We almost lost our job after seeing the results of last week's games, but given another chance, we hope college elevens over the country will give us a hand this Saturday. The game of the week will undoubtedly be the Oklahoma-Texas scramble to be played at Dallas. The last time this game was held at Dallas, it was followed by a riot that took the Texas Rangers two hours to quell. So, for more reasons than one, we choose this as the game of the day.

In other parts of the country, Violets can name their own score over the Kingsmen in this one-sided affair.

FENN over PRINCETON. Here's one we hate to see, but the Quakers over the Tigers by a scant touchdown.

AMHERST over BOWDOIN. An easy one for the mighty Panthers. In spite of last week's victory for the Polar Bears, the Lord Jeffs should win this one. But close.

BOSTON COLLEGE over PENN STATE. The Nittany Lions are due to receive another thrashing this week from the Eagles.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY over COLGATE. In one of New England's thrillers, the Red Raiders should fall prey to the Browns over R. I. STATE. No trouble for the Bears in this one.

COLUMBIA over YALE. On the strength of last week's defeat of the Crimson team, the Big Red will look even bigger to the Cambridge crew as they meet in the Crimson stadium this Saturday.

DARTMOUTH over HOLY CROSS. In spite of the Indians' punishment by the Quakers, they should have enough to take to the Crusaders.

NAVY over DUKE. Here's another welcome victory for the Midgies, but still a close game.

DUTCHMAN over POINT. The Rams should have an easy time with the Merchants.

NYU over BROOKLYN. The Rebels from the Big River.

NORTH CAROLINA over SOUTH CAROLINA. The War Between the States; the Tarheels have it all their way in this battle.

TENNESSEE over CHATTAHOOGA. The Volunteers should take the Moccasins for a ride on this occasion.

TULANE over SOUTHWESTERN of LA. The Green Wave is due to enuff the Bulldogs this one.

VIRGINIA over VIRGINIA TECH. The Cavaliers will show the Gobbler how it's done this Saturday.

FENN over PRINCETON. Here's one we hate to see, but the Quakers over the Tigers by a scant touchdown.

AMHERST over BOWDOIN. An easy one for the mighty Panthers.

LEHIGH over RUTGERS. The Scarlet should meet their second defeat of the week at the hands of the Indians.

THE SOUTHWEST over ARIZONA. The Cowboys are due to wallop the Wildcats in this Saturday encounter.

BAYLOR over ARKANSAS. The Bears should be too much for the Razorbacks this week.

OKLAHOMA over TEXAS. The game of the week this week will be played in the Southwest, and all eyes should be focused on a winning eleven of SEER-SICE over NEW MEXICO. Jess Neely can name his own score in this one.

TEXAS TECH over TULSA. The Hurricane should be blasted by the Red Raiders this week.

THE WEST over MICHIGAN over ARMY. The West Pointers are scheduled to make strutting at the hand of the Wolverine, a close game, but a victory for the Beany boys.

CALIFORNIA over WISCONSIN. The Badgers will really be badgered this week.

IOWA STATE over COLORADO. The Cyclones should lance the Buffaloes in this one.

ILLINOIS over IOWA. The Hail over the Hawkeyes in what might turn out to be a thriller.

TCU over INDIANA. The Horned Frogs shouldn't have much trouble against the Hoosiers.

KANSAS over GEORGETOWN. The Jayhawkers have it clinched.

MICHIGAN STATE over MARYLAND. A Hula by radio for the Spartans.

MINNESOTA over NORTH-DAKOTA. After their defeat last week by Pitt, the Wildcats should be shaking in their boots this Saturday, against what many term the best line in the country.

MISSOURI over OKLAHOMA A & M. The really close one of the western circuit. The Tigers by a faint.

MONTANA over COLORADO A & M. The Grizzlies should give the Aztecs a treatment instead of a treat.

NEBRASKA over KANSAS STATE. The Cornhuskers over the Wildcats in this one.

NOTRE DAME over PURDUE. After a while, we'll just stop calling games for the Irishmen.

THE FAR WEST over STANFORD over UCLA. The Indians should scalp the Bears in this one.

COLLEGE of the Pacific over NEVADA. The Wolf Pack should have no trouble with an easy meat, even for the Tigers.

OHIO STATE over SOUTHERN CAL. The Buckeyes should have no trouble with the erstwhile mighty Trojans this week.

WASHINGTON STATE over OREGON. The Cougars should take this one.

WASHINGTON over OREGON STATE. And the Huskies should ditto this one.

3rd Division Units To Deliver Coal In 2 Post Areas

The Third Infantry division units have taken over coal delivery to and salvage and return collection from the Sand hill and Harmony church areas, it has been announced.

The services, formerly performed by the Infantry Center engineer, will be provided by the Third division in the Sand hill area and by the 78th Combat Engineer battalion, attached to the Third division in the Harmony church area. The post engineer will continue to service the Sand Hill post and Lawson area.

Refuse and salvage, exclusive of edible or edible garbage, will be collected from all units, activities, family quarters and trailer camps in the specified areas.

Tactical organizations which have their own vehicles will be responsible for delivery of coal to their units. Coal will be furnished to units on a 430 p. m. daily, except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

According to Infantry Center officials, units desiring coal will have their trucks report to the coal office building No. 376 in area B-4, where coal tickets will be issued.

With the coal ticket, the trucks will proceed to the coal yard where they will be issued the amount of coal noted on the coal ticket.

It was emphasized that coal will not be issued any units unless the outlined procedure is followed.

Coal collected by the Third division and 78th Engineers will be delivered to the sanitary fill, 1,000 feet east of Cusseta road south of Upatot creek.

Revisions Planned For TIS Quarterly

A new and more diversified Infantry School Quarterly is in store for those who will fill out subscription blanks for the coming year's run.

According to preliminary reports from Capt. John W. Baumgartner, training publications associate, the heretofore standard format of the Quarterly will be flexible. He says provisions have been made for more pictures and stories of shorter length and better readability.

The first change, in looking over the newly designed book, is the eye-catching cover, pleasantly designed to include a picture. The old, prosaic-looking book might have turned the eye with its drab and punchless title cover.

The book, which is described as "must" by certain Infantry School officials, publishes timely training articles on infantry training manuals monthly. Captain Baumgartner says, however, the Quarterly will remain on the restricted list.

The new subscription year promises better articles. Of this Captain Baumgartner says, "We plan to have the latest information articles on infantry weapons. This will include the evolution and tests that took place at Fort Benning in keeping step with changes."

One feature, which has yet to be released because of technical problems, deals with the new rifle marksmanship course conceived and perfected at Fort Benning. The new course highlights the effectiveness of teaching combat positions in firing. Although the format of the Quarterly will be flexible, he says provisions have been made for more pictures and stories of shorter length and better readability.

The Quarterly will feature in its first edition a historical monograph on the 19th Infantry Division.

Also included in the initial issue will be a story on engineering entitled, "Roads, Drainage, and Mud Control." Dealing with the problems faced by the engineers corps, it will stress the importance of educating the individual infantryman how to maintain roads, effect drainage, and supervise mud control. The article's author is the 19th Infantryman, who sometimes has too few experienced engineers in unit, how and why he should discipline himself in the control of topographical properties.

Another feature added that out of town subscriptions would be authorized, so that the national guard and other civilian components will be able to subscribe, although many are of a restricted nature of material produced.

Question of the Week: How will the New Pay Bill Affect You?
CPL. JOSEPH HARLAN, Third Reconnaissance Company, Well, this new pay bill won't affect me personally, but for soldiers staying in the service I think it will be a great thing. I think it would be a great inducement to others who are not quite sure of enlisting in the army and also to those now in the army and planning to reenlist.

Practical Suggestions Earn Civilians Monetary Awards

Two civilian employees at Fort Benning recently received awards totaling $225 for practical suggestions which have reduced annual operating expenses in their departments by $3,500.

John O. Stansell, of the Infantry Center Ordnance department, received a $200 check for his suggestion which is expected to save the government $4,000 in the production and repair of M-85-C telescopes and M-9 carrying cases.

Valley Fair Set For City

The 32nd annual Chattanooga Valley Exposition will be held in Columbus, Ga., during the week of Oct. 10-15 and is expected to be the best in the history of the organization.

At present, entries being received daily from all parts of the state, and all departments are expected to be filled.

Already all available exhibit space in the buildings is assigned, and five county and ten community exhibits are in the process of being prepared.

The officials of the exposition are again offering $2,000 in premiums to exhibitors in the 21 departments of the fair to encourage better agricultural practices, better home living and more quality farm produce.

Cooperators with the Soil Conservation districts are planning through seven individual farm exhibits the progress made during the past 12 months.

Livestock exhibits during the past five years also have portrayed remarkable progress in this phase of farm activity, and the 1949 Fair will be no exception. The exhibits in livestock are expected to exceed in both number and quality those of past years.

Plans are being made for five exhibits of the latest farm implements. These farm machinery exhibits will permit the farmer to study all makes of equipment and select that best suited to his individual needs.

The youth of west Georgia and east Alabama will have an opportunity to show to the public what was accomplished with their 4-H and F. A. projects.

The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer company and Radio Station WOLB have offered a special prize on a community basis to the community having the largest display of vegetables as a part of its exhibit.

CARDINAL SPELLMAN
... Sets Mass Here

Catholic Troops Await Cardinal

Details of the impending visit of Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York, were announced this week by Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, Third Infantry division commander.

Plans have been completed, General Clarkson said, for the cardinal to say mass Sunday morning, Oct. 23 in the Main gymnasium at 10:30.

A feature of the ceremony, the general added, will be the appearance of the 40-voice choir from Holy Trinity Seminary, Atlanta.

Cardinal Spellman will arrive in Atlanta Saturday, Oct. 22 where he will be met by General Clarkson and the Third division chaplain, Military and civilian personnel of the post and their families are invited to attend.

Taking Short Course

Maj. C. W. Jolley of the officers' reserve corps is taking a short training course with the Infantry Center quartermaster school.

Formerly, Negroes were excluded from acquiring certain military occupational specialties. Also, they were selected to attend schools on the basis of their original curriculum. They competed for promotion only among themselves.

Now all noncommissioned officers will compete for promotion on an army-wide equal merit basis against a single standard without regard to race or color.

Under the old policy, Negro ROTC students attending summer camps were placed in Negro units for their training. Now all personnel receiving assigned to a ROTC unit will remain together.

Mr. Gray declared that the army is continuing its study of the present policy of regulating Negro original curriculum on the basis of their original curriculum, which is now based on the population ratio of Negroes to the total population of the country, about 10 per cent.

He pointed out that present policies concerning the utilization of Negro manpower in the army are based on the recommendations of a board, headed by Gen. A. C. Gillem, Jr., which made its report in 1948 and which itself recommended a periodic review of army policies.

Changing conditions and attitudes require and permit constant re-examination and testing of our policies and our practices. Mr. Gray said, "The new board, which I intend to appoint promptly, will help in the performance of this duty."

Convert Ideas Into Cash, Journal Editor Advises

Write what you know and make some dough, so says a military writer who recently visited Fort Benning. Retired Col. Joseph I. Greene, editor of the Infantry Journal and former editor of the Infantry School Quarterly, told a group of officers last week that his magazine, a subsidiary of the Infantry Association, is on the look-out for more and better articles from enlisted men and officers at Fort Benning. Colonel Greene, here at the invitation of Brig. Gen. J. S. Bradley, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, commented on the recent article written by Saturday Evening Post Editor Beverly Smith. (Mr. Smith's article, dealing with the new infantile "See CONVERT IDEAS, P-17) men at Fort Benning to contribute to both. The Quarterly certainly has added prestige to this post. "The Journal's policy, he added, is to publish articles that will be directly useful for field training and administrative application. We also aim to bring forth certain articles that the serviceman can reflect upon in his daily life, the colonel pointed out. Colonel Greene, here at the invitation of Brig. Gen. J. S. Bradley, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, commented on the recent article written by Saturday Evening Post Editor Beverly Smith. (Mr. Smith's article, dealing with the new infantile "See CONVERT IDEAS, P-17) In any event, a soldier who entered the service before Oct. 1, 1949, will not suffer any loss of total compensation to which he was entitled on Sept. 30 until his enlistment expires on or until July 1, 1952, whichever comes first. But, even though an enlisted man may continue family allowances for a time, if he would suffer a decrease in total compensation by losing them, he cannot get an increase over his Sept. 30 pay as long as any part of the family allowances would be responsible for part of the increase. In addition, after next April 30, the 500 officers will be included in allowance for a brother or sister, or for a parent dependent for "chief support" if a wife or child. Also a person whose family allowances remain in effect loses $67.50 of them, if his family occupies government quarters. Those men are scheduled to get a later out in their total compensation on Sept. 30, this year. They may be discharged upon their request by applying by Sept. 15, 1950. If an enlisted man's enlistment expires before July 1, 1952, and he remains within three months of the saving clause continues in operations.

Additional Housing Seen for Benning

Fort Benning has been authorized construction of a 600-unit housing project under the Wherry plan, it was announced yesterday by Col. Marcus B. Bell, Infantry Center G-4. Close on the heels of Washington's go-ahead on the estimated $3,000,000 project, came the announcement that bids were invited from 32 contractors to submit plans for units to rent from $75 to $80 a month. Incorporated in the plans will be a complete community center with grocery store, drug store, sub post office, barber shop, beauty parlor, service station and laundrette. Tentative location of the complete project is just west of the Battle Park homes site. The bidder who submits the best housing for the $75 to $80 rental will be awarded the contract, it was announced. This will be judged by a board of officers from Fort Benning with final review being made by a board from Third Army headquarters. Proposals will be received until Nov. 30, Colonel Bell said, estimating the final approval of the chosen project will come Jan. 1. He said that construction would probably start March 1, with completion hoped for by July 1, 1950. The units are limited to a maximum of six families per unit, and there may be single houses, it was disclosed. The housing units will have two or three bedrooms, a bathroom or three bedrooms, a bathroom (See HOUSING Page 9).

Accidents Here Show Slight Drop

Although the number of fatalities at Fort Benning last month was lower than that of the Third Army, it was still too high according to Norman Evans, post safety director, who urged all drivers, both military and civilian, to exercise caution at all times. Colonel Greene, here at the invitation of Brig. Gen. J. S. Bradley, assistant commandant of the Infantry School, commented on the recent article written by Saturday Evening Post Editor Beverly Smith. (Mr. Smith's article, dealing with the new infantile "See CONVERT IDEAS, P-17) The group students at the Armed Forces staff college, Norfolk, Va., and the Air University, Maxwell field, Ala., arrived from Eglin field, Fla., Tuesday afternoon after witnessing the effectiveness of air power. They are slated to observe a firepower and infantry-artillery-tank team demonstration today. The potential top commanders of future, army, navy, and air-force elements are part of an 1,800-man team currently touring various installations as part of their training. Following the group now visiting the post, another student body from the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., will arrive for a demonstration on Oct. 27 and Oct. 28. The 500 officers will witness demonstrations similar to those staged for the first group. At least 200 students from the Air university at Maxwell field, and various other technical service schools will attend the third demonstration on Oct. 30 and Nov. 1. Infantry Problems Shown To Students

Teamwork between air and ground forces will be graphically demonstrated today and tomorrow to 700 student officers of the nation's top armed forces schools by crack Infantry School demonstration troops. UN Is Synonym for Peace

Peace! Nice sounding word, isn't it? Remember how nice it sounded back in May and August, 1945?

To the military, especially we of the infantry and supporting arms who went through war and know it for the unglamorous hell it is, that was the one word we thought had been dropped from the dictionary.

Today, there's a synonym for peace, it's United Nations. We say "synonym," not substitute. That's because the UN was designated to function in a peace period, not to create peace.

The world will celebrate the United Nations' birthday October 24. Four years ago on that date, this organization, dedicated to peace, economic and social progress, was born.

These four years have proved much to a peace-hungry world. First and most important, we feel that permanent world peace is extremely difficult to achieve. That's because we still have the same factors which have caused wars in the past.

Among them are fear, greed and self-righteousness. These are especially evident in the national character of "have-not" peoples. Human instincts have not changed in the history of mankind. The world has no supernatural authority to restrain those instincts.

It does have the United Nations. The second attempt at world organization, it is the only existing machinery organized to point the way to world peace. As a major force in our foreign policy, it provides a more realistic view of what is possible and what is impossible between the Soviet Union and the world at large.

Some critics have blamed the UN for the "cold war." This is not true. The UN can only reflect the political situation on the outside. In fact, it wasn't created to operate under present conditions. It was designed to function in a peace period, not create it.

The whole structure of the UN is built on unity. Unless it has unity among the Big Five—U. S., U.S.S.R., U. K., China and France—it cannot function.

Until the Big Five settle their differences on the peace treaties, the UN cannot enforce peace. As yet, the powers have not agreed on plans to place armed forces at the UN's disposal. No agreement has been reached on atomic energy control or the regulation and reduction of armaments generally.

But the UN can and does step into quarrels between member nations. It does this by mediation, conciliation, stopping hasty action and working for a peaceful settlement of those differences.

The UN has acted for peace in Palestine, Kashmir State, Berlin, Indonesia, the Balkans, Syria and Lebanon, Iran and Korea. For the first time in 30 years, it brought peace to the Holy Land. It lifted the Berlin blockade and it stopped fighting in Kashmir State.

Not only in the field of peace, but in the fields of social and economic progress, the UN is active. The UN and its specialized agencies have helped feed millions of hungry children; have helped improve world production and distribution of food; have given technical assistance for the economic development of backward countries, and have aided world educational and cultural progress.

In addition, ten non-self-governing territories have been placed under UN supervision within the trusteeship system. When the Big Five failed to agree, UN took on the job of deciding the disposition of former Italian colonies.

The UN continues to serve as the one meeting place where nations come together and work out their problems. It is continually striving to better living conditions in all lands.

We of The Bayonet, wish to add our best wishes for a happy anniversary to the United Nations—that airlock in the cesspool of international power politics.

The call of the loon sounds like the wild laugh of an insane person.

News Briefs

Ike Considered Likely Republican Candidate

NATIONAL — Dwight Eisenhower, Columbia University president, last week told a student audience to "grab opportunity, do not expect security." The able educator, who last year considered himself the "last man" to run for political office, told his listeners, some veterans of his campaigns, that "human beings would fall in their existence if they had complete security." As the former military leader spoke, friends were debating as to his political fitness. One close advisor to the college president, outside of education circles, declared, Eisenhower less conservative than the Republican's right wing, but more conservative than the Democrat's New Dealers; an advocate for a more decentralized, national government. Their conclusion: in line for the Republican nomination of president in 1952.

The navy is preparing this week for an all-out war on the Pentagon's latest defense policy. Linking up against Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson's naval cutbacks, the navy has marshaled the loyalty of Fleet Admirals W. F. Halsey, Ernest J. King, and Chester Nimitz to present the fleet's contentions at a congressional hearing. Headed by crusty Senator Carl Vinson, the board of investigators will try to determine the validity of recent semi-official reports that the navy's morale is being crushed because of Secretary Johnson's seemingly anti-navy cutbacks in government spending.

INTERNATIONAL — Chancellor Leopold Figl's anti-Red coalition government remained firm in the saddle this week as voters of Austria kept in line with other European anti-Communist countries. In latest unofficial returns, Figl's People's party ranked as Austria's biggest, winning 77 seats in the 185-member lower house of parliament. The Socialists won 67 seats, to give the government coalition an overwhelming 144-vote bloc in the chamber. Termed by Chancellor Figl as "an-election for Western democracy," Austria's output is significant of the European trend toward anti-Communism.

SPORTS — With the celerity of a boxer's one-two-three punch the New York Yankees floored their World Series opponents last Sunday to climax the five-game contest. Despite high hopes of experts and prayers of hometown rooters, the Brooklyn Dodgers failed to rally after their second-game win of 1-0 over the Yankees. The fireball pitching of the Yankees' Joe Page in the last game put an end to the Bums' somewhat slim chance for recovery. The final game proved to much for the Dodgers — 10-6 was a hard score to face back home.

PRESS — Lt. Abner's Uncle Honeysuckle Yokum recently willed the youthful Taran-type hick $50,000. Like the many funny-page fellows' Lt. Abner pictured $50,000. He was wrong. What Uncle Honeysuckle willed was not green cash, but 50,000 kigmyies (part balloon, part fish, part homing pigeon, part bloodhound, part football) with bulbous noses and white king-sized fannies. Al Capp, creator and father of the kigmy and Lt. Abner strip, has already earned $25,000,000 from the sale of schlock in the form of gadgets and gimmicks for the kids. Manufacturers are beginning to retool their novelty factories—although the kigmy in form is slight uneasy—in preparation for the expected flood of requests.

Faith and Love Can Awaken Us to New Life

BY CHAPLAIN HARVEY M. HARDIN
Who are willing to see it. We city people miss the work and the satisfaction of the harvest season. Living out of paper sacks and tin cans has its conveniences, but we miss something that comes to the farmer as he plants his seed and guides his crops into his barns to feed the world.

A killing frost will come soon. Grass and leaves will be killed, but life remains in the roots and seed, asleep until next spring's sun and showers awaken them into new life. Some of these experiences of grief and failure.

Some of these experiences come as we grow older. We seem to be half dead, but warm Christmas will be here soon. Let us be thankful for life and all its blessings, and may give and receiving gifts at Christmas bring joy to each of us.

October is here. The weather is cooler and all of us feel more ambitious. Green leaves are turning brown, yellow and red. Every bush is ablaze with the glory of God for those

THE MAN WITH THE GOLDEN ARM by NELSON ALGREN. DOUBLEDAY AND COMPANY, NEW YORK, PUBLISHER.

By D. W. SCHAEFER

A man with a "golden arm". A man who had it "in the wrist" for the flick of a card, toss of the dice or stroke of a cue. A man with a 25-pound monkey on his back.

That was Frankie Moran, a big dealer in Schenley's gambling joint, and a "student" in the taking of morphine. A student until he becomes an addict and commits suicide.

Frankie, christened Francis Maj

New Group Is Organized

Officers' wives of the 10th Engineer Combat Battalion held their second luncheon meeting last Thursday in the quarters of Mrs. Harvey J. Whitehouse. Plans were formulated to begin work on a project to help the Salvation Army dress dolls for Christmas and for continued assistance to a local army family temporarily experiencing misfortune. It is not uncommon for energetic, ambitious young artists to be rewarded at some time or another by having one or possibly two of their pictures selected for showing at an art exhibit. But it is indeed justifiable cause for pride when two or three among some 800, are accepted and when an artist has a record of no refusals for any work submitted. Mrs. Harvey S. Browne, III, who paints under the name of Nellie May Frakes, has two paintings now on display in the fourth Southeastern annual art exhibit at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta. Her entry "Our Street," picturing colored mounds with their small charges and children on tricycles, won first place in the literature and art group contest, sponsored by the Fort Benning Women's club last spring, and was shown at the art exhibit held at the Fort Benning Country club. "My Horses," also first prize winner at the Benning art show, was selected for showing at the Atlanta exhibit. The exhibition opened in Atlanta Oct. 2 for two weeks, and will be shown at Davison's Atlanta store Oct. 17 through Oct. 23. One hundred of the 300 paintings now hung in the High Museum will be chosen to go on tour of Davison-Paxon stores in the South at the close of the Atlanta showing. Out of 1,000 entries submitted, these pictures were also selected and hung at the 30th annual National Art Exhibition, Newport, R. I., July 2 through July 24. This titan-haired, blue-eyed beauty is very modest about her accomplishments, though she is ready and willing to speak of her work, experiences and adventures in an easy, nonchalant manner. When asked where she hails from, she said, "I'm a Sourdough and proud of it!" Born in Juneau, Alaska, she received her early education in Seattle, and later studied at the University of Washington, where she majored in art. She attended the well-known Chouinard Art school in Los Angeles, and in 1939-40 she studied at the academy of Fine Arts in Munich, and under Professor Carl Albert Petrucci in Rome. In 1941 she was returned to Munich and detained there following America's entry into the war. During this detention period she turned to the art of painting for a living, and it is of interest to note that among her clientele were Baron Ferdinand von Ostensfels of Yugoslavia, then in Munich studying engineering, and Prince Konstantin von Bayern of Bavaria. A happy climax to her sojourn in Europe, Nellie May Frakes, as she is known professionally, was married in Paris in the spring of 1946 to Maj. Harvey S. Browne, II, later accompanying him to America and eventually to Fort Benning in 1947. While here, she has done several portraits for military units. Her most recent work is an oil painting, "Final Trail" which portrays horses and their riders on the trail near the base of the Pinal mountains. She plans to enter this piece in the national art exhibit at the Arizona State Fair. "I plan to introduce my work to post personnel at a showing here at Benning," she replied. Mrs. Browne said. Many of her portraits are now hanging in the homes of Benningites, and several of them have gone overseas with their owners. When asked what she likes to do best, the young artist replied that "I really enjoy doing portraits, especially of children, but my soul is perfection in composition and creative work."

Home, Garden Group Sees Color Movie on Rose Care

The Home and Garden group of the Fort Benning Woman's club held its first fall meeting Tuesday evening, Oct. 4, at the Polo Hunt club, with Mrs. Albert C. Halsey, chairman, presiding. Featured on the evening's program was a 45-minute color movie on the growth and care of roses, presented by J. O. Herring, of the Moore nurseries, Tyler, Tex. The film included a showing of various floral arrangements by Mrs. Oscar McCray. Mrs. Herring invited discussion and questions at the close of the movie. He explained that because the latitude here is so necessary to prune all the time. "When you cut roses, prune them back," he said. He also stressed the use of sulphur on roses and the need of constant cultivation. Also, it is important not to over water them, he said. Mr. Herring offered to donate three of his best rose bushes as prize for the group's Christmas meeting. A beautiful bouquet of long stemmed American beauty roses, donated by Gurley's Florist shop in Columbus, was won by Capt. Gilbert Sawyer. Mrs. Halsey discussed tentative plans for the year's program, which includes a trip through the Coca Cola Bottling plant and a talk by a representative from Davison-Paxon company.

Mesdames Nossman, Baskin Hosts at Department Lunch

Ladies of the Training Publications department held their luncheon in the Palm room and ladies lounge of the Officers' club Tuesday, Oct. 4, with Mrs. Wenden Nossman and Mrs. John S. Baskin as hostesses. Decorations were in the fall-wooden motif featuring large pumpkins for the centerpiece, and runners of orange berries, greenery and orange candles. Following luncheon the ladies were conducted on a tour of the army field printing plant by Lt. Col. A. C. Haley, plant director. Preceding the tour, the ladies gathered in the plant library where Colonel Haley gave a brief orientation talk on the set up of an army printing plant. Reproduction of instructional material for the Infantry School is handled in the plant, as well as work for army field forces, national guard and ORC, job printing, maps, overlays, administrative printing, special tests, the Infantry School Quarterly and army extension course series. On their tour through the plant the ladies saw a large automatic cylinder press in operation, which was aimed in detail by R. W. Pratt, in charge of pressmen. Carl Keith, linotype foreman, showed how lead slugs and type were made. Those attending were Mrs. A. E. Cornick and guest Mrs. Bernard Baetcke, Mrs. J. S. Bradley, Mrs. A. C. Haley, Mrs. Mark Ferry, Mrs. Allan Ferry, Mrs. Walter Runge, Mrs. Joseph Werp, Mrs. A. W. Dinner Dance Given by Unit Officers of the Third battalion, 30th Infantry regiment, held a formal dinner party last Saturday night, Oct. 1, in the Officers' club. Appetites were served in the ladies lounge followed by dinner in the Palm room and dancing in the Officers' club. Capt. C. G. Notice and Lt. Francis M. Kirwin were hosts. During dinner, Mrs. A. R. Lay, newcomers to the battalion, who were recently married, were honored. A large bouquet of autumn flowers centered the table, with fall tapers at each end. Over 60 attended. Among the guests were Col. and Mrs. Joseph Boone, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Frank Sackton and Lt. Col. Nathaniel R. Hosok. The long table, artistic in floral and candlelight arrangement, was set on the back porch overlooking the swimming pool. Fall fruit was used in small decorations, carrying out the autumn motif.

Parties

Elaine Ankarstran celebrated her third birthday last Thursday in the Rose room of the Officers' club.

Spanish Group Meets at Club

The Spanish group of the Fort Benning Woman's club will meet every Monday and Thursday at 9:30 a.m. in the Officers' club. Mrs. Edward Curtiss, chairman, announced today.

Beginning and advanced classes will be offered under the tutelage of Mrs. W. E. Montgomery of Columbus.

Little time will be devoted to grammar, while more time will be spent on conversational Spanish, she said.

Mrs. Montgomery, a native of Tobacco, Mexico, has lived in Columbus since 1933. She studied at an English boarding school in Mexico City, and has had an extensive background as instructor in Spanish.

Aside from her beginners class at 7 p.m. and the advanced class at 8 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Christian Fellowship association on Third Avenue in Columbus, Mrs. Montgomery also gives private instruction in Spanish or English to foreign students.

Further information may be obtained from Mrs. Curtiss or Mrs. Montgomery.

Housing

This project is looked upon as the largest single step taken to date to completely alleviate the housing problem here. When this latest project is completed, along with the 400-unit Camellia apartments, which will open in November, and Battle Park homes, whose 600 units will also be ready for occupancy in November, final alleviation of the housing problem will be in sight, Colonel Bell said.

Battalion Cited For Exhibition

A letter of commendation has been presented to Lt. Col. Philip S. Greene, commanding officer of the Second battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, citing his work in preparing a display for the fourth joint orientation conference held here last month. The Second battalion had a rifle company field kitchen and a quarter-ton vehicle on display on Blue Polo field following a Third Infantry division parade on French field.

The letter, written by Col. Dennis M. Moore, commanding officer of the 15th, specifically cited Lt. Herbert L. Bryant, G-Sgt. Thomas W. Johnson and Cpl. Bill F. Cook for their part in the display. Lieutenant Bryant was in charge of obtaining the equipment, while Sergeant Johnson set up the field kitchen and Corporal Cook prepared the jeep. Because of the outstanding efforts of these men, the display was a superior one, Colonel Moore said.

Cut in Time To Reenlist Is Proposed

A new reenlistment regulation now making the rounds in the Pentagon will, if passed, require reenlistment within 30 days, instead of the present 90 days, in order to protect grade held on discharge, Army Times reported this week.

The new proposal, identical to the airforce's present requirement, would not affect men discharged before the bill became law. However, men on the verge of discharge when the bill seems likely to pass, would be given sufficient warning so as to adjust their plans.

In addition to the reenlistment proposal, new policies have been set in relation to initial enlistment qualifications. Effective no later than Oct. 10, A and B physical profile applicants with an AGCP score below 50 will not be accepted for enlistment. No profile men will be enlisted.

These new requirements do not apply to reenlistments.

Army officials this week admitted that enlistments would decline somewhat with the new standard. A liberalization of last May's qualifications, reenlistments have also fallen sharply during the past few weeks. They added that this percentage drop will keep the strength at the desired 57,000 enlisted men.

In addition to the first, come-here dividend, now being held in abeyance, VA officials concede that an additional special dividend will be declared during the period that has elapsed since the 1948 cut-off date for the first payment. Unofficial estimates are that the second special dividend will be paid in 1951 or 1952. Since it will cover a span of only three or four years, the amount to be divided up may be considerably less than the $2,000,000 first dividend which piled up over an eight-year period.

Veterans Administration officials also disclosed, in answer to queries regarding NLIU converted policies, that converted policies will receive benefits under payments starting the first of the year.

Provisions have already been made for widows of policyholders and other beneficiaries. The VA says it is not necessary for people in this bracket to apply for dividends since they will be paid automatically. They also added that beneficiaries whose deceased benefactors dropped insurance before death will receive dividends covering the duration of the policy.

Fort Benning personnel were faced today with a new point of information as a result of an announcement from Joe R. Walters, officer in charge of the Columbus VA office.

Mr. Walters said that stubs to the applications are now being returned to entitled veterans as a matter of procedure. Recipients may find, however, that the number on the bottom of their form is identical to that held by someone else. Mr. Walters explained that this does not represent a number error. Stubs, he said, have been duplicated in many cases, in blocks of 100. He mentioned that finding your number duplicated on the form of another person does not call for alarm.

Latest word from VA sources in Washington indicate that checks will be sent at a rate of a million a week when the disbursement begins.

Completes Inspection Col. Willis V. Gatt, Infantry Center inspector general, has recently completed an inspection of the food service installations, including the central meat cutting plant and ration distribution section.

Tongue Depressor Patent Obtained by Col. Lanahan

A new type tongue depressor has been patented by Col. Charles R. Lanahan of the Station Hospital's eye, ear, nose and throat clinic.

The depressor, a drastic departure from the standard wooden type, embodies a suction tube and a hole at the end of the depressor to grip the tongue, according to Dr. Lanahan, this is about six inches long.

Suction may be released by removing the thumb from a hole in the tubular handle of the depressor. The spatula part of the depressor is on a right angle from the handle, which is a tube

Lieutenant Michel Leaves Post Unit

Second Lt. Alfred Michel Jr., medical company, 30th Infantry regiment, is scheduled to attend the French language school at Monterey, Calif.

After completing the four-month course, he will report to Bromberg, Germany, for assignment.

For the past three months Lieutenant Michel has served as executive officer of medical company.

Colonel Retires After 32 Years

Col. Arthur C. Purvis, Infantry, is retiring after 32 years of uninterupted army service.

The 1917 West Point graduate and holder of the Legion of Merit medal with oak leaf cluster spent many years as an instructor in various senior ROTC units.

After a tour at Governor's Island, N. Y., where he served as regimental and post adjutant, Colonel Purvis was called to Washington to help form the Persian Gulf command for World War II operations.

After serving in Iran with the Persian Gulf command, he was recalled to Washington for special duty with the adjutant general's department.

He was assigned to Fort Benning about two years ago.

Gang Fight Set For Golf Club

Tomorrow noon is the deadline to sign up for the "gang fight" which will make its debut at the Fort Benning Country club links.

Red Sox; and Casey Stengel, Yankees.

3. Once, in 1925, during the Notre Dame defeated Stanford.

4. Ice Hockey. Presented to winner of the NHL play-off.

5. Boston, representing the American League, defeated Pittsburgh of the National League 5 games to 3, in 1903.

All entries must sign up on the club bulletin board, and players will assemble at the first tee at one o'clock Saturday afternoon when captains will choose teams. Selections will be on an equal basis determined by the golf committee and based on the number of entries.

Play will be in foursomes with the best ball on each hole to count for the team score. Each quartet will play the field in match play.

The "gang fight" is another in a series of special events offered by the golf committee to generate more interest in golf.

ISD Wins Team Crown In Table Tennis Tourney

The Infantry School detachment, paced by the playing of John Wyatt, eked out a 11-10 win last Tuesday over the Student Training regiment to cop the post table tennis crown.

The highly regarded 15th Infantry regiment team, playing without its ace, Don Green, finished in third spot with five points. The 30th Infantry regiment, 84th Area Service unit and the 73rd Heavy Tank battalion completed the field in that order.

Four men monopolized the title play in the tourney, placing in both the singles and doubles brackets. They were John Wyatt, post singles champion, Calvin Gray, runner-up for the singles title, and Herb Myatt and Ancoole by scores of 15-21, 27-25, 21-9 in the semifinals.

Wyatt, Myatt, Scott and Gray will now form the Fort Benning table tennis team and will represent Fort Benning in the third army table tennis tournament at Fort McPherson, Ga., Oct. 25-27.

Unit Basketball Holds Spotlight

Basketball has taken the spotlight in the Provisional group, Area Service unit, as the annual unit intramural court league draws to a close.

With only nine games remaining, the race has developed into a dogfight between the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion and the Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section II, teams. Both of these hard fighting clubs have chalked up four wins while being downed only once.

In second place, two full games behind, is Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, with a record of two wins and three losses.

Holding down fourth place is the club representing the 328th Ordnance Battalion, a three season record of one win and three losses, while the 15th Quartermaster Battalion has lost its last place with no wins and three defeats.

Trojans Picked Over Bears In Coast Feature

By JIM CLOONAN and ROBBY ROBINSON.

With last Saturday's reassuring average of $90, we may display a little more confidence in our ability. Due to unaccountable grace and good living, the big Army team swamped Michigan last week in one that almost everyone called wrong, but we nullified this mis-call by our accurate prediction of the Duke-Navv outcome, which continued the Middies' winning streak.

This week on college gridirons the close games will be between Missouri and Illinois in the West, with the Tigers slightly favored; Williams versus Bowdoin in the Northeast, the Ephems with a scant edge; Tennessee and Alabama in the South, Vols holding honors, and in the Far West Southern Cal over Cal in a coast thriller that will decide the Rose Bowl host.

THE EAST
ARMY over HARVARD
 The Crimson, a tame team, just doesn't stand up against the soldiers from the Hudson. Maybe they can score.

MISSISSIPPI over BOSTON COLLEGE
 The Johnny Rebs should deal the Eagles a losing hand in this game, but the fight won't be over until the final gun is heard.

BOSTON UNIVERSITY over WEST VA.
 The Terriers should have it all their way in the contest.

WILLIAMS over BOWDOIN
 Two of the outstanding small colleges in the nation will meet.

Midget Doughs To Open Today On Home Field

Fort Benning's "Baby Doughs" will make their debut at Doughboy stadium this afternoon when they tangle with the Sixers, a team from the school of Columbus in a game slated for 4 p.m.

The Baby Doughs are the diminutive counterpart of the Fort Benning Doughboys, and will field a team against the invaders from downtown. The ball club averages 12 years of age, although the squad ranges from "young fellows" of nine to "old timers" pushing 13 years. The team will represent the Fort Benning Children's school.

Among the boys fighting it out for positions in the varsity are the following:
 Ends: Tom Oltarzewski, Mlekoy Palk, Leigh Redding, Sandy Stuart, Morty Brooks, and Jim Rucker.
 Tackles: Jerry Romina, Ronald Embry, Edward Guinan, Butch Ziegler, Fred Renfro and Mike McCormick.
 Guards: John Pothon, Tommy Peyton, George Booth, Nick Wallace, Fred Ream and Bobby Gaus.
 Center: Jimmy Dunn, former "batboy" of Fort Benning's Third Army baseball team, Mac Hardin and Tony Hall.

Speed and depth are both evident in the backfield in the person of players like Richard Bauguss, Pat McNulty, Buck Fernandez, Larry Chubb, Dick Wright, Sam Morrissey, Bill Luther, Delmar Ream, Cecil Campbell, Bucky Halsey and Don McPherson.

Divarty Suspends Non-Com Classes
 Non-commissioned officers' instructor classes for men of Third Army division units at Fort Benning have been temporarily disbanded in order to prepare for the October 26 Army Air Corps mobilization training tests, it was announced by divarty officials. When the testing program is completed, the classes will be resumed.

in New England this Saturday in one of the country's most notable exhibitions, The Royal Purple of Williams by one TD.

BROWN over PRINCETON
 We really hate to call this one many Ivy League games are decided by spirit, an unpredictable quantity. Brown, on the strength of their undefeated record, by a TD.

TEMPLE over BUCKNELL
 The Owls over the Bisons in another deserved victory for the boys' team.

DARTMOUTH over COLGATE
 With a big wahoo, the Indians should hand another crusher to the Red Raiders.

PENN over COLUMBIA
 After Lou Linares' loss last week against the Big Blue team, the Quakers shouldn't have too much trouble with the Light Blues.

CORNELL over YALE
 The Big Red, with one of the top teams in the East, should walk over the Eli in spite of the intrepid Levi.

HOLY CROSS over DUQUESNE
 The Iron Dukes will be unable to reproduce their famous victories of past years when they meet the Crusaders this Saturday.

FORDHAM over SCRANTON COLLEGE
 The Rams without a struggle.

GEORGETOWN over MARY WASHINGTON
 After their tremendous victory last week over Wake Forest, the Hoyas over the boys from the Big City.

LEHIGH over GETTYSBURG
 The Engineers should railroad this contest at any desired rate of speed.

PENN STATE over NEBRASKA
 The Nittany Lions have a chance to redress themselves again this Saturday.

VILLANOVA over TULSA
 The Oilmen shouldn't have much to say against the clawing and scratching of a deadly Wildcat team.

THE WEST
UTAH over DENVER
 The Utes by a couple of TDs.

MARQUETTE over DETROIT
 The Hilltoppers, with a poor record behind them, should be able to take this one.

MISSOURI over ILLINOIS
 One of the outstanding games in the nation. The Tigers, although they have a record of one win and two losses, have a fighting team and should prove just barely better than the Illini.

IOWA over INDIANA
 The Hoosiers, one of the "defeated teams" in the nation, should receive another beating this week.

IOWA STATE over KANSAS STATE
 The Buckeyes should take this one, in face of their defeat of Kansas last week.

MICHIGAN over NORTHWESTERN
 If the Wolverines don't take this one, we're through.

MICHIGAN STATE over WILLIAM & MARY
 A powerful Spartan team should take this one without much trouble.

MINNESOTA over WISCONSIN
 We could be wrong here, but we're backing the Great Golden Gophers all the way this season.

NAVY over WISCONSIN
 Many readers will doubtless scratch teeth and tear hair at this choice, but we pick the gallant Midlles to continue their first streak of wins in a couple of heart-breaking years.

NOTRE DAME over TULANE
 No explanation necessary.

THE SOUTH
TENNESSEE over ALABAMA
 The Volunteers have our backing in this contest against the Crimson Tide, but it will definitely be a fight. We may have to leave town after this one.

GEORGIA TECH over AUBURN
 The Yellow Jackets shouldn't have too much trouble with the Plainsmen.

The West Point of the South just hasn't got what it takes to continue the winning streak.

DUKE over N. C. STATE
 Blue Devils all the way.

VANDERBILT over FLORIDA
 After the Gators' poor showing last week, and in view of Vanderbilt's strength, this game shouldn't give the Commodores too much trouble.

L. S. U. over GEORGIA
 The Bulldogs just won't be quite strong enough to take one from the Tigers.

FURDUE over MIAMI
 At last—the Boilemiers may win one.

MISSISSIPPI STATE over CINCINNATI
 The Maroons in a walkway.

NORTH CAROLINA over WAKE FOREST
 The Deacons will be outclassed by Chop Chop and his boys.

THE SOUTHWEST
TEXAS over ARKANSAS
 A great Longhorn team, in spite of their Soonerized defeat last Saturday, should soundly trounce the Travelers.

BAYLOR over TEXAS TECH
 Another win for the Bears.

HARDIN-SIMMONS over NEW MEXICO
 Poor Sun-Devils. The Cowboys will have it all their way.

OKLAHOMA over KANSAS
 Well, you've got to hand it to Kansas to field a team in front of the Sooners.

SOUTHERN METHODIST over RICE
 The Mustangs, sparked by the Doakster, should take this contest home with them.

TEXAS CHRISTIAN over TEXAS A & M
 The Aggies shouldn't have a word to say during this game.

THE FAR WEST
SOUTHERN CAL over CAL
 A truly great game. Two undefeated teams meet. The Trojans should take it, however.

OREGON over COLORADO
 The boys from the big north woods should axe this one.

WASHINGTON STATE over IDAHO
 The Lumbermen without too much trouble.

OREGON STATE over MONTANA
 The Ducks can take this one from the Broncs, and should.

COLLEGE of the PACIFIC over PORTLAND
 The Tigers over the Cement Mixers in this contest.

UCLA over SANTA CLARA
 The Uclan Bruins in an easy game.

STANFORD over WASHINGTON
 The Indians over the Ruskies in one of Stanford's few wins this fall.

Headquarters Sets Rules For hunters

Headquarters, The Infantry Center, has outlined a few general rules for safety, which have been advocated by conscientious hunters, wildlife experts and lifelong sportsmen.

1. Handle a sporting weapon with the same care you would a service weapon. Treat every weapon as though it were loaded.
2. Carry only empty guns in vehicles, preferably broken down or with the action open.
3. Be sure of your target before you shoot. Never point your gun at anything which you do not intend to shoot.
4. Use a good, dependable weapon, ammunition that is safe for that weapon, and make sure the barrel and action are free of obstructions.
5. Never climb a tree or fence with a loaded weapon.
6. Never attempt to mix gunpowder and alcohol. It can't be done.
7. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface or across a surface of water.

According to recent statistics, the majority of hunting accidents are caused by the misuse of firearms, the most frequent calamity is accidental discharge of a weapon. This type of accident accounts for 50 per cent of the cases in which hunters are killed or hurt; 24 per cent are caused by a victim's having been in the line of fire of another hunter; 20 per cent result from hunters being mistaken for game; and six per cent because of ricochet bullets and miscellaneous sources.

About two-thirds of all misadventures are self-inflicted, according to the survey. The rest are due to the incompetency of others.

Through the observance of these cardinal rules, it is hoped by the Infantry Center that many accidents may be avoided during this year's hunting season.

Lt. Burkert Aids 3rd Army Survey

First Lt. James M. Burkert, Third Infantry division food service supervisor is aiding his infantry Center counterpart in formulating Fort Benning policies in that service.

In his new capacity, Lieutenant Burkert will help conduct the Third Army basic survey on all operating dining halls, give lectures, cooperate in setting up methods for inspections and compile personnel files on soldiers under his jurisdiction working in food service jobs.

Overseas Mailing Requirements Set

Christmas parcels for overseas military personnel should be mailed between Oct. 15 and Nov. 15, according to a postal bulletin issued recently.

Postal authorities emphasized the importance of mailing packages as soon as possible to avoid the expected Christmas rush. Every effort will be made, they said, to make delivery by Christmas of parcels sent before the deadline date.

Packages should not exceed 100 inches in length and girth combined, nor exceed 70 pounds in weight. A 30-pound limit has been set on packages to APO's 123 officials said.

Delaware Law Makers OK Bonus For Veterans

Last summer's overwhelming vote by the people of Delaware in favor of a World War II veteran's bonus, was endorsed last week by the state legislature.

Governor Garvel, who signed the bill, said most veterans will receive their bonuses by Christmas.

According to the bill's provisions, payment will be at the rate of $15 a month for domestic service and $20 per month for overseas service. The law makes allowances for 15 months or more domestic service will receive $225 whereas the veteran who served 15 months or more overseas will receive $300.

In addition, beneficiaries of deceased servicemen will be paid.

Veterans with 60 percent or greater service-connected disability will get the $300 maximum, regardless of where service was performed.

With some 35,000 Delaware veterans eligible for the bonus, a committee in Dover, the state capital, is taking applications and making postal money orders available to the applicants.

As set out in the new state law, veterans applying for the bonus must qualify as follows:

They must have been residents of Delaware for at least one year before the date of discharge, living temporarily out of the state, should have proof of legal residence in Delaware.

Ninety days of service is needed to make initial qualification. They must have been in service between Sept. 16, 1940, and June 30, 1946.

Delaware is the 17th state to enact a veteran's bonus bill.

It's Expensive to Go AWOL

Can a soldier afford to go AWOL? Frankly, we don't believe he can.

For example, take a private who is paid $2.67 for a day's work. He goes AWOL for one day. When he returns he is sentenced to three days confinement at hard labor. Instead of confinement, however, let's convert the sentence to five days forfeiture of pay. In other words, every day lost by AWOL means that the offender is subject to the loss of five days pay. In the case of the private, this would amount to $13.35.

Multiply this total by 30 days AWOL, add the expense the army incurs by sending guards to return the offender to military custody plus the reward paid to the civilian authority who made the arrest—all of which must be paid by the offender—and you have some idea how much it costs to go AWOL.

Money, however, isn't the only expense involved. The AWOL soldier brings embarrassment to his family, who, most of the time, doesn't know his visit home is unauthorized. In addition, he must "make-up" every day of "hard time" before he is eligible for discharge.

Going AWOL is unnecessary anyway.

If any soldier has a legitimate reason for requesting a three-day pass or a furlough and if that soldier has conducted himself in a soldierly manner, approval is almost certain. On the other hand, if the soldier has not lived up to the traditions of the service and has consistently been an "eight ball," there is no reason for him to expect consideration except in case of emergency.

Many causes for AWOL have been listed from time to time, but we believe that most of the causes result from the soldier's failure to talk over his problems with his company commander. There are few commanders, if any, who are not interested in the welfare of their men. They are anxious to give them counsel and advice and to help them, if they can, through their personal difficulties. A poor commander indeed is he who does not interest himself in the problems of his men.

We have heard of first sergeants shouting out of the orderly room when who ask permission to see the company commander, but this practice is not widespread. If a soldier has a problem which he feels requires the attention of the company commander and if he is not a chronic complainer, a first sergeant will give him permission to see the company commander. If, however, the first sergeant refuses for no apparent reason, the soldier should make every effort to see the company commander when he returns to his office after hours. He should not, in any case, take matters in his own hands and go AWOL.

It's easy to get documented proof from home if a soldier's presence is required because a member of the family is dangerously ill. Every soldier should inform his family that in order to expedite his furlough during an emergency the Red Cross should be contacted. The family doctor need only call on the Red Cross chapter in the soldier's home town and report the illness. That chapter will immediately contact the Fort Benning chapter, and more than likely the soldier will be on his way home within 24 hours. It's that simple.

The army is not stupid, however. Too many times soldiers have endeavored to "pull something over their company commander's eyes." It doesn't usually work. For example, a soldier requested a furlough because his sister was critically ill. His battalion commander asked the Red Cross to contact the chapter in the man's home town. The Red Cross did, but the soldier didn't get his furlough until much later. Reason: His sister had had the measles, but had recovered sufficiently to be out of bed.

Many soldiers' unfortunately, believe that they can get out of the army simply by requesting AWOL's. But chronic offenders can testify from their bunks in the guardhouse that it doesn't work. And repeated offenders might find that when time for discharge rolls around, they don't get an honorable discharge. It's mighty hard to convince an employer that the army is to blame for an individual's misconduct.

Hope Fades for Quick Settlement of Strikes

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Settlement of the steel and coal strikes seemed farther off than ever this week when nine plants of the Alcoa Company in America closed with the walkout of 10,000 steel workers. If the strike continues until December, it is expected 5,000-6,000 workers will be idle. The two strikes, government officials said, will have far-reaching repercussions with some railroads already laying off workers. The B-36 problem which started with a trumped-up charge of shady dealing has grown to an awkward monster out of all proportion. The navy and airforce are battling it out with the house armed services committee. Top navy men are taking big risks. Most conclusions indicate that if the navy falls in its arguments, there will not be another chance. Morale factors are involved and the Marine corps is in great danger of being relegated to limbo. So far, however, it seems to be a battle of words and what released what to the press. The B-36 bomber is only the witches broomstick the navy is riding to retain its air superiority. President Truman lost a party when his nomination of Leland Olds for a third term on the Federal Power commission was rejected by the senate. It was the bugaboo of communism again although Senator Ed Johnson (D-Colo.) said that as a witness Olds was "very convincing". Civil rights legislation was definitely postponed last week until the next congressional session. The house approved a bill to increase social security payments on an average of 70 per cent and to include 11,000,000 more workers in the social security system. The communist trials in New York were over last week after the longest and most expensive criminal prosecution in the history of the bar. Sentences were pronounced and 10 of America's top communists are on their way to prison.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—Top nuclear physicist, Professor Enrico Fermi, said in Rome last week that if the United States kept ahead of the world in production and perfection of atomic weapons there would be no war for 20 years. Meeting of representatives of signers of the Atlantic pact went like clockwork last week. Little disagreement was heard among the participants and decisions were reached indicating a new approach to international cooperation. The United Nations assembly was trying to solve the problem of prostitution last week. France wanted to make medical inspection legal, but the amendment was defeated. Their answer was suppression of prostitution, time-honored, but it hasn't worked yet. As Haiti's representative, Stephen Alexis, said, "as long as there are planets in the sky" there will be prostitutes and "of both sexes". Madame Chiang Kai-shek was in the United States last December trying to get money for China. She needed transportation so the U. S. government supplied military planes and even allowed the President's private plane the "Sacred Cow" to be used. Most people didn't like it. The State department revealed last week that they had sent her a bill for $9,002 for her flights by air.

FOREIGN NEWS—India is still in freedom, trying to give birth to a new age of freedom for the newly-created nation. Its prime minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, disappointed some Washington sources by the more or less middle-of-the-road stand he took regarding communism in Asia. He feels that an Asiatic alliance against communism would not be feasible and that the basic battle must be fought on the economic and political front. Elections in Austria again gave the government to the Christian-Democratic People's party and the Socialists. The communist party made very little headway. France is still fighting a losing battle against wages and prices. The government changed again and the weary battle went on. Berlin came into the news again when the Russians proclaimed it the capital of Eastern Germany, taking the initiative away from the United States temporarily.

Bonus proposals in Maine, Missouri, Nebraska, Oregon and Wisconsin.
One-year enlistments in the army or air force have been discontinued indefinitely. The short-term enlistments were restricted to 18-year-olds and were offered when the Selective Service Act of 1948 went into effect. When the draft was suspended, 81,000 men had signed up either for one-year or 21-month enlistments.
About 150 vacancies for airmen exist in the army and airforce recruiting service. USAF will handle applications submitted through proper channels.
Wac officers have until July 1, 1950 to wear the olive-drab wool skirt, the army announces.

Defense Report—The Department of Defense's 15-minute all-service news summary is now being carried on 300 radio stations in the Z.I. The program starts off with the week's headlines, then a humorous episode, an occasional story on the woman's angle and a "Quote of the Week" from a person of note. Highlight of the program is a "Feature of the Week," covering a vital aspect of defense.
Delaware joins the growing ranks of states granting World War II veterans bonuses. An estimated 30,000 will qualify. Meanwhile, Connecticut has extended the application deadline for bonuses to July 1, 1951. Washington state bonuses are still pending. New Jersey, and Pennsylvania bonus proposals will be decided at the polls during November. Voters rejected

What Price Tag Do You Place on Your Soul?

BY CHAPLAIN ERNEST F. KENDLE
The writer of Genesis said, "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was evil continually." (Gen. 6:5). That is the picture of you if you let your mind go in that channel.
There are so many things we can do with life that are constructive. You are worth much more than your possessions, and your possessions should be a springboard to worthy living. In the sight of God you are more precious by far than gold or precious stones. For the redemption of your life, God gave the best that He had, His only begotten son, Jesus Christ our Lord. He gave His life on the cross to redeem you. Surely if God holds your life that precious and that sacred, you ought to live up to that value.
How much are you worth?

THE ADVENTURES OF BARON MUNCHHAUSEN, TRADITIONAL TALES FANTHEON BOOKS, INC., PUBLISHER.

By D. W. SCHAEFER
"Was you dere, Charlie?" That famous line brought laughs for years from the radio audience when a modern Baron Munchausen, teller of tall tales, kept alive a tradition of centuries. These adventures are a collection of the original extraordinary adventures of that most famous liar... erhem... teller of tall tales in history. As a hunter, soldier and world traveler, the baron weaved his way through many wild adventures with his stallion, the "Lithuania" and his dogs who did many miraculous things. Telling of his trip to Russia, when it was very cold, the baron relates how he tethered to a stake half-hidden in the snow. He often lay down to sleep. He awoke the next morning and found himself lying in a churchyard with his horse nowhere in sight. Looking up he saw him hanging from the weathercock of a church steeple. The snow had melted during the night! And "without long consideration," the baron said, "I took one of my pistols, shot the bride in two, brought down the horse, and proceeded on my journey".

And all this with a straight face. There are eighteen tales in this book, each filled with the most incredible adventures. But are they not true? Indeed, the baron seems to be the most honest of men. He relates his "Look here, dear, all these bills are dated before we were married." "Yes, darling." "Well, don't you think it's a bit odd to expect me to pay for the bait I was caught with?" "Field Instructor: "Remember, there's nothing in the world that's impossible to accomplish." Inevitable voice in rear: "Try to push your pants back into the tube, sergeant!"

Neighbor: "You know, John doesn't seem nearly as well dressed now as he did when you married him." Vet's Wife: "That's odd. I'm sure it's the same suit." Pvt.: "What kind of pie is this?" Pfc.: "What does it taste like?" Pvt. Glue! "Then it's apple. The cherry pie tastes like soap!"

Mrs. Frank Lee Fetes Daughter

Mrs. Frank M. Lee entertained in her quarters on Baltzell avenue recently with a 10 o'clock breakfast honoring her daughter Mrs. W. J. Hutchin of Fort Belvoir, Va., who is a Benning visitor.

The reception rooms open to guests were beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums and daisies in artistic floral arrangements, and the table was centered with a large bouquet of pink roses, supported by sunners of cadena leading down the table from the center.

Guests included Mrs. John Pray, Mrs. John E. Arthur, Mrs. A. H. Bangerter, Mrs. James Bartholomew, Mrs. John B. Bickley, Mrs. F. J. Bockoven, Mrs. Robert H. Bull, Mrs. John Campbell, Mrs. Charles Crawford, Mrs. Roland DeMar, Mrs. Edwin O. Gibson, Mrs. Wallace M. Hale, Mrs. A. C. Haley, Mrs. Robert Hamilton, Mrs. James Keith, Mrs. E. A. Kreilick, Mrs. Henry M. Lester, Mrs. C. V. McLaughlin, Mrs. O. A. Leahy, Mrs. E. H. Webster and Mrs. E. N. Hathaway.

Married in Atlanta

Miss Ruth Blain, Phenix City, Ala., became the bride of Sgt. Joseph N. Grizzle, Third Signal company, in the First Baptist church of Atlanta, Oct. 7. The couple are residing in Columbus.

Mrs. Criswell Feted at Party

Mrs. Sam Carter entertained in her quarters on Baltzell recently honoring Mrs. Thomas Criswell who left Fort Benning last week with her husband, Captain Criswell, for a new assignment in Texas.

The table, overlaid with a lace cloth, was centered with an earthy square bowl of mixed autumn flowers.

Tankers' Ladies Had Luncheon

Ladies of the 73rd Heavy Tank battalion met for luncheon in the Patton House Officers' club last Thursday, with Mrs. W. A. Reynolds as hostesses.

Those attending were Mrs. William Carroll, Mrs. Claude Grant, Mrs. Quinton Male, Mrs. Anderson Smith, Mrs. Robert Wells, Mrs. Z. M. Carter, Mrs. James Bartholomew and the hostess.

Patricia Shugg is Married To Airforce Officer Here

All the color and pageantry of a military wedding marked the marriage of Miss Patricia Shugg, daughter of Brig. Gen. Roland P. Shugg, Third Infantry division commander, and Mrs. Shugg, and Capt. Curtis H. Metcalf, USAF, Cecil Field, Jacksonville, Fla., Saturday afternoon in the Infantry Center chapel.

Chaplain (Capt.) Henry B. Varner, division artillery chaplain, read the marriage lines before an altar arrangement of candles and large bouquets of white Pom Pom mums in floor-stand baskets. Matching bouquets in vases also on the altar. Guitons of division artillery were used at each end of the chancel rail.

Nuptial music was presented by John C. Miller, chapel organist. Selections included "O Promise Me," "Love Thine," "Because," and "I Love You Truly." The opening strains of Loheing's Bridal Chorus heralded the approach of the wedding party, led by Usher-Groomsman Capt. Arthur B. White and Lt. Paul R. Kaste.

Miss Therese Joiner of New York was maid of honor. Her gown was heavily slipped satin featuring the new portrait neckline. The tight fitting low waist line was attached to a long bouffant skirt, caught on each side with a large bow in a deep ruffle and draped effect. She wore a hair bandeau of white lilies. Her bouquet was fashioned with matching lilies, tied with narrow French ribbon caught with sprays of stephanotis.

Mrs. George H. Cushman, III, attended her sister as matron of honor. Her gown matched that of the bride in color and design, and she wore a similar flower bandeau in her hair and carried a similar bouquet. The radiant young bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Maj. George H. Cushman, III.

For her marriage the bride chose a white satin wedding gown, designed with a yolk of illusion, rising from a low round neckline which was edged with tiers of white satin edged in tiny satin scallops. The fitted bodice, styled with a pointed low waistline, was attached to a bouffant skirt falling to a long train. Long faint sleeves tapered to a calla point over the wrists.

The bride's blonde loveliness was enhanced by the bridal veil of heirloom rosepoint lace, which fell to the hem of her gown. The veil, caught to a tiara of rosepoint lace studded with seed pearls, was worn by the bride's mother at her wedding, and was used in turn by each of her two sisters when they were married.

The bride's only ornament was a choker necklace of tiny seed pearls in a braided effect, belonging to her mother. Her bouquet of gardenias, carried in a shower of tuberoses, was tied with narrow French ribbon which fell in long streamers.

Bridge Lessons Being Offered At Service Club

Every Wednesday evening following the club's regular meeting, a group of interested members will be invited to start inter-post competition.

For the past several weeks Pfc. Robert Garlick has been teaching one of America's favorite games to Fort Benning soldiers.

Classes begin at 7 p.m. and usually last until the club closes at 10. For tables full on Wednesday evening, but Garlick hopes that enough epistemic men will be interested to start inter-post competition.

Communications Ladies Meet

Ladies of the Communications department held their regular monthly luncheon last Friday in the Palm room of the Officers' club, with Mrs. J. W. Blake and Mrs. C. O. Hextel as hostesses.

Sprays of pyracanth in a carved Japanese teakwood vase centered the table, and place cards were the featured decorations. Hats, whistles and palm shakers were given as favors.

Those attending were Mesdames Paul Hamilton, Athel Bangerter, James Strickland, Albert Strohm, Quinten Gates, John Hove, Carl E. Frisby, Thomas Wilkinson, Ois Osborn, Carl Cindele, Anderson Smith, Claire Haxtel and John Blaker.

Several tables of bridge were in play following luncheon, with Mrs. Gates winning high score. The group will meet for bridge Friday, Oct. 28 at 1:30 p.m. in the quarters of Mrs. Blaker at 1205 Benning drive. Mrs. Criswell and Mrs. Zeigler and Mrs. Hove as hostesses.

Parties

Milton Joel Mastil, Jr., was host to a group of his friends recently when he celebrated his third birthday with a zoo party. A bright red and yellow cake, sponge predominated, and the birthday cake, topped with three candles, was decorated with plastic rocking horses, giraffes and other animals. Hats trimmed with animals and horns were given as favors.

Those attending were Mesdames McCormick, Kathleen Coates, Wilma Wiggins, Jr., Charles Dennis, McCorr Warren Thrasler, Jr.

Mrs. M. J. Mastil supervised the games and served refreshments.

ARC Cheers Hospitalized

Constantly on the minds of Red Cross recreation workers at the Station hospital is the all important question of what they can do to make the GIs confined to the hospital happier.

And when Miss Mary Evelyn Fortune and her staff put their minds to it, the boys get the best entertainment available. Working hand in hand with the doctors and nurses, they are the responsibility of providing the things that make the difference between a happy and an unhappy patient.

At the present time, plans have been formulated to make the ambulatory and recuperative patients at all the home football games played at Dougherty stadium. Not forgetting the bed patients, they conduct weekly a variety of contests concerning this popular sport.

Miss Fortune stated that rivalry between the wards is running at white heat this week in the inter-ward contest to see which ward can do the best construction job on model jeeps, boats and planes. Winning ward will practice in the Harmony church gym under the watchful eye of Gynn.

The final screening of players for the team to represent the 30th in the post tournament will be completed by the end of next week.

Soldier's Hobby Develops Into Gainful Undertaking

What started out to be a hobby has proved a supplement to income for Sgt. Kenneth Niblett, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Second Training regiment, who last week had eight of his prize rabbits entered in the Chattahoochee Valley exposition.

The sergeant took a third prize for his rabbits. The young hobbyist, a seven-year army veteran, started rabbit raising in 1947 to occupy his spare time. After several months he became so interested in his avocation that he decided to turn his hobby into a part-time job.

He joined the Southern rabbit association, read many books on the subject, and went at rabbit raising in a business like manner.

This isn't the first time his animals have been entered in competition, and although rabbit raisers from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and Florida had rabbits in the contest, Sergeant Niblett took third prize for his New Zealand whites, a heavy eating rabbit.

3rd Band Gets Four New Men

Sgt. 1st cl. Merle Kram, has been appointed drum major of the Third Infantry division band. It was announced this week. Sergeant Kram recently transferred to the division band from the 72nd Army band. Other transfers to the Third division band include Cpl. Roland Julian, tenor saxophonist; Pfc. Nicholas Anzald, drummer, and Pfc. Wilbert Potter, tuba player. Shows receiving permanent warrants from Col. Harold V. Brown, battalion commander, left to right, Charlie Burns, Battery B; L. C. Lewis, Battery C; Sam Lane, Battery A, and Asberry Wiley, Servico battery.

Engineer Combat Outfit Opens New Hobby Shop

The combination of an unused by providing the 10th Engineer Combat battalion with a well equipped hobby shop.

The shop, under the supervision of Pfc. Harley M. Tembrock, will be open from 7 until 10 every night. Private Tembrock will issue tools, design books and plans and sell plastics and leather goods.

The main room of the shop is for woodworking. At present, the shop has on hand a lathe, bench saw, hand saw, jig saw and drill press.

Two small rooms have been set aside for plastic and leather craft, and another has been made into a photo lab. A letter press and heating unit are available for plastic work, while the photo lab is almost completely equipped.

The hobby shop bulletin board contains samples of plastic and leather products, as well as price lists from local lumber companies. A suggestion box has been placed near the board for the men to register gripes and desires.

Hoop Tryouts For 30th Held

Try-outs for the 30th Infantry regiment basketball team will begin today in the gymnasium at Harmony, head basketball coach, announced.

Because of the current remodeling at the 30th's recreation halls there are no playing facilities at Sand Hill at present and the regimental tournament will not get under way until the work has been completed.

It is expected that the recreation balls will be finished in three weeks. In the meantime aspiring team members will start practice in the Harmony church gym under the watchful eye of Gynn.

Soldier's Hobby Develops Into Gainful Undertaking

What started out to be a hobby has proved a supplement to income for Sgt. Kenneth Niblett, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Second Training regiment, who last week had eight of his prize rabbits entered in the Chattahoochee Valley exposition.

The sergeant took a third prize for his rabbits. The young hobbyist, a seven-year army veteran, started rabbit raising in 1947 to occupy his spare time. After several months he became so interested in his avocation that he decided to turn his hobby into a part-time job.

Engineer Combat Outfit Opens New Hobby Shop System Revamped

A first-come, first-served system of priority travel for Army dependents is expected to become effective about April 1. Under the new system, it is also served in occupation duty. He would receive two points per month. Under this plan, he would begin to accrue points to move up the seniority list for housing at the time he departed for any type of foreign duty.

Assigned Chief Librarian Here

Miss Harriet Pitchford has been appointed chief librarian at the Main library, it was revealed this week. Coming to Fort Benning from duty with army libraries in Japan, Miss Pitchford replaces Miss Francis C. Dozier, former head of the Main library, who has been appointed supervisor of all library branches at Fort Benning.

Bus Company Will Continue Tour Service

"Expense-Paid" tours, a service initiated by Teche Greyhound lines during the summer, will continue throughout the fall months, Greyhound officials in Columbus announced this week.

The service is being continued, P. S. Hennessey, traffic manager for the Columbus branch of the travel firm said, because of an expected upswing in fall travel.

He pointed out that charter buses are available for group trips to football games in the area.

Mr. Hennessey said that the Teche lines are improving their service and efficiency to accommodate the expected increase in passenger traffic.

Deluge of 13's Fails to Phase Leave-Bent GI

When Pvt. James W. Tarpley went on furlough he became the unluckiest man at Fort Benning — if you measure according to superstition.

Ironically, Private Tarpley, whose full name has 13 letters, was granted a 13-day furlough on Oct. 13. The mail clerk at Company A, Infantry School detachment, then put Tarpley's name on the furlough list—13th from the top.

Despite the ominous number that plagued his departure, Tarpley is well on his way home.

Costume Party Slated by Club

At a recent meeting of the 13th Infantry Club, no names were revealed for a pre-Halloween costume party to be held at the NCO club Oct. 29.

M-Sgt. James A. Barnes, club president, announced that a first and second cash prize will be given the persons judged "best appropriately dressed" for the occasion.

The entertainment committee, composed of M-Sgt. Milton Denney, M-Sgt. Walter P. W. and Sgt. 1st cl. Walter Clayton, reported that the affair is the first of a series scheduled to be held at the club during the year.

St. Augustine Rest Center Closed to Division Troops

The Third Infantry division rest camp at St. Augustine, Fla., camp with the last group there until Oct. 1.

Exclusive of incidental money, the men paid only $34 for a week of boating in the Florida sun, playing tennis, badminton and other games. A total of $32,640 was paid by these men for their leave recreation.

The idea of the camp was conceived by 1st Lt. Richard Fuhrman, assistant special services officer of the Third division, but division special service officials have not definitely decided upon its location.

Actual work of setting up the camp, however, was done by Maj. Murray A. Cypburn, division special services officer, since Lieutenant Fuhrman had on his agenda many other projects.

After the camp was set up, Cpl. William Albrecht Jr., kept things running smoothly at the Benning end of the line. He made arrangements for the transportation of the men and took care of small details and problems.

At present, plans for continuation of the camp next year have not been completed. It is anticipated that there will be a camp, men have spent vacations at the camp with the last group there until Oct. 1.

Assigned to Company B

Pfc. Richard E. Jenkins and Pvt. Robert E. Harman of the 78th Engineer Combat Battalion have been transferred from Headquarters and Service Company to Company B.

Engineer Battalion Privates Promoted

Thirteen privates of Company C, 10th Engineer Combat Battalion, were promoted to private first class recently.

They were Charles M. Mitchell, Lorenzo Carrillo, Alfred F. LaFortune, Lionel P. Melio, Herbert F. Bullock, Donald D. Knott, John Must, Peter P. Matcobeil, Jack Single, Wayne E. Mead, Richard K. Smith, Walter C. Gray and Chester R. White.

Engineer Battalion Men Transferred

The 78th Engineer Combat Battalion has announced the transfer of two men within the battalion.

Cpl. Harry J. Fagre has been transferred from Company B to Company A, while Sgt. Louis LaChance has been transferred from Company A to Company B.

Files Being Completed

Instructions are being issued mess stewards by the food service section to compile files on their equipment to bring up to date current records on operation of Infantry Center dining halls.

TWX Screening System Revised

Tighter restrictions have been put on messages over the army's world-wide telecommunications system as a result of last week's economy regulation by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

Secretary Johnson, in sending the order to all major command leaders and signal officers, requires stringent administrative action to reduce communication requirements. In effect, his order will eliminate electric transmission of all messages that don't carry a priority attachment.

The defense secretary also advised responsible officers to make more use of postal service, saying that too many unimportant communications have been sent electrically.

Another recommendation in the economy measure is that the number of personnel authorized to screen messages be reduced. Too many authorized persons, the order pointed out, make it almost impossible to screen out the important messages, considering that it is a matter of individual discretion.

Events Pass In Review As Post Lensmen Work

Last week's Life magazine carried a picture of Fort Benning's M-Sgt. James R. Hendrix, 24-year-old Congressional Medal of Honor winner who lived after a parachute malfunction during which he fell 1,000 feet.

That picture, like hundreds of others appearing each year in publications throughout the country was taken by the Infantry Center signal photo laboratory.

It is the job of the four photographers and three technicians of the photo lab to record pictorially all events at Fort Benning, from dramatic news shots for publication in The Bayonet and for outside release to newspapers and magazines, to top secret improvements in weapons for the eyes of top-ranking officers only.

Nearly everything that takes place in the army is recorded by these photographers, many of whom helped make Signal Corps photographers famous during the war, when they went into battle with combat troops armed only with cameras and courage.

Their job today is less exciting, but just as important as it was when headlines dealt with the exploits of the army and front pages were plastered with pictures taken by signal corps photographers.

Through the medium of the camera the public is still being informed of what's going on in the army, what improvements are being made and what preparations are under way to keep the nation's defense strong.

The Infantry Center photo lab processes its own pictures, and every picture taken at Fort Benning is identified and a copy of it sent to Third Army headquarters in Atlanta for permanent filing.

The story of a picture starts with a work order, made out by the unit desiring the picture. Most pictures taken are for the public information office, either for outside release or for publication in The Bayonet or The Benning Herald. The public information office alone uses approximately 300 pictures in an average month.

Each work order must be approved by Maj. Thomas P. Ross, Infantry Center signal officer, who determines the necessity for and classification of the picture to be taken. It is his job also to prevent duplication. When stock shots can be used for a release, they are pulled from the extensive file of negatives kept by the lab.

After approval, a work order is sent to Cpl. Howard G. Cooper, chief photographer, who assigns and schedules the job. Corporal Cooper was a photographer during the war, and for a year and a half he recorded the exploits of the air force in Europe.

He assigns the work to either Pfc. William P. Ames, Pvt. Martin Kornfeld or Pfc. Madeleine Barbour, his three photographers, or on special occasions, he'll take the pictures himself.

The photographer usually goes out with a reporter from the public information office, who gets the story and suggests different shots to the photographer that will best tie in with the story he is writing.

The negatives are then developed by the photographer and checked by Corporal Cooper before they are printed and enlarged to the desired size. Corporal Cooper again checks the finished product before it is sent to the unit requesting the picture. A negative of each picture is kept and filed for future reference. Another copy of each picture goes to Third Army headquarters for permanent filing there.

Not the least important job of the photographers is the taking of thousands of identification pictures each year for AGO cards and other documents. They also take medical pictures for the Station hospital and record the latest inventions applied to weapons.

←A Bayonet Picture Is Born

Upper left: Sgt. 1st cl. Lewis W. McAfee, managing editor of The Bayonet, and David C. Bowen Jr., editor, discuss a story and decide if warrants a picture for The Bayonet and possible outside release. Their first step is to make out a work order, which goes to Maj. Thomas P. Ross, Infantry Center signal officer, second type cutlines for the negative and assigns them a file number for easy identification among the hundreds of other pictures being processed at the same time. The next two pictures show Pfc. Martin Kornfeld, signal corps photographer. Upper right: Photographer James M. Lyles, with camera, sets up a picture, while Pvt. Lorenzo D. Murphy, Bayonet reporter, takes notes. After the picture is taken the next step is to develop the negative. Middle row, left to right: Private Lyles develops the negatives in the dark room, before they go to Cpl. Roy Coffel, second from left, who inspects them for quality. The next two pictures show Pfc. Madeleine Barbour, who is shown signing it. From Major Ross the negatives are sent to the photo lab. Lower right: The final product is checked by Corporal Cooper to insure the picture is well developed and clear. The second photo shows Private Kornfeld filing prints in the laboratory's extensive picture file. In the next photo the picture is delivered to Pvt. Harry O. King, Bayonet reporter, as Corporal Coffel points out the dotted line for his signature. The finished products are then studied by Sergeant McAfee, who decides which will be used in The Bayonet.

AFTER 34 YEARS

Brown Shuns Retirement, Re-ups for Indefinite Term

When M-Sgt. Clifford E. Brown stepped before a personnel officer last week to get his discharge it wasn't his first—it was his eleventh.

After 34 years and eight months of uninterrupted service, Sergeant Brown once again raised his hand in oath and reenlisted for the career he began on Feb. 13, 1913.

When World War I broke out, tension in the vital Canal Zone became tighter. Sergeant Brown, then a private, was detailed to the important task of guarding one of the locks, through which ships passed from the Atlantic to the Pacific ocean.

SPOTLIGHT

by jim cloonan

Last Sunday evening the Fort Benning football team returned to post with its first defeat of the 1949 season. Although the team as a whole was downhearted over the loss to Memphis navy it nevertheless realized it had played its best game of the season thus far.

Not only had the Doughboys held the Memphis team, a four touchdown favorite, to a one touchdown margin, but had actually led throughout the game, only to lose out in the last 45 seconds of play. Two blocked kicks in the final five minutes were the deciding scores.

Despite the fact that the Doughs lost, Coach Mike Chester and his staff were well pleased with the showing the ball club made. In addition to the two touchdowns that appear in the line score were two more apparent scores that were recalled by the officials. The blocking and line play, both on offense and defense, were superb and, above all, the spirit was excellent.

If the Doughs continue to play the way they did at Memphis, they should certainly end up on the black side of the ledger for this season.

In their contest at Fort Jackson, S. C., on Sunday, the Doughs will be facing what is called one of the best lines in service football. Against this the Benningites will field a patched up line-up necessitated by numerous injuries, yet they receive our vote to come through to victory.

This contest will give us a chance to compare the Doughs with their archrivals Fort Bragg, N. C. The Bragmen defeated Jackson last week by a scant point. We think the Doughs will do better. Fort Benning 14, Fort Jackson 6.

While on the subject of football, we would like to give credit to a grizzer who personifies the spirit of the Doughboys. His name is Jack Elliott.

"Big Jack" weighs 230 pounds and stands 5'11" tall. There's a lot of him, and he makes it all prominent in the eyes of teammates and opponents alike.

In spite of his bulk, which might prove cumbersome to a less coordinated man, Jack is fairly fast, and his aggressiveness makes him even more formidable on the field. His prime assets are, however, an easy going manner, a wide grin and a bottomless well of enthusiasm.

For the past three years Jack has played football at Benning. Until this season he served merely as a substitute's substitute, holding dummy, being on the "scrubs" and so on—the easiest position to be created for himself a name that is still upheld.

This season Jack has developed into a top flight guard and has already seen a good deal of action in this fall's games. His voice can be heard throughout the contest, whether he is sitting on the bench or out on the field, as he booms his team's spirit with his constant line of chatter.

His spirit is noticed and appreciated by his teammates and coaches alike, all of whom recognize in him that quality which should be in every ball player—the real and honest appreciation of playing a good game well.

'Cats Trip Doughs On Late Counters

Next Tilt Slated At Fort Jackson

The Fort Benning Doughboys went down to their first defeat in three games last Saturday night when they lost to the Memphis naval air station Hellicats, 20-14.

Two Hellicat touchdowns in the last five minutes of play proved to be the downfall of the Doughs. The Doughboys scored early in the first quarter and held their lead for 38 minutes and 15 seconds only to see a blocked kick backfire into a Memphis score and a Hellicat victory with 45 seconds to go. The win for the young team was the fourth in five games.

Ten thousand fans jammed Crump stadium to watch a contest that was billed as the first away for the 'Cats. Memphis entered the game as three touchdown favorites.

Lou Barassi, Benning seat-back, brought the crowd to its feet early in the first quarter when he took a handoff from Don Hemphill and broke over right guard racing 45 yards for a score. The touchdown marked the fourth time this season that Barassi has scored on the same play. Al Constance made good his placekick and Benning led 7-0.

Chet Wroblewski, a 200-pound fullback, put Memphis back in the game while in the second period by sweeping his own left end for 28 yards and the Hellicats first score. "Big Jim" Stark missed the all-important extra point and Benning led at halftime 7-6.

The third period proved to be a scoreless affair, but both scores made up for it in the hectic last period. Benning opened the scoring in the final period when Don Hemphill faked back and lobbed a 40 yard pass into the hands of Joe Landry in the endzone for a score. Constance again added the conversion and Benning led 14-6.

Following the kick-off Benning forced Memphis to punt and on first down Hemphill pitched another long pass, this time to Barassi good for an apparent score. An official, however, recalled the play as a fumble and Memphis gained 45 yards. The Doughs immediately went to the ground, and after scoring four more points by Fulek Ken Ward, Bob Knapp broke over tackle and went 45 yards to score standing up. This time officials recalled the play for a clipping infraction near the original line of scrimmage.

After this second heartbreaker to the same series of downs the Doughs attempted to kick out. Jim Stark, Hellicat guard, broke through the line and blocked the punt, falling on it in the endzone for the 'Cats second score. This time the conversion was good but Benning still held a slim 14-13 edge.

With only 15 seconds to go the Doughboys attempted another punt only to have Stark break through again and block the attempted boot. He chased the best in service football today.

College Grid Fray Tops Local Slate

One of the South's oldest grid battles will be renewed tomorrow night at Memorial stadium when gridlers from Tuskegee Institute, Tuskegee, Ala., and Morehouse college of Atlanta meet in their annual game in Columbus.

Rated as one of the top attractions played in the stadium, the game dates back to 1895 and has been played in Memorial stadium since 1939.

On the local high school football front, all four of the local teams will be in action over the weekend. Two of the teams will be at home while the other two games will be within driving distance of Columbus.

Highlighting the week's play will be the Friday night game at Martin stadium, Phenix City, between the Red Devils of Central high and the Cadets of Marxist prep in Atlanta.

For the Red Devils it will be the second home game of the season and their first appearance in Martin stadium. They defeated Baker in the season's opener, 20-0 in Memorial stadium.

The other home game of the week will pit Baker high's Lions against the Cadets of Glynn academy, Brunswick, Ga., on Saturday night in Memorial stadium.

In the two out-of-town games Jordan's Red Jackets will meet the Poets of Lanier in Macon, while Columbus will invade Albany, Ga., for a contest with Albany high.

Followers of teams in the AA high school football ranks will see some good ball games this week, but the results will not make much change in the standings.

Two contests in Atlanta's Region Three will start the ball rolling Thursday night. Brown

Battalion Basketball Gets Into High Gear

The 15th Infantry regiment's basketball league got into full swing last week with teams in two battalions slowly pulling away and hot races developing in the other two battalions.

In the Provisional battalion, Headquarters and Headquarters company, a and Headquarters company has romped to three victories to remain unbeaten. The only other team in the loop that has won a game is Medical company, which is also unbeaten in two games.

Over in First battalion, the Headquarters team has piled up three straight wins to pace the battalion. The only team within shouting distance at the moment is Company A, with a two and one loss record.

A dog-fight developed in Second battalion, with all teams still having a chance for the crown. Company C is unbeaten in two games, but should run into trouble with Company F and Headquarters company before the race is over.

Company M paces the Third battalion in a close race with two contests, but should have a bit of trouble with Company K and Company L before the title is decided.

High and low score games were held occurred at the same time as Headquarters and Headquarters company, blasted Heavy Mortar company, 68-7, in the most lop-sided game played thus far.

Individual high honors for the season thus far have gone to Charles Leon of Headquarters, and Headquarters company. Second battalion, who scored 22 of his team's 44 points as it downed Company H, 44-20.

Games will continue on company level until a champion is crowned in each of the four battalions. The winning teams will then compete in an inter-battalion playoff with the winners being crowned regimental champions. Following this the regimental team will be selected and will open the season on Nov. 10, against the 30th Infantry regiment.

BOB FIACCO — Doughboy of the Week

Doughboy of the Week

LINEMAN SELECTED STANDOUT GRIDDER

Outstanding play on both offense and defense earned The Bayonet's weekly award of "Doughboy of the Week" to young Bob Fiacco, first string guard on the Fort Benning varsity squad.

Although Fiacco had played high school ball prior to entering the service, his great line play against more experienced opponents stamped him as a top lineman in a game that featured rugged line play.

One of the principal factors taken into consideration in bestowing the honor on the 195-pound guard was the difficulty of his assignment. Playing opposite Fiacco was the outstanding lineman on the Memphis Naval Hellicat roster, "Big Jim" Stark, who played two years at the University of Kentucky before entering the navy. Stark, a 21-year-old, six-foot, 220-pound guard from Lexington, Ky., plans to continue his college football at the University of Texas following his discharge.

Despite the weight and experience favoring Stark, the comparatively light but spirited Fiacco managed to break up several plays before they got started by crashing through and throwing Memphis backs for appreciable losses.

Fiacco, who received the first-string assignment early in the season, calls Messina, N. Y., his home and played four years on the Messena high school team. He is one of four brothers playing guard positions, all on varsity teams. His older brother Jim, is currently captain of the Syracuse university varsity, while his younger brother holds the first string right guard spot on this year's Messena high school squad.

Fiacco's present assignment is with Company L, 30th Infantry regiment. He is the second Third Infantry division man to win the award this season.

Goes to H-S Company Sgt. 1st cl. Adolph F. Grubbs, recently assigned to the 78th Engineer Combat battalion from Fort Bragg, N.C., has been given duties with Headquarters and Service company.

Doughs Win Net Classic For Third Straight Year

Fort Benning welcomed home its volleyball team last week after the local netters had made a victorious stand in defending their third army toga at Oliver General hospital, Augusta, Ga. After the smoke had cleared in the three-day tourney, Benning had not only won the title for this year, but had retained the coveted Third Army trophy. The Doughboys also won the title in 1947 and 1948.

Fort Benning opened the tourney by downing the Fort Bragg, N. C. netmen in two straight games, 15-11 and 15-7. The Doughboys followed that victory with a win over Camp Gordon but lost their first tournament game in three years during the

Kentucky, Texas Picked In Southwest Features

BY JIM CLOONAN AND BOBBY ROBINSON

Still reeling from the week's upsets we will once again attempt to rub some of the dust off of our crystal ball.

The spotlight this week stops in the Southwest where two of the top games will be played. Undeated Kentucky goes west to tangle with Southern Methodist while Rice and Texas battle it out for top spot in the conference.

Elsewhere in the nation, the top games should be Georgetown and Boston college in the East, Arkansas and Vanderbilt in the South, and once mighty Michigan against the fearful Golden Gophers of Minnesota in the Midwest feature.

THE EAST
Amherst over Wesleyan... The Lord Jeffs have lost only to Colubus and should outlast Wesleyan.
Army over Columbia... Lou Little is having one of his bad years and Army's Black Knights will just rub salt into the wound.
Georgetown over Boston college... Top game in the East with the undefeated Hoyas having a slight edge over their hated Hub rivals.
Boston University over New York University... The Terriers should take their third straight victory in this contest.
Brown over Lehigh... Bruin fans don't believe their team can lose two in a row—neither do we. Brown by two touchdowns.
Bucknell over Washington and Jefferson... Both should be between either club. On a hunch—Bucknell.
Rutgers over Colgate... Colgate has looked good in their last two games, but the Scarlet should carry enough guns to sink the Raiders.
Cornell over Princeton... An undefeated Cornell team should continue to roll against a hot-and-cold Tiger eleven.

Dartmouth over Harvard... The Green Indians are on the warpath once again and the Crimson is due to suffer.
Lafayette over Delaware... A good game between two small school powerhouses. Lafayette by a touchdown.
Villanova over Duquesne... The Wildcats are really wild and the upset by Tulsa and should take it out on the hapless Dukers.
Fordham over Syracuse... Another top game in the East between two well matched teams. The Rams should ease by Orange and keep their slate clean.

THE SOUTHWEST
Texas Tech over Arizona... The Red Raiders should romp home with this conference game.
Baylor over Texas A. & M... Baylor's big, bad bears should chalk up win No. 4 at the Aggie's expense.
Oklahoma A. & M. over Kansas... Kansas is having a hard time winning this season, and Saturday will be no exception.
Kentucky over Southern Methodist... S. M. U. is supposed to have a weak line, while Kentucky has a great running attack. Enough said.
Texas Christian over Mississippi... The Horned Frogs are always in league play, and should have enough to down the Rebels.
Rice over Rice... This game may decide the conference title as both teams are undefeated in league play. Rice upset S.M.U. last week, but should fall prey to another great Longhorn team.
Hardin-Simmons over Houston... The Cowboys, always tough in their own conference, should give the lads from Houston a real going over.

THE PACIFIC COAST
California over Washington... Golden Bear fans expect another Rose Bowl entry, and the Huskies shouldn't be too much of an obstacle.
Southern California over Oregon... The Trojans have a chance to redeem themselves in this game and should win easily.
Stanford over Oregon State... The Indians may run it up in this game.
U. C. L. A. over Washington State... Ucan men are anxious to get back on the victory track after being derailed last weekend. The Bruins to name their own score.
Idaho over Montana... Two of the smaller coast teams but it is out in this one with the advantage being with the Vandals.
College of the Pacific over San Diego State... Larry Siemering's tigers are really on the growl this year. Eddie LaBaron and his teammates should have another field day.
Fate over Holy Cross... Levi and Eli should have a field day against the once-feared Crusaders.
Temple over Rhode Island State... Poor little Rhode Island.
Muhlenberg over Gettysburg... A back yard battle which should in the end be a draw.
Penn. over Navy... The Quakers to remain undefeated after a tough game.

THE SOUTH
Alabama over Mississippi State... Another tough week for the Maroons.
Vanderbilt over Arkansas... An early game with the advantage going to the home team.

THE WEST
Oklahoma over Nebraska... The Sooners to rest their varsity in this one.
Ohio State over Wisconsin... Another victory for the numbers on the line.
Colorado over Utah State... The Buffaloes should have a good one.
Illinois over Purdue... Boiler makers and players are having another rough year.
Pittsburgh over Indiana... The Panthers should have their way back into the big time.
Northwestern over Iowa... Iowa has a good club, but so do the Wildcats. The victory over Michigan may have been just what the doctor ordered for last year's Iowa champs.
Missouri over Iowa State... This game could easily decide second place in the Great West conference. Missouri on the strength of its tough schedule.
Minnesota over Michigan... The Golden Gophers may have the scent of roses and should ease past the shipping Wolverines.
Michigan State over Iowa State... The Spartans to continue rolling at the expense of the Lions.

Scotch Foursome Deadline Saturday

Saturday evening at 6:30 is the entry deadline for the Scotch foursome to be played at the Country club Sunday afternoon. It was announced today by Major Arnold J. Hoebecke, golf committee tournament chairman.

The foursome, open to men and women golfers, will be a handicap event. Play will be in two-man teams. Each member will drive a ball. The best ball will be played, with players alternating shots thereafter.

Prizes will be awarded for the low net to the best mixed team and to the low mixed team. Pairings and starting times will be announced by the tournament committee Sunday morning. Players need not have partners as the committee will furnish them to all who desire.

Saturday at 6:30 is also the deadline for postal handicapping scores. Major Hoebecke said. Next week, qualifications will start for the handicapping tournament to be played in November.

The events are part of a series of special attractions planned by the golf committee to generate more interest in the committee's struggling handicap play to give all an equal chance to take home prizes.

Fifty View First Game

When the football squads of Rutgers and Princeton clash on the gridiron this year there will be a large demand for tickets from both students and fans. However, when the two schools played the first football game in history on Nov. 5, 1869, there were no tickets sold since only 50 students saw the contest.

McBride Wins Regimental Title In Net Tourney

The finals of the 30th Infantry regiment badminton tournament were played last week with top honors going to Bob McBride of Company L.

The two top-seeded players, McBride and Fred Swafford, heavy Morar company, breezed through the tourney with little competition. McBride, former tennis and badminton champion of Guam, was an outstanding favorite to win the regimental championship.

Swafford, however, scored a near-upset by making a strong come-back after losing the first set and winning the second set by a score of 21-18.

In the deciding set McBride got back on the right foot and won by victory by a 21-11 score.

McBride and Swafford combined efforts in the doubles tourney to make an invincible team. They copped the regimental crown with little effort by trouncing Guy Speck and Harry Knight, Second battalion, 15-3 and 15-2.

Lockamy Wins In Badminton

John Lockamy, 15th Infantry regiment, will rate as one of the favorites in the post badminton tourney because of his outstanding play in the recently completed regimental championships.

Lockamy had no trouble downing Bob Hosket in the finals in two straight games, 21-16 and 21-18. He had previously beaten Bob King in the semi-finals in straight games, 15-3 and 15-7, while Hosket had shut-out Pete Mishan in straight games, 15-0 and 15-0.

Lockamy, before winning the badminton title, was a member of the championship 15th Infantry volleyball team and had participated in many other sports. He is a well-known official in baseball and basketball here.

During the war Lockamy played on the post football, baseball and basketball teams as well as engaging in minor sports.

Division Inspected By High Officers

A Third Army inspection team, led by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., army commander, was this week making a general inspection of the Third Infantry division.

Col. W. H. Hill arrived last Friday to prepare for the inspection. Early Saturday morning, the main body of the team arrived along with General Gillem were Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, Maj. Gen. Paul J. Mueller, Brig. Gen. H. G. Maddox, Col. R. L. Baughman and Col. W. A. Carter. This group reviewed the division Saturday at 9 a.m. on Blue Polo field.

Army Personnel Branch Official Makes Post Visit

Earlier in the month, Department of the Army officials requested detailed information from officers of the Infantry Center as to how well personnel here are being informed about career opportunities. As a result, the Infantry Center was asked to submit any suggestions for proving or supplementing information now available.

Promotions Given ASU Enlisted Men

Recent promotions in the 3440th Area Service unit have been announced by unit officials. Sergeant First Class were L. O. Erwin and Roger J. Alesch. Promotions to sergeant were Fred R. Kelley, John T. Johnson, David S. Williams, Michael DeMain, Carl Martin, Robert A. Thompson, John Anderson, Joseph N. Turner, Walter J. Livramento and Robert G. Wood.

Airforce, Navy Delegates Observe Infantry Tactics

The airforce and navy, laying aside their intra-service differences, last week were more concerned with what's going on in the infantry.

Some 700 student officers, representatives from the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va., and the Air University, Maxwell Airforce base, Alabama, sat through a two-hour combined ground-air demonstration graphically illustrating how an infantry battalion functions in attack.

Fort Benning's Infantry Center, host to the visiting future top commander of the army, navy, and airforce, presented the problem, known as "Battalion in Defense." The high ranking military audience studied with the stars of div. Gen. Charles Banhill, Lt. S. A. F., Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burgess, Infantry center commander, Maj. Gen. Milton B. Halsey, chief of the training branch for army field forces; Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Harrod, assistant commander of the Infantry School; and Lt. Col. Lamar A. Welch, Infantry School instructor, stood in front of the bleachers and explained, with the use of two huge tactical terrain maps, exactly what the demonstration unit would accomplish within the next hour or more.

As Col. Welch gestured through his problem account, artillery pieces began to periodically lay down earth-shaking barrages in the hypothetical enemy positions to the audience's front. Then, individually, each infantry weapon was demonstrated to show its purpose in the all-out attack.

The second phase of the battalion's defensive problem was discussed by Maj. Edmund Mueller, another Infantry School instructor. Maj. Mueller pointed out on the two large maps where areas would be blanketed by heavy artillery and mortar fire, and what the assisting jet fighters would undertake in the counterattack.

As Lt. Col. Phillip C. Rawlins, airforce officer attached to the Infantry School, stepped before the audience to explain his unit's participation in the problem, eight bomb-laden F-84 jet fighters of the 91st Fighter group from Turner airforce base, Albany, wished over-head circling to the rear of the observation area the gleaming airforce jets climbed to 4,000 feet above the demonstration in preparation for their attack.

The audience was able to get an idea of talk between ground observers and pilots in the air by way of a loudspeaker setup. As the planes assembled overhead in their dive-bombing formation, pilots asked their ground observer for target points and identification marks denoting danger boundaries.

With a tally-ho gesture, the single string of fighters peeled off and dove toward the "enemy" positions. Their first pass over the target was a softening-up sweep—large general purpose charges were pinpointed on the hilltop target. As they circled for the second pass one by one they sped over the small target releasing lethal high-powered rockets and spraying the area with machinegun fire.

After the swift jets had done their job, a small liaison plane from the Infantry School's light aviation section passed low over the destroyed "target" to tell assembling tanks and infantry units that it was safe to advance.

With the magnitude of a full battle operation, artillery began to pepper the enemy position with barrages, huge tanks rolled forward firing their mobile cannons, and infantry sections moved forward with a protective covering of mortar and machinegun fire.

As the army, airforce and navy students left the stands to return to the post, they would well-remember what role infantry, Queen of Battles, would play in combat.

Strong U.S. Must Stand Guard, Cardinal Asserts

Francis Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of New York and military vicar, Sunday called on all who heard his sermon to "repeat daily the prayer 'Oh God, keep America forever thy servant, devoted in following Thee for the welfare of mankind.'"

The cardinal, who arrived at Fort Benning Saturday afternoon, spoke to a crowd of nearly 3,000. The huge main gymnasium, where the mass was said, was so full that many worshippers had trouble finding room to kneel.

The cardinal and other participants in the service marched down the aisle, flanked by guidon bearers from the Third Infantry division, host to the cardinal during his two-day visit here.

Preceding the group were the national colors, Third division colors and the Christian flag. The walls in the gym were hung with maroon drapes, while the altar was resplendent in black and maroon, setting off the cardinal robes worn by the prelate. Americans should give Cardinal Spellman returned to New York Sunday afternoon.

"In His plan, rests the mastery and might of America and the hope and salvation of the entire world."

"America, strong and united; must stand sentinel against all perils that endanger her freedoms, for America, my friends, is the hope of all the world. And all men sense with a keen prophesy that if America's light shall fall, true peace upon the earth will never dawn."

Touching on the soldier and prayer, Cardinal Spellman said: "Our martyrs, I pray, and dead, fought each day's fight, feeding their bodies, hearts and minds with one thought and one hope—to come home to America, land of their loves and their dreams. To each one of us meant the freedom to live, love and learn, to work and to worship. He did not like the mud on the sand, the wet, the sweat, the suffering, blood and death. But because he was afraid, he was courageous. And he prayed."

Planning Expert Receives Orders To Go Overseas

One of the Infantry School's many "backstage" planners left Fort Benning last week after over three years of duty in the Infantry School's Academic Department.

Sgt. Spurgeon Stanford, 12-year army veteran from Newton, Ala., has received orders to report to Camp Stoneman, Calif., for shipment to the Far East command.

As a member of the Tactical Department, Sergeant Stanford was directly connected with most of the colorful demonstrations staged for instructional purposes and distinguished visitors.

He designed and set up many of the demonstrations and communications nets used in providing realism to the demonstration situations. A particular specialty of smoke screens, burning tanks, and mortar concentrations.

Sergeant Stanford enlisted in 1937, after which he was assigned to the 26th Infantry regiment here. During World War II he saw combat with the 31st Infantry regiment, a part of the 78th Infantry division.

Mrs. Stanford, and two small sons who are living in Columbus, plan to join Sergeant Stanford after his arrival at the new assignment.

Platoon Garners Problem Honors The First platoon of Company C, 30th Infantry regiment, was high scorer in the regiment, recently when troops of the Second Battalion were tested on the 30th's platoon problem course.

The platoon, commanded by Sgt. 1st cl. George W. Stevenson, scored 98 points of a possible 100 in the problem of the rifle platoon in attack on simulated enemy fortifications.

Commanded by Capt. Cecil M. Curles, also garnered second place when a score of 97 was recorded by the Second platoon, led by M-Sgt. Paul B. Louge.

Second Student Delegation Here

Some 550 of the nation's top military students and observers arrive next week end from the Transportation school, Quartermaster school, Adjutant school, medical school, Medical school, and Chemical Warfare school.

Gen. Clarkson Inspects 30th

Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division, visited the 30th Infantry regiment last Saturday for a command inspection of certain units of that organization.

With Col. Joseph W. Boone, 30th Infantry regiment commanding officer, General Clarkson inspected the troops of Companies D and M and the company areas, after which coffee was served in the Company M dining hall.

The regimental motor pool and the remodeled dining hall of Heavy Tank company were next in line to be inspected.

General Clarkson then proceeded to the communication schools conducted by the regiment and the communication supply room as well as that of Headquarters and Headquarters Company.

Concluding the inspection, General Clarkson visited the 30th's recently opened regimental trophy room.

Intelligence Duty Training to Start

The high-level strategic Intelligence school of the 78th Engineer Center is opening its doors to highly-qualified officers who are presently engaged in intelligence work.

According to an announcement from Third army headquarters a limited quota of officers from the six zone of interior army areas are being accepted for a course No. 12 which begins Nov. 7 in the Pentagon, Washington, D. C.

Qualifications of school candidates for the three-month course include aptitude, proficiency and a need for training in high-level intelligence in their present and proposed assignments.

After successful completion of the course, graduates will return to their home stations to resume previous duties.

Dancing Facilities To Be Expanded Approval has been given to enlarge the dance floor of Service club No. 5 in the special services officials announced this week.

Construction on the new project, expected to accommodate approximately 250 couples, will begin immediately.

Army Market Center Officials Visit Benning Capt. J. H. Barfield, executive officer of the Columbia, S. C. Army market center, and W. C. Davis, marketing specialist, recently visited the Infantry Center food service office. Their office supplies the fresh produce that is used by the mess halls at Fort Benning.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Excellence of Dining Hall Wins Title For Sergeant

Despite a three-star general's comment that it was the best dining hall he had called to his entire army career, Sgt. 1st cl. Cecil Gordon, this week's Soldier of the Week, says that it is just for the "boys in the outfit."

Sergeant Gordon, mess steward of Headquarters and Headquarters company, 15th Infantry regiment, and a man with 22 years army service, heard Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third army commander, heap praise on him and the dining hall during an inspection trip through the post. General Gillem, who had opportunity to taste Sergeant Gordon's "excellently prepared food."

Working rapidly to meet a Third army inspection deadline, the sergeant refurbished his dining hall in only three weeks.

With only a few experienced personnel, Sergeant Gordon painted the interior to give the dining hall what he calls "more sparkle." In addition, "scrubbed" new steam tables and serving counters for his "restaurant."

In the course of getting organized, the axe of classification and assignment fell on Sergeant Gordon, and some of his staff was transferred or discharged. Refusing to let things get him down, however, Sergeant Gordon furnished the dining hall with four-man tables, elegantly decorated with chair covers adorned with the Third Infantry division patch. The finishing touches included new venetian blinds, potted flowers along the walls and table arrangements of flowers.

Just before last Saturday's inspection by General Gillem, Sergeant Gordon's dining hall was visited by top-ranking battalion and regimental officers who also lauded his achievements. Previously, post food service supervisors had praised the dining steward for his diligence and industry.

The 42-year-old Arlington, Ga., native, declared that his sole purpose in working so hard was to please the men in his company. He confides that he thinks a pleasantly presentable dining hall helps raise the morale of a man.

A 20-year resident of Columbus, Sergeant Gordon is the father of one child.

NCOs Must Pay $40 for Housing

Infantry Center finance officials announced this week that non-commissioned officers of the first three grades will have quarters on the post will have an amount deducted from their pay this month.

Previously, deduction for quarters was $27 per month. Under the new pay system, the amount allotted for quarters for married enlisted men is $47.50 per month. The $40 additional deduction will make up the difference this month.

Any inequities are expected to be rectified on November payroll, finance officials said.

Lutherans Plan Special Service

Fort Benning Lutherans will join other members of their faith throughout the world to celebrate the anniversary of Protestant Reformation next Sunday with special commemorative services.

Lutherans here will observe the day with a service of Holy Communion at 12 noon in the Infantry Center chapel.

Sunday also marks the first anniversary of the inauguration of Lutheran services in the Infantry Center chapel.

Club Renovation Near Completion

New additions to and renovations of facilities at Service club No. 5 in the area of the 869th Artillery Field Artillery Battalion are nearly complete, special services officials announced this week.

The club, closed to extensive activity recently, is expected to be operating at full capacity as soon as finishing touches are put on the new facilities.

Improvements include a game room with two ping pong tables, two pool tables, a shuffleboard court, a music room, a dining room and card room. A hobby shop for small craft work is also expected to be available soon.

New Duties Given EM The transfer of two enlisted men of Company A, 30th Infantry regiment has been announced. Pfc. Loyce W. Zurn was transferred to the Third Infantry division finance section, and Pfc. Edgar F. Borger went to the Third Signal company.

A Real Community Project

It's not often we appeal to Fort Benning troops to contribute to fund-raising campaigns, but the Community Chest drive, which got under way here Monday, is deserving of the support of everyone on the post. We don't know of any organization which serves the youth of this country so well, but in order to continue its program it must have funds to operate. And that's how we all can help—by giving freely as much as we can afford to give.

This is the one real community project, one that serves the entire Fort Benning family in some way. Among the organizations benefited by contributions are joint army emergency relief, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts of America, teenage children, Fort Benning's children's Christmas party, the visiting welfare nurse, Columbus Community Chest and the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

The enlisted man is benefited by the Community Chest through joint army emergency relief and the Air Force Aid society. These two agencies give aid to the soldier and to his family when there is real need. We know of a recent case when AEF provided a soldier $100 to defray the cost of the hospitalization of his wife who is suffering from cancer. That soldier's wife would not have received the necessary care without the help of army emergency relief.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, both of which receive a part of the contributions, are among the world's greatest character building organizations. There are few indeed who have not at some time been affiliated with the scout movement. Those who have already know the great work done by these organizations and realize how important it is that they continue to flourish.

Fort Benning maintains a teen-age organization, called Brat Barracks, which receives a part of its operating expense from the Community Chest. Brat Barracks, also a character building organization, serves the children of both officers and enlisted men. Under the guidance of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale, the club provides a wholesome activity where all Fort Benning children may spend their evenings and weekends under proper supervision.

Because of the Community Chest Fort Benning has a visiting welfare nurse, who is available to home calls to families of Fort Benning personnel. This service would not be available without contributions from Fort Benning soldiers. Those who have received help from the welfare nurse can attest to the necessity of continuing that service. So far as we know Fort Benning is the only military installation which offers such service.

That part of the contributions which goes to the Columbus Community Chest is used to operate the city service clubs, such as the Eleventh Street YMCA, the Ninth street USO and the Fifth avenue YWCA. Is there any soldier at Fort Benning who would want these organizations to curtail their activities? But without contributions from everyone, such a move is entirely possible.

Another organization deriving help from the Community Chest is the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. Fort Benning has combined its March of Dimes drive with the Community Chest, eliminating the necessity for separate campaigns. Contributions to the Community Chest then, are also contributions to the national foundation. Without adequate subscriptions it would not be possible to care for those stricken with paralysis, who, through the foundation, are made useful citizens again. Of course, not all operating expenses come from the Community Chest, but every dollar received means that much more to spend in rehabilitating those who seek relief from polio. A contribution by a Fort Benning soldier is his way of saying "Keep up the good work."

Surely, at least one of these organizations has helped everyone at Fort Benning in some way. If not, there may be a day in the future when you will call upon one of them to help you or some member of your family. In the meantime, it behooves us all to support the Community Chest fund-raising drive by giving as much as we can.

Last year, 25 per cent of the total strength of the post failed to contribute; yet more than $17,500 was collected. We can surpass that total this year if we give and give freely.

Justice Triumphs as Communists Convicted

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Eleven top leaders of the American Communist party heard sentences passed on them this week. Ten received the maximum of 10 years imprisonment and $10,000 fine. One, Robert Thompson, wartime member of the 32nd Infantry Division and winner of the Distinguished Service Cross, received three years and $10,000 fine. After more than 10 months of what has been termed the longest criminal trial in U.S. history, all eleven defendants were found guilty of conspiring to overthrow the government of the United States by force. In his charge to the jury, Judge Harold Medina said there was no question of the abridgment of the right of free speech or writing, the defendants were accused of violating a law (Smith act) which prohibits the "teaching and advocacy of overthrowing the government of the U. S. by force." William Henry Hastie, wartime civilian aide to the Secretary of War and governor of the Virgin Islands since 1946, was named to the third circuit court of appeals (Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and the Virgin Islands), thus becoming the first Negro appointed to the second highest court in the federal system. He received his appointment the same week a former college classmate, (Amherst, 1925), Manhattan Councilman Ben Davis, was convicted with 10 other Communist leaders . . . Mrs. Eugenia Anderson, Red Wing, Minn., was named ambassador to Denmark in keeping with the administration's new idea of appointing women to political positions. Adm. Louis Denfeld, chief of naval operations, was again in the news. Defense Louis Johnson when he explained the navy's official stand last week before the house armed services' committee. He stated the case clearly and concisely. It seemed to leave another clear-cut decision to be made. Either Admiral Denfeld or Louis Johnson will now have to step out of the defense picture. The coal and steel strikes are still going nearly full blast. Contacts close to the president predicted they would be ended in 10 days but later said that was not a direct quote from the president. CONGRESS—The displaced persons bill struggled for a while on the senate floor and then died an unnatural death as a result of filibuster. It won't come up again until next year. . . . A bill raising the minimum wage from 40 to 75 cents an hour was agreed upon by senate-house conferees. The house approved an administration measure for $1,314,000,000 to be used for military aid to Western Europe and other nations. INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—After a meeting of the United Nations food and agricultural organization, an announcement was made that 1948 was the end of acute food shortages in Europe, and 1951, the delegates predicted, would see most European selling as much as they did before the war. The Eastern zone of Germany is being set up under a puppet government with German Communist leader Wilhelm Pieck at its head. The Russians are going through all the formalities of recognizing a new state, exchanging ministers, making agreements and other moves. The U. S. state department said the puppet republic was "without legal validity." . . . China, out of the headlines for some time, is still continuing its slide toward what? The Chinese wish they knew. . . . Britain's Lord Boyd Orr was named Nobel peace prize winner for 1949. Born of poor Scottish parents, he believed all his life that food or lack of it was the cause of most human ills, and was formerly head of the UN's food and agricultural organization. Another meeting of the foreign ministers' endeavoring to draft a treaty for Austria was held, but the price Russia was asking had not dropped appreciably. The Red guerrillas in Greece gave up last week, but there were rumors that the communists were about to start the same tactics in Yugoslavia. . . . Nearly 10,000 middle-class Czechs were arrested in the last two weeks for failing to "find a positive relationship with our people's democratic order", or so the Czech communist government said.

Report from Washington.

Fewer Army Crimes Than Civilian in Seattle

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
The 1948 crime reports published by the FBI contain an incidence study of the Seattle, Wash., 1948 which indicates that military personnel stationed at the port, and transient troops processed through it, committed fewer crimes of all categories than the civilian population of Seattle. Seattle, incidentally, was credited with an unusually low crime incidence rate. The secretary of defense has directed stringent economies in the use of radio, telephone and telegraph communications between field commands and Washington departments. The object is twofold: money savings and increased efficiency in handling essential electrically communicated messages. A four-week course in civics has been added to the teaching program at Walter Reed general hospital, Washington. Final congressional action has been taken to establish the war claims commission to pay Americans who received insufficient food as prisoners of the enemy in World War II. A claim form is being developed, and payments are expected to start soon after Jan. 1. Service medical departments are giving close consideration to one feature of the new pay law, the provision opening service hospitals to retired reserve personnel. It would add thousands of potential new patients to medical facilities already heavily taxed.

God Remakes Him Who Asks Forgiveness

"And the vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter; so he made it again another vessel, as seemed good to the potter to make it." The making of pottery ranks among the very oldest of crafts. On the rocky plateau of upper Egypt, overlooking the Nile Valley, are found the polished red earthenware pots made before the dawn of Egyptian history. The ancient Babylonians, Phoenicians, Greeks and even American Indians knew and practiced the craft of making pottery. Before the invention of the potter's wheel, clay was shaped into vessels by hand. But in Jeremiah's time a wheel was used to revolve the clay as it was being pressed into shape. After the vessel is shaped it is dried and finally fired in a furnace or kiln. All the marred and broken vessels were thrown into a field near the pottery called the potter's field. Evidently Jeremiah noted the fact with some degree of surprise. For some reason the potter did not cast this vessel aside. Instead "He made it again."

As we note that fact as Jeremiah noted it, it brings before us the marvelous patience and persevering love of God in His dealing with men. Once he made man a perfect vessel for His own use, but the vessel was marred. So, He set about the task of making it again. Many think the church is becoming marred by worldliness. But does that mean that God will cast away His church? No, He will make it again, until it shall become "A glorious church, without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." No life is so marred that Jesus cannot remake it, no circumstance of life so marred and twisted that Jesus cannot untangle it. The patient, persevering love of God is such that it will not cast any away who yield themselves into His hands. "So He made it again." It is the story of the marvelous grace of a loving God. It is the gospel of the second chance. What the potter did to the vessel, God will do to any individual who comes and seeks His forgiveness.

Post Sojourners Entertain With Supper at Country Club

Fort Benning Chapter No. 8, National Sojourners of America, met in the ballroom of the Country club Wednesday, Oct. 19, for a buffet supper.

The table was set at the south end of the ballroom, and before the fireplace, held pictures of the year's activities, the original charter of the organization, the emblem of the Sojourners, and copies of the winning essays submitted in the contest held last spring in conjunction with the nation-wide project.

Lt. Col. H. E. Nelson, president, introduced Col. (ret.) J. G. Hannah of Columbus, who is a charter member. Colonel Hannah spoke briefly of his affiliation with the organization since 1922. Colonel Nelson also introduced Col. David H. Finley, Infantry Center quartermaster, who joined the Sojourners about the time the charter was granted.

Maj. Clarence H. Thompson, publicity director and historian, introduced Dan Sinker, traffic and sales manager of the Atlanta division, Eastern Airlines, and his assistant, Edwin Byrd, who came down from Atlanta to present the film "Air Power is Peace Power", featuring Eddie the chicken. Ward, captain, and now president of Eastern Airlines. Also with the airline officials was Joe Peedy, station manager of Eastern Airlines at the Muscogee airport, Columbus.

Mr. Sinker, in a short prologue to his movie showing, announced that plans are under way to grant armed forces personnel a 10 per cent discount on all air travel, and that in the case of families traveling together on Mondays, Tuesdays or Wednesdays, one full fare will be charged, and only one-half fare for each of the other members of the family.

He gave facts and figures showing that no one airline alone could perfect such a plan, and that the teamwork of other companies and the government could perfect such a plan. Plans for the research and development of one plane which is done at a cost of $25,000,000.

Menu Board Guests
Sgt. 1st cl. and Mrs. H. G. Clevans, 378th Ordnance company dining steward, Maj. William C. Belmont and 1st Sgt. Loney S. Goss of the 4408th Air Base Squadron, Lawson airforce base, were guests of the menu board. The Center's menu board this month, food service officials said.

Cardinal Spellman Honored At Dinners By Post Staff

Third Infantry division officials entertained at dinner in honor of His Eminence, Francis Cardinal Spellman, Saturday evening at the Officers' club. The table, set in the Palm room, was artistically decorated with a center arrangement of ginger lilies and pink chrysanthemums and tall tapers in five-branched candelabra.

Those attending were Cardinal Spellman, Monsignor Joseph E. Moynan, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. T. W. Clark, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. W. A. Burress, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Roland P. Shugg, Col. and Mrs. O. P. Newman, Col. and Mrs. Joseph W. Boone, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) John F. White, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Peter S. Rusk, Chaplain (Maj.) Ernest F. Kendle, Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas C. Koch and Chaplain (Capt.) Aloysius Zielinski. Chaplain (Capt.) Aloysius Zielinski and other Infantry Center and Third Infantry division chaplains entertained at dinner Sunday at 1 p. m. in the Palm room of the Officers' club, honoring Cardinal Spellman, following an impressive mass in the Main gymnasium.

Girl Scout News

Girl Scout Week starts Sun. activities include Monday, day, Oct. 30, when all scouts and their leaders attend their respective churches in a group. Protestant services will be held at 11 a. m. in the Infantry Center chapel, and Catholic mass will be said at 10:30 a. m. in the Infantry Center Catholic chapel. All Scouts are requested to be at their respective chapels 15 minutes before services. The calendar of Scout Week Mrs. D. A. McPherson

Monday: Senior troop (ages 14-18) meets 7:30-9:30 p. m. Leaders, Mrs. J. R. Wright and Mrs. A. Weisich.

Tuesday: Brownie troop (ages 11-13) meets 3:30-4:30 p. m. Leaders, Mrs. John F. Dobrosky and Mrs. J. W. Beal, Jr.

Wednesday: Intermediate troop VI (ages 10) meets 3:30-4:30 p. m. Leaders, Mrs. W. Scott and Mrs. Leo Shaughnessy.

Friday: Junior troop No. 2 (ages 8-9) meets 3:30-4:30 p. m. Leaders, Mrs. M. J. Mastilli, Mrs. Henry Mastin, Mrs. Sherri Eastwood, Mrs. Allen Hackett, and Mrs. Roy I. Brooks.

Friday: Junior troop (age 13) meets 4:30-5:30 p. m. Leader, Mrs. Frank Palmer.

All meetings will be held in the Girl Scout Little House.

The Senior Girl Scout troop is now selling authentic Girl Scout calendars as its money-making project of the year. Color photographs of Girl Scouts in their work and play throughout the year appear on each page of the calendar, as well as space for daily memos or appointments. Calendars sell for 50 cents each, and will be on sale through Nov. 15.

Troop committees are needed to aid in the Girl Scout program. A troop committee is comprised of three to five members, who register as adult members in the Girl Scout organization. Their purpose is to give moral support to the Scout leaders and community backing and neighborhood interest, and give strength and continuity to the scouting program. Meetings are scheduled once a month, with special meetings when necessary.

Anyone interested in youth activities is urged to contact Mrs. George Gernhart at 2630 or Mrs. J. F. Blatt, 2055.

The Girl Scout Leaders association held its first meeting of the fall season last morning, Oct. 18, at the Girl Scout Little House, led by Mrs. E. J. Ricker, director of training.

An election of officers was held with the following results: Mrs. M. C. Taylor, president; Mrs. M. J. Mastilli, vice president; Mrs. J. F. Dobrosky, secretary, and Mrs. W. H. Shaughnessy, leader representative.

The Girl Scout council and troops will sponsor the 15th annual "Big Fish" collection party, as one of their community aid projects for the year. Scouts are being asked to bring collections for the fish pond.

IN HIS GLORY Meat-Cutter Recalls Days Of Starvation Under Nazis

Pvt. Bert L. Strauss is in his glory amid the carcasses of a beef he works in the Army Center meat-cutting plant. He explains his delight by pointing out that the meat he sees he saw during more than five years in the Nazi concentration camp in Germany. Bert recalls the nightmare years of the war and attributes the fact that he's alive to "sheer luck."

Most people wouldn't consider luck any part of their lives if they had spent five and one-half years in a concentration camp, or if their mother had been used as a human guinea pig by Nazi surgeons, or if their father and sister had been executed. Bert himself was beaten, starved, overworked and nearly killed many times. He watched his friends killed for attempting to escape or for stealing a ration card to supplement their practically non-existent diets.

Bert's early life in Gemunden, Germany was happy with his parents, Ina and Bella Strauss, and his little sister, Marguerite. But in 1941 all four were arrested because they were Jews. Bert never saw his family again. Because of his youth and health Bert was put to work as a motor mechanic in a concentration camp in Riga, Latvia. He was forced to work from 16 to 20 hours a day on a ration of watery soup and buty rindens bread. There he gained his first experience as a butcher when he occasionally had to skin and cut their hands on a dead horse and shared the meat.

When he was liberated over five years later, he weighed a scant 80 pounds, his stomach was distended and his joints swollen from lack of vitamins. The young Hebrew remained in the camp until the end of the war. He was moved to an even worse camp outside of Danzig. While there he watched three of his best friends shot. They had asked Bert to join them in an escape attempt, but a premonition made him refuse the offer. The next day the three whom Bert remembers only as Cherne, Max and Micha, were captured. After being forced to dig their own graves, they were executed on the spot and Bert was forced to help cover their graves.

Joint Food Parley Slated Next Week

The Nazi state. When the bombs struck the vessel, it broke in two and sank. Only 156 of the 16,000 were strong enough to swim ashore. Three months later the British were still taking bodies from the floor of the harbor. Bert, soon after his liberation by the British, who took Neustadt that day, contacted his uncle, Ludwig Metzgar, who lived in New York City. Mr. Metzgar arranged for his passage to this country and in 1947 Bert Strauss left Germany behind.

Bert Strauss is glad to be here, and if you can call survival such as his "sheer luck," he certainly has it. Third Infantry division food service supervisors are scheduled to meet with Infantry Center food service officials next week. Results of the recent Third Army command inspection of Third division units will be discussed, and food service officers and technicians will be briefed on food service matters in preparation for maneuvers.

'Good News' Cast Management Includes Post War Class Quotas Set By Army

"Good News" is coming to town. Or at least it's in the making. A long time play on Broadway, "Good News", is being revived, refurbished and reorganized by Third Army special services for soldier consumption. The decision to put the hit of the '30s on military stages was good news also to eight enlisted men and a Wac stationed here, who were chosen to take part in the third Third Army show.

MADELINE BARBOUR
... In Soldier Show

The Wac, pretty Madeline Barbour, left Fort Benning for rehearsals at Fort McPherson, Ga. Monday. Just what she is going to do in the show is a mystery to her. Private Barbour is a laboratory technician attached to the Infantry Center signal laboratory.

She was unavailable this week, but several of her associates expressed an earnest desire that she carry on the old burlesque "strip" tradition. Her army career indicates that she would be snapper with the camera. Joining the Women's Army corps in October, 1946, Private Barbour attended the National Photographers School at Monmouth, N. J. She has been at Fort Benning since June. Her home is in Columbus, Ga.

The eight enlisted men who left here for Fort McPherson are: Buddy Williams, William Nat Cutler, Company H, 18th Infantry Regiment; Sgt. 1st cl. Frank Langhin, Section 11, 40th Area Service unit; Pvt. Anthony Platino, Company E, 18th; Pvt. Gerhart Lubben, Section company, 30th Infantry Regiment; Cpl. Joe Robinson, Company A, Infantry School detachment; Pfc. Steve Viscy, Company E, 15th; Pfc. Robert Garlick, 344th Area Service unit and Pfc. Alexander Lesko, clarinetist from the Third Infantry division band who will be part of the orchestra supplying music for the show.

Miss Skippy Lynn, Third Army soldier show technician is directing the show which is expected to arrive here late next month.

Music for the musical comedy, will be supplied by an orchestra composed of members of army bands within the Third Army area. According to special services officials here, the show will play in its entirety at army theaters and then be broken down into units to perform at service clubs and noncommissioned officers' clubs.

Philippine Trips For Dependents Now Suspended

Coordinated travel of dependents of army and air force personnel to the Philippines has been temporarily suspended, according to a memorandum issued by Third Army headquarters. Personnel whose application for travel has already been approved will be permitted to travel, but new applications will not be approved until the Department of the Army lifts the suspension. The temporary suspension is because of the many dependents who have been diverted from Okinawa to alleviate conditions resulting from the recent typhoon. Artillery Officers' Duties Are Changed
Officials of the 690th Armored Field Artillery battalion revealed duty changes in battalion headquarters this week. Capt. Richard H. Kague has been appointed S-3 for the battalion. Capt. Ray C. Paine assumed duties as assistant S-3. 1st Lt. James E. Nicholson took charge of reconnaissance and survey, and 1st Lt. James C. Iskhell has been appointed forward observer. Assigned to FECOM Sgts. 1st cl. Earl K. Smith, Clinton R. Batts, Don George, P. Poplin and Sgt. Clifford C. Robbins, all of Company D, 30th Infantry Regiment, were transferred last week to Camp Stone-man, Calif., for assignment to the Far East command.

Thirteen Privates Boosted In Grade

Thirteen privates of the Third Signal company have been promoted to private first class. They are John R. Bauer, Earl L. Bults, Harvey H. Balkman, Clifford E. Dahlman, Thomas E. Eaves, Francis R. Fisher, Roger L. Hudson, Arnold O. Jensen, Robert E. Lennox, James J. Richey, William R. Roberts, George H. Stelten and George V. Waradzian.

Cooking Safety Discussion Held

Norman M. Evans, Infantry Center safety director, conferred this week with food service officials about the high accident rate among dining hall personnel who operate cooking equipment. Mr. Evans, who is attempting to reduce kitchen accidents because of faulty operation of equipment, says there are many potentially dangerous cooking items in a kitchen. Unless personnel operating this equipment are thoroughly trained in its use, serious accidents can easily occur during a normal meal preparation.

Soldier's Bivouac Canvas Wins in Valley Exposition

For the second straight year, the paintings of Sgt. Augusta H. Carter, Company L, 15th Infantry Regiment, have won first place in the Chattanooga Valley exposition held in Columbus. The painting that won the blue ribbon for Sergeant Carter this year was a canvas of a bivouac area occupied by the regiment's Third Battalion. He was awarded a cash prize and a blue ribbon inscribed with the seal of the state of Georgia.

A veteran of 17 years service, Sergeant Carter is a native of Boston, Mass. Encouraged by his mother in his early years to become an artist, he studied for seven years at the Alendale Art school and the Museum of Fine Arts in

Typing Courses Designed to Aid Clerk Shortage

Infantry Center units short of typists and qualified administrative clerks will get a shot in the arm when the Typing and Administration school increases its training program next January.

Under the supervision of Capt. Edward F. Grady, Infantry Center information and education officer, the school plans to alleviate the shortage of clerk-typists now existing in headquarters units. Not only will the accelerated course train personnel in the fundamentals of typing, but will also include preparation of morning reports, sick reports, letters, indorsements and memoranda.

Three classes will be conducted, with the first opening Jan. 16 and closing March 11. The second class will begin March 13 and end May 6, while the third will begin May 8 and end July 1.

The Infantry Center has already scheduled training quotas for six units. They are Third Infantry division, 205 344th Area Service unit, Provisional group, 13; Student Training Regiment, 4; Infantry School detachment, 3; Provisional Medical group, 6, and Army Field Forces board No. 3, 2.

Units not covered in the initial quota may submit requests through the Infantry Center G-3 section.

Qualifications for enrollment require that personnel have a high grade education or equivalent.

Assignment Rule Classified by TIC

Qualifications for enlistments for specified duty in a selected army area were outlined this week by Infantry Center recruiting officials.

Enlisted men in all grades who have returned from a tour of duty overseas with any branch of the service within 18 months from the date of reenlistment or enlistment into the army are eligible to apply for specific locations.

Granting of a requested assignment, however, depends on an MOS vacancy existing in the army area stipulated, as approved by the commanding general of the area in which assignment is requested.

Enlistments will be made only in the MOS field in which the serviceman has been discharged.

The regulation governing enlistments states that the enlistee will be assigned to his selected duty for a minimum of one year, provided he fulfills that duty and provided the unit to which he is attached remains in the army area the enlistee chooses.

In the event of the transfer of the unit, the enlistee will be required to transfer with his unit. Applicants will be enlisted for three, four, five or six years in the regular army, the regulation stated.

The only exception to the requirement of an overseas tour of duty ending within 18 months of date of enlistment is for men applying for enlistment in army bands. Area commanders may enlist non-veterans for service in any of their unit bands.

Court Season In Final Week

Basketball play continued this week in three of the 15th Infantry Regiment's four battalions as the battalion season nears the finish line.

First battalion action was limited to one game as the undefeated Headquarters company team checked out a 38-3 win over a surprisingly tough Company B squad. The win was the fourth in a row for the Headquarters men.

Company G received a break in the second battalion when its scheduled game with Company F was forfeited to the G-men. This victory enabled the G-men to keep their slate clean and run their total of wins to three.

Company M continued its march to the third battalion title on Monday by downing Company I, 35-28, to remain unbeaten. Company L also stayed in the running with a top-sided 27-15 win over a highly-talented Company K outfit.

The regimental teams have now entered the final week of play with the battalion championships slated to be crowned early next week. Following the battalion championships, the regiment will start the inter-battalion tournament with the twofold purpose of crowning a regimental champion and picking individual players to appear with the 15th Infantry Regiment's Dragons when they enter the post intramural basketball loop.

Alaska Vet Joins Benning Regiment

Sgt. 1st cl. Manfred Toton recently joined Company M, Third Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment. During the war, Sergeant Manfred served with the 36th Infantry Regiment in Alaska, and in 1947-48 was with the 24th Infantry Regiment in Japan.

To Receive Basic Airborne Training

Pfc Freddie H. Rush and Pvt. Ivery L. Lott and Charlie E. Smith, formerly of Company K, 15th Infantry Regiment, have been transferred to Headquarters and Service Company, Airborne Battalion, Student Training Regiment, to take the five-week basic airborne course. Upon graduation, they will be assigned to the 82nd Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Tonsillectomy Aids Condition Of Fretful Cat

The phrase, "animals are the craziest people," certainly has come to life in one soldier's household — anatomically speaking. When Cpl. Anthony Nardo, mail clerk of Company A, Infantry School detachment, noticed his seven-month old Maltese cat sneezing last week, he shrugged it off as just another animal disease. But as the days passed, Nardo became concerned over his pet's health.

Taking "Tony," the cat with a blue and a gold eye, to the veterinary, Nardo was stunned by the doctor's diagnosis of the patient's ailment—the cat had to have its tonsils extracted. Latest report from Corporal Nardo indicates that hospitalized "Tony" is doing quite well—despite a slight impediment in his meow.

Handicaps Fail to Defeat Energetic Dining Steward

Hats are off and belts are loosened at Headquarters and Headquarters company, Student Training Regiment, tributes to its dining steward, Sgt. 1st cl. Walter A. Curtis. To hear the members of the outfit tell it, Sergeant Curtis' meals are something unusually tasty.

According to Capt. John B. DeMarcus, company commander, it's almost a matter of having to erect protective barriers in the dining hall to keep the mouth-drooling personnel from stampeding the line at meal time.

In addition to the main bill of fare, soup is served twice daily with croissants or crackers, individual salads are present at each noon meal and tasty desserts are served at noon and evening meals. Cake is also served whenever ice cream is on the menu.

Despite a necessary move to temporary quarters Sergeant Curtis and his staff have maintained the excellence of the company's food service. Operating with a shortage of adequate cooking equipment, Sergeant Curtis' preparation of meals has remained such as any chef would envy.

The industrious steward has gone beyond the limits of his prescribed duties by converting the temporary dining hall into a room that exudes an air of cheerfulness and warmth.

But Sergeant Curtis hasn't remained unwarded. Recently, the post food service supervisor gave his dining hall a rating of excellent.

BENNING SPOTLIGHT SPORTS

by jim cloonan

While scanning through service newspapers this week, we noticed that our volleyball team made the front page of the bi-weekly Oliver General Hospital Beacon. Turning the pages to the sport section we discovered that one entire page was devoted to the volleyball tournament, which, of course, meant that the page was devoted to Fort Benning.

We say this, because the Fort Benning volleyball team has piled up such a great record that it makes news wherever it goes.

When Benning won the Third Army title for the third consecutive year, it marked the eighth straight year the team had gone through an entire volleyball season without tasting defeat. In addition to army titles, the Doughboys have annexed championships throughout the southeastern states.

The story behind the Benning team is an interesting one because all the men on the post team came from Company C, Infantry School detachment. The team has played together for the last 13 years and its members have combined a total of 153 years in the service. Rookie of the team is Tom Holmes, who is just a beginner with only eight years of service behind him.

The other men on the team all have over 10 years of service with John Goodin leading the parade with 25 years in the army. The only man to outrank him in seniority is the team coach and manager Harvey M. Allen who entered the army in 1922, over 27 years ago.

These men all work in the Army field printing plant and get together every lunch hour to engage in their favorite pastime—volleyball. The club is such a smooth working outfit that newcomers stand little or no chance of breaking into the lineup. With this thought in mind, the post athletic officials have chosen the team intact to represent the post during Third Army tournaments for the past several years. The team has shown its appreciation by bringing back to Fort Benning numerous trophies including three Third Army status and permanent possession of the Third Army plaque.

Hats off to Company C, ISD, for a job well done.

Last weekend proved a rough one for many college teams throughout the nation and when the smoke had cleared the bowl picture was a scene of utter confusion.

Many people had already planned to see the powerful Golden Gophers of Minnesota tangle with the Golden Bears of California in the Rose Bowl. That may still come about but not without a fight in both conferences.

Over in the Big Nine the race was tied up in knots when Michigan dumped unbeaten Minnesota. The Golden Gophers are now in a four way tie with Michigan, Ohio State, and the surprising Hawkeyes of Iowa university.

Kentucky and North Carolina's chances for bowl bids took drops after losses to S.M.U. and L.S.U., respectively. The Longhorns of Texas were dealt what might have been a death blow by the Owls of Rice, while S.M.U. barely kept their hopes glimmering.

Bowling Campaign Officially Opened

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burruss, Infantry Center commander, bowled the first ball down Benning's newly recon-ditioned alleys last night to open the 1949 season.

The opening ceremonies were conducted by Lt. Col. John R. Wright, G-3 of the Infantry Center, and by league officials, Lt. Col. Harry Clisson and Capt. Gilbert Sawyer.

Thirty-six teams have entered the 1949 competition, which is the largest enrollment recorded on the post. Last year 27 teams began the season, and 23 were still operative at the close of playing. Honors were won last year by the general subjects team, under the captaincy of Lt. Col. Charles H. Cheese, while second place was taken by the 89th Field Artillery battalion team.

Teams will consist of five players and two alternates, and will be composed solely of officers assigned to the unit sponsoring the team. All matches will start at 7 p.m. and will be played according to American Bowling congress rules. Failure of a team to be present at starting time will result in a forfeit. Individual handicaps will be awarded under the provision of ABC determinants.

Following is a list of the 36 teams entered in competition for this fall:

Powerful Marine Gridders Here For Army-Navy Fray

Fort Benning will be treated to a real army-navy grid battle Sunday afternoon at Doughboy stadium when the Doughboys entertain the powerful Parris Island, S. C. marines.

Parris Island invades Doughboy stadium with a record of five victories in six starts, their lone loss coming at the hands of Fort Bragg, N. C., last Sunday, 20-14. Fort Benning lost its second game of the season Sunday to Fort Jackson, S. C., 7-6, in an away game.

The Parris Island game could well be a turning point for the Doughs in the event they whip the marines. The Doughs need only the mental lift that such a victory could give them to put them on the victory path for the remainder of the season.

Marine Coach Ted Stawicki, will find a team that will use the two-team system throughout the contest. The difference between Stawicki's system and other two-team systems is that he does not use the platoon type of substitution, where defensive and offensive teams are used for periods of time depending on possession of the ball. Rather, Stawicki uses each team for a specific length of time on both offense and defense. This system gives each team plenty of action and cuts down on play-by-play substitution.

Stawicki is in his first year at the helm of the Parris Island gridgers, having played in 1947.

Both ball clubs will field line-ups equal in weight. Both teams average around 187 pounds per man. The Parris Island team has a slight advantage in the line, where it outweighs the Doughs 197 to 195 pounds per man. Both backfields average 170 pounds.

The Benning team came out of the Fort Jackson fracas without any serious injuries, although End Frank Williams and Quarterback Don Remphill, injured two weeks ago, may still be unable to play. This may be counteracted by the defensive play of Line-Backer Bill Curran who did a great job in the Jackson contest. Another man Coach M. K. Chester will miss is Fullback Jim Farish who broke his hand in the Memphis navy game and is still on the sick list.

Benning, too, will use the two-team system, although Coach Chester will use offensive and defensive units separately. The two-team system is something new with the Doughboys, being used for the first time last Sunday.

The Doughs will enter the game as an eight-point underdog despite the fact they have lost their last two starts.

Fans attending the game will be entertained by one of the post's three hands before the game and during halftime intermission.

The Fort Benning Doughboys returned from Fort Jackson, S. C., on Monday with their second straight defeat of 1949 football season, as Fort Jackson's Red Devils eked out a close 7-6 win in a Sunday contest.

Neither team could get a sustained offense going in the second half until late in the last period. Then with the last period half gone the Doughboys took possession on their own 20-yard line and marched 80 yards to a score, with Fullback Ken Ward skirting right end for the last 12 yards. The fine running of Ward and Halfbacks Lou Barasist and Joe Landry featured this drive although the key play was a 12-yard quarterback sneak by Al Constance, enabling the Doughs to retain possession of the ball. Constance's attempted placement for the all-important extra point was wide.

New Type Unit Here for Duty

A new type chemical corps unit began functioning at Fort Benning last week when a 505th Chemical Maintenance Detachment (Mobile) arrived from Fort McPherson, Ga., for 60 days temporary duty at the infantry center.

The chemical unit, composed of one officer and 10 enlisted men, is under the command of Capt. George C. Nowers, Jr., activated at Fort McPherson last May, the organization is equipped to give complete second, third and fourth echelon maintenance to all chemical corps equipment on the post.

Mc Gibboney, Curran Win Doughboy of Week Titles

Two members of the Doughboy football squad receive The Bayonet's commendation as players of the week this week. They are Center Frank McGibboney, who played nearly 60 minutes of football, and defensive line-backer Bill Curran, who turned in an exceptional performance in view of not having played before the game with the Fort Jackson, S. C., Red Devils.

Pivotal man on the offense and line-backer and defensive signal caller, McGibboney sparked the team throughout three full periods of play, with only an occasional break. Toward the end of the final period he hurt his shoulder in play and was forced to retire from the game.

His hard blocking and equally rugged tackling were instrumental in giving the Benning offense

Bears Rip 999th On 3 Late Scores

The Charleston, S. C., Bears exploded for three touchdowns in the last period Sunday to rout the 999th Armored Field Artillery Cannoneers, 32-8, in a game played at Harmon Field, Charleston.

The Bears made good use of their superior weight throughout the contest to rip the lighter Cannoneers' line to shreds. All but one of the Bears' touchdowns came via the overhead route on sustained marches.

Big Joe Price, 215-pound Bear fullback, opened the scoring in the first period when he climaxed a 67-yard march by bucking over from the two-yard counter. The Cannoneers quickly countered, however, when Fullback Lew Weaver passed 36 yards to Quarterback Bill Gilbert in the Bear end zone.

Ed Glenn put the Bears back in front midway through the second period when he cut off tackle and raced six yards into paydirt. Price booted the conversion and raced 43 yards down the left sideline to score standing up.

Although the Cannoneers went down to their second straight loss, several players turned in outstanding performances during the contest. Among these were Lew Weaver, who averaged 6.4 yards on 13 carries, and Heide Ben Jackson, who attempted to hold up the Cannoneer line single-handedly during the last period.

Formal Opening Stated for Club

Fort Benning's newly organized Civilian club in the Harmony church area, will celebrate its formal opening Oct. 23 with a dance.

A tentative board of governors elected the following temporary officers: Horace Tillis, president; D. W. Hunt, vice president, and Mrs. Lucille Fowell, secretary.

Assigned to Engineers

Pvt. Lloyd MacLaren has been transferred from the 2nd Airborne division to the 10th Engineer Combat battalion.

Henion Holds Top Rung On Revised Golf Ladder

John Henion, Benning golf champion, continued to hold down top spot on the post links roster, when the newly revised ladder was released this week by the tournament committee.

Arnold Hoebecke, well-known post golfer, held down the second rung on the ladder.

George Hardgrove, Third Army officer, is the No. 3 man, and Arthur Gottlieb, Lt. W. McGruder round out the first five.

Ladder play rules are such that a player may challenge any one of three players above him to a regular 18-hole match. If the challenger wins, he exchanges places on the ladder with the loser. If he loses, he may not challenge the same player again until he has defended his own position by beating a player of a lower status who has challenged him.

In all matches for positions on the ladder the play will be on a scratch basis with no handicaps allowed.

In the event a player has tried unsuccessfully for two weeks to arrange a challenge match with a player above him, he may report the fact to the tournament chairman. If no extenuating circumstances are apparent, the player of the lower status will be arbitrarily advanced.

The revised ladder is as follows:

No. 1. Henion, 2. Hoebecke, 3. Hardgrove, 4. Gottlieb, 5. McGruder, 6. Frazier, 7. King, 8. Graham, 9. Scherer, 10. Landrum, 11. Buckland, 12. English, 13. Coughlin, 14. Browning, 15. McClure.

No. 16. Kyle, 17. Kotzebe, 18. Springer, 19. M. L. Miller, 20. Adamson, 21. Broyles, 22. Wray, and 23. Haley, 24. Dunlop, 25. DeMarco, 26. Madding, 27. Rawlings, 28. McClellan, 29. Clark, 30. Warren.

Unbeaten Baylor, California Face Acid Tests

BY JIM CLOONAN and ROBBY ROBINSON

An upset-filled weekend of collegiate grid warfare twisted the bowl game picture into a mass of confusion, and narrowed the field of minor unbeaten and untied teams in the country to ten. Two of the unbeaten elevens should have enough times this Saturday, however, when they come up against tough competition. Unbeaten Baylor should be in a ball game against Texas Christian in the Southwest conference, while California's Rose Bowl path could be blocked by a good U. C. L. A. team.

Elsewhere in the country the top games should be:

THE EAST
Army over N.M.E. — The Cadets to name their own score.
Wisconsin over Boston College — Boston should be number six on the Wildcat victim list.
Boston University over St. Sebastian. — The Hubbs pack too much power for Scranton.
Columbia over Cornell — "Big Red Team" should hold and long after this game.
Georgetown over Fordham. — A battle of unbeaten elevens in one of the East's features. The Hoyas should win because of their tougher schedule.
George Washington over Lafayette. — Lafayette, if having one of its bad years and George Washington should hand them defeat number four.
Harvard over Holy Cross. — Johnny Harvard set a record last week by losing the fifth game in a row. The Crimson should snap the string of losses this Saturday by downing the witness Crusaders.
Columbia over New York University. — The Engineers should pluck the Violets after two weeks of famine.
Notre Dame over Navy. — The streak may not be broken this week.
Pennsylvania over Pittsburgh.

A great intra-state clash with the Quakers slated to keep their record spotless.
Penn State over Syracuse. — One of the better games in the East. The Hoos to ease by Orangeburg by a touchdown.
Records are thrown out of the window in this game as tradition takes over. The Quakers always points for the Siders and should win a thriller.
Birmingham over Yale. — The Green Indians team. Banner to win their fourth straight.

THE SOUTH
Clemson over Wake Forest. — Should be a thriller to the closing gun with the Tigers eking out a close one.
Florida over Furman. — Charlie Huninger and his teammates to win easily over the Purple Hurricane.
Alabama over Georgia. — After the Miami defeat, the Bulldogs should not match for the Crimson Tide.
Duke over Georgia Tech. — A tough intra-conference battle with the Blue Devils coming out on top.
North Carolina over Cincinnati. — Cincinnati will be sorry that St. M. U. won last week's game.
Louisiana State over Mississippi. — The Bayou Bengals have one of the better teams in the South and should dispose of the Rebels.
Maryland over South Carolina. — By a nose.
North Carolina over Tennessee. — Another rough one to pick, but Charlie should get back on a roll.
William and Mary over Richmond. — The Indians to break their two game losing streak.
Tulane over Mississippi State. — The Maroons to lose their sixth straight.
Vanderbilt over Auburn. — Could be the upset of the day. The Tigers get batter every Saturday.

M. C. State over Virginia Tech. — The Wolfpack to claw the Gobblers.
Davidson over Washington and Lee. — Not much to choose from, but our vote goes to Davidson.
Virginia Tech over West Virginia. — The Cavaliers to keep their state clean without too much trouble.

THE WEST
Colorado over Utah. — The Golden Buffaloes to trample the once-powerful Redskins.
Oklahoma A. & M. over Detroit. — Both teams were highly touted at the start of the season but have failed on several occasions to produce. The Aggies should salvage some glory by the win.
Michigan over Illinois. — The win over Minnesota was a shot in the arm by the Wolverine hopes. Darrell Royal and his mates to have a field day at the Cyclone expense.
Oklahoma over Iowa State. — Should be a great game between two great teams. The Longhorns have the better line and therefore get our nod for the decision.
Texas over Southern Methodist. — Should be a great game between two great teams. The Longhorns have the better line and therefore get our nod for the decision.
Southern California over Washington. — Still in the conference race, the Trojans will trample the Huskies.
College of the Pacific over San Jose State. — The big small school battle on the coast. Both teams go into the game with excellent records, but the Tigers should stay unbeaten after a tough

Vandalia to use their superior reserve strength to wear out the Centaur Mirrors.
Montana over Montana State. — The Grizzlies to bump the Bobcats in an inter-state battle.
Stanford over Santa Clara. — Both teams will try to get over .500 in this contest.
Stanford over Santa Clara. — One of the best games on the coast with the Indians having a slight advantage.

California over U. C. L. A. — The powerful Golden Bear's bump head-on into one of the coast's better teams. Could be an upset, but we'll stick with the advantage.
Southern California over Washington. — Still in the conference race, the Trojans will trample the Huskies.
College of the Pacific over San Jose State. — The big small school battle on the coast. Both teams go into the game with excellent records, but the Tigers should stay unbeaten after a tough fight.

Oregon over Oregon State. — The power Golden Bear's bump head-on into one of the coast's better teams. Could be an upset, but we'll stick with the advantage.
Southern California over Washington. — Still in the conference race, the Trojans will trample the Huskies.

Unit Title Won By Triple Play

A triple play highlighted action in the first-half playoff for the 52nd Medical Battalion softball crown recently.

The fielding gem came in the bottom of the first game when a 58th Medical Battalion player, having lined an apparent single to left with teammates on first and third, was caught by the third baseman of the 81st Medical Ambulance company, leaping into the air and snatching the drive, tagged third base, and bled a throw over to first baseman Raymond Nicholson to complete the three-ply killings.

Bullet Gridster Is Discharged

Matthew Battie, star athlete of the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, brought his service career to a close recently when he departed for his home in Fremont, Ohio, following his discharge from the army. Battie, after nine years in service, plans to continue his education in Cleveland and then go into the field of social work. Battie will long be remembered by his post fans for his warlike spirit and all-round ability. He displayed while performing for the Sand Hill grid squads in both 1947 and 1948. His great line play in 1947 earned him the "Bullet of the Week" on several occasions.

ASU Preps For Opening Boxing Card

When the boxing season opens next Friday evening, Fort Benning fans will get their first look at the highly touted Provisional group, Area Service unit, ring squad.

Pacing the service unit team will be two former Third Army fighters, including Lawrence Jones, last year's all-army midweight champion. Both Clark, welterweight champ, and Jones are well known throughout local ring circles and have built up a large following that ensures a capacity crowd for the season's curtain raiser.

In addition to Jones and Clark, the ASU is depending heavily on a light heavyweight who has just arrived here. The young man is Phillip Ellison who is being hailed as another Lawrence Jones. Although taller and heavier than Jones, his fighting style is almost identical. He is exceptionally strong and has the ability to hit with either hand.

The team has been working out daily for the past five weeks at the Main gym and should be in top physical shape for its initial outing.

Another top notch candidate for the squad is Flyweight Billy Fitzpatrick. Fitzpatrick has only had one bout since entering the army but flattened his opponent in that engagement. Since that bout last summer, he has improved steadily and has developed into an aggressive fighter who should give the spectators a treat every time he steps into the ring.

The Provisional group will be in season favorites to dethrone the 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion, last year's titlist, straight times.

TRIPLE THREAT . . . Phillip Ellison, left, light heavyweight; Norman Clark, center, welterweight, and Lawrence Jones, middleweight, are being counted on heavily to pile up points for the Provisional group, Area Service unit. Jones is the defending Third Army champion, while Clark is past welterweight contender for the light-heavy title.

Barboy for Champions
During the 1944 baseball season, the St. Louis Cardinals and St. Louis Browns used the same barboy for all home games, and both teams were pennant winners. The lucky boy was Bobby Scanlon.

All-Pro for Six Years
Dutch Clark, all-time grid selection during his four years at Colorado college, but when he turned pro he was named all-pro quarterback six straight times.

Henion's Team Golf Winners

Team No. 1, with John Henion as captain, took the top honors among 13 teams in a "g-a-g-a" tournament at the County Club golf course last Saturday afternoon. The foursome ended up with a plus 83 points.

Second place prize was captured by team No. 2, captained by Arnold Hoehf, with plus 55 points, while George Hardgrove's team No. 3 placed third with plus 43. Team No. 9, headed by Claude English, took fourth place with plus 19 points, while fifth place was won by team No. 5, L. W. McCruder, captain.

The first five team winners were given golf equipment as prizes. Fifty-eight divot-diggers turned out for the affair, first of its kind to be played on the local course.

Team captains were appointed, and they in turn selected their teams. The best score on each hole counted as the team score. Each team played every other team's best ball in match play.

Four EM Journey To Recreation Spot

Four men of the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment left last Friday for Atlanta, where they spent a week at Washington park rest center.

Those making the trip were Pfc. Gilford Mickleburg, Pvt. Willie Hall, Pvt. Thurman Hinds and Pfc. Atlas Lewis.

Who Happened, Boy?
When Georgia Tech defeated Cumberland by a score of 22-4 in a 1916 grid game, the Yellow Jackets scored 18 touchdowns in the first half and Jim Preas kicked all 18 extra points.

Enrollment Swells TIC Night Classes

Registered for the fall term of army education center's night school, which closed Oct. 10, showed a total enrollment of 733, an increase of 50 over the summer quarter, information and education officials announced this week.

The Third Infantry division history, 12 for advanced German and 13 for advanced Spanish men signing for courses, is.

The 3440th Area Service unit came second with 214. Fifty-four members of the Student Training regiment enrolled along with 48 members of the Provisional Medical group.

The Infantry School detachment had 24 men sign up, Army Field Forces board No. 3, three, Lawson armor base, four, and Infantry School, academic department, 10.

Twenty civilian dependents of military personnel signed for courses as did 12 guest officers from the Student Training regiment.

The typing course brought the highest number of applicants, 144. Photography followed with 87 and auto mechanics and basic arithmetic attracted 48 each.

Forty-four enrolled for the seventh grade English course, 39 for psychology, 45 for business law, 38 for basic subject, 35 for high school algebra, 35 for ninth grade English, 23 for 10th grade English, 23 for high school mathematics, 24 for elementary German, 24 for elementary Russian, 24 for elementary Spanish, 42 for physics, 43 for arithmetic.

ASU's Section 2 Wins Carbine Title

Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section II, won its second straight carbine trophy recently by downing Section I in an inter-team match.

The tournament, which was a held at Benning range, is an annual affair sponsored by the Provisional group, Area Service unit.

Troy Berrien paced the winners on the line with a total of 184 points. Other members of the winning team and their scores are John Bowen, 177; Percy Lindsey, 172; John Moon, 171; and Hugh Pettigrew, 169.

WO Pay Grades Are Designated

For the purpose of initial implementation chief warrant officers have been assigned pay grade W-2 and warrant officers, junior grade, pay grade W-1.

Exceptions to the memorandum setting forth pay grades are:

- Chief warrant officers now authorized fourth pay grade are designated chief warrant officer W-4.
- Masters and chief engineers are designated chief warrant officer W-3.
- First mates and first assistant engineers are designated warrant officer, junior grade, W-1.

The Department of the Army also suspended authority to make temporary appointments to chief warrant officer.

Third army officials at Fort McPherson, Ga., this week said more complete details would be available later this month.

Two Courses Now Offered

The scheduling of two 24-week advanced food service courses per year, rather than one class as heretofore, will alleviate the present critical shortage of qualified food service supervisors, according to an announcement made by the Third Army headquarters.

The present class at the Quartermaster School, which will graduate March 24, 1950, instead of June 30, will be the first falling under the provisions of the new program.

General Assumes Divarty Command

Brig. Gen. R. P. Shugg officially assumed command of Third Infantry division artillery units last week.

His present assignment caps a military career in field artillery which started with World War I.

General Shugg graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1916. He took the battery commanders course and advanced course at the Field Artillery School and graduated from the Command and General Staff college.

During World War II he served as a field artillery battery commander with the Fifth Infantry division and as field artillery battalion commander with the 42nd Infantry division.

World War I brought him a steady rise in command. He was commanding officer of the 14th Field Artillery regiment, Second Armored division, chief of staff, Third Armored division, division artillery commander, 10th Infantry division, and corps artillery commander, 14th corps.

After World War II General Shugg served as chief of the army ground forces on the Joint Brazilian - United States military mission.

His last assignment was as

THIS ONE'S ON ME, SAYS BARBER DEWEY JEFFERSON BOWEN. Cpl. Dewey Jefferson Bowen Gets "The Works" Free Because Of Irony Coincidence

MARITAL STRIFE

Name Duplication Creates Enigma

Two Dewey Jefferson Bowens on the same military reservation could be an amusing coincidence, but in the case of Dewey Jefferson Bowen, barber for Company A, Infantry School detachment, and Cpl. Dewey Jefferson Bowen, Company C, Infantry School detachment, the result was nearly a broken marriage.

It started last September when Barber Bowen's wife opened a letter addressed to her husband. It was a receipt from the United States immigration authority for a $500 bond posted by Dewey Jefferson Bowen for a certain young lady who had recently arrived in this country from Europe.

Mrs. Bowen was, to put it mildly, plighted. When her husband returned that night from the barber shop, where he has worked for 11 years, he was greeted with a certain coldness and many questions.

The fact that the letter was a mistake and Barber Bowen's explanation that there must be another Dewey Jefferson Bowen at Fort Benning fell on deaf ears. Barber Bowen just couldn't understand that he wasn't responsible for the bond and the blond "How," asked Mrs. Bowen, "could there possibly be two Dewey Jefferson Bowens in the world, much less two at Fort Benning?"

The barber knew he was innocent, however, and started a search that lasted until he discovered that Cpl. Dewey Jefferson Bowen works with the tactical department of the Infantry School, was the cause of all his marital problems. He produced Corporal Bowen, and the barber's wife was satisfied.

Corporal Bowen had furnished the bond for his present wife when she came here from Europe.

Both Bowens were named after the same man, Admiral Dewey, and they were both named after grandfathers with absolutely no relationship could be discovered.

Corporal Bowen hails from Marietta, Ga., while Barber Bowen is from Merrittsville, Ohio.

All is peaceful now in the Bowen households, and Corporal Bowen is a regular customer at the ISD barber shop.

Variety Of Trucking Jobs Accomplished By Battalion

Transporting everything from fertilizer to generators, the 250 drivers of the 52nd Transportation Truck battalion each month accumulate enough mileage to equal six trips around the world.

According to Lt. Col. Waldon C. Winston, battalion commander, the unit dispatches some 200 vehicles daily to all parts of the country with an amazingly low accident rate. He says the accident figure, based on a theoretical computation, is about one mishap in 50,000 miles, considerably lower than most units on the post.

EACH VEHICLE IS CHECKED BEFORE IT'S DRIVEN. Cpl. Carl Kimbrall, 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion Driver Inspects Jeep Before Going On Assignment.

With the responsibility of supplying trucks, jeeps and sedans to the Infantry Center, unit officers caution the battalion's 711 men about carelessness that results in fatality. Such effective safety promotion as the burial of a Corporal Careless, adversary of good driving, keeps the unit's accident record in the satisfactory margin.

Officials of the transportation battalion consider the maintenance of equipment equally as important as good driving. Each man is responsible for the cleanliness and mechanical condition of the vehicle to which he is assigned. In cases where repairs are necessary, the driver fills out a report which will call the maintenance crew's attention to the defect.

And driving isn't just a "snap." Long hours and irregular assignments sometimes break up a man's weekend pleasure. For working at night and overtime drivers normally are compensated by extra passes or a day off during the week.

Having gone through a deactivation and reactivation period after nine years service, the unit, organized in June, 1948, set an all-time record last July by driving 294,569 miles in 200 vehicles.

Military Group Deputy Named

Appointment of Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittberger as deputy representative for the United States on the military committee of the North Atlantic treaty military organization and its standing group was announced today by the Department of Defense.

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the United States joint chiefs of staff, is the United States military representative on the committee and also is currently serving as its chairman. General Crittberger also is chairman of the United States delegation of the military staff committee of the United Nations. He also is chairman of the United States army delegation to the board and chairman of the board.

Platoon Officers Assigned to Unit

Company D, 30th Infantry regiment, received two new platoon leaders last week as Lt. Lis. Fred G. Swafford and Kenneth N. Brown joined the organization.

Lieutenant Swafford formerly was assigned to Heavy Mortar company and Lieutenant Brown to Company B, 30th Infantry regiment.

General Stresses Education Concern For Post-Licensed Vehicles

An audience of some 120 adults last week heard Maj. Gen. Wither A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, lash out at grown-ups who fail to concern themselves with their children's education.

As principal speaker at a meeting of the Fort Benning Parents' Association in the Children's school auditorium, General Burress also discussed briefly the proposal that parents be required to pay fees for children attending the school here. Often slipping in a subtle jab to lighten the occasion, General Burress said, "Everyone, particularly a soldier, should make it his duty to concern himself with a child's education. This organization, which I am proud to say reflects honor on this post and its personnel, is striving for the social and educational betterment of our children."

He said that with the renewed interest shown by all parents on the post the school system should show no signs of defects. However, with the completion of the several building projects in and about Fort Benning, school enrollment will sky rocket to a never-before-calculated figure, he continued.

"This school," General Burress added, "is growing by leaps and bounds. And believe me, the birth rate of over 100 babies a month is going to add to the enrollment problem."

The highlight of General Burress' speech concerned the proposal that would require parents to pay for their child's schooling on the post. Under the system, he pointed out, it would cost from five to seven dollars a year per child for schooling.

"There have been suggestions," he said, "as to how this liberal payment should be made. For example, it would be progressively higher per year for officers than it would be for enlisted men. In that manner, a general's child would have to pay $20 a year, while it would be less expensive as the rank became more junior.

"But I think," he continued, "that system would not be too feasible. After all, there aren't many generals around this post who have children of grade school level."

General Burress, in closing his informal talk, said he is

On Nov. 1 Fort Benning will join an ever growing group of progressive citizens and states when a private vehicle inspection station will roll the first Fort Benning licensed car through the test for mechanical defects.

Lt. Col. A. B. Welch, Fort Benning's provost marshal, said this week that the operation of the inspection station will considerably reduce accidents due to mechanical defects and place Fort Benning drivers high on the list of safest drivers in the nation.

The inspection station will be set up on Lauber road, east of the service club No. 1. That portion of the road used for the testing grounds will be closed to parking or traffic from Monday to Friday, 8 a. m. until 5:30 p. m., and on Saturday from 8 a. m. until 12:30 p. m.

Colonel Welch emphasized that the first phase of inspections, running from Nov. 1 to Dec. 31, will be operated on an entirely voluntary basis, except for those who make initial registration of their vehicles with the provost marshal's office after Nov. 1, he added, will be required to pass the mechanical inspection.

The program will be carried out in two phases. The first is the voluntary phase, ends Dec. 31.

The second phase will begin Jan. 1 when the reregistration period for Fort Benning licensed vehicles begins. Drivers who now hold Fort Benning licenses both military and civilian, and who wish to reregister will be required to pass the inspection before the tag can be issued.

The inspection station, will be operated by the post exchange garage. The garage has purchased testing machine costing approximately $265. Four mechanics will be given special instruction at training sessions to enable them to have a thorough knowledge of automobile inspection procedure.

The standards private vehicles must meet before they pass the inspection are:

1. Steering wheels 18 inches or less in diameter should not have more than three inches free motion. Wheels 18 or more inches in diameter should not have more than four inches free motion.

2. The front wheels should not have excessive vehicle or side shake.

3. Tires on passenger cars or motorcycles will be declared defective if the outer cord is exposed, and on commercial vehicles when outer cord is exposed according to the number of plies. When only temporary repairs have been made in blown out tires or holes have been inserted, or if bolts have cut or cord snagged over more than one-inch area, the tire will fail the inspection.

4. The exhaust and muffler systems will be inspected for leaks and security. Cut out and other noise making devices will fail the inspection.

5. Passenger cars having four wheel brakes will be required to stop at 20 miles per hour in 30 feet. Cars with two wheel brakes must stop at 20 miles per hour in 40 feet. Brakes will be checked for proper adjustment and the brake pedal should have at least one-inch in reserve. Emergency brakes will also be checked for serviceable condition. Tests will be made for linkage and loose or missing parts.

6. Passenger cars must have two headlights and motorcycles at least one. Circuits will be checked for proper operation.

7. Windshield wipers will be checked for condition, ease of control and operation.

8. Windshields and other glass will be checked for visibility, cracks and discolorations. They should be clear of stickers, posters or other material not required by law. The window to the left of the driver should be readily opened. The rear glass should match the windshield in safety and visual features.

9. The rear view mirror should be properly focused and free of blemishes.

10. The tail light must be in good operating condition on the left rear of the car. There must be a stop light which works upon application of the brake. The license plate must be illuminated either by the tail light or a separate light.

11. Door latches will be in-

BABIES ON PARADE—Last Saturday, 21 officers' babies of the 15th Infantry regiment were awarded baby cups. The cups were given to each child born since last December, when the regiment was reactivated. In the left photo, Col. Dennis M. Moore, regimental commander, presents a cup to Terrence F. Sculley, son of Capt. Moore.

Enlistment Query System is Devised

A reenlistment interview system for all major units at Fort Benning was established this week by the Infantry Center.

Unit personnel sections authorized as past record in the service, AGCT score, character descriptions, schooling and ambitions, will be interviewed by his commanding officer at least 60 days before discharge date, and the re-enlisting card returned to the unit personnel section.

Twenty days prior to discharge the eligible man will be required to report to the Infantry Center recruiting officer where he will be personally interviewed by the recruiting officer.

The card, which has been prepared by the adjutant general's office, will include such information as:

Excellent Dining Rating Awarded Post MP Outfit

The Military Police detachment, 340th Area service unit, this week received a rating of excellent after the first comprehensive inspection was held at the Infantry Center.

Food Service Technician Woodrow W. Hall, Infantry Center inspector, presented the award to Sgt. 1st Lt. Everett J. Whistler, mess steward of the dining hall.

The newly-inaugurated inspection, which required the dining hall's steward to make the inspection team report deficiencies to the food service inspector, is aimed at familiarizing dining hall personnel with their carelessness.

Food service officials pointed out that making the inspection informal as possible will tend to make personnel more cognizant of their own deficiencies.

After the inspection, the dining hall crew discussed the deficiencies and how they may be overcome with the inspector.

Surveys Completed
Food service officials have completed unit mess inspection surveys in all Infantry Center dining halls, and unit commanders have been invited to visit the food service office to look over the survey records.

Battle Park Homes To Open 40 Units

With their sights set on completing the 200-apartment Battle Park Homes project, construction officials announced today that some 38 families have already moved into the first completed buildings.

Edgar L. Lewis, Battle Park Homes, Inc., resident manager, declared that if plans continue as smoothly as they have in the past few weeks, 40 families should be occupying the new buildings within the next 10 days. He said, however, painting, plastering and decoration of the interiors have to some extent, altered their original plan to have 40 apartments ready by Oct. 10.

Application for rental is restricted to officers and civilians whose official capacity, considered priority in the Post-Office operation. A half-month's rent must be paid the day occupancy is made. Under the priority setup, the following categories have been established in the order of their importance: performing surgical duties; 1. Medical and dental officers; 2. Student officers, regular advanced class; 3. Company grade, permanent assigned officers; 4. Field grade, permanently assigned officers; 5. Permanent civilian employees.

All apartments are furnished with cooking and heating facilities. Utility bills will be paid by the occupant, except for the water bill which is presently absorbed by the B. H. Harris Realty company, developers of the project.

The two and three-bedroom apartments are renting for $80 and $70 per month.

EM to Learn Waterproofing

In preparation for "Operation Portex" in which the Third Infantry division will participate, two members of the Ninth Field Artillery battalion are attending a special waterproofing course at the Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, Va.

Attending the five-day course at the Venetian Waterproofing School are Pfc. Bruce E. West, Battery A, and Pfc. William B. Brower, Headquarters battery.

Two members of the Third Reconnaissance company have recently completed the course. They are 2nd Lt. Billy Caplin and Sgt. Daniel Hope.

Bayonet Extends Cordial Welcome

On behalf of the men, officers and civilians of Fort Benning, The Bayonet welcomes the members of the fifth civilian orientation conference to the most renowned institution of its kind in the world—the Infantry School.

We also extend a warm welcome to our Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson, and to the members of his fighting team, the secretaries of army, navy and airforce, and the joint chiefs of staff.

The distinguished civilian visitors, the opinion moulders of the nation, are here as personal guests of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

Tomorrow they will join with the top defense commanders to witness two of the Infantry School's most spectacular demonstrations. They will see the famous weapons demonstration, climaxed by the awe-inspiring "mad minute." They also will see the Airborne battalion in training and will witness an actual mass jump.

Saturday, they will watch the war-famed Third Infantry division pass in review. This will be followed by another Infantry School demonstration—the battalion in attack. In the latter, infantry, artillery, tanks and jet fighters will personify unification as operation.

This is indeed a great honor for Fort Benning, for this is the only army post these distinguished civilians will visit. It shows to the world that the infantry is not outmoded—it's here to stay.

That the Infantry Center should be chosen as host to these important people is readily understandable. Throughout the world the reputation of the Infantry School is known and respected. Just as infantry is queen of battle so is the Infantry School queen of the service schools.

The success of its graduates on far-flung global battlefields was to vindicate the judgment of those officers who had clung steadfastly to the ideal of a trained infantry as the nation's bulwark.

When these leading citizens leave here Sunday, they will take back with them the story of infantry; how we live, what we do, how we fight and how our weapons are likely to stack up against an aggressor hell-bent on world destruction.

We are confident they will leave here boosting the Doughboy. They will know infantry's mission and its capabilities. But, more important, they will know that no one yet has come up with a substitute for the guy with the guts with the gun.—Gt Joe, Infantryman.

C of C to Entertain Gen. Omar Bradley

The chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, who will attend the fifth joint orientation conference with other Department of Defense officials, has accepted an invitation from the Columbus Chamber of Commerce to attend a luncheon tomorrow.

Rayton McLendon, chamber director, this week announced the general's formal acceptance. He also said that other ranking members of the group, including Defense Secretary Johnson and the secretaries of army, navy and air, have been extended similar invitations, but no answers have been received from them, Mr. McLendon said.

airforce, and the joint chiefs of staff for the armed forces. The combined group of military and civilian visitors will participate in an extensive tour of the post, which includes firepower and tactical demonstrations staged for them by the academic department of the Infantry School.

The civilian leaders began their tour Monday in Washington, D. C., where they conferred with Defense Secretary Johnson and other top military officials before leaving for Fort Benning in the Pentagon building, they met and discussed various military matters.

Finance Office Explains 'Saved Pay' Stipulation

The Infantry Center finance office released tables this week which The Bayonet hopes will clarify some clouded interpretations of the new military pay act and will clear up the meaning and application of the "saved pay" clause in the pay law.

The tables illustrate the new pay rates for the enlisted grades of the army and airforce; who will fall within the "saved pay" bracket, and how current pay computations are made to arrive at the pay received by enlisted men.

The "saved pay" clause refers to compensation retained by the enlisted man who received a low allowance under the old military pay act and the Servicemen's Dependents Allowance Act of 1942 which have been repealed by the new Career Compensation Act.

The particular items affected are: pay for Distinguished Service awards, pay for the Combat Infantryman's badge, pay for the Combat Medical badge and family allowance payments.

The single outstanding result of interpretation of the new regulations indicates that an enlisted man who draws family allowances will be paid the amount due him under the new or 'old' pay act, whichever is the greater amount. In other words, if the pay received on Sept. 30, 1948, was more than an enlisted man would receive under the new act he would continue to receive pay at the Sept. 30 rate or vice-versa.

Family allowances are probably the greatest single factor in determining payments under the old or new act. To make your own pay computation from the tables, these factors should be taken into consideration:

1. Base and longevity pay (old and new rates).
2. Flying pay (old and new rates).
3. Medical pay.
4. Badge pay.
5. Family allowances.

Indebtedness To Be Taken From VA Pay

The Veterans Administration this week told veterans and servicemen who owe the government money that all or part of the amount due will be deducted from next year's NSLI dividend.

Although Columbus VA officers said they haven't received any elaboration on the announcement, a Washington source stated that veterans affected will include those overpaid on subsistence allowances while taking educational courses under the G. I. bill. Those who were overpaid on pensions, other VA benefits and defaults on loans made good by the VA, also will find a cut in their cash return, the spokesman declared.

Unofficial VA quarters say that it is generally safe to assume that deductions will not be made in cases where a veteran has a balance to pay on a loan or other similar circumstances. The VA estimates that some 600,000 veterans presently owe the agency about $70,000,000. The VA anticipates collecting between $20,000,000 and $30,000,000 through deductions from the national service life insurance dividends.

Latest reports from Washington indicate the citizens bonanza will begin to flow in late January, although earlier rumors said some veterans would start receiving checks nearer Christmas.

Parley Guest Crash Victim

Rep. George J. Bates (R-Mass.), one of the victims of a Tuesday D. C. air crash, was to have been a guest at the fifth joint orientation conference here tomorrow and Saturday.

Mr. Bates, 58, was serving his seventh term as a member of congress.

The air tragedy, labeled as the worst in history, occurred when an Eastern airlines DC-4 passenger ship, bound from Boston to New Orleans was rammed in mid-air by a Bolivian fighter plane, piloted by Erick Rios Brindoux, 28, director of the Bolivian air force. Brindoux, although badly injured, is the only known survivor of the crash.

Although bodies of 11 passengers on the DC-4 still had not been recovered, yesterday the huge passenger plane nosed into the embankment of the Potomac in such a manner following the impact that escape was held virtually impossible.

The two aircraft collided despite frantic efforts of an airport radio operator to keep them apart. Both planes were trying to land when the tragedy occurred.

Armistice Day Ceremony Set

Fort Benning's military and civilian personnel, except those performing necessary duties, will receive a holiday on Armistice Day, Nov. 11. Infantry Center officials have announced.

From reveille until noon the Infantry Center's flag will be displayed at half-mast in memory of those who died during World War I. Just before noon, the 2nd Army band will play appropriate patriotic airs in the vicinity of the flagpole. From a location near the Hagstaff, 21 guns from the 41st Field Artillery battalion will fire the national salute.

Following the ceremony, the flag will be hoisted to full-mast.

In the afternoon, the infantry-artillery-tank team will stage a combat maneuver. Involving hundreds of infantrymen, tanks and supporting artillery, the operation will bear out the combined power of infantry and mechanized weapons in attacking an enemy position.

Infantry officers have made arrangements for the visitors to follow a typical paratrooper's training from start to finish. Beginning with the first few weeks of physical training that toughens the jump student, they will see the infantryman in the 34-foot mock airplane fuselage drops from the 250-foot towers, and finally a mass jump by several hundred graduate students of the airborne department.

The guests are slated to leave the Infantry Center Sunday for Norfolk, Va., where they will see the Navy's part in the Orientation Conference.

We Must Put Up or Shut Up

Within the next few months, everyone of us — officer, enlisted man and enlisted woman — is going to have an important job to do. It won't be easy. Good things never are.

We've got to help the rearmament program which started Tuesday with a Reenlistment Sales Conference. We've got to "sell" the army to the hundreds of men who will be up for discharge shortly.

Why "sell" the army, you ask? For one thing, the army is the servant of the people. We do just what the civilian-population wants us to do. In a democracy, that's the way it should be.

As the servant of the people, we are charged with the security of this country. We need a large army to back our foreign policy. We can't get tough with an aggressor over the conference table if we don't have an army to back us up. With a depleted army, if it comes to "put up or shut up" we'll be forced to "shut up." We won't have anything to "put up."

Each and everyone of you reading this is going to have to be a salesman. It's going to be up to you to help us maintain our strength. You're above average in intelligence. You wouldn't be reading this editorial if you weren't.

Since you are above average, to you will fall the lot of pointing out the many advantages the service has to offer. But don't try to kid these fellows. You'll also have to tell them the disadvantages. Maybe they know them as well as you. Let's look at some of them first.

Sure, we know there is a lack of privacy living in barracks. We also know that the needs of the army come before personal needs. Some fellows, though, just can't seem to figure that one out. Another disadvantage is the nomadic life of the soldier. Transfers from one station to another interrupt home life and work a hardship on the family.

But these drawbacks are offset by certain advantages. The lack of privacy is often offset by the comradeship of army life. Also, many servicemen look forward to occasional changes of scene and new assignments. Experience of travel and residence in strange places is a recognized educational advantage which most civilians can't afford. Also, tours of duty in many places result in getting more and more friends and continual renewing of old friendships.

What about the money angle? A survey made last year (before passage of the pay bill) showed that an unmarried private's pay of $75 a month was equal to a civilian's $53 a week pay. It showed that a civilian can save eight cents out of every dollar, while the serviceman can save 55 cents out of every dollar. This means that the civilian saves $17 a month out of a monthly salary of $213, while the serviceman saves $48 out of his $75 monthly dollar.

We mentioned educational advantages. Did you know that right here at Benning we have the largest education center in the army? You can go to school there nights and earn a high school diploma or you can get credits towards a college degree. Also at night, you can go to the off-campus center of the University of Georgia at Jordan high school. The army will pay 75 per cent of the cost while you kick-in the other 25 per cent. What can you beat that set-up?

Don't overlook the retirement and vacation benefits when you talk to those men. In the armed forces, vacation and retirement benefits are equal or superior to those of most civilian occupations. Most civilians are glad to get two weeks vacation with pay, as compared to the annual 30 days for the serviceman.

As for retirement, the soldier can retire after 30 years service on a pension which didn't cost him a cent. Few if any civilians enjoy this advantage. Even if he remains a private for 30 years (which is extremely rare) a serviceman will receive $76.88 a month for the rest of his life. Beat that if you can!

But there's one thing in your sales talk we've saved for the last. Ask your friend if he doesn't have a sense of usefulness which comes only with being in the service. This may sound corny, but service to country is the one thing that lifts an army career above the rank of mere job-holding. It lifts it into the category of callings that enjoy the respect and prestige of peace everywhere.

So think it over. Won't you help enlist more stockholders in freedom enterprise?

News Briefs

Vice Adm. Sherman Appointed Naval Chief

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Vice Adm. Forrest P. Sherman has been named as successor to Adm. Louis Denfeld, who was ousted as chief of naval operations following a row over the nation's defense program. Admiral Sherman, reported to be a trouble-shooting "compromise expert," was jumped to the navy's top job over the heads of nine other admirals who rank him in seniority, including four four-star officers. E. G. Nourse head of President Truman's economic advisers, bowed himself out of the political scene last week when he openly stated that the administration's economic program was unsound. He has been wanting to retire, and this week the President accepted his resignation. Said Doctor Nourse of the President's 1949 economic report to congress: "I'm too old for such nonsense. I haven't many years left (he is 65), and I ought to live them out honestly." The first session of the 81st congress ended last week, and President Truman said it accomplished more than he had expected. One reaction to congress' record was that of a fair dealer who said: "We haven't lost a Negro vote. We haven't lost a labor vote. We haven't lost a farmer vote." . . . Adm. Louis Denfeld stepped out of the defense picture last week. Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews was busily dodging congressional accusations that Admiral Denfeld was fired because of his stand in the B-36 fight. Some congressmen are calling for his resignation. . . Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, all but blasted the navy off the seas. He said ". . . I believe that the public hearing of the grievances of a few officers who will not accept the decisions of the authorities established by law. . . have done infinite harm to our national defense." INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—Tito's Yugoslavia was admitted to the United Nations when the necessary two-thirds majority was obtained on the second ballot. Russia's representative, Andrei Vishinskiy, had threatened "unpleasant consequences" if Yugoslavia were elected. After the election, Pravda, leading Russian newspaper, wrote that Russia would "continue without change in the direction of strengthening" the U. N. . . Vyacheslav Molotov, Russia's foreign minister, unseen and unheard for some months, showed up alive and well and apparently still No. 2 man in Russia. Reported dead, on a secret mission of ill, Molotov held the place of honor among mourners at the funeral of Soviet Marshal Fedor Ivanovich Tolbukhin in the absence of Marshal Stalin. . . France is still trying to give birth to a government acceptable to the politicians and the people. It is up to Georges Bidault, for the time being, to try to form a cabinet. . . The last of the war crimes trials in Japan closed last week when Osamu Satano, who beheaded a captured American airman, was sentenced to five years imprisonment. The court decided he had killed under orders and could not be held directly responsible. Since the trials started, 988 Japanese have been brought before the bench. One-hundred and fifty were acquitted, 124 sentenced to death, 62 to life imprisonment and 680 to lesser prison terms.

Report from Washington

Strength of Armed Forces Drops 154,000

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Defense department figures compiled as of September 30, show a combined strength of 1,537,700, a drop of 154,000 from the combined 1948 figure, which showed 1,691,700.

The Army has issued special orders assigning its warrant officers to the four pay grades provided in the career compensation act W-1, W-2, W-3 and W-4. The airforce will convene a board to distribute its warrant officers among the four pay brackets. The statutory grade of CWO will apply to airforce pay groups W-4 and W-3, with the junior grade applying to the other divisions. No new army warrant officer appointments are expected before the end of 1950, though temporary appointments may be made in the interim. When most of the army career fields are in operation, a new warrant officer integration program is contemplated.

President Truman recently signed legislation which gives the airforce representation on the military liaison committee to the Atomic Energy commission. The airforce has not been represented before because it was not a separate department at the time the committee was created.

Chairman Carl Vinson (Ga.), of the house armed services committee, was so impressed with a recent magazine article, "This Way Lies Peace," written by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, joint chiefs of staff chairman, that he recommended its study to members of his committee and the press.

Chaplain's Corner

Disobedient Soldier Risks Failure, Disgrace

BY CHAPLAIN W. G. MCLEOD

The thought often occurs to chaplains following guided visits to the barracks that soldiers mark their military records by fumbling the responsibility of obedience. Subjects for sermons such as "Obedience," "Discipline," "Duty" and "Authority" quickly come to mind.

When an individual enters military service he joins a monarchical society created and maintained by the authority of duly elected representatives of the people. In the fulfilling of its mission, the armed forces demand obedience in conformance with the solemnly pledged oaths of its members and the laws of our land.

We all know that it is not easy to give one's will and obedience to another. The "stop" signal seemingly meets us at too many intersections. Nevertheless, despite the difficulty, obedience must be managed somehow, and especially in the armed forces, for a soldier who refuses to obey the orders of those properly entrusted with authority risks failure and disgrace.

It is readily admitted that situations may arise on rare occasions in which an individual can neither intelligently nor honestly comply with some demands of higher authority. Nevertheless, in the main run of things and as a general rule, a good soldier obeys.

"Isn't this a free country?" (How often chaplains have been asked this question!) Yes, this is the freest land under the sun. "Then why all these rules and regulations?" As paradoxical as it may seem, rules and regulations are necessary for maximum freedom and greatest performance. Accept the law of God and you become liberated to a life of higher service; reject that law and you become a slave of the self. Accept the laws of health and you become a happy, comfortable life; despise them and nature will plague you with disease. Reject the laws of the land and you must shun the face of day and hide in the darkness like a hunted, hated thing. Accept the rules and regulations of the military and become a respected and important defender of all that our country strives for and hopes to be; refuse to properly appointed authorities the obedience due them and you become part of the problem instead of part of the solution—You weaken the defense of our land and the forces that work for peace.

SHADOW OF NIGHT BY AUGUST DERLETH. CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, NEW YORK, PUBLISHERS. BY D. W. SCHAEFFER

Sac Prairie, Wisconsin, an outpost of civilization in the 1850's, is the scene of this simple, easily understood and moralistic novel.

The theme is an old one. A seeker of vengeance is obsessed by a desire to kill the killer of his brother, is mellowed by the kindness of humanity and finds himself in the dilemma of being unable to fulfill his purpose without hurting those he has come to admire and even love.

But though the theme is obvious, though the plot is simple, to watch the progress of hatred as it turns to love is a heart-warming process.

Mr. Derleth's writing avoids the cleverness which others use to cover up a twist such a basic plot into something original. It is as though he sat down and said, "here is an old story, 'an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth.' Everyone knows it, but let's see how it works."

Shadow of Night shows us how it works with people. Different kinds of people. The avenger, Husso, is an immigrant from Europe in search of Gehardt, who shot his brother in one of the revolutions from hunger which swept Europe during the 1840's. He finds his quarry in Sac Prairie. But he finds the man at the very moment he could have killed.

From that point, as he comes to know the other European refugees who people the town, he finds more and more evidence to make him wonder at the truth of his desire to kill.

He meets Ammi Mellman, innocent, warm, giving and sixteen. He is drawn to her as a lonely man who has dedicated himself to draw to those unscarred by life. He finds Ammi is in love; with all the innocence of youth, with Charlie, son of his prey.

Again the complications set in. He finds his purpose wavering even more. To get himself back to the track of his purpose he must go at night to his room and stare long at a picture of his murdered brother, Josef, and remember his killer, Gehardt.

The hatred that possesses Husso burns deep within him and it is only by his entrance into human society that he finds himself filled with doubt. A doubt which finally saves him.

Husso does not kill Gehardt, but Gehardt dies. Charlie and Ammi are left. Husso realizes now that his longing for vengeance was only a sick effort to compensate for the loss of his brother.

He finds inner peace. Through the writing and understanding of Mr. Derleth, Husso comes to love his enemy.

Shadow of Night is a relief from the cynicism and general immorality which prevails in most of today's novels. Here we have a writer who still believes in mankind and most certainly believes in God. Mr. Derleth looks at people as though they are capable of growth, a thing most contemporary, popular writers don't seem to understand.

Reading Shadow of Night can in itself make a growth in anyone willing to accept its philosophy. It is a good book and at the risk of appearing naive, a religious book, which can give a return to faith in mankind. Simple people will read it and understand, the informed may read it and scoff, but nevertheless a return to basic understanding and an attempt at growth can cure many ills, as this book illustrates.

First Man: "Which of the three candidates do you think would make the best president for our lodge?"

Second Man: "Well, we need a man who has convictions."

First Man: "That's easy. They all have been convicted at least twice."

There are two things which keep a lot of people from dancing — their feet.

A guy without at least a few evil intentions is like lingerie without lace trimmings — completely uninteresting.

There was a young man of Quebec

Who was frozen in snow to his neck.

When asked, "Are you friz?"

He replied, "Yes I is, 'Buz' we don't call this cold in Quebec."

A woman's work is never done. . . Then why is it they're always having so much fun.

"Does your husband carry life insurance?"

"No, he carries fire insurance. He knows where he's going."

The doctor's new secretary, a conscientious girl, was puzzled by an entry in the doctor's notes on an emergency case: "Shot in the lumber region." It read: After a motion picture she brightened and, in the interest of clarity, typed into the record: "Shot in the woods."

A flirt is a woman who believes it is every man for herself.

Post OM Wives Fete Mrs. Beine

Wives of quartermaster officer personnel complimented Mrs. Helmut E. Beine with a farewell luncheon in the Rose room of the Officers' club Thursday, Oct. 20, with Mrs. J. R. Mays as hostess.

A small luggage hat box filled with pyrotechnic, the leary branches and bright colored berries spilling over the sides of the box in an artistic arrangement, formed the centerpiece.

Mrs. Beine was presented with a doll-size overnight bag containing a set of exquisite porcelain placecard holders as a gift from the group.

Those present were Mrs. David H. Finley, Mrs. Raymond Hamilton, Mrs. Stanley H. Partridge, Mrs. George M. Follock, Mrs. Don Romine, Mrs. Henry J. MacDonald, Mrs. Wade V. Hampton and Mrs. Herbert Reis, the honoree and the hostess.

P-TA Halloween Party Draws Capacity Crowd

From the pages of Mother Goose, comic strips and Alice in Wonderland came the characters who invaded the Main gym last Friday night to participate in the annual P-TA Halloween party.

Approximately 1,000 children, in a variety of costumes, as well as almost twice as many adults as last year turned out for the big event.

The gym was all dressed up for Halloween too, with 12-foot witches, life-like scarecrows, witches and ghosts. Attractive posters, bats strung across the rafters and artistic booths where various forms of entertainment were offered all added up to a successful party.

Men and women of the post among the children seated on the floor at the far end of the gym, King of Columbus, a student of the famous Graylock, the magician, entertained the crowd with magic tricks.

Prizes were awarded to the following for the most original and most appropriate costumes: Daniel Melvin Carter, 2, a perfect little gnomie with a long red beard, or perhaps he was a "Grumpy" of the Seven Dwarfs; Walter Scott, Mrs. John Campbell, Mrs. Milton C. Taylor, Mrs. Hamilton Peyton, Mrs. Robert M. Blanchard, Mrs. Henry Clisson, Lt. Col. Charles Ezzler, Lt. Col. Ewing, Lt. Col. Lee, Maj. Abhol Bangert, Maj. and Mrs. Winston G. Whall, Maj. Jack Miller, Capt. Leo Sullivan, Mrs. Bangert, Maj. and Mrs. Charles H. Hallden, Maj. and Mrs. Selmer Fair, Capt. and Mrs. Lee Fritter, Lt. Col. and Mrs. A. C. Halby, M-Sgt and Mrs. Edward Morrissey, Maj. and Mrs. Frazier, and the guests, Vincent Franklin, M-Sgt. and Mrs. Robert Lamb, M-Sgt. Wallace Scott and Major Urban.

McNutt's Serve Sukiyaki Dinner

Maj. and Mrs. Leonard McNutt entertained in their home in Equiline Heights Wednesday evening with a sukiyaki dinner honoring Lt. Col. Gordon Cornell and Maj. and Mrs. Henry Mastro.

A low sukiyaki table, laden with Japanese lacquer and porcelain ware, was centered with a charcoal brazier, and the guests, seated on cushions around the table, ate their dinner with chopsticks.

Major Schwab Honored At Party

Mrs. Linden H. Schwab entertained Saturday night with a surprise birthday party for her husband, Major Schwab.

Aperitifs were served in their quarters, and dinner followed in the Rose room at the Officers' club.

The dinner table was artistically decorated with clusters of Malaga grapes and Hawthorne greenery and green and yellow tapers. A large birthday cake also carried out the green and yellow color scheme.

Guests included Lt. Col. and Mrs. Lyle W. Bernard, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles F. Coates, Maj. and Mrs. Horace W. Doty, Maj. and Mrs. David E. Whitall, Maj. and Mrs. Winston G. Whall and Maj. and Mrs. Jack Miller.

Parley Set For Nov. 9

This is the first time the Red Cross column has been in the Bayonet for some time now. When it was running regularly, we sometimes wondered whether there were any readers. But since the column has been on a leave of absence, so to speak, we have had many enquiries as to when it would be back in the paper and many pleasant remarks relative to its contents.

Three Engineers Assigned Duties

The 7th Engineer Company battalion has announced changes in assignment for three enlisted men.

Transferred from Headquarters and Service Company to Company A were Pvt. Vernon L. Harp and Pfc. Thomas A. Barker, Jr. While Pvt. Robert J. Windsor went from Headquarters and Service Company to Company B.

The following chapters will be represented: Barbour county chapter, Euflavia, Ala.; Randolph county chapter, Woodland, Ala.; Terrell county chapter, Dawson, Ga.; Chattahoochee Valley chapter, West Point, Ga.; Merkle county chapter, Manchester, Ga.; Randolph county chapter, Cuthbert, Ga.; Stewart county chapter, Lumpkin, Ga.; Clay county chapter, Ft. Gaines, Ga.; Marion county chapter, Ellaville, Ga.; Russell county chapter, Phenix City, Ala.; Webster county chapter, Preston, Ga.; Trout county chapter, LaGrange, Ga.; Americus and Sunter county chapters, Americus, Ga.; Ellaville chapter, Ellaville, Ga.; Harris county chapter, Chipley, Ga.; Sullivan county chapter, Franklin, Ga.

We always feel that these chapters meet for the miller than just a gathering of Red Cross representatives, for we feel this is indeed an opportunity for the ladies and gentlemen attending to become better acquainted with the miller and the Red Cross at Fort Benning, taking back with them to their communities a feeling of closeness.

Those present were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Norman Barnes, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Walker Thomas, Pfc. Capt. and Mrs. Marshall E. Bulloch, Capt. and Mrs. J. O. H. Moore.

Kitchen Utensils Being Examined

Kitchens of Infantry Center units are being inspected for utensils issued during World War II, food service officials said this week.

War issue of kitchen utensils are found to be, in many instances, it was stated, below standards set for Infantry Center kitchens.

A long term program for replacement of these items is being studied, and dining stewards have been instructed to put sanitary coatings on old utensils.

car. Garret E. Cox, partner in the post exchange garage, explains the function of the test to General Burress, left, and Lt. Col. A. B. Welsch, Infantry Center provost marshal, look on. Center picture shows General Burress and Mr. Cox going over the check-list covering the examination, while a line of cars await the examination. In the right photo, General Clarkston gets his okay from Mr. Cox and pays the 25-cent fee for the examination.

Revise Reserve Retirement Rule

Regulations changing the starting date for the reserve retirement credit-point system are now coming off the presses. The new regulation provides simply that non-regulars eligible for retirement pay may be retired the last day of the month in which they reach age 60, or in which their application is approved, whichever is later. Pay starts the first of the month following retirement.

Another change in the new law will be necessary to insure that those retired under the reserve retirement act will be paid in accordance with the new pay rates, which went into effect Oct. 12.

Auto Checks Start on Post

Last Tuesday Fort Benning drivers began putting their private automobiles through a test for mechanical defects, set up by Fort Benning's safety office as a qualification for obtaining post license tags.

At the head of the line was Maj. Gen. F. W. Chickson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division. His dark blue Buick went through the examination without a hitch.

The general seemed relieved when the sticker, certifying the check had been made, was affixed to the windshield of his car. Next to take the test was a cream colored Chrysler, Fort Benning license tag 0-1 belonging to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general of the Infantry Center. General Burress' car also passed the examination.

The next two in the hit snags, however, T. A. Barefoot, chief of the civilian personnel division, had his car rejected on one count, a defective stoplight. Capt. Robert J. Lamb, a military policeman, had three defects in his car. His stoplight did not light properly, one of his headlights was incorrectly aimed and his brakes were slightly defective.

Following these first volunteers for inspection was a line of vehicles whose owners seemed anxious to have their cars checked and avoid the rush when the inspection becomes compulsory Jan. 1, 1950.

After his car passed the inspection, General Burress said, "I think that by requiring cars to meet safe mechanical standards we will save lives that would otherwise be needlessly lost. Not only cars but their drivers will be checked for efficiency. In setting up this inspection station, Fort Benning follows in the footsteps of many other safety-conscious cities."

Those who passed the inspection received a check list, attesting the examination had been made, and a windshield sticker, showing the vehicle had passed. Those who failed the test have 10 days in which to have the defect repaired at the garage of their choice, and report back to the inspection station for re-examination.

The fee of 25 cents, which is paid at the initial examination, covers any further check.

Through the Nov. 1-Dec. 31 voluntary period, those who pass the test will carry the windshield sticker.

After Jan. 1, when the examination becomes compulsory, the issuance of a 1950 tag will indicate that the car has passed the mechanical checkup.

The tests are made by employees of the post exchange garage. It takes approximately six minutes to run a car through the examination.

Lt. Col. A. B. Welsch, Infantry Center provost marshal, said he hoped drivers would recognize the mechanical defects in their cars and have them repaired before examination.

He re-emphasized that a car may be sent to the inspection station by the owner. Any licensed driver, supplied with the owner's license, can take the car through the test, he said.

Vehicles which are classified as temporary and are issued temporary registration stickers and vehicles which have been inspected by a city or state inspection station for which an inspection sticker or certificate has been issued for the period the vehicle is registered on the post will not be required to undergo the examination.

Every other Benning-licensed vehicle is required to pass the test before the 1950 tag will be issued.

Recorded Concert Set For Tuesday

The record concert at the Artur Rubenstein, solo pianist, Main library next Tuesday evening at 8 p. m. includes three well known compositions. Prokofiev's "Symphony No. 5" will be played by the New York Philharmonic orchestra, conducted by Arthur Rodzinski.

Gregg's "Concerto in A Minor" will be played by the Philadelphia orchestra conducted by Mr. Ormandy, and will complete the program.

Polio-Stricken Brunette Asks Donations to Chest

Mrs. Freda McNeal, a port brunette, was carried onto a plane at Lawson Field last Monday and flown to Oliver General hospital in Augusta.

Strapped to her chest was a portable respirator, donated by the airforce at Kelly field, Tex. You see, Mrs. McNeal is a victim of polio Fort Benning's only serious case of the dread disease in more than nine years.

Mrs. McNeal, wife of 1st Lt. John L. McNeal, Company M, 30th Infantry regiment, contacted the disease Sept. 23. She first noticed the symptoms as she and her husband sat in their home in Columbus.

Next morning the pains, fever and headache were worse, so she was admitted to the Station hospital, where doctors confirmed her suspicions.

Doctors at the hospital said Mrs. McNeal would have to spend about another 18 months in the hospital. She's not exactly looking forward to it, but she's making the best of it. Both she and her husband regard it as an unfortunate incident—but one that could happen to anyone.

And it can happen to anyone. Polio is no respecter of person. One day it may strike in the slums, the next in the home of John Q. Moneybags.

What would we do if a polio epidemic struck Benning? What could we do with only one iron lung?

If we wait until an epidemic strikes, it will be too late to do anything.

However, there is something we can do right now, everyone of us. We can give, and give generously, to the Community Chest.

A donation to the Community Chest is not just in money handed out, never to be seen again. It's an investment in your future health and well being.

For the Community Chest combines all the drives of worthy organizations and makes one large donation take the place of many small ones. After the donations have been made, the money is divided among the nine agencies which benefit from the contributions.

One of the groups that benefits from the Community Chest is the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. From the money received the Foundation makes available from 1 to 6 g. s. trained personnel and anything else that might be needed in polio-ridden areas. In the unlikely event that Fort Benning were struck with a polio epidemic, the Foundation would immediately come to our aid.

Mrs. McNeal, commenting on this, said: "If anyone wants to send me flowers, I wish, instead that they would donate the money they would spend on them to the Community Chest. I don't want this to sound like a melodramatic appeal, but I do think the money would be going to a much more worthy cause."

Remember this when it comes time for you to contribute to the Community Chest and then give generously.

Remember, too, that polio can strike anyone, any time, any place.

New 3rd March Played By Band

The newly designated official Third Infantry division march was played for the first time last Sunday.

A group of 10,000 football fans, cheerleaders and soldiers, gathered on hand to see the Doughboy-Parris Island, S. C. marine football game, heard the Third division band, under the direction of WOJG Ralph F. Dials, render the rousing march.

The composition, entitled The Washboard Special, was written by Mr. Dials and arranged by Lt. Richard D. Miller, first sergeant of the band.

Mr. Dials said the title was inspired by the band's blue and white diagonal shoulder patch.

No stranger to musical composition, Mr. Dials while on duty last winter with the 10th Army band in Manila, won first prize in the Pacific theater's songwriter's contest.

An Army veteran of 12 years, Mr. Dials saw duty as an infantryman for many years before being transferred to the Eighth Field Artillery band in 1928. Shortly afterwards he left the service to teach music at Warren and McGee high schools in Arkansas and later the Arkansas A & T School of Music, where he was dean of men until reentering the service in 1943.

After going through the war as a member of a heavy mortar outfit, Mr. Dials received a permanent warrant and in 1945 took charge of the 10th Army band in Manila. He held this position until his assignment here last July.

TIC Unit Kitchens To Bake Pastries

Some pastry baking, including short cakes, biscuits, muffins, apple crisp and hot corn bread, will be done in the kitchens of Infantry Center dining halls by unit bakers, 1st Lt. William R. Dixon, food service official, said this week.

This arrangement was made, he said, to enable unit cooks and bakers to keep in practice.

Other baked items such as pies and cakes will still be produced by the Infantry Center pastry bakery.

M-SGT. E. T. CARRIVEAU KEEPS INFANTRY SCHOOL'S BOOKS FROM SAGGING
Also Knows The Percentage Of Left-Handed Enlistees
JUST AVERAGE READER

Data Gathering Simplified By Capable TIS Librarian

Although M-Sgt. Edward T. Carriveau is surrounded by more than 27,000 books each day of the week, he emphasizes the fact that he's only an average reader—not a book worm.

An army veteran of 14 years, Sergeant Carriveau has served in capacities ranging from a rifleman to a company commander. But his present duty, that of an enlisted librarian at the Infantry School's academic library, is possibly the most interesting and unusual.

The library, one of the most complete military history libraries in the country, is used by thousands of student officers and Infantry Center personnel annually.

Working nights and Saturdays on many occasions, he helps students gather material for their outside assignments concerning military history. When a student officer, for example, is told to give a report on a combat problem actually experienced in World War II, the officer will turn to the library's endless file of documents. Sergeant Carriveau, working with the officer, will aid in digging up the complete story of the battle for which the officer is searching.

Sergeant Carriveau is the target of repeated questions, many of which tax his patience. But with a grin, he said it's all in a day's work.

What percentage of enlistees for the next six months will be left-handed?

One might think he would find an answer. But Sergeant Carriveau thumbed through several voluminous almanacs and

The Infantry Center special services' photo hobby shop, closed recently for repairs and renovations, reopened last Friday with improved facilities, special services officials announced this week.

Features of the hobby shop include a studio, print finishing and drying room, chemical mixing room, negative drying room and a combination printing and developing room.

The hobby shop offers instruction in the techniques of film developing, contact printing, photographic enlarging and print finishing.

Instructions are given by Sgt. Ben Zar and include lessons for beginners as well as advanced hobbyists. The entire course of instruction lasts one hour.

Everyone interested, regardless of experience, is welcome at the hobby shop, Sergeant Zar said.

The shop is open Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 8-11 p.m., Wednesdays from 1-11 p.m., and Saturdays, Sundays and holidays from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. The first two hours of each day are devoted to instruction.

IF YOU BUY A NEW 1950 CROSLY REFRIGERATOR during this contest and win one as a prize either in National or Local Contests... you will get a cash refund equal to the retail price of your prize.

JUST FOLLOW THESE SIMPLE RULES—

1. In 50 words or less, write your reason or reasons why we should give you a new Shelvador Refrigerator. Write your reasons in the space provided on the Entry Blank—the red Entry Blank for the Crosley Local Dealer Contest, and the green Entry Blank for the National Contest.
2. Participants may enter both the Crosley Local Dealer Contest and the Crosley National Contest. However, participants may submit only one entry in only one of the Crosley Local Dealer Contests, and the participant may submit only one entry in the Crosley National Contest.
3. Both of the Entry Blanks to be obtained at no cost from Crosley Appliance Dealers. The green Entry Blank for the National Contest may be obtained from any Crosley Dealer. The red Entry Blank from the local Crosley Dealer conducting a local contest.
4. Any resident of the continental United States may complete correct answers of the Crosley Division of the AVCO Manufacturing Corporation, retail dealers of Crosley appliances, their advertising agencies, and their dealers. Contest subject to all Federal, state, and local regulations.
5. All entries on the red Entry Blanks for the Crosley Local Dealer Contest must be delivered before December 1, 1949, to the Crosley Dealer from whom the entry was obtained.
6. All entries on either the red blank for the local contest or the green blank for the national contest that do not meet the above conditions will be discarded. November 30, 1949.
7. Mail or deliver to person your red Entry Blank for the Crosley Local Dealer Contest to the Crosley Dealer from whom the entry blank was obtained. Mail the green Entry Blank for the National Contest to: Entry Blank, Director of Home Economics, Crosley Division, AVCO Manufacturing Corp., 1401 Broadway, Columbus, Ohio.
8. Entries will be judged and prizes will be awarded for originality, clarity and appeal of thought. Judges' decisions will be final. Doubtful prizes will be awarded in case of tie. No entries will be returned. Entries, contents and ideas herein become the property of the Crosley Division, AVCO Manufacturing Corporation.
9. All winners will be notified by mail, phone, or telegram. A list of the winners of the Crosley National Contest will be available upon request from Crosley Division, AVCO Manufacturing Corporation, 1319 Atlantic St., Columbus 25, Ohio, approximately 7-10 months after the close of the contest.

Congratulations are in order for Albarone Table Tennis Doubles' Champions Herb Myatt and Terry Scott. Herb and Terry represented the post in the Third Army tournament at Fort McPherson, Ga., and returned home last week with the doubles' title successfully tucked away.

The Benning team as a whole did all right by the post, coming in second in the total team score. Actually the Doughts were tied for the area championship after regulation play and lost the title by the toss of a coin. Terry Scott and the captain of the winning Fort Bragg, N. C., team tossed a coin to determine by what method the title would be decided. The Fort Bragg man won and elected to play a singles match, defeating Terry 21-16 and 21-14.

Fort Benning's "loyal fans" who came to Doughtboy stadium Sunday to see the Doughts lose were almost disappointed, as the Benningites played their favored opponents an even game for over three periods. Superior reserve power held in the last period and permitted the Devil-Dogs to win by the four touchdown margin they were favored by.

Benning Scatback Lou Barassi brought the estimated 10,000 fans to their feet time and again as he brought back marine punts and kickoffs for huge yardage. Lou put on one of the greatest individual performances ever seen on the stadium turf.

Frank Leahy at Notre Dame has "Six-Yard" Sliko, but Mike Chester at Benning has "41-Yard" Barassi. Amazing as it may seem, that is the average Lou compiled while returning six Parris Island boots. The shortest return Lou made was 29 yards and might have been more had Lou not slipped in avoiding a marine tackler. The longest of the day came when Lou gathered in a kickoff on his own two-yard line and put on a beautiful display of running to go all the way to the Parris Island four-yard line before being knocked out of bounds.

Although Barassi played the outstanding game for the Doughts, other heroes were plentiful. Among them were Len Cameron, tackle, and Steve Rizzatti, guard. Len held his side of the line up so well that the Parris Island team abandoned going through his side as early as the third period. Rizzatti, backing up in the five-man line, repeatedly came in to throw marine backs for large losses.

Another hero in the Benning loss was big Don Hemphill, Dought quarterback, who played a great game despite the fact that he had been on the injured list since the Memphis navy game. Hemphill, unable to move with any great speed, nevertheless tossed both passes that resulted in Doughtboy scores.

The Benningites will try to get into the win column this Sunday at Doughtboy stadium when they entertain the Alabama national guard from Selma. Last year the Doughts managed to pull the game out of the fire in the last 35 seconds and win 14-13. This year the Doughts are stronger and should win by two touchdowns.

Doughts Trampled 41-14; Collapse In Final Period

Fort Benning's Doughtboys, paced by Halfback Lou Barassi, held the favored Parris Island team for three periods last Sunday afternoon only to collapse in the final quarter and permit three marine scores, enabling the Leathernecks to romp to a 41-14 victory.

The crowd of 10,000 fans was on hand to watch the Devil-Dogs put on a powerful ground show that rivaled 303 yards rushing. Gold-jerseyed Backs Len Aloy, Ed Petrevitch and Russ Picton made a shambles of the Doughtboy line for the first time this season. Benning, on the other hand, could not penetrate the marine forward wall for only 57 yards. The Doughts proved superior in the air, as Don Hemphill connected on five of 14 tosses, two going for touchdowns and a third being nullified when the intended receiver fell out of the end zone. The marine failed to connect on two pass attempts.

Lou Barassi, Benning scatback, proved to be the most offensive show for the locals as he returned six kicks for a total of 244 yards.

Scoring started late in the first period of the contest when Ed Petrevitch cut over right tackle and outran the Benning secondary for 15 yards and a score. Russ Mavis added the conversion, and the marine led the quarter, 7-0.

A Fort Benning fumble set up the second exuberant touchdown as John Leroy recovered a fumble by Gale Sult on the Benning 10. After an offside penalty had set the marine back to the 23, Russ Picton pitched out wide to Len Aloy who went all the way to score standing up.

Benning Center Frank McGiboney set up the first local score a few minutes later when he recovered Bob Kaiser's fumble on the Parris Island 25-yard line. Fullback Ken Ward went through center for two yards and then Don Henry cut back and passed to Lou Barassi in the flat on the 20, with Barassi going untouched the rest of the way. Al Constance added the point, and the marine led at halftime, 13-7.

The Devil-Dogs increased their margin to 20-7 by taking the second half kickoff and storming 62 yards on straight power plays clinched by Kaiser's plunge from the two-yard line.

Benning countered by taking the kickoff and driving 68 yards to again come within a touchdown of the marine. The second play came when Hemphill faked back and passed to Gale Sult in the flat on the right side.

will still be hampered by their first line operatives. Among those still on the injured list are Ends Francis Williams and Jim Davis, Tackle George Benck and Guard Jack Elliott.

The Doughts may also be without the services of both first string fullbacks, Jim Parrish and Ken Ward. Parrish has been injured since the Memphis navy game, while Ward suffered a knee injury in the Parris Island encounter. Quarterback Don Hemphill is also on the injured list but may see spot duty along with Benck and Elliott.

Another near capacity crowd was expected, and entertainment will be provided by one of the three Fort Benning bands.

The Doughts put on two of five threats of their own in the last period, but neither resulted in a score. The first came when Lou Barassi returned a marine kickoff from his own three to the Parris Island five for a run of 92 yards. This threat fizzled when Hemphill's pass to Bill Jory was ruled incomplete because Jory caught the ball outside of the end zone. The Doughts came back a few minutes later to march to the 16-yard line, but the game ended before a score could be made.

The Doughts immediately began workouts for their next game, a home battle with the Alabama national guard from Selma on Sunday at Doughtboy stadium. The Guardsmen have always caused the Doughts plenty of trouble, and this week's game should be no exception. Last year the Doughts won in the last 35 seconds by a count of 14-13.

Coach Mike Chester's forces down as John Leroy recovered a fumble by Gale Sult on the Benning 10. After an offside penalty had set the marine back to the 23, Russ Picton pitched out wide to Len Aloy who went all the way to score standing up.

Benning Center Frank McGiboney set up the first local score a few minutes later when he recovered Bob Kaiser's fumble on the Parris Island 25-yard line. Fullback Ken Ward went through center for two yards and then Don Henry cut back and passed to Lou Barassi in the flat on the 20, with Barassi going untouched the rest of the way. Al Constance added the point, and the marine led at halftime, 13-7.

The Devil-Dogs increased their margin to 20-7 by taking the second half kickoff and storming 62 yards on straight power plays clinched by Kaiser's plunge from the two-yard line.

Major's Hounds Top Field At Foxhunter's Convention

Two dogs belonging to Major Edgar S. Perry, supervisor of the Biglerville dining hall, took first place in the two major events of the Georgia Foxhunter's association's annual convention Oct. 10-13 in Thomaston Ga.

The winner of the Georgia field trials event was a two-and-one-half-year-old, white bitch Perry calls Ida. Ida, a breed known as the July hound, won first place in the field trials with 170 points. She received 45 points for hunting, 35 for trials, 35 for speed and drive and 24 for endurance. She beat out the nearest competition by 100 points.

One-hundred and fifty hounds from nearly every state in the nation were entered in the competition.

Winner in the bench show eliminations was Lady, Major Perry's "Derby female." A white bitch, under two years old, she beat out a field of from 50 to 60 entries for looks, poise, conformation and general behavior. She is a cross breed known as the Goodman - July OOPS, IT SLIPPED . . . Marine Fullback Bob Kaiser is about to recover his own fumble as Dough Center Bill DuPriest (50) comes up to try his luck with the loose ball. Other Doughs in the picture are Bob Flacco, tackling Kaiser, Steve Rizotti (61), and Len Canavan (73).

THE MARINES HAVE LANDED . . . Parris Island Star Ed Pritchett reeled off 13 sands in the third period before Ed Pele (23) and George Hill (61) came up for the stop. Also in the picture are Russ Pleton (33), Parris Island quarterback, and Doughboys Bob McClure (82) and Steve Rizotti (on ground).

SIX POINTS AHEAD . . . Len Aloy, Parris Island halfback, races into the Benning end zone after taking a pitout from Russ Pleton. Doughboy Ed Pele (23) makes futile attempt to stop him.

Hospital Team Leads Bowlers In Post League

The Station hospital bowlers jumped off to a good start last week in the Columbus Bowling league got under way.

The Medical lads proved they are going to be tough to beat as they totaled 876 pins for their three games. Advanced class No. 2 team No. 2 was second high with a 821 pinfall.

In the individual series, Samuel Allison of the Station hospital, ranked as high man with a 581, and behind him were Hiram Gaults with 542 and Arthur Cottigier with 539.

E. L. Mueller, of the Tactical department's No. 2 team, achieved the high individual score of the evening, posting a 216.

Jack Sirock of the Airborne Battalion, Student Training regiment and Charles Davis of SER battled Mueller all the way, finishing with 218 and 214 respectively. Standings after the first week of play are as follows:

Local Fisherman Ties for Second In Columbus Meet

Mal Robert R. Malone, Third Infantry division signal officer, tied for second place in the Columbus Sportsmen's club fishing contest held recently.

Major Malone's prize-winning fish was a seven-pound big mouth bass, caught two days before the end of the contest.

His prize was a rod and spinner reel, presented at the club's dinner last Thursday night.

Derby's Biggest Field

The biggest starting field in the Kentucky Derby was in 1928, when 22 horses went to the post. The smallest fields were in 1892, and 1905 when only three horses started.

Midget Gridders to Play Under Arcs Here Tonight

Fort Benning's Midget Doughboys will take the field under the arcs tonight when they meet the powerful Sixteenth Street grammar school of Columbus at 7:30 p. m. in Doughboy stadium.

This will mark the first time in history the Midget Doughboys have appeared under the lights and will also be one of the few regularly scheduled games ever to be played in the stadium.

Although the Midgets will enter the game a two-touchdown underdog, they have an excellent chance to spring an upset.

The last time the two teams met the Sixteenth Street school romped home with a 19-7 victory. Since that game the Midget Doughboys have been planning for the return meeting and planning for an upset.

In the last several weeks the Doughboys have shown vast improvement over the form they displayed in the first meeting with an and 214 respectively. Standings after the first week of play are as follows:

Dough Mentor Samuel Mann has been working overtime this week in an effort to strengthen his defense for the coming contest. The last time the two teams played each other the Doughs showed a weakness for wide end sweeps, and the practice this week has been conducted with the thought of correcting these weaknesses.

The game tonight will mark the fourth attempt by the Midgets to break into the win column without success. Present plans call for half-time entertainment to be supplied by one of the three Fort Benning bands.

Although Coach Mann has not yet revealed his starting lineup, he will probably start the following men:

Tom, Oltarzewski and Sandy at the ends, Jerry Romine and Butch Ziegler at the tackles, Delmar Bean and John Peyton at the guard posts, Jimmy Dunn at the pivot, and Richard Bauguss, Larry Chloripek, Bill Luther and Ace Campbell, in the backfield.

Two Win Tiaras In Woman's Golf

Helen Volckman and Madeline McCormick brought the annual Woman's club golf tourney to a successful close Monday afternoon when they copied first prizes in the two divisions of the tourney.

Helen Volckman won top honors in the 18-hole competition by beating out Irene Curtis, 1-up, after a tough match.

Madeline McCormick had a somewhat easier time as she disposed of Florence Hardgrove by a score of 3-5 to win the nine-hole play.

Following the tournament, both winners and runners-up were presented awards and were guests at a buffet supper at the Country club.

In addition to the presentation of championship awards prizes were distributed to the winners of the month's weekly tournaments.

Negro All-Stars In City Tonight For Exhibition

The greatest Negro baseball attraction ever to appear in the South will be offered to Columbus fans tonight when Jackie Robinson, the Brooklyn Dodgers' National League batting champion, leads his major league all-stars against the mighty Jacksonville Eagles at Golden park.

Joining Robinson will be Dodger Teammates Roy Campanella and Don Newcombe. Newcombe was recently named rookie of the year in the National League.

This trio will be joined by Larry Doby, centerfielder for the Cleveland Indians, who holds the record for hitting some of the longest home runs in the history of the American League. His clout into the centerfield bleachers at Yankee Stadium last summer is the record blow there.

In baseball circles, there is a question as to which is the fleetest of foot Robinson or Doby. Local fans will get an opportunity to decide for themselves on Thursday.

Robinson's all-stars are visiting Columbus as part of an extensive barnstorming trip which began immediately following the World Series. Many engagements had to be canceled since the team has only 30 days in which to barnstorm, according to the major league rules.

2 Women Win In Poker Golf

Mrs. Marge Goss and Mrs. Margi Wilson captured the 18-hole women's tournament in poker golf with two titles in the weekly tournament sponsored by the Woman's club.

The object of the tourney, called a poker hand tourney, is to take the number of strokes for any five holes and try to form a poker hand from them. Experience means nothing in this tourney as it is quite possible for the poorer golfer to win.

Mrs. Goss captured the 18-hole competition by scoring with four "fives" to defeat Mrs. Helen Volckmann, who carded three "fours."

Mrs. Margi Wilson captured the nine-hole event by making three 10's to beat out Mrs. H. H. Walker who finished with three "nines."

Classes Started As Preparation For Maneuvers

The first classes in a school conducted by the 39th Infantry regiment for all officers of the organization began yesterday at Sand Hill.

The purpose of the school is to familiarize officers of the regiment with the organization and employment of separate and attached units in preparation for the forthcoming "Operation Portrex".

Classes are to be held Wednesdays and Fridays, and all officers assigned to the regiment will attend.

Instruction will be given in organization, function and tactics of the following units:

Heavy Mortar company, instructor: Capt. John C. Seabury; Heavy Tank company, C. P. L. Wesley E. Williams; Security and Anti Tank and Mine platoons; Capt. H. B. Williams; Intelligence and Reconnaissance platoon; 1st Lt. William F. Jordan; Counterfire platoon; Capt. Leo B. Sullivan, and Medical company; 1st Lt. H. W. Wilson.

In addition the following subjects will be covered: Field train bivouac and service company; Maj. R. M. Hermann; operations; Capt. Clarence C. Deffen; close support artillery and engineer support, instructor to be announced, and combat supply and administrative order, Maj. R. M. Hermann.

HALFBACK LOU BARASSI... Doughboy of the Week

Doughboy Of The Week Marine Tilt Performance Wins Award for Barassi

Speedy, hard-running Hal Barassi, gets the nod for Doughboy of the Week honors this week.

Diminutive Lou, who tips the scales at 160, accounted for one of Benning's scores in the game against the Parris Island marines last Sunday, and set up opportunities for others via his outstanding running. Receiving a pass from Quarterback Don Hemphill, through the entire marine squad to get in the flat from the Marines' 20. Lou scooted across for Benning's initial score.

Later in the game, on numerous occasions, he sparked the Doughboys offensively in his waning moments with brilliant, elusive running.

In the final period, as both teams were beginning to feel the effects of a hard-played game, Lou gathered in a kick-off on his own goal line and surged through the entire marine squad to get in the open on his own 35 with several would-be tacklers in tow. Straining at every step, he fought his way inches ahead of his opponents, to the marines' five, where he was thrown out of bounds. Unfortunately, the Doughboys failed to capitalize on this gain.

In addition to his running, Lou appeared never to lose an amazing resiliency which brought him bounding in his feet after tackles and blocks that might have staggered men twice his size.

Lou, from Leominster, Mass., starred on a high school team, and later played professional football. While at Benning, he has also played baseball for the 340th Area Service unit diamond nine. In civilian life he drove one of Leominster's fire engines, and now holds down a similar job at Benning's main fire station.

Columbus, Baker Battle For Bi-City Leadership; Devils, Jackets On Road

Columbus high school griders will be the second one this season to make the 1949 Bi-City debut Friday night when they meet the Baker high Lions at Memorial stadium. This contest will be the only football action slated for Columbus this week.

There are two other high school games Friday night, however, as Jordan's Red Jackets meet Boys' Catholic in Augusta and Central's Red Devils tangle with the Valley High Tradersmen at the Valley high field.

At present the Bi-City race is a three-way tie between Baker, Central and Jordan, each having one win and one loss. This makes Friday's contest interesting since the winner will go into undisputed possession of first place in the league ranks.

Neither Baker nor Columbus will enter the fray with a too impressive record for the season's play, but the Blue Imps will hold a slight edge as far as the won and lost column. To date, the Columbus crew has won two, lost four and played two games. Baker's lone victory of the campaign came two weeks ago when the Lions defeated Jordan's Jackets, 7-6, in Baker's only win in seven starts.

In meeting the Valley Tradersmen, Central will be facing a team which has lasted defeat only once this year while checking up six victories. Valley's only game at the hands of the Bay County high of Panama City Fla., Central will enter the game with a season's mark of four and two.

Jordan will be seeking its fifth win of the season against three defeats when it faces the Boys' Catholic Shamrocks. The trip will be the second one this season the Jackets have made to Augusta. The first trip saw them return home with a 12-10 victory over Augusta academy.

Elsewhere in the state's class AA football race, Glynn academy of Brunswick stood alone as the only prep team in Georgia with an unblemished slate thus far this season.

In Region Three, the activity comes Thursday night when top ranking Brown meets O'Keefe, Baker. One other team, Lanier, travels to Miami to meet Miami high, Lanier game Richmond a 27-7 battle Friday and only has to jump Baker to clinch its second straight regional title.

Other contests slated for the weekend include Albany at Moultrie, North Fulton at Gainesville, Rockmart at Rome and Fulton at Russell.

Duty Assignments Changed By Outfit

Several changes in assignment for members of the Infantry School detachment were announced this week.

Pvt. Herbert Holden was transferred from the range detachment to the light aviation section.

Pfc. Ken Speyer was transferred to Company B, the Military Police detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit.

Cpl. Clyde R. Bruce was transferred from special services to the tactical department of the Infantry School.

Unbeaten Fordham-Army Top Game In East

BY JIM GLOANAN AND BOBBY ROBINSON

Lady Luck smiled on our sections last Saturday with the result that we were able to claim 39 wins out of 49 tries. This bit of good luck boosted our year's total to 215 wins and only 69 losses for a season's total of .761.

We are now sticking our necks out again by making the following selections in an effort to better our average as the season draws into the last four weeks of competition.

Although the season is now at the point where all games are tough, the week's top contests appear to be in the East where unbeaten Army risks its streak against a surprisingly potent Fordham team that also boasts an unmarred schedule. Other top games in the East find unbeaten Virginia moving into Philadelphia to battle once-beaten Penn. Georgetown and Villanova, each with one loss, facing each other in Washington, and Rutgers making its bid for the Middle States title in a battle with Lafayette at Bethlehem.

THE EAST
Trinity over Amherst—The Lord jets, despite the power they have shown this season, should yield to the Hilltoppers this Saturday.

Army over Fordham—Earl Blaik may have to keep his first string in a little longer than he plans against the Scarlet in Rams.

Boston College over Clemson—The Tigers from South Carolina will be up against a rugged night of Eagles this week. Boston University over Temple —The Owls suffered another defeat last week at the hands of Michigan State, and it looks as though this will be a repeat performance.

Bowdoin over Maine—Two of the outstanding teams in the small college league of New England will battle it out in this, but the once-defeated Polar Bear should take it.

Brown over Yale—The Bulldogs will growl in vain against a mighty hefty Brown Bear this Saturday.

Colgate over Holy Cross—The Red Raiders should take the Crusaders in this one.

Dartmouth over Columbia—Poor Lou Little will find it difficult when the Indians take the field against the Light Blue.

Cornell over Syracuse—The Orangemen, game fighters when outclassed, will be taking on more than they can handle against the Big Red.

Villanova over Georgetown—A mighty Wildcat team shouldn't have too much trouble with the boys from Washington. Princeton over Harvard—Another game in which the rivalry is tremendous even so the Tigers might should prove superior.

Penn over Virginia—The Cavaliers should lose their status as an unbeaten team when they face the Quakers this Saturday.

THE SOUTH
Auburn over Mississippi State—The Tigers played well last week, as they have all season, and should prove more than a match for the Maroons.

Duke over Wake Forest—The Blue Devils will meet a powerful team this week, but should win.

Florida over Georgia—The Gators will be pointing for his one and should take it, although it will be one of the closest games of the week. Last Saturday the Bulldogs resigned themselves to a 14-7 whipping by Alabama, and in view of this we give the nod to the boys from Florida.

Tennessee over Georgia Tech—The week's Cho Cho and Co. fell the lash of the Vols' mighty whip, and this Saturday Coach Bobby Dodd will be sweating it out in vain.

Kentucky over Xavier—The Wildcats, a hot and cold team, should stay lukewarm long enough to pocket this one.

Louisiana State over Vanderbilt—The Commodores, a highly rated team should bow to the Bayou Bengal aggregation that has started many this year with its unmarred record.

George Washington over Maryland—Another very close battle that will be decided by the nod should go to the Presidents.

Mississippi over Chattanooga—The Rebels should be able to rest up their first line of offense in this one.

North Carolina over Williams and Mary—Maybe were slicing New Carolina's defense along with Snavely's Folies, but we'll give 'em one more chance.

W. M. I. over Davidson—Two of the nation's most promising defeated teams will battle it out in this one.

Washington and Lee over V.P.I.—The Generals should smear the Gobblers.

Illinois over Indiana—The Hoosiers should suffer again at the hands of a powerful Illinois group.

Missouri over Iowa—One of the outstanding games of the day. The Golden Gobblers get the nod since they just can't lose three in a row.

Kansas over Nebraska—The federal government did it in 1980 and that's enough for us—the Jayhawkers to take this one.

Marquette over North Carolina—How these two ever got mixed up together is a mystery to us, but the Hilltoppers should walk off with the game.

Michigan over Purdue—We're counting on Masterminds Costerbean to unveil a little more of his Wolverine craftiness this week against an unpredictable Boilermaker crowd.

Notre Dame over Michigan State—Why waste words? Northwest over Wisconsin—Another good game in the West, but the Badgers should drop one to the Wildcats here.

Ohio State over Pittsburgh—The Buckeyes should take this in spite of the power PH showed against the Quakers last Saturday.

Rice over Arkansas—The Owls, tied for the championship in the Southwest conference, should enhance the Texas lead this week.

Baylor over Texas—The Longhorns have disappointed us once to often this year, so our choice goes to the Bears.

Hardin-Simmons over Loyola—The Cowboys should be able to rest up a little this Saturday.

Sergeant Scores 100 In Regimental School
M-Sgt. John C. Blackwell, 19th Infantry regiment, received a letter of commendation from his regimental commander, Col. Dennis M. Moore, citing an excellent score he attained in the regiment's recent noncommissioned officers course.

Out of a class of 68, Sergeant Blackwell, with a score of 100 won top rating.

Southern Methodist over Texas A & M—The Mustangs, sparked by Okey Doak, should be able to stamp all over the Aggies.

Texas Tech over Texas Western—This battle between two Lone Star squads should end in a victory for the Red Raiders.

California over Washington State—The Golden Bears over the Cougars as the sun-kissed boys romp along on their merry way to the Rose Bowl.

Oregon over Washington—The tall timber will echo to a mighty battle this Saturday as these close rivals slug it out, but the Webfoots should take it.

Oregon State over Idaho—The Beavers shouldn't have too much trouble against the Vandals this week.

Southern Cal over Stanford—The Indians, slowly climbing back toward their pedestal of other years, still aren't strong enough to take on the Trojans.

Sets League Records
Although Fred Merkle of the New York Giants is best remembered because he forgot to touch second in a game against the Cubs in 1908, he also set a National League record for most runs-batted-in in one inning with six.

Starts on Right Foot
Jim Shepherd, who had never pitched in his life, threw a 6-hit game the first time he went to mound. Pitching for his high school team in Mexico, M. O. against Missouri Military academy, he struck out 14 men and earned a 2-1 victory for his team.

Officer-Students Pause To See Demonstrations

More than 500 student officers from the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., paused in their high-level schoolwork last week to visit the Infantry Center.

Along with the students from all branches of service as well as several foreign countries came the school's commandant, Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy, accompanied by Maj. Gen. Roscoe Woodruff, deputy commandant of the First Army, Brig. Gen. Harlan N. Hartness, assistant commandant of the school, and Brig. Gen. Cornelius A. Ryan, Pennsylvania military district commander.

The visitors got during their three-day tour a first-hand glimpse of the world-famed Infantry School demonstrations. The first day they saw the mad minute, preceded by a display of infantry weapons. Everything from the M-1 rifle to the 90mm armed M-26 tank was demonstrated before the combined fury of all infantry weapons was unleashed simultaneously.

They also saw the infantry-artillery-tank team in attack. With the accent on unity, the display graphically showed the effectiveness of combined tank and infantry strength.

Their tour was climaxed with the battalion in defense problem. The army, navy and air force students, ranking from captain to colonel, saw a typical infantry battalion pinned down by an imaginary enemy's firepower. With the fury of a maddened wasp, heavy artillery pieces began to pump high explosive shells into the hilltop enemy position. Machineguns, mortars and rifles joined the earth-shaking barrage to render the enemy helpless.

Overhead, F-84 jet fighter planes from Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Ga., circled. One by one the bomb-laden jets dived on the target and released their lethal explosive. The second pass over the target—this time with rockets. Then they passed a third time, firing a deadly spray of machinegun bullets.

Police and Prison Officer Cited for Outstanding Duty

Capt. Marshall E. Bullock, Fort Benning police and prison officer, received an Infantry Center certificate of achievement last week from Lt. Col. A. B. Welsh, post provost marshal, for "outstanding performance and attention to duty through the period of April, 19, 1947, to Sept. 30, 1949."

The certificate, signed by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general of the Infantry Center, was presented to Captain Bullock at a ceremony in Colonel Welsh's office.

The citation read in part: "As police and prison officer, you have through untiring effort and devotion... performed duties relegate to you in a superior manner. The interest you have displayed in your work... your advanced features than over, including the new Crosley car with CIDA (cast iron) Block and Hydraulic (duplex type hydraulic) Brakes. Just look at these new, equivalent low price!

Captain Bullock has been police and prison officer since April, 1947. He has "had nearly every job in the military police setup at Fort Benning."

With over 30 years service in the army, Captain Bullock received his commission in 1943 while serving in Alaska with the Fourth Infantry division.

During World War II, Captain Bullock served overseas with the Fifth Infantry regiment as an enlisted man.

As an instructor at the Provost Marshal School, Fort Custer, Mich., in 1944, Captain Bullock trained future military policemen.

In presenting the award, Colonel Welsh added to it his personal congratulations to Captain Bullock.

Commandant Lauds Value Of Quarterly

The Infantry School quarterly, a magazine devoted to the infantry, its doctrines and latest techniques, received praise this week from Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commandant of the Infantry School.

General Burress called the quarterly a "valuable addition to every infantryman's library".

The Infantry School Quarterly is a more complete publication which succeeded the Mailing List, semi-annual official publication of the Infantry School prior to World War II.

The subscription list of the Mailing List included thousands of infantrymen throughout the army. Two years ago it became the Infantry School Quarterly.

Individual copies of the Quarterly are on sale at the Infantry Center's book department and subscriptions are accepted there, book department officials said.

By PAT MURPHY

There's one thing that can be said for the 33rd Transportation Battalion's troop information and education program—it's realistic and unique.

Lt. James Ivy, the unit's information and education officer, has attacked, to some extent, the long-winded lectures during the weekly troop information program sessions. Being a realistic man, and one who immediately sets his audience at ease with an affable approach, the husky officer has altered the conventional talkative "fire-and-brimstone" lecture.

Last week, Lieutenant Ivy tested his radical idea, never before used at the Infantry Center.

With more than 50 men in his audience, Lieutenant Ivy introduced Cpl. Morgan E. Moore, speaker for the session. Corporal Moore, recently returned from Europe, gave an informal description of the German occupation soldiers know. He covered, in an extremely interesting manner, the most pertinent points of American occupation duty in Germany.

Corporal Moore told his audience that the food and housing in the American sector is excellent. The morale of soldiers is high, he said. Post exchange services and facilities are generally better than those in the United States, tours are available to men on furlough, and German orchestras have learned American music well enough to be hired for servicemen's dances.

This, the first part of Lieutenant Ivy's program, had left the audience highly satisfied. His plan was working.

In the doorway, where the weekly meetings are held, the information and education officer had built a mock mayor's office. Looking as ordinary as possible, the office contained the usual elements of a city head's office—desk, chairs, ashtrays and typewriters. The props were to be used in a skit illustrating corrupt political city governments.

Sitting at the large desk with his feet casually propped on the top was the head man, Mayor I. Take Grant. Stuck haphazardly in his slanted mouth was a large, torpedo-sized cigar. As the egotistical-looking mayor reclined lazily in his overstuffed chair, his secretary, and body guard on some occasions, read a comic book. The mayor, played by Pvt. Frederick J. Nothoff, and the School Teacher Shortage Cited

A sudden upsurge in enrollment at the Fort Benning Children's school has created a necessity for two additional teachers, Peter E. Wilkin, principal, announced this week.

At present, Mr. Wilkin said, vacancies exist for a sixth and a seventh grade teacher, but indications are that the number of first, second and third grade teachers will have to be increased soon.

To be considered for either of the positions now open, the principal said, an applicant must hold either a bachelor of arts or bachelor of science degree or the equivalent of either. Two years of teaching experience and possession of a state teacher's certificate also are required.

Applicants must be available at the Children's school, and additional information regarding the vacancies may be obtained from Mr. Wilkin.

3rd Battalion Officers Assigned New Duties

Two changes in officer assignments in the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, were announced last week.

Lt. James P. Cavit was transferred from Company K to Headquarters company, while Lt. Joseph L. Irwin transferred from Headquarters company to Company K.

Hoover's Six Reasons

Welfare Support Logic is Outlined

EDITOR'S NOTE: In an article prepared for This Week magazine, Ex-President Herbert Hoover explains the necessity for individuals to support welfare agencies which are sincere in their efforts to accomplish benevolent missions. The article written by Mr. Hoover is reprinted here in the hope that it will make clear the need for private solicitation by services which benefit from Community Chest funds.

Reprinted from THIS WEEK magazine, Copyright 1949 by the United Newspapers Magazine corporation.

By HERBERT HOOVER

We have seen a steady expansion of government into welfare activities. I am not criticizing the expansion of government aid to public welfare. It has a place in American life—provided the cloak of welfare is not used as a disguise for Karl Marx. But paralleled with this expansion, we have stupendous taxation to support the hot and cold war. That makes it difficult for the citizens to support voluntary welfare agencies. It requires more personal sacrifice than ever before.

From all this, many citizens ask themselves: for what reasons must we continue to support the voluntary agencies? Why not let the government do it all?

The first short answer to this question is that you cannot retire from the voluntary field if you wish our American civilization to survive. The essence of our self-government lies outside of political government. Ours is a voluntary society. The fabric of American life is woven around our tens of thousands of voluntary associations. That is, around our churches, our professional societies, our women's organizations, our business, our labor and farmers' associations—and not least, our charitable institutions. That is the very nature of American life. The inspirations of progress spring from these voluntary agencies, not from government bureaus, this civilization would be over. Something neither free nor noble would take its place.

The second answer to this question is that it is our privately supported and managed hospitals and educational institutions that establish the standards for similar governmental agencies. It is the voluntary institutions which are the spur of official progress. Without them, our governmental healing and educational agencies would lag and degenerate.

The third answer to this question is that morals do not come from government. No government agency can create and sustain a system of morals. Even when private charities are not working specifically in the religious field, their works confirm religious faith and morals.

There is a fourth answer. Governments and bureaucracies cannot build character in our youth. With the brutalization which results inevitably from war, character—building has never been as necessary as it is today. Many private welfare organizations are, directly or indirectly helping build character. Some, for example, support the development of sports in our youth. The ethics of good sportsmanship are second only to religious ethics.

There is a fifth answer. The greatest and, in fact, the only impulse to social progress is the spark of altruism in the individual human being. "But the greatest of these is charity" has been a religious precept from which no civilized people can depart without losing its soul. Governments practice charity solely because it rises from that spark in the hearts of our people. The day when altruism in the individual dies from lack of opportunity for expression must be formal, statistical and dead, charity by government in its real sense—from the heart.

There is a sixth reason. The world is in the grip of a death struggle between the philosophy of Christ and that of Hegel

Appointed TIC Chief of Staff

Col. C. H. Karlstad, formerly of the Infantry Center's inspector general department, was this week named chief of staff for the Infantry Center.

Orientation Visit Ends On Saturday

Sixty-one guests of Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson, the joint chiefs of staff of the armed forces and their civilian bosses left Fort Benning last Saturday afternoon following an inspiring two-day series of demonstrations designed to show that the infantry still plays a vital role in the nation's front-line defense.

Division Elements Parade Tomorrow

Units of the Third Infantry division are scheduled to participate in an Armistice day parade to be held in Columbus tomorrow morning.

The colorful parade regalia of the Third division troops will combine with representatives of veterans and social organizations in Columbus to commemorate the ending of World War I. Under the command of Lt. Col. R. M. Blanchard, commanding officer of the First battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, units from the Third division will include the First battalion of the 15th Infantry, 39th Field Artillery, 3rd Reconnaissance company, 3rd Quartermaster company, 3rd Ordnance company and 3rd Signal company.

Fort Benning will observe an Armistice Day holiday tomorrow, and all personnel not engaged in necessary administrative work or details will be excused from duty.

The visiting dignitaries, who made up the fifth of a series of joint orientation conferences, left here impressed not only with up-to-date infantry methods and equipment but with the caliber of commissioned and enlisted personnel charged with the implementation of tactical innovations and the handling of new weapons.

Guests of the conference, which was conducted by the Defense department as part of the vast program aimed at unification of the armed forces, included industrial, professional, educational and religious leaders, as well as high-ranking government officials.

The orientation tour of the Infantry Center started Friday morning and ended shortly after noon Saturday.

First of the dignitaries to arrive at Lawson airforce base was Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, chief of staff of the airforce, who stepped from a B-17 bomber about 9 a.m. to take a 17-minute salute and inspect a guard of honor made up of troops of the Third Infantry division.

A few minutes later the plane carrying Secretary of Defense Johnson, Secretary of the Navy Francis Matthews, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and Vice Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, newly appointed chief of naval operations, taxied up in front of the Lawson operations office.

Arriving in their own planes were Gen. C. B. Cates, commander of the Marine corps, and Secretary of Air W. Stuart Symington.

Jr., commanding general of Third Army, and Lt. Gen. Charles Foulke, chief of staff of the Canadian army, completed the entourage.

All guests were welcomed upon arrival by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, and Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry Division.

From Lawson field the high-ranking civilian and military visitors went in a convoy to Hook range where they witnessed an impressive show of infantry firepower, climaxed by the renowned "mad minute" where all the weapons included in a reinforced infantry battalion are fired simultaneously for approximately 60 seconds. Infantry School demonstration troops and elements of the 15th Infantry regiment were used in the exercise.

The firing demonstration was followed by luncheon at the Officers' club, and in the afternoon the group toured the Airborne department of the Infantry School. After seeing the preliminaries a soldier must go through to become a paratrooper, the guests witnessed an actual drop, during which three C-52 (Flying Boxcar) loads of men parachuted to the ground.

Secretary Johnson returned to Washington, D. C., about 2:30 p. m. Friday morning. He will be in the infantry fire-power exercise. Although Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray and Army Chief of Staff Gen. J. Lawton Collins were not present for the first two phases of the conference, they arrived late Friday afternoon, and were on the program of speakers at a reception in the Officers' club that evening.

Army Staff Chief Returns to Benning

The army's chief of staff, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, returned to Fort Benning yesterday for a brief inspection tour of the post.

The recently-appointed army chief of staff visited the Infantry Center last week with other top Department of Defense officials and 70 civilian leaders of industry, business and education, returned at the invitation of Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander.

Officials have announced that General Collins will inspect Third Infantry division units this morning with Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third division, as guide and host.

General Collins will return to Washington this afternoon. He will be in the infantry fire-power exercise.

Secretary Johnson returned to Washington, D. C., about 2:30 p. m. Friday morning. He will be in the infantry fire-power exercise. Although Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray and Army Chief of Staff Gen. J. Lawton Collins were not present for the first two phases of the conference, they arrived late Friday afternoon, and were on the program of speakers at a reception in the Officers' club that evening.

Bradley had taken time during one of the breaks to chat with a group of veteran Benning non-coms).

Also on the list of speakers was General Foulke, who discussed the interchanging of Canadian and U. S. students in army brief inspection tour of the post.

Spokesman for the civilian guests at the reception was Eudocio R. Lovell, president of the Calumet and Hecla Consolidated Copper company, Calumet, Mich., who lauded the demonstrations and the manner in which members of the conference had been received at Benning.

Leading off on the agenda for Saturday morning was breakfast at the Officers' club, which was followed by a review of massed troops of the Third division of French Polo field.

Prior to the parade, General Clarkson briefly outlined the composition of his division, and with the aid of diagrams, told of the record since it was reactivated here last December.

The division commander then invited Secretary Gray to stand beside him in the reviewing line while the components of Third marched by the music of the Third division band.

Following the parade, the guests were taken to the Officers' club for a piece of equipment used by the division.

SHOWMEN RECEIVE COMMENDATION . . . Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, left, Infantry Center commander, recently presented letters of commendation from Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third Army commander, to these two men for their performance in the army show, Takabreak, which played at Benning several months ago. The men, both of the 15th Infantry regiment, are Pvt. Lee R. Davis, center, and Pfc. Melvin W. Ellis.

Reserve, Guard Officers to Visit

For the next six months the Infantry School will be the site of visits by civilian component instructors.

Twelve officers have already been notified to report here for a week's refresher course. They are Capt. James W. Cain, Lt. Col. Clarence T. Thompson, Lt. Schwenk,

30th Infantry Officers Given RA Appointments

Two officers of Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 30th Infantry regiment, recently received notification of their appointment as second lieutenant in the regular army.

They are 1st Lt. Robert S. Roberts, information and education and special services officer of the regiment, and 1st Lt. William P. Jordan, platoon leader of the intelligence and reconnaissance platoon of Headquarters and Headquarters company.

At a graduate of Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, Lieutenant Roberts entered the army in January, 1943, and graduated from Officers' Candidate School four months later.

At the end of the war Lieutenant Roberts was transferred to the 381st Infantry regiment of the 9th Army, where he served as a platoon leader and later executive officer of Cannon company of this unit. He saw action in the Northern France, Ardennes, Rhineland and Central Europe campaigns and received the Combat Infantry badge and Bronze Star medal.

This Man Died for You

The following words are excerpts from a speech by General Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, delivered at funeral services on Memorial Day, 1948, at Longmeadow, Massachusetts, for Corporal Edward G. Wiltan, a rifleman of the 45th Infantry Division, who was killed April 10, 1948, east of the Siegfried Line. We find these words especially applicable for Armistice Day.

"Here on the top green meadows of this tranquil New England town, we have come to do honor—not alone to one brave soldier—but to the generations of earnest young men who left their homes to defend them at Concord, Ansbach, San Juan, the Argonne, and in the snows of the Ardennes.

"For as long as free men have lived, worked, worshipped, and reared their families under these elms, so long have their sons been summoned to arms against those who would oppress or destroy them. To generation after generation they have been forced to quit these quiet homes in this peaceful valley to fight and sometimes to die in conflicts visited upon them by issues remote from their everyday lives.

"From the chancelleries of London, Paris, Berlin, Rome, Tokyo, and Moscow, those bitter struggles that have scarred the progress of all mankind eventually spanned the seas to invade the snug parlours and warm kitchens of these colonial homes. And as these world struggles have wasted the youth and resources of nations, they have also left behind them sorrowing women and empty chairs in the houses on this green.

"It is easy for us who are living to honor the sacrifices of those who are dead. For it helps us to assuage the guilt we should feel in their absence.

"In our hatred and reprobation of war, we must not forget that the roots of conflict flourish in the faults and failures of those who seek peace just as surely as they take shape from the diseases and designs of aggressors.

"While the American people have within themselves the moral strength, the power and wisdom to marshal their forces against aggression in whatever form it affects, we cannot feign innocence through indifference or neglect of struggles that bring on war.

"We have suffered enough in two world wars to know that non-involvement in peace means certain involvement in war. "Either we shall employ our strength, power, and conscience boldly and righteously in defense of human dignity and freedom or we shall waste those reserves for peace and default to the forces that breed new wars.

"If the United States ever again stoops to expedients to avoid the difficult decisions that come with leadership, the heavy burdens that come with defense, we shall once more run the dangers of all halfway measures and waste our strength and conscience as a weathervane rather than a force.

"It is we, using from the necessity of meeting issues boldly with principle, resolution and strength, then we shall hurdle seeking inoffensive solutions, dragging the nation with an illusion of security which under those conditions cannot exist. If we are to scamp for crisis to crisis, fixing principles and policies to the change of each day we shall place ourselves supinely and helplessly at the mercy of any aggressor who might play on our public opinion and decimate our forces at will.

"To live bravely by convictions from which the free peoples of this world can take heart, the American people must put their faith in stable long range policies—political, economic, and military—programs that will not be heated and cooled with the brightening and waning of tension.

"The United States has matured to world leadership; it is time we steered by the stars, not by the lights of each passing ship."

Acheson Orders Recall of Czech Consul

NATIONAL AFFAIRS . . . Secretary of State Dean Acheson ticked off the red governments of Czechoslovakia and China last week. The State department told the Czechs to recall two of its diplomats and the consul general in New York. He also decried the Chinese reds' flimsy pretense for preventing the return of U. S. military attaché in China to the U. S. . . . Vice-president Alben Barkley, 71, is scheduled to marry 38-year-old Mrs. Jane Bradley. The announcement came as no surprise—but it's official now . . . J. Parnell Thomas, former rough and tumble chairman of the house un-American activities committee, is still pleading ill health as the reason he can't stand trial in a federal court on charges of padding his congressional payroll.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS — Paul Hoffman, Marshall plan administrator, went to Paris last week and told a meeting of participating countries that unless Europe pulls itself together by June, 1952, when the plan expires, what success the Marshall plan has had will turn into failure. Indications are that this is a full order for the confused Europeans . . . Czech judges say that only 30 to 40 persons are able to escape into the American zone daily. Communists have lightened all exits and seized the remaining family of those who escape and send them to labor camps. Escapees are tried "in absentia" and sentenced to death. About the same technique the Nazis used when they took over Czechoslovakia . . . Some British officials feel that the fact the Russians possess the atom bomb should not be too alarming. They say Russia still hopes for an economic collapse of the West to win their world revolution for them . . . The United Nations is still trying to reach a compromise agreement for international control of atomic manufacture. The Russian plan and the Western plan are still clanging pot, and it appears nothing will change it . . . France has at last established a government. Georges Bidault, premier, formed the cabinet and won a vote of confidence in the assembly, 367 to 183. He will now have to try to postpone elections and keep his supporters in the assembly.

STATE OF THE STATES — New York's mayor William O'Dwyer, has been reelected. His Republican opponent, Newbold Morris, made several errors in his campaigning. Among them was an accusation that O'Dwyer had done nothing about the slums. Morris seemed shocked, as though he hadn't known they were there before. As Mayor O'Dwyer said, "I live in them." More publicity came the mayor's way when brunette Sloan Simpson was linked with him. Vice-Marcantonio, American Labor party congressman and follower of the Moscow line, was also in the race but was not taken seriously. On one of his public appearances, Marcantonio complained that someone threw old cantaloupes at him . . . In Alabama, 18 men were indicted for Ku Klux Klan beatings and crossburnings. At the trial, however, nobody seemed to care much except County Solicitor Emmett Perry who, when the verdict of not guilty was rendered, said, "Someone once said . . . It takes 100 years to do anything worth doing. We hope . . . to better that."

Report from Washington

Veterans' Bonus Bill Has Top Priority

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Legislation providing for payment of a bonus to veterans of World War II is expected to be brought up by the house veterans' committee early next year. The bill, heading the committee's legislative calendar, calls for "adjusted compensation" for veterans at the rate of $3 per day for continental service and $4 per day for time spent overseas. Maximum payment to an unrounded veteran would be $4,900, with an additional $500 for holders of the Purple Heart.

Field commanders are being cautioned against waste and inefficiency in administration of non-appropriated welfare funds in order to avoid curtailment of welfare activities as much as possible as a result of declining PX receipts. New army-airforce PX and commissary regulations provide for restrictions in lists of items carried for sale and operation in areas where commercial stores are convenient and offer merchandise at reasonable prices.

In order to permit maximum Christmas leave, the army has authorized suspension of training at 21 installations from December 22 to January 4, 1950, both dates inclusive.

President Truman has signed legislation authorizing expansion of armed forces facilities for research in supersonic aircraft and guided missiles. The expansion program includes construction of an air-engineering development center.

The army has made the revised grade numbering system used in the career compensation act official for all purposes. First and master sergeants now belong to grade E-7 instead of grade 1.

Airforce policy for future barracks construction is to provide more privacy for the individual through use of sleeping cubicles accommodating not over four men, each equipped with its own lavatory facilities. Living quarters, mess halls and dayrooms will be under one roof. Mobilization-type barracks will be converted to the cubicle plan wherever practicable.

Special handling of efficiency reports of army enlisted personnel under the career plan who are about to be transferred or discharged from a unit has been ordered by the army. Under the new system, the efficiency report will be forwarded to the central computing unit ten days prior to transfer or discharge. The computing unit will score the individual at once, furnishing his score to his unit so that it may be entered on his qualification card (form 20) before he leaves.

President Truman recently vetoed legislation authorizing federal payment of up to $1,000 toward purchase of automobiles for handicapped World War II veterans on the ground the bill would create inequities and lead to abuses. A previous enacted bill granting paraplegic autos remains effective.

Third Stage of Development Is Happiness

BY CHAPLAIN SILAS L. WEEMS
We would rather think of religion in terms of personal joys and privileges rather than the costs and efforts required on our part. We would rather think of our rights as American citizens rather than our responsibilities in helping to make a better country.

These are three stages through which an individual or a nation ought to develop, and when we are able to arrive at the third stage and accept it, we enter into a joyous and happy life.

First is the training and growing period in which we are dependent upon the home, church and school for support, direction and information in shaping our lives.

The time comes when we get what we think of as our independence and must make choices affecting us and others. We cannot live long before we discover we are not free to do as we please unless what we please to do is in the interest of the group. One freedom or independence is the freedom to do as we ought. A man is free when he sees what he ought to do, loves what he sees, and has the power to do it.

Next we find we are not wholly dependent on others, nor entirely independent, but instead we are dependent on others in many ways and they in turn are dependent upon us.

There are many rights, opportunities, conveniences and privileges we share as American citizens, and as members of a Christian nation. We can share these in them and, as we enjoy them, may we do our part in making it easier for others.

To Amuse ON THE BOOKSHELF You Today

In Russia they say: "A rube and his rubles are soon parted."

The going was rough. The ship was rolling in the rough sea. A seaman apprentice, making his first voyage, was hanging over the rail. Another member of the crew approached him in a hurry and asked, "Is the captain up?"

TALKS OF HORROR AND THE SUPERNATURAL BY ARTHUR MACHEN. ALFRED A. KNOPF, NEW YORK, PUBLISHER

You've turned a corner in a busy city for the first time, and when you see the buildings and the people, you know you have seen them before. You wonder a little at life and if you really know what you are. You see a country scene, a church steeple, a farm house hidden by a grove of trees. There is something familiar about it, but you've never been there before. It is a strange feeling, an awesome feeling.

What is there in life we don't know about? Are there really other lives we have lived? Are there strange associations we only dream about?

Suppose you turned a corner and saw something inhuman, yet like you. Something horrible, yet you feel akin to it. Something unholy, yet gives you a thrill of unearthly ecstasy.

Ghost stories? Perhaps. But the overly sensitive should not read Arthur Machen's book.

Poe was the great American horror writer of the nineteenth century. Arthur Machen delved beyond the horrors of Poe to more monstrous imaginings of supernatural and primordial beings. Here in this book we turn the corner and see the unknown but somehow familiar. We come face to face with the "Great God Pan" and our minds travel along weird paths. We meet the "Children of the Pool" and at the end "The Terror."

All 14 tales in this book are calculated to open for you a world that only the mad dream of.

But yet, as a demonstration of the writing ability of Mr. Machen, some of them have social significance and warning. One of them, a tale well known, is "The Bowmen." The story of the "Angel of Mons," the ghostly bowmen of St. George of Agincourt who came to the aid of the beleaguered British in the World War I battle of Mons, is retold by Arthur Machen. There are today many who will swear that it happened.

The ordinary obscurities we read about in the papers are nothing compared to what humans do in these tales.

The only comparable author, an American writer, H. P. Lovecraft, is little known in America, but it is easy to trace the evolution of the horrors of Machen's Welsh land in England to the New England states of America. It is as though Machen drove them to our land by exercising literature.

If you are alone at night and you feel a desire for the strange, Arthur Machen's tales will suit you. The Libraries at Fort Benning do not contain any of the works of Lovecraft, but it is enough for the curious and imaginative that Machen's works are available.

BRILLIANT PERFORMANCE... Igor Gorin, one of the dominant figures on the concert stage today, appeared at the Fort Benning Community Concert association's series for the 1949-50 season. The combination of a thrilling voice with strong interpretive powers, an interesting program, plus a dramatic stage personality, captivated his audience and won for him unanimous enthusiastic acclaim.

Igor Gorin Inspires Audience In First Concert of Season

Igor Gorin, a top name in the fields of concert, radio and opera, opened the Fort Benning Community concert season last Monday night at the Main Theater, with an outstanding performance, which corroborated all that has been said or written about him. The scope of his talent was evident from the opening strains of "Ah, quanto evero" by Cesti, his first number. Not only did he delight his audience with the virility and sweep of tones in his voice, but captivated them personally with his dramatic stage personality.

His first group, which included "Brother Worship" by Handel and "La Danza" by Rossini, was followed by selections by Schubert and Strauss. In introducing "Reverie of the Young Peasant" from "The Fair at Sorochinsk" by Moussorgsky, Gorin said "this is a beautiful aria from one of his famous operas, and is one of the most tender and most beautifully written. Debussy was influenced by the writings and beautiful dynamics of Moussorgsky."

Particularly delightful was his presentation of a Ukrainian folk song "The Drunkard." For one of his encores Mr. Gorin chose to do a nursery rhyme "Sing a Song of Sixpence," which Gilbert Hay Malotte had made into a classic.

Another encore which delighted the audience was "Brother and Sister John," written by a young ex-GI who is now writing symphonies. None but the most popular of all Tschalkowsky's songs, and "Caucasian Melody" the first of Igor Gorin's compositions, completed the fifth group of the program.

His first composition originated in Hollywood in 1936, when a special song was needed for the Hollywood Hotel program. Mr. Gorin seated himself at the piano and started improvising. The manager of the program asked him what he was playing, and Mr. Gorin explained it was something he was writing. He sang it over the air, and two days later, a publisher.

Patton House Officers' Club Scene of Divarty Luncheon

The Patton House Officers' club was the scene of a luncheon for the divarty ladies last week, with over 70, including guests, gathered for their monthly luncheon.

Hostesses were Mrs. Orlando Troxel, Mrs. W. J. Rieck, Mrs. T. W. Eakin and Mrs. E. O. Carlson.

Children of Third Infantry division artillery units hung from the rafters in the back of the main table.

Centering the main table was a large pumpkin on red wheels, drawn by six black plastic frames, decked with red ribbon harness and reins. The stagecoach was laden with fall fruit, and a miniature driver completed the realistic display.

Leading from the centerpiece were sprigs of ivy centered with small cut bouquets of mums, these individual sprigs being artistically arranged between several bouquets of harvest colored chrysanthemums. Place cards also carried out the autumn fruit motif.

There were 20 ladies attending from the Ninth Field Artillery battalion, 13 from the 99th Armored 14 from the 39th, 11 from the 41st and 13 from divarty headquarters.

Battalion commanders' wives present were Mrs. Clyde L. Jones representing the 99th, Mrs. H. G. Sparrow, 41st, Mrs. Orlando Troxel, divarty headquarters, Mrs. Thomas Arnold, Ninth, and Mrs. Harold L. Brown, 99th.

Mrs. Roland P. Shugg, wife of the division artillery commander, made announcements and welcomed the following new members to the group: Mrs. J. A. Futch, Mrs. Kenneth Speas, Mrs. E. S. Revego, Mrs. Douglas Knowlton, Mrs. W. F. Britton, Mrs. E. Bonnell, Mrs. Edwin E. Carlson, Mrs. R. T. Kimbrel. Among the guests.

Army Daughters Hold Luncheon

The Army Daughters club held its November luncheon meeting in the Palm room and East lounge of the Officers' club Monday, with Mrs. John D. Coia as hostess.

Mrs. J. Staden Bradley accepted the office of honorary president of the club at the short business meeting which followed the luncheon.

Guests attending were Mrs. Ernesting Gilbert who is attending visiting her daughter Mrs. Bruce Palmer, Jr., Miss Mary Louise Byrd and Mrs. Catherine C. Barber, who is visiting her sister Mrs. John S. Oppenheimer. Approximately 33 members of the Army Daughters group attended.

Announcement has been made by Army Daughters of a party to be held tonight at 8 p.m. at the Officers' club. Games will be played and prizes awarded.

OM Personnel Guests at Dinner

Lt. Col and Mrs. Stanley H. Patridge were hosts at a get-together dinner party for Third Infantry division quartermaster officer personnel and their wives Oct. 29.

The dinner table, set on the back porch of the Officers' club, was centered with a large bouquet of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, with ivy runners leading to smaller bouquets at each end of the table. Tall yellow tapers in individual candleholders provided a mellow candlelighting effect.

Those attending were Lt. Col and Mrs. Patridge, Maj. and Mrs. J. A. Rulovich, Maj. and Mrs. F. P. Sweeney, Capt. and Mrs. Signum Shiff, and Mrs. M. J. Smith, Lt. and Mrs. K. A. Tomberlin, Lt. and Mrs. C. F. Haug and Lt. B. C. Yarbrough.

Six tables of bridge were in play following luncheon and two tables of Canasta and other games were played on the rear porch. Mrs. H. H. White won the bridge prize with a high score of 2,410. Mrs. E. H. Wood won high at the Canasta tables, and Mrs. C. C. Stephens won first place for the other games.

Leading from the centerpiece were sprigs of ivy centered with small cut bouquets of mums, these individual sprigs being artistically arranged between several bouquets of harvest colored chrysanthemums. Place cards also carried out the autumn fruit motif.

There were 20 ladies attending from the Ninth Field Artillery battalion, 13 from the 99th Armored 14 from the 39th, 11 from the 41st and 13 from divarty headquarters.

Would Do It Again

Nightmarish Incarceration Recalled By ANC Captain

BY PAT MURPHY

The Florence Nightingale of 1918 would probably shudder at the experiences the World War II army nurse endured during the course of six years of hell, fifth and final.

When Frances Nash graduated from Grady Memorial hospital in Atlanta in 1934, she didn't realize that eight years later her path of life would lead her close to the road of a nightmarish death.

The tall, sometime-ef-fervescent Frances Nash, now a cap-tain and 14-year veteran of the army nurse corps, sat down this week at Fort Benning and re-called the most terrifying three years of her life.

Captain Nash entered the ar-mey's nursing branch through her graduation from nursing school in 1934. As a second lieut-enant, she was transferred to various post hospitals through-out the spreading army-post cir-cuit.

In January, 1941, she looked about and found herself wearing a helmet and leaning over the rail of a ship, looking pensively into the cold darkness of the Pacific. She was bound for Cor-regidor.

As the weeks roll by, Captain Nash was seeing more and more suffering. She was seeing youth-ful teeth as a leg was amputated, and children gasp their last breath upon an operating table in the filthy, seething jungles of Bataan. This was war, and the Japanese troops came broken bodies and sent them back to carry on the battle.

The Japanese troops came closer to the refuge for suffering, in darkness, in heat, and in fatigue. Captain Nash, army nurse, fought to save lives of men, women and children wounded by an enemy.

The hospital began to inch to-ward the rear in early May, 1942. They even jumped a small bay to a place called The Rock. But to no avail.

On May 6, 1942, Captain Nash, weary from endless hours of toil, found herself stripped of freedom—she had been captured by the Japanese.

But now Captain Nash didn't feel herself surrounded by a host of medical assistants, in-fan-truments or adroitly func-tioning surgical personnel. Instead, her anesthesia was "take it easy soldier—it'll be over in a minute," her instruments were minutely sharpened pocket knives sterilized by flame of a lampblack; and her assistants were selected natives who knew little or no English. At first, Captain Nash was allowed to continue aiding military person-nel and their imprisoned fam-ilies. Shortly afterward, however, she was transferred to another section of the improvised hospi-tal area to treat civilian nation-als and Japanese wounded.

Months passed and the com-plaints grew. Not unimportant ones, such as no clean clothes or anesthesia to stop pain of a crabs' leg. No, the cries came latest in medical assistance, in-fan-truments or adroitly func-tioning surgical personnel. Ex-POW Joins Benefactor Division Outfit as Adjutant

A former prisoner-of-war in Germany, Capt. Kenneth R. Speas, recently returned from the Third Infantry division in April, 1945, has returned to the division as adjutant of the Ninth Field Artillery battalion.

Captured at Anzio in Febru-ary, 1945, Captain Speas served with the 45th Infantry division in World War II. He was released from Hammock Lager, Ger-many, when the division took over the prison camp in 1945. He recently returned from Ja-pan where he served with the Toyama Military government for three years as economic and labor relations officer.

His decorations include the Purple Heart medal and the European Theater ribbon with four battle stars.

Vocal Inflections Assist Girls in Choosing Dates

"Blind date night," one of the entertainment following week most popular activities, was explained this week by club officials.

Four single girls from Columbus, selected by the service club, are invited to participate in the program. Being service club officials they contact post units and choose each of four different units, two single soldiers, designated as most outstanding by their organization.

The men stand on one side of a screen and the girls on the other. Using a microphone, the soldier tries to persuade one of the girls to date him rather than his opponent.

Each soldier is given three minutes to state his case. The men who win and their organization are:

Club For Civilian Employees Formed

Months of planning and speculation by Infantry Center civilian employees was culminated recently with an announcement formally establishing a civilian employees club.

Although the club will be managed and governed by civilians, a military advisory committee under the direction of Lt. Col. E. O. Shaw, acting adjutant general, will establish rules and practices and offer counsel to the newly-formed club.

The following employees have been designated to serve on the board of governors in a pro-tem capacity:

Horace W. Tillis, president, civilian personnel division, Donise W. Hunt, transportation vice-president, Mrs. Frances F. Powell, civilian personnel division, secretary-treasurer, Miss June W. Carney, Headquarters, Student Training Regiment, Leon R. Perkins, Station Hospital.

William C. Franks, Station Hospital, Mary Boling Brown, special services, Miss Ruby P. Jetteries, engineers, William P. Johnson, engineers, Miss Jeanne R. Hunt, ordnance, Robert H. McNully, ordnance, May E. Pigot, public information office, John W. Perria, quartermaster, Ethel D. Moncrieff, quartermaster, Willard R. Johnson, finance, William H. Marion, Lawson airforce base, Lillian H. Stevens, Academic department, Odelle C. Adams, signal, Dorothy Bruner, post exchange, H. R. Brooks, civilian personnel division.

Also designated in a pro-tem status was Albert E. Calhoun, temporary club manager.

Division Men Are Praised By Cardinal

Francis Cardinal Spellman, archbishop of New York and military vicar, last week expressed his thanks to the officers and men of the Third Infantry division for the excellent manner in which they carried out their duties in connection with his visit here Oct. 29-31.

In a letter to Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, division commander, the Cardinal singled out Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Peter S. Rush, division chaplain, who was in overall charge of the visit, and Chaplain (Capt.) Thomas C. Koch, who assisted at mass in the chapel, as the outstanding members of the division.

In addition, Cardinal Spellman thanked the Third division band for playing his school march, "Fordham Rhapsody."

Others mentioned in his letter included the color bearers, the honor guard and the men who helped prepare the main gymnasium for the mass.

High Enrollment Boasted by ASU

Members of the 344th Area Service Unit, Provisional Group, boast a total enrollment of 214 officers and enlisted men in the army education center's night school.

The highest enrollment is 37 in the typing course, followed by auto mechanics and photography, each with 25; basic mathematics has 19; ninth grade English has 16, and high school algebra and basic subjects have 12 each.

Elementary Russian, advanced German and psychology have six each; elementary Spanish and physics, five each; 10th grade English and elementary German, four each; and advanced history, two, and advanced Spanish, one.

Infantry Outfit To Give Blood

Men of the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, are expected to donate 300 pints of blood next week when the mobile blood unit runs its monthly visit to Fort Benning.

Murray Hill, field director of the American Red Cross here, announced that the unit would arrive on Nov. 14, but donations will not start until the following day.

Beethoven Music To Be Presented

An all-Beethoven concert is scheduled for 8 p. m. next Tuesday at the Main Library.

The program includes Leonore Overture in G Major, orchestrated by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra conducted by Paul Kletzky.

The "Choral," Beethoven's ninth symphony in D minor, will be presented by the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra, Eugene Ormandy conducting, with Stella Simonson soprano, and Seashell Contralto, Frederick Jagel, tenor, Nicola Moscona, basso, and the Westminster choir, Miss John Finley Williamson, conductor.

Parade Performance Earns Commendation

Maj. Gen. F. W. Clarkson recently commended the Second Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment for its "fine military bearing, neatness of appearance, and excellence in marching" during the division review held on Sept. 24.

The commendation was sent to Lt. Col. Phillip S. Greene, commanding officer of the battalion.

Army Signal Corps Photographers Record Scenes From Joint Orientation Conference

Army Secretary Praises Benning

Infantry Center personnel received a pat on the back this week from their "boss," Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray, as a result of civilian praise for Fort Benning's efficient conduct during recent joint orientation conferences.

"So many compliments have reached me," Secretary Gray's letter said, "concerning the joint civilian orientation conference at Fort Benning, Sept. 22-25, that I would like to express my gratification to you and the personnel at the Infantry Center."

"Not only were the demonstrations presented with the usual precise timing and efficiency," the letter continued, "but the members of this course sensed the quiet confidence and superior leadership in all echelons which is so characteristic of the Infantry Center. Many visitors noted the high standards of personal appearance, military bearing, alertness and discipline on the part of ground troops and airborne personnel engaged in the demonstrations. As usual, details connected with the reception and housing of the guests were carried out with thoughtful courtesy, tact and consideration. "The course was well planned, making a lasting contribution toward a better understanding of plans, programs and problems for the national defense. It is particularly gratifying to have such superior army representation in the field."

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, also extended his thanks and congratulations to personnel who made the letter possible. The letter was also received by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third Army commander, and Maj. Gen. E. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division.

21 Division Men Given Citations

The Third Infantry division certificate of achievement has been presented to 21 men, division officials have announced.

They were Pfc. Richard A. Egeland, Pfc. Justo Colon, Pfc. Paul L. Winters, Pvt. Larry D. Carroll, Pvt. William D. Gambin, M-Sgt. John G. Boling, Jr., M-Sgt. Claude W. Hembree, Sgt. 1st cl. Robert A. Former Scouts Get First U. S. Duty at Benning

Two former members of the Philippine Scouts have, for the first time in eight years of army service, been assigned to the continental United States.

The men, M-Sgt. Rosen Sarillo and Sgt. 1st cl. Felipe C. Marata, who served under General MacArthur during World War II, and were prisoners of the Japs for two years, have been assigned to the 10th Engineer Combat Battalion. Sergeant Sarillo holds the Combat Infantryman's badge, Distinguished Unit badge with two oak leaf clusters, Asiatic-Pacific ribbon with star, Philippine Defense medal with two stars, American Defense medal with one star, Philippine Liberation medal with one Star and the World War II Victory medal. Sgt. Marata wears the American Defense medal, Philippine Liberation medal and the Philippine Citation medal with two oak leaf clusters.

Third to March In 'Bama Cities

The colorful blue of the Third Infantry division is to be seen in Georgia and Alabama as a long way since this base's inception back in October 1946.

The AACS section at Lawson is divided into four components: lower, air-to-ground station, maintenance section and radio. To understand the complexities of this highly specialized operation, person should follow through AACS's complete duty at an airfield, although allied routines contribute to the daily function of the all-important airways guide.

Starting a hypothetical tour of Lawson's control facilities, we might stop first at the control tower. Perched some 60 or more feet above the ground in this square hut supported by iron girders, we find S-Sgt. William McGee, one of Lawson's able lower operators.

Sergeant McGee, who is one of the many graduates of AACS school at Keesler airforce base, Miss., sits out the sometimes lonely watch in his tower for the safe homing of countless aircraft. His duty is to guide in approaching aircraft to a safe landing. This is accomplished by a universally routine procedure of conversation between the pilot and Sergeant McGee.

"Lawson tower, this is airforce nine one three seven, over," landing instructions. "Airforce nine one three seven, this is Lawson tower. Clearway three zero, wind: northwest eight; altimeter, three zero point zero four. Check turning base. Over," a nasal and clearly-spoken voice returns. "Roger, nine one three seven."

Airforce's 'Guiding Light' Marks Birthday Tuesday

Airforce personnel, from Timbuctoo to Poodaddle Pond, will do some mighty resounding chest-beating on Nov. 15.

What started to be a pretty skeptical experiment some years ago, next week celebrates its successful year as an important factor in getting airplanes from one landing field to another.

The proud celebrant will be the AACS, known to laymen as the Airways and Air Communications service, the guiding light for planes that travel the sometimes-darkened airways of the world.

Lawson airforce base's AACS group, Fort Benning's little sister military installation, seems to be taking the birthday in stride, but quite frankly admits a feeling of pride in having come a long way since this base's inception back in October 1946.

The AACS section at Lawson is divided into four components: lower, air-to-ground station, maintenance section and radio.

To understand the complexities of this highly specialized operation, person should follow through AACS's complete duty at an airfield, although allied routines contribute to the daily function of the all-important airways guide.

His duty is to guide in approaching aircraft to a safe landing. This is accomplished by a universally routine procedure of conversation between the pilot and Sergeant McGee.

the lookout for vehicles cruising about the field that might interrupt landing procedure of the incoming aircraft. If one of these operations' trucks does come close to the runway, by always regulations, he is required to stop until the tower operator gives the signal for him to cross by light signals.

"Lawson tower, nine one three seven turning base, wheels down and locked. Over," the stilt-harped voice of the copilot rings out.

"Airforce nine one three seven, clear to land. Over," Sergeant McGee answers with a come-on-in-buddy air.

"Roger," the glider pilot returns. Seconds after this conversational exchange, a loaded C-54 zipped past the glass control tower to a smooth, safe landing, thanks, partly, to the instructions of Sergeant McGee, a part of AACS.

But working in a control tower offers problems quite perplexing to a normal-minded individual person. One time, the boys at Lawson's tower recalled, 13 planes were scheduled to arrive about three minutes apart, loaded with military dignitaries for one of the Infantry Center's joint orientation conferences.

By accident, all the planes arrived in the area at the same time. Trying to work out a feasible solution to get all the planes in line and start a landing routine, the tower operator began telling plane number soundings to be one, etc. But the pilots began to argue among themselves, so the tale goes, telling each other that General So-and-So was on board and his plane should be first.

The hair-pulling control tower operator finally, after much bickering, proceeded to award landing numbers to the still-fighting pilots.

Continuing on our tour of AACS activities, we find the operations room sergeant who handles position reports, changes in flight plans, weather broadcasts and other messages for aircraft that originate at Maxwell flight service, Maxwell air force base, 13 planes were scheduled to

Doughs Rip Guard, 26-6; Face Bragg Sunday

As the football season moves into the final three weeks of action, attention is focused on the winners in the various conferences and who will play where on New Year's day.

The Orange Bowl in Miami, Fla., has made the first Army team up at West Point, N. Y. The probability of the Cadets accepting, however, is remote since the New Yorkers would have to give up Christmas leave in order to play.

Only two teams, at the moment, are almost assured of Bowl bids at the conclusion of their regular campaigns. Those two clubs are the defending Big Seven Champions, Oklahoma, and the defending Pacific Coast champions, the University of California.

The opponents for the California Golden Bears is still unknown although it will probably be either Minnesota or Ohio State. The Golden Gophers have lost two conference games, while the Buckeyes have lost but one. The Ohio State team has yet to play Michigan, however, and the title probably won't be decided until the last game of the season when the Buckeyes and Wolverines clash at Columbus.

Eastern football, which has taken a back seat in Bowl games recently, has several teams that have attracted the attention of post-season scouts. Still in the running for bids are Fordham and Boston University among the big schools and Cannon and West Chester State in the smaller school class.

The South's outstanding candidates for Bowl bids are Kentucky and the powerful L.S.U.'s Tigers. The Wildcats may be dropped by the wayside after their game with Florida, but the Tigers look like sure bets to go the rest of the way without another loss.

The Southwest still has several teams in the running, led by the great Rice Owls who should win the conference crown and play host in the Cotton Bowl. Other teams being considered for bids are Southern Methodist and Baylor. Wyoming, in the Rocky Mountains, continues its unbeaten way and will probably get a bid to play in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Tex.

In addition to California, the Pacific Coast has teams like Stanford, Santa Clara and unbeaten College of the Pacific powerful enough to grace any Bowl.

In all the scene appears to be one where promoters will have to be content to do business with teams that have been kicked around a bit - even teams that have lost two or three games.

This Sunday the Fort Benning Doughboys travel to North Carolina to battle their arch-enemies, the Troopers of Fort Bragg. The Doughs will go into this game 28-point underdogs and will probably lose by that much or more. The reason we say this is not because the team won't be fighting—we know they will—but because the Doughs will be outmanned.

Barassi Scores Troopers Rate 28-Point Favor

Fort Benning's Doughboys bounced back to win a nine-game last Sunday when they ground out a 28-6 victory over the outclassed national guardsmen of Selma, Ala.

The win for the Benningites brought the season record to two wins, three losses and a tie. Although the Doughs won, the game may have been a costly one as Quarterback Don Hemphill was injured on the last play and had to be substituted from the field. Hemphill would seriously hurt the team by passing attack as he is the most accurate pitcher Coach Mike Chester has.

Fort Benning mixed a powerful ground attack with the power of Hemphill to roll up four touchdowns against its outmanned foe. Leading runner for the Doughs was Lou Barassi who scored two touchdowns, one on an 80-yard play from the center of the visitors' line.

Benning fumbles and a tough Alabama defensive line prevented the Doughs from scoring since the game wide open in the second quarter. The seriousness of Benning's plight may be seen by the fact that out of a roster of 48 men, only 17 are on the injured list. The other 31 are starting quarterbacks, two o linemen and six halfbacks.

Coach Mike Chester, at Fort Benning, is putting his squad through a series of tough practice sessions for the purpose of rigging up a defense against the powerful running attack of the Troopers. Mike would like to take this game more than any other on the Doughs' schedule since a 1-0 record would mean a bye to an undefeated season and the Troopers downed Fort Jackson, 20-0, while the Jackson men tripped the Doughs, 4-0.

The Doughboys left at 8:30 this morning and expect to arrive at Fort Bragg by early evening. The team will limber up tomorrow afternoon and then rest until game time.

Fort Bragg will enter the game in top physical shape and will enter the game riddled with injuries. The seriousness of Benning's plight may be seen by the fact that out of a roster of 48 men, only 17 are on the injured list. The other 31 are starting quarterbacks, two o linemen and six halfbacks.

Miss Suggs was born in Kenosha, Wis., 11 years old before she took any interest in golf and her father, a golf pro, never pushed her.

In fact, Louise says, "In those early years he never let me know he was interested." However, when she found it difficult to handle adult clubs, he cut some down for her.

At about 15, I really got into it, she says. Most of her father's early training was devoted to teaching her the proper way to grip her clubs and how to make sure she was lined up right.

Her father has been her only teacher. "After that," he said, "you've got to swing your own clubs. Nobody else can do that for you." Would you be able to look out for yourself, your family or your friends in an emergency? Here's a resume of Miss Suggs' most outstanding golf championships: 1941, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950; Women's title, 1940, 1942; Women's Southern championship, 1941, 1947, 1948, 1949, 1950; Women's Western championship, 1942, 1946 and 1948; Women's Western Amateur championship, 1941, 1947; Women's Western Open, 1946, 1947; U. S. Golf association Women's Amateur, 1946; Women's International four-ball with Jean Hopkins, 1946; Charles Victory Lady's tournament with Ben Hogan as partner, 1945; British Ladies' chamionship, 1946; Member of Curtis Cup team which defeated English team, 1948; National Open, 1949. In addition, Miss Suggs has won a flock of invitation tournaments throughout the country since 1946. Her first major was the 1946, 1947 and the first part of 1948, she won every important tournament she entered.

Over the years, Louise's most troublesome opponent has been Kirby of Atlanta. These two have met in important matches eight times in the past eight years. Kirby won the first three. The last five meetings were in the 1940s and she won three. The time Louise became a professional, Louise won all five. Here's what these in the know says makes her tick. She is well coordinated and has a good sense of timing; her game is well balanced; her major strength is that she is a consistent putter and she sometimes "goes sour"; but believes she has no chronic faults or weaknesses.

When she "goes sour" she never tries to vary or change her style. Her advice is: "If you are sure your style is basically sound, don't change it when things go wrong." When she has trouble, she goes out and works by the hour to correct her mistakes and bring herself back to a fine competitive edge.

Louise travels over the country for McGovern Golf, Inc., appearing before youth groups, women's groups, college groups, and others who are actively or potentially interested in golf. Her job is to promote the game of golf among the woman and teenage girls throughout the country.

Her immediate skilled aid might well be a factor between your life and death, long illness or rapid recovery. They help make your life longer, safer and freer from pain. If you are thoroughly trained in first aid, water safety and accident prevention, you are in a position to help you. They ask nothing for it except that you ask yourself one question: Would you be able to look out for yourself, your family or your friends in an emergency? Vern Ashbacher Takes Top Spot In Bowling Loop

After the second week of bowling in the Fort Benning officer's league, Vernon Ashbacher, of the adjutant general section, the Infantry Center, is leading in both the individual game and series scoring.

In the individual scoring he succeeded in racking up a tally of 228 to beat Al Perkins, of advanced class No. 2, team No. 2, with 218, and E. L. Muejler, of the Tactical department, with 216.

In series play, Ashbacher, who managed a net total of 632 pins, totally outclassed Sam Allison, of the Station hospital, who tallied a 581, and Bob Duffy, of the 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion, who scored a 578.

The high team game was taken by the AG section of the Infantry Center, as it copied all three scoring places to win first place with an aggregate of 945, second place with 942, and third with 921.

Doughs' Pivotman Gets Nod For Great Defensive Play

Bill DuPriest, the 6'2", 185-pound pivotman of the Fort Benning Doughboy football squad, gets the nod today, as this week's player of the week.

In the game against the Alabama national guard last Sunday, Bill was exceptionally noticeable on the field for his defensive play, in which it seemed he covered not only his right line-backer slot, but most of the right side of the field.

Time and again his alert calling of the opponent's offensive line-ups resulted in a wide-awake forward wall, and his vicious tackling tended to discourage backs from running through his territory.

It was in the third period, however, that No. 50 flashed before the eyes of all present, as the lanky center gathered in an enemy pass on the national guard 40 and galloped with it to the 15 before he was hauled down.

This, incidentally, was the companion play to that of another Benning center, Dave Johnson, since the latter also intercepted an opponent's forward pass to battle his way some 20 yards for a score.

When the home team was in possession of the ball, Bill continued to perform in an outstanding manner, as he blocked guardsmen from the path of Benning runners. His ball-snapping was flawless, and no plays suffered through lack of his blocking.

Bill comes from Dallas, Tex., where he starred in high school football for several years. He is at present with the Airborne battalion.

Prep Gridders Take to Road

Bi-City football action will come to a standstill this weekend with only two out-of-town games on the slate.

The game between Columbus high's Blue Devils and Central's Red Devils, originally scheduled for tomorrow night, has been postponed until next Monday night due to the Georgia-Auburn contest scheduled for Memorial stadium Saturday afternoon.

Both Baker and Jordan face tough opponents in their games this week. Lanier's Poets, whom the Lions play, have a record of six victories and two defeats, while Baker has won one and lost six thus far. The Red Jacks of Jordan will journey to Tallahassee, Fla., to meet Leon night of that city. Although Jordan's gridders have a record of five wins against three losses, they have yet to win a regional game, as all three of their losses have been against loop foes.

Thousands of farmers and ranchers all over America are making certain today that their future will be bright and promising by continuing to invest all they can in U. S. Savings Bonds. They realize that this is the safest, surest way to build that financial reserve so necessary to the successful management of a ranch or farm—to provide new buildings, to finance repairs and improvements, to purchase additional livestock and equipment, and to insure a future income on which to retire. Every $10 invested in U. S. Savings Bonds today will grow, in just ten years, into $100. U. S. Treasury Department

Battalion Champions Crowned In Regimental Court League

The 15th Infantry regiment, crowned three battalion basketball champions last week and made preparations for the courtly seconds remaining. Irish, Sooners Favored in Top Grid Games

BY JIM CLOONAN
AND ROBBY ROBINSON

Although the brilliant playing of an inspired team disrupted our Tulane-over-Navy choice and a rugged band of Cavaliers upset the highly-touted Quakers last Saturday, we managed to merge comparatively unscathed and with an average of 756 to boot.

This week, however, with games such as Boston college-Fordham, Georgia Tech and Alabama, Oklahoma-Missouri and Kentucky-Florida starting us in the face, we are loathe to commit ourselves. Relying on our status with Lady Luck, which to date has been excellent, we choose Fordham over E.C. Tech over the Crimson Tide, the Sooners over Missouri and Calcutny over the Gators.

One of the outstanding games in the nation this Saturday will be played in New York City. Notre Dame meets North Carolina on neutral soil, Choo Choo and Company are no doubt sweating this one out already.

THE EAST
Fordham over Boston College—The Rams, in spite of the unfortunate demise last week at the hands of the Black Knights of the Hudson, should have enough of their wanted offense left to topple the Hub City Eagles.

Boston University over Maryland—The Terps have been hot and cold throughout the season, but the Terriers have remained steady power. The nod goes to the latter by a narrow margin.

Lehigh over Carnegie Mellon—The Battle of the Slide Rules, as Engineer meets Engineer, Lehigh by a TD.

Cornell over Dartmouth—The Big Red team is really going this year, although the Indians were deemed by many to be the best yugster nussle at the outset of the season, the Big Red should mop up the field with them this season. Duke over George Washington—The Blue Devils have betrayed a trust more than once this season, but we are relying on them to add points to our average this week.

Williams over Amherst—Those who aren't from the Northeast will probably not know that this is one of the oldest and most fiery of annual gridiron battles and therefore one really ought to call. However, we'll take the Ephem by a TD.

Georgia Tech over Alabama—The Yellow Jacket have a tough game coming up against the Crimson Tide, but we estimate their power to be slightly superior to that of "Bama."

M. I. over The Citadel—The West Point of the South once sported some of the grid aggregations, but lately their power has waned. We pick the Keydets in this one.

Clensson over Duquesne—The Tigers are about due for a win, and the Iron Dukes should be prepared to give it to them.

Kentucky over Florida—The Gators should take the Gators this week, but it will be a real battle the whole way, and of course, we could be wrong.

North Carolina over Wake Forest—Two Tarheel teams will fight it out in another game involving close scoring. Davidson should get it in the neck again this week—nothing new to them.

Alabama over Oklahoma—You may laugh, but our bet is that the Bulldogs won't be laughing when they take the field this Saturday against a high-spirited, if not high-powered, Plainsman team.

Mississippi State over Louisiana State—The Sunshiners and Citrus Fruit Vids are due for a nasty shock when they meet in the annual Gamecock group that has just handed, and in no certain terms, a defeat to the Sunshiners.

Wake Forest over North Carolina State—The Wolf Pack is due to luck their way, but their legs when the Demon Deacons proceed to roll up the top of this week, as they bounce off a solid Volunteer team. Tulane over Vanderbilt—The Commodores, highly touted at the beginning of the season, have been relegated to a back row and this Saturday we'll take the Green Wave should move them even farther back.

F. T. over Richmond—The Gobblers have a chance to meet their defeated record this week against the Spiders.

Washington and Lee over Delaware—The Presidents should wrest a decision from the Blue Hen all-stars this week.

Georgetown over Denver—The Hoyas, with a good record so far this season, should show the way to the Pioneers this week.

Nebraska over Iowa State—Cornhuskers have finally found someone they can lick, and we estimate a severe thrashing to a hapless band of Cyclones this Saturday.

Michigan over Indiana—The Hoosiers will be taking on a little more than they can handle as they meet the Wolverines.

Oklahoma over Missouri—One of the biggest games in the country, as the Sooners meet the Rebels over the Missouri.

Northwestern over Colgate—The Red Raiders have pulled their weight this season, and from now on should assume a purely defensive role. Even so, they will meet the Mercersburg of the Wildcats.

Ohio State over Illinois—Another close one, as the Buckeyes, who are uncoil a little more of the power they have been using all season, face the Rollermakers, an extremely unpredictable squad, which they will take the Hilltoppers.

Wisconsin over Wisconsin—The Badgers should remove the teeth from what was once thought to be a rugged Badger attack.

Oklahoma A & M over Kansas—The Aggies should take this one.

Northwestern over Colgate—The Red Raiders have pulled their weight this season, and from now on should assume a purely defensive role. Even so, they will meet the Mercersburg of the Wildcats.

Ohio State over Illinois—Another close one, as the Buckeyes, who are uncoil a little more of the power they have been using all season, face the Rollermakers, an extremely unpredictable squad, which they will take the Hilltoppers.

Wisconsin over Wisconsin—The Badgers should remove the teeth from what was once thought to be a rugged Badger attack.

Oklahoma A & M over Kansas—The Aggies should take this one.

Northwestern over Colgate—The Red Raiders have pulled their weight this season, and from now on should assume a purely defensive role. Even so, they will meet the Mercersburg of the Wildcats.

Ohio State over Illinois—Another close one, as the Buckeyes, who are uncoil a little more of the power they have been using all season, face the Rollermakers, an extremely unpredictable squad, which they will take the Hilltoppers.

Wisconsin over Wisconsin—The Badgers should remove the teeth from what was once thought to be a rugged Badger attack.

Playing in the Sunstroke Bowl, the Buffaloes should be able to snatch this away from the Devils.

FAR WEST
California over Oregon—The Webfoos, a good bunch in their own right, are slightly out of their class as they prepare to be stomped by the Golden Bears this Saturday.

College of the Pacific over Utah—Eddie LeBaron, the diminutive fairy-gale back of COP, will spark the Tigers, but it should be one of their most decisive victories in an unbeaten season.

Michigan State over Oregon State—The Spartans, seeking new worlds to conquer, have ventured out to the tall timber, where they should thrash the Beavers.

Stanley over Idaho—The Indians won't even have a contest here.

U. C. L. A. over Washington—The Trojans should prove a little too powerful for the Huskies this Saturday.

Texas over T. C. U.—The Longhorns, after their demise last Saturday, should bounce back against the Horned Toads.

Colorado over New Mexico—

Intensified Recruiting Plans Mapped For Fort Benning

A concentrated reenlistment program opened at Fort Benning Monday when officers and noncommissioned officers and major Infantry Center units met for a reenlistment sales conference in the Main theater.

Present were unit commanders, platoon leaders and first sergeants of companies, approximately five noncommissioned officers from each company, staff officers and key noncommissioned officers who have a primary interest in reenlistments.

Units represented were the Third Infantry division, Army Field Forces board No. 3, Infantry School detachment, Student Training Regiment, 340th Area Service unit and the Provisional Medical group.

Lt. Col. Clyde D. Dillender, Infantry Center recruiting officer, opened the meeting by introducing Maj. Gen. Wilbert A. Burress, commanding general of the Infantry Center who addressed the group.

General Burress spoke of the Army's desire to have its ranks filled only with good soldiers. He spoke of the necessity for commanders and noncommissioned officers to do their utmost to relieve conditions which irritate enlisted men and cause them to leave the Army.

The overall reenlistment record of the Army was not up to expectations, General Burress said, although here at Fort Benning, 85 per cent of the reenlistments have been for this post.

He pointed out that the men who are in a good outfit will reenlist for that outfit.

Looking at the negative side of the story, General Burress said that out of 89 one-year enlistees recently discharged only one reenlisted for a three-year period.

He stressed again the responsibility of the company commander to make infantry training as interesting as possible.

Speaking of the Army's future, he said "I would not hesitate to recommend the Army as a career to any young man. There was a time when I would have."

Enlisted men received only $15 a month many years ago, but with the present financial season opportunity the reenlistment program is a good life's work.

After General Burress' address to the gathering, Lt. Col. H. G. Thompson, military personnel division, spoke to the group about the responsibility of company and platoon commanders as reenlistment agents for the Army.

He compared the responsibility of the Army to operate on an efficient basis with the operation of the Bell Telephone company, pointing out that if the Bell Telephone company had as big a yearly turnover in employees as the Army, the phone bill would be the biggest item of household expense.

He said that everyone who is making a career of the Army should be interested in seeing it operate at the highest efficiency and the lowest cost.

He quoted Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff as saying, "every good company or battery is built around a sturdy, loyal group of men serving a second or third hitch."

It is the desire of the Army to have its men want to be in the Army, to realize the opportunities in education and pay the Army offers and to believe in the purpose of the Army as defenders of American civilization.

Lieutenant Thompson continued by telling the group how it could use the sales techniques of commercial concerns in selling to the Army.

Maj. D. E. Thomas, of the Infantry Center military personnel office then spoke on the importance of knowing the Army as a product to sell, knowing people and knowing the individual prospect.

He outlined the points the Army offers young men and oriented the group on the proper method of approaching a prospect.

Lieutenant Thompson ended the conference with a talk on human relations in reference to Army careers.

A similar conference was held Tuesday in theater No. 8, Sandhill Personnel located in Sandhill and those who were unable to attend the conference Monday heard the speakers there.

Changes Made At Hospital RC

Two new workers joined the Red Cross staff at the Station hospital last week.

Miss Marjorie Nichols on, Statesville, N. C., new assistant field director at the hospital, is a former staff member of the Station hospital, Fort Jackson, S. C. After graduating from Duke University, she attended the New York School of Social Work.

Miss Marjorie Oliver, new director of recreation at the hospital, is a member of the U. S. Naval hospital, Memphis, Tenn., a seven-year veteran of the Red Cross work. Miss Oliver served in Europe during the war for more than three years. She is from Hazelhurst, Ga.

Leaving the Red Cross staff at the Station hospital were Miss Duke Fortune and Miss Verle Crawford.

Stepped-Up Pie Output Planned

Fort Benning's pie-eaters are in for somewhat of a treat.

Infantry Center food service officials have announced that Sgt. Stanley A. Sharp is designing an automatic round table production line for making pies in the consolidated pastry bakery. Completion of the planned pie-maker will treble pastry output on the post.

Officials also announced that a remodeling program is underway in the bakery. The giant ovens are to be completely refurbished for the expected increase in use.

Chemical Unit Now Operating

The 50th Chemical Maintenance detachment, an temporary duty at the Infantry Center from Fort McPherson, Ga., has begun full-scale operations and repair unit for second, third and fourth echelon chemical equipment.

The following personnel are members of the unit: Capt. George C. Nowers, Sgt. 1st cl. Harold F. Embrey, Sgt. Chester B. Harrell, Sgt. Chester Morse, Cpl. Jerry W. Eichman, Cpl. Eugene C. Elshamney, Pfc. Robert J. Higgins, Pfc. Henry B. Locklear, Pfc. William W. and Pvt. William E. Condrick.

Radar, Guided Missiles Benning Officer Courses Being Offered Honor Graduate

Courses in radar electronics and guided missiles will be conducted for officers at the Artillery School's anti-aircraft and guided missiles branch, Ft. Bliss, Tex., beginning Jan. 5, it was announced this week by Third Army officials.

The radar course, which lasts 26 weeks, will be open to officers in grade of major or below. To be eligible to attend officers must be on active duty and have at least a year of service remaining following completion of the course. They must, in addition, have a working knowledge of higher mathematics and a theory of radio repair and maintenance.

The 37-week guided missiles course, open to officers with at least four years service, will train specialists for assignment to experimental units. Applicants must have an engineering degree or its equivalent, which should include successful work in differential and integral calculus.

The announcement stated that the course should be of special interest to field and coast artillery officers, but applications from the other branches are also being received.

Application should be made directly to the Third Army G-3 section, adjutant general, Fort McPherson, Ga. The applicant's immediate superior should verify all statements of qualification made in the application. Forms should be submitted at least 30 days prior to convening of the class. Additional information can be obtained through Third Army's G-3 section.

Range Firing Awards Made

The 7th Heavy Tank battalion presented trophies last week to the four highest scorers in range firing held recently.

The highest individual score for the .45 pistol was recorded by Pfc. Bobby H. Roberts of Headquarters and Service company, who fired 323 out of a possible 350. Second place was won by Sgt. 1st cl. Lolis Taunton of Company A, with 315 out of a possible 350.

Highest average score for the pistol firing was attained by Company A, with an average of 265.30 out of a possible 350.

Pvt. Norville W. Lullbridge, Company B, won top honors with the submachine gun, firing 90 out of a possible 100. Second place was won by Pvt. Thomas Christmas, Jr., Company C, with a score of 87.1-2 out of a possible 100.

Progress Made On Baker Pines

Rapid progress of one housing project in the Fort Benning area, Baker Pines, was reported this week by project officials.

Of the 28 homes originally planned, ten have been completed and occupied and four are expected to be ready for occupancy late this month.

Eight more units are scheduled for completion around the beginning of 1950.

The new homes will be occupied entirely by army personnel, with the exception of two units. Backers of the project said there were six lots awaiting final drafting of plans. Construction date for these units has not been announced.

It was also stated that tentative plans are being made for construction of homes which will sell for less than $6,000.

Vacancies Exist In Service Club Work in Pacific

Openings for civilians as service club staff members in the Pacific command were announced this week by civilian personnel officials.

College trained women between 24 and 40 with a practical knowledge of arts and crafts, music, dramatics or group recreation are needed to serve as recreational directors in Japan, Guam and Okinawa at a base yearly salary of $3,025.

Openings for arts and crafts directors in Japan and Okinawa, paying the same base salary, require four years of progressively responsible experience in conducting an organized program of classroom or group instruction in manual arts. One year of pertinent college training will count for six months experience up to a maximum of two years. These positions in Japan are open for women, in Okinawa for men.

Transportation to and from overseas commands is provided, as are housing allowances.

Librarians are also urgently needed, personnel officials said. Women between 21 and 40 with a bachelor's degree in library science can qualify for these positions at a base salary of $3,100 yearly plus allowances.

Chest Donations Urged by Third Division General

Personnel of the 30th Infantry Regiment gathered on the golf course at Sand Hill recently to hear Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, Third Infantry division commanding general, make an appeal in behalf of the Community Chest.

Speaking from a stand on one of the tees, General Clarkson reminded the men that only two requests of this kind are made each year for the Red Cross and for the Community Chest.

On the suggestion of Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burrus, Infantry Center commanding general, General Clarkson proposed that a third of a day's pay be donated to the Community Chest. This would amount to 75 cents for the recruit.

In closing General Clarkson made an earnest plea for donations and ended his address with congratulations on the fine job the men of the regiment have been doing, urging them to uphold the Community standards of accomplishment.

Transfers Affect Engineer Officers

Three changes in officer assignments have been announced by the 78th Engineer Combat Battalion.

First Lt. William R. Cordova and 1st Lt. Frederick W. Rupp were transferred from Headquarters and Service Company C, and 2nd Lt. John G. Ebers were transferred from Company C to Company B.

M-Sgt. Isham W. Alexander, Craig.

Draft Time Slash Also For Officers

The recent announcement of the release of 21 month inductees and enlistees will apply to officers as well as enlisted men who entered the army under the Selective Service act of 1948, the first official notice of the action revealed this week.

Effective Dec. 1, officers who from active duty or discharged were called to active duty for 21 months will be released from active duty upon completion of 12 months of service.

The option to remain in the service for the 21-month period is open to officers as well as enlisted men. If an officer elects to leave the service, he will receive a certificate of service. Those enlisted men who will complete a year of service prior to Dec. 1 and who elect to leave the service will begin separation processing in sufficient time to be separated on as soon after Dec. 1 as is practicable, the announcement said.

Personnel awaiting trial, result of trial or serving sentence of confinement, awaiting separation for physical disability or requesting retention on active duty to undergo further medical care or hospitalization will be released.

Division Dance Band Seeking Crack Pianist

Using a tempting proposition as a lure, WOJC Ralph P. Dials and Sgt. Richard D. Miller, both members of the Third Infantry division dance band, have been beating the brush for a top-flight pianist. Their efforts have netted out a man who can handle the ivories capably, however, have yielded no results, and the offer still is open to any GI who can convince the two jazzmen that he can play the piano.

Mr. Dials said that any man who fills the bill may be assigned as a permanent member of the Third division dance band, but that it isn't necessary that he be a regularly assigned member of the band to accompany it on its engagements. He pointed out that a man who prefers his present duties still may pocket a few dollars as a pianist since most of the band's engagements are played after normal working hours.

Further information may be obtained by calling either Mr. Dials or Sgt. Miller, extension 4-1292.

Gray Rescinds Move to Violate Equality Policy

In answer to an inquiry Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray emphasized today that there has been no change in the policy concerning equality of opportunity in the army as announced Sept. 30.

He said that an administrative message sent to army commanders Oct. 27 violates this announced policy and that as soon as it came to his attention he ordered it rescinded.

Secretary Gray said that no individual who qualifies for a military occupational specialty will be denied the opportunity to follow it because of race or color. This policy guarantees that a qualified Negro soldier will be given equal opportunity with other qualified soldiers to practice the specialties if vacancies exist for these specialties.

Secretary Gray stated that it was anticipated that as a result of the announced policy qualified Negro specialists would be assigned to some white units.

Advanced to Corporal
Two men of Headquarters and Service company, 76th Engineer Combat Battalion, were promoted to sergeant after normal working hours. They were Jack B. Stamper and William H. Gier.

Doughs Will Wage Battle For Charity

Look Wednesday For Next Bayonet

Since most Fort Benning troops will be enjoying a Thanksgiving holiday next Thursday, The Bayonet for next week will go to press one day earlier than usual, and will be distributed on Wednesday. The following week, however, we will revert to the policy of having the paper passed out among post personnel on Thursday.

3rd Division Units Parade

More than 50,000 spectators in Birmingham, Montgomery and Anniston, Ala., and Columbus, Ga., saw elements of the Third Infantry division pass in review as part of the national observance of Armistice Day.

In Columbus the streets were lined to watch the First battalion of the 15th Infantry regiment, units of the 39th Field Artillery battalion and the 2nd Army band parade the colorful blue of the infantry.

In Anniston, Ala., Heavy Mortar company of the 30th Infantry regiment added the steady beat of marching feet to the Armistice Day celebrations there. Under the command of Capt. John C. Seabury, the troops were warmly welcomed by the populace.

A dance was held last Thursday night for Heavy Mortar men as well as the men of the Second battalion of the 30th Infantry regiment and Battery B of the 41st Field Artillery battalion who were billeted at Fort McCallan, Ala. They paraded Friday in Birmingham, Ala.

The Second battalion of the 15th Infantry regiment, Battery B of the 41st Field Artillery battalion and the Third division band paraded with troops from Maxwell air force base, Ala., in Montgomery, Ala.

Children's School To Get Proceeds

A Community Chest-sponsored gridiron clash between Fort Benning's Doughboys and the Camp Campbell, Ky., Angels will take place in Doughboy stadium Sunday, Nov. 27. Proceeds of the game, last of the season for Coach Mike Chester's gridders, will be earmarked for the Children's School.

Appropriations of $12 a year for each child in the schools were cut to $70 by Congress. This means that someone will have to make up the difference of $55 for each child. This game, the suggestion of enlisted men's wives, is the solution.

The money will be used to expand the school, purchase books and equipment and to increase the teaching staff. Housing projects nearing completion on and around the post are boosting school attendance far beyond its intended capacity.

More than 800 enlisted men's and officers' children now attend the school. By next spring, as housing developments are completed, the total is expected to jump a couple hundred more.

Lt. Col. Harry Clisson is in charge of arrangements for the benefit game. He will be master of ceremonies for special half-time activities which are advertised on posters around the post.

Admission will be one dollar a person, except for children below school age, who will be admitted free.

Camp Campbell boasts a record marred by only one defeat, that at the hands of the 20th Bragg Troopers, 20-14, while the Benning squad has four losses, two wins and a tie.

In many cases, however, the score of the Dough's contests has been no indication of the way the game went. As in the instance of the Memphis navy game, when two touchdowns were recalled by the officials, as in the Paris Island game, when the locals held the visitors for the first half, and as in the Bragg game, when Benning played what might be called the best game of the season against a superior force and held the score to 23-0. In the Fort Bragg game the Troopers scored only one touchdown on a running play.

From Camp Lee, Va., came Maj. Lawrence M. Long, Capt. James O'Reave and 1st Lt. Robert A. Brandewie. From other posts were Capt. George C. Andrews, Fort Hanson, N. Y.; 1st Lt. Charles W. Chappinick, Ft. William C. Malkemes, Fort Eustis, Va.; Capt. John T. Clark and John McKee and 1st Lt. Hayward W. Lusk, Fort Bragg, N. C.; and Maj. Leonard S. Marshall, Mitchell air force base, N. Y.

Editorial For Periodical

There will be an opening post on the staff of the public information office for the editorship of The Benning Herald. Qualified military personnel interested in pictorial magazine work may make an appointment for an interview with the Infantry Center public information officer, by telephoning 3638. It is desired that applicants have at least 15 months service remaining on their present enlistment.

CHIEF OF STAFF VISITS FORT BENNING—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, took time during his tour of the Third Infantry division area last week to watch Pic. B. H. Elzey, manager of the 30th Infantry regiment's hobby shop, run a piece of wood through the joiner. Story on Page 2.

Safety Training Seminar Begins

A field safety training seminar opened here today in anticipation of Third Army Safety Week set for Nov. 21-28.

Present at the seminar and leading the discussion of safety problems are Dr. Walter A. Cutter, seminar moderator and assistant professor for safety education at New York University; Elliot V. Parker, army safety director; Donald Buck, assistant army safety director; and William R. Knapp, Third Army safety director.

Invited to today's meeting, held in the Infantry School's automotive department, were all regimental, battalion, separate company and staff safety officers.

Regimental and battalion S-3 officers are particularly urged to attend tomorrow's session, safety officials said.

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burgess, commanding general of the Infantry Center, opened today's session prior to an address by Dr. Cutter in which the army safety program was outlined and reviewed. After distribution of safety material by Norman Evans, Infantry Center safety director, Dr. Cutter spoke to the group on accident prevention, methods and procedures, problems and relationship to training.

Mr. Knapp concluded this morning's portion of the seminar with a talk on post safety programs. This afternoon Mr. Buck will address the seminar on off-duty accident problems, following which Mr. Evans will talk to the safety group on the value of accident reports. A discussion of stopping distances and a stopping distance demonstration led by Mr. Buck will conclude today's meeting. Tomorrow's seminar will open with an address by Dr. Cutter on training functions in safety. This will be followed by an address on the utilization of resources of commands by Mr. Parker, orientation on motor vehicle driver training by Mr. Buck, an outline of the responsibilities of the safety director, safety officer and unit safety

Portrex Group Assembles Here

Officers and enlisted men from all over the east coast were converging on Fort Benning last week to attend an amphibious staff planning course in connection with Operation Portrex, a combined air-ground sea maneuver to be held in the Caribbean early next year.

The maneuver will encompass nearly 80,000 men, and will be climaxed with an attack on the tiny Isle of Vieques, four miles off the eastern tip of Puerto Rico.

The main body of men came from the U. S. Naval Amphibious base at Little Creek, Va. The group consisted of Col. Charles J. O'Donnell, Lt. Col. Stephen J. Sabol, Lt. Col. Robert D. DeFeer, Lt. Col. Joseph S. Skoczylas, Maj. Robert H. Brumley, 1st Lt. Lemuel C. Slaughter, 1st Maj. Edgar L. Arnold, Maj. Robert V. Allen, 1st Lt. Angela J. Sammatino and Maj. James R. Carroll.

Also in the group from Little Creek were six enlisted men. They were M-Sgt. Gordon Green, T-Sgt. Edward E. Carey, T-Sgt. Frank B. Fink, T-Sgt. Frank B. Bergman, S-Sgt. Raymond J. Fieck and Sgt. John C. Hancock.

From Camp Lee, Va., came Maj. Lawrence M. Long, Capt. James O'Reave and 1st Lt. Robert A. Brandewie. From other posts were Capt. George C. Andrews, Fort Hanson, N. Y.; 1st Lt. Charles W. Chappinick, Ft. William C. Malkemes, Fort Eustis, Va.; Capt. John T. Clark and John McKee and 1st Lt. Hayward W. Lusk, Fort Bragg, N. C.; and Maj. Leonard S. Marshall, Mitchell air force base, N. Y.

Gen. Collins Sees Broader Scope Of Airborne Training

Addressing a mixed audience of 1,500 Fort Benning officers and enlisted men in the Main theater in which General Collins and General Collins, army chief of staff, hinted that the program "of airborne troops is due for expansion. The affair, four-star general outlined that paratroop operations would be a major mainstay in the event of another global conflict.

The group, made up of officers and men of the Infantry School, also heard General Collins' address on the initiative and enterprise of the junior grade leaders.

General Collins' visit to Benning was his second within a week. A few days earlier he joined the members of the secretaries of defense and the armed services and civilian dignitaries for the fifth joint orientation conference here.

The top-ranking army officer arrived by train at Lawson air force base Wednesday afternoon and inspected a guard of the 30th Infantry regiment of the Third Infantry division.

General Collins was enroute to Birmingham, Ala., where he delivered an Armistice Day address Friday.

Soon after his arrival, General Collins went to the Main theater league football, should prove a mighty rival to the Doughs, but the locals, fighting to redeem a sagging season's record, might prove they can win their first game for their visitors.

Bob Chabot, erstwhile West Virginia star, is the man who played right halfback behind Glenn Davis, will be putting speed to the wheel for the Doughs, as will Ernie Petrie, Penn State star of a few years ago. Jim DeShields, who played first base on the Campbell baseball team when it represented the Doughs in the all-army tournament here last September, will be in a reserve 'tackle position for the Doughs, weighing in at 240 pounds, and standing over 3', should prove a mighty ballhawk for the Campbell team.

Benning has been hampered throughout the season by a phenomenal number of injuries, and most of the men who are out presently will probably still be unavailable for the game. Unfortunately, most of the injured men are backs, of whom the Doughs are extremely short.

The home team's offense will hinge principally on the ability of the Doughs to move about. For the last two games he has been bothered by a bad knee, and has been limited to passing and some ball-handling. However, if he can drop this limited performance by the Campbell game, things may be a different story.

As for the Doughs' line is concerned, it performed valiantly against the Bragg team and has proved itself throughout the season, except for occasional lapses.

Speedy Halfback Lou Baras, who has been accounted for most of the Doughs' long gains to date, will be expected to perform in the usual outstanding fashion for the home team, as will Backs Gate Suit, Don Hemphill and Joe Lantry. The Benning end will probably be Vern Griffin and Don Pfeiffer, the tacklers, George Benedict and Bob Sherman, and the guards, Steve Rizzotti and Bob Piacco. Pivotman will probably be Bill Dupre. Changes may be made in this line-up following the Jax-Navy game to be played this Sunday in Doughboy stadium.

In the Campbell game, two T-formations will play a dominant part in the activities, since both the Angels and the Doughs are using modifications of Earl Blaik's famed Army T. Kickoff time will be at 2 p.m.

In 3rd Recon Company. Sgt. 1st cl. Elmer Rednour was recently assigned to the Third Reconnaissance Company as a dining steward.

Sergeant Rednour was formerly with the Military Police at Fort Belvoir, St. Louis, Mo.

where he spoke to the Infantry School audience.

Recalling memorable experiences at Fort Benning dating back 20 years, General Collins said that "Fort Benning was where I received to a great extent, the bulk of my military knowledge. I am glad to see that job, which has remained throughout the years; new ideas are warmly welcomed by the staff of the Infantry Center."

"It is particularly significant," he continued, "that this installation, which I am deeply fond of, has earmarked itself as the outstanding ground training center of the world. In that same manner, its success is due to progressiveness—letting the foresight of student officers increase its usefulness. As long as Fort Benning sets the pattern for the rest of the ground forces, our country should have no fear—we are progressing in safe hands."

Concentrating on the airborne training program, General Collins said:

"Gentlemen, I have no doubts about our airborne training. I have witnessed, several times in the past few months, the effectiveness of airborne operations. At Fort Bragg, the 82nd Airborne demonstrated that it could take on anything, anytime, anywhere, if it were really determined to do so. I certainly believe airborne training will soon be expanded and intensified for the future see considerable concentration on the notable qualities of men jumping from planes, fully equipped to wage war for many weeks."

In the closing minutes of his talk, General Collins stressed the value of officers knowing their men.

"I am going to the field," he said, "just for the purpose of knowing what kind of men are in the army. I certainly cannot learn or recognize the problems of men while sitting behind a noon.

desk in Washington. It is, thus, your responsibility as junior and senior officers to get into the field and learn your men.

"I can recall several times in my career when the value of knowing a man personally has paid priceless dividends. When you tell a man he has to do a job, expect to him the importance of doing that job—he will do more efficiently and speedily complete his mission. Take him into your confidence—let him know that you are interested in his problems. They could very easily be yours.

"But at the same time, I expect all of you, regardless of rank or service, to know your job better than your superior. Four command's confidence will destroy and multiply if you show that you are not leading in a correct manner. A man would follow you to the very depths of hell if he knew that you were doing your job correctly," General Collins concluded.

Thursday morning, General Collins accompanied Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division, on an inspection of division units.

Included on the inspection tour were the engineer area, Tear-drop range where a demonstration of mortar fire was staged, the Second battalion of the 30th Infantry regiment, the regiment's hobby shop, the food service setup, the motor pool, Heavy Mortar company of the 30th, and the unit's code and trophy rooms.

Following the inspection, the army chief of staff spoke to officers and enlisted men of the 30th Infantry behind the Patton House Officers' club in the Sand hill area, again stressing the importance of good relationship between officers and the men under their command.

General Collins left by plane for Birmingham Thursday afternoon.

Col. Karlstad Is Appointed Chief of Staff

The vacancy of Infantry Center chief of staff, created last week by the indefinite hospitalization of Col. Joseph A. Nichols, was filled permanently by Col. Charles H. Karlstad, Fort Benning officials have announced.

Colonel Karlstad, a veteran of some 32 years high-level army experience, enters the new assignment directly from his former duty as Infantry Center inspector general.

The 55-year old native of Estelline, S. C., entered the army shortly after his graduation from South Dakota State college in 1917. He was appointed from civilian life to attend one of the first officer candidate schools.

After he was commissioned, and during World War I, Colonel Karlstad served with the 88th and 40th Infantry divisions in Europe.

After the armistice and several post-war assignments, he reported to Fort Benning in 1922 for a nine-month company commander's course at the Infantry School. After successful completion, he was assigned here as an instructor in the Weapons department.

In 1931, several years after he was assigned to duty in the Pacific Islands, Colonel Karlstad returned to the U. S. to attend a course at the Infantry School. He was assigned here as an instructor in the Weapons department.

Following the seven years Colonel Karlstad attended the Army War college, he was assigned to duty with troops and instructed in ROTC. He was later assigned to the Command and General Staff college as an instructor.

At the outbreak of World War II, he went to Washington, where he was a member of the strategically important staff, formulating plans for wartime mobilization. He was with the staff during 1942 and 1943.

An assignment overseas led him into a command position with the 14th Armored division as a brigadier general.

Returning to the Infantry School, Karlstad was sent to Atlanta's reclamation center where he directed surplus activities. A subsequent assignment led him to Camp Butler, N. C., as camp commander, where the Third Infantry division was demobilized.

In succession, he was then commander of the South Carolina military district and Hawaiian inspector general during a space of three years.

His activities during this period found him as an instructor in the Infantry Center. He reported to the Infantry Center June 24, 1949, assuming duties as inspector general.

Colonel Karlstad's decorations include the Legion of Merit with two bars, Silver Star, Bronze Star, Army Commendation ribbon, French Legion of Honor and the French Croix de Guerre with two palms.

Colonel Karlstad is married and the father of daughter who is living in Japan with her army husband.

CHAPLAIN GRADUATES Lt. Col. Wallace W. Hales, Infantry Center chaplain, graduated recently from the religion and modern culture course of the Chaplain School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa. He was a member of the 84th class conducted on this subject.

Contest On Safety Tips to Commence

The week of Nov. 21-26 has been designated Third Army "Safety Week," Infantry Center safety officials revealed today.

The announcement comes at a time when a field training safety seminar is being held here with representatives of army and civilian safety organizations attending.

In keeping with the Safety Week program, Infantry Center safety officials announced that a "safety week contest" will open here next Monday.

Purpose of the contest is to provide safety suggestions to the army as well as to civilian safety programs.

Three prizes will be awarded at Fort Benning for the best suggestions. First prize is $10, second prize, $7.50, and Third prize, $5. Winners of the Benning contest will have their suggestions forwarded to Third Army headquarters in Atlanta for judging in the Third Army eliminations where prizes of $35, $25 and $15 will be awarded.

Entries must be the original work of the contestant and will be judged on their practicability, benefits to be derived and simplicity.

To enter the contest, suggestions of 50 words or less on how the army's overall safety program may be improved should be submitted through channels to Infantry Center headquarters, attention: Infantry Center Safety Council (safety director).

Examples of suggestions are: a protective device that will reduce injury in the use of equipment, machines and other mechanical apparatus, a safety program appropriate for army use as a means of creating interest and enthusiasm in preventing all or certain types of accidents, a means of correcting a hazardous condition on the post or how to prevent army vehicle accidents caused by backing without checking to the rear, following too close or speeding.

The contest closes midnight, Nov. 28. Winners will be announced by Dec. 10.

SOLDIER-OF-THE-WEEK

Parachute Drop Operation Technique Draws Praise

Hundreds of graduates of the Infantry School, in a formal ceremony indirectly owe the success of their jumps to Sgt. James T. Riley, this week's Soldier of the Week.

For more than a year the eight-year army veteran has prodigiously conducted parachute maneuvers at Lee field's drop zone. As panel sergeant he is charged with the responsibility of accurately positioning all-important arrows on the drop zone to the best spot to drop personnel. Sergeant Riley must carefully check and determine wind direction and velocity so that last-minute changes will not hamper the operation.

SGT. JAMES T. RILEY

Soldier of the Week. Recently, he was instrumental in getting a ground-to-air radio communication system installed to make the operation as smooth as possible. His enterprise, Infantry School officials declare, is saving the government hundreds of dollars daily.

The contact between Sergeant Riley and pilots of the planes enables hasty adjustments in pre-arranged plans should wind direction change or unpredictable elements start playing havoc with the area.

Added to his tremendous responsibility one that could take many lives should it be handled carelessly. Sergeant Riley, working alone on panel projects.

Association To Discuss Child Books

Fort Benning's Parent-Teacher association will hold a discussion and book hour next night in the Children's school auditorium.

The monthly meeting, to be held at 7:30 p. m., will be used as an open forum for a discussion on books children should read. An expert on children's records will also give a talk.

Parents have been urged to attend this particular meeting. Sgt. Riley's unit officers claim that his attention to duty has earmarked him as indispensable to the training group. The enviable record set at the Airborne battalion, they said, is partially due to Sergeant Riley's efforts.

Legal Matter Is Unsnarled For Serneant

BY MURRAY E. HILL

All day long an often far into the night, Sgt. James T. Riley of Fort Benning is busy trying to help servicemen solve their personal problems.

But on a bright morning recently, good cheer abounded at Fort Benning headquarters. A beaming sergeant came in to report that he had inherited some money from his father. But he hadn't received it. Legal steps were necessary, but the sergeant, not knowing how to take them, sought advice. Someone suggested that he contact the Red Cross.

At the request, he was consulting Red Cross aid in obtaining the money.

The Red Cross here, the sergeant's hometown Red Cross chapter got busy and immediately rolled the sergeant was not long getting his money. He hadn't expected a fortune but his $250 inheritance was worth the effort put forth.

Take the case of the serviceman whose parents, living in the busy city had been visiting him here. Before the train left, his mother became ill, but continued her trip. After worrying all night, the serviceman went to the Red Cross for help. With the train in 9 hours out of New York, our office called the New York Red Cross chapter and explained the situation. The New York chapter immediately wired the Red Cross here to assist them, at Hoboken, N. J., and informed them that the chapter's main contact would meet them at Pennsylvania station in New York to take them home.

Let's Set Our Sights Higher

What have you done to insure the success of Fort Benning's Community Chest? If you have given only one-third of a day's pay, as originally suggested, you haven't given enough. You haven't given enough because you haven't given as generously as you can.

We hope that every Benningite will set his sights a little higher. We hope that instead of contributing only one-third of a day's pay, he will give until it hurts. Of course, we realize that a set sum was designated for all ranks, and we realize that everyone perhaps thought he had fulfilled his obligation, when that sum had been contributed. However, that suggested amount is the minimum contribution needed if the chest is to reach its goal.

In every fund-raising drive, the aim is to oversubscribe. But it will be impossible to top the goal set by Community Chest officials if only the suggested amount is contributed. Simply to reach one's goal is no mean accomplishment in itself, but Fort Benning has always been a master at going over the top. This has been possible because of the generosity of every person stationed here, both military and civilian.

Usually a percentage of the total amount contributed to the Chest is divided among off-post agencies.

This year, however, Fort Benning is going to be, in a sense, selfish. The chest is sponsoring a benefit football game on Sunday, November 27, and all proceeds from that game will be kept on the post for use by the Children's school. Admission price to the game will be one dollar. The goal is $10,000. Perhaps many will think that figure too high, but $10,000 isn't too much to spend on the education of Fort Benning children.

That money is greatly needed by the Children's school. It is needed because without it many families will suffer great hardship in providing an education for their children. As announced recently, each child must pay six dollars monthly to attend the Children's school. In the case of a family with only one child, the cost is high enough, but consider the family with two, three, or, in the case of one sergeant, six.

The school will still get its pro-rata share of the contributions to the main drive which is included in the Fort Benning quota, but that share won't be enough to fulfill all the school's needs. On the other hand, every dollar contributed to the Community Chest will mean that much more can be spent on educating Fort Benning children.

The school needs to make many improvements in its physical plant. New teachers will be desperately needed before the end of the school year. Already enrollment has outgrown the permanent building, and some classes are being conducted in the hospital area. Without additional money for operational purposes, which can come in sufficient quantity only through the Community Chest, the burden of support of the Children's school will fall squarely on the shoulders of parents of school-age children. It will be an unfair burden, which can be lightened considerably by adequate contributions by all personnel to the Community Chest. We believe it will be better for the parents of large families to donate fifteen or twenty dollars to the Community Chest now than to be forced to dig into their savings later to pay for their children's education.

In contributing to the chest fund, however, it's important not to lose sight of the other agencies which benefit. Such organizations as the Boy and Girl Scouts, Army Emergency Relief and Airforce Aid societies, the visiting welfare nurse's fund, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, teen-age children's club, the Columbus Community Chest and the children's Christmas party are important to the building of morale and character. They need, and indeed must have, the support of all if they are to continue in operation. And they must continue in operation for they are so much a part of the American way of life.

We urge all Benningites who haven't contributed already to do so as soon as possible, and we urge all who haven't contributed until it hurts to do so as soon as possible. The drive doesn't end until after the November payday.

So set your sights higher and give generously. Give until it hurts. Make this year's contributions at Fort Benning the highest ever recorded.

Truman Unconcerned Over Anti-Fair Dealers

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — After an almost unanimous election of candidates he had backed, President Truman last week went to St. Paul for the 100th anniversary of the Minnesota territory. He conferred with Chicago politicians and spoke to the plain people from the train. Over 400,000 turned out to see him roll through the twin cities and all seemed glad to see him. Later when he addressed a gathering of Minnesota Democrats he said he was not too much worried about those who oppose the "fair deal". . . . The nation's deficit for the new budget is $5,500,000,000, rather than the $873,000,000 the president had predicted. He blamed it on a summer slump of tax receipts and increased veterans' benefits. . . . The coal and steel strikes which have plagued industry for the past few weeks and given American economists many an anxious moment were ended last week. U. S. Steel settled with Phillip Murray's union completing the list of top steel companies to come to terms. The miners were also back in the pits, but no contract has yet been agreed upon. John L. Lewis failed to show up for a meeting of federal conciliators and goal representatives Monday.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS — A peace treaty has been tentatively worked out for Western Germany. It includes partial rearmament. In making the announcement officials said America's first line of defense was now on the Elbe river. . . . The United Nations worried about the Balkans this week. The U. S., Britain, China and Australia introduced a motion asking for an embargo on arms shipments to Albania and Bulgaria until it was ascertained whether or not the Greek guerrillas were getting them. . . . Pandit Nehru, India's spiritual and political leader, traveled to Princeton and New York last week. He said something directly opposed to a growing world philosophy, viz. "...we must never justify a good end by bad means". . . . In South Africa the policy of separation of whites and blacks reached a new high. It was decreed that a hearse which carried a black man to the grave may not carry a white man. . . . The Netherlands gave up her 30-year rule over Indonesia. The Republic of the United States of Indonesia was established. Thus Indonesia takes on dominion status much as Canada has over Britain.

STATE OF THE STATES — The U. S. Census bureau reports that Oregon's population has grown 59.3 per cent in nine years. California is the second largest state in the nation in population, passing Pennsylvania which has been second since 1830. The anti-bingo faction won the election in New Jersey. Governor Driscoll defeated Frank Hague-backed Wene and with it an official okay of bingo. In New York Herbert Lehman defeated J. Foster Dulles for a senate seat.

SPORTS — Rex Mays, long time champion of auto racing, lost his life last week in California. He had finished twice in the Indianapolis classic, taking second place each time, but he never won.

HUMANITY AT WORK — In Washington a woman was arrested for carrying an ice pick in her bosom. As she explained, "I was moving and I just needed some place to carry it."

Report from Washington

Three - Months Advance Pay Is Authorized

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
New armed forces regulations will authorize advances of pay to military personnel up to three months' salary under conditions prescribed by the departments concerned.

The armed services have prepared and are sending to the field regulations governing the second annual interservice photography contest. As was the case last year, preliminary contests will be held at installation level, with final judging scheduled shortly after May 1, 1950.

The 1949 Army Register is being published in two volumes with changes to conserve space and make information more readily available.

The Defense department is cross-indoctrinating members of its public relations staff in the procedures of all services, in the same manner that departmental secretaries and assistant secretaries are being acquainted with the functions of each service.

The federal housing expediter has recovered more than $2 million in refunds or adjustments for World War II veterans who complained that homes they purchased were overpriced or defectively built. Settlements were made on 11,082 homes.

President Truman has approved reports of army selection boards placing 551 officers, including chaplains, in line for promotion early next year. A total of 229 army captains will be made majors; 235 first lieutenants will be captains; six chaplains (majors) will move up to lieutenant colonel; 11 chaplains (captains) are scheduled for majorities.

Defense department officials meet with budget representatives in mid-November to discuss proposed changes in the officer personnel act of 1947. The nature of the changes proposed has not been announced.

Religious Men Seek Opportunity to Serve

BY CHAPLAIN RUSSELL O. KIRSCH
In the second verse, seventh chapter, Book of Nehemiah, in the Old Testament we read: "I gave. . . Hananiah, the ruler of the palace, charge over Jerusalem; for he was a faithful man." We can conclude that Hananiah was not a man of outstanding gifts or brilliant achievements. It may be that he had neither the genius nor ability for conspicuous service, but he did possess a quality of character which outshines all others and gives fadeless luster to the most commonplace life. He was a faithful man.
Hananiah was appointed to the important position of ruler because he had been found dependable, reliable and trustworthy. That was the shining virtue which won him recognition and honor. However commonplace Hananiah may have been, no man can covet a nobler tribute than this, or imagine a more glorious epitaph.
Throughout the centuries the brightest pages in the book of life have contained the records of men and women whose only fame was their unflinching fidelity. If a man is faithful, he has won the highest tribute earth can give and one which Heaven echoes back with approval. There are many roads to power, such as wealth, education, social position; but the power a religious man covets is not an external authority, it is the power within reach of every one and which is life's true success and reward. It is larger opportunity for service. That comes from faithfulness in that which is least

To Amuse You Today On The Bookshelf

The Young McDermott by Edward McSorley. Harper and Brothers, New York, Publishers.
By D. W. SCHAEFER
The hero is Willie McDermott, son of an Irish family. He has little education beyond the rudiments of reading and writing, but he aspires to the heights of newspaper fame. There is, of course, the girl, Catherine.
When the reader plows through the first two dozen pages of dialogue, which gets absolutely nowhere and is written somewhat in a mild James Joyce stream-of-consciousness technique, he finally meets Willie. It doesn't take Willie long to get a job on a paper. Getting the job he suddenly blossoms into an erudite, piercing intelligence, a feat which Mr. McSorley might accomplish but which is certainly not part of the Willie McDermott we are introduced to.
We find Willie keeping a notebook in which are criticisms of the Catholic church, politics, the Irish and people in general: a startling development which is never fully explained.
Then, and with only the flimsiest of threads to hold the story together, we jump to Catherine and find the first of many descriptive passages of the sexual peccadilloes of the women in the book who begin with Catherine.
Once again we get the feeling of a man writing who has read Joyce's "Ulysses". The Irish question, the Black and Tan, bloody battles on the peat bogs and the yearning of hotblooded Irish-Americans to get in the fight.
And then there are the discussions on the Catholics, which also get nowhere.
Mr. McSorley's first novel, "Of Our Own Kind", is not familiar to this reader, but the publishers claim it sold 820,000 copies. If the reading public follows its present escapist trend to sex and violence in the majority of contemporary novels, this book, too, will sell, but it will be written to cope with immediate problems facing a segment of America, but it succeeds only in building a situation in which the characters do exactly as Mr. McSorley would do.
It is the right of a writer to make his characters talk and think as he best for his work, but a writer also owes to the reader legitimate, acceptable characters. Here in the "Young McDermott" we find just the opposite. It may be that the author is trying too hard. There is no reason to condemn him for that, but sometimes we wonder just how far the jacket writers can go in putting a novel.
The book, as a work, is too loose. Obviously made to read in one sitting, it does not hold a reader's interest for two chapters. It is hard to blame a writer for this. Naturally he will write what pays him most, except in a few outstanding cases. Mr. McSorley tried to combine what sells today with what he thinks is good writing as influenced by James Joyce. He didn't do it successfully.

TO EXHIBIT PAINTINGS—Mrs. David E. Milotta, shown here with a few of her paintings, will place an exhibit on the mezzanine floor of the Officers' club Nov. 29 for the Literature and Art group of the Fort Benning Women's club. Post Medics Hold Dance

Officers and their wives, nurses and guests of the Medical department will hold an informal Thanksgiving dance at the Fort Benning Country club Saturday, Nov. 26, from 8 p.m. to midnight.

Tickets, at $1 per pair, may be obtained from Maj. John L. Cram on the 11, Capt. Georgia Lesley or Lt. Richard C. Micaiche.

Announcement has been received of the recent wedding of Miss Mary Louise Maddox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Maddox, of Holdenville, Okla., and Pfc. John T. Reynolds, of Dallas, Tex.

The marriage was solemnized in Ada, Okla., with Percy Armstrong officiating. Mrs. H. S. Maddox, mother of the bride, gave her daughter in marriage. Miss Marybelle Carroll attended the bride as matron of honor.

The bride wore an ankle length white silk dress with a torchid corsage and a tiara of flowers in her hair.

Following a short motor trip, Pfc. Reynolds returned to his duties at Fort Benning. Mrs. Reynolds will join her husband here shortly before Christmas.

The table, set on the back porch of the club, was centered with a large winter bouquet of fall fruit. Painted autumn leaves completed the decorations.

The refreshment table was centered with an enormous bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums. New members welcomed to the group by Mrs. Horace Doty, chairman, were Mrs. Sidney Millett, Mrs. F. M. Cowan, Mrs. C. A. Gruber and Mrs. C. A. Pendley.

Sergeant Barnes Assigned to Unit

Headquarters and Headquarters company of the First battalion, 30th Infantry regiment, received a new first sergeant last week as M-Sgt. Donald J. Barnes, Jr. reported for duty. Sergeant Barnes, former communications chief of the company, replaced M-Sgt. Walter T. Sapp, who is being discharged.

Gift Service Set Up Here

A "Christmas Aid" program has been set up by special services officials to help Fort Benning personnel select, wrap and mail Christmas gifts.

Miss Virginia Cox, Service club No. 1, will discuss problems and give shopping hints to anyone who needs aid in selecting and wrapping their holiday packages.

The program started this week and will continue until the holiday.

Preference Data Completion Asked

Officers' preference cards, which all officers on active duty are required to submit between Nov. 15 and Dec. 15 each year to the adjutant general in Washington, are in some cases being received improperly filled in, officials said this week.

The majority of omissions are basic or detailed arm of service, station and a failure to sign the form.

Officials of the adjutant general's department said it would greatly facilitate the operation of the department if the cards were properly executed.

Mid-Air Load Drops

Laden Troopers Inspire Invention

The inventive enterprise of an airborne sergeant this week culminated a project that he claims will improve the entire technique of paratroop operations.

A little more than three years ago, Sgt. 1st cl. John B. Jenkins, now an instructor at the airborne jump towers, started thinking about a method that would make simpler serial delivery of personnel loaded with bulky equipment.

Sergeant Jenkins, with 47 military jumps to his credit including one in combat during the Philippines invasion, asked himself, "How could a man, loaded with equipment equal to his own weight, make a jump unhampered and without injury?"

He answered his own question with a device that allowed a jumper to release his equipment while still in the air and let it drop to the ground attached to a long, heavy-duty cord. This nylon leash, which he called a "leather friction sleeve," but it added another duty. The jump-er had to clasp the sleeve and let the nylon cord unravel as the heavy package fell.

Once again, Sergeant Jenkins pondered the question. He felt that even the newer method could be simplified to leave the jumper free from worry about the package delivery.

Here was his basic problem: Paratroopers, especially those engaged in pathfinder operations, are outfitted as any regular jumper—a main chute, reserve and helmet. Added to their standard gear are large, bulky pieces of equipment which are strapped securely to the front of their already tightly-equipped body.

These packages—rations, weapons and general combat equipment—are dropped from the body shortly before the feet hit ground to prevent shock of broken bones which might result from excess strain during impact.

Thus, the leather friction sleeve device, with nylon cord, was designed to release the load, and at the same time guide it to ground.

With the aid of Lawson air force base's engineering department, Sergeant Jenkins whipped together a spool-like affair that serves the same purpose as the sleeve. The spool, enclosed on each side by large slips of heavy-duty aluminum, is attached to the jump load. After winding 25 feet of nylon cord on the spool, the hose end is tied securely to the jumper's body.

In testing the new device, Sergeant Jenkins simply had to release his load about 100 feet above the ground and let it fall free while he worried a hour at shroud lines and such.

Sergeant Jenkins says his cord is capable of withstanding a 1,100 pound shock or drop load. Although his first and only experimental model was produced at an estimated cost of some $100, he says perfected production line models should cost "considerably" less.

Although his invention has yet to be accepted and tested by Army Field Force's board No. 1, Fort Bragg, N. C., which perfects new airborne developments and equipment, his unit officers have given hearty approval to the project.

Arabic, Rumanian and Swedish are the language courses available to members of CIC detachments in the Third army area.

Requirements for enlisted men include an army general classification test score of 110 or higher, graduation from high school or successful completion of a general educational development test and two years of service upon completion of the course.

Regular army officers or officers in category three can also attend.

Enlisted men who wish to take the courses and cannot fulfill the requirement of service can be discharged and reenlist or may extend their enlistments in order to complete the course. Applications must be received at the CIC center, Camp Holabird, Md., by Nov. 30.

VA Checking Vets' Files For Allowance Eligibility

The Veterans Administration is this week checking over the files of 81,000 disabled war veterans who may become eligible Dec. 1 for allowances for their dependents.

The payments for these dependents, the government agency disclosed, may amount to $18,400,000 a year.

The disclosure, which originated in Washington, was amplified this week by Columbus VA officers when they explained that more veterans will be eligible for dependency allowance. They explained that until now, only veterans with service-connected disabilities rated 60 per cent or greater have been entitled to allowances for their dependents.

The new law extends these allowances to veterans with service-connected disabilities as low as 50 per cent.

Local VA officials added that the former rate of disability allowance of $12.80 for every 10 per cent of disability will be raised to a flat $13 for every 10 per cent.

Captain Smith Cited

Capt. Magnus L. Smith, 3440th Area Service unit, was awarded the Third army certificate of achievement last week for outstanding service from June 1, 1949, to August 31, 1949.

These provisions are made under public law 339 of the 81st Congress, approved Oct. 10 to become effective next month.

CO Commends Unit Ceremony Performance

WOJG Charles H. Motte, adjutant of the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, has received a letter of commendation from Col. Dennis M. Moore, regimental commander, for his excellent performance in a battalion parade held recently.

The commendation read in part: "Your military bearing, appearance and knowledge of the assignment indicated interest and ability and reflect great credit upon yourself and your unit. Your example of attention to duty and detail is in keeping with the high traditions of our regiment."

The commendation received the endorsement of Lt. Col. William J. McCaffrey, battalion commander.

Mr. Motte, who recently received his warrant, was formerly battalion sergeant major.

CIC Men May Attend School

Personnel of the counter-intelligence corps will have an opportunity to attend the Army Language School, Camp Holabird, Md., in January. Third army officials revealed this week.

Requirements for enlisted men include an army general classification test score of 110 or higher, graduation from high school or successful completion of a general educational development test and two years of service upon completion of the course.

Regular army officers or officers in category three can also attend.

Enlisted men who wish to take the courses and cannot fulfill the requirement of service can be discharged and reenlist or may extend their enlistments in order to complete the course. Applications must be received at the CIC center, Camp Holabird, Md., by Nov. 30.

Insurance Fraud Warnings Issued

Infantry Center troops were cautioned by Third army officials this week against commercial insurance agents soliciting "advantage of inexperienced" military personnel. Officials, in issuing the warning, pointed out that most agents and their companies are entirely reliable. They added, however, that there are unscrupulous salesmen who will not hesitate in exploiting the inexperienced business knowledge of military personnel to sell policies. Several recent incidents have prompted the official warning. The directive pointed out, as an example, the directive cited the case of personnel who are approached by insurance agents and given a hasty sales talk, which leaves them almost completely without substantial facts of the policy. The policies are subsequently sent to beneficiaries at home, placing the insured in a position of relying upon the agents to represent him in legal aspects. Unit commanders have been cautioned against agents soliciting among their personnel, and a thorough screening will be required for all agents before they can solicit in a military unit.

5 Privates Promoted

Five privates of the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, were promoted to private first class recently, battalion officials announced. They were Sam H. Milus, Freddie Howard, Paul Shields, Henry Anderson and Tom Manley.

SPOTLIGHT

by jim cloonan

Last Sunday we were privileged to be among the 10,000 fans who witnessed the Fort Benning-Fort Bragg game in North Carolina, and we came away from that contest convinced that in Fort Benning we had seen the most courageous ball club that could possibly be put on any field. Fort Benning, outweighed anywhere from 10 to 15 pounds per man in the line, completely outplayed the Braggmen up front. Only three breaks were the difference between the two teams.

The Doughboys' lack of a good punter also hurt the cause as time and again the Bragg team would pick up valuable yardage through the efforts of their great punter, Bo Schreiner.

It would be almost impossible to describe the spirited play the Doughboys put up to one who had not seen the game, but a small indication of Benning's great play can be determined from the fact that two of Benning's toughest ball players, Steve Rizzotti and Lou Barassi, collapsed from sheer exhaustion and had to be removed from the game. Two more Benningites, George Benck and Bob, "The Tank", Murphree were injured early in the game and pleaded with Coach Mike Chester until he sent them back into action.

While it is not the policy of this column to criticize the officials in any sport, we feel it should be mentioned that the Fort Bragg officials let quite a bit of rough stuff go by the boards before finally ejecting two Braggmen for unnecessary roughness. At times the officials let the game get completely out of hand, and on one occasion only the quick thinking of Benning Coach Richard Breenahan averted a free-for-all in the center of the field.

If it is possible for Coach Mike Chester to get his men to the same inspired mental peak they were Sunday for the next two games, Benning could easily close out its season with two straight victories.

While on the subject of football we would like to remind everyone that on Sunday, Nov. 27, they can see an excellent football game and at the same time help a very worthy cause, namely the children's school fund. All proceeds from the Fort Benning-Camp Campbell, Ky., game to be played on that day will be given to the Community Chest for the sole purpose of defraying expenses at the children's school. All military personnel on post who have children of school age will benefit from the game.

In addition to the football game, which alone is worth the one dollar admission price, there will be several added attractions before the game and during the half time intermission.

Getting back to the ball game for a moment, Benning fans will get an opportunity to see one of the U. S. Military academy's famous backs in action when Bob Chabot takes the field for the Camp Campbell Angels. Chabot was for several seasons in the same backfield with the great Doc Blanchard and Glenn Davis and helped to fill Davis' shoes after the famous athlete had graduated.

Another back who will bear watching on the Campbell team will be Johnny Platt. Baseball fans will remember Platt as the young man who blasted four homers during the all-army baseball tourney held here last September. Johnny has now transferred his ability to the gridiron, where he has become a first rate back. Although several major league scouts were after him to play baseball, Johnny decided to concentrate his efforts on football, and upon his discharge early next year will enroll at Alabama Poly better known to grid fans as Auburn. This bit of news has no doubt caused Earl Brown to buy an extra large turkey in order to celebrate Thanksgiving Day properly.

Rounding out the group of baseball players who have switched to the gridiron is Tiny DeShields, a six-foot, four-inch, 235-pounder who will anchor the Angel line at a tackle position.

All in all the contest should be one of the best and most colorful games to be played at Doughboy Stadium for some time.

Tulane Cancels Game
—Tulane university will break off football relations with Notre Dame after the 1950 game. The announcement was made shortly after the Irish had knocked the Green Wave from the undefeated ranks, 40-7.

Joe Not Ready to Quit
—"Absolutely not!" is Joe DiMaggio's answer when asked if he's ready to hang up his spikes. "I don't know why I would be getting ready for a San Francisco vacation after the Irish had knocked the Green Wave from the undefeated ranks, 40-7."

Doughboys Seek Third Win Against Jax-Navy Sunday

Fort Benning's hot and cold Doughboys will attempt to get into the win column this Sunday afternoon when they tangle with a formidable Jacksonville naval air station. Doughboy stadium will be in a game beginning at 2 p. m.

The Benning team will be seeking its third win of the season against four losses and a tie. The Jax-Navy crew has to date romped to five wins while dropping three games.

Both teams will enter the contest rated about even, with Benning possibly holding a slight edge since the game will be played on home ground. Last year when the two rivals tangled in the Gator Bowl at Jacksonville, the sailors won a 23-0 decision.

Benning will go into the con-

RUSS MINOR... A 230-pound defensive tackle for the invading navy team.

Sparks Leads Post Keglers

As competing enters its fourth year in the Officer's Bowling League, Charles Sparks has replaced Vernon Ashbacher in high individual score, and advanced class No. 1, Team No. 2, is holding the top-notch team position.

In the single game competition, Sparks scored a 231 to take home man, Vern Ashbacher, who rolled a 226. In third place was Chester Perkins, with a 218.

Ashbacher knocked the high series score, bowling down a 522 while his runners-up, Sparks and Samuel Allison, hauled down a 603 and a 581, respectively.

Advanced class No. 1, Team No. 2, managed a 943 to top team laurels, followed by the Adjutant General team from the Fort Benning Center in both second and third place, rolling a 942 and a 924.

JOE SINKO... One of Jax-Navy's two all-navy guards.

While it is not the policy of this column to criticize the officials in any sport, we feel it should be mentioned that the Fort Bragg officials let quite a bit of rough stuff go by the boards before finally ejecting two Braggmen for unnecessary roughness. At times the officials let the game get completely out of hand, and on one occasion only the quick thinking of Benning Coach Richard Breenahan averted a free-for-all in the center of the field.

last with most of the 41-man squad nursing injuries incurred before and during the rugged Fort Bragg game. On the list of injured men since the Bragg game are tackles George Benck and Bob Murphy, Guard Steve Rizzotti and Backs Lou Barassi, Gale Sult and Charlie Hall. However, all these men with the possible exception of Hall should be ready for the Jax-Navy tilt.

Doughboy Linemen Share Player of Week Laurels

Last Sunday, although it lost to a superior Fort Bragg team, the Doughboy football squad played one of its best games to date, and came quite close during the first half to quelling the vaunted Trooper offense.

The entire Benning team played outstandingly well, and it was only after much deliberation that two players were picked to share honors of Doughboy of the Week.

Tackle George Benck and Guard Steve Rizzotti were decidedly instrumental in stopping Bragg's numerous line plunges and rarely failed to open a hole when it was assigned them. George entered the game after a week's state practice. He had injured his hand badly in a scrimmage early in the week, and had been forced to refrain from all contact work.

However, in spite of these difficulties he started at right tackle for Benning, and added his six feet, two inches and 215 pounds to the Doughboy line. Forced to leave the game during the third stanza and limping badly, he returned before long to rein in his battered team-mates in their efforts to stifle the Bragg attack.

Breaking through the line frequently on the defense, George succeeded in punishing the home team's passer so thoroughly that his hurling became ineffective and gradually ceased to be a threat. His hard tackling of opposing runners in their own backfield caused many Bragg plays to end before they really got started.

Captain for the preceding game against the National Guard, George has played steadily for the Benning team since the second game of the season, as he was out for the first two contests with injuries.

From Blue Island, Ill., a suburb of Chicago, George has played a lot of football, in high school, in addition to his football, he was a wrestling star, and later, at Iowa State, he was active on both the football and wrestling squads and was national AAU wrestling champ in the heavyweight class for a time.

He entered the army in November, 1948, and is corporal and crew chief in the 41st Field Artillery battalion.

Steve Rizzotti, five-foot nine-inch, 195-pound right guard on the Doughboy squad, was also forced to leave the Bragg game briefly because of injuries, but during his time on the field, which approached 60 full minutes, he played inspired football. With his speed and aggressiveness he proved one of the Doughboys' greatest assets.

He was especially noticeable as he got downfield under Benning's short kicks and as he nailed would-be runners on the spot of receipt.

His blood-smearing face was perhaps the greatest indication of the great effort he placed in the middle of Benning's line.

For the first half of the game, as Bragg's tremendous 10-and-260-pound tackles were stuck into the visitor's trap plays, Steve succeeded in throwing punishing blocks on these behemoths and successfully keeping their hands off Benning's unimpaired runners. His pull out of the line was a sure indication that some trege opponents would suffer.

Dragons Triumph In Tourney Game

The 15th Infantry regiment, up 13 themselves to go ahead with the contest. The Dragons, by virtue of their win, advanced to the second round of the tourney where they will meet the winner of the 73rd Heavy Tank Battalion 10th Combat Engineer Battalion game. The Special Units dropped into the loser's bracket where they need but one more loss to be eliminated.

Penalties Easier Now

Statistics show the new football code definitely is producing more rules infractions than ever before in pigskin history. Biggest stumbling block seems to be the tightened rule on illegal use of the hands because blockers have a tough time keeping their hands from an opponent's setting away after initial impact. A natural tendency to reach after him is only six points when racking costs 15 yards.

Showing the way for the Dragons was Forward Hugh Bertrando who poured five field goals and two fouls through the hoops for a total of 15 points. Charlie Hosket was runner-up for the Dragons with nine points. Bob Mathis was high man for the losers with nine points.

Coach Herman Poole, of the 15th Infantry, started his second ball club against the Specialists, and this team managed to keep the game close for the first quarter as it matched the Special Units basket for basket.

Poole finally put his varsity five into action in the second quarter with the contest tied 11-11 but the first stringers were unable to get moving for the remainder of the half, holding only a slight 24-23 edge at the intermission.

The Dragons blew the game wide open in the third period when they held the Specialists to only six points while racking costs 15 yards.

Traditional Battles Highlight Week's Grid Slate

By JIM CLOONAN
AND BOBBY ROBINSON

Last week was indeed a dismantling one for gridiron predictors all over the country, as Dartmouth smothered the mighty Corn team, as Oregon State held over Michigan State, as Fordham lost to Boston College and as many others swept aside odds and proceeded to trample teams that have been doing so much to them. In view of the Indian's tremendous victory last week, we predict that their traditional season-ender with Princeton this Saturday will be the game to follow in the East. Although the Tigers have proven hot and cold through the season, they held the Big Three title in the Ivy League, came within an ace of beating both Cornell and Penn, and are regarded by one of the league's most versatile quarterbacks, Dick Sizemore, as the South's best team. In the South, Kentucky and Tennessee will be battling it out in another of the nation's great rivalries. This will be a mighty conflict for sure, as two gargantuan line backs will be going as two teams that rely principally on running attacks endeavor to outpace the other.

The Southwest will be the scene of another terrific contest, as mighty Baylor meets Southern Methodist. In spite of S.M.U.'s wanted offer to play Baylor as a threat to the highly-publicized Doak Walker, Baylor, with a heavy line and a sparkling offense, should wrap the game up. At the request of many a disappointed fan, we have included in this column a small section devoted to the lesser teams of the country. We hope that this addition will satiate the tastes of these heretofore neglected fans.

THE EAST
Boston University over St. Bonaventure—The Terriers should win this, a continuation of an old, old rivalry.
Brown over Columbia—The Light Blue can do little but dream of the good old days this season, as they are being run chinks up faithful beatings. And this Saturday, the Brown Bears should continue to play on Little.
Bucknell over Muhlenberg—The Mules have shown little or nothing, mostly nothing, this season, and there is no reason why they should change their strategy this late, so the Bisons should take them.
Syracuse over Colgate—The Red Raiders aren't having much fun this year. So little, in fact, that by the time the Orangemen get through with this Saturday they should be thoroughly disenchanted with the sport.
Dartmouth over Princeton—As we said before, the Ivy League's standing games of the day, with a slight edge given to the Indians. A big, blustery team, it should continue to play on.

has been slow in getting started, but once it gathered sufficient momentum, it succeeded in moving Cornell off the bandwagon, and we doubt if Princeton will follow. However, it is the final contest for each team, and should be very close.
Fordham over Rutgers—In spite of their defeat last week by the B. C. Eagles, the Rams, sparked by their ace back, Dick Doherty, should bounce back to take the Scarlet in another of the East's thrillers.
Syracuse over George Washington—The nation's capital will echo to the clash of a couple of gridiron mighties this week, as two of their native colleges battle it out. The Hoyas should have the edge, however.
Harvard over Yale—This is the one that will cause consternation in the variable hills. Wall Street and Broadway, and have the stock market perform in a crazy fashion. The Yankees, with All-American Howard Houston in their line, should be put to another acid test, as Levi Jackson in their backfield.

Holy Cross over Temple—When it comes to football, the worst team, we could but shrug a noncommittal shoulder. Now that the season is over, we think the Crusaders should bring home the bacon.
Lehigh over Lafayette—The Engineers have their chance here, against a weak Leopold eleven.
N.Y.U. over C.N.Y.—Another subway war in New York City. The Red Devils clash into the City College lads.
Villanova over North Carolina State—The Wolfpack folded last week, and they are likely to do so again after handing the feared Demon Deacons from Wake Forest a smashing defeat. We believe the Wildcats have what it takes to pick them.
West Virginia over Wake Forest—At the beginning of the fall, the Nitany Lions were said to be a power in the East, and from the time they showed a great offense, they have played most content—so the nod goes to them.

Trinity over Tufts—The Hill-toppers have shown their ability this season, and should deal the East, and their crushing defeat this Saturday.
THE SOUTH
Alabama over Mississippi Southern—The Crimson Tide should have a well-earned victory in this one.
Clemson over Furman—The Tigers should roll against the Palmetto Panthers.
Duke over North Carolina—Some may raise an eyebrow at we said before, but the Blue Devils have what it takes to lick the Tarheels, especially in view of the physical slanting game, and his boys must have taken last week at the hands of Notre Dame.
Georgia over Duquesne—The Bulldogs have a rest this week, and they certainly need it before their Tech battle two weeks away.
Florida over Miami—The Gators, playing against a competitor this week, shouldn't allow their backs to slip, but they proceeded to avenge last week's defeat.
Georgia Tech over South Carolina—The Yellow Jackets should rip the Gamecocks all apart this week.
Arkansas over William & Mary—The Travelers may receive a nasty shock from the Fighting Indian squad, but they should win it anyway.
Tennessee over Kentucky—The South's outstanding game. A contest between two powerhouses, both concentrating on ground attacks and both having slightly bigger than big lines.
L. S. U. over Southeastern of Louisiana—The Bayou Bengals, in full preparation for their annual tilt with Tulane next week, should dismiss the boys from Southeastern after a brief thrashing.
Virginia over Tulane—A wild guess that we hope will pan out. Dick Potts, the Cavaliers' plucking star who romped over Pennsylvania, should prove one of the deciding factors in this contest.
THE MIDWEST
Nebraska over Colorado—The Cornhuskers, with a nice season behind them, ought to take the Buffaloes without too much trouble.

Northwestern over Illinois—The Wildcats have shown that they are capable of high-powered football, and that is just what they'll need against a tough Illinois group that is a challenge for any team, regardless of size, to match.
College of Pacific over Fresno State—Again Eddie LeBaron will lead his band against what should be an easy victim. COP has made a record this year that is a challenge for any team, regardless of size, to match.
Oregon State over Oregon—In view of last week's topping of the mighty Midwestern Spartans, the nod goes to the Beavers in this contest.
U.C.L.A. over Southern Cal—Here is another fiery rivalry. The Bruins, a powerful, hard-charging team, should have a slight edge over the Trojans; but this game is hard to call. It may be that the S. C. lads will overthrow their opponents.

Washington over Washington State—The Huskies should give the Cougars in this intra-state battle.
THE SOUTHWEST
Michigan State over Arizona—The Spartans are really moving around this season. Last week they were up in Oregon to get licked by the Webfoots, and now here they are—down there in Arizona, playing the Wildcats. However, this week they should have a little better luck.
Baylor over Southern Methodist—The Bears have a nice list already tacked under their belts, but this victory would add some real ruck. And Doak has felled his alma mater more than once this season. We mentioned before, this game will be well worth the price of admission, and should really pack 'em.
California over Stanford—The Indians, after what has been an excellent season for them, face a tough one against the Golden Bears in a West Coast classic. The Bruins should take it by a couple of TD's.

College of Pacific over Fresno State—Again Eddie LeBaron will lead his band against what should be an easy victim. COP has made a record this year that is a challenge for any team, regardless of size, to match.

Troopers Defeat Inspired Doughs

Fort Benning's Doughboys played their best game of the season last Sunday against the Fort Bragg, N. C., Troopers on-ly to see three misplays backfire into Trooper scores, enabling the Braggmen to win a 28-0 decision.
A blocked kick, an intercepted pass and a fumbled punt proved to be the Doughs undoing after the Benning line had outplayed the home team by a wide margin. Only the first Trooper score, set up by Fullback Bo Schreiner's 29-yard run to the one-foot line, was of the earned variety.
Fort Benning received to start the game and marched to the Bragg 49-yard line before being forced to punt. Bragg's defense, however, was unable to get its attack going and the remainder of the period developed into a punting duel with Bragg's Bo Schreiner continually outkicking Benning's Earl Martin.
The Bragg attack got rolling midway in the second period when Benning punt and then recovered only to the Benning 40-yard line. After Schreiner and Dugan Bell had moved the ball to the Doughs' 29, Schreiner broke over each tackle for a 60-yard dash and raced to the Benning one-foot line before being knocked out of bounds. Jack Horne backed over for the score on the first try and Chester Oden added the point via freekick.

Dog Exhibit To Be Held Here Dec. 4

A Sanction Dog Show, featuring children's handling, will be held by the Columbus Kennel Club at the Main gymnasium, by permission of Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general of Fort Benning, on Sunday, Dec. 4.
The show is open to animals owned by residents of Fort Benning, Columbus, Phenix City and the immediate vicinity. There is no limit to the number of dogs each owner may enter, provided they meet the following qualifications:
1. The dog must be purebred. (It need not be registered).
2. On the date of the show, the dog must have reached the age of three months.
3. The dog must be capable of receiving training.
The animal will require no special training to enter a show of this type, but he must be controlled by his handler at all times. To assist owners, the club will offer a series of instruction classes for trainers. The times and dates of these classes will appear in the Daily Bulletin.
Featured in the show will be a children's handling class, which will contain prizes for children five years and under, six to ten years and 11 to 16 years. This year's contest is judged on the child's ability to show and control the dog, and the death of the animal itself. The dog, however, must have been shown in a previous regular event before it will be eligible for the children's class.
The entry fee is 75 cents, and blank tags will be obtained from the following sources:
Any member of the Columbus Kennel Club.
Lt. Col. or Mrs. John R. Darrah, Telephone 3-6111, city of Columbus veterinary hospital.
Pet Shop or Lavender's pharmacy, Columbus.
Stanton's Cafe, Baker Village.

999th Loses Third Straight By 18-6 Count
The 990th Armored Field Artillery battalion's gridiron Cannoneers proved excellent hosts last Sunday in the Doughboy stadium as they dropped an 18-6 decision to the semi-professional Columbus Bears from Charleston, S. C.
The loss for the 999th was its third straight in a winless season and its second defeat of the season by the Bears.
Once again it was the combination of Quarterback Knox Bennett and End Johnnie Wasp which proved to be the downfall of the Cannoneers. Wasp scored twice, passing from Bennett with the last Bear score resulting when Bennett sneaked over for a touchdown.
A revised Cannoneer forward wall held the highly touted visitors in check most of the first half only to see them score late in the second quarter on a 25-yard pass from Bennett. The scoring play came on a third down as Bennett passed three yards to Wasp in the end-zone.
The Cannoneers roared back after taking the kickoff to march into the Bears' territory on the 18-yard line. Wasp's receiver skittered to the touchdown.
A Bear touchdown early in the third period put the Charleston lads into the lead for good, and they added another score in the final period for the clinch.
A fumble by Cannoneer Back Dave Milne set up the second Bear touchdown. Guard Joe King of the Bears fell on the ball and the 999th 49-yard line Bennett then fumbled back and rifled a long pass to Wasp who scored the final Bear touchdown on a quarterback sneak from the 49-yard line, clinching a 60-yard sustained drive.
The Cannoneers will now rest for the annual Fort Benning Day rattle on Dec. 7 with the Columbus Buffaloes.

CONGRATULATIONS—Lt. Col. Shields Warren, right, commanding officer of the Airborne battalion, congratulates Herb Myatt, center, on being a member of the post's table tennis doubles champion team. The other member of the winning team, Terry Scott, holds his award and looks on. Scott and Myatt also copied the third army crown in the area tourney played at Fort McPherson, Ga., recently.

Suggs, Partner Win Exhibition At Country Club

Miss Louise Suggs, one of the most famous women golfers in the United States, and her partner, Maj. Lawson McGruder, defeated 1st Lt. John Henion and Mrs. Helen Volkman in a 36-hole Sunday afternoon in an exhibition golf match over the Fort Benning course.

Miss Suggs' partner was the runner-up in the all-army golf tournament held last spring, while Lieutenant Henion holds the men's post championship, Mrs. Volkman is the post's women's titlist.

Before the exhibition, which began at 2:45 p. m., Miss Suggs held a clinic. For an hour she went through all the clubs, except the putter, and demonstrated shots.

The match was held over the last nine holes of the course, and Miss Suggs' individual score was 37. Major McGruder also fired a 37, while Lieutenant Henion had 36 and his partner a 48. For men on the course is 38. An estimated 300 spectators watched the exhibition match.

Good Conduct Medal Presented to Sergeant

Sgt. 1st cl. Russell H. Platt, 15th Infantry regiment, was recently awarded the Good Conduct medal by Col. Dennis M. Moore, regimental commander. The commendation accompanying the award stated that a Sergeant Platt had shown exemplary behavior, efficiency and fidelity in an enlisted status for a period of three continuous years.

Sergeant Platt has been in the army 13 years, and during the war served with both the Fifth and 88th Infantry divisions.

Georgia School Gridiron Titles Still Undecided

The confused picture that Georgia Class A football had presented up until last week was only partially straightened out when the smoke of the weekend battles had cleared away. And a lot more smoke will have to clear before the other three regional champions can be distinguished.

Marietta is the only titleholder so far, by virtue of eight triumphs over Class A foes.

With Albany and Tifton, Region I and II leaders respectively, file this week, decisions in Waycross would force a three-way playoff.

In Region I it's this way: Thomasville doesn't stand a chance to win the title, but by beating 2-0-0 Albany on Thanksgiving Day, and 1-0-0 Bainbridge the crown on a silver platter. Bainbridge is through with its regular schedule.

Third Division Holds Tourney For Courtmen

The Third Infantry division pried the lid off the local basketball picture here on Monday when its annual intra-mural basketball tourney got underway.

Tourney rules state that the affair will be a double elimination event with two defeats necessary before a team is dropped by the way-side.

In all, seven teams will play in the tourney with the 15th Infantry regiment rated as the favorite. The other units competing are the 30th Infantry regiment, division artillery, 703rd Heavy Tank battalion, 10th Engineer Combat battalion, 18th Engineer Combat battalion and the division special troops.

The tourney will be played in the Main gym and the Harmony church gym, with the finals slated for Thursday, Nov. 24, in the Harmony church gym.

The Dragons of the 15th Infantry rate as the outstanding favorites because of their excellent showing in the regimental playoffs. They also beat the powerful Airborne team, Student Training regiment, in an exhibition contest. The loss for the Airborne was the first they had suffered in three years.

OPERATION OPERATION—Realism is stressed in field problems of Clearing company. Third medical battalion, as a complete field station is set up and patients, wearing moulage (simulated wounds), are brought into the mobile station for clearance and emergency treatment before transfer to field hospital. In left photo Stretcher Bearers Pfc. Lawrence Detton and Pfc. Rupert Mann bring in the "wounded" man, Sgt. Joseph Pascia, from the field, who is being checked in by Sgt. Fred L. Birch, right. On the field dressing table at right, Patient Pascia is examined by, left to right, 1st Lt. Charles I. Everland, company commander, Sgt. Frederick Wynn and Sergeant Birch, before preliminary treatment and speedy shipment to the rear.

Unsung Medic Heroes Do Difficult Surgery Under Adverse Conditions

By HARRY KING

Rarely heard of and more rarely eulogized are members of the army's medical clearing companies.

Recently, Clearing company of the Third Medical Battalion set up a field station in the Sand Hill area, and with the aid of fake wounds and full equipment practiced its operations under simulated combat conditions.

Sprawling over many thousand square feet was a single hospital tent, so large that it would seem impossible for human beings to pitch it. The tent contained everything from hospital wards to operating room.

Acting as go-betweens for medical companies, close behind the fighting troops, pick up the wounded and clear them through mobile hospital units to the rear, often performing serious operations under adverse conditions.

Their stretcher bearers, and ambulances are in the thick of the fighting, always on hand to pick up and render aid to the wounded soldier.

As one section of the company is working day and night to clear the casualties and dress wounds, the other section is moving up behind the lines, ready to set up operations the moment the other is too far behind the lines.

This "leap frog" operation assures the troops of a clearing company always within four miles of the front lines. Under stress these units have been known to set up their entire field unit and be prepared to receive the wounded within two hours.

The mobile unit consists of a large tent, complete with operating room, receiving room, supply rooms and wards for patients awaiting transfer. The unit is equipped with medical supplies, including operating room equipment. Although the normal mission of the units is to clear the wounded through to the rear, it is often necessary to perform emergency operations. For this purpose there are normally four doctors assigned to each company, in addition to the first aid men.

Close on the heels of the fighting troops, the clearing companies are in constant danger from enemy artillery fire and, in spite of the large red crosses adorning all their ambulances and tents, they are often bombed at night. The men of the unit are always in the thick of the fight, picking up the wounded and transporting them to the rear.

Unlike other medical units, these companies are constantly on the move and never have a chance to set up permanent station, unless the troops are bedded down for a period of time. Although little publicized, the medical clearing companies are well known to troops who fought in the last war and there are thousands of soldiers living today who owe their lives to these units.

Wants 20-Year Retirement

Amputee Faces Struggle To Remain on Army Duty

The little sergeant gave an appreciative smile to two generals — and other important persons — and used his steel crutches adroitly to push himself to the reviewing stand. Sgt. 1st cl. Roy A. Nelson, who lost a leg in an accident at Fort Benning three months ago, was the only enlisted man to see Friday's colorful Armistice Day parade from the reviewing stand.

As soon as he was spotted among the hundreds of spectators along Broadway, he was called up to the stand to suit with Maj. Gen. Withers A. Butts, commander of the Infantry Center; Maj. Gen. F. W. Clarke, commander of the Third Infantry division, and all the other dignitaries.

Sergeant Nelson, who is at home on furlough from Walter Reed hospital, said his greatest ambition is to stay in the army and retire after 20 years of service. "I want to retire," he said, "but not by disability. I want to serve my full time."

The sergeant, who already has served 12 years, acknowledged that he faced a tough fight in staying in the army because his disability was not well incurred.

"The high ranking officers have been a wonderful help," he declared, as he voiced his determination to prove that he is good enough soldier to stay in the army, preferably with the Infantry School, since he owns his home here.

A veteran of three campaigns during World War II, Sergeant Nelson served a year and half in Korea after the war, but he has lived eight years in Georgia, which he now considers home. He and his wife were born in Maine.

He had one comment to make — that every red-blooded young American should get into the service.

"It doesn't matter which service," the army sergeant declared. "He doesn't realize the service he can do for his country and what he can gain for himself in education and a good trade."

Sergeant Nelson lost his leg when a power lawn mower blade came loose and struck him Aug. 18.

Thank God For Thanksgiving

Thanksgiving, like so many other typically American holidays, has become so commercialized that we have lost sight of its real purpose. Few, if any, honestly take time to give thanks for all blessings we enjoy as Americans. Few still honor the memory of that small band of Pilgrims, 46 out of an original 101, who took a few hours from their arduous task of preparing for a long winter, to give thanks to the Almighty for allowing them to reach this land where a new life could be carved.

Most Americans will forget that our forefathers had to fight for the rights we now enjoy. They will forget that many years passed before Americans were able to live in peace within their own boundaries. They will forget that they recently fought a war so that their sons could live as free men. They will forget the heritage that has enabled them in time of danger, that has given them peace-loving hearts, that has enabled them to forgive their former enemies and live with them in peace. Will you forget?

Living in the luxury and comfort of the twentieth century, some of us will fail on this Thanksgiving Day to remember the many hardships our forefathers endured that we might live in this luxury and comfort. Many of us, of course, remember the hardships we suffered on distant battlefields, but we forget that our forefathers were in almost constant jeopardy of their lives right here in America, possibly in the same place Fort Benning is now situated. Will you remember?

This will be our fifth peaceful Thanksgiving since 1941. None of us knows how many more will be spent in peace. So on November 24, 1949, let us give thanks that we are Americans who live in a country where we vote by secret ballot for the man we want to govern us. Let us give thanks that we live in a country where we go to bed at night without fear of being routed out of our sleep by secret police. Let us give thanks that we live in a country whose government ensures its citizens equal opportunity. Let us give thanks we live in a country whose constitution says that all men are created equal, that all men are endowed with certain inalienable rights, and that among these rights are life, liberty and pursuit of happiness.

Indeed, we have much to be thankful for this Thanksgiving. Let us give thanks to God for the abundant life we enjoy as Americans.

Does Death Appeal to You?

As the long holiday weekend begins, Fort Benning is in the midst of observing Third Army Safety Week. This observance could not have come at a more opportune time.

It provides a real opportunity to find out whether or not the safety seminar held here last week had any effect on Fort Benning soldiers. It provides an opportunity to find out if the effects of the campaign The Bayonet conducted during the Labor Day weekend have stuck with Fort Benning soldiers. It provides an opportunity to find out if Fort Benning soldiers have paid any attention to the "Death Killed Here" signs erected at the spots on the reservation where soldiers lost their lives. It provides an opportunity to find out if Fort Benning soldiers have absorbed any of the purposes of Safety Week.

We asked Benningites this question during the Labor Day safety campaign and we ask it again: Does Death Appeal to You? If so follow these directions:

1. Drink when driving.
 2. Exceed speed limits.
 3. Don't check your equipment.
 4. Don't sleep before traveling.
 5. Drive fast in bad weather.
 6. Hug the wrong curves.
 7. Don't use hand signals.
 8. Never think of the other driver.
 9. Pass on hills.
 10. Drive with one hand.
 11. Don't dim lights when approaching another vehicle.
 12. Don't pay attention to traffic signals and lights.
- We make no irrevocable guarantee that those who follow these practices will fulfill their rendezvous with death, but we will say that their chances are excellent.

News Briefs

Urges Republicans to Adopt Own Program

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Big news to politicians throughout the country were the Democratic victories which are interpreted as meaning the people are still standing squarely behind President Truman's "fair deal." William Boyle, Democratic national chairman, made a penetrating remark which might have been facetious but has a word of wisdom. "I pray that these (election) failures will persuade the Republican party that it must develop a program of its own if it wishes to preserve not only its own political party but the two-party system. . . . New Jersey's Republican governor, Alfred Driscoll, who defeated the Frank Hague-backed candidate also made sense when he said "one thing that riles me is this talk that the Republican party must be a 'me-too' party. It all depends what you're meeting: If it's the ten commandments, then 'me too.' If it's the preamble to the constitution, then 'me too.' If it's a strong national defense without ending money, then 'me too.' We've got to let the people know that we want decentralization of government and make them see why home rule is vital for this country. We found in New Jersey that if we were to have a winning team we had to stand for something. We do."

ELECTION RESULTS—Ben Davis, convicted communist leader, lost his seat on the New York city council, only elective office held by a communist, to Democrat Earl Brown. The election in West Harlem showed Councilman Brown said, "Negroes want no part of communism." . . . Mayor William O'Dwyer was returned to office in New York City . . . John B. Hynes defeated Jim Curley in Boston, . . . Mayor Charles Fransley returned to office in Louisville, Ky. . . . Mayor Tom Burke returned in Cleveland, Ohio. . . . City treasurer Albert Cobo elected mayor of Detroit, Mich. . . . David L. Lawrence sent back for second term as mayor of Pittsburgh, Pa. . . . Jasper McLevy, socialist, returned to power in Bridgeport, Conn. for ninth term. . . . Four money controlling offices in Philadelphia went to Democrats offering hope that mayoralty elections in 1951 will see the first Democratic mayor since 1884. . . . California decided against their old age pension plan after trying it for a while. . . . Abolishing the poll tax lost out in Texas and Virginia. . . . Edna Fennerty Kelly will be the ninth woman in the house of representatives. She won her seat in Brooklyn's tenth congressional district. . . . John Francis Shelley, AFL man, elected to the house from San Francisco's fifth district. . . . Herbert Lehman won New York's senate seat.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—Red China is about to be recognized as the official Chinese government by Great Britain as an insurance against invasion of Hong Kong. The U. S. was going to go along, but President Truman decided to wait until the communists showed a little more of what they can do by way of running a nation. "The atom is still exploding in words in the United Nations. Russia is asking for a five-power non-aggression pact. U.S. Rep. Warren Austin gave the answer. He enumerated twelve essential points for agreement by UN members including a pledge not to use force; to refrain from fomenting civil strife in other countries; to carry out international agreements in good faith; to promote human rights; to allow UN control of atomic energy; to allow free exchange of information. If Russia agreed to these essentials, Austin said, the five-power pact "is not needed."

HUMANITY AT WORK AT LAST—The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced it was going to do something about the sex crimes which have been plaguing America lately. Figures show they have increased 50 percent in the past ten years. And U. S. born Lady Astor denounced Hollywood's preoccupation with sex in "this modern striptease age."

Report from Washington

To Eliminate Disgraceful Living Conditions

By ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT recently set up a new housing commission whose purpose will be to eliminate "disgraceful living conditions" among military personnel. Secretary of Defense Johnson said the purpose of the commission is to work out housing plans to enable armed forces personnel to live "normal family lives."

UNIFICATION OF THE armed forces moves a step closer in Washington where the familiar brassard of the "MP" and the "SC" soon will disappear. In their place may be the new band with the designation "AFPD," the initials of the Armed Forces Police Department. The new arm band is now being designed. The new organization is expected to start operating in about two months.

THE ARMY recently announced plans for construction of 750 family housing units, bringing to a total of 9,410 the number of quarters already slated to be built under the provisions of the Wherry Act.

ENLISTED MEN being tried by general court martial in the European command have asked for other enlisted men to sit as members of the court in only seven per cent of the cases tried, a recent report has revealed.

CO-ORDINATED TRAVEL of dependents with service personnel is now authorized to the Philippine islands, the army and air force have announced. The new forecasts of delay in overseas movement of dependents are contained in SR-756-B - AFR 75-23.

IT'S GOING TO COST servicemen a little more if they plan to travel by train on Sundays or leaves in the eastern United States. A 12.5 per cent increase in railroad passenger fares has been authorized by the Interstate Commerce Commission in the area east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers.

THE ARMY WILL launch a safe driving campaign in all commands for personnel who operate privately-owned civilian vehicles. In announcing the safety drive, the army pointed out that military drivers operating military vehicles have a safety record unexcelled in the nation.

Compassion Is A Virtue Practiced by Christ

By CHAPLAIN ALOYSIUS C. ZIELINSKI

Many a sturdy immigrant word coming into English from its native land has become worn and sickly in the journey. Such a word is "apology," whose English meaning is only a pale shadow of the idea of defense which it denoted in its ancestral land. Likewise, "compassion" is a word which grew feeble in its passage into English. All too often compassion means nothing more to the modern mind than a sentimental regret or a soulless philanthropy. Actually, compassion is an affection of the heart whereby we are afflicted with another's sorrow. The need of compassion in a suffering world is evident. But, generally speaking, we reserve our compassion for occasions of great grief. Nonetheless, its daily dignities—Christian courtesy, thoughtfulness, sympathy with another's point of view, understanding, selflessness—brood, disconcerting world Christ would still stand out as the most gentlemanly of men—considerate, self-acting, retreating by His manner the heresy of egotism. Egotism forever looks into a mirror; compassion and its derivative virtues look out a window, quick to see sorrow and to share in it, alert to the needs of others rather than their own. Compassion is not mere sentimentality, nor a despiritualized "Golden Rule," nor a convention endorsed by Mrs. Emily Post. It is a virtue practiced by the Christ, Who is our Redeemer, our Master, our Model.

To Amuse, You Today

Overheard: "Of course I had to tell her she looked like a million—and I meant every year of it."

"Very few women have any knowledge of parliamentary law," said Bill.

Joe: "You don't know my wife. She's been speaker of the house for twenty-five years."

Someone has discovered that you can be judge of the wheels that a man has in his head by the spokes that come out of his mouth.

Librarian: "I'll be glad to help you pick out a book. Do you want something light?" Charles: "It doesn't matter. Dad has the car outside."

"Nature seems determined to make us work."

"Yep, the less hair we have to comb, the more face we have to wash."

Doctor (after painting a patient's throat): "Three dollars, please."

Patent: "What! I had my kitchen painted for two-fifty!"

It is said that a young Methodist clergyman was asked to conduct the funeral of a prominent Baptist whose family was at odds with their own pastor. Not knowing what was either, the young minister wired his bishop for instructions. The bishop wired back: "Bury all the Baptists you can."

"You're very interested in that stuffed bird," said the ornithologist.

"Yes," said the aviation expert. "I think its steering gear infringes one of my patents."

Student: "I can't understand why this paper only received a 'C.' You also had it marked 'Good and original!'"

Teacher: "Well, the part that was good wasn't original and the part that was original wasn't good."

Child Psychology

"I've always found one trouble with child psychology."

"What's that?"

"Children don't understand."

CHRIST IN CONCRETE BY PIETRO DI DONATO THE 'BOBBS'—MERRILL COMPANY, NEW YORK, PUBLISHERS.

By D. W. SCHAEFER

Christ turns, in this book, slowly from a figure of never-ending faith and comfort to those who believe, to a figure in mortar and brick which is shattered "to bits on the floor of a tenement."

Background for this degeneration of faith under the blows of unfeeling life is New York, the construction boom of the 1920's and the Italian immigrant workers who labored on the mighty city, Job.

Geremio and Annuziata and their brood of first generation Americans are on the point of winning, at last, something from their labors. Geremio is a master bricklayer and is about to buy a home, a rude shack to be sure, but still a home for his family. He is to go home that night and pay the cash.

During the day he is worrying about the building. He does not like the building of the new on old foundations. But the firm says the expense to tear out the old and build the new is too much. The rotten foundations crumble and six men, including Geremio, die as the walls collapse and concrete makes an unhallowed grave.

The money to be used to buy the house barely makes the funeral expenses. Annuziata, with her small children and her now suddenly grown-up oldest son, Paul, finds herself without money for food.

Geremio had told himself time and again that Paul would go to school and be something besides a bricklayer. But slumcraft must be fed and there lie his father's tools, unused. Paul is 12, but he goes out looking for Job. He finds other Italian neighbors laboring. He works with them. His small body is torn with the efforts of doing man's work. He begins the outpouring of his soul and on payday receives one $5 bill. Yet another week he does man's work and gets another bill. And then his heart, strained from the effort, will not carry the load. He must rest.

"Somehow food comes" in. His Uncle Luigi comes to the family with help, but there, too, something goes wrong. His leg is crushed by the unfeeling machines of Job. But still over the family hovers the spirit of "Jesus". There are prayers and belief and Paul again feels fit to work. He is 15 now and for a while is able to keep food on the table. He meets his kind and is taken under the wing of Nuzzone, friend of his father and bricklayer. But Nuzzone too, falls victim to Job.

This for Paul is more than he can accept. He returns to the home of his mother, eyes still filled with the sight of massacred flesh of Nuzzone and mind still full of his father's crushed body "there in the courtyard under the newspapers." He finds his mother worshipping at the crucifix. A fierce something, which is not quite yet hatred, wells up within him. He seizes the crucifix and crushes it to the floor, and the fine spirit of Annuziata breaks. Her life was God and her sons and husband were God. She accepted all because of God, but when her son denounced Him, she breaks with the physical madness which fills the body with corruption until death brings the only release. With her last breath she, too, follows a blind instinct and tells her family to follow Paul, putting her faith in man at the last moment of a life faithful to God.

There is a great deal in this book that must be digested slowly. It could lead one to violent, sympathetic anger. Or one could turn up one's nose and shy away. Or, as should be the result of books which instruct and reveal, one could say, yes, some things are like this, and when the time comes maybe I will be able to help.

Group to Meet Next Monday

The Home and Garden group of the Fort Benning Women's club will meet Monday, Dec. 5, at 2:30 p. m. at the Fort Benning Country club, instead of as originally scheduled Nov. 29. Mrs. Albert C. Haley, chairman of the group announced today.

A Christmas program is planned, featuring demonstrations by two representatives from Kirken's in Columbus, who will give gift suggestions, and demonstrate methods of gift wrapping. Christmas gift suggestions will also be on display.

There will be a few copies of "The Dough Girl," a Woman's Club project of last season, available.

All women's club members are invited. An added feature will be a box which members hope to fill with contributions of wearable clothing, either children's or adult's, for distribution by Chaplain (Maj.) L. W. Knight to needy families on the post. Also, there will be a suggestion box for helpful household hints.

Personals

W. F. McDaniel of Long Beach, Calif., left Fort Benning Sunday, Nov. 20, following a week's visit with his sister, Mrs. Frank M. Lee.

Mrs. Clyde Head of Troy, Ala., spent the Armistice Day week end visiting her cousin, Mrs. Frank M. Lee.

Mrs. F. C. Sibert, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Bruce Palmer, for the past month, left last week end for a trip to Washington, D. C., to visit her son, Her husband, Maj. Gen. (ret.) F. C. Sibert, who will be in brief visit here with the Palmers and then returned to their home in Destin, Fla.

Maj. and Mrs. L. D. Shaw and their children, Frances, Bill and Jack, and Capt. and Mrs. Francis Felten and their children, Sharon and Douglas, and Lt. William Malkemes, spent Armistice Day week end at Silver Beach, Destin, Fla. They stayed at the ISD rest camp and enjoyed swimming along with a few beach parties.

MUSIC DIRECTOR... Mrs. May B. M. G. Browning, wife of Lt. Col. Harold W. Browning II, commanding officer of the 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion, is substituting as director of music at Columbus junior high school and the Waverly Terrace school in Columbus.

Talented Young Singer Has Extensive Background

By ADRIENNE YOUNG

Big things come wrapped up in small packages, 'tis said. This could very well apply to Teeny Browning, charming young wife of Lt. Col. Harold W. Browning, II, commander of the 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion. "Teeny Browning, small of stature and features—an altogether lovely person with a great big heart—has had a very colorful and interesting background in music. Born May Burrill Morse Graves, in Gainesville, Fla., she is a direct descendant of Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph.

She attended Florida State College for Women and graduated from the University of Florida, one of three women in a class of 300 men, with an AB degree in journalism. She received her MA degree in music education at Columbia university and studied further at the Juilliard School of Music. While in New York she sang with a trio whose accompanist and arranger was Jay Levison, who has since become famous as a song writer, composing such tunes as "Buttons and Bows", "To Each His Own" and "Streets of Laredo".

Her background also includes study for an extended period with Proschowski, probably the best known choral coach in the United States, as well as Estelle Leibling, famed coloratura, a pupil of Karl Kramer in Frankfurt, Germany.

Before her marriage this personable young woman sang with Phil Spiffano's orchestra on the "Hour of Charm", was a program director for radio station WRUF in Florida; appeared before women's clubs and other civic organizations, and later confined her singing mostly to weddings and church programs. She taught music in the public schools in Gainesville, and during the war she did a lot of singing for soldiers under the auspices of the USO, helping entertain in hospitals and appearing in numerous soldier shows.

Following her marriage to Colonel Browning, whom she met during the war in Florida, she has lived at six different army posts in six years. Everywhere she goes she participates in post activities.

When stationed at Camp Robinson, Little Rock, Ark., she appeared before the Business and Professional Women's club and on several foreign relations programs. She has also given concerts under auspices of USO clubs.

Since coming to Benning in August, Mrs. Browning has taken an active part in Woman's club activities, is a member of the Bowling group and Fort Benning Women's Golf association. At present she is substituting as music director at junior high school and Waverly Terrace school in Columbus.

If it is her ambition, she says, to continue with her voice teaching here. She also likes to sing at weddings because of the added, weddings are so beautiful.

Far East Ladies' Meeting Held in Club's Palm Room

Ladies of the Far East command group held their November luncheon in the Palm room and East lounge of the Officers' club with Mrs. William A. Duncan, Mrs. Robert H. Pell and Mrs. C. M. McQuarrie as hostesses.

A distinct oriental atmosphere was achieved in the table decorations by the use of Satsuma spirit lanterns. The centerpiece was a large square blue Imari bowl with an Ikebana arrangement of golden dahlias and mums. On one side stood a large brass Shinto temple lion. The entrance table was decorated with a large Shinto temple Hibache, holding an arrangement of golden dahlias and mums.

Place cards were gold Oban lanterns on a blue background, carrying out the blue and gold color scheme. The place cards were made by Mrs. David E. Milotta.

Divarty Group Holds Supper

Officers of Headquarters and Headquarters battery, Third Infantry division artillery, entertained their wives and guests with a buffet supper at Patton House Officers' club last Saturday.

The table was beautiful in its floral arrangements of large white pom pom mums and red dahlias.

The group inaugurated the practice of baby cup presentations to new arrivals in the unit, as well as awards to newlyweds. The first couple to receive a baby cup, beautifully engraved with the divarty patch insignia, were the first couple, son Charles, was Lt. and Mrs. C. G. Brown.

Young guests attending were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Roland P. Shugg, Third division artillery commander, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Orlando Troxel, Lt. Col. and Mrs. John R. Magnusson.

Interesting Near East Tour Recalled by Benning Major

By HARRY KING
For three years Maj. Stephen J. Meade, recently assigned to the Infantry Center, probably one of the most interesting jobs the army has to offer. In the capacity of assistant military attaché to the American Legations in Beirut, Lebanon, and Damascus, Syria, Major Meade gave the battle for Palestine from beginning to end.

His job afforded him the opportunity of traveling extensively in the exotic lands of the near east where he hobnobbed with the leaders of such countries as Trans-Jordan, Lebanon, Syria and Palestine.

The young major skilled in the Cedrus of North Lebanon, the ed-bor, gazelle and wolves with native Arab tribesmen, participated in a Lebanese horse show, mounted on an Arabian steed, and took a ski course with the Lebanese army, during his three years, from 1946 to the end of the turmoil ridden Middle East.

Hands where his job carried him were Lebanon, Syria, Palestine, Trans-Jordan, Turkey, Egypt and Saudi Arabia. A regular visitor to Palestine all through the recent conflict there, he was once shot at by unknown persons who probably mistook him for an enemy. Major Meade was a witness to the activities of Arab guerrilla forces and the Jewish terrorist organizations.

Before leaving he was awarded the highest Syrian decoration, the Legion of Merit, first class, by President Field Marshal Leini, who was later assassinated in the coup d'etat of Aug. 14, The Syrian Legion of Merit, first class, is worn by only six other officers.

His travels brought him into intimate association with such dignitaries as King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan; Fawzi Kowakji, commanding officer of the famed Arab Guerrilla forces; President Khoury of Lebanon, and British General Sir Bernard, commander of the Trans-Jordan Arab Legion.

A fluent linguist, proficient in English and French, the major added "kitchen" Arabic to his languages, although he didn't learn as well as his younger-old daughter, Stephanie, who spoke it fluently, and, much to his dismay, now speaks English with a marked accent.

Skiing would be one of the last things one would expect to find that part of the world, yet the major took a course with the Lebanese ski troops who he said are exceptionally well conditioned. In the Cedrus of North Lebanon the snow is sometimes 15 feet deep. Once he was snowed out.

Safety Skits Demonstrate Careless Driving Results

By DON SCHAEFER
The 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion nearly went to town last Thursday night and showed up with a record of three accidents. But there were no arrests, damages or disciplined drivers.

The accidents, ranging from rear end collision to drunken driving were mock demonstrations of some of the things which can befall an unwary driver. They were staged by members of the battalion at their monthly meeting in building E-1 of the Infantry School's Automotive Department. The 52nd, under the command of Lt. Col. Waldon C. Winston, has, according to Norman Evans, Infantry Center safety director, maintained for the past year one of the highest safety records on the post.

Last July the battalion set a driving record of 284,569 miles in 200 vehicles with no fatalities. The commander, as well as a responsibility was pointed up at last Thursday's meeting. Prior to the presentation of the skits, Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale, Infantry Center chief of chaplains, spoke to the drivers on the value of the Community Chest and the works and services contributions help continue and maintain. The demonstrations the drivers staged, graphic skits illustrated the reasons why some of the accidents which actually happened to members of the battalion did happen and how they could have been avoided. The first demonstration was shown to the listeners by one of their own members, a private who had recently been involved in the overturning of a trailer towed by a jeep. First Lt. Louis Davino, the 27th Transportation Car company's motor and safety officer, pointed out the hazard of the vehicle had been moving in keeping with the speed limit, the limit was too fast for the driving conditions.

There was a demonstration of two trucks colliding, pointing up lack of watchfulness which can lead to disaster. For the last demonstration of the evening, Colonel Winston took part in a skit showing the trouble which results from an over-indulgence in alcoholic beverages before or while driving.

Mr. Edward H. Sullivan, who had, for the past year, held the record for safety. "Now" he said, the group that of October, your battalion has not shown its usual standard. It is the purpose of the meetings to make you, all professional drivers, realize your greater responsibility which includes helping other drivers. The meeting followed a day of safety discussion by representatives of the army and civilian agencies who met here last Thursday and Friday for a field safety training seminar. At last Thursday's session, Dr. Walter A. Cutler, commander and assistant professor for safety education at New York university; Donald Buck, assistant army safety director, and William H. Guse, this army safety director, spoke to the gathering of regimental, battalion, separate company and staff safety officers.

All types of safety problems and ways and means of relieving them were discussed. Highlight of last Thursday's session was a demonstration of the stopping distances required by vehicles. Several of the safety officers attending the seminar participated. Estimates of stopping distances were made and in physical demonstration proved wrong, most of the estimates being under the actual distances required.

The last session of the seminar which ended on Friday opened with an address by Dr. Cutler on training functions in safety. A round table discussion of the troop information program and how safety problems of enter into it occupied the greater part of last Friday's agenda.

The round table included Dr. Cutler, moderator, Mr. Parker, Mr. Buck, Mr. Knapp, Lt. Col. John T. Wright, Infantry Center G-3, Mr. Evans, Don Cutler, safety engineer, and T. A. Banister, chief of Fort Benning's civilian personnel division.

19 Million Living Listed On U.S. War Vet Rolls

Some 19,000,000 men and women who have fought this nation's wars are still alive, Veterans Administration officials in Washington disclosed last week.

Of a total of nearly 25,000,000 who participated, 834,000 died in service. Tabulations as of Sept. 30, showed that 16,535,000 participated in World War II, of whom 409,000 died in service. Living World War II veterans, not including those still in the armed services, total 15,252,000. Only those who served on the United side are included in the Veterans Administrator's figures for the Civil War. On the basis of Union casualties alone, however, that war was the second most costly in the country's history. Of 2,924,000 who fought for the Union, 364,000 died in the service.

VA officials said that, although they have no figures on those who fought and died for the Confederacy, they believe that casualties on that side were somewhat less. The Union survivors are still alive. Although the VA doesn't know the number, Confederate survivors still living, 37 are known to have been alive last May. In World War I, 4,744,000 took part and 131,200 died in service. The tabulation showed 5,570,000 World War I veterans still living. The Spanish-American war had 392,000 participants, with 11,000 in-service deaths and 125,000 veterans still living. Figures on participants and deaths in the Indian wars of 1866 and 1868 are not available, but 595 veterans of those wars are still alive. The figures for the other wars: Mexican war — 130,000 participants, 13,000 in-service deaths; War of 1812 — 538,000 participants, 2,000 in-service deaths; Revolutionary war — 395,000 participants, 4,000 in-service deaths. There are no living veterans of these wars, VA spokesmen said.

Awards Are Presented At 30th Infantry Parade

A command inspection of the 30th Infantry regiment last Saturday was followed by a regimental parade at which three Bronze Star medals and a certificate of achievement were awarded members of the unit.

Maj. Gen. W. Clark, Third division commanding general, paid tribute to the outstanding records of the four men.

M-Sgt. Charley Steed of Company M, received the Bronze Star for his actions during the Normandy campaign in the European theater of operations. Sgt. 1st cl. Clifton Mason of Company F was awarded the Bronze Star for exemplary conduct on Oct. 21, 1944, in the European theater. Capt. Edward H. Sullivan of Company L received his Bronze Star for actions during the Rhineland campaign in the European theater of operations. In recognition of efficient performance of duty, Maj. Paul B. Bender, at present attending the advanced course at the Infantry School, was awarded a Third Army certificate of commendation for outstanding service as adjutant of the 30th Infantry from Feb. 14 to Sept. 2 of this year. Following the award of the citations, General Clark, the four men joined the general and Col. Joseph W. Boone, regimental commander, in reviewing the troops as they passed before the stand.

In the reviewing party were Brig. Gen. Roland P. Sauer, Third division artillery commanding general, Brig. Gen. J. Gladys, Infantry School Training regiment commander, Col. Marcus B. Bell, Infantry center G-4, Col. George H. Guse, Academic department of the Infantry School, and Col. Dennis M. Moore, 30th Infantry regiment commander, and their aides.

Commander of the parading troops was Lt. Col. Frank J. Sackton, executive officer of the 30th, and music for the ceremony was provided by the Third division band under the direction of CWO Frank Dialek. Prior to the parade the visiting officers, accompanied by Colonel Boone and Capt. Clarence C. Deffen, 30th S, had been received by Lt. Col. William J. Blythe, Second battalion commanding officer, to view a physical training platoon and a crack drill platoon of Company G, commanded by Sgt. 1st cl. Thomas H. Preston.

The inspection team was then received by Lt. Col. N. R. Hosket, Third battalion commander, to inspect personnel of Company L. Heavy Mortar company was also inspected as were various office and shop of the regimental motor pool. After having coffee in the Heavy Mortar company dining hall, the visiting officers proceeded to Tiger field to view the 30th Infantry regimental parade.

SPRINGTIME SPORTS by jim cloonan

Since this Sunday's contest with the Camp Campbell Angels will be the final one of Fort Benning's 1949 season, we feel that some credit should be extended to the many team members who, without actually playing, were highly instrumental in what ever success the Doughboys have made.

Credit should go first of all to Head Coach Mike Chester. Mike, after two successful seasons with the Fort Bragg, N. C. Troopers, took over the reins of the Doughboys early in August and despite a staggering injury list has been able to meet any and all competition with a fighting team. The inspired play of the Benning team against a superior Fort Bragg eleven will remain in our minds as one of the most stirring performances ever witnessed on a gridiron, and as such a great tribute to Coach Chester.

Line Coach Dick Bresnahan is another member of the Doughboy team who deserves generous praise. Unknown to most of Benning's football fans, Dick alone is responsible for the Doughboys' rugged forward wall. Although the Benning team hasn't fared too well this fall, very few scores have been made through the boys up front. Because he has done such a commendable job with the Doughboy line, and because so few know anything about him, we feel that his story should be told.

Dick started his football career in high school in Fitchburg, Mass., where he starred as a center. When he was graduated, he entered Colgate university where he played two years of football before receiving his appointment to the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y. He used up his remaining two years of eligibility playing for the academy, and then assisted the coaching staff by assuming plebe line coach duties at the same time starting on the Point's lacrosse team.

Following graduation, Dick attended the Infantry School, and later was assigned to the Far East command. While in the Pacific he joined his erstwhile teammate, Bob Chabot, in coaching the championship Seventh Infantry division team, which defeated a vaunted 11th Airborne squad to cop the Pacific title. Upon his return to the states, he was assigned to the 30th Infantry Regiment, where he remained until given duties with the post football team.

Another spirited lad, who has given ungrudgingly what free time he has had to the Doughboys is ex-Geargria Bulldog star Ardie McClure, who has taken this one from his officer's basic course at the Infantry School to join the team on week ends. Having some six years of high-caliber gridiron experience, he has added the Benning team a great deal with alert defensive play.

Business Manager John Mullaney and his staff of managers and trainers certainly should figure in any praise of the team. Responsible for the team's eating, sleeping, traveling and good health, they have been more than a necessary department during the season. They have been invaluable. There is no such word as overtime for them - they toil endlessly.

Last, but certainly not least, a word should be said for the "Bombers," as Mike has dubbed them. These boys are the third and fourth teams - the ones who bat their brains out Monday through Friday, and keep the benches warm on Sunday. The boys who scrimmage alertness, drive and know-how into the varsity. More than just names on the program, they are perhaps the coaches' greatest instructive asset. In practice they may represent any team, and run that team's plays against the first string men. Here at Benning, as on every other football field, it's the "Bombers" who perform the practice team drudgery all week, so that the starting lineup can play a better game on Sunday.

High School Teams Face Showdown for AA Title

Georgia's Class AA high school football is almost at little rest lies ahead for the Regional champions. Glynn academy, Lanier, Brown and Marietta are preparing for sudden-death playoffs to decide who rates the 1949 laurels.

Only three games remain on the regular AA schedule, and they won't mean anything but possible rearrangement of standings on levels below the winners. On Tuesday Jordan plays Columbus, and Thursday Benedictine meets Savannah and Boy's Catholic plays Richmond academy in a daylight game.

In the first playoff tilt, undefeated Glynn academy will top scoring Sonny George, m e e t s Lanier of Macon Dec. 2.

Doughs Trim Tars For Third Victory

Fort Benning's Doughboys resumed the field, the game assumed a different aspect. The Doughboys immediately showed an inspired drive that rocked the Jacksonville Navy Flyers in Doughboy stadium.

The home team's offense was sparked by the Hemphill-Griffin pass combination that clicked for two scores to win the contest.

Quarterback Don Hemphill, hobbled for several weeks by a bad knee, succeeded in hurling two ultimate scores to End Vern Griffin during the third period to begin and end the scoring for the home team.

Jax-Navy's only score was a made by End Buck Dornay, at the gathered in a 45-yard heave by Harry Marr and galloped for 30 yards and a touchdown.

Throughout the entire first half of the game the ball was pushed back and forth in the field without either team threatening a score.

At times a single play would break for a substantial gain, but on the whole the pigskin remained between the 20-yard lines.

As the half-time ceremonies came to a close and the teams

Step Down, Notre Dame

A small college team in South Carolina announced recently that its ball team was better than that of the mighty Notre Dame.

Erskine College, of Orangeburg, S. C., figures it this way: Erskine defeated Newberry by a one touchdown. Newberry defeated Presbyterian by the margin. Presbyterian defeated Davidson by two touchdowns.

Davidson upset North Carolina State by one touchdown. N. C. State beat Wake Forest by two touchdowns. Wake Forest topped Duke by two touchdowns.

Duke almost tied North Carolina. That leaves Erskine nine touchdowns better than the Tarheels, and North Carolina held the first five scores.

Locale lummi have yet to suggest a post-season game between the two schools.

10-yard line, where Hemphill connected to Griffin for the initial tally. Bill Jory failed to make the conversion, and the score stood 6-0 for the Doughboys.

Nine minutes later the same play provided another score for the Doughboys as Hemphill again spotted Griffin in the clear and again connected for the extra point, and the score moved to 12-0 for the home team.

The sailors bounced back with a fury, and seconds after receiving the Dough's kick following the home team's score, Harry Marr tossed to Buck Dornay for the visitor's only score. The try for point-after was blocked.

The remaining 12 minutes of the game proved a draw between two fighting squads as first one team and then the other would gain possession of the ball, but after a few yards, and then lose it.

Finally, in the waning minutes of the contest, the Doughs grabbed the leather and bung onto it, punching out time-eating yards through the middle, until the final pistol sounded.

Throughout the game the Doughboys' play was marked by Vern Griffin, who played 60 minutes of football, both on offense and defense, who scored both the touchdowns and who was instrumental in destroying Jacksonville's scoring opportunities.

Also starting for the Doughs were Fullback Gale Suits, who accounted for most of Benning's yardage on the ground, and Quarterback Don Hemphill, whose gifted arm placed two scores in Griffin's arms.

The 54th was held scoreless in the third quarter but early in the fourth it completed another pass for the final and winning tally.

Canine Show Arrangement Going Ahead

Plans for the sanctioned dog show, to be held in the Main gymnasium on Dec. 4 under the auspices of the Columbus Kennel Club, are progressing rapidly.

A training class to assist owners in handling their dogs was held last Monday evening at the Polo Hunt club, and a similar clinic will be held there by the Columbus Kennel club on Tuesday, Nov. 29, at 7:30 p.m.

These classes are designed primarily to help the dog get used to close contact with other canines and to accustom them to close examination by strangers.

In addition to this practical work, many hints on showing a dog will be given, which should enable the dog's owner to put him through his paces at home before the day of the show.

Instructors at the clinic will also give information on the grooming and trimming of animals.

A few of the grooming rules emphasized by the clinic were: 1. Dog should be brushed and combed at least two or three times a week. For brushing a rather stiff bristled brush should be used. Except in a few breeds, the hair should be brushed just the way it grows.

2. In combing, care should be taken not to gouge the dog or pull hair out by the roots. Snags and mats should be especially carefully attended to. If a mat is too difficult to comb out, it must be removed before being eligible for the show.

3. In trimming the dog, a few general policies should be followed. The long coarse hairs on the muzzle and eyebrows should be trimmed down smoothly. Any patchiness in the coat should be removed so that the dog possesses smooth lines. One should keep in mind at all times that the purpose of trimming is to show off an animal's good points.

This daily grooming and trimming is especially important because it is the only method of bringing out luster of the coat, as well as removing dirt, fleas and other pests, according to the instructors.

Another item concerning the dog's grooming which was covered by the experts at the clinic was the matter of nail-clipping. One dangerous aspect of this trimming, advised the instructors, was to be especially careful not to injure the quick. Toenails should be clipped according to the instructors, to avoid the spreading of an animal's foot which would result from the nails being too long.

The dog should be bathed several days before the show. This item was brought up by the experts since they advised that a single would care to handle a dirty dog.

Following are the requirements which an animal must meet before being eligible for the show:

- 1. The dog must be purchased. (It need not be registered).
- 2. On the date of the show, the dog must have reached the age of three months.
- 3. The dog must be capable of reproducing.

Hunting Season Safety Stressed

American Red Cross officials listed, it is weak eight safety precautions for hunters.

1. Guns should always be carried so the hunter can control the direction of the muzzle even if he stumbles.

2. Hunters should treat every gun as though it were loaded.

3. Carry only empty guns, taken down or with the action open, in to your automobile, camp or home.

4. Always be sure the barrel and action are clear of obstruction.

5. Be sure of where you are aiming before you fire and never point a gun at anything as which you do not intend to fire.

6. Never climb a tree or fence with a loaded gun.

7. Never shoot at a flat, hard surface of the surface of water.

8. Do not mix gunpowder and alcohol.

Cadets Favored Over Navy In Annual Contest

By JIM CLOONAN and ROBBY ROBINSON

The wonderful autumn madness of football, which celebrated its 80th anniversary Nov. 6, is coming to a close. The final games of the year are always fast and furious. They are invariably steeped in tradition and give the most fiery of rivalries—the yearly fight of football of the year.

Leading the field always is the annual Army-Navy tilt held in Philadelphia on neutral soil, a game which can never be predicted with any degree of certainty. Last year the valiant Midshipmen upset the Black Knights with a terrific tie. This year Navy has done surprisingly well throughout a hard season while Army has yet to be tried. The game ought to be a thriller, but the cadets should take it.

Another traditional battle will be played in Philadelphia tomorrow between Pennsylvania and Cornell. Here again will be a really close game—with records almost identical entering the contest. It is hard to pick either team. Hopefully we give the nod to Navy.

Since a great many of the nation's gridiron elevens are through for the season, we will separate the week's games into those played tomorrow, Thanksgiving Day, and those played on the following Saturday.

THANKSGIVING DAY

Fenn Over Cornell—Two evenly matched teams will battle it out in this contest. Both squads have an ample supply of swift, hard running backs charging hefty linemen. The comparative records of both, which of course, are not a thing, are also similar. In short, you have to be mildly insane to make a decision either way. We pick the Quakes.

Brown Over Colgate—Another old rivalry renewed as the Bears tangle with the Red Raiders. The Raiders have had a pretty unsuccessful season this year, having lost to almost everyone they played. Brown, on the other hand, has won but one and should march over Colgate.

College of Pacific Over Cal Tech—To wind up a perfect season in perfect fashion, Eddie LeBaron and his fiery teammates should swamp Cal

Tech for several scores. COP, after a couple of good but not surpassing seasons, is back where it was several years ago, on top.

Stanislaus Over Business—The Iron Ducks once were feared as a national power in football, but that power has long since waned. In this case minor southern power should be the victor.

Ciudad Over Davidson—The West Point of the South is another minor power, but Davidson is even minorer.

Maryland Over West Virginia—The Terrans have played the great majority of their games to good advantage this season, and should take a nice record. They should take the Mountaineers.

Missouri Over Kansas State—Captain Bob Fuchs and his men will have it all their way over the Wildcats tomorrow. The Tigers have lost only two games this season, which makes them almost out of K. S.' class.

V. M. I. Over V. P. I.—A great battle will be waged between two old institutions in Virginia. The Gobblers, defeated by almost everyone they played, will be no match for a heavy Kayet squad.

Washington Over Wichita—Two fairly small colleges as far as size and eminence go, but their football is as good as any. Chuck Baer's Titans should take this one.

North Texas State Over Nevada—The Wolfpack, weak all year, is due for a rough time against a powerful Mount team. Since Stan Heath left, Nevada has had trouble making the headlines.

Washington & Lee Over Eichenwald—The halls of the Confederacy will echo to the Washington and Lee Swans, the nation's most colorful football squads, as the Generals play host to the old rivalry renewed.

Texas over Texas A&M—An intra-state contest that will be a treat for everyone. Both sides have good records and both are pointing for the game, with the Longhorns.

Utah State over Utah—Coach George Melnikovich should make up for a mediocre season as his Aggies take over against the Redskins.

SATURDAY

Kansas over Arizona—The Jayhawks, sporting their crimson and blue as Tucson this Saturday, should march over a rather uncertain Wildcat eleven. The Border conference has never been a match for the Big Seven.

Arkansas over Tulsa—Although the Sooners have never forgotten—not after Glenn Dobbs—they won't be remembered for any of this season's games, and probably not for this one against a big Razorback crew.

Army over Navy—We really hate to call this one. While our good sense tells us that the Black Knights of the Hudson have everything in their favor as they take the field against the Midshipmen, their land attack is perhaps the most perfected in the southeast. They certainly should rout the Vandies.

Auburn over Clemson—The Plainsmen did a fine job last week against Georgia Tech, and might throw their weight around a little too much for the Tigers.

Alabama over Florida—The Gators, Hunsinger and all, won't have much to offer against a great Crimson Tide offense. With a big line, fast backs, and a sparkling offense, Coach Hall ought really to shine in this one.

Fordham over N.Y.U.—The Violets were once in Fordham's class. They no longer are. The Rams, sparked by ace Passer George Deny, marched defiantly against the vaunted Army team and showed well. They should march again, and to the Violets' dismay.

Georgia Tech over Georgia—The Engineers, in spite of the fact that the Bulldogs are always pointing for this one, should take the day. The Yellow Jacket forward wall has been staunch enough for the season to hold other teams—other teams with better backs than any the Bulldogs can field.

Boston College over Holy Cross—The Crusaders, it was thought at the beginning of the season, were on the upgrade this fall. If so, they must have really started, because they're nowhere near peak strength now.

Mississippi State over Mississippi State—The Rebels should have fun licking tarantula out of the Nacoms. Because of all heated rivalries this one is right out in front as far as fire goes. State is on its way up in football, though, and next season should be quite a power.

West Texas State over New Mexico—Another game played in the Sunstroke Bowl of the southwest. The Sun Devils have done rather miserably all season, and the Buffaloes will add to this discouraging record.

Virginia over North Carolina—Here is another game in which the fur is due to fly. Every Thanksgiving thousands of people jam into the stadium for this one of the south's autumn landmarks. Every Thanksgiving these thousands never know just what is going to happen. This Thanksgiving we pick the Cavaliers.

Notre Dame over Southern California—A rough one. The Irish will experience no real difficulty, but just the same it will be a rugged game from start to finish.

Oklahoma over Oklahoma A & M—Mister Jim Owens and the Sooners should have fun.

West Virginia over North Carolina—The Mountaineers should have fun.

Virginia over North Carolina—Here is another game in which the fur is due to fly. Every Thanksgiving thousands of people jam into the stadium for this one of the south's autumn landmarks. Every Thanksgiving these thousands never know just what is going to happen. This Thanksgiving we pick the Cavaliers.

rest of the Sooners will be aiming high in this game, and the score could skyrocket. The Aggies should lose by a fairly disheartening score anyway.

Rice over Baylor—Two behemoths of the southwest meet with a smash that may be heard from Memphis to Mobile. Two big lines. Two big fast backfields. Two fiery coaches. Just Nealy and Bob Woodruff. But the nod goes to the Owls.

Wake Forest over South Carolina—The Gamecocks have been lukewarm and ice cold all season. We think this is one of their times to be ice cold.

Tennessee over Vanderbilt—The Vols have had a brilliant season this fall, and their offense, the widely known Tennessee system, has become even more respected. Their land attack is perhaps the most perfected in the southeast. They certainly should rout the Vandies.

Southern Methodist over Texas—The Horned Lizards should suffer at the hands of Doak's men, even though the Mustangs have failed before to O'War out of town.

capitalize on their speed and size. Several times they have discouraged us with their unaccountable losses. But this time we'll take them over the Frogs.

Hardin-Simmons over Texas Tech—The Cowboys are back in the big time after a jaunt through the lesser leagues of the Lone Star State. And they should celebrate their re-entry into competition with a sound trouncing of the Tech boys.

Louisiana State over Tulane—L. S. U. is another team that has been hot and cool, but we think this is a hotish week for them. They are due to beat the Green Wave by two touchdowns.

North Carolina State over William & Mary—The Wolfpack is slightly unpredictable. Just slightly. But they should be able to mop up the Colonials this Saturday.

And with these last predictions we end our column for this fall. With the end of the season naturally comes a summing up. For many reasons, we will wait until these games are over before we tell you how we did. Then we will catch the next Man O'War out of town.

Women Golfers Given Turkeys

The annual women's Thanksgiving turkey—shoots at the Fort Benning Golf and Country club last week resulted in the award of three turkeys and an equal number of chickens to winners and runners-up.

In the nine-hole match play, Mrs. Florence Hargrove took the honors and the turkey with high score, while Mrs. Walker was the runner-up and went home with a chicken.

Two 18-hole competition were open in the 18-hole contest. The first flight was taken by Mrs. Frank Goss, who won the big bird, and Mrs. Irene Curtis, who won the little one.

The second 18-hole flight was taken by Mrs. Roney as turkey-winner, and by Mrs. Peyton as chicken-winner.

Glue-Fingered Flank Man Named Doughboy of Week

End Vern Griffin, who scored two touchdowns to give Benning a 12-0 victory over Jacksonville Navy last Sunday, gets the nod as Doughboy of the Week.

Griffin, playing a sparkling offensive game, succeeded in breaking away from the Fliers' pass defense twice to gather in scores. In addition, he broke up several end sweep threats.

Throughout the first half, when the Doughs' defensive play far outshone their lukewarm offense, Griffin played on both offense and defense, starring on the latter.

Time after time the visitors started around Benning's left end from their powerful Tennessee system single-wing formation, only to have their inter-runners fighting for essential downs.

Since their shift was mostly to their right, the bulk of their ground attack was aimed at Benning's left end. In spite of this, however, Griffin was alert and accounted for nearly every tackle in his area.

After halftime, when the Doughboys' offense began clicking, Griffin's outstretched arms were Henshill's targets for several tosses, two of which went for scores and the others adding valuable yardage to the home team's march.

In addition to his outstanding glue-fingered artistry, Griffin was instrumental in sending Benning's backs on their way downfield with some fine examples of blocking. His vicious interference more than once cleared the way for Doughboy runners fighting for essential downs.

Post Triumphs In Pistol Meet

Fort Benning's pistol team has "shown its stuff" if winning contests is any indication of their skill.

Recently the four-man team journeyed to Fort McPherson, Ga., to compete with other civilian and military teams in a National Rifle association registered tourney.

The team, made up of Lt. Col. Perry D. Swindler, Lt. Col. Milton C. Taylor, Lt. Clark Campbell and Lt. Frederick J. Keller, all members of the Infantry

School, capped first place honors in the .45 calibre team match. Competition facing the Fort Benning representatives included several professional civilian marksmen as well as crack service sharpshooters.

Sgt. Hucllet Benner, of Fort Knox, Ky., won the silhouette pistol title at the international shooting championships here recently. Sgt. Benner scored 800 out of a possible 800.

 - Once. Navy played the U. of Washington to a 14-14 tie on New Year's Day, 1924.
 - In the three years the Four Horsemen played together, Notre Dame lost two, tied one, and won 28 including a Rose Bowl triumph over Stanford.

Slate Diamond Clinics

With the overall objective of improving amateur baseball, approximately 200 coaching clinics will be held across the nation this winter by active professional players and ex-major league stars for an estimated 40,000 coaches and managers of American Legion junior baseball teams.

Needs Only 46 Yards

Billy Mixon, Georgia's flashy junior left halfback from Tifton, needs to gain only 46 yards in the last game of the season to establish the best running average of a Bulldog since the great Charlie Trippi.

Trippi led Georgia in 1948 with 744 yards in 115 carries.

New Housing Units Opened Near Post

Fort Benning's long road to alleviation of the housing shortage reached another milestone last week with the opening of the 400-unit Camellia apartments and announcement that approximately 70 families have already moved into the $3,000,000 project.

Located between the Columbus-Fort Benning super highway and old Lumpkin road, just south of the traffic circle, the apartments consist of four-and-one-half and three-and-one-half units with bedroom, living room and dining room combined and kitchen.

A special showing of the apartments took place Sunday, and an office at 82 Mathison road has been set up for persons wishing to inspect the project.

Planned as a veteran's preferred project, the units will principally serve the increased Fort Benning population, it was announced by C. Edwin Galt, president of Williams Construction company.

The project, whose units will rent for from $45 to $85, is complete with parking areas, eight children's playgrounds and the necessary utilities.

One hundred and twelve of the units have four-and-one-half rooms, with the living room and dining rooms combined, and 224 units also are four-and-one-half rooms in size with a slightly altered arrangement.

The remaining 32 units are three-and-one-half rooms with one bedroom, kitchen and combined living room and dining room. One eight-family apartment in the middle of the project has been set aside for families wishing here for three-month periods.

Wild West Show To Appear Here

The wild west will invade Fort Benning Dec. 1 and 2, in the form of the old Miller Brothers Wild West Show from Oklahoma.

The show, which features everything from bucking broncos to bucking model T cars will be presented Friday, Dec. 11 at 8 p. m., Saturday at 2 p. m., and again Saturday at 8 p. m. Admission will be 90 cents for adults and 25 cents for children between six and 12 years of age. It was announced by the Infantry Center special services office, sponsors of the rodeo.

In addition to the usual bronco and brahma bull riding, the "Shooting" Manstelds will present a marksmanship exhibition. There will also be trained and jumping horses and a jumping music.

ASSUME NEW DUTIES.—Col. Charles H. Karlstad, left, and Col. Thomas Robinson assumed duties last week as two of the Infantry Center top officials. Colonel Karlstad is the new chief of staff, replacing Col. Joseph A. Nichols, who has been hospitalized. Colonel Robinson has been assigned as new adjutant general, a vacancy created recently with the retirement of Col. Arthur Turvis.

Chest Donations Far Shy of Goal

Infantry Center military and civilian personnel have lagged in their donations to the 1949 Community Chest, a last-minute compilation of figures discloses.

With the drive slated to end today chest officials reported that only $17,224.40 has been received—slightly more than half the goal of $30,435.15.

Officials opined that a tally early next week of final donations might show an increase which will bring the total close to the anticipated amount. They added that only 13,000 persons have opened their pocket-books for the drive.

The following breakdown of contributions shows the various units and their donation:

Infantry Center headquarters, $311.75; Army Field Force staff board No. 3, $244.80; Academic department, $547.35; Provisional Medical group, $657.65; Student Training regiment, $2,085.75; Infantry School detachment, $1,178.90; Area Service unit, Provisional group, $2,553.85; Third

EM Discharge Unit Established

To facilitate discharge of enlisted personnel in the 30th Infantry regiment inducted or enlisted in the army under the Selective Service Act of 1948, a special discharge detachment has been organized, regimental officials announced this week.

Under the command of Lt. I. Robert B. Walker, formerly executive officer of Company H, 30th Infantry, the detachment began operation Monday. It will handle the housekeeping, feeding and administration connected with personnel being processed for discharge.

The detachment will work in conjunction with the regimental personnel section, which will continue to handle most of the paper work, regimental officials said.

Six barracks have been requisitioned to handle the discharges, and personnel due for discharge are being transferred to the detachment 10 days prior to date of separation, the time allotted for processing.

There is a similar group of approximately 1,000 enlisted personnel assigned to the regiment are expected to be discharged this month and January, according to regimental sources.

With few exceptions the personnel in question are one-year enlistees, whose terms will expire during the "peaks" and 21-month inductees and enlistees being released at the expiration of 12 months service.

Solution To School Problem Is Sought

'Good News' Will Appear Here Dec. 12

"Good News," Third army soldier show, is expected to begin its tour of Third army installations within a week. Infantry center special services officials announced this week.

The old-time Broadway hit is expected to arrive at Fort Benning Dec. 12 for nine-day run, officials said.

The show has been in rehearsal for the past month, and nine Fort Benning personnel are included in the cast.

The cast includes 35 singers, dancers and comedians. A 15-piece orchestra, made up of members of Third army bands, will supply music.

Schedule of the playing dates, times and places, is expected to be released next week.

Legal Services Offered to GIs

The Columbus Lawyers club has announced that legal advice and services which do not require extensive research or active representation in court will be furnished without charge to Fort Benning personnel.

A volunteer civilian lawyer, club officials said, is available by appointment at Fort Benning each Wednesday from 2-5 p. m.

Those who require legal advice which does entail research or court representation may retain a lawyer in the usual manner.

Appointments may be made by calling 3112 prior to 11 a. m. on Wednesday mornings.

Post-City Relations Stressed at Parley

In a move to cement relations between Columbus citizens and young men stationed at Fort Benning, 20 civic leaders and Fort Benning officers met last week to organize a committee on religion and welfare.

The group heard talks by J. W. Woodruff Jr., temporary chairman of the group; Lt. Col. Roland Murphy, special services officer, and Walter Richards, mayor of Columbus. All three stressed the need of understanding and closer relations between citizens of Columbus and soldiers.

Mayor Richards pointed out that the problem is the same as that of home and those friends of war "when there were no more men stationed at Fort Benning than there are in Columbus."

"There is a similar group of young civilian soldiers away from home today," the mayor said. "The only difference is that we then had the enthusiasm of the community to back the organization. Now we have the organization but not the enthusiasm."

"Many fine young men are at Benning who would be an asset to the home and whose friendship would be worthwhile," he declared. "The problem is to establish a contact between them

Committee Hears Benning Officials

Fort Benning Children's school officials appeared before a house subcommittee in Atlanta last week as principal witnesses in an inquiry of the financial situation of schools affected by mushrooming military installations.

The school officials aired their problems last Friday along with other military communities caught between recent financial cutbacks and the problem of overcrowded facilities.

Civilian school superintendents from cities adjacent to military posts also met with the subcommittee to present their side of the problem.

Headed by Rep. Burke, (D-Ohio), the investigating group will determine a solution to the growing problem of how children of servicemen will be educated with the best of facilities but at a minimum cost.

At the morning session, Col. James F. Torrence Jr., described the school situation created by Fort Benning during and after the war. He urged the additional federal aid to help alleviate overcrowded conditions in schools both on the post and in nearby communities.

Colonel Torrence reported that military personnel living on the Fort Benning reservation last month had 219 children going to off-post district schools, principally Columbus high school and the Baker Village school in Muscogee county. He estimated this figure would jump to 324 by September, 1950. He said the public schools would be hard pressed to handle the increase.

In addition, he continued, the post operates an elementary school for children of military personnel. Enrollment at the post school last month was 667 and will jump to an estimated 1,163 by next September. Columbus and Muscogee county officials have said they could not possibly absorb the children now attending the post school, he added.

Likewise, the colonel asserted, it would be impossible under a

Marshal Slim Here on Visit

The British army's chief of the imperial general staff, Field Marshal Sir William Joseph Slim, arrived at the Infantry Center yesterday for a two-day tour and inspection of post facilities.

The top-ranking dignitary arrived here from Washington where he visited Acting Secretary of Defense Stephen Early and several other Defense department officials living on the Fort Benning reservation last month.

Field Marshal Slim addressed officers of the Infantry School at the Main theater.

Today he will witness the Infantry School's famous tactics firepower demonstrations, a training maneuvers. He will also tour and inspect units of the Third Infantry division.

Before his return to England on Dec. 4, Field Marshal Slim will make a one-day stop at Fort Knox, Ky., where he will make a brief inspection of the Army's Armored Division Training Center. He will also visit the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., where he will present Army Secretary Gordon Gray with a silver centerpiece.

Field Marshal Slim is accompanied by his aide, Col. Richard W. Craddock, and Col. Clarence W. Bennett, United States army aide.

New Fieldhouse Near Completion

Fort Benning's new fieldhouse, under construction since last year, is rapidly nearing completion and an official opening is expected sometime in December.

Although the Infantry Center special services office has not yet made all arrangements, plans are under way for an appropriate opening ceremony.

The $600,000 fieldhouse will be turned over tomorrow to the post engineer for final inspection before it is taken over by special services.

Special services officials said that there is about $30,000 worth of recreational equipment to be installed in the new structure before it will be ready for operation. Included in this equipment will be bleachers for boxing matches, basketball games and other attractions.

Occupying nearly a quarter of a block opposite the school, the new building will be the most modern of its kind in the Third army area, officials said.

M-Sgt. Tom Fields, the Officers' club's beaming and affable headwaiter, has decided that he's a "little too old" for army rigor. However, his 24-year stint at the Officers' club holds so many nostalgic memories that he said assuringly, "I'm coming back as civilian headwaiter."

Recruiters Answer Enlistment Queries

A remarkable increase in reenlistments during the last month, from 29 in the week of Oct. 29 Nov. 4 to 77 in the four days from Nov. 19-23, has hit the Infantry Center recruiting office, it was announced this week.

The steady rise hasn't faltered since Oct. 29, according to the recruiting office, and personnel inquiries, in addition to completing the necessary paper work to handle the flood of reenlistments.

Company Holds Annual Supper

The men and officers of Headquarters and Headquarters company, 15th Infantry regiment, recently held their annual company supper.

During the evening, Col. Dennis M. Moore, regimental commander, presented the regimental basketball trophy to Pfc. Charles Hosket, team captain. He also presented the volleyball trophy to M-Sgt. Porter C. Funn.

Others who were commended for their spirit and cooperation, saying it was "unparalleled by anything I have seen in my 30 years in the army."

Benning Baker Establishes High Pastry Course Score

This week's Soldier of the Week, Sgt. Preston A. Scott, makes more "dough" each week than a banker handles in a year.

SGT. PRESTON A. SCOTT Soldier of The Week

Sergeant Scott, chief baker for the 130th Quartermaster Bakery company, recently completed the Third Army's pastry baking course with the highest average in the class.

Coupled with his outstanding score was his laudable display of initiative and industry in effectively solving certain complex problems.

A letter of commendation from his commanding officer, Maj. Don C. Romig, reflects the school instructor's opinion of Sergeant Scott's efforts to obtain a high score. The honor graduate immediately, through his untiring efforts, was labeled an industrious and uncompromising student, not satisfied with just a satisfactory solution to a problem.

Third EM Extend Enlistment Periods

Several men of the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, recently extended their enlistment or reenlisted for further service.

Extending their one-year enlistment to 21 months were Pvt. Paul Smith, Grady Reynolds, Andrew Sankay, Tommie Mitchell, Preston Miles and Vincent Shipp, all members of Company K.

Pfc. Lemay Eamon, B. J. Evans and Curtis Embry and Pfc. Ivory Cox and Charles Kennedy reenlisted for three years each.

CIVILIANS COMMENDED... Four civilians were last week awarded certificates of meritorious service and achievement in their jobs at the Infantry Center. Shown receiving his award from Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, is Ernest M. Casaday, a clerk in the message center. Others receiving the certificates that were signed by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third Army commander, were David C. Bowen, Jr., information specialist and editor of The Bayonet; Henry Turner, clerk in the adjutant general's miscellaneous section; and Louis A. Lucas, an administrative assistant in the adjutant general's section.

Thanksgiving Flashback

Post Captain Once Served Turkey Feast to Diplomats

Capt. Norman Roberts stood gazing at the uncarved turkey displayed in the dining hall of the Third Medical Battalion, headquarters of the unit's men last Thursday, and his thoughts flashed back to a year and several thousand miles.

On Thanksgiving day in 1949, Captain Roberts, now commander of Headquarters company, Third Medical Battalion, established a reputation as a culinary expert among diplomats of three nations.

The place was Algiers, North Africa; the guests were United States foreign service officials, French diplomats and Arab dignitaries, and the dining hall was the banquet room of the famed Hotel St. George, one-time headquarters of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Elaborate arrangements for their feast had been made by members of the U. S. diplomatic service, but they suddenly found themselves faced with an anticipated problem: the Arab cooks didn't know how to cook turkey, the centerpiece of the menu.

"As a matter of fact," Captain Roberts recalled, "they weren't familiar with the preparation of any of the fowl items included in a typical American Thanksgiving dinner."

Just before the situation reached the crucial stage, the captain stepped up and offered to prepare the dinner for approximately 90 guests.

But Captain Roberts' troubles were just beginning, in the kitchen he encountered difficulty in trying to make the non-English speaking Arabs understand what was to be done, and his inability to converse in Arabic added an interesting complication to matters.

Finally, however, the spread was prepared, and the captain was lauded on the success of the dinner.

Nostalgically recalling the pomp and ceremony that accompanied the feast, Captain Roberts related how the table was decorated with potteries, drapes and heavy cushions and the walls embellished with colorful Arabic rugs.

A touch of the atmosphere of the Near East was provided by the "White Fathers," a special sect of Catholic priests who have devoted their lives to converting Arabs from Mohammedanism to Christianity. The priests' dress like Arab sheiks with white bur-nooses, red skull caps and heavy chains of rosary beads suspended from their waists.

The Arabian waiters, at the feast also wore clad in white bur-nooses.

Captain Roberts wasn't exactly surprised by the amount of preparation, however, he had several years of experience in arranging dining halls behind him at the time he undertook the project.

Alger Hiss Goes on Trial for Second Time

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — The second trial of Alger Hiss started last week. Whitaker, Chairman, testified again. The U. S. hopes it won't be a repetition of the first trial with a different cast. Harry Bridges, chief of the C.I.O. Longshoremen is once again being tried for perjury because he said he wasn't a communist. The government hopes to make this, the third trial, stick and send Bridges back to his native Australia. It looks like FDR's eldest son, James, will be running as the Democratic candidate against Earl Warren, Republican governor of California, in the next election. Although unconfirmed there is a rumor that David Lilienthal, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, will retire. Reasons given are (1) so he can build up his income by private law practice, (2) an unwillingness to go through it again when his term expires in June, 1950, and (3) congress will be hot for reelection publicity.

Report from Washington

Concurrent Travel of Families Inadvisable

CONCURRENT TRAVEL of dependents with army personnel assigned to European stations is not advisable because of the housing conditions in the European command, Gen. Thomas T. Handy, European commander, has informed the Army Department. While simultaneous travel of army personnel and their dependents will not be forbidden, it will be discouraged. Personnel electing non-concurrent travel will be given the same priority for housing as personnel with concurrent traveling dependents. LOGEX-50, the army's 1950 logistical exercise, will be held at Fort Belvoir, Va., during the week of May 22-26, with 1,200 officers and enlisted students from service schools participating. The problem will be built around the theoretical landing of a U. S. invasion force near Cannes and St. Raphael, France, from North African bases, with an advance northward to Lyon and Dijon. This is the route followed by the army in 1944. THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT is assembling a staff of 100 military and civilian technicians for the big project of classifying and coding service jobs. POSSIBLE DANGER to the army's career guidance plan is seen in the stringent budget cuts facing the Defense Department. Freezes already imposed on non-career promotions into grades E-6 and E-7 may sharply restrict promotions except to fill vacancies caused by normal attrition. Normal attrition, at its present rate, will create top enlisted grade vacancies at a slow pace. QUALIFIED VOLUNTEERS will be welcomed for service with the Military District of

Few Human Ills Which Can't Be Cured by Salt

BY CHAPLAIN JOHN D. WILCOX
The basic ingredient of well-seasoned food is salt. So the salty, well-seasoned, well-arranged, well-guided life adds joy and zest to living. A wise father said: "Son, there are few human ills which cannot be cured by salt sweat, salt tears or salt voyage. The greatest blessing left to man after Eden, work, is the best source of salt sweat. A thoughtful conclusion in the face of the world industrial and commercial situation might be that millions of people are, or are becoming, allergic to work." Christianity is not a mere matter of goodness. Rather it is a stirring adventurous commitment of life in which man find their souls and goals. There is a mighty thrill in being a force in life. It does not take a genius to deduct that most worthwhile things in life are baptized at some time with the baptism of sorrow. Redemption is the result of "drinking the cup"

To Amuse On The Bookshelf

THE THREE WISHES OF JAMIE McRUIN BY CHARLES O'NEAL JULIAN MESSNER, INC. NEW YORK, PUBLISHER BY D. W. SCHAEFER

Overheard during the recent elections: Speaker: "Ladies and Gentlemen, my candidate is a self-made man. He started life as a barefoot boy." It begins with an impossible situation. Owen Rue Tavish, known as the "speaker" among the farmers of Ireland, tries to make a match between Jamie and Tiersa. The girl will bring a fine dowry but the Shanahans find Tavish has stocked Jamie's farm with borrowed cattle. There is a chase and a sabotaged bridge across a ravine. Jamie and Tavish plunge into the stream. They are declared dead and a wake held. But on the night of the wake, Jamie and Tavish, not dead, but wet, stand outside watching and listening to the fine things being said about them. They watch the money pour into the coffins. They know that after all the fine things that had been said about them they cannot return. They take the money and flee to America. There they meet the "travelers", a nomadic group of Irish who came to America during the great famine in Ireland. They are the remainders of the tinkers who have turned horse and mule traders. Jamie has his first wish. He has traveled far. When they meet the "travelers" Jamie sees Maeve. She is to him what the fairy queen promised. He falls in love but she is promised. At a meeting of the "travelers" in Atlanta, Jamie wins Maeve. The second wish is granted. But although Jamie and Maeve are happy there are no children and a curtain falls between them. Tavish sees it and he advises an adoption. How Jamie's third wish is granted is so delightful and poignant it would be wrong to condense it here. Suffice it to say there is a happy ending, an infrequent thing nowadays. The book is fantasy, yes, but Charles O'Neal must have had some communication with the fairy queen himself when he wrote the book. It spins an emerald web that is restful and without a spider, or at least, not a bad spider. For a good two hours of entertainment a reader could hardly go wrong with Jamie and Tavish and Maeve and the intriguing tales of the descendants of the tinkers. The Three Wishes of Jamie McRuin won a $5,000 prize awarded by The Christophers. It can bring more than money in prizes to a reader weary of bad women and unhappy men.

Group Entertains at Dinner Party

Officers of the Infantry Center's proven marshals office and their wives entertained with a dinner party in the Palm room and East lounge of the Officers' club recently with Capt. H. C. Mohr and Capt. Marshall E. Bullock as hosts.

Those attending were Lt. Col. and Mrs. Alvin E. Welsch, Capt. Harry C. Mohr, Capt. and Mrs. Frank J. Palmer, Capt. and Mrs. Marshall E. Bullock, Capt. and Mrs. Emmett T. Brice, Capt. and Mrs. Richard Anderson, Capt. and Mrs. Harry O. Lewis, Capt. and Mrs. James H. Davis, Capt. and Mrs. Edward H. Perkowski, Capt. and Mrs. Robert Pennington, Lt. Carl J. Palmer, 1st Lt. Ralph E. Meyer, 1st Lt. and Mrs. William R. Moore, 1st Lt. and Mrs. James C. Nix, 1st Lt. and Mrs. Robert Patterson, Lt. Gerald E. Aaron, WO1G George Montgomery and 1st Lt. Alan C. Burr.

A quiet, impressive ceremony marked the wedding of Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Hales, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Hales of Bayside, L. I., N. Y., and Pvt. Charles R. Hogwood, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. S. C. Hogwood of Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, in the Infantry Center chapel Friday at 3 p. m.

Chaplain (Capt.) Robert P. Canis, 15th Infantry regiment chaplain, read the marriage lines before a small assemblage of friends.

Cpl. Robert Preske, of Headquarters, Third Infantry division, presented nuptial music at the organ. Selections included three hymns, "The Christian Science hymnal," "Love," "Mother's Evening Prayer" and "Feed My Sheep." The Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin was the recessional, and Mendelssohn's Wedding March was the recessional.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Warren of Columbus attended the couple as best man and matron of honor.

The bride was lovely in a powder blue gown designed for afternoon wear. Her hat was of white angora, shaped like Turkish, with a matching black velvet band laced around the small crown. Her jewelry was a single-strand choker necklace of pearls, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and baby's breath.

The matron of honor wore a smartly tailored suit of royal blue, with matching accessories, and her corsage was of yellow rosebuds.

STAR IN OPERA... At left is Coe Glade, mezzo soprano, who will sing the title role in "Carmen" and Eric Rowton, tenor, who will sing the role of Don Jose in the opera to be presented here on Jan. 2.

Tickets Go on Sale Today For Carmen Presentation

Tickets for the opera "Carmen" to be brought here on Jan. 2 under the auspices of the Pi Alpha Kappa sorority will go on sale Dec. 1, announced Mrs. A. D. Long, ticket chairman. The New York Civic Opera's presentation of "Carmen" sung in French will be given at 8:30 p. m. in the auditorium of the Metropolitan high school and includes an outstanding cast.

Coe Glade will sing the role of Don Jose. Other members include Anton Marco, Josephine Dimia, Jane Maxwell, W. B. Holliday, John Montenegro, and John Johnson.

Miss Glade, a singing actress, is American born and though she has traveled extensively abroad, received most of her musical training in this country. She made her debut in New York city as America in Verdi's "Aida." A few months later she was drafted by the Chicago Civic Opera company. She has scored successfully in such diversified roles as Carmen, Mignon, Delilah, Amneris, and many other difficult operatic roles. Miss

MARRIED IN MAIN CHAPEL... Maj. and Mrs. Joseph E. Noble, Jr., following their marriage Friday in the Infantry Center chapel. Mrs. Noble is the former Miss Genevieve Robison of Columbus and Chicago. Major Noble is a student in advanced infantry officers' class No. 1.

Chicago Belle Is Married To Maj. Joseph E. Noble

The Infantry Center chapelments. Two large baskets of was the scene of an impressive ceremony Friday at 4 p. m. when Miss Genevieve Robison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Barton Robison of Chicago, became the bride of Maj. Joseph E. Noble, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Noble, of Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. Lucille Averitt presented a quarter hour program of organ music, while the guests assembled, and Mrs. Lily Clayton Garrett, vocalist sang "I Love You Truly," "Because" and "The Lord's Prayer." During the ceremony Mrs. Averitt played selections from Liebestraum.

Opening strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin heralded the approach of the wedding party, led by Usher Groomsmen Maj. Erwin Jones and Capt. Royce Eaves.

The bride carried a copy of the New Testament in white, centered with a single orchid in a shower of stephanotis, with white satin streamers falling to knee length from the shoulders. The book was a gift from her mother, which had been made especially for her to carry on the wedding day by the Gideon Bible company, for whom Mrs. Robison acts as business manager.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained with a reception in the East lounge and Palm room of the Officers' club. Approximately 75 guests attended.

The bride's table, overlaid with a lace cloth, was centered with a large wedding cake topped by three spun sugar wedding bells, flanked by tall white tapers in five-branched candelabra. During the reception the couple left for a short wedding trip to Atlanta. They are planning a honeymoon during the Christmas holidays. The bride chose for the simplicity of its carefully tailored and floral arrangement.

Buckland Hosts To Football Fans

Col. and Mrs. Daniel P. Buckland entertained in their quarters last Saturday following the Army-Navy football game broadcast, with aperitifs and a buffet dinner.

Mrs. Buckland used a unique centerpiece arrangement, made for the occasion by her daughter, Mrs. R. N. Ives, which featured a miniature football field, made of green blotting paper, marked to scale with the yardlines and goalposts at each end. A miniature Army mule with tall, white, pointed ears, in the center of the field with a football between them carrying the score of the day's game. The football field was edged with yellow chrysanthemums, and yellow tapers at each end of the table completed the decorations.

STR Cadre Officers Hold Thanksgiving Dinner Party

Cadre officers of the Student Training regiment staged their annual Thanksgiving party at the Officers' club recently. Tables were set in the main dining room. The regimental commander's table was artistically decorated with a large pumpkin filled with yellow daisies, set in a bed of colorful fall leaves, flanked by tall yellow tapers in low crystal candleholders. Miniature turkeys stood around the centerpiece. All tables were centered with small bouquets of daisy mums. The buffet table featured a centerpiece of fall fruit and nuts on a bed of bright red and yellow oak leaves. Tall yellow tapers in five-branched candleholders completed the decorations. The spice cabinet was topped with an enormous pumpkin in the midst of autumn foliage.

Two huge blue jardinières, filled with 20 1/2 inch colored oak leaves, stood at the entrance to the dining room, and the mantle over the fireplace in the main lounge was covered with a profusion of red pyracantha berries and greenery. Seated at the head table were Col. and Mrs. Sevier R. Tupper, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Howard F. Haberman, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ray E. Marshall, Lt. Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Frank J. Spittel, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Shields Warren and Maj. and Mrs. Jonathan E. Adams. Officers in charge of party arrangements were Capt. L. V. Bailey, chairman, Lt. John D. White, Capt. Sidney F. Anderson and Capt. Guy L. Tucker. Mrs. Bailey and her mother, Mrs. Mary Benize, from Puerto Rico, arranged the decorations. Music for dancing was provided by the Southern Cavaliers.

Fan Club Organized

The New York Yankees baseball club has formed a Gus H. Fan Club. The purpose of the club is to ensure more of the everyday fans of getting tickets to future World Series. Members will buy a book of 20 general admission tickets for the season and will be guaranteed a priority on two reserved seats if the Yanks play in the Series.

Battalion Holds Monthly Social
Thirty members and guests attended the monthly luncheon meeting of the officers' wives of the Provisional battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, held on the back porch of the Officers' club recently. Mrs. Howard R. Wilks and Mrs. Norman C. McCordell were hostesses. The table was centered with a replica of the harvest wagon, filled with copper daisy mums and a variety of colorful fall foliage, drawn by four miniature geese. Six white candles in crystal candleholders, adorned with colorful autumn leaves, completed the decorations. Following luncheon, discussions were led by Mrs. Claude A. Keogh, and Mrs. Dennis M. Moore reported on the sifter service which is now available at the chapel nursery on Baltzell avenue. Mrs. Vladimir B. Kovac and Mrs. George M. Roper Jr., volunteered to be hostesses for the December luncheon. Mrs. Thomas R. Yancey will be in charge of the Christmas party which will follow.

Automatic License Extension Law Nullified by New York

Service men and women who hold New York state operator's and chauffeur's licenses learned this week that their permits are no longer automatically extended...

In a general circular, issued by the Department of the Army and Air Force, the New York Bureau of Motor Vehicles says that persons in the service since Aug. 16, 1949, and prior to May 31, 1951, will have their licenses extended 60 days from discharge...

The same provisions are in effect for operators' licenses, the memo said, except that the license validity will extend to the following Sept. 30. In order to understand fully the intent of the new law, the bureau commissioner offered the following example:

Service Clubs Sponsor Grid Dance in Gym

The football dance, celebrating the end-of-season Doughboy grid clash with the Camp Campbell, Ky. angels, was staged in the main gym last Sunday, a few hours after the Benning defeat.

Fun came at the outset when the master of ceremonies assigned places at opposite ends of the basketball court, (decorated by makeshift goalposts) and then asked all ladies present to assemble between the two friendly teams. The girls, responded reluctantly at first, but became receptive when it was learned that the football heroes were to throw the victory pie into their midst in an effort to obtain a partner for the opening dance.

Luigi Barassi, the first Doughboy to "make the pass," appeared to have a curvaceous receiver waiting in the clear. Incidentally, his lindy hop wasn't noticeably impaired by slight injuries received by the afternoon fray.

After the no-tag opening dance, the players' toward, the 40 girls from Columbus and Phenix City became the partners of other enlisted men who attended the dance.

RESCUER GETS MEDAL... Capt. George F. Charlton, right, receives the Soldier's medal from Col. Sevier E. Tupper for heroically saving the life of another Infantry School officer at Ormond Beach, Fla. The young officer, made the daring rescue in the face of seemingly-insurmountable odds, Maj. Wallace C. Waxner, the officer who was saved, gives a vivid word picture of the exploit in an article especially prepared for The Bayonet.

Near-Drowning Victim Tells Of Rescuer's Heroic Action

EDITOR'S NOTE: In a story especially prepared for The Bayonet, Maj. Wallace C. Waxner tells how he was saved from drowning by Capt. George F. Charlton. The two Infantry school tactical department men, on a brief vacation with their families at Ormond Beach, Fla., almost met death at the hands of a vicious undertow after Capt. Charlton plunged into the surf to save his friend. Capt. Charlton was awarded the Soldier's medal for his heroic action at a recent ceremony on Stillwell field.

By Maj. Wallace C. Waxner as told to Pat Murphy

I don't think anybody in our party had premonitions that a beautiful day would be ruined with an escape from death. George (Captain Charlton) and I had taken the females out for a swim that day (June 26). George had his three kids and wife. I also was with my wife. As I remember, we had chosen a rather deserted part of the beach. I don't recall anyone being within hundreds of yards. We all got pretty tired from the exercise, so we decided to take a dip in the surf. George isn't supposed to swim because of his perforated eardrums—the result of a combat injury. The wives didn't particularly care to get their hair wet. So there we stood, up to our waists in water, throwing a big rubber ball about

About 10 minutes later, everyone decided to crawl back on the beach and rest. Just as everyone started wading back toward shore, I decided to paddle around in the water. I can't swim very well—in fact, all I can do is dog-paddle.

I yelled to Kathleen (Major Waxner's wife) and told her that I was going to swim along the edge of the shore—parallel to the beach. The water couldn't have been above my chest in depth. I remember now that she yelled, "Go ahead and drown yourself—you're insured!" She was joking, not realizing what would happen several minutes later.

I paddled along for several minutes. Getting rather tired I lowered my feet to start walking back the shore. But I suddenly realized that I was over my head in water. I had apparently drifted farther away from the beach.

Just as I put my feet down, a terrific tug of the undertow yanked me from my footing. I might have gained. The sea was calm and relatively normal. But the swells and tide were vicious. I didn't become panicky—as I remember, I think I was angry toward myself for getting into a situation like this—everyone had warned me.

The pull steadily took me farther away from the shore. Several times waves swamped me—I began to swallow a lot of water. I tried floating—like the books say—but it seemed as though I couldn't keep my head above the surface. I suddenly knew that I could do nothing. I yelled to the folks on shore for help. I think they thought I was kidding.

I was about to go down for the last time—I felt as though I couldn't last a minute more when George leaped into the water and started swimming toward me.

For a man who hadn't been swimming in five years (Capt. Charlton swam the last time at Fort Benning in 1944 before going overseas) he was certainly streaking along the water.

When he got to me, I thought he was going to hit me and knock me unconscious. I've read about drowning people who are knocked out to prevent a struggle.

He calmly told me to put my arms around his neck and lay on my back. I did.

Against that terrific undertow, George began to work his way toward the shore. I could tell he was tired. He began to swallow a lot of water.

After what seemed like hours, George began feeling for the bottom. He'd drop a foot to see if we were in shallow water yet. Each time we were swamped by the waves. I could hear George strangling on that salt water. I think both of us were completely exhausted.

Seconds later, we reached shore and George just collapsed. He was completely fatigued.

New Classroom Will Open Soon

A new $85,000 classroom and auditorium, begun here last May, will be turned over to the Infantry School tomorrow to house part of the school's Communications department and provide additional space for orientation classes, it was announced yesterday.

Measuring 54 feet wide by 105 feet long, the new structure will add considerable space to present school facilities.

When the building will actually open for business is problematical since the arrangement of desks and seats have not been decided upon.

Coolness Stimulates Cereal Consumption

Fort Benning soldiers consume more breakfast cereals during cool weather, according to a report from the Army Center for food service management, who has asked dining hall stewards to supply the demand.

Contest Scheduled For Shutter Bugs

The second annual interservice photography contest has opened and thousands of entries are expected from army, navy, airforce, marine and coast guard establishments throughout the world, it has been announced by the chief of army special services.

Although the Infantry Center special services office has not yet formulated plans for choosing entries to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army contest, they expect to announce the regulations in the near future.

There will be four categories of pictures judged in black and white and one in color. The black and white categories are as follows:

- Service life, on duty and at leisure. (Photographs documenting representative scenes from daily life in the service, compositional photographs of equipment and surroundings and recreational pictures).
- Landscapes and architecture. (Photographs of scenery, land and seascapes and pictures of buildings, bridges, monuments and similar structures).
- Peoples and customs. (Portraits, photographs depicting personalities, customs, picturesque surroundings, beach scenes, fashion studies and other full-length photographs of people).
- General pictorial. (Story telling photographs, humorous shots, photographs of pets, compositional or abstract photos and miscellaneous subjects).

First, second and third prizes will be awarded in each of the four black and white categories and in the color category. There will be one grand prize for the picture voted best in the show. The perpetual interservice photography trophy will go to the service with the greatest number of points.

Feb. 1 is the expected closing date for submitting photographs. Following are the contest rules:

- All army and airforce personnel are eligible, including members of reserve components on active duty for more than 90 days.
- Photographs will be judged on appeal of subject matter, composition and general excellence.
- No official photographs will be submitted as entries, and the use of Signal Corps material and equipment not normally available for troop use is prohibited.
- It is not contemplated that the contest will interfere with the normal execution of military duties.
- No liability or responsibility can be assumed by the Departments of the Army or the Air Force for the loss or damaging of the photograph submitted.
- Photographs submitted must be taken and processed by the individual contestant.

Second Lieutenant Time Requirement is Increased

After Jan. 1, 1950, second lieutenants will be required to serve three years before receiving a promotion, the Department of Army and Airforce disclosed last week.

The new move, which is said to have come as no surprise to some quarters, ends the previously enacted regulation permitting promotion after 18 months service.

Second lieutenants in the Veterinary corps, the only exception, will still be able to obtain 18-month promotions after the effective date of the new regulation.

A non-regular will get a promotion only after a recommendation is submitted before the termination of a 39-month period. Regardless of the date of rank pay of the higher grade is effective only when the promotion becomes permanent.

Veterinarians will continue to receive service credit for post-graduate work and, if qualified, will receive a promotion at the termination of a year's service.

Harmony Reigns In Harmony Church, Thanks To Ambitious Pair's Efforts

By HARRY KING
Isolated from the activity on Fort Benning's main post, several hundred soldiers and their families who live in the Harmony church area were having a hard time several months ago finding things to do in their off-duty hours.

The soldiers' families, who knew none of their neighbors were having difficulty finding a common meeting ground. Certainly "harmony" wasn't in evidence until Chaplain (Maj.) Lonnie W. Knight and his hard working little wife came up with the answer.

Chaplain Knight came to the post last August from Japan and Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Walter Knight, chief, Infantry Center chaplain, took him out to the area and showed him around.

"I want to see what you can do out here," he said. He did do something and he did it fast. First he visited many of the families and asked if they wanted a church in the area. The response was enthusiastic, and in two Sundays the first service was held.

Before the church doors opened, Chaplain Knight was slightly dubious about the number of his new congregation, and when he walked in to start the Sunday school, he wasn't prepared for what he saw: there were 100 people. He was even more amazed and gratified to find that 97 of the area residents arrived an hour later for the morning service, dressed in their Sunday best. The number of children—especially smaller ones—was so large, that Mrs. Knight, on the task of opening a nursery. She recruited the aid of several of the congregation's women, and the group talked G-4 out of an unused company orderly room across from the church.

the chapel in more adult discussion under the pastor's direction. One of the most popular activities of the little mission is the Wednesday evening social period where the residents of the area are rapidly growing to know each other more intimately in an informal atmosphere. day and the husbands' compare notes on their work and hobbies. Chaplain Knight has installed the latest methods of instruction, finding that movies and other visual aids to instruction are much more effective for children and grown-ups alike, than the old lecture method.

Half an hour before Sunday school starts each week, the Sunday morning air waltz strains of old and popular hymns to the residents. This is done by means of a wire recorder and loud speakers installed in the church windows.

Before church begins the pastor may be seen with his little 16 millimeter motion picture camera taking pictures of the children going into church or nursery. They know that next week they may be treated to a movie with themselves as the actors.

The residents of Harmony church are now proud of their community spirit. They are proud of their church attendance last Sunday of 128 in Sunday school and 21 at the church service. They all are thankful for their energetic pastor and his enthusiastic wife. Harmony church is a good name for the area now.

ruling of the Georgia attorney general for civilian authorities to take over operations of the post school.

He recommended that the post school be continued under military operation and that approximately $1,190,000 be appropriated to build a new elementary school building with a capacity of 1,000.

Colonel Torrence said students attending the post school receive no stipend. Post children attending public schools, he said, have been covered in the past by contracts between military and civilian authorities. Government payments for off-post high school students last year were $109 per student, he said. Columbus High this year has set a $120 per child and seasonal figure. The outlook for appropriations this year, Colonel Torrence added, is only $75 per pupil.

Rep. Burke, in an opening statement, decried that the committee is not concerning itself with the overall federal aid to education program. It is limiting its investigation to communities directly affected by government projects, he said.

Activities of various federal agencies, particularly during and since the war, have created difficult problems for some local school districts located adjacent to federal installations," he asserted. "These problems result from a large influx of new population into the area, the removal of land from the tax rolls, and large numbers of school children living on federally-owned property for which no local tax income for school purposes is needed."

Your Red Cross Boost Given Junior Red Cross Setup

By MURRAY E. HILL
Through this column and other articles in The Bayonet many activities of the Red Cross have been reported. While all such activities were interesting and important, I think none is more important than the Junior Red Cross program which is carried on in the Children's school.

Members of the Junior Red Cross in the U. S. number 19,000,000. It is more than just a Red Cross program. It is a youth movement, for these 19,000,000 youngsters are learning organization, administration and cooperation in helping their fellowman in distress.

In the Armistice Day parade the Junior Red Cross had the following slogan on its float: "Love Makes the World Go Round and Junior Red Cross Makes Love Go Around the World." You can have no animosity against your fellowman when you are busy packing small boxes of things he needs to send him as a Christmas present. And throughout the nation in thousands of school rooms as in the Fort Benning Children's school boys and girls are busy packing small boxes with soap, pencils, erasers and other things so badly needed by school children throughout the world.

The operation of these Junior Red Cross chapters is indeed inspirational to the teacher who sponsors them. One needs only to talk to Miss Melhien "Gubs" to see how enthusiastically the officials of the Junior Red Cross, who are William Knight, president (eighth grade), Donna Kischer, vice president (seventh grade) and Mack Hardin, secretary (seventh grade) promote their program. Each of the 18 school rooms has its own representatives meet with Miss Tubbs for a business session, and they carry on as courteously as the grown-ups, including the financial campaign. True, the amount collected in each room is small. A room needs only to secure twenty-five cents to have a 100 per cent representation, but these campaigns are conducted as enthusiastically as the adult campaign in March.

Colonel Lanning Picked to Attend Service School

The Infantry School's Tactical Department Instructional Committee chairman, Lt. Col. Stanley N. Lanning, was notified this week of his selection to attend the next class at the Armed Forces Staff College, Norfolk, Va.

Triple-A Unit Joins Parent Division Here

The Third Anti-aircraft Artillery battalion joined the Third Infantry division at Fort Benning last week to prepare for the forthcoming Operation Fort-trex, the joint air-sea-ground maneuver to be held in the Caribbean this winter.

The battalion, which came here from Fort Bliss, Tex., was met upon arrival by Brig. Gen. Roland P. Shugg, commanding general of division Artillery, and the division band.

Under the command of Lt. Col. John D. Stevens, the unit has been assigned to the Third division for some time, but this is the first time it has been stationed at Fort Benning.

Assigned from Bragg Four men were recently assigned to the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, from Fort Bragg, N. C.

An actual picture, taken through the radar scope, shows the formation of storms within a 100-mile radius of Lawson.

Up-To-Date Equipment

Radar Installed at Lawson For Weather Observation

BY MAY PIGOTT

In keeping with the airforce's policy to provide new and up-to-date equipment for every phase of operation, the Weather detachment at Lawson airforce base recently installed a radar set at the weather station.

A radar check is made every hour in bad weather, and if there are any changes, they are immediately put on the hourly weather report and forwarded to all stations. This same procedure is followed by all stations in the network, and a complete picture of climatic conditions is available at all times.

For the pilot's information there is a small briefing room adjacent to the set. After his study of the weather report, the pilot can see for himself on the scope the hazardous weather conditions and their exact location.

DA Issues Orders Affecting Benning

Orders were issued recently by the Department of the Army effecting the following changes of status of Fort Benning personnel:

First Lt. John P. Bucko was transferred from the 10th Area Service unit to the Far East command.

Six Third Division EM Sign Up Again

Six men of the Third Infantry division re-enlisted recently. They were Sgt. 1st cl. Harlan J. Stroud, three years; Sgt. cl. William P. Crow, three years; 1st Sgt. John J. Hollis, three years; Sgt. 1st cl. Bruce E. Dixon, indefinite period; Sgt. Augustus H. Carter, six years; and Pvt. George Thomas, three years.

Service Unit Men Advanced in Grade

Ten men of the Area Service unit, provisional group, were recently promoted to private first class to corporal.

THE GENERAL ADMIRES ART... Sgt. 1st cl. Lester Glass, Battery A, Ninth Field Artillery battalion, points out the delicate art work of Pfc. Dan F. Keglowitz, also of Battery A, to Brig. Gen. Roland P. Shugg, commanding general of Third Infantry division artillery. The mural was painted by Pfc. Keglowitz as his contribution to the new reading and writing room which was recently painted and renovated by men of the Second platoon.

Ninth Field Artillery Opens Post Officers Reading And Writing Room

The first of a projected series of post officers reading and writing rooms for units of the Third Infantry division was opened last week by Battery A, Ninth Field Artillery battalion.

The program, announced this fall by Maj. Gen. F. W. Clark, commanding general of the division, was begun with an experimental room in the 10th Engineer Combat battalion and is expected to encompass the entire division.

Under the direction of Sgt. 1st cl. Lester Glass, Second platoon, members of the platoon worked both during duty and off-duty hours to set up the room.

A similar room opened in Battery B shortly after that in Battery A. The same carpenter team, set up by Sergeant Glass, did the basic work on both rooms.

The room in Battery A was built, painted and furnished with money obtained from the central fund.

According to Capt. J. E. Eckles, commanding officer of Battery A, the facility will be open 24 hours a day.

"We eventually hope to add a radio to the room", Captain Eckles said.

Library Schedules Recorded Concert

A recorded classical concert is scheduled for 8 p.m. next Tuesday night in the Main library.

Included in the program will be Enesco's Rumanian Rhapsody No. 1 in A Major played by the Philadelphia orchestra.

Eugene Ormandy conducting, and Rumanian Rhapsody No. 2 in D Major, played by the Honal Symphony orchestra, Hans Klinger conducting; Goldmark's Rustle Wedding symphony, ward Barlow conducting the Columbia Broadcasting symphony, and Grieg's Violin Concerto.

Joseph Heifetz, featured soloist, with the San Francisco Symphony orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting.

Columbus YMCA Offers Safety Deposit Service

Military personnel with surplus cash may deposit it with the Armed Services YMCA in Columbus for safe keeping. It has been announced by Floyd Francisco, executive secretary.

Money left for safekeeping at the YMCA draws no interest, but there is no charge for the service, Mr. Francisco said. The chief advantage of the plan is that the soldier may leave his money with a minimum of red tape and withdraw it at any time since the club is open 24 hours a day.

This is not a banking system, Mr. Francisco explained, so there are no checks. "The soldier simply fills out a card which we keep on file. He keeps an identification stub."

"This plan is helpful to the young man in the army today," the YMCA director said. "There are 1,600,000 men in the armed services today and half of them are under 21 years of age. They're being paid well but some of them spend all their money on payday. They stay broke and feel sad and sads the rest of the month. This plan influences the soldier to keep some spending money all the time."

One soldier said he liked the service because it helped him resist temptations of lending money to friends. Another endorsed the freedom from red tape in collecting his money. Mr. Francisco said.

Thirty-two privates of the Infantry School detachment were promoted to privates first class last week.

They were, from Company A: Robert L. Kruger, Alton R. Dudley, Robert G. Hickman, Stanley Kovaleski, William E. Miller, Clyde Y. Spurgeon, Robert L. Wisnosky, Robert Lawber, Arlynn D. Lamar Dodd... Sebedius Lecture

Lamar Dodd, head of the art department of the University of Georgia and one of America's ranking artists, will demonstrate his painting technique Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Jordan vocational high school auditorium.

Mr. Dodd will demonstrate his painting by choosing a model from the audience and painting his portrait.

His performance here is part of a tour of Georgia towns in an effort to stimulate interest in art.

His tour is sponsored by the Georgia Art association, the division of General Extension and the Division of Fine Arts.

Angels Trim Doughboys, 54-20

EDITOR'S NOTE: During the absence of Jim Cloonan, Bayonet sports editor who is spending a leave at his home in Rutherford, N. J., his column is being written by Charles (Robb) Robinson, Bayonet staff writer who recently returned to duty after three months as a member of the Fort Benning Doughboy football squad.

With the close of the 1949 football season and the coming of winter and colder weather, Fort Benning's athletics have retreated indoors.

Basketball and boxing, two of the nation's most popular pastimes, are both due to make their debut this week in the form of intra-mural competition.

Basketball, a sport which is considered by many to run second only to baseball in overall popularity, has always been one of the post's outstanding sources of wins.

Last year, after intense competition throughout the early part of the season, the Airborne battalion of the Student Training regiment took the post crown. This team, a favorite in this season's league also, was sparked by some of the post's outstanding players: Vern Griffin, who also played end for the football Doughboys, and Larry Brown, another ersatz grinder.

Toward the end of the intra-mural season, a post tie is made up by selecting the outstanding participants in unit squads. This team, known as the Doughboys, takes on outside opponents.

Probably the most universal of sports, basketball requires less actual equipment than any other form of team athletics. Uniforms are simple, and the ball and the nets are nothing compared to the tremendous outlay required for baseball, football, ice hockey and other national pastimes.

The basketball season is the season when little colleges — the ones we never hear of from April to November — make the headlines steadily. When Adelphi college, and Long Island university, Bowling Green and City College of New York become household words.

Boxing is also a form of athletics which requires no large institutional setup to flourish — all the fighters need is a set of 12-ouncers, a roped-off square and a few officials.

A far cry from the 70-round epochs that were common 40 years ago and, less, modern boxing has become a scientific art, but possesses no less a thrill for this modernization. It is a sport which has always thrived in the army. From company arenas to the ring at West Point, military personnel have indulged in it for platoon, company, battalion, post or service-wide honors.

At Benning boxing has been a popular sport — such great competitors as Lawrence Jones, army middleweight champ, have helped to make it such. Jones, now assigned to the 5440th Area Service unit, will be on hand to defend his title this season.

There is one phase, however, in which Benning has been lacking in a sporting way.

All sports, to one degree or another, are spectator sports. They are influenced greatly by the crowds they draw. And the caliber of contest is often determined by the amount of cheering the crowd does. There is something about a fan rooting against his own team that makes things twice as tough for a player.

During the basketball and boxing matches, spectators will be urged to attend. Their presence will make or break the sport. And if the cheering is what it should be, the caliber of play will improve noticeably.

It is easy enough to yell when your team is winning — but a winning team needs no cheers; it's when the team is losing that cheering becomes important. And that's just when some fans get up and go home.

Justice Named Top Gridster

North Carolina's Charlie "Choo" Justice has been named the Southern Conference college careers on Jan. 2, when Sports Writer's association as the Carolina meets Rice in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, Tex. Allen ended his season in Duke's Nov. 19 meet with North Carolina.

The All-American halfback was followed in a poll of the writers by his pass receiving teammate, End Art Weiner, who was named by Tackle Lou Allen of Duke.

Both Justice and Weiner wound up their regular season with North Carolina by sparking the Tarheels last Saturday to

Loss Concludes 1949 Campaign

Fort Benning's football team ended its 1949 season in Doughboy ball, Ky., eleven, 54-20.

Before a crowd of 12,000 spectators the home team evened up the score in the third period before losing headway and falling victim to Campbell's speed and aggressiveness on the ground.

The initial tally was made by Bob Organ, speedy halfback for Campbell, before the game had entered its third minute of play.

Again Benning fired itself, and after a powerful march upfield Doughboy Halfback Lou Barassi gathered in a Hemphill-tossed pass to make the score 20-13.

Constance missed the extra point. From that point on, in spite of Benning's determined efforts to regain control of the ball, which had once been theirs, Campbell hung on to the leather and with it Benning's hopes for a score.

Within the remaining seventeen minutes of the game, the visitors succeeded in boosting the score to 54-20, through the assistance of Bach, Crews and Platt, all of whom tallied for a score.

The score remained the same throughout the rest of the first half, and when the halftime siren sounded, the ball was in Benning's possession and on its way downfield.

As the teams resumed the field following halftime a cheer went up. It was apparent that the home squad had been rejuvenated, and within several minutes the game was first downs in the middle of the field, but just when it seemed certain the Doughboys would take the Campbell recovered a fumble in the Benning backfield.

Taking over on their own six-yard line the Angel squad endeavored to sweep their end, but in so doing dropped the ball in their own backfield, where it was grabbed by Benning defensive Guard Bob Murphy, who trotted across the end zone for the home team's first touchdown.

Al Constance succeeded in making the conversion after the touchdown, and the score upped to 13-7.

As the second period got under way the game assumed a faster pace. The Benning eleven became inspired in their offense driving the ball downfield several times, only to be stopped by Campbell's mighty forward wall inches short of a score.

Scoring in the second stanza opened as John Platt, one of uprights, the score flattened out at 20 points apiece.

It remained so for some five minutes, as Benning threatened to score repeatedly, driving out first downs through Campbell's vaunted line.

Bob Chabot, however, Campbell's ex-West Point star, succeeded in changing things for the visitors, and connected to the Angels' John Platt for their fourth touchdown, and the score jumped to 29-20. Deshaids made the point after, and the score moved to 27-20.

From that point on, in spite of Benning's determined efforts to regain control of the ball, which had once been theirs, Campbell hung on to the leather and with it Benning's hopes for a score.

Within the remaining seventeen minutes of the game, the visitors succeeded in boosting the score to 54-20, through the assistance of Bach, Crews and Platt, all of whom tallied for a score.

The score remained the same throughout the rest of the first half, and when the halftime siren sounded, the ball was in Benning's possession and on its way downfield.

As the teams resumed the field following halftime a cheer went up. It was apparent that the home squad had been rejuvenated, and within several minutes the game was first downs in the middle of the field, but just when it seemed certain the Doughboys would take the Campbell recovered a fumble in the Benning backfield.

Taking over on their own six-yard line the Angel squad endeavored to sweep their end, but in so doing dropped the ball in their own backfield, where it was grabbed by Benning defensive Guard Bob Murphy, who trotted across the end zone for the home team's first touchdown.

Al Constance succeeded in making the conversion after the touchdown, and the score upped to 13-7.

As the second period got under way the game assumed a faster pace. The Benning eleven became inspired in their offense driving the ball downfield several times, only to be stopped by Campbell's mighty forward wall inches short of a score.

Scoring in the second stanza opened as John Platt, one of uprights, the score flattened out at 20 points apiece.

Evacuation Hospital Five Captures Hardwood Toga

By winning a hard-fought 30-16 cage decision over the 121st Evacuation hospital team, co-captained by Cliff McWhorter and Joe Mucha, captured the Provisional Medical group title and finished its season with an unblemished record.

Falling to the league leaders during the playoffs were the 568th Motor Ambulance company, which bent under a 27-25 contest; the 514th Medical Clearing company, which dropped a 39-21 tilt, and the Station hospital, which bowed out in a 48-24 fray.

A close-knit man-to-man defense and the overall alertness of the quintet featured the successive victories.

The champions' offensive thrusts were fronted by sharpshooters Joe Mucha and Ray Phillips who led scoring for the team with totals of 38 and 54 points, respectively.

Long arching shots by Guards Al Arison and Bert Herr sank frequently, while Frank Gonzales, Tiny McLaughlin, Cliff McWhorter and Al Landrum displayed spectacular defensive action.

Help in the clutches was supplied by Bob Murphy, Harold Long, Mathieu Karr and Charles Shirley, all dependable regulars.

An all-star group, to be chosen during his three years of play while Blanchard tallied 38 for an overall total of 89.

Dolley Paces SEC Scoring

John John Dolley, Ole Miss' principal scoring threat throughout the fall, has been adjudged holder of the high spot in 1949 with 90 points. The Southeastern Conference, making the fifth Mississippi player to gain such recognition since the establishment of the conference in 1935.

Dolley scored twice as the Rebels maulled Mississippi State, 28 to 0. That enabled him to edge Florida's Chuck Hunsinger, who was next in line, by six points. The Florida Flamer went scoreless as a result of his team's defeat by Alabama.

Ray Hapes, Merle Hapes, Parker Hall and Charley Coover will leave won the point-making diadem in years past, but none topped 72 points.

Eddie Price failed to tally against Louisiana State Saturday and wound up third with 68 points. Tennessee's Gordon Polofsky and Mississippi's

Bill Mustin completed the top five with 48 points apiece. Dolley succeeds Joe Gerl of Georgia, who grabbed the high spot in 1948 with 90 points. The all-time scoring record is 98, set by Steve Van Buren at LSU in 1948.

Promoted to Corporal Pfc. James A. Watkins, Company A, Infantry School, attached to 6888 Central Postal Directory, has been promoted to sergeant.

MEMORABLE OF THE YEAR IN ACTION... Halback Lou Barasol, wearing jersey No. 34, who played the entire season with the Doughboys, was selected as the top player of the year for the Doughboys. He is shown here in his defense against a player from the opposing team. The game was played throughout the year for the Doughboys.

Shifty Doughboy Halfback Selected As Top Player Of Year

By ROBBY ROBINSON
It has been the custom of The Bayonet Sports department in the past to name an outstanding player or players as Doughboy of the Week. But we have selected this week, instead, a man we consider the Player of the Year.

He is Halback Lou Barasol. Lou has played continuously for Fort Benning in every game this season. On the offense his brilliant running and open-field evasiveness have continually sparked the Doughboy attack. On the defense his vicious tackles and alert halfback play have kept his area clean of potential scores. But more important, he has emulated throughout the season that spirit which is so essential to football.

High-scoring on the 1949 Doughboys, Lou began his shifty career at Benning in September, when he showed, just briefly, what he was capable of doing against a weak Turner airforce base eleven in a pre-season practice game which the Doughboys won 54-0. He went on from there to be the outstanding ball carrier in game after game, as he racked up a total of 54 points for the Doughboys throughout the season.

Beginning with Eglin field, he tallied on average of one touchdown every Sunday until the final pistol sounded last Sunday afternoon.

In the Eglin game, Lou scored six points; in the Marine reserve game, 12; in the Memphis Navy game, six; in the Parris Island game, six; in the Alabama national guard game, 12; and in the finale, with Camp Campbell, 12.

In addition to his sparkling offensive play, which throughout the season never failed to bring the crowd to its feet and spur his teammates on to greater heights, Lou's defensive work was outstanding.

Holding down a defensive halfback slot throughout the major part of the season, he was one of the few who played 60 minutes of football during the year. In this position, he accounted for more than one enemy runner who otherwise might have racked up another score against Benning.

Lou started his pigskin career at a comparatively early age in Leominster, Mass., where he began playing during his junior high school years. Later he became Leominster high's great star, and from there attended the University of Maine, where he played for two years before returning to Massachusetts.

Back in Leominster he joined a professional team in his home town, and was sparking their backfield at the time of his entry into the service a year ago.

His work at Fort Benning has been with Fire Station No. 1, where he is currently holding down a job as driver of the engine.

Standing five feet, eight inches and weighing 150 pounds, Lou is a light for football, but his diminutive stature has never proved a bother to him, as he has hurtled through opposing linesmen far larger than himself.

Bomb Disposal Course Offered

A 24-week bomb disposal course has been opened to qualified army personnel by the Naval School, Indian Head, Md., it has been announced.

Westfield Team to Defend Peanut Bowl Title Dec. 31

Joining the New Year's Day bowl classics throughout the nation will be Columbus' Peanut Bowl this year, where two high school gridiron champions battle it out in a north-south contest for a crack at the title won by the Westfield team.

The Westfield Bombers of Massachusetts will meet the Georgia high school champs in either Class AA or Class A football.

Since the Georgia state playoffs are not completed, several schools are still in the running for a crack at the title won by the Westfield squad last year.

In last winter's Peanut Bowl affair, Westfield traveled from Massachusetts to upset a heavier Fitzgerald high school squad, 26-7.

This season, after defeating Cathedral high of Springfield, Mass., Westfield was named western Massachusetts champion, and has been invited to repeat trophy.

The Georgia team will be selected from any one of six teams still in competition: in Class AA football, Lanier of Macon, Glynn of Milledgeville, Brown of Atlanta are fighting it out; in Class A, Tifton and Albany are eligible in Class A competition.

To Simplify Pep Talks

A UCLA engineering professor, Dr. W. D. Herchberger, recently applied for patents on a wireless device with which football coaches can communicate with the players on the field. It uses a voice-modulated microwave transmitter under the coaches' bench and an ammunition gas filled ear receiver worn in the players' helmets.

Golfer of the Year

In a recent poll conducted by the Professional Golfer's Association, Sammy Sneed was voted the official PGA Golfer of the Year. Cary Middlecoff was second and Johnny Palmer third.

9 Squads Open Cage Title Bids

Basketball will make its debut in the Main gymnasium tonight, as three intra-mural games start off fall and winter competition.

Nine teams have been entered in the Infantry Center league. They are the Provisional group of the Area Service unit, the Airborne battalion of the Student Training regiment, the 52nd Medical battalion, the Infantry School detachment, the Third Infantry division's Special Troops, the 30th Infantry regiment, Divarty, the Station Hospital and the 15th Airborne battalion this season, according to reports.

Nippon Turned Down

Australian sports officials refused Japan's application to participate in the 1958 Olympic Games at Melbourne. One official said, "Memories of Japanese atrocities are still too firmly fixed in the minds of the Australian people to permit us to consider the application."

Fall Ring Program Begins Tomorrow

Fort Benning's fall boxing program is due to get under way tomorrow night at the main gymnasium, as a 10-bout card, featuring both Infantry Center and Third Infantry division teams, takes place.

Entered in the tourney, which will launch the fist-cutt program for the autumn and winter, are five teams: 3440th area Service unit's Provisional group, Provisional Medics, Airborne battalion of the Student Training Regiment, and two Third Infantry division units, Divarty and the 15th Infantry Regiment.

Weights of contestants will be classified as fly, bantam, feather, light, welter, light heavy, and heavy, in the following manner: Flyweight, under 112 pounds; bantamweight, between 112 and 118 pounds; featherweight, 118 to 126 pounds; lightweight, 126 to 135 pounds; welterweight, 135 to 147 pounds; middleweight, 147 to 160 pounds; light heavyweight, 160 to 175 pounds, and heavyweight, over 175 pounds.

A physical examination of all contestants will be required immediately after the weigh-in. Contestants in all weight divisions will also be placed in a category denoting their experience in the ring.

Class I fighters will include winners of amateur or service championships and professional boxers. Class II will consist of men who are experienced but who have never won a championship. Class III competitors are to be fighters with an average experience of 10 bouts, and who have won at least six of the 10. Class IV will consist of novices who have fought a bout, and all those who have never won, while Class V will be anyone who has never won a never fought before.

Coaches of all the teams will be requested by league officials to report their contestants' classifications in one of these classes before each match, so that contestants will be as evenly matched as possible.

Drawings for these matches will be held once every two weeks, according to officials, at which times the programs for ensuring boxing cards may be awarded and classifications certified.

Points will be awarded to the winner of each bout. Class I winners will receive 50 points, while Class II will receive 40. Class III, 30, Class IV, 20, and Class V, 10. Winners of bouts between men of different classes will be awarded points equal to the sum of the two class points divided by two.

All bouts will result in a decision. This decision may be reached in any one of four ways, according to rules drawn up by the officials: forfeiture, knock-out, foul or judges' decision.

Forfeiture would result because of failure to appear for examination, failure to make a specified weight or failure to appear for a bout.

Company M Men Given Promotions

Dog Owners Exhibit Pets

Dog fanciers will have a chance to demonstrate their wares at 1 p.m., Sunday, Dec. 4, when Columbus Kennel Club members open their dog show to the eyes of the public.

The sanction dog show is open to animals owned by residents of Fort Benning, Columbus, Phenix City and the immediate vicinity. There is no limit to the number of dogs each owner may enter, provided they meet the following qualifications:
1. The dog must be purebred. (It need not be registered.)
2. On the date of the show, the dog must have reached the age of three months.
3. The dog must be capable of reproducing.
Judge of the show will be S. Wright Smith of Birmingham, Ala. Mr. Smith, a member of the Professional Handlers' association, is one of the outstanding handlers in the U. S. During his 23 years of handling, Mr. Smith has shown many dogs to their championships, including the famous champion, Holmerick of Brookville.
Children's handling will be a special feature of the show. The class will contain groups for children five years and under, six to 11 years and 12 to 16 years. This event is judged on the child's ability to show and control the dog, rather than on the animal itself. The dog, however, must have been shown in a previous, regular event before it will be eligible for the children's class.
Admission for the sanction dog show is 25 cents for military personnel in uniform, 50 cents for other adults and 25 cents for children.

Five Million Vet Bonuses Already Paid

Some 5,000,000 ex-servicemen have received almost $1,500,000,000 in World War II bonuses from their home states, an Associated Press nationwide survey reported this week.

Checks for wartime service are still going out, the press service observed, and another $1,000,000,000 is slated for payment to an additional 2,700,000 former soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines.

Eighteen states have shown their hand in the bonus parade, but 30 non-bonus states have issued flat "no's" to appropriating or considering the payment to citizens of their borders who served in the armed forces during World War II.

The press survey showed that the 18 bonus-paying states have approved a cash disbursement amounting to $2,500,000,000 which will be distributed to 7,814,315 men and women who served with the armed forces.

Fifteen states are now paying bonuses. These states have paid $1,485,398,284 to 5,109,893 living vets or the next of kin of dead vets. This averages about $285 for each payment.

Indications are that the bonus flood has waned itself to the trickling stage. Actually, no cut-off date has been set by many of the states, and it is likely payments will continue for years to come, the Associated Press said. Most bonus-paying states have voiced the opinion that payments will be completed within two years.

Several states have crept into the bonus column during the mid-year months, and several have had proposals defeated at the state polls. More recent activity of the bonus payment is—

PENNSYLVANIA legislators voted in November to pay $1,215,515 men and women veterans a hearty $200,000,000. The plan calls for the issue of bonds to finance the big payment.

WASHINGTON state plans to pass out $9,000,000 to 250,000 eligibles. The complicated machinery for handling payment is being set up with new state sub-departments.

INDIANA voted a $105,000,000 payment to 385,000 vets, but payments can't start until enough money is collected to meet all the claims.

INFANTRY CENTER RIFLE TEAM TAKES FIRST HONORS AT REGIONAL MEET

Fort Benning's Rifle Squad Captures Laurels in Southeastern Tournament

Six top-notch rifle experts representing about their performance at a recent regional rifle match, week after they heard Brig. Gen. J. Sladen Bradley, assistant commander of the Infantry School, say "Fine, by golly," in commenting about their performance at a recent regional rifle match. Capt. Joseph Werp, Sgt. 1st Cl. Coates Brown, M-Sgt. A. W. Desvors, Sgt. 1st Cl. F. Eysel, Sgt. 1st Cl. Max Grigg and Sgt. 1st Cl. Daniel Huntley, members of the championship team, walked away with honors at the recent Southeastern 30 caliber rifle matches at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Sponsored by the Augusta (Ga.) Rifle and Pistol club, the match was entered by leading professional and amateur marksmen from surrounding states. A delegation of marine snipers stiffened the competition for the Infantry School representatives. Coached by Lt. Col. Perry D. Svidler, Infantry School rifle fire and rocket expert, the team participated in nine heats of the two-day contest. Captain Werp copped six medals during the contest. Sergeant Brown captured enough places in the competition to take four medals.

General Bradley, in elaborating on his pride in the team, said that it was doing a tremendous amount of good for Fort Benning. He added that not only is it setting the pace in prestige for the training received here but is also setting an example for those who participate in military competition.

"I can recall how difficult it was for me to attain high scores in several contests I entered," the general said. "That's why I always take pleasure in being present to award medals to such men as you."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: DO YOU PROPOSE TO DO WITH YOUR LIFE INSURANCE DIVIDEND?
 M-Sgt. Frank A. O'Connor, Third Medical Battalion: Well, what I think I am going to do is pay off some outstanding bills and possibly try to buy a home. Whatever is left over will probably be invested in bonds to be saved for the children.

O'CONNOR ROBERTS

Capt. Norman E. Roberts, Headquarters Company, Third Medical Battalion: I am going to do with mine what I recommend to my men — buy bonds. I also recommend my men to place their money in one of the soldiers' services. I think a large number of them will do that, too. There is an excellent opportunity for the company commander to help these young men, new soldiers in the army, by recommending bonds or soldiers' services to help them save money, also by starting them on a saving account. I know it is possible for a man to save a minimum of 50 per cent of his pay and still have a good time. Any time is a good time to get something like the dividend.

Pfc. Lawrence E. Detton, Third Medical Battalion: I think maybe I might buy a car. I don't know if I can do that or not, but would like to, I have my mother-in-law to help and there is a lot I could do for her with that money.

DETTON HAYCRAFT

Sgt. William H. Haycraft, Ambulance Company, Third Medical Battalion: I really hadn't thought so much about it, but I guess when get it, the wife will figure the way it is to be spent. She generally handles the finances in the family. She probably will want to put it into bonds.

Cpl. Johnny Dunn, Ambulance Company, Third Medical Battalion: I haven't given it very much thought, but the thing I would like to do is to use it to help buy a home. I have been wanting a home, and this would be a good opportunity to make a down payment.

DUNN ADAMS

Sgt. 1st Cl. Stacy Adams, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, Third Medical Battalion: If I got it in time, I am going to spend it for Christmas. If not, then I'll spend it for New Year's. I probably won't spend it all, and if there is any left, I am going to put it in soldier's deposit where I can get a good per cent.

Awarded Promotion
 Pvt. Allen J. McNamee, Company D, 30th Infantry Regiment, has been promoted to private first class. Unit officials announced this week.

Don't Fence Me In

Enclosure of Post Site Not to Imprison Soldiers

It, within the next week or so, you hear people saying that the site of Fort Benning will be bodily moved and re-enclosed with an iron fence, have no fear—it's not what you might think.

A decision, fostered by a slightly perturbed Columbus citizen and upheld by the Military and Naval Affairs committee of the Columbus Chamber of Commerce, makes it necessary to move a six-foot commemorative granite monument, at Macon road and Dixon drive, to a more appropriate spot.

The monument, erected by the Chamber on the original site of Fort Benning, 1947, has been a headache for Mrs. Alice H. Fowler, owner of the property on which it is located. She asserts that curious people are constantly roaming about her yard examining the marker.

Chamber officials disclosed that the move will be accomplished as soon as possible. The new site, about a block away from the original, will be at Dixon drive and Mimosa road. Placed in the parkway there, the monument will be enclosed and landscaped by several Columbus garden clubs.

Clayton D. McLendon, executive director of the Chamber, declared that the new site will be just as appropriate since Fort Benning was originally founded in the general area. He added that a sign on the old location will direct tourists to the new spot.

3rd Discloses Duty Changes

Two changes in officers' assignments have been announced by the Third Infantry division. Capt. Robert K. Barber was transferred from division headquarters, to assume command of Headquarters company while Capt. Letcher Crawford, former commanding officer of Headquarters company, was transferred to the 30th Infantry regiment.

STEAM STERILIZATION . . . Pvt. Virgil Mullins, Company A, Infantry School detachment, demonstrates the latest method of sterilizing meat pans quickly and efficiently. He employs open air racks and a steam hose to ensure the maximum cleanliness in the pans before they are used again to transport meat to dining halls from the meat cutting plant.

Pioneer Airborne Colonel To Join 82nd This Month

After more than three years duty as an instructor in the Infantry School's Tactical department, Lt. Col. John N. Davis, one of the army's pioneer airborne officers, will leave Fort Benning in December to join the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C.

A "juniper" since 1941, Colonel Davis has made a first-hand study of airborne tactics in areas that vary from steaming jungles to the frozen polar regions. In November, 1948, while member of the Infantry School faculty, Colonel Davis went to the Antarctic as an army observer with the naval task force under Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd. This expedition, known as "Operation Highjump," established a base on the Antarctic continent and made aerial flights over the South Pole.

Colonel Davis grew up in Syracuse, Neb., graduated from the University of Nebraska in 1937, and entered on a competitive tour in the army as an infantry second lieutenant. He served one year with the 17th Infantry at Fort Crook, Neb., followed by three years in the Civilian Conservation corps. In 1941 he joined the First Infantry regiment at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and came to Fort Benning the same year to attend a communications officers' course.

Colonel Davis remained at Fort Benning to take parachute training and, after serving with the 503rd Parachute Battalion, became a "charter member" of the newly activated 804th Parachute Battalion. He attended the Infantry School's company officers' course in 1942.

After the 504th battalion became part of the 503rd Parachute Infantry regiment at Fort Bragg, N. C., Colonel Davis went to Australia as a company commander with the 503rd in 1943.

He made combat jumps in the amphibious landing on Mindoro in the Philippines before assuming command of the 503rd's first battalion during the six-month tour in the corridor and the capture of Negros island.

Colonel Davis returned to the U. S. at the end of the Pacific war to attend the Command and General Staff college at Fort Leavenworth, graduating in 1946.

ADVANCEMENT EXAMINATIONS... Applicants for promotion under the career guidance plan are shown taking tests as the second series of examinations started Monday in the Harmony church area. The tests are being given to determine eligibility for advancement in grade in the infantry, artillery and armored cavalry. (Schedule on Page 10 and diagram on Page 12.)

Soldiers To Get Partial Payment

A partial pay to help tide Fort Benning personnel over the expensive holiday season will be disbursed by both the Infantry Center and Third Infantry division finance offices.

The Infantry Center finance office said that all Infantry Center troops desiring payment of what is due them up to Dec. 15 will be paid on that date.

The office announced that it will send out rosters tomorrow to all units, and troops should signify the amount of pay they will want.

In some cases troops who did not receive family allowances and quarters allowances under the new pay raise will be reimbursed for those if the finance office were unable to state definitely the exact system to be followed at this date. They did announce, however, that there would be an additional pay of some sort.

Show Tour Halted, New Casting Set

"Good News", projected Third Army soldier show, will not appear here as announced last week, special services officials said yesterday.

The show, scheduled to tour the post, was cancelled as a result of the expiration of terms of service of members of the cast.

Special services officials said the production will be reformed this month with regular army personnel and begin rehearsals in January.

While not definite, it was expected that the musical comedy would arrive here sometime in January.

297 Autos Fail in Test

1,000 Checks Already Made

A report released this week by the Infantry Center safety office on the results of the mechanical examination of the first 1,000 Fort Benning licensed cars shows that nearly one-third failed to pass because of one or more mechanical defects.

Of the 1,000 vehicles inspected, 703 passed the first time and 297 were rejected.

The report listed defects in hand brakes, service brakes, windshield wipers, horns, rear view mirrors, windshields, left front door glass, steering assembly, exhaust and muffler, tires, body fittings, headlights, tail lights and stop lights as the cause of rejection.

Six-hundred and eighty nine of the cars inspected were post-war models, the remaining 311, pre-war. Of the 297 rejected, 149 were pre-war models and the balance, for the most part, were 1946 and 1947 models.

Of the 311 pre-war models examined, 53 percent were rejected. Of the 689 post-war models examined, 14.5 percent were rejected.

The report indicated that during the present voluntary phase of the program, the later model, newer cars are being presented for inspection, and that as the deadline for registration draws near, when the examination will be compulsory, the rate of rejections of older model cars may increase.

The safety inspection station has been in operation here since Nov. 1. The program is divided into two phases. The current phase, operating on a voluntary basis, ends Dec. 31. The second phase begins in January, 1950, when all Fort Benning licensed cars must pass the examination to obtain post tags.

Football Gate Cuts Tuition

Proceeds from the Camp Campbell, Ky., Fort Benning football game have enabled children's school officials to reduce the original tuition rates set as a result of appropriation cuts.

The original $8 tuition rate per child for attendance at the post school has been cut to $5 per month for the first child, $4 for the second child and no additional charge for other children in the family attending.

Officials of the school have declared that prompt payment between the first and fifth of the month is mandatory.

The kindergarten tuition fee of the $2 for December, January and February is payable until Dec. 10.

Bivouac Started By 3rd Division

Last Monday nearly 2,000 members of Third Infantry division units, including the entire 1st Infantry regiment, went to the field for a 10-day bivouac as part of their training for the forthcoming "Operation Portrex" maneuver in which the division will play a major role.

The bivouac headquarters was established Monday afternoon in the area between Second Armored Division road and Four Glass road, close to the Buena Vista Highway. The bivouac was established in that general area.

Problems simulating actual combat conditions are scheduled to be run off in training areas beyond Sand Hill.

"Operation Portrex" a combined air-land-sea maneuver, will begin early in 1950. The operation will be conducted in and around the island of Puerto Rico.

New Dental Unit Is Formed Here

A new Infantry Center unit made this week as officials at Fort Benning organized the Dental detachment, with Col. Frederick P. Beckover, senior dental officer, commanding.

Attached to the Provisional Medical group, the new unit has been authorized nine officers and 16 enlisted men, all of whom are allocated from spaces existing at the Station hospital.

Personnel Shift Revealed by TIC

Personnel of four Fort Benning sections were transferred this week to new organizations in an effort to end split billings.

The move, which will affect some 55 enlisted men and women, involved personnel of the billeting, section engineers, quartermaster corps, special services and adjutant generals, postal and recruiting sections.

The two adjutant general's sections, which were assigned to the 340th Area Service unit, now are assigned to the Infantry School detachment.

The remaining four sections, formerly attached to the Infantry School detachment, are now part of the 340th Area Service unit.

An Infantry Center spokesman explained that until now these units have had personnel living in and assigned to both units.

The December meeting of the Fort Benning Parent-Teachers association will be held in the auditorium of the Children's school Dec. 15 at 7:30 p. m.

A short business meeting will be held, followed by a Christmas play, Santa's Workshop, put on by kindergarten students, and an operetta put on by the music students.

Post Eyes Low-Cost Yule

Fatter Stockings, Slimmer Outlay Indicated

By PAT MURPHY
 BAYONET STAFF WRITER
 Infantry Center families will find St. Nick's visit this year less expensive than 1948—and they'll have more presents on the Christmas tree.

That seems to be the indication this week after a spot check of consumer buying trends at the Main exchange and reports from government economist about John Q. Public—the buyer of Yuletide gifts.

Fort Benning consumers apparently are reflecting a general trend of the American public in the closing days of Christmas shopping; to wit: more quantity and better quality for less money.

The underlying causes for this influx of buying, which are many in various shapes, are bringing about a pleasant buying spree for people with a somewhat depleted budget.

At the Main exchange, Grady L. Myrick, manager of the thimble-sized Macy's, mirrors an optimistic outlook for the profit and loss statement of sales.

According to Mr. Myrick, November sales in the PX were off about $2,000 over 1948's eleventh month. He says that people this year were cautious with their cash or savings until the beginning of the Christmas shopping period.

Post Eyes Low-Cost Yule

Fatter Stockings, Slimmer Outlay Indicated

Mr. Myrick is hasty to point out the December trend—the telltale sign of how the PX will fare during Christmas. He says that during the first four days of December, sales were "way up and over" the same period last year.

"To some extent," Mr. Myrick declared, "this increase in sales is directly attributable to a slight overall decrease in prices. Figuring generally, I would say the cost of items are down about one or two percent from last year."

A neat comparison can be made with the national trend. Government statisticians report that November fattered a six-percent decline in retail sales.

Latest reports of buying in the first few days of December show only a five percent decline in sales over the same period last year. By this it is safe to assume that buying here in 1949 is and the merchants' demand will wilt to a negligible amount.

Mr. Myrick says people are really buying more this year than last and it's only a matter of time until the books will show appreciable increase over previous years.

The biggest items being eyed and bought by Infantry Center personnel are electrical appliances and sporting goods. He says that the merchandise and similar items are increasingly hard to get.

The coal and steel strikes have really hit the retail wholesaler," Mr. Myrick observes. (See POST EYES Page 2)

Army Not So Bad, Say EM Due For Early Separation

By DON SCHAEFER
Bayonet Staff Writer
Last Thursday the army began its reduction program to meet budget limitations set by congress, starting the separation of 21-month draftees and conscripts in the armed forces under the selective service act of 1948. At Fort Benning, it was a big moment for nearly 1,500 men affected by the reduction.

Army Secretary Gordon Gray's announcement of the nine-month cut in time of service was a welcome one to most draftees at Benning. However, much reaction to the announcement was a feeling that there was no real objection to serving a year.

Cpl. Michael A. Avella, 25, garage owner from Union City, N. J., in civilian life and musician in the Third Infantry division band, said, "I think the year in the army wouldn't hurt anybody. Younger men particularly can learn a lot. I don't say I enjoyed every minute of it, but it's certainly as good as I expected it to be."

He gets out in January. Cpl. Peter H. Gueter, 25, of New York City, had quite a lot to tell. In 1946 he obtained a two-year lease from the Swiss army. He came to the United States and in 1948 registered for the draft as required by law. A short time later he found himself in the peculiar position of being in two armies at the same time. He explained the plight to his company commander during his basic training, and letters were dispatched to the commander of the Swiss army. He was transferred to the Swiss reserve and given the rank of the U. S. army Dec. 9. Gueter intends to return to his civilian occupation as an aviation band leader. He has no complaints about the army.

"I get along fine with civilians while in uniform," he said. "It hasn't been so bad, but I'm glad in getting out." Twenty-five-year-old Sgt. Richard D. Miller, band master of the Third Infantry division band, taught music at a Hawthorne, N. J., high school before being drafted. "The variety of personal contacts a soldier makes can be valuable," he said. "I don't exactly regret my year in the army, but I'll get out in January."

Pvt. James C. Cloonan, Third Infantry division headquarters, divided his time in civilian life between being an accountant and newspaper man in Rutherford, N. J., in the army he is sports editor of The Bayonet.

"It was a pleasant experience," he said. "I enjoyed working for the paper. I feel I was fortunate in getting such a good job. "If conditions were different I might consider making the army a career, but I'll try civilian life for a while."

Cloonan hopes to work for a newspaper, possibly in the South. He is 24 and will be discharged in January. Pfc. William G. Parsons, another musician from the Third Infantry band, decided to stay in the army for the entire 21-month period.

"It's a good experience," 24-year-old Parsons said, "and things around Park Ridge, N. J. (his home) are kind of light as far as jobs are concerned. I'd like to stay at Fort Benning for the next nine months. Parsons was a chemical operator in civilian life. The army has given him an opportunity to improve his musical skills and he "wants to keep it up for a while," he said.

Twenty-five-year-old Pvt. Raymond E. Wolfe of Boyertown, Pa. still has 49 days to go. His feelings were definite. "I served 31 months in the merchant marine during the war after trying vainly to enlist in the service. It's a great relief to know I'll be out soon and be able to take up where I left off. "If I had a choice, I'd like to stay 31 months. I don't think I could have started again."

LET'S READ IT AGAIN AND BE SURE... Pvt. James C. Cloonan, standing, and Raymond E. Wolfe, members of the Third Infantry division public information office, read again the headlines announcing the cut in time draftees must serve. Cloonan is sports editor of The Bayonet.

Duty Curtailment Set for Holidays
Training and other non-essential military activities will be suspended between Dec. 22 and Jan. 4 to relieve a maximum number of personnel for the Christmas holidays and furlough. Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, announced this week. Military and civilian personnel who are not engaged in essential duties will be relieved for furlough during the entire period, the order declared. However, if necessary, a certain force of personnel will be retained or their time shortened, to protect the operation of the post. Personnel who are completing training at any of the Infantry School courses during January and February and are anticipated assignments overseas, will receive the usual pre-embarkation leave if they take Christmas relief. Groups who remain at the Infantry Center during the Christmas period will work on a reduced scale and part-time basis. Officials have stated that normal duty will be conducted between 9 a.m. and 12 noon. They also said that the Mondays following Christmas Day and New Year's Day would be a complete holiday in addition to Sundays. Christmas leave time will be deducted from accrued furlough time.

Actual Orders Factor in Pay
The actual promotion order, not any years of service spelled out in the Officer Personnel Act of 1944 will determine whether a promoted regular army officer starts to get the pay of the higher grade, the comptroller-general has ruled. If the formal order announcing the promotion is not issued until after the date of completion of the required service or acceptance of the promotion, no extra pay for the higher rank may be paid before date of the order. The decision would be equally binding on the airforce, for the promotion laws governing both services are identical.

DA Sets Policy For Peacetime Commendations

A stringent policy for award of the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit and Army Commendation ribbon during peacetime has been announced by the Department of the Army in a new special regulation. No awards of the three decorations will be made for solely administrative duties or hazards above captain, the regulation states. Stating that "the liberal standards established for war service cannot be applied in peacetime without depreciating the value of decorations," the regulation sets March 2, 1946, as the end of war service for decoration purposes. Performance of duty with marked national or international significance and under unusually complicated or hazardous conditions will be the requirements for receipt of the Distinguished Service Medal and the Legion of Merit. Awards will not be made for performance of duty in normal assignments and will be few for services rendered entirely subsequent to March 2, 1946, it was pointed out.

Officers Study Transportation

Two European command officers recently spent five hours at the Infantry Center to see firsthand what is being done to improve air transportability of personnel and cargo. The two officers, Lt. Col. L. M. Howell and Lt. L. David, members of the Heidelberg, Germany, U. S. Army headquarters, made a hurried tour of the Infantry School's aviation department to inspect the doctrine and technique used in transport loading. School officials, however, declared that the visit of the two officers held no particular significance in relation to expansion of overseas transportability training. They pointed out the school's members are returning to their European station.

Higher Postage Rates For Christmas Cards

The unsent envelope containing that Christmas greeting card with the snow scene outside and the extra pay for the higher rank require two cents postage this year. The pending cards formerly could be mailed for one-and-a-half cents unsealed. The higher rate became effective last Jan. 1.

Sex Crimes May Become Federal Offense

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — Governor Chester Bowles of Connecticut, former OPA administrator, appointee William Benton, his old time advertising partner to fill the senate seat of Raymond E. Baldwin who leaves the senate for a seat on the Connecticut supreme court. The government is considering the possibility of making sex crimes against children a federal offense. John L. Lewis and some small coal mining firms of Kentucky have settled on a new contract, or will in the near future. Terms of settlement are said to include 95 cents a day raise and 15 cents per ton royalty. Jones and Laughlin Steel company officials said there will undoubtedly have to be rises in steel prices and the rises will be passed on to the consumer. Jones and Laughlin is the fourth largest steel producer in America, and although the other big steel firms are so far silent, chances are they will follow suit. James P. Byrnes, former secretary of state and foe of the fair deal, is in a fair way of becoming the guiding light for the Democrats in the 1950 Democratic convention. The Republicans would like to see it. They figure a vote in the South that is not Democratic is as good as Republican. David Lilienthal has resigned from the chairmanship of the Atomic Energy commission. Mainly responsible for putting control of the atom in civilian hands, Lilienthal's resignation was accepted by the president with the understanding that he would be on call at any time. Washington is buzzing with the possibility of another juicy investigation. Life line of publicity for some congressmen, this investigation of the allegation that Harry Hopkins, former right hand man of Franklin Roosevelt, gave atom secrets to the Russians could reach unaltonic heights, making the present Alger Hiss trial a curtain raiser for the big event. INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS — It looks as though Austria will get a peace treaty. Russia has agreed to allow Austria to stockpile vital raw materials in exchange for a large share of oil production and prospecting rights. Some items still remain to be ironed out, but after three years the treaty is expected to be forthcoming soon. In the United Nations, Nationalist China made a last appeal for moral indictment of Russia, accusing Russia of aiding Chinese Reds. They don't want the Chinese Reds recognized, but it sounds like the Nationalist's swan song. Dr. Michael Scott, missionary to South Africa, appealed to the UN to protect some 300,000 Southwest African Negroes from annexation by the Union of South Africa. The plight of the Negroes and the treatment they would receive from the union moved the UN to compassion. They referred the case to the International Court of Justice. But the Union of South Africa hasn't felt the pangs of contrition yet. The newly formed French cabinet under Premier Georges Bidault seems to be breaking up. The undersecretary of state for national health quit, the second within a week.

Unification Won the War

Eight years ago yesterday, all hell broke loose. It was a quiet Sunday morning at a little known place called Pearl Harbor. We were caught with our pants down. No mistake about that. It was almost a year before we were able to strike back. It was at an unknown island called Guadalcanal. Unified fighting forces did it. Soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines and seahees were welded into the finest fighting team in world history. Unification made possible victories at New Guinea, New Britain, Tarawa, Wake, the Marshalls, Philippines, Iwo Jima and Okinawa. It was only natural that Hiroshima—and the A-bomb—follow. Our armed forces have come a long way in the past eight years. We have learned a lot from World War II. Basically, there was no change in our overall command. The heads of government are still civilians. Congress still controls the armed forces.

Since September 17, 1947, all our armed forces have been operating as a single military establishment. This is a significant date in our national history. It marks the first time since 1789 that the various departments of our armed forces have been a part of an integrated defense team. Unification is working. Make no bones about that. In spite of the recent flare-up in Washington, we repeat, unification is working. The arguments are over how it should work. But it is working.

Here are some examples of what's been accomplished under the Unification Act:

1. Joint strategic plans in the interest of national security have been formulated.
2. The roles and missions of the army, navy and airforce have been defined.
3. The formulation of an integrated basis of the 1950 budget for the entire National Military Establishment.
4. Coordination in the procurement efforts of all services.
5. The work of the Research and Development board in the technical area of weapons development.
6. The formulation of a comprehensive plan for the reserve components of the three services.
7. A thorough study of the problem of civil defense has been made.
8. An examination of medical and hospital problems to effect consolidations, eliminate duplication, and bring about uniformity in the medical practices of the three departments.
9. The establishment of unified field commands.
10. The consolidation of the Naval Air Transport service and the Air Transport command into the Military Air Transport service.
11. The conduct of numerous joint operations by the three services. Operation Forttrex is a good example.
12. Establishment of a modern code of military justice, applicable on a uniform basis to the personnel of all services.
13. The establishment of the National War college, Washington, D. C.; the Armed Forces Staff college, Norfolk, Va., and the Armed Forces Information school at Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

There are many other examples of unification which could be given. However, these are enough to show the pattern and the broad scale on which unification has developed.

Future admirals at the Naval academy are learning about sea navigation from a U. S. airforce officer. At West Point, future generals are discovering that detailed studies of naval engagements have been added to their military history courses. Changes at both schools are taking place rapidly. At Annapolis, 27 airforce officers have key teaching positions with more expected. At West Point, two naval officers and a marine have been added to the teaching staff. But, 40 airforce officers are teaching, with more to come.

Yes, we've come a long way since Pearl Harbor. On August 14, 1945, the United States had the greatest war machine the world had ever seen. It cost us plenty of money; we used up much strategic raw material, and — more important — it cost us plenty of good, fine young men.

Remember Pearl Harbor, yes. But, better still, remember the unification that is a direct result of Pearl Harbor.

It's still "United we stand; divided we fall."

Report from Washington

Bliss Opposes Move to Abolish Medical Care

OPPOSING BUDGET bureau proposals to abolish medical care for service dependents, Maj. Gen. Raymond W. Bliss, army surgeon general, recently stated: "If I were to deliberately plan to destroy the effectiveness of the armed forces, I should select as the most effective measure the denial of dependent medical care to the armed in the services." THE ARMED SERVICES have notified the House armed services committee that they oppose separate legislation to reduce from 10 to seven years the active commissioned service time required to qualify for retirement after 20 years with war-time rank. The services think action should await a complete review of retirement laws. CHANGES to existing regulations, drafted to eliminate the "bugs" which developed in army-airforce clothing allowance plan, are ready for the printer. In the meantime, officials of both services are studying the feasibility of a cash clothing plan. THREE GROUPS of house education committee members are nearing the end of a nation-wide survey to guide them in drafting legislation for educational facilities for children on military and other federal reservations.

WASHINGTON IS keenly interested in a plan for handling mail recently adopted at Fort Sill, Okla. The plan is simple: individual mail boxes for all personnel, thus eliminating "mail call."

RETIREMENT FEATURES and survivor benefits included in the Hook committee recommendations, but not written into the career compensation act, are scheduled for consideration when congress reconvenes in January.

ANNUAL PHYSICAL examinations for army officers and warrant officers have been suspended for 1950 to reduce the work load of the Medical department. Because of the suspension, a physical will be required prior to the promotion of any officer or warrant officer.

AN ARMY BOARD is at work on the big job of creating a promotion list for 7,500 warrant officers. Position on the list also will determine their pay classification under the career compensation act.

The Hand of Wickedness Can Deceive You

By CHAPLAIN ROBERT P. CANIS

There is the story of a group of airforce men who took a crew of submariners on an airplane flight High above the earth the airmen gave their submarine brethren a series of thrills in dips, dives, twists and curves that sorely tried their nerves and physical stamina. When the plane descended, the submariners emerged exhausted and pale.

A few days later they invited the airmen to join them in a submarine dive. The man at the depth dial explained that the hand on the dial was recording the depth of the dive. The ship could safely stand the pressure of 200 feet of water, but beyond that depth it was extremely dangerous. As they watched, the hand was registering 260 feet. Diving suits and artificial lungs were hastily issued and instructions given on how to abandon ship and rise to the surface. There was concern among the crew and fear among the visitors. After maneuvering various controls, the depth dial indicated that the submarine was rising. When the compartment doors were opened, the visitors emerged on the open deck, and to their amazement, discovered that the submarine's deck was completely dry. It had never left the surface. The airmen had been tricked by their hosts.

In a far more serious way the faith of the righteous is deceived. The hand of wickedness is spinning around recording the depths of degradation into which the world has never before been plunged.

Christian, remember that Jesus has triumphantly completed the way of salvation. He has opened up the way to God. Take your eyes off that hand of sin, and lift your eyes to God. He will sustain you. He will bring you up in time of trouble. He will strengthen you against temptation. He will bring you up last to His perfect and eternal Peace.

To Amuse You Today

First Cook: "Why do men eat more pancakes than waffles for breakfast?"
Mess Sgt.: "Because discipline slip over and make room. Waffles have a non-skid tread and won't budge."
CPO: "Here's something for you to remember. A sensible man doubts everything; only a fool is certain of what he says."
Sailor: "Are you sure?"
CPO: "Positive."

Overheard in the PX: "I stood in line for over an hour yesterday."
"What for?"
"Don't know. It was all gone by the time I got to the counter."
Tramp: "Do you have a nickel for a cup of coffee?"
Soldier (Day before pay day): "No I don't, but thanks just the same. I'll make out somehow."

Dental Technician: I don't think that new dentist is doing so well."
Nurse: "Why not?"
D. T.: "Well every time I go by the dental clinic, I see him looking down in the mouth."
A telephone lineman was hauled into court by an eavesdropping housewife for using strong language. He explained it to the judge:

"Your honor, my buddy working a boy over me, accidentally dropped some hot lead down my shirt. So, I said, 'Look Frank, that hot lead doesn't feel good. Please don't drop any more.'"
What would you do if I kissed you on the forehead?"
"I'd call you down."

Speak of the Devil. Edited by Sterling North and C. B. Boutell. Doubleday, Doran and Company, Inc., Garden City, New York, Publisher.
By D. W. SCHAEER
Meet the Devil. In fact, meet ten or a dozen different devils. They're all here, from the old original Satan to Beelzebub and Asmodeus. But there is no mistaking any of them. You can always tell the devil by his smell.
For centuries writers have been occupied with the question of the devil and his works. Appropriately enough for the works of man the devil has always made more interesting reading than his antithesis and the covers of this book are bursting with the fine collection of devils made by Sterling North and C. B. Boutell.
Selections from Milton's Paradise Lost and Dante's Divine Comedy are included as are pieces by Martin Luther, Guy de Maupassant and Alfred Lord Tennyson.
Among the more modern writers who find revelations of evil attractive are John Collier, who is possessed of one of the most fertile and original imaginations of anyone writing, Stephen Vincent Benet's The Devil and Daniel Webster, familiar to thousands through radio production, and Satan and Sam Shay by Robert Arthur.
The editors did not discriminate. There are stories about English, French, Italian and Russian devils and Swedish, German, Scottish, Indian and heavenly devils are represented. Revolt of the Angels by Anatole France and The Tragical History of Doctor Faustus by Christopher Marlowe are the more serious stories of sin.
But by and large most of the tales are amusing and, more than that, they fire one's own imagination with thoughts of midnight bargains with the Old Boy himself in which souls are exchanged for riches.
The devil's attire changes with the times. In London he appears as a rather vulgar tradesman. In France as a laity fellow. In London again as a debonair man-of-the-world.
A quote from a conversation between the devil and George in The Devil, George and Rosie by John Collier is illustrative of the type of story in the collection. "I could cope with the increase of the population of this planet," said the devil. "I might have coped even with the emancipation of women. But, unfortunately, the two are connected and form a vicious circle."
"I see exactly what you mean," said George.
"I wish I had never invented that particular sin," said the devil. "I do indeed. There are a thousand million women in the world at this moment, and, with one or two negligible exceptions, every one of them is damned."
"Fin!" said George.
Martin Luther is reputed to have thrown an ink pot at the devil. If he did it must have surely contained the ink to write these stories. And the devil must have dodged because he is still here for you to enjoy. He's a tricky old cucker and sometimes reminiscent of certain people we've met.
We're sure you'll recognize him too. He's definitely worth reading about.

Lawson Club Meeting Held

Ladies of the Lawson Woman's club met in the main lounge of the base Officers' club last week for their first social get together since the club disbanded for the summer.

Mrs. J. T. Murphy and Mrs. Barry Albright served as hostesses for the afternoon tea which was attended by approximately 30 ladies.

The serving table was overlaid with a white damask cloth and centered with an arrangement of holly, pine and Christmas balls.

After the social hour a brief business meeting was held at which time new officers for the coming year, Officers elected for the year, Officers elected for the year, president, Mrs. R. O. Johnson; vice-president, Mrs. W. C. Behner; secretary and treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Conrad, and welfare chairman, Mrs. Barry Albright.

Mrs. Raymond W. Kramme presided at the business session as the retiring vice-president.

Howlands Hosts At Aperitif Party

Usenering in the Yule season, Col. and Mrs. W. A. Howland, and their daughter, Miss Mary Agnes Howland, honored their friends with an aperitif party in the Palm room of the Officers' club last Saturday.

Seasonal colors were carried out in the decorations. The room was gay with Christmas wreaths and the serving table was centered with red and green Christmas balls in a low mound and edged with pine interspersed with holly. Ball red and green tapers in silver holders completed the decorations.

Approximately 70 friends called between the hours of 5 and 7.

Benning Tops Blood Donors

According to the comparative achievements of blood centers in the Southeastern area through Nov. 27, Fort Benning was again the top of the list with an average of 118 pints of blood donated on each bloodmobile visit.

October was the banner month with 353,000 individuals. All the blood donated has been available to the medical profession through 1,400 hospitals.

Dancing Team Will Appear At Main Theater on Dec. 9

On Dec. 9 at 8:30 p.m. in the Main theater, the Fort Benning Community Concert association will present Rosario and Antonio, world-famous Spanish dancers.

Featuring the fiery flamenco dances they learned in the native Seville, classic works set to the music of De Falla, Granados and Albeniz and folk dances in traditional costumes, Rosario and Antonio will present one of the most spectacular programs of Castilian dances since the days of the lamented La Argentina whose impresario P. C. Coppicus now directs their present tour.

The 1948-1950 season will mark their 20th dancing anniversary, and this at the ripe old age of 25 and 26. These cousins have sold the world Spanish folklore through dancing since they joined the festival crowd in their native Seville when they were five and six years old.

Privates are Promoted

Two men of Headquarters and Headquarters company, Student Training regiment, were promoted from private to private first class last week.

They were Edwin E. Morgan and Marvin D. McNeely.

Promotion Given Division Officer

Second Lt. Robert T. Mendenhall, Third Medical Battalion, was recently promoted to first lieutenant.

Lieutenant Mendenhall entered the army in 1942 at Camp Berkeley, Tex. He remained there until 1943 when he was sent to Camp Kilmer, N. J., to await overseas assignment.

In February, 1944, he went to England, and in June of that year made the invasion of France. He was in Europe until December, 1945, when he returned to the states. He received his field commission while in France in 1945.

From 1946 until 1948, he was connected with the Organized Reserve Corps, and in December, 1948, entered on active duty. He came to Fort Benning in March of this year, and was assigned to the Third Medical Battalion.

Lieutenant Mendenhall wears the Good Conduct medal, the American theater ribbon, European theater ribbon with five battle stars, Victory medal and occupation medal.

COL. GILBERT T. COLLAR At New Station

Col. Collar Leaves Lawson Command

Col. Gilbert T. Collar gave up the reins of Lawson Air Force Base this week to Major Richard O. Johnson after serving as base commander for 42 months.

While at Lawson, the colonel was instrumental in securing funds and directing the construction of two modern tennis courts and a lighted softball field. He also supervised the renovation of both the officers' and non-commissioned officers' clubs.

During World War II, he served with the Seventh Air Force, Fourth Composite Service Group, and later commanded the Army garrison forces on Guam. Before coming to Lawson, Major Johnson was personnel staff officer at Turner Air Force Base, Albany, Ga.

The major is a native of North Dakota and a veteran of the European and China-Burma-India theaters. He and his wife, the former Miss Ruth Christensen of Des Moines, Ia., and two children, Thomas Jay, 3, and Dorothy Ann, 1, are residing on the post.

Your Red Cross Avoid Yule Accidents

By MURRAY F. HILL
Your Red Cross director of safety services has pointed out that even the happy season of Christmas can be marred by unpleasantness if we let home accidents or carelessness ruin our holidays. Here are some warnings which can make this Yuletide season a safe as well as a happy one.

Christmas trees dry out quickly and become highly inflammable. To reduce the danger of fire, keep the base of the tree in a container of water the entire time the tree is up. Do not place Christmas trees near stoves, radiators or open fireplaces. Don't smoke near the tree and don't use lighted candles in decorating it.

Third Receives 35 Enlisted Men

Headquarters company, Third Infantry Division, recently received 35 enlisted men from various posts and installations.

Among those assigned were Pfc. George M. Harrison, Pfc. Hugh Howard, Pfc. Arthur L. Moore, Pfc. Delbert Johnson, Pfc. Robert L. Brady, Pfc. Frank Dias, Pfc. Donald E. Dunn, Pfc. Earl C. Hotchkiss, Pfc. Bobby F. Kieby, Pfc. Donald C. Morin, Pfc. Gerald T. Singer.

Detachment Group Advanced in Grade

Six soldiers of the Infantry School detachment were promoted recently.

Officers Transferred

Two officers were transferred recently from the 7th Engineer Combat Battalion to the 10th Engineer Combat Battalion.

T. I. C. TALKS

QUESTION OF THE WEEK:
Where were you and what were you doing on Dec. 7, 1941?

Sgt. 1st Cl. Ernest A. Hollens, Company A, Infantry School detachment, I had just gotten home to Birmingham, Ala., from Fort Benning for furlough. I was listening to the radio and heard the news of the sneak attack that way.

1st Lt. Leonard F. Morgan, Postal Officer, Infantry Center: I was a tech sergeant then. My duty assignment was secretary of the chief of staff, Sixth Corps area, located in the post office building in Chicago. At that time I was single and living at the YMCA, Franklin, I didn't hear about the news until I reported for duty the next morning. In those days, we were authorized to wear civilian clothes except on payday. I had no uniform. Since I had not heard the news, I reported for duty in civilian clothes, so I had to go back and get my uniform. Everybody seemed to think it was a "fake," that Pearl Harbor just couldn't be bombed.

Sgt. 1st Cl. R. W. Ivry, Company A, Infantry School detachment: I was on maneuvers, too. We were on our way back to our home base at Fort Knox, Ky. We were just leaving Franklin, Ky., when we got the news, and being in a convoy at the time we didn't have very much chance to talk about it until we made halts along the road. Nobody could believe it was true, especially some of the men who were in the line for discharge the next day or so.

1st Lt. Norman F. Newman, Company C, Airborne Battalion: I was in a cafe in Cheyenne, Wyo. I was stationed at Fort Francis E. Warren as a private, but I might say at that time the people in the city didn't think much of soldiers, and we had been waiting a long time to get served. Suddenly the news came over the radio. There was a sudden nothing was too good for us. We didn't have much time to give the news thought as the MPs began to round up the men and get them back to camp.

Cpl. Frank E. Conlon, Headquarters battery, Ninth Field Artillery battalion: I was stationed at San Juan, Puerto Rico. I had been there about two or three weeks. I was going on leave, but the guard at the gate stopped us and wouldn't let us out. I thought at first that something was playing a trick on us. It came as a surprise to most of the men.

DA Issues Orders Affecting Benning

Lt. William J. Dolan was assigned to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. Cyril P. Metosh was transferred to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment. Lt. Jerry E. Holstad was transferred to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. William R. Penna was transferred to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. William H. Rice was transferred to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. Frank Smith, Jr., was assigned to the Student detachment, the Infantry School, Waco, Texas, from the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky.

Lt. Earl K. Woolley was transferred to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. Edwin M. Joseph was assigned to the Student Training headquarters, Waco, Texas, from the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky.

Lt. Charles W. Adam was assigned to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. Robert L. Newkirk was assigned to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., from the Student Training regiment.

Lt. William M. Jones was assigned to the Third Infantry division, artillery for competitive training on a plane over the Christmas holidays, transportation companies in Columbus, making plans to handle the expected rush.

Extra equipment will probably be drafted into use for the holidays, and officials of plane, railroad and bus companies anticipate little trouble in handling the extra traffic.

It was suggested by officers of all three companies that it would be wise, however, to make reservations as far in advance as plans permit.

Fares to New York, as an example, will vary from $19.95 for a bus ticket to $63.85 for plane fare. A train ticket to New York will be $29.46. While a plane will carry the traveler to the big city in six and one-half hours, it will take 22 and one-half hours by railroad.

W. C. Gunnels, Union bus terminal manager, said the bus lines are expecting an unprecedented rush. Although he feels sure they can handle the crowds, he suggested that troops, in order to prevent waiting in line for hours, purchase their tickets early in the month. He said, "We are prepared better than ever before to handle the anticipated rush, but long lines at one time occasionally cause people to miss their bus if they arrive too late."

Other public carrier company officials reiterated Mr. Gunnels' statement. Robert E. Brown, in the past when long lines waiting to purchase tickets had delayed scheduled departures.

Many soldiers and their families wishing to make connections for Atlanta for trains or planes will be served by airlines which will run from six to seven flights daily to Atlanta during the holiday season.

Reports received of men cutting themselves while cleaning the equipment have led officials to issue a statement warning that sharp edges on the tables should be dulled by filing before the tables are used.

Achieves High Score
Sgt. Elton C. Jervis, jumping cook of Company E, Airborne Battalion, scored 100 in both cook and mess steward food service examinations recently.

Travel Agencies Prepare To Handle Holiday Rush

School of Aviation has announced charter flights, leaving at any time for Atlanta, at $7.50 per person for four people. They suggested that early reservations be made, but pointed out that they can leave 30 minutes after being called, if necessary.

Ernest F. Howell, Muscogee county sheriff, said that auto traffic would probably reach new heights during the season, and warned motorists to leave earlier than usual for long trips to avoid traffic tieups. He said that as usual pedestrians would be a hazard, particularly hitchhikers, who usually are abundant during holiday time. Hitchhiking, he pointed out, is not only dangerous for the person looking for the ride but for the motorists as well.

The heaviest traffic is expected around Dec. 29 and probably will continue through New Year's day, with the larger traffic arteries bearing the brunt of the load. State police will patrol the highways in increased numbers during this period in a move to cut down on speeding and other traffic violations.

L. C. Kyle Jr., chairman of the Columbus American Automobile association announced that the association would be happy to help any Fort Benning personnel plan their holiday travel, whether they are members of the association or not.

The shortest and best route to New York, he said would be to go to Augusta and from there follow Route 1, straight through to New York. Personnel traveling to Chicago should take route 27 to Chattanooga and from there follow route 41. Mr. Kyle suggested taking route 241.

Accident Hazard Warning Is Issued
Fort Benning food service officials have announced that the new steam tables being issued to dining halls are accident hazards.

Reports received of men cutting themselves while cleaning the equipment have led officials to issue a statement warning that sharp edges on the tables should be dulled by filing before the tables are used.

Achieves High Score
Sgt. Elton C. Jervis, jumping cook of Company E, Airborne Battalion, scored 100 in both cook and mess steward food service examinations recently.

Yule Fire Hazard Warning Sounded

Engineer and safety officials cautioned Infantry Center personnel this week to be particularly careful in preparing lighting displays for the Christmas holiday period.

Each year during the Yuletide season, fires caused directly by lighting and the use of inflammable decorations, burn hundreds of homes and result in many deaths, safety officials stated. As a result, military and civilian personnel have been advised of certain rules governing the installation of lighting displays.

The intent of these rules, which cover military organizations decorating their barracks and families lighting their homes, is to prevent persons from carelessly preparing a fire-trap lighting display.

The following rules should be observed while preparing a lighting display:

1. All exterior lighting equipment is to be waterproof, according to the standards approved by the Underwriter's Electrical Code.
2. No more than 10 each 15-watt, or 15 each 10-watt lamps are to be used.
3. Christmas lighting should only be on between 4 p.m. and 10:30 p.m. during the period of Dec. 22 to Jan. 1.

Replacement Unit EM Assigned to Engineers
The 78th Engineer Combat Battalion, recently received seven men from the Third Replacement Company.

HARMONY CHURCH

Major Selected To Attend Class

Maj. Harold F. Howard, an instructor in the Tactical department of the Infantry School, was notified this week that he has been accepted for the 22-week class, beginning January at the Air Command and Staff college, Maxwell airforce base, Ala.

The seven-year army veteran, who was accepted by the regular army in 1946, has been at the Infantry Center since July. His prior assignment was in the Philippines, where he spent two and a half years as operations officer at Fort McKinley.

Major Howard is also a veteran of combat operations in Europe.

Complete Pastry Class

Sgt. James L. Wooten and Cpl. Herbert A. Cooke, both of the 130th Quartermaster Bakery company, recently completed the Third Army pastry baking course here, and were presented certificates by Maj. Don G. Romine, commandant of the Third Army Food Service school.

Sergeant Wooten is chief baker of the 130th.

Tonsorial Duties Reminiscent Of Erstwhile Military Chores

Thirty years ago Sgt. Albert Beck was drilling the men of Company D, 30th Infantry regiment, Third Infantry division. Today Mr. Beck is cutting the hair of a new generation of Company D men.

Mr. Beck was born March 1886, in the town of Tell City, Ind. After joining the army in 1914, his first job was that of company barber. During that time the 30th Infantry was sent to the Mexican border where Beck, then a private, was promoted to the rank of drill sergeant.

When the United States entered World War I, Sergeant Beck went to France with the 30th. He saw action in three major battles — the Marne, St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne sector. It was at this time that he was decorated with the Distinguished Service Cross for carrying messages and giving first aid to the wounded while under enemy fire.

Among his other decorations

Seven Men Given Awards by Division

The Third Infantry division certificate of achievement was awarded to seven men recently. They were: Sgt. J. D. Walker, Cpl. Calvin C. Drummond, Pfc. Benjamin D. Carter, Pfc. Daniel L. Ford, Pfc. Elmer H. Bell, Sgt. Mark E. Cornelius and Sgt. Henry J. Turner.

Twelve Division Officers Finish Virginia School

Twelve officers from the Third Infantry division have completed the fourth quartermaster staff course at the U. S. naval amphibious training base, Little Creek, Va.

Also completing the course were five marine officers from the Third Marine air wing at Cherry Point, N. C.

The class is composed of specially selected students from the transport quartermaster course and is of two weeks' duration. Augmenting the material presented in the transport quartermaster course, the staff course devoted the major portion of its 48 hours to the principles involved in the allocation of shipping.

The successful completion of this course enables these officers to act as a staff transport quartermaster on regimental, division or corps level.

Dining Setup Inspection Set

Infantry Center food service dining stewards were notified this week of several pending inspections by the inspector general in cooperation with food service officials.

All files pertaining to dining halls at Fort Benning during the last half-year will be used by the inspector general in comparing the present condition and efficiency of the dining facilities with those of the past. Food service officials said they hope to find an improvement during these inspections.

Dining hall personnel have also been cautioned about the use of holiday decorations. Serious fire hazards are caused by the indiscriminate use of decorative materials such as crepe paper and dried foliage, and food service officials have asked that decorations be made sparingly and wisely.

Simmons Paces Hoop Scorers

Elongated Center Ben Simmons, of the Provisional group, Area Service unit, took an early lead in the individual's corner in the post-intramural basketball hoop.

Simmons has in two games poured 18 field and three goals through the hoop to amass 38 points.

Simmons' nearest rival is blond Bill Cunningham, of the 30th Infantry regiment, who has tallied 27 points. Cunningham's total was made on 11 field goals and five charity tosses in two games.

Next in line in the scoring race are Roy Smith, of the ASU, and Edgar Echols, of the Third Infantry division artillery. Both men have scored 24 points in two games. Smith has hit for 11 field goals and two fouls for his total, while Echols has made nine field goals and six free tosses to reach the two dozen mark.

Individual leaders of the various teams are in addition to the above, Pontow, of the ISD 15; Brown, Airborne battalion; ETR 14; Burke, Special Troops; Third Infantry division 13; Grand and Hosket, 15th Infantry regiment; 12; Carr, 52nd Medical battalion; 10; and McLaughlin and Martin, Station hospital, 8.

Seven EM Qualify As Firing Experts

During the recently completed range firing season, the tankers of the Third Reconnaissance company had seven experts out of a group of 20, and not a single failure.

Top man in the group was Sgt. Paul B. Worley, who fired 287 out of a possible 300. Close on his heels was Sgt. 1st cl. Ralph H. Ruffin, who fired 281.

CAPTAIN ALEMANCA WILLIAMS Receives Commendation Ribbon from Maj. Gen. F. W. Clarkson For His Berlin Airlift Services

Captain Rewarded For Airlift Activity

Fort Benning honored one of the heroes of the famous Berlin airlift last week, when Capt. Alemanca Williams, 15th Infantry regiment, received the Army Commendation ribbon during a ceremony on Siltwell field.

Captain Williams was awarded the medal for his outstanding services from June, 1948, when the airlift was started, until September, 1949, when he returned to the United States.

As operations officer for the 24th Truck Transportation battalion, he directed hauling activities which routed more than 2,000 tons of material a day.

He directed a staff of 100 10-ton trailers and 420 four-by-five tractors, which operated 24 hours a day for the duration of the lift.

With headquarters in Frankfurt, both the Rhine-Main and the Wiesbaden sources of the airlift were maintained on the ground.

Hampered by a lack of parts, inclement weather and a shortage of experienced drivers and excessive attempts at pilfering by the German people, Captain Williams succeeded in maintaining the necessarily high standards which later resulted in his being awarded the Army Commendation ribbon.

One instance which displays the exceptionally high morale maintained in the 24th occurred in the winter of 1948, when more than 80 percent of the drivers in the battalion were due for re-enlistment furloughs. Without a single exception the men volunteered to defer their furloughs, which the battalion was in no position to deny them, until the brunt of the airlift operations had subsided and their unit could once more allow them time of leave.

From this position he went to the 37th Infantry battalion as S-4, and later assumed the duties of operations officer for the 24th. Now commander of Headquarters company, Third battalion 15th Infantry regiment, Captain Williams has been at Fort Benning since Nov. 2.

Peanut Bowl Teams Will Again Be Quartered at Fort Benning

Members of the Peanut Bowl committee announced at a meeting Tuesday night at the Haddon Hotel that Memorial stadium guarantors would have until Dec. 15 to pick up their preferred seats for the direct "airing" which will be played at the local gridiron the afternoon of Dec. 31.

Lon Gammage, chairman of the committee, announced the City commission had advised him yesterday that it had approved the Dec. 15 deadline for purchase of these select seats in the stadium.

The committee was also advised that the golf course at the post would be at the disposal of the team coaches and players and that tours would be conducted if necessary.

Officers Attend 2-Day Parley

Two Fort Benning officers left yesterday for Fort McPherson, Ga., where they will attend an adjutant general's conference on the decentralization of administration.

Col. Thomas Robinson, infantry center adjutant general, and Lt. Col. J. E. Green, Third Infantry division adjutant general, will meet with 20 other top representatives from the Third Army area to discuss present administrative procedures and operational advantages of decentralized activities.

The two-day conference opened with an address by Lt. Gen. Aivan C. Gillen, Jr., Third Army commanding general, who will also participate in the forum discussion.

The officers will leave Atlanta today to tour adjutant general divisions throughout the Third Army area.

Musicians Transferred

Cpl. Earl North, trombonist, has been transferred from the 72nd Army band to the Third Infantry division band, and Cpl. John Volpi, tenor saxophonist, has been assigned to the unit from the Far East command.

Maximum Leave Reminder Issued

A reminder that 60 days is the maximum amount of leave a soldier may accumulate, was issued recently by the comptroller general.

In order not to lose furlough time, a soldier would have to take a leave the day he accumulated the 60-day maximum. If he did not, the leave he would ordinarily accumulate, would not be credited to him.

As an example: Pvt. John Doe of Company D, 30th Infantry regiment, has been in the service for two years as of Nov. 1, 1949. He has accumulated 60 days leave up to that period, and has decided to take 30 days leave from Dec. 15, 1949 to Jan. 14, 1950. These 30 days will be charged against his 60 days maximum accumulated leave.

He does not accumulate leave time from Nov. 1, 1949 to Dec. 15, 1949 because he already had the maximum limitation. Additional accumulated leave will be credited (as earned) after Dec. 15 since at this time he began reducing the maximum of 60 days.

Consideration is being given to initiation of legislation to validate paymen's which may be held to be improper under this ruling.

The secretary of defense has expressed the desire that "present army regulations governing computation of leave for military personnel and payments based on such computations be followed."

Pvt. Harmon Promoted

Pvt. Lewis R. Harmon, Company A, Infantry School detachment, has been promoted to private first class.

Assigned From Bragg

Two men from the 42nd Engineer Construction battalion at Fort Bragg, N. C. were recently transferred to the 78th Engineer Combat battalion here.

Retirement Ceremony Honors Veteran Artillery Sergeants

Tuesday, Nov. 29, was a red letter day for Sgt. 1st cl. William J. Mooney and Thomas C. Robertson, as they retired after a total of almost 41 years of service.

They were honored by fellow members of the 39th Field Artillery battalion at a retirement parade held on Tiger field.

Sergeant Mooney, who has 20 years and six months in the army, doesn't know just what he'll do for a while after getting out. When asked what his plans were, he smiled laughingly. "Now there is a hard question."

But Sergeant Robertson isn't worried about his future. He's going to retire to his farm in South Georgia and become a "gentleman farmer."

Standing in the reviewing stand with the sergeants were Lt. Col. Clyde L. Jones, battalion commander, Capt. Paul A. Gilly, Maj. John E. Jennings, Capt. Max A. Simfield and 1st Lt. William B. Head.

Pacific Survey Group Departs

Members of a subcommittee of the house appropriations committee have departed at the invitation of the Secretary of Defense to assist in reaching decisions on appropriation requests for costs of occupation work of government, relief and rehabilitation.

The congressional group, which was especially selected by Honorable Clarence Cannon, chairman of the appropriations committee, consists of Rep. W. F. Norrell, chairman of the subcommittee; Rep. Otto E. Passman, Rep. Edward H. Kruse, Jr., and Rep. A. L. Miller.

Mr. Cannon, in accepting Mr. Johnson's invitation, wrote, with reference to problems of the occupation:

"As you point out, such a visit would afford opportunity to obtain information on the situation which expired June 30, 1949, has been extended until Oct. 1, 1950. It declared that many applications were received after the expiration date. In order to meet the demand of present organizations and to fill applications for the program, the deadline has been extended."

Pfc. William T. Parker, central meat cutting plant, had the highest overall score on the six phases of the food service examination. His score was 83 percent.

The memo from Washington declares that the order which expired June 30, 1949, has been extended until Oct. 1, 1950. It declared that many applications were received after the expiration date. In order to meet the demand of present organizations and to fill applications for the program, the deadline has been extended.

Transfers, Assignments Revealed by 3rd Division

Recent transfers to and new assignments in Third Infantry division units were revealed this week by division officials.

Pvt. Johnnie D. Pugh was assigned to the 10th Engineer Combat battalion, Pvt. Royce W. Stegall to the Ninth Field Artillery battalion, Pvt. William D. Mills to the Third Antiaircraft Artillery battalion, Pvt. Lawrence R. Long to the Ninth Field Artillery battalion, Pvt. James H. Crocker to the Third Antiaircraft Artillery battalion, Pvt. James W. Morris to the 30th Infantry regiment, Pvt. Alton M. Jacobs to the 30th Infantry regiment, Pvt. Thomas W. Frazier to the 30th Infantry regiment, Pvt. Jack K. McKinley to the 30th Infantry regiment.

German Shotguns Should be Checked

American soldiers who own German firearms have been cautioned by military authorities in Germany against attempting to load them with U. S. ammunition.

According to Lt. Col. Wayne L. Wood, Stuttgart (Germany) ordnance officer who sounded the warning, many of the foreign-made shotguns are not strong enough to withstand the power of American-manufactured powders, and therefore, constitute a definite safety hazard.

A thorough check by a reliable gunsmith was recommended. Honorary measure before firing a German gun loaded with American ammunition.

Assigned to Post Unit

Sgt. 1st cl. Willie Greer Jr. has been assigned to the 588th Motor Ambulance company as a dining hall steward. Sergeant Greer came to Fort Benning from Fort Dix, N. J.

Pfc. Albert J. Kovsch to the 78th Engineer Combat battalion, Sgt. Charles H. Blitch, Sr., to the 30th Infantry regiment, Sgt. Jesse E. Leverette to the Ninth Field Artillery battalion, Pvt. George C. GIs Await Long Yule Holiday; Partial Pay Scheduled Today

Christmas 'Break' To Begin Dec. 22

More than 50 percent of the Infantry Center's personnel are reportedly preparing for the 14-day Christmas vacation that will get underway Dec. 22 and continue until Jan. 4, unit commanders said today.

With one week remaining until the mass exodus starts, military citizens of the post will realize the first touch of the Yule today when a supplemental pay will be doled across the table to more than 10,000 troops. Personnel receiving this Christmas advance will be in the last-minute rush, was requested earlier in the month by individuals.

For the men that stay during the holiday, unit commanders have made arrangements for Yuletide recreation. Most small-unit commanders, a spot survey (See GI AWAITS P-28)

FORT BENNING MILESTONE... Another feature was added to "America's most complete army post" last week when Col. W. K. Wilson, left, mobile district engineer, turned over the keys to the new classroom and auditorium to Brig. Gen. S. G. Sladen Bradley, far right, assistant commander of the Infantry School. Looking on are, left to right, A. D. Lambert, resident engineer; W. C. Ivey, construction inspector, and D. C. Nusome, president of the Nusome Construction company. The new structure will house classes of the Communications department of the Infantry School and will be used as an auditorium. Located behind the Main theater the building was erected at a cost of approximately $85,000.

150 Civilians Due to Lose Jobs at Post

Within a month and a half some 150 civilian employees of the Infantry Center will join 388 other non-military workers who have been dropped from the government payroll since June 30, an official check showed this week.

T. A. Barefoot, chief of civilian personnel, said that those to be discharged would be feeling the economy ax wielded by government budget bureaus that are trying to reduce military spending.

In explaining how the civilian employees are dropped from the rolls, Mr. Barefoot said, for example, an ordnance officer in Atlanta calls a subordinate officer of Fort Benning to tell him that his section's operating funds have been reduced. The Fort Benning ordnance chief recommends a civilian staff reduction to meet the curb. The recommendation is forwarded to Mr. Barefoot's office where action is taken.

On a nation-wide scale, the army, which is said to have received a "nominal" civilian cutback, has reduced its civilian ranks by 41,000 persons. All (See 150 CIVILIANS P-28)

Third To Return From Field Duty

The Third Infantry division is scheduled to return from a five-day bivouac tomorrow, making the completion of a 42-week period of advanced infantry training.

This week was the first time since its reactivation in October, 1948, that the entire division has been in the field at one time. Service units of the division went into operation immediately upon arrival at the bivouac area, setting up communications, police and traffic systems and motor pool facilities for the week's maneuvers.

Central communications were set up at division headquarters and division signal men were actively stringing wires through the tall pines. Fifty miles of waterproof wire were laid along the communications route.

Police from the Third Military Police company, set up traffic regulations at danger points.

The whole of the operation was conducted on a tactical basis. Jeeps and trucks were camouflaged to prevent recognition from the air. L-7 observation aircraft from the division light aviation section covered the area trying to spot encampments.

Field kitchens were set up and the troops were fed as though in a combat operation. Everything from two-man pup tents to the headquarters conical type were erected and ready for occupation. Telephones were installed in the headquarters sections in a matter of hours after the first of the troops arrived in the area.

On Tuesday, the first of the tactical problems were started. Night problems as well as day-

Poplin Clothing Issue Available

Poplin shirts now are available for issue to enlisted personnel on an optional basis, Infantry Center officials announced this week.

Enlisted men may draw up to three poplin shirts, which will be charged against the recipient's clothing monetary allowance credit.

Division men will begin a 13-day half-day schedule a week after their return from the field. Their next step is expected to be amphibious training in Virginia, preparatory to leaving for "Operation Fortrexx".

Chest Campaign Ends Here

Contributions Fall Slightly Shy of Prescribed Goal

More than three-fourths of the Infantry Center personnel dug down in their pockets during the long Community Chest campaign. Those primarily concerned are congratulated on having done a good job.

Final figures tabulated by Community Chest officers this week show that 78 percent of all Fort Benning and Lawson air force base personnel contributed $22,328.48 of the $31,202.25 goal—about 71.2 percent of the mark that was set earlier.

In receiving the final report, Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, declared, "Although the goal set in 1948 was not reached, the percentages of $264.50 mark; the Infantry

Watch Field Operation

Infantry Center food service supervisors and technicians spent the week observing field operations of the Third Infantry division this week to observe field operations of dining hall personnel.

Young Ladies Asked to Help

Are you busy during the Christmas season? Here's a chance for young ladies who find their days rather empty to do something beneficial and interesting.

The Red Cross auxiliary has a call out for volunteers who can wrap packages, teach games and entertain. All these talents can be utilized by the Red Cross workers during the Yule season when they go into the Station hospital and help make patients' Christmas cheery.

By calling Mrs. Taiton W. Long at 2556 you can devote your talent into a needy cause.

AIRBORNE SEAFARER

Agile Navy Commander Completes Jump Course

CMR. COLEMAN, RIGHT, RECEIVES PARATROOPER WINGS Lt. Col. Patrick F. Cassidy, Airborne Director, Makes Memorable Presentation

By PAT MURPHY (Bayonet Staff Writer) The prospect of successful unification of the armed forces is far from nebulous, especially if one looks at a 41-year-old Navy commander who last week became a full-fledged airborne infantryman here. Actually, the seemingly complicated situation isn't as in-digestible as it appears after meeting with Cmdr. John B. Coleman, Jr., an affable and highly-confidential New York lawyer who's back in the navy to serve a short stint. Commander Coleman, who says he's the "living example of unification," stands out in today's story-stuffed armed forces picture as an outstanding student of modernized warfare. The peculiar and off-ordinary story of Commander Coleman's service career starts back in the bleak, war-torn year of 1941 when, as a young lawyer, he enlisted in the field artillery. In a very short time, the blonde-haired soldier rose to corporal in a heavy artillery battalion. Less than a fortnight later, he changed the course of events with a swift twist of the wrist and a change of uniform. In the spring of 1942, Lt. (j.g.) John B. Coleman, Jr., U. S. Navy, became a paratrooper attached to Gen. J. Lawton Collins' 14th corps in the Pacific. Name the islands and the youthful, exuberant commander can say he's been there. Across the cord and up the bays and up the Solomon islands, Commander Coleman strode. For months, he and his men were sweating out the tenseness of jungle warfare and the nerve-racking grind of island hopping. One of a special section attached to the main army and airforce, it was Commander Coleman's task to follow the doughboys through the thick and fire until they met the immovably entrenched enemy. It was then that Commander Coleman would face the possibilities of accomplishing his assignment—tail for navy aircraft to knock out the out-reach enemy. Their job accomplished, the combat intelligence team would move forward, seeking more dug-in enemy to seek. Next week, Commander Coleman is going to leave the Infantry Center. For more than five weeks he's participated in one of the army's top courses—generally conceded to be the most rigorous—paratrooper training. "This experience has been the culmination of a long dream," the commander declared. "In 1943, I began to work closely with ground forces, navy and airborne. I knew then, from watching the magnificent teamwork and effort by those paratroopers, that I would ultimately want to be one of their number. This is a momentous day in my life. "Airborne training is a remarkable combination of stressing mental alertness and building up the body to be impregnable fortress, capable of withstanding the torturous rigor that accompanies combat. "I am returning to Washington in a few days," he added, "to resume work. I can say emphatically that navy officials will receive only the highest of praise about airborne. It is tops in men, training and utility. "Commander Coleman's duty with the Infantry School's Airborne battalion was made possible through an opportunity presented by the navy's operations branch. Arrangements were made for him to participate in a full-length course at the Infantry Center. Standing off to the side during Commander Coleman's graduation was a smiling airborne sergeant. "I've seen hundreds of young fellows jump," said Sgt. Joseph P. Wolfe, the commander,

Your Red Cross Yule Treats For Patients Are Planned

BY MURRAY E. HILL With the Yuletide spirit in the air, the Red Cross girls at the Station hospital, in conjunction with the Red Cross auxiliary on the post, the Chapter in Columbus and representatives from 20 surrounding chapters, are planning a real Christmas for the patients. Ward decorating contests, with material supplied by the local Red Cross chapter and other community agencies, with patients doing the work will enliven the hospital wards. Volunteers are busy wrapping small gifts, and every patient will receive a Christmas stocking Christmas eve. Hundreds of Christmas cards, donated by the National Association of Greeting Card Publishers, are made available through the Red Cross for patients to remember those at home this Christmas. Special Christmas entertainment is being planned, ranging from Christmas plays to informal ward parties. These pleasant surprises for the patients in the hospital this Christmas, but in the meantime the Red Cross has not forgotten its world wide responsibilities. Volunteers began last August packing and shipping about 20,000 individual Christmas stockings and hundreds of decoration kits for distribution overseas to servicemen in hospitals.

Carolers to Air Yuletide Music

Fort Benning soldiers and Columbus civilians who have been rehearsing Christmas carols at the Ninth street USO for the past several weeks, in preparation for a tour of Columbus and other city homes and public institutions next Sunday, will be heard over radio station WDAK competing next week, USO officials said today. The group of singers will rehearse Christmas carols at the WDAK studios today, and the date of broadcast is expected to be announced next week. The group will hold a final rehearsal at the USO tonight at 8 p.m. Nearly 20 Fort Benning personnel have been practicing the traditional melodies to help carry the Christmas spirit to the ill and needy. Robert Kraus and William McKenzie of the USO staff are directing the group.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Sergeant's Rifle Prowess Draws Dignitaries' Praise

The chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, once said of Sgt. 1st cl. Daniel S. Huntley, this week's Soldier of the Week, "If all soldiers in our army could perform as well as Sergeant Huntley, the future of our national defense would be assured." Sergeant Huntley, no newcomer to Fort Benning, has distinguished himself in marksmanship circles throughout the nation as one of the top contenders each year for the crown of targeteer. His amazing aptitude for scoring almost perfect scores in official matches has brought recognition from many of the country's leading rifle authorities. Sergeant Huntley, a member of the Infantry School's small arms department periodically demonstrates the effectiveness of the M-1 rifle to visiting military and civilian dignitaries. His present demonstration calls for sustained fire at a target, 1,000 inches away from his prone position. In something less than a minute, Sergeant Huntley deftly pumps 50 rounds into the little black bull's eye—proportionately the size of a target at 200 yards. Amazed spectators see Sergeant Huntley and one with his fellow marksmen, Sgt. William J. Lee, perform a dual shooting match to demonstrate the effectiveness of two different types of rifles. Sergeant Lee, firing a T-20, an automatic magazine-fed M-1, blasts away at a target and is able to perforate the bull's eye 60 times in 45 seconds. Then Sergeant Huntley, using his standard M-1, competes with the firing cycle of the newer weapon by shattering the black dot at a semi-automatic speed. Praise for Sergeant Huntley never stops. Infantry School officials, from the commandant down to his section chief, have voiced praise time and again for the long-time veteran's superior performance with his rifle. National newspapers and magazines have several times lauded the sergeant's prowess as a marksman, calling him a truly outstanding member of a crack organization. Sergeant Huntley's accomplishments with a rifle have grown into a list of his most prized. Second place in National Individual Marksmanship match, 1940; member of the Infantry team, 1939; first place in Frankfort individual match, 1938; (a 200-yard rapid fire match); Wightman state champion, 1937; member of the President's Hundred for 1937, 1938 and 1940, and a member of the Herrick rifle team. In 1937, the Herrick team established a record that was not broken until 1940. Each man of the team fired 20 rounds at 1,000 yards, scoring 797 out of a possible 800. In the Infantry Center rifle and pistol matches, Sergeant Huntley placed first in the 30 caliber rifle match, second in the .22 caliber rifle match and fifth in the .30 caliber pistol match. His demonstrations during the past few weeks for visiting military and civilian dignitaries have been at 400- and 600-yard ranges. Performance during these displays, many on days particularly windy, Sergeant Huntley proudly himself an exceptional marksman. Weapons department instructors have declared that Sergeant Huntley warrants praise as one of the nation's top marksmen.

You Can Save By Buying

Over $2.8 billions will be poured into the nation's pockets during 1950, when 16 million World War II veterans and their families receive a sizeable financial windfall in the form of National Service Life Insurance dividends.

Payments will average around $125—money, which will be essential for the recipient, as well as those extras which are a part of good living. But this money can buy a down payment on the future. That money can buy U. S. savings bonds.

Most veterans know, of course, approximately how much their dividend will be. Accordingly, many are already planning how to get rid of it in the fastest manner possible. Reports from a recent survey conducted by The Bayonet indicate that a majority of veterans plan to use the extra money to buy new automobiles even though most of them already have good ones.

It is our belief that this extra money—which when viewed in the light of present living conditions is small indeed—can be put to much better use. Certainly, it will in the end mean a great deal more financially than would a new automobile. Stop to think a moment about the interest rate a savings bond pays: for every $17.50 invested, there is a return of $25 in only ten years.

You will not only be investing in your own future security, but in the future security of the nation. You are, then, actually an investor in the world's greatest and wealthiest organization, the United States of America. You become part owner of that organization. In one sense, everyone is part owner, whether or not he invests in the United States, for his future depends upon his country's continued prosperity. Nevertheless, all of us can help to insure continued prosperity and all of us can help to insure our own prosperity at the same time by the purchase of U. S. savings bonds.

There can be no greater satisfaction than that which comes from planning ahead for next month and next year and the years after that. One doesn't insure security by buying an automobile. But security can be realized by saving. And one of the best ways we know to save is to buy—buy U. S. savings bonds.

Benning's Christmas Present

The new Fieldhouse, we feel, is the best Christmas present the Infantry Center ever received. Although it isn't finished by any stretch of the imagination, it has been turned over to special services and it won't be long before it becomes the most popular recreation spot on the post. At least we think so.

Occupying nearly a quarter of a block opposite Stillwell field, the half-million-dollar building is probably the most modern Fieldhouse in the army. Special services is going to outfit it with some 330,000 worth of sports equipment.

Its regulation basketball courts and swimming pool should play a large part in keeping Infantry Center troops in tip-top physical condition. To spectators and off-post visitors, it will prove good advertising for a sports-conscious post.

It is all we need to round out our title of "the world's most complete army post." The Fieldhouse will do much to focus the sports eye of the army world on us. Our heartfelt congratulations to those who gave birth to the idea of a Fieldhouse for Fort Benning.

Hopkins, Wallace Cleared by Ex-Atom Chief

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — The anticipated investigation into an allegation that Harry Hopkins and Henry Wallace gave atomic secrets by the ton to the Russians proved to be an empty Pandora's box. Lt. Gen. Leslie Groves, chief of atomic research during the last war, cleared both men. . . The supposed settlements John L. Lewis made with some small coal operators seem to be in doubt. As one of the big coal operators said, "Lewis must be signing contracts with himself" . . . The State department is standing pat on China. The Nationalists' government is expected to go to the island of Formosa as a last stronghold. Indications are the U. S. will do nothing active to save China from the Reds . . . The U. S. is going into debt at the rate of $15,000,000 a day. Means to solve it are to cut spending or raise taxes. Chances are that, for a while at least, the government will keep on going into debt. A doubtful measure that can't last for long but no other solution is in sight at present. . . President Truman is preparing his State of the Union address. Budget message and Economic report. They will be delivered next January . . . The president's civil rights program went bust in congress, but at his orders, Solicitor General Philip Perlman said, in a speech in New York city, that from now on the Federal Housing administration would not insure any loans made on private homes which are going to be restricted on a basis of race, creed or color. It could affect one-third of all new housing in the U. S. Biggest reactions so far came from bankers and builders in the South and in New York and New Jersey . . . One Thomas, Congressman J. Parnell, went to jail this week after being convicted beyond a doubt of padding his congressional payroll for eight years with phony names. Another Thomas, Senator Elmer of Oklahoma, returned to the U. S. after a six-week tour of 14 European countries. Since the session ended, more than 100 congressmen and 30 senators took junkets around the world at the taxpayers' expense. Two congressmen were carried off ships intoxicated, one threw all his luggage out of a train window and two lost their pants in Spain and raised Cain over it. Some of the lawmakers undoubtedly used the time and money to good purpose, but, unfortunately, they never made the headlines and the bad taste of the few left a bad taste in the mouth of many Europeans.

Report from Washington

Recruiting Service Offers Opportunities to EM

ARMY-AIR FORCE Recruiting service offers opportunities for enlisted service of outstanding military bearing for duty throughout the U. S. Desirable qualifications are: first-three grades rank, wartime service, recent overseas service and experience in selling or public relations work. Applications should be submitted according to procedures indicated in AR 615-200 or SR 160-10-1. The airforce also needs officers for recruiting duty.

THE ARMY'S CAREER guidance program definitely will be continued, according to Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff.

DIRECTIVES PLACING army finance department personnel under career guidance will be distributed soon. Directives bringing the machine accounting field under career guidance are almost ready for the printer. Actually, classification of affected personnel into the finance career field is scheduled to begin about March, 1950.

THE DEFENSE DEPARTMENT'S legislative program for 1950 contemplates strenuous efforts to alleviate further the service personnel housing shortage.

Faith in God Can Lift Clouds, Give Us Hope

BY CHAPLAIN CHARLES S. H. HUNTER

A few years ago a group of chaplains and I made a trip from Jerusalem to Jericho. From Jericho we went down to the River of Jordan, and visited the trans-Jordanic banks.

I cannot say what the thoughts of the others were; but as I sat on those banks, I could not help thinking that, not too distant from that spot nearly two thousand years ago, there came out of Nazareth a Man Who spoke in exalted speech. Who breathed an atmosphere of inspiration, Who prophesied of a time when mankind would rise to higher standards of nobility. This Man was called Jesus the Christ, and those who believe His precepts and seek to regulate their conduct by His teaching call themselves Christians or Christ-like.

Jesus did many things; He said many things; He believed many things. But there was one fundamental concept of the ethics of the system of Jesus which may be considered the most powerful single ethical reflection of which the human mind is capable. I refer to Jesus' concept of human brotherhood and social welfare which to this day dominate the religion of the occidental world and is irrevocably written into the very fibre of Christianity. But behind this fundamental principle of the brotherhood of mankind is to be found another principle which constitutes the logical presupposition upon which Jesus stretched out his religious superstructure. I refer to the principle of worth—the sanctity and dignity of every human being who is a self in the highest sense of the term.

As we sat, a sudden darkness fell over that area. It was difficult and dangerous to proceed. There we waited four hours. Finally in the distance across the Dead sea came the brilliant rays of the sun.

In the approaching Yuletide season there are clouds hanging over our world. The clouds of shattered faith and the fog of blasted hopes all make our journeying difficult, but it is the same Man of Nazareth that same Sun that shone through the mist; and just as He brought new life and hope to those who believed His precepts then and regulated and patterned their lives after His, He can also lift the fog from our paths and restore the lost faith a help us to recapture all the nobility that is ours. No matter how dim the lights of peace, joy, love, and good-will may seem, the God of our fathers is able to lift the fog of despair and disillusionment from our world and give us the assurance of His love and His faith.

To Amuse You Today

A girl can lose a good catch by letting too much line.

Don't ask for her hand, if you can't foot the bills.

It's easier to apply for a job than apply yourself to one.

Many a cauliflower grew in Madison Square Garden.

A girl usually takes after a man who can look after her.

You have to get out of the hay if you want to get into the clover.

Coasting on a reputation is always an uphill job.

Funny how many people go broke paying for things that "will pay for themselves."

A bore is a person who thinks his "I's" are music to your ears.

Sometimes success comes from "know how" — sometimes from "know who."

A bachelor is a man who will get married when he finds someone who loves him as much as he does.

"Oh, come now, stop your griping. Why don't you pay that bill with a smile?"

"I'd love to, but they insist on cash."

On The Bookshelf

THE HERO BY MILLARD LAMPELL, JULIAN MESSNER, INC., NEW YORK, PUBLISHER.

BY D. W. SCHAEFER

The son of a Pennsylvania mill worker is a football player. More than that he is a good one, made all-state two times. Steve Novak is proud of his prowess. He is also ambitious. He wants to learn. Colleges and universities come after him. They offer money, some more than others. He settles on Jackson. He has visions of learning engineering; fraternities, soft beautiful women who have never known the harshness of life; grey flannels, unpressed tweeds, warm fires on wintry nights in a tradition-bound room. His brother, Joey, back from the war filled with bitterness, makes the night prior to his departure a fearful one, planting the first seed of doubt. Steve wanted all those things. He had the ideal American boy in mind. He went to the movies, read the papers, magazines, heard the radio. He knew what the American boy was like and with a simple-minded faith believed it all. He believed others believed.

He went to Jackson, played football, met the others: Hausler, who knew why he was there and why he was going to get his money for it; Tenthall who was played for a sucker; and Steve. But Steve believed in his dream. He played the game, he broke his shoulder, he met a girl, he lost the girl. He realized he was nothing but a football player. They were fixing his marks so he could play ball. He leaves the college and returns to Pennsylvania, determined to continue his education, but this time he's going to get it on his own. He sees that cashing in on his body didn't gain him anything for his mind.

The Hero is a well written book. There are some excellent descriptions of football games. The atmosphere of the locker rooms and college background run true to life. The book is, of course, built around Steve, but he is the only one of the characters who is truly alive. The others are shadows which cross his life. This doesn't detract from its overall effect. As we see it, the purpose of the book is to show the underlying strength of a sensitive, trustful nature when shown the opposite natures which comprise the world.

Instead of reverting to cynicism, which would be easy, Steve uses that strength, although he knows he will be lonely.

Millard Lampell has done a good job. It has faults. The intrusion of women and sex, for example, is not particularly well done, but the result is good in that it illustrates that for a truly whole person the present day tendency to think of sex as an aim in itself to be enjoyed indiscriminately and without thought, is not part of a sane, productive life.

Divarty Group Holds Luncheon

The ladies of Divarty entertained with their December luncheon at the Patton House last week.

The Christmas motif was colorfully carried out in the decorations. The doorways were flanked with arrangements of magnolia leaves tipped with poinsettias and the long I-shaped table was centered with twisted silver scrolls lined with cedar and holly and flanked by red tapers in white pine cone holders. The mantle was banked with a mass of cedar boughs, holly and red candles.

The following new members were welcomed: Mrs. Phyllis Curtis, Mrs. Lee Meekins, Mrs. Edie Neland, Mrs. Eugene Thomas, Mrs. Francis Stevens, Mrs. Jean Sandrock, Mrs. Kay Constantine, Mrs. Nita Farris, Mrs. Willowdean Howard, Mrs. Kattie Trice, Mrs. Louisa Lucas, Mrs. Noonie Benit, Mrs. Bea Wood, Mrs. Dorothy Laurora and Mrs. May Bobo.

Approximately 82 members and guests enjoyed the affair.

Chapel Nursery is Asset For Youngsters, Mothers

The 54-hour-a-week operating schedule of the Infantery Center chapel nursery has made it a popular play area.

The nursery, located in the building in the station hospital area, is available to both commissioned and enlisted personnel's children.

Under the direction of Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale, Infantery Center chaplain, the nursery is supervised by Mrs. Dolly Sanderson, better known to her small charges as "Nanny."

Many of the furnishings for the nursery have been provided by the Army Daughters who play to install even more equipment in the future.

The building occupied by the nursery formerly was a hospital ward, but the efforts of its supporters have embelished the one-draw structure with brightly-colored ornaments and equipment.

Small offices, once used by ward doctors and nurses, have been converted into sleeping rooms for the children.

Rosario and Antonio Delight Audience at Main Theater

A bit of the culture of old Spain was brought to the American concert stage Friday night when Rosario and Antonio, native Spanish dancers, appeared at the Main Theater under the auspices of the Community Concert association.

Adding their own charm and personality to their gift of music and their perfect teamwork was the accompanist, Rodriguez Mendosa, and guitarist Garcia de la Mata, delighted a small but enthusiastic audience.

The two cousins who have danced together for 20 years stopped the show with their duet of dances from the province of Cusco, traditional dances, "The Fruit Vendor" and the Inca dance, brilliantly executed, received a loud ovation.

By far the height of the evening performance was the "Llivia" dance, a lively and most appealing of the dances, this intricate routine, also strikingly costumed, gave both dancers an opportunity to display their natural grace and technique.

A suite of classic dances of the 18th century also showed both dancers to advantage and was an example of their perfect teamwork.

The dashing and fiery Spanish Gypsy dances which concluded the program brought demands for repeated curtain calls from the audience.

Other dances on the program were a folk dance from the province of Yucatan, Mexico, Spanish Dance No. 9 by Granades, Gorongio Gilano by Garcia Lopez, Leyenda in "Album of Eight Piano Pieces" by Albaniz and "Spateado" by Sarasate.

Mrs. Mendoza played Chopin's Polonaise Op. 39, Rachmaninoff's Prelude in G Minor, Nocturne for Lefthand Alone by Scriabine and Polichinela by Villa-Lobos. Mr. de la Mata played as a guitar solo "Granada" by Albeniz and Granados' Dance No. 5.

Home and Garden Club Entertains

The Fort Benning Women's Club Home and Garden held their Christmas meeting and tea on Monday at the Country club.

The club was beautifully decorated in the Christmas theme, with the mantle banked in Christmas greenery interspersed with large silver and gold pine cones with silver and gold cut-outs above the mantelpiece.

Mrs. Albert C. Haley, chairman, conducted the meeting and expressed her thanks to the members for their generosity in the clothing drive. She also introduced Mrs. Lawrence M. Upton, president of the United Garden clubs of Columbus, and Mrs. Mary Pressley and Miss Sue Brown from Kirwan's as special guests.

Co-hostesses for the meeting were Mrs. P. Cassidy and Mrs. K. A. Ward.

Tea was served after the meeting. The serving table was overlaid with a lace cloth, centered with a miniature Christmas tree decorated with tinsel and tiny Christmas packages, and tiny Christmas packages, poinsettias and Christmas balls banked around the base. Red tapers in silver holders flanked the centerpiece.

Door prizes were won by Mrs. McSweeney of Charleston, S. C. and Mrs. Dorothy Nordell.

Mrs. Glenn A. Soderstrom entertained at the piano with Christmas selections.

Yuletide Music Program is Set

A program of Christmas music is scheduled for Service club No. 1 next Sunday at 8 p. m.

Anna Louise Bornemann, conductor, formerly with a German opera company, will open the program singing three compositions by Franz Schubert: "Wie ich Sylvia, Ave Maria and Stanchen." Miss Bornemann will sing the melodies in the original German.

J. Robert Poe, pianist, will be featured on the second portion of the program. Mr. Poe will play Adagio from Ludwig Beethoven's Sonata Op. 27, No. 2, Frederick Chopin's Préludes from Op. 28, No. 7, No. 20 and No. 15 and Waltzes by Robert Schumann, Edward Grieg's "Love Thyself and O Holy Night" by A. Adam.

The program will conclude with three traditional Christmas songs sung by the 5th Infantry regiment choir, conducted by Chaplain (Capt.) Robert J. Moore. The latter portion of the program will include "Joy To The World" by Georg Handel, "Gloria in Excelsis Deo," traditional French air.

SHORT STORY

Two London newspapers told the story of King George's 54th birthday today in an absolute minimum of words—five and seven.

The Times and Daily Telegraph described the monarch's 54th day this way: "The king is."

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: DO YOU LIKE YOUR QUARTERS IN BATTLE PARK HOMES?

MRS. JOHN J. LAVIN, 3RD: We like our quarters very much because they are so convenient for Major Lavin. Then too we feel more at home when we are in the army when we are so near army families. We have a three bedroom apartment, and I think the apartment was well planned. There is more than ample closet and storage space. We have no complaints to make at all.

MRS. JAMES CHASE, 22A:

We do like our quarters very much. I think the most important thing is the nearness to the post and its conveniences. The heat is automatic and the apartment is warm all the time. We have adequate closet and storage space. We are very pleased with it and consider ourselves very lucky.

MRS. CLIFTON A. PETERS, 30A: We like our quarters so much. For one thing everything is handier and much more convenient for the major. The apartments are new and very desirable from the standpoint of being easy to keep up. We have three bedrooms and I think for an apartment of this size we have ample closet space. I do have one complaint to make and that is we have not been able to get a phone yet. The nearest one is in the Administration building. It is almost necessary to have a phone when you have small children and I sure hope the arrangements can be made for the phones before long.

MRS. R. S. WILLIAM F. WEST, 26C: We love our quarters. We have a two-bedroom apartment and they are so clean. It is so simple to get things in order and to keep them that way. They are one of the best things I have a help with a small baby. The storage space is more than sufficient and I think the closet space is more than adequate.

MRS. M. M. JENSEN, 12F: We do like our quarters very much. The only thing I don't like about them is the lack of telephone service. It is pretty hard to be without one, especially when you have children, because you never know when they might get sick and it's hard to get to the Administration building. I think the closet space is sufficient.

MRS. E. B. PRIDDEN, 15D: We like our quarters so much. They are well planned and compact, and the heating system is very nice, especially when you have small children. The rent is very reasonable, and the nearness to the post is one of the nicest things about it. I do miss the telephone though, and hope we get one before long.

Big Christmas Spread Awaits Benning's Dinning Hall Patrons

Infantry Center Food Service Supervisor Maj. John A. Rilovich declared this week that a Fort Benning personnel would be more than pleased with what is being planned for the traditional Yuletide feast. Major Rilovich said that each dining hall on the post has been allocated 100 pounds of turkey for each 100 men. He added that dining stewards have planned to cook about 100 pounds of stuffing for each 100 men, plus 100 pounds of other feasting delicacies for each 100 men. Personnel connected with planning the annual feast declare that the Infantry Center has never before seen such a spread. Guests of military personnel, as on Thanksgiving, will be permitted to eat in post dining halls. Some dining halls have voiced approval of suggestions to have music during the meal. Major Rilovich stated that many units have solicited photographs and radios to make dining more pleasant.

PEAK SCALER-HACKETT, RIGHT, ACCLAIMED FOR FEAT Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress Presents Commendation For Historic Mountain Climb

Mountain Climber Presented Award

Fort Benning's famous mountain climber, 1st Lt. William D. Hackett, received the coveted Army Commendation ribbon last week for his history-making ascent of Mt. Aconcagua—the western hemisphere's highest peak.

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, presented the 31-year old officer with the award at an informal ceremony. On hand also to witness the presentation was Col. Burton L. Lucas, Lieutenant Hackett's commanding officer and head of the Army Field Forces board No. 3.

The award, which was presented to the officer on behalf of President Truman, lauded the World War II combat veteran for being the first American to reach the tip of the 23,081-foot mountain, located near Pucun del Inca, Argentina. Lieutenant Hackett, at his own expense while on leave, left Fort Benning last Jan. 29 to make the climb. A month later, and after having traveled by air, train, boat and mule, he and four Argentine army officers began the ascent that was to bring him fame.

Laden with supplies and experimental equipment the four-man expedition trudged through snowstorms and over gaping crevices to reach the top. Several times it was threatened with a lack of oxygen because of the incredible height. Reaching the summit, Lieutenant Hackett stuck an American flag into the hard snow to signify his ascent.

Several months following the successful climb, Argentine President Juan D. Peron presented the American hero with Argentina's highest military mountain-climbing medal—the Golden Condor. He is the first foreigner to receive the award.

Family Christmas To Average $40

Here's something for the man who wears the pants in the family! Economy experts say that the average American family will spend $40 for Christmas gifts, in Well, Pop. What's your bill going to be?

A family economic bureau in Minnesota said last week, after making a blanket survey of retail sales of Christmas gifts, that each American would spend about $10.67 for his Yuletide benevolence. That being so, an average family consisting of 3.87 persons, John Q. Public's household will dole out $40.

What happens between a now and Christmas day is anybody's guess. The figures, which are based on the number of retail sales and their dollar value, could change overnight.

Streams Don't Stop New Jeep

High Army ordnance officials today inspected a new military Jeep which Willys-Overland Motors said would run in water deep enough to submerge its engine completely.

The new jeep is an improved model of the military vehicle Willys-Overland produced in quantity for the Army during World War II.

Brought here from Willys' Toledo headquarters for Army inspection at the Detroit arsenal, a pilot model of the new vehicle was put through its paces under supervision of Delmar G. Roos, Willys-Overland's first vice president.

Roos described the water-proof engine feature as its outstanding improvement. Advantages of the Jeep's performance in deep water would be for fording deep streams which heretofore would drown out a vehicle's engine.

Previous standard military Jeeps have been provided with this feature only through application of a special deep-fording conversion kit.

Gen. Macon, Army Deputy Field Head, Inspects Benning

Army Field Forces Deputy Chief Maj. Gen. Robert C. Macon has arrived at Fort Benning to make a three-day inspection of training maneuvers being staged by the Third Infantry division.

Right-hand man to Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of field forces, Gen. Macon ranks among American military leaders as one who plans and helps formulate training techniques of combat units.

Gen. Macon, who arrived at Lawson Air Force base from Fort Monroe, Va., will see Third division exercises in the Sand Hill area. All elements of the division, which will participate in Operation Portrex early next year, are engaged in tactical field problems with an "aggressive" force posing resistance for the "attacking forces."

STR Celebrates 9th Anniversary

The Student Training Regiment celebrates its Ninth anniversary today. In its nine years of existence more than 100,000 officers and men have called the regiment home at one time or another and are virtually lost in a strange country.

The purpose of the regiment is to house and take care of students attending the famous courses offered by the Infantry School. In its nine years of existence the regiment has sheltered officers and men from practically every country in the world. It processed thousands of men during the World War II who became second lieutenants. At one time during the war actress Jane Russell could be seen at a meeting here.

Today, as an example of the variety of students, there are men in the regiment from Greece, Turkey, Mexico, the Philippines, San Salvador, Pakistan, Venezuela, Great Britain, Canada, Brazil, Italy, Chile, Iran, Siam, India, Guatemala, Cuba, Norway, Denmark and Uruguay.

Going into it's 10th year as one of America's most unusual regiments, the unit looks forward to another year of uninterrupted labor putting officers and men from all parts of the world through the Infantry School.

Vets, Dependents to Get Hike In Benefits on Jan. 1 Checks

Benefit checks of almost 2,000,000 war veterans and their dependents are about to be increased, the Veterans Administration said today.

The agency said the increases in service-connected disability and death compensation, provided by the 81st Congress, will be reflected in checks issued late this month for delivery after Jan. 1.

The largest group to receive increases, the VA said, is 882,000 veterans with service-connected disabilities ranging from 10 to 100 per cent in degree.

This group includes World War I and Veterans disabled in service, and other veterans disabled in peacetime service since July 15, 1903. The rate of payment range from $13.80 to $138.00 for a month for war service and $11.04 to $110.40 for peacetime service, depending on the degree of disability.

The new rates are 8.7 per cent higher — respectively, $15 to $150 and $12 to $120 — about 53,000 widows receiving compensation because of the service-connected death of a war veteran, and who have one or more children, also will get increases. The monthly payment

VENEZUELAN ARRIVE TO STUDY AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE... The new arrivals that he will be assisted throughout their stay in both these with their problems and questions in the way of Fort Benning, where they will be housed in barracks and given the same food as the other troops at Benning. In the lower right photograph, the young driver from Colombia and prepare to set up what will be the first camp for the week, the week.

At Home Away from Home

Venezuelans Aided by Countryman

BY HARRY KING
(Bayonet Staff Writer)

In the last five weeks more than 50 Venezuelan enlisted men have come to Fort Benning to take the Infantry School's airborne course and every time they jumped there was a young Venezuelan first lieutenant who led the way.

Second Lt. Luis Calistrex Zorce, who completed the course not long ago, is assigned to Fort Benning as sergeant, advisor and father confessor to each group that comes up from his country.

His one star, signifying his rank, embarrasses him occasionally when higher ranking officers of the U. S. Army salute him, but, according to the lieutenant, that is the only drawback to his job here.

He expressed the hope that the Venezuelan army would keep sending trainees here so that he could stay indefinitely at his favorite post.

From the moment a group arrives at Muscogee airport, where he meets them, the young officer is constantly with his men. He sees that they stay out of trouble, maintains discipline, helps them out when they have problems, is the first man to jump with each class, and in one instance paid their salaries from his own pocket.

For three weeks last month mail from Venezuela was delayed. The men were in dire need of money, and there was no way to pay them. Lieutenant Zorce called frantically for funds, to pay his men, but the time required was too great without working a hardship on them. Realizing that morale would be low unless they were paid, he scraped together $300 of his own money and paid them.

Lieutenant Zorce has been in the army five years—two years in officers' school, two years in the artillery and one year on service. Discipline in the Venezuelan army is more strict than in the U. S. Army. This is indicated by the fact that single officers must be in barracks by midnight and enlisted men by 9 p.m.

It also shows, when the soldiers disembark from their plane here. The moment they spot the star on Lieutenant Zorce's shoulder they fall in immediately and snap to attention, fumbling with buttons and belts as they do so.

Under his guidance the Venezuelan soldiers have made an outstanding record for themselves as students, and he hopes to continue his record until the last group has gone through.

Since the Venezuelan army plans to put at least 180 men through the jump course, and there is a possibility of eventually a battalion being trained as airborne troops, he may be here a long while.

This would fit into Lieutenant Zorce's plans perfectly since his interest here is not entirely confined to his work. He disclosed that the language barrier has not kept him from meeting a very attractive girl from Columbus who looms large in his future plans.

Lawson Greet Santa Tuesday

Santa Claus has given up his reindeer for an airplane.

In the face of technological advancements made by the brilliant fathers of the children he loves so well, Santa wired Lawson Air Force base officials yesterday that he will arrive next Tuesday at 5 p.m. via a C-47 aircraft to visit the Lawson Field Noncommissioned Officers' club.

While Santa is there he will distribute gifts and stockings full of candy and listen to the wishes of wide-eyed children of all men.

Next Friday he will return at 2 p.m. to visit the children of members of the Officers' club, again laden with gifts and candy and a willing ear to listen to the Christmas supplications of the younger generation.

GOOD NEWS FOLLOWS A TRAIL OF EXCITEMENT AND CROCODILE TEARS
Scenes from the Third Army soldier show, "Good News," scheduled to arrive at Fort Benning, Jan. 12, are depicted above with some of the juicier bits of action. The plot of "Good News," besides music and dancing, centers around a football player, who, when he has trouble with his mathematics, falls in love with his tutor while more or less engaged to another young co-ed. Advance notices indicate that the show, which has nine Fort Benning personnel in its cast, is the most spectacular soldier show production since the wartime showing of "This Is The Army."

Fieldhouse Rigged For Indoor Sports

Plans are underway to install more than $30,000 worth of equipment in the new $600,000 fieldhouse located opposite Stilwell field, to make it the most modern structure of its kind in the Third Army area.

The largest part of the new building will be devoted to a polished hardwood basketball court, which may be converted into a double court for practice purposes. Surrounding the court, telescopic grandstands with a 2,000 seating capacity will be installed.

The building will be equipped to handle boxing matches also, with seating facilities expanded to handle 4,000 in the large amphitheater.

Mrs. Kreilick Takes Women's Kegling Honors

Mrs. Elvin A. Kreilick, high scorer in the Women's Bowling League, topped the loop's first award of the season last week when she posted an average of 184.3 to top the group.

Mrs. Kreilick, an original member of the league last fall and chairman of the league last fall and winter.

Competitors in the loop are angling for the various trophies to be awarded next April, and as a result the action is fast and furious in all three of the league's classes. The women who roll in the advanced group are the experienced members of the group, being able to maintain an average of 120 or higher, while the intermediate class maintain an average of 100 or over for the season. At present, plans do not call for the beginners to be awarded any trophies since they are expected to advance to the intermediate class through experience.

In the intermediate class the leader at present is Mrs. Carl E. Crosby who has maintained an average of 123.8 for the past month. In the beginners group, honors went to Mrs. Covington, who managed to post a 97.2 average for the month.

All three of the leaders were awarded cosmetics as prizes at the monthly get-together.

The Bowling League is now in its third year of existence and is composed of members of the Fort Benning Women's Club. Since its inception in 1948, the loop has grown to the present-day membership of 86 women.

Regular meetings are held in the Main bowling alleys on Monday evenings and Thursday afternoons, but will be discontinued on Dec. 15 until after the holiday season.

First Angler: "I caught a fish so big my friends wouldn't let me pull it aboard for fear it would sink the boat."

Second Angler: "I quite believe you. I once had a similar experience on board the Queen Mary."

The four-wall regulation handball courts occupy a large part of the new gym space. According to 1st Lt. Irving Levine, Infantry Center athletic officer, the popularity of this sport has been advancing in leaps and bounds.

In addition to these larger facilities, numerous smaller items have been ordered to make the new fieldhouse complete, including trampolines, horizontal bars, traveling rings, climbing ropes, exercise cycles, rowing machines, massage tables, scales, parallel bars and stall bars.

Boxing equipment, according to present directives, will remain in the old Main gym, as will wrestling mats and weights.

The new fieldhouse will be centrally heated by an automatic heater. Heat will have an even flow throughout the building via a series of scientifically designed hot air outlets through which the flow of heat may be regulated.

No date has been set for the official opening.

Divarty Rips Specialists; In Tie For Second Place

The Third Infantry division, the Divarty-Special Troops of artillery cagers moved into a fair which saw the artillerymen take an early lead and never the post intra-mural loop last Thursday when they owned their opponents in every period. Third Infantry division Special Troops, 46-41, in the first game came very rough with the specialists being tagged for four technical fouls, as well as 11 persons.

By winning, Divarty raised its record to two victories and one loss, to go into a tie with the 15th Infantry regiment, 30th Infantry regiment and Airborne battalion-Student Training regiment for the No. 2 spot in the Infantry Center league. The Provisional group, Area Service unit still hold down the top rung with three wins and no losses.

In the second game on the night program, the 15th Infantry regiment Dragons won the easy way as they were awarded a forfeit win over the 2nd Medical battalion, which failed to make an appearance for a scheduled game. The Infantry School detachment closed out its run roughshod over the Station hospital, quietest by a 64-30 count.

Fort Benning's football stars proved to be the whole show for Saturday night at Atlanta, but even that wasn't enough to down an inspired Jacksonville Navy team which capitalized on two breaks to win a 12-7 decision.

Two Benning stars, Halfback Charlie Hall and Guard Bob Murphy, turned in the outstanding performances on the field. Hall teamed with Doughty Bob Kopp to lead the army on its 88-yard touchdown march, and Murphy used his 210-pounds to drop navy back carriers for early losses on several occasions.

The navy team scored early in the first period when Bill Banning broke through the army line and blocked Don Hemphill's attempted punt, recovering in the end zone for a navy touchdown.

Following a punt exchange, the navy glidders again took possession on the over 41-yard line. Bill Bussing, navy ace, was dropped by Murphy and Len Cannavan for a five-yard loss and a bad pass from center moved navy back to its own 10. Cecil Rhodes, back to punt on last down, appeared trapped by the army front wall only to skirt his way end and race 35 yards for the second navy score.

Trailing 12-0 the army came back to march 88 yards and finally its lone marker midway in the third period.

Imps, Jackets Rule Bi-City; Place Eight On Grid Team

Columbus high and Jordan high, those two arch rivals of the Bi-City League, carried their feud to the annual all-league team last week with each squad coping for a place on the grid.

The team, which is picked annually by the four Bi-City coaches, also includes a central of Phenix City stars and one Baker player.

Only one player, Jordan high's Jack "Bludge" Floyd, received the votes of all four coaches, while Knox Culpepper, Columbus high's sophomore fullback, polled three votes.

While Floyd's unanimous first-team vote was more than expected because of his spirited play, Culpepper also was considered a shoe-in for a unanimous vote. The fact that Culpepper failed to poll four votes proved to be the biggest surprise in voting, since the Columbus ace had paced the city in scoring by tallying 78 points, more than twice as many as his nearest teammate, Joe Hall.

In the backfield, in addition to Culpepper and Floyd, are Jordan's Billy Clark and Columbus' Charlie McDaniel, while the flanks will be guarded by Columbus Star Joe Hall, who also made first team all-state, and Jordan's Bobby McGehee.

The tackle spots were won by Jordan's 200-pound sophomore Homer Davis and Baker's Fredie Messer, the only Lion to make the first team. Central's Bo Harris and Columbus' Henry Strickland hold down the guard spots, while the all-important pivot slot was won by Central's James Harrell.

Culpepper and Joe Hall were the only repeaters from last year's Bi-City team, while Central's Gary Little, a first stringer last season, failed to poll enough votes to repeat again this year. Little however, was out most of the season because of a foot injury that sidelined him after the third game of the campaign and allowed him to see only limited duty in the club's closing battle against Columbus.

Central high dominated the second team with four selections, while Jordan placed three men. The rest of the squad was made up of two Columbus and two Baker men.

Taking part in the voting, sponsored by the Sunday Ledger-Enquirer, were Jordan's Coach H. E. (Kid) Grant, Columbus Coach Dickie Butler, Baker's Coach Alex Truitt and Central's Coach Tommy Garrett.

Airborne Quint Scores 107-32 Win

A new Fort Benning record went into the books Tuesday night at the Main gym when a hot-shot Airborne battalion basketball team exploded for 107 points to down the Station hospital quint 107-32.

In setting the new mark the Airborne five broke their own scoring mark of 92 points, which was the previous high for the post gym. The win was the fourth of the season for the Airborne while the Medics suffered their third straight loss.

Big gun in the Trooper attack was Center Larry Brown who connected for 14 field goals and two fouls for a total of 30 points. That figure also represents a new high for the season, bettering the 27 made by Ben Simmons, of the ASU, on opening night. Vern Griffin was runner-up to Brown, in the Troopers scoring, with 14 points while Bob Phillips, Al Constance and Bob Kinard also hit double figures for the winners. Paul Martin paced the losers with 13 points.

The Airborne jumped off to an early lead and was ahead 16-0 before Martin notched a foul to break the scoring ice for the Medics. The Troopers then moved away to 27-0 before another foul by Martin gave the hospital lads their second point. From there on the Medics had all they could do to keep possession of the ball long enough to get a point as everyone of the Airborne's nine-man squad hit the scoring column.

In the first game of the evening, the 52nd Medical battalion pulled the biggest upset of the season, thus far, when it downed a highly-regarded quintet from the Third Infantry Division Special Troops. The Specialists, who last week had snapped the Airborne win streak at 8 straight, were no match for the Medics who managed to stay even for the first three periods and finally move ahead in the last quarter. The Specialists were handicapped by the fact that their unit was in the field and only five men appeared for the game. The Specialists also played at a disadvantage in the last period when Center Slim Webber fouled out of the game leaving only four teammates to stop the Medics attack. With the advantage in numbers the Medics put on a rally to grab their first decision in six tries.

Forward Roy Smith paced the ASU attack with 17 points and played an outstanding Sunday under the backboards. Bill Winger paced the losers with 15

White-Blue Glynn Suits 'Red Terror' Give-Away

Somebody misnamed the Glynn Academy "Red Terrors"—but only as far as color of uniforms is concerned.

They wear blue and white uniforms, but this year they've been the terrors of Georgia's high school gridirons and are expected to redeem themselves as the best team in Georgia when they meet Westfield high school here in the Peanut Bowl Dec. 31.

Glynn probably set a record in rolling up 55 points in its first half of the semi-final Class A game with Lanier this year. The Terrors completely demoralized the Lanier team in the first half. Coach Selby Buck gave his boys a talking-to at the half, and Lanier scored 37 points. But the '55-27 defeat was one of the worst Lanier has ever suffered.

Glynn has lost only two games in the past two seasons. Lanier defeated them last year, 12-0, and went on to win the state championship and Brown belt for the state title.

Lanier was the only club to score more than six points before the state title.

Troopers Defeat ASU; Earn Tie for Loop Lead

The Airborne battalion—Student Training Regiment—continued its drive to regain first place last Monday night when it nipped the league-leading Area Service unit by a 63-44 count.

The loss for the ASU men dropped them into a four-way tie for first place with the Airborne battalion, the Third Infantry division artillery and the 30th Infantry regiment.

In the other two games played last Monday the 30th Infantry came from behind in the last period to edge the Infantry School detachment, 46-43, and the Divvy cagers romped to an easy win over the 52nd Medical battalion by a 58-36 score.

The Airborne battalion trailed the ASU for the first three periods only to stage a fourth quarter rally and eke out a one-point decision. The big heroes in the battle for the Airborne were Vern Griffin, who broke the game open in the fourth period with two quick baskets, and Harry Brown and Terry Scott, who tallied 30 points between them.

With the Airborne trailing 28-28 going into the last period, Griffin got hot and scored on two layups within the space of a minute to put the Troopers ahead 32-28. After that the two ball clouters fought for basket, but the Troopers were able to hold on to their slight lead to chalk up win No. 3 against a lone loss. In winning the game the Troopers downed the only unbeaten team in the loop and handed the ASU its first loss as against three wins.

The 30th Infantry regiment trailed for three periods in its game with the Infantry School detachment, only to explode for 18 points in the final period to down the Profs 46-43. The big wheel in the 30th Infantry Bears' attack was Bill Cunningham who poured through 17 points, 15 of them coming in the final half. Charlie Richards again paced the ISD offensive by connecting for 18 points, most of them coming in the first half.

In addition to winning the game, the 30th Infantry also moved into a tie for first place while dropping the ISD Profs into sixth place in the league.

Wildlife Group Promised Aid

Fort Benning's Central Welfare fund has agreed to help the post Fish and Game association in its fight to keep game on the reservation by donating several thousand dollars to purchase fertilizer and food.

The first move the association has planned is the reactivation of fishing ponds and streams. This may be accomplished, according to the experts, by dumping fertilizer in small quantities into the waterways.

Work is expected to be accelerated next month, according to the planning committee. It hopes of having the strain of the winter months lessened on fish and game.

Lt. Col. Albert C. Haley, chairman of the Fish committee of the association, has stated that rapid progress is being made in the construction of dams on lakes and ponds in an effort to maintain a static water level.

A survey of hunting regulations in Georgia and Alabama revealed two added restrictions this winter: no deer hunting in Chattahoochee and no turkey hunting in Alabama.

Company C Men Boosted in Grade

Variety Of Tasks Comprise Ack-Ack Battalion's Mission

BY JOE SIMMONS
(Bayonet Staff Writer)

The Third Anti-aircraft Artillery and Automatic Weapons battalion is probably one of the most versatile outfits in the army today.

An anti-aircraft battalion doesn't just sit around in combat and wait for enemy aircraft to appear before it starts firing. It is no longer authorized a primary, secondary and tertiary mission. Under existing regulations, it is authorized to engage "any target of opportunity."

And when it turns loose its full firepower, the best thing the enemy can do is dig a hole, crawl in, and pull the dirt back in over themselves.

The battalion packs a tremendous wallop, being authorized 32 M-19s and 32 M-16s. An M-19 is a full track, M-24 tank chaser, mounted with dual .40 mm. guns, while an M-16 is a half-track vehicle, mounted with four .50 caliber machine guns.

These, the battalion's basic weapons, are supplemented by ground-mounted machine guns, bazookas and various other small arms.

The Third Triple-A was reactivated in January, 1949, at Fort Bliss, Tex., and assigned to the 35th Anti-aircraft Artillery brigade. From the time of its reactivation until it came to Fort Benning, most of its time was spent in the Texas desert, engaged in field problems, maneuvers and other exercises.

The battalion completed army field forces tests in October, scoring 91.89 percent, one of the highest scores ever attained by an anti-aircraft battalion at Fort Bliss. These tests included firing a full track, M-24 tank chaser, of operation. But it's not all work and no play for men of the Third Triple-A. While at Fort Bliss, the battalion took part in the brigade swimming meet and the volleyball tournament, and had two men on the Falcons, the baseball team that defeated the Doughboys in the GI-world-wide baseball tournament held here in the fall.

The swimming team had an outstanding performer in the person of M-Sgt. Tomas P. Apoon. Sergeant Apoon has been three Olympic swimming meets, and has won numerous medals for swimming and diving.

The Third Triple-A, which is now assigned to the Third Infantry division, inherits the history of the 534th Triple-A, which was one of the outstanding anti-aircraft battalions during World War II.

That makes the Third Triple-A practically a cousin of the Third division, because the 534th not only took amphibious training with the division during World War II, but also made the invasion of France.

Among its other honors, the 534th also lays claim to being the first anti-aircraft artillery battalion to serve in Europe during World War II, and the first to down enemy aircraft in that theater.

Third Infantry division military policemen will be relieved from all active police duty at Fort Benning until the division returns from the projected "Operation Forttex" maneuvers scheduled for February, division provost marshal officials announced this week.

Infantry Center military police began assuming duties formerly performed by division MPs early last week. This will allow for Christmas leaves, provost marshal officials said.

This will allow for Christmas leaves, provost marshal officials said. They also permit this office to train properly approximately 50 replacements recently received by the Third Military Police company.

Christmas leaves will begin next week for MPs, following a six-day bivouac. Third Infantry division units have been conducting which ends tomorrow.

Post Troops Given Praise

Demonstration troops of the Infantry School are continuing to receive praise from participants in recent joint orientation conferences held at the Infantry Center.

In a field of complimentary letters to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, recent military and civilian visitors voiced their congratulations and gratitude for the "exceptional" shows presented during their stay.

Some of the more notable comments received by General Burress mirror the showmanship and skill of the Infantry School troops displayed at the firepower and weapons demonstrations.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson said in a letter to the commanding general of Fort Benning, "I was greatly impressed with what I saw at Fort Benning during my brief visit on Nov. 4, and from those that saw the complete demonstration, I have learned that the other visits were tops in military precision and efficiency and their performance reflects great credit on your command."

Another top-ranking government dignitary at a recent show, Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington, declared, "A terrific show and one which I will long remember."

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, voiced his approval of the outstanding manner in which your officers and non-commissioned officers made their presentations of the various portions of the program.

General Burress added his personal congratulations to military participants by saying, "I should like to add my sincere appreciation for a job well done. I am entirely confident that the Infantry Center will always live up to the high standard it has attained."

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff and another visitor, reflected his impression when he said, "I need not say I was thoroughly impressed with all that I saw."

The airforce's chief of staff, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, made his gratitude evident when he said, "A swell show and congratulations."

The marine corps' top commander, Gen. Clifton B. Cates, wrote, "I was thoroughly impressed by your stay and congratulate you on the excellent show which you put on."

Third army's ranking general, Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., voiced his opinion of the show by saying, "I am quite certain that if your guests were not impressed with what they saw, something was wrong with them and not with the Fort Benning performance."

Rear Adm. Arthur C. Davis, director of the joint chiefs of staff, congratulated the Infantry School troops by writing, "I should like to say again how greatly I was impressed by every and I do mean every detail of the entire demonstration."

Menu Planning Meeting Held

The weekly meeting of the Post Menu board was held last Monday with several guest members attending.

It has been the board's practice to invite guest members once each month at which time they have full privileges in the conduct of the meeting.

The board contemplates adjusting the issue of broccoli and cauliflower to post dining halls.

It has been promoted to corporal, according to unit officials.

Section Linguists Assist Many Foreign Students

BY HARRY KING (Bayonet Staff Writer)

"Go see the Guest Liaison section," has replaced the hackneyed "Go see the chaplain" as the balm offered foreign students of the Infantry School who are plagued with troubles or worries.

With 89 students from 20 foreign countries at present attending classes at the school, the job of the guest officer is a demanding and a varied one.

Under the direct guidance of Capt. S. M. Gandia, four linguists are making constant use of their ability to speak foreign languages as well as their ability to be diplomatic.

They handle personal as well as academic problems facing the students who are sometimes many thousands of miles away from home. Family, financial and health problems are well known to Captain Gandia and his men.

From the moment the foreign student arrives at Fort Benning to take one of the famous courses offered by the Infantry School, the liaison section is active in military affairs, the small group of the liaison service guides him through the maze of anyone who doesn't understand English.

Courses at the Infantry School are so strict that no favoritism can be shown the foreign student, whether he knows English or not, without jeopardizing the value of the school.

Even written exams are administered in English, with the result that at times the foreign student is unable to assist the student in translating questions.

The men of the liaison section are not limited to academic aid to the visitors however. With the Christmas season coming up, for example, they are planning trips and arranging transportation for the students to all parts of the world.

Translating everyday conversation into a foreign language is hard enough, but the job becomes even more demanding when privates and sergeants have to help officers from foreign countries understand a question concerning logistics.

Special service officials added that an opening to troops was marked with a brief inspection of the red brick veneer building by Fort Benning officials and visiting civilian guests who participated in the building program.

Included in the inspection party were Gen. Burress, Mr. Gates, Col. Marcus Bell, Infantry Center G-4; Col. R. K. McDonough, post engineer; Col. W. K. Wilson, Jr., district engineer from Mobile, Ala.; Lt. Col. Roland E. Murphy, Infantry Center special services officer, under whose jurisdiction the new building will be placed, and A. D. Lambert, district engineer at Fort Benning.

Comparable in height to a four-story building, the field house includes an up-to-date basketball court, regulation sized swimming pool and numerous pieces of exercise equipment.

Fort Benning special services officials said today, following the acceptance ceremony, that another $50,000 in athletic equipment would be added during the next 90 days.

Contractors Finish Athletic Structure

The Infantry Center's new $500,000 fieldhouse, under construction for the past 12 months, was officially turned over to Fort Benning officials last week by the J. A. Williams Construction company.

The structure is located between the Infantry Center post office and the Post Exchange cafeteria across from Stitwell field. The site formerly was occupied by the Infantry Center guest house, which was moved to a new location across from Doughboy stadium on Vibbert avenue before construction on the fieldhouse began.

Comparable in height to a four-story building, the field house includes an up-to-date basketball court, regulation sized swimming pool and numerous pieces of exercise equipment.

Fort Benning special services officials said today, following the acceptance ceremony, that another $50,000 in athletic equipment would be added during the next 90 days.

Airforce Academy Board is Selected

Appointment of an Airforce academy Site Selection board, headed by Gen. Carl Spaatz, former airforce chief of staff, has been announced by Secretary of the Airforce W. Stuart Symington.

Members, in addition to Gen. Spaatz, are Lt. Gen. Henry R. H. Arnold, senior airforce member of the military staff, and Maj. Gen. David M. Schlatter, assistant deputy chief of staff operations for atomic energy. Lt. Col. Arthur E. Boudreau of the directorate of training, deputy chief of staff, personnel, Headquarters, U. S. airforce, is board secretary.

The board, established by authority of the secretary of defense, will study the reports of survey teams and make final inspections of certain sites considered before recommending a location for an additional service academy which may be authorized by congress. A total of 27 sites, recommending many different sites, were introduced in the last session.

All recommendations for sites must be in the hands of the Site Selection board by Dec. 31, so that the board's final recommendation may be available for action during the next session of congress.

The board estimates that approximately 9,000 acres will be necessary at the site with facilities sufficient to train 2,500 cadets under normal conditions and 5,000 cadets under expansion requirements.

Other requirements the board will consider include that the site be in the vicinity of a city with a population of approximately 250,000 or more; that adequate transportation facilities are available; that adequate sources of power and water be available; and that sewage and drainage conditions be favorable from an engineering standpoint; and that there be generally favorable climatic conditions.

Although cadets would not receive pilot training while at the academy, an airfield should be available in the vicinity for administrative and indoctrination purposes.

Consideration will be given to the possible use of land in installations owned by the government, but other requirements must be met. The survey teams have been instructed not to comment on the feasibility of sites they inspect, inasmuch as the presence of survey teams will not necessarily indicate what the final decision may be.

NEW AIRFORCE LITTER BEARER... Clam-shell doors swing open to show the engine of the new H-19 Sikorski helicopter just flight-tested successfully by the airforce at Bridgeport, Conn. Transfer of motor from behind pilot to the copter's nose gives more passenger and cargo room to the craft, which was designed for search, rescue and liaison work. The H-19 can carry eight litters and one attendant, or 10 passengers.

Chemical Outfit Ends Post Duty Awards Given

The 56th Chemical Maintenance detachment, serving at the Infantry Center for over a month on temporary duty, left this week for Fort McPherson, Ga., its home station.

While at Fort Benning, the small group processed and repaired all second, third and fourth echelon chemical equipment. This included the repair of 52 smoke generators, 50 flame throwers, 1,700 gas masks and over 1,000 miscellaneous pieces of chemical equipment.

The unit, under the command of Capt. George C. Nowers, was attached to the Infantry Center's G-4 section.

Assigned to Ninth FA
The Ninth Field Artillery battalion recently received five privates from the Third Replacement company.

The new men are Darrell A. Price, Robert L. Bond, Lawrence T. Drivers, Charles W. Shumate and Raymond T. Sullivan.

told the three armed forces have released close to 160,000 civilian employees. Department of Defense officials, ordered by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson to expedite the cutback, say that the job is on or ahead of schedule.

The layoffs are part of what the Defense department calls a "program of economies which should reduce expenditures for national defense." Government officials elaborated their statement by saying approximately $200 million would be saved during this fiscal year as a result of the cut. When in full effect, more than $500 million would be saved.

Watchdogs of the government pocketbook say the military arm of government would be held to a ceiling of $13 billion. Heretofore, and especially the past year, military forces annually were billed for more than $14 billion.

shows, are putting up Christmas trees in the dormrooms and providing for entertainment. Dining hall supervisors have all indicated they will provide decorations with the huge turkey feast on Christmas day. They added that personnel will be allowed to bring guests to dinner as on Thanksgiving.

At the Station hospital, Red Cross recreation workers have announced that each ward will have a Christmas tree. They said that the citizenry of Tallapoosa, Ga., through the cooperation of Col. George Jacobs (ret.), leader of a civic organization in that town, has given 40 cedar trees to the hospital for use during Christmas. Hospital spokesmen say that decorations will be supplied by the Infirmary Center. To be included in the entertainment for patients are night parties and games.

Division Will Return To Benning Following Amphibious Maneuver

Plans Made For Bayonet Baby Derby

The first baby derby at Benning to be held in the state will be staged with an accompanying "big" parade on Saturday, Dec. 24, at 10 a. m. The parade will be held on the main parade ground at Benning, and will feature a band, floats, and a variety of other attractions. The parade is being sponsored by the Bayonet Post, and will be held in honor of the late Sgt. James H. Hays, who was killed in action during the Battle of the Bulge.

More Details Made Known

Further details of the Third Infantry division's preparation for the forthcoming amphibious maneuver, "Operation Neptune," were revealed this week by the division commander. The division is expected to return to Benning after the maneuver, which will be held in the next few weeks. The division's commander, Brigadier General James H. Hays, said that the division is well prepared for the maneuver, and that the troops are in excellent condition. He also said that the division is looking forward to the maneuver, and that it will be a great opportunity for the troops to show their skills and abilities.

Doughboy Ardent Supplicant for 'Peace on Earth'

By PAT MURPHY, Bayonet Staff Writer

Biting cold, insufferable hunger and the overpowering fear of enemy attacks were hardly the setting for Christmas. Yet, it was Dec. 23, and hundreds of men were peering from their foxholes in Belgium—near a place called Bastogne—on that 1944 day.

The highly-paid eulogists back in the United States had been saying for weeks, "Peace on earth, good will toward men." It was sickening to GI Joe—American in a foxhole.

It was different from millions of others. Some were in the Pacific, France, or just away from home at some training post in the States. Here in Belgium, though, death was certainly to be a Christmas gift for many.

Peace on earth, Nuts, said the hungry, unshaven wretch the American people had called the world's best soldier. He was sick—there was no peace on earth.

Good will toward men. Again, Nuts. He was killing men by the hour—and his buddies were being killed, too.

Oh sure, there were plenty of Christmas trees where Joe was in Belgium. But these trees weren't being decorated with tinsel and pretty lights—they were Joe's hiding place—they were his protection from being seen by enemy eyes.

Turkey suppo? No. Not even a warm combat ration. Nothing. Just crickets, water and a cold can of beans.

A prayer for Christmas? Maybe, but not much time to pray—just worry how long it would be before your number was up.

What was this ragged soldier thinking off? It's easy to say that he was wishing home was only a few yards to the rear. If it were, he'd see a smiling, dimpled mother, a chubby father who often scolded him for missing supper and a brother who could now wear his clothes. Yes, this was Joe's thought as he waited for Christmas and the enemy.

Maybe Joe prayed that someday his efforts would mean everlasting peace and prosperity on earth. Maybe he prayed that all men would be free from oppression and fear—free to pursue their cause, beliefs and convictions.

Whatever Joe said to himself in those dark hours of loneliness, hunger, and fear, he gave the American people their greatest Christmas gift the following day. All over the world echoed the news that GI Joe had stopped and rebuffed a German counterattack on Dec. 25, 1944. It was the Battle of the Bulge.

Joe and his buddies paid a lot for that Christmas gift to his people.

To many, "Peace on earth, good will toward men," and the variants, has become a by-word during the Yule season. But to GI Joe, the infantryman, it is a sincere and avid plea. He can remember what a foxhole Christmas is like; he can tell you of his buddies to kill on Sundays; he can also tell you of his buddies who'll never see an earthly Christmas again—their eyes are closed forever beneath six feet of foreign soil. Joe fought for peace on earth—good will toward men is his only wish now.

Since Joe spent that 1944 Christmas, he's seen the world take various shapes. At first, rejoicing from one lead to the next was the order of the day. Peoples and convictions.

far and wide were without troubles—carefree and untroubled life was assured now that war was over.
But complications soon entered the picture. Strife among the nations once again began to flare up. Joe didn't picture this—it didn't make sense. Didn't the experts say this was the war to end wars?
Today, Joe is in the army, a civilian running a poultry farm or a cold figure buried beneath picturesque Belgium poppies. Whatever shape he exists in, his hopes, prayers and ideals remain the same. He wants no more war; he wants to catch up on the happiness that he lost during those years in a cold and muddy foxhole.
Traditionally, through centuries of custom and belief, Christmas is the season for merry rejoicing and sober reverence. It is the time for prayer and peace.

From the man in the Chicago penthouse to the beggar in the streets of Cairo, peace and freedom is the wish.
As 1950 approaches, millions of people the world over focus their eyes on the international planning tables of the United Nations assembly. It is these people who form our destiny.
But it is not entirely the responsibility of others to shape our fate. By prayer, perseverance and recitation of good will, world-wide peace and rest can be obtained. It is the profound duty of every person, regardless of religious, economic or social circumstances, to do his part to avert another clash of the nations.
Ask the youngster and his mother who lived through a veritable hell in a war-raged European country—they appreciate the meaning of peace. Ask the infantryman who slopped his way across countries killing a foe he never knew in peacetime. Or better, go to a Belgium grave, look down at the white cross and mound, and ask, "Tell me, Joe, what is peace?" His peace is eternal—he fought for the peace that can be fleeting to those of us who live, if we don't protect his ideals.

On Christmas Eve, regardless of your color, creed or religion, stop in your work and play, and pray for Joe who died—pray that God hasn't forsaken the dead's reverent and sincere devotion to peace for others.
Your gift for Christmas can be a prayer to God that men shall never die foolishly again—a plea for everlasting "Peace on earth, good will toward men."

Division

Third division now stationed at Fort Devens, Mass., will join the rest of the division for the maneuvers. Upon completion of the operation, the Seventh will return to Fort Devens.

Beginning in January, troops and equipment of the division will start to move to Virginia. Some sections will travel direct to Virginia by rail, others will be sent to Charleston, S. C., where they will board transports for a coastal run to Virginia.

G-2 officials stressed several points to which both enlisted men and officers should give particular attention in preparation for moving to the amphibious training area.

"There will be no room for dependents in the Little Creek, Va., training area," they stated. "Blackstone, Va., the nearest town to the training area, has a population of about 4,000 and is not prepared to take care of dependents of either officers or enlisted men except in emergency cases."
"Another point division men should remember is the mailing address for the training and maneuvers," G-2 officials stated. "Write away from Fort Devens, Mass., to the division headquarters, Third Infantry division, APO No. 3, Blackstone, Va. Those troops who are remaining at Fort Benning should continue to have their mail addressed as at present with the added notation, "rear echelon."

"This point is particularly important," headquarters officials said. "The division mail section will be under tremendous added pressure to effect proper distribution of the mail and an incorrectly addressed letter may be delayed for weeks."

Officials advised that both officers and enlisted men should pack all their equipment and training gear in their own containers. A "class A" uniform as well as complete field equipment will be necessary for the exercise. While in the Caribbean area, troops of the division will be given a one-day shore leave at a Caribbean port and a "class A" uniform will be required to take advantage of the leave.

Pass privileges will be available while in Virginia, but division men will be living under field conditions and there are no details as to working hours and "off-duty" time.
Camp Pickett, Va., recently closed by an army emergency order, is being readied to house part of the division who are scheduled for amphibious training. Other portions of the Third division will be quartered in the Newport News, Va., area.

Division special services officials announced that there would be service club facilities for use of division men in Virginia. Post exchange units, consisting mainly of naval ships

82nd Commander Addresses Group

The commanding general of a world-famous combat airborne division, in an address to his troops last week that "involved us in an endless war since 1939."
Brig. Gen. Williston B. Palmer, chief of Fort Bragg's 82nd Airborne division, addressing a group of 15th Infantry school graduates, declared, "We have been unable to untangle our lives from the extremely complicated international situation. Today's complications, even more dangerous and unpredictable than World War II shooting, can lead us straight into peace and prosperity or into another global conflict."
The 50-year-old general made frequent references to the "war-weary" American public. He said that it is the army's duty, as well as the politicians, to help Americans relax from the world's complications. He declared that eas-

This year's derby should be a hotly contested one, according to hospital officials who said there were an unusual number of women expecting babies on or around the first of the year. They said they would announce the winner as soon as possible and requested that well wishers and friends refrain from calling the hospital during that time. This causes an extra burden on their already hard working staff.

stores, will be available with stocks of necessary sundries such as toilet articles and tobacco.

Division headquarters officials warned that the coming training and maneuvers, while not under the pressure of imminent combat, would be conducted on a wartime basis.

Division troops will act as part of the defending forces. Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third will command the division, but his overall responsibility in the maneuvers has not been revealed.

The main purpose of the coming maneuver, according to General Clarkson, is to determine what problems of transporting men and equipment arise from an amphibious maneuver and how they can be solved.

Operation Fortrex will take place on the small Caribbean island of Vieques, four miles from the eastern tip of Puerto Rico. The operation will include 80,000 men from the army, navy, marines and airforce. Under the overall command of Adm. W. H. P. Blandy, the task force will be divided into two groups, an invasion element and a defense force.

Lt. Gen. J. H. Hodge, commanding general of the fifth corps, will command the invasion force, and Maj. Gen. Morris, commanding general of the Caribbean area, will lead the defenders.

Lt. Gen. L. P. Hunt, Atlantic marine fleet commander, will head an umpire group charged with evaluating the performance of participating units.

Operation Fortrex will be the first large-scale maneuver in which the Third division has taken part since its reorganization here in December, 1948.

ing talk of the situation does not necessarily mean to lose sight of our position in world politics.
"We are still an important military and social power in the world. We must remember that our influence is wide-spread and valuable."
General Palmer also told his officer-audience that individual leadership is important in clearing up complicated political situations in the world. He also stressed the value of co-ordinating the training of the various army combat arms.

"I sincerely believe," he stated, that bringing officers from the various branches together at the Infantry School would expedite our military mission."

Food Service Man Erects Crack Bivouac Dining Hall

Although Americans aren't engaged in combat, this week's Soldier-of-the-Week spent two days last week creeping through woods setting up a dining hall among foxholes on a simulated front line.

Sgt. Clarence A. Simmons, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 15th Infantry regiment, shouldered heavy responsibilities last week when he took charge of his company's dining facilities during the Third Infantry division's field exercises.

With the regular dining sergeant hospitalized, Sergeant Simmons, with the aid of only four men instead of the usual eight, took his equipment into the assigned exercise area and established dining facilities in a record time.

Since the problem during the three-day exercise was tactical, Sergeant Simmons had to use ingenuity and concealing his unit's field mess. Not only did he select the positions for the tents and vehicles he thoroughly inspected the established positions to be sure it was concealed from "enemy" eyes and bombardment.

His staff shouldered the task and successfully fed hundreds of 15th Infantry men participating in the mock combat.

Sergeant Simmons devoted all the daylight hours and many night hours to perfecting his temporary installation and helping his crew with accomplishing the job. Several times, because of the manpower shortage, he acted as cook, and dining steward for the excellently functioning dining hall.

In addition, reports from the field say his operation also included "good food."

During the field exercise, Sergeant Simmons was called upon to set up a regimental mess and help begin its operation. This, in addition to his other duties, was accomplished flawlessly.

Over a period covering the past three or four weeks, Sergeant Simmons has through outstanding devotion established a personal reputation for his dining hall that will last indefinitely in the minds of several top-ranking visitors to the post. When Britain's Field Marshal Viscount Joseph Slim visited the Infantry Center several weeks ago, a meal in Sergeant Simmons' dining hall was included on the itinerary. Field Marshal Slim, after eating the noon meal, congratulated Sergeant Simmons on the food and atmosphere.

SGT. CLARENCE SIMMONS, Soldier Of The Week

Several days later, Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, Third Infantry and Maynard R. Ashworth and W. C. Tucker, Columbus newspaper executives, inspected the 15th Infantry regiment, again, Sergeant Simmons' dining hall was included on the dignitaries' tour. As usual, Sergeant Simmons was lauded by the visitors for his outstanding preparation of the meal.

The seven-year army veteran has not only earned a reputation through his excellent dining hall services, but by his uncompromising contacts with unit personnel whose palates he must satisfy.

Sergeant Simmons is 29 years old and the father of one child. He resides in Columbus with his family.

Medical Battalion, EM Are Promoted

Five promotions were announced this week by officials of the Third Medical Battalion. Promoted to corporal were Pfc. Harley LaBarge, Joseph A. White, John L. Farley and Lawrence Deiton.

Ret. Clarence Cody was promoted to private.

Deduction Set For Quarters

Forty-five dollars will be deducted from savings of corporals with less than seven years service credits, and privates first class who have dependents occupying government quarters, it was announced this week by Third Army finance officials.

No deduction will be required, however, where the enlisted man occupies the quarters but has no dependents, it was disclosed.

Where the $45 deduction is made, there will be no charge for utilities, the officials stated.

EM Complete Night Courses

Four enlisted men of the 30th Infantry regiment received certification last week from the Armed Forces institute of their successful completion of courses taken at the night school at Fort Benning.

Hugo J. Becco, Company B, and Simon P. Kelly, Company G completed a course in fundamentals of typewriting.

Pvt. Thomas L. Nelson, Headquarters and Headquarters company, completed the official USAFI certificate of completion for the first and second courses in business law.

Also of Headquarters and Headquarters company, Pfc. Robert Thompson, of the Third group to complete the course in fundamentals of typewriting. The four men will officially receive their diplomas from Col. Joseph W. Boone, commanding officer of the 30th Infantry.

American Leader Studies Socialized Medicine

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing has gone to Britain to study the socialized medicine program first hand. He has been pushing a similar program for the U. S. Of the British setup he said, "this program is working remarkably well and . . . it is a good thing for Britain. I see now that most of the critics of our proposal in the United States have, whether deliberately or through ignorance, tried to mislead the American people on the facts of the British program" . . . Government food purchases have reached amazing heights. The U. S. now has stockpiled 220 million pounds of dried milk, 95 million pounds of butter, 22 million pounds of Cheddar cheese, 64 million pounds of dried eggs, 35 million pounds of Mexican canned meat, 172 million bushels of wheat, 83 million bushels of corn and 3,750,000 bales of cotton. . . . Only two percent of the nation's soft coal mining firms have signed with John L. Lewis' UMW. Rest of the industry is still on a three-day work week. . . . Senator Robert A. Taft (R. Ohio) finished a 100-day speaking tour of his home state. He comes up for reelection next year. Some of his points were: "The Fair Deal" . . . it would lead to totalitarianism and a labor-socialist government. "We have reached the point where taxes cannot be increased". Marshall Plan aid must stop in 1952. "Our money would be better spent on our airforce and air defenses than in building up countries that can't possibly stand against Russia". "The Brannan plan (subsidies to farmers) is a fraud on its face" Indications seem to be that the government has a better case against Alger Hiss, accused communist, this time than it did before.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—The State department is still undecided as to, whether it should recognize the Chinese communists. The British want to protect their trade interests. Some Americans who want to feel that the Chinese communists are as much saddled with the problems of making China a going concern as was Chiang Kai Shek and may break with Moscow leadership. . . . The International Confederation of Free Trade Unions had its first official meeting in London last week. It includes unions from 53 countries united to fight communism. . . . In Italy, land hungry Italians were squatting on the big baronial estates. Police are fighting and there is death, but the peasants continue to occupy the land. Their philosophy is, since we have no food anyway, we might as well die trying to grow it.

LEARN BY DOING—In Albany, N. Y., a student of a correspondence course was sued by the school for the failure to pay his tuition bill. The course was in the operation of a collection agency.

Report from Washington

Reenlistment Scoring System To Be Changed

By ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

A new uniform screening and scoring system for measuring qualification for enlistment and induction will be introduced into the recruiting services of the armed forces on January 1, 1950, to replace the three different types of tests now in use. The new system employs a percentile method of recording qualification scores. It will not change the present classification and assignment procedures used by the army, navy or airforce.

The bureau of the Budget has suggested to the Defense department that bachelor officers quartered at military installations be charged $1.50 per day or $54 per month for meals. Present charges range from $30 to $40 per month.

Among some of the complex provisions of the Career Compensation Act which have been clarified by rulings of the U. S. comptroller general is the one relating to re-enlistment bonus payments for men who re-enlisted after October 1, 1949. Regulations authorizing bonus payments to such personnel will reach the field soon. Those who re-enlisted for indefinite periods prior to October 1, 1949, must await further rulings pertaining to their particular status.

In recent selections for promotions of Army officers to captain, major, and lieutenant colonel, only 84 officers were passed over for the second time. They are subject to discharge or retirement. A total of 70 officers were passed over for the first time.

Inductees and 21-month enlistees who transferred from the army to the airforce after enlistment or induction, will be released under the same policy recently announced by the army.

Chaplain's Corner

Let's Keep the Real Meaning of Christmas

By CHAPLAIN ERNEST F. KENDLE

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld His glory, the glory as of the only Begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." (John 1:14) This little verse is the shortest Christmas story in the Gospels. It explains who the Christ is: "the only Begotten of the Father," and what His power is: the Word Power of God. Christ is the value that God places on the soul of man.

To save man from his erring, God sent into the world His only begotten Son and He took upon Himself the form of man. In this position Christ became the perfect example of eternal life. The apostle John tells us that the Word Power of God is Christ. All the power that God used in the creation of the world is Christ. God sent His Son into the world, not to create new worlds but to recreate within us a pure heart and a clean, straight-thinking mind. He is the One that opens to us eternal life. It is no wonder that the "heavenly hosts" send "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth, peace, good will toward men" and that the angel of the Lord said, "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all peoples."

The shepherds, who were watching their flocks in fields near Bethlehem, hastened to the place where the Christ Child lay and paid homage to Him. The Wise Men, following the bright star, fell down and worshipped Him. This transpired because God so loved us that He gave His only begotten Son, His Word Power, that all who believed on Him might have everlasting life. Make no mistake about it—God is giving Himself to us in Jesus Christ that we might participate in His eternal Kingdom.

In all the confusion of commercialism in the Christmas season, let us never lose sight of the real meaning of Christmas. Let each of us keep the real meaning of Christmas in his heart that it might not be overshadowed by a materialistic interpretation of the season. God gave Himself to us through Jesus Christ. Let us give ourselves to God through Jesus Christ.

Greetings from Truman

At this Christmas holiday season, I am privileged to extend to all who wear our country's uniform, my heartfelt wishes for continued happiness and good cheer.

Wherever your station or outpost; you are bringing home to peoples, among whom you serve, a genuine appreciation of your protective mission, designed to insure the preservation of democratic ideals.

Greetings from Johnson

To all of you, at home and abroad, I send Christmas Greetings. I thank you for your loyal and efficient service to our country and to the cause of peace. May the New Year bring to each of you every success and a full measure of happiness.

Greetings from Gordon Gray

In the name of the Department of the Army, I wish to express heartiest Christmas Greetings and Best Wishes for the New Year to all of the men and women, uniformed and civilian, who served their nation through the Army of the United States in this year of 1949.

The work you are performing, within the US, and at your posts throughout the world, is truly dedicated to preserving everything that Christmas means; human dignity, brotherhood and liberty.

Greetings from Gen. Collins

There is a special meaning for American soldiers in the sincere wish for peace and good will that is in every American's heart at Christmas time. For upon you, in large measure, rests our nation's hope and the hope of all free peoples, that the Christmas prayer may become a reality.

To each of you and your families, at home and overseas, I send my warmest greetings for a Very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Greetings from Gen. Burress

This is the traditional time to lay aside our normal and usual tasks and for a short period concentrate on thoughts of happiness, good will and the spirit of the Christmas season.

In addition to extending to you and to your families my best wishes for the holidays, I wish to take this opportunity to thank you all for the fine support you have given this command over the past year.

By your effective efforts to keep our country prepared for any eventuality, you can feel that you have contributed to the attainment of peace in the world which we so earnestly seek and which is the real spirit of the season.

May the Christmas season bring you happiness and the New Year be the best you have known.

Holly and ivy have been identified with Christmas from very early times.

Christmas holly is supposed to represent the master of the house.

Christmas ivy is supposed to represent the mistress of the house.

Hindus of the third and fourth century, recognized the diamond as the hardest of all substances.

PEACE ON EARTH, INTRODUCTION BY ROBERT SHERWOOD
 Harcourt House, New York, Publisher
 By D. W. SCHAEFFER

In three days Americans everywhere will celebrate the birthday of Christ as a happy one but the slogan "peace on earth," which often touches deep in the human soul, is the nearest it has been to becoming a mockery since the phrase was coined. Wars upon wars have plagued mankind, and now, after probably the most destructive war in history, men have realized that there must not be another war.

After World War I the League of Nations was established. It failed.

Now we have the United Nations. The book Peace on Earth is an account of the accomplishments and failures of the UN. The accounts are made by the leading men in the UN. Trygve Lie, Herbert V. Evatt, Ralph Bunche and Benjamin Cohen are among the writers.

The book is honest enough. There is no skirting of facts, no playing up of good points. Without going into arguments of policy and politics, a reader can absorb this book for what it is: a genuine, sincere recounting of the efforts of men, who are as subject to errors and failures as the rest of us, to solve problems which would vex the gods.

The purpose of the book, as this reader sees it, is not so much to show what the UN has accomplished, although the article on the success of UNESCO (United Nations Educational, Scientific Cultural organization) is extremely encouraging. Most of us who read newspapers and magazines giving the many sides to the story can know day by day how the UN is coming along.

The book is not of the "look-at-me-and-see-how-good-I-am" variety. By writing the articles and publishing the book, the chiefs of the UN are seeking to impress upon people the necessity for their wider, more intense interest in the functions of the UN.

The entire charter of the UN and the Declaration of Human Rights is reproduced. It makes dry reading. But at the same time, somehow, it has wonderful meaning.

They, the men who are struggling to find a way to peace, would like us, all of us, to try to understand, help, advise and in the face of nearly impossible circumstances, refuse to give up the hope, that peace is possible.

At this time in history, when the headlines are full of war between the sexes, war between labor and management, war between politicians, it should be a responsibility for all of us to understand how we are trying to prevent war between nations to give us a chance to end the constant little wars going on between individuals and groups.

In the event some might say this is human nature, let them read the book. There is no denial of human nature. It takes it into account. There are some problems for which there are no answers at present. This should be realized as much as the other.

But there are some problems that can be solved, that must be solved.

They must be solved so that not only "this nation under God" but that "all the peoples of the world, "shall have a new birth of freedom" and that "the people shall not perish from the earth."

Benning Scout News

Girl Scouts
"Come Along with Us—In Democratic Partnership" is the national slogan of all Girl Scouts for 1950, adopted at the National Girl Scouts convention held in Milwaukee, Wisc., last month. Two members of the Fort Benning Girl Scout council, Mrs. E. J. Ricker and Mrs. J. F. Blatt, attended the National Girl Scout convention in Milwaukee last November. The objectives for 1950 adopted at the convention constitute a "plan of work" in scouting for the next year. Highlights of the objectives are better girl scouting for more girls, stressing the idea of partnership between girls and adults; further development of international friendship; more and better camping; more troop participation in Juliette Low international activities; more outdoor activities in relation to troop programs, including more outdoor troop meetings, hikes and cookouts; there were 6,619 registered delegates at the convention. Sixty-five voting delegates were registered from the sixth regional district which is comprised of Georgia, Florida and North and South Carolina.

Miss Edith Conant, assistant director of the program department, speaking on "The Girl Herself," said, "The Girl Scout program must be keyed to meet the girl's needs, and the ultimate success of the program depends upon whether the girl has learned through activity in the Girl Scout program and not in spite of it." The Fort Benning Girl Scout council meeting was held Tuesday, Dec. 13, in the quarters of the local commissioner, Mrs. George Gerhart. This was her last meeting on the council. Mrs. B. G. Baetche, deputy commissioner, will take over as commissioner of the council Jan. 1. The Girl Scout international service project for 1950 is "Schoolmates Overseas" and their project slogan is "Fill a Schoolbag". The local council has adopted the slogan for scout troops at Benning.

FEC Ladies Hold Social

The monthly luncheon of the ladies of the Far East command was held in the Palm room of the Officers' club on Thursday, with Mrs. M. N. Clark and Mrs. W. C. Winston as hostesses. The table was centered with a huge brass octagonal tray engraved with birds of paradise. The tray was filled with red Christmas balls and pyrotechnics, and flanked by sprays of pyrotechnics and Christmas balls and seven-branched candelabrum at the end of the table. Each place was marked with red place cards with sprigs of pine.

Battalion Ladies Entertain at Club

The ladies of the 73rd Heavy Tank Battalion held their monthly luncheon at the Patton House on Thursday. The luncheon table was centered with a Christmas tree, flanked on each side by circles of pine needles around two sets of red place cards. The table to one side was centered with a tall glass bowl filled with variegated Christmas balls and lighted from beneath. Each guest was presented with a nicely wrapped gift. Approximately 30 ladies attended.

Woman's Group Entertains With Gala Christmas Party

One of the outstanding events of the year for the Fort Benning Women's club was the Christmas party held at the Officers' club on Monday. A galaxy of post talent contributed their services to make this an outstanding meeting. The center of attraction in the beautifully decorated club was the Christmas tree with magnolia wreaths adding their bit of colorful decorations. Mrs. Marcus D. Bell, president, opened and conducted the meeting and extended an address of welcome to those present. She spoke of the significance of the true spirit of Christmas throughout the brotherhood of man and nations and explained the Woman's club Christmas project, which is to assist the needy families on the post. Funds which would ordinarily be used for refreshments were used toward the end of the project.

A treasurer's report was made by Mrs. Joseph D. Rney and minutes of the previous general meeting were read by Mrs. John E. Reid, corresponding secretary. The program chairman, Mrs. Carl E. Frisby, introduced Captain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale who gave an inspirational talk on the "meaning of Christmas". Mrs. Allan P. Hackett was

Pan-Hellenic Group Meets

The Pan-Hellenics entertained their husbands with a Christmas buffet supper at the Officers' club on Wednesday. Mrs. George Clayton, Mrs. Choice Rucker and Mrs. John Campbell acted as hostesses for the occasion. The club was festive in its decorations with a beautiful Christmas tree sparkling with lights. The serving table was decorated in the Christmas motif with a ribbon of holly and greenery running the full length and at intervals tall red Christmas tapers were spaced. The festivities were highlighted by a visit from Santa who passed out some of the gifts, and after his visit gifts were exchanged and Christmas carols were sung.

Assigned to Infantry

Six men were recently transferred to the 30th Infantry regiment from the Third Replacement company. They were Pvt. Charles L. Blankenship, Pfc. Harren Gibson, Pfc. David H. Snyder, Pfc. Solon H. Begor, Pvt. Elmer G. Jones and Pvt. Jesse P. Hardison.

15th Infantry To Welcome Santa Claus

Santa Claus is scheduled to arrive for the 15th Infantry regiment at 3 p.m. today. He will arrive, this time, on the Dan special, a locomotive pulling four cars loaded with toys and candy for the children of officers and enlisted men of the regiment and enlisted.

The children themselves will present a pantomime entitled "Living Christmas Cards." Special music before and after the program will be played by the 15th Infantry division band. Christmas party arrangements were handled by Capt. Rufus E. Sautter and Chaplains (Capt.) Silas L. Weems and Robert P. Caris. Mrs. Daniel Moore served as chairman for the gift and candy wrapping committee, assisted by Mrs. Thomas R. Tamm, Mrs. Robert M. Blanchard, Mrs. Charles V. McLaughlin, Mrs. William J. McCaffrey and Mrs. Harold W. Soderma. Volunteers from the companies in the regiment also assisted.

Airborne Ladies' Luncheon Held in Club's Palm Room

The Palm room of the Officers' club was the scene of the monthly luncheon of the Airborne ladies on Tuesday, with Mrs. R. W. Smith, Mrs. R. W. Selton, Mrs. D. W. Yoder, Mrs. F. M. Myers, Mrs. John White, Mrs. R. W. Ryals, Mrs. Belter Adams, Mrs. E. J. Porter, Mrs. C. C. Thornblom, Mrs. C. Smith, Mrs. R. Adkins, Mrs. Robert Whiting and Mrs. L. L. Sexton.

Ladies Hold Monthly Party

A picture of Christmas beautifully welcomed the ladies of the 30th Infantry regiment at their luncheon on Tuesday at the Patton House. A blazing fire burned in the big open fire place and a beautifully decorated Christmas tree twinkled from the corner, with its holly wreaths adding their bit of color. The luncheon table was aglow with red tapers banked with pine needles and flanking a most unusual Christmas tree made from colored Christmas cards. Guests included Mrs. Roland Shugg, Mrs. Dennis M. Moore, Mrs. Robert B. Hill, Mrs. O. P. Newmann, Mrs. George Cushman and Mrs. C. L. Jackson. Following the luncheon, bridge and canasta were played.

Company I Tops In Reenlistments

Company I, 30th Infantry Regiment, has been announced the winner for November in the regimental reenlistment contest. The contest was announced early last month as part of the drive to retain as many as possible of present members of the unit due for discharge.

Selection of the company with the best reenlistment record is to be made for November, December and January by the regimental reenlistment board, headed by Maj. George C. Fogel. It was established in October to assist Capt. Paul I. Singleton, regimental recruiting officer, in insuring maximum reenlistments.

Winning companies, selected on an equitable quota basis, will receive a regimental reenlistment plaque. The company with the best reenlistment record for the three-month period will retain permanent possession of the plaque.

In addition, the winning companies of the month will be awarded $30 from the regimental fund to be used for the common benefit of all members of the company for November. Companies B, H and I and Service companies showed the best results in their battalions. The regimental reenlistment plaque will be presented later to Company I by Col. Joseph W. Boone, commanding officer of the 30th Infantry.

Capt., Mrs. Bailey Hosts At Aperitif Party at Club

Capt. and Mrs. Leonard V. Bailey entertained with an aperitif party and buffet supper at the Country club on Sunday night. The mantle piece was colorfully decorated with poinsettias banked with pine boughs and silver pine cones. The buffet serving table was overlaid with a damask cloth and centered with Santa Claus sleigh, dill cones, pulled by reindeers and flanked by red tapers in crystal holders. Poinsettias banked with silvered pine boughs and pine cones completed the decorations. Individual tables were set up and centered with red Christmas tapers in crystal holders and a dill banked with pine and silvered pine cones.

QM Chief Says Southland Vital

"If it weren't for the South, there'd be no U. S. army," observed the chief of an important army department last week. Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman, quartermaster general, inspecting activities at the Atlanta General depot, said the South is recognized today as a mainstay of the army from the quartermaster's point of view. He referred to the textiles, foodstuffs and many raw materials furnished by the South.

General Feldman said that much of the food consumed by the world-wide army is produced in southern states, adding that cotton and other textile materials also go toward the manufacture of uniforms and training equipment.

March 1950 Separations Face 2,800

An increase to 2,800 in the number of non-regular army officers to be relieved from active duty by March 31, 1950, was made known last week by Army Times.

The new figure means that 713 more non-regulars than originally had been anticipated may be forced from the army by the end of March. Although 2,137, instead of 2,500, was the original estimate for the second stage of the cutback, it had appeared as late as the end of September that normal attrition during the ensuing months might be sufficient to allow fewer than 2,137 to be compelled to leave the army.

Already 1,300 non-regular army officers have received 90-day separation notices calling for their release by Dec. 31. The separation notices were issued in November.

The decrease in non-regular officers on active duty was brought about by a Defense department directive which called for the separation voluntarily or involuntarily of 5,787 commissioned personnel by March 31, 1950. It was figured at that time that 2,400 regulars and 1,087 non-regulars would be lost through normal attrition, and, after separating 1,250 on Dec. 31, only 2,137 would be forced out on March 31.

In October, however, Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson said that the army, as well as the other services, must cut back by June 30, 1950, to the strengths for which he plans to ask appropriations for the 1950-51 fiscal year.

The officer strength curtailment problem was restudied recently, taking into consideration the effect the release of draftees and 21-month enlistees will have on the appropriation angle, and the cutback figure on officers was elevated from 5,787 to 6,500.

Aggressor Routed In Mock Warfare

The Third Infantry division returned to Fort Benning late last week after spending three days in the field under simulated combat conditions against an "aggressor" force.

Under the command of Maj. Gen. F. W. Clark, the Third Infantry division received orders to attack the "aggressor" force which had landed at Savannah, Ga., and had captured Macon. The tactical problem had all the aspects of combat.

Aircraft to locate "enemy" troop movements and blank ammunition were used by both sides. The advanced elements kept in contact with their command posts by radio.

The first day after receiving orders to attack, the 15th Infantry regiment spearheaded the advance, along with elements of the 73rd Heavy Tank battalion. The first day ended with the 15th Infantry gaining ground against stiff opposition.

On the second day the 15th Infantry ran against stronger resistance, with both sides suffering casualties toward the end of the day the "aggressor"

Bivouac Troops Sample New Type Field Rations

Troops of the Third Infantry division got their first taste of the new improved "C" type ration during last week's three-day stint of field duty.

The new type ration, which was cited by Maj. John A. Rivovich, Infantry Center food service supervisor, as the best the army has ever issued, had never been issued previously to a major Benning unit.

In inspecting the operation of bivouac, Major Rivovich and a staff of Infantry Center food service supervisors solicited comments from combat veterans on the quality of the new ration. The major said, labeled the new ration and its containers as "The Arctic and Our Security" was the subject of discussion.

The two-day talks were led by Col. Donald Fay, formerly G-3, U. S. Army, Alaska, now head of the small weapons committee Army Field Forces board No. 3. Capt. E. G. Ochs Jr., assistant Colonel Fay by showing films illustrating the points brought out and depicting the equipment. The talks included discussion of the effect of arctic weather on operation of equipment, influence of arctic time differences on army morale, preparing soldiers for arctic warfare, maintenance of troop morale, and plan of attack an enemy would use in invading Alaska. A dummy, completely equipped, with uniform and equipment for duty in the cold regions, was displayed to add effectiveness to the discussion.

The program was sponsored by the Third Infantry division for in formation and education of officers.

Army Relief Plan Outlined

Editor's Note: The following article, written with the cooperation of Capt. Hazel Ver Hey, Infantry Center Army Emergency Relief officer, explains the operation and purposes of the Army Emergency Relief office. The Fort Benning office of this organization has been faced in the last few months with numerous applications for aid that do not fall under the jurisdiction or provisions of the unit's charter. This, therefore, is intended to define and describe AER's duty.

When those rainy days appear and you haven't got that little "nestegg" to meet the situation, the most natural thing to do is turn to Army Emergency Relief.

Indeed, AER is a friend of every serviceman, second only to the sympathetic chaplain in receiving tales of woe—mostly financial.

The conception by most persons of how AER operates would be similar to what a well-digger knows of nuclear physics. Distorted definitions of AER range from the misinformed "it's-a-loan-agency" variety to the more ridiculous "before-you-get-a-loan" version.

What, then, is AER? On paper, AER is an organization of the army, by the army and for the army that gives emergency financial assistance to soldiers and their dependents when such assistance is not furnished by the Red Cross.

AER, established Feb. 5, 1942, under the laws of the District of Columbia, is one of three organizations operating on a national scale to assist development and the dependents with financial difficulties. Red Cross and Army Relief Society, an organization affiliated with AER that aids army widows and orphans, are the other two groups.

Considered an integral factor of successful military administration, AER's funds are derived solely from contributions. It is apparent, on this premise alone, 100 percent of all funds in Army Emergency Relief are available to military personnel who require financial assistance. Operating funds are derived from interest in reserve.

Eligibility for AER assistance falls into a simple explanation: circumstances must be of an emergency nature. Military personnel or their dependents may obtain this aid when, for instance, they are faced with a sudden emergency which is unforeseen, urgent and requires prompt attention. Excellent examples of this are traveling expenses in the event of death or serious illness, funeral expenses, hospital bills, non-receipt of pay or family allowances or loss of funds, to relieve privation of dependents or any other emergency that will cause undue hardship.

So many times, however, AER has been faced with individual cases that do not constitute an emergency. For instance, a soldier who loses his money gambling and is unable to pay rent and grocery bills isn't considered an eligible applicant. Luxury applications, such as a soldier who hasn't enough funds to make a personal trip home, are definitely not classed for consideration.

At the Infantry Center, Captain Hazel Ver Hey, Infantry Center Army Emergency Relief officer, declared that an average loan this year would be about $50. Such loans usually go for doctor's bills, emergency funeral expenses, etc. Captain Ver Hey is authorized, by regulations of AER, to make loans of a certain limit. If loan requests go over the set amount, applications must be referred to Washington for clearance, she said.

Captain Ver Hey was hasty to point out that loans will not be made as supplements to regular government payments to meet general maintenance needs, nor will they be used to further divorcees or to relieve business obligations.

In pointing out AER's function, Captain Ver Hey made it clear that applicants are advised to see their unit commanders before coming to AER. She said that some cases—those ineligible for consideration—may be resolved before they reach AER. In the event a unit commander feels the applicant has a necessary case, he is referred to the Red Cross where first steps are made to ameliorate the situation. Red Cross, in turn, refers the individual case to AER if Red Cross funds aren't available. The American Red Cross and AER work closely to avoid duplication of effort.

After loans are made, recipients have two general methods of meeting their obligation, which is interest-free. First, they can make out Class E allotments to AER which will be deducted from monthly pay at a rate convenient to the individual. Second, monthly cash payments may be made to meet terms of the loan. AER is annually disbursing $600,000 to military personnel and their dependents to meet emergency situations. In 1948 alone, not considered a peak year, there were more than 8,500 individual loan cases granted relief.

In the annual nation-wide Community Chest drive AER is included in the disbursement of collected funds. However, AER officials point out that direct contributions to the relief fund throughout the year are desirable and helpful.

Roster Established For Career Fields

A breakdown into 31 career fields of services and combat arms has been made public by Department of the Army officials who predicted that regulations covering the last of the fields would be submitted to the printer by Aug. 31, 1950.

Seven fields already have gone through transport, automotive maintenance, quartermaster maintenance, army aircraft maintenance, other jobs in military engineering and construction, electronics, armament and fire control maintenance, band, scientific services, communications intelligence, military intelligence, railway, information, chemical warfare, photography, engineer equipment maintenance supply and marine operations.

The precedence list, Administration division spokesman stressed, is based upon the present state of progress of many tasks to putting each field under the career plan.

Accelerations or delays in plans, it was pointed out, will not prejudice putting the fields as listed on the precedence roster into effect as rapidly as possible.

Already under the career plan are the food service, infantry, artillery and the armored cavalry fields, as well as the combat construction ladder of engineering and construction. Disciplines now are in the hands of the printers outlining the details of the finance and machine accounting branch.

Scheduled to enter the process of publication during February and March are directives concerning the military police, ammunition, medical, communications and personnel and administration fields.

Although no date has been pinpointed for the submission of a directive to the printer, the inception of the other four ladders of the military construction career field will follow the personnel and administration branch. The categories are bridge construction, fire fighting, camouflage and construction and utilities.

Following in order on the precedence roster are motor vehicle maintenance, food service, supply and quartermaster maintenance.

TRANSFORMATION FIELDS: motor transport, railway and maintenance.

ADJUTANT GENERAL FIELDS: personnel and administration, machine accounting and band.

SIGNAL FIELDS: communications, wire maintenance, electronics and photography.

ENGINEER FIELDS: engineering and construction, engineer equipment maintenance and mapping and reproduction.

ORDNANCE FIELDS: automotive maintenance, ammunition and armament and fire control maintenance.

'Service Numbers' Adopted by Army
The term "serial number" has been discontinued by the army in favor of "service numbers". The navy has used the designation "service number" for many years and recently the air force adopted the same term. Also eliminated from use are the abbreviations NMI (no middle initials) and IO (initials only) to indicate lack of or use of initials.

T.I.C. TALKS

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: Do you like your job and do you think you are working at one suited to your capabilities? Also, do you think the Army has the best of the career field than the outside.

PVT. WYNELLE SHOCKLEY, Central Examining and Computing agency, enjoy my work much. It is the only kind of work I know how to do. In my opinion, you get more advantages in the Army than you on the outside. For one thing you get 30 days leave and if you get sick you are taken care of. I don't believe a civilian concern would do this.

PVT. HAZEL E. EWING, Central Examining and Computing agency, enjoy my work but I don't believe it is suited to my capabilities. I have had five years of school and two years of experience as a draftsman, and now I'm working as a clerk-typer. I believe the Army does offer more because it gives you training and schooling, and it teaches you to take care of yourself. Above all, you have to learn to get along with other people.

COMBAT FIELDS: Infantry, artillery and armor.

INTELLIGENCE FIELDS: communications and security and military intelligence.

MEDICAL FIELDS: medical and scientific services.

FINANCE FIELDS: finance.

CHEMICAL WARFARE FIELDS: chemical warfare.

INFORMATION FIELDS: military police.

QUARTERMASTER FIELDS: food service, supply and quartermaster maintenance.

TRANSPORTATION FIELDS: motor transport, railway and maintenance.

ADJUTANT GENERAL FIELDS: personnel and administration, machine accounting and band.

SIGNAL FIELDS: communications, wire maintenance, electronics and photography.

ENGINEER FIELDS: engineering and construction, engineer equipment maintenance and mapping and reproduction.

ORDNANCE FIELDS: automotive maintenance, ammunition and armament and fire control maintenance.

PHILLIPS FOLK
PVT. ALTHEA AHLQUIST, Classification and Assignment section, was trained for a clerk-typer job, and I think it is suited to my capabilities. I definitely think the Army has more to offer than civilian life because you have a chance to travel around. You get a chance to get more training in a specialized job, and you have the security you don't have in a civilian job.

PVT. EDWARD A. McFORD, Information and Education section, like my job, and am going to get more training soon as I am slated to attend the educational training school. Like my boss, I'd like to work for. I believe for girls who want a definite planned career, the army is the best because it offers you security, gives you an opportunity for more schooling which prepares you better for the years to come, and you get a view of the scientific world by understanding people from all walks of life.

In the early centuries of the Christian era it was estimated that the Spanish peninsula had a population of about 40,000,000 people which declined to 20,000,000 at the time of the discovery

HOUSING LANDMARKS OF 1949 . . . In no single year since the war has more been done to house properly Fort Benning personnel than was accomplished in 1949. Steadily disappearing from the picture is the dilapidated dwelling in the center photo, which is giving way to the housing campaign sparked by Maj. Gen. Wilbert S. Burress, Infantry Center commander, shown in the center left photo.

BENNING SPORTS

SPOTLIGHT

by Jim Cloonan

It has come to our attention during the past weeks, through the medium of our telephone, that there are several athletes on the post who are inactive during their time spent here because there are no facilities to help them pursue their favorite pastime.

The sport that these men want incorporated into the Fort Benning athletic setup is wrestling. Several of these men have had college or professional wrestling experience and they would like to continue the sport while in the service. The Special Services section is the organization that would have to approve such a move and at the present time is not in a position to do so.

Before special services can act, it must know if enough men on post want wrestling and that means not only from a participation standpoint. The athletic department must know how many men will respond to a call for wrestlers and how many other men would be interested in seeing a weekly wrestling show and possibly bringing their families or guests along.

One of the major problems connected with the sport has already been solved by Frank Pryor, a former well known collegiate and professional wrestler, who has generously volunteered to donate his time to teaching the more advanced growers while also teaching newcomers the tricks of the trade. The only thing that still needs to be done to set the ball in motion is to have the men on the post let us know if they want the mat game. If you are interested in seeing wrestling added to the sports program here call either the athletic officer at 2358 or The Bayonet's sports department at 3535. If enough men desire the sport, then possibly a wrestling program can be arranged to fill the empty Friday night dates at the gym during March and April.

Now that the basketball season has passed the two-week mark and the race has begun to take form we feel that it's time to throw a few orchids to the competent officials the athletic office has been fortunate enough to secure. All these men are well known throughout the post and have established a reputation for being of the highest integrity as well as being the most efficient men possible. Many of these men have had amateur and professional experience in officiating before and during their army careers in addition to service sports.

Heading the list of top-notch officials is John Lockamy, sergeant-major of the 15th Infantry regiment. John is a well known sports figure on the post and is considered by players, coaches, fellow officials and fans alike as the best at Benning. Although he is assigned to the 15th Infantry, John has never once shown even the slightest favoritism to any club, least of all his own unit.

Since we have been connected with sports at Benning we have seen several coaches use Lockamy's army assignment to try and goad the big blond fellow into miscalling a play. Despite these unfair tactics, Lockamy has thus far been able to show everyone that as long as he is the official he is complete master and that is the way it should be.

True, there may be times when John or any other official on the post will call a play wrong, but that is to be expected. If the officials here on post didn't miss a call once in awhile, they would not be working games here. Instead they would be pulling down top money at the Boston Garden, Madison Square Garden or some other big arena throughout the country. Let's all remember that these men are calling the games to the best of their ability, and all have a vast amount of knowledge and experience in the sport they are officiating.

Bayonet Seeks Sports Writer

The Bayonet is looking for a soldier-writer to fill a vacancy in its sports department and interested personnel are asked to contact the public information office either in person or by phone. Persons desiring to apply should first secure permission of their unit's commanding officer. All applicants should have a thorough knowledge of sports and some writing ability is desired.

GLENN RAETHER Signs With Cardinals

Former Dough In Card Chain

Glenn Raether, former Dough In Card Chain star, will return to Georgia in early February to begin training with the St. Louis farm system for a position in organized baseball.

Raether, who last season led the intra-mural league in batting, signed with the Cardinal farm system in Columbus while still at Lawson field and was assigned to the St. Louis entry in the Pioneer league at Pocatello, Ida. He will join the team at Albany, Ga., in early February and accompany the club north on its exhibition circuit.

While at Fort Benning, Raether proved the star of a weak Lawson field nine and posted a .450 batting average in 18 games to win the loop hitting crown. In addition to hitting, Raether also toed the rubber in several games to provide the weak Flyers with some offense. The most important one being a win over the first-division Infantry Flyers in early October, when Glenn guided two homers to insure his team's victory.

Glenn was discharged from the airforce in early October and returned to his home town of West Allis, Wis., where he will play semi-pro basketball until he leaves for Albany.

Harvard Booters Good
Harvard university can boast of having two football players who kicked five field-goals in one game. Bernie Trafford was the first to accomplish this feat (1890), then Charlie Brickley did it in 1913.

ASU Takes Loop Lead After Win

A new post record in court scoring was set last Monday night as a rampaging 15th Infantry regiment Dragon team walloped the Infantry School detachment, 116-40.

The high mark previous to this avalanche of points was set by the Airborne team a little over a week ago when they smeared the Station hospital, 107-24.

In the second game of the evening the Area Service unit moved into sole possession of first place by romping over the 52nd Medical battalion, 61-15. The division artillery quintet took the opening game of the night downing the Station hospital five, 67-24.

High scorer for the 15th was Forward Hugh Bertrand, who dropped in 15 field goals and two foul shots for a total of 28 points. The outcome of the game began to be apparent as early as the end of the first stanza, which came to a close with the Dragons ahead 23-4. During the remaining periods they continued to pad the score, ending the night with 55 to the ISD team's 18. Entering the fourth period, score showed a decisive margin of points - 31 - 9.

Leading the ISD rafties into the territory was usually the job of Bob Fontow, who, though a guard, managed the honor of high scorer for the losing team with 11 points and five foul shots or a tally of 17 points.

Showing throughout the contest the winning form and ability that put them at the top of division basketball competition, the 15th executed a brilliant series of down-court plays which featured the easy set shots of Bertrand and the follow-up play of Forward Wilmoth Baker, who scored 20 points to become second high man for the Dragons.

Keeping the scores of the ISD five down to a minimum were a formidable assortment of 15th Infantry guards, including mainly W. J. Marinaccio, formerly an all-state hooper in New Jersey. In addition to Marinaccio's work around the home net, Guard Chuck Hoskett and Center Desco Wininger helped clear the defensive zone of prospective field goal shooters.

Winning last Monday's game put the Dragons in third place in Infantry Center play, with a record of five wins and two losses.

In the first game of the evening, division artillery rolled over the Station hospital, 67-24, as Cherokee Smith, ace center for the Divarty group, dropped in a nine field goals and a foul for a total of 19 points.

Building a series of pass plays around the tossing ability of Smith, Forwards Bill Hayes and Tom Kelly succeeded in guiding the leather into the lanky center's hands frequently enough to provide the Divarty team with a decisive edge over their opponents.

Airborne Five Ties for Lead

The Airborne Battalion quintet moved into a tie for first place in the Fort Benning intra-mural basketball league last night by edging the 15th Infantry, 47 to 45, at the main post gym.

The six soldiers zoomed to a six-point lead after one quarter and increased their lead to 32-22 at the half. The 15th's second half spurt fell two points short however.

Big Larry Brown, Airborne center, led the way in the scoring column with 15 points and the way for the 15th Infantry five.

The Division Artillery squad triumphed over the 30th Infantry and the Special Troops topped the Station hospital, 49-35.

Bowl Teams Drill For Peanut Clash

With the fourth annual Peanut Bowl football classic a little over a week away, the two contestants, Glynn Academy of Brunswick, Ga., and Westfield High of Westfield, Mass., are grooming their squads in last-minute home field drills before entraining for Fort Benning, where they will reside until game time on Dec. 31.

While the Georgia entry ran into trouble in the state championship finals against Brown of Atlanta, the Red Terrors of Glynn are a respected football machine that had swept aside all opposition until the Brown.

Many sports editors in the circuit feel that Glynn may have been overloading Brown while pointing for the Peanut Bowl.

Bowlitis has been known to affect many teams, including those in college ranks, and it is a known fact that Glynn Academy had its heart set on playing in the Peanut Bowl. And in this day of once-defeated teams playing in bowls, who can say the Red Terrors are not the fighting eleven for the big class?

Westfield will bring a big squad here this year. Twenty-six players were with the outfit that defeated Fitzgerald, Ga., high school in the Peanut Bowl last Jan. 1.

The Westfield Bombers have completed an undefeated and untied season, their first in the history of the school. They won nine straight games and rolled up 241 points to 56 for their opponents.

Information obtained from Westfield is to the effect that the Bombers were tested only twice in their nine-game victory march this season and that both these games came only five days apart. They beat Holyoke, 19-13, and five days later, on Thanksgiving Day, turned back Catholic, 15-0.

Coach Bill Moge is a fine teacher of the T-formation and his men who show plenty of speed in their wide-open attack.

Moge has guided the Bombers to three straight section championships since he took over at Westfield in the fall of 1943 and is rumored as currently in demand in New England college ranks.

Here's Westfield's 1949 season record: Westfield 32, Agawam, Ohio; Westfield 19, Providence Central 13; Westfield 46, West Springfield 12; Westfield 26, Chillicothe Ohio; Westfield 21, Tufts River Falls 8; Westfield 26, Springfield Tech; Westfield 30, Greenfield Ohio 0; Westfield 19, Holyoke 13; Westfield 13, Catholic 6.

Fort Benning is again preparing to play host to the two teams. They are expected to arrive shortly after Christmas. They will be quartered in the Student Training regiment area, and will eat at the famed Bigler-ville mess.

ASU Continues March To Post Boxing Crown

The Provisional group, Area Service unit, continued to dominate the post boxing circuit last weekend by winning all eight of the bouts it entered. The wins raised the unit's season point total to 650, exactly 50 points more than their nearest competitor, the 15th Infantry regiment.

The 15th Infantry moved into second place by winning three bouts during the evening and amassing 10 points on forfeits. The Dragons now have a firm hold on the No. 2 spot with 145 points.

Possibly the outstanding bouts of the evening were fought in Class III, at three challenge matches entered the ring. In the first, William Jones of ASU, at 132 pounds, defeated his challenger, Jerry Reddick, 126 pounds, of ISD in a three-round unanimous decision.

Also retaining his edge, Jasper Stroman of the 15th Infantry took on Bill Hillman of Divarty in one of the outstanding bouts of the evening. Hillman, 128 1/2-lb. Class V underdog, succeeded in staying with Stroman, 129, for the three rounds, but lost the match on a unanimous decision.

Billy Fitzpatrick of ASU succeeded in defeating the third challenger of the evening, George Reid of the 15th, in another brilliant match. A newcomer in the ring, Fritz Tricker of Class III, rained down to a minimum for the entire three rounds, as time after time he got up from the floor after a knock-down to land a heavy punch on his opponent.

Army Issues Regulations On Uniforms

Third army headquarters distributed regulations this week governing the wearing of the winter uniform by personnel while off post.

The prescribed dress, which applies to personnel other than those performing an assigned duty, on maneuvers or going to and from place of residence and place of duty, is to be effective until Dec. 8, 1950.

For officers and warrant officers, the cap will be the service brown belt or fur, or service cap. For enlisted men, the shades other than brown. Either the cotton broadcloth or poplin shirt may be worn. The wool coat, shade 51, or wool jacket, shade 51, will be worn.

For officers and warrant officers, the cap will be the service brown belt or fur, or service cap. For enlisted men, the shades other than brown. Either the cotton broadcloth or poplin shirt may be worn. The wool coat, shade 51, or wool jacket, shade 51, will be worn.

The directive pointed out that the dress uniforms will continue to be authorized, although not required, for wear. Civilian clothes, in lieu of the uniform, remain optional.

Service caps (those with the sun visor) will continue to be worn, the order declared, although the garrison cap (overseas cap) may be worn when circumstances do not permit other types.

The field jacket will not be worn with the service or service dress uniform off-duty or on post.

FROM ST. AUGUSTINE—A MEMORY... Little Judy Walking, daughter of the owners of Ocean Pier in St. Augustine, Fla., named mascot of the 73rd Heavy Tank battalion when some of its members took advantage of the Third Infantry division's rest camp last summer. The card above sends her Christmas greetings and her hope that they will return.

Personalized Christmas Card Sent by 'Tankers' 'Sweetheart'

Last summer members of the 73rd Heavy Tank battalion division were to be seen lying on the beaches of St. Augustine, Fla.

A little more than two months from now some of the same men will be on the beaches of the Caribbean island pursuing their occupation, training for America's defense.

It was last summer that the Red Cross Staff Extends Greetings

Personnel connected with the operation of Fort Benning's Red Cross facilities this week extended season's greetings to Infantry Center and Third Infantry division units.

In Class IV bouts, Waymon Bailey of ASU started in one of the flashiest knockouts of the season as he put Ocie Hamilton of Divarty away in exactly 33 seconds of the first round. Fighting in the lightweight division, the two were exactly matched in weight at 174 pounds.

Other Class I matches saw Lee Baker of ASU receive a split decision nod over James Young of the 15th Infantry in the lightweight division; Joseph Fride of ASU gain a TKO over John Taylor of Divarty in the lightweight division; and William Peoples of ASU receive a technical knockout ruling over Charles Winches of Divarty in the heavy weight division.

Class V saw Rudy Rozzo of the Airborne battalion, James Boyd of ASU, Howard Kende of the 15th Infantry and Abe Lewis of the 15th Infantry in the featherweight column against Edward Duke of ISD, Manuel Solo of Divarty, Charles Holland of Divarty and Moses McDonald of Divarty.

Class V saw Rudy Rozzo of the Airborne battalion, James Boyd of ASU, Howard Kende of the 15th Infantry and Abe Lewis of the 15th Infantry in the featherweight column against Edward Duke of ISD, Manuel Solo of Divarty, Charles Holland of Divarty and Moses McDonald of Divarty.

Proper Leaders Prevent Delinquency—Gen. Chase

Third army's chief of staff, Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, took time out from official duties yesterday to tell more than 150 graduates of the Infantry School that "delinquency in any Army can be prevented by proper leadership."

Speaking before the graduating class of the Associate Basic course, General Chase, who is stationed at Fort McPherson, Ga., declared, "Your men are proud when they are well kept and trained."

"Take an interest in their military and personal well-being and you'll command a tip-top unit," he added.

"You men," he continued, "have been taught, classroom subjects that were learned on the World War II battlefield laboratory. Here at the Infantry School, which has maintained the same high standards since I attended many years ago, you have been taught how to fight wars. You also have been taught an equally important phase of military command—leadership. Leadership, for all essential purposes, is commanding a and leading men who respect you. Your interest in that command makes you a good leader. Get close to your men. Your job doesn't end late in the afternoon—it often requires you to visit your men during their off-time hours. Go to their barracks and see if they are comfortable. Eat with them at early breakfasts—see if the food is properly prepared. Check their clothing to insure against cold. And, by all means, know your men by their first names."

Speaking determinately, General Chase added:

"Proper respect for the individual will certainly pay off when the chips are down. You who command small units, should know your unit better than anyone else. Make sure you take advantage of that knowledge and train your troops well. We have the best soldiers in the world—they'll follow you to hell if you gain their respect."

Brig. Gen. J. Sladen Bradley, Infantry School assistant commandant also attended the graduation.

DECK THE HALL WITH HOLLY.—Some say it isn't so, but here's the proof. The Heavy maintenance company of the 378th Ordnance battalion will feast in these surroundings for the next few weeks, thanks to Sgt. 1st cl. Harding B. Givens, dining steward for the unit. Sergeant Givens, with little help and only $15 from the company fund, outfitted the dining hall to look like the intimate living room of a honeymoon bungalow. The fireplace, complete with logs and stockings for St. Nick, was built from scrap lumber and tar paper colored to look like brick veneer. The tree has lights, tinfoil and gaily colored gifts around the base. Here Sergeant Givens, who recently took the Soldier of the Week title for his industrious improvement of the same dining hall, ties a small gift on the nine-foot tree.

FROM WATCHES TO TANKS.—Members of the 328th Ordnance battalion repair everything from watches to tanks to heavy artillery pieces. In the left hand picture Pvt. C. G. Hilbert and Cpl. Eugene L. Perry put the finishing touches on a heavy artillery piece. At right Pvt. Norman File and Pfc. Bob Morgan lower one of the tremendous tank engines they have just repaired back into the hood. What was a useless weapon a short time before will roll back to its unit as good as new as a result of their efforts.

Three men recently reenlisted for an indefinite period with the Ninth Field Artillery Battalion. Assigned to Battery B were Sgt. 1st cl. Norman L. Gleason and Sgt. Maxwell D. Lisenby.

Ordnance Battalion's Chores Include Everything From Tanks To Watches

BY HARRY KING
(Bayonet Staff Writer)

If you have a wristwatch or a tank to be repaired there's one place that will take care of you—provided it's government property, of course.

The 328th Ordnance battalion is daily repairing everything from binoculars to trucks and from machine guns to horse trailers. It's the job of this unit to keep army equipment in top-notch condition, and they do it whether it is in the field or in their permanent shops on the post.

The largest part of their task is in the repair and upkeep of the various types of army vehicles. It is far simpler to keep an automobile in repair when it is driven under ideal conditions along paved highways than to meet the standards of expediency set down by the army for vehicles that are training for war and are constantly being pushed to their utmost.

Each piece of equipment that comes to the battalion for repair immediately receives a number. It is thoroughly checked by expert mechanical diagnosticians, who can find whether the trouble is that the vehicle merely needs gas or requires a new engine. When all repairs necessary to put the vehicle in top running order are figured out, the vehicle is tagged and an explanation is written of what needs to be done.

Any one of many various shops may receive the equipment, depending on the deficiency. When the vehicle arrives at its treatment station, it is attacked from all sides by men with monkey wrenches, hammers, screw drivers and other paraphernalia known only to the expert mechanic.

In the twinkle of an eye the engine is out from under the hood and on the floor where it can be worked on more efficiently. Every connection has been loosened and the motor has been extracted with all the apparent ease of a soldier coming to right shoulder arms.

Each item on the repair sheet is checked and put into condition before the motor is ready to go back under the hood. An inspecting officer or noncommissioned officer goes over the repairs with a fine tooth comb before the official stamp of approval is put on the job.

Putting the engine back is done just as efficiently as taking it out, except a little more time is required. A maze of wires and connections must be reset and the task looks like an insoluble crossword puzzle to the uninitiated. To the expert mechanics of the battalion, however, it is apparently extremely simple. In no time at all the vehicle is purring along the road on its way back to its unit.

The job of keeping the guns firing and other paraphernalia known only to the expert mechanic. They must work fast under the most adverse conditions. In order to accomplish this they must practice in time of peace. Today at Fort Benning the 328th Ordnance battalion, scattered from Sand Hill to Harmony church, is diligently practicing every day by actually doing their job, whether it is in the shop or in the field.

Repair of everything from the largest artillery pieces to the smallest wristwatch is done in the same efficient manner. When the troops and their equipment move into the field, the battalion is right there, ready to fix the wounded weapon or keep it carries along everything necessary to effect the most complicated repairs. The mobile units which follow closely behind advancing troops contain jacks, all varieties of tools and repair parts for every type equipment conceivable. It has cranes capable of taking out the monstrous tank engines and threading equipment capable of handling the most minute and delicate screws.

In time of war every weapon is counted on to deliver its ratio of the firepower necessary for advance against the enemy, and a soldier without his weapon in good working condition might as well be behind the lines relaxing. To the ordnance battalion falls

Food Chief Asks Return of Cases

All Infantry Center dining hall officers and stewards have been asked to cooperate in the return of empty milk cases to the pick-up trucks by Maj. John A. Rilovich, Infantry Center food service supervisor.

Major Rilovich disclosed that in many cases the return of milk cases containing empty bottles has been improperly handled with the result that complaints have been received by him from civilian contractors who supply the post with high grade milk.

MERRY CHRISTMAS, INFANTRY SCHOOL—The Infantry school received Christmas greetings from all four corners of the world and from all ranks, as evidenced by the display above which has been posted on the bulletin board. A Brazilian sergeant, once here for airborne training, sent his best wishes, as did the chief of staff of the Pakistan army. Cards were received from practically every army unit whether stationed here or abroad. The British counterpart of the Infantry School, the School of Infantry in Warminster, England, also sent its best wishes. In addition to these there were greetings from officers and men once stationed here and from foreign dignitaries who at one time visited this famous army post.

Fieldhouse Named In Honor Of Ex-Benning Commander

The new Fieldhouse, recently died last summer, completed at a cost of over $600,000, has been named the General Wells Fieldhouse in honor of Maj. Gen. Brian H. Wells, 1926, until March, 1926, the post ex-Fort Benning commander who honors a man who devoted much of his time and energy to beautifying Fort Benning and construction of athletic structures which are landmarks.

It was General Wells who was mainly responsible for the erection of Doughboy stadium and Gowdy field. During his tour here work was initiated on the old theater and the handball courts on Ingersoll avenue. The new Fieldhouse, located on Hall street between Vibbert avenue and Wold avenue, will be the most modern of its kind in the Third army area, according to construction officials. It will contain a basketball court floored with polished hardwood and a swimming pool 25 feet by 75 feet.

Surrounding the basketball court will be telescopic grandstands capable of seating 2,000 spectators. Boxing matches can also be staged in the large amphitheater and seating facilities there may be expanded to accommodate nearly 4,000 people. When fully equipped the building will include three separate locker rooms, two four wall handball courts, trampolines, horizontal bars, traveling rings, exercise tables, parallel bars, stall bars, wrestling mats and complete boxing equipment. The building was officially turned over to Infantry Center officials two weeks ago and will be open to Fort Benning personnel as soon as the athletic equipment has been installed. According to the special services athletic officer, this should take place in approximately two months.

Course Conducted In Military Justice

A course in the administration of military justice was conducted this week for officers and enlisted personnel of the 30th Infantry Regiment.

Purpose of the course was to afford members of the regiment an understanding of fundamental principles and procedures of military justice and to insure availability of qualified military personnel to serve as members of courts-martial. Maj. Horace E. Donaho was chief instructor.

Atomic War Viewed As Bid to Destruction

WASHINGTON (APFS)—A third world war would last for ten years, and the destruction attending use of atomic bombs would be so terrific there would be no winner of the conflict, Dr. Harold C. Urey noted atomic scientist, said here recently.

Dr. Urey spoke in support of a proposal to enlarge the North Atlantic pact to permit political union of the members on the theory that such a union would help to prevent war.

Fort Benning will usher in the New Year with a variety of entertainment at the various clubs on the post.

Bill Crasick and his orchestra will make their first appearance on the post when they play for the gala New Year's celebration at the Third Infantry division NCO club. Betty McHugh, professionally known as the Broadway Hillbilly girl, will be the featured attraction with the orchestra. Admission is $1.50 per person. Members and guests may buy tickets at the club or make reservations by calling Sgt. Glenn Garrison.

Blitz 12 NCO club will greet the new year with a dance and buffet supper. The dance will begin at 10 p. m. and the buffet will be served at midnight. Music will be furnished by the Georganians.

The Airborne NCO club is planning a dance for the members.

Lawson airforce base will celebrate at the base NCO club to the music of the Southern Cavaliers. The dance will start at 9 p. m.

The regular Pine Lodge orchestra will furnish the music when members of the Pine Lodge NCO club gather to celebrate the New Year. The dance will begin at 9 p. m. and last until 1 a. m.

The Fort Benning NCO club will have a routine membership picnic at the base on New Year's Eve celebration.

Main Library Sets Recorded Concert
A recorded all-classical concert is scheduled for the Main library next Tuesday night at 8 p. m.

The program will include Robert Schumann's Concerto in A Minor, Anton Rubenstein, pianist, featured soloist with the RCA Symphony Orchestra, William Steinberg conducting; and two compositions by Ludwig van Beethoven, played by the C Minor, Isaac Stern, violinist and Alexander Zakin, pianist, and Symphony No. 5 in E Major (Pastorale), Bruno Walter conducting the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra.

Classes Outlined In Photo Contest

With only a month remaining to submit entries in the current inter-service photography contest, Infantry Center special services officials urged this week that those who desire to enter the competition present their pictures to the hobby shop photographic laboratory as soon as possible.

The contest closes at Fort Benning Feb. 1 and announcement of the winners is expected to follow within a few days.

Prizes to be awarded in the bi-monthly eliminations will be $10 first prize, $7.50 second prize and $5 third prize.

Judging here will be in four categories with a set of three prizes awarded in each division. The four categories include:

1. Service life, on duty and at leisure. (Photographs documenting representative scenes from daily life in the service, compositional photographs of equipment and surroundings and recreational pictures)
2. Landscapes and architecture. (Photographs of scenic, hand and seascapes and picturesque buildings, bridges, monuments and similar structures.)
3. People and customs. (Portraits, photographs depicting personalities, customs, picture-story surroundings, beach scenes, fashion stories, and other full-length photographs of people.)
4. General pictorial. (Glory telling photographs, humorous shots, photographs of pets, compositional or abstract photos and miscellaneous subjects.)

There is a fifth category, color or transition, but special services officials said no prizes would be awarded made in that division although any entries submitted in this category would be available to Third Army for judging.

The Third Army closing date for the contest is March 1 and prizes are expected to be awarded sometime in April.

Following eliminations at Third Army, the winning photographs will be sent to Washington for final judging for the three prizes in each category in the Army, and a grand prize for the winning picture from all the services.

8. No liability or responsibility can be assumed by the Department of the Army or the Air Force for the loss or damaging of photographs submitted.

9. Photographs submitted must be taken and processed by the individual contestant.

10. No official photographs will be submitted as entries, and the use of signal corps material and equipment not authorized for troop use is prohibited.

11. It is not contemplated that the contest will interfere with the normal execution of military duties.

12. No liability or responsibility can be assumed by the Department of the Army or the Air Force for the loss or damaging of photographs submitted.

13. Photographs submitted must be taken and processed by the individual contestant.

Santa Visits Post Patients

Before Santa Claus made his long journey on Christmas eve, he took time out to make a special visit to patients in the Station hospital.

Santa Nick arrived at the hospital, and after being greeted by the Red Cross workers, made a tour of the hospital. The ward was filled and each patient received a gift. While the jolly old man was making his rounds, a group of carolers went from ward to ward bringing the age old music of Christmas to the patients.

Homemade cakes, cookies and candies, donated by the Buena Vista community were distributed to all patients. They were also served sherbet and fruit punch. Santa Nick left each patient a Christmas stocking containing fruit, nuts, candies and a variety of gifts.

After the tour of the wards, Santa adjourned to the Red Cross recreation hall, which featured a glowing, bedecked Christmas tree and holly and greenery.

The gifts in the stocking left the patients by Santa were donated by American Red Cross chapters in this area. The stockings were made by the Red Cross Women's auxiliary and a group of girls from Fort Benning (Girl Scouts).

Colonel Named Post Unit Chief

Lt. Col. Frank A. Ferguson, former deputy district engineer for the Vicksburg (Miss.) corps of engineers district, officially assumed command of the 78th Engineer Combat Battalion recently.

Colonel Ferguson received a commission in the Officers' Reserve corps in May 1939, upon graduation from Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Auburn, Ala., with a degree in electrical engineering. He was ordered to active duty immediately with the 20th Engineer Combat Regiment at Fort Benning.

In December 1941, he was transferred overseas with the United States North African military mission. When the United States entered World War II, he was assigned to the Middle East area, where he took part in constructing air fields, camps, hospitals and engineer depots for the British under the lend-lease program.

Among his decorations is the Legion of Merit, awarded for his part in the construction of installations in Palestine.

Your Red Cross Keep Family Well Posted, ARC Pleads

In social service one hears the word health and welfare report frequently. In Red Cross we use the term for both the soldier and his family. For instance, a man gets transferred to Fort Benning. He might be on regular transfer to a new unit or he may be coming here as a student or for some other form of special duty. The necessary details of processing take a few days. Before the man realizes it, almost two weeks have passed. Then a letter or wire comes in. These locate Pfc. Joe Jones. Family worried. Heard he was reporting your post. No word several weeks.

We call Pfc. Jones, and he frequently says "Oh, I know I wrote Mom on the 15th just a day or two ago before she left camp to come down here."

"When did you leave camp?"

"Oh, it was such and such date—come to think of it that has been nearly three weeks. I had to drop the folks a post card and let them know you got here all right."

We know it sounds like baby talk to the men who write home but really the folks back home do get worried. They are afraid you might be sick or something wrong. It doesn't take you much time to write a letter, and if you are in a big rush drop the folks a post card and let them know you got here all right.

Another thing we would like to ask is to be sure and let the family know if a furlough is delayed. We get a number of requests saying Pfc. Joe Jones wrote mother he was coming home on 15th and it is now 22nd of month, and family has no word. When we talk with Pfc. Jones, he says he will be leaving in couple of days and he just forgot to write again and let folks know he couldn't get off until week later.

We also get a number of requests when a soldier here is worried because he can't get any word from home. Sometimes a man forgets that his folks have had only a short time to write as they have to wait for his address. He has recently come to the post.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK Energetic Dining Steward Accomplishes Field Task

Superior performance of duties as dining hall steward during the recent Third Infantry division field exercise earned Cpl. Gayle L. Perkins of Headquarters and Headquarters company, 30th Infantry Regiment, high praise from his regimental commander, Col. Joseph W. Boone, and the honor of being chosen Soldier of the Week.

CPL. GAYLE L. PERKINS MAKES CHRISTMAS MENU Soldier Of The Week Excels In Field Dining

Shouldering the responsibilities of dining steward just prior to the bivouac, Corporal Perkins immediately duty was to move the dining equipment to the assigned area and establish eating facilities in the field.

Virtually forced overnight to transmute the methods of operations from a comfortable dining hall to a bleak and cold field, the long-time veteran of the Third division knew exactly how to go about his new assignment. With many years experience as a field soldier, Corporal Perkins immediately recognized the needs and demands of soldiers training under disheartening circumstances.

Holding the job of dining hall steward, which calls for the rank and status of a new station or taking a new type of training.

We know it sounds like baby talk to the men who write home but really the folks back home do get worried. They are afraid you might be sick or something wrong. It doesn't take you much time to write a letter, and if you are in a big rush drop the folks a post card and let them know you got here all right.

Although his company lived on field rations, Corporal Perkins provided freshly-prepared, hot meals, adding greatly to the morale of the men. His overall task was made more complicated with incessant downpour of rain, constant chilliness and oozing mud.

But the gray-haired corporal efficiently and assiduously set about establishing a model kitchen, constantly perfecting the temporary installations. The results of his devotion to duty commanded the praise of his "chiefs—the tired, wet and hungry soldiers as well as of his regimental commander.

This is the fourth hitch Corporal Perkins has served with the Third division. In about 11 months he will be eligible for 20-year retirement. But Corporal Perkins says he is going to aim for the 30-year mark.

Is Your Car a Tool of Death?

Today the New Year's holiday weekend begins. There is no thought in your mind, the mind of a soldier or a civilian planning to drive home or to a friend's home over the holiday, that you will commit a premeditated murder. If you strike down an innocent or unwary pedestrian, or smash your own car into a telephone pole or another vehicle, and if you cause the New Year to be a period of mourning for your or another family, no court will charge you with first degree murder, but you will know deep in your heart that that was so. It will be premeditated because your car had a mechanical defect you "will get fixed tomorrow." It will be premeditated because you said "one more won't hurt me," or "it's only 50 miles more, I'll speed up and we'll be there in plenty of time." Last weekend, on the birth date of Christ more than 400 Americans were given a present of death for Christmas. At least two Fort Benning soldiers will not be here to celebrate

The following is reprinted from the final edition of the Camp Chaffee, Ark., Reveille, which appeared on Dec. 15: "It wasn't your fault, soldier. It happened just like the witnesses said it happened. Jacky's fin from behind a parked car and you didn't have time to stop. Jacky's mother and I hold no bitterness toward you. The grief that possesses our hearts leaves no room for lesser emblems. Far from being bitter, a part of our sorrow is for you. Jacky's scream, the impact of his body and the crushing of his flesh and bone are things that we did not see or hear—but we know you will see and hear them for many years. And a part of our sorrow is for our future which your car and Jacky's thoughtlessness destroyed. Jacky was our future, you know. Now he will never be a star fullback at college nor president of the United States. And his mother and I feel a hopeless loneliness with all old broken things. Except for the awful reality that it did happen. Jacky couldn't have been killed at the time he was killed. You see there weren't any automobiles then. You couldn't see the whole thing because you live in a different time. But Jacky was on a desperate mission. On his horse, Thunder, he had broken through the Apaches attacking the wagon train and was riding for the cavalry. Time was against him and Geronimo was closely pursuing. In Jacky's mind was the vision of the horror to be suffered by the women and children in that wagon train if he failed on his mission. He didn't see you or because it couldn't be there. He'd almost succeeded. The fort was in sight and the column of cavalry—his mother at other times—had already poured milk and spread a piece of bread with butter and jam for the heroic messenger. But he didn't quite get through. No, it wasn't your fault, soldier. I wish it had been. Anger would be an antidote for the hopeless sorrow that is mine.

of the coming of the New Year and the hopes and plans it holds forth because they were among that number. The National Safety Council makes predictions for deaths on each holiday. It is a macabre occupation, yet the American people, both soldier and civilian, nearly always manage to top the prediction. Americans are proud of being first and best in everything, but it is a thing of shame that we should daily kill—kill indiscriminately, both rich and poor, young and old. There is only one way to stop it. Every means of publicity can be brought to bear to let you, the driver, know what happens, or is liable to happen, when you take to the road, but it is still from you that the impetus must come. Let there be no more war is the fervent plea of people everywhere in this New Year of hope approaches. Let there be no more useless killing by what has been a boon to America, the automobile. As the splitting of the atom can be a thing of peace or a thing of war, so can the way you use your automobile be an instrument for good and pleasure, or a tool in the hand of death.

News Briefs

Eisenhower Candidacy In 1952 Indicated

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—There are more indications that Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, retired, will be a candidate for the presidency in 1952. . . . Adm. Louis Denfeld refused a transfer to command the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean naval forces on the basis that since his removal from the post of chief of naval operations he can not be considered qualified to handle a lesser post. His stand is thought by some to be sarcastic and his retirement is rumored. . . . The Republican party's leaders got together last week to try and formulate some sort of program they can put across to the American people which will win them the direction of the government once more. No definite progress was reported. . . . The Farm Bureau followed the National Grange in denouncing the Brannan plan to keep farmers' incomes up. Allan B. Kline, president of the bureau and wealthy hog breeder said the plan would be to the detriment of the efficient farmer, "the guy who has tried to keep his hogs sweet and healthy". . . . James E. Glynn, who as a youngster dreamed of being a big transportation executive, and who started out as an extra hand on a railroad, was well on his way to moderate success. His early belief that he couldn't get anywhere without people thinking he was a college graduate, which he never was, led him to say he was on his first application for a government job. He got the job and received a commendation from the minister of public works in Colombia where he made a survey. Then he went with the U. S. Commerce department and got a commendation from President Truman. He added more stars to his record, finally was sent to Greece with the ECA. He was operating with his usual efficiency, but was suddenly recalled. Glynn woke up one morning to find he had been indicted for making a fraudulent statement on his applications. He had done a good job but . . . he had never graduated from college. . . . The government's case against Harry Bridges, chief of the West coast longshoremen, seems to be getting stronger as more ex-communists add their testimony. . . . Judith Coplon's conviction may be set aside. The government now has to prove it didn't build its case on wiretapping and letter interception. INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—China's Red leader Mao Tse-tung visited Moscow and Marshal Stalin last week. There was the usual exchange of gifts but no one knows what else was exchanged. . . . Prime Minister Josef Stalin, bogyman to half the world now, was seventy years old last week. . . . Christmas carols that mentioned angels or Christ were banned in Eastern Germany. . . . It was a bleak Christmas for most European countries, but CARE packages were going a long way to reach a lot of hearts. . . . The United Nations decreed that Jerusalem should be internationalized. Last week the government of Palestine moved in. With Arab soldiers in the streets, there was no bloodshed. The Palestinians and the Arabs are in agreement that Jerusalem, sacred in both their religions, shall not be governed by the UN. It might come about that the long feud between Arabs and Palestinians would be resolved as a result of this common stand against outside interference. At the moment the UN is not pressing any further. . . . The war crimes trials in Germany ended last week with the conviction of Field Marshal Fritz Erich von Manstein on the count of execution and maltreatment of Russian soldiers and civilians. He was sentenced to 18 years imprisonment. This trial ended the whole works. The war crimes trials in Japan were completed last August. . . . The Chinese Nationalists are safely ensconced on the island of Formosa, for the time being at any rate. The Chinese Reds tried without success to invade the island last October. It is garrisoned by nearly 300,000 troops under the command of a Virginia Military institute graduate, Gen. Sun Li-jen. The Nationalists also have something of an airforce, but internal problems must be solved before the end is reached. Formosa lies between Okinawa on the North and the Philippines on the South, in the hands of the communists it could be dangerous, but as communists are said to be causing no trouble, yet the U. S. has not made any moves to secure what could be a life-line. . . . Chief of the general staff of the French army, Gen. Georges Marie Joseph Revers, was quietly displaced last week by the French cabinet. Revers' giving away top secret information. . . . The Italian senate passed by a large majority a bill to abolish brothels in Italy. Despite an organized lobby of madames and pressure campaigns, it seems assured that the lower house, the Chamber of Deputies, will pass it, too. . . . In Argentina another anti-Peronist bit the dust. For the fourth time in 18 months a member of the Chamber of Deputies was ejected for criticizing President Juan Domingo Peron. He then became liable for arrest but escaped. A small time "iron curtain" is beginning to thin around the land of Argentina bet. . . . The U. S. recognized the new government of Panama. Established by a military "coup", the U. S. deplored but recognized. . . . Christmas in Venezuela was a merry one. Prior to 1936 employers had been in the habit of sharing their years' profits with their workers. In 1938 it was made law that 10 percent of the profits must be split. The bosses haven't complained since the money given is spent again, usually during the holiday week, in buying what is manufactured. WHAT'S ALL THIS?—Some young men in Washington, D. C., received an official envelope from the office of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, chief of selective service. On opening, greetings were found all right, but they were only Christmas greetings. Phew!

Report from Washington

Career Tests to Swell Promotions to Grade 4

BY ARMED FORCE PRESS SERVICE
Hundreds of the soldiers who completed infantry, armored cavalry and food service career tests may be scheduled for promotion to grade four and above early in 1950. The list is expected to be swelled by many of those passing the artillery tests in the second and third weeks of January. The Army War college, recently ordered established, will be combined with the Command and General Staff college, at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., to form a new army university. Selectees and 21-month volunteers due for discharge within the next 60 days are not subject to reassignment, and will be held by present commanders until eligible for separation. The armed forces are expected to present about 32 proposed bills to congress when the new session opens in January. High on the list 1950 NIFTY . . . A GI could get starry-eyed looking at Vera Ellen, one of Hollywood's brighter stars of cinema heaven. And from all appearances, it looks as though 1950 will be a bright new year for all.

To Amuse On The Bookshelf

BOOKS AT BENNING IN REVIEW
By D. W. SCHAEFER
The end of a year is the time for looking back and the time for looking ahead. Looking back at the year in books at Fort Benning, a definite noticeable increase of books borrowed from Benning's libraries is the first encouraging sign for the New Year. The libraries here, like many other activities are limited in what they can accomplish and offer the soldier by the funds available to them. When we first came to the post we were both surprised and pleased at the scope of literature available to soldiers. The tasteful decorations and appointments of the reading rooms, the courteous manner in which the librarians made themselves available to readers all combined to provide one of the best entertainments available, reading, for Fort Benning personnel. The weekly classical and semi-classical concerts presented by the main post library only added to the pleasant atmosphere. Most of the choices made in new books at the libraries, and the additions of old books, were good. To our mind the outstanding work of fiction of the year was Nelson Algren's The Man with the Golden Arm. The only other book review on those pages which is in, the same class was published in 1939, Pietro di Donato's Christ in Concrete. A more mature work of a more mature writer, although written for a different person was August Derleth's Shadow of Night. August Derleth is a prolific writer although not writing at present. His epic Sac Prarie, is one which can always be read. The Best Science Fiction Stories of 1949, edited by Everett F. Bleiler and T. E. Dikty were disappointing. This reader believes, however, that was a poor selection on the part of the others since some of the best science-fiction writers are still grinding out their stories. Robert Nathan's River Journey also came as a disappointment. The writer of One More Spring did not have one mere book in him. The Big Wheel by John Brooks merely followed in the footsteps of the Hucksters and the Moneyman, faddish exposes of the shallowness of what some American insist upon calling culture and integrity. World Full of Strangers by David Almgan added a great deal to current literature. Without pondering to commercial sex and titillating the impulses of the frustrated David Almgan showed some things as they are but showed them as horrible realities not mere fancies to excite the neurotic as exemplified by Erskine Caldwell. The year 1949 also saw Joseph Wechsberg go commercial in the sense that Esquire pays the most so write for Esquire. No one can deny his honest desire to make money but he certainly sacrificed the fresh spontaneity of his earlier work. Looking for a Bluebird, without reason when he wrote Sweet and Sour. Nineteen-forty-nine was no great year in books, but what there was came to Fort Benning. It is up to the writers to give us better reading in 1950. If and when they do, soldiers can feel assured they will reach the shelves of their favorite library. Politician: "The people wouldn't elect me because of my youth." "But your are fifty years old." Politician: "I mean my mis-spent youth—they found out about it." One reason why the big apples are on the top of the basket is that a lot of little apples are holding them up there. Many persons seem to be trying to make week-end meet. A law suit is a policeman's uniform. "Mrs. Jones, your son certainly is a cute little rascal." "Yes—he takes after his father." "Oh, is he cute, too?" "No, but he's a rascal." "Now children," said the teacher, "How do you suppose Noah passed his time on the ark?" "There was no answer." "Well," she continued, "I think he did a lot of fishing." "That's wrong," replied little Freddie. "Wrong!" smiled the teacher. "And why is that wrong?" "Noah couldn't have done much fishing. He only had two worms." "Frosted Coin," "Star and Puffy" and "Frosted Lion" are terms to designate types of syrup pitchers in which many collectors of American glassware specialize. Liquor retailers must obtain local licenses before being granted state licenses in Illinois and Georgia. The American Municipal Association, surveying 295 localities, found pay for city attorneys ranges from $600 to $17,500 a year.

Field Printing Plant Greet Santa Nick at Yuletide Party

Santa Claus made his Christmas visit to the Christmas party held by the personnel of the Army Field Printing plant, Wednesday afternoon.

Over 65 children of army and civilian personnel of the printing plant were on hand to greet Santa when he arrived.

The center of attraction for young and old was the 15-foot sparkling Christmas tree and the pile of presents.

Lt. Col. Albert C. Haley, printing plant director, extended an official welcome and Chaplain Lt. Col. Wallace M. Hale gave a short benediction, after which Santa distributed gifts to the children. Each child received a separately wrapped gift, a sock of fruit and candies and nuts wrapped in cellophane bags with colored bows. Parents of absent children received the gifts and sock for those unable to attend.

Mrs. Albert C. Haley, Mrs. G. B. Grover, Mrs. Harvey Allen, Mrs. Mattie Gray and Mrs. Mary Shepard were in charge of the decorations and refreshments.

Second Battalion Holds Luncheon

Mrs. D. W. Syverson and Mrs. H. S. Tye were hostesses at the luncheon the Second Battalion, 16th Infantry Regiment, at the Officers' club on Tuesday.

The luncheon table was centered with a sugarplum tree. Rows of tall white tapers in silver holders, banded in holly, reached from the center of the table to each end. Tiny sugarplum trees marked each place.

Following the luncheon, bridge was played.

Those attending were Mrs. C. V. McLaughlin, Mrs. H. F. Scully, Mrs. D. C. Wilson, Mrs. R. E. Adams, Mrs. F. Mitchell, Mrs. A. McKaine, Mrs. A. E. Mohler, Mrs. E. B. Kvanik, Mrs. R. M. Corlew, Mrs. B. B. Farrar, Mrs. Mrs. N. Hansen and two guests Mrs. D. M. Moore and Mrs. E. O. Gibson.

Fifty-six per cent of fire alarms turned in through Fire-lac, Mich.'s box system in five years were false but only one per cent of telephone alarms were false.

Bayonet Summarizes Top 1949 News Events

army administration, Maj. Gen. Ramon Montalvo, Chilean army commander, and Brig. Gen. Rafael Fernandez, right, observe an Infantry School firepower demonstration. Picture No. 5 shows Brig. Gen. Wayne C. Smith, assistant commander from Lt. John Neff. Third row, left to right, receiving paratrooper instruction. Jim Arnall interviews M-Sgt. James R. Hendrix, 24-year old Congressional Medal of Honor holder who plunged 1,000 feet with two unopened chutes during a training jump and lived to tell the story. Sergeant Hendrix later appeared on "We the People," a national radio program, and visited President Truman as a result of vicar and archbishop of the New York. No. 2, Francis Cardinal Spellman, military vicar after saying special mass to more than 3,000 troops and visiting O'Connell, Atlanta-Savannah diocese, and Monsignor Joseph E. Moyland, vicar-general of the left to right, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, air force chief of staff, and Stuart Symington, air force secretary, chat informally during their visit to the Infantry Center in November. They were also accompanied by the other top defense chiefs from Washington.

The Infantry Center's history of 1949, during which it celebrated its 31st birthday, is a colorful parade of events that have nurtured the fame of the world's most complete army post. Much of this story-punctuated history has been heard to the ends of the earth.

MATS Provided With New Drug
By Armed Forces Press Service
Passengers and patients of the Military Air Transport Service who are—or might be—susceptible to air sickness, are now getting a break, according to an announcement from the MATS Washington headquarters. . . Dramamine, the new "wonder" motion-sickness drug, is now available to all who ride MATS planes. . . All flight nurses, medical air evacuation technicians and flight attendants are being given a brief course of indoctrination in the use and administration of the drug before its distribution throughout the MATS commands. . . It is reported that in most cases dramamine brings relief from motion-sickness within a half hour after it is taken. . . Dramamine was discovered at Johns Hopkins Hospital. "It was thoroughly tested with the cooperation of the Army Forces because of its potential military value. Today it is a standard drug medical supply for the army-navy-air force medical supply catalogue.

Famed Vessel 55 Years Old
By Armed Forces Press Service
The famous navy ship Olympia observed her 55th birthday on January 2, while lying peacefully at her slip in the Philadelphia naval base. . . Fifty years ago the old gray fighter had returned to the U.S. following her triumph over the Spanish Fleet in the Battle of Manila Bay. Today this "mule of the sea" receives homage from the sea's thousands of annual visitors. . . The Olympia, still trim despite her years, was named after the Spanish Fleet in the Battle of Manila Bay. It was the citizens of Olympia who saved her from being scrapped in 1922. . . The city's patriotic citizens protested so vigorously that the operation to scrap her was cancelled. They clearly remembered how the Olympia, Admiral George Dewey's flagship in the Spanish-American War, led the U.S. Navy to a decisive victory over the Spanish fleet.

Career Boosts Due on Jan. 20
Promotions from grade three to grade four as a result of the career field examinations conducted two weeks ago will be announced today by Examining and Computing agency officials. . . The number to be promoted will be substantial, it was announced, as a result of scores already computed. . . The agency has received the cut-off score from Washington, which determines what grade will be sufficient for promotion purposes. . . Those who took examinations for promotion to grade four are expected some word in January on the number to be promoted, but it will probably take at least a month before the agency has sufficient information to effect the grade boosts, it was disclosed. . . The examinations were given in the Hoxmer church area by the Examining and Computing agency in the four career fields: Infantry, artillery, armored cavalry and food service.

BENNING SPORTS SPOTLIGHT

by jim cloonan

As the year 1949 rapidly moves away to make room for the infant 1950 sports season fans across the nation wish the dust from their crystal balls and attempt to pick the winners in the various bowl clashes to be played during the New Year's week end. To the fans in the Fort Benning - Columbus area the big bowl will be the Peanut Bowl game in Memorial stadium and everywhere you go you can hear comments on why Glynn Academy will win or just why the Westfield team is too strong for the Georgians. The annual affair, which is in its fourth year, promises to be the best to date and statistics will bear this out.

Westfield, Mass., high will enter the fray with a team that has won nine consecutive games to finish its first unbeaten season in history. In winning their nine games the Bombers scored 241 points to their opponents 58 and in addition four of the Westfield starters were honored by being chosen to the Western Massachusetts eleven. Included in the group were End Don Bartnicki, Guard Vinnie Ciancotti, team captain, Quarterback Larry Morris and Fullback John Cavanaugh.

Stacked up against this array of talent will be one of the best high school teams ever to grace a Georgia gridiron. The Red Terrors of Glynn Academy in Brunswick played twelve games during the past season, winning eleven and scoring 443 points to their opponents 184. Despite the fact that they lost in the state finals to Brown high of Atlanta 41-13, the Terrors averaged 37 points a game while holding their opponents, including Brown, to an average of only nine points per contest. Add to this the amazing fact that the Red Terrors placed their entire varsity on the all-state eleven including five members on the first team. Signally honored were Fullback Sonny George, leading scorer in the state, Halfback William Rhodes, Tackle Bob Sherman, Guard Dan Spell and End Eddie Dykes.

The battle promises to be a hard fought one from start to finish with both teams depending heavily on their aerial attacks. The Bombers will run from a T although sometimes switching to a modification of the winged-T, while Glynn will depend solely on the T formation. Although both squads appear to be quite even on paper we are going to stick our necks out and predict that the speedier Glynn team will win—and do so rather easily. The reason we say this is because that after watching Westfield work out we were convinced that most of the Terror line would be able to outrun the tricky but slow Westfield backs. The air arm of Larry Morris remains the big threat to Glynn but the Terrors have two of their own in Quarterback Bob Brigman and Fullback Sonny George. Regardless of the outcome of the contest, however, the game promises to be the best game played in the four-year history of the Bowl, and will be preceded by the largest parade in Peanut Bowl history.

Since we have stuck our neck out once we can't do too much harm by going out with a few more predictions. In the other bowl games to be played on New Year's we like the following:

- ROSE BOWL.....Although the Golden Bears of California are unbeaten the fink still remains with the Coast teams. Ohio State by a touchdown.
- COTTON BOWL.....Charlie Justice and Art Welner step out of their league when they tangle with the powerful Rice Owls that present an all-star cast. The Owls have never lost in a bowl and this won't be the year to start.
- OBANGE BOWL.....One of the best games of the day will be the Broncos of Santa Clara using all their power to grind out a win over Kentucky.
- SUGAR BOWL.....We pick an upset in this one as we string along with the lightly regarded Barou Bengals from L.S.U. The Soomers of Oklahoma could be the fourth conference champion to fall before the Tigers attack.
- GATOR BOWL.....Two of the trickiest teams in the country will meet in the game of the year as the Gators of Missouri meet the Tigers of Florida in a game that should be a close one.

Post Named Host For Links Meets

Two important service links tournaments are scheduled for the Fort Benning Golf and Country club course in 1950, officials of the club's Golf committee have announced. From July 11-16, top golfers from installations within the Third Army area will be here to vie for the honors captured by Fort Bragg, N. C., last summer. Following the Third Army meet, the inter-service championships which will feature the top golfers of the army, navy and air force, will be played over the Benning layout. Prior to the big tournaments, however, two traditional club classics will be played here. The club championship will be decided in an April tourney open to all commissioned and enlisted members of the club. The country club, and the Gordon Cup handicap matches, open to officers and enlisted men, scheduled to begin on May 13. Qualification rounds for the tourney will be played in the first five days of April with linksmen posting the lowest 32 scores to be placed in the championship division. First round matches then will be played with the winners making up the championship flight and the losers being dropped into the first flight. Other brackets will be made up of 16 contestants each with the qualifying scores determining the flight into which a golfer is placed.

The tentative schedule drawn up by the Golf committee calls for completion of the first round of matches by April 8. The second round matches are to be played prior to April 15, the third before April 22 and the fourth by April 29. Finals will be played on Sunday, May 7. Matches in the Gordon Cup meet will be spaced at intervals of one week, and the tourney will extend to June 18. Arrangement of contestants into flights will be on a basis similar to that used in the club championship tourney. In addition to being an officer and golfer, to compete in the Gordon Cup meet, must have submitted 10 scorecards to be used in determining his handicap. In setting up handicaps, the three-quarter rule will prevail with 38 strokes set as the maximum. Should two golfers play to a tie in the tourney, any mutual agreement between the contestants will be acceptable with the tournament officials. Either player, it was pointed out, will have the right to demand a replay of the match. The only monetary requirement, club officials said, will be an entrance fee of one dollar.

Three prizes will be stressed in both the club championship and the Gordon Cup tournament. They are: 1. The official club limit of 14 will be observed. 2. The lie of the ball may not be improved in the fairway. 3. Prizes awarded the flight winners, less the championship flight, will be of equal value, but not necessarily identical.

Three New Foes Added to Fordham Football Schedule

Fordham University, slowly returning to bigtime football after abandoning the sport during the war, announced tonight that it will play Yale, San Francisco State and Boston College, - at the first time in its history on a nine-game schedule for 1950. The complete 1950 schedule: Sept. 23—Lafayette, at Easton, Pa., Oct. 7—Yale at New Haven, Conn.; 13—Boston College, at Boston (night); 21—West Virginia, at Morgantown, W. Va.; 28—San Francisco, at Polo Grounds, N. Y.; Nov. 11—Georgetown, at Polo Grounds, 18—Temple, at Philadelphia; 25—N. Y. at Polo Grounds, Dec. 2—Syracuse, at Polo Grounds.

New Cage Rule Draws Protests

Bruce Drake of Oklahoma and Sam Barry of Southern California, members of the National Basketball Rules committee, both predicted recently that the controversial two-minute rule will be wiped out the books by next season. The rule, providing that a team which is fouled in the last two minutes of a game not only gets to make the free throws but also retains possession of the ball, has been severely criticized.

Both Garry and Drake expressed disapproval of the rule, but pointed out that it had been approved by a vote of the National Coaches Association before it was put into the code. "We spent four hours on the last two minutes," Drake said, "and he explained that the rule had been debated in the rules committee session last spring. The vote was very close."

"I want to emphasize, however, that every recommendation submitted by the coaches was passed. The two-minute rule has been tried unsuccessfully in A. A. U. basketball and I think it is bad for the game. I don't know whether we are cleaning up the game; we may be making it tougher because a trailing team has to press before the penalty becomes so severe." Drake also explained that the Pacific Coast and Big Ten Conferences are experimenting with slightly different rules. On the Pacific Coast, the clock is allowed to run instead of being stopped until the ball is put in play after a free throw in the last two minutes. In the Big Ten, all fouls in the last two minutes call for two shots from the foul line. These experiments are being carried on by special permission of the committee. "We treat the last two minutes just the same as the other 38," Barry explained. "It's not the answer except that it gets the agony over in about three minutes instead of taking much longer."

Two other West Coast coaches, Nibs Price of California and Mack Friel of Washington State, concurred in part with the objections to the rule as did Howard Camp of New York university, Honey Russell of Seton Hall, Clair Lee of Long Island university and Garrett of Brooklyn college. They didn't come close to an agreement as to what should be done about it.

Joe Hall, Blue Imp End, Named On All-State '11' Glynn Places Five On 'Dream' Squad

Joe Hall, Columbus High's ace flankman, is the lone Columbus footie player to receive mention for the all-state Class AA team which was announced for release by the Georgia High School Association.

All 23 Class AA coaches participated in the balloting which saw Hall awarded honorable mention on the team dominated by state champion Brown High of Atlanta and runner-up Peanut Bowl-bound Glynn Academy of Brunswick. Glynn placed five men on the team and Brown placed all-stars. Others were End four, The other two places went to Cecil Trainer, Tackle Ed Carriers and Guard Norman a North Fulton high of Atlanta. The Red Terrors of Brunswick, who will face Westfield, Mass., high school here Dec. 31 in the fourth annual Peanut Bowl game, placed Fullback Sonny George, the state leading Class AA scorer; Halfback Hillman Rhodes, Tackle Bob Sherman, End Eddie Dykes and Guard Dan Spell on the first all-state eleven. Brown's great quarterback, Pepper Rodgers, who engineered the Rebels victory over Glynn in the state Class AA championship at Atlanta a short time ago, was named to the team by the office of the GHSAA in Thomaston, Ga. Four Jordan players, two from Baker and one Columbus High performer were the selections by the coaches for regional honors. Tackle Homer Davis, Guard Harry Bartley, Halfback Jack Floyd and Fullback Billy Clarke, who tied with Moultrie's Ray Mercer for that position, were the Red Jackets selections. Joe Hall, who was given honorable mention for the all-state team, was the lone Columbus high choice.

Rice Mentor Sure Of Owls' Triumph

Guided by the theory that four men can do a job better than one, Coach Jess Neely of Rice was confident today that his "backfield of stars" would overwhelm North Carolina with their brilliant Charlie Rote operating as the man under in Neely's "formation most of the time. Rice capitalized on his accurate pitching arm and the pass-catching talents of James (Froggie) Williams and a set of fleet backs to pick up 421 yards and 13 touchdowns through the air. The 86 completions out of 194 thrown by Rote and Vernon Glass were strategically placed in between the devastating running of Earl Burkhalter and Lantrip to keep the opposition off balance. Wyatt and Lantrip alone churned up 1,329 of the 2,114 yards the Owls rolled up against an array of opposition in that period favorably with those met by North Carolina. Wyatt, a 170-pound junior who ranked third in the conference in rushing, netted 704 yards on 137 carries, while fifth-ranked Lantrip netted 625 yards in 188 opponents, only to lose for the second consecutive year in the state finals. In their 12 contests the Terrors amassed 443 points while holding their opponents to 104, including 41 points scored by Brown. Sonny George, all-state fullback, managed to tally almost one-third of the total points to become the highest scorer in the state. From all pre-game indications the clash will develop into a high scoring affair with both teams using wide-open tactics. Wyatt, under Coach Bill Moge, will use both the T-formation and a modification of the winged-T while the Glynn gridgers will stick to the straight T. Facing the Westfield attack will be Quarterback Larry Murgis, one of New England's best passers and Fullback John Cavanaugh on the running of Backs Hillman Rhodes and Sonny George and the pin-point passing of Quarterback Bill Brigman. Dignitaries from both Massachusetts and Georgia will be among the capacity crowd expected for the big holiday clash and these officials will also take part in the huge program scheduled to start at 12:30 in downtown Columbus. In addition to the state, county and officials, the parade will feature six bands and 12 floats bearing the Peanut Queen and her attendants to the stadium.

"Most Complete Post" Is Sports Paradise

The Passing Parade Of Benning Sports

Paced by its champions in baseball team, Fort Benning once again rode the sports trail of service competition in 1949 to finish the year with a pretty fair record despite the transfer and discharge of many athletic stars of last season.

The post diamond squad distinguished itself by winning the Third Army championship for the third consecutive year and acting as the host team for the first annual all-army baseball tournament in history, played on Benning's Gowdy field. Two other area crowns were annexed by Doughboy stars in tennis and volleyball, while the softball aggregation took runner-up honors after taking the title last year.

January

Sports activity at Benning began on the first day of the new year when Fort Benning once again played host to the two high school squads participating in the third annual Peanut Bowl game in Columbus. Both teams, Westfield, Mass., high and Fitzgerald, Ga., high were conducted on tours of the post and were quartered here before and after the game. Both teams also used the facilities of the post to hold their daily workouts before the big game which Westfield won 2-1.

January was also the month that Benning lost its first Third Army title as Fort Bragg, N.C., won the annual area bowling title. The win for the Braggmen snapped a two-year reign by the Doughboys, who finished third behind Fort Jackson, S.C. The Airborne battalion, Student Training regiment rolled to three straight wins in basketball to hold a slight lead over the 204th Transportation Truck Battalion in the intra-mural loop. Lawrence Jones opened up the ring warfare by winning a unanimous decision over Challenger Cliff Wilburn. Former post umpire Charlie Harris signed with the Sally League following his discharge from the service.

February

Fort Bragg annexed the Third Army boxing title early in the month when they edged out the host Doughboys by four points 30-26. Failure of the Doughs to enter men in all classes cost them their chance for the titles as four Benningites copied crowns in the individual weight divisions. The Doughboy 111 lb. holders were Flyweight Malcolm Davis, Lightweight Marsha Clayton, Middleweight Lawrence Jones and Light-heavyweight Dick Donaldson. Marshall Clayton scored Benning's most decisive win when he put away Frank Kavanagh, of Fort Jackson, in 1:35 minutes of the third round in their title battle. The four Doughboy champions then joined the Third Army team which entered the all-army finals at Fort Meyer, Va. Lawrence Jones and Marshall Clayton continued on to fight laurels when they downed all opponents to win the titles of champions of the Army in their respective classes. The Doughboy contenders were having a little worse luck, however, as they dropped contests to Fort Jackson, 70-59, and Fort Bragg 54-40, to be eliminated from the Third Army tournament. In between those two defeats the Benningites whipped Fort McPherson, Ga., 46-42, and Camp Gordon, 70-61. Following the Third Army tourney, the Doughs journeyed to Atlanta to compete in the Southeastern AAU. The Doughboys lost out in the second round after having dumped the Georgia Sporting Goods company 52-50. Elimination came at first half title in the Academic hands of the Clarkdale, Ga., department softball league, postive in the second round by a 65-50 count. Herb Myatt of the Airborne Troopers, set the season's scoring record in the post intra-mural tennis 13-0. Three days later the Troopers scored three against the 204th Field Artillery

March

Fort Benning started off the month of March by entering its cage team in the Bibb Manufacturing company's invitational tournament in Columbus. In the Doughs' first game, the post five romped over the Harris Jewelers by a 45-27 score to gain the quarterfinals, only to lose their next start against the Southern Bell team 45-44. The defeat eliminated the Doughs from the tournament and brought to a close a campaign that had been the locals take the floor 20 times and return with 14 wins. Spring practice started for the many squads entered in the post intra-mural baseball program and Nat Williams of the 30th Medical group claimed the pool title. The Sand Hill Rockets came from behind on the last night of boxing to grab the post ring crown. The blue-clad warriors scored 755 points to edge out the second place Airborne battalion by 15 points. The Area Service unit finished third with 390 markers. Mike Chester would start screaming the first place honors in the Officer's Bowling league with a point total of 773.

April

Airborne battalion, STB, opened its home season with a 5-2 win over Bentley's Sport Shop of Columbus. Golf Pros Loyd Mangum and Jimmy Demaree posted a 3-2 victory over Jack Key Jr. and John Henon at the Officer's club course. The Fort Benning Doughboys organized a team to play the Columbus Cardinals in an exhibition game and were routed by the Redbirds 20-0. Lawrence Jones defeated Bill Bernier in a knock-down ring-out affair at the Main Gym. Bernier returned to the ring wars two weeks later only to suffer a third round KO at the hands of Cliff Wilburn. The 30th Infantry regiment tried the lid off the post intra-mural baseball action when it downed the Area Service unit 5-3 at Gowdy field.

May

The Airborne battalion continued its unbeaten streak by routing the Infantry School detachment nine 6-4. Robert Ross and John Henon tied for medalist honors in the officer's individual golf tourney, but Henon won out in the 18-hole playoff, 72-75. Lawson field opened its 1949 softball season by noosing out Hill Motor company of Columbus, 9-8, under the lights at Lawson field. Bill Bernier bounced back into ring contention by taking a three-round decision from Cliff Wilburn at the Airborne arena. John Henon won the Officer's club golf championship with a smashing 11-10 over runner-up Robert Ross. The Airborne battalion regained first place in the baseball loop to lead 151-107 in half an unpartisan decision over Al Massey in a pro wrestling card at the Main gym.

June

Cindermen of the 15th Infantry regiment copped the annual post track meet, rolling up 77 points to edge out the 99th Armored Cavalry artillery by seven points. Charlie Hall, of the 15th Infantry, paced the day's scoring by winning both the 100 and 200 yard dashes in record time. The Staff department romped to the 52-50 title in the Academic department softball league, posting six straight wins. Loyd Blackwell hurled one-hit but Airborne Troopers, set the season's scoring record in the post intra-mural tennis 13-0. Three days later the Troopers scored three against the 204th Field Artillery batallion Redlegs. Myatt was one of the big reasons why Troopers finished their third straight unbeaten season with the loop crown.

July

Green Cove Springs, Fla., navy upset the Airborne Troopers in a Fourth of July game at Camp Gordon with a 26-6 victory snipped the 15th Infantry regiment in another holiday clash played at Sand Hill. Lawrence Jones ended the day's action by defeating Bill Bernier by a wide margin in the Main gym ring. Football hit the news with the announcement that Head Coach S. C. Bears sent the 89th Infantry candidates for the post eleven. George Hardgrove takes top honors in the Third Army golf tourney. Jim Walker named to pilot the post baseball squad. Paced by Diver Bruce Johnson, swimming meets were interrupted by the holidays. The Doughboys 0-2 in their season with a 13-4 win over the Bentley's Sport Shop of Columbus.

August

Doughboys' streak snapped at 10 by Fort Jackson in semifinals of Third Army baseball tourney. Benning rebounded, however, to defeat the Jacknites 5-0 in the deciding affair to win the area crown for the third consecutive year. Footballers start to work out in pads despite jerritic heat.

September

Mrs. Frank Goas annexed medalist honors in the Women's Club tourney at the Columbus Country club. Fort Benning starts like a house afire in the All-Army tourney at Gowdy field, beating Fort Belvoir, Va., 19-1 and U. S. Forces in Austria 14-1. Fort Lewis, Wash., pre-tourney favorites, cool Doughs off with a 4-1 lacing and Fort Bliss, Tex., finished the job of eliminating the Doughs by dumping them 4-2. The Camp Campbell, Ky., Angels romped through all foes to reach the army wide finals, but lost to Fort Bliss in the first game of the final double-header. The Angels regained their form to blast the Blisemen and win the first annual award. In addition to the baseball highlights were offered by the appearance of George Barr, famous National League umpire, and Hank Gowdy, first pro ball player to enlist in World War I. The site of the tourney, Gowdy field, was named after Hank, a special services officer here during the war. Over 74,000 fans viewed the eight days of tourney play. Grid Doughs play only three quarters of a practice game against runner field and lead 84-0 as game is called. ISD volleyball men chalk up another post title, defeating Divarty. Terry Scott wins the Airborne battalion and post table tennis titles.

October

Dough gridders open their regular season with a 13-3 win at Eglin field, Fla. The Infantry School detachment, tournament wins the post table tennis crown. Doughboys open their home season with rousing 7-0 win over the Rome, Ga., marines. Third division table tennis title won by the 15th Infantry regiment. John Lockamy, of the 15th Infantry, wins the post badminton crown, downing Chay Hockett in straight sets. Post team wins the Third Army volleyball crown, completing its eighth straight year without a defeat. Doughboys lose to Memphis naval station 20-14 on two hit enemy rallies. Fort Jackson handed the Doughs their second loss a week later by a 6-0 count. Station hospital beggars take early lead in post officer's bowling loop. Power-Parris Island marines rout Doughboys 4-1 for local's third straight loss.

December

Lou Barassi, Doughboy half-back, named player of the year by The Bayonet. Special of the Third division halt Airborne basketball teams win streak at 75 straight in a hard fought game. Football banquet staged for the Doughs. Bill DuPriest and Bob Ficco named honorary co-captains. Charlie Harper signed to assist Frank Goas with the professional duties at the Country club. Seven Doughboy gridders join Third Army all-star for charity battle in Atlanta. Airborne battalion sets hoop scoring record by beating the Station hospital 107-52. Mrs. Elvin Krellick takes top honors in the first award of the Women's Bowling League. The 15th Infantry Dragons break hoop scoring mark by whipping ISD 135-60. Former Dough Mound Star Glenn Riegers signs with the St. Louis Cardinal farm chain. ASU and title, defeating Mrs. Irene Curtis. Doughboys get into win streak with a 26-6 victory over the Alabama national guard from Selma. Dragons, of the 15th Infantry regiment, open the Third division basketball tourney with a 42-34 win over a Special Troops five. Fort Bragg downs Dough gridders 28-0 in a top-notch battle played in the winners' field. Charles Armstrong, of the 89th Infantry, S. C. Bears rout the 89th Armored Field Artillery eleven 16-6 for the announcers' choice. Volckmann, in was interrupted by the holidays, a nine-hole exhibition at the Officer's club golf course. Doughs beat Jacksonville navy 12-8 for their third victory, but lose season's finale to Camp Campbell 54-20 before a crowd of 11,000 at Doughboy stadium. Post pistol team downs Fort McPherson in inter-team match.

defended the title against Gus Lesenevich and Pat Valentino. The magazine took a sock at Freddie Mills of England, world-light heavyweight champion. It rated him below Martin of Cleveland, No. 1, and Archie Moore of St. Louis, No. 2.

Although welterweight champion Robinson failed to win the fighter-of-the-year trophy, because he had one draw and too many postponements, he was given a lousy pat on the back by being rated top contender for Jake LaMotta's title in the "weight crown and being called 'undoubtedly the best fighter, pound for pound, in the ring today.'"

Surveying the year, Fleischer noted a record of 14 deaths resulting from ring injuries and a general decrease in attendance in all boxing camps. He deplored the scarcity of boxing talent, particularly in the United States, and declared England was forging ahead in developing newcomers.

Lack of talent was the principal reason for decreased attendance, he said. Other factors were the recession, television, and increased use of "house fighters" by matchmakers and promoters. House fighters wholly or partially by the matchmaker or the promoter.

Ezzard Charles Named Best Boxer of the Year

Ring magazine announced its annual ratings last week, naming Ezzard Charles "Fighter Of The Year" and ranking him No. 1 contender for the vacant world heavyweight title until Joe Louis decides to come out of retirement.

In a copyrighted story accompanying the ratings, Editor Nat Fleischer explained: "It is likely that Joe during 1950 will decide to enter the heavyweight sweepstakes. If so, he automatically will be ranked as the leading contender." The ratings are a feature of the Ring's February issue.

Although brown-skin neofighter of Cincinnati is recognized as heavyweight champion by the National Boxing association, Ring listed the world heavyweight championship as "vacant."

Charles was "grouped" by himself as top contender, and the next group of contenders were made up of four veterans rated in the following order: Jersey Joe Walcott, Camden, N. J.; Lee Gans, Detroit; Bruce Woodcock, England; and Lee Savold, Paterson, N. J.

Charles bested out welterweight champion Ray Robinson a featherweight ruler Willie Pep for the "Fighter-Of-The-Year" trophy, which will be presented to him at the New York Boxing writers annual dinner, Jan. 12.

Charles' trainer, welterweight Lester Felton of Detroit will receive the ring's trophy for the fighter who made the most progress during 1949.

Because no freshman boxer appeared to be outstanding, the ring made no selection of the "rookie of the year" this time.

Charles won the fighter-of-the-year award not only because of his competitive prowess but also because he "maintained fine public relations." He outpointed Joey Maxim, and then version of the title left vacant by Louis.

Swimming Begins In Fieldhouse Pool

Infantry Center special services officials announced this week that the indoor swimming pool, part of the newly completed Bryant Walls Fieldhouse, will be open to enlisted men from 9 to 9 p.m. every day except Monday and Sunday.

The announcement brought indoor swimming facilities to Fort Benning personnel for the first time since the post was established.

One-hundred and sixty thousand gallons of temperature-controlled water circulates every eight hours with the temperature held at 88 degrees, awaits the first dive from one of the matched, single-meter or three-meter diving boards available.

Eleven Win 'Flag' Tourney Honors

Eleven Fort Benning golfers were declared winners in the "Flag" tournament played at the Golf and Country Club here Sunday.

The tourney victors are J. D. Roney, A. Parks, D. W. Anderson, R. McClure, L. K. Kelly, Bill Duncan, R. N. Duffy, C. R. Anderson, George Hardgrave, M. P. Mitchell and Maurice G. Miller.

Modern Santa Steps from Helicopter To Highlight Sand Hill Yule Program

Forfeaking his traditional reindeer for a more novel approach, Santa Claus last week made an appearance by helicopter at a Sand Hill Christmas party at Fort Benning.

The event took place at Service club No. 5, Sand Hill, where the 80th Infantry regiment gave a party for children of unit personnel.

Close to 400 children, 12 years and under, had gathered expectantly in the gayly decorated service club to await St. Nick's arrival by air.

The children were greeted by Col. Joseph W. Boone, regimental commander, who introduced Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Division.

"I never miss a Christmas party," the general said, extending his welcome and wishes for a merry Christmas.

After the distribution of presents Santa left, again by Jeep and on plane. Concluding the Christmas party, everyone in the service club gathered at the snack bar for ice cream and cake.

Benning GIs Read More, Recent Report Indicates

A recent report from Third Army headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga., indicates that Fort Benning still leads all other Army installations in the army area in use of books.

The report showed that an opinion expressed earlier this year by Miss Francis C. Dozier, chief librarian of Fort Benning, that "more and more soldiers are realizing the value of the printed word, both for entertainment and knowledge," has held true as time stands.

During October 10,634 volumes were withdrawn from Benning libraries, and nearly 19,000 soldiers took advantage of the library during the month.

Fort Bragg, N. C., the nearest post in the Benning area, had 8,681 books withdrawn.

Fort McPherson showed a total of 1,721 books borrowed and 2,730 visits to the libraries.

One thousand four-hundred and fifty-eight soldiers made 5,378 visits to the Oliver General hospital and borrowed 3,115 books.

The Atlanta General hospital loaned 1,807 books to 2,500 soldier visitors while at Camp Gordon, 1,656 were withdrawn and at Fort Jackson, S. C., 1,721.

For the sixth year, Williams led in bases on balls with 102, while Eddie Joost of Philadelphia was second with 149. It also marked the sixth season that Williams drew 100 or more walks.

Lon Boudreau of Cleveland struck out only 10 times to lead all players who appeared in 100 or more games. Dale Mitchell, also of the Indians, was almost as tough to strike out, fanning 11 times.

Taking over the booby prize from the departed Pat Seerey, Outfielder Dick Kokos of the St. Louis Browns struck out 91 times while Larry Doby of the Indians was only a swing behind with 90 strikeouts.

Civilian Priority Board Appointed

Four Infantry Center officers were appointed to an investigating panel this week to determine the priority of civilian reduction in certain Fort Benning offices and activities.

Appointed to serve as investigators were Col. James C. Carter, Lt. Col. Charles R. Elzer, Lt. Col. Laurence E. Chlouche and Maj. Sam Carter.

The four-man board will investigate and recommend, if necessary, the civilian personnel reduction required to meet curtailment in the current funding program project.

Activities slated to be investigated to determine if cutbacks are necessary include G-1, G-3, adjutant general, inspector general, judge advocate, billeting, chaplain, provost marshal, safety, public information and management offices and provision of group headquarters.

IF YOU COULD HAVE YOUR CHOICE OF ANY JOB IN THE ARMY, WHAT WOULD YOU CHOOSE AND WHY?

SECOND LT. JACK STOREY, Student Training Regiment - I would like to be an athletic officer as I am interested in that sort of thing. I believe I am fairly well versed in that sort of work as I have played two years of college football and basketball and can play any type of sport. I would choose this type of job because it would help me to give other fellows the chance to learn and to be connected with sports.

SGT. IST. CL. JACK S. BURCH, Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, 30th Infantry Regiment - This is a difficult question to answer, but as far as I am concerned, I think the type of work that I am now doing would be my choice. I am doing administrative work. I have been in the army 11 years and have been doing this type of work most of time, and my present job is as good a job as I have found yet. I could think of only one thing that would like to do better, that is join the air force to fly, but I am too old for that.

SGT. SAMUEL HALL, Headquarters Company, 15th Infantry Regiment - I would choose a job in athletics, probably athletic instructor. I am regimental coach in basketball for the 15th. I played all sports in high school and since I have been in the army, which is nine years, I have played them. So I think I am fairly well versed along those lines. I like that type of work and think it would be very interesting.

SGT. KELLY ODOM, 1st Evacuation Hospital - I would choose the same type of job that I am doing now. I am doing professional work at the hospital and I like that type of work, have been doing it for about nine years. I know more about this type of work and am trained for what I am doing. It is the type of medical work that I like along with being a professional soldier and gives a man a lot of interest.

SGT. HALL McGUIRE, SECOND LT. YERBON L. McGUIRE, Company C, Airborne Battalion - I think I would like a job as platoon leader, because it would make a man exert all his capabilities. To handle men is one of the hardest jobs in the army, and a job like that would really give an officer an opportunity to test his ability and worth as an officer. Handling personnel, to my way of thinking, is one of the best jobs in the army, so that is why I would choose a job of this type.

SGT. HERBERT B. CANON, Detachment Headquarters, Infantry School Detachment - I would choose personnel administration, as that is the type of work I am now doing. It is the kind of work that I have done for seven of the eight years I have been in the army. I have also been schooled in the Adjutant General school in enlisted administration, believe it or not, in a good career field in which to advance.

SGT. KELLY ODOM, 1st Evacuation Hospital - I would choose the same type of job that I am doing now. I am doing professional work at the hospital and I like that type of work, have been doing it for about nine years. I know more about this type of work and am trained for what I am doing. It is the type of medical work that I like along with being a professional soldier and gives a man a lot of interest.

SGT. HALL McGUIRE, SECOND LT. YERBON L. McGUIRE, Company C, Airborne Battalion - I think I would like a job as platoon leader, because it would make a man exert all his capabilities. To handle men is one of the hardest jobs in the army, and a job like that would really give an officer an opportunity to test his ability and worth as an officer. Handling personnel, to my way of thinking, is one of the best jobs in the army, so that is why I would choose a job of this type.

Officers Named To Fund Council

A panel of Infantry Center officers was appointed this week to take over the reins of the Central Post fund, Fort Benning officials have announced.

The council includes Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, Col. James C. Carter, Lt. Col. Shields Warren, Lt. Col. Wallace M. Hale, Maj. Hersey L. Wright, Maj. Paul E. Doherty, Maj. Richard O. Johnson, Lt. Col. F. E. Fickler, Ennis and Maj. Robert S. Cain.

Secretary Vetoes Construction Medical Care Plan During 1949

Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson has vetoed a proposal, made keeping with a suggested cutback of military spending, that medical care for dependents be eliminated.

Started several weeks ago by congressmen trying to reduce military expenditures, the Budget Director, Stephen Pace fanned the flames by recommending the cut-rate and free medical care be stopped because of adequate increases in military salaries and a program to cutback expenditures to a minimum.

Secretary Johnson's office announced "in response to inquiries" that he has sent Mr. Pace a letter disapproving the suggestion. He told Pace, however, that he has appointed a committee to review the subject "so that we may establish a Department of Defense policy on this matter."

As a result of Johnson's action, it is believed that Pace will not ask President Truman to adopt the idea in his budget for next year.

Pace wrote Johnson Nov. 16, suggesting that the free medical and cut-rate hospital care for military dependents might be eliminated in view of the $330,000,000 pay raise that congress voted the military recently.

Neither Johnson's office nor the budget director's office would make public the text of the defense chief's reply.

Recently, the Hoover Commission, board appointed by President Truman to investigate government bureau spending and how it might be substantially cutback, estimated that $90,000,000 of the army and air force now are eligible to receive substantially free medical and dental care.

Throughout the armed forces long-time veterans of service voiced their disapproval of the proposal as being "unfair and demoralizing. In effect, many said that it would sharply reduce reenlistments because of its reduction in aid to personnel and their families."

Private Excels In Typing Class

Pvt. E. W. d. C. Birbeck, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 30th Infantry regiment, received top honors as the best typist in a typing class conducted by the regiment closed last week.

Sergeant Robert Rester, operations sergeant of the regiment, was a chief instructor with Sgt. Rufus M. McCullers as his assistant. The class was a 100-unit victory apartment.

Although the majority of these are not in military reservation and were constructed by commercial building interests in Columbus, their importance to Fort Benning cannot be ignored. An analysis will show that close to 150 percent of occupants in the Camellia and Victory apartment are in uniform.

Short of the new 800-unit Baker Village apartments are also occupied by a majority of uniformed tenants.

Housing prospects were augmented considerably when plans were announced for construction of a 600-unit housing development. Reportedly costing $1,000,000, the new project should be ready for occupancy by July 1950, according to construction engineers. It will be located on Airwood road just east of the newly completed Battle Camp Homes.

Several other beauty preparations were added to the 1949 center face—lifting, a new $600,000 Fieldhouse, a dam across Ujato creek and a new academy school training edifice have been turned over to Fort Benning.

The Fieldhouse, which was completed two weeks ago and only awaits equipment and installation, is reportedly the most modern building of its type in the Third Army area. Occupying nearly a quarter of a block across from Stilwell field, the structure will house the latest in athletic equipment which will include a regulation swimming pool and basketball court, easily converted into a boxing or wrestling arena.

The classroom building, which will be used by the Commandant's Department of the Infantry School, can accommodate more than 200 students. It is located behind the main theater. The dam across Ujato creek will facilitate training for river crossings. Until now, the creek was either dry or too shallow to allow crossings by foot. A 1-mile-long span is located a mile east of outpost No. 1.

On the 1950 agenda for housing improvement and rejuvenation is a proposal to tear down 70 of the homes in Block 2 which were converted from training use after World War I.

Many Vets Fail to Apply

WASHINGTON (AP)—About one-eighth of the 18 million war veterans entitled to the forthcoming National Service Life Insurance dividend have not as yet applied for it, the Veterans Administration announced.

The VA said that the dividends of the homes in Block 2, which were converted from training use after World War I, are being held against the NSLI fund. This money may be applied for at any time, but will not draw interest.
