People Are Gullible

Phony Cause Pledged $25

By HARRY KING
 Bayonet Staff Writer

A completely phony charity has been pledged over $25 by gullible residents in and around Fort Benning.

In a move to prove that a crooked solicitor could collect money even without identification, this Bayonet reporter, dressed as a civilian and armed only with a letter from the provost marshal in case of an encounter with the military police, visited 35 homes in the Fort Benning area and was turned down flatly only three times. A total of $25.25 was definitely pledged to the Society for Needy Children of Fort Benning Residents by 16 kind-hearted but misguided residents, while the other 16 said they would give what they could.

The Society for Needy Children of Fort Benning Residents, a figment of the fertile imaginations of The Bayonet editors, purported to give a Christmas party for children of needy enlisted men on Christmas day. According to the story, the toys had been contracted for but the money was needed to pay for them.

This story worked so successfully on some of those interviewed that they even offered to help collect in their area. One woman, however, said she couldn't give anything because her husband was working for the same organization.

Several were willing enough to pledge money but had to wait for their husbands' approval, while one man explained that he couldn't touch any money without his wife's consent, but said he'd give what he could.

Ten of those dubbed for the "worthy" charity promised to give something but couldn't be sure of the amount until the actual collection was taken because of heavy yuletide expenses.

Although there were only three who questioned the authenticity of the fund, these three were formidable. The first woman asked for my credentials.

"Listen mister," she said, "I'm not giving a red cent until I know who I'm giving it to. Show me your identification." I hemmed and hawed and was finally told to "get out of here and stay out before I call the police."

This was certainly the exceptional case, however, since most were so overcome with the Christmas spirit and good-will that they never even questioned my intent.

Any crook, intent on filching the well earned money of the soldier and his family could have been just as successful, if not more so, then I. A planned campaign might have included false literature of some sort to further convince the dubious philanthropist. An intelligent larconist would probably offer something to sell with receipts for the donated money. If an amateur could collect an average of 72 cents from each person contacted without the aid of any props, it is well worth wondering how much money has been literally stolen from gullible people by just this sort of chicanery.

Fort Benning is an ideal location for this type of larceny, since housing is close together and residents, as evidenced by the recent collection, are unfortunately gullible.

Several women were so taken in by the trick that they offered to help in the cause. One said, "Young man I'm going to see if I can't collect some money tonight at a bridge party I'm having, and I'll give to whoever comes around tomorrow."

This spirit is certainly commendable, but, unfortunately, that woman might have been giving her money to some thief who would be laughing at her naïveté.

There are no authorized civilian solicitors on the Fort Benning reservation for charities, nor are peddlers normally allowed to

Portrex-Bound GIs Leave for Virginia

Third Sends First Group Into Training

Troops of the Third Infantry division began moving out of Fort Benning this week to begin the first phase of training preliminary to "Operation Portrex," scheduled for the Caribbean in early March.

Personnel and equipment of the division left the post a each day this week for Charleston, S. C., where some will go to Camp Pickett, Va., by troop train and others by sea transport.

This week's movements marked the transfer of the first increment to leaving Benning for the exercise training area in Little Creek, Va.

Approximately 15,000 personnel of the army and airforce will be taking amphibious training in Little Creek under the overall command of Rear Adm. Jerauld Wright of the Atlantic fleet.

Troops of the Third division with elements from here and Fort Devens, Mass., will provide the bulk of the army's representation in the amphibious assault and will be supplemented by an airborne attack by a helicopter combat team from the 1st Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Various airforce units from bases throughout the East will provide troop carrier and tactical air support for the exercise. Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, Fifth corps commander, Fort Bragg, will be the invasion commander.

Troops will be trained in three increments. The first group will arrive at Little Creek this week and will begin training on Monday. Training will be initiated with ashore phases of the basic amphibious indoctrination at the Naval Amphibious base at Little Creek.

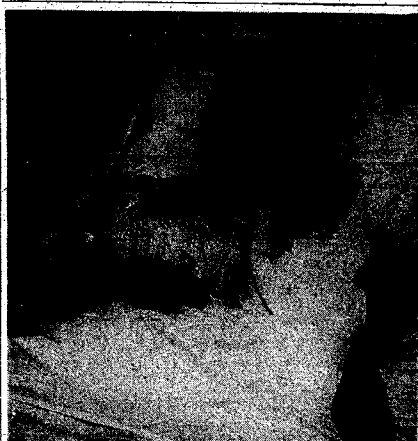

During the training period the base will provide the normal logistic support and services, such as dining, billeting, transportation, medical and other facilities required for the personnel.

The training command, U. S. Atlantic fleet, is commanded by Rear Adm. S. S. Murray. Instruction is provided by two groups-the troop training unit under Brig. Gen. R. H. Pepper, major command, and the naval amphibious training unit, commanded by Capt. L. J. Mentes, U. S. navy.

Attack troops are trained in basic techniques of boat handling, tactics and wave formations air and naval gunfire support, amphibious intelligence, combat loading of ships, evacuation of casualties and the employment of amphibious ships and craft, launching of pontoon barges, and in ship-to-shore movement.

During the afloat phase of training troops will be embarked in some 40 vessels of the amphibious force and will be trained in two rehearsal landings. The first landings will be conducted on the beaches of Little Creek and the second on assault landing on the beaches of Camp Pendleton, Va. The two rehearsals will terminate the afloat training phases.

Improvement Seen In Safety Picture

Accident figures for Fort Benning during 1949 were somewhat higher than in 1948, but Post Safety Director Norman Evans, who released the comparative figures this week, said that the overall safety picture improved last year.

In the three generalized accident departments where running tabulations are kept, figures showed an upsurge, but the safety director attributed the increase largely to the fact that there were more troops and their dependents on the post in 1949 than there were in 1948.

The biggest increase in 1949 was in the number of injuries requiring hospitalization. In 1948 only 654 persons were confined to the hospital as the result of accidental injuries, but the number last year soared to 761.

Fatalities resulting from mishaps jumped from 17 in 1948 to 22 last year, and 357 traffic accidents were reported in 1949 as compared to 329 the preceding year.

Although he attributed the accident increase for the most part to additions in personnel, Mr. Evans pointed out also that the mileage registered on privately-owned vehicles had more than doubled itself in 1949.

In lauding the value of the organized safety campaign carried out here during most of 1949, the safety director said that vigilance in the drive will not be relaxed in 1950.

Mr. Evans also joined other Fort Benning officials in citing his belief that the program for mechanical checkups of privately-owned vehicles now in progress here will tend to reduce the number of traffic mishaps this year.

Post Awaits 'Good News'

Good News, Third army soldier show, will make its first appearance at Fort Benning next Friday.

Originally scheduled to arrive here in December, the show was delayed by casting difficulties.

Newspaper reviews indicate that the show lives up to its pre-performance prediction of being the best soldier production since the wartime review This is the Army.

Good News went on the road Dec 10 after a week's performance at Fort McPherson, Ga., and has played Fort Jackson, S. C., Fort Bragg, N. C., Oliver General hospital, Ga., and Camp Gordon, Ga.

Nine Fort Benning personnel are in the cast which includes performers from all Third army installations.

Army Halts High Grade Enlistments

The army has stopped reenlistment of many servicemen, including former officers, in the upper enlisted grades. However, these men, and men who have been reduced in rank, will be allowed to climb back up to the enlisted grade ladder at a faster rate than they can now. They must still pass the open and MOS test in free and open competition with all other applicants for promotion, the army announced.

The highest rank that can be given to prior servicemen under Department of the Army pamphlet 12-18 is corporal. This limit applies to all but those given written authorization for enlistment in a higher grade on or before Dec. 15.

A second regulation now being issued provides that changes will soon be made in career circular 202 to authorize "skip" promotions.

The present regulation states that a man can advance only one grade at a time, and further requires a definite period of service in the grade from which promoted.

The amendments, while not changing this plan generally, will substitute an overall service requirement (probably four years) and authority to skip grades for: 1. Enlisted personnel in grades below any grade they held previously.

2. Former commissioned, warrant and flight officers. The first group may apply for promotion on the next job tests in their field to any grade up to and including that held previously.

The ex-officer and warrant group, when job tests of their career field are held, may apply for any grade up to and including master sergeant.

Whether any of either group will be promoted depends on how their composite scores, including their test scores, compare with the scores made by those applicants in the one grade at a time group.

"Leghorn" hats are named after the Italian port of Leghorn through which they are shipped. But the hats actually are produced in Fiesole, a suburb of inland Florence.

Clothing System Revisions Made

New army regulations issued this week revealed several changes in the monetary clothing allowance system, the biggest change being the abolition of the between-enlistment clothing holding system.

The other major changes outlined by the new regulations include the number of items discharged or separated personnel may take home with them. Details of the new regulations are:

1. Under the system started July 1, 1949, if a person did not indicate an intention to reenlist, those items of clothing which were turned in for credit were packed in a duffel bag and held 105 days, then shipped to him if he did reenlist at another station. Although the 105-day system gave a 14-day time lag for notification, in practice many reenlistees were without their clothing for three months or longer.

2. Personnel retired or discharged for disability will be on the same basis, as far as final settlement of accounts is concerned, as those discharged at the convenience of the government.

3. Service shoes, originally issued only to airforce personnel and charged to clothing credits of others, will be issued to army military police and probably soon to airforce police. MP's who had to draw service shoes will have the charge against their credits removed, and if only one pair was issued, another will be supplied.

Russia Reported Building Huge Fleet of Submarines

LONDON (APFS)—The Soviet government is building three 35,000-ton battleships equipped with fire radio-controlled aerial torpedoes, according to the 1949-50 edition of "Jane's Fighting Ships," unofficial but authoritative register of the world's fighting sea craft.

The publication said it had received unconfirmed information that two of the battleships already may be in commission. The Russians also are speeding construction of 1,000 submarines, including a type with "great range and high submerged speed," according to "Jane's."

The U.S.S.R. previously was known to have only two battleships of slightly more than 23,000 tons each.

"Jane's" said Russia is believed to have about 360 submarines at present.

The Soviets, according to the publication also observes that world shipbuilding is entering a revolutionary stage, with emphasis being placed on construction of certain types for specific purposes.

"In the next few years we are likely to see warships of revolutionary type," the publication states, "among them the atomic bomber carrier, the guided missile control vessel, the task force command ship, the anti-submarine, cruiser, rocket destroyers, fast, lowlying frigates and gas turbine ships."

Phony Cause

Benning families living off the reservation, it was pointed out, may establish the validity of solicitations by calling local police authorities. All recognized benevolent societies and agencies, it was explained, are known to police departments, and in many cases, the names of persons collecting funds are familiar to the police. If law enforcement officers aren't acquainted with the solicitor, it was advised that the person being contacted carefully examine the credentials of the collector.

Many causes are well worth while and are a necessity. Funds such as the Red Cross, Community Chest and Salvation Army yearly help thousands of underprivileged people, but contributing to a crook is blind aid to the underworld. Since an average of 72 cents per person was pledged it is conceivable that a crook visiting 10,000 homes could be collected over $7,000. This would constitute a lucrative enterprise for an ambitious crook.

2-Year Reserve Tours Required For RA Officers

All officers in the regular armed services must, in the future, serve at least two years with a civilian reserve component, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson announced this week.

The order applies to officers of the regular army, navy, marines and air force. They will serve with one of the "civilian components" of the national defense setup—such as the national guard.

Mainly they will get as full-time instructors. The aim is two-fold: To familiarize them with the problems of the civilian fighting men, and to give the latter the advantage of professional guidance.

As Johnson put it, the order is a "move for unification by integration of the regular and reserve forces for speedy and effective mobilization in a national emergency."

Commenting that in wartime the bulk of the fighting force will be made up of civilian components, Johnson said in a statement:

"The professional military man in such a situation will use these components and our regular establishments together into one force. He must be intimately familiar with and understand the problems, state of training, and psychological outlook of the members of our civilian components. By the same token, our reserves urgently need the skilled guidance and supervision that only the professional military man can give."

Exceptions will be made in cases where "over-all" missions of the armed services prevent the assignment of officers to civilian components.

Mr. 1950 made his appearance at Fort Benning's Station hospital exactly one hour and six minutes after midnight Jan. 1.

The local Man of the Year, born to Sgt. 1st cl. and Mrs. James Paul Manual, automatically became the recipient of approximately $100 worth of merchandise donated by Columbus merchants through The Bayonet-sponsored Baby Derby.

The Baby Derby, originated seven years ago by The Bayonet in cooperation with Columbus businessmen, awards to the first child of enlisted men born at the Station hospital each year a variety of gifts, ranging from a brand new baby outfit to a free diaper service.

To date there have been five boy and five girl winners of the derby. This year's race was unusually close with eight births recorded at the hospital the first day of the new year.

The beaming Mrs. Manual, who is feeling fine, said that James, Jr., is her first child and she expressed surprise at the unexpected gifts which were showered on her.

Plans for James' future include an army career if Sergeant and Mrs. Manual have anything to say about it.

Runnerup in the derby was a baby girl born at 2:25 a.m. Jan. 1 to M-Sgt. and Mrs. Daniel McLemore in the Station hospital.

Sergeant McLemore who is stationed with Company H, Infantry School detachment, said no child had been chosen for the baby yet.

Among the gifts that will pour into the Manual household will be a case of Royal Crown Cola from the Nebi Bottling Company; an oil change, grease job and wash from the Cliff Averetti garage; nylons for the mother, and necktie for the father from the Fosters, Inc.; a comforter set for the baby from Kirven's; Johnson's baby bath set from all contemplated discharges the armed forces will have an overall total of 750,000 civilian entrants.

dying from Phillips' cleaners; a three-piece dresser set from the Village Beauty Shop.

Baby jewelry from the G. I. Pawn shop; $3 worth of drugs from Dinglewood pharmacy; $5 worth of merchandise from Foremost Auto shop; a gallon of ice cream from Wells' dairies; a handmade Sac and Bonnet set from Davison-Paxon; a free ride over Columbus and one hour credit of instruction for the father from King's School of Aviation; a case of baby food from Sol Leeb.

A baby hot plate from Gem Jewelers; a rubber doll and exercise set from Patterson's; a rolled plant from Bon Marche florists; a reeling job from Welch Brake service, and a new baby crib blanket from Schuster-Patterson.

Civilian Labor Cut Will Save $300 Million

WASHINGTON (APFS)—An annual savings of more than $300 million will be realized by the Defense department as a result of an economy cutback in civilian employment within the armed forces.

The Defense department recently announced that January 1 the army, navy and airforce had 135,000 discharges ordered by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson. The army accounted for the extra discharges, totaling: army 55,000, navy 76,000 and airforce 18,000.

Following all contemplated discharges the armed forces will have an overall total of 750,000 civilian entrants.

Please, Mr. Editor, Be Fair!

An item in a well-known publication this week reported that the President's Committee on Education in the Armed Forces has told the Chief Executive that the information and education program in the army is inadequate and that the army is actually doing little to promote an interest in it. This article, which appeared in Labor, left us gasping with amazement. Frankly, we thought we were well informed on matters pertaining to the armed forces, but we were unaware that the report to the President contained such condemning statements. According to all the accounts we read, the army's information and education program was tops among the armed forces. Although the army's program did receive a blast from the committee for the lack of encouragement offered by officers to enlisted men, the committee was quick to point out that, on the whole, the information and education set up at most military installations is good.

Certainly, no one can deny that Fort Benning's information and education section is superior. It has consistently received praise from civilian educators, not only for its magnificent method of operation, but for the great variety of activity and the enthusiasm exhibited by those responsible for its implementation. Further, the records of past accomplishments prove that it has been extremely well received by Fort Benning troops.

One reason for its success is, we believe, the whole-hearted backing the program has from the officers. This, then, should disprove the theory advanced in the publication that army officers fail to encourage their men to take advantage of the information and education program.

Each week, compulsory troop information hours are held here and at all the army posts throughout the world. These discussions, led by qualified officers or enlisted men, are divided into three parts: discussion of the latest news, discussion of the latest Armed Forces Talk (successor to Army Talk), and a question and answer period.

Every discussion leader is carefully screened by the unit information and education officer to determine his suitability. Of primary importance is his personality. It is felt that no man, regardless of his education, is really qualified to lead the troop information hour unless he has the poise and speech qualities that are requisites for a discussion leader. In addition, the information and education officer makes absolutely sure that those chosen to lead the discussions are alert, well-read and capable of interpreting the day's news.

Fort Benning, as do many other army posts, maintains an Army Education Center, where a man may continue his education while in uniform. The local education center has gained a nation-wide reputation for its outstanding contribution to education. It can't be denied that the army is a pioneer in the field of education inasmuch as education centers, such as the one at Fort Benning, have been adopted by the other services.

The idea of these off-duty classes was tried out at Fort Benning back in late 1945 by an airborne captain, who himself was an army-educated man. When he entered the army at the outbreak of the war, he could boast only a grammar school education. But by enrollment in the United States Armed Forces Institute, he was able to complete the equivalency of two years of college work. Now he is a successful businessman. The army's information and education program is almost solely responsible for his success, and he's proud of boasting that the army made him what he is today. Does this show inadequacy?

We realize that the information and education program has some shortcomings. But, then, we also realize that any organization, no matter how efficient, also occasionally needs advice from others as to how it may be improved. It's disheartening to learn that, no matter how hard the army tries, there are still those who insist that the army can do no good.

Arms Usage in Formosa Not Recommended

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — The joint chiefs of staff have submitted a report and recommendations to President Truman on the Formosa situation. The President called for action when he returned from a Florida vacation. Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson pointed out that the recommendations do not include the use of American armed forces. It is expected that any support, if only moral, received by the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa the accompanying lift in morale among the troops might be enough to ward off any invasion from Red China. Part of the report was a recommendation that a military mission, such as that sent to Greece, composed of about 20 officers, be sent to Formosa. . . . The New Year is Time for Taking Inventory

By CHAPLAIN WALLACE M. HAILE
The opportunity to start over again is a great psychological advantage unless people excuse their faults and minimize the efforts of failure.

The New Year that is ours every twelve months means that approximately one-seventh of our life's span has been used up, and we are now ready to embark on another well-divided period of service. Therefore, January 1 has been widely known as a time for New Year's resolutions — resolves that the failures the past year will be successes in this new one.

When we realize that only about forty years of our lives are really productive, it becomes even more essential that we use those producing years in the manner that befits a human being. We have a desire for service; we wide master menus. If popular, the peas, will become part of the varied army fare.

If you are discharged from the army or the airforce with a cash overpayment, return the money. It has nothing to do with the "waiting list" and when you get back into the service, either as a regular or as a reservist, instructions issued by the two services require discharging officers who fail in all efforts to collect payments to which exceptions have been taken to furnish necessary information for the discharge person's 201 file.

Line and staff officers in ranks of lieutenant (junior grade) to commander and aviation line officers in grade of lieutenant to commander are attending the 14-weeks public information course at the Armed Forces Information School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa. Although completion of the course does not mean the student officers will become public information officers, the Navy department considers it as "excellent background" regardless of assignment.

have some motivation to help make a better world; we have a great compulsion to live as we ought.

To start the New Year right and to live it completely and fully we need to be like the average businessman who has been busy these past days taking physical inventory. He wants to know just how much he has in the way of resources; he will then decide whether he should buy more or hold on to what he has without expansion. In our own human realms we should inventory our personal lives, our homes, our businesses, and see what we have achieved thus far. If there is little peace of mind, if there is wasted effort, or if our motives are wrong, today we can set a new course and achieve new results — that is the difference between a man and an animal. Let's start the New Year right and keep it right throughout the coming twelve months.

To Amuse You Today

"What are you doing here?"
"Looking for a husband!"
"But you've got a husband!"
"That's the one I'm looking for."
A woman's face is her fortune—and sometimes it runs into a nice little figure. . . .
When a married man has the last word, the word is "Yes."
Father (from upstairs):
"Daughter, it's time for that young man to go home."
Suitor: "Your father is a crank."
Father: "I heard that. When you haven't got a self-starter I've got to be a crank."
Many persons think they have open minds. . . . actually their minds are just vacant.
The lightning bug is brilliant, but it hasn't any mind; it wanders through the darkness.
With its headlight on behind.
"I'm so-o-o sorry—I quite forgot your party the other evening."
"Oh, weren't you there?"
Love is like long underwear—it keeps you warm, but it binds.

On The Bookshelf

The Passionate Journey By Irving Stone. Doubleday and Co., Inc., Garden City, N. Y., Publisher.
By D. W. SCHAEFER
John Noble, teller of tall tales of the West. John Noble, drunkard, John Noble, a boy who carried the brand of a youthful humiliation for all his life.
And last, John Noble, painter, who left us such wonderful paintings of sea village life as "Tollers of the Sea" and "Britanny Moonlight."

Irving Stone has written another biographical novel of an artist. His first and most famous, Lust For Life, the story of Vincent Van Gogh, published 15 years ago, was more than enough to make any reader anxious to read another. And such another is The Passionate Journey.
Here again is the story of an artist. Without pulling punches or playing down bad points, Irving Stone gives us an impression, no, a deep indelible realization, of the life of a man who during his earthly tour was always lonely.
The story begins in a most prosaic place, Wichita, Kansas. No romance, no old world surroundings, just the West. But it was the West which inspired this, one of America's best painters, to seek his end as best he could.

Irving Stone has lost none of his ability to bring to life and make understandable the intricacies of a man trying to express himself. We can see John Noble as a confused, humble person, a man truly alone because what he wanted was so different from what were the accepted wants. We can see him as a drunkard in Paris and New York. But we cannot, and to this reader it is a fitting thing, see him as he worked. His works instead should be seen.
It is true that Van Gogh more widely known and respected in America as a result of Irving Stone's book. There will not be the same reaction to John Noble's paintings. The life and work of Vincent was by far more dynamic and deeply sensitive than that of John Noble, but after reading this novel, newer appreciation of one of the few American painters who obtained international prominence may be obtained.
Irving Stone has not lost his touch, but seems to have been lacking in material. The extreme quality of urgency which ran through Lust for Life is absent in The Passionate Journey. A reader feels the lack.
Those who are familiar with Irving Stone's work will not hesitate to read The Passionate Journey. Those who are not would do well to read it and then go back to Lust For Life.

Post Liquor Probe Invited by General

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding general of Fort Benning, said this week he would "welcome any investigation" of sales of liquor on the post.

Commenting on statements by Drew Pearson in a syndicated column that the house armed services committee is considering an inquiry into liquor sales by Army and Navy officer clubs, Gen. Burress said:

"If there are any violations of the law, I'm not aware of them. I certainly would welcome any investigation, because just as any person who administers a large community, I realize there may be some violations."

Pearson said that despite an act of Congress, and a 1947 ruling by Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, making sale of liquor taboo in officers' clubs and Army post exchanges, "Darning" officers were selling whisky and advertising such sales in base hall half case lots.

"Everything at Benning," the general said, "is legal and above board."

The Army leader pointed out that several weeks ago police here seized 77 cases of whisky consigned to the post. That action resulted in a favorable ruling from Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook.

"State and federal governments now have ruled," he said, "that an individual on a military installation can order whistles."

False Accusations Made Against GI

Frankfort, Germany (AP)— Investigation has shown that in most cases in which U. S. soldiers stationed in Germany have been accused of "rowdiness" toward German civilians they were not to blame, U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy stated recently.

A number of incidents in which soldiers were blamed, actually were perpetrated by displaced persons wearing stolen U. S. uniforms, U. S. High Commissioner John J. McCloy stated recently.

Department Aids Civilian Component Training

BY MAJ. JOHN BASKIN

Prior to World War II the Infantry School offered little in the way of training material designed especially for use by the civilian army components. They shifted more or less to themselves. The world situation today emphasizes the need for greater standardization and speedier training for all components of the army. A much greater effort is being put forth today, in both time and money, to support the civilian army than ever before in our history. Training material prepared and distributed by the Infantry School this year alone runs into millions of copies. A great many infantry officers with outstanding combat records are assisting in the preparation of the material. The deterioration of the national situation required a speeding up in the training time, so that by Sept. 1, 1948, the national guard embarked on its new, streamlined, three-year training cycle. This new program was designed to coincide with the three-year national guard enlistment. The old six-year training cycle was discarded. To support the Infantry portion of the three-year training program, nearly 300 different subject schedules have been prepared and distributed among every company size army national guard unit. The purposes of these schedules is twofold. First, they are a guide for the uniform training of guardsmen. They facilitate progressive individual and unit training. The enrollment period is the highest degree of skill compatible with the limitations. The schedules cover the subjects considered most vital to combat efficiency. The primary mission is now, as it always has been, to teach men standardization. The subjects to be covered and the amount of time devoted to each is standardized by the schedules. The status of training for similar units will be nearly parallel at all times. Annual inspections are conducted largely by the material covered in the subject schedules.

For the purpose of training, during the three-year program, no unit as a whole is ever considered to be in a specific stage of the training program (year) of the training program. It is to be expected that recruits will be received in varying numbers and at also varying times during the training year. This was taken into consideration. The program and subjects are so arranged that a recruit can commence the cycle at any time and complete the listed subjects a year later. For all intent and purposes, the first year sub-courses are complete within themselves, and are not fundamentally dependent on prior instruction in another sub-course. Individuals are fitted into the training program in accordance with their existing state of training and other previous experience. It is intended that the individual soldier will complete the cycle concurrently with the completion of his initial three-year enlistment.

The Infantry School also prepares subject schedules for use by the ROTC. The purpose of these schedules is to produce junior officers possessing qualities and attributes essential to their progressive and continued development in the officers Reserve Corps of the army of the United States, and in the regular army. The ROTC schedules emphasize training in leadership, with instruction being given in subjects common to all branches of the army and in tactics and technique of infantry. Schedules are available for the ROTC at all schools covering the complete four-year course of instruction.

The Infantry School, working under directives from army field forces, is preparing a staff training program for use by the national guard and Officers Reserve Corps regimental and battalion staffs. The idea of a training program is new and no such program existed prior to this time. The program provides for instruction in staff procedures that embody the war lessons recently learned as well as current developments. It is also designed to prepare NG and ORC Officers for duty in appropriate positions on the staffs of field units.

Included in the staff program are 108 problems carefully selected from among all instructional problems presented in the resident courses.

The material covered in this program is parallel with that presented in the regular and associate courses. However, it is in no way a substitute for school in the regular courses, nor the army extension courses, but actually supplements that training. The problems contained in the program are designed for presentation by a qualified instructor to an assembled group. This program is not designed nor suitable for self study. The extension courses will more nearly fill the needs of an individual officer working without the supervision and guidance of an instructor.

All available information and training aids have been furnished; instructors can, by using a little ingenuity and foresight, prepare charts, diagrams, and other aids which are not furnished.

BENNING SPORTS

by jim cloonan

Now that the football season has officially closed the year 1949 and opened the year 1950 the attention of the sports fans throughout the country turn to the America's most popular sport, basketball.

Here at Benning the cage picture shows two outstanding teams battling it out for the Intra-mural loop crown. Aided by two of the tallest men on the post the Area Service unit five have swept all opponents aside with the exception of the defending champions, the Airborne battalion. The Airborne, on the other hand, has romped to victories in all but one of its games, being upset by the Third Infantry division Special troops. That loss snapped a string of victories that the Airborne had extended over a three-year period and which numbered 78 consecutive wins.

As the second half of the season opens the two top teams appear to be able to fight it out right down to the wire. Their meeting next Thursday should go a long way toward deciding the title. If the Troopers win, it will mark the fourth year in a row that they have annexed the crown. On the other hand, if the ASU quiet wins it may be the warning that from here on in the ASU will be the team to watch in all intra-mural sports.

Elsewhere in the nation the top basketball squads have been to make their bids for national recognition and possible post-season invitations to the better known tournaments.

Little St. John's college in Brooklyn has almost assured itself a bid to the National Invitation tournament in Madison Square Garden following wins over Kentucky, last year's NCAA champion, and San Francisco, winner of last season's National Invitation crown. The Redmen have posted 11 straight wins and boast a squad that is, with one exception, composed of sophomores and juniors.

Kentucky, following its Sugar Bowl win over Bradley, must again be considered a national power despite a loss to St. John's. Little Siena college, from near Albany, N. Y., also seems to be headed into the national spotlight with an unmarred slate.

Niagara college, from Buffalo, N. Y., boasts an eight-and-one record, while the Naval academy claims a record of five wins and one setback. An Alabama team, Auburn, upholds the reputation of the Southland with an undefeated record in six games while Georgia Tech has only one loss to mar its record.

Other top quintets throughout the country are Colorado, Villanova, Holy Cross, Indiana, Syracuse, Tulsa, Wichita, Cornell and Georgetown of Washington, D. C. In addition to those teams C.C.N.Y., Dayton, Minnesota, St. Louis, Washington and Washington State and North Carolina State all have excellent chances to be extended invitations to tourney play.

Among the small teams in the country that have amassed outstanding records are Iona of New Rochelle, N. Y., Waynesburg, Albright, St. Bonaventure, Duquesne; Cincinnati and La Salle of Philadelphia.

All in all, the basketball situation this year appears to be as good if not better than in past years despite the controversy over the new two-minute rule. In all probability the rule will be wiped off the books next season but it shouldn't detract too much from the tournament play which should be the finest and most closely contested action in years.

Before getting off the subject of basketball we would like to mention that many post fans were amazed just before the Christmas holidays to see the once-feared Infantry School detachment quietly forfeit a league game to the Third division artillerymen. It marked the first time on record that the Profs had forfeited a game in any sport, and because of the failure of the Profs to show up for the game, a well-organized league dropped into the sandlot class. Perhaps the ISD team had a good reason for not showing up but the failure to appear for a game which it was expected to lose does not look good on the books.

Jim Russell Quits After Being Sold

Outfielder Jim Russell, part of a three-man player deal between the Boston Braves and the Brooklyn Dodgers, recently said he is through with baseball.

Russell balked at the transaction that sent him and Eddie Sauer to the Dodgers Montreal farm club in the International League. In return, Olmo moved from Brooklyn to Boston. The 30-year-old veteran of eight

Cagers to Resume Intra-Mural Circuit

Bowling, Boxing Continuations Set

Intra-mural sports, dormant since the outset of the holidays, are scheduled to return to the spotlight tonight with a basketball triple-header set for the Main gym. Feature game of the evening will be the Divarty-15th Infantry regiment Dragon battle slated to get under way at 8 p. m.

Also under action on tonight's card will be the Special Troops of the Third division who will square off against the Infantry School detachment in the opening game, and the league-leading Area Service unit which will wind up the evening's play against the hand-cold 30th Infantry regiment.

The Divarty - 15th Infantry game should be a top flight game of the first battle between the two can be taken as any indication. After losing to the 15th Infantry Dragoons in the Third division tourney, the artillerymen in the basketball circuit is not certain, but it is assumed that the units concerned will leave their basketball team as a rear element, in order that the unit may finish competing in the league.

Boxing will take the stage at the Main gym next Friday evening with the ASU expected to continue its romp toward the post crown. Faced by scrappers like Norman Clark, Billy Fitzpatrick and all-army champ Lawrence Jones, the ASU men appear destined to place most of their squad on the post boxing team to be organized following the intra-mural season.

Benning boxers will have a reason to put an extra effort into their training since the Third Army will act as host for the annual all-army boxing tournament from February 19-26.

Bowling also will get back on the sports program next week when 17 teams roll off to open the second half.

The figure starting the second phase represents a drop of 13 teams from the 30 first faced the foul line in the first half. Twelve of the teams have dropped out because the Third division has started to move its men out in preparation for Operation Fortrez.

Breaks Decide Gator Bowl Tilt

The mighty Terrapins of Maryland university came through with flying colors last Monday in the Gator Bowl, as they completely swamped the powerful Missouri Tigers 20-7, principally through capitalizing on three glaring Tiger errors.

Several late Missouri punches were absorbed without harm by the Terrapins as the Bengals either struggled vainly to regain control of the game.

Crowded with 22,000 fans, the Gator Bowl was a scene of bedlam on the Maryland side, as the first two fumbles and finally an intercepted pass resulted in scores of the Terrapins.

By the time Missouri had organized their air ground attacks it was too late. The rampaging Maryland crowd moved their offense under. The Terrapin line hit thunderously all afternoon and made the breaks which the backfield was alert to cash in on.

Missouri's attack was carried out with power and precision in the second half, but completely dominated those 30 minutes, but it somehow failed to produce a touchdown until the fourth period.

The pattern of the game was set in the first period when Missouri's Dick Braznell let loose a wayward pass which Halfback John Isdzik of Maryland gathered in and took to the Tiger 11-yard line.

Once there, Halfback Bob Shemonski scampered around right end to score. Maryland got another gift chance in the second period, Braznell fumbled deep in his own territory, and on the next play the Terrapins' Stan Lavine faked those back to the five-yard line. Ed Motzelewski rammed across for the tally, and Bob Deardoff kicked his second successful extra point of the afternoon.

Tackle Ray Cause pounced on another loose ball on the Missouri 10-yard line in the same period, and Fullback Earl Roth carried it to the six. Lavine plunged to the two, and after a penalty set the Terrapins back to the seven. Shemonski duplicated his end-run scoring play.

Braznell kept plugging away and in the fourth period drove his team 78 yards to the Maryland two, but there the Tigers' momentum died.

Missouri then found itself in a hole on its own end line, but started moving again with the help of two penalties. Phil Klein passed to Tony Poulos at the Missouri 34, then to Dick Armstrong on the Maryland 45. Then Klein, rushed on a pass, ran to the Maryland 31 and passed to John Glorioso on the five. Klein scored the touchdown on a quarterback sneak.

Oklahoma Romps To Easy Victory, Routs Bengals 35-0 In Sugar Bowl

Over 82,000 fans, some saddened, some overjoyed, left the famed Sugar Bowl amphitheater at New Orleans last Monday after seeing a truly inspired Oklahoma gridiron machine surge up and down the field to accumulate a grand total of 35 points in the highest-scoring game in the bowl's history.

The Sooner's climaxed a string of 21 unbeaten contests when they tied the Bayou Bengals scalp to their belts in one of their easiest wins.

Other than a rough defensive first quarter, LSU's T-play was minor league compared to Split T-power and fast break which LSU Bud Wilkinson's flashy Oklahoma Backs Darrell Royal, George Thomas and Lindell Pearson spent leisure moments behind Oklahoma's Wade Walker-but marked line, making unhurried pichouts and handoffs which completely baffled Louisiana.

With such a line as theirs there was no need for the Sooner's to rush. They merely stood firm behind a mighty wall and faked the Tigers out of their shoes.

This was the second consecutive victory for the Sooner's over annual Sugar Bowl crowds.

As well over 80,000, and this one was won with far less effort than last year, when North Carolina fell, 14-6.

This year's smashing Sooner victory leaves LSU with at least the distinction of having played in more Sugar Bowl games than the Bayou Bengals have gone down the Mississippi river to play in New Orleans, and four times they have lost.

Oklahoma used an unexpected passing attack to get LSU off balance and spread apart in the second quarter. Once the Tigers' defense was loosened up, the Sooner's began hurling Pearson, Leon Heath and Thomas to power and fast holes which LSU no longer could plug.

The Sooner's kickoff on his own five, after which Thomas plunged over off his own tackle. The Sooner's missed two other scoring chances. One time LSU stopped an Oklahoma drive on its one-foot line in the second to Thomas forward attempt.

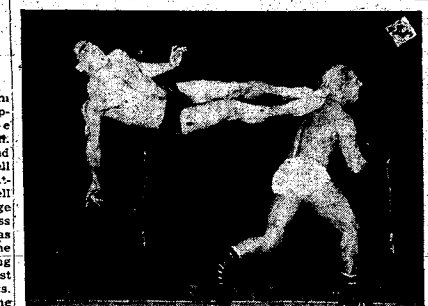

A third Oklahoma drive was climaxed by Leon Heath when he gathered in the leather to traverse 86 yards of the field for another Sooner score.

LSU found a little to shout about on a magnificent 31-yard ruckback of an intercepted pass by Ken Konz, substitute fullback. However, even with that LSU was still buried far in its own territory.

Coach Wilkinson poured substitutes into the game, but the scoring torrent continued even with Sooner reserves.

In the final quarter Royal let go and absorbed a little glory with a five-yard touchdown smash via the quarterback sneak.

Carroll Griffith began throwing last minute passes for LSU and one of them managed to find its way into the arms of Center Bert Clark of Oklahoma. From there Heath plunged through to score again.

Buckeyes Win Rose Bowl On Last Minute Field Goal

Ohio State scored a field goal in the final two minutes of a bitterly fought battle in the Rose Bowl to defeat a gallant California team, 17 to 14, and once again the banners of the Big Ten triumphed over the Coast Conference.

Right End Jim Hogue, whose place kick against Michigan brought Ohio State to its 30th annual classic, brought the Buckeyes safely through it. There was one minute and 55 seconds remaining in the struggle, the score was tied at 14-14, and a record crowd of 100,983 onlookers sat in breathless silence as Ohio State got ready for its last chance to win the game.

Hague, a senior from Rocky River, Ohio, stepped calmly into it. The ball sailed through, it was good and crashing down came the dreams of the Golden Bears for victory in this fourth period thrust by the coast against the powerful eleven of the Ten.

It was the first time in this day of all bowl games that it has been decided by a field goal.

California scored first, in the second quarter, and held a 7-0 lead at the half. The Buckeyes, robbed or robbing themselves in no less than four scoring threats in the first half, cashed in on two breaks and went ahead momentarily, 14-7, in the third quarter.

California exploded immediately, tied the count and the two eleven, the pride of the coast, tied the game, 14-14, in the west, rocked on into the fourth and final quarter.

This dramatic outcome, with time running out, was an even sadder blow to the Golden Bears, because just a year ago Northwestern scored a winning touchdown in the final four minutes of a contest just as close as this.

Hague was the winning hero. He shared honors with his mates on the backfield, fullback Fred (Curly) Morrison, the big ground gainer of the day, who scored

Santa Clara Wins Bowl Game, 21-13

Santa Clara's team of 60-minute men solved the best collegiate football defense in the nation last Monday to keep the Bronco's bowl record unblemished with a 21-13 Orange Bowl victory over the Kentucky Wildcats.

A record crowd of 64,816 fans watched the westerners outscore and outfight the pride of the blue grass in gusty weather that included occasional light rain.

Badly outplayed in the first half, Santa Clara's line which has operated as a unit for four years ripped open the big Kentucky forward wall in the final 30 minutes.

It gave Bronco Quarterback Johnny Pasco the protection he needed to set two third-period touchdowns good for the California Mission College's third bowl victory in as many tries.

A six-point underdog at game time, Santa Clara lived up to the prediction by its Coach Len Cassano, that the two haven't elected 3,000 miles to lose a football game.

The Broncos clinched victory in the final period as big Bernie Vogel ran over Kentucky's star left tackle, Bob Gain, for 13 yards and a touchdown.

Santa Clara's tireless linemen slaved off a Kentucky scoring thrust on the one-foot line as the final ended with the Broncos trailing by seven points.

Pasco found End Larry Williams in the clear in the third period for a 50-yard pass play that carried to the Kentucky 11.

There the teams exchanged fumbles. Santa Clara lost the ball on the Kentucky six and recovered a play later on the 12. Gus Hakeem bulled six yards through the line for a first down on the Kentucky two.

Pasco sneaked over with the living touchdown three plays later, but the two haven't elected 3,000 miles to lose a football game.

Pasco found the mark a few minutes later to give Santa Clara a lead it never relinquished. The slender Chicago quarterback hit End Dick Wilson with a 25-yard loss to the 17-yard line. Pasco ran to the seven but Santa Clara was put back to the 15 on a personal foul.

Then Kentucky was penalized to its four for roughing Pasco. Hall Hoyer banged through tackle from the two for the tie score.

The maddened Wildcats pounded right back to tie the game on the passing arm of their great quarterback, Vito (Babe) Parrilli.

The lanky sophomore threw the ball 43 yards in the air to fullback Emery Clark who had slipped behind the Santa Clara secondary. Clark ran over from the Santa Clara 14 yard line to complete the 53-yard scoring play. But the try for the tying point was bad.

Bombers Rip Red Terrors For Peanut Bowl Honors

Faced by the pin-point passing of Quarterback Larry Morris and the pile-driving running of Fullback John Cavanaugh, the Westfield Mass. Bombers overcame a two-touchdown deficit to win a thrilling 29-20 victory over Glyn Academy of Brunswick, Ga., in the fourth annual Peanut Bowl clash in Columbus Memorial stadium last Saturday afternoon.

A crowd of 8,000 saw the classic game in the history of the Red Terrors, AA champions of South Georgia, and runner-up for the state crown, grabbed an early lead in the first period, but then stalled and yielded to Westfield's whirlwind finish. Glyn scored again late in the fourth period, but time ran out before they could regain the ball.

John Cavanaugh, 165 lb. junior fullback led the winning attack with three touchdowns, all on short plunges. His one-yard smash ended a 23-yard push in the second quarter; his eight-yard romp in the same session capped a 32-yard march, and another one-yard plunge at the finish of 45-yard drive in the final quarter wrapped up the scoring. In between Cavanaugh's damage, quarterback Larry Morris threw a 24-yard scoring pass to end Leonard Warner.

Sonny George was the star in defeat for the Red Terrors. His 38-yard drive to Lee Owens in the first quarter set the stage for Glyn's first score at the one, from where Owens crashed over.

Recovering from the two Glyn touchdowns shock the back from the Bay State record back to score twice in the second period, quarterback Bill Brigham of Glyn, fumbled attempting a pass and Vin Ciancotti recovered at the Terrors' 28. Using trap plays exclusively, the Bombers covered the distance in four plays. John Higgins went for 8 and 5. Joe Walbank for 5 and John Cavanaugh drove through left guard and cut back to score standing up.

After Baldyga had added the point from placement, the Bombers trailed by 7-14.

Two minutes later, end Leonard Warner intercepted Brigham's pass at the 41 and brought it back to the 32. Cavanaugh made eight at tackle to the 24. Morris then stepped back and lofted a 24-yard toss into the arms of Warner in the end zone. Warner was behind the safety man, and made an over-the-shoulder catch. George came through to block Baldyga's scoring try, allowing Glyn to stay in front 14-13 at the half.

Westfield finally grabbed the lead in the third period. After Glyn had marched from his own 27 to the Bombers' 34 on a wide assortment of trick plays, Morris broke it up by intercepting George's pass at the 8 and winning it back 27 yards to the 33. After Eddie McLean had spoiled Cavanaugh for a yard loss, Morris connected with Bartnicki for 41 yards and a first down at the Glyn 27. Cavanaugh took over from there, ripping off gains of two, 14, eight, two and one, the last yard for a touchdown. Baldyga passed to Morrissy for the extra point and Westfield was the leader after 5:50 of the quarter at 10-14.

Owl Backs Blast Tarheels In Cotton Bowl, Win 27-13

Rice Institute's great wealth of yards, Burkhalter topped the backs, working behind a massive line, ground out four touchdowns in the first three periods of the Cotton Bowl in Dallas last Monday, then fought off a determined North Carolina counter-attack in the final quarter to win the 14th annual classic, 27-13.

For better than three quarters, the massive Rice line battered and bruised the Tarheels. Tobin Rote unfurled a slingshot arm and sophomore Billy Burkhalter ran North Carolina ragged.

Precision blocking and wizard ball-handling had the Tarheels on the ropes. But as the shadow of the Cotton Bowl lengthened, the Tarheels pulled his Tar Heel mates together for a grand finish that had the crowd of 75,347 screaming.

North Carolina got two touchdowns in eight minutes on the running of battering Billy Hayes and the running and passing of Justice. Until that last period, the Tar Heels had gotten further than the Rice 37-yard line.

Burkhalter's driving, twisting runs brought two touchdowns, helped set up another and spearheaded a fourth.

The Rice ground game smashed out 226 yards while passing was limited to 152. The 38 yards made by the Owls was one of the most terrific offenses ever to show in the Cotton Bowl. North Carolina made 254 yards—174 of them on the ground.

Hayes was the game's leading ground gainer with 107 yards. Burkhalter topped the Rice attack with 74. In passing, Rote completed nine out of 17 for 140 yards and two touchdowns. Justice connected on seven in 14 tries for 83 yards and one score.

James (Froggy) Williams, Rice's All-American end was the top lineman of the game. Williams caught four passes for 53 yards, one for a touchdown. Rice's victory today kept the Owls unbeaten in bowl games and they have played in three Cottons on the other hand, stayed winless in bowl play. The Tarheels have been in three of the post-season classics in four years and lost them all.

Rice got a two quick touchdowns in the second period. The first was on a 58-yard drive in which Burkhalter, Gordon Wyatt and Bobby Lantrip hammered to the Tar Heel 40. Rote passed to Wyatt on the 27 but a penalty set Rice back. However, Rote passed to Burkhalter on the 38 and he ran to a touchdown.

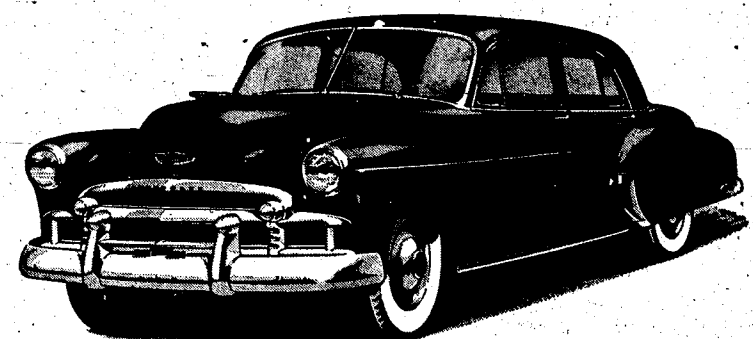

As soon as Rice got the ball again it scored, this time on a 58-yard march. A 15-yard dash by Burkhalter that put the ball on the seven set up the touchdown. Rex Frazier hammered tackle for three, then Lantrip crashed over. Williams again kicked the extra point.

The closest the Tarheels could get to the Rice goal line in the first half was the Owl 38. Rice whammed 77 yards midway of the third period for its next touchdown. Burkhalter and Lantrip battered the Tarheel line and Rote tossed two passes.

Tour Conducted By 30th Infantry

Nearly 350 recently assigned enlisted men of the 30th Infantry Regiment were introduced to their new station and neighboring communities last week via the regiment's tour.

The men toured the Infantry Center in two groups, led by Lt. Robert S. Roberts, regimental special services officer. Lieutenant Roberts gave a running commentary on the main points of interest.

Having been shown the main installations on post, the new arrivals proceeded to Columbus, where the convoys were met by officials of the Chamber of Commerce and Armed Forces YMCA.

After a brief orientation on the history of Columbus in relation to the Fort Benning soldier, the new men of the 30th had a look at various sections of the community.

Concluding the tour of Columbus, the men visited the Armed Forces YMCA at the USMC where they were acquainted with the services offered by these organizations and given an opportunity to inspect the recreational facilities available.

Prior to returning to their unit, the men and their refreshments at both clubs.

Epic War Film Will Be Shown Here 5 Times

The long awaited film "Battleground" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's epic production of one of the most famous moments in the history of World War I, the siege and relief of Bastogne, Belgium, by the 101st Airborne division is scheduled to appear five times at Fort Benning theaters next week.

"Battleground" will be shown at Theaters No. 1 and 2 Sunday and Monday, Jan. 8 and 9. Theaters No. 6 and 7, Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 10 and 11, and Theaters No. 3 and 11, Thursday, Jan. 12.

The film stars Van Johnson, John Hodiak and George Murphy.

A story of the Battle of the Bulge, it concentrates on one squad of the 101st Airborne, which was enveloped near Bastogne by the surprise Nazi breakthrough of December, 1944. The actors were toughened up for their roles by two weeks' basic training.

Robert Pirosh, who wrote the script, was actually at the scene of the battle.

The film is reputed to be the best war study since "The Story of G. I. Joe" and "The Story of the 101st Airborne."

Navy May Ban Use of Pinups

WASHINGTON, (APFS)—The use of pin-up girl pictures and other non-military material in navy publications financed by appropriated funds is being questioned by the government's general accounting office.

The G.A.O. recently stated in a letter published in the navy department Bulletin that regulations specify that all material appearing in navy publications financed by Congressional appropriations must have a direct or indirect bearing on navy affairs.

According to this regulation, as clarified by the Navy, all material not of direct or immediate concern with the navy's program would be barred. This would include such matter as "gossip" and similar columns, editorials having no bearing on naval affairs, and other irrelevant material.

Heretofore, most ship and station newspapers have obtained operating funds from ships' exchange stores profits and so are not affected by the G.A.O. complaints.

T.I.C. TALKS

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: DO YOU LIKE BLACK-EYED PEAS? WOULD YOU EAT THEM IF THEY ARMED PUT THEM ON THE MENU?

PFC. GEORGE P. PURDY, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit; I don't like peas, but if they were prepared right and I was very hungry, I'd eat them. I'd eat almost anything if I were hungry enough.

PVT. ALBERT EVERETT, Headquarters company, 7th Infantry division; Yes, I like peas. I guess I'd eat them if the army put them on the menu. I don't see why the army doesn't substitute them for asparagus.

PFC. CHARLES MCCLARY, Company F, 15th Infantry Regiment; Well, I like peas although I never before I came down here about 11 months ago. In fact, I had black-eyed peas for Christmas dinner and I sure would eat them if the army put them on the menu.

SGT. EDWARD F. WILLIAMS, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit; I like peas, but then I'm a country boy and am used to eating them. Of course I would eat them if the army put them on the menu, but I don't know about some of these fellows who have never tasted them. I don't much believe they will eat them.

PFC. GARY C. COGDILL, Third division band; I like them, but I don't know of course the thing that bothers me is how they are cooked. Peas have to be cooked just right before they are any good, and I can't say that I'd like eating peas that were half cooked.

SGT. JOHN M. PATTERSON, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Airborne battalion; I like black-eyed peas and I'd eat them, but I don't know if everybody else does. They are just like anything else. If they aren't well cooked, they are not fit to eat. I wonder if they don't have enough beans in the army without bringing in peas. I suggest they try them out, and let the food service take care of it.

Although television sets of direct view type put the picture on the flat end of a cone shaped tube, it still is called a "screen."

Early Dividend Mailing Set

First Checks to Be Posted in Washington on Jan. 16

The first National Service Life Insurance dividend checks will be mailed from Washington, Jan. 16, Veterans Administrator Carl B. Cray said this week.

He said some 200,000 checks will be mailed daily and all shall be sent by June 30.

Cray made the announcement after a telephone conversation with Treasury Department officials in Washington.

The announcement was made as Cray conferred with officials and students of the University of Houston.

Earlier this week Gray had urged this week Gray had

Your Red Cross ARC Views Year's Role

By CHARLES F. PARKER We should like to make our New Year's wish for a world at peace and an organization of good health and happiness. We also want our country prepared for our own well being and to be a good example for the best of all people with whom we have association.

General Marshall, who is now chairman of your Red Cross, has expressed the wish that we as an organization of mercy be prepared, but at the same time a hope that great calamities will not arise. This thought we pass on to you, knowing, of course, that in the come and going living unfortunate situations do arise.

Illness, domestic troubles, business upsets, death, floods, tornadoes, etc., are a part of our social and cosmic economy. They just come at times without any reason on our part.

Your Red Cross does not pretend to be a panacea for all the ills, but it is an organization of mercy composed of people who are interested in helping those to whom the "ill Winds" of misfortune have blown destitution and hardship.

In the year that lies ahead there will no doubt be disasters and fires and there will be people who desperately need blood; people will need first aid and water and training; illness and death in families will necessitate help on emergency cases. Patients in army hospitals will need recreation and welfare service. We could do much for the patients in need which your Red Cross helps to alleviate. It is a big program. It belongs to all of us. Its successful operation depends on thousands of Americans, who will give a part of their money, their blood, their time and their interest.

Term 'Hoosier' Began in 1826

INDIANAPOLIS (APFS)—If any of you servicemen from Indiana ever have wondered how long your state has been termed "Hoosier," the Indiana Historical Bureau now is ready to provide the answer.

The bureau reported discovery recently of a letter from James Curtis from Oregon, Holt county, Mo., to his uncle Joseph Beiler of Indianapolis. The letter, written in 1826, was dated February 20, 1826.

"The Indiana hoosiers that came out last fall is settled 2 to 4 miles from us," Curtis wrote his uncle.

Until now the Indiana state library had considered the earliest use of the word was by a schoolmaster in Black Creek Fountain county, Ind., back in 1827. In his journal the schoolmaster had inscribed:

"There is a Yankee trick for you—done up by a Hoosier." The entry was dated July 14, 1827.

Chemical control of weeds has been found cheaper than hand-cutting by the Rural Electrification Administration.

said the checks would start going into the mail "after the first of the year."

It has been estimated that some $2,800,000,000 will be paid in dividends to some 16,000,000 policy holders.

Gray said receipt of the checks will depend on the last three digits of policy holders' military serial numbers.

The treasury is going to make a test run next week to see how fast it can turn out checks for the $2,800,000,000 GI life insurance dividend.

But the Veterans Administration re-emphasized that the first dividend checks are not to go out to veterans until sometime in mid-January.

The Treasury's test run, probably next Tuesday, is to determine whether it can turn out checks at the rate of 200,000 a day, 1,000,000 a week. That's the goal.

The Treasury also disclosed that veterans receiving checks will be urged to invest them in government bonds.

Each check will bear across the bottom the printed line that was used on all government pay checks during the war, "use for the good of VA."

For this reason, the official said, VA has been holding back until it has enough completed vouchers on hand to maintain a 200,000-a-day rate for a considerable period.

About 14,500,000 World War II veterans already have applied for the dividend. An additional 1,750,000 have not done so, and can not receive the payments until they apply.

The maximum check any veteran can receive in the special dividend is $250.

Ex-GI Eyes 18th Birthday After 4-Year Army Tour

"Right face! Forward march!" The squad moves off and the squad leader, Cpl. Richard Rigglesman, now Mr. Rigglesman, might have turned, winked and whispered "I'm only sixteen, but these guys don't know it."

Rigglesman, recently discharged here at Benning, spent a four year tour in the army. Richard came home today, talking of four years, three of them in Germany, in the army. And he still isn't 18 years old.

Rigglesman said he enlisted in Maryland Nov. 21, 1945. He was 13 years old then. But nobody questioned him when he said he was 17 and he was sent to Fort Meade for processing.

Assigned to the Second Cavalry regiment, Rigglesman said he spent the next three years in Germany. He even signed up for another year while there, saying "I kinda got the idea the army was the best thing in the world when he was bossing around a squad at Fort Benning. He was discharged at Benning and "now that I'm out I hope to stay out."

TO COMPRISE NEW HOUSING PROJECT . . . Buildings like the ones shown in these architect's drawings will make up the new 100-unit Custer Road Terrace housing project, which will begin unit-type apartments, while the bottom drawing depicts one of the single-family units, being constructed by the Jordan Contracting company of Columbus, will range from $70 to $85.

Building

houses with car ports will rent for $85 per month, while 60 single-family three-bedroom houses with car ports will cost the tenant $95 per month.
All buildings in the project, including the one which will house the community shopping center, will have brick veneer exteriors. All downstairs apartments will have asphalt tile floors, while the upstairs units will provide the roofing for all structures.

The multiple-apartment buildings of the project will be arranged in the most modern court style with the service facilities and parking areas facing the road and the master bedroom, kitchen and living room facing the landscaped lawn on the away-from-the-road side.
As the result of a recent survey of army housewives in new developments on and near the Fort Benning reservation, many features not included in other projects in the vicinity are being incorporated into the Custer Road Terrace blueprints.
All rooms in the Custer Terrace development, Infantry Center housing officials pointed out, will be substantially larger than those in other similar projects.

Kitchens and bathrooms of the new apartments will be completely furnished, and their location within the unit will be according to the most up-to-date specifications for apartment arrangements.
One of the top features of each kitchen will be an electric garbage disposal unit. Stainless steel sinks, full-sized stoves, excellent shelving and work space and an adequately-sized refrigerator also will be features of each kitchen.
Underground trash disposal cans, screened by a brick wall, will be placed outside each kitchen, and trash collection will be made by post units.
Ample storage and closet space will be provided with outlets for washing machines and other electrical appliances.
Each apartment, it was pointed out, will be heated by thermostatically-controlled gas heaters.
Telephone service, one of the present complaints of tenants of the nearby Battle Park Homes project, also will be made available soon, Infantry Center officials said that the Southern Bell Telephone company of Columbus has agreed to lay a trunk line that will make available one telephone line to the 800 families of the Battle Park Center Road Terrace area.
Officials here will have to pay about $1 a month for utilities. This estimate, however, does not include telephone service.
The community building, which is to be centrally located, will house a grocery store, a drug store, an automobile gas and service station, a barber and beauty shop and a self-service laundry.
Fenced-in playgrounds with toilet facilities will be scattered throughout the area.
In addition to two roads leading from Custer road to the project and one connecting it with Battle Park homes, all streets inside the limits of the development will be hard-surfaced.
The entire area, it was stated, will be "beautifully landscaped."
Housing authorities here said that the new project will tend to be available to a larger number of non-coms more adequate housing in the post-Columbus area. They also, however, said no information is available regarding personnel to occupy the new buildings.

First C-GS School Phase Opens Here

Brig. Gen. George H. Weems, commander of the Georgia Military district, opened the first session of the newly organized special associate course, command and general staff, Monday with an address to over 100 field grade reserve officers of national guard and organized reserve corps units.

In his address he called the new course the result of planning by the Department of the Army to bring to reserve officers "resident instruction." In the past, he said, reserve officers on inactive duty found it difficult to attend classes at military installations because of the distance and time taken from jobs.

"We established this course at Fort Benning for members of the Army to bring to reserve officers to supplement the army extension courses available," General Weems said. "The course will consist of 165 extension course hours and six weeks of progress. The instruction presented in three two-week periods approximately one hour apart. Each two week period will have 10 days of classroom instruction of approximately seven hours per day. These hours of the classroom hours will be 216. Evening or off-duty study hours will be required in the approximate ratio of 40 minutes for each one hour of residential classroom instruction. The purpose of the course is to prepare qualified officers for duty in general staff positions at division level and duty as division commanders.

The course is planned to provide instruction in effective development and employment of the infantry division and effective personnel, intelligence and logistical support for the division. The instruction will be given in the light of lessons learned from World War II developments. The instruction will include classes in organization, equipment and tactical units comprising the division. The course also includes instruction in tactical employment of infantry, armored and airborne divisions and their personnel, intelligence and logistical support air support of the division, the infantry division in special operations to include attack of a fortified position, night attack, river crossing and amphibious, arctic and mountain operations.

SOLDIER-OF-THE-WEEK

Devotes Holiday Vacation To Essential Processing

Sgt. James A. Culberson, Service company, 15th Infantry regiment, whose job entailed working full time and at top efficiency over the recent holidays has been named this week's Soldier of the Week.

While Fort Benning personnel were on the long holiday, Sergeant Culberson was faced with the responsibility of processing over 200 Third Infantry division enlisted men due for discharge and over 300 new replacements. At a sacrifice of his off-duty time, Sergeant Culberson, sergeant major of the regiment's personnel section, set his teeth and went at the job. He was personally responsible for the discharge processing of the 200 men and the new replacements. The incoming men, then in the Third Replacement company, had to be oriented, assigned and billeted. Working between his section and the replacement company he integrated the new arrivals into the division. Officials of the 15th Infantry attribute the good job done to the high morale which Sergeant Culberson's leadership inspired in the enlisted men working for him.

Sgt. JAMES A. CULBERSON . . . Soldier of the Week

He recently received the Third division certificate of achievement for meritorious performance of duty as personnel section sergeant major. Sergeant Culberson has been at Fort Benning since April, 1947. A native of Anderson, S.C., he makes his home in Columbus.

A veteran of seven years service and a career soldier, during World War II he fought with the 22nd Infantry regiment, Second Infantry division in France and Germany.

His decorations include the Purple Heart, Bronze Star and Combat Infantryman's badge.

Vehicle License Sign-Up Begins

Registration for 1950 Fort Benning licenses began Jan. 1 and will continue until the deadline, Feb. 28.

The procedure for registration is the same as last year except that personnel must now present a check-slip, certifying their vehicles have passed the mechanical inspection checkup, to the provost marshal's office before the 1950 registration sticker can be issued. Provost marshal officials said that the sticker will be issued to a vehicle upon payment of 10 cents for a set of two. The stickers will be applied to the windshield of the vehicles in the provost parking lot by authorized personnel. Total cost for registration this year is 35 cents, 25 cents for the mechanical inspection and 10 cents for the stickers.

Library No. 3 To Close Soon

Branch library No. 3 in the Sand hill area will close Jan. 20 and remain closed until the Third Infantry division returns from "Operation Forthright" special services officials announced this week. Library No. 2 in Sand hill will remain open during the period of the operation.

Minstrel Troupe to Make Appearances in February

An old time minstrel show, sponsored by Infantry Center special services, is scheduled to open at Fort Benning theaters early next month. The show, made up of comedy, musical, and dance teams from Fort Benning personnel, has been in rehearsal since December.

Directors of the show said this week that until Jan. 15, when Benning servicemen who has an act which would fit into a variety minstrel show can be auditioned by applying to Infantry Center special services.

The cast of the show includes both Infantry Center and Third Infantry division personnel as well as civilian dependents of servicemen.
Music for the production will be supplied by the 196th Army band.
The musical will be the first of its type to be produced here since the end of the war.
Directed by Sgt. Jesse Owens of the special services section, the cast includes Lt. Arthur Anson, special services; Sgt. Earl Douglas Bent, special services; Sergeant Owens; Cpl. Joe Robinson, special services; Sgt. Frederick A. Arnold, 514th Medical Clearing company; Sgt. Gordon Thompson, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 10th Engineer Combat battalion; Pvt. Theodore Rescigno, 1st Company, 15th Infantry regiment; Pvt. Roger V. Joubert, Company H, 15th Infantry regiment; Pvt. Sylvester J. Gaskin, Company K, 15th Infantry regiment; Pvt. Otis Copeland, 15th Infantry regiment, and Cpl. Willis Brown, special services.

Blood Donors
In the Atlanta region of the American Red Cross, the Fort Benning chapter topped all others in blood donations for the first nine months of 1949.

Fort Benning personnel contributed 120 per cent of their set quota, with their nearest competitor, the Atlanta General Depot, Ga., contributing slightly over 90 per cent of its quota.
The blood donated in the Atlanta region was distributed to hospitals within the Third Army area, where it was used for nearly 400 transfusions.
The Red Cross bloodmobile made periodic visits to Fort Benning during 1949 and each Third Infantry division units donated more than their set quotas.

Sergeant Cited by Col. Moore

M-Sgt. Charles H. Patrick, Company K, 15th Infantry regiment, last week received a letter of commendation from Col. Dennis M. Moore, regimental commander, for his "exemplary" performance of duty as an assistant instructor in the noncommissioned officers' instructors training course.
The commendation reads in part as follows:
"You efficient and enthusiastic participation in the program required the highest standard of conduct and ability and resulted in a gratifying response from each class and contributed materially to the increased efficiency in the training of our regiment."
"Your example of ability is indicative of the high standards we have set for all personnel of this regiment and reflects great credit upon yourself and your organization."

A move was initiated this week by Maj. Edward N. Hathaway, S-3 of the 15th Infantry regiment, to form a Fort Benning chapter. One of the primary goals of the Benning chapter, Major Hathaway said, will be to recruit members for the National Ski association, of which the division is a member.
All officers and enlisted men who formerly served with the division, which is now stationed at Camp Carson, Colo., are eligible for membership in the society, and may obtain information by contacting Major Hathaway at telephone extension 4-1111 or 4-4265.

The letter was endorsed by Lt. Col. William J. McCaffrey, Third Battalion commander, and Capt. Clement A. Smyth, commander of Company K.

Publicity Is Our Greatest Asset

The army belongs to the people. It's a member of their team for security. The army's chief responsibility is to the people. The chief job of the army's public information program is to let the people know how this team member operates and what it is doing.

Our responsibility is to keep the public informed. When a soldier is enrolled in the Infantry school or assigned to the Third Infantry division, his family wants to know what his life is like. How's his food? How does he sleep? How long does he work? What's he doing? Is the army taking care of him? Can he go to church services in the field? That family will want to know and is entitled to know. That's part of Public Information's job.

Public Information also has a responsibility to our troops. We must keep them informed of what's going on in their army. We must interpret policies for them; answer rumors, with facts; keep them abreast of our newest weapons and equipment.

Public Information does not attempt to form public opinion. This is contrary to democratically established policy. However, it is being more and more recognized that for sound government and military policies to grow out of democratic thinking and action, public opinion must be informed. And in thus serving the people to the utmost limits of national security, we serve the army—and vice versa.

What's all this leading up to? Just this. As the Infantry Center of the United States—home of the Infantry School, an internationally known institution, and the war-famed Third Division—everything we do here is news—news to which the public is entitled.

Here's what we think publicity will do for the Infantry Center and its units:

- 1—Build good will.
- 2—Help gain public support.
- 3—Add to our reputation.
- 4—Help interpret the Infantry Center in Columbus and Phenix City.
- 5—Help educate the general public.
- 6—Build morale in the units themselves.

Like rifles, words are weapons. They can be shot out to overcome negative public opinion about the Infantry Center and the army.

All soldiers, for better or for worse, are engaged in public relations. Public relations is everyone's job. The holds true from the top ranking general down to the youthful recruit. The alert company commander, to insure his unit receiving the recognition it deserves, has a FULL-TIME public information non commissioned officer or enlisted man. This man will ferret out information about his unit and its men. These stories can appear in The Bayonet, The Benning Herald, Columbus papers and the soldier's hometown newspaper. Names make news. A soldier's name in print in his hometown newspaper can work wonders for the unit's morale.

It's obvious the Infantry Center public information office can't cover adequately all the units on this huge post. Company commanders should start an aggressive public information campaign aimed at one thing—to publicize his unit and the men who make up that unit.

We strongly believe that there is no substitute for genuine news of feature articles that will aid newspaper editors or enlighten their readers.

Unit commanders are encouraged and urged to be on the lookout for picture possibilities which will show the army in a favorable light. Pictures of the unusual are desired. (Dining halls generally do NOT fall into this category.)

To the commander who complains of lack of qualified personnel, we give this tip. The best school anywhere for training potential public information personnel is the Armed Forces Information School at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. Its six weeks' course (14 weeks for officers) is superior in planning, curriculum and results. If the student learns nothing more than the correct way to prepare a hometown news release (there is an approved way that will guarantee its being printed and not tossed into the editor's wastebasket) it will have been time well spent.

Yes, public information (or relations, if you want to call it that) is everyone's job. If we are to gain public support for the army, the public must know and understand what we are doing. We must serve that public or we have no public.

Truman Says 1951 Business Outlook Is Good

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — President Truman has submitted his budget for 1951. It calls for spending $5 billion more than the government will take in. In the State of the Union message he said the business and employment outlook for the year was good. . . . Any help for Formosa and the Chinese Nationalists from the United States looks like it's a long way off, a reversal of a policy announced last week. . . . Bills before the Bist. Congress which convened last week include extension of the draft, federal aid to education, civil rights, and the displaced persons bill. Also due for the headlines again will be a congressional fight for the repeal of the Taft-Hartley act. . . . Social security payments were raised from one to one and one-half per cent last week. . . . At the Judith Coplon spy trial the government was still having a hard time trying to prove its case was not built on wire-tapping evidence. The case against Alger Hiss is getting tighter, but Hiss still admits nothing. . . . The New York Central railroad which had been blasting unwanted commercials at helpless users of Grand Central station gave it up this week when the people revolted at being forced to listen to advertising. INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS — Britain and Yugoslavia signed a five-year mutual trade agreement last week. The Yugoslavs have also concluded a one-year trade agreement with Western Germany. . . . The Chinese Reds have been recognized as the official government of China by many non-Communist nations. . . . Something out of an Arabian nights tale is happening in Egypt. King Farouk spotted a beautiful girl. She was already betrothed, but the king fixed that up. There are no real facts, censoring has clamped down, but it appears much like Farouk has done what most Americans wish they could do. . . . Hungary's government nationalized nearly all privately owned - business this week. Some U. S. - owned industries were included. . . . Dictator Juan Peron of Argentina is at it again. This time he's after the few newspapers which still oppose him. . . . A comic book called the Playmate has been issued in Japan. . . . The flying saucer rumors which sprouted again recently, supposedly coming from another planet, were scotched again by the army and air force. Theories still make interesting reading, though.

AWOL EM Won't Lose Family Allowances
By ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
In further clarification of the Career Compensation Act, the armed services have revoked orders depriving personnel AWOL for more than 24 hours of protection under the "saved pay" clause of the act in simultaneous action, the services ruled that being in non-pay status for one day or more would not deprive individuals of family allowance or other pay covered by the saving clause.

The Human Soul Is the Greatest Marvel of All
By CHAPLAIN DAVID M. REARDON
There are three great marvels which astonish the minds of men. The three wonders are so great that many of us pause in contrite humility with the wish to comprehend the mystery which surrounds them. What are these wonders? The one is the marvel of the starry universe. In ancient days travelers established a course of direction according to the stars overhead. The study of the Heavens has given scholarly people a perspective of place of the earth in the family of planets. At Christmas time, young and old alike are moved with awe when the story of the Divine coincidence is told. Of wisdom seeing a Star at night which guided them to the birth place of the Son of God. Surely the marvel of the starry universe humbles the wisest of men.

A second wonder is the marvel of the moral law. Indeed history is recurrent with crises after crises in which the voice of God is heard and then posterity inherits it as a written record for use in Faith and Practice. We humans without the law of God are individual battle grounds in which the conscience seeks to rule the desires of our humanity. This is characteristic of the phase of human thought before Mt. Sinai and the giving of the Ten Commandments to Moses. Since that day the Jewish - Christian world rejoices in the knowledge that law makers have responded to the Divine imperative and have incorporated into standard laws of many social groups the Commandments of God. Surely the moral law is a marvel to behold. It is the spoken Word of placed on the next monthly report as qualified for foreign service. Normal requests through channels for withdrawal from commitment still may be submitted prior to issuance of orders. Numerous withdrawals and attempts to withdraw after issuance of orders made the policy necessary.

So far as possible, all regular armed forces officers in the future will be assigned to tours of at least two years of duty with civilian components. The policy has been adopted to further the readiness for integration of reserve forces in event of national emergency.

Short-term exchanges of officer and enlisted personnel has been authorized between the U. S. and British occupation forces in the European Command. Exchange personnel will come from infantry, artillery, tank, engineering and Signal corps outfits.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

BACKFIRE with Edmond O'Brien, Viveca Lindfors and Virginia Mayo. Suspicious about his friend's disappearance, while facing a murder charge, a war veteran undertakes to locate his friend, and trap the real murderer. Mature.

TWELVE O'CLOCK HIGH with Gregory Peck, Hugh Marlowe and Dean Jagger. This is tense entertainment, packing a terrific punch in its well-balanced presentation of the strain of battle on their commanding officers, of the conflict between duty and compassion, of the screech of burning planes dropping earthward, and, above all, of individual loyalty and courage. Family.

THE BLOND BANDIT with Robert Rockwell and Dorothy Patrick. In exchange for leniency in connection with a frame-up robbery charge, a girl aids the police in bringing a slick criminal to trial. Family.

STORM OVER WYOMING with Tim Holt and Richard Martin. Law and order receive the full cooperation of Holt and Rafferty when they land in the middle of a range scrap. Family.

ALL THE KING'S MEN with Broderick Crawford, Joanne Dru and John Ireland. The rise of a backwoods lawyer from obscurity to political power by means of his spellbinding speeches and political chicanery is given graphic treatment in this well acted drama. Mature.

THE MAN ON THE EIFFEL TOWER with Charles Laughton, Franchot Tone and Burgess Meredith. A wise police inspector, playing a cat and mouse game with a murder suspect, pursues his quarry about the city of Paris, waiting for the inevitable mis-step that will send the murderer to the guillotine. Family.

On The Bookshelf

Parnassus on Wheels and The Haunted Bookshop by Christopher Morley

Greenet and Dunlap, New York, Publishers

BY D. W. SCHAFFER

Like Minneapolis and St. Paul these two books by this famous Philadelphia writer and bookman go together. Entertainment at its best for those who like books and even for the casual reader, an enjoyable different diet, these twin stars in the literary heaven have long laid fallow on the shelves of the Main library.

Although written and published all of 25 years ago, the two books can still vie with the best and surpass the usual of present day writing.

The first volume read should be Parnassus on Wheels, a fabulous tale of a traveling bookshop, with its own Roger Mifflin, poet, booklover and man of action extraordinary; Peg, the horse, and Book, the dog (short for Boccaccio). How Roger meets Helen McGill, fortyish, spinster sister of a man who became famous through his writings of country life and in unparalleled cook, how she buys the Parnassus and Roger sets off to Brooklyn, and how the two meet again and through comic adversity fall in love. Thus begins the fabulous adventures of these two living between the walls of bookshelves and the importunings of a fate filled with laughter and sage sayings.

The second half of this pair carries Helen and Roger through the comedy of life again thumbing their nose at the world and in their own way having a wonderful time. Like all good novelists, Christopher Morley never loses the love interest.

In the Haunted Bookshop the winning of the daughter of a prince, a pruney king, that is, by an advertising copywriter, who made the pruney king's prunes king of prunes in the worlds runs like a phase of Punch and Judy music through the wondrous things that happen in the shadowed aisles of a second hand bookstore, where customers come for hours, read and leave without buying, the volume but return the next day to finish it.

Those of you who are book collectors in a mild way will find the book of the Haunted Bookshop fascinating enough to seek it out on Blissing street, Brooklyn, the next time you go to New York. Those of you who have been in Leary's in Philadelphia already know where the Haunted Bookshop is. It is in your heart.

The charm of these two books is undeniable. They are light, they are fantastic, but reading them leaves a wistful feeling that maybe once, just once, you would like to try something like that, you would like to find out about all those strange names like Carlyle, Donne and Doctor Johnson.

Both books are easily read. They slide into the heart and mind without tickling the sensual. They can, as so few books even attempt to do, make us dreamers again.

It is estimated that American shipping has spent $6,000,000 of radar equipment since the end of the war as aid to navigation.

Some people get so mad at their government that they threaten to vote.

"Who is that letter from?" "What do you want to know for?" "There you are! What do I want to know for? You are the most inquisitive person I ever met!"

Major Sheikh Faruki Host At Aperitif Party at Club

Winners of Yule Contest Announced by Club Group

The Women's club Home and Garden group this week announced the winners of the best outdoor Christmas decorations. The first prize was won by Lt. Col. and Mrs. John E. Brooks, Jr., of Miller loop for a cotton snowman decoration of their front door. The snowman wore a tall black hat, a red and black buttons, a well-trimmed "tummy" and a big cheerful smile. The prize was a double plastic plant.

Mrs. George H. Gerhart Feted With Formal Coffee

Mrs. George H. Gerhart, retiring Fort Benning Girl Scout commissioner, who is leaving with her husband for the Armed Forces Staff college at Norfolk, Va., was honored on Friday with formal coffee at the home of Mrs. L. D. Shaw on Miller loop.

The quarters were decorated in the spring motif with numerous pairs of colorful purple African violets.

The table was centered with a large African violet circled by silver trays of sandwiches and cookies. The coffee urn, placed at one end of the table, was presided over by Miss Rebecca Kidd, who is visiting with her sister and brother-in-law, Maj. and Mrs. Carl E. Frisby.

Council members present were Mrs. E. J. Ricker, Mrs. John P. Blunt, Mrs. H. M. Harvin, Mrs. Frisby, Mrs. H. W. Rodemann, Mrs. Sam Carter, Capt. Louis E. C. Ray, Mrs. L. W. H. Shaughnessy, Mrs. Gerhart, Mrs. B. G. Baetcke and Mrs. Shaw.

Leaders present were Mrs. M. Mastaler, Mrs. Allan F. Hackett, Mrs. M. C. Taylor, Mrs. A. B. Weisch, Mrs. A. K. Bealke, Mrs. E. E. Wilson, Mrs. J. Couch, Mrs. Sherill C. Eastwood, Mrs. Roy Brooks, Miss Betty Lucas and Mrs. H. C. Taylor, Pasadena, Calif.

The ladies of the first battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, held their first luncheon since the holidays at the Officers' club on Thursday.

The luncheon table was centered with a new born baby carrying a banner emblazoned with 1950, and a Happy New Year written with colored confetti graced the length of the table, with gold candy coins for prosperity distributed on the table. Kewpie dolls with banners bearing the ladies name served as placecards.

Those attending were Mrs. Robert M. Blanchard, Mrs. Clifford Couch, Mrs. Allan F. Hackett, Mrs. Joseph J. Madison, Mrs. Samuel Overstreet, Mrs. James Blenseth, Mrs. James Smith, Mrs. Herbert Bryant, Mrs. John S. Officers' Wives Hold Luncheon

Mrs. A. C. Allgro, Jr., and Mrs. John D. Frederick were hostesses for the regular luncheon of Army Field Forces board No. 3 ladies at the Officers' club on Friday.

The table was centered with a crystal bowl of glowing red berries, and red and white holders completed the table decoration.

Group Entertains With Luncheon

Training Publication department ladies held their monthly luncheon at the Officers' club on Tuesday with Mrs. Joseph Werp and Mrs. Myron McClure as hostesses.

The table was centered with a low crystal bowl filled with yellow chrysanthemums, and smaller bowls of yellow chrysanthemums were spaced at intervals. Tiny bright colored boat folders served as placecards.

Following the luncheon, bridge and games were played. Approximately 30 ladies attended.

Benning Scout News Girl Scouts

Yes, there will be State Meetings this year and institutes for all Girl Scout adults held in Columbus Feb. 22, 23 and 24. The registration fee of $1 per day is payable at the door between 9 and 10 a.m. Meeting places are announced later.

Group Holds Party at Club

Woman's Club Announces Coming Events for Season

The Fort Benning Woman's club this week announced the schedule of events for the remaining months of the 1949-1950 season.

The next general meeting is scheduled for Feb. 6 at 2:30 p.m. in the Officers' club. Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, deputy commander, third army, will be special speaker. A musical program and tea will follow.

Plans for the Woman's club traditional spring fashion show, a harbinger of spring and summer fashions, are getting under way. The models will be selected from club members and will be directed by a former professional model now living at Fort Benning. Further details will be announced later.

The concluding meeting of the year will be the May breakfast to be held at the Officers' club at 12 noon May 1. At this time yearly reports will be made and new officers installed.

In addition to these general meetings special interest group meetings for bowling, bridge, Spanish, home and garden, and literature and art will be held.

The bowling group meets twice weekly on Monday at 8:45 and Thursday at 1 p.m. at the bowling alleys. There are advanced, intermediate and beginner bowls suits that qualify members.

Classes in Spanish meet each Monday and Thursday mornings at 9:30 a.m. at the Officers' club. The bridge group meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month at the Country club at 1:30 p.m.

The Home and Garden group meets the fourth Monday of each month, while the Literature and Art group meets on the second Monday. The time and place for these meetings are 2:30 p.m. at the Country club unless otherwise announced.

Lady members of active, reserve and retired army officers' families as well as all female commissioned personnel are eligible for membership in the Woman's club.

Mrs. Clifford Simenson, chairman of the membership committee, has arranged to have representative at all group meetings and luncheons to enable those interested to obtain membership. Fee is $2. Mrs. Simenson is assisted by Mrs. Robert J. Coe, co-chairman, Mrs. Frank Sackton, Mrs. Paul Cooper, Mrs. John Brooks, Jr., Mrs. Fallon Long, Mrs. Athel Berger, Mrs. William Bickley, Mrs. Linden Schwab and Mrs. John Frederick. Memberships may also be had by contacting the committee chairman or a member of the committee.

Attendance and participation in general meetings and group meetings is limited to Woman's club members only.

Comer-Epting Vows Spoken

Miss Ann P. Comer, daughter of Mrs. Alexander Comer of Syracuse, N. Y., and Cpl. Norman Epting, son of Webster Epting of Joliet, Ill., now with Company K, 15th Infantry regiment, were married in a quiet ceremony on Dec. 24.

The vows were spoken at the home of the bride's brother, Jesse Comer, in Opelika, Ala. The marriage was banked with holly and fern, and the couple stood under an arc of mistletoe, holly and fern.

Miss Molly Gatson of Opelika served as maid-of-honor. She wore a dress of aqua satin, featuring a fitted bodice and full skirt, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. Cpl. William Rainey, also of Company K, 15th Infantry, served as best man.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, wore a dress of white slipper satin, designed with a single wand of pencils.

After the wedding the couple entertained with a reception. The bride's table was overlaid with a floor length white satin cloth and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake, topped with a miniature bride and groom.

Assisting in the serving were Mrs. Cora Jackson and Miss Gaston.

The table was centered with a replica of a Charge-A-Plate, and the bride and groom's names were strewn the length of the table. The place cards were engraved with the names of Mrs. Davison's name with joke bids and novelty letters.

The recording secretary's office will be filled by Mrs. Wallace M. Hale, who is also chairman of the child study group at the children's school. Mrs. Hale teaches Sunday school in the Infantry Center chapel and is a member of the Infantry Center choir. She previously served as president of the Pan-Hellenic association and was corresponding secretary of the Woman's club last year.

Mrs. James Bartholomew succeeds Mrs. Joseph D. Rainey in the office of auditor. Mrs. Bartholomew is presently serving the Pan-Hellenic association as president. She is also a member of the bridge committee of the Woman's club.

The chairman of the Woman's club bowling group goes to Mrs. Charles H. Hadden, former co-chairman of the group.

Mrs. Louis R. Moore entertained with an eggnog party at their quarters recently. The reception room was decorated with seasonal flowers. The table was centered with a snow scene featuring a ray snow man, small trees and snow-covered green Christmas candles completed the appointments. Approximately 60 guests attended the courtney.

Literature and Arts Group Entertains at County Club

The Literature and Arts group of the Woman's club held its regular monthly meeting at the Country club on Monday.

The featured attraction of the evening was a musical program given by Mrs. John Robert Boyd, well-known Columbus soprano. Mrs. Boyd was accompanied by Miss Ruth Schussler. "Solveig's Song" by Grieg was Mrs. Boyd's first number, then "Yesterday and Today" by Spotts, "Think on Me" by Lady John Scott, and the concluding number, "Estrellita" by Ponche. She graciously gave several encores.

Mrs. Milton Mastaler presented an interesting and comprehensive book review on Daphne Du Maurier's "The Parasites," her first book since the famed "Rebecca."

The single wand of pencils, a beautifully framed Japanese wood cut, was won by Mrs. Joseph D. Hennessey. Plans were made at this meeting to conduct a short story contest open to all interested persons on the post. Prizes will be awarded. Contest details may be obtained by contacting Mrs. E. B. Cheston, phone 3455.

Airborne Ladies Entertain at Club

The ladies of the Airborne battalion held their monthly luncheon at the Officers' club on Tuesday, with Mrs. Charles H. Chase, Mrs. V. W. Campena, Mrs. J. B. Adams and Mrs. J. Talladay as hostesses.

The table was centered with a replica of a Charge-A-Plate, and the bride and groom's names were strewn the length of the table. The place cards were engraved with the names of Mrs. Davison's name with joke bids and novelty letters.

T. I. C. TALKS

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: IF THE ARMY GAVE YOU YOUR CHOICE OF ANY GENERAL TO SERVE UNDER WHOM WOULD YOU CHOOSE AND WHY?

SGT. 1ST CL. HOKE SMITH. Supply company. I would choose Maj. Gen. Robert C. Macon, assistant to the chief of Army Field Forces. He was my wartime division commander and I fought with him from Normandy beach to Hanover, Germany. He was commander of the 82nd Infantry division, the division that built the Truman bridge across the Elbe river. He went overseas with that division and stayed with it until the end of the war. He is one of the best leaders of men I have ever seen, and that is my reason for choosing him.

WILSON M-SGT. JOHN H. WILSON. Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 344th Area Service unit. I would choose Lt. Gen. George S. Patton even though he is dead. I think he is an ideal soldier, and I don't believe with his tactics he would have ever lost a war. I never fought under General Patton, but I would have liked to. His policy was always to advance, never retreat. I have been coaching the post boxing team for several years, and I use his policy of teaching the boxer to never retreat.

CAPT. ROLAND GOHMEY. Communications department, the Infantry school. I would choose Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin because he was the outstanding leader of airborne troops during the war. He had great personal courage and interest in leadership of men. He was a general that everybody under his command liked. It was just something you couldn't describe. He is one of the most outstanding and most progressive leaders in planning the airborne future, and he has the ability to take a new unit and develop it into one of the best striking forces.

CPT. WESLEY MILEY. Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 344th Area Service unit. I would choose Maj. Gen. Francis Lanahan, commanding general of Fort Monmouth, N. J. He has shown a great interest in developing athletic and other activities that will keep men interested in staying on the post. As a leader of men, both civilian and military, he has shown exceptional ability.

M-SGT. EDWARD R. GULANAN. Company A, Infantry School detachment. I would choose Gen. Omar Bradley because his war and peace records speak for themselves. He was responsible for the breakthrough at St. Lo and led his army group through to victory in Europe. He has influenced much of the army training today. He is a soldier's general and a real man.

MAHONEY GUNMAN. Company C, Infantry School detachment. I choose Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff, because he is a soldier's soldier, and I served under him before. He always looked after the welfare of his men. Like the way he went up on the front lines on Guadalcanal. Although he was the commanding general, he was right out in front. I think it took lots of guts to do it. He's just a good guy.

Troopers Rip Foe In Revenge Battle

Recovering from a slow start the Airborne battalion eagerness moved into high gear in the final two periods last Monday night at the Main gym to rout the Third Infantry division Special Troops, 64-21.

The win for the Troopers was sweet revenge for the defeat in their first meeting. It also enabled the Troopers to move into a first place tie with the Provisional group, Area Service unit, for the intra-mural league crown.

Center Larry Brown, of the "Christies," was once again the big gun for his side as he hit on 10 field goals for 20 points. Following Brown in the scoring column for the Troopers were forwards Vern Griffin and Terry Scott. Scott hit on seven field goals for 14 points, while Griffin tallied 11 on five field goals and a foul.

Despite the fact that the Airborne cleared their bench in an attempt to keep the score down, the Troopers continued to pour it on. Excellent rebound work by Terry Scott and Griffin was in part responsible for the ease with which the Troopers disposed of their opponents. Charlie Richards, star forward of the Infantry School detachment, almost set a new season's mark in the first game of the evening, but fell three points short in his attempt and wound up with 28 markers to his credit. Richards' pointmaking enabled the ISD Troops to run roughshod over the hapless 32nd Medical battalion, 61-26.

Aiding Richards in the ISD cause was Bob Poutow, who sank nine field goals for 18 points before injuring his knee late in the third and being removed from the game. The final contest of the evening saw the Station Hospital five fold after holding a half-time advantage and fall victim

Boys, 43-27. The first half of the contest looked like a throw-back to the olden days as neither team seemed able to hit with any consistency. When the half ended, the Medics held a slim 10-8 margin.

Paced by Bill Cunningham and the excellent rebound work of Bill Brooks and Bob Custer, the Boars slowly gained momentum until they rolled over the Troopers in the second half. The only bright spot in the second half for the Medics was the excellent shooting of "Smilin' Jack" Martin who scored 14 of 17 (team's second half total) of 17. Martin ended up with high scoring honors for the hospital five, with 19 points, while Cunningham scored a like number for the Boars.

Colonel Promotion Board to Convene

Selection boards will be convened in Washington on Feb. 1 for the purpose of recommending lieutenant colonels for promotion to the permanent or temporary grades of colonel, it was announced this week by the Department of the Army.

Names of eligible officers will be submitted by the adjutant general to the boards, and the promotion list will be made under the "best qualified" method. No lists or recommendations need be submitted, according to the announcement.

Included on the permanent promotion list will be all permanent lieutenant colonels who will complete 22 years' service for promotion purposes prior to June 1 and whose date of rank is July 1, 1948 or earlier.

Chaplain, in order to be considered, must be permanent lieutenant colonels who will complete 22 years' service for promotion purposes prior to July 1 and whose date of rank is July 1, 1948, or earlier.

Also eligible for consideration are permanent lieutenant colonels of the Judge Advocate General corps, Medical corps, Dental corps and Medical Service corps who will complete 21 years' service for promotion purposes prior to July 1 and whose date of rank is July 1, 1948, or earlier.

The following considerations will govern promotion to the temporary grade of Colonel:

1. Regular army lieutenant colonels serving in that grade with 20 years' promotion service prior to July 1 and permanent date of rank July 1, 1948, or earlier.
2. Non-regular officers serving in the grade of lieutenant colonel with temporary date of rank July 31, 1942, or earlier.
3. Regular army lieutenant colonels in the Medical Service corps with 19 years' service prior to July 1 and permanent date of rank July 1, 1948, or earlier.
4. Non-regular officers in the Medical Service corps serving in the grade of lieutenant colonel with temporary date of rank Dec. 31, 1944, or earlier.
5. Regular army lieutenant colonels in the Dental Corps serving in the grade with 19 years' promotion service prior to July 1 and permanent date of rank July 1, 1948, or earlier.
6. Non-regular officers in the Dental Corps serving in the grade of lieutenant colonel with temporary date of rank Sept. 30, 1944, or earlier.
7. All regular army lieutenant colonels in the Veterinary Corps serving in that grade and whose date of rank March 1, 1948, or earlier.
8. Non-regular officers in the Veterinary Corps serving in the grade of lieutenant colonel with temporary date of rank July 1, 1948, or earlier.
9. Officers eligible for permanent promotion to colonel may forward written communications direct to the adjutant general, marked for the attention of the Department of the Army selection board, no later than 10 days after the board convenes.
10. Recommendations for or against temporary promotion to colonel should be forwarded to the adjutant general prior to Feb. 1.

Editor's Note: This is the fourth of a series of articles on the sport of bowling written by Capt. G. B. Sawyer, secretary of the Fort Benning Officers' Bowling League and noted authority on the sport.

BY GILBERT SAWYER

Bowling today is a very exact game of almost scientific skill. No longer can one approach the alley, throw the ball down with either one both hands and expect to wind up with a decent score. Consequently, there are certain do's and don't's which are more, or less, mandatory to all good bowlers.

1. Get the proper equipment — a pair of comfortable, well-fitting bowling shoes and a ball that is well-measured to the hand.
2. Practice uniformity and harmony in your stance, approach and delivery — the four step delivery is preferable.
3. Keep relaxed at all times and concentrate on the 1-3 pocket or a chosen spot on the alley. If you can master it, try to be a spot bowler. It will help you to hit the ball, control, and your score.
4. Keep a uniform speed at all times, both for strikes and cleaning up spares.
5. Follow through fully with the arm and body after each delivery.
6. Learn through practice and by watching good bowlers.
7. Be a good sport and a gentleman at all times.

1. Don't use a ball not fitted perfectly or as nearly fitted as possible to your hand.
2. Don't grip the ball too tightly. Relax, it can't bite.
3. Don't let the ball hit you anywhere and it often harms the alley.
4. Do not use a delivery which brings the wrong foot to the foul line first. You will be off balance.
5. Don't lose your temper when you miss. The pins can't hear you.
6. Don't knock down the building with blazing speed.

Infantry Regiment Opens War Room

30TH INFANTRY WAR ROOM OFFICIALLY OPENED. Guards Pfc. Arbie R. Dille (left) and Pfc. Lowell F. Buzz Watch as Col. O. F. Newman, Third Division Chief of Staff, cuts tape.

A war room, devoted to the forthcoming Operation Portrex, was officially opened at the 30th Infantry division last week by Col. O. F. Newman, Third Infantry division chief of staff.

The establishment of this war room is part of the efforts made by Lt. Col. N. R. Hoskot, commanding officer of the Third Battalion, to familiarize the men of his command with this operation and give them a general concept of its purpose and scope.

Responsible for this map are two men from the Third Infantry Headquarters and Headquarters company, Cpl. William O. Karnes and Pfc. Joseph Sabato, who spent over 70 hours in completing the job.

Colonel Hoskot then introduced Lt. John O. Batiste, who gave a short outline of the briefing to the personnel of the battalion which will receive the men who will visit the war room by platoon for the briefing and operations during preparations.

With the help of maps and charts, they will be informed about Vieques island, its geography and inhabitants, as well as the tactical situation in general.

The purpose and role of the Aggressor forces, their origin and previous activities, will be explained and the part they are to play in this maneuver will be outlined. The future "enemy's" uniform and rank insignia are demonstrated by live models.

Concluding the briefing for the visitors, Lieutenant Batiste introduced Sabato and invited the officers to closer scrutiny of the extensive display of instruction aids.

Then Colonel Newman disclosed that, during the assault landings, units of the assault landing will place another part of the island under actual bombardment to give maximum realism to the operation.

Concluding the orientation, the visiting officers gathered outside for coffee and cake.

With the final date for submitting entries drawing near, special services officials urged this week that all those who wish to submit entries in the Third Army photography contest do so without delay.

Company Wins Dining Plaque

The best dining hall of the month plaque was won by 2nd Transportation Car Company, dining hall No. 1, 340th Area Service unit, food service officials said this week.

One-tenth of one point separated this winner and the previous holder of the plaque, the 378th Heavy Ordnance Maintenance company.

Food Service Office Moves to TIC Annex

The Infantry Center food service office has moved to a new location in the Infantry Center annex, food service officials announced this week.

For the past several years the post food service has operated out of ration breakdown. Recent reorganization placing ration breakdown under the post quartermaster made it possible for the food service to find new quarters.

Opportunity to Prove It Offered Post Pea Lovers

Fort Benning soldiers who said during a recent survey that they would consume—and like—black-eyed peas will get a chance to eat those words in February.

Third Army sources announced this week that Benning had selected as one of two installations in this area where experimental servings of the Southern delicacy, "hopping john," will be made in dining halls next month. The other post where black-eyed peas will appear on the menu is Fort Bragg, N. C.

The experiments are being made on an army-wide basis with a view toward making black-eyed peas a standard item of the GI diet.

At posts where tests are being made, black-eyed peas will be used as a substitute for string beans, dried beans and green peas at three meals during February. For dinner on Feb. 3, the lentils will be served with snaps, "hopping john" will be placed on the chow line for supper on Feb. 11, and the Feb. 22 supper menu will again feature black-eyed peas.

In addition to the peas, ingredients for "hopping john" include ham hocks or ham bones and rice.

If the trend shown in The Bayonet feature, T. I. C. Talks, last week that can be used as a yardstick for post-wide consumption of black-eyed peas, the lentils won't be doomed to the garbage can at Benning. Five of six soldiers interviewed said that they would eat—and like—black-eyed peas, while the sixth said merely that he would eat them if "it" were hungry enough.

General Clark Lauds TIS Aid

The staff of the Infantry School was praised recently by Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of Army Field Forces, for its assistance in the preparation of national guard subject schedules.

General Clark, in a letter to Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, commanding officer of the Infantry School, lauded particularly the efficiency and cooperative work of Maj. John S. Baskin of the Training Publications department.

Notes of appreciation were added to General Clark's letter by Maj. Gen. Kenneth F. Crames, chief of the National Guard Bureau, and General Burress.

ARC to Aid In Maneuver

By MURRAY E. HILL

One of Operation Portrex's slight adjustments to the general public, is the important part Red Cross will play on the maneuver. On each level from the Department of Army in Washington to Fort Benning, the contingents have been held between the Red Cross and the military to see that each while away from original post.

Final plans have been completed, and Third Infantry division will soon pick up a regular Red Cross combat team, including a field director and their assistant.

Canteen service, such as combat soldiers were familiar with during the war, have been arranged, and the Red Cross mobile unit girl and canteen worker will again be a familiar sight at train stations and ship docks.

Reading material has been placed on troop trains, and conferences have been held with volunteer workers, military personnel, chaplains, Army Emergency Relief officials, and others to insure that families who remain behind will have the moral and financial support of the Red Cross if an emergency arises.

Schedule Revised For Auto Traffic

The schedule for traffic control at outpost No. 1 has been revised, safety officials announced this week.

The new procedure, which became effective last Monday, calls for traffic control for two-lane inbound traffic between 7:15 and 7:30 a. m. and two-way traffic between 7:30 and 7:45 a. m. and two-lane inbound between 7:35 and 7:55 p. m.

Visa, Passport Procedure Set

Passport and visa requirements for dependents of military personnel transferred to overseas duty were outlined this week in a circular from the Insular Affairs office. Effective until Jan. 9, 1951, barring any unexpected change in the status of the dependents, the following procedures apply:

Colonel Presented With Personal Maps

At a brief ceremony in his office last week, Col. Joseph W. Boone, commanding officer of the 50th Infantry Regiment, was presented with a plaster relief map of Vieques Island, the objective for the projected Caribbean maneuver, Operation Fortex.

T.I.C. TALKS

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: IF YOU HAD YOUR CHOICE OF BEING STATIONED ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD, WHAT STATION WOULD YOU SELECT AND WHY?

M-SGT WALTON M. TORRES, Service company, 30th Infantry Regiment: I would choose Fort Benning because it is my home. I have been back here and I asked to come back. I think it's the finest army post I've ever seen on. I guess it is the treatment that is afforded the enlisted man, and then I like the convenience of the place.

PVT. BOB SIERBUTOWSKI, Company G, 15th Infantry Regiment: I would choose Wright-Patterson airforce base, Dayton, Ohio, because it's close to my home and I could go home every night. I wouldn't have to spend so much money. I would be out of the infantry too.

SGT. WILLIAM J. STROUP, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I think I would choose Fort Benning because it's the most famous infantry school in the world. I would also choose it because the housing situation is very good, and there's lots of sports for your spare time. Its recreational facilities are excellent, and it's close to a large town where people are very gracious and treat the soldier is very good. I personally think Fort Benning is one of the finest places in the U. S.

PFC. BRYAN AYER, heavy mortar company, 15th Infantry Regiment: I would choose Fort Dix, N. J., because there are more places to go up there and it is more convenient to my home. But the main reason is that my girl lives near there.

SGT. H. R. DICK, Company H, Infantry School detachment: I would choose Fort Benning because it is the home of the Airborne school, and the only one of its kind. I work here as an instructor and since I'm interested in that type of work, I would choose this post.

CPL. BRYAN AYER, heavy mortar company, 15th Infantry Regiment: I would choose Fort Benning because I like the climate here and I think the recreational facilities are among the best I have ever seen. I have seen a few camps and I think this is the best one yet. And my wife like it here too.

Representative Inspects Engineering Equipment
Post Engineer heavy equipment activities were inspected this week by John M. Cloud, Third Army engineering representative from Fort McPherson, Ga. Mr. Cloud's observations were focused on heavy grading machines, bulldozers and shovels.

ONE OF THE FIRST . . . Tom Tyler, retired sergeant with over 20 years service, beams happily at his insurance dividend check for $231. Tyler's check, one of the first to be received at Fort Benning, is part of the $2,800,000 cash bonanza the government started paying last week to veterans with accrued dividends on their insurance policies. With the last three serial numbers, Tom was one of the lucky "firsts." However, unofficial reports are that more than 20 such checks have already been cashed by Infantry Center bank branches. Tyler is club steward of the Block 12 NCO club.

Trieste Travel Now Restricted

A temporary suspension has been placed on the coordinated travel of dependents with the permission of the Army military and civilian personnel to Trieste.

The suspension, the Department of the Army explained, has been made necessary by a critical housing shortage in the area. At present, the only housing available to military personnel and their dependents is under lease from Trieste civilians. Units are now being constructed under the supervision of the Allied military Government, but it was not expected that the housing shortage will be alleviated until after the summer months.

General Sets Aims for '50

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, speaking at a recent staff and command conference set forth a list of regulations and unwritten policies that will "hasten" the successful accomplishment of the Infantry Center's mission.

These objectives for 1950 are:
1. To attain higher standards in every respect in administrative work, training, appearance and conduct of personnel. Living conditions for enlisted men shall be an objective of all commanders and principal staff officers.

2. It is the duty of the regular army, particularly of its senior officers, to train all components of the army in a manner that will assure its preparedness for actual combat. This is fostered by realism in training and by orientation from individuals who have experienced the shocks and quickly changing fortunes of battle.

3. With reference to personnel:
a. There will be a continued effort to develop the full potentialities of the career men of the army, both officer and enlisted. Their assignment to key positions in a greatly-expanded wartime force is to be foreseen. Personnel lacking such potentialities should be eliminated from the service in accordance with applicable regulations.

b. Commanders and chief of staff sections will generally be required to train their own specialists. Service schools and on-the-job training should be used to accomplish this end. In the expanded wartime army, a great many highly-trained specialists are obtained directly from civilian life. This condition does not exist in the peacetime organization.

c. Officers will be fewer in number. This trend may be sharply accentuated. It will be necessary to train noncommissioned officers to fill roles now assigned to officers. Commissioned personnel, while retaining responsibility, will increasingly be required to act as supervisors over several activities, the immediate execution of which are charged to competent noncommissioned officers.

d. Living conditions should be improved. This effort calls for light, well-ventilated, adequate, well-furnished barracks; well-equipped dayrooms; appealing dining halls and kitchens; clean, well-lighted, properly arranged offices, and neat, properly trimmed lawns and surroundings.

e. Dress of both officers and enlisted men will be given continuing attention to insure that all personnel are neatly and properly fitted in the prescribed clothing which will be maintained in good condition. Fringe in dress will be inculcated throughout the command to include the wearing of appropriate civilian attire during recreation periods and when off the reservation. Many instances have been noted in recent months of the wearing of entirely improper civilian attire by both officers and enlisted men on the streets of the 24th Street civilian communities.

4. The color of army life should be maintained. This is accomplished through the staging of ceremonies, inspection, scheduled organizational outings and the development of esprit and pride in organization and personal appearance that together influence the individual to carry into his off-duty life the high standards developed and nurtured in his organization.

5. The Infantry School and units of the Infantry Center bear a special obligation. As the infantry is the basic arm of the army, it is the mission of each individual, unit or activity of the entire army. Student personnel attending the Infantry School are in continual observation of the personnel, units and activities of this station. Their future standards of duty are largely influenced by these observations. Further, the great number of visitors at this installation, both civilian and military, draw their conclusions of the army and are affected in their subsequent attitudes by their observations at the Infantry School. The standards here permeate the army, and the responsibility of commanders and key staff officers toward attaining superior standards everywhere in this command are correspondingly great.

6. Continued effort should be made to make training more interesting and to apply it to the infantry. This affects recruiting and reenlistment and assists in resolving the longer range problem of retention of the more competent enlisted men who will then be available for promotion to key positions in a wartime army.

General Burress emphasized to his subordinates, in outlining the revised program for 1950, that these goals should be appropriately brought to the attention of personnel at quarterly periods during the year.

Survey on Food Being Conducted

A food quality survey is being conducted in all Infantry Center dining halls by a team of food service technicians. It was announced this week by Maj. John A. Rylowich, Infantry Center food service supervisor.
The team, which includes M. Sgt. Woodrow W. Hall and Sgt. Ira E. Evans, is checking stores, proving eating conditions and meeting the standards set by the army.

CPL. CARL C. SELF MAKES 10-YEAR ARMY RADIO JOB A HOBBY
Soldier Of The Week Has Own "Ham" Station At Home

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Corporal Develops Hobby Into Interesting Army Duty

A fascinating hobby has paved a pathway to a responsible army job which has earned Cpl. Carl C. Self the title of Bayonet Soldier of the Week.
Corporal Self, transferred recently from Company B, Infantry School detachment to the Third Signal company, was responsible for the entire operation of a third echelon electrical repair shop until the time of his move. His work consisted of inspection and maintenance of all signal corps equipment assigned to the Infantry School. Communications department's Signal group.

The 34-year old Cullman, Ala., soldier was charged with installing all permanent and semi-permanent sound equipment used by the Infantry School for firepower demonstrations, parades and mass exhibitions. School officials declare that Corporal Self's performance of duty which many times extended into night hours is exceptional and praiseworthy.

Despite his many duties, the 10-year army veteran undertook the task of supervising and cutting arrangements and recordings for the Infantry School's classes. A seemingly insurmountable task of keeping complete files and records of the group's activity was also maintained by Corporal Self.
In his new job, Corporal Self will be a maintenance and operation technician with the Third Infantry division's radio station WATA. This work will entail a multitude of work for the next few months since some of the division already has left for extended amphibious maneuvers in the Caribbean.

Hour by hour Corporal Self sits before a mass of radio equipment sending and receiving messages from the division's temporary headquarters at Little Creek, Va. Although messages are personal as well as official, Corporal Self goes about his task of decoding the dots and dashes as though it were straight from the kitchen in Washington.
He says that the station's task, as well as his, during peacetime is one he practices most when he is at home. After the station remains in contact with other military stations to see what is happening in other regions of the country and world. Not only are these contacts by dots and dashes, at night talking to other "ham" stations throughout the nation. During World War II Corporal Self was in combat with the famous 101st Airborne division. Corporal Self jumped in Normandy on D-Day, and made another drop in Holland on Sept. 18, 1944. He also was amid the bitter fighting at Bastogne—the Battle of the Bulge—and counts more than 33 months of overseas service. W4EO, is busily engaged.

Airborne Setup Merits Credit

Last Friday, 13 men died when a glider in which they were riding crashed at Lawson airforce base. Four others miraculously escaped death.

With the exception of the pilot and a noncommissioned officer instructor, all were students in the Student Training Regiment's Airborne battalion. They were taking their glider indoctrination flight at the time of the tragedy.

They were part of a starting class of 188 enlisted men and 13 officers. Just prior to memorial services held Monday for the dead by their classmates in Company A, Airborne battalion, 134 enlisted men and seven officers were graduated and awarded their paratroop wings.

It is with pride that we report that all members of the class made their final qualifying parachute jump the Monday morning after Friday's tragedy. Not one member of basic airborne class No. 19 refused to jump after the accident. The fact that not one refusal was uttered—and it could have been since airborne training is voluntary—reflects great credit on the Airborne department's instructors and its curriculum.

In spite of Friday's tragedy, airborne has one of the lowest accident rates—if not the lowest—of any type army training. Up to Friday's crack-up, only one man had been killed in the glider phase of airborne training.

Since glider flight were added to the course in 1948, about 3,725 lifts have been made with the only other serious accident taking one life in the early part of 1947. And this phase was taken by 10,000 students each year.

In actual parachute jumps, the accident rate has decreased from a wartime high of six percent in 1942 to one-tenth of one percent the past two years! In one month of 1943, the accident rate jumped to an all-time high of 12 percent. An injury is defined as ANY injury which requires medical treatment. Minor sprains and bruises make up the majority of the injuries reported.

On Aug. 29, 1940, a test platoon made the first mass jump in the continental United States. Since that time, more than 125,665 men have qualified as airborne soldiers at the Infantry School. There have been over 873,000 parachute jumps made here by students.

The low accident rate, we feel, can be attributed to three things: fine physical conditioning; top-notch instructors; and a well-laid-out, well planned, progressive course.

Almost all instructors—officer and enlisted men—are veterans of World War II airborne units. They have been selected for and trained in their jobs. All are familiar with the problems confronting airborne operations and strive to keep abreast of the ever-changing technique and modification of equipment.

The average number of jumps for enlisted instructors is 61 while the officers average 31. One instructor, Cpl. Robert Miller has 325 jumps to his credit. The department director, Lt. Col. Patrick F. Cassidy has 110 jumps. These men know what they are doing and they know what they are talking about.

While it is regrettable that it took a serious training accident to open our eyes—and the eyes of the world—to the remarkable low injury rate in airborne training, we feel that we owe a belated "well done" to the Infantry School's Airborne department and its instructors.

Today's training emphasis is on airborne training. Here, at what can truly be called the "Cradle of American Airborne," we are fortunate to have the high-caliber instructors who constantly think not of yesterday nor today, but of tomorrow.

It must be emphasized, however, that airborne soldiers are still infantrymen, artillerymen or members of other supporting services. They are merely utilizing a new means of transportation.

Airborne advocates tell us its future is limited only by the ingenuity of our leaders and the resources and production capabilities of our great nation.

The combination of air power and airborne units will be one of the decisive elements in any future war. During peace, they will provide our best national security.

President Voices Intent to Run Again in '52

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—President Truman has told his cabinet members that he wants to keep them together as a team because he is going to run again for president in 1952. . . . The president released his budget for fiscal 1951 this week calling for a total expenditure of $42.4 billion. . . . The biggest single item in the bill was $13.5 billion for national defense. Mr. Truman proposed to finance the biggest defense establishment since demobilization after World War II. . . . Gen. Henry H. (Hap) Arnold, the nation's No. 1 wartime airman, died at his home in Sonoma, Calif. this week. The general who built and led the American air armada during World War II died quietly in his bed of a heart condition that had caused him periodic attacks for the past two years. . . . Against the suggestion of a return to work by John L. Lewis some 88,000 coal miners were idle this week. One of the largest coal mine owners has cut off credit to miners in the company stores, saying no work, no credit. . . . President Truman, by reversing a decision by the joint chiefs of staff, has turned thumbs down on any aid to the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa. In a prepared statement the president said, "The U. S. will not pursue a course which will lead to involvement in the civil conflict in China". . . . A group of top scientists have made a report to the president on the possibilities of making a hydrogen bomb. They reported that, granted a huge concentration of effort, a guarantee of ironclad priorities and some two to four billion dollars, they could, in from two to four years, build the necessary tools for making the H-bomb. The decision on production of this bomb that will be 10 times as powerful as the present atomic bombs now lies with the chief executive. . . . In the Alger Hiss perjury trial this week Dr. Carl A. L. Binger has allowed to testify over the objections of Assistant U. S. Attorney Tom Murphy. The doctor has attempted to discredit the government's chief witness, Whitaker Chambers, on psychiatric grounds.

THE PRESS—The New York Sun, second oldest newspaper in Manhattan, folded after 116 years this week. Roy W. Howard bought the arch-conservative Sun for an estimated $2,000,000. Thomas W. Dewart, publisher of the Sun, said the sale was a cold question of profit and loss. Founded in 1833 by Printer Benjamin Day, the New York Sun has been losing circulation and advertising for several years. The paper will be absorbed by the New York World-Telegram.

Report from Washington

Group to Study Pay Measure Amendments

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
The Kilday sub-committee of the House Armed Services committee will make a study of possible amendments to the Career Compensation Act (the new Armed Forces Pay Bill) in the near future. The committee believes that while the law generally is satisfactory, some personnel categories may have justifiable claims for readjustments.

The wool-velour overcoat (shade 85) and the gabardine trench coat (shade 84) will be the only outer garments authorized for wear with the airforce blue uniform, effective March 1. A raincoat for wear with the blue uniform is in process of development.

All army dependency and hardship applications for discharge will be considered liberally during the present program of "Strength" reduction. Borderline cases will be reconsidered if resubmitted. Consideration will be given applications regardless of whether the hardship existed before or developed after enlistment. Cases will be approved if consistent with the best interests of the service.

When a dependent parent is absent from an officer's or enlisted person's household for more than 91 days in any six months, increased allowances for the parent will not be allowed, the U. S. comptroller general has ruled. "Officers' Call," army monthly discussion pamphlet, will be distributed in the future on the basis of one copy for three officers. Officers assigned where sharing of copies is not practicable will continue to receive individual copies.

Chaplain's Corner

Modern Revelations Change Faith Trends

By CHAPLAIN WALLACE M. HALE
A few years ago the keynote of youthful criticism was that of "debunking." It was fair sports to "debunk" the family doctor, the social and moral code, religion, our way of life, public education, and any other subject that came within range of conversation.

Some of us grew up at the time when there was a great deal of "debunking" on the matter of religion. I don't remember many who actually said there was no God, or who, like a picture in the Communist magazine at that time, depicted one of Lenin's disciples climbing up a stairway to Heaven with an upraised hammer to knock God off His throne. Most of the American "debunking" was the kind that nibbled around the edges and sort of looked askance at the central stores of the Bible as accepted by the majorities. For instance, they laughed at the story of Jonah and the whale, and sort of winked knowingly when Joshua prayed for the sun to stand still, or when Moses led the children of Israel across army installations operating schools attended by students on a temporary duty basis have been requested to maintain messing facilities in order to keep per diem payments at a minimum.

Army messes will be required to use some dehydrated foods periodically in preparing meals to gain experience in their preparation. Dehydrated foods would be widely used in the event of war.

Promotions from private first class to corporal after career job tests will be the formula made on a uniform army-wide basis.

An Army Selection board will meet February 1 to recommend regular and non-regular officers for promotion to permanent and temporary grade of colonel.

Forma on which former war prisoners of enemy forces may file claims for pay for standard subsistence during World War II are available at Veterans' Administration offices. Deadline for filing claims is March 1, 1951.

Army Mule Farce Slated For Showing

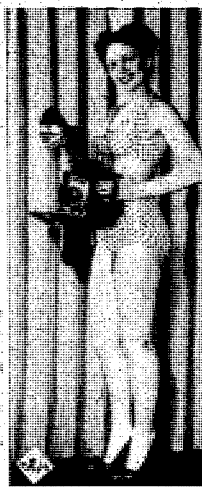

"FRANCIS — The Army Mule," scheduled to appear at the Main theater Sunday and Monday shows the error of second lieutenants who talk to mules in the Burma jungle. Donald O'Connor, a young bank clerk, tries to clear himself from gossip by telling the whole story of how a talking mule saved his life during the war.

By flashbacks the movie shows O'Connor as the second lieutenant who lands in the psychopathic ward after being carried to an aid station by a mule that pointed out tap outposts to him.

What happens to Francis after her friends after the war is the punch line of the farce. The movie will be shown at theaters No. 6 and 7 on Tuesday and Wednesday and at Theater No. 11 on Thursday.

Not Required to Pay Transportation Costs

When illegal absentees from the army are returned to their station or place of trial by government vehicle, cost of that transportation will not be charged against the person, Department of the Army officials said this week.

At The Theaters

WAKE ISLAND with Brian Donlevy, Robert Preston, and William Bendix. Based on authentic records of the defense of Wake island by a mere handful of marines and a pitifully small group of planes, this rousing film shows all the dramatic intensity inherent in the heroic defense of the little Pacific outpost in the early days of World War II. Family.

FRANCIS—THE ARMY MULE with Donald O'Connor and Zaou Pitts. This farce hits a high mark as a laugh producer. In it a lieutenant explains that his daring exploits in battle were accomplished with the help of a talking mule. The audience will probably share the commanding officer's doubts about the lieutenant's mental condition. Family.

BODYHOLD with Willard Parker and Hillary Brooks. In this comedy-vesting comes in for kidding as a farce, and serious attention as a racket. The grunt and groan boys go through all their bag of tricks. Family.

SONS OF NEW MEXICO with Gene Autry, Gene Autry and his horse Champion provide their usual teamwork in felling the schemes of crooks and bandits. Family.

SANDS OF IWO JIMA with John Wayne and Adele Mara. The war in the Pacific is shown through the eyes of a marine squad sergeant, from the days of grueling training in New Zealand, through the four-day campaign at Tarawa, to the final scene of the now famous flag raising on Mount Suribachi. Family.

WHITE HEAT with James Cagney and Virginia Mayo. Not since the days of Scarface and The Big House has anything like White Heat hit the screen. It is a picture of the Treasury department versus gangsters; moves with the speed of a bullet, and has the elements of shock power to knock the audience back in their seats. It is definitely not for children. Mature.

To Amuse You Today On The Bookshelf

From the Earth to the Moon and a Tour of the Moon by Jules Verne.
Illustrated by John C. Wonseller, Didier, Publishers.
BY D. W. SCHAEFER

This is the last volume on my bookshelf. Like Impy Barbicane, who left the earth in a rocket to the moon, this reviewer is leaving Fort Benning, the public information office and the army. In From the Earth to the Moon, through the vivid and sometimes startlingly accurate writings of Jules Verne, that intrepid Frenchman who took us Twenty-thousand Leagues Under the Sea and many other fantastic places, a reader can find humor, relaxation and a string of theories to think about when someone mentions "flying saucers."

Jules Verne is justly regarded as essentially a writer of books for youths. This reader in his youth was more familiar with the exploits of Tom Swift, and if Verne had been part of the books available would be a wiser man.

His mathematics and ingenious theories at times are extremely difficult to cope with. The "elan" with which the members of the Baltimore Gun club, to qualify for membership you must be an inventor and artilleryman) work together to build the biggest gun in the world and shoot a projectile to the moon is breathtaking.

Sly humor, and an irrepressible sense of the ridiculous make From the Earth to the Moon at times side-splitting. His description of the club members, disgruntled because there is no war to let them try out their latest inventions in guns, and the tongue-in-cheek posturing of Michel Ardan who persuades Impy and Captain Nichols to take the trip, alone make the book worth reading.

But aside from the humor, Verne is at his best in showing how such a trip is plausible and his description of the moon believable. Actually, as a man of science, Verne puts forth extremely interesting theories.

They may be more than theories; as for example the submarine and the undersea world being revealed nearly as he imagined it. That we can have more respect for this book is signified by the introduction written by Clyde Fisher, honorary curator of the Hayden planetarium.

The illustrations are good but there are not enough of them. One is curious as to what the moon looks like close up, even if only imagined.

This edition is new and was obviously brought out because of the increased public interest in rockets and inter-planetary travel. Regardless of the commercial aspects, Jules Verne remains the same, an eminently readable writer, although sometimes difficult to understand.

Beginning next week On the Bookshelf will be written by Allen Mullikin, head of the radio section, public information office, and omnivorous reader.

"Wadda you want," snapped the supply sergeant.
"Nothin'."
"Did you bring anything to put in it?"
"No. I didn't know you had any left."
. . . .
And then there's the story about the pharmacist who sent a bill for 20 cents to a patient's widow when he found he'd used strychnine instead of quinine in a prescription.
. . . .
Only one thing may keep a man from enjoying married bliss. His wife.

One nurse at the hospital was so conceted she always deducted 10 beats from a male patient's pulse to allow for her personality.

Benning Scout News

COME ALONG WITH US — IN DEMOCRATIC PARTNERSHIP

By MRS. JOHN BLATT
The Girl Scout troops and their leaders are making plans and preparations for February which is International month in Girl over the world. Feb. 22nd has been set aside as Thinking day to pause and give thought to the founders of the original movement, Lord and Lady Baden Powell who started this organization in 1908. The original program was set up for boys but became so popular with the girls in 1909. It was through her friendship with these two people in England that Juliette Low became interested and in 1912 she returned to this country and on March 12 of that year the first Girl Scout troop was organized in Savannah, Ga. It was through her help and ideas that the international organization formed to promote understanding and friendship among the youth of the world and as means to world peace. Every scout is a member of this world organization by being a registered scout and international friendship is one of the program fields in all age levels. In honor of Juliette Low we have the Juliette Low International Friendship fund which promotes world friendship. You will be hearing more about this next month. The international project is "Schoolmates Overseas" and the slogan is "Fill a Schoolbag for a Friend" it is this project which the troops will be working on next month.

Mrs. Mills Is Honored

Mrs. Dallas Morris and Mrs. Lamar Kent of Lawson air force base, entertained with a step shower Wednesday night at the Morris home on seventh street, honoring Mrs. Lloyd J. Mills, of Geratone, Mont. in the Infantry Center chapel.

The reception rooms opened to the guests were decorated with arrangements of pink mums and winter greenery. The gifts were presented to Mrs. Mills from a baby basket decorated with pink and white bows. During the evening games were played with Mrs. M. C. Mallard, Mrs. F. M. Cox, Jr., Mrs. L. J. Mills, Mrs. R. B. Spears and Mrs. David Randall as winners. The serving table was overlaid with a white damask cloth, centered with a low mound of pink mums circled by sprays of ivy. A beautiful cake, decorated in pink and green, was placed at one end of the table, and silver trays of sandwiches were placed at the other end.

Those attending in addition to the hostesses and honoree were Mesdames C. T. Meredith, J. Soears, M. C. Mallard, B. P. McGough, David Randall, F. M. Cox, Jr., and Lloyd W. Hargett, Col. J. R.

Maj., Mrs. Cook Honored at Club

Saturday night, the officers and ladies of the Provisional Battalion, 20th Infantry regiment, entertained at the Officers' club with a dinner and dance honoring Maj. John M. Cook, Provisional Battalion commander, who is departing for an overseas assignment soon, and Mrs. Cook.

The dinner table was colorful, with a low mound of pink mums and winter greenery interspersed with burning tapers in tall silver holders. Also honored were Col. Joseph W. Boone, regimental commander; Lt. Col. Frank Sackton, regimental executive officer; Mrs. Boone, and Mrs. Sackton.

Mrs. Frisby Guest Speaker To Columbus Church Group

Mrs. Carl E. Frisby of Fort Benning was guest speaker last Sunday to the Junior Sunday School department of the First Presbyterian church in Columbus. Mrs. Frisby, who was stationed with her husband in Japan, gave a talk on the customs, conditions and education in Japan.

Mrs. W. C. Parkins introduced by her sister, Mrs. Rebecca Kidd, dressed in a complete costume of a Japanese woman of about 20 years of age.

Mrs. Frisby started her talk with the schools, dealing in particular with the children. She told of Niomiyu, the wood cutter's son who became the patron saint of education, and who is compared to our Abraham Lincoln in his rise from a humble beginning.

Group Meeting Date Announced

Particular interest was her description of oibone, a game that resembles shuttlecock and a little dore. It is played by Japanese children on New Year's day to bring good luck. She exhibited a beautiful hand-knitted doll used in this game, carved with images of the lucky gods Hotei and Die Butsu, the great Buddha of Kamakura, and Japanese actor's faces.

She told of the doll festival that is held on the third day of the third month each year in which each girl shows her collection of dolls, and on the fifth day of the fifth month, when the flying of carp over each household for each boy in the family.

Mrs. Frisby spoke of the Ainu, aborigine of Hokkaido, who are said to be the hairiest people in the world, and who worship the bear. She showed a family of bears carried by the Ainu in the Sapporo area.

She also told of the little girls who live in the mountain district of the different cuts and prices of two girls. F u m i k o and Mariko, for the members of the Sunday school class to correspond with.

In connection with her talk, Mrs. Frisby showed some of the types of silk and paper bags such as garters, zori and other items of interest to the girls who were the matri, a large

Colonel Recalls Moscow Service

Served As Interpreter Of Communist Organs

BY DON SCHAEFER
Bayonet Staff Writer

Lt. Col. H. Gary Schumann, slow-speaking, careful in his selection of words, told a Bayonet reporter this week his carefully considered, unbiased estimation of contemporary everyday life in the center of one of the world's great powers, Moscow, capital of the U. S. S. R.

Colonel Schumann, newly assigned commanding officer of the provisional battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, can qualify as an authority on life behind the "iron curtain."

As assistant military attaché to the American embassy in Moscow for two and one-half years, he was able, not only to form an excellent picture of governmental officials but also of the Russian people in Moscow.

A Lithuanian-born son of a professor of music, Colonel Schumann told us much about Russian life and his reactions as was possible without revealing secret information.

Colonel Schumann served in Moscow from October, 1945, until returning to the United States in June, 1948. While in Moscow he served under Lt. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith, the war-famed general who turned author recently. General Smith was then American ambassador to the Soviet.

As one of those rare and highly qualified people who actually lived in the Soviet for a considerable time, Colonel Schumann gave a graphic account of Moscow and Soviet Bureau-cracy.

Colonel Schumann, with his wife Lillian, lived outside the American embassy in an ordinary Russian apartment building. He was glad to obtain even though he walked five flights up to his apartment and when he stepped out of the building had to wade through seemingly endless trash and mud.

His apartment, lavishly furnished by Russian standards, was No. 12 in the building. It consisted of a bedroom, dining room, living room, a small bathroom, a bathroom, a den, small kitchen and a large bathroom. All the apartments in the building were identical, Colonel Schumann said, except those for the Russian civilians. Living space was allotted to about nine square meters (about 30 square feet) per person and in some instances one or two persons shared a bathroom in the center of one of the four rooms sharing the bathroom in communal fashion.

His apartment building was not the most modern in Moscow, he said, but even the most up-to-date buildings at that time were rarely higher than eight stories.

His household included, besides his family, a cook, maid, chauffeur. These employees were cleared for hiring by him by a Soviet agency, ostensibly to assure they were honest, reliable workers.

The main highways of Moscow, Colonel Schumann said, are about twice the width of the main thoroughfares of the Fort Benning main post. These streets are kept in good condition," he said, but the side streets are sometimes no better than alleys. In the winter the main streets are kept clear of snow and ice but the side streets are allowed to remain clogged."

Each apartment building has a worker especially detailed to keep the street and pavement in front of the building clean, he said. These workers are responsible for cleaning the pavement and one of the main jobs of the worker on the opposite side cleaning the other half of the street.

Water pressure in the central city apartments was usually low and in American street-cars, trolleys and ordinary street cars. The subways in Moscow, Colonel Schumann said, are fast, though only fairly efficient, are architecturally an accomplishment.

The subway stations were designed by Russian artists and supported by marble columns and murals by leading Russian painters covering the walls.

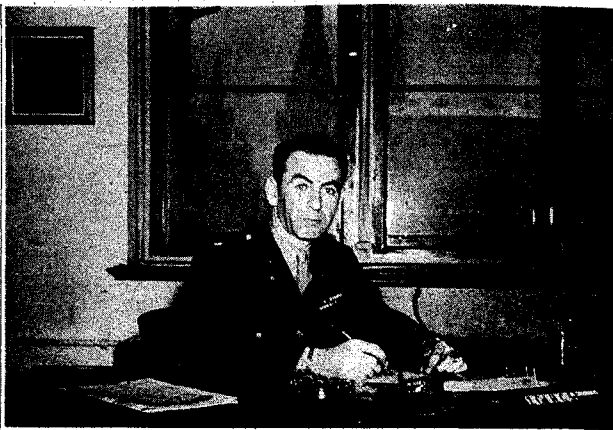

During his stay there and until December, 1947, as everywhere else in Russia, the embassy officials received food and clothing ration cards. Foreign emissaries received a slightly larger allotment. Tobacco, for example, was rationed to about 40 Russian cigarettes per month.

There were three ways to buy food and other necessities, he said.

The first was the government ration store where prices were low and government regulated, and the ration cards were effective, but there was always a shortage of goods.

The second was to buy in the commercial stores. These stores were government owned and operated but there was a wider selection of goods which could be purchased without ration cards but at almost prohibitive prices. Eggs, for example, rationed at a low rate, could be purchased in the ration store at a reasonable price, but in the commercial stores more eggs could be purchased at about 10-12 rubles (about $1.00 prior to 1947) each.

The third source of food was

the "farmer's market". Similar in operation to most European markets, the prices there were slightly less than in the commercial stores since the farmers brought whatever excess food they had to the market. The government took its share and provided for their own needs, and said without a ration card to those who had money to buy.

American cigarettes, soap and other staples were available in the embassy commissary, Colonel Schumann said, but there were rationed otherwise.

Shortly after he left the Soviet, Colonel Schumann said, the government abolished rationing and combined the commercial and ration store thus squeezing out the competition in the farmer's market, and at the same time devaluated the ruble.

Entertainment in Moscow is limited—to that made and produced in the Soviet Union. In the two and one-half years he spent there, Colonel Schumann said he did not see an American-made movie outside of the American embassy.

He said that free travel anywhere in the Soviet was prohibited. Written application for a travel permit had to be submitted and permission was rarely granted except for trips to Leningrad, regarded as the showplace of the Soviet Union. Travel in Moscow was permitted freely except for certain buildings and places which the guard tells you the Russian equivalent of "seram," Colonel Schumann said.

That too was changed, he added. After I left the government issued a directive listing the areas which were free and those which could be visited freely. The majority of roads out of Moscow for automobile travel without authorization but two or three did remain open. The policy of strictly delineating the restricted areas did result in a little more freedom of travel.

For religious worship in Moscow, he said, the embassy staff, whether Catholic or Protestant, attended the Catholic church because services were conducted by an American priest. There were, however, other churches available.

The much discussed Soviet system of marriage and divorce has changed radically within a few years, Colonel Schumann said. Prior to World War II it was a simple matter to either marry or divorce. The method was dubbed the "postcard system."

Those who wished to marry had only to register at a Soviet bureau and on their passports was noted the fact that the two

Colonel Recalls

so now, while it is still easy to marry, a divorce is more difficult to obtain," Colonel Schumann said.

Couples seeking a divorce must make an announcement to that effect in a paper published for that purpose, he said, and in Moscow, a city almost comparable to New York in population, he counted an average of 30 announcements per issue, leading to the conclusion that because of that regulation the length of time required to obtain a divorce is considerably extended.

Commenting on the recent claims of the Soviet that Russian citizens could prove or disprove the claims, Only official publications are available to the people, he said, and the U. S. S. R. and on the news published magazines and newspapers are available. Though there are many publications carrying news in Russia, he said, the leading three newspapers are Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, Red Star, official organ of the Red Army, and Izvestia, official publication of the Soviet government. Those three, he said, represent the news as released by the official Soviet government and are supposed to be the source of all news of general interest.

But he said the Russian people have a choice of either believing what they are permitted to read or being skeptical without knowing the truth or the way or the other.

Part of Colonel Schumann's responsibilities as assistant military attaché was reading and interpreting daily issues of the Red Star and Pravda for the then U. S. military attaché, Maj. Gen. Robert C. Macdonald, now deputy chief of the army ground forces.

The "Voice of America," a program about America, written and produced by employees of the U. S. State department and beamed to the Soviet Union, was being received in Moscow during his stay there. To his knowledge at that time, Colonel Schumann said, there was no effective "jamming" of the program, although at present reception of the program in the Soviet is said to be seriously disrupted.

The magazine "America," a publication of the State department is shipped to the embassy in Moscow. Written and published here in the United States, about 50,000 copies of each issue are received by the embassy and for distribution to a Soviet agency magazine, "America," tells the story of life in the United States. Giving a copy of "America" to a Russian is like giving a friend an expensive gift for his birthday.

Some professional men in the Soviet, such as engineers, still receive American technical magazines but United States publications are not generally available to the Russian public.

The advance of literacy in Russia has made strides, Colonel Schumann said, but the rate of literacy was, in his opinion, higher than the four or five per cent claimed by the Soviet. Often when entering restricted zones, he said, and showing his pass to the guards, the official rubber stamp was their only means of evading the claims.

Only in the library to read the U. S. S. R. and on the news published magazines and newspapers are available. Though there are many publications carrying news in Russia, he said, the leading three newspapers are Pravda, official organ of the Communist party, Red Star, official organ of the Red Army, and Izvestia, official publication of the Soviet government. Those three, he said, represent the news as released by the official Soviet government and are supposed to be the source of all news of general interest.

TIC Food Service

Receives Praise

Infantry Center food service personnel received a hearty pat on the back this week from a special representative of the Third Army quartermaster general.

Maj. Joseph W. Brearly, the food service officer who recently inspected food service facilities at Fort Benning, commended in his report that "a very active and constructive food service program is in effect at Fort Benning."

Third Troops Move To Portrex Training Area

THEY WILL MOVE . . . The above series of photographs show glimpses of the Third Infantry division as they moved from Fort Benning to Little Creek, Va., where they will continue an amphibious training course preparatory to Operation Portrex in the Caribbean in March. The left view of the Third Infantry Tank company's position is limited merely to a field car for the rail movement from Fort Benning to Charleston, S. C. The right, a Third Medical Battalion, enroute.

IT TAKES FIVE WEEKS AND IT'S A HARD GRIND BUT THEY ARE PROUD OF THEIR OUTFIT . . . Shown above are photographs of some of the outstanding phases of training students in the Infantry School's airborne course. Upper row, left to right, the first phase of training is physical conditioning. During the second week students are familiarized with the equipment of a paratrooper. When they have learned to pack their chutes, the students first feel the pull of the parachute harness. Middle row, left to right, they swing from the 34-foot towers and ride into piles of sawdust. The next step in training is a guided jump from the 250-foot tower. Then comes the first free-jump from the towers, the students enter the final phase, a free jump from the C-82 "flying boxcars" of the paratroopers, shown across the bottom. Each week approximately 200 men graduate from the course, which was established here nine years ago. Since that time over 124,000 men have qualified as airborne soldiers, and a total of over 850,000 parachute jumps have been made over the training area. During World War II the school trained men for the famed 82nd, 101st, 17th, 13th and 11 Airborne divisions. Both officers and enlisted men take the same course and are assigned to the same company. Besides the primary training in parachuting, the students are given classes in transportability of heavy equipment, glider familiarization, flight rules and safety precautions. The Airborne department is always included on tours of Fort Benning by visiting military and civilian dignitaries of the United States as well as foreign countries. Enlisted men and officers from several South American nations attend the course. Not only training is accomplished by the 'troopers. By going over the routine of using a paratrooper's equipment over and over again an instructor or even a student may be struck with an idea for a greater utilization of airborne equipment. The students are also trained in the proper method of securing loads to the "flying boxcars". Every student, both officer and enlisted man is attending the course on a voluntary basis. Recently a navy commander underwent the training, and called it "top in my experience".

Ring Championships at Stake Tomorrow Night

SPOTLIGHT on Jim Cloonan

Last Monday evening, at the Main post gym, the hot-shot Airborne battalion basketball team victoriously clinched the post title when it romped to an easy 73-16 victory over an outclassed Station hospital outfit. The win enabled the Troopers to take a commanding lead over the second-place Area Service unit, cagers who dropped a contest to the 15th Infantry regiment the same evening.

Although the title has not yet been decided, congratulations are in order for the Troopers who have lost only one game in four years of intra-mural play. Despite being envied by the rest of the post and in some cases disliked, because of the ease with which they win at sports, the Troopers have nevertheless compiled an amazing record in athletics.

Few people outside the Airborne battalion realize that the Troopers have only 237 men to choose from when forming their athletic teams, although they compete against teams of a legitimate level. Only 201 enlisted men and 36 officers are eligible to vie for the battalion, and all these men are cadre. Because of the rigorous training schedules, trainees are not permitted to take part in intra-mural sports on a post-wide level.

One big factor in the Airborne's post success is the terrific "esprit de corps" shown by the battalion. These men are proud of their unit, and they show it on the baseball diamond and basketball court with a tremendous will to win. They know that a victory will bring even more honors to their already crowded trophy room. A good example of this is the fact that three company commanders went out for and made the Troopers cage squad although the unit boasted an almost all-veteran team. Few, if any, of the other units on the post can claim such a record.

One argument that always arises when speaking of the Airborne is that the chulists are too cocky and unfriendly. To the people who make these statements, we can only say that they don't know the Airborne. In all the years we have been connected with sports at Benning we have never met a more friendly group of men who are willing to cooperate to the fullest degree. True, they are cocky, but they have a right to be and no one can deny that. They boast that they have good athletic teams and then back up their claims with victories.

We are not vain enough to believe that this column will immediately make the Airborne the most popular team on the post, but we have written it with the hope that those fans who root against the Airborne simply because it is the Airborne will look at the Troopers in a new light. The "chulists" have compiled an excellent sports record here which will live long after the loudest boos have faded away so let's loosen up and give credit where credit is due.

Fort Benning will say farewell to one of their top-notch sports announcers on Feb. 1, when Arthur S. Ansen leaves the post to become an instructor at Henry Grady high school in Atlanta. Most fans will remember the popular sportscaster as the man working the PA system at the army-wide baseball tourney and all home games of the Fort Benning grid Doughboys.

Another popular sports figure left the post last week. John Lockamy, well known official, departed for Florida to attend the umpire's school conducted by George Barr, former National league umpire who also officiated at the army-wide tourney here.

Once-powerful Kentucky faltered in an attempt to regain the national cage title last Saturday night as the Tennessee Vols pulled a 66-53 upset win. The triumph was the Vols' first over the Wildcats in Southeastern conference play since 1948. The bitter pill was Kentucky's second defeat of the season and it undoubtedly will cost them their No. 2 rating in the Associated Press' weekly poll.

Kentucky, N.C.A.A. champions the past two seasons, was beaten by St. John's (14-1) of Brooklyn, the nation's top ranked team. The Brooklyn Red Men were idle Saturday night and it appears that only unbeat-

Action Slated at Main Gym; ASU Clinches Team Title

Championship ring honors will be the incentive for post boxers tomorrow evening at the Main gym as the post intra-mural ring campaign comes to a close. Although the Area Service unit has already clinched the post team title, the individual weight classes are still wide open and won't be decided before a hectic three-round battle tomorrow night.

Fort Benning's most famous fighter, all-army middleweight champ Lawrence Jones, appears to be the only boxer on the post with an excellent chance of retaining his crown. Welterweight Norman Clark was also considered a shoe-in for the post welter title until last Friday evening when he had a tough time defeating Art Allen, of the 15th Infantry division artillery. Webb, a former champion in his own right, may yet take the title from the popular Clark.

Billy Fitzpatrick, another ASU man, along with Jones and Clark leads the flyweight title, although he lost a unanimous decision his last time out against Jimmy Brown of the 15th Infantry. Many top-notch bouts will feature the ring program which is scheduled to get under way at 8 p. m.

Despite the fact that three of its fighters lost last Friday, the Provisional group, Area Service unit managed to pile up 110 points for the night, was able to raise its league standing total to 760 points.

Following closely on the ASU's heels were the Dragons of the 15th Infantry regiment who tallied 100 points during the night to cement their hold on second place. The Dragons now have amassed 245 points.

The hard-luck Divarty squad, loser of several hair-line decisions, currently holds down the third spot with 120 points while the Airborne battalians post 20 markers and the Infantry School detachment 10.

Feature of the attraction of the week's card was a star-bust Pier Six brawl between Norman Clark of the ASU and Art Webb, representing Divarty. Both boys battled from the opening bell with Clark winning a split decision over the Reddy battal.

Billy Fitzpatrick, contender for the flyweight title vacated by Malcolm Davis, went down to his first service defeat in the semi-final bout when George Allen of Divarty won a unanimous decision. Allen, the aggressor throughout the bout, floored Fitzpatrick in the second canto and otherwise completely dominated the fighting.

Waymon Bailey, ASU lightweight, also tasted defeat for the first time this season as another Divarty battler, Trust Brown, won a unanimous decision approval from the officials.

Neil Palermo, another Divarty entry, piled up six points for his side when he outpointed Lester Holt of the 15th Infantry, in a middleweight bout.

Lee Baker gave the ASU, its only knockout winner of the night when he put away Howard Kelly of the 15th Infantry, in 1:21 minutes of the second round in their scheduled three-round scrap.

Other bouts on the card saw E. J. Romero of the ASU and Jim Milner of Divarty win decisions over James Garner of Divarty and Art Padilla of the 15th Infantry, respectively.

ERDELATZ INKS PACT; Vet Enrollment Shows Decline

Eddie Erdelatz took one of the nation's most murderous football schedules today. He agreed, in the small hours of the morning, to be head coach at the Naval Academy.

Erdelezat will still be up against the schedule, which includes three, but they allow a couple of breathers in between. Navy doesn't Navy's "breathers" consist of teams like Duke, Penn and Princeton.

Erdelezat is a former end coach at St. Mary's, where he also was a member of the boxing team. He served in various capacities at St. Mary's and at San Francisco before he entered the Navy in 1941.

Cincinnati (APFS) — The number of World War II veterans attending universities amid four-year colleges declined 14 percent in 1949 from the previous year's total, according to an annual university enrollment survey recently completed by Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati.

As of November 1, there were 820,841 veterans on 123 college campuses, Dr. Walters reported. They constituted 37.8 per cent of total full-time students. The peak of veteran enrollment was reached in 1947 when 1,149,933 were attending universities and colleges, according to Dr. Walters.

Well-Known Post Official Renews Sally Loop Pact

Charles Harris, with one year of professional umpiring experience behind him, revealed recently that he had signed his South Atlantic League contract for 1950 and is "very happy with the terms offered me by President Earl Blue."

Besides working at a service station here this winter, Harris, a former Army tee sergeant keeping in top-notch physical condition by officiating high school basketball games.

"Mr. Blue gave me a raise just as he said he would when I talked with him in Columbia, S. C. in December," Harris stated, "and I'm anxious for the season to get started." The South Atlantic League campaign opens on April 12 this year, one week earlier than last season.

Harris was rated by several clubs as the best umpire in the league last season, his first in professional baseball. He was signed to his first pro contract last February after having begun his officiating career while serving six years in the army.

SAM PROPHET . . . Benning Sports Idol

LEGENDARY ATHLETE NOW SPORTS OFFICIAL

To the younger men at Fort Benning the name of Sam Prophet may mean little or nothing, but to hundreds of older men who know him or who have watched him play and swim every sport on the post, it is a name synonymous with sport.

The versatile 40-year old Prophet embarked on his post athletic career just 20 years ago and throughout that span of time, has starred at baseball, football, basketball, swimming, track, tennis and golf. Now he is continuing his athletic career by officiating in post basketball and baseball games.

Sam was carving wins for Benning when most of the members of today's Doughboy teams were just getting into rompers; old-timers can still recall the times when Prophet-led Doughboy football teams rolled over great Auburn eleven times in the same season. And that was when the Plainsmen were on top of the Southeastern conference with All-American tackles Ed Shirling and "Barleycorn" Shirley.

Prophet's career in Benning athletics was interrupted by the war in 1944, when he was ordered to the European theatre. Later he was taken prisoner by the Germans in the famed "Battle of the Bulge." He remained in the custody of the enemy for over four months, after which time he was released by the Russians.

He was immediately reassigned to Fort Benning and prepared to resume his sparkling career. A second break came, however, in the form of an assignment to a Reserve Officers' Training Corps unit in Santa Barbara, Calif. At the conclusion of this tour he again returned to Benning.

Oldtimers consider the brightest day in Prophet's history to be that memorable occasion back in 1928 when he single-handedly won a football game.

Playing for his old unit, the 20th Infantry regiment, against the Tankers in a contest that involved the post championship, Sam scored all seven points to win the game 7-2.

He gathered in a Tanker punt on his own 35, faked to the right side of the field, reversed and ran the full 65 yards for a touchdown to put his team out in front 6-3. Then he kicked the extra point.

Baseball was another of Sam's great sports. For years he was a standard fixture to the 29th Infantry and Infantry School detachment teams at first base,

Airborne Five Downs ASU In Battle For League Lead

The fast-breaking Airborne battalion virtually clinched the post intra-mural basketball crown last Thursday night when it staged a second-half rally to down the Provisional group, Area Service unit, 47-39.

Both teams entered the game with identical records of 10 wins and one loss, but the superior reserve power of the "chutists" paid off, enabling them to down the ASU team for the second time this season.

Big gun in the airborne attack was Terry Scott who hit on six field goals for 12 points. Scott paced the second half rally by scoring eight markers after the intermission. Roy Smith and George Dietrich shared high scoring honors for the ASU with 11 points each.

Sparked by Smith, who notched six of his 11 points in the first period, the ASU men jumped off to an early 11-7 lead by the end of the first quarter. A big factor in the period was the inability of the Troopers to penetrate the tight zone defense set up by their foe.

Scott finally set the airborne in motion with a pop shot from the side which ignited the Troopers attack, and permitted the ASU men to hold only a slight 21-20 margin at the half.

Scott went completely wild in the third period to tally half of his team's 12 points while intercepting several vital ASU passes. The Troopers, by playing a tight man-to-man defense in this period, limited the ASU men to only one field goal, moving away to a six-point advantage at the buzzer.

The airborne attack and defense both continued in high gear in the last period as the Troopers upped their margin to 12 points with only two minutes remaining in the contest. Two late baskets by the losers enabled them to whittle the margin back down to eight points, but the buzzer ended the contest and their chance to pass the high-flying Troops. The win was the 10th in a row for the "chutists" since the Third Infantry division special troops snipped their former streak at 78 straight wins.

Phil (Cherokee) Smith, the artillery five of the Third Infantry division ran a roughshod over a hapless group of 52nd Medical Battalion cagers.

Smith, playing only half a game, poured nine field goals and one and a half points for a 19 point total. Trailling Smith in the scoring were Joe Skidmore and Bob Lindsay, and Dwyer, and Bill Besole, of the Medicals. Skidmore tallied 14 points, Lindsay, 12 and Besole 11.

The artillerymen were never in trouble, holding a 42-10 lead at the third period. Led by Bill Brooks and Bill

30th Cager Takes Lead In Point Race

Bill Cunningham, 30th Infantry regiment cager, took over the top spot in the post individual scoring race last week as he accumulated a 16 point bulge over runner-up Larry Brown of the Airborne Battalion.

Cunningham, playing for the fifth place Boars, has poured 189 points through the hoop in 10 contests for an 18-point average per game. The 30th star made his total on 83 field goals and 23 fouls.

Brown, the Airborne leader, has played in 11 games and rimmed 175 points, a 16-point average for the season.

The No. 3 spot in the loop is held by another Airborne star, Forward Vern Griffin. Griffin has also appeared in 11 games and has tallied 71 field goals and 10 fouls for 152 points. Fourth spot in the race goes to Guard Jim Payne of the Area Service unit with 64 field goals and 16 fouls for 144 markers, while the fifth spot in the scramble goes to a newcomer, Jack Martin of the Station hospital. Martin caught fire during the past few games to post a 141 point total for eight games giving him an 18 point average.

Anderson Named Cardinal Skipper; Piloted Triple-A Club Last Season

Harold (Hal) Anderson, a 42-year-old veteran of 25 years in baseball and for the past three seasons manager of the Columbus, O. Red Birds of the Class A.A. American Association, was officially named skipper of the Cardinals of the South Atlantic League.

T. G. Reeves, president of the local club, made the announcement last Thursday night. Coming here is naturally a demotion for Anderson by the likeable veteran of many baseball campaigns is happy about the change since he had only one first division club in three years at Columbus, O., and is anxious to try another pennant-winning team in 1950 at Asheville, N.C., in the Piedmont League.

Anderson is well remembered by baseball fans as a crack centerfielder for St. Paul and Columbus from 1926 to 1928 and later as a manager. He started out with Ottumwa of the Mississippi Valley League in 1924 and later played for the New York Yankees, Asheville, St. Louis, Chicago and St. Paul, and 1939 and piloted New Orleans in the Southern Association during the 1940 season. Anderson then scouted for the St. Louis Cardinals before taking over as skipper of the Red Birds in Columbus.

After his 1947 club missed the playoffs on the final day of the season, Anderson piloted his Red Birds to fourth place in 1948. They went on to eliminate Milwaukee in the first round of the playoffs and carried St. Paul's playoff winners through seven games before bowing out. Injuries to key players plagued him last year and a sixth-place finish left the veteran anxious to move to another location and a fresh start.

Calling Anderson "a very likable fellow and as smart a manager as there is in the St. Louis Cardinal organization," Club President T. G. Reeves yesterday said he was sure local baseball fans will be just as pleased as Cardinals officials are over obtaining such a fine man as Anderson to replace Kemp Wicker.

"We feel fortunate that we were able to obtain Mr. Anderson's services for 1950," said Mr. Reeves.

Tom Gordon, business manager of the local club, also was high in his praises of Anderson. "He's a good clean liver and a whale of a baseball man," said the Cardinal official.

Born at St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 10, 1904, Anderson continues to make his winter home at St. Louis. He is married and has two daughters — Dorothy Jean and M. R. Judith. During the off season in baseball he represents the Rawlings Sporting Goods company.

Anderson succeeds Kemp Wicker, who came here as a freshman manager with the reopening of the Sally league in 1946, following a three-year shut-down during World War II. Wicker won a pennant his first season and repeated in 1947. His 1948 club finished sixth and in 1949 he was left with only one Triple A farm club, Kansas City of the American Association. The others range from Class AA down to Class D.

Yankees Drop 5 From Chain

The New York Yankees announced recently they have jettisoned five clubs from their minor league farm system which now numbers 15.

The new set-up does not include Newark of the International league. The Bears are up for sale to the Chicago Cubs, who have an option on the team.

Apparently, Yankee officials feel the deal will go through since Newark is not included in their 1950 plans.

Other clubs to be dropped are Augusta, Ga., of the Sally league; Manchester, Vt., New England league; Victoria, British Columbia, Western International league; and Ventura, a 111., California State league.

Should the Newark sale be completed, the Yankees would club finished sixth and in 1949 he was left with only one Triple A farm club, Kansas City of the American Association. The others range from Class AA down to Class D.

Maxim, Mills to Meet In Championship Bout

Manager Ted Broadribb said today that nothing could stop the title match in London Jan. 24 between his fighter, world light-heavyweight champion Freddie Mills and Jory Maxim, of Cleveland.

"Mills is going to box Maxim for the title in London Jan. 24," Broadribb said, commenting on Cincinnati Promotor Sam Beckor's statement that he planned a suit to restrain Maxim from fighting here.

UNIFICATION OF TRAINING STAFF POLISHES INFANTRY COMBAT TECHNIQUE
 Maj. W. H. Mulder, Navy; Maj. T. J. Cross, Marine Corps; Col. Douglas Sugg, Army; and Lt. Col. P. C. Rawlins, Airforce, Represent All Armed Forces Branches

Four Armed Forces Delegates Aid In Infantry Center Planning Project

Infantry Center armed forces unification, not to be omitted in the national analysis, has developed into a booming success after many months of experimental use in training programs. In the Tactical department office of Colonel Douglas Sugg at the Infantry School, four men, representing all armed forces, are combining their time-tested training experience to teach Fort Benning's infantrymen how to survive should be faced with war again.

With Colonel Sugg, on the training committee are Ensign William H. Mulder, navy representative; Maj. Thomas J. Cross, marine corps; and Lt. Col. Philip C. Rawlins of the airforce. Ensign Mulder, comparatively new to the navy game but well-versed in naval combat tactics, was a student at the Infantry School before actively participating in the panel's training mission. The young naval officer is responsible for tutoring infantry instructors in the technique of coordinated air-infantry landing operations.

Major Cross, a combat-tested veteran of the marines, is incorporating his experience of beachhead assault into infantry training. It is his primary duty to thoroughly indoctrinate infantry instructors on what tactics are to be used in initial landing operations, the theory behind the campaigns in the sweeping World War II Pacific theater offensive.

Colonel Rawlins, the airforce's representatives, acquaints students and instructors with the mission of the air arm in infantry combat operations. Aerial assault and airborne delivery are included in his program to teach students unified combat tactics. As coordinator of the four-man board, Colonel Sugg is responsible for combining these various combat techniques for use in Infantry School training programs, those that set the pace for the entire army.

Menu Board Meets Today

Sgt. 1st cl Raymond B. Gray, the "jumping" food service technician of Headquarters company, Airborne battalion, will be the guest representative on this month's Infantry Center Menu board which meets today.

Other members of the board are Maj. John A. Rilovich, chairman and Infantry Center Food Service supervisor; Maj. V. Wade Humpton, quartermaster sales officer; Maj. Leonard H. Card, post medical officer; Lt. Roy Stevens, ration distribution officer; Lt. Kenneth Kinter, meat cutting plant officer; Lt. William H. Dixon, pastry officer, and Lt. J. M. Burkett, Third Infantry division Food Service supervisor.

Meeting once every month, the board plans menus several months in advance. At today's meeting the April menu will be discussed.

Major Rilovich said that it is the purpose of the members to discuss foods included on the master menu from Washington and their acceptance by troops. He added that where a food is found to be unacceptable or not generally liked by personnel, an agreed substitution may be made by the board.

Each month guest representatives are invited to attend the board's meeting. Major Rilovich declared that it is the aim of the members to improve Infantry Center menus.

Discharge Route Cut by New Rule

Further regulations covering discharge of army personnel prior to expiration of enlistment to bring the army within budget limitations have been revealed by the Department of the Army.

The new regulations provide that any regular army enlisted man within the zone of the interior, except 21-month enlistees, who is due for discharge during February, March or April, and who makes application for discharge in writing, will be discharged during January.

Any enlisted man due for separation during February, March and April, and who does not qualify for reenlistment because he has not reached the grade of private first class, will be discharged during January. However, no man will be discharged if his unit commander states in writing that he expects the man to be promoted to a grade which would make him eligible for reenlistment prior to normal expiration of service. No man with legal dependents will be discharged against his desire, and unit commanders have been instructed that no man be reduced in grade solely for the purpose of discharge.

During January only all applications for discharge for dependency or hardship will be carefully considered or reconsidered, and favorable consideration given to all borderline cases, regardless of whether the conditions existed at time of enlistment, and, to all cases where such discharge would be to the best interest of the service.

Enlisted men awaiting trial or otherwise involved in army jurisdiction as a result of physical disability can not take advantage of the special regulations.

The provisions of the new directive said that the separation program, outlined is not expected to be repeated.

Those who are eligible for discharge under the provisions will be separated in two groups, the first by Jan. 19 and the second by Jan. 28.

All those who request separation should do so in order that processing may be accomplished by Jan. 31.

Bayonet Answers Feature 'Fix Charges

One of The Bayonet's most popular and widely read features, Soldier of the Week, was under fire this week from several critics of the publication who questioned the method used in selecting the weekly winner.

Each meeting, at which the winner is selected for the following week, is closely conducted and recorded by representatives of the Infantry Center commanding general. Yet, the questioning critics say the legality of a method used in the selection is not valid.

The Soldier of the Week selection board, appointed by the commanding general of Fort Benning, is composed of the following persons: Capt. Charles W. Kilpatrick, 15th Infantry regiment, president of the board; Sgt. 1st cl Emmett E. Wooten, 24th Infantry regiment, 1st Lt. N. G. King, 344th Area Service unit; 1st Lt. John T. Dunphy, 24th Infantry regiment; Sgt. Fred A. Aldridge, Infantry School detachment; and M. Sgt. William C. Holt, Third Infantry division artillery.

On March 20, 1949, through the suggestion of the Infantry Center public information officer and the subsequent approval of the post's commanding general,

The editors or staff members of The Bayonet, however, have no connection with the "trade" of the Week other than writing the feature. Selections are made now in effect, it is inconceivable that accusations of the "trade" could be perpetrated by anyone reading the feature.

21 Enlisted Men Get Promotions

Twenty-one privates first class of Area Service unit Provisional group components recently were promoted to corporal.

Members of the 66th Transportation Truck company awarded the corporal's ratings were Andrew J. Johnson, George Clark, Zephie Drakes, Willie C. Jennings, Booker Stubblefield, Davie Price, William J. M. Heywood, George Richardson, Philip Wright, Donald Brown, Dugas Sterling, Joe N. Allen, Timothy Thornton and Herman E. Page.

The group also included Benjamin W. Skeen, Charles Ghigle and Louis A. Collier of the 66th Army Postal unit; Delbert L. Hodge and Roy L. Tackett of Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, and William G. McDowell and Donald F. Carroll of Military Police detachment, Section I.

WAC Private Promoted

Pvt. Hazel E. Ewing, a member of Fort Benning's Wac detachment, has been promoted to private first class.

credit, and he's not asking for loans. In checking the various loan agencies and finance companies, the conclusion is that the GI is departing from the habit of getting large loans or asking for much credit from the GI. One loan company executive said he expected a small decline in business from the GI, but he certainly affords a more liberal buying spree to the soldier. He is not as likely to borrow as in years before, I think, however, living standards appetites increase no matter how far you progress. They've raised their income to meet living demand, but shortly their living demand will outgrow that income again. An automobile finance agency said fewer applications had been received in the past few months than in the same period in 1948. To be a result of the pay raise, said that GI's were apparently making cash payments for autos. They said, however, that they expected applications to increase again and loans to grow. Feeling the pulse of GI buying in Columbus department and clothing stores resulted in noting a decided increase in three of the largest general merchandise stores, managers said that "tremendous rise in buying by military personnel has been observed since the Christmas season began late in November. Household furnishings and clothing take large positions in store sales according to store executives. One manager observed that wives and children were outfitting themselves in latest fashions, replacing the old, outdated wardrobes with fancier clothes. One manager who wears a uniform during the day, is buying "Sunday bests" and sports clothes for holiday and party going. The survey also showed that automobile sales have received a shot in the arm from the Fort Benning military also due to increased pay. The increase hasn't been phenomenal or astounding, but noticeable, dealers declared. "N. P. Clum, store manager for a large Columbus automobile sales and service business, declared that his company's business has gotten a "very appreciable" amount of business from the GI's since the pay boost fatten soldiers' wallets. He reflected that sales have not only increased, but the down payment has generally been for a higher amount. "I definitely think Fort Benning personnel are buying that long-sought auto," Claymore said. "December was an especially good month for us because many soldiers are buying new cars." He also said the service department of the company's business had hit a healthy stride. Many repairs are being attended to which had been neglected because of money shortages, he opined. The Fort Benning family is buying more food for bigger stores shows. In practically all of the larger markets, clerks, and inventories indicate increased buying by military personnel. In one of the large chain stores, a cashier who checks foods said, "We have soldiers and their families passing through here all day. Most of them are buying fancier foods plus the trimmings. Steaks and other heretofore expensive items are getting their attention. Yes, I think the pay raise must have something to do with it." In the entertainment category, Fort Benning personnel are giving a more than hefty boost to Columbus, Phenix City and Fort Benning night spots. One Phenix City night club owner, who had no qualms against revealing an exact increase of business from soldiers' patrons, said his business had almost tripled during December over the same 1948 month. "Of course," he said, "our shows have been of better quality and we've put in more tables, instead of just sitting and watching the show as they've done in years past, soldiers are buying food and beverages to round out the evening." On the post, Sgt. Edward Rodgers, manager of the Pine Lodge NCO club, said there was a more than $5,000 per month increase in business over 1948, of each month. One teller reflected a general comment among bank employees when she said that more uniforms had appeared at her window during the past few months, and that the deposit slips "seemed" larger than previous ones. In a nutshell, the Fort Benning GI is finding more places to spend his new increases, but at the same time, is finding these outlets essential to a higher plane of existence. In cases, he's doing now what he had to postpone several years ago.

Solons Told Draft Unnecessary Now

Army Secretary Gordon Gray assured congress this week that the army does not plan to induct any men under the peacetime draft "in the foreseeable future."

Mr. Gray made the statement in appearing before the house armed services committee to urge a three-year extension of the selective service law as an aid to speedy mobilization should the country be plunged into war. The secretary stressed that the army does not intend to use selective service to "maintain its peacetime strength."

But he said, the very existence of a draft law "has in my opinion been a deterrent to aggressor nations during the last 30 years and a half" and should prove so in a future.

The question of renewing the Selective Service Act, of 1948 and congressional quarters since early December. At least 30,000 draftees who were inducted under this bill began to receive discharges in late December. By Feb. 1, it is hoped that all of these one-year men will be separated.

Lt. H. A. Jenkins Named Unit CO

First Lt. Harold A. Jenkins, former platoon leader in Company I, 15th Infantry Regiment, recently assumed command of the regiment's Company K. During World War II, Lieutenant Jenkins served in the Mediterranean and European theaters of operation, and performed stateside duties at Camp Breckenridge, Ky., and Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

Lieutenant Jenkins, who has been at Fort Benning since last November is authorized to wear the Combat Infantry badge, Bronze Star medal, American Theater medal, European Theater medal with three battle stars, World War II Victory medal and Army of Occupation medal.

A former Reserve Officers' Training corps student at Wilberforce university, Lieutenant Jenkins entered the army as a second lieutenant on June 11, 1942, from Scranton, Pa., his home town.

Bell Establishes Payment Offices

Following a pattern set in larger cities, the Southern Bell Telephone Company has established four agencies where payment of telephone bills may be made.

In making the announcement, F. B. Patterson, district manager of the company, said that the establishment of the agencies came as a result of the rapid growth of Columbus and its metropolitan area.

The agencies have been established at Benning Park pharmacy, 2000 Cusseta road; Cash drug store, 3717 Second avenue; Goode's drug store, 1822 Talbotton road; and Booth's drug store, 614 Sixth street in Phenix City.

Tool Operators Need Clearance

Starting this week, all persons desiring to use power tools in the Infantry Center hobby shop will have to be cleared by the instructor before they are permitted to use them. 2nd Lt. J. W. Mullaney, hobby shop director, has announced.

Once a person has been cleared by the instructor, a form will be kept on file, and it will not be necessary for him to demonstrate his ability to use the tools repeatedly. Lieutenant Mullaney said.

For hobbyists who haven't proven their ability to use the power tools, instructions are being offered at 1 p. m. each Wednesday and Saturday in the hobby shop.

Lieutenant Mullaney pointed out that the new procedure governing use of the power implements is being put into effect as an accident prevention measure.

Post Mountaineer Leaves For Killimaniaro Venture

Fort Benning's peak scaling adventurer, 1st Lt. William D. Hackett, last week began a 45-day leave that will take him deep into the heart of Africa for a dual mountain climbing venture.

The new exploit will offer Lieutenant Hackett the summits of Kilbo and Mawenzi, the two sharp peaks of the famous Mt. Killimaniaro, the tallest-known mountain in Africa as objectives. Ernest Hemingway, noted author and explorer, made the mountain famous in his best-selling book, "The Snows of Killimaniaro."

Lieutenant Hackett is already renowned for his mountain climbing feats, having climbed more than 200 of the world's most challenging peaks. To date, he has conquered the heights of four of the six tallest peaks in North America. Mt. McKinley being one of those. In addition, he is believed to be the only man in the world who has climbed the top peaks of two continents, Aconcagua (29,081) in South America and McKinley (29,269) in North America.

Lieutenant Hackett will fly to the British colony of Kenya, where he will make initial preparations for the climb. The second leg of the 5,000-mile trip will be by bus to Marangu, from there.

Unit Headquarters Receives Two EM

Two enlisted men were transferred last week to the Infantry School detachment and temporarily assigned to detachment headquarters.

It Should Be Required Reading

Every so often a book is published which upsets the customary routine of trash and trivia which has been thrust upon the American reading public under the guise of "literature."
Dr. Vannevar Bush's significant contribution to America's Security, "Modern Arms and Free Men," is one of those all-too-rare books.
Required reading for all faculty members of the progressively alert Infantry School, it should be required reading for all members of our armed forces. More than any other book, "Modern Arms and Free Men" takes inventory of our weapons, tactics and our national security.

Because the contents of this book affect the lives of all of us at the Infantry Center, we feel obliged to omit our usual editorial and use this space to call your attention to this provocative work.

"Modern Arms and Free Men" takes the reader through the development of our weapons, from the World War I machine gun through the proximity fuse, guided missiles and the atom bomb.

Dr. Bush analyzes each weapon—its potentialities as well as its limitations—placing each in its proper slot in the military arsenal of democracy.

He casts an objective eye at our military establishment set-up and points out its strength and weakness—especially in its relations with civilians and scientists.

We were pleased to note that Dr. Bush points out one thing which we have constantly stressed: the United States will never attack anyone. If war comes, it will be of our choosing.

We were also pleased to note that Dr. Bush rightfully labels as so much hot air the too-frequent vowel movements of gossip columnists turned military strategists who persist in prophesying future wars as "push-button warfare."

While Dr. Bush traces the progress of scientific achievements in modern war, less than half the book is devoted to the technical phase of science in war. In later chapters, total war, subversive war, totalitarianism, dictatorship and democracy are discussed.

The professional soldier might be offended by some of Dr. Bush's criticism of the National Military Establishment in a section devoted to military planning.

One of his prime targets for criticism is the Central Intelligence Agency, which he says "creaks at the joints." He points out that in any future war, the United States will be the prime target. Since the preparations for war are on such a large scale, there is no reason why we can't be forewarned, he says. An efficient intelligence agency will turn the trick and prevent another Pearl Harbor, according to the eminent scientist.

In conclusion, Dr. Bush trumpets the horn for military preparedness which, he says, though expensive, is a necessity. He believes our sources of strength are our widespread industrialization, our democratic way of life and our system of free enterprise. He leaves the impression that World War III is not a certainty and feels assured that science and the military, marching along arm in arm, will endure in the world of science in war. It is written in layman's language, and we recommend to you "Modern Arms and Free Men." It's available at the post libraries, the Infantry School library and the Infantry School bookstore.

EM May Apply For 'Skip' Promotions

Army career plan promotion regulations are being revised to permit enlisted personnel now serving in grades lower than grades formerly held to apply for promotion examination in their field and MOS, up to and including their previous higher grade. Former commissioned, warrant or flight officers may apply for examination for promotion up to and including grade E-7. These "skip" promotions can be made without regard for normal time-in-grade requirements. Overall time in service requirements are to be established for EM applicants.

Marine corps majors are especially invited to make application. The course may be taken for its educational value, without commitment to public information duty on completion of training.

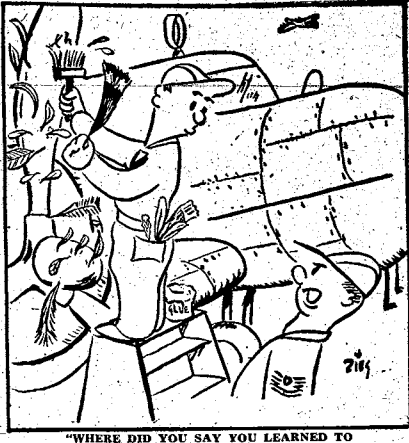

Provisions of the new armed forces' budget, if enacted, will require the services to follow a uniform policy in deducting full rental allowances from the pay of personnel permanently occupying government quarters at military installations. These provisions would chiefly affect the navy, which has made concessions in some cases by charging somewhat less than full allowance for quarters considered below standard.

Jesus Set Pattern for Abundant Existence

By CHAPLAIN SÍLAS L. WEEMS
Many people seem to have the idea that religion is something to put a damper on living, something that makes it necessary for man to deny himself the things that make life worthwhile. Religion is thought of as something to die with rather than to live by, as "Pie in the Sky." Religion thought of in such a way is that it is a burden, a religious service to attend, a prayer to say or a donation to make. No doubt many people find their religion meaning no more than this to them, they find no real joy or help for daily living. Many more make no pretense of being religious for the reason that something more is needed.
Jesus said "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." John 10:10. Religion for Him was not something unreal or unnatural but life itself. The Bible indicates that man was created in the image of God and for good—"God created man in his own image, in the image of God created he him. And God blessed them, and God said unto them, be fruitful, and multiply, and replenish the earth, and subdue it: and

A SORT OF A SAGA BY BILL MAULDIN
WILLIAM SLOANE ASSOCIATES, PUBLISHERS
By ALLEN L. MULLIKIN

A Sort of a Saga is sort of funny. As the first volume on the second shelf of The Bayonet bookcase this book marks a departure by your reviewer from radio scripting and a departure by Mr. Mauldin from caustic comment on topical subjects.
With only an occasional barb for politicians, the author covers slightly more than the first decade of his life in this partial autobiography. The reader first meets young Bill chain-smoking pliffed cigarettes at the age of three. From there one is shifted about New Mexico and Arizona to follow the formative years of what must be one of the most unorthodox upbringings on record.

The entire Mauldin family gets in on the act. Although the author drags in a confusing number of relatives for the first episodes, he settles later for the antics of his immediate family. Pop Mauldin is the instigator of the erratic family behavior with his continual get-rich-quick schemes. His projects range from erecting tourist cabins on the old home place to planting an orchard in the Arizona desert. The mother calmly settles her brood wherever the family provider leads—be it a tent, a sheep pasture or a box made of planks and screen wire in the Arizona desert. Older brother Sid and young Bill enjoy the carefree life that is interrupted only occasionally by the formal education that mars the average childhood.

Linked together only loosely by geography and time the episodes of the book are individual vignettes from the life of Bill Mauldin. Evidently a story teller at heart, the author capitalizes on the human comedy of each incident. Once it is the anguish of a small boy who is humiliated because he makes a beautiful bridesmaid in the local Tom Thumb Wedding. Again there is the aching of an adolescent without funds to become a dude cowboy.

Speaking of humor, Mr. Mauldin finds much of it in the animals he has known. A variety of goats, dogs, cows and horses become attached to the family, and their antics are almost as hilarious as those of the two-legged specimens. The family goat was called Nanny, probably the only conventionality ever recognized by the Mauldins. Nanny dutifully provided the family with milk of animal kindness, but she had her little eccentricities. One of the funniest stories in the book is about the bunge Nanny threw with a crock of home-made beer with soap in it. A bull calf was another member of the Mauldin menagerie. Head-butting contests with this animal friend became embarrassingly one-sided for young Bill when the bovine grew older and larger. A variety of ferocious muffs and plow-horses with personalities complete the family circle.

One disappointment in Saga is the illustrations by Mr. Mauldin. Only a few of the drawings are comparable to his war-time pinning. Here the author seems too intent on capturing the detail set forth in words that he overlooks the intrinsic comedy. Not hesitating to rib himself unmercifully in the first person narration, Mauldin makes the pictures gentle to the point of dullness.

By going back to the events of his very young life Bill Mauldin has produced a readable little book that is as easy-going as its title. The way the incidents of this book quickly pile up that then stop rather than end raises the hope of this reviewer that Bill Mauldin will soon present to the public a record of the second decade of his life.

Dean Hudson To Play Here

A one-night stand next Wednesday will bring Dean Hudson and his orchestra to two Fort Benning theaters. Following a 6:30 show at the Main theater, the Hudson musical aggregation will move out to Sand Hill for an 8:30 performance at Theater No. 7.

The visit by Hudson, who was stationed at Benning as an airborne officer during the war, will mark his second professional appearance here. The band played its first engagement on the post last March.
Also returning with the band for a second appearance, the Sherry Sisters will provide entertainment that is easy on both the eyes and the ears in the vocalistic department.

Lanny Love, who writes the Hudson arrangements, is billed as a singing pianist. Other featured performers include comedian-trombonist Phil Bowers and crooner Johnny McCoy.
The Hudson Glee club and Dixieland band will complete the variety of talent.
Admission to both performances will be 50 cents per person.

Where Forms Are Available

Here's an interesting note for Pennsylvania veterans who haven't applied for their World War I bonuses.
An Infantry School officer who applied for his bonus this week said application forms may be obtained from the World War II Veterans Compensation Bureau, Fort Benning, Pa., or from the Georgia director of veteran's affairs, Atlanta, Ga.
The informant pointed out, however, that forms may be obtained from state bureau handling similar actions.

To Amuse You Today

The young sailor wondered why she shivered every time he kissed her until he discovered she was wearing a backless evening gown and he was still holding an ice cream cone.
Maid (on phone): "I'm sorry, but she told me to say she wasn't home."
Sarge: "That's too bad. I wanted to tell her I was glad it couldn't come."

Aldman: "What kind of a PX is this? You sell cigars and bawl me out if I smoke one."
Clerk: "We sell bath towels, too."
No wonder librarians go nuts. One marine trainee asked for "a book called 'The Red Ship.'" After checking she found out he wanted "The Rubaiyat."

A golfer, trying to get out of a trap remarked, "I say, the traps on this course are very annoying, aren't they?"
Second golfer, trying to putt, "Yes, would you mind closing yours?"

He: "You're the first model I've ever kissed since I started painting."
She: "How many have you had?"
He: "Four. An apple, two bananas and you."

You need to be quite a juggler if you have a reputation to keep up and a reputation to live down.

The table was decorated with low arrangements of yellow and white mums, and place cards carried out the floral theme with yellow and white mums.

In addition to some 40 members of the section, the following special guests attended the luncheon: Mrs. Smith, mother of Mrs. W. H. Burr; Mrs. Dewey, mother of Mrs. F. O. Black; Mrs. David Conley; and Mrs. Conley, mother and sister-in-law of Mrs. C. Drain.

Mrs. Bragg, guest of Mrs. R. C. Hamilton; Mrs. Stephens, mother of Mrs. Louis Moore; Mrs. Wilson, mother of Mrs. J. E. Franzen; Mrs. H. C. Taylor, mother-in-law of Mrs. M. C. Taylor.

Dependents Urged To Correct Defects

Military dependents scheduled to leave the U. S. for overseas stations were warned this week to have any known remedial medical or dental defects corrected prior to departure.

According to an announcement from Third army headquarters, failure to do so may cause undue personal suffering because of the shortage of medical and dental personnel and lack of civilian facilities in overseas stations.

Class in Final Week

Basic airborne, class No. 20, with 137 enlisted men, four officers and seven Yugoslavian army enlisted men enrolled, has begun its fifth and final week of training.

General to Express Views On Far East at Club Meet

Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, deputy commander of the Third Army and wartime chief of the famed First Cavalry division, will be guest speaker at the next general meeting of the Officers' Club on Friday, with Mrs. P. M. Feb. 8 at the Officers' club.

The club president, Mrs. Marcus D. Bell, will conduct the business meeting, and the program arranged by Mrs. Carl E. Frisby, program chairman, and Mrs. Athel Baugert, co-chairman, will feature Mrs. Harold W. Browning, coloratura soprano, and her accompanist, Mrs. Glenn A. Soderstrom. Following the program, there will be a tea.

Battalion Ladies Hold Luncheon

Ladies of the Second battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, held their monthly luncheon at the Officers' club on Tuesday, with Mrs. Fred Mitchell and Mrs. John Hogen as hostesses.

The luncheon table was centered with a silver bowl of red carnations, with trailers of ivy down the length of the table, and flanked by tapers in silver holders. A side table was decorated with a miniature wheelbarrow filled with white narcissi and jonquils. Place cards were in a floral motif.

The serving table was centered with an oblong crystal bowl filled with ivy and flanked by white tapers in crystal holders circled by ivy.

The guest list included, in addition to the honorees and their wives, Mrs. D. W. Syverson, Mrs. C. S. Irick, Jr., Mrs. M. Richardson, Mrs. D. C. Wilson, Mrs. C. Lash, Mrs. C. J. Davis, Mrs. J. H. Hogen, and Mrs. Fred Mitchell.

Decorations will be by the house committee headed by Mrs. William G. Bickley, chairman, Mrs. Paul Liles and Mrs. George Clayton.

Birthday Party Honors Ladies

Mrs. R. L. Foster and Mrs. John Scoville entertained on Tuesday at the Foster quarters with a joint birthday and handkerchief shower, honoring Mrs. Robert E. Lamb and Mrs. Clifford Brown.

The pink and white birthday cake was placed at one end of the table, while trays of sand-wiches and cookies were placed at the other end. A decorated coat hanger with the handkerchiefs pinned on was presented to the honoree.

Those attending were Mrs. Raymond Brown, Mrs. Edward Hittner, Mrs. Ewald Knuth, Mrs. Henry Prather, Mrs. Isidore Lazar, Mrs. Charlie Mitchell, Mrs. Willard Squier and daughter, Mrs. John Miller, Mrs. Walter Martin, Mrs. Wilbur Sasser, Mrs. Earl Sprinkle, Mrs. George Scoville, Mrs. J. H. Dobrosky, the honorees and the hostesses.

Departing Matron Honored at Party

Mrs. J. F. Dobrosky and Mrs. Isidor Lazar entertained on Friday with an aperitif party at the Dobrosky quarters, honoring Mrs. James Keenan who is leaving the post.

The serving table was centered with an oblong crystal bowl filled with ivy and flanked by white tapers in crystal holders circled by ivy.

The guest list included, in addition to the honorees and their wives, Mrs. D. W. Syverson, Mrs. C. S. Irick, Jr., Mrs. M. Richardson, Mrs. D. C. Wilson, Mrs. C. Lash, Mrs. C. J. Davis, Mrs. J. H. Hogen, and Mrs. Fred Mitchell.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: WHAT ARE YOU GOING TO DO WHEN YOU RETURN TO CIVILIAN LIFE AND DO YOU FEEL THAT YOUR ARMY EXPERIENCE HAS HELPED YOU?

PFC. CHARLES E. HAYES, Medical company, 15th Infantry Regiment: I'm going to be a farmer. I was raised on a farm and know something about farming. I think my time in the army has been a help to me. I taught me the value of getting along with other people.

PVT. JACK SPEAR, Medical Company, 15th Infantry Regiment: I'm going to college when I get out. I was a freshman when I came into the army and am wanting to major in wildlife conservation. I think my experience in the army taught me a great deal about first aid and above all it has taught me how to get along with all types of people. In the army, but I like civilian life better.

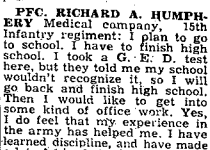

PVT. WILLIAM BACORN, Medical company, 15th Infantry Regiment: I feel my army experience has helped me a lot. I have learned a lot from traveling, have done a lot of it in my time in the army. For a couple of months I am planning to help my father in his dairy and after that my plans are sort of indefinite, but I have hopes of becoming a first rate mechanic in the not too distant future.

PFC. JOHN C. OSBORN, Heavy Mortar Company, 20th Infantry Regiment: My plans so far are to get into construction work probably as an apprentice bricklayer. Since my father is in this line of work, I'm planning to help him when I get out. I think the army has helped me a great deal in personal experiences, and it has helped me to learn how to get along with all kinds of people.

PFC. RICHARD A. HUMPHREY, Infantry company, 20th Infantry Regiment: I plan to go to school. I have to finish high school. I took a G. E. D. test here, but they told me my school wouldn't recognize it, so I will go back and finish high school. Then I would like to get into some kind of office work. Yes, I do feel that my experience in the army has helped me a great deal. I have learned discipline, and have made a lot of friends in the army.

PFC. NILES WINTER, Medical company, 15th Infantry Regiment: I'm going back to college when I get out. I was in college before I came into the service, had one and a half years at Texas university. I am majoring in psychology. I don't know if I can say truthfully that my year in the army has helped me, but they have taught me to get along with people. I am not sorry I got into the army, but I do recommend the army as a career, though I do think Fort Benning is one of the finest places I have ever been.

Student of Week Feature Started

Board to Select Outstanding Food Service Trainee Officials Cite Paratrooper

Pfc. Melvin H. Cutter, a member of the 378th Airborne Field Artillery Battalion of the 8th Air Division, N. C. who is enrolled in the Third Army Food Service School here, was named Student of the Week by school officials. Private Cutter, who has only 10 months of service under his belt, has been described by his instructors and school officials as an "exceptional student."

In naming the 20-year old food technician Student of the Week, officials of the school said that he constantly maintains excellent personal appearance, keeps his quarters in an outstanding state of police, and is always cooperative with his instructors and fellow students and instructors. Private Cutter, who is scheduled to graduate on Feb. 4 after completing 14 weeks of cook's training, also is a qualified paratrooper. He is married, and his home is Lakeland, Fla.

Device Developed For Arctic Tests

SEATTLE, Wash. (APFS)—Sub-arctic tests are being made of a new device to measure the effects of cold weather on the human body. The cold weather apparatus was recently developed at the University of Washington in a research project sponsored by the Air Force's Air Materiel Command. The device is a hooded suit with built-in tubes and wires connecting with 38 body points. It operates on the principle of a telephone switchboard in that the wearer can dial any part of the body and get the response recorded on a graph. In addition, a chest panel is connected to another apparatus which measures the heat production of the body.

Four Enlisted Men Advanced In Grade

Four enlisted men of the Infantry School detachment were promoted recently. Cpl. Julius J. Felber, Jr., Company H, was advanced to sergeant; Pfc. Marcus M. Flouret and Norman A. Meese, Detachment headquarters, were promoted to corporal; and Pvt. Herbert Holden of Company A was awarded a private first class rating.

Army Set To Inaugurate Modified ORC Program

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray announced today that during the next three months the army will institute a modification of the present organized reserve program. Secretary Gray declared that changes which will be put into operation will result in a substantial improvement in the efficiency and readiness of the reserve. It will take about three months to accomplish necessary steps incident to establishment of the program. Full details of the plan will be available to army commanders about April 1, by which time it is planned that all administrative details and implementing directives will be completed. Summarized briefly, the new organization will set up active reserve, an inactive reserve and an honorary reserve. The active reserve will be made up of personnel from all units within prescribed time limits to insure maximum mobilization readiness. However, provision will be made for advancement units required for early mobilization to a fully organized status as funds permit and the 23 cadre divisions will be retained. Secretary Gray pointed out that cost estimates reveal that the annual recurring costs of the old ORC program would reach about $369,000,000 as opposed to an estimated $153,000,000 for the new plan. Also, provision will be made alleviating the unsatisfactory promotion problem in the ORC, Mr. Gray declared. "Terminal promotions made at the end of the war have resulted in a too-heavy grade structure," he said. "Provisions of public law No. 810, establishing retirement benefits, have materially slowed volunteer attrition. These two factors have made professional advancement difficult. This situation has been improved by a firm troop basis in the organized reserve and a firm requirement in the volunteer reserve. We have now been able to formulate an improved promotion system." The new plan will call for the ultimate establishment of 32 centers for reserve training, at which instruction will be designed to increase the efficiency of each individual. Nearby government installations will be used to the fullest extent possible for this purpose. Mr. Gray also pointed out that lack of adequate unit facilities has been a major obstacle to the rapid growth of the ORC. Under the new program which will reduce the number of units, he said, "this difficulty is materially reduced." He added that in the main sufficient training equipment for reserves is on hand to meet minimum requirements, and that if a planned additional 5,000,000 square feet of facilities can be provided, the old problems of both space and facilities will be solved. In summary, Secretary Gray said that the following salient features upon which the new program is based should materially improve the whole organized reserve corps program: a. Adequate troop basis is established b. Progressive, efficient training is provided. c. Sound system of promotion and attrition will be established. d. The facilities program can be carried out at reasonable cost. e. Adequate equipment can be provided for training. f. Administration will be simplified. g. The organization structures will be simplified, and forced progression of units should stimulate interest and determine the practicability of the unit concept. h. Costs will be materially reduced.

Unveiling of Monument at Lee Field Tomorrow To Pay Tribute to Daddy of Airborne Warfare

Even the youngest and most progressive officers around Washington tapped their temples when Bill Lee suggested that they troops jumping from airplanes during combat.

Yet, tomorrow, a little more than nine years since Bill Lee was termed crazy, thousands of soldiers the nation over will, in effect, pay tribute to the "Daddy" of airborne infantry. A small monument, small in humbleness but large in respect, at Lee field, airborne jump area, will be dedicated as tribute to Bill Lee's foresight and enterprise in establishing one of the world's greatest fighting forces. For it was this tall, broad shouldered, Dum, N. K. and today's mighty airborne division.

Gen. William C. Lee grew up like other youngsters in the 1890's. At the University of North Carolina, he excelled in football and basketball. Classmates thought a lot of "my friend Bill Lee" (he was known by that all his life).

In 1917, Bill Lee took an oath to his country.

Your Red Cross.

Organization Counselling Duties Vary

By MURRAY E. HILL
As an insight into some of the varied counselling and communication activities of your Red Cross at Fort Benning, here is a brief synopsis of the duties of pieces of correspondence on the field director's desk on a typical day last week.

1. A soldier sent his German wife a money order which was to be used for passage to this country. Because the money order could only be converted into German marks, she went to the Red Cross for assistance. She was advised to return the money order and the soldier was instructed by our office in the proper way to send American dollars to his wife.

2. The wife and children of a soldier had not been receiving any financial support from the serviceman. The chapter gave immediate aid and we contacted the serviceman concerning an allotment for his wife.

3. A Red Cross chapter in a distant city was asking for the soldier's immigrant wife, who could speak no English, in securing evidence for the serviceman's dependency discharge.

4. A soldier was worried about the health of his mother and asked us to investigate. A commanding officer requested that we obtain a home conditions report in connection with an application for transfer from one of his men.

5. A soldier's mother requested that we obtain the correct address of her son and ask him to write her. (Have you written your mother this week?)

6. Before granting an emergency furlough, the commanding officer of the serviceman asked that we find out the condition of the serviceman's brother who was hospitalized.

7. The former wife of a soldier contacted our local chapter regarding support for the serviceman's children for whom no provision had been made.

8. A soldier was worried about whether his father was receiving the allotment checks which were being deducted from his pay. Asked us to contact the father since his letters were not answered.

9. An air force sergeant in Japan was trying to get in touch with his brother at Fort Benning. Addresses were furnished both brothers.

10. The Adjutant General section asked that our chapter in a Texas town furnish a report of home conditions on a man who was requesting discharge.

11. A mother was trying to locate her son who had been stationed at Fort Benning. He had been discharged two weeks previously and had not been recontacted.

12. These and many other types of situations are handled each day by your Red Cross at Fort Benning. Perhaps you have another type of problem which has been troubling you. If you have and can't handle it yourself, come in and talk it over.

MAJ. GEN. "BILL" LEE ALWAYS TOOK AN INTEREST CHATS WITH ONE OF FIRST COMBAT AIRBORNE STUDENTS

regiment, stationed at Fort Benning, was formed. Funds were allotted for Bill Lee's idea—money that would buy special uniforms and equipment—he would borrow the parachutes, rifles and other essentials of a combat training. And, in addition, Fort Benning officials allotted some space in which to move around. And it was the signal he had in a desk. Capt. William C. Ryder was placed in command of the new outfit—Bill Lee was a check in Washington, behind a desk. More than anything he wanted to be with the boys as they went through the paces. But he had to stay behind that desk—that's what he turned out the ideas, plans and training procedures for the infant outfit.

Several months later, it looked as though Bill Lee's "wild idea" might prove the best of some value to the army. War clouds were brewing in Europe—and there were reports that the aggressive Germans had begun experimenting with the idea of troops jumping from planes.

The task began to look ever bigger on Dec. 7, 1941. War was declared on the United States. Occupation on that day, Bill Lee didn't forget what was going on at Fort Benning—and neither did the "top brass" in Washington.

In March, 1941, Bill Lee was commander of the newly established group at Fort Benning—there was now to take the reins. He had set down stiff qualifications for his "boys"—he wasn't to be a slacker either. His strenuous years of military life had finally forced him into retirement. On June 25, 1948, American military men mourned the loss of a great chief—the "top brass"—Bill Lee had died at his home.

more than $1,200 as a result of the law. Stationed with the 31st Infantry regiment, Philippine division, the 25-year-old sergeant was later in the infamous Bataan "death march" that took a high toll of American civilian and military prisoners.

Sergeant DeMars spent the remainder of his internment on the island. He was there when the atomic bomb was dropped on Nagasaki, less than 60 miles directly across the bay.

Sergeant DeMars explained that he made application for the prisoner compensation through the Veterans Affairs branch of the American Legion in his hometown.

A nine-year veteran of army service was the first Infantry Center soldier to file application for compensation under the new law. Lieutenant Bridges had been elected prisoner's compensation bill this week.

Sgt. Virgil DeMars, Headquarters company, 30th Infantry regiment, completed application for compensation for standard subsistence and promptly dispatched them to his home—Pittsburgh, Pa. for action.

The new public law provides a soldier held prisoner by an enemy during World War II. Sergeant DeMars, who was held by the Japanese from Apr. 9, 1942 until Sept. 12, 1945, will receive this modest Carolina home. Today, despite the loss of its greatest leader, airborne men are still leading the way in modern infantry warfare. Many thousands died nobly in the service of their country. Others are carrying on as civilian leaders in the post-war period, representing the competitive spirit inspired in them by Bill Lee.

Tomorrow afternoon hundreds of airborne students and distinguished civilians will gather at Lee field to pay tribute to "my friend Bill Lee." Already named in honor of him, the field, used by the Infantry School's Airborne department for training jumps, will receive another symbol of Bill Lee's small, unassuming monument containing paratrooper's boots, two parachutes and other airborne pieces, will be unveiled by his widow.

The small monument will be seen through the years by thousands of young airborne students who will pass through this training center, a tribute to a military career. Some will ask what the shed like pillar would take him to the old-timers who knew Bill Lee.

The unveiling will be climaxed when three C-2's, the large "Flying Boxcar" used for jumps, pass over the stand and drop almost 100 graduates of the airborne department.

Dana Lee, the general's widow, will possibly know the price of a jump when he saw his "boys" jump from planes in the sky.

Quotas Are Set For I-E Course

A quota of 20 officers and 22 enlisted men has been set for Infantry Center units for a discussion leader's course to be conducted here from Feb. 20, until March 3.

The quotas, which are mandatory, include one enlisted man from Army Field Forces board of officers and nine enlisted men from the Area Service Unit Provisional group, one officer and two enlisted men from the Infantry School detachment, four officers and five enlisted men from the Station hospital and five officers and five enlisted men from the Student Training Regiment.

The objectives of the course are to train one per battalion, company, battery or similar unit as information hour leader and one per non-commissioned officer per company, battery or similar organization to troop information and education staff information.

To qualify for selection to attend the course, an officer must have a minimum of one year of commissioned service, and enlisted men must be in the grade of private first class or above. Army General Classification test score of at least 100, be a high school graduate or have a general educational development test equivalent and have at least one year of service remaining after completion of the course.

Eight Artillerymen Advanced in Grade
Eight enlisted men of Battery B, 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion were promoted to private first class.

The group included John E. Bell, Theodore S. Brown, Henry Colman, Robert L. Walker, L. Johnson, Oscar A. Levette, William Newton, and John S. Nixon.

Engineer Attending Mobile Conference
Fort Benning's resident engineer, Anthony D. Lambert, is attending a two-day conference at the Mobile (Ala.) office of the army's corps of engineers, it was disclosed today.

Airborne Class Opens
Basic airborne class No. 21 of Company B, Airborne Battalion, started its fourth week of training with 198 enlisted men and 15 officers enrolled.

The fourth week consists of parachute packing, mock door and mock tower training, the 250-foot lower drills and the physical fitness test, a prerequisite to the jump week.

SPOTLIGHT SPORTS

by jim cloonan.

Today we face the toughest assignment since we started writing for The Bayonet, for with this column we bid farewell to Fort Benning and the army. It has always been hard to say goodbye, but it is even harder than usual to leave the many friends we have made through our connection with athletics here.

While we will never forget our wonderful friends or the experiences we have had here, we feel sure that the sports desk will be in capable hands. For the next few weeks this column will be taken over by Lewis McAfee, former sports editor and now managing editor of the Bayonet. Mac's position will be of a temporary nature until the new sports editor arrives, probably sometime next month.

Even though we are leaving the service, we feel a strong bond to Fort Benning and will continue to follow its sports activities throughout the coming years.

Last Tuesday evening in the Main gym an inspired 15th Infantry regiment basketball team handed the Airborne Battalion its second loss in its last 81 games. To the 15th Dragons we must say "well done," for certainly they deserve to win. To the Airborne we must also say "well done," for the giant plaque signifying league champions rests in the Troopers' trophy room for the fourth straight year.

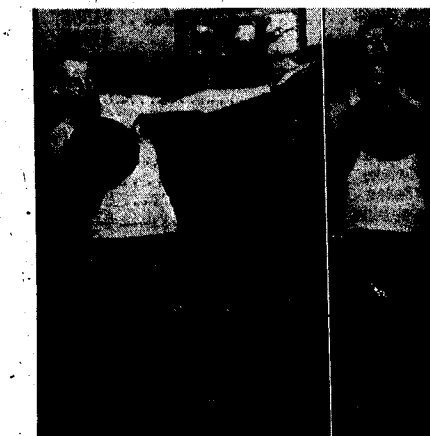

While on the subject of the Airborne, we would like to add that those 82 out of 84 do not include the three times this season the Troopers have downed the Columbus Millers and the various other wins posted over teams in the Columbus Industrial League. The Columbus Millers, incidentally, have chalked up 19 straight in league play down town and have won the league first half title.

We would like to take this opportunity to extend our congratulations to John "J. R." Marrinacino, 15th Infantry diamond and court star, who will be married today. John was discharged from the army yesterday and will take a postop with Bibb Mills downtown, where he will continue his baseball and basketball activities.

Herb Myatt, Airborne center, is on the get-well list following his injury in the Airborne-Area Service unit game. Myatt was accidently kicked in a scramble under the basket and suffered, in addition to a black eye, a very painful fracture of the cheekbone. However, the big Trooper star should be mended in plenty of time to resume his first base job for the STR-Airborne diamond nine.

Phil "Cherokee" Smith had two hot periods last Thursday night to set a new post individual scoring record for basketball. Phil hit for 22 field goals and one foul for a total of 45 points, bettering the old mark set by Herb Myatt of the Airborne by seven points. Cherokee hit for 18 points in the first period and closed out the night with 17 markers in the final period.

Now McPherson Coach Cadreman Promoted
Paul Markland, former golf, football and table tennis star, shows why he's been acclaimed as a busy man on offense and defense in the left picture, the five-foot, 10 inch bucketman gets ready to heave a long pass. Center, he steadies himself for one of his famous set shots. Right, Cunningham proves that he's also capable when it comes to close-in shots. Cunningham, prior to World War II, played for the University of Kentucky Wildcats.

HERE'S HOW IT'S DONE... ASU Stars Shine In Pugilistic Bouts

Led by Lawrence Jones, all-army middleweight champion, the 15th Infantry Area Service Unit, boxers fought their way to victory in the finals of the post-graduate championship last Friday night. Jones, in the final bout of last week's card, scored a TKO in the third round over Cliff Wilburn of the 15th Infantry Regiment. Referee George Mack stopped the fight when Wilburn wilted on the ropes in Jones' corner under the pulsating blows of the popular champion. Jones has been selected as the middleweight representative of Fort Benning in the third army championship matches scheduled for Fort Bragg, N. C. Jan. 31-Feb. 8.

Lightweight Norman Allen, another ASU fighter, won a unanimous decision over Welterweight Arthur Webb in the slowest fight of the evening. The dull show put by the two fighters was no doubt the result of their being picked to represent Fort Benning in their classes at Fort Bragg. Neither man seemed to want to hurt the other, thereby ruining Benning's team chances.

George Allen, bantamweight champ of Fort Benning, won a clear-cut decision over Fitzpatrick Billy Fitzpatrick of ASU. Both Allen and Fitzpatrick have been chosen to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army classic.

Abe Lewis, 175-pound slugger, who last week overpowered a 161 1/4 pound Nuby Batchelor, re-revenged his earlier meeting by a razor close victory over Batchelor in Friday's contest. The bout, second of the evening, was far the outstanding fight of the evening's excellent card. The two men, both crowd-pleasers because of their slam-bang style of fighting, started sluggering at the sound of the gong and stopped only when the final bell was struck.

The closest match of the card saw Lee Baker gain a split decision over Lester Holt of the 15th Infantry. Baker, another ASU battler, fought Holt on even terms during most of the fight, but drew ahead before the final gong to earn a close decision.

The third bout of the evening, ASU lightweight, beat Arthur Padilla, 15th Infantry representative into the canvas eight times before TKO'ing the courageous challenger. Padilla was knocked down three times in the first round, twice in the second and three times in the third before he was able to get up.

The Divarty quintet rolled over the hospital five with ease, posting a first period score of 24-1 and coasting in the rest of the way. Smith led the victors all the way, scoring 18 points in the first period, two in the second, four in the third and 21 in the fourth.

The Area Service unit used every man on their bench in an effort to stop their rout of the outclassed Medics but to no avail. Every man on the ASU team scored at least four points, with high game honors going to Capt. George Dietrich with 22 points.

The victory for the ASU men wound up their intra-annual play with a record of 13 wins against only three losses.

Led by Hugh Bertrand, the 15th wasted little time in rolling to a commanding lead over the down-trodden ISD Profs and posted an early 14-5 advantage in the first period. Bertrand, top scorer for the 15th Infantry Dragons, made 23 points of 11 baskets and one foul, to raise his season's total to 49 points. By virtue of the win the Dragons were able to clinch third place in the league boasting a record of 11 wins and four losses with one game remaining on the schedule.

Artillery Quintet Wallops Medics

Paced by the sensational shooting of Phil Smith, who scored 45 points, the Third Infantry division artillery team rolled over the hospital five last Thursday to chalk up their ninth win of the year, 49-17.

Smith, better known as Cherokee, poured 22 field goals and one foul through the hoop, to set a new post-graduate record in scoring. The former record was set last season by Herb Myatt of the 15th Infantry.

The other games of the triple-header the Area Service unit wound up their season by clinching second place in the league with an 84-22 victory over the 52nd Medical Battalion, while the 15th Infantry regiment downed the Infantry School detachment, 73-37.

Texans Support Most Ball Clubs

Texas, huh, is in a bragging mood about its baseball. Of course, it is most unusual for Texans to stick out their chest being the quiet, reserved and modest people they are.

But the Lone Star state will lead the nation in number of professional ball clubs next year with 47, finally passing North Carolina, which next season will be able to muster only 44 in seven leagues.

A new league and the addition of two new clubs to another gave Texas the edge on North Carolina, which always has been the leader—until now.

There will be eight leagues operating in Texas next spring. Thirteen of the 60 clubs will be in bordering states.

The new league is the Class D, Gulf Coast, which takes in Port Arthur, Galveston, Jacksonville and Lufkin, Tex. and Crowley and Lake Charles, La.

The Rio Grande Valley league will have 15 clubs, including Alice and Harlingen to make it an eight club circuit. Other members are Corpus Christi, Robstown, McAllen, Del Rio, Laredo and Brownsville.

Other leagues in Texas will be the same as last year when close to 4,000,000 attendance was reported for seven circuits.

The other leagues: Texas league (Class AA)—Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Beaumont and Fort Worth, Tex.; Tulsa and Oklahoma City, Okla.; Texpan.

Big State league (Class B)—Austin, Wichita Falls, Waco, Greenville, Gainesville, Texas, Sherman, Denison, Temple (all Texas clubs).

Class C Texas league (Class C)—Bryan, Kilgore, Henderson, Patches, Marshall, Longview, Tyler, Gladewater (all Texas clubs).

West Texas-New Mexico league (Class C)—Amarillo, Lubbock, Abilene and Lamesa, Tex.; Albuquerque and Clovis, N. M.

Southwest league (Class D)—Midland, Sweetwater, Vernon, Odessa, San Angelo, Big Spring, Big Dalinger, Tex.; Roswell, N. M.

N. Y. Giants Sell Haas

The New York Giants tonight sold Bert Haas, 35-year-old utility infielder, to their Minneapolis farm team in the American Association.

Haas, obtained by the Giants from the Philadelphia Phillies, batted .257 in 56 games. He formerly played for the Brooklyn Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds.

BOMB CRATERS OR SHELL HOLES?—GUESS AGAIN. Sprays of Shotgun Pellets Make Telephone Cables Take On Poek-Married Appearance.

Nimrods Urged to Avoid Signal Telephone Cables

Fort Benning hunters were urged by Infantry Center Signal section officials this week to exercise caution in using firearms in the vicinity of the Sand Hill Harmony church telephone cable.

An average of once a month in the past, it was pointed out, serious damage has been done to the cable through indiscriminate use of hunting weapons.

Jackie Robinson, the National League's most valuable player in 1949, signed his 1950 Brooklyn Dodgers contract today at a reported figure of $35,000—nearly double the amount he got last year.

The star Negro second baseman, first of his race to win the coveted "most valuable" award, said the 1950 contract, signed by Dodger President Branch Rickey was "highly satisfactory."

Robinson was the National League's batting champion with an average of .342 last year. He said the 1950 contract, signed by Dodger President Branch Rickey was "highly satisfactory."

Ratings Given Enlisted Group

Promotion to private first class of 52 privates in the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, was announced recently by battalion officials.

Grady Reynolds, Andrew Sankley, Vincent Hyvies, John Billington, Robert B. Reed, James Everett, Charlie Fields, Herbert Levy, Willie Johnson, Robert Adams, Theodore Lewis, Joseph Buck, Olan Burnett Garnett Jackson, Merton Jackson, Charles Lampkins, James Longnie, William Moore.

Robert Tratzinsky, Ivey Shed, Genia Luman, Collie Jutan, Thurman Hinds, Clentell Jackson, Walter James, Herbert Parson, Frank Scott and Roscoe Sparks.

Photographer Assigned

Pfc. David D. Greene, former army signal corps photographer in European command, has been assigned to Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment.

Pro Grid Men Decide on Slate

Pro football puts its house in order today by deciding the makeup of the two divisions of the National-American football league on the votes of 12 of the 13 members.

Acting quickly when Commissioner Bert Bell threatened to take the problem into his own hands, the owners lined up two divisions like this:

- Division 1
Cleveland
New York Giants
Washington
Chicago Cardinals
Pittsburgh
- Division 2
Chicago Bears
Los Angeles
San Francisco
Detroit
New York Bulldogs
Green Bay
Baltimore (swing team)

It will be determined later in which division Baltimore will be placed, but it is definite that the Colts will play each of the 12 other clubs.

Each team will play 12 games, probably on a schedule that will call for five home-no-home series with each team in its own division, one game with the "rival" from the other section and one game with the swing team.

Under the terms of the Dec. 9 merger agreement between the National league and the All-America conference, the two divisions were to be known as the National and American. It is likely that the group including Green Bay will be the National and the division with Cleveland will be the American.

Emil R. Fischer of Green Bay was named, previously, president of the National, and Daniel Sherry of Cleveland, head of the American division.

Washington was the only club vying against the motion by George Halas, president of the Chicago Bears, to set up the two divisions. George F. T. O. Marshall, owner of the Redskins, was not present, leaving his proxy with Bell.

Marshall opposed the arrangement because it did not specify which division Baltimore would be in. He insisted the Colts must be in a different section from the Redskins. Marshall does not want to have the Colts and Redskins playing the same teams at home.

Battery C Privates Advanced in Grade

Privates Richard Boynton Sylvester, Allen, Harold G. Boulter, John Elder, William T. Foster, Thomas Franklin, James R. Johnson, Carl B. McCarty, Theodore Miller, Manuel Pina, Allen P. Stein, Johnnie Tapley, De Otis Thomas, William Atkins, Moses McDonald, Edward Hall, and Richard Campbell, all of Battery C, 89th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, were recently promoted to private first class.

Boars Upset 15th Dragons In Cage Fray

Blending a top-notch defense with deadly accuracy from the free-throw line enabled the 30th Infantry regiment Boars to pull one of the season's top upset last Wednesday as they downed the 15th Infantry regiment Dragons, 48-39, in the feature game of a triple header at the Main gym.

The victory over the Dragons was sweet revenge for the Boars who took a 77-66 beating the last time the two teams met. The win was extra sweet for the Boars because it knocked the 15th Infantry out of any chance to finish in second place in the league.

Paced by the great play of Center Bob Hanes, the Boars took an early first quarter lead and never relinquished it throughout the contest, leading by as much as 14 points at one stage. Brooks' key unit quieted under both backboards was the deciding factor in the game.

Bill Cunningham paced the Boars on the offense with 14 points, closely followed by Brooks with 12 markers. John "J. R." Marrinac paced the losers with 11 counters.

In the first contest of the evening the Area Service unit quieted again cleared their bench while rolling to an easy win over the once-leary 15th Infantry. Division Special Troops, to the tune of 71-19.

Paced by their three best scorers the ASU men moved to a 13-1 lead at the quarter, increasing to 25-4 at the half and coasted the rest of the way to notch win No. 12 against three losses.

Roy Smith and Jim Payne paced the victors' attack with 15 points each, while Center Ben Simmons notched 13 markers. Charlie Williams and Bill Gress led the losers with seven points each.

The final game of the evening saw the Airborne battalion Troopers romp to their 30th straight win and their 30th victory in their last 31 games as they submitted the Infantry School detachment Profs under a 87-23 count.

Led by Bob Kinard and Vern Griffin, who tallied 10 points each, the Airborne never was in a tight holding action. At the end of the half, the Troopers relaxed their defense and permitted the prof to refit 19 points after the intermission. Charlie Richards once again proved to be the threat, scoring first as he hit the cords for nine points. Center Larry Brown of the Airborne ranked third for his team with 12 counters.

To obtain such a rating, it is evident that all concerned have exerted great effort in their performance of duty. The rating of superior reflects credit on each individual member, as well as on the unit.

Intelligence activities of all S-2 sections of the regiment, the day room of the Third battalion, the training activities of the Heavy Tank company, the dining setup of the regimental Headquarters company, the supply room of Company E and the troop information and education office, of regimental headquarters were the activities rated as superior.

Term Scheduled To Open in Fall At War College

The Army War college will open in the fall at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., it was reported this week.

Courses which will last approximately 10 months, will include instruction in the duties of the commanders and staffs of higher military schools not included in schools previously attended, such as the army group, division and corps headquarters, zone of interior and Department of the Army headquarters. Particular emphasis will be placed on the Department of the Army.

Purpose of the college is to emphasize the army technique necessary to carry out the army's mission as a part of the Department of Defense.

Prerequisites for attendance for members of the technical and administrative services are arms.

Two reserve officers of the organized reserve corps will be selected for the 1950-51 class by army field forces, according to this announcement. Selections will be announced about March 31.

Department's Proposals Submitted To Congress

Defense Secretary Louis A. Gladd has submitted to Congress approximately one-half of the Department of Defense's legislative program. The remainder is being studied by the Bureau of the Budget, and those proposals which are approved will be forwarded within the next few weeks.

For the first time, the entire legislative program for the Department of Defense was submitted to the Bureau of the Budget in a single volume.

Legislative proposals included in the first packet are:

BERLIN AIRLIFT MEDAL — To authorize acceptance by U.S. personnel of foreign decorations for participation in the Berlin airlift.

CEMETERIES OMNIBUS BILL — Authorize army to conduct necessary real estate transactions in order to make available adequate cemetery space in certain critical locations.

CLAIMS CORRECTION OF RECORDS — Permit payment of claims where such action is necessary to correct errors or remove injustices as a result of correction of military records.

D.C.O.R. T.O.N.S. AND AWARDS, TIME LIMITATION —

Extend time limit for the award of certain decorations for services rendered during World War II.

LANDS AND PROPERTY BILL — Authorize certain land and property transfers and land easements affecting the military departments.

MISSING PERSONS ACT — Amend the Missing Persons Act to clarify the present authorization for transportation of dependents and effects of personnel on active duty reported dead, missing, interned or captured.

PHILIPPINE SCOUT — Provide for continuing medical care for certain Philippine scouts, including the transfer of the hospital at Fort McKinley, Philippine Islands, to the Philippine government.

RECREATIONAL PROGRAMS, CIVILIAN — Authorize the military departments to employ such personnel as are necessary to provide civilian recreational programs in certain areas.

SELECTIVE SERVICE EXTENSION — Extend present provisions of the Selective Service Act until June 1953.

TRANSPORTATION, HOUSEHOLD GOODS AND PERSONAL EFFECTS — Amend the regulations heretofore made for transportation of household effects of and ships in government-owned facilities and exempt contracts subject to renegotiation from budget limitations of the existing construction of aircraft.

3rd Troops Finish 'Wet-Net' Training

NAVAL AMPHIBIOUS BASE, LITTLE CREEK, Va. — The first increment of Third Infantry division troops from Fort Benning, finished the first week of amphibious training here last week with wet-net practice aboard the U. S. S. Burleson, a decommissioned assault transport now used solely for training.

The first troops left Fort Benning on Jan. 4, and went to Charleston, S. C. by troop train. At Charleston, they boarded two vessels, the U. S. S. Fremont and the U. S. S. Shelton for the run up the coast to Norfolk, Va. They arrived at Norfolk on Jan. 7 and were taken to the Little Creek Amphibious base by truck convoy. That week end a two-week basic amphibious warfare course is to be held in the Caribbean in March, will be well indoctrinated in the basic principles of amphibious technique.

During the first week of training, lectures on shipboard drill and practical work in embarking and debarking from landing ships and craft.

They are taught the part the rifle squad, platoon and company play in an amphibious assault, and what is expected of an individual in a boat team.

After thorough instruction from marine experts, the troops are assembled as boat teams and practice embarking and debarking from landing craft on a simulated beach, allowing their dry ground practice, they are given "wet-net" drills aboard the U. S. S. Burleson.

Once the troops become familiar with amphibious technique, they practice hitting the beach and advancing across the beach line. All this practice is held on the Little Creek beaches or in the Little Creek area.

The latter half of the training is known as the afloat phase. During this period, the troops embark in assault ships, many of which saw combat during World War II.

During the afloat phase, the men learn just what is expected of them while afloat. They participate in shipboard drills, a physical training and other shore drills which are designed to insure their safety and well being while on the ships.

The training on the Little Creek beaches culminates in actual ship-to-shore landing exercises. A final grand review will be held at Camp Pendleton, Va., which is on the coast about 100 miles from the Little Creek area.

1949 Manpower Figure Released

The manpower strength of the combined armed forces was 1,355,200 at the end of 1949, the Defense department has announced.

The figure was 72,000 over the strength proposed in the President's budget for the year starting July 1.

December enlistments of 43,534 were higher than in October of November, but since four-fifths of that number represented re-enlistments, the year-end strength dropped 23,800 under the Nov. 15 total.

Enlistment Mental Test Standardized

A standard pre-enlistment mental test has been established for all the armed services, Department of Defense officials have announced.

Civilians enlisting for any branch of the service will take the Armed Forces Classification test, and will be rated on the same basis as the military.

The test will determine whether prospective enlistees meet the minimum standards for enlistment and entrance scores can be compared.

The scores of the test have been converted into percentile scores, rather than standard scores.

The raw score, or number of questions answered correctly, is not suitable for comparisons of individuals because of the necessity of changing the questions from time to time makes comparisons impossible.

In the past the services converted to standard scores, but the navy's standard score range was different from the army's and airforce's which made comparisons difficult because the standard scores of all services were subject to misinterpretation.

Congressmen criticized the old army minimum score of 70, figuring that 70 was a raw score, not the maximum possible. Actually 70 was low on the standard score range of 50 to 150.

The new percentile scores is expected to end this confusion, for a percentile score works on a range of 0 to 100. It converts the

Courses Being Offered In Strategic Intelligence

Applications for attendance at the Army's Intelligence School are now being accepted, Department of the Army officials announced this week.

The expected starting date for the first 12-week course is Feb. 13. Four courses are tentatively scheduled for this year.

The schedule was now set up for the first course to begin Feb. 13, second course May 15, third course Aug. 21, and fourth course Nov. 20. Reporting date is three days before the starting date of each course.

Officers recommended for attendance at the school will be selected on the basis of need in the intelligence field and on the need for training in high level intelligence for their present and proposed assignments. They should possess qualifications equivalent to those required for attaché duty and for attendance at the Armed Forces Staff college or the National War college. Upon completion of the course, graduates will return to their original stations to continue their assignments.

The prerequisites for attendance are listed in Pamphlet 20-21, of the Army School Catalog, July, 1949.

Accepted applicants will be placed on temporary duty with the school and ordered to report initially to room 2D 522, in the Pentagon, Washington, D. C., on or before their reporting date and then to the secretary of the Strategic Intelligence School, room 4686 in the Main Navy building, 17th street and Constitution avenue, Washington.

Applications should be submitted through the army headquarters, attention: G-3 section, to the Director of Intelligence, GSUSA, the Pentagon, Washington, D. C., attention: Personnel branch, and should not arrive later than 30 days prior to reporting date of the class desired.

Name, grade, army serial number, certificate of clearance for top secret material and name of headquarters where certificate of clearance is filed should be included on the application.

Corporal's Stripes Awarded Eight EM

Eight privates first class of the Infantry School detachment were promoted to corporal recently.

The group included Horace B. Benton, Willie C. Hayes, Eddie L. Hicks, Melvin L. Rolens, Harry G. Taylor and George L. Thomas, all of Company A; Thomas C. Enfinger, of Company C; and William E. Robson of Company H.

Division Troops to Visit Tradition-Steeped Locale

NAVAL AMPHIBIOUS BASE, LITTLE CREEK, Va., will be held every Saturday and Sunday. The men will go to Williamsburg by bus, leaving the page at 8 a. m.

While in Williamsburg, the men will visit the capital, the old goal, the Raleigh tavern, the governor's mansion, the post office and the Mariner's museum.

A guide will accompany each group to answer to questions and give a brief historical background of each place visited.

Artillery Group Completes Class

Fifteen members of the 899th Armored Field Artillery battalion completed a 36-hour course in wheel and track vehicle operation last week.

The course was designed to familiarize every member of the battalion with all types of vehicles used by the unit.

The highly technical instruction are in a non-mechanical preliminary training, mechanical preliminary training, intermediate driving, intermediate driving, cross country driving and field expedients. A written examination is given upon completion of the course.

The school's supervisor is Capt. Carroll H. Hoagland, battalion motor officer, and the instructors include M-Sgt. John H. Wilson, Sgt. Hector D. Laws, Cpl. James H. McCall, Cpl. Clemons Egan, Pvt. Guy B. Zebbs and Pvt. Harry C. Lott.

The first week's graduates were Cpl. Harold Braxton, Pfc. Lawrence Thomas, Cpl. Cliff Stephens, De Otis Thomas, Coley T. Thomas Meeks, Raymond Williams, Jimmie Harris, Joseph T. Tucker, Warren E. Priby, Robert Ford, Willie J. Ellis, Leroy Andrews and Cecil Wash and Pvs. John E. Bell, John M. Wiser and Walter Blackman.

DOWNTOWN GUN POSITION . . . About 50 seconds before this picture was made last Sunday night in front of Columbus' Georgia theater, the 75 mm howitzer was nothing more than nine harmless-looking canisters spread across the sidewalk. But with the command "Action!" the five veteran combat bombardiers above speedily pieced the weapon together for the throng attending the premier showing of the Hollywood film, "Battleground." The team has established a world record for the feat by completing assembly of the weapon in 41 seconds—an uncontested time. At the Infantry's Airborne department, the men frequently stage similar demonstrations for visiting dignitaries to illustrate the technique of getting into battle after an airborne assault. From left to right, the team includes Sgt. Kenneth A. Robinson, M-Sgt. Ferald D. Adams, Cpl. Frederick J. Carden, M-Sgt. Miner D. Therrell and Sgt. Glenn D. Faulks.

Nurses Here Observe Corps' 49th Year With Tea

By AL MULLIKIN
(Rayonet Staff Writer)

The valiant women of the Army Nurse Corps today mark their 49th year of service to the fighting men of the United States army.

The 68 members of the corps stationed at Fort Benning's Station hospital celebrated the occasion with a tea in the nurses' lounge from 2:30 to 4:30 yesterday.

On Feb. 2, 1901, Dr. Anita Newcomer realized her dream of founding a permanent nurse corps as a branch of the Medical Department. Official recognition was a victory for Dr. McGee over the prejudice and adverse opinion of many high army officials. Dr. McGee began her crusade for a permanent corps of trained women as vice-president of the Daughters of the American Revolution. In the hospital committee of this organization she set up a clearing house for contract nurses to serve with the army during the Spanish-American War. Contracts were made with women over 30 for a period of one year by authority of an act of congress. After only a few months Dr. McGee had sent thousands of nurses to work in the army field hospitals of Cuba, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines.

The record of these women and the organizational abilities of Dr. McGee were the prime factors that made the Army Nurse Corps possible. The field nurses gained the admiration of officers and enlisted men alike by their admirable service in treating the wounds of battle and curbing the epidemics of tropical diseases.

Dr. McGee became the acting assistant surgeon of the army. In that position she drafted the session of a proposed army reorganization bill that created the Army Nurse Corps.

Although Dr. McGee resigned soon after the Army Nurse Corps received official recognition, she continued until her death in 1940 to watch the growth of the organization that expanded from the original 200 charter members to a corps of thousands who fought the battle for life on the battlefields of death.

When this country was plunged into World War I, the Army Nurse Corps stood ready to serve the fighting men. Increasing its ranks from the reserves in the American Red Cross nursing service, the corps accompanied the doughboys on troop ships and set up field hospitals overseas.

When the navy blue serge uniform and carrying the equipment that was standard equipment in World War I, the army nurses served in the clearing stations near the front line trenches and the base hospitals in the rear. The nurses who were up front saw duty on shock teams treating severely wounded and dying men brought direct from the firing line. The days were long and filled with the blood and screams of battle casualties and the nights were filled with the drone of German planes and the persistent popping of anti-aircraft guns.

At the base hospitals there was more of the hospital routine than these volunteer professional nurses were used to. Ward duty was 12 hours a day of nursing except in emergencies when the entire staff worked round the clock. Each nurse had about 50 charges who were recovering from shrapnel, mauling - gun and bayonet wounds.

At the height of World War I more than 5,000 women of the Army Nurse Corps were serving overseas. Twice that number were on duty in this country in military service embarking on transport ships. Other army nurses crossed the Atlantic on camouflage transports that carried sick and wounded back to the States and returned to Europe loaded with fresh troops.

When the Armistice came, the Army Nurse Corps had met its first test as a necessary part of the armed forces of the United States, but a still greater challenge was to be met in the years to come.

Heroic action by the Army Nurse Corps will ever stand emblazoned with the names Bataan and Corregidor in the history of World War II. Descending their neat white uniforms for the khaki of military service, the nurses stood by the fighting men through the slow retreat on the peninsula and the final stand on the rock.

When ruthless Japanese bombers destroyed the hospitals, the nurses set up wards and operating tables in the jungles. As the Japanese assaults increased the facilities of modern medicine decreased. Quinine and such drugs supplies gave out. And the peculiar problem of pure water and food plagued the nurses. Over the years of non-stop service (See ANC on Page 2)

USO Closing Takes Effect

City YMCA Club Spared

The surprise shutdown of United Service organization (USO) activities throughout the nation, this week apparently will leave only one survivor among Columbus servicemen's clubs.

At least three clubs, the USO-NCCS club, the USO-YMCA for Negro troops and the USO-Travelers Aid, definitely will be forced out of existence, Julius B. Markert, director of the USO-NCCS club, said.

The lone survivor of the service club slash is expected to be the Armed Forces YMCA, which has been in continuous operation for more than 50 years.

Doors will remain open to servicemen at the Ninth street USO-NCCS club and the Fifth Avenue Negro Armed Services YMCA for at least two more weeks, Julius D. Markert, director of the Ninth street club, said yesterday. After that, he said, the continued operation of the clubs depends on the funds that can be mustered from army sources and city, county and perhaps national subscription grants.

The surprise shutdown, which came without any warning or hint from official quarters, was ordered to become effective on Jan. 31. The order said that all staffs would be discharged before that time and all activities would cease with the effective date of closure.

Mr. Markert declared that many "badly managed" clubs forced the national shutdown, but that because of insufficient operating funds, Mr. Markert specifically lashed out at those who failed to tell the public what was being done for the servicemen.

"Lack of respect," Mr. Markert added "lack of publicity, caused lack of public response."

Thunderjets To Be Used For Portrex

Operation Portrex commanders announced this week that airforce "Thunderjet" fighter bombers will be used for the first time in large scale, close support of ground troops in the forthcoming all-land sea maneuver in the Caribbean.

More than 100 of these 600-mile-per-hour, rocket-carrying F-84's from two air groups will participate in Portrex war games starting next month.

The Caribbean operation, largest peacetime maneuver ever undertaken by American armed forces, will involve some 80,000 soldiers, airmen and sailors.

Participating forces will include a large armada of warships, about 1,000 airforce and navy planes, the Third Infantry division and 1,000 paratroopers. A joint airborne-ambush assault on the island of Vieques, six miles east of Puerto Rico, about March 8, will climax the joint exercise.

The airforce is making the F-84 the chief plane in its tactical forces for close support of ground troops. It has been used extensively in small scale support training exercises during the past year, but not on a scale equal to that of Portrex.

Third division troops have already begun completing their final stages of training at Little Creek, Va., staging area for infantry-ambush forces.

Last week thousands of the Third divisions troops went through wet-net training and beachhead landing in preparation for the March exercise.

ARC Fund Drive Committee Named

Committee members of the 1950 Red Cross fund drive, which begins Feb. 28 and continues throughout March, were announced this week.

Honorary chairman is Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burgess, Infantry Center commander, who will direct and report on the campaign.

On the honorary board with General Burgess will be Maj. Gen. P. W. Clatskanie, Third Infantry division commander, Brig.

Mrs. John E. Arthur, chairman of the Red Cross auxiliary has announced that a special report on the fund drive will be held Feb. 7 at 8 a. m. at the Red Cross field office. Mrs. Arthur has urged that military dependents of both officers and enlisted men attend to help formulate plans for the forthcoming drive.

Gen. J. Sladen Bradley, assistant commander of the Infantry School, and Brig. Gen. Robert B. Hill, Infantry Center hospital commander.

Selected to serve on the governing and policy board are Mrs. Withers A. Burgess, representing the Red Cross auxiliary; P. A. Barefoot, civilian personnel; Col. Maurice A. Miller, 34th Area Service Center commander; Col. Sevia R. Tupper, Student Training regiment commander; Col. Robert C. Lusk, Army Field Forces board No. 3 commander; Maj. Shelby Satterfield, Infantry and detachment executive committee; Maj. R. O. Johnson, 1st Airforce base commander; Lt. Col. A. Miller, 34th Area Service Center, representing in drive for 1950 funds.

Infantry Center enlisted men. Appointed to the committee for operating the campaign were Col. Charles E. Woodruff, executive chairman; Murray E. Hill, Red Cross field director; Lt. Col. Robert M. Booth, publicity; Maj. Clarence H. Etnier, special events; Maj. Donald H. Brown, executive vice chairman for the Infantry School; and Maj. J. James W. Friend, Capt. T. Salvo and Cpl. A. Kocheil, executive vice chairman representing the Third Infantry division.

Also on the board to direct unit campaigns are Lt. Noah King, 340th Artillery; Lt. John T. Dunphy, WOJG Horace C. Henshaw and Sgt. Wayne W. Olsen, representing the Student Training regiment; Capt. Otis Adams and Sgt. Clarence Brown, Infantry School detachment; Lt. Col. Samuel T. McDowell, Army Field Forces board No. 3, and Sgt. Fred Adridge and Sgt. Raymond Thomas, 1st Airforce base commander.

Representatives of a subcommittee that will direct campaign activities at other levels of the drive will be Sgt. Fred Adridge, enlisted men's representative; Mrs. Edwin C. Gibson, Ladies Auxiliary; Sandeek, civilian personnel; Lt. Col. Robert M. Booth, publicity; Lt. Col. Henry C. Clatskanie, special events; and Miss Mellic R. Tubb, representing the Junior Red Cross. George A. Clatskanie, official representative of the Red Cross, will act as chief fundraiser and staff officer for the drive. (See Page 2)

Women Give School $500

The Children's school is $500 richer today, thanks to the generosity of the Fort Benning Woman's club, Col. James F. Torrence, Jr., president of the Post Dependents' School Fund council, announced today.

The money was originally raised last spring to purchase a motion picture projector for the school, Colonel Torrence said. However, since the school now has a projector, the money was turned over to the fund council for use as it saw fit.

Mrs. Albert C. Haley, second vice president of the Woman's club, presented the check to Colonel Torrence. How the money is to be spent will be decided, Feb. 21 at the next meeting of the school fund council, Colonel Torrence explained.

He went on to point out that the money is particularly helpful in the current year when the school is experiencing financial difficulties. In a letter of appreciation to Mrs. Marcus Bell, club president, he acknowledged the benefit of the fund council.

Airborne Founder Posthumously Honored

The father of American airborne infantry was honored posthumously last week at Lee field, 1 1/2 m p area for student paratroopers, when two six-foot Battle of the Bulge airborne veterans unveiled a seven-foot high stone monument in his honor.

During the simple ceremony that paid homage to Maj. Gen. William C. Lee, his widow, stood to one side, visibly affected by the dedication.

Shortly after two combat-type camouflaged parachutes were pulled from the stone marker, three giant C-52 troop-carrying planes passed over the military and civilian throng and discharged 100 combat veteran paratroopers in mass drop.

The ceremony was climaxed when more than 150 students of the Infantry School's Airborne department received their silver wings, signifying completion of five weeks training.

USO

Firestone, Jr., director of the national organization, said that due to international and national changes, USO, as such, has been regarded as insufficiently essential to continue. He also charged, in notifying directors of the USO units in the closing order, that public support had fallen critically below expectations.

This, in effect, the closing order added, was a major cause for the closing.

Elova Francisco, YMCA club director, assured Fort Benning officials this week that his club would remain open despite rumors to the contrary.

Mr. Francisco said that he had received high praise in the past to operate his club, but thought that public support and his own organization's funds would enable a continued operation.

In speaking for his own club operation, Mr. Markert declared that about $100,000 a year was required for the operation of USO-NCCS in Columbus. He added, "Let it be clear," Mr. Markert said, "that USO has been only a means to an end."

Mr. Markert personally thought that vigorous public protest will eventually revive the organization.

"My impression is that statement can be seen right here in Columbus. Thousands of military personnel use the local facilities every month. Within the last few weeks we've had an encouraging gain over the same period last year, which leads me to believe that we were gradually gaining a hold on a big problem. Now, with the closing, soldiers will be roaming the streets for lack something to do."

National officials of the organization forced the close because of sudden decline in what they described as public support. They also asserted that assets and liabilities of the organization were found to be the same, with no financial support to increase operating funds.

Several alternatives are left open for Columbus clubs. A minimum of $500 a year in financial support from public or organizations might enable the charge to be made. There is some likelihood, the spokesman said, that special services, the army counterpart of USO, would undertake to partially support USO in Columbus should it be reopened.

USO was known by millions of servicemen during World War I. At its peak during the war, USO was operating on approximately $50,000,000 a year. Celebrities from every part of the show business were invited to bring entertainment to soldiers' bases and armies. Birthdays were celebrated by local men who toured far-flung battle areas attempting to bring laughs to the fighting military man.

nurses fought the battle of existence for themselves and their patients until the final surrender.

The gallant work of the Army Nurses in the Pacific during the early stages of the war were only the beginning of World War II service for the corps. Almost 80,000 army nurses volunteered their services during the war years.

They served the world over, evacuating wounded by train, plane and ship. They worked with combat troops at Anzio and Normandy in the field and evacuation hospitals. Sixteen nurses lost their lives in enemy action.

The Army Nurse Corps has status as a fully recognized part of the United States Army. The final step was made in 1947 when nurses were given permanent commissions and the Army Nurse section was added to the Organized Reserve corps.

Panel Will Study Airborne's Role

BY PAT MURPHY
Bayonet Staff Writer

Airborne's role in any future war loomed bigger and brighter this week after the disclosure by top army officials that a board will be formed in Washington to study the complex operations of paratroopers.

Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, in making the announcement, said a panel is being created from officers in the public organizations of the 11th and 82nd Airborne divisions, the army general staff, the command and General Staff college at Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and headquarters of army field forces at Fort Monroe, Va. He said the board, which might receive additional representatives in the future, will study how the "small but potentially powerful" airborne force could be enlarged and strengthened.

Gen. William M. Milley, commander of the 11th Airborne division, will head the group. On a recent visit to the Infantry School, General Milley spoke to officers and students on the future aspects of airborne operations. During a brief tour at the Infantry Center, General Milley conferred with members of the Academy of Artillery on matters pertaining to airborne operations.

At present, the whole complex matter of airborne operations—especially trained airborne troops, a slightly higher compensation, dropping and loading equipment and supplies, crews of transport and glider planes and elements of the airforce and navy—has no central coordinating and directing agency on the operating level.

General Collins recently declared that the board covers airborne operations "will play a very important role in any future war." But he commented, there are serious problems to be solved, including methods of getting tanks and heavy equipment to troops dropped by parachute or landed by glider behind enemy lines. These are the problems the new board must consider.

Airborne officials here admitted this week, after being asked by the new board, that what the board would specifically map out for airborne remains unclear, but he speculated that the Infantry School's resources would be drawn upon to solve any problems.

Lt. Col. Talton W. Long, assistant director of the Airborne department, said in commenting upon the news of the board's intention, that "we know very little about its actual operation. We can assume many things." He declared that he thought the board's studies would cover a round of problems experienced during World War II.

Colonel Long said, in addition, that veteran officers and enlisted men of airborne operations, now stationed at Fort Benning, constitute a reservoir of knowledge, based on experience, that would aid the board in evaluating certain airborne problems.

After the board begins coordinating and studying airborne operations procedure, airborne personnel from the Infantry School will doubtless contribute to the board's work, Colonel Long stated.

The news of the board's formation came as no surprise to many

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: DO YOU THINK THE PUBLIC SHOULD BE TOLD ALL THE NEWS OF THE ARMY, THE BAD AS WELL AS THE GOOD? WHY?

SGT. JOSEPH S. YONICK, Company A, Airborne battalion: I certainly think the public should know the news of the army, both good and bad. The people who have sons in the army should know if their boys are being treated good or bad. Then they can do something about it, things at or right.

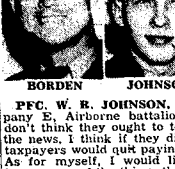

PFC. HARRY J. BLANK, Company A, Airborne battalion: Definitely not. They won't ever get anybody else into the army if they tell all that is going on. The people who support all the hardships and things like that the boys have to go through with, so it's no use telling them the worst of it.

CPL. JAMES E. BAKER, Company A, Airborne battalion: I think the public should be informed of what is going on because the taxpayers support the army; and if they have sons and daughters in the army, they should know exactly what is happening to them. If they think the army is not trying to put something over on them, they will continue to help; but if they think something funny is going on, they won't help.

PFC. LEWIS J. GORDON, Company B, Airborne battalion: I think the people should know about things, because they have a lot to do with the army. If they are told about things, they will have some idea about the army and if something comes up they will be a fully recognized part of the army as much as they can.

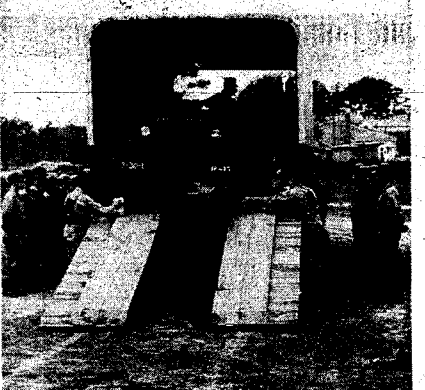

PVT. F. B. BORDEN, Company E, Airborne battalion: I think the public should be informed of what is going on for one reason: the new men coming into the army will be better acquainted with the way the army does things. I think the taxpayers want to know where their money is going and how it is being used.

PFC. W. B. JOHNSON, Company E, Airborne battalion: I don't think they ought to tell all the news. I think if they did the taxpayers would quit paying tax. As for myself, I would like to know some of the things that are going on. I would like to know where all those millions of dollars are going. They certainly are spending it on the enlisted men. They could put it to good work improving the show.

30th Infantry Unit to Make Invasion of Vieques by Air

While their Third Infantry division buddies are storming the beaches of Vieques island, just off the east coast of Puerto Rico, officers and men of Company E, 30th Infantry regiment, will make their invasion of the tiny Operation Portrex objective by air.

Company E's personnel, together with one section of machineguns and one section of 75 mm recoilless rifles from Company H, 30th Infantry, and one platoon from Battery A, 39th Field Artillery battalion, will be loaded aboard C-52 transport planes in Puerto Rico for their assault on "Aggressor," held Vieques.

While the airborne phase of the maneuver in which the element will participate will not include an actual jump, the troops and their equipment will be transported to the island by air.

To prepare for the part they will play in the land-sea-air exercise, the men and officers of Company E recently completed a one-week instruction period in air transportability at the Airborne Battalion School.

But the completion of the course marked only the beginning of the task with which the unit was faced. A rapid turnover of personnel brought about by the separation of inductees and 21-month enlistees made it necessary to make air transportability a constant phase of the pre-maneuver program being conducted by Company E in its Sand Hill area. With more than half of the company new men, personnel who received instruction from the Airborne Battalion have had to take on the added responsibility of offering pointers on the subject to newer members of the organization.

"The fact that the element is to be transported to the island by air does not preclude the necessity of the men taking the prescribed amphibious training at the Little Creek, Va., Naval Amphibious base. The company, along with the remainder of the 30th Infantry and other units of the Third Division, left Fort Benning yesterday for the Virginia garrison base."

Far-Sighted Military Planning

The announcements this week that all regular army officers will, when practical, serve at least two years with one of the civilian components and that the Organized Reserve Corps is scheduled for a complete revamping are excellent examples of the far-sightedness in military planning.

Since the civilian army would again play a major role in the event of war, it is necessary that it benefit from the expert advice and leadership of those men who have dedicated their lives to this nation's defense. It is equally important that the Organized Reserve Corps become a more closely knit organization in order to improve its combat readiness.

We believe that the plan requiring regulars to serve with the civilian components will be of inestimable value in bettering the relationship between the regulars and the reservists. In the past there has often been a great deal of misunderstanding between these two. Some people called it professional jealousy; others, snobishness. But whatever it was, the fact remains that it has existed to the detriment of the military establishment.

Heretofore, there has been little chance of eliminating that feeling, since only those officers requesting assignment to one of the civilian components were considered for such positions. Usually, officers requesting those assignments already realized the importance of the civilian army. Those who did not volunteer never got a chance to find out from personal contact just how vital a part is taken by the Organized Reserve Corps and the National Guard in time of war.

Perhaps this aloofness will be replaced with a desire to cooperate, not only in time of war, but in time of peace as well. If this situation does result, there can be no doubt that the civilian army will benefit tremendously.

The revamping of the reserves is something which should have been done long ago. At present there are too many separate units, many of which would be completely ineffective should they be called upon in an emergency. However, these small units continue to soak up defense funds, which certainly could be utilized to a greater advantage elsewhere.

Under the new plan, which still has to be worked out in detail, the reserves will be reorganized into 8,000 strong units instead of the 18,000 organizations now in existence. The entire Organized Reserve Corps will be standardized into one type of unit which could be readily mobilized for any emergency.

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray has already declared that the service intends to maintain on a troop basis "only those units absolutely necessary for early mobilization." Secretary Gray further pointed out that the new plan calls for a total enrollment of 625,000 men and will cost about $153 million annually. Compare this figure with the previous annual outlay of $369 million estimated for the larger organization established at the end of the war!

It is far better to have a smaller, efficient civilian army than a mass of untrained men, who would be completely unqualified for command posts should they suddenly be called to active duty. In an emergency, this smaller Organized Reserve Corps, along with the National Guard, would augment the regular military establishment and serve as a defense nucleus until the remainder of the army-age population could be trained.

With less money to spend on defense, it is therefore, mandatory that the Defense Department consolidate all its efforts on a highly trained but small army, one which can strike with lightning-like swiftness if the need arises. At the same time, it must prepare a second line of defense, which is what the Organized Reserve Corps might rightly be called. If that second line of defense is to be worth anything, however, it must be well organized. That can only come about through the effective planning of overall defense, with a definite role assigned to each reserve unit. The first step, then, is to eliminate haphazard organization. It can be eliminated if the new plan is followed.

No reserve unit should be allowed to use defense funds unless it can be proved that its mission is necessary and that it is carrying out that mission in keeping with the Defense Department's overall plan.

There is little sense in maintaining reserve units or other civilian component units which can contribute nothing to this nation in the way of defense.

Report from Washington

Reduce Time-Lag for O'seas-Bound Dependents

By ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Time lag before dependents may join army-airforce personnel overseas is being reduced in four theaters: Hawaii, Guam, the Antilles and Panama.

The army's initial distribution of warrant officers among the four warrant pay grades was based on the following formula: chief warrant officers now designated to receive fourth pay period pay — W-4. Chief warrant officer masters and chief engineers, army mine planter service — W-3. All other chief warrant officers—W-2. All WOJG, first mates and first assistant engineers, AMPS — W-2. All other WOJG's (including second mates and second assistant engineers), AMPS — W-1.

The army and airforce have agreed that garrison prisoners of each service will be confined at the installation to which assigned for duty. Previously, airforce prisoners on duty with another service had to be removed to the nearest airforce installation.

Promising officers must not be prevented from attending service schools because they are performing essential duty in their present assignment, USAF headquarters has notified the field. Requests for deferment of officers from school assignments henceforth will be approved only on compassionate grounds, or when necessary to national security.

Take a Few Minutes Each Day to Talk to God

By CHAPLAIN LONNIE W. KNIGHT

In Matthew 18:10 - 20 we find these words: "Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in Heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there I am in the midst of them."

Many of our blessings would be regarded as possessing higher value if we considered what life would be were we suddenly deprived of them. Especially is this true of the prayer privilege. What would we do if an emergency arose and we could not call upon God for help? Where could we go and what would we think if there was no prayer — hearing and prayer-answering God when we have an urgent need? What a sad picture this would be. When the world seems dark and dreary and there is not a friend who cares to be near, when hours and days are hedged with care, Oh, what then would we do without prayer?

There are no restrictions to our prayer life as far as God is concerned and yet the actual situation is very heart-rending. God has revealed to each of us how to pray and to raise in all circumstances, yet how many of us abide in this exhortation. The hustle and bustle of the world is so distracting and so occupying that the majority of us find prayer a very distant and little used privilege. Indeed this seems to be a universal sin.

God is not only our God, but also our loving Heavenly Father, who wants us to make our requests known to him by prayer. Will you not pledge this day that you will henceforth pause a few moments during each day to talk to God and to let God speak to you? Tell him of your desires and your ambitions. Ask him for his protective care and his guidance. Just pour out your heart to him in sincerity. If you will do this consistently and deliberately, you will find that life has a new perspective for you. If your prayers are uttered in the right attitude, the experiences derived therefrom will become so instinctive that you will consider them an essential part of your life.

What a great power each one of us could receive if we would only follow the example of Christ who spoke as never man spoke and lived as never man lived, who departed into a solitary place and prayed before every crisis and thus devoted a portion of our time to prayer, we shall find our life changed for good and also find that we have an inner power that we have never dreamed possible before.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

MY FOOLISH HEART with Dana Andrews and Susan Hayward. An emotionally strong drama, this picture concerns the efforts of a woman to rescue her life from the effects of a war-blasted romance. Made by Samuel Goldwin, the movie is similar to his Best Years of Our Lives in that it shows the human tragedy that is an after-effect of war. Adult.

JOLSON SINGS AGAIN with Larry Parks and Barbara Hale. Picking up where The Jolson Story left off, the fabulous career of the "Mammy" singer is brought up to date in this Columbia musical biography. Here we see Larry Parks mimicking to the Jolson vocal cords in the story of his smashing comeback as a top-flight entertainer. Family.

MULE TRAIN with Gene Autry and Sheila Ryan. In this singing cowboy quickie that important transportation system of pioneer days — the mule train — comes into the spotlight through two-gun action and the popular song of the same title. Family.

DAKOTA LIL with George Montgomery, Marie Windsor and Rod Cameron. With Cinecolor 20th Century Fox paints a picture of a fabulous woman of the West. Where men were concerned, Lil was a gal who could take 'em or leave 'em—Take them for all they had and leave them dead. Adult.

CINDERELLA, a Walt Disney cartoon feature, Walt Disney and his dexterous craftsmen have fashioned another superior feature in Cinderella. The fairy tale lends itself perfectly to cartoon work, and Disney, who claims to have spent six years in the development of the picture, has endowed it with his usual ingenious technique with respect to the animation and color work.

HOME TOWN BY CLEVELAND AMORY
Publishers, Harper & Brothers, New York
By ALLEN L. MULLIKEN

The "second novel" seems a little early for a young author to start satirizing the publishing industry, but that is what Cleveland Amory has done in Home Town. Cultivating a vein found lucrative by Frederick Wakeman a few years back, the author digs mostly at the advertising game.

To further his purpose, Mr. Amory has created a charming group of shadowy caricatures who revolve gaily around the inner circles of New York City Society. Even the hero of Home Town who, according to the dust jacket, is "that astonishing creature, the ordinary American" carries himself like a refugee from a slick magazine short story.

Mitchell Hickok is the young author who comes to New York to help the sales of his first book that is being published. An example of the unneeded "innocence" attached to this character — he wasn't really writing a book at all, just a series of articles on the home town to be sent overseas to the boys during the war. The genuine young man's arrival in New York is noted by two glibbets of the metropolis who recognize him as a hick and start a brawl. From that moment on Mitchell Hickok, spectacles slightly askew and six-foot frame slightly rumped, jumps into every fray that presents itself.

Many opportunities are offered the Intrepid Mitch by Bill Devereux, the publicity man who first talked the westerner into coming to the big city. Devereux is the glib young man, who promotes books but never reads them.

The story begins with Bill Devereux carrying on clever dialogue with his secretary and ends with Bill Devereux still doing the same thing. But in the interim the young publicist has been reformed by his dealings with Mitch Hickok. With tragic calm he announced that in the future he shall read a small portion of every book before he tries to advertise it. The moral of Home Town is evidently tucked away somewhere in this decision.

Unlike most modern novels, the love interest in Home Town is negligible. This is primarily due to deliberateness of the hero who stubbornly insists that he isn't "like that" to any suggestion of intimacy with either the girl back home or the girl he meets in New York.

Like the good craftsman he is, Cleveland Amory, saves the trickiest plot twist for the end. With his first book well on the way to success and everybody speculating about his second effort, Mitchell Hickok again does the unexpected and the unprecedented. The conclusion lives up to the easy-to-read and full-of-fun standards of the whole book.

"Judge," she said. "He's cruel. He's a hypnotist and just before every meal he turns me into a canary and makes me eat bird seed."

"Is that true?" the judge asked.

"Your Honor" said the husband "she's a lucky woman. I could just as easily turn her into a sparrow and then she'd have to go out and hunt her own food."

People who look through key-holes don't see much to speak of.

"Daughter," asked the father, "is that young man serious in his attentions?"

"Guess he must be, Dad," she replied. "He's asked me how much I make, what kind of meals we have, and how you and mother are to live with."

"Waiter, will you please tell me if it's raining outside?"

"Sorry This isn't my table."

"Hiya toots. How's about, cutting a rug?"

"Sorry junior, you're not my type of man."

"What is your type of man?"

"The other kind."

"What other kind?"

"Any other kind."

Lew: "Becky, will you come back later. Right now I'm trying to figure out my income tax."

Becky: "That's just what I want to see you about. I've got there's something wrong with my form."

Lew: "Just keep your coat buttoned and nobody'll notice it."

Girl Scout Troop Receives Wings at Cabin Ceremony

Members of the Senior Girl Scout wing troop received their wings in a simple ceremony at the Girl Scout cabin on Monday. Forming a horseshoe around the end of the cabin, the scouts, their leaders and Capt. John T. Martin, scout instructor, stood and gave the salute to the flag, and sang "The Star Spangled Banner". The Girl Scout promise was also recited in unison. Jill Strohm, pilot, gave a short address on the purpose of wing scouting, followed by Harryette Gehring, program chairman, who gave some interesting facts on troop history. As each girl gave a Scout law, Captain Martin awarded the wings. Those receiving wings were Mary Lou Bernard, Barbara Daehler, Harryette Gehring, Anne Hamilton, Polly Hamilton, Roxanna Noel, Evelyn Oltavsewki, Jill Strohm, Clair Sullivan, Nancy Welton and Barbara Young.

Evelyn Oltavsewki awarded pins to leaders Mrs. Paul Dougherty and the troop committee, composed of Mrs. J. Sladen Bradley, Mrs. Raymond E. Daehler, Mrs. Paul Hamilton and Mrs. John T. Martin. The ceremony ended with a Girl Scout closing song.

Tea was served at the conclusion of the program. The table was centered with an arrangement of yellow spring flowers and flanked by yellow tapers in branched holders.

Ervin Laszlo, Piano Genius, To Appear at Main Theater

Ervin Laszlo, 17-year-old sensational Hungarian piano genius, will be presented next in concert series at the Main theater Feb. 20 at 8:30 p. m.

The young pianist began his instruction at the age of 5 from his mother, a piano teacher. Six months later he had learned as much as she could teach him and began to study piano with others, including the famous Dohnanyi. At seven, he won his first prize from the Music Academy of Budapest.

Ervin made his debut at the age of 9, playing with the Budapest Philharmonic orchestra, performing the Mozart A Concerto. This appearance marked the beginning of a brilliant concert career.

The war temporarily interrupted his work when the Nazis occupied Hungary, and he was denied the use of a piano. At 14 he won the Francois Liszt prize, and in the same year the artist diploma from the Academy of Music.

At 15, in competition with 500 artists from 40 countries he won the grand prize at the International music competition in Geneva. It is a greatest thrill, until coming to America, in winning this contest.

He attends the Professional Children's school in New York and is an avid reader. He likes to swim and mountain climb. He photographs every town in which he gives a concert and has his own dark room for developing prints.

Due to the outstanding talent and comparative youth of Ervin Laszlo, it is anticipated this particular concert will be of special interest to other youths of Fort Benning and Columbus within the same age group. Tickets will be sold to non-concert members. Reduced rates for students through high school age are $1.25 and $1.

Benning Corporal Jumps To Sergeant Each Night

BY DAY HE'S A CORPORAL AT FORT BENNING
Corporal Henry White keeps files on job

HE'S SERGEANT IN ANOTHER ARMY BY NIGHT
Sergeant White spins yarn for Jimmy Capp and James Taylor

Want to know a man who serves in two armies at the same time?

A Fort Benning is doing just that. He's a corporal by day for the U. S. army and a sergeant by night for the Salvation Army.

Fighting for his country as a combat soldier from Omaha beach to Berlin, he feels, was less important, than fighting for God to save man.

One of the few men anywhere who lead such a double life, Cpl. Henry White is demonstrating qualities of leadership in both armies. He has proved, too, that he could forge ahead in civilian life.

Corporal White, a native of Johnson City, Tenn., is the home of the famous Sgt. Alvin C. York, called "Brownie" by his wife, while army buddies have adopted the nickname "Whitey."

Like Sergeant York, he had a religious home, but unlike the hero of World War I, Corporal White had no strong religious convictions when he went to war. Honorably discharged after a month he started a grocery store and service station in Waycross, Ga., with his last $180. Operating this business, along with a wood yard and junk yard, he cleared $5,000 a first year as post-war civilian.

"Then I became a Christian, thanks to the Rev. Mac Thompson of Thunderbolt, Ga.," he said in a quiet tone of humility that convinces you he's sincere. Corporal White decided after careful deliberation, to reenlist in the army and he was sent to Fort Benning where he is now on duty with the 340th Area Service unit. After reaching Columbus and Ft. Benning City for a church that would fill his needs, he dropped in on a Salvation Army service 14 months ago. Before the service ended, he knew he had found the answer he was seeking.

"All your problems vanish if you enter religious work," he said. "I'd rather be doing what I am doing as a Salvation Army soldier than anything else now. You really have good time. The only time I worry is when I'm idle."

But Corporal White is seldom idle. U. S. army duties take up his days. Nearly every night is filled with Salvation Army work. On Monday nights he is scoutmaster for a troop of 30 Salvation Army scouts 11 to 14 years old. Five other nights he helps help him run the troop.

On Tuesday night he helps train 12 Salvation Army cadet guardians in Bible study. Later in the evening he joins a social meeting in a session of spiritual emphasis.

Wednesday is one of the rare nights when he stays home if the Salvation Army doesn't call on him to visit the sick or perform a special mission.

Thursday is family night at the Benning Army Club. Corporal White attends the Men's Fellowship club with 17 other members. His is secretary duties and was first president when the club was formed a year ago. His wife attends meetings of the member Ladies Home league, which visits such places as the alms house and tuberculosis sanitarium with free gifts and copies of War Cry. Children who have earned tickets by attending Sunday School attend movies or they join supervised games on the Salvation Army playground.

On Friday Corporal White joins a Bible study course at 7 p.m. followed by a holiness meeting with a sermon brought by Salvation Army leaders. He spends all of Saturday covering three routes collecting donations that help keep the Salvation Army marching. If he finishes by 30 p.m., he helps conduct an open air meeting in downtown Columbus. Sunday brings a full day of work.

But with most of the waking hours given to his two army careers, Corporal White thinks once-a-week church attendance is not enough.

"All sincere Christians, as Salvation Army soldiers are, want to take part in the work," he said.

The Whites prefer their full life of service to any other. They live next door to the Salvation Army headquarters, 1714 Second street in Columbus. The neighborhood seems to possess an unusual spirit of friendliness. Streets are clean, full of children, and the people frequently gather at the Salvation Army as if drawn to a magnet.

Corporal White, the father of four children, moves in his work, manhood, and what he believes and strong in his faith.

LOOKING AT SPORTS

With
LEO J. PARENT
Acting Sports Editor

The top athletes of 1949 have been chosen by a board of experts, and although their choices may leave the reader with the feeling that some particular favorite was neglected, no one can say that the men awarded top honors were not truly great sports figures.

The experts represented the various sections of the country and judged the names of figures submitted by sportswriters and coaches from Podunk to New York City.

Baseball saw Jackie Robinson, sensational second baseman for the Brooklyn Dodgers, bang out an average of .342 for the batting title of the National League. But that wasn't the only reason for his selection as the top performer of the year. His win spirit was an inspiration to his team, and his excellence in the field made his selection not too difficult for the experts. Joe Page of the New York Yankees was his closest competitor.

Leon Hart of Notre Dame received nine out of a possible 11 votes and we can't see how there was any difficulty about this one either. Hart stood out head and shoulders above anyone else in college football last year. Opposing line men, the men who should know, men in a tough league, voted him the most dangerous man on the field every time he slipped his giant (six-foot four-inch, 245-pound) frame into the colors of Notre Dame. Charlie Justice of North Carolina and Doak Walker of SMU each received one vote. Anyway, their fans are persistent if not accurate.

By far the easiest choice the experts had to make was professional basketball's Mr. Big, George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers. Six-foot nine-inch George had no competition. Most people call him the greatest hooper that ever stepped onto a court, and that's really covering a lot of territory. We agree with the majority. The choice was unanimous.

For college basketball, of course, Alex Groza of Kentucky stood out like a beacon. Groza was to college ball what Mikan is to pro ball. Big Alex is now playing with a quartet of his old schoolmates under the name of the Indianapolis Olympians.

Boxing put forth Sugar Ray Robinson as its shining light. Robinson picked up 10 out of a possible 11 votes. His only competitor was Ezzard Charles, the heavyweight champion of the world. Robinson, the welterweight, is considered one of the finest boxers in that sport's history. His knockout of Steve Bellosio, a first-class middleweight, stood out in his 1949 campaign.

Pro football was one of the most difficult problem the experts had to solve. With men like Bob Waterfield of the Los Angeles Rams, Dick Huffman of the Rams, Johnny Lujack of the Chicago Bears and Frankie Albert of the San Francisco 49ers, the decision was really hard. The experts then picked Otto Graham. Hope no one was confused. The ex-Northwestern quarterback was a star in a field of stars.

The tennis world has been buzzing about Pancho Gonzales all season, so the experts were just riding the winner when they chose the swarthy hard-hitting Californian as the ace of the courts. Pancho won out over the man that to most men is synonymous with the game, Jack Kramer. On the basis of Gonzales' showing on his exhibition tour with Kramer, no one can dispute the fact, reasonably, that Kramer is the finest tennis player in the world today, but Pancho's brilliant tournament record the past year earned him the award of top performer.

Sprint Star Mel Patton, formerly of the University of Southern California, garnered seven votes to stake his claim to the title top performer of the track year. The slim speedster won out over Jim Fuchs of Yale with two of the panel's votes, and Don Gehrmann, the Wisconsin miler, and Bob Mathias, the national and Olympic decathlon champion, who each received one vote. Record-breaking Mel, who has been making headlines for his sprints, has been heralded as the fastest human today.

Another difficult decision confronting the board of experts came when swimming was mentioned. No clear-cut decision was possible here. Joe Verduer of LaSalle college finally won out after two tie votes. First voting saw Keith Carter and Verduer deadlocked in the sub-committee's poll. The board of experts then tied on the ballots of Verduer and Allan Stockton. Verduer finally won out with seven votes in a run-off election.

Stammin' Sammy Saeed, the winner of both the PGA and the Masters championships during 1949, another round in his sensational career by picking up 10 out of 11 of the panel votes. Dr. Cary Middlecoff, victor over Saeed in the Open, provided the only opposition to Saeed's choice. No contest. Little Ben Hogan wasn't mentioned which surprised a great many people.

The Detroit Red Wings sent Sid Abel to pick up the award for top performer in hockey. Sid grabbed eight tallies and was opposed only by Bill Durnan, goalkeeper of the Montreal Canadiens who took three votes away from the Detroit flash. Sid had previously won the Hart trophy as the Most Valuable Player in the league at the conclusion of the 1948-49 season.

Steve Brooks rode away in the voting for the top performer in racing. Gordon Glisson threw his saddle on three votes and Ted Atkinson picked up two.

In every sport mentioned and voted for by the committees, careful consideration was devoted to the nominees, and in spite of differences of opinions that we may have with the choices, the individuals selected were really sensational actors in their respective sports.

Post Cagers Prep For Area Tourney

Meet Opens On Feb. 13

The aspirants for the Doughty basketball team of 1950 are, working out in the Main gymnasium, this week under the experienced eye of newly-appointed Coach Harold Bryant.

The team seeking to win the coming Third Army tournament will be held in the new Fieldhouse gymnasium Feb. 15-17, will be composed of 10 players. Assistant Coach Corbin J. Davis and Coach Bryant.

Final selection of the cagers to represent Fort Benning in the coming hills will be made tomorrow.

Five men from last year's Doughty team are among the group seeking berths on the 1950 squad. They are Robert H. Phillips, Edger S. Echols, Lawrence B. Brown, Vernon P. Griffin, and Philip H. (Cherokee) Smith.

Phillips, Brown, Griffin, performed for the Airborne quintet during the post intra-mural league at Bryans. Echols and Griffin were among the leaders throughout the entire season for total points scored was high man with 217 markers.

Smith, and Echols sparked a high-dribble but extra fast Doughty squad. Smith set a new record for the post when he racked up a total of 104 points in 15 games. Echols, a former Hooper in their game against the Hospital Five, Herb Myatt of the Harborers, held the post record up to that point with a mark of 38.

Coach Bryant is from Troy, N. Y. He attended LaSalle Military Institute where he played basketball, football and baseball, and ran the mile on the track team. After graduation, he coached and played for the local nation's guard basketball team in 1939-40. On active duty with the army, Coach Bryant played in a division championship of that post in 1942. A self-made man, Coach Bryant has been busy in his spare time and his education. Since he's been here he's acquired the equivalent of a law degree from the University of Georgia. Through correspondence courses he received his law degree from the American Law School in Chicago, Ill.

Defense being stressed by Coach Bryant, the drill sessions at the gymnasium.

We hope to upset the opposition's offense the way Oklahoma A&M upset Kentucky in the first half of last year's game, said Coach Bryant. "Most of the other teams we'll be up against have been playing as teams already," and their offense will be strong. But with the ten days left for us to practice, we're going to get our team-play and cohesive defense tactics.

There's plenty of height on this year's team. With nine men over six feet and the smallest of the other five try-outs five feet, 11 inches, the Doughtys have that factor in their favor. Tallest of the crew is six-foot four-inch "Cherokee" Smith.

Fort Jackson, S. C., last year's Third Army champion, P. O. R. McPherson, Ga., and the Atlanta, Ga., General depot have already submitted scores of 84 to take first and second place in the tournament, according to special services officials.

Submit Cards, Golfers Urged

Persons desiring to participate in the blind bogey and other handicap tournaments must turn in 10 score cards for 18 holes before they can have a handicap, and become eligible, club officials stated.

The long-awaited letters for club members have arrived and are awaiting installation. Officials also said, and three display cases have been placed in the Country club for the attention of members.

Unit track and field champions to represent the Area Service Unit Provisional group in the 1950 Fort Benning cinder path tournament will be selected following a group meet in Doughboy stadium March 24, unit athletic and recreation officials announced this week.

Thirteen events will comprise the meet. The agenda for the day includes the one-mile run, the pole vault, the discus throw, the shot putt, the 440-yard dash, the 100-yard dash, the 120-yard high hurdles race, the 220-yard dash, the 220-yard dash, the javelin throw, the two-mile run, the 220-yard low-hurdles race and the one-mile relay.

Participating teams will represent Headquarters and Headquarters detachments, Section 1; Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 11; the Third Army Food Service School; Military Police detachment, Section 1; Military Police detachment, Section 11; the 328th Ordnance Battalion; the 15th Quartermaster Battalion; and the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion.

Individual medals will be awarded to first and second and third place contestants in each event, and the team championships will be determined on the basis of five points for each first place, three points for each second place and one point for each third place.

Arrangements are being made to have an Army band play the National Anthem prior to the event, and a public address system will be set up in the stadium.

A scoreboard also will be erected to keep the spectators posted on the progress of the teams.

Both military and civilian guests are invited.

Invitational Meet Open to 12 Teams

NEW YORK, Feb. 1 — A dozen teams, the same number as last year, will be invited to compete in the 13th annual National Invitation basketball tournament in Madison Square Garden, Asa Bushnell, tournament committee chairman, announced yesterday.

The tournament will hold forth five days, beginning March 11, when the game will be played March 13, 14, 15 and 16. The invitational, inaugurated in 1938, is sponsored by the Metropolitan intercollegiate basketball association, headed by Walter McLaughlin, athletic director of St. John's University.

San Francisco University was the winner last year, defeating Loyola of Chicago in the finals. It marked the first time that more than eight teams participated. The number was raised from six to eight in 1941.

The 1950 NCAA tournament will follow the local nations with the Eastern regions, March 23 and 25 and the East-West championship game, March 28.

Track, Field Meet Slated

DAREDEVIL CYCLIST SET FOR IDLE HOUR RACES Cal Rowland, One of the Favorites for Sunday's Contest on Phenix City Track

16 Riders Ready For Cycle Races

Sixteen riders are expected to be on hand for the motorcycle races at Phenix City's Idle Hour park next Sunday afternoon.

An imposing array of Columbus cyclists have signified their intentions of competing in the race and a large out-of-town visitor roster is also expected.

Among the Columbus riders already entered are Bobby Herring, Robin Rogers, Cal Downing, John Shaffer, Howard Hardy and Clyde Crenshaw.

In addition, Paul Goins of Atlanta, Clarence Gray of Montgomery, Bo Powell and Lydin Wilson of Augusta, O. N. Allen, Lindsey and Chalpepper from Madison and John Allmon of Lanett, Ala., are also expected to vie.

Columbus' Herring has rapidly become a top notch rider. Using a 101 Indian Scout, he has been running a close second to Downing and Suede Hanson of Jacksonville.

In one of the last races on the Idle Hour track, Herring and Henson led the pack to the finish line, but the Swede nosed ahead there to win the contest.

Herring recently had repairs made on his motor, and says he expects to give Downing and the other hotshots some close competition.

Four six-lap heats, two eight lap semifinals, one three-lap match race and the 16-lap final, one of the longest ever staged at Idle Hour, will make up Sunday's card.

Time trials will start at 2 p.m. and the races will begin at 2:30.

Kelso, Caprino Win Golf Meet

The weekly blind bogey tournament at the Country Club links saw H. C. Kelso and C. T. Caprino post scores of 84 to take first and second place in the drawing.

Third and fourth places were won by J. E. Brooks and A. J. Rafferty with scores of 78 for the 18 holes.

Participants and their scores for the Jan. 25-29 contest were as follows:

Tigerettes Win Over Fairforest

Mary Jane Underwood racked up 36 points to lead the Tigerettes 54 to 30 victory over the Fairforest sextet last night in the Fairforest game with the Women's Industrial Basketball League play at Comer Auditorium.

Another top contest, Bibb Manufacturing Company rolled over Archer while Mary Whitley hit for eight points to pace the Tigerettes.

Dot Crookos tossed in 19 tallies to lead the Bibb sextet to victory over Archer while Mary Whitley Manufacturing Company rolled over Archer by a 42 to 15 count.

THE NEW CHAMP—Joey Maxim, the new light heavyweight boxing champion of the world, used to throw punches at Fort Benning where he was stationed as a paratrooper in 1946-47. Maxim won the title last Tuesday night in London by knocking out Freddy Mills in the 10th round of a scheduled 15-round championship bout.

Four Ring Sessions Set
STATE COLLEGE, Pa., (AP)—At least four sessions of boxing are on tap this spring when the National Collegiate boxing championships return to Penn State for the first time since 1941, and for the second time since the original tournament in 1932. A minimum of 64 entries from 20 different colleges is anticipated.

Ex-Chutist Reigns As Boxing Champ

Joey Maxim, the new light heavyweight boxing champion of the world, was a paratrooper at Fort Benning in 1946-47, and now that he's wearing the crown many local fight fans will recall the happy-go-lucky guy who made many friends here. Maxim, whose real name is Joseph Barabelli, knocked out Freddie Mills in London last Tuesday night to bring the light heavyweight title back to the United States—only Joey is going to hang around England for awhile for a more important fight. Joey's manager, smart old Jack Kearns who guided Jack Dempsey to the heavy weight title and then split with him before he lost his crown to Gene Tunney, wants a heavyweight title shot for his new fighting man. Kearns announced in London

Benning Schedules Three Golf Meets

The Fort Benning golf course will be the scene of three tournaments, the first beginning in April, club officials announced this week. The men's club championship will start the play for most golfers and will be followed by the Gordon Cup tournament. The first tournament will be held in April and will round out the divot diggers' activities. Qualifying play will be held April 1 and 2 for the men's club championship. The low 32 scores will comprise the championship division. Losers of the first day's play will make up the first flight and other flights of 16 will be formed on the basis of qualifying scores. The schedule for the tournament will be as follows: 1st match to be completed by May 20. 2nd match to be completed by May 27. 3rd match to be completed by June 3. 4th match to be completed by June 10. 5th match to be played June 18. In both the Men's club championship and the Gordon Cup tournaments the following rules are equally applicable and will govern: 1. The official club limit (14) will be observed. 2. The lie of the ball will not be improved (stunper rules). 3. Prizes given the flight winners, less championship flight, will be of equal value. The Third Army championship tournament will be played at Fort Benning during the period July 11-15.

Top Student Pfc. Yeahl Wins Title

Another airborne graduate of the Third Army's Food Service School has topped top honors in the Student of the Week contest held here each week. This week's title winner is Pfc. Richard Yeahl, a 20-year old paratrooper from Elmira, Pa., who was chosen from among 170 students. Yeahl, who graduated from the Infantry School's Airborne department before attending the Food Service School, was selected by a board of instructors and officers on academic merit, excellence in kitchen work, neatness of uniform during the week and general cooperativeness with instructors and students. After graduating from the school, Yeahl will return to Fort Bragg, N. C., to resume training with the 82nd Airborne Division. Yeahl will receive a three-day pass from school authorities for winning the title.

21 Infantrymen Are Promoted

Twenty-one privates first class and one recruit of the 15th Infantry Regiment received promotions last week. Members of the Heavy Tank company who were promoted to corporal were Pfc. Paul E. Dingess, Lester C. Mueller, William E. Winget and Lloyd J. Colson. Heavy Mortar company privates first class promoted to corporal were Jack P. Ford, Sr., Kesley S. Peck, Dewey Pinkerton and Thomas L. Kippatrick. Ratings of corporal also were awarded to James C. Lewis and Talmadge Brown of Medical company, Orden R. Pullin of Company B, William G. Thomas and Earl E. Wise of Company C, George P. Lindsey and James D. DeLoach of Company G, Edwin S. Suda of Company H, Hugh L. Jackson and Henry R. Daniel of Company I, Tom Oakes of Company L and William E. Malachi and Lester C. Dixon of Company M. Promoted to private was Rich Ed Johnson of Company M.

Eighteen Finish Vehicle Course

Eighteen enlisted men of the 89th Armored Field Artillery Battalion last week completed the second phase of a 38-hour course in wheel and track vehicle operation in the battalion's Sand Hill area.

The instruction is designed to familiarize key members of the battalion in the operation and maintenance of all types of vehicles used by the unit. Capt. Carroll H. Hoagland, supervisor, and battalion motor officer, said that the keen enthusiasm shown by both students and instructors has resulted in the course being the most popular battalion project at present.

The 38-hour course of instruction includes all types of terrain driving and necessary maintenance.

Tuesday's graduates included Sgt. Peter M. Crawford, Pfc. John H. Allen, Jr., Pfc. Walter M. Blackman, Pvt. Hobart Muse, Pvt. Ollie Fenderson, Pvt. Ben Moore, Pvt. Daniel Ford, Pvt. James Garner, Cpl. George E. Jones, Pfc. William R. Weedon, Pfc. Willie Wilson, Cpl. Eugene Colbert, Pvt. John S. Nixon, Pfc. John C. Murphy, Pfc. Theodore Miller, Pfc. A. A. Williams, Pfc. William Atkins, Pfc. Damon Williams.

Assisting Capt. Hoagland as chief instructor is Master Sergeant J. H. Wilson and Sgt. Henry D. Laws. Cpl. James H. McCall, andatoon Egeus, Pvt. G. U. Zebbs, and Pvt. Larry C. Lott

Six Enlisted Men Advanced in Grade

Six privates first class of the Provisional group, Area Service unit, were promoted to corporal last week. It has been announced by Col. Maurice L. Miller, group commander.

They were Billie H. Gardner, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit, Fort Bragg, N.C., with temporary duty at Fort Benning to attend basic airborne class No. 30.

Lt. Harry H. Harpole, Jr., has been transferred from the Third Infantry division to the Far East command, Yokohama, Japan.

Lt. Owen B. Pickle was transferred from the Atlantic Regional office, Army Audit agency, to the 106th Finance Disbursement section.

Lt. Anthony F. Yakima was transferred from the 213th Antiaircraft battalion, Fort Bliss, Tex., to the Infantry School for basic airborne training.

First Lt. James H. Dallman was transferred from the Third Infantry regiment, Fort Leslie J. McNair, Washington, D.C., to the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N.C., with temporary duty at Fort Benning to attend basic airborne class No. 30.

Gray Intends To Keep Job

Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray told senators in Washington last week he probably would stay on his present job for several months even if elected president of the University of North Carolina.

Gray explained to the senate armed services committee that a final decision had not been reached yet by authorized university officials regarding the presidency as "a great opportunity."

The senators called in the army secretary after he had been extended a "feelie" for the school presidency by North Carolina educators. He made no commitment but indicated he would accept should the school make a definite offer.

He is a native North Carolinian who took over the army secretaryship in 1949. During World War II he was stationed at the Infantry Center for a while as public information officer.

5,000 Enlistments OK'd for February

Army officials announced in Washington last week that 5,000 recruits will be allowed to enlist in the army during February.

Enlistments were scheduled Jan. 1 to reduce total strength to 630,000, the limit set by the military budget. Enough men are expected to leave the army by Feb. 1, however, to permit a limited resumption of recruiting.

Vets Urged to Resubmit Unacknowledged Forms

Veterans should fill out a second application for National Service Life Insurance dividends if they do not get a card of acknowledgment within 30 days after applying. Hoke Wilkinson Jr., Columbus manager of the Georgia department of veterans service, said last week. He advised veterans to fill out and mail to the bureau in Washington another application marked "duplicate" if the acknowledgment did not arrive within 30 days. Mr. Wilkinson said office hours for the Columbus veterans service office after Jan. 30 will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., instead of 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. The change is being made to allow veterans employed at Fort Benning more time to get to the office before it closes in the afternoon, he added. Veterans now in training under the GI bill or similar federal laws, may extend their training by "coming back" from the government some of the involuntary leave time for which they are receiving allowance. Mr. Wilkinson also disclosed. Subsistence allowance paid during involuntary leave time cut down the length of training

Sergeants Receive Detachment Duties

Assigned to the Infantry School detachment last week from other detachments were Sgt. Fleming R. Blevins, M-Sgt. Fred Waddell and Sgt. 1st Cl. Clark S. Holman. Sergeant Blevins was transferred here from the 6215th Area Service unit, Fort Lawton, Wash., and has been assigned to detachment headquarters, pending further orders. Sergeant Waddell, formerly a member of Service company, 30th Infantry regiment, has been assigned to Company B for duty with the Infantry School's Automotive department. Sergeant Holman has been assigned to Company A for duty with the G-4 office. He is a former member of Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit.

Files Contain Fingerprints Of 70 Million

WASHINGTON (APFS)—Fingerprints of half the nation's population are on file with the FBI. Of the 70 million persons whose prints are indexed and catalogued in Washington, about one-fourth are of criminals and criminal suspects. The files got their biggest boost during World War II from the vastly increased ranks of the armed services and government workers, employees in defense plants and shipyards and civilian defense personnel. Army prints number 18 million and date back to World War I. There are also 4 million navy prints, 700,000 marine corps, 27,000 coast guard and 25,000 sets taken from the merchant marine during the last war. Atomic Energy commission prints are filed separately and number 188,000. Less than 10 percent belong to aliens who are or have been in the U. S. The remainder have been gathered from government workers, servicemen, taxicab drivers, air raid wardens, Kiwanis and Rotary club members, and visitors to world fairs. In 25 years the files have grown from 30,000 sets of prints to 112 million. The FBI estimates that about 42 million sets are duplicates.

DAVE RUBINOFF AND HIS FAMOUS VIOLIN TO COME TO BENNING Noted Musician To Appear At Main Theater On Feb. 26, at 2 p.m.

Famous Violinist Sets Appearance

Rubinoff and his violin will appear in a popular concert at the Main Theater Sunday Feb. 26, at 2 p.m. Following in the foot steps of the late Victor Herbert who first brought Rubinoff to this country, the famed violinist comes here as part of an extended tour to bring great music to the small communities of America. The complete program for the popular concert will not be released until a later date, but Rubinoff is sure to include some of the stirring music of his native Poland. One of the favorites with audiences over the nation is the haunting Warsaw Concerto. Never one to high-hat popular taste, the master violinist usually presents variations on a few current juke box favorites. From the days of his radio program that were a hatching ground and finishing school for such men as Benny Goodman, Tommy Dorsey and Artie Shaw Rubinoff has always been interested in promising young musicians. The master considers his piano accompanist, David Vasquez, a fine example of the well-trained young musician of this country. Mr. Vasquez returned to the concert field last year after a four-year tour of active duty in the navy. At this concert Rubinoff will use one of the most precious instruments in the world, a Stradivarius violin, which is valued at $100,000. The instrument was made in 1731 and bears the authentic mark of the famous Italian violin maker, Antonio Stradivari. Admission to hear Rubinoff and his violin will be $1.

Five-Day Benning Visit Made By Female Testing Authority

Her, instructional tour of military installations has taken her to Fort Sheppard, Ill., Fort Devens, Mass., Fort Meade, Md., Presidio, Calif., Fort Sam Houston, Tex., and Fort Knox, Ky. More than 3,000 students passed through her course in clerical skills and supervisory orientation.

2nd Dividend May Be Paid

WASHINGTON (APFS)—Servicemen and veterans who have kept their National Service Life Insurance policies in effect may be rewarded by a second dividend payment within the next two years. The Veterans Administration recently announced that premium payments on NSLI policies are still higher than the amount needed for death benefit and reserve funds. Officials said that as soon as the current payment of $2.8 billion is disbursed to 16 million policy holders insurance officers will again look at the surplus and may declare another dividend.

Six Celebration Areas Selected

Six geographical areas have been designated for joint-celebration of Armed Forces Day on May 26, an announcement from Washington declared this week. According to the new law issued by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and approved by President Truman, one of the three armed services will be responsible in each of the six areas on the designated day. Troops and equipment participating will be made available in as many communities as practicable, the disclosure said. In this area, the army will be responsible for the allocation and participation of troops, equipment and displays on the third Saturday of May. Under the command of Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., commanding general of the Third army, the participating area will include the Third army, the Sixth Naval district and the 14th airforce.

EM Transferred Within Detachment

Three inter-unit transfers of enlisted men of the Infantry School detachment were reported this week. Sgt. Ellwood Coats was transferred from Company A to detachment headquarters and placed on detached service with Company A for duty with company overhead. Cpl. Ernest F. Rhodes was relieved from duty with detachment headquarters and detached service with Company C and assigned to detachment headquarters, and placed on detached service with Company B for duty with company overhead. Cpl. Jack L. Meredith, detachment headquarters, has been placed on detached service with Company C for duty with company overhead.

Certificates Awarded Artillery Outfit Men

Third Infantry division certificates of achievement were awarded five enlisted men of the 41st Field Artillery battalion at a retreat parade last week. Men receiving the certificates were M-Sgt. Clarence R. Grimes, Sgt. 1st Cl. John J. Rybka, Sgt. 1st Cl. Forrest W. Smith, Sgt. Willie C. Boing and M-Sgt. Eugene C. Stovall. Units participating in their first formal retreat parade of 1950 were the 41st attached units of the Ninth Field Artillery battalion, Third Anti-aircraft Artillery and Automatic Weapons battalion and Third division, artillery headquarters.

SECOND INCREMENT DISEMBARKS . . . Members of the second training increment of Third Infantry division troops are shown leaving the U. S. S. Tacoma at Little Creek, Va., where they will be groomed for participation in the Caribbean land-sea-air maneuver, Operation Fortrez.

Did Get Pay Increase

Report Authentic, Survey Indicates

BY LEWIS McAFEE
Managing Editor, The Bayonet

When a group of Columbus merchants and businessmen declared recently that the Career Compensation Act of 1949 had bolstered their cash register receipts, it kindled a controversial fire that had been smoldering here since the enactment of the new pay law last October.

Certain categories of enlisted men assailed the public information office, unable to understand how the pay measure could provide the stimulus to city business that had been depicted in the article written by Pat Murphy, Bayonet staff writer. In short, they questioned the authenticity of the survey.

In interviewing a representative group of enlisted men and officers of Fort Benning this week, this writer found that all those who objected to the manner in which the article was written fell into two categories: those who suffered decreases in their actual take-home pay, and those whose increases were almost negligible.

If GI's who took offense to the article will dust off their copies of the Jan. 19 issue of The Bayonet, they will discover that it wasn't based on individual cases of soldiers but on the general effect the new pay rates had had on Columbus commercial establishments. The GI viewpoint of the Career Compensation Act had been discussed pro and con previously in The Bayonet feature, T.I.C. Talks.

However, just to prove the point brought out in the original survey, this writer questioned nine persons, five enlisted men and four officers, and only three of the group said that they weren't living considerably better under the new pay rates.

One master sergeant said that his take-home pay actually was $22 less now than it was for September, 1949, but pointed out that "on paper" he had received some increase. He was the only one of the nine who declared that his pay now is lower than it was under the previous system.

The biggest single item accountable for the slash in his pay was the re-evaluation of government-quarters occupancy from 90 cents per day to $67.50 per month. But when the new pay law took effect, he also had to forfeit his Combat Infantry badge pay of $10 per month.

Another fact which ruffled the sergeant to some extent was the fact that he completed another three-year hitch, making him a total of nine years service, shortly after the Career Compensation Act became effective, which would have made him eligible for an in-grade pay raise under the old system. The new bill, however, provides for in-grade increases at two-year intervals upon completion of even-numbered years of service.

A private with less than two years' service wasn't as vehement in his condemnation of the pay law as the master sergeant, but lamented the fact that his boost in pay totaled less than $2.50 per month.

The other complaint came from a chief warrant officer with over eight years' service, who commented that his approximately $20 per month advance in wages was negligible beside the larger increases meted out to most junior officers.

The biggest boost in cold cash was cited by a captain with 10 years service, who said that he now is drawing $105 more a month than he did before October, 1949.

Percentage-wise, however, a corporal with 16 years service said that his new pay was almost half again as much as he received under previous rates. He added that his percentile increase would be even higher if his new wages hadn't placed him in a higher withholding tax bracket.

A sergeant first class with over six years service said that he was making about $40 more a month now than he was under the old pay system, and added that he wasn't very sympathetic with those who were squawking over losing take-home pay.

"Most of these fellows," he said, "had been furnished with quarters on the post at the unbelievably low rate of $27 per month, while a lot of soldiers who were less able to pay exorbitant rentals were having to live in town and pay at least $67.50 for quarters."

IT STILL WORKS . . . Even waterproofing hasn't destroyed the effectiveness of the walky-talky set being used here by Cpl. Daniel Lewis of Headquarters company, First battalion, 15th Infantry regiment. This picture was taken during pre-manuever training for the land-sea-air exercise Operation Fortrex, at the Little Creek, Va., Naval Amphibious base.

7 Teams Will Vie For Cage Crown

Seven teams will vie for the Third Army basketball crown in the tournament slated to begin Feb. 13 in Fort Benning's new Fieldhouse gymnasium, special service officials announced this week.

The first game will get underway at 2 p.m. Feb. 13, followed by two night games at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. Drawings for the teams to participate in these games have not been made, according to tourney officials.

This year's tourney includes Defending Champions Fort Jackson, S. C., Fort Bragg, N. C., Atlanta General depot, Ga., Oiler General hospital, Ga., Camp Gordon, Ga., Fort McPherson, Ga., and the Doughboys of Fort Benning.

Fort Jackson took the cage trophy home last year by defeating the troopers from Fort Bragg in the finals of the 1949 version of the classic by a 63-42 score.

Fort Benning was walloped in its first encounter by the powerful squad from Fort Jackson. The next defeat for the Doughboys came in the quarter-finals at the hands of the Braggmen, who pinned a 54-40 loss on the struggling infantrymen. This defeat came after the Benningites had registered two victories: one a hard-fought 46-42 win over Fort McPherson and the other a 70-61 triumph over Camp Gordon.

The week's schedule for this year's tournament includes three games on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, two night games at 7 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. on Thursday and the finals on Friday.

Special services officials said that the directors of the 1950 tourney promises to be a tough hurdle to any of the participating teams. Averaging six feet and 175 pounds, the cagers are confident and ready, according to Team Manager Lou Godino. The Doughmen have returned in veterans in Edgar Echols, Robert Phillips, Vernon Griffin, Philis (Crockett) Smith and Lawrence Brown. The men will

NCOs to Benefit If Plan Okayed

Third army approval is being awaited here this week on a vast rehabilitation program to provide an increase in adequate government housing units for Fort Benning officers, noncommissioned officers and their families.

Col. Marcus P. Bell, Infantry Center G-4, said that funds with which to implement the program have been requested because of the stepped-up evaluation of government quarters for enlisted men. (The Career Compensation Act of 1949 raised the quarters allowance for top-grade enlisted men from $37.50 to $67.50 per month, and made it mandatory that $67.50 be withheld from the pay of enlisted men in that category who were not furnished with government housing.)

A total of $317,230 has been asked for the rehabilitation program, but rentals collected on the units, will liquidate that amount within 18 months, Colonel Bell said.

In requesting the appropriation, which is to be used only to make needed repairs on and add facilities to existing housing, Colonel Bell pointed out that a host of officers has declared the blighting qualities of the buildings inadequate, and that a difficulty is being encountered in finding voluntary occupants for the units.

One of the major items on the proposal is the rehabilitation of the quarters in Benning Park to improve the concrete floors in the buildings and replace the present kerosene heating system with natural gas.

If the $91,435 for Benning Park improvements gets a green light at Third army, it is contemplated by Infantry Center G-1 officials that the officers now living in the area will be moved into the Wherry bill housing projects in the vicinity of the Main post, and top grade quarters in Benning Park.

Rentals collected on the Benning Park quarters, Colonel Bell said, would amortize the amount asked for improvements in about four months.

The largest amount of the money asked for the five-phase (See APPROVAL F-11)

Auxiliary Maps Campaign Plans

Fort Benning's Red Cross auxiliary met this week to iron out plans for the fund-raising campaign that will be conducted nationally on Feb. 28.

Col. Charles E. Woodruff, one of the directors of the Infantry Center campaign who presided at the auxiliary meeting, presented plans for the forthcoming drive.

Appointed to head the auxiliary's role in the campaign were Mrs. Withers A. Burns and Mrs. P. W. Clarkson. Co-chairmen for the 1950 drive will be Mrs. E. O. Gibson and Mrs. Orlando Troxel.

Also appointed to serve as heads of committees and drive supervisors were Mrs. Thymas R. Yancey, collection chairman; Mrs. E. O. Johnson, Lawson, a I r o c e base chairman; Mrs. John F. Blatt, kick-off party chairman; James W. Friend, revenue chairman; Mrs. Donald J. Arthur, publicity chairman; Mrs. Hamilton Peyton, ticket chairman; Mrs. John D. Cone, games chairman; Mrs. Robert H. Brown, bridge chairman; Mrs. William A. Duncan, canasta chairman, and Mrs. Alton L. Perry, refreshment chairman.

Shopping Bus Service Starts

Shopping bus service for Fort Benning residents between the Main post and Columbus was inaugurated yesterday by the Howard Bus company of Columbus. The service will include eight round trips per day, and passengers will be taken on at several places in the Main post area. Stops in the city will be made along principal thoroughfares in the business district.

Big GI Dividend Due Next Year

There's another big dividend on World War II veterans' insurance coming up next year. It won't be nearly as large as the $2,800,000,000 payment now being distributed, but it will run into millions.

The Veterans Administration has informed Congress it plans to pay out about 65 per cent of the new special dividend in the first six months of 1951, and the rest before the end of that year.

"We have no idea of the amount that will be available for the 1951 dividend payment," Breining told a reporter. "We won't have, until we determine our mortality experience for the years involved, and the size of the reserves that must be set up to cover the many contingencies."

"We have the help on this of an actuarial advisory committee made up of some of the top insurance talent in the country." The current $2,800,000,000 dividend is from a surplus that developed during the first eight years of the program from 1940 through the 1946 anniversary date of each of the 20,000,000 policies issued to 10,300,000 World War II veterans.

The forthcoming special dividend, Breining said, will cover three policy years, through the 1951 anniversary date of each policy. The current dividend is being paid on all policies that were in force three months or longer. Breining said the 1951 payments probably will be made only on policies in force for a year or longer. It will, however, cover policies that lapsed during the three years as well as those still in force, he said.

Overpayments to veterans under laws administered by VA will be deducted from top insurance checks as they are from the current dividend, Breining said.

VA cannot deduct overpayments that were made by the armed services or other federal agencies, however, nor can it withhold amounts owed by the veterans in income taxes. The dividend payments are not subject to income tax or to attachment for private debts.

The government is currently rolling out a fund of checks far faster than the top-speed goal set when deliveries began three weeks ago.

Treasury officials said the mechanized mass production system has attained an average daily rate of 250,000 checks or more against a 200,000 goal set at the start.

They reported 3,615,076 checks

Negro YMCA To Continue Functioning

The Fifth Avenue Army-Navy YMCA will continue in existence in spite of being deprived of financial support as a result of the nationwide shutdown of the USO program.

Following an emergency meeting of the committee last week, Mr. Ashworth said, "Come what may, the institution will be retained in Columbus."

Funds to make up in part for the loss created by the USO are being sought by the national Army-Navy YMCA headquarters which has promised to help.

Additional money, he explained, can be expected from the city and other local sources. Limited financial assistance, Mr. Ashworth noted, will be furnished by the consolidated Community Chest and "possibly" from the city.

Mr. Ashworth pointed out, however, that help from the local agencies cannot be asked until Fort Benning indicates its desire for retention of the institution, the committee chairman observed.

"Informal information," he said, indicates that Benning is anxious to keep the club going through the 1951 anniversary date of each of the 20,000,000 policies issued to 10,300,000 World War II veterans.

The government is currently rolling out a fund of checks far faster than the top-speed goal set when deliveries began three weeks ago.

TIS Inaugurates Weapons Class

The addition of an Infantry noncommissioned officers' weapons course to the curriculum of the Infantry School was announced this week by the director of instruction's office.

The new course, which is a consolidation of the former light weapons NCO and heavy weapons NCO classes, will encompass 600 hours of instruction, extended over a 15-week period.

Capacity for the course, the first class of which will start March 1 and end June 22, has been set at 200 students. From two to three classes annually are anticipated by Infantry School officials.

SOME MIXUP . . . The look of wonderment on the face of M-St. William L. Lindgren, right, is all because of the goat across the desk who's signing in for the Infantry School's associate base course. His name: Roy Rogers—repeat, Roy Rogers. In this case, however, it's Lt. Roy Rogers, an honest-to-goodness cowpoke from Tulla, Tex. but for the enlightenment of fans of the Hollywood Rogers, this Rogers doesn't ride a horse named Trigger, and he has never played in a movie.

TIC Clamps Down Draft Hearings On PX Card Rule Are Concluded

In line with a new army and airforce order, military personnel, their dependents and civilian employees of the Infantry Center will not be able to use snack bar and cafeteria facilities without the new purchase permit.

Colonel Elia also explained that visitors of military personnel will be extended, but only on a registration basis. Supporters of the draft are said to have lost a majority of their contentions for renewal of induction due to the cost of training.

According to press reports circulating under the Capital dome, congress will extend the measure for another three years, but will not induct recruits unless an emergency should present itself.

The new rule is in line with a move to prevent fraudulent use of exchange facilities by unauthorized persons.

Hearings on the extension of the Selective Service Act of 1948, which expires June 24, ended this week with two sides of the proposal showing their hand to members of the House Armed Services committee.

Washington sources believe the peacetime induction rule will be extended, but only on a registration basis. Supporters of the draft are said to have lost a majority of their contentions for renewal of induction due to the cost of training.

According to press reports circulating under the Capital dome, congress will extend the measure for another three years, but will not induct recruits unless an emergency should present itself.

The new rule is in line with a move to prevent fraudulent use of exchange facilities by unauthorized persons.

Limited privileges, which constitute the purchase of exchange except uniforms, will be granted to honorably discharged veterans of the armed forces receiving hospitalization care from the Veterans Administration, discharged veterans totally disabled who are receiving government care, and exchange employees of military installations.

Civilian employees of military installations will receive a special privilege card, not punched or otherwise obliterated, that will entitle them to use snack bar and cafeteria facilities. The card, however, specifically says they cannot use other exchange activities.

Unlimited privilege cards will be granted to military personnel and their dependents (wives, children, mothers and other relatives depending upon military orders), officers of foreign nations on duty with any of the United States' armed forces, Red Cross workers assigned to a duty within the armed forces, widows of military personnel and government workers living on the post, were deemed applicable for the provision by the exchange office.

Red Cross Work Goes On Even In Isolated Towns

Even in the isolated town of Crossville, Tenn., the helping hand of the American Red Cross has been felt.

Last Oct. 22, Cpl. George E. Collett, Personnel section, Student Training Regiment, was enjoying a three-day pass in the remote town of 6,000 people. At 11:55 p.m. he became the father of an eight-pound, 12-ounce baby girl.

As most new fathers, he thought it best to stay with his wife and new child for a few days, but his pass expired at midnight Sunday—exactly 24 hours later.

George hurriedly turned to the local Red Cross officials, who, in this case, were two elderly ladies operating on a part-time basis.

After he explained his desire to remain with his wife a day or two longer, one of the Red Cross workers immediately placed a telephone call to the regional office in Atlanta.

Some seven hours later, George received three telegrams (one from his company commander, one from Third Army headquarters in Atlanta and one from the Red Cross's regional office) confirming a five-day extension on his three-day pass.

"I really don't know what I would have done without the Red Cross in this case," he explained. "It was early Sunday morning when everything happened—I didn't have anyone to turn to."

"The Red Cross sure took care of things in a hurry," George says that in Crossville, a town regarded even by the nonbelievers of the way the Red Cross has more than once lent a hand to needy citizens.

George, a great supporter of the Red Cross, said their mobile units gave him a home away from home in Yokohama, Japan, bringing entertainment and food into areas undeveloped by occupation troops.

"I'm certainly going to give generously to the Red Cross (and raising drive this month)," he said. "The Red Cross should get everybody's help—it's a fine organization."

Parlez-Vous? Lingo Experts Being Tested

Enlisted men and officers who have foreign language certificates on their qualification cards are being given a chance to demonstrate their proficiency in the lingo through tests being administered by the classification and assignment section of the Adjutant General Department's Military Personnel division here.

The tests are given each Thursday and Friday, and are designed to determine the degree of fluency with which a person reads and understands the language. Personnel conducting the tests are Sgt. 1st Cl. Edward Desrochers, Sgt. 1st Cl. Harry Troxel and Cpl. Richard Snyder.

Approximately 60 tests for German linguists are to be administered in the Infantry Center headquarters annex this morning, and about 100 French speaking personnel are scheduled to be examined this afternoon and tomorrow.

According to officials of the classification and assignment section, the tests will be a continuous program since many new personnel are being assigned to the Infantry Center for duty will be required to take the language exams.

After scores have been determined, the degree of proficiency with which a person understands and reads a language will be noted on his qualification card and those who have fair or fluent knowledge of a foreign language will have a permanent record of their linguistic ability filed with the Career Management Branch of the Department of the Army.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Class Caliber Maintained Despite Cutback In Funds

Students in the Communications department's radio repair class know by now that lack of operating funds is not a hindrance to classes conducted by Sgt. Naomi B. Reynolds, this week's Soldier of the Week from Company B, Infantry School detachment.

During the past few weeks, Sergeant Reynolds has composed and written 24 work sheets for use in the instruction on superheterodyne radio receivers. This move was necessary after sufficient parts for the receivers couldn't be purchased and he had to shift to an alternate instructional plan.

The sergeant's enterprise has helped to accelerate the Infantry School's Communications department in all phases of training, department heads said. As one example, the Burnsville, Miss., unit has conducted a series of tests to improve training methods by designing and assembling new training aids for the school's repair classes.

Infantry School officials said that Sergeant Reynolds' initiative in developing training aids has saved the government an appreciable amount of money. The cost of these training aids, if bought commercially, would exceed any allocation made to the Communications department.

Before entering the army in 1940 at Fort McClellan, Ala., the 36-year old veteran made a hobby of radio repair. He learned how to turn the motor of army vehicles. Eventually, he was sent to the Infantry School's Automotive department for advanced study, where he distinguished himself as one of the top students in the school.

In the summer of 1944, Sergeant Reynolds was married here to the daughter of two boys. The family lives in Baker Village.

Sgt. NAOMI B. REYNOLDS, Soldier of the Week

Col. Robt. Ward Assigned to TIS

G-3 of the Ninth corps in Japan, reported to Fort Benning last week to assume duties with the Infantry School's Academic Department officials said this week. His specific assignment is not yet known.

Colonel Ward, a native of Cincinnati, O., graduated from the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., in 1929 and came to Fort Benning in 1931 to attend the company officer's course at the Infantry School.

Following his graduation in 1942 from the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., he was assigned to the European theater headquarters in England. Several months later he was sent to Africa where he was G-3 for the North African invasion, continuing with the original forces until they landed in Italy.

From 1941 until 1947, he was a staff officer in the Department of the Army's Organization and Training division, and in mid-1947, was assigned to Japan as corps G-3.

Colonel Ward's decorations include the Legion of Merit medal with oak leaf cluster, Purple Heart medal, Bronze Star medal and Combat Infantry badge.

Mother's Sacrifice Praised By Secretary of Defense

"These noble words, I shall not dare to bow in reverence to you, Mrs. Jones. Thus the sacrifice of an American man and his family last week by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson.

Mr. Jones, the father of Clay W. Jones, who lost three sons in World War II and another in the Korean conflict, died last week in Ohio, could be released from active duty if he so desired.

To this, Mrs. Jones said: "I am proud to have another son in the service of his country; I will not seek his release." Secretary Johnson also told the Gold Star mother that "your son Eugene's death is just as significant a contribution to the security of our country and our way of life as were those of his three brothers on the battlefields of Europe, China, and New Georgia."

On behalf of the men and women in our armed forces, I salute you and the memory of your patriotic sons."

No Iron Gates at Fort Benning

The public information office often receives requests from civilian groups requesting permission to visit Fort Benning. We are reprinting here one such recent request, along with our reply, which is, in essence, the same answer we give to all requests for permission to visit "America's most complete army post."

"A group of people here in my community (West Point, Ga.) the letter read, 'would like to visit Fort Benning. I am writing to find out when you will give us a pass or permit to visit there. We would like to sponsor a bus any time you will allow. Please let us know when we can come.'" It was signed by Miss Mamie L. James.

Our reply read like this: Dear Madam: Thank you for your letter asking for permission and a pass to visit Fort Benning. We will be pleased to have you and your friends visit us.

No passes are required nor do you need my permission nor anyone else's. Fort Benning—America's most complete army post—belongs to the people. It is open to anyone, regardless of race or color.

As the Infantry Center of the United States everything we do is of interest to you taxpayers. We would be delighted to show you and your friends just what we do here.

While here, you will see just how your army trains. You will see that there is nothing glamorous about being in the Infantry. It's just a hard, dirty job that takes a real man to perform its hazardous duties.

You will see how we at the Infantry Center economize and stretch your tax dollars to their utmost. It won't be necessary for you to go to Hollywood to find the ideal American youth. You'll find him right here, proudly wearing the olive drab uniform of his country.

When you arrive at our entrance, you'll find no iron gates to keep you out; no "no tressassing" signs; no iron curtain. You will be greeted by immaculately clad military policemen. Like your local policeman, his job is to assist you. He is placed where he is to answer any questions about location of units and personnel on our huge reservation.

You will experience no lengthy questioning as to where you are going, whom you wish to see, and the nature of your visit. Fort Benning is your post. You are always welcome, anytime.

Naturally, there are certain things we do here that enemy agents would like to know about. But these are relatively few and even our own troops aren't permitted in certain restricted areas on the post.

With the exception of that, the post is open to you and your friends. You may ride anywhere you please, see anything you desire. Should you wish to examine the men's living quarters, that can be arranged. Should you wish to visit that closest a woman's heart—the kitchen—you may do so.

You will see some of the most unusual buildings in the United States. One is the beautiful white stone Infantry School building, the heart of Fort Benning. It is the heart that pumps the latest information on infantry tactics and weapons to all active and reserve units in this grand country of ours.

Others include our unique courtards, our magnificent new fieldhouse, our new book store and Doughboy stadium. One of our courtards has the longest undivided porch in the world, a half-mile of covered porch. Our new fieldhouse, most modern in the army, boasts an indoor swimming pool, handball court, two basketball courts and a complete gymnasium with spectator space. The book store is the most complete book department in the army. Doughboy stadium was built by living infantrymen as a tribute to their dead comrades of World War I. It was built entirely by volunteer soldier labor.

Yes, Fort Benning is your post. As a stockholder, you should have a special interest in your army. We know that you want to feel that you are partners. We know you want to be kept informed, so that you can talk to others about "your" army.

We want you to know that we are interested in your opinions. We know it's human to want to belong to a first-rate outfit—be it an infantry company, a baseball team or a top-notch manufacturing concern. Your army is a winner and we want you to know it.

So please feel free to visit us anytime. Unless you plan to bring along a large group with you, it won't be necessary to make prior arrangements.

In conclusion, we want to thank you for your interest in your army. As long as there are people like you who are vitally interested in what we do, how we do it, and, more important, why we do it, you need never fear a second-rate army.

Our door is open. You are cordially invited to come in. Yours as friendly, Post Commander

U.S. Will Continue A-Bomb Developments

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — President Truman announced that the United States will continue developments on atomic weapons, including the hydrogen or superbomb. The President said he thought this step was necessary to insure peace and security until a workable form of international control is devised and accepted by the major powers of the world. Dr. Klaus Fuchs, British scientist arrested by Scotland Yard agents on a tip from the FBI, has become the center of an international hubbub that may lead to the arrest of several more communist sympathizers. Dr. Fuchs was jailed for allegedly letting hydrogen bomb data and other vital atomic secrets leak into Moscow. President Truman invoked the Taft-Hartley act as the soft coal strike virtually halted production this week. A fact-finding board has been named and the next step is for the attorney general to ask a federal court order directing the union to get its miners back on the job for 70 or 80 days. Cyrus B. Cping, national labor mediator, has asked the CIO communications workers to delay their walkout against the Bell Telephone company until Feb. 20. The right of congress to restrict the amount of refined sugar which Puerto Rico may ship to the U. S. mainland under the 1948 Federal Sugar Act was upheld when the Supreme court held the act constitutional, over the objections of the Puerto Rican government. Republican candidates seeking to regain control of Congress in the November election have set a policy for 1950 demanding more voice in the trend toward socialism. Army Secretary Gordon Gray was elected president of the University of North Carolina this week. The secretary said he would become president as soon before Sept. 1 has the responsibility of the Defense Department will permit.

Report from Washington

Reduces Strength, Army Resumes Recruiting

By ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE The Army has resumed limited recruiting after suspension of all original enlistments during January. The suspension was imposed for the purpose of reducing strength to 630,000 to comply with budget limitations.

The Navy has authorized assignment of staff corps officers to duty as commanding officers. Staff corps officers who have functioned with the title "supply officer-in-command," etc., will in the future be designated as commanding officers.

A recent Defense Department memorandum requires each of the armed services to maintain a separate supply system, but stipulates they shall be common to the three services in the matters of policy, standards and procedures whenever practicable.

The Air Force is compiling a list of officers eligible for teaching assignments in the service academies and the new Air Force academy. If and when one is authorized, application particulars are covered in AF 36-27.

The Defense Department has authorized military and civilian personnel on duty in Japan to rent private quarters from Japanese nationals provided sanitary standards are maintained.

God Tolerant to All Sinners Save Hypocrites

BY CHAPLAIN HENRY D. SUTTON

Our Lord was most tolerant; most understanding; most considerate in His dealings with sinners. While He had come to destroy sin, He made it clear He had come to save the sinner. This truth He emphasized in the parable of the Good Shepherd—leaving the ninety-nine sheep that were safe, going out to search for the one that had strayed and was lost. The same truth He sealed as only a God could seal it—by dying on the cross—holding out the hope of supernatural life to all poor sinners, even promising paradise that very day to the repentant sinner who was dying at His right.

But there was one type of sinner the Master lashed with merciless lashes—the make believe, the hypocrite, men (some of them sitting in high priestly places) who pretended to believe one thing but in reality believed and lived another. He searched them with His denunciations; they were a brood of vipers; they were whited sepulchers filled with the rottenness of dead men's bones.

Why was the Gentle Savior so merciless to the hypocrite? Practically all the other sins are of weakness, sins of the not too strong. Hypocrisy is a sin of the mind. It springs from the viciousness of malice rather than from the weakness of fallen nature.

TO MY VALENTINE...Who wouldn't like to have this Valentine? It's lovely Lucille Ball, star of CBS' My Favorite Husband, who personifies the glamour and romance of an old-fashioned St. Valentine's Day as she peers through a giant lace-fringed heart.

Airman: "Hello, Air Police? I just wanted to report that I found that wallet I reported stolen last night."

Desk Sergeant: "What are you, a wise guy, or something. We've already arrested the guy who took it."

"Does your Marine boy friend ever start things he can't finish?" "He starts things he can't even begin."

Tom: "I gave my girl a wonderful present last night." Harry: "That's nothing. I gave mine a wonderful past."

There are three classes of women: the intellectual, the beautiful, and the majority.

Captain: "You should have been here at 8 o'clock." Private: "Why, what happened?"

Wife: "John, is everything shut up for the night?" Husband: "Everything but you, dear."

Private: "You're one in a million, kid." Girl: "So are your chances, soldier."

Maj. Gen. Chase Addresses Post Woman's Club Group

Maj. Gen. William C. Chase, deputy commander-in-chief of Third army and wartime chief of the famed First Division in Cambodia, was guest speaker at the Woman's club on Monday. He was introduced by Mrs. Marcus B. Beasly, president.

The general, who has had several tours of duty in the Far East, spoke on "My Personal View of the Situation in the Far East". His address was, as he put it "a verbal tour of the Far East, starting in Japan and continuing through China, the Philippines, French - Indo China and Burma".

General Chase spoke about each country and discussed its strategic value, both militarily and economically, in connection with the "Asia for the Asiatics" doctrine and the foreign policy of the United States. He stressed the fact that the welfare of these countries is based on a rice economy, and as the rice crop fluctuates so does the political situation. He called attention to the fact that the doctrine of "Asia for the Asiatics" is a very hard one to carry out, and that it is now coming into being. He pointed out the great vicarious success in China and Manchuria.

Japan, in the opinion of General Chase is the only country where the white man has maintained his prestige, and he gives full credit for this to the cooperation of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

General Chase concluded his address on the optimistic note that in addition to Japan, he considered the Philippines, Thailand, Australia and New Zealand among the countries cooperating with the United States.

After the general's speech, a brief business meeting was held. Mrs. Wallace M. Hale, recording secretary, read the minutes of the Dec. 12 meeting and Mrs. James Bartholomew, auditor, read the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Carl E. Frisby, program chairman, introduced the musical artists, Mrs. Harold W. Browning, coloratura - soprano, and Mrs. Glenn A. Soederstrom, accompanist. Mrs. Browning's selections included "The Brahms Lullaby", "The Mother Taught Me", "Will You Remember" and "Estrellita".

After the meeting adjourned, tea was served. The tea table was overlaid with a lace cloth, centered with a beautiful arrangement of early spring flowers flanked by tapers in crystal holders. Serving were Mrs. Maudie E. Miller, Mrs. John D. Frederick, Mrs. P. M. Clarkson, Mrs. Robert B. Hill, Mrs. James F. Torrence Jr., and Mrs. Dennis M. Moore.

Board Ladies Hold Social

Army Field Forces board No. 3 ladies entertained on Friday with their regular luncheon and a surprise stork shower for Mrs. Fergus Ling, with Mrs. Werner Holz and Mrs. L. E. Lichtenwiler as hostesses.

The luncheon table was decorated in the spring motif with a low crystal bowl of floating camellias. A camellia corsage marked the place of each guest.

Following the luncheon, gifts were presented to Mrs. Ling in two doll carriages decorated with white ruffles and pink and blue bows.

Those attending were Mrs. Burton L. Lassus, Mrs. John D. Frederick, Mrs. William L. Coughlin, Mrs. Donald A. Fay, Miss Nina Fay, Mrs. Robert J. Wing, Mrs. William B. Moore, Mrs. Samuel T. McDowell, Mrs. William B. Travis, Mrs. Thomas H. Monroe Jr., Mrs. Donald C. Wilson, Mrs. Ralph J. Hornaday, Mrs. Max E. Ware, Mrs. Sandra F. Frisbie, Mrs. Daniel M. Carter, Mrs. Robert B. Girl Scouts
COME ALONG WITH US IN DEMOCRATIC PARTNERSHIP
By Mrs. J. F. Frisby, Scoutmaster

The leadership training course given at the Girl Scout house in Columbus on the past four weeks was concluded last Friday evening with an investiture ceremony for the new leaders. Families and friends were invited. Mrs. F. T. Jenkins, Mrs. M. Mastini, Mrs. H. K. Raudstein and Mrs. John Blait received their course certificates. Mrs. F. T. Jenkins was invested as a new leader.

The Girl Scouts of Fort Benning wish to extend "Happy Birthday Greetings" to the Boy Scouts who will be celebrating their organization's birthday this week. We are indebted to the organization for as most people know we came along a little later as a copy from them.

Council members, troop committee members and leaders - don't forget the important State Institute coming this month to Columbus on Jan. 23, 24, 25.

National President, Mrs. C. Vaughn Ferguson will be on hand to greet you and to present a remarkable woman and is a volunteer. She receives no pay for her work in the Girl Scouts. Do come and meet her. There will be something of interest for everyone each day.

This is the only month in girl scouting, and the troops are preparing their programs. Troop No. 8 collected soap wrappers for CARE as their contribution in the international field.

The Brownie troops have just completed making 84 jigsaw puzzles for the pediatric ward at the hospital. Brownies love to do things for people and in their promise which they make often, they say they will help people at all times, especially those at home.

TROOP NO. 6
During January, Troop No. 6 elected new patrol leaders, assistant patrol leaders, secretary and treasurer. We have sewed some buttons, a dress and darned. The different patrols teach songs and games. The Girl Scouts that didn't send Swan soap wrappers for CARE got an address so they could write to some Girl Guide in England. On Jan. 26 we practiced for our investiture ceremony and chose our color guard. Our patrol practiced for our investiture ceremony.

Army Wives See Movies

The recently organized Army Wives club held its monthly social meeting in Service club No. 4 on Friday, with Mrs. James May as hostess.

Three movie shorts were shown the ladies preceding tea. Chaplain C. S. H. Hunter, Jr., presented each lady with a ball point pen.

The tea table was overlaid with an imported lace cloth and centered with an arrangement of spring flowers in an odd-shaped vase. The base of the vase was circled by novel gumdrop and lace paper corsages. Each lady was given a corsage of similar design.

Mrs. Adair Smith and Mrs. Harry Relf were awarded door prizes.

The guest list included Mrs. Richard Collins, Mrs. James May, Mrs. Troy Berrier, Mrs. Harry Relf, Mrs. William Lowe, Mrs. John Wilson, Mrs. David Reed, Mrs. J. D. Walden, Mrs. Oliver Keys, Mrs. William Brown, Mrs. Adair Smith, Mrs. Frank Harden, Mrs. Robert Tweed, Mrs. Alonzo Shearer, Mrs. Mansfield Tolon, Mrs. Charles S. Nichols, Mrs. Lionel C. Kirkland-Hooker Marriage Is Solemnized on Saturday

A beautiful twilight ceremony marked the marriage of Miss Willie Gertrude Kirkland to Lt. Robert W. Hooker of the Sixth Army, at the home of the bride's parents, in the Infantry Center chapel Saturday at 5 o'clock.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Haje read the marriage lines before an altar arrangement of two branched candelabra and floor baskets of white gladioli and yellow pom pom chrysanthemums.

A program of nuptial music was presented by Mrs. Marvin Kelly, organist, and John Miller, organist. Mrs. Kelly's selections included "Night and Day" and "Because." Mrs. Miller's selections were "I Love You Truly" and "Clair de Lune." "Always" was played softly during the ceremony.

The usher - groomsman were Lt. Phillip Kaplan, Lt. William R. Lilliwier and Lt. Clifford G. Miss Jacquanetta Ingram, served as maid of honor. Her gown of glowing green velvet was designed with the off-the-shoulder neckline, fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. She wore a tiara of green velvet and yellow carnations, and carried a bouquet of yellow carnations.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Lt. Robert C. Kingston.

Her wedding gown was fashioned with a lace bodice posed over white satin buttons down the front. The dress was a long, long sleeve that came to points over the hands, and a full skirt that lengthened into a train. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion fell from a tiara of white satin.

Sea-going Doughboy Gets Itchy Feet on Terra Firma

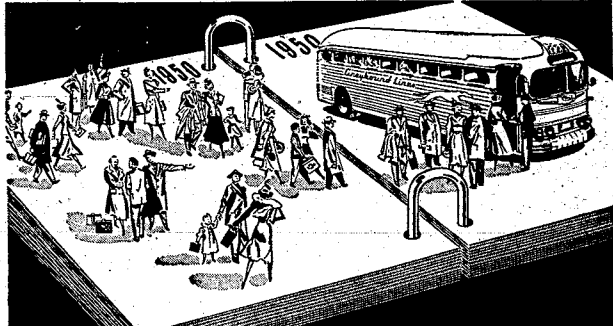

By PAT MURPHY Bayonet Staff Writer It's nothing unusual for an infantryman to walk several hundred miles during his military career, but when he does it at the bottom of the Pacific ocean, that's somewhat of a twist.

Anderson said, and as a result, very few divers ever encountered danger during work. "During the entire time we were working in the Pacific," he said, "not one of the nine men in the diving detachment saw a shark or an octopus, or got themselves entangled in wreckage."

Pistol Tourney Tryouts Slated

Candidates for a four-man pistol tourney and one alternate to compete in the National Mid-Winter Pistol tournament to be held March 14-18, should report to Lt. Col. Perry D. Swindler in Room 249, the Infantry School, or telephone 2871, not later than Thursday, Feb. 16.

The five high shooters selected from the candidates will undergo a two week training period beginning Feb. 27 prior to representing Fort Benning in the tournament.

Candidates must possess a .45 calibre pistol, a .38 calibre revolver and a .22 calibre pistol as all three weapons will be used during training and the matches.

Bowling League In Four-Way Tie

The second half of the Infantry Center bowling league finds four teams tied for first place with ten wins and two losses apiece as of Feb. 3.

Companies A, B and C, Infantry School detachment, and the Student Training regiment are battling it out for the second half title. Company A was the winner of the first half of league play and will play the winner of the current session for the league championship.

V. L. Ashbacher of Company A is still leading both sections of the league with a formidable average of 193.8. Ashbacher is also at the top of the officer's league this season.

Photographic Judging Set

A panel of judges has been set up to evaluate entries in the Fort Benning phase of the army-wide photographic contest, and first, second and third place winners in each of three categories will be decided tomorrow night, 2nd Lt. J. W. Mullaney, post hobby shop supervisor, has announced.

Selected to judge the entries here are William C. Brinson of Brinson studios, Columbus; Capt. William A. Warlick, Infantry Center photographic officer, and Sgt. 1st cl. Lewis F. McFee, managing editor of The Bayonet.

Following the panel's decision, prizes of $10, $7.50 and $5 will be awarded to first, second and third place entries, respectively, in each of the four categories comprising the contest.

Color transparencies also will be judged as a separate category, but no cash prizes will be awarded for top entries.

Failure to place a winning entry in the contest here, Lieutenant Mullaney explained, will not mean that a contestant doesn't stand a chance in higher-level competition.

Based on a post-wide troop strength, one entry for every 200 men station here will be forwarded to third army headquarters, Fort McPherson, Ga., for judging in the contest at that level. Winning entries in each category of the Third Army contest will net their entrants photographic equipment as prizes, and honorable mention certificates will be awarded to each contestant whose photo is selected for the final phase of the contest in Washington.

Lieutenant Mullaney said that present indications are that all entries submitted here will be sent to Third Army headquarters for judging there.

Graduates Are Assigned

A majority of the 161 students who graduated from basic airborne class No. 21 last week have been assigned to the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N.C., officials have reported.

Benning Visited By Foreigners

Three foreign officers stopped off at the Infantry School last week to make a routine inspection of training facilities. The visitors were Lt. Col. Luis A. Calderon, Venezuelan army; Lt. Col. G. E. Carter, British army; and Lt. Col. M. Austin, Australian army.

Colonel Calderon, acting military and air attaché at the Venezuelan embassy in Washington, was the guest of the Infantry School for a two-day tour of airborne training facilities. His primary mission to Fort Benning, Infantry School officials said, was to inspect the progress of 40 Venezuelan army enlisted men now undergoing training at the Airborne department.

Colonel Carter, British liaison officer at the United States Army Chemical Center, Md., made a three-day visit to the Infantry Center to confer with Army Field Forces board No. 3 officers about recent chemical and ordnance developments.

The last member of the visiting trio, Colonel Austin, attached to the Australian military mission in Washington, inspected various Infantry Center training facilities, officials said. Each of the officers departed separately last weekend.

A majority of the 161 students who graduated from basic airborne class No. 21 last week have been assigned to the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N.C., officials have reported.

Service-Unit Tells Personnel Changes
Five inter-unit transfers were announced this week by Col. Maurice L. Miller, commander of the 3440th Area Service Unit Provisional group. Pfc. Roy J. Goben, Pvt. William H. Pollard and Pfc. Milton Broadberry were transferred from the Military Police detachment, Section I, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, to the 33rd Transportation Truck company. Cpl. Bill Wray was transferred from the 52nd Transportation Truck battalion to the 855th Transportation Truck company while Cpl. Herman L. Hodges, also of the 52nd, was transferred to the 33rd Transportation Truck company.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: DO YOU THINK THE USO IS A GOOD THING? DO YOU THINK IT SHOULD BE CONTINUED OR DISCONTINUED AND WHY?

Sgt. William Shores, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I think it should be continued because it is a good place for the young men to go to, and from what I've seen around town they need it. It is a good place for recreation and amusement, and it tells you there a lot of them will stay out of trouble. I have always been in the service, and I think they are a good thing.

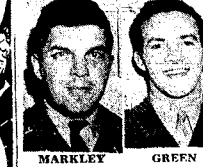

Sgt. E. G. ELKINS, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I think they are a good thing. The USO should be continued because it provides a good place for you, single soldiers, to go, especially those who are so far away from home.

SHORES ELKINS

Sgt. W. R. MARKLEY, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I definitely don't think they should close the USO. It gives the soldier a place to go for amusement and recreation.

Sgt. DILLARD GREEN, 4408th AUIR Base squadron, Lawson Airfield: I think the USO should continue because it provides good wholesome entertainment for all personnel, especially unmarried men. I like the idea of the USO bringing hostesses from town to the dances here at the post because sometimes a fellow doesn't have a date and he won't feel so left out. I think a good way to help things would be to have a good campaign started for the USO.

MARKLEY GREEN

Pvt. Eugene Kelly, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit: I think the USO should remain open. It's a good place to go, especially when you are broke. You can go into town and you don't have to spend any money.

Sgt. EMIL KAESELMAN, Company A, Infantry School detachment: I would like to have an answer to that question because I have never been in a USO SINCE I have been in the service, and all I know about there is what I read in the paper.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Assumes Important Duties With Minimum of Training

Editor's Note: Due to production difficulties in last week's Bayonet, the following Soldier of the Week winner didn't appear. It is herewith published with apologies to the winner and his organization.

With less than one month's experience in his new job of assistant sergeant major of the Student Training regiment, Cpl. Charles E. Bucher, was called upon to assume the responsibilities of sergeant major.

A three-year veteran of army service, Corporal Bucher took the boost to regimental sergeant major after his experienced sergeant major was taken ill in the midst of a busy work week. Quickly grasping the situation and demonstrating the leadership qualities of a noncommissioned officer of higher rank, he was instrumental in maintaining the standards of efficiency necessary, and aggressiveness that is highly creditable to his training.

His unit officers said that he flawlessly conducted the daily routine during the nine-day substitution, and that his accomplishment was astounding considering the length of experience.

Corporal Bucher has been married three years and has three children.

Master Sergeant Retired at Parade

M-Sgt. John H. Apter, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 52nd Transportation Truck battalion retired at retreat ceremonies last week after more than 20 years service.

Sergeant Apter, who was also awarded the Third Army Certificate of Achievement at the Stillwell field ceremony, reviewed a parading troop with Col. Dennis M. Moore, commander of the 15th Infantry regiment.

'Aggressor' Agents Said Observing Norfolk Drills

LITTLE CREEK, Va.—Added realism was injected into the joint military exercise "Portes today when a spokesman for the invasion command revealed that documentary evidence has been obtained that proves an aggressor spy ring is operating in the Norfolk area.

"There is no doubt the aggressor is concentrating his espionage activities in this area and has set up an organization to calculate the strength of our invasion forces and undermine the morale of our personnel," the spokesman said.

"An organization known as the 'Trigon Federation for Constitutional Liberties' has been under our surveillance for some time and we have convincing proof that it is nothing more than a front for large-scale espionage activities," he added.

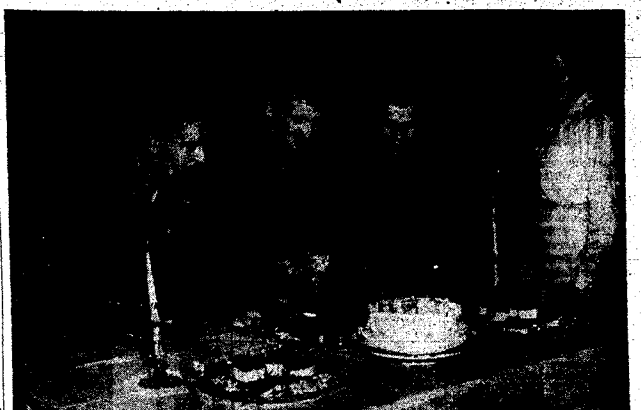

During the past week invasion authorities have had numerous reports from invasion force personnel that they have received letters from the 'Trigon Federation' soliciting their membership. These letters state that the individual has been selected for membership in the exclusive 'Trigon organization because of his excellent military record and purport to offer the candidate many advantages not enjoyed by non-members. Among these are listed broader variations of our constitution.

Invasion headquarters announced that strict security measures have been employed ever since the "outbreak of war" with the aggressor and that counter-espionage measures have been taken to carry out salient operations whose primary mission is to produce unrest and revolution among personnel of the invasion forces.

Information received from a reliable source indicates that the identity of certain party members of the Trigon Federation is known, but their names will not be revealed until invasion intelligence authorities are ready to move in and make their arrests.

Counter-espionage agencies of the invasion command have known for some time that aggressor submarines have been active in an area around United States ports, but they decline to say whether the infiltration of spies has been made by that method or whether the aggressor espionage system has been organized by local collaborators.

Meanwhile, preparations are going ahead for the invasion of the aggressor's bastion on the coast of Vietques. More than 14,000 army troops are undergoing training in the Norfolk-Camp Picheon-Va. area for participation in the airborne amphibious assault on Vietques which will climax the first of a series of time military exercises in this area.

Guardsmen Here For TIS Course

Six enlisted men of the Michigan national guard arrived at Lawson airforce base by C-47 transport Wednesday afternoon, and will be enrolled in the infantry noncommissioned officers weapons course, scheduled to start at the Infantry School on March 1.

Until the start of the course, which is a consolidation of the former light and heavy weapons instruction for noncommissioned officers, the national guardsmen will receive applicatory training here.

The contingent of guard students includes M-Sgt. Charles M. Johnson, Sgt. Ronald S. McCall and Sgt. Wayne B. Collins of the 126th Infantry regiment; Sgt. Robert E. Eriksen and Sgt. Gregory D. Sines of the 428th Infantry regiment, and Cpl. Jackie E. Harvey of the 125th Infantry regiment.

Officers accompanying the enlisted group were Col. Claude L. Barkley, Col. Howard E. Derby, Lt. Col. Walter E. Nicol and Capt. Glenn M. Ryerson.

Career Promotions Okayed For Top-Grade Infantrymen

Promotion scores for the infantry career field examinations recently held have been forwarded to major commands, facilitating promotion of approximately 308 soldiers to top three-grade noncommissioned officers, 1,382 army recently announced. These are the first promotion scores to be announced for the combat career fields.

Upon receipt of the published scores, major commanders will be authorized to promote those competitors in the uniform army-wide infantry examinations who made individual scores equal to or higher than the announced scores, provided the individuals are still members of the army in good standing.

The promotion scores are being published for all MOS's of the infantry career field in the following table:

Polio Victims Pay Tribute To Roosevelt

Despite a light shower of rain a small group of patients, visitors and officials of the Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis gathered at the Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga., last week to observe the 87th birthday of the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt.

During the ceremony, which was originally scheduled to be held on the grounds of the Little White House but was moved to the shelter of the greenhouse because of rain, the 35 persons attending heard short addresses by officials of the state museum.

Dr. George H. Huntington and Fred Botts, registrar of the Warm Springs Foundation, told the group of incidents between them and the late president.

LONG-AWAITED ROCKERS ISSUED TO CAREER SERGEANTS Sgt. 1st Cl. John F. LaVole, and L. J. Hofstetter, center, receive new stripes from Cpl. John J. Feros, supply clerk of Company H, Airborne battalion.

85 Career Boosts Awarded Post EM

Eighty-five Fort Benning enlisted men last Friday added rockers to their chevrons as a result of attaining proficiencies in Infantry career field military occupational specialty examinations taken late last year.

The Benning men were among 1,303 authorized for advances of one grade after a cutoff score was established on the tests by the Department of the Army. The Infantry MOS promotions were the first made in a combat career field since the inception of fields for the Infantry, artillery, and armored cavalry last year. Fort Benning's promotions included 14 sergeants first class to sergeant, 32 sergeants to sergeant first class and 33 corporals to sergeant.

Only four MOSs were reported in the group advanced here. Specialties included were light weapons infantry leader, heavy weapons infantry leader, intelligence and reconnaissance chief and infantry operations chief.

Light infantry weapons leaders promoted from sergeant first class to master sergeant were James H. Adkins, Max R. Grigg, Joseph D. McComb, Robert H. Peavy and William M. Tillman, all of Company C, Infantry School detachment; Woodrow W. Haines and James C. Marbury of Company B, 15th Infantry; Charles M. Rawlins of Company B, Walker B. Herrin of Army Field Forces board No. 3; Charlie M. Emmett C. Mosley, 2nd Infantry Regiment, and Morrill A. Barron of Company I, 39th Infantry Regiment, attached service with the Student Training Regiment.

Promoted to master sergeants as heavy weapons infantry leaders were Sgt. 1st Cl. Charles O. Cook of Army Field Forces board No. 5; Sgt. 1st Cl. Arthur E. Lardon of Company C, 15th Infantry. Sergeants advanced to sergeant first class as light weapons infantry leaders were Bate H. Greene, Carl W. Howard, Fred E. Kelly, Emmett C. Mosley, Julius L. Richburg, Bernal Sharp and Jesse L. Vaughn, all of the 30th Infantry Regiment, and Raymond M. Coleman, Tyler L. Collins, Ellis J. Conyer, Lloyd R. Daniel, Calvin C. Housh, Clarence M. Mock, Ollis Pettigrew, Louis Paris, Walter Scott and Richard Zane, all of the 15th Infantry Regiment. The new group of 85 career promotions was announced in a recent closure notice.

Have A Pet Food Peeve? Just Say So

Here's your chance, fellows—the army wants to know what you like in the way of "chow." A representative of the Camp Lee (Va.) Quartermaster board, Maj. R. L. Prah, arrived at the Infantry Center this week to find out what soldiers like and dislike most as far as food is concerned. He will question a representative group of troops, selected from each Fort Benning unit, to determine the acceptability of foods now on the master menu.

Major Prah, who is one of four officers making a 21-post tour conducting the tests, has visited Fort Bragg, N. C., Camp Gordon, Ga., Fort Benning, Fort McPherson, Ga., and the Atlanta General depot.

Coins Measure Out Unit's Title

Original to say the least, was M-Sgt Albert H. Jackson's idea of 999 inches of dimes for contribution to the "March of Dimes."

Jackson, sergeant major of the 39th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, figured that by placing the dime length-wise it would take approximately 1,133 to equal 999 inches.

When his idea was brought to the attention of the officers and men of his battalion, dimes really started rolling in. Everybody chimed in to obtain the $120 needed for 999 inches of dimes. Sergeant Jackson and M-Sgt J. D. Walden collected the dimes and turned them over to Dr. T. H. Brewer, chairman of the Segments Division, March of Dimes, in Columbus.

Policy Awaited On Assignment

Civilians Set Drive Quota

An 18-month-old dream of Fort Benning noncommissioned officers will become a reality about March 15 when the first of 80 new main post apartments for NCOs become available for occupancy. Assurance that approximately half of the units will be ready by the middle of March was given by Col. Marcus B. Bell, Infantry Center G-4, this week by Edwin C. Gates of the Williams Construction Company of Columbus, builder of the project.

Mr. Gates said that he expects the remainder of the structures to be ready to receive tenants by the end of next month. Meanwhile, an announcement by the Infantry Center G-1 office as to the policy to govern assignment of the quarters was being awaited by the Billing section.

Inasmuch as the buildings were constructed with funds earmarked for the assigned officer housing, however, the units will not be assigned to personnel other than NCOs, it was pointed out.

The new housing is located in 10 structures in the former cantonment area between Ingersoll and Edwards avenues west of the golf driving range. Approximate cost of the project is $900,000, which includes the construction of both the buildings and the installation of utilities.

Family units in the project will be two stories high with each apartment having both upstairs and downstairs rooms. The upstairs portion of each unit have three bedrooms and bath, while the downstairs will include a living room, a dining room and kitchen.

Other salient features of the buildings are oak floors, central steam heating and plaster walls. The housing department entered the blueprint stage in August, 1948, after the 80th congress voted a huge building appropriation for the construction of living quarters at Fort Benning. For a long time the construction of the buildings got under way last June, but suffered several setbacks because of unfavorable weather.

Clubs Clarify Position

Clubs Clarify Position

Two Columbus servicemen's clubs clarified their position this week on the recent order that shut down all clubs maintained by the 10-year-old national recreation organization, USO.

Officials of the 11th Street Armed Forces YMCA, after meeting to discuss rumors about the club's closing, explained that collapse of USO does not affect the continued existence of the Armed Forces Y.

"The Armed Services YMCA has never been a USO club as such. It has simply benefited from USO during and since the war," a spokesman said.

His statement further said that the management has never doubted the continuance of operations of the club, considering that Fort Benning officials and local business groups helped start the operation in 1939.

"The only matter for consideration at this time is that we are locally using USO funds and will have to raise money locally to subsidize the budget for the balance of the year," he added.

The other club to make known its plans for future operations was the USO-NCCS, one of the several clubs in Columbus thought to have been affected by the recent closure notice.

Post GI's Switching Garb In 2-Month Comfort Test

Some 450 Infantry Center personnel at Fort Benning will begin switching uniforms this week to participate in a two- and one-half-month test of newly-designed coats, jackets and trousers.

The housing department entered the blueprint stage in August, 1948, after the 80th congress voted a huge building appropriation for the construction of living quarters at Fort Benning. For a long time the construction of the buildings got under way last June, but suffered several setbacks because of unfavorable weather.

Original to say the least, was M-Sgt Albert H. Jackson's idea of 999 inches of dimes for contribution to the "March of Dimes."

Jackson, sergeant major of the 39th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, figured that by placing the dime length-wise it would take approximately 1,133 to equal 999 inches.

PVT. CHARLES R. BURMAN Named Outstanding Student

Instructors Cite Private Burman

Pvt. Charles R. Burman, son of Maj. and Mrs. John H. Burman, 108 Austin loop, was selected Student of the Week of the leaders, course at Fort Jackson, S. C., for the week ending Feb. 4. It was learned here this week that Private Burman competes with several students from his and other classes for the honor.

Burman entered service in September, 1949, and completed basic training with Company G, 11th Infantry Regiment, at Fort Jackson. He is in the fourth week of an eight-week course that has as its objective training leaders for the future. Burman said that he will make the army his career.

WAC Participates In Menu Discussion

Fort Benning's menu board, conducted by food service officials to determine menus for three months in advance, met Feb. 14 with its first woman guest participating.

Pfc. Hazel E. Ewing, Company A, Infantry School detachment, was on the board when the menu for May was discussed. Private Ewing, as other members of the board, determined preparation methods and evaluate complaints received from men of various units.

Washington Day Agenda Includes Parade, Holiday

Fort Benning participants in activities on Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, will include a parade and a holiday. The parade will be held at 10 a. m. and will feature military and civilian personnel. It has been announced by Infantry Center officials.

Seven EM Report For Duty With Unit

Seven new enlisted men reported for duty with the Infantry School detachment last week. The men and their duties are: Pfc. Robert Schawke, receptionist; Pfc. George R. Strawn, mail and distribution; Pfc. Robert K. Arter, mail and distribution; Pfc. Robert E. Smead, range detachment; and Roger J. McCormack and Rene G. Vaudry, detachment messengers.

A spokesman for the board declared that the new designs in uniform, present uniforms, he said, were designed primarily for field wear where warmth and durability were the first consideration.

Officers Selected For Test

Officers selected for the test will be authorized to wear insignia for 48 hours during duty hours or any other period that specifies olive drab, shade 33. Enlisted men are authorized to wear their test uniforms during both duty and off-duty hours.

Units in which personnel have been slated to test the new uniforms are the Army Field Forces band No. 3, Military Police detachments I and II, Provisional group, 72nd Army band, Provisional group headquarters, and Company A, Infantry School detachment.

Fort Monroe, Va., headquarters for Army Field Forces, is the only other army post conducting the wear-and-see-how-you-like test. The present test is a projected plan and the results will not be known for some time.

Men testing the uniforms will have an opportunity to establish their preference for the various uniform types by answering questions after the test. Board officials say this will aid in solving some of the mystery surrounding the comfort of soldiers.

PHILATELY ON THE SIDE — Cpl. Tony Nardo, mail clerk for Company A, Infantry School detachment, has the jump on other philately stamp collectors—in his organization. Whenever a letter comes in posted with a rare vintage stamp, Tony makes a notation to whom it's addressed and then puts the stamp on the desk a few days later. Spread before him are some 2,500 stamps collected during the past few months.

TB Unit Available To Post Residents

Although Fort Benning will be excluded from the itinerary of the mobile TB-examining units now in the area, a spokesman for the traveling survey urged all Infantry Center residents to take "full advantage" of examination units in downtown Columbus.

Craft Entry Dates Named

Three days have been designated for receiving entries in the first of a series of monthly crafts and photographic contests to be sponsored by the Infantry Center hobby shop, 2nd Lt. J. W. Mullaney, supervisor, announced this week.

Contestants may submit their entries between 10 a. m. and 6 p. m. on Saturday and Sunday, March 4-5, and from 1-10 p. m. on Wednesday, March 8. Objects and photographs turned in on those days, Lieutenant Mullaney said, will be judged about March 10.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK Sergeant Repairs Crippled Printing Plant Mechanism

Sgt. 1st cl. George W. Hill's ingenuity and enterprise in repairing a crippled lithographic press at Fort Benning's printing plant was the basis for his selection as this week's Soldier of the Week.

Sergeant Hill, Company C, Infantry School detachment, who is largely responsible for the quality and speed with which printing at the plant is accomplished, repaired and put back into operation a press that had caused professional mechanics to admit defeat.

For three weeks, the large two color printing press had been at a standstill as a result of an undetermined mechanical failure. The professional mechanics from press manufacturers had failed to put the large press back into operation, and with permission of printing plant officials, Sergeant Hill set about the task of repairing it.

Within eight hours, Sergeant Hill had discovered a faulty mechanical operation. Working as rapidly as possible, and with methods of his own, he had the press back into operation within a day.

The inoperative press had caused the government considerable expense in having a specialist to the post to make repairs, which were never made. During its shutdown, the printing plant had lost jobs estimated at $400,000 page impressions.

Sergeant Hill's hasty and complete repair of the press averted a potential loss of training time. The press is now in production time is devoted to printing training manuals for the Infantry School.

Soldier Of The Week Costs With Ingenious Repair functioning parts. After completely reassembling the press, Sergeant Hill gave it a crucial test-run to examine the fruits of his hard and untiring repair process. The trial-run resulted in perfect operation of the press, and since then hundreds of thousands of page impressions have been made successfully without any sign of malfunctioning.

Officials of the plant said Sergeant Hill is exceptionally talented as a printing expert, despite the unorthodox education he received in printing. In 1937, three years after he had entered the army, Hill was assigned to the printing plant as an engraver's assistant.

It's A Civilian Responsibility

It is gratifying to learn that the three armed forces service clubs in Columbus will remain open, temporarily at least. In the meantime, city officials are to be commended for going ahead with plans to insure that all three will continue to operate. We sincerely hope that their efforts will be successful.

From past experience with citizens' groups such as those now working toward a solution for maintenance of the clubs, we are convinced that some suitable plan will be forthcoming soon. A few years ago, when the USO's national headquarters cut out the clubs' operating funds for the first time, Columbus and Fort Benning got together over the conference table and came up with an answer acceptable to all concerned. The result was that the National Catholic Community Service took over complete operation of the activities formerly supported by USO funds, while the two armed forces YMCA's continued to be supported in part by the national YMCA organization and in part by local and Community Chest funds. Both remained under YMCA jurisdiction.

Despite the recent closing order by the USO, however, the three clubs' executive directors have assured Fort Benning that they will remain open for a while at least. Mr. Floyd Francis, who was the first to announce his determination to keep his club, the Eleventh Street YMCA, in operation. He said he was sure, and his sentiments were echoed by Columbusites, that with the help of the local citizenry some way would be found to finance the YMCA's program of entertainment for Fort Benning troops.

Mr. Gordon Kitchens, executive director of the Fifth Avenue YMCA, has also expressed the hope that his club will be able to operate in the future. Some funds, he says, will be made available from the national YMCA, but that amount will have to be supplemented by additional funds from local sources. It is mandatory, we believe, that the Fifth Avenue Y remain open. It serves the 3,000 Negro troops stationed at Fort Benning far better than any other off-post organization, and has been a tremendous morale builder.

The last club to announce its plans to remain in operation was the Ninth Street NCCS-USO, which henceforth will be known as the NCCS club. Mr. Julius Markert, executive director, reported last week that donations of materials and funds from "various sources" will make possible its continued operation. Several revenue-producing programs are also on the club's entertainment schedule, and these are expected to supplement the money now on hand.

Should these three clubs have been forced to close their doors to servicemen, a low blow would have been dealt Fort Benning. We believe the low delinquency rate here can be directly attributed to the fact that Benningites have these three clubs to visit when in Columbus. Their character-building programs and their clean, wholesome entertainment schedules keep the youthful soldier off the streets and out of the beer "joints." It's not hard to picture the results should be the Fort Benning soldier suddenly discover locks on the clubs' doors. Moreover, the work of the Army's Character Guidance Councils would be far sought without the cooperation of adjacent civilian communities.

It is well to remember that when a soldier is on a military reservation, his entertainment and recreation program is solely the responsibility of the Army. However, by the same token, when that soldier is a guest in a civilian community, his entertainment and recreation program is the responsibility of the civilian community he is visiting. The Fort Benning soldier, representing a cross-section of the United States, is, after all, only a civilian in uniform, and like any visitor should be made to feel welcome.

Without Columbus' three servicemen's clubs, the Fort Benning soldier would have no place to congregate. He would be left alone to find his own entertainment. What, then, would he do, and where, then, would he go? Frankly, we have no idea. But one thing is almost certain: his morale would dip lower and lower. And it must be borne in mind that men with low morale are not good citizens.

The Bayonet firmly believes that Columbus has a grave responsibility to these citizen-soldiers. They are representative of some Columbus families' own sons who may be in uniform in some other part of the country and who, too, will suffer, now that USO has cut out operating funds, unless the civilian community makes up for the loss. Further, Columbus has a grave responsibility to Fort Benning soldier because he is a symbol of this nation's bulwark of defense against aggression and tyranny.

Columbus can not afford to fail them. We congratulate the clubs, their committees and interested civic groups for the work they are doing to insure that Columbus will not fail and that the doors of all three clubs will remain open.

U.S. Asks Russia to Propose A Control Plan

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—The United States made a virtual invitation to Russia this week to propose some new plan for control of atomic energy. It would replace the measures under discussion last month in the United Nations when the Russians staged a walkout, blaming western powers for their action. Assistant Secretary of State John B. Hickerson made clear that the U. S. would be sympathetic toward any atomic proposal offered by Moscow to the U. N. Striking soft coal miners have refused to comply with the back orders to work orders of either the government or Union Boss John L. Lewis. Government authorities held off court orders to force the miners back to work under the Taft-Hartley Law until they saw the outcome of contract negotiations that are continuing between Lewis and mine operators. Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the senate finance committee, has called for a $6 billion cut in President Truman's budget. The savings was to be in foreign aid with emphasis on a sound economy for the U. S. as the best safeguard to world economy. The first of 120,000 former prisoners of war received his check this week under the War Claims Act that pays $1 for each prison camp day to survivors. Chairman of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee Brian McMahon said this week that the cost of hydrogen bomb development would not upset President Truman's budget plan. Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Secretary of Navy, said this week while with the joint chiefs in the Far East that the Navy is prepared to cope with any possible Russian submarine attack in the Pacific. Agriculture Secretary Charles F. Brannan has estimated the cost of the present U. S. potato surplus at $35 million. The senate has approved a constitutional amendment to revamp the electoral college method of electing the president of the U. S. Now the House of Representatives and 36 state legislatures must approve the measure within seven years for it to become law.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—Great Britain has begun a searching loyalty check of everyone connected with the atomic program of that country as a result of the startling confession of espionage by Britain's third ranking atomic scientist, Dr. Klaus Fuchs. In their campaign to win the Feb. 25 election from the Laborites, Britain's Conservative party has advanced Party Leader Winston Churchill as the man who might be able to stop the cold war between Russia and the western world. An explosion damaged the Finnish parliament building this week on the day before a scheduled meet of Finland's electoral college to name a new president. Juho Paasikivi, anticommunist winner of the general election, is virtually certain to be selected. U. S. High Commissioner of Germany John J. McCloy said this week that this country is ready to take action that may be necessary against the present threat of a Russian blockade in Berlin. McCloy also squelched any Russian hope of taking the western sector of the city by storm as part of a "World Youth Conference" on May 28. The Hungarian ministry of justice has announced American business men Robert A. Vogeler will go on trial Feb. 17 charged with spying and sabotage. After being held 13 weeks incommunicado, Vogeler will be tried in Budapest with a British subject and five Hungarian nationals, alleged as accomplices. To hamper the development of military development in France, Communists have prepared a wave of waterfront strikes to stop the delivery of shiploads of U. S. military aid coming to France under the Atlantic Alliance.

Gray to Become University Prexy By Sept. 1

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE

Army Secretary Gordon Gray, recently elected president of the University of North Carolina, has informed the school trustees that he will be available for the office "not later than September 1, and as soon before that date as the requirements of the Department of Defense will permit." Mr. Gray, a native of the Tarheel State, was graduated in 1930 with high honors from the university he will head.

The Defense Department has initiated a study toward development of uniform medal awards regulations for all the armed services.

Attendance at 151 Army and 128 Air Force post theaters in the U. S. during 1949 was approximately 31 million. A total of 11,346,040 was provided for special service activities. Construction was started on 17 new theaters; air conditioning was installed in 74; 82 were refurbished; 37,314 theater chairs were purchased and film worth over $2.12 million was procured for overseas shipment.

The 19th annual National Model Airplane Meet will be held at the Dallas, Tex., Naval Air Station from July 25 to 30 this year. As

Don't Play at Religion, Give Your Best to God

BY CHAPLAIN RUSSELL KIRSON

In an age that had grown lax and where consciences had become easy, the Prophet Malachi rapped out a warning not untouched by acid sarcasm. The people of his time were not irreligious. They would have been surprised had they been told they were. But their plight was far worse. They were playing at religion. They had begun to think anything would do for God, so long as they kept up some kind of religious form.

They were spending great sums upon their own selfish pleasures and offering the fag end of their time and means to the worship and service of God. They did not recognize the shabbiness of their conduct, nor have the grace to blush at it. "Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? Offer it now unto thy governor will be pleased with thee, or accept thy person, saith the Lord of hosts."

You detect the prophet's delicate sarcasm. His hearers were living under an earthly governor to whom they had to make offerings from time to time as evidence of their vassalage. And, of course, these offerings were of the best. But, says the prophet, you try to palm off on God the mere leavings. Try this on your host to the meet, the Navy will provide quarters and meals for the contestants at cost, and will sponsor two of the scheduled events. In one, model planes will be catapulted and landed aboard a simulated carrier deck. In the other, radio-controlled models will drop bombs on tiny targets.

A limited number of qualified officers of the National Guard and Organized Reserve Corps will be selected to attend the 10-month course of the Army War college and the Command and General Staff college next fall.

The Army plans to establish a new Airborne Center at Fort Bragg, N. C., with operations scheduled to begin within the next two to three months.

The Army has authorized two new parachutist badges, one for master parachutist and the other for senior parachutist. The senior parachutist badge is the same as that now authorized for parachutist, except that it has a star above the parachute. The badge for master parachutist is the same as that authorized for senior parachutist except that the star is enclosed by a wreath.

governor and see how far you get. He will not be pleased, nor will he look favorably on you. It is with irony such as this that the prophet tries to bring home to the religious triflers of his day something of the enormity of their dallying with the great things of life, worship or service to God.

Even today, men often act toward God as they wouldn't act toward men. Men generally show respect for human authority. If gifts are presented they are the best. They yumble themselves before human majesty. But how differently they act toward God. They stand in His presence and profane His Name. Men treat lightly God's authority and disregard His commandments. God has a right to all we possess or the best we have. To try to trick Him by offering only what is useless to us is to act deceitfully, and is foolish, ungrateful and ruinous.

Our conduct toward God may be tested by the way in which it would be received by an earthly ruler. That is a test easily applied. It is such that anyone can understand. It is a test that may prove most revealing. It is one we would do well to apply to ourselves and do it honestly, with no thought of excusing ourselves. Let us test ourselves.

To Amuse You Today On The Bookshelf

The Old Hukum Bucket by Ernest Rogers
Albert Love Enterprises, Publisher
BY ALLEN L. MULLIKIN

It has been said that the great ambition of newspaper columnists is to get the results of their labors between hard covers. Whether Ernest Rogers of the Atlanta Journal considers the Old Hukum Bucket the acme of his career cannot be ascertained here, but it must be reckoned as a bright red figure in the assets column of his personal accounts book.

For his debut in the bound volume market, Mr. Rogers has distilled some 1,800 columns produced through the past six years. He has sinned down that vast wordage to appropriate book size, about two hours' reading time. More important, however, is the percentage of the stuff—the pleasure per page is high.

This collection that represents Mr. Rogers' efforts on his better days might be called the meditations of a congenial man. With a gentle brand of humor the author discusses the problems that crop up in the life of Ernest Rogers and some other people. Although he sets aside one particular section of the collection for devotion to the "Perpendicular pronoun," the author is never conspicuous by his absence from personal references. Mr. Rogers never hesitates to give his readers the benefit of his considerable experience, but the true humor comes out when he inevitably finds all the foibles of his fellow men lurking about in his own personality.

There is a variety of hokum in Mr. Rogers' bucket. Like most daily columnists the author has, at one time or another, aired his views on many subjects. In this volume he concerns himself mostly with the ordinary problems that beset the common man in his pursuit of the good life. These problems range from how to get up in the morning with a reasonable amount of decorum to how to get rid of chiggers without slashing yourself with razor blades. Mr. Rogers' solution to most of life's little annoyances is passive resistance that consists of avoiding contact with the things one dislikes. At times he resorts for subject matter to what he calls the essentials of a successful columnist, i.e. the wife, the child and the dog. Regardless of his subject matter, the author may be relied to find in it the expected amount of good clean fun.

As a man who prefers the nudge of suggestion to the needle of satire, Mr. Rogers seldom gets his dander up. His usual procedure is to poke good-humored fun at things that disturb the calm of his existence. The only thing that raises a howl from the gentle man is interference in the personal liberties of Ernest Rogers and persons whom he takes under his protective wing. At one time he calls to all sensible people to rescue the mother-in-law from the butt of jokes. Again he is advocating the execution of public speakers who tell dirty stories to spice otherwise dull orations. Always one to believe in live direct the activities of their esteemed author. He considers it his personal prerogative to cultivate a middle-age spread without untoward comment, and will abide no attempts to change him from a comfortable indoor man to one who either eats ants in sandwiches or bathes in a public bathtub.

Considering the wide-spread enjoyment of comic strips and magazine cartoons, there is a small volume in the Fort Benning library that this reviewer would like to call to your attention. The English Comic Album presents an interesting and entertaining view of pictorial humor from its early beginning in England to the present day.

Mac: "Oh, don't worry. I never touch anything stronger than beer."

Service Club Holds Dance

Service club No. 4 entertained with a gala formal Valentine dance last Friday night. The club was festively decorated with hearts of varied sizes placed on the walls, curtains and posters. Highlight of the evening was the voting and selection of the Queen O' Valentine. Miss Margaret Campbell was chosen queen and Misses Paul Poliak and Rubye Adams were chosen her attendants. The queen's court was composed of Misses Jetsy Thomas, Bernice Stewart, Christine Stewart and Hattie Adams. The queen was presented with an old-fashioned nosegay of flowers and a box of candy. Similar boxes of candy were presented the queen's attendants.

Dancing was enjoyed to the music of Cpl. Lindbergh Wilson's orchestra, and fruit punch and cookies were served.

Young ladies attending were from the Booker T. Washington Center and Armed Services YMCA in Columbus. Chaperones were Mesdames E. C. James and Stewart Adams.

Approximately 500 guests attended the dance.

It's the other fellow's Telephone...

that makes yours so Valuable!

If your telephone were the only one in town, it wouldn't be worth very much to you. It's the people you can call and the people who can call you that makes telephone service mean so much.

The value of your telephone increases as more new telephones are installed. Today there are more than twice as many telephones in service as there were before the war and new ones continue to go in at a record rate. Probably some of your friends or relatives are among these thousands upon thousands of new subscribers. Yes, it's the other fellow's telephone that helps to make yours so valuable.

When you consider how much it does for you at the price you pay, telephone service stands out as one of today's real bargains.

Fowler-Singleton Rites Announced

The marriage of Mrs. Alice Fowler and Capt. Jack R. Singleton of Houston, Tex., and Fort Benning was solemnized at an impressive ceremony at the Infantry Center chapel recently. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale officiated. The altar was banked with early spring flowers. A program of nuptial music was presented by John Miller, organist and Mrs. Garnett Shackelford, Jr., soloist. Mrs. Shackelford's selections included "I'm a Soldier" and "Because of the Stars." The ceremony was directed by Mrs. Joseph L. Echols, Mrs. Joe S. Dearmond, Mrs. Alexander K. Powers, Mrs. Guy W. Catherman, Jr., Mrs. Robert W. Selton, Mrs. Michael C. Chester, Mrs. Thomas D. Foliard, Mrs. James A. Herbert, Mrs. Hilman C. Dress, Mrs. Wilburn E. Grant, Mrs. Allan Cory, Mrs. St. Clair, Mrs. Suther and Mrs. Persing.

The bride was gowned in a lovely dress of blue velvet with navy accessories, an ice blue satin blouse, an ice blue flower hat and white prayer bloomers and she wore as her only ornament a single strand of pearls. She carried a white prayer book centered with a white orchid and showered with staphanotis.

Immediately following the ceremony, the couple left for a short wedding trip to be planned enroute.

Young Michael Smith Christened In Chapel

The Infantry Center chapel was the scene of a simple ceremony Sunday afternoon when Michael John Smith, young son of Capt. and Mrs. Jack L. Pea Loses Popularity Gls Snub 'Hopping John' Dish

The Jowly black-eyed pea lost its popularity last weekend after they were served to Infantry Center personnel in the Hopping John recipe. Maj. John A. Rilovich, Infantry Center food service supervisor, reported today that the traditionally-southern pod-born dish lost its popularity. The Feb. 11 survey—a serving that combined rice with peas—showed that less than 50 percent of the Fort Benning personnel ate their portion—and even fewer accepted them with a smack of the lips.

Major Mayberry Given New Duties

Maj. Henry E. Mayberry has been appointed executive officer of the 89th Armored Field Artillery battalion, it was announced this week by Lt. Col. Harold W. Browning, commander. Capt. Richard H. Hogue has been named to fill the battalion S-3 spot formerly held by Major Mayberry.

New Paratrooper Wings Authorized

Paratroopers will receive new type wings according to their experience and qualifications, an army order from Washington said this week. The new wings, which will retain the same basic design and size of the one now in use, will be affixed with either of two new designs. They are 1) a star enclosed in a wreath above the parachute, or 2) a star above the parachute. Lt. George A. Daoust, administrative officer for the Airborne department, said this week that the new wings will resemble those worn by qualified pilots of the airforce, such as command pilot, senior pilot and pilot. He added that the new move is to keep in step with other badges and awards made by the army according to qualification; expert combat infantryman badge, combat infantryman badge and infantryman badge; master diver, first-class diver and second-class diver. Lieutenant Daoust further said that the new badges will be awarded only after a special board has reviewed qualifications. After a thorough review of each case, he said, the wings will be awarded by regimental commanders, officers from the Infantry School or the commanding general of any airborne division.

Criteria is Set For Academy Enlisted Duty

A selection criteria for the appointment of enlisted instructors to the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y., was announced last week in a special regulation from Washington. The directive states that the following are mandatory prerequisites for noncommissioned officers desiring assignment to the academy as enlisted instructors:

1. Standard score of 180 or higher on aptitude area I.
2. Minimum physical profile of 22221 or higher.
3. Superior soldierly bearing and neatness.
4. Minimum of five years' service.
5. Twelve months' service remaining from the date of reporting for duty at the academy.

6. Must be judged to have ability and personality for duty as an instructor.
7. Must volunteer for duty at the academy.

The following desirable, although not mandatory, qualifications were also listed in the directive:

1. Combat experience.
2. Experience as an instructor.
3. High school graduate.
4. In exceptional cases, according to regulations, waivers of any of these qualifications, except for length of service remaining, may be granted. Such requests must be submitted to the army's adjutant general, marked for the attention of AGPA-UP.

STR Enlisted Men Advanced in Grade

Two members of the Student Training regiment were promoted last week, it was announced by Col. Sevier R. Tupper, commander.

They were Pvt. Nathaniel E. Lineberger, Service company, who was promoted to private, and Pfc. Paul S. Davis, Service company, who was promoted to corporal.

Visits to Historical Areas Are Offered Portrex GIs

LITTLE CREEK, Va. — Members of the third increment of the Third Infantry division taking amphibious training here are in the middle of one of the richest spots in historical tradition in the United States.

Nearby are Williamsburg, Jamestown, Portsmouth, Yorktown and many other places whose names are as familiar to the average American as his own home.

Williamsburg has been almost completely restored to its colonial setting through the efforts of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., at the cost of several million dollars.

Settled as middle plantation in 1653, it served as an outpost against Indian invaders. In 1699, it became the capitol of Virginia, receiving its present name in honor of King William III of England. During the following 80 years, it was the political, religious and economic center of what was then the most populous of the English-American colonies.

The tour arranged for Third Infantry troops will enable them to visit, among other places, the capitol building, the governor's Raleigh Tavern, the governor's palace and gardens and the powder magazine. The capitol building was erected in 1701, and was the meeting place of Virginia's General Assembly and General court. It was the scene of Patrick Henry's oration against the Stamp Act, and the center of much of the call for the Declaration of Independence, and the framing of the Virginia Declaration of Rights.

The public gaol, erected about the same time as the capitol, was the General court prison of the Virginia colony. Blackbeard's pirates were confined there, as was General Henry Hamilton, "the hair buyer".

Built in 1742, the Raleigh Tavern was the center of much of Virginia's social, commercial and political activity. It is an item of popular belief that Phi Beta Kappa was founded in the tavern.

The governor's palace was ordered to be built in 1705, and, when completed, was considered by many the handsomest estate in colonial Virginia. Seven royal governors and the first two governors of the commonwealth lived there.

The old powder magazine in the center of the town was an important part in the revolution of the colonies against England. The confiscation of their powder stored there so outraged the Virginians' idea of personal rights that they rose in 1774, and against the English.

Virginia Camp 'Invaded' By 3rd Division Troops

CAMP PENDLETON, Va. — The battered beaches of Camp Pendleton, Va., were the target for another "invasion" last week, when some 5,000 Army troops of the Third Infantry division executed an amphibious assault landing.

The landing was designed to demonstrate the tactics and techniques learned the past few weeks while the division was undergoing training for the full-scale attack to be launched against the Caribbean island of Vieques next month during Operation Portrex, largest joint, peacetime, land-sea-air exercise in U. S. military history.

Typical assault landing weather of overcast skies and drizzling rains prevailed as the troops embarked in six waves of more than 80. Landing craft hit the beaches and poured inland to simulate attacks on enemy positions. Missing in last week's practice landing was the usual thunder of beach demolitions, and all naval gunfire and air support were simulated.

All the realism of an assault landing is being saved until later this month when the entire force of some 14,000 troops, who will have undergone amphibious training, join in a final pre-Portrex full-scale rehearsal landing on these same beaches.

Although today's landing lacked the usual fury of a full-scale amphibious assault, there was nothing simulated about the expanse of icy, pounding surf. The troops struggled through to reach the beach. For the purpose of the landing, that of acquainting the troops with the techniques of hitting a beach, conditions were ideal, according to authorities in charge of the training.

Last week's "graduates" comprised the second group of the 14,000 troops who will complete the two-week basic course in the fundamentals of amphibious warfare at the Naval Amphibious base, Little Creek, Va., and on board vessels of the Amphibious Force, Atlantic fleet.

Witnessing last week's landing exercise were Gen. Mark Clark, commanding general of Army Field Forces; Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, who will be deputy commander of the assault troops for Portrex; Rear Adm. Stuart S. Murray, commander of Amphibious Training command, Atlantic fleet; Brig. Gen. Robert H. Pepper, commanding general of the Troop Training unit, Atlantic fleet, and other ranking naval and military officers who will participate in Operation Portrex.

Commenting on the demonstration of the landing from the water's edge, expressed his satisfaction over the progress made by the trainees.

"I am generally pleased with the training given the troops by the Navy and Marine corps. It is a good team and the cooperation shown by all concerned speaks well for our future."

General Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division, stated that he also was very well satisfied with the results obtained from the training.

"These young men are doing very well," he said. "Over half of them are only recruits, but they are taking to the water like ducks. Their spirits are high and everything is going along fine."

Following the landing, the troops, who make up the Seventh Infantry regiment of the Third division, commanded by Col. John Guthrie, returned to Little Creek, where they left Norfolk area by convoy for Camp Pickett, Va. There they will join the troops of the first group of some 5,000 trainees who completed the basic amphibious training last month.

TWO LATE... The cords swished to the tune of two points for Oliver General hospital a split second after Richard Belk (No. 8) of Camp Gordon, Ga., made this futile attempt to block the accurate shot of Robert Baenke (No. 7). The action shown here took place in the opening game of the Third Army cage tournament at Fort Benning this week. Oliver General hospital won the contest by a 50-43 score.

A LONG STRETCH... In one of the exciting moments during a Third Army tournament game between the Atlanta General depot and Fort McPherson, Ga., Forward Darrell Kiefer (No. 24) and Fort McPherson's Russell Williams (No. 16) of Fort McPherson, waiting tensely for the ball are Guard Saburo Yamaguchi (No. 19), Forward James Saunders (No. 18) and Edward Brisko (No. 13) of the Atlanta General depot quintet. Fort McPherson won the game, 50-36.

Halas Believes He Has Landed Second Hutson

Coach George Halas of the Chicago Bears said today that he has signed a football player who is rated as second Don Hutson. Halas identified his sensational pass receiver as John (Red) O'Quinn of the Forest.

O'Quinn was the leading passer in the nation in 1948 with 41 receptions. Statistics showed he also was one of the country's best in 1947 and 1949. He caught 226 passes, gained 2,008 yards and scored 22 touchdowns in three seasons at Wake Forest.

Among those who call O'Quinn a "second" Don Hutson are Coaches Wallace Wade, Jim Tatum, Carl Snavely, and Benjie Feathers. Harold (Red) Grange scouted O'Quinn for the Bears and labeled the 193-pound end one of the best professional prospects he has ever seen.

Jackson Cagers Victorious In First Title Defense Try

Edge Fort Bragg, 54-53, In New Fieldhouse Thriller

For Jackson, S. C., defending champion of the Third Army, Del Carey, six-foot eight-inch basketball crown, won their first-around defense of the tiera Monday night by squeezing out a 54-53 win over a desperately fighting Fort Bragg, N. C., quintet in the tournament being held this week in Fort Benning's new Fieldhouse gymnasium.

In two other games played Monday, Oliver General hospital defeated Camp Gordon, Ga., 50-42, and Atlanta General depot was overwhelmed by Fort McPherson, Ga., 50-36.

The battle between Fort Bragg and Fort Jackson was all that promised to be, with the two teams slugging it out from start to finish. The defending champions kept the ball for long periods of minutes of play, but the Troopers soon cut their lead down to one point and the rest of the battle saw the two opponents trading basket for basket. With only seconds remaining in the see-saw battle, Bob Arnold of Bragg had the chance to be the first ball in the history of the tournament.

With the score standing at 54-53, Arnold watched the ball leave his hand and fall short. The last seconds of the game turned into a mad scramble for the ball with both teams fighting desperately for its possession.

Del Carey, six-foot eight-inch center for Jackson, led the attack with 18 points, followed closely by easy-moving Rudy Paynich with 16 tallies.

In the first game of the day, the Oliver General hospital squad swept into a quick lead that was threatened, but never really threatened. The score at half time was 26-13 with the hospital quintet on the long end. H. Rockstroh with 18 points and E. Moore with 15 markers paced the winners, while Belk was chalking up 14 tallies for the losers.

Fort McPherson showed its heels to a fighting but unavailing Atlanta General depot team. Saunders sent seven field goals and one foul through the hoop, and the Troopers' five points led Kiefer with 15 points led the losers in a battle that was more intense than the score would indicate. The fighting Deing in the see-saw battle, Bob Arnold never stopped trying and kept the Fort McPherson five rating to maintain its lead right up to the final whistle.

The semifinals in the Third Army army tournament will be held at 8 p.m. this evening with the finals slated for tomorrow night at 8 p.m. unless another game is both teams fighting desperately.

Clark Spearheads ASU to Ring Title

The 1949-50 Infantry Center boxing championship was won by the Area Service Unit Provisional group team, spearheaded by Lightweight Norman Clark who tallied 145 points out of a total of 945.

The title was never in doubt during the season as the Provisional group dominated the profit-getting with an array of champions that took seven out of the eight weight classes.

Three men, Norman Clark with 145 points, Lawrence Jones with 95, and Lee Baker with 90, garnered more points than the other teams combined.

George Allen of the 15th Infantry regiment battled his way to the bantamweight championship and the right to represent Fort Benning in the Third Army tournament two weeks ago, by an upending decision over Fort Bragg's defending champion in the 118-pound class, Frank Spennetti. He was picked as a Third Army representative in the army-wide tournament to be held at Bragg on Feb. 19.

Also picked for the Third Army team was Middleweight Champion Lawrence Jones, Jones' top-heavy favorite to retain both the Fort Benning title and the Third Army classic.

The flyweight title of Fort Benning is Billy Fitzpatrick, who lost to George Wret of Fort Bragg in the Third Army classic. William Jones holds the title for the featherweight class, while the welterweight tiara is worn by Naddie McFall. Light heavyweight Liam Peoples stands on the top rung of the heavyweight ladder.

'Bogey' Winners Are Announced

The weekly blind bogey tournament at the Country club links saw R. A. Schaffield take first place with a score of 12.

Second place was a tie between C. D. Allen and L. Dawson, both scoring 22. Tying for third place were J. Baker and R. Turgeon.

Infantrymen Drub Navy Cage Squads

The army downed the navy for the 105th Sea Bees, 74-two counts last week when the 30th Infantry regiment's basketball team, acting as an independent, pinned a 72-36 defeat on a quintet from the USS Bayfield in Charleston, S. C., and then moved into Little Creek, Va., to score.

Scoring when and how they pleased the 30th Infantry team was led by Brooks and Dugger, both of whom were outstanding in their play in the Fort Benning intra-mural league this past season.

Golf Instructor Ties 65 Mark

The post golf record, set at 65 in 1943 by Ernie Krivig, was tied for the third time last week by Charlie Harper.

Harper, who hails from Valdosta, Ga., is a golf instructor at the Country club.

A couple of weeks ago Harper shot a 68, six strokes under par and just one stroke under the course record. He shot 35 on the way out and 31 on the way in. Last week he shot a 65, to tie the post record, and 31 on the way out and 34 on the way in.

Troopers' 14 Wins Top Intra-Mural Cage Loop

Final standings in the Infantry Center basketball league found the Airborne battalion, Student Training Regiment, at the top of the league with a 14-win and two-loss record.

The Area Service Unit Provisional group teams followed closely on the heels of the post champions with a 13-3 total.

The 15th Infantry regiment threw enough baskets to eke out a 12-4 record, while Division Artillery's representatives lost five games and won eleven.

Next with nine wins and seven losses, was the 30th Infantry regiment. Five wins and 11 losses set the Infantry School detachment, 1955 Brown Ave. at Columbus, Ga., just behind the 30th Infantry and just ahead of the Special Troops of the Third Division.

The 52nd Medical Battalion took the next place with three triumphs and 13 losses.

The cellar was reserved for the Station Hospital quintet which fought gamely but wound up with just one victory in 15 tries.

Members of the victorious Airborne cagers include Coach Robert Phillips, Val Pierson, Michael Chester, Manager Bernard Porter, Herbert Myatt, Joseph Smith, Terry Scott, Thomas Gallagher, Robert Kinard, Lawrence Brown, Albert Constance, and Vernon Griffin.

Brown, Griffin, Phillips, Scott and Constance were picked to perform on the Doughboy team of 1950 which is seeking the Third Army crown in the new Fieldhouse gymnasium this week.

Harper to Play 'Bantam Ben'

Charlie Harper, assistant golf professional at the Fort Benning Officers' club, will team with Atlanta's Tommy Barnes, Southern amateur champion, in an exhibition against Ben Hogan and W. L. (Dynamite) Goodloe of Valdosta in Atlanta March 26.

Hogan, who has staged a comeback after a near-fatal highway accident last year, will be tuning up for the Masters tournament in Augusta in mid-April.

Harper is the former holder of the Southern medal record, while Barnes has twice won the southern amateur title.

Country club officials report that the two are working to get Hogan or some of the other outstanding golf pros en route to the Masters here for an exhibition.

Armand Smith, chief forward for the 196th band five, rang up 11 points for the losers.

The 15th Infantry regiment's Third Battalion kept its unbeaten record intact in the Industrial league last week by turning back the 196th band quintet, 30-21.

The win was the sixth straight for the infantrymen who hold first place in the league with four victories and no defeats.

High scorers for the Third Battalion were Forward Hank Hammond who looped in four field goals for a total of eight points.

Armand Smith, chief forward for the 196th band five, rang up 11 points for the losers.

Joe Answers Challenge
STOCKTON, Calif. (APFS)—Joe Louis, former heavyweight boxing champ, says he's retired—and that's that. "I've had enough," Louis told reporters. It was his reply to a fight challenge broadcast on a national radio program by NBA champion Ezzard Charles.

Recaptures Ski Title
BERLIN, N. H. (APFS)—Olavi Alakulpi, formerly of Finland, now an Army sergeant stationed with an equipment testing unit at Ft. Belvoir, Wash., recaptured the 11-mile invitation cross-country ski race for the second consecutive year. His time was 58 minutes 13 seconds.

George Does It—And Very Well
Someone once suggested that they let George do it and he's been doing it rather well ever since. The party was referring, of course, to large George Mikan of the Minneapolis Lakers in the National Basketball Association. The big fellow, main reason the Lakers are atop the Central Division in the pro loop, is leading the NBA in scoring with 1,379 points.

Lawson Hoopsters Trounce ISD Five
Taking an early first period lead, the Lawson field fliers handed the Infantry School detachment cage machine a 78-67 setback recently at the Lawson field gym.

ISD Cagers Shade City Court Quintet
The Infantry School detachment cage quintet scored a 49-48 victory over the L. and M. Motors cagers in the Airborne gym last week.

Ten EM Arrive From Fort Knox

Ten enlisted men were transferred to Fort Benning recently from Fort Knox, Ky., for assignment to the Infantry School detachment.

All former members of Headquarters and Service Company, 23rd Armored Engineer Battalion, Third Armored Division, the group included Joseph R. Diehl, Howard W. Workman, Richard E. Williams, Frank S. Bacigalupi and Donald E. Chandler, who have been assigned to Company A for duty with the Range detachment.

Also assigned to Company A were Walter E. Boyles, Jr., and Herbert L. East. They will be on duty with the weapons pool.

Pvt. Gerald F. Cotwell has been assigned to Company A for duty in the food service supervisory office, while Pvt. Donald E. Greenwell has been assigned to Company B for duty with the Communications department.

Also transferred here from the Third Armored Division's Headquarters and Service Company, 23rd Armored Engineer Battalion, was a Pvt. Carlos E. Bowden who has been assigned to detachment headquarters and placed on detached service for duty with the unit post office.

Other assignments in the Infantry School detachment 14's were included the transfer of Cpl. Lawrence E. Mann from the Third Replacement Company to Company B for duty with the Automotive department.

Sgt. Flemin R. Blevins was transferred from the 6215th Area Service unit, Fort Lawton, Wash., to detachment headquarters, pending further orders.

Sgt. Fred Waddell was transferred from Service Company, 30th Infantry Regiment, to Company B for duty with the Automotive department, and Sgt. 1st Cl. Clark S. Holeman was transferred from Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit, to Company A for duty with the Infantry Center G-4 office.

Retirement Plan Revisions Loom
Retirement benefits for military personnel seemed slated for certain revisions this week as congress approached the 1st 6 months before the closing session set for early this summer.

According to reports from Washington, a new overhauling of the retirement compensation structure would make it possible for a retired person to receive reduced monthly payments in order to insure survivors getting a steady income after their death. As outlined by W. Siering Cole (R-N.Y.), house armed services committee man, the retired serviceman would draw from 75 to 90 percent of normal retired pay—or from 56 to 67 percent of active pay if retirement was on 75 percent of active pay.

On death of the retired person, half of the normal retired pay would be continued for the life of the widow, and additional amounts would be paid for children until they reached the age of 18 years, married or died.

If a person was eligible for retirement at the time of death, but was still on the active list, he would be considered to have retired on the date of his death as far as amount of payments to survivors are concerned.

T.I.C. TALKS

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: HAVE YOU EVER VISITED THE SWIMMING POOL AT THE NEW GYMNASIUM AND FIELDHOUSE? WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE NEW FIELDHOUSE?

M-SGT E. C. KUHN, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I have never been to the new pool. I live off the post and I have my family with me, so I don't have too much time to go around. I do think the fieldhouse is a good place for the boys as they need some place for sports.

PFC JAMES E. DONAHOE, Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit: I do think it's a great place. It's wonderful to have such a variety of sports and a place to play them. I do think, however, there should be more wall lockers and more places to sit.

SGT. 1st Cl. GEORGE E. STONER, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I haven't been in the swimming pool because I've had so much work to do I just couldn't get there. I think the fieldhouse is beautiful on the outside, and from all I hear, it's swell on the inside. I think it's a good place to go during the winter months, especially for those interested in sports.

SGT. 1st Cl. BILL SUGGS, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit: I haven't used the fieldhouse yet, but I intend to do so. It's in town and it's a little hard to come back to the post. However, I do think the fieldhouse is a great asset to Fort Benning because it offers a place for off-duty recreation.

M-SGT. CLINTON A. HILL, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I think the fieldhouse is about 10 years too late. It should have been constructed during the war to keep the troops we had here occupied because they had no place to go and nothing to do. I think, though, the fieldhouse is a good idea.

CPL. IRVIN KALIN, Company B, Infantry School detachment: I have never been to the swimming pool although I have been in the fieldhouse. I have a baby about five months old and I usually have to stay home and help take care of her.

Six EM Receive Corporal Ratings
The promotion of six privates first class to corporal in the 3440th Area Service unit was announced this week by unit officials.

Those promoted included Johnnie R. Weaver, Herman C. Blume, James A. Ellis, Howard T. Oliver and Robert W. Sherwood. All were promoted at Headquarters Detachment, Section 1, and Carl E. Newton, Sixth Ordnance Medium Maintenance Company.

Motor Class Begins Here

Enlisted motor course No. 3 started last Monday, with a approximately 4 regular army and national guard students, enrolled.

This class will include 642 hours of instruction extended over a 16-week period.

Three Infantry School departments will aid in instructing the students. A total of 540 hours has been allotted to the Staff department, with 21 reserved for the school commandant.

To be chosen for attendance at one of the classes, a noncommissioned officer must have a minimum aptitude area score of 100 (if not available, then GCT score of 90), automotive information test score of 100, hold state or army motor vehicle operator's permit, and have interest in the mechanical field.

The course is designed to train enlisted personnel as mechanics and motor sergeants and mechanics to perform organizational maintenance on wheeled vehicles assigned to infantry units. Graduates are qualified for assignment to duty as automotive mechanic (organizational maintenance-MOS014).

Lt. Col. John T. Ewing, chief of the Automotive department, said that several new subjects have been added to this course including operation in unimproved areas, amphibious operation, tank orientation, water proofing of vehicles and a demonstration showing a vehicle submerged in salt water.

Plans Advanced For Forces Day

WASHINGTON (AFPS)—America will salute its armed forces May 20—date of the first Armed Forces day.

The third Saturday in May was selected for annual recognition of and appreciation for the armed services by President Truman and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson. It replaces the days formerly observed by the individual services.

Community observations, locally sponsored, will highlight activities of Armed Forces day. The day's slogan is "Teamed for Defense."

The prime objective of the occasion is to familiarize the public with the state of the nation's defenses. To accomplish this, Secretary Johnson has ordered troop and equipment participation provided to as many communities as feasible. Naval vessels plus certain types of aircraft and airborne troops, will be assigned to as many cities as possible.

Reserve forces and civilian components of the armed forces are being encouraged to participate in the military program which will include parades, exhibits, demonstrations, talks by military leaders, and "open house" tours of many service installations. Visitors will also be "welcomed aboard" navy vessels at port cities.

For the purpose of administration in connection with Armed Forces day, six geographical areas have been designated, and one service will be assigned primary responsibility for all activities within that area. The designated commander will coordinate all phases of planning and operation with the other services in the area.

Representatives of the six commanders in the continental United States are making final arrangements for the observance. Each service will be responsible for two areas with the navy having the added responsibility for the District of Columbia.

Justice Code Changes Told

The army was assured this week of several changes in the justice code.

After lengthy debate over the issue, the senate passed a bill last week that makes the law member of a military tribunal equal to a judge, thereby removing his right to vote on decisions. Another change established a court of military appeals, consisting of three civilian judges who will act as final authority on military justice.

Gen. Clarkson Pleased With Training Progress

LITTLE CREEK, Va.—During a recent visit to the Naval Amphibious base here, Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division, stated he was extremely pleased with the progress that units of the Third division were making as they trained in amphibious operations for Exercise Portrex.

Following a conference with Rear Adm. Jerould Wright, Brig. Gen. Ronald Shugg, Brig. Gen. Robert H. Pepper, and Col. John S. Guthrie, General Clarkson inspected the dining halls and training area.

Later he addressed men of his division at the theater complex.

menting them on the fine job they were doing. He explained that amphibious assaults were not new, but that new developments were being discovered and could be tried during an operation of this type. He told them that detailed planning beforehand counts, and that before an assault of this type could be carried out a deep insight was required.

General Pepper, commander of the Troop Training unit, United States Atlantic fleet, accompanied General Clarkson on a tour of the base. General Pepper told General Clarkson that he was favorably impressed with the interest and attention displayed by units of the Third division undergoing training. He further stated that he was well pleased with the appearance and organization of the troops upon their arrival here, adding that it has greatly reflected in the accomplishments up-to-date.

Amphibious training of approximately 15,000 troops, composed mainly of the Third division (reinforced), reached the half-way mark last week under the supervision of battle-trained U.S. Marine corps units of the Atlantic fleet at Little Creek.

Portrex, a controlled exercise, provides for secrecy of detailed operational plans in order that the maximum benefit of training may be obtained from the exercise. For example, both the invasion commander, Lt. Gen. John R. Hodge, Fifth corps commander, and the defense commander, Lt. Gen. W. H. H. Morris, commanding general of the Caribbean command, have been allotted the use of two simulated atomic bombs each, but the manner, time and place of their use will not be announced prior to their use.

Based upon lessons learned in World War II, the amphibious training at Little Creek will provide valuable training for the troops participating in the exercise.

Skits Portray Men Convert Abandoned AWOL Results Expanse Into Motor Pool

The Character Guidance Council of the Third Infantry, 15th Infantry Regiment, is attacking the problem of AWOL through a series of educational skits presented once a week.

Last week's skit pointed out the consequences of a promising young private first class who absented himself from duty. In a mock-trial, the youth was reduced in grade, lost his opportunity to attend Officers' Candidate School and forfeited pay for the offense.

Unit officials declared that the unique presentation of the skits is helping to reduce delinquency in the battalion.

From monkey wrenches to picks and shovels is the change-over that men of the 27th Transportation Car company have made since November—temporarily anyway.

The conversion started several months ago when the unit, because of overcrowded conditions at the post motor pool was forced to vacate its long-established car and truck housing area on the main post.

When they were set aside an area in a long-deserted motor pool near the Pine Lodge NCO club, it presented a problem. What would they use for repair sheds, office and storage space?

They licked the problem when they all split on their palms and decided to build one themselves, regardless of the obstacles.

Under the direction of Capt. Ralph Dunn, company commander, and Lt. Louis Davino, executive officer, the entire company set about its task with the celebrity of a jack rabbit chasing hounds.

From the post engineer, a large cement mixer was ordered, shovels and necessary construction tools were requisitioned from nearby units and plan of action was established.

With nothing more than an abandoned repair shed which to start their motor pool on, the men began to lay cement for repair ramps, walks to and from the office and runways for the crude, 19-foot high shed, they built an office in which administrative personnel could work. In the shed, which was transformed into an efficiently operating garage, the 27th's men put up fire fighting equipment on each post supporting the roof, conveniently located in case of an emergency. In the rear part of the office, a neatly arranged supply room was put into operation for supplies.

Despite the large number of men, the 27th maintained its discipline and responsibilities and kept vehicles in tip-top condition. During the construction, a command inspection was held. The 27th, judged with other units, was said to have one of the best operations on the post.

Deserving a lot of credit for the construction speed, a job that was slowed down considerably by lagging supplies of cement, is Sgt. 1st cl. Lee Barnett and Cpl. Alva Coleman, two members of the company who organized and supervised operations during the day.

Lt. Davino declared last week, in the closing stages of the construction, "I think each man on this job deserves the credit. It was through their untiring efforts and unrelinquishing attitude that we were able to build this garage. I'd compare this with any I've seen during my army career."

The lieutenant added that by next week the job should be finished.

Officials of the VA said that the new rule is intended to carry out terms of the Veterans Readjustment Act, specifying that a veteran must start his course within four years after discharge or after July 25, 1947, the official termination of the war.

They pointed out that the 1951 deadline will not affect the approximately 1,000,000 veterans who enlisted or reenlisted under the Armed Forces Recruitment Act of 1945 and 1946 and those veterans who have been discharged since July 25, 1947, or who are still in service.

More than 15,000,000 veterans under the GI Bill, Veterans Administration officials said, are still eligible for training under the GI Bill. Veterans Administration officials said that the minimum cost of the remaining part of the training program will be $16 billion. It said that 12.5-

Steps to Cut Vet Training Initiated

A regulation coming out April 1 will be the first move on a six-year job of shutting down the veterans training and education program of the VA in Washington said this week.

Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, Jr., who made the announcement, said the schooling part of the GI bill will expire in 1956, and that veterans may not enter the training program after July 25, 1951.

Furthermore, the new regulation will say, after that date:

1. Veterans may change courses of instruction "only for the most cogent reasons." Veterans now may change courses fairly easily, usually after seeking counseling and guidance service.
2. Once a veteran completes a course he will not be able to enroll in another even though he may still have some school time remaining under the GI bill formula.

Officials of the VA said that the new rule is intended to carry out terms of the Veterans Readjustment Act, specifying that a veteran must start his course within four years after discharge or after July 25, 1947, the official termination of the war.

They pointed out that the 1951 deadline will not affect the approximately 1,000,000 veterans who enlisted or reenlisted under the Armed Forces Recruitment Act of 1945 and 1946 and those veterans who have been discharged since July 25, 1947, or who are still in service.

But Administrator Gray said the best estimate indicates the cost of the program from its start to its end in 1958 may range between $25 billion and $30 billion.

Veterans get subsistence payments of $65 to $95 in job training and $75 to $120 a month in school, in addition to tuition, free books and other benefits.

The Veterans Administration has asked for $2,690,000,000 for education and training in fiscal year 1950-51.

Concert to Feature Classical Records

The music of classical composers performed by famous artists may be heard at the regular concert next Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at the Main library.

The program includes Concerto in B Minor by Dvorak played by the Philadelphia orchestra directed by Eugene Ormandy with Arturo Toscanini as conductor. The Sleeping Beauty Ballet by Tchaikovsky played by Leopold and his Symphony orchestra.

Referencing Plan Revised For Military Map Reading

A new grid referencing system for U. S. military maps soon will replace the present polyconic projection method, which is somewhat similar to that now used for British military maps, eventually will be utilized in its entirety by the army.

The new system, which is to be a dual designation, Universal Transverse Mercator (UTM), has been effected in devising the system.

Readings will be used on maps of zones 80 degrees north and 80 degrees south of the equator, while the universal polar stereographic (UPS) referencings will apply only for maps of areas within the 30 degree circumference to the North and South poles. Normally, however, the UTM-UPS grid referencings system will not be applied to maps of a scale smaller than 1:250,000.

Current manuals on map-reading are being revised to explain and put into use the new system, and it was expected that all Infantry School classes soon will be conducted under the UTM-UPS methods.

The new procedure, Infantry School authorities explained, follows closely a proposal concurred upon several months ago by members of the staff and faculty of the Infantry School.

Although all the machinery necessary to put the new system into effect is being set up now, it was expected that it would take more than a year to accomplish an army-wide change-over. Because of the large stockpile of maps using the present referencings at most posts and installations, it will be necessary for persons using maps frequently to acquaint themselves with both polyconic and UTM-UPS maps.

Present U. S. map referencing system, it was also anticipated that the UTM-UPS method, now used for British military maps, eventually will be utilized in its entirety by the army.

Two principal changes have been effected in devising the new system:

1. Maps using the UTM-UPS system will have grid intervals in meters instead of graphic (UPS) referencings will be used of a different coordinate system.

2. Expression of coordinates will differ from the present system in that all decimal points, dashes and parentheses will be deleted. (Example: present (22° 28' 53.71"), new 22285371.)

In the use of large scale maps, more than one grid zone will be necessary to use additional numerals and letters to pinpoint a location. When these characters are used, they will indicate the grid zone designation, and a 100,000-meter square will precede the digits.

Ordinarily, however, only the numerical portion of the coordinate expression will be used on maps used for operations of a low divisional level.

Under the UTM-UPS method, the grid zone designation and the 100-meter square identification will be included on the map as an item of marginal information.

Enlistment Banned For Men Who Ask 'Lost Pay' Release

Enlisted personnel discharged at their own request due to loss of pay under new compensation legislation will not be eligible to reenlist in the regular army for one year after separation, the army said last week.

Under the provisions of AR 615-385 and SR 615-385, any enlisted person on active duty October 1, 1949, who stood a financial loss due to the Career Compensation Act of 1949, may be granted both operations and administrative functions.

Operational goals have been set attaining competence in support of the Infantry School, participation in extended field exercises, instruction of large numbers of replacements, reconstruction of specialist teams and efficiency in the performance of artillery and post guard duty.

Administrative objectives include the establishment of a high record in motor maintenance, rehabilitation of areas and buildings, development of outstanding drill halls and re-enlisting a high number of enlisted men.

General aspects of the program are the attainment of a high degree of morale and discipline.

Rear Echelon Troops Launch Operation Portrex Counterpart

An intensified program aimed at attaining maximum efficiency in the assigned mission of the Infantry division artillery elements has been launched by rear echelon troops and has been dubbed "Operation Sand-Box."

Participants in the program include the 41st Field Artillery battalion; Headquarters, 3rd Army, Third Anti-aircraft Artillery Service battery, Ninth Field Artillery battalion; Service battery, 39th Field Artillery; Headquarters, 3rd Army, 3rd Anti-aircraft Artillery Service battery, 3rd Anti-aircraft Artillery Service battery, 3rd Anti-aircraft Artillery Service battery, 3rd Anti-aircraft Artillery Service battery.

The participating units, all under the command of Lt. Col. Herbert G. Spaw, were left here as rear echelon artillery troops when other elements of the Third division were being trained for and take part in Operation Portrex, the Caribbean land-sea-air maneuver scheduled for next month.

Objectives of the rear echelon counterpart to Portrex include both operations and administrative functions.

Analysis Report

Critics Rank Bayonet High

The Bayonet was given a top rating in a critique of this paper by the Armed Forces Press Service review section, it was learned this week. The AFPS review section analyzes service newspapers, offering constructive suggestions in methods of improving presentation of news, layout, and content.

The critique praised the Bayonet's pictorial coverage, calling it "first-rate—marked only by a tendency to use too many posed shots." As to local news, the critique said the Bayonet has "an exceptionally extensive and well-written local news coverage marked by excellent research."

Soldiers May Air Complaints on Pay Bonus Voted For Pa. Vets

Pay account difficulties which have been a source of confusion to Fort Benning enlisted men are expected to be cleared up soon through the initiation of an interview and pay questionnaire procedure involving unit commanders, personnel officers and the post finance officer, it was announced this week.

Following the procedure, as outlined in an Infantry Center directive, any enlisted person who believes his pay account to be incorrect will first report to his unit commander for interview. If his questions cannot be answered, the unit commander will prepare a "pay questionnaire" form, distribution of which has been made to unit personnel officers and unit commanders officials said.

Red Cross Opens Drive Next Week

Fort Benning's military and civilian personnel will light the fuse on the 1950 American Red Cross fund-raising campaign next week. While last minute adjustments were being made to the operational plan that will be put into effect on Feb. 28, Murray Hill, Infantry Center Red Cross field director, said that the campaign would be based on a two-point program. First, Mr. Hill said, it is hoped all personnel will contribute 100 percent, and second it is hoped the monetary goal will be passed.

NCO Housing Assignments To Be Made

Assignment of newly constructed quarters in the Gordon field area of the Main post and housing in Benning Park to eligible noncommissioned officers will begin soon, Infantry Center officials have announced. Date of rank will be the basis for assigning the quarters, it was pointed out.

Benning Park, now occupied by officers and their families is being converted into a non-com housing with a view toward moving the present tenants of the apartments into Wherry bill housing projects in the vicinity of the Main post. Infantry Center officials expected that the entire Benning Park project of more than 300 units will be available for occupancy by eligible NCOs and their families by the end of September.

Deadline Near On Registration

Deadline for 1950 motor vehicle registration is Feb. 28, Infantry Center personnel were reminded again this week. All vehicles must be inspected and defects remedied prior to registration, according to the provost marshal's office. The safety lane for such inspections is located at the rear of the post garage, and inspections are made between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., weather permitting, for a 25-cent fee.

Records available at the provost marshal's office indicate that a large number of cars have not as yet been registered for 1950. Pennsylvania added its name this week to the growing list of states offering native World War II veterans a bonus for time served overseas or in this country. Under the qualifications established by the bonus bill, Pennsylvania will award $10 for each month of service in the United States and $15 for each month served overseas.

Fort Benning's recently completed $900,000 housing, shown in this aerial photo, will be ready for occupancy around March 15, Infantry Center officials announced this week. Funds for the construction program were appropriated by the 80th Congress in 1948, but because of unfavorable weather and a shortage of certain building materials completion was prolonged several months. Family units in the 10 building will include three bedrooms and a bath upstairs, while the downstairs section will include a dining room, a kitchen and living room. The structures are located in the former cantonment area between Ingersoll and Edwards avenues.

RUBINO AND HIS VIOLIN To Be Here Next Sunday

Famed Violinist To Play Sunday

Rubino and his violin, a world-famous musical combination, will appear in concert in the Main theater at 2 p.m. next Sunday under the sponsorship of the Infantry Center special services office.

Citizen-Soldier Relationship Lauded by General Clarkson

LITTLE CREEK, Va. — Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, commanding general of the Third Infantry division, in a radio address last week over station WLOW, said that he was well pleased with the way his men and the citizens of Norfolk had taken to each other.

"When troops get away from their home station," he said, "they're usually like a bunch of bad boys—at their worst. I've checked into the matter very carefully since we've been here, and their conduct has been good. They've been behaving like well-trained young musicians of this country."

Special services officials have announced that if the response to this concert fills their expectations more such entertainments will be booked in the future.

Overseas Troop Strength Drops

A report filed by Army Secretary Gordon Gray recently said that troop strength in overseas zones had dropped somewhat while a boost was seen among stateside commands.

Secretary Gray, in making his report to supplement the annual report that in Alaska troops had been reduced from 5,000 men in June, 1949, to about 6,500 men in June, 1949. Although this is an appreciable gain considering appropriations, Gray said that an additional 1,000 or more men would be there now if a critical housing condition did not exist.

In June, 1949, the report shows that there were 405,500 men in the continental United States, while there were 252,500 men overseas—a total of 658,000. In the East, the command troop strength dropped from 133,000 to 123,500 during 1949, a loss due mainly to transfers from the United States commands. The greatest Far East loss was transfer of the 11th Airborne Division and the reorganization of the Sixth Infantry division.

Troops in Hawaii, despite other regional losses, maintained 8,000 troops through the decline of other organizations. In Europe, ground strength was estimated at 91,500 during June, 1949. In May, 1949, however, it was 85,000 men and the Austrian forces with 10,000. The Italian peace treaty limited American troops in Trieste to 5,000.

NSLI Checks Still Rolling; Few Hit Snag

Washington (AFPS) — Veterans of World War II have to date received more than one-third of the 2.2 billion dollar National Service Life Insurance dividend payable to policy holders, past and present.

The Veterans Administration recently announced that checks are being mailed out at the rate of 1.1 million a week, representing a weekly outlay of 200 million dollars.

However, with the work already accomplished by the VA and with the multiplicity of details yet remaining, do not be surprised or vexed if you have not as yet received your check—or do not receive it when expected.

The pay-off system is not too well understood by many. Here is the way it works: In the first pay cycle are the names of about 11 million veterans. These are the veterans whose accounts are in correct order on the Veterans Administration books.

Each day that veterans agency takes more than 20,000 names from each group, zero through nine and sends them to the Treasury department, where checks are written. On February 10, the Treasury was writing checks for veterans in serial numbers that ended in the 300's.

The second pay cycle will be for veterans who missed their places in the first pay schedule, often through the fault of the VA. They will have to wait until their numbers come up in the second cycle. Many veterans whose insurance accounts still are not balanced will have to wait until the second pay cycle, which includes their checks six or eight weeks.

Altogether, several million veterans will be paid later than they now expect, if they are counting on being paid according to serial number order. This includes the large number who failed to apply on time. However, veterans who have not yet received their checks by mid-April, after that there will be a delay in their checks by veterans who apply in the future.

General Clarkson also clarified a few points about the division, in a radio address last week over station WLOW, said that he was well pleased with the way his men and the citizens of Norfolk had taken to each other.

"The three white stripes on the Third division patch," he said, "represent the three battles in which the Third took part during World War I—Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne. The blue stripes are actually a blue background, which is the infantry color."

Commenting on the training his men were taking at Little Creek, General Clarkson said "it's really an eye-opener to me to see how these men are taking the training. About 50 per cent of the men in the Third have never taken part in anything like this before. But their enthusiasm is something I've never seen."

Closing the interview, General Clarkson told of his service during World War II. He commanded the 33rd Infantry division in the Pacific and fought in New Guinea and the Philippines, and served in the occupation of Japan.

Promoted to Corporal Pfc. Thomas A. Lawrence and Alvin J. Weaver, Co. 899th Armored Field Artillery battalion, were promoted to corporal this week.

GUNNING FOR THE GALS — Sgt. $8 Million Request Sprang From Research at Benning

Research undertaken last year by the Infantry Center's Army Field Forces board No. 3 gave birth this week to a request for $8 million, needed by the army for development of arctic combat equipment.

A press report originating in Washington, which listed arctic equipment as "top priority," said that high quartermaster officials had entered the plea for additional funds before a congressional subcommittee.

Officials of the field force board here explained that equipment such as that mentioned in the Washington hearing, received some development at the Infantry Center, but that extensive testing was carried on at a subsidiary headquarters in the Yukon.

The request for research funds is said to be studied with projects on how to enable the soldier to live and fight in the Arctic. One such study, the reports said, dealt with living conditions in Western Siberia.

General Clarkson also clarified a few points about the division, in a radio address last week over station WLOW, said that he was well pleased with the way his men and the citizens of Norfolk had taken to each other.

"The three white stripes on the Third division patch," he said, "represent the three battles in which the Third took part during World War I—Chateau-Thierry, St. Mihiel, and Meuse-Argonne. The blue stripes are actually a blue background, which is the infantry color."

AER Aid Given 200 Last Year

Nearly 200 military personnel at the Infantry Center received $9,903.09 in aid last year from Army Emergency Relief.

Capt. Hazel Ver Hey, AER officer at Fort Benning, disclosed the results of the local agency's work this week after the national organization published its report. During 1949, Captain Ver Hey said, the Infantry Center AER office reviewed hundreds of requests for financial assistance, and in all 189 loans or grants were made.

AER as a whole made loans and grants amounting to $732,000. Nearly 10,000 soldiers received portions of this amount.

The service organization, which works closely with the American Red Cross in giving financial assistance to servicemen and their dependents, receives its working funds from contributions during the year. Captain Ver Hey explained that at the Infantry Center, AER's funds are taken from the annual Community Chest drive, thereby eliminating periodic drives to solicit funds.

Applicants for loans who must be under financial hardship, are first screened by their commanding officer, and before going to AER, are directed to the Red Cross field office. If Red Cross is unable to grant the loan, he is then referred to AER.

VA Outlines Vet Benefits

Being on active duty in the armed forces is no bar to your receiving certain veterans' benefits. That is, of course, provided you are otherwise qualified.

Three principal veterans' benefits provided by law which are available to active duty Service personnel are National Service Vocational Education, and loan provisions of the G.I. Bill of Rights.

Special emphasis on such benefits are outlined in a recent Armed Forces Talk. The talk No. 310 "The V.A. and You," emphasizes benefits available to veterans now on active duty in the armed forces and is one of a series of four, listed as the principal benefits as administered by the Veterans Administration are:

1. National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) and U.S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI).
2. Educational aid.
3. Guarantee of loans for the purchase or construction of farms or business property.
4. Readjustment allowances for veterans who are unemployed.
5. Disability compensation.
6. Vocational rehabilitation.
7. Physical examinations, hospital care, and outpatient medical and dental treatment.
8. Domestic care and guardianship service.
9. Pensions.
10. Death benefits to survivors.

For purposes of eligibility under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (the G.I. Bill), World War II service is generally construed to mean service between Sept. 16, 1940 and July 25, 1947. A major exception provided by the Recruitment Act of 1945 (Public Law 190) provides that personnel who enlisted or reenlisted between Oct. 6, 1945 and Oct. 5, 1946, may receive entire period of such enlistment as "war service" to qualify for G.I. Bill benefits.

A minimum of 90 days' service during the above period is required to establish veteran status, however.

Service personnel are cautioned, in having dealings with the Veterans Administration, to always provide their full names, (C) (claim) number if one has been supplied, military serial or service number and complete permanent address.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Difficult Transformation Earns Title for Sergeant

The step-M-Sgt. Floyd O. Holmes took in 1946, transforming him from an army band drummer to a finance sergeant, wasn't an easy one, but with that little determination he made the grade. Anyway, he's this week's Soldier of the Week.

Sergeant Holmes, who embarked on his army career in 1934, is the man responsible for the prompt and correct pay to each student officer in the Student Training Regiment, a job more complicated than just disbursing money at the end of each month.

Unit officials have lauded the 36-year old sergeant for his tireless efforts in conducting a flawless pay system, by saying, "He is never satisfied with a mediocre job, and is exceptionally cheerful during the arduous task of paying hundreds of officers."

When World War II broke out, Sergeant Holmes was assigned to the 78th Infantry division based at Camp Butner, N. C. In eight years that had lapsed since his enlistment, Holmes was promoted to sergeant, in addition to holding his own as the band's first drummer.

He made a wartime tour with the 78th division, but was returned to Fort Benning in 1946 for a change in assignment. It was during his first few weeks here that he became acquainted with the Student Training Regiment.

Pending further assignment, Sergeant Holmes bided his time as an athletic and recreation assistant in the student outfit.

The rapid separation of qualified officers from the band, and the STS's administrative bridge, one of which was that of a finance sergeant. There was nothing left to do but fill the holes, a difficult job, the sergeant explains, is to apply yourself diligently, listen to the suggestions of others and keep your mind on what you're doing. He said that after - hours study doesn't hurt either, for during his "apprenticeship" as finance sergeant, he waded through several lengthy handbooks on finance administration and procedure.

During his four - year assignment in STS's finance section, Sergeant Holmes has been responsible for the exceptional pay service given more than 10,000 student officers who have come to and gone from the Infantry School.

The Sylacauga, Ala., native plans to finish out "at least 29 years" in the army, only four years away.

Food Poisoning Cases Here Nil

Cases of food poisoning at the Infantry Center haven't appeared for more than a year, food service officials announced this week.

They said the record was due largely to precautionary measures taken by food service inspectors to warn dining halls of personnel against misplacing poisonous chemicals.

Maj. John A. Rillovec, Infantry Center food service supervisor, said that in the past, inspectors were found - bug sprays, petroleum products - red warning labels reading "Poison" were attached to the containers to warn personnel against placing them near foods.

Overseas Travel Rumors Squelched

Fort Benning transportation officers were told last week to refrain from spreading rumors of enlisted men scheduled to travel overseas concurrently with their dependents, that they will be berthed in the same cabins aboard transports.

The rumor was issued following reports from the New York port of embarkation which indicated that numerous complaints had been received from military personnel when they were not assigned cabins with their dependents.

Officers Receive New Assignments

Two officers of the 999th Armored Field Artillery Battalion received new assignments last week. It was announced by Lt. Col. H. W. Browning, commander.

First Lt. John H. Maddox was transferred from Service battery to Headquarters and Headquarters battery for duty as a forward observer. First Lt. James C. Isah was transferred from Headquarters and Headquarters battery to Battery B for duty as assistant executive officer.

Wants Post Children's Choir German Opera Star's Aim Is Career In U.S.

BY MAY PIGOTT
Bayer's wife's Editor
A concert singer and opera star—the very words bring to mind bright lights, music and thunderous applause, but Mrs. Ann Louise Bornemann can tell you that to know adulation takes many hours of study, and often heartbreak.

MRS. ANN L. BORNEBANN
German Opera Star

Mrs. Bornemann, mother of Mrs. H. R. Smith, Jr., has been in America only since November and still speaks with an intriguing accent, using her very expressive hands to help her along.

"I first started my musical career as an accompanist for my brother who was an opera singer. I first started my musical career as an accompanist for my brother who was an opera singer. I first started my musical career as an accompanist for my brother who was an opera singer.

"In Europe," she explained, "you have a very definite course of study that you must take to be a concert singer, another to be an opera singer and so on. I studied at the Conservatory of Bueckenburg and later was fortunate enough to study under Rainald von Zur Muehlen, world famous singer. Also he has written some 125 exercises designed to help all types of singers."

Her clear blue eyes took on a far-away look as she told of the numerous concerts she had given in famous cities, among them Vienna, Cologne, Bremen, Hamburg and several in France. Then her eyes twinkled as she said, "I will remember one concert in Cologne. This concert was being given in an enormous high school auditorium. There was a short interruption between the two parts of the program and I went into one of the class rooms to rest. I took off my corsage and laid it down on a desk. When I returned, a steady stream of ink splashed down the front of my pale pink gown. I had placed the corsage in ink. I was desperate, with visions of having to call off the concert, when a friend came to my rescue, giving me a hat to wear during the remaining part of the concert. The audience thought I had changed my gown to suit the mood of the last series of numbers, and everything turned out fine.

Radiomen Begin Period of Study

The Infantry School's radio repair class No. 2 got under way here last Friday with approximately 50 noncommissioned officer students enrolled. Class No. 2 followed within a week the graduation of 27 students from class No. 1. During the course the students are given 820 hours of instruction, extended over a 29-and-one-half-week period.

First Lt. Robert F. Ryan has been assigned to Company D, Airborne battalion, for duty as a non-tactical unit officer.

Lacking In Dance Technique? Visit Service Club on Monday

Non-dancers at Fort Benning are going to get an opportunity to master the terepochorean art. The club will emphasize the four standard types of social dancing: waltz, fox trot, thumba and tango. A nominal fee will be charged.

MG Courses Are Planned

Two officer's courses in military government have been proposed for the start of fiscal year 1951. Third army headquarters announced this week. A three-month course for regular two- to four-week courses for reserve officers not on active duty, it was pointed out. Post and military district commanders have been requested to submit an estimate of quota requirements for each of the proposed courses to Third Army headquarters, Attention: G-3, not later than March 1.

Finance Stops Part Payments

An overburdening of the post finance office has resulted in a decision to suspend partial payments for the balance of February, it was announced. Too much individual service was being done as a reason for the excessive work backlog which brought about the suspension of partial payments.

The Fort Benning community like a civilian newspaper serves its community. Therefore, to have well-rounded news coverage, we must include the ladies. Sorry fellows. The society page remains. Many of the questionnaire blanks contained choice comments on the reverse side. One which we got a kick out of was signed by a "former Stars and Stripes editor." He said that our reporters have the "amateur" touch, and yet be, an alleged editor, couldn't even spell "amateur" correctly.

grams in 1949 for communications alone.

Airtorce Sergeant Tells Of ARC Aid

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article by Sgt. Claude E. Cockrell, Third Liaison Flight, Lawson airbase, is being published in the Bayonet this week in view of its timeliness in connection with the Red Cross appeal for funds which starts here next week.

By CLAUDE E. COCKRELL
This story constitutes a great deed done by the Red Cross for me and about 3,000 other American soldiers who were prisoners of war on a forced march in Austria.

In April, 1945, while we were prisoners of war in Krems, Austria, we were forced to march. When we began our march, the men had very little or no food, and had to march approximately 15 to 20 miles per day. The Germans gave us practically no food.

After we had gone for approximately 15 days, the men were getting in very poor condition due to lack of food. As we were nearing Western Austria, we received a rumor that Red Cross trucks were on their way with food packages.

One day after we had marched for about 20 miles, the men seemed as though they had gone beyond their limit. As we were coming down into a valley, we sighted a small village below and as we approached, we heard a roar of trucks. We could not make out what the trucks were until we came into an opening.

We did not recognize them as being Red Cross trucks until they were very close. The men yelled as though the war was over.

At the sight of the trucks, the spirit of the men became as high as if they had already eaten the food.

The Germans had let the trucks, driven by prisoners of war, come through from Switzerland.

We spent the night in that place, and the food packages were distributed among the men. We used the food sparingly as we continued marching to a forest held in this forest for 11 days before being liberated by General Patton's Third Army. During that 11 days, the Red Cross truck managed to bring us food packages once more.

One can never really feel the true sense of appreciation for such Red Cross service unless he has had such an experience that without the help of the Red Cross many men on the march die with me would not have come home.

Two men assigned duties with the Finance section. They were Pfc. Donald N. Kline and Sgt. Ralph J. W. Brown.

Cpl. Louis W. Stall, M-Sgt. George Wood, Pfc. Roy J. Corbett and Pvt. Leonard H. Pressler were assigned to the Transportation section. They were Pfc. Donald N. Kline and Sgt. Ralph J. W. Brown.

All are members of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Section 84th Air Corps Service unit.

Fifty Men Begin Water Instruction

The life saving and water safety program, under the joint supervision of the special services office and the American Red Cross, got under way at the Briant Wells Field house last Monday, with 50 enlisted men enrolled for training.

Screening of military personnel eligible to attend the course was handled during the preceding week by Sgt. 1st Cl. Robert E. Rosche, post life guard in charge of swimming activities, and his assistants, Sgt. Edward G. Siler, Cpl. East L. Waite, Cpl. Jack Hood and Pvt. Robert E. Zoudu.

Russell Nicholson, special field representative of the American Red Cross safety services arrived at Fort Benning from Ft. Benning, Feb. 20, and is in charge of the school. He is assisted by Sergeant Rosche and his staff.

The school, which will last two weeks, includes 50 hours of instruction in life saving and water safety methods, qualifying those who successfully complete the course to act as lifelife.

Recon Unit EM Placed On Detached Service

Four members of the Third Reconnaissance company have been placed on detached service with the 31st Field Artillery Battalion's Service battery.

They include Sgt. 1st Cl. William E. Lester, Pfc. Lizzardre J. Garza, Cpl. Maurice J. G. Gorman and Pfc. Donald A. Buzelle.

Duties Assigned By Service Unit

Duty assignments for 16 members of the Area Service Unit Provisional group have been announced.

Those assigned to the Ordnance section were M-Sgt. Ransford M. Corlew and Pfc. Charles McGraith, while M-Sgt. Archie L. Craig was assigned to special services.

Cpl. Louis W. Stall, M-Sgt. George Wood, Pfc. Roy J. Corbett and Pvt. Leonard H. Pressler were assigned to the Transportation section. They were Pfc. Donald N. Kline and Sgt. Ralph J. W. Brown.

Two men assigned duties with the Finance section. They were Pfc. Donald N. Kline and Sgt. Ralph J. W. Brown.

Top Student

Airman Wins Week's Title

The student of the week selected from the enlisted trainees at the Third Army Food Service School is Sgt. Paul Bigot, 3209th Food Truck group, Esling field, Fla.

Although he has been in the food service field for only half a year, Sergeant Bigot is enthusiastic about his new airforce career and has been training for the training he is receiving at the Food Service School.

Now in his seventh year of service, he spent two years in the European theater of operations during the war.

A member of the cook's course, class No. 1, Sergeant Bigot will graduate on May 23 after completing 12 weeks of training.

Inspections Spur Dining Competition

It's a neck and neck race between the dining halls of the 15th Infantry Regiment.

Officials of the unit said this week that competitive inspections have sparked dining hall officers to undertake an intensive reduction and beautification program. The messes of the monthly inspections determine what dining hall wins the "Best Dining Hall" award.

Voluntary labor, new lamp shades, paint and curtains were being used throughout the battalion this week in preparation for the February inspection.

Instruction Team Tours Tennessee

The Infantry School's instruction team recently returned from a 12-day tour of Tennessee where they demonstrated the infantry's weapon power. Places visited included Chattanooga, Knoxville, Johnson City, Nashville and Memphis, where they took part in a televised broadcast. Members of the team include 1st Lt. Herbert E. Wolff and Sgt. 1st Cl. Frank A. Hartline, F. H. Ferguson and Fred Sanders. During their tour, they displayed the new rocket launcher, or bazooka, which resembles a stovepipe. It launches a rocket capable of stopping armored vehicles, and its weight has been reduced six pounds from the old model. Also displayed were the 4.2 mortar, M-1 rifle with grenade launcher, automatic rifle and new mortar T-106.

While touring Tennessee, the team received numerous commendations and congratulatory remarks. Col. John T. Moorehead, commanding officer of the 3030th Quartermaster depot at Memphis, stated that it was the "best demonstration of infantry weapons I have ever seen."

Defense Chief Advocates Readiness Against Attack

WASHINGTON — (APPS) — Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson recently keyed the defense aims of our nation when he said that the United States should be prepared to "lick hell" out of any nation if it tries to break the peace. "We want a military establishment sufficient to deter that aggressor and sufficient to lick hell out of her if she doesn't stay deterred," the secretary stated. "There is but one nation in the world that would start a war that would engulf the world and

Need Approval For Army Visits

Visits to Third Army headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga., by field installation personnel will in the future necessitate prior approval of the army commander, officials have announced. Requests for approval should be in writing when time permits, stating the name of the officer or person performing the travel, his post or organization assignment, a brief description of the purpose of the trip, probable length of visit and the name of the staff division to be visited, according to the announcement. Prior approval of the commander, officials have announced.

Officials pointed out that all individuals, regardless of status or duration of visit, will be required to fill out a transient registration card, either at the start of the visit or at the officers' registration desk at the main entrance.

Troops to Test Arctic Ration

WASHINGTON — (APPS) — Fifty men of the army's Alaskan Command will be selected to test a new Arctic trail ration developed by the quartermaster corps. The ration, which is being tested at an isolated Alaskan site, lasting for 23 days. The ration, intended for search parties and other groups which must travel on foot carrying equipment and supplies, will provide 5,324 calories per day, as compared with the standard ration of 3,800 calories. The ration weighs 3 1/2 pounds, packed, and consists of two units of one type of dehydrated meat and one unit of another type, two types of pre-mixed cereal, seedless raisins, roasted almonds, cookies, fruit, candy-coated, chocolate, soup mix, cocoa powder, plastic spoons, toilet paper, and a packet of 20 cigarettes. An accessory packet containing bouillon powder, soluble tea, soluble coffee, sugar tablets, dried and modified milk, candy-coated chewing gum, and safety matches.

Steady Climb Reported In Benning Enlistments

Reenlistments at Fort Benning have been showing a steady increase since last summer, according to Lt. Col. Clyde M. Dillinger, Jr., Infantry Center recruiting officer. Beginning with the June-July drive last year, aimed at the re-enlistment of AUS men and culminating with the regular reenlistment drive which began last November, a total of

Unit Selects Top Soldier

For his "ever-present soldierly appearance, mannerisms and conduct," Pvt. William Lawrence was named January "Soldier of the month" of the Third Infantry division. Robert H. Smith, unit officials revealed last week. A member of Company L, Private Lawrence's neatness of dress, ready and correct response to questions and knowledge of his assigned duties figured greatly in his selection, officials said. Battalion officials were also high in their praise of Private Lawrence for his alertness and efficiency.

Area Available To Negro GIs

Negro troops at Fort Benning were reminded again this week that the Third Army operates a recreation center in Atlanta which they may use while visiting Ft. Benning on pass or leave. Known as the Washington Park recreation area, the center occupies one city block on Ollie street. Its facilities may be used by both transient officers and enlisted men for periods of not more than 15 days. The center can billet 500 persons on charge, but no government mess is maintained in the area, Third Army officials said. Washington Park is divided into three sections: one for officers, one for cadets and one for enlisted men other than cadre. Each section has a dayroom equipped with pool tables, pool, tables and pianos. All buildings are gas heated, and athletic and recreation equipment is available, according to the announcement.

LOOKING AT SPORTS

With
LEO J. PARENT
Acting Sports Editor

The Fort Jackson, S.C., Red Devils, who walked off with the basketball championship crown of the Third army last week, truly deserved to win since it was clear that they were the finest team seen in the new Fieldhouse gymnasium. However, the runners-up deserve some praise, too. Under the able tutelage of Coach Harold Bryant, the Doughboys went into the tournament as a collection of stars chosen from various units on the post to represent Fort Benning in the tourney.

With only 10 days to practice as a team, our squad went into the contest against teams that had been playing as such for two and three months—and still the boys came out second best. That's a tribute to a good coach and a fine bunch of players.

The Doughs provided the biggest upset of the week-long tourney, by defeating Fort Jackson, 57-49, in a slambang affair that kept the 1,500 fans presant hoarse for days afterwards. Playing heads-up ball, the Doughs showed the fans that they were a team to be reckoned with in the battle for the Third army crown.

I guess it's time to note that our boys were beaten by that same team in the next two meetings. The Jacksonians were just too much for anyone to handle.

One thing that was particularly noticeable and satisfying to everyone was the audience participation. Not only was every game well attended, but every eye was on the floor (figuratively speaking, that is) and not one official ruling got by without a little help from the fans. Charles Harris, a colorful referee if there ever was one, provided a quiet moment in the gymnasium when he was struck on the side of the head by a throw ball and knocked to the floor. That was the only quiet moment that the officials had.

It's hard to believe after watching the teams perform and display the highest caliber sportsmanship qualities that a total of 396 personal fouls were committed during the tournament, but it's a fact. It also attests to the fierce competitive spirit that pervaded each game and each player. No matter how high the score or how hopeless the cause seemed, the boys never stopped trying.

TOURNAMENT NOTES

"Averages on the average don't mean much," said Mr. Average Sports Fan. "It's coming through in the clutch that counts. Look at Ted Williams," he continued. "There was a guy that came within one ten-thousandth of a point of winning the American league batting championship, but when the chips were down in the crucial Yankee-Red Sox series late in the season, what did he do, I ask you, what did he do? Nothing," he said, answering his own question.

I agree with Mr. Average fan, but most devotees of any sport usually do follow carefully their favorite's career, and how do they follow it—by watching their averages. So let's take a look at the records and averages of the teams that competed in the Third army basketball tournament last week.

Sam Hall, the 15th Infantry regiment's Sam Hall, that is, watched every game of the week-long tourney and after a couple of hours figuring and checking came up with these facts:

Fort Jackson averaged 58 points per game in the seven games they played. They made a total of 410 points on 155 field goals, 100 free throws, and 100 fouls were committed by the boys in red. Their star Center Del Cearley averaged 17 points per game to lead the hoopers in per game totals. He also made the most points in any one game, 28, made the most field goals, 12, and garnered the most markers via the free throw route, nine, in any one game. Forward Rudy Payneich was another standout for the champions with an average of 13 points per game.

Fort Bragg, N.C., was next in the high team average with 52. Ed Downing for the Troopers was a big help in this department with his point-getting, which averaged 16 per game.

Camp Gordon, Ga., came up with a 49 tallies per game average, aided by Forward Richard Beck with 11 per, while Fort McPherson Ga., could be counted on for roughly 46 markers each game, with 12 of those being thrown by Guard Russell Williams.

The Doughboys came next in the listing with an average of 44 points per game for the team with 15 of that total a result of the accurate eye of Forward Vernon Griffin. Just behind Fort Benning was the Atlanta General depot five which averaged 43 tallies in two games. Top man for the depotmen was Forward Clinton Griffith who fired eight per game.

Lowest of the team averages was compiled by the Oliver General hospital, Ga., quintet with 41 points, abetted by Forward Henry Rockstroh who picked up an 11-point individual average.

The Doughboys' Larry Brown won the double honor of committing the most personal fouls per game. Larry had five in each of the fact that in two games he was assigned the task of guarding the highest scorer in the tourney, Del Cearley. Clinton Griffith of the Atlanta General depot was next in that section with four in the two games that his team played.

That closes the door on the Third army basketball tournament for Fort Benning. Fort Jackson will fight for the army-wide title March 6-12 at the Military District of Washington, and I know the Fort Benning team and fans hope that they bring home the grip

Benning to be Host In Three Tourneys

Golf Meet First; Slated for July

Fort Benning will be host to three Third army tournaments this year. First on the schedule is the Third army golf tourney which will take place July 11-16, followed by the baseball tournament slated for August 8-11. Badminton followers will be able to watch their favorites vie for the Third army title Nov. 14-16.

The post golf tourney will be held during June 25, while the post badminton tournament, to decide who will represent Fort Benning in the third army tourney, is scheduled for November 1-2.

The teams winning the post intramural championship in volleyball, baseball or softball will represent Fort Benning in these Third army tournaments. The post volleyball tourney will be held beginning March 15. The Third army volleyball tournament will be at Camp Gordon, Ga., April 4-7. Baseball teams will vie for the right to represent Benning in the Third army tourney in the league that begins on May 15 and ends July 17-24. The softball league swings into play July 1 and winds up Sept. 3. The winner will play in the Third army title, scheduled for Sept. 19-23 at Fort McPherson, Ga.

Post Keglers Trim Airmen

Fort Benning bowlers racked up four victories over visiting Maxwell field, Ala., teams at the Main bowling alley Sunday. The Officers' Bowling League representatives, paced by V. Ashbacher with a high set total of 227, won the first match of the day 2,790-2,852.

Led by A. Bangert, the Benningites clipped the Maxwell fliers 2,547-2,242 in the second match of the afternoon. The ladies of Benning were in the spotlight, too, as the Fort Benning Woman's club bowling group took two out of their three matches.

Plans are under way for a return match to be held March 5 at Maxwell field.

Post to Provide Athletes Billets

Fort Benning will provide billeting and messing facilities for the approximately 280 out-of-town participants in the Southern Area Boys club basketball tournament to be held in Columbus Feb. 24-25.

Twenty-four teams, including three local teams, are expected to participate in the tourney. They will represent Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, South Carolina and Georgia.

The junior and senior teams will begin play Friday, Feb. 24, at the Columbus Boys' club while the midjet team will begin play the same day at Columbus Junior high school. All finals will be played at Jordan high school. All games are scheduled to start at 7 p.m.

A tour of Fort Benning, sponsored by The Columbus army-airforce recruiting office, will be conducted Saturday, Feb. 25.

Army Boxers In 4th Round

The U. S. Army's second annual boxing tournament moves into the fourth round at Fort Bragg tonight, with the finals scheduled for Saturday night.

Last night's results, with the boxers, their command, and their home towns:

- Polish — Polis Cuevas, Sixth Army, Brooklyn, N. Y., defeated Valentino Garcia, Fifth Army, Colorado Springs, Colo.
- Maniwawhat — Michael Tooc, First Army, Jersey City, N. J., defeated Robert Martinez, Fourth Army, Los Angeles.
- Featherweight — Robert Jackson, Sixth Army, Toledo, O., defeated Jose Galax, Third Army, Chicago, Ill.
- Featherweight — Charles Brown, Fourth Army, Chicago, Ill., defeated Eddie Kopp, Fifth Army, Honolulu.
- Lightweight — Charles Harding, Second Army, Richmond, Ga., defeated Ode Mack, Fourth Army, St. Louis.

The timing was done at the Big Dipper Ski jump, the highest of the Big Dipper Ski jump, the highest of the Big Dipper Ski jump, the highest of the Big Dipper Ski jump.

and then in the Third army tourney at the Atlanta General depot, Ga., Oct. 2-5.

Table tennis is who are selected after the post tournament. The winners of the tourney will represent Fort Benning in the Third army tourney slated for Oct. 24-28 at Oliver General hospital in Augusta, Ga.

The winners of the second half in the post intramural bowling league which will finish play March 2, will play the winners of the first half and a composite team will be chosen at that time to represent Benning in the Third army tourney at Fort Bragg March 13-16.

Regiment Slates Volleyball Meet

The 15th Infantry regimental double-elimination volleyball tournament will be held in the first court area, Feb. 23-24, Captain Rufus F. Sautler, regimental athletic officer, said this week.

Five games will be played the first day and five the second in the two-day schedule. Afternoon games are scheduled for 2 p.m., 3 p.m., and 4 p.m., and night games will be contested at 7 p.m., and 8 p.m. A playoff game, if necessary, will be played at 9 p.m.

The six teams entered in the tourney will be the winners and runners-up of the Second battalion, the Third battalion and the Provisional battalion of the 15th Infantry regiment.

The rules for the tourney will be taken from the Official United States Volleyball association rule book. Each match will include three games. The winner will be the team which takes two out of the three contests played.

Any team that fails to appear within 10 minutes after the appointed time of play will forfeit the match.

Battalion Cagers Garner Split on Two-Tilt Outing

Third battalion cagers of the 15th Infantry regiment won one game and lost another in two games played last week.

The loss, a 48-31 set-back at the hands of the Georgia Baptist college Lions of Macon, Ga., was the first suffered by the battalion hoopers this season. The win, a 53-27 victory over the Boys' club Aces in the Industrial league at the Ninth street YMCA last Tuesday, was the seventh straight for the infantry basketball team.

The collegians jumped into the lead in the game at Macon, Ga., and were in danger only once during the play. That was in the first half when the soldiers knicked the count at 13-13 and basket for the next few minutes. The college boys drew ahead to finish 23-18 at the half. The Georgians drew ahead steadily in the second period and finished going away on the long end of a 48-31 score.

Leonard Person paced the winners with 20 points, while Wilmoth Baker led the losers with 10 markers.

The win over the Boys' club Aces marked the fifth win against no losses in league play for the Third battalion cagers. The 15th hoopers led from the beginning, were ahead 32-27 at the half, and swept through the second half, finishing with a 53-24 total.

The accurate shooting of Leon Smith accounted for 18 points of the regimental team, with Wilmoth Baker hitting for another 16.

Tommie Jackson of the Aces scored 14 points, while his teammate, Bill Jones, contributed 13.

Medics Complete Amphibious Drills

The 651st Medical Ambulance company of the 32nd Medical battalion recently completed a rigorous course of amphibious training at the United States Naval base, Little Creek, Va., in preparation for exercise "Porter."

Results of their training, supervised by Cmdr. Alex N. Chofin, were so outstanding that each member of the company has been awarded a certificate of achievement. The ceremony was conducted by Lt. Charles A. Harris.

Imps Trim Doughs For Cage Laurels

Fort Jackson, S. C., kept its Third army basketball championship crown by defeating Fort Benning, 47-36, in the play-off game of the double-elimination tournament held at Fort Benning's Fieldhouse gymnasium last week.

Fort Jackson will represent the Third army in the army-wide tournament which will be held March 6-12 at the Military District of Washington.

The South Carolinians jumped into the first half on a basket by Del Cearley, the Red Devil's six-foot eight-inch center. He added another two-pointer a few seconds later before Benning could sink two baskets of their own. The Red Devils led Cearley for the rest of the first half which ended with the score of 21-13 in Jackson's favor. Cearley made 19 out of that total.

The second half started on a six-foot shot by Cearley, Cherokee Smith threw two shots from the keyhole for four badly needed Benning points, Julian Phillips of Jackson and Jack Mixe-don of Benning traded baskets and Vernon Griffin picked up a couple of points on a side shot. With eight minutes remaining in the game the score read 27-27. Fort Jackson drew ahead steadily to end the game 47-36.

Del Cearley was high man for the winners with 25 markers, while Griffin paced the losers with 11.

Oliver General hospital, Ga., defeated Camp Gordon, Ga., 50-42, in the first game of the week-long tourney at Camp Gordon, Ga., on Monday, Feb. 13. Fort McPherson, Ga., took the measure of the Atlanta General hospital, 50-36, and Fort Jackson pinned the first loss on Fort Bragg, N. C., 54-35.

In Tuesday's games, Fort Benning topped Oliver General hospital 47-37, and Camp Gordon romped to an easy win over Atlanta General depot, 66-48. In the first game of the week-long tourney at Camp Gordon, Ga., Fort Jackson slaughtered Fort McPherson, 66-41.

Fort Bragg defeated Oliver General hospital, 62-35, in the first of Wednesday's contests. In

ARC Announces Service Budget

Washington (APPS)—The Red Cross has announced a budget of $17,637,400 for services of the armed forces for the fiscal year 1950-51.

General George C. Marshall, former army chief of staff, and president of the American National Red Cross, advises that the organization's program for military personnel is one of its top-ranking responsibilities. He said it requires more funds than any other single Red Cross activity—22 per cent of the total budget.

General Marshall had previously announced a $67 million goal for the Red-Cross campaign that starts in March. This amount plus $12 million in surplus funds on hand, makes up the total budget of $79 million for the nationwide annual campaign.

Scenes Of Fieldhouse Cage Meet

Action Highlights of the Third Army Cage Tourney at Benning

A moment after the photo (top left) was taken Fort Bragg's Bob Arnold (with ball) whirled into the air and dunked a two-pointer to aid Bragg's score in their first game with Fort Jackson which the Red Devils won 54-53. George Sage (4), Rudy Paynich (behind Sage) and Del Cearley (facing camera) try to thwart the attempt. Louis Sanford (right foreground) and Ed Downing (behind Sanford) watch the play. In the photo (top right) Julian Phillips (11) and Ed Downing (12) jump for the ball in one of the exciting plays that marked the second meeting of the two teams. Fort Jackson won the game and eliminated Bragg from the tourney 50-42. Rudy Paynich (8) and Bob Arnold (behind Downing) wait for the ball. Harold Siebert (foreground, left center photo) is knocked down during a struggle for the ball that Darrell Taylor (center background) and Charles Smith (right background) are competing for. Camp Gordon's Linwood Gentry (center background) and Charles Smith (4) waits for Kiefer to come by him. Saburo Yamaguchi (left background) comes in on the play. Camp Gordon won 66-48. In the right center photo, Bill Harper (on floor) and Corbin Davis (stop Harper) make the basketball game look like a wrestling match in their struggle for the ball (out of picture) in the Fort Benning-Oliver General Hospital game that the Doughboys won 44-39. David Sims (5) and Joseph E. Brown (4) look for the oval, while an unidentified player tugs at Harper's foot. Jack Maxtedon is seen in right background. Larry Brown (98) bottom left photo, tries in vain to deflect the shot of Julian Phillips. In the final game between Fort Benning and Fort Jackson, Del Cearley (12) gets set to catch the rebound. Bottom center photo, Corbin Davis (behind Cearley) and Edgar Echols (94) watch the ball. Bottom right photo, jumps a little too high for the ball that Darrell Taylor (center background) and Charles Smith (right background) are competing for. Ed Downing (12) turned to the basket in a moment later and tipped in the ball for another two points for Bragg. An unidentified player (between Arnold and Sims) gets his hand into the fray.

VIPs' Letters Cite Conference Value

Seventy top-notch civilians who visited Fort Benning as members of the fifth joint orientation conference last November have written letters of appreciation to Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson. These letters were photostated and bound into a book which was received by the Infantry Center this week.

Members who visited the Infantry Center, Edlin Air Force base and naval installations at Norfolk, Va., were agreed on the following:

1. Each saw the necessity for unification and each believed it was working.
2. For the first time, many at last realized where their tax dollars were going.
3. Most were impressed with the high calibre enlisted men, NCOs and junior officers found at Benning.

In sending the symposium of letters to the Infantry Center, Secretary Johnson sent his "sincerest thanks for the indispensable part you played in presenting to the people representative Americans a true picture of our national defense."

Following are extracts from the letters which will be of interest to all enlisted men and officers who were connected with the demonstrations in any way:

"It is too bad that every American cannot see the picture you showed us. The conference helped me understand your objectives and I have returned home an enthusiastic supporter of the defense program. . . . Everywhere we went we were given thoughtful and courteous attention and every effort was made to tell us the true story of the unified program."—Don Anderson, publisher, The Wisconsin State Journal.

"It was the most comprehensive, instructive and enjoyable experience of this character in which I have participated. . . . Mention should be made of the precision with which the program was executed and the effective instruction received in every address and demonstration. . . . The Junior officers and non-commissioned officers who conducted many of the demonstrations are to be especially commended."—John N. Andrews, personal representative of the administrator, Veterans Administration.

"The comprehensive picture of the administration and the strong leadership in the service left me with a feeling of security which I wish every American could share."—Ellis C. Baum, vice president, Continental Baking Company.

"I left with the distinct impression that unification is necessary, is working, and under your leadership we will have far better security for this nation than ever before in peacetime and at a minimum cost."—Larry Bell, president, Bell Aircraft Corporation.

"The type and performance of the physical weapons shown were most impressive. The presentations, demonstrations and lectures at each base were handled in the most efficient manner. However, the greatest impression I gained throughout the whole conference were related to the high level of character, intelligence and ability of the men who are doing not only the thinking and the planning but who are carrying out the plans in the field. This is true not only of the officers, the non-commissioned officers but also of the enlisted personnel."—Irving T. Bennett, vice president, Reverse Copper and Brass, Inc.

"At all four installations, the experiences that were given us ran well ahead of even the high expectations which I had formed in advance. . . . I for one have a far clearer understanding than did before of its problems, not only in the military and operation sense but also in its relations to the economic problems of a fiscal and industrial nature."—William A. Berridge, economist, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

"The adaptability in timing and the intelligence with which our questions were answered spoke highly of the basic strength of the military establishment. . . . Anything that you can do to further the intense spirit and loyalty and intelligent appraisal of our defense programs that our group found prevalent among junior officers would seem to me to be clearly desirable. For sheer impact, the B-36 was tremendous, but on a smaller scale the recoilless gun seemed to appeal to the members of our group."—Charles A. Bliss, professor of business administration, Harvard University.

"In my work I am acquainted with the executives, senior and junior, of many corporations. I am neither a scientist nor do I have technical training. Hence, I was most interested in observing the calibre of the senior and junior officers, as well as the non-coms and enlisted men. I talked with many. My opinion was backed by observations of many others is that nearly all are as capable or more capable than I am."—William H. Burnham, F. S. Smithers and company.

"I am not being frivolous when I say that in my opinion people would literally pay admission to see demonstrations such as we saw. . . . The one thing that impressed me more than anything else, was the quality of military personnel at all levels and the evidence that instruction and training were of the very highest quality."—Frederic W. Collins, Washington correspondent, The Providence Journal and The Evening Bulletin.

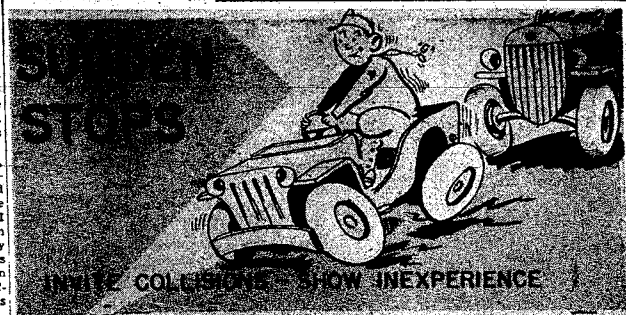

"It was an experience that I never hope to equal during the remainder of my life-time."—David Doane, Doane and Furey (attorneys).

"This is one of the most fantastic, educational and interesting experiences I have ever had in my whole lifetime."—F. D. Duke, vice president, Day, Duke and Tarleton (advertisers).

"We were also impressed with the fact. . . that a great deal of responsibility was being given to the non-commissioned officers who were able and intelligent and sufficiently so to meet that responsibility and accomplish results desired."—Exall English.

"One of the best features of your plan is your willingness to let your guests talk to anyone of whatever rank, as they may encounter them. It is a good service that can stand the test, and the results can be very gratifying to you."—Edwin B. George, Dan and Bradstreet, Inc.

"As an educator, I was very much impressed by the actual demonstration of a sound, though often neglected, pedagogical principle that the student learns more than usually well by teaching or lecturing himself. . . . This appears to be a very sound policy. It was in evidence particularly at Fort Benning where it was commented upon frequently and favorably."—P. E. Henke, dean of faculty, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

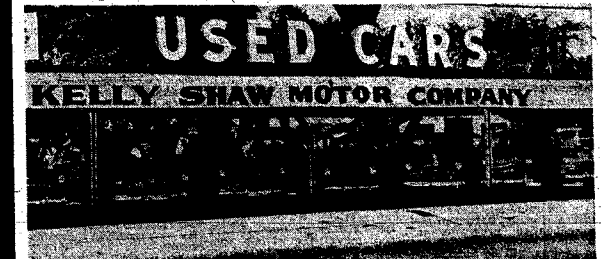

The Black-Eyed Pea Phase

(With apologies to Ovid Nash)
 It was in a Georgia pesty, existed in a shady dell.
 A sow with mantrifith and six piglets used to dwell.
 She was slender, she was hopeful, she was razor-backed and wild,
 And her children who were hungry were the opposite of mild.
 Their trough was really barren, as in days gone by quite "chucked,"
 But the boss had sold their swens to the army so they were trucked.
 To a large and sprawling army camp where many mess men clucked:
 "Some food we feed is awful, like a bunch of mushy figs,
 But this brainform here for testing was stolen from the pigs."
 Yet no Bradley or MacArthur or a dozen more we could name,
 Were reared on army cooking and mushroomed into fame.
 Well, also in the army there's a thing which most call taste,
 The very simple element which began the word called waste.
 So as the early morning rosebud is set upon by bees,
 Let's carry out tradition, but damn those black-eyed peas.

Four Are Cited At Unit Parade

An award ceremony for three enlisted men and one warrant officer of the 15th Infantry Regiment was held at Stillwell field last Friday with units of the Second Battalion commanded by Lt. Col. Philip S. Greene, participating.

The reviewing officer, Col. Dennis H. Moore, commander of the Third Infantry division (rear elements), presented three Bronze Star medals and one Third Army certificate of achievement to the four men. A music was provided by the 2nd Army band.

In recognition of outstanding wartime service, Bronze Star medals were awarded to Cpl. William C. Foll, Headquarters Company, Second Battalion, who served in the China-Burma-India theater of operations; Cpl. Clyde N. Lawrence, Headquarters Company, Third Battalion, who served in the Mediterranean theater, and Pvt. Simon Maestas, Service Company, Second Battalion, European theater.

The certificate of achievement, signed by Lt. Gen. C. G. Glenn, Jr., Third Army commander, was presented to WOJG John K. Moore, Medical Company, 15th Infantry Regiment.

VISITOR . . . Brig. N. A. K. Raza, Pakistan military attache to Washington, D. C., chats with Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, during a brief visit here this week. Brigadier Raza, who commanded cavalry troops in India for several years during World War II, is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, England. During his visit to Fort Benning, the 40-year old allied officer toured the Infantry School's Airborne, Automotive and Communications departments, and witnessed several school demonstrations and training exercises. He left yesterday for the Air university at Maxwell airbase, Ala., to see training facilities there. Early next week, he will visit the Command and General Staff college, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

College to Open Service Schools For FECOM GIs

By Armed Forces Press Service
The University of California, in cooperation with the U. S. Far East command, will open fifteen emergency extension centers during February for military and civilian personnel within the command. The program, approved by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander in chief, FEC, was arranged by Dr. Boyd B. Rakestraw of the university and representatives of army, navy and air force education programs in FEC. The centers will be located in Okinawa, Guam, the Philippines, and throughout Japan. Subjects offered will include those provided as electives for an Associate of Arts degree in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences at the University of California. The work offered will be the same as resident instruction on the University of California campus, and not merely an equivalent program. The primary purpose of the instruction is to provide an opportunity for obtaining two years of resident university credit which may be applied toward a degree. The term for each resident class will be eight weeks, will include 48 hours of classroom attendance, and will carry three semester hours of credit. There will be a one-week intermission between each term. Faculty members necessary to staff the centers will be provided by the university. They will be rotated among the centers at the end of each term. Military personnel, who are eligible for GI school benefits, may avail themselves of all extension courses under the GI Bill.

Colonel Praises Regiment After Command Inspection

"In the past three years of service at Fort Benning, this unit is in as fine a shape today as I have ever seen it," said Col. Dennis M. Moore to the commander and officers of the Third Infantry Battalion. The colonel, after a four-hour command inspection of this organization last Saturday. Colonel Moore, commander of the 15th Infantry regiment, began his inspection at approximately 9 a. m. at the unit's headquarters. From there he joined Col. William J. McCaffrey, battalion commander, and his staff in a detailed inspection, which included administration,

Check Mailing Set For Ex-Prisoners

Persons who were World War II prisoners of the Japanese or Germans can cash in on an $80 million jackpot—if they apply for compensation before March 1. The War Claims Commission, which recently passed a bill providing $1 for each day an American serviceman or civilian spent in a Jap or German war camp, will begin mailing out the checks around March 1. Although about 75,000 applications for the post-war pay-off have been received by the claims commission, it is expected that another 50,000 or more former prisoners will apply for the cash compensation. Described as an unusual dividend move, the claims commission made the law in 1948 after establishing that food and living conditions in war camps were so abysmal that the quality of life established by the Geneva Convention of 1929. Prisoners of other countries are ineligible for remuneration at this time, claims officials said. There is likelihood, unofficial sources say, that another dividend will be created for prisoners of other countries. The new money flood is expected to begin as the big insurance dividend payoff is finished. As claims officials see it now, the checks will range in size from about $67 to $1,400, that to which a man who virtually spent the entire war behind enemy bars is entitled. The money, which is not a proprietary by congress, will be derived from enemy assets seized during the war. It is known that a considerable amount will remain after the initial disbursement, thereby creating grounds for a second pay for prisoners of other countries. On the same side of the ledger are provisions for dependent survivors of military personnel who died in enemy hands. The bill states that

Tankers Awarded Career Promotions

Advancements in grade were awarded this week to 38 Fort Benning noncommissioned officers who attained proficiencies in armored cavalry career field examinations held here late last year. The promotions included four sergeants first class to master sergeant, 19 sergeants to sergeant first class and 19 corporals to sergeant. The four boosts to master sergeant level in the military occupational specialty of 1795 (tank leader), went to Sgts. 1st Cl. Norman C. Phair, James E. Foster, D. B. Cowart and Herbert Bailey, all of Company C, Infantry School detachment. Advancements to sergeant first class as tank leaders went to

Medical Outfit Assigned Here

The last contingent of the 42nd Medical Collecting company arrived late last week from Fort Jackson, S. C., for assignment to Fort Benning. The unit, which was activated over four years ago, has been attached to the 52nd Medical Battalion here. Rated as a crack medical unit, the company consists of four officers and 96 enlisted men, commanded by 1st Lt. James A. Shuckelord. Their mission here will be further training in advanced phases of medicine and transportation of the sick and wounded. To familiarize the company with Fort Benning, a bus tour has been arranged by the S-3 section of the 52nd Medical battalion.

Twenty new Department of the Army field manuals, prepared, written and edited by the Infantry School, will be available at the book department by mid-spring, it has been announced by Infantry Center officials.

Mrs. Hitch Sets Lecture at Post Auxiliary Meet

The Red Cross Ladies Auxiliary will meet at the Red Cross recreation hall in Columbus Tuesday, March 7, at 9:30 a. m. It was announced this week. Mrs. Mildred Shelton Hitch, assistant director of personnel service for the southeastern area, will be the principal speaker. She will outline the fundamental philosophy, history, structure and program of the Red Cross and will acquaint members of the Fort Benning auxiliary with the scope, purpose and aims of the Red Cross volunteer service, including staff aid, Grey Ladies, motor corps, arts and skills, carnival, nursing and social welfare services. The Columbus Red Cross chapter emphasized the importance of attendance, since the orientation program which Mrs. Hitch will outline is a prerequisite to on-the-job training currently being undertaken by members of the Fort Benning auxiliary. Mrs. Hitch has been director of staff training for the area since July, 1946, earlier holding this position in New York City for years for the organization's North Atlantic area. A native Georgian, her background of Red Cross experience was gained mostly in the South. She first was associated with the organization as a volunteer in the Savannah, Ga., chapter. Later, joining the Red Cross national staff, Mrs. Hitch was assigned as general secretary of that chapter for two years. Her Red Cross record also includes administration and case work on a number of major disasters, among them the Gainesville, Fla., tornado in 1936 and the Ohio-Mississippi valley floods in 1937. Named Assistant Tutors—ANNAPOLIS (AFPS)—Ben Martin, end coach of the 1949 Navy football team, and Frank Foster, coach of the Navy football varsity squad, have been appointed assistant coaches on the Annapolis football staff.

Reserved Parking Policy Established

Due to the parking bottle-neck often created by spaces marked with "reserved and no parking" signs but, which in many instances are left vacant for long periods of time, a new vehicle parking policy has been put into effect. The new policy prohibits the reservation of any parking space for individuals by name, but spaces may be reserved by title for such individuals as separate battalion, regimental or higher unit commanders. Major organizational commanders will be limited to the minimum number of parking spaces for official vehicles, according to the regulation, but they will be so arranged as to provide proper passage and safety for moving vehicles, including fire-fighting apparatus. Parking will be limited to two hours from Monday through Saturday noon in the vicinity of actives serving the public, included in this category are the parking areas at the Post Office, finance office, bank, post exchange office, provost marshal's office, commissary and cafeteria. The Infantry Center engineer has been charged with the responsibility of supervising the construction of signs to be placed in reserved or restricted areas. All signs and markings in conflict with the new policy will be removed without delay, Infantry Center officials said. It was also pointed out that the circular driveway in front ofillery battalion was recently limited to official cars and short-period visitors.

QUESTION: WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE ARMY SPORTS PROGRAM?
SGT. KENNETH SMITH, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3340th Area Service unit, thinks the sports program is good. It keeps GIs occupied and also keeps them in good physical condition. The army ought to try and spread more interest in the sports program, and get too old for strenuous sports, but I like to see the young fellows indulge in their physical condition. PVT. ADDRIAN SIVINOSKI, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 340th Area Service unit; I think it is very good. Lots of sports are available down here and there are lots of places to go to enjoy them in off duty hours. I really enjoyed the baseball tournament down here last fall. I think Benning goes all out for sports.

PFC CHARLES R. WARNER, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit; It is the most enjoyable building factor in the army to me as far as young soldiers are concerned. I was too small in civilian life to play many sports, but since I have been in the army I have had a good chance. I think we have the best facilities for sports of any post in the army.

PFC JOSEPH CHRISTINO, Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit; I think it is a great morale builder. Most of the men are young and have more energy to spend on sports. Sometimes a fellow is sort of quiet and doesn't have many friends, and then he gets interested in sports and it helps him.

PVT HARRY ASHENFELTER, Company C, 78th Engineer Combat battalion; We haven't any sports out in Harmony church because we are not organized. We have a day room and anything we can set up ourselves is all right, but no other sports. It is too far to come to the main post. If we could get the drill field fixed up it would make a good football field. SGT. MALCOLM H. WHEATON, 10th company, Student training regiment; We don't have much time for sports. We ought to have Wednesday afternoon off or at least a designated time off for sports. I think the sports program is all right, but we just don't have time for it.

Money Requested For 'Old Soldiers'

The army asked congress last week for enough money to keep training 800 of its oldest type soldiers—pigeons. Regardless of what the marvels of science has created to make warfare easier, army officials declared that pigeons can wing their way into places where other forms of communications are impractical. Advocates for retaining the bird also said that they serve as excellent substitutes during engine tests. This is one case where the army hopes to get the bird.

Duties Assigned By Detachment

Duty assignments for six men of the Infantry School detachment have been announced.

Pvt. Roger J. McCormack, detachment headquarters, has been placed on detached service with Company A for duty as a headquarters message center clerk.

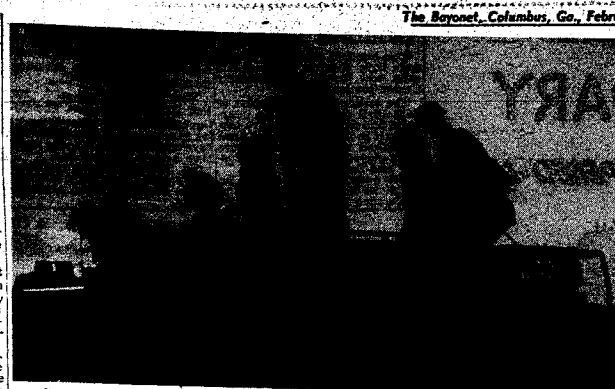

Pvt. Rene G. Vaudry, formerly with detachment headquarters, has been transferred to Company A for duty with the Range detachment.

Pvt. Ralph Dixon, detachment headquarters, has been placed on detached service with Company A for duty as headquarters chaplain's assistant. He was formerly with Company G, 15th Infantry regiment.

Cpls. James M. Dugan and Leroy Harvey, Company B, have been assigned duty with the Automotive department. Corporal Dugan was formerly assigned to detachment headquarters.

Corporal Harvey was transferred to the detachment from Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, 3440th Area Service unit.

Sgt. 1st Cl. Elmer Roberts, Company B, Airborne battalion, has been assigned to the Communications department for duty with the infantry radio repair group. He formerly worked in the Airborne department.

"WOMENFOLK" SEE 999TH ARMORED FIELD ARTILLERY BATTALION IN "RAW" They Passed Approval On Training And Living Conditions of Husbands' Unit

Artillery Unit Opens Doors To Families Of Personnel

If you were anywhere near the 999th Armored Field Artillery battalion's area last week, you weren't the only one who was slightly surprised when housewives and children were seen cruising along in tanks.

It's a slightly different twist, but the 99th has decided to open its operations doors periodically to the families of its personnel.

Last week, under the supervision of the unit's commanding officer, Lt. Col. H. W. Browning, and his senior officers, families of the outfit attended the first of a series of "open house" days that will permit persons to see how the unit trains, lives and plays.

During the afternoon, the women and children witnessed a firepower demonstration of all armored artillery weapons. They might have been some flinching and squinting as the big guns went off, but the women said they loved it.

Unit officials explained to the guests the various operations of fire control centers, the purposes of different ammunition and combat maneuvers of the armored unit.

But training wasn't enough for the inquisitive housewives. An impromptu tour of barracks and mess halls was arranged for the visiting "critics." In the dining halls, cooking methods and kitchen equipment were given a thorough inspection.

They also witnessed the official presentation of a certificate of achievement to Sgt. 1st Cl. Floyd T. Canady, dining steward for Battery B of the battalion.

Mechanic Class Shifted to Post

The auto mechanics course for enlisted men, formerly conducted at Fort Jackson, S. C., is scheduled to shift to Fort Benning beginning April 10, according to an announcement last week from Army headquarters.

Each class will be of nine weeks' duration, with reporting dates for the remainder of the calendar year set for April 7, June 8, Aug. 11 and Oct. 13. Enrollment for each class will be limited to 50 students.

The course is designed to train selected enlisted men in all phases of military motor vehicle maintenance and to provide them with a background of driving, training methods and maintenance and operation under unusual conditions.

Two other courses, now taught at Fort Jackson, are scheduled to be transferred to Fort Knox, Ky., due to the June 30 closing date of the South Carolina post. They are the common specialist and sergeant courses. Both courses, which last eight weeks, will open at Fort Knox March 3.

Ex-Cavalryman Now Supervises TIS Committee

Now chairman of an instructional committee in the Infantry School's Tactical department is a former cavalryman who became an infantryman while serving in the Pacific theater in World War II.

Lt. Col. Bruce Palmer Jr., who recently became head of C Committee (quasi and platoon tactics) in the Attack group transferred to the infantry while serving as chief of staff of the Sixth Infantry division in New Guinea. In his present assignment, Colonel Palmer replaces Lt. Col. Stanley N. Lanning, who is now attending the Armed Forces Staff college, Norfolk, Va.

Colonel Palmer served with cavalry units for six years after graduating from the U. S. Military academy, West Point, N. Y., in 1936. He graduated from the Cavalry School in 1938, a course in 1940, and became a squadron commander in the mechanized Sixth Cavalry regiment in 1942. Ordered to the newly formed Operations division of the War Department general staff, he spent nearly two years in this Pentagon assignment, including four months on observer duty in the North African theater.

In January, 1944, Colonel Palmer joined the Sixth Infantry division in Hawaii as chief of the division staff. He held this assignment through the New Guinea and Philippines campaigns and the occupation of Korea. Later, he commanded the division's 6th Infantry regiment for one year. He returned to the U. S. in 1946, and served in the G-3 section of Headquarters, First Army, at Governor's Island, N. Y., until May, 1949. Commanded the 1st Cavalry Group in the Defense Group in September.

Individual plaques went to Sgt. Corbilia Anderson of Company L, who had the "best squad," and January 1945, to July 1947. He has been awarded the Silver Star, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star, "best vehicle" over the four-Air medal and Army Commendation ribbon.

District P-TA Meeting Set For Benning

Representatives of 53 Parent-Teacher associations from 12 Georgia counties are expected to attend the Fifth P-TA district's spring conference which opens at Fort Benning on March 14. Mrs. Albert C. Haley, general chairman of the post association, announced this week. Guest speaker for the conference will be Mrs. Ralph Hobbs of Columbia, Ga., state president of the organization. Registration for the session, which will be held in Building E-1 of the Infantry School's Automotive department, will be at 10 a.m. The actual conference is scheduled to get under way at 10:30 a.m. Following the conclusion of the meeting, expected about 1 p.m., the P-TA delegates will be served a cafeteria-style dinner. Cost of the luncheon, Mrs. Haley said, will be 75 cents. Army buses will be provided to take the meeting guests from Building E-1 to the luncheon at the Third Army Food Service School, and will be used afterwards to transport the visitors on a tour of the Infantry Center.

NEW UNIFORM TURNS HEAD OF PFC. JANE PHILLIPS, LEFT Sgt. Baxter M. Cupp Struts in Test Dress Coat

Testers Like New Togs

Uniform Gripe: Not Issued to All

There seems to be only one thing lacking in the new uniform that's being tested by 400 Infantry Center personnel: it's not being issued to everybody! A survey by this reporter this week shows that without exception, the new "Ike"-styled jacket and the hip-length blouse are being accepted by the "guinea pigs" on every count.

THE NEW JACKET, WHICH is being tested for comfort, durability and appearance by a select group of enlisted men and officers, is said to be an improvement over the present "Ike" jacket. Officials of Army Field Forces board No. 3, who are conducting the test, said that the new uniforms, retaining the traditional olive drab color but increasing wearability with additional material through the back and shoulders, have been designed with the soldier in mind. They said the present jacket was built primarily for comfort. "Taking six of the 'guinea pigs' as a fair cross-section to find the answer, it was learned that both new clothing items are 'wonderful,'" Robert Maddox, Military Police detachment, gave his approval when he said, "These new things (the jacket and blouse) are certainly the last word in comfort and looks for the GI. It was always a strain to work in the Ike jacket, and I used to take it off. But now, it's a pleasure. It too army show have an Ike jacket for duty coats and the long blouse..." Jews Announce Passover Rites

Religious services for Jewish personnel in the observance of Passover Holy Days, which begin at sunset April 8 and end at sunset April 9, were announced this week. The first two days and last two days will be observed with special services in synagogues and homes. There will be no services held in the Infantry Center chapel, but all Jewish personnel and their families have been invited to attend services at Columbus' Shearith Israel synagogue on Seventh street and Temple Israel at 318 Tenth street. Services will be held there at 7:30 p. m. April 1 and 8:30 a. m. April 2. The services for the last two days will be announced at a later date. Jewish military personnel may be granted 72-hour passes for the purpose of attending Passover services. Infantry Center officials said.

Seaborne Third Caribbean Bound

A seaborne invasion force, including 15,000 soldiers of the Third Infantry division, has sailed from Norfolk, Va., with the small Aggressor-held island of Vieques in the Caribbean as its objective in a large-scale airborne-amphibious maneuver. The convoy left under the protection of navy-land and carrier-based aircraft after the participating ground troops had completed an extensive course in amphibious tactics in the vicinity of the Norfolk Naval Training station. Third member of the joint invasion task force team for the portrex exercise, the U. S. Tactical aircraft, including fighter, bomber, troop carrier and reconnaissance aircraft, has already moved to Puerto Rico and will provide tactical air support as well as drop a battalion combat team from the 82nd Airborne division into the usual area. Lt. Col. William H. Fechteler, commander-in-chief, Atlantic fleet, maneuver commander, has ordered that Fortez becomes operative with the departure of the...

ARC Auxiliary To Meet Here

The meeting of the Red Cross Ladies' auxiliary, originally reported to be held at the Red Cross recreation hall in Columbus, will convene at Fort Benning recreation hall, according to an announcement made by Red Cross officials this week.

Featuring an address by Mrs. Mildred Shelton Hitch, the meeting will take place Tuesday, March 7, at 9:30 a.m. Because of the importance of the meeting, all Ladies' auxiliary members are urged to attend. Red Cross officials pointed out.

Derby Movie To Be Shown

"Assignment Soap Box Derby," a sound and color movie highlighting the 1949 annual Soap Box Derby finals held on Friday, March 3, at 7 p. m. in the auditorium of the Fort Benning Children's school, it was announced this week.

Boy Scouts, as well as all other Fort Benning youngsters between 11 and 15 years of age, are invited to attend the film showing as guests of The Columbus Ledger - Enquirer, sponsors of the regional Soap Box Derby contest.

A booklet of instructions on how to build a soap box racer will be given to every boy attending the movie, and L. A. Updegraff, promotion manager of the Ledger-Enquirer, will try to explain the 1950 rule book as well as to answer questions about the 1950 soap box classic. Permission to use Dixie road, near Lawson Airforce base, as a practice site for potential derby entries from Benning has been granted by Infantry Center officials.

To Be Occupied Late Next Week

Sixteen Fort Benning non-commissioned officers and their families will be able to move into new apartments in the $300,000 housing project near the Student Training regiment area on March 10, Col. Marcus B. Bell, Infantry Center G-4, announced this week.

The new date of occupancy is five days earlier than the tentative readiness date set two weeks ago by the Williams Construction company of Columbus, contractors for the project.

The 16 units to be occupied on March 10 will be two of the 10 buildings comprising the project.

Others Open By April Colonel Bell said that he has been assured by officials of the Williams company that the remainder of the buildings will be completed before the end of the month. It was expected that families would be occupying all of the 80 apartments by April 1.

With the exception of a few minor adjustments to the heating plants of the first two structures to be completed, the buildings are ready to be turned over to the engineer for a final inspection, Colonel Bell said.

Work on the remaining buildings, the Infantry Center G-4, consists of a small amount of construction on six of the structures, and some painting on the other eight.

Only For NCOs The project, which was built with funds earmarked for NCO housing, will not be open to persons other than noncoms. The Infantry Center G-1 office has pointed-out.

Date of rank has been announced as the basis for assignment to the new quarters, and applications by persons who believe themselves eligible are being accepted at the Infantry Center Billing office.

Families who move into the new structures will have a two-story apartment. The upstairs portion of each unit will contain three bedrooms and a bathroom. Downstairs will include a living room, dining room and kitchen.

Other salient feature of the buildings are oak floors, central steam heating and plaster walls. The exterior of the units is stucco.

Campaign Planned For Safer Driving

A driving courtesy campaign, sponsored by the Infantry Center safety director and designed to instill courteous driving habits in every Fort Benning driver, will be conducted during March.

A traffic accident prevention program is being prosecuted with renewed vigor... because the substantial increase in the number of vehicles registered at Fort Benning in the corresponding increase in the number of cars operated in nearby areas will aggravate the traffic problem. Normal Evans, safety director, said this week.

The campaign is being launched with the distribution of two booklets, Emily Post's "Motor Manners" and the National Safety Council's "Safer Driving." These booklets will be used as the basis for a series of safety talks in Fort Benning units and will also be placed in day rooms. Plans are also being made for visual presentation of material at post theaters, and safety posters will be distributed for unit display. Listed by the safety director as the major causes of vehicular accidents are speeding, making turns from the wrong lane, improper overtaking and passing of vehicles, disregard of traffic signals and right of way and driving after drinking. "All of these bad driving habits," Mr. Evans said, "are basically discourteous, and demonstrate a lack of respect for the rights, lives and property of other motorists. They should be taken to inform vehicle drivers that greater courtesy will make driving more pleasant, and to that end this Fort Benning driving courtesy campaign is dedicated."

Post Officer Conquers Perilous African Peak

Fort Benning's record-setting mountaineer, Lt. William D. Hackett, established a new record for the perilous heights of Africa's two tallest-known peaks. It was learned this week...

Uniform

(Continued from Page 1) for off-duty—it's so much dressier. Lt. Col. John R. Wright, Infantry Center G-3 who is also testing the new items, has this to say: "This is definitely what the army needs. I'm absolutely speaking for the GI, who really needs at least one dress uniform. I think this is the answer. The comfort is amazing."

MY IDEA OF A NEW UNIFORM. Colonel Wright said, "I would like to have three distinct uniforms. First, there should be one styled expressly for training or work where dirt and filth may be involved—something similar to the present fatigue clothes. Second, there should be a semi-dress uniform for those who work in offices, stand guard or march in parades. This should be the Ike jacket. Third and last, there should be a dress uniform—a long coat, dressy enough for any formal occasion."

Nine Enlisted Men Advanced in Grade

Nine enlisted men of the Infantry School detachment were promoted from private to private first class recently, unit officials have announced. The group included Pvt. Thomas E. Bolen, Henry Emerson, Harlan H. Justice, Lorenzo D. (Bud) Murphy, Jr., Robert F. Orr, Norman D. Trainer and Henry H. Weidner. All of company B, and Roy S. Morichi of Company C.

"I think, by the results of this test, that the army will someday like it very much and I'm sure the other persons testing it do, too. That should be enough proof—it's perfect." Board officials stated, at the beginning of the survey, that results would only be grounds for further study and development of the uniform system. Possibilities of issuing the new model uniform are bright, it has been said, but immediate action is not foreseeable. Such a project, they said, would be governed by appropriation, time and convenience of issuance. Whatever action top quarter officials take, there's going to be plenty of men looking forward to new uniforms—their length days, especially.

Gen. Morris Commander

Navy construction battalions, supported by army and air force engineer squadrons, have provided the infrastructure normally present under war condition in an assault area to support the aggressor forces under General Morris' command. Ground forces of the Aggressor are under command of Brig. Gen. Edwin L. Sibert, commanding general, U. S. Army forces in the Antilles.

The Aggressor force will be composed of two battalions of the 65th Infantry regiment, normally stationed at Losey field, Puerto Rico, the First battalion, 33rd Infantry regiment, of Fort Kobbe, Panama Canal Zone, the 56th Field Artillery battalion, stationed at Fort Bundy, Puerto Rico, and the 98th Anti-aircraft Artillery battalion from Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico. These units will be augmented by numerous small detachments of specialist and service troops to round out a regimental combat team.

To harass invaders, Atlantic fleet submarines assigned to the Aggressor will harass the invasion convoy from the time it leaves Norfolk, while navy and marine aircraft will strike against the seaborne invading forces.

A staff of officers and enlisted personnel under the command of Admiral Focheler, and representing, in equal proportion, the Army, Navy and Air Force, has completed the complex planning involved in an exercise of this scope, the largest airborne amphibious exercise since the end of the war.

Similar organizations are directing the operations, training and logistics of both the Invasion and Defense (Aggressor) forces. In addition to the testing of new combat equipment and of Portrex is to train armed force personnel in the use of amphibious operations.

Group Set Up

To make certain that the maximum benefit of training is obtained, an organization known as the Umpire group has been formed under command of Gen. Leroy P. Hunt, commander, Atlantic. Matching the integrated service staff organization of the Army, Navy and Air Force, the Umpire group is composed of 1,800 army, navy and air force officers and enlisted personnel. Portrex marks the first time that the exercise has been represented on an umpire team.

The 1,800 umpires will observe every operation, from the planning and tactical phases through the completion of Portrex. In contact with both invasion and defense commanders, the umpires will also make certain that the Umpire group will assess the effectiveness of the work of both invasion and defense forces, and forward the findings to the joint chiefs of staff, where a study will be made for the purpose of adding current defense policies in line with experiences of the exercise.

Veiques Objective

Goal of General Hodge's Invasion force is the small Caribbean island of Veiques, some 20 miles long and six miles wide, located just off the coast of Puerto Rico. This island typifies the land mass held by the Aggressor and which threatens U. S. security.

Approximately 180 ships of the Atlantic fleet, under the Task Force command of Rear Admiral Gerald Wright, will carry the amphibious elements of the invasion forces to Veiques. Led by the USS Missouri, four aircraft carriers, three cruisers and aircraft destroyers, a naval striking and covering force will protect the invasion convoy from raiding "enemy" submarines and aircraft.

As the convoy nears the objective area, the 82nd Airborne division combat team will be loaded into Fairchild C-47 "Packets" of the 314th Troop Carrier group and prepare to join their amphibious partners of the Third Infantry division on the beaches of Veiques. This paratrooper battalion combat team will have been previously flown to San Juan, Puerto Rico, marking the first time that an airborne combat team has been flown so far over water in peacetime to make an airborne drop.

Expected Beach Assaults: On Veiques, infantry and armored troops of the Aggressor force will be entrenched in the center third of the island, in expectation of paratroop and assault.

The island will be used in the American Red Cross have established facilities on the island, and will provide their usual services to soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen.

Following the exercise, a schedule of visits to Caribbean and South American ports has been arranged by the secretary of defense, in coordination with the State department, so that troops participating in Portrex may visit one or more of the colorful ports in this area, prior to returning to their original duty stations.

British Visit Set By Gen. Burress

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, was on his way to England this week to tour military training facilities at the invitation of the British War Office.

General Burress, who will spend more than two weeks visiting on behalf of the War Office various military schools and training areas, was invited to the island country by Brig. Cecil Fitzhugh, commander of the British School of Infantry and visitor to Fort Benning in 1948. Accompanying General Burress on the trip will be Col. Charles W. Pence, Army Field Force board No. 3, Lt. Col. Benjamin U. Sargent, Infantry School Staff department and Capt. Jeffrey Smith, General Burress' aide-de-camp.

Post Library Busy Place

Reading is a more popular pastime at Fort Benning than at any other military installation in the Third Army area. At least, that's the trend indicated in a conference with librarians to the Third Army Special Services section. During the month covered by the report, 19,482 visits were made to Benning libraries, and 11,986 books were loaned to GIs here.

Lt. Olds Named Unit Commander

First Lt. Lonnie E. Olds, Jr., will assume command of the 666th Transportation Truck company this week, succeeding Capt. E. Turner, Jr., who has been ordered to the Far East command. Lieutenant Olds received his commission May 22, 1945, following graduation from the Officer Candidate School here.

SGT. 1ST. CL. F. H. FERGUSON MASTERS INFANTRY WEAPONS FOR DEMONSTRATION Soldier of The Week Taught Reservists Latest Changes

Sergeant Praised Highly For Role in Exhibit Tour

Thorough knowledge of infantry combat weapons and an interesting demonstration technique has resulted in a Soldier of the Week title for Sgt. 1st Cl. F. H. Ferguson, Company E, 15th Infantry regiment. Sergeant Ferguson, a veteran of 10 years' army service, recently went as a member of an Infantry Center demonstration team on a tour of Tennessee for the purpose of showing army reserves the fundamentals of new weapons. Although he had been inactive in demonstrating some of the weapons, Sergeant Ferguson studied pertinent new manuals diligently and aided in presenting very effective demonstrations.

In one instance, Sergeant Ferguson was called upon to demonstrate the new T-106 mortar. In Memphis, Tenn., standing before television cameras with the three other members of the team, he put the new heavy weapon into action in an unofficial record time of 15 seconds. Unit officials said his adroit handling of the problem in a matter of his interesting and informative manner, resulted in favorable comment from the reservist audience and said that Sergeant Ferguson is constantly called upon to clarify the Orangeburg, S. C., native, instructional problems arising in the members of the team for his exceptionally well-versed in the skillful demonstration methods, operation of all infantry weapons received comments from civilian and military guests during the week-long tour. In several cities, edge and in soldierly appearance. Sergeant Ferguson is married and lives in Columbus.

3rd Mentioned In Life Article
Fort Benning's Third Infantry division received national mention this week in a documentary defense analysis in the current issue of Life magazine. Pointing out the strength and shortcomings of American defense measures, Life said that our nation's 10 combat divisions—of which the Third is a part—are decidedly stronger than their World War II counterparts. Also included in the issue were veteran pictures taken by the Infantry Center. One, a large display of all infantry field weapons, and another showing the fighting equipment now on hand in case of war. The 75 mm recoilless rifle, mounted on jeep, and a new bazooka were in the other two pictures.

Union Pleads Not Guilty to Contempt of Court

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—The United Mine Workers' Union pleaded innocent this week to contempt of court charges. In the face of the Taft-Hartley injunction, the union claimed it had called no strike and that each of its 372,000 members had stopped work individually. President Truman has said he has no right to call government seizure of the mines and wants no such power. Philip Murray, boss of the CIO, has ousted four more of his affiliate unions on charges of communist infiltration. This raises the total to six Red labor groups gleamed from the ranks of the CIO.

The Civil Aeronautics Administration has announced that planes approaching the northeast coast of the U. S. must file pre-flight plans as a defense precaution. U. S. civil defense was discussed this week behind closed doors by administration officials and the joint Atomic Energy Commission. Margaret Smith, only woman member of the Senate, has urged defense planners to concentrate on training adequate civilian reserve troops. In a catch-all agriculture bill the Senate has voted to give government price protection to both cotton and wheat. The lowly Irish potato, which has proved to be of high value to Republicans, is to be under rigid quotas of support by subsidy next year. A proposal to end federal rent control by June 30 has been added to a Senate money bill up for approval soon. The President has urged renewal of rent controls to prevent a cut in consumer buying power. The House of Representatives is considering an outlay of $25,000,000 for the establishment of a national science foundation. A bitter dispute has arisen between the American Veterans Committee and the American Legion over proposals of the Hoover Commission to handle veterans' hospitalization under an overall government hospital system.

Air Force to Discontinue Grade of 1st. Sgt.

By Armed Forces Press Service
The Air Force will discontinue the grade of first sergeant, effective March 1. The title and duties of a first sergeant will be assumed by a designated senior noncommissioned officer in units having first sergeant position vacancies. He will wear the stripe of the grade he holds.

Operation of the Career Compensation Act will add $338,500,000 to the armed forces payroll during the present fiscal year.

The Military Police Board, Camp Gordon, Ga., is studying several new devices for the use of military police and other law enforcement agencies. One new gadget under consideration is a radar device which may be placed in the middle of a road to determine how fast an automobile is traveling.

The Army has formed tentative plans for publication and "limited distribution" of a promotion list showing the standing of all regular officers. Present plans are to publish the list about May 1, and to include it in the next edition of the Army Register.

The Army, in the future, will notify enlisted personnel of the top three grades on European duty what their next U. S. assignment will be, in order to assist them in making traveling and housing plans.

46th Psalm Is Expression of Security in God

By Chaplain Charles S. H. Hunter, Jr.
The 46th Psalm is an expression of absolute security in God in the midst of threatened destruction. This truth is illustrated in two ways: first, by a nature catastrophe whose description strongly suggests an earthquake or a tornado;

"God is our refuge and strength, A well attested help in trouble. Therefore we will not fear though the earth totter, And the mountains topple into the heart of the sea;

Though its waters roar and foam, Though the mountains quake at its uproar." One who has not experienced an earthquake or a storm cannot appreciate the security of which the Psalmist sings. And yet the most difficult time for one to have such a feeling of security is when he is in the midst of such an experience.

The disciples had many times recited this Psalm as part of their morning devotion. But when an actual storm caught them on the Galilean sea, they thought of everything else but this Psalm! A pastor had just begun a revival

To Amuse On The Bookshelf

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM BY VIRGINIA COWLES HARPER AND BROTHERS, PUBLISHERS

BY ALLEN L. MULLIKIN
In view of the returns in the national election, the British Labor party might hesitate to agree with Virginia Cowles' optimistic title. No Cause For Alarm, however, speaks eloquently of the stability of a great nation using all its powers to maintain its position as one of the leading democracies of the world.

Miss Cowles, a former reporter for a London daily and granddaughter of a peer, deals sympathetically, yet fairly, in her personal account of post-war England. As an American citizen the author preserves the detached view necessary in a factual account. Her personal associations with the English people serve only to make her informed as well as honest.

In a conversational style that resorts to statistics only when they are necessary to clear a point, Miss Cowles tells of the tradition-steeped, English version of democracy. The reader is transported from the land of Democrats and Republicans to the island of Conservatives and Laborites on the waves of laughter and jeers of an enthusiastic British public.

Through the eyes of a diligent reporter the reader follows the vagaries of a political system thoroughly democratic, yet very different from our own. By-elections to fill parliamentary seats vacated between national campaigns are explored by the author as a vote-canvasser. Her visits to the homes of voters reveal the parties as predilections of national trends. Miss Cowles then goes to the country village, where modern politicians must still struggle against the remnants of a feudal society. In her accounts of human interest in things political, Miss Cowles never fails to record the wit as well as the wisdom of her subject.

"Among the most valuable assets of No Cause For Alarm are the detailed word - portraits of the party leaders of England. Churchill is shown both on his statesman's pedestal and on his politician's earth. His brilliance and fire as an orator in the House of Commons do not overshadow his campaign tactics similar to his recent election bid as an international mediator. The power behind the meekness of Clement Attlee is shown in his methodical rise to leadership of the workers' party. Equally clear sketches are given of Bevin, Morrison, Eden and Bevan as well as less publicized figures of British politics.

Any discussion of post-war England would not be complete without thorough coverage of the nationalization program. Miss Cowles attacks this all important development only after grounding her reader in the policy of evolution rather than revolution that is traditionally British. She then inspects the social and economic situation that gave rise to the socialism of the Labor party. Viewing nationalization as the will of the British public, Miss Cowles believes the people will continue to support the program only so long as it seems to improve their county as a whole.

To aid in understanding present developments the author also records the growth of trade unionism in England which occasioned the rise of the present Labor party.

Entertaining as well as informative is considered a just appraisal by this reviewer of a book that is a valuable contribution to the reading public interested in the history of the present before it is warmed over for future generations.

Teacher: "What is a niche in a church?"

Bright Boy: "It's the same as one anywhere else, only you're not supposed to scratch an itch in church."

"I still act toward my wife just the way I did before we were married."

"Oh, yeah?"

"Yep, just the same. I remember when I was first courting her, I would lean over the fence in front of her house and gaze at her shadow on the curtain, too timid to go in."

"Yeah? Well?"

"Well, I still do the same thing!"

"How did Herbert manage to inherit so much of his uncle's estate?"

"He married the daughter of his uncle's lawyer."

Pvt: "No sir, not until you shouted the third time."

"I had an awful pain in my arms last night."

"Yeah, I saw her."

Benning Artist's Paintings Shown Locally, Nationally

By MAY FIGO
Bayonet Woman's Editor

To be a success you must usually start at the bottom of the ladder and work up, as Mrs. David Milotta will tell you. She is the wife of Maj. David Milotta, and is an artist well known for her paintings of sub-pollins.

However, Mrs. Milotta is justly proud of her two paintings which are currently being shown in local and national art shows. "The Harp and The Spell" is being exhibited at the Telfair academy, sponsored by the Association of Georgia Artists. Her other painting, "Christmas Eve" is in a national show sponsored by the St. Augustine Artist association, St. Augustine, Fla.

Mrs. Milotta said "The Harp and The Spell" is one of those pictures which can be interpreted by the person viewing it to mean several things, while "Christmas Eve" is a "simple little painting true to its name in the good old-fashioned way."

IN SPEAKING OF THE showings, she said, "I sent several to both places and had thought the judges would pick some of the others. However, I'm proud they picked any of mine". She smiled as she said, "I always thought the best way to get started on the road to recognition was to arrange a showing in New York and see if I had an opportunity to talk to some well known artists from New York who told me the best way to get my start was to arrange first for a local showing. From there you should go to a larger place, and finally New York which makes logic when you think about it."

Doris Jean Milotta is a small person, with dark hair and an alive, glowing face, especially when she talks about art.

She explained that all her life she had known she would be an artist and laughingly added, "My family was resigned to the fact that I would be a starving artist, so they prepared me to live in six months."

Washington college at Fredricksburg, Va., and received my B. S. in art education at Penn State. However, I didn't do so much painting while in college. It's really since I've been here that I've settled down and made some progress.

SHE SAID THAT DURING the war "I was in the recreation section of the Red Cross and set up the hobby shop at the Walter Reed convalescent hospital at Fort Detrick. Then after the war, I ran the model home at Woodward and Lothrop department store in Washington, D. C."

She eyed speculatively a half painting showing a house seen through a window with an arrangement of camellias on a table.

"Now, take that picture, for instance. It's good, but it needs something else to complete the kind of a drapery at the window will do it."

She continued, seriously, "I try to combine the new ideas in modern painting with the best in the old. I feel that design and color in modern art is good, but they aren't enough. You have to have a sense of design."

Mrs. Milotta explained that she uses only oils. "I'm happiest when I use a lot of it. I paint better. You get a very plastic and solid effect with oils that cannot be achieved with watercolor. I do most of my work with a palette knife."

She is looking forward to her local showing of paintings at the Christian Fellowship association in Columbus sometime in May. It will be her first one-man show.

Mrs. Milotta does not confine her art strictly to painting. Her home bears out the fact that she is an artist even in everyday living. She is at present conducting a class in interior decorating at the CFA.

Summing up her ideas about art, she said, "All things beautiful are not paintable. You have to select the things that will make successful paintings and then paint into them your interpretation."

She laughingly concluded, "To be an artist you have to sit down and paint. That is the hardest thing—you always see something that you would like to make a wonderful picture, but painting it is something else again."

Sgt. Charles D. Goodman and Pfc. Blake Caldwell returned to duty at Lawson Airforce base last week after successfully completing a 30-week course in photography at Lowery Airforce Base, Colo.

The course is designed to teach the overall functions of a photographic laboratory, as well as how to take pictures. Other features of the course are instruction in how to take aerial pictures and still shots.

Sergeant Goodman, a native of Columbus, enlisted six years ago, and served 11 months with the 40th Infantry division in the Pacific theater, where he was awarded two battle stars.

Pfc. Caldwell, a former University of California student, entered the service in September, 1948, and reported to Lawson January, 1949.

Ratings Awarded Detachment Group

Seven enlisted men of the Infantry School detachment were promoted last week. It was announced by Col Charles E. Woodruff, commander.

Promoted to corporal were former Pfc. Walter W. Baker, Benjamin H. Giland and Albert L. West, all of Company B, and Marian Tuttle, Company C.

Advanced to private first class were former Pvt. Charles L. Parsons, Company B, and Claude J. Dahlman, detachment headquarters now on detached service to Company A, and Robert O. Wylie, Company A.

Proper Shoeing of Men—One of Army's Headaches

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The developments to get better clothing. It has a research laboratory at Philadelphia working on textiles and clothing, and at Lawrence, Mass., a testing laboratory's most violent extremes, ranging from waxy 80-below-zero cold to a torrid 150 degrees.

The corps figures that a man in battle has two enemies—his foe, and his environment. The less time and energy he has to devote to his environment, the more time he has to fight his foe. The theory is to get the best of the nation's highways and byways. The band travels in a convoy of nine vehicles bringing military music to the towns and cities of the United States. A survey, it was found that the band traveling six to eight months of shoes of this size. The second most popular size was 9-D. Only 10 of the 100 examined wore the smallest size, 6-A, while there were 64 calls for the largest stock size, 12-E.

The Quartermaster corps issues 40 different sizes of pants. The most frequently called for were pants with a 30-inch waist measure and a 31-inch inseam. Size 7 field caps were the most issued field jacket size. The average GI, the survey showed, wears a shirt with a 14 1/2-inch collar and a 33-inch sleeve. Only one man out of the 100 required the largest size, a 17 1/2-inch collar and a 33-inch sleeve.

Post Appearance Set By Ground Forces Band

The Army Ground Forces band, known as the Kings of the Highways, will include Fort Benning's current national tour with a concert on Sunday afternoon, May 19, in the Briant Wells Fieldhouse.

The "Kings" took their nickname from their theme song, "Kings of the Highways" after proving their worth in 40 U.S. states and more than 200,000 miles of the nation's highways and byways. The band travels in a convoy of nine vehicles bringing military music to the towns and cities of the United States. A survey, it was found that the band traveling six to eight months of shoes of this size. The second most popular size was 9-D. Only 10 of the 100 examined wore the smallest size, 6-A, while there were 64 calls for the largest stock size, 12-E.

AVERAGE GIs WEAR 8-12-D SHOES. Of the 100,000 men in the army, it was found that 5,570 men required shoes of this size. The second most popular size was 9-D. Only 10 of the 100 examined wore the smallest size, 6-A, while there were 64 calls for the largest stock size, 12-E.

THE QUARTERMASTER CORPS, which supplies all the clothing, equipment and footwear for men and women in the army and airforce, is constantly employing the latest scientific methods to get better clothing.

Top Student Instructors Cite Ex-Navy CPO

The Third Army Food Service School's student of the week is a former navy chief petty officer, Sgt. Chester H. Blitch, who in his first army assignment with Headquarters and Headquarters company, 30th Infantry regiment, 2nd Army Division, earned veteran with 48 months of overseas service, wears nine battle stars won during his wartime naval service in both the European and Pacific theaters of operation.

After six and a half years as a chief commissary steward in the navy, and six years of civilian experience in the restaurant business, Sergeant Blitch still believes he can learn something new about food service. His enthusiasm for the training he has received as a member of mess steward's class No. 1 bears out this viewpoint, officials said.

"I think the course I have been taking is superior to any prior training I have had in the food service field," he stated, "and I believe that any individual who honestly wants to learn can certainly do so at this school."

Sergeant Blitch will graduate on March 4.

2 Food Courses Commence Here

Two Third Army Food Service School classes got under way in February, school officials have announced.

Opening ceremonies for student cooks' class No. 2 and student bakers' class No. 2, each of 12 weeks' duration, were held Feb. 20, with 47 fledgling food service enlisted men registered for the cooks' course and six for the bakers' course.

The student cooks' course stresses small quantity food preparation for the initial six weeks of the course, including academic training in principles and methods of army food procurement, distribution, preservation and preparation. The final six-week period emphasizes practical work in large scale (unit mess) food preparation, with students rotated through all cooking phases.

The bakers' course takes up small quantity baking during the first six-week period, with concurrent academic training in baking methods and principles. For the final six-week period, the class is divided into two groups. The first group spends three weeks undergoing practical training in the post bakery, while the second group is being trained in large scale pastry production in the school bakery. After completion of this three-week period, the groups are reversed.

Graduating date for both classes is scheduled for May 12.

In addition, officials said, that several vacancies exist in other military districts within the Third Army area for enlisted men of grade E-3, who are qualified as recruiters (MOS 3274).

Qualified enlisted men are encouraged to submit applications for the vacancies, according to the announcement. Officials warned applicants, however, to indicate more than one preference in the event the desired vacancy has been filled when their request for assignment is processed.

All persons applying for recruiting duty must have successfully completed the sales adaptability test and have been recommended for a recruiting assignment by the interview board.

Fort Benning personnel desiring such assignments must forward their applications through channels to Infantry Center headquarters.

Ties With Allies Are Emphasized In Military Policy

WASHINGTON (APPS)—Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson recently announced United States military policy as being shaped to the point where this country would "stand or fall collectively, with its allied nations."

In a full statement of national defense goals, the Defense Secretary declared that the United States is moving toward full military partnership with the "like-minded" nations of the North Atlantic Treaty and had accepted as never before in peacetime the security problems of partner nations.

Mr. Johnson said that the services were "perfectly aligned" with foreign policy and that a "constant cooperation" existed between the State Department and the Department of Defense in the role the United States will play in carrying out a mutual defense pact.

"We must rely on the best preparation we can devise during the precarious peace which exists today," Secretary Johnson said, "so that our armed forces would not be called upon suddenly to go into battle without proper training but would have the advantage of effective weapons and equipment and would be able to retaliate with rapidity and force."

In making the "second report of the Secretary of Defense," Mr. Johnson warned that this country could be attacked "from the opposite hemisphere without warning and with unpredictable fury."

He added: "In our search for security we face the fact that as a Democracy we do not fight until attacked. Therefore, in time of peace we can never be in a completely ready state for war. The only nations that can be completely ready are those that ally themselves in secret and strike without warning, planning to take their victims by surprise."

Mr. Johnson concluded by stating that United States leadership in the world "rests on moral as well as force and on military power as long as we shall need it."

THIRD ARMY CHIEF MAKES AWARD—Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third Army commander, last week presented the Third Army Certificate of Achievement to three veteran Infantry Center officers. In the left picture, General Gillem makes the presentation to Capt. Donald O'Rourke, commander of Company F, Airborne Battalion. Between the general and Captain O'Rourke is Lt. Col. Philip S. Green, commander of the 15th Infantry Regiment's second battalion, who was also awarded the certificate. In the right photo, Lt. William J. Clement, Jr., 15th Quartermaster Battalion, receives the award from General Gillem. Each of the officers was praised for his exceptional guidance program within the organization he commands. The citations commended the officers for the low delinquency rates within their organizations.

Field Artillery Unit Seen in Newsreel

The 99th Armored Field Artillery Battalion was the subject of a newsreel filmed recently by the All-American News company, which spent three days at Fort Benning photographing training activities of the battalion.

Events filmed included guns of Battery C, the battalion's communications and survey sections in operation during a field problem and Headquarters battery and the battalion staff eating in the field.

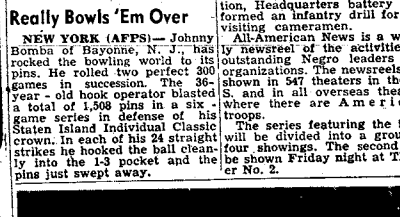

Batteries A and C and Service battery were photographed during their usual Saturday morning inspection in ranks, and Battery A's armored vehicles were photographed in action on the Sand Hill tank course. In addition, Headquarters battery performed an infantry drill for the visiting cameramen.

All-American News is a weekly newsreel of the activities of outstanding Negro leaders and organizations. The newsreels are shown in 547 theaters in the U. S. and in all overseas theaters where there are American troops.

The series featuring the 99th will be divided into a group of four showings. The second will be shown Friday night at Theater No. 2.

Really Bowls 'Em Over

NEW YORK (APPS)—Johnny Bomba of Bayonne, N. J., has rocked the bowling world to its pins. He rolled two perfect 300 games in succession. The 36-year-old hook operator blasted a total of 1,908 pins in a six-game series in defense of his Third Island Individual Classic crown. In each of his 24 straight strikes he hooked the ball cleanly into the 1-3 pocket and the pins just swept away.

Savings Will Result From Employee Cut

By dropping 25 of every 102 employees now caring for an average of 100 patients at general hospitals, the army expects a saving of nearly $10 million a year, a recent announcement said.

Maj. Gen. R. W. Bliss, army surgeon general, declared that improved scientific management principles will make the reduction in force possible. General Bliss indicated that this move is the first of several to curtail large spending in army hospitals of all levels.

The plan proposed by General Bliss was the result of an extensive study of employment conditions at the Valley Forge General hospital, Pa. He said that a year ago about 188 employees were caring for every 100 occupied beds. This year, the total employment for each 100 beds has been cut to 135, the general said.

On the basis of his findings at the Valley Forge hospital, General Bliss said that the average salary for the "overhead" hospital employee is about $4,000 a year. Comparing this to the 11,968 patients that are supposedly being cared for by the army, it shows that a saving of some $11,368,000 could be effected yearly.

He added that the new program would necessitate the dropping of many administrative personnel now engaged in statistical work at army hospitals. The reduction would force the purchase of expensive business machines, but would prove an asset, he said, because they are not recurring employment for each 100 beds costs.

Forces' Fitness Cited by Chiefs

WASHINGTON — (APPS) — The joint chiefs of staff have delivered a confident report to the nation on the state of American defenses in the Pacific.

In a recent 40-minute press conference at the Pentagon the military chiefs, headed by Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the high command group, described progress in the unification of the services and expressed their satisfaction with the combat efficiency of the armed forces stationed in Far Eastern outposts.

The joint chiefs of staff limited their remarks chiefly to observations made at the various installations they had visited in Alaska, Japan, Okinawa, Guam and Hawaii.

Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, said that the Pacific fleet was prepared to meet the threat of Russian submarines. This problem, together with others that face us in the Pacific, are not being overlooked, he asserted.

The admiral also disclosed that Gen. Douglas MacArthur had received additional control over naval forces in his command. Whereas previously the Far Eastern commander had exercised operational control over naval units in his area in the event of emergency, he now has control of all fleet units wherever they are in Japanese waters.

The joint chiefs reported that morale was high among troops stationed throughout the Far East, but additional, improved military housing was desperately needed in many locations.

CPL ALEXANDER HUNTER, RIGHT REVELS IN MEMORY OF HISTORIC PAST FROM MOUNTED BANDIT-CHASING, L. EFF. TO SEATED MALL-DISBURSING

Present Duties Tame For Corporal Who Used to Pursue Haitian Bandits

Back in 1916 when Haitian rebels were plaguing that small island country with their nefarious mounted marine battalion helping to apprehend the bandit-lawbreakers.

Today, however, his duties have been somewhat tamed—his mail clerk for the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion at the Infantry Center.

Lusty adventure was what Hunter was looking for when he enlisted in the marines. As a youngster raised on a farm in Pennsylvania, being sent to the Dominican Republic and Haiti in 1916 was, in a sense, living the tales told in his school-day history books.

During the year-long assignment in the jungle state, Hunter was one of 40 marines who spent their days and nights chasing the rebels' infamous leader, General Venesteko. The rebellious Venesteko, who had plotted, directed and carried out the ravaging of plantations in Haiti, had a fat reward on his head which would go to any man who would dare attempt to capture him. This was Hunter's job. Corporal Hunter said it was a stop-and-go chase. At night, the small marine detachment would be almost upon the unsuspecting bandit as he slept in a forest camp, but after storming the camping ground the marines would find only a handful of rebels—the general would have fled hours before.

Hunter related that the escaping general's egotism and defiance of the pursuit "made our blood boil—we were ready to cut his throat."

The long chase—the general led the pursuers from one end of the island to the other and then back finally ended at the foot of a small mountain where the bandits were fortified behind protective walls.

The 40 marines, not knowing how long the bandit forces might be behind the walls, dismounted in a firing line and yelled for the immediate surrender of the general. Corporal Hunter said:

Several hours later, without a shot being fired and without any apparent reason, the general left his fortress indignantly and surrendered to the 40 men.

"He was the most conceited-looking f fellow I ever saw," Corporal Hunter declared, "I'll have to admit that he was a striking fellow, white riding habit, shiny boots, a mustache, two silver pistols, a flashy hat and a beautiful horse. He certainly looked the part of dashing desperado."

For his participation in the capture, Hunter received a heavy reward—his share of the 1900 reward offered for Venesteko.

By then, slightly more than a year since entering the marines, Hunter had experienced the color and glory of a rough-riding, Teddy Roosevelt drama. Now he was ready to move on.

Between his arrival for combat in Europe in December, 1917, until 1920 when he got home, young Hunter saw the fiercest and bloodiest gattle the world had ever known.

With the proud marines he went courageously through Verduno, Chateau Thierry, Aisne-Marne, Marbache sector, Bellau Wood and the St. Mihiel offensive in the closing phases of battle, he was the victim of a German gas attack, which later affected his health.

Hunter was discharged from the marines in 1920 and returned home to resume farming and coal mining. During this time he was struck with a serious recurrence of the gas disease—the result of his World War I wound.

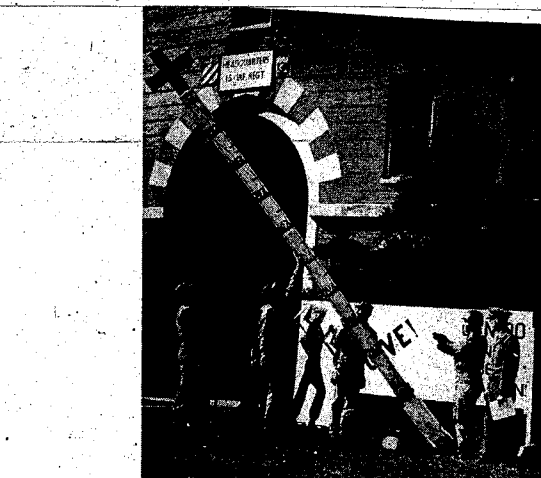

For several years he was hospitalized, but in 1926, the beginning of the depression period, he got itchy feet and decided to move westward.

This time, in the role of a gold prospector, Hunter ambled through western states panning in every stream he could discover. In Arizona, Nevada, New Mexico and Colorado he was a familiar sight to the people of the small townships he frequented, visited to buy " grub."

"I didn't make too much at it, but I got enough to make my keep," the corporal said.

One lucky strike in Arizona netted Hunter about $780 dollars. "I was really lucky on that one—it was the pocket of a vein."

Hunter retired into seclusion during the '30's, but in 1942, after the United States had once again become engaged in war, he said he had to get "back in the scrap." In 1943 he served in the Pacific with rear echelon troops that followed the assault forces out beachheads.

LOOKING AT SPORTS

With
LEO J. PARENT
Acting Sports Editor

I know a man in the small town I come from who is the state executioner. I know another man who catches small animals, mostly dogs, takes them to a large wired enclosure, advertizes their presence for three days, and then locks them in a wooden shed to die. I even know another man that mothers use to frighten their children into going to school when the wees ones want to stay home and play. He's the truant officer. My best friend is an income tax collector. I've got a good word for every one of these gentlemen. They've got to make a living, haven't they? After all someone's got to do it. But, I know another guy. He used to be a friend of mine, until I got tired of meeting him in the way places and dodging down alleys every time a baseball player showed up. He's an umpire. Why, I don't know, much criticized, the holder of a most thankless job, the baseball umpire will have a new cross to bear this season with the addition of Rule 6, Section 5, Clause K of the 1950 playing code.

Rule 6 states that the batter is out "If a preceding runner, shall in the umpire's judgement, intentionally interfere with the play of a defensive player who is attempting to catch a thrown ball or to throw the ball in an attempt to complete any play."

For example, a runner is on first base. The batter grounds to the second baseman, who relays the ball to the shortstop. The shortstop makes the forceplay, but as he throws to first base to complete what appears to be a double play, the base runner falls into that infielder, knocking him aside or down, and prevents an accurate throw. The batter is safe. Or rather he was safe before the new ruling. Now, the umpire will call the batter out.

The Rules committee comes up with this explanation: "The objective of this rule is to penalize the offensive team for deliberate, unwarranted, unsportsmanlike action by the runner in leaving the baseline for the obvious purpose of crashing the pivot man on a double play, rather than trying to reach his base. Obviously, this is an umpire's judgement play."

This is really going to be a tough one to call. The umpire who exercises his right or might in this case is going to be as popular as . . . an umpire. The bad point of the rule will be deciding that one play was normal aggressiveness and the next was "deliberate, unwarranted, unsportsmanlike action."

Double play action isn't that clear in the majority of cases. The shortstop or second baseman usually is on the base path when delivering his throw to first, and the baserunner could claim that he was unable to stop or turn aside in time to avoid a collision. The umpire will have to decide immediately whether the play was contrary to the rules or was unavoidable. No matter what the decision, you can bet it won't be popular.

The 1950 baseball code also defines the strike zone in a way that is going to cause headaches for the ump's. "The Strike Zone," says the rule book, "is that space over home plate which is between the batter's armpits and the top of his knees when he assumes his natural stance." The old rule located the zone between the knees and the shoulder. The appendix to the code says: "A batter has the right to expect that the area he is protecting shall be the same from day to day. Necessity for split-second decision by the batter makes it imperative that the umpires practice diligently to attain a sameness in their estimation of the strike zone."

"A crouch, assumed to confuse the pitcher, or to lower and narrow the natural stance space for the reception of the pitch, shall be disregarded by the umpire. However, a batter's natural batting stance may be an exaggerated crouch." The difference between a "natural crouch" and a "crouch assumed to confuse the pitcher" will add to the complexity of the job of the man behind the plate.

BASKETBALL ALL-AMERICANS

Paul Arizin of Villanova was named the basketball player of the year by the Sporting News, which based its selection on the evidence and opinions of a board of experts covering every conference and section of the country for this season. Arizin won the honors in a close race with Holy Cross' senior Bob Cousy.

The News named Arizin, Cousy, Rick Harmon of Kansas State, Bill Sharman of USC, and Dick Schmittner, Ohio State's all-around star, to the Inter-Collegiate All-American team of the year. A 22.9-point per game average for Arizin was one of the reasons the basketball natural was named over Cousy. The six-foot, four-inch 270-pounder from Pennsylvania holds a college scoring record of 85 points in one game. In the Sugar Bowl tournament against Kentucky and Tulane, the Villanova eager was first choice for the all-tournament team. His two-game total of 46 points stands as a tournament mark.

Bob Cousy, Holy Cross' gift to the basket game, is a standout on the team that hasn't lost a game this season. The credit for that record rests squarely on the six-foot, one-inch frame of bouncing Bob, according to experts who have followed the squad in this year's fray. Robert Morrison of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch called him one of the cleverest ball manipulators and shot-makers of all time. High praise from that section of the country.

Second team selections were Bill Russell of the University of California, and Bill Russell and Bob Cousy. Bob MacKinnon of Canisius and Don Rehfeldt of Wisconsin.

Third Army Cops Pugilistic Honors

Doughs' Jones Famed One-Armed Golfer Retains Crown To Play Exhibition Here

Led by Fort Benning Middleweight Lawrence Jones, the Third Army boxing team won the army-wide boxing tournament at Fort Bragg, N. C., last week. Jones decided three opponents to win cop middleweight honors for the second year in a row. Fort Benning's other entry, Bantamweight George Allen, was defeated in his first fight.

Jones drew a bye in the first round, and fought James Smith of the 92nd Airborne in his first fight on Thursday. Smith weighed in at 160 pounds to Jones' 155. The 28-year-old fighter from Fort Benning outboxed the Far East representative to gain an easy decision.

On Saturday Jones fought a hard-punching battle with Glenn Graham, of the Alaska command. Graham, at 157 pounds, lost to the versatile Benning middleweight who weighed in at 152. Jones advanced to the finals on Sunday, and in the best bout of the day, decided John Hawthorne of the Second Army for the all-army title.

The only other entry from Fort Benning was the Third Army team, bantamweight George Allen, was defeated by Jose Matos, a clever boxer from the United States army in the Caribbean. Allen weighed in at 115 1/2 to Matos' 115 pounds.

The Third Army, with 17 points, won the team standings by a slim margin of one point over the second-ranking Second Army team. The Fifth Army was third with nine points. The First Army tied with the Far East command for fourth place with eight points apiece. In a three-way tie for fifth place were the Sixth Army, Caribbean command and Military District of Washington. The Alaska command was next with two points while the Pacific command and the Fourth Army picked up one point apiece for the cellar position.

The Student training regiment, with 20 wins and four losses heads Section I of the Infantry Center bowling league, while a 340th Area Service unit team tops Section II, with 17 wins and no losses for the week ending Feb. 23.

Chester Symark with a high three-game series of 609 beads the list of top bowlers in the league. The 27-year-old Chief Watts of the 328th Ordnance team holds the high single game total for the week with a total pin fall of 211.

The Student training regiment came up with 14 high three-game aggregate of 893 for the honors in that department.

Not a Bad Evening For a Freshman

Dave Lima, 17, a freshman at Rogers high school, New York, L. I., scored 20 points in a basketball game Monday. Dave totaled 54 baskets and two free throws in a city-sponsored league game. His team, the Community Center Boys' club, defeated John Clarke Junior high, 116-68.

One of golf's most famous figures, one-armed Jimmy Nichols, will play at the Fort Benning Country Club March 4, according to club officials. Nichols, who appeared here in August, 1949, will conduct a golf clinic at 1:30 p.m. on that date, followed by an exhibition match at 2 p.m. with three Fort Benning golfers, as yet unnamed.

During his golfing career he has made seven holes-in-one, one a drive of 336 yards. He was feature in Robert Ripley's "Believe it or Not" in 1938 for his feat of making a dog-leg holes-in-one standing on the tee with his back to the fairway.

High honors in the Open Skeet Shoot held at Fort Benning recently went to A. R. Hyle who shattered 98 birds out of a possible 100.

Class A competition saw J. A. Pollack shoot a 94 to take first place honors, while D. S. Huntley with a 93 eased into the runner-up slot.

J. L. Warren picked off the No. 1 position in Class B followed closely by F. E. Strine.

Class C winner was F. A. Alder, a newcomer to the skeet range. L. Wallace took the runner-up position.

E. G. Brooks and H. E. Elliott were winner and runner-up respectively in Class D.

The two-man team event was snared by J. A. Pollack and J. K. Chanault.

The next skeet shoot scheduled for the post skeet range will be a Thanksgiving turkey shoot, according to officials. Date of the competition will be announced later.

Bogey Winners Are Announced

First place in the weekly blind bogey tournament at the Country Club links was won by W. A. Burress with an 81.

Second place was a tie between C. O. Logan and H. W. Browning, both scoring 80's. E. J. Waszak and L. Dawson tied for third place by holing scores of 85.

There were 46 entries in the tournament.

Infantrymen Nip Triple-9 Cagers In Columbus Tilt

The Third battalion cagers of the 15th Infantry regiment eked out a 38-37 win last week over a fighting 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion quintet at the Ninth street YMCA in Columbus. Undefeated in Industrial league play, the Infantrymen have three more games to play in the drive for the championship crown.

The Artillerymen jumped into the lead, 4-0, in the first few minutes of the game but were smothered by the Infantrymen. The Third battalion hoopers with two quick field goals. The score saw-sawed back and forth on baskets by Echols and Hardy for the 99th and by Smith and Baker, Hank Hammond threw a set shot from mid-court that sent the battalion cagers into a short-lived lead. Echols swished through a lay-up shot to tie the score 10-10, and both teams matched baskets until the half which ended with the 99th scoring on the long end of a 24-21 count.

The second half started on two fast shorts for the Artillerymen, sent the score up to 22-21. Two goals by Baker, one by Battles, a charity toss by Hammonds and a two-pointer by Thomas tied the score at 30-30. With two minutes left in the game and the score standing at 36-35 in the Infantrymen's favor, Lancaster sent the 99th into the lead by a long shot from the left side. Baker clipped in with another two points for the 15th cagers. Echols scored a quick toss and the game ended 39-37, for the Third battalion.

EM Assigned To Detachment

Three enlisted have been transferred to Fort Benning from other Third Army installations and assigned to the Infantry School detachment.

Sgt. Lorenza Nathaniel, formerly a member of Headquarters and Headquarters Detachment, Section II, 342d Area Service unit, Fort Bragg, N. C., has been assigned to Company A for duty with the Infantry Center G-4.

Cpl. John E. Neese has also been assigned to Company A for duty with the Infantry Center G-3. He was formerly at Camp Gordon, Ga., where he was a member of the 276th Signal Service company, Signal Corps Training Center detachment, 341st Area Service unit.

Lentils Hit Stride Again

A final tabulation by Infantry Center food service officials this week shows an overwhelming acceptability for black-eyed peas by restaurant during the last survey on Feb. 22.

Maj. John A. Rivovich, food service supervisor said yesterday that 87 percent of the personnel eating in Fort Benning dining halls showed a preference for the peas. He said that this latest figure, as compared with a below par acceptability for the Hopalong John preparation, indicates the army will include the peas on future menus—but only with the "rebel" recipe, which doesn't include rice and other seasonings.

Completes First Week

A total of 146 enlisted men and 13 officers are enrolled in basic airborne class No. 29 which recently completed the first week of training. The initial phase of the five-week course included instruction in computation of loads, loading and unloading of heavy equipment, knots and physical training.

3rd Battalion Sets Track-Field Meet

A track and field meet between the companies of the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, will be held at Doughboy stadium and Gowdy field on March 4, unit officials announced this week.

Track events will take place at Doughboy stadium from 8-11 a.m., and field events at Gowdy field will round out the day's activities. If possible, every member of the third battalion will take part in at least one event, according to Capt. Wejaj Bundara, battalion athletic and recreation officer.

The 100-yard dash will start the day's events. All members physically able will participate in this event in an attempt to discover "hidden talent," unit officials announced. Families and friends are invited to attend the meet.

Harper's 64 Sets New Links Mark

Charlie Harper, assistant pro at the Fort Benning Country club, cracked the course record recently by shooting a 61-33-64, one stroke below the old mark set by Ernie Krell in 1943.

Three weeks ago, Harper shot 66 for a six under par score. He followed this by tying the low record of 65 two weeks ago and clinched his assault on the post record by smashing the previous mark last week.

Playing on a rain-soaked course, the smooth pro three-on-one on the second play-off putted the four-par, 385-yard hole which kept the score better than it should have been, according to Frank Goss, pro at the club. The hole has been causing Harper trouble ever since he took over his duties at the post, according to Mr. Goss.

Harper was playing in a foursome with Arnold Hoeheke, Arthur Gottlieb and Sid Frazier when he broke the course record.

Following the record-smashing play on the post, Harper left Ernie Frazier, Roy Turgeson and Devert Moore for Tallahassee, Fla., where they tied with three others for third place with a low ball 66 in a pro-amateur four-ball tournament last week.

In the play-off for third place Harper, in a duel with the pros of the other foursomes, won with a single and five birdies for his round.

An organizational meeting of the lady golfers to make plans for the 1950 program will be held at 1:30 p.m. March 10 at the Country club.

Army Announces Tournament Slate

WASHINGTON—(AP)—An all-army wide sports championship program for 1950—including competition in boxing, baseball, basketball and volleyball—has been announced by the Department of the Army.

The program will bring to each army command in the United States and the military district of Washington outstanding sports teams and individual athletes who have qualified to represent their areas from among personnel stationed throughout the world.

Hosts and dates for the tournaments are:

Boxing, Third Army, Feb. 19-26, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Basketball, military district of Washington, Mar. 6-12, Fort Belvoir, Va.

Bowling, Fourth Army, Apr. 1-7, Fort Sill, Okla.

Volleyball, Sixth Army, May 1-6, Fort Ord, Calif.

Tennis, Fifth Army, July 16-22, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Golf, Second Army, Aug. 6-12, Fort Knox, Ky.

Baseball, First Army, Sept. 1-7, Fort Monmouth, N. J.

All military personnel, including those on extended active duty and assigned to the army, are eligible to participate. Officers on temporary duty for 90 days or less are not eligible for the competitions. Professionals are not eligible to enter the boxing championships.

Entrants in the boxing, bowling, tennis and golf championships will be selected on an individual basis from teams throughout the commands. Post or comparable level basketball players wishing command championships are eligible to enter the all-Army basketball tournament.

QUESTION: WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS?

SGT. IST CL. B. V. KNOWLES, Company B, Infantry School detachment, in most cases the Red Cross is very good. In case of tragedy or disaster they are always on hand to pitch in and do all they can. I feel that if I ever had to ask them for help they would assist me.

KNOWLES

M-SGT. JOHN Y. BROWN, Company A, Infantry School detachment, I have never had anything to do with the Red Cross, so I am not in a position to say; but all I have heard about it has not been favorable.

M-SGT. EDGAR C. EASON, Company E, 30th Infantry Regiment, I think the Red Cross is a good thing in most ways. They help a lot of fellows when they need it, and they are always on hand in case of disaster. I have been lucky and have never had to ask the Red Cross to help me.

EASON

M-SGT. MALCOLM F. CANNON, Sixth company, Student Training Regiment: The Red Cross is worthy of all contributions. I say this because a picture I saw in a veteran's hospital, I'll never forget those 50 marbled veterans looking forward each week to the recreation provided on the weekends by the Red Cross.

PFC. EUGENE J. SALERNO, 78th Engineer Company, I think it's a good outfit because it is a non-profit organization and it helps the GI in many ways. It helps in money matters and emergency funerals, and it provides recreation for men in the hospital.

SALERNO

CPL. THOMAS L. COLLINS, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 15th Infantry Regiment, I think it's a wonderful organization, and I know because I had to ask them for help. After I first enlisted something happened to my papers, and didn't get my allotment. I went to the Red Cross. They gave me money and other help until things got straightened out. If it hadn't been for the Red Cross, my family would have starved to death as we had no income at all.

Nurse Is Assigned To Station Hospital

Capt. Stephanie Wekluk, a recent arrival from Far East command assignment as a member of the Korea Military Advisory group, has been assigned to the Station hospital.

Captain Wekluk entered military service in March, 1942, and spent 25 months in the European theater of operations between October, 1943, and November, 1945. After post-war service at Fort Dix, N. J., she spent a year in Japan, returning to the states for six months prior to the commencement of her Korean assignment in 1949.

Mortar Company Takes Regimental Net Honors

Heavy Mortar Company defeated Company K 15-9, 15-0, in the finals of the 15th Infantry Regiment's volleyball double-elimination tournament played in the Main gymnasium last week.

Headquarters company started the ball rolling in the first match of the two-day series by trimming Company G, 15-11, 15-4. In their next match, the sextet from Headquarters eked out two wins over a powerful Company L, 15-10, 15-12.

Heavy Mortar Company met Company K in the first of their two encounters in the series and emerged victors after losing the first game, 13-15, by taking the following two games, 16-14, 15-7.

Company K defeated Headquarters company in the closest match of the tourney.

Headquarters company eliminated once-beaten Company G by virtue of their two-out-of-three-game wins. Company G won the first game, 15-6, but Headquarters company came back to win the next two, 15-10, 15-12.

In the second day of the series, Heavy Mortar company defeated Headquarters company, 11-15, 15-6, 15-12. The second match of the day saw a determined Company K defeat Headquarters company, 16-14, 10-15, 15-10.

Company K gave Heavy Mortar company its only defeat and sent the tourney into an extra game play-off by scores of 15-12, 15-12.

Heavy Mortar company will be the 15th Infantry Regiment's center of the two-day series by trimming Company G, 15-11, 15-4. In their next match, the sextet from Headquarters eked out two wins over a powerful Company L, 15-10, 15-12.

Colonel Enroll In Harvard Course

Col. James F. Torrence, Jr., Infantry Center management officer, left last week for Harvard university where he has enrolled in a three-month course in management.

Major Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, announced that Col. Joseph A. Nichols, former Infantry Center chief of staff, will fill the temporary vacancy created by Colonel Torrence's leave of absence.

Haitians Witness Defense Exhibit

Port-au-Prince, Haiti (APPS) — The first unified exhibit of United States military activities sponsored by the Department of Defense was recently placed on display here in connection with the Republic of Haiti's Bicentennial celebration.

The armed forces exhibit, on display in the American building and pavilion, includes a model of the hydraulic dredge used by the army corps of engineers to maintain the deepwater channels of U. S. seaports.

Also in the army exhibit is a model of the suspension-type bridge recommended by the Bureau of Public Roads to all state governments for stockpiling in this country for emergency use.

The navy's display includes a model of the carrier, USS Commencement Bay. Two of the navy's latest type ships were also present for the exhibit. They are the USS Robert A. Owens, hunter-killer-destroyer, and the USS Cony, anti-submarine destroyer.

The air force exhibit includes a Lockheed P-80 jet fighter, displayed in an area adjacent to the U. S. pavilion. An exhibit depicting the techniques of jungle survival is also being presented by the air arm.

Library Shelves Contain Best of New Book Crop

Many current best sellers are included in the latest list of new books available at the main library, Miss Frances Dozier, librarian, announced this week.

Outstanding among both fiction and non-fiction titles are Joyce Cary's "The Horse's Mouth," Lt. Gen. Lucius Clay's "Decision in Germany," and Brig. Gen. Howley's Berlin Command.

New books in the fiction field include "Pebble in the Sky" by Asimov, "The Shattering Sky" by Bowles, "Jubilee Trail by Brant," "A Long Day's Dying" by Buechner, "The Year of the Spinning Wheel" by Freeman, "Men of the Sea" by Dowdy, "A Star's Progress" by Eversard, "Beautiful Beguise" by Hatch, "The Sea Eagles" by Jennings, "Courts of the Lion by Krepps," "Faraway Haven by Larrimore," "Little Boy Lost by Laski," "A Few Flowers for Shiner by Jewell," "Mingo Dabney by Street," and "Red Cloak Flying by Widemer."

Under the non-fiction heading are "Income Tax Guide by Kenyon," "The Red Army Today by Ely," "Air Power and Unification by Eversard," "Against Fire by Marshall," "The Market for College Graduates by Harris," "Private Flying — Today and Tomorrow by Piper," "Our Plundered Planet by Osborn," "Art and Life in America by Larkin," "Felt's Ceramics for the Collector by Savage," "How to Make Modern Jewelry by Martin," "Spanish Theater."

Death in the Afternoon by Hemingway, The Complete Book of Children's Parties by Hamsher, Skeet and How to Shoot It by Nichols, Special Plays for Special Days by Harkn Poem, "Portraits by Metcalne," "Love Story by McKenney," "Bastogne Pearl Harbor by Sakamaki."

New biographies include "Come One, Come A" by Freeman, "Men Who Make Your World by members of the Overseas Press club," "Maupassant by Stiegguller," and "Peabody Sisters of Salem by Tharp."

The new mysteries are "Dark Corner by Bizard," "Diamonds in Amsterdam by Coles," "The Clay Hand by Davis," "The Dishonest Murderer by Lockridge," "Murder of a Nymph by Neville and the Catherine-Wheel by Wentworth."

New western novels include "New western novels include 'Single Jack by Brand,' 'Betty Zane and West of the Pecos,' both by Grey, 'Two-Bit Rancher' by Heckelman, 'Red Range by Manning and Ambush by Short.'"

Although some of these titles may be found at the branch libraries, the entire list is available at the Main library, located on World Avenue next to the Main branch.

HOLIDAY BLOOD DONOR — Although Feb. 22 was George Washington's birthday, observed as a holiday by Infantry Center personnel, scores of men from the Infantry School detachment turned out at the Station hospital to give blood to the American Red Cross blood bank. PRESSURES IN THE EAST — The pressure of Communism now at work throughout Asia falls into three broad categories. First, there is the pressure that Moscow is exerting directly southward in the Middle East, on Turkey (1) for a warm-water outlet, Iran (2) for oil concessions, and Afghanistan (3) for access to southern Asia. Second, there is the pressure that Moscow exerts in China. Sinkiang (4), Inner Mongolia (5), Mongolia (6) and Manchuria

(7) and "attach" these areas to the Soviet Union, and the pressure exerted directly on the Chinese Communist government at Peiping (8). Third, there is pressure exerted from Peiping on Tibet (9), which the Communists insist must submit to their authority. Burma (10), where Communist guerrillas are fighting a sorely weakened government; French Indo-China (11), where the Communist leader Ho Chi Minh has set up a rebel government; and Hainan (12) and Formosa (13), last strongholds of the Nationalist government.

Driver Lauded For 'Miki' Role

For his part in Joint Exercise Miki at Fort Winfield Scott, Cal., Pfc. Sylvester Roberts has received a letter of commendation from Maj. Gen. W. M. Robertson, maneuver commander, and Brig. Gen. William S. Lawton, chief umpire.

Pfc. Roberts was assigned as a truck driver for the umpires of this exercise. "His efforts and loyal support were of great help in making exercise Miki a success," according to the citation.

A recent arrival at Fort Benning, Pfc. Roberts is a member of the 865th Transportation Truck company. He served with the 207th Truck battalion while stationed in Yokohama, Japan, from April, 1947, to July, 1949.

Ted, Uncle Sam Split $125,000

NEW YORK (APPS) — The take-home pay for Ted Williams, Boston Red Sox, in 1950 will come out about even with Babe Ruth's income for each of his top years of 1926 and '31. Williams' new contract for a reported $125,000 tops the late Babe Ruth's best salary by $45,000—before income taxes.

Washington tax experts estimate that of the $125,000 salary Williams will have about $70,000 left after paying Federal income tax. That means he will have to fork over about $55,000.

Georgian Predicts Revised Draft Act

A Georgia congressional leader this week virtually assured Department of Defense officials and senatorial colleagues that a new type selective service act would be passed "in March or April."

Rep. Carl Vinson (D-Ga.), Vinson's outline for the bill indicates that 10-year-olds would register for selective service, but he would not be classified or examined until they reached their 19th birthday.

Outlaw Seizure Power — Another clause that Vinson's bill does not carry, as the president's veto on does, is the authority for forces. Vinson said the new bill would continue registration and plants and mines to assure professionalization until June 30, 1953, duration of necessary military supplies.

Present indications are that the congressional committee the Vinson bill is a great deal chairman estimates his plan will require $10,600,000 a year to add man's military advisors asked minister. He said about $4,000,000 in the way of manpower insurance would be used to a new critical war situation, maintain records.

Although the present peace-time draft law expires in June, draft-dodging penalties to a $1,000 fine, one year imprisonment more than a year. Some 30,000 or more youths between 19 and 26 years of age, a $10,000 fine, five were drafted under this law.

Twice-Aided Benning GI Pledges Financial Limit

The American Red Cross provided its worth to Pfc. Norman Whitman twice during his military career and he is enthusiastic about supporting the 1950 fund-raising drive.

The 25-year-old Pensacola, Fla., native is a member of the 15th Ordnance Medium Automotive Maintenance company, first encountered the Red Cross while attending the Red Cross school at Camp Lee, Va., tragedy once more struck at Whitman's home. His grandmother suddenly became ill and passed away within hours after the first notification. Whitman was on an airplane bound for the United States.

He said that the Red Cross after filing a request for his emergency fund, had been able to get the normal through time boosted to 30 days.

Money Help Too — "Getting from Germany to the States with the money he had on hand would have been a difficult job," Whitman declares. "But the Red Cross again helped me. They gave me enough for transportation and other necessary expenses."

His brother began a slow recovery after Whitman arrived. Upon his own request, the Red Cross was able to get a five-day extension to the original 30-day stay. Whitman could stay with his bedridden brother.

Rather than send Whitman back overseas — his time overseas had almost ended — the army let him remain in this country. He was then assigned to the 328th Ordnance Battalion, but within a matter of weeks, Whitman's brother died. Again, the Red Cross made it possible for Whitman to get home for a week.

Grandmother Dies — In April, 1949, while he was attending a special school at Camp Lee, Va., tragedy once more struck at Whitman's home. His grandmother suddenly became ill and passed away within hours after the first notification. Whitman was on an airplane bound for the United States.

Each time I was faced with these problems," he pointed out, "the Red Cross has been right there to help. If it hadn't been for the help I doubt if I would have got home in time to take care of the necessary funeral arrangements."

"I'm certainly going to do everything in my financial power to help and thank the Red Cross and its workers and I think everyone should do the same."

Two Wacs Promoted — Two members of Fort Benning's Wac detachment, Pfc. Mary E. Hill and Wynelle Shockley, have been promoted to private first class.

We have 20 1946 thru 1950 models; Ford, Chevrolet, Plymouth, Buick, Hudson, Pontiac, Dodge, Nash; to choose from.

2 Officers, 3 EM Cited by 3rd Army

Two Fort Benning officers and three enlisted men received the Third Army certificate of achievement this week. It was announced by army headquarters.

They were Col. James E. Torrence, Jr., Lt. Col. Roland H. DeMar, M-Sgt. Castor Gavino, M-Sgt. Arlon H. Jackson and Sgt. Robert Johnson.

Work Progressing In TIC Hobby Shop

Remodeling and renovation work on the Infantry Center Hobby Shop is progressing rapidly, and is expected to be completed in 30 to 45 days, it was announced this week.

Hobby Shop officials pointed out that most activities available to hobbyists are being carried out despite the remodeling work, and that hobbyists are contributing suggestions or recommendations for improving the shop.

MAJ. DOROTHEA LAWRENCE Gets RA Promotion

Capt. Lawrence Wins Promotion

Dorothea M. Lawrence, chief physical therapist at the Fort Benning Station hospital, was recently promoted from captain to major in the regular army Women's Medical Specialist corps, a hospital announcement said this week.

Entering the army in January, 1943, Major Lawrence attended the graduate school of physical therapy at Walter Reed General hospital, and was stationed at Deshon General hospital until 1946, where she was engaged in training apprentice physical therapy specialists.

After being assigned to Valley Forge General hospital in 1946, she spent three months in New York on detached service as a member of the Education Career Planning board, and in May, 1947, she was again placed on detached service with Oliver General hospital as a member of a Regular Army Integration Screening board. During this period Major Lawrence was herself integrated into the regular army.

Major Lawrence, whose home is in Royal Oak, Mich., was assigned to Fort Benning in September, 1948.

Pvt. David L. Sluter was assigned to duty with the Ordnance section, Cpl. Robert R. Rich assumed new duties with the Central Post Fund section, Cpl. Jack S. Atkins went to the Finance section, and Cpl. Hilton K. Rawls was placed on duty with the

Short Duty Tours Offered to Medics

WASHINGTON (APPS) — A new regulation permitting medical and dental reserve officers to volunteer for short periods of active duty of from one to 29 days a month, for periods not to exceed 90 days in any one year, is announced by the Air Force.

This will enable medical and dental reserve officers to maintain an active interest in the armed forces medical program and will alleviate the present critical shortage of such officers in the Air Force.

Lawson Begins ARC Campaign

The 1950 Red Cross drive was launched at Lawson Airforce base last Tuesday, when Maj. Richard G. Johnson, base commander, made an appeal to all personnel.

The drive this year will be conducted on a competitive basis between each section of the base. A chart will be maintained in the personnel services office, and contributions will be entered in a 12-foot Red Cross with a painted thermometer has been placed in front of the personnel services section to register base standings.

First Lt. Walter Shoopinsky is vice-chairman of the Lawson drive.

Cpl. Mitchell Assigned
Cpl. Willie J. Mitchell has been assigned to Battery B, 99th Artillery, moved Field Artillery battalion, it was announced this week by Lt. Col. H. W. Browning, commander. Corporal Mitchell is a former member of the Third Replacement company.

TIC Lauded For Donation

Tracy S. Voorhees, under secretary of the army, commended personnel of the Infantry Center last week for their $1,500 contribution to Army Emergency Relief during 1949.

In a letter to Maj. Geff. Wilhurs A. Burrens, Infantry Center commander, Mr. Voorhees said, "It is largely because of such contributions that this organization is able to carry on its worthwhile work, which I feel is important to the morale and welfare of the soldier and his dependents."

The Infantry Center contribution to AER is taken from the annual Community Chest drive held here two months ago. AER, which is devoted to assisting military personnel and their dependents during financial crises, operates entirely on funds donated by military personnel.

Unit Promotes Enlisted Group

Officials of the 15th Infantry regiment's Third battalion announced the promotion of seven sergeants and 11 corporals last week.

Sergeants promoted to sergeant first class were Tyler Collins, Calvin Hutson, Olin Pettigrew, Louis Fortis, Walter Scott, Calvin Lewis and Lucius Spears.

Corporals promoted to sergeant included Wilson Byrd, Wellington Davernport, Howard Grant, Alexander Richardson, Herbert Roy, Frank Sain, William Stagner, Lester Wade, Walter Walley, George Odum and Franklin T. Moore.

The promotions resulted from recent MOS proficiency examinations.

15th Infantry Draws Aggressor Role For 'Swarmer' Maneuvers

9 Post Units In Operation

The 15th Infantry regiment, minus one battalion and a medical company, will be cast in the role of Aggressor, and eight other Fort Benning units will participate in Exercise Swarmer, a simulated combat maneuver to be held in North Carolina in April and May.

The 15th Infantry was the largest single unit of the Third Infantry division to remain at Fort Benning when other troops left to act as an invasion element in the current Operation Portrex, a land-sea-air maneuver in the Caribbean.

Other Benning units scheduled to take part in Exercise Swarmer, a combined army-airforce operation, include the 41st Field Artillery battalion, an element of the 10th Engineer Combat Battalion, 389th Transportation Truck company, 52nd Transportation Truck battalion, 121st Evacuation hospital, 20th Quartermaster Subsistence Supply company, 71st Ordnance Depot company and the 514th Medical Clearing company.

Approximately 3,500 post troops are expected to participate in the operation.

Details released this week in Washington revealed that the operation will involve about 30,000 airmen, ground troops and paratroopers. Although most of the participants will be from army posts east of the Mississippi River, it is expected that virtually every large post in the nation will send units for the simulated combat operation.

Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, commander of the 15th Infantry P-2

WHOSE CHILDREN?... Lack of proper training has permitted these three small boys to play on the edge of a dangerous thoroughfare. A Bayonet reporter and photographer, while on an assignment last week, saw the tots and stopped to snap this picture on Dilbeck street. To the left rear, a small hill hides the children from the view of any driver of a truck or automobile that might come across the top. A hundred yards away, a mother stood in the yard of her home, nonchalantly drying clothes while the photographer took the picture. She made no effort to reprimand her children or get them off the road. Seconds after this picture was taken, a truck, loaded with coal, came dangerously close to the tots. This kind of safety is not complimentary to Infantry Center parents.

Red Cross Drive Off to Good Start

A surge of interest among Infantry Center personnel has pushed donations for the 1950 Red Cross fund-drive to $10,367.48, 41 percent of the total goal, in the first six days of the month-long campaign.

In the contribution race among post units the cadre of the Student Training Regiment was the first to go over the top with 114 percent of their campaign objective already in the till. The 613 men of the organization overshoot the dollar-per-person goal at the opening of the fund drive with a total contribution of $689.

The spirit of the 1950 fund drive is expressed in the increased activity as compared to the drive last year, according to Red Cross officials.

Camellia to Add 250 Apartments

At a cost of nearly $1,500,000, another 250 units will be added to the completed 400-unit Camellia apartment development, it was disclosed this week by C. E. Gates, a partner in the Williams Construction company, builders of the project.

The new Camellia apartments, two-bedroom units in the $30-$55-a-month bracket, will be housed in 27 two-story buildings and 23 one-story buildings, Mr. Gates said.

With construction beginning in about two weeks, the new apartments will have two bedrooms, living room, kitchen and dinette, with some variation in design. Plans call for completion of the project in about four months.

The buildings will extend from Torch Hill road, increasing to 650 the total number of units in the project.

A Phenix City firm had announced previously plans to build 500 homes and 100 apartments on the old Fort Benning road, in the last six months by civilian groups, plus the completed housing project on the post, is expected virtually to eliminate any housing shortage for military personnel.

Benefit Party Set For Officers' Club

Final plans for the Red Cross benefit party to be held March 31 at the Officers' club at 8 p.m. were completed this week, Mrs. F. C. Blatt, chairman of the party committee, reported.

She said that all proceeds from the party will be forwarded to national headquarters of the American Red Cross for use in its relief programs.

Tickets for the party are now on sale at the Officers' club, the Country club and Biggleswille mess.

Officials who released figures showing the amount contributed by the STR centre is the only unit to over-step the goal, many units are close on the heels of the donation leader, Army Field Forces board No. 3 has collected 91 percent contribution that totals $137 from personnel numbered at 161.

The Infantry School detachment with a strength of 1,271 has contributed $1,025 that represents 80 percent of the unit goal.

The largest monetary contribution came from members of the Third Infantry division not participating in maneuvers. The $2,267 donation of the group is 78 percent of the goal.

Portrex Armada Suffers Losses

Last minute reports received here this week show that the invasion-bound Portrex armada has already suffered heavy "losses."

An umpire of the largest peacetime war game sold that "aggressor" submarines had "sunk" 25 ships of the task force moving in on Vieques, the island-target of the air-ground-sea maneuver.

Under the umpiring rules, a ship declared sunk is out of action for several hours. Enemy subs showed command of the sea phase of the operation, officials said, by sinking the Carrier Wright and the Destroyer Holder twice.

Aggressor subs also "sank" three other destroyers, two carriers, five submarines, one cargo ship, one escort patrol craft, one control ship and nine amphibious craft. Their planes twice damaged the Carrier Sappan and "hit" the Battleship Missouri, the Submarine Irex, the Worcester, the Destroyer Rich and four amphibious craft.

Losses by the aggressor included one submarine and 20 aircraft. Ten submarines make up the "enemy's" entire fleet.

Early Notice Picture 'Must'

A 24-hour notice must be given the public information office on requests for publicity pictures. Since PIO has no photographers, it must rely on Signal corps lensmen. The advance notice is necessary so Signal may plan its work for the next day. The only exception is spot news pictures, such as accidents, fires or similar occurrences.

TIC Night School Reopens Tonight

Night classes at the Army Education Center will be resumed tonight on the regular schedule, Infantry Center information and education officials announced today.

P-TA Conference Opens on Tuesday

Nearly 350 women are expected to arrive at Fort Benning Tuesday for the fifth district spring conference of the Georgia Congress of the Parents-Teachers association.

Mrs. Albert C. Haley, general chairman for the one-day meeting, said this week that virtually every P-TA in the fifth district, which extends from Columbus in all Georgia directions for more than 50 miles, will be represented at the annual conference.

The meeting, which is held in a different city in the district each year, will be highlighted with an address by the state P-TA president, Mrs. Ralph Hobbs of Cataula, Ga.

The lady delegates will also get a look at army life. In cooperation with the Fort Benning public information office, a tour of training areas has been arranged, including lunch at the Third Army Food Service School.

Mrs. Haley also announced that the nursery will open during the conference to care for children of the attending delegates. She said that anyone interested in children's welfare, including those without children, are urged to attend the conference.

Another state officer attending the meeting will be Mrs. W. Cooper Campbell, chairman of the home and family life committee, from Columbus District. Officers attending will be Mrs. Carl Savage, fifth district director, Monticello; Mrs. Frank David, fifth district assistant director and chief of the state endowment fund project, Columbus; Mrs. W. R. Morton, fifth district secretary, and R. G. Williams, area supervisor of education, from Americus.

From the County council will be Mrs. E. L. Conley, Muscogee county council, Columbus; and Miss Katherine McDuffie, Muscogee publicity chairman, Mrs. Oscar Spurlin, Columbus, and Mrs. Jerome Cohen, Americus.

Mrs. Ralph Balkcom, Georgetown, will represent the zones of the district.

Annual Fashion Show Held Here Monday Night

Pageant Features Latest Creations in Ladies' Dress

The Fort Benning woman's club presented the highlight of its year—the annual spring fashion show—at the Officers' club on Monday night.

Mrs. Marcus B. Bell, president, welcomed the guests and introduced Miss Latimer Watson, fashion editor of The Ledger-Enquirer, who was commentator for the show.

Leading Columbus shops furnished the gowns and suits, including suits and afternoon dresses, casual sports ensembles, cocktail and evening dresses and a bridal procession finale.

Spring Theme Prevails
Colorful spring theme formed the background for the models. The ramp was placed in the main lounge of the club, and was flanked with two white screens and standards of spring flowers.

Members of Wing Scout troop No. 8 of the senior Girl Scouts acted as ushers. They were Barbara Doehler, Roxanna N. O'Leary, Evelyn Oltarzewski and Nancy Welsch. Mrs. John Blatt, co-leader of the troop, assisted the girls.

Musical piano selections were presented by John Miller, in describing the fashion trend for the American woman, Miss Watson stressed the importance of large and small details, such as the great popularity of cotton fabric, the 14-inch skirt and the short evening gowns. She still full and circular skirts for dresses, particularly for the younger women.

Sports Clothes Shown
The show opened with the showing of sports and picnic clothes. In this group Mrs. George Clayton modeled a B. H. Wragge two-color silk shantung. The dogwood pink top with azelea rose skirt was made with stitched pleats and a shantung sash. Her hat was by Christine.

Mrs. John Hill modeled an afternoon dress of navy sheer with a white pique removable vestee. The pencil skirt featured an inset panel of red faille down the front, and large patch pockets reached around the waist creating the desired small effect.

Mrs. Bernard Baetcke modeled a smart navy dress featuring a mandarin collar and a pleated skirt. Her hat was a large rough bluish pink straw.

Touch of Vesteyear
A touch of the past was the dress of 1920, shown by Mrs. James Bartholomeus, featuring the short skirt, long waistline and straight unfluted lines. The dress belongs to Mrs. Hatcher Boykin of Columbus.

Group Entertains With Dance Night

Officers of the Student Training regiment entertained with a dance at Victory lodge last Friday night. The Musical Esquires furnished music.

Those attending were Col. and Mrs. Sevier R. Tupper, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Howard F. Haberman, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Shields Warren Jr., Maj. Ralph J. Reshid, Capt. and Mrs. Donald F. Stegmann, Capt. and Mrs. Albert Standish, Capt. and Mrs. Ernest A. Shelton, Capt. and Mrs. John B. DeMarcus, Capt. and Mrs. Leonard V. Bailey.

Capt. and Mrs. Lola Huntley, Capt. Bennett F. Pope, Capt. and Mrs. Woodrow W. Wallace, Capt. Earl F. Wilson and guests, Maj. Edgar R. Perry and guests, Capt. and Mrs. Robert J. Beierschmitt, Capt. Elmer C. Navarre, Capt. and Mrs. Donald C. O'Rourke, Lt. and Mrs. John T. Dunphy, W-O and Mrs. J. Jones.

Capt. and Mrs. Cleo B. Smith, Capt. and Mrs. Maxwell McCullough, Capt. Guy L. Tucker and guest, Capt. and Mrs. Joe S. DeArmond, Capt. and Mrs. Delbert C. Capt. and Mrs. Michael C. Chester, Lt. and Mrs. Vern G. Frisinger, Lt. and Mrs. William L. Baker Sr.

Lt. and Mrs. Robert L. Parent, Lt. David Gallier, Lt. Victor Gagnon, Lt. and Mrs. James F. Alford, Lt. and Mrs. John S. Turner, Lt. Robert T. Johns, Lt. Harry C. Dober, Lt. and Mrs. Henry J. Needham, Lt. Robert N. Beauchamp, Miss Christine Bivins.

Lt. and Mrs. Henry A. Bruno, Lt. and Mrs. William J. Lowes, Lt. and Mrs. Thomas E. Probst Sr., Lt. and Mrs. Frank G. Dollicker, Lt. and Mrs. Guy W. Cuthman Jr. and guests, E. and Mrs. Bernard U. Porter, Lt. and Mrs. Eldred E. Weber, Lt. and Mrs. John D. White and Lt. and Mrs. Harry W. Pierce.

1950 twin was modeled by Mrs. James Admon. The dress was of navy in a short formal design with uneven hem line, long waisted jacket, Vapraided lace with rhinestones and seed pearls on the bodice.

Mrs. James Strain modeled a blossom pink net formal with softly draped shoulders and bouffant skirt.

Cecil Chapman's white net gown was modeled by Mrs. John Hennessy. It featured a full skirt embroidered in grape-clusters of pearls and silver beading and a slim bodice worn with the girl's new halterette.

Little Miss Bonnie Simmon modeled the latest in pants-trimmed with ribbon.

Special Creations Modeled
Three features of the show were described by the fashion trend for the occasion were the Trifari's halterette, Sally Victor's dress and a shantung dress modeled by Mrs. Elizabeth Arden evening hat.

Models and shops were Kayser-Lienhart, Mrs. Kenneth A. Ward, Adams, Mrs. George A. Clayton, Mrs. Robert H. Hill, Mrs. George B. Pickett Jr. and Mrs. William D. Cavness. The shop: Mrs. Thomas A. Rafferty, Mrs. James I. Walker, Mrs. Robert E. Lane, Mr. Albert R. Ives, Sealy's, Mr. E. McCormick, Miss Helen Moore, Mrs. James H. Short and Mrs. Benjamin G. Taylor.

Mrs. Bernd Baetcke, Miss Leslie Tibbets Mrs. Robert H. Hill, Mrs. John J. Hennessy, Mrs. James H. Short and Mrs. Benjamin G. Taylor. Mrs. George A. Daoust and Miss Bonnie Simmon; Davison's; Mrs. Robert E. Lane, Mrs. John Hill, Mrs. James Bartholomeus and Mrs. David L. Silver.

Shop: Susan and Sandra Lapka, Douglas, Mrs. Thomas Lapacka, Rusty Baker, son of Lt. and Mrs. John Hill, pumice stone, tetra-chal and sandpaper abrasives, including garnet paper, aluminum oxide and fine paper. Also displayed were protective finishes, plastic and wax, stains of the various North American woods were graphically illustrated by projecting them on a screen.

On display also were pieces of furniture from the Nelsons' quarters. Colonel Nelson showed a pink-tinted iron bed refinished by Mrs. John Hill, and a white leather modernistic chair by Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Michele of Columbus.

Nelson gave a demonstration on how to make interesting and lively lamps out of odd types of glass bottles and shells.

Mrs. Nelson demonstrated the various techniques of refinishing wood. While Colonel Nelson displayed each step, Colonel Nelson described the legs of three old tables, showing the wood before and after refinishing. He also showed the audience in four quick changes how to convert a chest of drawers to almost any period from the antique to modern styling, just by the clever usage of handles and legs.

Mrs. Albert C. Haley, group chairman, announced the next meeting will be held March 27 with a tour of the Columbus Coca-Cola plant and a demonstration by Mrs. Walter Scott Fulton on interior decorating.

Mrs. Haley also announced that the date of the flower show will be given later, and in the February issue.

The Literature and Arts group of the Woman's club sponsored the contest being sponsored by the officers of the Student Training regiment in honor of the officers of the Albatross department's Pathfinders committee.

The dinner table was centered with a low arrangement of colorful early spring flowers, flanked by white lapers in crystals.

The guest list included Maj. and Mrs. John J. Murphy, Maj. and Mrs. H. Raudstein, Capt. and Mrs. J. S. Sailer, Capt. and Mrs. A. S. Hyman, Capt. and Mrs. C. A. Wirt, Capt. and Mrs. N. D. McDowell, Jr., Capt. G. A. G. Smith, Miss Helen Moore, Lt. William Snell, Miss Alice Wiedmann, Lt. D. S. Carroll, Miss Francis Kemp, Lt. and Mrs. J. A. Crozier, Lt. A. Crozier and Miss Ann Reeves.

Church Club Holds Party

The Westminster club of the Beth-Salem Pres by in a church of Columbus sponsored a benefit rag-mop party on Saturday night at the Non-Commissioned Officers' club of the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment.

The club was decorated attractively with early spring flowers.

A barbecue supper was served, followed by dancing. Members of the club include Walter Bennett, president; Mrs. Marian Godley, vice president; Mrs. Mildred Motte, secretary; Miss Louise Bennett, advisor; Robert Powell, Clarence Bennett, Sgt. and Mrs. James Jones and Misses Peggy and Billie Reese.

Group to Sponsor Post Art Exhibit

War Bride Likes America, But Prefers French Foods

BY MAX PIGOTT
Baton Rouge, La. (AP)—

From the city of Strasbourg which is noted for its famed cathedral with the celebrated astronomical clock comes a French war bride to become one of Uncle Sam's nieces.

Mrs. Edmond V. B. Edmond, the former Jacqueline Class and now the wife of Major Edmond, a small, slender, but poised and altogether charming in the noted French way. She has dark hair, expressive dark eyes and a delightful accent.

Her graceful hands help her along when she speaks of her life in Strasbourg. She was raised there and lived there during the war and the German occupation. When the war was over, she took a job with the American government as interpreter of German, French and English languages.

SHE REMINISCED WITH A SMILE on her face as she said, "on my vacation, I went on a visit to Hochstadt near Bamberg. While there, I was invited to my girl friend's quarters and there I met my husband. He was stationed in Hochstadt as commander of the First Battalion, 16th Infantry regiment. We got along famously from the beginning. My husband was in Germany for a year and a half, and then I went to work, but I do have some valuable family recipes that I brought with me. Since my husband enjoys French cooking so very much, I naturally enjoy fixing and trying new dishes for him. One of the things I have introduced to him is snails, and I have wonderful recipe for them. I like the French practice of using wines in cooking. It adds a wonderful little something to the dish."

She admitted that America fascinated her, especially the fact that people who were not wealthy had so many modern conveniences. She was especially interested in refrigerators and electrical appliances.

WHEN WE CAME OVER HERE, we went to Connecticut to visit my husband's people and then move down here in our own home. The thing that amazed and thrilled me was the fact that we drove from one state into another without anybody ever stopping us to see our visa or passport, as they would do in Europe.

Mrs. Edmond said that she would always have a sentimental home in Strasbourg, France, since both of their children were born here. "There's no doubt about Fort Benning I like."

And speaking of her children, she admitted, "I get a little homesick sometimes, but for long, and I am looking forward to taking my little boy and baby girl to see my mother and father. They will be so proud of them as they are the only child," she added.

"I have just been elected vice-president of the international group which is a group for foreign war brides who get together once a month. Sometimes we have guest speakers, and sometimes we play cards and have refreshments. We meet at the YMCA in Columbus. It's very interesting as we have quite a number of countries represented. We belong to the same group of French brides, and we always speak French at our meetings. It's our only chance to keep it up."

Then Mrs. Edmond added proudly, "In about 30 days I will get my final citizenship papers and that will be a happy day, was supposed to be naturalized sometime before Christmas, but since I was expecting my baby, the doctor advised against it. He says I'll be able to stand up and say 'Jacqueline Edmond, American citizen.'"

Benning Scout News

Girl Scouts

By MRS. JOHN BLATT

In memory of our Founder, Juliette Lewis, who organized the first Girl Scout troop in the United States on March 12, 1912, in Savannah, Ga., the Fort Benning Girl Scouts will observe the anniversary of WRBL Saturday, March 11 at 6:15 p.m.

Catherine Hayes will represent the Brownies, Dorothy Stroupe the Intermediates and Catherine will tell the Brownies' story and the Brownies' Promise, part of the requirements she did to become a Brownie Scout.

Dorothy will give some of the highlights of her camping experience along with the Girl Scout Laws and Promise which are the inspirational guides in the intermediate program.

Roxanna will launch the 1950 International project "Schoolmates Overseas" which the senior troop has been working on. She will give details on international scouting.

Be sure and tune in to the International Day, Saturday, March 11, at 6:15 p.m., Saturday, March 11.

INTERNATIONAL DAY

The Senior Girl Scout troop will observe international project program at the Girl Scout Little House Saturday, March 4.

The program began with the launching of the 1950 international project, "Schoolmates Overseas," at 10 o'clock in the morning.

The exhibit, "In the morning, I am a friend," was set up, and the bulletin board filled with international news and news of the project.

The troop learned about the World Association of Girl Scouts and Girl Scouts of which membership dues to the Girl Scouts of the United States and they sang two international songs.

The program was climaxed by a spaghetti dinner, international in flavor, and a simple but dignified program.

At which time world pins were awarded to Jill Strohn, pilot of the troop, Evelyn Oltarzewski, Barbara Daehler, troop nurse, Roxanna Noel, Nancy Welsch, troop snatcher, and Juliette Low member, Barbara Young, Claire Sullivan and Anne Hamilton.

Evelyn Oltarzewski, Roxanna Noel and Barbara Daehler, working on their second class badge, cooked an international feast, and two folk dances to fulfill some of the badge requirements.

The "Schoolmates Overseas" exhibit will be on display at the Little House until next Saturday at which time it will be packed and shipped to the Girl Scouts of the Philippines. You are invited to see it.

That the girls devoted two meetings to this project; making posters, purchasing articles for the exhibit.

JULIETTE LOW

Girl Scout law, "a Girl Scout is a friend of all and a sister of every girl in the world," delegates to the 1927 national convention resolved that in memory of Juliette Lewis, a fund be raised to be known as the Juliette Low fund.

Turn on your radio Saturday, March 11, 2:30 p.m. EST, NBC, for the annual Girl Scout birthday party to be broadcast from the Shrine auditorium, Los Angeles, Calif., before an audience of 7,000 girl scouts. The program will feature top-name Hollywood and radio stars and a greeting from a world famous personality. This year's birthday party broadcast will be built around our international theme and will feature "Schoolmates Overseas."

Tune Saturday, March 11, at 10:30 a.m. EST, CBS, for the Joe DiMaggio show. Joe will award a citation to Girl Scouts of the U. S. for the good work we are doing through "Schoolmates Overseas." On behalf of this program he will make a contribution to the project and encourage all boys and girls to help the Girl Scouts by contributing, too.

Sunday, March 12, 9 p.m. EST, CBS, listen to the radio. The entire script is to be around the senior scout theme. This show will be broadcast.

Wednesday, March 15, 5:30 p.m. EST, NBC and TV, hear the Howdy Doody show. Howdy will give a birthday party to Brownies, with about 40 Brownies in the studio.

Intermediate troop No. 6 invited Mrs. John F. Blatt to visit their troop and tell about international friendship and international scouting at the weekly meeting. They are working on schoolmates for their international schoolmates and before long you will hear about their shipping date.

Organizer of AGF Band To Lead Ensemble Here

Capt. Chester E. Whiting, director of the Army Ground Force band which has scheduled a concert at the Briant - Wells Fieldhouse Sunday afternoon, March 19, has a varied musical background in both the army and civilian life.

Captain Whiting organized the Army Ground Forces band in 1946. He directed the present 100-member band of the American Division band, the Infantry Concert group, and the Infantry band.

From this combination of talented musicians, Captain Whiting has formed a top flight military band which is now famous all over the country.

CAPT. CHESTER E. WHITING, AGF Band Leader

THE BANDMASTER HAS led the AGF aggregation since its organization and serves as its commanding officer in all its varied activities as the official band of the army under the direct command of the Defense Department.

He has traveled over 200,000 miles with the band in many more than 300 U.S. cities and localities. In parades held in many of the nation's major cities, Captain Whiting has marched at the head of his columns of army career musicians. For many radio broadcasts and recording sessions the band is called on to perform. His repertoire is always on the podium.

During World War II, Captain Whiting served in the Pacific campaign as commander and director of the famous American Division band. For outstanding performance of duty he was awarded the Combat Infantry badge, the Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star medal.

BEFORE BECOMING A MEMBER of the regular army, Captain Whiting joined the Massachusetts national guard, and received an appointment as warrant officer from the governor.

While serving with the national guard, the captain commanded one of the last mounted cavalry bands in the United States.

He began his musical career, however, long before he became an army bandmaster. After obtaining much of his formal musical training at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston he returned to his home town of Malden, Mass., to become the director of music for the schools.

As director of the AGF band, Captain Whiting meets a heavy schedule of engagements, but still finds time to compose some works of his own. An army man at heart, the captain sticks to martial music in exercising his talent for writing original compositions. During his career as a bandmaster he has composed six marches, three of which have already been published. The other three will be released from the printers.

AS LEADER OF THE OUTSTANDING military band in the country, Captain Whiting is often called on to direct at important national functions and in world-renowned halls of music. Often the ceremonies on the White House lawn are backed by the stirring music of the AGF band, and it has been called upon to perform in such schools as the Brooklyn Conservatory of Music. A brilliant reputation recently won for the band full-scale performance in New York City's Carnegie hall.

Although the AGF band is primarily a march music aggregation, Captain Whiting also includes other types of music in his repertoire. The playing of a few numbers often heard on the program are the 1812 Overture, "William Tell Overture" and "Overture to Overton." For variety the conductor puts in novelty arrangements of popular and familiar favorites and special arrangements of modern hit tunes.

Tribute to Heroes Street Titles to Perpetuate Memories of CMH Dead

Avenues and Courts in Custer County, Okla., are being named in honor of deceased World War II soldiers. The citation reads: "The citation in housing project now under construction, have been named in honor of deceased World War II soldiers who died in the line of duty. The citation reads in part: 'While slowly bleeding to death from a painful stomach wound, he single-handedly fought off an attack by two German companies with his automatic rifle, directed an artillery barrage on the SS troops in front of him, and saved his patrol and possibly his company from annihilation.'

Merrell lane bears the name of Pvt. Joseph F. Merrell, 15th Infantry regiment, who received the Medal of Honor winners of the Third Infantry division, Infantry Center officials announced this week.

The project is being built under the provisions of the Wherry Act, which allows the government to lease property to civilian firms for the purpose of erecting quarters for military personnel. Custer Road Terrace is located on Custer road adjacent to the recently completed Battle Park Homes.

Street designations include Christian lane, Craig drive, Craig court, Gibson drive, Gibson court, Central court, Merrell lane, Squires lane, Valdez drive, South Valdez court, North Valdez court and Kandle drive and Kandle court.

Kandle drive and Kandle court bear the name of 1st Lt. Victor L. Kandle, 15th Infantry regiment, for his action on Jan. 25, 1945, near Loslenkrantz, France. The citation reads in part: "While slowly bleeding to death from a painful stomach wound, he single-handedly fought off an attack by two German companies with his automatic rifle, directed an artillery barrage on the SS troops in front of him, and saved his patrol and possibly his company from annihilation."

Squires lane got its name from Sgt. John C. Squires, 30th Infantry regiment, who was awarded the Medal of Honor for his action on April 23-24, 1944, near Padiglione, Italy. "As a platoon messenger, he used a captured German machine gun to repel several enemy counterattacks. As a result of his determined resistance, he captured 15 other machine guns and then rushed forward to force the enemy in the quarry to surrender. He captured 32 more German soldiers."

CHRISTIAN LANE HONORS PFC. Herbert F. Christian, 15th Infantry regiment, who won the Congressional Medal of Honor near Padiglione, Italy. According to the citation which accompanied his medal, "he attacked a strong enemy position consisting of at least four Germans and distracting their fire in order that his 12 men might advance. He was hit by an ambush although his right leg was severely above the knee."

Central court bears the name of 2nd Lt. Robert Craig, 15th Infantry regiment, who received the Medal of Honor for his action on July 11, 1943, in Favarrata, Sicily. His citation reads: "He led his platoon in a concentrated fire of a force of approximately 100 Germans so that they were killed or wounded three others."

Top Student Post Soldier Wins Honor

Student of the week at the Third Army Food Service School is a Fort Benning soldier, Pfc. Hemerack V. Pierce of Company L, 15th Infantry regiment, who is enrolled in the cook's course at school officials have announced.

Pfc. Pierce enlisted in February, 1946, and has been in the food service field during his four years of army service. School officials, in selecting him as the top student, stated that he has demonstrated a great deal of aptitude and that his work has been dependable and conscientious.

Pierce is scheduled to graduate March 31.

In Airborne Training

Lt. Col. Lamar A. Welch and Lee Wallace, instructors in the Infantry School's Tactical department, received leaves of absence from their assigned duties last week to attend the five-week basic airborne course here.

Food Service Opens Course

A new school opened by food service officials, in cooperation with the post engineer, is expected to attract some 75 different students each day during its indefinite operation.

Maj. John A. Rilovich, Infantry Center food service supervisor, said the maximum class will begin March 14 in the new Kitchen Equipment Maintenance school that will be held three hours each afternoon at Shady Hunt Officers club.

Designed for all Infantry Center dining hall personnel, the course will instruct students in how to get the maximum effectiveness out of their kitchen equipment. Sessions will be each Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday afternoon. A student will be required to attend two sessions to complete the course.

SGT. 1ST CL. JOE BENNER SHOWS RESULT OF PRACTICE Undisputed Marksman Says Practice Is Answer To Competitors

Pistol Titlist Here

Champ Riddling Post's Targets

To say the least, Joe Benner has accomplished his uncanny rise to success with some mighty unorthodox methods. Thirty-one year old Joe, who is a sergeant first class at Fort Knox's (Ky.) Armored School and the world's champion pistol shot, is at Fort Benning for several weeks competing for another honor.

Currently, robust and muscle-pumped Joe is seeking a seat on the army field forces' pistol team, an outfit highly recognized in handgun match circles. So, every day during his two-week stay at the infantry center, Joe, with more than 20 other aspirants for a team position, points his trusty little pistol down range at Mitchell range and starts peppering up the bull's eye.

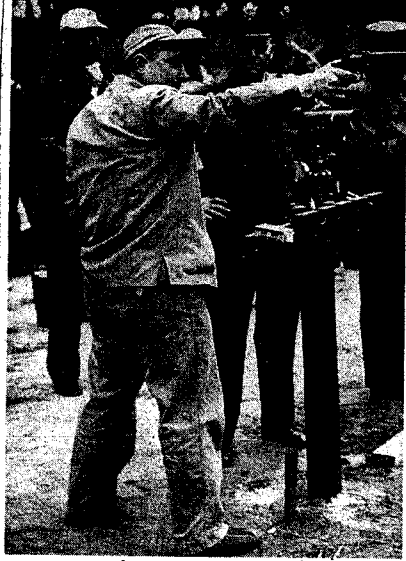

THE RISE JOE MADE from an obscure army recruit to holder of 42 national record certificates and hundreds of other trophies and medals, is much the same as any ambitious youth who delights in trying something new once in awhile.

At 18, Joe Benner joined the army. According to his own story, he had very little previous contact with a pistol—probably nothing more than an occasional glance at one. But in the army, he took up a fairly steady study of the handgun and soon became one of its biggest fans. Through his years of army service, he developed his own style of firing the pistol, even though he was instructing hundreds of pistol students each year in the "correct" firing technique.

Joe's grip on his rust-spotted 1911 A5 pistol is so tight that at times, his finger tips become white from lack of blood. His huge index finger is pushed through the trigger guard as far as possible. And when he squeezes them off, it's like the tick-tock of a metronome.

ON THE FIRING LINE, HE is the perfect example of the well-ordered mind. Though he never hurries, and everything is done with deliberation, when the command to fire is given, he is always ready. His thoroughness and orderly manner of commencing fire seem to make things fall in their accustomed places. During his intense concentration on the target, he swings his idle left hand into his pants pocket.

Critics of Joe's shooting stance have said he could attain more accuracy—which seems very unlikely considering his records—if he laid the target more. Instead, Joe stands at a nearly exact 90-degree angle to the white sheet of paper. Apparently, he has decided the use of this advice in preference to his own title-winning position. In November, 1949, Joe, competing with 22 other crack pistol shooters representing nations from

GIs' Blood Helps Save Life Of Columbus Tumor Victim

Eight more men from the Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, responded quickly to another emergency call for blood from Columbus City hospital last Thursday.

This time the request was made in an effort to save the life of Mrs. Luvenia Kinsley, a tumor patient and mother-in-law of Sgt. Horace Smith, a member of the battalion. It has been reported that Mrs. Kinsley is recovering rapidly.

The following donated one pint of blood each: M-Sgt. Columbus Bryant, Sgts. A. C. Cotton, Jonathan Brantly, Horace Smith, Lester Wade, Frank Sain and Wellington Davenport and Pfc. Willie Battles.

Only last Monday the Third Battalion received a call from City hospital for blood to save the life of a cancer patient. The call was answered by Sgts. Marcus Moring and Ed C. Burns, Cpl. Clifton Gray and Pfc. Elmo Sapp.

Team Schedules Firepower Tour

Fort Benning's Organized Reserve Corps instruction team No. 3 is scheduled to leave next week for a 10-day tour of Mississippi and Alabama, where it will demonstrate the infantry's fire power to members of the two states' civilian components.

The scheduled itinerary includes visits to Columbus, Clarksdale, Vicksburg, Jackson and Meridian, Miss., and Mobile, Ala.

The four-man team from Benning is touring Mississippi and Alabama as part of the army's policy of keeping members of the Organized Reserve Corps and national guard up-to-date on the latest developments in weapons, tactics and techniques of the army.

Members of the team include 1st Lt. Douglas W. Syverson and M-Sgt. LARRY E. BEASELEY, Glenn H. Hutcheson and Aubrey Sellers, all of the Second battalion, 15th Infantry regiment.

They will display many recently developed weapons and numerous other weapons of the new infantry, including the new rocket launcher or bazooka, which is capable of stopping armored vehicles. Also to be displayed are the 4.2 mortar, M-16, with grenade launcher, flame-thrower, automatic rifle, new mortar T-106 and 57 mm and 75 mm recoilless rifles.

The team is expected to return to Fort Benning around March 21.

ONE PHASE OF EXPERT marksmanship that ruffles competitors is his disturbing ability to alter his sights in the midst of rapid fire. Frequently, Joe will find that some of his shots are not hitting the exact center of the black bull, so, with the click of a small screwdriver, he whips out a small screwdriver and makes a slight turn in the range.

And here's proof: Last week, Joe consented to posing for a picture that appears with this story. The photographer asked Joe to stand by a bullet-riddled target and appear to be aiming. Instead, Joe stood on the firing line and squeezed off seven shots that entered three small holes very neatly. Colonel Swindler stopped him and said, "Joe, spread them out so we can see more holes." Joe obliged by spreading out the other three shots for a larger pattern.

Private Is Transferred
Pvt. Marvin W. Penner has been transferred from 33rd Transportation Truck company to Headquarters and Headquarters company, 32d Transportation Truck battalion.

VA Will Hear Complaints On Dividends

Columbus Veteran's Administration officials said this week that if they are to be of service in settling alleged incorrect NSLI dividend payments, veterans must bring the slip received with their checks as well as allied papers when making their inquiry.

VA officials warned that any money due the government as a result of overpayment of benefits or other indebtedness is deductible from the total dividend due and that such deductions are shown on the slip issued with the check.

If any such government indebtedness was repaid by a soldier shortly prior or subsequent to the issuance of the dividend check, VA officials request that he wait at least 30 days before making a claim for the amount in dispute in order to give them a chance to make a correction. Official reiterated previous announcements that all veterans, who made applications for the NSLI dividend last year and who have not yet received the card acknowledging receipt of the application, should take the matter up with the VA as soon as possible so that a duplicate application can be submitted.

Additional caution was expressed by VA officials regarding change of address notification to postal authorities. All individuals who have changed their mailing address since submitting their application for the dividend should notify postal authorities are advised of their new address so that checks can be forwarded.

VA officials warned that any money due the government as a result of overpayment of benefits or other indebtedness is deductible from the total dividend due and that such deductions are shown on the slip issued with the check.

Chemical Found To Harden Sand

If beaches are ever invaded again, there'll probably be no getting stuck in the sand.

The Navy department announced this week that GI's can look forward to concrete-hard beaches. It'll all be the result of a new chemical that will harden sand within a matter of minutes.

Only Ten Fluencies Tests Show Lack Of Linguists Here

Less than 20 percent of Fort Benning personnel whose qualification cards denote some ability to speak, read or write a foreign language actually have a passable knowledge of the tongue.

And, less than three percent are fluent in the lingo.

These conclusions were drawn from the results of the first round of language proficiency tests completed last week under the supervision of the Third Army Central Examining and Computing Agency's Testing section.

Out of a total of 308 officers and enlisted men who took examinations in 14 different languages, only 60 demonstrated their ability to get along in the tongue. Fifty of these were given general ratings of "fair," while the other ten were generally "fluent."

Fluencies were recorded in only six of the languages with German and Polish leading the field with three each. The Japanese, Lithuanian, Russian and Spanish tongues had one fluency each.

Tests were given in three languages without either a "fluent" or "fair" rating being given. These were Chinese, Greek and Persian. Two exams were given in Chinese, four in Greek and one in Persian.

Each of the 14 languages had one or more "poor" ratings. The exams were broken down into three parts—understanding, reading and writing—and the general ratings were given on the basis of composite scores.

The largest number of tests, 108, was given in German, with French running a close second with 107.

In German, seven fluencies in understanding and 20 in reading were recorded. Only one man, however, proved his ability to write the language fluently.

One of the remarkable features of the French language tests was the fact that none of the 107 men examined attained a rating of "fluent" either in general knowledge of the tongue or ability to understand it. Four men others were rated "fair."

Two of six men who took exams in Chinese were rated "poor" in all phases of the test. In Persian, in Greek, however, one man was fluent and three fair in ability to understand the language, but all four flunked the reading and writing phases of the exam.

Two Czech men who took tests in Czechoslovakian were given ratings of "fair" in general knowledge of the language, while the other four were given identical ratings of "poor." Identical ratings were given the six men who took exams in Hungarian. In addition to the one man who attained a classification of "fluent" in Japanese, four others took the test. All were rated "poor."

Twenty tests were given in Norwegian with only one man receiving a general rating of "fair." Lithuanian men were examined with six failing to reach the "fair" category.

Although none of the five persons to take the Russian exam was able to write the language, one fluent and two additional were recorded in general knowledge.

In Portuguese, one man was given a general rating of "fair," while four others who took the test were classed as "poor" in all phases.

In Spanish tests were given in 107 examinations. Three of the 107 men attained classifications of "fair," but 16 failed the examination.

Twenty-three fluencies were recorded in Polish, marks made by 17 of those examined placed them in the "poor" bracket. Sixty others were rated "fair."

Corporal Receives Help In Securing Needed Pass

Another Infantry Center enlistee came forth this week with a story of the American Red Cross.

Cpl. Edward E. Wilds, Section I, Military Police detachment, who told of the unexpected death of his father in England, S. C. said that within a matter of five hours the Red Cross had secured a five-day pass for him to go home and had made available $10 for expenses.

Corporal Wilds also told of another time the Red Cross extended its relief service to him. In 1945, while he was stationed in Pensacola, Fla., Wilds was left off the pay roster for several successive months. As a result of his temporary destitution, the Red Cross loaned him money until financial arrangements could be made.

The 28-year old army veteran said that Red Cross also notified him in Calcutta, India, in 1944 that his grandmother had died. While standing all this as my work was satisfactory as far as the mess sergeant was concerned.

J.I.C. Talks

QUESTION: WHAT IS YOUR BIGGEST GRIPE? YOU CAN HAVE ANY SUGGESTIONS TO REMEDY THE SITUATION? CPL. K. L. SECHLER, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Student Training regiment. Recently there has been a lot of talk about lowering a man's separate ration from $1.05 a day to 90 cents a day due to an anticipated drop in food prices. I haven't been able to see any decrease in food prices, and if this is done before the prices actually go down we will certainly be hurting. I hope the matter can be straightened out.

QUESTION: WHAT IS YOUR BIGGEST GRIPE? YOU CAN HAVE ANY SUGGESTIONS TO REMEDY THE SITUATION? CPL. K. L. SECHLER, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Student Training regiment. I think the standards for efficiency and personal conduct in the army today are not high enough, and this is not sufficient emphasis is not put on that individual's responsibility for that efficiency and high standard not fulfilling their job and shouldering their responsibility. I think if they were with no disagreement and things to grip about would be eliminated.

QUESTION: WHAT IS YOUR BIGGEST GRIPE? YOU CAN HAVE ANY SUGGESTIONS TO REMEDY THE SITUATION? CPL. K. L. SECHLER, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Student Training regiment. Everytime something goes wrong in the officers' barracks, the CID runs to Service company and we have to show our hands and pockets. They always come to us first, and it's pretty embarrassing to all of us. I feel that something should be done to help this situation.

QUESTION: WHAT IS YOUR BIGGEST GRIPE? YOU CAN HAVE ANY SUGGESTIONS TO REMEDY THE SITUATION? CPL. K. L. SECHLER, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Student Training regiment. I have been in the army seven years, and I am a completely happy man with no gripes.

I'm mixed up on the promotion business. I have been in the private first class for a year and was a corporal six months on test. When the ratings came out, the regulations something were changed to a year and I didn't get my rating as a corporal. I don't understand all this as my work was satisfactory as far as the mess sergeant was concerned.

ODDS ENDS

By STEVE BOLAND

Fort Benning's Doughboy cagers left for Atlanta and the Georgia State Open basketball tournament last Sunday after dropping a 51-48 decision to Bibb Manufacturing company in the final game of the Bibb Invitational tourney at Comer auditorium last Saturday. With the termination of the state tourney Benning's 1949-50 cage season will also come to a close.

Volleyball tournaments are being held in the various units in preparation for the forthcoming post volleyball tournament. To the winner of the post tourney will fall the task of retaining the Third Army title in that event which has been held by the Doughboys for the past three years.

The regular season's play in the Infantry Center bowling league came to a close finish in both cases to a close finish in both leagues with the Company A, Infantry School detachment team taking the post title for the second consecutive year. The outstanding bowlers for the season proved to be Vern Ashbacher, who finished with the highest season's average of 189.5, and Norbert Szymarek, of the 3440th Area Service Unit's Section I team, who took twofold honors with the highest set of 653 and highest game with a 245.

VERN ASHBACHER Highest Average

All eyes are now turned to the spring and summer sports with baseball holding the limelight. Although league play does not start until the middle of May, there should be plenty of hot pre-season competition to keep the post fans busy.

Paul Bonair's return to the Student Training regiment ball team after a brief taste of civilian life should strengthen the trooper infield for the coming season. Bonair along with Bob Kinard should form one of the finest keystone combinations in the league this summer.

Billy Fitzpatrick, post flyweight champion who represented the Doughboy team in the recent Third Army tourney, was awarded the area championship when it was discovered that George Wret of the Fort Bragg, N. C., team who defeated Billy in the finals holds a professional rating. Billy was disappointed in not being able to appear in the army-wide affair but the list of the Third Army team had already been submitted with Wret's name on the roster, and the change came about too late to get Billy into action.

Jimmy Nichols, one-armed golfer from Massachusetts, gave an interesting and profitable demonstration at the post Country club last Saturday afternoon despite the continuous downpour. Jimmy, who made his first appearance at Fort Benning in August of last year was also greeted with liquid sunshine at that time.

Dough Cagers Lose Close 51-48 Finale To Bibb Team

Applications Open For Coaching Jobs

The special services office has announced that applications are being accepted from persons interested in coaching the Fort Benning track and swimming teams for the 1950 season. Those interested are asked to submit their applications in writing to the special services officer with the following information: name, rank, service number, organization and background for qualification.

Downpour Halts Infantry Track And Field Meet

After completion of the special 100-yard dash event in which every physically able man in the unit participated, rain brought a halt to the track and field meet, scheduled by the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, at Doughboy stadium last Saturday morning.

Unit officials announced that the meet will be resumed at the stadium Saturday, with the first event slated for 8 p.m. In an attempt to discover "hidden track talent" in the unit as the result of the mass running of the 100-yard dash, athletic and recreation officials said they were pleased with the showing made by participants. As expected however, the best time of 10 seconds flat was stepped off by fleet-footed Chuck Hall. Gene Thomas, Bob Murphy, James Miller, Elanathan Thornton, Jimmie Brown, Ted Lewis, Ed Baldwin, George Smith and Cary England all breached the tape in 11 seconds.

Others turning in top performances included B. Jordan, B. Scroggins, J. Curry, J. Barges, E. Harrison, F. Malone, Z. Lemelle, F. Sain, E. Taylor, E. Burns, W. Wise, H. Hammond, M. Thomas, F. Redding, F. Jackson, Z. Pipkins, J. Eldridge, J. Rosemond, F. Terrell, P. Hilliard, F. Scott, F. Gilbert, D. Dixon, R. Carter, E. Gentry, T. V. Shipp.

Fort Benning's Doughboy cagers lost a close, action-packed, 51-48 tilt to the Bibb Manufacturing company's team in the final game of the Bibb Invitational tourney at Comer auditorium last Saturday night.

The Doughs, paced by Vern Griffin and Jack Mareson qualified for the finals when they defeated the Student Training regiment team, another Benning entry, in the semi-finals Friday night. Previous Doughboy victories, leading to the semi-finals were gained at the expense of the Central Christian and Chipley teams.

The Bibb team reached the final stage in taking the Spano restaurant team in another Friday night fray.

Saturday night's finale proved close all the way and had the crowd on edge throughout. Both teams traded point for point, with Benning holding a 16-13 lead at the end of the first quarter. Three consecutive buckets by Jackson of Bibb put his team in the lead, but field goals by Griffin and Scott of Benning, deadlocked the count at 20-20 at the end of the second quarter. The Bibb team, with 13 and 12 points respectively, turned on the steam to put their team into a lead which was never relinquished.

Griffin and Mareson, who were high point men for the Bibb team, with 13 and 12 points respectively, turned on the steam to put their team into a lead which was never relinquished.

3RD BATTALION CAGERS CLING TO LEAGUE LEAD

An underdog but spirited Gael five from the Warren Williams apartments pinned a surprising 39-34 defeat on the previously unbeaten Third Battalion quintet of the 15th Infantry regiment in an industrial league tilt at the Ninth street YMCA last Thursday night.

The loss snapped a string of eight straight wins in league play for the soldier five, which despite the loss still holds a comfortable lead on the first place spot with an 8-1 record.

Determined to win the honor of being the first team to beat the infantrymen, the fifth place Gaels fought the Trojan from the opening whistle, cashing in on every scoring opportunity possible while the Third Battalion cagers were busy experiencing their worst off night of the season.

The Gaels picked up a 7-4 lead at the quarter, but the infantrymen, fighting to keep their record intact, came to life in the second quarter to go ahead with an 18-12 count at half time. The Gael, led by Custer Gough and Foster Doctor, went on a scoring spree in the second half and built a lead which the infantrymen never could overtake, despite a 31-31 deadlock in the late stages of the game. Gough and Doctor, with 15 and 12 points, were high for the Gaels, while Wilmoth Baker and Chuck Patrick were the offensive stars from each side.

The battalion cagers will try to get back into the win column tonight when they face the last place Bealwood Tigers.

Section I Wins Volleyball Meet

The Area Service Unit provisional group volleyball tournament came to an end last Friday, with the Headquarters and Headquarters Station I team emerging victorious in a final, four-point match.

The Section I team made it two straight in taking this final match, finishing the tourney with a record of four wins against one loss in taking the four-point series.

Section I defeated the 27th Car company, Section II, the 328th Ordnance battalion and the 130th Quartermaster Bakery company.

By virtue of winning the unit title, the team will represent the Area Service unit in the post volleyball tourney.

A school for baseball umpires was started by Infantry Center special services last Monday. Each unit of regimental level has been requested to select six men interested in the school to attend the classes.

John Lockamy, 15th Infantry Regiment, who recently returned from a six-week course at the George Bare School for Umpires will supervise the instruction, assisted by Howard Smith of the special services office, who is another Bare trainee.

The course will consist of a study of the rule book, including the latest changes. Practical work will include the positions of the umpire in calling plays and the do's and don'ts of officiating. A written examination will be given at the end of the course.

Instruction will be held for one hour on each week day during March. Visitors are invited to attend any of the classes, if official.

The purpose of the school is not only to acquaint the students with the know-how of officiating with the know-how of officiating furnish umpires for intra-unit competition when requested to do so.

ISD Bowlers Cling to Title

The Company A, Infantry School detachment, bowling team of the Infantry Center Bowling league recaptured the league bowling title for the second consecutive year by defeating Company C by 69 pins in a five-game rolloff last Saturday at the Main bowling alleys.

Vern Ashbacher, who has held the position of team manager for the past two seasons, is the only member remaining from last year's squad. Along with Vern Ashbacher, who recorded the highest average for the season, Williams provided the needed spark to retain the title.

The squad took the record for the team average with a 172 and also the season's high game individual averages for the seasons play were as follows: Vern Ashbacher, 189.8, Charles Sparks, 173, David Williams, 171, Joe DiGiacomo, Bill Kaeserman, 160, Harvey Bogardus, 157 and A. F. Vockick, 155.

The Company C team, paced by Bob Rives who rolled a high game of 254, defeated the 3440th Infantry team in another five game match rolled off last Friday noon at the Main bowling alleys.

Company C's win over the ASU team qualified them for the play-off for the post title against the defending champions.

Work Progressing On Athletic Fields

Baseball Park New Features Being Sodded For Stadium

Gowdy field has been undergoing a thorough repair job under the direction of M-Sgt. Bill Fannin of the Infantry Center special services office. Some of the work that has been done and is being completed includes reworking the mound, installation of a new rubber, filling in low spots in the infield, forming a gradual slope from the mound for proper drainage and checking erosion. The grass has been trimmed both in the infield and the outfield to eliminate most of the bad spots, and 2,000 new seats of the type used in the bleachers and dugouts have been repaired.

Doughboy stadium also received treatment in preparation for the forthcoming track and pentathlon meets. The cinders have been replaced and a curb installed inside the track. The sawdust has been replaced in the jump and vaulting pits and runways to the vaulting and broad jump areas have been reworked. Both horizontal and vertical grenade courts are being erected for the pentathlon meets, and four horseshoe pits are being built at the northeast corner of the stadium. The football field has been reworked and low spots in the outfield have been filled in. The bleachers and grandstand have been installed.

Tell them you and your buddies will boycott the joint if they don't give you a ten percent cut in prices. After all, you're in the Army and the Army supports Columbus, doesn't it? What if Columbus does have some of the largest cotton mills and manufacturing concerns in the South? It's the army that really supports Columbus, isn't it? You ought to know. You didn't go to school to eat your lunch, did you?

You're walking down Broadway. You're a big shot. You're a soldier. No one tells you anything. Show them how independent you are. Show them the casual dress of the new Army. Slide your hat on the back of your head. Tilt your hat a little to one side.

Open up your coat. Doesn't that feel much better? Feel that cool air circulating around your body? Refreshing, isn't it? So what if the MPs do pick you up? Aren't they always gunning for you poor GI's? Thousands of soldiers in Columbus, and they always pick on innocent guys like you, don't they? Or do they? You were only trying to make like Humphrey Bogart. You didn't mean any harm, did you?

People don't care if a soldier looks sharp. They don't care if you're polite and courteous. Isn't that what the wise guys always tell you?

All the people do is pay for the clothes you wear, the food you eat, the guns you fire and your salary.

And you think they aren't interested in how you act? Do you think they aren't interested in how you dress, how you're fed and cared for?

Doughs To Meet Cards on April 7

The traditional Fort Benning-Columbus Cardinal spring exhibition tilt has been scheduled for the night of April 7 on Gowdy field, Tom Gordon, business manager of the City's Class A South Atlantic league club, has announced.

Although the makeup of the Fort Benning squad hasn't been decided, it was expected that it would be built around the remnants of the 1949 Doughboys. The Doughs this year will be out to avenge the 20-0 drubbing dealt them by the Columbus Braves last year on Gowdy field.

The Card-Dough tilt will be one of 12 pre-season contests slated by the Redbirds this year. In addition to their Gowdy field appearance, the Cards will play five exhibition tilts at Golden Park, their home diamond. Five of the games will be played at the Cardinal spring training camp at Albany, Ga., while the other contest will be a clash in Valdosta, Ga., with the Macon Peaches, last season's Sally League champs.

Prior to the meeting with Macon on March 31, the city club will play games with the Omaha Cardinals of the Class A Western league in Albany on March 28 and 29. On March 30, they will meet Winston-Salem, N. C., at the Albany camp.

The first Golden Park exhibition will be a Sunday afternoon clash with the Oklahoma City Indians of the Class AA Texas league on April 1.

Following the Card-Indian tilt, Manager Hal Anderson's charge will return to Albany on April 4 for a game with Lynchburg, Va., of the Piedmont league, but will be back in Columbus for an April 6 tilt with Allentown, Pa., of the Class B Interstate league.

After the short trip to Fort Benning, the Cards will return to Golden Park for an April 8 night game with the Birmingham Barons of the Southern association, a Class AA circuit. Games with Omaha at Golden Park on April 9 and 10 will conclude the pre-season activity of the Cardinals, who will open a home against the Macon Peaches on April 12.

Bob Bale Class Open to Benning

Infantry Center men and women have been extended an invitation by the Columbus Junior Chamber of Commerce to take advantage of the Bob Bale course in personal development which starts next Monday. Sponsored by the Junior chamber, the course will run from Monday through Friday night at Columbus High school auditorium and is sold on a money back guarantee basis. Hours are 7:30 to 10:30 p.m.

The course consists of lectures, exercises, drills, skits, contests and audience participation, all aimed at developing a more attractive personality, tips to remember names and faces, become an effective public speaker and the techniques of leadership.

Bob Bale, who will conduct the course, is an outstanding lecturer, teacher and humorist. He was formerly connected with the Dale Carnegie Institute. During World War II, he served in the Air Force as an enlisted man and officer and was overseas in the China-Burma-India theater with Armed Forces Radio Service.

Cost of the course is $15 and includes a 52-week follow-up titled, "This Way to Leadership." Enrollment cards and more information are available at the Infantry Center public information office.

Assigned to New Unit

Pvt. John L. Barbee has been transferred from the Third Replacement company to Battery A, 860th Armored Field Artillery battalion.

ONE-ARMED SHOTMAKER

... Jimmy Nichols, famed one-armed golfer, demonstrated to a gallery of Fort Benning golf enthusiasts the technique he uses in making a shot with a No. 7 iron. Although a scheduled exhibition match with post golfers was called off because of heavy rain, Nichols conducted his shotmaking clinic at the Fort Benning Golf and Country club last Saturday afternoon.

Fishing Group Plans Tourney

Plans are again being formed by the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association for a fishing tourney to be held at King's pond sometime within the next month.

Details pertaining to the tourney have not been definitely settled as yet, but the association said that, other than the prizes to be presented to the winners in the various events, the fish committee will attempt to have some well known bait and fly casting experts on hand to give exhibitions.

The tournament will be open only to members of the association. Although a person holds a federal permit, he is not considered a member of the association until he has paid the required $1.25 annual fee and membership, officials declared.

Any persons interested in participating in the tourney are urged to take the necessary steps in securing a membership in the association, officials said.

NG, ORC Men Begin Training

Another 200 noncommissioned officers from national guard, Organized Reserve corp and regular army units began classes this week in the Infantry School's new weapons course.

The 15-week course, which combines the separately conducted light and heavy weapons courses, is a step toward eliminating lost motion in running two similar courses concurrently. Authorities pointed out, an Infantry School official said, in addition, that students would sit side by side, regardless of their specialty. When examinations are held, however, different tests will be given according to the students' military occupational specialty.

Ordnance to Hold Track-Field Meet

The 328th Ordnance battalion of the Area Service Unit Provisional group will hold an intra-company track and field meet at Doughboy stadium and Gowdy field on Friday, March 17. The first event is scheduled for 1 p.m.

This will be the final meet of an elimination affair started earlier in the week by the various companies of that organization. Lt. A. D. McGinnis, athletic and recreation officer of the 328th, said he hopes to pick a winning team for entrance into the Provisional group's track and field meet scheduled for March 24.

Telephone Service Keeps on being a BIG BARGAIN

The price you pay for telephone service is low—low in comparison to the costs of most other things you buy—low in comparison to our costs of supplying service. For only a few pennies a day you are in speaking distance of friends and relatives at any hour—a real package of convenience and pleasure!

Always a bargain, telephone service is growing in value every day as the circle of friends and relatives you can call becomes larger, and service becomes faster and better.

Improper Addresses Constitute Daily Struggle For Postal Directory Men

BY F. B. RICHARDSON
Bayonet Staff Writer

Mail from home is one of the greatest morale boosters known, and in delivering it promptly, the junior partner of the far-flung United States postal system, the army post office staff is called upon to insure prompt mail delivery to the correct individual, hand claim.

Today, modified only by improvements developed in the past years of operation, the army post office at Fort Benning, staffed by one officer and 12 enlisted men, works side by side with Fort Benning branch post office civilians, all members of the regular United States postal department.

THE CENTRAL POSTAL DIRECTORY is responsible for the handling of all mail which cannot be delivered directly to authorized mail clerks because of improper addressing. Mail is brought from Columbus seven times a day in army postal trucks to the branch post office here, which sorts it out for a breakdown by unit and delivery to authorized mail clerks.

During this process all mail which cannot be handled in this manner because of erroneous or insufficient individual or unit designation is immediately turned over to the army post office. According to records kept by the Army post office, an average of about 500 pieces of mail per day require directory service. At this point the Central Postal Directory enters the picture, using as its principle troubleshooting weapon the huge locator file, which contains a record of every person on the post as well as the addresses of all persons who have left the post during the past six months.

VARIOUS METHODS ARE used in locating the person to whom a letter or package is addressed, depending largely upon what information is contained in the address.

An incomplete address is the most frequent problem confronting them, army post office officials claim, and the most common type of incomplete address is the one which omits an essential part of the designation. According to the postal officials, it is common for the army post office to receive mail addressed to "Pvt. John Doe, 3440th Area Service Unit, Section 11."

Unfortunately for the prospective recipient, there are four separate organizations in the 3440th with the designation, "Section 11" Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Military Police detachment, W. C. detachment, and Station Medical—and the mail has to be held up until the locator file is checked. Another common deficiency noted by the Army post office staff is the failure to include grades, first names or initials and serial numbers on mail addressed to Fort Benning troops. Jones and J. B. Smiths, 283rd Signal Company, are typical of the many who omit rank and address number designation in their mail.

Legible handwriting is an additional source of confusion, often necessitating directory service, postal clerks stated. Strangely enough, unusual names such as Pappachristides or Yilmazkapi, don't cause as much trouble in this regard as do the shorter, more common names, they said. For example, Harris is easily confused with Morris. Parker with Parker, Hawker and Harker, and many names with the initial letter T are confused with L, and M with W.

THE MOST VALUABLE CLUE IN determining who the person is in cases of this sort is the serial number, which postal officials declared, is one reason they stress its use in all correspondence.

Postal authorities estimate that about 90 percent of the mail turned over to the army post office for directory service is disposed of during the first processing. This takes from one to three days, depending on such factors as work load, the nature of the error in the addressing and the time the mail came in.

Postal regulations require incorrectly addressed mail which is sent to the Central Postal Directory to be held for at least 15 days, unless the addressee is found before that time. During this period, locator files are checked and rechecked in an effort to find the person or unit to whom the mail should be delivered.

After 15 days have elapsed, but not over 30 days from the time the mail was received, it is disposed according to regulations in one of three ways, provided the addressee cannot be located. If the mail was forwarded from another army post office it is returned to that post office. If a return address has been given, it is returned to the sender. In all other cases the mail is turned over to the Fort Benning post office, which sends undeliverable mail to the dead letter office.

To illustrate how a typical day's receipt of misaddressed mail is disposed of, officials selected Feb. 11. A total of 535 pieces of mail were turned over to the army post office for directory service on that date. All but 48 of the addresses were located and the mail readdressed on that same day. Of the 48 pieces were located on subsequent checks during the 15-day period mail must be held, leaving 14 pieces of mail which will be returned or sent to the dead letter office.

Certain common mistakes in addressing mail, noted by an army postal staff at Fort Benning, appear to be typical of parents. Others are typical of girlfriends or fellow soldiers who have lost their buddies' complete address. Parents, for example, will often confuse an old outfit with a new post or vice versa, authorities said. Pvt. Joe Doakes' stationing at Fort Unionification as a launch rocketman assigned to launching Company A, Second Telesonic Weapons regiment, finds out he has been transferred to Fort Benning, and writes his family informing them of his new military address.

OUT OF FORCE OF HABIT, his mother addresses a letter using his old unit designation coupled with his new post. Mail of this sort is normally checked through the locator file until the unit to which Pvt. Doakes has been assigned at Fort Benning is found.

If for any reason it can't be found, or if Pvt. Doakes' orders were revoked, the mail is sent to the unit to which it was addressed at the proper post if it is known that such a unit is actually at that post. If not, it is returned to the sender.

Girl friends and long-separated buddies at other posts are usually responsible for the handling of all postal clerks, the letter addressed simply, "Pvt. John Doe, Fort Benning, Ga." While it is not an unsurmountable task to find Pvt. Doe, it does necessitate a considerable amount of checking, particularly if the addressee's name happens to be Smith, Brown or Jones instead of Doe, postal authorities complained.

One correspondent, anxious to be held, wrote a letter to Cpl. Julian G. Cates, Fort Benning, Ga., adding in a firm underscored script "Please locate, cook in the mess hall, he's a cook."

Occasionally, mail bears addresses which put the most astute mail clerk. One such letter was addressed to "Service Company of the United States Stationed at Fort Benning."

How people dream up improbable unit designations of this sort is a question which no postal clerk can answer, not to mention the fact that he can't deliver the letter. But there is even a reasonable clue to the identity of the addressee or his unit: the men in the Central Postal Directory will find it.

Army Cites Sergeant

M-Sgt. James B. Johnson, 3440th Area Service unit, has been awarded the Third Army certificate of achievement. It was announced this week by Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., army commander.

Duties Assigned 4 Enlisted Men

Duty assignments for four men of the Infantry School detachment were announced this week by Col. Charles E. Woodruff, commander. M-Sgt. Madison D. Bush, formerly with detachment headquarters, has been transferred to Company A for duty with the adjutant general's Miscellaneous section.

Sgt. 1st Cl. John E. Walsh, who came to Fort Benning from the 31st Medical group, 31st Fighter-Bomber wing, Turner Airforce base, Ga., has been assigned to detachment headquarters, pending further orders. Sgt. Riley L. Taylor has been transferred to Company B from

PX Aims Same Since 1895, But Today's Service Better

BY F. B. RICHARDSON, Bayonet Staff Writer

From the early days of the army, when roving merchants called "sutlers" supplied troops with tobacco, whiskey, knives, horseblankets and other articles, often at outrageous prices, men with the best possible means of daily life has been a weighty problem.

The PX today is almost identical with its mission as stated in those first regulations. "Its primary purpose is to supply the troops at reasonable prices with the articles of ordinary use, wear and equipment not supplied by the government and to afford them means of recreation and amusement."

The PX, until the advent of World War II, was a completely independent unit at a military post. Each major unit on a post, and usually a rifle, operated its own PX, which might be anything from good to downright poor.

IN 1941 THE EXCHANGE was reorganized. Individual ownership in an exchange was abolished, and all the PXs at one post were placed under central supervision. The dividend system used at the present time came into being during this organization.

As provided in current PX regulations, the serviceman is an investor in his exchange, which means that he not only can buy merchandise at a considerable saving, but dividends which are paid for out of PX operating profits.

What the PX means to the soldier is readily evident, but it is sometimes not easy to see how it can help the national economy. According to PX officials, however, it benefits the surrounding areas in three distinct ways.

First, because of the dividend provisions of existing regulations, the operation of most of the soldier's extensive recreation facilities at Fort Benning are paid for out of PX operating profits. That means that there is far less burden on the civilian community to provide healthful recreation facilities for the troops.

Secondly, the operation of the PX provides employment, and a payroll not supported by federal tax money for local civilians. At Fort Benning, the payroll for the 225 civilians employed in PX activities averages $40,000 a month. All other operating expenses, including utilities are paid for out of profits rather than appropriated funds.

THIRDLY, THE PX BUYS merchandise whenever possible from local distributors or manufacturers. Most of the tobacco, toilet articles, toys, sporting goods, groceries and meats sold at the Fort Benning exchange are bought locally, and it is the policy of the exchange to do so as long as quality standards and established price structures can be met, post exchange officials said.

As a result of congressional hearings in June and July, 1949, certain restrictions have been imposed on what can be purchased. The overall result being a reduction in the variety of merchandise available and the placing of limits on the prices of many items.

No merchandise may be ordered specially for individuals, and the 20 per cent excise tax is now paid on the so-called "luxury" items, including luggage, jewelry, certain types of toilet articles, wallets, certain pens and pencils, and many more.

As a further outcome of the congressional hearings, there has been a tightening up of the effort to eliminate the use of PX privileges by people who do not properly authorize to do so. That is one of the reasons why military personnel at Fort Benning are required to session when making purchases.

General Collins Cautions Against 'Fragile Security'

The army's chief of staff said today that "fragile security" and possibly economic disaster if the United States were to match Russia in a ship-by-ship, plane-for-plane and tank-and-man-for-man race now in progress.

In cautioning impetuous Americans against fighting to win an international armament lead, Gen. J. Lawton Collins declared that "we must maintain a balance, employing our resources wisely."

General Collins said, moreover, that the greatness of our potential military and industrial strength—and the determination to develop it and share it with our friends—has prevented war during the past several years.

He said, in addition, that future plans of our military coordination and preparedness must be predicated on the "actions of evil forces in the world which are seeking our downfall."

Sergeant Leaves To Attend Course

Sgt. Wesley Wilkins, Headquarters company, Third battalion, 15th Infantry regiment, left last week for Edgewood Arsenal, Md., where he will attend the four-week course in chemical warfare. Before his departure, Sergeant Wilkins was administrative clerk for the plans and training section of the battalion.

Colonel Is Named Chief of Branch

Col. Robert Ward, former G-3 of the Ninth corps in Japan who was recently assigned to the Infantry School, was this week named chief of the Infantry School's Research and Analysis branch.

Colonel Ward, who attended company officer's course at Fort Benning in 1931, is a graduate of the United States Military Academy, West Point.

Pfc. Bailey Is Promoted

Pfc. Arthur H. Bailey, Company H, Airborne battalion, Infantry School detachment was promoted to corporal this week.

The 15th Infantry division participated in the Gassino campaign.

After returning to the U. S. in 1944, he joined the War department general staff as a G-3, remaining there until 1947 when he went to Japan.

Obedying Orders, Gen. Bliss Says Of Hospital Cut

Maj. Gen. Raymond Bliss, army surgeon general, has told a house armed services subcommittee that the army is simply "carrying out orders" of Defense Secretary Louis A. Johnson in closing several military hospitals.

"We were directed to close those hospitals," General Bliss told the group headed by Rep. Rivers, (D-S.C.), Democrat.

He said the medical section was not consulted before the order was issued, and that the five general hospitals scheduled for closing are shut down, the army will have only one general hospital in operation east of the Mississippi river.

"That hospital," he said, "is the Walter Reed General hospital in Washington. It has a bed capacity of 1,600 and it is now treating 1,800 patients."

The three hospitals to which General Bliss referred are Murphy hospital at Waltham, Mass.; Percy Jones General hospital at Battle Creek, Mich.; and Oliver General hospital at Augusta, Ga. (Oliver General hospital is the evacuation point for most of the cases admitted initially to Fort Benning's Station hospital.)

The subcommittee conducting the hearings was appointed by Rep. Carl Vinson, (D-Ga.), chairman of the house armed services committee. Its purpose is to determine if the Defense department economy program is jeopardizing medical care for military personnel and their families.

The subcommittee plans to visit the three hospitals, possibly in about two weeks, as well as the Valley Forge General hospital at Phoenixville, Pa., and the Naval hospital at Long Beach, Calif., which also have been ordered closed.

QUESTION: DO YOU THINK ALL STATES SHOULD PAY A BONUS?

ANSWER: Yes, I think they should. I am from Pennsylvania and have received mine, so if one state can pay, I feel that all the rest should pay it, too.

SGT. WILLIAM DETEMPLE, 52nd Medical Battalion: I think they should. If one state gives a bonus to the vet, all states should follow through because a man from one state has done as much as one from another.

DETEMPLE

OP. CHARLES R. HOUSTON, 568th Medical Ambulance Company: I think there are a number of reasons why the vet should be paid a bonus. First, most of the soldiers need the money, and second, if they did pay the bonus they would be helping the unfortunate who were in the homes where some of our boys were.

SGT. PRINCE ADAMS, 568th Medical Ambulance Company: Yes, I think they should be paid. The soldiers were away during the time so much money was being made, and they were lost out on making high wages. The soldier went overseas to keep the money from coming over to this country, and I think they should be paid for that, especially since the cost of living is so much higher.

OP. JOE T. YOUNGLOOD, 421st Medical Collecting Company: Yes, I think the vets deserve it. I am from the state of South Carolina which is not paying it. I think the vets deserve it, which would draw a lot of money for me.

ROBERT DETSH, 421st Medical Collecting Company: Yes, I think they should pay. I think the vets deserve it if they can do it, all should do it. As long as we are paying income tax, we should put it back into circulation soon.

STR Units Quick to Reach Red Cross Campaign Goal

Ten cadre units of the Student Training Regiment have achieved 100 percent or better in their 1950 Red Cross fund drive at the end of the first week. It has been announced by Col. Sevier R. Tupper, commander.

In token of this achievement, Murray Hill, Fort Benning's Red Cross field director, last Tuesday presented Colonel Tupper with a 100 percent Red Cross sticker.

Mr. Hill said in making the presentation that it gives me great pleasure to be able to present the 100 percent Red Cross sticker to the Student Training Regiment cadre personnel. I am very grateful for the interest shown and the actions taken by the personnel of the Student Training Regiment in this 1950 Red Cross campaign.

The money turned in by the regiment during the first seven days of the drive amounted to $2,139.81.

The money represented a 100 percent contribution by the cadre, both officers and enlisted men, and a 68 percent contribution by officer and enlisted students.

New CO Named For Truck Unit

Capt. Caddie L. Henage has assumed command of the 665th Transportation Truck company of the 52nd Transportation Truck battalion, succeeding Lt. Ernest G. Prevatt. It was announced this week.

Captain Henage, formerly battalion maintenance officer, received his commission Jan. 4, 1949, following graduation from the Officer Candidate School here. Overseas he served with the 83rd Infantry division as a platoon leader, participating in five major campaigns. Among his awards are the Silver Star, Bronze Star and Purple Heart with three oak leaf clusters.

He returned to the U. S. in September, 1945, but went back to Europe the following year as a platoon leader with the 18th Infantry division in Germany. He has been back in the U. S. since February, 1947.

Analysts Weigh Portrex Results

The Operation Portrex spotlight shifted this week from the peace-swept beaches of Vieques island, scene of the largest peacetime maneuver, to the planning tables of the Pentagon building where military analysts will give the tactical results a thorough study.

Approval Given Armed Forces Medical School

Authority has been granted the Department of the Army to establish an Armed Forces Institute of Pathology to be operated under the jurisdiction of the army's surgeon general, according to an announcement from Washington this week.

The institute will be directed by a Medical Corps officer from one of the three arm services, selected by the surgeons general of the army, navy and air force who will serve as the institute's board of governors.

A staff of professional, technical and administrative assistants from the three armed services will assist the director, as will a Scientific Advisory Board of Consultants, recommended by the director and appointed by the army's surgeon general.

The Institute of Pathology will have four departments: the department of pathology, the medical illustration service, the American registry of pathology and the medical museum.

The chief function of the institute will be to serve as the central laboratory of pathology for the Department of Defense. Other related functions will include the maintenance of a consultation service for diagnostic purposes, the conducting of research on disease and injuries of medicomilitary importance, the providing of instruction in advanced pathology and the training of Medical Department enlisted personnel of the armed forces in pathological techniques, medical photography, medical arts and museum activities.

The institute will also stress teaching and education, as exemplified by providing educational material on a loan or gift basis to civilian schools and scientific institutes, by maintaining a medical illustration service and by operation of a medical museum.

A vital part of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology will be the operation of the American registry of pathology in conjunction with the civilian medical profession. Composed of subdivisions sponsored and supported by national organizations of medical, dental and veterinary specialists, the registry will conduct medical research and educational programs.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK Easier Teaching Methods Are Radio Instructor's Aim

If there is anyone at the Infantry Center who virtually eats, sleeps and talks about one subject during his waking hours, it's Soldier of the Week M-Sgt. Ralph L. Faist.

The 31-year-old sergeant of Company B, Infantry School detachment, has more than once distinguished himself while working as a principle instructor with the Infantry School's Radio Repair group.

Since his assignment here in 1947, Sergeant Faist's primary interest has been to simplify the teaching of radio repair. At one time, teaching radio repair was nothing more than telling the student the workings of countless wires, the functions of complicated audio frequencies and the explanation of why radios went on the "blink."

Today all radio repair classes can follow the detailed instruction with the small radio set, which clearly shows the science of radio construction and operation. Sergeant Faist's energetic work in construction and appearance to a regular radio set, for use in classroom work, to supplement the simplified instruction, has made the task of building many small sets for use by the students.

New 'G-String' Would Outmode Commercial Television Cables

The Signal Corps put in its bid this week for a spot in the highly-specialized and competitive television field.

Officials at Fort Monmouth, N. J., announced that a single strand of wire had been invented to carry as many as 100 different television transmissions at the same time. The coaxial cable, which is now used by commercial television, carries only one program at any one time. The new wire could bring about major changes in the present television setup, officials said, by criss-crossing the country and carrying television far beyond its present limit of major urban areas.

The inventor of the wire is a 43-year-old German refugee, Dr. George Goubal. Army scientists working on the project nicknamed the wire "G-string," after its inventor.

The possibility of future development was strong, Signal Corps officials said, because of the simplicity of production, inexpensiveness and high efficiency of the wire.

Another prospect developed by the wire is videophone development, whereby telephone users could see as well as hear the party on the other end of the line.

But the army, not looking for a top spot in the commercial field, has said the wire's primary use would be in the advanced development of radar operations.

Scouts Conduct Court of Honor

In a small but impressive court of honor in the main hall of the Infantry School Monday night, Boy Scouts of troop 107, 27 met an auspicious start for their new year of scouting.

The ceremony had its highlight in the presentation and acceptance of its charter. Another feature part of the program was the presentation of the God of Country award to George Doty.

Steven L. Adams, executive chairman of Scout office made the presentation of the troop charter to Scoutmaster Col. Dennis Moore, commanding officer of the 15th Infantry Regiment, sponsor of the troop.

Scoutmaster 1st Lt. Thomas J. Hallman presented Tenderfoot badges to new scouts Paul Cooper, Markmer Brooks and Robert Turner.

A Warning to Parents Whose Children Play in the Streets

To blame only the driver when children are run down by automobiles is like blaming the manufacturer when you drop and break a China dinner plate. Yet, when children are killed and maimed as the result of their own and their parents' carelessness, it is usually the driver who is punished. Not only does he suffer—the remorse that comes with knowing he has snuffed out a child's life, but he is made to pay with imprisonment or money, sometimes both. In all cases, the parents are held blameless. Of course, they suffer the pain of living without the child they brought into the world, but they are not often censured by their neighbors. However, parents are often more guilty than the driver and deserve to be punished just as much as the driver.

The National Safety Council reports that in 1948, a total of 2,300 children under fourteen were killed and 85,000 injured when struck by motor vehicles. For the most part—and these facts were checked by the Council—these children were playing in or adjacent to streets.

Fort Benning families apparently aren't aware of this staggering casualty today, for a thorough check of past and off-post military communities revealed incredible negligence in almost every area visited. For example, take Benning Park Homes, where the Army has provided an adequate playground, centrally located and well-equipped. Yet, on the afternoon that a Bayonet reporter and photographer were in that area, not one child was using the playground. Instead, they were in the street with their toys and tricycles, their dolls and balls. This is an undeniable fact as the pictures on Page 1 prove.

Some families in Benning Park have built fences around their quarters to keep their children out of the streets, but on the afternoon that area was visited, not one child was inside those fences.

We made a spot check of a residential area on the post last week. We had been informed that that area had no place except the streets for children to play. However, we discovered that in every block there were sufficient play areas either between the quarters or behind them. In fact, we saw one mother with her children using one of these areas. There were no children in the streets in that area on the day we visited it, but two days before a Bayonet reporter and photographer, riding in a jeep, had almost run down three tots who had found the street a good place to sit.

Fortunately, the Fort Benning driver usually shoulders his responsibility, with the result that in 1948 only one child was killed and three injured as a result of being struck by motor vehicles. But parents should not expect the driver to shoulder the responsibility alone. According to Norman E. Evans, Infantry Center Safety Director, "it appears parents are not aware of their responsibility."

It's impossible for a motorist always to avoid hitting a child, if that child is using the street for a playground, regardless of how careful he might be. Curves or dips in the road obstruct the driver's vision until too late. If a child is playing on the other end of that curve or that dip, he is a potential victim.

Children haven't advanced far enough in their ability to think quickly for parents to leave the decision of where they will play up to them. It's the parents' responsibility, and if they can't shoulder it, no one else will.

We might also point out that many children actually stand in the path of oncoming motor vehicles as if daring the driver not to stop. Should some mechanical defect suddenly develop—and such defects can develop suddenly—that child would possibly be killed or maimed for life. And such an accident would not be the fault of the driver, no matter what the parents claimed. Those parents would be almost totally responsible for not keeping their children out of the street.

The Infantry Center Safety Office has hammered away at parents to take more precautions, and The Bayonet has done likewise. Directives have been issued, campaigns have been conducted, classes in safety have been held, but parents still allow their children to play in the street.

We absolutely reject the excuse that parents allow their children to use the street as a playground because they have no other place to play. Should their children be struck by an automobile, those same parents would likely decide that they should have paid attention to warnings against children playing in streets.

If parents could only put themselves in the shoes of a parent of one of those killed or crippled children, who have now become statistics in the files of the National Safety Council, these accidents could be prevented. All Infantry Center parents would be wise to take heed of these warnings before it's too late.

House Demos Pass Tax-Slashing Resolution

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — A tax-slashing resolution has been put through the House Ways and Means Committee by a Democratic majority. After defeating a billion dollar cut in excise taxes proposed by Republicans, the Democrats decided to ignore President Truman's demand for an all-over increase in taxes. The cuts in excise taxes may exceed the president's requests. Three key State Department aides have been added to the list of accused in the Senate investigation of Communist sympathizers in the government. Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin named the three and also demanded a check on a civilian scientist employed by the Navy. A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee has asked for three former secret FBI agents to unmask Communist Party activities in New York and San Francisco. The investigation would be similar to the one being made in the Pittsburgh area by two other former undercover agents. Judith Coplon, convicted of plotting to spy for Russia, has been released on $40,000 bail. No action has been taken against Dr. Hermann N. Sander by the New Hampshire Medical Society. The verdict of the jury that acquitted Dr. Sander did not involve a statement concerning mercy killing. President Truman has sent Congress a long list of federal agencies to be reorganized as recommended by the year-old Hoover Report. The Presidential Yacht Williamsburg is on its way to Key West, Fla., carrying the Chief Executive and guests on a three week's vacation. Federal insurance of individual bank accounts up to $10,000—double the present limit—has been approved by the Senate. A study of the affairs of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been started by auditors of the Senate Banking Subcommittee with plans for reduction. The Supreme Court has indirectly passed a law that a State may forbid a strike intended to force an employer to compel his workers to join a union.

Marine Corps Band Observes 151st Birthday

ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE — The Air Force Board convened to select warrant officers for appointment among the four pay grades provided by the Career Compensation Act has completed its work. Results will be published after completion of Defense Department review of the tabulations, and determination of the extent to which the appointments recommended can be implemented without additional Congressional action.

The Navy will convene 24 selection boards to consider promotions for 52,000 reserve officers during 1950.

A new and lighter gas mask, the M-9, is being produced for the Army. In the new model, the purifying canister is attached to the cheek, eliminating the need for a connecting hose.

More than 3,300,000 disabled veterans and dependents of deceased veterans were on Veterans Administration pension and compensation rolls at the end of 1949.

Panama Army Engineers' District, largest in land and water area of the 46 districts, will be deactivated June 30, end of the present fiscal year. Functions of the district have been largely completed, according to Maj. Gen. Lewis A. Pick, Chief of Engineers, and continuing city works projects in Puerto Rico will be placed under the Jacksonville, Florida, district office.

Chaplain's Corner

Face the Problem Today, Plan for Tomorrow

By CHAPLAIN WILLIAM E. PAUL — On several occasions recently I have overheard or participated in discussions pertaining to the present world situation. Men have appeared profoundly pessimistic regarding the mysterious and terrifying aspect of the H-Bomb. There is a consistent dwelling on the awful potentialities of this destructive grouping of forces and on the consequence of its military use, both for and against our nation.

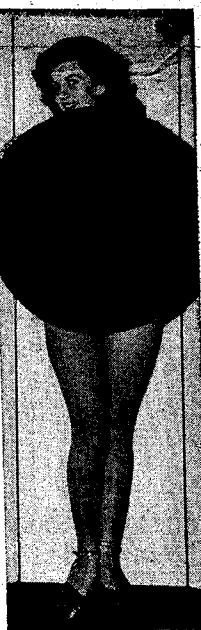

Always, when I am confronted with such expressed fears and pessimism, I am reminded of some simple advice proffered by our Lord Jesus Christ: "... which of you by being anxious can add one cubit to his span of life? ... Therefore do not be anxious about tomorrow, for tomorrow will be anxious for itself. Let the day's own trouble be sufficient for the day."

Surely every adult person has found by experience the truth contained in this advice. How many times we look back upon situations that seemed overwhelming at first—only to eventually find ourselves on the other side ever worried and fretted!

It is the same with broader human matters. Every age has had its terrifying and awe-inspiring developments. And when these were first noised abroad, people everywhere pronounced gloomy prophecies of doom; or asserted that the new development would be a total failure.

And as often as not, the prophets of worry and doom were proven utterly wrong. The wor-wards and gloom-dispersers added nothing to their spans of life by being anxious; indeed, they may only have hastened their own ends!

To Amuse You Today On The Bookshelf

A TEAR AND A SMILE by KAHIL GIBRAN
BY ALBERT G. ROPE, PUBLISHER
BY ALLEN L. MULLIKIN

The Oriental mysticism of the Near East is expressed in both its beautiful simplicity and obscure complexity in this translation of some of the early works of Kahlil Gibran.

An interesting introduction by Robert Hillier explains some of the complicated symbolism of the pieces and reveals pertinent facts about the author that give the reader a foundation for interpretation. Hillier also draws a comparison between English Poet William Blake and the author of this book.

Due to a lack of fluency in the Arabic tongue, this reviewer will refrain from any comment on the translation into English and simply state that the job was done by one H. M. Nahmad.

The content of the volume is largely short writings in a style that is called poetic prose. Only a few of the selections are arranged in metrical pattern, but all of them contain the rhythm and abstract ideas usually associated with the rimed line.

Truly a mystic, Poet Gibran searches the world in his works for the capitalized concepts of Truth, Justice, Beauty and Peace. Setting the idealized poet at the top of the hierarchy of man, Gibran looks down and records what he sees of the good and evil of the common man on his lower ground. The strongest argument of the poet is against materialism that he feels stifles the spirit. With a broad simplicity that only occasionally descends to sentimentality, the poet contrasts the worldly goods of the rich and the poor.

The love poetry of Gibran ranges from a quaint parable of a ragged shepherd and a bejeweled princess to a serious work on the splendor of all-encompassing love. The sensuous passing sometimes thought to be the essence of Oriental love poetry is completely absent from Gibran's esthetic approach to the subject. Death is the dominant theme that is woven into almost every section in the book. In the sketches telling of the abuses to the poor on earth Gibran visions death as a deliverance to a place "yonder" where the grievances of the poor are relieved.

Unable to realize his ideals in life, the poet sees death for himself as a release that will allow his spirit to soar in the "upper regions of freedom."

In a selection called "The Child Jesus" the Arabic poet intertwaves the story of the birth of Christ with the rebirth of a person who accepts the Christian faith. The wide concepts of the mystical poet are shown as he combines the various powers of the pagan deities under the single faith. The turn to Christianity is termed as the beginning of a brilliant day after the darkness of night.

Throughout this book Gibran writes, as a poet must, of himself. He regards the world and pronounces his judgment. He calls forth wisdom and destiny, thinly clothed in symbolic human form, and has them speak his piece. In the few nature poems included he finds in the elements expressions of his ideas.

The colorful background of Gibran's Near East homeland coupled with his Oriental metaphors and symbols add an exotic touch to group of mystical prose poems that are undoubtedly published with a limited readership in view.

There are two reasons why some people don't mind their own business. One is that they haven't any business, the other that they haven't any mind.

Chaufeur: "Where to, sir?"
Morbid Mogul: "Drive off the cliff, James. I'm committing suicide."

Benning Scout News

Girl Scouts

By MRS. JOHN BLATT

The story of lovely and invincible Juliette Low, who organized the Girl Scouts of America 38 years ago, is as thrilling as romance. On a certain January day in 1912, a woman walked the deck of the S. S. Arctican in mid-Atlantic. She was headed west toward America, her homeland, and she walked swiftly as if to press the ship on to extra knots by her own impatient feet.

She was always glad to come home, she had come many times since her marriage to an English husband—but a new and momentous eagerness filled her now, for she had a new idea, and at that moment it lived only in her own high-powered imagination.

She remembered that, arriving in Savannah, Georgia, her native town, she telephoned a friend, Miss Nina Cline, and said, "I've got something for you, and all the girls of Savannah, all America, and all the world, and all that's going to start tonight."

So the Girl Scout movement was launched in the United States, by one woman who had, haps, the only woman who could through its first months the days. For that is what Juliette Low did. Leaving England with nothing but a copy of a handbook and her own ardent determination, she descended on an unsuspecting country, and began to move its mountains, indifference and pre-occupation—and finally one day there was the Girl Scouts, a going concern. And Juliette Low was the one who made it go.

She was 52 when she came home on her errand, her health was imperfect, she was handicapped by extreme deafness, she had never done any large-scale public work in her life, she had never spent a day in an office, she was profoundly and gloriously unbusinesslike. Ambitious, impulsive, changeable, living joyously by the whim of the moment, she was byword among her adoring friends, who admitted freely that more whirlwind on the earth was more predictable than Juliette Low. Never, it would seem, was a woman less fitted to undertake a national movement.

Mrs. Low thought otherwise. Or rather, she did not think about such irrelevant matters at all. To her the one important fact was that Girl Scout camps, which she had discovered in England, was a fine thing. Very well, she would give this fine thing to the girls of America. So she started to work. On March 12, 1912, the first troop meeting of the first girl Scout Troop met in the barn on Juliette Low's estate in Savannah, Georgia. This building now houses the Juliette Low Museum. In 1913, although the Girl Scouts were certainly not a national institution, Mrs. Low optimistically opened a national headquarters in Washington and in 1915 she incorporated this project.

There were plenty of obstacles in her path but she met them with unexcelled determination.

Woman came into the movement and stayed in because they came to believe what Mrs. Low had discovered in England, that Girl Scouting adds precious value to the sum of girl's lives.

Money—raising it, the night organizers of this world. Mrs. Low spared herself this unpleasantness.

"This is my venture," she said, "and I'll pay for it."

And she did. She financed the entire undertaking until 1916. She was not poor, of course, but neither was she at this time particularly precocious. Money was not the problem. It was the real sacrifices to keep the Girl Scouts in funds. Once, in 1914, the condition of the treasury was so low that she had to sell her pearls. It was important, but girls were converted a legacy of an unending cash organizations come and go. It is any wonder that the Girl South and stayed with such an outstanding personality for their own.

Just a short time before her death the National Board of the Girl Scouts sent her a telegram saying, "You are not only the first Girl Scout but the best Girl Scout of them all." Could there have been a finer tribute paid to this great woman?

When her will was read, this was the last paragraph: "I have left no enemies, and I leave and bequeath to my family my friendships, especially my beloved Girl Scouts."

Miss Betty Finley Honored at Party

Col. and Mrs. D. H. Finley entertained at their quarters on an appetizing supper in honor of their daughter, Miss Betty Finley, who is on leave from her job in Germany.

The reception rooms were decorated with low arrangements of yellow roses, and the buffet table was centered with yellow jonquils and blue iris, flanked by green holders. Yellow and white candles in the center.

The guests included Col. and Mrs. Marcus Bell, Maj. and Mrs. George Pollock, Col. and Mrs. J. May, Jr., Maj. and Mrs. Wade Hampton, Col. and Mrs. Don Romine, Capt. and Mrs. J. E. Knepper, Col. and Mrs. Phillip Rawlins, Col. and Mrs. Phillip Miller, Capt. and Mrs. H. J. Macdonald, Mrs. Odis Graham, Maj. and Mrs. Carl Frisby and Mrs. S. H. Partridge.

YOUNG BOOK COLLECTORS. Two Cub scouts of Fort Benning's Pack 127, Den 1, hand over several books they've collected to Pvt. Alvin Elkins, patient at the Infantry Center Station hospital. Robert and Michael McCormick, center and right, are part of a team of youngsters scouring the post for magazines and books to be used by the Red Cross in their recreational work at the hospital. During their trip to the wards with Miss Dorothy Coley, Red Cross representative, the junior scouts gave out scores of books collected during a drive conducted by the scout pack.

Do you have "mashinyourmouthitis?"

Unless the law of averages is incorrect, you're one out of every seven persons at the Infantry Center who hasn't been afflicted with this epidemic.

Although the august Mr. Webster never included the disease in his compilation of the English language, it's an affliction that has gained a lot of ground in our personal life.

A medical definition for "mashinyourmouthitis" might be: "A disease afflicting those who answer the telephone (med), a specific infectious febrile disorder characterized by a nonappurative hand in the mouth, banana in the throat, etc."

ON THE BRIGHTER SIDE, the first sergeant at the military police detachment answered his phone with the brilliancy of voice that would raise the eyebrow of a speech expert. His answer was clear, understandable and loud.

On the other hand, at one of the Infantry School's Weapons Department sections, a sergeant picked up the phone and answered with a disheartening jumble of words. As first it sounded as though he had stuffed a salmon sandwich in his mouth before he began to talk.

The "third guinea pig" in the test displayed another common discrepancy among telephone answers. His enunciation was clear, but his voice indicated he was standing far away from the telephone. If a hard-of-hearing caller had been on the other end of the line, it might have resulted in several minutes reidentifying the office.

In the seven Infantry Center offices called, there was evidence of bad "telephone manners" in some cases there may have been an excuse for an incoherent answer, but in most additional emphasis on the telephone personality would have resulted in a smoother conversation and more rapid completion of business.

APPROACHING THE QUESTION from a purely unscientific standpoint, it seems that too many people are largely to their telephones incorrectly during the course of the business call. Perhaps it's due largely to the fervent rush of events that cause hasty and jumbled "hello's" when the phone is picked up.

For instance, a call to the 15th Infantry regiment's mess sergeant resulted in something like this: "Fifteenhregiment messie center, Corporal Slammerpuss speaking." Had a civilian been calling the number, ignorant of army language, it would have started him wondering whether he had hung up in confusion, thinking he had the wrong number.

The corporal at the message center more than likely answers scores of calls daily, in addition to countless inquiries through his door. It may become routine and rather boring, but such incoherencies can cause a lot of time, bad relations with the public and create ideas that army operation isn't being taken seriously by its personnel.

The corporal at the message center isn't the only case of "mashinyourmouthitis" in a sub (in your mouth itis). A survey conducted at the Infantry Center to determine the extent of this crippling disease shows that only one out of seven persons is answering telephones correctly.

Next time you make a call, listen for the symptoms of "mashinyourmouthitis."

IT WOULD BE DIFFICULT to conduct a class in "The Proper Telephone Personality," for there are exceptions that cannot be covered in such hypothetical instruction. Several general rules of proper telephone usage, however, would go a long way toward improving some of the faults.

1. When answering a call, regardless of your office's importance, identify the office and yourself in a forthright manner, with a clear and audible tone.

2. Be enthusiastic. Indicate to

Off-Stage Rhythm Agile Fingers of Post GI Imitate Lively Tap Dancer

Ever hear of a fellow tap dancing with his fingers? Perhaps the idea is a little exaggerated, but hook up a microphone, place the fellow behind closed curtains, strike up a few hot notes of jazz or boogie-woogie and it's hard to tell the difference.

This unusual talent of finger-snapping done in the rhythmic fashion of the dancing feet of the late Bill (Bojangles) Robinson, is a gift of Pfc. Theodore Lewis, Company L, 15th Infantry regiment.

Lewis attended Johnson high school in Augusta, Ga., where, other than being an "A" student, he devoted most of his leisure time to dramatics and singing with the school's glee club.

He also has a rich baritone voice, plays the piano, dances unrehearsed jam sessions in the doorway of the regiment's Third battalion, when a group of hot u.s.c. lovers were huddled around the piano listening to the ivory thumping of jazz Kingdome Thomas Terrell Lewis, nonchalantly stepped in with his music and stole the show.

In keeping time with the music, he possesses perfect coordination of his fingers and at times it seems as though they're all moving simultaneously. To change his tempo he half closes one fist and pounds upon it with the open palm of the other.

Asked how he came about such talent, Lewis smiled modestly and said, "Oh, I don't know, I guess it just comes natural, since I love music, especially jazz. I have never tired from dancing, promoted to corporal, it was announced by unit officials.

Advanced to Corporal

Pfc. Frederick B. Gliddings and James A. Glase of the 378th Ordnance Heavy Automotive Maintenance company were recently promoted to corporal, it was announced by unit officials.

change employes would be the only "white collar" employes to receive a wage boost, if the survey indicated a need. The bulk of the possible increase would be within the ranks of post engineer employes, such as plumbers, electrical workers and carpenters.

The board appointed by Infantry Center officials to aid Mr. Lawless in the survey included Capt. W. D. Stevens, Capt. H. MacDonald, Lt. R. J. Stevens, Lt. John P. Ireland, Dewey J. Reddish, Thomas F. Carter, Cecil B. Manning, William A. Buzbee, Mrs. Theima W. Hearn, Daniel R. Watson, Miss Dorothy W. Bruner and Carl S. Latona.

Review Of Troops To Open Inspection

As the opening ceremony of a Third Army command inspection of Fort Benning, a dismounted review of troops will be held on March 18 at French field, according to Infantry Center officials.

Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third Army commander, will receive the review, which will include units of the Area Service Unit Provisional group, Student Training Regiment, Infantry School detachment, Provisional Medical group, 599th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, Company C of the 78th Engineer Battalion and the 1st Chemical Company.

Col. Maurice L. Miller, Provisional group commander, will be commander of troops, with Col. Bevier R. Tupper commanding the First Provisional Regiment and Lt. Col. Charles E. Woodruff commanding the Second Provisional Regiment.

Music will be furnished by the 72nd Army Band and the Provisional group band.

Immediately following the review, General Gillem and his staff will inspect the mess halls, day rooms, reading rooms and barracks of Battery B, 999th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, the Third Army Food Service School, Section of the Area Service Unit Provisional group, the Sixth Ordnance Medium Automotive Maintenance Company, the 130th Quartermaster Bakery Company and the 33rd Transportation Truck Company.

An inspection of technical, administrative and training activities followed by a critique will comprise the second phase of the command inspection. The inspection will be completed March 20, 21 and 22 by the Third Army.

Airman Wins Week's Title

An airforce enlisted man was this week selected as the Third Army Food Service School's student of the week.

Sgt. Julian Smith of the 3815th Food Service Squadron, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala., and a member of baker's class No. 1, won the award by showing superior aptitude and diligence in the accomplishment of his school training.

Sergeant Smith has eight years military service to his credit, six in the food service field. He spent 34 months in the Pacific area during the war.

Sergeant Smith will graduate March 31.

Study in Army Enables GI To Complete High School

A Fort Benning soldier will don cap and gown as a member of the 1950 LaGrange, Ky., high school graduating class at the June commencement exercises, according to Infantry Center information and education officials.

Pfc. Donald E. Poole, Company A, Infantry School detachment, who completed the general education development high school level tests at the information and education center recently, has been advised by his former principal that his test scores qualified him for high school graduation.

Poole, whose home is in Buckner, Ky., completed only one and a half years of high school work prior to entering the army in October, 1948. After completing basic training at Fort Knox, Ky., he attended a leader's course there, and was assigned to his present duties as a clerk in the Infantry Center officer's assignment section, following his arrival here in June, 1949.

The knowledge and experience he gained in 16 months of army service, Poole said, was an important factor in his being able to pass the high school level tests. He credits the army with developing his interest in reading, and he now spends part of his off-duty time utilizing the facilities of the post's libraries.

Committee Studies Dependents' Care

WASHINGTON (APFS)—Additional hospital beds for dependents of armed forces personnel may be made available following an inspection of facilities by a special house armed services subcommittee.

Representative L. Mendel Rivers was recently appointed chairman of the committee that will "look over" recent Defense department recommendations regarding the closing of military hospitals.

The appointments of Rep. Mendel and other committee members were made by Rep. Carl Vinson, chairman of the House Armed Services committee.

Hile, 72 Army band, puts the final piece of clothing in his suitcase in preparation for a 4,000 mile trip which will bring together two long-separated sweethearts. Plans to marry her were squelched when he was sent back to the U. S. In 1948, he returned to Germany where he once again tried to marry the 26-year old beauty. But he was transferred to Fort Benning. Now, at his own expense, Hile is flying to the side of his fiancée—but this time he's going to get married. If immigration officials permit, he will bring his bride to Fort Benning after a 30-day furlough and honeymoon.

Hospital Here To Stay Open

An Infantry Center hospital spokesman said this week that the Station hospital here wasn't expected to be affected by the recent Washington order closing several military and veterans hospitals for economy purposes.

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, following a survey of hospitals in all three services and the VA, ordered five general hospitals to close and several others to reduce the size of operation. His order, which is said to be aimed at cutting unnecessary costs, will virtually force the use of some hospitals by all three services.

Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of the Defense department's medical services, answered critics of Johnson's move by saying that in every cutback case, economy was the keynote. He said, in addition, that duplication of effort—three military hospitals found in one area—was also being eliminated.

Another point established by the military medical director was the somewhat limited use of skilled medical personnel. He said that in several cases, military hospitals are critically understaffed for the size of the unit, although fewer patients are being hospitalized. He added that dependent care was declining.

A VA official criticized Secretary Johnson's order by saying that curtailing operations in VA hospitals would deprive more than 1,000 vets of medical care. Meiling answered the charge by explaining that military hospitals are now equipped to handle any VA cases.

Simultaneously with the cutback order came a charge from Rep. Don Wheeler (D-Ga.) that some vets were getting free medical care although their illnesses weren't the result of service-incurred injuries.

Companies Share Inspection Honors

Companies I and K, of the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, shared honors equally as a result of competitive inspections during February. For outstanding achievements during the four-week period each received three awards.

Company I won awards for the best barracks, squad and vehicle, while Company K won the best administration, discipline and weapons awards. Headquarters company received awards for maintaining the best mess and best soldier, Pfc. William Clanton.

ISD MAN TO RECEIVE HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA
Former Principal To Make Graduation Presentation

ODDS ENDS

by STEVE BOLAND

Monday night's baseball game between the Student Training regiment's Airborne battalion and the Navy team from Little Creek, Va., will give post baseball fans a chance to see what Fort Benning's defending champions have to offer for the coming season. The troopers are far from ready for their first game but seem to be the best choice to face the sailors.

Both the Infantry School Detachment's team and the troopers were desirous of playing the navy team when it was made known that the sailors wanted a game. The navy's competitors were decided on the toss of a coin, with the troopers winning the toss.

The Doughboy cagers finished their season's play with a 36-34 loss to the Atlanta branch of the University of Georgia in the quarter finals of the Georgia State Open basketball tournament. The Doughs won their first game by a 56-48 count from the Wagner All-Stars.

The cage squad from the 15th Infantry regiment's Third battalion, with eight wins against one loss and only two more games remaining to be played, can claim the cage title in the YMCA Industrial basketball league. Their closest competitor is the Pioneer Boy's Club of Columbus with a record of six wins and four defeats.

The Fort Benning skeet team should go far in future shooting matches if it can keep knocking the birds off the way it did during the recent match against the Fort McPherson, Ga., squad. The team, led by Bill Golden, had only 16 misses in 500 tries which is good shooting for any skeet team.

Yesterday afternoon saw the greater part of the teams entered in the Fort Benning baseball league for the 1950 season, looking over their crop of returnees and new candidates. Weather permitting most of the clubs should be pretty well organized and within a few weeks, the fields that have been worked on should see plenty of action in the form of practice games between the various units.

Because of transportation difficulties the desired coverage can not be made by this writer, therefore it would be greatly appreciated if the individuals concerned with these teams would cooperate in getting information on the progress of their squads in to the public information office in order that baseball fans will know how each of the teams is getting on.

The goal of teams in the 1950 Infantry Center volley ball tourney, now in progress in the Main gym, is to beat the six-time champions from Company C of the Infantry School detachment. Should the defending champions make it seven straight and go on to retain their Third Army volley ball title it would add prestige to Fort Benning sports if the team could also take the army-wide crown.

Post Volleyball Tourney Opens At Main Post Gym

The Infantry Center's 1950 double elimination volley ball tournament got under way yesterday afternoon in the Main gymnasium.

Defending champion is the squad from the Army Field Printing plant, which has held the Infantry Center crown for the past six years and is expected to keep its string of victories intact by making it seven years in a row. This same squad has also taken the Third Army volley ball crown for the past three years.

Members of the Field Printing plant squad who are assigned to Company C, Infantry School detachment, include Collis Lehner, George Hill, Bill Taylor and Tom Holmes. John Goodin, Truman Ledlaw and Tom Holmes.

Lawson Field Fliers Begin Spring Drills

Yesterday afternoon saw the candidates for the Lawson field Fliers baseball team fall out for their first workout in preparation for the coming baseball season. The coach for the team has not as yet been selected, but equipment will be issued and light workouts held under the supervision of the base athletic and recreation officer.

Field Company manager of last year's squad, will stick to the duties of catching this season. Other returnees from last year's squad include Outfielders Carl Rumsey, Dick Lee and Garrett McBride, Infielders Paul Baker and Bob Barrows, and Pitcher Russel Sanders. Paul Baker will probably alternate at infield play and hurling assignments as he did last season.

The Fliers will sorely miss the huriling and hitting power provided by Southpaw Glenn Raether who left the service to join the St. Louis Cardinal farm chain. As soon as a coach has been selected and a team organized, the Fliers plan to play some exhibition games in preparation for the 1950 baseball league.

Doughboy Bowling Squad at Ft. Bragg

The Fort Benning Doughboy bowling team has been selected and is now competing for the Third Army bowling title at Fort Bragg, N. C.

Representing Fort Benning in the Third Army classic are Harold W. Browning, who will be in charge of the squad, Donald O'Rourke, John McGovern, Edward Knuth, Roderick Glassford, Anthony Piven, H. V. Burns and Norbert Szymarek. The Braggmen, the defending champions, wrested the title from the Benning team here last year after the Doughs had held the title for two consecutive years.

Teams representing Fort Benning in the five-game roll-off tourney, Third Army officials pointed out that competition in the classic will not be limited to team entries. Individual events in both singles and doubles will be staged, and scores posted by the bowlers in these categories will be considered for the award for the high single game trophy. The award to be presented to the championship squad will be a rotating trophy, but the winning team will also receive a miniature plaque for permanent possession. Individual awards will be given to the members of the winning team and runner-up teams, the high singles and doubles victors, the all-events winner and the individual high scorer for the tournament.

Lawrence Jones Compiles Envious Boxing Record

Takes Army Middleweight Championship for 2nd Time

Post boxing fans will long remember Lawrence Jones, Doughboy middleweight, who since his assignment to Fort Benning in 1947 has twice copped the all-army title and has taken the Third Army crown in his weight class for the past three years.

Jones was also runnerup in the first world-wide inter-service tourney at Chicago in 1947. His army ring work was inaugurated at Camp Harrison, La., where he held the middleweight crown in 1943. He did plenty of boxing overseas, but never gained much recognition until his arrival at Fort Benning where he has compiled an enviable record in intra-unit, Third Army and army-wide boxing circles.

Jones claims Cliff Wilburn whom he has met and defeated several times, as the most dangerous man he has encountered in intra-unit competition. The toughest and best fight in his career, according to Jones, was the benefit fight at Jacksonville, Fla., when he faced Pat Patterson, all-army middleweight king. Jones received high praise and publicity as a result of his win over the sailor. He was also awarded a trophy and a pair of golden gloves by the committee sponsoring the benefit show.

Anyone who has ever seen Jones work in the ring will agree that he is a good defensive fighter and an excellent counterpuncher. His perfect boxing technique with a punch and counter-punch with a straight right, followed by an extreme jab, dangerous left hook, has carried him far in army boxing circles.

In taking the Third Army middleweight title for the third consecutive year, Jones punched out decisions over Bob Richardson of Fort Bragg, N. C., and Billy Mayo the Fort Jackson, S. C., entry.

In the all-army meet, Jones met and defeated James Smith, of the Far East command, Glenn Graham of the Alaskan command and John Hawthorne, Second Army entry, in the finals. Jones' record in army boxing after entering the ring 88 times has resulted in 20 knockouts, 10 technical knockouts, 56 decisions and only two losses, both on split decisions.

Jones has been in the army since 1943 and is presently assigned to Section 11, 3440th Area Service unit. He is 26 years old, stands five feet, nine inches high and weighs 160 pounds. He is a native of Washington, D. C., where he started his pugilistic career as a member of the Liberty Athletic club in that city.

Jones' record in army boxing after entering the ring 88 times has resulted in 20 knockouts, 10 technical knockouts, 56 decisions and only two losses, both on split decisions.

15th Infantry Dragons Start Opening Drills

Boasting the return of twelve holdovers from last year and an array of top-flight new candidates to pick from, the Dragons of the 15th Infantry regiment opened training for the 1950 baseball season at the 1000th Army church fieldhouse Monday.

Under the guidance of coach Thomas J. Hallman backstop for the 15th Infantry regiment nine here in 1939 about 80 diamond hopefuls went through two hours of lumbering-up exercise.

Despite the fact that inclement weather conditions forced the initial practice under the cover, coach Hallman expressed confidence that he will be able to field a well-balanced nine during the opening date of the past intra-mural league.

Returnees, expected to supply the punch for the Dragon nine include catcher Leonard Strawthers, pitchers, Walt Scott, Horace Smith, Jake Reeves, Burnett Martin and Martin Kossover, stellar groundsman for the Special Troops and Doughboy nine last season. Besides his outstanding mound performance, Kossover posted a batting record of .85.

A sturdy outfield, talented with flawless fielding and hitting power will include Bobby Jordan, Gene Thomas, Nick Nichols and Zack Lemelle who recorded batting averages of .59, .298, .257 and .250 respectively.

The infield is expected to be well fortified with veteran Big Jim Baldwin who averaged .304 at the bat last year, flashy Sam Hall and Willie Wise.

Trooper Nine Preps to Meet Sailor Team Monday Night

The Airborne battalion, Student Training regiment, defending champions of the Fort Benning baseball league, is hustling this week to prepare for a 7:30 p.m. game with the Amphibious 1949 Atlantic Fleet champions from Little Creek, Va., at Gawdy field Monday.

Workouts between the hurling and receiving staffs have been going on in the airborne gym for the past two weeks, but no fielding or batting practice sessions have been conducted. Walker hopes that the weather will permit him to get enough of this work in over the weekend to allow for a good showing in Monday night's game.

King's Pond To Be Shut Down For Week Prior to Fish Meet

King's pond, the site of the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association's annual fishing tournament, will be closed to post anglers from March 27 until April 1, the date of this year's tourney, association officials have announced.

Registration for the tournament, which is open to all members of the Fish and Game Maintenance association, as well as to other Fort Benning license holders, will begin at 4:30 a. m. on April 1. A registration fee of $1.25 will be charged non-members.

Approximately $200 worth of prizes are being offered for various catches and for bait and fly casting technique.

Association officials expected the tournament to attract from 300 to 400 Benning fishermen. In addition to 65 privately-owned boats, 64 association boats will be made available for the meet.

Nickname Now Official Kerr Concludes Career

PHILADELPHIA (APPS)—The nickname "Blue Jays," which never caught on with baseball fans in the City of Brotherly Love, has been officially dropped. From now on the baseball team will be known as the "Phillies," a nickname almost as old as the club itself.

ANNVILLE, Pa. (APPS)—

Andy Kerr, one of America's best known football coaches, has brought his active career to an end by resigning at Lebanon Valley college. He intends to devote full time to directing the Eastern West charity game. He became famous as head coach at Colgate for 17 years, starting in 1929.

2-Week Course In Water Safety Completed Here

A two-week water safety instructor's course ended Saturday, March 4, with only eight men of an original 40 graduating, according to Murray Hill, Red Cross field director.

The course was under the direction of Russell Nicholson, special field representative for Red Cross safety services.

Tentative plans have been made to send about 20 of the Fort Benning water safety instructors to the National Aquatic School conducted each year by the Red Cross at Pine Mountain, Ga. and Nashville, Tenn. The National Aquatic School is considered one of the finest water safety education schools in the country, according to Mr. Hill.

The description of the small dog, which Sergeant Benson said has probably taken up with a GI, is as follows: front feet are white, face is white and brown and lower teeth stick out slightly over the lips.

Committee Told Of Budget Cuts

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson told members of the House and Senate Armed Services committee last week that the military establishment has turned its fat into muscle.

Thus, the defense secretary gave a report of general budget reductions aimed at cutting back wasteful expenditures. He said that more than $1 billion had been shaved off the 1949 defense budget.

About the army, Johnson said that it will be organized into 10 divisions instead of the planned nine, plus an additional two specialized anti-aircraft battalions with the latest equipment.

He also said that some 20,000 men had been dropped from the army rolls during the past six months, releasing more money for essential equipment.

The defense secretary expressed regret at having to freeze enlisted promotions and decrease millions of dollars of needed housing programs.

Army Organization Changes Revealed

Several organization changes affecting the army were announced in Washington last week by the Department of the Army.

Most of the changes involved the re-titling of various army offices and officials, although certain divisions have been discontinued and functions transferred to other offices. All such changes became effective March 1.

The deputy chief of staff for plans and combat operations, under the new regulations, becomes activities in the field of public information and troop information and education will come under the purview of a chief of information, resulting in the discontinuance of the Public Information Division and Troop Information and Education Division, according to the announcement.

Similarly, functions in the field of legislative relations will be exercised by a chief of legislative liaison, a re-titling of the former Legislative and Liaison Division.

General staff changes include the following: 1) The director of personnel and administration has been re-named the assistant chief of staff, G-2, intelligence.

2) The director of plans and operations has been re-titled, the assistant chief of staff, G-3, operations.

3) The director of logistics has been re-named the assistant chief of staff, G-4, logistics.

The Organization and Training division, has been abolished, and its manpower control functions transferred to the assistant chief of staff, G-1, its organization and training functions to the chief of Army Field Forces, and its residual functions to the assistant chief of staff, G-3.

The Office of the Chief of Finance has been designated an agency of the special staff, the chief of finance being under the former Legislative and Liaison Division.

The functions, powers and titles of the Office of the Chief of Special Services have been transferred to the adjutant general, and the office abolished, its procurement and supply functions have been assumed by the quartermaster general.

Rebuttal To Complaints

Most Red Cross Grips Unjustified, Official Says

BY GENERAL GEORGE C. MARSHALL, President, American National Red Cross

G I complaints, during and after the war, frequently reached the office of the Chief of Staff of the Army. As military head of the Army in those days, I had frequent so-called samplings made of soldiers' reactions in this country and in all overseas theaters.

Many adjustments or corrections were made as a result of the information so gathered. Most of the gripes were directed against phases of Army discipline and regulations. Some were concerned with real or fancied grievances against officers. Food was brought into the picture as were kicks against officers enjoying privileges not generally available to the man.

Gripes leveled against the Red Cross seemed to develop largely during the demobilization period and usually concentrated on the clubs and the selling of supplies and food in those clubs.

When I was appointed head of the American National Red Cross, I started in to find out for myself to what extent the complaints directed at the Red Cross services seemed to be justified. It was important to learn if the organization had been lacking in its work. It was still more important to find out whether or not the criticisms applied generally or were based on isolated instances.

Here are the facts as I ascertained them: The Red Cross did make below-cost charges for meals and lodging in off-post clubs. The Red Cross wanted to make these services free. But on May 20, 1942, Henry L. Stimson, then Secretary of War, requested the Red Cross to impose these minimum charges. Since such charges were imposed on allied soldiers in their clubs and canteens, free service to our troops would have created a morale problem among our allies.

The Red Cross did not charge for such items as cigarettes, chapter-produced garments or comfort articles. On a number of occasions Red Cross supplies were mixed up with Army supplies in the hastily-organized warehouses or open field dumps and subsequently offered for sale, but not by the Red Cross.

Occasional stories that Red Cross sold blood or blood plasma are manifestly untrue. The Red Cross did not administer blood; it acted only as the blood collection agency for the Army and Navy.

Some forty-two million communications, many of them emergency in nature, were handled for soldiers and sailors with their home folks. Army and Navy radio and cable facilities had to be utilized, and these lines of communication were subject to service priorities. For example, there were periods when they were completely "blacked-out" for security reasons. Thus delays were inevitable and unavoidable on the part of the Red Cross.

It seemed to be a surprise to some servicemen to learn that the Red Cross had no authority to grant leaves. This function is reserved exclusively for the military authorities. The Red Cross does, however, verify home conditions by request whenever it appears that a soldier or sailor is urgently needed at his fireside.

On the matter of loans, I found that the Red Cross disbursed almost seventy-four million dollars in loans and free grants to servicemen and veterans between 1941 and 1946. These loans, non-interest bearing, and these grants were for emergencies with which the serviceman could not cope. The Red Cross couldn't take care of every applicant. It had to limit its lending activities and its financial grants to the individuals who could demonstrate both emergency and urgency, and it did so.

It would be absurd to say that the Red Cross did not make mistakes. Some of our personnel in the field misinterpreted official policy. A few may not have lived up to Red Cross regulations and traditions. I found, for example, one case where a Red Cross employee sold the organization's supplies on the black market. He was court-martialed and dismissed from the service.

In brief, it appeared that most of the complaints were based on misrepresentation or rumors, on the scarcity of Red Cross girls and regarding their dates with the officer personnel.

As to the young women who worked their hearts out in the mud and the cold and rain, there seems to be no complete solution to the main burden of the G I reaction unless it is to have a ratio of one Red Cross girl to every soldier. And that seems to be a bit impractical.

Transferred from Detachment Headquarters to Company B were Sigs Finian Blaine and Carl F. Adams, Cpls. Oliver A. Wilson and Smith Dubose and Pfc. Lawson Myers, Jr.

College Cast Will Present Comedy Hit

The comedy hit, "The Male Animal," will be presented by the University of Georgia Theater group at the Main theater March 19, at 8:30 p.m. It was announced this week by the Infantry Center special services office.

The play's opening performance in Athens was an outstanding success, according to reports.

Playwright James Thurber collaborated with his college classmate, Elliott Nugent, in writing the play—a good-natured lampoon of college football heroes, parlor prinks, stuffed shirt trustees and campus "Red" scares.

It is full of Thurber's well-known wit and humor.

There will be no admission charge, special services officials stated, with seats on a first come, first served basis.

Troops to Train In 'Bama Region

Special aggressor training for members of the 15th Infantry Regiment and attached units will be held in the Alabama area of Fort Benning in the near future, it was announced today by Col. Dennis M. Mire, commander.

Troops will prepare for defense against airborne attack during simulated airborne drops in the vicinity of Lee field and Dekker airstrip.

Other training will include a night and day tactical withdrawal of all troops, simulating actual combat conditions.

The 15th Infantry is scheduled to depart Fort Benning, the first week in April for North Carolina as the aggressor force for Operation Swarmer.

Caution Issued On Registration

All changes in ownership or vehicle registration status are to be reported within 72 hours to the Provost Marshal's office, either by telephone (2026) or letter.

New state license numbers—1950 state registration—should be reported in this manner, officials said.

15th Infantry Men Advanced in Grade

Six privates first class from the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry Regiment, were promoted to corporal last week, it was announced by unit officials.

They are Lee Jones, Carl S. Powell, Eugene Dye, Glover Richardson, Albert Dixon and William Clanton.

Mass Production Started On Post-Tested Gas Mask

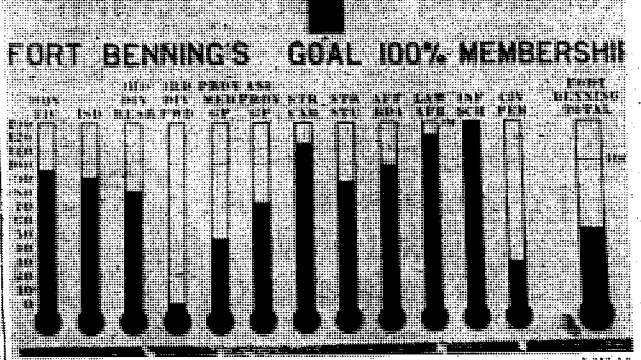

A new and improved gas mask, which underwent testing at the Infantry Center's Army Field Force base No. 3, was moved into a mass production stage last week.

The Army Chemical Corps last week invited bids on the production of 175,000 new light-weight masks as replacements for the World War II type which are deteriorating from age. This production order is in addition to 122,000 such masks now in production. As funds become available, a Washington army source said this week, further contracts will be awarded for increased production.

The successful bidder for the first contract will deliver about 50,000 completely assembled masks to the army. All masks now in production will be assembled by workers at Edgewood Arsenal, Baltimore, Md.

Army officials in Washington this week described the new mask as "lighter, more efficient and less

Library Parley Goes Into Final Sessions Today

Final sessions of the Third Army Librarian's conference that brought Miss Mildred Young, chief librarian of the Department of Defense, to Fort Benning this week are being held in the special services conference room today.

Mrs. Swan M. McLain, chief librarian of the Third Army, presided over the opening meeting held yesterday to welcome the visiting librarians. Eight civilian librarians and several military officers from the various posts in the Third Army area answered a presentation roll call of delegates.

Conference business activities have included speeches from Miss Young from the Department of Defense; Capt. Edward Bradley, infantry instructor, information and education officer, and Capt. A. C. Parker, assistant infantry center, information officer, and discussions by visiting librarians on the various aspects of army libraries.

Open house with refreshments at the Main library of the Third Army began a round of entertainment for the visiting delegates. A special dinner was given last night at the Officers' Club, and a tour of the post with special attention to Fort Benning libraries was conducted yesterday.

Librarians and library officers representing Third Army installations were Capt. W. W. Welch and Miss Esther Cathy, Atlanta General Depot; Capt. Louis A. Allen Jr., and Miss Mary O. Ward, Fort McPherson, Ga.; Mrs. Vivian F. Piller, Camp Gordon, Ga.; Capt. Edward A. Stevens and Miss Maude C. Stevins, Fort Jackson, S. C.; Miss Guilene Towery, Oliver General Hospital, Augusta, Ga.; and Miss Nettie K. Kanelis, Camp Burtis, Ann Clark, Miss Sarah C. Lottin and Capt. Mark S. Leibrick, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Report on Europe

Gen. Burress Says Living Conditions Generally Better

Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander who returned this week from a two-week visit to England and Germany, said that conditions overseas are steadily improving.

During a brief stop in Germany, General Burress said he noticed a marked improvement in troop living conditions. He said that family housing for military personnel is better but still presents a small problem.

"I noticed a great deal of construction," he said, "which would seem to indicate housing expansion among the German civilians. This will mean better living for the military, I think."

He said that during his entire tour of the British Isles he noticed the integration of American training techniques within British schools.

"We (England and the United States) are working very closely together. The British are in accord with many of our ideas and are operating fundamentally the same as the American army," General Burress said.

During his 10-day tour of England General Burress was the houseguest for several days of Brigadier Cecil Fibbanks, commander of the British School of Infantry. The Fort Benning commander said he saw a great deal of similarity between British training schools as compared to those in the United States.

"The only noticeable difference in the training operations," he said, "is the dispersion of schools throughout the countryside. In one place you have the automotive school, several miles away is the weapons school, etc. And due to the concentrated population, it is difficult for the British army to practice firing."

with their larger weapons. Very few ranges are available. But they have devised a unique system of setting up ranges on the coast and firing seaward."

General Burress also made a stop at the War Office in London, where he saw Field Marshal Sir Joseph Slim, chief of staff of the infantry Center, and a recent visitor to the Infantry Center, conferred with General Burress for more than an hour.

During the last leg of his overseas visit General Burress flew to Germany where he visited his former command, the U. S. Zone Constabulary. He said that among the many old friends he saw was Lt. Gen. Clarence Huebner, European commander.

"Of course it was very gratifying to see the men that I served with, until 1948. I suppose I saw everyone in two days that you could possibly see. I ate and talked with a great many of the sergeants that were in the 100th division during the war. (The 100th was General Burress' wartime command.)"

General Burress told The Bayonet that living conditions in Germany have improved considerably.

"While there, I noticed that more shops and businesses were open, probably due to the currency revaluation. More luxuries were on the market and military personnel seemed to be outfitting themselves better," he commented.

He also said that troop living was "excellent."

"The men are living exceptionally well. The barracks are in excellent condition. More buildings are going up all over Germany — you can tell the country is progressing well."

Troops Start To Swarmer Area April 5

About 2,500 troops of the 15th Infantry regiment and attached units will leave Fort Benning on April 5 by truck convoy for Fort Bragg, N. C., where they will participate in the April-May airborne maneuver, Exercise Swarmer.

Unit officials disclosed this week that for the past six weeks most increments of the unit have been dispatched to the North Carolina staging area. Advanced detachments of the 15th now at Fort Bragg number about 500 troops.

This week, hundreds of troops from the three-day command problem in Fort Benning's Alabama area, preparatory to the actual exercise in the Carolinas. The local zone oriented officers and men in command post operations while coordinating with airborne units.

The large-scale maneuver at Fort Bragg is expected to be a leader in the field of all-airborne operations. Officials planning the operation said this week that the entire problem is based upon a situation where paratroopers are dropped to a battle scene and fight with supplies dispatched by air transport.

Supervisors May Scan Food Inspection Sheets

Infantry Center food service supervisors have been extended an invitation by Maj. John A. Rilovich, Fort Benning food service supervisor, to visit food service offices to inspect their unit inspection sheets.

Major Rilovich said this week that inspection of the files isn't restricted to food service personnel alone. Unit commanders are also allowed to inspect the files on each unit.

Post Wac Is Promoted

Pvt. Catherine G. Townsend, a member of Fort Benning's Wac detachment, has been promoted to private first class.

Ex-Tar Has 'Jump' On Class Buddies

When Sgt. John G. Bush, a student in Company E, Airborne battalion, Student Training Regiment, gets ready to make his jump from a C-54 (Flying Boxcar), he will have behind him one of the greatest obstacles facing an aspiring paratrooper—the stigma of a "free" jumper.

While the bulk of students reporting here for airborne training are totally ignorant of jump technique, Sergeant Bush enrolled in a class a veteran of two "free" jumps.

But Sergeant Bush's jumps weren't from army aircraft. They were made from navy planes.

As a seaman in the navy, the student was assigned to the Naval Air Sea Rescue School at Lakehurst, N. J., a school that installs a parachute which trains men as parachutists and parachute riggers.

Sergeant Bush's jumps were made in keeping with one of the naval school's prerequisites that a "free" jump be made only after a student has made jumps differ from the type required by the army since they are made without the aid of static line, and the jumper must pull his own rip cord after he has fallen a sufficient distance to assure a safe opening of his canopy.

In addition to the "free" jump requirement set by the naval school, the students also are trained in theory of packing and maintaining various types of jumps.

Everyone was happy—that is, except Sergeant Cannon. He did not like the weight. But now that he is off the diet, he's so hungry he eats twice as much and now weighs more than he did before he started.

Plump Sergeant Decries Diets After Losing Weight, Temper

First Sgt. Malcolm Cannon, Sixth company, Student Training Regiment, is through with diets forever.

The jovial, but slightly plump sergeant started worrying about his waist line with the advent of the clothing allowance. After computing the cost of new uniforms, he decided he had better go on a diet, not only because he would save money but because his wife had begun to comment critically on his expanding waist line.

The sergeant obtained a guaranteed slimming diet and started off with high hopes. The first two days weren't too bad. However, before the two weeks called for in the diet were finished, everybody in the company was praying fervently that he would soon finish. It wasn't that he was mean by nature, but as his appetite grew, so did his ire.

Sergeant Cannon was a persevering man, however. He adhered to his diet faithfully and proudly announced that he had lost seven pounds in the first week. His spirit was tempered greatly during the second week, but his eyes were on the goal and he never allowed himself to waver. The great day arrived at last and everyone breathed a sigh of relief. Indeed, the sergeant had lost weight and, now that he was eating again, his good spirit returned.

Everyone was happy—that is, except Sergeant Cannon. He did not like the weight. But now that he is off the diet, he's so hungry he eats twice as much and now weighs more than he did before he started.

Waxes Poetic To Convey Hint

Take notice of this, critics of mess sergeants and army "chow." To wit:

"A pretty girl is judged by her curves.

An acrobat by his nerve.

And a mess steward by the vittles he serves."

Infantry Center food service supervisor Maj. John A. Rilovich, took time out this week to pass along the provocative thought.

Transferred to STR

Five enlisted men, formerly of section H, Headquarters and Headquarters company, 3440th Area Service unit, were transferred last week to Service company, Student Training Regiment. They are Cpls. Robert Perry, Mims Dixon and Joe L. Goodson, and Pvt. Wallace W. Harvey and James Irvine.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

'Chutist's Foresight Averts Injuries In Glider Accident

Mental alertness on the part of Cpl. William E. Robson, Company A, 15th Infantry School detachment, resulted in the safety of 15 airborne students during a recent glider accident, and that attention to duty has won him the title as Soldier of the Week.

Last week, Corporal Robson, riding as instructor aboard a CG-15A glider orientation flight, found himself confronted with the possibility of a serious crash. As the glider was making its final turn to land, a sharp gust of wind brought the motorless craft to a virtual standstill—the air some 100 feet above the ground. The pilot was forced to nose the ship down to gain speed, but at the same time sacrifice priceless distance — he would fall short of the landing strip.

Acting on trained impulse and excellent judgement, the 20-year-old instructor shouted to his fledglings to prepare for landing. Seconds later the glider struck rough ground with its nose in the air and the tail dragging. Careening across the undeveloped ground, the glider bounced across a gaping ditch. Its front wheels smacked the earth with a thud and came to a screeching halt with several fabric sections ripped from its wing and fuselage. Robson's foresight and judgement prevented serious injury to any of the students.

In October, 1949, Robson was selected from scores of other candidates to represent the Airborne department as a typical paratrooper for a story being prepared for the Department of Defense. The story and pictures were distributed throughout the nation for publication in the civilian press. His appearance, cheerful disposition and tireless efforts to see across his instruction were deciding factors in the election.

The Columbus, O., native has been a member of a demonstration team at the Airborne department for over a year. The particular team, which demonstrates leading and landing techniques in large transport planes, has been staged many times for visiting civilian and military dignitaries.

Corporal Robson's airborne instructor was Capt. William R. Boling, Jr., transportation officer at Lawson Airforce base, will leave this week to attend a 18-week course in automotive maintenance and repair at Fort Warren, Wyo.

Upon completion of the course Captain Boling will return to his present assignment.

The captain was an enlisted man when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor where he was serving. Early in 1942 he received his appointment as an aviation cadet and received his commission in 1943.

He is credited with 50 combat missions with the 15th Airforce in the European theater.

Before reporting to Lawson last November, Captain Boling had served as a pilot with the Berlin Airlift, and was stationed at Weisbaden, Germany.

If We Want Nation's Respect We Must Earn That Respect

The population of the Infantry Center has been estimated at 38,000. This figure, when multiplied by relatives and dependents, probably totals nearly 100,000 persons, all interested in the welfare of the Army that supports them. Nearly 100,000 people—nearly 100,000 voices.

Think of what could be accomplished if 100,000 people used their every opportunity to speak favorably about their Army to the people they meet when on and off duty!

Scientific opinion polls demonstrate that an Army community's opinions about a post reflect largely the opinions of the post's own personnel—both civilian and military—as spread by word of mouth through the community.

Infantry Center soldiers come from every State in the Union. Going home on furlough or riding to Atlanta on a weekend pass, our soldiers are constantly meeting the public.

Since we figured we have close to 100,000 public relations ambassadors, our soldiers may be making several thousands of impressions on their journeys. It should be the mission of every soldier to make the ratio of good impression as high as possible.

Do you begin to see what we're leading up to? When you go into a community in uniform you are the Army; if you are drunk, the Army is drunk. If you try to pick up some other fellow's girl, the Army is doing it. If you cheat a cab driver out of his fare when he returns you to the post, the Army is cheating. If you are dressed sloppily, the Army is sloppy. It's as simple as that.

If we want the respect of the Nation, we've got to earn and deserve it. Creating favorable impressions is as much your duty as remembering your serial number. The impressions the average civilian has of the Army are the results of coming in contact with soldiers off the post.

Each and every one of us is a public relations ambassador. Public relations is nothing more than good manners to win friends. Remember that everything you say either helps the Army or hurts it. You, personally, represent the Army to the public.

Public relations is everybody's job. It is the one thing in the Army which is shared by general and private alike.

This Lack of Interest Doesn't Speak Well for Benningites

Fort Benning troops ought to be ashamed of themselves for the poor showing they made last Sunday afternoon on the occasion of the Army Ground Forces Band concert. Special Services officials went all-out to provide seating accommodations for approximately 3,000 spectators in the huge Field House gymnasium where the band performed. However, much to our amazement, only about half those seats were filled.

Such a lack of interest in such a fine musical aggregation as the 100-piece ACF Band is a sad commentary on the appreciation Fort Benning troops show for outstanding entertainments. This same band has played at far more auspicious ceremonies than we could hope to provide at Fort Benning. It has performed at White House and Carnegie Hall in New York City, which is considered the epitome of success.

Wide publicity was given the scheduled appearance of these soldier-musicians, and a great deal of interest was in evidence as soldiers fought to get their hands on at least one of the 3,000 tickets available. Special Services officials were so convinced that the turn-out would be large that they planned to regulate admission on a ticket-only basis. Although, Columbus civilians indicated a strong desire to hear the band, admission was limited to military personnel with few exceptions. This limitation was imposed to allow more military personnel to hear the band which represents the man in Army uniform. Still only 1,500 persons showed up.

We don't know whether all the tickets were issued, but it was obvious they weren't all used. Selfishness apparently motivated those who picked up tickets and then did not attend the concert. However, they failed to realize that by taking a ticket they were preventing from attending someone who really wanted to hear the concert.

We believe it was a distinct honor that Fort Benning was selected as a site for a performance by the Army Ground Forces Band. Unfortunately, only about 1,500 Fort Benning troops and their families agree with us.

Total Diplomacy Has President's Full Support

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Total diplomacy as being waged by Secretary of State Dean Acheson has the full support of President Truman. As Acheson becomes an outstanding policy maker, primarily in relations with Russia, his position is being attacked from some sources. . . Roving Ambassador Philip C. Jessup has struck back at Senator McCarthy's charges of disloyalty in the State Department. Supported by General Marshall and General Eisenhower, Jessup denied having any "affinity" for Communist causes, and accused McCarthy of weakening U. S. prestige in other countries. . . No decision has been made by the President on opening loyalty files of the State Department to the Senate investigators. . . Economic aid to Europe has been slashed by one billion dollars in a proposed bill from the House Foreign Affairs Committee. . . The House Appropriations Committee is expected to put on the floor this week an omnibus bill to provide in the neighborhood of 29 billion dollars to cover almost all government agencies. . . Secret signals from John L. Lewis to keep his miners away from the pits during the recent coal strike and still stay within Taft-Hartley Law are being investigated by the FBI. . . "National security first, economy second," was the determination expressed by Defense Secretary Johnson in his decision to stay in his job as long as the President wanted him, regardless of criticisms from Congress or military leaders. . . Capt. John C. Crommelin, furloughed on half pay from the Navy, has continued his outspoken criticism of the Defense Department and has further complicated things by announcing his willingness to run for the Senate as an independent from Alabama. . . Dr. Hermann N. Sander, acquitted of murdering a cancer patient, has been banned from two Catholic hospitals and is the subject of an undisclosed charge by the Hillsboro County Medical Society. . . President Truman has assured the American public that information gleaned in the 1950 census will be strictly confidential. . . Convicted Russian Spy Valentin A. Gubichev has left aboard the Limer Batory to return to life behind the Iron Curtain."

Report from Washington

Army Reports Progress in Housing Program

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Honorable discharged airmen now may retain more clothing than the one complete uniform plus socks and underwear formerly authorized. Amended regulations permit retention of all belt, gloves, headgear, khaki and poplin shirts, one set of metal insignia and one barracks bag. In addition, if separation occurs during the season in which the winter uniform would normally be worn, the discharged airman may keep a complete winter uniform.

Pending availability of the new Air Force viscose and nylon raincoat blue, shade 85, the restriction prohibiting mixing of Army and Air Force uniforms has been relaxed to permit the wearing by Air Force personnel of the Army raincoat, or any authorized substitute when it is raining, but at no other time. The shade of the summer tan Air Force uniform is under study, but no change is contemplated for the 1950 season.

Progress is being made in military housing construction, according to reports received from the field. Projects embracing 680 apartments for Army and Air Force personnel in Texas are 50 per cent completed. Construction is in progress at Caswell Air Force Base, Lackland Air Force Base, Randolph Air Force Base, and Camp Hood. A $50,000,000 project has been started at McDill Air Force Base, Fla.; a $900,000 project is in progress at Chanute Air Force Base, Ill. Some of the 80 new non commissioned officer quarters at Fort Benning, Ga., are ready for occupancy.

Revised joint Army-Air Force regulations provide for investigation by the American Red Cross of all emergency conditions on which are based requests for return of overseas personnel to the United States for emergency reasons. Overseas commanders, however, are authorized to return personnel to the U. S. for emergency reasons without waiting for the Red Cross report when sufficient evidence is submitted that delay would cause the individual concerned to reach the U. S. too late to accomplish the purpose for which the leave is requested.

The Army will discontinue its experimental program of buying only Grade B beef, and return to the old policy of buying Grades B and C in about equal quantities. Grade B is considered choice quality, while C falls into the category good. Restricting purchase to Grade B was found to interfere with the procurement of adequate quantities, and had an adverse effect on some sections of the cattle raising industry. The Army buys beef for all services.

Chaplain's Corner

Peter Always Gave Despite Lack of Riches

BY CHAPLAIN LONNIE W. KNIGHT.

In Acts 3:6 you will read: "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." These words just read are the words of Peter the fisherman disciple. "I give" might be said to be the life story of this great man of old. Peter was always ready to give. Too often an individual wants to only receive and not to give, but this could not be said of Peter. Peter did not have much worldly goods to give but he did give all that he had. I think that this is one of the most beautiful stories that we have in the Bible.

Peter and John were going into the temple at the hour of prayer. I think it is significant that they were going to prayer in the morning hours. No doubt they had been working, but when the hour of prayer struck they left what they were doing and went to the temple. It is possible that they had been fishing and we can be sure that they were people, but still they had time to go to church. They went to church even if the service may have been one that was somewhat tame and not interesting. It would seem that Peter was going to church, not only for what he could get out of it but he was also going for the purpose of giving what he could to the service. Possibly he thought that at the service he could give of the living water that Christ had given to him. The true Christian today comes to the worship service not only to receive what he can from the service but also to give what he can to help the service.

What was it that Peter possessed? Since he was not able to give money what was it that he could give to this poor beggar?

He said, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee." First of all I think that he gave the beggar hope. Before this time the beggar had no hope at all. He was willing to remain as a beggar at the gate of the temple. It is a great privilege to give hope to some individual that has lost all hope and this is exactly what Peter did. Not only did Peter give him hope but he also gave him faith. Again the beggar had faith in man and faith in himself. Again the beggar felt that man was good and that there was a possibility of his doing something in the world. It is a wonderful thing to help a man to have faith in his fellowman, faith in his God and faith in himself. It would seem that Peter helped this beggar to do this very thing. Peter also gave the beggar love. Many beggar's hands but none of them had given him love as did Peter. Peter stretched out a helping hand to the beggar. He gave him the handclasp of a brother. It is a simple gift but it is a gift that is much needed in the world today and will always be needed as long as the world stands.

Our task is simple if we will just realize that all that is demanded of us is that we give what we have. If we will write our life story with the words, "I give" as did Peter we will be more like God Himself. The most blessed word that we read about God is, "He gave." Yes, He gave His only Son, that we might live. Our pockets may be as empty as Peter's, but we can still say as did Peter, "Silver and gold have I none, but such as I have give I thee."

THE STRANGE LAND BY NED CALMER
CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS, PUBLISHERS
By Allen L. Melikian
"Strange how coming back from the front, even after less than a week, it seems I've never been here before. But that's always the way it is when you come out of combat, from the other land into this. And if you haven't seen them both you will never understand either."
Major Harrod, an intelligence officer speaks for Author Ned Calmer who saw the front lines and the rear echelons as a CBS correspondent and expresses his understanding in The Strange Land. Calmer's comprehension embraces a bitter resentment toward the mistakes of war and a passionate sympathy for the misfortunes of war.
Drawing from his first-hand observations as a war-time reporter, Ned Calmer turns to fiction with accuracy of character and situation. He has created 12 intensely human characters and focused their traits through a searching lens trained on five days that are a lifetime for some people in the strange land of war.
Thoughtful Major Harrod who expresses so eloquently the beliefs of the author serves as a link between the planners and the fighters in an offensive against the Siegfried line in 1944. His traveling companion, John Wexel, is a bigoted war correspondent who travels to the front to get bloody details for his syndicated column. In a night counter-attack by the Germans these two vastly different personalities are glaringly revealed as only the flash of death-dealing weapons can light the inner core of humanity.
Gripped in the nervous tension of battle are the men of a forward rifle company. Corporal Selig, disgruntled and unfriendly, hates war and everyone connected with it except the buddies he has learned to suffer with. Private Boyce, slow and agreeable, eases his taut friends with an ability to relax that allows him to sleep through bomber raids. Sergeant Vorak, tough but understanding, lives by animal instinct that saves him in every encounter except one. Private Hill, young and eager, suffers in a few days the evolution from a green replacement to a wounded veteran.
Struggling to obey orders that will kill their over-worked and undersupplied men are the company officers. Lieutenant Keith is strong and infuses his men with the bravery that is the only thing that can keep them alive. Lieutenant Garnett is a broken man and falls from the crest of the battle wave. Lieutenant Phelan is vicious and saves himself with bravado while Lieutenant the safety of his men. Captain Crosby is an heroic figure, the company commander who must bear the sturs of his strained men as well as the spurs of his ranking officers.
In another sector of the strange land are those who plan or walk. Aggressive General Mallon is going to make a name for himself regardless of the consequences to his subordinates. Lieutenant Blake is a woman who must search for her lover on the colored maps of a briefing room.
The weaving of fate steadily binds these people into the blood and tear-stained tapestry of war. Ned Calmer carefully spins a narrative that moves irrevocably toward the tragedy that waits on the outer edges of the carpeting of a battle field.

T.I.C. TALKS

QUESTION: DO YOU READ THE BENNING HERALD? WHAT DO YOU THINK OF IT? CPL. WILLIAM A. WILSON, Heavy Tank company, 15th Infantry regiment: Yes, I read the Herald, and I think it's a pretty good magazine. As it stands, it's about as good as it could be made.

PFC. KNUF SKAU, 41st Field Artillery battalion: I read the Herald and I think it is a good publication. I like the part about the field problems, and it's a very good idea the way it brought out. It strikes me that it gives a good idea of what the men do out in the field.

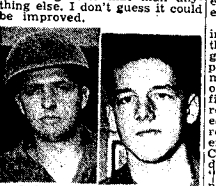

MSGT. WAYNE GILLILAND, 41st Field Artillery battalion: I have read the Herald, and I think it's fine. It is especially interesting to the new men with little military experience because what is happening around the post. I don't believe we get enough copies for distribution as a whole. I think the most interesting issue was the pictorial history of the post.

CAPT. JOHN T. McMAHON, 41st Field Artillery battalion: I have read it, and I think it's a good magazine with a lot of interesting information. One thing I noticed is that it plays up some units that not too many know. I think that's a good idea. One suggestion I would like to make is on these individual units give some of the combat experience of the outfit. Give like that and most of them will read things along those lines on their unit.

SGT. JAMES SMOTHERS, 41st Field Artillery battalion: I like the Herald and think it's a very fine publication. You get a lot of poop about the units and just what is going on around the post that you don't get from anything else.

PVT. WILLIAM MURMAN, 41st Field Artillery battalion: I like the Herald and think it's a very good magazine. It shows what is going on around here. It seems to me that it has more information of units, field problems and things like that than any other thing else. I don't guess it could be improved.

STR Company Personnel Cut

The Student Training regiment's 12th company lost 11 men by transfer last week, according to CWO V. J. Kotnik, company administrative officer. Transferred to the 39th Anti-aircraft and Automatic Weapons battalion, Fort Meade, Md., were Thomas E. Holt and Pvt. Thomas E. Grantley. Going to Camp Stoneman, Calif. to await overseas shipment were Pvt. George L. O'Connell, Thomas E. Conroy, Tony R. Gilliam and Nathaniel Wise. Pvt. Otha Williams left for Camp Campbell, Ky., where he will be assigned to the 821st Quartermaster Fungation and Bath company, and Pvt. Horace A. Hayes left for Fort Dix, N. J., to await overseas shipment. Leaving the post for Fort Lawton, Wash., to await overseas shipment was Sgt. George C. Quick. At the same time, Pvt. Deryl H. Smith was transferred to the 82nd Replacement company, 2nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Replaced 'Spoils' System

Civil Service Emanated From Garfield Slaying

EDITORS NOTE: The following is the first of two articles, prepared and written by F. B. Richardson, Bayonet staff writer, explaining the origin of the U. S. Civil Service commission and the role it plays in the operation and maintenance of Fort Benning.

BY F. B. RICHARDSON
Bayonet Staff Writer

Although the idea embodied in the present civil service system can be traced back to the enactment of the Spoils Act, and dramatically as the first bomb explosion over Hiroshima. In the fall of 1881, President James A. Garfield was assassinated by a disenchanted heeler named Guiteau, who had been rejected a job in the form of a political plum which he fondly had hoped to pluck from the grab bag known as the spoils system. Immediately, a raging political fight developed. The question of civil service was actively debated since 1888 was now a political hot potato with the reformers on one side ranged against the entrenched adherents of the spoils system. The culmination of this struggle came early in 1883 when the battle of Chester A. Arthur signed the Civil Service Reform Act. Political morals then began to slowly convalesce. Aided throughout the campaign by the passage of 11 major laws which have clarified and improved the federal civil service.

But what has stable history got to do with civil service workers at military posts? TO A SOLDIER, THE ANSWER should be easy. How much more does an army recruit absorb in his first few days at a reception center? Consider the blank spots so that anyone can understand the whys and wherefores of the relationship of the individual soldier. Thus, what has happened in the past is the basis for present and future planning. In order to understand something about the work being done at Fort Benning, it's not got started.

Ten years after passage of the Civil Service Act, sick and sound leave laws, since improved, were enacted, providing federal general as those found in previous legislation was passed the rights of employees to organize and petition congress as provided in their removal except upon presentation of written charges. In 1916, benefits for injuries or death incurred in federal service were extended, and in 1920, provisions for retirement, since liberalized and extended, were made law. The Classification Act of 1923 introduced job evaluation, with the equal pay for equal work principle given legal standing.

FROM 1938 THROUGH 1941 legislation was enacted each year to strengthen and improve civil service. The Veteran's Preference Act of 1944 granted all veteran appointment preference and superior retention and promotion.

This long record of achievement is the most more significant feature of the unique position of federal personnel management. The national picture is examined, not only does the federal government have the largest and most complex task of any single employer, but is subject to the obligations which complicate management and increase cost far beyond that of private employers. Time does not permit a detailed analysis of the "why" of red tape. One reason for the existence of more federal regulations and controls than most people think necessary is the simple fact that the government must fend off many pressures and influences which operate for special privilege or gain. Old grab bag pops up again, but controlled to a great extent through these measures called red tape. As a result of national well-must have rules and regulations to prevent the employment of continuance in office of those a whose loyalty is open to question. More red tape, perhaps, but recent disclosures seem to indicate that it's better to be safe than sorry. As the advent of human rights, government must take unusual measures to prevent discrimination against minority groups. Rules again, but it honestly be said it should be otherwise?

THE INSTRUMENTALITY which spends the funds collected from taxpayers, government management practices are under continuous and critical scrutiny by a public conscience and its demand for more efficiency and economy. These, and related obligations, justify the operating agencies of government, of which civil service employees form over 90 percent, to influence the recognition of the limitations and obligations imposed by government as a political responsibility in an understanding of its operation which they establish definite boundaries within which improvements must be accomplished. To home, let's take a look at civil service management and its relationship to the civil service employees on the post.

The civilian personnel office is unobtrusively on Vibbert avenue next to the finance office. Both are the men and women who have the pulse of the 1,600 people working in every major unit on the post, and in different jobs. The nucleus of this widespread organization is composed of the civilian personnel director and his staff, responsible for the three "S" School of Administration (Paper), Salary and Wage (Positions) and Employment (Positions) and Employment (Positions) section.

The Administration section does just what its name says it does—manages. It includes the handling of payrolls, retirement and leave requests, related functions which are as vital as they are colorless to describe. The SALARY AND WAGE section is responsible for such administrative functions as job analysis and description, pay treatment surveys and the evaluation of all factors which pertain to salaries and wages. In simple, plain language, it figures out what the person holding a job is supposed to do, and what his job and other related functions which are as vital as they are colorless to describe. The Employee Utilization section is almost an exact counterpart of the personnel division brought up to date. It is responsible—in civil service terminology—for placement, training and employee relations. In more detailed language, it handles recruiting, examination and orientation of new employees, planning and supervision of off-duty training, initiation of employee changes and separations, and employee counseling.

These three sections combine efforts to insure the smooth functioning of the entire civilian personnel organization in much the same manner that a regimental or division staff operates in planning and carrying out the mission. A natural question might arise at this point. Just where are all these people who are working on the post? The simple answer is: "All over," and that is literally so, though it does dodge the question.

UNDER THE CLASSIFICATION Act of 1949, the old CAF, SP and P ratings were replaced by General Schedule, or GS ratings, as established by law. Approximately 35 percent of the post's civil service employees on the post are covered by the other 65 percent carry ratings, salaries for which are determined by the Army-Airforce based on Washington, D. C., area surrounding a given military installation by private enterprise. This similar job category.

Civil service employees are to be found in every major unit on the post, and scattered throughout their subdivisions. A detailed breakdown of their location by unit would be a dull to read as a page of the Congressional Record translated into ancient Greek. However, a brief run-down by activity will give a reasonably clear picture. The "Big Ten" — those activities employing the greatest number of civil service workers — on the payroll, in second place in ordnance, with 326, followed by quartermaster, with 266; Station hospital, with 135; the Infantry School, with 111, the Infantry Center, with 80; Lawson airforce base, with 71; transportation, with 44; finance, with 38, and signal, with 21. Routine Flights Fail to Satisfy Paratroopers

Apparently their routine jaunts in C-82 (Flying Boxcars) couldn't satisfy the flying appetites of 3d Sgt. Herbert H. Jordan and Cpl. George S. Creamer, members of Company B, Airborne Battalion, Student Training Regiment. The two paratroopers recently gave free rein to their yearnings to handle the controls of a plane, pooled their finances and invested in a Piper Cub. Buddies of Sergeant Jordan and Corporal Creamer report, however, that the investment in a plane has simplified the task of finding the two during off-duty hours. All that is necessary, they say, is to pick up the phone and call the School of Aviation in Columbus.

Block 12 Begins Club Renovation

The first step in the remodeling program of the Block 12 NCO club was completed Saturday, March 18, when the new bar opened to members and their guests. Work was started March 13, and included the laying of a new asphalt tile floor, lowering the ceiling and installing fluorescent lighting, construction of a new bar with stainless steel top, back bar mirrors and shelves, and new wall paneling in knotty pine. Additional plans call for widening the entire building, installation of gas heating and complete asphalt floor tiling throughout. This construction is awaiting the final approval of Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burgess, Infantry Center commander, and will be started within three months after his approval is granted.

New Laboratory Study Available

Army and airforce hospitals within the Third Army area will each be permitted to send one representative to a new laboratory refreshment course being held at Fort McPherson, Ga., Third Army headquarters at least two weeks in advance of the class. The new course, which encompasses subjects dealt with in medical laboratories at station hospitals, is designed primarily for technicians. Dates of the five class periods are: chemical and bacteriological examination of dairy products, April 17-14; clinical chemistry, April 17-May 12; medical parasitology, May 15-26; medical bacteriology, May 29-June 23, and syphilis serology, June 26-June 30. Those desiring to attend the classes should apply to Third Army headquarters at least two weeks in advance of the class.

Columbus Publisher Notes Realism of Vieques Attack

Operation Portrex Indoctrinated 3rd Division Troops in Invasion Tactics

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was prepared exclusively for The Bayonet by M. R. Ashworth, publisher of The Columbus Ledger-Enquirer newspapers, who was an eye-witness to Operation Portrex, the largest joint armed forces maneuver ever staged by the U. S. in peacetime. Mr. Ashworth was one of a group of distinguished civilians invited to observe the air-land-sea exercise by Secretary of Defense Louis A. Johnson.

BY M. R. ASHWORTH
Publisher, Columbus Ledger-Enquirer

The armed forces of the U. S. and the "aggressor" forces came to grips in the Caribbean during Operation Portrex with all the realism of a shooting war, minus actual shooting at each other.

When the Third Infantry division units and other outfits in the attacking force returned to Benning they can be greeted as veterans. The Third division of Salerno or Anzio did not attack a more formidable defense than it did at Vieques.

The "aggressor" force had built up a defense that was near impossible to break through. Only superior gunfire and maneuver power and prior maneuver plan enabled the invaders to finally say the assaulting force had successfully stormed the island.

The two paratroopers recently gave free rein to their yearnings to handle the controls of a plane, pooled their finances and invested in a Piper Cub. Buddies of Sergeant Jordan and Corporal Creamer report, however, that the investment in a plane has simplified the task of finding the two during off-duty hours. Col. Forrester Feted at Club

Brig. Gen. J. Sladen Bradley entertained with a luncheon on Wednesday at the Officers' club in honor of Lt. Col. Michael Forrester, aide to Gen. Sir William Morstan, chairman of the British Joint Services Mission in Washington. The luncheon table was centered with a low arrangement of wisteria and dogwood. The guests included Col. C. H. Karlsstad, Col. George Honnen, Lt. S. L. A. Marshall of the Detroit News, author of "Men Under Fire," who was with us, said he had not seen any better CP's during World War II. When the Third division comes home some of the boys who have been under fire in World War II should not be too cocky around these Fortrex veterans. At it they did take a lot and are better soldiers for the drubbing and beating they took to capture Vieques in the Caribbean.

ODDS AND ENDS

by STEVE BOLAND

The objective of the army sports program is—sports for all, and in order to achieve this objective, the athletic program is divided into four phases: instructional, intramural, inter-organizational and self-organized programs. With proper emphasis placed on these various phases, a program stimulating maximum participation at all levels of skill can be conducted, and competition can be provided for all units of all commands.

It can be safely stated that each of these phases is in operation at Fort Benning and has proven highly successful. Some examples which can be mentioned are, in the instructional phase, the umpire school and the first aid water safety school being conducted by the special services office in conjunction with the Red Cross. In the intramural phase are the year-round intramural leagues. In the interorganizational phase are the various challenges issued by units to other units prior to regular league play. Finally the self-organized example can easily be pointed out in the 328th Ordnance Battalion's and the 99th Armored field artillery battalion's football team and the Third Battalion, 15th Infantry regiment's basketball team.

Of interest to all individuals concerned with army athletic programs is the army's policy in regard to members of amateur and professional standing. This policy is in agreement with the regulations set forth by Amateur Athletic Union.

Both agencies define an amateur sportsman as one who engages in sport solely for the pleasure and the physical, mental or social benefits derived therefrom and to whom the sport is nothing more than a hobby. Under this definition, members of the army ineligible for amateur competition are those who have competed in sports for money unless it can be shown to the satisfaction of their commanding officer that such acts were committed through ignorance, inadvertence or excusable error or were made obligatory by military authority.

The army's policy in relation to amateur and professional competition states:

"Regardless of previous status, military personnel are eligible to compete on army teams against other army teams and in any other contest where any amateur standing is not required, with the exception of boxing in which amateur athletes will not compete with or against professionals.

"An amateur athlete will not lose his standing because he is a member of an army team that consists of professionals or if his team may occasionally play against professionals.

"Army teams may compete against civilian professional teams without jeopardizing the amateur standing of competitors when the contest is sponsored by the army or by a recognized charitable nonprofit organization, provided special permission for such participation is granted by the Amateur Athletic Union through the chief of special services.

"Any member of the armed forces who engages in professional games or contests as an individual or as a member of a team other than his service team is ineligible to compete as an amateur.

"Subject to the approval of his commanding officer, a military person who is a professional athlete may enter in any professional competition he desires provided such activity does not interfere with his military duties."

The Army Field Printing Plant's volleyball kings, under the guidance of Harvey Allen, had very little trouble in retaining their Infantry Center net title by taking two straight games from the 15th Infantry regiment's Headquarters company team last Monday night.

How anyone could stand up under the savage spiking of Letty Lehner, Bill Taylor and George Hill is hard to imagine. These three men really lived up to the version of Casey lowering the boom.

This writer tried to contact Harold Burns, Doughboy kegler, who rolled a 245, the highest individual game in the Third Army pin class. As it was Burns couldn't be reached so a photo was taken of John McGovern and Harold Browning for publication in this week's Bayonet. Benning can well be proud of McGovern, who captured the Third Army singles title and teamed up with Browning to gain the runnerup spot in the doubles event. In addition, he was selected a member of the forthcoming army-wide pin classic.

Doughs Lose to Ramblers in Third Army Pins Finals

Benning Kegler Placed on Area All-Star Squad

Fort Benning's Doughboy keggers lost out to the Camp Gordon, Ga., Ramblers in the final game of the Third Army bowling tournament last Thursday night at Fort Bragg, N. C., by a score of 2,474 to 2,538.

Although the Doughs didn't come off with a good part of the awards and also placed John McGovern on the area all star team which will represent Third Army in the all-arms event scheduled for April 1-7.

McGovern Wins Singles—McGovern rolled a five-game total of 970 to take the singles championship and later teamed with Harold Browning to gain the runnerup spot in the doubles event. Harold Burns, another Dough, received an award for rolling a 245, the highest individual game of the tourney.

Bill Taylor of the Fort Jackson, S. C., Red Devil team took a good bit of the spotlight when he won the all-events title with a 2,774, took the runnerup spot in the singles with a 950, teamed with James DePietro to retain the Third Army doubles title with an 1,870, and along with DePietro was selected on the area's all-star team.

Braggmen Complete Team—The remaining three members selected for the Third Army team included Joseph Ducato of Gordon and Harley Tillapaugh and Tom Alai of Fort Bragg.

There were 10 teams entered in this year's area tourney. They were from Fort Bragg, Fort Jackson, Fort Benning, Fort McPherson, Ga., Camp Gordon, Georgia military district, Tennessee military district, Florida military district, Oliver General Hospital, and Atlanta General Depot, Ga.

On Monday, March 13, the opening day of the tourney saw the roll-off for the singles title. Teaming with John McGovern taking honors with a 970, followed closely by J. Bitala of Jackson with a 950.

Tuesday, March 14, the second day of the tourney saw the afternoon spent in the roll-off for the doubles title which was taken by the Jackson team of Bitala and DePietro, with an 1,870. McGovern and Browning took the runnerup spot for Benning.

That evening saw the first team matches rolled, with Benning defeating Florida military district. Fort McPherson went into the third round with a bye and a win over Georgia military district, and Benning beat Jackson. Atlanta General Depot also went into the third round with a bye and a win over Tennessee military district.

In Wednesday night's matches Gordon advanced to the Semifinals with wins over Bragg and Atlanta General Depot. McPherson defeated Benning in a close into a playoff for the championship after Benning had previously eliminated Oliver General. In the consolation bracket Benning defeated Oliver General, Florida Military district, and Jackson defeated Bragg and Georgia military district.

In Thursday night's crucial games Jackson beat Atlanta General Depot, Gordon defeated McPherson, and Benning beat Jackson and McPherson to go to the quarter finals for the title.

On Friday night the printers saw battle for the first half of the fray, but with Ledlow and Lockery finding the range the title holders coasted to an easy 15-5 dropping the opener, 16-14.

The Printing Plant squad had little trouble in repeating over years, displayed the teamwork and perfect coordination necessary in producing a championship team.

The tourney, which opened play on Wednesday, March 15, saw the printing plant open its string of victories by defeating the team from the St.udent Training regiment's Airborne Battalion. Other games Wednesday saw Company K, 15th Infantry, defeat Headquarters de-Headquarters company of the 15th Infantry and Company L of the 15th Infantry drew byes. On Thursday night the printers defeated Company L, 15th; Headquarters company, 15th Infantry, and Headquarters company, 15th Infantry, coached by Harvey M. Taylor, eliminated the Airborne team.

On Friday night the printers defeated Headquarters company to enter the semi-finals, while Company K eliminated Company L and Headquarters company eliminated the 3440th team.

On Thursday night the printers defeated Headquarters company to enter the semi-finals, while Company K eliminated Company L and Headquarters company eliminated the 3440th team.

Headquarters company eliminated Company K in the quarter finals Monday night and lost to the printers in the semi-finals, eliminating the necessity of a final playoff in the tourney. Members of the championship team, coached by Harvey M. Taylor, include Collie Lehner, Bill Ledlow, Tom Ewing, John Goodin, Lenwood Greene and Tom Holmes.

This team will again try to retain its Third Army title with the hope of getting a crack at the all-army volleyball championship.

ISD Team Retains Volleyball Crown

Printing Plant's Netters Take 7th Straight Title

The Army Field Printing Plant's volleyball team, whose members are assigned to Company C, Infantry School detachment, lived up to expectations last Monday night at the Main gym by defeating the 15th Infantry regiment's Headquarters company team, 15-1, 15-5, to cop the Infantry Center Volleyball crown for the seventh consecutive year.

The team was defeated by the Printing Plant in the earlier in the double elimination tourney but came back up the ladder by defeating Company K of the 15th Infantry regiment in the quarter finals for the title.

The second game was a see-saw battle for the first half of the fray, but with Ledlow and Lockery finding the range the title holders coasted to an easy 15-5 dropping the opener, 16-14.

The Printing Plant squad had little trouble in repeating over years, displayed the teamwork and perfect coordination necessary in producing a championship team.

BY BOB PHILLIPS
The hustling basketekers from the Third Battalion of the 15th Infantry regiment swept aside their last two opponents at the Ninth Street YMCA last week to take the 1950 Industrial League championship.

In taking the league title, the Infantry cagers set a precedent by being the first military team to win the crown since the organization of the league in 1947. They also established a record of the most consecutive wins unequalled by any team in the league this season.

Striking in a destructive fashion and leaving in their wake a ragged line of eight badly beaten teams, the soldiers ran up a string of six consecutive wins before suffering their only loss in season's play. Their record for the season showed 10 wins against two losses. Their record in league play was eight wins against one defeat.

Come From Behind
In both of last week's games the soldiers had to come from behind before emerging as the victors.

In a Tuesday night's game against the Infantry, the team had to overcome a 22-16 deficit at half-time before taking the game by a 36-33 count. Although Willie Battles and Leon Smith were the offensive stars in this game, it was left to swift moving Mel Thomas to put the game on ice. A two-point play broke loose, again to put all to open play in the final period, and quick buckets by Smith and Thomas upped the count to a field goal and added a free throw while his mates tightened up defensively to hold that short lead until the final whistle. Jackson Is Big Gun

Oliver Jackson, who bagged a total of 16 points, was the big gun for the soldiers in Friday night's game against the Beallwood Tigers. The Infantry overcame a 13-10 half-time lead to take the game by a score of 35-24. After eight minutes of play the Tigers seemed to hold a commanding 8-2 lead, but rallying behind the deadly shooting of Jackson, Durham and Bat-tles, the soldiers whittled the count down to a 13-10 lead at half-time. By the end of the quarter the soldiers had gone ahead by one point lead of 20-19. During the next five minutes, the lead came a n g e d . hands several times until Jackson and company broke loose, again to put all to open play in the final period, and quick buckets by Smith

Fish Meet Includes Pro Demonstration

A professional angling demonstration has been incorporated into the agenda for the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association's annual fishing tournament at King's pond April 1, association officials announced this week.

Scheduled to put on the exhibition is John Martin, a representative of Walworth and Hood Sporting Goods company of Atlanta. Martin is expected to arrive here on March 31, and will demonstrate his technique in casting about 2 p. m. the following day.

Meanwhile, tournament officials said that two prizes each will be given for bait and fly casting. In the fly casting division, the first prize award will be a bamboo rod, while the second place contestant will be awarded a tapered line and reel. An action rod will be presented to the winner in the bait casting category, and the second-place participant will receive a casting reel and line.

Flugs for bait casting, it was pointed out, will be furnished by the association. Fort Benning anglers were reminded that King's pond will be closed from next Monday until the opening of the tournament to permit preparation of the pond and surrounding grounds for the meet.

The tourney will be open to all members of the Fish and Game Maintenance association, as well as to others who pay a registration fee of $1.25. Registration for the meet will begin at 4:30 a. m. on April 1.

BEARD AND FAY STAR IN UNIT TRACK MEET

Although the trackmen from the 378th Ordnance company with 39 points took only two of the first places they garnered enough points to win the track and field meet held by the 328th Ordnance battalion last Friday at Doughboy stadium.

The Sixth Ordnance company took runner-up spot with 26 points. Third place went to the 71st Ordnance company with 29. Fourth place was occupied by the 516th Ordnance company with 18 points. Headquarters detachment placed last with nine points.

Tom Beard, 71st Ordnance company, was top pointer in the meet with a total of 19 points, all but 10 of his team's entire total for the afternoon. Beard's points were all picked up in field events when he took three first places in the shotput, discus and broad jump and placed second in the javelin.

Beard's closest competitor was Lee Fay of the Sixth Ordnance company with a total of 15 points. Fay placed first in the javelin throw, the 220-yard dash and the pole vault.

Howard Baker, Headquarters detachment, and John Whitaker, Sixth Ordnance company, tied for this place with nine points each. Baker placed first in the javelin throw and second in the 880-yard run, while Whitaker placed first in the 440-yard run and second in the 220-yard low hurdle race.

Fifty participants were on hand to take part in the 15 events, with the winners in each

Airborne Students Awarded 'Wings'

Two officers and 81 enlisted men of Company A, Airborne Battalion, Student Training Regiment, graduated from basic airborne class No. 27 during a ceremony at Chapel field last week.

The class was delayed several days in graduating because of inclement weather which prevented the students from making their fifth and qualifying jump.

The two officer graduates and 73 of the enlisted paratroopers were assigned to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., while the other eight enlisted men went to the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N. C.

3440th Baseball League To Open Activity April 4

All Units Ready For Loop Play

The 3440th Area Service Unit Provisional group's baseball league, with five teams represented, is scheduled to start play on April 4, and will continue until each of the teams has played each other four times.

Merlin Dean, ASU athletic and recreation officer and head of the league, has announced that the season's play will be divided into two halves, with the team winning the greatest number of games in each half declared champion for that half. In case of a tie at the conclusion of a half, a one-game playoff will decide the winner. The winning team in each half will play a three-game series to decide the league champions. In the event the same club wins both halves no playoff will be necessary.

Group Team

On April 17, although members from the various teams in the ASU league will be selected to represent the group in the 1950 baseball league, the ASU league will continue and as long as a man is a member of the group he will be ineligible to participate in ASU league play.

Plans, similar to the farm systems used by the major league clubs, have been made by ASU officials giving the group the right to use any man in the ASU league, and in the event a man is released from the group team he is again eligible to participate in the ASU league.

Units Combine

Personnel of Headquarters and Headquarters detachment of Section II and Military Police detachment of Section I will be combined and known as the Section I team.

Personnel from Headquarters of Section II and Military Police detachment of Section I will be combined and be called the Section II team.

The three remaining league members will be represented by the 15th Quartermaster Battalion, the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion and the 328th Ordnance Battalion.

The team rosters will not exceed the 20-man limit, including a half, a one-game playoff will be awarded the ASU Provisional group. The winning team will hold the ASU Provisional League title, last year's group champion.

League officials will be selected from the men attending the special services' umpire school and will be made available to call by the ASU athletic and recreation officer.

Team Rosters

The protest board will consist of the coaches of the teams participating in the league with the league president as chairman. The Section I team which has been working on the field in the third quartet is being coached by Baz Walkin who has submitted the names of the following men as members of the team: Outfielders J. Moran, W. Carvallo, D. Vandervender, F. McLausman, R. McCann, H. Redondo, S. Jaruszewski and S. Garlock; infielders J. Buck, H. Gess, J. Dececco and G. Tunney; catchers R. Walters and K. Struss; and Pitches J. Suggs.

The Section II team, coached by U. Hale, who was also a catcher on last year's group team has four other members from last year's team returning. They are Pitches L. Hay and F. Stewart; Outfielder C. Thrall; and Infielder W. Banks.

The remaining members of the squad will find J. H. Mahoney, M. Kenner, H. D. Moore, S. Thomas and R. Woods in the outfield; J. Moran, E. Coleman, E. J. Miles, J. Bowen, W. Jenkins and J. Huggins as infielders and art with the hurling assistance of the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion's ball club, coached by Donald Payne, has also been

Woman's Club Holds Ringer Golf Tourney

The Woman's Golf group of the Fort Benning Country club has announced that a ringer golf tournament is now under way and will continue until May 31.

The first golf tournament held by the women's group this spring was an 18-hole blind bogey-tourney March 10, which was won by Helen Marsh with Helen Volkmann and Betty Landon in a tie for second spot.

A St. Patrick's Day putting tourney was held March 17 on both the nine-holes and the 18-holes. K. Palmer won the nine-hole event with a 19, while Helene McCormick and Ruth Bennett were tied for the runner-up spot with a 22. In the 18-hole event, Helen Marsh was the winner with a 33, followed closely by Lenore Walker with a 34.

Club officials have also announced the starting of an accuracy tourney on Friday, March 24, and a poker tourney on Saturday March 25.

All members of the club are requested to hand in their handicaps for April. Play handicaps will take place each Friday with the nine-holes teeing off between 9:30 a.m., and the 18-holes teeing off between 1:2 p.m.

Officers Plan Golf Tourney

The Fort Benning Country club will be the scene next month of the annual playoff for the Officers' club golf championship. Final match is scheduled to be completed by May 7.

Club officials announced that the first round of play is slated to start April 1, with the low 32 the champion of the championship flight.

Losers in the championship flight in the first day's play will comprise the first flight and flights of 16 thereafter will be arranged in accordance with the qualifying scores.

ISD Diamond Profs Prepare For Campaign

Under the guidance of John Seymour, who has taken over coaching duties for the Infantry School's diamond squad, the over threatening Profs have been undergoing loosening up workouts since the first call went out on March 6.

The Profs, one of the oldest teams in the Fort Benning baseball league, are making an attempt to recapture the league title.

Coch Seymour has had a crop of 36 candidates out for this year's squad, including 14 veterans from last year's team. With this group as a nucleus, plus some likely-looking newcomers, the Profs will again field a powerful team.

Coch Seymour plans on cutting the squad down to the required 25 men within the next week, and after a few intensive drills, he plans to arrange practice tilts prior to regular league play.

The crop of returning veterans who are well known to post baseballers include infielders Herb Laue, Blondie Burnett, John Hojnacki and Sam Prophet; Outfielders, Woody Burt, Red Burgamy and Bob Londs; and Hurlers, John Saddle, only veteran receiver returning, will be aided by a host of newcomers plugging for that spot. Candidates for catching duties are Harvel Dick, Dick Donaldson, Dick Dean and Bob Orr.

Other candidates out for positions on the squad include Outfielders Arlie Moritz, Mort Marsh, Fred Heed, Howard Curry and Norm Trainer; Infielders George Gardner, Alvin Shannon, Gary Garganyes and John McBride, and Pitches Gordon Voss, Barney Dixon and Bill Storey.

The team's trainer will be Tom Bolen.

ASU Provisional Group To Conduct Annual Meet

Tomorrow afternoon Doughboy stadium will be the scene of the 3440th Area Service Unit Provisional group's field and track meet. The first event is scheduled for 1 p.m.

Purpose of the meet, which will be governed by official AAA track and field rules, is to select the best athletes for the ASU track team to participate in the Infantry Center intramural meet on April 15.

Units to be represented in the ASU meet will include the combined units of Headquarters and Headquarters detachment of Section I, Third Army Food Service School and the Military Police detachment of Section I to be known as the No. 1 team; Headquarters and Headquarters detachment of Section II and Military Police detachment of Section II, No. 2 team; the 15th Quartermaster Battalion, No. 3 team; the 328th Ordnance Battalion, No. 4 team, and the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion, No. 5 team.

The point system will give the first place winners in each event five points, the second place winners three points, and the third place winners one point.

The unit awarding the greatest number of points will be awarded the championship track and field meet plaque. Medals will also be presented to individuals placing first, second and third in each event.

Medical Group Diamond Squad Set for Action

The Provisional Medical Group's 1950 baseball squad, coached by Jack (Feather) Moyer, got the jump on others when it had its first call on Feb. 15.

The call was answered by 86 hopeful candidates who received their tryouts at Green field where the Medics have been working out for the past month.

Coch Moyer held these tryouts for a two-day period and since then has cut the squad down to the team roster of 22 men who will be carried in Fort Benning league play.

Coch Moyer has concentrated mainly on physical conditioning during the morning sessions, with fielding, throwing and hitting practice taking up the afternoon time. Intersquad games have also been in progress for the past week, and the team will soon be ready for exhibition games.

The Medics coach has six returnees around whom he expects to build his ball club. These veterans include Outfielders Bob Kopp and Ford Cornett, Infielder Steve Cruce, Catcher Willie Griffin and Hurlers John Graves and Bob Hoffman.

The remainder of the squad who will be making their initial appearance in Medie uniform are Outfielders Charles Shirley, Jim Costello, Bill Park, Thomson Ko and Bill Storey. Infielders Elden Morell, Ray Cooper and Al King; Catcher Les Wargo, and Coach Moyer will be assisted by Steve Cruce, with the team publicity handled by Ray Schnedeker.

RED CROSS CAMPAIGN

FORT BENNING'S GOAL 100% MEMBERSHIP

RED CROSS PROGRESS RAPID... The Red Cross' 1950 fund drive progress billboard, shown a steady increase as the month-long campaign enters its final stages. Murray Hill, Red Cross field director, said that total contributions had reached the $14,250 mark by Monday morning, slightly more than 50 percent of the anticipated goal. The Infantry School topped all other organizational goals with a grand total of 204 percent. Mr. Hill said the donation trend "is encouraging" and that response shown during the drive will result in reaching the goal.

Officer Returns From Schooling

Lt. Oba M. Hearn, 73rd Heavy Tank battalion, returned this week from a four-week tank course at the Ordnance School, Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md. Lieutenant Hearn, who attained an average of 87 percent on examinations given during the course, studied mechanics and tactics of the new and heavier M-46 tank. Unit officials said that a special course is expected to be conducted by the graduate.

Development Requested On Biological Warfare

Prospects of another type of world warfare were injected into requests for military appropriations this week when Chemical Corps advisors urged extensive development of offensive and defensive biological warfare techniques. Maj. Gen. A. C. McAuliffe, chief of the Chemical Corps, said this week that poison gas and disease germs may be used against this country in any future war. He said that "to a degree," the M-46 employs a "wobble stick" for driving purposes, which enables it to be maneuvered with little effort. It also has recently added a braking system that will allow it to "stop and turn on a dime."

Company Ready For New Class

The Student Training Regiment's First company is preparing to receive students for the Infantry School's 13-week associate basic course No. 5, which is scheduled to begin March 23 and end June 28, it was reported this week by Capt. Elmer C. Navarre, commander.

Housing Difficulty Not the Usual Kind For Perplexed GI

The frustrating fight in which Sgt. David M. Hood, Company A, Infantry school detachment, is embroiled is about to try his patience. The Infantry Center veteran twice has been told by the Federal Housing Authority that unless he completes payments on a home he bought from them, a suit will be filed in court.

But the Troy, Tenn., native says he can't seem to make the FHA understand: (1) He has been living in army quarters for the past two years, and (2) he and his wife have never thought of buying a home.

Stiff Penalties Await Persons Who Trifle With Enumerators

April Fool's day won't be any laughing matter for those who feel tempted to jest with the census taker on that day. Instead, there'll be a stiff penalty for refusal to answer or falsification of facts.

Bentley H. Chappell Jr., district supervisor of the Bureau of Census, said this week that some two dozen enumerators would be canvassing Fort Benning residential areas on April 1. He said the question-asking should be completed within two weeks.

Mr. Chappell said, in addition, that the survey, which is to make current the population records of the United States, will cover all house-type dwellings on the military reservation. Military units at Infantry Center will question their personnel through a questionnaire distributed by a representative of the district bureau.

INGENUITY PERSONIFIED... Sgt. 1st Cl. Coate Brown adds the final touches to a huge chain-of-command sign he recently constructed in the Infantry School building.

zodiacal sign of Pisces at that time or because fish are easily caught in April is a matter of conjecture.
The April Fool's Day spirit first invaded England shortly after A. Hitler failed.
EDITOR'S NOTE: Is all history to be made a mockery by your fabricating mind? April 1 joking became popular in England shortly after the beginning of the 19th century.
—Just to prove to you that I did use a test to get my information for this story, I'll quote to you one of the gems from "The American Book of Days" by George William Douglas.
"The early settlers of America brought the custom with them. It is observed here chiefly by small boys."
EDITOR'S NOTE: And imbecilic newspaper writers.
Editors of army newspapers usually let their employees have April 1 off in commemoration of the day and what it has meant to posterity.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Brother, I've got news for you.
The first April Fool's Day pranks were crude indeed, but today's tricks usually are somewhat refined.
EDITOR'S NOTE: Yeah. Such as running a steam roller over an infant while its invalid mother looks helplessly on, or splashing sulfuric acid in the eyes of a crippled deaf-mute.
WRITER'S NOTE: I realize, boss, that some of the facts in this story might be slightly garbled, but I'm relying on you—great fountain of knowledge that you are—to straighten them out. If you can't do it, we can laugh it off as an April Fool's Day gimmick on our readers.—LEWIS McAFEE.

Revival of Blood Donor Controls Placed On Medical Care For Dependents

By Armed Forces Press Service
Human blood is a weapon for defense.
In the event of a present day military emergency, more blood might be required in a single week than all the blood required for the world during World War II.
The only known source of blood is from the veins of living, healthy people.
These are some of the reasons for reviving the wartime service of the American National Red Cross' nation-wide blood donor program. Now termed the National Blood program, it is seeking to replenish the "woefully short" supply.
Because the National Blood program is the largest single source of supply of whole blood and blood derivatives, healthy citizens throughout the country, as well as members of the armed forces, are urged to contribute blood.
To make it easier for the individual, a mobile blood center is touring the country. The "blood mobile" is visiting army, navy and air force installations where the voluntary response has been termed encouraging. Naval and military personnel have a particularly big stake in the success of the program. Red Cross officials point out.

"To those charged with preparedness for any national military emergency, blood procurement is of great consequence," officials say. "Whole blood and blood fractions are major weapons in salvaging people subjected to radiation sickness, flash and thermal burns, and wounds."
Blood for blood in such a military emergency would not be limited to the first few days when required to treat shock or treat patients with burns or other injuries. Vast quantities would also be required for patients who have anemia, those suffering hemorrhage and secondary infections.

Medical service for dependents of military personnel on active duty will be maintained under tighter controls in order to eliminate current abuses, according to a recent Infantry Center announcement.
The salmon colored dependent medical card currently being used is the only card which will be honored for dependent medical treatment and covers such services for the wife and dependent children as dental, X-ray, and treatment for dependents other than wives and children. It will be necessary to have a certificate prepared by the commanding officer of the individual requesting such treatment, listing name, rank, army service number, organization and expiration term of the certificate. In addition, the certificate must contain the name, age, sex and relationship of dependents and verification of dependency.
With the limited number of medical officers available, the importance of limiting house calls by doctors to actual emergencies was stressed in the announcement which also said that clinic and dispensary services may be by appointment only. Dependents have been cautioned by officials to have positive evidence of dependency when presenting themselves for medical services.

College Honors General Collins

SOUTH BEND, Ind., (APFS)—Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, recently became the 49th American to receive the Latereau medal, awarded annually by Notre Dame university to a distinguished Roman Catholic layman. The award was founded by the Rev. Edward F. Sorin, founder of Notre Dame.
In presenting the medal, the Rev. John J. Cavanaugh, Notre Dame president, said: "General Collins has led a distinguished career as a soldier, having been decorated for gallantry in both World Wars. His genius during the crisis of wartime, moreover, is equaled by his steadfast efforts in behalf of peace in the world today."

Ordnance Items Listed for Sale

Third army ordnance officials reported this week that a vast supply of sub-standard material is available for sale at considerable savings to military personnel within the army area.
The announcement, which listed rifles, binoculars, shotgun shells and wrist watches, said that only one of each item may be purchased by an individual and all sales are final. The equipment is said to be serviceable but below army service requirements.
Purchases must be made by individuals through direct requests to the supply installation handling the surplus equipment.
The following installations and items being handled have been listed by Third army officials:
Augusta Arsenal, Ga., rifles; Aniston Ordnance depot, Ala.,

Food Pictures Preparedness Is Stressed By Gen. Omar N. Bradley

Infantry Center dining halls will soon become movie theaters, it is a proposed plan by the food service supervisor goes into effect.
Maj. John A. Rilovich, Infantry Center food service supervisor, said this week that army films dealing with proper and improper food handling would be shown in each Fort Benning dining hall. He also said that only personnel who are working there, the informality is expected to bring about successful instruction, Major Rilovich explained.
Pvt. Gerald F. Cotrell, clerk at the post food service office, has been named by officials to be projectionist for the series.
WASHINGTON (APFS)—The U. S. is developing defenses which would successfully meet an aggressive attack and assure ultimate victory, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said in a recent address here.
The country has a mobilization potential which will insure victory, the general declared. Our potential collective security, based on association with friendly nations, should be developed fully, he added.
"The nation should think 'sensibly, calmly and clearly' about national security, General Bradley said.
"He advocated a long-range defense plan which does not contain a template 'matching the Soviet Union plane for plane, ship for ship, division for division." To attempt this would lower our standard of living, the General commented. He said our immediate objective should be "to achieve the necessary force to prevent a disastrous attack from crippling the nation."

Present forces are not strong enough to fight a major war at the moment, General Bradley declared but the U. S. can count on good allies if we continue our mutual assistance programs.
The nation's basic military structure is composed of two main elements, General Bradley explained: forces in being, and the mobilization base.
It is apparent to any aggressor, he said, that the United States "will not make war of its own volition." Therefore, the forces in being must be maintained at a strength to prevent disaster and strike a retaliatory blow strong enough to slow down the aggressor while we mobilize.
The navy's submarine and anti-submarine program "must go along as fast as our research and development facilities will permit," the chairman emphasized. "We must not stint on any well-conceived and coordinated plan for solving the submarine menace."

Will Accidents Here Increase?

Fort Benning's Safety Director reported this week that the number of cars operated by industry Center personnel will increase considerably this year. This means the number of accidents will increase proportionately unless we eliminate the pitfalls that prove traps for the habitually discourteous driver and pedestrian.

Probably the most common discourtesy practiced by the driver is speeding. According to traffic authorities, 25 percent of the drivers involved in fatal accidents last year were reported as having exceeded the speed limit or were driving too fast for existing conditions. We doubt there are many drivers who haven't at some time exceeded the speed limit. But what most drivers forget is that it takes 37 feet to stop at 20 miles per hour, 70 feet at 30 miles per hour and 228 feet at 60 miles per hour.

Disregarding the right of way caused 15 deaths for every 100 drivers involved last year, authorities say. Despite the obvious danger in disregarding right of way, many drivers every day blantly take advantage of the courteous driver. They believe he will stop for them. Some times, however, the man who has the right of way can not stop in time. Remember it takes 37 feet to stop even at 20 miles per hour.

Three overtaking or passing violations per 100 drivers involved in fatal accidents were reported last year. Fort Benning has more than its share of this kind of driver. Anyone traveling on the old Lumpkin Road between the Main Post and the Super Highway can see dozens of such violations daily. Very few drivers observe the speed limit on Lumpkin Road. Those who do sometimes find themselves victims of the discourteous driver. In overtaking and attempting to pass in traffic, the discourteous driver is often forced to squeeze inappropriately to the line of traffic. Such tactics endanger the courteous driver who observes the speed limit and keeps in the line of traffic. But he is some times forced off the road by the discourteous driver who is always in a hurry.

Discourteous drivers entering the Super Highway from the old Lumpkin Road are prone to be too impatient. When a driver, waiting for the traffic on the Super Highway to subside, pauses longer than ten seconds, the discourteous driver swings his car alongside the waiting vehicle. This discourteous act obstructs the view of the courteous driver and can result in a fatal accident. The courteous driver is sometimes blinded by the discourteous driver and can't stop in time. Remember, it takes 37 feet to stop at 20 miles per hour.

Traffic signals are not installed for beauty. They are installed for the protection of both the driver and the pedestrian. Disregard of traffic signals is practiced more often by pedestrians than by drivers, but authorities report that last year six percent of the drivers involved in fatal accidents disregarded a traffic signal, traffic officer or warning signal. The most flagrant violation of traffic signals in these parts can be found in downtown Columbus, where pedestrians pay absolutely no attention to a red light. The courteous driver must then stop to allow the discourteous pedestrian to walk against a red light. Better that than causing the death or serious injury of a pedestrian. It still takes 37 feet to stop at 20 miles per hour.

One-sixth of all drivers involved in fatal accidents last year were guilty of operating their vehicles after drinking. According to authorities, the intoxicated driver is not nearly the menace that the drinking driver has proven to be. Just one or two beers is often enough to fog one's mental processes enough to prevent his thinking clearly in a tight situation.

The driver, however, is not totally to blame for traffic accidents. The pedestrian, as statistics show, is often just as oblivious to his safety as the drinking driver. We cited one example of the discourteous pedestrian: the one who ignores the red light on a traffic signal. However, there is another type: the one who uses a roadway in an unsafe or unauthorized manner, such as walking with the traffic instead of facing it. Such discourtesy resulted in almost 6,000 deaths last year.

The Safety Office here has published ten common sense rules a courteous driver observes.

First, he gives the correct arm signals for lane changes, turns and stops, and second, he obeys speed limits.

Third, he stops completely at stop signs, and fourth, he drives in and turns from proper lanes.

Fifth, he observes passing regulations and no-passing zones, and sixth, he yields right of way to pedestrians and observes mid-block crosswalks.

Seventh, he stops when approaching standing school buses until it is safe to proceed, and eighth, he exercises special caution at railroad grade crossings.

Ninth, he refuses to drive after drinking, and finally, he drives defensively, anticipating what other drivers and pedestrians may do. He does not "argue" right of way with cars crossing or turning at intersections.

If these rules are observed, the accident rate involving military personnel, both on and off the post, will decline sharply.

Senator Promises GOP Attacks On Acheson

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—A series of Senate Republican attacks on Secretary of State Dean Acheson was promised by Senator Bridges of New Hampshire last Saturday. Bridges apparently led off the barrage with an accusation on Monday that an unidentified "master spy" is "using our State Department as his office."

Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, who got headstart on other Republican accusers in the Senate, has been several times refuted by outstanding national figures. The latest man named in the McCarthy bubble is Owen J. Lattimore who is on a United Nations mission in Afghanistan. Lattimore called the charges against himself "pure moonshine."

David E. Lilienthal, former Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, labeled charges against such people as Philip C. Jessup (ambassador to Czechoslovakia) and "McCarthy's lackey" as "a top-level shakeup in the State Department this week places Deputy Undersecretary Dean Rusk at the head of the Bureau of Far Eastern Affairs."

Defense Secretary Johnson, after a conference with President Truman, early this week countered Dwight Eisenhower's recent criticism of defense policies.

The American Federation of Labor has called for swift action to stem the tide of U. S. unemployment that has risen by two million over last year's figures.

Democratic members of the House Senate Economic Committee drew charges of Government price fixing from Republicans this week. The Democrats asked for 30-day notice before any future steel price increase.

Republican policy makers in the House have decided to press for reduction in both the foreign aid bill now under debate and the domestic spending program due for action later in the week.

President Truman previously warned the Congressional economy bloc that sharp cuts in foreign aid spending might precipitate a third world war.

The 140,000 census takers are receiving last minute cues this week before starting their canvassing of the Nation on April Fool's Day.

INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—Conflicting reports on Communist actions against the Chinese Nationalist stronghold on Formosa have been received in this country. The National Central News Agency said three waves of Red troops attempted a major landing on the island of Hainan and were annihilated. A naval communiqué said only 20 junks loaded with soldiers attempted a landing and two-thirds of them were destroyed. An air force communication reported planes were going into action to support ground forces.

King Abdullah of Hashemite Jordan brought the long-existing split in the Arab world into the open this week by boycotting the Arab League General Council. The seven-nation Arab League was formed five years ago to settle the Muslim-disputed division of the Arabian peninsula.

Marshall Tito, who prefers the personal dictatorship of Yugoslavia to the absentee tyrants of the Kremlin, this week received 95 per cent of the nation's votes for himself and his unopposed Communist candidates.

General Charles De Gaulle, wartime resistance leader of France, said this week that his country is menaced by internal social injustice.

Of the 84 Czechs who escaped by airplane to the western zone of Germany, 58 have expressed the desire to return to their homeland. Some of those who wish to return have defected from Communism in Czechoslovakia.

The 26 hands are thought to have joined crew members of their planes in forcing the flight to the American zone.

In solemn splendor, Thailand has begun the ceremonies of burying its boy king, who died of a gunshot wound four years ago, and installing its new king, Phumiphon Aduldet.

Faith in Christ Leads to Richer, Fuller Life

BY CHAPLAIN HARVEY M. HARDIN

Easter is the climax of Christian faith, Jesus said, "Because I live ye shall live also." He was talking to his disciples who knew and loved him. Those who have faith in Christ believe the same truth is meant for them too.

Jesus lived in Palestine nearly two thousand years ago. His followers believe he lived a life of suffering and death, but that God the Father is like and what their lives could become with the help of God. Jesus wrote no books, but his life was such an inspiration that they wrote the New Testament about his life and teachings. A new church grew up in fellowship around him.

Death at that time on a cross was a thing of shame for the worst criminals. Yet this did not stop the growth of the Christian movement. In fact, Christians glorify the cross, feeling and thinking something happened there that shames them of their sins and gives them the desire and power to live a victorious Christian life in a world that is indifferent and hostile to their faith in the Saviour.

Because Jesus made himself known to his followers after his death, great changes took place in their lives. Men who were timid cowards became men of courage. Self-seeking, selfish men became servants of mankind. Proud men became humble. They said that in their lives was made by the living Christ. This same miracle has been a continuous experience in all generations, and in different parts of the world since then.

Christian faith says that with Christ's help anyone can live a life rich in love, service and growth of character in this world and that death will not end it all. And he will live the same quality of life with God after death in the world to come.

I am not trying to prove this faith. I am giving the Christian testimony in regard to it. This faith is free to any and all who meet the conditions and accept them as a gift from God.

THE SECOND CONFESSION BY REX STOUT
THE VIKING PRESS, PUBLISHERS

Diving for the nearest easy chair and delving into a good detective story is one of the simple pleasures of the reading man that has been overlooked up to now in placing volumes on the Bayonet bookshelf.

To all the decided lack of thrills and chills there is no better remedy than a Nero Wolfe mystery by the prolific Rex Stout. In this latest of the Fat Man series, The Second Confession, Author Stout provides the satisfying dosage of suspense and mysterious complications. There is only one murder, but this restrained plotting is overcome with the addition of a threatening Mr. X.

In the middle of a case that started out as just another fee Nero Wolfe comes voice to voice with Mr. X who makes frightening phone calls from his position at the height of the underworld. Archie Goodwin, the detective's assistant, is always hovering nearby to relate all the pertinent facts of the case to the reader. As hard as he works poor Mr. Goodwin must join the reader in bated breathing until his boss reveals the culprit in suspect-filled final pages.

Archie starts to work in this one by posing as the house guest of a man who wants to discourage the marriage of his daughter. It is Archie's job to disqualify the suitor by proving he is a member of the Communist party. The simple assignment is finished by the end of the first chapter when Archie succeeds in getting a photograph of the suspect's membership card.

In the meantime, however, intriguing complications have begun to develop. The entire bulk of Nero Wolfe has been shaken by a machine gun attack on his glass-roofed orchid garden. This quaint bit of destruction is interpreted as the calling card of the mysterious Mr. X. A phone call from the top man of the underworld confirms the fact that he wishes Nero Wolfe to lay off the Communist character who is a pal of his trying to get a wife.

Undaunted by threats, Nero Wolfe heaves his massive frame from his favorite over-sized chair and rushes to the home angle for a while, Wolfe plots to expose the unwanted suitor as a low criminal type in the employ of Mr. X. This plan is nipped even before it can bud by the murder of the aforesaid low criminal type.

While all this fine and fancy plotting has been going on, Archie has become pleasantly involved with the client's elder daughter who is more interested in detectives than in criminals. That would be all right, too, but he also gets himself accused of killing the younger sister's boyfriend. Since Archie is known to be the resourceful type, it seems unnecessary to go into that matter further.

Also, since the real fun of reading a mystery story is in matching wits with the fictional sleuth, it seems only fair to leave the rest of an intriguing plot well within the covers of Rex Stout's book.

Library Revises Circulation Rule

Post library book circulation regulations have been revised, according to a recent Infantry Center announcement.

Borrowing of books will be limited to military personnel, their dependents and civilians residing and employed on the post who have an approved application signed by the officer in charge of the section or activity in which they work.

The time limitation on books taken out is normally two weeks, but this limit may be extended if books are brought back to the library for that purpose. Books in great demand are marked "seven-day books" and may be kept for one week only, with no renewal privileges.

A maximum of four books may be taken out at any one time, including not more than two seven-day books. Eight books are the most that can be checked out on any one card. Books may be reserved, but not more than one at a time.

When books become overdue, a notice requesting their return is sent immediately. If the book is not returned within 10 days, a letter-through channels will be sent to the commanding officer of the delinquent borrower, requesting the book's return and that appropriate action be taken to prevent a recurrence.

No fines will be levied for overdue books, but lost or damaged books must be replaced with a duplicate copy or payment of the value listed in library records. All military personnel will be cleared through the library before discharge or transfer from the post, according to regulations.

Top Student Trooper Gets Week's Title

Named by Third Army Food Service School instructors as student of the week is Cpl. Vernon J. Brown, 325th Airborne Infantry regiment, Fort Bragg, N. C., and a member of student cooks class No. 2.

Corporal Brown is in his first enlistment, and has been in the food service field for about 18 months. He said that he intends to stay in the food service career field and that he hopes to continue his training by taking as many advanced courses as possible.

School officials praised Corporal Brown's interest in his work, his excellent record and his conduct as a soldier. Corporal Brown, together with other enlisted men who successfully complete the course, will graduate May 12.

8 Detachment EM Receive Promotions

Eight privates of the Infantry School detachment were promoted to private first class March 22. It was announced this week by Lt. Col. Charles E. Woodruff, commander.

The group includes Billy C. Turner and Maryjane E. Phillips, Company A; Maurice L. Lovelle, Frederick B. Rasmussen and James A. Robinette, Company C; James R. Davis and Tony J. Hoffman, detachment headquarters, and Henry A. Lazarek, Company B.

Bonus Check Mailing Starts

Mailing of checks to Pennsylvania World War II veterans who have made applications for the state bonus got under way last week, it has been learned here.

The bonus measure, approved by the Pennsylvania legislature last year, entitles each veteran who was able to establish residence in the state to $10 for each month of domestic service and $15 for each month served overseas.

Training Unit Privates Transferred Overseas

The Student Training regiment's 12th company lost three privates last week as a result of overseas orders.

Drive to Spot TB Continues

More than 42,000 persons in the Columbus area have been examined by the tuberculosis survey units during six weeks of operation, an official of the testing unit said this week.

The number of Fort Benning personnel turning out for the examination has been "encouraging," the official said, but a larger response is expected during the final seven weeks of the local testing campaign.

After taking the test, an individual can return to the testing station for the results of his chest X-Ray. There have been only 115 cases of TB spotted during the survey.

Tomorrow, the mobile units will be located at the following places: Palace cafe, 26th avenue grocery store, Wynnton road and Cusseta road, Negro; King's Henry avenue, white; Georgian man, Calif., and Pvt. Clarence A. Power company, Second avenue and 18th street, white, and Linwood Health Center, white and Negro.

Major Starts Move to Form Riding Club for Benningites

A Riding club is in the process of formation, according to Maj. E. A. Timm, Third company instructor training regiment, who has been making a preliminary survey to determine if enough Benningites are interested in horseback riding to warrant going ahead with the project. The club would be open to all without regard to previous riding experience or status. About 25 people have already signed up, and a meeting has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m. March 31 at the Polo-Hunt Club.

All Fort Benning officers, enlisted men and civilians, as well as members of their families, are invited to attend this meeting. Major Timm said at which time plans for the formation of the club will be discussed. Preliminary steps have already been taken to secure the necessary horses and equipment.

Major Timm was the guiding force behind the formation of a similar club at Camp Crawford, Japan.

Horseback riding was formerly a major source of recreation at Fort Benning, and there are many fine riding trails available for enthusiasts, he said.

ARC Benefit Social Set By Civilian Club

The Civilian Club will entertain with a game party and dance on Friday night with all proceeds to be contributed to the Red Cross drive.

Several changes in the assignment of staff and command duties within the 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion were announced last week by Lt. Col. Harold W. Browning, commander.

Capt. Fred J. Shelton, Jr., formerly battalion adjutant, was named commanding officer of Battery C, succeeding Capt. William S. Brewer, who assumed the duties of battalion liaison officer.

Capt. John H. Evans, Jr., battalion communications officer, was named to succeed Capt. Ernest L. Hill, Jr., as Headquarters battery commander, with Captain Hill assuming duties of battalion communications officer.

First Lt. Stirling J. Price, assistant battalion adjutant, was named adjutant. First Lt. John L. Boyd, Service battery motor officer, assumed the duties of assistant executive officer of Battery A. WOJG Royal Deemer, administrators of Batteries C and A, exchanged assignments.

First Lt. Elzomac V. Creel, reconnaissance and survey officer of Battery B, assumed the same duties in Battery A. First Lt. Theodore C. Von Garichten, executive officer of Battery A, was named to succeed Lieutenant Creel as reconnaissance and survey officer of Battery B.

First Lt. John H. Maddox was appointed battalion information and education officer.

Inspectors Visit Base Activities

A delegation from the 14th Airforce inspector's office arrived at Lawson Airforce base last week to conduct the annual base inspection.

The inspection team also reviewed base activities, and made recommendations for improving operations.

Chief of the team was Lt. Col. John E. Carmack, who was assisted by Capt. H. E. Thompson, 1st Lt. James Resler, 1st Lt. Earl I. Benton, M-Sgt. P. Sellers and T-Sgt. R. Coleman.

World War III Sidetracked By U.S. Defense Efforts

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif.—for the mind and loyalties of (AFPS) — "If our armed strength and our defense effort had been less than it has been in the years since 1945, we would now be engaged in World War III," Under Secretary of War, Dan A. Kimball declared in a recent address here.

"It had not been for the strength of our defense, communism would have completely over-run the continent of Europe," the under-secretary said.

"I am also sure that our defense effort cannot be successful without a foreign economic aid program. The reverse also is true — our foreign aid program would be doomed to disaster if our defense was not a strong one."

QUESTION: DO YOU EVER USE THE FACILITIES OF THE LIBRARY? WEX?

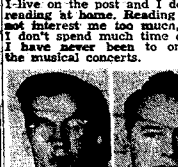

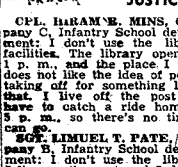

SGT. WALTER J. HULL, 878th Ordnance Heavy Automotive Maintenance company; I use the library facilities in Sand Hill. I think the library is very well stocked with books. In fact, I have never asked for a book the library didn't have, but I do wish they would get more books or manuals on MOSs and rank.

PVT. JOHN KEHOE, Company A, 80th Infantry regiment; I use the facilities of the library, and I think it is well stocked. I think it has about the most even selection of books as any I have ever seen.

SGT. 1ST CL. PAUL J. FRASER, Company A, Infantry School detachment; I use the library and think it is exceptionally well stocked. Personally, I don't read many books, but I do think it is one of the best post libraries I have ever seen. I was at the library one time when one of the musical concerts was going on, and I think the music was a little too loud for those that wanted to read. But most people like music, so I guess it's all right.

PFC. HARLAN H. JUSTICE, Company A, Infantry School detachment; I have never used the library facilities. There is no particular reason, I just haven't had any interest in the library. I have attended some of the concerts at the Main library, and I like those fine.

SGT. LEMUEL T. PATE, Company B Infantry school detachment; I don't use the library. I live on the post and I do my reading in the mess. Reading does not interest me too much, and I don't spend much time on it. I have never been to one of the musical concerts.

Seeks New Use For Wind-Maker

Some things just naturally cause peoples' heads to turn, but here's one that's caused some thought in the minds of top Quartermaster officers at Camp Lee, Va.

While making a survey at the Infantry Center several weeks ago, Maj. Robert L. Prahl, an inspector from the Quartermaster board at Camp Lee, happened to get into the airborne training area. One thing he saw was one of the Airborne department's giant wind machines used in the basic airborne course.

This week, Maj. John A. Rillo, Infantry Center food service supervisor, received a letter from Major Prahl inquiring about the machine. The recent visitor wants to know if it's for production to start about July 1.

Committee Honors Proficient Trainees

Service men and women who attain outstanding proficiency in their basic military training will soon receive an elaborate new medal, Department of Defense officials announced this week in Washington.

Defense officials said that an offer from the Citizens committee for the Army and Navy, led from Major Prahl inquiring about the machine. The recent visitor wants to know if it's for production to start about July 1.

Officer to Study New Equipment

A Fort Benning airborne officer will leave next week for an Ohio airbase where he will undertake a week's study of new airborne equipment. Infantry School officials announced this week that Capt. William J. Hejnacki, chief of the Airborne department's Rigger Training group, will leave Monday for Wright-Patterson airbase, Dayton, Ohio, to study new equipment recently designed and tested for airborne use. An official of the Airborne department explained that most newly-designed airborne equipment reaches division level before reaching a schooling level and for that reason, Captain Hejnacki will make the study for the purpose of implementing future classes in certain equipment.

Proficiency Test Requisites Listed

A recent food service personnel survey indicates that some food service personnel are not eligible for proficiency examinations due to low AGCT scores. Third army officials reported this week. They said that a team from the quartermaster general's office found that in the last food service career field exam many men took the exam who were not ordinarily qualified. Food service personnel taking a career field promotional exam must possess the following qualifications:

1. Be in a promotable status.
2. Have sufficient time in grade and - or time in service.
3. Hold an efficiency score of 81 or higher.
4. Hold an appropriate military occupational specialty number and grade to support examination application.
5. Completion of all mandatory prescribed training for MOS and grade for which application is filed.

STR Enlisted Men Earn Promotions

The promotion of eight enlisted men of the Student Training Regiment was announced last week by Col. Sevier R. Tupper, commander. Promoted to corporal were former Ptes. James A. Reeves and Betsy L. Ford of Service company and Herbert H. O'Brien, Jr. and Robert E. Branum of Company D, Airborne battalion.

Navy Set to See Swarmer Action

Navy forces were added to this week the growing rolls of army and airforce units now forming for the giant airborne maneuver, Exercise Swarmer. Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad, maneuver commander, said this week that the navy will put into action more than 90 of the latest type fighters and 15 various size transport planes for the combined army-airforce-navy operation to be held in North Carolina in April and May. The navy's transport planes will be part of the 200-transport group from the 32,000 fighting men and 22,000 tons of equipment into battle. The combined maneuver, which will bring about 60,000 fully-armed fighting troops into play, is aimed at experimenting with tactics of the Berlin airlift. Military scientists have since contended that the airlift operation, which broke all existing records for transportability, will be applicable in large-scale airborne assault operations in future battles. Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner, commander of the famous Berlin airlift and currently deputy commander of Military Transport Service, has been selected as deputy for Swarmer air operations. It is reported that the backbone of the entire operation will be based on the operations planned by General Tunner. Latest releases about Exercise Swarmer's purpose have said that a hypothetical island will exist during the battle, on which every fighting man and his equipment must be dropped from the air. Troops must be adequately sustained with supplies also dropped by airborne transport planes. Some officials have said that the mission can be completed within 11 days. The exercise, which closely parallels the recent Operation Portrex in some aspects, is said to include about 600 airforce planes of ten types. Four hundred of that number are reported to be the airforce's most highly developed jets, capable of near-supersonic speeds yet able to sustain ground support missions successfully. Next week, a large increment of 15th Infantry regiment troops will leave for Fort Bragg, N. C., where they will rehearse several weeks for the airborne maneuver. The Fort Benning troops, which will total more than 2,500, will participate as the Aggressor. Under present operational plans, Fort Benning's 15th Infantry regiment, accompanied by units from other installations, will defend the "island" in North Carolina. With all the realism of actual combat, reports say, paratroopers from the 82nd Airborne division will assault the entrenched Aggressors and storm the "island" stronghold. The maneuver is said to be the first experiment with the army's newest airborne tactics and should prove to be pioneer operation in all-out, complete airborne operations.

Arms Abundance U.S. Stronghold, Secretary Says

CHICAGO —(APFS)— The United States may not be able to match the war potential manpower of other nations, but must make up this differential through superiority in weapons and by proper strategic and tactical use of the manpower that is available. This is the opinion expressed by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson in a recent address here. He asserted that those charged with national defense are "proceeding relentlessly to exploit the rich pools of scientific knowledge already at our disposal and tapping new sources in determination to keep abreast of all developments." Secretary Johnson told his audience that President Truman's decision to make the hydrogen bomb is "the most dramatic example" of the use of scientific knowledge for defense purposes. In his speech, he told his listeners that "we must do everything in our power to avert war but added that "if it comes, we will not cower from it." "We hope to make ourselves so strong that no prudent enemy would dare attack us," he stated. "We are equally determined to become so well prepared that if he does attack we will unleash against him the full might of our most effective scientific weapons in retribution."

Arctic Troops Go Hollywood

By ARMY FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Alaskan soldiers, veterans of the recent Arctic exercise "Sweetbriar," are now adding a new and glamorous role to already varied accomplishments. Only a few weeks ago they engaged in the final assault phases of the rugged mock war training maneuvers in the Yukon and Alaska. Now they are "actors" in the movies—and they get a "kick" out of it. Since "Sweetbriar" focused attention of armed forces army field forces decided to take advantage of it for future troop training. A film, "Combat in Deep Snow and Extreme Cold," now in production, is the answer. The motion picture will be utilized throughout the army as a training aid.

Post's Civil Service Jobs Encompass Many Skills

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is the last of two articles, prepared and written by F. B. Richardson, Bayonet staff writer, explaining the origin of the U. S. Civil Service commission and the role it plays in the operation and maintenance of Fort Benning.

BY F. B. RICHARDSON
Bayonet Staff Writer

Now let's take a look at some of the activities in which civilian employees are engaged—a close up of their work and the way in which they contribute to the overall picture of life at Fort Benning.

The combat vehicle shop in the Sand hill area, which is responsible for the maintenance and repair of all combat vehicles on the post, is chiefly a civilian-operated enterprise. Ever Blaine and 22 civilian technicians handle the major overhaul and repair work on nearly 400 combat vehicles, doing third and fourth echelon work that the using arm cannot perform.

The term "combat vehicle" is pretty broad, and it might be of interest to list a few of the many types of equipment that fall under that heading. Tanks head the list, including the M48 Patton, a substantial percentage of the total. Huge motor carriers for 155 mm howitzers, tank recovery vehicles, semi-trailers, multiple gun carriers and a number of smaller vehicles, including the M31 scout car, complete the array.

To service big and complex vehicles of these types demands a world of experience, and these civilians have it. Mr. Blair, shop foreman of the Sand hill, has 20 years of federal service, and has been at Fort Benning since 1932. He is responsible for the supervision of the 22 civilian mechanics and the operation of shop.

which contributes even more extensively to all phases of Fort Benning life is the main telephone exchange. Under the jurisdiction of the Infantry Center office, the activities of the 12 telephone girls in the exchange are supervised by Mrs. Odelle Adams, chief operator. Mrs. Adams started as an operator at Sand hill in October, 1941, shortly before the outbreak of the war, and has been engaged in her work here since that time. In fact, there must be something about Fort Benning that intrigues these pleasant-voiced girls, because all of them seem to be extremely glad to be working here.

Seven of the 13 operators—including Mrs. Adams—have been at Fort Benning for over nine years, all seeing the frenzy of wartime telephone communication from the civilian center. Most of the newcomers are not really newcomers; the average length of service of all operators on the post is between five and six years.

Mrs. Josie Mae Tilton exemplifies the typical Fort Benning telephone girl. She was born and raised in Columbus, and is still enthusiastic about her occupation, in spite of having a home and a husband to take care of on the side. That's certainly a tribute to the working conditions, and to the post sign-off office as well.

The operators work staggered shifts, arranged so that maximum coverage is given during the peak hours. From 6:30 the morning, when the first shift starts, until 3 in the afternoon when the last shift goes to work, a total of six overlapping reliefs go on. After 11 p. m. G. I. operators take over the boards, working until 7 the following morning.

The next time you place a call through the exchange one of the civilian employees here on the post will be contributing to the work you are doing or the recreation you are engaged in, aiding in many of the 130 military plans do, the efforts of the 24,000 soldiers and airmen at Fort Benning.

The quartermaster laundry, under the supervision of Dewey J. Reddish, is one of the largest civilian undertakings on the post. A total of 162 civilians are currently employed at the laundry and dry cleaning plant, a figure which will be increased to over 200 during the summer months when the Wash flood descends on the laundry.

The laundry is in a factual sense, a million dollar enterprise, with equipment valued at over $860,000. One of the largest quartermaster laundries in the country, it is almost entirely mechanized, with 111 marking machines for clothing, a variety of washing machines, extractors (a center for getting most of the water out of clothes), dry tumblers, shirt presses, general press, flatwork irons, folding machines and bundle tying machines.

Most of the civilian employees are veterans of several years' service, with the key supervisors having even longer tenures. Reddish, although a comparatively recent addition to Fort Benning's civilian staff, is coming here last year from Oliver General hospital, Ga., is a veteran of 20 years federal service.

A gigantic affair, covering a floor space large enough to hold a football game on, with seats left over for a couple of volleyball games, the laundry's capacity is even more amazing. Six thousand pounds—what's in a thousand pounds—of clothes can be handled every hour during peak operation. Last summer, for example, the laundry handled about a million pieces of clothing and flat work.

The specific hours from 6:30 to 10 when the last shift goes to work, a total of six overlapping reliefs go on. After 11 p. m. G. I. operators take over the boards, working until 7 the following morning.

Mrs. Adams says that the G. I. switchboard jocks who work get along fine. And why not? A guy would have to be a grade-A jock to get up with working with 13 charming specimens of the female sex.

Although much of the work would be considered routine by an outsider, the operators don't seem to think so. Even if it is, there are plenty of amusing incidents to spice up the daily chores. Some of the questions people ask the switchboard girls sound as though the questioner is a fugitive from the nearest laughing academy. Other questions are asked in the apparent belief that the operators are female.

All of the civilian employees are specialists in heavy equipment repair, and they have to be. The new Continental tank engines, for example, are 12 cylinder, type air-cooled giants, developing 850 horsepower. No job for a "D" model Ford mechanic to foot with, for sure.

The work load of the combat vehicle shop averages about 20 vehicles in for repair at any one time. Generally speaking about 15 of those vehicles are tanks, two or three are tractors, and one or two are heavy trucks—all in for major overhaul and repair. It takes from five to eight days to complete the major overhaul work on a tank. Oddly enough, accidents are seldom the cause of breakdown or need for major repair. Most of the work is necessary through ordinary wear and tear due to operation.

Ordnance equipment on these combat vehicles is the worry of Thomas C. Joiner. He is another real old timer in federal service, having over 31 years to his credit. He is in command here at Fort Benning.

All weapons are given a major service check including cleaning, disassembly every six months, unless repairs are necessary sooner. Guns and machine guns are kept in the shop, showing the number of rounds fired so that they can be checked and cleaned. Although the gun tubes are checked for wear with microscopes, the number of rounds fired will usually indicate the degree of wear to be found. The average 90 mm gun will fire approximately 1,600 rounds before the tube becomes so worn that replacement is necessary. The 75 mm gun has a normal life of about 6,000 rounds and the 105 mm 20,000.

In addition to the heavier work involved in engines, transmissions, torque drives and ordnance equipment, the civilian vehicle shop handles all the electrical system repairs, having a complete shop set up despite the fact that the equipment is a man-sized job, and in which the civilians play a major role in the accomplishment of the military mission of post combat units.

University Centers Set for FECOM

Military and civilian personnel in the Far East command will be able to take university courses just as though they were enrolled in a state college.

Arrangements have been completed by army-airforce information and education officials for the establishment of 15 University of California centers in the FECOM. These centers will be located in Okinawa, Guam, the Philippines and throughout Japan, with the courses offered being the same as resident instruction on the University of California campus.

The program, similar to that operated in the European command, will provide an opportunity for obtaining university credits which may be applied toward a degree.

ODDS AND ENDS

by STEVE BOLAND

A big and all important question that is continually a subject of discussion by sports-minded army personnel is the subject of who is eligible to participate in the various events and on what levels.

The army has established policies relative to the proportion of officer and enlisted personnel on sports teams which represent units within their respective commands.

Some of these policies are:

"All officers and enlisted personnel on active duty with the army for periods of more than 90 days are eligible to participate in the all-army sports program. Personnel ordered to duty for 90 days or less are ineligible.

"In basketball, football, ice-hockey, soccer, softball and volleyball 50 per cent of the participants are required to be enlisted personnel, while in all other sports representative teams may consist of officer and enlisted personnel in any proportion." This is in reference to sports contests scheduled by the Department of the Army only.

"The proportion of officer and enlisted personnel on teams participating in athletic contests between two or more major commands or between major commands and teams of other services or civilian institutions, will be determined by mutual agreement between the commander of the major command and the commanding officer or representative of the service or institution concerned. This authority may be delegated to subordinate commanders.

"To assure equal competitive opportunities to members of all military services wherever stationed, the following general principles are provided for the information and guidance of major commanders in determining whether individuals, units or organizations of another service shall be permitted to participate in the army sports program:

"Individuals, units or organizations of another service whose parent service can provide appropriate sports competition will not be permitted to participate in the army sports program of installations at which they are stationed.

"When, in the opinion of the commander of a major command, suitable opportunities for individuals, units and organizations of another service are not made available by the parent service, he may authorize their participation in team and individual sports competition at installation and major command levels, but not in all-army or interservice events."

In cases where personnel of another service qualify as members of an army team for competition in events in which the regimental size organization is the level of competition (not exceeding 3,000 men), the number of such personnel shall not exceed 25 per cent of the total squad strength authorized for all-army competition. Such composite teams are eligible for all-army competition.

"If a major command championship event is won by an individual or team of another service, it shall be the responsibility of the commander of the major command concerned to determine which army entry shall replace the winner in subsequent all-army competition.

The following army policies will be noted as having a bearing on the forthcoming exhibition game to be played at Gowdy field between the Cleveland Buckeyes and the Birmingham Black Barons.

"At the discretion of the commanding officer, nominal admission charges may be made to military and civilian personnel attending sports events at army installations.

"The fact that nominal admission charges are collected by the sponsoring organization or operating agency to defray expenses incurred in conducting an event will not prohibit participation of army personnel.

Buckeyes, Black Barons Set For Tonight's Contest Here

Both Squads Members Of Famous Negro Loop

The Cleveland Buckeyes of the Negro American League, owned by Wilbur Hayes and managed by Alonzo Boone, arrived at Fort Benning last Monday, March 27, for a brief training period before heading for their Cleveland stomping grounds.

Before leaving, however, the Buckeyes will face the Birmingham Black Barons, also of the Negro American League, in an exhibition game scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 30, at Gowdy field.

Admission prices will be 50 cents for all persons over 12 and 25 cents for children from 6 to 12, with children under 6 admitted free. All proceeds will be used to support the Infantry Center's athletic and recreation program.

The Buckeyes who play all their home games at Cleveland stadium, home of the Cleveland Indians, have drawn some promising youngsters from the Indian farm schools as a result of the interest shown in the Buckeyes by the Indians.

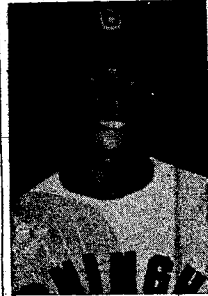

Probable starting lineup for the Buckeyes in tonight's game will find Curtis Livingston, a speedy fly chaser from the Indian farm school, patrolling center field; Charles Myratt, a switch hitter who batted in the cleanup spot for last year's team, in right field; Rudy Johnson, a native of Cleveland, just out of Ohio State university and showing plenty of power at the plate, in left field; Manager Boone's infield will include First Baseman Les Suttles, a newcomer to the Buckeyes from Birmingham, Ala.; Wes Calhoun, a fast runner, good bunter and fine fielder, in the keystone position; Henry Presswood, clever and speedy, at shortstop; and Woodrow Means, another product of the Indian farm school, with a strong throwing arm, in the hot corner.

Leading the receiving duties for the team will be strong-armed Kenner Carter, who has caught the eyes of several major league scouts, in catcher's uniform; a top notch catcher with hitting power from Albany, Ga.

The Cleveland mound staff, led by Manager Boone who throws a blazing fast ball from the right side, will consist of southpaws Ray Finch and Bob Cunningham and right-handers Paul Jones, Willie Scruggs, Sam Barber, and Joseph Flanagan.

Wilbur Hayes, who has been the team's general manager for several years, now owns the diamond nine, having been voted the franchise at a league meeting in February. He can claim a youthful squad, with 22 players under the age of 23 and only four veterans.

Coaches Plan USMA Parley

WEST POINT (AFPS) — The United States Military academy will be the scene for the second year of an All-Army Coaches conference and refresher course for sports officers. May 15-19. The purpose of the conference, sponsored by the Special Services division, is to provide appropriate training for selected military and civilian personnel responsible for the conduct of recreational sports at regimental and post level.

The trainees will consist of about 225 men, including civilians and special services enlisted and officer personnel who serve as instructors in football, basketball, boxing and baseball.

The following West Point head coaches will conduct the various sections of the program: Earl Black, football; Herb Kroten, boxing; Johnny Mauer, basketball; and Paul Amen, baseball.

Mateny to Coach Lawson Ball Club

Hank Mateny was named coach of the Lawson baseball team last week. He will be assisted by Mack Cox, last year's manager.

Mateny is assistant aircraft maintenance officer and played with the Fliers last year. With eight men from last year's squad and 26 new men, the Lawson Fliers are rounding out their spring training program.

The first exhibition game will be played today on the Lawson diamond, when the Fliers meet the Holy Trinity-Ala. nine.

TO TEACH GOLF. Eugene E. Yow, 1948 Fort Benning enlisted golf champion, who will begin golf instruction classes next Saturday morning for all Lawson Airforce base personnel. These classes will be classified as required physical training time.

STR to Play Redbird Nine

The Student Training regiment's Airborne battalion baseball team has been delegated the task of avenging the 20-0 defeat handed the Fort Benning team in last year's exhibition with the Columbus Cardinals. This year's game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Friday night, April 7, at Gowdy field.

The Troopers, defending post champions, at this stage seem to be in shape and ready for a game this type. James Walker, trooper coach, also feels that he has a well-balanced team that should give the Cardinals a good game.

Up-to this year the team facing the Cardinals was made up of holdovers from the Doughboy squad of the previous year, but Coach Walker says that he can field a team without any outside help.

Everyone who has witnessed the performance of members of the airborne squad will agree that Walker has a strong mound staff in Ike Silcox, Bob Cronin and Jim Shirley who should be able to handle three innings each against the Columbus team. In reserve, Walker also has E. D. Strickland, along with a newcomer and likely looking southpaw, Trevor Swain.

Tom Gallagher, one of the most outstanding receivers on the post in recent years will be backed up by Red Cochran who has shared the catching duties for the airborne squad the past few seasons.

The Trooper infield can be considered one of the finest in the Fort Benning league and with the addition of Paul Bonair at shortstop is much stronger than it was last season.

Herb Myratt, not too strong with the stick, makes up for this weakness with his fielding and hustle. Myratt has held the first base position for the Troopers for the past two seasons.

Bob Kinard, who has held down the keystone sack for both the airborne and Doughboy teams for the past several years, is well-known for his steady play at second base and along with Bonair, should form one of the finest double play combinations in Fort Benning league this season.

Ralph Terry will again cover the lead base for the Troopers and should be continue his hitting year's crushing defeat will see a host of new faces in the Columbus lineup, headed by Hal Anderson, the new Cardinal manager.

Another face, new in the Cardinal lineup but not new to Fort Benning fans who saw last year's army-wide baseball tournament, is that of Alex Patterson, the big righthander who hurtled the Fort Bliss, Tex. team to a 2-1 victory over the Doughboys.

The Trooper team has tentatively scheduled several practice games and hope to have a few of these games under their belt prior to next Friday night's fray.

Links Delegates Discuss Tourney

A group of army and defense officials, arrived from Washington, D. C., last week to make preliminary plans for the forthcoming interservice golf tournament to be played at the Fort Benning Country club this year.

Col. Daniel P. Buckland, chairman of the Golf committee at Fort Benning, welcomed the group and after a short discussion of plans for the tourney, showed the visitors some of the main features of the golf course.

Members of the group attending the conference included A. E. Casgrain, information officer for Special Services, Department of the Army; Col. Willie G. Cronk, special services officer of Third Army; Lt. Col. Wendell Croon, air force representative; Lt. Col. W. today by Louis Rassey, also of the Motor City, Department of the Army; Maj. Oscar W. Burford, special services officer, Department of the Army; and Capt. Clifton Wright, athletic and recreation officer, Third Army.

15th Infantry's Dragons Prepare For Post Meet

Levine to Manage Base Tennis Team

The 15th Infantry regiment's track and field squad, under the guidance of Louis Godino, is currently holding intensive daily tryouts in an effort to field a top team in the forthcoming track and field event.

Coach Godino issued the first call to all Dragon speed demons and fence jumpers last week and was rewarded with an answer from 52 hopeful candidates. Godino is a member of Headquarters and Headquarters company of the 15th and was manager of the Doughboy basketball and football teams during the past season.

A former track star who specialized in 100- and 220-yard dashes, Godino graduated from the Western Michigan State Teachers college football team to a win over a team which won the state in 1935. He is also an ardent bowler, golfer, tennis, fishing and hunting enthusiast.

Since the first call went out, the 15th Infantry team has been screened and cut to a 36-man squad. It will have to be cut again in order to achieve the necessary 28 men before the unit goes on Swarmer, officials said.

The squad to be left behind will be headed by first lieutenant Chuck Hall and strong man Gene Thomas, veteran Doughboy and third army standouts.

Hall, who specializes in the 100- and 220-yard dashes, copped top honors in last year's Infantry Center meet and went on to take the 100-yard event as a member of the Doughboy squad in the third army track meet.

Thomas' specialties include the discus throw, shot put and javelin throw. He was also the highest point-getter in the recent meet held by the third battalion, picking up 40 points on his points. He took first place in the 440-yard run, the javelin throw and the broad jump; second place in the 120-yard high hurdle run, eight for the one mile run, one man (M. Rivers of Company 1) for the two-mile run, none for the high hurdles, three for the 220 yard hurdles, seven for the broad jump, four for the high jump, one for the pole vault, one for the discus throw, three for the shot put, two for the javelin throw and two for the one mile relay.

Most of these men are trying for several different events, but Coach Godino, who is assisted by Bill Meckley and Joe Andracka, will endeavor to place each man where he can do the most good in rounding out a well balanced team.

The team will be able to play its practice games at night since the courts are lighted. Levine said the team will be ready for match play in about two weeks.

328th Ordnance Battalion Takes 3440th Track Meet

Perkins, Beard Top Point-Getters In Classic; 15th QM Group Second

The squad from the 328th Ordnance battalion, paced by Tom Beard, garnered 48 points to cop the 3440th Area Service Unit Provisional group's track and field meet held at Doughboy stadium last Friday afternoon.

The 328th Ordnance battalion's team was comprised of personnel from the 378th, 71st, 516th and Sixth Ordnance companies. The 15th Quartermaster battalion's 38 points for the runner-up spot were picked up by the 130th Quartermaster Baking company. The 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion took third place with 28 points, followed by Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, with 14 points and Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section II, with five points.

The top point-getter in the meet was Simon Perkins of the 396th Truck company who picked up 15 points. He took first place in the 120-yard high hurdles, the 440-yard run and the 220-yard dash.

Tom Beard of the 71st Ordnance company took second place with 13 points by virtue of his first place win in the javelin and discus throws and a second spot in the shot put. Bill Johnson of the Section I team was third with first place in the one-mile and 880-yard run for a total of 10 points.

A total of 75 participants competed, and trophies were presented to the team winner and individual winners in each event. Col. Maurice L. Miller, group commander, made the presentations.

Although a team coach has not been named as yet, the key man in each event will be selected to represent the Provisional Infantry Center meet.

Winners of each of the 18 events and their time, distance and heights are:

204 to 10-Against Two-Minute Rule

Firmly convinced that basketball's much-maligned two-minute rule must be discarded, the nation's college coaches set out today to tackle the problem of "where do we go from here?"

That the present "game-end foul rule" was headed for the scrap-heap was certain. Coach Paul Hinkle of Butler, chairman of the National Coaches Association's rules committee, disclosed yesterday that coaches have voted in answer to a questionnaire, 204 to 10, that it is unsatisfactory.

The big task now confronting the coaches as they wound up their annual three-day meeting was to find an adequate substitute rule for curbing excessive fouls in the late minutes of games.

Season's Schedule Released By ASU

Col. Maurice L. Miller, commanding officer of the 3440th Area Service Unit Provisional group, will toss out the first ball to open officially the league's 1950 baseball season. Scene of the opening game will be the ASU baseball diamond in the third quartel, where all scheduled league games will be played.

Scheduled to start at 2:30 p.m., the opening game will see the 328th Ordnance battalion team, coached by Wally Hunter, facing the 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion squad, coached by Don Payne.

The opening game will be played on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays until a 11 teams face each other four times. Game time is set for 2:30 p.m.

The opening game will be the start of a season's play of 40 seven-inning games which will be divided into two halves, with the team winning the greatest number of games in each half declared the champion for that half. In case of a tie at the conclusion of a half, a one-game playoff will decide the winner. The winning team in each half will then compete in a three-game series to decide the group champion. In the event of a same club wins both halves, no playoff will be necessary.

Umpires will be selected from among the men currently attending special services' umpire school and will be available on call by the ASU athletic and recreation office.

Here is schedule for the first half to be concluded by May 17, Section II, squad, with Al Chapman's defending champions, the ondt:

Draft Act Faces Normal Demise

Informed congressional sources in Washington said this week that the Selective Service Act of 1948 would be allowed to die on June 24, its expiration date, to make way for a new-type draft proposal.

The house armed services committee, a report said, will shortly concentrate on a bill that would continue draft registration of all young men reaching their 18th birthday, but would not include actual conscription.

Proposed by Rep. Carl Vinson, (D-Ga.) chairman of the committee, the bill is intended to register and classify all eligible men and keep their names on the draft rolls until they reach their 32nd birthday. The system would provide a ready list of available men in time of an emergency.

Under the present act, more than 30,000 men were inducted in 1949 to serve 21 months. Due to military appropriation cuts, however, their length of service was shaved to one year.

Choice Offered Medical Grads

WASHINGTON (AP)— A new code of standards for participation in intern and residency training programs for physicians of the armed forces has been established by the Defense department.

Dr. Richard L. Melling, department of Defense director of medical services, advises that the new standards do not apply to medical officers already receiving intern or residency training under the military programs, or to those whose applications for commissions under this program were accepted prior to March 10, when the directive specifying the uniform standards was issued.

Under the new standards, medical school graduates may apply to the military service of their choice for internship training under the military program. If accepted, they are tendered commissions in the Medical Corps Reserve of the service selected and placed on extended active duty, associating full-time assignments while taking the internship. Training may be taken either in civilian or military hospitals, subject to the availability of appointments and overall service programming.

1951 War Games To Employ 110,000

War games planned for fiscal year 1951 will employ 110,000 troops under the command of the chief of Army Field Forces, a report from Washington disclosed this week.

National guard and Organized Reserve Corps units will join army regulars for airborne-infantry-artillery-armor team exercises prior to combining their might with the navy and air force for a sequel to this year's Operation Portex and Exercise Swarves. Other operations scheduled for fiscal 1951 include specialized exercises in Arctic warfare; either at Pine Camp, N. Y., or in Alaska; amphibious operations on the west coast and jungle exercises in the Canal Zone.

The annual indoctrination-type exercises are scheduled to continue at Big Delta, Alaska; Corcoran, Calif., and Little Creek, Va., with the logistics CTR moving to Fort Monmouth, N. J., and the air indoctrination probably at Fort Meigs, N. C., officials said.

Third Returns From Portrex

The last of more than 8,000 Third Infantry division troops arrived at the Infantry Center this week from the three-month peace-time war game, Operation Portrex.

Last weekend, the first increment of 3,000 returnees arrived at the post. Hundreds of wives and children of the returning troops kept a vigil by the Fort Benning rails between 6:30 and 11:30 a. m. Saturday. Another increment of 3,000 men arrived Monday, and an equally large group arrived the following morning.

The effects of the rigorous training were evident in the mil-

'Dog Tag' Devised To Flash Warning Against Radiation

The newly dog tag assumed a newer and more important duty this week.

Rear Adm. Claude A. Swanson, the navy's surgeon general, revealed that an identification tag has been developed that will warn its wearer when he has been exposed to atomic radiation.

The metal identification discs will reveal how much radiation an individual has absorbed, and medical men can tell at a glance who can be saved and who has been fatally exposed.

Admiral Swanson, who made the announcement at Estelle Creek, Mich., famous medical center, said the dog tags change color when exposed to atomic radiation. They were developed at the navy's research laboratory at Bethesda, Md.

Unit Ready for Swarmer After 'Home-Grown' Drill

There are maneuvers and maneuvers, according to the 41st Field Artillery battalion and its attached units.

Now scheduled for Exercise Swarmer, the army-airforce maneuver to be held at Fort Bragg, N. C., in April, the 41st has just completed a home-grown exercise dubbed Operation Sandrex.

Left out of the spectacular army-navy-airforce operation in the Caribbean, more than 1,000 Redlegs of the 41st set to work on what could have been a drab assignment. Instead of losing interest in their stay-at-home tasks, the artillerymen enthusiastically set to work on the self-improvement objectives of Operation Sandrex.

The smell of paint and the crack of hammers filled the air at Sand Hill as all the units went to work remodeling their day rooms, mess halls and barracks.

The men of the 39th Field Artillery battalion tore up ammunition boxes and salvaged scrap lumber to construct partitions dividing the barracks into two-man rooms. At Third division artillery the Sandrex troops turned the second floor of the guardhouse into a courts martial room.

An intensive training program was inaugurated for the benefit of newly-assigned men in the units and to prepare for demonstrations on problems at the Infantry School. The powerful 105's of the 41st barked their first times in 1950 during Sandrex operations. The troops spent

Militarists Push Move to Fortify Foreign Bases

A strengthening of military bases outside the continental United States was in sight this week as military leaders began to advocate the use of more than $200 million for that purpose, especially in Alaska.

All three armed services, the army, airforce and navy, have moved into high gear to begin the huge building program of overseas bases, reportedly as protection against a "sneak punch" by an aggressor.

A simple diagram of the proposed reinforcing project would show a virtual net between communist countries and countries opposed to communist doctrine. The bases to be strengthened range from Alaska to Okinawa, Hawaii, Kwajalein and Johnston island in the Pacific to Bermuda in the Atlantic, up to Labrador, over to the Azores, Libya and Saudi Arabia.

The $239,409,000 to be spent on the program is out of the total $265,000,000 the services were appropriated by congress for military public works. The remainder, it is reported, will be devoted to much-needed housing in far-flung occupational outposts.

Eight Medics Awarded Good Conduct Medal
Eight enlisted men of the 121st Evacuation hospital were awarded the Good Conduct medal last week.

Easter Service Plans Revealed

Several thousand persons are expected to attend two special Easter Sunday services to be held at the Infantry Center on April 9.

Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale, Infantry Center chaplain, said this week that a special sunrise service at 6:30 a. m. would be held in the first chapel court for Protestants. The traditional living cross will be formed by some 1,500 civilian and military guests seated at the service. The 72nd Army Band and the Infantry Center chapel choir will provide the musical backdrop for the special service.

Also announced for Easter Sunday is a Solemn High Mass for Catholics at 10 a. m. The service in which all Infantry Center Catholic chaplains will participate, will be held at Chapel No. 4.

Chaplain Hale said that if weather forbids the outdoor Protestant service, it will be held in the Main theater at the same time.

He also said civilians from the Columbus area were cordially invited to attend to the religious celebrations.

Maj. Elmer J. Ricker has been transferred to the European command from the Infantry School.

Col. Frank S. Bowen Jr., has been transferred from Camp Carson, Colo., to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., with temporary duty at the Infantry School to attend basic airborne class No. 37.

Second Lt. Ernest C. Nott, Jr., has been transferred from the Third Medical Battalion to the Far East Command, Yokohama, Japan.

First Lt. Ross L. Shoaff has been transferred from the 20th Quartermaster Subsistence Supply company to the European command.

Col. Frank S. Bowen Jr., has been transferred from Camp Carson, Colo., to the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky., with temporary duty at the Infantry School to attend basic airborne class No. 37.

First Lt. Elsworth T. Rhodes has been transferred from the 11th Anti-aircraft Artillery group, Fort Bliss, Tex., to the Third Infantry division.

Col. Maurice L. Miller has been transferred from the 3440th Area Service unit to the Ryukyus command, Okinawa.

Maj. Harold W. Rodemayr has been transferred from the 285th Airborne Infantry regiment to the Far East command.

Maj. Harold R. Spangler has been transferred from the 15th Infantry regiment to the Far East command.

Lt. Col. William R. Kitchner has been transferred from the Third Infantry division to the Far East command, Yokohama, Japan.

Leaders Quibble On War Outlook

Two of the nation's top military leaders took opposite stands last week on the imminence of a possible World War III.

In Washington, Senator Elmer Thomas (D-Okla.) quoted Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, as saying there is no danger of a "shooting war" with Russia in the near future.

On the other hand, Gen. George C. Kenney, famed wartime commander of the Far East airforce and now commandant of the Air University at Maxwell airforce base, Ala., said that the "day of a third world conflict might be much closer than we had thought." He made no further elaborations.

The Oklahoma senator who quoted Bradley said the general impression from the military leader's remark was that the United States would not become involved in war during the next two or three years. Senator Thomas said, however, that the size of the military budget is an obvious sign that "we're not taking things for granted."

Reports for TIS Duty
Set Grover C. Bolton reported for duty this week with the Infantry School's Academic department from Red River Arsenal, Texas.

He is assigned to Company B, Infantry School detachment.

REUNITED AFTER FIVE YEARS . . . Renewing a wartime acquaintance that ended in 1945 are 1st Lt. Francis L. Strack, left, and T-Sgt. Earl J. Keel. The two men now are on duty in the same office at Lawson Airforce base. Lieutenant Strack recently reported to Lawson and was assigned duties as military personnel officer. Sergeant Keel is personnel sergeant major of the base.

Want to Reenlist At Another Post? Then Apply Early

Enlisted men eligible for discharge in the near future who wish to reenlist for a post, camp or station other than the one to which they are now assigned may submit individual applications for approval 60 days prior to date of reenlistment, according to Infantry Center recruiting officials. Certain qualifications must be met, officials stated, before such applications can be considered.

Applicants must have returned from an overseas assignment within 18 months of the prospective reenlistment date. Approval of the application will also depend upon the existence of a grade and MOS vacancy in the unit or army area to which assignment is requested. It is not permissible, officials warned, to take a short discharge for this purpose. All applications should be made through channels.

Chefs Complete Benning Course

Fourteen men graduated from the Third Army Food Service School's chef's class No. 33 March 18, food service officials have announced.

Honor graduate of the 12-week course was Pfc. Edward D. McDonald, MacDill air force base, Fla. He was presented a set of knives and a butcher's steel in recognition of his outstanding school work.

In addition to McDonald, graduates of the course were Sgt. Dean W. Lewis, Sgt. Herman H. Grubbs, Cpl. Donald Hartley, Odell E. Lindsey, John C. Nelson, Donald Pope, Russell Spears and Floyd T. Woods and Pfc. Jack Allen, Gilbert C. Dye, Langston L. Latson, George M. Lee and Joseph R. Podrazik.

10 Million Get NSLI Refunds

Approximately 10 million World War II veterans have received insurance refund payments, with some six million remaining to be paid.

Officials of the Treasury department said this week that almost $1,800,000,000 had been paid out so far and that another $1 billion would be required to complete the giant refund.

Veterans Administration officials said that some 1,500,000 veterans still haven't applied for their share in the dividend bonanza.

The huge disbursing job is going faster than had been expected, VA officials said, and payment machinery should begin to slow down around May 1. They expect to complete payments in mid-May. Payments still remaining to be made will be of "special" nature.

Name Remains On Unit Roster

These facts began to unravel when 32-year-old Cpl. Grady Lang was assigned to Company A, Infantry School detachment last week:

- Slightly less than a week before, his 29-year old brother, Cpl. Louis Lang, had been with the same company for more than 16 months as a sergeant.
- Grady took over Louis' job at the weapon pool's artillery section.
- They both received their promotion to corporal the same month.

Girl As Bait

Clever Ruse Bared by GI

Fort Benning soldiers are likely targets for a new and clever racket now operating in the Columbus area, The Bayonet learned this week.

A 19-year old Infantry Center enlisted man reported that he almost fell victim to an apparent scheme of robbery and assault last weekend.

NEW RACKET AIMED AT GIs

Victim's Conception Of 'Bait.'

The soldier, whose name is being withheld, told Columbus police officials that a comely, dark-haired woman attempted to induce him into illicit relations. He said her male companion was also involved.

This is the story as told by the soldier:

Last Saturday night, shortly after 8 o'clock, he was standing on Broadway between 11th and 12th streets when the 20-to-30-year-old woman approached him. She asked if he knew where 17th street was located. He answered that he wasn't familiar with the city's streets.

He said that she then asked him to accompany her down the street in search for an address, to which he obliged. At the corner of 13th street and Broadway, the cheaply-dressed woman asked the youth if he "would like to go out in my car and have a good time." The soldier consented.

Walking to the corner of Warren street and Broadway, across from the Greyhound bus station, the soldier was told to get into her blue, 1950 Ford sedan. He opened the door and saw a man lying on the floor in the rear of the car. The youth refused to ride.

"Oh don't mind him," the strange woman reassured the soldier, "he's a friend of mine that's drunk. I'm gonna take him home."

The youth again declined to ride. Before the soldier could shut the door, the man, who he said, stands more than six feet in height, got out and invited him to ride with them "and they'd all have a good time."

The youth said the man was carrying a black-jack in his left hip pocket "and I think a pistol in his right pocket." The couple didn't physically force the soldier to join them.

After finding a policeman, the youth returned to the scene. The couple had disappeared.

Back at camp, the youth found that a friend had also been approached by the same woman.

Sgt. M. Rand, desk sergeant for the Columbus police, told The Bayonet that the plan is "a new switch on an old trick."

"Soldiers, among other persons," the sergeant said, "have always been targets for these cheap crooks. They usually work in couples, although the girl is the front. Some work with knock-out drops in bars, others entice soldiers into their hotel rooms where a companion robs and beats them. This case is the first of its type in Columbus to my knowledge."

Rand also said that persons operating in such a manner would have no qualms about committing murder.

"In fact," Rand said, "killing a robbery victim would mean less chance of being discovered."

The anonymous youth gave the following description of the girl and her male accomplice:

Heights: five feet, eight inches tall; weight; 130-140 pounds; eyes, greenish; complexion, fair, but with excess makeup; general description: dresses in extremely sloppy clothes, walks with a slight slouch, takes long, precise strides; swings a long-strapped purse from her right hand to the ground; hair is in feather-cut style; hefty and badly-proportioned figure; full, round face; uses bad grammar when speaking, and talks frequently of LaGrange, Ga.

The man was described as being six feet, two inches, in height, between 32 and 45 years of age, hair is short and rather dark, weighs about 220 pounds, physical build looks like boxer's or weight-lifter's, wears sloppy pants and shirt with sleeves rolled up, talks pleasantly in a middle-pitched voice.

Speculation as to what the couple would do if they induce a soldier into riding with them was varied among several policemen in Columbus. Sergeant Rand, however, a former military policeman and investigator for the army, said that outright robbery and murderous assault would more than likely be attempted. He said that once on an open, deserted road, the woman would consent to sexual relations with the victim. The male companion, hitherto unnoticed, would get up from the rear seat and beat the victim.

Army officials, as well as Columbus police cooperating in the hunt for such criminals, have warned against accepting rides from strangers.

"Unless you are absolutely positive you know the person, I would hesitate accepting any type of ride—even for a block or two," one Columbus detective said.

New Apartments Receive First Wave of Occupants

The first couple to move in Fort Benning's new $900,000 non-commissioned officers' housing project was M-Sgt. and Mrs. William E. McMasters, who were cleared by a quartermaster representative Wednesday morning March 22.

Christening Held At Post Chapel

The Infantry Center chapel was the scene of a simple, impressive ceremony Sunday afternoon when Virginia Kathleen Card, daughter of Maj. and Mrs. Leonard H. Card, was christened before a small assemblage of relatives and friends. Chaplain (Capt.) Harvey M. Hardin performed the baptismal ceremony. Capt. and Mrs. George Gruver stood in proxy for Lt. Col. and Mrs. Walter E. Jordan of Chicago, Ill., godparents.

Artillerymen Promoted

Pfc. Robert E. Easton and David C. Panell, Battery C, 89th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, were promoted to corporal last week.

Unit Selected For Shoe Test

Company F of the Student Training Regiment's Airborne Battalion has been designated as the testing body to determine whether airborne students can attain better physical fitness test scores in athletic shoes than in combat boots, and the tests have been reported in progress by unit officials.

Medical Personnel Complete I-E Class

Three officers and five enlisted men of the 52nd Medical Battalion recently completed a 10-day discussion leader's course sponsored by the Infantry Center's information and education center.

Holds Home-Run Record

COLUMBUS, Ohio (APPS)—Vernon (Lefty) Gomez, former Yankee piching ace, told an audience of old timers at a banquet here: "I hold the record for the longest home run in Yankee Stadium." After a pause, he added, "Yes, sir, Jimmy Fox hit it off me."

Elevated Morale of Men Participating in 'Portrex'

The American Red Cross' ever-spreading role in aiding the serviceman told another story this week in a letter from a returning Operation Portrex veteran. Capt. Roy G. Hendrickson, a special services officer in this country's largest peacetime war game, reported by letter this week that lagging morale of troops in the maneuver received a boost from Red Cross field workers. Captain Hendrickson told Murray Hill, Red Cross field director, that their Red Cross field workers, Henry C. Blose, Lewis T. Fitzworth and Eugene Guy, helped alleviate strenuous disciplinary conditions of the exercise. He said that the trio of workers set up canvas at Norfolk Va., when the troops left by boat for Vieques, target for the invasion. During the sea-lane trip, Capt. Hendrickson reported, more than 1,400 games, ranging from checkers to cribbage were distributed to the confined troops. In addition, more than 75,000 sheets of stationery were given to army troops for letter writing. The captain further reported that during the entire operation, Red Cross handled some 300 emergency cases involving invading troops, plus an additional 200 cases that required special attention. The presence of the workers, the captain said, increased the efficiency of troops enormously. Advanced to Corporal Pfc. Clifton V. Bullock, Battery A, 89th Armored Field Artillery Battalion, was recently promoted to corporal.

9th Career Field To Include MPs

Military police is going to be made a career field—the ninth in the Career Guidance Program, army officials announced in Washington.

The MP career field will be described in SR #50-125-1, now being published. Three job progression levels are scheduled for the field. They are disciplinary guard, criminal investigation and military police. There also will be a prisoner of war processing ladder covering jobs in the upper three grades intended for mobilization use only and published in a "standby" status. Army officials set July as the deadline for changes in individual records, classifications into the career field and reporting of actual and authorized strength in terms of the new career field.

Transfers Told By Service Unit

Transfers within the Area Service Unit Provisional group were announced this week by Col. Maurice L. Miller, group commander. Sgt. 1st Cl. Thomas W. Barrett, Cpl. Charles W. Mercer and Pfc. Thomas M. Sweat and Donnel C. Hughes, all of Headquarters and Headquarters company, 52nd Transportation Truck Battalion, were assigned to the 27th Transportation Car company. Sgt. Reginald D. Maxwell, formerly a member of Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, was transferred to the 36th Ordnance Battalion and placed on duty with the ASU Provisional group personnel section.

Gem. Gillem Advocates 'Personalized' Quarters

Touches of home will be applied to more to augment the pleasantness of life. Some day, I hope to see two-man rooms for the commanding general has his way.

At the 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion, General Gillem found 1st Sgt. Frank J. Huff, a 33-year army veteran who served at the Mexican border with him some 30 years ago. The 56-year-old sergeant and the general pleasantly recounted the old days and then posed for a personal picture.

Shortly before returning to Fort McPherson, Ga., headquarters in Atlanta Saturday, General Gillem attended a luncheon at the Third Army's Food Service School, where he dined with scores of enlisted men.

President Sets Being Visit

Custer Road Work to Start Gen. Burress to Officiate At Cornerstone Ceremony

Construction on Fort Benning's $5 million Custer Road Terraced housing project will start at 11 a.m. Saturday when Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, and two civilian construction officials lay the cornerstone. Assisting General Burress in the ceremony will be R. E. Matheson, Georgia director of the Federal Housing Authority, who will spread the mortar, and C. Gandy Jordan, vice-president of the Jordan construction company, who will square and level the stone.

The cornerstone-laying will attract hundreds of military and civilian dignitaries from all over the South. Preston Stevens and James R. Wilkinson, architects for the huge project, will arrive here from Atlanta to participate in the ceremony. In addition to the civilian building officials, the army is expected to be represented by officials from Third Army headquarters at Fort McPherson, Ga., and the district engineer's office at Mobile Ala.

The 600-unit project, which is being built by the Jordan company of Columbus, is said to be the largest single program financed in Georgia by the Federal Housing Authority.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN To Visit Fort Benning

Arrives April 21 for Conference

Fort Benning will be honored with its first visit by a chief executive since 1943 when President Harry S. Truman arrives here on April 21 with the next joint orientation conference.

Mr. Truman, who will be the post's first presidential visitor since the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt was here in 1945, will leave Washington, D. C. by plane at 7:30 a. m. on April 21, and is scheduled to arrive at Lawson Airforce base between 9:45 and 10:15 a. m.

The commander-in-chief will be greeted upon arrival by top-ranking Third Army, Infantry Center and Third Infantry division officials.

From Lawson field, the president will be escorted by the Third Division to Blue Hole field where he will be honored by and receive a review of the division and selected Infantry Center units.

Division News Sheet Praised

The staff of the Third Infantry division's news sheet, The Portrex Reporter, received praise last week from the Department of Defense for its work during Operation Portrex.

Flaudits came in the form of a commendation for the Feb. 10 issue for "general attractiveness, conformity with journalistic principles, readability, proper news balance and interest." This citation is awarded monthly by the Department of Defense to outstanding staff news sheets in the mimeograph class.

The Portrex Reporter was published by members of the G-3 section, Third Division, and furthered the understanding of members of the division on Operation Portrex, officials said.

Now With G-1 Office

M-Sgt. Emil W. Kaeserman of Company A, Infantry School detachment, has been relieved of duties with the Adjutant General's department of the Infantry School and assigned to the G-1 office.

Easter Rites Scheduled

Traditional Sunrise Service to Be in First Cuartel

Fort Benning's annual Easter Sunday sunrise services will be held this year in the first cuartel court, where worshippers will be seated in front of the bandstand to form a living cross. Services will start with sacred music at 6:15 a. m.

For many years there has been an Easter service here as a Fort Benning tradition. During the war years they were held in Doughboy stadium and prior to last year in the Horse-show bowl. Last year marked the first use of the interior cuartel area for these sunrise services. If rain intervenes Sunday, the sacred concert at the Main theater, officials said.

Officiating chaplains and the Infantry center chapel choir will be seated on the bandstand before an altar decorated in white. In addition to the chapel choir and organist, the 72nd Army band will provide music, commencing with the sacred concert at 6:15, and supplementing the choir throughout the services.

After the bugler's blow church call at 6:30 a. m., the choir, accompanied by the organist and band, will sing the Protestant hymn, "Christ the Lord is Risen Today." The church services, participated in by all of the Protestant chaplains, will follow the opening hymn.

Assistant Chaplain W. Knight, assistant Infantry Center chaplain, will give the invocation. Maj. Ernest C. Galt, chaplain, will give the sermon.

Good Friday will be observed from 2 p. m. on Friday, April 7. Film strips on the Crucifixion will be shown, and periods of individual meditation will be observed. Attendance of post personnel in the chaplain's service in commemoration of the hours Christ spent on the cross is urged. Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale, Infantry Center chaplain, announced.

To Witness Problem

Following the review, Mr. Truman is expected to join guests of the orientation conference and visit students of a merged Infantry School problem, battalion in attack.

Mr. Truman and his party, members of which have not been announced, will be served lunch at the officers' club.

Under the proposed schedule, the chief executive will observe one of the most famous of Infantry School problems, the infantry firepower demonstration, before departing late in the afternoon for Eglin Airforce base, Fla., where he will see the airforce phase of the parade. The day's exercise will be climaxed with the "mad minute," during which all of the weapons of a reinforced infantry battalion are fired simultaneously for approximately 60 seconds.

Attendance of the public at demonstrations and formations, Infantry Center officials said, will be by invitation to individuals and groups because of the limited facilities for accommodating large crowds at Fort Benning. Large-scale movements of military convoys in connection with the problems and ceremonies.

Invited to Columbus

Mr. Truman and his party also have been extended an invitation by the Columbus Chamber of Commerce to visit the city during his stay at Benning, but no reply to the letter had been received yesterday.

After Hours Garb Optional Next Monday

Wearing of the summer uniform during off-duty hours will be optional between April 10-30, according to an announcement this week by the Infantry Center chief of staff.

Col. C. H. Karlstad said that the date for change from winter to summer uniform for on-duty hours would be set by individual commanders. Colonel Karlstad pointed out that, unless sooner terminated by Infantry Center headquarters, the uniform during the optional period, April 10-30, would be prescribed by 1) the chief of staff for personnel assigned to Infantry Center headquarters, 2) assistant commanders for personnel on duty with the Academic department and students and 3) unit commanders for personnel on duty within their commands.

It Was Also Announced That

Fort Benning personnel should be in uniform for summer uniforms on April 10 should commanders make the change-over this week. Orders effecting the change will be made in accordance with the demands of the weather, it was said.

Infantry Center officials also this week announced policies governing the wearing of the summer uniform.

During duty hours, enlisted men assigned to administrative positions will wear cotton khaki shirt and trousers with service cap. Collars may be left unbuttoned between reveille and retreat, and ties are not required during duty hours. It was pointed out that service caps must not be altered to change the regulation shape. Conservative, commercially designed low quarter shoes may be worn in lieu of issue shoes, but sports or casual shoes are not authorized.

Qualified airborne personnel are authorized to weararrison (overseas) cap with distinctive parachute insignia.

Unit commanders will state that enlisted men are authorized to wear tropical worsted in lieu of regulation issue during off-duty hours, but a shade 51 tie must be worn.

British Expert Visiting Board

A top British weapons expert is visiting the Infantry Center this week to confer with officials of Army Field Force board.

Brigadier J. A. Barlow, who made a visit here last year, is discussing new weapons developments, demonstrating several new British developments, an official of the board said.

The British expert, who is reportedly one of the world's best rifle marksmen, is head of the British division of the British Ministry of Supply.

ARC Drive Soars To Eighty Percent

Tabulations of the 1950 Red Cross fund drive showed this week that Infantry Center personnel scraped their pocketbooks to come up with $19,177.39 during the month-long drive—80 percent of the goal.

Murray Hill, Red Cross field director at Fort Benning, said yesterday that he expects the goal to be topped next week when the Third Infantry division, which has just returned from Portrex, pushes its special campaign. A kicked their total contributions to over 80 percent of their total goal. In the past, Mr. Hill said.

Mrs. O. P. Newman, chairman of the Red Cross auxiliary, said she wished to thank Mrs. Erwin O. Gibson and Mrs. Orlando Troxell for their cooperation in arranging for the party. Mrs. Newman also thanked Columbus merchants for their contributions of prizes.

report this week showed that Third division units participating in Portrex have reached the 31 percent mark in their individual campaign.

Results announced this week show a definite increase over last year's final Red Cross report. Mr. Hill said that the year's contributions totaled only 77 percent of the goal.

The regular drive, which is conducted from Feb. 28 through special promotion projects, aimed at sparking the interest of military units and the drive with eye-catching posters and dollar-raising tricks. The Infantry School detachment, which made 104 percent of its goal, augmented the unit campaign by charging five cents admission to the detachment coffee shop for two days.

The Red Cross Auxiliary staged a benefit party Friday night to help boost the campaign total. Mr. Hill said that proceeds, which are still being tabulated, will reach almost $1,000. Lt. Rob-

Promotion Ban Extended To Halt Corporal Boosts

WASHINGTON (APPS)—The army's September 1949 suspension of top three grade non-career field promotions has been extended to cover the grade of corporal (E-4), effective March 29, 1950.

These suspensions of enlisted promotions do not apply to regular career field promotions effected as the result of competitive examination.

To offset the suspensions, the army is expediting the introduction of remaining career fields, and hopes to send the final career field introductory regulations to the printer by August 31.

Speed Career Plans
The speed-up of career field introductions will bring all promotion opportunities possible under current budget limitations to Army personnel within a relatively short while.

Suspension of non-competitive promotions outside career fields necessitated by budget restrictions, the "freeze" being applied to the promotion of warrant officers enlisting after a previous separation also unless entitled by law or contract to enlistment in a higher grade.

The suspension directive also extends the time-in-grade requirement for all promotions to class (E-4). The directive stated that these limitations would be lifted as soon as possible.

Time In Grade
Under the new directive, nine months in grade is required before eligibility is established for promotion to the grade of corporal (E-4). Only six months previously was this required. For promotion to E-4 after an examination, 15 months of total service is required, instead of the former requirement of 12 months in grade or 30 months total service.

In the event the suspension of non-career grade E-4 (corporal) promotions is lifted the following time-in-grade requirements will be effective: local position vacancy—nine months time in grade, instead of six months.

2. For promotion without regard to local position vacancy—15 months time in grade or 34 months total service.

3. For promotion without regard to local position vacancy—15 months time in grade or 34 months total service.

be included in the $70 rental bracket. One hundred of the lowest rental units will be two-bedroom apartments in four-unit, single story buildings, while another 100 will be in two-story structures.

In the $80 category will be 248 single-story, three-bedroom duplexes and 52 similarly-styled apartments in two-story buildings.

Some Have Car Ports
Forty-one of the two-bedroom houses with car ports will rent for $85 per month, while 60 single-story, three-bedroom houses with car ports will cost the tenant $95 per month.

The new project will incorporate the latest architectural developments in two-story houses, construction officials have said. The project will include a new type of kitchen, built-in dining room, and a new type of living room.

Brief Veneer Buildings
The new project will include a new type of kitchen, built-in dining room, and a new type of living room.

Additional features of the project include adequate telephone service, and a new type of living room.

Utilities will be available to each family for about $10 per month, it was said. Telephone costs are not included in this figure.

Each kitchen will be an electric of the former requirement of 12 months in grade or 30 months total service.

Underground Trash Containers
Underground trash disposal units, built-in dining room, and a new type of living room.

Each apartment, it was pointed out, will be heated by "thermo-mechanical" controlled gas heaters.

Fenced-in playgrounds will be provided for the use of children. Two large playgrounds are planned to be located near the geographic center of the new development.

Arctic Important Link in Defense Setup, 'Ike' Says

Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told the government this week that Alaska is the weakest link in the world-wide defense chain and that additional military outlays in the arctic were of primary importance.

Eisenhower, who is president of New York's Columbia university, said that more than $300 million should be tacked onto the present $14 billion military appropriation to strengthen "certain phases of the senate appropriations sub-committee, listed top priority items this way:

1. Garrison in Alaska.
2. Modernization of aircraft and army equipment and reinforcement of antisubmarine facilities.
3. Intelligence.
4. Industrial mobilization.

Calling for an annual outlay of $1,500,000,000 for airplane buying by the airforce, Eisenhower warned that this should not be done by cutting from army and navy appropriations. Legislation pending in the house would grant the airforce about $1,500,000,000 for plane purchases. The proposal by Eisenhower would boost this an additional $150,000,000.

The warlike army general specifically said that a surprise airborne attack could hit Alaska "five minutes" after being launched from Russian soil. He recommended that each major airfield in the Alaska area should have at least one "reinforced infantry battalion and an anti-aircraft artillery" unit.

He also said that it was the first time that the students had attained 100 percent.

Student Training regiment commander, Murray Hill told Col. Sevier R. Tupper, regimental commander, that the students' record is "splendid example of cooperation. He also said that it was the first time that the students had attained 100 percent.

When the 1950 fund-raising campaign ended last week the goal had been topped with a total of 14 percent.

Base Runway Work Begins

Approximately 200 airmen and officers will arrive at Lawson Airforce base this week to handle the retopping of runways, according to an announcement made by Maj. Richard O. Johnson, base commander.

The construction crews are members of the 937th Engineer Aviation group squadron, based at MacDill Airforce base, Fla.

These men are all construction engineer workers who specialize in this type of work.

Major Johnson said that about six inches of hard topping will be added to the runways to make it possible for jet fighter planes to land at Lawson.

The $400,000 project is expected to last approximately 12 months.

Seven EM Report For Benning Duty

Seven enlisted men reported for duty with the Infantry School detachment last week from various units at Fort Jackson, S. C., unit officials announced this week.

Pfc. William H. Brown and Newton N. Cunningham Jr., formerly with the 21st Field Artillery battalion at Fort Jackson, were assigned to Company A of the Infantry School detachment.

Sgt. John S. Welborn and Raymond E. Wilson, also recently transferred from the 21st Field Artillery battalion, were assigned to Company B, and Cpl. Alvin J. Baucum and Sgt. Fred A. Parrish and Charles E. Tyre, former members of Fort Jackson's 343rd Area Service unit, were assigned to Company B of the school detachment, officials reported.

Pathfinder Class Starts
The Infantry School's pathfinder course No. 3 began its first week of training last week with 11 officers and 16 enlisted men enrolled.

Ten enlisted men of Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section I, 3440th Area Service unit, were recently given new duty assignments, according to Col. Maurice L. Miller, commander.

M-Sgt. James C. Buck was assigned duties with the Athletic and Recreation section, and Sgt. Cl. James H. Little was assigned duties with the Quartermaster section.

Two men were assigned to the Signal section. They were Pfc. Tom Collingsworth and M-Sgt. Thomas A. Lohar.

Assigned to the Personnel section were Pfc. George E. Bailey and M-Sgt. Walter L. Goodbread.

Getting duties with the Transportation section was Pfc. D. Holland, while the Ordnance section got Pfc. Allen L. Lanford and Pvt. Alexander R. Best.

Pvt. Russell H. Dandridge was assigned to the Billeting section.

T.I.C. TALKS
QUESTION: WHAT DID YOU THINK OF PORTREX? DID YOU ENJOY YOUR LEAVE?

CPL. KENNETH E. PETERSON, Ninth Field Artillery battalion, it was a pretty good trip. It wasn't realistic enough, however, as the enemy were to fire. The leave was something the only ones who had anything to say about it.

Sgt. 1st Cl. Enoch Tart, 651st Medical Ambulance company, at a 52nd Medical battalion ceremonial parade last Thursday.

Sergeant Tart, whose record as a mess sergeant he had previously won for him a Soldier of the Week award, was commended for his efforts in building the 651st mess from an unsatisfactory mess to one of the best in the Third Army area, with a continuous rating of superior.

CPL. HERMAN ENGLE, Ninth Field Artillery battalion, I think it was a lot of help to the young troops because it taught them what they will have to do in case of emergency. It showed them conditions they will have to live under in case of emergency.

Pvt. George E. Cretan, Ninth Field Artillery battalion, I think it was good practice, but it was not realistic enough for the regular action we would be in during war time.

However, it was educational. I enjoyed the island. I learned a lot about the functions of the navy. My leave was really interesting.

It was the first time I had ever been to a place like that.

Pfc. Donald S. Nix, Ninth Field Artillery battalion, Portrex was o.k. in a lot of ways. For one thing, it was good in certain training. I think if I ever had to go into actual combat I would be better prepared for it.

I enjoyed my leave. I had never been to a place like that, but I wouldn't like to live there.

An Insult to Their Memory

The Super Highway, which runs between Columbus and Cusseta, was constructed as a memorial to U. S. Armed Forces. With its four lanes and center parkway, it is indeed a magnificent tribute to the men and women who have served their country, both in war and in peace. However, its unsightliness grows increasingly worse every day because of the carelessness of those who travel it.

Between the traffic circle at the entrance to the Fort Benning reservation and the city limits, there is enough trash to fill dozens of garbage trucks. Going into Columbus one day recently we saw bottles, paper, tin cans, rags, even cardboard boxes covering both sides of the road and the center parkway. This trash was there because those who ride along the Super Highway use it as a dump yard.

Many of those who use the Super Highway are Fort Benning personnel, and they are partly to blame for its condition. No soldier would throw trash in streets and roads on the reservation, so why do it off the post? When you have empty cigar packages, chewing gum wrappers, or what have you, why not wait until you reach your destination before getting rid of it? Don't throw your refuse in the streets and roads; place it in receptacles provided for that purpose.

The condition of the Super Highway is an insult to the memory of the men and women to whom it is dedicated. Fort Benning troops must do their part to alleviate this situation.

Better Watch What You Say!

Americans talk too much. Both as individuals and as a country, we talk too much. Take, for example, the case of the mysterious flying saucers. The current issue of U. S. News & World Report claims they are the real thing. Radio commentators have echoed that claim. First constructed in this country in 1942, they are alleged to be jet-propelled disks that can outfly other planes. They are alleged to hover aloft, sport ahead at tremendous speed and out-manuever conventional planes.

If they do all this, why let a potential enemy in on it? Why broadcast this fact to a potential aggressor with the avowed purpose of world domination? It's true that in a democracy, the people are entitled to know what's going on. But for heaven's sake! Why give them our military secrets?

Take rumors for another example. There is no better breeding ground for rumors than the armed forces. Joe Blow hears that we've got a new weapon so he begins to boast his ego by telling his buddy about his wonderful tip.

Should you hear any rumors, your best bet is to check with C-2 who will set you straight on it. Chances are that 99 out of 100 times, the rumors are all wet. But should it prove to be something secret, we know you wouldn't want to knowingly give the enemy that information.

Many of our supposedly secret weapons have been shown in leading national publications, usually in far more detail than some instructional material available at the Infantry School. If we have a gun that will shoot straighter, faster, further and more accurately than any other in the world, we don't believe in advertising that fact to the world. True, it might give our citizens a sense of security. But the information the enemy gets from this statement will more than offset the good it does our own public.

During the war it was: "A slip of the lip may sink a ship." We now say: "Don't be a sap. Shut your trap."

Here's Offer That's Free

Fort Benning troops have a splendid opportunity to find out whether they have any symptoms of tuberculosis. And it's all free!

The Chattahoochee Health Foundation, which has been conducting the TB survey in Muscogee county since last February, has invited all Benningites to take advantage of its X-Ray and testing facilities. To date very few have utilized this free service, but health authorities have again issued an invitation to Fort Benning soldiers and their families to visit them at one of their many conveniently-located testing stations.

The testing process is simple and painless. All a person has to do is report to one of the testing stations for an X-Ray and skin test. Three days later he returns to the testing station for his report. It's worth the time spent to know whether you have TB or to know whether you have been exposed to it. Tuberculosis, like most other dreaded diseases, can be cured if treated in time. Why not find out now, before it's too late? Tuberculosis is contagious; so think of your family, if not of yourself.

Atlantic Pact Nations Decide Defense Plan

NATIONAL AFFAIRS — The twelve Atlantic Pact nations, including the U. S. represented by Defense Secretary Johnson, this week joined in a master plan for collective defense of the Western world. An official communique issued following the meeting claimed this is the first time twelve independent and sovereign nations have reached through a democratic process a system for defending themselves and each other, both economically and efficiently. Secretary Johnson has made no statement regarding the rumored withholding of important secrets from British War Minister John Strachey who has been accused of Communist leanings. Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray was chosen by the Presch Plan aid in 1952. Gray will complete this assignment before he leaves the government for the presidency of the University of North Carolina. Frank Pace Jr., the current budget director, will replace Gray as the Army Secretary. Gen. George C. Marshall urged this week that the European Aid program be carried through full force until the scheduled ending date, June 30, 1952. Owen Lattimore, accused by Senator McCarthy as a top Communist, has vehemently denied the charges and released to the public a statement containing his Far Eastern policy some months ago. Senator Lodge, Republican from Massachusetts, proposed this week a bipartisan committee to investigate McCarthy's charges to stop damage to the U. S., that has been caused by the present investigation. The disappearance of a convicted traitor, Theodore Donay, and the presence of an unidentified submarine in the vicinity of Avalon, Calif., fostered a vigilant watch by the Navy and Coast Guard in that area this week. Attorney General Howard McGrath is pleading a case before the Supreme Court that asks a repeal of an 1896 decision declaring racial segregation constitutional. President has again asked Congress to enact the Brannan farm plan with its dual goal of cheaper prices for perishable crops and direct Government payment to farmers. A three year old liberal Democratic Action, a group which denounced any connection with either the Democratic or Republican party. The Armed Forces have again denied any connection with the "flying saucers" that were declared secret weapons of the Air Force and Navy this week by Radio Commentator Henry G. Taylor and the weekly magazine, U. S. News and World Report.

Report from Washington

Air Force Has New Officer Promotion Plan

ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE — The Air Force has announced a new plan for selecting Regular and Reserve officers for temporary promotion to captain through colonel, including WAF's, Medical Service officers and chaplains. Names of selected officers will be placed on a "recommended personnel" list and promotions will be made on a monthly basis to fill grade vacancies as they occur. Selections for promotion to temporary colonel and lieutenant colonel will be made by central Selection Boards appointed by the Secretary of the Air Force. Promotions to temporary captain and major, including WAF's but not Medical Service officers and chaplains, will be made by boards appointed by commanding generals of major commands. Eligible officers not assigned to a major command, and chaplains and Medical Service officers will be selected by boards convened at USAF Headquarters. First promotions under the new procedure are expected in June or July.

Army warrant officers' appointments will be open before June 30, 1951. First source will be utilized only in the event of mobilization.

Chaplain's Corner

Job's Faith in God Saved Him From the Devil

By CHAPLAIN WILLIAM E. PAUL, JR. There was once a pretty fouled-up character named Job. He really had a rough time of it. Rather late in life, he got set to settle back and enjoy a comfortable old age. He had plenty of wealth, a fine family, prestige and love named Job, suddenly, the story goes, a fellow named Satan appeared on the scene and Job found himself up to here in trouble! Since he had been a righteous man all his life, and had taken great pains to fulfill the requirements of his religion, it shook Job up no end to this suddenly have to face so much trouble. Things got so bad that he cursed the day he was born. He complained bitterly about life. He even began to wish he were dead! His friends got into the act, and made him even more miserable with half-baked advice and inksome criticism. Job's morale dropped right down to his toes! But Job went on, despite the extent of his difficulties. He knew better than to blame God for his troubles, and blamed himself instead. He knew that "... man is born unto trouble," and understood that in affliction God is to be sought. He even assumed that "... happy is the man whom God correcteth." In short, Job never lost his grip on his outlook in the face of God. And no matter how you looked at it, he was on the right track; he believed and trusted enough to live accordingly, troubles or no troubles. That's how he finally won through, in spite of that fellow Satan's best efforts to throw him!

We who spend our days here amidst so many educational and training programs would do well to take a leaf from Job's book. At one point he asks, "But where shall wisdom be found and where is the place of understanding?" Granted, we could truthfully say, right here at Fort Benning. But that wouldn't be the right answer for Job's particular question, because he was digging deeper, looking for the answer regarding winning out in life, come what might. He answered his own question right out of his own faith and experience; said he, "Behold, the fear of the Lord, that is wisdom; and to depart from evil is understanding." Aging, beset by troubles, Job understood that it was God's will that counted above all else. He saw as plain as day that a man wasn't able to solve all his own problems, nor able even to understand them. It took God to handle such matters — and men of faith through whom God could work out solutions. Men needed to believe deeply, worship sincerely, work hard, and live daily what they believed—that 'equation always added up to wisdom and understanding of the sort that was needed to win. That is the road to the same result for you and me today. That is the practical, reliable, exacting, yet rewarding way to win—troubles or no troubles, good times or bad times, war or peace, high spirits or low spirits, sickness or health. Take that road, and you will find the pressures dropping, your life happier and more satisfying, and your pilgrimage on this old earth a much more worthwhile affair. You will win.

If this is a modern, mechanized army, what are we doing out here in this obsolete mud?

THE ASSYRIAN AND DON'T GO AWAY MAD BY WILLIAM SAROYAN. HARDCOURT, BRACE & CO., PUBLISHERS. BY ALLEN L. MULLIKIN
William Saroyan dabbles in almost every form of English composition, but regardless of the arrangement of the words the writing is always filled with provocative, if sometimes undeveloped, ideas. In these two books are some typical Saroyan plays and short stories with a more than generous helping of introductions and prefaces in which the author pours out a maudlin account of his attempts to be an artist in this cruel world.
In the weeping sessions on the reader's shoulder Saroyan tries to explain away the fact that the plays remain unproduced and most of the short stories were not printed in the popular magazines. In short, the author seems to want sympathy from the reader because he can only get his work before the public in books that pay him thousands of dollars in royalties.
This attitude invites the criticism that the author meets few of the standards required in the media he longs to fill with his uncommon artistry. The vague concepts he flings together in haphazard literary structures may satisfy the demands of his free soul, but they are not in demand in the popular market.
Too often the collections of Saroyan remind one of the posthumous books of famous authors whose publishers glean the great one's waste baskets for material. In The Assyrian, which is supposed to be a collection of short stories, there is an undigested mixture similar in composition to a native goulash from the author's mother country. There are chunks of meaty prose spiced with Saroyan's ideas on how to live this life. There are also indistinguishable bits of vegetable matter that are neither short stories nor essays. The latter contain thoughts aplenty but they were whisked from the creative burner before they reached full flavor. Saroyan is a successful author, but he might be a good one if he would forego the bash and find a better recipe.
In the book of unproduced plays there are three of the best available reasons why William Saroyan has so seldom been taken from the printed page and placed behind the footlights. Since he declined the Pulitzer prize in 1940 for The Time Of Your Life, Saroyan has not had the chance to repeat his disdain, and these efforts are unlikely to provide the opening. Only one of the plays, A Decent Birth and A Happy Funeral, stands any chance at all of being produced, and it is too short to fill an evening at the theater.
Don't Go Away Mad is a closet drama in the truest tradition of the early 19th century English authors. This bit of dialogue concerns itself with the efforts of dying men to spend their last hours doing something worthwhile. Sam Ego's House is typically Saroyan in that it calls for an entire house to be moved six miles across a 40-foot stage. Regardless of their lack in dramatic form, both plays offer some of the author's best comments, both satiric and poetic, on what is wrong and what is right about people.

Teen Topics

By PAT MEAD

Music, music, music! That's all we hear at Brat Barracks lately. Maybe it's the effect of springtime, but whatever it is, everybody is dancing. Seen folks walking and walking and enthusiastically lining up for "Ten Pretty Girls" the other night at the Officers' club? Nolen, Don Romine, Clarie Sullivan, Bill Duncan, Pat Mead, Pedro Rivero, Ann Halloran and many, many more.

As the dancing, it seems as though Bill Ricker and Helen Wilbur and Roger Swindler and themselves last Friday night at the Junior prom down at school. Maybe the effect of spring for spring vacation, and has that beautiful DeSoto for a constant companion. How lucky can you get!

We hear rumors that peroxide bottles are flying right and left around here. Maybe he too surprised if someday soon you have to look twice to recognize your hair that is. Elvin Krikel and Nancy Welsh can be found all most anytime at the bowling alley and from what we hear Elvin is really scoring high. We were also very impressed at all those strikes by Strohn and Elie Lundberg made last Friday night. If anybody was surprised to see somebody sitting up in one of the trees around B. T. Barracks Saturday night, it was only Bruce Brooks looking for excitement.

And that reminds me, the Officers' club has done it again! They're starting a series of teenage dances, the first of which will be Friday, April 7. Watch the Daily Bulletin for more details, and be sure to come!

Babe Is Not Eligible

LONDON (APFS)—Mrs. Babe Didrikson Zaharias will be ineligible for any tournaments under jurisdiction of the British Professional Golfers Association she declines to visit England this year. She is not a member of the U.S.P.G.A., which restricts membership to men only. The British golf association said Mrs. Zaharias would not compete in the British professional tournament exclusively for women.

Mastalir Infant Christened At Impressive Ceremony

Young Lynn Suzanne Mastalir, daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. M. J. Mastalir, was christened Sunday afternoon in the Infantry Center chapel.

Chaplain (Capt.) Harvey M. Hardin performed the baptismal ceremony.

The altar was decorated with arrangements of spring flowers flanked by white tapers. John Miller, organist, presented a musical program.

Witnesses were Maj. and Mrs. Winston G. Whall.

The baby wore an heirloom baptismal robe of fine white batiste with a square neck, double puffed sleeves, a ruffled collar and dainty all-over embroidery.

The full gathered skirt was made with a row of 19 tucks on both sides of the diagonal insertion of all-over embroidery and wide handkerchief hem at the hem of the dress. It has been worn by 11 babies in the family at the time of their baptism.

Following the ceremony, Col. and Mrs. Mastalir entertained with a reception at their quarters.

The reception rooms were colorful with their arrangements of early spring flowers. The serving table was centered with a low mound of plum blossoms and honey-suckle.

Guests included Mrs. Joseph F. Engman, the baby's grandmother from Harrisburg, Pa. Mrs. Harvey C. Voorhees, the baby's aunt from Trenton, N. J., Col. and Mrs. Raymond C. Ham, Col. and Mrs. Dennis M. Moore, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles F. Coates, Lt. Col. and Mrs. A. Leonard, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Benjamin Turnage, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ramon C. Dougan, Lt. Col. and Mrs. A. C. Newkirk, Lt. Top Recruits To Get Medals

WASHINGTON (APFS)—Recruits who display outstanding qualities of leadership during basic training will be awarded the American Spirit Honor medal of the Citizens Committee for the Army and Navy, Inc., Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson has announced.

A board of not less than three officers will be appointed by command to select the award in each company of army, navy, marine corps and air force training installations to select the recipient for the award in each course of basic training on or after July 1, 1950.

Decisions will be based on the individual's American spirit, honor, initiative, loyalty and high example to comrades in arms.

The medal is a bronze medal, one and three-eighths inches in diameter. It has an American eagle superimposed on sunburst and bears the phrases "American Spirit Honor Medal" and "Serve with Heart, Head and Hand." The reverse side bears a torch held high and the words, "For High Example to Comrades in Arms." The medal will not be worn on the uniform.

GI Exhibits Sales Skill

If the title "Super Salesman" had to be applied to any Infantry Center soldier, Sgt. James C. Chute, uncommissioned officer for the Infantry School detachment, would more than likely be the first candidate.

Since Jan. 1, the 24-year old Oklahoman has been responsible for the sale of $67,000 in National Service Life Insurance a pace policies. Sergeant Chute's trick in selling the policies, ranging from $500 to $10,000, is the same as used by all salesmen: convincing the prospect that the product is good.

During his three-month campaign, Chute constructed signs, contacted individuals and did plenty of talking.

Sylvester-Ross Wedding Solemnized at Post Chapel

The Infantry Center chapel left for a honeymoon to be planned en route. For traveling, the bride wore a light navy shantung suit featuring a bolero jacket with black trim. Her accessories were black and pink.

Upon their return, the couple will make their home in Benning Park.

Miss Sylvester attended Moore Institute of Art in Philadelphia, Pa.

Lieutenant Ross graduated from the U. S. Military academy at West Point, N. Y., in 1949.

Out-of-town guests for the wedding were Mrs. Ralph Davis Sylvester, mother of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Marion H. Ross, Mrs. George H. Mealy, grandparents of the bride and James Sylvester, brother of the bride.

Zimmers Hosts At Officers' Club

Capt. and Mrs. Charles R. Zimmer entertained the members of the Staff Judge Advocate section and their wives at a buffet supper and Officers' club on Wednesday night.

The buffet table was beautiful in its spring decorations. It was centered with a low arrangement of yellow Dutch iris and white snapdragons in a blue bowl, flanked by green candles.

Three EM Receive 3rd Army Awards

Three Fort Benning enlisted men have been awarded Third Army certificates of achievement, according to a recent announcement from army headquarters.

Sgt. 1st Cl. James H. Way, of the Infantry Center, received a certificate of achievement for outstanding service from May 31, 1946 to Jan. 21, 1950, and Sgt. Balbino Esplana and Fernando Mabini, both of the Third Infantry Center, received certificates of achievement for honorable and faithful service upon retirement from the regular army.

Plans Announced For Art Exhibit

The Literature and Arts group has announced plans for an artist's exhibit and contest at the Country club on April 16 at 2:30 p.m. The group for children will be divided as follows: 6-12 and 13-17 years of age. Adults will be divided into amateur and professional. The exhibit and contest will be judged by a well known artist from Columbus. Any medium will be accepted, but the work must be framed or with a mat, and each picture must have on the back the artist's name, address and telephone number. Prizes will be awarded for the artist's exhibit and writers contest at this meeting. Deadline for submission of pictures is between April 10-12. Art must be left with Mrs. E. B. Cheston, 401 Lumpkin.

No-Host Dinner Is Held at Club

A group of officers who have just returned from Operation Portrex and their wives got together on Saturday at the Officers' club for a no-host dinner. The table was centered with spring flowers in a crystal bowl. Those attending were Lt. Col. and Mrs. James Lynch, Lt. Col. and Mrs. John E. Arthur, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Ned Broyles, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Stanley Fortridge, Lt. Col. and Mrs. Nathaniel Rieger, Maj. and Mrs. James Friend, Maj. and Mrs. John Harris, and Capt. and Mrs. Clyde Jones and Maj. and Mrs. John Jenkins.

Group Holds Final Meeting Of Season at Coca-Cola Co.

The Home and Garden group she advised one color scheme throughout, to give the overall picture a pleasing appearance, and warned against a cluttered look. She stressed using new and original ideas on the porch and in entrance halls to give them individuality since army homes are so much the same in appearance. At the conclusion of her speech, she answered questions from the audience. A short movie on flower arranging was shown by the ladies, and refreshments were served. Mrs. Thomas H. Monroe won the door prize, a set of place mats and napkins donated by Mrs. Marcus B. Bell, president of the Woman's club.

Swarmer Units Stand Inspection

Elements of the 15th Infantry regiment, 99th Armored Field Artillery battalion, 41st Field Artillery battalion and the 10th Engineer Combat battalion, which make up the "aggressor" forces for Exercise Swarmer, were inspected last Monday by Brig. Gen. Roland P. Shung, Third Infantry division artillery commander, and Col. Dennis M. Moore, commanding officer of the 15th. The Second and Third battalions of the 15th, the entire 41st Field, one battery from the 99th Field and Company B of the 10th engineers, will comprise the total "aggressor" force. These units left Fort Benning yesterday by convoy for North Carolina, where the exercise will be held. Swarmer is unique in that it is the first maneuver ever held by United States armed forces in which every single item that will be used by the "friendly" forces will be transported to the exercise area by air, officials said. The friendly forces are made up largely from the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N. C., and the 11th Airborne division, Camp Campbell, Ky. These two units will launch their initial "attack" against the "hostiles" sometime within the coming week, and will continue the "battle" until about the middle of May.

In 2nd Training Week

Basic airborne class No. 22 began its second week of training this week with 118 enlisted men and 11 officers enrolled.

Sign-Up Pay Bill Fate Is Uncertain

With the legislative docket of the 82nd Congress jammed and the session approximately half over, the chances of any ruling to straighten out the indefinite enlistment pay hodgepodge being passed in the foreseeable future took on a rather dismal aspect this week.

The office of the comptroller's hospitalize physically retired personnel. President Truman's budget has been written on the basis of transferring all of the 38,000 non-regular retired officers from the Veterans Administration to the Defense department payroll, but the president has never actually ordered the transfer.

At least three counter-proposals to the presidential order already have been made.

Honor Won By Bragg GI

A Fort Bragg N. C. soldier is the Third Army Food Service School's student of the week.

Cpl. Junior L. Moss, a student cook, was selected the outstanding student because of his "overall excellence in both academic work and conduct as a soldier." He is a combat veteran with 43 months of overseas service with the 8th Infantry Division.

With four and a half years in the food service field, Corporal Moss states that he intends to remain in the army as a career soldier and that he believes the training he is receiving will materially aid his advancement in his chosen career field. He is scheduled for graduation May 12.

Fort Benning's 72nd Army band, accompanied by a platoon of 40 riflemen, will participate in a parade during a public safety demonstration at Dawson, Ga., on April 28.

Chaplain Turns Parachutist To Learn of Strain on GIs

Fort Benning's Chaplain (Lt. Col.) Wallace M. Hale will find no difficulty in taking the Lord's word even to the most remote spots of our world.

Last week, the 35-year-old Texan made his last jump in a five-week airborne course.

Chaplain Hale, who began his military career in 1938, has undertaken the task of training to revamp his approach to the soldier's religion.

He said that his recent training is the first step in learning first hand the physical and mental capacities of men, and the strain under which they exist.

Although he found considerable difficulty in keeping neck-and-neck with the younger trainees during physical training phases of the course, Chaplain Hale is no newcomer to the game of trying to learn things the hard way.

He was only a youth of 16 years when he became an active church minister, and he was 19 years old when Baylor university awarded him a diploma.

Shortly thereafter, he began further ministerial studies.

Earns War Friendship
During World War II, Chaplain Hale built for himself an enviable relationship with men in the 88th Infantry division during their drives up the Italian peninsula.

Their warm friendship with the combat veterans, a fellow officer said, was an intangible desire to know each man and understand the multitude of personal problems surrounding a human in the midst of war.

When he volunteered for airborne training, Chaplain Hale knew the work would be devastatingly tiring and would play havoc with his years of physical inactivity.

But, with typical conscientiousness, the six-foot veteran dove into the five-week course despite his age.

During the entire course, he said, the only fear he knew was of the instructor's reprimand when students began making simulated jumps from the 34-foot high mock towers.

He said that nearly 15 percent of the class had some fear of this low-altitude preparatory training that almost whipped him, Chaplain Hale said.

Moses L. Ridley, Jerry A. Towle, George R. Tyle and Joseph A. Willoughby.

"But once you get confidence in that equipment," he said, "fear and anxiety seem to go away."

Instructors in the Airborne Battalion lauded Chaplain Hale as being "outstanding" and uncompromising.

"He kept up with the youngest man in the class," one airborne veteran commented.

"The first jump, I suppose," Chaplain Hale said, "was the scariest of all. Actually, you don't know how it's going to feel and you're relaxed expecting something. Successive jumps, however, mean that you're going to be aware of mistakes made on the first."

"Even after they've jumped several times," he continued, "some men still evidence fear of jumping. Not brow-sweating fear, but nervousness at the thought of going out the door at 1,200 feet in the air. Once they become confident of their equipment, it becomes a normal routine."

World Just Conquered
Chaplain Hale said he set out during the initial phase of training, to determine why paratroopers were so nervous.

4 EM Transferred Within Service Unit
Four inter-unit transfers of enlisted personnel were disclosed this week by Col. Maurice L. Miller, commanding officer of the Area Service Unit Provisional group.

Sgt. 1st Cl. Charles E. Smith, Jr., and Sgt. Tile O. Hall were transferred from the 71st Ordnance Depot company to Headquarters and Headquarters detachment 328th Ordnance Battalion.

CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.) WALLACE M. HALE NOW 'CHUTIST Infantry Center Chaplain Chief Prepares For Qualifying Jump

ers are prouder than other soldiers. He said that somewhere during their training, some one thing must be responsible for the impressive esprit each man holds for his particular type of soldiering.

Chaplain Hale's graduation from the Infantry School's airborne course brings the total number of "jumping" army chaplains to about six. Although future assignments for the chaplain haven't been disclosed, he said there is some possibility he may be assigned to either the 82nd Airborne division at Fort Bragg, N. C., or the 11th at Camp Campbell, Ky.

New Firepower Problem Added to Demonstrations

A new and more impressive firepower demonstration was added to the Infantry School's long list this week when Problem No. 2358 was put through its paces yesterday.

The new display, called The Battalion Hit Attack, incorporates the use of 70 antiaircraft guns for support of advancing infantry troops.

Although a similar demonstration has been staged here for more than a year, it was not until recently that "ack-ack" was included in the spectacular display.

The problem uses twelve 105 mm howitzers, sixteen 50 calibre antiaircraft machineguns, eight 40 mm Bofors guns, ten tanks mounting the 105 mm howitzer, hundreds of troops firing rifles and scores of machineguns and recoilless rifles.

Monday and Tuesday this week, troops participating in the exercise went through dress rehearsals. Yesterday, however, the graphic display was staged in full dress for the benefit of Infantry School students and visiting newswear men.

2 Sergeants Rated Tops by Inspectors

Two sergeants in the Airborne Battalion, who improved a supply room storage system for training equipment, have received a superior rating by a Third Army inspection team.

Sgts. Bruce Tall and James Calhoun, Company E, Airborne Battalion, recently constructed individual bins for the equipment used by instructors in the company. Each bin is labelled with the instructor's name. Personnel using the equipment can go into the bin to get the equipment.

First Lt. William D. Hagerly has been relieved from his assignment with Seventh company and assigned to Fifth company for duty as unit officer. Capt. Joseph L. Nichols has been relieved of assignment with Seventh company and named commander of Fifth company.

M-Sgt. Ansel E. Kyle, Sgt. 1st Cl. Newport Phillips and Sgt. 1st Cl. Phill H. Howard have been assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters company.

Pfc. Henry Goggins, Jr., Auburn B. Graham and Maso Marshall and Pvt. Charles K. Carroll, Howard E. Faison, Charles E. Hunter, Odell Clark, Willie McCall and Aubrey Hamilton have been assigned to Service company.

Four privates first class of the Infantry School detachment were promoted to corporal this week. They were Everett D. Freitag, M-Sgt. Ansel E. Kyle, Sgt. 1st Cl. Newport Phillips and Sgt. 1st Cl. Phill H. Howard have been assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters company.

Weekly Talks Only Scratch Surface of Vast I-E Project

By F. E. RICHARDSON
Bayonet Staff Writer

When one thinks of troop information education, the readily identified by the acronym I. E. & E. abbreviation, he usually thinks of the weekly troop information hour, and lets it go at that.

In reality, the troop information hour, although an important part of the overall program, is only one of many phases making up the work of the Infantry Center troop information and education division.

The operating headquarters of the Infantry Center T. I. & E. is the Education Center, housed in the barracks converted to school and office use, the Education Center is located on Inmanhead road near the Quartermaster's building, Capt. Edward E. Grady, Infantry Center T. I. & E. officer, heads a staff of three officers, 12 enlisted men and two civilians, who are responsible for the many activities which comprise the entire program.

PERHAPS THE MOST INTERESTING, if not the most important phase of the Education Center's work, is the planning and administration of off-duty study courses given in the classrooms of the center. The outline of the other activities which comprise the I. E. & E. program makes for a better understanding of the Education Center's function.

The United States Armed Forces Institute, better known as USAFI, is the backbone of the off-duty study program for the utilization of off-duty time for self improvement, development of new skills, advancement of educational levels and providing background for eventual advancement.

All USAFI work is administered by the Education Center. That work includes educational level testing, educational counseling and a multitude of other allied duties relating to students, courses and the presence of teachers—sufficient to put most people into an early grave. General Education Development tests can be taken by any soldier at the Education Center. These tests are particularly valuable for determining what courses should be taken by a soldier to bring him up to the desired level and also for securing school credit if test results show the individual has reached or surpassed the educational level sought.

PRACTICALLY ALL STATES now recognize USAFI certification of high school level achievement, and high school graduation credit can be obtained in many cases if the high school credit is earned.

The Education Center conducts the weekly T. I. briefings for its post units, which provides training aids for unit T. I. presentations. According to Capt. Grady, the success of T. I. depends almost entirely upon the support given by unit commanders.

One example of command support of T. I. is the high standard demanded by Col. Maurice E. Miller, commanding officer of the 3440th Area Service unit, for his unit information centers and his troop information hours.

That command support makes the big difference between enthusiastic acceptance by the soldier of a well presented, forceful and interesting T. I. and his mere perfunctory reading of the current issue of Armed Forces Talks is not a new theory.

It is true that some fine T. I. programs are present—even without effective command support. However, the evidence indicates that the effectiveness of unit T. I. bears a direct relationship to the interest and support given by unit commanders.

Group study courses offered at the Education Center give military personnel an opportunity for educational advancement as well as the chance to learn a trade or develop a hobby. Classes meet Monday and Thursday from 7:30 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. and continue for a 10-week period. The spring term starts April 10 with courses being offered in foreign languages, business law, auto mechanics, mathematics, psychology, public speaking, photography, bookkeeping and accounting and 7th, 9th and 10th grade English.

IT ISN'T POSSIBLE TO SPEAK about these group study courses without mention of Miss Mabel York. Miss York is the education and information counselor and is the ready person always on hand to help soldiers interested in pursuing some course of study, whether it be a USAFI self-study course, a correspondence course of enrollment in one of the evening classes.

Miss York was a public school teacher in Atlanta before the war. After Pearl Harbor she went to work for the Bell Aircraft company, doing supervisory work in vocational training and acting as veteran's counselor. Miss York continued her federal service after the war in the education and training field, coming to Fort Benning in 1948.

In addition to her counseling duties, Infantry Center T. I. & E. officer, heads a staff of three officers, 12 enlisted men and two civilians, who are responsible for the many activities which comprise the entire program.

THE PHYSICAL FACILITIES of the Education Center are constantly being improved. The classrooms are well equipped, modern lighting is provided to be purchased and installed soon from the unexpended portion of funds derived from the 30-cent course registration fee.

Student enrollment averages between 900 and 1,000 for the 20 courses normally offered, and they come from all over the United States. The Education Center is expected to be purchased and installed soon from the unexpended portion of funds derived from the 30-cent course registration fee.

Although the value of the Education Center to those who use it, the facilities is readily apparent to them, it is somewhat difficult for the average soldier to visualize its concrete worth. The case of a former Fort Benning soldier might serve to point out exactly how valuable it really is. Since this is a true story, we can guarantee it.

Pvt. Smith considered an eight ball in his unit, but he had been AWOL for some time, and didn't seem to care much about getting ahead in the army. One day he showed up at Miss York's office, and asked unenthusiastically about some courses. After spending some time discussing things with him, she managed to interest him, and enrolled him in a class.

PVT. SMITH COMPLETED that course and one or two more before he was transferred to another post. He continued his studies, and wrote Miss York that he had been promoted to corporal several months after he had left Fort Benning. He is now a sergeant in the 3440th Area Service unit, and has been accepted for admission to Harvard university this fall.

No account of information and education would be complete without mention of the hospital radio station and the fine work of Lt. Richard C. Micacchion. The hospital radio station provides all day and individual patients with a half-hour daily broadcast of I. & E. features as well as support.

Lieutenant Micacchion is an amiable individual whose duties at the Education Center give him only a fraction of his varied assignments. He is the assistant commander, and is in charge of the Station Medical, 3440th Area Service unit; public information officer, Red Cross officer; personnel adjustment officer, and special services officer. All of which adds up to the picture of a very busy man. Despite these duties, however, he manages to put on an excellent T. I. hour each week for Station Medical cadre and any patients who want to attend.

Another phase of Education Center work involves educational surveys, one of which will be conducted soon covering the entire military population of Fort Benning. These surveys help to determine the educational interests and needs of military personnel, the results being used to guide policy formation on such matters as the inauguration of new courses or the discontinuance of classes no longer desired.

ONE EXAMPLE OF THE unceasing search for courses not heretofore given for which surveys have disclosed a need is a course in reading improvement. This course, patterned after the one in current use at the Air University, Maxwell field, Ala., is designed to develop a rapid reading habit and will be offered to interested military personnel in the near future.

Some amazing results have been attained through this training at the Air University. Reading rates as high as 2,000 words a minute, with a comprehension accuracy of 90 percent have been developed, approaching the rare "photographic" reading comprehension of some people.

All these activities carried by the Infantry Center T. I. & E. division aid in the educational development of local military personnel, fitting individual soldiers for career advancement, creating new interests and fields of endeavor for off-duty recreation and preparing those who participate in its programs for the acceptance of greater responsibility, whether in the armed services or in civilian life.

ON BROADWAY AT TENTH STREET

ODDS ENDS

By STEVE BOLAND

Fort Benning baseball fans who didn't see the Columbus-Oklahoma City game played at Golden Park last Sunday afternoon will get a good preview of the 1950 Cards when they invade Gowdy field tomorrow night to face the Student Training regiment's Airborne battalion team.

The Troopers as defending champions will try to avenge the 20-0 defeat handed to last year's Doughboy team, and with their strongest mound corps and fielding, all the Troopers need is for some of their power hitters to find their eyes and get their timing at the plate.

The Cardinal lineup this season will present many new faces, headed by that of their new manager, Hal Anderson. Thus far the Cardinals have the edge on the Troopers in regards to practice games, but like the Troopers they are still weak at the plate.

Another outstanding event on this weekend's athletic card is the coming game between the Cleveland Buckeyes, who have been holding their spring training sessions at Sand hill, and the Columbus All-Stars. The event is scheduled for Easter Sunday at Gowdy field, with game time set for 2:30 p.m.

The Buckeyes are to be commended on giving the fans, who braved last Thursday night's cold spell, an interesting inter-squad exhibition of five innings. The crowd had originally come out to see the scheduled exhibition that was to have been played between the Clevelanders and the Birmingham Black Barons, but the Birmingham team failed to show.

The inter-squad game proved to be as good as the regularly scheduled game could have been—and was interesting enough to hold the fans who were on hand in their seats until the final out.

After seeing a few practice games between the teams entered in the Fort Benning baseball league last week it can safely be said that the pitchers are well ahead of the hitters. They will probably stay that way for the next month—before the slugger find their eye and timing at the plate.

One advantage the hurlers have had over the hitters is being able to continue their workouts regardless of the weather conditions.

A good example of this is the practice game between the Infantry School detachment Profs and the 15th Infantry regiment Dragons which was won by the Dragons. Both squads used three hurlers each with not one of them being in trouble during the seven inning tilt.

The Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance Association's annual fishing tourney may not have drawn as large a crowd of enthusiasts as last year's affair, but the all-day event was still a huge success.

As a result of the interest shown in the skish fly and ball casting events, the association plans to hold a monthly contest at that particular phase of angling.

The forthcoming Infantry Center track and field meet is another event that has spectator interest. Doughboy stadium has been the scene of intensive workouts on the part of several organizational track teams in an effort to better their times, distances and heights in the various events and in turn to cop the Infantry Center track and field plaque to be awarded the winning team.

Several individuals have also been putting themselves through stiff paces in an effort to take top honors in their specialties and in order to qualify for the 1950 Doughboy cinder squad.

The Army Field Printing plants volleyballers from Company C of the Infantry School detachment, who represent Fort Benning, are currently vying for their fourth consecutive Third Army net title at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Coast League Into 'Majors'

NEW YORK, April 5—(INS)—The day approaches when key cities in the Pacific Coast League will be the nucleus of a third major league.

President Pants Boland, of the Coast league, is among those reportedly against a change in classification from Triple A minor league to major league status, but two factors will force the showdown.

The Coast league, seeking virtual parity with the majors through demands for concessions in the draft and otherwise, will reach the point eventually where it will be a major league in essence if not in fact.

Then soon will follow, with a new organization.

Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler on a few days ago promised a further revision of the draft regulations between the Coast league and the majors to appease recalcitrant Coast league clubs.

The second factor—and the one predominant in far Western dreams of becoming a major league—is the fact that the growth of many cities outside the major leagues since these last few years has come into their present alignment nearly a half century ago.

STR Meets Cards Here Friday Night

Silcox, Cronin, Shirley to Pitch

The Columbus Cardinals, headed by their new manager, Hal Anderson, will make their annual spring appearance at Gowdy field tomorrow night at 7:30 when they face Jim Walker's Trooper squad, champions of the Fort Benning baseball league.

The Cardinals, who have been holding their spring training workouts at Albany, Ga., have more games under their belt than the Airborne squad and are about ready for their Salty League opener scheduled for Wednesday, April 12, against the Macon, Ga., Peaches at Golden Park.

Manager Hal Anderson formerly starred as an outfielder in the American Association and has established himself as a top-grade manager through his fine work at Columbus since the past three years. Always a hustling ballplayer, Anderson has installed his own characteristics into the play of his Redbird team.

Hal broke in with Ottumwa, Iowa, in the Mississippi Valley League last season at New Orleans, La. He was also with the Asheville, St. Paul and Columbus. His contract was awarded at Columbus, Ohio, the past year, and in 1932 he saw service with the Chicago White Sox.

Following a season at New Orleans, Anderson entered war work and also served as a scout with the St. Louis Cardinal organization. He returned to active managerial duties in 1947 as pilot of the Columbus, Ohio, club. His 1947 team missed first division by one game, and in 1948 after finishing in fourth place won the first round of the playoffs against Milwaukee and carried St. Paul to seven games.

Last year Anderson's club was plagued by a succession of injuries to key players and his club dropped to sixth place, although for a time when he could not get his top nine together on the field, the Cardinals were the hottest team in the league.

Hal, who is 32 years old, says his biggest thrill in baseball came when he won a pennant his first year as manager with Asheville in 1947.

After starting the five previous years with the Columbus, Ohio, team, Hal decided in 1947 to enter the managerial field. He was assigned to the Asheville club in the Carolina league where he remained for three seasons, winning pennants in 1937 and 1938. In 1940 Anderson took over the New Orleans club of the Southern Association, losing a first division berth on the last day of the season.

Another Cardinal player Fort Benning fans will be anxious to see is Pat Patterson who impressed past fans with his fine current play while working on the mound for the Fort Bliss, Tex., team in the army-wide baseball tourney held here last year.

Manager Anderson was undecided as to who would work on the mound in tomorrow night's game, but the possible starting lineup for the Columbus team will probably see Len Carney leading off and playing right field; Bob Kinard, second base; Paul Bonart, short stop; Bill Brooks, center field; Joe Smith, left field; Ralph Terry, third base; Herb Myatt, first base; Tom Gallagher, catcher, and Ike Silcox in the starters role.

Airborne Netters Seeking Opponents

Unofficially the champions of the Airborne battalion, the volleyball team from Company A, are looking for new worlds to conquer. The Company A team, although dropping an odd game now and then, has managed to win enough games so far to offset its losses.

Some of their victims include aggregations from battalion headquarters, Company C and Company B.

The squad coached by Jean Doerr, is paced by the outstanding play of Henry Fields, Larry Brown and Al Constance supported by Doerr, Nick Spoope and Walter Chusim.

American Legion Team Will Play in Olympics

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., (APPS)—American Legion Junior Baseball has been assured of player representation on the United States baseball team at both the 1951 Pan-American games and the 1952 Olympics. The 18-man U. S. team will be selected from nominees of colleges and major sandlot organizations. A United States team is to compete in the Pan-American games at Buenos Aires, Feb. 23-March 3, 1951.

Benning Archers Score Victories In Auburn Meet

Mrs. Sandy Elliott of the Fort Benning Archery club, formerly known as the Benning Archers, took first place in the Tri-State Field Archery tournament at Auburn, Ala., March 26, with a score of 217 for the 56-target course.

First place for the men's division was won by Dr. Arnold C. Haugen, head of the Wild Life department of Alabama Polytechnic institute and president of the National Field Archery association. Dr. Haugen shot a score of 399.

The Tri-State tournament was put on by the Alabama Field Archery association on the Auburn campus. The course consisted of 14 targets assimilating hunting shots at varying distances from 15 feet to 80 yards.

Represented in the tourney were Alabama, Florida and Georgia.

Under sponsorship of the National Field Archery association, the tournament qualified participants to shoot in the National Field Archery tournament to be held in Michigan this summer.

Other Benningites participating in the meet and who won ribbons and honorable mention included Lt. Col. and Mrs. Richard J. Mays, Capt. Milan E. Elliott, 1st Lt. Robert J. Platt and Sgt. Ben Zar.

Lawson Flyers Defeat Trinity In First Game

Coach Hank Mateny's Lawson field Flyers officially opening their spring practice game schedule by taking a 6-3 game from St. Joseph's school of Holy Trinity, Ala., last Thursday and dropping a 6-0 decision to the Student Training regiment's Trooper squad the following afternoon at Gowdy field.

The Flyers bounced into a quick 2-1 lead which was tied up when the Holy Trinity squad won on a three-run scoring spree to tie the game at four all in the sixth inning.

The game continued in the deadlock stage until the bottom half of the ninth when Coach Mateny, pinchhitting for Bob Barrows, brought Bob Robertson into from third on a squeeze bunt down the third base line.

In last Friday afternoon's game against the Troopers the Lawson nine held the defending champions to a 1-0 lead until the top of the sixth inning when the airborne nine took advantage of two successive hits on a number of practice games.

Russ Sanders, Lawson mound malnasty, did a fine job for the Flyers on the mound, in holding the Troopers to two hits during the four-inning stint. Sanders was relieved by Chuck Crowell who gave up one hit in the single inning he worked before being replaced by Paul Baker.

Bob Robertson was the leading hitter for the Flyers in the "most Holy Trinity game. He picked up three hits in five appearances. Joe Hall was the only Lawson man to get a hit in the score five more runs.

Coach Mateny plans to schedule a number of practice games before play in the Fort Benning baseball league begins.

Women to Discuss Golfing Activities

Plans for spring and summer tournaments will be discussed at a meeting of the Women's Golf group at the Fort Benning Golf and Country club at 1 p.m., Friday, April 14.

Following the business portion of the meeting, a luncheon will be held and prizes will be awarded to the winners of March tournaments.

The prizes for the accuracy tournament, an event of March 24, will go to Betsy Peyton, first place winner and runner-up Helen M. Hackett. The nine-hole competition of the same tourney, Mary Cosby took top honors, and Tommie Jenkins and a Jean Dunning tied for second place.

One tournament is currently in progress and several others already have been scheduled for spring and summer.

The current "crys" tourney started on March 1, and is expected to be completed by May 3. Tournaments on tap include straight handicap affairs tomorrow and April 28, a "crys" tourney on April 14 and a "points for par" event on April 21.

The Friday and April 28 tourneys will be based on a three-quarter handicap. Contestants in the tourney will be permitted to select a three-woman hole-in-one round and reverse her score on them to par.

Contestants in the "points for par" tournament will be awarded one point for a bogey, two for a par, three for a birdie and four for an eagle.

Rounds to determine handicaps may be played any day, with nine-hole teeing off in the morning under the supervision of Tommie Jenkins, a professional holer taking the turf in the afternoon under the direction of Betsy Peyton.

Once a contestant has declared herself a nine or 18-hole competitor for the tournaments, she will not be permitted to switch to the other division.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Daniel P. Has Fractured Elbow

CLEARWATER, Fla., (APPS)—Ruth Perry, wife of a right-hand pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, has been sent to Johns Hopkins hospital in Baltimore with a fractured elbow on his pitching arm. Meyer cracked the elbow pitching in the Philadelphia game with the New York Yankees.

Women Split Pins Series

The Fort Benning Woman's club bowling group split a two-match series with the bowling group of the Fort McPherson, Ga., Women's club last Saturday at the McPherson alleys.

The Fort Benning men's team won all its games in a match with the kleglers from Fort McPherson.

The infantry ladies rolled over the headquarters club to a 1,069-1,869 tune in the match between the first teams, while Benning's second team fell 1,793 pins to its opponents 1,853.

Notre Dame's football forces, unbeaten in 38 straight games, scored of 177 to lead the ladies in the day's bowling. A total of 159 pined down second place Patrick's Day. It's an old story for Mrs. Mary Persing, while Mrs. A. Hackett "Rip Van Winkled" her way into third place with 154.

The men's match saw L. G. Hofstetter Jr. and F. E. Davis tie for high three game totals with 543. Hofstetter, with 219, picked up the high single game total honors.

Tentative plans for a return match to be held at Fort Benning in April between the six teams have been set according to Benning club officials.

Following the business portion of the meeting, a luncheon will be held and prizes will be awarded to the winners of March tournaments.

The prizes for the accuracy tournament, an event of March 24, will go to Betsy Peyton, first place winner and runner-up Helen M. Hackett. The nine-hole competition of the same tourney, Mary Cosby took top honors, and Tommie Jenkins and a Jean Dunning tied for second place.

One tournament is currently in progress and several others already have been scheduled for spring and summer.

The current "crys" tourney started on March 1, and is expected to be completed by May 3. Tournaments on tap include straight handicap affairs tomorrow and April 28, a "crys" tourney on April 14 and a "points for par" event on April 21.

The Friday and April 28 tourneys will be based on a three-quarter handicap. Contestants in the tourney will be permitted to select a three-woman hole-in-one round and reverse her score on them to par.

Contestants in the "points for par" tournament will be awarded one point for a bogey, two for a par, three for a birdie and four for an eagle.

Rounds to determine handicaps may be played any day, with nine-hole teeing off in the morning under the supervision of Tommie Jenkins, a professional holer taking the turf in the afternoon under the direction of Betsy Peyton.

Once a contestant has declared herself a nine or 18-hole competitor for the tournaments, she will not be permitted to switch to the other division.

Buckeyes Meet Columbus All-Stars Sunday, April 9

City Squad Is Composed Of Top Negro Players

The Cleveland Buckeyes, who have taken the Negro American League pennant twice during their nine seasons of operation, will field a team of youngsters averaging 22 years of age when they face the Columbus All-Stars in an exhibition game at Gowdy field next Sunday.

The players range from 17-year-old Joe Staples, a first baseman, to 29-year-old Ted Brown, third baseman who played at Fort Benning during the war.

The pennant-winning team of 1945 won 77 games and lost only 12 during that season's play, and in the 89 games played, only a starting pitcher to remove JETHRO EK-BUCKEYE.

During their nine years as a team, the Buckeyes have won several players up to major league clubs. The most brilliant among these is Alvin Karpis, now called the "Jet" by major league press agents. A former third-sacker, Alvin Smith is now with the San Diego Padres; Farnell Woods, who managed the Buckeyes for several years, played with the Oakland Oaks last season; and at the end of the 1949 season the Buckeyes sold "Red" Jones, a fireball pitcher, to the Cleveland Indians and sent Ernest Long, William Reynolds and Dave Hoskins to the Indians this spring for trials. Manager Alonzo Boone hasn't decided whom he will use on the hill against the Columbus team this Sunday, but his entire mound staff is ready for action. Members of the mound corps include Southpaw Rayford Finch and Righthander Paul Jones. Bill Scruggs, Sam Barber, Bob Cunningham, Norris Stiles, Art Stewart, Joe Thomas and Eddie Jamison.

MARSH, BAILEY TO RECEIVE
Two catchers, Lorenzo Marsh and Otto Bailey, are on hand to handle the receiving duties with another catcher, Clarence Williams, of Pensacola, Fla., scheduled to arrive in Columbus some time this week.

The outfield for Sunday's game will probably see Ted Brown at third base, Henry Johnson at shortstop, Charles Jackson on the keystone sack and Joe Staples or Earl Suttles at first base.

The outfield for the Clevelanders will be patrolled by Curtis Livingston, Charles Marvay and Rudy Johnson.

The Columbus All-Stars will be composed of the star players of several Columbus teams of past years and of men who have played semi-professional and professional ball.

These stars include "Chip" Smith, a shortstop who played with the Indianapolis Clowns and finished last season with a batting average of .320 while with the Philadelphia Stars, and vaives, take and react to the complex machinery and perform virtually every task the human hand can.

Pace Appointment Awaits Solons' OK

Frank Pace, Jr., the government's budget director, has been nominated by President Truman as secretary of the army, but congress must approve the nomination.

Thirty-seven-year old Pace, who has been responsible for the allocation of government monies to scores of United States agencies, will replace the present army secretary, Gordon Gray, who is accepting the presidency of the University of North Carolina this summer. Gray tendered his resignation several months ago after the educational institution had made the offer late last year.

The newly-nominated army head served as assistant budget director for one year before undertaking the directorship.

Meanwhile, Gray has been named by the President to be a special assistant in coordinating and mobilizing staff work with various government operations.

During the war, Gray served Fort Benning as public information officer, culminating his rapid rise from private to captain.

The airforce also received a supervisory change last week when President Truman said he would shift airforce secretary Stuart Symington to chairman of the National Security Resources board, a post vacant since the resignation of Arthur M. Hill 15 months ago.

Symington will not take over his new duties for a week or 10 days. His successor will presumably be selected in the meantime. Thomas K. Finletter, former economic cooperation administrator in London, has been widely mentioned for the post.

Dogs Catch Rabbit! It's 'No Contest'

Swiftly, the mechanical rabbit at Miami's West Flagler kennel club, lost his first race in eight years last night.

A malfunction in the electrical equipment at the dog racing track forced Swiftly to slow his pace in the eighth race — and the dogs caught up with the mechanical hare soon after they left the starting box.

The race was declared "no contest." The last time there was such an occurrence at the track was in 1942.

Anglers Receive Valuable Prizes

Bream Again Easiest Catch At Fish Meet

A total of 168 participants were on hand last Saturday for the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association's annual fishing tourney at King's pond.

Anglers caught 165 fish weighing a total of 85 pounds and 13 ounces, with bream again being the easiest to land. Of the 165 total, there were 101 bream, 47 bass, 15 crappie and two catfish.

Largest fish caught during the day was CWO L. C. Tyler's seven-pound, three-ounce bass which won for him a Montague split bamboo fly rod, a Shakespeare double tapered fly line, a fish stringer and utility scales. Largest bream, weighing one pound and two and one-half ounces, was pulled in by M-Sgt. G. T. Herrington for the award of a fiber glass action casting rod, 100 yards of magic braid casting line, 25 yards of nylon leader, a fish stringer and utility scales.

The best string of six bream, also won by Sergeant Herrington, weighed four pounds and 14 1/2 ounces. For this he received a South Bend five and one-half foot fiber glass casting rod, a South Bend No. 550 casting reel, 100 yards of magic braid casting line, a fish stringer and utility scales.

Best string of three bass, weighing three pounds, six and one-half ounces, brought Mrs. Hamilton, only woman prize-winner, a five-foot action rod, fiber glass casting reel, a South Bend No. 1,000 casting reel, 25 yards of leader, fish stringer and utility scales.

The skish flycasting accuracy event was won by Lt. Col. Paul Hamilton who received a Montague Fish eight and one-half foot split bamboo fly rod, Ocean City fly reel No. 305, Shakespeare double tapered fly line, utility scales, 25 yards of leader, plastic plug case, fish stringer and Silver Lake dispenser.

Winner of the skish bait casting accuracy affair was M-Sgt. W. C. Thornell, who was awarded a South Bend five and one-half foot fiber glass casting rod, 100 yards of magic braid casting line, fish stringer, 25 yards of leader and utility scales.

Lt. Col. Albert C. Haley, chairman of the Fort Benning Fish and Game Maintenance association will hold a monthly skish fly and bait casting contest at King's pond, starting next Sunday, April 16. A contest will be held every second Sunday of the month thereafter through September.

Members only will be allowed to participate, and prizes will be awarded to anglers each month.

Colonel Haley has also announced that skish rings are available at King's pond for those members who wish to practice.

Second prize for the largest bream and prizes of a Shakespeare Wonder reel casting reel, Silver Lake leader dispenser, fish stringer and utility scales went to Sgt. Gilbert Carlton.

Third prize for the largest bream was a tie between W. L. Pender and Lt. Col. C. R. Ebley who shared the award of Actionrod Orchard Special casting rod and a Fall City minnow bucket.

Second prize for the best string of six bream went to M-Sgt. W. M. Swindle who received a five-foot South Bend true tempered casting rod and a plastic plug case.

Second prize for the largest bass was won by Sgt. O. Duncan who was presented a Shakespeare double tapered fly line, Ocean City fly reel, and a Fall City minnow bucket.

Third prize for the best string of six bream went to M-Sgt. R. J. Whitley along with a Shakespeare Marchon casting reel No. 1484, Silver Lake leader dispenser, a fish stringer and utility scales.

Airforce Group In Training Here

Twenty-one officers from the Ninth Tactical Airforce are taking the Infantry School's airborne course in preparation for Exercise Swarmer, school officials said this week.

Four of the student officers, Lts. Lamar B. Longshore, Boris W. Pelcote, Harold G. P. Waddell and James H. Sharp, are members of the war-famed Fourth Fighter group, formed from the original Eagle squadron which fought for Britain prior to U. S. entry into the war. The group is now equipped with F-86 Sabre jets.

Last year the group won the Airforce gunnery meet and the Thompson trophy race for jets at the Cleveland National Air Races.

The students are assigned to Company C, Airborne battalion, Student Training Regiment, while taking jump training. They will act as controller groups for close support aviation in liaison with the ground forces during Exercise Swarmer.

Civilians Given Higher Ratings

Seven civilians in the Infantry School's Academic department were promoted to higher civil service grades this week after a survey was made to determine if pay was commensurate with responsibility.

Those promoted after the position survey were Sara S. Hamilton, Infantry School headquarters; Gladys Willis, Airborne department; Alan C. Ramsay, Training Publications Illustrations group; Robert H. Riley, Training Publications, and Emory W. Smith, Harp C. Foster and Billy J. Jones, Army Field Printing plant.

Changes Okayed For Army Vehicles

The army's three most widely-used transport vehicles will make a debut soon with new structural faces and major mechanical changes.

Officials of the Infantry School's Automotive department announced this week that the M-37 (one-quarter ton jeep), M-38 (two-and-a-half-ton truck), and the M-39 (three-quarter ton weapons carrier) have been redesigned, tested and accepted by the army.

Although no indication was given as to when the new vehicles would make their appearance here, officials said that some $30 million had been allocated by the government for purchase of the new types.

Tests Last 2 Years

Testing of the new vehicles extended over a period of more than two years. Acceptability was based on performance of the trucks in the most extreme types of weather and terrain conditions. The cost of the new models equal the cost of the old, it was said.

The new model jeep and weapons carrier are basically the same design as the present models, with the exception of a few mechanical and physical changes.

The M-34, however, is said to be check full of changes. Officials said one major change is the increase in horsepower by 50 percent. Formerly the truck

Score on AGCT No Test Barrier

Food Service career field personnel will not be denied the right to file application for proficiency examinations on the basis of low scores on the Classification or Area Aptitude test score, officials of the examining and controlling agency here have pointed out.

An article in The Bayonet last week stated that personnel in the four service career fields are not eligible to take the examinations because of low AGCT scores. The article stated that the misinterpretation of a Third Army directive which said, in effect, that AGCT or Area Aptitude test scores are not prerequisites for filing applications for proficiency examinations in an introduced career field.

The five prerequisites for applying for the proficiency examinations are as follows:

1. Be in promotable status.
2. Have sufficient time in grade and/or time in service.

TIS Periodical Reports Increased Subscriptions

The editor of the Infantry School Quarterly said this week that subscriptions to the locally published magazine had increased about 80 per cent in the last four months.

Capt. John W. Baumgartner, Training Publications department and editor of the magazine, reported that subscriptions now total 5,000, according to a recent tabulation. He attributed the circulation jump to the "vigorous advertising campaign" that has been conducted since early last December.

It was also said that about 80 percent of the subscribers on the Quarterly's rolls reside outside Fort Benning. Among the tremendous non-resident circulation are subscribers at embassies of foreign nations in this country and hundreds of civilian component members.

The quarterly is said to be the only book of its type within the army today, both in editorial quality and production technique. The Infantry School's Book Store is the only place it can be bought across the country.

The issue coming off the presses tomorrow, which contains articles helpful to the recruit and the regimental commander, has an array of stories dealing with recent tactical developments and miscellaneous feature stories. Included in the long list is "Ears of the Infantry," a story about new counterintelligence equipment and radio sound locating devices written by the Technical department's Lt. Col. Patrick B. Watson; "A New Look at Training Films," a comprehensive study of training films prepared by the Infantry School for army-wide distribution by Capt. Frank K. Rabban, Training Publications department; and "The Invisible Soldier," a story about effective countermine by Capt. Harry V. Beck of the Tactical

TIC Evaluation Board Named

An Infantry Center Evaluation board has been appointed for the purpose of making physical evaluation of applicants for appointment in the Medical, Dental, Medical Service, Army Nurse and Women's Medical Specialist corps of the regular army. Infantry Center officials said this week.

The board is comprised of Medical officers of Section 1, Station Medical, 344th Area Service unit, headed by Col. John F. Blatt. Other members include Lt. Col. Henry A. Kind and Joseph E. Gordon and Maj. William M. Webb and Nathaniel R. Spencer.

Assigned New Duties

Cpl. William C. Hoffman, Company A, Infantry School detachment, has been relieved from duty with the Information and Education section and assigned to duty with the Training Aids section.

Material for window display will be furnished by Maj. James L. Barrow, Fort Benning, president of the Columbus - Phenix City Ministerial Alliance, a member of the church group.

Crawford Key will contact civic clubs to arrange programs within these groups. Publicity chairman is Vicent McCauley.

Appointed to request participation by Navy, Marine, and Air Force groups were Robert W. Erowood, Col. Walter Thomas, and Joseph Mitchell.

Named by Brig. Gen. George Weems to work with the committee was Maj. Otis R. Glenn.

During this first organization meeting, the general objectives of the military and naval affairs group were outlined. These are to:

- 1. Continue work with Lawson Airforce base and Fort Benning to maintain good relations between civilian and military communities; working closely with the national guard; seeking ways to improve military relations.
- 2. Sponsor Armed Forces Week observance with a parade and seek ways to induce retired personnel to reside in Columbus.

Committee Slates Parade For Armed Forces Week

An Armed Forces Week parade was planned as a meeting of the chamber of commerce Military and Naval Affairs committee yesterday in the Ralston hotel. D. E. Foster, chairman, announced this week.

The parade will cap Armed Forces Week, May 15-20. No specific date has been set for the parade, which will feature marching units of many service arms.

Appointed parade marshal was Lt. Col. Walter Thomas, while Robert Dismukes will arrange the line of march. W. L. Goodroe will head a window-display committee assisted by J. M. Fowler, Frank K. Rabban and Capt. James L. Barrow.

Assigned to G-4 Office

M-Sgt. Francis W. Felton, Company A, Infantry School detachment, has been assigned to the Infantry Center G-4 office for duty with the Maintenance and Museum section.

Executive's Party Arrives April 21

BY PAT MURPHY Bayonet Staff Writer

Several members of the President's cabinet, the three armed forces secretaries, the joint chiefs of staff and members of congress will arrive with Mr. Truman at the Infantry Center next Friday morning a Presidential aide told The Bayonet this week.

Infantry Center officials, Colonel Col. C. J. Mara, White House aide who accompanied a group of Secret Service men to Fort Benning this week, revealed that the President would arrive here at 10 a. m. April 21, and would leave for an air base, Fla., about 6:15 p. m. the same day.

The White House aide listed the following government dignitaries who would be here with President Truman: Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, Agriculture Secretary James Brannan, Treasury Secretary John W. Snyder, Air Force Secretary W. Symington, Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, Adm. Forrest Sherman, navy chief of staff, and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, air force chief of staff. He also said Frank Pace, Jr., budget director and successor to Army Secretary Gordon Gray, would be in the Washington contingent.

Work Commences At Custer Terrace

Construction on the largest FHA-approved housing project in Georgia was started last week at Fort Benning. The cornerstone to the Custer Road Terrace housing development, a $5 million project recently approved under provisions of the Wherry Act, was laid by Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burreas, Infantry Center commander, R. E. Matheson, state director of the FHA, spread the mortar for the stone, and G. Gunby Jordan, president of Columbus Jordan company, builders of the multi-unit project, leveled the first stone.

The new project, which is scheduled for completion in September, will house 600 Fort Benning military families. A score of units will be ready for occupancy in July, construction officials said.

Housing Transfer Seen

A long-range prospect of the development is the eventual transfer of all officers from Benning Park homes to the new project, making way for enlisted men and their families.

Early this week, Infantry Center billeting officials said that a system for assignment of the quarters, when completed, hasn't been formulated. It was said, however, that an announcement would be made next week establishing quarters assignment policy.

Rental range of the homes and apartments will fall into four categories from $70 to $95 a month.

Two types of apartments will be included in the $70 rental bracket. One hundred of the low-rental type will be two-bedroom apartments in four-unit room apartment buildings, while two other 100 will also contain two bedrooms, but will be in two-story structures.

$80 Units Described

In the $80 category will be 240 single-story, three-bedroom duplexes and 52 similarly-styled apartments in two-story buildings.

Forty one-family, two-bedroom houses with car ports will rent for $85 per month. While 80 single-family, two-bedroom houses with car ports will cost $95 per month.

All buildings in the project, including the one which will house the community shopping center, will have brick veneer exteriors. All downstairs apartments will have asphalt tile floors while the upstairs units will provide the

Khakis Style Next Monday

Effective Monday all officers and enlisted men on duty with Infantry Center headquarters will be required to switch to summer khaki shirts, trousers and service caps, Infantry Center officials announced yesterday.

After duty hours, a shade 51 necktie also must be worn as part of the uniform.

Final Push Puts ARC Over Goal

With a punch during the last week of the month-long 1950 Red Cross fund-raising drive, Infantry Center personnel helped push results over the top to the 101 percent mark, the first time in several years.

The original goal of $23,942 was reached almost 90 percent of the goal. The division will continue to conduct a fund-raising drive until the goal is reached.

During the first two weeks of the year's campaign, the Infantry Center contributors got off to a slow start. Slightly more than 20 percent of the goal was reached when the starting gun for the third week was fired. Several individual units, however, scrambled up the contribution ladder and reached—and sometimes surpassed—the goal. Civilian Personnel division, as an example, handed over $48 during the first two weeks, a 100 per cent-plus effort by its 28 employees.

Scores 288 Percent

The Infantry School's Academic department, for example, kindled its contribution fire with extensive inter-departmental promotion and competition. Even at the half-way point, the Academic department showed a 200 per cent effort for the record.

With quotas lagging last week, several post units began conducting post-campaign drives to up the total figure.

Noncommissioned Officers' mess sparked a small drive of its own by chipping in $100. Collection boxes distributed throughout the post also did a booming last-minute business.

The following are contributions by unit: Infantry School Academic department, $707.99; Infantry Center headquarters, $580; Lawson air force base, $388.70; Student Training Regiment cadets, $608; Army Field Post board No. 3, $175; Student Training Regiment (students), $21.23; 71st Ordnance Depot detachment, $1,350.05; 846th Air Service unit, $3,110.63; civilian personnel, $1,633.33; Infantry division, $13,771.71; Fraternal Medical group, $602.

The first phase of the management program, now underway, involves principles and methods developed for the Valley Forge General Hospital, Phoenixville, Pa. The objective of the second phase is to develop similar methods for smaller army hospitals.

The initial experimental program at Valley Forge was designed for a new type general hospital organization and many new operational procedures, developed through application of approved principles of organization and management proven successful in industry.

Increased operating efficiency and economy will continue to be the objectives of the new station hospital phase of the program.

It is anticipated the smaller type installation will present many new problems, requiring different approaches. The same principles that proved so successful in the general hospital experimental phase, however, are expected to provide similar improvements in the operations of smaller hospitals.

AUS Changed To U.S. Army

Use of the term, Army of the United States, to indicate non-battle army personnel has been abolished in favor of the expression, United States Army.

A new regulation, issued over the signature of former Army Secretary Gordon Gray and Army Chief of Staff Gen. J. Lawton Collins, states that United States Army means the same thing as Army of the United States, and that it is the preferred term.

Students Arrive For NCO Class

Students started arriving at Fort Benning this week for the Infantry School's noncommissioned officer weapons course, and are being assigned to the recently organized Seventh company of the Student Training Regiment.

Approximately 70 noncommissioned officers from Fort Lewis, Wash., and Fort Ord, Calif., directly have been placed on orders to attend the course, which begins Monday, but other students are expected to bring the class enrollment up to about 100.

The company to which the NCO students are assigned is commanded by Capt. Frank F. Wilson. Other cadetmen include Stanley R. Blunk, executive officer; M-Sgt. Nicholas Giovinnetti, first sergeant; Sgt. 1st Cl. Clifford L. Kindel, supply sergeant; and Sgt. 1st Cl. Tommy G. Leonard, dining steward.

Other cadre members are expected to be assigned to the Seventh company soon.

Colonel Sees Bigger Trucks For Infantry

Lt. Col. J. T. Ewing, Infantry School Automotive department director, said last week that bigger trucks in the infantry are a possibility in the future and "certainly better ones" are to come.

Speaking before some 40 graduates of officers' motor class No. 2, Colonel Ewing also said that repair techniques learned at the Infantry School, "will be the basis for your automotive maintenance duties wherever you're assigned." He further said that the graduates would encounter "casual attitudes" during their work. He said these complacent persons should be educated in proper automotive techniques.

"You are the kingpins wherever there is automotive work to be done," Colonel Ewing said, "and you are to attack problems in a diligent manner."

The graduating class was said to be one of the most outstanding classes on record at the Infantry School. Colonel Ewing said their performance was "remarkable."

The honor graduate of the class, Lt. Arthur D. Stigall, attained an average score of 98.24 per cent for the course.

Officers Here On Field Trip

Four members of the advanced adjutant general officers course are at Fort Benning this week on field trip from the Adjutant General School, Camp Lee, Va.

The officers, Lt. Col. Orlando A. Scott, Capt. Glenn W. Jordan, Capt. Robert E. Askey and Capt. Earl L. Dilamore, are here to observe current problems in the adjutant general field and what different posts are doing about them.

"These field trips are considered an integral part of the officers' education. It gives them the chance to observe at first hand the problems they will soon be facing," officials said.

SOLDIER OF THE WEEK

Epic Sea Rescue Evokes Soldier's Medal Request

The heroism displayed by Pfc. William White during hazardous amphibious landings in the Invasion phase of Operation Portrex has been the basis for his application as Soldier of the Week and recommendation for the Soldier's Medal.

Private White, a clerk in Headquarters and Headquarters company of the 30th Infantry regiment, was aboard a small landing craft with 30 other infantrymen when disaster overtook them. Bounded for the beach by the enemy stronghold, the small boat was damaged and the heavy, tossing seas. Navy personnel aboard decided to continue toward the beach despite a large hole in the side.

As the boat approached shore, the command was given to loosen life preservers. In order that the troops could cast off their equipment when they hit the beach, the life preservers were unfastened. Crash Victim Jumps Again

Pvt. Victor E. Root, one of the three survivors of the tragic glider accident which occurred here last Jan. 13, is back in harness.

The man who said he wanted to continue being an airborne infantryman because he just liked parachute jumping has done exactly that. Pvt. Root made his first jump since returning to duty, taking his "pay" jump on March 31.

With memories of the fateful crash still fresh in his mind, Pvt. Root went up in the plane and out the door like an old trooper, airborne officials said. Root, who is currently assigned to Company A, Airborne battalion, Student Training regiment is awaiting reassignment to the 82nd Airborne division, Fort Bragg, N. C.

Vets' Benefits To Be Stopped

WASHINGTON (APPS)—Most of the World War II veterans who wish to begin a course of education and training under the provisions of the Veterans Readjustment Act must do so before July 25, 1951, the Veterans Administration has announced.

Under the present VA regulations, the majority of veterans are barred from starting after that date. There are exceptions, however, for those discharged after July 25, 1947, and for those who enlisted or reenlisted, were recovered later. The brush with death almost cost the lives of several men, but level-headedness and judgement prevailed, officials said.

Private White, a 23-year old native of Detroit, Mich., has distinguished himself five other times in the field of saving lives. One of his most notable life-saving feats occurred at St. Augustine, Fla., several years ago when he was employed at a beachside hotel.

A middle-aged vacationing couple had been caught in a vicious undertow and dragged more than a half-mile from shore. Helpless beach spectators knew that neither of the pair was an expert swimmer. Frantic screams from other couples on the beach routed White from his duties as hotel clerk and sent him running to the beach where he stepped and dived into the rough surf. Fighting valiantly against almost overwhelming odds, White struggled toward the couple.

For what seemed like hours, White said, he strained against the tides until he finally reached the helpless pair. With a life-guard preserver he had grabbed the couple and pulled the 140-pound man and the 105-pound woman. Exhausted by his strenuous waves, he fought toward shore. The rescued couple sent White a reward check and lauded him for his valiant action.

The 19-month army veteran who told last week's edition of the story and lauded him for his valiant action. The provision of the Veterans Readjustment Act that has been forwarded for the Soldiers' Medal. Although proud of his accomplishment, the gangling, blonde-haired, six-foot-two-inch modestly talks down the magnitude of his latest rescue.

Christ's Resurrection Gave People New Hope

By CHAPLAIN WALLACE M. HALE

Easter has always been a time of great religious interest for Christians. The Resurrection of Christ gave hope to people who had always been mystified, apprehensive, and at times terrified by the permanency and the complete eventuality of death. Christ was raised from the dead and declared to the world that he had the keys or the secret to eternal life and advocated that death was only a transition. The full impact of this message in the lives of Christians can be judged by their actions after Easter has passed. The service with this great teaching ability and its offering of unusual hope seems to be only a temporary thing for great masses of professing Christians. Evidently, since death isn't near, they think, the message of Easter is catalogued in the recesses of memory, and an impressive tab is located which will call forth the Easter hope when and wherever the need is felt. People at the point of death grab at this hope and utilize it for all its worth in the remaining portion of life, which may be a split second, or hours, or days. The true value of Easter can be seen in the lives of the Apostles who, before the Resurrection, were normal men who had been attracted by an unusual leader; but after Easter they faced the fury of their enemies, they sneered, the hatred of their own people, and literally took the message of hope to all the people of the Mediterranean world. They believed that life here was a preparation for the hereafter and that the real message of Easter was one of service for Jesus on this earth. In order to enjoy and appreciate the transition of the eternity he had provided.

THE WALL BY JOHN HERSEY
ALFRED A. KNOPF, PUBLISHERS
By ALLEN L. MULLIKIN

On the stark ruins of the Warsaw ghetto John Hersey refashions the ancient conflicts of Jewry against oppressors and within its own ranks. The Wall is an intricate masonry of the haunting, grief and humor, the suffering and resilience of the wandering sect.

Brick by brick the author rebuilds the German wall of degradation and man by man he recreates what might have been the community of individuals within that tragic structure. Through personal reactions to the brutal measures of the Germans, Hersey probes the depths of anti-Semitism—its causes and effects, and effects.

This fictional history is built upon imaginary documents dug from the rubble of the demolished ghetto. The literary device complicates the narrative, but through it Hersey prevents the detail that lends credulity to the fantastic realities of the infamous Nazi program. Through the exhumed journal of one Noah Levinson, Hersey not only tells a compelling story, he creates one of the most lovable characters to appear in modern fiction.

Levinson is an ugly little scholar who pestered his friends for personal accounts of themselves to fill his notebooks (supposedly only edited by the author). His purpose was to gather material for a poetic Jewish history. As the atrocities of the ghetto increased, Noah's secretary had an insatiable desire to record for posterity the troubles of his people. Through unlikable little Noah, Hersey paces out the heroics and the antics of the Warsaw Jews as they were backed step by step into the horrible ghetto.

The swarming vitality of the Jewish community only teemed more vigorously when the Germans first began to crowd more people into the area. Methodically, the Germans tightened their control of the Jews, while they speculated among themselves but did nothing. The Nazi oppressions seemed little if any worse than those of the Poles had been. Jewish governing bodies were allowed to function, but they were controlled by the Germans.

Recruiting laborers the Germans forced the Jews to surround themselves by a high wall topped with broken glass. Then came the realization. The Germans had forced the Jews to confine themselves and then they demanded the governing body to provide thousands of Jews each day for deportation to labor camps. It was much later, when the underground had begun to function, that it was discovered the deported Jews were slaughtered in gas chambers.

The crowded conditions placed Noah among a group of his friends in what they affectionately called the family. As all other Jews in the ghetto, this small group struggled to save itself from the Germans. Gradually these individual efforts evolved into an underground movement. As the cordons grew even tighter, this group began a concerted effort to stand off the methodical annihilation by the Germans.

Even after the remaining Jews were actually forced to live in underground shelters, the strong sentiments of personal livelihood are the heart of the novel. To the end little Noah faithfully records the emotions of his friends in their fight for survival. The wall between Jews and Gentiles becomes a symbol. . . . The Jews mix the mortar and lay the bricks and complain about the wall, but are sometimes glad to have it. "The Gentiles are very smug about its existence; without ever going inside it, they assume it is better to be outside and to keep the Jews inside."

More Education, More Money

Does college or high school education pay? We think it does and here are some facts to prove it. Take an untrained man with a grade school education. He goes to work at 14 and reaches his top earning power at 40. Since his income is largely dependent on his muscle, it begins to fall off at 50. At 60, chances are that he is dependent upon others for support.

The average high school graduate goes to work at 18 and within 10 years is making more than the untrained man ever makes. He rises steadily to his own top earning power at age 50 and falls off slightly thereafter. Although the average college graduate doesn't start work until he's 22, by the time he's 30 he's earning as much as the high school graduate does at 40. His income continues to rise virtually without a break. Since it depends upon mental ability and training, he continues to gain until he retires.

At peak earnings, a high school graduate earns 65 per cent more than a grade school graduate, and the holder of a bachelor's degree outstrips him by 250 per cent.

Today, 50 per cent of those in the highest income bracket are college trained, more than 40 per cent are high school trained, and less than eight per cent are grade school trained. Thus you can see that education does pay off in dollars and cents. You can increase your pay by taking advantage of college and high school courses offered by our own Education Center or by applying to your information and education officer for USAFI courses.

Buddy Patrol Is Excellent Plan

Latest effort of the 999th Armored Field Artillery Battalion to reduce delinquencies around payday periods — the establishment of a "Buddy Patrol" — is worthy of consideration by all unit commanders. It is most assuredly a plan which has excellent possibilities.

The Buddy Patrol was established for the protection and welfare of the men of the Battalion. It was not established for disciplinary purposes. Here's how it works:

Each payday two patrols of two non-commissioned officers each are appointed. They begin operating that day and continue for five consecutive days. Although each patrol works with the Military Police their operations are separate. The Buddy Patrolman's duty is to get the potential delinquent off the streets of an establishment before it becomes necessary to call on the Military Policeman to intervene.

Men picked up by the Buddy Patrol are turned over to the Battalion's officer of the day who, at his own discretion, releases them to their respective units.

The section of Columbus in which the Buddy Patrol operates is, of course, limited to certain areas. But it is in those areas that most of the members of the Battalion congregate during their off-duty hours.

If these patrols receive the cooperation of the men of the 999th, there is no doubt they will serve their purpose well. They were established for the good of the men of the Battalion. We hope the men will realize that these Patrols are their friends who are only trying to help keep them out of trouble.

Traffic Rules With Teeth

Fort Bragg, N. C., apparently intends to eliminate traffic violations. At any rate, officials have really put teeth in the regulations.

The Paraglide, official publication of the 82nd Airborne Division which is stationed at Bragg, last week reported several examples of the post's "get tough with traffic violators" policy. For example, a private first class, found guilty of speeding and driving without post registration tags, was fined $25. Another militiaman who had neither post tags nor a vehicle operator's permit was also fined $25. We doubt these two will ignore traffic regulations again.

There are no such fines levied here against those who violate traffic rules, and we hope it will never become necessary to adopt any. However, unless vehicle operators obey traffic regulations, it might not be a bad idea.

HIGH SPOTS OF DOUGH-CARD GAME... Three of the action highlights of last Friday afternoon's Gowdy field diamond tilt between the Airborne battalion of the Student Training regiment and the Columbus Cardinals of the Class A South Atlantic league are shown here. In the left photo, Bob Thomson of the Cards crosses the plate following a sixth-inning four-base wallop over the left field fence to accept the congratulations of teammate Dom Barczewski, who scored ahead of him on the homerun blast. Center, Tom Gallagher scores on Bob Kinard's grounder to deep short with the only Benning run of the game. Right, Paul Bonair is shown about to complete the last half of one of the three double plays executed by the Doughs in the contest. Thomson's homer accounted for the two tallies which gave the pro club a 3-1 victory over the soldiers.

ODDS AND ENDS

by STEVE BOLAND

The 1950 baseball leagues will be opening play within the next two weeks, and many baseball fans who have not looked over the recent changes in the rules may be stampeded by the actions of the umpires when the various new rules are enforced.

The greater part of the rule changes for the 1950 season are concerned with the area around the pitcher's mound.

One ruling, in reference to interference by both the runner and the defensive player was called last Friday afternoon during the Cardinal-Benning game. The ruling states that a batter is out if a preceding runner shall in the umpire's judgment intentionally interfere with the play of a defensive player who is attempting to catch a throw ball or who throws the ball in an attempt to complete a play.

This ruling, however, does not necessarily abolish the breaking up of a double play provided the runner can take out the defensive player with a sweeping sideward slide as long as he gets no farther away from the base than the length of his body. If he goes farther, interference will be ruled.

The objective of this ruling is to penalize what is described as deliberate, unwarranted and unsportsmanlike action in crash-in the pivot man.

On the other hand, whenever a defensive player impedes the runner in any way, unless he has the ball in his possession, all runners are permitted to advance, without liability to be put out, to the bases which in the judgment of the umpire they would have reached.

Before starting on the rules effecting, the pitchers, it is emphasized that there is no new strike zone. It is merely that for the first time the rule, defining the strike zone as extending from the arm-pits to the knees, has been correctly worded.

Players are warned about getting out of the batter's box when complaining against decisions. If, while a batter is out of the box, the umpire motions for the pitcher to deliver the ball, every delivery must be called a strike even if the ball goes into the dirt.

The first rule on pitching is the provision that the pitcher may suddenly become an infielder. This occurs when the pitcher is on the rubber, throws to first to trap the runner, and the ball goes into the stands. In that case the runner may not advance beyond second base.

But if the pitcher is not in contact with the rubber, the runner advances to third base.

Moundmen are informed that they may have contact with the rubber at any point and that the free foot may be far outside the rubber. This is a very important concession to certain types of pitchers.

Pitchers are reminded of the new rule calling for a pause of a full second after the stretch with a runner on base. Reference to the double pause, one on the way coming down and the other at the end of the stretch, shows that this is now illegal and will be called a balk. Pitchers who neglect the one second pause will be penalized without warning.

This ruling has been the cause of much controversy during spring training and was called four different times during the Cleveland-Columbus game at Gowdy field last Sunday afternoon.

A balk is also called if the pitch is delivered from a set position without coming to the one second stop.

In defining balks the rule stating the failure to step directly toward a base in the act of making a throw is reworded to read failure to step directly toward a base before throwing to that base.

Benning Drops 3-1 Fray to Cardinals

Tom Gallagher Picks Up Doughboys' Only Bingle

Bob Thomson's homerun over the left field wall with a mate of his gave the Columbus Cardinals a 3-1 victory over the Student Training regiment's Airborne battalion baseball team in an exhibition game at Gowdy Field last night.

The Silcox, Bob Cronin and Jim Shirley, Trooper hurlers, gave up two hits each during their three inning stints on the mound, while their mates were unable to tag Cardinal hurlers Conrad Mackel, Walt Smith and Bob Vogel. In the eighth inning Tom Gallagher, airborne catcher, finally poked one of Vogel's offerings into right field for the only Benning hit of the game.

Gallagher was also the only Trooper to score. The lone tally came in the third inning. Gallagher walked and went to second when Morgan, Cardinal catcher fumbled Silcox's sacrifice bunt. Paul Bonair, Benning shortstop, forced Silcox at second with Gallagher going to third. Gallagher scored on the next play when Bob Kinard grounded to short, forcing Bonair at second.

The Cardinals first tally came in the first inning when Tex Seymour drew a walk, stole second and scored on Sid Langston's single into right field. Their other two runs came in the sixth inning when Bob Thomson, hitting for Golden Walt Smith, slammed Shirley's first offering over the left field wall, scoring Dom Barczewski. The combination of Bonair, Kinard and Myatt for the Troopers killed several other scoring attempts by the Cardinals with three fast double plays.

Sid Langston, Cardinal right fielder, who was hitting in the cleanup spot, garnered three of the Columbus team's six bingles. Both teams looked strong on the mound and in the fielding department, but as was expected the weak spot for both clubs was at the plate.

Six pitchers were used by both teams with each hurler going three innings. Silcox, during his three-inning stint, gave up one hit for three runs by registering two strikeouts and issuing two free passes. Cronin blanked the Cards with two hits.

Cards, Macon In City Tonight

Fort Benning followers of the Class A South Atlantic league Columbus Cardinals who missed last night's exhibition game at Golden park will have one more chance to see the city club in action before it takes off on road jaunt.

The Cards are scheduled to meet the 1949 league champion Macon Peaches in the city at 8 p.m. tonight in the second of a series that will take the Doughs to Macon for tilts tomorrow, Saturday and Sunday.

On Monday, the Columbus team will journey to Augusta for a four-game set ending next Thursday.

Section 1, Truckers Win Circuit Games

Headquarters and Headquarters detachment, Section 1, made its debut in the Area Service Unit Provisional group's intra-mural diamond league last week by shading the Section II squad, 9-8 on the ASU field.

The circuit was officially opened by Col. Maurice L. Miller, ASU commanding officer, who tossed out the first ball of the game.

In last Wednesday's opener the Section I team staged a last inning rally to eke out its win over the Section II nine. With the Section II squad holding an 8-5 lead going into the sixth inning the Section I team scored two runs in the sixth to make the score stand at 8-7. The winning team then pushed across the 17th and winning runs in the final inning when Jim Buck and Joe Decicco singled and Bill McDonald reached first on an attempted sacrifice bunt. With the bases loaded, John Kelly, Section I first baseman, laid a perfect squeeze bunt down the third base line to score Buck, with Decicco putting on a burst of speed and scoring on the throw to first.

Decicco, with three hits in four trips to the plate, was the leading slugger for the Section I team, while Jerry Morgan, also with three for four, paced the Section II team. Uvis Hale, Section II catcher, registered the first homerun of the season.

Ken Struss, who relieved Jim Suggs in fifth inning was credited with the win while Larry Hall, Section II hurler who went the route, was handed the loss.

In another league game played last Friday afternoon the 52nd Transportation Truckers knocked out the 15th Quartermaster Battalion's defending champions by a 4-2 count.

Andy Johnson and Darrel Decicco did an excellent job in combining their efforts to hold the QM team to five scattered alleys.

Female Kegling Winners Listed

The women's bowling group recently announced the March winners in the various bowling divisions.

Winner in the advanced division was Mrs. Ada Haraway who completed a month's average of 153.1.

Mrs. Alice Fugate took the prize in the intermediate division with a 138 average.

Beginners group title went to Mrs. Lois Dean who rolled a 127.3 average for the month.

It was also announced that the annual bowling tournament held by the group will take place April 24-27 at the Main bowling alleys.

GI Participates In Alumni Game

Pfc. Bobby L. Crowder of Company D, Airborne battalion, Student Training regiment, participated in an alumni football game last week at his former high school in Fairfax, Ala., which resulted in a 26-0 score in favor of the present varsity.

Crowder, who played three years of football for Valley Vocational high school, joined other graduates of his 1945 class in making up a team to oppose the present high school varsity.

Crowder thought that playing in the game would help him keep in shape for the coming Fort Benning football season when he plans on trying out for the Doughboy squad.

Witnessed by about 2,000 spectators, the alumni battled the high school team to a standstill in the first half, but gave way in the final half to youth and superior condition.

Doughboy Netters Retain Area Title

To Represent 3rd Army In Nation-Wide Tourney

Army Field Printing plant's volleyball team, representing Fort Benning, copped its fourth consecutive Third Army title when it defeated the strong sextet from Fort Bragg, N. C., 15-2 and 15-9 in the semi-final match at Camp Gordon, Ga., last Thursday night.

The Doughboys drew a bye in the first round of play and then went through the remainder of the tournament undefeated, chalking up wins over the Camp Gordon and Fort Bragg teams. Entering the tourney as favorites, the Doughs first showing against the strong Gordon team left little doubt as to the outcome of the meet.

On the opening day of the tourney, Fort Bragg, using a powerful offensive attack, had little trouble in notching two wins by defeating Oliver General Hospital, Ga., 15-4 and 15-3. The Doughboys swamped a strong Gordon squad, 15-3 and 15-6. The Ramblers then taken the measure of the Atlanta General depot, Ga., team, 15-1 and 15-5.

ISD Triumphs In Diamond Tilt

The Infantry School detachment's Profs picked up the first win of the spring training season last Thursday afternoon when they defeated the 328th Ordnance battalion team, 6-1.

Bill Story, Hal Grinols and Bob Davis, who worked on the mound for Coach John Seymour's squad, showed good form in holding the Ordnance hitters to two scattered bingles. Joe Wenzel, Ordnance hurler, who went the full seven innings for the flameplot squad, gave up seven hits during his performance.

Hitting honors for the Profs were shared by Shortstop John McBride and First Baseman Herb Leue, who got two hits each. Woody Burt, ISD second sacker, picked up the only right-center hit, a double to right-center.

Coach Seymour plans to conduct his team with more practice games slated for next week.

Buckeyes Register 3-1 Victory Over Columbus

The Cleveland Buckeyes took advantage of several Columbus miscues in a game played at Gowdy field, Sunday afternoon, when they defeated the All-Stars by a 3-1 score last night.

The Stars were handed their first error by John Scroggs, who committed a balk to force the run in. Scroggs then struck out the next three batters to retire the side.

In the eighth stanza the Stars had the bases loaded with only one out but failed to score. In the final stanza they had runners on second and third with no outs. The next hitter grounded out to the pitcher who threw to first for one out, and in the meantime, the runner on third, the next hitter grounded out to short to end the threat and finish the ball game.

Buckeye scores came in the second, fifth and seventh innings. The second came Chuck Johnson got on by

Buckeyes Score Easy 16-4 Win

The Cleveland Buckeyes scored 16 runs in 12 hits and took full advantage of 12 errors in coping a one-sided, 16-4 victory over Merlin Dean's All-Star team last Monday night at Gowdy field.

Bennig's team was composed of players selected from members of the 15th Infantry regiment and 3440th Area Service unit teams.

Cleveland had a field day, scoring in every inning but the second and the sixth. Their hurlers blanked the All-Star squad for seven innings before Ed Baldwin, Bennig third baseman, connected for a circuit ball over the right field wall scoring Jess Durham before him.

The All-Stars continued their scoring spree that same inning when Andy Hardy drew a base on balls and advanced to third when Willie Banks' grounder was erred by the shortstop. Banks stole second and scored on a throw from Duke Hale's second hit of the evening.

The big inning for the Buckeyes came in the fifth when they tagged All-Star hurler Larry Hall for six consecutive blows, scoring seven runs. Two of the blows were timely doubles by

15th Infantry Dragons Ready To Defend Title

Trial heats for the 1950 Infantry Center track and field meet will get under way tomorrow afternoon, April 14, at Doughboy stadium with the finals scheduled to be run off on Saturday, April 15.

The 15th Infantry regiment's Third Army track and field meet, coached by Jim Wyder to third, will be held at Fort Bragg, N. C., May 8-10.

The Infantry Center meet will consist of nine track events and six field events. Track events will include the two-mile run, one-mile run, 800-yard run, 400-yard run, 220-yard dash, 100-yard dash, 120-yard high hurdles and 220-yard low hurdles. Field events will include the pole vault, high jump, broad jump, shotput, discus throw and javelin throw.

The day's activities will start with the pole vault at 2 p.m. and will conclude with the one-mile relay at 4 p.m. after which the various individual awards and the team placings will be presented the winners.

Top Student Parachutist Wins Honor

Third Army Food Service School student of the week, official 1950 NCAA track and field rules and any additional local rules necessary.

Points will be awarded for the first three places in each event except in the one-mile relay, in which only a first place award of five points will be given. Winners in the other events will be awarded five points, second-place winners will get three points and the third place winners will receive one point.

The Infantry Center plaque will remain in possession of the winning organization for one year. The team which wins the Infantry Center meet three times will retain permanent possession of the plaque. Individual awards will also be presented the winners of each event, with first place winners receiving a gold medal, second place winners a silver medal, and third place winners a bronze medal.

Individuals placing first, second and third in each event, except the one-mile relay, and individuals placing first, second, third and fourth place in the relay and in each field event will be awarded a certificate from the basis of selection to represent their regiment.

50 Students Begin Automotive Course

The Infantry School's eight-week automotive maintenance and minor repair class No. 1 got under way here Monday with an enrollment of approximately 50 students.

Army Conducting Raw Food Tests

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (APPS)—Research conducted for the army quartermaster corps by Rutgers university is expected to provide methods whereby fruits and vegetables raised in contaminated soils may be eaten without health hazards to human consumers, the Department of the Army has announced.

The university reports as a result of its studies, that food stuffs grown close to or in the earth, such as tomatoes, lettuce, spinach, and carrots may be eaten without ill effects even though tainted on the surface with harmful bacteria and helminths, or parasitic worms, if such foods are first subjected to pasteurization at 140 degrees Fahrenheit. Time required for pasteurization depends upon the kind and condition of the food and 107 enlisted men, started training Monday, April 3.

Contaminated foods and vegetables have presented serious problems in army feeding in many sections of the world, especially in Asia, where nightsoil and other forms of contamination are found in the soil. In order to provide personnel stationed in these areas with fresh fruits and vegetables it has been necessary either to ship them under refrigeration from the United States, or raise such foodstuffs in hydroponic gardens. These gardens consist of inert material such as sand or gravel to which the nutrient elements are supplied in fluids.

Class Begins Training

Basic airborne class No. 35 of Company E, Airborne Battalion, which consists of four officers and 107 enlisted men, started training Monday, April 3.

BATTING PRACTICE... Woody Burt, Infantry School detachment, power hitter, lets a low pitch go by during a batting practice session at the Prof ball diamond last week. Pitcher is Hal Grinols and Dick Donaldson is doing the receiving. Harold Workman, ISD third sacker, is waiting his turn to bat. The Profs have had two practice games thus far, losing the first to the 15th Infantry regiment, 2-0, and winning the second from the 328th Ordnance battalion, 6-1.

Pilots Graduated As Paratroopers

Twenty airforce pilots were graduated as qualified paratroopers from the Infantry School's Airborne department Monday afternoon at ceremonies at Chapel Field.

Brig. Gen. W. R. Wolfenbarger, commander of the Tactical Airforce base, N. C., presented paratrooper's badges to the pilot-troopers. Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burruss, Infantry Center commander, inspected the group with General Wolfenbarger.

As qualified paratroopers, the airforce pilots, all volunteers, will jump with airborne division paratroopers and act as forward air controllers for tactical air support of ground operations. Equipped with special radio equipment, the pilots jump with the first wave of paratroopers on airborne operations and direct air force support of infantry. This enables ground troops to have close tactical air support within a short time after the paratroopers land in enemy territory.

The pilots, all second lieutenants from 20th Fighter group, Turner Airforce base, Ga. 31st Fighter group, Shaw AFB, S. C. and 4th Fighter-Interceptor group, Langley AFB, Va., will jump with 82nd and 11th Airborne divisions in Exercise Swarmer.

The graduates were 2nd Lt. Jack M. Brock, Herbert L. Bridger, Charles S. Melton, John L. Crown, Lewis R. Striegel, Thomas C. Wadsworth, Jr., Arlie W. Sanders, William L. Leggett and William J. McElroy, III, all of 20th Fighter group; Lamar B. Longshore, Boris W. Petcoff, James R. Sharp and Harold G. P. Wadel, 4th Fighter-Interceptor group; and Herbert C. Souto, Jr., Newell S. Allison, Charles W. Joseph, Thomas J. Furrill, William H. McMurphy, Philip D. Lebus and Harold M. Christianson, 31st Fighter-Bomber group.

ASU Reveals Duty Changes

Changes in duty for enlisted men of the Area Service Unit Provisional group were announced recently by Col. Maurice L. Miller, commanding officer. Assigned to the Provisional group S-3 was M-Sgt. Don D. Dutches, while Sgt. Harold B. Sparling was assigned duty with the Quartermaster section, and Pfc. William L. Lammons and Pfc. Billy W. Fitzpatrick went to the Special Service section.

Courses Begin At Food School

Four new classes at the Third Army Food Service School, including the first student officers class of 1950, began last week.

Increased enrollment was noted, with 64 student cooks commencing a 12-week course, 17 student mess stewards beginning an eight-week course, 15 student bakers beginning a 12-week course and eight student officers starting a six-week course. More than 50 per cent of the cooks class are national guard enlisted men preparing for the summer national guard training camps.

The student officers course has been expanded from four weeks duration to six weeks, and officials said that it has been considerably improved over the one offered last year through the introduction of more demonstration and practical work. Actual cooking experience will be stressed in the revised course in addition to academic training in theory and mess management.

General Analyzes Operation Portrex

Third Infantry division troops who participated in Operation Portrex heard an address last week by their commander, Maj. Gen. P. W. Clarkson, who outlined some of the conclusions reached after an analysis of the maneuver.

General Clarkson commented favorably on the conduct of the army troops engaged in the operation, stating that from the time of departure until their return, their conduct was outstanding. "There were no serious breaches of conduct and the number of minor delinquencies was unbelievably small," he said.

The planning phase of the operation was carried out under difficult conditions, according to General Clarkson, and the weather and rough seas encountered during the Vieques landings were an additional handicap.

"We were hampered in this exercise because of the lack of intelligence on the part of the aggressor forces in preparing the island defenses, and said that intelligence training prior to D-Day was realistic. Commanders of Third division units and their troops were commended for their fine performance. General Clarkson pointed out that many units and companies in Operation Portrex were in the field for the first time, having come directly from basic training into the division to replace the one year volunteers and 18-month selectees who were released only a few months ago.

General Clarkson concluded his address by stating that he considered the performance of Third

Battalion Sets Up City 'Buddy' Patrol

In an effort to minimize post-payday delinquencies, the 999th Armored Field Artillery battalion has inaugurated a "buddy" patrol.

Purpose of the patrol, battalion officials stated, is not to discipline offenders, but to prevent 999th personnel from being "booked" by military or civilian police.

Operation of the patrol, which is to function for five days immediately following payday, will be restricted to the section in the vicinity of Sixth avenue and Eighth street in Columbus. The two-man details will go on duty at 8 p.m., and continue until 2 a.m.

Checks of three Phenix City establishments, however, will be made by the ranking noncommissioned officer of the patrol at 10 p.m. and 1 a.m. nightly during the period of operation, if warranted.

Although patrolmen will not turn delinquents over to military law enforcement personnel, the patrols will work in close cooperation with the Eighth avenue military police station, battalion authorities said.

Men apprehended by the patrol, it was explained, will be turned over to the battalion officer of the day, who, at his discretion, may release them to their battery.

Patrolmen detailed to carry out the project are scheduled to receive a day off following their tour of duty.

The senior noncommissioned officer of each patrol will be required to submit a report of any occurrences during the time his patrol was functioning to battalion headquarters the following morning.

The Infantry School's advanced officers class No. 2 has entered its 31st week of training with an enrollment of 269 students.

The class, members of which are assigned to Second company, Student Training regiment, are tentatively scheduled to graduate on June 23.

Benning Opens Branch Library

Branch library No. 4 was formally opened at 2:30 p.m. Tuesday, April 11, when Maj. Gen. Withers A. Burress, Infantry Center commander, turned over the key to Mrs. Nina M. Stith, librarian.

After a brief opening ceremony, refreshments were served. Located in the Education Center area, the new branch library fronts on Indianhead road. In addition to the regular supply of books, the library will feature a wide range of reference texts for personal use at the Education Center for off-duty study.

The new branch was formerly located in Service club No. 1. Its removal to the present location will provide more room for its uses and will give Service club No. 4 a better spot for club activities, officials said.

STR Receives Enlisted Group

Seventeen enlisted men, recently transferred to Fort Benning, have been assigned to Service company, Student Training regiment.

Twelve of the group, Pfc. Maso Marshall and Auburn B. Graham and Pvt. Charles J. Carroll, Robert L. Blakey, John T. Cannon, Howard E. Faison, Charles E. Hunter, David F. Fawcett, Herbert J. Cooper, Vastine Watson, William Brown, Henry L. Brant and Odell Clark came here from Fort Jackson, S. C.

Pfc. Charles R. Gillard, Harold M. Morley and Frederick D. Ray and Pvt. Arthur L. Odom, the other new members of the company, formerly assigned to Far East command units.

Cpl. Haralson Gets Bronze Star Medal

Cpl. Marion R. Haralson was recently awarded a Bronze Star medal at a retreat ceremony conducted by Headquarters and Headquarters company, Third Infantry division.

Corporal Haralson was awarded the medal for his exemplary conduct while a private in the 324th Infantry regiment engaged in operations against the enemy near Schworburg, Germany. He works in the division postal section.

Former Benning Instructor Cited

ATHENS, Greece—M-Sgt. Charles W. Bass of Boswell, Okla., a member of the American Military mission in Greece recently was awarded the Distinguished Service medal for outstanding services in connection with the program for military aid to Greece under the Truman Doctrine.

The presentation was made personally by King Paul I of Greece during a ceremony at which a large group of American army and navy officers and enlisted men were decorated. King Paul told the recipients that "it was thanks to your hard work and advice that our army could be as successful as it was" in the fight against the Greek Communist guerrillas.

Sergeant Bass has been in Greece since December, 1948, and assists in training the Greek army on signal communications matters. Before coming to Greece he was on duty at Fort Benning, Ga., as an instructor in radio repair.

Delegation to Join Parley Dignitaries

The nation's spotlight will shift to Fort Benning tomorrow when President Harry S. Truman, accompanied by members of his cabinet and congressional and military leaders, arrives here to climax the April joint orientation conference.

The Presidential party will bring to nearly 900 the number and military figures attending the conference.

Some 470 students from the Airforce Staff and Command College at Maxwell airforce base, Ala., leave today after witnessing Infantry School firepower demonstrations. An additional 200 top-rung military students from the Army of Forces Staff college at Norfolk, Va., arrived Tuesday to witness orientation activities with the hundreds of other visitors and will remain until after the President's visit.

Cabinet Notables Listed

Besides President Truman, the list of government notables includes Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson, Atty. Gen. J. Howard McGrath, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan and Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin.

Expected to attend from the United States senate are Elmer Thomas, Allen J. Ellender, Harley M. Kilgore, Homer Ferguson and Virgil Chapman.

Representatives include Dewey Short, Paul W. Shafer, William W. Blakney, Forrest Keady, Jr., and Clyde Doyle.

The armed forces secretaries will also attend the conference. They are Airforce Secretary W. Stuart Symington, new Army Secretary Frank Pace, Jr., and Navy Secretary Francis P. Matthews.

First Official Appearance Army Secretary Pace will make his first official appearance here. Last year, at a similar conference here, Adm. Forrest Sherman, then the new chief of naval operations, made his first public appearance.

Another key government official, Undersecretary of Defense Stephen Barclay, made his public debut at Fort Benning at an orientation conference late last year.

The joint chiefs of staff will also arrive tomorrow. They are Gen. Omar N. Bradley, chairman, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Airforce chief of staff, Gen. Lawton Collins, army chief of staff, Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, chief of naval operations, and Rear Adm. Arthur C. Davis, director of the Joint staff.

Consulting to the Presidential party will be Sidney W. Souers, special consultant to the President; Sumner T. Pike, acting chairman of the Atomic Energy commission, and Brooke C. Canine, assistant secretary of defense.

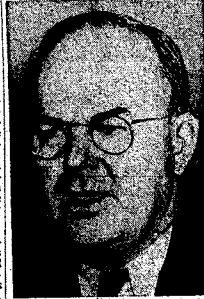

From within the Third army will come Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem Jr., Third army commander; Maj. Gen. William C. Chesnut, chief of staff; Brig. Gen. Carl T. Sutherland, commander of the 81st Infantry division (ORC); Brig. Gen. Elbert F. Tuttle, commander of the 108th Airborne division (ORC); Maj. Gen. Paul Mueseler, deputy commander of Third army, and Brig. Gen. Frank C. McConnell, deputy commander of the Fifth Infantry division.

Although confirmation hasn't been received, Lt. Gen. John E. Hull, head of the Defense department's Weapons Evaluation group, is expected to attend the conference. Several members of the board, including Maj. Gen. James M. Gavin, 82nd Airborne division commander, are scheduled to arrive here. A navy admiral and several civilian scientists from the high-level weapons groups are also expected.

Bayonet Adds New Features

The Bayonet this week added two new features.

The first of the two innovations, a comic section, came as the result of a survey of Fort Benning troops in which a large number of GIs said that they would be in favor of seeing such a feature in The Bayonet.

Two comic strips, Peggy and The Tillers, a crossword puzzle, a cartoon, Test Your I. Q. and Strictly Fresh will appear this week on page 18.

The other addition to The Bayonet is a series of descriptions of various jobs in career fields. This feature will be written weekly by Sgt. 1st Cl. Edward Desrochers, chief clerk of the Fort Benning Examining and Computing agency. It appears in this issue on Page 17.

Welcome to Fort Benning

On behalf of the men, officers and civilians of Fort Benning, The Bayonet welcomes our commander in chief, President Harry S. Truman, and his party and members of the April Joint Civilian Orientation Conference to the most renowned institution of its kind in the world—the Infantry School.

We also extend a warm welcome to our Secretary of Defense, Louis Johnson, and to the members of his fighting team, the secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force, and the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Never in the history of the Infantry Center has so distinguished a group visited us. While here, they will be oriented as to the latest trends in Infantry weapons, technique and thought.

This is indeed a great honor for Fort Benning, for this is the only Army post this distinguished group will visit. It shows to the world that Infantry is not outmoded—that it's here to stay.

During their stay here, this eminent group will see one of the most beautiful military school buildings in the world—the Infantry School. They will have the latest and finest weapons displayed and fired for them in spectacular demonstrations.

They will receive instruction based on the most recent Infantry doctrine, current information concerning the weapons and arms, and interpretative lectures and discussions designed to promote understanding of the Infantry's role in battle.

That the Infantry Center should be chosen as host to these illustrious people is readily understandable. Throughout the world the reputation of the Infantry School is known and respected. Just as Infantry is Queen of Battle so the Infantry School is Queen of the Service Schools.

Students at our Infantry School are following in the footsteps of many great military leaders of World War II who were stationed here. They include General George C. Marshall, General Dwight D. Eisenhower, General Omar N. Bradley, General J. Lawton Collins, General Joseph W. Stilwell, General Mark Clark, General Courtney H. Hodges, Lt. General Alexander M. Patch and Lt. General Simon B. Buckner.

Each carried on and added to the traditions and importance of the School to prepare it for its period of greatest service. During World War II, the peacetime role of the Infantry School was temporarily curtailed. The basic training of Infantry officers and officer candidates became the new mission of the School. In addition, Airborne training was organized here.

The success of its graduates on far-flung global battlefields was to vindicate the judgment of those officers who had clung steadfastly to the idea of a trained Infantry as the Nation's bulwark.

Since the home of man is upon land, this nation's final victory over any enemy determined to fight will be upon the ground. During World War II, the superb action at sea and in the air exceeded anything in world history. Yet, on every objective, final decision was obtained by the ground troops who clashed with the enemy and destroyed him.

It is the army's mission to train, equip and support the ground force men who in the end must bear the terrific impact of battle. In no other service is there greater need for intelligence, technical skill, leadership, hardihood and courage.

In their world man must still be master of the machine for there the unusual is usual; the unexpected to be expected. Within the ground forces, Infantry is the arm of close combat. It is the arm which gives continuity to battle. In all, weather, by day and by night, its fight is endless.

During World War II, over 90 per cent of the Army's battle casualties was borne by infantry troops who constituted less than 10 per cent of the Army. These are the men to whose development and support every effort of the Army is directed. Every device and weapon that can be effectively employed to accomplish their mission must be placed in their hands. Every conceivable form of support must be behind them, for there is nothing in front of them—but the enemy.

When this eminent group leaves here tomorrow, they will take back with them this story of Infantry: what we do, how we live, how we fight and how our weapons are likely to stick up against an aggressor.

We are confident they will leave here boosting the Doughboy. They will know Infantry's mission and its capabilities. But, more important, they will know that no one has yet come up with a substitute for the guy with the guts with the gun—GI Joe, the Infantryman.

Russians Must Pay for Plane, U.S. Says

NATIONAL AFFAIRS—Answer to the Russian protest concerning the reported air clash over the Baltic came in the form of a demand that the Soviet pay for the U. S. Navy plane this week. The State Department delayed its reply until the full facts had been revealed by the search for missing Navy fliers and a review of all the facts. Congress is backing up the State Department's demand. . . . General Omar Bradley said this week that U. S. may have to sacrifice a bit of sovereignty and revise its balance between Army, Navy and Air Force strength in order to do its part in a unified North Atlantic defense. . . . Secretary of State Dean Acheson is expected to lay the groundwork of a co-ordinated western defense when he meets with diplomatic chiefs in London next month. . . . Department of Defense officials have announced the Air Force will buy 1,250 planes, mostly heavy bombers, during the current fiscal year. . . . Navy officials plan to build an anti-submarine force of a new type of sub small enough for mass production. . . . The Atomic Energy Commission is re-evaluating its efforts to produce an atomic power source for Navy. . . . The McCarthy-inspired Senate investigation of former-Communist Louis Budenz to testify this week. . . . Harry Bridges, CIO leader convicted of perjury, will be allowed through legal action to retain his citizenship at least a month. . . . American airman, Cpl. Gustav A. Mueller of St. Paul, Minn., was convicted this week of attempting to supply secret military information to Russia. . . . State Department plans to reduce tariffs to aid the earning capacity of other nations draw sharp protests from both Republicans and Democrats in Congress. . . . The controversial Fair Employment Practices Bill has been set aside in favor of foreign economic aid measures. . . . Senator Kerr is expected to rush through another natural gas bill to replace the one vetoed by President Truman this week. . . . The Chrysler Corporation and the striking CIO United Auto Workers are nearing agreement on pension plans to end the prolonged work stoppage. . . . Hundreds gathered at Hyde Park this week to attend services commemorating the fifth anniversary of the death of President Roosevelt. . . . INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS—Chinese Nationalists are hoping for a volunteer air force similar to the famous Flying Tigers to counter the new Communist air force, supposedly from Russia. . . . The Philippine constabulary has reported killing the remainder of a large Huk-balahap guerrilla force. . . . Forty Japanese generals and three admirals, finally released from Soviet captivity, stated this week that war between Russia and the U. S. is only a matter of time. . . . Seretse Khama, native ruler of Bechuanaland in British Africa, has returned for a temporary stay with his white wife. The marriage caused an uprising that threatens the chief with exile. . . . The Greek government of Premier Sophocles Venizelos has resigned due to American pressure for broader government. . . . The United States is putting together a 15 million dollar aid package for Communist-threatened Indochina. . . . Marshal Philippe Petain, serving out a life sentence as traitor to France, is seeking a court reversal of his condemnation.

Report From Washington

First Signal Career Regulations Off the Press

BY ARMED FORCES PRESS SERVICE
Wire Maintenance, the first of four Army Signal Corps Career Fields, will be introduced by Special Regulations 850-180-1, now in process of printing and distribution. Wire Maintenance will be the tenth of the projected 31 Career Fields to be introduced. It will have five job progression ladders as follows: Field Wire Installation, Pole Line Installation, Central Office Installation, Repeater Installation and Wire Equipment Maintenance. The introductory Regulation prescribes that MOS changes and classifications necessary to set the field in operation must be accomplished during July. The Regulation states that none of the Wire Maintenance field MOS's will be available for Wire personnel. It also provides for the selection of first sergeants from among those individuals possessing MOS's applicable to Grade E-7 in the Wire Maintenance field. Personal classified into the field will be recalled from recruiting duty and other special duties not within the field, except for individuals on duty with civilian components of the Army, research and development work and other activities specially exempted by oversea commanders. . . . The Army and Air Force will meet this charges of cleaning or laundering issue type clothing abandoned in dry cleaning establishments and laundries by enlisted personnel, under provisions of Joint Regulations SR 32-204-AFR 87-42. Proprietors of cleaning establishments will be required to turn in the garments with a statement of charges due. The clothing will be picked up on stock record or unserviceable property accounts. No record of the name of the individual abandoning the clothing will be kept. . . . The Army has authorized enlistment of partially disabled combat-wounded veterans of World War II who possess or can be trained in certain critically needed skills, and who meet eligibility requirements set forth in AR 815-125-1. . . . The Army has directed that all members of the Officers Reserve Corps not on active duty use the component identification term "USAR" in connection with signatures on correspondence and records. Other service reserve components already follow this form. . . . The President has approved the findings of a Marine Corps Selection Board which recommended promotion of a Marine woman major to lieutenant colonel and two captains to major.

Chaplain's Corner

Can You Face Your Christian Responsibility?

By CHAPLAIN ERNEST F. KENDLE
We have just passed through the most glorious season of the church calendar, Easter. The hope of all Christians was made a reality by the resurrection of the Christ and the witness of His living after death. The keynote of Christian theology is life. Life gives meaning to everything in this world. The wealth of our nations is not our money, our magnificent buildings, our land nor our industries, but life itself. It gives meaning to all these things. Jesus says (John 10:10), "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly." The question you are faced with is "What am I going to do with the life God gave me and that Christ proved that He can save for me?" Whenever we are faced with a problem there is always one of two ways to take. We either face up to the problem, accepting our responsibility, or we shirk our responsibility. Too often we make a third way which is to ignore the problem and go our way as though it did not exist. Christians must answer this question in the proper way to portray belief in Christ. In this day when ideologies are attacking our Christian religion with lies and half-truths, that are often worse than lies, there is a definite challenge to us as to whether Christianity is reasonable and workable and has something beneficial to life for time and eternity. For instance, Jesus says, (Matthew 7:12) "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Too often we say it will not work and we leave it alone. Have you tried to make it work? Would not the world be a better place in which to live if we put the "Golden Rule" into practice? Certainly it would take effort, personal character and determination to put it into effect, but it would pay tremendous dividends to living again. Jesus says, (Matthew 5:48) "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." We are prone to say that a human cannot be perfect so we just ignore this teaching of Jesus. He did not say that we would become perfect overnight. Have you honestly tried to attain to perfection in your living? John teaches us that as He lives we too shall live. We proclaim this at Easter but during the rest of the year we often live as though we did not quite believe this. The ideologies with their lies and half-truths, will either be silenced or given credence by the living attitudes of Christian people. Christianity is positive and we must live a positive Christian life to be called Christian. The world challenges you to face up to the responsibility of living a true Christian life. Have you courage to do this? Think on these things.

BLACK AND WHITE BY MARTIN FLAVIN
HARPER & BROS. PUBLISHER
By ALLEN L. MULLIKIN

Travel books are a dime a dozen, and the reader who goes on a vicarious journey seldom gets more than his money's worth. Black and White is an exception. Traversing Africa with Martin Flavin is a vacation trip with a crochety old gentleman who admits he is mostly a tourist. He points out everything of interest, explains the social problems of natives and colonists, and is not above being bored by herds of elephants after seeing them all day. . . . Martin Flavin is a seasoned traveler who never misses a snow-capped peak or a jewel-like set in a ring of mountains. The pretty things he duly records are excellent, prose that should make the writers of travel folders blush with shame. He continues toadden the cheeky commercialists with edge comments on the poor facilities for modern African explorers. Fits of exasperation spark the author's narrative when the majestic scenery gets dull from the sheer expanse of it. . . . The color of the so-called Dark Continent flashes vividly on every page of the book, but the author's concern with the shades of skin-color that determine mastery and slavery is the pith of intellectual concern that lifts Black and White above the verdant forage of most travel journals. Martin Flavin not only sees the trees that make up the forest, he also sees the people behind the trees. He finds the growth of social injustice thickest where the jungle has been cleared for gold mines and plantations of oil-palms. . . . No hasty condemnation comes from the humanist author as he records the domination of European whites over African blacks. Care is his advice in the civilizing process that cannot be halted now that it has begun. The untutored people of the jungles must be carefully taught if they are ever to enter competitive society. Exploitation of cheap native labor that allows nothing more than subsistence is the practice that raises the ire of the author. . . . Comparisons of the sad black men stifling in the mile deep gold mines of South Africa and the gay inhibition of a middle-aged woman bouncing to the beat of a tom-tom in the loneliness of a moonlit night translate the thoughts of the natives as clearly as the author is able to understand them. He continues his limited revelations in the efforts of a tribal chief to build a modern school that will train black children for jobs that are not open to them; the American doctor who ministers to 500 illing blacks day; the missionaries who harangue the dark brethren on one of the Christian faiths. . . . Throughout his travels by rail, plane, river boat and a battered Chevrolet, Martin Flavin treats his reading traveling companion to full measure of his sensations and speculations. He is by turns proud and ashamed of the British, Belgians and Americans in Africa. He worries about the natives; he sees to it that the reader enjoys the trip.

After that pleasant taste of freedom during Easter vacation, it was hard to go back to "readin', ritin' and 'rhythmin'" again, and everybody's counting the days until June. After Easter came a traditional warm-up accompanied by picnics, mosquito bites and sunburn. Pedro Rivera, Pat Mead, Bob Shaw, Elle Lundberg, Don Romine, Pat Hinkle, Elvin Krielick and Nancy Weisch all piled into Elvin's car not long ago, and went out to King's pond for an afternoon of hot dogs, baseball and singing.

Jim Torrence, Beaky White, Mink Newman, DoSo Kulp and Dick Hallden enjoyed nature last Saturday night when they hiked until the wee small hours of the morning. We're glad to dispense with the rumor that Mink had been shot while climbing a tree by Dick Hallden, who was aiming at a bird. Mink was very much alive Monday morning. Speaking of hikes, Polly Hamilton, Ann Nolen, Elle Lundberg and I got our share of exercise and some interesting pictures last Sunday afternoon.

Seen at the miniature golf course Saturday night we're George and Dick Sugg, Bill Ricker, Helen Wilbur, Robert Swindler, Betty Kiehl, Shubert's "Gerrade" and Nancy Partridge really enjoyed the spring plays down at school Friday night. I hear a club with rather unusual initiation has been started at Benning. It's all very mysterious. Maybe we'll hear more about it.

Next Friday night the Officers' club is sponsoring another informal dance. So watch the Daily Bulletin for details, and be sure to come.

Miss Brown Becomes Bride Of Lt. Steffy at Newburgh

At a beautiful candlelight service in the Union Presbyterian church in Newburgh, New York, Miss Ann Brown became the bride of Lt. Joseph B. Steffy of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Fort Benning on Saturday, April 8, at 6 p.m. The Rev. Seth Craig read the marriage vows.

The ceremony was performed before an altar decked with arrangements of Easter lilies and tall cathedral tapers in gold candelabra.

A program of nuptial music included "Because 'At Dawn" and the "Lord's Prayer."

Miss Gladys Port was maid of honor. She wore a gown featuring a sheer lace bodice, a full skirt of marquisette with a sash of aqua and a tiny aqua bonnet. She carried aqua flowers.

Mrs. D. Bruckway served as matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Stoen, Miss Florence Steffy, Miss Bette Fallon, Miss Margery Smith, Miss Ann Stewart and Mrs. H. K. Stoen. They were gowned alike in frocks designed with a fitted lace bodice and a full marquisette skirt forming a bustle in the back and tiny aqua bonnets.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her wedding gown designed princess style with a charming lace bodice featuring a boat neck line and full nylon net skirt with inserts of sheer lace. Her ringcup veil of bridal illusion fell from a lace cap with orange blossoms, and she carried an old fashioned cecygy.

John Trent served as best man, and the ushers were USMA Cadets Sal Pastuca, John Shelley, Karl Kau Khan, Bennie Davis, Charles Gabriel, Arnold Galiffa, and William Yocman, and Russell Zaum.

A wedding dinner was held at the Powelson hotel in Newburgh, immediately following the ceremony. The table was covered with an imported linen cloth and centered with orange blossoms in a low silver bowl flanked by cream tapers in silver holders.

The couple left following the dinner for a wedding trip to Poughkeepsie, New York. For traveling the bride wore a navy suit, white hat trimmed with violets, navy shoes and white gloves.

They will reside in Columbus, Miss Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Otto C. Brown of Newburgh, New York. She attended Howe-Boston School in Philophysy and Wood School in New York. She is a member of the Newburgh Junior League and Theta Lambda Chi sorority.

Lieutenant Steffy is the son of Joseph Steffy of Chattanooga, Ga. He graduated from the U. S. Military academy, West Point, N. Y., in 1949.

Impressive Ceremony Unites Miss Knowles, Cpl. Yang

The chapel of the First Baptist church in Columbus was the scene of an impressive ceremony last Sunday afternoon when Miss Verna Evelyn Knowles became the bride of Cpl. Albert Yang.

The altar of the chapel was decked with gold baskets of white gladioli and every body was lighted by tall cathedral candles in gold candelabra. The bride and groom were marked with white satin ribbon.

Rev. W. Howard Ethington, pastor of the church, performed the double ring ceremony.

Preceding the ceremony, a program of nuptial music was given by Miss Francis Arnold, organist, and Miss Beverly Smith, soloist. The numbers included "I Love Thee" because "Romance" and "Shubert's 'Gerrade'." "Liebstrraum" was played softly during the ceremony.

Mrs. Robert G. Scarborough was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a picturesque gown of orchid tulle with a fitted bodice, two folds of material outlining the neckline, and a graceful full skirt. She wore pink carnations in her hair and carried an old-fashioned nosegay of pink carnations.

Mrs. Gilbert C. Driver and Miss Christine Hargett were bridesmaids. They wore green tulle dresses identical to that of the matron of honor, and pink carnations in their hair and carried old-fashioned nosegays of pink carnations.

Miss Knowles entered the chapel on the arm of her brother-in-law, Robert G. Scarborough, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Gilbert C. Driver.

The bride was lovely in her gown of cream alkon lace, paved over a taffeta slip, styled with fitted bodice and a row of covered buttons-down the front. Her graceful full skirt formed a cathedral train. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion fell from a white satin prayer book centered with white purple-throated orchids showered with satin ribbon and stephanotis.

Ushers were L. R. Olive and Everett Edge.

Miss Turner New Service Club Hostess

Miss Katherine Turner, former recreation and service club director at Fort Jackson, S. C., is a recent addition to Fort Benning service clubs, having been assigned here on April 13 as recreation director of Service club No. 2.

Starting her federal service back in 1941 with the Army Exchange Service, Miss Turner transferred to Officers' club work at Fort McPherson, Ga., in 1944, and after taking a teacher's training course in dancing in 1945, entered recreation and service club work in 1946 at Fort Jackson.

A native of the south, making her home in Macon, Ga., Miss Turner studied at Wesleyan conservatory in Macon for two years in the school of fine arts. She gained considerable experience in organizing local and professional talent shows while at Fort Jackson, and was well known for her work in recruiting talent from Columbia, S. C., for appearances at Fort Jackson service clubs.

Lt. Col. Henry M. Clisson, Infantry Center special services officer, stated that Miss Turner's experience and record of achievement at Fort Jackson mark her as an army hostess who will undoubtedly provide outstanding recreation programs for enlisted personnel at Fort Benning.

Hostess Added To Club Staff

Miss Helen Maloney is a recent addition to the army hostess staff at Fort Benning, having taken over the recreational chores at Service club No. 1, according to a special services announcement.

Starting her Army hostess career at Fort Meade, Md., in 1945, Miss Maloney, at 21, was the youngest junior hostess in service club work. She remained at Fort Meade until the summer of 1948, at which time she transferred to Camp Hood, Texas, as a club director. During the summer season she organized the largest dance ever held at Fort Meade, with over 1,000 G. I.'s attending.

Miss Maloney is an expert pingpong player and a talented musician, having studied voice for five years. She now sings at the Sand hill chapel at religious services. She also plays the piano, and is an enthusiastic dancer. Specializing in the organization of weekly service club dances having a variety of themes.

Gen. Gillem to Retire

Third Army Chief to Conclude 40 Colorful Years

When Lt. Gen. Alvan C. Gillem, Jr., Third Army commanding general, makes his exit from active military service at Fort Benning, Ga., in September, he will be leaving the same post where he entered the army as a private 40 years ago.

It was back in 1910 when young Gillem enlisted in the 17th Infantry regiment at Fort McPherson, Ga., because no appointments to the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, N.Y., were available.

But now he entered the army as just getting in. Three Alvan C. Gillems before him had donned the uniform of the Third Army and it was up to him to carry on the family tradition.

A YEAR AFTER HIS ENLISTMENT, Gillem was commissioned a second lieutenant of infantry and started climbing the ladder that culminated with promotion to his present three-star rank on May 3, 1945.

From the outset, General Gillem's military career has been studded with unusual and interesting assignments.

From World War I, General Gillem served in the Philippines and later went with General Pershing's punitive expedition into Mexico.

During the war, he organized and commanded a machine gun battalion, and following the Armistice, served as a lieutenant colonel with the American Expeditionary forces in Siberia.

Before graduating from the Army War College in 1926, General Gillem saw additional service in the Philippines and on the Mexican border. He also held an assignment in Hawaii.

FROM 1926 UNTIL 1935, he was professor of military science and tactics at the University of Maryland and spent the following four and one-half years as an instructor at Fort Benning's Infantry School.

LT. GEN. A. C. GILLEM, JR. Reveals Retirement Plans

With the creation of the armored force in 1940, General Gillem was placed in command of the 66th Armored division in Siberia.

Promoted to brigadier general in January, 1941, General Gillem was given command of the Second Armored brigade.

In April of that year he assumed command of the Third Armored division, and three months later, was advanced to major general.

In January, 1942, General Gillem became commander of the Second Armored corps and led the unit through wartime maneuvers in Louisiana and North Carolina. He took over command of the Desert Training Center in California in August, 1942, and directed the First Armored force maneuvers there.

After a stint as commander of the armored force at Fort Knox, Ky., in 1943, General Gillem went overseas with the 13th corps in July, 1944, for duty in England, France, Belgium, Holland and Germany.

THE FOLLOWING YEAR he returned to the U. S. as a member of the Stilwell board for postwar equipment.

His stateside duty, however, soon came to an end. He was called to China early in 1946 as an assistant on the special Presidential mission to that country.

He returned to the U. S. again in May 1947, after serving successively as commanding general of the China theater U. S. Forces in China, and the China Service command.

General Gillem assumed command of the Third Army in June, 1947.

Among General Gillem's decorations are the Distinguished Service medal with oak leaf clusters, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star medal, French Legion of Honor with palm, French Croix de Guerre with palm, Brazilian Medal for Merit (commander), Russian Order of Red Banner, first class (three awards), Dutch Order of Orange Nassau (grand officer), Belgian Order of Leopold with palm (commander), Belgian Croix de Guerre with palm and Chinese Grand Cord of Yun Hsiu (cloud and banner).

Although General Gillem has announced no definite plans following his retirement, he has indicated that he may seek an educational post.

TROUSERS are of conventional civilian material and cut, with a three-quarter inch stripe of gold braid on the outside seam. Collars, neckties, vests, shirts, shoes and socks are the conventional civilian articles of conservative design. Plain gold studs and collar buttons will be worn. The cap is dark blue wool.

Army Prescribes New Dress Garb

A new evening dress uniform for officers has been prescribed by the Department of the Army, according to a recent announcement from Washington which pointed out, however, that the present dress uniform will be optional until June 30, 1950.

Conversion of present dress uniforms can be accomplished by removal of sleeve ornamentation, trouser stripes and buttons, and replacement with those prescribed for the new uniform. The currently authorized dress cap may also be altered to conform with the new headgear, but the announcement stated that since a mixture of old and new uniforms is not authorized, alterations must be completed.

The new dress coat is styled like conventional civilian tail coats, blue or black or black in color with U. S. army gold buttons replacing commercial buttons, and provision made for the attachment of shoulder knots.

Sleeve ornamentation for general officers consists of a four-inch blue or black velvet cuff with one inch band of gold oak leaves, and for other officers, a gold colored trefoil with brass base on a blue-black broadcloth background which is separately attachable to the coat sleeve.

Trousers are of conventional civilian material and cut, with a three-quarter inch stripe of gold braid on the outside seam. Collars, neckties, vests, shirts, shoes and socks are the conventional civilian articles of conservative design. Plain gold studs and collar buttons will be worn. The cap is dark blue wool.

ARC Blood Unit Visiting Benning

The Red Cross mobile blood bank is at Fort Benning today, accepting blood donations from 300 volunteers from the 30th Infantry regiment and Third Antiaircraft Artillery battalion.

Arriving April 19, the mobile unit started operations at 7 a.m. April 19 in ward A-22 of Station hospital. A total of 150 volunteers were processed by noon according to Murray Hill, local field director.

For future operations of this sort, Mr. Hill stressed the importance of prompt arrival of donors, stating that the mobile unit is geared to handle 30 donors an hour, and that failure to adhere to schedule results in confusion and breakdown of the operation.

Volunteers should be over 18, should never have had yellow jaundice, and should not have had malaria in the past two years. At the time of blood donation, the donor should be free from severe colds, bronchitis and boils, and should not have had a tooth extracted during the two weeks preceding the date of donation.
