Supporter of black Soldiers buried Thursday

A Columbus man who made life easier for black Soldiers who served here during World War II was laid to rest in Porterdale Cemetery Thursday.

Walter Lunsford, who died Dec. 28 at the age of 90, started a taxi company for black Soldiers who couldn't get a ride from Fort Benning to the local USO in Columbus. It was the nation's first USO for black Soldiers, funded by Lunsford's mother, Lizzie.

And when local distributors wouldn't sell to black Soldiers, Lunsford drove to Chicago to haul back cases of beer.

Lunsford was described as a renaissance man and a workaholic. He graduated from Spencer High with honors in 1933, majored in physics at Fisk University in Tennessee, raised 10 children with his wife, Sally, who died in 2001, owned real estate and a restaurant during an era when blacks seldom did, and entertained Jackie Robinson at his home on Lawyers Lane.

2006 IN REVIEW

A jubilant Spc. Refugio Renteria returned from Iraq in January 2006 with nearly 300 Soldiers from the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment.

Sgt. Dora Garcia said goodbye to her 5-year-old son, Alex, in January, as her unit, the 14th Combat Support Hospital, prepared to deploy to Afghanistan.

Cheers and tears

It was a year of comings and goings. 2006 started with the redeployment of the 2nd Battalion, 69th Armor Regiment, but less than a month later, the post said goodbye to members of the 14th Combat Support Hospital. And so went the year, with cheers and tears, right up until December, when nearly 200 Soldiers from the 988th Military Police Company returned from Iraq.

Even as the Soldiers of Fort Benning continued to focus on their mission in the war on terrorism, the folks here at home remained committed to transformation, locally with the construction of new family housing communities, and Armywide, with the birth of the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

14th CSH set to redeploy

THE BAYONET

The Soldiers of the 14th Combat Support Hospital deployed in support of Operation Enduring Freedom now are preparing for the transfer of authority with the Air Force and then packing to come home, said Col. Jeffrey Haun, commander of the 14th CSH, during a telephonic interview in mid-December.

An Air Force medical task force will assume the 14th CSH's role in providing medical support in the Afghanistan theater.

"We'll be transitioning with the new team in mid-January," Haun said.

Getting close to the end of the mission, there is both excitement and anxiety, he said. Morale is high, but the focus is still on the mission.

The unit deployed last January to Bagram, Afghanistan, replacing the 249th General Hospital from Georgia.

While deployed, the 14th CSH treated mostly local nationals, 80 percent, Afghan security and coalition forces, 10 to 15 percent, and U.S. Soldiers, 5 to 6 percent, Haun said.

The patient count has slowed down since the weather has changed, he said.

"The Taliban and the Hajj don't like to fight when it's cold outside," Haun said while talking about the snow.

Ortiz named Packer of the Year

Winner packed nearly 5,000 chutes

Spc. Randy Ortiz packed nearly 5,000 parachutes last year, and the feat earned him the Packer of the Year award.

Ortiz, of the 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, was awarded an Army Achievement Medal and a rigger hat with his badge and rank in a display box.

"I can't believe I won it," Ortiz said.

"He flat out packed 4,872 parachutes in fiscal year 2006. That's almost 1,000 more 'chutes than the guy who won last year," said Capt. James Janda, Ortiz's company commander. "Hopefully it gives some of our younger Soldiers the incentive to do well and pack more 'chutes."

And he may be right. Ortiz's was inspired by the 2005 winner.

"When I saw the previous winner get his award, I decided to set my goal," Ortiz said.

Never knew how new it would be

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

It's hard for me to picture what my life will be like in the future.

I know that if I had tried a year ago to see what life would be like in January 2007, I wouldn't have been able to. My life has changed that much.

In the past year, I've gone from being a full-time college student and intern at an equestrian magazine to being a full-time reporter for a military newspaper. I went from the University of Maryland, near Washington, D.C., to Fort Benning. I live in Columbus, which in my books is in the middle of nowhere.

Last year I lived at home in the suburbs in Maryland. I had to drive 20 miles on D.C.'s traffic-clogged beltway to get to class, which meant leaving two hours early for an 8 a.m. class and feeling lucky to still have my life by the time I got home safely each day.

At the university, I was surrounded by laid-back college students, sorority girls and the occasional war protest. I was the only new Army wife around.

Now, I drive down I-185 to get to work, which only has traffic when there's an accident, or when it rains even slightly.

And instead of college students, I'm surrounded by Soldiers and government-employed civilians. Since I work in Infantry Hall, I often hear bursts of gunfire from the ranges, and helicopters occasionally land in front of the building.

I heard a few gunshots while in College Park, but trust me, they weren't from anyone practicing. College Park, Md., isn't exactly a nice place to live.

I'm still writing up a storm in this new year, but my topics have changed. Last year it was papers on J.R.R. Tolkien, Don DeLillo and Erasmus. Now it's copy for the newspaper on Fort Benning's Soldiers, their deployments and red-cockaded woodpeckers.

Now I read what I want instead of textbooks and the novels that professors pick out. I do miss doing research on fiction and, yes, writing papers. I know, I know. I'm crazy.

I've also gone from being a newlywed to, well, what's after that? Just a married couple? My husband and I recently celebrated our one year anniversary. I know we're not an old married couple, although we sometimes act like it — we watch Jeopardy and Wheel of Fortune just about every weeknight.

And now we're homeowners. This time last year, I was living with my parents while I finished school. Now that's a huge change. No 5-year-old brother or teenage sisters arguing anymore. If I want a home-cooked dinner, I've got to make it myself, but if I feel like cussing, there's no one to scold me.

It is a bit lonelier though, not having my huge family around to keep me company when my husband is training late into the night.

I have bills galore that don't get paid unless I do something about it. No more mom and dad covering the cell phone and car insurance. And I have credit, but I'm proud to say I haven't let my spending get out of control.

Looking back to last year, I knew that all these changes would occur, but I couldn't begin to guess what life would actually be like.

And I'm happier with life this year than last, small city and all.

Mostly I've been a failure since I gave up the bottle

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

I'm through spinning my wheels. This whole New Year's resolution thing isn't working for me.

I'm no quitter, mind you; it's not like I tried it once or twice, and decided to throw in the towel. I've had 40 years of experience with New Year's resolutions, so I consider myself a subject matter expert.

Oh sure, the first few years were OK. I made a few resolutions and stuck to them. I resolved to get out of diapers, get out of the pen and give up the bottle. And I succeeded on all fronts, thank you very much.

So I resolved to master finger painting, to make my cursive Ts with perfect little tails and to be Marcia Brady. I had my first taste of failure and it was bitter.

Then I resolved to train my bangs to feather, to master the Rubik's Cube, and to make Scott Baio my own. I became a failure on all fronts.

But I didn't give up. With every New Year, I resolved. I was determined. Resolute. I figured, early on, that the key to success was to make a few resolutions, a handful — not too many, but not too few — and most of them easy and vague, like resolving to floss more often or to not bite my nails. No problem, I never did bite my nails. Then, I'd throw in a doozy, like winning the Iditarod, and hope my subconscious, with the momentum of success in the areas of the ridiculously mundane, would propel me to victory in the arena of the impossible, such as winning the aforementioned Iditarod, the lottery or the Miss America pageant. Mostly it didn't work.

The last 10 years or so, like everybody else, I resolved to exercise more, spend less, eat healthier and get organized. Those are the resolutions Americans make most frequently, according to a poll I read last year before I resolved to quit reading polls, Dear Abby, and anything written by Molly Ivins.

Naturally, I didn't succeed at the exercise more, spend less, eat healthier and get organized resolutions for more than a couple of months, at best. But I haven't wasted a minute since on Abby, Ivins or those pathetic, twisted polls. Success! And it tasted sweet.

That's when I decided to quit spinning my wheels. No more grand resolutions destined to be resurrected next year and again the next. I'll do my best to exercise, really I will, and occasionally I'll give up junk food for a stretch. But eventually I'll fail, if failure is defined as imperfection. I'll succeed again and fail again. That's life, and New Year's resolutions are seldom life changing on a grand scale.

But they can be mildly satisfying. I no longer find myself marveling at Ivin's idiocy, mourning the loss of Abby the original, and worrying that people might actually believe those blasted poll statistics. It's no big thing, but it's made my life a little more pleasant, and isn't that what a resolution should do?

This year, I've decided to give up reality TV, quit worrying about things I can't change, and use paper plates more often. Those are promises I can keep.

'Accidental president' was amazing person

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

I consider myself a fairly intelligent person. I can hold my own while playing Trivial Pursuit. But last week I felt very ignorant when President Gerald R. Ford died and I realized I knew nothing about him as a president. Being a news junkie, I was riveted to MSNBC, Fox News and every other news outlet to try to learn as much as I could about Ford.

I've learned a lot since his death — at 93 years old, he was the oldest former president. He was born with the name of Leslie King in 1913 in Omaha, Neb. His parents divorced before he was a year old, and he and his mom moved to Grand Rapids, Mich., where she was from. His mom got remarried later on, and his stepfather, Gerald Ford Sr., adopted him and renamed him Gerald Ford Jr.

Ford played center on the football team at the University of Michigan when they won the national title in 1932 and 1933. He was a natural and gifted athlete, who swam daily during his presidency.

Somehow I never learned about the presidents in school. I didn't know Ford was president for just two years, and became known as the "accidental president." Amid the Watergate scandal, Vice President Spiro Agnew resigned, and Ford became the vice president. Then President Richard Nixon also resigned, making Ford the only man to become president by appointment, not election.

Ford came under fire for pardoning Nixon a month later. He defended his decision for the rest of his life, something I admire. He stuck to his guns, even when it wasn't the popular thing to do.

After all of my online reading and TV watching, I have come to consider Ford my favorite president. It isn't that he was an outstanding politician — he was considered a good president, not great, and many questioned his intelligence. What I like most about Ford is that he always seemed true to himself. He had an aura of self-confidence that calmed

Americans.

When taking his oath of office, Ford said, "Our long national nightmare is over." And it was. Ford nursed the nation in healing, and many took comfort in his presidency.

Ford's wife, Betty, is also greatly admired. She didn't hide her breast cancer or mastectomy, and talked honestly about her addiction to alcohol and medicine. She founded the Betty Ford Center in Rancho Mirage, Calif., to help others with their addictions. My favorite fact about Betty is that she was a former model and actress, and was a dancer and fashion coordinator when she met Ford.

It's too bad he was only able to serve for two years. He lost the 1976 battle for the White House to then Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter. Many said he lost the presidency because of his pardon of Nixon.

It's sad that Ford died. But it wasn't until his passing that I realized how little I knew about history. I know a lot of basics, but now I have the chance to learn more. Take this opportunity to learn something new.

Bush: Ford's resolve, integrity led U.S. through turbulent times

Bush eulogizes Gerald R. Ford during services in Washington, D.C.

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Gerry J. Gilmore

Former President Gerald R. Ford was a man of strength and integrity who led America through the aftermath of Watergate and the end of the Vietnam War, President Bush said at Ford's state funeral services in Washington, D.C., Tuesday.

Thousands of military members helped pay tribute to those traits during a solemn state funeral that began in the morning when Ford's casket was transported from the U.S. Capitol to Washington National Cathedral.

The presence of Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines and Coast Guardsmen was everywhere, with troops paying tribute to their former commander in chief.

They served as ceremonial guards and honorary pallbearers, provided music and rendered a 21-gun salute to the former president on the tarmac at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., before his casket was flown to Grand Rapids, Mich., for burial.

During his eulogy at Washington National Cathedral, Bush said Ford's name already was a symbol of integrity when he became the 38th U.S. president on Aug. 9, 1974, after President Richard M. Nixon resigned. He served until 1977.

"President Ford assumed office at a terrible time in our nation's history," Bush said.

America was politically divided by the Vietnam War, he said, and the U.S. economy was hamstrung by inflation. The South Vietnamese government fell to the communists just nine months into Ford's presidency, he said.

Yet, "amid all the turmoil, Gerald Ford was a rock of stability," Bush said. "And, when he put his hand on his family Bible to take the presidential oath of office, he brought grace to a moment of great doubt."

President Bush praised the affable Ford, who he said proved his presidential mettle as he made difficult decisions that, though not always popular, put the interests of the country first. The president noted Ford's firm resolve when the American merchant ship SS Mayaguez was seized by Khmer Rouge operatives in international waters off Cambodia May 12, 1975. Cambodia had fallen to the Khmer Rouge communists in mid-April. After diplomatic measures failed, Ford sent in U.S. forces to rescue the Mayaguez's 39-member crew.

While the rescue operation was under way, the ship's crew was unexpectedly released by their captors.

The U.S. military rescue force lost an estimated 41 service members, mostly Marines, during the operation, while killing 30 Khmer Rouge members as they engaged a 300-member air- and sea-based enemy force. Ford also oversaw America's participation in the Helsinki Accords, Bush said.

That agreement was signed in Helsinki, Finland, on August 1975 by 35 nations, including the United States, Canada, the Soviet Union and many European countries.

Language contained in the accords guaranteed the Eastern European territorial gains the Soviets had made at the end of World War II. But, the document also reduced Cold War tensions, and its inclusion of basic human rights for citizens covered in the agreement proved to be a harbinger for the fall of the Soviet Bloc.

Ford was initially lambasted for endorsing the Helsinki Accords, Bush said.

"Yet, history has shown that document helped bring down the Soviet Union, as courageous men and women behind the Iron Curtain used it to demand their God-given liberties," he said.

Ford was the target of two assassination attempts during his presidency, but refused to cut back on his public schedule, Bush said.

And, when the country was suffering the political fallout of the Watergate scandal, Ford likely sacrificed his chances to be elected president in 1976 by pardoning Nixon, Bush said.

Nixon had nominated Ford to replace the scandal-tainted Spiro Agnew as vice president Oct. 12, 1973.

At that time, Ford was a Republican member of Congress who had represented Michigan for 24 years in the House of Representatives.

He grew up in Grand Rapids, Mich., and was buried on the grounds of his presidential museum and library there Wednesday.

Bush declared Tuesday a national day of mourning for Ford, who died Dec. 26 at age 93 at his residence in Rancho Mirage, Calif.

"Gerald Ford assumed the presidency when the nation needed a leader of character and humility, and we found it in the man from Grand Rapids," Bush said during his eulogy. "President Ford's time in office was brief, but history will long remember the courage and common sense that helped restore trust in the workings of our democracy."

Bush's eulogy was preceded by comments from his father, former President George H.W. Bush, who remembered Ford as a selfless man who lived a life of noble purpose.

"As Americans, we generally eschew notions of the 'indispensable man,' and yet, during those traumatic times, few if any of our public leaders could have stepped into the breach and rekindled our national faith as did President Gerald R. Ford," the elder Bush said.

Ford served the country in momentous and trying times, the elder Bush said, just as Abraham Lincoln did during the Civil War and Franklin Delano Roosevelt did during the Depression and World War II.

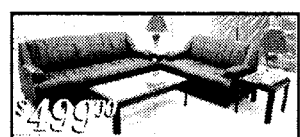

Ford's honesty and straightforward manner restored the public's faith in the Oval Office and led the country forward in the aftermath of the Watergate scandal, the former President Bush said.

Former first lady Betty Ford, members of the Ford family and many senior government officials attended the state funeral.

Vice President Richard B. Cheney, who served as chief of staff during the Ford administration, and former Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld, who served his first stint as defense secretary under Ford, were among the officials in attendance.

In 2006, Everything old was new again

A tornado ripped through Main Post Nov. 15, causing millions of dollars worth of damage to homes in McDonald Manor and more than 20 buildings nearby in the post's warehouse district north of Vibbert Avenue. Nine people were injured during the storm, post officials reported, but no one required medical treatment.

Across post, on Custer Road, 900 housing units were demolished in March in the 50-year-old McGraw Manor to make room for 600 single-family homes. The Residential Communities Initiative is a Department of the Army Initiative to privatize housing and provide more attractive, up-to-date and spacious quarters for Army families.

McGraw Manor will be the first of several post neighborhoods to be leveled and reborn under the RCI's neighborhood concept, which includes community activity centers, swimming pools and recreation areas.

The renovation marked the second of its kind on Fort Benning in recent years. Ripken attended the rededication of the historic Gowdy Baseball Stadium in 2005. With the various major construction projects on post, including new shoppettes, restaurants and a 240,000-square-foot mall, which should be completed in 2008, post officials said due care will be taken to preserve the historical integrity of the post. Many of the Main Post structures and facilities will undergo renovation, just as the 80-year-old Russ Pool and Russ Pond did earlier this year.

Spc. Mikhail Venikov was the dark horse going into the 23rd annual Best Ranger Competition in April. Venikov was partnered with Sgt. 1st Class John Sheaffer, a BRC veteran, after Sheaffer's partner was injured just days before the competition. Venikov, a Russian emigrant, proved a good match for Sheaffer. The 75th Ranger Regiment team took an early lead and held onto it throughout the competition, beating 20 teams from around the Army.

Sgt. 1st Class Michael Redican works with Ex, an 11-year-old German shepherd, to demonstrate the working dog's ability to subdue a target. Ex made headlines last year, when the dog retired and went home with Staff Sgt. Eric Hooker to be a family pet. Historically, working dogs could not be adopted; after retirement, they were euthanized. A policy change makes it possible for handlers like Hooker to care for the dogs they trained and served with. Hooker and Ex competed in the 209th Military Police Detachment's quarterly Top Dog competition, which made headlines locally as more and more attention is focused on the demand for military working dogs, including explosive-detectors like Ex, in the Global War on Terrorism.

Retired Lt. Gen. Hal Moore spoke at the April dedication of a monument honoring Rick Rescorla, who died in the 9/11 attack on the World Trade Center. Moore, who co-authored We Were Soldiers Once and Young, served with Rescorla in Vietnam in the Ia Drang Valley. Here, Moore is pictured with a war trophy captured by Rescorla. It's a treasure, Moore said, and he'll see to it that it goes in the new National Infantry Museum, which is expected to open in 2008. Construction began on the $60 million 150,000-square-foot museum in June.

MLK celebration set for Thursday

Speaker is Georgia NAACP president, Army veteran

THE BAYONET

The Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. commemoration is scheduled from 11 a.m. to noon Thursday in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium.

The guest speaker will be Columbus resident Edward O. DuBose, president of the Georgia State Conference of the NAACP.

DuBose plans to talk about the development of race relations and diversity in the military, something he understands after a 21-year career in the Army.

"We are moving toward the realization of King's dream of one community, essentially one color," DuBose said. "I plan to challenge the Army to continue to set the standard for achieving King's dream."

DuBose is the only Columbus resident ever to be state president of the NAACP. He was president of the local branch from 1997 to 2005. DuBose brings a unique point of view to the event because of his history with the military and civil rights work, said Sgt. 1st Class Melvin Tanner, Equal Opportunity advisor for the Infantry Training Brigade, who is coordinating the event.

Other planned performances include a poetic rendition of Maya Angelou's Still I Rise and a performance of King's speech, I see the Promised Land. There will be a musical rendition of Still I Rise accompanied by a sign language performance. Dancers will perform an interpretive dance to James Weldon Johnson's Lift Every Voice and Sing, often called the black national anthem.

Tanner said he hopes many in the community will attend the event.

"The commemoration is not about the event itself," Tanner said. "It's about a dream that still lives. (Martin Luther King's) dream was for all individuals. This is an uplifting event. It's all about unity."

There will be refreshments served outside the auditorium following the event.

WHAT'S HAPPENING around Post

McGraw: May be ready for first residents in spring

Across the street, to the east, carpenters are framing out another, very much like it and very different. It will also house one family and two cars. It will have a mudroom, a first-floor laundry and a utility sink in the garage, because that's what Fort Benning residents asked for. It will have a fenced yard, like every other home in the neighborhood. But that's where the resemblance will end. It won't be blue. And it will be Colonial, not Arts and Crafts, and it won't be a cookie-cutter copy of any other house in the neighborhood.

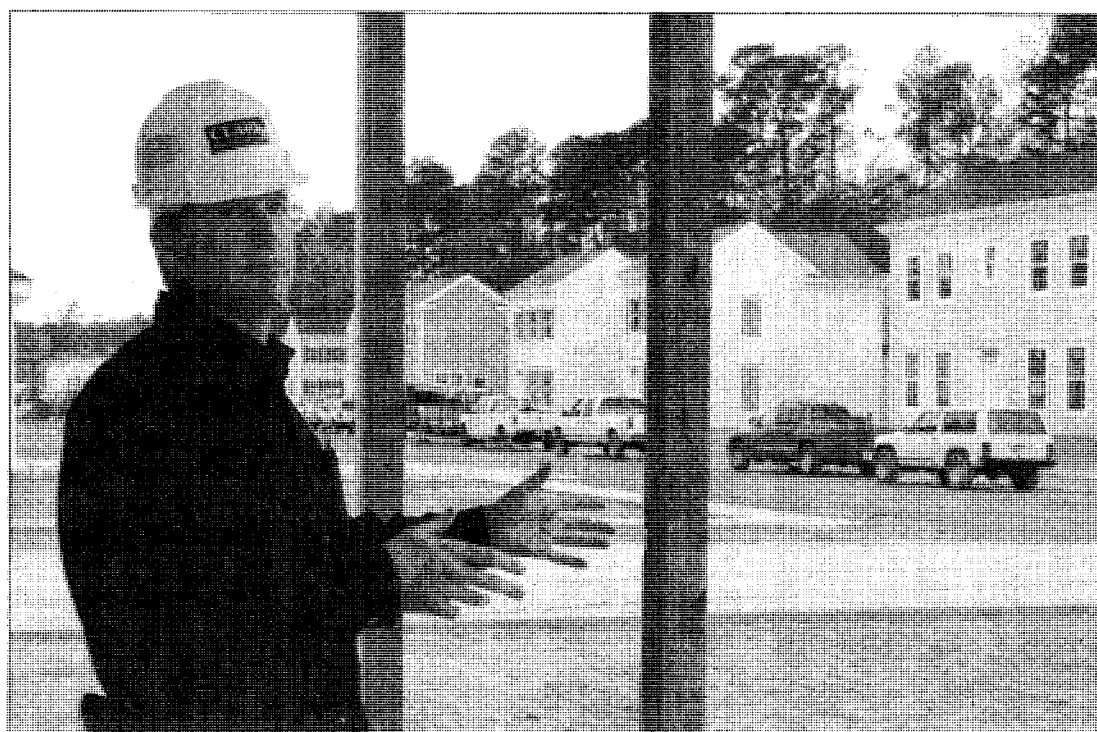

As Baker Street goes, so goes the neighborhood, said the men who head the construction and development teams responsible for turning the dilapidated eight-plex "quarters" in McGraw into a community former residents wouldn't recognize, with front porches, flowerbeds, sidewalks and tree-lined streets. It will be a new community with an old-fashioned feel.

"You couldn't sit out here on the porch and not wave at your neighbors. It's that kind of a community," said Chris Hirst, the vice president of construction.

Hirst leads the massive team of carpenters who are hammering away at the first phase of McGraw Village, the first new neighborhood to be constructed on Fort Benning in 40 years. Two blocks of Baker Street will be ready for tenants in the spring.

Phil Cowley is the project director for the Clark Realty development team designing all of Fort Benning's new family communities. He and Hirst worked closely with all the "stakeholders" in the early stages of planning to develop communities consistent with the needs and desires of military families, and Fort Benning families specifically, Cowley said.

"What you see are the fruits of residents' feedback. They told us what they wanted, and it was, in some cases, different than what families wanted at other posts," he said. "They told us

"You couldn't sit out here on the porch and not wave at your neighbors," said Chris Hirst, who heads the team working on the first phase of construction in McGraw Village.

they wanted a sink in the garage, because their Soldiers come in from the field, not the office, and they don't want red Georgia clay all over their houses.

"We listened to artists, master planners, people experienced in every aspect of this kind of project," he said, "but in the end, we had to take into consideration what the residents wanted. They're the experts."

The "experts" told them they wanted space, and plenty of it, storage, garages with automatic door openers, kitchens with solid-surface counters and built-in microwaves. They will get all that and more, Cowley said, including — get this — first floor half baths with earth-friendly toilets. They have two flushers — Hirst called them "one and two" — and the potential to save thousands of gallons of water each year.

Inside and out, each of the 50 single-family homes that will line Baker Street, replacing about twice that many "quarters" in the former eight-plexes, will have personality all their own, Hirst said.

The rest of the neighborhood, all 601 houses, and the neighborhoods to follow, will be the same. Different.

"Before, you needed a street address to find a house, because they all looked alike," Hirst said. "Not anymore. You could tell someone how to get to your house by describing the house."

Hirst said — and said often — that Clark Realty, the company he works for, focuses on "building communities, not houses."

And indeed, the neighborhood complete, as he described it, will have a personality, also.

It will be less congested than its forerunner, with plenty of green space and something Hirst called "trick-or-treat friendly" streets, well-lighted, with plenty of space between the sidewalk and the street. Arborists were contracted to design streetscapes that will appeal all year round.

Community centers will have exercise equipment, computers, pools, splash parks for kids, child care centers, big-screen TVs, kitchens and multipurpose rooms designed to accommodate the kinds of crowds one might find at a birthday party or a hail and farewell dinner.

McGraw will even have a day spa and a Starbucks.

McGraw Village will be home to enlisted Soldiers, up to the rank of staff sergeant, Cowley said, but he can't say who will move in first or how that will be decided. Garrison officials will lead the way when it comes to making that decision.

Ortiz: Named top parachute rigger

"My whole motivation this year was to receive this," he said. "It took a year of working at it, but it was well worth it."

Ortiz joined the Army four years ago to change his life.

"With the war going on and terrorism, I wanted to do something about it," he said.

With a grandfather who fought in World War II and uncle who served in Desert Storm, the Army was his natural choice.

He was previously in a maintenance unit and had no parachute packing experience when he got to the company.

It took a few months to learn the process, which involves laying out a "jumped chute" and re-packing it into its bag, but once you get it down, the process goes pretty quickly, Ortiz said.

Along with receiving the Packer of the Year award, Ortiz received a weekend stay at Callaway Gardens, including tickets to the Wild Animal Safari and dinner for his family.

Ortiz was named Packer of the Month several times this year, and he was re-enlisted by the undersecretary of the Army two days before the Packer of the Year awards ceremony.

Getting to re-enlist with the undersecretary was exciting, a once in a lifetime opportunity, he said.

Rachel Houston
Spc. Randy Ortiz, E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, and his wife, Valerie, hold Ortiz's awards for being the 2006 parachute Packer of the Year. Ortiz received the awards Dec. 15 at the Airborne Walk.

on the ground and the white Christmas the Soldiers would have.

Haun also talked about the new hospital the Soldiers were supposed to move in to after arriving in Afghanistan. Delays kept the unit from working in the $9 million hospital supplied with state-of-the-art equipment, Haun said.

"We were eagerly anticipating the move," he said, "but the hospital is not ready for patients."

The patients still had the same high standard of care, Haun said.

The new hospital won't change the level of care, but will make it easier for the providers, he said.

During the deployment, the Soldiers kept their families involved through video teleconferences, e-mails, phone calls and letters.

Haun said sharing the experience with family and the local community helped keep morale high.

The transfer of authority ceremony is set for mid-January, he said.

Approximately 100,000 lives on Fort Benning were in the hands of one platoon this year. When one thinks of having his life in someone's hands, doctors and pilots first come to mind. But, if you wear those silver wings upon your chest, you may just put riggers at the top of your list.

"Everyday we pack 'chutes, we are putting people's lives in our hands," said Staff Sgt. Nicholas Rose, platoon sergeant for Pack Platoon, E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment. "There's no other job in the military where you're dealing with people's lives on a daily basis."

During 2006, the platoon packed between 400 and 500 parachutes per day for Airborne, Jumpmaster, Pathfinder, Ranger schools, WHINSEC and special elements on post.

"Jumpers expect the best (parachute) they can get for whatever mission these guys do," Rose said, which explains the rigger's motto of "I will be sure always."

For every parachute packed, an NCO is there to watch the riggers' checks being performed. However, each rigger NCO is backed by the experience of having packed between five and 10 thousand parachutes, said Staff Sgt. David Hale, shop supervisor for Pack Platoon.

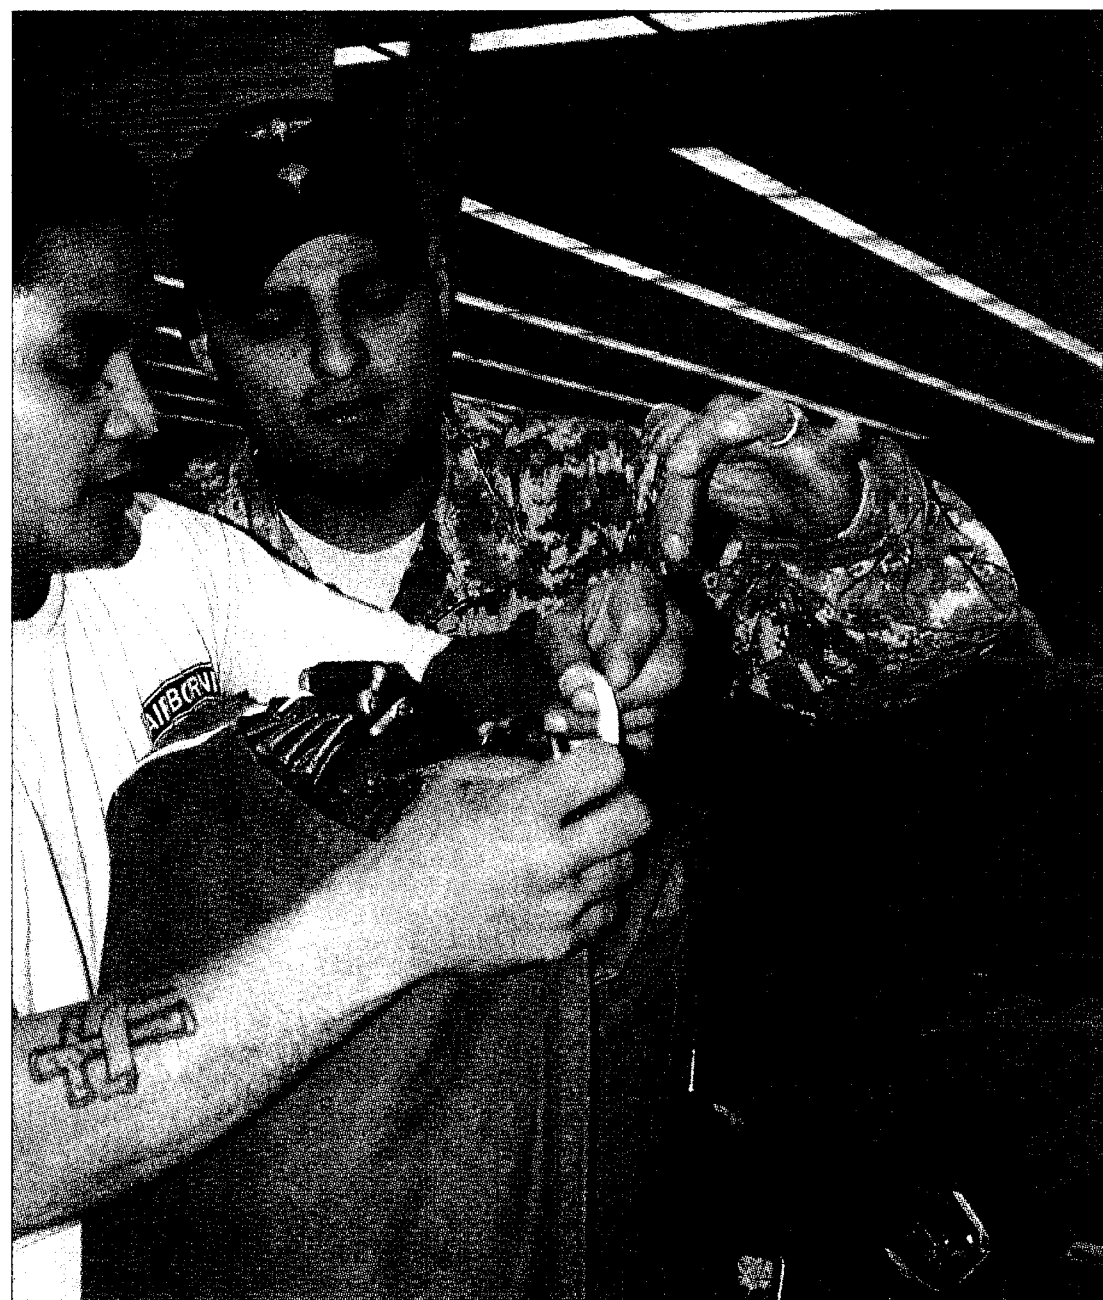

"With every piece of equipment that goes into packing, a parachute has a number and is documented onto a pack sheet and maintained for three years," said Hale.

All riggers know each parachute they pack may be their own.

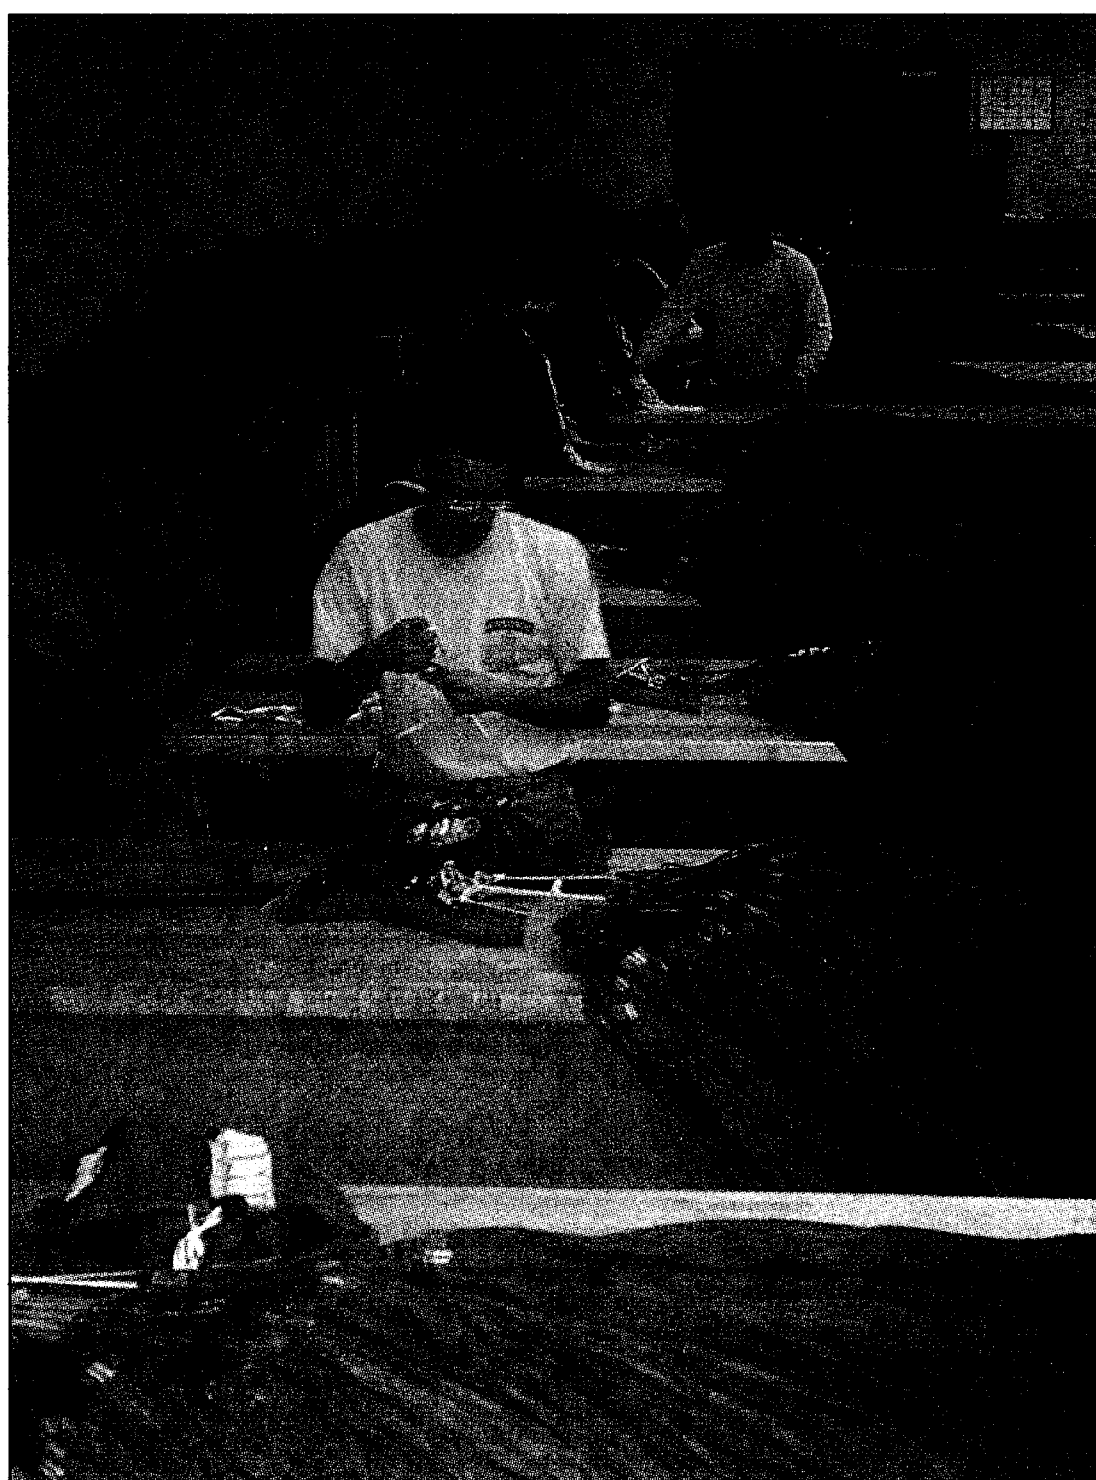

"At any given time, our leadership can ask us to go out and jump with any of these parachutes," Rose said. "So, Airborne Soldiers can rest assured, we are sure always."

Sgt. Steven Bennett, right, performs rigger checks on a parachute being packed by Pfc. Abraham Bohrem Dec. 12.

Fort Benning's rigger of the year, Spc. Randy Ortiz, right, performs rigger checks for a parachute being packed by Spc. Freddie Abella. Ortiz packed nearly 5,000 parachutes in fiscal year 2006. Read more about Ortiz in this week's Bayonet on A1.

salutes 50 Heroes from 50 States

In a conversation about the war a few weeks ago, I was asked, 'Where are the heroes?' In prior wars, everyone knew the heroes. Well, there are a great many, and they're doing exactly what needs to be done to keep our country safe and to preserve freedom for our children and theirs. I think we could probably all do a better job — media and the military alike — in telling their stories.

— Former Secretary Donald Rumsfeld
Senate Hearing, Feb. 7, 2006

Heroes in the Global War on Terrorism come from all parts of the country and every state. These are the stories of just a few of our nation's sons and daughters who are completing history's great task on behalf of human freedom.

CHIEF MASTER SGT. KEVIN LYNN
Alabama
Air Force

Chief Master Sgt. Lynn helped establish the first military police academy in Iraq during his deployment from Feb. 28 to July 23, 2004. Lynn and 13 Air Force security forces members renovated a bombed-out former Republican Guard base in Taji, Iraq, into the site for the new police academy. Lynn served as commandant of the school. Starting from scratch, they developed and implemented a course for the academy in just nine days. In all, Lynn and his team are credited with graduating more than 500 military policemen and 40 military police instructors.

For his work, Lynn received the Bronze Star Medal Dec. 14, 2004.

SGT. JARRED L. ADAMS
Alaska
Marine Corps

Adams and his group were operating along the Iraq-Syria border Jan. 6, 2005. As they were traveling toward a roadway in the city of Husaybah dubbed the "intersection of death," insurgents attacked, causing Adams' humvee to crash and become stuck. Once the humvee was dislodged, Adams and his team were driving around to locate another vehicle when a rocket-propelled grenade hit Adams' vehicle, killing one Marine and wounding others, including Adams. He and his team moved to a safer location, but Adams realized the fallen Marine was still inside the burning vehicle. He ran through the line of fire, retrieved the Marine, and carried him back to safety. Adams was awarded the Silver Star Medal April 17, 2006.

SGT. 1ST CLASS KEVIN CARPENTER
Arizona
Arizona Army National Guard

Carpenter, a staff sergeant at the time, and his squad were in a convoy performing reconnaissance and surveillance patrols Oct. 6, 2005, when the lead vehicle was hit. Carpenter sectioned off the area around the damaged vehicle, which had veered off the road and crashed into a building. Unable to reach his headquarters on the vehicle's radio, Carpenter called in the situation using his cell phone. He directed the pickup and transport of the injured Soldiers, and also led his team to extract the wounded and dead from the disabled vehicle. His immediate response saved the lives of two Soldiers. For his actions and leadership, Carpenter received the Bronze Star Medal in August 2006.

1ST LT. MICHAEL MCCARTY
Arkansas
Arkansas Army National Guard

McCarty's platoon was patrolling in the Adhamiyah district of Baghdad Nov. 20, 2004, when a group of insurgents attacked. As the enemy fighters inflicted a massive assault on the 26-man team, McCarty directed a counterattack. At one point, McCarty charged and destroyed an enemy machine-gun team without any support. In all, his team stopped an enemy three-man machine-gun team and a force of about 75 insurgents. McCarty's actions prevented the capture of an Iraqi police station. McCarty was awarded the Silver Star Medal Feb. 4, 2006. He was previously awarded the Bronze Star, the Purple Heart, the Meritorious Service Medal and the Army Commendation Medal with Valor.

PETTY OFFICER 2ND CLASS MATTHEW G. AXELSON
California
Navy

Navy SEALs Axelson and Dietz (see below) were part of a four-man reconnaissance team sent on a mission June 28, 2005, to find a key Taliban leader in the rough and dangerous terrain east of Asadabad, Afghanistan. Taliban backers spotted the team, and alerted terrorist fighters of their presence. A deadly firefight ensued between the four SEALs and an enemy force of at least 30 fighters. The SEALs radioed for reinforcements; however, the MH-47 Chinook helicopter that was sent in as support was shot down, killing all 16 men aboard. Axelson was severely wounded, but continued to fight and hold his ground. The enemy force eventually killed Axelson. He was posthumously awarded the Navy Cross Sept. 13, 2006.

PETTY OFFICER 2ND CLASS DANNY P. DIETZ
Colorado
Navy

Dietz was sent on a mission to kill or capture the enemy militia leader Ahmad Shah, aka Mullah Ismail. After the terrorists found the team, Dietz helped others keep the large enemy force at bay. Dietz was also severely wounded in the firefight, but continued to hold his ground, giving one of the other SEALs the chance to escape. The other SEAL was able to evade the Taliban fighters and was recovered by U.S. forces a few days later. Dietz died in the firefight.

Dietz was posthumously awarded the Navy Cross Sept. 13, 2006.

TECH. SGT. JOHN A. CHAPMAN
Connecticut
Air Force

Chapman and his team were on a reconnaissance mission in northeastern Afghanistan March 4, 2002. The team's Chinook came under heavy enemy fire, forcing it to crash land. After landing, Chapman called in close-air support to cover the exposed team and to help search for a Navy SEAL team member who had fallen out of the helicopter. Searching for the missing SEAL, he killed two enemies, then came upon a dug-in machine gun nest. Enemies fired on the rescue team from three sides; Chapman fired back at close range until multiple wounds took his life. For his actions at "Robert's Ridge," Chapman was posthumously awarded the Air Force Cross Jan. 10, 2003. A U.S. Navy cargo ship was named in honor of him April 8, 2005.

MAJ. PAT HOUTMAN
Delaware
Delaware Air National Guard

Houtman and his crew were flying over Afghanistan on a mission in November 2004 when they came under intense enemy fire. The C-130 transport plane was holding 10 passengers and a full cargo load. Houtman and his team immediately took evasive action to get the C-130 out of danger and to safety. Houtman was flying the plane low, which is necessary for many of the missions in Afghanistan — because of the rugged terrain, it can be difficult to locate Soldiers on re-supply missions. The details of Houtman's and his team's actions remain largely classified for security purposes. On Sept. 10, 2006, Houtman was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the nation's oldest military aviation award.

CAPT. JASON L. AMERINE
Hawaii
Army Special Forces

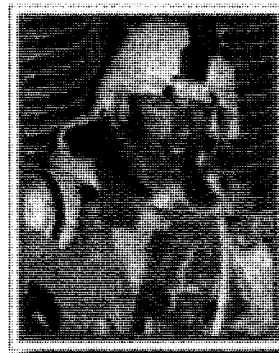

Amerine and his team were deployed to Afghanistan to root out the Taliban and to help stabilize the country. In mid-November 2001, Amerine's small team defended Tarin Kot, a city that the Taliban tried to take back from coalition forces. With the help of Afghan freedom fighters led by Hamid Karzai, they engaged in several hours of close combat with the enemies. Amerine's team also helped train, secure and organize friendly Afghan forces. On Dec. 5, an errant bomb landed close to the team, killing three Soldiers and wounding several others, including Amerine. On Jan. 15, 2002, Amerine was awarded the Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart. Amerine was chosen as one of the faces included in the U.S. Army's "America's Army" video game.

STAFF SGT. LUKE MILLER
Idaho
Former Marine Reserve

Miller's tank was participating in an insurgent sweep near Karbala, Iraq, from May 8-14, 2005. On May 8, a roadside bomb went off under a nearby tank, severely damaging it. Miller rushed from his tank to help those trapped inside the wrecked tank. As his team provided protective fire, Miller and another Marine pulled a wounded Marine from the tank. Miller then pulled out another injured Marine, slung him over his shoulder and dodged insurgent fire as he delivered him to a waiting helicopter for evacuation. He then returned to his team to rejoin the fight. On Nov. 10, 2005, Miller received the Military Vanguard Award, bestowed annually upon one member of each military branch. On Nov. 14, 2005, Miller was awarded the Bronze Star Medal.

SGT. 1ST CLASS PAUL R. SMITH
Florida
Army

Smith and his team were constructing a prisoner-of-war holding area near Baghdad International Airport April 4, 2003, when a large enemy force attacked. Smith organized a hasty defense. Fearing their defenses would be overrun, Smith moved through intense enemy fire to a machine gun mounted atop a damaged vehicle. He maintained his exposed position, allowing his unit to regroup and form a counter-attack. Numerous enemy soldiers were killed, and his unit was able to withdraw a number of injured Soldiers. Smith's heroic actions helped defeat the enemy force, but also claimed his life. On April 4, 2005, Smith was posthumously awarded the first, and so far the only, Medal of Honor in the Global War on Terrorism.

PFC. JUSTIN HAIR
Georgia
Georgia Army National Guard

Hair and his unit were working a security checkpoint near Radwiniyah, Iraq, on June 13, 2005, when a suicide bomber attempted to pass through in a vehicle rigged with explosives. Assessing the dangerous situation, Hair advanced on the enemy and killed him before the insurgent was able to detonate the device. As a result, he was injured in the attack. Hair's quick thinking and actions likely saved several lives. Hair was the first to engage and eliminate an enemy in combat for the 48th Brigade Combat Team in 60 years. For his actions, Hair received the Bronze Star, Purple Heart and the Army Commendation Medal Aug. 20, 2005.

SGT. MAJ. BRADLEY A. KASAL
Iowa
Marine Corps

Then a first sergeant, Kasal was assisting a platoon in Fallujah on Nov. 13, 2004, when heavy gunfire broke out in an Iraqi home known as the "House of Hell." Marines quickly began exiting the building as Kasal rushed in to assess the situation. Kasal was hit repeatedly as he grabbed a wounded Marine stranded in the line of fire. He then gave his medical supplies to the other Marine instead of dividing the limited materials. The insurgents threw a hand grenade close to the Marines to force them to come out from under cover. Kasal used his own severely injured body to protect the other Marine from shrapnel. Despite losing about 60 percent of his blood from more than 47 wounds, Kasal survived. On March 23, 2006, Kasal was awarded the Navy Cross.

CAPT. MATTHEW C. GRATTON
Kansas
Navy Reserve

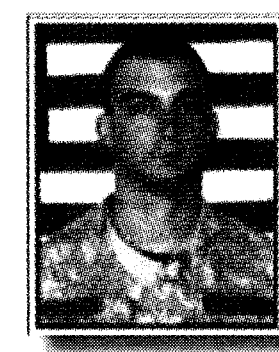

While serving as the battalion surgeon for a Marine unit from January to September 2005 in the Al Anbar province of Iraq, Gratton was responsible for the health and well-being of 1,700 Marines, Sailors and Iraqi soldiers. During his deployment, Gratton provided specialized medical care to more than 1,000 patients, and organized material and personnel support for more than 500 Iraqi army personnel. On May 7 alone, he supervised and treated 11 casualties injured in an IED attack in Haditha. In addition, Gratton provided trauma care to the battalion's 345 troops wounded in action, 150 of whom were in critical condition and had to be evacuated. On Aug. 28, 2006, Gratton received the Bronze Star Medal for his work.

SPC. JEREMY CHURCH
Illinois
Army Reserve

Church was on an emergency fuel run April 9, 2004, when more than 150 insurgents ambushed his convoy near Abu Ghraib, Iraq. Church began firing back at the enemies while steering his humvee through the kill zone. When a Soldier in his humvee was struck in the head by insurgent fire, Church administered first aid as he drove. Even after an improvised explosive device blew out one of the tires, he continued driving. After delivering the wounded Soldier to medics in a secured perimeter, Church rallied nearby Soldiers to get back to the fight. They made their way back to help 10 trapped Soldiers and contractors. In February 2005, Church became the first Army Reserve Soldier to receive the Silver Star Medal in the Global War on Terrorism.

CPL. NATHANIEL S. BAUGHMAN
Indiana
Army

Baughman was deployed with the 187th Infantry Regiment in September 2005 for a yearlong deployment to Iraq. On July 17, 2006, Baughman's humvee was part of a convoy participating in patrol operations in the city of Baiji, Iraq. His humvee was hit by a RPG, severely injuring him. Later that day, Baughman died from his injuries. For going beyond the call of duty and for giving his life for his fellow Soldiers, Baughman was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal and the Purple Heart July 19, 2006.

LT. COL. TODD S. DESGROSSEILLIERS
Maine
Marine Corps

Desgrosseilliers was the officer in charge of Task Force Bruno, which was operating in and around Fallujah, Iraq, from Dec. 12 to 23, 2004. He was leading a group of 60 to 100 men as they followed the main body of the battalion, sweeping the city. He received word on Dec. 12 that Marines were pinned down by enemy gunfire inside a building. With insurgents throwing down grenades from the second floor, Desgrosseilliers pressed on and helped the trapped Marines. His group continued similar operations in Fallujah for more than a week. On Dec. 23, he again led his battalion through a heavy gunfire battle against insurgent fighters. For his leadership and actions, Desgrosseilliers was awarded the Silver Star Medal Jan. 23, 2006.

MASTER SGT. SARUN SAR
Maryland
Army Special Forces

Sar and his 12-man special operations team were sent to search for Taliban fighters in the snowy mountains of eastern Afghanistan on March 5, 2005. As the team's helicopters attempted to land outside an area suspected of sheltering insurgents, the group began to receive heavy fire from the direction of the village. Sar was out front alone as his team was temporarily pinned down. He continued to take enemy fire as he waited for his team to catch up to him. When they did, Sar and the team medic went after an enemy hiding in a hut. Sar killed the insurgent after getting hit by the enemy's fire. His team cleared the area of enemy fighters and rounded up a large cache of enemy weapons. On Jan. 3, 2006, Sar received the Silver Star Medal.

SGT. LEIGH ANN HESTER
Kentucky
Kentucky Army National Guard

Hester's squad was following a supply convoy on March 20, 2005, just south of Baghdad when insurgents ambushed the convoy. Her squad quickly moved into position, cutting off the enemy's escape route. Hester led her team directly into the line of fire into a flanking position, and then began an assault on a trench line. She and her squad leader cleared two trenches. When the attack was over, 27 insurgents were dead, six were wounded and one was captured. In June 2005, Hester was the first woman Soldier since World War II to be awarded the Silver Star Medal.

SGT. SETH RANDELL TRAHAN
Louisiana
Louisiana Army National Guard

Disrupting the holiest day of the Shiite religious calendar, eight suicide bombers struck in Iraq in quick succession, killing numerous people Feb. 19, 2005. Iraqi forces in Baghdad were struggling to handle the large number of attacks, and asked for coalition assistance. As Trahan's team was responding to the Iraq forces' call for help, he was killed by an IED. Trahan was assigned to the Army National Guard's 3d Battalion, 156th Infantry Regiment, out of Crowley, La. Trahan had received 11 medals during his military enlistment; the Bronze Star Medal and Purple Heart were awarded posthumously.

STAFF SGT. JOSEPH P. BUHAIN
Minnesota
Army Reserve

Buhain, a respiratory therapist, was activated as a medic and served in two combat zones from May 2004 to July 2005. Buhain was first sent to Iraq to treat the wounded. He spent a few months there, treating coalition soldiers and insurgents alike. Buhain was then sent to Afghanistan in September to be the medical NCOIC of the Kandahar Provincial Reconstruction Team. During his time there, Buhain built from scratch a respiratory school for Afghan medical students and an ICU in a hospital in Kandahar. He also trained more than 350 medical students in CPR, and took part in more than 150 missions, several of which were high risk. For his efforts in both countries, Buhain was awarded the Bronze Star March 10, 2005.

LT. BRYAN BOUDREAUX
Mississippi
Navy

Boudreaux was serving as a manager at the U.S. embassy in Baghdad on Jan. 29, 2005, when insurgents fired a missile at the embassy. Boudreaux threw himself over a Soldier who had been knocked to the ground to protect him from the debris and smoke that began filling the room. Boudreaux then gave first aid to a major, saving his life and his arms from amputation. Afterward, Boudreaux re-entered the embassy, helping others to safety and performing first aid when necessary. The blast killed two people and wounded seven others. During his deployment, Boudreaux expertly managed $18.6 billion that was appropriated by Congress to rebuild Iraq. For his service, Boudreaux received the Bronze Star Medal Sept. 6, 2005.

CAPT. JASON P. SCHAUBLE
Massachusetts
Former Marine Corps

In the pre-assault planning for Fallujah and Hit in the fall of 2004, Schauble coordinated all artillery fire and sniper operations. During the seizures of both Iraqi cities, Schauble's team successfully engaged enemy targets. On Jan. 3, 2005, Schauble and his team were searching for a high-value target when they came under heavy enemy fire. Schauble ran into a farmhouse to recover a fallen Marine, drawing fire from insurgents inside. Despite being shot and wounded, Schauble shot two insurgents, allowing his Marines to counter-attack. On Sept. 11, 2006, Schauble was awarded the Silver Star for his efforts at the farmhouse, the Bronze Star with a combat "V" for valor for his actions from Oct. 11-16, 2004, and the Meritorious Service Medal for his work with a new training unit.

PETTY OFFICER 2ND CLASS ALAN P. DEMENTER
Michigan
Navy

Dementer was assigned to a group of Marines near An Nasiriyah, Iraq, when insurgents attacked his unit's command headquarters March 26, 2003. Wounded by shrapnel and dodging heavy enemy fire, Dementer moved to another part of the compound where a group of Marines were pinned down. He proceeded over a wall to reach six wounded Marines and provided life-saving emergency treatment. After Dementer stabilized them, he directed and helped move the wounded to the compound's battle aid station. His actions led to the safe evacuation of 31 injured Marines. Dementer was awarded the Bronze Star with Combat "V" Feb. 23, 2004.

SGT. ROBERT J. MITCHELL JR.
Nebraska
Former Marine Corps

Mitchell, then a corporal, was involved in the same fight during the battle of Fallujah on Nov. 13, 2004, as Kasal (see Iowa). Several wounded Marines were trapped inside an Iraqi home known as the "House of Hell" with numerous insurgents waiting to ambush the incoming troops. Mitchell organized his men to assault the building, charged, and quickly took firing positions. Mitchell sped through the kill zone, getting hit as he went. He killed an enemy fighter with his combat knife, and called in support through a small, barred window. With information supplied from Mitchell, the Marines suppressed the insurgents' attack, and extracted the wounded Marines inside. Mitchell was one of the last to leave, despite being injured. On April 25, 2006, Mitchell was awarded the Navy Cross.

SPC. IGNACIO RAMIREZ
Nevada
Army

Ramirez, a chemical specialist, was part of a brigade conducting operations around Ar Ramadi, Iraq, on Aug. 9, 2006. The city is the capital of Al Anbar province, where support for the Sunni insurgency is strong. Ramirez was driving a humvee in a seven-vehicle convoy when a homemade roadside bomb exploded near his vehicle, killing him and two other Soldiers. For going above and beyond the call of duty and sacrificing his life for his fellow Soldiers, on Sept. 7, 2006, Ramirez was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart, the Combat Action Badge and the Honor of the Dragon, a unique award given to chemical specialists.

MASTER SGT. LETITIA WHITAKER
Missouri
Missouri Air National Guard

During her deployment at Kirkuk Air Base from March 28 to July 10, 2003, Whitaker helped establish the first air-control service in northern Iraq since 1990. The service supported about 4,800 combat actions, including covert operations, humanitarian airlifts and medical evacuations. She also supervised several covert flight operations using tactical radios and night vision goggles, and developed explosive-ordnance disposal procedures for the base. She co-authored airfield operating procedures for aero-medical evacuation of wounded coalition forces that resulted in the rapid evacuation of more than 86 critically wounded Soldiers and Airmen. In May 2006, Whitaker became the first woman in the Missouri Air National Guard's history to receive the Bronze Star Medal.

AIRMAN 1ST CLASS CHARITY LEE TRUEBLOOD
Montana
Air Force

Trueblood was driving an up-armored humvee providing security to a group that was moving supplies on Dec. 5, 2005, when her convoy was attacked near Balad Air Base in Iraq. A driver indicated over the radio that he had been hit. Under fire, Trueblood moved her truck between the enemy fire and the other vehicles, which were not up-armored. The injured man pulled to the side of the road because his truck caught on fire. Trueblood drove up to the injured man's vehicle, which was engulfed in flames. She performed first aid and helped to get him to a secure location for medical treatment.

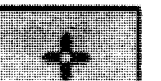

Trueblood received the Bronze Star with Valor Sept. 14, 2006.

SENIOR AIRMAN JASON D. CUNNINGHAM
New Mexico
Air Force

Cunningham was a search-and-rescue medic on the same mission as Chapman (see Connecticut) on March 4, 2002. The Chinook helicopter carrying the group was shot down, and although a hasty defense was formed, they suffered many casualties. Cunningham stayed in the burning Chinook to treat the wounds of the servicemen, and braved attacks to re-position the critically wounded men. Even after Cunningham was severely injured, he continued to direct movement and care of the wounded to another medic. His efforts saved 10 seriously injured Americans. For his actions at "Robert's Ridge," Cunningham was posthumously awarded the Air Force Cross on Sept. 13, 2002.

CAPT. BRIAN R. CHONTOSH
New York
Marine Corps

Chontosh, then a first lieutenant, was leading his platoon north toward Ad Diwaniyah in southern Iraq on March 25, 2003. Insurgents set up an ambush, and with coalition tanks blocking the road ahead, Chontosh's group got caught directly in the line of fire. Chontosh had his driver position their vehicle to cut off an enemy machine gun firing on the platoon. He then ordered his driver to position the vehicle into the enemy trench. He exited the vehicle to begin clearing the trench. Chontosh single-handedly cleared more than 200 meters of an enemy trench, using his own weapons and discarded enemy weapons, killing more than 20 insurgents and disabling others. Chontosh was awarded the Navy Cross Medal March 12, 2004.

CHIEF WARRANT OFFICER 3 KARL HANNAN
New Hampshire
Former Army Reserve

Hannan was deployed to Tikrit, Iraq, from February 2004 to January 2005 to serve as a maintenance technician with a unit that supported heavy trucks. During his time there, Hannan designed and manufactured a clip-on armor plating kit to protect Soldiers traveling in the trucks. The armor plating is the only type of its kind in Iraq, allowing it to be clipped on rather than bolted to the body of the vehicles, which prevents it from damaging the vehicles. At their peak, his team could up-armor 254 trucks a day. He also made engineering prints for other types of trucks and trained others how to weld, manufacture and read the blueprints for the armor. Hannan was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for his work in January 2005.

PETTY OFFICER 2ND CLASS JUAN M. RUBIO
Texas
Navy

Rubio and his team were patrolling the Euphrates River in Iraq Jan. 1, 2005, when they were ambushed by insurgents near the Haditha Dam. The enemies detonated an IED, and followed with heavy fire. Rubio was knocked unconscious, but when he came to, he crawled to a wounded Marine and quickly administered medical assistance. He treated two more injured Marines while members of his team were sent back to the boats they had been patrolling in before the attack. After loading the injured, they drove upstream and jumped into humvees that returned to a battle aid station. Rubio tried to rejoin the battle, but because he had been hit, he was delivered back to the aid station. On April 27, 2006, Rubio received the Silver Star Medal.

MAJ. FRANK DIORIO
New Jersey
Marine Corps

On April 11, 2005, insurgents launched an attack against the Camp Gannon base in Husaybah, Iraq. As enemy fighters unleashed small-arms fire, grenades and vehicle-borne IEDs, Diorio, a captain at the time, controlled the situation for the base. His quick reactions and sound decisions enabled his company to fend off the insurgents, inflicting a high number of casualties on the enemy. After the attack, Diorio had improved defenses built to better protect from future attacks. He also led offensive operations that disrupted the enemy in Husaybah. In all, Diorio led his company in more than 275 engagements. On Jan. 31, 2006, Diorio was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for multiple actions taken from March 17 to Sept. 10, 2005.

CPL. TODD CORBIN
Ohio
Marine Corps Reserve

Corbin, a lance corporal, at the time, and his platoon responded to a call May 7, 2005, to help block an insurgents' retreat in Haditha, Iraq. A vehicle laden with IEDs sped toward the convoy and blew up between two of the humvees as enemy fighters began firing upon the group. Corbin repositioned his vehicle to block the fire from hitting the wounded. He radioed in the situation, and began directing a counter-attack. Corbin then ran back and forth several times through the line of fire recovering dead or wounded personnel and loading them into his humvee. Once he had everyone loaded, he drove his damaged truck through the kill zone to deliver the casualties to the battalion aid station.

Corbin was awarded the Navy Cross April 12, 2006.

CAPT. MATTHEW W. COUSINS
Utah
Utah Army National Guard

Then-1st Lt. Cousins and his team were tasked with assisting the Iraq Survey Group from May 2003 to March 2004. During that time, they performed at least 70 missions in dangerous war zones in northern Iraq. While protecting the ISG in areas such as Kirkuk, Mosul and Tikrit, Cousins and his team defended convoys of up to 15 vehicles and groups as large as 50 people. They also helped with the investigations, such as mass graves discoveries. Although Cousins' team was sent to high-risk regions in Iraq, they never suffered a casualty or fatality. Cousins was awarded the Bronze Star Medal in March 2004.

CAPT. JOEL ARENDS
South Dakota
Former Army National Guard

Then-1st Lt. Arends and his team of 30 Soldiers operated in and around Baghdad from February 2004 to April 2005. They were responsible for catching a number of terrorists, including one carrying bomb-making materials, jihadist propaganda and large sums of cash. The terrorist claimed to be a professor at a major university in the U.S. They also captured one of Saddam Hussein's personal bodyguards. Another time, Arends' team rescued Iraqi civilians from burning vehicles when insurgents attacked a checkpoint near their patrol area. Members of the team rushed into the flames and pulled several Iraqi civilians out of burning vehicles and administered lifesaving medical treatment. For his efforts, Arends was awarded the Bronze Star Medal in March 2005. Arends is now in the Army Reserve.

STAFF SGT. WILLIAM THOMAS PAYNE
Oklahoma
Army

Payne's battalion was finishing an operation on Haifa Street in Baghdad Sept. 12, 2004, when a vehicle-borne IED exploded into the rear of a Bradley fighting vehicle. As the blast disabled the Bradley and trapped men inside, insurgents began firing down onto the street. Payne directed his squad into a position to provide cover fire while he and another Soldier raced to help those stuck inside the damaged vehicle. Payne climbed atop the Bradley and helped two of the crewmen out of the turret. He reached inside the compartment and began pulling the trapped Infantrymen out one by one. As the battle lulled, Payne and his Soldiers loaded the injured up for evacuation. For his actions, Payne received the Silver Star Medal on Feb. 27, 2005.

STAFF SGT. TIMOTHY BISHOP
Tennessee
Air Force

Bishop planned and controlled 120 close-air support missions in Afghanistan over a 4,600-square kilometer area. During one 48-hour firefight in August 2005, he provided vital support to two Special Forces teams, calling in air strikes on the enemy that ultimately kept those units alive. Operations he supported resulted in the seizure of more than 100,000 enemy munitions. Bishop has trained Special Forces members on close-air support tactics, and developed pre-deployment training programs. For his actions, he received the Bronze Star with Valor. Bishop was named one of the 12 2006 Outstanding Airmen of the Year.

CAPT. ALFRED L. BUTLER IV
North Carolina
Marine Corps

Then-1st Lt. Butler and his team were conducting operations in Fallujah, Iraq, on Dec. 23, 2004, when insurgents ambushed his platoon. Butler raced to the attack where several men in a house were taking heavy automatic weapons fire on a stairwell. He evacuated the men from a house under intense fire, and then organized an assault force to confront the insurgents who were pinning down additional men on the second floor. Jumping roof to roof, Butler and his team cleared two buildings under fire to retrieve the other men. Butler shielded the bodies of fallen Marines when a grenade landed nearby, then threw two grenades into a room filled with enemies to help eliminate the threat. For his actions, Butler was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Combat Distinguishing Device on May 26, 2006.

SPC. CHRISTOPHER MERCHANT
Vermont
Vermont Army National Guard

Merchant arrived in Iraq in October 2005, after volunteering to help Task Force Saber with its mission in the Middle East. On March 1, 2006, Merchant was in an observation post near an Iraqi police headquarters in Ramadi, Iraq, when a group of insurgents attacked. The enemies attacked with RPGs, small-arms fire and two vehicle-borne IEDs. Two of the RPGs hit the up-armored humvee that Merchant was in, killing him instantly. Merchant was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart and other service medals March 1, 2006.

MASTER SGT. TRACY L. CUTLER
Washington
Army

Cutler was tasked with helping develop the first Afghan National Army Recruiting Command from March to November 2004. When he arrived in Afghanistan, there were only three national army volunteer centers open, and construction was underway for others. There was no program in place for Afghan recruiters, which meant Cutler, along with two other Soldiers, had to start from scratch. They developed and implemented a training plan that is the program used at the Afghan National Army Recruiting Academy. The team finished their task in nine months; the normal time for organizing such a complex, multi-level course is 18 to 24 months. On Oct. 25, 2004, Cutler received the Bronze Star Medal for his work.

LT. CMDR. BENITO E. BAYLOSIS
Virginia
Navy

Volunteering for a yearlong tour in Iraq in July 2005, he led a team of electronic engineers and technicians that analyzed 5,500 IEDs. Baylosis personally handled more than 1,000 roadside bomb detonators and provided critical countermeasures. His team studied the electronic circuiting of the enemy's homemade bombs and how they were rigged to explode when coalition and Iraqi troops were nearby. Baylosis, a leading expert of IED initiators, also developed and examined more than 136 bomb-maker profiles. For his critical work on IEDs that likely saved numerous coalition lives, Baylosis received the Bronze Star Medal Aug. 29, 2006.

SGT. KEITH L. SMETTE
North Dakota
North Dakota Army National Guard

Smette deployed to Iraq in the early stages of Operation Iraqi Freedom, in April 2003. Smette and his convoy were heading to Baghdad International Airport Jan. 24, 2004, when his convoy was attacked by insurgents using an IED just south of Fallujah, Iraq. Smette, who was driving the vehicle, was instantly killed in the attack. He had volunteered to deploy with his brother, Staff Sgt. Robert Smette, as a part of the 957th Engineer Company. Staff Sgt. Smette is still a member of the North Dakota Army National Guard. Smette was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal, Purple Heart and North Dakota Legion of Merit award Jan. 24, 2004.

SENIOR AIRMAN ADAM P. SERVAIS
Wisconsin
Air Force

Servais was in the rocky Uruzgan province in southcentral Afghanistan Aug. 19, 2006, when the convoy he was traveling with came under heavy fire from insurgents. An estimated 100 or more concealed enemies began shooting from three sides. Immediately, Servais turned his humvee's machine gun toward enemy fire and began shooting. Servais turned over responsibility for the machine gun to another team member and began directing close air support to help suppress the insurgents. As he was talking with pilots overhead and spotting targets for them, a RPG exploded behind Servais, killing him. He was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal for Valor Aug. 25, 2006.

SGT. RYAN GALLUCCI
Rhode Island
Army Reserve

Then-Spc. Gallucci and his six-member civil affairs team spent almost a year in Iraq helping to rebuild the infrastructure and improve the quality of life for the Iraqis. The team worked and lived in towns near the Iranian border, performing tasks such as getting schools and the municipal governments up and running, and making sure the teachers and workers were on the payroll. Gallucci was responsible for about $4.7 million in public works projects during his deployment. In a village outside Khanaqin, Gallucci worked with Iraqi contractors to build a water pumping station, three wells, lay nearly $20,000 worth of pipe and locate generators to help run the pumping station. The team also built a landfill, and helped get the landfill workers on the payroll. In September 2004, Gallucci was awarded the Bronze Star Medal for his efforts.

PFC. JAMES J. ARELLANO
Wyoming
Army

Arellano was deployed to Iraq in November 2005 with the 1st Battalion, 4th Infantry Division. While on a foot patrol south of Baghdad Aug. 17, 2006, Arellano encountered insurgents using IED and small-arms fire. Arellano stepped on an IED; the explosion severely injured the Soldier. He died from injuries sustained from the blast. For his work while in Iraq, Arellano was posthumously awarded the Bronze Star Medal, the Purple Heart and the Combat Infantry Badge Aug. 30, 2006.

MASTER SGT. RICHARD BURNETTE
South Carolina
Army

On May 1, 2005, Burnette and his group arrived at a densely populated neighborhood in Baghdad and began inspecting the area. A vehicle came roaring down the street and exploded, severely injuring Burnette and killing four children. Used to working 18-hour days watching out for his Soldiers, the long recuperation at Walter Reed Army Medical Center was a tough experience for Burnette. While there, he became an older brother figure to the other wounded Soldiers, helping them adjust during their stay there. Burnette has now recovered from most of his injuries, and hopes to stay on active duty. For his service and leadership in Iraq and at Walter Reed, Burnette was named the 2006 Army Times Soldier of the Year. Burnette also has earned a Bronze Star and a Purple Heart.

MASTER SGT. DAVID MILES
West Virginia
Army Special Forces

During the invasion of Baghdad, Miles and his team were ambushed by enemy fighters at a bridge overpass in southern Baghdad April 7, 2003. Outnumbered 20-to-1, three members of Miles's group got pinned down under the intense firefight and were unable to escape. Miles organized the recovery mission as the enemies continued to attack. He performed first aid on two of his team members, one of whom would have bled to death without treatment. He was able to carry both of them to safety. In all, Miles killed or directed the killing of up to 20 Saddam loyalists. For his actions, Miles was awarded the Silver Star Medal March 10, 2005.

SGT. 1ST CLASS B. CHARLES GOOD Pennsylvania
Army Special Forces

Then-Staff Sgt. Good and his team were on a mission on Oct. 31, 2003, to halt foreign fighters who were infiltrating Iraq from Syria. Their convoy drove into the enemy-friendly town of Sadah when one of the vehicles was hit by a RPG. Eight members of the team went after the enemy fighters, while Good and two others provided security. A Soldier was hit, and Good provided cover fire while the injured Soldier was loaded into the vehicle. Good's vehicle was disabled, but he negotiated with an Iraqi man in a run-down Toyota to drive them to the camp. After dropping off the wounded soldier, Good returned to the fight along with other Soldiers to assist those still trapped in the village. Good was awarded the Silver Star Medal Dec. 15, 2004.

STAFF SGT. MATTHEW W. ZEDWICK
Oregon
Oregon Army National Guard

Then-Sgt. Zedwick was part of a patrol north of Taji in June 2004 when a vehicle-borne IED hit and destroyed his Humvee, killing his gunner and wounding him and his commander. Zedwick pulled his commander from the burning vehicle and got him to safety. Insurgents began directing small-arms fire on Zedwick as he attempted to retrieve the other Soldier's body from the Humvee. Although Zedwick could not free the body before rounds starting cooking off in the flames, he was able to procure weapons and the radio. He ran back through the kill zone, gave first aid to the injured Soldier and defended the area until they were medically evacuated. On Feb. 8, 2005, Zedwick became the first Oregon Army National Guard Soldier to be awarded the Silver Star Medal since WWII. Zedwick was chosen as one of the faces of the U.S. Army's "America's Army" video game.

BENCH NOTES

BY ERIN NASH

Denver Bronco death

The Denver Broncos lost 24-year-old cornerback Darrent Williams in a shooting after a New Year's Eve party in Denver.

Williams died from a gunshot to the neck.

He was the father to a 7-year-old son and a 4-year-old daughter who live in Fort Worth, Texas.

Police are investigating the shooting and are still looking for suspects.

Condolences to Williams' family and the Denver Bronco family.

Up in the air

Pittsburgh Steelers chairman Dan Rooney and team president Art Rooney II met with head coach Bill Cowher Jan. 2 to ask Cowher for a decision on whether he will be back next season as head coach.

Cowher has been head coach for 15 years.

He is expected to decide by next week.

Three games left

There are just three college football bowl games left, including the national championship game.

The first is the International Bowl at noon Saturday.

Western Michigan will face Cincinnati in Toronto.

It will be on ESPN2.

The SMAC Bowl, Ohio versus Southern Miss, will be at 8 p.m. Sunday on ESPN. The game is being played in Mobile, Ala.

Finally, the big game, the Tostitos BCS Championship Game, will be at 8 p.m. Monday on Fox.

Florida will take on Ohio State in Glendale, Ariz. I'm going with Ohio State for the win, but would love to see Florida take it.

NFL playoffs begin

It's that time of year again — the regular season is over and the playoffs are beginning.

This weekend's games are:

- Kansas City at Indianapolis — 4:30 p.m. Saturday. Check local listings for coverage.

- Dallas at Seattle — 8 p.m. Saturday on NBC.

- NY Jets at New England — 1 p.m. Sunday

- NY Giants at Philadelphia — 4:30 p.m. Sunday

Check your listings for coverage.

Next weekend will bring two AFC and NFC Divisional playoff games.

Super Bowl XLII is set for 6 p.m. Feb. 4 on CBS.

Knight wins 880

Texas Tech basketball coach Bob Knight celebrated his 880th career victory with a win over New Mexico, by two points, Jan. 3.

Knight has been a college coach for 41 years.

He began at Army and spent 29 seasons at Indiana. He was fired by Indiana because of behavior deemed intolerable to administrators.

Knight broke the record previously held by Dean Smith.

Alabama course is a blast

Plantation offers one of the nation's top sporting clay courses

Early morning fishing in a lake shrouded in mist; meandering through forests catching glimpses of whitetail deer, turkeys, fox and beavers; spending a relaxing day with family and friends on a 16,000-acre plantation. Sound appealing?

If that sounds a little too quiet for you, don't worry. At White Oak Plantation, you can leave your friends on the porch, jump on a golf cart and grab a shotgun.

It's time for some clay shooting.

Located less than 60 miles from Fort Benning along the Opintlocco Creek, White Oak Plantation and Resort in Tuskegee, Ala., is recognized as one of the top sporting clays courses in the nation.

White Oak has been featured in all leading outdoor magazines and numerous outdoor television shows, said White Oak's owner, Robert Pitman, who describes himself as a carpetbagger.

"We specialize in providing top quality hunting experiences. Our game-rich, managed lands ensure that folks can hunt in the home territory of some of the largest whitetail deer and turkey in the United States," he said.

"Every effort has been made to retain the natural beauty of the land and not disturb the bountiful wildlife," Pitman said. "We still give the shooter, whether beginner or expert, a challenging experience," Pitman said.

White Oak's automatic course has 14 stations, which are changed monthly to provide a different look. The plantation also has a five stand and wobble where shooters can practice before clays events, quail hunts or any time they want to polish their shooting skills.

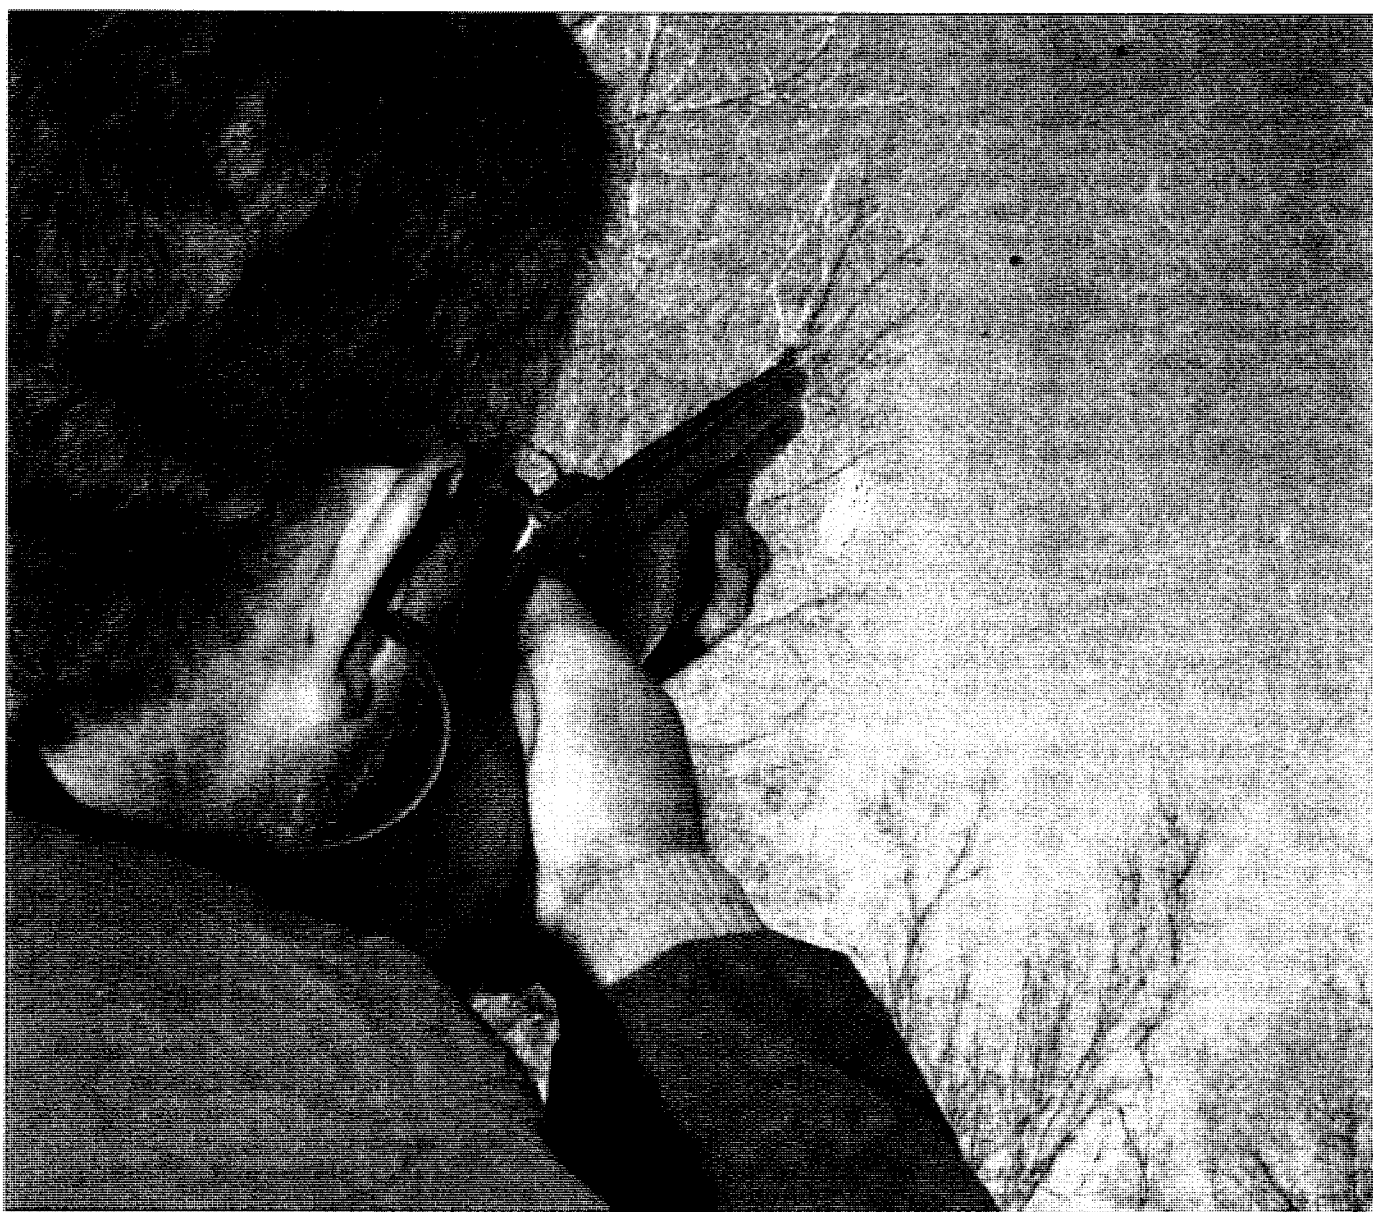

"If a shooter is pushed for time, this is the answer," said Gregg Harris, a member of White Oak Plantation and an avid clay shooter.

"Both the five stand and the wobble can be completed with twenty-five targets."

White Oak does not hold U.S. Sporting Clays Association or National Sporting Clays Association events, but does host events for small groups and for fund raising.

Auburn University's Delta Zeta sorority holds their annual Delta Zeta Sporting Clays Classic at White Oak. Last year, the sorority raised more than $25,000 for the speech- and hearing-impaired.

White Oak Plantation and Resort will host the Boys Scouts of America in Gregg Harris, a member of White Oak Plantation and Resort in Tuskegee, Ala., shoots down a true pair at the plantation's clays shooting course with a Browning Cynergy Sporting Clay's 12 gauge Dec. 18. The course offers 14 stations for the shooting enthusiast.

March for the 11th annual Tukabatchee Scouting Clays Classic. The event begins Friday afternoon with events for Eagle and First Class sponsors. There will be with door prizes.

"The emphasis for the weekend will be fun and fellowship," Pitman said. "It is for the novice shooter and for those who shoot sporting clays on a regular basis."

Clay shooting fundamentals

THE BAYONET
David Dismukes

Sporting clays is a game in which shooters fire at clay pigeons mirroring the movements of birds or small game.

The shooting grounds are laid out in stations, with each station featuring one type of bird or a combination of game.

At each station, clay pigeons are thrown in pairs. A course usually consists of five to 10 stations with a chance to fire on about 100 "birds."

Sometimes birds from the same traps are shot from different positions, so the gunner sees the target from many angles, which creates new shooting problems to overcome.

With variations in trap position, trap speed, shooting position, and flight paths of different types of clay pigeons, targets can come from almost anywhere — through the trees, from underfoot, straight down, from overhead, quartering, going away, left to right, right to left, and in any path a real bird might choose.

It can be unpredictable, variable, and sometimes bordering on impossible.

As in golf, the rules of sporting clays become more specific, and therefore more restrictive as the level of competition increases. There are a few basic rules, however, that define the sport:

1) The shooter may start with a low gun or a pre-mounted gun when calling for the target.

2) Only two shells may be loaded.

3) If doubles are tossed and both are broken with one shot, both are counted as kills.

4) A malfunction of the gun is counted as a lost bird under U.S. Sporting Clays Association rules; the National Sporting Clays Association allows two malfunctions per day without penalty.

5) Chokes or guns may be changed only between fields. A field is one or more shooting stations serviced from a common trap.

The NSCA permits chokes to be changed between stations of targets.

White Oak Plantation's clay course is located about 60 miles from Fort Benning in Tuskegee, Ala. The plantation also features walking trails, jogging paths, six stocked fishing ponds, a bed and breakfast, bird watching wildlife photography areas and more.

Hunter kills sneaky, 17-point buck

Post wildlife official can't recall a larger deer harvested here

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

This is a tale of a Walker, a non-walker, four walkers and a sneak.

Walker Zeck is a 26-year-old staff sergeant, a mechanic with the 1st Battalion, 10th Field Artillery, on Kelley Hill. He's also an avid hunter and has been since he was 10, when he hunted deer in the scrub pines of Florida, where he lived with his mother.

Sometimes he hunted duck in New Mexico with his dad. Later, he hunted mule deer at Fort Bliss, Texas. He has an 8-point on the wall of his home in Columbus, where he lives with his wife and 6-year-old son.

Zeck has strong opinions, as do most hunters, about "playing fair" in the field; using dogs and hunting on game preserves is unfair to the deer, he said, and walking during peak hunting hours is unfair to other hunters.

"As a rule, I'm not a walker. You'll never see me out walking in the morning or the evening, but I might walk a bit midday when it's rare to see anyone out there," said Zeck, who has bagged a few "average-size, Georgia deer" in the two years he's been here.

On the afternoon of Nov. 30 — it was a Thursday and a slow day at work — Zeck decided to spend his lunch hour walking in the woods, in an area hunters know as Romeo 1, out past Harmony Church and McKenna MOUT near the post's railhead operations. It's an area thick with waist-high brush and young pines that grow about head high.

The deer also flourish there, Zeck said, because thick, nutrient-rich vegetation and rail operations keep hunters at bay.

"It's some of the best hunting on Fort Benning, but some of the toughest," he said.

"I went out there once before, but it was so dry, and the ground was so thick with leaves and brush that the deer busted me long before I could find a spot," Zeck said.

But Nov. 30 was a wet day. It had been raining for days, in fact, so Zeck decided to try Romeo 1 once again. He went there dressed in ACUs and his brown undershirt — no scent block, no camera, no hunting gear, other than his orange vest and a 12 gauge. He was, after all, just killing a lunch hour.

He wasn't there long before he spotted four doe. They were down hill and upwind from him, but still they detected his presence and walked off calmly as he tried to find his shot. Remember now, his "window of opportunity" was about 18 inches from waist to shoulder and dotted with the trunks of pine saplings.

Zeck heard a twig break and realized the four walkers left a deer behind. A sneaky deer.

"I'd heard of a deer sneaking, but I'd never seen it before. It was the strangest thing I've ever seen," he said, describing the manner in which the deer crouched and crept with his head laid back to hide his rack. It worked, to some extent, because Zeck didn't realize the deer was a buck. Had he filled his doe tag for the year, he would've let it walk. Maybe deer know something about that.

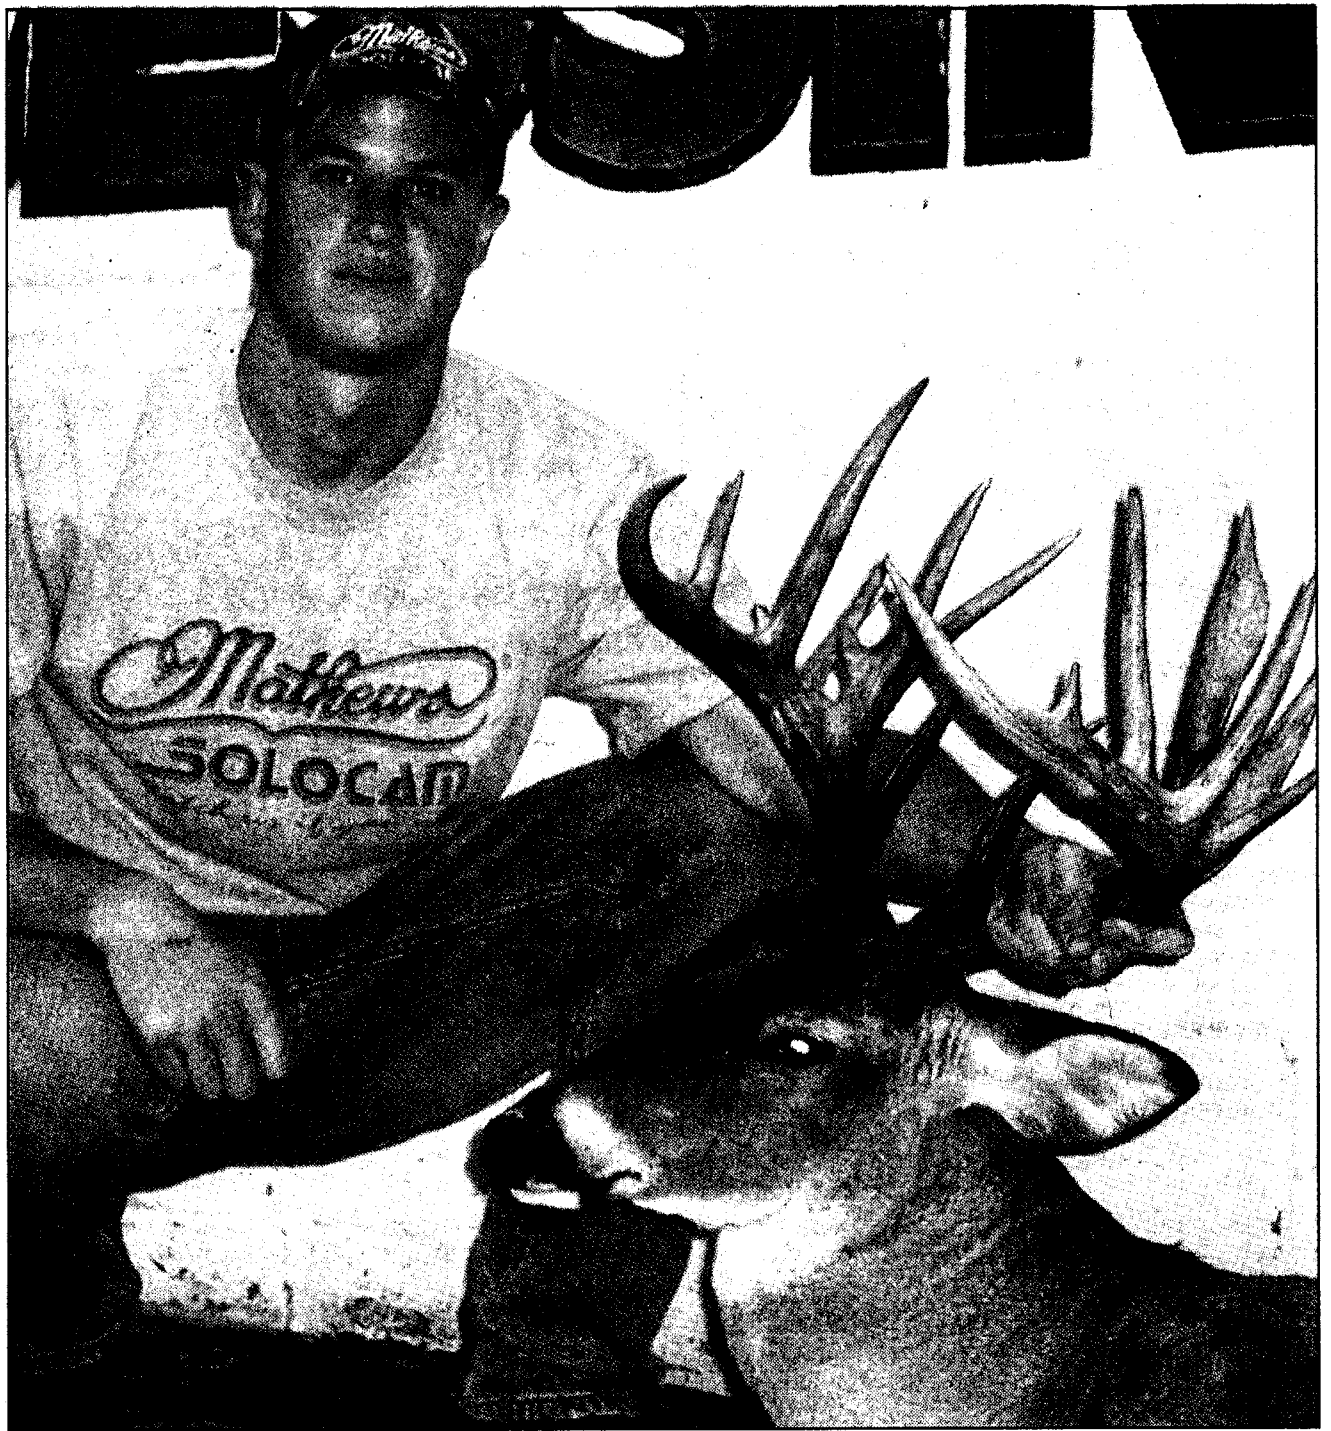

But Zeck hadn't filled his tag, so the sneaky deer didn't get far. Zeck got a clear shot, hit him in the neck and laid him out in the brush 10 feet away — still assuming the deer was a doe.

Imagine his surprise when he got close enough to count the points on its rack. Seventeen of them.

"I couldn't believe it. I was amazed. I haven't seen anything like that around here," he said.

Neither has Michael Fuller, Fort Benning's Fish and Wildlife Program manager.

"I don't think anyone's seen one on Fort Benning like that. It's just an outstanding specimen," said Fuller, who said genetics contributed to the size of the 4-and-a-half-year-old deer, but conservation played a hand in it, also. Romeo 1 is home to a fertilized

From hunter to hunted: Soldiers recount frightening fracas with a peeved pig

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Lt. Col. Ed House

I've heard stories about pigs attacking hunters, but after three years of hunting on Fort Benning and harvesting more than 100 pigs, I have never actually seen one attack. That changed on March 12, 2006.

Fort Benning allows year-round hunting for pigs in an attempt to reduce an exploding population of these acorn-eating vacuum cleaners. For hunting addicts like me, pig hunting fills the void between deer and turkey seasons. During these late winter months, the pigs are in a feeding frenzy, but bed in the remaining thick cover along creeks and ponds. My hunting partner, Bobby Toon, recently had returned from a tour in Iraq and was anxious to get in the woods.

We've spent countless hours "sneak hunting" pigs on post. We've been very successful using this technique, killing pigs just about every trip. Some hunters prefer to drive the roads looking for pigs, but Bobby and I like to get in among 'em. During a typical hunt, we'll walk several kilometers along "blue lines." Easing through the thick bedding areas of palm fronds usually leads to an exciting engagement with pigs.

The hunt on March 12 started just like all others. After a hot cup of coffee and a bumpy, 25-minute ride, we were glad to have a basic load of TP behind the seat. With that important business complete, Bobby and I finalized the plan. We'd sneak along Upatoi Creek in training area Kilo 3. We'd hunted there numerous times before and usually found pigs. That morning would also serve as pre-season scouting for gobbling turkeys.

After plugging the grid to the truck in our Rhino GPSs, Bobby and I eased over the hill toward the Upatoi. Bobby would walk right along the creek, in what we call the "shooter" position, as the guy closest to the water usually shoots a pig first. Unfortunately, the long walk north along the creek proved uneventful. We saw no pigs, but we did see several deer and heard a couple of love-starved gobblers that were anxiously searching for a morning girlfriend or two or three. I guess after waiting a year for some female companionship, every critter is anxious to get the breeding season started.

Somewhat bummed that we didn't see any pigs, Bobby and I made our way back to the truck and came up with "Plan B." We decided to take the short drive to Everett's Pond and walk the Upatoi from the opposite end of Kilo 3. We were optimistic as we walked away from the new parking spot. Pigs recently had destroyed both sides of the logging road that leads to the creek. Again, Bobby would walk the shooter position right along the bank. I was offset about 150 yards to his one o'clock. Using the map and icon feature on the Rhino allows us to see each other and stay on course as we walk through the thick bedding areas.

Not long after leaving the logging road, I heard a turkey gobble. I called Bobby and asked if he had heard the turkey. He answered the call in a whisper and confirmed hearing the turkey and told me that he was in "some HOT pig sign."

I'd rather walk through Baqubah, Iraq, without body armor than go through that again.

— Capt. Bobby Toon after being attacked by a pig on Fort Benning

Just after I responded with "roger," I heard BOW! BOW! Bobby's new Browning semi-automatic .270 sounds like a cannon. Breathing hard in the radio, Bobby called and said "Pigs! They're moving down the creek." After a quick look at the Rhino map and Bobby's icon, I took off running in an attempt to cut off the escaping pigs.

After about 300 yards of sloshing through the swampy creek bottom, I stopped to get a fix on Bobby and see where I was in relation to the creek. I could see Bobby's icon — he was still more than 200 yards down the creek, and I was still more than 150 yards from the creek.

As I caught my breath, I heard the unmistakable sound of pigs running through the brush. I jumped up on a stump to improve my view across the swamp, and sure enough, I immediately saw three pigs running like ducks in a row. I jumped down and leaned against a tree trying to get the cross hairs on the lead white and black pig.

The pigs were in a "pig shuffle," and unfortunately, I couldn't get settled on that pig. I quickly refocused on the trail pig, a pretty red and black sow. Just as I found her in the scope, the sow stopped and looked in my direction. It was her last mistake! My Remington 7400 .270 barked, and she hit the dirt. I quickly searched for the first two pigs and noticed that they had stopped and were looking back toward the shot. I rushed to get the scope on the lead pig again, and I took a shot as she continued her escape along the creek.

After hearing the shots, Bobby was on the radio.

"What's up sir?" I told him I had killed a nice red and black pig but missed the white and black pig. He told me that the pig he had shot at earlier was also white and black.

Bobby moved to my location, and after taking a couple of pictures of my pig, we decided to move through where the other pigs had escaped to. We walked about 50 yards and found a pig trail with blood on it.

Bobby had hit the white and black pig. We began following the blood trail hoping to recover Bobby's pig and end the morning with a double. Our luck was changing for the better — or so we thought.

The blood trail led us through a thicket and into an old beaver pond with marsh grass that was knee-to-belt high. It was spooky as we moved slowly through the mud, water and grass. We had traveled more than 200 yards on the blood trail, and I remember telling Bobby that "I don't think this pig is dead." It was such a good blood trail that we decided to continue the pursuit. The pig moved through the tall grass, leaving good sign everywhere. It eventually crossed a small creek which caused the blood trail to dwindle a bit, but after dove field, for one thing, and the Conservation Branch routinely burns undergrowth to promote healthier, manageable vegetation.

The venison went into Zeck's deep freeze, the jawbone went to the Conservation Branch for study, and the rack will eventually go up on his wall, where it'll put that 8-point to shame, he said.

And Zeck, he'll go out in the woods again — and often — though he knows it'll be hard to top that experience.

"It actually motivates me. I may never get another one like it, but believe it or not, it's not about the size of the rack," he said. "It's the hunt, the experience."

It's something hunters understand. Zeck said.

about 25 yards, the blood was flowing again. The blood trail paralleled the creek for about 75 yards and then turned back to the creek. I was about 10 yards ahead of Bobby. Thank goodness I was in front.

As I made the slight turn back toward the creek, I heard a loud rush that reminded me of a quail covey rising and turned to see a pig up on Bobby's hip as though it was trying to steal his wallet.

Bobby, who had his rifle slung on his shoulder, was immediately knocked down in the marsh grass, snapping his sling swivel in the process.

It happened so fast, I wasn't sure what I was watching. Bobby's screaming made it real. The pig was on Bobby, and he was screaming (in a less-than-masculine voice), "Sir, get it off of me. Shoot it! Get it off of me!"

The wrestling match seemed to be in slow motion, but I knew I couldn't shoot the pig. Bobby had survived a year in Iraq, and I wasn't about to accidentally shoot him. I began to move toward the pig to try and kick it away from Bobby, but after taking two or three steps through the grass, Bobby was able to push himself away, creating space between himself and the angry, wounded sow.

I quickly raised my rifle and shot the pig causing it to jump the creek and run about 10 yards. Bobby stood up and in a very excited voice said "Sir, let me shoot that 'bleep, bleep.'" As he searched the grass for his rifle, I didn't wait. I shot the pig again ending the drama.

I went over to Bobby and asked him if he was OK, but all he did was bend over and say, "I need a drink." We both began to laugh about how this macho war-hero had screamed like a girl as he was being whipped by a 100-pound sow.

We rolled the pig over in the grass and noticed that Bobby's original shot had hit her high in the left ham, but had not passed through any vitals.

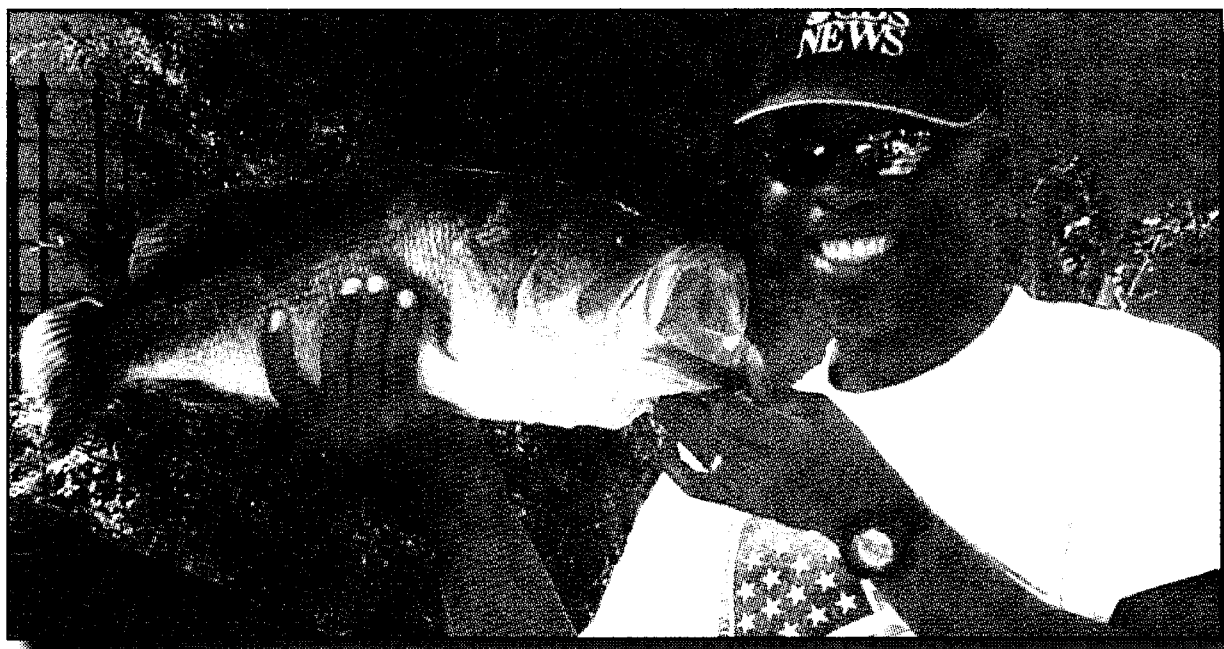

We continue to hunt pigs, but now we do so with a renewed respect for how vicious a wounded pig can be. Before the attack, we moved through the thick brush without fear. Now, we both move slowly, quietly and with rifles "at the ready," just as we did in Iraq.

As we left the marsh, Bobby summed up the experience by saying, "I'd rather walk through Baqubah, Iraq, without body armor than go through that again."

We laugh about that day every time we drive by Kilo 3, but if that sow had been a large boar, it would not have been a funny story. This incident serves as a good reminder for all hunters to be prepared for the unexpected when tracking wounded game. I know Bobby and I will.

What I want to see ...

THE BAYNET
Erin A. Nash

The year of 2006 was a great one for sports. I expect 2007 to be even better. While I can't control destiny, I can ruminate about what I'd like to see happen this year.

- I'd like to see professional hockey make a comeback. We can blame the strike two years back for lack of interest, but in actuality interest was waning way before that. I know there are plenty of people who follow hockey, and are fervent about their team. Those are the true fans, who resumed watching hockey after the strike, and continue to do so.

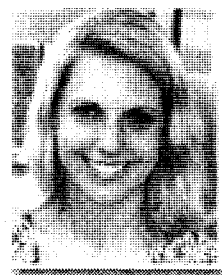

- I'd really like to see professional athletes behave like civilized adults. Athletes who fight or spit or basically whatever bad behavior they choose to exhibit don't deserve to be called professional. Professionalism is about more than just how well you can play the sport — it's also about maturity and handling obstacles. Athletes who continue to act out should be punished, whether it's monetarily or through volunteering. Each respective sport should have their own rules for misbehavior, and they should stick to it. Consistency is the key. Let the athletes know that if they keep acting up, consistent punishment will follow.

- It's time to stop blaming coaches for every mistake. So many coaches are the whipping posts for their team, and it's not right. Coaches make do with what they have, from the players to the salary caps. Let's stop making head coaches into Atlas' and having to carry the weight of their team on their shoulders. Blame for a poor season or a blown playoff game should rest with everyone involved, not one person.

- I'd really like to understand the Bowl Championship Series better. Watching bowl games this past week, there seemed to be a lot of mismatched teams playing each other. I'd like to see good old-fashioned matchups between number one and number two, number three versus number four, and so on.

- I'd like to see referees make the right call. We have a new joke at the Nash house. When watching football, college or pro, when the refs are reviewing a play or a coach's challenge, we watch the replay over and over with the announcers, decide what really happened, and then say, "Well, then the ref will call the opposite." And they always do, and we always laugh.

- I'd like to see Sean Payton, coach of the New Orleans Saints, get Coach of the Year. Not only because I think he deserves it, but because if New York Jets coach Eric Mangini gets it, I owe my husband a million dollars.

- I'd like to see Dale Earnhardt Jr. win the Nextel Cup. Not only because he's my driver, but because I think he's overdue for some good luck. Jimmie Johnson was able to win his title, now it's time for someone new. If not Junior, then someone like Denny Hamlin, whose rookie year saw him in the Chase.

There are a lot of things sports fans would like to happen this coming year. I can't wait for the unexpected. NASCAR is just over a month away, the NFL playoffs start this weekend, and spring can't be far off with the promise of an excellent year of baseball. Happy new sports year.

Questions:

1) What Kansas City Royals first-base coach was attacked during a 2002 game? 2) What Philadelphia 76er in 1991 tried to spit on a heckler but instead hit an 8-year-old girl? 3) A first-inning hit of a batter led to multiple brawls between what two teams in 1984? 4) What Texas Rangers pitcher threw a chair into the stands in 2004, breaking a woman's nose? 5) A Chicago fan stole this Los Angeles Dodger's cap, touching off a nasty 2000 brawl. Who is the player? 6) What Indiana Pacer earned a lengthy suspension for his part in a violent 2004 melee? 7) What Toronto Maple Leaf wrestled with a fan in the penalty box in 2001? 8) What Chicago Cubs pitcher fended off a charging fan with his forearm in 1995? 9) What Cub took an American flag from fans trying to burn it in the outfield in Los Angeles in 1976? 10) A Milwaukee fan jumped a Houston Astro in the outfield in 1999. Who was the player?

Answers:

Love alone didn't save her. Practicing fire safety did.

Children under the age of five are twice as likely to die in a fire than the rest of us. Keep matches and lighters out of reach, test your smoke alarms monthly, change the batteries at least once a year, and practice a home fire escape plan.

YEAR!

God Bless FT. BENNING

The largest pro-military rally in the United States, Columbus' God Bless Fort Benning Day once again drew thousands of patriotic supporters on Saturday, Nov. 18, 2006. The message from attendees to members of the Army was an overwhelming "thank you." With a sea of red, white and blue covering the grounds of the Columbus Civic Center, it was a message well-received by the hundreds of troops in attendance. Now in its fifth year, God Bless Fort Benning has grown steadily from its humble beginnings. A few years ago, Dr. and Mrs. Jack Tidwell undertook the task of providing an event to show soldiers and their families that the local community appreciated their sacrifices. A pickup truck with a loud speaker was all the equipment the Tidwells had available that first year. Today, the event features four stages, a host of dignitaries, static displays, first-class entertainers, vendors, and free carnival of rides, all of which culminates with a Cottonmouths hockey game. A new tradition for God Bless Fort Benning is the motorcycle rally that showcases more than 800 riders, many of whom are veterans, who make a collective run from the festivities to the gates of Fort Benning in a display of support for the military. For soldiers, veterans, local residents and businesses, God Bless Fort Benning Day has become a time of remembrance and appreciation, a time of showing thanks and giving honor to those who wear our nation's military uniform. It is also a day to recognize the contributions that Fort Benning makes to the community. God Bless Fort Benning.

Fun for the Family

"I've been bringing my three kids... since they were babies. I think it is important that they learn to say thank you to the service men and women who put themselves on the line for our freedom every day."

— Vicki Molnar

"...the outpouring of support provided by the citizens of Columbus for the service men and women stationed at Fort Benning ... what a remarkable event!"

- Debi Bohannon, Oklahoma City

ENNING

"Peace on this planet begins with these magnificent soldiers. Columbus says, 'May God bless and protect them all.'"

— Jack Tidwell MD, Tidwell Cancer Treatment Center

"Hearing a soldier say, 'Thank you, sir,' and then responding, 'No, thank you, sir, for serving and protecting me and my family.'"

— Jimmy Blanton, Columbus Baptist Association

To Our Soldiers...

To our soldiers, we are with you; you do not soldier alone, for you are in us all.

Here's to the soldier who stands steady at his mission even knowing that most of the people for whom he risks his life do not vote, who by such default risk allowing influences from outside our nation to decide our fates, and who weary of war on television want to call it all off as though the clicker could make the nightmare go away.

Jack Tidwell, MD, founded God Bless Fort Benning Day in 2001

The political dust may rise and settle amidst the fireworks and hoopla over who will be the king of Capitol Hill, and all the while the vigilant and valiant warrior remains, boots on the ground, head in helmet, rifle in hand, and butt on the line faithfully serving... No hoopla, no fanfare, no Fourth of July... the soldier, wherever he is in the world, day and night, is involved in the bloody real thing. He doesn't say much. He just does his duty... while earnestly praying that everyone else back home got the memo... "Terrorism is real"... and that, when the order is given to circle the wagons ... "Everyone shoot outward!!"

It is the soldier in us that praises God, seeks God, and thanks God;

It is the soldier in us that looks at the cross for forbearance, guidance, and leadership, that marches to protect the civil rights of our neighbors, that is not the pawn in anyone else's game... for this is not a game... this is life everlasting;

It is the soldier in us that will go into a lawless land to face horrors that can mean a quick or a slow end, so that the rest of the world can live in Peace, that shares our rations with those less fortunate, that knows we will prevail because we are the good guys;

It is the soldier in us that deeply desires victory... true victory... victory for all sides.

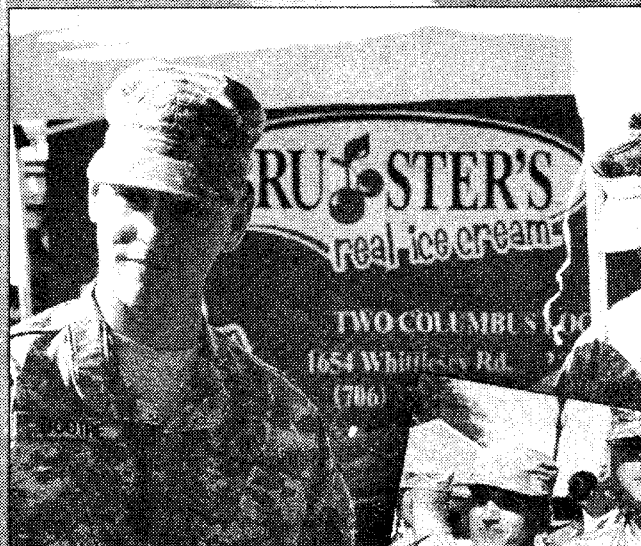

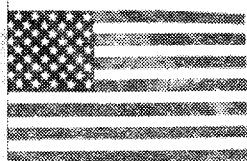

To the American soldier who died in the defense of his people, may you rest in peace knowing that we who remain live in a friendly land with no purpose of imperialism, nor colonialism, nor war for war's sake. May you rest in peace knowing that we carry the torch of freedom and that we honor and will continue to honor your name.

Here's to the faithful soldier who, above all other men and women, is required to practice the greatest act of religious training – sacrifice.

And finally, it is the soldier in us that truly comprehends the meaning of home... and who knows there is nothing sweeter than coming home.

Soldier! Today we respectfully parade before you our hearts and our deep appreciation. We salute all of our magnificent Armed Forces. May God bless each of you and your families, for with you we shall prevail... because we are the good guys.

Honoring the Troops

I believe the annual God Bless Fort Benning Day is the most significant event that the tri-community hosts for Fort Benning's soldiers and families. We look forward each year to the opportunity to celebrate our soldiers' selfless service during this important celebration. Fort Benning truly appreciates God Bless Fort Benning Day and what it represents...recognition of the American soldier!

Army assesses mental health of deployed Soldiers

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

The Department of the Army announced Dec. 19 the results of the Army's third mental health survey, a snapshot of the mental health of deployed Soldiers in Iraq.

The Office of the Army Surgeon General established the Mental Health Advisory Team III, which deployed teams to Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2005 to assess behavioral healthcare requirements of Soldiers. Teams conducted assessments in 2003 and 2004.

MHAT III focused on the behavioral health of Soldiers, the behavioral healthcare system in Iraq, and the future focus for care of Soldiers in combat. The surveyed included 1,461 Soldiers, 172 behavioral-health providers, 172 primary-care providers and 94 ministry team members.

This study confirmed that improved healthcare is helping Soldiers deal with the stress of combat. Behavioral healthcare providers reported confidence in their ability to treat stress reactions.

Soldiers reported higher morale than in previous studies and generally reported high job satisfaction. The team found that the top non-combat stressors were deployment length and family separation.

Among Soldiers surveyed, 13.6 percent reported acute stress and 16.5 percent reported a combination of depression, anxiety and acute stress.

Multiple deployment Soldiers indicated they were better prepared due to improved pre-deployment training. Among those serving a repeat deployment, 18.4 percent reported acute stress versus 12.5 of those serving an initial deployment.

The suicide rate among Soldiers in support of OIF during 2005 was 19.9 per 100,000 Soldiers — similar to the 18.8 rate per 100,000 in 2003 and higher than 2004. Soldiers reported receiving suicide prevention training before and during deployments, but the number who perceived this as useful in identifying Soldiers at risk declined from 60 percent in 2004 to 55 percent in 2005.

Ninety-five percent of the Soldiers surveyed reported ready availability of mental healthcare. Soldiers also reported that the stigma associated with seeking behavioral health care is decreasing.

Lt. Gen. Kevin Kiley, the Army Surgeon General, said "We must support our Soldiers' health needs, physical and mental. These advisory teams help us to know how and where we can better meet those needs.

"We will continue to review the recommendations and improve behavioral healthcare for Soldiers deployed to Iraq and Army-wide," he said.

Benning's Baby New Year

Malik Antonio Evans was the first baby born at Fort Benning's Martin Army Community Hospital in 2007. Malik's mother, Anyyona Evans, is the daughter of retired Master Sgt. Merrel Evans. She delivered the 7-pound, 16-ounce boy at 10 a.m. AAFES donated a convertible car seat, a 10-piece nursery set, an umbrella stroller and a diaper bag filled with goodies for the new mom and her baby.

Santa lights Airborne tower

Annual event includes visit with Santa, jump from 34-foot tower

A rare sight was seen Dec. 15 at Eubanks Field — Santa Claus up in the sky, with a parachute instead of a sleigh and reindeer.

Santa and members of the Silver Wings parachute team jumped from a plane and landed at the 15th annual Airborne Tower Lighting ceremony.

As guest host for the ceremony, Santa boarded a fire truck after landing and rode over to his chair, where he sat and talked with children.

Airborne School opened the 34-foot jump towers to the public for the ceremony, said Sgt. 1st Class John Heintzelman, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment.

"It feels good, like you're soaring," said 8-year-old Hayley Miller, who went out of the tower several times.

Michael Reed, 8, liked feeling the air rush past his face, he said after coming out of the tower for the first time.

His dad, Lt. Col. Chris Reed, commander of 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, brought his son out to the ceremony to see if he was willing to jump out of the tower. Reed goes on civilian skydives for fun, and Michael said the 34-foot tower jump was awesome.

Santa boarded a fire truck after his free fall and rode to one of the Airborne pavilions. Jacob Sneed, 4, talked with Santa Claus at the Airborne Tower Lighting ceremony Dec. 15. As the sun set, Santa listened to what the children would like for Christmas and handed out goodie bags.

Michael was excited to see Santa jump from the plane, he said.

"I've never seen him (in) this much action," Michael said.

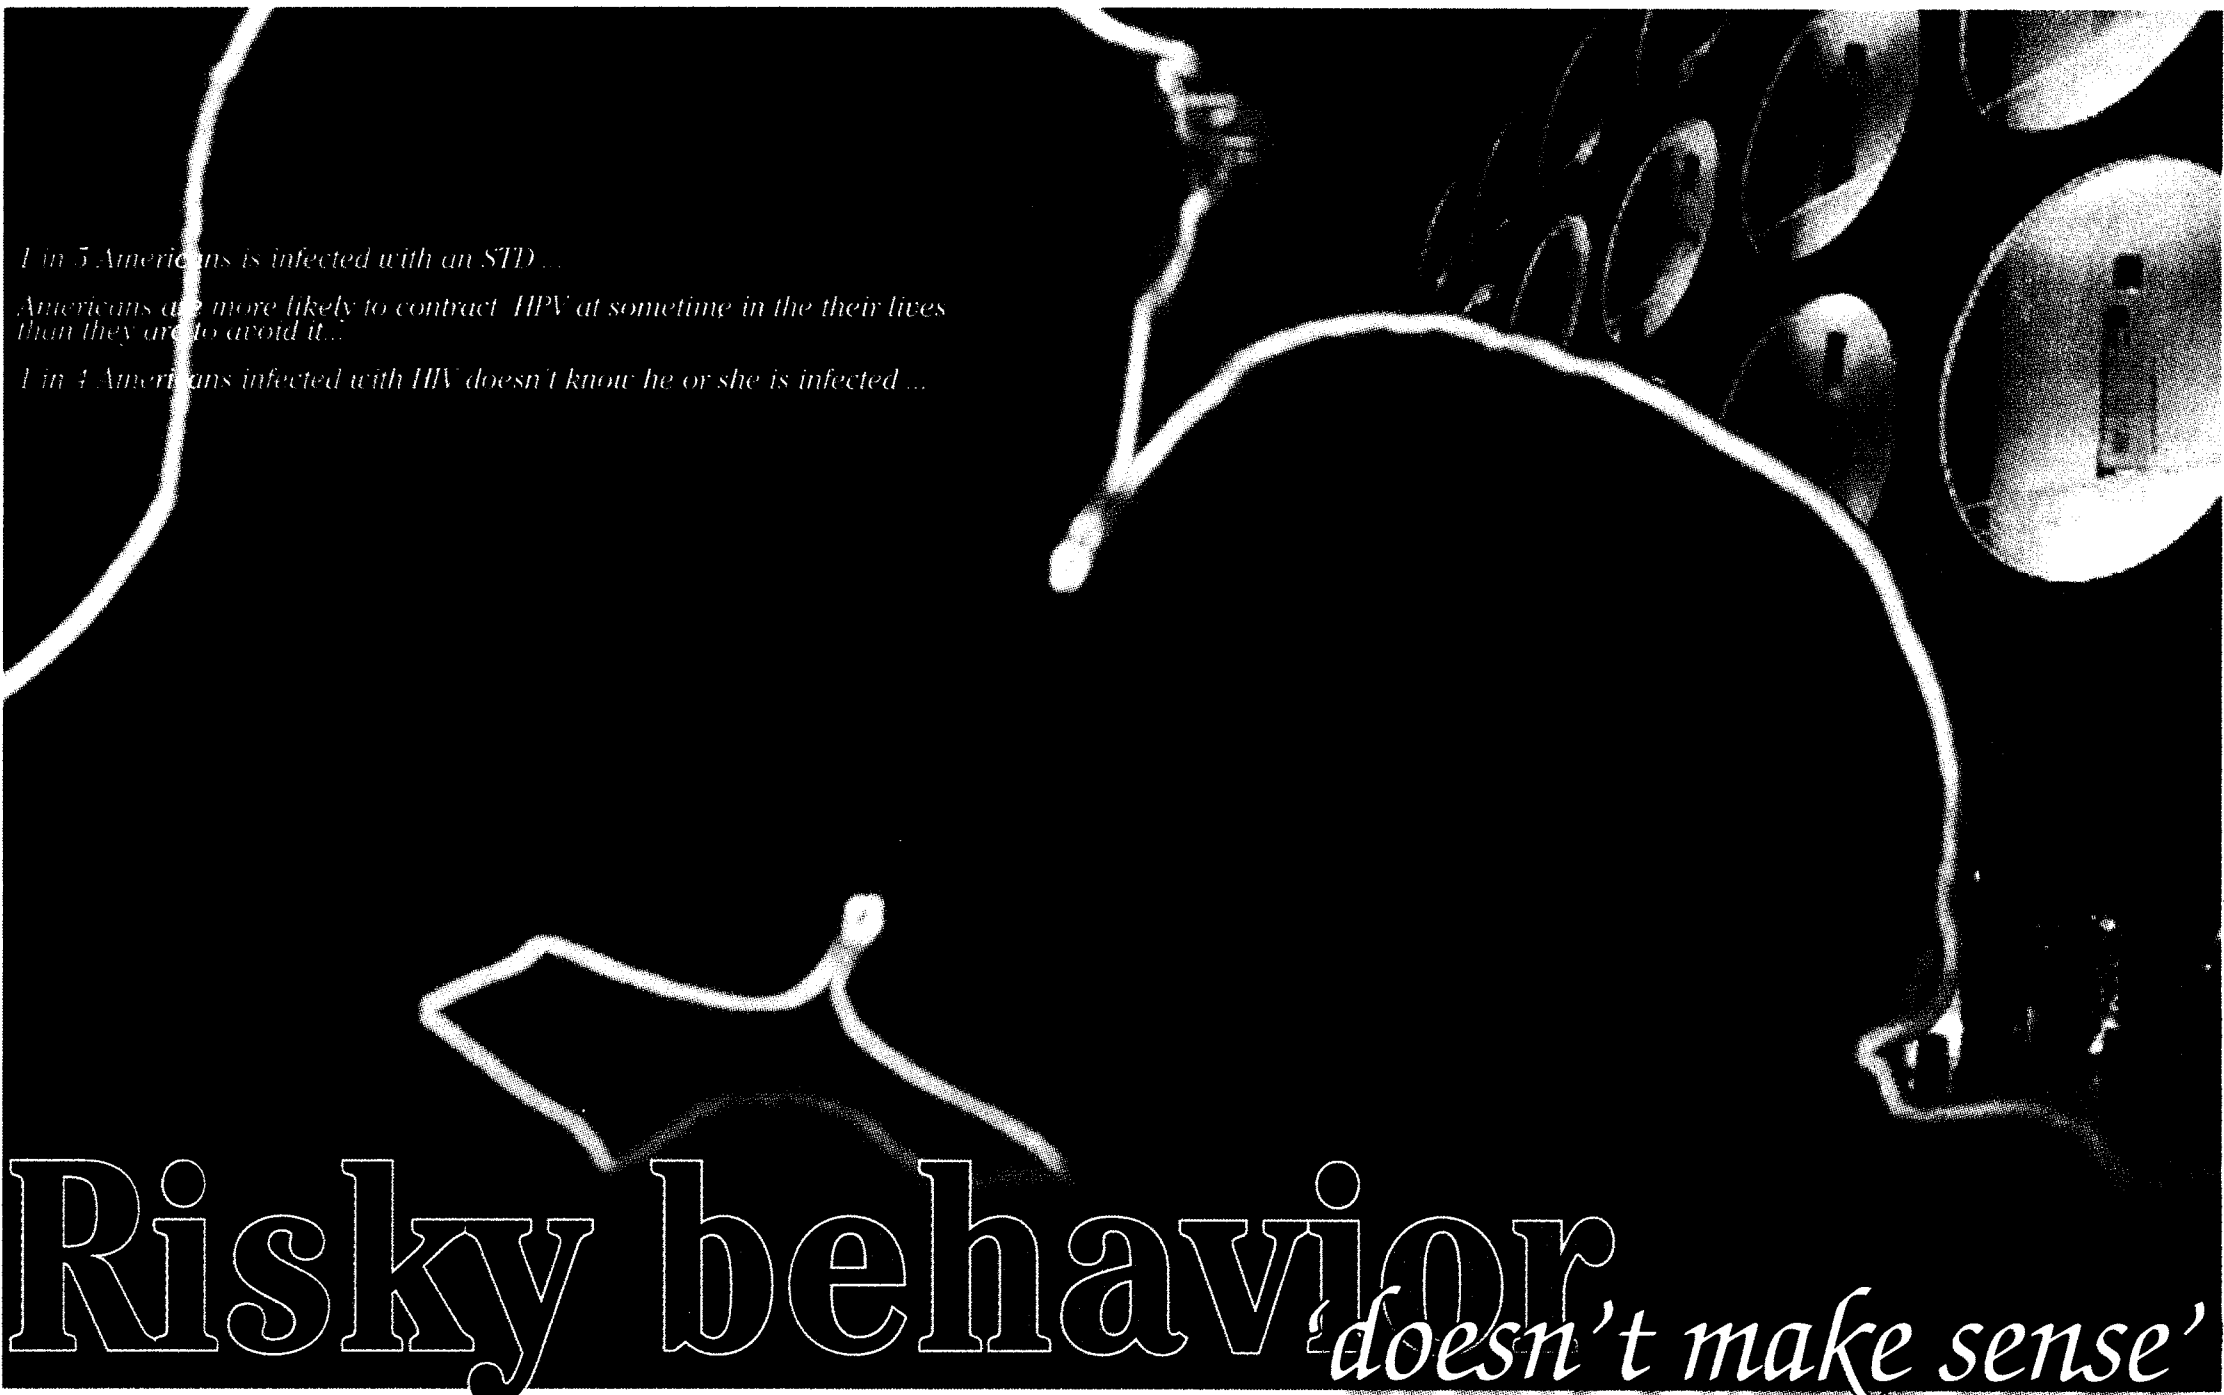

Holiday music was provided by carolers, including Miss Columbus State Catherine Shaw.

Santa concluded the ceremony by flipping a switch and lighting one of the 250-foot Airborne towers.

1 in 5 Americans is infected with an STD ...
Americans are 2 more likely to contract HPV at sometime in their lives than they are to avoid it...
1 in 4 Americans infected with HIV doesn't know he or she is infected ...

Risky behavior doesn't make sense

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

“It’s like playing Russian Roulette.” That’s how Dr. Darlene Burns describes the risk of people having multiple sex partners or unprotected sex. One of four Americans will contract a sexually transmitted disease some time in his or her life, according to the Center for Disease Control. Each year millions are infected with STDs. Also called sexually transmitted infections, they can be transferred through oral, anal or vaginal sex or by skin-to-skin contact. They can cause growths, pain, oozing sores, cancer, rashes, vomiting, infertility and death. But just as often, they cause no symptoms at all, said Burns, a physician with the Preventative Medicine Clinic. The clinic, located in Building 2615 in Soldiers Plaza, offers confidential STD testing. They also offer free condoms. “The clinic is removed from a larger medical facility because it typically makes people feel more comfortable,” Burns said. “Soldiers can get tested here and it won’t get back to their unit.” The majority of adults 18 to 44 have never been tested for any STDs other than HIV, according to the CDC. But infections such as Chlamydia and human papillomavirus (genital warts) are far more common in the United States, said Victor Anderson, Fort Benning’s coordinator for epidemiology, STIs and HIV.

STDs can be transferred in two ways. The discharge diseases are transferred when infected bodily fluids like semen or vaginal fluids come into contact with the male urethra, the anal cavity, the vagina or the cervix. Discharge diseases are HIV, gonorrhea, Chlamydia and trichomoniasis. Being infected with an STD makes a person more susceptible to HIV, but HIV can be contracted without any other STD present. Ulcer diseases are transferred from skin to skin contact or from contact with mucus. The skin may have sores or show no signs at all. These diseases can occur in areas not covered by a condom. Ulcer diseases include genital herpes, syphilis, cancrroid and HPV. A patient who shows symptoms of an STD might not be tested, Burns said. People who believed they might have been infected should ask to be screened. Women should have yearly pap smears. Many of her patients come in for testing regularly but continue to have multiple partners or have unprotected sex, Burns said. “The risky behavior doesn’t make sense. It’s better to prevent infection in the first place. No test is one hundred percent.” Abstinence is the only sure way to protect against STDs, Anderson said, but people who are sexually active should take preventative measures and get screened for STDs. “Condoms help reduce the risk, but they can break, leak or come off,” he said. “Being monogamous helps, but you never truly know if your partner is monogamous. It’s no different for Fort Benning and the rest of the community. STDs are common across the board.”

- Only abstinence guarantees protection from STDs, but some methods can reduce the risk:
- Use a latex or polyurethane condom for every sexual encounter.
  - Lambskin condoms don't protect against STDs.
  - Using a condom incorrectly makes it more likely to slip off, leak or break.
  - Before using a condom, check the expiration date and ensure it's undamaged.
  - Never use two condoms layered.
  - Use only water based lubricants.
  - Spermicides do not reduce the chance of contracting an STD.
  - Use a condom or dental dam during oral sex. Do not get semen or blood in your mouth, especially if you have mouth ulcers.
  - Wash hands and genital areas before and after sexual activity.
  - Before engaging in sexual activity with a new partner, both partners should get tested.

GIANTS AMONG US

WWII vet, activist is ‘part of the solution’

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Jim Rhodes was young, maybe 10, when he met his great grandfather, Maj. John Mitchell. It was 1932, or thereabout, and Jim was a happy-go-lucky boy. The Depression had not yet taken its toll on the family businesses, the store or the meat market, in Pineview, Ga., or his father's health.

It was the custom of the time to visit cemeteries on Decoration Day, what we now call Memorial Day. The Rhodes family carried a picnic lunch to the cemetery in Cedar Creek, where their kinfolk were buried. It was there, while peeking out from under a picnic table, that Jim laid eyes on Great Granddaddy Mitchell for the first time. It was Mitchell's likeness, actually, life-size and carved in stone, a memorial to his service with Georgia National Guard's A Company during the Civil War.

To this day, Jim Rhodes can't say what it was about the statue that impressed him so, but it did, and he knew then and there what it was he'd do with his life.

"After that, I always wanted to be a Soldier," said Jim Rhodes, a retired first sergeant and Columbus resident who calls himself a veteran's activist.

Rhodes spent more than 20 years in the Army and 14 more in civil service as the property disposal officer at Fort Benning. Since his retirement in 1974, he has spent his days helping others, one at a time or collectively. He's helped countless disabled veterans navigate the VA bureaucracy to get the retirement pay due them, and he was among those who spearheaded efforts to institute Tricare for Life.

Rhodes, a member of the Chattahoochee Valley Veterans' Counsel, led the drive to erect the eternal flame monument at the Columbus Government Center more than 10 years ago, and most recently, he saw his dream of a Medal of Honor monument become a reality with the dedication of a memorial at the foot of the eternal flame. Columbus claims four Medal of Honor recipients, a fact that Rhodes is quite proud of.

He was also one of the veterans who fought for Veterans' Parkway, which was formerly a series of consecutive streets, impractical and confusing even to longtime residents.

He took charge of fund-raising efforts to send a delegation of local World War II veterans to Washington, D.C., for the groundbreaking and later dedication of the World War II memorial.

Rhodes said his efforts are successful, because he has "been blessed to meet so many wonderful, supportive people along the way."

Rhodes has been, at times, a friend or formidable foe to Columbus mayors and city council members. He knows, and is known, on a first-name basis, men like Jim Wetherington, Bob

RHODES

Poydasheff, Jack Rodgers and Bobby Peters. A nod from Jim Rhodes packs considerable weight in a local election, and a cause championed by Rhodes is a cause local politicians take seriously, perhaps because he approaches everything with the same philosophy he used as a young boy — you're either part of the problem or part of the solution.

Rhodes was only 14 years old when he dropped out of school "to keep from starving." His father began drinking during the Depression, and his mother struggled to feed Jim and his four siblings. (Another sister would come later.) So Rhodes hitched a ride to Florida and went to work delivering ice with his uncle for 50 cents a day.

The day after he turned 18, in 1940, Rhodes went to see a recruiter, who promised the young man $21 a month, with meals and a roof over his head. Rhodes became a member of the Headquarters Battery, 31st Infantry Division, the Dixie Division, a National Guard unit, much like the one his great grandfather had served in.

And like Maj. Mitchell, Rhodes went to war. The 31st was activated for federal service two months after he enlisted. There was a time Rhodes questioned his decision. The promise of a paycheck and a roof — they hardly seemed worthy, or even truthful, as he lay in a foxhole in the Morotai Islands of the East Indies, where his unit was bombed for 89 days straight.

Of the 96 men in his outfit, Rhodes said, six went crazy and at least two committed suicide. They saw natives slaughtered as Japanese "zero" planes strafed the islands. To this day, said Rhodes, who lives near the Columbus airport, the sound of a rotary engine airplane sends chills up his spine.

Most of the time he spent in combat was "wiped out," Rhodes said, "it's a blank." But not all of it. He remembers a particularly fierce night of bombing, when he dashed through the tall grass and dove into his foxhole, only to discover his chest shredded and covered in blood. He keeled over.

Moments later, when he came to, he asked his buddy, "How bad am I hit?"

"You didn't get hit," he was told. "You got sliced up by the grass."

Rhodes laughs now at the memory, but the incident marked a turning point. He'd lost the will to live, even prayed for a quick death, up until that point. Now he prayed and promised God his life would be a witness if God would only get him out alive. God kept his end of the bargain, through Rhodes' tours in Europe, New Guinea, the Philippines and Japan. Rhodes thanks God every morning for a new day and another chance to make a difference in someone's life.

At 84, he's "getting to the point where someone's going to have to carry on," said Rhodes, who lost his wife, Betty, in 1998. The couple, married 52 years, had two children who gave them four grandchildren and four great grandchildren. Like his own great granddad, Rhodes hopes his greatest legacy will be that someone will serve because he served.

Ways to keep your pets well-behaved and healthy this year

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

While making New Year's resolutions this year, take some time to evaluate your pet care skills.

Most of us slip a little during the holidays — giving pets a bite of meatball, not keeping an eye on the kitten or forgetting to give the dog its heartworm medicine. Make a New Year's resolution to help keep your pets happy, healthy and well-trained by being a good pet owner, and use the tips below to brush up on your pet care skills.

The tips are helpful if you have a new pet in the house.

- Consistency is the key to a well-behaved dog or cat. If you say "no" when your pet chews on something it's not supposed to, mean it, and don't overlook the bad behavior next time it happens. The chances are good that if you discourage bad behavior from the beginning and remain consistent, the pet will learn quickly and the lessons will stick with it for life.

- Establishing a routine is a good way to stay consistent. Try to feed your pets at the same time each day, and let them outside or take them on walks first thing in the morning, after each meal and last thing at night. Puppies will need to go more often than that, and try to take them out the same door to the same spot each time. Eventually they will go to that door to let you know they need to go out. For kittens, find a good spot for the litter box and keep it there. Take them there often so they can learn to find it on their own.

- With the cold winter weather, playing outside with your dog may not be enticing, but it's important to make sure your pets are getting enough exercise.

Bored, under-stimulated pets will find ways to expend their energy — usually in a way we wouldn't approve of like chewing on furniture or running around the house knocking things over. Take your dog and a ball outside and play a quick game of fetch. It gets the dog running and using up energy in a short amount of time. That is unless you have a sheltie, like me, who could chase the ball for days on end without getting tired.

- For some mental stimulation, get a toy that allows you to hide a treat or some peanut butter, making your pet search and work a little to get the reward, suggests the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Training is another good way to stimulate your pet. Work on "sit," "stay" and "come" and tricks. Many cats like to explore, so set up some cardboard boxes or leave out a paper shopping bag for them to discover.

- Use a calendar to keep track of important pet health events. Mark which days you gave meds and went to the vet. Make it a habit to write down future vet appointments or mark the day on the calendar when you need to set up an appointment. Also write down when annual vaccines will be needed and when you'll need a refill on meds.

Well-behaved, healthy and happy pets make great companions and bring out the fun of pet ownership, so set your mind to helping your pets achieve it this year.

ASK A DOC

THE MARTIN ARMY MEDICAL MENTOR

MARTIN ARMY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Dr. Lt. Col. Roberto Sartori, board certified neurologist

Q: What is Alzheimer's disease?

A: Alzheimer's disease is the most common cause of dementia. Dementia is a collective name for progressive degenerative brain syndromes which affect memory, thinking, behavior and emotion. Symptoms may include:

- loss of memory
- difficulty in finding the right words or understanding what people are saying
- difficulty in performing previously routine tasks
- personality and mood changes

Q: Is Alzheimer's disease inherited?

A: There are a few very rare cases where Alzheimer's disease does run in families. In these cases there is a direct link between an inherited gene and the disease. These tend to be cases of "early on set" Alzheimer's disease, which affects those 65 or younger. In these cases, the probability that close family members (brothers, sisters and children) will develop Alzheimer's disease is one in two.

However, most cases of Alzheimer's disease are not of the type that is passed on directly in this way. If a family member has a normal form of Alzheimer's disease, the risk to close relatives is around three times higher than the risk for a person of a similar age who has no family history of the disease. It is thought that in these cases a person's genes may contribute to the development of the disease but do not cause it directly.

Q: Is there a cure for Alzheimer's?

A: There is currently no cure for Alzheimer's disease or for most other causes of dementia. Nor can a cure be expected in the foreseeable future. Researchers are still at the stage of developing drugs that will slow down the progression of the disease, at least in some cases. They still do not know how to prevent the disease from occurring, how to stop its progression, or how to reverse its effects.

Evaluate, improve upon last year's resolutions

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Happy New Year! I hope you had a Merry Christmas and are experiencing the beginning of a wonderful new year. If you are like most people, the New Year brings to mind New Year's Resolutions. As we think about those resolutions we often reflect upon the past year. This is a great idea as we evaluate the past and look for ways to improve on areas we may not be totally satisfied and would like to improve.

So what resolutions did you make this year? Let me guess, one has to be to lose weight. According to an internet survey, 66 percent of Americans will be participating in weight reduction by means of diet and exercise. I know I enjoyed some good eating and too many sweet treats the past month. Why do we always wait until the end of the year to make all those nice treats, maybe we should spread them out across the whole year.

One top five resolution is to quit the habit of smoking. I guess the reasons for this are obvious, health and finances. Most people will struggle and fail, if this is the first attempt at quitting. However, it is a step in the right direction as the experts tell us on average it takes four attempts to kick the habit. So hang in there. In fact, another survey stated that those who manage to make a resolution that lasts for six months or more have often tried five or six times before finally succeeding.

Two other top five resolutions are quality of life and time with family. Often during the holiday season we focus on those we love. We make plans to visit and get together, we shop and buy gifts and look forward to belonging together as a family because we purpose to spend time together. Why do we allow the busyness of life to steal time away from us the rest of the year? We need to set better goals as couples and families to redeem the time we have together. We need to step off the speeding train and walk along the path of life smelling the roses, listening to the birds sing, watch the sunset and take in a concert on the river. Intentions are good, but intentions alone do nothing. Try telling your wife on her birthday, you intended on getting her a card and a gift. See where that will get you. Or tell your boss, you intended on being on time, as you walk in late. Or tell your child, you intended on being at their game/recital, while you were playing ball or shopping instead. Good intention without action accomplishes nothing.

Get an action plan, set goals as couples and as families. We need to set "realistic" goals so that we put ourselves in the position to achieve success. Start with some practical goals, a family meal five times a week, a walk in the evening with your spouse three times a week, a designated time with each child on a day when you can be there, help doing chores around the house, a weekly date night and so on. But remember, make the goals realistic. One major problem people have is that they set unattainable goals, goals no one could reach and they doom themselves to failure. Set yourself up for success. It is okay to adjust a goal if we set it too high to achieve. If you make a goal and realize you cannot achieve it in the time, adjust it to allow more time, do not just abandon the goal. The quality of our life usually increases when we make it a goal to spend time together as a family when we say no to the time thieves. I hope this year you will set some goals which will help you protect and achieve what is really important to you and your family. Chose this day to be successful.

If you are reading this and are experiencing some personal difficulties, having marital or family discord and would like to talk about it with someone, our pastoral counselors are available at the Family Life Center to help. Give us a call at 545-1760 as we offer you "Help for Your Journey."

A sign of the times

Bridgett Siter
John Owens, an employee of Shaw, scrapes the "Officers" from the "Officers' Club" sign on Dixie Road. The club reopened Tuesday as the Benning Club and will be open to all Department of Defense ID card holders. The change is the result of requests from community members who wanted to see the club open to officers, enlisted Soldiers, their families and DoD civilian employees, said Charlotte Jackson, chief of business operations for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

ON-POST FAMILY HOUSING

PINNACLE
Mickey Kropf

Q "What steps do I need to take to ensure that my home will be secure if my family and I will be away for any period of time?"

A Fort Benning residents should notify the appropriate neighborhood management office whenever their home will be unoccupied for a period of five days or more (e.g., vacations, TDY, etc.), so that Pinnacle can inform the Provost Marshal Office and request periodic security checks under the PMO's Housewatch Program.

As always, residents should lock all doors and windows and turn off all unused utilities while away.

They should also put a temporary stop on deliveries.

Keeping New Year's resolutions can be as simple as 1-2-3

MCG HEALTH SYSTEM
Dr. Bernard Davidson

Augusta, Ga. — Every new year, scores of people write down resolutions, confident that this year they will meet their goals. But all too often, a few weeks later, their lists — along with their resolve — are cast off and forgotten. However, by taking three simple steps, you can help ensure your success.

Step 1: Be committed. It's important that you think through what you want to change, and commit yourself to the long-term process it usually takes to achieve change. Then, come up with a realistic plan to help you achieve your goals. For example, if you want to lose weight, put together a schedule of weight loss, and map out an achievable diet and exercise plan. If you have friends and family who will be supportive, let them in on your plan and they can help gently reinforce your commitment. Who knows, there may even be someone you know who wants to achieve the same goal, and you can work together. Or, if necessary, don't be afraid to seek professional help — whether that's a trainer, nutritionist, doctor or counselor — to assist you.

Step 2: Be ready for setbacks. Let's face it, on every road, there will be some potholes. But don't think of every setback as a complete failure and give up your commitment. If you miss an exercise class, if you smoke one cigarette, if Aunt Marge drives you to consume an entire pint of Rocky Road ice cream, don't dwell on that but get right back on track. We're all human. Just expect some bumps along the way, and plan ahead of time how you will deal with them. Maybe your plan will be to call a supportive friend and enjoy a healthy salad night while venting about Aunt Marge. Or maybe it will be to review all the reasons you really want to quit smoking and why quitting makes you happy. Whatever it is, don't let one slip-up make you give up your entire plan.

Step 3: Keep track of your progress. Cheer yourself on toward your goal by celebrating your successes along the way and getting positive feedback from your supporters. Reward yourself appropriately, and it will encourage you to keep on going toward your goal. A good rule of thumb is to evaluate your progress every week or two weeks, but resist the urge to overmonitor yourself by critiquing yourself every day — that's likely to end in frustration. And this isn't a race, so there's no need to compare yourself with anyone else. The only thing that matters is that you are accomplishing what you need to do in the fashion that's best suited to you.

YOUR finances

THE BAYONET
Jeff Saeli

One of the more common requests I receive is to "refinance" an automobile loan. In this context, refinancing means the customer wants to make a loan to payoff the balance on an existing loan, secured by a vehicle.

Two reasons for this request are commonly cited: the desire to lower interest rates, or the desire to lower the monthly payment. In either case, a bit of analysis is needed to determine if this is going to be possible, and, if possible, to the customer's benefit.

Let's look at a few of the factors influencing a lender's ability to offer credit as part of a refinancing arrangement first, and then at a few of the factors that determine whether or not refinancing is to your benefit.

The first thing a lender is going to review is the worth of the vehicle. It doesn't matter what you paid for the vehicle — it matters what the value of the vehicle is at the time of application. Lenders use the "book" value of a vehicle, often discounted for age, condition, and mileage. If the vehicle is not worth the amount you owe, then expect the lender to offer to lend only some portion of the amount owed on the vehicle, with the balance of the old loan being paid directly by you.

This situation is called being "upside down" — if you owe more than the vehicle is currently worth. On a side note, you should note that vehicle values are driven by market conditions — as demand for a type of vehicle goes down, so does the value, even if the vehicle is in pristine condition. Recent declines in SUV resale values are an example of falling values driven by market conditions — an effect of rising fuel prices.

The age of the vehicle is going to determine what percentage of the value a lender is willing to offer. Most banks will finance a new vehicle 100 percent, and use a sliding scale to determine the loan-to-value ratio for older vehicles. Also, most lenders will cap the age at which they will accept a vehicle as collateral — often, around seven years.

The age of the vehicle is also going to determine the term of the loan — how long you have to pay it back. This is important when refinancing, since, if your current loan has 60 months remaining, and the lender offers credit at 36 months, even if the interest rate is lower, your monthly payments will go up. Generally, older vehicles will refinance for shorter terms, higher interest rates, and lower LTVs than newer vehicles.

Lowering interest rates can be difficult. If you have very good credit, you likely have the most favorable rate on the market already. If your credit is not so good, you're probably not going to be offered a much better rate at refinance. The one situation where refinancing makes sense is if you are in a falling rate environment, you owe less than the vehicle is worth (or are willing to pay down the balance at refinancing) and you're willing to finance for a shorter term than remains on your current loan. In this case, you'll probably be able to obtain a lower rate.

To determine if this will be in your favor, calculate the total amount of interest you will pay on the existing loan, over the life on the loan, and the total interest you will pay on the new loan, over the life of the loan, plus any loan fees for the new loan.

The lower of the two totals is your best option. Keep in mind, if rates are a concern, you can lower the total interest paid on the existing loan by adding to the payment each month — this pays off the principal more quickly, and lowers the total interest expense.

Lowering payments can be even more difficult than lowering rates. This usually involves refinancing the vehicle for a longer period than remains on the existing loan, something most lenders are not inclined to do.

Remember — when you approach a lender for a re-finance, you are asking for a loan on a used car. Rates are almost always higher, and terms are almost always shorter, for used cars than for new cars. The one case where this might work is if you financed your vehicle for a very short period — two to three years — and you've owned it less than one year. If it was new to begin with, it can still be considered new.

The time to shop for rates and terms is before you purchase the car. Lenders won't be able to offer a specific rate or terms without an application, but they can offer "what ifs" — if you specify the make, model and year, and have an idea of your credit score, they can usually give you a range of rates at various terms.

One word of caution — be careful about making multiple applications for credit when shopping for a vehicle. Multiple checks on your credit in a short period of time will lower your score. I recommend obtaining one quote from a bank and a final quote from the dealer where you have decided on a particular car. Take the most favorable terms.

The Littlest Reindeer

Rachel Houston

Students at White Elementary School perform a holiday play, The Littlest Reindeer, Dec. 15, for their fellow students, parents and teachers. The younger students, in red, sang holiday songs, and the older students performed the play, in which the littlest reindeer takes a Rudolph-like role. The smallest reindeer is outcast until Santa gets stuck in a chimney and she is the only one small enough to go in and push him out, saving Christmas.

Look below for a glimpse of the rich collection at the Little White House and memorial museum.

"The Unfinished Portrait" is the watercolor image of the president that was being painted when he suffered a stroke and collapsed.

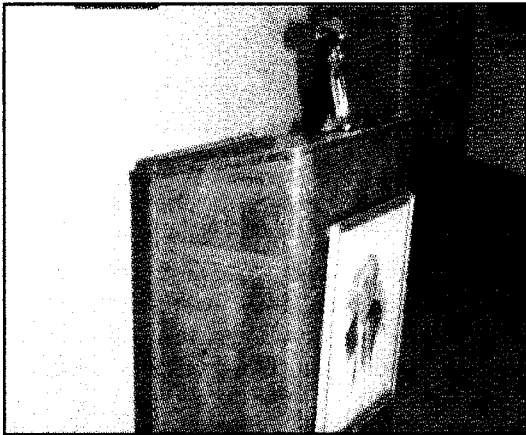

Fala, FDR's Scottish Terrier, is said to have made scratches on the door that can still be seen today inside the Little White House next to a replica of him.

Two antique cars owned and driven by FDR remain at the Little White House. The 1938 Ford seen here is the last car he drove in Warm Springs, and it has hand controls designed by the president.

On display in the museum is one of the bathing suits worn by the president when he swam in the pools in town.

The museum is currently allowing visitors to take photos behind this podium, which has been used by John F. Kennedy, Jimmy Carter and other politicians.

The Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga., was the vacation house of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Today, the historic site is open to visitors and has a museum. The site is open every day, except Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Little White House

FDR died at the house on April 12, 1945, while having watercolor portrait painted

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

The lure of a reported cure for polio in the mineral-filled pools in Warm Springs, Ga., first drew the attention of one of the U.S.'s most memorable presidents, Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

FDR visited the town in 1924, almost a decade before he became president and three years after he developed polio, and while he didn't find a miracle cure, he did find relief and benefit from swimming in the 88-degree waters.

The natural spring water that flows out of the earth at Warm Springs is rich in minerals, which make people float easily in the pools.

FDR was enchanted by the area, and while running for the presidency in 1932, he built a small six-room cottage on the side of Pine Mountain that became known as the Little White House.

A new museum at the historic site has a video narrated by Walter Cronkite and numerous personal belongings of the president, as well as photos and paintings.

Step through the doorway of one room in the museum and you step into a 1930s kitchen with an authentic 1930s radio playing FDR's fireside chats.

Then step into the Little White House and see the home almost exactly as it looked during FDR's time there. The estate includes guest and servants' quarters and a bump gate that opened when bumped by the front of a car.

FDR was having his portrait painted in the house when he had a massive stroke and collapsed in 1945. The resulting "Unfinished Portrait" hangs in the museum at the historic site, and the artist, Madame Elizabeth Shoumatoff, finished a second painting from memory and photos, entitled the "Finished Portrait," that also hangs in the museum.

On the grounds are little green posts used by a company of Marines that guarded the estate while the president visited. The Marines always preceded the president, and when the townspeople saw the Marines come into town, where they camped, they knew the president was coming.

FDR visited his neighbors frequently while in Warm Springs, and his experiences with the people were influential in the development of New Deal policies, such as the Rural Electrification Administration and Civilian Conservation Corps.

The president also founded the Roosevelt-Warm Springs Institute for Rehabilitation, and a small museum at the pools tells of the institute's history. The pools and museum are located about a mile from the Little White House.

From 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Feb. 10, the Tuskegee Army will be at the Little White House for an educational living history program, and visitors can meet the famous WWII pilots who flew 1,578 missions.

A bronze statue of FDR will be placed at Dowdell's Knob in the F.D. Roosevelt State Park, the president's favorite picnic spot. The statue, which is the first depicting the president with his leg braces visible, will be unveiled April 12, the anniversary of his death.

Check the Web site, www.fdr-littlewhitehouse.org, for information on other events, including the Great Backyard Bird Count and the annual commemorative ceremony on April 12.

The Little White House is located just south of Warm Springs, about 40 miles from Columbus. To get there, take 85 (Manchester Expressway) north and follow the signs to the historic site.

Admission ranges from $4-$7. The last tickets are sold at 4:45 p.m. as the museum closes at 5 p.m. For more information, go to the Web site or call 706-655-5870.

SAMPLE THE WEALTH OF HISTORY AT THE LITTLE WHITE HOUSE WITH THIS QUIZ

QUESTIONS
1. Which president led the nation out of the Great Depression with his New Deal policy, which created thousands of jobs, and was commander in chief during World War II?

2. How many years was FDR president?

3. Where did FDR announce his campaign for presidency?

4. What was the stagecoach in the museum used for?

5. What did FDR discuss in his Fireside Chats?

6. What is the significance of the many sea-themed objects in the Little White House?

7. What did FDR make using a kitchen chair?

8. What comedian joined to campaign to raise money to fight polio and used a prop vault?

9. What article of clothing is a different color in the "Unfinished Portrait" and "Finished Portrait"?

10. When was FDR afflicted by polio?

ANSWERS

1. Franklin Delano Roosevelt

2. 12

3. At the Meriwether Inn in Warm Springs.

4. The stagecoach was part of the Meriwether Inn, a vacation spot in Warm Springs that FDR purchased.

The coach was built in the late 1800s and transported visitors to and from nearby towns and train stations.

5. The president spoke to the nation about the economy, the war in Europe and national security during his chats on the radio.

6. FDR grew up in Hyde Park, N.Y., and developed a great love of the sea from his parents. Paintings and models of ships decorate nearly every room in the house as reminders of the sea.

7. A wheelchair. He designed a wheelchair out of a kitchen chair that allowed him to easily maneuver around the house. The chair has no arms, which allowed the president to have more mobility and ability to reach things for himself. The wheelchair remains in the Little White House.

8. Comedian Jack Benny used his prop vault and a wagon in his "pennies from Benny" campaign in 1948. Benny was known for his pinche penny pockets and for his age, which was stuck at 39.

9. The tie. FDR's tie is red in the unfinished painting and blue in the finished one.

10. FDR was stricken by polio, also known as infantile paralysis. In 1921, when he was nearly 40 years old, his legs were useless, but he fought to regain their use through swimming. He had full use of his upper body, which helped keep his ailments hidden from the public.

OPENING TODAY

FREEDOM WRITERS — A dedicated California teacher (Hilary Swank) finds a way to unify her disadvantaged, racially divided students, and to improve their grasp of academics, partly by having them keep journals about their violent, troubled lives.

Freedom Writers is rated PG-13 for violent content, some thematic material and language.

CODE NAME: THE CLEANER

— An amnesiac janitor (Cedric the Entertainer) who is duped into thinking he is an undercover agent, is subconsciously carrying a secret that can link the FBI with an arms scandal.

Also starring Lucy Liu and Nicollette Sheridan.

Code Name: The Cleaner is rated PG-13 for sexual content, crude humor and some violence.

HAPPILY N'EVER AFTER

— When the wizard in charge of Fairy Tale World goes on holiday, Cinderella's wicked stepmother takes over the world, which is home to characters such as Little Red Riding Hood, the Seven Dwarves and Rapunzel.

The animated characters are voiced by Sigourney Weaver, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Freddie Prinze Jr. and Patrick Warburton.

CHILDREN OF MEN

— A futuristic society faces extinction when no children are born and the human race has lost the ability to reproduce. England has descended into chaos, until an iron-handed warden is brought in to institute martial law.

The warden's ability to keep order is threatened when a woman finds that she is pregnant with what would be the first child born in 27 years.

The movie stars Julianne Moore, Clive Owen and Michael Caine.

Children of Men is rated R for strong violence, some drug use and brief nudity.

ALSO PLAYING

THE PURSUIT OF HAPPYNESS

Chris Gardner (Will Smith) is a bright and talented but marginally employed salesman. Struggling to make ends meet, Gardner finds himself and his 5-year-old son (Jaden Smith) evicted from their San Francisco apartment with nowhere to go.

When Gardner lands an internship at a prestigious stock brokerage firm, he and his son endure many hardships, including living in shelters, in pursuit of his dream of a better life for the two of them.

The Pursuit of Happyness is rated PG-13 for language.

ROCKY BALBOA

— Former heavyweight champion Rocky Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) steps out of retirement and back into the ring, pitting himself against a new rival decades after his initial glory.

Dreamgirls, which opened nationwide on Christmas Day, has garnered five Golden Globe nominations, including best film in comedy or musical, and best actress for Beyonce Knowles, center.

When a computer simulated boxing match declares Balboa the victor over current champion Mason "The Line" Dixon, the legendary fighter's passion and spirit are reignited.

Rocky Balboa is rated PG for boxing violence and some language.

WE ARE MARSHALL

— The movie is a true story, based on devastating events, set in Huntington, W.V., about a small town steeped in the rich tradition of college football.

For the team and the community, Marshall football is more than just a sport, it's a way of life.

But on a fateful night in 1970, while traveling back to Huntington after a game in North Carolina, 75 members of Marshall's football team and coaching staff were killed in a plane crash.

As those left behind struggled to cope with the loss of their loved ones, the grieving families found hope and strength in the leadership of Jack Lengyel, a young coach who was determined to rebuild Marshall's football program and in the process helped to heal a community.

We Are Marshall, rated PG for emotional thematic material, a crash scene and mild language, stars Matthew McConaughey and Matthew Fox.

NIGHT AT THE MUSEUM

— Good-hearted dreamer Larry Daley (Ben Stiller) thinks he's destined for something big.

But even he could never have imagined how big, when he accepts what appears to be a menial job as a graveyard-shift security guard at a museum of natural history. During Larry's watch, extraordinary things begin to occur.

Night at the Museum is rated PG for mild action, language and brief rude humor.

THE GOOD GERMAN

— The movie is about an American reporter who's sent to cover the final Allied summit meeting of World War II.

The reporter is secretly there to search for a lost love and ends up getting tangled up in a murder mystery when a body washes ashore.

The Good German, rated R for language, violence and some sexual content, stars George Clooney and Cate Blanchett.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD

— Edward Wilson understands the value of secrecy — discretion and commitment have been embedded in him since childhood.

As an eager, optimistic student at Yale, he is recruited to join the secret society Skull and Bones, a brotherhood and breeding ground for future world leaders.

He is soon recruited to work for the OSS (the precursor to the CIA) during World War II.

As his methods are adopted as standard operating procedure, Wilson develops into one of the agency's veteran operatives, all the while combating his KGB counterpart. However, his steely dedication to his country comes at an ever-increasing price.

Matt Damon, Robert DeNiro and Angelina Jolie star in the movie.

The Good Shepherd is rated R for some violence, sexuality and language.

DREAMGIRLS

— Effie White, Deena Jones and Lorrell Robinson — three friends from Chicago — are a promising singing trio called The Dreamettes.

Accompanied by their songwriter, they travel to New York to compete in a talent show at the Apollo Theatre.

Although the girls lose this first bid for fame, their talent attracts an ambitious manager who uses unscrupulous tactics to move the girls from backup singers to superstars of their own.

Beyonce Knowles, Jamie Foxx, Eddie Murphy, Jennifer Hudson and Danny Glover star in the movie.

Dreamgirls is rated PG-13 for language, some sexuality and drug content.

BLOOD DIAMOND

— Set against the backdrop of civil war and chaos in 1990's Sierra Leone, Danny Archer, a South African mercenary, and Solomon Vandy, a Mende fisherman, are joined in a common quest to recover a rare pink diamond that can transform their lives.

While in prison for smuggling, Archer learns that Solomon — who was taken from his family and forced to work in the diamond fields — has found and hidden the extraordinary rough stone.

The movie stars Leonardo DiCaprio and Djimon Hounsou.

Blood Diamond is rated R for strong violence and language.

NEW RELEASES

THE ILLUSIONIST: Magicians had a fairly good year in the movies in 2006 thanks to The Prestige and this drama about a master of illusion (Edward Norton) who attracts the interest of an investigator (Paul Giamatti, Sideways) fearful that the magic expert will use his gift against Prince Leopold (Rufus Sewell). Writer-director Neil Burger's wonderfully atmospheric film also features Jessica Biel as a duchess caught between the magic man and the prince. The music score is by Philip Glass. DVD extras: theatrical trailer; "making-of" documentary. (PG-13:AS,V)

BROKEN BRIDGES: Some country music stars have had more success than others in launching movie careers, and Toby Keith gives it his shot with this drama, first shown last month on (appropriately enough) Country Music Television. Keith doesn't stray far from what he knows by playing a singer, but this one's career is on the downslide. Going back to his hometown, he stirs up old hurts with his ex-girlfriend (Kelly Preston) and the daughter he never knew (Lindsey Haun). Burt Reynolds, Willie Nelson, Tess Harper, Tender Mercies and gospel star BeBe Winans also appear — and, of course, Keith performs on the soundtrack. DVD extras: three "making-of"

The Illusionist is director Neil Burger's screen adaptation of Steven Millhauser's short story Eisenheim the Illusionist. Eisenheim (Edward Norton) is a magician in early 1900's Vienna, who falls in love with a woman well above his social standing. When she becomes engaged to a Crown Prince, Eisenheim uses his powers to free her and undermine the stability of the royal house of Vienna.

COMING SOON

THE GUARDIAN (Jan. 23): A Coast Guard newcomer (Ashton Kutcher) is put through rigorous training by a veteran (Kevin Costner) haunted by his memories of a mission gone wrong. (PG-13:AS,P,V)

OPEN SEASON (Jan. 30): A bear (voice of Martin Lawrence) gets help from a deer (voice of Ashton Kutcher) in surviving against hunters in this computer-animated comedy-adventure. (PG:AS)

FAMILY VIEWING GUIDE KEY: AS, adult situations; N, nudity; P, profanity; V, violence; GV, particularly graphic violence.

Eating out at the Midtown Café & Grill

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

I'm a Yankee by birth, and a Southerner by the grace and good mercy of Uncle Sam. I've lived here half my life now, and I've yet to master the art of Southern cooking, so pursuing the perfect Southern plate — outside of my kitchen — is one of my favorite pastimes.

I learned three things about dining in the South before I unpacked my bags all those years ago.

I learned that:

- when a waitress calls you "sweetie," she's being neither fresh nor condescending. She's being a sweetie.

- sweet tea, sweetie, is more common here than water,
- and "greens" come in three forms — collards, mustards and turnips.

I like "greens," in general, as defined by my Northern upbringing. Up there, greens are anything green and edible, with the exception of Jell-O. They're edible herbage, to put it genteelly — "roughage" if you prefer the medical term. Doctor Mom prescribes them regularly for tummy aches.

I was as regular a girl as one could find in farm country, but I never so much as tasted a collard or mustard till I moved South for college.

They took a little getting used to, and I can't say I felt the need to cultivate a taste for them, such as one might develop a taste for fine wines.

But ever since I endured a deep and abiding craving for them during the entire nine months, four days, six hours and eight minutes of my third pregnancy, I have loved those greasy, salty Southern greens.

Still, I confess, I still don't know the difference between a collard, a mustard or a turnip green. So when I sat down for lunch at the Midtown Café & Grill, billed as a purveyor of "traditional Southern cuisine," I found myself faced with what is actually a rare decision, even in these parts — mustards, turnips or collards?

What's the difference, I asked the waiter. He — Southern by birth, mind you — didn't know either.

But he recommended the collards, and that's another thing I learned early on about dining out in the South — if the waiter says it's good, you can bank on it. If he doesn't recommend one dish, he'll never say as much; he'll simply suggest an alternative.

In this case, my choice of collards with hamburger steak smothered in gravy and onions met with his approval. And to his momma's credit and good Southern upbringing, he didn't bat an eye when I ordered black-eyed peas, as well. Black-eyed peas and collard greens. Doc Momma would be proud.

The meal, my first at the Midtown, was delicious. And cheap, to boot, less than $8 with a drink, dinner roll and more food than I could finish, though I gave it a good fight.

I'd like to tell you the dessert was scrumptious — or recommend an alternative if it wasn't — but I simply couldn't "make room" for it.

My lunch companion, who introduced me to the Midtown — I never would've found it on my own — she couldn't recommend a single item on the dessert menu, either.

And for good reason, apparently. They're all incredible, she said — the three-layer Italian Cream cake, the blueberry crumb, the double fudge chocolate and the apple cobbler. All to die for.

Midtown desserts are one of its biggest draws, I'm told, and one of the most requested items on their catering menu.

I like desserts as much as the next gal, but I doubt I'll have room for it next time around, when I try the chicken and dumplings with sweet peas and collards. Or the time after that, when I try the fried whiting with green beans and collards. Or the next, when I'll definitely try the fried chicken with coleslaw and collards.

Eventually, I'll get around to the smoked ham, the roasted chicken, the catfish, pork chops and fried shrimp. But always the collards.

The Midtown Café & Grill is hidden, but certainly not hard to find, in an unassuming plaza behind Kmart off Macon Road near the Columbus Library. The address is 1820 Midtown Drive, and the phone number is 706-507-1090.

The restaurant is spacious, tidy and clean, with linen table clothes and a French flair in the décor. There's a meeting room available for, well, meetings, I suppose, but the dining room itself offers plenty of elbow room and a very pleasant atmosphere.

I highly recommend it. If it weren't so, I'd simply suggest an alternative.

THINGS to do

Lipizzaners dance their way to Columbus

Horses perform airs above the ground

THE BAYONET
Jessica Egan

The world-famous Lipizzaner stallions will perform at 2 and 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Civic Center in Columbus. The Lipizzaner stallions are among the finest equine athletes, performing awe-inspiring moves.

The horses do everything from the traditional grand quadrille, where six to eight horses perform together as a team striving to get the same beat and tempo, to maneuvers on the longline, with the rider walking behind the horse, and of course, the famous airs above the ground.

Originally used as war horses, the Lipizzaners were used to protect and defend their riders from soldiers on the ground. They did this by executing movements designed to take out anyone people in close vicinity. These movements are called the airs above the ground.

The three most recognized are the courbette, the levade, and the capriole.

The courbette is when the horse balances on its hind legs and does a sort of rear while keeping the front legs neatly pulled to its chest as it jumps through the air. (To the non-horse person, it looks like a horse's best interpretation of the Easter bunny); it requires great strength.

The levade is done by keeping a 45 degree angle to the ground.

The capriole is probably the most well-known movement of the airs above ground. The horse leaps into the air and kicks out violently with his hind legs during flight.

The airs above ground require great strength, intelligence, talent, and athletic ability.

It takes years for a horse to be able to do those kinds of extraordinary movements. Only a handful of the stallions can perform with the show because of the rigorous standards. The stallions that meet the standards require a great deal of training.

All these maneuvers are possible because of dressage, the art of riding and training a horse in a manner that develops obedience, flexibility, and balance. It is like a dance between horse and rider — an equine ballet in which the horses perform a variety of movements; there must be harmony between the horse and rider.

Dressage originated about 400 B.C. and requires great concentration, strength, and suppleness from both the horse and rider. It takes years to develop a great dressage horse and rider, because the principle is based on the natural movements of the horse.

The World Famous Lipizzaner Stallion show typically has between 12-14 horses that perform. While some Lipizzaners are imported from Europe, most are bred at the Piber stud farm in Florida. This is because although the world famous Lipizzaner stallions show classical dressage, they are not affiliated with the Spanish Riding School of Vienna.

The World Famous Lipizzaner Stallions show is sure to be a hit with everyone. Even non-horse lovers will have a good time. Ticket prices are $22 and $25 for adults. For kids 12 and younger and seniors 60 and older, tickets are $23 and $20.

Groups of 15 or more can get tickets for $17 and $20.

A limited number of Gold Circle seats are available for $30 each. No discounts apply. Discounts cannot be combined. To purchase tickets go to www.ticketmaster.com or call 706-494-8330.

LITTLE KNOWN facts

- The Lipizzaner breed is descended from the famous Andalusian, a prized Spanish horse.
- Lipizzaner foals are usually born black, and then turn gray as adults.
- Some Lipizzans remain their dark color, and they are prized for good luck.
- It is considered a sign of hard times to come when there are no dark Lipizzaners in a barn.
- During 1945, Vienna, home of the Lipizzaners, was bombed by allied bombers.
- Gen. George S. Patton and the 2nd Calvary were responsible for saving the breed in 1945 during WWII.
- 2005 was the 60th anniversary of the breed's rescue.
- There are six established sire lines for the lipizzan breed.
- The airs above ground are the courbette, levade, and capriole.
- There are fewer than 3,000 purebred Lipizzans in the world.
- Only stallions are trained in the airs above the ground due to the sheer strength it takes to perform them.
- Stallions that are selected to be trained in the high-level dressage and airs above ground must be extremely athletic, smart and elegant.

Sudoku puzzles from Pappocom

PAPPOCOM

Here's a puzzle with numbers. Do you have to use arithmetic? No! Nothing has to add up to anything else. Instead, you solve the puzzle with reasoning and logic.

Where do you start solving a Sudoku puzzle? Anyplace you can!

For example, take a look at the Very Easy puzzle. Let's try and place a 7 in the top-left box (call it "box 1"). You could just guess where the 7 goes, but that might get you into trouble. It's more fun to reason it out.

Note the 7 in box 3 (the top-right box). It's the 7 for the whole top row, so the 7 for the box 1 cannot go in Box 1's top row. Box 2 also has its 7 already. It is the 7 for the whole 2nd row, so the 7 for box 1 cannot go in Box 1's middle row. That leaves just the 3rd row. In box 1, there is only one empty cell in the 3rd row - so we can write the 7 in, between the 9 and the 2.

Now let's try and find the 6 for box 1. If you look down at box 7 (the bottom-left box), you will see it already has a 6. That is the 6 for all of the 1st column - and of course you can only have one 6 per column. Box 4 (the middle-left box) also has its 6. That 6 is the only 6 allowed in the 2nd column. So the 6 for box 1 must go in the 3rd column. This time, there are two empty cells left in box 1. However, look to the right. There's a 6 in box 2, and it eliminates one of the possible locations for the 6 in box 1.

With that kind of thinking, you can finish the Very Easy and Easy puzzles. The Medium puzzles will need a little extra. You will need some other tricks and techniques, but discovering them for yourself is part of the fun. The Hard puzzles, however, will need a lot extra!

A Very Easy puzzle might take you half an hour, the first time. But you will soon get your time down - maybe to 10 minutes or even less.

On the other hand, be careful of Very Hard puzzles. How hard can they be? Put it this way. If you were on death row and due to be executed in the morning, and the guard told you if you solved the puzzle your life would be spared - you'd die.

That's not to say that Very Hard puzzles are impossible - they are just, well, very hard. And of course, if you are prepared to "guess", you might strike it lucky and solve it faster.

Each Sudoku puzzle from Pappocom has just one solution.

Each Sudoku puzzle from Pappocom can be solved using logic alone. If you prefer guessing, you can - but there is a logical way to solve every puzzle.

Surge includes increase in Iraqi forces

David Dismukes

President Bush spoke with about 300 Soldiers and family members at Fort Benning Jan. 11. He outlined plans for a 21,000 troop surge in Iraq, with most of the troops going to Baghdad to quell the violence that has stymied the Iraqi government. A stable Baghdad bodes well for the rest of the country, Bush said.

Surge to stabilize Baghdad, Anbar province

WASHINGTON — A plus-up of Iraqi soldiers is a component of President Bush's strategy to stabilize Iraq's capital city and parts of western Iraq, senior U.S. military officials said during a Baghdad news conference Wednesday.

After conferring with top administration officials and senior Iraqi authorities, Bush last week announced a temporary increase, or surge, of about 21,000 U.S. Soldiers and Marines to help dampen sectarian and insurgent violence in Iraq's capital city and parts of Anbar province in the western part of the country.

"This plan is different in that there is a strong political commitment from the government of Iraq," Navy

Army sees 20 percent reduction in accident fatalities

U.S. ARMY COMBAT READINESS CENTER

FORT RUCKER, Ala. — The Army achieved a 20-percent reduction in accident fatalities in fiscal 2006 according to a recent report on safety, available at <https://cra.army.mil/Report/Fy06yearend.doc>.

Driving mishaps were the leading category of accidental fatalities. Although driving fatalities decreased by 13 percent in fiscal 2006 compared to fiscal 2005, the category still represented 65 percent of the Army's accident-related fatalities.

"What is never acceptable is the loss of a Soldier (or Soldiers) to preventable accidents," said Brig. Gen. William H. Forrester, director of Army Safety and commanding general of the U.S. Army Combat Readiness Center.

Fort Benning Tax Center opens for business

Free tax services for Soldiers, retirees, family members

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

Soldiers and volunteers with the Fort Benning Tax Center gathered Wednesday to officially open the center for tax season.

Center volunteers fill out and file taxes free of charge for Soldiers, family members and retirees.

Col. David Ling, Fort Benning's chief of staff, thanked the staff for their service, calling the tax center a great asset for the Fort Benning community.

Volunteering with the tax center is a "perfect fit" for accounting student Michelle Patterson, who is volunteering for the first time this year.

"Other tax services have on-the-job training opportunities, but they cost around $1,000," Patterson said. "This is free training straight from the IRS. With this, I get to help people. Even though I've taken college courses on taxes, I learned a lot from the Tax Center's classes. And if I have any problems I can get plenty of support here."

All of the volunteers are certified by the IRS to file basic, intermediate and military taxes. The Alabama and Georgia Departments of Revenue supply supplementary training, but the volunteers can file any state's taxes. Soldiers who did not file their 2005 taxes can file for their 2005 refund at the same time.

The taxes are filed electronically and Tax Center customers usually get their refunds in about seven business days, said Capt. Gabriel Mendel, Legal Assistance Attorney, Office of the Staff Judge Advocate.

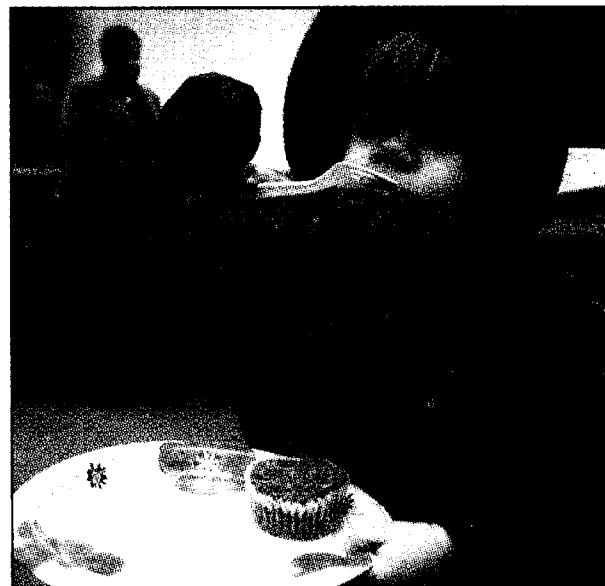

Retired Master Sgt. Bruce Ross is also a first-time volunteer. Ross was born at Fort Benning and stationed here twice before retiring in 1966. He and his wife recently returned for the warm weather and their health, he said. He's excited to get to help young Soldiers and their families.

"My wife and I volunteer wherever we go," Ross said. "It's a way we can give back to other people. At first I was concerned about learning to use the computer program, but now I wish I could buy it to do my taxes at home."

The Tax Center is located in Room G131A in Building 1678 on Ingersoll Avenue, across from the movie theater. Service is on a walk-in basis. The hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays, and 10:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Thursdays. The center will close April 16.

Soldiers, family members and retirees should bring the following with them to the Tax Center:

- all tax-related items including W-2s, 1099s and 1098s,
- military ID,
- Social Security cards for all dependants,

Annette Fournier

Emily Landes was not so concerned with the Fort Benning Tax Center opening, as she was with the treats available to thank the volunteers. The 2-year-old attended the opening with her mother, Sandy Landes, volunteer coordinator with Army Community Service.

- power of attorney (if needed),
- a voided check if desiring direct deposit.

For more information, contact the Tax Center at 545-4267.

Annual Women's Conference set for March 14

Alston returns to headline event, motivate audience to 'Be the best'

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Harvey Alston looks forward to meeting you. He looks forward to thanking you for supporting the troops, for taking care of their families so they can take care of business. It's a business too much of the country takes for granted, Alston said.

He said it Thursday morning, as he sat in his office in Westerville, Ohio, and planned a return trip to Fort Benning, where he'll again headline the annual Women's Conference March 14.

Alston is a nationally recognized motivational speaker, who uses humor and straight talk to drive home his message. This time around, the message is "Be the best," Alston said.

"It's about staying focused on the goal, doing your best to make the world a better place.

"It's about supporting those who sacrifice so much of their personal lives to fight for this country," said Alston, who spoke at the women's conference three years ago.

"I'm there to tell my audience they are not alone," he said. "There are a lot of us out there who appreciate their sacrifices."

The conference, from 7:30 a.m. until 3:30 p.m. at the Benning Club, will include workshops on beading, starting a home business, skin care, organization, massage, swing dancing and more. Lunch will be served at 11 a.m.

Vendors will include representatives from local specialty shops, day spas and home-based businesses.

Enrollment in the conference is limited to the first 300 register. Participants must register by March 1.

Pick up a registration form at the Benning Club, Little Caesars, CB&T, the Thrift Shop or Bit of Benning. Forms can also be downloaded from www.benningmwr.com.

The conference fee, $17, includes child care and meals.

Notes on a presidential visit

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

• Who's that guy pointing? The fellow out in front of Infantry Hall, directing folks away from Infantry Hall, was originally dubbed The Infantryman. In 1974, I think it was, President Gerald Ford visited the post and referred to it as the "Follow Me" statue. From that day forth, it was called The Follow Me Statue. Such is the power of the president — the power to capitalize. He didn't say, "From here on out, he'll be the Follow Me statue," or "I hereby christen you the Follow Me Man." No, he casually referred to it as the "Follow Me" statue, and it stuck.

So I trained my ear on President Bush the whole time he was here, just in case he pointed toward the statue formerly known as The Infantryman and said, "Hey, that's a Really Cool Statue," or "Who's that Guy Pointing?" Can you imagine? VIPs who speak at graduations would be presented a Really Cool Statue. Visitors would know they'd arrived when they saw The Guy Pointing Statue. It's fun to think about.

• I rode in the motorcade.

I'm just telling you because everybody else in the whole world already knows, and it's not right to leave you out of the loop. I called almost every last one of them from the president's motorcade. Which I was riding in.

Let's you think I'm shallow, let me add that I was not the only one impressing friends and family with the fact that I was, well, you know. And I wasn't the only one leaving out the details that might un-impress them, like the fact that we, the press pool, were actually crammed in a van at the back of a very long line, about six cars behind the SWAT truck, eight cars behind a string of cars carrying Secret Service men, and 15 cars behind the Little Caesars delivery guy, who will from here on out be known as The Little Caesars Delivery Guy.

Though we, the Bayonet staff, local and semi-local media, were officially attached to the White House Press Pool, we didn't ride in the same van. They were way up in front of us. But there were a couple of big time Atlanta-type reporters among us. And for the better part of the morning, we all played it cool. We local hicks didn't want to be recognized as local hicks, and the Atlanta-types were afraid someone would recognize them as closet hicks and send them back to the sticks. So we all played it cool.

Until we had most of the day behind us, and we realized we were running out of time to experience the thrill of calling someone from the presidential motorcade to gloat.

True, not everyone was as obvious as I was when I started dialing random numbers. Mostly they started their conversations with what the folks on the other end might perceive as a legitimate excuse for a phone call.

Like the guy beside me who insisted on being put on speaker so the whole office could hear him. "Hey folks, just wanted to check in with you all to make sure someone refills the paper towels in the men's room. I'll be out all day ... with the president."

• Six degrees of separation.

One of the people I didn't call was my cousin in Florida. I didn't call her, because she called me before I had the chance. Just to chat, you know. So I dropped my voice really low and whispered, "Can I call you back? I'm with the president." He was nowhere around at that moment — I was sequestered with the media — and there was absolutely no reason to whisper, but it seemed more impressive that way.

My cousin called her mother, my aunt, as soon as we got off the phone, to tell her I was with the president. (I wonder if she whispered?) My aunt was on the other line with my other cousin, so she told her, Other Cousin, that I was with the president. Other Cousin was at a restaurant, where she ran in to my sister-in-law, who called me to say, "Hey, I heard you're with the president."

"Shhhh," I said, "can you keep it down? I don't want everybody to know."

• But seriously, folks.

It's fun to laugh and make light of what was really an awesome, humbling experience. You don't have to be the president's biggest fan ... Never mind, you're not the president's biggest fan — my niece Melody is. She's 18 and thinks President Bush is a rock star. She's the first one I called from the motorcade. She was far more thrilled for me than I was thrilled for me. In that instant, I would've given anything to change places with her, to let Melody be a part of that great day.

Then there were the folks who came out to watch the president pass by. They stood in clusters along the road, waving and taking pictures. Some of them carried flags.

They waved until the whole procession passed, long after the president's limo was out of sight. Our windows were tinted, so maybe they thought we were important people. I thought they were really important people.

Some of the most important people didn't show their faces that day. They are my co-workers, Lori, Neill and Rachel — the ones who worked overtime the day the president came to town so that the rest of us could follow him around like groupies with the benefit of a byline. They worked really hard that day to make the rest of us look good. Here at Team Bayonet, they're the MVPs, and an MVP trumps a VIP anytime.

Gold Star mom recounts meeting with Bush

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Deborah Tainsh

My husband, retired Marine Corps Sgt. Maj. David Tainsh, and I, parents of fallen hero Army Sgt.

Patrick Tainsh, were invited to meet President Bush at Fort Benning. Our Gold Star families, the term given to those who lost a loved one in war, received five-star treatment from Fort Benning staff.

We were organized into three groups and led to separate rooms. Dave and I joined family members representing: Seaman Zachary Alday, Sgt. 1st Class Victor Anderson, Spc. Stephen D. Hiller, Sgt. 1st Class David Salie, Spc. Justin Johnson, Maj. Douglas Sloan, Sgt. Charles Wilkerson, and Spc. Jacques Brunson.

When a Secret Service agent announced the president, we all stood. I wasn't star struck, but I found myself in momentary disbelief that we were about to meet the most powerful leader of the world. No one there ever wanted to meet our president because a loved one had died in war. It reaffirmed the reality that our Patrick was never coming home.

The president's first words were: "Thank you for coming today. I am here to honor your loved ones, America's heroes. If I had not believed the mission a right and just cause, I would never have sent your loved one into harm's way. It'll be hard for me not to shed tears with you. I'm here as long as you need me, to talk, give or accept hugs, and sign anything you'd like for me to sign. Just don't ask me to sing, because I can't sing."

With that, we all laughed and he turned to the family nearest him and they told him about their son. After chatting a few moments, Mr. Brunson said, "Mr. President, I'd like to say a prayer for you."

Everyone stood as he held the president's hand and said a prayer for him, our nation, our troops and the people of Iraq.

Mom Jan Johnson told the president that she belonged to a prayer group that prays constantly for him. President Bush said, "I am blessed to be the only leader in the world who is privileged to have the people of his country constantly praying for him. Laura and I feel your prayers, they give us strength. We thank you."

Then he said he often wanted to ask someone like the leader of China if his people ever prayed for him, but he figured it wouldn't go over too well. Again we all laughed.

Before the president approached Dave and me, Dad Joe Johnson shook the president's hand and said, "Sir, I support your decisions. I served in Iraq for a year after our son's death. We need the troops. We need to complete the mission. It's worth it."

After a final hug and handshake with the Johnsons, President Bush stepped in front of us. Dave introduced himself and spoke about Patrick.

The president gave me a bear hug and kiss on the side of the face. I held in my hands Patrick's military-issued notebook. I told the president I had brought a notebook with letters of prayers and support from other Gold Star parents across the nation. I showed him Patrick's notebook.

"This is the book our son wrote in while in Iraq, and this is the letter he left us," I said.

"In this letter he states that he hopes the Iraqi people will someday experience the same freedoms he was blessed to experience, that it was an honor to live, fight and die with an American flag on his shoulder. He tells how he cried for the children because he didn't have food and water for them. He said they were worth the fight."

I saw President Bush fighting back tears. My voice broke as I pointed to the last words on the page: "Love, your son, Patrick."

"Mr. President, would you please write a note to Patrick?" I asked. "Tell him you won't let him down."

I handed him the book and a pen, and he wrote: Patrick, thank you for your courage. I won't let you down. George W. Bush.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR
Uncommon patriotism

My friend, Col. Charlie Jones, deployed to Iraq last spring with his son. He returned Sept. 26 to bury him.

On Sept. 30, my wife, Carol, and I went to Loudon, Ky., to attend the funeral of 29-year-old Sgt. 1st Class Jason Jones. We arrived early, took a moment to remember Jason, and walked outside. I was excited to see about 500 bikers with American flags, members of the Patriot Guard Riders. They had mobilized to defend our hero's honor and prevent those who wanted to protest from dishonoring him. I am sure, resting quietly, all of our fallen comrades looked down that day. Here's what they saw:

• So many people. Some attended the funeral, and others just stood outside the funeral home showing the American flag in support of this fallen Soldier.

• A Gold Star mother paying homage to Charlie's son. What a painful memory that must have been for her.

• The citizens of Kentucky who pulled over on the side of the road as the funeral procession passed.

• The Kentucky governor who sat in a pew very inconspicuously, there to support the family.

• The bikers and other supporters who, by their sheer numbers, blocked out the view of the protestors.

• The professionalism of the Kentucky National Guard Soldiers and their leaders who took care of the family, offered the 21-gun salute and played Taps.

• A mother out on the front porch, saluting every car as it passed. Why did she do this, I wondered? Seems to me she either has a son over there or knows what it means to sacrifice.

• A boy with a crew cut, about 9 or 10 years old, holding a hand over his heart as the procession neared the cemetery.

I am satisfied now that patriotism is alive and well.

After the funeral, I told Charlie I was angry that protestors had come. He replied, "Sam, it just tells me that what we are doing is right."

Please continue to support our troops and pray for them often. They give us the opportunity to sleep through the night without worry.

Fort Benning honors Martin Luther King Jr.

Speaker says military exemplifies King's vision of integrated society

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

The president of the Georgia State Conference of the NAACP, Edward O. DuBose, spoke at Fort Benning Jan. 11 for the commemorative service in honor of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

Fort Benning's Equal Opportunity Office hosted the service, the theme of which was "Remember! Act! Celebrate! A day on, not a day off."

DuBose spoke of King as a man of action and told the audience that we all have "a fundamental duty to guard against injustice."

Those who do nothing are just as guilty as those who commit the crime, he said.

"We must always remember we hold each other's destiny in our hands," DuBose said.

DuBose was born and raised in Atlanta, and served in the Army for 21 years. Currently a Columbus resident, he served at Fort Benning.

"If you want to look at a vision of his dream of an integrated society, look at the military," DuBose said.

"As a little boy, I idolized Martin Luther King. I patterned my life after him."

He became president of the Georgia State Conference National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in October.

DuBose previously served as the second vice president of the state conference, from October 2000 to October 2005, and the president of the Columbus NAACP from June 1997 to January 2005.

DuBose concluded his speech by asking the audience to remember the past, celebrate freedom and ask, "What are you doing for others?"

Danny Whitehead, who works in Fort Benning's Directorate of Public Works, recited King's I See the Promised Land speech, a speech that King gave in Memphis, Tenn., on April 3, 1968, the day before he was killed.

Whitehead got a standing ovation at the end of the rendition.

"It's non-violence or non-existence,"

If you want to look at a vision of (Martin Luther King Jr.'s) dream of an integrated society, look at the military.

— Edward O. DuBose, president, Georgia State Conference of the NAACP

Whitehead said while giving King's speech. "We have an opportunity to make America a better nation."

"If you hadn't known better, you would have thought you were (in Memphis)," Col. David Ling, chief of staff, said about Whitehead's portrayal of King.

King practiced and encouraged non-violent resistance and looked to Gandhi to discover a method of social reform, said Sgt. Latisha Casey, the master of ceremony from the 3rd Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment.

Still I Rise, a poem by Maya Angelou, was read by Dacia Chandler, and Myra Chandler Jackson signed Lift Every Voice.

The final performance of the service was a rendition of Yolanda Adams' Still I Rise sung by Celeste Mabry Lee. Lee was accompanied by an interpretive dance performed by Maiya Lynne Mabry and Shakevia Thomas.

Defense Authorization Act increases death benefits

3,500 families may be eligible for retroactive gratuity

FAMILIES FIRST CASUALTY
CALL CENTER

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Family members of fallen Soldiers may be eligible for additional benefits since the president signed the National Defense Authorization Act 2006 increasing the death gratuity to a total of $100,000 for all deaths retroactive to Oct. 7, 2001 through Jan. 5, 2006.

This legislation also provides an additional enhanced death benefit in the amount of $150,000 for any active duty deaths which occurred between Oct. 7, 2001 and Aug. 31, 2005.

"Family members of fallen Soldiers make great sacrifices on a daily basis and have suffered the ultimate loss. No amount of money can compensate these families for the loss of their loved ones," said Lt. Col. Robert Deckard, who leads the Army Families First Casualty Call Center (FFCCC) under the Army Casualty and Mortuary Affairs Operations Center. "This is an entitlement that our extended family members are due."

FFCCC has identified 3,500 families who may be eligible for the enhanced death benefits and is attempting to contact these family members to notify them of their potential eligibility.

Family members of fallen Soldiers make great sacrifices on a daily basis and have suffered the ultimate loss. No amount of money can compensate these families for the loss of their loved ones.

— Lt. Col. Robert Deckard, FFCCC

Beneficiaries who believe they qualify may also contact FFCCC to verify eligibility, obtain the proper forms and receive assistance with completing and submitting their claim to the Defense Finance Accounting Service. As a result of this combined outreach effort, more than 90 percent of eligible beneficiaries have been paid.

The FFCCC was established to assist surviving family members of deceased Soldiers. The mission of FFCCC is to provide long-term support and advocacy and offer resolutions to the families of fallen Soldiers by partnering with private and public organizations in addition to various outreach groups.

Families of fallen Soldiers may contact the FFCCC for further information concerning eligibility criteria. For more information or questions regarding enhanced death benefits, support and referral information is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week by calling toll-free 866-272-5841 or by visiting FFCCC online at www.armyfamiliesfirst.army.mil.

DoD releases 2005 health survey results

Survey measured use of alcohol, illegal drugs, tobacco

AFNEWS

WASHINGTON — The Department of Defense announced the results of its "2005 Survey of Health Related Behaviors Among Active Duty Military Personnel" Jan. 12.

The findings show notable decreases in the use of cigarettes and illegal drugs since initiation of the surveys in 1980 and progress toward meeting selected Healthy People 2010 objectives.

The 2005 survey, however, revealed rates of heavy drinking remain elevated, especially among young people, use of smokeless tobacco has increased, and even though most service members engage in moderate or vigorous exercise, more of them meet criteria for being overweight.

Military health 'quite good'

The 2005 survey indicates the majority of service members, although under stress during the current wartime environment, use positive coping mechanisms.

"These survey findings provide very useful information for the department to target programs that continue to enhance the physical and mental well being of our troops," said Dr. William Winkenwerder Jr., assistant secretary of defense for health affairs.

"I am pleased, and even a little surprised, that despite the stresses of war and ongoing deployments, nearly all indicators of service members' health and well-being continue to be quite good compared with civilian populations," Winkenwerder said.

This is the ninth survey in the series asking active-duty service members about lifestyle and health-related behaviors.

In addition to substance use, the survey also assesses national health status goals from the Department of Health and Human Services' Healthy People 2010 objectives, nutrition and weight management measures, mental well-being of the force and deployment issues.

More than 16,000 service members, randomly selected to represent men and women in all pay grades of the active force throughout the world, completed the survey.

When comparing the 2005 findings to earlier survey results, there were tremendous improvements and issues of concern.

Substance abuse

Between 1980 and 1998, the surveys show a continuing decline in the use of illegal drugs and cigarettes and an increase in alcohol abstainers or light drinkers among military personnel.

- Illegal drug use decreased from the 1980 survey, when 27.6 percent of active duty service members acknowledged use of illegal drugs during the month prior to being questioned. In 2002, only 3.4 percent reported using illegal drugs. The 2005 estimates cannot be compared to those in prior years, because wording in some drug use questions was modified.

- Heavy drinking (five or more drinks per occasion at least once a week) declined from 20.8 percent in 1980 to 15.4 percent in 1998, but rose to 18.1 percent in 2002 but declined slightly in 2005 (18.5 percent).

- Cigarette smoking declined from 51 percent in 1980 to 29.9 percent in 1998, increased significantly to 33.8 percent in 2002 and was 32.2 percent in 2005, according to the survey.

- Heavy cigarette smoking (one or more packs per day), showed a steady decline from 1980 (34.2 percent) to 2002 (13.1 percent) and a further significant decrease from 2002 to 2005 (11.1 percent).

- Smokeless tobacco use showed a small increase from 2002 (12.2 percent) to 2005 (14.1 percent).

Mental health

The 2005 survey is the first in the series to evaluate behaviors related to mental well-being, work stress and family stress associated with deployment to Iraq, Afghanistan and other theaters, Winkenwerder said.

- Post traumatic stress disorder symptoms in the DoD population (as measured by a self-report screener) were 6.7 percent for total DoD and ranged from 3.7 percent to 9.3 percent for each service.

- An estimated 8.1 percent met screening criteria for further evaluation for serious psychological distress.

- Personnel deployed between 2002 to 2005 had different rates than those who did not deploy on certain issues. Service members who had deployed showed higher rates of work and family stress; higher rates of heavy alcohol use, cigarette use and illicit drug use; and a higher rate met criteria for depression, anxiety and PTSD symptoms.

- Self-reported mental health did not differ significantly between those who deployed to operations Iraqi Freedom or Enduring Freedom and those who did not serve in an operational theater.

"It is important to remember the results come from self-reported data and may differ from information in official records or other data sources," Winkenwerder said. "These screening questions do not represent a formal clinical diagnostic evaluation, but suggest some of our personnel should be encouraged to obtain more evaluation."

Stress linked to substance abuse

Statistically significant relations were observed among heavy alcohol use, stress and would help reduce the other.

Survey aims to improve health

DoD continually monitors the general health of its members, their modifiable lifestyle behaviors and the effects of combat and operational-related stressors through the DoD level programs such as: Defense Lifestyle Assessment Program, deployment health programs and Healthy Choices for Life initiatives. Each service also has comprehensive programs in place to help returning service members and their families deal with their overall physical and mental health, especially with deployment experiences.

"We have continued this survey and initiated many new healthy lifestyle programs because the military health system and our defense

Despite the stresses of war and ongoing deployments, nearly all indicators of service members' health and well-being continue to be quite good compared with civilian populations.

— Dr. William Winkenwerder Jr., assistant secretary of defense for health affairs mental health issues.

- Heavy users of alcohol reported more problems than abstainers with stress at work (41.1 percent vs. 28.4 percent) or in their family (24.7 percent vs. 15.3 percent); were more likely to meet screening criteria for anxiety (17.5 percent vs. 10.1 percent) and depression (31.2 percent vs. 19.1 percent); and reported more limitations in activities as a result of poor mental health (4.8 percent vs. 2.0 percent).

- Heavy drinkers were also more likely than those who drank less to meet the criteria for further evaluation for serious mental disorders and reported to have a history of suicidal ideation or physical or sexual abuse.

However, because the survey is cross-sectional data, DoD officials are unable to ascertain which behavior (the heavy alcohol use or the mental health problems) came first, but this association points to potential intervention strategies in which reducing one leaders are committed to programs that improve healthy behaviors and reduce avoidable stress," Winkenwerder said. "And we will continue to do so in the future."

In 2005, for example, DoD expanded the scope of the active duty surveys to include the National Guard and Reserve, as well as other special studies, the first of which is examining unit-level influences on alcohol and tobacco use.

DoD and Tricare also launched the Healthy Choices for Life initiative, focusing on the key health issues of weight management, tobacco cessation and reducing alcohol abuse, along with measuring their costs.

In addition, the secretary of defense has made safety, including safe practices and behaviors to reduce injuries and accidents, a top priority with the establishment of the Defense Safety Oversight Council. The 2005 survey was conducted independently under contract by RTI International.

Military Benefit Association supports our troops and provides security for military families.

For 50 years, Military Benefit Association (MBA) has sponsored affordable group life insurance for its members and their families.

With over 110,000 members, MBA is among the nation's largest non-profit military associations. Military servicemembers join MBA for its excellent insurance plans, including separate spouse coverage up to $250,000, child coverage options, and for the financial and lifestyle benefits membership offers.

Families Depend Upon MBA.

As we have expanded our membership programs, we have also experienced growth in the amount of paid claims. Since March 2003, MBA-sponsored group life insurance has paid over $18 million in claims to families of MBA members lost in military hostilities in Iraq and Afghanistan. This money helped the families of our members continue their lives during a difficult period.

MBA offers a selection of valuable benefits to promote the economic interests and improve the quality of life of our members and their families, including the MBA Scholarship Program which awards five $2,000 scholarships annually to dependent children of members. Other programs offer car rental discounts; travel assistance and travel discounts; savings on medical services, supplies and equipment; and assistance with VA home financing through VALoans.com.

MBA Term 90 group life insurance has premium rates which are competitive with SGLI. More importantly, this coverage stays with you when you leave the military. You do not have to convert to the more expensive VGLI plan.

When you purchase MBA-sponsored group life insurance coverage, you join a community of people who share your interests. If you would like more information about MBA and the insurance plans it sponsors, please call us:

RIVERWALK CLOSURE

The Fort Benning Riverwalk between the access control point and 10th Mountain Division Road (about one half-mile) will be closed beginning Monday through March 19.

This closure is necessary for Columbus Water Works to install new underground sewer lines.

All lanes of traffic on Benning Boulevard will remain open.

ARMY SEEKS RECOMMENDATIONS

The Army is accepting design ideas through March 31 for the shoulder sleeve insignia, distinctive unit insignia and motto for the Maneuver Center of Excellence.

Soldiers directly assigned to the MCOE will wear the new insignia.

Requirements include a clear, hand-drawn or electronic sketch of the shoulder sleeve insignia, distinctive unit insignia and a short, succinct motto.

The motto must be written in English and is limited to 26 characters (letters and spaces).

Individuals may provide a suggestion for just one or two of the desired items if they prefer.

All submissions must include name, phone number, e-mail address and mailing address of the individual submitting the designs and motto.

Submissions can be sent via e-mail to MCOE_Insignia_Suggestions@knox.army.mil or Headquarters, U.S. Army Infantry Center, ATTN: ATSH-ATH, Room 451, Fort Benning, Ga., 31905-5000.

ARMY TRAFFIC SAFETY TRAINING PROGRAM

The local hazard class portion of the Army Traffic Safety Training Program is scheduled for 1:30 and 3:30 p.m. Wednesday and Jan. 31.

82nd arrives in Kuwait

The 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division, began arriving in Kuwait last week. They will assume the role of quick reaction force for Multi-National Force-Iraq.

The 2nd BCT's mission has been to deploy worldwide on short notice for full-scale military operations.

Since the beginning of the Global War on Terrorism, the 2nd BCT has had six short-notice deployments. This latest deployment order came Dec. 27.

The brigade deployed about 3,000 paratroopers, 300 containers of equipment and 100 vehicles to Kuwait.

Archaeologist digs for truth

U.S. Army Corps of Engineers archaeologist Dr. Michael Trimble has spent 17 months in Iraq digging for the truth in the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Iraqis allegedly murdered by former dictator Saddam Hussein and his regime.

On Nov. 30, 2006, Trimble testified during Hussein's trial on his findings at the mass graves.

Trimble was questioned for an hour, even being asked questions by Hussein himself.

Trimble's ultimate goal is to have the exhumed remains identified and returned to their families.

Iraq-born Soldier serves both countries

Spc. Jotyar Tile fled Iraq in 1992 and came to the U.S. not speaking any English. He eventually got a job but really wanted to give back to the U.S. and join the Army. Through a friend, he found out he could join under a special program created for allowing native-language speakers to join as interpreters.

Tile then found out he would be deployed to Afghanistan, and told his commander that he would do his duty as a Soldier, but he did not know the dialects of that region.

He was eventually reassigned to a unit in Iraq. In Iraq, he is only about an hour from his hometown, where his family still lives.

Surge: To stabilize Baghdad, western Iraq

Rear Adm. Mark I. Fox, acting Multinational Force Iraq spokesman, told reporters. "There is more Iraqi buy-in. The plan is Iraqi-conceived and Iraqi-led."

Training Iraqi military and police so they can ultimately assume responsibility for security in their country remains the essential U.S. task in Iraq, Fox said.

"This institutional training mission is a critical component of our strategy to assist the Iraqis in creating and maintaining a viable and professional military capability," Fox said.

Fox was accompanied by Army Brig. Gen. Terry Wolff, commander of the coalition military assistance training team that advises Iraqi army and navy force training.

Wolff works for Army Lt. Gen. Martin Dempsey, the commander of Multinational Security Transition Command

Iraq. Plans are for all 10 Iraqi army divisions to come under direct Iraqi government control by June.

There are now about 327,000 trained and equipped Iraqi military members and police, Wolff said.

The goal is to increase the Iraqi military from 135,000 to 155,000 members by the end of the year.

"The goal of this effort is to replenish the losses that have occurred within their formations," Wolff said, and to bring up total Iraqi military strength to 110 percent.

Iraqi trainers with U.S. advisors are providing military instruction to new soldiers and sailors and senior and junior leaders at seven training sites located across the country, Wolff said.

American advisors also are assisting the Iraqis in standing up their military logistics capabilities, Wolff said.

"This is about putting in place the infrastructure to sustain their feeding, fueling, arming, fixing and maintaining of that force," Wolff said, including the improvement of existing medical and supply depot facilities.

Fielding a reporter's concern that some Iraqi military units may be infiltrated by members of anti-coalition militia, Wolff said that Iraqi officials have been aggressive in addressing that issue.

Suspect or incompetent leaders are removed, he said, while problem units are given remedial training.

"It's a combination of leadership and training," Wolff said.

"Good leadership, good training tends to be the glue that holds units together.

"And so, where units perform poorly, invariably, you can go back to one of those two problems," Wolff said.

Report: Shows accident fatalities decreasing

To address trends in privately owned vehicle accidents, the Army has implemented such initiatives as the Army Safety Management Information System (version two), the Motorcycle Mentorship Program and the Driving as a Life Skill Program.

"Over the past two years, ASMS-2 users were three times less likely to be involved in a fatal POV accident than non-ASMS users," Forrester said.

"However, the value of the tool itself is not in the computer online input, it is in the one-on-one interaction between the Soldier and his supervisor.

"It, again, comes down to leader engagement at all echelons that saves lives," Forrester said.

The Army Readiness Assessment Program offers commanders a collective view of their units' climate and its overall safety performance.

This Web-based survey identifies battalion-level units that are most at risk for mishaps, and identifies areas at which leaders should focus their efforts.

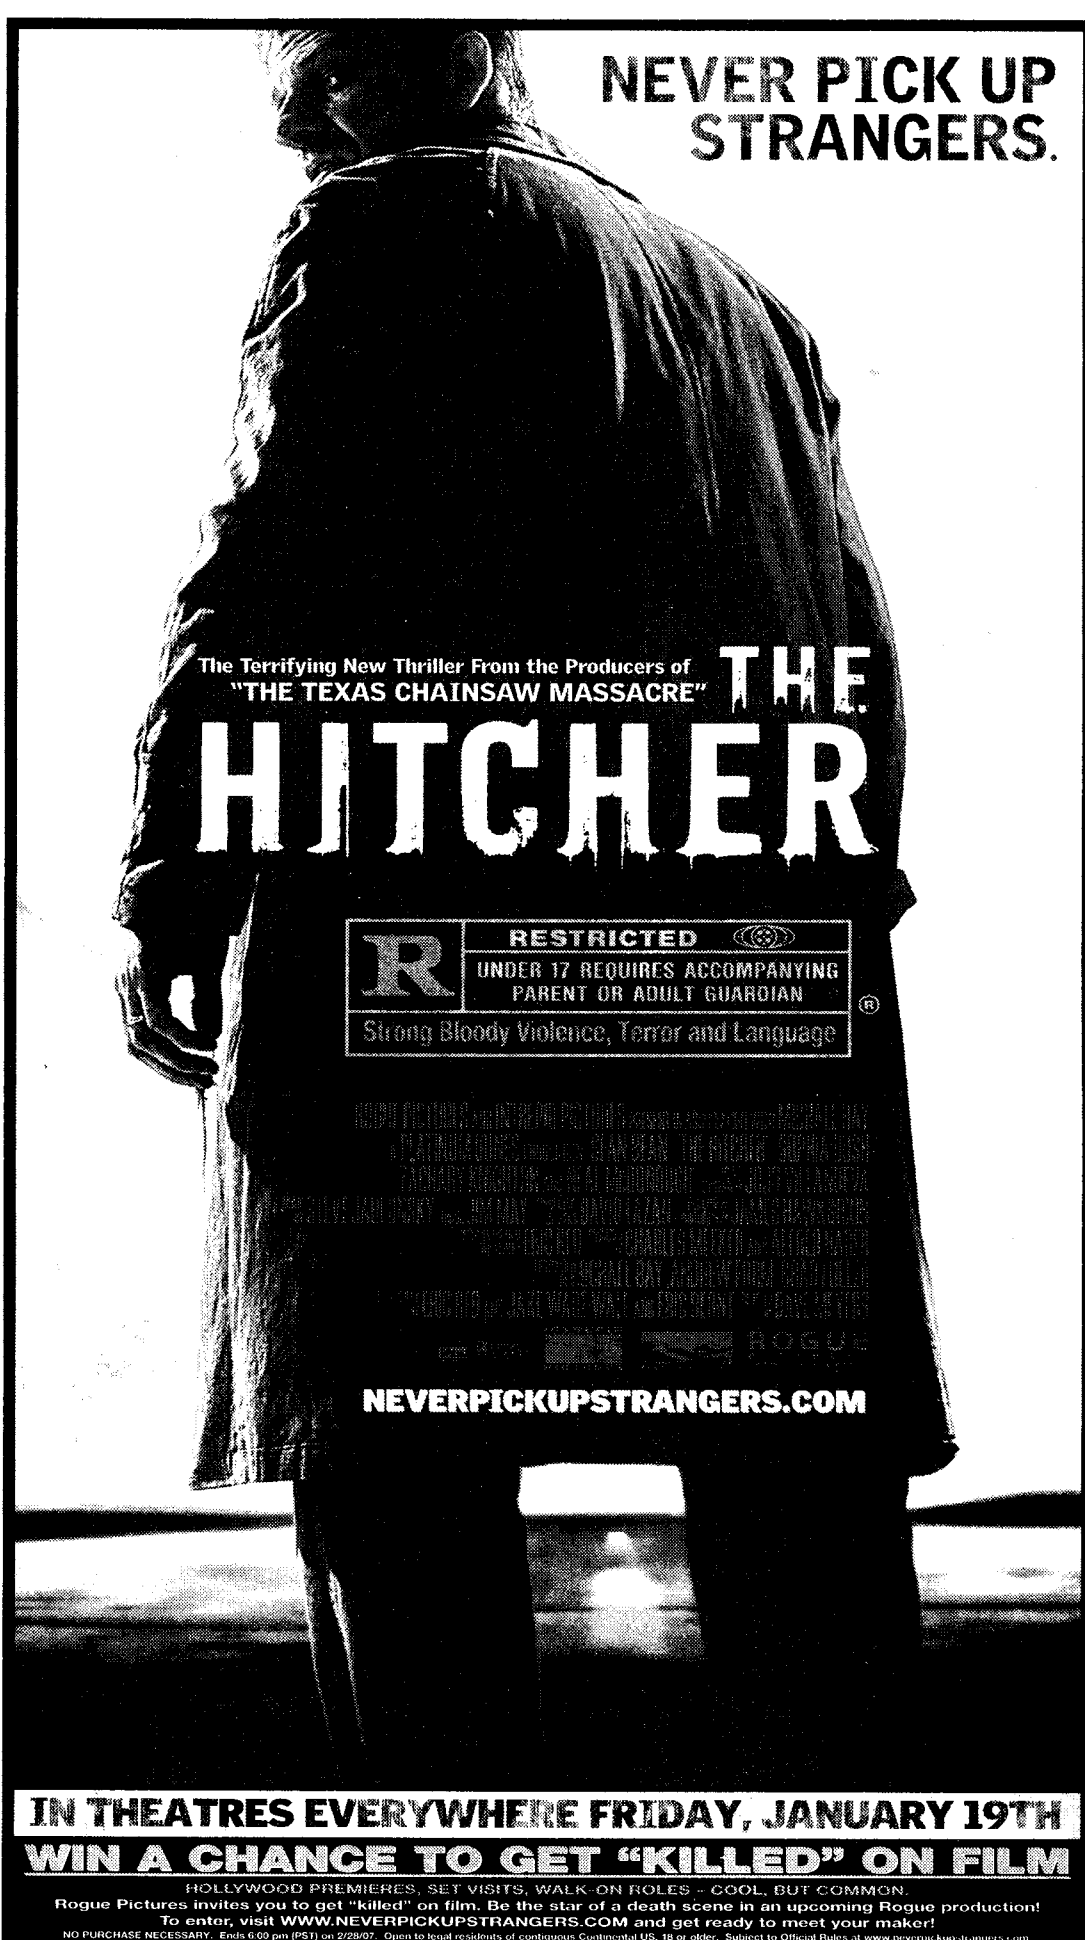

ARAP statistics over the past eight months show that battalions scoring in the lower quartile are 50 percent more likely to experience a Class-A mishap than those scoring in the top quartile.

"The results from safety programs and tools such as ARAP arm leadership with the information and action steps they need to then use on points of failure within their formations," Forrester said.

"This provides leadership and commanders the ability to adjust safety climate, risk management practices, leadership, and processes that enhance high performance in their formation and decrease loss overall within the Army," Forrester said.

According to the Army Safety and Occupational Health Strategic Plan issued by Secretary of the Army Francis Harvey and Army Chief of Staff Gen. Peter J. Schoomaker, the Army goal is to reduce accident rates by 75 percent by fiscal 2008, using fiscal 2002 as the baseline.

Commander in chief spends time with Soldiers

Bush announces new plan for Iraq and visits Benning

Commander in Chief, President George W. Bush visited Fort Benning Jan. 11.

During his visit, he dined with 300 Soldiers and family members at Freedom Hall. There he talked about his new plan for Iraq.

Bush watched an Airborne 5000 demonstration, and took a close look at a Stryker and a Bradley fighting vehicle at Eubanks Field.

Bush also spent several hours at the Benning Club with Gold Star families who lost their Soldiers in combat. The meeting was closed to the press.

Before departing from Lawson Army Airfield, the president met with hundreds of Soldiers, including basic trainees and officer candidates.

This was the first presidential visit to post in more than a decade.

Bush holds a baton given to him by Fort Benning's Silver Wings parachute demonstration team. The tradition of the baton started when two skydivers jumped from separate airplanes and passed the baton in mid air to prove that two jumpers could touch during a freefall. The eight sides of the baton represents the eight pieces of equipment a Silver Wings paratrooper uses during a demonstration.

President Bush dined with 300 Soldiers and family members at Lawson Army Airfield's Freedom Hall. There he outlined his new strategy for operations in Iraq. Bush thanked the Soldiers and their families for what he called a "tradition of service and sacrifice." His speech was met with a standing ovation.

Bush met with Marines and hundreds of Soldiers during his daylong tour of Fort Benning's Main Post. "I'm proud of you," he told the Airborne cadre he met with on Eubanks Field.

3rd BCT families ready for deployment

Troops to spend month at National Training Center to prep for March deployment to Iraq

3RD BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE

Spc. Ben Hutto

The 3rd Brigade Combat Team continued to prepare for their up-coming deployment by having their first Family Readiness Group "Round Up" of the year at the Kelley Hill Recreation Center Jan. 9.

The commander of the 3rd BCT, Col. Wayne Grigsby Jr., met with the families of the Sledgehammer Brigade to keep them informed.

The Commander went over the tentative plan of deployment and the emergency leave policies so everyone would know what they needed to do to prepare for the deployment.

Maj. David Fivecoat, the S-3 officer of the 3rd Brigade, outlined the training plan for the coming months and presented a tentative time line of events. But things could change at any moment, Fivecoat said, and Soldiers and families of the 3rd BCT should be flexible.

Grigsby talked about what the Brigade would do at the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, Calif.

"The entire Army and all its resources will be focused on this Brigade Combat Team and making it better for combat operations for those thirty days," said Grigsby.

The deployment to NTC will also give the FRG's a chance to rehearse for the deployment, he said.

"Anytime after we return from the National Training Center, we could deploy," Grigsby said. "I want to make sure we are clear on that. We will only give you facts; rumors are a no-go."

It's important to keep families informed, said Lt. Col. Richard Quagliata, the rear detachment commander for the 3rd BCT. He hopes families stay close to Fort Benning and Columbus during the deployment.

"It is much easier provide communication if you are close," said Quagliata. "We always prefer face to face communication because there is less chance the message will be misinterpreted."

This is all about taking care of the individual Soldiers and their families. The foundation of this Brigade Combat Team is our families.

— Col. Wayne Grigsby Jr., commander, 3rd BCT

Grigsby recognized the contributions of FRG members and welcomed new spouses.

"This group has grown fifty percent (since the last FRG meeting in October) because we have a great organization that cares about our most important resource, the individual Soldier. This is all about taking care of the individual Soldiers and their families. The foundation of this Brigade Combat Team is our families."

General praises new operational freedom in Baghdad

Military operations will no longer have geographic, political or sectarian group constraints

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

John. J. Kruzel

WASHINGTON — The most important component of President Bush's strategy to stabilize Iraq is an expanded freedom of operations in Baghdad, the chief operations officer for the Joint Staff said Thursday.

Iraq's government has renewed its commitment to prevent political constraints from impeding progress in the capital, Army Lt. Gen. Douglas E. Lute said in an interview.

"The Iraqi government has committed to a no-holds-barred approach to operations inside Baghdad," Lute said.

"(This means) there's no geographic constraint on military operations, and there's no political or sectarian group constraint on military operations."

He noted these things have constrained progress in earlier operations. Lute described Baghdad as "the center of gravity for Iraq," and said that progress in the capital represents greater progress in Iraq.

"As goes Baghdad, so goes Iraq," he said, "so that's really where our focus has been. It's not only the political capital of Iraq, but it's the center for media in Iraq, it's the economic center of Iraq and it's the religious center of Iraq," Lute said.

"The multiple of dimensions of Iraqi society come to bear on Baghdad proper," he said.

The new strategy "is an Iraqi plan; it was Iraqi conceived, it'll be Iraqi led," Lute said.

In addition to expanded freedom of operations, he said, the new Iraq strategy differs from past strategies in two fundamental ways.

"First, (Iraqis) have established unity of command over the city of Baghdad," Lute said. "They've placed one Iraqi general officer in charge ... of both the Ministry of Defense forces and Ministry of Interior.

They're committing three additional brigades of their own army to this effort. The six Iraqi army brigades that are in Baghdad today will be joined by three more.

— Lt. Gen. Douglas E. Lute

"This one three-star Iraqi general will be in charge of not only the Iraqi army but (also) the Iraqi police," he said.

"It will be very important to establish that one-man-in-charge approach to the very important problems of Baghdad," he said.

Another difference Lute described is the "plus-up" of Iraqi soldiers, a component of the new strategy to stabilize Iraq's capital city and parts of western Iraq.

"They're committing three additional brigades of their own army to this effort," Lute said.

"The six Iraqi army brigades that are in Baghdad today will be joined by three more," he said.

The three new strategic components of the Iraqi strategy will give "fresh promise" to security in Baghdad, Lute said.

Hall: New policies to relieve stress, promote unit cohesion

New DoD policy limits duration of call-ups for National Guard, Reserve Soldiers

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Donna Miles

WASHINGTON — The new Defense Department policy limiting the duration of call-ups to 12 months is already in effect for National Guard and Reserve Soldiers being ordered to active duty, the senior DoD reserve affairs official reported.

The new mobilization limits, announced Jan. 11, are designed to reduce stress on the force and keep Guardsmen and reservists from leaving the military, Thomas E. Hall, assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs, said during a joint interview with American Forces Press Service and the Pentagon Channel.

Hall said Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates' policy recognizes that the 18- to 24-month mobilizations many Guard and Reserve Soldiers faced were creating too heavy a burden.

Service members, as well as their families and employers, spoke, and Hall said the Defense Department listened.

"We have come to the conclusion that based on numerous inputs, that 18- to 21-months over a long war, over a career, is just too much," he said.

"It is over and above what employers and families and individuals will accept and still remain in the Guard and Reserve."

Hall said that while shortening mobilization times, the military is also working to stretch out the time between involuntary reserve-component call-ups.

DoD's goal is to give reserve-component members five years at home between one-year deployments. For active-duty troops, the goal is two years at home station after each one-year deployment.

Hall acknowledged that turnaround times for both active- and Reserve-component troops have frequently been far shorter — and that this needs to change.

"We recognize that we're getting to a situation where we needed to make sure we adequately spread the burden between the active, Guard and Reserve (force)," he said.

But in cases in which troops must deploy early or have their deployments expended — a situation Hall acknowledged will sometimes happen — he said he's all for a new plan to compensate the affected troops.

"We think it is quite reasonable that you should receive additional compensation, and that will soon be in place," Hall said.

Gates ordered DoD and the services to come up with a compensation plan for active, Guard and Reserve troops who face these circumstances.

Another new policy change — that Guard and Reserve troops will deploy as units rather than individuals — also is drawing wide approval, Hall said. The plan also calls for eliminating "cross-leveling," a practice used to fill manpower slots in deploying units.

Hall described the problem with cross-leveling. When a Reserve unit is identified for deployment but doesn't have all its positions filled, those gaps get filled by smaller units or individuals from other units. But when those other units get deployed, they now have gaps, too, because their troops are either deployed or just returned from a deployment.

"This just creates a ripple effect," Hall said.

The problem is particularly troublesome in the Army and Marine Corps, which tend to deploy their combat and combat-service-support elements as units, he said. The Air Force and Navy are more likely to mobilize individuals.

Under Gates' new policy, Army and Marine units will deploy as a whole.

"So, when your unit is called, if you are serving in that unit, you will go, even if you might have mobilized before," Hall said. "This will promote cohesion and will be a better planning factor."

Hall said the new policy measures already were under discussion before Gates took over the top Pentagon post, but that he quickly agreed they were needed to help reduce stress on the force. The new policy will go a long way

Guard and reserve troops will answer the call, just like our forefathers did, and we will fight and win this battle against the forces of international terror.

— Thomas Hall, assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs toward that goal, Hall said.

As these policies take effect, Hall said he's convinced Guard and Reserve troops will continue to "step up" when the country needs them.

"They will answer the call, just like our forefathers did, and we will fight and win this battle against the forces of international terror," he said. "And it will be because of our people and their commitment; and I want to personally thank each and every one of them in the active, Guard and Reserve for what they are doing for our country."

Division title games

The NFC division title game between the New Orleans Saints and Chicago Bears is at 3 p.m. Sunday on Fox. The AFC game of the New England Patriots at the Indianapolis Colts will be at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on CBS.

There are many questions surrounding the games — Will Rex Grossman be prepared? Can Peyton Manning break his playoff curse? Luckily, those questions will be put to rest this weekend, and then speculation on the Super Bowl can begin.

Super Bowl XLII is set for Feb. 4 at Dolphin Stadium in Miami, Fla.

NASCAR greets die

NASCAR driver Bobby Hamilton, the 2004 Craftsman Truck Series champion, died of cancer Jan. 7, nine days before Benny Parsons, the 1973 Winston Cup champion, died of cancer Jan. 16.

Parsons learned he had cancer about six months ago, but continued to work as a commentator for NBC and host a weekly radio program.

Parsons made 526 starts from 1964 until his retirement in 1993. He won 21 races, to include the Daytona 500 in 1975.

He was named one of NASCAR's 50 greatest drivers in 1996 and inducted into the International Motorsports Hall of Fame in 1994.

I know I will miss listening to his commentary this season, as will a lot of other fans.

Speaking of NASCAR ...

James Hylton, 72, was the NASCAR Rookie of the Year in 1966. Hylton is attempting a comeback, or really just some history-making, as he brings his car to pre-season Daytona 500 testing in Daytona Beach, Fla.

While not pursuing the Chase or the Cup, Hylton wants to make the record books as the oldest driver to ever make a Cup race.

He holds that record in the Busch and ARCA Series, and now wants another.

Good luck to Hylton.

Baseball news

Yankee Stadium was chosen for the site of the 2010 All-Star game, which is supposed to be the stadium's last season before the new one opens in 2009. Busch Stadium in St. Louis, Mo., was chosen for the 2009 game. This year's venue is in San Francisco.

Already starting the rivalry before the season, the Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees have said they both have interest in pitcher Roger Clemens, who has played for both teams. Speculation is that he will either rejoin the Houston Astros or join or retire with the Sox or Yankees. Time to make a decision, Rocket!

I guess they just don't want to retire. Sammy Sosa has been working out with the Texas Rangers, the team he began his career with. There is no evidence whether the Rangers have made any attempt to sign Sosa.

FUN AND FIT, SAFE AND SOUND

Photos by Bridgett Siter

Yamil Collazo, coach of the Columbus GT Speed skate team, teaches beginner skaters how to fall correctly so as not to injure their knees or elbows. Here Collazo is surrounded by very young skaters, mostly girls. "For some reason, I can't seem to get the boys out here," he said, but his senior skate team members are primarily boys.

Skaters needed: Speed coach recruits rollers for fun, fitness

Yamil Collazo said it's the toughest sport around, but he can't get boys to show up for the Saturday morning beginner safety classes he coaches at the JAM Skate Center on Milgen Road. Lots of little girls participate, and more and more women have joined in since the New Year, spurred perhaps by resolutions to lose weight or get fit. Skating at a steady, slow pace burns 11 calories a minute.

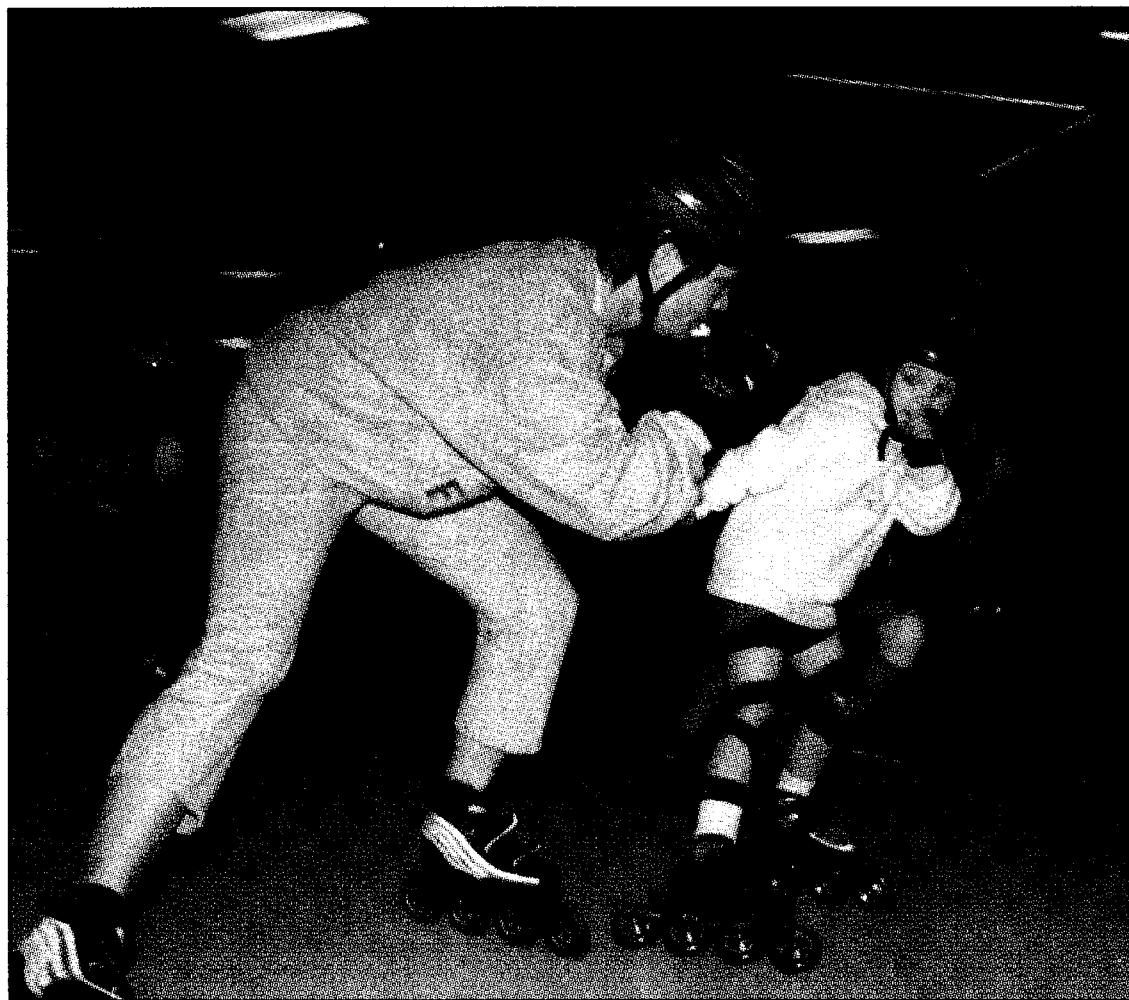

The kids love it just because it's fun, said Collazo, the media specialist at the Western Hemisphere for Security Cooperation's John B. Amos Library. He also heads the Columbus chapter of GT Speed, a team of speed skaters that have made names for themselves nationally.

The team, conversely loaded with more boys than girls, meets Saturdays at the rink, formerly Lambert Skate Center. Many of them rose through the ranks from the Saturday morning beginner sessions.

Collazo takes advantage of the team's allotted rink time to teach beginners the basics of skating safely, for recreation and sport. He offers classes six times a week. Saturday sessions start at 8:30, and end at about 10:30. Classes, with instruction, games, relays and free skate, cost $6, but children of active duty military members get their first safety class free.

For more information, call Collazo at 706-392-3629.

Post softball team prepping for busy season

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

The Fort Benning Men's Post Softball Team is gearing up for its second season, one that will start in the spring and end in the fall right here in the Columbus Parks and Recreation League.

But first things first; the team needs players — committed, experienced players.

"We're not looking for the best players on Fort Benning. We're looking for the best players who will be available for every tournament we play. They have to be dedicated," said Coach John Lowthorpe, who led the team last year in its maiden season.

With that in mind, Lowthorpe and the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation officials who sponsor the team have established fairly stringent criteria for recruits. They must be active duty, must be available for what's sure to be a packed season, and must be able to participate without interfering with their "regular job," Lowthorpe said. A spot on the post team is designated additional duty, not special duty.

Try outs are scheduled for 9 a.m. Feb. 17 and 24 at Gowdy Field, and interested parties should make it a point to attend both sessions. They must bring their military ID and an e-mail address. Those selected to attend camp — four Saturdays in March — will be notified by e-mail.

Lowthorpe said he hopes to field two teams for the mandatory March camps. From there, applicants will be culled to create a strong, cohesive team ready to participate in the Columbus Parks and Recreation Spring League, two nights a week April through June.

That, on top of the overlapping summer travel season from May through July, will make for a busy, busy schedule, Lowthorpe said.

And that's before August, when the team will participate in three national tournaments and the Military World Championship at Disney World.

The pace will slow down a bit in the fall, when the team scales back to two evenings a week in Columbus.

"It's a full schedule, very full," Lowthorpe said, and success hinges on the commitment of all players. "Skill is important, but dedication is crucial."

For more information about the team and tryouts, log on to www.fortbenningmenssoftball.com, or call Lowthorpe at 229-649-1708.

Fort Benning/Columbus rugby team looking for new players

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

It's a fact, said Rich Funke, more people get injured playing baseball and football than rugby. But don't let that stop you from joining the Fort Benning/Columbus Men's Rugby Team.

As the head coach, it's Funke's job to recruit new players. That's the hard part, because there are a lot of misconceptions about the game. People think it's complicated, dangerous and exclusive, Funke said.

So yes, recruiting can be tough. But keeping players is easy.

"Once you start playing rugby, you're hooked for life," he said.

The Fort Benning/Columbus team partnered with a team from Montgomery, Ala., last year and ranked 10th in the nation in Division Three. This year, Funke hopes to field enough players to make the local team viable on its own as it heads into its spring, or "matrix," season. The team plays year-round, but the spring season is where it all starts.

New players — or curious, potential players — are invited to join the team in practice at 7 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Cruiser Dome behind Dolly Madison on Victory Drive. Soldiers and civilians are encouraged to play.

"No experience necessary," Funke said. "We'll take care of that with a few practices. They'll know what they're doing in no time at all."

And best of all, he said, there are no age or physical restrictions, other than the obvious. You must be in good health.

"The great thing about rugby that's different than other sports

The great thing about rugby that's different than other sports is that there are positions for every body type and build. We've got positions for tall people, short people — every height, weight and size. There's a place for anyone on a rugby team.

— Rich Funke, rugby coach is that there are positions for every body type and build," said Funke, who played for the All Army Rugby Team and started the country's first community college rugby team in Virginia. "We've got positions for tall people, short people — every height, weight and size. There's a place for anyone on a rugby team."

For more information, including directions to the field — or "pitch" as it's called in rugby lingo — log on to Columbusbenningrugby.com or call Funke at 706-464-4440.

NBA basketball, Sunday, (ABC, 1 p.m.): As the calendar turned to January, the Miami Heat were turning their thoughts toward a better second half. After a reeling 4-8 start, Alonzo Mourning and the boys spent three months trying to get to .500, a far cry from their championship status achieved last spring. Can they get back to that point? They'll find out how far they've come today when they take on Josh Howard and the surging Dallas Mavericks in a Finals rematch.

NFL football, Sunday, (Fox, 3 p.m.): Before its final destination in Miami Feb. 4, the road to Super Bowl XLI winds through two more cities today to determine the conference champions. The first stop is on Fox for the NFC Championship game, with the call provided by Joe Buck and Troy Aikman. Then it's Jim Nantz and Phil Simms in the booth to describe all the action of the AFC title contest on CBS, the network that will also televise the big game in two weeks.

Figure skating, Jan. 27 (ABC, 4 p.m.): The nation's most prestigious figure skating event lost a bulk of its prestige when Olympic silver medalist Sasha Cohen announced last month she was skipping the U.S. Championships. So that catapults Kimmie Meissner, who finished second to Cohen at last year's nationals, to "favored" status for the ladies final in Spokane, Wash. The men's free skate — Johnny Weir will be going for his fourth straight title — airs later on ESPN2.

Football games make for thrillers this weekend

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

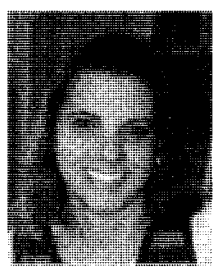

How great were the football games this weekend? The only game I watched in its entirety was the New England Patriots at the San Diego Chargers. It was a very intense few hours for all Patriots' fans including me, but in the end, I celebrated. This weekend's AFC and NFC championship games will determine who goes to the Super Bowl Feb. 4.

Honestly, as a Patriots fan, I was very worried about the Pats-Chargers match-up. The Pats were 12-4 in the regular season, and the Chargers 14-2. The Chargers, while having new quarterback Philip Rivers, had NFL MVP LaDanian Tomlinson. In the end, the Patriots were victorious by a field goal.

The Indianapolis Colts and Baltimore Ravens game couldn't have been more boring. A touchdown wasn't even scored, just endless field goals. Indianapolis did emerge the winner.

The Philadelphia Eagles were trounced by New Orleans to continue the Saints' post-Katrina Cinderella story. In the other NFC game, Chicago upset Seattle in overtime.

So now New England will travel to the RCA Dome in Indianapolis for the AFC Championship game at 6:30 p.m. Sunday on CBS. The Pats and Colts have met so many times in the past, and in the post-season, the Pats always win. Colts' quarterback Peyton Manning is the proverbial Dan Marino — an outstanding player with no Super Bowl ring. Pats' quarterback Tom Brady, who's usually flawless in the post season and the owner of three Super Bowl rings, looked incredibly sloppy against San Diego. If Brady can get back on track, I think the Patriots could find themselves back in a Super Bowl. Maybe it's finally the Colts' turn. Regardless, both teams deserve to be in the AFC Championship game. Both had tough opponents and proved their mettle.

The New Orleans Saints will visit the Chicago Bears at 3 p.m. Sunday on Fox. Hopefully Bears' quarterback Rex Grossman is studying. He admitted after a game on New Year's Eve that he hadn't prepared for it. I'm willing to bet Grossman has been cramming day and night for his chance to lead his team to a Super Bowl, to reclaim the Bears' old football glory days.

The New Orleans Saints have a lot of fans, not only in their geographical area, but also around the country. They were able to rebuild their team and stadium after Hurricane Katrina. First-year Saints' coach Sean Payton received Coach of the Year honors. They are the feel-good team, and with quarterback Drew Brees at the helm, they have a good chance of upsetting the Bears.

Even if your team is out of the playoffs, make sure to watch the games on Sunday. They are four of the best teams in the NFL today, and two of them will go head-to-head in Dolphin Stadium Feb. 4. I would love to see, as my husband calls it, a "New" bowl — New Orleans and New England. I would also love to see New England versus Chicago. Of course, I'm biased, and I freely admit that. Whoever makes it to the Super Bowl will deserve it — good luck to all four teams.

NATIONAL GUARD BUREAU
Sgt. Jim Greenhill

ARLINGTON, Va. — Casey Mears says the honor is all his, after he was introduced as the National Guard's new Guard Car driver at the Army National Guard Readiness Center Jan. 12.

Mears will drive the No. 25 National Guard/GMAC Chevy Monte Carlo SS in the 2007 NASCAR Nextel Cup and the No. 24 National Guard Chevy in the Busch Racing Series. This is the first year that the Guard will have cars competing in both divisions.

"It's just so different than any other normal sponsor," Mears said. "You're not just representing a brand, you're representing a portion of the country, what the country stands for, and all the men and women who fight for us. We get to do what we do because we're protected by the National Guard, so it's just a big honor to be representing them and hopefully hold them up proud and do well."

Lt. Gen. Clyde A. Vaughn, director of the Army National Guard, said the Guard's NASCAR sponsorship is one key to successful recruiting.

"We have a lot of fun with this," Vaughn said. "We recruit 70,000 Soldiers a year. It's about recruiting, and it's about maintaining the strength of this great organization."

Driving for Hendrick Motorsports, Mears is the successor to Greg Biffle, driver of the No. 16 National Guard Ford for the past three seasons. Biffle's accomplishments included winning six races and finishing second in the Nextel Cup series in 2005.

The Daytona 500 will kick off the 2007 Nextel Cup season Feb. 18. In another life, Mears might have enlisted himself, but he said racing demands total focus and commitment that precludes other activities.

"I knew I was going to be racing from the time I was really young," the 28-year-old Mears said. His father is Roger Mears, Indianapolis 500 and off-road veteran; his uncle is Rick Mears, four-time Indy winner; his grandfather also raced.

Mears said he would like to visit with Guard members serving at home or abroad if given the opportunity.

"It would be great to do that," he said. "I can only imagine. I still have a lot to understand and learn of what citizen-Soldiers go through. It would be great to try to lift their spirits."

Mears is optimistic about the year ahead.

"I'm more excited this year than I ever have been," he said. "This is going to be my fifth year in the Nextel Cup. My first couple of seasons were a huge learning curve, coming from the open-wheel side of things. Having the experience that I have now at this level and moving to an organization like Hendrick Motorsports, it's the best opportunity and the best situation I could possibly be in to go out and win races and do well."

In 2006, Mears won the 44th annual Rolex 24 Hours of Daytona for Chip Ganassi Racing while teamed with Scott Dixon and Dan Wheldon. He became the first ever full-time NASCAR driver to win the Rolex 24. He won his first NASCAR race last July 8 at Chicagoland Speedway. 2006 also saw his best Nextel Cup showing, 14th. During his visit to the Army National Guard Readiness Center, Mears swore an oath of allegiance to the National Guard administered by Vaughn.

"We feel a great deal of pride to go out and fly those colors and perform well and hopefully bring some excitement for the National Guard," said Doug Duchardt, vice president of development for Hendrick.

"It's a very special opportunity, and we really appreciate how the National Guard has welcomed us into the family."

Army drivers 'pick up speed'

GINN RACING

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Ginn Racing's Mark Martin and Regan Smith kicked off the first day of this week's Preseason Thunder test session Monday at Daytona International Speedway, with Smith posting the fourth fastest time in the No. 39 Ginn Racing Chevrolet and Martin posting the 15th fastest time in the U.S. Army Chevrolet.

"It was a good first day," said Martin, who took his first laps in the Army Chevy. "It's always good to get that first day out of the way with a new team and new surroundings. I'm not really used to a lot of change, so I think it was a good day to get acclimated to what we are doing. Ryan Pemberton (crew chief) and the guys are an excellent team to work with. We were able to pick up speed as the day went on and we got better from where we started. We're still not where we want to be, but we'll come back tomorrow and work harder."

Smith's speed on the famed 2.5-mile tri-oval was 184.581 miles per hour while Martin's top speed was 183.981. The fastest speed of the day — 185.090 — was posted by David Gilliland.

"I'm still as excited as ever with what we have going on this year," said Martin. "The opportunity that the Army and Ginn Racing have put together for me is just awesome and we are going to continue to work to get the most out of the cars."

Smith, who spent the majority of the day near the top of the speed charts, was also happy with his team's progress.

"We were able to find some things that worked really well for us today," said Smith, who in addition to attempting to qualify for the Daytona 500 in the No. 39 car, will split duty with Martin during the 2007 season.

"The guys did a great job with the cars today and we were able to find a good amount of speed on the track," said Smith. "Hopefully we'll be able to expand on that as the week goes on and find what we need to make sure we qualify for the Daytona 500 in a few weeks."

Martin will take to the Daytona track for the Budweiser Shootout Feb. 10, before taking part in the famed Daytona 500 Feb. 18. Smith will be back at Daytona in February in hopes of qualifying for his first-ever Daytona 500. Conversely, Martin will run in his 23rd Daytona 500.

The Ginn Racing teams will return to the track Tuesday for the second of three scheduled test days.

Driver thanks Army for support

U.S. ARMY RACING

CHICAGO, Ill. — With pre-season testing but two weeks away, U.S. Army NHRA Top Fuel driver, Tony "The Sarge" Schumacher, is still being reminded of his dramatic 2006 world championship season.

Schumacher received the prestigious Jerry Titus Memorial Trophy from the American Auto Racing Writers & Broadcasters Association, which is the organization's Driver of the Year award, in Indianapolis Jan. 13.

"What an evening it was," said the Chicago-area resident. "Winning the Jerry Titus Trophy is definitely a big moment in my career. The list of past winners is unbelievable. To now be included in that circle is just awesome."

Schumacher became the fourth drag racer to earn AARWBA's top honor, joining Don Prudhomme (1976), Shirley Muldowney (1982) and John Force (1996, 1999, 2000, and 2002). Muldowney was the only previous recipient from the Top Fuel class.

"Of course, I'm honored to join that elite group of NHRA Titus winners," he said. "What's especially pleasing is that my sponsor, the U.S. Army, won this award for the second time."

"They were on Prudhomme's Funny Car in 1976. This is clearly the result of the hard work and determination that my U.S. Army team put in throughout last season. Without their never-say-die attitude, we would not have comeback from 336 points down. The Titus Trophy is as much theirs as it is mine."

In honor of Schumacher, the Titus Trophy will go on display at the Wally Parks NHRA Motorsports Museum in Pomona, Calif. The trophy will be showcased there beginning with the NHRA's annual "Night of Champions" Feb. 9.

"Before we get to enjoy that evening in Pomona, we've got some work to do out at Phoenix (Firebird International Raceway) in two weeks," said Schumacher. A four-time NHRA Top Fuel world champion.

"I think we're all looking forward to pre-season testing after an enjoyable off-season. I'm certainly anxious to make that first quarter-mile pass of 2007."

A funny DJ, a fake Bush and a 'fun'-raiser

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

I've never met this guy Alan DuPriest, the DJ billed as a funny guy on the post's Serving From the Home Front fund-raiser, but we have a lot in common. His bio says he was born at an early age. It lists his favorite pastime as embarrassing his kids. We should compare notes.

DuPriest's resume also says he's the morning disc jockey on BOOMER 95.3 FM in Columbus, but he hides from his ex-wives on Lee Road in Phenix City, which is only funny if you've lived around here long enough to know that they're all Lee roads in Phenix City. If he lists Lee Road as his address, it really would be hard to find him if you wanted to, say, serve a warrant for criminal child embarrassment.

But if you wanted to find him on stage, so to speak (cause I'm really not sure there will be a stage, per say,) you won't have any trouble at all. Or hardly any trouble at all. You will have to ante up $35, which could be troublesome if you, like me, made it your New Year's resolution to never, ever, ever pay $35 to see any entertainer other than the president of the United States.

Boy, are you in luck. The funny thing is, DJ DuPriest is sort of the opening act for the president of the United States. Or sort of the president. DuPriest, who looks remarkably like a funny DJ, will be followed by John Morgan, who looks remarkably like the president of the United States.

Morgan is making a living off the fact that he's a dead ringer for George W. Well, that and the fact that he's got talent. He's also got a heart for our nation's men and women in uniform, and the families who serve on the home front. Did I mention the title of the event, which will start at 6:30 p.m. Feb. 24 at the Benning Club? Can you say segue?

Where was I?

Oh yes, get off the stick and purchase your tickets to Serving From the Home Front, because:

- a) proceeds will help lots of children,
- b) seating is limited, and
- c) food is involved.

Call my friend Marty Terhune to get your hands on a ticket. Call her quick, because tickets won't be available at the door. Call her at 706-596-8418.

If you're younger than 21, disregard everything you just read. If you're underage, you're uninvited.

Dream come true

Annette Fournier

(Then) Sgt. Joe Torriero won the St. Jude's Dream Home Giveaway last year. The four bedroom home in Garrett Creek subdivision in Midland, Ga., is valued at $305,000. Torriero said he never expected to win the home when he bought a $100 raffle ticket at his bank. He simply wanted to contribute to a cause he believes in.

Fort Benning families fare well in St. Jude's annual Dream Home Giveaway

Fund-raiser benefits children with cancer, catastrophic diseases

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Three of the last four winners of the St. Jude Dream Home Giveaway have been members of the Fort Benning community. That means either the odds of winning are stacked in your favor, or your luck's running out. We won't know until April 21, when one lucky winner goes home with a new home.

Last year, the lucky winner was (then) Sgt. Joe Torriero, a Kelley Hill Soldier who bought a $100 ticket "on a whim." Torriero learned of his good fortune on April 1st — April Fools Day.

"I thought it was a joke," he said.

No joke. The proceeds from this year's fund-raiser will go to St. Jude's Research Hospital to fight cancer and other catastrophic childhood diseases.

"A hundred dollars is not a lot of money when you think about what it goes for," said Torriero, now a staff sergeant and a recruiter in New Jersey.

This year, the five-bedroom, 3,475 square foot dream home, valued at $379,900, is located in the Boyd Branch subdivision in Upatoi, Ga.

Tickets for the annual fund-raiser, which includes a number of other prizes, are being sold online, at https://www.stjude.org/StJude/CDA/Forms/DreamHome/dream\_home\_choose\_format/?event=CEH07109, at any local Wachovia Bank, or at Action Buildings in Columbus. You can also reserve tickets by calling 1-800-383-9844.

Tickets must be purchased by March 1 to qualify for a year's worth of free groceries, courtesy of Piggly Wiggly.

Post eighth-graders can choose magnet schools

Event gives parents, students chance to visit school reps

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

When it comes to local high schools, the only thing constant is change, said Robyn Hughey, the Faith Middle School counselor responsible for planning the annual High School Information Night at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday.

"Enrollment requirements change. The criteria for attending a magnet program changes," Hughey said. "What might have been current last year may not be current this year."

That's why representatives from local public and private high schools meet at Faith once a year. There they introduce their programs to up-and-coming high school freshmen and their parents, who have to choose between Chattahoochee County High, the school post students are zoned to attend, or any one of the myriad magnet programs within the seven Muscogee County high schools.

Last year, more than 50 of Faith's 151 eighth-graders started their freshman year at Chattahoochee, which opened its doors three years ago. Nearly 40 attend Columbus High School, the area's only all-magnet school, with a focus on liberal arts. Each of the other schools drew less than 10 students each from Faith.

The other Muscogee County schools, including Jordan, Hardaway, Spencer, Kendrick, Shaw and Northside, have magnet programs, or specialized areas of study, within their schools.

In each case, a student residing on post must apply to attend a magnet. The process is very easy for some schools — as easy as filling out a bit of paperwork. Others require testing, a minimum grade point average, an essay and a teacher recommendation. The deadlines for applying to some of the programs are as early as next month.

To learn more about high school options and opportunities, parents of eighth-graders are encouraged to attend High School Information Night. Doors will open at 6:30 p.m.

It doesn't take a scholar to win this scholarship

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

The Military Officers Association of America, or MOAA, is offering a scholarship opportunity for the children of active duty military personnel around the world.

The 2007 MOAA Base/Post

Scholarship program will award $1,000 grants to 25 students younger than 24. Applicants must be working toward their first undergraduate degree, and they must be the legal dependents of active duty servicemen — enlisted, warrant or officer — in the Army, Navy Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, Public Health Service or the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. It also includes members of the National Guard and active duty Reserves.

Scholarship awards will not be based on merit or financial need, and no essays or minimum grade point average will be required. Nor do applicants have to be associated with MOAA. The grants will be dispersed to students randomly selected from a pool of applicants within each of the seven services.

Applications, available online through the MOAA Web site, must be received by noon March 1. Visit www.moaa.org and choose the "services" link, and then the "Educational Assistance" link. Follow instructions for the "multipurpose scholarship" application.

Semifinalists will be notified by e-mail by mid-March. Winners will be notified in May.

Fort Benning strongly supports BOSS and allows all Soldiers who volunteer for BOSS activities the time to participate in these events. BOSS events are open to all interested people, military or civilian.

For more information, call 706-527-0414.

VETERANS SEMINAR

The U.S. Small Business Administration will present a Veterans Seminar at the Columbus Public Library from 9 a.m. to noon Feb. 23. The seminar will present the SBA programs and services that are available to veterans and service-connected disabled veterans.

The seminar is free.

To register, call Jorge Valentin-Stone at 404-331-0100 ext. 609 or fax your name, telephone number and e-mail address to the SBA at 202-481-5239.

You can also e-mail the information to jorge.valentin-stone@sba.gov.

valentin-stone@sba.gov.

For more information and news about SBA veterans programs, go to www.sba.gov/VETS.

HOST FAMILIES NEEDED

The Pacific Intercultural Exchange is seeking people to become host families for foreign students. The students are between ages 15 and 18, are English-speaking, have their own spending money and carry their own accident and health insurance.

P.I.E. has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year. Families who host P.I.E. are also eligible to claim a $50 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

Chattahoochee County area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative can call 866-546-1402.

FREE TREES

Ten free flowering trees will be given to each person from Georgia who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during January. The trees will be shipped at the right time for planting between Feb. 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six- to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or will be replaced free of charge.

To become a member of the foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 contribution to Ten Free Flowering Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410 by Jan. 31 or go online to arborday.org.

FREEDOM TEAM SALUTE

Soldiers can go to www.freedomteamsalute.com to nominate a spouse, parent, employer (or Reserve Components) or a veteran for recognition.

ASK THE JUDGE

OFFICE OF THE STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE

Anthony R. Tempesta

Q: What is the "telephone tax refund" I've heard about?

A: In 2006, individual taxpayers may file for a "telephone excise tax refund," which will refund previously collected long distance telephone taxes.

The TETR applies only to federal excise taxes on long distance services, and does not affect federal excise taxes on local telephone service or state and local taxes or fees paid by telephone customers.

Individual taxpayers can apply for the TETR in one of two ways. The easiest method is to claim the standard refund amount, which is based on the number of exemptions claimed on the taxpayer's return.

One exemption entitles the taxpayer to a $30 refund, two exemptions means a $40 refund, three exemptions entitles the taxpayer to a $50 refund, and four or more exemptions means a $60 refund.

Taxpayers can also use Internal Revenue Service Form 8913, Credit for Federal Telephone Excise Tax Paid, to compute the exact amount of federal telephone excise tax paid between March 2003 and July 2006.

To do so, however, requires taxpayers to review their monthly telephone bills for those 41 months, list the exact amounts paid, and compute interest based on those amounts.

The TETR refund amount will be entered on IRS Form 1040, Line 71; and IRS Form 1040A, Line 42.

Since the IRS Form 1040EZ does not use the term "exemptions," taxpayers using that form will have to follow the form's instructions carefully, and enter the TETR amount on Line 9.

If used, IRS Form 8913 should be attached.

The IRS expects that up to 160 million taxpayers will file for the TETR, resulting in the refund of approximately $10 billion.

Further information on the TETR, as well as IRS Form 8913 and the form's instructions, can be found online at www.irs.gov.

Eligible clients can also receive further information and assistance at the Fort Benning Tax Center, which can be reached by telephone at 706-545-4267.

Glaucoma onset may be undetected

WEST GEORGIA EYE CARE CENTER
Misty Ekstrom

There are approximately 2.2 million Americans ages 40 and older who have glaucoma, and half of those are at risk for going blind because they do not know they have the disease. You could be one of them.

Glaucoma is a condition in which the optic nerve, responsible for transmitting visual information from the eye to the brain, is damaged. Although the nerve damage is usually associated with elevated pressure inside the eye, other factors can be involved.

It may begin with the loss of peripheral vision and then advance to a reduction in central vision. Glaucoma can potentially lead to vision loss or blindness.

"Most people who have glaucoma don't notice symptoms until they begin to lose some vision. But vision loss from glaucoma can be prevented if it's detected and treated in time," said Dr. Bret Crumpton, an eye surgeon and fellowship trained glaucoma specialist practicing at West Georgia Eye Care Center in Columbus, Ga. "As part of Glaucoma Awareness Month in January, we urge you to get a complete eye exam if you're at risk for developing glaucoma."

So, who's at risk?

"African-Americans over age 40, Hispanics, people with a family history of glaucoma, individuals over age 60, people with other health conditions, such as diabetes and those who have experienced a serious eye injury are considered at risk," said Crumpton.

Anyone who falls into one or more of these categories should talk with an ophthalmologist about how often an eye examination should be conducted to ensure good vision.

Although glaucoma cannot be cured, early detection and treatment can usually preserve vision. Know your risk factors and have your eyes examined at the intervals recommended by your ophthalmologist.

Smoking, certain jobs linked to bladder cancer

Quitting Helps Prevent More Than Just Lung Cancer

MCG HEALTH, INC.

Lung cancer isn't the only risk you run by smoking. Smoking is also linked to bladder cancer, the fourth most common cancer among men.

"Education about the risk of bladder cancer is particularly important in this area, where tobacco use and other risk factors are prevalent," said Dr. James Brown, a urologist at MCG Health System.

Along with tobacco use, certain chemicals and dyes used in the production of textiles, paints, rubber, leather and petroleum also increase a person's risk of developing bladder cancer.

States like Georgia that have large numbers of manufacturing plants see up to two times the number of bladder cancers than in the normal population.

According to the American Cancer

Society, other workers with an increased risk of developing bladder cancer include painters, hairdressers, machinists, printers and truck drivers (these because of exposure to diesel fumes).

Add smoking to that and the risk multiplies. Smoking alone is responsible for almost 50 percent of bladder cancers among men, and 30 percent of bladder cancers in women.

To help prevent bladder cancer, it's important to do five things:

1. If you smoke, quit. If you don't, don't start.

2. If you work in one of the above industries, follow safe work practices.

3. Drink plenty of fluids and use the bathroom regularly to help flush out chemicals.

4. Eat a diet high in fruits and vegetables, which seems to help prevent bladder and other cancers.

5. Visit your physician for regular checkups, including urine testing, which looks for blood in the urine, one of the first signs of bladder cancer.

Other signs include leakage, frequent urination and frequent urges to urinate, stinging during urination and other symptoms similar to that of a bladder infection.

Since women are prone to bladder infections, it's important for women to talk to their physician about urine testing to make sure their symptoms are nothing more, especially if they are at risk for bladder cancer.

If your physician suspects bladder cancer, further testing will take place to confirm a diagnosis, including examinations inside the bladder itself.

When bladder cancer is detected early, a simple outpatient procedure with no incision is all that is necessary to take care of the tumor.

"Early detection of bladder cancer can help prevent more invasive therapies, such as removal and reconstruction of the bladder. Plus, your survival rate soars to 99 percent," said Brown.

"If you are at risk, it's important that you stop smoking and follow safe work guidelines. In addition, make sure you visit your doctor regularly to be screened. These are simple steps you can take to ensure your good health."

REFLECTIONS

Leadership is people business

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT

Retired Chaplain (Maj.) Frederick M. "Bud" Rupel

"I" m in charge here, and the sooner you figure that out the better it will be for you! Do you hear what I'm saying?" screamed my drill sergeant standing so close to me that the brim of his "Smokey" hat was touching my head just above my left ear.

"Yes drill sergeant!" when inside of my head I'm saying, "Not now, you fool. You've just burst my eardrum." Some things are best left unsaid.

Top-down leadership is absolutely necessary in the military or its mission would never be accomplished. But the inappropriate ways in which it sometimes is displayed is never effective.

In his book, The Top Ten Mistakes Leaders Make, Hans Finzel identifies six characteristics of inappropriate "top-down" leadership: abuse of subordinates, deplorable delegation, lack of listening, dictatorship in decision-making, lack of letting go, and an egocentric personality.

The "needs of the military," as the determining factor in pretty much everything, is a concept I understand and support. Yet those in positions of leadership must also embrace the concept that leadership is people business, and it's most enduring quality is that of servanthood.

Finzel wrote, "Servant leadership requires leaders to sit and weep with those who weep within our organizations. It requires getting down and dirty when hard work has to be done."

There is nothing in my organization that anyone does that I should not be willing to do myself if it promotes the good of us all."

I served under such a man like Finzel describes. Col. John Brown was the commander of 2nd Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division, Fort Hood, Texas. On more than one occasion when I visited Soldiers in the motor pool, I would see Col. Brown decked out in mechanic overalls crawling underneath an Abrams or Bradley, getting himself covered in grease, dirt and oil just to talk to some young private.

On visits to the hospital, I saw him there with his wife visiting the spouse of a Soldier who had given birth to her first child.

I heard from Soldiers in the brigade who were recipients of a little cash from Col. Brown to help them get home on emergency leave.

Col. Brown knew what it was to be servant leader.

He never forgot that not only did he serve to meet the needs of the Army, he was also there to serve the needs of the Soldiers he commanded.

Brig. Gen. James Spivey had this to say about leadership, "People soon forget how once they were impressed by your position, your power, your possessions. In the long run, they remember you for who you are, for how you treat them, and for how wisely you use your position and power."

In short, they admire strength of character defined by service, respect, and integrity. These three qualities mark the difference between success and significance." (From the book, A Gathering of Eagles)

I cannot recall that drill sergeant's name, but I'll never forget Col. Brown. And what was the difference?

One was an intimidator, and the other was a servant-leader. In taking care of people the servant-leader will accomplish the mission, and in doing so, the servant-leader will have no problem in finding people to follow him.

Editor's Note: Retired Chaplain (Maj.) Bud Rupel lives in Columbus, where he continues to minister to Soldiers and their families. He can be reached at 706-323-1876.

LEND ME YOUR EAR

Lord, Thou knowest better than myself that I am getting older and will someday be old
Keep me from the fatal habit of thinking I must say something on every subject and on every occasion
Release me from craving to straighten out everybody's affairs
Make me thoughtful but not moody
Helpful but not bossy
With my vast store of wisdom — it seems a pity not to use it all.
But thou knowest Lord that I want a few friends in the end.

— A seventeenth century nun

And what are your New Years resolutions?

Jonathan Edwards (1703—1758), the New England revivalist, believed in resolutions, and wrote the following:-

"Being sensible that I am unable to do anything without God's help, I do humbly entreat Him, by His grace, to enable me to keep these Resolutions, so far as they are agreeable to His will, for Christ's sake:

1. Resolved, that I will do whatsoever I think to be most to the glory of God, and my own good.
2. Resolved, to do what is most for the good and advantage of mankind in general.
3. Resolved, never to lose one moment of time.
4. Resolved, to live with all my might, while I do live.
5. Resolved, never to do anything, which I should be afraid to do if it were the last hour of my life.
6. Resolved, never to do anything out of revenge.
7. Resolved, never to speak evil of any one, so that it shall tend to his dishonour.
8. Resolved, to ask myself at the end of every day, week, month, and year, wherein I could possibly, in any respect, have done better.
9. Resolved, always to do that which I shall wish I had done when I see others do it.
10. Let there be something of benevolence in all that I speak.

Sounds of freedom not always comforting

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

I woke up this morning to the sound of freedom, one of the blessings of living on post. Boom, boom, boom with a short delay and then a faint boom, boom, boom.

The windows in my house rattled as another 120 mm round was fired from the mortar tube. It sounded unusually loud this morning, probably because of the low cloud cover.

I love the sound of freedom. However, when I was downrange, the mortar sounds were not sounds of freedom, but the sounds of the enemy trying to find targets in my camp.

I remember when I first returned home, these same sounds startled me.

I found other sounds, like the bang from a car backfiring, the sound of a Dumpster lid being dropped or the slamming of the big German steel doors would startle me too.

These all sounded like or reminded me of the mortar rounds dropping into our camp.

My first reaction was not rational thought, but rather survival instinct. In combat you cannot stand around and analyze everything first.

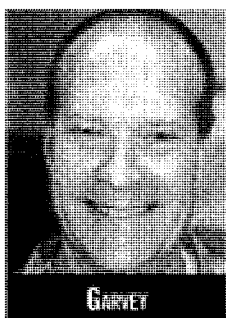

The first thing you do is get down and take cover and then figure out what happened — you survive by taking action.

Downrange, you spend a year of your life on constant alert, ducking and dodging everything that comes after you, keeping your guard up day after day, week after week, being careful to trust no foreigner. You try and assess, are they the enemy or friendly?

If you let down your guard it could be your life. You cannot tell just by looking at them, they wear no uniform, no mark to know who the enemy is and who is not. You long for those days back home, a picture in your mind you review often, a memory of peace, love and friendships, a place where you can relax, a place you cannot wait to get back to.

However, once home, you find it difficult to shift from downrange. It is difficult to leave it all behind. Some sounds, sights and smells take you right back to the war zone and you react before you can fully process it.

After I came home and heard the loud booms, after reacting, I needed to process the event, I had to realize I was home; these sounds were not enemy threats.

A deep breath and a slowing of the heart rate all helped to counteract the adrenaline released in my body for the fight-or-flee response.

My body is still hypersensitive and in a fraction of a second it was too late to stop my body's instinctive survival reaction. I would have to retrain my mind and body, my thoughts and reactions, from surviving combat to thriving on the hometown. This is only one small effect of combat stress.

When our Soldiers go down range, they get exposed to situations and are asked to do things that some people will never see or experience in a lifetime.

When the war is over for us, the images are forever stored in our minds. Problems occur when these images and experiences begin to disrupt our lives. When they disorder our lives we need some help.

I was reading that in World War II we lost 400,000 lives to combat and non-combat related deaths. What was not surprising is that we suffered 500,000 emotionally wounded Soldiers. They experienced some normal reactions to some very abnormal experiences. What is not normal is to lose your friends or fellow Soldiers at the hands of the enemy. What is not normal is to be on constant alert of attack. What is difficult is trying to make sense of it all. What we have learned and found to be helpful in the healing process of these emotion wounds is to talk to someone about them. Counselors, fellow warriors and even close family members are valuable resources.

Sometimes we need help with talking about these sensitive and disturbing thoughts and feelings. We at the Chaplain's Family Life Center have combat-experienced chaplains who have been downrange to Iraq and back.

Our staff is here to assist you and your family with the stress of combat or any other problems or issues you may be experiencing in your life. Give us a call at 706-545-1760 to make an appointment.

May God bless you and your family.

Take a closer look at the Talent Amendment

THE BAYONET
Jeff Saeli

By now, most readers have heard the term 'payday lending' — it's been the center of much discussion. The term refers to lenders who offer short-term financing by cashing a post-dated check, and deducting a fee, usually on a percentage basis.

These lenders also engage in more 'traditional' lending, and may take your car title as security, or require an allotment, or some other access to your accounts as security.

Because of the unregulated nature of this industry, its tendency to charge high fees and interests rates, and the frequency with which customers of these lenders are locked into ever-deepening debt cycles, it is often considered both "predatory" and abusive.

It is a fact that payday lenders, while not serving military customers exclusively, do tend to cluster around military bases. It is also true that a high number of service members — across all the services — go to payday lenders for borrowing needs, and that a growing number of them have ended up in financial trouble as a result.

This tendency for unsophisticated borrowers to fall into a spiral of debt using such loans has recently been raised as an item of concern among the services, because of its impact on readiness.

Besides the adverse effect of worrying about how to pay off the loans, there is the real risk of losing one's security clearance if your financial problems reach the chain of command.

In response to these concerns, former Senator Talent (R-Missouri), introduced a rider to the 2007 Defense Authorization Act, which was subsequently approved, and will be become law as of 1 Oct 2007.

Known as 'The Talent Amendment,' this amendment tried to limit the ways in which payday lenders exploit borrowers by limiting the maximum amount of interest charged and the methods by which lenders can recover funds from borrowers.

For example, it caps the total interest (which includes fees, counted as interest) to 36 percent on an annualized basis; it prohibits lenders from using financial instruments or access to accounts as security; and it prohibits the taking of a motor vehicle title as security, unless the money being lent is for the express purpose of purchasing the motor vehicle in question.

The act applies to all active duty service members and their dependents, to include activated Guardsmen and Reservists.

The Talent Amendment has an admirable intent — protecting our most vulnerable service members from predatory financial schemes. Unfortunately, the language in the law is overly broad, and a lot of what we think of as 'good' lending practices will likely be prohibited along with the 'bad' lending practices.

The risk is that under this law service members (and their dependents) will be denied access to many credit mechanisms they now take for granted — things like credit cards, and refinancing of loans (with the same lender), or using auto-debit to make payments on loans.

And because the law carries stiff penalties for banks and lenders who violate its provisions, it's likely that many banks will be reluctant to offer credit of any sort to service members or their dependents.

If you're not concerned, you should be. Under this law it would be illegal for a lender to take your fully-paid for car as collateral for a loan.

By taking the car title, he or she could offer you a reduced rate as part of the deal. Instead, the lender would be forced to charge a higher, "unsecured" rate. It would be illegal for a lender to establish an automatic payment from your account.

It would be illegal for a lender to use your certificate of deposit, or other savings account, as collateral, again, in the process offering you a reduced rate.

Because of the 'all-in' requirement to count every type of fee associated with any extension of credit as "interest," it is likely that banks will stop offering credit cards to service members and their dependents, for fear of unintentionally exceeding interest rate caps. 'All-in' simply means that every fee that might possibly be charged — annual fees, over-limit fees, cash withdrawal fees, etc. — all will count as interest under this law.

The 36 percent interest rate cap is certainly a reasonable figure. However, as an example consider a credit card where the annual fee is imposed in a month where there is a small balance. Here, the lender could be in trouble.

For example, if you had a $5.00 balance, and your annual fee of $10.00 hit during that month, because the fee would be counted as interest, you would have an APR approaching 2,400%, for the fee alone, not including regular interest.

There's more.

Because of the requirement to orally provide rate disclosures, you would be required to meet face-to-face with your banker for any credit application; this would practically eliminate approval of online credit applications.

Because the term 'creditor' is not adequately defined, even car dealerships and department stores, who routinely offered credit, may fall under the new law's provisions, further limiting service members' access to legitimate credit.

There's a flurry of activity surrounding this law in banking, regulatory agency, and defense circles.

The Secretary of Defense is responsible for writing the regulations applying the new law. The FDIC has asked military banks to design alternatives to payday lending. And many banking organizations, among them the American Banker's Association, and the Association of Military Banks of America, have written to the Secretary's office offering support and solutions. A lot rides on how the Secretary of Defense writes the rules implementing this legislation.

Even better would be supplemental legislation narrowing the focus of the original bill.

How can you help?

Write your congressman, and ask them to take a look at this legislation, with any eye towards excluding the state and federally-regulated and insured financial institutions we know as banks and credit unions.

This would result in a bill that focuses the intended restriction where it needs to be and truly protects service members and their families.

WHINSEC

Spc. Rafael S. Nunez
Pfc. Richard J. Gilbert

Staff Sgt. Jeffery Feliciano earned the Soldier's Medal for his heroic efforts to save an accident victim on April 30, 2005.

Feliciano, a Medical Assistance Course instructor at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation, had a Soldier's Medal pinned on his chest by Brig. Gen. Mark E. O'Neill, deputy commandant of the Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., at WHINSEC's Gallery of Liberators Wednesday.

There's a new Army motto now, which is "Army Strong," and it's Soldiers like you who epitomize what "Army Strong" stands for, said O'Neill during the presentation.

'Thanks for the sacrifices you're making'

TRADOC commander on post for conference

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

If you have an hour or two or 10, Gen. William Wallace will be glad to tell you how the Army is preparing Soldiers to combat terrorism.

"I could talk about that all day," Wallace said Wednesday, just before the start of the TRADOC Doctrine and Concept Conference. He actually had very little time to talk at all, but he took the opportunity to address three key points he wants the Fort Benning community to understand.

Mainly, he wanted to acknowledge the sacrifices made by Soldiers and their families and ask them to consider the impact each individual is making on the lives of individuals in Iraq.

"Thanks for being who you are and for the sacrifices you're making to defend the freedoms we enjoy in the United States," he said. "Thanks for

After receiving the USO's Spirit of Hope Award, retired Col. Robert Nett, pictured here with his wife Frances, spoke of meeting Bob Hope and attending a number of his USO concerts during his 33 years of service. The Netts met during World War II, when Frances served with the Army Nurse Corps. He was awarded the Medal of Honor after leading an assault against a Japanese stronghold near Ormoc in the Philippines. Nett fought hand-to-hand, killed seven Japanese, and was severely wounded twice. He refused to leave the fight until his troops captured the objective.

Keeping hope alive

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Bob Nett is a war hero. His name has been mentioned in the same breath as Audie Murphy and Ernie Pyle. He has a highway named after him, and a building.

Now, after a ceremony Wednesday in Marshall Auditorium, Nett's name will go down in history alongside the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders.

Retired Col. Robert Nett, an 85-year-old career veteran who served in three wars and earned the Medal of Honor as a second lieutenant during World War II, was presented the USO's Spirit of Hope Award, an honor bestowed upon those who carry out Bob Hope's mission to support the men and women of America's armed forces.

Like Hope, the Dallas Cowboys cheerleaders support the troops through USO tours. Nett serves closer to home, said Gen. William Wallace, the commander of Training and Doctrine Command.

"Just as Bob Hope uplifted the morale and spirits of our men and women in combat, (Nett) continues to keep the spirit of Hope alive for those who bear

Joint ops net undocumented workers

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Twenty-four undocumented workers were apprehended as they tried to enter Fort Benning last week. They were caught by U.S. immigration and Army security officials on their way to work for an unidentified company contracted to build barracks on post, according to the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement. Those arrested were carrying fake or fraudulently obtained IDs.

"This is good news for everybody," said Chuck Walls, Fort Benning's garrison manager. "It sends a strong message that, as we go forward with a lot of construction and growth over the next few years, we intend to keep security a priority, and contractors must tighten up their screening procedures."

The undocumented workers, including 20 Mexicans, three Guatemalans and an Italian, were arrested when ID checks were conducted at three entrances to Kelley Hill Jan. 17. Lt. Col. Willard Moore, the post provost marshal, said they may have entered the post in the days or weeks prior to the investigation.

They may have ridden with drivers with valid IDs, he said. Currently, only the driver of a vehicle entering post is required to show identification.

The checks at Fort Benning were part of a larger joint investigation of military installations, which included bases in Nevada and Virginia, conducted by the U.S. Immigration and Customs

598th prepares to deploy

THE BAYONET
Lori Egan

For Pfc. Andrew Doble, 2007 is a year of firsts — his wedding anniversary is March 17, his daughter is due March 12 and he deploys to Iraq at the end of this month.

Doble and the rest of the 598th Maintenance Company "Comanches" will deploy in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom.

This is the unit's third trip to Iraq, said the company commander, Capt. Andrea Rogers. Most of the Soldiers have combat experience; 120 Soldiers with the 598th have deployed before, she said. The 598th returned from Southwest Asia in November 2005 and they have been training for the deployment using the lessons learned from the last, Rogers said.

"We're ready," she said. "We've used this time to reset and retrain. We've tailored the training to the mission in Iraq, including convoy live fires and recovery missions — not just turning wrenches."

Doble, who joined the National Guard after 9/11, came on active duty to be a mechanic. His and the other Comanches' mission is to provide direct support to seven operating bases and one "fly away" base (a small base with no vehicle traffic).

During a deployment ceremony Monday in Infantry Hall's Marshall Auditorium, Lt. Col. Jacqueline Lett, deputy commander of 3rd Sustainment Brigade, Fort Stewart, Ga., attached a tiger streamer to the company's guidon.

She told the deploying Soldiers their focus should be forward, to place the mission first —

VARIOUS VOICES

What is the most dangerous thing you've seen a driver do?

There's nothing worse than seeing a baby in the car without a car seat. I see people driving holding a child in their arms. I tell my grandchildren and great grandchildren, if grandma doesn't have the car seats, she can't baby sit.

— Clementine Mayfield
family member

I've seen people driving with one foot stuck up on the dashboard and the other foot on the floor. It's not so dangerous to other people, but it is to the driver. If you get in an accident, even a fender bender, you could be paralyzed.

— Lt. Col. Jesse Rayford
MEDDAC

It's dangerous to drive too fast in parking lots. Earlier, I saw someone driving about 10 miles per hour through a parking lot and they almost ran a lady over.

— Letitia Mallia
family member

I can't stand when people have their left turn signal on and then cut over and make a right turn.

— Rosa Potter
family member

People shouldn't be talking on a cell phone while they're driving. I never do it. I don't even like cell phones.

— Retired 1st Sgt. Charlie Bailey
Phoenix City

I've seen people eating pizza and driving down the street. That's crazy. But the worst is when people don't put their children in a car seat. They're putting their child at so much risk.

— Tracy Edwards
vendor

In Honduras, I was driving behind a 5-ton truck full of equipment, and this little taxi turned right in front of it. The truck slammed on the brakes and slid across the road, but luckily no one got hurt.

— Sgt. Kasey Miller
5502nd Army Hospital
Aurora, Colo.

No second chances on road

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

Slamming on the accelerator, I blasted past the other cars so fast the scenery was only a blur. The numbers on the speedometer climbed — 95, 115, 130. I skidded around a corner, heading straight for a billboard, overcorrected, and smashed through a telephone pole. The car slammed into the side of a Corvette, went airborne and skidded to a halt in a ditch. The car I was racing shot past my crashed vehicle.

Doggone it! Again! Why is it, that after my years of driving experience, a 12-year-old boy can beat me in a race?

I'll tell you why... I was playing Need for Speed against my friend's son on his Xbox 360, and I'm just not as good with an Xbox controller as I am with a steering wheel. And for that matter, I prefer a joystick or a Nintendo controller to today's controllers. There are too many buttons. But no adolescent would stand a chance against me in Pole Position or Super Mario Kart.

Watching the 12-year-old driving the muscle cars on Grand Theft Auto makes me hope that he'll be as fast with his reflexes when he's driving a real car. I also hope he'll ease off the speed when he's using a pedal, not an X button.

Because unfortunately, it seems like some drivers never learned the difference between videogame driving and the highway. In one, you can drive off bridges and smash cars, and lose nothing but the race. But there are no second chances on the road.

I have a friend who drives a stick shift, smokes and sends texts messages while driving, usually all at the same time. She is the queen of fender benders. She wonders why her insurance is so high. Whenever I ride in the car with her, I spend the whole time slamming my foot on my imaginary brake pedal and grabbing the ceiling handle.

My mom used to put in curlers on her way to work. She did this when she was running late, so she'd be speeding and tailgating. Luckily she doesn't do that anymore. She got a haircut.

I heard a saying once, that everyone on the road who drives slower than you is an idiot, and everyone who drives faster is a maniac. That leaves out the category of the weirdo driver.

A few days ago on Veterans Parkway, I was driving behind a pick-up truck, and saw an ACU-clad leg and boot stuck out the driver's window. My first thought was, 'What the ...?' followed by, 'Wow, he's flexible.'

What exactly inspires a driver to stick his left leg out window? Is setting the arm on the window sill too passé? And didn't he ever hear stories in elementary school about the kids who stuck their arms out of the bus window? We all know what happens to the kids in that story.

I personally am an excellent driver. I'm sure you feel the same way. Well, about your driving, probably not about mine. Actually, I can admit I'm not a stupendous driver. Mailboxes tremble in fear when I back up. But I'm cautious and that's a good start.

I'd like to share a few pearls of wisdom. Driving at a sensible speed will save you dollars at the gas pump, and it might save your life in an accident. Stopping at a red light is good for both you and your driving record.

Seat belts are wonderful fashion accessories. And I have to say it. It's a merge sign, not a stop sign. Coming to a complete halt before entering the interstate is not advisable, especially if the person behind you isn't paying attention.

And most seriously, drinking and driving is no joke. If you've had too many, don't risk it. Saving cab fare is not worth losing your life, or taking the lives of others by driving under the influence.

In the event of impaired drivers, it would be good to tap into that vintage video game, Spy Hunter. In that game, besides dropping oil slicks for other drivers, the car had machine guns on the front so you could blast others out of the way. I'd fully advocate front-mounted rockets to blast blasted drivers off the road before they hurt somebody.

Well, maybe it's better if I stick to the video games for my road rage. It's safer for everybody.

Hi again, it's me on my soapbox

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

I'm sure you've found yourself in this situation: You're trying to watch a movie in a theater with your children. You're trying to set a good example for the kids, by turning off your cell phone, sharing the popcorn, and sitting quietly, so as not to disturb your neighbors. Then some Bozo stands up in front and blocks your view of the screen. And you want to yell, "Sit down, Bozo, we're trying to watch a movie here." I'm sure you've found yourself in this situation.

Not me. No sir, I have to set a good example for my kids by telling everybody in the theater to get off their keisters and stand up.

Very recently, I took my daughters to the movie theater on post to watch a very exciting movie, a captivating piece of cinematic art. The title escapes me. I can't remember the plot, either. And the fact that I can't remember the names of the stars should come as no surprise to anyone who knows me, since I can't even remember the name of the gal who plays the lead role in my life.

Anyway, we were almost late. The popcorn line was wayyy long. So we walked in to a dark theater about midway through the national anthem.

Now one of the things I love about Fort Benning is the myriad ways we show our patriotism. Reveille plays from the loudspeaker on Main Post every morning, and Taps plays at night. Schoolchildren say the Pledge of Allegiance every day. And at Wynnson, the audience stands for the national anthem before the start of a movie. Love that. It's what sets us apart from the lesser animals.

Anybody who knows anything about patriotism's best practices knows one should not walk into a theater in the middle of the national anthem. One should be still. Not sit still, mind you, but be still.

I know that, but when I saw everybody in the theater — and there were probably less than 20 people there — sitting on their fannies, I figured their mistake was more grievous than mine.

So I marched right in with my girls, planted myself smack-dab in the middle of the theater, and stood. And seethed.

When the anthem ended, I waited for that really brief moment of complete silence before the previews, and I said quite loudly, "OK, everybody can sit down now."

Golly, I wish they did do-overs there at the Wynnson. "Sorry, people, we'll have to rewind the film and do it again, and again and again, until everybody stands and shows the proper respect."

It's such a small thing really, standing during the national anthem or the Pledge of Allegiance or Taps. It's really just a sign of respect.

But respect is no small thing.

BAYONET HEADLINES

1931

• "Witchcraft triumph(s) over science" a Bayonet article proclaimed in a story about a man named Frank Smith. Smith lived on lands in eastern Fort Benning and was famous for his ability to find water using a dowsing rod.

He showed his skills to Soldiers and the provost marshal, who swore to Smith's abilities.

• Front page headline: Lt. Royce to marry Miss Reed in April.

• Post began a ladies' polo team.

• A War Department official came to post to talk about mechanized forces. He told a crowd of 500 that mechanized Army units would never catch on, because anything beyond a small force was impractical. He also talked about his father's life as a commander of the American forces in China during the Boxer Rebellion.

• Bus fare to Atlanta was $3; to New Orleans, $11.15; and $24.43 to travel the 1,000 miles from Fort Benning to New York City.

• MOVIES: The Virtuous Stn, Way for a Sailor, Wings of Adventure

• The Army proposed two new dress uniforms — gray and green for officers, and green and pink for enlisted.

• Benning's hospital raised money to find a cure for polio by asking people to drop coins in an iron lung.

• The Navy announced plans to submerge the world's first atomic-powered submarine for two months or more.

• Sgt. Durward Moore was promoted to first sergeant at age 22. He had been in the Army less than three years.

1966

• Helicopter pilots and crews in Vietnam got new armored vests. The Army was also working on new armored leg protectors.

• Marines trained at Fort Benning to become dog handlers.

• Tickets went on sale for Peter, Paul and Mary in Columbus. Low-end tickets sold for $2.50 and front row seats for $3.50.

• Sing Out '66 performed on Fort Benning. The group later became Up With People.

• Post hosted the Miss Teen Fort Benning contest. • MOVIES: The Hallelujah Trail, Dr. Goldfoot and the Bikini Machine, Wild on the Beach and Elvis appeared in Wild in the Country

1982

• A specialist was sentenced to two months confinement, reduction to E-1 and forfeit of $367 per month for disrespect to an NCO and communicating a threat.

• Benning warned residents to beware of a man posing as an army lieutenant on post. The man attempted to convince payroll that he was a Soldier who had not been paid, and said they should cut him a check.

• The 43rd Engineer Battalion started building a new MOUT site.

• Soldiers from El Salvador trained on post. • MOVIES: Time Bandits, On Golden Pond, Sharky's Machine, Boogie Man

11th Engineer Battalion stands up again

Battalion inactivated in March 2004 after supporting 3rd ID in Iraq

THE BAYONET
Lori Egan

Lt. Col. Paul Owen accepted the "Jungle Cat" guidon during an 11th Engineer Battalion reactivation ceremony Jan. 19 in Freedom Hall at Lawson Army Airfield.

The battalion was inactivated in March 2004 at Fort Stewart, Ga., after supporting the 3rd Infantry Division's 1st Brigade "Raiders" march through the Karbala Gap, into Baghdad and battle for the Saddam International Airport.

In his speech, Owen said the activation of the 11th Engineer Battalion represented the transformation of the Corps of Engineers into the Army's modular force structure.

The key distinctions between the modular engineer battalion and the legacy force is that the battalions are no longer assigned to divisions but to engineer brigades, and designed to be multifunctional with the capability to provide command and control across a broad spectrum of engineer capabilities — sappers, route clearance, construction, bridging and design among others, Owen said.

The 11th Engineer Battalion includes a forward support company, which enables the battalion to be self-sustaining, he said.

"The Jungle Cats stand ready to prove the effectiveness of the modular force," Owen said, using the battalion's past accomplishments to demonstrate the unit's ability.

"From enduring the harsh conditions and technical challenges of constructing the Panama Canal, to breaching the minefields in Europe in World War II, fighting as Infantry in the Korean War, serving as peacekeepers in Kosovo and fighting off waves of attackers during the capture of Saddam International Airport — I implore you to embrace the proud heritage, which you are now part of. Jungle Cats, forward!"

Battalion Soldiers said standing up a battalion builds cohesiveness.

"This is unique," said Staff Sgt. Alexis Figueroa, a technical engineer who has been in the Army for eight years.

Lt. Col. Paul Owen, left, commander of the 11th Engineer Battalion, gives Command Sgt. Maj. Terry Purdin the unit colors during the unit's reactivation ceremony Jan. 19.

"We're so small that there's more teamwork, we're closer (as a unit) than units already up," Figueroa said.

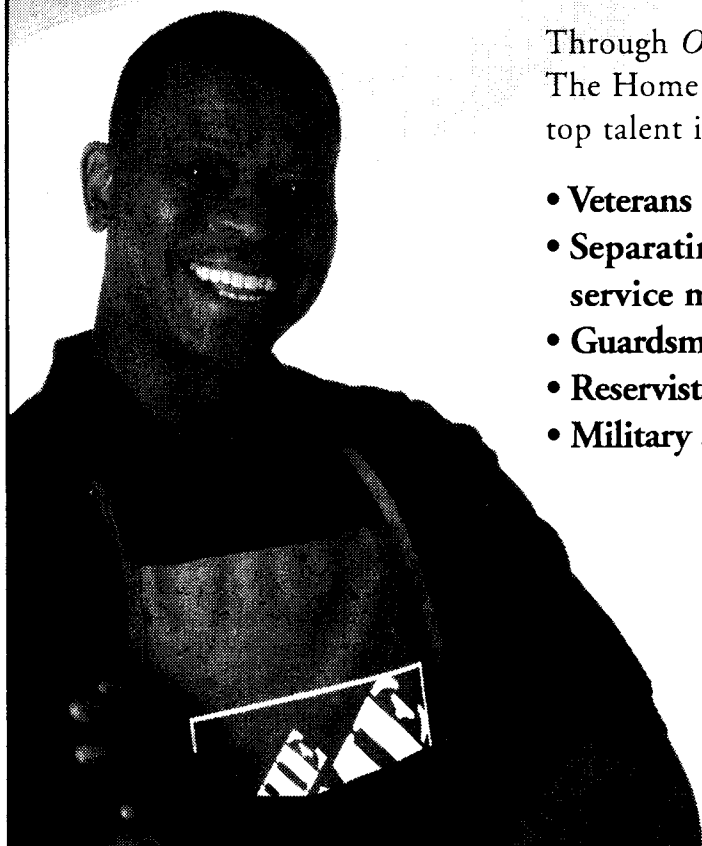

"As we grow, we get stronger," said Sgt. Todd Washburn, who was with the 36th Engineer Group (Combat) while the unit was stationed here.

"We're a living, breathing thing ... one gigantic powerhouse, and when we're at full strength, we'll be Army Strong," Washburn said.

Take financial responsibility to heart this year

Advice from Financial Readiness Program manager on taxes, spending plans, savings and debt

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Since it's early in the year and tax season, right now is a good time to look at finances and remember to be financially responsible, according to financial wizards.

It may be tempting to use a tax rebate toward a large purchase or to put it all toward paying off debt, but Ann Pratcher, the Financial Readiness Program manager, has some different advice — the rule of thirds.

Save a third, pay off debt with a third and use the last third on something fun, she said. Throw a party — to use a refund this way works toward financial goals while still allowing for a little fun.

Pratcher gives financial classes on post and works with people on an individual basis in the Army Community Service's Financial Readiness Center.

To the people who come into the office, she first suggests developing a spending plan and uses worksheets to help calculate monthly living expenses and debts.

Spending plans should include EVERYTHING you spend money on, she said. Many people forget or overlook certain things, like going back to the grocery store, alcohol, tobacco, vet bills and storage.

People tend to forget the periodic expenses that aren't monthly bills, like property taxes, vehicle maintenance and insurance, she said.

Once the spending plan is established, it takes a few months to find out if it is realistic, she said, because the daily coffee purchase was overlooked and adjustments will need to be made. For this reason, it's important to track all expenses.

It's also important to establish financial goals and to know your net worth, she said.

"Most of us are going to make in the neighborhood of $2 million in our lifetime," Pratcher said. "How are you going to use it?"

That's where the goals come in. Ask yourself if you want to have a dream home to retire in or an inheritance to leave your children, she said. The goals need to be very specific.

"The only difference between a goal and a dream is whether it's measurable and whether you're willing to work toward it," Pratcher said.

A good rule of thumb for two-income households is to use the first income for monthly living expenses and use the second for luxuries, niceties and savings, Pratcher said.

If you're in a committed relationship, the goals you and your partner set have to be mutual, she said.

"All of us come into a relationship with a money history. If our money history is different from our partner's money history, there could be problems," Pratcher said.

Couples need to talk about goals and decide how much money they want to make, spend and save, whether or not they will both work, how they plan to put the kids through college and how much they plan to use for gift giving, she said.

When she was a brand-new Army wife, she and her husband had different ideas about what being able to afford something meant, she said.

It's also important to decide who will make the decisions about money. Does the person who makes the money get to decide or does the couple have to decide together?

Pratcher recommends having three different types of savings set up. The first and most important is an emergency fund, pockets each day and put it in a jar. She once met a man who had saved $800 in a change jar.

Once change money is saved, establish a savings account with a bank to avoid the fees the banks sometimes charge for having a low balance in the account.

Pratcher also recommends doing small things to save money — bring lunch from home one day a week and save the money that would have been used to buy lunch.

Pratcher recommends using a debt-to-income ratio to evaluate how bad your debt is. To get a debt-to-income ratio, take the total non-mortgage debt monthly payments (cars, student loans, credit cards, store cards, gas cards and money borrowed from friends or family) and divide it by the total monthly income. The result will be a percentage.

Fifteen percent is a yellow light, Pratcher said, which means you should think carefully before adding any new debts. Twenty percent is a red light, which means you want to think about

The only difference between a goal and a dream is whether it's measurable and whether you're willing to work toward it.

NEWS AROUND the ARMY

In case you get sick ... in Hawaii

Tripler Army Medical Center hosted the training course "Moulage: The Art of Injury Simulation" Jan. 8-11 that was open to all medical facilities in Honolulu, Hawaii.

The four-day course taught students everything from how to treat blisters to treating a patient with a protruding bone fracture in a realistic manner.

The course was to help Soldiers to train in real-life situations, and to help local facilities in their moulage training.

Judging from the picture on the Web site, the participants' training looked like a scene from the TV show ER.

Heroic master sergeant saves lives

While out in the early morning hours of May 5, 2006, Master Sgt. Rodriguez Ramos, while administering a last-chance Army Physical Fitness Test, put himself in front of a Ford Mustang that was bearing down on the troops on Fort Knox, Ky.

The Mustang first hit Staff Sgt. Kenneth Smith, a drill sergeant who was helping Ramos with the testing. The car then kept going toward the five Soldiers taking the test. Ramos pushed a Soldier out of the way.

The car hit Ramos and two of the other Soldiers before stopping after it drove into a storm drain. The Soldier Ramos pushed out of the way most certainly would have received the brunt of the impact if Ramos had not pushed him out of the way.

Ramos, who suffered from a broken right leg, fractured pelvis, broken right shoulder, damage to his spleen and cuts to the back of his head, received the Soldiers' Medal in a ceremony held Jan. 5.

On a previous deployment, Soldiers of the 2nd Battalion, 82nd Field Artillery, 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division were doing the job of an Infantryman, calling for fire support and also security escorts, presence patrols and conducting raids to capture insurgents.

Now in Baqubah, Iraq, the Soldiers are doing their job and are happy about it. They are sending 155 mm rounds downrange.

The FA also provides indirect fire support for the brigade.

Basic training for Iraqis becomes standardized

5TH MOBILE PUBLIC AFFAIRS DETACHMENT
Sgt. Michael Tuttle

KIRKUK, Iraq — Iraqi soldiers, like American Soldiers, start training at a very basic level. They're issued uniforms and a rifle, they learn the rules of the military, and they learn the importance of a tight bunk and an organized locker. After six weeks of basic training, the new jondis, or Iraqi soldiers, join the swelling ranks of Iraq's army, an army preparing to become a self-sufficient force.

The Regional Training Center in Kirkuk cycles as many as 2,000 Iraqi soldiers through basic training at a time, 500 more than they did a short while ago. The increase is a result of a planned troop surge, as outlined by President Bush in his speech to the nation Jan. 10. Iraq will add 30,000 new soldiers by midyear. The RTC at Kirkuk will train about 8,000 of those.

The RTC, which trains recruits from the northern region of Iraq and as far south as Tikrit, has transformed basic training here into a standardized program for the new Iraqi army with the help of the Coalition Military Assistance Transition Team. When the CMATT came here seven months ago, the RTC was small with limited resources, almost no funding, a staff one-third the size it is now and no more than 700 soldiers in training, said 1st Sgt. Jeffrey Morris, CMATT's NCOIC.

"You wouldn't even recognize this place from six or seven months ago," Morris said. "The Iraqis have come so far. I think they have really learned how to be flexible. They're dedicated to their mission, so they make it happen."

The CMATT is a four-soldier U.S. military transition team that works with the RTC as advisors and mentors. Their primary goal is to standardize training here and throughout all the basic training bases in Iraq. A basic training program of instruction at one base used to be entirely different from another, said Morris, who has 10 years of basic training experience as a drill sergeant and first sergeant at Fort Jackson, S.C.

The POI is standard throughout all training bases in Iraq now, he said.

"All of the instructors have gone through the same training and the schools teach the same subjects the same amount of hours," Morris said. "I think that's going to be the key to success for these soldiers."

The improved curriculum is similar to basic combat training in the United States. The program is designed to instill in the trainees the values of the Iraqi army, "to protect his country and to serve his people," said Iraqi Command Sgt. Maj. Muhrad Sarheed Abed, the RTC command sergeant major.

The program includes an hour of PT daily, drill and ceremony, map reading, combatives, military customs and courtesies, Iraq history and military history. Medical training and tactical maneuvers currently being used by the Iraqi army are still included. Every hour of every day is accounted for in the new POI, which is a major change from the RTC's previous schedule, which had no specific times or standards, Morris said.

"They were literally making up things from experience to be able to teach a class," Morris said. "And now they're in a classroom with projectors, computers and PowerPoint presentations in Arabic. They do after action reviews and training briefs every day. The transformation has been unbelievable, beyond our expectations."

Trainees also spend more time on the ranges, Morris said.

Whereas before, they fired only four rounds in a month to get the feel of their AK-47, now they may fire 48 rounds in a day.

In addition to basic soldier skills, trainees are also taught how to work and interact with Iraqi civilians.

"So if an Iraqi army soldier is on a mission in a village," Morris said, "he knows how to deal with civilians and be respectful to them."

As the Iraqi army moves forward as a self-sufficient force, it's important that it be respected by the Iraqi people, he said.

The RTC's command sergeant major said he is proud of the Iraqi army, which makes taking care of soldiers a priority.

"The old army was built on many bad things, including torture and unfair treatment of soldiers," Abed said. "The food was bad, and the training and equipment was poor. Now you can see a big difference, because there is respect and we treat soldiers as human beings."

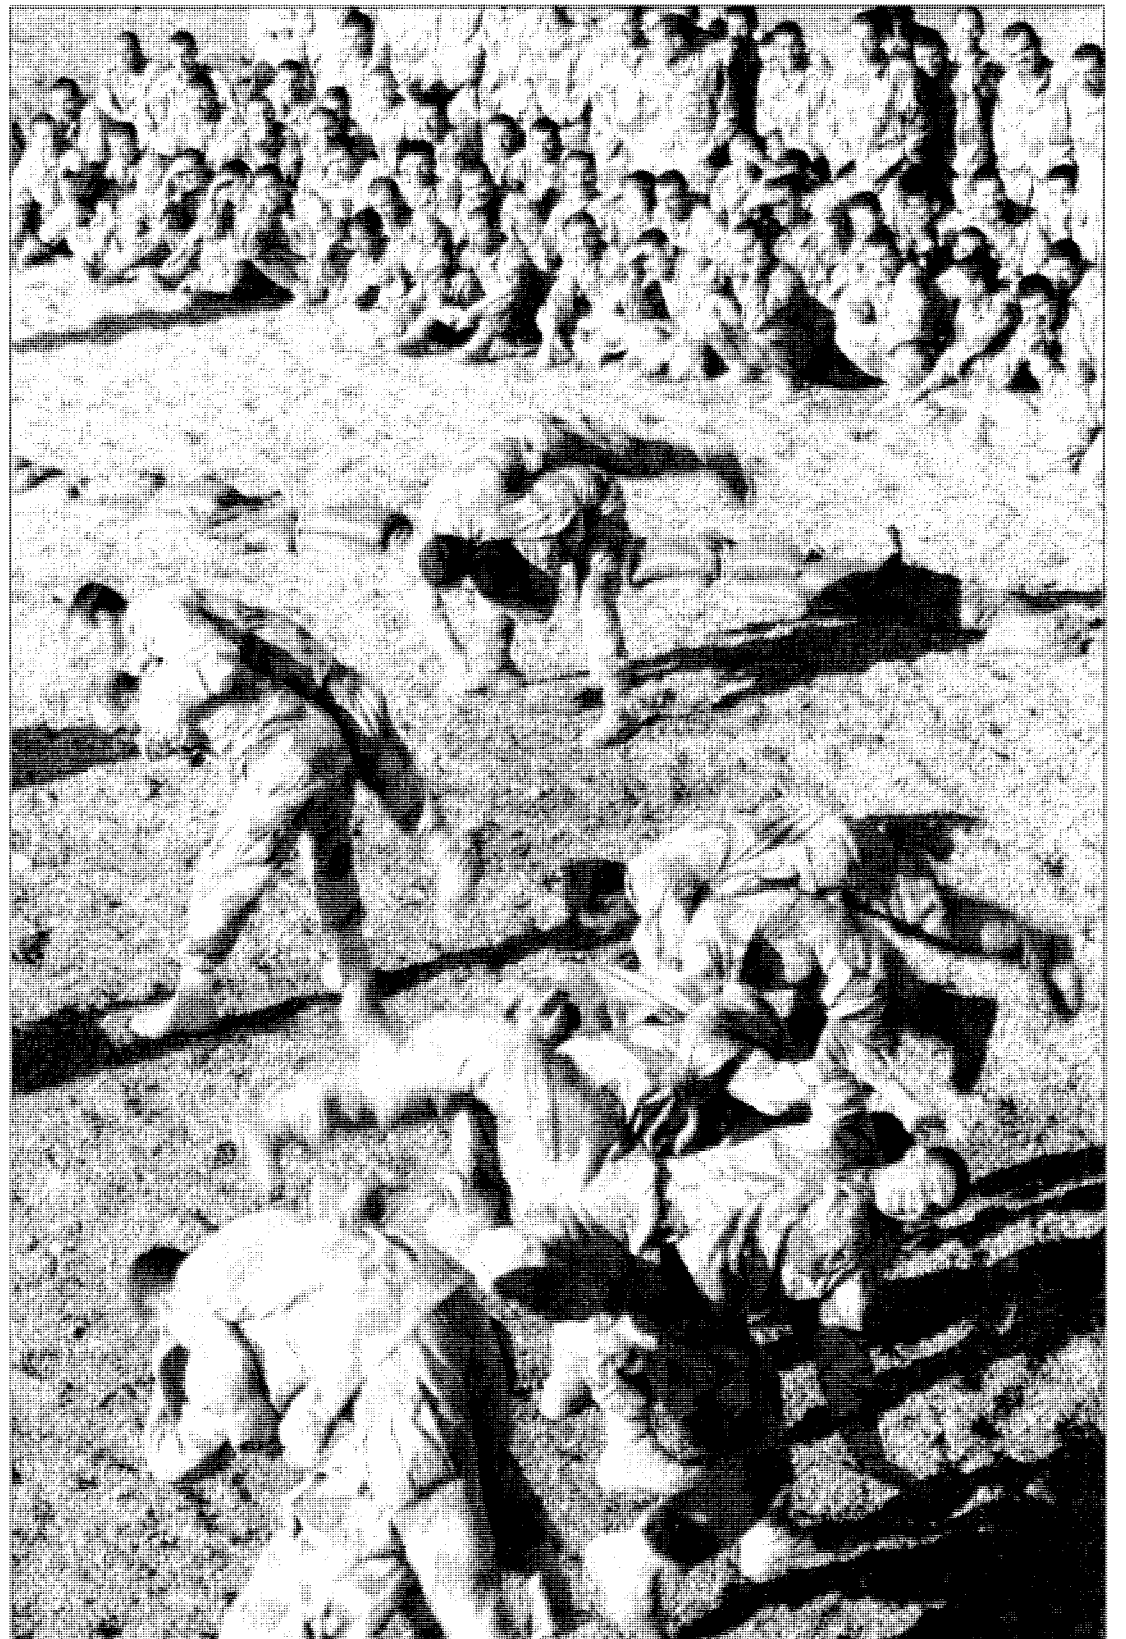

The basic training transformation has armed the jondis with better skills and has made them more well-rounded soldiers, Morris said.

"I know that the jondis that graduate from basic training here are learning things that no other Iraqi soldier has had a chance to learn," he said. "Officers and NCOs here have told us that, 'When I was in basic training, I didn't know any of this stuff.' Things that the cadre are learning to teach as instructors were never taught to them as basic trainees."

"They're graduating soldiers now that are some of the best Iraqi soldiers that have ever been," he said. "Those soldiers are going out to their units and bringing the new information and training."

All of the instructors have gone through the same training and the schools teach the same subjects the same amount of hours. I think that's going to be the key to success for these soldiers.

— 1st Sgt. Jeffrey Morris

Iraqi army basic training soldiers, or jondis, participate in combatives training at the Regional Training Center in Kirkuk. The jondis will graduate to join the Iraqi army after six weeks of training.

Iraqi army trainees march during drill and ceremony training at the Regional Training Center in Kirkuk. The trainees are in the second of six weeks of basic training. U.S. Soldiers, part of a Coalition Military Assistance Transition Team, have helped standardize basic training in Iraq.

Sergeant Airborne. Every Airborne Soldier knows him. He is the NCO who wears the black hat. He is an Airborne School instructor. All eyes are on him, because his Soldiers know they'll be jumping out of airplanes.

"The human fear factor is built in. They want to know how to do it ... and do it right," said Staff Sgt. William Pittman, one of many "Sergeants Airborne" at Fort Benning's Airborne School. "They're counting on us to teach them the right way. So, we have to uphold the standards and be on top of every situation."

"When Airborne students arrive, we're the first person they see," said Staff Sgt. Bill Beckstrand, D Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment. "We're the ones who train potential paratroopers and our responsibility is to effectively train all aspects of Airborne operations from day one."

Similar to the long days drill sergeants endure, Sergeant Airborne begins his day with physical training, including many miles of the 'Airborne shuffle.'

The instructors work long days, beginning at dawn with physical training, Beckstrand said. During jump week, training continues into the evening in order for all students to complete five jumps, a requirement for Airborne qualification.

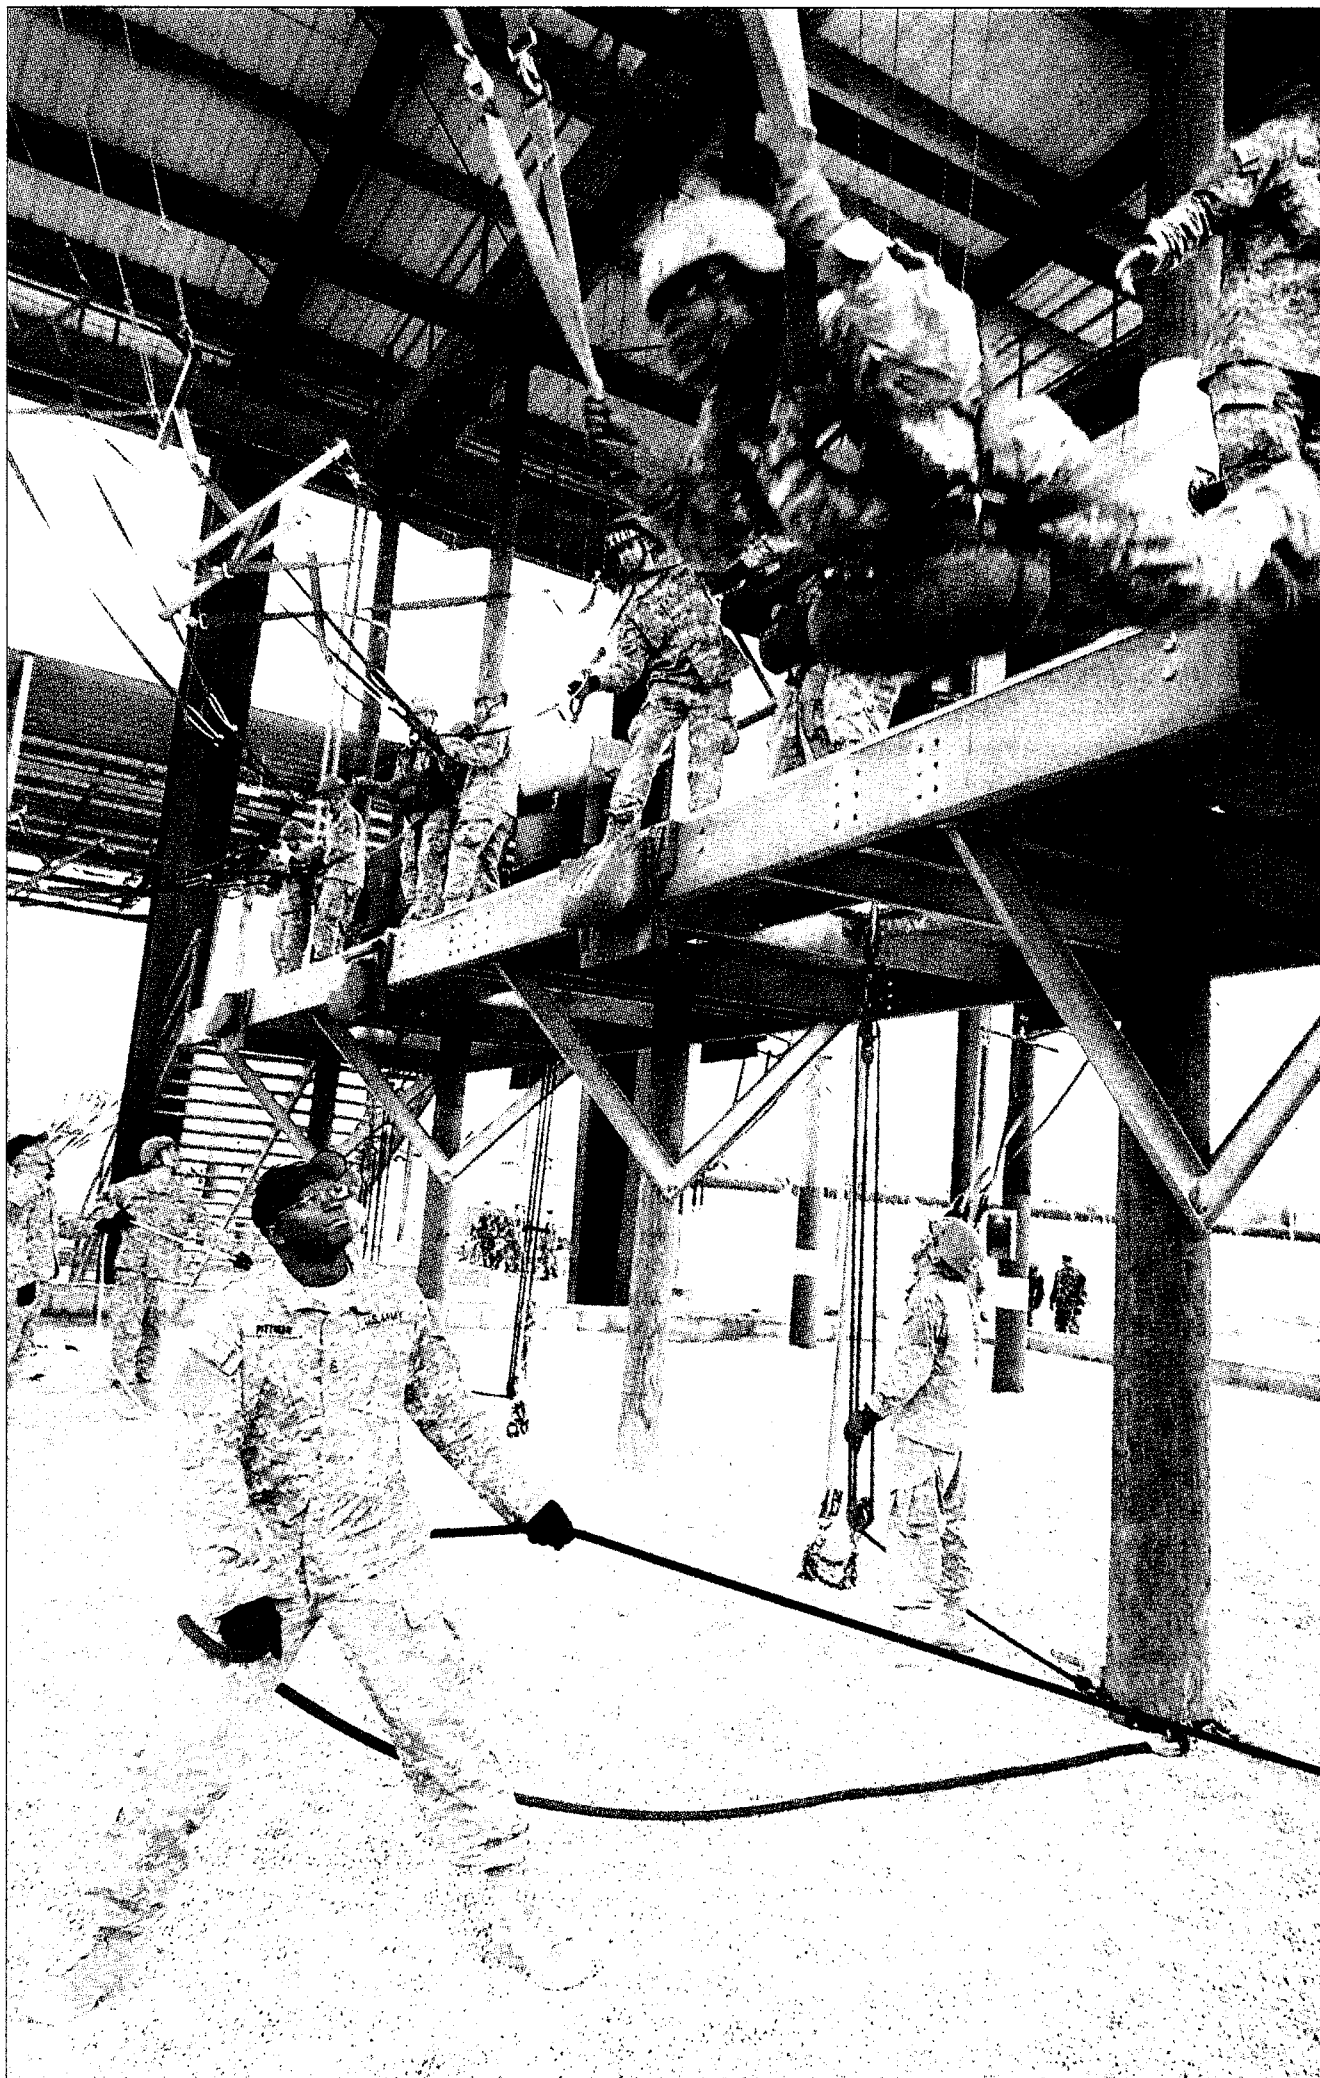

Training young paratroopers presents unique challenges, Beckstrand said.

"We have Soldiers who are afraid of heights. We have to help them overcome that fear," Beckstrand said.

"Not all Soldiers arrive at Airborne School at the same level, and grasping the concept can be difficult. So you have to have a lot of patience," Pittman said.

"Earning their silver wings isn't easy, and meeting the standards cannot be waived," said Sgt. 1st Class Reginald Jackson. "There's no room for error. We have to watch everything a Soldier does to ensure every safety precaution is observed to prevent injury."

"We encourage every Soldier who wants to become a paratrooper, because we know they volunteered, and we want to help them achieve their goal. It's great to see Soldiers become Airborne-qualified and pin on those silver wings," Pittman said.

Staff Sgt. William Pittman, right, reaches to rescue Sgt. 1st Class Keith Breland on a 250-foot jump tower during a 'man in steel' rescue exercise. The rescue must be completed in eight minutes as part of certification for Airborne instructors who operate the school's towers.

"We're a part of a revolving door in the global effort to combat terrorism," she said.

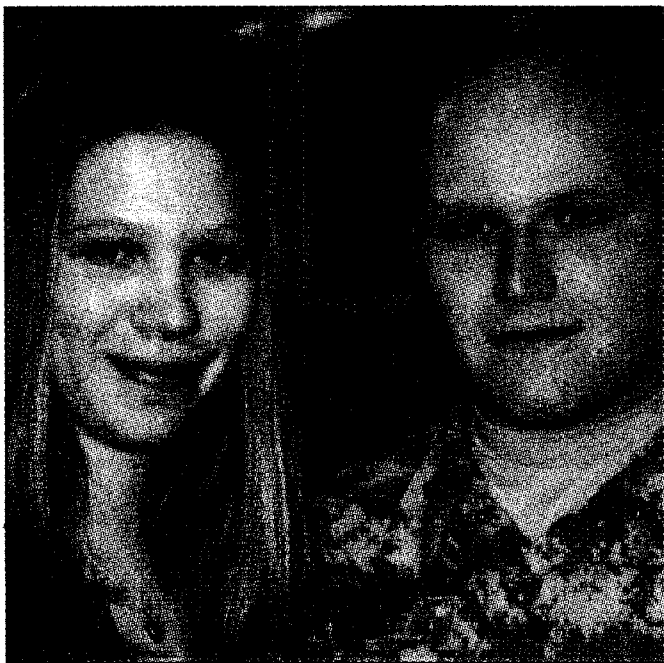

"Use the Soldier's Creed to take you through the next twelve months," Lett said.

Lett told the audience about being asked for words of wisdom by a deploying Soldier. Her advice to him and the Comanches — to take these four key principles with them on the mission — to be mentally and physically fit, believe in something greater than self, have faith in the equipment, leaders and subordinates, and to be part of the solution, not the problem.

Rogers said the Soldiers and families were up for the task. The Soldiers are familiar with the area and the mission, and the families have the support of the family readiness group, which will keep the families informed, she said.

"We'll use the Internet to stay in touch," said Doble's wife, Mary Beth, who's planning on spending the year in Maine with her family.

"We've got a Web cam, we'll e-mail, and my mother will video the baby's birth. We'll send the DVD to him in Iraq."

Instructor: Earns medal for effort to save victim

"It's bittersweet because I'm honored that people took the time to recognize the risk of my life, but at the same time I feel bad because of the loss of a life," Feliciano said.

The incident in which Feliciano displayed his heroics happened when a vehicle had moments earlier veered off the road and into Upatoi Creek from a 30 foot tall bridge near the Post Exchange.

"I was helping a friend move off post and was on the way back for another load when I saw people on the bridge looking down. I stopped to ask what happened.

"They told me. I parked and went in," said Feliciano.

Feliciano acted immediately, descending the hill and plunging into the frigid and rain-swollen Upatoi waters to assist two others in rescuing the driver from his overturned vehicle.

"The thing I remember most is how cold it was. It was so cold it hurt.

"He was dead when I got there, but I was able to bring him back for a little while," said Feliciano.

He continued applying cardiopulmonary resuscitation to the victim in the water until rescue personnel arrived to get everyone from the water and the victim into an ambulance and to the hospital.

"Ultimately, he had hypothermia so some of his organs quit working and he died," Feliciano said.

Feliciano's knowledge acquired from years of U.S. Army medic training and practice helped him assess the victim's condition and to begin first aid even before the victim could be brought ashore.

"What's strange is how your convictions and training make you react to things without thinking.

"If I would have sat back and thought about it, I wouldn't have done it. It was just instinct," said Feliciano.

Staff Sgt. Jeffry Feliciano, pictured here after receiving the Soldier's Medal, tried to save an accident victim in 2005.

Wallace: Says combining Infantry, Armor overdue

and were it not for the sacrifices of the Soldier's family — would not have an opportunity to live free at all. Thank you for your sacrifices."

Wallace was in town for the conference, which brought together 85 senior Army leaders, mostly from TRADOC, including 32 general officers. The purpose of the event, Wallace said, was to make sure the people responsible for Army doctrine are all on the same page.

"Before you can develop doctrine, you have to have some conception of what the Army of the future's going to look like," he said. "Our senior leaders need to be personally involved in understanding those concepts. It is they that teach these doctrines to our Soldiers. It's important that the senior leaders of TRADOC get together periodically to review upcoming doctrine publications and to review future concepts, to make sure we all agree with it, understand it and can teach it."

Wallace briefly touched on the subject of the Armor School's move to Fort Benning. It's long overdue, he said. The development of a maneuver center will result in better training opportunities for both forces.

"The combining of the Armor School and the Infantry School here at Fort Benning is kind of a recognition that historically the Infantry and Armor Soldiers have cohabited on the battlefield. They are the primary arm of the United States Army," he said. "The idea was kicked around in the inner sanctum of the Army for twenty, thirty years. It's a good thing for the Army, and the time is right."

As for the question first posed — How is the Army preparing Soldiers for the war on terrorism? — Wallace said the answer starts right here at Fort Benning.

"We bring citizens here and turn them into warriors," he said. "We teach them Army values. We teach them what it's like to be a member of the winning team. We give them the skills necessary for them to contribute immediately to the organizations they'll be handed off to."

"That's the Soldier piece, and it's incredibly important to the U.S. Army."

Nett: Credits Frances, wife of 64 years, with success

the scars of and disabilities of many years of service," said Wallace, who used the occasion of his presence at the TRADOC Doctrine and Concept Conference to present the award.

Nett retired in 1973 with 33 years of service. He taught in local schools for 17 years, and was named Teacher of the Year in 1985. Teaching was "precious" to him, Nett said. After his second retirement, he took to the classroom at Fort Benning, where he regularly led classes and seminars at the Officer Candidate School. The naming of Nett Hall is a tribute to the man who once served as battalion commander there, a man who has uses his platform as a Medal of Honor recipient to champion the cause of veterans.

"He continues to be an inspiration," Wallace said. "He continues to provide wise counsel and service. He has made the world a better place."

Nett was joined by his wife of 64 years, Frances, who served in the Army Nurse Corps during World War II. The two sat side-by-side, center stage in wheelchairs, Nett wearing the Medal of Honor around his neck and Frances looking pretty in pink.

"Any success I can claim, I owe to her," he said. "She often found herself having to fill the roles of mother and father while I was away for months at a time. She gave freely of herself. She raised our family and helped generations of Soldiers and their wives. I couldn't have done it without her."

The Netts said they met Bob Hope on several occasions. They were there in the audience when he performed for the troops in the Philippines during World War II. It rained that day, Frances said — it poured, but neither of them minded much.

"He had a spirit, a personality that would attract anyone to him," Frances said of Hope. "Every word he said was funny, but he was not a show off. Not at all."

Nett said the honor of receiving an award "affiliated with Mr. Hope is enormous."

"It will certainly occupy a place of honor in our home," he said. "But I assure you there are so many people more deserving than I."

Enforcement, the U.S. Department of Labor, and the U.S. Social Security Administration. The raids resulted in 18 arrests at the other installations.

"It is of utmost importance to guard our military installations against potential threats," said Kenneth Smith, special agent in charge of the ICE's Office of Investigation in Atlanta. "ICE is committed to protecting our critical infrastructure against people using assumed or stolen identities.

"Defending the integrity of any U.S. Army post is in the best interest of the men and women serving our country and those they defend," Smith said.

The U.S. District Court may consider prosecuting 22 of those arrested for entering the country illegally and begin removal proceedings.

According to immigration officials, two of the individuals apprehended did enter the country legally, but their eligibility to remain has expired. Bond was denied for all the defendants, who appeared before a U.S. Magistrate in Columbus. They're currently being held in Muscogee and Harris county jails.

Individuals attempting to enter a military installation with false or fraudulent identification can be cited for various infractions, including criminal trespassing, according to a U.S. ICE press release dated Tuesday.

Employers who hire undocumented workers face stiff consequences also. Anyone who knowingly hires unauthorized workers can be cited with aiding and abetting and may be charged with conspiracy.

On Fort Benning, "prime" contractors, those awarded contracts, who often employ subcontractors, are responsible for conducting thorough background checks.

"If you do business on Fort Benning," Walls said, "you better make sure you have a bona fide, legal work force."

Moore said post officials plan to implement a badging system for contractors this year, and they'll be keeping a close eye on the forms of ID being used.

BENCH NOTES

BY ERIN NASH

Parcells retires

One of the NFL's coaching greats, Bill Parcells, announced his retirement Jan. 22. He coached the Dallas Cowboys for the past four seasons.

In his career, Parcells took the New York Giants to the Super Bowl twice and won, went to the Super Bowl as the New England Patriots' head coach and led the New York Jets to an AFC game.

There are a lot of names in the pot for who will replace Parcells. My guess is Cowboys owner Jerry Jones is going to have to find a coach that can handle T.O.

Super Bowl XLII set

Peyton Manning and the Indianapolis Colts finally broke their playoff curse, beating the New England Patriots, 38-34, in the AFC Championship Game Jan. 21 at the RCA Dome in Indianapolis.

Rex Grossman, despite having communication errors with the timeline, managed to lead his team to a 39-14 win over the New Orleans Saints.

Super Bowl XLII is set for 8:30 p.m. Feb. 4 at Dolphin Stadium in Miami.

I'm going with the AFC, even though the Colts beat my team. Manning deserves his first ring and should get many more in the future.

Men's NCAA rankings

The top four teams remained unchanged in the NCAA men's basketball ESPN/USA Today's poll. They are: Florida, UCLA, Wisconsin, UNC. Ohio State rounds out the top five.

Looks like Florida may be on its way to another national championship. Bring on March Madness, I'm ready.

Mark cleared

After being forced to turn over a water bottle that had a secret compartment that bore traces of a substance that smoked like marijuana at Miami International Airport Jan. 17, Atlanta Falcons quarterback Michael Vick won't face criminal charges, according to ESPN.com.

Lab tests on the bottle did not find any traces of drugs.

There will also be no disciplinary measures from the Falcons or the NFL, since there was no wrongdoing.

That may be all good and well, but I've never heard of a water bottle with a "secret compartment." I'm still scratching my head over that one.

Association Open Tennis

The women's final match-up for the Association Open will be aired live at 9:30 p.m. today on ESPN2.

The men's final will be aired live at noon on Sunday.

Roger Federer is the number one seed for the men.

Maria Sharapova is the women's number one seed.

Serena Williams, who is unseeded, will meet up with Sharapova for the women's final.

Forget everything you've ever heard about rugby, said Rich Funke, who coaches the Columbus/Fort Benning Cruise-A-Matics. He's heard it all — rugby is dangerous, it's a brawl, and it's not so much a sport as an excuse to drink beer.

Not so, said Funke, a former member of the All Army rugby team. Studies show football players suffer serious injuries three Fort Benning's wrestling team is looking for a few good kids. About 36 children wrestle with the Fort Benning Black Knights, but head coach Chris McFarland is hoping more kids will sign up.

"I'd love to see 50 or 75 kids out there," McFarland said, during the team's practice Monday at the Main Post combatives facility.

"Wrestling is one of the best sports to teach sportsmanship," McFarland said. "We have some great wrestlers on our team, but our main goal is for the kids to have fun. We keep track of wins and losses, but we prefer kids walk off the mat smiling, than place in a tournament."

Wrestling builds strength, agility and stamina, McFarland said, and the Fort Benning kids get a great workout.

"At tournaments, our wrestlers are in better shape than other teams," he said.

Assistant coach Mike Kaufmann agrees.

"We're teaching the kids basic wrestling, but it's more about physical fitness, learning to work hard and having fun," Kaufmann said.

Kaufmann, who wrestled at the collegiate level, will take over as head coach later this year.

This is so much better than the band

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

I was asked to introduce myself in 700 words or less. It reminds me of writing a profile for a dating Web site.

Hmm, should I start by describing my rugged good looks or talk about my position as the newest photojournalist at The Bayonet? I suppose I'll just stick to the script for now.

I graduated with a bachelors in fine arts from Columbus State University, the final stop of a three-school trek. I'm thrilled to be back home after a stint in New York City.

I loved it there and it was hard to leave, but I decided to trade the scenic view of graffiti and the stench of the subway for the familiar view of real houses and the smell of fresh grass.

I honed my writing chops there working for several hip-hop publications. I also worked as a sports research writer, which means I literally watched television and got paid for it.

No joke.

Sports are my thing though you wouldn't know it from my prediction that the San Diego Chargers would win the Super Bowl. On the other hand, I am smoking the competition in my NBA fantasy basketball league by nearly 2,000 points.

Maybe I love sports so much because I never had the chance to play them. I was a "band geek." I hate that term because I know for a fact that I was the Richard Roundtree of the Hardaway High band with an unmistakably cool approach to drums and saxophone. My background is entertainment writing, but the transition to sports should be a smooth one.

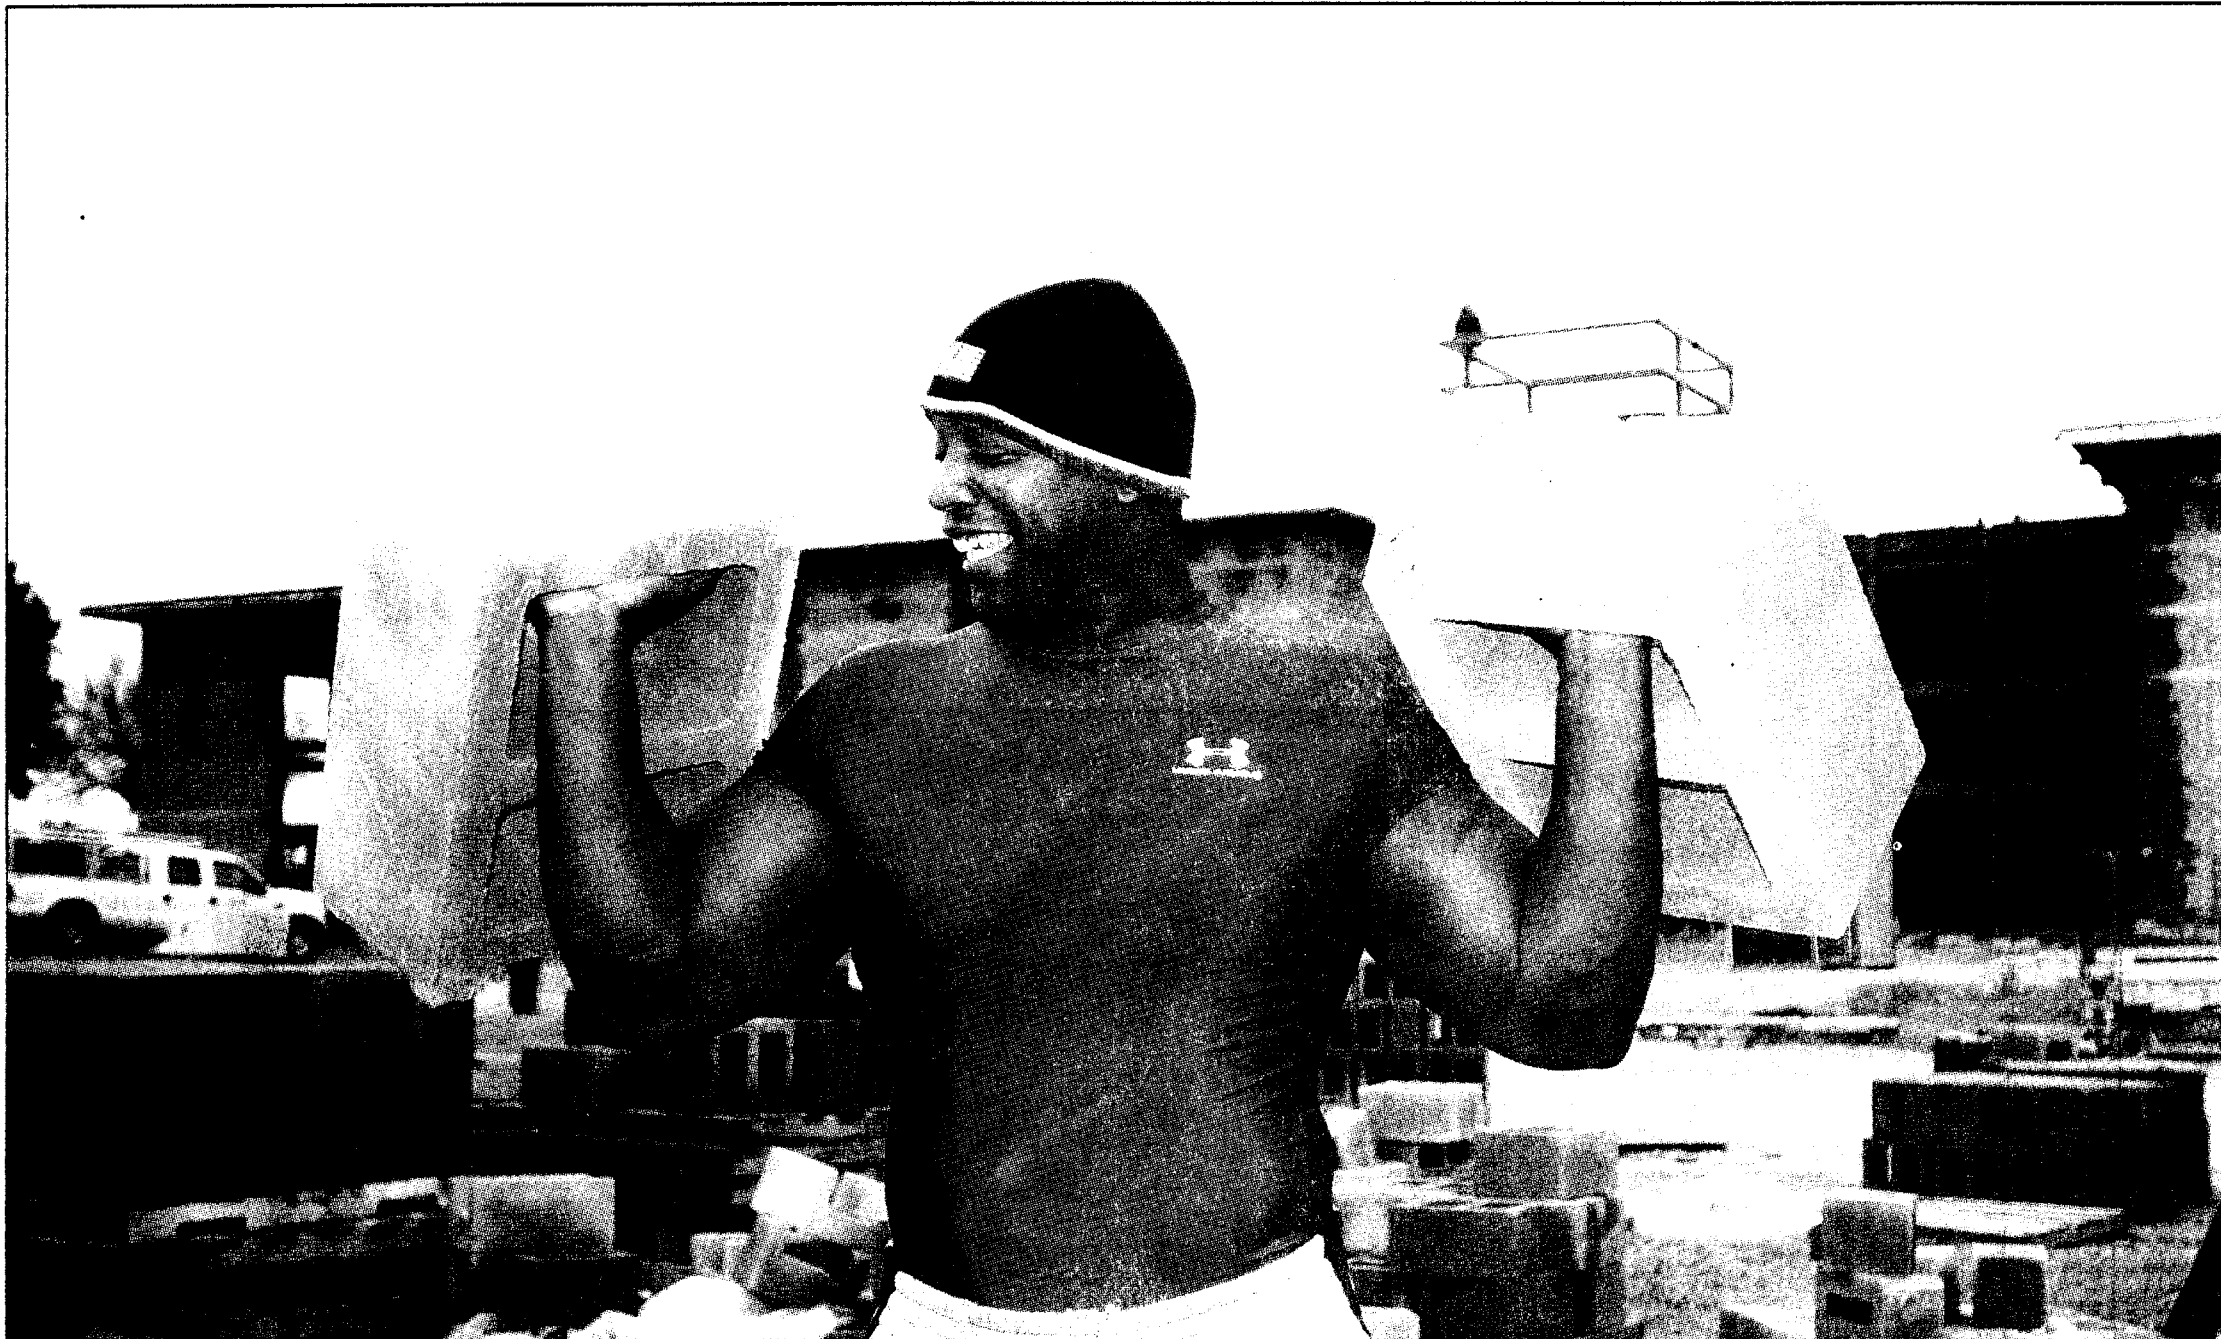

The hardest part of my job so far has nothing to do with the work — it's navigating this post.

I have lived in Columbus for most of my life, and I know NOTHING about Fort Benning. I will trade sports statistics, opinions and expert predictions (Go Chargers!!!!) for accurate driving instructions.

Perry Taylor can't wait for the new post fitness center to open. The 38-year-old BNCOC instructor, a staff sergeant, is counting the days till the gym on Dixie Road opens for new business. Not his business, just new business.

"I think it'll clear out the other gyms for a while," Taylor said, and that's a good thing. "I don't go to the gym to socialize, so I like a gym where I can get in and get to it and go."

These days, Taylor works out here and there — on Sand Hill, at Briant Wells or the Infantry Hall gym, which is slated for closure when the new one opens. He works out wherever there's elbow room three or four times a week at nearly two hours a pop.

Which explains why the 6-foot, 5-inch Taylor went from 175 pounds eight years ago to 268 pounds, with a chest that measures 44 inches around. It explains why he benches 415 pounds on a good day and leg presses 1,200.

There'll be plenty of weights to press and lift and heft, whether Taylor chooses to or not, when the 100,000 square foot fitness center opens midsummer.

Benning Physical Fitness Center is progressing quite nicely, said Ken Wetherill, the sports director for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, the organization responsible for most of the gyms on post.

Last week, Wetherill said, the construction team hosted a "roof topping" ceremony, a traditional celebration of the "halfway point."

"Folks driving past will start noticing it all coming together," he said.

The new fitness center will include three basketball courts, two racquetball courts, two pools, a weight room and a cardiovascular training room.

Games are fun for the whole family, Funke said, and with more and more high schoolers showing interest in rugby, local club members are emphasizing a wholesome experience for all ages.

Gary Kent, a former Cruiser, is "testing the water," seeing if there is enough interest locally to launch school teams or teams for high schoolers, whichever the case may be. Not all of the schools have turned out enough players to field a 15-man team, said Kent, and there are not enough adult volunteers to coach a team from each school.

If all else fails, teams may consist of students from various schools.

Students interested in playing and adults interested in volunteering should call Kent at 706-324-4924.

Poplar Place horse show season begins

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Poplar Place Farm in Hamilton, Ga., held its first horse show of the year last weekend and 150 horses and their riders competed in the two-day eventing competition.

The competition, also called a horse trial, has three different events in which horses and riders compete — dressage, which tests a horse on flatwork, show jumping, which has a course of fences in an arena, and cross-country, which has a course of jumps spread out over several miles of grass and hills.

Jennifer Holling, a horse trainer from Ocala, Fla., rode two horses in last weekend's competition. She placed fourth in the open training division on a mare named Hafflicht, or Flicka for short.

On Sunday, she rode both horses on the cross country course.

"(Flicka) is very young and inexperienced," Holling said. "But she got better and better as the course went on."

Holling rode 6-year-old Flicka for the mare's owner as a schooling ride.

Holling also placed 15th in the open preliminary division on a horse named Gideon.

Gideon is a young, easily distracted horse, Holling said. She fell during her ride but she got back on and the rest of the course went better, she said.

"I've been coming to Poplar Place three or four times a year since it opened," Holling said. "It's my favorite event."

Poplar Place has great amenities and a beautiful course, she said, so she brings all of her students here.

"When you come to a lovely facility, you raise your expectations of yourself," Holling said. "When the facility puts a lot of effort into the event, you should put in that much effort. It's a lovely place to come and enjoy yourself."

Holling enjoys riding at the upper levels, but her favorite part of being a horse trainer is taking care of the animals.

At her farm in Florida, she takes care of her husband Jonathan's horses. Jonathan competes at Poplar Place too, and he won two divisions at last September's horse trials.

Eventing horses are pretty cool because they have to be good at three totally different events, Holling said. The horses have to be well-rounded and talented.

The cross-country course for last weekend's show included a water complex where horses had to jump into and out of a pool of water. Poplar Place's water complex has a waterfall, a catfish jump, two oar jumps and a dock with a fisherman.

"Each jump is like a work of art," said Allina Strickland, director of marketing.

The jumps are visually beautiful and safe for the horses to jump, she said.

Some of the other cross-country fences include an Indian mound, a hot tub and a set of Civil War jumps with cannons and tents.

Poplar Place will have seven recognized horse trials and five recognized dressage shows this year, as well as schooling shows and clinics. The shows at Poplar Place draw riders from the entire eastern seaboard and some from as far away as Canada and California, Strickland said.

Each show has a different show jumping course and almost every show has a different cross-country course, Strickland said.

The three biggest shows have a small fee for visitors, the profits of which go to a nonprofit organization.

The shows usually benefit the American Cancer Society, the Humane Society and Boy Scouts, Strickland said.

The smaller shows are free and open to the public. Poplar Place Farm is north of Columbus on Veterans Parkway.

For more information and a schedule of shows, go to www.poplarplacefarm.com.

Katherine Bell rides Toy Master through the marina obstacle, or water jump, on the cross-country course Sunday. Toy Master had to canter down into the water and jump up onto the steep bank on the other side. The horse and rider pair then jumped a fence made of a giant oar at the top of the bank.

Darrin Mollett rides Juris Doctor over a brush fence that leads into the woods on the course. The fence, known as "Bullwinkle's Crossing," required horses to jump from the open area into the wooded area.

Marti Williams rides Tupie's Parlay at the horse trials. The ditch jump required horses to jump a log fence over a large ditch. The jump was used as part of the training level division, but was not used for the lower levels.

NWTF hosts sixth annual banquet

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The National Wildlife Turkey Federation will have its sixth annual Hunting Heritage Banquet March 22.

Bill Brickner, NWTF committee member, said space is limited and tickets will be sold on a first-come, first-serve basis.

"It gets bigger and bigger every year," Brickner said.

Doors will open at 6 p.m. Dinner will be served at 7:30 and will feature a ribeye steak or chicken breast, baked potato, salad, rolls, tea and dessert. The banquet features an auction, and numerous door prizes will be distributed.

Ticket prices for the banquet are:

- $55 for a single ticket, which covers the meal and a NWTF membership;
- $80 covers a "Gobbler and Hen" ticket, for a member and spouse, which includes meals, a NWTF membership and a subscription to Women in the Outdoors.

- $280 for a "Sponsor" ticket, which includes membership, a sponsors' gift bag, raffle tickets and a chance to win a gun. Purchasers of this ticket can bring their spouses for free as well.

- $15 for a "Jakes" ticket for a turkey hunter 17 years old or younger.

The nonprofit organization gives 90 percent of its net funds from the banquet back into the wildlife, Brickner said.

The banquet has a large number of military patrons as well as civilians.

The banquet will take place at the E.O.P. Lodge on Heiferhorn Way behind the Welcome Center off Whitesville Road.

For more information, call Brickner at 706-681-4549 or 706-563-0189.

Hats off to singing it right or not at all

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

I've held my tongue long enough on this one. The AFC Championship game was the straw that broke the camel's back.

Not the game itself, but gospel singer Yolanda

Adams, who, while performing the Star-

Spangled Banner, sang

the lyrics as "Gave proof to the night," instead of the correct lyrics of

"Gave proof through the night." I'm insulted, as the rest of patriotic Americans should be.

I was never so happy to have TiVo as I was Sunday night. I was cleaning up in my living room as Adams was singing, and my head snapped up when I heard her sing the lyrics wrong.

"Did she just say, 'Gave proof to the night?'"

I asked my husband?

"I think so. Rewind it," he said.

Through the magic of TiVo, I rewound it and listened again. Yup, sounded like "to the night" to me.

"That's just wrong," I told my husband.

"They should make anyone who wants to sing the national anthem in public take a written test and then sing it at least five times to make sure they get it right."

I started thinking about all the sporting events I've been to in person and watched on TV. Usually the singers are pretty good.

Few can reach the high note at the "rockets red glare" part, but as long as they know the words, I'm happy.

I dislike when a singer tries to make it his or her own, by adding words or stretching it out or just plain doing with it as he or she feels. The national anthem belongs to all the citizens of the U.S., not the singer performing it.

Most people remember comedienne

Roseanne Barr's butchering of the national anthem at a San Diego Padres game in 1990.

She screeched the lyrics, laughingly, and at the end of the song, spit and grabbed her crotch.

America was appalled. Whoever booked her to "sing" the anthem was way off. In addition to the written test, a singing test should be required.

So I scoured the Internet to see what other blunders singers of the national anthem have made at sporting events.

One of the most unpatriotic displays I found was by Aerosmith's lead singer Steven Tyler, who, on Memorial Day 2001 no less, substituted the words "and the home of the Indianapolis 500" for "and the home of the brave." Veterans were outraged, and rightfully so.

Other singers had their missteps written in history. According to the Web site <http://abcnews.go.com/Entertainment/WolfFiles/>, singer Macy Gray started the song with "Oh say, can you see, by the twilight's gleaming" at the 2001 Pro Football Hall of Fame game.

The Web site also describes Robert Goulet's mistake of singing "Oh say, can you see, by the dawn's early night," at the 1965 Muhammad Ali-Sonny Liston fight. The fight only lasted one round and was overshadowed by Goulet's gaffe.

While I'm on the subject, I'll add one more thing that really works my Irish up. I don't care if you're a man or woman, young or old, when at a sports event and the commentator asks you to stand and remove all caps, just do it. There's nothing more unpatriotic than not removing your headgear during the national anthem. By now, we should all be like Pavlov's dogs. As soon as we hear those familiar first strains we should be standing and looking at the flag with hats removed and not be talking. It was one of the first things I taught my son.

I've noticed a lot of women whose hat are part of their outfit, and it would ruin their hairdos to take their hats off — too bad. Flag etiquette says women don't need to remove their hats when the national anthem is played. It's time to change that.

If you're going to wear a hat to support your team, your driver or whoever, you know at some point The Star-Spangled Banner will be sung. It's not a surprise. Do the right thing.

Military Benefit Association supports our troops and provides security for military families.

For 50 years, Military Benefit Association (MBA) has sponsored affordable group life insurance for its members and their families.

With over 110,000 members, MBA is among the nation's largest non-profit military associations. Military servicemembers join MBA for its excellent insurance plans, including separate spouse coverage up to $250,000, child coverage options, and for the financial and lifestyle benefits membership offers.

Families Depend Upon MBA.

As we have expanded our membership programs, we have also experienced growth in the amount of paid claims. Since March 2003, MBA-sponsored group life insurance has paid over $18 million in claims to families of MBA members lost in military hostilities in Iraq and Afghanistan. This money helped the families of our members continue their lives during a difficult period.

MBA offers a selection of valuable benefits to promote the economic interests and improve the quality of life of our members and their families, including the MBA Scholarship Program which awards five $2,000 scholarships annually to dependent children of members. Other programs offer car rental discounts; travel assistance and travel discounts; savings on medical services, supplies and equipment; and assistance with VA home financing through VALoans.com.

MBA Term 90 group life insurance has premium rates which are competitive with SGLI. More importantly, this coverage stays with you when you leave the military. You do not have to convert to the more expensive VGLI plan.

When you purchase MBA-sponsored group life insurance coverage, you join a community of people who share your interests. If you would like more information about MBA and the insurance plans it sponsors, please call us:

If I get lost one more time trying to find Infantry Hall, I'll be forced to put a GPS in my car, which is worth less than the price of an oil change.

The great thing about Fort Benning is the energy here. It is truly unique. I feel it from the time I stand in the long line to get my parking pass until I get to the office. I've never seen organization on this level, and I truly can appreciate it.

For fun, I produce and write hip-hop music. I am currently working on three projects that will, I hope, see the light of day this year.

I am an avid music fan and I have a vast collection of vinyl — yes vinyl — records, a fact that tends to surprise people since I'm not yet 30. Go figure.

So if anyone reading this has a closet or storage unit full of old Beatles, Led Zeppelin and Parliament/Funkadelic LPs that they don't want, I'm more than willing to raid your crates.

If you see me on post don't be afraid to say hi. I'm the tall, stocky guy not wearing fatigues. Do you still call them fatigues?

Be warned though, I will probably ask you for directions.

Wrestling: Teaches sportsmanship, self discipline

The team has a few weeks left in this season. Training for next season will begin in late October or early November, and tournaments will start in December.

The team placed in two state tournaments this season, and two wrestlers placed at the national level.

McFarland's son, Andrew, placed sixth in his weight class at the Dixie Nationals. He wrestled in about 70 matches this season.

"He's a monster," McFarland said. "We have to pair him up with kids above his weight class so he has a challenge."

Haley Ryan, the only girl on Fort Benning's team, placed fifth at the Dixie Nationals wrestling all boys. Last year the 9-year-old placed third in her weight class in Alabama. Her brother, Colin, 12, also took third for his weight class in Alabama.

Haley began wrestling three years ago.

"I had to go to all my brother's practices and it was boring, so I started playing around and I thought it was fun," she said. "There was another girl who wrestled last year, and she was named Haley too. I don't mind that I'm the only girl. The only thing I don't like is all the running."

Haley and Colin's mom, Chris, was hesitant to let her kids wrestle at first, especially Haley.

"I was nervous that they'd get hurt, and I tried to find all these reasons why they shouldn't do it. But they both love it," Chris said. At least they're not at home watching TV. I'd tell parents, let them try anything once, and even let your daughters try it. It's not just a boy's sport."

Mike Gardini's son, Mikey, wrestles in the pee-wee division. His 4-year-old son loves wrestling, he said.

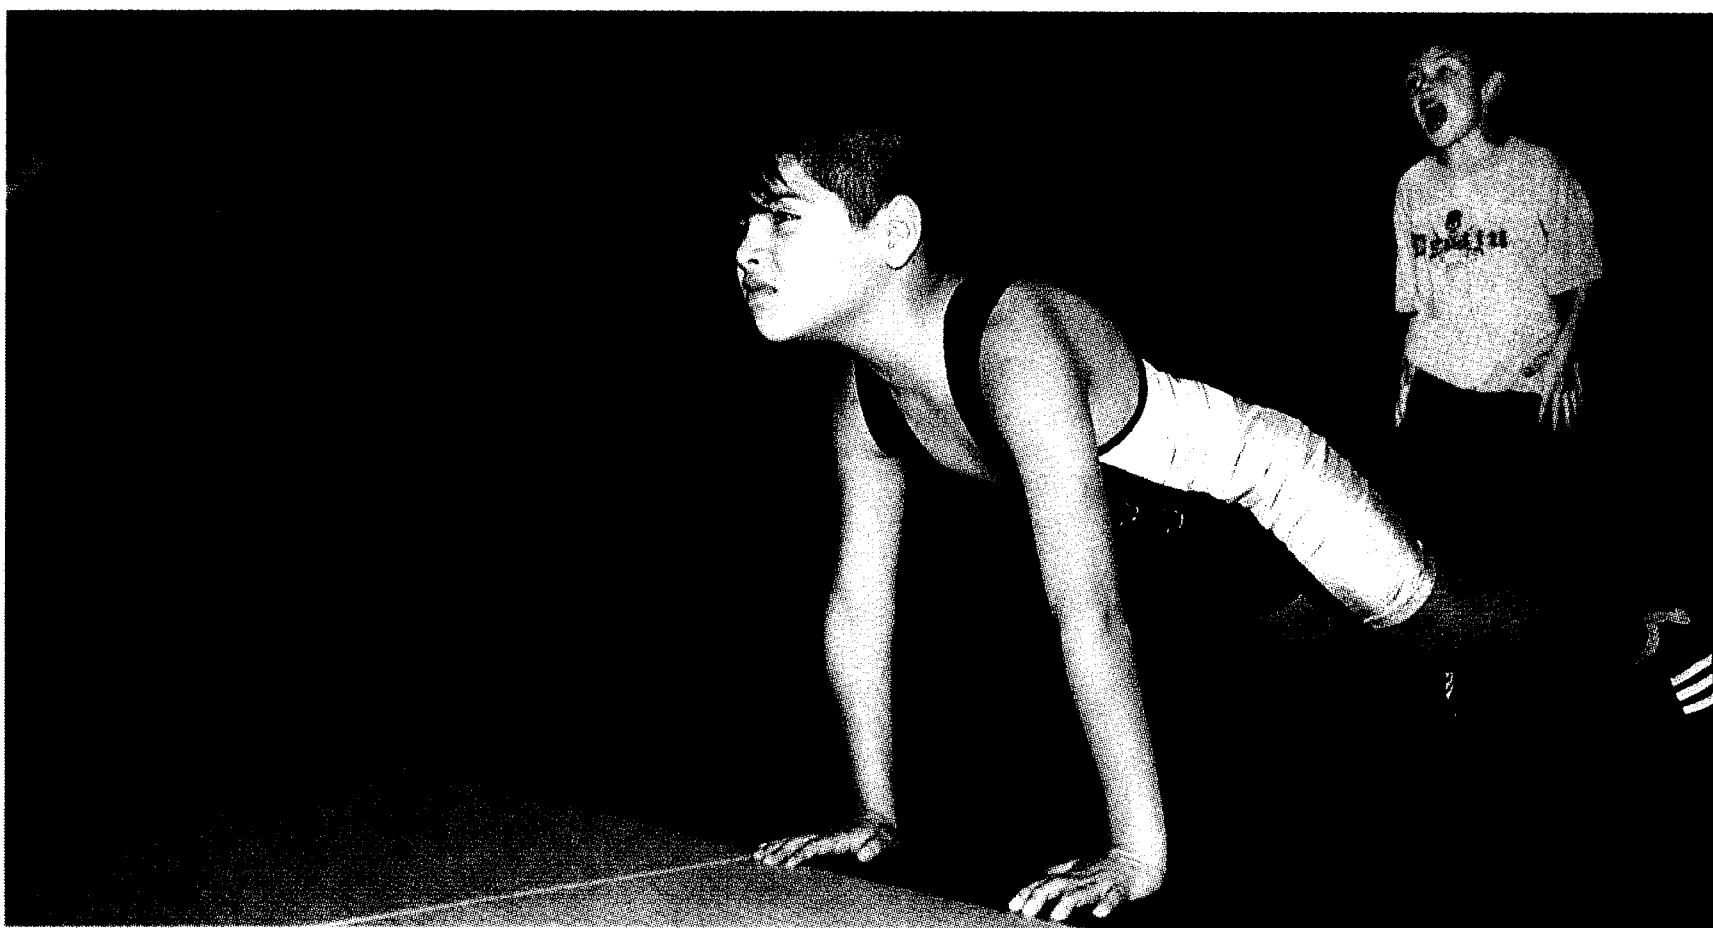

"I love to watch him on the mat," Gardini said. "He smiles the whole time. He loves it."

Mikey likes it, too.

"It's fun, but sometimes it's hard," Mikey said. "And I got some medals."

Gardini, like other parents, volunteers during practices. Volunteers do not need any wrestling experience. Kaufmann hopes more people will volunteer for the 2007-2008 season.

"We love volunteers," Kaufmann said.

During a relay race, Miguel Enriquez gets ready to run while waiting for his teammate to get back. The wrestlers do cardiovascular and strength training exercises.

"We'll always take volunteers."

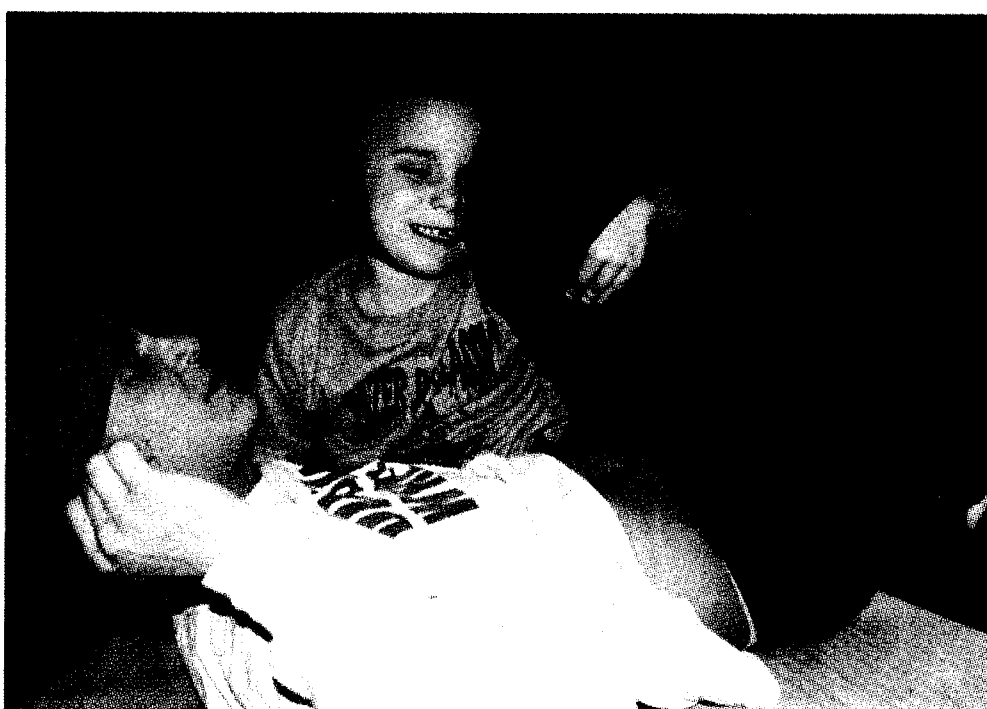

The team is for boys and girls ages 4 to 14. The children wrestle according to age and weight class. The classes are: pee-wee, 6 and younger; bantam, 7-8; midgets, 9-10; novice, 11-12; schoolboy or girl, 13-14 (not yet in high school).

Children can join the team any time during wrestling season and do not need any wrestling experience.

The team is under Fort Benning's Child and Youth Services, but is sanctioned by USA Wrestling and Team Georgia Wrestling. All coaches have some wrestling experience, and are trained in working with children and first aid.

Practices are typically from 6 to 8 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, and tournaments are Saturdays. It is a traveling team, and tournaments take place in locations throughout Georgia.

For more information, call Child and Youth Services at 706-545-3582.

Mikey Gardini, 4, practices a move on his dad, Mike, during the Fort Benning youth wrestling team's practice. Adults volunteer to help kids practice moves, watch matches and help the coaches. The team is constantly looking for volunteers and hopes more adults will volunteer when the next season begins in the fall. Volunteers do not need any wrestling experience. To get involved, call Child and Youth Services at 706-545-3582.

What if the home fronts Lee Road?

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Last week, I offended a guy who lives on Lee Road in Phenix City. Which guy? Which Lee Road? I couldn't tell you, because he — and I'm assuming he's a he — didn't leave his name or address. But I know I ticked him off, because he yelled at me — meaning he wrote me a nasty fax using all capital letters. If you meet a hoarse man on Lee Road in Phenix City, steer clear.

My mistake, from his perspective, was poking fun of Phenix City or Lee County or Alabama or maybe him personally in my article about the posts' Serving From the Home Front fund-raiser, which will feature DJ Alan DuPriest, who lists one of his hobbies as hiding from his ex-wives on Lee Road in Phenix City.

See, saying you're hiding on Lee Road is like saying you're hiding in the windy part of Chicago. It's all windy. They're all Lee Roads. So really, the guy with his keyboard stuck on "caps lock" should pick his bone with Alan. I just capitalized on his humor, pardon the pun.

So I called Alan, the morning disc jockey on BOOMER 95.3, to tell him that he got me in trouble with some guy who lives on Lee Road in Phenix City. He doesn't seem to think the nasty fax warrants a restraining order on Lee Road residents, et al. He was more concerned with the anonymous writer's statement, to wit "YOU DON'T KNOW NOTHING ABOUT LEE COUNTY ...YOU COULD BE A HISTORIAN."

Here, Alan came to my defense.

"I hope you will continue your research on the significance of historical geographicness in Lee County and especially as it relates to Lee Road," he said. "The reason I can enlighten you a small bit on my geographicfull historyness is because I know for a fact that even the updated Lee County 911 map does not include my address. I live on private property that the property owner does not know he owns."

Boy howdy, that man's funny. He'll make a great master of ceremonies at the Serving From the Home Front fund-raiser Feb. 24. Unless, of course, he's in jail for trespassing. Wouldn't it be a hoot if the angry guy with the capital letters turns out to be Alan's unwitting landlord?

For the sake of the wonderful women of the Officers' Spouses' Club, who have put a lot of time and effort into planning this shindig, let's hope Alan is free to entertain us on the evening of the event.

He's billing it as THE social event of the season. Which leads me to wonder if all Lee Road residents have capitalization issues.

A winning 'peace' of art

Rachel Houston
Lacie Hester, 13, won a local Lions Club peace poster contest. The Faith Middle School eighth-grader's poster had a theme of celebrating peace and a design that has hands giving peace signs arranged in a star inside a drawing of the world. The Lions Club presented Hester with a framed photograph of her poster. The original poster will be returned to the Hester family soon.

Fort Benning student wins peace poster contest

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Just for fun, 13-year-old Lacie Hester created a poster that celebrates peace and ended up winning a local competition.

Lacie won the Fort Benning competition for the International Peace Poster Contest sponsored by the Lions Club. The contest asked young people to create a poster with the theme of "celebrate peace."

Lacie's poster is one of more than 325,000 posters entered in the international competition, and she was the winner of the local Fort Benning competition.

"I was kind of surprised because I just did it for fun," Lacie said.

About 30 students at Faith Middle School made posters for the contest, and Lacie was the grand prize winner for Fort Benning.

Her friend Briana Coronado, an eighth-grader, took first place, Ciara Miller, seventh-grade, got second place and Amanda Carruthers, seventh-grade, got third.

"It's obvious Lacie put a lot of time into her poster. It was excellent," said Angie Cotton, assistant principal at Faith Middle School.

"After you hear the theme and her explanation, it just makes it that much better," Cotton said.

Lacie's father, Sgt. 1st Class Kenneth Hester, is in 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, and having a father in the Army gave her inspiration for the poster.

"Soldiers fight for peace, so I think that played a big part in my concept," Lacie said.

"I entered this contest with the thoughts of our Soldiers fighting in other countries and tried to come up with a poster that would show how I feel we can achieve peace," Lacie said in a speech to the Lions Club.

"I feel that we, as people, could live together no matter what color, religion, race or ethnic background if we only would communicate and show more respect to our fellow man," she said.

"Thank you for giving me and countless others a chance to have a voice in something we all would love to achieve — world peace," she said.

Her design has hands giving peace signs arranged in a star inside a drawing of the world.

"I colored each set of hands a different color to show that all people matter in our quest for peace," Lacie said.

Inside the star are flags from around the world, and the world has a bow around it to symbolize celebration, Lacie said. The border, which she came up with first, has symbols that represent peace to her, like smiley faces and yin yangs. A gold hand with a pointed finger is touching the bottom of the world.

"The gold hand represents God's hand. I believe he makes the world go round, so I have him spinning the world," said Lacie, who first worked her design in charcoal and other mediums but she ended up using crayons.

"I'm very proud of her. I knew she could do it," said Kim Hester, Lacie's mother. "She's artistic, and she doesn't give herself enough credit."

Lacie gave a speech at the Lions Club when she was presented a certificate and ribbon. She also received a $100 savings bond, a picture of her poster and a stuffed lion. A member of the Lions Club said Lacie's was the best speech of all the winners.

The original poster is still with the Lions Club, but it will be returned to the Hester family soon.

"I'm not really studying art," Lacie said, "but I like looking at pictures and drawing from them."

"I'm good at math. I love working with robotic parts and mechanical parts," Lacie said. In her applied technology, or woodshop, class, Lacie is building a house.

Lacie, who wants to be a mechanical engineer or an architect when she grows up, won a national science merit award last year.

Excited and nervous to go to ninth-grade next year, Lacie is happy she'll be staying at the same high school for four years. Her dad is retiring this year, and the family plans on staying in the area.

He is seriously funny, that Harvey Alston

Limited space available for annual women's conference

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Harvey Alston is impressed with Fort Benning, he said last week during a telephone interview from his home in Ohio.

It seems Fort Benning feels the same about Alston, who has been invited back to headline the annual Women's Conference again. The tall, dark and tuxedo-clad Alston will bring a message titled "Be the Best" when he speaks at the Benning Club March 14.

"I'm coming to support the people who are making the sacrifice, taking care of the families of the Soldiers who make such a great sacrifice for all of us," he said.

Fort Benning families are "the best," but occasionally they need to be reminded "that they are not alone," he said. "There are a lot of people out there who appreciate what they do."

Speaking of "the best," that's just one way Alston has been described by the media. He's also been reviewed as "a class act," "the best," "the best in class" and "in a class by himself." Nowhere will you find a succinct description of who he is and what he does.

For the purpose of the annual Women's Conference on Fort Benning, he's billed as a motivational speaker with as much wit as wisdom. He'll deliver a serious message with humor.

"We looked at a lot of self-help types," said Tandi Cain-Morris, a member of the Officers' Spouses' Club, which sponsors the event.

"We just didn't think we needed that this year. We need someone to encourage us, to tell us we're great, we're giving it our best. Someone to make us feel good about ourselves."

Alston spoke at the Women's Conference three years ago, and he brought down the house, said Morris, who expects the same this time around.

The deadline for registration for the Women's Conference, which runs from 7:45 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., is March 1. The cost, $17 per person, includes breakfast and lunch, workshops and give-a-ways. Child care for the event is free, but space is limited.

Workshops include beading, organization, successful selling on ebay, desserts, swing dance, massage, real estate and skin care. Vendors will represent local artists, shopkeepers, day spas and home-based businesses.

Registration forms can be found at any post establishment supported by the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, including the Thrift Shop, Little Caesars and the Benning Club. For more information, log on to www.benningmwr.com.

Children can also become a member of the Boys or Girls Club or 4H Club.

Registration is ongoing.

For more information, call 706-545-2079 or 706-545-3605 or visit the Central Registration Office in Building 359.

EFMP RESOURCE LIBRARY

The Army Community Service Center, Exceptional Family Member Program has a resource library containing videotapes for public viewing.

Some of the topics include childhood asthma, facts about the EFMP program, special education law, autism, etc.

For more information, call 706-545-5521.

ENGLISH CLASSES

Free English instruction is offered from 5:30 to 8:30 p.m. Mondays and Wednesdays in Room 158 at the Western Hemisphere Institute for Security Cooperation.

The instruction is designed for those who need help with grammar, vocabulary, civics, naturalization issues and conversational fluency.

For more information, e-mail chalkley@m-benning.army.mil.

EMPLOYMENT READINESS PROGRAM

The Employment Readiness Program assists spouses, children, veterans and retirees of active duty and Department of Defense civilians with opportunities to seek employment on and off post.

A Job Strategy Workshop class is conducted from 8:30 a.m. to noon on scheduled Thursdays.

Following the class is an optional opportunity to meet with employment agencies and local businesses.

Pre-registration is required. Forms are available at the Army Community Service Center, Building 2624 in Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information, call Mark Mills at 706-545-4043.

EFMP SUPPORT GROUPS

If you have an interest in forming a support group geared towards meeting the needs of military family members, the Army Community Services Exceptional Family Member Program would like to hear from you.

Support groups are the first Tuesday of each month at Building 2633.

For more information concerning local support groups, call 706-545-5521.

EENT CLINIC SCHOOL SCREENINGS

The EENT clinic at Martin Army Community Hospital conducts eye, ear and dental screenings for all children entering a Georgia public school for the first time.

The screenings are by appointment only from 1 to 3 p.m. on Wednesday afternoons. The child's medical records, ID and medical cards are required.

For an appointment, call 706-544-2273.

FIRST STEPS PROGRAM

The First Steps Program provides support, education, resource referrals and follow-up contacts to parents of newborns.

For more information, call Rebecca Welch, Family Advocacy Program manager, at 706-545-4043 or coordinator Carolyn Harris, at 706-544-2020.

EFMP ENROLLMENT

The Exceptional Family Member Program has mandatory enrollment for special needs family members (child or spouse.)

Enrollment does not hurt the Soldier's career but assists military personnel divisions in considering the medical and educational needs of the family member in the assignment process.

Enrollment is necessary if the spouse or child meets the following criteria: asthma, a current or past mental health diagnosis, a high-risk pregnancy, cancer (past or present), attention deficit disorder or diabetes.

Call 706-545-5521 for resource information and referrals.

FLAG DISPOSAL

Boy Scout Troop 27 offers flag disposal to the community.

If your flag is faded or tattered, Troop 27 will collect the flag and properly dispose of it with all the respect the flag deserves.

For more information, call Laura Walker at 706-687-8561.

TOPS MEETINGS

Take Off Pounds Sensibly meets at 5:30 p.m. every Tuesday at the Afterhours Club, Building 2502 on Indianhead Road.

For more information, call 706-562-9505 or 706-568-7111.

OFF POST

BLIND VETERANS ASSOCIATION

The regional chapter of the Blind Veterans Association of Georgia meets at 9:30 a.m. the last Wednesday of each month at the VA Clinic conference room, 1310 13th Ave., in Columbus. For more information, call Clifford Jones at 706-569-9881.

BOSS KICKBALL, STORY HOUR

The BOSS Kickball and Story Hour will be at Baker Village at 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Fort Benning strongly supports BOSS and allows all Soldiers who volunteer for BOSS activities the time to participate in these events. BOSS events are open to all interested people, military or civilian.

For more information, call 706-527-0414.

MOAA SCHOLARSHIP

The Military Officers Association of America has officially opened its Base/Post Scholarship and will offer individual $1,000 grants to 25 children of active duty personnel worldwide.

To be eligible, a student must be younger than 24 years old, working on a first undergraduate degree and a dependent child of an active duty serviceman — enlisted, warrant officer or officer — in the U.S. Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, Coast Guard, Public Health Service or the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. This includes members of the drilling Reserves and National Guard.

No grade point average, SAT or essays are needed for the application. MOAA membership is not required.

Students can apply via the MOAA Web site at www.moaa.org. Choose "Services," then "Educational Assistance" to find the online application. Students should follow the instructions for the multipurpose scholarship application.

The deadline for submission is noon March 1.

ARNOLD MAGNET ACADEMY OPEN HOUSE

Arnold Magnet Academy will host their Magnet Open House for all students and parents interested in the program for the 2007-08 school year at 6 p.m. Feb. 8 in the cafeteria.

Magnet testing dates are 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. March 3, 1:30 to 3 p.m. March 9 and 8:30 to 10 a.m. March 24.

All applicants need to apply prior to the testing dates so it can be assured they are registered for testing. The deadline for submitting an application is March 23.

The application is available online at http://arnold.mcsdga.net/Magnet\_Program.htm.

For more information, call Amy Mobley at 706-748-2436.

VETERANS SEMINAR

The U.S. Small Business Administration will present a Veterans Seminar at the Columbus Public Library from 9 a.m. to noon Feb. 23. The seminar will present the SBA programs and services that are available to veterans and service-connected disabled veterans.

The seminar is free.

HOST FAMILIES NEEDED

The Pacific Intercultural Exchange is seeking people to become host families for foreign students. The students are between ages 15 and 18, are English-speaking, have their own spending money and carry their own accident and health insurance.

P.I.E. has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year. Families who host P.I.E. are also eligible to claim a $50 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

Chattahoochee County area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative can call 866-546-1402.

FREE TREES

Ten free flowering trees will be given to each person from Georgia who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during January. The trees will be shipped at the right time for planting between Feb. 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions. The six- to 12-inch trees are guaranteed to grow or will be replaced free of charge.

To become a member of the foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 contribution to Ten Free Flowering Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68410 by Jan. 31 or go online to arborday.org.

AER EXPANDS ASSISTANCE PROGRAM

Army Emergency Relief has expanded their Stateside Spouse Education Assistance Program in the U.S. to include the spouses of retired Army Soldiers and the widows(ers) of Soldiers who died while in the retired status. The Stateside SEAP is a need based education assistance program designed to provide spouses of active duty and retired Army Soldiers and widows(ers) of Army Soldiers who died while on active duty or in a retired status with financial assistance in pursuing educational goals.

Financial assistance is provided as a grant that is awarded based on financial need, as evidenced by income, assets, family size, special financial obligations and circumstances, with a maximum amount of $2700.

Applications are available for downloading on AER's Web Site, www.aerhq.org; at AER sections; or by mail from AER headquarters.

The deadline for receipt of complete applications is March 1. Mailed applications and supporting documents must be received or postmarked by March 1 or earlier to be considered on time. Additional information on this program can be found on AER's Web Site, at AER Sections or by contacting Diann Evans at diann@erhq.org.

FREEDOM TEAM SALUTE

Soldiers can go to www.freedomteamsalute.com to nominate a spouse, parent, employer (for Reserve Components) or a veteran for recognition.

FTS additionally recognizes and honors veteran Soldiers of all generations for their legacy of freedom, duty and honor to our country and their continued support of the Army mission.

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Combined Communities of Southeast Columbus, Inc., is looking for volunteers who are willing to spend two hours students each Saturday during the school term.

For more information, call Tresa Hart-Williams at 706-315-8847.

Still time to respond to DoDEA survey

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE EDUCATION ACTIVITY

ARLINGTON, Va. — Students, parents and teachers still have time to respond to the Department of Defense Education Activity's Customer Satisfaction Survey.

Responses to the survey will be accepted through Feb. 28. The CSS, conducted every other year, provides valuable feedback to DoDEA about the quality of education it provides and areas needing improvement.

Separate surveys are available for teachers, parents, students in the fourth and fifth grades, students in the sixth through eighth grades, and students in ninth through 12th grades.

The surveys were developed through a review process of various groups, including the DoDDS and DDESS teachers' unions, DoDEA Teachers of the Year, superintendents, principals, students, and Education Directorate staff members at the DoDEA headquarters. Some questions were adapted from the Phi Delta Kappa/Gallup Poll of the Public's Attitudes Toward Schools with additional DoDEA-specific questions.

The survey, which is totally voluntary, takes approximately 20 minutes to complete and is available online at www.dodea.edu, by clicking on the CSS link. Where Internet access is a concern, an electronic version of the surveys will be available for printing.

Dr. Janet F. Rope, DoDEA administrator, System Accountability and Research, wants everyone — parents, students and teachers — worldwide to participate in the survey.

"A high response rate provides our schools with more and valuable information about their programs and is part of our continual efforts to improve the quality of education provided to DoD dependents," she said.

Information derived from the surveys will be used to improve planning efforts at all levels throughout DoDEA.

Schools, districts, and areas will use the survey results to gain insight into the satisfaction levels of sponsors and students, which is one of many measures used for future planning of student programs and services.

The survey results will also be used to monitor the DoDEA Community Strategic Plan, which contains the strategic direction for the organization for the years 2006-2011.

For more information about the CSS, call 703-588-3260 or visit the DoDEA Web site at <http://www.dodea.edu>.

DeCa introduces registered dietitian

DEFENSE COMMISSARY AGENCY Bonnie Powell

FORT LEE, Va. — Customers have always been able to find healthy food at healthy savings in their commissary. They can also find healthy advice, now that the Defense Commissary Agency has a registered dietitian on staff.

"We made a commitment to be the nutritional leader for the military," said Patrick Nixon, DeCA director and chief executive officer.

"We're excited to have Maj. Karen Fauber as the first DeCA dietitian, and we expect this to be a great opportunity for customers to obtain nutrition education through their commissary system."

Having a dietitian on staff is a growing trend in the commercial grocery industry and more and more consumers indicate they look to grocery stores for nutrition education and guidance.

DeCA and Tricare have been partnering for two years on Tricare's Healthy Choices for Life program, which focuses on the problems of alcohol abuse, tobacco use and obesity in military families.

"Since we are the grocery store of choice for millions of military families, we developed the 'It's Your Choice, Make it Healthy' program to tie into the weight-management segment of healthy choices," Nixon said.

"It's Your Choice" does not aim to tell customers what is good or bad, but it does encourage them to think more about their choices.

"Weight management is a topic of primary importance for DoD patient education," said Dr. David Tornberg, Tricare chief medical officer. "DeCA is making a significant contribution to our program by emphasizing healthier eating, and has taken the effort to a new level by adding a registered dietitian to their team."

Cherie Huntington
Maj. Karen Fauber, DeCA dietitian offers advice on how to shop for foods which will help commissary consumers stick to their New Year's resolutions to lose weight.

"Having a registered dietitian increases our ability to educate customers on how to make healthier meal choices — reading product labels at the commissary, enjoying more fresh fruit and vegetables and leaner meats, and preparing meals at home instead of hitting the fast-food drive-thru or spending hard-earned money on restaurants," Nixon said.

The DeCA dietitian is already on the job, having filmed a Pentagon Channel segment offering advice on how to shop for foods that will help consumers stick to their New Year's resolutions to lose weight.

"I really appreciate the leadership role commissaries are taking in advocating healthy food choices for military families," Fauber said, "and I am eager to be a part of DeCA's efforts in promoting 'It's Your Choice,

Make It Healthy,' and providing nutrition education as part of the commissary benefit."

Fauber has 16 years of service with 10 years as an Army Reserve dietitian and six years active duty, including experience as a certified diabetes educator in Army medical facilities and public-health clinics.

Some of the initiatives planned for the DeCA dietitian include an "Ask the Dietitian" feature on the DeCA Web site www.commissaries.com and increased visibility for the recently revamped "5 A Day for Better Health" program, which focuses on fruits and vegetables. Fauber will also work closely with DeCA home economist and Europe outreach specialist Kay Blakley, who is well-known for her "Kay's Kitchen" newspaper columns and recipes, and TV spots on American Forces Network in Europe.

Lower your blood pressure, save your life

MCG CARDIOVASCULAR CENTER

Dr. Michael Prisant

Known as the "silent killer," high blood pressure usually has no symptoms but is tough on the arteries, causes the heart to work harder, and can lead to heart attack, stroke, heart failure and even kidney failure.

Nearly one-third of all Americans have this disease, but may not know it.

That's why regular blood pressure checks and control of the risk factors for high blood pressure can help improve your health and even save your life.

Your doctor should measure your blood pressure twice at every visit after a five-minute rest period.

Most doctors will diagnose a person with high blood pressure on the basis of readings taken on several occasions.

A consistent reading of 140 over 90 or higher is considered high blood pressure. However, if diabetes or chronic kidney disease is present, then the treatment goal is less than 130 over 80.

Although high blood pressure cannot be cured, it can be prevented and controlled in most cases. An important first step is to adopt healthy lifestyle habits.

This means you should:

- Reduce salt intake
- Maintain a healthy weight
- Exercise
- Limit alcohol
- Quit smoking

If lifestyle changes alone are not effective in controlling your blood pressure, it may be necessary for your doctor to prescribe blood pressure medications. However, watch what over-the-counter medications you take.

Those such as ibuprofen or naproxen may interfere with most blood pressure lowering medications.

By getting the facts on high blood pressure, you can reduce your risks for heart attack and stroke with simple lifestyle changes and proper monitoring by a health care provider.

REFLECTIONS

Two elements for successful living

Develop a vision for your life

29TH INFANTRY REGIMENT
Chaplain (Maj.) Luis R. Scott

A friend asked me one day, "What kind of vision do you have for your life?" I responded, "I want to get up every morning and love my family and my neighbor. I want to go to work and be satisfied with the job I do. And I want to reach age of 65 and be able to say I have no regrets."

He asked again, "But you must want something?" I responded, in addition to what I just mentioned, I would love some butter pecan ice cream, a house, a few cars, a great set of golf clubs, season tickets to the Chicago Cubs and not having to take the PT test ever again. He got a little frustrated, but I really answered his question. He wanted something else, like if I wanted to be a senator, or CEO of a major corporation or the chief of Chaplains. While those are good goals, they are limited to what we do and what we are.

I do not want to be known for doing something. I want to be remembered for becoming somebody. A vision for a successful life has to be greater than any job we do. Failure to accomplish performance-oriented goals, as defined by others, can never be equated with a person's vision for their lives.

A wise Hebrew prophet stated that, "Without vision, people perish." How do we develop a vision for our lives? We can develop a vision when we learn how to live in such a way that we are not the center of the universe.

If the people around us are better because we lived, we have a vision greater than ourselves. We can develop goals for our jobs, our families, for our relationships, for our peers. But above all, we can develop a vision of our legacies.

A solid vision produces is determined how our lives are in relationship to God's character. I want to grow old and say I have no regrets. I want my family to write on my tombstone: "For when (Luis R. Scott) had served God's purpose in his own generation, he fell asleep." (Acts 13:36). Have a vision for your life.

Live your life with passion

What is passion, someone may ask? It is possible that every person reading this article could define passion in a different way. Allow me to share with you my idea.

Passion is giving ourselves with gusto to whatever endeavor and/or relationships we choose. There will always be risks because some people do not have passion, or other people do not care. Some people just want to suck the life out of you because they do not have a life of their own.

But there lies the paradox. If we do not have passion, we could become lifeless like them. If, on the other hand, we have a passion that drives our daily living, even those who do not like us would have to say, "He may not very intelligent, but I would love to have his passion and commitment for his job, his family, his church, his life, etc." It is passion that will free us to live our lives to the fullest.

When I go to a baseball game, the game becomes my passion. I feel passionate when I go to counsel with a Soldier and his family. I want him to have my undivided attention. I want to totally live in the present moment. Since I do not know when I will take my last breath, I do not want to miss anything that could change my life for eternity.

Let me paraphrase one of my favorite preachers, Jesus of Nazareth. He said, "It is foolish to plan for the future while ignoring the choices you have to make in the present." His actual words were: "You fool, your life will be taken away from you today. Don't you know that a man's life does not consist on what he possesses?"

I come to work in the morning, and most days, I feel passionate about reaching the chapel doors. Every job I ever had has been my best job. Passion is living life in such a way that the present moment is the ultimate expression of who we are. Is this always true? Of course not. The idea is to live life to its fullest designed purpose, with all the pains and aches, with all the joys and laughter and yes, with the dreaded twice-a-year PT test.

I believe God created us with a purpose in mind. We need to commit ourselves to finding out what that purpose is so we can exhaust every breath on this transitional earth with full satisfaction. We will do well to find God's design for our lives and learn to live a life defined by an absolute and complete dedication to achieving what God has intended for us. That's passion.

If we are wrong on an issue, be passionately wrong. If we are right on an issue, we need to be passionately right. Let us not allow the circumstances or other people rob us of our desire to live full lives. A smart person once said, "The richest person is not the one who has the most, but the one who needs the least."

Regaining integrity through honesty

Be people of honesty

CORRESPONDENT
Frederick "Bud" Rupel

Sam Nunn, former Senator from Georgia, said, "Our problems in America today are primarily problems of the heart. The soul of our nation is the sum of our individual characters. Yes, we must balance the federal budget, and there are a lot of other things we need to do at the federal level, but unless we change our hearts we will still have a deficit of the soul."

Integrity — how often have you heard that word tossed around? But what does it imply? Morality? Honesty? A House subcommittee estimated that one out of every three working Americans misrepresents their educational or career credentials in order to get hired for a job.

A survey done by the New York Times found that 91 percent of the American populace lie regularly. And when you put this number up against the 45 percent of Americans who say they attend a weekly religious service, you begin to seriously doubt if integrity remains an important virtue in our society.

Reverend Theodore Hesburgh, former president of the University of Notre Dame, said, "To the extent family life is disintegrating, kids are not being taught values about lying, cheating and stealing."

Paul Harvey told the story of a young New York City school student who turned in a purse she had found, complete with $1,000 in cash.

Not a single school official congratulated her for her honesty. One of her teachers explained, "If I come from a position of what is right and wrong, then I am no longer their counselor."

I'm just a country kid from Indiana and we have a word for such nonsense — hogwash!

A million men gathering in our nation's capital are decried as being right-wing religious zealots simply because they committed themselves to such things as spiritual, moral, ethical and sexual purity; building strong marriages and families through love, protection and biblical values; and to reaching beyond racial and denominational barriers to demonstrate the power of biblical unity.

In this world of relativism there seems to be no right or wrong, no black or white but just shades of gray.

But let me say that if we are to survive as a nation we must return to the godly values upon which it was founded. Listen to what our Congress proclaimed in 1787:

Religion, morality and knowledge, being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind ... shall forever be encouraged. (Northwest Ordinance, Article 3)

Richard Dortch, in his book Losing it All & Finding Yourself, outlines four profound principles that will help you in keeping your integrity intact:

- First, integrity involves our relationship to one another and our relationship to God. Put your hearts under a microscope and examine how integrity works in you. Always be people of honesty. There is no room for lies.

- Second, anyone can lose his or her integrity. Without constant diligence to the little things in life, your integrity can quickly slip through your hands.

- Third, integrity involves the wholeness of our inner person — our heart, mind and will. When our integrity is intact, nothing divides the wholeness of who we are and what we are about. To be honest, you have to be honest.

- Fourth, integrity can be regained. King David said, "Let integrity and uprightness protect me, because my hope is in you." And this was spoken by the man who committed adultery, fathered two illegitimate children and had a man murdered.

But David admitted his mistakes and sought God's forgiveness and God restored David to right standing with him. Learn to admit your mistakes, seek forgiveness and start living again.

Col. Fred V. Cherry, who spent seven and a half years as a prisoner of war in North Vietnam, said, "We must develop leaders with unwavering character, integrity, honesty, moral character and love. Young Americans — have faith, set your goals high and aspire to be the best that you can be. Build your foundation on the values that have made great men, women and nations."

Survive this: Reintegration challenges families

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Deployment is difficult whether you go down range or you stay home. It is not a competition about who had the hardest time; rather it is an understanding that both sacrificed during the deployment. It is about two spouses sacrificing. It is about successfully growing as individuals and as a couple through the deployment. Both grew and changed during the deployment.

Think about this for a moment — have you changed since the first day of the deployment? Have you changed in the past year? Most people I talk to agree, "Yes I have changed."

We are not worried about most of the changes; however, we are worried about certain kinds of change. We like the change of independence when we are down range. We like having confidence in knowing you can handle it while we are gone. We like the fact that you can manage the children and bills while we are away. We like it when you hold it together emotionally. We like it when you demonstrate your strength, achieving more than the majority of spouses in the civilian sector.

I love the reality show Survivor, and watch it every season. One part that always cracks me up is when they have been out there for less than 30 days and get a letter, or a video or even a visit from a family member and they weep like babies! I laugh because in our world 30 days is a blink of the eyes; I laugh because I know my Army-strong wife can easily handle 30 days.

My youngest son even asked, "Why are they crying? We can go a year without seeing you, dad."

We only wish our deployments were 30 days. The reality is that 365 days is a long time. And in these 365 days we do see change.

Some changes that cause us concern are fitting back in, faithfulness and desire to be wanted again when we reunite. Returning to our established roles in the household can sometimes be problematic. Sometimes we like the new roles and do not want to return to the old ways. We want to feel a part of the family when we return home.

Establishing our roles again is one way of doing this. However, if one does not want to return to the old ways, conflict can arise. The battle ground can move from Iraq to the home front. This is what neither of us wants. We both have looked forward to a happy and peaceful reunion, not another war front.

Instead of a battleground, propose to communicate your love to each other, your unconditional acceptance, your pride in each other and a recognition that some things have changed. Acknowledge the good change that has occurred. Discuss the changes from each other's perspective, thus helping to eliminate any fear or misunderstanding.

A husband who returns home to a wife, who now wants to run the household budget, can be perceived as a threat to push him out and take control over him. It could be perceived as he is no longer needed or wanted.

Now, I know this is a hard one, but men have feelings too! We just do not show them as much and often have a difficult time talking about them. We come home with emotional baggage from war and often need some time to sort out our experiences of war while trying to re-adjust to life back home. And then what happens when we get orders to go again? It brings back any unresolved issues, concerns, or fears that we might have.

What do we do then? I recommend coming and talking to us at the Family Life Center. We have combat veteran chaplains who have experienced Iraq and are back. We also have spouses who have been on the home front side of a deployment too. We offer kind and emotional counseling for Soldiers, spouses and family members. If you find yourself needing to talk to someone in a safe and secure environment, we are here with help for your journey.

If you find yourself facing any concerns from reunion to deployment, or other personal or family issues, call our Family Life Center where our trained pastoral counselors are ready to assist you. Call 706-545-1760 and make an appointment today or stop by at 2606 Dixie Road, at Soldiers' Plaza.

ASK A DOC

THE MARTIN ARMY MEDICAL MENTOR

MARTIN ARMY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Lt. Col. Virginia Yates, MD, board certified family medicine physician

Q: So many Soldiers in my unit have vomiting and diarrhea. I don't understand how they can all have food poisoning if we all eat at different places.

A: The vomiting and diarrhea you're describing is referred to as gastroenteritis. You're right to wonder about where Soldiers became infected because the most common cause is a germ called a virus.

However, we find that the most common way people get infected with a gastroenteritis virus is by having direct contact with an infected person and not by food poisoning.

Q: I understand how I can get the germ at home from changing my baby's diapers or drinking from the same glass, but how would I get the virus from an infected person at work?

A: The viruses are most commonly passed between people by hand-to-hand contact when infected people have not washed hands well after touching their own mouth or after using the toilet.

These infected people pass the virus on their hands to another person's hands. That virus can also be transmitted from person to person on a door handle, toilet flush handle, computer keyboard, telephone, a drinking glass or another surface at work.

The virus gets onto your hand then you put your hand to your mouth or your food. The virus then travels down into your gastrointestinal system's stomach and intestines leading to vomiting and diarrhea.

Q: A lot of Soldiers at work are coughing. Is the same way people pass coughs and colds to each other at work?

A: Yes, that's one way. One difference is that people with coughs, colds, runny noses and the flu have the germ in their respiratory system so they can also spit out the germ into the air when they cough or sneeze without covering their mouth or nose.

But like gastroenteritis, they can also have the germ on their hands because they didn't wash hands well enough after touching mouth or nose when coughing or wiping their noses. The germ gets on your hands then you put the germ into your own body by touching your mouth or nose.

Beginning November 6, 2006 the Site Based Waiting List will open for applications, to Ashley Station Apartments, located at 1126 27th Street, Unit 103, Columbus, Georgia 31904.

Rental payment rates are determined based on 30% of a family's gross (adjusted) income or approved flat rents.

AVAILABILITY

UNIT TYPE	TOTAL UNITS	MAXIMUM OCCUPANCY
1 BEDROOM/1 BATH	36	2
2 BEDROOM/1 BATH	28	4
3 BEDROOM/2 BATH	9	6

Unit Types And Sizes Are Subject To Actual Availability Based On Leasing Efforts Underway.

MAXIMUM INCOME QUALIFICATIONS:

Occ	30% MFI	60% MFI
1	$10,250	$20,460
2	$11,700	$23,400
3	$13,150	$26,280
4	$14,600	$29,220
5	$15,800	$31,560
6	$16,950	$33,900

Local Preferences Applies as Follows:

First Priority is given to families who are working family or in approved job training programs, disabled, elderly, or handicapped. Applicants must determine which, if any preferences applies and complete and submit the appropriate pre-qualifying application. The pre-applications must be postmarked no later than November 9, 2006. Pre-applications will be accepted by mail only. Pre-applications should be mailed to P.O. Box 455, Columbus GA, 31902. Applicants will be chosen by lottery on November 27, 2006.

Definition of a working family includes families where the Head of the Household is working in a full time, long term part time capacity or an approved job training capacity. The preference categories are explained on the pre-application form. All preference claims are subject to verification.

The ranking of pre-applications will be done by computer, based on the applicant's Social Security number. The random order in which the applicant's Social Security number is posted by the computer will determine the applicant's place on the waiting list.

It is the sole responsibility of the applicant to weigh his/her circumstances and claim the appropriate preference category. Ashley Station will not verify the applicant's claim for a particular preference prior to the lottery. All preferences will be verified at the time of the formal application to the program. If it is determined that the applicant does not qualify for the preference category grouping in which he/she was ranked after the lottery ranking process and the formal application has been completed, the applicant will be transferred to the appropriate category and placed at the bottom of the group. Likewise, if an applicant changes his/her preference claim, said applicant will be transferred to the appropriate category and placed at the bottom of that group. Due to limited availability it is very unlikely that the applicants who do not qualify for a preference will be placed at this time.

Basic Eligibility Criteria required as Follows:

- ◆ Satisfactory Credit History
- ◆ Ability to secure Utilities including telephone service in applicant's name
- ◆ Satisfactory prior Landlord reference
- ◆ Satisfactory Home visit
- ◆ Criminal History check for all applicants and household members 16 years or older
- ◆ Compliance to Occupancy Guidelines
- ◆ Compliance to Income Guidelines

Distribution of pre-application forms will close at 5:00 p.m. on November 9, 2006. Requests for special consideration for the elderly, handicapped or invalid (sick) will be taken by phone on November 6th and 7th, 2006, only from 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at 706-576-6831. Future re-opening will be publicly advertised. Pre-applications received or postmarked prior to November 6, 2006 or after November 9, 2006 will not be accepted.

The Lottery Selection Method

The Ranking and selection of pre-applications will be by lottery. Placement on the Waiting List will not be based on Date-and-Time of pre-application. This means that:

- ◆ Applicants do not have to spend the night outside of the pre-application form distribution sites.
- ◆ Applicants do not need to stand in long lines.
- ◆ Everyone who wants to submit a pre-application form before the deadline may do so.
- ◆ The lottery will determine the applicant's place on the waiting list, giving each applicant a chance within his/her preference category, regardless of when the pre-application was submitted, provided it was submitted before the deadline of November 9, 2006.

Pre-applications will be available at the following pre-application form distribution sites:

Lee Road: Residents invited to fun-raiser

My point (Whew!) is that the Serving From the Home Front fund-raiser will surely go down in history as the greatest fun-raiser ever.

Historians, such as myself, will see to it that future generations remember the event as:

- THE social event of the season,
- THE final straw for Lee County residents, who will cede from the Union as a result thereof, or
- the site of DuPriest's Last Stand.

Whatever else it will be remembered for, Serving From the Home Front will be remembered as the event that filled the coffers of the OSC's welfare fund, which will eventually fund Christmas for local families in need and help military kids go to college.

The event will include heavy hors d'oeuvres, a silent auction, a funny DJ, a renowned Bush impersonator, excellent door prizes and all the free adjectives you can carry home. All that for $35 a pop!

Marty Terhune, the OSC president, tells me tickets are going fast, and space is limited. Maybe it's the $2,500 travel voucher they're giving away, or the hunting trip they're auctioning off. Maybe it's the dinner for eight, hosted by the commanding general and his wife. Maybe it's any one of the more than 70 exciting prizes you can win.

To get your hands on a ticket, call Marty at 706-596-8418. Tickets won't be sold at the door, and they won't be sold to anyone younger than 21.

Pets take care of people too

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Pet ownership can be overwhelming. Sometimes it feels like all you do is take care of your animals, but those animals are taking care of you too.

Pets provide obvious benefits to humans, like companionship, but they provide some that may surprise you.

Children can learn a lot from taking care of a pet — the value of money, sharing, responsibility, love, friendship and even the harder parts of life, like dealing with sickness or death. Encourage your children to help take care of the family pet and have fun with it too. Nothing beats running around outside with a dog when it comes to getting exercise and having fun.

The benefits provided by a pet are actually essential to a child's healthy development, according to the Humane Society of the U.S. Children can learn to be kind and good by learning how to properly treat and care for an animal. Studies show a link between the way people treat animals and how they treat each other, according to the HSUS.

For many people, pets provide therapy. Nursing homes and hospitals around the country have therapy programs in which therapy animals visit with patients.

Dogs assist some humans in a very important way — as their eyes. Specially trained seeing eye dogs give their owners an independence that otherwise wouldn't be possible. Many people dread the idea of being reliant on another person for day-to-day activities, but they may have no problem relying on an animal. Most dog owners will admit they depend on their pet, after all. I know I do.

Some assistance dogs are even trained to detect changes in behavior, body language or odor that precede seizures, and they alert their owner to those detections, according to the HSUS. Pet ownership has been shown to lower blood pressure, heart rate and anxiety.

Pets help their owners stay in shape through playing, grooming and even petting. Puppies and kittens especially are excited and full of energy, getting their owners off the couch and playing with them. In that way, pets can relieve stress and even help their owners relax.

Pets benefit their owners' mental and emotional health in other ways too. A sense of purpose and fulfillment can be gained from caring for an animal, and cats and dogs make excellent companions.

Having an animal in the home lessens feelings of loneliness and isolation, according to the HSUS, and happy people tend to become sick less frequently.

One other benefit of dog ownership is protection. Most dogs are protective of their territory, and that includes their owners. Should anything or anyone come near my house, I know my Shetland sheepdog will bark. Most of the time, he's only barking at cats, but it still makes me feel safe. And so does my very large Great Dane.

However, don't take home a pet for the sole purpose of protection. Dogs are living, loving animals that need a lot of time, care and attention.

The costs of owning a pet are far outweighed by the benefits of pet ownership — loyal companionship, unconditional love and improved mental and physical health.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS

Chattahoochee-Oconee National Forest

The Appalachian Trail begins in the Chattahoochee-Oconee National Forest and Wildlife Management area. The forest has been called a hiker's paradise, because of its mountain lakes, numerous waterfalls, caves, and rolling hills. There are places to fish, swim, ride horses, bike, and go whitewater rafting or boating.

The area's history includes Spanish conquistadores exploring the land and gold-rushers who left ghost towns, such as Scull Shoals, in the forest.

Confederate and Union troops faced off there and Sherman marched through the forest on his way to Atlanta. The Cherokee Indians fought to keep their land. Earlier inhabitants left their mark with burial mounds.

www.fs.fed.us

Fort Mountain State Park

Fort Mountain is named for the ancient 855-long rock wall that stands atop its highest point. The wall is thought to have been built by a Native American civilization as a fort or for ceremonies, but its history is shrouded in mystery.

The park offers 14 miles of hiking trails, 27 miles of biking trails, boat rental, mini golf, horseback riding camping and swimming.

www.gastateparks.org

Kangaroo Conservation Center

The main attraction are the kangaroos, but the center also has Australian bird aviaries, their Wild Australia show, exhibitions and guided tours through the open areas with exotic animals, plants, and of course, roaming kangaroos.

The Atlanta Journal Constitution called the center one of Metro Atlanta's Seven Don't Miss Attractions.

www.kangaroocenter.com

Unicoi State Park

Unicoi is a 1,050-acre park that offers a lot for the outdoor enthusiast. The park has include swimming, fishing, camping, picnic shelters, tennis courts, mountain biking, canoe and paddle boat rental.

www.gastateparks.org

Dahlonega

Gold was found south of Dahlonega in 1828, beginning a massive gold rush. Today visitors can tour the museum, visit historic sites, attend theatrical productions, stroll through vineyards, pan for gold and shop.

www.dahlonega.org

New Echota historic site

New Echota was once the thriving capital of the Cherokee Nation. During its brief history, the inhabitants established the first Indian language newspaper, a democratic government and become a center of trade. But the town died when the people were rounded up and sent away on the Trail of Tears.

Visitors can see original buildings and artifacts and learn about the people of New Echota. There are nature trails, fishing and boating areas.

www.gastateparks.org

Alpine Village of Helen

Helen is a recreation of an old-world Alpine village. It features international foods, import shopping and seasonal festivals. The town was built on a Cherokee village, and hikers can visit burial mounds.

Visitors can go hiking, river tubing, horseback riding, canoeing, golfing, fishing, mountain biking and pan for gold or gems.

Water plummets 729 feet over the sheer rock face at the top of Amicalola Falls to the stream below, making the falls the highest east of the Mississippi.

Amazing Amicalola Falls

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

Nestled at the base of the Appalachian mountains is the breathtakingly beautiful Amicalola Falls State Park.

The word Amicalola is a Cherokee word meaning "tumbling waters," an appropriate name for America's highest waterfall east of the Mississippi River.

The park has several trails, the most popular leading to the waterfall. It's mildly strenuous and provides outstanding views of the falls. Visitors walk alongside the white-water stream flowing from the fall's base. Shiny, mica-flecked rocks swept along by the water give a constant twinkle to the stream bed.

Farther on, the trail gets steeper, winding through old-growth forest to a bridge crossing over the falls. Visitors can climb a staircase (more than 700 steps) to the top of the falls, or rest in the mist from the falls. Most hikers stop at the bridge, so on weekends, the first leg of the trail can get crowded.

Near the Visitors' Center, there are picnic areas, a playground, and wading and fishing ponds. The wading area is a great place for children to catch crawfish, frogs and fish.

There are nature displays and a children's area inside the visitors' center, showing some of the plants and animals native to the park.

The shop caters to hardcore hikers — those beginning the Appalachian Trail. The arch marking the start of the Appalachian Trail is directly behind the center. The trail stretches through 14 states from Georgia's Springer Mountain to Katahdin Mountain in Maine, a total length of 2,175 miles, although the precise mileage is debated. Visitors can learn about the history of the trail, hear stories about legendary hikers and read postcards sent by people currently hiking the "AT."

Even if a hiker isn't ready for a 2,000-mile walk, the first couple miles of the trail are not strenuous. It is a much quieter section of the park with fewer visitors, where hikers are likely to see wildlife. The zigzagging trail leads to the top of the falls and the lodge. The trail offers spectacular view of the mountains.

The park is about a three hour drive from Fort Benning, but it's absolutely worth it for a nature lover.

ACTIVITIES: hiking, fishing, camping, picnic shelters, interpretive programs

UPCOMING EVENTS:

• Feb. 10 - The Sportsman's connection State wildlife experts will teach a workshop on hunting and fishing techniques.

• March 4 & 5 - Backpacking clinic Appalachian Trail hikers will lead a workshop focusing on how to prepare for hiking the "AT."

TO GET THERE:

Take Interstate 185 north to I-85 north. Take I-85 88 miles to GA-400 N toward Buckhead/Cumming. Turn left onto Dawsonville Highway/GA 53 for six miles. Turn left onto GA 196/Short Creek Road for five miles. Turn right on Bailey Waters Road then left onto GA 52 into the park.

COST: Special events and clinics are free. Admission is $5 per car for parking.

MORE INFO: Visit www.gastateparks.org/info/amicalola, or call (706) 265-4703

Amicalola Falls State Park is the beginning of the Appalachian Trail. Thousands of hopefuls begin the 2,175-mile trail every year, but few finish.

OPENING TODAY

EPIC MOVIE — In the spirit of Scary Movie and Date Movie, this movie is a parody that spoofs recent megablockbusters. The comedy centers itself around four orphans who visit a chocolate factory and are transported to the wonderful land of Gnarnia after stumbling upon an enchanted wardrobe.

Kal Penn, Adam Campbell, Jayma Mays, Faune Chambers and Jennifer Coolidge star in the movie.

Epic Movie is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, language and some comic violence.

CATCH AND RELEASE — A woman (Jennifer Garner) must deal with the untimely death of her husband and the revelation of secrets he kept from her.

Also starring in the movie are Timothy Olyphant, Juliette Lewis, Sam Jaeger and Fiona Shaw.

Catch and Release is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and some drug use.

SMOKIN' ACES — Mob boss Primo Sparazza has taken out a hefty contract on Buddy "Aces" Israel, a sleazy magician who has agreed to turn state's evidence against the Vegas mob.

The FBI, sensing a chance to use this small-time con to bring down big-target Sparazza, places Aces into protective custody, under the supervision of two agents dispatched to Aces' Lake Tahoe hideout.

When the word of the price on Aces' head spreads, it entices bounty hunters, thugs-for-hire, deadly vixens and double-crossing mobsters to join in the hunt. With all eyes on Tahoe, this rogues' gallery collides in a comic race to hit the jackpot and rub out Aces.

Smokin' Aces, rated R for strong bloody violence, pervasive language, some nudity and drug use, stars Ben Affleck, Jeremy Piven, Ryan Reynolds, Andy Garcia and Alicia Keys.

BLOOD AND CHOCOLATE — Ten years ago, in the remote mountains of Colorado, a young girl watched helplessly as her family was murdered by a pack of angry men for the secret they carried in their blood. She survived by running into the woods, and changing into something the hunters could never find — a wolf.

Now, though she lives half a world away, Vivian Gandillon is still running.

The movie stars Olivier Martinez, Agnes Bruckner, Hugh Dancy and Katja Riemann.

Blood and Chocolate is rated PG-13 for violence and terror, some sexuality and substance abuse.

ALSO PLAYING

THE HITCHER — Grace Andrews and Jim Halsey are a collegiate couple who are tormented by the mysterious hitchhiker John Ryder, a.k.a. The Hitcher. The young couple hit the road in a 1970 Oldsmobile 442, en route to spring break.

But their pleasure trip soon turns into a waking nightmare. The initial encounters with Ryder are increasingly off-putting for Grace and Jim, and they bravely fight back when he ambushes them.

But they are blindsided when he implicates them in a horrific slaying and continues to shadow them. The open road becomes a suspenseful, action-packed battleground of blood and metal as, in trying to elude not only Ryder but also the New Mexico State Police, Grace and Jim must fight for their lives and face their fears head-on.

Timothy Olyphant and Jennifer Garner star in Catch and Release, opening today in theaters nationwide.

The Hitcher, rated R for strong bloody violence, terror and language, stars Sean Bean and Sophia Bush.

ARTHUR AND THE INVISIBLES — 10-year-old Arthur has a lot on his plate — a real estate developer is about to snap up his grandma's home — and there's no way Arthur's going to hang around for his parents or grandparents to sort out the problem.

Maybe the solution lies in his grandpa's treasure, which is hidden somewhere on the "other side" in the land of the Minimoys.

The creatures that inhabit this world are just a tenth of an inch tall and live in perfect harmony with the environment. Arthur ventures into this world of the Minimoys, where he meets Princess Selenia and her brother Betameche. Together they set off to look for the treasure that will save his grandma.

The movie stars Freddie Highmore and Mia Farrow.

Arthur and the Invisibles is rated PG for fantasy action and brief suggestive material.

PRIMEVAL — A news producer and a reporter are dispatched to South Africa to track down the legendary 30-foot-long crocodile Gustave and bring him home alive.

However, their mission proves far more elusive and deadly than they had anticipated, and their situation turns even more perilous when a feared warlord targets them and their colleagues for death.

Primeval, rated R for strong graphic violence, brutality, terror and language, stars Dominic Purcell, Orlando Jones and Brooke Langton.

STOMP THE YARD — DJ is a troubled youth from Los Angeles attending the historically black Truth University in Atlanta.

When adapting to his new environment proves difficult, DJ finds solace in joining a struggling fraternity where he begins implementing his street-style dance moves in an attempt to help the step team win the coveted National Step Show Championship.

Columbus Short, Brian J. White, Ne-Yo and Courtney B. Vance star in the movie.

Stomp the Yard is rated PG-13 for a scene of violence, some sexual material and language.

ALPHA DOG — The movie, starring Amanda Seyfried, Justin Timberlake, Bruce Willis and Sharon Stone, is based on the life of Jesse James Hollywood, one of the youngest men ever to be on the FBI's most wanted list.

Alpha Dog is rated R for pervasive drug use and language, strong violence, sexuality and nudity.

FREEDOM WRITERS — A dedicated California teacher (Hilary Swank) finds a way to unify her disadvantaged, racially divided students, and to improve their grasp of academics, partly by having them keep journals about their violent, troubled lives.

Freedom Writers is rated PG-13 for violent content, some thematic material and language.

HAPPILY N'EVER AFTER — When the wizard in charge of Fairy Tale World goes on holiday, Cinderella's wicked stepmother takes over the world, which is home to characters such as Little Red Riding Hood, the Seven Dwarves and Rapunzel.

The animated characters are voiced by Sigourney Weaver, Sarah Michelle Gellar, Freddie Prinze Jr. and Patrick Warburton.

Happily N'ever After is rated PG for some mild action and rude humor.

THE PURSUIT OF HAPPYNESS — Chris Gardner (Will Smith) is a bright and talented but marginally employed salesman.

Struggling to make ends meet, Gardner finds himself and his 5-year-old son (Jaden Smith) evicted from their San Francisco apartment with nowhere to go. When Gardner lands an internship at a prestigious stock brokerage firm, he and his son endure many hardships, including living in shelters, in pursuit of his dream of a better life for the two of them.

The Pursuit of Happiness is rated PG-13 for language.

ROCKY BALBOA — Former heavyweight champion Rocky Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) steps out of retirement and back into the ring, pitting himself against a new rival decades after his initial glory.

When a computer simulated boxing match declares Balboa the victor over current champion Mason "The Line" Dixon, the legendary fighter's passion and spirit are reignited.

Rocky Balboa is rated PG for boxing violence and some language.

NIGHT AT THE MUSEUM — Good-hearted dreamer Larry Daley (Ben Stiller) thinks he's destined for something big.

But even he could never have imagined how big, when he accepts what appears to be a menial job as a graveyard-shift security guard at a museum of natural history.

During Larry's watch, extraordinary things begin to occur.

NEW RELEASES

OPEN SEASON: Another of the animated, all-star-voice-cast comedies that have been so plentiful lately, this comedy has an appealing odd-couple pairing in Martin Lawrence and Ashton Kutcher, who supply the sounds of a bear and the deer whose help he needs when hunting season starts. Gary Sinise is heard as one of the hunters, while Debra Messing Will & Grace supplies the vocals for a park ranger with special ties to the bear.

Jon Favreau and Billy Connolly also are heard. (PG: AS, P)

JAMES PATTERSON'S SUZANNE'S DIARY FOR NICHOLAS: Married at the time, Christina Applegate Married ... With Children and Johnathon Schaech That Thing You Do! star in this made-for-CBS adaptation of mystery writer Patterson's emotional novel. After her beau (Schaech) unexpectedly ends their romance, a book editor (Kathleen Rose Perkins) learns — from a Boog, a domesticated nine hundred lb. Grizzly bear finds himself stranded in the woods three days before Open Season. Forced to rely on Elliot, a fast-talking mule deer, the two form an unlikely friendship and must quickly rally other forest animals if they are to form a rag-tag army against the hunters.

Restaurant review

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

As a matter of policy, we don't write restaurant reviews about franchises here at The Bayonet. That's too bad, because the Mellow Mushroom, as it turns out, is a franchise. It doesn't feel like a chain. It feels more like your really cool big brother's bedroom, the one with the shag carpet, the deep, dark walls and the lava lamp. That's what I would tell you if I could write a review about the Mellow Mushroom. And I'd mention that the food is really delicious.

Of course, in the interest of full disclosure, I would have to admit — if I were writing a review — that I've only eaten the pizza and calzone. I haven't tried the salads, the hoagies or the pretzels. I'm betting they're just as scrumptious as the menu says they are — Try our scrumptious salads! — but I'm addicted to the Gourmet White pizza and the steak and cheese calzone. By the time I polish off one or the other, there's no room for anything else. My dinner companions always encourage me to try whatever it is they're trying, the Jerk Chicken or the Cosmic Karma or whatever, but I notice they're always poised to fork a slice of my Gourmet White in return. I've lost a few friends who have lost a few fingers, but I've yet to lose a slice of pizza.

The Gourmet White, with its minced garlic, sun-dried tomatoes, provolone, mozzarella and feta, pays homage to the Beatles' White Album, just as the Mellow Mushroom pays homage to all things groovy. Someday I'll try the house special, a pizza stacked with meats, peppers, onions, mushrooms, olives, tomatoes, bacon and cheese. Maybe I'll try the Mega-veggie, which includes tofu and artichoke hearts. Maybe not. I'll definitely try the House Pesto and the Magical Mystery Tour, which naturally features a variety of mushrooms. Wish I could report back to you on these Mellow Mushroom favorites, but I'm afraid you'll have to experience them yourselves, because we don't write restaurant reviews about franchises.

I could've written a review way back in the early 70s, when those three crazy kids opened the first Mellow Mushroom in Midtown Atlanta to support their college habit. I would have written it in crayon, of course. I was way young, just like the hippie-hip concept of stone-baked crusts made from fresh spring water dough and healthy whole food ingredients. I should have written it then, before the South "Mellowed." Now, I'm told, you can find Mellow Mushrooms in quite a few hip and happening towns here in the South. And not a one of them will use anything but heart-healthy ingredients. No refined sugars or excess fat. The meats are pre-cooked and drained, the mozzarella is low-fat and the alfalfa sprouts and tempeh are disguised as real food.

If I were writing a restaurant review about the Mellow Mushroom, I'd tell you to try it for yourselves — soon, like today, which is Eddie Van Halen's birthday. So Jump! in the car and head to the Mellow Mushroom, at 6100 Veteran's Parkway in the North Plaza. That's what I'd recommend, if I were allowed to.

The story is the thing for ESPN's Shelley Smith

It's the mark of a true journalist.

ZAP2IT
George Dickie

Even after nearly 30 years in the business, during which time she's covered everything from Olympics and Super Bowls to steroids scandals and the O.J. Simpson trial, while winning numerous awards and writing three books, ESPN's Shelley Smith still gets a charge out of reporting the untold story.

"I guess what still drives me," said Smith, whose reports are frequently seen on SportsCenter and Sunday NFL Countdown, among other shows, "and what I'm proud of, is times I've found out information — even little, teeny things — that nobody else knows.

"Like I reported (recently), just a tiny note about (Florida defensive back) Reggie Nelson's mother, who died. And just by talking and knowing the defensive coordinator for the Gators for so long because I've known him for 10 years ... I found out that Reggie put his jersey into his mother's casket before they ended the funeral. And just with something little like that that nobody else knows — it had never been reported anywhere — those are the things that still drive me and make me passionate, that I'm able to find out little things and big things."

Smith, 48, began her career in the early 1980s as a print journalist after majoring in journalism and political science at the University of Nebraska. Her first job was with The Associated Press in Omaha, after which she landed with Pacific Stars and Stripes in Tokyo.

"They were hiring young people to come and jazz up the newspaper," she says, "so I was the assistant sports editor in Tokyo. ... There were a bunch of us who worked at Stars and Stripes about the same age. We were just out of college, and yet we were very serious about what we did with the paper, and we did things that paper had never seen.

"I remember doing interviews with John McEnroe and Jimmy Connors, Arnold Palmer and Lee Trevino, and Phil Mahre. We asked if we could cover these things and they let us do it, so we had a lot of fun and covered a lot of things and wrote things and did a lot of things that they had never seen that were a lot of fun."

From there, Smith went back to the States to work for the San Francisco Examiner, got married and had a child, then wound up back in Tokyo doing freelance work for Sports Illustrated, covering the Olympics in Seoul, South Korea, in 1988.

"One of my beats was the drug control center," Smith said, "and it just so happened that those were the Olympics that Ben Johnson tested positive for steroids. So I jumped on an airplane with him at the last minute and got an interview with him, the first interview with him, on the plane on the ride home, and landed in time to make our deadline and got his denial of everything, even though we had other people saying they had seen him do it. But we got his denial."

Around that time, ESPN was looking to add print journalists in the vein of Peter Gammons and Chris Mortensen to its stable of on-air talent, so Smith was approached.

Even though she had no broadcast training, she recalled the transition was not difficult because "they moved me very slowly. They didn't just throw me into the waters of television without a lot of training. They gave me voice training. They had me work with different producers. It's a completely different style of writing. ... You have to learn to write to video, and it took me awhile to get my voice down and feel comfortable on camera.

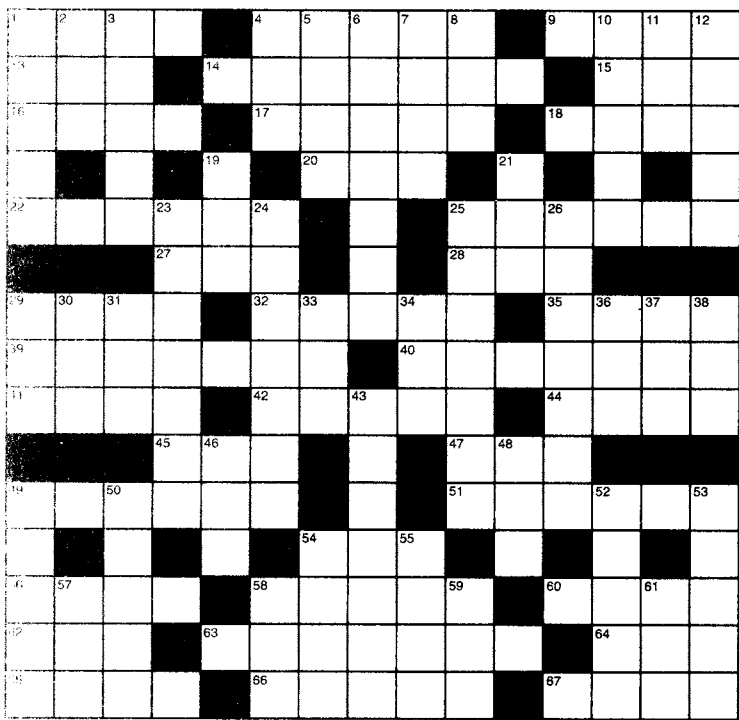

"I started by doing the Roy Firestone show. ... I would be the person called whenever a guest would cancel, so I would quickly drive up to the studio. We'd talk about whatever the topic of the day was. And it was very comfortable, and he really helped me a lot, and I owe a lot to him because he was the one who put me on the first time."

A full-timer at ESPN since 1997 and now the single mother of a daughter playing soccer at the University of Oregon, Smith names Charles Barkley and Keyshawn Johnson, with whom she collaborated on his 1997 memoir Just Give Me the Damn Ball! as her favorite interviews.

"A lot of people rip Keyshawn for saying what he thinks," she said, "but I love that he says what he thinks. I get irritated at times. We get mad at athletes for saying clichés or politically correct things, and then we rip them when they say the honest truth. So I love that Barkley speaks his mind. Keyshawn has always been great, too, even writing a book, and since then we've maintained a really nice friendship."

Knox paper available on Benning

Starting Monday, residents and visitors to the post will find copies of the Fort Knox, Ky., newspaper beside The Bayonet at various locations around Fort Benning, including the Commissary, the PX and Infantry Hall.

Fort Knox residents will find The Bayonet available to them at that installation, as well.

The paper exchange is part of early efforts to forge a strong partnership between the Infantry Center and the Fort Knox Armor School, which is being relocated to Fort Benning as part of the Maneuver Center of Excellence. The creation of the Maneuver Center results from the latest Base Realignment and Closure.

Inside the Turret, the Fort Knox publication, is published weekly by Landmark Military Newspapers, the publishers of The Bayonet.

14th CSH welcomed home

The 14th Combat Support Hospital arrived at Lawson Army Airfield Monday after spending one year in Afghanistan. Hundreds of family and friends waited to greet the Soldiers.

The 14th Combat Support Hospital returned to Fort Benning Monday at 7:30 a.m. after a one-year deployment to Afghanistan.

Several hundred family and friends waited in Freedom Hall Monday morning for the arrival of the Soldiers. The rear detachment arranged for a children's area with a moonwalk, movies and coloring to help ease the anxious wait for the kids. But many families waited at the rope cordoning off the waiting area, most holding signs, balloons or flowers.

Marco Oates passed the time by making a sign for his dad, Maj. Steve Oates.

"It's really exciting because he's been gone a long time and it's been stressful for me and my mom," Marco said. "I had to be extra responsible for my sister and kind of like a father-figure."

Keisha Atwood paced while waiting for her husband, Staff Sgt. Rodney Atwood. Waiting with her was his mother and sister, who drove from Ohio.

"I'm so happy to see him," said his mother, Annie. "He's my only son, and I worried about him all the time he was gone. I'd think of him and just hope he was staying safe."

The welcome party for 1st Lt. Stacie Hill wore matching T-shirts emblazoned with "I love Lt. Hill." Hill's brother and sister-in-law came from Thailand to welcome Hill home. Hill's mother, Patsy Ogg, said she was anxious and excited to see her daughter.

"It's been a lot of mixed emotions knowing she's deployed," Ogg said. "But I know this is what she wants to do and she cares about it. It's just good to know she's home safe."

Senate confirms Petraeus to head Iraq operations

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
John D. Banusiewicz

WASHINGTON — The Senate confirmed Army Lt. Gen. David H. Petraeus for promotion to general and assignment as commander of Multinational Force Iraq Jan. 26.

"The Senate confirmed this good man without a dissenting vote," President Bush said. "I appreciate the quick action of the United States Senate. I appreciate them giving General David Petraeus a fair hearing, and I appreciate the vote."

Bush wants Petraeus to report to Iraq quickly to "implement a plan we believe will yield our goals."

The president said that despite criticism of his plan to increase U.S. troop presence in the Iraqi capital and in the country's troublesome Anbar province, he has to do what needs to be done. Most members of Congress, he said, recognize that failure in Iraq "would be a disaster for the United States."

"I'm the decision maker," Bush said. "I had to come up with a way forward that precluded disaster. In other words, I had to think about what's likely to work. I worked with our military, and Secretary Gates to come up with a plan that is likely to succeed."

Critics of his plan have an obligation to propose a plan they think will work, Bush said. "I've listened to lots of members of Congress; I've listened carefully to their suggestions," he said. "And I have picked the plan that I think is most likely to succeed, because I understand, like many in Congress understand, success is very important for the security of the country."

Petraeus expressed his appreciation to the president, the Senate and his family. He also thanked "the great Soldiers, Sailors, Airmen, Marines and civilians who are out there on the front lines of the global war on terror."

No date has been set for Petraeus to succeed Gen. George W. Casey Jr., who has commanded coalition forces in Iraq since July 2004. Bush has nominated Casey to become Army chief of staff.

$50 million rehab center for troops opens

600,000 Americans
donated money to fund state-of-the-art facility

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Elaine Wilson

The Center for the Intrepid, a state-of-the-art physical rehabilitation facility designed for service members wounded in the war on terror, opened at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Monday along with two new Fisher Houses.

The four-story, 60,000-square-foot center is equipped with the latest rehabilitation technology.

The facility includes an indoor running track, firing range, pool, two-story climbing wall, prosthetic center and a computer assisted rehabilitation environment known as CAREN.

The environment comprises a dome with a 4-meter platform and screen, simulating everything from a city sidewalk to a day on the lake so patients can improve their gait and balancing skills. The simulation unit, one of nine in the world, is the only one in the U.S.

The $50 million center was built entirely from private funds through the Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund, which provides assistance to the nation's military heroes injured in the performance of duty and their families.

Wounded Soldiers will be able to recover at the Center for the Intrepid, a new 60,000-square-foot facility open at Fort Sam Houston.

Training Soldiers to support GWOT

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

This column is the first in a series of new Commander's Columns planned for future issues of The Bayonet. Each week I will highlight Fort Benning activities of interest to Soldiers, family members, Army civilians, retirees, and to our partners in the valley.

February will be a challenging, exciting month. We will test Infantrymen under the rigors of the Expert Infantryman's Badge qualification standards, prepare for the U.S. Army Small Arms Championships (where some of the best marksmen in the world will compete), and we will help prepare Soldiers and family members for deployment.

To give you an idea of the complexity of our mission, here's a snapshot of this week's upcoming activities: the 29th Infantry Regiment conducts Sniper School training on Malone Range 17; the Infantry Training Brigade conducts convoy live fire training; the Basic Combat Training Brigade conducts live fire training on Malone Range 22; and the Ranger Training Brigade conducts training in all three Battalions at Camp Darby, Camp Rudder and Camp Merrill. The 11th Infantry Regiment is also live firing and 300 airborne students will proudly pin on the Basic Parachutist Badge.

Our capstone exercise this month is the preparation and execution of Fort Benning's Expert Infantryman's Badge qualification. Hosted by the 29th Infantry Regiment from Feb. 12 to March 7, this is one of the most anticipated events of the year and one that tests the warrior skills and mettle of our Infantrymen. Best of luck to all those Infantrymen who will try to earn the coveted EIB!

Later in the month we will do a hands-on training exercise at Red Cloud Range and we will complete preparations for the annual U.S. Army Small Arms Championships, which begin March 2.

While this training continues, we have units and individuals deployed into combat operations, or preparing to deploy. The 3rd Brigade Combat Team, 3rd Infantry Division, will return from the National Training Center this month and rapidly transition to pre-deployment operations. Supporting the "Sledgehammer Brigade" will be Fort Benning's priority and will include supporting final training, preparing family members and conducting a myriad of associated services.

These are our Soldiers — America's Soldiers — and everyone will need to help the brigade and its families to prepare to deploy in support of the Global War on Terrorism.

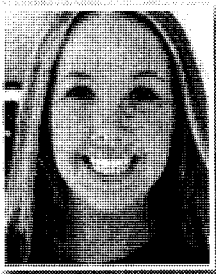

All deploying Soldiers can count on 100 percent support from Fort Benning during the deployment. You need to know we respect your courage and we are extremely proud of what you do for America. You and your units will succeed in combat, and we will succeed in supporting your family members while you are gone.

This is my challenge to all Soldiers and Army civilians on Fort Benning — continue to do your best to train and support our Army — we are an Army at war, and the Global War on Terrorism will continue to demand our total commitment to defeat perhaps the greatest threat since the Second World War. Together we will succeed, for we are Army Strong! Follow Me!

Groundhog onto something?

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

What's the deal with Groundhog Day? Does anyone really think a furry critter and his shadow reveal the future's secrets? Even if it did, I can imagine better ways to spend the day than sitting by a hole waiting for a rodent named Phil. No offense to the folks of Punxsutawny, Pa., who I'm sure do more interesting things the other 364 days of the year.

To get some answers about this groundhog obsession, I dug up a little background in honor of Feb. 2.

Groundhog Day falls on a cross-quarter day. That means it falls midway between the first day of winter and the first day of spring in the Northern hemisphere.

Back in the day, weather was a hot topic. People counted caterpillar stripes, measured beaver dams and watched stars for clues to the weather.

The Romans watched bears and hedgehogs on the cross-quarter day to see if they'd emerge from their lairs, believing it corresponded to the weather. When the Romans invaded Germanic lands, they brought Hedgehog Day with them. It was picked up by the local populace.

Fast-forward a couple thousand years. When Germans began immigrating to the United States, they took Hedgehog Day with them. But woe, they couldn't find hedgehogs, so they substituted badgers, prairie dogs and groundhogs instead. It looks like the groundhogs won.

Around the time the Romans were trying to conquer everything that moved, the Irish celebrated Imbolc on the cross-quarter day. Imbolc was a holiday to honor the goddess of flame, Brighid. The people watched to see if snakes and badgers emerged from their holes, and they honored Brighid so she would bring back the flames of the sun.

Early Christians adapted Imbolc to St. Brighid's Day or Candlemas. Priests would bless and disperse candles to the poor on Candlemas, with the hope that the cold, dark winter would end soon.

So it turns out, Groundhog Day actually had a point other than to glorify clairvoyant rodents. It was important for farmers to know how long the winter would last, so they could ration their food supplies to last the winter, and prepare for planting. Trying to predict the length of winter was a matter of survival, so naturally it consumed their thoughts.

The things I would like to predict are nothing so grave. I only worry about the forecast if I'm planning a vacation or want to know if I should bring an umbrella. I just wish I could predict the lottery numbers.

I suppose it shows we're awfully lucky. We can take food, shelter and climate control for granted.

But if I could predict the future, I don't think I'd want to. While it's tempting to be all-knowing, I'm sure I'd mess things up if I knew what was coming. It's tough enough living without having to consult a crystal ball to know what implications my actions might have.

The Danish philosopher Soren Kierkegaard said, "Life must be lived forward, but can only be understood backward." Isn't that the truth?

If we knew beforehand how hard life can be, would we even try? If we knew we'd lose a loved one or fail at a project, we might never give anything a chance. But the mystery of life makes it interesting, exciting, compelling. So I'm happy meandering along not knowing what's coming. Waiting around to watch the weather just slows a person down.

Not that I would turn down a palm-reading squirrel or something. It would be fun for parties, and great if he knew the lotto numbers.

Parvo and pediatrics shouldn't mix

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS
Elsie Jackson

She has what? Parvo? I wondered at first if my husband had erred, taking our daughter to the veterinarian instead of the pediatrician. I'm sure the wait would have been much shorter.

I mentally catalogued shot records. MMR — that was measles, mumps, rubella — or was that rabies? No, the dog gets a rabies shot, so the child must have gotten the rubella vaccination. Then my daughter had gotten a tetanus shot, of course. And there was a shot for H-something.

But Parvo? I was fairly certain that proof of vaccination for Parvovirus was only required for obedience school, not public school.

Or was it? My mother will be horrified (though not terribly surprised) if she ever finds out that I can recite the shot records for four dogs without missing a beat, but only have vague recollections when it comes to her granddaughter's. That's what shot records are for.

And in my defense, the dogs need booster shots annually (in January, April and October), while my daughter hasn't needed a round of boosters for ... a while. Blessed with good health, she visits the doctor about once a year, maybe, and if she needs a booster they give it to her.

As it turns out, Human Parvovirus, also known as Fifth Disease, is pretty common in children between 5 and 15. Most people have been exposed to it and display few, if any, symptoms, which are often mistaken for mild colds or minor rashes. Like many childhood illnesses, once you've had it, you're immune.

My daughter's case manifested itself toward the end of a speed skating practice. She pulled up in the middle of a lap and complained that she wasn't feeling well.

By the time I got her home, her hands and feet were swollen, she itched and was covered in what looked like mosquito bites. Chalking it up to something she had been exposed to, Dr. Mom prescribed a shower and antihistamine for the itching and sent her to bed.

She was, after all, eating well and quite active, though her nose (along with the rest of her) was quite warm.

The rash and swelling reappeared at school the next day, prompting a necessary visit to the doctor's office. An over-the-counter medication relieved the swelling in her hands and feet, and she received a prescription that stopped the itching and she was fine.

The cure was quick and relatively painless, and I didn't even have to spring for a new squeaky toy.

NEWS AROUND the ARMY

South Dakota offers veterans bonuses

The state of South Dakota is paying a veterans' bonus of up to $500 to certain service members, according to the South Dakota Veterans Program.

Bonuses are available to service members who: were legal residents of the state for at least six months immediately preceding entry into the armed forces; are currently on active duty or were honorably discharged from the armed forces; or served on active duty between Jan. 1, 1993, and Sept. 11, 2001. All active duty service between Sept. 11, 2001 and a date to be determined qualifies for a bonus payment. The program also allows payment for active duty from Aug. 2, 1990 to Dec. 30, 1992 for people who did not already receive payment during this period.

Application forms can be obtained by writing to: SD Veterans Bonus, 500 E. Capitol, Pierre, SD, 57501 or by calling 605-773-7251. Veterans can also request forms by e-mail at john.fette@state.sd.us. Writers should include name, street or post office number, city, state and zip code.

Wounded Warrior Program

Soldiers assigned to Fort Bliss, Texas and in the Wounded Warrior Program are recovering in other ways besides in a hospital. Civilian Gail Darling formed a committee of volunteers who wanted to give back to the Soldiers.

The first outing for the Soldiers was Music Under the Stars, an event that occurs every Sunday in the summer. During the holidays, Darling and the committee helped the Soldiers purchase airline tickets for free by collecting frequent flyer miles from clubs in the community. The committee has also taken the Soldiers out to dinner and received tickets to different events, all at no cost to the Soldiers.

14th CSH: Returns

The families' wait was over at 10:15 a.m. when the troops entered in formation to music played by the Infantry Band, and the crowd cheered, waved flags and yelled greetings to the Soldiers.

The ceremony opened with a prayer and remarks.

Brig.Gen.PhilipVolpe,commander of the 14th's higher headquarters, the 44th Medical Command, spoke briefly during the welcome home ceremony.

"You should be very proud," Volpe said. "We're all very proud of you. There should be before men and women like you who are willing to serve their nation."

During their deployment, the 230 Soldiers worked in three locations, with the majority serving in Bagram. The 14th treated American, coalition and Afghani casualties, gave medical care to local Afghani people, and did surgery, in-patient care and sick call.

The unit is equipped to care for about 248 casualties in a field environment.

When the troops were dismissed, families ran into the formation to find their Soldiers.

A few Soldiers will have to wait to see their families. Sgt. Kore Stevenson and Sgt. Dante Holley deployed with the 14th, but came from other posts. Despite the wait, both were happy to be back in the United States, they said.

"It was a long time to be gone," Stevenson said. "It's weird, surreal, to come back after being gone for a year. Being there made me appreciate how good we have it. Just driving a car, or being able to flip on a light switch instead of carrying a flashlight in the middle of the night — that will be nice."

"I did a lot of things I never would have done had I not been here," Stevenson said. "It was hard, but it was a good experience."

The toughest part of the deployment for Holley was seeing children who had been hurt.

"But it was also the best if we could help these kids get better," Holley said. "It's bad seeing anyone who is hurt, but especially when it's a child."

Staff Sgt. Edres Rhone hugged his daughter, 2-year-old Amara, and said he was happy to be home.

"It just feels so good to be here," he said.

Annette Fournier

Spc. Ronald Anderson hugs his wife, Tiffany, and his daughter, 2-year-old Calley, Monday after arriving home from a one-year deployment to Afghanistan in support of Operation Enduring Freedom. The 14th CSH worked in three areas of Afghanistan, treating combat casualties and Afghani locals.

Center: Opens for wounded Soldiers' rehabilitation

"This is a red-letter day for this country and for the 600,000 Americans who have contributed a dollar, some more than a million dollars, to make sure our young men and women who have given so much to this country are aware the American people care about them," said Arnold Fisher, chairman of the Intrepid Fallen Heroes Fund. "They are our national treasure."

Speakers at the ceremony dedicating included Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Marine Gen. Peter Pace, Deputy Secretary of Defense Gordon England, Secretary of the Army Francis J. Harvey and R. James Nicholson, secretary of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

"There are those who speak about (wounded warriors) today, (saying) 'He lost an arm. He lost a leg. She lost her sight,'" Pace said to the injured troops in attendance.

"I object. You gave an arm, you gave a leg, you gave your sight as gifts to your nation that we might live in freedom."

Both the Intrepid Fallen Heroes

Fund and the Fisher House Foundation are members of the Defense Department's America Supports You program.

The program works to highlight ways in which Americans support U.S. troops, veterans and their families.

Dozens of wounded warriors joined more than 3,000 guests at the grand opening.

The guest list included Sens. Hillary Clinton and John McCain, country group Big & Rich, Rosie O'Donnell, Michelle Pfeiffer, producer David E. Kelley and top military leaders from all branches of service. Rock music star John Mellencamp performed during the ceremony.

Although the audience was packed with the top military leaders and Hollywood celebrities, the wounded warriors received the longest round of applause, along with a standing ovation.

"It's amazing, truly amazing. It really shows the American people care," said Staff Sgt. Daniel Barnes, a bilateral amputee.

"What you see before you is a monument built by contributions

Thank you to the families — families of the fallen, families of the wounded; you sacrifice in ways that people who have not walked in your shoes can only imagine. When we are wounded, you are there to help put us back together.

— Marine Gen. Peter Pace, Joint Chiefs of Staff

by 600,000 Americans," Fisher said. "This is a monument to not only the men and women and their families who will come here, but a monument to the generosity of our citizens and their love for those who serve."

The center will initially cater to amputees and burn patients injured in the Global War on Terrorism, but is hoped to expand to encompass retirees, family members and veterans.

The new Fisher Houses serve as a home away from home for families of patients receiving medical care at major military and Veterans Affairs medical centers.

The 21-room Fisher House is 16,800 square feet. Each home has a kitchen, a formal dining room, several sitting rooms and bedrooms equipped with DVD/VCR systems and flat-screen TVs.

"What a privilege it is to render assistance to military families," said Ken Fisher, chairman of the Fisher House Foundation.

Pace echoed the sentiment.

"Thank you to the families — families of the fallen, families of the wounded," Pace said. "You sacrifice in ways that people who have not walked in your shoes can only imagine. When we are wounded, you are there to help put us back together."

"Those of you who are family members of fallen and of wounded have served this country as well as anyone who has ever worn the uniform."

Sledgehammer Soldiers ready for NTC training

Personnel, equipment equipped with MILES, vehicles fitted with Warlock electronic counter-measures

3RD BRIGADE COMBAT TEAM PAO
Spc. Ben Hutto

A week before their time "in the box" at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., the vehicles of the 3rd Brigade Combat Team were modified with the Army's best equipment to maximize the effectiveness of the Marne Soldiers' training.

Personnel and equipment were equipped with the Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System and vehicles fitted with Warlock electronic counter-measures, "Duke," surrogate device.

"The whole point of all of this (the equipment) is to train Soldiers in the safest, most effective way possible so they come back home safe," said Lynn Brooks, the MILES Division manager at NTC.

Brooks is no stranger to the Army or the MILES equipment — the former Soldier has been installing the system, in its various forms, at NTC for the last 15 years.

"Of course there are some things we can't simulate, but the system is very realistic and effective," Brooks said.

"We can simulate all forms of direct and indirect fire. Using the probability of kills system, we can analyze what sort of damage the vehicle would have taken based on the type of vehicle and what kind of armor it has and use that information to help Soldiers better prepare themselves."

The system is not easy to install. It takes Brooks' team about 20 to 30 minutes to install the system on a vehicle, but the results are worth the wait in Brooks' mind.

"Things changed here at NTC when the 507th Maintenance Company got hit over in Iraq," Brooks said.

Before that, the training emphasis was on tanks and Bradleys, Brooks said, not the Soldiers who do the cooking, maintenance, etc.

"When that happened, we changed the way we trained because everyone is susceptible to IEDs, direct fire engagements and mortar fire engagements.

"The only name they (the enemy) care about hitting is a vehicle with "USA" written on it," he said.

"It's important to use (MILES) training to keep you safe and make yourself better," said Brooks, who has close friends in the 3rd ID. "Just because it's not real now doesn't mean it won't be over there."

Brooks and his team weren't the only group getting the Sledgehammer Brigade's vehicles ready for their upcoming training exercise.

The IAP World Service installers spent many hours making sure that the Marne vehicles were uploaded with the newest Warlock simulators.

Sgt. 1st Class Joseph Carruthers, of the 3rd Squadron, 1st Cavalry Regiment, was the NCOIC for the Warlock installation and wanted Soldiers to understand that the Warlock system they will be using "in the box" is the most recent and advanced Warlock system the Army has.

The Duke system is much better than the previous system, Carruthers said, because the previous system offered about 75 percent coverage and the Duke system offers 100 percent coverage and only takes about 45 minutes to install, but is much more sturdy.

"The fact is that it is easier to use and much more effective," he said.

The Duke Warlock system will be used for the first time at NTC by the Sledgehammer Soldiers.

One of the new system's advancements is that it provides after action feedback.

"After missions, crews can download the data from that mission and they can see what type of threats they are facing and adjust their strategies accordingly," said Stephen Peters, an installation unit technician.

"The most important thing is that it will save lives," Carruthers said.

Uploaded with the newest training equipment, the 3rd BCT's main goal is to carry what they will learn here into their next deployment.

"Training is important," Peters said.

"Hopefully Soldiers can take something they learned or practiced here and use it to protect their lives.

"That is our main goal."

3rd BCT preps for Iraqi deployment at NTC

Classes given on the Arab culture, rules of engagement, negotiations, escalation of force and medical training

3RD BCT PAO
Sgt. Natalie Rostek

Close to two months after the 3rd Brigade Combat Team completed the vigorous 30-day training exercise, Hammer Focus, Sledgehammer Soldiers shipped out for more training at the National Training Center in Fort Irwin, California.

For many Soldiers, this is their first deployment to NTC.

The first week, the brigade prepared for the "war games" each unit will participate "in the box."

Classes on the Arab culture, rules of engagement, negotiations, escalation of force and medical training were given in order to prepare Soldiers for what they may encounter "in the box" and later in Iraq.

While Soldiers are "in the box," they will be maintaining forward operating bases just as they would in Iraq. Each company will also conduct training specific to their jobs.

Some training will include combat patrols and interacting with the local population, which is role-played by Iraqi-Americans hired for the training.

Leaders will learn how to engage the local government and religious leaders.

Force-on-force training will also be conducted. This is a more traditional way of fighting where large American formations will be put against large enemy formations.

Soldiers will also learn sling load operations where they will rig their equipment to be flown on helicopters, a new training exercise for the Sledgehammer team.

"Last time (at NTC), we conducted force-on-force exercises using equipment similar to laser tag," said Spc. Chris Shelly, a fire support specialist with 3rd BCT.

"If you were hit, your equipment would go off and you would get a casualty card explaining what happened to you like if you were injured, dead or if you could return to duty."

Upon completion of the training, the 3rd BCT will be ready for deployment to Iraq in mid-March, the brigade commander said.

"This is the best team of leaders I have ever had the opportunity to work with," said Col. Wayne Grigsby Jr., commander of the 3rd BCT. "Upon the completion of NTC, we believe the BCT will be well trained to execute combat operations in Iraq."

Soldiers of the 3rd BCT are part of the troop surge into Iraq and will be deploying in March.

"As long as we have time to see our families before we go I won't mind leaving so soon," said Pvt. Shemika Walker, Company B, 203rd Brigade Support Battalion. "The earlier we go, the earlier we come home."

"I'm looking forward to going," Shelly said. "Having more time to prepare would be nice, but it's all in the job."

Grigsby said the Soldiers will have the opportunity to spend time with what he calls, the "true foundation of the team, the families," as well as getting packed up and ready for deployment.

"The key is not to rush," Grigsby said. "Once you get the attitude that you are hurried, accidents and safety issues occur."

Grigsby said the Soldiers will continue to do their job, train hard and be prepared for Iraq, both physically and mentally.

"The most important resource in the Sledgehammer team and what leads to the team's success is the Sledgehammer Soldier."

Center prepares deploying troops for IED threat

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Donna Miles

As a full-time member of the opposing force at the National Training Center at Fort Irwin, Calif., Spc. Tim Lawson is accustomed to putting troops preparing to deploy through rigors like they'll confront in Iraq and Afghanistan.

But now that Lawson and his fellow 1st Platoon, 58th Combat Engineer Company, troops have orders to Iraq, they're getting put through the same paces themselves. And with the shoe on the other foot, they're realizing just how difficult the challenges are, especially those posed by IEDs.

Not long into a route-clearing training mission with his mock Buffalo mine-clearing vehicle, Lawson got a taste of what it's like to come up against the number one killer of U.S. troops in Iraq.

"Once you get into the zone, everything looks suspicious," Lawson said after his "Buffalo," a modified 5-ton truck, and four other vehicles were ambushed by OPFOR snipers and two vehicles were hit with simulated IEDs.

The training, offered by NTC's Operations Group in cooperation with the new Joint IED Center of Excellence, is helping arm Lawson's unit with the most up-to-date ways to confront roadside bombs, vehicle bombs and even terrorists laden with suicide vests.

The Joint IED Center of Excellence opened in summer 2006 to share the latest counter-IED tactics, techniques and procedures with deploying troops, said Air Force Lt. Col. Rodney Taylor, the center's chief of integration.

By incorporating lessons learned on the battlefield into training scenarios, sometimes within 24 hours after an event, and exposing troops to the IED-defeating technology they'll use in theater, troops have a leg up on their adversaries, he said.

"The enemy is continuing to evolve in its approach and its tactics, so we have to stay ahead of the game," Taylor said. "We have to be proactive."

The Joint IED Center of Excellence is part of the Joint IED Defeat Organization, a Washington-based group focused specifically on the IED threat. The center works with four service IED centers of excellence to ensure the most comprehensive approach to countering IEDs, said Christine DeVries, spokeswoman for the Joint IED Defeat Organization.

The Joint Center of Excellence builds on training the services are conducting, she said, gathering lessons learned throughout the military and ensuring they're shared with the widest possible audience.

It also recognizes that every service has a stake in the IED fight and a variety of skills to lend, Taylor said. The Army, for example, contributes combat arms and military intelligence troops. The Marines provide reconnaissance specialists and communications capabilities. The Air Force provides electronic warfare officers and military working dogs specialists. The Navy contributes explosive ordnance disposal specialists and cryptologists.

"There are a lot of specialties, and although it may not be intuitive, they all bring something to the table in terms of the IED threat," Taylor said.

The Joint Center of Excellence focuses on helping prepare deploying troops for their own role in the IED fight, but also ensures they know what capabilities the other services can contribute.

"What people get here is an understanding of the large number of assets that can be brought to bear in the IED problem," Taylor said. "When they come here to a joint environment, they learn a lot (about those capabilities). And that's important, because when they show up in Iraq or Afghanistan, they are going to be in a joint environment."

"When they leave here, they will be trained to where they understand what it is to operate in an IED response sequence," said Capt. Sean Patrick, an observer-controller at the center.

That means incorporating what Patrick called the "five Cs" of IED response: call or identify a potential IED, confirm that it's an IED, then cordon, clear and control the area.

Detecting IEDs can be particularly difficult because they can be hidden almost anywhere, and every pile of rubble or garbage is suspect, Patrick said, so the training focuses on situational awareness.

"We're training Soldiers to be keen, to be acute and to be paying attention," he said. "Our goal is to impart our experience so when it comes down to them being able to execute, it's second nature."

Sgt. Edgar Huezo, a member of the 58th Combat Engineer Co., welcomed the training. "Going through this training basically prepares the mind to be confident in what you are doing over there," he said. "And if you make a mistake, this is the place to do it, because you can improve it before you go."

Sgt. Marcus Williams, a member of the 3rd Infantry Division's 1st Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, is preparing for his third deployment to Iraq and understands firsthand the damage IEDs can do. But despite a lot of experience under his belt and limited time stateside before his unit deploys, Williams said he recognizes the value of the training the troops are getting

"This is getting us prepared for what we are going to face over there in Iraq," he said. "This is the place where the new guys are getting a chance to work out the kinks, and the veterans are getting to work out their (standard operating procedures). So it's very worthwhile for us."

Encountering a real-life IED forces everyone involved to focus on the situation and respond quickly, Williams said.

"That's when you have to snap out of a panic mode and react," he said. "And that's when you fall back on your training."

In addition to providing troops the specialized training they need to identify and clear IEDs before they explode, the Joint Center of Excellence serves as a focal point for developing and testing new technologies to defeat them and better ways to foil the networks responsible for emplacing them, DeVries said.

The scenarios are focused not just at the individual and small-unit level, but also at the battalion and brigade level. As ground troops scan their patrol routes for hidden IEDs and equipment operators get experience in detonating the devices with equipment like they'll use in the theater, headquarters staffs focus on intelligence operations designed to track down the terrorists who emplaced IEDs.

"We want to find and defeat the devices before they hurt people, and when we find an IED, we want to explore the forensics of it," DeVries said. "But you can't stop at defeating the devices. You have to attack the network and take out the guys who are using them."

The tactics used to conduct these far-ranging operations require flexibility and adaptability, Taylor said.

"The enemy we face today appears to be a decentralized type of enemy, a headless enemy. If you cut off a portion of it, it still is able to operate," he said. "So we have to think outside the box in our approach, to be sure we are on the leading edge of technology and capability so we can effectively defeat the enemy."

Ultimately, countering IEDs has huge implications for U.S. military operations in the war on terror, Taylor said.

Although IEDs may be relatively simple weapons, he said, they have the impact of strategic weapons.

As American troops focus on getting the job done, Patrick said, the training being offered here is going a long way toward preparing them to face IEDs.

"Every minute we spend training these guys can effectively help ensure we're able to bring them home," he said.

Hands-on training exercise

A Stryker slams through a puddle of mud on Red Cloud Range during a hands-on training exercise Jan. 25. The Stryker is a transformational, multi-wheeled armored vehicle. Weighing around 38,000 pounds, the rapid-deployable Stryker can be airlifted to global hot spots and is faster and more maneuverable than the old M-113 Infantry carrier. The Stryker's low-slung silhouette and speedy nature help it to survive on the battlefield. The vehicle can travel more than 60 mph on hard roads, according to Army sources, and maintain 45 mph cross-country. The Stryker is engineered to protect occupants against .50-caliber fire, and with supplemental armor it can face 14.5 mm rocket-propelled grenade rounds.

Soldiers in the 4th Ranger Training Battalion respond to a simulated Black Hawk helicopter accident. The helicopter crashed into a bay, causing numerous casualties and forcing the battalion to seek outside help to evacuate and treat the wounded Soldiers. Recycled Ranger School students played the part of the casualties and they could be heard moaning and calling for help after the simulated helicopter crash. The unit's medics dressed the students up with burned and torn DCUs and fake wounds, making the scene as realistic as possible, said Staff Sgt. Richard Brown, senior medic.

RTBn trains for mass casualty accident

Fourth Ranger Training Battalion performed their annual MASCAL — or mass casualty — training exercise Tuesday at Camp Darby.

"The main idea is to test our resources and make sure we have the proper procedures and know who to call, when to call, in the case of a real emergency," said Sgt. Maj. Doni Jones, of the 4th Ranger Training Battalion.

An accident with more than two casualties is considered a mass casualty, when resources within the unit are gone and outside agencies have to be called in, Jones said.

In Tuesday's exercise, the Chattahoochee County emergency services, volunteer fire department and sheriff's department and Fort Benning's Military Police and Directorate of Public Works' Forestry program helped the 4th RTB.

"Anytime that you can spend time exercising the systems to ensure safety, it's nothing but a success," said Col. Greg Hager, Ranger Training Brigade commander. "You can only do well the things you practice."

"One of the things a Soldier wants to know ... is that if he gets hurt, he'll be taken care of. It builds confidence in that Soldier," Hager said.

The day's scenario surrounded three simulated accidents. The idea was to see if all three accidents happened on the first day of training patrols, how the unit would respond, Jones said. Each company responded to a different accident.

A Company was in charge of handling an ATV roll-over accident. The unit simulated that the head instructor at Camp Darby was driving an ATV and it rolled over, giving him a broken and bruised leg, said Capt. Jon Truitt, assistant operations officer and planner of the event.

Half an hour later, the second accident occurred.

C Company responded to a light medium tactical vehicle (LMTV) full of Ranger School students and a civilian pickup truck getting into an accident on a road just off post.

Then half an hour later, B Company responded to a Black Hawk helicopter crashing into a small building or bay.

"That overwhelms us, and we can't handle the accidents ourselves any longer," Truitt said. At that point in a real accident, outside sources would have to come in and help evacuate wounded individuals.

The things the unit has to look at when an accident happens are command and control — who takes control of the situation — accountability of personnel and equipment and triage — getting the wounded in one location and assessing and working on injuries, Truitt said.

The fire is a big part of a helicopter crash, Truitt said, which makes the help of the Chattahoochee fire department essential.

It was great to have Chattahoochee County participate, Truitt said, because they are the closest emergency service to Camp Darby — closer than anyone on Fort Benning at about 10 minutes away.

A Ranger School student awaits evacuation from the scene of a simulated helicopter crash. The medics gave him severe burns on his hands using a fake wound kit.

Sgt. 1st Class Randy Hahn treats a casualty from the second simulated accident of the day when an LMTV full of Ranger School students hit a civilian truck on a road just off post.

Sgt. 1st Class Erric Allen pulls a Ranger School student acting as a civilian from a pickup truck after a simulated accident between the truck and a military vehicle.

10th Mountain Division extends deployment

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Sgt. Sara Wood

Some 3,200 Soldiers of the 3rd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, will have their tour in Afghanistan extended for up to 120 days, Defense Department officials announced last week. Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates approved the extension based on the recommendations of commanders on the ground, whom Gates visited last week, said Bryan Whitman, a DoD spokesman.

The extension will provide military capability for NATO to build on the success achieved in promoting stability and security in Afghanistan while denying safe haven for the Taliban, he said.

"What is certain is that Secretary Gates is very interested in ensuring that the successes that we've achieved in Afghanistan are not lost, and that commanders on the ground have sufficient forces to build upon (that) successes," Whitman said.

Force levels in Afghanistan continue to be driven by need, and will be determined in consultation with the Afghan government and NATO, Whitman said. The U.S. remains committed to leading counter-terrorism operations in Afghanistan, training and equipping the Afghan national security forces, and assisting with reconstruction, according to a DoD news release.

The United States is the largest troop contributor for NATO's International Security Assistance Force. The supreme allied commander for Europe endorsed the request for forces, according to the release. Whitman stressed that the U.S. will continue to work with NATO to get the partner countries to fulfill the rest of their military commitment to Afghanistan and remove restrictions from forces there.

Gen. Richard Cody, Army vice chief of staff, said leaders recognize the sacrifices and contributions of the Soldiers and their families, and will continue to support them, according to an Army news release.

"The Army is very proud of the Soldiers of the 3rd Brigade, 10th Mountain Division, and will ensure that they and their families have all the support and resources they need during this challenging time," Cody said. "These Soldiers have accomplished a great deal and will continue to get the mission done for this nation. I am thankful for their professional and selfless commitment."

Lt. Gen. Karl Eikenberry, commander of Combined Forces Command Afghanistan, said NATO, U.S. and Afghan forces are preparing to counter an expected Taliban spring offensive.

Speaking to reporters, Eikenberry said he expects the Taliban to launch a terror offensive in the south and east of the country, but coalition forces are ready to counter them.

"I'm very confident that, although it is going to be a violent spring and ... summer, I we will be able to dominate," he said.

DoD official: 'Surge' won't leave troops ill-equipped, unprotected

Force protection for deploying troops is Pentagon's top priority

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Donna Miles

WASHINGTON — Force protection for deploying U.S. troops is a top priority, and the services are ensuring all units involved in the "surge" in Iraq have the equipment they need to protect themselves and do their jobs, a top Pentagon official told reporters Wednesday.

"Force protection of our military service members that are asked to go into a combat theater is a number one priority," Bryan Whitman, deputy assistant secretary of defense, said Wednesday.

The military services, which are responsible for training and equipping their forces, are accelerating their efforts to get equipment, not just to deploying units, but also to those preparing to deploy.

"They want to ensure that Soldiers who are preparing to deploy have ... the maximum amount of time on the equipment they are actually going to be using in theater," Whitman said, "to train with and to be able to enhance their proficiency in terms of their tactics, their techniques and their procedures."

Whitman echoed the sentiment expressed Tuesday by Navy Adm. William J. Fallon, whom President Bush nominated to take command of U.S. Central Command, during his confirmation hearing before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

If confirmed to the post, "I'll do everything in my power to ensure that our forces ... are the best-equipped, best-trained and best-prepared to conduct the operations we ask them to do," Fallon told the committee.

Whitman cited examples of progress made in ensuring deployed troops are equipped to accomplish their missions as well as protect themselves.

A "very robust industrial base" is producing body armor in the quantities needed, even in light of plans to send five additional U.S. combat brigades into Iraq, he said.

He said that the current theater requirement for 200,000 sets of body armor has been satisfied.

In addition, nearly all the Army's vehicles in Iraq — including some 14,000 humvees — now have factory-produced armor on them, he said.

Whitman said initiatives under way to ensure deployed and deploying troops are fully equipped.

One initiative involves tapping "drawdown stocks" to equip additional forces and another involves "cross leveling" equipment between units.

Fallon referred to the cross-leveling practice during his testimony.

He said that as commander of U.S. Pacific Command, he was asked to send to the Middle East "equipment that might be appropriate to Soldiers and Marines that are headed in that direction."

Despite these and other initiatives, the troop surge in Iraq isn't without challenges, Whitman said.

"But the services appear to be up to meeting the challenge of the additional equipment needs that will be needed for the plus-up," he said.

Both Army and Marine Corps leaders have expressed concerns that although they're ensuring the combat force has what it needs, they recognize that it's leaving gaps elsewhere in the force.

"Obviously, this surge will cause us to draw down other stocks," Lt. Gen. Stephen Speakes, Army deputy chief of staff for force development, told the House Armed Services Committee's Air and Land Forces Subcommittee Jan. 18.

"We'll need to replenish those," he said, urging Congress to approve the Army's budget supplemental requests by April.

"That will be hard to do, but if we can get it from you what it'll enable us to do is to put money where we need it so we can keep systems flowing to Soldiers," he said.

Speakes assured the committee that the Army won't deploy troops not equipped for their mission and the threats they will face.

"We will not send Soldiers who are improperly protected. Every Soldier will get the Army standard for force protection," he told the committee.

"They'll get it because we have it," he said. "And the reason we can do it is because, thanks to your support, we have adequate quantities of critical equipment like up-armored humvees and jamming devices on hand now so we can meet a search and requirements and not be desperate."

"And we will need your continued support," Speakes said.

Military police teach rule of law, tolerance to Iraqi police

ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Gerry J. Gilmore

WASHINGTON — A U.S. military police brigade deployed in Baghdad is teaching Iraqi police law enforcement skills and democratic principles such as tolerance, the unit's commander said Jan. 26.

"Our fundamental role here is to support the Iraqi security forces as the Iraqi government moves forward toward securing the populace," Col. Michael S. Galloucis, commander of the 89th Military Police Brigade, told Pentagon reporters. Galloucis said his unit trains local Iraqi police, not the national police, who are instructed by other coalition forces.

The Civilian Police Assistance Training Team is another U.S. military organization that trains Iraqis attending the Baghdad Police College, the Jordanian Police Training Center in Amman, Jordan and another training academy in Numaniyah, located south of Baghdad, he said.

"We work very closely with CPATT all the time, and the training that we do at the local station level builds upon their efforts," Galloucis said.

Galloucis said his people serve as instructors, coaches and mentors. They assist the Iraqi police as they develop organizations, procedures and skills necessary to serve and protect the people of Iraq under the rule of law.

Iraqi police learn concepts of freedom and democracy in addition to policing skills, Galloucis said.

Instructors discuss the importance of free speech, the value of diversity, the sanctity of human life, and the notions of tolerance, restraint and forgiveness, he said.

Iraqi police also learn "that nothing good ever comes out of hatred and murder," Galloucis said, noting Iraq's citizens acknowledge the importance of establishing a constabulary that operates according to principles of fairness and justice.

The Iraqi police are improving rapidly as they work side by side with their American counterparts across Baghdad, Galloucis said.

"They are making tremendous strides over here and are out there every day putting it all

Staff Sgt. Bronco Suzuki
Lt. Col. James Phillips, commander, 3rd Squadron, 61st Cavalry Regiment, and the Iraqi commander of the 2nd Brigade, 1st National Police Division, discuss an operation in the Salman Pak area of southeastern Baghdad, Jan. 14.

on the line to help turn the tide and stem the flow of violence that has been so prevalent here," the colonel said.

Yet, dampening the level of violence in Iraq's capital city won't occur overnight, Galloucis warned, pointing to Iraq's complex social and political environment.

"We see here gradual movement, gradual progress, and it just is going to take time," the colonel said, noting Iraq was run by a brutal dictator for 30 years.

"There are a lot of people in this country who have responsibilities for trying to stop the violence that we see," Galloucis said. "The Iraqi police are one part of that."

The colonel described the current climate in Baghdad as "dynamic and dangerous." However, senior Iraqi officials are determined to rebuild Iraq and protect its citizens, he said.

"By enhancing the capabilities of the Iraqi police, we are helping set the conditions for more Iraqi self reliance," Galloucis explained.

Iraqis are tired of violence and are eager to embrace a system of accountability and justice that treats all citizens with dignity and respect, the colonel said.

The colonel cited the "superb" courage and commitment demonstrated by the Soldiers in his unit. He also praised the contributions of U.S. military members in Iraq.

Training brigades reflag across TRADOC

Benning's Basic Combat Training Brigade, Infantry Training Brigade, 11th Infantry Regiment and 29th Infantry Regiment to reflag

BASIC COMBAT TRAINING BRIGADE

Col. Chuck Durr

As the Infantry School begins its centennial celebration in 2007, four Fort Benning training brigades will redesignate and reflag.

The four brigades to reflag at Fort Benning are: the Basic Combat Training Brigade to the 192nd Infantry Brigade;

The Infantry Training Brigade to the 198th Infantry Brigade;

The 11th Infantry Regiment to the 199th Infantry Brigade;

The 29th Infantry Regiment to the 197th Infantry Brigade.

The 11th and 29th Infantry Regiments will "dual flag" and retain their regimental colors and honors. In all four units, the assigned battalions will retain their current names and heritage.

The units are historic, inactive, separate brigades with honors and lineages reaching back to World Wars I and II, Korea, Vietnam, and Operation Desert Storm.

The redesignation of these brigades is part of a TRADOC-wide reflagging of all training brigades linking initial military training to the Army's transformation and generation of modular brigade combat teams.

In TRADOC, the brigade reflag enhances the training and retention of junior leaders and Soldiers by providing bona fide histories, traditions and veteran alumni as tools to help foster unit cohesion and esprit de corps.

The Army's new modular basic combat training restructure and renaming initiative affected all active and reserve modular units realigning and reflagging with new brigade, division and corps designations.

In that process, the Army deliberately chose to limit regiment and separate brigade designations in the active force, with only a few exceptions, including the 75th Ranger Regiment and 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

The restructure effort left most of the Infantry brigades available to TRADOC to reflag its training brigades and to retain regimental titles at the battalion level.

BCTB will be the first to reflag Thursday, becoming the 192nd Infantry Brigade. The ceremony will be held with basic combat training company graduations. Other brigade reflags are expected during the summer. Some of the reflags are scheduled to correspond with the brigade commander changes of command.

The 192nd Infantry Brigade's lineage dates to before World War II. Elements of the brigade fought in the Pacific Theater as an armored cavalry squadron as part of the 96th Infantry Division, making amphibious assaults in the Philippines and Okinawa. After the war, the brigade was inactivated and has since remained in a reserve status.

Elements of the "Follow Me" or "Sledgehammer" Brigade, the 197th Infantry Brigade, fought in the Battle of the Bulge in World War II and the entire unit reactivated as a training support unit at Fort Benning in 1962.

Later transferred to FORSCOM, the 197th Infantry Brigade deployed to serve in combat as part of the 24th Infantry Division for Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Subsequently reflagged as the 3rd Brigade, 24th Infantry Division and the 3rd Brigade, 3rd Infantry Division, the "Sledgehammer" Brigade is preparing for its third tour in Iraq.

The 198th Infantry Brigade traces its lineage to before World War II and elements fought in the Battle of the Bulge as part of the 99th Infantry Division. Deploying to Vietnam, the "Brave and Bold" Brigade earned twelve campaign streamers for service there.

After service in Europe in World War, the 199th Infantry Brigade was recreated at Fort Benning for service as a separate light Infantry brigade in Vietnam. After eleven campaigns, the "Light, Swift, and Accurate" Redcatchers of the 199th returned to Fort Benning to furl their colors in 1970.

Although the brigades will reflag, there is no anticipated impact on regimental affiliation. Fort Benning units will continue to wear the "Follow Me" patch. After the reflag, units will draw their respective heraldry items, colors and memorabilia archived in Anniston, Ala.

This is an historic year as Fort Benning celebrates the 100th anniversary of the Infantry School. It is also an exciting time as we see the reflag of the four training brigades, giving all assigned Soldiers and unit veterans a unique opportunity to relive the rich history and heritage of four of the Army's most honored combat units.

Army program sends cadets, officers to graduate school

Civilian education will broaden outlook, make better Infantry officers

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The Advanced Civil School Program is offering graduate school opportunities to junior and soon-to-be officers to enhance critical skills throughout the Army.

The two-pronged program targets pre-commissioning cadets attending the U.S. Military Academy or Reserve Officer Training Corps, and currently serving company-grade officers with less than eight years of service.

"One of our focuses is to broaden the experiences of our officers through civilian education. If I can take an infantry officer and inculcate him with a grad program that broadens his outlook on the world, I've got a better infantry officer," said Col. Mark Patterson, program director.

After drawing 270 cadet applications last academic year, 371 cadets have applied so far this year.

The program allows USMA and ROTC cadets in their senior years to apply, though they won't attend grad school until after selection for captain, or between their sixth and 11th years of service after commissioning. When they attend graduate school depends on where the officers are with respect to their assignment cycles.

While the Army historically sends about 412 active-duty officers a year to school, most of these are to support functional areas and to provide instructors to West Point. Through the Advanced Civil School Program, the Army is now sending an additional 200 officers who have six years of Army experience to graduate school. Most of the 200 allocations, Patterson said, are delegated down to brigade commanders who can identify the best candidates.

"Many master's degree programs value the experiences that company-grade officers have to offer to the classroom," Patterson said.

"Take a civilian executive officer and mix an Army officer in and you're cross-pollinating the knowledge that each brings to the academic environment," he said.

"We're developing these officers to broaden their experience, to get them to think a little bit differently, see how the rest of the world thinks and then put them back into the military," he said.

In addition to developing its officers, the Army hopes the program will help retain them.

While retention of Army officers is well above the historical average, Patterson said, it's not enough to keep up with transformation and modernization.

"In order to grow the Army on the accelerated growth that we're seeing in core structure and the acceleration in the brigade combat teams, we need to retain more of our best and brightest," he said.

All applicants must agree to an increased active-duty obligation before selection. Those selected may attend a U.S. accredited graduate school of their choice in key disciplines that support the officer skill set, such as cultural awareness, regional knowledge, foreign languages, governance, diplomacy and social sciences. Discipline lists will be updated annually to ensure the Army keeps pace with the needs of the force and emerging fields of study.

Interested officers should speak to their commanders and contact their assignment officers at Human Resources Command. For more information, visit <https://www.hrc.army.mil/site/protect/Active/opfamacs/ACS14.htm>.

Australian Open

Roger Federer continued his reign as tennis king Jan. 28, winning his third Australian Open and his 10th career Grand Slam title. Federer, 25, became the first player in 27 years to not drop a set during the Open (Bjorn Borg was the last). In the past three-plus years, Federer's record has climbed to 264 wins and 15 losses.

The women's final was an upset: not a lot of fans saw coming. Serena Williams, who started the Open ranked 81, beat number one seeded Maria Sharapova in straight sets Jan. 27. Her win sent her up to No. 14 in the rankings.

Farnwell, Barbara

2006 Kentucky Derby winner Barbara was enthused Jan. 29 after he fractured his right hind leg during the Preakness Stakes May 20.

His owners made the decision, along with a surgeon, after complications from the injury would have made it difficult for Barbara to live without pain. The complications included laminitis in the left rear hoof and a recent abscess in the right rear hoof.

Tiger wins Buick Invitational

Tiger Woods won the Buick Invitational Jan. 28. That makes it seven consecutive PGA Tour events and 55 total.

Woods won by two shots over Charles Howell III. The Masters should be highly interesting come early April.

Super Bowl XLII

It's finally here — Super Bowl Sunday. Super Bowl XLII will pit the Chicago Bears against the Indianapolis Colts at 6:30 p.m. on CBS.

Coverage begins earlier in the day. Check local listings.

The game is being played at Dolphin Stadium in Miami, Fla.

I'm going with the Colts. Since it's an all-animal Super Bowl, here's hoping for some really funny animal commercials.

Rocket mulls, Schilling decides

Roger Clemens, a seven-time Cy Young award winner, hasn't made the decision of whether he'll return to baseball this season.

Clemens will either retire, return to the Houston Astros who he played with last season or sign with the New York Yankees or Boston Red Sox.

His manager said even if he does return, it wouldn't be until May or June. Come on Rocket, we baseball fans are waiting in anticipation.

Another big name, Red Sox pitcher Curt Schilling, said he will return this season and will also play in 2008.

He said he's open to other teams in 2008, according to ESPN.com, but said he wouldn't put a Johnny Damon and join the Yankees.

Pvt. Brandon Hennings is a cook who knows he'll be a warrior when he deploys with the 11th Engineer Battalion. In the war on terrorism, everybody is a warrior. Playing paintball on the weekends gives Hennings a chance to practice his combat skills.

"It gives me an opportunity to use a weapon, which is something I don't get to do often," he said. "It doesn't matter if you're a cook or a supply guy or whatever, you're always a Soldier first. You need to know how to handle a weapon. This is good practice."

Hennings was one of nearly 40 players who competed last weekend in a paintball tournament of sorts at the Woodland Paintball Park off Dixie Road. It's become a regular Sunday afternoon activity, a pick-up game, open to anyone and everyone. Soldiers play alongside civilians. Families play together.

The battle for the coveted Commander's Cup continues. The 1st Battalion, 11th Infantry Regiment, made easy work of the CONUS Replacement Center Mustangs Tuesday night, advancing their perfect record to 5-0.

"We've got great chemistry," said Charles Waldon, player and coach of the team. "Everyone has their own style of game that they bring to the table."

Brett Eason led the 1st Bn., 11th Inf. Regt., with 21 points, while Brandon Barr grabbed 15 points for the Mustangs.

"Some of the players are mobilized Reservists and some are active duty, which makes it hard to keep a defined team, but we'll get it together," said Richard Saunders, a CRC coach.

The 11th Engineer Battalion is in first place in the Audie Murphy League, and the 3rd Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, holds first in the Santiago League on Sand Hill. In other Audie Murphy League play, the 11th Engineer Battalion defeated the 75th Ranger Regiment, 50-40.

In the Santiago League, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment, forfeited because of not having enough players, giving the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) an automatic two points, which will be added to their point total for the cup.

The 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, edged out a close one with the 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, 58-56, and the 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, knocked off the team from B Company, 2nd Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, 69-61.

Knowledge helps hunters fight pig problem

ARMY MARKSMANSHIP UNIT
Master Sgt. Rod Pinkston

Managing wildlife species is becoming increasingly important to improve genetics and protect habitat. We must understand population density and statistics regarding birth, disease and death to develop an effective management plan.

Wild hog populations are quickly expanding across the United States.

An estimated 1.5 to 2 million feral hogs caused an estimated $51.7 million damage statewide during 2005, according to the Texas Cooperative Extension. The Texas Department of Agriculture has awarded $500,000 in grants to Texas A&M and Texas Tech universities to research the state's feral hog problem.

Since most states already allow year-round hunting with no bag limit, why is the TDA dealing with this problem? Because Texas farmers are reporting millions of dollars in crop damage to their insurance companies and farm bureaus.

It is my goal to educate hunters about our quarry and increase hunting success so hunters can perform a larger role in battling the population explosion.

Fort Benning Study

Feral hog research was conducted between spring 2004 and fall 2005 at Fort Benning by Auburn University.

Information was collected and compared from two separate study areas located five miles apart. The first was the control area and was not involved in the removal procedures of the experiment.

It was compared to area number two, the treatment area. Researchers tagged 12 sows were with global positioning systems and observed with radio-telemetry.

Between May and July 2004, 90 feral hogs randomly selected were caught and ear tagged so researchers could monitor population density and survival with digital game cameras.

In the treatment area, 108 hogs were killed from August 2004 through May 2005. Digital cameras captured more than 8,200 photographs during the 10 month period. Hunting occurred year round in both study areas and all harvests were reported with or without ear tags.

Female pigs and breeding

A female hog that hasn't produced its first litter of piglets is called a gilt. Gilts become sexually mature at six to eight months and generally breed before one year.

The adult sows breed year-round in the southeastern United States. They have an estrous cycle of 21 days and are generally receptive for three days. Sows often produce two litters per year, but can breed up to three times in a 14 month period. Their gestation period is 114 days, or three months, three weeks and three days.

Piglets are born in a nest where they remain for four to six weeks. Nests are generally shallow depressions lined with grass, sticks and leaves. Gilts typically have a litter of about five piglets, and sows' litters are closer to seven.

Litter size seems to increase with age and peaks when sows are 2 to 3. Litter size also varies seasonally depending on the food source available. High protein intake increases the number of offspring.

Piglets are nursed about three months before being weaned. Weaned pigs are called shoats and they travel with their mother in small sow groups called sounders. On average only one-third of a litter will survive to maturity, with most killed by predators or disease.

The GPS-collared sows' average home range was 1.17 square miles. The average group size from the game cameras was 3.11 shoats per sounder and 1.19 gilts/sows per sounder.

Male pigs' breeding habits

Boars can breed with multiple sows during the mating season.

This pig was photographed at Fort Benning using a digital-game camera during a study by Auburn University. Feral pigs cause millions of dollars of damage yearly in Georgia.

Courtesy photos

Adult boars typically travel alone and overlap several sounder home ranges to locate sows in estrous. Boars will aggressively fight for control of these sounder groups.

Dominant boars usually have large tusks which are continuously sharpened by rubbing the lower against the upper. They will also develop a thick layer of tissue around their front shoulder region commonly called a shield, which protects their vitals from the tusks of challenging dominant boars.

The shield begins to develop as males reach sexual maturity at 9 or 10 months, then continues to increase until boars are 3.

Boars generally do not breed until they reach the full size necessary to compete for females. These large males return to their solitary lives after each breeding season. Lone boars were responsible for almost 42 percent of the digital photographs in the study area. They had a survival rate 0.45 times less than sows — almost half.

Population Control

Hunters by nature target larger hogs when given a choice, selecting older boars with exceptional tusks or adult sows with large bodies. A bigger animal translates to a better trophy and more meat in the freezer. The game management part of a hunter's brain wants to harvest the mature animal and let the yearling grow to adulthood.

This approach works well for most game species to properly manage populations. So why doesn't it work for wild hogs?

No other large animal species is capable of producing multiple large litters every year starting at such an early age as hogs. Most populations of feral hogs are 18 months old and younger. They are old enough to reproduce but not necessarily large enough to be a target for the freezer.

Even if we shoot every boar we encounter it won't reduce the population growth. Few boars are needed to service every sow in the woods. Auburn University's study discovered population growth rates could be influenced most by yearling survival. The most effective way to reduce the population growth rate is to target yearlings, especially gilts.

And young hogs taste best on the grill anyway.

The hunting community can help to effectively manage pig populations or sit back and let state and federal agencies spend tax dollars to reduce wild hog

Sows and piglets travel together in small groups until the piglets are old enough to fend for themselves. Sows can have multiple litters of piglets each year.

XLI: Regardless of the outcome, this Super Bowl is one for the history books

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The big game has arrived. The Colts will take on the Bears Sunday, and I'm not ashamed to say I was dead wrong. Well, I am sort of ashamed.

I had the San Diego Chargers picked by far over any team. You hear me say it now; they blew their best chance for immortality just like the Seahawks did last year. The defensive schemes around the league will be all over L.T.'s slick moves next year just as they were with Shaun Alexander this season. I am still receiving phone calls and "I told you so's." Please Stop Calling Me.

Now that I've vented my frustration, I'll give credit where it's due. The somewhat surprising match between the Indianapolis Colts and the Chicago Bears is rather fitting. They were the number one seed holders of their respective conferences for a nice chunk of the season. The Colts went undefeated all the way through week 10, while the Bears suffered only one defeat in the same time frame. But they both had meltdowns late, which raised doubts among fans.

The Bears' defense, lead by perennial Pro Bowler Brian Urlacher and the special teams unit powered by rookie sensation Devin Hester, saved the last few games of the season. The offense was horrid, and that's being generous, although Thomas Jones did show flashes of brilliance, which propelled the running game and bailed out the team's air strike.

As for the Colts, they once again fell short of reaching the possible, yet improbable, Undefeated Season for the second straight year, giving the '72 Dolphin alums another year to throw their annual, slightly ridiculous "has-been" kegger. The Colts lost four of their next six games following week 10, which suggested an overall team collapse reminiscent of the unmet expectations associated with last year's campaign.

The run defense, which was supposed to be held together by well known "grocery bagger" (my term for sack specialist), Dwight Freeney, finished the season ranked 12th, as opposed to the top five ranking they had last regular season.

Nothing has received more press than the quarterback spot, especially in the case of the Bears. No player in recent history has had to stomach the amount of pressure, scrutiny and slander the Bears' Rex Grossman has. He is easily the organized sports world's "You can't win for losing" poster boy. He was ranked 12th in passing yards, 7th in passing touchdowns and a lowly 24th in passer rating. Any team loss, bad game miscue or any other blunder was placed squarely on his shoulders. One well-known publication resurrected the old Saturday Night Live parody, "Da Bears," calling Grossman "Da Worst" quarterback to possibly pilot a team in the big game. Fair? No. Understandable? Indeed.

"It bothered me at times, but really it's just part of it," Grossman said. "I don't care who you are, it's a position that just comes with (criticism). The ball is in your hand every single play ... you're the guy people look at."

On the other hand, Peyton Manning is the Colts' savior. Most feel he can do no wrong, literally and figuratively. During the regular season, he led the league in passer rating and passing touchdowns.

He also led the AFC in passing yards (second in the entire league) and posted a career low nine thrown picks. This guy is hands down the most dominant quarterback since Joe Montana. More importantly, Manning was able to heave the gorilla that has been on his back by defeating Tom Brady and the Patriots.

"I don't get into monkeys and vindication," Manning said after the victory. "I don't play that card. I know how hard I worked this season, I know how hard I worked this week."

Last but not least, the biggest headline of all is the face-off between the Bears' Lovie Smith and the Colts' Tony Dungy, two — count 'em, two — African-Americans. No African-American head coach has even made it to the Super Bowl before.

"Of course our players knew about it and wanted to help us make history," Smith said. "I feel blessed to be in that position."

Urban talk radio shows have coined the game the "Soul Bowl."

"It means a lot," Dungy said. "I'm very proud to be representing African-Americans. I'm very proud of Lovie."

Personally, I am filled with pride. In 1989, I was a 12-year-old kid in awe of the fact that Art Shell broke the color barrier back by being named the Los Angeles Raiders' head coach, the first black head coaching position held in the modern sports era. One of the two coaches will make history again by being the first African-American to hoist the Lombardi Trophy Sunday. This is a huge deal, and it takes place during February, Black History Month.

Bottom line: This game should shape up to be a decent match up. I think this will be a cakewalk for the Colts. There is one problem that may give the Bears a fighting chance. Which Colt defense will show up Sunday? If they play with their league-leading containment prowess they demonstrated during the post season, the Bears are toast, plain and simple.

On the other hand, the Bears have had the number one defense in the league for a long time now. They played well enough to hold home field throughout the postseason. The defense can be unstoppable, and in my opinion, Rex Grossman has done very little to deserve the scrutiny that he has endured.

No need to hold your breath though. This one should go to the Colts, although I obviously don't know it all.

Just most everything.

The Colts come out on top this year

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

Unless you're a Chicago Bears or Indianapolis Colts fan, your team's season is over, as in, "Stick a fork in it, it's done." Some of us had to wait a little longer, say like an AFC or NFC championship game, so the salt in the wound would sting that much more for New England Patriots and New Orleans Saints fans. It's now time to get over it and prepare for the game of the year — Super Bowl XLI.

I admit, I was a bit upset when the Colts beat the Patriots for the AFC championship. I've moved on and am happy to report I'm pulling for the Colts. Not just because they're in the AFC, but because it's time for Colts' quarterback Peyton Manning to win a Super Bowl. Manning is a classy, high-caliber quarterback who has also shown his acting chops in several commercials that are actually funny. It's Manning's time.

Bears' quarterback Rex Grossman, on the other hand, has only played in three playoff games. He doesn't have the experience Manning does. Watching him during the NFC championship game, I felt sorry for him when he tried to call back-to-back timeouts. It's apparent he's nervous and carrying a lot on his shoulders. If Grossman can relax and rely on his offensive line, he'll do OK.

I'm not a stats person, but Manning's and Grossman's numbers don't lie. Manning is 65 percent for completions for 4,397 yards and 31 touchdowns. Grossman has a 54.6 percent completion average for 3,193 yards and 23 touchdowns.

A comparison of the top rushers and receivers favors the Colts. The Colts' leading receiver Marvin Harrison has 95 receptions for 1,366 yards and 12 touchdowns.

Compare that to the Bears' Muhsin Muhammad, who had 60 receptions for 863 yards and five touchdowns.

Indy's leading rusher, Joseph Addai, ran for 1,081 yards, averaging 4.8 yards per carry and had seven touchdowns. The Bears' Thomas Jones had 1,210 yards, averaging 4.1 yards and had six touchdowns.

Stats are stats, though, and after watching the Colts destroy the Patriots' defense in the AFC game, I think they'll be able to do the same to the Bears. The no-huddle offense will wear out any defense. If Brian Urlacher can withstand it along with the rest of the defense, the Bears might have a chance, but it should be interesting to watch.

Though the Bears haven't been to a Super Bowl in 21 years, it's Manning and the Colts' time. I'm tired of Manning being compared to the great Dan Marino, as I'm sure he is. Manning is too good not to own a Super Bowl ring. And it will be just one more thing for little brother Eli to envy.

Kickoff is at 6:25 p.m. Chicago will get some points on the board, but ultimately, it's the Colts' year.

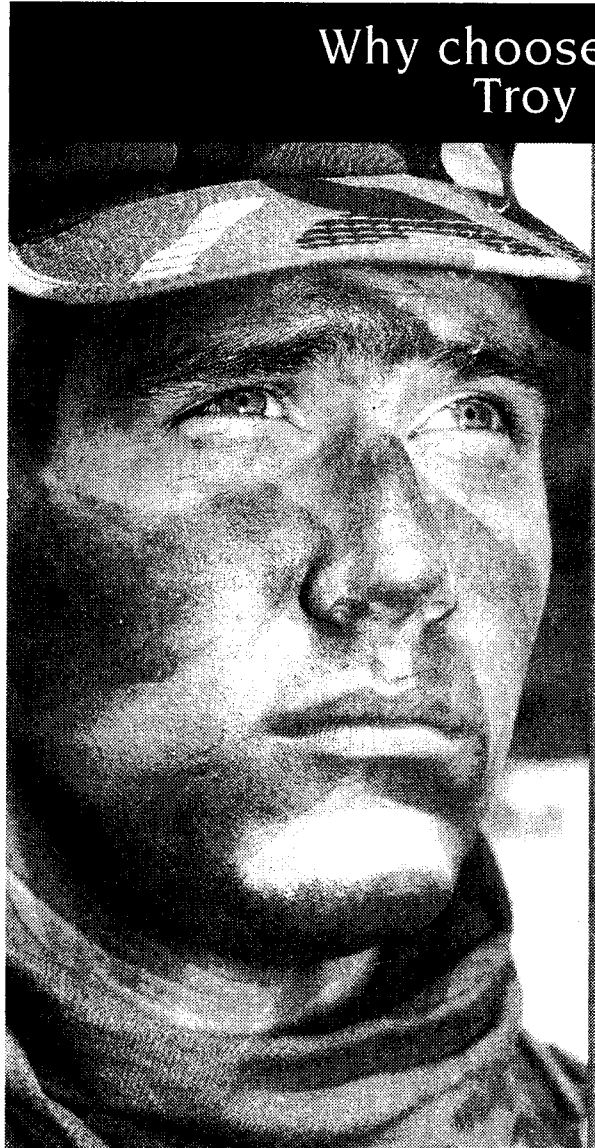

THEY HAVE SWORN NEVER TO LEAVE A MAN BEHIND.

WE'VE DONE THE SAME.

Fitness programs can bolster your resolve

Variety key to success, fitness director says

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Lori Smith has heard all the reasons and excuses as to why resolutions get broken.

Smith, the fitness director for the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation, has dedicated herself to changing the minds of those who want to change their bodies.

"The most popular time of the year that people want to work out is obviously in the beginning of January, because of resolutions, and just before spring and summer so that they can look good in a bathing suit," Smith said. "The bad thing about this is that it starts to decline around February and March."

Smith, with a bachelor's degree in science and recreation, has helped develop and coordinate various fitness classes taught by contracted instructors on Fort Benning.

"We have tried to build programs and classes to fit everyone whether you're a Soldier, civilian, spouse or a senior citizen," she said. "There is something for everyone at one of our fitness centers."

The classes range from Cardio Pump, Pilates, Aqua Aerobics, Step-n-Go and even a combo class that combines a range of different activities. The classes change from month to month.

"One of the biggest killers in a workout is getting used to the same workout," Smith said. "Being that these classes switch up from time to time, it gives you more of a challenge and promotes prolonged interest."

There are currently four instructors for the various classes. Most are taught by military spouses, Smith said. Most of the participants are women.

"Men seem to care more about pumping up and getting muscles, so they take the cardio side for granted," Smith said.

Which doesn't mean the classes aren't challenging.

"No matter what the class is, it will give anyone, including men, a run for their money," Smith said. "One of the instructors got her husband to try the abs portion of the Pilates class and he couldn't do it."

Cardio Pump is one of the most popular evening classes, Smith said. It combines cardio, weights, and high-impact aerobics. It is designed to sculpt a better physique.

"You tend to burn twice as many calories with a workout like this because of the combination of weights and cardio," said Teesa Geyer, the Step-n-Go, Pilates and Cardio Pump instructor.

The yoga and Pilates classes are designed for a low-impact workout.

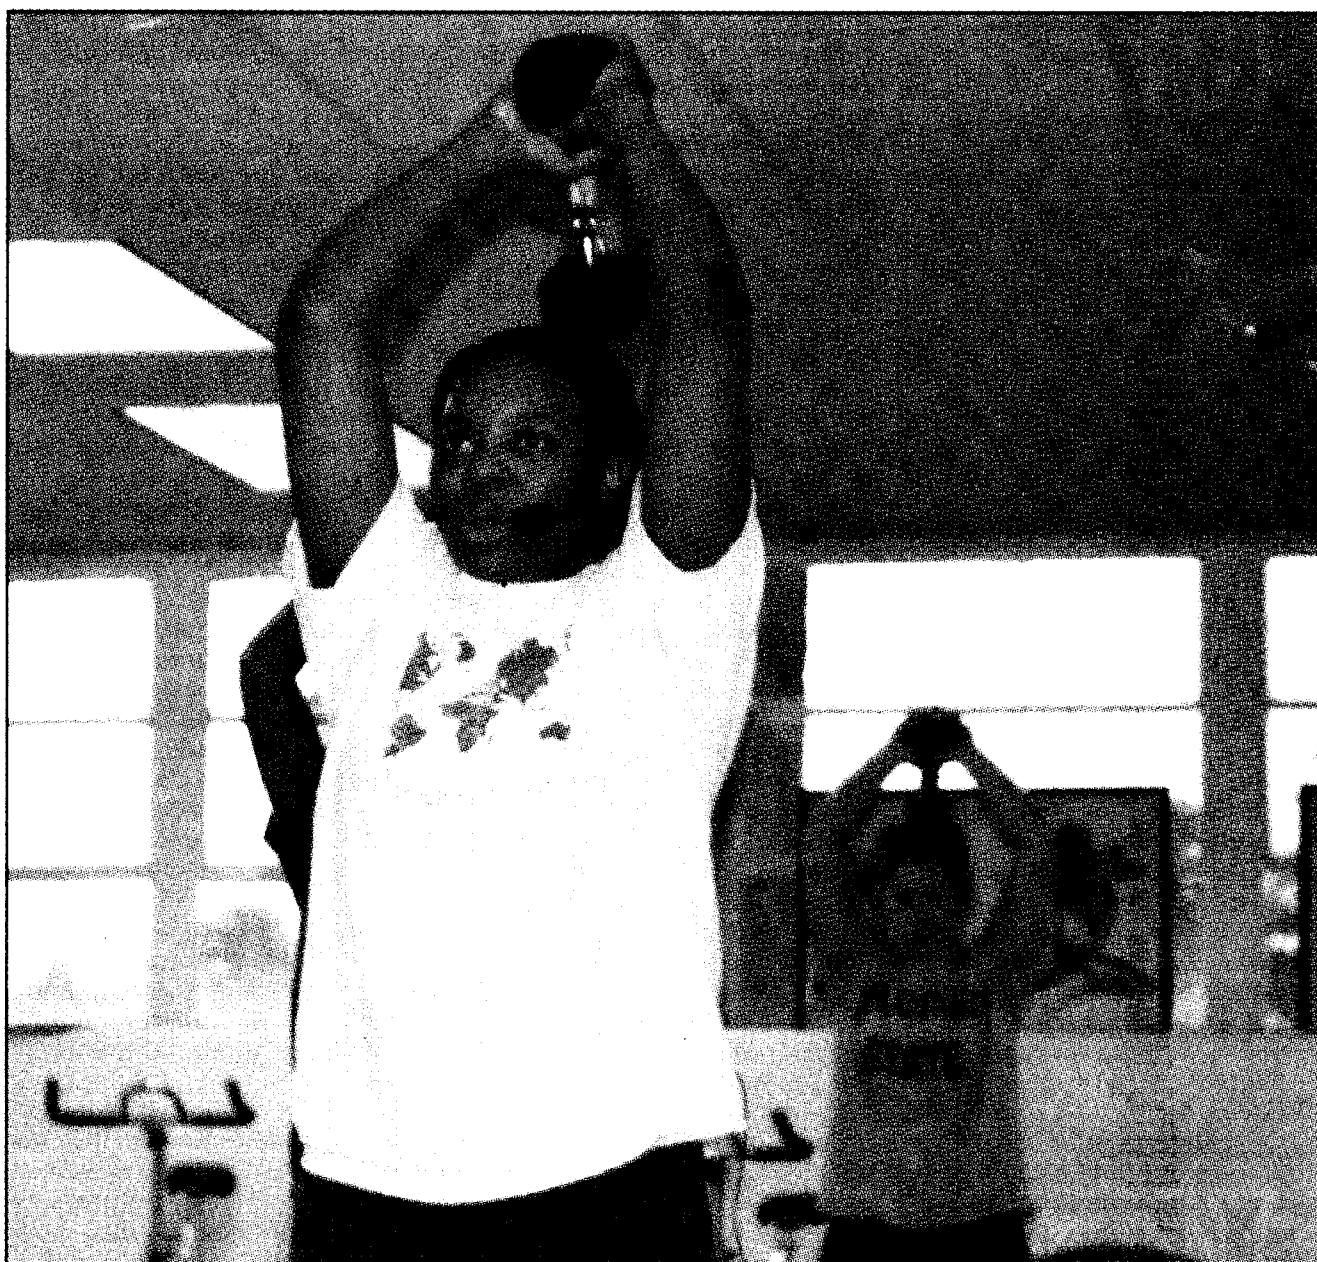

Another extremely popular class is the Aqua Aerobics class, Smith said. It has gained popularity because of its unique combination of aerobic techniques and water resistance.

The class, which is good for people with joint problems and physical limitations, has produced an inspirational success story.

"One elderly woman lost a significant amount of weight by combining some cardio mixed with the Aqua Aerobics class," Smith said. "If she can get up and work out for an hour or so, anyone can."

Another key to sticking to a workout plan is to have a workout partner, Smith said.

"Having a buddy to work out with keeps you motivated," she said. "If someone is expecting you to be there, it will push you and keep you focused."

Mitchell Thomas IV
Teesa Geyer, a fitness instructor, works up a sweat during her Cardio Pump class, one of several fitness classes offered at Briant Wells Fitness Center. Geyer is one of four instructors who teach yoga, Pilates, high-impact, low-impact and aquatics classes.

One of the main reasons people stray from a fitness routine is a lack of time.

"This is the biggest reason why people don't get into exercise programs on a regular basis," Smith said. "I understand this because my time is limited as well, but I know I have to make time to do my workouts in the mornings."

The classes are scheduled Monday through Friday at Briant Wells Fitness Center and are available at specified times for all military and DoD civilians.

The fees for these classes are $25 a month for unlimited sessions or $3 per class.

Those interested can pick up a class schedule at the DMWR office at Doughboy Stadium.

"We are always welcoming new people and are looking forward helping those who want to achieve their goals," Geyer said.

For more information, call Smith at 706-545-4300.

The players use a couple of acres of the Woodland Paintball Park for their Sunday games, but there is plenty of room to expand, said Staff Sgt. Dennis Santos. The playing field is constructed with obstacles, blinds and targets.

Paintball: Is fun, wholesome activity for all ages

with children as young as 5. Retired Soldiers team with or plot against teens from off post who've never ventured farther onto Fort Benning than the wooded paintball field.

What they all have in common is a love of the game, something they call woods ball, which involves two teams and a battle that ends with one man standing. With its emphasis on skill, strategy and combat tactics, it's very different than speed ball, a faster, more furious run-and-duck version of paintball.

"Speed ball is not nearly as much fun as this, and it takes a lot more out of you. Anybody can play woods ball. It doesn't matter how old you are," said Staff Sgt. Steve Tucker, 43, who started playing paintball in the 80s when the craze first swept the country. Back then, he played with a pump pistol. Now he uses a high-speed semi-automatic "marker."

"I don't call it a weapon, but it will leave a bruise," he said of the paintball gun and ammo, which looks like neon-colored gumballs.

The games are organized by Chaplain (Maj.) Steve Garvey and Staff Sgt. Dennis Santos. Garvey said players govern themselves with the understanding that safety and fair play are paramount.

"The main thing is to have fun. That's what we're here for," Garvey said.

Participants bring their own equipment, including markers, paintballs and facemasks. Padding and ghillie suits are optional, but most players protect themselves, at the very least, with layers of clothing and most wear camouflage.

Anyone interested can drop in to play Garvey said, or they can call him for more information at 706-545-9014. Games start about 1:30 p.m. Sunday afternoons.

Children Learn More from Do's than Don'ts

Young children will be better behaved when they know clearly what you expect of them. Instead of just saying, "Don't do that," show and tell your child what you do want him or her to do.

1. Teach your child the steps of the desired behavior.

It is unreasonable to expect your child to do something if you haven't taught it to him or her.

2. Have your child describe the behavior back to you.

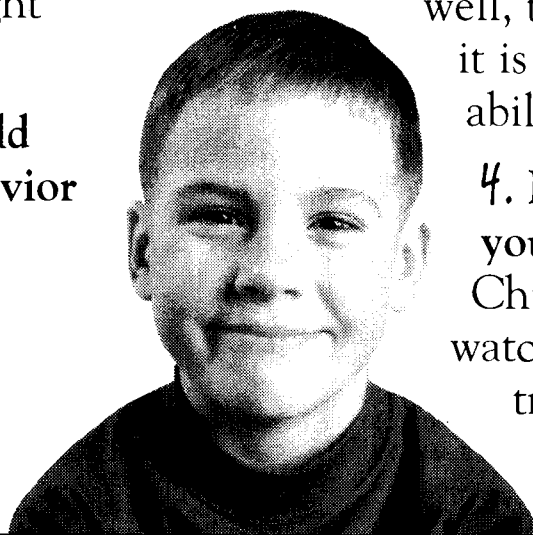

This will tell you whether or not your child understands your expectations.

3. Ask your child to demonstrate the behavior to you.

If your child can demonstrate the behavior reasonably well, then you know that it is within the child's abilities.

4. Model the behavior yourself.

Children are always watching you and trying to imitate your behavior.

Game on

When the Fort Benning Women's basketball game at Audie Murphy Fitness Center was canceled Saturday because the opposition failed to show, members of the Church of the Living God Lord Jesus took to the court for shooting drills and a few pick-up games.

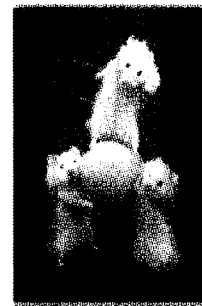

Later that day, the post men's basketball team, the Bandits, was defeated by the Tigers from Tyndall Air Force Base, Fla.

The men's and women's teams will play at Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., this weekend.

Fort Benning Fitness Centers are open to military ID card holders and DoD civilians 16 and older. When games are not scheduled, the courts are free for play.

Children and youth registered with the post's Child and Youth Services can use the gymnasium at the Youth Activities Center on Baltzell Avenue until 8 p.m. weekdays and noon until 8 p.m. Saturdays.

Air Force Thunderbirds to kick off Super Bowl XLI

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Air Force's elite demonstration squadron, the "Thunderbirds," will help kick off Super Bowl XLI in Miami with a flyover of Dolphin Stadium on Sunday.

The team's six red, white and blue F-16 fighter jets will roar over in their signature six-ship Delta formation at the conclusion of the national anthem. The aircraft will fly over at about 500 feet and 450 miles per hour.

"We are honored to participate in the Super Bowl, especially this year, as the United States Air Force commemorates our 60th anniversary," said Lt. Col. Kevin Robbins, Thunderbird commander.

The flyover is just one of many events the Thunderbirds will participate in during 2007 to commemorate the Air Force's six decades of air and space power.

The U.S. Air Force Air Demonstration Squadron is an Air Combat Command unit composed of eight pilots (including six demonstration pilots), four support officers, four civilians and about 120 enlisted airmen performing in more than 25 career specialties.

"Our job is to represent the thousands of airmen who serve their country on a daily basis, including the more than 25,000 fighting on the front lines in the global war on terror," Robbins said.

The Super Bowl is the nation's highest-rated TV program annually. According to the National Football League, more than 141 million viewers in the United States tuned in to the last Super Bowl game. Super Bowl XLI will be broadcast to a potential worldwide audience of 1 billion in more than 230 countries and territories.

Ginn Racing optimistic after Las Vegas test session

U.S. ARMY RACING

LAS VEGAS — Ginn Racing concluded a two-day test session at Las Vegas Motor Speedway Tuesday afternoon, as the team continues to ready for the fast approaching 2007 season.

The team tested four cars at the session (No. 01 with Mark Martin, No. 13 with Joe Nemechek, No. 14 with Sterling Marlin and No. 39 with Regan Smith), and were pleased with the organization's results.

"We had a really good session and I'm pleased with what we were able to accomplish in the couple of days that we were here," said Ginn racing newcomer Mark Martin.

"I've been very impressed with the way the teams work together at Ginn Racing and it really feels like we are all on the same page with what we have going on here.

"The cars were all about 10th to 15th place cars and we'll take that," continued Martin.

"We'll build on it and continue to work at the shop to be even better when we come back.

"It's definitely a great starting point for where we want to be, and with what I've seen so far there is no reason to think that we won't be competitive when we start the season," Martin said.

The NEXTEL Cup Series will visit Las Vegas Motor Speedway March 4 for the second race of the 2007 season. The season opener is the March 11 Daytona 500.

"Both the Daytona and the Las Vegas test sessions have been great for the entire Ginn Racing team," offered Nemechek.

"It's hard to believe the 2007 season is about to start up again, but we're looking forward to it and think it's going to be an exciting year for our growing organization," Nemechek said.

In addition to Nemechek's, Marlin's, and Martin's entries in Las Vegas Motor Speedway's Nextel Cup event, Smith will compete in the March 10 Busch series race.

"I'm very excited about what we have going on as we move into the season," said Marlin.

"All the teams at Ginn continue to work on these cars and we've made a lot of improvement in just a couple of days. As I said, it's been a great working atmosphere in the off season and I can't wait to get the year started," he said.

The teams will return to action next week at Daytona International Speedway, as the 2007 season gets underway at Speedweeks.

Teams needed for volleyball, soccer

Soccer cancelled last year due to lack of interest

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

With the new year under way, competition for the Commander's Cup is in full swing. While basketball is the present highlight among intramural sports, volleyball and soccer are next on deck.

Ken Wetherill, director of Sports, Fitness and Aquatics, said he looks forward to an exciting year and hopes the word will spread to the masses.

"We are looking for as much participation as possible this year," he said.

While intramural events like softball and basketball tend to be popular among Soldiers, soccer and volleyball have not fared as well.

"They have both been around for a long time but have kind of been in hibernation in the past few years," Wetherill said. "We're just trying to get them resurrected."

The soccer league was cancelled last year due to lack of interest.

The soccer teams' formats will be 11 or six players per side, depending on the number of players available. Volleyball will follow standard U.S.A. Volleyball team formatting.

Last year, volleyball was a bit more successful with the Soldiers, Wetherill said. The 4th Ranger Training Battalion took the spoils.

A lot of the players get really excited about the bragging rights associated with nabbing the Commander's Cup, Wetherill said. "They take it seriously."

With the 3rd Brigade Combat Team deploying in March, solid participation may be a challenge.

"We are hoping that deployment doesn't affect the number too much," said Willie Spann, sports coordinator.

A couple of teams have already committed to participation in both sports, he said.

Intramural events generally tend to be spectator-friendly, Wetherill said. There is no charge to attend matches and tournaments.

There will be a coaches meeting at 12:30 p.m. March 8 in the Doughboy Stadium Office for those interested in participating in volleyball and soccer. That's when Wetherill will collect rosters and letters of intent.

There are no fees for those interested in playing. Both sports will start with a preseason tournament beginning March 12, and March 26 will mark the start league play. The events are only open to active duty, Reserve or National Guard Soldiers.

For more information, call Wetherill at 706-545-4300 or Spann at 706-545-4592.

Schumacher ready to chase title

U.S. ARMY RACING

While it's only pre-season testing, U.S. Army Top Fuel driver, Tony "The Sarge" Schumacher, clearly considers this weekend's National Time Trials at Firebird International Raceway in Phoenix, the first step towards a possible fourth straight NHRA POWERade world championship.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's the start of the season," said the Chicago native. "While the runs we make at Firebird don't officially count, they're still critical in helping set the tone for the opening race at Pomona (Calif.) two weeks later."

Schumacher is coming off a history-making 2006 season. He rebounded from a 336-point deficit at the last race of the year to claim his third straight world title and the fourth of his career.

"You know, even a few months later, I still sit and marvel at what the U.S. Army team accomplished last year," he said. "But, it's time to start fresh again. We're going to have to get back to business pretty quickly. Everyone, and I mean everyone, will be trying to keep us away from another championship. We are a marked team if there ever was one."

Should Schumacher manage to record a fourth straight crown, he will become the first Top Fuel pilot in NHRA history to turn that trick.

"That would be yet another milestone to shoot for," he said. "Listen, we're all in this to win championships, plain and simple. When we don't win them, it's disappointing. We also feel like we let our Soldiers down. Ultimately, we race for all of the brave men and women who are fighting for our freedom every day."

"I feel fortunate that we did not have any team changes to speak of," he said. "Of course, having the best tuner in the business remaining in your camp is also real nice. Consistency is so important if you want to have ongoing success in this sport."

Schumacher and his U.S. Army team will have at least one adjustment to make in '07 due to a new NHRA POWERade points system being implemented.

"We'll see how it all shakes out," he said. "Obviously, the first goal is to make sure we're in the top eight after 17 races and then we can really get after it. There should definitely be some drama produced in the latter stages of the season."

Converted infielder named Army Female Athlete of Year

Pitched every inning, every game of Armed Forces Championship

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Tim Hips

Sgt. Shannon Eichenseer, a two-time All-Armed Forces softball player, was selected as the Army's 2006 Female Athlete of the Year by the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command.

"I was kind of speechless when I heard, but this is really a great honor for the entire team, not just me," said Eichenseer, 22, the NCOIC of the Battle Command Training Program's World Class Opposing Forces at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

Eichenseer, who earned 2005 All-Armed Forces honors as a second baseman, was named to the 2006 All-Armed Forces Team as a pitcher, a position she had never played.

"We had a strong group of recruits coming in (to All-Army Trial Camp), but our pitcher from previous years couldn't come back, so I thought that could be a place that I could fill in," said Eichenseer, who filled the void in all-star fashion.

Eichenseer pitched every inning of all nine games.

The All-Army women's squad went 8-1 against sister services to win the 2006 Armed Forces Women's Softball Championship Aug. 21-24 at Hill Air Force Base, Utah.

Eichenseer had an earned run average of 8.53 — compared to opposing pitchers' ERA of 20.82 — and limited opponents to a .373 batting average.

"I taught her how to throw a knuckleball and she throws it better than I do," said 2005 Army Coach of the Year Rob Bailey, of Fort Leonard Wood, Mo.

Eichenseer's trusty glove made hitting up the middle a struggle for opposing batters.

"When it came back at me, yeah, but it was more of self-defense, though," Eichenseer said of making plays off the mound.

"Slow-pitch softball is not really dominated by the pitcher, a lot of it comes from the defense. It was an honor to pitch for them.

"The defense that I had behind me took the pressure off," she said.

"All I had to do was put the ball over the plate and they handled the rest," Eichenseer said.

Bailey, however, wasn't so quick to discount Eichenseer's glove.

"She's one of the best fielding pitchers I've Eichenseer also batted .485 with nine RBIs to help the All-Army team win the Armed Forces Championship.

She then pitched the All-Armed Forces team to the Western Regional crown of the ASA Women's Open Hooters Championship Series in Lancaster, Calif., where Eichenseer again earned All-Tournament honors.

The All-Armed Forces team eventually finished as the national runner-up to Long Haul/Enough Said of Tallahassee, Fla., at the Hooters National Championship finals in Oklahoma City.

Along the way, Eichenseer maintained a 3.8 grade-point average while completing 13 correspondence classes online with American Military University, leaving her 30 hours shy of a bachelor's degree in criminal justice.

A graduate of Cattaraugus (N.Y.) Little Valley High School, Eichenseer volunteered to help teach English to children at an orphanage in Wonju, Korea, while she was stationed at Camp Long.

Eichenseer also assisted Soldiers at Fort Leavenworth in training for the Army Physical Fitness Test.

Runner named Army's top male athlete

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Tim Hips

Staff Sgt. Barry Brill, an endurance runner and bicyclist, has been selected as the Army's 2006 Male Athlete of the Year by the Family and Morale, Welfare and Recreation Command.

Brill, 35, averaged 70 to 80 miles per week on training runs last year while serving as a military policeman in Ansbach, Germany. As a member of the U.S. Army-Europe team, he finished 120th among 16,676 competitors, with a time of 59 minutes, 44 seconds in the 22nd running of the Army Ten-Miler Oct. 8.

Two weeks later, Brill was 68th among 20,934 finishers in the 31st running of the Marine Corps Marathon, with a time of 2 hours, 52 minutes, 54 seconds — the fastest of his 10 marathons.

"The Marine Corps Marathon is so famous because Al Gore and Oprah Winfrey ran it, but the spectators realize that it originally was designed for the Armed Forces competition, the race within the race," Brill said. "So if you're wearing one of the Armed Forces' jerseys, the people go crazy. They've got banners on the side of the road saying: 'Go Army!' and 'Go Navy!'"

Brill returned to Germany and finished third in the U.S. Air Force Europe Regional Cross Country Championships with a 37:03 clocking for 10 kilometers. In December, he finished fifth among 650 runners in the Ciebengebirgs Marathon, a 26.2-mile cross-country run, with a time of 2:58:55.

Brill posted top-40 finishes at the ING Brussels Marathon in Belgium, the Regensburg Marathon in Germany and the Tirol Speed Marathon in Austria. He also fared well in four half-marathons, including third-place performances in Ansbach, Wassertrudigen and the Tour de Hesselberg Half Marathon.

Brill is the lone American to ever finish as high as third place in the Ansbach City Half Marathon. He also volunteered to coach first-time road racers in a 20-week training program to prepare for the Volkswagen Prague Marathon, scheduled for May 13.

"I went a little overboard and did quite a bit in 2006," he said. "I tried to do a lot of cross-training on the bike because you can't run yourself in the ground every day. It just beats your body apart, so it's a good mix to get on the bike two or three times a week."

Brill displays his U.S. Army affiliation at every event. His goal is to favorably represent the local military community and the Army.

"I make it a point when I register to sign up for the Army as a whole," Brill explained.

Brill has been selected to compete for the All-Army team in the Armed Forces Cross Country Championships Feb. 10 in Boulder, Colo.

Assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment at U.S. Army Garrison Ansbach, Brill serves as a physical security inspector and force protection specialist for the Provost Marshal Office.

Plains has three historic sites, several gift shops and antique stores to visit.

This smiling peanut is located just down the road from the Plains High School on 45 North. The 13-foot peanut has been featured on Jeopardy! and was given to Plains by friends of the Carters.

Plains High School was open from 1921 to 1979. Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter attended the school, which is now the museum and education center of the Jimmy Carter National Historic Site.

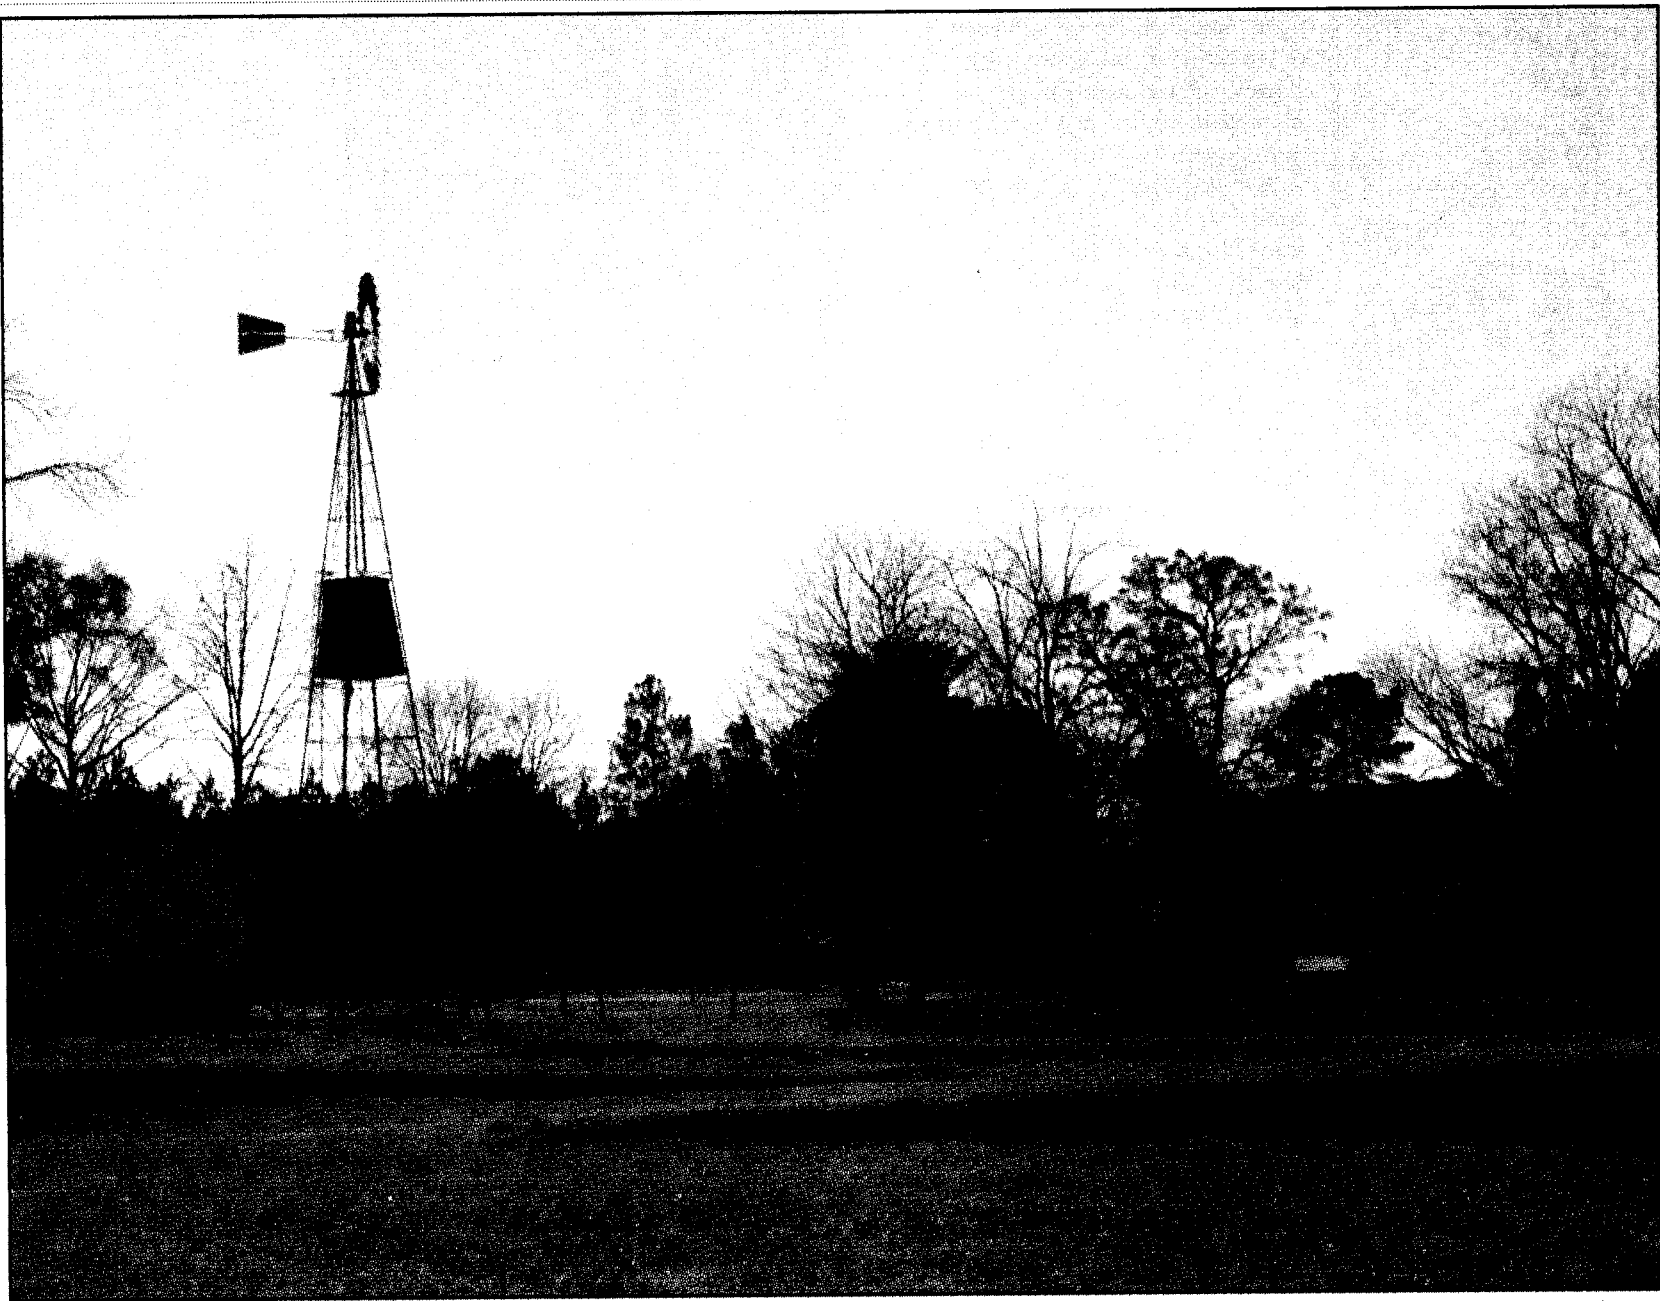

This classroom inside the Plains High School is set to look like it did in 1937, the year Carter sat in the room during seventh-grade English class.

The blacksmith shop on the Carter farm was used to repair and make farm tools and shoes for the farm's horses and mules and to sharpen plow points.

Carter's family ran a store on their farm where they sold lollipops for a penny, sugar for 25 cents per 5-pound bag, denim shirts for 75 cents, cigarettes for 15 cents, gasoline for 17 to 20 cents per gallon, medicines and other miscellaneous items.

Photos by Rachel Houston

President Jimmy Carter grew up on this farmstead just outside the small town of Plains. The farm is now a historic site open to the public. "Surrounded by a close family, here young Carter developed the character and values that would carry him to success as a naval officer, engineer, farmer, businessman, lawmaker, author, governor, president and world statesman," reads a sign at the historic site.

Presidential town of Plains

President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, grew up and currently reside in Plains, Ga.

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Ever had the desire to have your picture taken with a giant smiling peanut? How about a visit to the rural Georgia farm where a president of the United States grew up?

You can do both of those things and more in Plains, which is 50 miles from Fort Benning.

Jimmy Carter, 39th president of the U.S., was born and raised in Plains, a small rural town in Sumter County. His father, Earl, grew peanuts and many other crops on the family farm and ran a general store. As a boy, Carter would walk the three miles into town to sell boiled peanuts.

The image of the peanut in caricature became a symbol of Carter and the town of Plains during his presidency. Peanuts are still the main source of income for Plains, and the town of about 700 people supports two peanut processing warehouses, according to a pamphlet from the Jimmy Carter National Historic Site.

Three places of interest are open to the public in Plains — the Carter boyhood home, Plains High School and the Plains depot.

At the Carter boyhood home, which is a few miles outside of town, visitors can get a feel for the rural farm environment that produced a president. Step inside the Carter home, which didn't have running water or electricity until 1938. Look in the bathroom and see the shower head made of a bucket with holes drilled in the bottom.

Outside the house is a reconstructed steel windmill like the one that originally stood beside the house. Such a windmill could be purchased from a catalog for about $100 in 1935 and was used to pump water from a deep well, allowing for running water inside the house.

Few neighbors lived near the Carter farm when the president was growing up. Down the railroad a ways was a hamlet called Archery, where two dozen African-American families and one white family lived. Most of Carter's childhood friends were black.

The next stop in Plains is Plains High School, which Carter and his wife attended. The last class graduated in 1979, and the school was reopened in 1996 as a National Park Service visitor center. The school is a museum with several exhibits and a classroom restored to the time when Carter went to school there.

Be sure to watch the short film that plays in the auditorium. Visitors sit in the seats and look up at the stage where Carter himself watched school plays and attended assemblies.

Carter was a good student, according to signs at the school. He was a member of the debate team and the Book Lovers Club and played forward on the basketball team. Carter was one of 26 students to graduate from the school in 1941.

The third historic site open to the public is the Plains depot, which is on the corner of Main and South Hudson streets. The train depot, built in 1888, was used as Carter's campaign headquarters when he ran for the presidency in 1976.

Carter moved back to Plains after his presidency and still resides in the town. His current residence is not open to the public, but he teaches Sunday school at a local church several times a month and takes pictures with people who wish to meet him.

In the last several decades, the Carters developed and worked with the Carter Center on the campus of Emory University in Atlanta. The center's mission is to resolve conflict, foster democracy and development and fight hunger, disease and human rights abuses.

The center has monitored elections in Panama, Nicaragua, Haiti and Guyana, helped increase the immunization rate of the world's children from about 20 to 80 percent, launched the Atlanta project to alleviate social problems associated with urban poverty, and worked to end the stigma of mental illness and discrimination against the mentally ill in the health care system.

The Carters have also helped with Habitat for Humanity in recent years.

Before you leave Plains, stop in at one of the gift shops on Main Street for a variety of peanuts and souvenirs. The Plains Historic Inn and Antiques is also located on Main Street and has 24 antique display booths and seven period rooms from the 1920s to the 1980s.

To get to Plains, take U.S. 280 East and follow the signs to the Plains welcome center, museum and Carter boyhood home.

The Plains High School visitor center is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Jan. 1, Thanksgiving Day and Christmas Day.

For more information, go to www.plainsgeorgia.com, www.nps.gov/jica or stop by the welcome center in Plains.

OTHER PLACES OF INTEREST in Plains

HAUNTED HOUSE From 1955 to 1961, the Carters lived in a rented house which is located near the Carter boyhood home on Old Plains Highway. The house was built around 1850 and is one of the oldest houses in the county. Many ghost stories have been told about the house.

PUBLIC HOUSING UNIT 9-A Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter lived in the Dora Apartments for a year after returning to Plains in 1953. The couple applied for and were assigned the apartment in public housing. The apartment complex is on Paschal and Thomas Streets.

GOLDEN PEANUT COMPANY On Main and Bond streets, the company was formerly the Carter Warehouse complex, which housed the family farm supply business.

BILLY CARTER'S SERVICE STATION Jimmy Carter's younger brother, Billy, owned and operated a gas station from 1972 to 1981 on Church Street.

JIMMY CARTER PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY The library and museum exhibit are located at 441 Freedom Parkway in Atlanta. The library is open from 9 a.m. to 4:45 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 12 to 4:45 p.m. Sundays.

MARANATHA BAPTIST CHURCH The church was established in the late 1870s on Buena Vista Road. Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter have been members since 1981, and the president made some of the furniture and collection plates in the church. Carter often does yardwork on the grounds and teaches Sunday School several times a month.

OPENING TODAY

BECAUSE I SAID SO — A well-intentioned but overzealous mother (Diane Keaton) goes on a mission to find Mr. Right for her youngest and unmarried daughter (Mandy Moore).

The movie also stars Gabriel Macht, Tom Everett Scott and Lauren Graham.

Because I Said So is rated PG-13 for sexual content including dialogue, some mature thematic material and partial nudity.

THE MESSENGERS — A family moves into a rundown sunflower farm. As the farm begins to revive after years of disrepair, the family begins to notice uncomfortable and alarming changes in their father's behavior.

The Messengers, rated PG-13 for mature thematic material, disturbing violence and terror, stars Kristen Stewart, Dylan McDermott, Penelope Ann Miller and John Corbett.

ALSO PLAYING

EPIC MOVIE — In the spirit of Scary Movie and Date Movie, this movie is a parody that spoofs recent mega-blockbusters. The comedy centers itself around four orphans who visit a chocolate factory and are transported to the wonderful land of Gnarnia after stumbling upon an enchanted wardrobe.

Kal Penn, Adam Campbell, Jayma Mays, Faune Chambers and Jennifer Coolidge star in the movie.

Epic Movie is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, language and some comic violence.

CATCH AND RELEASE — A woman (Jennifer Garner) must deal with the untimely death of her husband and the revelation of secrets he kept from her.

Also starring in the movie are Timothy Olyphant, Juliette Lewis, Sam Jaeger and Fiona Shaw.

Catch and Release is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and some drug use.

SMOKIN' ACES — Mob boss Primo Sparazza has taken out a hefty contract on Buddy "Aces" Israel, a sleazy magician who has agreed to turn state's evidence against the Vegas mob.

The FBI, sensing a chance to use this small-time con to bring down big-target Sparazza, places Aces into protective custody, under the supervision of two agents dispatched to Aces' Lake Tahoe hideout.

When the word of the price on Aces' head spreads, it entices bounty hunters, thugs-for-hire, deadly vixens and double-crossing mobsters to join in the hunt.

With all eyes on Tahoe, this rogues' gallery collides in a comic race to hit the jackpot and rub out Aces.

Smokin' Aces, rated R for strong bloody violence, pervasive language, some nudity and drug use, stars Ben Affleck, Jeremy Piven, Ryan Reynolds, Andy Garcia and Alicia Keys.

BLOOD AND CHOCOLATE — Ten years ago, in the remote mountains of Colorado, a young girl watched helplessly as her family was murdered by a pack of angry men for the secret they carried in their blood.

She survived by running into the woods, and changing into something the hunters could never find — a wolf.

Now, though she lives half a world away, Vivian Gandillon is still running.

The movie stars Olivier Martinez, Agnes Bruckner, Hugh Dancy and Katja Riemann.

Blood and Chocolate is rated PG-13 for violence and terror, some sexuality and substance abuse.

THE HITCHER — Grace Andrews and Jim Halsey are a collegiate couple who are tormented by the mysterious hitchhiker John Ryder, a.k.a. The Hitcher.

The young couple hit the road in a 1970 Oldsmobile 442, en route to spring break.

But their pleasure trip soon turns into a waking nightmare. The initial encounters with Ryder are increasingly off-putting for Grace and Jim, and they bravely fight back when he ambushes them.

But they are blindsided when he implicates them in a horrific slaying and continues to shadow them.

The open road becomes a suspenseful, action-packed battleground of blood and metal as, in trying to elude not only Ryder but also the New Mexico State Police, Grace and Jim must fight for their lives and face their fears head-on.

The Hitcher, rated R for strong bloody violence, terror and language, stars Sean Bean and Sophia Bush.

ARTHUR AND THE INVISIBLES — 10-year-old Arthur has a lot on his plate — a real estate developer is about to snap up his grandma's home — and there's no way Arthur's going to hang around for his parents or grandparents to sort out the problem.

Maybe the solution lies in his grandpa's treasure, which is hidden somewhere on the "other side" in the land of the Minimoys.

The creatures that inhabit this world are just a tenth of an inch tall and live in perfect harmony with the environment. Arthur ventures into this world of the Minimoys, where he meets Princess Selenia and her brother Betameche. Together they set off to look for the treasure that will save his grandma.

The movie stars Freddie Highmore and Mia Farrow.

Arthur and the Invisibles is rated PG for fantasy action and brief suggestive material.

PRIMEVAL — A news producer and a reporter are dispatched to South Africa to track down the legendary 30-foot-long crocodile Gustave and bring him home alive.

However, their mission proves far more elusive and deadly than they had anticipated, and their situation turns even more perilous when a feared warlord targets them and their colleagues for death.

Primeval, rated R for strong graphic violence, brutality, terror and language, stars Dominic Purcell, Orlando Jones and Brooke Langton.

STOMP THE YARD — DJ is a troubled youth from Los Angeles attending the historically black Truth University in Atlanta.

When adapting to his new environment proves difficult, DJ finds solace in joining a struggling fraternity where he begins implementing his street-style dance moves in an attempt to help the step team win the coveted National Step Show Championship.

Columbus Short, Brian J. White, Ne-Yo and Courtney B. Vance star in the movie.

Stomp the Yard is rated PG-13 for a scene of violence, some sexual material and language.

ALPHA DOG — The movie, starring Amanda Seyfried, Justin Timberlake, Bruce Willis and Sharon Stone, is based on the life of Jesse James Hollywood, one of the youngest men ever to be on the FBI's most wanted list.

Alpha Dog is rated R for pervasive drug use and language, strong violence, sexuality and nudity.

ROCKY BALBOA — Former heavyweight champion Rocky Balboa (Sylvester Stallone) steps out of retirement and back into the ring, pitting himself against a new rival decades after his initial glory.

When a computer simulated boxing match declares Balboa the victor over current champion Mason "The Line" Dixon, the legendary fighter's passion and spirit are reignited.

Rocky Balboa is rated PG for boxing violence and some language.

NIGHT AT THE MUSEUM — Good-hearted dreamer Larry Daley (Ben Stiller) thinks he's destined for something big.

But even he could never have imagined how big, when he accepts what appears to be a menial job as a graveyard-shift security guard at a museum of natural history.

During Larry's watch, extraordinary things begin to occur.

Night at the Museum is rated PG for mild action, language and brief rude humor.

NEW RELEASES

FLAGS OF OUR FATHERS: The story of the American-flagraising on the island of Iwo Jima is recalled by director Clint Eastwood in this fine drama, which he followed by telling the Japanese side of the story in the much-acclaimed Letters From Iwo Jima. Three of the six Soldiers photographed putting up the flag make it back home, where they're sent on a disillusioning public-relations campaign.

Ryan Phillippe, Jesse Bradford and cast standout Adam Beach play the military men. Barry Pepper Saving Private Ryan, Jamie Bell, Paul Walker, Robert Patrick and Neal McDonough also appear in the film, co-written by Crash Oscar winner Paul Haggis. (R:AS, P,GV)

HOLLYWOODLAND: The mystery surrounding the alleged suicide death of 1950s television Superman George Reeves (well-portrayed by Ben Affleck) fuels Paul Bernbaum's script in this smart melodrama. Adrien Brody plays a private detective who finds personal resonance in the Reeves case, since it involves power and infidelity.

Diane Lane, Bob Hoskins and Robin Tunney also are in the fine cast directed by television veteran Allen Coulter. The Sopranos. DVD extras: audio commentary

Woods' Short Straw doesn't disappoint

Santa Fe Rules' Eagle is back in novel in 'twisted' tale of intrigue

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

I've read many of Stuart Woods' novels and his newest tome, Short Straw, doesn't disappoint. It's a page-turner that kept me up way past my bedtime, but only one night, because I finished it in two days — it was that good.

Woods brings back the character of Ed Eagle, first introduced in the book Santa Fe Rules. Eagle is a high-profile lawyer, who, on his 50th birthday, awakens to find that his wife Barbara has left him, and has also stolen hundreds of thousands of his dollars.

He never saw it coming, and races against the clock to try to stop her from stealing more of his money.

The same day, Eagle is opening his brand new, lavish law office. He manages to get through it, but as the last of his guests filter out, a judge calls him and two other lawyers into a room and tells all three that he has three cases for them, and the decision of who gets what case will be done by drawing straws.

Eagle draws the short straw, and is given a triple-homicide case.

The novel seems to be turning to the case, but Eagle solves it within a few days. The man accused of the crimes, Joe Big Bear, has a witness saying that Big Bear was at his house all day, fixing his car.

Before Big Bear is released from jail, though, he hears two men in the pen talking about being hired to kill Eagle.

The case seems resolved, and veers back toward Eagle's pursuit of his wife in Mexico.

Eagle hires ex-LAPD detective-turned-private-investigator Cupie Dalton to track down Barbara. He finds her in Mexico City, and as he attempts to approach her with a cell phone so Eagle can talk to her, she shoots him.

Eagle sends another private investigator, a singularly named Vittorio, to help Dalton with the case.

Dalton and Vittorio chase Barbara throughout Mexico. All Eagle wants is her signature on six blank sheets of paper so he can divorce her, quickly, before she can get her hands on any more of his money.

Barbara ends up traveling with the private investigators after they notice a large black Suburban following them for many days. It's eventually told why the car is chasing them, but I don't want to spoil a great subplot to the story.

The story has many twists and turns. Just when you think the story is going one way, it turns a different way.

I thought I was pretty good at figuring out plots, but this book proved me wrong. It kept me on my feet, trying to figure out what was going to happen next.

Short Straw is an intriguing read.

Woods fans won't be disappointed, and neither will those who haven't read Woods before.

He's got a slew of other books, including series with characters Holly Barker and Stone Barrington that are also finely crafted and worth reading.

Café 222

Annette Jones, left, and Velma Reynolds feed their customers a variety of traditional Southern-style foods.

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Café 222 would be a complete failure if it weren't so darn successful. The experts, the folks who specialize in haute cuisine and four-star inns, said the café's Southern-style menu wouldn't cut it with the folks who frequent places like the Rothschild-Pound Inn and Village.

The café is part of the village, the 200-block of Seventh Street in the historic part of downtown Columbus. The café's country-style menu is "incongruent" with the refined, genteel atmosphere of the old-South style village, according to the experts, who would prefer to see a selection of fine wines instead of sweet tea, with or without lemon.

But Mamie Pound stuck to her guns. Mamie is the owner of Café 222, a Southern-bred gal with a major in political science and an intuitive sense of what is haute and what is hot where her customers are concerned.

Mamie followed her instincts and they served her well. While the inn and village consistently rank among the finest in the country, having garnered the AAA Four-Diamond award the past three years, Café 222 continues to draw crowds of loyal fans — fans loyal to down-home country cooking, the kind one might find at a Southern family reunion or a funeral. Those were Mamie's words, not mine. I like them.

Mamie employs two cooks, Annette Jones and Velma Reynolds. Neither are trained chefs in the traditional sense, which is a good thing I think. I suspect their culinary skills are part gift and part training in the old-school fashion, passed down from one generation to the next. They serve up fresh greens, fried chicken, meatloaf, country-fried steak, cornbread, hush puppies, coleslaw, macaroni and cheese — anything and everything Southern, including desserts like cobbler and chocolate cake. They serve it buffet style, too, and you know what that means.

Café 222 is open for breakfast from 7 a.m. till 11 a.m. Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. till 10 a.m. on Saturdays, and 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Sundays. The lunch buffet is served weekdays only from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

You should try to visit the café when it's not so busy, though I can't say when that is. When the work slows down in the kitchen, Miss Annette or Miss Velma will occasionally come out long enough to sing for you, a cappella. Their singing, like their cooking, comes natural, and it comes from way down deep. They prefer the old spirituals, which might not go over so well with the haute monde, but those of us loyal to Southern cooking kinda like their style — in and out of the kitchen.

Director brings treasures to museum

Travels to Virginia for commander's collection of papers, personal effects from USS Chattahoochee

PORT COLUMBUS CIVIL WAR NAVAL MUSEUM

National Civil War Naval Museum at Port Columbus executive director Bruce Smith traveled to Virginia Tuesday to bring back the newest group of treasures to be collected by the museum.

Smith said the collection consisted of the personal papers and effects belonging to one of the commanders of the gunboat CSS Chattahoochee, the remains of which are in the museum.

"John Julius Guthrie was the second commander of the Chattahoochee who took over from Catesby Jones, former skipper of the Merrimac the day it fought the Monitor in one of the war's most famous naval battles," Smith said.

The last major addition to the museum's collection of ship-related items came in 1989 when Jones' uniform coat was donated by his descendants.

Smith said the collection included many archival items including the original Confederate Navy orders assigning him to the local gunboat and more.

"There is a handwritten description of the boiler explosion aboard the ship which killed 19 crewmen that is bloodcurdling," said Smith.

Also included in the collection are some Civil War era articles from Columbus newspapers about Guthrie's service in the city.

Smith said the prize of the artifacts of the collection is Guthrie's original naval sword and scabbard which is marked "Guthrie 1861."

"I will be bringing all the archives and the sword back with me on the airplane and will be shipping a few of the larger things like Guthrie's sea chest by more conventional means," Smith said.

Plans for the collection call for some conservation, though most of it was reported to be in very good condition.

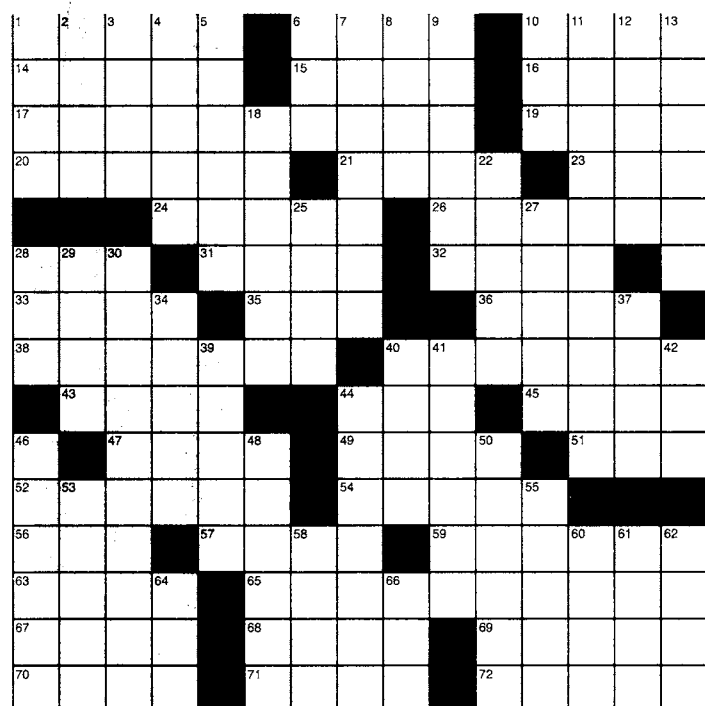

Later, a special exhibit of original CSS Chattahoochee material is planned by the museum.

Smith said a number of donors made the quick acquisition of this collection possible, with the largest donation coming from the J.W. and Ethel I. Woodruff Foundation.

Partners in Education start new year right

The 641st Mobilization Troop Command, commanded by Col. Robert W. Kenyon, and the Medical Retention Center Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. George M. Bryan Jr., participated in the Partners in Education Program Jan. 19.

The units hosted a field trip to the Infantry Museum for children in the Muscogee Elementary School's fourth and fifth grades.

More than 20 Soldiers and Department of the Army employees volunteered for the event.

The units hosted the field trip as a way to teach the students about the Infantry's history. The students learned about the Infantry's role in battles from the Revolutionary War to the Global War on Terrorism from 1st Lts. Bruce Burch and Jeremy Griggs.

Lawyer exchanges caseload for exhaust on NASCAR Now

ZAP2IT
George Dickie

Erik Kuselias, former attorney and host of the new ESPN2 series NASCAR Now, considers his old career to be firmly in his past — with a few exceptions.

"Actually, I'm kind of on the friends-and-family plan, like one of those phone service plans," said Kuselias, who begins his new assignment Monday. "If one of my brothers calls me and says he got a speeding ticket, I'll walk him into court, or if a family member has a question. Certainly people at ESPN will come up and give me the quick 'Psst! Come here!' and they'll have a question and I'm happy to oblige them. But I'm essentially out of practice."

That's because he's now the face of ESPN2's live, Sunday-through-Friday NASCAR information show, which will provide fans with news, analysis, highlights, interviews, debate and opinion from a newly created studio designed to look like a NASCAR garage. Kuselias will serve as the half-hour show's spotter, with a team of reporters and contributors consisting of former NASCAR crew chief Tim Brewer, Dale Earnhardt Jr. tire changer D.J. Copp, onetime NASCAR team owner (and former NBA center) Brad Daugherty, reporter Shannon Spake, and racing columnists Tim Cowlshaw, Angelique S. Chengelis and Marty Smith.

While the show will be situated in its home studio at ESPN headquarters in Bristol, Conn., it will on occasion go on the road to report on big races like the season-opening Daytona 500 Feb. 18.

"I think that we will go to an unspecified number of races," Kuselias said. "We will have a presence at every track. The question is how many tracks that we'll be live from for the show on our Sunday show or during the week, I think that's still to be determined. I believe we're going to do the Brickyard 400; I think we are committed to (the season-ending race at) Homestead. There may be some that are very close to being committed — I'm not exactly sure, and I think that will be determined as we go along. Wherever they tell me to go, I'll be there. I promise."

And, said Kuselias, they'll be there with the newsmakers of the day when the need arises.

"I can envision us (saying), 'Let's find out what's going on with Jimmie Johnson.' Bang! And we have either Jimmie or a member of his crew. 'What happened over with Junior? Let's go to his tire changer, D.J. Copp.' 'Let's find out what's happening coming up in this week's race on the short track at Richmond. Let's go to our guy, Marty Smith.' 'Shannon Spake, you talked to this driver this week. What did he have to say? How is he worried about the potential weather conditions?' Just go right through. It's going to be terrific."

Kuselias, who came to ESPN with virtually no broadcasting experience to host the nationally syndicated The SportsBash on ESPN Radio, is a former law partner and a member of Mensa who is completing Ph.D. work at the Columbia University School of Journalism. He said the jump from law to broadcasting is not a big one.

"Well, I think there's a natural progression," he said, "and there are some similarities as to the kind of magnitude changes. You need to be entertaining, you need to be engaging, and you need to tell the story. And that's what we do."

"That's what I did on my radio show, and that's what I think we're really going to do on NASCAR Now, is we're going to entertain people, but we're also going to give them the story they're looking for. I mean, I'm not going to be afraid to push to get the answers that teams are not used to giving so that we as fans have the story."

"And I think the biggest asset I bring to this project," he said, "is I have the fan's perspective, so I'm thinking the same way the guy on his couch watching the show is thinking, and I'm going to drive to get the same answers he wants when he's watching the show."

Kuselias said the first two weeks of the show will recap what happened last season and how that carries into this season.

"But I think we'll also be really, really focused on Daytona," Kuselias said.

It's 'criminal' what CBS is doing after the Super Bowl

ZAP2IT
Jay Bobbin

If your network's chiefs give you the slot immediately after the Super Bowl, they like you. They really like you.

And CBS has every reason to like Criminal Minds. This season, the Wednesday series has scored a number of ratings victories over ABC's much-heralded Lost. As a reward, the crime drama gets the plum position following CBS' broadcast of the NFL championship game Sunday.

The episode launches a story that concludes in the show's usual slot Wednesday, with FBI profiler Spencer Reid (Matthew Gray Gubler) at the mercy of a deeply troubled felon (guest star James Van Der Beek).

As Reid tries to psych out his captor, literally, his colleagues (Mandy Patinkin, Thomas Gibson, Paget Brewster, Shemar Moore, A.J. Cook, Kirsten Vangsness) search for him.

"I'm really kind of naive about all these matters, but I'm slowly realizing what a vote of confidence this is," Gubler said of the show's post-SuperBowl showcase.

"Reid is the 'damsel in distress' in this particular two-partner. It seems he's frequently taken hostage or beaten up or put into situations that steer the team toward saving him, which I enjoy. I feel like the equivalent of a horror-movie heroine."

It actually goes deeper in the newest tale. Gubler said Van Der Beek's character decides it might be more kind if he were to shoot (Reid) up with drugs. Not only is he being held captive by a psychopath, he's being forced to take an opiate of some sort. It's laced with a hallucinogen, causing Reid to have flashbacks that give insight into his past and what made him a profiler.

While Gubler brings some lightness to Criminal Minds with his quirky portrayal of Reid, recent cast addition Brewster Huff also is a lively presence as new team member Emily Prentiss.

"I've always read about profiling and psychopaths," she said, "so this show is right up my alley. I had been watching it, and when I joined, they asked if I wanted to read FBI textbooks. I said, 'Give me everything you have.' The FBI books are a lot rougher than anything a civilian can purchase at the airport; there are lots of photographs of victims."

"I went through about three weeks of reading and having a really hard time sleeping at night," Brewster said. "I got scared closing my eyes in the shower, so I took out the existing curtain and put in a clear one. I also installed a lot of locks, and I had some work done on my house that the real FBI guys have told me not to comment on. It was scary stuff, but I've sort of metabolized it now."

A former model who went to New York University's film school and "assumed I'd be making movies instead of being in them," Gubler "can neither confirm nor deny my involvement" in comical short subjects about the making of Criminal Minds on the Web site YouTube (search "Matthew Gray Gubler: The Unauthorized Documentary").

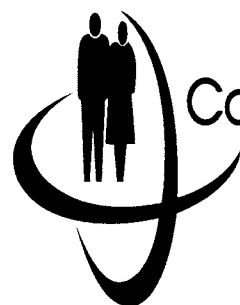

He may bite the hand that feeds him, but make no mistake: He's grateful for where he is.

"None of us ever anticipated the success we've had, especially in this climate of thousands of crime shows," he said. "From the very outset, everybody was saying, 'Don't worry. You're up against Lost. You'll be off the air in, like, a week.' Then every Thursday morning, we just kept posting those (ratings) numbers, and I don't think they ever stopped climbing. Everyone's incredibly proud."

Paget Brewster stars in Criminal Minds Sunday on CBS. "This show is right up my alley. I had been watching it, and when I joined, they asked if I wanted to read FBI textbooks. I said, 'Give me everything you have.' The FBI books are a lot rougher than anything a civilian can purchase at the airport; there are lots of photographs of victims," she said.

Sweet dream, sweet reality

Former Soldier-turned-entrepreneur sells bygone sweets

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

“What’s your favorite candy?” That’s the question Tracy Edwards asks everyone she meets. And after she finds out, she sets out to find it, especially if it’s a hard-to-find, discontinued or vintage candy.

The former Soldier loves the candies she remembers from childhood — Pixy Stixs and Ring Pops, Pop Rocks and Chic-O-Stix, wax lips and Necco Wafers.

“I love to watch people when they see their favorite candies or toys from childhood,” Edwards said. “You watch their faces light up. It’s like they’re five years old. It brings a person right back to being a child.”

She hopes that excitement will bring lots of customers to her shop, Memory Lane Candies & Old Fashioned Candy, which she opened in the Main Post mall Jan. 22.

It was the culmination of many years of dreaming, but it wasn’t an easy road to get there.

Edwards joined the Army when she was in dire straits. She was a teenager when she became pregnant with her son. A scared kid, she got married and soon had another child, a daughter. But the marriage went from bad to worse, until she was trapped in an abusive relationship.

She finally got the courage to leave, and went to her mother’s home in California.

After struggling to pay bills and take care of two children, she decided her best option was the Army.

“Joining the Army was the best thing that ever happened to me,” Edwards said. “I was just a mess, and the Army straightened me out, got me started.”

Now years later, she is married to a man she met in the Army, and they have added another daughter. Life was complete, except for one nagging dream — her candy shop.

Edwards had collected candy for some time. Whenever she saw something interesting, she’d buy it to give to friends or family, or just for a sweet treat.

Before long, she had a closet full of candy. She’d look at the closet and think about her envisioned shop, but then push the idea aside.

Then one day as she was leaving to meet a friend, something told her to put her candy in the car. She thought it was silly, but the feeling kept nagging at her. She followed her intuition and loaded the bags of sweets into the trunk.

Tracy Edwards stands at her candy shop, Memory Lane Candies & Old Fashioned Candy, in the Main Post mall. After years of dreaming of starting a candy shop, Edwards opened her business Jan. 22. The former Soldier sells nostalgic and hard-to-find candy, toys and snacks because it brings people back to childhood, she said.

When she met her friend, Edwards mentioned she had her candy in the car.

The friend wanted to see it, and so did her friend, and another friend. Soon a whole gang of women was gathered around the trunk of Edward’s car.

“Before I knew it, everyone wanted to buy my candy. I was just going to give it to them, but they insisted, and so I ended up making a bunch of money that night.”

With that encouragement and support from her family, she decided it was time to try for her dream.

Her son Alan helped her raise money for her venture.

“Once my mom puts her mind to something, she just focuses on it and does everything she can to get it done,” the 16-year-old said.

“She had been talking about starting the store for years. I was happy she was finally going to do it, so I wanted to help however I could.”

Alan raised $199 by selling candy to other students at his school. She used it to buy candy, and applied for a concession stand at the mall.

She went in, not sure if she had a chance — just a lady with an idea and some sweets. She applied on a Friday and was ready to open her stand Monday.

Women’s Conference set for March 14

BAYONET STAFF
Bridgett Siter

Mea culpa. In last week’s Bayonet, I quoted Tandi Cain-Morris, who heads the volunteer committee planning the annual Women’s Conference March 14.

I quoted her as saying that the guest speaker, funny-man Harvey Alston, would deliver a message of inspiration and encouragement to the women of Fort Benning. Which is true.

Unfortunately, I identified Tandi as “a member of the Officers’ Spouses’ Club, which sponsors the event.” Which is not true. The OSC is not sponsoring the event. Tandi is one of 15 volunteers “with an interest and a heart for this event” who have spent a lot of time and energy planning the conference.

I mean to give credit where credit is due.

There are a lot of sponsors, of course, too many to mention in this space, but it’s the volunteers who have given so much of their time and hard work that Tandi would like to see recognized. They’re a diverse group of women, with one thing in common — they’re married to Soldiers. They’re married to Soldiers of all ranks. As such, they’ve planned an event sure to please women from all walks of life.

That’s why they’ve selected a dynamic, nationally renowned speaker and author.

That’s why they’ve scheduled a variety of workshops, specifically chosen to appeal to a variety of tastes.

And that’s why they plan to send their guests home with really good goodies.

The folks at the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation have thrown themselves behind the annual event, Tandi said. And a lot of good people from other organizations are supporting it, also, including Columbus State University, Columbus Technical College, Troy State, Time Warner, Bill Heard and Mike Patton.

The conference, at the Benning Club, will start at 7:45 a.m. and end at 3:30 p.m. The cost, $17, includes a continental breakfast and a catered lunch.

The deadline for registration is March 1, but you’d be wise not to wait. Child-care space is limited.

For more information or to download a registration form, log on to www.benningmwr.com. Or you could pick up a registration form at any MWR site on post.

‘We’re in desperate times’

Carver calls on audience to cry out to God, persevere

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Desperate times drive men to our knees, said the Army Chaplain Program’s second in command, and we are living in desperate times.

Chaplain (Brig. Gen.) Doug Carver, the deputy chief of chaplains, sang a contemporary worship song, Desperate for You, before speaking to more than 300 guests at the post’s annual prayer breakfast Tuesday. It’s a song he sang often in the desert, Carver said, a song Soldiers

He recalled an incident there, when he was truly desperate. He sat with his Soldiers in a bunker that was under attack. Ballistic missiles flew overhead; some exploded within a few feet of the bunker. Carver said he was waiting “for a Patriot missile or waiting to meet God,” whichever came first, and hoping his Soldiers read courage in his face, not fear.

In spite of the circumstances, Carver suddenly felt peace, the peace the Bible says “passes all understanding.” He heard someone — he believes it was God — singing his favorite song.

“And he walks with me, and he talks with me, and he tells me I am his own,” Carver sang. “And the joy we shared as we tarried there in bunker number seven ...

“I experienced the peace of God. I know God sang that for me,” said Carver, who cited a verse in Isaiah 62, which says God rejoices over his people with singing. “Have you ever thought of God as a singing God? The scripture says he does.”

Peace in the midst of battle came by faith, Carver said, and a deep-rooted belief that God responds when his “friends” call on him in times of need. It’s a lesson Carver learned very early in his career, as a young Soldier attending Ranger School here at Fort Benning.

See Carver, C4

Brig. Gen. Doug Carver was the guest speaker at the post’s annual prayer breakfast Tuesday.

REFLECTIONS

Dirt provides lesson in unconditional love

1ST BATTALION, 29TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

Chaplain (Capt.) David K. Beavers

With Spring rapidly, and thankfully, drawing closer, I am well aware that the time for gardening is almost here. The fresh air, the joy of planting and the feeling of communing with nature are all thoughts that rush to mind. Regrettably, these are the thoughts that rush to my wife's mind while my thoughts turn to just how many tasks will go onto my "honey do" list under the heading of "Gardening." However, there is a distinct lesson I learned from gardening years ago.

I was serving as a church pastor in 1999. My congregation jumped at the chance to help my wife plant a flower garden. One day, while she was off picking up more flowers, or bushes, or some sort of greenery, I was spreading mulch and my 2-year-old son was playing in the dirt. A dear lady from the congregation showed up with a pick-up truck loaded with what she called "mushroom dirt." Dirt is dirt I thought, so I had no qualms with offloading. I let my son play in it once it was piled up against the fence.

Shortly thereafter, my wife returned. It was then, in the midst of her screams of "What are you letting him do?" that I learned that "mushroom dirt" is not really dirt, but is, in fact, manure. There was my son, having a great time, covered from head to toe in excrement. While I stood there thinking "Oh man, what are we going to do?" my wife, without hesitation, stepped into the "mushroom dirt," picked up my son, hugged him and carried him inside to wash him off. This spoke volumes about unconditional love.

The Bible is replete with scriptures about God's love for people despite whatever it is they might have done or be doing. One example compares God to the father who welcomed back his son who left home and went about doing his own thing only to realize his mistakes and come home (Luke 15:11-32). Another example is the radical life change that Paul went through from being someone who hunted down believers to one who wrote the majority of the New Testament (Acts 9 and following). The greatest example of God's love in the Christian tradition comes from Romans 5:8 where we are told "while we were still sinners, Christ died for us."

At times in life we all find ourselves feeling as though we are stuck in the middle of some "mushroom dirt." We feel angry, sad, confused or any number of things, but God's unconditional love for us remains constant.

Wherever we are or whatever we've done, God cares about us. We may feel unsure about being loved or might have encountered people who make us feel as though we can't be loved, but the bottom line is that God does love us beyond our comprehension.

If you are unsure or have questions, please contact your unit chaplain, chaplain at your particular chapel, the Family Life Center or other clergy member and find out what it truly means to be loved no matter what.

Learn to recognize difference between wants, needs

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Frederick "Bud" Rupel

Gary and Amanda were pursuing the American dream of owning their own home. They found their dream house, and though it was a little more than they could afford, they decided to go ahead. Amanda could always go back to work.

They soon discovered buying a home also meant having to furnish it. It was so easy to buy now and pay later — too easy. Before long, they found themselves in deep debt. Gary had to take on a second job to help pay their mounting bills and Amanda took to working overtime.

Then the unexpected happened — Amanda became pregnant. They were excited. Amanda wanted to stay at home and raise their daughter, but finances wouldn't allow it.

Having a child and paying for its care is expensive. There was never enough money, and soon Gary and Amanda found themselves arguing almost every day over money. The American dream was quickly becoming a nightmare for this couple. They were caught in a money trap.

This story is far too familiar with couples I work with. In fact, money is the number one issue couples argue about. In his book, Romancing the Home, Ed Young wrote, "The Bible says more about money than it does about heaven or hell combined, and amazingly relevant principles regarding money management, stewardship and budgeting."

When we begin to realize that whatever we own is not ours, but in truth belongs to God, then I believe we can start on the road to financial responsibility. God expects us to be good stewards of what he provides. We need to learn that there is a difference between a want and a need. While Gary and Amanda needed a place to live, they let their want take precedence over their need. The result was financial problems, which in turn produced other problems.

John Wesley said, "Make all you can! Save all you can! Give all you can!" Couples can meet these three admonitions if they make a budget they can live with. Ed Young wrote, "Drawing up a budget can teach couples a great deal about how they view money, and requires them to establish financial goals at the outset."

Budgeting also helps couples discern between needs, wants and desires. Most couples get in trouble when they put wants and desires ahead of needs. You may want a BMW but need a Toyota Tercel. Learn to know the difference.

God expects us to be good stewards of what he has given us. Do not fall into the trap of putting your wants ahead of your needs. Be faithful to use wisely what God has given you.

Army programs help keep military marriages strong

Shocking statistics spur myriad programs to save

Army marriages

ARMY NEWS SERVICE

Ashley Stetter

WASHINGTON — Before Capt. Paul Olsen completed his first tour in Iraq as commander of A Company, 2nd Battalion, 506th Infantry Regiment, his wife, Erin, contemplated what life was like before her husband's most recent deployment. The couple spent two of the past three years living on different continents.

Erin said she spent time wondering where he was, what he was doing, and whether he was thinking of her and the baby they were expecting.

"Being married to a Soldier at war is difficult," she said. But today she recognizes her relationship has reached a level many Army marriages don't.

"I've seen many marriages fall apart due to the stress that deployments put on Soldiers and their families," she said. "Life in the Army is hard, and you have to be truly committed to the other person and the life you've built together in order for it to last."

Statistics provided by the Army chief of chaplains indicate that 8,367 Army couples divorced in 2005, making the Army's divorce rate higher than that of any other military service. Given that fact, Army leaders are introducing new initiatives to help reduce divorce rates, improve mission readiness and enhance Soldier well-being.

"The Army has launched a tremendous number of family support programs since the war began," said Lt. Col. Peter J. Frederich, family ministries officer for the office of the Army Chief of Chaplains.

"Strong Bonds," a proactive and holistic marriage initiative, is among those. It provides guidance to single Soldiers, married couples, families and those facing deployment in order to stem potential problems.

"Strong Bonds is different from anything we've tried before, because it isn't a counseling program," Frederich said. "Counseling means something is wrong and we're going to fix it. This is more of a pre-emptive education initiative."

Strong Bonds is unit-based and calls upon commanders to provide adequate time on their training calendars to allow chaplains to come in and administer program training.

So far, survey results of the program have been positive. Couples who complete it "show marked improvement in skills and habits that lead to increased marriage satisfaction and survival," Frederich said. Additionally, the study revealed that "more than 90 percent of those who participated in Strong Bonds reported that the program was helpful and appreciated."

"Military One Source" is another beneficial marriage-related program. It provides online consultants, articles, educational materials and other interactive tools to the military community every day, year-round.

Deputy Undersecretary of Defense for Military Community and Family Policy John M. Molino told the American Forces Press Service that "Military One Source is a revolutionary augmentation to the family services we currently have on military installations around the world. It leverages technology and enables the Department of Defense to provide assistance to families and service members via the Internet or toll-free telephone numbers."

Programs like Military One Source and Strong Bonds seem to be having a significant impact on divorce statistics.

The number of Army marriages that ended in divorce when the war began in 2003 was 2.8 percent. While that number spiked to 3.9 percent in 2004, Frederich said the percentage has declined ever since and is currently less than 3.3 percent.

Capt. Patrick M. Gordon, who returned from Iraq in November 2006, said that while programs are helpful, Soldiers must take the first step toward maintaining a strong marriage.

"Preparation is the key," said Gordon, who has been married and in the military for seven years. "You must prepare the family for success."

Gordon and his wife, Michelle, who is pregnant with their first child, encourage all couples facing deployment to practice communication, mutual respect and understanding well before the deployment.

"I think you have to make sure that your spouse is prepared for deployment just like you are," Gordon said. "Several months before I deployed, I made sure that we had a plan to cover all the angles. I think a lot of Soldiers take off and leave their spouses unprepared to deal with issues, and this can cause grief for the Soldiers, the chains of command and the spouses."

Maj. Amy R. Johnson, who divorced her husband, Lt. Col. Craig Hess, in 2002 and remarried him this year, said she feared the stigma of seeking help when she experienced problems with him.

The officers married in 1996 and were separated for much of their first five years together. As much as they wanted their relationship to work, pressures of increasing job responsibilities, twins and long-term separations quickly wore on the couple's relationship.

"We worked in an environment where many dual-military couples worked, and it was clear that we were not the only ones struggling with these issues," Johnson said.

While Johnson didn't have access to programs like Strong Bonds, she came to understand the fundamentals of military marriage when Hess deployed to Kuwait in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom in the fall of 2004.

"I was so sad for our children that, once again, they were going to be without a parent," Johnson said. "I vowed to Craig that I would do anything I possibly could to keep him as close to the twins as possible. Months passed, and I started to realize that the exchanges we had contained more depth."

The deployment, which came three years after the couple separated, taught the Johnsons the importance of communication and ultimately led them to remarry in November 2006, 10 years after they were first married.

"I could speak volumes on the exchanges we had over the year he was deployed — how we came closer together in spite of the distance, the pure communication in our e-mails and letters, the true honesty and depths we reached in our brief phone conversations. Those are what we leaned on to not only get us through his year of deployment, but to reestablish our relationship," Johnson said.

"My unit performed above anyone's hopes and desires, but the most successful part of my deployment was returning home to Amy, the children and a loving relationship that is stronger than it ever has been," said Hess.

New Army initiatives reinforce this deep communication and supplant former reactive programs that caused couples that needed help to hesitate in seeking it for fear of reprisal.

"The military is doing better in providing services," Johnson said. "Now we need to take it to the next step and encourage Soldiers to use them. It is imperative that an environment exists in which commanders are supportive of using the services, and will remain supportive while the services are being used."

"Right now, we are looking great. Our divorce rates are below the national average and that is in spite of the fact that we are distressed at a much greater average," Frederich said. "Our Soldiers continue to do meaningful work, and we will continue to provide them with the world's best care and programs."

Successful military couples like Amy and Craig Hess, Michelle and Patrick Gordon, and Erin and Paul Olsen encourage Soldiers to take advantage of the wealth of opportunities the Army offers.

"Too many people lack the skills to communicate and listen to each other, and they expect the initial rush of romantic emotions to carry them through a deployment," said Paul Olsen. "In the long run, it's all about communication, compromise and commitment. So long as both partners remember that and constantly work toward it, a marriage will stay strong."

Carver: Encourages Soldiers to persevere, trust in God

"Perhaps I've never called on God as consistently and continually as I did when I was here," he said. "I probably wasn't physically prepared. I know a lot of men were more physically fit than I was, and I saw them bite the dust. But I cried out to God."

Carver never dared to tell the instructors he heard voices.

"But I did. I heard a voice as I prepared to jump from a perfectly good airplane. I heard God say, 'I'm here with you. We can do this,'" Carver said.

That same God — in Hebrew, he's called Immanuel, or "God with us," — will see men through desperate times if they call upon his name, Carver said.

"If you haven't noticed or haven't felt it, as a nation we're there — we're in desperate times," he said. "We need to lean on God for the long haul."

Carver called upon his audience to persevere, as individuals facing personal trials, and as an Army fighting what some call a "long war."

"God is calling on us, his people to persevere, to hang in there. Don't give up, don't quit," he said. "It's important to knock on the door, to seek God."

The Bible says God "is with you always ... even unto the ends of the earth," Carver said, and Iraq or Afghanistan

When you see an RPG and hear an IED blast, don't be afraid, for the Lord your God is with you. In the barracks or in Baghdad, in the hell of war or right here at home, God says, 'I will be with you.' That's the only thing that makes sense in the chaos of war.

— Brig. Gen. Doug Carver or our very own homes can feel like the ends of the earth.

"When you see an RPG and hear an IED blast, don't be afraid," he said, "for the Lord your God is with you. In the barracks or in Baghdad, in the hell of war or right here at home, God says, 'I will be with you.' That's the only thing that makes sense in the chaos of war."

Now is the time to cry out to God, he said — "that's what the National Prayer Breakfast is all about." Soldiers and their families can take comfort in the fact that their leaders, not just here at Fort Benning, but all around the country are "crying out to God today."

The president and elected officials who govern this country observed the traditional prayer breakfast, which began with prayer meetings among congressmen during World War II.

"Today, (our leaders) are doing spiritual things that won't make the news," Carver said.

"But they are very important. Our leaders are seeking wisdom from God."

The prayer breakfast, sponsored by the post's Chaplains Program, included a prayer for the nation, delivered by retired Navy Capt. Neil Block, and a Muslim prayer for the military, by retired 1st Sgt. Dawud Salahuddin Bin Pearson.

Here's to your health

McBride Elementary School hosted a health fair Tuesday. Michael Campos, who teaches PE at the school, planned the event to encourage students, their parents, the school staff and teachers throughout the post school system to "start the New Year right" by committing to a healthy, fit lifestyle.

Representatives from health-care agencies on post and off conducted screenings and free demonstrations for guests. Students from the Columbus Tech Nursing program checked blood pressure, hearing, cholesterol, vision and glucose levels.

Katelyn Oakes, 6, has her hearing checked with help from her mother, who holds the earphones in place. Katelyn is a kindergartner at McBride.

Pre-deployment means family discussions too

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Once again the news comes that more units will be heading to Iraq, again. Units at Fort Benning seem to be in a revolving door, as one unit returns, another is leaving, while another is in midtour. Someone is always returning, on R&R and deploying and who knows when the cycle will end. Soon, I pray.

The realities of our chosen profession are deployments, dangerous missions and sacrifice. I thank God for each of you — Soldiers, spouses and other family members who support us each day. The Army spouse plays a significant part of who we are as Soldiers and helps us to endure long deployments. One dynamic of pre-deployment is an emotional withdrawal.

Once we know we are going to deploy, it seems we get on the roller coaster of psychological ups and downs. One minute we are having a great time and the next we seem to be down. One minute we are laughing about something, the next we are crying about leaving. I know it is extremely difficult to separate for a year. The days leading up to deployment become difficult. The apprehension about being separated, being left without one another, or being placed in harm's way, increases anxiety in our relationships. We walk around on edge dreading the moment of departure.

It is common to have tensions rise in the family and especially between a husband and a wife. We have fears and concerns and we do not always express them in a healthy manner. Instead of sharing these with our spouses, we often hold them in, failing to clearly communicate our thoughts and feelings to one another. One thing we do is begin to separate emotionally prior to the physical departure. We sort of protect ourselves and are trying to deal with the separation.

One thing I did prior to my deployment was to talk about what would happen if I did not come home. Of course I wanted to return, and no, I did not want to go with a gloom and doom attitude. What I wanted my wife to know is that if I died, I wanted her to move on with her life and to have my blessing. I did not want her to have the burden of thinking she was in some sense betraying me.

One spouse I spoke to also went a step further with her husband — they talked about if he did not come home, down to the funeral arrangements. Unfortunately, he did not come home. She was very thankful they talked about it because she was able to fulfill his final requests without the stress of wondering if she fulfilled his final wishes. These are some things you may want to consider discussing.

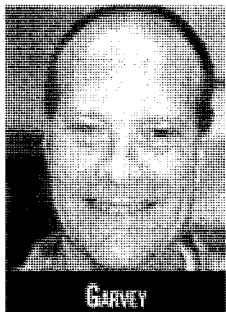

Some other things you can do are to discuss the top two, three or five things you as a couple would like to do prior to deployment. What are the top two or three things you need done around the house prior to departure? If you have children, what are the top two or three things you want to do as a family?

Husbands, understand your wives are grieving your loss; they want to squeeze as much time out of you prior to your departure. Understand they are very relational and want to know you love and honor them.

Wives, understand your husbands love you but often lack knowledge to express their feelings clearly. Emotional preparation and communication prior to deployment can help ease the transition of separation. Do not allow your fears to cause dissension between you and your spouse prior to deployment.

The Chaplain Family Life Center is here to help with any needs you may have, marital, family or personal. Our caring pastoral staff is here to help with your journey.

FORT BENNING

Church Briefs

PROTESTANT WOMEN OF THE CHAPEL

Drop-in seminars will start Feb. 8. Each week will have a different theme, including: sex in the marriage, sabbath, godly finance, quiet and devotional time, fasting and spiritual gifts. Everyone is welcome.

Regular Bible studies started Thursday. The books are provided in the classroom. The price of the book is on the back cover, and if you feel led to, you can leave that amount in the offering basket.

The child care hours have been extended until 12:30 p.m. to allow for longer fellowship time.

CROSSROADS CONTEMPORARY CHAPEL

The CrossRoads Contemporary Service meets at the Follow Me Chapel and sponsors Wednesday night activities for families.

A fellowship meeting takes place from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m., followed by Bible study for adults from 6:15 to 7:30 p.m. Team KID (Kids in Discipleship) for children ages 3 through sixth grade, meets from 6:15 to 7:30 p.m.

Other Wednesday night activities include the Middle School Youth Group (Club Beyond) that meets at 5 p.m., and the High School Club that meets at 6:30 p.m. Infant care is provided from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the nursery.

For more information on Club Beyond, call Steve Paquette at 706-545-2359. For more information on the service, call Chaplain Walt Hoskins at 706-545-4017, Chaplain Richard Garvey at 706-545-9014, Chaplain Joel Funk at 706-545-7513 or Chaplain Dave Beavers at 706-544-6255.

Accountants highlight 2006 tax changes

NATIONAL SOCIETY OF ACCOUNTANTS

As taxpayers everywhere begin preparing their 2006 tax returns, the same questions are on their minds:

- What's new in the tax code?
- Can I take advantage of new deductions?
- What about charitable contributions?
- Should I do the return myself or call a tax professional?

The National Society of Accountants reports the following changes that affect 2006 returns, including some good news:

- Charitable contributions: Clothing and household items donated to charity after Aug. 17, 2006, must be in good used condition or better. However, a taxpayer may claim a deduction of more than $500 for any single item, regardless of its condition, if the taxpayer includes a qualified appraisal of the item with the return.

- Inflation adjustments: The value of each personal and dependency exemption is $3,300, up $100 from 2005. The standard deduction is $10,300 for married couples filing a joint return and qualifying widow(er)s, a $300 increase over 2005; $5,150 for singles and married individuals filing separate returns, up $150; and $7,550 for heads of household, up $250.

- IRA contribution limits: The contribution limit for Roth and traditional IRAs rose to $5,000, up from $4,500 in 2005, for those age 50 or older. For those under 50, the limit remains unchanged at $4,000.

- Energy credits: A 10 percent credit is allowed for various energy-saving improvements made to a taxpayer's main home. The credit is based on the cost of new energy-efficient improvements including insulation, exterior windows, exterior doors, water heaters, heat pumps, central air conditioners, furnaces and hot water boilers. The overall credit is limited to $500.

"Everyone's situation is a little different, but there are opportunities for tax savings for most people if they look hard enough," said NSA President Robert H. Fukuhara Jr. CPA, ABA, ATA, of Fujieki, Fukuhara & Company, Honolulu, Hawaii.

Many people will choose to hire a professional to prepare their tax return, but they should move quickly — tax season is already underway.

"As professional accountants specializing in serving individuals and 'main street' businesses, we want to help everyone who comes to us," Fukuhara said. "But our schedules fill up quickly this time of year, so I encourage anyone considering hiring a professional to do so right away."

Fukuhara and NSA have also identified several changes that take effect for 2007 that taxpayers should consider as they plan for the coming year:

- Basic standard deductions have increased to for $5,350 for single individuals, $10,700 for married couples filing jointly, $7,850 for heads of households, and $5,350 for married individuals filing separately.

- Dependent exemption has increased from $3,300 in 2006 to $3,400.

- 0 percent, 5 percent, 15 percent capital gains and qualified dividend rates are extended to 2010.

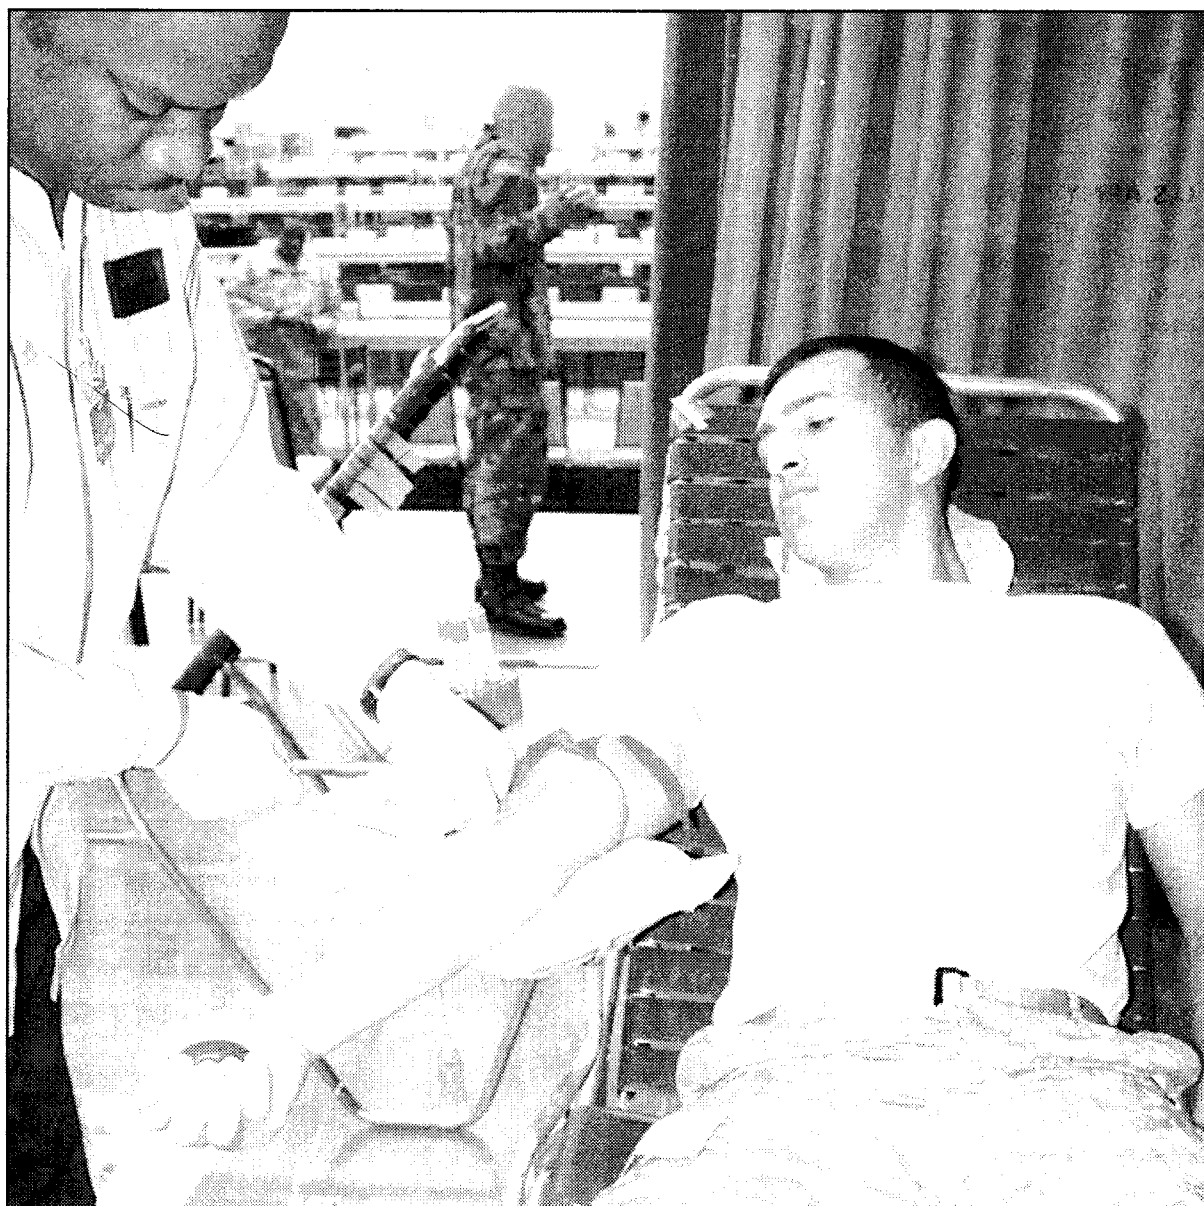

- Cash contributions to charity must now be supported by a dated bank record or a dated receipt. Contribution of used clothing and household items must be in "good" condition or better.

- Hope and Lifetime education credits will be phased out ratably for taxpayers with modified adjusted gross income of $47,000 to $57,000 ($94,000 to $110,000 for joint filers).

- Business mileage goes from 44.5 cents per mile to 48.5 cents. Medical mileage goes from 18 cents per mile to 20 cents. Charity purpose miles stay unchanged at 14 cents per mile.

- Social Security wage base rises from $94,200 in 2006 to $97,200 in 2007.

NSA has an easy-to-use online search engine to access a nationwide directory of tax professionals at www.nsacct.org.

Staff Sgt. Alberto Castillo, BNCOC student, readies himself for a needle prick while Craig Walker prepares Castillo to donate blood during the Armed Services Blood Program blood drive Monday in Infantry Hall.

The blood collected by the ASBP is sent directly to support Soldiers deployed in the war on terror. The ASBP is seeking all blood types, but are especially in need of O negative.

The blood from one donation can save up to three lives, according to the ASBP's Web site. Donating takes about 10 minutes, but pre-screening takes about 30 minutes. During pre-screening, medical personnel collect a donor's information, conduct a mini-physical and confidentially check a donor's eligibility.

To be eligible to give blood, a donor must weigh at least 110 pounds, be at least 17, be well hydrated, feel well and have eaten something prior to donating.

People who deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan can donate blood one year after returning to the United States. Those with body piercings or tattoos can donate after one year. People who are at a high-risk for HIV cannot donate.

For other restrictions or to schedule an appointment to donate, see www.militaryblood.dod.mil.

The Red Cross will host blood drives in Building 6, Room 225 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Feb. 21, April 18, and June 27.

ASK THE JUDGE

Think twice before changing plans for inheritance

OFFICE OF THE
STAFF JUDGE ADVOCATE
Anthony R. Tempesta

Q: If I plan to leave my house to my son upon my death, can't I just give him the house while I am alive?

A: While it is possible to transfer ownership of real property during one's lifetime, doing so may result in unpleasant tax consequences.

If your son inherits your house, he inherits it at its fair market value at the time of your death.

If you transfer interest in the property to him while you are still alive, however, he will receive the property at the value at which you bought it, and this could result in a large capital gain.

As a result, most "inter vivos" (meaning made during one's lifetime) gifts of real estate are discouraged.

For example, say you bought the house in 1960s for $35,000 and it is now worth $185,000.

If you leave the house to your son, he would receive the property at the fair market value at the time of your death ($185,000).

It is almost as if he purchased the house. If he sold it six months later for $185,000, he would owe nothing in taxes.

If you transfer the house to your son during your lifetime, however, he receives the property at your "basis," meaning the value you paid for it. Instead of being treated like a new purchaser of the house, it is as if he replaced you as the purchaser.

He would receive the house with a basis of $35,000, and he would be liable for capital gains tax for any amount over that basis upon resale.

If he sold the house for $185,000, he would be liable for tax on a capital gain of $150,000.

The Army Nurse Corps: Celebrating 106 Years of Diversity

"The Army nurse is the symbol to the Soldier of help and relief in his hour of direct need. Through mud and mire, through the mark of campaign and battle, wherever the fight leads, she patiently — gallantly — seeks the wounded and distress. Her comfort knows no parallel. In the heart of all fighting men, she is enshrined forever."

— General Douglas MacArthur, December 1944

The Martin Army Community Hospital is proud to take part in the celebration of the oldest federal nursing service, the Army Nurse Corps. February 2, 2007 marks the 106th birthday celebration of the Army Nurse Corps along with its extensive and proud heritage. The Corps became a part of the Army Medical Department on February 2, 1901 resulting from the tremendous contributions of nurses during and following the Spanish-American War in 1898. Their resourceful skills, dedication, and personal courage saved and embraced millions of lives.

Throughout their history, Army nurses have been active worldwide in providing comfort and relief to millions from World War I to Operation Desert Shield, to present day battles and humanitarian missions; from supporting NATO alliance troops in Haiti, Bosnia, Herzegovina and Kosovo to supporting the Global War on Terrorism and rendering aid to victims of natural disasters following Hurricanes Mitchell and Katrina.

Whether serving at home or abroad, the Army Nurse Corps holds steadfast to its mission of providing professional nursing leadership and high-quality nursing care during war, peacetime or humanitarian operations. The Corps proudly continues its vision of pursuing advancements in leadership, education, research, innovative healthcare delivery, and setting the standard in wellness promotion and building healthy communities.

Remaining true to their traditions, today's Army nurses stand READY, CARING, AND PROUD.

Are you ready for a dental emergency?

U.S. ARMY DENTAL ACTIVITY

Thousands of dental emergencies — from injuries to a painful, abscessed tooth — take place every day.

Would you know what to do if your child broke a tooth or had a tooth knocked out while playing outdoors? What if you had a bad toothache in the middle of the night and couldn't get to the dentist until the next day?

Knowing what to do can lessen the pain and save a tooth that might otherwise be lost.

Keep your dental office phone number and an emergency number where the dentist can be reached after hours with other emergency numbers, such as your family doctor, and fire and police departments. Some families post these numbers on the refrigerator or inside a kitchen cabinet near the phone.

Call the dentist immediately for instructions on how to handle a dental emergency.

• Toothache: Rinse the mouth with warm water to clean it out. Gently use dental floss or an interdental cleaner to remove any food or other debris that may be caught between the teeth.

Never put aspirin or any other painkiller against the gums near the aching tooth. This could burn gum tissue. If the toothache persists, try to see the dentist.

Don't rely on painkillers. They may temporarily relieve pain but your dentist should evaluate the condition.

• Knocked-out (avulsed) tooth:

Try to find the tooth! This may not be as easy as you think if the injury took place on a playground, basketball court or while skateboarding, so try to stay calm.

Hold the tooth by the crown and rinse the root in water if the tooth is dirty. Don't scrub it or remove any attached tissue fragments.

If it's possible, gently insert and hold the tooth in its socket while you head to the dentist. If that's not possible, put the tooth in a cup of milk and bring it to the dentist. Time is critical for successful re-implantation, so try to get to your dentist immediately.

• Broken tooth: Rinse your mouth with warm water to clean the area. Use cold compresses on the outside of the cheek to help reduce the swelling.

• Tongue or lip bites or wounds:

Clean the area gently with a clean cloth and apply cold compresses to reduce any swelling. If the bleeding can't be controlled, go to a hospital emergency room or clinic.

You may be able to reduce bleeding from the tongue by pulling it forward and using gauze to put pressure on the wound.

• Objects caught between teeth: Try to gently remove the object with dental floss. Never use a sharp instrument to remove any object that is stuck between your teeth. If you can't dislodge the object with floss, contact your dentist.

• Possible broken jaw: Apply cold compresses to control swelling. Get to the hospital emergency room immediately.

Candy: Revives memories

By Tuesday she was already taking special orders for items she didn't have in her stock. She already has regulars who stop by looking for their favorites. She knows them all by candy preference, calling them the "Mary Jane lady" and the "Chocolate Payday man."

"I don't know why I remember people's favorite candy, but it just sticks to me."

She's added vintage toys, regional specialties and hard-to-find items, and is thinking of new ways to branch out.

"There are so many fun things from when we were kids that we should bring back," Edwards said. "Do you remember Big Wheels? I've heard they make adult-sized Big Wheels. I'd love to get some and have races. Wouldn't that be fun? People are so serious. We need to play more."

"People think I'm crazy for wanting to do this, but if you look at history, creative people were always called crazy. If caring about something makes me crazy, then that's all right."

"My mom is really motivated and strong," Alan said. "I really hope she'll be successful. She's really excited about doing it."

Edwards can be contacted at memorylanecandy@hotmail.com or 706-561-3471. She's currently building her Website, www.memorylanecandies.com.

To peruse her stock, visit her in the mall until April 29th. That's the last day she's scheduled to be there, but hopes she can stay longer.

"I'll stay as long as they'll keep me," she said.

"I wanted to start at Fort Benning because I love being around Soldiers and their families. This is where I want to be."

• The average American consumes 23.9 pounds of candy yearly.

• About 40 percent of the world's almonds are used in chocolate.

• The Swiss eat the most chocolate of any nation, but the Danish eat the most candy.

• The Egyptians made candy 3,500 years ago.

• When eating a chocolate bunny, 74 percent of people eat the ears first, ten percent start with the feet and 4 percent eat the tail first.

• King Tut was entombed with mounds of licorice.

• The United States produces about 7 billion pounds of candy annually.

• The number of Jellybeans eaten at Easter would circle the earth three times if laid end-to-end.

• Aztec emperor Montezuma's favorite drink was liquid chocolate.

• To get bubble gum out of hair or clothing, try ice cubes, gasoline or peanut butter.

Post-partum PT helps new moms get fit

MEDDAC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Angela Justice

For many, that New Year's resolution of losing weight has been tossed aside. But for Soldiers who are new moms, there's help — the mandatory six-week post partum physical training program.

Although new mothers are advised to start any activity after delivery gradually, active-duty Soldiers are required by Fort Benning Policy Memorandum 40-201-4, to participate in post-partum training.

"Because it takes a while for new moms to recover from delivery, many options are offered during the convalescent period for active-duty Soldiers, such as videos that can assist them with reconditioning for post-partum PT," said Capt. Rena Trumball, chief of Public Health Nursing at Martin Army Community Hospital.

New moms should not attempt to lose weight too quickly, the process should be a gradual one with a loss of 1 to 2 pounds per week, she said. Eating healthy and drinking plenty of water should help to keep new moms on the right track for weight loss.

"It's important that mothers, especially those who are breastfeeding, ensure that they are following the daily dietary recommendations of the food pyramid," Trumball said. "And maintain the caloric intake necessary for their nutrition as well as the baby's."

Although Trumball mainly works with active-duty Soldiers with the post-partum PT program, family members who want assistance with exercises are welcome to contact the office, she said.

"Our office is available to provide information and demonstrations of proper techniques of safe exercises for new moms," Trumball said.

For more information, call Public Health Nursing at 706-545-4011.

ASK A DOC

THE MARTIN ARMY MEDICAL MENTOR

MARTIN ARMY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL
Lt. Col Virginia Yates

Q. My girlfriend said she was diagnosed at her pap smear with chlamydia. What's chlamydia?

A. Chlamydia, a sexually transmitted disease, is a bacteria that lives in vaginal fluid and in semen. Some statistics suggest that about 70 percent of chlamydia infections have no symptoms. People who have symptoms usually get them within one to three weeks after being infected. Those symptoms may be an abnormal discharge (mucus or pus) from the vagina or penis or pain while urinating. However, if the infection isn't treated, it can travel up into the urinary or reproductive system and become serious illnesses.

Q. What's the treatment if I have chlamydia?

A. The treatment is an antibiotic such as azithromycin (taken for one day) or doxycycline (taken for seven days). Or, you might get a prescription for another antibiotic such as erythromycin or ofloxacin. Symptoms will disappear within one to two weeks after finishing the medicine. Sex partners need to know that you have chlamydia so they can be tested and treated, if necessary. If the sex partner isn't treated, you can be re-infected with chlamydia.

Q. Will condoms keep me from getting sexually transmitted diseases like chlamydia?

A. Male latex condoms can reduce your risk of getting an STD such as chlamydia if used correctly. Be sure to use them every time you have sex. Female condoms aren't as effective as male condoms, but should be used when a man won't use a male condom. Remember, though, that condoms aren't 100 percent safe and can't protect you from coming in contact with some sores, such as those that can occur with herpes, or warts, which can be caused by HPV infection.

Take charge of your heart health

Dr. Gary Reed

Hart disease is always something that happens to someone else — until it happens to you. But instead of waiting until a heart attack happens, make a change now.

Heart disease is the result of years of poor habits, such as smoking, eating high-fat, high-cholesterol foods, and being sedentary.

The MCG Cardiovascular Center offers the following 10 steps to help get you on the road to heart health:

No. 1 — Improve your diet. A healthy balanced diet that includes fruits, vegetables, grains, fish, poultry, lean meat and low-fat dairy helps keep your body and your heart fit. Avoid processed foods that are high in saturated fat, cholesterol and trans fatty acids.

No. 2 — Lower your fat and cholesterol. The American Heart Association recommends that people reduce their saturated fat intake to less than 7 percent of their total caloric intake per day and reduce cholesterol consumption to less than 200 mg per day in order to lower blood lipid levels.

No. 3 — Keep a healthy weight. A body mass index of 18.5 to 24.9 is considered healthy and helps to prevent the development of diabetes. To calculate BMI, use this formula: Divide your weight in pounds by your height in inches squared. Multiply by 703.

No. 4 — Exercise. Moderate exercise for a minimum of 30 minutes on most — preferably all — days of the week promotes a healthy heart. Remember to consult your doctor before starting a new exercise program, especially if you have been sedentary, are overweight, are middle-aged or older or have a medical condition.

No. 5 — Quit smoking. Nicotine and other chemicals in cigarettes constrict the blood vessels, increasing your risk of heart attack. So quit today. Your health care provider can help by offering advice as well as prescribing medications, nicotine patches and other methods that can help you stop for good. Also try to avoid exposure to second-hand smoke.

No. 6 — Lower your blood pressure. High blood pressure, also known as hypertension, can lead to heart disease. Losing weight, limiting alcohol intake, increasing physical activity and reducing salt in the diet help reduce high blood pressure. Remember that normal readings are at 120/80 mm Hg or lower. Have your blood pressure checked at least once a year.

No. 7 — Take aspirin. Those who are at high risk for developing heart disease within 10 years should consult with their physician about the health benefits of taking a low-dose aspirin daily.

No. 8 — Control diabetes. Maintaining good control of blood sugar levels results in less strain on the heart. Those with diabetes should try to keep their fasting blood glucose levels at less than 110 mg/dL.

No. 9 — Know the risk factors. Uncontrollable risk factors for heart disease include being older than 65, ethnicity and family history. If you know you are at risk, you can make the lifestyle adjustments necessary to decrease your risk.

No. 10 — Know the warning signs. If you recognize any of the following, act quickly. The warning signs of a heart attack may include:

- an uncomfortable pressure, fullness, aching, squeezing, burning pain or tightness in the center of your chest that may spread to your shoulders, neck, jaw or arms and that lasts for two minutes or longer
- sweating, dizziness or fainting
- nausea, vomiting or a feeling of severe indigestion
- shortness of breath

If you are experiencing any of these symptoms, seek medical care immediately.

By taking charge of your heart health today, you can keep your heart healthy for years to come.

Wear red to raise awareness of silent killer — heart disease

THE AMERICAN COLLEGE OF OBSTETRICIANS AND GYNCOLOGISTS
Douglas W. Laube, MD, MEd

American Heart Month kicks off today with National Go Red for Women Day (www.goredforwomen.org). Americans are encouraged to wear red, and by doing so to help raise awareness about the number one killer of women.

Heart disease is responsible for more deaths among women — about 480,000 women every year — than the next four most common causes of death combined. One in three women will develop heart disease in a lifetime, but many women still do not know they are at risk.

While age and family history play a role in personal susceptibility to heart disease, most of the additional risk factors are modifiable.

Cholesterol occurs naturally in the body, but when present in excess, cholesterol can cause fatty deposits (plaque) to build up in the arteries. Plaque build-up eventually hardens and narrows the blood vessels (arteriosclerosis), restricting blood flow to the heart and setting the stage for a heart attack or stroke. Lowering "bad" cholesterol (LDL) and raising "good" cholesterol (HDL) can help slow plaque build-up. Ideally, a woman's total cholesterol should be less than 200, LDL less than 100 and HDL greater than 60.

High blood pressure puts extra strain on the heart and blood vessels, increasing the risk of heart attack and stroke. It can also damage the kidneys, brain and eyes. Systolic blood pressure of less than 120 and diastolic blood pressure of less than 80 is optimal.

Having diabetes increases the chances of heart problems. Additionally, women with diabetes often have other risk factors for heart disease, such as obesity, high cholesterol and high blood pressure. Managing diabetes with healthy lifestyle changes will also help to minimize these other conditions and protect your heart.

One thing you can do to prevent heart disease is stop smoking. Smoking lowers HDL and exacerbates high blood pressure and heart disease, so if you smoke, quit.

Losing weight, exercising for 30 to 60 minutes on most days of the week and lowering dietary fat and sodium intake also work against high blood pressure, high cholesterol and diabetes. If these interventions don't work, talk to your doctor about medications that may help.

Go Red, be informed, and make heart health a priority.

For more information, the Patient Education Pamphlet "Keeping Your Heart Healthy" is available at www.acog.org/publications/patient\_education/bp122.cfm.

Living with pet allergies

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Many people allergic to cats and dogs are willing to put up with sneezing and itchy eyes in order to have animals in their household, and there are measures that can be taken to reduce symptoms.

Nearly 15 percent of Americans are allergic to cats or dogs, according to the Humane Society of the United States, and about one-third of Americans who are allergic to cats live with a cat in their household.

People will even go against a doctor's orders and live with pets.

In a study of 341 adults who are allergic to cats or dogs and were advised by their physicians to give up their pets, only one out of five did, according to the HSUS.

Of those people in the study, 122 even got another pet after their previous one died.

Pets offer many benefits to their human companions (see last week's Paw Prints on C9 for more info), and allergic individuals may go to great lengths to co-exist with pets in their household.

The cause of irritation in people with pet allergies is glands in the animal's skin that secrete allergy-triggering proteins, which are called allergens, that linger on the fur and float up into the air, according to the HSUS.

These allergens are also present in animals' saliva and urine.

Cats tend to cause more allergies than dogs, but there are people who are more sensitive to dogs than cats, according to the HSUS. And certain dogs can be more irritating to individuals than other dogs of the same breed.

According to the Humane Society, there are no breeds of cats or dogs that are nonallergenic, and even hairless breeds can be highly allergenic.

The Humane Society recommends taking these steps to reduce symptoms:

- Before you go through all the trouble of prepping your house, get the allergic family member tested by an allergist if you haven't already done so. The person could be allergic to something else, like dust.

- Create an "allergy-free" zone, preferably the bedroom, and keep the pet out of it at all times. A high efficiency particulate air (HEPA) cleaner can be purchased at home and garden stores and used in the allergy-free room.

Impermeable covers can be put on the mattress and pillows to keep allergens brought in on clothes from accumulating in them.

- HEPA air cleaners can be used throughout the house, and frequent cleaning removes dust and dander from furnishings, curtains and pet beds.

- Use a vacuum cleaner with a HEPA filter.

- Bathing pets weekly can reduce the amount of allergens on the fur by as much as 84 percent. Ask your veterinarian to recommend a good shampoo that won't dry the pet's skin out.

- Wash your face and hands after petting and playing with the cat or dog and before touching your face.

- Ask your doctor about immunotherapy (allergy shots), which can reduce the severity of symptoms, but not remove them entirely.

The National Institute of Health also recommends keeping pets in areas without carpets or upholstered furniture if possible because the allergens build up in fabric.

A study reported on by the NIH found that children raised with two or more dogs or cats during the first year of life are less likely to develop allergic disease as compared to children raised without pets.

And not only are the children less likely to develop allergies to pets, but other common allergies like dust, ragweed and grass as well.

For more information, go to www.hsus.org and watch the "Coping with Pet Allergies" video or download their brochure.

It is never too early to start thinking about allergy season

Top five steps allergy patients should take to relieve symptoms

MCG HEALTH SYSTEM
Dr. William Dolen

It may seem too early to start thinking about the allergy season now, but believe it or not, those bare-looking trees are beginning to send pollen into the air.

To help keep you wheeze- and sneeze-free, the following are the top five steps allergy patients should take in order to help relieve the onset of symptoms:

No. 1 — Anticipate. While many of us may assume that warm winter weather might cause allergy symptoms to start earlier, weather really has very little to do with seasonal allergy symptoms. Pollination, and thus allergy symptoms, generally happens at predictable times.

It's important that you know when to expect your symptoms, make sure you have current refills and start taking your medications early, just before the onset of pollen season.

Seasonal allergy symptoms are easier to treat when they're caught early, before they get severe.

No. 2 — Seek relief. Many people try to tough out the allergy season, leaving them miserable, decreasing their work productivity and affecting their general quality of life.

Don't just put up with the symptoms. From medications to immunotherapy, relief is available.

No. 3 — Limit side effects. Some medications may cause side effects such as sleepiness. If these side effects are intruding in your daily life, know that you don't have to put up with them.

If you're having trouble, tell your doctor, who can find other treatments that have fewer side effects.

No. 4 — Don't just self-treat. If you're self-treating with over-the-counter medications but not getting enough relief, see your doctor.

With the proper medication, allergy symptoms can be kept under control.

No. 5 — Seek professional advice. Ask your doctor whether you should consult with a board-certified and trained allergist-immunologist.

A specialist can help you find out exactly what you are allergic to (which will help predict when you might have trouble), and can work with your regular doctor to find a personalized medication strategy.

Allergy shots are still the best hope for long-term relief of seasonal allergies.

Allergy season usually starts in the last part of January and lasts through October.

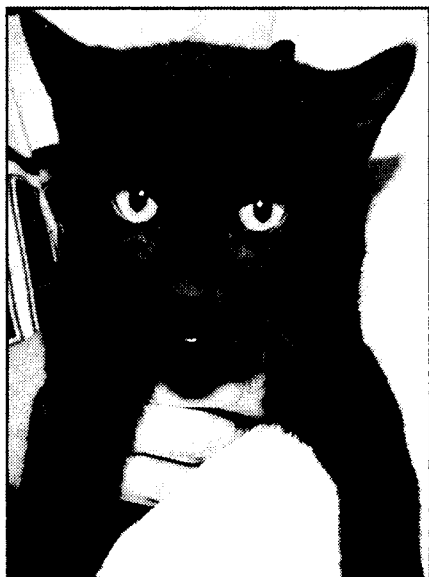

And while there is no cure for the allergic diseases, working with a medical professional to find the right medications and staying on a medication regimen can help prevent the misery of allergies.

598th departs for OIF mission

Unit to fix vehicles, gear during yearlong deployment

THE BAYONET

The 598th Maintenance Company departed Fort Benning Feb. 1 for a one-year deployment to Iraq.

The company of about 170 Soldiers will support units at forward operating bases around Iraq by fixing and performing maintenance on vehicles and equipment.

Their mission will be "to fix anything and everything that the Army rolls," said Capt. Andrea Rogers, company commander of the 598th.

"It takes a lot for a unit to deploy," Rogers said, "and there have been some good times, bad times, but now we're ready to go. I have confidence in my Soldiers' abilities and motivation is high. After all the lead-up, I think everyone is anxious to just get on the plane and go."

Black History luncheon Thursday

"We should emphasize not Negro History, but the Negro in history. What we need is not history of selected races or nations, but the history of the world void of national bias, race hate, and religious prejudice."

— Carter Woodson, on the founding of
Negro History Week in 1926

This year's theme for Black History Month is "From Slavery to Freedom: Americans in the Americas," and Fort Benning will celebrate with a luncheon 11:30 a.m. Thursday at the Benning Club's Supper Club.

The observance promotes understanding, teamwork, harmony, pride and esprit among all groups, not just within the specific group being honored, according to the post Equal Opportunity Web site.

The guest speaker will be Prathan L. Powell, who pastors the World Changes Tabernacle, Inc., in Columbus.

The menu is chicken, collard greens, mashed potatoes, rolls and butter, tossed salad and iced tea. The cost is $8.50.

14th CSH doctor tells of rewarding, difficult year

Doctor awarded Bronze Star for actions in Afghanistan

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Col. W. Thomas Frank spent the last year in Afghanistan, and the year was both rewarding and difficult — filled with firsts, he said.

"Most of the physician staff was managing cases and patients they would not have been treating here," Frank said. "Everyone had to push and test themselves."

"But I know that I can speak for the entire medical staff that it was the most rewarding year of (our) medical careers," said Frank, the chief of medicine at the William Beaumont Army Medical Center at Fort Bliss, Texas. He spent the last year attached to the 14th Combat Support Hospital, which returned to Fort Benning Jan. 29.

"There are countless Afghan children and adults who would not be alive today if not for the herculean efforts of the staff of the 14th CSH," said Frank, who was awarded the Bronze Star for his actions in Afghanistan and for his courage and commitment to mission accomplishment.

Frank is modest about the award and credits the unit for the job well done.

"I feel honored and privileged to have worked among them. They gave 110 percent and achieved amazing things with very little in the way of resources," he said.

One of the greatest rewards for Frank was seeing children survive injuries and ailments that they wouldn't have survived if not for the 14th CSH.

The health care before the Americans got there was mostly home health care, he said. Patients were taken care of by family members.

"It was incumbent upon us to help train the Afghan physicians living and working in the area," Frank said.

The 14th CSH developed programs to train Afghan doctors and nurses, and doctors with the unit gave lectures, he said.

Another first was a laparoscopic surgery performed by Maj. Ross Segan, a non-invasive surgeon from Tripler Army Medical Center, Hawaii. Segan performed a cholecystectomy, or gall bladder removal surgery, on an American government contractor in Afghanistan, Frank said.

Laparoscopic surgery, which allows for quicker recovery, is standard in the U.S. Before the equipment was available, Soldiers were sent out of the country, but now the Soldiers can stay and have a quick recovery, Frank said.

The equipment was donated to the hospital in Afghanistan. The ultimate goal is to teach Afghan physicians how to use the equipment, Frank said.

The Afghan people were incredibly grateful and almost in disbelief at the work the 14th CSH was doing, Frank said. They couldn't believe someone would offer that much kindness.

On one occasion, Frank was treating Afghan prisoners, who were astonished that they were receiving the same level of care as everyone else.

"One prisoner got off his bed to kiss my feet, and we had to lift him back up," Frank said. "That really affected me."

Frank returned home to Texas Saturday and was looking forward to seeing his family again.

The 14th CSH was replaced by the Air Force's 455th Medical Expeditionary Group.

Post to transform to Maneuver Center

COMMANDING GENERAL
Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

This is the second column in my ongoing Commander's series.

This week the subject is the "Maneuver Center of Excellence," which has been highlighted recently in the media.

This is an exciting, challenging time for our Army and for Fort Benning as we undergo one of the most unique transformations in our proud history.

This transformation began as a result of the 2005 Base Realignment and Closure Commission's decision to move the Armor School from Fort Knox, Ky., to Fort Benning by 2011.

It is the biggest move since the School of Infantry moved here from Fort Sill, Okla., in 1918.

This historic move of Armor will result in an immense effort to transform Fort Benning into the future Maneuver Center of Excellence.

The MCOE's mission is simple and straightforward — to maintain Infantry and Armor branch integrity while implementing the new Maneuver Center of Excellence model.

We must ensure the new MCOE meets or exceeds training standards, leader development capabilities and combat development responsibilities, while continuing to provide the best trained Soldiers in the world to our operating force.

Over the past 18 months the Infantry and Armor Schools have been working very closely together on the development of a new organizational design that will combine them into a single Maneuver Center.

Planners from both posts developed a comprehensive campaign plan outlining the end state and direction for the development of the MCOE.

Close coordination between Fort Benning and Fort Knox will ensure the highest quality training and quality of life for Soldiers, family members and Army civilians.

To provide direction, a MCOE board of directors was established, which meets quarterly to review the transformation progress, provide guidance to planning teams, and to resolve MCOE-related issues.

The BOD is comprised of the Infantry and Armor Center commanders, their deputy commanding generals, chiefs of staff, the director of the Armor School, the director of Infantry Futures, the Infantry School and Armor Center command sergeants majors, garrison commanders, and their spouses.

The most recent meeting occurred Feb. 5 to 7 in Nashville, where the Executive BOD reviewed MCOE progress and made actionable decisions to ensure projects stay on track in creating the most effective maneuver training center in the U.S. Army.

One of the most recent efforts underway highlighting the transformation process is the MCOE Patch Development Campaign.

I encourage all members of our Army family having artistic or graphic talents to contribute your concepts for an official patch, distinguished unit insignia (crest) and motto for the new Maneuver Center of Excellence.

All Soldiers, family members, retirees and Army civilians can submit concepts, and at the April BOD meeting, we will select the best entries and forward them to the Office of Heraldry for consideration.

Specific submission guidelines and entry information can be accessed on either the Fort Benning or Fort Knox Web site.

I also recommend you attend one of our monthly MCOE community updates provided by our BRAC coordinator, Jay Brown.

The meetings are held the first Tuesday of each month at 3 p.m., Classroom 6, in Infantry Hall. For more information call 706-545-4729.

In next week's column I'll highlight the outstanding Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs offered on Fort Benning.

Until then, remember we are "Army Strong, Training Strong, and Fighting Strong." Follow Me!

Fry bacon, not brain cells

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

Do you remember the 80s commercial with the frying egg that was your brain on drugs?

That was a great ad — memorable, made an impact, and inspired pleasant images like omelettes and egg sandwiches. Much better than that 90s ad in which a pot-smokin' kid accused another kid of being a chicken because he wouldn't do drugs. Pothead kid then drove the point home by bocking like a chicken and flapping his arms. Sigh. Not effective, just lame.

The 90s also offered the "what's your anti-drug?" campaign. Potheads are my anti-drug — as in, I'd never want to be one.

I've known too many smart, interesting, ambitious people, who started smoking marijunana and turned into lethargic, dull-eyed, apathetic potheads.

The typical pothead is not the horror-story junkie you see on the news and in anti-drug literature.

In those, it seems that anyone who tries drugs will instantly plummet to the depths of misery. One puff from a joint and wham! The former debutante is living in a box, roaming the streets with a crack pipe. Or I remember a "scare-you-straight" story about a girl who told someone who was high that an orange was his brain, and then tossed the orange out the window. The guy believed her and promptly jumped out of the window after his citrus-brain.

Come now. I don't know anyone who that's happened to, nor has anyone ever claimed the story is true because it happened to their mom's friend's cousin's hairdresser (and she wouldn't lie). Because usually, I think the everyday stories of recreational drug users are more effective. They're people who sacrifice their dreams and ambitions because they start caring more about getting high than fulfilling goals.

Without a doubt, horrifying things happen when people get on drugs. If you have any doubt, check out the meth addicts on page A-6. Very scary.

But there are a lot of functioning potheads, like two friends I had in college, Jake and Desiree. They were both smart, hardworking, motivated, attractive, good people. They smoked pot once in a while but it didn't seem to affect them much.

But eventually, instead of smoking occasionally, they started getting high on a daily basis.

Jacob got fired from his job because he was perpetually late. Desiree dropped out of school after being put on academic probation because she never went to class. They both got chubby from eating White Castle at 2 a.m., sleeping until noon and sitting on the couch the rest of the time.

Before long they weren't paying rent, and they moved into the last resort of the pothead — his mom's basement.

And that's where they've stayed, the last I heard.

Many people who would never try cocaine, meth, heroin — those drugs that REALLY mess people up — will sink into becoming boring, pathetic potheads.

It doesn't make for a dramatic commercial but it's a good anti-drug for me.

I'll take my eggs scrambled, but I don't want my brain fried.

Skating isn't what it used to be

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Elsie Jackson

It seemed like a good idea at the time.

Besides, how hard could it be? I biked and skated all the time when I was my daughter's age, and getting back on a bicycle had been easy.

What was hard was just sitting and watching as my daughter skated through GT Speed classes, so I pulled out a pair of inline skates that had been vegetating and signed on for beginner's hour.

I should point out that the quad skates of my youth had metal wheels and needed a skate key. My basically unused inlines are several dozen generations beyond.

But I wasn't worried. Except for my daughter, who would recognize me?

"Miss Elsie! Are you going to skate with us? My mom's writing a story about skating for the Bayonet."

"She is?"

Oh, look. There she was, with notebook and a camera. The good one. The one with the long lens.

Not a problem. One of the advantages of being my height is that I blended right in with the rest of the class. Right up to the point where we were rolling along and got the signal to stop.

As I scraped myself off the floor the coach rolled up. I must have been the teacher's pet that day, because I was the only one he checked on. Everyone else remaining upright had nothing to do with me getting individual attention.

Honestly, if he meant "stop and remain vertical" wouldn't you think he could have said so right up front?

I managed to stay on top of my skates for the rest of the class and watched people a foot shorter than me go from barely able to keep their footing on carpet to zipping by me on the floor and stopping at will.

A few rainy days later, rather than suffer from cabin fever, my daughter and I went back to Jam Skate Center for an open skate session. I had the foresight to invite one of her friends along.

It was a cheap trick to distract her from watching me and it worked.

"I think I'm getting better," I announced to her as we drove home. "Did you see me practically skating circles around some of those other beginners?"

Her eyebrows gathered as she tallied up the count.

"You mean the five-year-old skating for the first time and the kid in diapers who couldn't stop laughing as his mom pulled him around? Oh, and that other one. She was really cute. I think she was asleep in her stroller before they even got her skates off."

Sometimes I wonder why we spent so much time encouraging her to learn to talk.

Gates says cost of defending nation high, but worth it

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Jim Garamone

WASHINGTON — The president's fiscal 2008 defense budget request may be high, but the expenditure is necessary, Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates told the House Armed Services Committee Wednesday.

"The costs of defending the nation are high," Gates said in testimony before the committee. "The only thing costlier, ultimately, would be to fail to commit the resources necessary to defend our interests around the world and to fail to prepare for the inevitable threats of the future."

Gates and Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Marine Gen. Peter Pace testified on the president's fiscal 2008 defense budget request and the fiscal 2007 emergency supplemental request. The 2008 request is for $481.4 billion, and the supplemental 2007 request is for $93.4 billion. The president also requested $141.7 billion for operational costs.

The defense budget requests make the strategic investments necessary to modernize and recapitalize military capabilities, Gates said.

He also said the two requests will reduce stress on the military and help sustain the all-volunteer force. Service members' needs are reflected in the significant money dedicated to quality-of-life improvements, Gates said.

One large aspect of the budget request will increase the size of the Army and Marine Corps. Conditions in the world mandate that increase, Gates said.

"I think that we need the full range of military capabilities," Pace said. "We need both the ability for regular force-on-force conflicts because we don't know what's going to develop in places like Russia and China, in North Korea, in Iran and elsewhere.

He said the military also needs more special operations forces. "An increase in the Special Forces is provided for in this budget to deal with situations such as we're encountering in Afghanistan and ... the Philippines and various other places around the world."

The increase in the number of troops and the number of units will give troops the time at home station they need to recuperate and train up for the next deployment, Gates said.

American forces are stationed around the world. Those requirements do not end simply because there is a war in Iraq or Afghanistan, he added. "One of the results of that plus the war in Iraq is that our active force is now down to a year at home and then a year deployed," Gates said. "In fact, our policy is that it be a year deployed and two years at home. Same way with the Guard — ... a year deployed and five years

(at home). Because the forces are stretched so thinly in a variety of places ... especially Iraq, we've had to break that commitment."

Pace agreed that ground forces needed to increase. He also said that the budget needs to address equipment and training.

About 40 percent of U.S. forces' equipment is either in a combat zone or being repaired, he said. Units stationed in the U.S. have less than a full complement of equipment, Pace said.

Units that should train on up-armored humvees cannot because all of those vehicles are deployed, the chairman said. Units make do and have "workarounds" to make up for shortfalls in equipment, he said. Money in the 2008 request and the 2007 supplemental will address equipment shortfalls for units worldwide, the said.

Training is another consideration in forming the budget and increasing the size of the force. "With one year out and one year back, during the time that they're back, after they take a little bit of leave and get to know their family, the troops are being retrained for the mission to go back into Iraq or Afghanistan," Pace said.

"Instead of having the two years at home that we'd like them to have and have that time available to train to both the mission they're going to go to but also the unexpected missions of combined arms operations and the like, we are not able to train them fully to the missions that they may have to go to in addition to being able to train them for the mission they're going to," he said.

The Army and Marine Corps are slated to grow by 92,000 troops through fiscal 2012. The change will enable the Army to field 48 brigade combat teams up from 42, and the Marines to fill out a third Marine expeditionary force.

General says modern Iraqi police force crucial to stability

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
John J. Kruzel

WASHINGTON — Developing a modern, professional police force that enjoys the confidence of all Iraqis is critical, a senior U.S. military officer based in Baghdad said Wednesday.

“Our primary focus is on supporting (Iraqis) in building their political and security institutions,” Army Maj. Gen. William B. Caldwell IV, Multinational Force Iraq spokesman, told reporters at a news conference in Baghdad.

The eight Iraqi police brigades will be integral to security, Caldwell said.

“There are still challenges to be overcome in the training and equipping of the Iraqi Police Service, National Police, and Department of Border Enforcement,” Army Maj. Gen. Kenneth Hunzeker, the commanding general of the Civilian Police Assistance Training Team, said during the same briefing.

“(But) there are tens of thousands of people in the Ministry of Interior and Iraqi police who are courageous, well-trained, and committed to defending all of Iraq’s citizens,” he said.

“Before the war, many assumed that because Iraq was a police state, that the police under Saddam (Hussein) were professional and efficient, merely serving under bad political leadership,” Hunzeker said.

“Instead, we found that Iraqi police had no concept of active patrolling or community policing.”

Hunzeker described Saddam’s police force as “hopelessly corrupt.”

“A bribe was typically required in order for an investigation to be launched,” he said. “In fact, bribes were required to gain a job as a police officer.”

“One of the most lucrative jobs in Saddam’s Iraq was to be a traffic cop with the ability to arbitrarily pull over motorists and invent fineable offenses,” he said.

Hunzeker said that today’s Iraqi police force — with more than 200,000 trained policemen and women — is on its way to becoming its predecessor’s polar opposite.

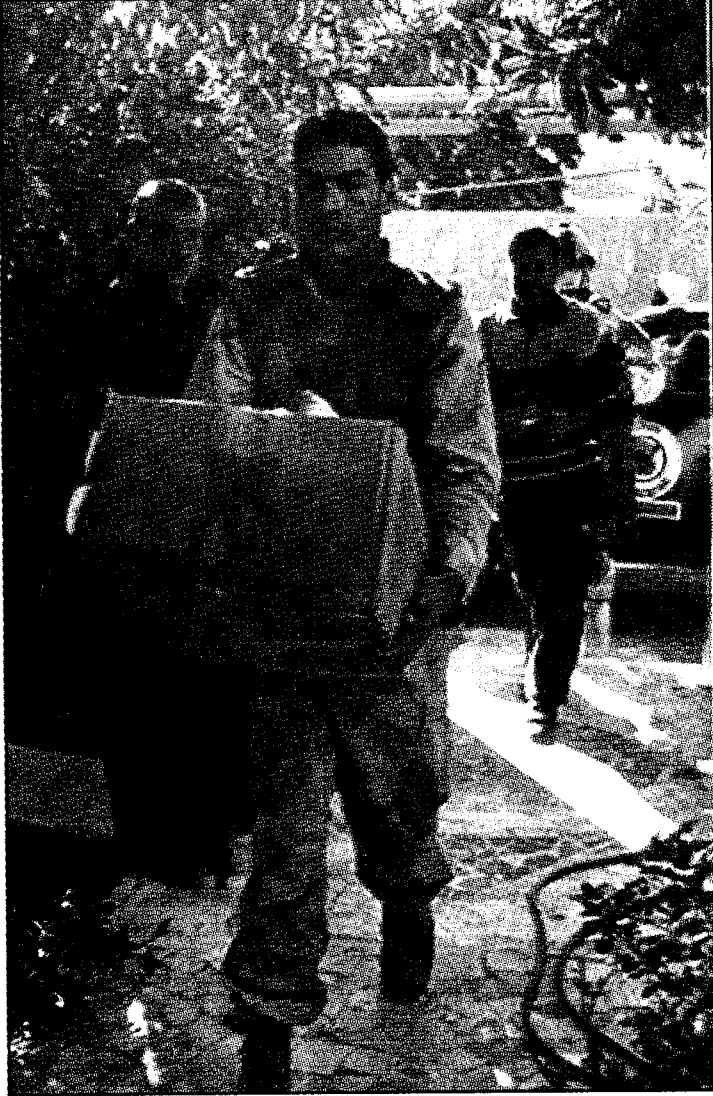

A week ago, Hunzeker visited the Numaniyah National Police Transition Training Academy with the National Police commanding general, Maj. Gen. Hussein.

“We watched battalions conducting operations in an urban setting, an exercise similar to the training American brigades go through at the U.S.-run combined readiness centers,” he said.

“This brigade will again be part of the Baghdad Security Plan after four weeks of training.”

“This kind of professional training was almost unthinkable just four years ago,” he said.

Training more mid- and senior-level management will also reduce the “unacceptably high levels of violence plaguing their nation,” Hunzeker said.

“We will be training mid- and senior-level within the (Ministry of Interior) and helping to put in place an Iraqi logistics and sustainment system.”

Hunzeker said that one way to help the Iraqi people is to “give them the tools to solve their nation’s problems. We have done that with the police,” he said.

“Perhaps no tool is more important to a burgeoning democracy than a well-trained police force capable of establishing the rule of law in Iraq and of protecting the Iraqi people,” he said.

New handbook helps Soldiers survive first 100 days in Iraq

Troops contribute lessons learned

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
Paul D. Prince

WASHINGTON — A new handbook on how Soldiers can survive their first 100 days in Iraq is now available at <https://call2.army.mil>, which requires a DoD user login.

“SoldierHandbook:Surviving Iraq,” was developed because of the increased casualty rate during the first 100 days of a unit’s deployment in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, said Col. Steven Mains, director of the Center for Army Lessons Learned at Fort Leavenworth, Kan.

The handbook includes tactics to avoid becoming complacent to potential dangers and to be mindful of resourceful enemies who closely observe U.S. tactics to adapt their attack strategies, said Mains.

The handbook is based on responses from more than 1,700 Soldiers — captains, lieutenants and Soldiers from the ranks of staff sergeant and below.

About 1,000 of the responses were taken from interviews with redeploying units in Kuwait and Soldiers at Fort Hood, Texas; Fort Carson, Colo., and Fort Stewart, Ga.

The Soldiers were asked questions about equipment, individual behavior, leadership and predeployment training.

“Our intention was to learn from the Soldiers what they thought contributed to their survival in Iraq,” said Milton Hileman, senior military analyst for CALL. “We asked them to focus their answers as if they were talking from one Soldier to another.”

The remaining responses came from a 23-question survey that CALL placed on its Web site.

“We were pleased with the responses we received from many of the Soldiers,” said Hileman.

“Several Soldiers came up to me after filling out the survey and said ‘Thank you for asking,’” said James Gebhardt, senior military analyst for CALL.

Troops recommended several tips, such as:

- stay aware of surroundings,
- listen to leaders,
- avoid developing routine or predictable patterns,
- follow standard operating procedures, and
- use protective gear and armored vehicles.

The handbook will be made available in paper format this month.

VA, FBI investigate missing hard drive in Birmingham

Could contain personal information of veterans

DEPARTMENT OF VETERANS AFFAIRS

WASHINGTON — The Department of Veterans Affairs announced last week that an employee reported a government-owned, portable hard drive used by an employee at a department facility in Birmingham, Ala. — and potentially containing personal information about some veterans — is missing and may have been stolen.

“I am concerned about this report,” said Jim Nicholson, Secretary of Veterans Affairs. “VA’s Office of Inspector General and the FBI are conducting a thorough investigation into this incident. VA’s Office of Information and Technology is conducting a separate review.”

“We intend to get to the bottom of this, and we will take aggressive steps to protect and assist anyone whose information may have been involved.”

The Birmingham VA Medical Center employee reported that an external hard drive was missing Jan. 22.

The hard drive was used to back up information contained on the employee’s office computer, and may have contained data from research projects the employee was involved in.

The employee also indicated the hard drive may have contained personal identifying information on some veterans, but asserts that portions of the data were protected. Investigators are still working to determine the scope of the information potentially involved. Upon notification that the hard drive was missing Jan. 23, the VA’s OIG opened a criminal investigation, sent special agents to the medical center and notified the FBI. VA’s Office of Information and Technology in Washington, D.C., also dispatched an incident-response team to investigate.

The OIG has seized the employee’s work computer and is in the process of analyzing its contents.

VA IT staff is providing technical support in this effort. Analyzing the work computer may help investigators determine the nature of the information the hard drive potentially contained. Pending results of the investigation, VA is prepared to send individual notifications and provide one year of free credit monitoring to those whose information proves compromised.

In addition to the ongoing criminal investigation, the OIG has initiated an administrative investigation to determine how such an incident could occur. VA will provide further updates as the investigation produces additional information.

“VA is unwavering in our resolve to be the leader in protecting personal information, and training and educating our employees in best practices in cyber and information security,” said Nicholson.

“We have made considerable progress, but establishing a culture that always puts the safekeeping of veterans’ personal information first is no easy task.”

“I have committed VA to achieving such reform — and we will.”

“This unfortunate incident will not deter our efforts, but it underscores the complexity of the task we have undertaken,” he said.

NEWS AROUND the ARMY

Campbell family wins national award

The Johnson family of Fort Campbell, Ky., were recognized as January's National Military Family Association Family of the Month. Each month, the NMFA chooses one family for the award. While Theresa Johnson's husband was deployed to Iraq, she and her three sons spent most of their time volunteering in more than 10 organizations and programs on Fort Campbell. The family received a $500 check and a $250 donation to the charity of their choice.

Scanner improves security

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., is using an ID card scanner called the CardVisor III-BC-Pro to improve security at the gates. The CardVisor can scan Department of Defense identification cards, U.S. driver licenses and other government IDs and checks it against databases stored in the reader. Before the ID card scanner, gate guards had to consult a printed list of about 800 names and found about six violators a year. Now, with the scanner, guards have identified 17 people barred from post.

Interns get 'green'

The Department of the Army Logistics Proponency Office hired 25 civilians out of 600 applicants to go through a 15- to 18-month career internship program. Part of that program, at Fort Lee, Va., includes the 11-week Basic Officer Leadership Course (Phase III) at the Quartermaster Center and School, along with second lieutenants. Immersing civilians into a military course designed for officers will teach them on the language, systems, organizational structure and culture of the quartermaster, said Ellen Savedge, Logistics Proponency Office director. The interns will partner with Soldiers and go through the training expected of second lieutenants.

Meth is 'most devastating drug there is'

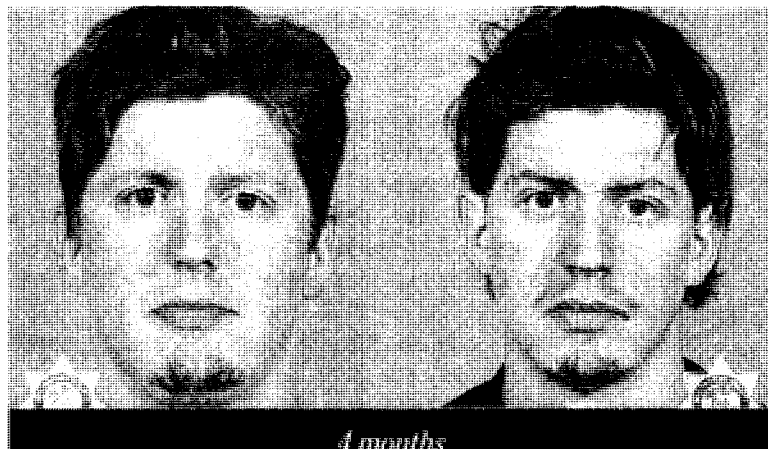

These photos of meth users were taken by police officers with the Portland, Ore., Multnomah County Sheriff's Office.

An estimated 10.4 million Americans 12 and older have used meth at least once, according to the National Survey on Drug Use. Meth can be in a powder, pill or crystal form. It can be smoked, snorted, injected or swallowed.

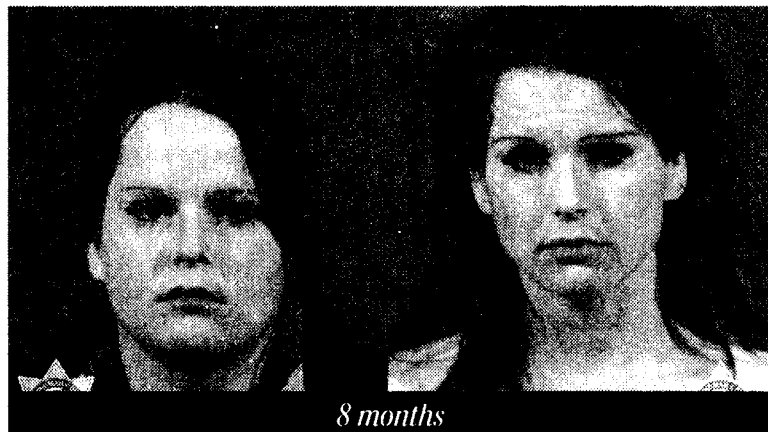

3 months of using methamphetamines

Meth causes a high by making the brain release large amounts of the chemical dopamine, which stimulates pleasure sensors in the brain. Users feel a sense of euphoria and heightened energy and awareness. Cocaine stimulates the brain to release dopamine, but meth is three times as powerful and the high lasts from 6 to 12 hours. The high is followed by a crash, making users feel depressed.

4 months

With repeated use, meth destroys the brain's supply of dopamine and kills the receptors that feel pleasure. This prevents a user from experiencing pleasure, a condition called anhedonia. Experts blame the destruction of dopamine receptors for meth's high-addiction rate, because users become biologically unable to feel pleasure without taking more of the drug.

8 months

Meth has devastating effects on the body, causing convulsions, elevated body temperature resulting in high fevers, increased rate of breathing, restricted blood vessels and increased blood pressure, which can cause permanent brain damage, strokes or death. The lining and valves of the heart can become infected. Skin loses its elasticity, so users appear years or decades older.

11 months

Addicts get paranoid and have delusions and hallucinations, like seeing "shadow people" and hearing voices. "Crank bugs" are common, when people believe they have bugs crawling under their skin. They scratch and pick until breaking the skin, causing sores all over their bodies. Poor hygiene often causes sores to get infected.

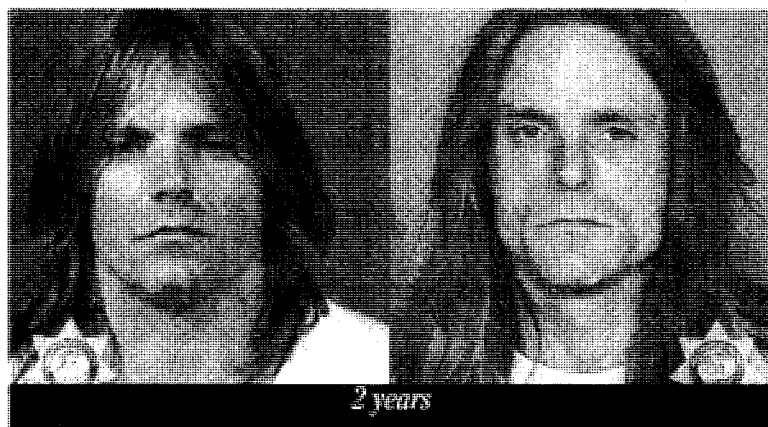

1 year

The chemicals in meth cause users to start smelling "like cat urine," according to the DEA. The teeth rot and fall out, because the saliva glands dry up, causing digestive acids to attack the teeth. Users are prone to grinding their teeth and have sugar cravings, which combine with poor hygiene to produce "meth mouth."

1 year, 5 months

Meth can cause anxiety, irritability, confusion, depression, violent behavior, fits of rage and aggression. Users can turn homicidal or suicidal. They become obsessive-compulsive about repetitive tasks. Users lose control of motor and verbal skills, develop heart irregularities, have kidney infections, and are plagued with vomiting, nausea, diarrhea and stomach cramps. They stop eating and sleeping.

2 years

Users become erratic and an increase in libido causes many to have risky sex. This tendency and IV drug use means many addicts contract HIV or hepatitis. Poor health and a damaged immune system makes HIV-positive meth users more likely to develop AIDS.

DEA to teach meth-awareness class on post

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

It's a drug that goes by many names — tina, crank, croak, crypto, ice, fire, glass, tweek, white cross, speed, crystal-meth, biker's coffee, methlies quick, poor man's cocaine, shabu, stove top, trash, yellow barn, go-fast, chicken feed, chalk.

But no matter what you call it, it destroys lives, said Deb Manning, director of training for Fort Benning's Army Substance Abuse Program.

"Meth is extremely scary, probably the most devastating drug there is," Manning said. "It's incredible the effects methamphetamines have on people. After just a few months of meth use, they're unrecognizable."

ASAP leaders want to bring greater awareness of the dangers, signs and effects of methamphetamines, said Yvonne Wilbanks, Alcohol and Drug Control officer with ASAP. So as part of an educational-outreach plan, ASAP is hosting a free, all-day workshop about methamphetamines from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Feb. 28 in Infantry Hall's Classroom 8.

An instructor from the Atlanta Drug Enforcement Agency will teach the class, focusing on topics such as the signs of meth addiction; the drug's biological effect on the body; the ingredients and manufacture of methamphetamines; the risks involved with meth labs; meth trafficking; and the dangers meth poses to children.

The class is open to anyone interested, and satisfies the Army's annual substance abuse training requirement.

The training is mandatory for unit prevention leaders. Commanders, key leaders and first sergeants are strongly encouraged to attend.

The class is also recommended for military, Department of Defense and civilian law enforcement personnel, firefighters, emergency medical technicians and first responders.

Part of the class is specially designed for first responders who are at risk any time they discover a meth lab.

"Your next-door neighbor could have a meth lab in their house," Manning said. "It's a big problem. Fumes and chemicals can leak out and affect people who have nothing to do with it."

Most meth labs have to be cleaned up by hazardous material teams, because the chemicals are so toxic, Manning said. Responders can be exposed to meth by breathing fumes or getting chemicals on their skin.

One pound of meth produces five to six pounds of toxic waste. The waste is so harmful that if it is poured onto the ground, the soil must be incinerated. It can cost from $5,000 up to $150,000 to clean up a meth lab. In Georgia, lab owners are liable for the cost.

There are large-scale meth labs that can produce methamphetamines for distribution, but there are small meth labs that can be located almost anywhere, from hotels to parks.

About 15 percent of labs are discovered because of fire or an explosion resulting from users combining and heating chemicals.

Although the West Coast and the Midwest still lead the country in meth use, the number of labs and users are on the rise in Georgia and especially Alabama, according to the DEA. In Alabama, meth is currently the biggest drug problem, according to the National Alliance for Model State Drug Laws.

Bringing the course to post is part of the ASAP's educational campaign to teach the community about the dangers of meth, Wilbanks said.

ASAP and the Army Dental Command have shown meth-prevention videos to 8,000 Soldiers and family members, Wilbanks said.

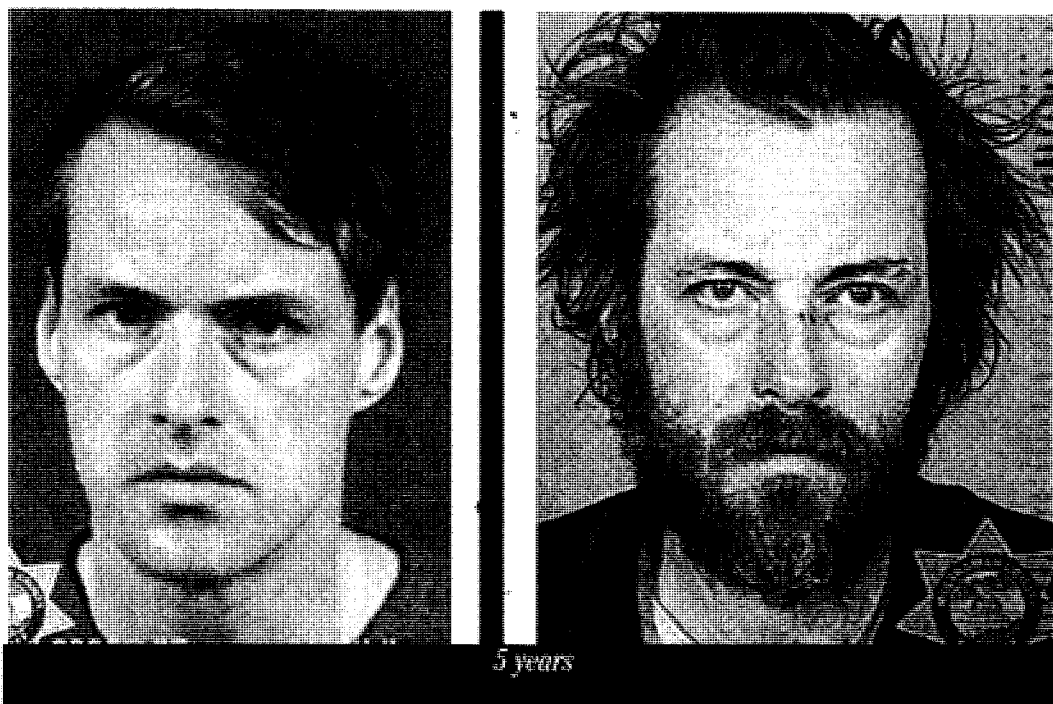

"We won't turn anyone away (from the class)," Manning said. "We want to teach as many people as we can about the dangers of meth, and teach key leaders the signs of meth-use. Meth is such a powerful drug. We need to raise awareness every way we can."

For more information or to register for the class, call 706-545-7027 or 706-545-1138. To learn more, informational videos, hand-outs and posters are available through the Army Substance Abuse Program.

Some common ingredients in meth include:

- battery acid • paint thinner • ether
- Freon • cold medicine • drain cleaner
- acetone (used in lacquer) • nail-polish remover • rock salt • lye (used in soap) • antifreeze • kitty litter • lithium batteries • iodine • toluene (used in airplane fuel and dye) • lighter fluid • ammonia • hydrochloric acid • phosphorus (used to make matchheads) •

For more information or to register for the class, call Fort Benning's Army Substance Abuse Program at 706-545-7027 or 706-545-1138.

5 years

Meth use can result in psychosis, heart failure, liver damage, fatal kidney and lung disorders, chronic depression, permanent brain damage, coma, strokes or death. The damage done to the brain is like that of Alzheimer's disease or a stroke. Sometimes brain receptors can grow back so recovering addicts will be able to experience pleasure and happiness again, but the process takes years and there is no way to know if the receptors will ever return.

Combat in Casetown

THE BAYONET
Master Sgt. Charles R. Evans

Soldiers with B Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, began the Urban Operation 2 portion of their basic training at the Casetown MOUT site on Sand Hill.

Under the watchful eyes of their instructors, they were led step by step through the procedures that will help them conduct operations on the constantly changing urban battlefield.

Pvt. Alexander Smith was enthusiastic about the squad drills.

"I'm still shaking. This is the fun part of training," he said.

Although they will continue to train when they reach their permanent party assignments, this is the first building block in their "Infantry wall," said Capt. Patrick Heim, the company commander.

"We try to impress on the Soldier that the modern battlefield is three dimensional," he said. "They can face threats from cellar, street or rooftop level. The bad guys can come from anywhere in a built-up urban environment."

Snipers, booby traps and IEDs can cause instant chaos in the close confines of a city where Soldiers are searching for the enemy, Heim said. Within seconds, a Soldier may be required to use his training in first aid, marksmanship, land navigation and battle drills.

"We try to have a subject matter expert for every period of instruction," said Sgt. 1st Class Quay Hix, a senior drill instructor. "This prevents repetition during training and lends the combat experience of our trainers."

Some of these Soldiers will go back to National Guard or Reserve units, but many of them will be in combat in a matter of weeks or months.

"Should they find themselves on the mean streets of an urban area in the future, they will be prepared to react to threats that they may encounter," Heim said.

Pvt. Albert Rosario, left, and Pfc. Bryan Mackay, fire a M-240 machine gun during squad drills. Laying down suppressive fire keeps the enemy from firing on Soldiers conducting clearing operations.

Sgt. 1st Class Quay Hicks, senior drill sergeant with B Company, 2nd Battalion, 54th Infantry Regiment, shows a Soldier how to hold a weapon properly.

Soldiers from B Company rush forward to assault a building at the Casetown MOUT site. Each Soldier in the team has a specific task to make the operation successful.

598th: Deploys to Iraq for one year

The unit stepped up training in preparation for the deployment, brushing up on equipment skills, convoy live fires, marksmanship, weapons training and warrior tasks.

They've also focused on lessons learned from other maintenance companies that are in Iraq or returned recently, Rogers said.

Chief Warrant Officer Joel Waugh deployed with the 598th in 2005. He will head a team of mechanics.

"I'm hopeful that everything will go all right," he said. "Most of us deployed together the last time and I know we work well together. During the year, I just want to keep my mind on my job, and provide service to our customers, the units. We need to keep on top to make sure their gear works so that they can go do their missions."

Waugh's daughter, 6-year-old Nicole, remembers her dad's last deployment, she said.

"I'm going to write him letters and I'll talk to him on the phone," she said. "My grandma is coming to help my mom, and I'll help too. I'm good at changing diapers."

Nicole will be helping with her baby brother, Alesio, born three weeks ago.

"It's not ideal timing for a deployment because of the baby, but at least I got to see him before leaving," Waugh said.

Not so for Pfc. Daniel Foreman. His wife, Sarah, is due with their first child in April.

"This is going to be hard," Sarah said. "A year is a long time."

Spc. Sunday Adeboye will

Pvt. Wayne Weers says goodbye to his wife, Marlena, and their daughter, Marissa, Feb. 1 as the Soldiers of the 598th Maintenance Company prepare to board buses to take them to Lawson Army Airfield. The unit will perform maintenance on vehicles and equipment at forward operating bases around Iraq.

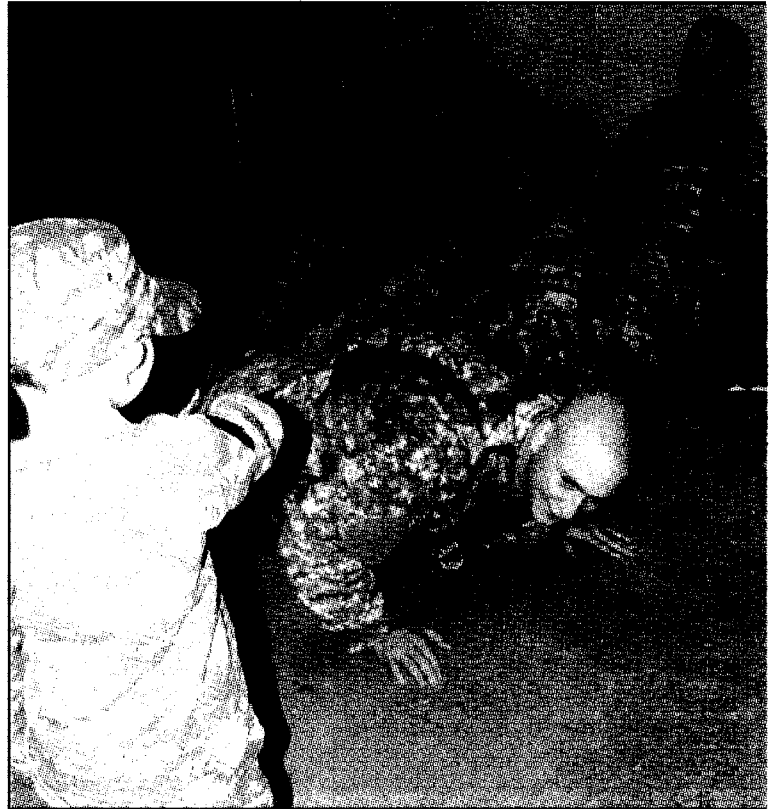

focus on his religious beliefs to help him during the year, he said. Adeboye, originally from Nigeria, joined the Army in 2003 to pursue his dream of becoming a chaplain. This will be his first deployment.

"I'll depend more on God to protect me than this gun or the body armor," Adeboye said. "I'm ready for it. I'm not going to fail."

Faith will also help Rogers, she said.

"I've said a lot of prayers that we don't get into a harmful situation, but if we do, that we come out on top," Rogers said.

"We have good people, and I'm sure they'll make good decisions if we're in a tight spot. We're all coming home. That's what I'm going to keep in my mind every single day. We're ready. It's time to put the game face on," Rogers said.

return — Victory Drive. For three decades, South Columbus grew up around Victory Drive.

Soldiers rented rooms in the massive Camellia Apartment complex just beyond the post's Main Gate or down the road a piece at Baker Village. Senior NCOs and officers built or bought homes in Oakland Park or Benning Hills.

They left their families there, went off to fight wars in Korea and Vietnam, and came back home to retire.

Their children attended Baker High School, that impressive three-story, red brick monolith on the corner of Victory and Benning Road.

It was built with federal money in 1943 to educate the children of Fort Benning Soldiers, and for many an Army brat in South Columbus, life revolved around Baker.

Reggie Richards was one of them. Her father, a three-war veteran, bought a house for his family in a cozy neighborhood off Victory Drive. South Columbus was in its heyday, no one had ever heard of magnet schools or charters, and racism was a problem other people dealt with.

"It was a big school, but we all knew each other. We were all military brats, our dads worked together, and we grew up together," Richards said. "We had a bond. We still do. That's why, when you run into people you knew at Baker High, you still ask, 'How's your mom? How's your little brother doing?'"

Baker High alumni have maintained strong bonds, Richards said, though they're spread throughout the country now.

They stay in contact through the Internet, mostly, and annual reunions.

From near and afar, they watched the slow demise of South Columbus. A transition began in the 80s, Richards said, when realtors turned their focus on North Columbus, where growth is still rampant.

And the military installation Richards loved as a child and later called home as an Army wife, is partly to blame.

"Fort Benning started to feed the problem," she said. "They told people the same thing — go north, don't settle in South Columbus. Don't buy or rent south of Macon Road. I'm not saying the demise of South Columbus was solely their fault. It's like the Titanic, a whole bunch of things went wrong. But part of the problem is perception, it's the stigma of South Columbus, and a lot of factors contributed to that."

While some businesses flourished — bars and strip-

— Reggie Richards, Columbus South Inc.

joints and the like — others closed up shop and moved north. Baker Village fell into serious disrepair, as did Camellia Apartments. Drive-bys and drug busts were frequent occurrences. From time to time, Fort Benning officials declared various establishments along Victory Drive off-limits to Soldiers. Aging, retired veterans, with their mortgages long since paid off, held on to their homes, bolted their doors and kept a wary eye on their neighbors.

Baker High closed in 1991, and Fort Benning fed high schoolers to Spencer High and eventually the various magnet programs throughout Muscogee County. The building became home to Baker Middle School for a few years, but that didn't last.

Certainly the problems weren't confined to Victory Drive. These days, the term South Columbus applies to 11.8 square miles of land from Victory Drive north to St. Mary's Road, west to Martin Luther King Boulevard.

The growth of Fort Benning and Victory Drive drove growth toward St. Mary's at one time. Like a plague, now, the poverty of South Columbus started on Victory and spread northward, also.

It looked like South Columbus would never be the same.

Then, just as slowly as before, the trend began to reverse. So slowly, in fact, that Richards can't pinpoint the moment or the plan or the project that turned the tide, and she's loathe to predict just how long it will take to recapture the glory of the South Columbus she once knew.

Maybe it started with the Civic Center or the construction of the ball complex, where the 1996 Olympic softball competition took place. Certainly the much-acclaimed Riverwalk had something to do with it, and the National Civil War Naval Museum, considered the gateway to South Columbus.

Those attractions are mostly clustered and located near the Chattahoochee River boundary of South Columbus. Here, there's a marked concentration of success, if success is measured by growth and revenue. But they're juxtaposed to a dilapidated housing project at the corner of Victory and Veterans Parkway, a reminder of how far this side of town has come, and how far it has to go.

Wherever and whenever it got its start, the resurrection of South Columbus got a shot in the arm — two, actually — with the construction of a new National Infantry Museum, which will open next year, and the advent, a year ago, of Columbus South Inc., the nonprofit agency tasked with overseeing the revitalization efforts.

Richards is the executive director of Columbus South, a named coined, perhaps, to forecast a turnaround in the fortunes of South Columbus.

Her parents still live in that house in Benning Hills. She's proud to be a Baker High alumna, and she still feels at home here, though some might say she stands out like a sore thumb.

A diminutive blonde with scholarly glasses that do little to add to the aura of age or authority, Richards is the minority in a sea of minorities.

Next week in The Bayonet: "People fight revitalization," said Reggie Richards, the executive director of Columbus South Inc.

"There's a lot of skepticism, here, but external forces are certainly our worst enemy. People don't believe we can change."

BENCH NOTES

ERIN NASH

Colts win Super Bowl XLI

The Indianapolis Colts beat the Chicago Bears, 29-17, in rain-drenched Super Bowl XLI in Miami, Fla., Sunday.

The Bears took an early lead with the kick off that was returned for a touchdown, but gradually Colts' quarterback Peyton Manning got into his groove and led his team to the win.

Colts' head coach Tony Dungy became the first African-American coach to win a Super Bowl.

Manning was named Super Bowl MVP, which was no surprise despite many others who deserved the accolade as well.

No points, but NASCAR just as well

NASCAR returns this weekend with non-points races. The first is the Budweiser Shootout at 8:30 p.m. Saturday on Fox. Thursday brings Gatorade Duel 1 at 2:10 p.m. and Gatorade Duel 2 at 3:40 p.m. Both duels are on the Speed channel. All three events are at Daytona International Speedway.

The first points race is the Daytona 500, and the season-opener. It will be broadcast at 2:30 p.m. Feb. 18 on Fox.

NFL heads to Hawaii

After a short week of rest, NFL's best of the best (according to the fans) will meet up in Hawaii for the Pro Bowl. Since the AFC dominated all year, and won the Super Bowl (thanks, Colts), I'm going with the AFC to whoop up on the NFC.

The San Diego Chargers have the most Pro Bowlers in the AFC and the Chicago Bears have the most in the NFC, minus Brian Urlacher, who had to withdraw because of a toe injury.

The Pro Bowl will be at 6 p.m. Saturday on CBS.

NCAA men's rankings

The Associated Press and the ESPN/USA Today polls have Florida in the top spot for NCAA men's basketball. UCLA follows in second, Ohio State in third, Wisconsin in fourth and North Carolina in fifth.

Favre's not done yet

Brett Favre made his decision early this year to return to the Green Bay Packers for his 17th season.

Favre didn't give any specific reason why he would return and didn't give any commitment beyond the upcoming season.

I'm sure Packers and Favre fans are relieved.

It will be good to see him back in action.

Around noon on Sunday, the smoked finally cleared.

The third annual U.S. Army Marksmanship Unit's Combat Pistol Championship proved to be far more successful than the first two, said Mike Behnke, competition chairman. The number of entries nearly doubled this year, with 130 participants as opposed to 69 shooters last year.

"We were really impressed with the turnout," he said.

Sgt. 1st Class Eric Leid, ROTC military science instructor at North Georgia College and State University, won the Commanding General's Marksmanship Cup title for the second year in a row.

"The bar was raised really high this year," Leid said. "There was a lot more talent, and the competitors seemed to take it more seriously, so I felt fortunate to get the win."

The fields consisted of shooters from various Fort Benning units, college ROTC cadets and three foreign army competitors who were allowed to compete but were not eligible for the cup. Auburn University and North Georgia College and State University fielded several teams.

Sgt. 1st Class Eric Leid won the Commanding General's Marksmanship Cup for the second year. Leid is an ROTC instructor at North Georgia College and State University.

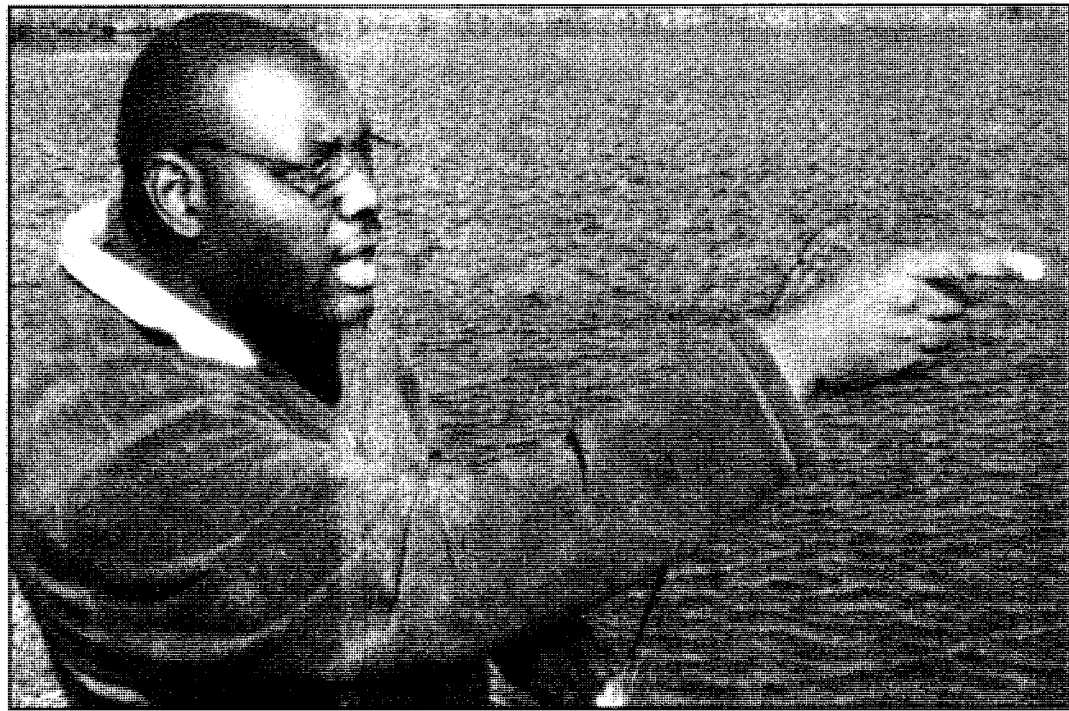

The individual competition matches were held all day Saturday, and team matches took place Sunday morning.

Individual matches included two classes — open, meaning former competitors, and novice, or first-time competitors.

Capt. Howard Rice, of the 11th Infantry Regiment, took first place in the open division, with a score of 144, and finished second overall for the CG Cup.

2nd Lt. Jules Patterson of C Company, 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, took first place in the novice division with a score of 137. Patterson finished third place overall.

Wilbert Davis cast a line into Twilight Pond just before noon on Monday.

"Man, we used to do PT runs around here," said Davis, a staff sergeant with the 3rd Brigade's Special Troops Battalion. "Those runs used to be serious."

Davis is one of five finalists chosen for the Win Your Own Fishing Show contest that will be broadcast on the Outdoor Channel.

During a Knology family picnic, Davis's wife, Antionette, noticed a tent where auditions for a fishing show were taking place.

"You used to fish, right?" she asked. He decided to humor her.

Patriots surrender close one

THE BAYONET

"This was a pretty tough one," said Charlie Conner after the Stryker Bradley Instructional Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, put away the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, Patriots in a quadruple overtime nail biter.

The SBIC leads the Santiago League with a record of 6-1. The Patriots drop to .500 at 3-3.

"Our chemistry is pretty good considering that we are all drill sergeants, so it can be kind of hard to get together and practice," said Richard Ross, of the 2/58.

"But we're getting stronger as the season has progressed."

Both teams traded buckets and played tight defense during the first half. SBIC's Joe Bailey netted two straight jumpers early in the second half.

Clayton Sheffield, of the 2/58, lit a fire late in the second by hitting a pair of clutch threes to help force overtime, tied at 44-44.

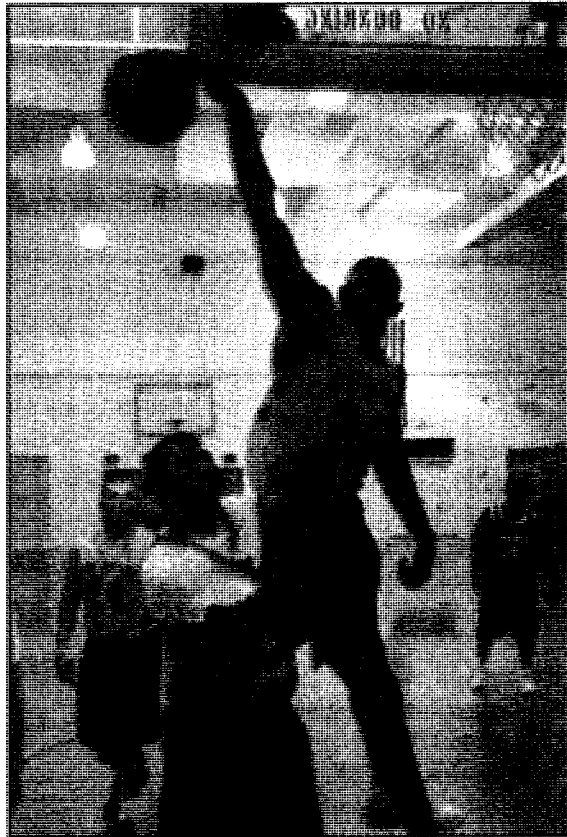

By the second overtime period, the teams showed wear. Both teams missed free throw shots late in the period that could have iced the game for their team.

SBIC's Lanny Wilson showed off his offensive arsenal, collecting 26 total points, and hit several clutch foul shots in the first overtime period.

"We just want to come out and play hard as a team," he said. "We're a well-rounded unit as a whole, and no one is bigger than the team."

The Patriots' Clayton Sheffield swished a clutch jump shot that tied the game, 58-58, forcing the third OT. It looked like the Patriots might break away when Mike Schwartz went inside to knock down a turnaround jumper inside to give them a 62-58 lead. Bailey drilled a jumper from the corner with four seconds left to tie the game 63-63, forcing a fourth overtime.

The fourth proved to be an endurance match. Both teams traded a few buckets but committed mostly lazy fouls, most likely because of exhaustion.

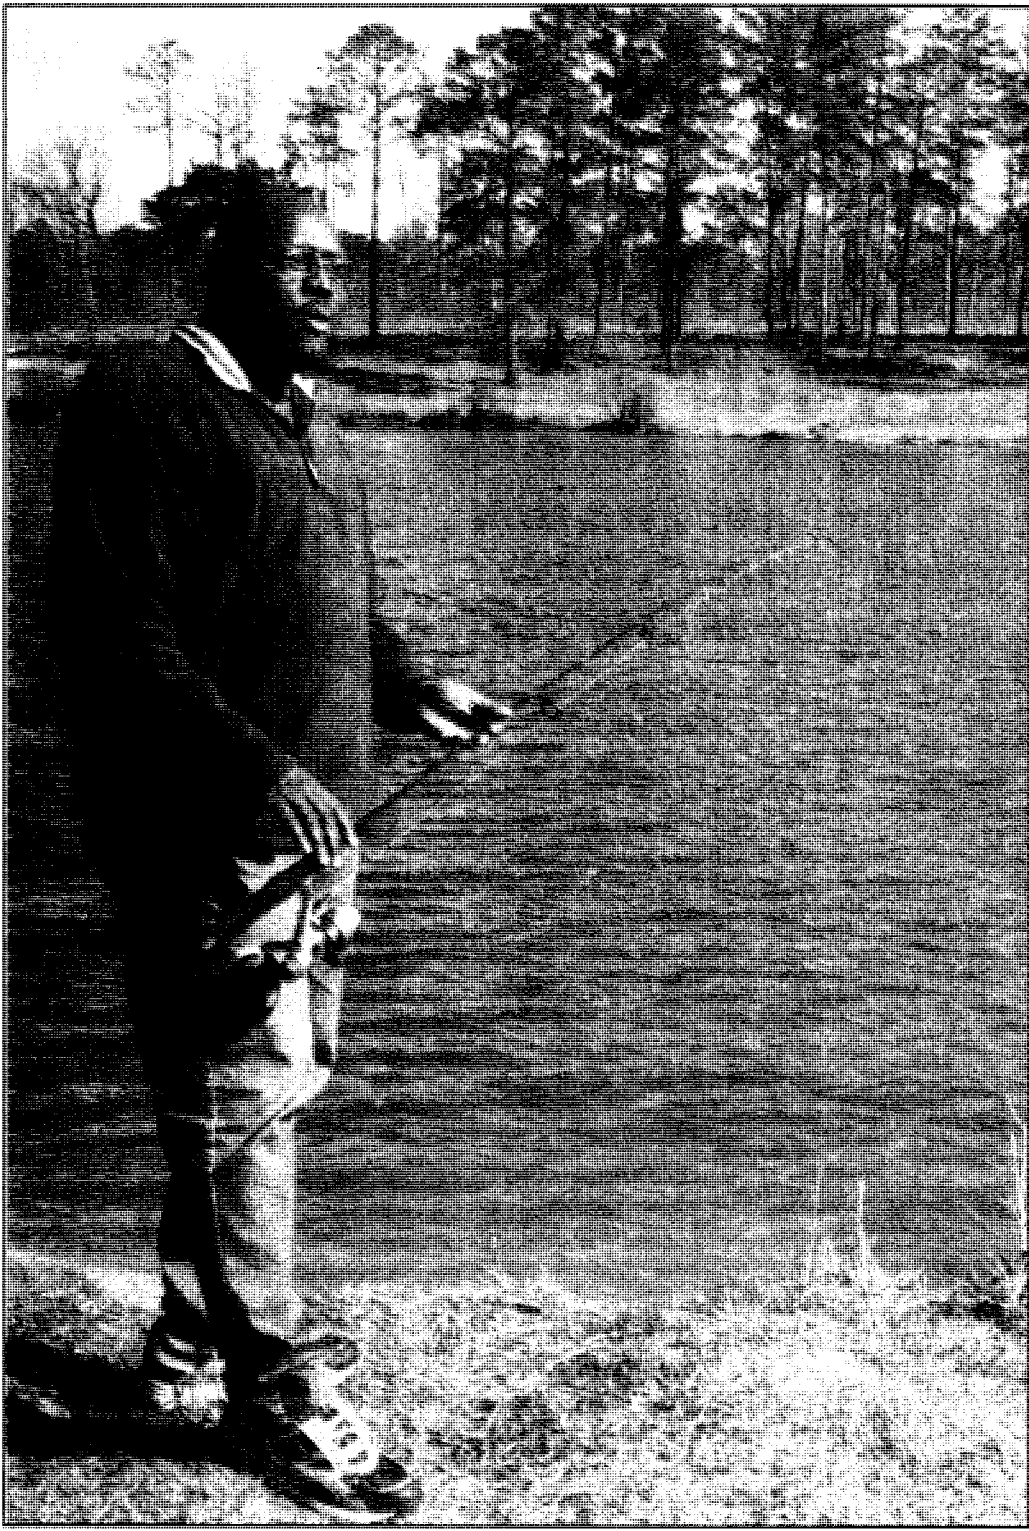

Mitchell Thomas IV

Randy Walker, of the 2nd Battalion, 58th Infantry Regiment, leaps over Thomas Ray of the Stryker Bradley Instructional Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, to block a shot in the first half of Tuesday's quadruple overtime thriller. The 2/58 team, falls to a record of 3-3 while SBIC holds on to first place in the Santiago Intramural Basketball League.

Davis: Could be selected to host new fishing show

Wilbert Davis tells one of his many fishing stories. He will be notified about the winner of the Win Your Own Fishing Show contest, which will be broadcast on the Outdoor Channel, Feb. 17.

"The next thing I know, I'm in front of a camera reminiscing about fishing with my old man and my family," he said.

Davis' father was a professional sports fisherman for the Eastern Atlanta Bassmasters. He spent many years fishing for sport as well as helping the family hone their fishing skills.

"My entire family used to fish," Davis said. "I used to listen to the stories and watch in awe as my dad won trophies."

Davis, father of two and grandfather of two, recalled memories of his own fishing experiences during his audition.

"I used to fish for salmon in Alaska. I'm talking about salmon the size of your leg," he said. "But there is something about bass fishing that gets you every time."

Davis, who said he's been told he has the gift of gab, received a letter a month later notifying him that he made it as a semifinalist. Soon after, he got the call he had been hoping for.

"It was, I think, a Friday and I was looking at my semifinalist letter on the refrigerator," he said. "At that moment, I received a call from Outdoor Channel telling me I was one of the finalists."

The North Carolina native said he is also proud to represent the Peach State.

"I've been here for about six years, and I'm proud to represent Georgia — not just Columbus, but all of Georgia," he said. "There are a lot of talented people doing all types of things in this city, and to have a chance to host my own national show gives me, as well as the city, a chance to shine."

Although he takes the sport of fishing seriously, Davis knows the importance of humor.

"I'm going to be calm and cool and talk straight from the hip," he said. "If you see something funny like me accidentally hooking myself while casting, please laugh. Fishing is made to be enjoyed."

Davis said he is a family man first and foremost and he plans to incorporate the element of family into the show if he wins.

"I can't wait to take my youngest daughter fishing. I want her to see the sheer enjoyment of the sport," he said. "I want people to appreciate the calmness that fishing brings and enjoy the quality time that I used to enjoy with my brothers as a kid."

Davis is waiting to see whether the winner

I've been here for about six years, and I'm proud to represent Georgia — not just Columbus, but all of Georgia. There are a lot of talented people doing all types of things in this city, and to have a chance to host my own national show gives me, as well as the city, a chance to shine.

receives a pilot episode or an actual series.

"I'm not sure what they are planning, but if they're going to make a series out of this, I would enjoy retiring early," said Davis, a 25-year veteran who is expected to retire from the military in July 2009.

Davis spread the word to anyone and everyone he knows about the possible show chance to get as many people as possible to cast votes. Voting for the contestants ended Thursday.

"It's exciting to see how people respond when they find out that I might be on TV."

The anticipation about the results is probably one of the hardest parts of the process, Davis said. His waiting will end Feb 17, when the winner is announced.

As for Antionette, she has high hopes, but she's skeptical.

"Can you really fish?" she asked her husband. "We have been together for 13 years and you ain't been fishing yet."

"I can show you better than I can tell you," he replied.

He may get his chance to prove it to her, as well as millions of viewers around the country.

Shooters: Compete for Commanding General's Marksmanship Cup

"I tell you, some of the novices were better than some of the more experienced open competitors," Benkhe said.

Leid took first place in the open division with a score of 155.

Cadet Neil Sookdeo, of North Georgia College, took the novice division with a score of 155.

In team play, North Georgia College and State University's team, Boars' Head, lead by Leid, snatched first place easily with a composite score of 786 points, while the A Company, 1st Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, team took second with a total of 678.

"I feel lucky to have been able to work in a field where I can take this sport that I love and teach young people who need these skills," said Leid, who is also North Georgia College's pistol teams' coach. "Marksmanship is one of the few skills that I took to naturally."

To qualify for entry competition, shooters were required to complete a marksmanship class.

"We talk about the basics of the pistol. We let them do some dry firing to test the gun, and then we give them actual bullets so that they can practice," Behnke said.

The Beretta M-9, the official military sidearm, is the pistol used in the competition.

"A pistol will only be used to get to the next rifle in actual combat, but it is important to know how to properly use it," Behnke said.

Each participant received a certificate for advanced pistol marksmanship after the competition. Some of the cadets received class grades for their performance.

Some entrants experienced difficulties during the competition.

"My gun broke, but they allowed me to shoot again," said Cadet Amira Rubiaan, of North Georgia College and State University. "It happens."

Behnke said it happens all the time.

"On the battlefield, guns break and you have to recover from it," he said.

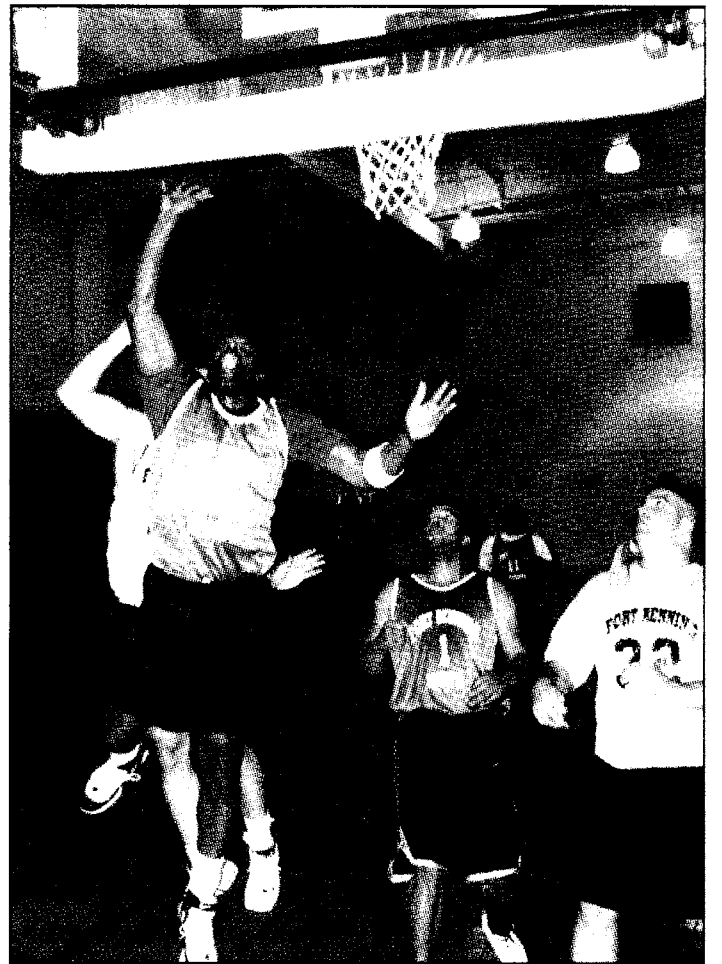

"The thing is, here in this contest, you can just go back to the bunker and get another one."

Amira Rubiaan, an ROTC Cadet at North Georgia College and State University, views her shooting results and tallies her scores after an individual match.

I feel lucky to have been able to work in a field where I can take this sport that I love and teach young people who need these skills.

— Sgt. 1st Class Eric Leid

SBIC, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment's Charlie Conner hits a layup to help give his team a win Tuesday night.

Close one: Ends in quadruple overtime

SBIC's Willie Devueax hit the deciding free throws with only 20 seconds left.

"We came back after four overtimes and that feels good," he said. "We just continued to keep hustling."

In Santiago League play, A Company, 1st Battalion, 29th Infantry Regiment, defeated 1st Battalion, 50th Infantry Regiment, 63-56, while the 30th Battalion, Adjutant General (Reception) came up short to the 3rd Battalion, 330th Infantry Regiment, 58-62.

In the Audie Murphy league, E Company 1st Battalion, 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, breezed past the 63rd Engineer Battalion 77-55; the 14th Combat Support Hospital knocked off 4th Ranger Training Battalion, 45-32; and the U.S. Army Medical Activity grabbed their first win of the season by defeating the winless CONUS Replacement Center, 45-37.

Veteran driver set to make debut in Army Chevy

New Army driver has been racing in Shootout event since 1982

U.S. ARMY RACING

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Mark Martin's appearance in Saturday night's Budweiser Shootout at Daytona International Speedway will be his record-extending 19th consecutive start and 20th overall. The all-star event will also mark his debut for Ginn Racing in the No. 01 U.S. Army Chevrolet.

"It's going to definitely be a big day for us," said Martin. "We've raced in a lot of Shootouts and we won the deal in '99, but this year we'll be making our debut with Ginn Racing and our debut with the U.S. Army in the No. 01 Chevrolet.

"We'll be able to see what we have right off the bat. I'm excited about getting back on the track and kicking off Speedweeks and the season in the Shootout.

"The Budweiser Shootout is one of those events where points don't matter and second place means nothing, so you have everyone out there really going for it all and trying to get the win," Martin said.

"We were able to hang on and win it in '99 and we had a pretty strong run last season. This year it will be my first race with Ryan (Pemberton, crew chief) and the guys on the 01 team," Martin said.

Martin's first Shootout — Feb. 7, 1982 — had historical significance for the long-running NASCAR all-star race.

The Batesville, Ark., native became the first rookie to qualify for the event after winning his first Cup pole in only his third career start on July 11, 1981, at Nashville International Raceway.

Martin would actually go on to capture two poles in 1981, despite running in only five races.

He finished eighth in the 1982 Shootout (then called the Busch Clash) behind the wheel of the No.

Courtesy photo
Mark Martin, right, and Regan Smith are co-drivers of the No. 01 U.S. Army Chevrolet. Martin will debut with Ginn Racing Saturday during the Budweiser Shootout at Daytona International Speedway.

02 Buick.

Martin has amassed 41 career poles — a large reason for his 19 Shootout starts. He'll start this year's Shootout via a former winner's provisional, a right he earned when he held off Ken Schrader to win the 1999 event.

After the 1982 Shootout, Martin did not compete in the event again until 1989, but the veteran driver has not missed the event since.

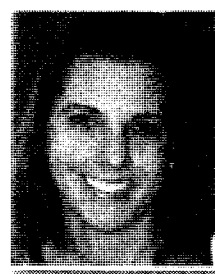

In 19 starts in the Budweiser Shootout, Martin has an average finish of 7.58. He finished seventh in the event a year ago.

"I just can't wait to get on the track and get this season kicked off with the Shootout," said Martin. "I can't remember being this excited heading into a season in a long, long time.

"We really have a big challenge ahead of us and we just can't wait to get going on the race track and prove to everyone that we are for real and that we fully intend to run well and compete this season," he said.

NASCAR rolls into new season with big changes

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

I can proudly say I'm going into my third full year of being a diehard NASCAR fan. I've learned a lot about NASCAR, but NASCAR likes to keep changing to try to confuse me. But I'm up to speed on what's new for NASCAR this season.

The biggest change has to be the inclusion of Toyota cars. Camrys, to be exact. Toyota joined the Craftsman Truck Series in 2004, and in 2006 driver Todd Bodine won the championship driving a Toyota Tundra.

Bill Davis Racing will have Toyota drivers Jeremy Mayfield and Dave Blaney. Team Red Bull will have drivers Brian Vickers and A.J. Allmendinger. Michael Waltrip Racing will have drivers Michael Waltrip, David Reutimann and Dale Jarrett. Jarrett will still have the UPS logo, but his number will change from No. 88 to No. 44.

There's also been shifting of numbers and drivers. Mark Martin formerly drove the No. 6 for Roush Racing. Now he'll be in the No. 01 Chevrolet Army car with Ginn Racing for at least part of the season. Joe Nemechek, who used to race in the 01, will now drive the No. 13 for Ginn Racing.

Ricky Rudd, who said he never retired before last season, is back in the driver's seat for either the No. 88 or No. 28 for Robert Yates Racing. Rudd will be the oldest full-time competitor in the Nextel Cup Series at the ripe old age of 50.

A couple of other quick notes on drivers and their numbers — Elliott Sadler will drive the No. 19 Dodge for Evernham Motorsports and Casey Mears will be in the No. 25 Chevrolet for Hendrick Motorsports.

A new face to the Nextel Series is former Formula 1 star Juan Pablo Montoya. Montoya will drive the No. 42 Dodge for Chip Ganassi Racing. Though he has minimal stock car experience, he is expected to do fairly well.

Besides new drivers and new numbers, NASCAR is unveiling what they call the "Car of Tomorrow," that features a bolted-on wing on the rear deck lid instead of a traditional spoiler, a "splitter" on the front end that will give the car more front downforce and a wider, taller and boxier body, according to the 2007 Sporting News NASCAR Preview. The roll cage is two inches taller and four inches wider and is expected to increase safety.

The Car of Tomorrow will be used by all drivers in 16 races this season. The first will be March 25 at Bristol Motor Speedway. I'm excited to see what it looks like and how it affects the drivers and how they race, although it still sounds like something you'd see at Disney World at the Land of Tomorrow.

Also changing, (almost done, I promise) are the channels NASCAR races will be broadcast on. Fox will broadcast the first 13 races, TNT will show the next six and then ESPN the next six, beginning with the Allstate 400 at the Brickyard July 29. ABC will broadcast the remaining races through the end of the season. ESPN broadcast NASCAR for 20 years but ended it 2001. Guess America's most popular sport got them back on the bandwagon.

Finally, just announced was the decision by NASCAR to make the final 10 races, also called the Chase, a 12-car pursuit instead of 10. All 12 drivers in the Cup Chase will reset points to 5,000 to make it fair.

The lead-up to the beginning of the season begins this weekend with Budweiser Shootout at 8:30 p.m. on Fox. It's a non-points event but hey, it's NASCAR, right? Thursday will bring the Gatorade Duels 1 and 2 at 2:10 and 3:40 p.m., respectively on the Speed Channel. The events will culminate with the Daytona 500 at 2:30 p.m. Feb. 18 on Fox.

Enjoy the 2007 NASCAR season. My favorites to win big this year are Tony Stewart, Jimmie Johnson, Matt Kenseth, Dale Earnhardt Jr. and Kevin Harvick. Maybe a rookie will break out big like Denny Hamlin did last season.

Regardless, it's NASCAR, and it's back — I'm happy.

Players selected at tryouts will be invited to attend selection camp that will be every Saturday in March. The post team will be selected at the end of March and will begin its season in the Columbus Parks and Recreation Spring Industrial League.

For more information, call Sgt. Maj. Tom Siter at 706-575-8960 or Master Sgt. John Lowthorpe at 229-649-1708 or visit the Web site www.fortbenningmenssoftball.com.

HUNTING SEMINARS

Joe Drake, world and national turkey calling titles holder, will host three free hunting seminars at Uchee Creek Lodge. The seminars will be Feb. 27 "Getting Comfortable With Your Own Turkey Call," March 6 "Advanced Turkey Calling Techniques," and March 13 "Turkey Hunting Strategies, Safety and Hunting Ethics."

All seminars begin at 7 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

For more information, call 706-545-7978.

RED CROSS SWIM CLASSES

Briant Wells Indoor Pool will have American Red Cross Learn to Swim classes through March 1.

This will be the first of three sessions held at the indoor pool prior to summer.

Parent and Tot classes will be from 11 to 11:45 a.m. on Tuesday and Thursday; Preschool and Level 1 classes will be from 4 to 4:45 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

All classes are taught by certified Water Safety Instructors.

The cost for classes is $35 per session and all registration will be taken at the American Red Cross office, Building 2626 in Soldiers' Plaza.

For more information on this session and sessions to follow, call 706-545-5194.

INTRAMURAL SOCCER AND VOLLEYBALL MEETING

There will be a coaches' meeting for CC Unit Level volleyball and soccer March 8 at the Doughboy Sports Office.

The volleyball meeting is at noon and the soccer meeting is at 12:30 p.m.

Soccer competition will be six versus six or 11 versus 11 (depending upon the number of participants).

Coaches must bring their alpha roster to the meetings. Tournaments for both sports begin March 12 and league play starts March 26.

For more information, call the MWR Sports department at 706-545-4592 or visit the MWR Web site at www.benningmwr.com.

Call of the wild: Turkey calling contest, Fisharama, Turkeyrama in Perry

Calling contest 'one of toughest competitions anywhere'

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

The Georgia Wildlife Federation's 16th annual Fisharama and Turkeyrama and the Realtree Grand America Turkey Calling Contest is today through Sunday at the Georgia National Fairgrounds in Perry.

The show will feature various vendors, inventors and merchandisers promoting their products.

Most of the vendors target hunters, fisherman and gun enthusiasts, said Doug Rithmeyer, show director.

The event will also include a new Conservation Connection to highlight local hunting and fishing spots and sport fishing projects.

There will be educational booths for sportsmen, as well as an area for those interested in improving their turkey and quail hunting skills.

"The entire event is for sportsmen by sportsmen," Rithmeyer said. "We want to educate, promote and also encourage fund-raising that will benefit the environment."

The event is not just for the sportsmen. There are numerous activities set up so that family members can get in on the festivities.

There will be archery ranges, BB gun ranges and a kid's line-casting contest in which the winner will receive a new boat.

"We encourage sportsmen to bring their families, especially the kids," he said. "With so many activities there is something for everyone here."

Another highlight of the weekend is the Realtree Grand America Turkey Calling contest.

"This is one of the toughest turkey calling competitions anywhere," said Joe Drake, last year's runner-up. "You have to practice everyday for hours and hours and hours or you won't win. Lot of people think this is just a silly event but those who take it seriously know the truth."

Drake has been doing turkey calling since the early '80s and has won numerous call contests all over the South.

"I'm the old man in the game," he said.

Rithmeyer said there will be lots of new call makers for all of those who want to see and learn something new about the sport.

There will be $10,000 in prize money awarded, including a first place prize of $3,000.

"The contest is so popular, and it tends to bring the best out of everyone," Drake said. "I'm looking forward to the challenge."

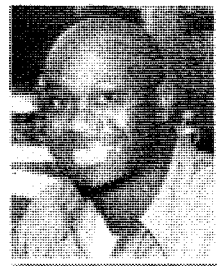

Both events will be held on the Georgia National Fairgrounds. For more information or more directions, go to www.gwf.org or call 478-988-6600.

The game was a snoozer, but my predictions were dead-on

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

My phone is back on, so make your calls and say thanks, or "You're right Mitchell."

Seriously though, I can't believe that I was on the money in just about every facet of the Super Bowl.

The first play nearly broke all of my predictions and threw off the entire point spread in Vegas in one fell swoop. The funny thing is, just seconds before Devin Hester returned a 92-yard kick-off for a touchdown, the first ever in a Super Bowl, I told my dad and brother, "Watch this return. It could go the distance."

The first quarter was sloppy, to say the least. Turnover after turnover showed the rust and nervousness of both teams early on. I knew that the last thing the Colt's leading man, Peyton Manning, needed to do was go three and out after a touchdown on the initial drive. He threw a pick on a third down that I'm sure made his allegiance nervous.

The ever calm and collected Manning recovered shortly after by finding a wide open Reggie Wayne for their first touchdown.

The Bears momentum was shattered when Gabriel Reid fumbled on the kick-off immediately following Wayne's TD.

Pretty much everything went downhill for the Bears late in the second quarter. They have an end zone allergy, obviously, because they never came close again with the exception of a mere field goal.

Halftime was the moment that 80s music fans were waiting for. Prince stepped on the stage chanting a trimmed down version of the familiar prayer intro of Lets Go Crazy.

As usual, he was adorned in his signature purple tailored for his 2-foot frame. My thing was, why keep on the bandana? How much rain did it really ward off?

I know his hair is probably insured for $1 million per lock, but he just looked silly. He went through a few signature songs and a couple of covers that really got on my nerves. Look man, you have too many hit songs to be performing Proud Mary. But anything beats Cowboy Troy's performance two years prior.

By the second half, I don't know, it just seemed like the wind was sucked out of the stadium. Maybe it was just me. The Bears proved to be very little challenge in the second half.

The Bears held the ball nearly half as much as the Colts. Rex Grossman just couldn't stay on the field. In last week's Bayonet, I wondered which Colts' defense would show up. The defense proved to be outstanding and reminiscent to last year. They held the Bears to only three passing first downs, forced them to fumble on four occasions and only allowed them to convert three of 10 on third down.

I admit it, even though I'm an avid football fan, my eyes got heavy in the fourth quarter, and I found myself waking up to Tony Dungy's speech holding the Lombardi trophy.

With all the history and mystery, the 41st big game proved to be mediocre at best. I know my predictions are usually pretty accurate, but I was expecting to have to argue my point on some level. Sorry, I didn't and don't. Pat me on the back, thanks.

Even the overly-hyped commercials were horrid. The funniest ones happened to occur early in the first quarter. There were a few rodents that were rubbing one of their furry friends back and forth trying to emulate a computer mouse.

Also, the Budweiser one with the guys slapping each other in the face as a greeting had me imagining what guys were doing at that exact time in bars around the world.

All in all, this game held points of merit, but proved to be a weak ending to a pretty decent NFL season.

As for next year, can the Colts defend their title? More than likely, especially if the defense remembers that tackling is their job, not watching runners put on clinics.

We'll see, that is, if I can stay awake.

Dogs have their day at 131st Westminster Dog Show

ZAP2IT
George Dickie

Hard as it is to believe, neither the golden retriever nor the Labrador retriever has ever won Best in Show at Westminster.

"And they're America's dogs," says David Frei, expert analyst for USA Network, which broadcasts the 131st Westminster Kennel Club Dog Show live from New York's Madison Square Garden Monday and Tuesday.

"You know, the Lab is the No. 1 dog in registrations for the last 17 years," he said. "The golden was No. 2 for the longest time, and this year they slipped to No. 4 or something like that ... why don't they win Best in Show at Westminster? Well, who knows? I think it's just a matter of mathematics, probably."

"We've only given Best in Show 99 times since 1907, so the odds are with 165 breeds and varieties, if we have any repeats somewhere, more than half of the dogs' breeds have never won a Best in Show at Westminster. And that's OK. Everybody will have their chance."

They, indeed, will once again have their chance this year as more than 2,600 dogs from 48 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and five other countries take up temporary residence at the New York arena in pursuit of the coveted title. California (283 entries) and New York (253) once again lead the way in total dogs entered, and there are no new breeds for the 2007 show.

Frei, the director of communications for the Westminster Kennel Club, has a few dogs he's keeping his eye on at this year's show, including the No. 1 dog in the country, a Dandie Dinmont terrier named Champion Hobergays Fineus Fogg.

"The dog was actually imported from Australia," he said, "and is co-owned by one of the great terrier people, a lady named Jean Heath and her longtime dog show partner, a guy named Bill Cosby. So they've had great dogs here for a lot of years at Westminster ... and it was the No. 1 dog in the country, all breeds, and is actually the only Dandie Dinmont entered this year, which is a little odd. But, you know, maybe they see the paw prints on the wall in the breed.

"There's a great springer spaniel out there (Champion Felicity's Diamond Jim) that has been doing a lot of winning. He's the No. 2 dog in the country. The No. 3 dog in the country was a beautiful boxer from Texas. There's another terrier, a Sealyham terrier, was the No. 4 dog in the country. And the toy poodle was the No. 5 dog in the country."

"You know, certainly those five dogs are all dogs to watch, but I think anything that's in the top 10 in terms of stats is the dog that's going to have some attention because it's got some notoriety — it's been to a lot of dog shows and a lot of people have seen it. If they've won like that, they're probably a pretty good specimen of the breed."

But statistically speaking, the No. 1 dog wins Best in Show only about half the time at Westminster, according to Frei, with others coming from the top 10 and still others coming from further out.

"I know Carlee two years ago, I don't think she was even in the top 50 dogs all-breed when she went Best in Show here," Frei said of the German shorthaired pointer whose registered name is Champion Kan-Point's VJK Autumn Roses, "and she went Best in Show by putting on a magnificent performance at the right moment and just turning the crowd on and obviously turning the judge on and just performing in a way that was deserving of the win."

Conversely, a top-ranked dog having a bad day can find itself on the outside looking in.

"Because of the level of competition," Frei said, "because it's the one time that everybody's watching you — you know, dogs are not on every day. They're like athletes. Michael Jordan didn't score 40 points every time out. Maybe a dog's having a bad day. If he's a dog that doesn't like hearing 20,000 screaming people, he's going to have a tough time at Westminster ... if you're not having your divine moment of inspiration during your two minutes in front of the judge, then you may as well head back to the hotel because it's over."

Spc. Derrick Hobbs wears this ring to signify his pledge to remain abstinent until he marries.

True Love Waits

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Derrick Hobbs has a plan. It's God's plan. The 27-year-old specialist, a chaplain's assistant at The Infantry Center Chapel, wears a ring on his right hand to signify a commitment he made eight years ago to adhere to the biblical plan of purity. He's a virgin, and he'll stay that way until he marries.

"Wow. I think that's the reaction I get most often," said Hobbs, a native of Chatsworth, Ga. "I was blessed to be raised in a Christian home where I was taught that it's God's plan for us to wait. I saw some of my friends — the guilt that came over them after they made bad decisions. I saw what it did to them."

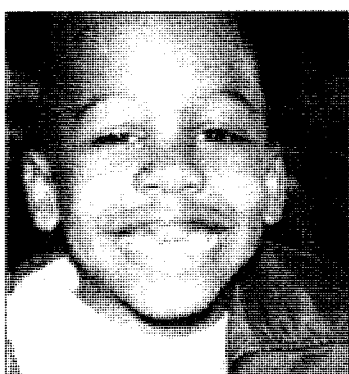

Call it an abject lesson. Hobbs watched his friends succumb to temptation and come away from the experience feeling disappointed, confused, guilty, unclean and unworthy of God's love. He credits his willpower to the sound teachings of his parents and a youth pastor well versed in the curriculum of True Love Waits, an international campaign that challenges teens to remain sexually abstinent until marriage. Hobbs' parents gave him his purity ring during a True Love Waits rally his senior year in high school.

Paige Paquette is 35. Like Hobbs, she waited. And waited and waited. She married Steve Paquette, the director of Fort Benning's Club Beyond, two years ago.

"I can't say exactly when I made the commitment to stay pure, but I was very young. Of course, I thought I'd be married when I was 24, not 34," she said. "I've had kids say, 'No way. There's no way a person can stay pure until they get married.' I say, 'I did it, and I can tell you it was worth it.'"

But it wasn't easy. When Paige was growing up in Greensborough, Ala., she didn't wear a purity ring like

LOVE is ... kids' stuff

Love means never having to say you're sorry. — Eric Segal

Forget love — I'd rather fall in chocolate! — Sandra J. Dykes

Love stinks. — J. Geils Band

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Maybe love is simply a matter of perspective. Ten students from Loyd Elementary School shared their thoughts on the subject last week with The Bayonet.

Our panel included first-graders Kael Christensen, 7, Hailey Grooms, 6, Kayla Marisin, 6, and Rajea Money, 7, who lost a tooth earlier in the day, a subject he found far more interesting than love.

Aziza Coleman, 9, and Janzen Cady, 7, are second-graders. Janzen's brother Jaden, 9, was a third-grade panelist, along with Amber Ramirez, Jamie Pipes and Tykea Mickens, all 8 years old.

We broached the subject of love with a reference to Valentine's Day. The panelists seemed to have a fair grasp on the meaning behind the holiday.

"It's about loving each other, caring about each other and, um, that's about it," Rajea said. "I don't know anything else."

"I do," said Hailey. "Valentine's is about loving and sharing. You give people get-well cards."

Hmmm, does love make one sick? She seemed to think so.

"People hold hands when they're in love," she said. "They kiss. It's gross."

Janzen agreed. "That's what I was thinking," he said. "It's gross."

The students were far more comfortable with the subject of Valentine's Day. They've been around long enough to know how it works.

"You're supposed to give Valentines to the people you love," said Amber, who will give cards to all her classmates.

"They're all my friends," she said. "I love them."

Tykea had been on the receiving end of a Valentine's card from a boy in her class who loved her. He was "one of those boys who got in trouble a lot," she said.

— Jamie Pipes, 8

The situation was embarrassing, Tykea said. She wouldn't look at the boy.

Jamie thought she should have taken a stronger stand.

"You should send him candy and a Valentine's card saying 'I don't feel the same way about you.'"

Janzen disagreed.

"No," he said. "If you don't like him, just stay away from him."

Rajea liked the candy idea better.

"You should give candy, but only if you really, really care," he said.

Why it's called St. Valentine's Day no one knew, but Amber was willing to hazard a guess.

"I think he was probably a man who gave Valentines to all the children when they were asleep," she said. "Probably he wore red clothes."

"That's Santa," Jaden said.

However it started, the holiday has evolved, much like Christmas. Now, friends share gifts with friends on Valentine's Day.

"One year," Aziza said, "my friend gave me a teddy bear and candy."

What do teddy bears have to do with love?

"They're really soft and cuddly, like love is," said Tykea, who isn't nearly

'Dear Reva, I love you'

Couple credits togetherness for keeping love alive

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Roy Brooks met Reva Ash before his senior year of high school in Akron, Ohio. The year was 1931.

Reva said he followed her home one day, but that's not the way Roy remembers it. He said he noticed her while delivering newspapers. He also noticed there were others who noticed Reva.

"She had two or three boys ahead of me," he said. "I had to cut in there."

They dated for a while, Roy and Reva, but mostly in groups. Their minds were on school. Roy wasn't cut out for football, but he made a fine cheerleader. In those days, the cheerleading squad was all boys. Occasionally, Reva earned a quarter babysitting or Roy got paid for shoveling ash from a neighbor's basement, and the two went on a real date.

"We'd go to a movie or get a milkshake," Reva recalled. "If we had a quarter, we were rich. Movies were a nickel back then."

as repulsed by the subject as her classmates seemed to be. Tykea likes two boys. She's too young for love, but she's learned a thing or two about it through literature. Her favorite love story?

"My sister's diary," she said.

Jamie thinks her parent's love story is the greatest love story of all time.

"It's really sweet," she said. "Dad liked Mom, but Mom didn't notice him, so he'd bring her sodas and things."

Eventually friends intervened, Jamie said, and her mom "noticed" her dad. But they took their time getting to know each other.

"I think that's smart," she said. "It's important to find the right one, because marriage is forever and all eternity."

Jamie said she'll follow her parents' example when she gets married — "probably in twenty years."

"I think you should ask your parents for advice about these kind of things," she said.

Jaden agreed. He said so. "Jaden agrees," he said.

And Jamie continued.

"There are three important things about real love," she said. "Loyalty, respect and responsibility."

Aziza had other ideas.

"If I'm going to be in love and get married and have a baby, I want to have a good-looking husband," she said. "Or he has to have a Subaru."

But how will you know — with or without a Subaru — when you've found the right person?

"It's true love if they believe in God and they don't cheat on you and break up," Jaden said.

Ahh, breaking up. This they all understood. All of the girls said they've experienced a breakup.

"It's a sad thing," Amber said.

"Sometimes you have to break up when the Army makes you move," Jamie said. "It's hard and it's heartbreaking if you can't have their phone number."

Not one of the boys had experienced love — or the end of love — personally.

"But I watched a movie about it," Jaden said.

"I saw that," the others chimed. Except for Kael, whose first and only comment on the subject put paid to the whole conversation.

"Can I go? I gotta go to PE," he said. "I like PE a lot better than this."

Brooks: Celebrate 73 years

Jobs were scarce when Roy graduated. To his credit, Reva said, he was the only boy in his class to land a job. He went to work at the dry cleaner across town and brought home a dollar a day. Then he joined the National Guard. Then he asked Reva to be his bride. She turned him down. Plenty of girls were dropping out of school to marry, but Reva thought it was important to earn her diploma. She made Roy wait another year.

In October of 1933, Reva and Roy ran off to West Virginia to elope. After a short stay in Cleveland, where Roy worked for his cousin as a janitor, the couple moved back to Akron, settled down and had two little boys, Roy Dale and Richard.

In 1940, Roy's National Guard unit was activated. He didn't believe his family could survive on a staff sergeant's income, so he drove to Columbus, Ohio, to ask for a promotion from bureau officials who put him in front of a board.

"It didn't take long to realize I knew more than they did. I'd been taking correspondence courses," he said. "So they made me a first lieutenant. I couldn't believe it."

Neither could Reva.

"Oh, we were all excited. He made $166 a month," she said. "We thought we were rich."

The Brooks moved their young family to Fort McClellan, Ala., where Roy set up mess halls, ran the motor pool and trained young Soldiers for the 105th Medical Regiment. He went on maneuvers a lot and took Reva and the boys with him. They stayed together until Roy was sent to the South Pacific for more than two years.

"We'd hear from him by V-mail once in a while, but the letters were always censored," she said. "He might as well have said, 'Dear Reva, I love you,' because that's all that was left when they got done censoring them. I didn't know where he was mostly or how he was doing."

Reva took her boys home to Ohio to be near her family and Roy's. It's a decision she advocates for today's Army wives who find themselves in the same position.

"They were there to support us," she said. "You need support. And you need to recognize and appreciate what the Army does these days. If you can talk to them by phone or e-mail or whatever, enjoy it and take advantage of it."

In retrospect, Reva realizes she made another wise decision when she signed her boys up for summer camp the week after their father returned from war. After reconnecting as a family, the couple had time alone together. As a result, they suffered few of the redeployment issues couples face today.

"We were always so close. We did everything together. We went everywhere together," Roy said.

"And we learned to give a lot and take a little," said Reva. "I always say both partners have to give 100 percent."

During Roy's 33-year Army career, Reva and the boys followed him all around the world. Relocating was not a challenge, she said, it was an adventure.

The boys were educated in Europe, where Roy completed the requirements for his military science degree. Wherever the family lived, Reva volunteered. It was a way of life, she said. The folks back in Akron always helped each other when help was needed. They didn't call it volunteering, and they didn't expect rewards or recognition.

Roy retired as a colonel in 1968 as the chief of logistics at Martin Army Community Hospital, where he continues to volunteer as a Red Cross shuttle driver. Since Reva took a bad fall two years ago, she can no longer drive.

"We're as close as we've ever been, maybe closer," Roy said. "If she has to go somewhere, I take her, so we do everything together. I say you have to be close and show respect to your spouse and include them in everything you do."

The couple, with five grandchildren and 14 great grandchildren, will celebrate their 74th wedding anniversary Oct. 14.

TLW: Rally Wednesday

Hobbs. She didn't have a support group, a network of like-minded peers committed to the biblical principles of marriage.

"I wish I'd had something like (True Love Waits)," she said.

True Love Waits was created in 1993 and sponsored by LifeWay Christian Resources, a provider of religious products and services, but it didn't hit the mainstream for several years. These days, TLW rallies are hosted in most major cities around the country annually. More than one million teens have signed pledge cards, or "covenant cards," to remain abstinent. For Southern Baptists like Hobbs, February is True Love Waits Month.

On Valentine's Day, Wednesday, Hobbs will speak to Fort Benning youth, their families and single Soldiers at a TLW rally, hosted by Club Beyond, at the Follow Me Chapel. The event, open to the public, will also feature a concert by Christian artists Jonathon and Lisa Moore, a local couple whose contemporary praise and worship songs are being played on Christian radio stations around the country.

But the main event, Paige said, will be a ring ceremony, of sorts. Several members of the post youth group have signed up to pledge their commitment to purity and don the rings they'll wear to symbolize that purity until the day they marry.

They thought about commitment cards, said Steve Paquette. Many churches use them.

"But a card can end up in your pocket in the laundry pile," he said. "We want something a little more visible, not so easy to ignore or forget about when you get tempted."

Hobbs said his ring is more than a reminder. It's a public testimony and a "great conversation starter."

"First they ask if I'm married. No, it's on the wrong hand," he said. "When I explain it, you can see a change in them. People have a lot of respect for it. It opens the door for conversation."

It's not too late to participate in the ceremony, even if you haven't ordered a ring, Paige said.

"It's about commitment and encouragement and forgiveness," she said. "The ring is just a symbol. You can get a ring anytime. The point is to make that pledge to yourself and God and your future husband or wife to stay pure until you marry."

But what if it's too late for that?

"That's where forgiveness comes in," Steve said. "God renews. He's a God of second chances. There are a lot of single Soldiers out there, and teenagers, too, who need to know that they can start fresh and give their guilt and their baggage to God."

Ultimately it's a decision the individual has to make, Paige said, but she encourages parents to attend the rally with their children. The event is geared toward middle schoolers, high schoolers and single young adults.

"This (rally) is not just for those who want to make a commitment," she said. "It's for those who have made mistakes, for parents who want to encourage their children, for parents who don't want their children to make the same mistakes they made ... it's for young people who know it's OK to take a stand for purity."

The TLW rally is free and open to the public. It will start at 6 p.m. and last about two hours.

REFLECTIONS

Date nights build relationship closeness

2ND BATTALION, 58TH INFANTRY REGIMENT
Chaplain (Capt.) Chris Rusack

As Valentine's Day fast approaches, many of us are already beginning to think about the gifts we will buy for our spouse or the romantic date we will go on. During this time it's usually easy to express our feelings and affection toward each other and to spend some quality "couple time" together.

Unfortunately, for many couples it is also a reminder that their relationship is not what it used to be. The honeymoon is over. The romantic feelings have faded over time and they are left wondering how they can bring the intimacy back into their relationship.

If you fall into this category, don't be discouraged. What you are going through is a normal phase that many couples may experience at some point in their relationship. However, if you commit to working through it together, your love will not only grow stronger but will become much more mature.

So what can you do? First of all, realize that married life is complex. There are many dynamics involved in a relationship. Both husband and the wife will face challenges, from overcoming personal issues, being successful at work, raising children, dealing with family members or simply the daily pressures of life.

In the midst of this, it's easy for couples to lose sight of what matters most. They often feel like they have little time or energy for each other. But spending time together to nurture a loving and healthy relationship is one of the most vital building blocks of a successful marriage. In a world of seemingly infinite distractions, how can a couple keep it together?

A solution is to designate a regularly scheduled date night. This time should be reserved not to discuss work, the budget or problems with the kids, but a time to invest in intimate conversation and interaction.

A date night can be like a refuge from a storm — a safe place to build the relationship. First, it helps to put a couple's focus on their relationship, rather than their daily issues and pressures. Second, it helps to cultivate the emotional bond in a relationship, especially in difficult times. During hardships, couples can easily shift blame to each other, instead of tackling the problem together.

Having a regular date night can help to diffuse this tendency by putting the couple's focus on strengthening their relationship, which makes them a stronger team. Like the saying goes "Two is better than one." An intimately bonded couple is better equipped to face challenges together.

A date night, however, should not be an end in itself. Instead, treat it like a training ground. Regular date nights serve to build closeness in a relationship, so that intimacy becomes a natural part of everyday life. The aim is that date nights will become an informal and continual occurrence.

Eventually, the couple learns to engage each other more intimately and have "date moments" on a regular basis. When the difficulties of life come, it is often too late to learn how to be intimate.

A date night does not have to be complicated or expensive. It does not have to be at a luxurious restaurant, although that can be good. It can be as simple as a walk in the park, or a relaxing evening by a lake.

The point is to do it consistently, and use it to focus on each other. Unfortunately, many couples grow apart during their marriage just going through the daily routine, not realizing the problem until it's too late.

By maintaining a date night, couples can face obstacles with strength and prevent the relationship from growing stale. It affords the opportunity for the couple to grow together and to understand each other along the way.

Discipline, love create Godly children

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Bud Rupel

Years ago, someone somewhere handed me a letter entitled, "The Meanest Mother in the World," written by an unknown author.

I would like to take a few editorial liberties and rewrite this letter and entitle it "The Meanest Parents in the World."

I had the meanest parents in the world. While the other kids went without breakfast, I had to have cereal, eggs or toast.

My mom believed in making me a wholesome lunch instead of grabbing a Coke and a candy bar from the vending machines. As you can guess, my dinner was different than other kids' too.

My parents insisted on knowing where we were at all times.

You'd think we were on a chain gang.

They wanted to know who our friends were and insisted on meeting any new ones.

If we said we were going to be gone one hour, it had better not be one hour and five minutes.

I'm ashamed to admit it but my parents actually spanked us.

Not once, but each time we had a mind of our own and did as we pleased. Can you imagine actually spanking a child simply because he or she disobeyed?

Now you can see how mean my parents really were.

One thing though, my dad never spanked us when he was mad. I remember talking back to my mother one time in the presence of my dad (big mistake!) and he said,

"Son, I'm so mad at you right now that I am afraid that I would hurt you if I were to spank you! So, tomorrow morning when I get up for work (5 a.m.) I'll come to your room and wake you and then I'll spank you." Didn't sleep a wink that night!

My parents made us work. I bet they broke every child-labor law in existence!

We had to wash dishes, make our beds, mow the lawn and take out the trash.

I think they lay awake at night thinking up things to make us do in order to make our lives miserable.

When it came time for us to start dating at age 16, my parents insisted on meeting our dates.

"No boy is coming to my house honking his horn to get my daughter," mom would say.

And to top it off, my parent insisted that we be in my 11 p.m. until we were 18! We graduated from high school. With our parents behind us, talking, spanking and demanding respect, none of us was allowed the pleasure of being a dropout.

My parents failed miserably at being parents. Out of five children, two are ministers, one a college professor, one a painting contractor and the one girl is a nurse and married to a minister. The oldest boy served in the Army and did a tour in Vietnam.

And who do we blame for the terrible way we turned out? You're right, our mean parents. Look at all the things we missed.

We never got to use drugs or alcohol, never got to skip class or participate in a million and one things our friends did. They forced us to grow up into God-fearing, educated, honest adults.

Using this as a background, I am trying to raise my children the same way. I stand a little taller and I am filled with pride when my children call me mean. Because, you see, I thank God he gave me the meanest parents in the world. Children are a gift from God and should be treated as such. The home is a place where children are taught moral values, love and discipline. When discipline and love are woven together, they create a fabric that produces godly children with godly values that can be passed on from generation to generation. So go ahead parents ... get mean!

FORT BENNING Church Brief

16 WAYS TO LOVE YOUR LOVER

Rekindle your love and marriage at El Carrizo Mexican restaurant on Veterans Parkway from 6:30 to 9 p.m. Thursday. The Chaplain Family Life Center invites married couples for a free dinner (sponsored by El Carrizo) and a marriage enrichment seminar that will give you insight into the dynamics of your relationship with your spouse.

Seating is limited.

For more information and to reserve tickets, call the Family Life Center at 706-545-1760.

Conform to norm this Valentine's Day, show you care

Join us for Valentine's dinner program at El Carrizo Thursday

CHAPLAIN FAMILY LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

Across the country, candy, flowers and gifts are exchanged between loved ones, all in the name of Saint Valentine. According to the Greeting Card Association, an estimated 1 billion Valentine's cards are sent each year, making Valentine's Day the second largest card-sending holiday of the year.

When I was young and newly married, I know I made so many unwise decisions. I thought to be really special I should give a card or gift only when my wife would not expect it.

So what did I do? While other guys were giving women cards and flowers, I did not because I did not want to conform to the norm.

Well guys, take some advice. You do not want to be the only one looking like you do not care for your date or mate!

If you do not have a plan to celebrate with your Valentine yet, I will even help you out here.

I am hosting a Valentine's dinner Thursday at El Carrizo's Mexican restaurant. We will provide dinner and a program designed to help you better understand your spouse and yourself.

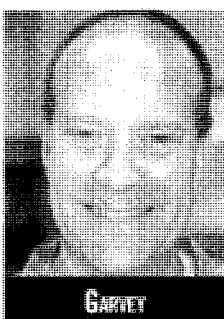

There is no cost to you, but seating is limited and you must call for your reservations on or before Monday. Sorry, we will not be providing child care.

For information or to register, call the Family Life Center at 706-545-1760.

In the long run, I learned, and now I give my wife cards and gifts even when they are expected! I guess it is working, because she still loves me after 26 years of marriage.

But why do we buy and send Valentine's cards anyway? What is this day all about, other than helping the greeting card companies to make millions?

The history of Valentine's Day — and its patron saint — is shrouded in mystery, but we do know February has long been a month of romance.

Saint Valentine's Day, as we know it today, contains vestiges of both Christian and ancient Roman tradition.

Today, the Catholic church recognizes at least three different saints named Valentine or Valentinus, all of whom were martyred.

One legend contends that Valentine was a priest who served during the third century in Rome. When Emperor Claudius II decided that single men made better soldiers than those with wives and families, he outlawed marriage for young men — his crop of potential soldiers. Valentine, realizing the injustice of the decree, defied Claudius and continued to perform marriages for young lovers in secret. When Valentine's actions were discovered, Claudius ordered that he be put to death.

Other stories suggest that Valentine may have been killed for attempting to help Christians escape harsh Roman prisons where they were often beaten and tortured.

Another legend says Valentine actually sent the first Valentine's greeting himself. According to the legend, while in prison, Valentine fell in love with a young girl — possibly his jailor's daughter — who visited him during his confinement.

Before his death, it is alleged that he wrote her a letter, which he signed 'From your Valentine,' an expression that is still in use today.

Although the truth behind the Valentine's Day legends is murky, the stories certainly emphasize his appeal as a sympathetic, heroic, and, most importantly, romantic figure. It's no surprise that by the Middle Ages, Valentine was one of the most popular saints in England and France and is still around for lovers today.

If you are struggling with some tension in your marriage and would like to get back to shooting some arrows of love at each other, give us a call at 706-545-1760. Our pastoral staff is ready to help you with your journey. Call or stop by our office at 2606 Dixie Road in Soldiers' Plaza.

Dealing with the loss of a pet

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

When a family pet dies, the family has lost more than just a pet — it's lost a family member. The loss can be tragic and unexpected, so it's natural for the family to have a grieving period.

My family's dog, a German shepherd named Ruby, died the day I graduated from college last year. Ruby was 14, quite old for a large dog, and she was having more and more trouble walking.

My mom took her to the vet in the morning thinking they would just give her pain medication for her worsening back legs, but they told her it was time to let her go.

I was shaken because I didn't get to say goodbye to her, but I had to put off grieving until after my graduation ceremony.

The American Animal Hospital Association has an article on losing a pet.

According to the AAHA, the stages of grief are generally believed to be

- No. 1 — Shock, disbelief and denial
- No. 2 — Anger
- No. 3 — Bargaining
- No. 4 — Depression
- No. 5 — Acceptance, resolution and recovery.

However, the length of time and order of stages vary from person to person, and people don't always go through all of the stages or may switch back and forth between them.

Eventually, the memories will become a comfortable part of life and the grief will ease. Don't give yourself or let others give you a timeline — take the time you need.

The AAHA recommends talking to your veterinarian, friends, family or people at your church and looking for local or online support groups.

To read the AAHA's article, go to www.healthypet.com.

The Association for Pet Loss and Bereavement is a nonprofit organization that helps people after the loss of a pet. The organization's Web site has chat rooms for peer support and assistance during a hard time.

The site also has lists of books for adults and kids dealing with pet loss and articles on the subject that can be read online.

One of the APLB articles deals with children and pet loss and has suggestions for your children to memorialize the pet, including drawing pictures, making a scrapbook and writing stories about the pet.

Another helpful Web site is www.petloss.com, which also has a chat room and has dozens of "healing and inspirational poems." After Ruby died, my mom was upset every day being reminded of her absence. A friend gave her a poem about pets going to better places, and it consoled her to think of Ruby being healthy and happy again in doggie heaven.

The APLB site also has lists of groups that provide counseling and support hotlines and local support groups.

One such hotline is run by the Iams pet food company. The hotline can be called Monday through Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 888-332-7738.

Just as every person grieves differently, each family that loses a pet will be ready to get a new pet at different times. Some families will deal with the pain and loss better by welcoming a new pet almost immediately. Other families may never get another pet. The Iams Web site, <http://us.iam.com>, recommends being absolutely sure your family is ready before bringing a new pet in.

Ask yourself if it will be too hard to see a new puppy using the old dog's food and water dish. You may need to get all new toys and other supplies.

Don't rush into getting a new dog — you want the new pet to come into a warm and happy home.

For more information, go to www.aplb.org.

Oral piercing can cause problems

U.S. ARMY DENTAL ACTIVITY

Piercing, like tattooing, is just one of today's popular forms of "body art" and self-expression. Piercing may seem daring, cool and totally safe because some celebrities use piercing to flaunt their particular style or attitude. But piercing the tongue, lips, cheeks or uvula (the tiny tissue that hangs at the back of the throat) is not as safe as some would have you believe. That's because the mouth's moist environment — home to huge amounts of breeding bacteria — is an ideal place for infection.

An oral piercing can interfere with speech, chewing or swallowing. That may seem like a mere inconvenience until you consider that it may also cause:

- Excessive drooling (something you won't see in hip fashion magazines!);
- Infection, pain and swelling;
- Chipped or cracked teeth;
- Injuries to the gums;
- Damage to fillings;
- Increased saliva flow;
- Hypersensitivity to metals;
- Scar tissue; and,
- Nerve damage.

ASK A DOC

THE MARTIN ARMY MEDICAL MENTOR

MARTIN ARMY COMMUNITY HOSPITAL

Lt. Col. Virginia D. Yates

Q) What is hepatitis?

A) Hepatitis is a disease in which the liver becomes inflamed. There are many causes of hepatitis ranging from infectious hepatitis (hepatitis A, B, C and other viruses) to autoimmune disease, in which your body creates an immune process that causes a liver problem. Certain medications can also lead to hepatitis.

Q) My friend has hepatitis B and says he didn't know he had it. Is that possible?

A) Most people who get hepatitis B have no recognizable signs or symptoms. The only way the disease can be positively identified is through a blood test. Many people are surprised to learn when they have donated blood that they test positive for hepatitis B. Hepatitis blood tests are not usually included in routine blood tests done when having a physical examination.

Q) What is a hepatitis carrier?

A) A carrier is infectious even though he or she has no signs or symptoms and should never have unprotected sex unless the other person is immune to hepatitis B or has been vaccinated. Remember, the virus is present in blood, semen, vaginal fluids and saliva.

Q) Are there treatments for hepatitis?

A) The therapy for hepatitis depends on the underlying cause. Some types of hepatitis are more severe than others. The important thing to remember is that if you think you have hepatitis or have been exposed to someone with infectious hepatitis, see your physician to discuss the possible need for further testing and evaluation.

Scholarship deadline nears

SPECIAL TO AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Carrie Williams

Military families have an opportunity to apply for scholarships for their children at certain commissaries, but they better do it soon — the deadline is Feb. 21.

The "Scholarships for Military Children" program will be making at least one $1,500 scholarship available at each commissary location with qualified applicants, Defense Commissary Agency officials said.

Scholarships are available to unmarried children 21 and younger — 23 and younger if enrolled in school — of military active-duty, Reserve, Guard and retired personnel.

Program officials use the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System database to determine eligibility. Applicants and sponsors must be enrolled in DEERS and have a current ID card.

"Scholarships for Military Children is a wonderful military community program," said Patrick Nixon, DeCA director and chief executive officer. "Nearly 3,000 scholarships totaling more than $4 million have been awarded since the first awards were given in 2001."

The scholarship program has also made inroads to increasing support from the nonmilitary community. California high school students sponsoring golf tournaments in 2006 raised thousands of dollars to donate to the program, and already for 2007, a private foundation has made a substantial donation.

Most of the program's funds are donated by manufacturers, brokers and suppliers who sell groceries in commissaries, and every dollar donated to the program by industry or the general public goes to fund the scholarships.

The Fisher House Foundation administers the program.

"We're excited to see this worthwhile program gaining recognition and funding from the community at large," said Jim Weiskopf, the foundation's vice president of communications. "Commissary industry support has been amazing, and increased public support can only help ensure that the Scholarships for Military Children program continues to benefit the military community for many years to come."

Donations for the program are accepted at the foundation's Web site, www.militaryscholar.org. About 10 percent of the scholarships go to high school students at DoD schools overseas.

"Every cent that community organizations can mobilize to support college-bound students is an investment in the future," said Joseph Tafoya, director of the DoD Education Activity. "They also demonstrate that military communities are committed to education and increased opportunities for all students."

Along with their application, they must submit an essay on how and why they would change a historical event.

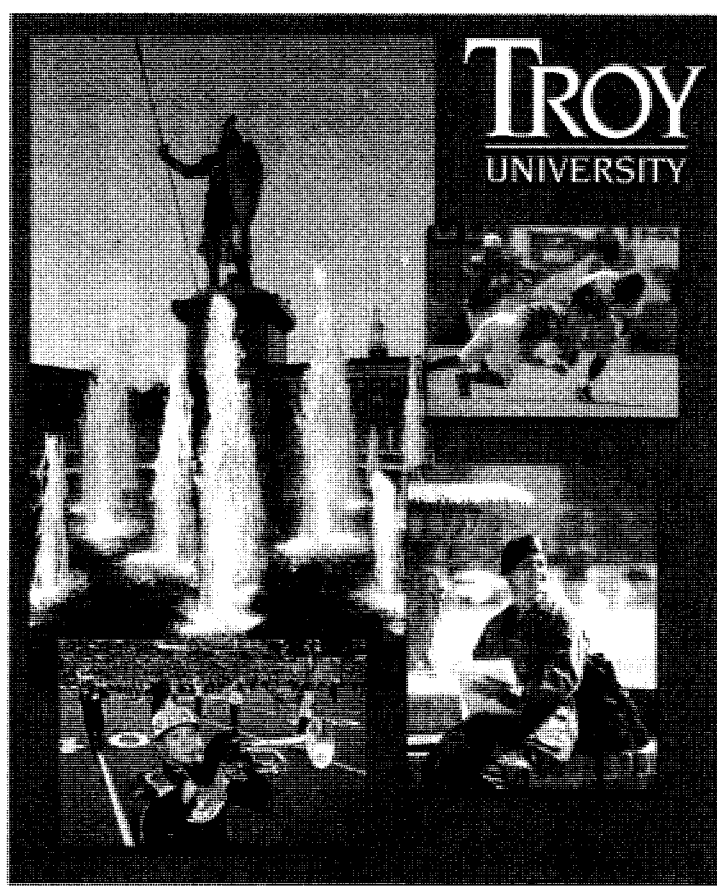

Scholarship applications are available at 263 commissaries worldwide, or can be downloaded through links at the Scholarships for Military Children, DeCA and DoD Education Activity's Web sites.

Dena Dougherty, founder of Storybook Farm, teaches 8-year-old Rachel Sosebee a riding lesson on Paddington Bear, a paint pony who is about 15 years old. Rachel wants a horse of her own, and her father, Koyt Sosebee, wanted his daughter to take lessons before making the big purchase, he said. The 10-week therapeutic riding program at Storybook Farm starts next week. Each child will be assigned a horse or pony and will learn to groom the animal before beginning to ride.

Hope on horseback

Alabama horse farm helps children with physical, mental disabilities

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Storybook Farm offers children with disabilities something unique — hope on horseback.

"Hope on horseback" is the name of the farm's therapeutic riding program, but the words may mean much more to the children.

"The children receive unconditional love from the animals, and the animals don't judge them," said Lucy Little, director of development for Storybook Farm in Opelika, Ala.

"They can open up and be themselves around the horses," Little said. The children can take a break from the often harsh reality of their conditions and have fun.

Storybook Farm is a nonprofit organization funded by donations and staffed by volunteers. And it is also a ministry.

"We teach the kids about God, how to ride a horse and reading," said Kim Smith, an instructor at the farm.

The children who ride at the farm range from 2 year olds to high schoolers. The therapeutic riding program is geared toward physically and mentally handicapped children, as well as children in bereavement situations.

Children dealing with the loss of a parent or the deployment of a parent could benefit from the riding program, Little said.

"We have six horses and six ponies, and they were all chosen for their gentleness and for their dispositions," Little said. The horses and ponies, from 2 to 18 years old, are chosen for their ability to work well with children. The animals have to be tolerant of a lot of movement and strange noises.

When the horses arrive at the farm, they get new names, like Tom Sawyer and Johnny Appleseed, all coming from literature and children's books. Hence, the name Storybook Farm.

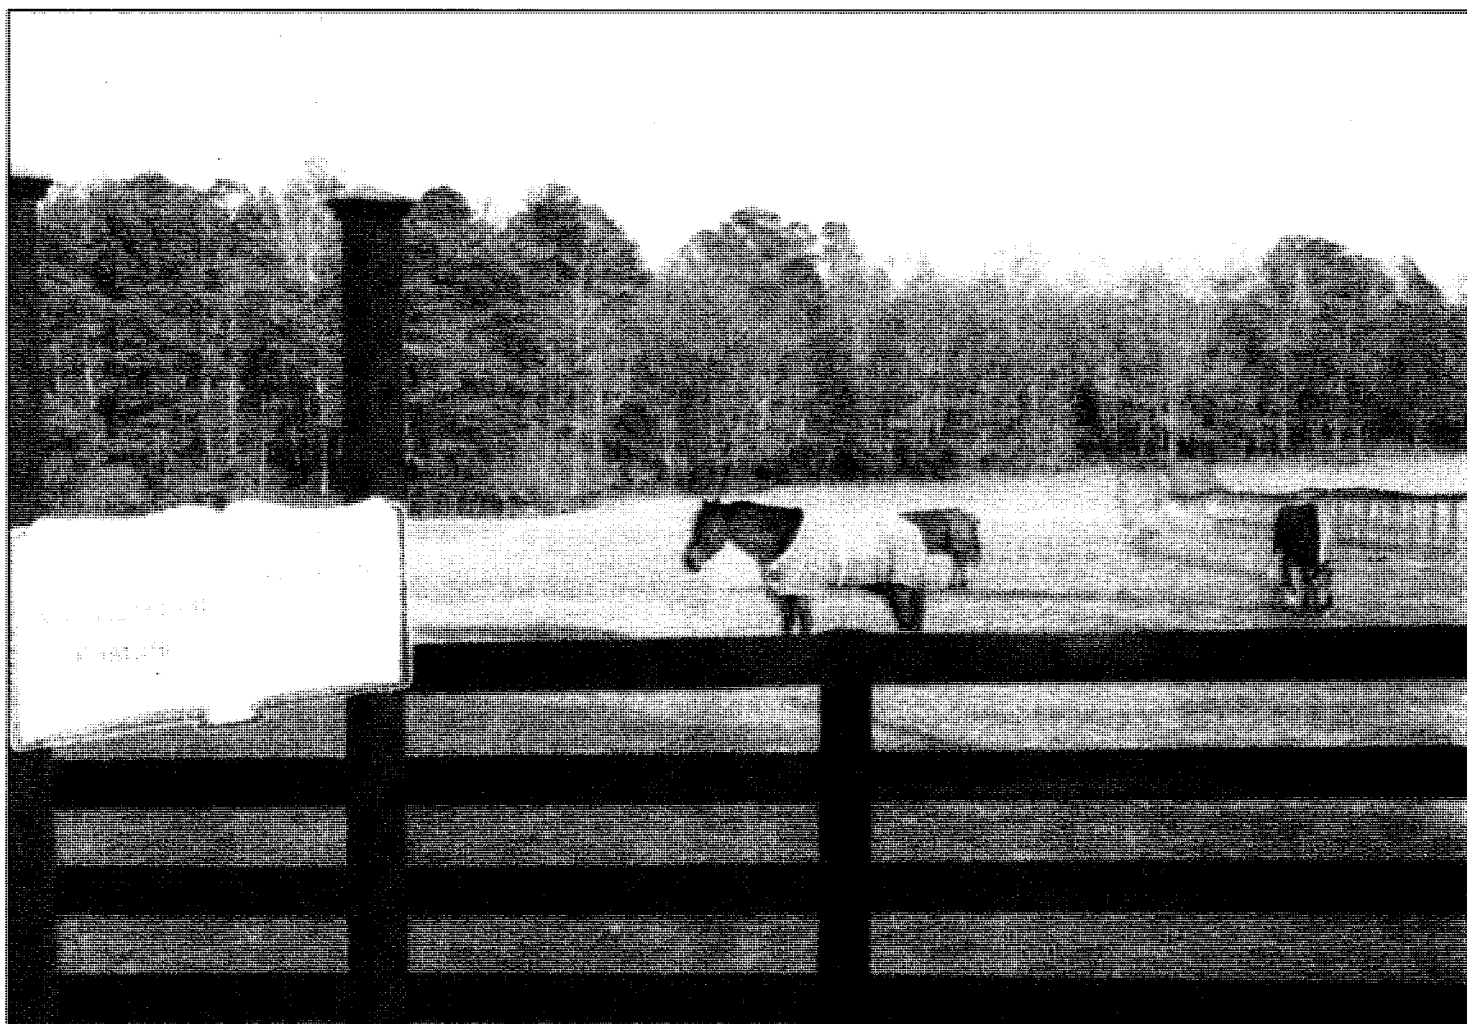

Dena Dougherty, the founder of Storybook Farm, was an English major in college and has a great love for literature, Little said. Each paddock has a literary name — Sherwood Forest, Narnia and the Secret Garden, for example.

The stalls of the horses and ponies tell the story of how they ended up at the farm. Two of the horses are retired Thoroughbred racehorses. The newest horse, Atticus Finch, won more than $200,000 racing but has bone shards in his leg that prohibit him from any more racing, Little said.

Atticus Finch is well-suited to his work at Storybook Farm, though, and is in no pain, she said.

The farm usually has three 10-week sessions each year. The children begin by learning how to groom horses and clean tack. Much of the teaching is done by volunteers, including students from Auburn University, Little said. A certified instructor leads the teaching.

Each child is assigned a horse or pony and he or she works

The pastures at Storybook Farm are named after places in books. This pasture is called Sherwood Forest, for the legend of Robin Hood. The 25-acre farm has six horses, six ponies, cats, dogs, chickens, turtles, a rabbit and a bird.

with that animal for the entire 10 weeks.

"The children get very attached," Little said.

Once the kids start riding the horses, they play games, navigate mazes and have relay races to gain coordination and confidence. The kids also learn self-awareness and appreciation for themselves and the horses, Little said.

The most challenging disability to work with is autism, Smith said, but given time, the children with autism really respond to the horses. It takes a few weeks for them to open up, Smith said, but the movement of the horse seems to help them to concentrate or it really wakes them up.

For children with physical disabilities who may have stiffness in their muscles, it loosens them up, Smith said. The riding allows them to get away from the world for a while, she said.

"When they're here, they don't have to worry about doctor's visits or physical therapy," she said.

Cindy Russell, of Opelika, heard about the farm on the radio.

"It's a blessing for handicapped children. I can see the joy on their faces," said Russell, whose daughter, Alyssa, 7, is enrolled in the current session.

"It gives the kids an outlet and a moment of light. It makes the world a better place," she said.

The farm is also home to chickens, turtles, cats, dogs, a bird and a rabbit. There is a library and reading room in the barn where kids can check out books.

"A lot of therapeutic riding programs work just with the child and have a very clinical atmosphere," Little said.

At Storybook Farm, on the other hand, the whole family is involved, she said. Siblings can read and play games or watch the lessons.

One of the farm's newest projects is Treasure Island, a memorial to two students and a volunteer who died. Eventually, the memorial will have a fountain and memory garden.

The farm always needs volunteers, as it takes more than 100 people to run, Little said. Families can also sponsor a horse or pony.

The riding program is free and open to children with emotional or physical special needs. For more information on the therapeutic riding program, call 334-444-5966 or go to www.story-book-farm.org.

Chewacla State Park has a variety of trails leading to a lake, creek and waterfalls.

The view from the upper pavilion area on top of the mountain looks out over the valley towards the rock quarry. The crash of the waterfalls can be heard from up there. Several trails are accessible from the upper pavilion, including the Mountain Bike Trail and Deer Rub Trail, which has steep terrain.

One of the manmade waterfalls on Chewacla Creek comes down from the rock quarry area outside the park. The park holds Chewacla Lake, which creates waterfalls as well. Chewacla State Park is open from 8 a.m. to sundown year-round.

Chewacla State Park

Auburn, Ala., park offers nearly 700 acres of trails, lake, waterfalls, wildlife and more

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Three miles south of Auburn, Ala., is a picturesque 696-acre park filled with scenic hikes and drives, a 26-acre lake and waterfalls.

Chewacla State Park, built in the 1930s by the Civilian Conservation Corps, sits on the fall line separating the Piedmont Plateau and the lower coastal plain.

Visitors can see unique rock formations and a variety of trees, flowers and wildlife, and they can fish in the lake, which has largemouth bass, crappie, bream and catfish. An Alabama state fishing license is required.

People can swim in the lake at the beach and swimming area, and boats are available to rent.

There are eight hiking and mountain biking trails in the park and one tree identification trail. Stop by the park office to pick up a map. The trails range from an easy walk to a steep hike and cover a variety of distances.

The park also has lodging. Six furnished vacation cottages are located near the lake and are available to visitors year round. A two night minimum stay is required for reservations, and fishing boats and swimming are included in the rental fee.

The campground has 36 trailer and tent campsites with water, electricity and sewage. A picnic table and grill are on each site.

Primitive camping is also available.

The cabins and campgrounds get busy during the Auburn University football season, so plan ahead if you would like to stay during the fall.

Picnic pavilions are available to rent for group events.

The park is open from 8 a.m. to dusk year-round. The entrance fee is $2 on weekdays and $3 on weekends. Children ages 6 to 11 and seniors 62 and older can get in for $1.

The park is located at 124 Shell Toomer Parkway in Auburn. To get there from Fort Benning, take 280 West into Alabama to I-85 South toward Montgomery, Ala. Then take exit 51, US 29. Turn left onto US 29 and turn left on Shell Toomer Parkway. The park is about a mile and a half ahead.

For more information, call the park office at 334-887-5621 or go to www.alapark.com.

Part of the Mountain Laurel Trail in the park is very steep. Several trails connect the lake area with the upper pavilion and require a steep hike up the mountain. Visitors looking for more of a challenge should try these.

The Mountain Laurel Trail starts at the upper pavilion at the top of the mountain, goes down to the falls and then follows Chewacla Lake and Moore's Mill Creek. The stream goes under a bridge that was built by the Civilian Conservation Corps and several rock dams. The Mountain Laurel Trail connects with the Troop 30 Boy Scout Trail, which has moderate hiking.

OTHER PARKS AND LAKES in Alabama

Lakepoint Resort State Park The park is at 104 Lakepoint Drive, Eufaula, Ala. It has 1,220 acres on the banks of 45,000-acre Lake Eufaula, which is known as the "bass capital of the world." Lake Eufaula is a reservoir on the Chattahoochee River and stretches as far as Phenix City, Ala. The park has a lodge, convention center, vacation cabins and lakeside cottages, picnic areas, an 18-hole golf course and a marina with launch facilities and boat slips. The resort lodge has more than 100 guest rooms, including several suites, and each room has a private balcony. The lodge also has a bar and grill restaurant. Rooms cost from $49 to $59. Lakepoint Park is about 50 miles from Fort Benning. For more information and to make reservations, call 334-687-3011 or go to www.alapark.com, the Alabama State Parks Web site.

Blue Springs State Park The park is at 2995 Highway 10, Clio, Ala. Blue Springs Park gets its name from a crystal-clear underground spring that feeds the park's spring pool, where visitors can swim. The 103-acre park has picnic shelters, tables, grills, playgrounds and modern and primitive campgrounds. Visitors can fish in the pond stocked with catfish and bream. It is open from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. Memorial Day to Labor Day and 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. the rest of the year. The park is about 100 miles from Fort Benning. For more information, call 334-387-4875 or go to www.alapark.com.

Kiesel Park At 520 Chetwick Lane in Auburn, Kiesel Park is a 124-acre park with a nature trail and pond. The park also has a garden, pavilion and picnic area. The Nunn-Winston house, which is an example of antebellum Greek revival architecture dating from the 1850s, is located at the park. Samuel Nunn, who owned the house at one time, was one of Auburn's first settlers and an early trustee of Auburn Male College. The house is open for tours and can be reserved for events. For more information or to schedule a tour, call the parks and recreation department at 334-501-2930.

Lee County public fishing lake The 130-acre lake is located at 321 Lee Road 608, Opelika, Ala. The lake offers bass, bluegill, shellecracker, catfish and crappie fishing. From February to June 30, the lake is open from sunrise to sunset every day but Mondays. Restrooms and a store with concessions, fishing tackle and bait are at the lake. Visitors can fish from a pier, rent a boat or bring their own boat. Visitors must have a license and permit to fish, which can be purchased at the store. Several fishing cabins are available for rent. For more information, call the manager at 334-749-1275 or go to www.outdooralabama.com.

Saugahatchee Lake The 600-acre Saugahatchee Lake is stocked with a variety of freshwater fish. Fishing and boating permits are required and can be obtained at the Opelika City Hall. The lake is located on Saugahatchee Lake Road in Opelika and is open Tuesday through Sunday from sunrise to sunset. Call 334-705-5552 or go to www.auburn-opelika.com for more information.

There are several other small parks in Auburn and Opelika. Go to www.auburn-opelika.com for information.

OPENING TODAY

HANNIBAL RISING — In Eastern Europe at the end of World War II, a young Hannibal watches as his parents violently die, leaving his young sister in his care. Alone and without any means of support, he is forced to live in a Soviet orphanage. He flees to Paris to find that his uncle has died, but his Japanese widow Lady Murasaki (Gong Li) welcomes him. Even her kindness and love cannot soothe the nightmares and sorrows that plague him.

Showing a cunning aptitude for science, he is accepted into medical school, which serves to hone his skills and provide him the tools to exact justice on the war criminals that haunt him day and night. This quest will ignite an insatiable lust within a serial killer who was not born, but made.

The movie also stars Gaspard Ulliel, Rhys Ifans, Ivan Marevich and Dominic West.

Hannibal Rising is rated R for strong grisly violent content and some language and sexual references.

NORBIT — Norbit (Eddie Murphy) has never had it easy. As a baby, he was abandoned on the steps of a Chinese restaurant and orphanage and raised by Mr. Wong. Things get worse when he's forced into marriage by the mean, junk-food chugging queen Rasputia. Just when Norbit's hanging by his last thread, his childhood sweetheart, Kate, moves back to town.

Norbit, rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, some nudity and language, also stars Thandie Newton, Cuba Gooding Jr., Eddie Griffin and Terry Crews.

ALSO PLAYING

BECAUSE I SAID SO — A well-intentioned but overzealous mother (Diane Keaton) goes on a mission to find Mr. Right for her youngest and unmarried daughter (Mandy Moore).

The movie also stars Gabriel Macht, Tom Everett Scott and Lauren Graham.

Because I Said So is rated PG-13 for sexual content including dialogue, some mature thematic material and partial nudity.

THE MESSENGERS — A family moves into a rundown sunflower farm. As the farm begins to revive after years of disrepair, the family begins to notice uncomfortable and alarming changes in their father's behavior.

The Messengers, rated PG-13 for mature thematic material, disturbing violence and terror, stars Kristen Stewart, Dylan McDermott, Penelope Ann Miller and John Corbett.

EPIC MOVIE — In the spirit of Scary Movie and Date Movie, this movie is a parody that spoofs recent mega-blockbusters. The comedy centers itself around four orphans who visit a chocolate factory and are transported to the wonderful land of Gnarnia after stumbling upon an enchanted wardrobe.

Kal Penn, Adam Campbell, Jayma Mays, Faune Chambers and Jennifer Coolidge star in the movie.

Epic Movie is rated PG-13 for crude and sexual humor, language and some comic violence.

CATCH AND RELEASE — A woman (Jennifer Garner) must deal with the untimely death of her husband and the revelation of secrets he kept from her.

Also starring in the movie are Timothy Olyphant, Juliette Lewis, Sam Jaeger and Fiona Shaw.

Catch and Release is rated PG-13 for sexual content, language and some drug use.

SMOKIN' ACES — Mob boss Primo Sparazza has taken out a hefty contract on Buddy "Aces" Israel, a sleazy magician who has agreed to turn state's evidence against the Vegas mob.

The FBI, sensing a chance to use this small-time con to bring down big-target Sparazza, places Aces into protective custody, under the supervision of two agents dispatched to Aces' Lake Tahoe hideout.

When the word of the price on Aces' head spreads, it entices bounty hunters, thugs-for-hire, deadly vixens and double-crossing mobsters to join in the hunt.

With all eyes on Tahoe, this rogues' gallery collides in a comic race to hit the jackpot and rub out Aces.

Smokin' Aces, rated R for strong bloody violence, pervasive language, some nudity and drug use, stars Ben Affleck, Jeremy Piven, Ryan Reynolds, Andy Garcia and Alicia Keys.

BLOOD AND CHOCOLATE — Ten years ago, in the remote mountains of Colorado, a young girl watched helplessly as her family was murdered by a pack of angry men for the secret they carried in their blood. She survived by running into the woods, and changing into something the hunters could never find — a wolf. Now, though she lives half a world away, Vivian Gandillon is still running.

The movie stars Olivier Martinez, Agnes Bruckner, Hugh Dancy and Katja Riemann.

Blood and Chocolate is rated PG-13 for violence and terror, some sexuality and substance abuse.

THE HITCHER — Grace Andrews and Jim Halsey are a collegiate couple who are tormented by the mysterious hitchhiker John Ryder, a.k.a. The Hitcher.

The young couple hit the road in a 1970 Oldsmobile 442, en route to spring break. But their pleasure trip soon turns into a waking nightmare. The initial encounters with Ryder are increasingly off-putting for Grace and Jim, and they bravely fight back when he ambushes them. But they are blindsided when he implicates them in a horrific slaying and continues to shadow them.

The open road becomes a suspenseful, action-packed battleground of blood and metal as, in trying to elude not only Ryder but also the New Mexico State Police, Grace and Jim must fight for their lives and face their fears head-on.

The Hitcher, rated R for strong bloody violence, terror and language, stars Sean Bean and Sophia Bush.

ARTHUR AND THE INVISIBLES — 10-year-old Arthur has a lot on his plate — a real estate developer is about to snap up his grandma's home — and there's no way Arthur's going to hang around for his parents or grandparents to sort out the problem.

Maybe the solution lies in his grandpa's treasure, which is hidden somewhere on the "other side" in the land of the Minimoys. The creatures that inhabit this world are just a tenth of an inch tall and live in perfect harmony with the environment.

Arthur ventures into this world of the Minimoys, where he meets Princess Selenia and her brother Betameche and they set off to look for the treasure that will save his grandma.

The movie stars Freddie Highmore and Mia Farrow.

Arthur and the Invisibles is rated PG for fantasy action and brief suggestive material.

PRIMEVAL — A news producer and a reporter are dispatched to South Africa to track down the legendary 30-foot-long crocodile Gustave and bring him home alive.

However, their mission proves far more elusive than they had anticipated, and their situation turns even more perilous when a warlord targets them and their colleagues for death.

Primeval, rated R for strong graphic violence, brutality, terror and language, stars Dominic Purcel and Orlando Jones.

STOMP THE YARD — DJ is a troubled youth from Los Angeles attending Truth University in Atlanta. When adapting to his new environment proves difficult, DJ finds solace in joining a struggling fraternity where he begins implementing his street-style dance moves in an attempt to help the step team win the coveted National Step Show Championship.

Columbus Short and Courtney B. Vance star in the movie.

Stomp the Yard is rated PG-13 for a scene of violence, some sexual material and language.

ALPHA DOG — The movie, starring Amanda Seyfried, Justin Timberlake, Bruce Willis and Sharon Stone, is based on the life of Jesse James Hollywood, one of the youngest men ever to be on the FBI's most wanted list.

Alpha Dog is rated R for pervasive drug use and language, strong violence, sexuality and nudity.

NEW RELEASES

THE DEPARTED: Currently up for five Oscars including best picture, director Martin Scorsese's Americanization of the Hong Kong film Infernal Affairs casts Leonardo DiCaprio and Matt Damon as Bostonians on opposite sides of the law. Each infiltrates the other side, with the police officer (DiCaprio) posing as a criminal and the mobster (Damon) pretending to be a good guy.

The danger mounts as suspicions arise that a mole is present in each faction. Jack Nicholson is a standout as the chief gangster in a superb supporting cast that also includes Martin Sheen, Alec Baldwin, Vera Farmiga, Ray Winstone and Oscar-nominated Mark Wahlberg. (R:AS, P, GV)

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Kirsten Dunst shows a different side by portraying the French queen in writer-director Sofia Coppola's Lost in Translation revisionist biography, which generated strong reactions at last year's Cannes Film Festival.

Enduring a loveless marriage to Louis XVI (Jason Schwartzman), Marie uses her position to live it up, unwittingly helping to plant the seeds for a revolution.

The esoteric supporting cast ranges from Rip Torn to British pop-music legend Marianne Faithfull. (PG-

Bush: Baghdad security plan on track

WASHINGTON — The Baghdad security plan is on track, and the Iraqi government is meeting the benchmarks necessary for continued coalition cooperation, President Bush said Wednesday.

Bush received his first briefing from Gen. David H. Petraeus, the new Multinational Force Iraq commander. Petraeus was the president's top pick to lead coalition forces in Iraq. Bush told reporters at a White House news conference. Petraeus took command Feb. 10.

The security plan is taking shape, and the Iraqi government is following through on its commitment to deploy three additional brigades of Iraqi forces to the

No parking on grassy or seeded areas

THE BAYONET
Master Sgt. Charles R. Evans

The Directorate of Emergency Services would like to remind members of the community that parking on seeded areas is prohibited.

The parking issue is an ongoing problem, said Sgt. 1st Class Michael Snow, DES Operations sergeant.

"This is covered by Garrison Regulation 190-5, which explains where motor vehicles may be parked. Just because there is no grass on an area doesn't mean that it isn't a seeded area. Often the reason there is no grass is that unauthorized traffic and parking has prevented it from growing."

"When you have unauthorized traffic and parking it causes erosion," said Mark Fincher, chief of Operations and Maintenance, Department of Public Works.

Kuwait native becomes citizen, joins Army

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

Pfc. Walid Edwards, a native of Kuwait, is in basic training at Sand Hill.

He was a man without a country. He was an outsider in his homeland, a citizen of a country he's never stepped foot in, and a foreigner in the nation he's lived in for the past 17 years.

But all that has changed for Pfc. Walid Edwards, who arrived at Sand Hill in January.

Edwards grew up the second oldest of seven children in Kuwait. His parents were born and raised in Iran, but immigrated to Kuwait for employment opportunities before their children were born. About 80 percent of the people in Kuwait are foreign workers, and about 4 percent of workers are Iranian.

In Kuwait, ethnic background means more than birthplace when it comes to citizenship. Despite never having been in Iran, Edwards was an Iranian citizen.

As a child he wanted to be a Soldier, but only citizens can serve in the Kuwaiti army and Edwards didn't want to serve Iran.

Instead he chose to pursue a life in business, and in 1985 enrolled in a college in California. He left Kuwait and has not been back since.

He was 21. "It was big culture shock. I think the biggest shock came when I saw Saturday Night Live. They were making fun of the president. I couldn't believe it! And seeing how girls dressed, and the emphasis on race and skin color, these were big changes for me."

From California, he spent a stint in Arkansas and eventually settled in North Carolina in the late 1980s. People didn't know what to make of him.

"People's expectations are funny," Edwards said. "They have an idea of the Middle East and who the people are, like we all live in small villages. We have country folks there, the Bedouins, but I'm a city slicker."

Fast forward a little more than a decade and Edwards was working as a car salesman in Hickory, N.C., about 150 miles northeast of Fort Bragg.

One day Edwards was talking to a friend who was reminiscing about his days in the Army. Edwards mentioned his long-held wish to be a Soldier. He'd always thought only American citizens could serve in the Army so he never tried to join, but when he became a citizen at age 38, he figured he was too old to serve.

When he learned that the Army had raised the age limit, Edwards drove to a recruiting office and signed up. He was assigned to A Company, 2nd Battalion, 47th Infantry Regiment.

"My friends think I'm crazy to do this," Edwards said.

Soldiers brought music, magic to Afghanistan

USAIC PUBLIC AFFAIRS OFFICE
Elsie Jackson

Armed with music and magic, two Soldiers brought more than just medical care to Afghani children hospitalized during the 14th Combat Support Hospital's recent deployment.

Specs. Billy Cavenee and Rosalyn McKittrick brought a guitar, magic tricks and a violin to the Bagram hospital where the 14th CSH treated their patients, many of them children.

"God looks kindly upon you when you take care of his children," said Cavenee, conceding that his magic may have "gotten on some people's nerves."

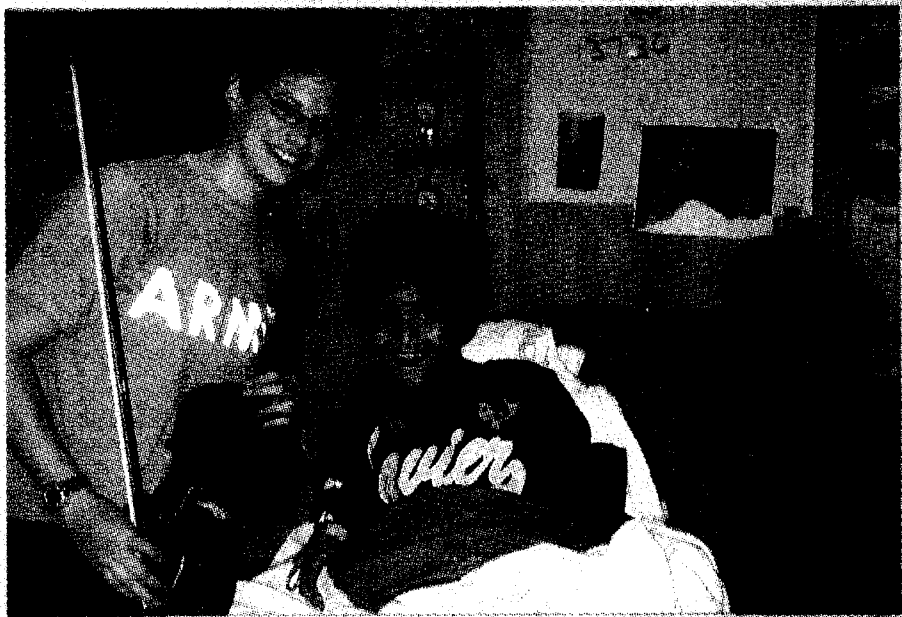

But it was the music that touched them, especially the Afghans.

"The adults were really into it," he said. "Music had been abolished. They couldn't read books, no music and all of a sudden they can do all this stuff, and when it was presented to them, you got nothing but smiles."

Cavenee, who has been playing the guitar for five years, once left his home in Oklahoma City with his guitar and five dollars in his pocket. He traveled to Dallas and then on to Santa Fe, N.M.

"My guitar fed me and I ate good," he said.

McKittrick, an operating room technician who comes from a family of musicians, has been playing the violin since she was 5. Asked to play for the operating room doctors, she was in the operating room area tuning up her violin, just a few feet away from the intensive care ward. The staff and patients there heard her and asked her to step into the ICW.

"I was right there in the middle of the ICW," McKittrick said. "They don't have violins over there. Everyone started perking up, sitting up in bed, looking around."

McKittrick grinned as she talked

Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski

Maintaining and improving the quality of life for our Soldiers and family members is one of my top priorities and my column this week will focus on Fort Benning's Morale, Welfare and Recreation programs. These programs reinforce the military mission by promoting physical, mental and social well-being. This enhances job proficiency, contributes to military effectiveness and maintains esprit de corps.

No easy task, developing the outdoor recreational needs of Fort Benning is a continuous process requiring updates, revisions and planning as the installation changes and facilities age.

In 2005, a comprehensive Leisure Needs Assessment survey was conducted on Fort Benning to include MWR to identify the recreational needs of the post. The survey included retirees, on- and off-post families, and Army civilian employees. This assessment identified 12 recreational complexes for renovation or development over the next 20 years.

With the state-of-the-art 100,000 square foot fitness center under construction on Olive-Watson Field (next to the one-mile running track) scheduled to open in July, we are well on our way to meeting the recreational needs identified in the survey.

Current proposals include developing a 400-meter sprint track and constructing an adjacent soccer field and two softball complexes located next to the new gym or within the one-mile track. And, although funding for these added recreational fields would be a challenge, MWR is working with the Directorate of Public Works to seek construction dollars to make them a reality.

Another exciting venture is the repair and renovation of the Russ Pond recreation area. Located within Fort Benning's historic recreational core, Russ Pond was built in the same era as Doughboy Stadium and Gowdy Field. Originally the site of the post's only swimming pool, Russ Pond eventually became a children's fishing pond and was slowly forgotten.

Today, the pond has been dredged, undergrowth has been cleared and a new playground has been erected. Recently stocked with grass carp and catfish, fishing will soon be open to youth 15 years old and younger. Volunteers will install grills and picnic tables in the very near future, and additional improvements at this unique site are scheduled over the coming years. Additionally, the Army's MWR board of directors just approved funding for a project validation assessment in anticipation of funding a 24-unit Recreational Lodging Motel that will overlook Russ Pond.

Also, exciting improvements are currently in progress at Kings Pond off Hourglass Road in the Harmony Church area. With the help of volunteers, the former tank trail leading to the pond has been smoothed and a level parking lot constructed. There is now a pavilion, playground, restroom facility and some primitive camping sites. A new boat ramp and fishing pier will soon be built for easier access to the 74-acre pond.

Other projects on the horizon include expanding the Outdoor Recreation Facility to better accommodate the constantly updated equipment and services offered by MWR: creating an area containing regulation and youth soccer fields, football fields, playgrounds, a dog park, picnic spot and walking trail called the French, Blue and Green Sports Complex; installing a permanent covered stage and production facility at Wetherby Field; developing an expanded walking/biking trail throughout post; and much more.

We are also upgrading the many shopping opportunities on Fort Benning including the construction of a new 240,000 square foot shopping mall that includes 36 concessionaires and a 700-seat capacity food court. Expected to open around Thanksgiving, the facility includes a new 110,000 square foot Post Exchange which doubles the retail space of the current PX.

Fort Benning's recreation and shopping opportunities are being expanded to meet the needs of our diverse population, including the influx of personnel as part of our transformation into the Maneuver Center of Excellence. Watch for even more exciting renovations and new developments in the very near future as we continue to make the best installation in the Army even better.

I'll have two soft tacos and a doctor's note

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

There are two kinds of employees who abuse their co-workers — those who call in sick when they aren't, and those who don't stay home when they should. Both kinds are dishonest.

Those who lie about being sick are more than liars, they're thieves if they get paid for their absence, and inconsiderate clods who add to the workload of those who do show up for work. This accounts for 10 percent of workplace absences nationally.

Those who show up at work with a fever because the industrialized world will come to a screeching halt without them are lying to themselves about their own importance.

I'm guilty of both, so spare me the hate mail.

Back in college, I'd call work to say I wasn't feeling well and justify the lie (it was little, and it was white, right?) by staying in bed late. "Well" is such a subjective state, don't you think. If I eat too many tacos, I don't feel well. If I watch a scary movie, I don't feel well. If I stay out late tonight, I definitely won't feel well tomorrow morning. By noon, I'll be fine.

For the sake of argument, to buttress my case, let's ask Webster who qualifies for sick leave.

Dear Web, I'm having a bad hair day. Can I call in sick?

Not technically. But you could call in "not well," because one of the definitions of "well" is "with good appearance or effect." Tell the boss you're not well and go get your hair done.

Dear Web, I woke up on the wrong side of the bed. Can I call in sick?

You're not paying attention. Think semantics. You're not sick, but you're not well, because "well" is also defined as "in a kindly or friendly manner." If you're not feeling kindly, kindly stay home.

I could go on. Well means "fortunate" so don't go to work if you're not absolutely certain it's your lucky day. Well means "with good reason," so if you can't think of a good reason to go to work, call in "not well." Who cares how it impacts morale or production?

And then there are the others, those who lie to themselves. They show up and share their cooties with their co-workers. I'm guilty. I did it just this week, and I'll pay for it next week, when they stay home sick and I have to work overtime. It's a vicious cycle.

According to WebDoc, I didn't do my co-workers any favors. At this time of year, with a new virus evolving every nanosecond, sick people should stay home. That doesn't mean they should medicate themselves until they feel "well enough" to work. No sir, if they're sick, they should stay home.

Both types of abusers cost their employers. According to the Bureau of Statistics, on average, a sick or pseudo sick employee costs more than $25 per hour, when wages, leave, overtime and lost production are factored in. Sick leave is not an alternative to vacation or holiday pay. It's not "owed you." It's a safety net, and when it's abused, it costs taxpayers millions of dollars annually.

So, I want to apologize to my co-workers, sincerely, and thank the wise man in the elevator who noticed that I was sick. He could've said, "Go home and get over it, then get back to work." What he said was, "Go home and get over yourself, then get back to work." That's good medicine. I'm taking it.

Cyber Patrol: Beware what you post on the Web

ARMY NEWS SERVICE
William J. Buzinski

Every day a dedicated group of Army experts search the Internet looking at official and unofficial Army Web sites and blogs.

They look for potential operational security violations that enemies can use to cause physical harm to Soldiers and their families, and personal information that could help criminals conduct identity theft. Each day they discover OPSEC violations and instances of personal data being posted in a public space. They immediately contact the owner of the information, explain why it should not be posted on a public site, and work with the owner to correct the problem.

These experts belong to the Army's Web Risk Assessment Cell and their work has been very effective. In 2006, AWRAC reviewed more than 1,200 known Army

Web sites, plus 500 blogs and unofficial sites. AWRAC officials worked with Soldiers who did not realize the security ramifications of the data they posted, resulting in the removal of such sensitive information as biological, chemical and missile weapon systems on public sites. They also worked to remove information that would have enabled the theft of Soldiers Social Security numbers, dates of birth and home addresses.

The Internet is an incredible forum that allows worldwide exchange of news, opinion and information. It gives people around the world the opportunity to take advantage of the freedom of speech that is so important here in the States and in other free nations.

Yet even with the right to free speech, people normally would not tell the world the combination to the family's safe, where the extra house key is hidden or the route a child takes home from school. Following that same logic, talk of troop movements, weapon systems, upcoming deployments and tactical operations are best kept secret. The same is true for personal information that could result in identity theft. We must discipline ourselves to think before we post information.

Like most information assurance activities, keeping useful information out of the hands of criminals and enemies requires nothing more than common sense. With the sophisticated search capabilities now available, any unsecured site — no matter how small and obscure — is available to the entire world. Thinking twice before posting potentially harmful information is all it takes to help keep Army personnel and their families a little more secure.

Myths, perceptions hinder growth in South Columbus

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Editor's note: In this, part two of a series on the revitalization of Columbus South, we look at the attitudes, perceptions and practices that hinder progress in the areas of growth and economics.

The South shall rise again," Reggie Richards told her listeners last Wednesday morning while serving as a guest co-host on TalkLine, a local AM radio show that often centers on the subject of race relations and the disparity in economics on the north and south sides of Columbus. Ironically, Richards used a phrase commonly found on the bumpers of pick-ups to forecast a rebirth in South Columbus, an area populated with the city's largest concentration of minorities.

"Columbus South has been ignored and neglected for way too long. We're going to turn things around," Richards said. "And I'm not talking about industrialization. I'm talking about bringing this community together again, strengthening it."

A tiny blonde with a passion for salvaging what she calls "the city's most culturally diverse region," Richards would be forgiven for feeling out of place in this part of town. She doesn't. Last week, she approached a business owner who spoke little English. The mountain of tires in front of his shop was an eyesore, a safety hazard and a violation of the city code.

Somehow, Richards managed to communicate to him her desire to help him avoid a citation and present a storefront that would be attractive to potential customers. She wasn't threatened by him, and she had no intention of being a threat to him.

"We certainly don't want him to close up shop," she said. "I just needed him to know I'm on his side, and I want to help him, because, let's face it, he's helping Soldiers with prices they're not going to find anywhere else. We don't want to replace our mom and pop businesses. We want to mentor them. They are what sets Columbus South apart from the rest of Columbus."

You'll seldom hear Richards call it South Columbus. It's "Columbus South," and it's the name of the task force established nearly two years ago to oversee sound growth and revitalization in the 11.8 square miles of South Columbus tucked between Victory Drive and St. Mary's Road.

Shortly after the Columbus South task force was incorporated more than a year ago, Richards was hired on as the executive director. As the only paid employee, she works alongside 17 volunteers who are committed to reversing the failures and misfortunes the last three decades have wrought in that part of town.

For Richards, a local radio personality and former high school teacher, joining the task force "felt like coming home." Her parents still live in the cozy, red-brick house they bought in Benning Hills 48 years ago, after her father returned from Korea, before he left for Vietnam. Richards and her siblings were raised in that house, though the Army carried them off from time to time to duty stations around the country. They attended Baker High School, where the forged lifelong friendships with other Army brats. The school was built with federal money in 1943 to service the children of Fort Benning Soldiers. Life revolved around Baker High, back then, just as South Columbus revolved around the post. To this day, Richards said, most Columbus South residents claim ties to Fort Benning, though some are generations removed.

And the people of Columbus South still like having Fort Benning to their south, said Ken Williams, a former Soldier who owns and operates Destiny Chili Dogs off Victory Drive.

"We like the Fort Benning folks," he said. "We like anyone who comes here and doesn't give us a reason not to like them. The people of South Columbus are a loving, diverse group of people and they accept all kinds of people from all kinds of cultures. I don't care if you have a dollar or two dollars or a million — when you come here, we'll treat you with respect."

The south side's slow demise started more than 25 years ago, Richards said, when realtors started focusing on North Columbus and encouraged incoming Soldiers to settle north of Macon Road. Fort Benning has always been an economic boon to Columbus, but for nearly three decades, the communities right outside the gates have not benefited from it nearly as much as their northern neighbors.

Williams' business has benefited from its proximity to Fort Benning. The restaurant stays busy seven days a week, but it's seldom so busy as it is during lunchtime, when customers from all over the city and the post vie for seats with the local clientele. At noon, Destiny Dogs is a case study of what Columbus South should look like, Richards said. Customers come in all colors, from all walks of life. She's dined there with blue collars, rednecks, professionals and local government leaders. Unfortunately, at the end of the day, most of them head north.

Reggie Richards and a team of volunteers mulch trees along Benning Road Wednesday. Richards, who grew up in Columbus, the daughter of a three-war veteran, is the executive director of Columbus South Inc., the agency tasked with overseeing revitalization in South Columbus.

"I can tell you, the myths, the misconceptions about Columbus South still exist," she said. "Everyone who lives here is not needy. They're not criminals. The schools are just as good; they have to be, because the teachers have to meet the same criteria. They have the same passion for teaching. And we have strong, healthy families here."

Still, Columbus South struggles with its image, Richards and Williams agreed.

"We're an eyesore," Richards said. "We have large pockets of deprivation. And the people in government haven't done a very good job of maintaining this part of town."

Absent landlords are responsible for many of the dilapidated buildings, such as the burned-out Denny's building on Victory Drive. Others, like the Candlelight Motel, have been forced to close for illegal practices.

"Here's what it all comes down to," Richards said. "We have city codes that should be enforced no matter what side of Columbus you're in. We have to be aggressive. The neglected, run-down building you see here would never be tolerated in another part of town."

The loss of some businesses is a gain to Columbus South, Richards said, but others are bittersweet. The demolition of the Camellia Apartment and Baker Village are long past due, but those neighborhoods were a glorious part of a glorious past. Baker Village, once filled with military families, evolved into a housing project with government-subsidized rentals. Crime became a big problem. Drive-bys and drug busts were everyday occurrences.

It's imperative that the communities constructed in their place foster the kind of communal living that characterized Columbus South in its heyday, Williams said, with greenspace and landscaping and playgrounds.

"Here's what I don't want to happen; I don't want to displace people who move on to live the same way somewhere else," he said. "We have to address the issues of poverty and cultural issues that trap people in a mentality of poverty. We have to change the mindset of people in this part of town. It's a deep-rooted problem."

Williams believes the problem lies within. Change "has to start internally," he said.

Richards has a different perspective.

"People fight revitalization because they don't believe it will work," she said. "There's a lot of skepticism here, but external forces are certainly our worst enemy. People don't believe we can change."

And lasting change will only result from a concerted effort citywide, she said. Columbus cannot exist and thrive as a city divided along race or socioeconomic lines.

A healthy Columbus South would only enhance efforts to make Columbus a viable tourist town, a "destination city."

Williams believes Columbus South must be revitalized to save its soul, and the rest of the city would do well to capitalize on it.

"If I could change one thing, it would be the perception of South Columbus," he said. "I don't want to change what it is that makes us unique, all the cultures and the faiths and the traditions that make it such a great place to live. I just want to see it resurrected. And I think it can happen."

"I believe that," he said. "God is in the business of revitalization, and I think the name Victory Drive is biblical. We are going to be victorious."

In next week's Bayonet: "I learned this in the Army," said Ken Williams, a South Columbus business owner.

"If the tire's flat, we know the tire's flat. I don't want to know how it got that way. I want to know how we're going to fix it."

From Fort Benning to the White House

THE BAYONET
Annette Fournier

When Dwight D. Eisenhower, a young Midwestern man, first put on an Army uniform, chances are he didn't expect where it would lead him in life — from North Africa to NATO, through two World Wars and eventually to the White House. Eisenhower would serve more than 40 years in the Army, and return multiple times to Fort Benning.

He was born Oct. 14, 1890, in Denison, Texas, and moved with his family to Kansas in 1891, where he was raised. He attended the U.S. Military Academy, graduating in 1915. After being commissioned as an Infantry lieutenant, he was assigned to Fort Sam Houston, Texas. There he met and married Mamie Geneva Doud in 1916.

The couple moved to several posts, and in 1918, Eisenhower transferred to Camp Benning, which had been open only a few months, to command the Tank Corps troops. But Eisenhower stayed less than a year, leaving in March 1919. He did not return to Benning for several years.

Though he'd been promoted temporarily to lieutenant colonel during the war, he was downgraded to the rank of captain during peace time. He was turned down for the Infantry Officer's Course in 1920,

The 34th President, Dwight D. Eisenhower and in frustration, he nearly left the Army.

He persevered, and after graduating top in his class from the Command and General Staff College, Eisenhower returned to Fort Benning. He served as the executive officer of the 24th Infantry and battalion commander of the 2nd Battalion.

While stationed at Benning from August 1926 to January 1927, Eisenhower lived at 206 Austin Loop, also called Building 418. The house stands in a quiet neighborhood across from the commanding general's house, Riverside.

Eisenhower was a talented football player as a young man, but injured his knee ending his tackling career. While at Fort Benning he coached the Doughboy football team to the 1926 all-Army championship.

Gen. John "Black Jack" Pershing noticed Eisenhower's leadership abilities and understanding of world events, so he selected Eisenhower to write for the American Battle Monuments Commission, and Eisenhower departed Fort Benning for Washington.

During World War II, Eisenhower commanded the Allied invasion of North Africa, the Italian campaign and the Allied expeditionary forces during the invasion of Normandy. He would rise to the ranks of five-star general.

He later served as Chief of Staff of the Army and Supreme Commander of NATO. In 1953, he was inaugurated as the 34th president, and served two terms.

Eisenhower visited Fort Benning at least four times during his presidency. Eisenhower's son was stationed at Fort Benning in the 1950s, and Eisenhower visited his son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren here.

He also presided over the ceremony unveiling the original Follow Me statue at Eubanks Field in 1960.

Eisenhower died in Walter Reed Army Medical Center, March 28, 1969.

Benning's presidential visits

October
1921

President Warren G. Harding visits Camp Benning, possibly to preside over the Infantry School's first graduation.

April 1943

President Franklin D. Roosevelt is greeted by troops at the Fort Benning railroad station. He watches Infantry, Armor and paratrooper demonstrations, and sees one of the newest Infantry weapons, a bazooka. Post Soldiers stage a mock battle between Infantrymen and Soldiers dressed in Nazi uniforms. They use potatoes stuffed with firecrackers to simulate hand grenades.

April 1950

President Harry S. Truman visits and is treated to a firepower display, airborne demonstrations and a troop review. The motorcade route is published in advance so people can wave at the motorcade.

November 1953

President Dwight Eisenhower visits his son, daughter-in-law and grandchildren at Fort Benning. He visits Fort Benning at least three more times.

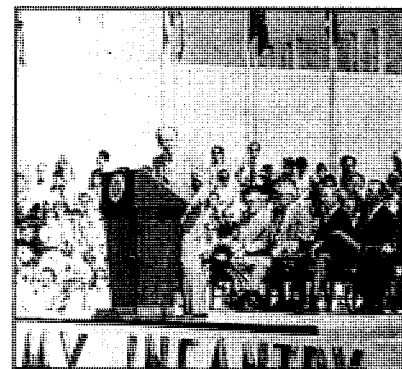

November 1967

President Lyndon B. Johnson came to Benning to present awards to 14 veterans at a ceremony in Doughboy stadium.

June 1975

President Gerald Ford speaks to a crowd of 25,000 in front of Infantry Hall for the Army's 200th Anniversary. The ceremony included Ranger and Airborne demonstrations.

December 1978

President Jimmy Carter and his wife, Rosalynn, visit Fort Benning on their way to their home in Plains, Ga.

April 1995

President Bill Clinton spoke to troops at Lawson Army Airfield, thanking them for their service.

January 2007

President George W. Bush addresses troops, visits Airborne school, meets with families who have lost Soldiers.

Vietnam hero to be awarded Medal of Honor

AMERICAN FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Donna Miles

WASHINGTON — More than 40 years after demonstrating the heroism immortalized in the bestselling book and movie, We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, retired Army Lt. Col. Bruce P. Crandall will receive the Medal of Honor, the White House announced Feb. 9.

Crandall will receive the nation's highest military award for actions during the Battle of Ia Drang Valley in Vietnam in November 1965. The battle, at Landing Zone X-Ray near the Ia Drang River, was the first major ground battle of the war.

During the incident, Crandall, then a major and commander of A Company, 229th Assault Helicopter Battalion, 1st Cavalry Division (Airmobile), dodged intense enemy fire as he repeatedly flew to a landing zone to rescue and resupply besieged 1st Cavalry Division ground troops.

The narrative for Crandall's Medal of Honor credits him with displaying leadership by example and fearless courage as he "voluntarily flew his unarmed helicopter through a gauntlet of enemy fire on flight after flight, delivering desperately needed ammunition, water and medical supplies into one of the most hotly contested landing zones of the war."

Crandall led a flight of 16 helicopters in support of the 1st Cavalry Division's 1st Battalion, 7th Cavalry Regiment, which was out of water, running dangerously low on ammunition and engaging about two regiments of North Vietnamese army infantry "determined to overrun and annihilate them," the narrative reads.

When the enemy fire got so intense that the infantry commander closed the landing zone, Crandall volunteered for the mission. He and his wingman, Maj. Ed Freeman, are credited with saving more than 70 wounded Soldiers by transporting them to safety.

Freeman received the Medal of Honor for his efforts in July 2001.

Several books about the battle recognize Crandall and Freeman's contributions. Among the most well-known is the bestselling We Were Soldiers Once ... and Young, coauthored by Lt. Gen. Harold Moore, commanding officer of infantry units in X-Ray, and Joseph Galloway, a combat reporter who was in the landing zone during the battle.

A major motion picture based on the book featured actor Greg Kinnear as Crandall.

Later during his Vietnam tour, Crandall demonstrated another act of heroism. While under enemy fire, using a flashlight to guide his UH-1 Huey helicopter, he dropped through dense jungle to rescue 12 wounded Soldiers. For that action, he was awarded the first AVCO-Aviation/Space Writers Association Helicopter Heroism Award. This award is sponsored by the Aviation/Space Writers Association and AVCC Corporation, and is awarded to an individual for heroism efforts involving the use of a helicopter.

During a second tour in Vietnam, in 1968, Crandall was downed during another rescue attempt and spent five months in the hospital. He resumed his military career, retiring as a lieutenant colonel in 1977.

Crandall was inducted into the Army Aviation Hall of Fame at Fort Rucker, Ala., in 2004. He also was the seventh Army inductee into the "Gathering of Eagles," a U.S. Air Force organization that honors contributors to aviation.

Bush will present Crandall the Medal of Honor during a Feb. 26 White House ceremony.

After receiving the Medal of Honor, Crandall will join 111 other living recipients of the award, 60 of them awarded for actions in Vietnam, according to the Congressional Medal of Honor Society.

The Medal of Honor, the highest U.S. military decoration, is awarded "for conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity at the risk of life, above and beyond the call of duty, in actual combat against an armed enemy force." Since it was first awarded during the Civil War, the medal has been awarded 3,461 times.

The Medal of Honor was last presented to the family of 22-year-old Marine Cpl. Jason L. Dunham, who died using his body to shield fellow Marines in Iraq from a hand grenade April 15, 2004. President Bush awarded Dunham's Medal of Honor posthumously during a Jan. 11 ceremony at the White House.

This week in Bayonet history

1926

Lt. and Mrs. Paul A. Reichle have returned to garrison after a motor trip to Philadelphia and points east.

• Tuition fees at the Fort Benning schools were $5.50 for grade school students and $3 for kindergarten-aged students per month. For the children of enlisted Soldiers, the fees were $3 for grade school, $1 for kindergarten.

• The Army switched to .30 M1 caliber bullets. The boat tail-design bullet made it more accurate and increased velocity of shots.

• "Hungry? Eat CDC ice cream. It's all food. It's rich in butter fat. It's recommended for children."

• Veterans of the Spanish-American War gathered in the garrison theaters "to pay tribute to their comrades who gave their lives in the overthrow of tyranny."

• A new "moving picture" theater opened on post. It was made of concrete and had 1,543 seats, had a power projection machine and a heating system. The old theater had been in a converted cow barn with "rickety roof, cracked floor and drafty walls."

MOVIES: Thief of Bagdad, Irish Luck, The Merry Widow

1947

• Helpy-Selfy Laundry advertised its laundry service — 7 cents per pound of laundry, or people could rent machines for 75 cents per hour.

• The Army post office reported that 2,800 bags of Christmas mail being sent to Army personnel in Korea was lost during a hurricane.

• A three-bedroom house on a large lot cost $8,750. It cost $18 to fly to Cincinnati from Atlanta.

• Army airplanes had trouble operating in temperatures colder than 35 degrees. Portable heaters had to be placed beneath the engines.

• Telephone calls could be placed to U.S. military personnel in the American-occupied areas of Germany. The call had to be placed 24-hours in advance, so the telephone operators could locate the person being called and bring them to one of nine calling facilities and then have the call placed again. It cost $12 for three minutes.

• The last American GI left England five years after personnel had first gone in support of war efforts.

NEWS AROUND the ARMY

Troops patrol Baghdad for bombs

During a joint patrol in the Al Doura district in Baghdad, Soldiers from Company B, 12th District Regiment, attached to the 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 1st Cavalry Division, were able to foil a man planting a roadside bomb Jan. 25.

Staff Sgt. Drew Preston saw a man halfway up a light pole. He figured he was running a power line or phone cable, but followed the hanging wire and saw it went into the ground in almost the exact location an IED had been found Jan. 24.

The Soldiers got the man down and searched him and found a diagram describing how to build an IED.

A U.S. Navy EOD team safely destroyed the bomb with two controlled blasts.

GIANTS AMONG US

'It's about making them good citizens'

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

Quite often, Yamill Collazo has to skate with one foot in his mouth.

The coach of the Columbus GT Speed skate team and the lead teacher in the regular Saturday morning skate safety class at the JAM Skate Center, Collazo has to be plainspoken, occasionally outspoken, and every now and then, just plain outspoken. For two hours every Saturday, those dozens of rambunctious kids are his "babies." He speaks to them like he'd speak to his own kids — he has three of them — and woe to anyone who speaks ill to them or of them.

"While they're here, they're mine. If someone steps on their toes or hurts their feelings, they won't come back," said Collazo, who recently stopped practice, gathered his students and their parents, and admonished the adults for being critical of his babies. Someone had yelled at one of his skaters, and she left the floor crying. Collazo was having none of that.

"They're here to have fun, and that's the bottom line. They're kids. Let them be kids," he said.

Though Collazo insists it's all about "fun," — the classes, the team and the sport in general — he's taken some serious steps to help them develop into the kind of citizens their parents will be proud of.

"It's not about making them good athletes," said Collazo, the media specialist at the Western Hemisphere for Security Cooperation's John B. Amos Library. "It's about making them good citizens. I get in trouble sometimes for saying not everyone can grow up to be the president. In this country, we teach kids that anybody can be president. That's not true. Everybody can't be a chemist, either. We should set attainable goals — big goals, but attainable goals. And they should all make it their goal to be good, productive citizens."

Collazo was an Army brat who grew up in Columbus during the Vietnam War. His mom dropped him off regularly at the skating rink while she worked. There he found his niche.

"I tried out for baseball, but I didn't make the team," he said. "I didn't make the basketball team, either. But I could skate, and I became good at it. It gave me confidence, and I had fun."

So much so, that he kept skating, after a stint in the Navy. He met his wife at the skating rink. He taught his kids to skate and saw one daughter compete at world level. He eventually started a local chapter of GT Speed, which has skaters ranked nationally.

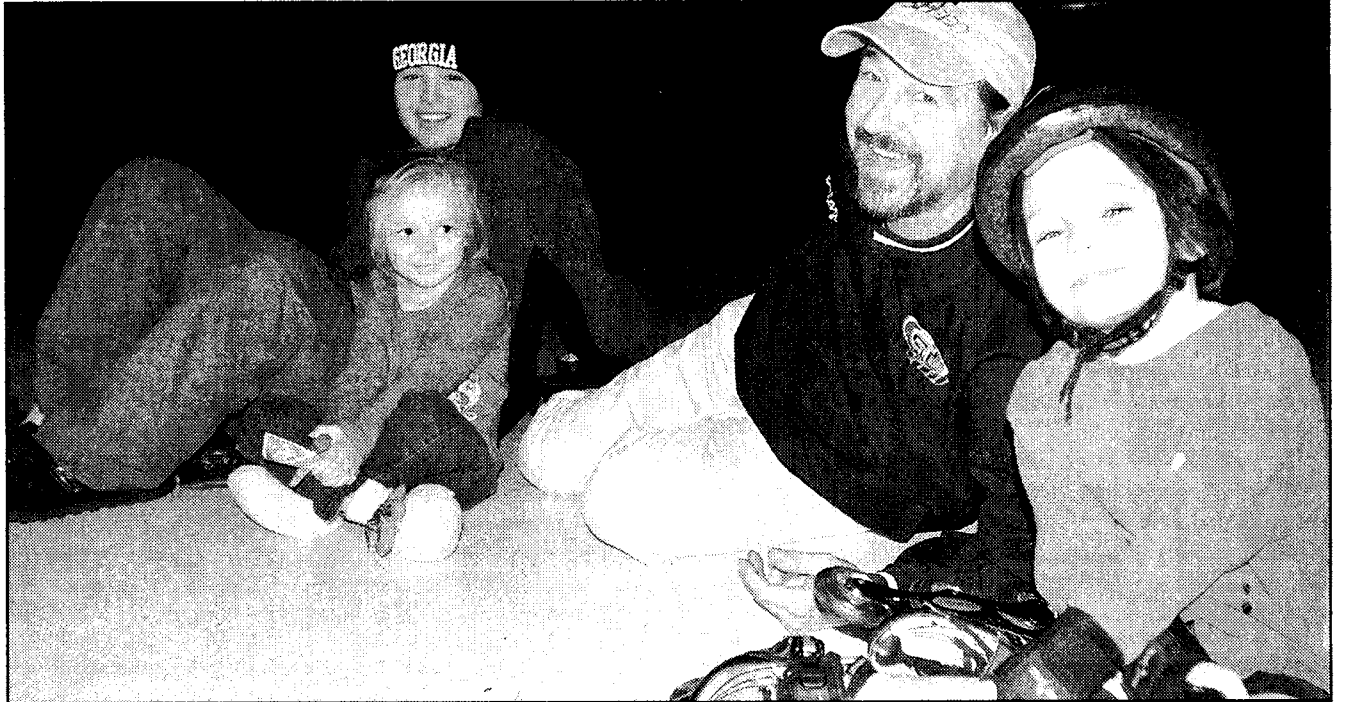

His team skaters work hard to compete. They practice rigorously six times a week, and they're required to maintain good grades. Collazo asks a lot of his kids. He gives a lot in return.

A few years back, after struggling to deal with a skater suffering from ADHD, Collazo paid a visit to a local child psychologist to learn how to help the child. The lessons he learned from the doc are still paying off, said Stacey White, who is raising her nephew, 14-year-old Brandon, who also suffers from the disorder.

When Brandon joined the White household more than a year ago, he was failing in school, constantly in trouble and often withdrawn.

"He's done a complete 180 since he started skating," White said. "(Collazo) drew him in, started talking to him and made him feel comfortable. He constantly reminds him to be responsible and respectful."

Brandon makes good grades now.

We should set attainable goals — big goals, but attainable goals. And they should all make it their goal to be good, productive citizens.

— Yamill Collazo

He has no behavior problems at school, he no longer takes medication, he lost 13 pounds, developed muscles and gained confidence. In a word, he's "blossomed."

"Skating has made all the difference," White said. "He expends energy and he's doing something he loves. It gives him a reason to do better in school. He's turned into this polite young man who loves to be a helper."

Collazo wants all his students and skaters to be helpers, to help make their corner of the world a better place, he said. Before Christmas, they adopted a National Guard unit out of Atlanta, a unit that had sustained a great number of casualties. The skaters collected phone cards, toiletries and snacks. Everybody, including the coaches, wrote letters to the Soldiers.

"On Fort Benning, we know what it's all about," Collazo said. "But a lot of these kids aren't affiliated with the military, and I wanted them to understand what these Soldiers do and why they do it."

Collazo admits he uses his platform as a coach — "Pucho" his skaters call him — to teach life lessons. Last weekend, after listening to his older skaters talk about a Friday-night party that got out of control, Collazo preached about cool heads and common sense.

"If you go to a party and it's just not right, leave man. You need to walk away," he told them. "You have to avoid those kinds of bad situations, because they can escalate."

The parents of his skaters typically support him, Collazo said, though they occasionally raise an eyebrow at his frank way of dealing with the kids. That's a good thing, he said.

"I'm with these kids six to eight hours every week, and I'm an open book," he said. "Their teachers have them all day, every day. Some of them have babysitters. Parents need to know who's in their child's mind. Who's molding them? Who's shaping their lives?"

Collazo is available for life shaping, molding, preaching and skate lessons Saturdays at 8:30 a.m. The two-hour sessions cost $6.

For more information, call Collazo at 706-392-3629.

Bush: Baghdad security plan still in early stages

capital city of Baghdad, Bush said.

Iraqi Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki has his top commander in place and forces are busy setting up a command-and-control headquarters in Baghdad, Bush said. Bush cautioned that the plan is in its early stages.

"The operation to secure Baghdad is going to take time, and there will be violence," Bush said. "These are people that will kill innocent men, women and children to achieve their object, to discourage the Iraqi people, to foment sectarian violence, and to, frankly, discourage us from helping this government do its job."

Recent suicide bombings demonstrate there is an active strategy to undermine the Iraqi government and its Baghdad security plan, Bush said. He also said the recent surge in violence illustrates that failure by the coalition forces to secure Baghdad would have devastating consequences on both the Iraqi and the American people.

"If you think the violence is bad now, imagine what it would look like if we don't help them secure the capital city of Baghdad," he said.

If the Iraqi government falls, chaos will follow and the vacuum will be filled with extremists who pose a threat to our national security, he said.

"To step back from the fight in Baghdad would have disastrous consequences for the people in America," Bush said. "I believe that success in Baghdad will help us have success in helping us secure the homeland."

"What is different about this conflict than some others is that if we fail there the enemy will follow us here," he said.

Bush said the first step to stabilizing the region is to secure the capital and give the government "political breathing space."

This will allow the government to reconcile internal differences and demonstrate to the locals that the government can work and can produce tangible results. Additional coalition forces will help give the Iraqi government that breathing room.

Other benchmarks met by the Iraqi government include the recent passing of its $41 billion budget, of which $10 billion is earmarked for reconstruction and capital investment. Also, lawmakers there are working to pass an oil revenue law that will give the Iraqi people a stake in the country's oil future, Bush said.

This progress, he said, will deliver tangible results to the Iraqi people that will demonstrate the government there can work.

Right now, the timing of coalition forces is on schedule to give Petraeus the forces he needs when he needs them, Bush said. Coalition forces' initial plans are to begin clearing, holding and rebuild neighborhoods in city.

To step back from the fight in Baghdad would have disastrous consequences for the people in America. I believe that success in Baghdad will help us have success in helping us secure the homeland.

— President George W. Bush

"We have been good about clearing, but not holding," Bush said.

To help with this, Bush is giving local commanders more flexibility with reconstruction funds and sending more provincial reconstruction teams so Iraqi people see progress under the new government.

Kuwaiti: Joined Army at 38 after becoming U.S. citizen

"They all said I am too old. Some of the guys I'm training with are the same age as my son. But human beings can adapt to anything. I came here from a country and a culture 180 degrees different. I learned the language, the culture."

"Edwards is well motivated, which makes our job easier," said Sgt. 1st Class Brian Marone, senior drill sergeant. "He's older, he likes to clarify what's expected of him and then he executes it."

This is not the first time Sand Hill has had a Southwest Asian Soldier. A few cycles ago, A Company had an Afghani Soldier. Older Soldiers, and Soldiers from other places bring a lot to basic training, Marone said.

"Edwards has been given a lot of adversity," Marone said. "It's great to have him here with these young Soldiers who have probably not met anyone from the Middle East before. He brings his background and culture to the Army and it gives Soldiers an understanding of people."

Edwards hopes he can teach troops about his background before they deploy.

"My advice to Soldiers when they meet Arabs is to be respectful," Edwards said. "Arabs are very passionate people — they can be your best friend and give you the shirt from their back, or your worst enemy like these suicide bombers."

"I joined expecting to deploy, but it will still be strange. When you leave a place, you have a picture in your head of how it is. You go back, and it's never the same. I'm not the same either. I'll have an American flag on my shoulder, and walk in Kuwait and Iraq as an American Soldier."

Grass: Unable to grow because of unauthorized parking

This requires an expenditure of time and resources to repair. It also detracts from the beauty of our post."

Command Sgt. Maj. Russell Sadler, Garrison sergeant major, expressed his concerns pertaining to the parking issues.

"When we exhibit willful indifference to the authority and regulations that govern our way of life, we have selectively lowered the standards. Parking in unauthorized areas shows a lack of personal discipline. Discipline is one of the fundamental tenets of our Army. If we do not practice discipline in a relaxed environment how can we assure ourselves that we will do the right thing when it really matters."

Parking areas are designed to allow traffic to flow while allowing the maximum number of vehicles to be safely parked in a given area, Sadler said. This can be a safety issue as well. Parking in seeded areas can prevent emergency vehicles from getting to an incident by hindering their movement or keeping other vehicles from yielding the right of way, Snow said.

"This has become a command issue and a vigorous enforcement campaign has begun. Violators will be ticketed and could face steep fines and possible UCMJ action," Snow said.

Musicians: Played for hospitalized patients in Afghanistan

about an adult patient who insisted on keeping the drapes around his bed drawn. As she played Orange Blossom Special, he pulled the drapes open a little to peep out. Only the quick actions of a nurse saved him from falling out of his bed when he leaned out just a little too far.

One young patient, who had had brain surgery two days earlier, got out of his bed and walked up behind her.

"I didn't even see him and almost hit him with my bow,"

"The kids started dancing," said McKittrick. "Even (the 14th CSH commander) came out of his office and he did a couple of dances. It was pretty funny."

Tucked into her violin case is a photo of McKittrick cradling her violin and bow, with 8-year-old Mohamadi Kahn and his father. Seriously injured when he went out to play and stepped on a land mine, Mohamadi was confined to a bed.

"He was bored. They don't have toys and stuff to play with," McKittrick said. "I couldn't understand what he was saying if the translator wasn't there." But that didn't stop the little boy from getting his message across. Mohamadi loved the violin and would pantomime playing it when he saw her.

"Whenever he did that I would go get the violin," she said.

The hardships the children had to endure touched Cavenue.

"It hurt my heart to see the kids come in," he said. "They've lived hard lives."

Cavenue recalled one special patient, a boy who had lost a leg and suffered burns over his body. Describing the boy as a difficult patient, Cavenue made it a point to visit him often, showing him a different magic trick each time.

It took a disappearing trick to make a smile appear.

"I tried to make him smile for so long, and finally forced a smile out of him," said Cavenue.

The Soldiers spoke of their instruments as extensions of themselves.

"I never leave home without it," Cavenue said of his guitar.

McKittrick said that the hardest part of basic training was being without her violin.

Having their musical instruments with them made the deployment easier, the Soldiers said.

Cavenue's guitar made the return trip with him, but the violin McKittrick played during the deployment is now in the hands of another musician.

McKittrick, who owns five violins, purchased the violin she played in Afghanistan secondhand to avoid damage to her primary instrument. Shortly before the 14th left Bagram, McKittrick posted a notice putting it up for sale. Another Soldier saw the notice and purchased the instrument as a gift for his wife. Prior to his deployment, the Soldier and his wife had fallen on some hard times. To help alleviate their financial obligations, the wife sold her violin.

"The hardest thing a musician can do is to part with your instrument," McKittrick said. She said she was glad that she was able to help put a violin back in the hands of another violinist.

McKittrick described the deployment as a very rewarding experience.

"The people there — adults and children — appreciate it more. People here take a lot for granted. They don't realize how good they have it. When you see the level of poverty, the stuff they don't have, they appreciate every little thing you do."

"Even if it's just two songs, they appreciate everything you do," she said.

Basic training Soldiers tackle challenges designed to test their courage, build confidence

THE BAYONET
Master Sgt. Charles R. Evans

Soldiers from F Company, 2nd Battalion, 19th Infantry Regiment, took to the Eagle Tower training area last week to tackle a course designed to build confidence and test their fortitude.

Capt. James Taylor, company commander, explained the training. "These guys are in day two of training here. This course reinforces the importance of physical fitness and teaches them valuable skills they may need in combat," he said.

Scaling tall ladders, negotiating rope bridges, climbing down cargo nets and repelling down a wall presented the Soldiers challenges many had never encountered before.

Pvt. Scott Newby was enthusiastic about the training.

"It's amazing. It really helped me to overcome some of my fears and tested my physical abilities," Newby said.

Watching the training with "eagle eyes" was Staff Sgt. Jared Lausch, Eagle Tower NCOIC, and his cadre of instructors.

They teach Soldiers the proper way to negotiate the course, safety procedures and how to tie the "hip repel seat" that allows the Soldiers to repel down a vertical wall.

Pvt. Travis Wright was no stranger to climbing and repelling.

"This is lots of fun," he said, "I've rock climbed and free climbed, but now I'm learning the Army way."

"On the modern urban battlefield, negotiating high walls and other obstacles is a real possibility," Taylor said. "Training such as this instills confidence in Soldiers and prepares them to react to situations that can tax their nerves and abilities."

Soldiers rappel down the 40 ft. tower as other Soldiers belay from the ground.

Soldiers fall from a rope cargo net and land on a large pad during their confidence training.

BENCH NOTES

ERIN NASH

Drew chiefs suspended

Kerby Francis and Robbie Reeder, crew chiefs for Casey Kenna and Matt Keneath, were suspended for four races and fined $50,000 for violations discovered after a post-qualifying inspection Feb. 11.

Pedney Childers and Josh Brenna, crew chiefs for Scott Hicks and Elliott Sadler, were suspended for two races and fined $25,000.

The drivers were docked points assessed to the car owners.

The crew chiefs can appeal so they can work the Daytona 500 Sunday, because the hearing won't take place until after the race.

The infractions found on the cars supposedly made the cars more aerodynamic during qualifying.

Schott fired

San Diego Chargers team president Dean Spanos fired head coach Marty Schottenheimer Feb. 12, saying there was a "dysfunctional situation" between Schottenheimer and general manager A.J. Smith.

Schottenheimer's NFL record as head coach is 200-128-1. His playoff record is 5-13.

What happens in Vegas ...

The East and West will meet in Las Vegas for the 58th NBA All-Star game.

It will be at 8 p.m. Sunday on TNT.

Elway substitutes will not be playing because of injury, including Allen Iverson, Jason Kidd and Steve Nash.

Lefty wins at Pebble Beach

After a slow start to his season, Phil Mickelson wrapped up a victory Feb. 11 at the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am.

It was his 30th career PGA Tour victory and his 10th at Pebble Beach.

Daytona 500

The Great American Race is finally here — the Daytona 500 from Daytona International Speedway in Florida.

Coverage begins at 2 p.m. Sunday on Fox.

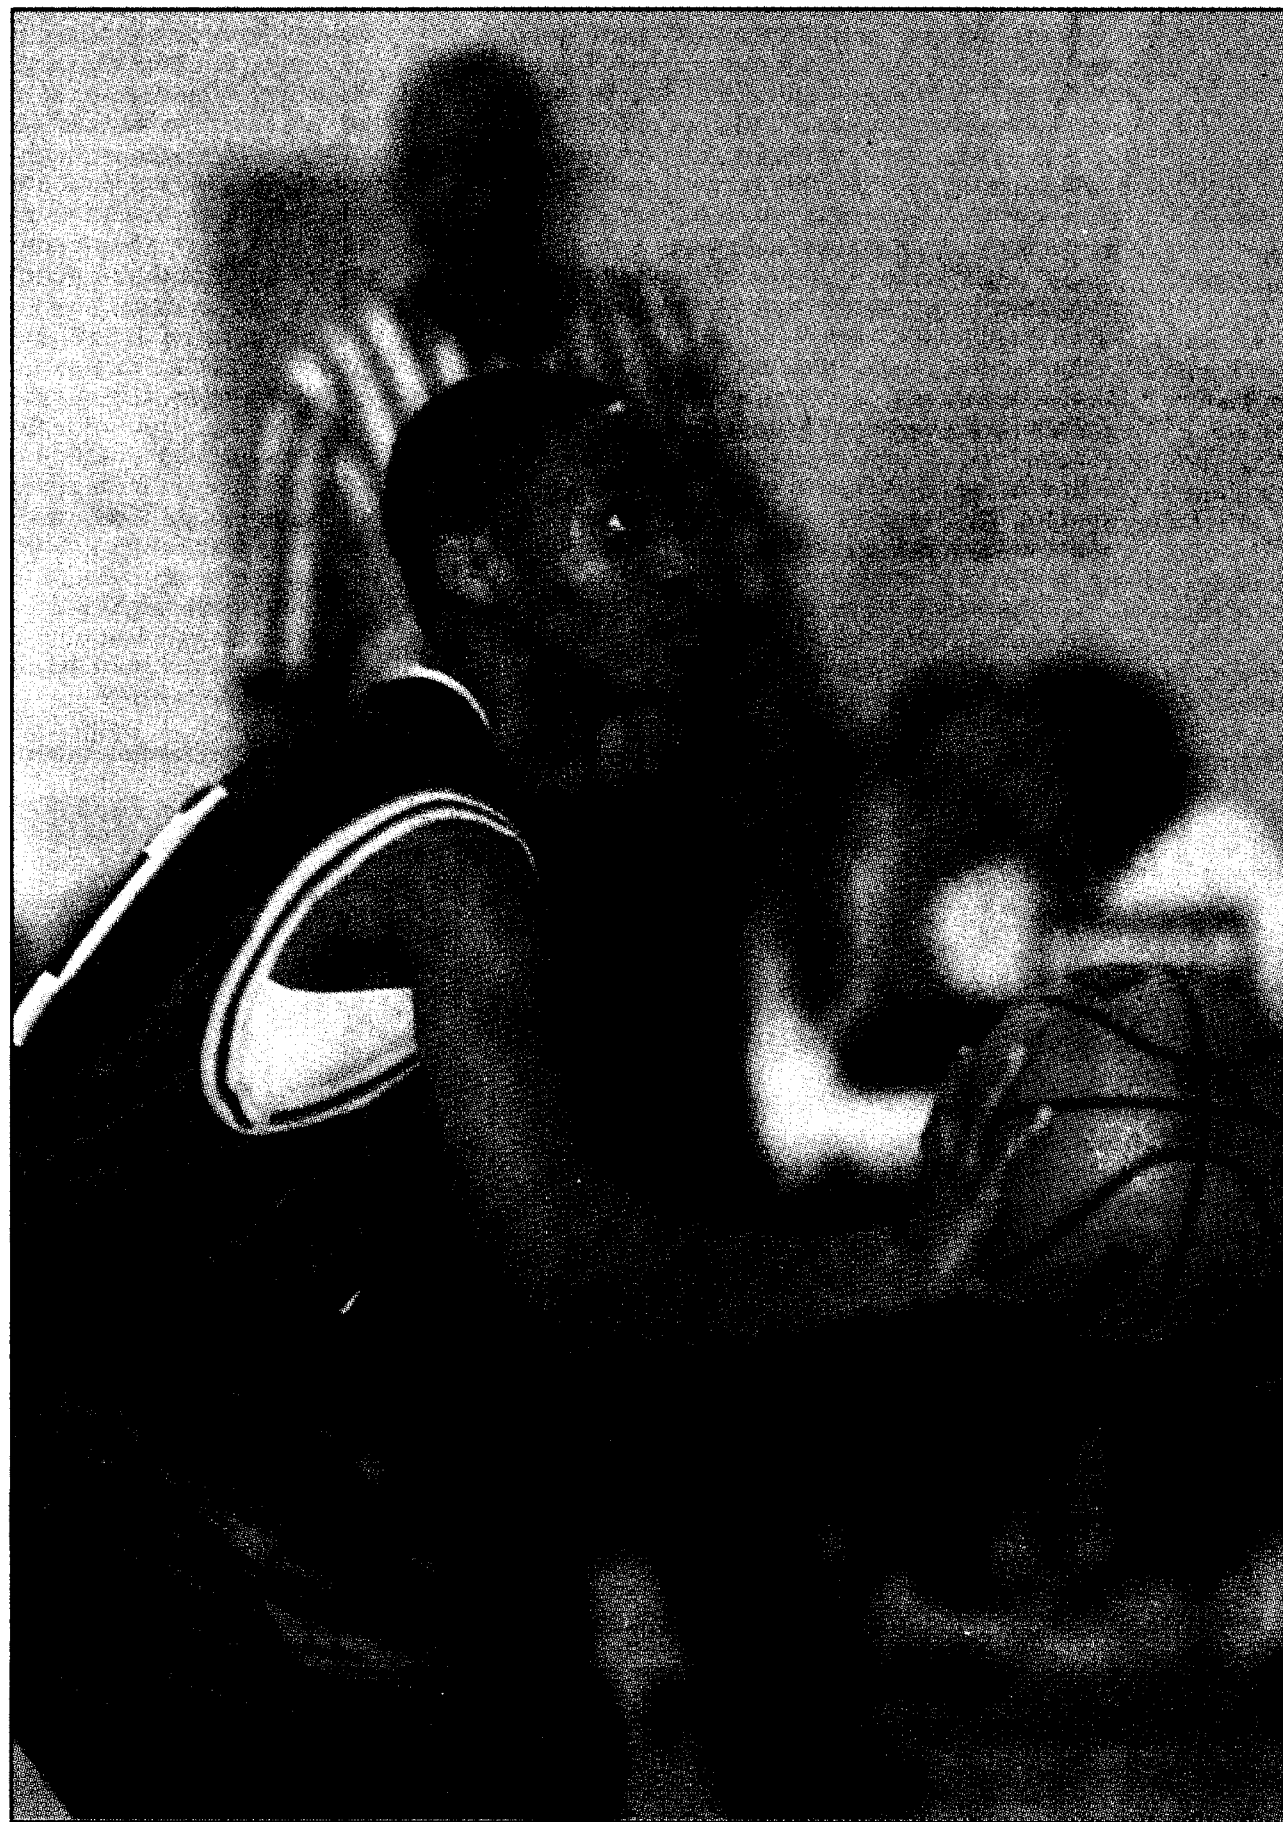

David Gilliland captured the pole position, followed by Ricky Rudd, David Stremme, and rookie Juan Montoya and David Reiger. Steve Saind starts sixth, Jeff Gordon seventh, Sterling Marlin eighth, Johnny Sauter ninth and Jimmie Johnson, reigning Nextel Cup champ and last year's 500 winner, round out the top 10.

The first Toyota to qualify is the No. 30 of David Reutimann, who qualified in the 14th position.

Tony Stewart, who won the Budweiser Shootout Feb. 10, will start in the 18th position.

Welcome to the 2007 NASCAR season. It should be a wild ride, and a heck of a season for both drivers and fans alike.

Enjoy the next nine months of racing. You're in!

Keeping the Faith

Middle school's abbreviated season ends, boys hold on to league title

Several players on Faith Middle School's girls' basketball team shed tears of frustration after being eliminated from the CIAA Tournament Friday night. They mounted a comeback late in the fourth quarter but ultimately came up short to St. Luke Middle School, with a score of 35-28.

About a half hour later, the same girls cheered in support of the boys' team which went on to win first place in the same tournament Saturday by defeating Mother Mary Mission 46-40.

"The teams support each other in every game," said Aaron Bell, head coach of both teams. "The girls also came back Saturday to support the boys, even though they didn't have to. We're one big happy family."

The girls' team, led by eighth-grader Juanita Malone and seventh-grader Erin Elliot, finished the season with a record of 5-4, while veterans Angel Reyes and Charlie Conner helped lead the boys to an undefeated 9-0.

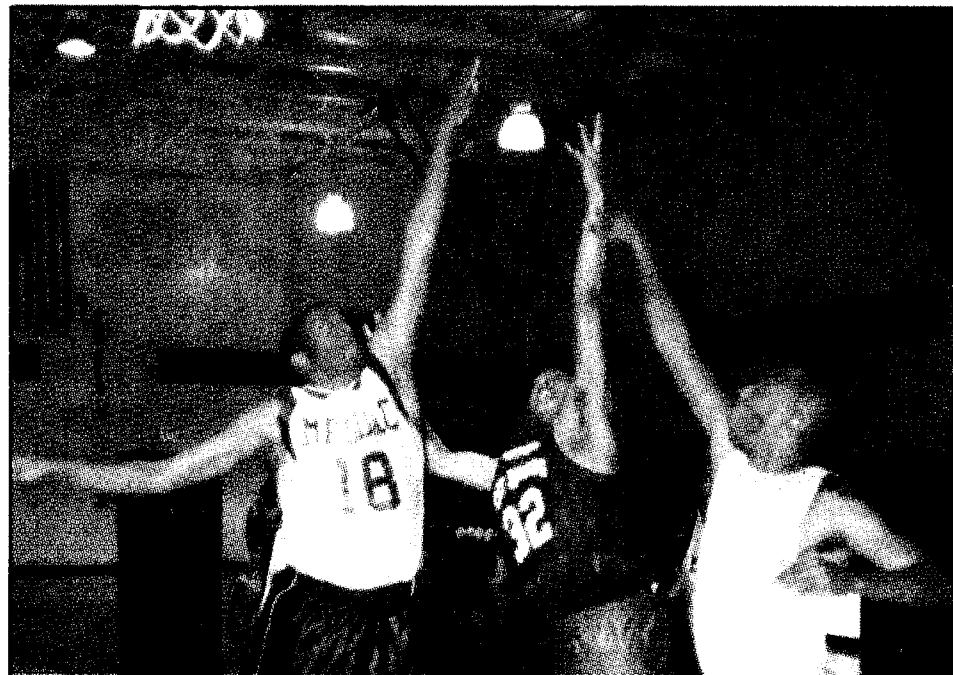

Cindy Givens, Faith's athletic director, said the girls' team worked hard on conditioning themselves throughout the season.

"They were able to develop a clear understanding of what sportsmanship is all about," she said. "I'm extremely proud of how they overcame the trying times."

Both teams faced obstacles this year. They were forced to play less than a third of the games they played just two seasons ago. Bell said several teams dropped out of the league, which resulted in a shorter season.

The school's volleyball program started at the same time as basketball for the first time this year, which prevented use of the gym on Mondays and Wednesdays for the basketball team.

The E Company, 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, held down fourth place in the Audie Murphy Intramural league after knocking off U.S.

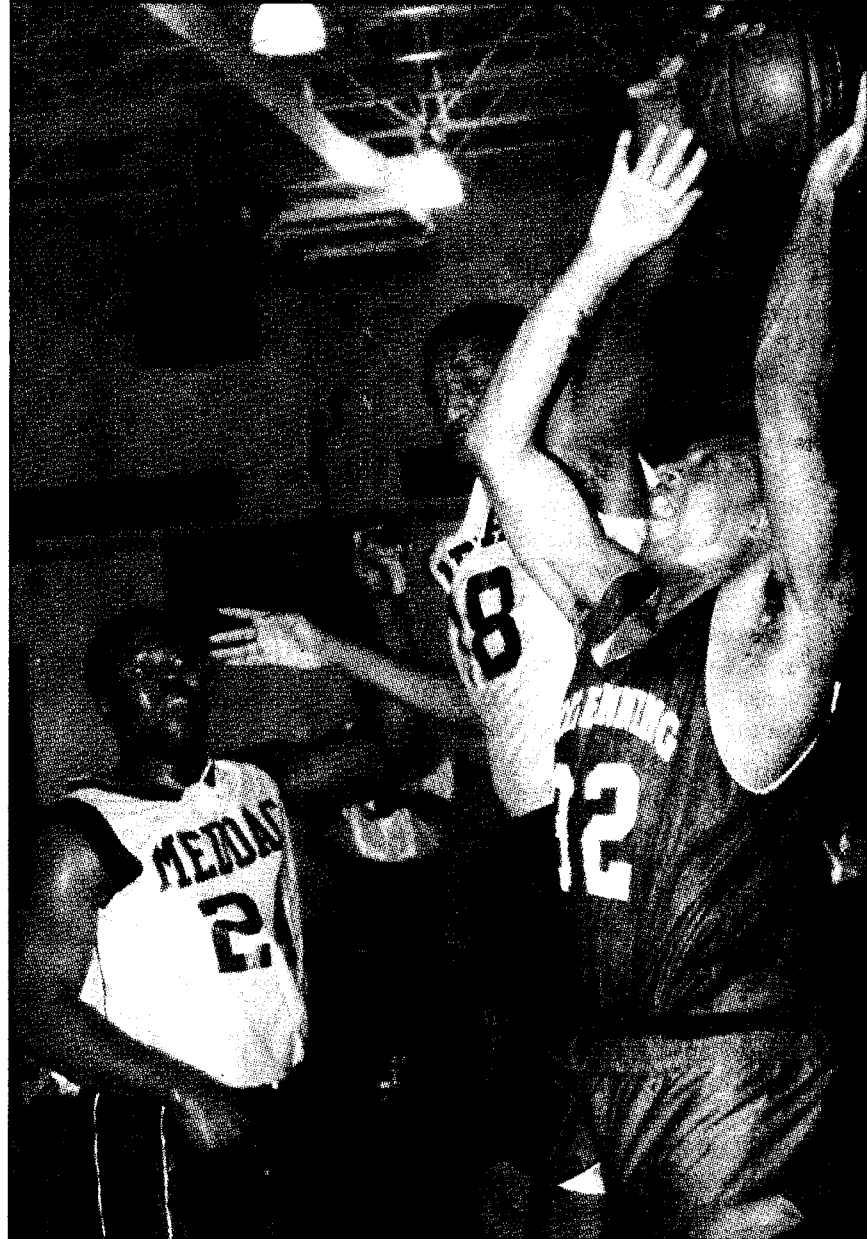

Army Medical Activity 53-34, Tuesday. They currently have a record of 5-2.

During the first half, E Co. demonstrated their shooting prowess.

Edward Agee dropped 16 points in the game. Luis Mendez played quality minutes, adding 12 points, including a couple of transition buckets off MEDDAC turnovers.

"We're doing pretty good," said E Co.'s Mendez. "We have a lot of young guys

Viva Las Vegas: All-Star weak-end

THE BAYONET
By Mitchell Thomas IV

Football season is history. It's my game time, baby. It's time for NBA to play no nonsense, no frills and most importantly — no excuses B-ball. Every team's strengths and weaknesses have been exposed. Team chemistry should no longer be an issue.

The trade deadline is approaching, which forces teams to make personnel decisions quickly, and the old classic Spalding ball has recently been reinstated due to various complaints about the new one. Like I said, no more excuses.

The second half of the season is usually brand new. Players actually start to care about winning, while personal stats become gravy as opposed to being the main course. But before they dig in, they get to take advantage of three vacation days on the leagues' tab to let it all hang out.

The annual All-Star Weekend begins tonight. This year, sin city Las Vegas will serve as the host. Legendary Hall of Famer Charles Barkley will be able to nurture his well-known and foolishly self-publicized gambling vice on the grandest of scales. Also, former player Kenny "the Jet" Smith will throw another lavish party to compensate for his lack of notoriety. Just kidding. You're my boy Kenny. I'm still waiting on my VIP tickets.

For most players, the all-star break is a time to rest those injuries or ditch the promise they made to take their wives to Tahiti because of well, Kenny's party.

As for the few who are selected to play in the All-Star Game, it's their last chance to show off for the sake of showing off.

For those that don't know the All-Star Game's selection process, let me xplain. The fans vote for the starting players for the Eastern and Western Conferences. This can be good or bad. Fans definitely deserve to have their voices heard. They've spent lots of time screaming obscenities at the TV screen as their favorite team misses free throws. They should also know that their writing of lame acronyms on bright pink posterboard using the cable network's initials hasn't gone unnoticed.

With that said, several players deserving the nod get left out, and several players who are selected get in unjustly every year.

For example, neither Dallas Mavericks' Dirk Nowitzki nor Phoenix Suns' Steve Nash, early leading candidates for league MVP this season, were voted to start by the fans. They were ultimately chosen by the coaches, officials and sports authorities who select the reserves on each team.

On the other hand, Houston Rockets' Yao Ming, led all players with nearly 3 million votes, but won't be able to participate in the all-star game due to an injury. The super center from Shanghai is the most recognized NBA star on the planet, but he has been getting more votes since he went down several months ago.

I know getting in is getting in, but when the best two players in the league don't start, and when the leading vote-getter for the fourth year in a row hasn't laced up his sneakers since before Christmas, what does that tell you?

An even bigger concern to me is the Carmelo Anthony situation. This season's league leader in scoring with 30.8 points, who should be an obvious shoe-in this year, has come up short in each of his previous three seasons.

Unfortunately, in December he was suspended 15 games for throwing a sucker punch during a brawl that spilled into the crowd in Madison Square Garden.

For the fourth year in a row, both the fans and reserve voters snubbed him.

I'm not saying that he shouldn't have been suspended, but these things happen. Throwing punches is a league no-no, and with his somewhat suspect reputation, Melo should have been sending muffins to the guys in the league's front office from the first game of the year.

Players fight all the time. Throughout NBA history, many of the leagues perennial all-stars were known in their time as some of the dirtiest players in the game. NBA commissioner David Stern is known for trying to make an example out of certain players, i.e. Ron Artest, and I was pretty sure he orchestrated the blackballing of Anthony. To my surprise though, Anthony was named as one of two replacements for the injured Yao Ming and Carlos Boozer, which can only be done by the commish. So he did receive those muffins after all. You can thank me later, Melo.

What really makes me laugh, though, are the other spectacles of the weekend. The Slam Dunk Competition, in which, ironically, "the Jet" took second place back in back in 1990 (go Kenny), is barely watchable these days. Long gone are the days when the superstars competed. We are now left with Rookie Challenge players who have to learn the hard way that not even David Blaine could perform the 'NBA Live 07' style dunks that they try to do.

It's bad when watching a guy stand in one spot shooting 3-pointers repeatedly while the old Miami Vice theme plays in the background is the best event of the Saturday night festivities. I won't waste my time getting into the Skills Challenge or the Shooting Stars Competition. TNT would be better off broadcasting Kenny's party.

What's really sad is that no matter what I'm typing, I'll be sitting in front of my TV screaming at the screen and trying to convince myself that it's not so bad. Maybe I need to start hitchhiking with a posterboard sign that reads, "Will work for a ride to Kenny's party."

that play hard, and we all play as a team."

MEDDAC, which currently has a 1-6 record, showed some life just before halftime with help from Damon Raymond, who collected 6 points.

"We're getting our chemistry together," he said. "Everybody's pretty much new to the team so we're trying to gel and develop our game."

Lisa Billingslea, one of two women on the MEDDAC team, showed her shooting touch off the bench bringing E Co.'s lead down to 9 after halftime.

"We have a lot of players on the team, and the minutes are shared equally among them" Billingslea said. "It was great to be able to get some minutes last night to try to help the team."

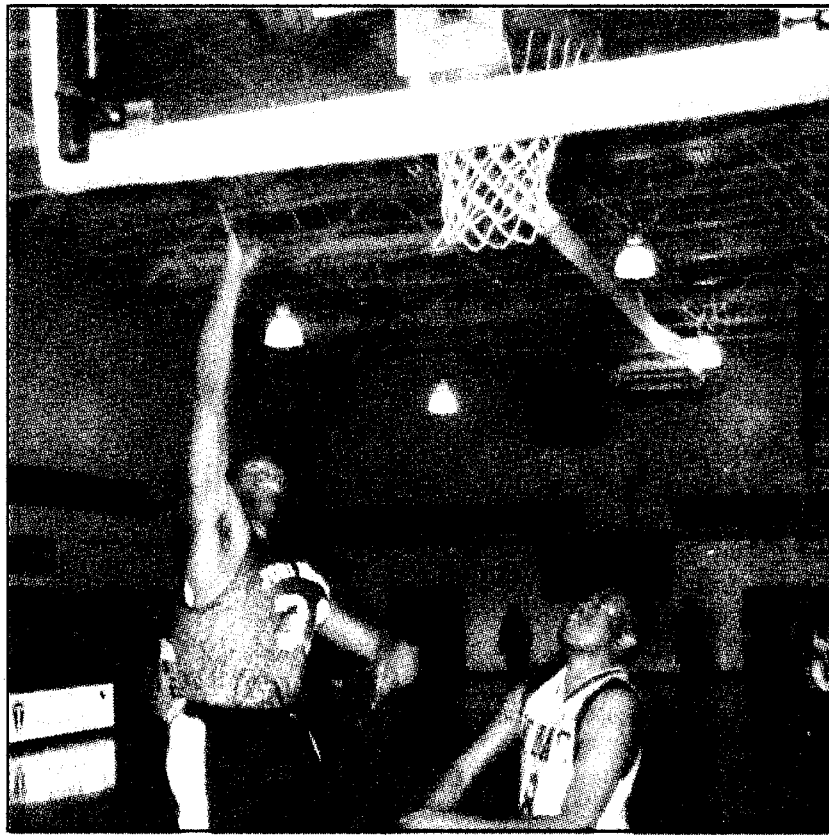

She finished as MEDDAC's leading scorer with 8 points.

E Co. asserted their dominance offensively with about 10 minutes to go in the second half, and it sealed their victory.

"We played a very good game all around," said E Co.'s Juan Mendez. "We played good defense. If we keep playing like we're playing, we'll get into the playoffs."

In other Audie Murphy League play, the 92nd Military Police Bn. ran a clinic on the 75th Rangers, 67-34, and the Forward Support Company, 11th Engineer Bn., decimated the CONUS Replacement Center 61-27.

In the Santiago league, the 2/58 edged out the 2/47, 67-56, while the Headquarters and Headquarters Co., 2/29, forfeited, giving the 1/19 an automatic two points to add to their league total.

E Company 1st Battalion (Airborne), 507th Parachute Infantry Regiment, showed their transition game by running several layups over the U.S. Army Medical Activity Tuesday night. Both the Audie Murphy and the Santiago leagues have intramural basketball games next week. The games will be Feb. 20, 21, and 22, in the Audie Murphy and the Santiago Fitness Center gymnasiums.

Faith: Ends season up, down

"We didn't have as much time to develop as much as we would have liked to, but I feel we had a successful seasons with both teams," Bell said.

Faith's athletic program is committed to academics. Athletes must maintain a 2.0 grade point average to participate. They are ineligible to play or practice if they have an F on their progress reports, he said.

Bell is optimistic that the returning players for the girls' team will address certain things to make them better next seasons, like improving their dribbling skills and developing confidence in shooting the ball.

"They need to continue doing what they do best," he said. "They can't wait until the season starts to try to get better. They need to work on their weaknesses in the off-season."

As for the boys, most were first- and second-year players.

"The guys were incredible athletes," said Givens. "They gelled well as a team from the time they stepped onto the court early in their first game. They understood the importance of academics, practice and sportsmanship, and they were constantly helping each other along."

The maturity on the team was evident even with some of the younger players.

"A lot of the younger boys stepped up and played like veterans. If some of the sixth-graders didn't step up, we probably wouldn't have gone undefeated," said Bell, who expects the boys to carry on the winning tradition and positive attitude next season.

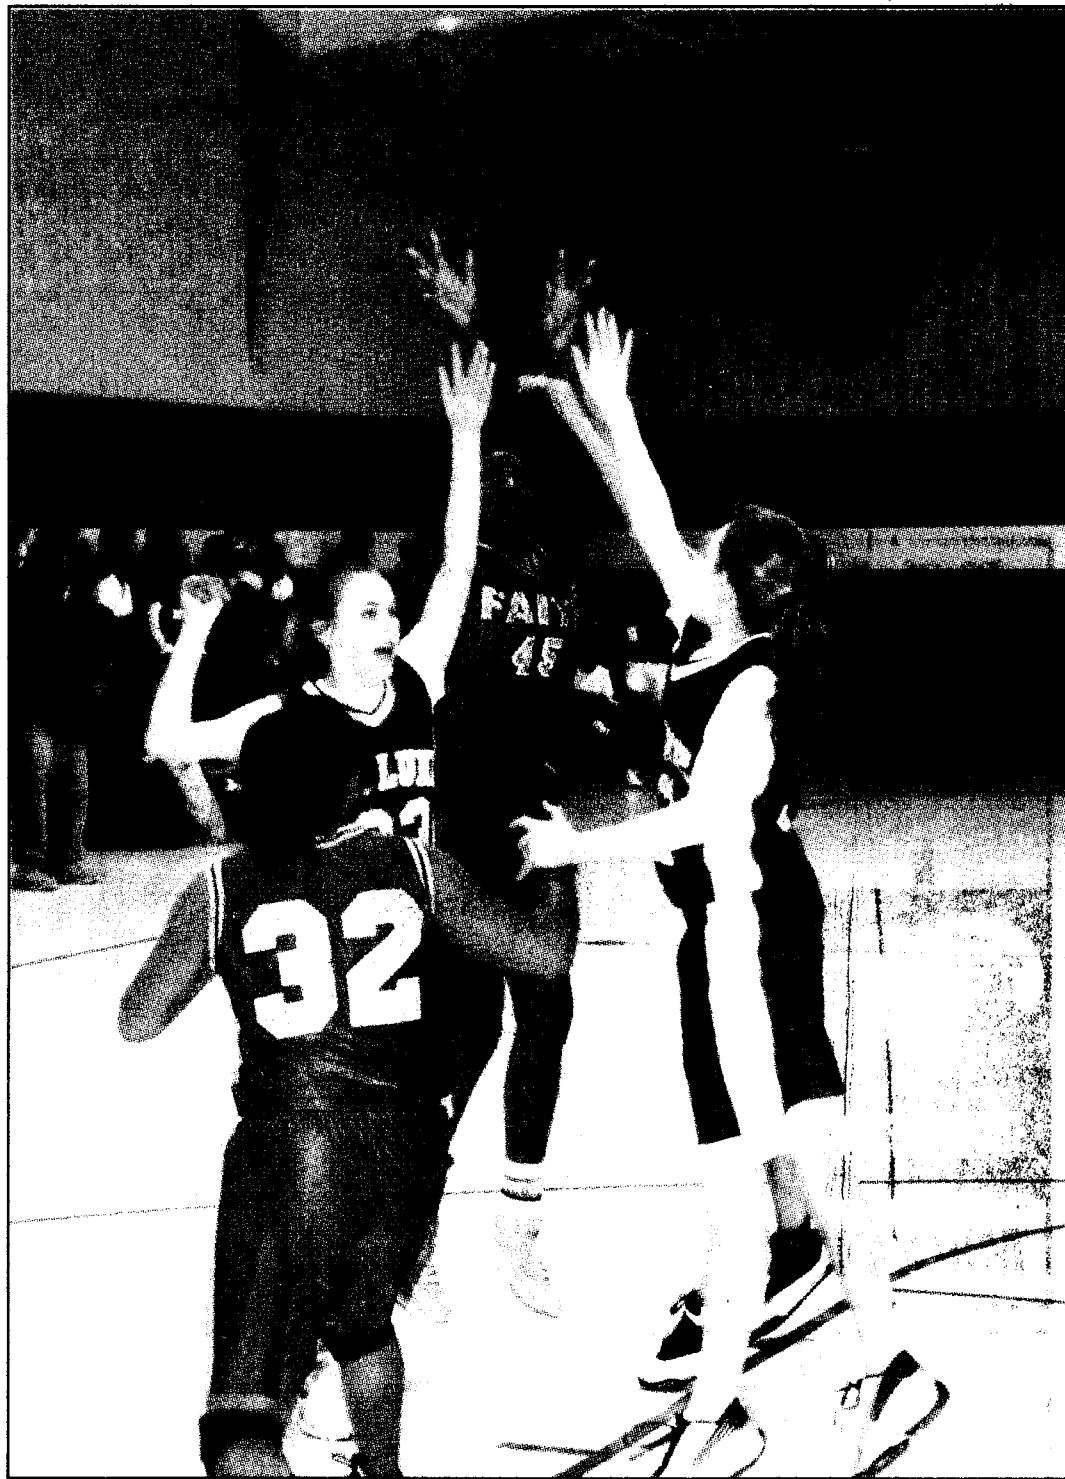

"If they keep their core together and just add a few pieces, they will be alright," Bell said.

Eighth-grader Angel Reyes drives to the hole for a layup during the first half of Faith's victory over Saint Joseph Middle School Feb. 9.

"If some of the sixth-graders didn't step up, we probably wouldn't have gone undefeated."

Champion turkey caller to give classes

THE BAYONET
Mitchell Thomas IV

Joe Drake definitely knows his stuff about turkey calling. The retired firefighter has been turkey calling competitively since 1981.

His friend, Bill Brickner, suggested that he conduct a class for turkey callers and hunters last year. The event was successful, and Drake will do it again on three consecutive Tuesday nights starting Feb. 27.

"I used to hold these quite often years ago in Fort Benning. Bill asked me to do them last year, and because of the demand, he asked me to do them again this year," Drake said.

The seminars will be progressive and will start with basic call techniques on the first evening.

"We will talk about and practice basic hen yelps and clucking. If you master these you can catch a turkey," Drake said.

The second and third nights will focus on advanced calls and showing the students how to make their own calls.

"We will add cackling, cutting, fast clucks and stuff like that," Drake said. "The idea is to get the students familiar with knowing when and how to call. You can do too much and scare off your prey."

Turkey calling involves using the mouth to create sounds as well as incorporating devices made out of materials ranging from wood to latex to create the desired sounds, Drake said. Experienced callers invent their own styles and experiment with alternative materials and techniques to create new sounds for competitions.

Drake got started calling when he and a group of friends at the fire department decided to teach themselves.

The 26-year vet of the sport has won a world championship, three national championships and eight Georgia state championships including his fifth Realtree Grand America Turkey Calling contest this weekend in Perry, Ga.

"The competition was the stiffest I'd ever gone up against, so I was tickled to death that I won, because I thought I had only done OK," he said.

Drake said that people not associated with the gaming world tend to view the art of turkey calling as a joke.

"People who don't hunt usually don't understand it, but if they take a minute to listen to what I do, they will say, wow, that's not so easy," Drake said. "You should see my house. My kitchen table is covered with the hundreds of calls that I have made."

The main thing that Drake wants people to know is that putting time into it is key.

"You have to practice, practice, practice," Drake said. "I've been doing it over 25 years and I have to practice everyday because I know how serious my competitors are about winning. That's what I want to get across to people that take this seminar."

The seminars are free to the public and are available to military and civilians.

"I do this for the troops out here and anyone else interested. I just want to give back and if I can help one person learn, then I've done something," he said.

Joe Drake's Turkey Calling Seminars, 101, 102 and 103, will be held Feb. 27, March 6 and 13 at the Uchee Creek Lodge. For more information, contact Drake at 706-660-0501 or 706-573-6788.

Jimmie Johnson tries to follow his own tough act

ZAP2IT
George Dickie

Jimmie Johnson knows it's going to be tough to top the year he had in 2006, but he doesn't mind trying.

After all, how can one improve on a year that began with a victory in the Daytona 500, continued with four more wins — including the All-state 400 at the Brickyard — and ended with his first Nextel Cup title?

"It was an amazing year when I look back and look at the 500, the Brickyard, the All-Star, the championship, and it's going to be hard to repeat a year like that," the sixth-year Cup driver says. "I want to go back and get more of those. Those big races always stand out. I think everybody wants those for obvious reasons."

The biggest comes this Sunday, Feb. 18, when Johnson returns to compete as the reigning champ in the 49th running of the Daytona 500, which Fox will broadcast live from Daytona International Speedway in Florida. Joining him in the season opener on the 2.5-mile high-banked oval will be Cup competitors such as Matt Kenseth, Kevin Harvick, Denny Hamlin, Ryan Newman, Tony Stewart and series newcomers Juan Pablo Montoya and A.J. Allmendinger, who come over from the open-wheel series Formula One and Champ Car World Series, respectively.

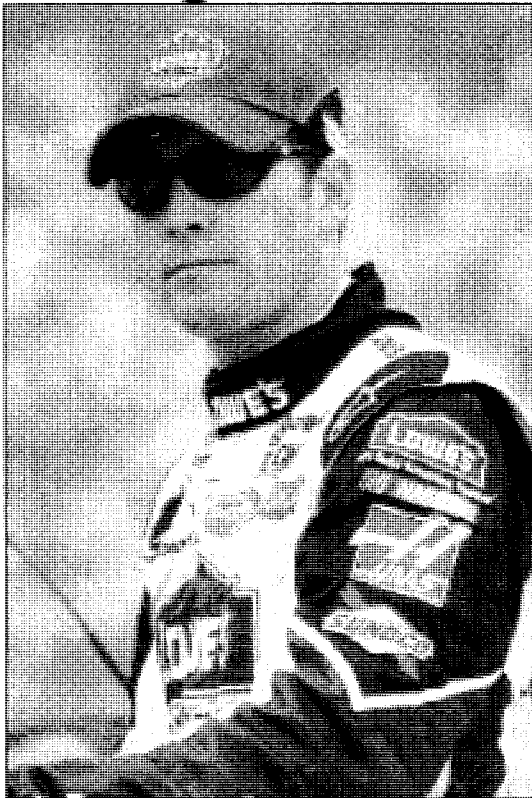

Johnson's success at Daytona in 2006 came after years of frustration born mainly out of his own aggressive style. In years past, the 31-year-old's tendency was to get out in front early and try to lead as many laps as possible. In races such as Daytona, where the airflow-limiting restrictor plates in carburetors cause cars to slow down and drive in bunches, such a strategy usually backfired, as he would get out in the draft to pass, lose speed and watch others go by him.

Last year, Johnson decided to take a more patient approach. "It's so easy (to be aggressive)," he says, "and you get to the end of the race, you've got to put yourself in a position where people have to follow you and have to work with you. And before, I maybe played too much offense and worried too much, you know, with three laps remaining, 'I've got to make the pass now, and I've got to do something.' Well, it doesn't work that way, and I finally have understood it. I'd go from third trying to get the win and end up seventh, so I learned how to be patient, when to push the issue and how to do that. It's really paid off for me."

On the day, Johnson led only 24 laps, including the final 17, in holding off Newman and Casey Mears in a two-lap shootout for the victory.

"I was pretty lucky in the 500," Johnson says, "where I got to the lead, I got by Newman on a restart, and it was a real safe move on my part because it was on a restart and the field wasn't up to speed yet."

"And then we had a restart at the end, and I knew from making mistakes and trying to make an outside pass that it wouldn't come together, and I knew Ryan was going to do everything he could to win. And when he pulled out, I knew the line was just going to follow the car on the inside. So when Ryan pulled out, the 42 (Mears) was back there, you stay on the bottom like everybody does at the end, and I put myself in a position where they had to follow me. That was kind of the goal of the race and the mind-set I've been carrying into these plate races.

"It's all positioning," Johnson continues. "Very, very few times you set up a pass and execute it on a plate race. It's more about positioning yourself, you know, putting yourself in the right position and defending, and then that leads to forward progress."

Johnson's win came 10 days after his crew chief, Chad Knaus, was suspended after rigging an illegal device to give his car an aerodynamic advantage, and thus increased speed, in qualifying.

"It was definitely one of the toughest moments for the 48 team," Johnson says. "Chad started this team. To have Chad sitting at home, the controversy that came out with it, you know it definitely was a hard time. It really challenged our race team to either step up and do our jobs and take on more responsibilities and show the racing world what we're about, or roll over and let it beat us. And we really stepped up to the plate and did the job, and that's probably one of the more proud moments I've had as a driver for the 48 team, is for us to go through all that and then come back and win it."

Junior makes his statement

THE BAYONET
Erin A. Nash

Dale Earnhardt Jr. is flexing his muscles — with his stepmother, Teresa Earnhardt. Teresa owns Dale Earnhardt, Inc., the company owned by Dale Earnhardt before his death six years ago.

Now Junior is publicly speaking out about wanting the majority of ownership of DEI. On Feb. 8 he announced that he wanted at least 51 percent ownership, if not 100 percent. It's about time.

Teresa was criticized by NASCAR driver Kevin Harvick, who called her a "deadbeat owner." She doesn't attend races like other car owners. Jack "The Cat in the Hat" Roush is always a fixture at races and has a vested interest in his drivers. I haven't seen Teresa since Dale Sr.'s death.

For Junior, it seems like he's had an epiphany. He said he finally understands his worth. DEI's estimated net worth last year was $57 million, according to Forbes magazine, although according to ESPN.com, NASCAR executives estimate the worth anywhere from $75 to $100 million.

Junior wants to make DEI better. And I believe he truly can. It seems like common sense to have an owner who wants to have the best drivers, cars and resources available to keep your company growing and thriving.

What would DEI be without Junior? For years he's been NASCAR's most popular driver, hands down. The money he generates is huge, and Teresa knows it.

Wherever Junior goes, so does his sponsorship. He has talked openly about possibly joining Richard Childress Racing. Toyota would also have a car for him.

It's time for Teresa to move on. Earnhardt Sr. no doubt would not be happy to know about the static between Teresa and Junior. Junior is carrying on the family name, the driving legacy, and deserves ownership of DEI.

Whatever happens, it's sure to be reminiscent of a soap opera. Junior and Teresa both seem willing to fight to the end. Let's just hope DEI and Junior's season isn't a casualty in what's playing out to be a down and dirty fight.

With three "big brothers" looking after him, Smith ready to make cup debut

U.S. ARMY RACING

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — If Regan Smith ever feels out of sorts as a rookie in the Nextel Cup garage he knows he has an experienced and friendly support group to seek advice from.

While the 22-year-old Smith is hoping the Daytona 500 will be his NASCAR Cup debut, his three Ginn Racing teammates and support group — Mark Martin, Sterling Marlin and Joe Nemechek have a total of 1,815 Cup starts.

"When you have Mark, Sterling and Joe as your teammates, it's like being the youngest sibling and having three big brothers looking after you," Smith said. "And those three guys have plenty of knowledge. It is comforting to know that you can walk over to them and seek their expert advice. As I keep on saying, I've been presented with a great opportunity by Ginn Racing and I'm going to listen well and take advantage of the situation."

"Regan and I are on the same page," Martin said. "He's eager and wants to learn. But at the same time, he knows that patience is vital in enjoying future success. I am really looking forward to being his Army teammate and helping launch his career. This is an exciting time for the both of us."

Attempting to qualify for the Daytona 500 is not just about gaining experience for Smith, a native of Cato, N.Y.

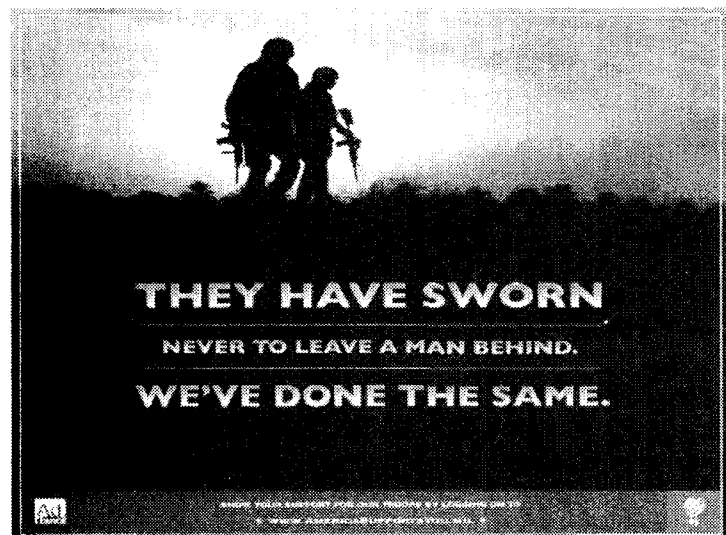

"We're not going to Daytona to just ride around — way too much money and time have been spent on this deal," Smith said, who will pilot the No. 39 Ginn Racing Chevrolet. "This is the real deal and that's how we're approaching it."

The Daytona Cup ride is like a bonus for Smith, who was tabbed to co-drive the No. 01 U.S. Army Chevrolet with Martin during the 2007 season. Smith's first Cup race was initially scheduled to be the fifth event of the season at Bristol (Tenn.) Motor Speedway.

"The Daytona 500 is going to be tough to qualify for, but until somebody tells me otherwise, that is going to be my first Cup race," Smith said. "We had a pretty good test session in Daytona last month and feel we have the machine to get us into the big show."

"But there are so many variables in both the qualifying laps and the qualifying races," Smith said. "If the wind changes direction during your qualifying lap that could make the difference of qualifying and not qualifying. It's going to be exciting — though I am focused on the mission, I must admit I am also in awe about being entered in my first Daytona 500."

Smith will also attempt to qualify for the NASCAR Busch Series race at Daytona on Saturday, driving the No. 04 Ginn Racing Chevy. He will have the same crew chief — Dough Randolph — for both the Cup and Busch races.

Veteran driver excited about moving into Daytona 500

Martin runs to sixth-place finish at Bud Shootout in U.S. Army, Ginn Racing debut

U.S. ARMY RACING

"That was awesome guys ... we can win, we can win the Daytona 500," said an energized Mark Martin as he pulled his No. 01 U.S. Army Chevrolet into the garage after finishing sixth in Saturday night's Budweiser Shootout at Daytona International Speedway.

"It's just a pleasure to drive this car for the U.S. Army team and to work with these guys — and to run good is just a bonus," Martin said. "The car was really fast, did well on the long runs and handled well in the corners. That wasn't a win, but I believe that if we can make our car handle that good on Sunday, I think we can have a shot to win the Daytona 500."

Martin started the race 10th and drafted his way to fourth in just the first two laps. He eventually was shuffled out of the draft and moved back to 11th by Lap 13 of 70. He was running 10th when the mandatory caution was issued on Lap 20.

After the break Martin moved in and out of the top 10 for the next several laps. He radioed the team on Lap 39 that his U.S. Army Chevy was good enough to win with the right mix of help. However, Martin struggled finding the drafting help he needed to move back through the field as he settled in at eighth place for the next several laps.

"We didn't have a ton of help — we almost got wrecked there early and several of the fast cars that could have helped got around us," Martin said. "The car was fast enough to get up there and make some noise, but we just couldn't find the right partners to help us make that happen."

The Army Chevy was still running in eighth when the night's second caution was called for debris on Lap 53. Martin came down pit road for tires and a slight wedge adjustment. He held his position at eighth when the field returned to green with 12 laps remaining.

Martin remained solid, but a near run-in with Boris Said almost wrecked the Army Chevy. He lost several positions and fell all the way to 16th with only four laps remaining. However, Martin's No. 01 machine was strong on this night and was able to power its way back through the field, avoiding a multicar accident on the final lap and bringing home a sixth-place finish.

"We almost had a big wreck with Boris (Said) there at the end with five to go and we went to the back and I thought that was it. But we could just roll through the corners so well and pass cars without much help."

"I had a blast. I'm living large right now," Martin said. "This was just a great way to start off with the U.S. Army Chevy, Ginn Racing, Ryan (crew chief, Pemberton). I'm really more encouraged right now than I even was coming in. I know that we have a lot of work to do and we'd like to be faster, but with a car that handles like that, we have a shot at the 500 and that's what we all really want. This is the most fun I've had in a long time."

14 seconds of fame

When the cars roll onto pit row, all eyes are watching NASCAR pit crews, which consist of up to 10 crew members, who stay behind the wall during pit stops. The crews are responsible for all aspects of the tires, engine performance and mechanical system maintenance.

At race time, seven pit crew members are allowed to go "over the wall," during a typical 14 second pit stop.

Gas Can Man: Responsible for fueling the car during pit stops and also calculates fuel mileage during the race.

Catch-Can Man: Attaches the overflow catch can to the fuel vent during pit stops to catch any fuel that will overflow during the fueling process (a safety measure to keep spilling fuel from being ignited during pit stops).

Rear-Tire Carrier: Carries tires over the wall to assist the tire changer during pit stops, will also assist with chassis adjustments during pit stops.

Front-Tire Carrier: Carries tires over the wall to assist the tire changer during pit stops.

Sharing the ride, sharing the thrill

Mark Martin

Mark Martin returns for his 25th season in the Cup Series, joining Ginn Racing and the Army team as the co-driver of the 01 Chevy. Martin began his love for racing on dirt tracks in his native Arkansas. He collected championships and earned the ASA Rookie of the Year in 1977.

Martin made his Cup series debut in 1981. Since then he has more than 670 starts, 35 wins, 234 top-fives and 41 poles. Although he has never walked away with a championship trophy, Martin is one of the most respected drivers ever to compete at the Cup level.

Martin sees the 2007 season as a win-win situation for himself and the Army team.

Along with driving in 22 races, Martin will mentor rookie Regan Smith.

"I not only get to drive, but I also get to teach and I love both," Martin said. "I welcome the opportunity to drive the U.S. Army car and represent our brave Soldiers who are fighting the Global War on Terrorism."

Regan Smith

Regan Smith will co-drive for the Army team with Mark Martin in 2007.

Smith became hooked on racing after riding in a go-kart when he was 4.

Smith went on to win regional and state championships in New York state.

In 1994, Smith and his family moved to North Carolina to be closer to the NASCAR circuit.

Throughout the next several years, Smith brought home championships in the World Karting Association. By 1998, 14-year-old Smith had drawn attention to his skills and was moving up through various racing series.

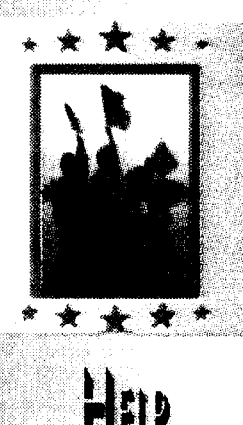

In 2002, Smith competed in the NASCAR Busch and Craftsman Truck Series races. In 2006, he drove in his fifth NASCAR Busch Series Season, and in 2007 Smith hopes to become one of NASCAR's hottest young stars.

Arbor Day event teaches kids about trees

'Natural science man' teaches kids about environment

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

In celebration of Arbor Day, Fort Benning children had the opportunity to hear a concert by Billy B and take home a tree seedling Feb. 7 at the School Age Services building.

Billy B, the "natural science song and dance man" who has performed for more than 2 million children, sang songs about trees and the environment and encouraged the children to get up and dance.

He also talked about the importance of the environment.

"The purpose (of the event) is to educate children about trees and the environment," said Noelle Phillips, community recreation management trainee at the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The event was open to children from kindergarten to eighth-grade.

"If you go out in the woods at night and sit very quietly, you can hear leaves moving," Billy B said.

"But you know what it is?" he asked the audience.

"Worms."

"Eww," said most of the children.

The worms turn the leaves into topsoil, Billy B said, and a lot of the food we eat grows out of the topsoil.

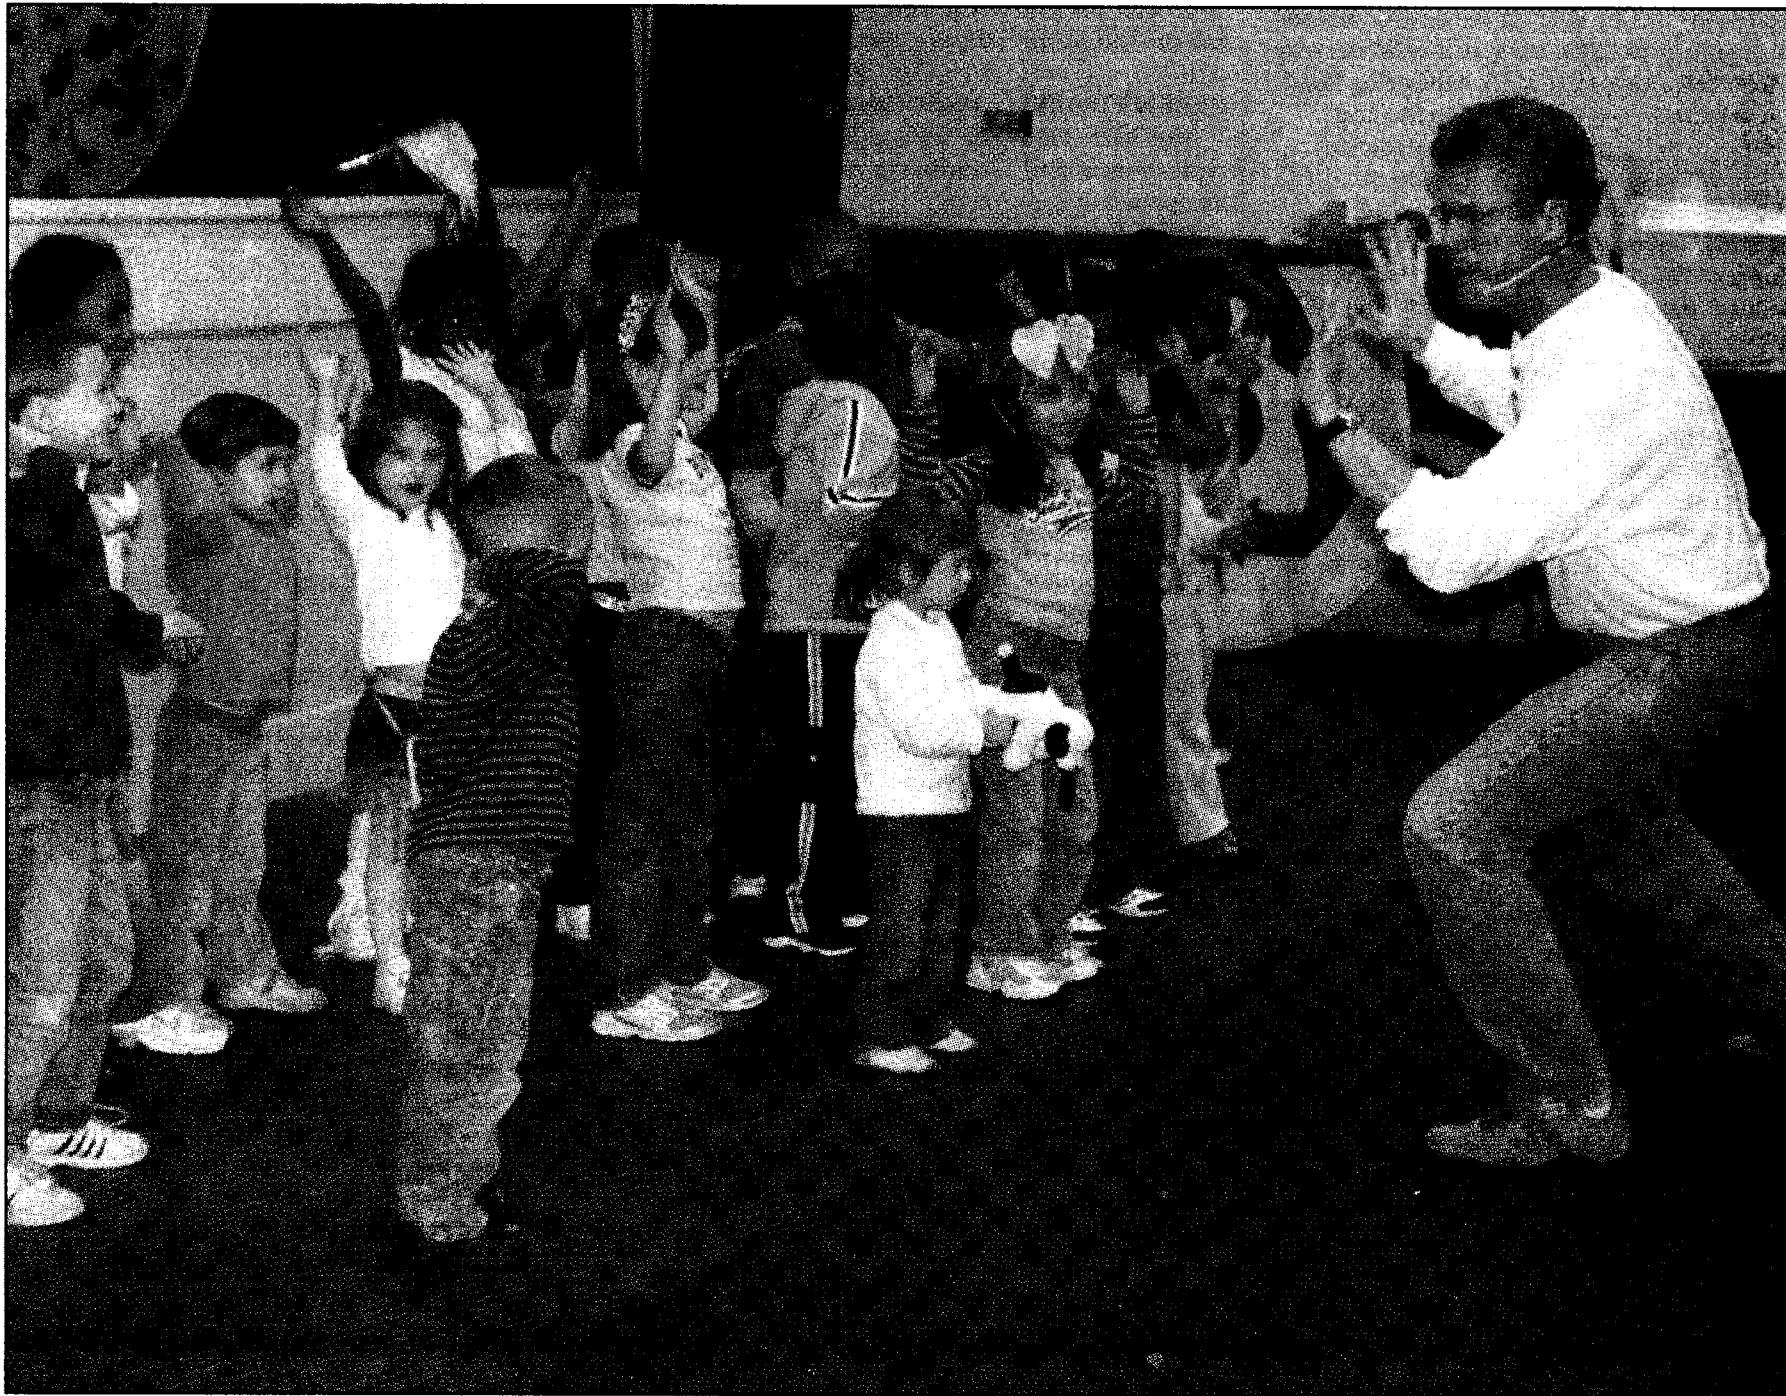

The talk of worms led Billy B into his first song, a crowd-pleasing parody of a Nelly song, Hot in Herre. Billy B performed Rot in Here and got many children singing along and dancing.

"What's inside an apple? A pear? A peach?" Billy B asked.

"Seeds," the children said.

All those seeds come from flowers, Billy B said. Flowers make seeds.

Billy B talked to the children about the importance of trees, how they help us breathe by giving off oxygen, and about how to plant the tree seedlings and care for them.

Billy B, a performer who has given concerts for more than 2 million children, sang and danced for Fort Benning children Feb. 7 at the School Age Services building on Main Post. The concert was in celebration of Arbor Day and each child received a free Red Oak tree seedling to plant at home.

Rachel Houston

"When you come back when you're 90 years old, you'll see a big tree and say 'I planted that,'" Billy B said.

The final song was Flies in Black, a parody of the Will Smith song Men in Black. Billy B talked about using insects, including black flies, to discover the health of a stream. Healthy streams have different kinds of insects living in them.

Oxbow Meadows, which is Columbus State University's environmental park and learning center, donated the Red Oak seedlings for the event.

Fort Benning families will have another opportunity to celebrate Arbor Day and receive a free tree seedling Saturday. From 9:30 a.m. to noon at Lakebottom Park in Columbus will be activities, crafts, performances and tree walks with local foresters.

For more information, call Keep Columbus Beautiful at 706-653-4008.

For more information on Billy B and to hear and purchase his songs and videos, go to www.billybproductions.com.

Community celebrates Arbor Day

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Today is Arbor Day in Georgia, and the local community has a big reason to celebrate.

Columbus was Georgia's first city to be given the Tree City, USA, designation by the Arbor Day Foundation, which has strict criteria, said Steve Smith, a forester with the Georgia Forestry Commission. Columbus was given the designation 28 years ago.

Smith spoke at Oxbow Meadows' Second Sunday program last week. Sunday's program, "caring for trees," gave visitors tips on tree care and taught tree identification.

Each person who attended the program received a free tree identification guidebook from the Georgia Forestry Commission and a packet filled with tree care information.

Smith spoke of some of the things it took for Columbus to receive its designation.

One of the criteria is having a community forestry program, and that can involve homeowners planting trees on their land.

Smith went over ways to decide what kind of trees to plant in this area.

Student wins worldwide art contest

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

Amanda Whitten entered a drawing of her family in a calendar contest held in DoD schools around the world, and the Faith Middle School eighth-grader's drawing was chosen over all others for the calendar's front cover.

The theme of the contest was "My military family."

Amanda drew herself with her mom, dad, 11-year-old sister Ashley, 3-year-old brother Austin and two cats Oreo and Timon standing outside.

She used a pencil to draw the figures and then colored them with colored pencils.

Amanda completed and submitted her drawing about a year ago and found out in December that she had won. Amanda checked the mail one day and went running in to her mom saying "Look, look," said Karen Whitten, Amanda's mother.

Amanda had opened the package and inside was the calendar with her drawing on the cover.

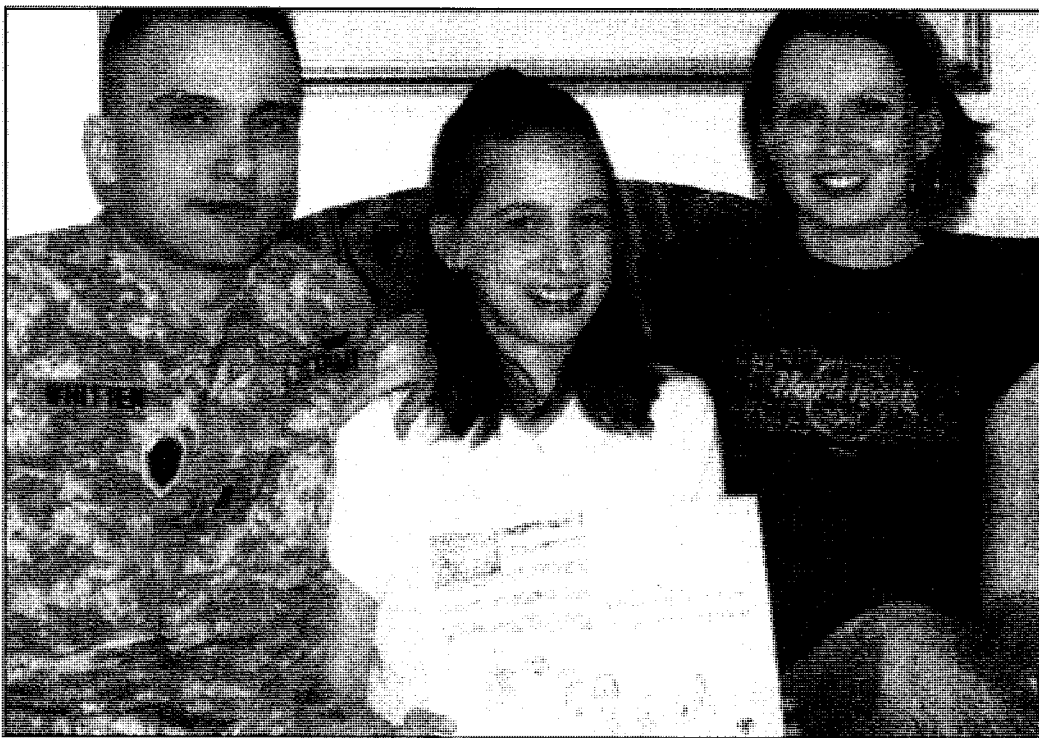

The next day at school, "she had the biggest smile on her face," said Gloria Loar, Amanda's art teacher.

A certificate of achievement was presented to Amanda at the school board meeting on post.

"I'm so proud of my daughter. She's got a lot of potential," Karen said.

"She's very quiet and I love how she can express herself in art."

"I'm proud and impressed, but not too surprised because she is very intelligent," said Staff Sgt. Wil Whitten, Amanda's father,

Rachel Houston

a Basic Noncommissioned Officer Course instructor.

Amanda is in the school's art club and would like to be an artist when she grows up.

"That's one of my goals," Amanda said.

Kindergarteners through eighth-graders from around the world entered the contest, Loar said. About 25 students from Faith participated in the contest.

A fifth-grade student from White Elementary School also had a drawing chosen for the calendar.

The contest was run by the 2007 Military Child Education Coalition, which provides scholarships and space camp opportunities to children of service members.

— Martin Army Community Hospital

Soldiers must now have hearing tested every 13 months

Post commander mandates regular checks to keep troops fit to fight

MEDDAC PAO
Angela Justice

For the past seven months, Martin Army Community Hospital's audiology department has increased its emphasis on its Hearing Conservation Program in effort to ensure that all Soldiers on Fort Benning receive an annual hearing test.

Staff Sgt. Douglas E. May, NCOIC of the audiology clinic, said a letter of emphasis was signed by the post commander, Maj. Gen. Walter Wojdakowski, in June mandating that all Soldiers receive hearing tests every 13 months as part of the hearing conservation program.

Therefore, hearing conservation technicians from Sand Hill to Soldier's Plaza are working to meet the demands of providing the annual tests to all initial entry Soldiers as well.

Hearing conservation technicians, working at the 30th Adjutant General Battalion (Reception) are now conducting hearing tests at the Soldier's initial point of entry into the Army at a rate of 100 percent versus the past, when only 70 to 80 percent of initial entry Soldiers were tested.

Angela Primus, hearing conservation technician, said that the mandate to conduct testing at 100 percent helps them to uncover hearing problems at the earliest possible point in a Soldier's career.

If a problem is found with an IET Soldier, he is automatically referred to an audiologist at MACH for further evaluation, Primus said. If a problem is found, it can be corrected early, before the Soldier begins training, and that Soldier can be tracked throughout his career.

Primus said approximately 10 percent of the Soldiers who are tested at initial entry are found to have some type of hearing ailment or loss.

Sean Burns, who also works as a hearing conservation technician, conducts hearing briefings for the new trainees.

During these briefings, Burns demonstrates to the trainees the proper technique for wearing ear plugs and equips each trainee with plugs to be carried at all times.

Working as a three-member team, the hearing conservation technicians conduct, on average, nearly 3,000 hearing tests per month. Last year, more than 23,147 initial entry Soldiers received initial hearing tests and plugs prior to basic training.

Primus and Burns said that during the winter and summer troop surge, they average approximately 250 hearing tests per day.

With the high demands of training and the number of Soldiers deploying steadily on the rise, the need for units to be deployment ready is imperative, and hearing tests are an important criteria of that, May said.

In an effort to meet that objective, Paul Guerro, hearing conservation program manager, works with the active duty units to ensure that Fort Benning units are following the mandate for all Soldiers to receive their annual testing.

In order to facilitate these requirements, 40-hour training classes are conducted each month for selected Soldiers from each unit to become unit hearing conservation officers and to learn to conduct hearing tests for their perspective units.

During the classes, students are also taught to check the ears for obstructions, learn about the structure of the ears and its muscles, and to check for proper fitting of hearing protection.

Master Sgt. Gisele Riley, 30th AG Battalion, said the training benefits the unit, because having Soldiers trained to conduct hearing tests will help achieve 100 percent compliance and thus makes the unit totally deployable.

Although serving as a unit hearing officer is an additional duty, Staff Sgt. Chad Darby, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, United States Army Infantry Center, said it is good to have Soldiers in the unit who understand the testing and the proper steps to take to improve overall hearing conservation for the unit whole.

Governed by Department of Army Pamphlet 40-501 and Army regulation 40-501, the newly trained unit hearing conservation officers are also trained to view their units hearing test statistics in order to schedule the Mobile Occupational Health Vehicle to conduct testing for their units.

As with the initial entry Soldiers, if any problems are found, those Soldiers will be referred to the hospital for further evaluation by an audiologist.

The most important part of the hearing conservation program is that Soldiers with hearing problems can be tracked throughout their careers, therefore any problems are addressed and unit commanders are equipped with assessments of the problems, Guerro said.

The hearing conservation office handles a multitude of tasks which include monitoring hearing tests conducted by the unit hearing officers, as well as conducting range inspections, sound level checks in motor transport units and testing in occupational health clinics for civilian personnel.

Happy birthday baby, hand over the bottle

Spilled milk? Not nearly as sad as rotten teeth

U.S. ARMY DENTAL ACTIVITY

As soon as teeth appear in the mouth, decay can occur. One of the risk factors for childhood caries (sometimes called baby bottle tooth decay or nursing mouth syndrome) is frequent and prolonged exposure to liquids, such as fruit juice, milk or formula, which all contain sugar.

Tooth decay can occur when a baby is put to bed with a bottle. Infants should finish their naptime or bedtime bottle before going to bed.

Because decay can destroy the teeth of an infant or young child, you should encourage your children to drink from a cup by their first birthdays.

Many training cups, also called sippy or tippy cups, are available in stores. Many are "no spill" cups, which are essentially baby bottles in disguise.

No spill cups include a valve beneath the spout to stop spills. However, cups with valves do not allow your child to sip.

Instead the child gets liquid by sucking on the cup, much like a baby bottle.

This practice defeats the purpose of using a training cup, as it prevents the child from learning to sip.

Don't let your child carry the training cup around. Toddlers are often unsteady on their feet.

They take an unnecessary risk if they try to walk and drink at the same time. Falling while drinking from a cup has the potential to injure the mouth.

A training cup should be used temporarily. Once your child has learned how to sip, the training cup has achieved its purpose. It can and should be set aside when no longer needed.

For sipping success, carefully choose and use a training cup. As the first birthday approaches, encourage your child to drink from a cup.

As this changeover takes place, be very careful about the kind of training cup you choose, what goes into it, and how frequently your child sips from it. Make sure he or she does not carry the cup around.

Talk to your dentist for more information. If your child has not had a dental examination, schedule a "well baby checkup" for his or her teeth.

The American Dental Association says that it is beneficial for the first dental visit to occur within six months of the appearance of the first tooth, and no later than the child's first birthday.

Oxbow: Celebrates Arbor Day

Some things to think about are what type of tree you're looking for — one that flowers during a certain time of year, provides a lot of shade or is popular among certain kinds of wildlife.

One way to choose a tree is to look at lists put together by local foresters. Smith has his own that he handed out at the Second Sunday program.

His top choices for this area include the Live Oak, Georgia's state tree, Red Maple, Southern Magnolia, Blackgum and Longleaf Pine.

Smith also gave tips on planting trees.

When you go out to pick a site in your yard, look up to see if there are power lines, look down and find out if there are any sewer or water lines, and make sure the site isn't too close to a sidewalk or the house, Smith said.

The tree's hole should be dug three times as wide as the container the young tree came in and at least as deep as the container. After digging the hole, check the site for good drainage. If you fill the hole with water and it drains within an hour, the drainage is adequate for the tree, Smith said.

The top of the tree's potted soil and root bundle should be about an inch above the ground level when placed in the hole, Smith said. The trunk will rot if the tree is planted too deep.

When you fill the hole in with soil, add water as you go. The tree should be watered frequently during its first year in the ground — about once a week is good. Put two to three inches of mulch around the tree in a wide circle. But don't make the mulch into a "volcano" around the trunk, Smith said, because this can encourage water run-off.

Smith gave tips on pruning, and pointed out that pruning should not be done during the tree's first year in the ground.

Give the tree time to grow and it will generally tell you what may need to be taken off, Smith said. For instance, crossed branches may interfere with each other.

Another pruning tip is to dip pruning tools in a mixture of nine parts water and one part bleach when switching trees to keep diseases at bay.

Columbus will celebrate Arbor Day tomorrow from 9:30 a.m. to noon at Lakebottom Park.

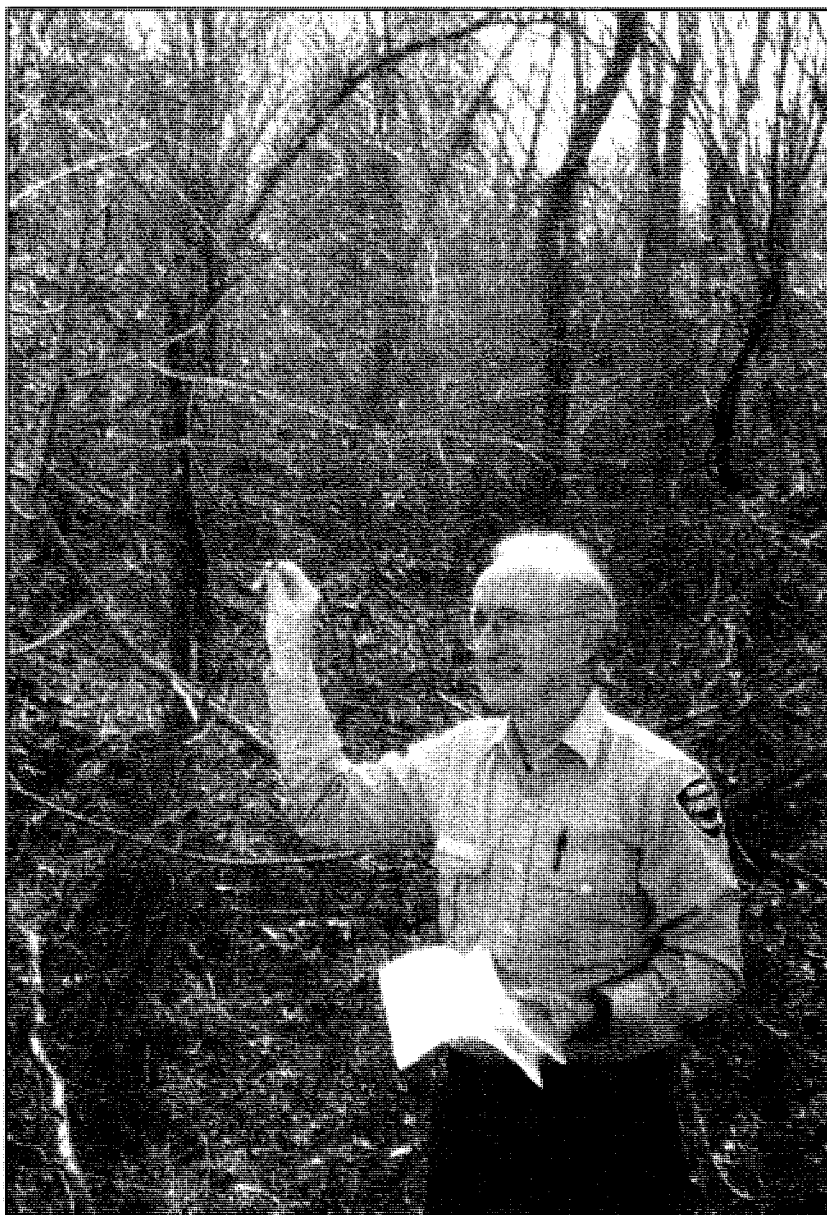

Visitors can take bucket truck rides, receive free tree seedlings and participate in activities. At 10 and 11 a.m., foresters will lead tree walks and show people how to identify trees. For more information, contact Keep Columbus Beautiful at 706-653-4008.

The next Second Sunday program will be 12 p.m. to 4 p.m. March 11. The program will be Oxbow Meadows' annual Reptile Fest.

Oxbow Meadows is located on South Lumpkin Road across from the future home of the National Infantry Museum.

Oxbow Meadows has many trails open to the public, including the Treetop Trail, which is a rope and metal bridge at the top of the trees giving a bird's eye view of the area.

For more information, go to <http://oxbow.colstate.edu>. For more information on Arbor Day, go to www.arborday.org.

Rachel Houston

Steve Smith, a forester with the Georgia Forestry Commission, identifies a tree at Oxbow Meadows, a conservation area near post. Smith gave tree-care tips, such as the correct ways to plant, prune and water trees, and discussed which trees flourish in this area.

REFLECTIONS

Separation and deployments not easy

Faith unites family across the distance during deployment

CONUS REPLACEMENT CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Dave Phillips

We are approaching the time when a major unit from our military community will deploy again.

While the Soldiers with the 3rd Brigade Combat Team prepare to deploy, this time brings stress for the Soldiers and their families as they scramble to put their affairs in order. They must put their family affairs in order and prepare militarily to deploy.

There are many feelings that always seem to arise during these times such as anger, stress, short tempers, confusion, despair, feeling forgotten and a sense of being out of control.

I can assure you that these feelings are normal, having been on both sides as a deployee and the rear detachment chaplain.

The question is not necessarily how I can remain calm through this process — as I believe this is next to impossible — but rather how can I make the time before and during the deployment livable for both ourselves and our families.

This is not an easy question to answer, but there are some basics that we need to practice that help make deployments more tolerable.

The deployment manuals remind us that there are specific actions we can take to make deployments meaningful for our families and to maintain the connection even though we are thousands of miles away.

Staying in contact is crucial to any relationship whether it be by letter, e-mail, phone or tele-conference.

But these should be preceded by times we have spent with our families prior to deployment, sharing our feelings with each other, encouraging each other and reinforcing to our children how important they are to us, especially while one parent is gone.

Upon deployment, there is still that void that our loved one is not near and, by the very nature of the deployment, may be in harms way.

How do we cope and how do we help our children to cope in such circumstances? Without a personal faith, I do not know what power people turn to, because we need to be able to turn to something higher than ourselves, someone who is in control.

Our personal faith in God Almighty should be our foundational stone in which we anchor our lives and the lives of our loved ones.

Psalm 91, often known as the Soldier's Psalm, starts out by saying: "He that dwelleth in the secret place of the most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress: my God; in him will I trust.... He shall cover thee with his feathers, and under his wings shalt thou trust; his truth shall be thy shield and buckler" (Ps. 91: 1-2, 4).

This Psalm reminds us that our God, who is the ruler of the Universe, is quite capable of watching over us and our loved ones who believe in Him.

No need to run scared if you trust in God

God enables us if we dare to trust Him

BAYONET CORRESPONDENT
Bud Rupel

There are no absolute guarantees. Even the best of plans can go awry. However, there are those who never, never risk failure and end up running scared.

Scared of what? Scared of living.

Charles Swindoll said, "Running scared invariably blows up in one's face. All who fly risk crashing. All who drive risk colliding. All who run risk falling. All who walk risk stumbling. All who live risk something."

Running scared. It's a terrible way to go through life. Is there a cure for the one who takes no chances? Who says no to courage? I believe that it is all about trusting God.

First of all, trust only works in the dark. If you can see where you're going, then you don't need God. But King David knew the importance of having God as his guide through life.

David wrote in Psalm 119:105, "Your word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light to my path."

Trust is letting someone else be responsible for the obstacles. God knows what lies ahead and he will take care of anything that comes your way.

Do what you can and don't worry about what you cannot accomplish. There is nothing God wants more from us than to exercise our faith in him. Faith believes in that which has no absolute proof. It is hanging tough when the evidence would have us bail out. It just makes good sense to not depend too heavily on our ability to make all the pieces fit. And trusting our emotions is even less reliable because they have the consistency and dependability of Silly Putty.

Trust dares to fail. Abraham Lincoln had failure after failure but he did not give up. He was persistent and eventually became our 16th president. Lincoln had a deep abiding faith in God and it was his faith that saw him through defeat after defeat.

When I think about trusting God, I am reminded of this story of a man and his encounter with God:

• One day a man set off to climb the highest mountain in the area. While rounding a cliff he slipped and began falling. It was a sheer drop

There is nothing that escapes His grasp or attention and His faithfulness is equally well proclaimed.

Psalm 111:7 says: "the works of his hands are faithful and just; all his precepts are trustworthy. They are steadfast for ever and ever, done in faithfulness and uprightness. He provided redemption for his people; he ordained his covenant forever — holy and awesome is his name."

Scripture also reminds us that what has begun in us as believers will be faithfully seen through. Philippians 1:6 tells us: "That He who began a good work in you will carry it on to completion until the day of Christ Jesus."

Our faith in God Almighty can give the reassurance for all believers, that we are in His constant care. We can rest assured that He is always in control. With our faith and our involvement in a military Chapel or civilian Church that encourages us and prays for us, we will be strong enough to weather the deployment, realizing that our Lord God Almighty is in control.

Without faith, I do not know how many families survive the stress and worry, because deployments at best are hard on the strongest families and individuals.

I know many families do not survive and opt to simply dissolve the marriage or end the relationship. This is tragedy because nobody wins — everybody loses, especially the children.

This does not have to happen. We can renew our faith or reestablish our faith in Almighty God, realizing that "I am able to do all things through Him who strengthens me" (Phil. 4:13).

of about 3,000 feet and the mountain climber knew he was headed toward his death. But about halfway through his free fall, there was a tree growing straight out from the side of the cliff and in desperation he grabbed hold and now found himself hanging on for dear life.

The man knew he would not be able to hang on too long and in desperation cried out, "Hello! Is there anyone up there that can help me?" Much to his surprise there came a reply, "Yes there is!"

"Who is it?" asked the man.

"It's God," came the reply.

The man then said, "God, what do you want me to do?"

"Let go!" said God.

Whereupon the climber said, "Is there anybody else up there?" So much for trusting God.

Trusting in God is the only thing that will keep you from becoming cynical. Our greatest failure is not in our inability, but in not letting God enable us.

God alone is altogether stable, so you can put your total trust in him and know that he is not going to let you down.

Maybe it is time that you let go and let God take over.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Protestant Sunday School is from 9:30 to 10:30 a.m. every Sunday in the Follow Me Chapel. Classes are for all ages. Infant care is provided and transportation is available on post.

For more information, call 706-545-7513.

CATHOLIC WOMEN OF THE CHAPEL

The CWTC meet every second Tuesday of the month from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Follow Me Chapel on Ingersoll Street.

All Catholic women are invited to attend.

For more information, call Jane Kuhbander at 706-689-6600.

PROTESTANT WOMEN OF THE CHAPEL

The Protestant Women of the Chapel have drop-in seminars each Thursday. Each week will have a different theme, including: sex in the marriage, sabbath, godly finance, quiet and devotional time, fasting and spiritual gifts. Everyone is welcome.

Regular Bible studies have started. The books are provided in the classroom. The price of the book is on the back cover, and if you feel led to, you can leave that amount in the offering basket.

The child care hours have been extended until 12:30 p.m. to allow for longer fellowship time.

CROSSROADS CONTEMPORARY CHAPEL

The CrossRoads Contemporary Service meets at the Follow Me Chapel and sponsors Wednesday night activities for families.

A fellowship meeting takes place from 5:30 to 6:15 p.m., followed by Bible study for adults from 6:15 to 7:30 p.m. Team KID (Kids in Discipleship) for children ages 3 through sixth grade, meets from 6:15 to 7:30 p.m.

Other Wednesday night activities include the Middle School Youth Group (Club Beyond) that meets at 5 p.m., and the High School Club that meets at 6:30 p.m. Infant care is provided from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. in the nursery.

For more information on Club Beyond, call Steve Paquette at 706-545-2359.

For more information on the service, call Chaplain Walt Hoskins at 706-545-4017, Chaplain Richard Garvey at 706-545-9014, Chaplain Joel Funk at 706-545-7513 or Chaplain Dave Beavers at 706-544-6255.

COMBAT STRESS PROCESS GROUP

The Chaplain Family Life Center will conduct meetings to understand combat stress and how it affects marriages, and how couples can work to overcome it.

The meetings begin March 1 and last six weeks.

For more information or to reserve your seat, call 706-545-1760 or stop by the Family Life Center in Soldiers' Plaza.

Marriage needs recovery time after combat

Marital issues, emotional stress following deployment is normal

LIFE CENTER
Chaplain (Maj.) Richard Garvey

When I returned from Iraq, I can remember people telling me I had changed. What changed, I wondered.

I am still the same person who left a year ago. I just find myself constantly feeling for my weapon.

I hear similar stories from others as they return from the war zone. Many find it difficult to sleep at night. For some, dreams turn into nightmares, stopping us from obtaining a full night's peaceful rest. Many have a firearm close by, because a firearm in combat is a desirable object of security.

Many have mentioned how difficult it is to be in the same bed with their spouse. When some spouses reach over to touch their sleeping spouse, they got surprising responses.

Some wives found themselves on the floor, others found themselves pushed aside while others were pinned down. Now, I am willing to bet their actions were just a little different than what their spouses had in mind.

We like those responses when in war. That kind of hyper-vigilance keeps you alert and alive in war. However, our spouses are not quite amused by the hyper-vigilance of this kind in the bedroom. Many of us return with a demand for immediate action upon our requests. Again, a very good thing in war. When someone says "Watch out" or "Get down," we do not stop and ask questions because hesitation could get you killed.

However, when we get back home and make requests, our spouse seems to think we are barking out orders and we do not get the loving desired results — we get the "look" from the spouse. And then we try and figure out what we did to get the "look."

What worked great during the deployment, worked "during" the deployment, and is most likely not going to get the same results back home.

We experienced many new and different experiences. Some we wished we never did and never want to again. We learned more about ourselves as warriors and as individuals. Now as we try and make sense of all this, some of it just does not seem to compute.

If any of this sounds like you, you can relax, because you are most likely normal. You are experiencing some combat stress and adjustment from deployment.

You are not "psycho" as I heard some being called. You are not "all messed up," but are most likely normal.

If you would like to learn more about some normal reactions to combat stress, give us a call at the Family Life Center at 706-545-1760.

Starting March 1, we are going to conduct a Combat Stress Process Group. We will meet for six weeks and talk about and understand combat stress and the effects it has on us and what we can do to hyper-vigilance in the bedroom without scaring our spouses!

Call and reserve your seat or stop by the Family Life Center in Soldiers' Plaza. We are here with help for your journey.

The March of Dimes is saving babies...

After the March of Dimes defeated polio in the 1950s, we turned our attention to preventing birth defects and other threats to infant health. Today, we're fighting premature birth — the leading cause of newborn death. Half a million babies are born too soon every year. We're working to find out why ... and how premature birth can be prevented.

Feeding facts

THE BAYONET
Rachel Houston

People stay healthy by eating a balanced diet of good quality, nutrient rich foods. Pets are no different.

It's important to feed our animals the right amount and kind of food to give them every chance to live long, healthy lives. And every animal has different feeding needs.

Most cats are fed by the free-choice method, where owners leave food out at all times. Free-choice is a good method for cats because they are "efficient eaters," according to the American Animal Hospital Association. Most cats eat to satisfy their energy needs and then stop eating, meaning they eat frequent small meals.

Obesity can be a problem for cats, though, and it's definitely a problem for many dogs.

The American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals recommends feeding adult dogs twice a day, if possible.

Portion control is important in avoiding obesity in pets and is necessary for many young dogs since overeating can cause health problems.

The size a dog will be at mature weight and height is determined genetically — not by how much the dog eats as a puppy. A puppy may grow faster if it's fed an excess of food, but it won't be bigger at full-grown.

Different breeds of dogs reach maturity and stop growing at different times. Small dogs reach their adult height and weight at nine to 12 months old. Giant dogs may take up to two years to reach their adult size.

So feed your puppy appropriately by following the instructions on the bag and talking to your veterinarian.

Overeating can be a problem for giant breed puppies. If the puppy consumes too many calories and too much calcium, it may grow too rapidly, putting stress on the bones and joints.

Overfeeding can lead to hypertrophic osteodystrophy, which causes lameness and pain, osteochondrosis, which impairs cartilage growth, and hip dysplasia, a degenerative joint disease, according to the ASPCA.

A sign to watch for with bone growth diseases is bowing of the front legs.

Use controlled feeding, not free-choice feeding, with large and giant breed puppies and feed them food specifically made for their size. Many companies, including Iams, Purina and Eukanuba, make large and giant breed puppy and dog foods.

When feeding mature cats and dogs, take several things into consideration — age, size and activity level. House pets vary in their activity levels. A pet with a normal activity level needs a different amount of energy than a lazy lap dog or an energetic dog that goes on long runs with its owner.

Extreme hot or cold temperatures raise the amount of energy a dog or cat needs, as does recovering from surgery, according to the ASPCA.

Older pets have different feeding needs as well, and different breeds reach their senior years at different times.

The ASPCA recommends feeding cats a senior food beginning around seven years old.

Small dogs weighing less than 20 pounds and medium dogs weighing 21 to 50 pounds should be switched to a senior diet at seven years old.

Large dogs weighing 51 to 90 pounds should be switched at six years, and giant dogs weighing 91 pounds or more should be switched at 5 years, according to the ASPCA.

The goals for feeding older animals are maintaining health and optimum weight, slowing or preventing the development of disease and minimizing any signs of disease already present, according to the ASPCA.

The ASPCA Web site has a place for pet owners to submit nutrition questions. For more information, go to www.aspc.org and www.healthypet.com.

Here's your chance to start growing personal wealth

Military Saves proves you don't have to be rich to build wealth

SPECIAL TO THE BAYONET
John Mitchell

It's not how much you earn, but how much you're able to keep that determines how wealthy you are.

As obvious as this may sound, it's actually a foreign concept for most Americans. As a people, we are overwhelmingly spending more than we earn.

Today, household savings in America lag far behind other industrialized nations, with Japan's savings rate near 30 percent of personal income, compared to less than 3 percent for most workers in the U.S.

The Department of Defense is taking the lead in helping military members and their families take the first step toward financial security with its Military Saves campaign.

The Military Saves campaign is a part of the larger America Saves campaign involving more than 1,000 non-profit, government and corporate groups that encourages individuals and families to save and build personal wealth. There will be a special emphasis on publicizing the benefits of regular and habitual saving across DoD during the week of Feb. 25 through March 3. Participating organizations will offer promotional information, enrollment instructions and personalized assistance with financial matters during the week.

The national program maintains a robust Web site, www.americasaves.org, filled with suggestions for getting started, ways to increase savings by reducing what you spend on major purchases like homes and automobiles and even tips for saving on a tight budget.

The objective of the program is to help our men and women in uniform "Build wealth, not debt," as the slogan goes.

At the Web site, visitors will find clear explanations why it's important to build an emergency fund, ways to avoid payday loans and ways to save for children's college needs, to name just a few. Most importantly, there is a clear explanation about why it's important to manage our finances, rather than letting mistakes or carelessness in this area affect our personal lives and our military careers.

Military people of all ranks are proving you don't have to be rich to build wealth. Ranging from junior enlisted Soldiers to senior officers, from retirees to stay-at-home moms, those who serve America are "serving their futures" by paying off debt and saving to achieve financial goals.

So what are you waiting for?

If you haven't made the commitment to turn the corner on your personal finances, let this be the year to do that. The Military Saves program can be the tool to start that process, whether you get started on your own, or work through a bank or credit union.

Visit the Web site and enroll, or visit a local bank branch and ask for assistance. At least one community bank on Fort Benning is a participant in the Military Saves campaign and will have enrollment literature and access to the Internet to assist in the process.

Like any effort that requires self-discipline, the key to getting started is taking the first step.

Make February your month to start your personal financial fitness program!

Seven guidelines can help prevent injury, tragedy

MCG CHILDREN'S MEDICAL CENTER
Rene Hopkins

Knowing how to protect children in and around cars is one of the most important things parents should learn. Safe Kids East Central, led by the MCG Children's Medical Center, offers the following guidelines:

No. 1 — Never allow a child to ride without the correct restraints. Use safety belts, booster seats or child safety seats correctly every time you use the car. About 75 percent of all car crashes occur within 25 miles of your home.

No. 2 — Restrain children 12 and younger in the back seat. Always read the safety seat and car manuals for proper installation instructions or call Safe Kids at 706-721-7606.

No. 3 — Children younger than 1 and less than 20 pounds should be in rear-facing safety seats. Those older than 1, between 20 and 40 pounds, can use forward-facing safety seats. Children 4 to 8 or more than 40 pounds should use a booster.

No. 4 — Children taller than 4 feet, 9 inches can use an adult seat belt. A child appropriately restrained should have the strap at the hips and upper thighs rather than across the abdomen. When a belt is positioned across the stomach, there is nothing to support the belt but internal organs. If a crash should occur, the belt could cause internal injury. If parents are unsure about whether their kids fit the adult safety belts, they can call Safe Kids.

No. 5 — Parents should check before they back up to make sure children are not playing nearby. Do not allow children to play with or leave toys in the driveway.

No. 6 — Teach children never to play in or near cars. Children should also be taught where the trunk lock release is located.

No. 7 — Never leave a child alone in a car. Even on mild days with a window open, temperatures inside a vehicle can spike and children inside can suffer injury or even die.

On the corner of Sixth Avenue and Sixth Street lies the Old Slave Cemetery, a burial ground included in the original survey plan for the city and the first Columbus City Minutes, which allocated the land for "the interment of coloreds, whether slave or free."

The doors of St. James AME Church on Sixth Avenue were carved by slaves. The church, which houses the second oldest pipe organ in the state, was built after the Georgia Legislature gave land to the African Methodist Church in 1875.

Horace King wasn't born here, but he made this area his home. Born a slave and later emancipated, King became a master architect and bridge builder. The Dillingham Street Bridge, which spans the Chattahoochee from Bay Avenue to Phenix City, replaced the original covered bridge built by King.

When early Christians used the expression "under the fig tree," they referred to the time they spent in prayer. In 1900, local African-Americans met under a fig tree, literally, on Third Avenue. The Fourth Street Baptist Church evolved from those early prayer meetings.

Gertrude "Ma Rainey" Pridgett was born in Columbus in 1886 to Thomas and Ella Pridgett, both minstrel show veterans. Rainey started singing and dancing with a traveling troupe when she was 14. In 1902, she heard the blues performed for the first time in St. Louis, and she quickly adopted the style as her own. She married another traveling entertainer, Will "Pa" Rainey in 1904, and they toured the South together for a while. But Ma Rainey found fame as a soloist. In 1923, she signed a contract with Paramount, and the company billed her as "The Mother of the Blues." Music historians say she was the first female blues singer. Between 1923 and 1928, Ma Rainey recorded 100 songs. She was occasionally accompanied by great jazz musicians, including Louis Armstrong and Tommy Ladnier. Ma Rainey retired back home in Columbus in 1935, and here she built and operated two theaters. She also owned her own home, pictured below. At the time of her death, the local newspaper listed her occupation as a housekeeper. Rainey is buried in Porterdale Cemetery.

Our black history

Local African Americans made history around the world

THE BAYONET
Bridgett Siter

A few years back, I accompanied my daughter and a group of her friends to Chicago. Toward the end of our visit, we discovered a blues club in the basement of a music shop. It was billed as a "safe place to introduce children to the blues," because cigarettes and alcohol were banned. As it turned out, it was a great place to introduce these children to the blues, and it had nothing to do with clean air or prohibition.

The club was dark and "bluesy," as one might expect. There were mismatched chairs and tattered sofas all in a row, facing the back wall where stood a big, big lady with a big, big voice. Coincidentally, she was singing Georgia. She was surrounded by musicians — a drummer, a sax and so forth.

The walls were plastered with pictures of the greats of jazz, blues and soul, like Louis Armstrong, Ella Fitzgerald and Billie Holiday. But it was the photograph directly behind the singer that captured our attention. The centerpiece for the whole collection was a picture of Ma Rainey. In that place, a thousand miles from here, and in that moment, with that singer doing an imitation of the Mother of the Blues doing an imitation of Ray Charles, those girls learned a powerful lesson about Columbus' black history. Ma Rainey, a local gal who turned the world of minstrel music upside down in the early 20s, still impacts performers of all races and genres more than 60 years after her death.
