he takes a job manning a game booth at Adventureland, an amusement park. While James believes at first that the park is the bane of his existence, he realizes as the summer goes on that things at Adventureland are not always what they seem. Falling for Em Lewin, a sharp-tongued arcade worker, James discovers the courage to battle for her heart.

Adventureland stars Jesse Eisenberg, Ryan Reynolds and Kristen Stewart. It's rated R for language, drug use and sexual references.

MONSTERS VS. ALIENS

After being hit by a meteorite on her wedding day, Susan Murphy is transformed into a monster named Ginormica and subsequently whisked away to a secret government compound where others like her have been rounded up over the years. When the Earth comes under attack by an alien commander known as Gallaxhar, however, Ginormica and her new allies are set free to save the planet.

The movie stars the voices of Reese Witherspoon, Will Arnett, Rainn Wilson and Kiefer Sutherland. It's rated PG for sci-fi action, crude humor and language.

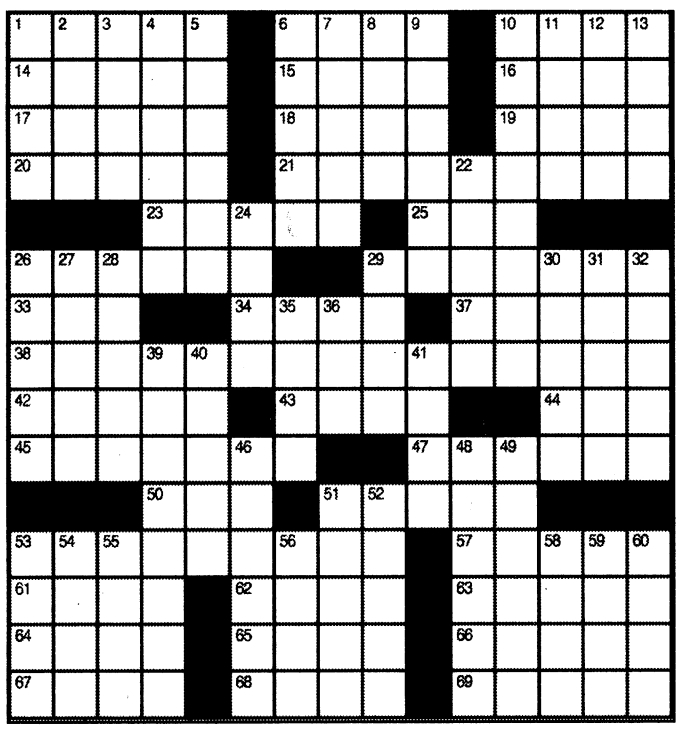
THE HAUNTING IN CONNECTICUT

The Haunting in Connecticut is the story of a family forced to relocate near a clinic where their son was being treated for cancer. Strained financially and emotionally, the family discovers their recently renovated home was a former mortuary with a dark history. After experiencing violent supernatural events both inside and out of the house, the family seeks the help of ghost hunters and the Catholic Church, which performs an exorcism.

The movie stars Virginia Madsen, Brooklyn Prouix and Elias Koteas. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of terror and disturbing images.

12 ROUNDS

When New Orleans Police Detective Danny Fisher stops a brilliant thief, Miles, from getting away with a multi-million-dollar heist, the thief's girlfriend is accidentally killed. After escaping from prison, the criminal mastermind enacts his revenge, taunting Danny with a series of near-impossible puzzles and tasks... 12 rounds... that Danny must somehow complete to save the life of his fiancée.



The movie stars John Cena, Steve Harris, Aidan Gillen and Brian J. White. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action.

DUPLICITY

CIA officer Claire Stenwick and MI6 agent Ray Koval have left the world of government intelligence to cash in on a highly profitable cold war raging between two rival multinational corporations. Their mission is to secure the formula for a product that will bring a fortune to the company that patents it first. And for Stenwick's and Koval's employers, nothing is out of bounds. But as the stakes rise, the trickiest secret for Stenwick and Koval is their growing attraction. As they try to stay one step ahead of the other, they find the only thing they can't cheat their way out of is love.

Duplicity stars Julia Roberts, Clive Owen, Paul Giamatti and Billy Bob Thornton. It's rated PG-13 for language and sexual content.

Santa's Castle to sponsor fundraiser

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

The year's biggest fundraiser for Santa's Castle's is coming up and early registration ends May 1.

The Elf Run is May 16 at Stewart-Watson Field, across from York Field, near the Main Post Bowling Alley.

"We're hoping for a really good turnout," said Jeffrey Saeli, Santa's Castle president. Santa's Castle is a nonprofit organization that provides toys for Fort Benning families, who cannot afford Christmas toys for their children.

"We usually make between $4,000 to $6,000 with the Elf Run. The general budget is $100,000 and we spend about $100 per child on toys," he said.

Elves purchase toys year-round, shopping the sales to get the best value, said Saeli, who plans to run in this year's 5K race.

"We're really hoping for unit participation."

This year's Elf Run has a 5K race and a one-mile family fun run or walk. The cost is $10 per person or $30 for a family of four. After May 1, there is an extra $5 charge. For more information, call 706-685-4422 or e-mail fortbenningsantascastle@gmail.com.

60th Engineers set to deploy

THE BAYONET

"Anytime my country calls, I'll go," said SSG Gabriel Jefferson, who will deploy to Afghanistan Sunday with the 60th Engineer Company (Vertical).

The primary mission for the company during their 12-month deployment will be construction, said CPT Daniel Andrews, the company commander.

"We're trying to expand the capabilities to house troops for the surge that's coming to Afghanistan, and then project combat power out — build outposts for the Infantry wherever they deem they need to be placed," Andrews said.

"Also, we're uniquely suited to win the counterinsurgency by adding to the infrastructure: to help the local populace build schools, do water supply systems, the electrical utilities, whatever they need," he said. "What we do will help establish a foothold for the Infantry so they can come in and conduct their counterinsurgency fight."

The company celebrated their upcoming mission Monday at Doughboy Stadium with friends and family.

Many Soldiers and families, like PV2 William and Rachel Paupst, were facing the challenges of a deployment for the first time.

"It's very hard ... very emotional, especially with three little ones and one on the way, but at the same time, it's his job. Luckily, there is good support from a lot of the wives," she said.

The Paupst family arrived at Fort Benning, their first duty station, in October.

Post to get new deputy

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

COL Bryan R. Owens will assume the responsibility of Fort Benning's deputy commander May 11 from BG Milo Miles, whose next assignment is in Iraq, training the Iraqi force.

Owens

Owens comes from Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he served as the chief of staff for the Combined Arms Center.

"COL Bryan Owens has a sterling reputation and he has excelled in a string of tough, muddy boots assignments in Infantry units and operations across our Army," said MG Michael Barbero, commanding general. "He is the right leader for this critical time as we build the Maneuver Center of Excellence while supporting an Army at war."

Owens has deployed in support of operations Just Cause, Desert Shield, Desert Storm, Joint Guardian and Iraqi Freedom.

Dr. Dell McMullen received the National Excellence in Education Award in March from AdvancED, an accreditation organization that includes DDESS.

McMullen, superintendent of the Department of Defense Domestic Elementary and Secondary Schools for the Georgia and Alabama district, was nominated by several of her colleagues for her leadership and hands-on involvement during the past 15 years with Fort Benning schools.

"She's in the schools all the time," said Margaret Koger, a teacher at McBride Elementary.

"She's not just a figurehead with her picture on the wall in the foyer. The kids know who she is, and she remembers them from year to year. She still knows how important it is to be where the real learning takes place, where the students and teachers are interacting. Really and truly everything she does is all about our kids, the kids of the United

Change in motorcycle policy reflects 'force protection' focus

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's motorcycle policy has changed. All Soldiers who ride motorcycles must have their chain of command's approval and complete a motorcycle safety course on post.

Soldiers must have personal protective equipment for riding, registration for their motorcycle on post and in the state, a valid state operators license, insurance and the completed course, said David Larose, safety manager at the Fort Benning Safety Office.

"This is a requirement for Soldiers to operate a motorcycle, period — on or off post, on or off duty," he said. "It's part of force protection. The number of motorcycle fatalities has increased, and the Army is doing everything they can to ensure the safety of our Soldiers."

The two-day military basic riders course is offered twice weekly. Using both hands-on training and classroom work, the class teaches Soldiers about everything from how to maneuver the vehicle to how to avoid an accident.

"In the classroom, they learn the basic fundamentals," said Wesley Lee, an instructor for the course. "They get introduced to what the motorcycle is, identify some of the controls and talk about some of the risks in riding a

We're making great strides on Army Family Covenant initiatives

MG Michael Barbero
COMMANDING GENERAL

Almost three months ago, I re-signed the Army Family Covenant at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. The covenant is a reminder of the commitment and increasing sacrifices our families make every day and recognizes the strength of our Soldiers comes from the strength of their families.

I want the signatures on the covenant to be more than symbolic. I want the community to be able to track the progress.

There is a group working to implement the covenant through Fort Benning's Soldier and Army Family Action Plan. We identified actions we could take to strengthen our commitment. We focused on five areas:

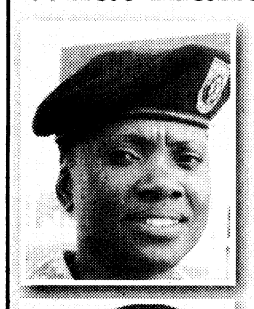
- Standardizing and funding existing family programs and services.
- Increasing accessibility and quality of health care.
- Improving Soldier and family housing.
- Ensuring excellence in schools, youth services and child care.
- Expanding education and employment opportunities for family members.

We just received our first update and, thanks to the leadership of our Garrison and MWR team, we are making great progress across the board on our programs and initiatives. Here is a small list of initiatives:

- Because of covenant funding, three mobilization and demobilization specialists were hired for family readiness group assistance. They are assigned as liaisons to specific units and 95 separate FRGs.
- With the Captains' Career Course initiative, spouses are encouraged to accompany their Soldiers to Fort Benning for Army Family Team Building levels II and III classes with leadership workshops, employment and volunteer opportunities along with resume building workshops. Also, we are working to partner with Columbus State University to offer educational programs to these spouses.
- Martin Army Community Hospital has increased the size of the Family Practice and Internal Medicine clinics. It has improved Tricare online registration.
- We are conducting a pilot test of Career Advancement Accounts where the Department of Defense and Department of Labor provide grant funding for spouses to develop career opportunities. So far 324 spouses have been approved for funds, saving military families more than $1 million.
- The Employment Readiness Office conducts bi-weekly workshops on resume writing, job search skills and interviewing and works with the local office of the Army Spouse Employment Partnerships for job opportunities.
- The Smith Fitness Center is open 24 hours, seven days a week and the Sayers Library is open seven days a week. The Family Fitness Center now allows families with children 10 and older the opportunity to work out together.

These are just a few of the great initiatives ongoing. A few others to mention are the Russ Pond Project, the Family Fun Center at the Bowling Alley and additional chalets at Uchee Creek. All are going to be incredible additions to our wonderful community.

This is important work this group is undertaking in the attempt to make the re-signing of the Covenant more than symbolic.



As I said at the time of the re-signing, the debt our nation owes military families can never be fully repaid. However, the Army Family Covenant is at least a small down payment toward that goal. This is going to be more than just words on a piece of paper. It will become much more than that.

And it has. Follow me!

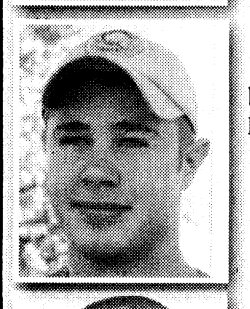
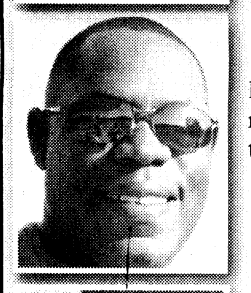
VARIOUS VOICES

What makes the South the South?



I'm from New York, and I think it's more kid-friendly down here. There is more togetherness in the neighborhoods.

—SFC Gail Lashley
3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment



The way people speak here is very distinctive. As soon as they start talking, you can tell. It's different from someone from Louisiana or Mississippi. There's more of a laid-back attitude here. I'm from New York, and the South is a good place.

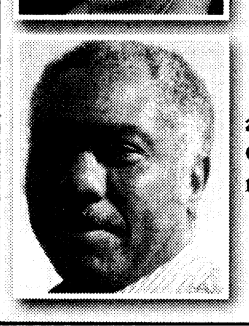
— SFC Henry Clark
203rd Brigade Support Battalion

Everything's fried. They also have good barbecue down here, and the weather is really hot.

— Airman 1st Class Timothy Couto
1st Battalion,
15th Air Support Operations Squadron

I'm from Dawson, Ga., and I'm a Southern boy. I like the cooking. Good home cooking, good restaurants and good people, most of all, make the South the South.

— SSG Phillip Lockett
2nd Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment



The restaurants and the type of cooking we do down here are what make the South the South. They don't make good barbecue up north, not like we have down here.

— SSG Antoya Gordon
Warrior Transition Battalion

This is my first time living in the South, and the barbecue here is something different for me. I've only been here a few months. I'm originally from Peru and I've lived in Florida and Washington, and it's different here.

— Adela Santiago
Family member

The weather here is nice most of the time, and in the summer it gets really hot. I'm from Georgia, and I don't like the cold weather up north.

Sweet, unsweet marks differences

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

What I'm about to reveal may shock some readers, so if you're easily offended, read no further.

I don't eat grits. There, I've said it. Furthermore, I like my tea unsweetened, my chicken grilled, my biscuits topped with jam and my peanuts roasted. And I'd rather have barbecued tofu than pork.

Right about now, quite a few of you are probably getting ready to throw down your newspaper in disgust. But please, if I've offended your taste buds, don't blame me. Blame my upbringing. Or rather, blame where I'm from.

Until 2008, I'd spent nearly my entire life living in the Midwest, a region where no one is quite sure what a grit is, and the question "sweet or unsweet?" doesn't exist. A third generation St. Louis native, I grew up believing Midwesterners were among the nicest, most polite people you'd ever hope to meet. Then, I moved to Savannah, Ga.

My first trip to the grocery store in Savannah was an eye-opening crash course in Southern hospitality that put my Midwestern sensibilities on edge. When a clerk approached me in the aisles and asked how I was doing and whether I needed help finding anything, I was automatically suspicious. What did he want from me? Was he bored? Trying to impress his boss?

At the checkout, another clerk and a bagger both called me ma'am. I was 24 years old, and in the Midwest, at least 20 years away from being a "ma'am." Did they think I looked old?

My fiance, who is also from St. Louis, had lived in Savannah for four years at that point. When I told him about my bewildering shopping experience, he explained the grocery store employees were trying to be nice, and were probably not out to steal my wallet.

Now, don't get me wrong, I am in no way implying Midwesterners are rude. It's just that I'd been used to a different standard of politeness. In St. Louis, a simple "please" and "thank you" with a smile is more than sufficient, and anything more formal would probably get some strange looks. We're not being disrespectful, that's just the way things are done there.

Since the grocery store incident, I've grown accustomed to Southern politeness and have even learned to appreciate the niceties of living in the South. There is something to be said for taking the extra time to shoot the breeze with the person waiting on you in a restaurant or at a store, and I've learned that being greeted as "ma'am" is a sign of respect, not a reflection on aging.

And while I still don't care for sweet tea, I have found some tasty Southern fare I plan on sharing with my Midwestern family — pecan pralines, anyone?

Drinking can raise assault risk

Michelle Fonseca
FAMILY ADVOCACY PROGRAM

Drinking too much alcohol can impair your judgment. Alcohol lowers inhibitions and interferes with decision-making, which can lead to potentially dangerous sexual situations. When under the influence, people do things they may not normally do — like have one-night stands or use birth control improperly. Dating under the influence can leave you worried, regretful or embarrassed and it can increase your chances of becoming a victim of sexual assault, getting a sexually transmitted disease or becoming pregnant.

Unfortunately, what sometimes happens when people have had too much to drink is that there is no communication, honesty, trust or respect. Someone under the influence who decides they want to stop sexual activity may not be able to communicate that and someone who has had too much to drink doesn't necessarily listen to "please stop." The following are tips to keep yourself and others safe:

- Always be aware of your surroundings.
- If you are planning to drink, make sure you know where your buddy is and how you are getting home. You don't want to be left at a party, not know anyone, and be stuck.
- Date rape drugs, such as GHB or "roofies" are present in our society. If someone offers to get you a drink, go with him or her and watch him or her pour your drink. Never accept a drink from a unknown person. Keep an eye on your drink, don't set it down to dance and finish it later. Don't put your safety at risk.
- Avoid being alone and be careful whom you invite back to your room. Do you really know this person? He or she may look like you, dress like you, even be best friends with your buddy, but can you know him or her after one night?
- If you start to feel strange or unusually intoxicated, seek help from a buddy. A stranger who offers to help you or escort you from the event could be someone who's slipped you a drug and plans to do you harm.
- Avoid excessive drinking. Too much alcohol can affect your judgment.

It is important for Soldiers to understand the risks involved with dating under the influence. As a Soldier, you should report sexual assault. The safety of your fellow Soldiers, your unit and your community may depend on your reporting these incidents. Sexual assault can be prevented. When you see or sense the risk of sexual assault, it is your duty to intervene.

For more information, call 706-545-0892 or 706-545-8740. Soldiers can call the Sexual Assault Response Line 24 hours a day, seven days a week at 706-566-7393.

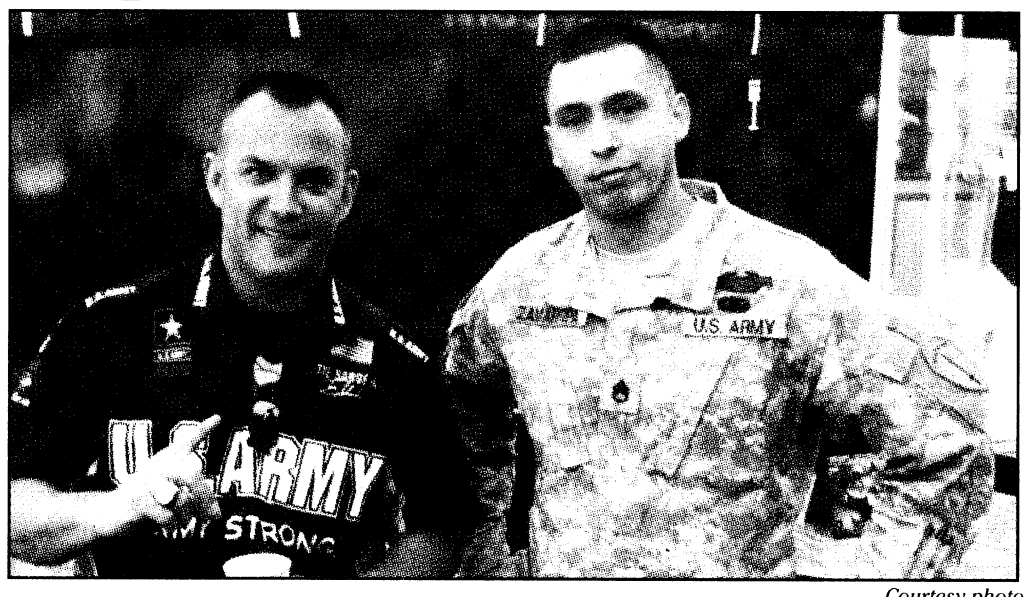
Silver Star recipient assists recruiting effort

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET



For one weekend, Silver Star recipient SSG John J. Zamarripa, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, put his Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course study material aside to represent the Army in a different mission — the Army recruiting mission.

Zamarripa was honored as a "Hometown Hero" during the National Hot Rod Association Southern Nationals in Atlanta April 16-19 as a part of the U.S. Army Recruiting Battalion-Atlanta Army Strength in Action Zone where he spoke with NHRA fans about Army opportunities and his experiences.

"I do love the Army and I have had good experiences," he said. "So that is why I was there, to share it. And, I had a great time. And, my old sergeant major was there, Command Sergeant Major Moore. He read the NCO Creed and recognized four new NCOs."

Zamarripa said the NHRA fans who visited the zone appeared to have a good time with the different events.

"We got people started off in a Humvee that had big TV screens around it and ran it through different scenarios for them," he said. "Then, there was a competition with a drill sergeant to see how many pushups the fans could do in two minutes. The fans also got a chance to operate some of the new robotics we have, like the EOD robot. At the end, they got their dog tags. They (fans) seemed to like it.

SSG John J. Zamarripa, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, was honored as a "Hometown Hero" April 16-19 during the National Hot Rod Association Southern Nationals in Atlanta. At the race, Zamarripa met U.S. Army driver, and six-time World Champion, Tony Schumacher.

Part of Zamarripa's weekend was spent talking to fans, ROTC students, teachers, professors and local community leaders about his experiences in the Army, said Jacob Ricker of the New York-based Weber Shandwick public relations service.

Many of the fans Zamarripa spoke to wanted to know why he joined the Army, what the Army had done for him, what was good about the Army, and the one topic he would rather forget — how and why he got the Silver Star, he said.

"I told them I didn't really do anything but be an NCO," Zamarripa said. "My lieutenant (1LT Ross Pixler), my medics and my Soldiers were the heroes."

Zamarripa was awarded the Silver Star for heroism while serving with A Company, 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment in Salman Pak south of Baghdad Oct. 30, 2007.

The weekend trip to Atlanta Dragway also gave Zamarripa an opportunity to meet six-time world champion Tony "The Sarge" Schumacher who pilots the U.S. Army Top Fuel dragster in the NHRA Full Throttle Drag Racing Series.

"I got to meet Tony, and he met my wife Janet and daughter Kaylie," he said. "We had lunch and just really had a great time. He is a great guy."

Although the Schumacher driven dragster lost in the semifinals, Zamarripa said being in the pit and being around the car was a great experience.

"I was right there by the tree," he said. "Standing 20 meters from the car and the start line. When it takes off it goes like 1,000 feet in three seconds at 326 mph. You could feel it (the power) it in your chest. That was pretty awesome."

The weekend didn't last forever for Zamarripa, though, and on Monday he was back at BNCOC preparing for two tests he missed on Saturday — he passed both of them on the first attempt.

Former Alabama football star speaks at alcohol screening day

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"Passionate," "unique," "amazing," "inspirational" — Soldiers may not often use these words to describe alcohol prevention training, but for many who attended the Fort Benning Army Substance Abuse Program's Alcohol Awareness Month screening event April 16, the program was no ordinary training exercise.

Siran Stacy, former University of Alabama running back and guest speaker at the event, was responsible for evoking such strong reactions. Stacy shared how his life was permanently altered Nov. 19, 2007, when a drunken driver struck his vehicle, instantly killing his wife and four of his five children.

Stacy spent several days following the accident in a coma.

"For a while after it happened, I wanted to die," he said. "There was nothing else for me to do in this world."

But, his outlook was changed by a chance encounter months later with a group of women whose car had broken down on the side of a road near Stacy's Newton, Ala., home. While helping them change a tire, the women pressed Stacy for his name, which he reluctantly revealed.

"I knew they would know who I was and would start talking about the tragedy, and I didn't want to talk about it," he said. "But I didn't want to be disrespectful. As soon as I told them my name, they went into the tragedy. Before I drove away, they said, 'We prayed for you so much when it happened.' That was when it came to me that I'm never going to get away from this."

That moment sparked an inner transformation that led Stacy to begin telling his story publicly and sharing the faith that helped him overcome his grief and anger, he said.

"Without a doubt, I know that I wouldn't be here right now if it hadn't been for two things — Christ, and people praying for me," he said.

Stacy's words hit home with many Soldiers, some of whom lined up to speak and pray with him personally after the event.

"What we were hoping for was that when people heard his message, they would understand the devastating effects drunken driving can have," said Yvonne Wilbanks, Fort Benning alcohol and drug control officer. "And I think it did inspire some Soldiers."

"I used to drink every now and then, but I think I'm going to have to slow that down," said SPC Jovan Williams, 362nd Engineer Company, 11th Engineer Battalion. "I don't want to take any chances of somebody hurting my family or me hurting somebody else's family."

"It's going to make me teach my kids not to drink and drive," said SPC Shandell Echols, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 11th Engineer Battalion.

Wilbanks estimated close to 1,300 Soldiers and DoD Civilians attended the event. Attendees could take free, anonymous alcohol self-assessments, and health-care professionals were on hand to answer questions.

For more information about alcohol and substance abuse resources, call ASAP at 706-545-1138, or visit https://www.infantry.army.mil/ASAP. To take a free online alcohol screening, visit www.DrinkingIQ.org.

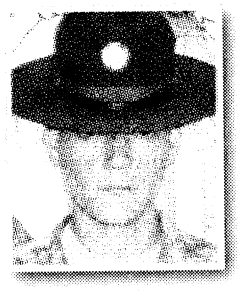
FEDERAL EMPLOYEES' WEEK

Next week has been designated as Federal Employees' Week at Fort Benning, sponsored by the installation's Equal Employment Opportunity Special Emphasis Program committee. The theme for the week's activities is "Tools for Successful Employment in a Changing Environment."

All civilian and military personnel are encouraged to attend the planned activities, which are in the Middle School Teen Center's Ballroom 2, Building 1056, for career and personal development.



I strongly support the goals and objectives of the EEO Special Emphasis Program committee and its efforts establishing the 2009 Federal Employees' Week activities. I encourage all managers and supervisors to participate and to encourage participation of civilian and military personnel assigned within their organization as mission requirements allow. Family members and volunteers are also invited to participate and benefit from the workshops offered during this training event. Civilian personnel who wish to attend the scheduled activities will be excused, without charge of leave.

— Maj. Gen. Michael Barbero
Commanding general,
Fort Benning

Secretary clings to 'personal calling' to serve vets

Donna Miles
AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

> There is only one reason we exist, and that is to ensure that our veterans who have earned benefits and services get them quickly – and that it is accessible to them, it is logical, it is fair and consistent.
> — Eric K. Shinseki, VA Secretary

WASHINGTON – Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric K. Shinseki is a no-nonsense leader who wants veterans to measure his performance and that of the department he leads through concrete results, not rhetoric.

"Veterans have been given a lot of promises over a bunch of years, and I have assured them that they should measure us by our accomplishments, not just the promises," Shinseki said. "We have some things to deliver."

Less than two months into the job, Shinseki said he is focused on transforming VA into a "people-centric, results-oriented and forward-looking" department.

"We have committed to putting veterans at the focal point of all that we do here," he said. "There is only one reason we exist, and that is to ensure that our veterans who have earned benefits and services get them quickly – and that it is accessible to them, it is logical, it is fair and consistent."

For Shinseki, who retired in 2003 as Army chief of staff and spent 38 years in the Army, the mission is extremely personal.

Many of the veterans he now serves were "the truly unbelievable heroes of World War II" who returned from Europe and the Pacific to provide leadership for the United States, including the military, he said. "We all stand on their shoulders," Shinseki said. "We do things today professionally that they taught us how to do."

But other veterans under VA's charge served alongside Shinseki or under his command - in Vietnam and elsewhere during his military career. For others, Shinseki was the one who issued the deployment orders that sent them into harm's way.

"So this is an opportunity for me to give back to the ones I went to war with, and the men and women I sent to war," he said. "It's a way to give back, and I am honored to have that opportunity."

Shinseki's vision of giving back to America's veterans got a solid endorsement April 9 as President Barack Obama, flanked by Shinseki and Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates, reiterated his commitment to the nation's veterans.

As Obama announced a new joint virtual lifetime electronic record that will improve care and services to transitioning veterans by smoothing the flow of medical records between the Defense and Veterans Affairs departments, the president recognized the debt the country owes its service members and veterans.

"We have a sacred trust with those who wear the uniform of the United States of America," Obama said. "It's a commitment that begins in enlistment, and it must never end. But for too long, the United States has fallen short of that commitment."

"Too many wounded warriors go without the care that they need," he said. "Too many veterans don't receive the support that they've earned. Too many who once wore our nation's uniform now sleep in our nation's streets.

"It's time to change all that," he continued. "It's time to give our veterans a 21st-century VA."

Obama said his fiscal 2010 budget request, which represents the largest single-year increase in VA funding in three decades, will help achieve that goal.

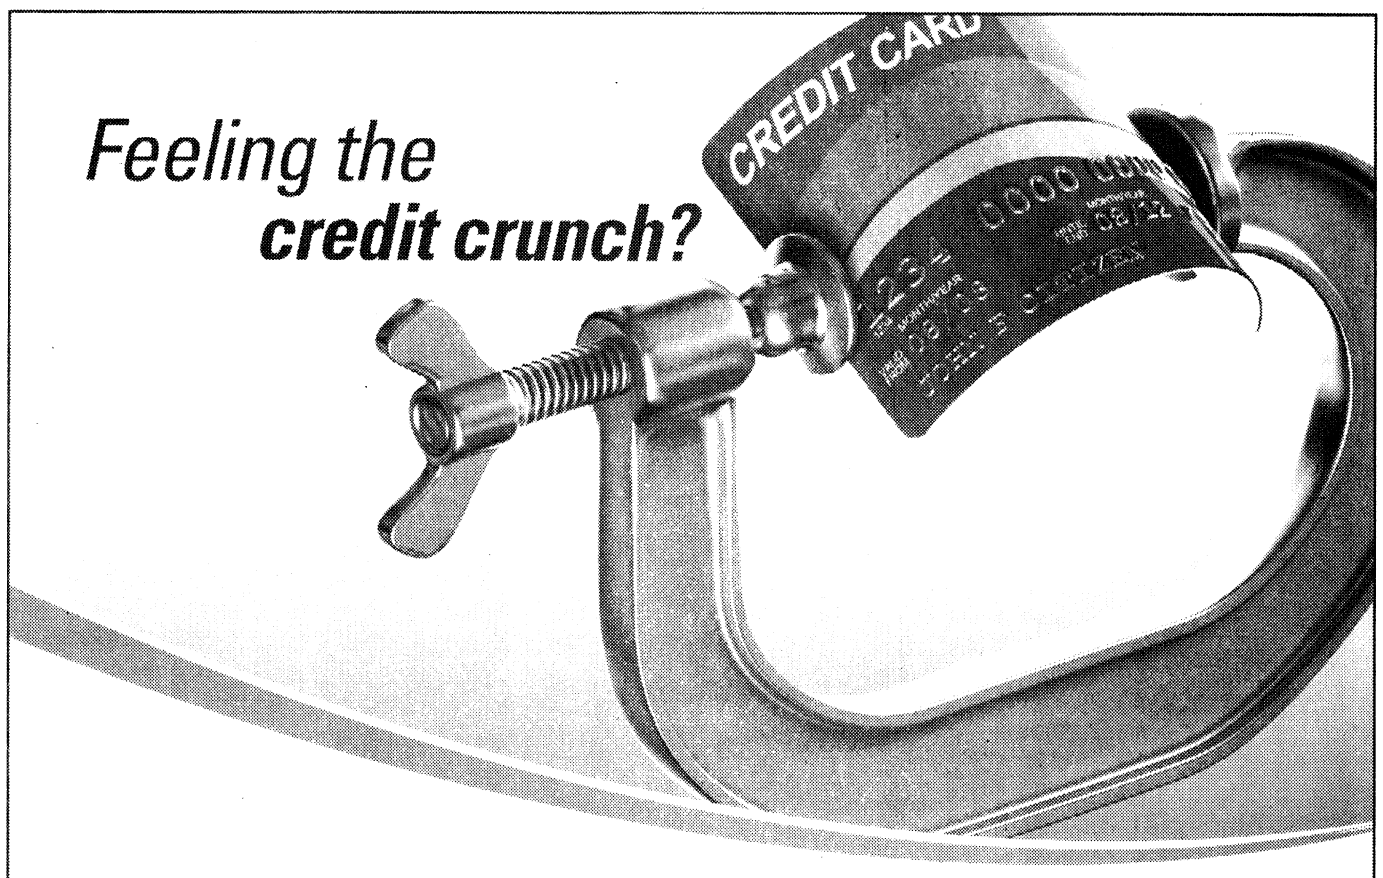
"All told, we will increase funding by $25 billion over the next five years," he said.

"This is the largest budget request ever put forward by a president," Shinseki told American Forces Press Service. "And I think veterans should take great confidence in our president's commitment to veterans" – a commitment he said Obama has maintained consistently as a member of the Senate Affairs Committee, as a presidential candidate, and now as commander in chief.

Congress, too, has strongly supported additional VA funding during the past two years, Shinseki said.

"So I am pretty optimistic about this budget," he said. "The dialogue has already begun with key members of Congress."

In an open letter to veterans after taking office, Shinseki said VA's "best days as an organization to support veterans are ahead of us."



"We will fulfill President Lincoln's charge to care for 'him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow, and for his orphan' by redesigning and re-engineering ourselves for the future," he wrote.

"I look forward to working together with all VA employees to transform our department into an organization that reflects the change and commitment our country expects and our veterans deserve."

Engineers: Supported by families during deployment

"We're just settling in, getting comfortable with Army life," Rachel said. "It was always (William's) passion to join the Army ... what he has always wanted to do. I'm so proud of him. It's my honor to support him and stand behind him."

For Jessica Jefferson, supporting her husband, SSG Gabriel Jefferson, is part of her responsibility.

"We have to be positive here, so that they can stay focused over there ... so they can do their job and not have to worry and be stressed," she said.

Gabriel said his family understood that doing his job was an important part of supporting them.

"To me, my family will be safe if I do my part. My wife knows I'm supporting her and I care about her, and my children know, too. I'm confident in my wife that she'll take care of my family, and she has faith in me that I'll do my job and come back safely."

Their daughter, 7-year-old Lauren, has faith in her father, too.

"I think my dad's really brave," she said. "As soon as he leaves, the next day, I'll miss him. (But) I'm glad he's in his job, because I know he's supporting the country and everyone in it and us."

States military. She believes in that with her whole heart — she's given her life to this."

McMullen was nominated for many reasons, Koger said, but chief among them is her plan to prepare students for the 21st century, a process that began under McMullen's watch more than a decade ago.

"She is such a visionary and such a leader in education," Koger said. "She's always encouraged us to step out of our comfort zone and try new things and for some years has seen the importance of us moving toward 21st-century learning, so that we are preparing students for this century rather the century we were educated in."

Knowing how much McMullen supports creativity in the classroom means a lot to Barbara Culwell, a teacher at Dexter involved in the nomination.

"She has really encouraged us to think outside the box ... be creative. I know that translates back into meeting the needs of kids," Culwell said. "There is no one I'd rather work for than Dell McMullen, and I mean that wholeheartedly. I have worked for her for 18 years. She's always been helpful. Whenever I have gone to her to ask her advice, she always makes sure she has time to sit down and listen. She'd go out of her way to help me if I felt like I needed help."

Although education is a good fit for McMullen, who has more than 30 years of experience in the field, it wasn't her first choice.

"I was too short to be a flight attendant," she said. "I had never been on a plane — at that time I had only been four hours away from where I grew up, a farm (in) Crawfordville, Ga. — but I thought that would be great. And then the second thing I wanted to be was a concert pianist, because in my hometown I was great. But my hometown only had 700 people, and as soon as I got to college, it was very clear I was not going to be a concert pianist.

"So I fell into education — and loved it. When I look back, I wouldn't change a thing. Everything happens for a reason. I believe that."

McMullen taught in Muscogee County, later becoming an assistant principal at an elementary school.

"Then I became really interested in becoming a principal, so I applied 23 times," McMullen said. "I was really, really persistent because I had my heart set on becoming a principal.

"So when Loyd school came open on post, I applied and I got it. I didn't have any military connection at all. In fact, I didn't know much about the military. But they treated me so well at Loyd. I loved it."

McMullen enjoys working with the military and their families, she said.

"It really is an opportunity to serve our country," she said. "To know we really are working with the children of the men and women who give their lives for our country is very humbling and rewarding. I love it here."

After McMullen served for nine years as superintendent on post, the district was reorganized to include Robins Air Force Base, Maxwell Air Force Base and Fort Rucker. In all this time, McMullen said, she appreciates working with people who are committed to helping children learn at high levels.

"The kind of people I'm so fortunate to work with are always ready to try something different. Teachers are innovative. Principals allow teachers to try things. It takes everybody, all of us working together."

That's the vision McMullen said she sees for the future: a team of educators, administrators, parents and support personnel who cooperate to maintain and improve the level of excellence in the schools.

"It's a creative team that's not afraid to take risks," she said. "They're always excited about new opportunities, always trying to figure out new ways for children to learn better. And that's exciting. It never gets old as long as you're learning new things."

Classes: Teach motorcycle riders how to reduce risks

motorcycle. On day two, everything we talked about in the classroom we bring to the range for a practical exercise."

Six months after finishing the course, Soldiers must complete the experienced riders course, a one-day class that covers more advanced aspects of riding than the basic course. Soldiers who ride sportbikes should take the new military sportbike riders course, which will be offered in the coming months.

"Everything we do is about safety," Lee said. "All our motorcycle classes teach our riders how to reduce risk when they ride. It forces you to do things out on the range that you should be doing out on the roadway. The more you do it, the more it sticks in your mind. This is what our training is all about. We teach you how to handle that machine."

A motorcycle simulator, added to the basic course this week, is available for Soldiers to learn how a motorcycle handles while still in the classroom, Lee said. Soldiers can also borrow one of six loaner bikes to use during the course if they don't have their own.

"What better way to determine if this is what you want to do, rather than go out and spend tens of thousands of dollars for a machine and then decide you don't like it," Lee said.

As part of the motorcycle safety policy, commanders and leaders will also conduct quarterly inventories to keep track of the number of motorcycles in each unit and operators' ages and driving skills, Larose said.

"Safety is critical," he said. "When we see an activity where the Army is losing more Soldiers than we should be, we have a moral obligation to take care of our Soldiers. The mothers and fathers of America entrust their children to us. Wives and husbands entrust their spouses. As leaders, we're obligated to look out for (Soldiers') health, safety and morale."

and a battalion, brigade and division level operations officer. Owens awards and decorations include the Combat Infantryman Badge, Expert Infantryman Badge, Ranger Tab, Master Parachutist Badge, Air Assault Badge, Legion of Merit and Bronze Star Medal.

"I know Bryan and I really look forward to serving with him here," Barbero said. "I know he and his wife, Jen, will be a tremendous addition to our world-class team of leaders at the United States Infantry Center and Fort Benning."

Owens and his wife, Jennifer, have three daughters, Ashley, Stephanie and Rachel.

Brown named Coach of the Year

Cleveland Cavaliers' coach Mike Brown was named the NBA's Coach of the Year April 20. The Cavaliers had a 66-win season and the overall number one seed in the postseason.

Brown, 38, is the second Cleveland coach to ever win the award. Bill Fitch won in 1976.

Here's the proof

You can teach an old dog new tricks – Mark Martin, 50, became the third-oldest winner in NASCAR history April 18, starting from the pole and getting the victory at Phoenix International Raceway. Martin also snapped his 97-winless streak that dates back to 2005.

Talladega Superspeedway is the track for this week's race. It's set to begin at 2 p.m. Sunday and will be broadcast on Fox.

Draft weekend

While the NHL and NBA are in the midst of their playoffs, the NFL is drafting new players for this fall. It all begins at 4 p.m. Saturday with rounds one and two. Rounds three through seven begin at 10 a.m. Sunday. The 74th NFL Draft will be at Radio City Music Hall in New York.

Both ESPN and the NFL Network will broadcast the event live.

Boston Marathon results

More than 26,000 runners began the Boston Marathon, and Ethiopian Deriba Merga came out the victor. Merga seemed out to prove himself after being passed in the last quarter-mile at the Beijing Olympics and ended up finishing fourth.

In the women's division, Kenya's Salina Kosgei won after sprinting the final blocks against defending champion Dire Tune.

Americans took third in the men's and women's categories, the best finish since 1985.

Young shuts his trap

Vince Young, quarterback for the Tennessee Titans, seemed to have learned his lesson after the loads of media attention and hoopla dust-up last season. Young declared he was going to keep his mouth shut and keep working. He said he realizes he can't win any more.

Kerry Collins is the Titans' starter, and the team also signed veteran QB Patrick Ramsey in the offseason.

Stafford to Lions?

The Lions denied reports Wednesday of an imminent deal with Georgia quarterback Matthew Stafford as the No. 1 overall pick in this weekend's NFL draft. The Lions are hoping to reach an agreement with Stafford's agent, Tom Condon, prior to the draft. Condon is thought to be seeking a deal for Stafford in the $38 million to $40 million range.

All-Army basketball hopefuls dwindling

There are three more cuts to make before championship

Soldiers from across the United States and as far away as Korea are at Fort Benning until May 9 competing in the All-Army men's basketball trial camp. Twenty-two Soldiers came to the camp and following the last cut — 15 remain. There are three more cuts to be made before the Armed Forces Championship May 10-18 in Millington, Tenn.

"These last three cuts are going to be difficult to make," said All-Army coach David Smith. "The level of talent has really stepped up since last year."

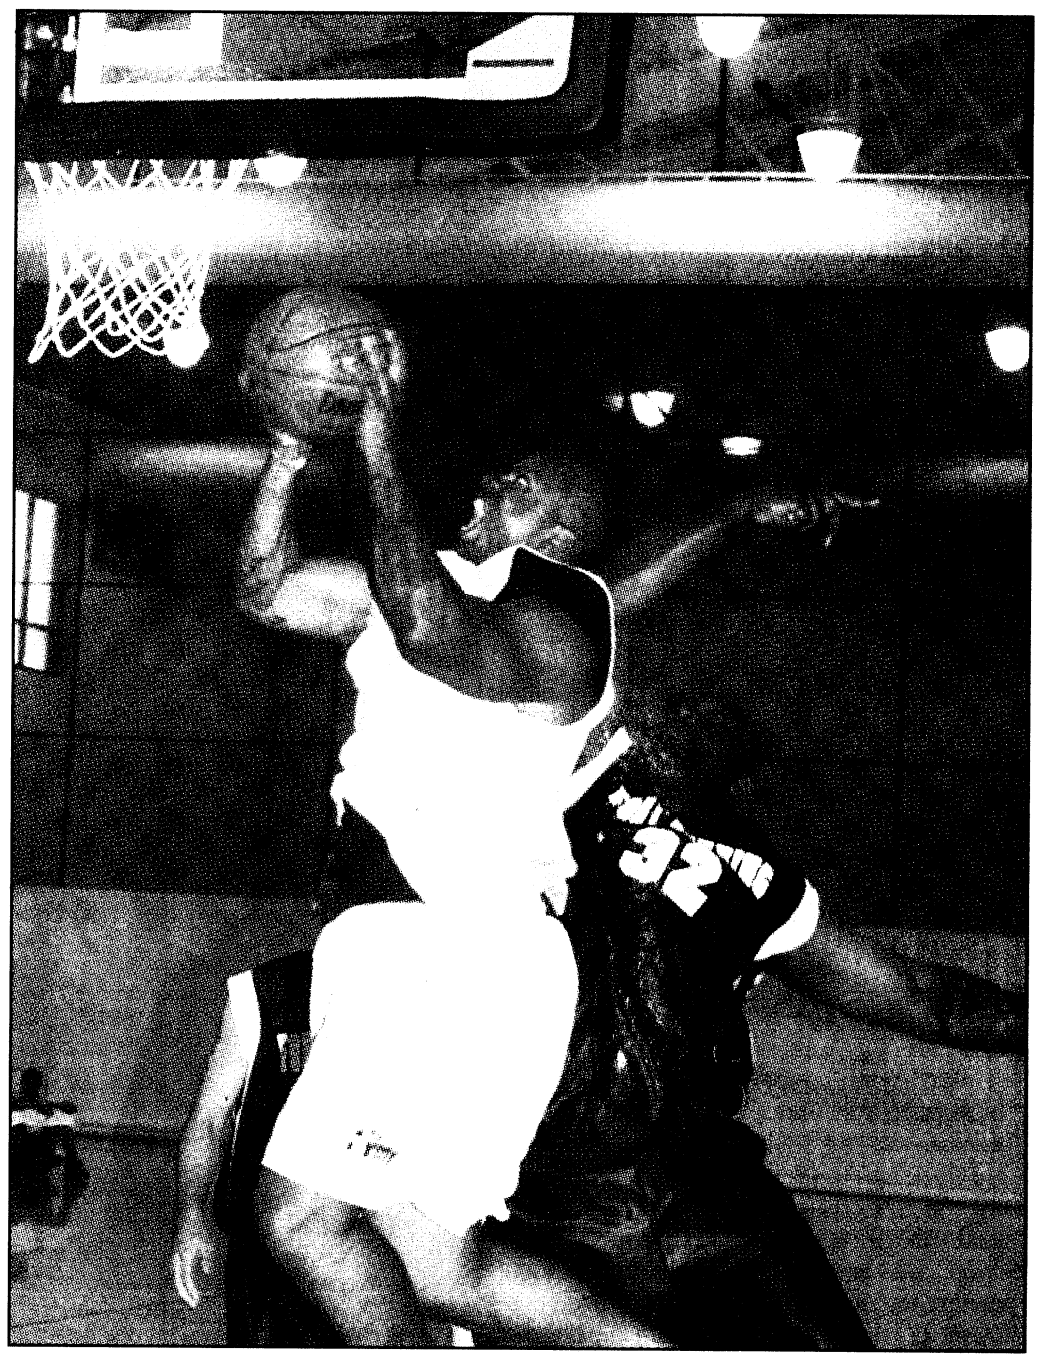
Smith planned to cut players by April 17, but said there was so much talent, he wanted to wait until he could fully evaluate the players.

"I was looking to cut on Monday, but I don't think I am going to — this team is so competitive I'll probably keep them until the next week," he said.

SFC Brian Burns, of Fort Myer, Va., is attending his first All-Army trial camp.

"I have always wanted to try out for the All-Army team, but there was always something else going on," he said. "When I found out I made it, I worked on fine tuning my skills so I would be ready."

The most challenging part of camp is the last practice of the day, Burns said. After playing two games, the team goes back to the gym for one last game.



"It really tests your mental and physical ability. When you are tired, you have to be able to keep going and push yourself. You have to be ready for anything."

The team practices three times during the week and on weekends.

The team played their first scrimmage game Monday, taking a 102-64 victory over the Fort Benning post team at the Smith Fitness Center.

"I think we really gelled as a team — I thought we played defense really well and the offense ran smoothly," Burns said.

Army team wins Greco-Roman championship

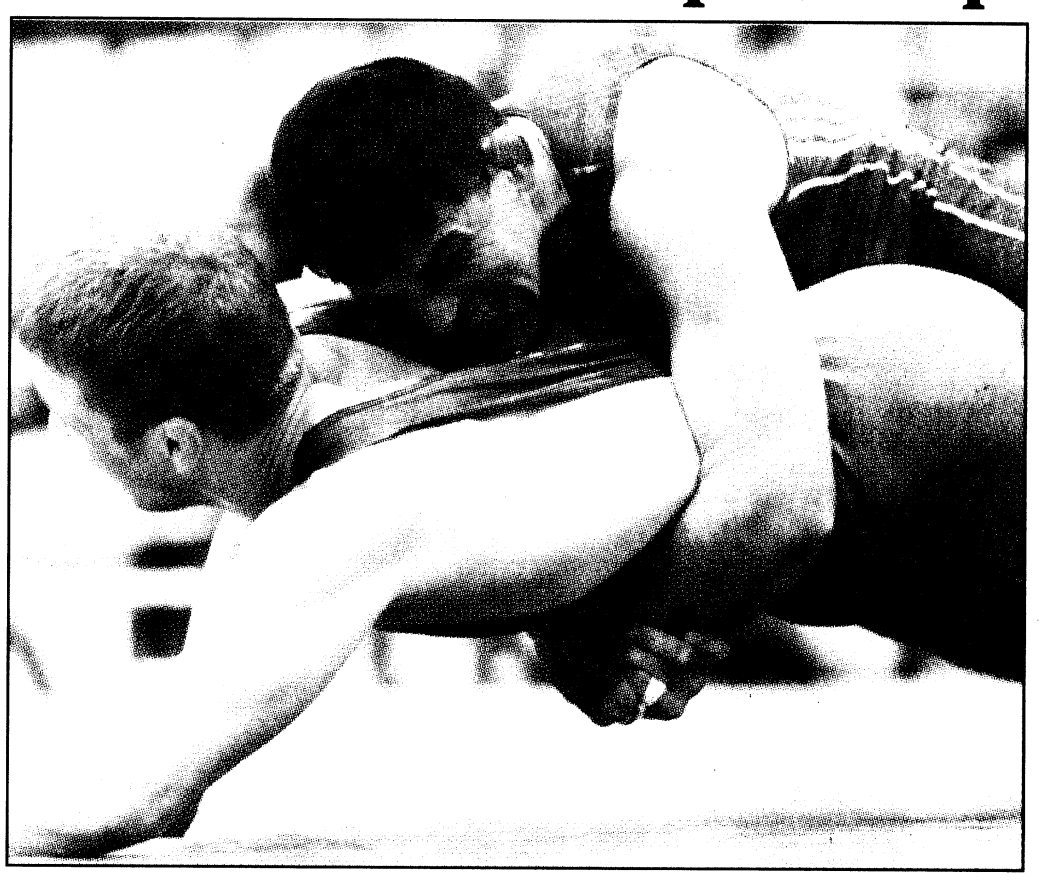
LAS VEGAS — Four Soldiers won individual titles while leading the All-Army wrestling team to its ninth Greco-Roman crown in 10 years at the 2009 U.S. National Wrestling Championships, April 10, at the Las Vegas Convention Center.

U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program wrestlers SSG Dremiel Byers, SGT Brad Ahearn and SPCs Jermaine Hodge and Faruk Sahin won their respective weight classes as the All-Army team outscored the New York Athletic Club, 82-78, to win its fifth consecutive national team title. SPC Aaron Sieracki also reached the finals and won the silver medal at 185 pounds. All told, 18 Soldiers qualified for the World Team Trials.

"We've never had four individual champs," All-Army coach SSG Shon Lewis said. "I think the most we (previously) had was two or three. We might have had three at one time, but that was when there were 10 weight classes. We won four out of seven this time, so that makes it even more impressive.



"Those guys went out there and got it done. They performed. They brought it."

Hodge avoided getting pinned in the second period and rallied late to upset Sunkist Kids' two-time national champion Sam Hazewinkel, 1-0, 0-3, 4-4, in the 121-pound finale for his first national championship.

"The biggest thing coach has implemented here in the past couple of months is 'nobody out-toughs us,' and if we go out there and wrestle tough, nobody can beat us.

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Baseball is 'mental, physical' sport

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

"Baseball is just as much a mental sport as it is physical," said volunteer Child Youth & School Services assistant baseball coach Ken Hester, a retired Soldier. "You have to always think 'if the ball is hit to me, what am I going to do with it? How many people are on base? How many outs are there?'"

And on the field, there's never a moment where players can zone out, Hester said.

"Even if the ball doesn't come to you, you have to be in position to back someone else up and be ready in case the ball does come to you," he said.

At the plate, he teaches players proper swing, how to bunt and when to swing in various situations, he said. Every child plays differently, so Hester tailors his coaching style to each child's need.

Hester emphasizes the fundamentals to his 11-and 12-year old team, the Fort Benning Pirates, who play in Columbus.

He also encourages children to practice and play hard whether they are winning or losing, he said.

Hester started coaching when his

Retired Soldier builds basketball "family," league

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

SGM(R) Frank Goodman's vision for the Old School Basketball League was to form a league where basketball players, 38 and older, could play in a competitive environment, showcasing their skills and sharing the camaraderie of the game.

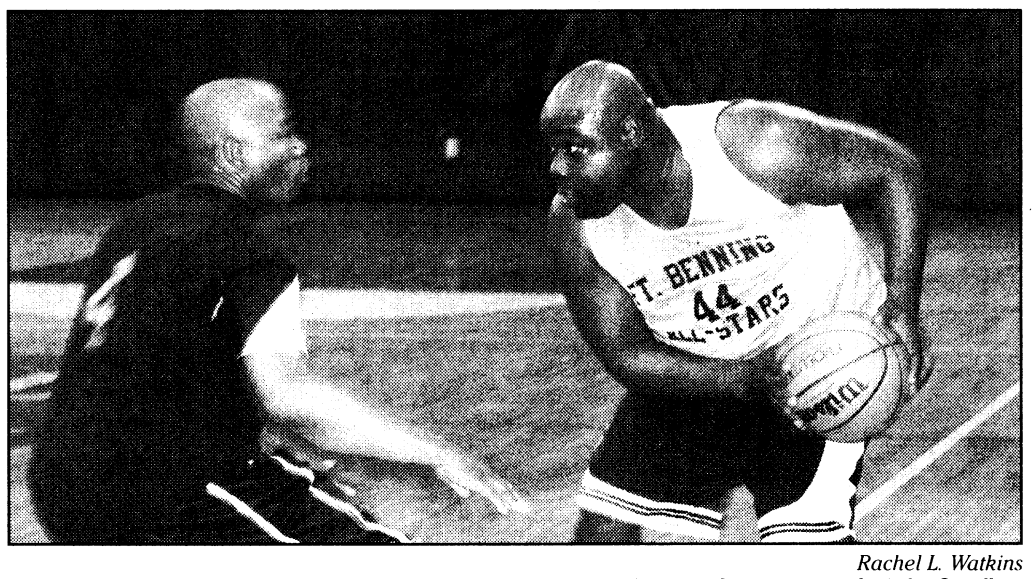
"I love basketball," Goodman said. "This league is something I want to last, even after I'm gone. It gives the players a chance to remember how they once played and redevelop their skills and it helps younger generations understand what basketball is all about."

In the league's first year, there were five teams — now there are nine teams from Phenix City, Fort Benning and Columbus. This year, the Fort Benning All Stars and Fort Benning Heat, made up of retired and active-duty Soldiers, joined the league.

Fort Benning All Star MSG(R) James Johnson said basketball is a good workout.

"When you get older, you tend to not exercise, but this league helps you stay in shape," said Johnson, who has played basketball since he was 6 years old.

Johnson said the league is slower than intramural sports, but he likes it because there are players at his skill level, which makes for an even playing field.



"You don't have young guys ripping and roaring down the court," Johnson said.

Johnson was looking for a league where he could play basketball competitively, so the Old School League was a perfect match, he said. Johnson said he plans on playing basketball until his knees give out and he can't run up and down the court anymore.

"My brothers and I always played basketball when we were kids and I have fond memories of it," he said. "My brother is pushing 60 years old and I can't quit now — if he can do it, I can too."

A thirty-eight-year-old who plays on the Fort Benning All Stars team, SGT Solomon Loving, 598th Maintenance Company, has the same plan.

"I don't know what I would do without basketball. I love it too much to give it up," he said. "I just get out on the court and forget about everything else and play ball — it definitely is a stress reliever. And I get the same adrenaline rush when I go out on the court now as I did when I was a kid playing basketball."

Rachel L. Watkins
Fort Benning All Star SGT Solomon Loving moves the ball down the court in a game against the Cavaliers Saturday at A.J. McClung YMCA.

The teams play at A.J. McClung YMCA in Columbus for now, but Goodman said he hopes the program grows. Goodman wants to expand the league to LaGrange, Ga., and the tricommunity's surrounding areas.

In the meantime, he will work on building the "family."

Northside senior earns spot on West Point shooting team

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Dedication is not something Ian Young takes lightly. For six years, the Northside High School senior and member of the Fort Benning Junior Rifle Club has devoted his free time to becoming a world-class shooter.

Now his dedication has paid off in the form of a spot on the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., shooting team, the culmination of a dream for Young.

"Since I was old enough to know what West Point and the military was, I wanted to be a part of it," Young said.

Young's passion for shooting was sparked by an encounter with a Soldier in a Columbus bookstore. The Soldier wore a President's Hundred tab on his uniform, awarded to only the top shooters at the President's Rifle and Pistol Match. When Young asked the Soldier about the tab's meaning, he gave Young the phone number of SFC Jason Parker, a member of the Army Marksmanship Unit's international rifle team who became one of Young's mentors.

"He's one of our hardest working and most dedicated shooters," Parker said. "In the years we've worked with him, he's improved a lot."

Caroline Gotler
Ian Young checks the sights on his rifle during practice with the Northside High School Rifle team Tuesday. Young, the team captain, has been shooting with AMU at Fort Benning since he was 13 years old.

Young, the captain of the Northside rifle team, credits AMU with helping him improve his shooting and other areas of his life.

"They've taught me a lot about responsibility and discipline," he said. "These guys are like brothers and family to me. They've done everything from coaching me to inviting me to shoot and hang out with them on the weekends to running with me and giving me a workout plan. It's kind of like a family here. They're there for you."

One of Young's long-term goals is to reach a level of competition many of his AMU mentors are familiar with — the Olympics.

"Right now, I'm at a state and national level, but I want to get up to an international level like the guys in the unit," he said.

Keeping up with West Point's rigorous training schedule will help him get to that level, Young said, especially with the added motivation of keeping his spot on the team.

"There are quite a few other people who will be on the team, and there's no guarantee I'll stay on," he said. "I'm going to stay at the top of my game by practicing constantly."

Parker is confident Young will succeed.

"He's going to do great," Parker said. "He's a wonderful student with a good head on his shoulders."

Young said he is also looking forward to attending West Point and the opportunity to serve his country. Though he comes from a family with a strong military background — his father, an uncle and his grandfather served in the Navy and another uncle was an Army command sergeant major — Young said he felt no pressure from his family to serve.

"It's just something I want to do," he said. "I want to do my best for my country."

Speeding toward checkered flag

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Fantasy sports has gained in popularity over the past few years with a million or more participating in just about every sports imaginable.

Why? Because everyone loves the thrill of competition and the thought they have what it takes to be the best — even if they don't follow the sport as closely as some.

I remember when the Fort Benning football picks first gained its "legs." While the prognosticators at the time loved to talk trash among themselves, readers liked to follow the wins and losses of the individuals who picked the games.

As a former prognosticator, I can tell you the trash talking was intense at times, but I was never one to do something like that — yeah, right.

This year The Bayonet expanded the competition to include March Madness. This week, we kick off another new competition with NASCAR and the Benning Challenge.

For all you NASCAR fans, you can compete against the Fort Benning prognosticators by keeping your own personal score sheet at home.

This is how the competition will work. Each week, the eight contestants will pick a driver from the NASCAR Sprint Cup Challenge. They can choose to select the same driver each week, or choose a different driver if they like. Following the race each week, points will be given for the placement of each driver depending on where they finished in the race. A simplified scoring system will be used based on the ESPN scoring system that allows points for drivers who finish from first to 43rd place. Bonus points for the number of laps led will not be used.

Each week, the prognosticators will accumulate points and advance in the standings until the final race Nov. 22 at Homestead-Miami when a Benning Challenge points leader will be crowned.

Although we will only have eight competitors who will pick the drivers each week in The Bayonet, we encourage readers to participate.

Get involved. Keep your own scorecard at home and let us know how you are doing from time to time. Feel free to send us your comments, but remember, it is all in good fun and in the spirit of good, clean competition.

Can you beat our weekly prognosticators to the finish line? NASCAR fans — start your engines.

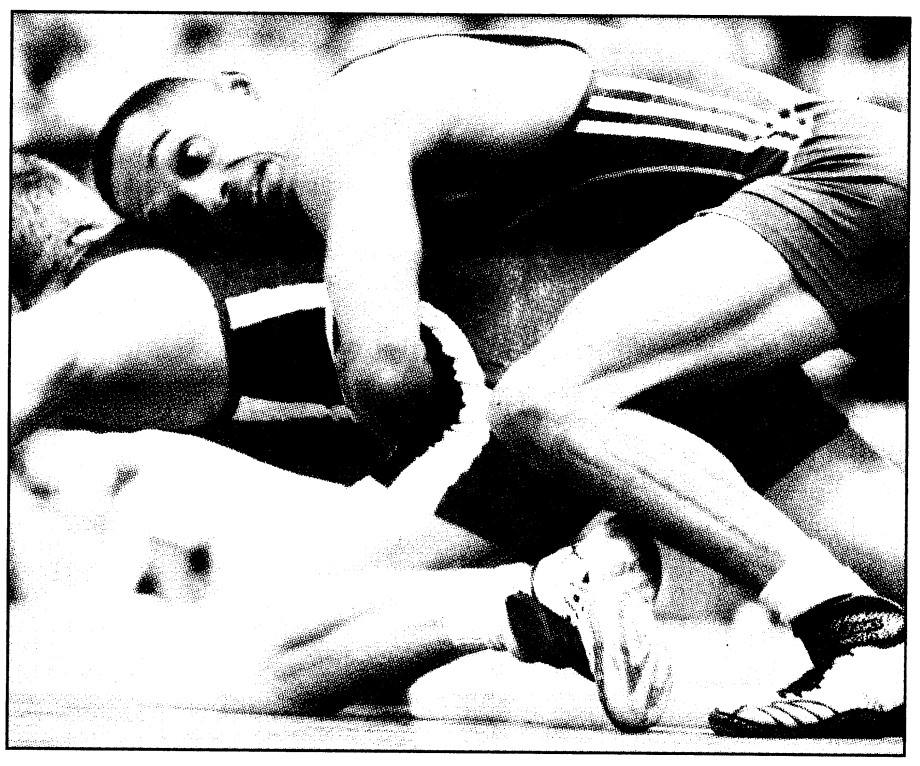
Nationals: Wrestlers win ninth title career because I was almost losing faith in myself. With this win, and with the coaches behind me, it's pushing me on," said Hodge, 27, a native of Hillsborough, N.C.

Sahin, a two-time Turkish national champion, prevailed 2-0, 1-0 over Gator Wrestling Club's Mark Rial, the 2008 U.S. national champ, to capture the 145.5-pound division. Sahin said leaving his newborn son was the toughest part of the week.

"The last 10 days, I've been changing the diapers and taking care of my son, so I brought one of his socks and put it inside my singlet," said Sahin, 33, a native of Ankara, Turkey. "I miss him a lot, but I told him not to worry because I was going to make him the son of a champion. I'm just so happy to be following my dream of making the world team and going to the world championships to win the world."



Ahearn, 27, of Orange Park, Fla., won his second consecutive national championship with a 2-0, 1-0 victory over Sunkist Kids' R.C. Johnson in the 211.5-pound division. In 2008, Ahearn won at 185 pounds.

"That's his second championship in a row. He's our one guy nobody is going to out-tough. His fight is always going to be there," Lewis said.

Byers, 34, of Kings Mountain, N.C., won his eighth national championship with a convincing, 5-0, 1-0 victory over New York Athletic Club's Brandon Rupp in the 264.5-pound weight class.

"I just wanted to use these extra lungs I've got now," Byers said. "I've been training a lot of cardio, keeping myself up and being more active on my feet, and I think it showed today, so I'm real happy about that."

Sieracki, 34, of Richland Center, Wis., finished second in the 185-pound division after losing 1-0, 3-0 in the finals to 2008 Olympian T.C. Dantzler of New York Athletic Club.

U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program wrestler Spc. Jermaine Hodge grapples to a 1-0, 0-3, 4-4 victory over Sunkist Kids' Sam Hazewinkel in the Greco-Roman 121-pound final of the 2009 U.S. National Wrestling Championships April 10 at the Las Vegas Convention Center.

"Even though he came up a little short and ended up with the silver, I thought he wrestled a good match," Lewis said. "I think he's going to use this loss as a motivator and he's going to train harder, train smarter, and really prepare himself to do the extra things he needs to be victorious. When Aaron walked off the mat, he said, 'I'll never lose to him again,' and that makes me feel good."

Also advancing to the U.S. World Team Trials were SSG Oscar Wood, a 2004 Olympian, finishing third at 145.5 pounds, PFC Nathan Piasecki, third place in the 132-pound weight class, SPC Justin Millard, a former All-Air Force wrestler, third place in the 211.5-pound division, SGT Peter Hicks, who also left the Air Force to join the All-Army squad, seventh place at 185 pounds, SSG Deon Hicks, fifth place at 211.5 pounds, PFC Jeremiah Davis and SPC Marco Lara, fifth and sixth respectively at 132 pounds, SGT Jess Hargrave, fourth at 163 pounds and SPC Timothy Taylor, sixth in the heavyweight division. In women's freestyle, 2005 world champion SGT Iris Smith finished third in the 158.5-pound class.

The Soldiers who competed in Las Vegas are stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., home of the U.S. Army World Class Athlete Program and All-Army Wrestling Team. The champions in each weight class earned No. 1 seeds for the U.S. World Team Trials, set for May 30-31 in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Lions host military appreciation night

Drill Sergeants of the Year recognized

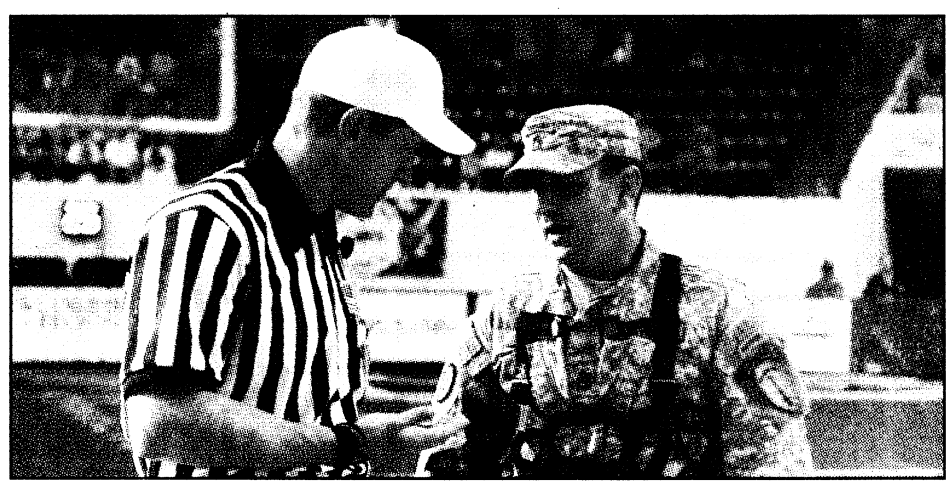
Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The crowd cheered as Rangers from the 4th Ranger Training Battalion rappelled onto the Lions' field from beams Saturday in the Columbus Civic Center and delivered a coin to the referee for the coin toss. The delivery kicked off military appreciation night, where 3,200 basic trainees were treated to the football game.

Among the festivities was a performance by the U.S. Army Infantry Center band, the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation color guard and Chattahoochee Valley Community College band. Fort Benning Drill Sergeant of the Year, SSG Michael Johnston, 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, and 192nd Infantry Brigade's Drill Sergeant of the Year, SSG John Laughter, 3rd Bn, 47th Inf. Regt., were recognized prior to the opening coin toss.

Lion Ryan Babb gave the invocation thanking the troops and praying for their safety.

PFC Bryant Marshall, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., said he appreciated the round of applause from the crowd.



"I know what we are doing is for a good cause and it's really good to know people support us," said the Soldier, 2nd Bn., 54th Inf. Regt., who is slated to graduate May 22.

"It feels good to get away from post for a little while — it's a good stress reliever," said PFC Tim Heiner, 2nd Bn., 58th Inf. Regt., who is in his third week of basic training.

And to top off the Soldiers' night out, the Lions crushed D.C. Armor with a 76-6 win.

All Army: Team to play Air Force Thursday on post

The scrimmage game is a coach's tool to evaluate the players, Smith said.

"It's all about chemistry on the court — you can have the five most talented guys ever but that doesn't mean they'll make a good team," Smith said.

Smith said he is looking for players that have diverse skills, who can adapt to any position — whether it's rebounding, playing defense, handling the ball or shooting the ball. And it's not just about individual skills. It's about how the players work with others on a team.

Smith was surprised at his team's skill so early in the camp, he said.

"We controlled the ball and we didn't make a lot of turnovers. I was pleased with that," he said.

The team left Tuesday for Fort Lee, Va., and Fort Bragg, N.C., to compete in games but will return to Fort Benning for a scrimmage game against the Air Force Thursday at Smith Fitness Center. The game starts at 7 p.m.

Hester: Wants players to have 'passion' for game daughter began playing baseball four years ago and the team needed a head coach. And now, his 11-year-old son, Joseph, is on his team.

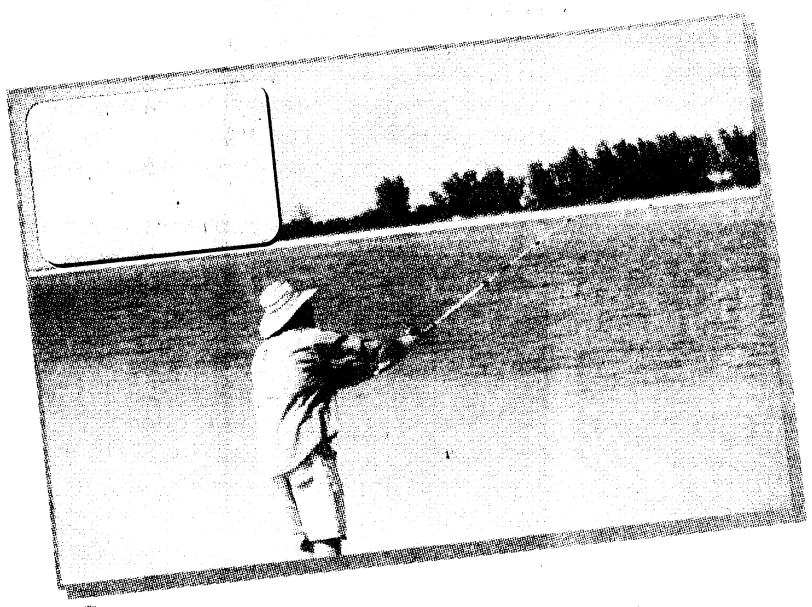
He isn't the first generation in his family that has coached baseball. He is following in his dad's footsteps.



"My dad always said 'okay, this is my last year' and he would be back the next year coaching. He really loved it — he coached for 25 years," he said.

Hester said he enjoys coaching and if coaches are needed next year he'll be there.

By the end of the season, Hester said as long as the children walk away with a passion for the game, learn the fundamentals and want to come and play again, he is satisfied.

Team USAIC remains unbeaten

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Team USAIC continued their dominance in the post intramural league defeating the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion in two straight games Tuesday at the Smith Fitness Center. Team USAIC, champions of the preseason Commander's Cup intramural volleyball tournament, remains undefeated.

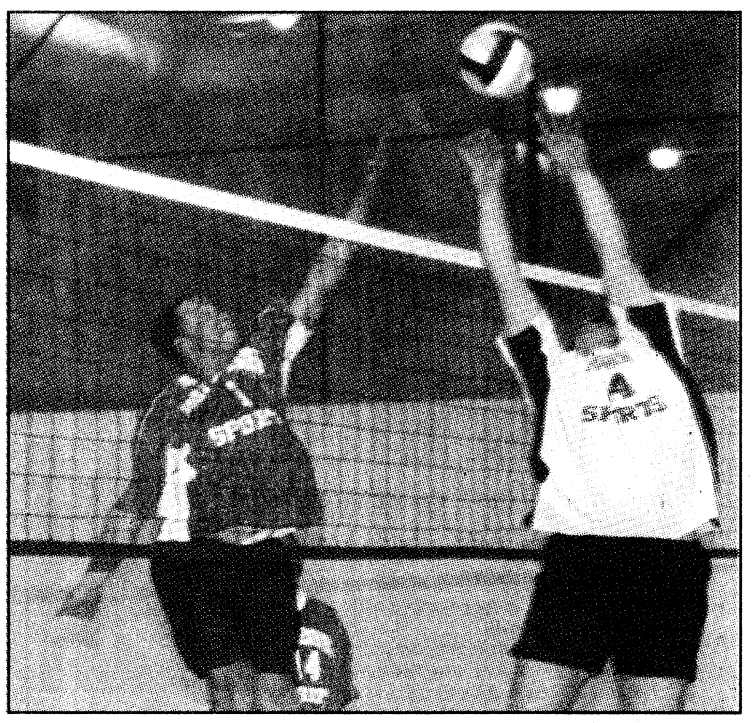
Team USAIC won the first game of a best two-out-of-three match, 25-13.

"Between games, we talked about how the other team played and how we could use it to our advantage," said Team USAIC coach Corey Shaffer.

In game two, Team USAIC scored eight points before 203rd BSB scored their first point. Although the 203rd BSB got to within two points of Team USAIC several times, they were unable to take control of the game due to hits out of bounds and failed serves.

The 203rd BSB battled back late in the game to 17-13 and prevented Team USAIC from taking a quick victory, but ultimately fell 25-19. With the victory, Team USAIC added to their perfect season record.

"We were able to take advantage of their errors," Shaffer said. "They didn't capitalize on attacks at the net and because of it we were able to shut down a lot of their attacks."



Team USAIC player, Rheanna Felton, said her team worked well together.

"We have had a consistently strong team and some hard hitters," she said. "And, we are able to communicate with one another — that's No. 1 in volleyball."

203rd BSB coach, Jonel Badiola, has learned from the games against Team USAIC, he said.

"We weren't consistent — everyone was all over the place," he said. "We have to work hard and make sure everyone knows their roles."

203rd BSB will take on the Regimental Special Troops Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, at 6 p.m. Monday. Team USAIC will face the CONUS Replacement Center at 8 p.m. Monday. Both games are at Smith Fitness Center.

Members of the Fort Benning community will need to adjust their recycling habits.

Beginning May 1, Fort Benning recycling facilities will no longer accept glass and tin cans.

The change is because of construction at Harmony Church in preparation for the U.S. Army Armor School's relocation here. A new access control point will be built on 1st Division Road and new access lanes from Highway 280 to Old Cusseta Road will go through property currently used by the Material Recovery Facility. The outdoor bins for glass and tin cans are being removed to allow turning space for tractor trailers to access the loading dock.

The area near the Material Recovery Facility was chosen as the site for the new ACP based on recommendations by the Georgia Department of Transportation, said Jay Brown, Fort Benning Base Relocation and Closure manager.

"The area is centrally located and very

Gold Star Wives offers 'sisterly' help

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

"We're sisters, that's all there is to it," said Sandra Robertson, a 40-year member of Gold Star Wives.

Robertson voiced a common sentiment among members of the Gold Star Wives, a nonprofit organization that provides support for widows and widowers of service members who died while on active duty or from service-related disabilities.

For Robertson and her "sisters," Gold Star Wives is much more than just a club — it's a family. And when more than 70 Gold Star Wives and guests gathered at the Holiday Inn North in Columbus April 17-19 for the 61st annual Gold Star Wives Southeast Region Conference, many of the women said the weekend was like a family reunion.

"There's a camaraderie that doesn't exist in most any other club," said Wanda Funderburk, a member of the Chattahoochee Valley chapter, which hosted the event.

In addition to providing numerous socializing opportunities, the conference included administrative meetings, guest speakers — and an appearance by the Patriot Guard Riders, an organization of motorcycle riders who honor fallen service members.

"At Fort Benning, the Gold Star Wives are our heroes, too," said COL Frederick Wolf, Fort Benning deputy garrison commander for transformation, who spoke to the Gold Star Wives about construction and changes to Fort Benning facilities. "They're part of our Fort Benning family, and they're a great resource for military families who have also (lost a loved one)."

That shared loss is what makes the Gold Star Wives such a tightly knit organization, Robertson said.

"When you lose someone, all of a sudden, you don't fit in anywhere," she said.

Tillinghurst offers free ESL classes

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

When Daniela Cook moved from Germany to America 22 years ago as the wife of a Soldier, she knew little English.

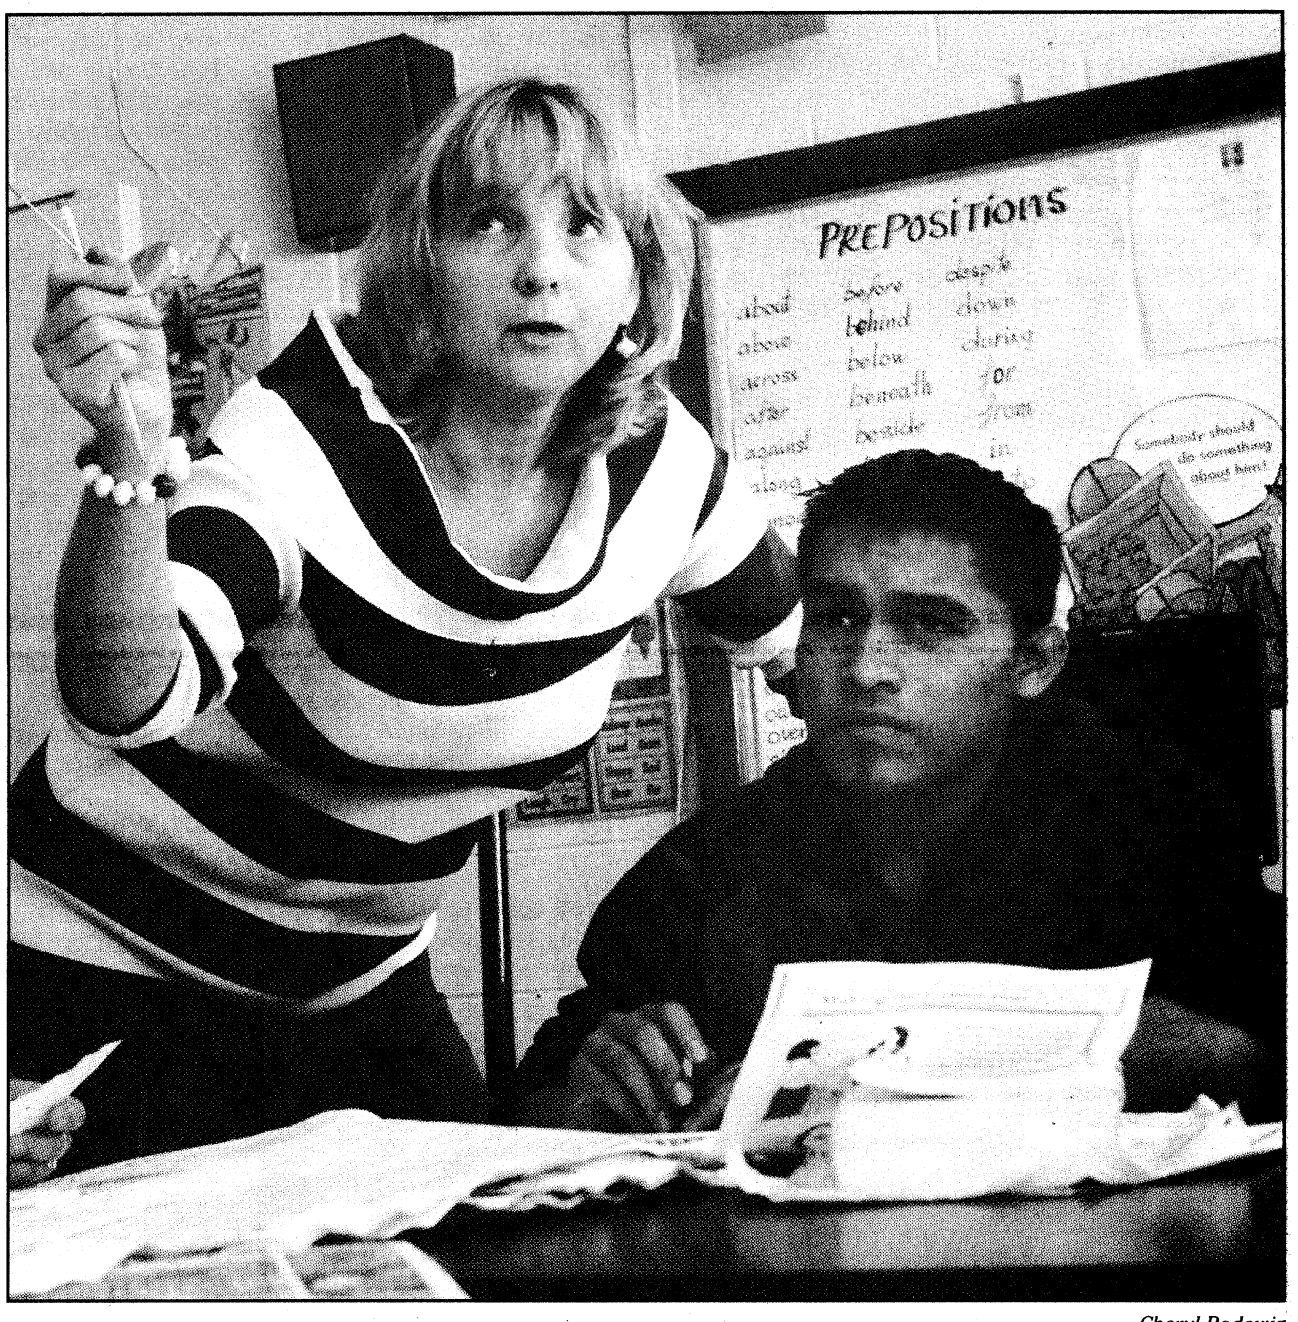
Even the English she studied in school was different from actually living in the country, said Cook, who teaches English as a second language at the Tillinghurst Adult Education Center, a program of Muscogee County Schools, in Columbus.

"Twenty-two years ago, I was thrown into this culture," she said. "I was faced with many challenges — homesickness, learning about Army life, driving in the U.S., cooking my country's food with a different measuring system … life skills that so many people would take for granted. Most of all, I was lacking the self-confidence."

José Medina, who has studied ESL at Tillinghurst for a year, remembers how difficult it was for him before he started learning English. After working with Cook in her intermediate class, his writing and speaking skills have improved, he said.

"When you come here and you don't speak English, you feel lost," said Medina, who moved here from Mexico. "But now, you can speak, you can go anywhere and speak this language. I feel great."

That's why Cook focuses on helping her students become more independent. It's not just ESL; it's more, she said.



"Of course, we teach reading, writing, conversation, pronunciation, but equally the life skills: making an exchange, comparing prices, the dangers of credit, interviewing skills, e-mail — things we need in daily life without the help of someone else," she said. "We try to give them as much knowledge (as possible), not just English as a second language. I think the biggest message is thinking outside the classroom."

At Tillinghurst, training includes field trips, volunteering and CPR and nutrition classes, allowing students to make broader connections with the community while improving their fluency. Classes are free and open to adults of all skill levels.

The subjects taught in class are practical, said Adriana Peerdomo, wife of a WHINSEC instructor who attends Cook's evening class. The couple arrived at Fort Benning from Columbia five months ago.

"For example, write a check, give directions, practice an interview — it is useful," she said. "In my case,

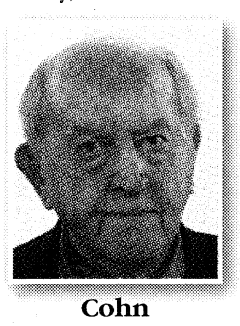
Fort Benning remembers the Holocaust

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning paid tribute to survivors and victims of the Holocaust during the Days of Remembrance Commemorative Service Monday at the Benning Conference Center. The theme for the commemoration, "Never again: what you do matters," focused on the importance of remembering the horrors of the Holocaust to prevent them from being perpetrated against humanity a second time.



"By remembering, we won't let anything like this happen again," said Ana Brewington, an interpreter with WHINSEC, who attended the ceremony.

When Brewington discovered as a child the reality of the Holocaust and her family's own loss, she was shocked, she said.

Her aunt, uncle and two cousins, all of the Jewish faith, were supposed to travel from Europe to Argentina to join the rest of family, but no one ever saw them.

"Their belongings arrived, but they never did," Brewington said. "After the war, my family went through the Red Cross — all the possible places — but they could never discover what happened to them. The most probable thing that happened is that they were in the port and the SS was there and they were rounded up and sent to a concentration camp."

"We should never forget history," she said. "Some people think because we live in a very successful, democratic country, we are spared from these things happening, but Germany was one of the most educated countries in Europe. If it could happen in educated Germany, it could happen again anywhere."

Cohn

During the ceremony, Juvenile Court Judge Aaron Cohn, a Columbus native, shared his memories of liberating a camp in Ebensee, Austria, when he served with the 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment during World War II.

"I give you my personal experience so that you receive this firsthand and not from a secondary report," said the 92-year-old veteran, keynote speaker for the event. "What was the camp like? I shall tell you this. Unless you saw it, smelled the death, saw the cadavers, starved skeletons, it was almost inconceivable for any person to believe that man could be so inhumane and monstrous.

"The Holocaust was a lesson to the whole world. We learned what happens when humanity allows a tyrant to have his way and slaughter millions of people."

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Every day is Earth Day at Defense commissaries

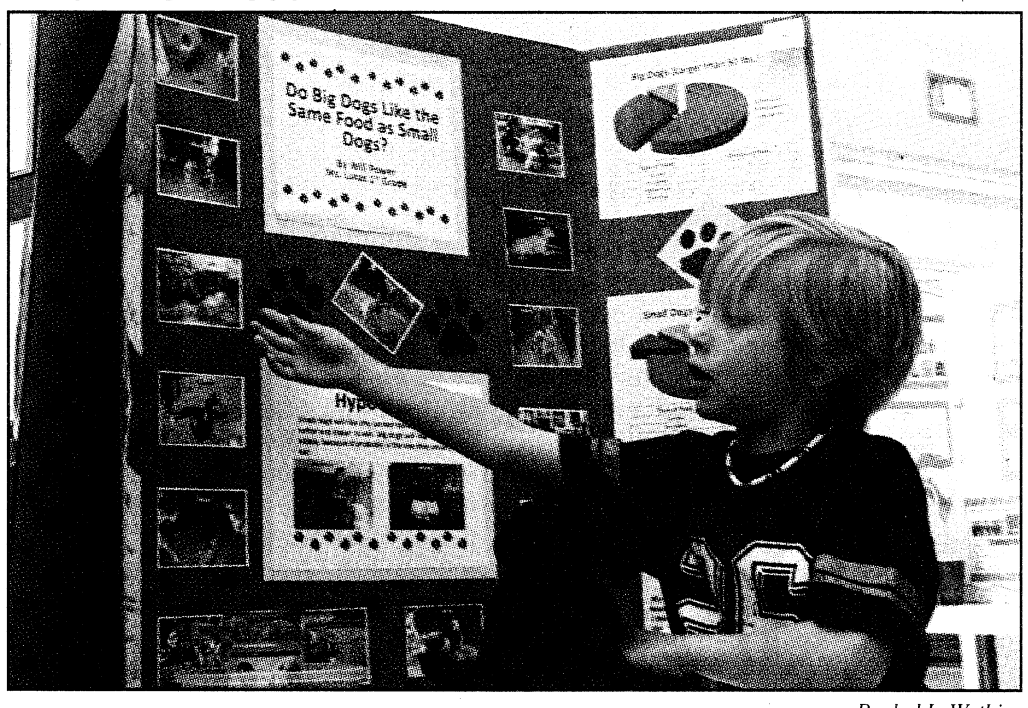
Kevin L. Robinson
DEFENSE COMMISSARY AGENCY

FORT LEE, Va. — Every day is Earth Day as far as the Defense Commissary Agency is concerned. The annual celebration of the environment has become part of a growing campaign to make the commissary benefit "greener."

"Our goal every day is to deliver a commissary benefit that does not negatively impact the environment," said Philip E. Sakowitz Jr., DeCA director and CEO. "Earth Day helps us focus more attention on preserving and protecting Mother Earth, not just for ourselves or our customers, but for the generations that follow."

Earth Day, celebrated Wednesday, is a national observance established in 1970 to make people more aware of the environment. As part of this observance, DeCA is promoting a number of "green-theme" products through Wednesday to support protecting the Earth's natural resources.

Customers can expect to see extra savings on items such as laundry and dish detergents, diapers, organic products, paper products such as toilet tissue and paper towels made from recycled paper, and packaging that uses less resources and breaks down more naturally.



"We have definitely increased the number of green-theme items to mirror a growing consumer demand," said Charlie Dowlen, promotions manager for the DeCA sales directorate. "Consumers today are receiving a tremendous amount of information about the importance of taking care of Mother Earth and reducing waste and contaminants. They want to do their part to protect our environment by purchasing eco-friendly items."

Indeed, commissary customers have shown that going green isn't limited to Earth Day. Energy-saving compact fluorescent bulbs or CFLs — the swirl-shaped bulbs — flew off the shelves in fiscal 2008, eclipsing by 25 percent the agency's goal to sell 1 million. Since January, weekly CFL bulb sales have averaged 100,000 items, and customers purchased more than 2 million reusable shopping bags in fiscal 2008.

More green cleaning products are now available at stores worldwide. These items include concentrated floor and surface cleaners and laundry products that don't require as much water as other versions.

"DeCA acknowledges the importance of the environment to our local and global communities — not just on Earth Day but every day," said E. Carroll Shepherd III, DeCA's energy and environmental manager. "From the water we use to the energy that powers our stores, DeCA strives to conserve and protect the environment while balancing these efforts with sound business practices."

White Elementary School first-grader Will Power gestures to his science project as he shows it to classmates Tuesday. Power's project was one of 75 science projects on display at the school this week. His project was titled, "Do Big Dogs Like the Same Food as Small Dogs?" After feeding both canned and dried food to 29 dogs, Power said he discovered that no matter what size dog, all dogs prefer canned food instead of dried food. The stuffed animal in the photo is Maddie, named after Power's dog. "This project was fun and I made a lot of new friends — I met 25 dogs for the first time," he said.

Sisters: Continue giving back to tricommunity

"Only another Gold Star Wife is going to understand what you're going through."

Robertson, like many members of Gold Star Wives, was inspired to join the organization after meeting other members.

"I felt like – this club is where I fit in and where I could do something with my time," she said.

One of Gold Star Wives' goals is to contribute to the community through volunteer and service projects. In Columbus, one of its most visible projects is sponsoring rows of flags along Victory Drive each year on Veterans Day.

Leta McNair, president of the Chattahoochee Valley chapter, has been involved in the flag project since she joined Gold Star Wives in 1969.

"My little boy, who's now 40 years old, remembers walking behind me on the median putting in the flags," she said.

The club is also active in public life at the national level, lobbying Congress to improve benefits and programs for service widows and widowers.

Rachel Clinksale, government relations chair for the Birmingham, Ala., chapter, is working with other Gold Star Wives to pass a bill to increase the amount of benefits widows and widowers receive each year. Clinksale's work has a direct impact on fellow Gold Star Wives like Funderburk, who said she relies on the monthly check she receives from Veterans Affairs.

"For so many of us, that check is a lifesaver," she said.

Because Gold Star Wives is a nonprofit organization, it depends mainly on donations to fund its projects, especially its legislative work.

"We may not have a lot of money, but we do have spunk," McNair said.

Although Gold Star Wives has been active in the tricommunity since the late 1960s, many people are unfamiliar with the organization and its projects, which may be partly because people do not understand the meaning behind Gold Star Wives' name, McNair said.

During WWII, families hung blue stars in their windows to represent loved ones serving in the military. When a family member was killed, the blue star was replaced with a gold one. When Gold Star Wives was founded in 1945, the star imagery was still fresh in Americans' minds.

Though Gold Star Wives has not yet been embraced by many widows of the Global War on Terrorism, McNair encourages them to join.

"It's important for our young widows that we carry on the tradition of Gold Star Wives," she said. "We know how to soldier on. Whatever gets in the way, we will find a solution."

Recycling: Post to stop collection of glass and tin level, and will require the least amount of improvement of all the sites we looked at," he said.

Though no timeframe has been set, plans are in the works to eventually move the entire Material Recovery Facility to a location north of the Highway 27 ACP, across from the Natural Resources and Land Management Branches, Brown said.

During construction, the Material Recovery Facility will continue to accept paper, cardboard, plastic, newspaper and aluminum, said Dorinda Morpeth, solid waste and recycling program manager for the Directorate of Public Works.

Caroline.Gotler@thebayonet.com

Where to recycle:

Recycling trailers on post are located at:

- Soldiers' Plaza next to the used car lot
- Behind Building 8 on Indianhead Road
- At the Vehicle Registration Office at the corner of Lumpkin Street and Custer Road
- Next to Gowdy Field
- Two trailers are located in the parking lot of the old museum at 1st Division Road and Rainbow Avenue

The Goodwill Recycling Center, at 515 10th Avenue, accepts glass, tin, paper, cardboard, aluminum and No. 1 and No. 2 type plastic products. It is open for public drop off 24 hours a day, seven days a week. For more information, call 706-256-2788.

Recycling tips:

The Fort Benning Material Recovery Facility does not shred documents.

Remove lids of plastic containers before placing them in recycling bins. This reduces risk of explosion and injury to staff during processing.

Wash out all containers before recycling them to reduce bacteria and insect infestation.

No trash should be placed in cardboard recycling bins.

Fort Benning does not recycle plastic bags or Styrofoam.

ESL: More than English language, teaches life skills and I think in other wives' cases, it's a good opportunity. This is important. When I return to my country, I need to speak English for my job, for my children, too, and for my life. The class helps me. When I watch TV, when I read a book, when I speak with other people, I understand better."

Based on their level of fluency, students can choose from three classes. After two years in the U.S., Pongsai Corn, a native of Thailand, is now in the advanced class at Tillinghurst.

"The class helped a lot," she said. "It made me a new life because I can understand English. They speak and I know what they say to me, and I can answer. I feel comfortable."

That's just the change Cook enjoys seeing in her students.

"I don't think there are many jobs where you get such a quick return on what you put in as a teacher," she said. "When you see what a difference you've made, it is so rewarding — from the 'I can't do it' to 'I'll give it a try.' Some people want to go back home when they first come here. I hope, some day, that students will say, 'I will never forget my teacher who made such a difference in my life. That's the reason why I didn't go back to my country. That's the reason I really embraced America."

ESL classes are scheduled during both mornings and evenings. The program is also piloting two new classes: U.S. citizenship and professional business writing.

For more information, call Tillinghurst at 706-683-8741 ext. 116, e-mail dmcook@mcsdga.net or visit www.mcsdga.net/schools/centers/tillinghurst.htm.

Holocaust: 'Diversity source of America's strength' discrimination is what America must stand against, Cohn said.

Hitler thought it would be easy to overcome U.S. forces because they were from a "mongrel nation," Cohn said, but diversity is the source of America's strength.

"What makes this country and its military might great is that we have different ethnic groups, different religious groups, but we're all Americans and we all have one common goal," he said.

"This democracy is like a fine fabric, interwoven with all faiths, races and people, each contributing to the good and welfare of our beloved country. When we allow any group to be persecuted, to be discriminated against, we allow the fabric of democracy to be torn and eventually destroyed."

Strong leadership requires genuine, caring attitude

Chaplain (LTC) Lyn Stike
USAIC CHAPLAINS OFFICE

In 1885, cousins Edwin Binney and C. Harold Smith began the partnership of Binney & Smith to sell carbon black and other pigments used in various industries. Alice Binney, wife of Edwin and a former schoolteacher, coined the name Crayola. She combined the words craie, which is French for chalk, and ola, for oleaginous, because crayons are made from petroleum based paraffin. In the last 98 years, more than 100 billion Crayola crayons have been made. Crayola crayons currently come in 120 colors including 23 reds, 20 greens, 10 blues, 16 purples, 14 oranges, 11 browns, eight yellows, two grays, two coppers, two blacks, one white, one gold and one silver.

According to a report by the Christian Science Monitor, parents buy enough crayons in a year to make a giant crayon 35 feet in diameter and 100 feet taller than the Statue of Liberty. Kids, ages 2-8, spend an average of 28 minutes each day coloring. Combined, children in the U.S. spend 6.3 billion hours coloring annually, almost 10,000 human lifetimes.

The joy of coloring is found in the freedom to paint sunsets, cartoon characters and other images at your own discretion. There are no limits; the sun can be fuzzy-wuzzy brown; the sky periwinkle and lemon yellow.

Soldiers speak with a pallet of colors. They are notorious for complaining and murmuration. The Fort Benning community is no different. Each of us characterizes the level of concern within our command and articulates it through various techniques. Many see those in charge as caring and thoughtful regarding Soldiers and their families. They paint with warm, bright and embracing tones. Others perceive leadership as coldhearted, indifferent and thoughtless. They color superiors and fellow warriors in arctic, harsh and dispassionate shades. What does genuine caring look like? What colors would we use to portray the morale and attitude of our command?

Caring is a verb that demands action. If leadership is going to demonstrate sincere concern for Soldiers and family members, it must be seen in their deeds. Words are powerful and can move one to tears or laughter; however, they become impotent when not followed by acts of kindness and concern.

Developmental events present an opportunity for all levels of command to express authentic care. Whether it's the birth of a child, a marriage or a graduation, one can reach out to Soldiers and share in these milestones. Investing in the lives of our subordinates is part of the mission. Neglect these landmarks and you'll render your leadership impoverished.

Exigency touches each of our lives. Death, sickness and interpersonal conflict interrupt our daily activities. When these deeply painful and stressful crises intrude into our orderly lives, the support and encouragement from those around us enables a wounded spirit to heal and escape the emotional fog. With the aid of others we are able to refocus and resume our mission. Leadership's failure to respond to these interruptions in a timely and genuine manner destroys the effectiveness and morale of Soldiers and their families.

The Fort Benning community can be painted as caring when we reach out with sincere acts of kindness and support. We must be intentional and responsive to both the developmental and crisis events that overwhelm our warriors. Caring begins with each of us and compels us to ask: Who are we caring for today and what acts of concern have we performed?

Before we paint the command with tumbleweed, midnight blue or timberwolf, may we look within ourselves and seek the tickle me pink, razzmatazz, and robin's egg blue crayons to express our caring attitude. A caring point of view will change the way we see command, enriching our service to our nation.

God offers hope through prayer for victims of abuse

Chaplain (MAJ) Jeff Dillard
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

I meet with hurting people every day, but it still pains me to be with them. And I believe that is how it should be. I define abuse as any time a perpetrator forces something emotional, physical, or sexual on the victim in order to satisfy themselves. God created us to love and be loved, not to control or be controlled.

As many as 40 percent of women are sexually abused before the age of 18. Men are also victimized, but are far more reluctant to report it. Cases of child abuse have increased more than 100 percent since 1986, and these children are more likely to have low self-esteem, be overly compliant or overly rebellious, withdraw, have anxiety disorders, practice secretive behavior, and be depressed.

Although abuse damages and distorts healthy development regardless of when it occurs, I believe that life in Jesus Christ offers real peace and power for all of your tomorrows. Because we are created in the image of God, abuse damages or distorts our ability to live in his image in three key areas: voice, relationships and power.

Consider the power of voice. In Genesis, God spoke the world into being. At least two of the 10 commandments directly address speaking, and John the Baptist introduced Jesus as "the word." Victims of abuse, however, have been told to silence their voice. They often feel ashamed or hopeless to speak out, fearing the abuser's threats.

God's image is also a relationship. The Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit are three persons in one God and have always enjoyed a perfect relationship. This is why Genesis 2:18 describes the only thing about God's creation that is "not good" is that Adam is alone. Marriage, parenthood, work, even recreation is to be lived in relationship. But abuse pollutes victims' relationships with fear, depression, loneliness and even self-hatred.

It's important for victims of abuse to know that Genesis 1:26-31 reminds us that God created us to be like him in "power" to subdue the world — but not as control freaks or dictators. On the contrary, God uses his strength to bless others and enjoy relationships. Victims of abuse, however, often feel they are worthless or become control freaks to stave off any future hurt. Both are starving for genuine trust and intimacy.

So where is the hope? Because Jesus is God's son, he is willing and able to bring life to each of these hurts. In Matthew 11:28-30, Jesus offers us hope in him right now. Listen to God's voice in the Bible. You might consider voicing your abuse in a private journal, working toward telling your story to a trustworthy person who will encourage your God-given identity and security in Jesus. Choose the person carefully and open up only as they prove themselves and as you feel safe. As you share your story, they can provide you with objectivity. As they treat you with respect, you will see the truths of God's word — your voice is important and you have something important to say. You will begin to experience a healthy relationship as God intended — acceptance, truth, and even forgiveness for ways that you may be mistreating others now. As you put your past into perspective and learn what it means to be in healthy relationships, you will begin to feel the freedom and desire to exercise proper power to positively influence others and begin to live out God's image more fully in your daily life.

I pray that God will bless you or your loved one's journey toward healing. If you're the victim of past abuse or are in an abusive relationship now, I encourage you to seek out help. The Chaplain Family Life Center in Soldiers' Plaza, Building 2606, serves children and adults, Soldiers and family members suffering from all types of abuse — past and present.

If you have no religious interest and do not want to discuss spiritual matters, we will respect your decision. You can reach us at 706-545-1760.

R&R

Grips and Grins D4

Egged on by their captain, pirates struggle to prove their strength in the Swashbuckling Sword Fight Show performed on Halfwit Harbour Stage.

Connie Wetherington, a hair stylist at Rapunzel's Hair Braiding, weaves the locks of Rhonni DuBose, wife of 1SG(R) Rusty DuBose, into an intricate five-strand junction. The hair braiding salon is always their first stop when the couple visits the Renaissance fair, Rusty said.

Knights show their skill in the final jousting performance of the day, the "joust to the death."

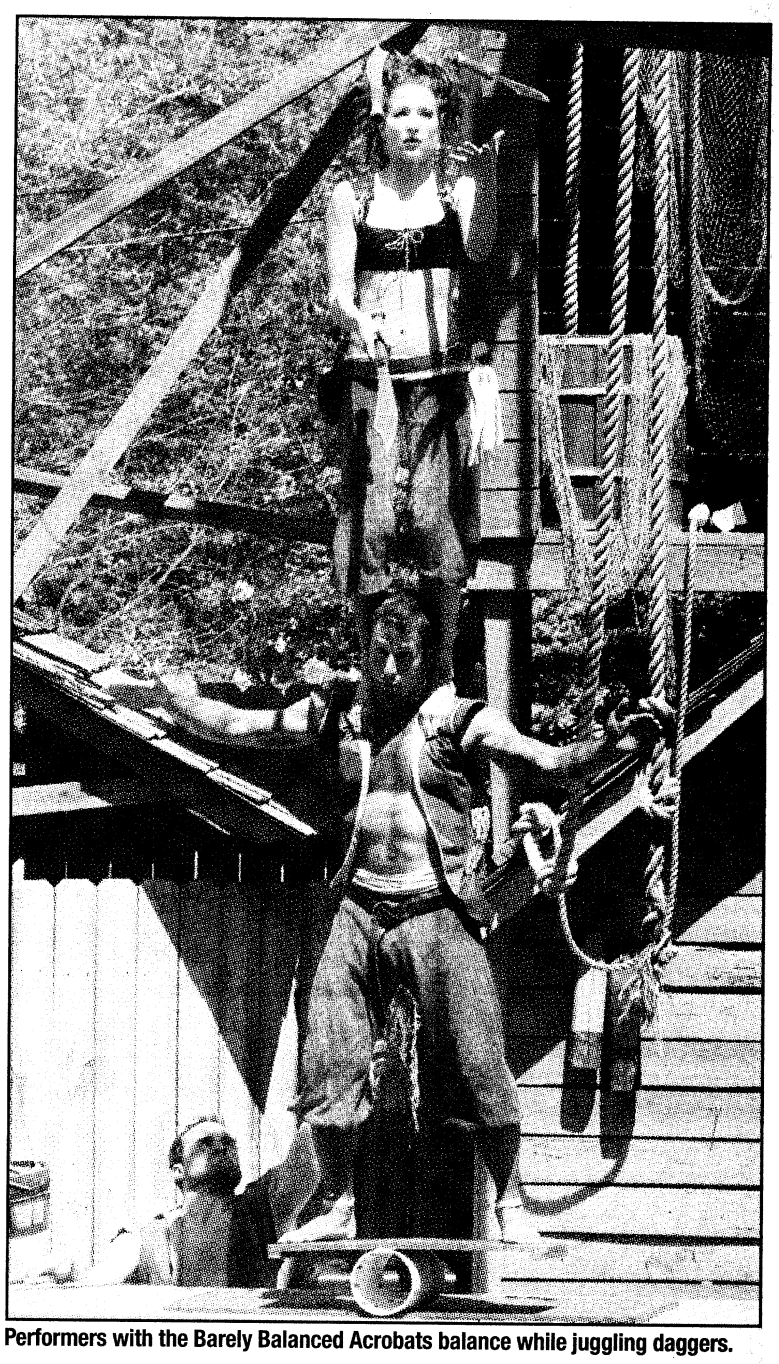
Have jolly good time at ye olde RenFest

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Think retro … way retro. Instead of disco, jazz and 80s rock, tune in to harps, lutes and Celtic guitars. In lieu of poodle skirts and bellbottoms, try on doublets, pinafores, maybe even elf ears and fairy wings. You'll fit right in at the Georgia Renaissance Festival, about an hour and a half drive from Fort Benning.

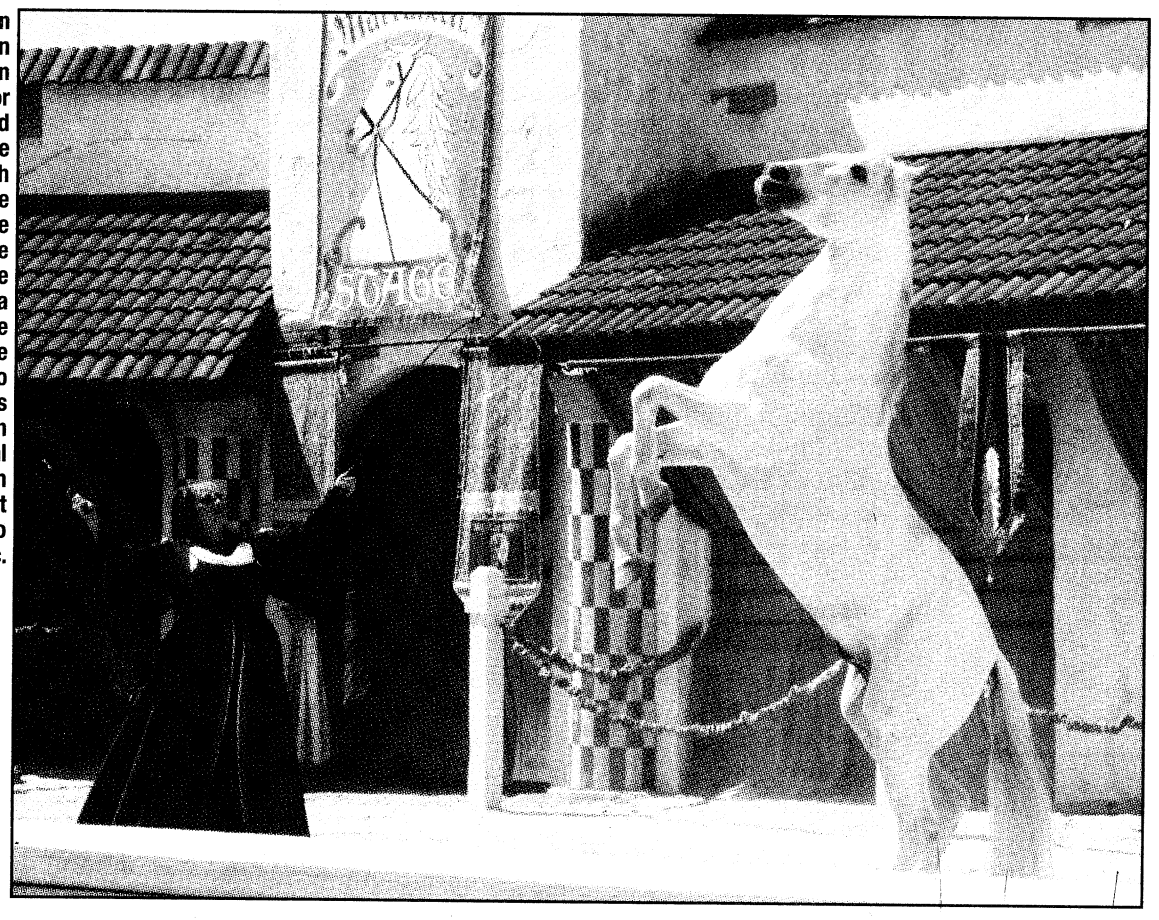
More than just turkey legs and swordfights, this festival is a chance to travel back in time to medieval Europe. Here, you can meet pirates, minstrels, nobility and magicians. Learn how to shoot with a bow and arrow, juggle like a pro or "drench a wench." Watch skilled artisans demonstrate their crafts, including glass blowing, perfume making, sculpting and more. It's all the fun of the Middle Ages without the worries of plague or feudalism.

Through June 7, you can shop, dine and revel in 16th-century style. Kids will enjoy themed rides, a petting zoo, storytelling and face painting. Shoppers can explore 32 acres of vendors selling everything from leather goods and handmade pottery to period costumes and candles.



Most importantly, make sure you save plenty of time for a show. Acrobatics, comedy, Shakespearean theater and knife throwing — you'll see it all.

New this year, you can watch the Royal Lipizzan Stallions "dance" in time to music and listen to carillon music sounded on several tons of cast bronze bells. Other favorites return, such as the birds of prey show, jousting performances and feats of unicycling, fire breathing and stilt walking. Many of the shows involve impromptu audience participation, so get ready to volunteer or be volunteered, as the case may be.



If you work up an appetite during the festivities, an array of foods, including mainstays like funnel cake and ice cream, awaits you. Eat like a lord or lady with shepherd's pie, fish and chips, apple dumplings and bread pudding. Quench your thirst as you like, whether a quality ale or frozen lemonade.

The ever-popular turkey leg has its own weekend this Saturday and Sunday. Each person who buys a full-price adult ticket receives a free turkey leg. Check the Web site, www.garenfest.com, to learn more about themed weekends, discounts and all the on-site entertainers and vendors.

The festival, located in Fairburn, Ga., is open from 10:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. rain or shine. Parking is free. Tickets are $19.95 for adults, $17.95 for seniors, $8.95 for children and free for kids 5 years and younger. For more information or directions, visit the Web site or call 770-964-8575.

Performers with the Barely Balanced Acrobats balance while juggling daggers.

An Andalusian stallion performs for the crowd on the Marrakech Mews Stage in the Olde Towne area of the Georgia Renaissance Festival. The show also includes Arabian and Royal Lipizzan stallions that "danced" to music.

Two-year-old Gaby Bonventre offers a bite of smoked turkey leg to her sister, 1-year-old Vanessa. Dressed like fairies for the festival, the sisters enjoyed their meal in the "Olde Towne."

THE SOLOIST

Steve Lopez is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times whose life has reached a dead end. The newspaper business is in an uproar, his marriage has fallen apart and he can't remember why he ever loved his job in the first place.

When he meets Nathaniel Ayers, a homeless violinist, in the Skid Row section of Los Angeles, Lopez sees him as just another story idea. When Lopez learns how Ayers, a prodigy who was once headed for fame, wound up living on the street, he embarks on a quest to help him. But as he fights to change Ayers' life, Lopez realizes it is his own life that is being changed by their friendship.

The Soloist stars Jamie Foxx, Robert Downey Jr., and Catherine Keener. It is rated PG-13 for thematic elements, drug use and language.

FIGHTING

Shawn MacArthur is a small town boy who has come to New York with nothing. Barely earning a living selling counterfeit goods on the street, his luck changes after he meets scam artist Harvey Boarden, who sees MacArthur has a talent for fighting. When Boarden offers MacArthur a chance to make more money, the two form an uneasy partnership. With Boarden as his manager, MacArthur becomes a star fighting almost overnight. But if he can ever hope to escape the dark world in which he's found himself, MacArthur must face the toughest fight of his life.

Fighting stars Channing Tatum, Roger Guenveur Smith and Terrence Howard. It is rated PG-13 for fight sequences, sexuality and language.

OBSESSED

Derek Charles is a successful financial asset manager who has just received a huge promotion. He is happy in his career and in his marriage to his beautiful wife, Beth. But, when Lisa, a temp worker in his office, begins stalking Derek, everything he's worked so hard for is placed in jeopardy.

Obsessed stars Beyonce Knowles, Idris Elba and Ali Larter. It is rated PG-13 for sexual material including suggestive dialog, violence and thematic content.

EARTH

Earth is the story of three animal families and their amazing journeys across the planet. The film combines rare action, unimaginable scale and extreme locations by capturing the most intimate moments of our planet's wildest and most elusive creatures.

Earth is directed by Alastair Fothergill and narrated by James Earl Jones. It is rated G.

ALSO PLAYING

17 AGAIN

In 1989, Mike O'Donnell was a 17-year-old high school basketball star with a bright future and college sports scouts on his trail. But, he threw it away to share his life with his girlfriend Scarlett and the baby she was expecting.

Twenty years later, Mike's glory days are behind him. His marriage is falling apart, he was passed over for a promotion at work, and his teenage children think he's a loser. When Mike is miraculously transformed into a 17-year-old, he gets a chance to redo his high school years. But, in trying to recapture his best years, Mike could lose the best things that ever happened to him.

17 Again stars Zac Efron, Leslie Mann, Matthew Perry and Michelle Trachtenberg. It's rated PG-13 for language, sexual material and teen partying.

CRANK: HIGH VOLTAGE

When hit man Chev Chelios is kidnapped by a mysterious Chinese mobster, he wakes up three months later to discover his nearly indestructible heart has been replaced by a battery-operated one that requires regular jolts of electricity to work. After a dangerous escape from his captors, Chev is on the run, determined to get his real heart back and wreak vengeance on whoever stole it.

The movie stars Jason Statham, Amy Smart and Bai Ling. It's rated R for violence, sexual content, nudity and language.

STATE OF PLAY

Congressman Stephen Collins is a rising star in his political party until his research assistant, who is also his mistress, is murdered, releasing a flood of buried secrets. When reporter Cal McCaffrey and his partner Della are assigned to investigate the murder, they step into a cover-up that threatens the nation's power structures. As they try to uncover the killer's identity, they discover that when billions of dollars are at stake, no one's integrity, love or life is ever safe.

State of Play stars Russell Crowe, Rachel McAdams, Jason Bateman and Helen Mirren. It's rated PG-13 for violence, language, sexual references and drug content.

HANNAH MONTANA: THE MOVIE

Miley Stewart's alter-ego, Hannah Montana's popularity is taking over Miley's life. For the young pop star, events begin getting out of control. When Miley misses her brother's departure for college because she was fighting with model Tyra Banks during a shopping spree, Miley's father devises a plan to fly her back to her hometown of Crowley Corners, Tenn., so she can regain perspective on what matters most.

The movie stars Miley Cyrus, Billy Ray Cyrus, Emily Osment and Jason Earles. It's rated G.

DRAGONBALL EVOLUTION

Goku and a handful of friends battle for the Earth against the deadly forces of the Saiyans, who are carving a path of destruction as they sweep through the universe. Goku and his friends' best chance for survival is the Namekian DragonBalls, which give them the power to summon a mighty dragon.

The movie stars Chow Yun-Fat, Emmy Rossum and Justin Chatwin. It's rated PG for sequences of action and violence and language.

OBSERVE AND REPORT

Ronnie Barnhardt is head of security at Forest Ridge mall, but dreams of becoming a police officer. When a flasher strikes at the mall, Barnhardt's delusions of grandeur are put to the test as he tries to use the opportunity to win the heart of makeup counter employee Brandi and earn a spot at the police academy. But, his pursuit of glory launches a turf war with Detective Harrison of the Conway Police.

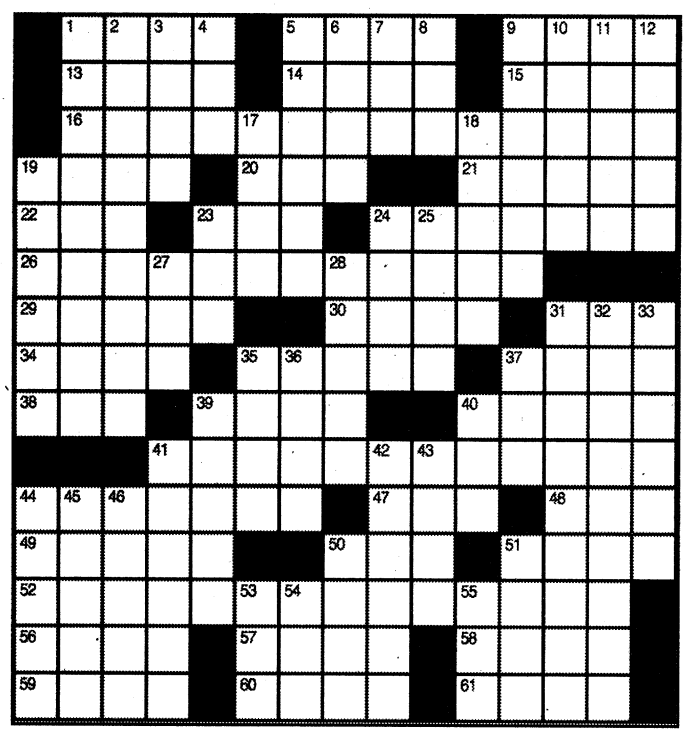
Now, Barnhardt not only needs to find the flasher, but also catch him before the real police do.

Observe and Report stars Seth Rogen, Anna Fairs, Michael Pena and Ray Liotta. It's rated R for language, nudity, drug use, sexual content and violence.

FAST AND FURIOUS

Fugitive ex-con Dom Toretto reignites his feud with Brian O'Connor when a crime brings them back to Los Angeles. But as they are forced to confront a shared enemy, Dom and Brian must learn to trust each other. Through an adventure with stunts like convoy heists and precision tunnel crawls across international lines, the two men find the best way to get revenge is by pushing the limits of what's possible behind the wheel.

Fast and Furious stars Paul Walker, Vin Diesel and Michelle Rodriguez. It's rated PG-13 for intense sequences of violence and action, sexual content, language and drug references.



ADVENTURELAND

It's 1987 and James Brennan has just graduated college. He planned to spend the summer trekking through Europe, but because of his family's sudden economic difficulties, he takes a job manning a game booth at Adventureland, an amusement park.

While James believes at first that the park is the bane of his existence, he realizes as the summer goes on that things at Adventureland are not always what they seem. Behind the cotton candy aroma, pathological customers and grating disco songs, he discovers a whole other world of misfit friends and hidden dreams. Falling for Em Lewin, a sharp-tongued arcade worker, James discovers the courage to battle for her heart.

Adventureland stars Jesse Eisenberg, Ryan Reynolds and Kristen Stewart. It's rated R for language, drug use and sexual references.

No cause for alarm with H1N1 flu

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

Though the H1N1 flu outbreak currently sweeping through Mexico and parts of the U.S. has brought influenza outbreaks to the forefront in the past week, Fort Benning's Preventive Medicine Office has been hard at work all season long to protect troops and their families before influenza viruses have a chance to take hold.

Soldiers are vaccinated early for the common flu season on Fort Benning, which limits flu cases on post, said MAJ Laura Pacha, chief of Preventive Medicine on Fort Benning.

"We are also seeing more family members being vaccinated each flu season as well," she said.

Pacha, who oversees a variety of specialties including disease surveillance, public health nursing and occupational health services, said caution and concern

Curator moves artifacts

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

With 48 days left until the opening of the National Infantry Museum, curator Mike Criscillis and his team are continuing to catalog, pack and identify items that will either be displayed or stored in their new location just outside the access control point on Fort Benning Boulevard.

Criscillis said the location of the new museum is a big advantage to patrons who want to learn about the Army's history, and with the current economy, is a great bargain.

People won't have to go through all the access control points in order to visit the museum, he said.

"I think the museum will enhance (visitors') awareness of the Army and Georgia. I think it is really going to help everyone even though we are living in hard economic times — and it's free. I just think it is great all around — it's really an exciting time for us."

With more than 1,800 artifacts already at the new museum, Criscillis said about 2,300 artifacts, about one-tenth of the museum's collection, would be on exhibit when the move is completed.

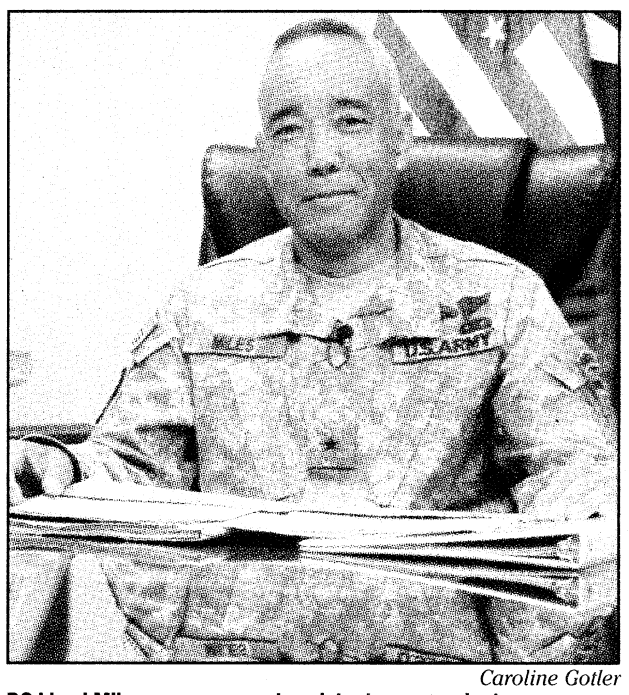
AC prepares to hand over responsibility

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

When asked who has inspired him during the nearly two years he has served as Fort Benning's assistant commandant, BG Lloyd "Milo" Miles doesn't point to examples of history book legends or decorated generals — he finds inspiration within the barracks of Sand Hill.

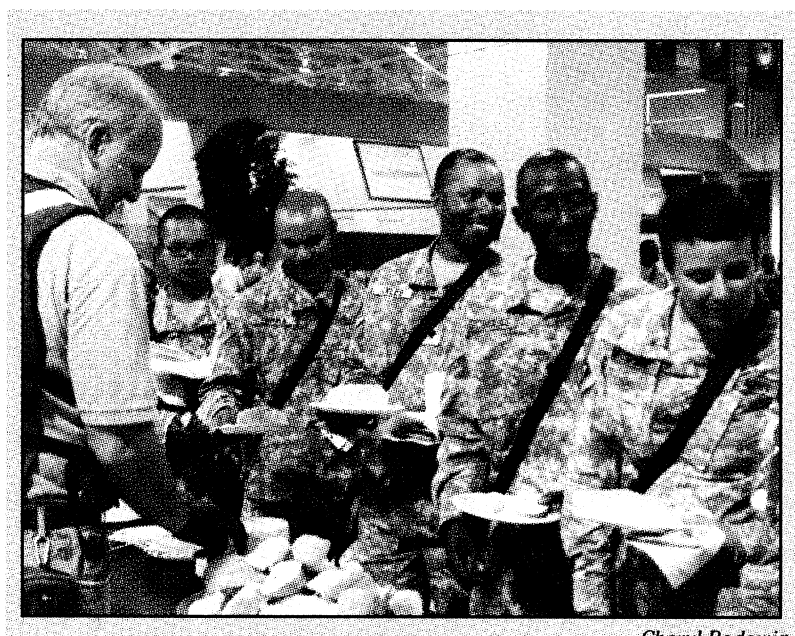
"The quality of the young leaders and the commitment of the young Soldiers we have coming into the military today is inspiring," he said. "Their commitment and focus is probably greater than we've ever seen at Fort Benning, so it's very humbling when you meet them."



Miles, the fifth of eight children whose father was an Army sergeant major who served 32 years on active duty, said 'stay humble' is the advice he gives to young officers.

"When you come from a group that large, you have a tendency to be humble," he said. "I think it's extremely important because there's no school system anywhere that's going to prepare them fully for the responsibilities of the job they're about to do. They have to have humility in order to be able to turn to someone and say, 'I'm not sure about this, can you explain this to me?'"

During a training exercise in 1996, weeks after assuming command of 1st Battalion (Airborne), 187th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Campbell, Ky., a grenade explosion landed Miles in Walter Reed Army Medical Center for a year. He had to give up command and the injury led to the amputation of his left leg below the knee.



Today he wears a prosthetic leg and can walk, run and perform his duties. But he keeps a reminder of his yearlong recovery — a strip of cloth taped to the inside of his prosthetic with the inscription "Just one more step for me, Colonel." It's a reminder of the veterans in the amputee ward who cheered for Miles as he practiced laps on his new prosthetic leg.

60th Engineers deploy

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The 60th Engineer Company (Vertical), 11th Engineer Battalion, deployed Sunday from Freedom Hall. Before beginning the 15-hour flight to Afghanistan, the unit stopped at Fort Knox, Ky., to pick up the 76th Engineer Company.

During their yearlong deployment, the company will work with a platoon of horizontal engineers from Fort Knox to expand their capabilities, said 1SG Letitia Jefferson, the company's first sergeant. They will also send a platoon to the 76th Eng. Co.

"As engineers, we're going to accomplish a lot," she said. "We're not only going to be doing construction on buildings, making life better for the Soldiers; where there are no roads, we're going to be helping put in roads."

The forward operating base the engineers will go to stretches three miles long and currently houses about 400 service members, Jefferson said.

The 60th Eng. Co. will expand the base, which will accommodate closer to 2,000 by the time the unit leaves.

The engineers may put in utilities,

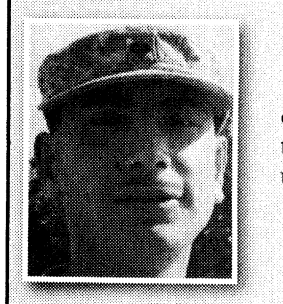
VARIOUS VOICES

What are your thoughts on online dating?

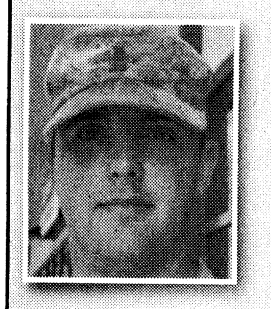


I met my wife on www.match.com. It definitely worked out. She's the girl of my dreams.

— PFC William Labor
11th Engineer Battalion

I don't think it's trustworthy. I think when you're dating, you need to have person-to-person contact. I probably would not try it. It's too dangerous.

— SFC Tawana Young
MEDDAC



I'd rather meet someone at a club or at a normal place other than on the computer, but I've used it before.

— SPC Jeremy Lopez

29th Infantry Regiment

I think it's pretty cool. I've never done online dating, but I met somebody on MySpace who I dated.

— Robert Jackson

I wouldn't do it. People can be fake and there are no consequences. I've had a couple friends who tried online dating and when they met the people they'd been talking to, they were nothing like their profiles.

— 2LT Andrew Anoskey
2nd Battalion,

I don't think it's a good idea. You don't know the person. I don't think it's good to not know who you're talking to.

ONLINE DATING — TRUTH IN ADVERTSING?

Would I lie to you, baby?

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Have you ever told a little white lie to impress a member of the opposite sex? You know, like tacking an extra zero onto the end of your income or pretending to love that new actor you find revolting. Or maybe you've even gone to the next level and claimed to have an entirely different career.

We've all done it at one point or another, and if you're one of the 50 million Americans who use online dating services, 20 percent of you are lying right now, according to an article in Scientific American.

But now virtual dating, a new trend in online dating, aims to eliminate the element of dishonesty. Users create an avatar, or virtual representation of themselves, and can request virtual dates with other users in such romantic locations as the Champs-Elysees in Paris. Once they've settled in to their virtual café or beach, the couple can choose music to listen to, have real-time conversations and even ask to hold hands or kiss the other person. If all goes well, the virtual date will lead to a real date.

But is virtual dating really progress? Will making the online dating experience more like the real thing really lead to a greater chance of relationship success, like the Web site www.omnidate.com says?

I'm not so sure it will. Sure, virtual dating might make some people a little less wary, but taking the lies out of dating isn't necessarily a guarantee of success. All dates need a few little white lies in order to go well. Think about it — would you go out on a second date with someone who told you what they really thought of your outfit?

And of course, all successful marriages need a few small lies now and then to keep going ("Of course those jeans don't make you look fat.")

I've never tried online dating, but I'd like to think that if I had, I would have been one of the few honest ones out there who put up a real photo of herself, listed her real job and income and her real height and weight. After all, I've got nothing to hide, right?

Or maybe I'm just lying to you.

Qualities of good leader never change

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Although I am not a procrastinator, I have been lackadaisical unpacking the boxes from my move — eight months ago.

While digging through the boxes trying to decide what I should take out, I ran across an old field manual I kept from my days in the Army so I sat down and reread several parts.

The manual, FM 22-100 on Military Leadership has since been rescinded, so I had to look up the latest and greatest, FM 6-22, Army Leadership.

While scrolling through the pages online, I was encouraged to see that while the presentation was different, the core and emphasis on what a military leader should be, know, and do was still intact.

Many say leaders are born, and to an extent I agree, but I also believe there is potential in everyone to be a leader, it just has to be developed.

Since retiring I cannot count the number of times I pulled out the old FM and used it to help a civilian co-worker in their development.

Leadership, and how we display our level of leadership is present in everything we do, from dealing with people we know and don't know, to how we handle diverse situations that arise in day-to-day life.

When all else fails, all we have to do is rely on what we have been taught about leadership.

Earning confidence and trust is an important foundation to being a good leader, and I used those two building blocks everyday with my children when they were growing up. I even used analogies about the Army when passing along a point.

I taught my children not to expect a detailed explanation every time I asked them to do something, but to have faith, trust and confidence in me that I would never lead them astray. It was a lifesaver when one of them was about to step off a curb into oncoming traffic. So, what was the Army analogy I used for explaining the concept to them? "Mines" equals the word "Stop." They understood.

In my former job I took what I learned about military leadership and tailored it to a group who had never been in the military. Before long I could see a change in the way my co-workers interacted — a good example of military leadership translating to the civilian world.

Good leaders have strong moral courage and ethics, are able to set a good example, are able to teach and mentor their subordinates and at times are able to influence a subordinate to do something they really don't want to do.

Whether you are in the military or not, a leader must be a role model, someone a subordinate can look up to and emulate.

I try and remember what I was taught about leadership in everything I do and with everyone who crosses my path. Sometimes it is not easy, and like every leader I sometimes make mistakes. But, like everyone, I learn a new lesson from each misstep.

No one ever said being a leader was easy, but being a good leader comes with many rewards — teaching subordinates to become good leaders and watching them grow is just one of them.

As I dusted off FM 22-100 and reread some of the chapters, I realized that being a good leader and continuing to refine my own leadership style is a never-ending process even though I am now a civilian.

Although the name of the field manual has changed to FM 6-22, some things never change — especially the things that make a good leader.

Santa's elves want to go shopping. And you can help. Santa's Castle is having a fundraiser — the Elf Run May 16. They want folks to walk or run in the 5K race or the one-mile family fun run or walk. Today is the last day for early registration, which will guarantee participants a T-shirt.

Santa's Castle is a nonprofit organization that provides toys for Fort Benning families, who cannot afford Christmas toys for their children. The elves shop year-round, looking for the best bang for their buck, which is why the Elf Run is now.

This is where you come in. This is the organization's biggest fundraiser, the place where they make the money to buy the presents. Santa's Castle usually provides $100 worth of toys to each child. And with the economy the way it is, having plenty of participants and raising more than the typical $4,000 to $6,000 would benefit our Fort Benning families.

If you register by today, you'll get a new T-shirt. It's win win! What a deal. Santa's Castle earns money for toys and you get a new article of clothing that will impress your friends.

The Elf Run is at Stewart-Watson Field, across from York Field, near the Main Post Bowling Alley. The cost is $10 per person or $30 for a family of four. After today, there is an extra $5 charge. The family price is negotiable for those with children in strollers or who don't want the T-shirt. In such cases, the family may participate, but will only receive a T-shirt for each individual fee.

THE BAYONET

LTC Frank Wayne Brewster II assumed command of the 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, from LTC Marc D. Axelberg during a change of command ceremony April 23 at Pomeroy Field.

Before assuming command of the battalion, Brewster served as deputy commanding officer of the 198th Infantry Brigade at Fort Benning.

Previously, he served as training and logistics officer for the 172nd Stryker Brigade and for the 2nd Battalion, 1st Infantry Regiment, at Fort Wainwright, Alaska. Brewster has deployed to Somalia in support of Operation Restore Hope and to Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

"Wayne is an expert trainer and a great member of our community, as is his wife, Carolyn," said COL Michael A. Coss, reviewing officer for the change of command and commander of the 192nd Infantry Brigade. "They know the standards here (on Sand Hill) and they'll continue to excel."

Brewster said he was honored to command the battalion and assured Soldiers he would continue to uphold its high standards.

"Carolyn and I fully appreciate the gravity and expectations of this great opportunity," he said. "It's one we will not take lightly."

Outgoing commander LTC Marc Axelberg thanked the Soldiers and veterans of the 2nd Battalion, and said he was confident in Brewster.

"I know he will continue to take this battalion forward," Axelberg said.

Axelberg will deploy to Iraq in August as a team chief with the Military Transition Team.

LTC John F. Lightner handed over command of the 3rd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, to LTC Shawn E. Klawunder during a ceremony Tuesday at Pomeroy Field.

COL Michael A. Coss, commander of the 192nd Infantry Brigade, was the reviewing officer for the ceremony.

"Shawn and Linda Klawunder are perfectly postured and fully prepared to continue training and developing the great leaders and Soldiers of the 47th Regiment," he said.

Klawunder said he was honored to assume command of the battalion and looked forward to interacting with its Soldiers.

"Meeting these young Soldiers who have volunteered to serve at a time of war will be pretty motivating," he said.

Klawunder, a 1990 graduate of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., deployed in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2004. His previous assignments include executive officer of the 3rd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, assistant professor of mechanical engineering at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, and chief of plans and exercise maneuver control and deputy commander of Operations Group at Fort Polk, La. Before assuming command of the 3rd Bn., 47th Inf. Regt., Klawunder served as its deputy commanding officer.

"We've already spent a lot of time in the Fort Benning community, so it will be great to continue," he said.

Outgoing commander LTC John F. Lightner, who has commanded the battalion since April 2007, will remain at Fort Benning, where he will oversee doctrine development for the Combined Arms Tactics Division.

Museum: Staff prepares to open doors to military heritage

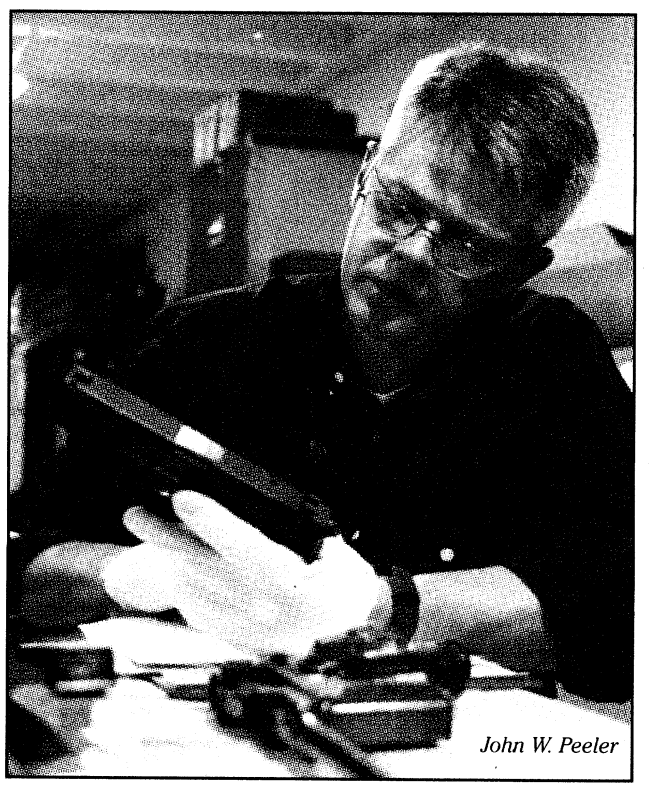
"We probably have close to 90,000 artifacts," he said. "About 4,000 square feet of books, 1,000 square feet of artwork and tons of photos from World War II back."

Criscillis said he has a "small cell" in the new museum already to watch over the Army's artifacts on loan to the National Infantry Museum and expects to have a couple more employees there in May.

"The artifacts are owned by the Army and the U.S. Army Center of Military History in Washington," he said. "We are just the caretakers of them."

Assisting the museum staff in the care and movement of artifacts are teams from the U.S. Army Heritage and Education Center, Carlisle, Pa.

Kaleb Dissinger, a curator of uniforms and equipment, is one of the people helping with the move.



"We're here to help with cleaning and pulling the artifacts, keep up with documentation, packaging and hand-receipting items. When it is all done, our entire curatorial staff will have helped in the process."

The more than 1,830 weapons require extra care because of the potentially damaging effects of environmental elements said Jeff Reed, National Infantry Museum arms curator.

With the opening of the new museum on the horizon, Criscillis and his crew are continuing their journey of moving some of the Army's most historical and oldest artifacts to its new home. But, when the final artifact is in place, Criscillis said it is the unsung heroes that will deserve the credit.

"I encourage everyone to remember there has been a lot of people putting their heart, sweat and tears behind the scenes to make this happen — the unsung heroes. I am glad to be just a small part of it."

"You learn your personal strengths when you deal with adversity, when you deal with fear ... You have to focus, pull from the inside."

Basic trainees build confidence 45 feet up

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"You're not going to fall," said SFC Tomas Avey to more than 220 basic trainees gathered in front of Eagle Tower Monday.

Avey, a drill sergeant with E Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, demonstrated how to rappel down the 45-foot tower. Halfway down the tower, he let go of his rope to show the Soldiers that no matter what happened, they wouldn't fall.

Eagle Tower is one of the first obstacles trainees face, usually within the first four days of the training cycle, Avey said.

"This is their first real big test and challenge coming into the Army," he said. "A lot of these guys have a pretty healthy fear of heights, (but) we talk them through every step. When they get through, a lot of them ask if they can go again. They start believing that what they didn't think was possible is possible. It's just one more layer of becoming a Soldier."

The exercise helps Soldiers build confidence in their equipment, trust in their drill sergeants and faith in themselves, Avey said.

"As Soldiers, we have to be the most confident people in the world. If you don't have even the basic confidence, how are you expected to go into combat and face the enemy? You have to be confident in what you're doing," he said.

Soldiers not only faced Eagle Tower, they climbed down a cargo net, scaled an inclined wall and rappelled down a smaller tower.

Eagle Tower, however, was the most challenging obstacle, said PVT Titeion Paxton.

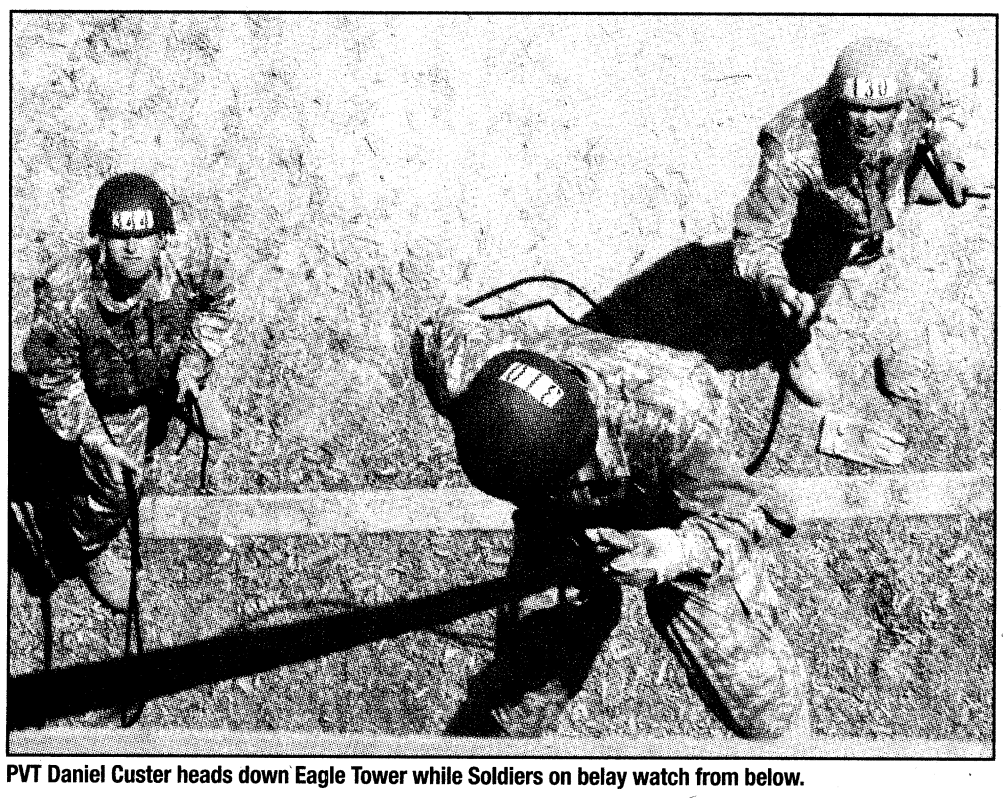
"I'm not too good with heights. I wasn't too sure if the rope was secure," he said. "The worst point for me was stepping on the ledge. Your heart pumps fast. You look around and you're like, why am I even up here? You can see over everything. It's higher than the trees, so that right there had me nervous. I didn't scream that loud. I screamed, but it was just a little shriek. But it was a couple jumps and it was over."

Paxton said he learned that facing his fears wasn't as difficult as he imagined.

"You just have to get over it by any means necessary," he said. "There really isn't much to it."

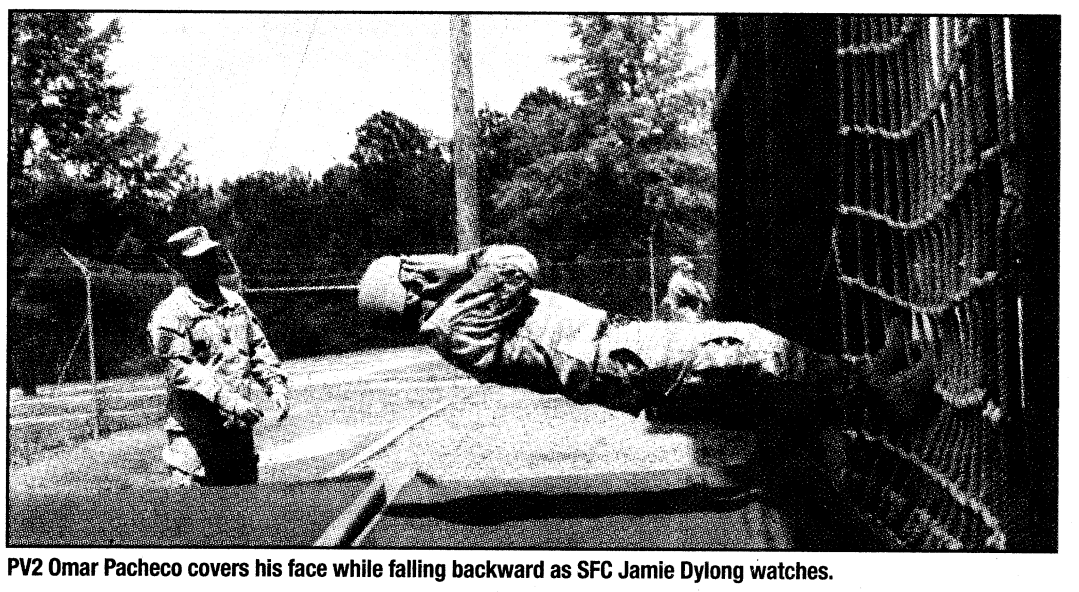
After conquering Eagle Tower, SPC Sean Daily said he learned a lot about himself.

"You learn your personal strengths when you deal with adversity, when you deal with fear," he said. "I've done things like this with heights, but it doesn't make it easier. You still have to overcome that initial lack of strength. You have to focus, pull from the inside."



Daily said the exercise helped his platoon become more of a team — "closer to being an Army of one."

"I didn't realize how the hoops and hollers from down here would give me that motivation that made me able to do it," he said. "Up there, it's your trust between your belayer down on the bottom, your instructor who's on the top and your faith in yourself. I'm still scared to death of heights because if you fall, you could die, and more than anything, you're putting a lot of trust in other people."



Daily joined the National Guard five months ago as a way to continue supporting the freedoms he wants his children to have. A teacher by trade, he chose to be an Infantryman to challenge himself so he will be a better leader for Soldiers, said Daily, who plans to attend Officer Candidate School.

"This has been one of those things I've always wanted to do," said Daily, 31. "I believe in public service. You know that list of things you want to do before you turn 50? You want to make the 'I wish I would have' list as small as possible. That's my goal. I just want to make my family proud."

EagleTower was just one of those challenges. The company will learn ground fighting techniques today and next week, followed by close-quarter marksmanship, buddy team tactics and a convoy live fire. The company of 224 Soldiers is slated to graduate July 31.

New gateway at I-185 planned for Fort Benning

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The main entrance to post on I-185 will no longer be just a gate but a gateway.

"Fort Benning is the premier training stallation in the Army; you should know at when you're driving onto it," said y Brown, former Base Realignment and losure manager.

The gateway will include a bridge over 185 with "Fort Benning, Georgia," on one de and "Columbus, Georgia," on the other, written in bronze letters.

Fifty-foot pedestals will stand on either side of the bridge with the Follow Me Statue on one side and the Trooper of the Plains statue on the other, representing the Infantry School and Armor School, said John Flournoy, chairman of the Columbus Gateway Foundation, which has helped sponsor the project, estimated to cost more than $3.5 million.

As visitors leave Fort Benning, they will see two bald eagles, each with a 12-foot wingspan, sculpted from bronze and steel perched on the pedestals.

"You can see it as you're coming over the hill," Brown said. "For probably half a mile away, you're going to be able to see these pedestals. You don't have to guess where Fort Benning is now; you're going to know."

Planning for the construction has been an intensive process, which started more than two years ago, Flournoy said. The vision involved several people, including a Hollywood set designer who visited Fort Benning to help plan the gateway.

"It's going to be quite elegant," Flournoy said.

On each side of the road there will be 10 American flags and 10 20-foot fountains that light up at night.

"We think it needs to be very impressive," Flournoy said. "It's inspiration for people who work there, families and dignitaries who come and go — it just had to be done."

The gateway will begin near the Victory Drive overpass about half a mile in front of the access control point. The stone welcome sign to Fort Benning near the checkpoint will remain.

Construction will begin on the project within the next two weeks. It will be completed by summer 2010.

AC: Has orders for Iraq

ontinued from A1

"Every time I would come by, they would iout out encouragement — 'Do one more p, Colonel!'" he said. "It's a reminder not only f my desire to keep going, but of the great ipport I got from those veterans."

Miles took command of 1st Battalion Airborne) for a second time after his :covery.

"I was very fortunate there was a lot of great ipport from family and friends and also from ie military, going all the way up to the chief of aff of the Army," he said. "That's really what elped me — my great circle of friends and mily — not anything I did on my own."

Other assignments include deploying to osovo for the peacekeeping mission and in ipport of Operation Iraqi Freedom. Before oming to Fort Benning in September 2007, e served as executive officer to the chief of aff of the Army.

Though his nearly 30-year career has taken im from Fort Carson, Colo., to Germany and gypt, Miles said Fort Benning is one of the est installations he has lived on.

"The quality of life here is probably the best ve seen in the military," he said. "My family id I have been able to do things here that we aven't been able to do in other places, like xtreme dirt biking, fishing and camping at ings Pond and Uchee Creek.

"If you're bored at Fort Benning, you're just ot trying."

Miles said his time at Fort Benning has repared him to lead the Joint Headquarters rmy Advisory Training Team in Iraq, where he ill be responsible for training Iraqi soldiers.

> "The way I look at it, it's not training Iraqi soldiers or American Soldiers; it's training soldiers."
> — BG Lloyd "Milo" Miles

"Since we have a large training facility at Fort Benning, what we do here is directly transferable to what we're trying to develop in the Iraqi military as well," he said. "The way I look at it, it's not training Iraqi soldiers or American Soldiers; it's training soldiers."

And training Soldiers is what Miles said is his greatest accomplishment at Fort Benning.

"For our Soldiers to be able to better train, that's really what it's all about," he said.

"Being able to move that ball down the field a little bit at a time has been the thing I'm most proud of."

Miles has worked to improve quality of life on Fort Benning by supporting programs such as the Soldier and Family Assistance Center. He was the guest speaker at the center's grand opening in January 2008.

"I knew firsthand how frustrating it was for these Soldiers and family members to have to travel all over an installation to find answers," he said.

Miles hands over responsibility to COL Bryan R. Owens May 11.

Engineers: To prepare for influx of troops including electrical and plumbing.

In most cases, they will start from scratch, said MSG Todd Scott, 11th Eng. Bn. operations sergeant.

"It's going to be a very natural environment that they're going to mold and shape to make it habitable," Scott said. "Their mission is (to) step into a pristine area, build it up, then move on to another area. Their living conditions are most likely going to be quite harsh, and once there are good living conditions, they're going to move on to harsh living conditions and build it up nice for somebody else again."

The company's work will prepare for the influx of 17,000 Soldiers who are slated to deploy to Afghanistan as part of the surge.

SGT Cedron Hopson said he knows his unit will accomplish their mission.

Hopson said he volunteered for the Army, so his 3-year-old daughter won't have to face the same struggles when she grows up.

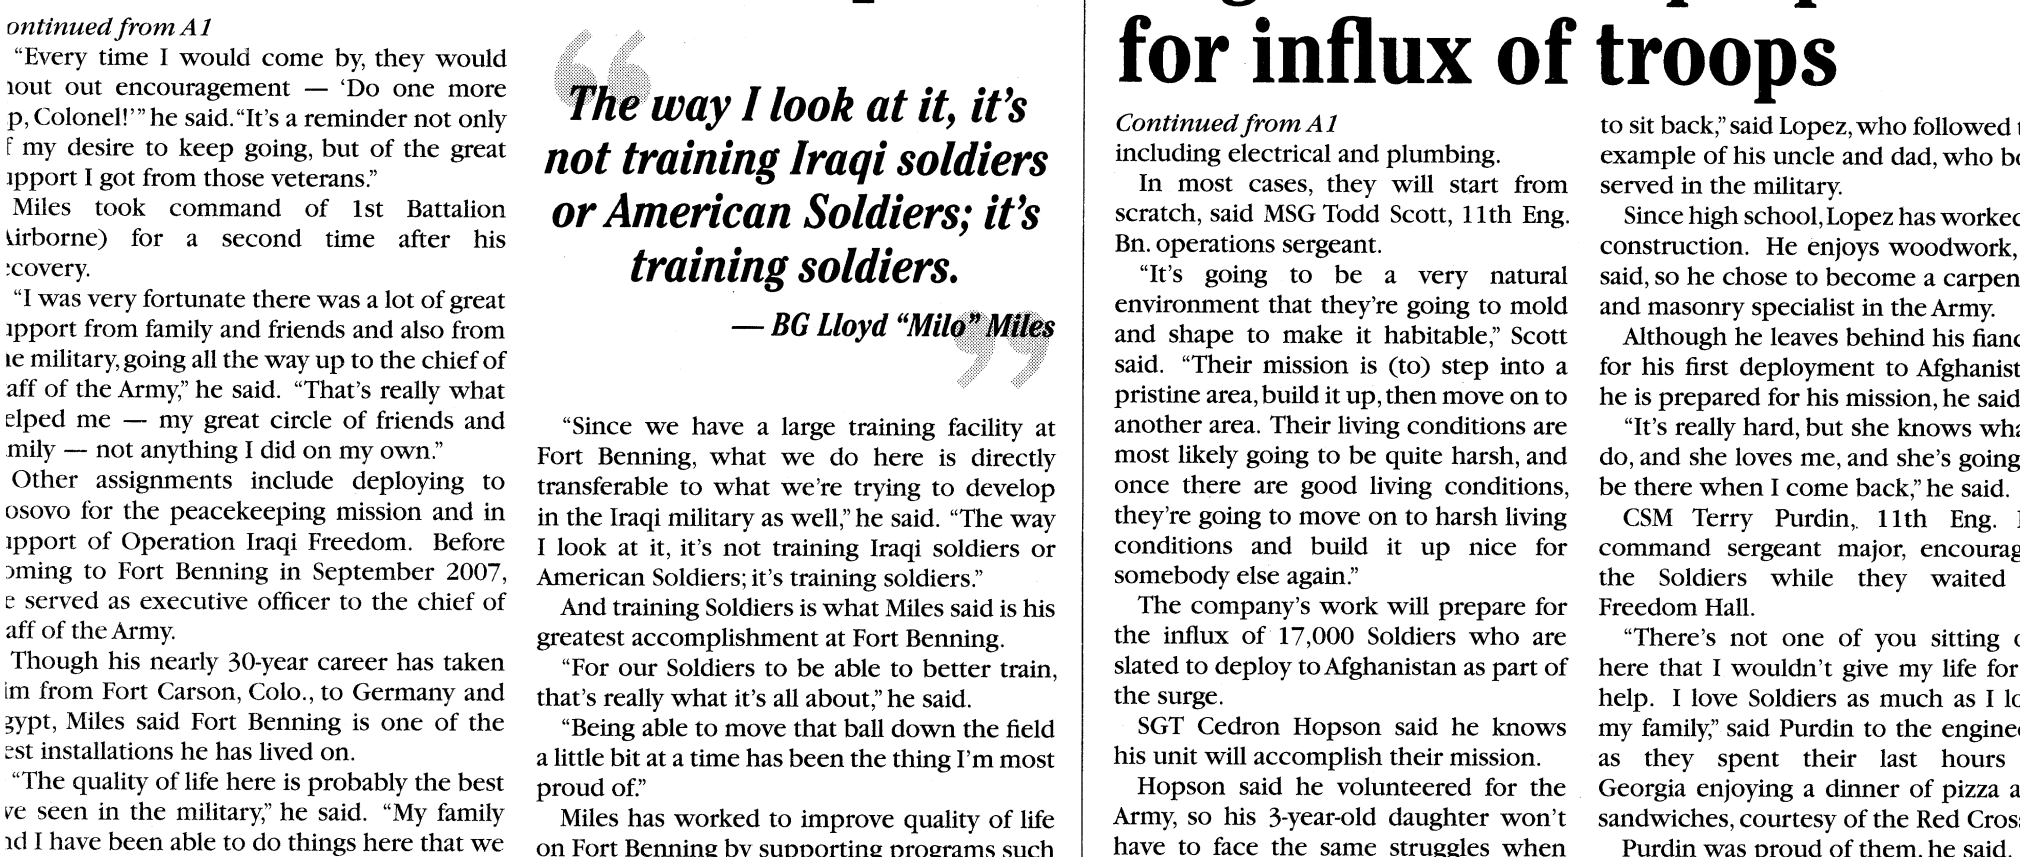
"Somebody has to do it," he said. "If I don't do it, then my baby is going to have to do it. I go ahead and fight the good fight now, so she can live happily."

SPC Ramon Lopez chose to join the Army to help his country in its time of need.

"I wanted to serve. I didn't just want to sit back," said Lopez, who followed the example of his uncle and dad, who both served in the military.

Since high school, Lopez has worked in construction. He enjoys woodwork, he said, so he chose to become a carpentry and masonry specialist in the Army.

Although he leaves behind his fiancee for his first deployment to Afghanistan, he is prepared for his mission, he said.



"It's really hard, but she knows what I do, and she loves me, and she's going to be there when I come back," he said.

CSM Terry Purdin, 11th Eng. Bn. command sergeant major, encouraged the Soldiers while they waited in Freedom Hall.

"There's not one of you sitting out here that I wouldn't give my life for to help. I love Soldiers as much as I love my family," said Purdin to the engineers as they spent their last hours in Georgia enjoying a dinner of pizza and sandwiches, courtesy of the Red Cross.

Purdin was proud of them, he said.

"These guys and gals are going out for a year and serving their country," he said. "They are defending our constitutional rights both here and abroad. We have no idea the unforeseen dangers these Soldiers are going to encounter in Afghanistan in an austere environment. If that doesn't make you a hero then I don't know what does."

Flu: Leaders discuss H1N1, offer tips for prevention

are expected after the recent outbreaks of H1N1 flu in several countries; however she stressed that there are preventive measures available, as well as antiviral drugs, to keep Fort Benning personnel healthy and safe.

The Army Surgeon General agreed.

"It's important ... to understand that there is no cause for panic or alarm," LTG Eric B. Schoomaker said in his blog Monday.

"The Department of Defense and all segments of the U.S. government are working along with our international partners to lessen the impact of H1N1 flu," he said. "It is likely that this H1N1 flu will spread to many, if not all, parts of the United States."

At this point, H1N1 flu is believed to spread in a way similar to that of the common flu - from person to person through coughing and sneezing or by touching an object with the virus on it, such as a doorknob.

At press time, one case of H1N1 flu has been reported in Georgia, according to the CDC. A 30-year-old Kentucky woman visiting Georgia was identified as the first case of swine flu in the state and is currently being hospitalized in LaGrange, according to the Atlanta Journal Constitution. Elizabeth Ford, head of the Division of Public Health, said the woman had traveled to Cancun, Mexico.

Alabama State Health Officer Don Williamson confirmed two probable cases of H1N1 infections at a press conference Wednesday.

Though there is currently no vaccine available specifically to protect against this strain of influenza, there are antiviral medications available to treat patients who contract H1N1 flu, Pacha said.

"They both have been proven effective against the H1N1 virus," she said.

As a training post, Fort Benning rotates new recruits through its doors on a weekly basis. To combat the chance of a recruit spreading the virus, Pacha said preventive medicine takes proactive steps to prevent a potential outbreak.

"Hygiene and sanitation practices are always important here," she said. "We know that colds and other viruses circulate within (the training population). Because of (the recruits) situation, hygiene is even more important."

Medical providers have increased their screening procedures as well, she said.

The World Health Organization has issued an alert as a result of the H1N1 flu; however, this is a precautionary measure to assist agencies in mobilizing assets in large quantities such as antiviral medications, devices and testing supplies, according to the CDC.

"Because this is a new virus and we don't know much about it or why it's causing disease now, and where it is, there is a lot of interest," Pacha said. "We are tracking it to develop more effective prevention and treatment tools."

Pacha said she recommends families protect themselves by practicing good hygiene, especially when someone is sick or feeling under the weather.

"Just washing your hands and covering your cough or sneeze, you can prevent a lot of things from being transmitted," she said.

Pacha recommends that if a person experiences flu-like symptoms such as sudden onset of fever, cough, sore throat or headache, to see their doctor.

She said a flu virus can blend in with other viruses that cause colds, so see your doctor if you don't feel right, and stay at home.

"If a person feels they have symptoms (of the flu), we want to know," she said.

Though it's not yet known if the 2008-2009 influenza vaccine provides any protection against the H1N1 flu virus, the vaccine will continue to provide protection against commonly occurring strains of the flu.

From the surgeon general

There are a number of ways you and your family can reduce the risk of catching H1N1 Flu:

Avoid people with the flu.

Wash your hands often.

If someone in your household is sick, stay home until that person no longer feels ill.

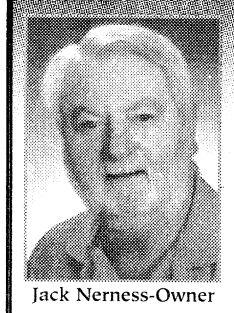
Rucker

Name: SFC Raleigh Rucker

Unit: C Company, 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception)

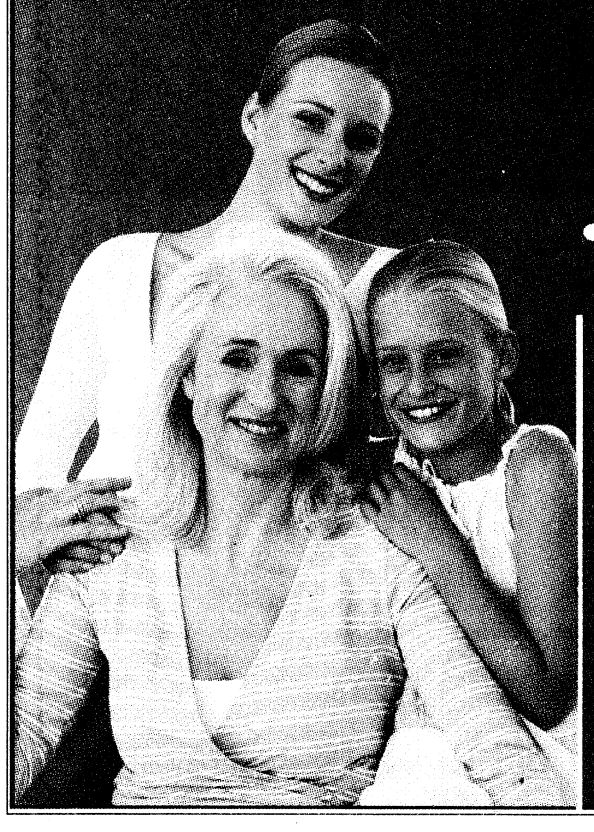
Job title and military occupational specialty: Operations sergeant, combat engineer

Years in service: 11 years



Hobbies: Basketball, football, watching drag racing with his 3-year-old and family activities

Biography: In the 11 years Rucker has served, he has been stationed at Korea, Fort Stewart, Ga., Giessen, Germany, and Fort Benning with a projected assignment to Fort Richardson, Alaska. His most memorable experience in the Army was when his son was born at Martin Army Community Hospital June 14, 2006.



Rucker's short-term goal is to go to Ranger school and finish his college degree. His long-term goal is to eventually be the sergeant major of the Army. After he retires from the Army, Rucker wants to work as a DoD contractor in the field of information technology, he said.

His advice to junior enlisted Soldiers is to "always take care of your subordinates, lead from the front and always take the hard right and not the easy wrong," Rucker said. "At the end of the day, it will all pay off."

LAW DAY

Law Day is a celebration of our Nation's great heritage of liberty, justice and equality under the law. President Abraham Lincoln was one of our Nation's greatest presidents and great American attorney. President Lincoln's background as a lawyer greatly influenced his actions, speeches and writings throughout his legal career. His words and phrases have endured through time to serve as an inspiration for such movements as the women suffragists and the Civil Rights movement. President Lincoln is known not only for his written and spoken words, but also as an American president who united a nation and fought for justice. He emerged as a prominent and inspiring leader whose legacy lives on today. The Law Day 2009 theme of A Legacy of Liberty — Celebrating Lincoln's Bicentennial, encourages us to explore the legacy of Abraham Lincoln, regarded by many as one of our Nation's most eloquent presidents. I, Michael D. Barbero, commanding general of the United States Army Infantry Center and Fort Benning, do hereby declare Friday, May 1, 2009, as Law Day. I urge all Soldiers, civilian employees, military retirees, family members, schools and businesses to use this occasion to preserve and commemorate President Abraham Lincoln's legacy of liberty, justice and equality under the law.

— Maj. Gen. Michael Barbero
Commanding General,
Fort Benning

TELLING WAR STORIES PROJECT SEEKS VOLUNTEERS

Telling War Stories is a project started by CPT Mike Warren, an English instructor at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y. that aims to help Soldiers share their stories with the help of cadets. Soldiers submit their work, which is read by cadets who offer revisions and feedback. The project provides an opportunity for the Soldiers and the cadets to gain new perspective on war stories. The goal is to eventually publish a collection of the stories submitted for the project.

Warren is seeking Soldiers who would like to share their stories. He and four cadets will visit Fort Benning June 4-5.

For more information, or to volunteer with the project, call Warren at 845-938-2661 or e-mail michael.warren3@us.army.mil.

MILITARY OFFICERS ASSOCIATION

The Chattahoochee Valley Chapter and Fort Knox Area Chapter of the Military Officers Association of America are helping personnel who will relocate as part of the Armor School's move. They will assist with information about the local area, schools, realtor contacts and other areas of concern.

For more information or to receive assistance, e-mail aec177a1@aol.com.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN A. NASH

Scary times at Talladega

Carl Edwards seemed to have the victory sealed on the final lap at Talladega Superspeedway, until Brad Keselowski tried to get ahead of him, spun him around and sent Edwards airborne, ultimately crashing into the fence protecting fans.

No one was faulted, and Edwards was able to climb from his car and run across the finish line, even though he ended up in 24th place.

Keselowski got the win.

This week's race is at Richmond International Raceway. Coverage begins at 7:30 p.m. Saturday on Fox.

No surprises at draft

The NFL Draft was a big snoozefest in my humble opinion. Georgia quarterback Matthew Stafford was the top overall pick and signed with the Detroit Lions for six years and $41.7 million. The St. Louis Rams had the second pick with Baylor offensive tackle Jason Smith.

Probably the best pick was for the New York Jets, who picked up USC quarterback Mark Sanchez. The Jets are minus Brett Favre after his retirement after the NFL season ended.

Place your bets

The 135th running of the Kentucky Derby will take place at Churchill Downs Saturday.

The favorite to win, Quality Road, who won the Florida Derby, will not race as he has a quarter crack in his right front foot.

Coverage begins at 4 p.m. on NBC from Louisville, Ky.

If golf's your thing...

Tiger Woods will play in his first tournament since the Masters this weekend at the Quail Hollow Championship, formerly called the Wachovia Championship.

Woods won the tourney in 2007 but missed last year because he was recovering from one of his two knee surgeries.

He's got a great chance to win. He doesn't seem to be the old Tiger yet, but is getting there slowly.

Trouble for Williams

Former New Jersey Nets star Jayson Williams was tasered by police April 27 at his hotel in New York after resisting attempts to be taken to a hospital.

A female friend called the police and told them Williams was acting suicidal. Cops found several empty bottles of prescription drugs and suicide notes in his suite.

Williams was convicted in 2004 of trying to cover up a shooting at his home. His wife also filed for divorce recently.

What a sad story of a great athlete making bad decisions.

Elf Run early registration ends today

Fundraiser for Santa's Castle is May 16

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

Early registration for the Santa's Castle Elf Run ends today. By registering today, participants are guaranteed a T-shirt, said Jeffrey Saeli, Santa's Castle president.

"This is the biggest fundraiser during the year for Santa's Castle," Saeli said, "so we're really hoping for a big turnout."

Santa's Castle is a nonprofit organization that provides toys for Fort Benning families, who cannot afford Christmas toys for their children.

"It's just a good organization that helps Soldiers and their families," said SGM Bruce Acker with the CG's Initiative Group. When he was assigned to the 13th Combat Support Sustainment Battalion, the companies would have toy drives for Santa's Castle.

"Imagine being an E-4 with four children, money can be tight," Acker said. "Santa's Castle is a way to support that junior Soldier who needs help. The way they schedule the 'shopping' appointments is great too, because it allows for anonymity."

The general budget for the organization is $100,000, and each child gets about $100 worth of toys, Saeli said.

"We usually make between $4,000 to $6,000 with the Elf Run," Saeli said.

The Elf Run is May 16 at Stewart-Watson Field, across from York Field, near the Main Post Bowling Alley. This year's Elf Run has a 5K race and a one-mile family fun run or walk.

The cost is $10 per person or $30 for a family of four. After today, there is an extra $5 charge.

Saeli said the family price is negotiable for those with children in strollers or who don't want the T-shirt. In such cases, the family may participate, but will only receive a T-shirt for each individual fee.

Registration is at 7 a.m. The 5K race is at 8 a.m. with the one-mile family fun run or walk at 8:30 a.m.

For more information or to register, call 706-685-4422 or go to www.santascastle.org.

WHINSEC CGSOC defeats E Co., 1/507th PIR

Game tied at halftime

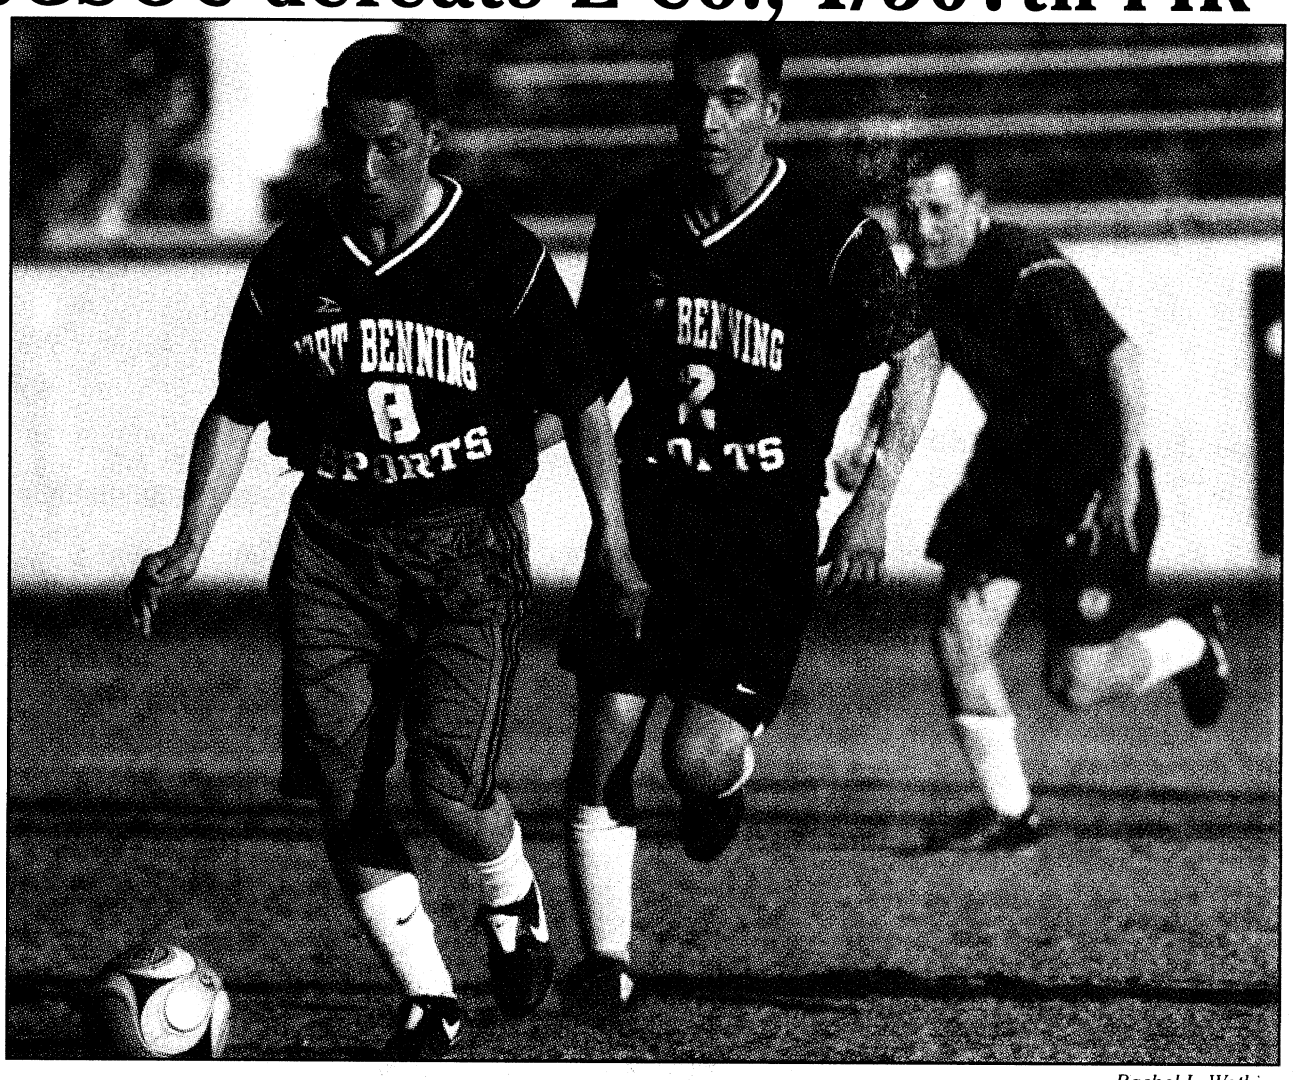
THE BAYONET



Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation Command and General Staff Officer Course team took a 5-2 victory over E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, in an intramural soccer game April 22 at Doughboy Stadium.

Defense controlled the game until 1/507th's Edwin Bocanegra scored a goal, giving his team a 1-0 lead. Bocanegra added another goal in the first half, but WHINSEC's Edwin Galeas answered with a goal to cut the lead to 2-1 and tied the game with his second goal to end the half at 2-2.

The 1/507th failed on an indirect kick at the beginning of the final half and the teams were at a stalemate until Galeas scored a goal. With a 3-2 lead, WHINSEC racked up two more goals and their defense stopped 1/507th from scoring, closing out the game with a 5-2 win.

"I think what helped us win the game was our quick passing and teamwork," said Art Garffer.

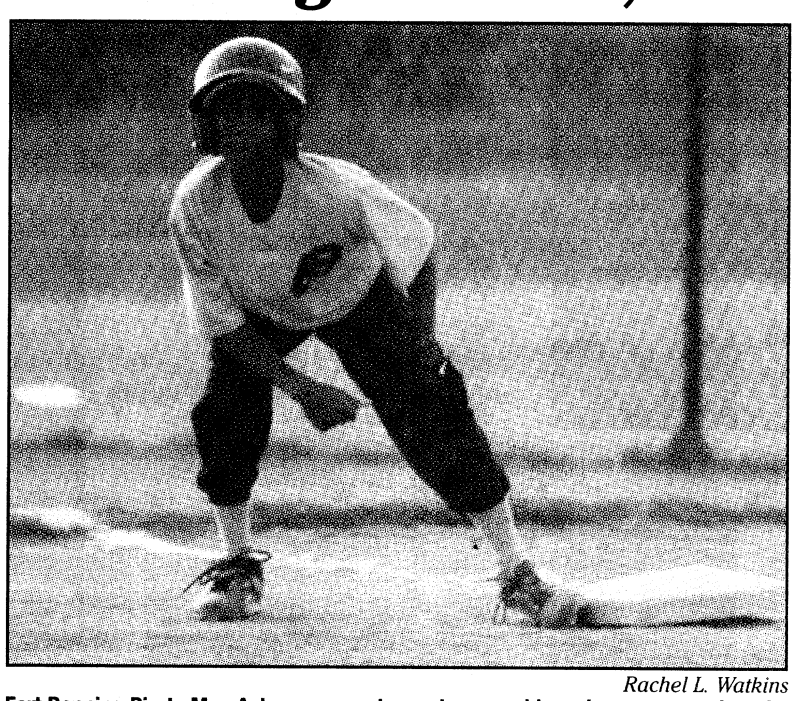
National Bulldogs defeat Benning Pirates, 7-6

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

The 11- and 12-year-old National Bulldogs defeated the Fort Benning Pirates 7-6 Tuesday at Rigdon Park in Columbus. After the Pirates battled back to tie the game in the top of the sixth inning, the Bulldogs put the game away with a run in the bottom of the inning for the win.

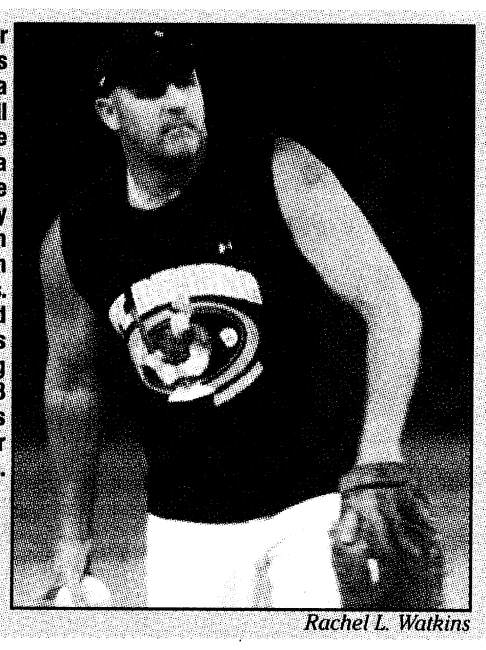
Following a Pirate three-up, three-down inning, the Bulldogs scored two runs in the bottom half of the first inning to take a 2-0 lead.

Pirate Johnathan Seda turned a single into a triple on an error in the top of the second inning and subsequently stole home closing the gap to 2-1 in the top of the second inning.



Bulldogs Ervine Davis, Joe Sims and Ja'Corey Thomas scored in the bottom of the inning to take a 5-1 lead.

By the fifth inning, Fort Benning scored four runs to tie the game, but in the bottom of the inning the Bulldogs took the lead with another run from Davis.



With the Bulldogs leading 6-5 in the top of the sixth inning, the Pirates tied the game with a run from Brandin Maier on a Nick Sargent RBI double. In the bottom of the inning, Bulldog Abrams hit a single putting the go-ahead run on first base. Abrams stole second and third base and subsequently scored on an error, sealing the 7-6 win for the Bulldogs.

"I think we put ourselves back in the first inning," Pirate pitcher Nick Hunter said. "We made some mistakes on the field and the other team used those errors to score. I think it was a tough

COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

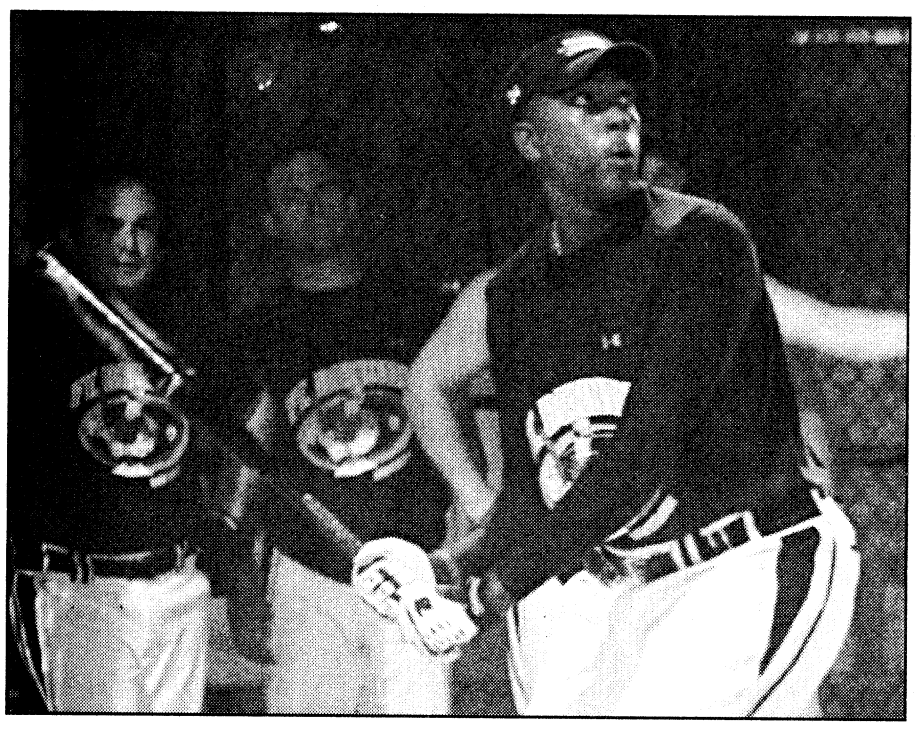
Coach focuses on Army Core Values

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning's softball coach Tom Siter relies on previous military and softball experience to get the most from his teams, but make no mistake, his passion is softball.

"I think you have to have a passion to play softball, but once you are hooked, it's an addiction. Once it's in your blood, it's difficult to fight off," he said.

The 41-year-old has played softball for 23 years — from level A softball to major open tournaments. He started coaching the team in 2008 and was the All-Army softball assistant coach in 2008.



"I love playing and coaching the post team because I am surrounded by Soldiers and Airmen," the retired CSM said.

"I enjoy watching these guys be a part of the team, watching them grow throughout the year, and build friendships and camaraderie that will last throughout their careers."

His coaching philosophy is to lead by example using the Army Core Values.

Fort Benning Post Team shuts down Bama Auto Salvage

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning Post softball Team One shut down Bama Auto Salvage in a five-inning game Monday at South Commons in Columbus. Fort Benning racked up eight home runs, the maximum allowed in a softball game, in its run-rule shortened contest.

The team began the scoring streak early with Aaron Frederick hitting a leadoff home run, followed by a run from Jason Scott and another home run by Tom Siter. Karl Ivey added to the onslaught and Fort Benning's Demetrius Minor and Ray Reid belted home runs, taking control of the game early.

Trailing 6-0 in the bottom of the first inning, Bama's Joseph Dean scored, but Fort Benning's defense stopped Bama from scoring any more, closing the inning with Fort Benning in the lead, 6-1.

Fort Benning blew the game open in the second inning, swatting two more homers and tacking on seven more runs to take a 13-1 lead. Bama's Mikey Burt, Chris Mount and Stephen Estes scored runs, and at the end of the second inning, Fort Benning led 13-4.

But the post team wasn't done. Team One managed to score seven more runs before the end of the game, while Bama had a three-up, three-down scoreless inning.

Benning added a 20-4 victory to its record, which at press time was 7-2.

"We were able to shut down the other team early in the game before they were able to score many runs," Fort Benning coach Tom Siter said. "When we jump out early, it has a tendency to mentally defeat the other team. We made some errors, but overall we did a good job."

Frederick, who hit two home runs, said the team stayed focused.

"I think we have continuity on our team and that is important," he said. "This year, we have a team where every player is of a high caliber when it comes to softball."

The post team will take on Unique Sports at 8:15 p.m. Monday at South Commons.

Siter: Prepares for Military Worlds Championship

"I want players to realize that Army Core Values aren't just for when they are at work. They are values that can be used 24 hours a day, seven days a week — even on a softball field," he said.

And a positive attitude goes a long way, Siter said.

"I tell the guys, 'Win with the bat and with a positive attitude,'" he said.

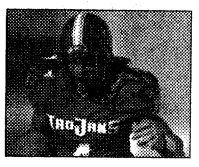
"When we go to a tournament, I want guys to come up to the players and say, 'Not only were you the most well-equipped, and the best-looking team, but you had the best attitude.'"

His goal for the team is to take first place at the United States Specialty Sports Association Military Worlds Aug. 13-16 in Panama City Beach, Fla.

The team guaranteed a spot in the world tournament with its first-place finish at the Mayport Military Varsity B tournament April 19 at Naval Station Mayport in Jacksonville, Fla.

The team is preparing for the worlds by playing in games and tournaments.

Siter said he has no plans to quit coaching or playing softball.



"I love softball too much to stop," he said. "I'm going to play and coach until I can't hold a bat up."

Millions of reasons for salary cap

John W. Peeler
THE BAYONET

Another draft has come and gone and with it millions of future dollars.

This year's No. 1 draft pick, former University of Georgia standout Matthew Stafford, signed a six-year deal with $41 million in guaranteed money before the official draft even began.

That's a lot of change for a young man straight out of college — especially for an unproven NFL player.

Many professional football veterans have spoken out about the amount of money rookies are getting paid in relation to how much money seasoned veterans are making now in the NFL.

While NFL owners will be forking out millions to unproven rookies, I have to wonder if a rookie salary cap will be a major topic of contention when the National Football League Players Association begins negotiations for a new contract in the near future.

From what I have read on the Web, current players will make sure their voice is heard through their teams' player representative.

I am not against paying someone what they are worth, especially when an injury could end a career, but then I look at Soldiers who do more — for a whole lot less. That is when my sympathy disappears for high-priced athletes.

If you watch the draft, the number of smiles, high-fives, shouting and jubilation of being picked by an NFL team is endless — and it should be. Becoming a professional is a big step in an athletic career, but playing a professional sport is a privilege.

True, being a professional athlete is a business, but I have known plenty of business owners who never reached anywhere near $41 million.

I believe the NFL needs a rookie salary cap. Why? Because there are too many proven veterans who deserve to be compensated for what they have proven on the field, and not for what they might contribute.

When a system, any system, pays an employee for what they might do, rather than for what they actually do, dissension is almost guaranteed — and nothing tears at the heart of a team like dissension.

Maybe you can build a team around a No. 1 draft pick, but it is a 50/50 proposition.

There is just as much of an opportunity for failure as there is for success — and that's guaranteed.

Rugby club championships begin today

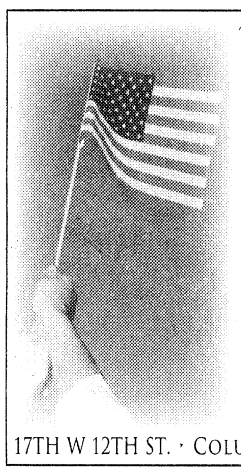
Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Rugby teams from around the nation will compete in the USA Rugby Military Club and BAE Systems Championships today through Saturday at Stewart-Watson Field, hosted by the Columbus and Fort Benning Rugby Football Club.

Twelve teams — including Fort Benning's 75th Ranger Regiment; Fort Sill, Okla.; Camp Lejeune, N.C.; Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.; and Cherry Point, N.C. — will compete in the championship. The club championship is open to teams with civilians and military and a separate championship is open to military teams only.

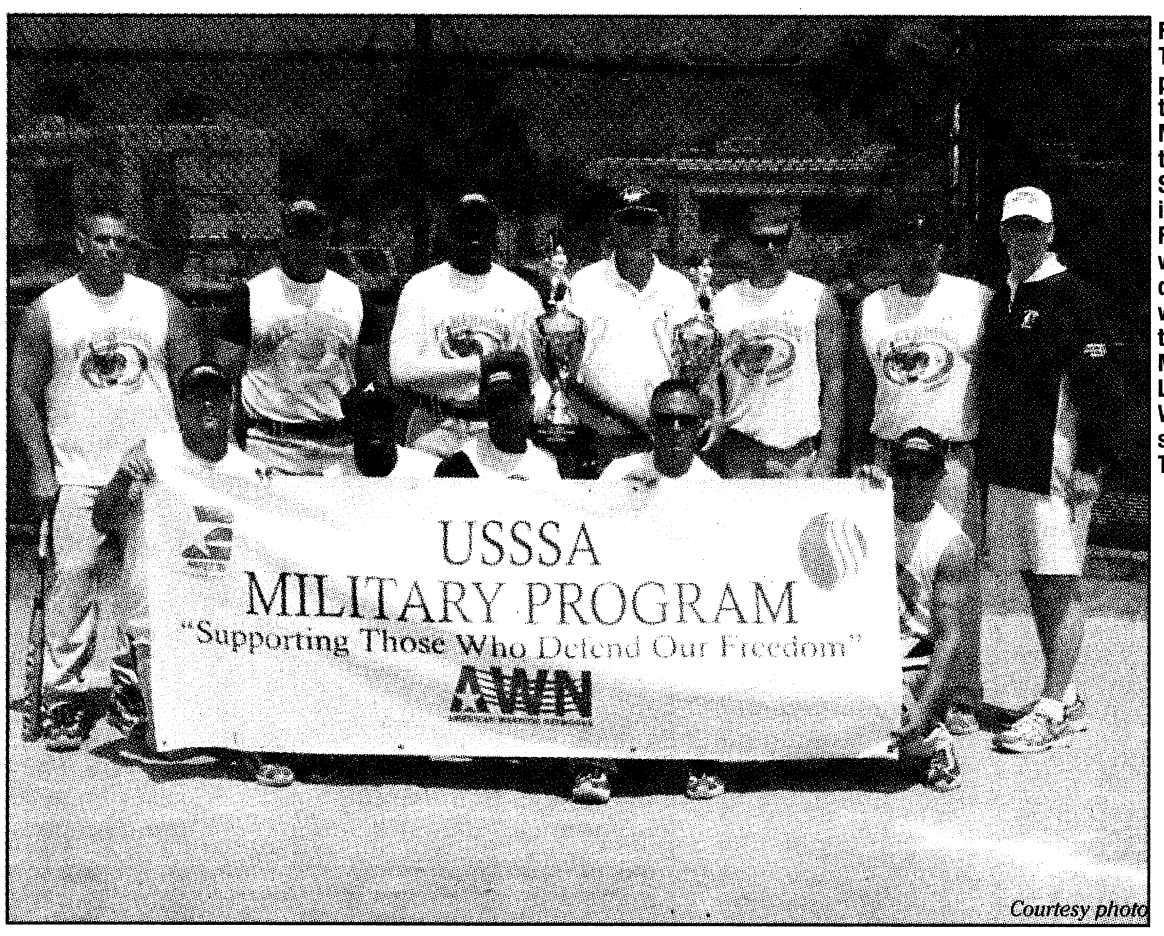
Both championships will consist of highly skilled competitors, said Roy MacDonald, Columbus and Fort Benning Rugby Football Club president.

"There will be some tough competition," MacDonald said. "It could be anyone's win."



All teams will play by International Rugby Board rules. Trophies will be awarded for first and second place in each division for both the club and the open championships.

The championship will begin at 8 a.m. Saturday and Sunday, with the finals starting at 2 p.m. Sunday and an awards ceremony at 3:30 p.m.



Spectators are welcome and admission is free. There are no bleachers at the field, so MacDonald encourages spectators to bring chairs or blankets.

There will be concessions available and coolers are allowed.

For more information, call Ray Davis at 706-587-9393 or e-mail him at rugref@att.net.

Interservice Chess Tournament hosted at Benning for first time

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Fort Benning will host the Interservice Chess Tournament Sunday through May 9 at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center. Service members will compete for the top six spots and a shot at the NATO Chess Championship June 15-19 in Hammelburg, Germany.

"These chess players are the best of the best," said Noelle Phillips, recreation center branch manager, Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation. "And to make it to NATO is a big deal. It's the top chess championship in the world."

Phillips said the chess tournament is a good way to build camaraderie and esprit de corps among branches.

The Army hosts the Interservice Chess Tournament every four years. This is the first time it has been hosted anywhere other than Fort Myer, Va., Phillips said.

Contestants who compete in the interservice tournament were the top scorers during their respective branch championships.

The contestants will be scored in seven rounds as a team and individually. The top scoring team will take home a first-place trophy while the top six individual scorers will represent the U.S. Armed Forces in the NATO Chess Championship against military branches from around the world.

In the NATO championship, the contestants will play seven rounds in a Swiss system, where players will be matched against others within their skill level.

Chess matches will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Spectators are welcome and admission is free.

game, but overall, we played pretty good but we just couldn't bring it out in the sixth. We'll just keep working hard and work it out in practice."

Pirate coach Lee Obie said pressure got to the players.

"I think our team was nervous in the sixth inning," he said. "Their nerves got to them because they knew if they didn't keep the other team from scoring in the bottom of the sixth, they would lose."

The Pirates take on the Eastern Red Sox at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Youth Sports Complex.

WHINSEC: Team is 6-0

"We talked at half time about making the passes count and making the goals and that worked out for us."

The team's defense and offense were the key to the win, said WHINSEC coach Tito Castellanos.

At press time, WHINSEC CGSOC is 6-0 after beating the WHINSEC's Captains Career Course Monday.

"I think if we keep working hard and not get over confident and maintain our level of game, we can stay undefeated," he said.

WHINSEC CGSOC will take on the Special Forces Liaison Office team, the preseason Commander's Cup champions, and up next for 1/507th is a game against the 75th Ranger Regiment at 6 p.m. Monday at Doughboy Stadium.

For As Low As $49

In one day, local Columbus dealer must eliminate Millions of Dollars worth of pre-owned vehicles.

Columbus, GA

Saturday, May 2, 2009
Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex is holding its biggest pre-owned super sale in the history of the company. Saturday, May 2, 2009, they plan to eliminate their entire pre-owned inventory by means of a

$49
"Eliminator Sale,"

During this one-day event, every pre-owned vehicle will be offered for Incredible low prices - including vehicles for only $49.

Why price them so low? Mark Wilson and Jim Hayes, Used Car Managers at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex, offer this explanation for this unprecedented sale. "We've already had record sales in our new car department this year, and we're overstocked with trade-ins. Then we've added a big inventory of factory program cars and some real bargains we've gotten at the auction. So, now we're over-loaded with inventory. It's that simple." Wilson adds, "Our goal is to reduce the amount of our overall inventory to a more manageable number, and to do that, we've got to price this inventory ridiculously low. Expect cars to be marked with incredible prices."

Hayes further added, "The community has shown us great support throughout the years, and we're very grateful. We would rather give these great deals to the customer than unload these vehicles at the auction. We believe that people will not only enjoy getting a great deal, they'll also have a lot of fun doing it. Imagine the excitement of being able to buy a vehicle for just $49. Not $49 down, $49 flat."

Almost 200 pre-owned cars, trucks, vans & SUV's are available for this huge event. "We absolutely must reduce our pre-owned inventory at all costs; so customers can expect these vehicles to be sold at incredible low prices," he stated. "We truly will have a vehicle for everyone's budget."

These vehicles are available at this price, Saturday, May 2, 2009, at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex, in Columbus, GA. Special arrangements have been made for a record number of customers, with event parking clearly marked.

According to Randy Askew, General Sales Manager at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex, here's how the $49 "Eliminator Sale" works: Saturday, May 2, 2009, precisely at 9:45 am, the gates will be opened so that customers may inspect the vehicles. When the $49 "Eliminator Sale" begins at 10:00 am, whoever is sitting behind the wheel of the vehicle will have the first chance to purchase the vehicle at the "Eliminator Sale" price. Prices will be marked one time to the "Rock Bottom" price, including vehicles for only $49. This "Eliminator Sale" is not for auto dealers, employees of the dealership, and its affiliates, are not permitted to participate. Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex has arranged for special finance and credit analysts to be on hand. If you've had trouble in the past securing auto credit, don't count yourself out. If you'll bring your current payroll stub and your driver's license, chances are we can arrange your financing.

The "Eliminator Sale" will be the biggest event we've ever had," stated Askew.

Customers are required to come early and register for entry to this incredible sale. Registration to participate begins at 8:00 AM. "We expect a record number of people to leave with great vehicles at unheard-of, low prices."

"If you've been waiting for a great deal on a great pre-owned vehicle, your wait is over. The $49 "Eliminator Sale" will be held Saturday, May 2, 2009. You'll have the perfect opportunity to get a quality vehicle at a substantial savings while we drastically reduce our inventory." The will be held Saturday, May 2, 2009 only at Carl Gregory in the Northlake Auto Complex.

"Eliminator Sale,"

Only one $49 vehicle per family, please. Questions may be directed to any sales consultant at (706)-568-4900.

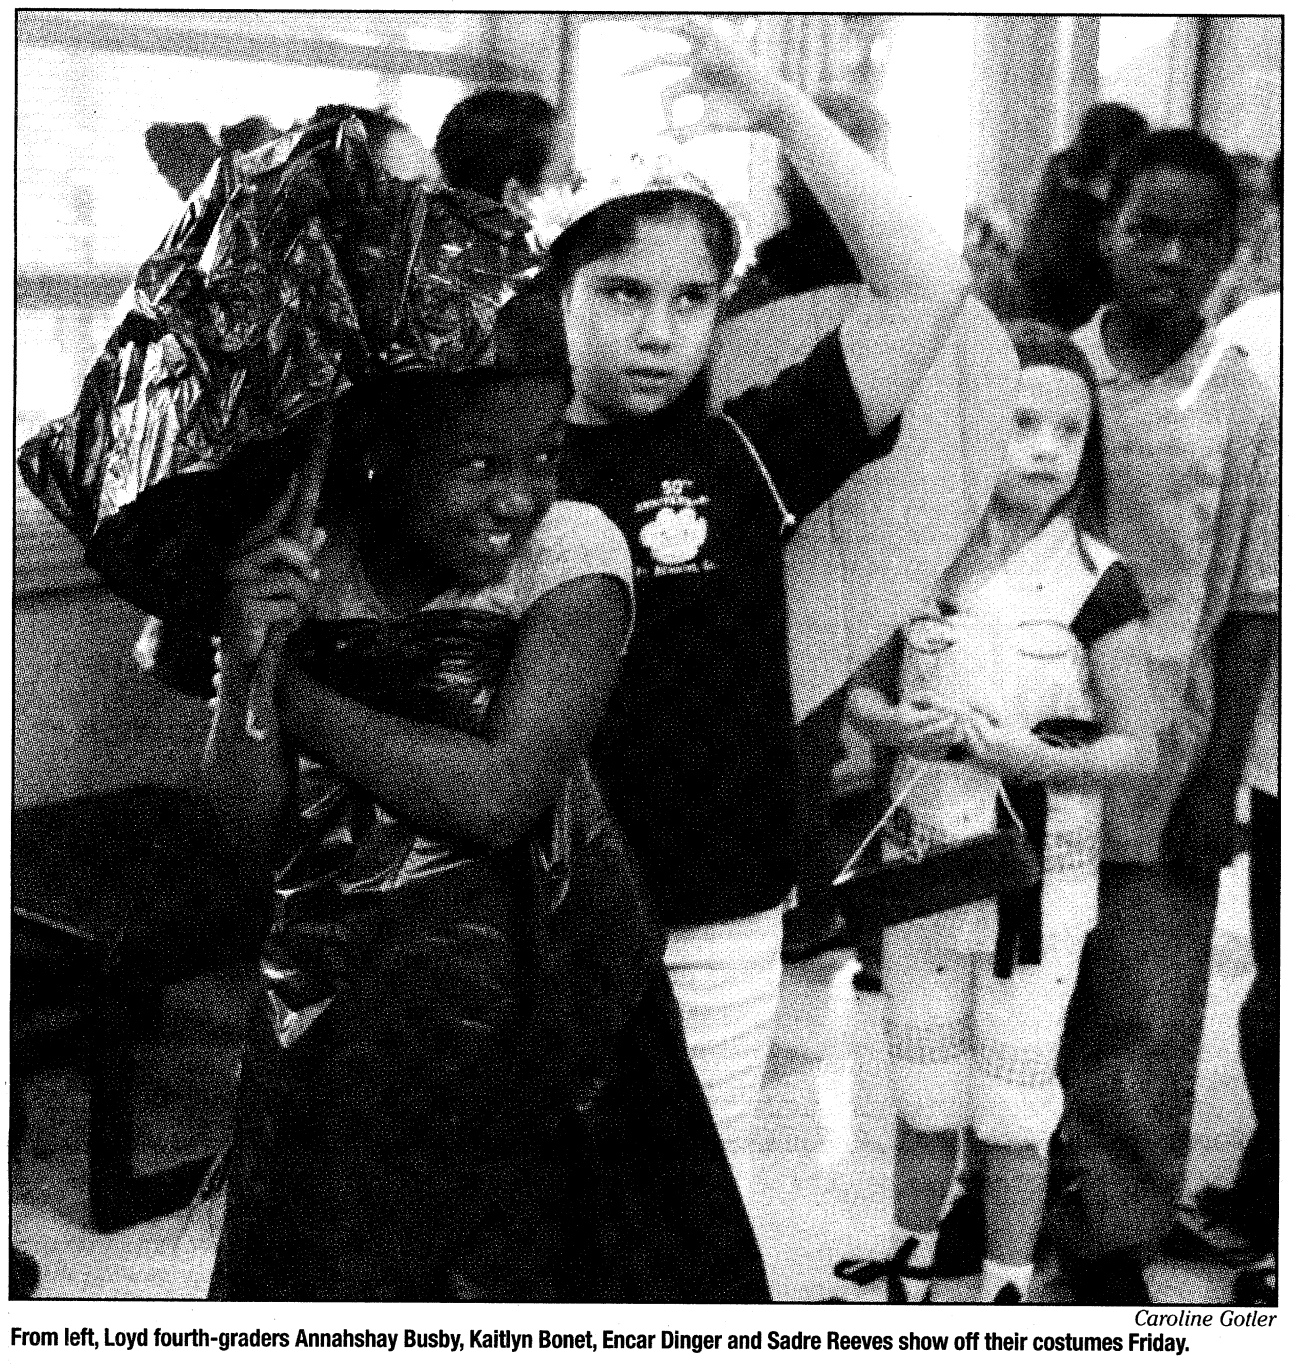
Salute to the South hearkens back to earlier era

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

Celebrate all things Southern at the first Salute to the South, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. May 9 and noon to 6 p.m. May 10 at the Uchee Creek Campground.

"We're trying to turn back time a little bit," said Shannon Beck, marketing director for the Directorate of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"We have hula hoop contests, fishing games, hayrides, spoon races ... old-fashioned games such as bean bag toss, sack races, a watermelon eating contest, and we have six bands playing country and bluegrass music," she said. "It's really just to pay homage to everything Southern."



For lunch or dinner, visitors can sample traditional Southern food, including fried chicken, barbecue and cobbler. They can also shop from a variety of arts and crafts vendors, many based in Georgia, Beck said.

In keeping with the old-time theme, there will be a car show, including vintage models, a rocking chair marathon and demonstrations of quilting, blacksmithing and woodworking.

Kids can enjoy inflatables, activities with Sayers Memorial Library and an outdoor showing of the movie Babe, Beck said, but they can also take part in some of the pastimes their parents or grandparents may have enjoyed as children.

Loyd students turn 'trash' to 'treasure'

Children learn environmental responsibility

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Forget Milan and Paris — Fort Benning residents need look no further than their own backyard to find high fashion.

When students at Loyd Elementary took part in the school's eighth annual Trash to Treasure Fashion Parade, they turned hallways into runways as they showcased costumes made of recycled materials.

The fashion show was the culminating event of Green Week, a schoolwide effort to educate children about environmental issues.

"Instead of just making (recycling) an occasional thing, we want it to be a lifestyle for them," said Katherine Walker, Green Week organizer and Loyd kindergarten teacher.

A highlight of Green Week was the book recycling program, Walker said. Students brought used, unwanted books to school and received tickets they exchanged for another book.

Each grade completed its own project for Green Week. Kindergartners planted a vegetable garden while fourth-graders made paper out of unwanted newspaper and fifth-graders wrote poems about the environment.

For kindergartner Michelle Gutierrez, walking in the parade was the week's highlight.

"I had fun," she said. "I made my princess costume out of paper."

Second-graders Shaleek Memminger and Xavier Thomas wore ninja costumes they created using recycled paper.

Memminger said Green Week taught him the importance of picking up trash.

"Don't throw it on the ground," he said. "Because if we don't pick up trash, the Earth will die."

Chanique Williams, a second-grader who wore a cheerleader costume made of plastic bags and paper for the parade, said Green Week taught her the Soldiers, family members walk for March of Dimes

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

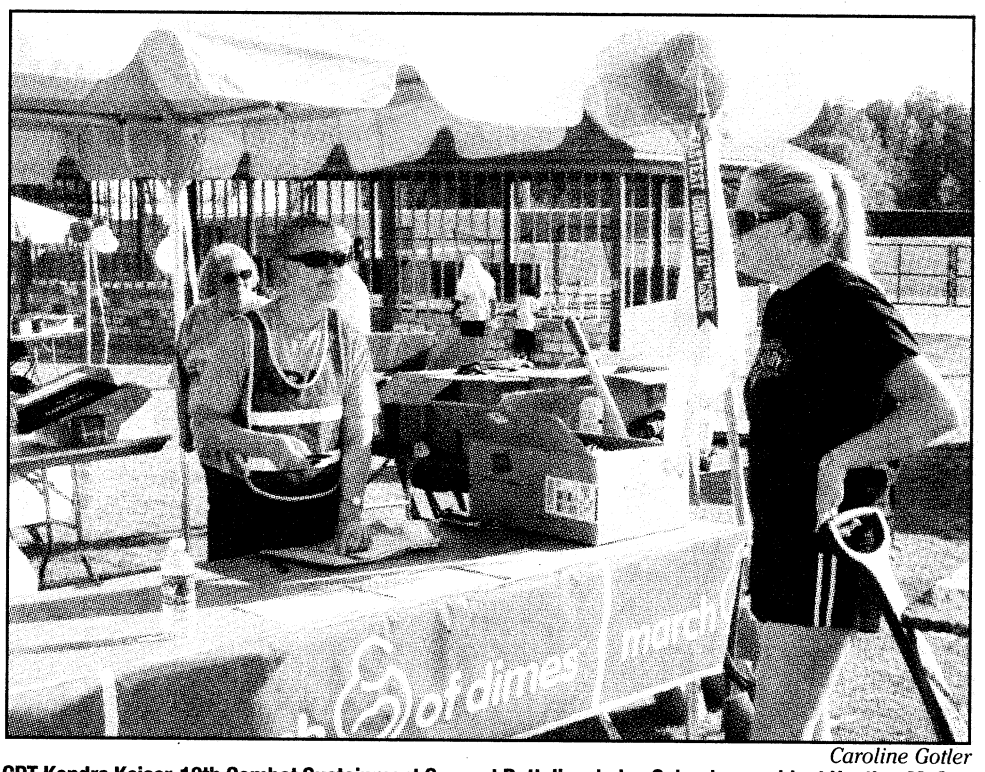
When 100 Soldiers and family members from the 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion met at Northside High School Saturday morning to walk, their steps helped more than just their fitness levels.

The group participated in March for Babies, a three-mile walk to raise money for the March of Dimes, a nonprofit organization that works to improve infant and pregnancy health. The 13th CSSB donated $620 to the organization.

"We want to help kids and families in our community and this is the best way for us to do that," said CPT Kendra Keiser, public affairs officer for 13th CSSB and March for Babies team captain.

The walk was part of a community involvement program the unit launched in November, Keiser said. Soldiers from 13th CSSB have volunteered at Georgetown Elementary School in Columbus, and will participate in the American Cancer Society's Relay for Life fundraiser.

For some Soldiers in the 24th Ordnance Company, which returned Feb. 1 from a 15-month Iraq deployment, the walk was a way of reintegrating into the civilian world.



"We're not just feeling like Soldiers, we get to feel like normal people," said SGT (no first name) Sephiroth. "Being immersed in activities outside the military makes the whole soldiering thing less stressful for a lot of people."

SPC Jackson Kennedy, 104th Transportation Company, said March for Babies was a cause close to his heart. Both of his children, 3-year-old Carter and 1-year-old Kayla, who attended the walk with him, were born prematurely.

"This is important to me because it's for my kids and all the premature babies," he said.

CPT Max Donaldson, commander of the 104th Transportation Company, said walking with his unit was a way to give back to a community that has given much to him.

"I look at it as one big community — Fort Benning, Columbus, Phenix City," he said. "The Soldiers of Fort Benning are all part of this community, so we need to be supportive. As much as they support us when we come home from deployments, we need to support them as well."

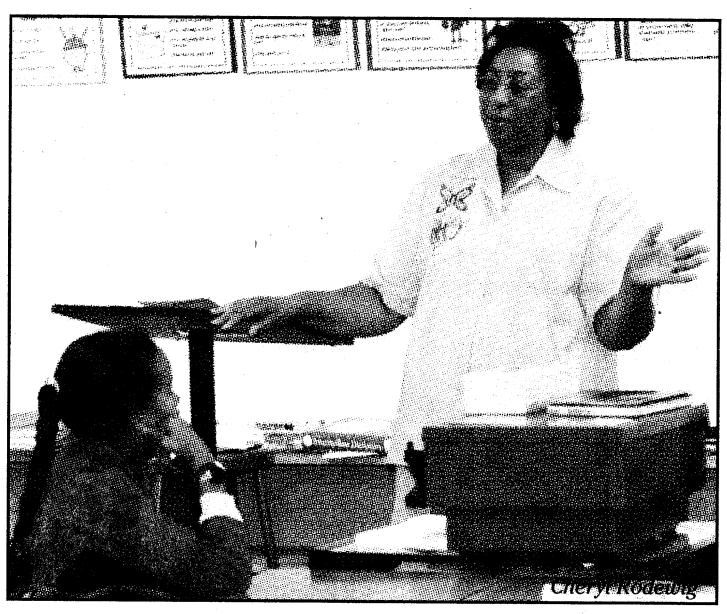
Substitute retires after 25 years

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

After 25 years of substitute teaching for Fort Benning schools, Laverna Elzy is retiring.

Over the years, she has been at every school on post and taught subjects ranging from music and math to physical education and social studies for all age levels. It was a career she found through unexpected circumstances.

"I decided to substitute teach because I'd had a lot of serious health problems, including a brain tumor, and I was really not supposed to go back to the work force," said Elzy.



"But I begged and I pleaded and I told my doctor I found just the perfect thing: substitute teaching. I wouldn't have to do it every day," she said. "And I started and I loved it. I guess one can tell that I loved it, because I didn't even realize I had been here 25 years."

Elzy began subbing at Faith Middle School in 1984. Soon, teachers at all post schools, regardless of grade level or subject, began requesting her to teach classes in their absence.

"She's always requested," said Ann Justice, a fifth-grade teacher at Stowers Elementary.

"She has been truly a godsend and a blessing to Fort Benning schools," Justice said. "She knows what to do when she comes into a classroom. She's excellent with the students. We know that if we have to be out of school for any reason at all, Mrs. Elzy will come

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

Girl Scouts visit founder's home

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

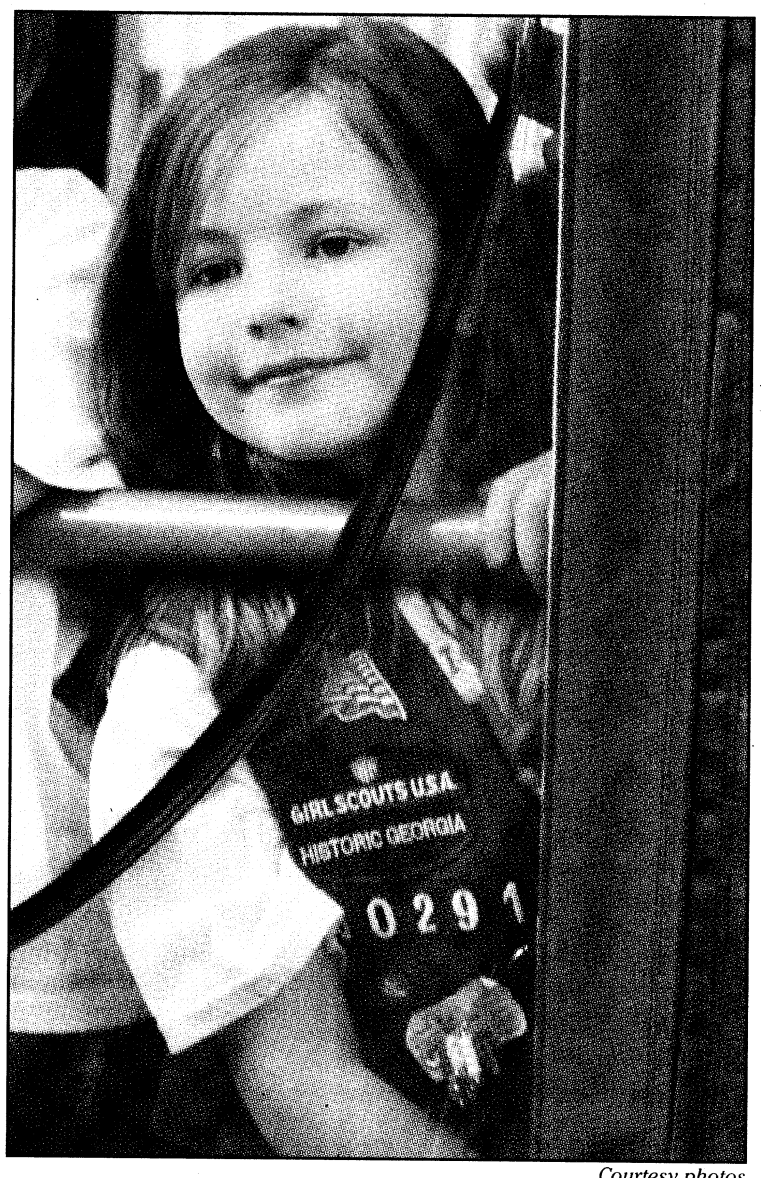
Fourteen Fort Benning Girl Scouts made their dream a reality April 17-19 — to see Savannah, hometown to Juliette Gordon Low, the founder of Girl Scouts.

It took 1,548 boxes of Girl Scout cookies and some of the profits from last year's sale to make it happen but Brownie Troop 50291 met their goal.

"We wanted to go there because of Juliette Gordon Low," said 8-year-old Katie B. Wood. "She was adventurous; she was curious. She made the very first handbook that showed how to tie up a robber with a 6-inch string. She was just a great person, and right now she's a great role model to me and my friends."

The girls visited Low's house and gravesite and took a guided trolley tour where they leaned more about the founder. They also went on a dolphin cruise — probably because Low loved animals, Katie B. said — and visited a lighthouse and the beach.

"It was just a really fun, fun, fun trip," she said. "I have always wanted to go to Savannah. I think I'll remember that trip my whole entire life. We got to spend a weekend with our mothers, and my brother was the only boy there but other than that, it was all girls."



Brownie Troop 50291 prepares to enjoy a dolphin cruise departing from Tybee Island, Ga.

They stayed in a beach cabin on Tybee Island, Ga., 14 Girl Scouts, 12 moms and a few siblings who came because dads were deployed.

"It was like a giant sleepover," said Jeanene Wolf, who went on the trip with her daughter, Aubrey. "I think all the Girl Scouts bonded and became even closer and got to know each other better. This was my first time going, and I think the moms had just as much fun as the girls. I was very moved by it. I loved everything."

Girl Scouts from all over the country visit Savannah, so it was a great historical location for their troop to see, Wolf said.

"They decided as a group they wanted to go see the Juliette Gordon Low birthplace," she said. "I really thought it set a good lesson for them — you work hard for something and then you get rewarded for all your dedication. They really got to see that. I think it was a lifetime memory for all of the girls — an exhausting weekend but definitely worth it."

Honor students visit capital

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fifteen Faith Middle School students, members of National Junior Honor Society, returned to Fort Benning April 23 after a three-day trip to Washington, D.C. The trip was made possible in part by a $1,000 donation from the Ketia 4 Kidz Foundation, founded by WNBA player Ketia Swanier. The donation went toward accommodation costs and made the trip more financially accessible for the students, said Bridgette Colburn, honor society sponsor and trip chaperone.

The purpose of the trip was to give the students a firsthand look at the nation's political system and leaders, Colburn said.

"My goal was for them to go there and see where it all happens and also to realize what went into making it that way," she said.

Eighth-grader Alexis Ballesteros said visiting the Capitol gave her a better understanding of what it takes to become a political leader.

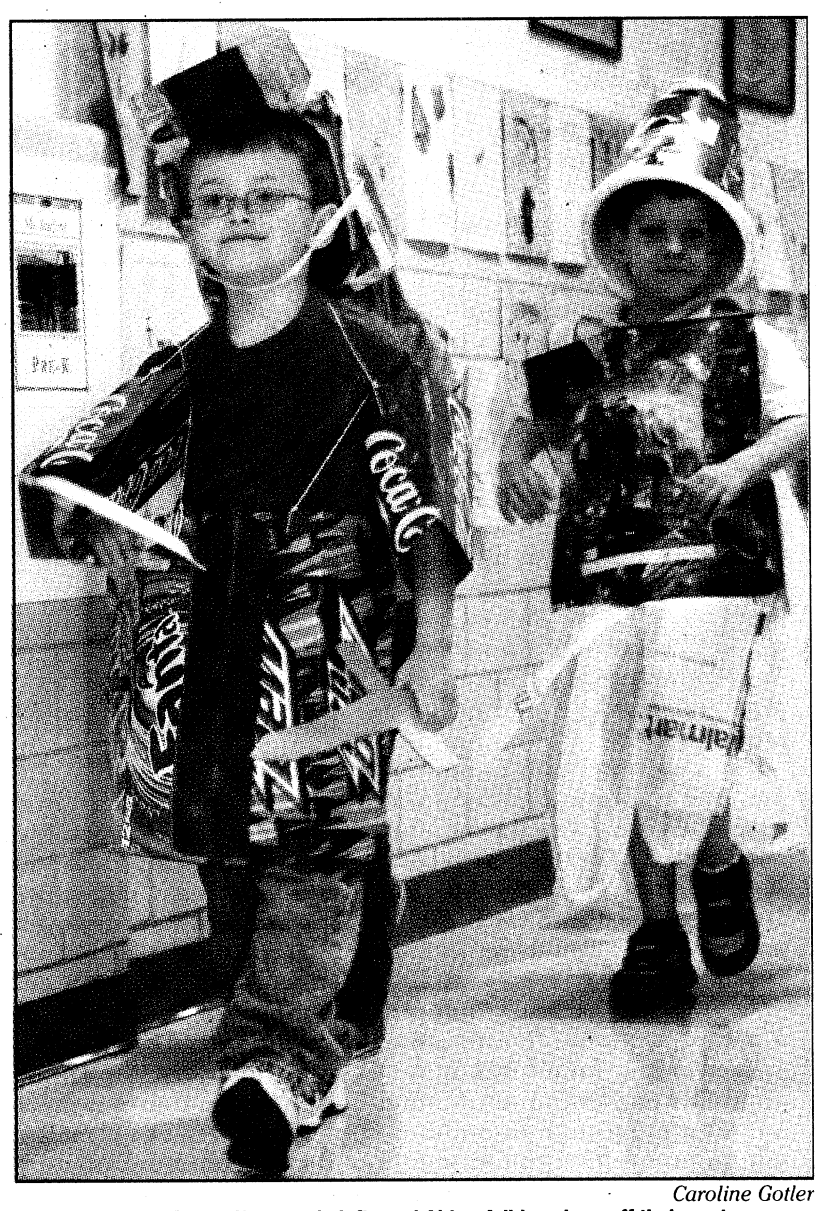
"Visiting the Capitol building showed us that if we want to go into politics, here is what politicians do every day," she said.

The students visited many of the city's major monuments, including the White House, Lincoln Memorial, Washington Monument, and the Smithsonian Museum. Many of the students cited the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum as a trip highlight.

For seventh-grader Joslyn Dills, visiting the museum was an eye-opening experience.

"I've always known about the Holocaust, but it wasn't until I actually went to the museum that I realized just how severe it was," she said.

Eighth-grader Brett Barrientes experienced a similar moment of awakening while visiting the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Wall. His grandfather, who served three tours in Vietnam, was saved during a firefight there by a fellow Soldier who gave his life shielding him from enemy fire. Though Barrientes had visited the wall before, it wasn't until he returned with his classmates that he understood the significance of the sacrifice made by the Soldier who saved his grandfather.



"When I was there before with my mom and my grandpa, they cried, but I didn't," he said. "I didn't really understand until I went back this time, and then I kind of teared up."

Ballesteros said visiting the wall inspired her to consider ways her generation might someday pay tribute to Soldiers fighting in the Global War on Terrorism.

"It made me wonder — are they going to do the same for our parents and for this war?" she said. "It would be the least we could do after what they've done for us."

Colburn said she was glad the students came away from the trip with a deeper understanding and appreciation of what it means to be a leader of the country.

"It was fun, but there was also more to it," she said. "I think they really got that lesson of leadership and what they can do (to become leaders.)" everyone," she said. "It's definitely a chance for the parents to show the kids what they did when they were children — before the Xbox and before we had a television and a computer in every room — just getting back to good old fun."

The festival replaces the annual spring luau. The Recreation Delivery System, a board made up of leaders from different FMWR divisions on post, regularly assesses new programs for Fort Benning.

Salute to the South was a year in the making and the result of a careful evaluation of what the community was looking for, said Noelle Phillips, who heads up the RDS team.

"We felt it was time to evaluate what we were doing and why we were doing it, and that's how Salute to the South came about," Phillips said.

"We're so excited about it. We have something going on every single hour, whether it's a barbecue eating contest or a clogging show."

From face painting to Southern rock, the festival will take families "back to the basics," regardless of generation, Phillips said.

"We wanted to celebrate the region in which we live and bring back a small-town feel to the installation. Most military families will tell you the Army is like a family, so we wanted to create an event that fosters that type of feeling," she said.

There will be giveaways, including a chance to win a three-day Country Music Awards Music Fest trip to Nashville or a guitar autographed by country music artist Ronnie Dunn of Brooks and Dunn.

Moms who attend the Mother's Day brunch at the Benning Conference Center May 10 will receive a coupon for a free photo at Salute to the South. The same day, Grammy award-winning band Rhonda Vincent and the Rage will perform two shows.

Green Week: Teaches value of recycling importance of recycling.

"If we don't recycle, then we won't have any more stuff to use to make houses and stuff for people to wear," she said.

Walker said she hoped students would use their new knowledge to educate their parents about recycling.

"If we could get 100 percent recycling with our families here at Loyd Elementary School, that would be fantastic," she said.

"Recycling is so easy to do. If they can drop it in a trash can, they can drop it in a recycling bin. It's the (kids') world, and we need them to start (recycling) as we move into the 21st century."

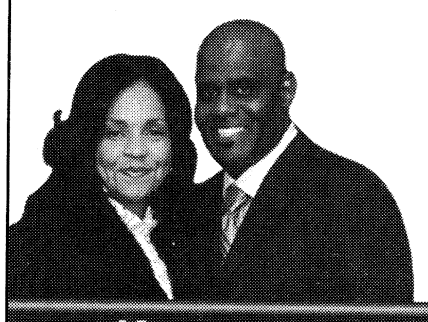
in and she will keep the learning continuous. I don't know a subject area that she's not able to completely step in and teach."

Elzy not only teaches but helps grade and sort papers or whatever else is needed. She will be missed, Justice said.

"Mrs. Elzy is such a remarkable person," she said. "She feels that this is what God has called her to do with her life. She sees it as her duty to step in and do the very best job that she can do with these children, for these children and for the teachers and the schools."

Elzy said she enjoys helping students find ways to learn new concepts they are having trouble with.

"I love learning. I love working with students," she said. "I love seeing their faces light up when they learn something. It's a commitment, and it's one that I've always wanted to see carried out to the very best of my ability."



Even in retirement, Elzy will continue to pursue her love of learning and sharing it with others.

She will still teach her grandchildren, who stay with her every summer, and she will help a neighbor's son through his rehabilitation from a bad accident in Atlanta.

In this new season of her life, service will still be her goal, she said.

Elzy will continue teaching as needed through the rest of the school year before retiring in May.

If you have passed the infatuation stage of your relationship where everything your mate says is cute or funny and they never seem to do anything wrong, this column may be for you. If you are still in that stage of bliss where they can do nothing wrong, cut this out and read it in a month or so.

Marriage experts tell us conflict with one's mate is inevitable. You will get into fights over simple things like how to load a dishwasher, fold the towels, put soap into the washing machine.

Are these things worth divorcing over? No. Everyone in a relationship will come to a point they will explode, that one moment when they push your buttons. Here are a few phrases you should avoid during the heat of an argument:

"I give up." When an argument is not going your way, do not say, "I give up." This is often confused with saying, "I do not care," a phrase often received by the other as meaning that their feelings do not matter. It is received as avoiding the conversation, and marriage experts refer to this as emotional withdrawal. This type of behavior can destroy good communication between two loving people.

"I want out of this relationship." This statement destroys security in a relationship. When your spouse fails to hear you, stating, "I want out of this relationship," is not going to make them want to listen. Often it evokes anger and the battle get worse. Don't cry wolf unless you mean it. After all, who wants to wake up each morning wondering if your marriage will end?

Absolute phrases like "You never" or "You always." These are attacking statements that point out the failure of your mate. A better approach is, "I would appreciate it if..."

Learn to know what you want and express it to your mate in a positive manner. If you and you spouse spent as much time and energy seeking to serve each other as you do fighting, think of how happy you would be together in your marriage every day.

If you need help or suggestions on improving your marriage, call us at the Chaplain's Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 or stop in to see us at 2606 Dixie Road located in Soldier's Plaza.

Our trained pastoral counselors are ready to serve you and help get your relationships growing in the right direction. We are there to help you with your journey. May God richly bless you and yours.

Unselfishness, caring, on God's most-wanted list

CH (MAJ) Jose D. Resto
CHAPLAIN RESOURCE MANAGER

In our country, we seem to have a "top 10" list for everything. One of the most well-known is the TV series "America's Most Wanted," which lists the top 10 criminals in the nation. But there are many other top 10 lists. We have the top 10 hits, the top 10 most famous people, the top 10 most beautiful women and men and the top 10 richest people.

So, I'm presenting a list of God's 10 most wanted people:

10. The person who puts God's business above any other business.

9. The person who brings his children to church instead of sending them there.

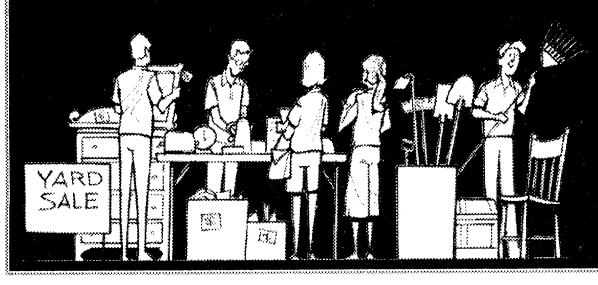
8. The person who is willing to be the right example to everyone he meets.

7. The person who thinks more of Sunday school than of Sunday sleep.

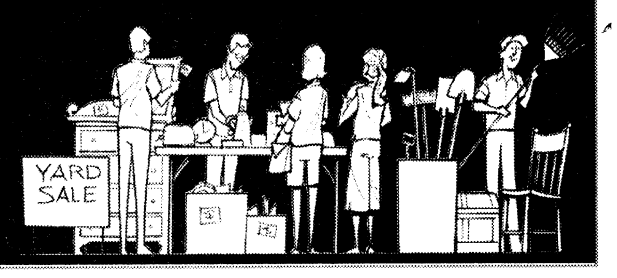
6. The person who gives what they should to the church and lives on the rest.

5. The person who goes to church for Christ's sake rather than for someone else's.

4. The person who has a passion to help others rather than be helped.



3. The person who can see his own faults before he sees the faults of others.



2. The person who has a willing mind, rather than a brilliant one.

1. The person who is more concerned about winning people to Christ than about winning worldly honors.

Being on God's list is necessary to do his will. The Bible says, "Yet a time is coming, and has now come when the true worshipers will worship the Father in spirit and truth for they are the kind of worshipers the Father seeks" (John 4:23 NIV). Be one of God's top 10 most wanted.

Watch out for that snout!

Photos by Lori Egan

This largetooth sawfish lives in the Ocean Voyager gallery. According to georgiaaquarium.org, the largetooth sawfish is found in the tropical Indo-West Pacific, which includes areas of East Africa to New Guinea, the Philippines, Vietnam and Australia. It also can be found in the Atlantic and eastern Pacific oceans. The largetooth sawfish inhabits sandy or muddy bottoms of shallow coastal waters, estuaries, river mouths and freshwater rivers and lakes. It eats crustaceans, mollusks and other animals found at the bottom of the ocean, as well as small schooling fish such as mullet or herring. The saw is used for digging in the sand or mud for food, attacking prey and as a defense mechanism.

Georgia Aquarium is a melting pool of fish

Lori Egan
THE BAYONET

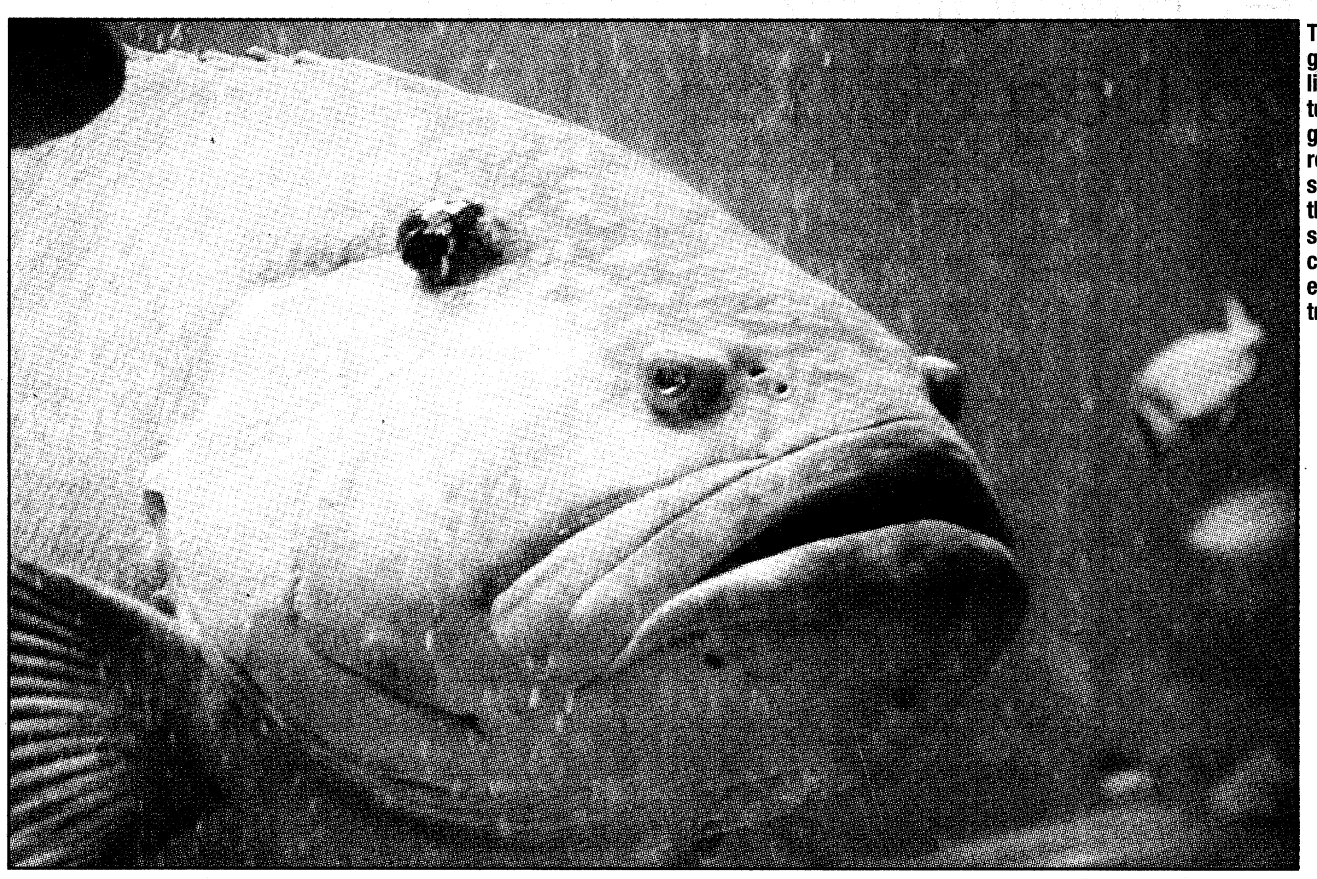
The Georgia Aquarium in Atlanta is a great day trip. With more than 8 million gallons of water, it is the world's largest aquarium with the largest collection of aquatic life. And it's just up the road from Fort Benning.

The aquarium has five galleries that depict five different habitats.

The River Scout is the only freshwater gallery, with logjams and waterfalls it's home to African cichlids, a variety of electric fishes, piranhas and Asian small-clawed otters.

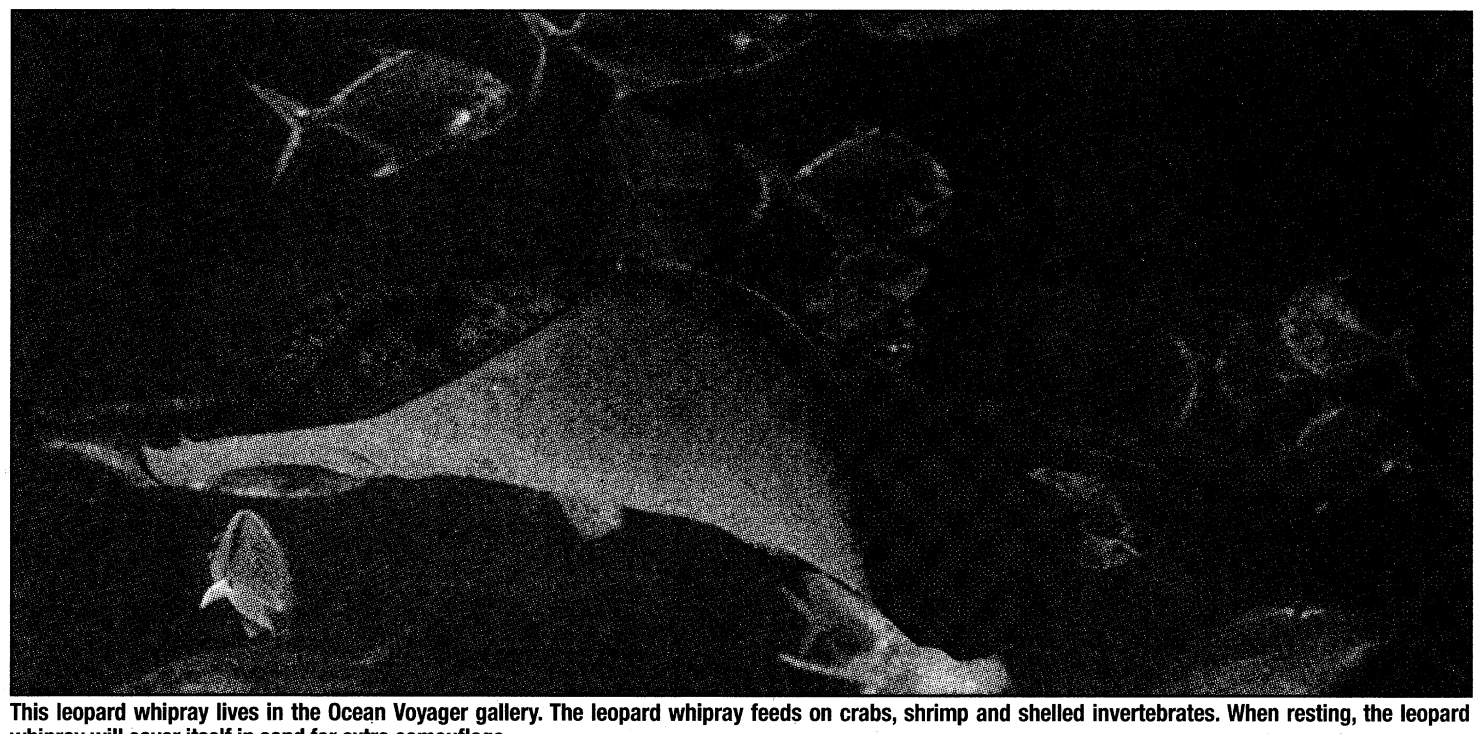
Do you know otters use tools to build, play with toys and some say they like to swim on their backs to keep their paws dry? My 17-year-old cynical, future veterinarian told me otters don't care about keeping their paws dry — they live and play in water. Either way, the otters are really cute and fun to watch.

The Cold Water Quest gallery is home to the aquarium's beluga whales, which have flexible necks. So as you crane your neck to see it, it can crane its neck to see you. The aquarium's mascot, Deepo, is a bright orange fish called a Garibaldi damselfish, which lives in this gallery. Deepo stars in a movie for children about conservation, Deepo's Undersea 3D Wondershow. A volunteer warned the viewers that someone would scream, little did I know it would be me. Very embarrassing.



The most amazing gallery is the Ocean Voyager gallery where the sharks — whale, sand tiger, reef, zebra and hammerheads — swim with giant groupers, humphead wrasse and manta rays.

Jellies, seahorses and butterflyfish are home in the Tropical Diver gallery. And in the Georgia Explorer gallery there are schools of groupers.



Another exhibit at the aquarium is the Titanic Aquatic with artifacts from the Titanic.

The aquarium is open 365 days a year, but the hours change. The easiest way to get information, directions and tickets is online at www.georgiaaquarium.org. If you buy the tickets online, you can skip some of the lines.

To avoid the crowd, I recommend trying to get the earliest entrance possible.

This giant grouper looks like it has a tumor. The giant grouper is a reef-associated saltwater fish that dwells in shallow reefs, caves and estuaries in tropical climates.

This leopard whipray lives in the Ocean Voyager gallery. The leopard whipray feeds on crabs, shrimp and shelled invertebrates. When resting, the leopard whipray will cover itself in sand for extra camouflage.

OPENING TODAY

X-MEN ORIGINS: WOLVERINE

X-Men Origins: Wolverine tells the story of Wolverine's epically violent and romantic past, his complex relationship with Victor Creed, and the ominous Weapon X program. Along the way, Wolverine encounters many mutants, both familiar and new, including surprise appearances by several legends of the X-Men universe.

"X-Men Origins: Wolverine" stars Hugh Jackman and Liev Schreiber. It is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of action and violence, and some partial nudity.

BATTLE FOR TERRA

Humanity is the invading force in this animated sci-fi film. After the destruction of Earth, mankind has taken to space in a desperate search for a hospitable planet. When they find one, the only thing that stands in their way is the peaceful citizens of the planet, and the humans declare war.

Battle for Terra stars the voices of Justin Long, Evan Rachel Wood, Brian Cox, Chris Evans and James Garner. It is rated PG.

GHOSTS OF GIRLFRIENDS PAST

Celebrity photographer Connor Mead loves freedom, fun and women... in that order. A committed bachelor who thinks nothing of breaking up with multiple women on a conference call, Connor's mockery of romance proves a real buzz-kill for his kid brother, Paul, and a houseful of well wishers on the eve of Paul's wedding. Just when it looks like Connor may single-handedly ruin the wedding, he is visited by the ghosts of his former jilted girlfriends, who take him on a revealing and hilarious odyssey through his failed relationships–past, present and future. Together they attempt to find out what turned Connor into such an insensitive jerk and whether there is still hope for him to find true love...or if he really is the lost cause everyone thinks he is.

Ghosts of Girlfriends Past stars Matthew McConaughey, Jennifer Garner, Breckin Meyer, Lacey Chabert and Robert Foster. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content throughout, some language and a drug reference.

ALSO PLAYING

THE SOLOIST

Steve Lopez is a columnist for The Los Angeles Times whose life has reached a dead end. The newspaper business is in an uproar, his marriage has fallen apart and he can't remember why he ever loved his job in the first place.

When he meets Nathaniel Ayers, a homeless violinist, in the Skid Row section of Los Angeles, Lopez sees him as just another story idea. When Lopez learns how Ayers, a prodigy who was once headed for fame, wound up living on the street, he embarks on a quest to help him. But as he fights to change Ayers' life, Lopez realizes it is his own life that is being changed by their friendship.

The Soloist stars Jamie Foxx, Robert Downey Jr., and Catherine Keener. It is rated PG-13 for thematic elements, drug use and language.

FIGHTING

Shawn MacArthur is a small-town boy who has come to New York with nothing. Barely earning a living selling counterfeit goods on the street, his luck changes after he meets scam artist Harvey Boarden, who sees MacArthur has a talent for fighting. When Boarden offers MacArthur a chance to make more money, the two form an uneasy partnership. With Boarden as his manager, MacArthur becomes a star fighting almost overnight. But if he can ever hope to escape the dark world in which he's found himself, MacArthur must face the toughest fight of his life.

Fighting stars Channing Tatum, Roger Guenveur Smith and Terrence Howard. It is rated PG-13 for fight sequences, sexuality and language.

OBSESSED

Derek Charles is a successful financial asset manager who has just received a huge promotion. He is happy in his career and in his marriage to his beautiful wife, Beth. But, when Lisa, a temp worker in his office, begins stalking Derek, everything he's worked so hard for is placed in jeopardy.

Obsessed stars Beyonce Knowles, Idris Elba and Ali Larter. It is rated PG-13 for sexual material including suggestive dialog, violence and thematic content.

EARTH

Earth is the story of three animal families and their amazing journeys across the planet. The film combines rare action, unimaginable scale and extreme locations by capturing the most intimate moments of our planet's wildest and most elusive creatures.

Earth is directed by Alastair Fothergill and narrated by James Earl Jones. It is rated G.

17 AGAIN

In 1989, Mike O'Donnell was a 17-year-old high school basketball star with a bright future and college sports scouts on his trail. But, he threw it away to share his life with his girlfriend Scarlett and the baby she was expecting.

Twenty years later, Mike's glory days are behind him. His marriage is falling apart, he was passed over for a promotion at work, and his teenage children think he's a loser. When Mike is miraculously transformed into a 17-year-old, he gets a chance to redo his high school years. But, in trying to recapture his best years, Mike could lose the best things that ever happened to him.

17 Again stars Zac Efron, Leslie Mann, Matthew Perry and Michelle Trachtenberg. It's rated PG-13 for language, sexual material and teen partying.

CRANK: HIGH VOLTAGE

When hit man Chev Chelios is kidnapped by a mysterious Chinese mobster, he wakes up three months later to discover his nearly indestructible heart has been replaced by a battery-operated one that requires regular jolts of electricity to work. After a dangerous escape from his captors, Chev is on the run, determined to get his real heart back and wreak vengeance on whoever stole it.

The movie stars Jason Statham, Amy Smart and Bai Ling. It's rated R for violence, sexual content, nudity and language.

STATE OF PLAY

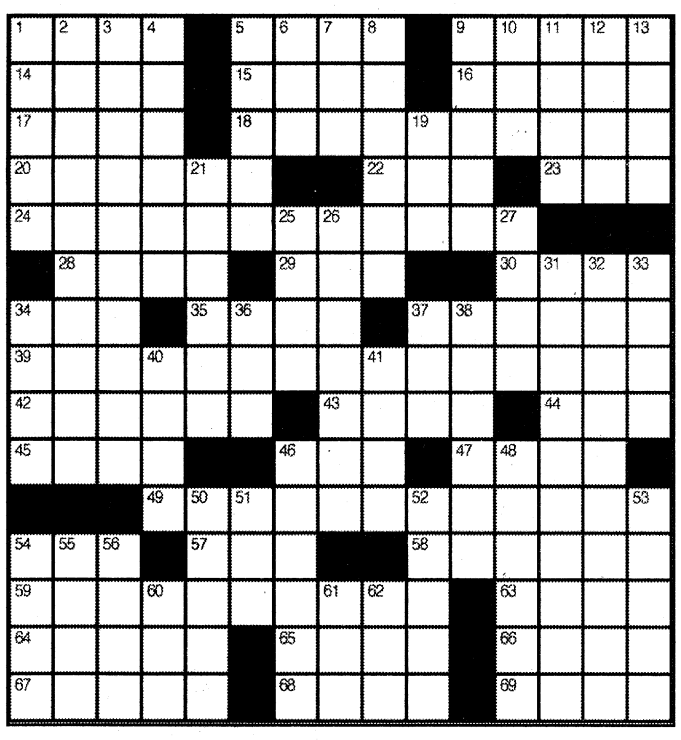
Congressman Stephen Collins is a rising star in his political party until his research assistant, who is also his mistress, is murdered, releasing a flood of buried secrets. When reporter Cal McCaffrey and his partner Della are assigned to investigate the murder, they step into a cover-up that threatens the nation's power structures. As they try to uncover the killer's identity, they discover that when billions of dollars are at stake, no one's integrity, love or life is ever safe.

State of Play stars Russell Crowe, Rachel McAdams, Jason Bateman and Helen Mirren. It's rated PG-13 for violence, language, sexual references and drug content.

HANNAH MONTANA: THE MOVIE

Miley Stewart's alter-ego, Hannah Montana's popularity is taking over Miley's life. For the young pop star, events begin getting out of control. When Miley misses her brother's departure for college because she was fighting with model Tyra Banks during a shopping spree, Miley's father devises a plan to fly her back to her hometown of Crowley Corners, Tenn., so she can regain perspective on what matters most.

The movie stars Miley Cyrus, Billy Ray Cyrus, Emily Osment and Jason Earles. It's rated G.



OBSERVE AND REPORT

Ronnie Barnhardt is head of security at Forest Ridge Mall, but dreams of becoming a police officer. When a flasher strikes at the mall, Barnhardt's delusions of grandeur are put to the test as he tries to use the opportunity to win the heart of makeup counter employee Brandi and earn a spot at the police academy. But, his pursuit of glory launches a turf war with Detective Harrison of the Conway Police.

Now, Barnhardt not only needs to find the flasher, but also catch him before the real police do.

Observe and Report stars Seth Rogen, Anna Fairs, Michael Pena and Ray Liotta. It's rated R for language, nudity, drug use, sexual content and violence.

MP patrols end, ACP hours change

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Effective immediately, the military police will no longer conduct courtesy patrols with the Columbus police in downtown Columbus, said Provost Marshal LTC Kevin Clarke.

During the past two years, MPs monitored the activity of weekend patrons at Broadway establishments with the courtesy patrols. Soldiers who frequent the Broadway establishments need to know that poor behavior may result in stiffer penalties because the Columbus police will handle any disturbances, Clarke said.

In an effort to increase military police presence in Fort Benning neighborhoods, military police bike patrols will be dedicated to neighborhoods starting May 25, which aligns with the last day of school May 27.

Another upcoming change is the operating hours of Access Control Point 1 on Lumpkin Road. In an effort to use resources more effectively, Clarke said, on June 1 ACP 1 hours of operation will be from 6 a.m. to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday, and remain closed on weekends. Manpower used at ACP 1 will shift to other gates with higher traffic needs, Clarke said.

A Huey helicopter is featured in a scene from the National Infantry Museum's signature exhibit "The Last 100 Yards." In the scene, 1st Cavalry Division Soldiers conduct a combat operation in Vietnam. The exhibit highlights battles beginning with the first battle of the Revolutionary War up to present day operations in Iraq.

'100 Yards' signature exhibit at National Infantry Museum

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

The muffled sounds of construction mark the location of "The Last 100 Yards," the main exhibit inside the National Infantry Museum, which is set to officially open June 19.

"The Last 100 Yards" is the museum's signature exhibit, museum curator Mike Criscillis said.

The state-of-the-art museum will house 13 galleries once it is complete, including galleries for specific eras in America's military history.

"The Last 100 Yards," dedicated to Army Infantryman, tracks their history from the first battle of the Revolutionary War in 1775 to current operations in Iraq, Criscillis said.

The exhibit depicts scenes from eight wars using life-like scenes and figures of Infantry Soldiers along with the technology of the time. The exhibit travels up a 100-yard ramp to signify the Infantry's role in taking the last 100 yards of the battle, Criscillis said.

The exhibit also features a World War II glider, Huey helicopter and a Bradley Fighting Vehicle used by the 4th Infantry Division during combat operations in Iraq.

While construction continues on the exhibits,

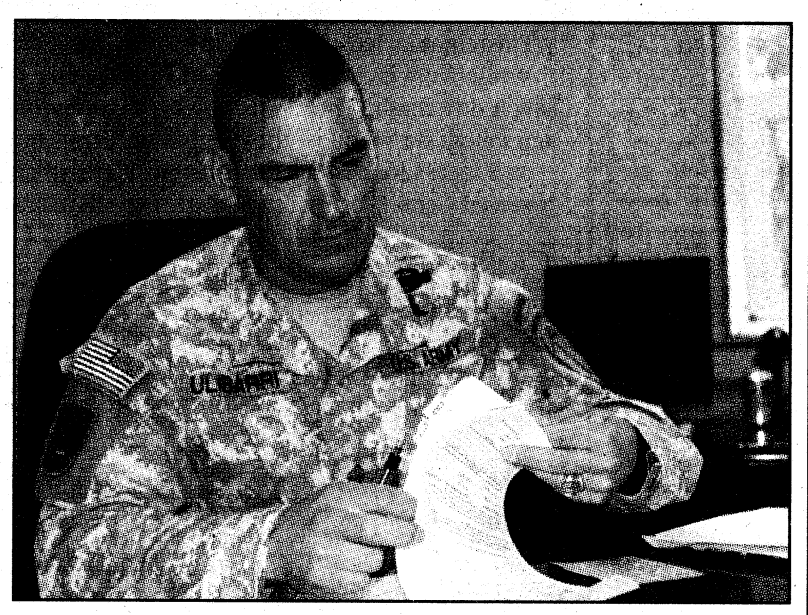
Ulibarri set to retire May 19

Vince Little
THE BAYONET



The top enlisted Soldier with the U.S. Army Infantry Center and School is calling it a career — at least from a uniformed standpoint.

CSM Joe Ulibarri will retire from the military May 19 but is planning to shift into an Army Department civilian position at Fort Benning.

"I don't look at it as a retirement. I'll take these ACUs off and put on khakis, but I'll continue to have some influence on Soldiers," said the career Infantryman, who entered active duty in January 1982.

Ulibarri spent a large chunk of his career at Fort Benning. He

Benning names top NCO, Soldier

THE BAYONET

Fort Benning has pegged its top warriors for 2009.

SPCTiffany Medina-James is the Soldier of the Year, while the noncommissioned officer honor goes to SSG David Wilkins. Both will represent the post at the Army's "Best Warrior" competition June 1-5 at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

SGT Brandon Leonard was second in the Soldier category. Runner-up in the NCO division was SSG Daniel Roney.

"I was surprised," said Wilkins, a long-range marksmanship instructor for 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 197th Infantry Brigade. "There are a lot of great NCOs out there. I feel honored.

Medina-James

"If you try hard enough, you can pretty much succeed in anything. I just put forth some effort and it paid off."

Wilkins

Likewise for Medina-James, a parachute rigger in E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment's "pack platoon." Last year, she won company, battalion, brigade and post Soldier of the Quarter boards.

In roughly 18 months, Medina-James is three courses shy of completing her bachelor's degree in military science at Georgia Military College. She recently finished Pathfinder School and is putting an application packet together for Officer Candidate School.

During spare time on weekends, she also volunteers as an animal worker at PetSmart.

"It feels great to represent the Echo Nation," said Medina-James, 25, of Crestview, Fla. "I've been studying, and my unit helped me get ready. I went into the board fully prepared. I actually would've been disappointed if I didn't win."

CPT Jeff Livingston, the E Company commander, said he wishes he could have an entire unit with Soldiers of her caliber.

Technology took center stage when more than 260 representatives from 80 companies across the country gathered at the Columbus Georgia Convention and Trade Center Tuesday for the Maneuver Center of Excellence Industry Day, a daylong event sponsored by the Chattahoochee Valley and Fort Benning chapter of the Association of the United States Army. The event provided contractors and industry representatives with an overview of the type of technology advancements the Army may need in the future.

"The intent of Industry Day is to bring in all the leaders in industry and tell them what our problems and challenges are, and about the areas we are most concerned with to improve our Soldiers' capabilities on the battlefield," said Don Sando, director of Capabilities Development and Integration. "We want to encourage them to think about the same problems we're thinking about."

"It's OK, Kristin. You can drive faster because snow gives you traction."

My best friend, and worst advice-giver ever, looked at me with pleading eyes as the snowstorm whipped my beat-up, primer-gray Honda across a snow-covered road somewhere in the Rocky Mountains west of Colorado Springs, Colo.

It was New Year's Eve 1998, and Liz and I wanted to end the year with an adventure to remember. And more than 10 years later, I remember that trip, just not as the glorious day I expected it to be. Instead, it was a lesson in why I should never listen to Liz's advice.

I am sure you have a good friend who you love and appreciate, but would never take advice from. I have Liz and I love her to pieces. And to forewarn others about Liz's spot-on ability to get people into trouble, the following story is told to any who introduce themselves as "Liz's friend." It's for protection, you see. To protect them from Liz's well-intentioned, but often not fact-based, advice.

So there we were, two teenage idiots trying to drive 60 mph in a heaving snowstorm that threatened to pick my tiny car up and toss it into the next county. We had just finished up a fun trip to the Mount Princeton Hot Springs, a quaint little resort set up in one of the Rockies' 14,000-foot peaks next to a frigid river containing naturally heated pockets of warmer water.

Liz and I had spent the day bouncing from one warm pocket of water to the next while admiring the beautiful falling snow. We wrapped up our day early to get on the road so Liz could meet up with her hot New Years Eve date and hit a party.

Around 4 p.m. we started home. We were approximately three hours away and Liz had an 8 p.m. date. And that falling snow was now a full-blown snowstorm. After less than 20 minutes of driving at 20 mph, I realized Liz wouldn't make her date. I didn't have snow tires or chains and there was no salt on the road to help melt the ice that I knew was under the snow covering the road. Liz sat in the passenger seat and stared fixedly at the speedometer. Exasperated, she said the words that made our beautiful trip infamous among my family and friends.

"It's OK, Kristin," Liz said confidently. "You can drive faster because snow gives you traction."

I stared at her quizzically for half a second.

"No, it doesn't."

"Yes, it does. The snow is crunchy and it gives the tires something to grip."

For some reason I still can't fathom, this explanation made sense. I could picture the tires gaining traction in the six inches of snow on the road. I stepped on the gas pedal. A moment later a salt truck rounded the curve ahead of us and whooshed past us in the oncoming lane. Five seconds later, my car was spinning out of control.

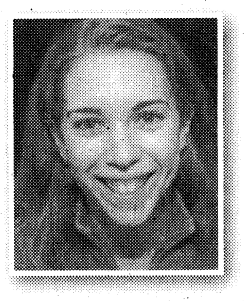
Years later, I still remember exactly what Liz was doing when our car started that terrifying tailspin. She had just finished peeling an orange and was opening a can of soda. The car slid sideways down a steep slope and dropped over the side of the road to rest at the bottom of the ditch on its side. Thankfully, we'd both been wearing seatbelts and neither was badly hurt. We each were decorated with orange peelings that years later I would still find in that car. I looked at Liz, who was below me because the passenger side slid into the ditch first, and asked "Are you OK?"

"Yes, check it out. I didn't even spill the soda!" beamed Liz, clearly bent on seeking the best in this situation.

"We aren't going to make it in time for your hot date, Liz," I said, remembering how only moments ago we had been in such a hurry.

"Sure we can! The snowstorm's almost over."

A half hour later, a good Samaritan and his wife pulled us out of the ditch. Back on the road, things continued to get worse. We made it through the snowstorm but caught a worse snowstorm barely an hour later that took my brittle windshield wipers as souvenirs. I will not go into details about Liz's advice for driving without windshield wipers. Suffice it to say I am a glutton for punishment.



Eventually, the fuses that worked the parking, brake, hazard and headlights blew. With no light, and the fear that an SUV would not see my snow-covered, slow-moving, pale gray vehicle and cause a fatal accident, I pulled over and called for help. By 9:30 p.m., we were home, retelling our ordeal to our parents. My mother is still laughing. Liz claims to this day that she never told me that snow could give my tires traction.

Liz and I are still best friends.

But after haircut disasters, getting lost in the woods without a map, and stranded 100 miles off course in New Mexico, when she says, "It's OK, Kristin …", I stop listening.

Adventures in the land of giants

THE BAYONET

Einstein said in his theory of the relativity of simultaneity that when two people watch two events happening at the same time, the events might not be simultaneous for both observers. In other words, if you ask two people watching the same thing what they saw, you'll get two different answers.

I recently observed a similar phenomenon at work. Coming in to the office one day, I found a group of Bayonet staffers taking turns lining up back-to-back trying to figure out which one of us is tallest. As the two tallest candidates stood next to each other, everyone else shouted unofficial verdicts, which, of course, were all different.

Einstein may have been on to something.

While we were all looking at the same thing, everyone saw it differently. There was however, unanimous agreement on who lost the height contest — me.

At 5 feet, 3 inches tall, I'm an inch shorter than what the National Center for Health Statistics says is average, and way behind the power curve in the Bayonet office. But even though people have been telling me my whole life that I'm short, I never really gave it much thought until I moved to France for two years. There, I noticed something strange — I wasn't short anymore!

No, I didn't have a freak growth spurt. As it turns out, the average French woman is my height, and quite a few are shorter than me. All of a sudden, I didn't have to search for petite-length pants in the stores, and when I strolled down the Parisian streets wearing three-inch heels, I even stood a head taller than some of my friends. I was really enjoying my newfound stature until I returned to the U.S. and somehow seemed to shrink as I got off the plane, kind of like Alice after eating the wrong mushroom in Wonderland. Had everyone in this country been so tall when I left?

The experience reminded me that, as Einstein said, everything's relative. My height had stayed the same, but people viewed me differently in different surroundings. Once I was back in the U.S., I went back to being one of the shorties among my friends and coworkers.

So next time you feel compelled to label someone,, remember that other people may not view that person the same way you do. As for me, I'm OK with being short — after all, Einstein was a 5-foot-7-inch genius.

Team to assess tactical radio

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

U.S. defense officials want Fort Benning's Maneuver Battle Lab to examine prototypes of a new tactical radio aimed at enhancing battlefield communications and tracking options.

The Wireless Network after Next program was created by the Defense Advance Research Projects Agency, which signed an agreement with the Army in February to develop the product.

The technology could reach the hands of Soldiers someday as a low-cost alternative to maintaining wartime transmissions.

Harry Lubin, chief of the Maneuver Battle Lab's live experimentation division, said WNaN should provide Soldiers with network-based radios that are reliable, inexpensive and adaptable. It automatically finds available bandwidth to relay voice or digital data.

"Sometimes, there's too much data coming through the pipe," Lubin said. "This scans the available spectrum, and moves that data into the proper opening. There's no longer a bottleneck."

The WNaN process sounds simple, he said, but the technology to make it happen is significant.

The 197th Infantry Brigade's experimentation force - the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's A Company, - will put it in the hands of Soldiers and push the system to see how far it can go, he said.

"A lot will depend on the assessments," Lubin said."It's really too hard to predict what's going to happen or how soon it could be ready."

The Army will spend $15 million on the WNaN project in the next fiscal year, officials said. But the long-term savings could be significant because it's a network and the Army might be able to purchase less expensive radios in the future.

An integrated product team will use a series of experiments to explore the capabilities of DARPA's WNaN technologies and identify applications that could net the Army a hefty return on its investment, said Kay Griffith-Boyle, chief of the Systems Engineering and Integration-Futures Office for the Program Executive Office for Command, Control and Communications Tactical - or PEO C3T - at Fort Monmouth, N.J.

WNaN features several technical developments that create a more reliable communications network in the battlefield's forward edge, she said, which will improve the voice network and data information management, even in the presence of high levels of interference or jamming.

"Equally important to the Army is the low cost of the radio," Griffith-Boyle said. "WNaN provides an affordable and capable wireless network device that provides network connectivity for the Soldier."

Prototypes probably won't arrive at Fort Benning until this fall, Lubin said. Two major evaluations are scheduled here in March and June 2010.

Industry Day: Expo draws hundreds

first time representatives from both the U.S. Army Armor School and the U.S. Army Infantry School participated, a change spurred by the development of the future Maneuver Center of Excellence, Sando said.

"The thing that's unique about this Industry Day is that it's saying to industry, 'Don't think about us as Infantry or Armor schools, think about us as one organization working together in a cohesive, coherent system,'" he said.

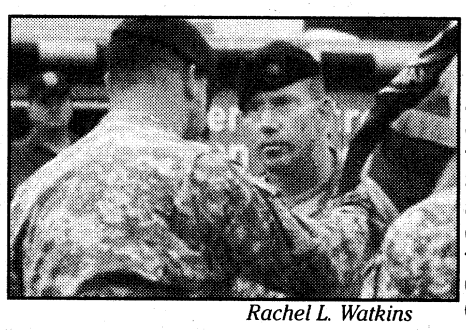
The day began with talks from Sando and other Army capabilities leaders, as well as from MG Michael Barbero, commanding general of the U.S. Army Infantry Center, and COL David Teeples, commander of the U.S. Army Armor School. Several NCOs, veterans of combat in Iraq and Afghanistan, spoke about what they saw as unmet equipment and systems needs in theater. In the afternoon, industry representatives attended breakout groups that provided more details on specific areas of technology requirements.

Steve Hesler, senior manager for the Columbus field office of Lockheed Martin corporate business development, said the NCOs' input would be especially valuable to technology developers at his company.

"We're not just spending all our time with four-star generals or congressmen," he said. "Talking to guys who have actually been out there and done it is very important to our team."

SSG Matthew Gotthardt, 1st Battalion, 41st Infantry Regiment, at Fort Riley, Kan., was one of the NCOs who spoke at the event. He said he hoped sharing his observations would help improve future missions.

"Equipment can make all the difference in middle of a firefight," he said. "If I can make a difference at this level, I can help my battle buddies."



Hesler said attending Industry Day helped him and his colleagues identify specific ways they could reduce the weight of Soldiers' equipment, an issue named by many capabilities leaders as one of the changes needed.

"We've learned we need to do more with robotics systems that can carry loads for dismounted Soldiers," Hesler said. "A robotics system that can follow the squad and carry water, ammo and rucksacks reduces their load so they're not as tired when they get where they're going."

Industry Day attendees will have an opportunity to submit proposals for requirements solutions at the AUSA Annual Meeting and Exposition in Washington, D.C., in October.

For Hesler, a retired lieutenant colonel who served in the Infantry, developing new technology for Soldiers is a way of continuing to serve his country.

"We want to build business for our companies, but at the same time, our hearts and souls are in making sure somebody's life is safe," he said. "We're not out there in uniform kicking down doors, but if there's some way we can give these guys a better weapon, that's what we can do."

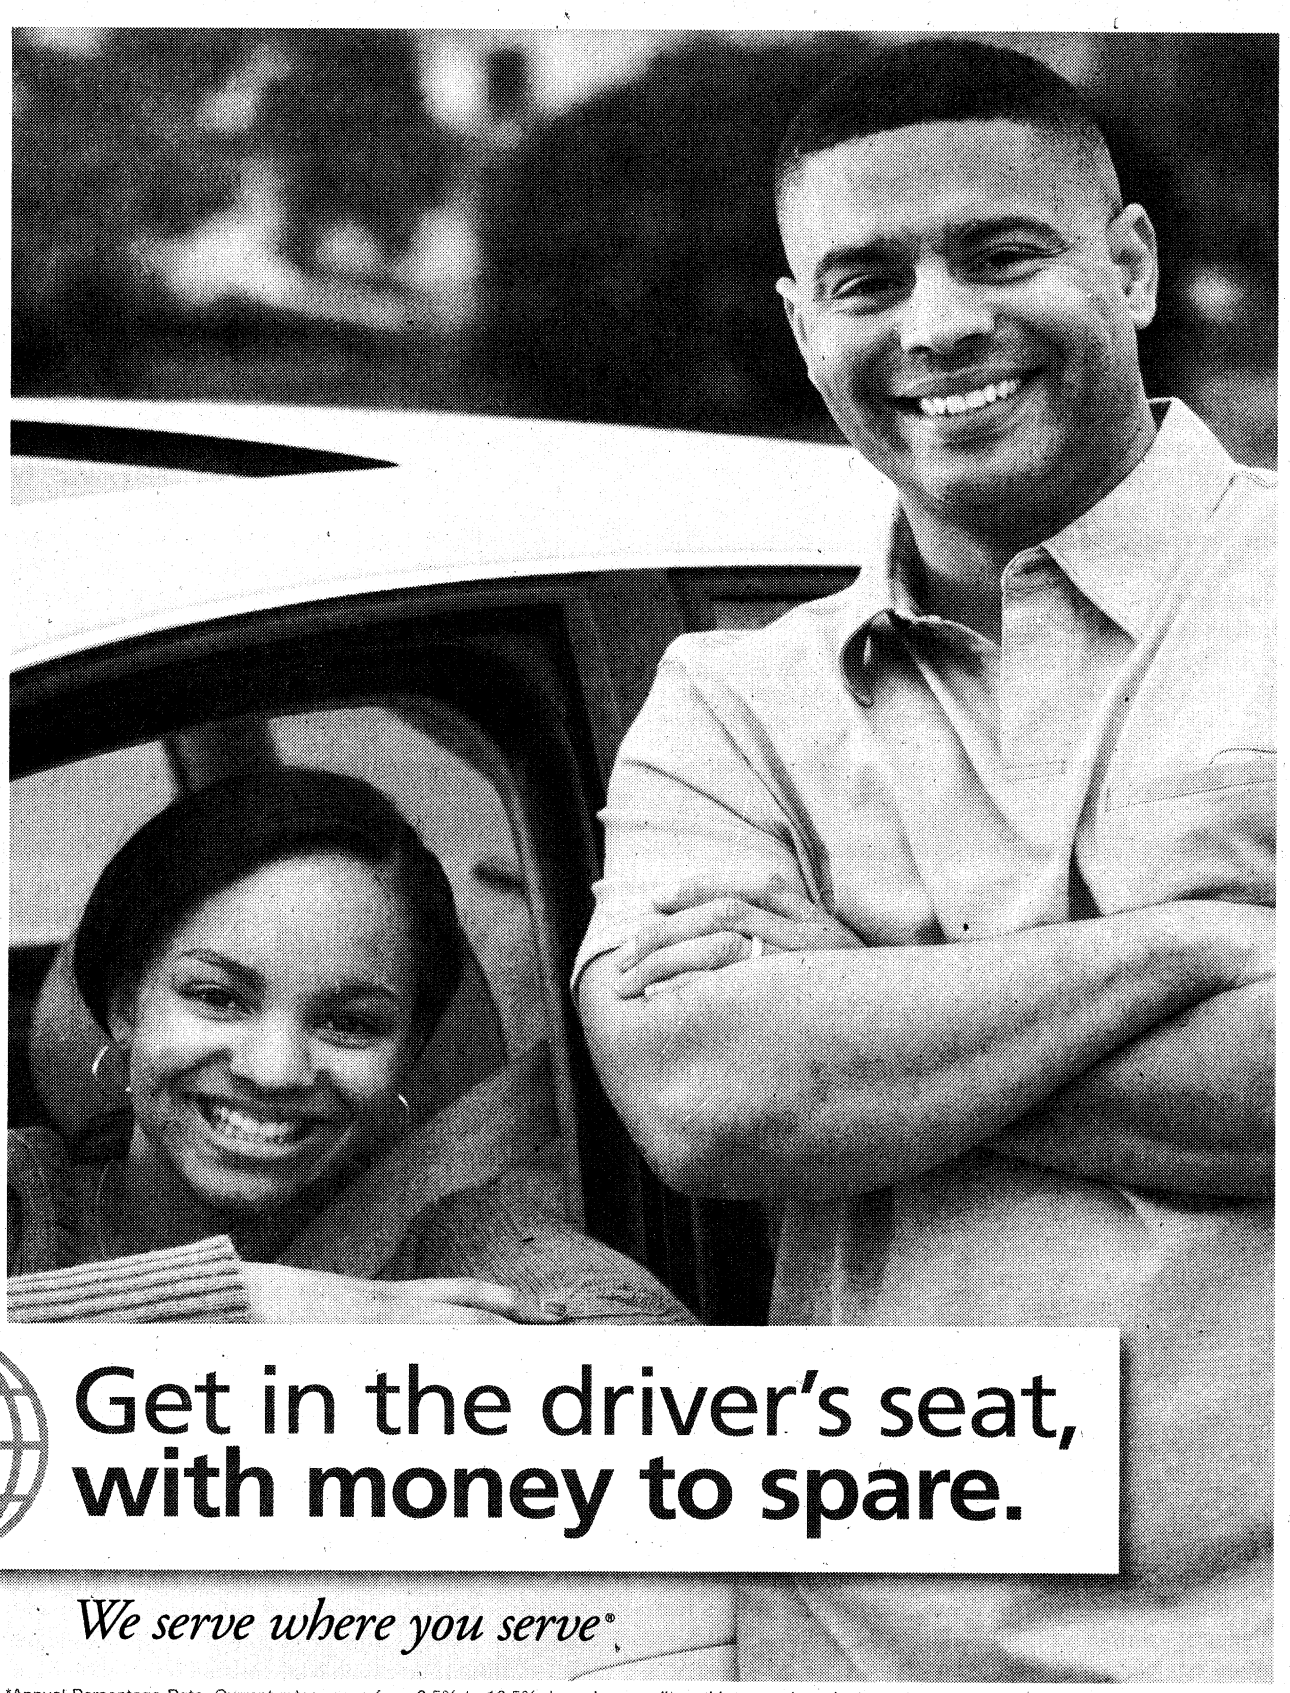
LTC Daniel Hodne takes the guidon from COL John Fenzel III, commander of the Accessions Support Brigade and reviewing officer, during the change of command ceremony.

USAMU gets new commander

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

LTC Daniel Hodne assumed command of the U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit from outgoing commander LTC Frank Muggeo in a change of command ceremony Tuesday at Ceremony Hill across from Pool Range.

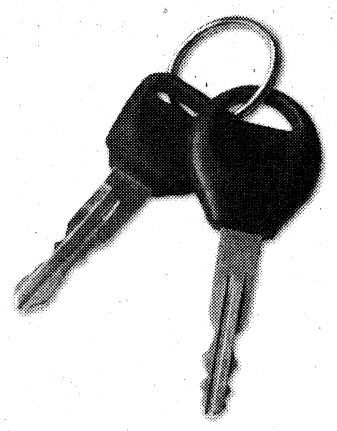


It's not Hodne's first time at Fort Benning. He completed Infantry Officer Basic Course, Jumpmaster School, the Bradley Commander Course, Ranger School and the Infantry Officer Advanced Course in the 90s.

"It's great to be back at Fort Benning and working on an Army post," the Special Forces officer said whose last assignment was at the Pentagon. There he served as an action officer in the Joint Staff Operational Plans and Joint Force Development Directorate and Deputy Directorate for Special Operations and Counterterrorism and was a strategist on the staff for the chairmen of the joint chiefs of staff. Hodne said he plans to continue the "progress and remarkable achievements" of USAMU. He said he has no plans to change any procedures that are in place as of now.

While under Muggeo's command, USAMU trained 6,000 Soldiers in marksmanship, earned 66 national titles, 19 interservice titles, two Olympic medals among many other achievements. USAMU broke six national records, three world cup titles and three Olympic records. USAMU Soldiers were the 2007 and 2008 International Best Sniper champions.

"Muggeo's relentless pursuit of excellence has truly made an enduring and indelible mark and he has set a very high standard," said COL John Fenzel III, commander of the Accessions Support Brigade and reviewing officer of the ceremony. "He led the way to USAMU's best year competitively in its long history. Muggeo was instrumental in the effort to improve and recast the way we train basic rifle marksmanship in our Army and that effort continues at Fort Benning."



Muggeo was first enlisted in Connecticut Army National Guard as an Infantry Scout in 1983 and after graduating college in 1987, he was commissioned as a 2LT in field artillery. His career includes commander of A-Detachment in 1st Battalion, 5th Special Forces Group, program manager for special operation counterproliferation and tours in Haiti, Kuwait, Afghanistan, Bosnia and Iraq. The last assignment of his Army career was at USAMU. Muggeo's retirement ceremony was held prior to the change of command.

Media Day

Reporters from local television networks filmed as artillerymen with Battery A, 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team, fired their M109 A6 Paladin Howitzer April 28 during Hammer Focus, the brigade's largest field exercise at Fort Benning. The media day supported the brigade's efforts to increase media coverage of its Soldiers and increase unit visibility as it prepares for an upcoming deployment.

Officers learn pepper spray effects

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"I've been shot in the face, but this is worse," SGT Will Tompkins said after being sprayed with oleoresin capsicum, better known as pepper spray.

Tompkins was one of 17 Soldiers in the 209th Military Police Detachment who were certified for OC spray Tuesday. After a classroom portion, where the MPs learned about the makeup of the spray, when to use it and how it effects a subject, they went outside for training. They were sprayed and then required to complete three tasks: striking an assailant with a baton, unarmed self-defense tactics and a felony handcuff.

"You, as an officer, have to know how you're going to react to OC," said Corey Michael, instructor for the OC course. "In the course of your job, you're going to be sprayed eventually by accident or the wind blows it back. You still have to continue to do your job and effectively control that situation."

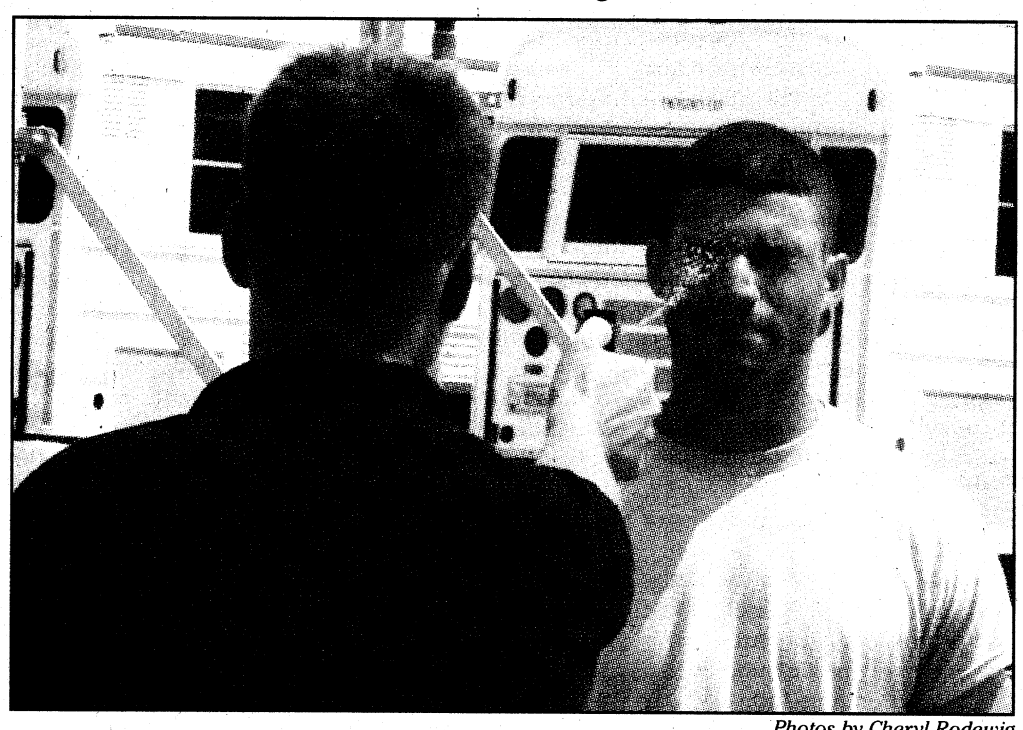
Even though Tompkins said the spray was worse than a bullet grazing his cheek, he is better prepared to do his job.

"It's like somebody taking two hot pokers and putting them in your eyes. You never get used to it, but you get used to the psychological side of it," he said. "I know once I get hit, I'm going to have trouble seeing and I'm going to have trouble breathing, but I have to focus my mind on doing my job regardless of what's going on."

The spray is made of 10 percent OC combined with water. The irritant in the spray, which comes from peppers, causes a burning sensation and makes sight difficult.

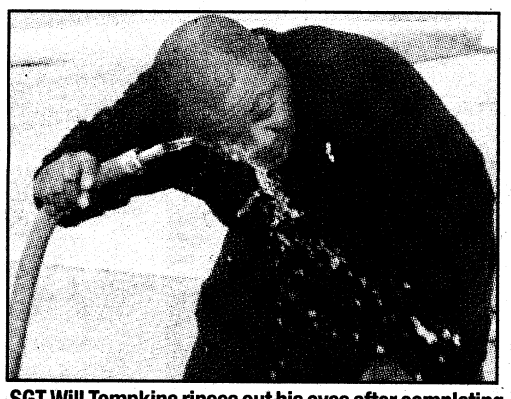
"This is worse than childbirth, and I had a C-section," said SPC Latosha Robinson.

The effects of the spray, including blurred vision, can last from 15 to 45 minutes.



"If you've ever gotten Tabasco sauce on your hands and rubbed it in your eye, it's the same basic principle," Michael said.

Officers use the spray as an intermediate weapon instead of their sidearm. It is particularly effective against individuals with a reduced sensitivity to pain, Michael said.



The training is every six months, and officers are sprayed once a year for recertification.

"A lot of people ask, 'I never got shot with my weapon, so why would I have to get sprayed with OC?' Here's the thing, how many times are you going to use your weapon and how many times may you have to use your OC during your law enforcement career? You're going to use your OC many more times," Michael said.

The training is part of an annual three-week course on self-defense tactics for law enforcement.

3rd HBCT doctor advises troops to wash hands

PFC Erik S. Anderson
3RD HBCT PAO

Army officials are responding to the nationwide H1N1 fears via a multi-faceted approach focused on prevention, identification and treatment.

Dr. (CPT) Doug Dudewicz, the 3rd Heavy Brigade Combat Team surgeon, offers some advice on staying healthy during this time.

• Wash hands often with soap and warm water. Cold water is not as effective at killing germs. If soap and water are not available, use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer.

• Cover your mouth when coughing or sneezing.

• Avoid touching your eyes, nose or mouth.

• Avoid close contact with people who are sick.

• If you are experiencing flu symptoms, seek help immediately, and avoid close contact with other people.

Health professionals are taking the threat very seriously.

"We are very, very concerned," World Heath Organization spokesman Thomas Abraham said. "We have what appears to be a novel virus and it has spread from human to human ... It's all hands on deck at the moment."

The symptoms of H1N1 are similar to the symptoms of regular human flu and include fever, cough, sore throat, body aches, headache, chills and fatigue. Some people have reported diarrhea and vomiting associated with it. In the past, severe illness (pneumonia and respiratory failure) and deaths have been reported with H1N1 infection in people. Like seasonal flu, H1N1 may cause a worsening of underlying chronic medical conditions.

Although no outbreaks have been identified at Fort Benning or in Columbus, it's important for Soldiers and family members to remain vigilant against the potentially life-threatening disease, Dudewicz said.

TELLING WAR STORIES PROJECT SEEKS VOLUNTEERS

Telling War Stories is a project started by CPT Mike Warren, an English instructor at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., that aims to help Soldiers share their stories with the help of cadets.

Soldiers submit their work, which is read by cadets who offer revisions and feedback. The project provides an opportunity for the Soldiers and the cadets to gain new perspective on war stories. The goal is to publish a collection of stories submitted for the project.

Warren is seeking Soldiers who would like to share their stories. He and four cadets will visit Fort Benning June 4-5.

For more information, or to volunteer with the project, call Warren at 845-938-2661 or e-mail michael.warren3@us.army.mil.

Officials on track with MCOE civilian hiring process

Vince Little
THE BAYONET

About 830 civilians working at Fort Benning and Fort Knox, Ky., will receive job offers this month in the initial appointment wave for vacancies at the future Maneuver Center of Excellence.

None have been notified of their placements, but letters are expected to go out by May 20, said Blanche D. Robinson, a human resources officer and director of Fort Benning's Civilian Personnel Advisory Center. Those employees then have a full month to indicate whether they'll accept the offers.

It's part of a complex realignment and hiring process that's only 40 percent complete, she said. The moves are phased according to the MCOE's needs.

The MCOE, set to become fully operational by September 2011, is among the Base Realignment and Closure initiatives mandated by Congress four years ago. It includes relocation of Fort Knox's Armor Center and School to Fort Benning.

The steps for filling the MCOE positions feature a direct and indirect matching process, Robinson said.

The first stage involved employees at Fort Benning's Infantry Center and Fort Knox's Armor School volunteering for placement in realigned positions. They're guaranteed a job at their current or equivalent grade levels if they volunteer, she said.

"These employees are then either directly placed into positions by CPAC staff members or placed through subject matter expert panels through indirect matches," Robinson said.

> "Recruitment time frames will be different, but it could begin as early as this fall."
> — Blanche D. Robinson

She said the direct-match process, which took place March 10 to April 9, was completed by slotting employees into MCOE positions that encompass the same duties they're performing now. More than 650 employees fit that requirement.

In cases involving less-tenured employees and instances where there were no direct options or fewer authorizations for some positions than direct-match candidates, five expert panels used indirect matches to make placements based on qualifications highlighted by CPAC staff. That effort began April 13 and will continue through May 19.

Robinson said there will be roughly 1,315 civilian positions within the center. Fort Benning's overall work force will increase by about 775.

She said 263 current Fort Knox workers – about 33 percent of the civilian positions there realigned to the MCOE – indicated they would move to Georgia.

"However, fewer than that may actually accept position offers," she said.

CPAC staff also will use recruitment and conversion of temporary and term appointments to fill positions.

Robinson said career fields that will be targeted for recruitment include supply, budget and manpower, safety and blue-collar positions.

"None have been advertised or recruited yet," she said. "Depending on when the position will actually be needed in the MCOE, recruitment time frames will be different, but it could begin as early as this fall."

Some vacancies may be opened to the general public, she said, while others could be aimed at a more specific group.

The application process is the same as for all other federal positions. For information, visit www.cpol.army.mil and click on the employment link.

Postwide spring cleanup begins Monday

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Many Fort Benning Soldiers and civilians will dust off their rakes and roll up their sleeves during the postwide spring cleanup Monday through May 22.

Postwide cleanups are held twice each year, in the spring and fall, and serve as a way of keeping Fort Benning's appearance up to standards, said MSG Olivia Blount, garrison community life sergeant major.

"(The cleanup) will help keep this installation of excellence beautiful," she said.

During the first week of the cleanup, units will clean their areas of operation.

During the second week, NCOs from the Garrison Community Life office will conduct inspections of the areas, which will focus on the overall appearance of units' outdoor areas and areas surrounding buildings.

The inspection checklist includes trash removal, trimming trees and shrubs, removing abandoned or unauthorized vehicles from parking lots and cleaning gutters and drains. Units are responsible for removing any orphan waste — illegally dumped materials — in their areas of operation.

"We won't go inside, but we will check for things like dead trees and tree limbs, grass growing in sidewalk cracks and vines and mildew on buildings," Blount said.

Recyclable materials including cardboard, paper, plastic and wood pallets should be taken to the Material Recovery Facility at Building 4000 on Cusseta Road in Harmony Church. Heavy metals, military equipment, furniture, appliances, office and medical equipment should be taken to the Defense Reutilization and Marketing Office on 10th Mountain Division Road.

CSM James Foreman, Garrison command sergeant major, recommends units clean their areas throughout the year.

"If people make an effort throughout the year to pick up trash, it will be less taxing on the unit when it's time for the cleanup," he said.

Below is a schedule of spring cleanup inspections:

Army fields new T11 parachute system

Kristin Molinaro
THE BAYONET

When basic Airborne students hit the skies in the near future, their landings may get a little more forgiving.

1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, began operational fielding of a new parachute system that is expected to give jumpers a slower rate of descent, greater weight allowance and a more reliable reserve parachute system.

The new system, the Advanced Tactical Parachute System, is known simply as T11 to most who use it. During the next decade it will replace the Army's current parachute system, the T10, which has been in use since 1955.

"Back in the 1950s, when the T10 was fielded, it was more than adequate to handle the combat load of that era. But now Soldiers are jumping with heavier loads," said John Yancey, a combat developer with Soldier Systems, Soldier Requirements Division, Capabilities and Development Integration Directorate.

The T10 parachute system was designed to handle loads of up to 300 pounds and descend at a rate of approximately 21 feet per second. The T11 parachute system expands the weight allowance to approximately 400 pounds and slows the rate of descent to between 16 and 18 feet per second, a reduction of 25 percent.

"Because T11 can sustain a heavier combat load with a slower rate of descent than the T10, it will lessen injuries and increase the combat power of the commander," said Yancey, a former sergeant major with 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, 3rd Brigade Combat Team.

LTC Jon Ring, the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment commander, agreed.

When compared to the T10, the advantages of the T11 are clear, Ring said.

"With the T11, there will be a 40 percent reduction in impact force for a downward descent," Ring said. "This will reduce injuries."

WO Kevin Sims
The 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, began operational fielding of the new T11 Advanced Tactical Parachute System last month. LTC Jon Ring (pictured), 1st Battalion commander, led members of the cadre on their first jump with the T11. The T11 will reduce impact force by 40 percent with a system that gives jumpers a slower rate of descent.

According to a presentation Ring provided to leaders, when the T10's original design went into use in 1955, the average total weight for a jumper was less than 300 pounds. In Operation Just Cause, the total weight for a jumper was greater than 350 pounds. For Operation Enduring Freedom, it increased to approximately 400 pounds.

Soldiers are jumping with body armor, which increases their combat weight exponentially, Yancey said.

The T11's greater weight allowance allows commanders flexibility so they aren't forced to make a choice between jumping with body armor or another piece of mission-essential equipment, Yancey said.

"We have a lot of heavier jumpers who will land better with the T11," Ring said. "With the T11, everyone will have a similar rate of descent and larger jumpers will have a more forgiving landing than they've had in the past with the T10."

This is because of the size of the parachute's canopy and the mechanism for deploying it.

The T11's main canopy has an updated look and increased size.

The modified attached-cross shape of the canopy looks like a box when inflated and is designed with vent slots on each of its four sides. Its 28-foot hem diameter is 14 percent greater than the T10, increasing its surface area 28 percent.

The additional surface area allows the parachute to hold a greater jumper weight while still maintaining a softer descent than the T10.

Engineers reduced the likelihood a jumper will experience a spinal cord injury when the parachute deploys by designing the T11 to open slower than the T10 and creating a harness that aligns the parachute's opening forces with the long axis of the jumper's body.

"With the T10, when the parachute is pulled open, it takes approximately one second to fully inflate. The force of it causes the bowing of the jumper's back as the parachute pulls you upward hard," Ring said. "With the T11 system, the parachute is released differently and is designed to take approximately six seconds to fully inflate, lessening the impact on the body."

Additionally, with the T10, there can be oscillation — described as the pendulum effect when the canopy opens — which can cause a Soldier to swing back and forth and lead to a less than perfect landing that could injure the Soldier in some situations, Yancey said.

"With the T11, the oscillation is essentially nil and increases the chances for a perfect landing," Yancey said.

Another advantage the T11 system has over the T10 is its reserve parachute.

One of the greatest benefits is its reserve parachute system, Ring said.

The reserve parachute has a reliability rate of approximately 99.6 percent, well above the 75-80 percent rate of the T10.

The reserve chute has an improved structural strength and an aeroconical design based on current British low-level parachute reserve canopy systems. It can be deployed using either hand via a soft loop closure.

Despite the advantages of the T11, there are some drawbacks.

The bigger the canopy is, the greater the wind is as a factor, Ring said.

However, the vents are designed to allow downward movement of the jumper while reducing lateral drifting because of the wind.

The T11 is less maneuverable than the T10 because of its shape, the vents and the large size of the canopy, Ring said.

When Soldiers pull the risers — the cords connecting the Soldier's harness to the parachute — to maneuver the canopy, they will now have to hold the risers twice as long as they would for the T10, Ring said.

And because the risers will alter the shape of the T11, pulling the risers is more of a pull-up exercise and requires a certain amount of strength to maneuver, Ring said.

"We use the swing-landing trainer and the suspended harness apparatus to test that troops have the required strength to pull the risers," he said.

The T11 is also heavier than its counterpart.

The T11 system weighs 52.1 lbs, compared to the 44-lb T10 system.

"It's a double-edged sword. The more you jump with, the more you have to carry," Ring said.

But the bottom line is the T11 will prevent injuries and preserve combat power for the commander on the drop zone, Yancey said.

Ring said it will be a while before the T11 completely replaces the T10.

"We have not begun phasing out the T10 system. The plan for the T11 includes fielding it over the next 13 years — as is the standard set by the Department of Defense," he said.

"We are going to continue training on the T10 and basic Airborne training is still 100 percent T10. We are concentrating right now on building the cadre's proficiency with the first 100 T11 parachutes the unit received.

The battalion is set to receive an additional 189 T11 parachutes in August and 1,000 more in October to begin training Airborne students.

Museum: Imax Theatre now open

portions of the 190,000-square-foot museum are open to the public including two galleries, the Fife and Drum restaurant, a gift shop and the only Imax Theatre in the area.

The Imax Theatre at Patriot Park boasts a five-story high screen and a 70-speaker sound system to enhance the movie-going experience.

"We want the Imax Theatre to draw in people that don't normally come to museums," said Chief of Staff COL Charles Durr. "When they come and see how state of the art and relevant this museum is, we hope they'll want to become part of it."

The Imax Theatre will also be the center for entertainment as leaders work to better the area through the Columbus South Initiative, Durr said.

Durr said the land near the museum will continue to be developed and he hopes to see a first-class hotel, restaurants, shopping and other amenities along the road near the museum in the near future.

One of the greatest benefits of the museum is its location, Criscillis said.

The chief of staff agreed.

"The museum is accessible to anybody," Durr said. "But no one knows."

Durr said many non-military people in the community believe the museum is located on the installation and that they must go through an access control point and get a visitor's pass in order to visit the museum.

"The museum is located on the (military reservation) boundary so you can get to it without going through an ACP," he said.

For those who want to visit the museum without passing through an ACP, Durr said he recommends taking Victory Drive to Fort Benning Road and heading south toward post. The museum is located on the right side before the ACP.

The museum officially opens in 41 days, but it is not too early to visit the galleries currently open or see a movie at the Imax, which schedules seven screenings daily Monday through Friday and six on Saturday and Sunday.

Current showings at the Imax Theatre are Mysteries of Egypt, a National Geographic film about the secrets of the Pharaohs and King Tut's tomb; Everest, a tale of survival as adventurers vie to complete an expedition to the top of the world; and The Dark Knight, Heath Ledger's last film.

Galleries for the Ranger Hall of Fame and the Officer Candidate School Hall of Fame are open. Each contains a detailed timeline depicting its inception to present day as well as the names of Hall of Fame honorees.

The Fife and Drum restaurant, located on the mezzanine level of the museum, is an upscale American bistro serving classic fare such as angel hair Alfredo and grilled rib eye from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

The Soldier Store gift shop offers a variety of books, posters, souvenirs and memorabilia and is located next to the main lobby.

The museum is open 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday. Admission to the museum is free. It is located at 1775 Legacy Way.

For more information and a listing of Imax Theatre show times, visit www.nationalinfantrymuseum.com or call 706-653-9234.

Ulibarri: Changes in Army dramatic joined the leadership at the USAIC in Febuary 2007. After completing basic, Infantry AIT and Airborne training here, he was assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment at Fort Lewis, Wash. He came back to Fort Benning in 1987 and served as an instructor with the 4th Ranger Training Battalion. Two years later, he became a team leader for the 75th Ranger Regiment's Ranger Reconnaissance Detachment before moving to Fort Bliss, Texas, in 1993.

Ulibarri recently discussed the Army transformation from a conventional Cold War-era formation two decades ago into a leaner fighting force built around counterinsurgency operations in the war on terrorism. The training atmosphere has changed dramatically and is far more "outcomes-based," he said.

He said drill sergeants have a sharper focus on coaching and mentoring Soldiers, who, in turn, have picked up a stronger understanding of ballistics, situational awareness and accountability on the battlefield.

He said it's very different from what was done before and the Army is creating Soldiers who can think beyond traditional wartime concepts.

"They're much more capable of performing tasks in any given context – whether it's in the streets of Baghdad or the mountains of Afghanistan," he said.

Soldiers have benefited from technological advances spurred on by the urgency of meeting today's threat, Ulibarri said, adding there is a "pretty big gap" between a Stryker Brigade Combat Team and the older heavy armored battalions and mechanized Bradley vehicles that rolled around years ago.

"We're putting so much capability down at the company level, it's just amazing," he said. "Even at the platoon level, those NCOs have a better understanding of these systems. They're trained at a much higher level, and they have much more responsibility."

But the Army's best firepower and equipment are still no substitute for boots on the ground, he said.

"It's the Soldier who makes the difference," Ulibarri said. "If he acts in a manner not conducive to our mission, we can make a lot more enemies than friends. And our Soldiers understand that. You can't replace that Soldier on the ground."

At Fort Benning, Ulibarri was part of an effort to make Expert Infantryman Badge testing more of a "relevant, realistic" priority for commanders.

"We're looking at outcomes as opposed to strict performance measures that could be arbitrary," he said.

In 1987, Ulibarri won the Best Ranger Competition in his second attempt. He considers the event a valuable tool for the Army and a symbol of "all those things we want Soldiers to be."

"You want to make a mark. To me, that was one way to do it," he said. "For the Army, it draws a lot of attention nowadays. That's good, positive focus.

"There are very few things you always remember, and that's one of the things I always remember. You never quit. That's part of the ethos."

Ulibarri deployed to Iraq from August 2005 to December 2006 while serving as the 172nd Stryker Brigade Combat Team's command sergeant major at Fort Wainwright, Alaska. The "Arctic Wolf," as the unit became known, was on a yearlong deployment but it got extended to 15 months.

"The Soldiers were awesome," he said. "They went after every mission like it was their last. We suffered losses, like everyone else. But they weren't in vain. I think we made a mark over there."

Ulibarri's awards include the Bronze Star Medal and the Legion of Merit.

He said he's happy about the opportunity to remain at Fort Benning and continue playing some role in developing quality Soldiers.

"This will allow me to focus on a job I really love," he said. "I will miss that direct leadership responsibility. But I can still get after it in other ways."

Top: Soldier, NCO distinguish themselves

"If I need a volunteer, she's the first one to raise her hand," he said. "She sets herself apart by never getting stagnant in her position. She's always looking to excel, doesn't get complacent, never accepts mediocrity.

"She's constantly doing something to challenge herself. She's a workhorse. Great Soldier."

Medina-James' main duty is packing malfunction-free parachutes. Pack 25 supports every Army Airborne unit – including Special Forces and Rangers – in the Southeast.

She wants to reach the 5,000-mark someday, a major milestone in the career field. She said it takes about that many parachutes to get an airborne class through a full training week.

"I'm confident in my job and ability. I love it," she said. "I will be sure always. That's our motto. You have people's lives in your hands, and it feels really good knowing that and fulfilling that mission."

But Medina-James doesn't just monitor the results of her labor from the ground. She too bails out of C-130s and UH-60 Black Hawks on proficiency jumps about every two weeks.

"It's a thrill. I'd go up every day if I could," she said.

Medina-James said winning Fort Benning's Soldier of the Year award gets her career on track.

"It definitely means a lot being able to represent myself that way, especially being a female," she said. "It shows everyone what I can accomplish, and shows I can be a leader."

Wilkins, meanwhile, guides Soldiers through the long-range marksmanship course, teaching the basics of sniper systems and 600-meter scopes. Instructors also are dispatched to different locations around the world.

As head of a four-person mobile training team, Wilkins has conducted on-site classes in Germany and Hawaii and at Fort Carson, Colo., and Fort Campbell, Ky.

"He can always be counted upon. He always takes charge and goes beyond what is required of him," said SFC Robert Osburn, master trainer for the 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment. "If I give him a task, he'll get it done faster than requested. And many times, he's even able to improve upon things."

Wilkins graduated Thursday from the Advanced Leaders Course. He's pursuing an associate's degree and wants to attend Ranger School.

Wilkins, 25, of Rochester, N.Y., joined the Army in February 2004 and has been to Iraq twice.

Between August 2006 and November 2007, he deployed with the Fort Drum, N.Y.-based 4th Battalion, 31st Infantry Regiment, 2nd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, to Yusufiyah, a city in the old "Triangle of Death" southwest of Baghdad.

He earned a Purple Heart and Bronze Star after being wounded by small-arms fire during a sniper-team mission in July 2007. One bullet ricocheted off his rifle and grazed an area near his temple. Another round hit him on the backside.

"It was a rough deployment," Wilkins said. "We had three guys go missing from my battalion. But we stuck together. We had a good team."

The disappearance of the three U.S. Soldiers in a May 2007 ambush near Mahmudiya made headlines around the world. One body was found a week later in the Euphrates River, but it took more than a year before the two others were discovered in a village south of Baghdad.

Manny Ramirez suspended

Manny Ramirez, an outfielder with the Los Angeles Dodgers, was suspended for 50 games Thursday for testing positive for performance-enhancing drugs.

James named MVP

The NBA named Cleveland Cavaliers' forward LeBron James, 24, as league MVP Monday. James averaged 28.4 points, 7.6 rebounds and 7.2 assists during the regular season.

He's also the third-youngest MVP ever, after Moses Malone and Wes Unseld.

Facility collapses, injures several

A storm blew through Irving, Texas, on May 2, and the Dallas Cowboys' tent-like practice structure collapsed, injuring a dozen people.

Rich Behm, a scouting assistant, was permanently paralyzed from the waist down after his spine was severed. The new special teams coach, Joe DeCamillis, sustained a fracture in one of his cervical vertebrae without paralysis.

After seeing video and pictures of the facility, it's a wonder no one was killed.

Derby upset

Mine That Bird who? Mine That Bird, the only gelding in the Kentucky Derby, came from the back of the pack along the inside rail and won the race by 6 3/4 lengths. He was also considered a longshot, with 50-1 odds.

Pioneer of the Nile finished second, Musket Man third and Papa Clem in third.

Bennie "Chip" Woolley, Mine That Bird's trainer, said the horse will run in the Preakness Stakes.

Busch makes history

It turned out to be a very happy birthday for driver Kyle Busch, who became the second NASCAR driver to win a Cup race on his birthday. Cale Yarborough did it twice, in 1977 and 1983.

Busch beat out former teammate Tony Stewart to take the win at Richmond International Raceway May 2.

This week is another Saturday night race. The drivers will earn their stripes at Darlington Raceway at 7:20 p.m.

O'Hair redeems himself

Just weeks after blowing a five-shot lead to Tiger Woods, Sean O'Hair found redemption at the Quail Hollow Championship, and got his third PGA Tour win.

O'Hair, 26, won with a one-shot victory over Lucas Glover and Bubba Watson. He becomes only the third player in his 20s with three PGA Tour victories.

Woods finished a very respectable fourth.

Rugby teams compete at Fort Benning

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

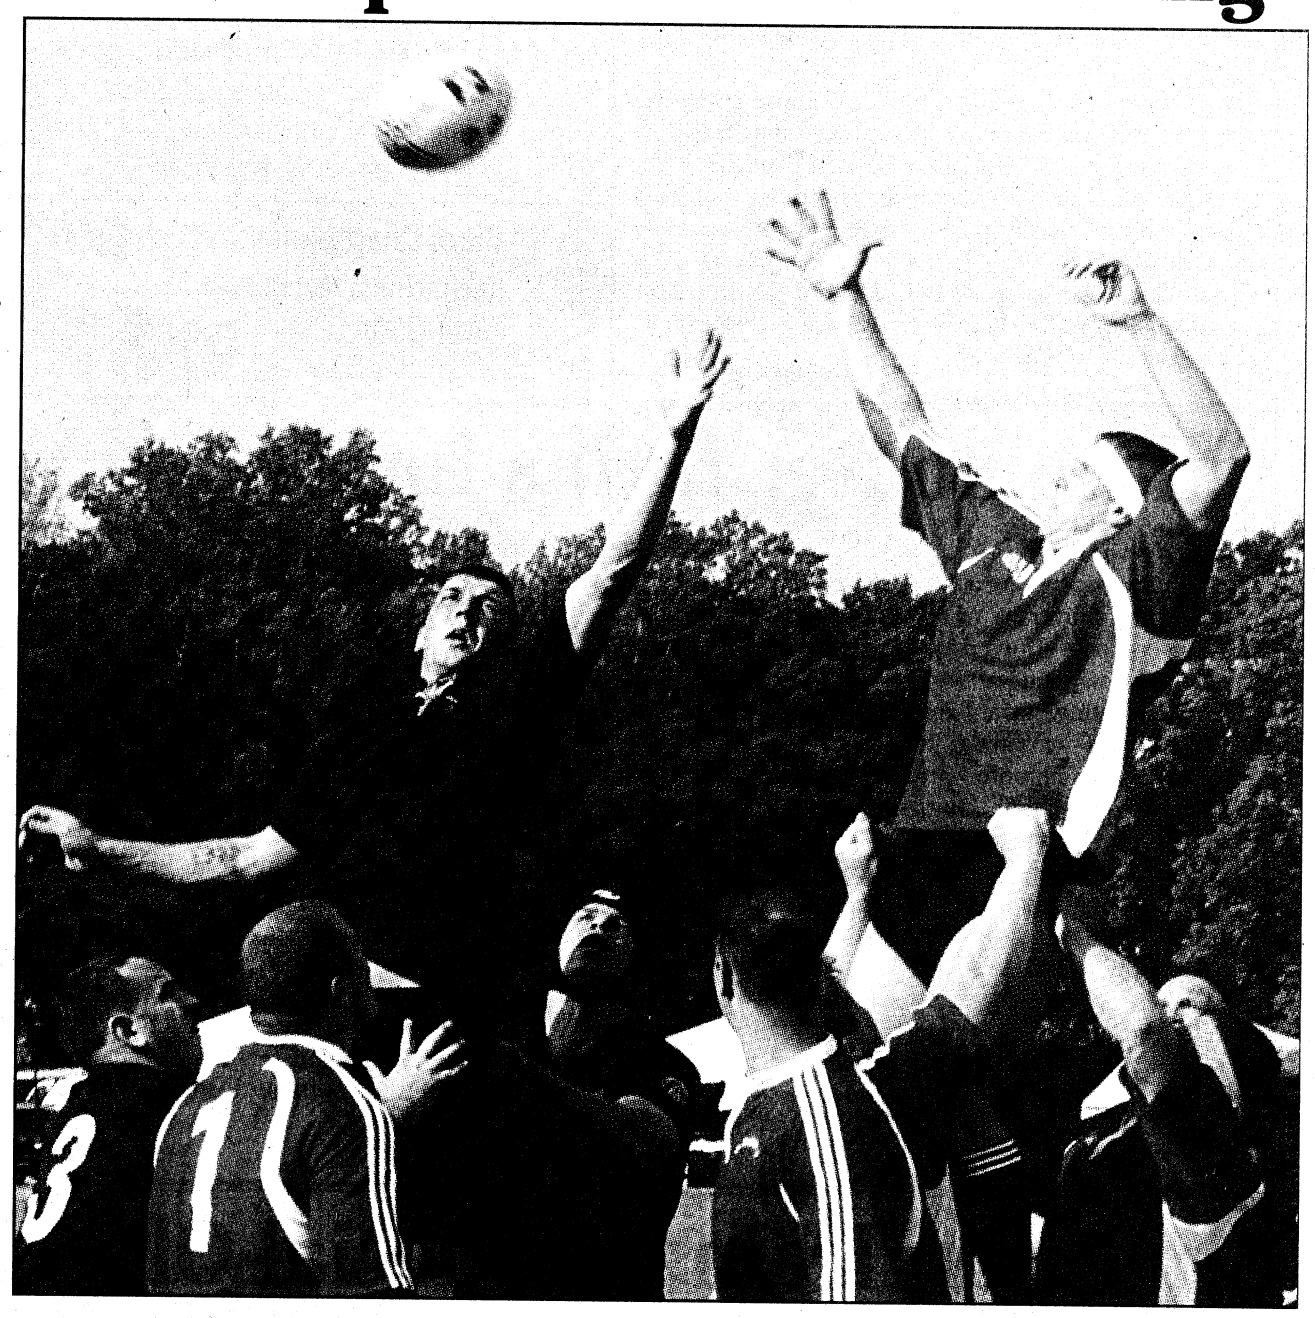
Eight rugby teams from around the nation competed in the USA Rugby Military Club and BAE Systems Championships Saturday and Sunday at Stewart-Watson Field.

The Gunners of Fort Sill, Okla., walked away with the championship and bragging rights after a 41-0 victory in the final against Marine Corps Air Station Cherry Point, N.C.

The teams were broken into two divisions and competed in pool play Saturday, with the consolation championship and final championship Sunday.

After going 2-1 in pool play, the Columbus and Fort Benning Rugby Club Cruise-a-matics earned a spot in the semifinals, but left the pitch with a 17-12 loss to the Gunners.

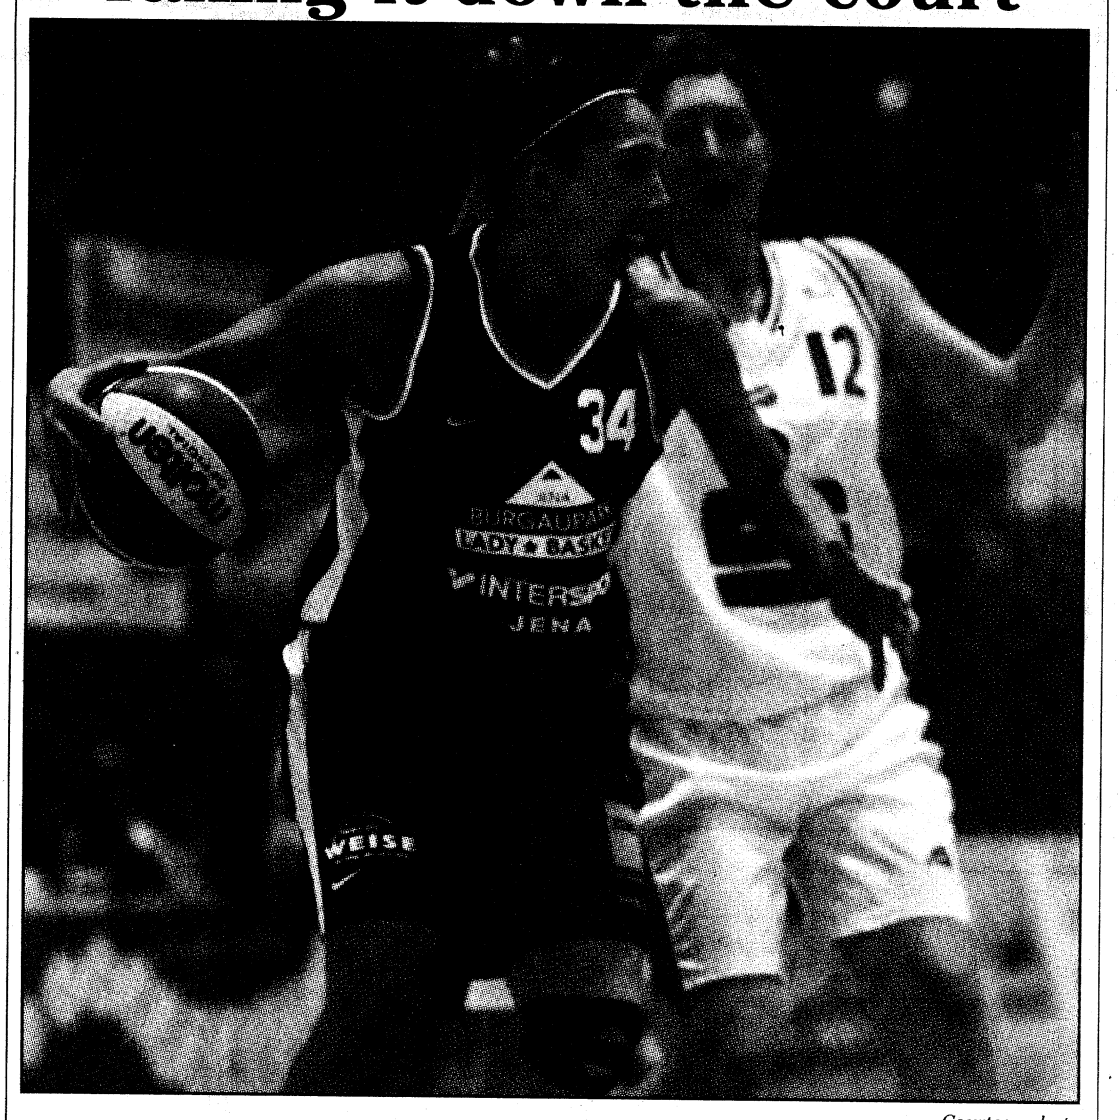
The Rangers of 3rd Battalion, 75th Ranger Regiment, lost all three pool games, including a 6-0 setback against the Gunners, but rallied in the consolation championship.



During the first half against the Gunners, penalties killed the Rangers as they battled for the ball. The Gunners led 3-0 at the half.

"A lot of our guys have played football 'before, but rugby is completely different," said Rangers coach James Anderson. "I told them to get motivated and fired up. Penalties were killing us."

The Rangers couldn't score against a tough defense, while the penalties piled up.



"The penalties gave the other team the field advantage," Anderson

Benning Soldier earns spot on All Army basketball team

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

CPT Caitlin Chiaramonte has always loved a challenge, and now, she's challenging herself to use her basketball skills in a new way — to give back to the Army. She's the only Fort Benning Soldier chosen to play on the All Army women's basketball team, a distinction she said means a lot to her.

"Being able to wear the Army uniform is way bigger than any other team I've played on," she said. "There's a sense of pride attached to it. I'm representing myself, JAG, Fort Benning and the Army."

Searching for new challenges is what the 29-year-old JAG Corps attorney said drove her to leave two careers —as a New York-based lawyer and as a professional basketball player in Europe — to join the Army.

"It's just something I knew I wanted to do," she said. "Everyone thought I was crazy, but I was really looking for a bigger challenge. And for me, committing to being in this organization is one of the biggest challenges I've faced."

As a high-schooler, Chiaramonte was recruited by numerous college basketball

Six students at Wesley Heights Elementary School are ready for the Special Olympics today at Kinnett Stadium in Columbus. After training for a month with SFC Michael Zdunowski, A Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, they are prepared for the long jump, softball throw and 50-yard dash.

"None of them ever really picked up a ball to throw or ran a distance for speed, so at first it was tough," Zdunowski said. "But they are getting better. Improvement is tremendous. They're developing the motor skills it takes to compete at these events and actually do it quite well."

Kathy Sindledecker, special education teacher at Wesley Heights, said Zdunowski is "phenomenal" with the students.

"They love him," she said. "He's very caring — and they know it. I have one student who is non-verbal and when he sees him he gets so excited and immediately starts waving and greeting him when he walks in the door. They all get excited."

Sometimes it might be easier to volunteer with some of the other classes, but Sindledecker said her kids need the support said. "We made a lot of mistakes that we shouldn't have made."

Sean Morand, forwards captain, looked at the game as a learning tool.

"We have a lot of athletic talent but we are lacking in knowledge of the game so it's a learning experience," he said.

In their second game, the Rangers lost to the Fort Bragg Rugby Club, 13-10.

"We definitely gave them a run for their money," Anderson said. "Rugby is a tough sport and it comes down to those last few minutes. It's a warrior sport. There's no stopping. You have to work together as a team and have cohesion."

Fort Bragg Rugby Club coach Eric Thompson, who has played rugby for 17 years, said both teams fought hard.

"(The Rangers) tackled really good and played really hard," he said. "That was probably the most fun, hard-hitting game of rugby I have played in the past four years."

The Rangers rebounded to take first place in the consolation championship with a 24-15 win over Eglin Air Force Base, Fla.

coaches before accepting a full scholarship to play for the University of Richmond and later for Fordham University, where she served as team captain for two years.

After graduating from Fordham with bachelor's and master's degrees in economics, Chiramonte turned her attention to law school. But, she wasn't ready to give up athletics completely. When friends asked her to try out for the New York Dazzles, a now-defunct team in the Women's Professional Football League, Chiaramonte seized the opportunity.

"It was an opportunity to do something different and play a sport while I was in law school," she said. "I never knew all the intricacies of football and ended up loving it."

She credits her experience playing football with helping her land her first professional basketball position, on a league in Jena, Germany.

"My agent was nervous because I had taken three years off from basketball (while attending Fordham University's School of Law), but playing football during that time had helped keep me in shape," she said.

Chiaramonte's basketball career took her around Europe, playing for professional teams in Finland and Chemnitz, Germany. At the same time, she continued working for a New York law firm during the basketball off-season.

"I was very lucky they allowed me to have that flexibility," she said. "I would update them on my season and travels, and I think they kind of got into it."

Chiaramonte had applied to enter the JAG Corps shortly after completing law school, but had deferred for two years to continue her basketball career. When JAG representatives contacted her in 2008 for the third year in a row asking whether she was still interested in entering the corps, Chiaramonte said she knew it was time to leave professional basketball.

"I probably could have played another year or two, but I wanted a new challenge," she said. "It was time to do some service and give back."

Chiaramonte is currently training with the All Army team in Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., where the team is preparing for the Armed Forces Basketball Championship in Millington, Tenn., a weeklong tournament that begins Sunday.

Chiaramonte's coach, CPT Mark Knight, 62nd Medical Brigade, called her instrumental in helping the team improve.

"She's a tremendous asset," he said. "She's truly dedicated and loves the sport. She's helped us find competitive teams to play in practice that would challenge us to play better in the championship."

While Chiaramonte said she would like to see the All-Army team win gold, she said she would continue challenging herself no matter what happens at the championships.

"I just want to keep learning and growing in the Army and taking on any physical challenges it brings forth," she said. "I've still got a long way to go and a lot to learn about how the Army works, and I want to continue helping Soldiers because that's the best part of my job."

and encouragement just as much, if not more. With Zdunowski, they have learned social skills, had a good role model and tried physical exercises that are new to them.

"He's been teaching them some things with athletics that I don't know they've learned before: the running, the skipping, the jumping — and learning about good sportsmanship and playing fair," she said. "It's been good for them."

Zdunowski began volunteering at the school in November. As a partner in education, his battalion sends out Soldiers who want to help out with different classes.

"It was my turn to go for our company, and I had so much fun, so I made it my mission to come here at least once a week and spend time with the kids," he said. "Seeing them happy makes my job more enjoyable. It's not like a chore to come here. It's something I look forward to every week. Words can't explain or even start to put into perspective how these kids make you feel. You spend a day with them and their personalities come out — it's really rewarding to be able to work with them."

Ten-year-old Marquez Jennings said he thinks competing in the Special Olympics will be fun.

"It's good because it makes you faster. It makes me happy and strong," he said. "I want to win. I never had a trophy before."

Zdunowski helps them by running with them, Marquez said.

When they're not training, Zdunowski also helps out in the classroom, reading with the students, playing educational games or working on vocabulary flash cards.

"They're studying harder, Sindledecker said.

They know he's keeping up with their work, so they want to perform better, she said, and when they do well, he brings treats. They have really connected with him.

Patriots take victory against Warriors

Rachel L. Watkins
Warrior Juan Cordero tries to block a spike from Patriot Tyrone Barlow, but is unsuccessful.

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, bounced back with a straight-sets win over the 13th Combat Support Sustainment Battalion in a loser's bracket matchup in the Commander's Cup postseason volleyball championship Tuesday at Smith Fitness Center.

The 13th CSSB Warriors grabbed an early lead, but it was short-lived because the 2/58 Patriots hit them with several attacks and went to a 25-16 victory in the opening set.

In the second game, the Patriots racked up several aces and gained the lead. The Warriors got back in the game after notching some kills of their own, but it wasn't enough as the Patriots sealed the 25-19 win.

After the first set, Patriots coach Gary Carty told his team to keep the pressure up.

"I don't think we played as well as we could have, especially in the second half," Carty said. "We made some mistakes but still supported each other throughout the game."

Patriot Sabrina Clark said her team played with confidence from the beginning of the game.

"I think we gave up a little in the end of the second game, especially with the serves, and let them back in the game," she said. "But overall, everyone went after the ball and we had great teamwork."

The Patriots missed a shot at the loser's bracket finals by losing a three-game thriller to the CONUS Replacement Center Stallions. The Stallions were eliminated by the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion on Wednesday.

Stallions defeat Warriors in opening-round

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

CONUS Replacement Center won against the 13th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion in the opening round of the Commander's Cup postseason volleyball Championship Monday at Smith Fitness Center.

The CRC Stallions stayed in the winner's bracket, while the 13th CSSB Warriors headed to the loser's bracket.

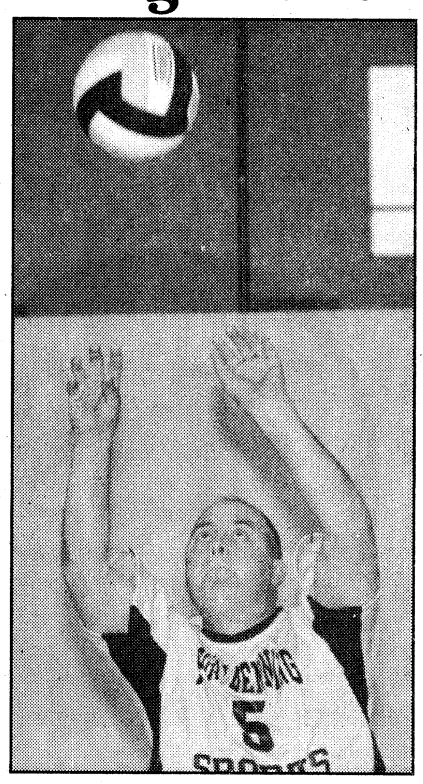
The Stallions won the first game in a best -of- three match, 25-13.

The Stallions built a 10-5 lead as the Warriors struggled with their serving. Although the Warriors tried to make a comeback, CRC's defense helped preserve the victory.

Both teams struggled with serving in the second game, but the Stallions attacked the net and shut down the Warriors, 25-19.

"I think we played really well considering we only had five players instead of six," said Stallions coach Issey Whitlock. "We called the ball and held down our positions."

CRC's Retha Robinson said the team has come a long way.



"We have been playing consistently throughout the season and I think we are really starting to learn each other's strengths and weaknesses," she said. "I think what helped us win was good teamwork and communication."

The Stallions took on the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion in the second round of the winner's bracket Monday. They won the first game 25-23, but lost the next two to fall into the loser's bracket.

CRC played the 75th Ranger Regiment Tuesday and won two straight games, 25-15 and 25-16.

The Stallions beat 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment later Tuesday, but were eliminated by the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion Wednesday.

ON POST

CHESS TOURNAMENT

Chess players from all service branches will compete in the Interservice Chess Tournament at the Kelley Hill Rec Center today through Saturday. The winner of the event will advance to the NATO Tournament.

The matches will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and spectators are welcome.

For more information, call 706-544-1411.

BOSS PAINTBALL

Better Opportunities for Single Soldiers has planned a paintball battle at 1 p.m. May 15 for all interested people.

Each warrior will be equipped with a gun, mask, hopper, 500 battle balls and a full 20-ounce CO2 tank. Cost is $30 per person with registration taking place at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center until Tuesday.

For more information, call 706-527-8689.

OFF POST

HOCKEY LEAGUE SEEKS PLAYERS

The newly formed Columbus Travel Hockey Association is forming travel ice hockey teams for the 2009-2010 season. They are looking for experienced hockey players in the following divisions: Mite (birth years 2001 and 2002), Squirt (birth years 2000 and 1999) and PeeWee (birth years 1998 and 1997).

Interested parents should send their child's name, division (mite/squirt/peewee) and contact information to ColumbusTravelHockey@bellsouth.net. The Columbus Travel Hockey Association serves youngsters from Fort Benning, Columbus, Midland, Auburn, Opelika, West Point, Newnan, LaGrange, Upatoi, Ellerslie, Peachtree City, and the remainder of Southwest Georgia and Eastern Alabama.

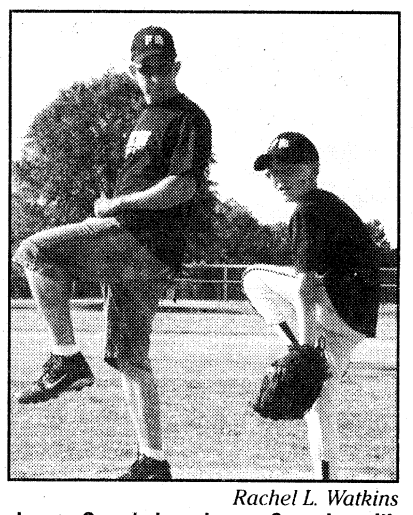
COACHES' SPOTLIGHT

Baseball is about making decisions

Rachel L. Watkins
THE BAYONET

Baseball is all about making decisions, just like life, said Jason Cox. He coaches a 9- to 11-year-old travel team, the Benning Blackhawks, and a Child Youth & School Services 4- and 5-year-old tee-ball team.

"When you pitch, you don't know if you are going to have a batter run to first or third base. And when you're up to bat, you don't know what kind of pitch you'll get. It's unpredictable," Cox said. "Life will come at you different ways, just like baseball. You have to be able to choose the right decision over the wrong one. And if you choose the wrong one, you have to live with it and do better next time."



Baseball brings challenges too.

When players get upset about missed plays, Cox tells them 'you aren't going to make every play — there will be times you are down and out. You have to accept that you aren't perfect and learn to pick yourself up, make the play the next time and don't quit no matter what happens.'"

An outstanding baseball player is one who learns from mistakes, works hard, practices, and is determined to succeed, he said.

Sports, no matter what sport it is, is a good way for children to stay on the right path in life, said Cox who has coached softball and baseball for five years.

"I played sports when I was a kid and I never got into trouble because my mind was always on sports," he said.

Rachel L. Watkins
Jason Cox helps Jason Cox Jr. with pitching techniques at practice. He has been coaching for five years.

By the time the Blackhawks' season ends in June, Cox said he wants the kids to have a strong knowledge of the basics and be confident in making baseball decisions of their own.

Fort Benning will celebrate Asian Pacific American Heritage Month at a luncheon May 21 at the Benning Conference Center. The celebration will begin at 11:30 a.m. and includes Asian-inspired cuisine, a performance of Chinese songs by Faith Middle School Chinese language students and a skit by the Faith Middle School Drama Club.

The event is an opportunity for people to learn about different countries they may not otherwise know, said Kathy Henley, the Chinese language teacher at Faith, who emigrated from Taiwan 24 years ago.

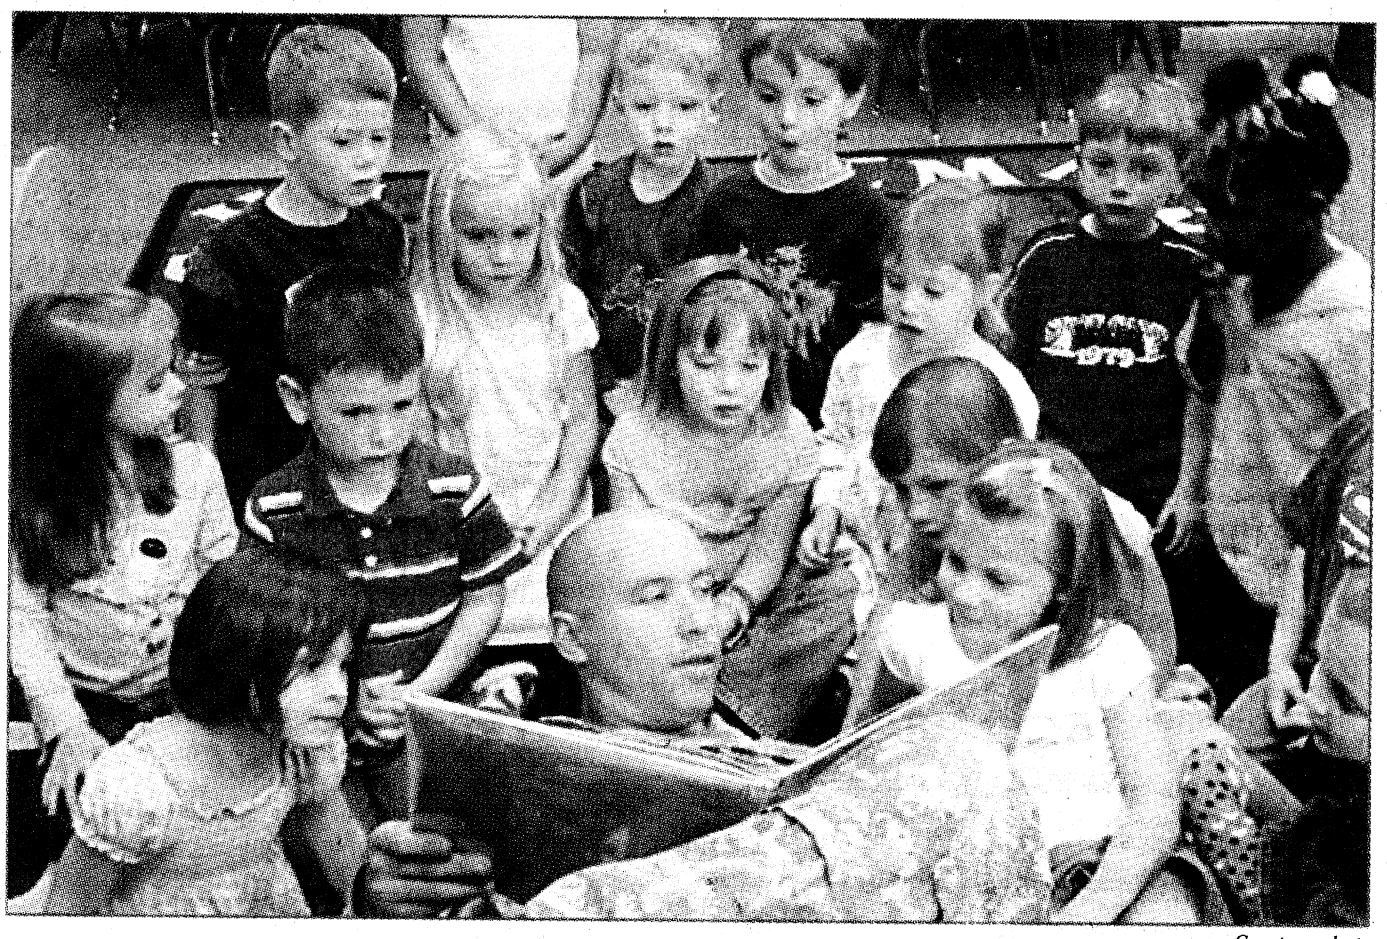
"They might not have the chance to see other cultures … go other places, but they can see it through these celebrations," she said. "It will open your eyes to see the world. If you understand other people more through culture, then you make yourself stronger, too. You won't be ignorant. When you can explore cultures, it makes you respect other people better."

Respect is what it all comes down to, said SFC Glen Tilson, NCOIC for the event.

"You have to be aware of different cultures. Less bickering, less favoritism — the bottom line is everybody should be equal," he said.

The world is a global economy, Tilson said. Kids today need to know more about other cultures, languages and customs than the previous generation did.

"With the amount of diversity in today's society, especially in the military, everybody has to be able to work with everybody," he said.



"You need to be well-rounded to get experiences from others, to learn other ways of doing things."

The theme for the observance is "leadership to meet the challenges of Three Fort Benning schools have earned honors from the Greater Columbus Georgia Chamber of Commerce.

During the chamber's Partners in Education Awards Banquet April 28, Dexter and Loyd Elementary Schools were named two of the top 10 partnerships of the 2008-2009 school year and Faith Middle School won Partnership of the Year for the middle school level, earning a $1,000 award. Faith Middle School also won Partnership of the Year in 2007.

"It was really an honor," said Dr. Julio Gonzales, principal of Faith Middle School. "The money will be a big help to our kids."

The money will go to the school's PTO to determine the best use for it, Gonzales said. The 2007 award money went toward a new scoreboard in the school's gymnasium.

The PIE award winners were chosen from among 60 schools by a panel of five members of the Chamber of Commerce. They evaluated the schools' PIE programs in four areas: improving students' academic performance, growing students' career opportunities, enriching students' life experiences and providing faculty development and enrichment.

Some of the programs cited in Faith Middle School's award include its bridge building partnership with the Muscogee County Career Academy, which pairs high school seniors with Faith students to engineer miniature bridges, and its Step Ahead Honors Club for students who show

Students rewarded with trip to motor pool

Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

"It was the best day ever," said 7-year-old Shannon Musgrove, a student at Wynnton Arts Academy who visited Fort Benning Monday.

Shannon was one of more than 100 students at Wynnton who toured a motor pool with the 11th Engineer Battalion, the school's partner in education, as a reward field trip for being on the honor roll.

"I got to meet new people and I got to see vehicles that I didn't know about — cars, trucks — stuff that I never got to see before," Shannon said. "My grandpa used to work in the Army, so it was interesting because (he) fought in the war and that could have been stuff he would have used."

The engineers showed the students the equipment they use and how it works.

It was a chance to give the children a "hands-on approach" to learning about an engineer's job, said 1LT Jamie Lopez, 11th Eng. Bn., who volunteered at the event.

"It lets them see firsthand what we do, what we work with. It broadens their horizons," he said. "Not many of them have the opportunity to get up close and personal with this equipment."

The children climbed in the drivers' seats and on top of track vehicles. They also picked up tools, many more than a foot long, climbed inside a field ambulance and a boat and tried on wet weather tops, helmets and life jackets. The engineers were there to answer questions.

"They're awesome," Lopez said. "The enthusiasm they show is overwhelming. They're at the point where they're very curious — just questions left and right."

Six-year-old Gretchen Meisch looks at SGT Brad Keen in surprise after pulling the vehicle's loud horn.

It's not just the kids who benefit from the partnership, said 2LT Jessica Sweeney.

"We get something from it, too," she said. "It helps integrate us into the community, and that's for our benefit as much as the community's. It's important to feel like you belong."

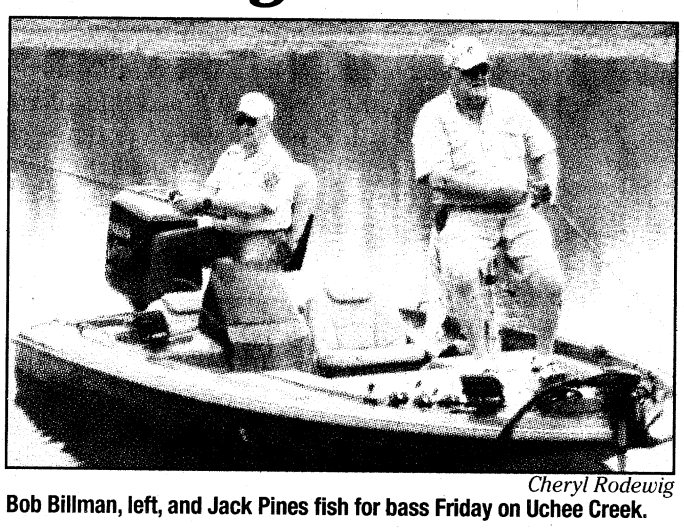
Post bass fishing club continues to grow over the years



Cheryl Rodewig
THE BAYONET

The Benning BASS Club was a few years in the making before it actually got off the ground as a chartered club in 1972.

Bass fishing was popular at the time, and there were plenty of local clubs, but service members were excluded from most of them — part of the backlash against Soldiers during the Vietnam War, said SFC(R) Bryant Johnson, who helped found the club after he returned from his third tour in Vietnam.

"There were a lot of bass fishermen at Fort Benning, so we just started our own," said Johnson, 65. "We had a lot of interest, a lot of people who had never bass fished before. It grew real fast. We had the Chattahoochee River. We weren't but a stone's throw from Lake Eufaula. We fished at Lake Seminole. Everything went

Bass exception at Kings Pond

Caroline Gotler
THE BAYONET

Fishermen on Fort Benning have a new reason to cast their lines at Kings Pond.

Through the end of May, the Fort Benning Conservation Branch is offering an exception to policy allowing fishermen to harvest largemouth bass 14 inches or less in length from Kings Pond without those fish counting against their daily creel limit of five largemouth bass per person.

The exception is part of efforts to alleviate bass overcrowding in the pond, which fish and wildlife workers have called "severe."

If the situation persists, the pond will continue to provide a less-than-desirable fishing experience, said Brent Widener, Conservation Branch fish and wildlife biologist.

The problem stems from a drastic reduction in the pond's bluegill population, one of the largemouth bass' main food sources, as well as an overly conservative catch-and-release strategy by fishermen that reduced the number of large adult bass and increased the number of bass under 14 inches, Widener said.

To correct the overpopulation, the

WHO'S AUTHORIZED TO SHOP AT AAFES?

AAFES doesn't decide who is or isn't authorized to shop, said AAFES' Senior Enlisted Advisor Chief MSG Jeffry Helm.

Exchange service authorization begins with the House Armed Services Committee and ultimately ends with the installation commander. The guidelines, as prescribed by Army Regulation 215-8/Air Force Instruction 34-211, require proper identification of authorized customers, including uniformed personnel and members of the Reserve Components and family members, applicable DoD civilians, exchange associates and retirees who possess a basic exchange purchase privilege authorization card.

The doors to AAFES' 1,384 food facilities and 279 shoppettes are open to almost anyone looking for a quick bite to eat. In fact, DoD policy allows all federal government employees, and even installation visitors, to dine at AAFES restaurants as long as their orders are consumed on the installation. Furthermore, anyone can purchase single-serve consumables from a shoppette.

Anyone who believes they may qualify for exchange benefits, including access to the main exchange, should contact their local AAFES manager for additional guidance as well as information regarding possible exceptions at specific BX/PX locations.

Store-level contact information is available online at www.aafes.com under the BX/PX Store Locator link.

PIE: Spending time leads to stronger development consistent improvement in grades. The club, with participation from Faith's Troy University PIE partners, increased its membership by 20 percent since the start of the school year.

"Our three PIE partners — the Directorate of Emergency Services, Troy University and the Muscogee County Career Academy — have directly benefited the kids by giving them opportunities they wouldn't have otherwise had," Gonzales said. "There is definitely a connection between the kids and the PIE partners."

Faith's PIE partners have also provided ample opportunity for faculty development, Gonzales said. The DES sponsored a bus tour of new Fort Benning housing areas, such as McGraw Village, for Faith faculty and staff and Randy Buck, director of the Muscogee County Career Academy, led professional development and team building activities.

At Dexter Elementary School, Kathryn VanHorn, PIE partnership coordinator and reading teacher, credits strong support from school leaders with making Dexter's PIE program a success.

"The leadership in our school and from our partners made all the difference," she said. "Our partners, the 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, and the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery Regiment, really went over and beyond our expectations."

Maria Julia Martinez, principal of Loyd Elementary School, said the school's partnerships with the 3rd Ranger Battalion, the 203rd Brigade Support Battalion, and WRBL television have greatly benefited Loyd's students.

"It's really meaningful for them to know there are adults out there besides their parents who care about them," she said. "It's not about spending money, it's about spending time with the kids, and that's why I think we made it into the top 10."

appreciated the engineers' invitation for the students to learn more about the Army.

"Living in a military community like Columbus, they see Soldiers, they know a Soldier works for the Army, but really what does that mean to them? Coming in and seeing what they do on a regular basis is a really interesting and unique thing to do. I've had many children today already tell me, 'I want to be a Soldier when I grow up.' They're excited about it."

Many of the kids recognized Soldiers in the battalion who volunteer weekly at the school, Allen said. They share stories from their childhood, encourage the kids to study hard and teach the Army values by example.

"We love the 11th Engineer Battalion," she said. "They have been absolutely wonderful supporters throughout our entire school year. It is a wonderful partnership between children of the community and the Army."

Club: Urges environmental protection, community aid

well. It was great."

Within a year, club membership doubled from its original 13 members. One of those original members, Bob Billman, heard about the club early in 1972 through an article in The Bayonet. He attended the first few meetings as members prepared to start the club, "and I've been with them ever since," he said.

"I fished ever since I was a little kid in creeks back in Ohio," said Billman, 72. "Some people like to play football; some people like to play cards; I like to fish."

When the club started, it was just a group of guys who liked to fish, Billman said, but now it's also about protecting the environment, especially where they fish, and helping the community.

The club has hosted fishing rodeos for kids, has chartered a Benning Junior BASS Club and cleans out the Chattahoochee and other waterways every year with Help the Hooch. If a club member pollutes the river, that person is kicked out, Billman said.

Other than that, not much has changed.

"We live by the same rules," said 81-year-old SFC(R) Jack Pines, who joined the club in 1993 after he retired from the Army.

When he started bass fishing on Uchee Creek, there was just a dirt trail where there is now a boat launch, country store and other amenities. There are also fewer bass to catch in the creek — "too many people fishing," Pines said — but it's still the same great pastime it was years ago.

"It's so relaxing, no telephone, no wife to be grumbling at you, no worry out here," he said.

The club now has more than 40 active members, but they are always looking for more, said CPT Joshua O'Neill, who joined in 2005.

With more than a century of bass fishing experience in the club, new members can learn from talented fishermen, many who have won tournaments and titles. They will also find a unique fellowship.

"Members of the club make strong friendships and care about other members of the club," O'Neill said. "It's more than just fishing. That's why I joined the club."

Membership is open to active-duty, honorably discharged or retired service members, DoD Civilians and their family members 16 years or older.

Bass: Overpopulation threatens fishing experience

Conservation Branch has stocked 5,000 bluegill and aims to have fishermen remove approximately 3,500 largemouth bass. To provide an additional food source for the bass, 30,000 threadfin shad were stocked in March and an additional 40,000 bluegill will be stocked at the end of May. The exceptions may be extended beyond the end of May, depending on how many bass have been caught by that point, Widener said.

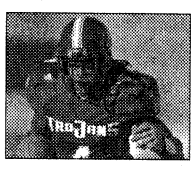
The Conservation Branch will remove any remaining overpopulated bass using electrofishing equipment that emits a harmless electric signal, temporarily stunning fish and bringing them to the surface.

While the Conservation Branch could have removed all of the bass, the branch chose to grant exceptions to policy in order to provide more recreational opportunities to the Fort Benning community, Widener said.

"The more folks who get involved, the better," he said. "We want to make every effort for this to be a recreational opportunity for fishermen."

Renewing the fish in Kings Pond will help meet demand for recreational activities on Fort Benning, said Al Gelineau, director of Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

"Outdoor recreation activities like walking trails, picnic shelters and fishing were identified as unmet needs in the leisure needs survey we conduct," he said. "It's nice to get families and Soldiers out there enjoying Kings Pond, but we want to have some fish for them to catch too."



To obtain an exception to policy letter, call Widener at 706-544-7516 or e-mail brent.widener@us.army.mil.

Children Learn More from Do's than Don'ts
Young children will be better behaved when they know clearly what you expect of them. Instead of just saying, "Don't do that," show and tell your child what you do want him or her to do.
1. Teach your child the steps of the desired behavior. It is unreasonable to expect your child to do something if you haven't taught it to him or her.
2. Have your child describe the behavior back to you. This will tell you whether or not your child understands your expectations.
3. Ask your child to demonstrate the behavior to you. If your child can demonstrate the behavior reasonably well, then you know that it is within the child's abilities.
4. Model the behavior yourself. Children are always watching you and trying to imitate your behavior.

Loyd receives $3,000 donation

CB&T presented a $3,000 check to Loyd Elementary School April 29. The donation, $1,500 from CB&T and matching funds from the Armed Forces Financial Network, will be used by the school to purchase digital interactive boards for their classrooms. "Columbus Bank and Trust is proud to partner with the Armed Forces Financial Network to make a difference at Fort Benning's Loyd Elementary School," said John Mitchell, a senior vice president for CB&T. "This new classroom technology should go a long way toward an improved academic experience for these children."

Mexican herb jeopardizes performance, attitude

Yasmin Cathright
HEALTH PROMOTION

Salvia divinorum, also called salvia, Diviner's Sage, María Pastora, Sally-D, and Magic Mint, is an herb native to certain areas of the Sierra Mazateca in Oaxaca, Mexico. Mazatec shamans use it primarily to facilitate visionary states of consciousness during spiritual healing sessions. More recently, young adults and teenagers in America have begun using it.

According to a national survey on drug use and health by Substance Abuse Mental Health Services in February 2008, an estimated 1.8 million people 12 or older have used salvia divinorum in their lifetime; approximately 750,000 did so in the past year. Use was more common among young adults, 18 to 25 years old, as opposed to older adults. Young adults were three times more likely than youths 12 to 17 to have used salvia in the past year. Use is more common in males than females. Thirteen states and several local governments have banned or otherwise regulated the plant and extracts.

Today, this mind-altering member of the mint family is sold online and in tobacco and head shops across the United States.

Salvia can be smoked, chewed or taken as a tincture. Psychic effects range from uncontrollable laughter, revisiting places from childhood memory, sensations of motion, or being pulled or twisted by forces; visions of membranes, films and various two-dimensional surfaces merging with or becoming objects; and overlapping realities, such as the perception of being in several locations at once. Physical effects can also include dizziness, slurred speech and problems with coordination. Salvia has a rapid onset with short duration of effects. Salvia is not generally felt to be toxic or addictive. Due to limited research on human subjects, the long-term addictive effects are not known.

This substance can have an adverse affect on Soldier performance and attitude and impacts readiness. Increasing use of salvia has prompted enough concern about readiness that the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology has developed a urine test to detect use. Commanders can order random screenings if they suspect use among their Soldiers. When you use any drug that is intoxicating, you run the risk of exhibiting behaviors that can be detrimental to yourself and others. You could be one car ride away from an event that could be life-altering. What decision will you make?

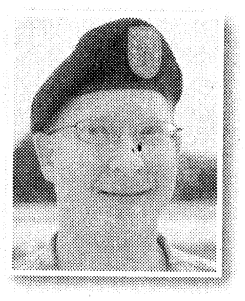
Mothers deserve to be honored every day



Chaplain (MAJ) James J. Rozmiarek
199TH BDE CHAPLAIN

Many people are unsung heroes in our lives. They are the people serving behind the scenes, working faithfully on our behalf. They include firefighters vigilantly waiting to respond to a crisis within the community, police officers who patrol the streets to maintain law and order and Soldiers who place their lives in harm's way to protect our freedom and liberty. Each one of these heroes deserves our appreciation.

Today, though, I want to focus on another unsung hero in our lives. This hero works as hard as anyone, yet does not receive a paycheck for her efforts. She is gainfully employed 24 hours a day, yet she does not work for a firm or employer. She does her job with joy and a sense of overwhelming accomplishment. This hero is called Mom.

One unknown author described the role of motherhood this way:

"Before I was a mom, I slept as late as I wanted and never worried about how late I got into bed. I brushed my hair and my teeth every day. Before I was a mom, I cleaned my house each day. I never tripped over toys or forgot words to a lullaby. I didn't worry whether or not my plants were poisonous. I never thought about immunizations."

"Before I was a mom, I had never been puked on, pooped on, spit on, chewed on or peed on. I had complete control of my mind and my thoughts. I slept all night.

"Before I was a mom, I never held down a screaming child so doctors could do tests or give shots. I never looked into teary eyes and cried. I never got gloriously happy over a simple grin. I never sat up late hours at night watching a baby sleep."

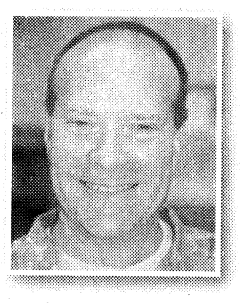
"Before I was a mom, I never held a sleeping baby just because I didn't want to put it down. I never felt my heart break into a million pieces when I couldn't stop the hurt. I never knew that something so small could affect my life so much. I never knew that I could love someone so much. I never knew I would love being a mom."

"Before I was a mom, I didn't know the feeling of having my heart outside my body. I didn't know how special it could feel to feed a hungry baby. I didn't know that bond between a mother and her child. I didn't know that something so small could make me feel so important.

"Before I was a mom, I had never gotten up in the middle of the night every 10 minutes to make sure all was OK. I had never known the warmth, the joy, the love, the heartache, the wonderment or the satisfaction of being a mom. I didn't know I was capable of feeling so much before I was a mom."

Our mothers have demonstrated an enormous amount of love and patience as they molded us into productive and successful members of society. This doesn't mean they always did it right or they were perfect. However, most of them tried as hard as they could and went above there own abilities, sacrificing their well-being for our benefit.

In Exodus 20:12, we find the command that God gave to Moses for his people, "Honor your father and your mother." So, today and every day, we honor you, Mom. We do so, not just because God commanded us to; we honor you because of the role you played in our lives — because you deserve to be honored.



Let your mother know how important her role is. Thank her for the job she does. Call her, write her or e-mail her, and let her know you are thinking about her and you appreciate all she does for you. This applies especially for the mothers of our children. Let us give honor where honor is due.

Thanks, Mom, for being Mom.

Fair fighting important to healthy, stable marriage

Chaplain (MAJ) Richard Garvey
CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER

It is going to happen in every loving relationship: You are going to have a fight. You may call it an argument or a conflict, but we are talking about the same thing. I'm not referring to a physical fight — this must be avoided at all costs. Physical fights can lead to the police being called in, a record of abusive behavior and even more emotional pain.

Fighting fair is important for emotional conflicts.

Ever get mad at him for his thoughtless comment or action? Ever get frustrated with her for nagging about your sports, night out, friends over or lack of intimate attention?

Before you can resolve your differences, you must learn to handle your anger in a constructive manner. If you pretend your differences don't exist, you will become frustrated — and then watch out. Or you will constantly rage like a tornado over every little thing.

Neither method defuses the situation nor brings closeness. So here are some tips for fighting fair:

1. Acknowledge it is OK to be angry, and don't feel guilty about having those angry feelings.

The Bible speaks about anger: It isn't sinful to be angry but what you do with the anger determines if it becomes destructive.

I always taught my children it's OK to be angry, but they choose how they will act when they're angry. They can choose to be obedient or polite as opposed to suffering the consequence of a bad decision.

Words can be especially hurtful. We were told, "Sticks and stones will break your bones, but names will never hurt you." How far from the truth is that?

Words are powerful and can be used to build up or tear down.

2. Although you disagree, you are not enemies.

People who are in love will experience differences. At first, these differences are what draw you together but later they may be a cause of conflict.

Fighting fair means you will not attack each other physically or verbally. Name-calling, cursing, screaming or blaming should be forbidden.

Two people who are in love and have committed to a life together should not threaten the very foundation of their relationship by hurting each other. Threatening separation or divorce should be taboo.

How in the world are you going to attempt to resolve your conflict if you are threatening to leave the relationship? The question will arise: Why work on the relationship when you are threatening the very existence of the marriage with divorce?

Your outlook will change when you realize you are not enemies and instead are lovers seeking to work together to resolve your conflict. If we look at each other as enemies, then we put up emotional walls which inhibit emotional togetherness and connection.

Next week, I will share three more steps in fighting a fair fight.

If you are having some relational issues or other personal problems, give us a call at the Chaplain's Family Life Center at 706-545-1760 and make an appointment today. Our trained pastoral staff is here to help you with your journey.

Our office is located at 2606 Dixie Road in Soldiers' Plaza.

May God bless you and your family.

The mother load

Lest you think the Best Ranger competitors have it rough with their 65-pound rucksacks, take a look at what goes into Erin's backpack when she heads out to watch the competition. Erin's load exceeds 80 pounds.

Best Ranger Competition:

It's Hot or Not

Erin A. Nash
THE BAYONET

It gets hot in Georgia. I'm pretty sure I've seen an egg frying on the pavement. So when I tell you it's going to get hot at the Best Ranger Competition, believe me. I've been there, done that, and seriously, have the T-shirt. I first experienced the heat of the BRC in 1999, when I was eight months pregnant. I was sitting in the bleachers at the Water Confidence Course, hoping a large competitor would come down the zipline and splash me for some sort of relief. All I had was my water bottle, which I quickly drained. After about an hour, I told my husband I had to leave, that I was dizzy.

Had I known what I know now, pregnant or not, I'd be better off. Here's my hot-weather recommendations:

• Sunscreen is a must. The Georgia sun is strong, and you will burn. Even when the sun's not out, you will burn. You don't want to be laid up with a bad burn when your competitor crosses the finish line Sunday.

• Water is a must. The Ranger Training Brigade provides water buffaloes, so bring your own container, and when you drain what you have, fill it back up. Don't forget Fido — pets get dehydrated just as easily as you and me.

• Wear a hat. There's nothing more unattractive than a crispy nose and forehead. Sunscreen only works for so long, so I also recommend getting the "sport" kind, because you're going to sweat (or as I say, "glow," because the concept of sweating repulses me). A hat can provide twice the protection as sunscreen, and you can give your favorite sports team a shout out at the same time.

• While we're talking sun, don't forget the shades. When the competitors are climbing the Tri-tower on Saturday, the sunglasses will help with glare, and you can look cool at the same time.

• An umbrella is a must for clouds or sun. We in Georgia are used to those "pop-up thunderstorms" but you might not be. It can be bright and sunny all day, then suddenly, big black clouds roll in and the skies open up, drenching everyone and everything in sight. So, use the umbrella when it's sunny (it really does cool you down, and you can make like Scarlett O'Hara) and if the clouds decide to roll in, you're ready. A real win-win situation with the umbrella.

Erin A. Nash
THE BAYONET

It gets cold in Georgia. I know if you're reading this and live above the Mason-Dixon line, you don't believe me. But, I have seen snow a few times. I rest my case. Let me relate a Best Ranger Competition personal story from last year: I was helping out my co-worker on the last day of competition, and, having tried to run the Darby Queen before (and never again), knew the best place for her to set up and get a good shot.

We were in the woods, and not much sunlight was filtering through the high trees. It was about 8 a.m. It was cold and windy and I was freezing. I had a jacket, and luckily my co-worker gave me hers while she set up for her shots. I had on jeans, but they weren't holding up against the wind. So I took her coat and put it around my legs.

I was still cold.

I wished I had been more prepared. I wished I had layers on. Bingo — layers are the answer. You can always put more clothes on, but taking them off is easier.

If you're going out to watch your competitor at any time after dusk or before dawn, it can be chilly. I'm not suggesting a wool sweater, but I am recommending a hat and gloves, a sweatshirt and jacket. Like I said, you can always take them off if you get too warm.

Unless you're a meteorologist, you can't predict if it's going to be cold. My best advice is to go into viewing the BRC wearing too much.

You can always whittle down but if you're out in the middle of nowhere (where some of the competition takes place), a long ride back home to get a sweatshirt doesn't sound like a really good idea.

Pack the car with blankets, sweatshirts, hats, etc.

STAR TREK

The fate of the galaxy rests in the hands of bitter rivals. One, James Kirk, is a delinquent, thrill-seeking Iowa farm boy. The other, Spock, was raised in a logic-based society that rejects all emotion. As fiery instinct clashes with calm reason, their unlikely but powerful partnership is the only thing capable of leading their crew through unimaginable danger, boldly going where no one has gone before.

Star Trek stars John Cho, Ben Cross and Bruce Greenwood Schreiber. It is rated PG-13 for sci-fi action and violence and brief sexual content.

NEXT DAY AIR

Brody and Guch, a pair of small-time hoodlums, have seen better days. When a courier accidentally brings them a box containing 10 kilos of cocaine meant for their next-door neighbors, it sets in motion a chain of events that could cost them their lives.

Furious over the loss of his shipment, mob boss Bodega will stop at nothing to get the drugs back. And whoever's still standing when the smoke clears could walk away with nearly a million dollars in cash and drugs.

Next Day Air stars Mike Epps and Wood Harris. It is rated R for pervasive language, drug content, violence and brief sexuality.

ALSO PLAYING

X-MEN ORIGINS:WOLVERINE

X-Men Origins: Wolverine tells the story of Wolverine's epically violent and romantic past, his complex relationship with Victor Creed, and the ominous Weapon X program. Along the way, Wolverine encounters many mutants, both familiar and new, including surprise appearances by several legends of the X-Men universe.

X-Men Origins: Wolverine stars Hugh Jackman and Liev Schreiber. It is rated PG-13 for intense sequences of action and violence and some partial nudity.

BATTLE FOR TERRA

Humanity is the invading force in this animated sci-fi film. After the destruction of Earth, mankind has taken to space in a desperate search for a hospitable planet.

When they find one, the only thing that stands in their way is the peaceful citizens of the planet, and the humans declare war.

Battle for Terra stars the voices of Justin Long, Evan Rachel Wood, Brian Cox, Chris Evans and James Garner. It is rated PG.

GHOSTS OF GIRLFRIENDS PAST

Celebrity photographer Connor Mead loves freedom, fun and women. A committed bachelor who thinks nothing of breaking up with multiple women on a conference call, his mockery of romance depresses his brother Paul and a houseful of well-wishers on the eve of Paul's wedding.

Just when it looks like Connor may single-handedly ruin the wedding, he is visited by the ghosts of his former jilted girlfriends, who take him on a revealing and hilarious odyssey through his failed relationships — past, present and future. Together they attempt to find out what made Connor insensitive and whether there is still hope for him to find true love.

Ghosts of Girlfriends Past stars Matthew McConaughey, Jennifer Garner, Breckin Meyer, Lacey Chabert and Robert Foster. It is rated PG-13 for sexual content, some language and a drug reference.

THE SOLOIST

Steve Lopez is a columnist for The Los Angeles Times whose life has reached a dead end. The newspaper business is in an uproar, his marriage has fallen apart and he can't remember why he ever loved his job in the first place.

When he meets Nathaniel Ayers, a homeless violinist, Lopez sees him as just another story idea. When Lopez learns how Ayers, a prodigy who was once headed for fame, wound up living on the street, he embarks on a quest to help him. As he fights to change Ayers' life, Lopez realizes it is his own life being changed by their friendship.

The Soloist stars Jamie Foxx, Robert Downey Jr., and Catherine Keener. It is rated PG-13 for thematic elements, drug use and language.

FIGHTING

Shawn MacArthur is a small-town boy who has come to New York with nothing. Barely earning a living selling counterfeit goods on the street, his luck changes after he meets scam artist Harvey Boarden, who sees MacArthur has a talent for fighting.

When Boarden offers MacArthur a chance to make more money, the two form an uneasy partnership. With Boarden as his manager, MacArthur becomes a star fighter almost overnight. But if he can ever hope to escape the dark world in which he's found himself, MacArthur must face the toughest fight of his life.

Fighting stars Channing Tatum, Roger Guenveur Smith and Terrence Howard. It is rated PG-13 for fight sequences, sexuality and language.

OBSESSED

Derek Charles is a successful financial asset manager who has just received a huge promotion. He is happy in his career and in his marriage to his beautiful wife, Beth. But, when Lisa, a temp worker in his office, begins stalking Derek, everything he's worked so hard for is placed in jeopardy.

Obsessed stars Beyonce Knowles, Idris Elba and Ali Larter. It is rated PG-13 for sexual material, violence and thematic content.

EARTH

Earth is the story of three animal families and their amazing journeys across the planet. The film combines rare action, unimaginable scale and extreme locations by capturing the most intimate moments of our planet's wildest and most elusive creatures.

Earth is directed by Alastair Fothergill and narrated by James Earl Jones. It is rated G.

17 AGAIN

In 1989, Mike O'Donnell was a 17-year-old high school basketball star with a bright future and college sports scouts on his trail. But he threw it away to share his life with his girlfriend Scarlett and the baby she was expecting. After 20 years, Mike's glory days are behind him. His marriage is falling apart, he was passed over for a promotion at work, and his teenage children think he's a loser. When Mike is miraculously transformed into a 17-year-old, he gets a chance to redo his high school years. But, in trying to recapture his best years, Mike could lose the best things that ever happened to him.

17 Again stars Zac Efron, Leslie Mann, Matthew Perry and Michelle Trachtenberg. It's rated PG-13 for language, sexual material and teen partying.

CRANK: HIGH VOLTAGE

When hit man Chev Chelios is kidnapped by a mysterious Chinese mobster, he wakes up three months later to discover his nearly indestructible heart has been replaced by a battery-operated one that requires regular jolts of electricity to work.

After a dangerous escape from his captors, Chev is on the run, determined to get his real heart back and wreak vengeance on whoever stole it.

The movie stars Jason Statham, Amy Smart and Bai Ling. It's rated R for violence, sexual content, nudity and language.

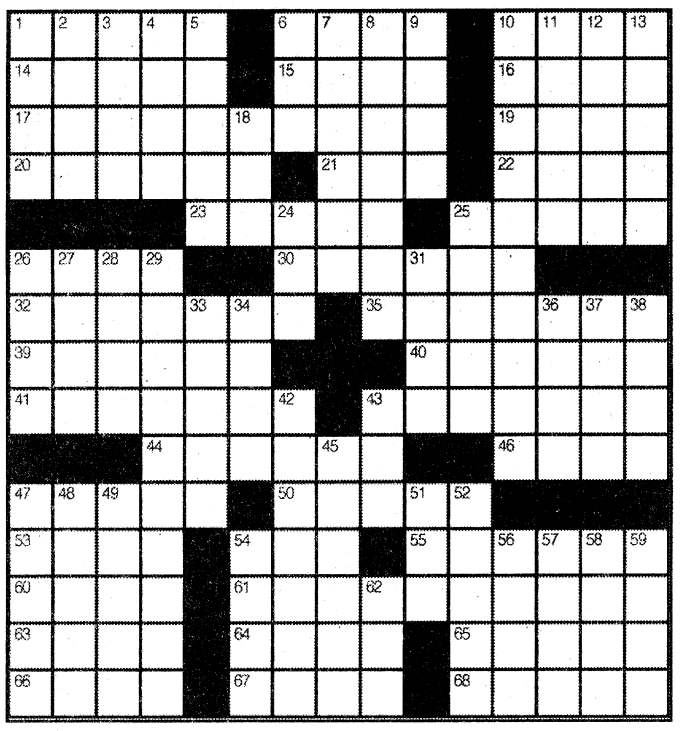
STATE OF PLAY

Congressman Stephen Collins is a rising star in his political party until his research assistant, who is also his mistress, is murdered, releasing a flood of buried secrets. When reporter Cal McCaffrey and his partner Della are assigned to investigate the murder, they step into a cover-up that threatens the nation's power structures. As they try to uncover the killer's identity, they discover that when billions of dollars are at stake, no one's integrity, love or life is ever safe.

State of Play stars Russell Crowe, Rachel McAdams, Jason Bateman and Helen Mirren. It's rated PG-13 for violence, language, sexual references and drug content.

HANNAH MONTANA

When Miley misses her brother's departure for college because she was fighting with model Tyra Banks during a shopping spree, Miley's father devises a plan to fly her back to her hometown of Crowley Corners, Tenn., so she can regain perspective on what matters most.



The movie stars Miley Cyrus, Billy Ray Cyrus, Emily Osment and Jason Earles. It is rated G.

FAST AND FURIOUS

Ex-con Dom Toretto reignites his feud with Brian O'Connor when a crime brings them back to Los Angeles. As they confront a shared enemy, Dom and Brian must learn to trust each other while pushing the limits behind the wheel.

Fast and Furious stars Paul Walker, Vin Diesel and Michelle Rodriguez. It's rated PG-13 for violence, sexual content, language and drugs.
